DIGESTIBLE, (digere, digestum, 'to digest,') and habilis, 'able,') Concoctus habilis. Capable of being digested. All food is not equally digestible, and some of the most important is the least so:—the fat of meat, for example. Certain substances, again, are entirely rebellious. As a general rule, albuminous aliments—as tender mutton and beef, are the most easily appropriated.

DIGESTIF, Digestive.

DIGESTION, Digestion—d. Depravata, Dyspepsia—d. Difficilis, Dyspepsia—d. Laesa, Dyspepsia.

DIGESTION, Digestio, (from digere, digestum, 'to digest,') Coc'tio, C. Cibo'rum, Pcp'sia, Digestive Proc'ess. Digestion is a function, by means of which alimentary substances, when introduced into the digestive canal, undergo different alterations. The object of it is to convert them into two parts; the one, a reparatory juice, destined to renew the perpetual waste occurring in the economy; the other, deprived of its nutritious properties, to be rejected from the body. This function is composed of a series of organic actions, differing according to the particular organization of the animal. In man they are eight in number, viz.: 1. Prehension of food. 2. Mastication. 3. Insalivation. 4. Deglutition. 5. Action of the stomach. 6. Action of the small intestine. 7. Action of the large intestine. 8. Expulsion of the feces.

DIGESTION is also a pharmaceutical operation, which consists in treating certain solid substances with water, alcohol, or other menstruum, at a slightly elevated temperature,—in a sand-bath, for example, or by leaving them exposed for some time to the sun.

DIGESTIVE, see Digestives.

DIGESTIVE PRINCIPLE, Pepsin—d. Process, Digestion.

DIGESTIVE TEXTURE. The particular organic condition of substances which affects their digestibility.

DIGESTIVE TUBE, Canal, alimentary.

DIGESTIVES, Digestiva, Digerentia; (F.) Digestiva. A term given, by surgeons, to substances, which, when applied to a wound or ulcer, promote suppuration; as the ceratum resinae, warm cataplasms, fomentions, &c. Such substances are vulgarly termed drauing.

DIGESTIVUS, (F.) Digestif. Relating or appertaining to digestion; see, also, Digestives.

DIGITAL, Digitalis, (from digitus.) Having the shape of a finger; digitated. Belonging to the fingers.

The Appen'dix vermiformis caeci is sometimes called DIGITAL APPEN'DIX.

DIGITAL ARTERIES, VEINS, and NERVES, are those distributed to the fingers.

DIGITAL BLANC, Clavaria.

DIGITAL CAV'ITY, An'cyroid cavity, Cor'nu descendens ventriculi lateralis. The occipital portion of the lateral ventricle of the brain.

DIGITAL COMPRESSION, see Compression.

DIGITAL HUMAN, Clavaria.

DIGITAL IMPRES'SIONS, (see Impressions, digital,) are the slight depressions observable on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, which correspond to the cerebral convolutions.

DIGITALE PETITE, Gratiola officinalis.

DIGITALE, (F.) Doigtier. A finger stall. The term Doigtier d'Asdrubali has been given to a small iron instrument used for measuring the dimensions of the pelvis. Placed at the end of the index finger, it adds to its length and enables it to reach the promontory of the sacrum.

DIGITALINE, see Digitalis.

DIGITALIS, (from digitale, because its flower resembles a finger stall,) Digitalis purpurea, Bac'charis, Bac'char, Bac'car [?], Foxglove, (Sc.) Deadmen's bells, (Prov.) Flap'dock. Ord. Scrophularinae. Sex. Syst. Didynamia Angiosperma. (F.) Digitale, Gants de notre dame, Doigtier. The leaves of this plant, which are indigenous in Great Britain, are powerfully sedative,—diminishing the velocity of the pulse, diuretic, and sorbent. In over-doses, Digitalis causes vomiting, purging, dimness of sight, vertigo, delirium, hic-cough, convulsions, and death:—all the symptoms, in short, which characterize the acro-narcotic class of poisons. Its active principle has been called Dig''italine or Dig''italin, Digitalinum (Ph. B. 1864). It is said to be a hundred-fold stronger than the most active preparation of digitalis.

Digitalis has been administered in inflammatory diseases, phthisis, active hemorrhage, dropsy, &c.; but although it is a powerful remedy, it has not been as much employed as it probably would have been in particular cases, owing to the overstrained eulogiums, which many have passed upon it in almost all diseases. The average dose is one grain, in the form of pill, which may be repeated every six or eight hours.

DIGITALIS MINIMA, Gratiola officinalis.

DIGITARIA DACTYLON, Cynodon dactylon.

DIGITA'TION, Digita'tio, Productio dentata, Inser'tio denticula'ta, I. digita'ta, (F.) Denture, Dentelure. A division into processes having the form of fingers. Several muscles, as the serrati, exhibit digitations, similar to those which the fingers form, when held separate.

DIGITATIONES TUBARUM FALLOPII, see Tube, Fallopian.

DIGIT'IUM. Desiccation or atrophy of the fingers. Sauvages calls the same affection Paronychia Digiti', see Paronychia.

DIGITORUM TENSOR, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis.

DIGITUS, Dactylus, Fin'ger, (F.) Doigt. A name given to the prolongations which form the extremity of the hand. There are five on each hand: the first, the thumb, Anticheir, Pollex, Al'lus Pollex, Ma'nus par'va majori adju'trix, Dig'itus pri'mus seu mag'nus, Pro'manus, (F.) Pouce; the second, the In'dex, Dig'itus in'dex seu secun'dus seu saluta'ris seu saluta'rius seu demonstrato'rius seu demonstrati'vus, Indica'tor, Demonstrato'ror, Ly'chanos; the third, D. me'dius seu ter'tius seu famo'sus seu impudic'us seu obscu'rus seu infa'mis seu ver'pus, mid'dle fing'er or long fing'er, (F.) Doigt du milieu; the fourth, the ring fing'er, Dig'itus annula'ris, Para'nosos, D. quartus seu medicinal'is seu med'icus seu cor'dis, Int'ricus, (F.) Annula'ris; and the little fing'er, Oti'tes, Dig'itus auricula'ris seu min'imus seu par'vus seu quin'tus seu my'ops seu oti'tes, Eur fing'er, (F.) Auricula'ris, Petit doigt. All of these have three phalanges, except the first, which has only two.

DIGITUS ANNULARIS, Annular finger—d. Auricularis, see Digitus—d. Cordis, see Digitus—d. Demonstrativus, see Digitus—d. Demonstratorius, see Digitus—d. Famosus, see Digitus—d. Hippocraticus, Finger, Hippocratic—d. Impudicus, see Digitus—d. Index, Index, see Digitus—d. Indicatorius, Index, see Digitus—d. Infamis, see Ditus—d. Magnus, Pollex, see Digitus—d. Medicinalis, see Digitus—d. Medicus, see Digitus—d. Medius, see Digitus—d. Minimus, see Digitus—d. Myops, see Digitus—d. Obscenus, see Digitus—d. Otites, see Digitus—d. Parvus, see Digitus.

DIGITUS PE'DIS, Orteil'us, Toe, (Sc.) Toe, (F.) Orteil. The toes are five in number, and distinguished numerically, reckoning from within to without. The first is, also, called great toe, tom toe, (F.) gros orteil; the fifth, the little toe, petit orteil. They have nearly the same organization as the fingers.

DIGITUS PRIMUS, Pollex, see Digitus—d. Quartus, see Digitus—d. Quintus, see Digitus—d. Salutaris, see Digitus—d. Salutaris, see Digitus—d. Saluatorius, Index—d. Secundus, Index, see Digitus.

DIGITUS SEMIMOR'TUUS, 'half dead finger.' A torpid condition of the fingers, met with in connection with chlorosis, and cerebro-spinal affections.

DIGITUS SUPERNUMERARIUS, Supernumerary finger, (F.) Doigt surnuméraire. An occasional monstrosity occurs, in which there are supernumerary fingers; and at times owing to hereditary transmission.

DIGITUS TERTIUS, see Digitus—d. Verpus, see Digitus.

DIGNA'THUS, (di, and γναθος, 'lower jaw.') A monster having two lower jaws.

DIGNOTIO, (dignoscere, dignotum, 'to discriminate,') Diagnosis.

DIHYPOGAS'TRIUS, (di, and ὑπογαστριον, 'the hypogastrium.') A monster whose pelvis, together with the lower portion of the abdomen, is double.

DIHYSTERIA, Dime'tra, Didel'phys, U'terus du'plex, (di, and ὑστερον, 'uterus.') The state in which there is a double uterus.

DIJUDICATIO, (di, and judicare, judicatum, 'to judge,') Crisis.

DILACERATIO, (di, and lacerare, laceratum, 'to tear,') Laceration.

DILATANTS, Dilating agents.

DILATATIO, Dilatation—d. Bronchiorum, Bronchia, dilatation of the—d. Intestinorum, Enterectasis—d. Ventriculi, Gastrectasis.

DILATATION, dilatatio, (dilatare, dilatatum, (latum facere, 'to enlarge;') Eurys'mus, Aneurys'mus, Dieurys'mus. Augmentation of the bulk of a body, occasioned by a separation of some of its molecules. Caloric has the property of dilating all bodies. In Surgery, it means the accidental or preternatural augmentation of a canal or opening; as in aneurisms, varices, &c., or the process of enlarging any aperture or canal. When used so as to obtain a view of parts, as by the speculum, it is termed Dioptris'mus.

DILATATOIRE, Dilator.

DILATATORIUM, Dilator.

DILATATORIUS, Dilator.

DILATING A'GENTS, Dilatan'tia, (F.) Dilatants. Certain substances used in surgery, either to keep parts separate which have a tendency to unite—as after opening an abscess, to prevent the edges of the incision from uniting; or to increase and dilate openings of canals, either when natural, or formed accidentally or artificially. These agents differ from each other: the chief are—prepared sponge tents, gentian root, bougies, sounds, dried peas for issues, &c.

DILATOR, Dilatato'rius, Dias'toleus, (F.) Dilatateur ou Dilatatoire, (di, and ferre, latum, 'to carry.') A muscle, whose office it is to dilate certain parts; as the inspiratory muscles, which dilate the chest.

DILATOR, Dilatato'rium, (F.) Dilatateur. An instrument, used for dilating a wound, excretory canal, or other natural or artificial opening. When employed to obtain an inspector of internal parts, it is termed Speculum, Diop'tra, or Diop'tron. There are several instruments of this kind, each taking its name from the part to which it is applied; as Speculum Oris, S. Nasi, S. Uteri, &c.

DILATOR, AR'NOTT'S. A modification of the old dilators for strictures of the urethra. It consists of a tube of oiled silk, lined with the thin gut of some small animal to make it air-tight, and fixed on the extremity of a small canula, by which it is distended with air or water, from a bag or syringe at the outer end, whilst a stop-cock or valve serves to keep the air or water in, when admitted. As soon as the bag is passed within the stricture or strictures, as much air is to be injected into it as the patient can easily bear. The instrument is not much used.

DILATORES ALARUM NASI, Compressor Naris.

DILATRIS TINCTORIA, Lachnanthes tinctoria.

DILL, (Sax. dile,) Anethum graveolens.

DIL'DOO, Dil'doe, Phallus, Fas'cinum, Penis succedaneus, Mentula factit'ia. An artificial penis.

DILLY, Anthemis cotula.

DILUEN'TIA, pl. of Diluens, (diluo, (dis, and luere, 'I wash away.') (F.) Délayants. Medicines which have been conceived proper for augmenting the fluidity of the blood and other animal liquids. All aqueous drinks are diluents. They are administered, with great advantage, in various diseases. In fever, water, which is the most familiar diluent, may be freely allowed; the only precaution being to give it hot in the cold stage, cold in the hot, and tepid in the sweating. In diseases, where it is considered necessary to abstract blood largely, diluents should not be given too freely. The abstraction of blood occasions activity of absorption, and the mass is speedily restored. It is also obvious, that in cases of inflammation of the mammae, in nurses, diluents should not be freely allowed, as they increase the secretion of milk, and add to the irritation. When demulcents are exhibited in cases of urinary disease, they act simply as diluents; their mucilaginous portion is digested in the stomach and small intestine,—the watery portion alone being separated by the kidney.

DILWEED, Anthemis Cotula.

DIOMETRA, (di, and μητρα, 'uterus,') Dihysteria.

DINANT, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Dinant is a small town, six leagues from St. Malo, in France, where are mineral waters, containing carbonate of iron, chloride of sodium, &c. They are much esteemed.

DINGEE, Dengue.

DINIC, (from dinus,') Antidinic.

DINKHOLD, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. A rich carbonated water, situate near the junction of the Lahn with the Rhine, in the duchy of Nassau. It contains sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, sulphate of lime, carbonate of lime, and sulphate of magnesia.

DINOMANIA, (δινος, 'a whirl,') and μανια, 'mania,') Tarantismus.

DINUS, (δινος,') Vertigo—d. Scotoma, Scotodynia—d. Vertigo, Vertigo.

DIOBOLON, (διωβολον, from di, and ωβολον.') Scruple.

DIODONCEPHALUS, (F.) Diodoncephale, (di, οδους, gen. οδους, 'a tooth,') and κεφαλη, 'head.') A monster with a double range of teeth, or a double jaw.

DIODUS, (διωδους, from dia, and οδους, 'a way,') Diexodus.

DIOECESIS, (διοικησις, from dia, and οικειν 'to manage a house.') Dispensation.

DIONCOSIS, (διονκωσις, from dia, and okos, 'a tumour.') The Methodists applied this name to a sort of tumefaction or plethora, occurring either directly from too great a quantity of fluid circulating in the system, or owing to the retention of substances which ought to be excreted. It is the antithesis to symptosis. See Intumescence.

DIONYSIA'NUS, (F.) Dionysien, (Διονυσος, 'Bacchus,' who is represented by the poets as wearing horns.') One who has long or horn-like excrescences.

DIONYSIS'CUS, (same etymon.) One who has a long horn-like excrescence on the frontal region.

DIOPHTHALMUS, (δι, and οφθαλμος, 'an eye,') Binocular.

DIOPTRA, (διοπτρα, from dia, and οπτοιαι, 'to see,') Speculum, see Dilator.

DIOPTRISMUS, (from dioptron,) see Dilatation.

DIOPTRON, (διοπτρον,) Speculum, see Dilator.

DIORTHO'SIS, (διορθωσις, from διορθωω, 'I make straight,') The reduction of a fractured or luxated limb.

DIOSCOREA, (after Dioscorides,) see Yam.

DIOSCOREA VILLO'SA, Wild Yam'root; indigenous: Order, Dioscoriaceæ; flowering in July. A decoction of the root has been prescribed in bilious colic. It is said to be expectorant, diaphoretic, and, in large doses, emetic.

DIOSCURI, (διόσκουροι, from Δις, gen. Διως, 'Jupiter,' and κουροι, 'boys,') Castor and Pollux, —so called from their twin-like resemblance. See Parotid.

DIOSMA, D. crenata.

DIOS'MA CRENA'TA, (διος, 'divine,' and οσηη, 'odour,') Baros'ma crenata, Agathos'ma crenata. A South African plant, the powder of whose leaves—Buch'u Leaves, Dios'ma (Ph. U. S., 1842, Buch'u, 1851), Buck'u, Boo'choe, Bock'u, Boo'cho, Buck'ho, (F.) Diosmée crénélee. Ord. Rutaceæ—is used by the Hottentots to perfume their bodies. It has been employed in chronic affections of the bladder and urinary organs in general; and has also been given in cholera. It is often adulterated in commerce, by the substitution of less potent plants of the same family, as Diosma serratifolia, and Eupleurum serrulatum.

Buc'co, Buchu, is referred by the British Pharmacopœia (1864), to Baros'ma betul'na, B. crenulata, and B. serratifolia.

DIOSMA SERRATIFOLIA, D. crenata.

DIOSMÉE CRÉNELÉE, Diosma crenata.

DIOSPYROS LÓ'TUS, (διοςπυρος, from διος, 'divine,' and πυρος, 'wheat,') Faba Græ'ca, Indian Date Plum, (F.) Plaqueminier d'Europe. Ord. Ebenaceæ. This tree grows in some of the southern parts of Europe. Its fruit is very astringent, and has been recommended in dysentery and hemorrhage.

DIOSPYROS VIRGINIA'NA, Lotus Virginia'na, Persim'mon. A common tree in the middle parts of the United States. The fruit, Persim'mons, Yell'ow Plums, Winter Plums, Seed'ed Plums, which is only eatable after frost, (when it is tolerable,) is sometimes made into cakes with bran. These, being dried in an oven, are kept to make beer. When bruised in water, fermentation takes place. The unripe fruit, Dios'pyrus (Ph. U. S.), is distressingly acerb and astringent. It has been used as an astringent. The bark of the tree is extremely bitter, and may be used where bitters are indicated.

DIO'TA, Dyo'ta, (διωτος, from δι, and ους, gen. ωτος, 'ear,') Two-eared, two-handled. Applied to a wooden cup, lined with a composition of resin, cinnamon, cloves, and ginger, to give more flavour to beer. It was formerly much used in the north of Europe.

DIPHORUS, Diphros.

DIPH'RUS, Di'phorus, (διφρος, from δι, and φρωω, 'I carry,') Properly a seat for two. A close stool.

DIPH'RUS MAIEU'TICUS, (διφρος μαιευτικος,) Sc'l'a obstetric'ia. An obstetric chair.

DIPH'RYGES, (διφρυγες, from δι, 'twice,' and φρυγω, 'I torrefy,') The oxide of copper, more or less pure. The ancients reckoned three kinds of diphryges, which they used as astringents.

DIPHTHERIA, (διφθερα, 'a skin or membrane,') Diphtheritis.

DIPHTHER'IC, Diphther'icus, Diphtherit'ic, Diphtherit'icus, (F.) Diphthérique, Diphthéritique. Same etymon as Diphtheritis. Relating or pertaining to diphtheria.

DIPHTHERITIC, Diphtheric.

DIPHTHÉRITE, Diphtheritis — d. Buccale, Stomatitis, pseudomembranous.

DIPHTHERIT'IS, (from διφθερα, 'a skin, or membrane,' and itis,) Diphther'ia, Diphtherit'ic Inflammation or Phlegm'asia, Pellie'ular Inflammation, (F.) Diphthérite, Diphthéropathie. A name given by M. Bretonneau to a class of diseases, which are characterized by a tendency to the formation of false membranes; and which affect the dermoid tissue,—as the mucous membranes, and even the skin. See Cynanche maligna, and Pharyngitis, diphtheritic.

DIPHTHERITIS OF THE THROAT, Pharyngitis, diphtheritic—d. Trachealis, Cynanche trachealis.

DIPHTHÉROPATHIE, (διφθερα, 'a skin or membrane,' and παθος, 'affection,') Diphtheritis.

DIPLASIASMUS, (διπλασιασμος, from διπλασιος, 'double,') Duplication.

DIPLECO'IA, (diplo, and ακη, 'hearing,') Double hearing.

DIPLOCEPHA'LIA, (diplo, and κεφαλη, 'head,') A monstrosity characterized by the presence of two heads on the same body.

DIPLO, (διπλος, 'double,') in composition, double.

DIP'LO Ë, (διπλον, from διπλος, 'double,') Diplo'sis, Meditul'ium, Medium Culva'ria Discrimen. The areolar structure, which separates the two tables of the skull from each other. The ancients applied the term, also, to the proper coat of the uterus [?].

The Diploë has the same use as the cellular structure of the bones in general. See Cancelli.

DIPLOËTIC, Diploë.

DIPLOGEN'ESIS, (diplo, and γεναις, 'generation,') (F.) Diplogénese. An organic deviation, which consists in the duplication of parts,—monstrosity by duplication, Duplic'itas monstro'sa, constituting double monsters.

DIPLOÏC, Diplo'icus, Diploë'tic, Diploë'ticus, (F.) Diploïque, Diploë'tique. Relating or pertaining to the diploë.

DIPLOIC OR DIPLOËTIC VEINS, Veinæ diplo'icæ seu diploë'ticæ. Veins in the flat cranial bones, the trunks and larger branches of which, veinæ of Breschet, run mostly separately in special arborescent larger canals—Breschet's bone canals, which terminate in the Emisioria Santorini.

DIPLOLEPIS GALLÆ TINCTORIÆ, see Queucus infectoria.

DIPLO'MA, gen. Diplo'matis, (διπλωμα, from διπλωω, 'I fold double,') A letter or writing conferring some privilege: usually applied to the document, certifying that a person has obtained the title of Doctor. It was so called because formerly written on waxed tables, folded together. Diploma is also used in pharmacy for a vessel with double walls,—as a water-bath.

DIPLO'PIA, (diplo, and οπτοιαι, 'I see,') V'us duplic'atus, Ditto'ria, Ditto'ria, Anbio'ria, Double Vis'ion, (F.) Bévue. An affection of the sight, in which two distinct sensations are produced by the same object, which consequently seems double. Sometimes more than two are seen; but still the disease is termed Diplopia and Suffusio Multiplicans. The affection arises from some derangement in the visual axis, in consequence of which, the images are not impressed on corresponding parts of the retina of each eye. At times, the diplopia affects one eye, or each eye when used alone, owing to some irregularity in the curvature, density or position of the dioptric media. It is then called Unioocular Diplopia, Monodiplopia.

The diplopia of both eyes has been termed Amphodiplopia, Amphoterodiplopia, and Amphamphoterodiplopia.

DIPLOSIOS, (διπλωσις,) Diploë, Duplication.

DIPLOSOMA, gen. Diplosomatia, (diplo, and soma, 'body.') The Diplosoma crenatum is an imperfectly described entozoon, which has been passed from the urinary bladder. It varies in length from four to six or eight inches, and is thinnest in the middle, where it is bent at an acute angle upon itself, so that the two halves hang nearly parallel, and give to it an appearance as if two worms had been tied together by their heads. It has been confounded with the Spiroptera hominis.

DIPLOSOMATIA, Diplosomia. An organic deviation characterized by the presence of two complete bodies, united by one or more of their parts.

DIPNOUS, (διπνος, from di, and πνοη, 'breath.') Having two vent holes; Bispirus. An epithet applied to wounds which pass through a part, and admit the air at both ends.

DIPROSOPIUS, Iriod'ymus et Opod'ymus, Opodid'ymus, (di, and προσωπον, 'countenance.') A monster having a double face.

DIPROSOPIUS DIEDÆUS, (di, and προσωπον, 'countenance;' and di, and αἰδία, 'parts of duplication.') A double monster, in which the duplication affects superiorly the face, and inferiorly the anterior pelvic region.

DIPROSOPIUS DIHYPOGASTRIUS, (di, and προσωπον, 'countenance;' and di, and υπογαστριον, 'the hypogastrium.') A double monster, in which the duplication affects superiorly the face and inferiorly the lower part of the body, four lower extremities being always present—Tetrascelus.

DIPSA, (διψα,) Thirst.

DIPSACUS, (διψακος,) Diabetes.

DIPSACUS FULLONUM, (from dipsa, said to be so called, owing to the leaves being so placed as to hold water.) Herba Cardui Ven'ensis, Carduus Ven'ensis, (F.) Cardère cultivée, Chardon à foulon, Chardon à bonnetier, has had similar properties with the next ascribed to it. Both have been also regarded as stomachic.

DIPSACUS SYLVES'TRIS, Cultivated Tea'sel, (F.) Cardère. Ord. Dipsacææ. The roots of this European plant are diuretic and sudorific. The water, which collects at the base of the leaves, has been recommended as an eye-water.

DIPSETICUS, (διψητικός, from dipsa,) (F.) Dipsétique. A remedy believed to be capable of exciting thirst. See Alterative.

DIPSODES, (διψωδης, dipsa, and odes,) Sit'iens, Siticulosus, (Old Eng.) Af'forst', (Prov.) Thrus'ty. Thirsty. Causing thirst.

DIPSOMANIA, (dipsa, and mania. Really, 'thirst-mania.' Often, however, applied to habitual drunkenness and to delirium tremens. An insatiable desire for intoxicating liquors.

DIPSOPATHY, Dipsopathia, (dipsa, and παθος, 'affection.') A mode of treatment, which consists in abstaining from drinks.

DIPSOISIS, (from dipsa,) Morbid thirst. The desire for drinking, excessive or impaired. A genus in the class Cæliaca, order Enterica, of Good.

DIPSOSIS AVENS, Polydypsia — d. Expers, Adipsia.

DIP'TERIX ODORATA, Commou'na odorata. The fruit of this large tree of Guiana is a pod, inclosing a single seed. The bean, Touka bean, has a strong, agreeable, aromatic odour, and is used to flavour snuff.

DIPYGGUS, (di, and πύγη, 'nates.') A double monster, the duplication being confined to the posterior portion of the lower end of the trunk—the coccygeal region.

DIPYRENON, (διπυρρον, from di, and πυρρον, 'a kernel.' A specillum or probe with two buttons or kernels—one at each end.

DIPYRITES, (διπυρρης, 'twice baked,') Biscuit.

DIPYROS, (διπυρος, from di, and πυρ, 'fire,') Biscuit.

DIR'CA PALUS'TRIS, (after Διρκη, a fountain at Thebes, because it grows in moist places.) Leath'erwood, Swamp Leath'erwood, Moose'wood, Rope'bark, Bois de plomb, (Canada.) Ord. Thymeleaceæ. An indigenous shrub, which grows in boggy woods and low wet places throughout the United States. It is analogous to mezereon in its action—six or eight grains of the fresh bark producing violent vomiting, preceded by a sense of heat in the stomach, often followed by purging. Applied to the skin, the bark vesicates.

DIRECTOR, Itinerarium, (dirigere, directum, (di, and regere, 'to rule,') 'to direct,') A Couductor. A grooved sound for guiding a knife, in dividing any part, (F.) Sonde cannelée.

DIRECTOR PENIS, Ischioæavernosus.

DIRIBITORIUM, (diribere, 'to separate,') Mediastinum.

DIRLING, Tingling.

DIRTEATING, Clithonophagia, Geophagism.

DIRUPTIO, (di, and rupere, ruptum, 'to break,') Rhexis.

DIS, as a prefix, see Di.

DISC, see Disk.

DISCHARGE, (dis, and charge,) Ee'roë, Flux'us, Profli'vium, (F.) Écoulement. In pathology, an increased discharge from any part, that naturally secretes a fluid.

DISCHROA, Dyschroæ.

DISCRETE, Discrete.

DISCRETE, (discruere, discretum, (dis, and cernere, 'to separate,') Discrete'us, Intertinct'us, Separated, (F.) Discret. This epithet is given to certain exanthemata, in which the spots or pustules are separated from each other. It is opposed to confluent.

DISCRETA PURGATIO. The purgation or expulsion of some particular matter.

DISCRETIVUS, Diagnostic.

DISCRETORIUM, Diaphragm.

DISCRIMEN, 'separation, division.' A bandage, used in bleeding from the frontal vein; so called, because, in passing along the sagittal suture, it divides the head into two equal parts.

DISCRIMEN CALVARIE MEDIUM, Diploë — d. Narium, Septum N.

DISCRIMEN NASI; a bandage, in the form of the letter X, intended to support the nose, in transverse wounds of the organ.

DISCRIMEN THORACIS ET VENTRIS, Diaphragm.

DISCUS, (δίσκος,) Disk, (F.) Disque. A quoit; a plate or platter, or anything resembling it in form.

DISCUS PROLIGERUS, Proligerous disc — d. Vitellinus, Proligerous disc.

DISCUSSIFS, Discutients.

DISCUSSIO, (discutere, discussum, (dis, and quætere, 'to shake,') 'to shake apart,') Resolution.

DISCUSSIVA, Discutients.

DISCUSSORIA, Discutients.

DISCUTIENTS, Discutientia, Resolventia, Discussoria, Discussoria, (F.) Discussifs, Résolutifs. Substances which possess the power of repelling or resolving tumours.

DISEASE, old French désaise, (dis, and ease.) Morbus, Nosos, Nose'ma, Noseu'ma, Nusus, Pathos, Pathe'ma, Lues, Malum, Passio, Ægritudo, Ægrota'tio, Vit'ium, Arrhos'tia, Arrhoste'ma, Valctu'do adve'sa, Mal'ady, Complaint, Sickness, Disten'sion, Disten'perature, Eg'ritude, Ail, Ailment, Illness, (F.) Maladie. An opposite state to that of health, consisting in a change either in the position and structure of parts, or in the exercise of one or more of their functions, or in both. By some Disease is applied to structural change, whilst Disor'der is restricted to functional derangement. The following table, essentially that of Dr. C. J. B. Williams, comprises the chief elements of structural disease, all of which are dependent on modified cell action.

tion. The act of attempting to destroy miasmata, with which the air, the clothing, &c., may be infected. Various means have been proposed for this purpose. Those most commonly employed are: chlorine, sulphurous and chlorohydric acid gases, vapours of vinegar, nitrous acid, and what is, perhaps, the most manageable of any, chlorinated lime, or any of the chlorides of the alkalis. It is more than questionable whether any chemical action occurs between these agents and the miasmata, whence results a compound which is harmless, or in other words, whether there is any agent that is capable of destroying morbid miasms. Disinfection also includes the action of antiseptics.

DISEASED, Sick.

The following fumigations have been largely employed as disinfectants.

DISFIGURATION, (dis, and figurare, figuratum, 'to form,') Deformation.

Chlorine or Oxymercurial Fumigation, Solutio alexiteria Gambia'na, Fumigatio antiloinica Gau'bi, Alexiterium chloricum, Fumigatio Guytonien'sis, is made by adding common salt  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, to black oxide of manganese  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, sulphuric acid  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, and water f $\mathfrak{z}$ ij. This may be carried through an apartment, or be shut up in it.

DISGORGEMENT, (F.) Dégorgement, (dis, and gorge, 'the throat,') An opposite condition to that of Engorgement. The discharge or abstraction of a certain quantity of fluid, which had previously collected in a part; as Disgorgement of bile. It also means vomiting.

Nitrous Fumigation, Alexiterium Nitricum, Fumigatio Smythia'na, may be formed by placing nitrate of potass  $\mathfrak{z}$ iv, and sulphuric acid  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, in a saucer on hot sand.

DISGUST, (dis, and gustare, 'to taste,') Ci'bi fastid'ium, Aposi'tia, Asi'tia, Apoclei'sis, Abominatio, Siccha'sia, Hor'ror Cibo'rum, Loath'ing. An aversion for food; (F.) Dégout. Disgust is not the same as Anorexia. The latter is only a want of appetite; the former consists in real repugnance for food.

DISJUNCTI MOR'BI (dis, and jungere, junctum, 'to join,') Disjoined diseases. Fernclius has thus denominated diseases which occupy different organs, and are not produced by each other.

DISINFECTANT, Disinfectans, (dis, and inficio, infectum, (in, and facio), 'I infect,') (F.) Désinfectant. This term has been restricted by some to agents that are capable of neutralizing morbid effluvia; but the author includes under it, also, antiseptics or agents that are capable of removing any incipient or fully formed septic condition of the living body, or of any part of it.

DISK, Discus—d. Blood, Globule of the blood—d. Intervertebral, Intervertebral Cartilage—d. Proligerous, see Proligerous Disk.

DISINFECTANT OF ELLERMAN, see Ferri chloridum—d. of Mr. James Young, see Manganese, sulphate of.

DISLOCATIO, (dis, and locare, locatum, 'to place,') Dislocation, Luxation—d. Lienis seu Splenis, Splenectopia.

DISLOCATION, Luxation.

DISMAL, Melancholy.

DISOD'ICUS, (dis, and òdos, 'threshold,') Having a double opening.

DISOMATOUS, see Disomus.

DISOMUS, (F.) Disome, (di, and σωμα, 'body,') A monster with two bodies. Such a monster is said to be disom'otous.

DISORDER, (from dis, and order,) see Disease.

DISORDERED, Sick.

DISORGANIZATION, Organorum destructio, (F.) Désorganisation. A complete morbid change in the structure of an organ, or even total destruction of its texture. In sphacelus and sloughy ulcers, we have examples of this change.

DISPENSARE, Dispensary, Dispensatory.

DISPENSARY, Dispensatorium, (dispendere, (dis, and pendere, pensum, 'to weigh,') 'to take from a weight or mass,') 'to distribute,') The shop or place in which medicines are prepared. Also, an institution in which the poor are furnished with advice and necessary medicines. (F.) Dispensaire. This word is used by the French synonymously with Dispensatory.

DISPENSATION, Dispensatio, Dioecesis, Epimenesis. The composition and distribution of medicines according to prescription. In France, it is more commonly applied to the weighing, measuring, and arranging of the articles which have to enter into a formula, prior to combining them.

DISPENSATOR, Apothecary.

DISPENSATORY, Dispensatorium; Antidotarium, Libri Pharmaceutici, (F.) Dispensaire. A book which treats of the composition of medicines. A Dispensatory differs from a Pharmacopœia, in containing the physical and medical history of the various substances; whilst the Pharmacopœia is mainly restricted to the mode of preparing them. The Pharmacopœia too, is published under the authority of, and by the members of a college or association; whilst a Dispensatory contains the whole of the Pharmacopœia or Pharmacopœias, with additions by the author, under whose authority alone it usually appears. The Pharmacopœia, in other words, is officinalis; the Dispensatory, generally, private. Formerly, the words were used indiscriminately. See Formulary, and Pharmacopœia.

DISPLACED, see Percolation.

DISPLACEMENT, Percolation.

DISPOSITION, Dispositio, (dis, and ponere, positum, 'to put or set,') A particular condition of the body, which renders it susceptible of altering, suddenly, to a state of health or disease;—of improving, or becoming changed for the worse. The disposition to phthisis pulmonalis is sometimes so strong, owing to original conformation, that the disease will make its appearance, notwithstanding every care. See Diathesis.

DISPUTATIO, (dis, and putare, 'to reason,') Thesis.

DISQUE, Discus—d. Proligère, Proligerous Disk.

DISQUES INTERVERTÉBRAUX, Intervertebral cartilages—d. Sanguis, Globules of the blood.

DISRUP'TIO, (disrumpere, (dis, and rumpere,) 'to break off,') A puncture, which interests deep-seated parts.

DISSECTING ANEURISM, See Aneurism.

DISSECTIO, Dissection—d. Tendinum, Tenotomy.

DISSECTION, Dissectio, (dissecare, (dis, and secare, sectum, 'to cut,') 'to cut open;') Diacopê, Sec'tio Anatômica, Practical Anatomy, Neurotomy. An operation, by which the different parts of the dead body are exposed, for the purpose of studying their arrangement and structure. Dissection has received various names, according to the organ concerned;—as Osteotomy, Syndesmotomy, Myotomy, Angiotomy, Neurotomy, Desmotomy, &c.

DISSECTOR, Prosector, Pro'tomus, (F.) Prosecteur. A practical anatomist. One who prepares the parts for the anatomical lecture.

DISSEPIMENTUM NARTUM, (dissepio, (dis, and sepere, 'a fence,') 'I separate,') Septum narium—d. Thoracis, Mediastinum.

DISSEPTUM, (dissepio, 'I separate,') Dia-phragm.

DISSERTATION, INAUGURAL, Thesis.

DISSIDENTIA, (dis, and sedere, 'to sit,') Dia-stasis.

DISSIPIUM, (dissepio, 'I separate,') Dia-phragm.

DISSOLUTIO, Dissolution, Solution—d. Sanguinis, Hæmatelysis—d. Ventriculi, Gastromalacia.

DISSOLU'TION, Dissolutio, Dialysis, (dissolvere, (dis, and solvere, solutum,) 'to loosen,') 'to melt,') This word is in frequent use, in the writings of the humorists. It is employed, particularly, in speaking of the blood,—to designate, not its entire decomposition or putrefaction, but a diminution in its consistence.

DISSOLUTION, Solution.

DISSOLVANTS, Dissolventia.

DISSOLVEN'TIA, Sol'vents, (F.) Dissolvants Medicines believed to be capable of dissolving swellings, concretions, &c. Discutients, Resolvents.

DIS'TAD, (disto, (di, and sto,) 'to stand apart,') Away from a centre. Towards the far extremity. In anatomy, used by Dr. Barclay adverbially, to signify 'towards the distal aspect.'

DIS'TAL AS'PECT. An aspect of a bone from the trunk, or towards the extremity.

DISTEMPER, (dis, and temperare, 'to proportion duly,') Disease.

DISTEMPERANTIA, Dyscrasia.

DISTEMPERATURE, Disease.

DISTEMPERED, Sick.

DISTENSIO, (distendere, distensum, 'to stretch,') Diatasis, Tension, Tetanus—d. Nervorum, Convulsion.

DISSOLUTION DE LA VÉSICULE DU FIEU, Turgescencia vesicæ fellæ.

DISTICHI'ASIS, Distich'ia, Districh'ia, Districh'iasis, Distoc'chia, Distocchi'iasis, (ὑστρίχιασις, from dis, and στρίχης, 'a row,') An increased number of eyelashes; some turned towards the eye, and irritating the organ; whilst others preserve their natural direction. See Entropion.

DISTILLATE, see Distillation.

DISTILLA'TION, Destilla'tio, Stalag'mus, (destillare, (de and stillare,) 'to drop, little by little,') Catastalg'mus. An operation, by which—by the aid of heat and in closed vessels—the volatile are separated from the fixed parts of bodies, with the view of collecting the former, when condensed in appropriate receivers. The product of distillation is the distill'ate, (G.) Destillat.

The ancients distinguished distillation per latus, per ascen'sum, and per descen'sum, according to the direction which the volatilized matters were made to take. In distillation per latus, the apparatus is so arranged, that the vapour passes horizontally through a succession of spaces before reaching the receiver. Distillation per ascensum is the ordinary method by the still. In distillation per descensum, the fire is applied above and around the top of the apparatus; and it is so arranged that the vapour must pass downwards. Fractional distillation is when ingredients volatilized at different degrees of heat are separated from each other during the process. When dry organic matter is placed in an apparatus for distillation, and heat is applied until all volatile matter is driven out, the process is called dry or destructive distillation.

DISTILLATION, DESTRUCTIVE, see Distillation—d. Dry, see Distillation—d. Per Ascensum, see Distillation—d. Per Descensum, see Distillation—d. Per Latus, see Distillation.

DISTOC'IA, Ditoc'ia, (dis, and τοκος, 'birth,') Delivery of twins.

DISTŒCHIA, Distichiasis.

DISTŒCHIASIS, (διστοχίας,) Distichiasis.

DISTOMA HEPATICUM, gen. Distomatidæ, Distomum hepaticum, (di, and στομα, 'mouth.') Fasciola hepatica seu humana seu lanceolata, Planaria latiuscula, Gonordworm, Fluke, Liver Fluke, (F.) Douve, D. du Foie. An obovate, flat worm, an inch in length, and nearly half an inch broad; sometimes found in the gall-bladder of man, whence it occasionally passes into the intestinal canal. It is one of the most common varieties of worms, infesting the livers of the sheep, goat, ox, stag, fallow-deer, horse, ass, hog, hare, &c. The treatment is like that required for other worms. DISTOMA seu DISTOMUM LANCEOLATUM, a different species, has been found in the biliary ducts of man, and of different phytivorous mammalia.

DISTOMA OCULI HUMANI, Distomum oculi humani. A parasite observed by Gescheidt in the eye of a child who had suffered from lenticular cataract.

DISTOMUM HÆMATOBIUM, see Worms—d. Hepaticum, Distoma hepaticum—d. Oculi humani, Distoma oculi humani.

DISTORTIO, Distortion, Sprain, Strabismus—d. Oris, Canine laugh.

DISTORTION, Distorsio, Intorsio, (distorque, (dis, and torque, tortum), 'to wrest aside.') Distremma, Dias'trophæ, (F.) Distortion. Usually applied to the preternatural curvature of a bone; as distortion of the spine, limbs, &c. It signifies, also, a morbid state of the muscles of the eye, constituting squinting or strabismus.

DISTORTOR ORIS, Zygomatius major.

DISTRIBUTORIA LACTEA THORACICA, Thoracic duct.

DISTRICHIA, (dis, and τριχ, gen. τριχος, 'hair.') Distichiasis.

DISTRICHIASIS, Distichiasis.

DISTRIX, gen. Districis, (dis, and τριχ, gen. τριχος, 'hair.') Trichiosis distrix, Fissura capillorum. Hairs of the scalp, weak, slender, and splitting at their extremities.

DITOCIA, Distocia.

DITRACHYERAS, (di, τραχος, 'rough,' and κρας, 'horn.') A genus of intestinal-worms. The Ditrachyeras rudis, Diceras rudis, (F.) Bicornis rude. This fancied entozoon was first observed in the evacuations of a female, by M. Sultzter, of Strasburg. It is of a fawn colour, from 3 to 5 lines in length, with an oval head, flattened and terminating in a point posteriorly; contained in a membranous sac, and furnished anteriorly, with a bifurcated, rugous horn. Laënnec considers it a vesicular worm or hydatid. According to Von Siebold, there is no such entozoon. The undigested seed of the mulberry, which had been eaten, was mistaken for it.

DITTANDER, Lepidium sativum.

DITTANY, (see Dictamnus.) Cunila Mariana—d. American, Cunila Mariana—d. Bastard, Dictamnus albus—d. of Crete, Origanum dictamnus—Mountain, Cunila Mariana.

DITTECOIA, (διττος, 'double,' and ακη, 'hearing.') Double hearing.

DITTOPIA, (διττος, 'double,' and ωψ, 'the eye.') Diplopia.

DITOPSIA, Diplopia.

DIURESÆSTHESIS, Diureticoesthesis, Ure-siæsthesis: (διουρω, 'to pass the urine,' and αισθησις, 'feeling.') The desire or want to pass the urine.

DIURESIS, Diuriam, (dia, and ουρω, 'I pass the urine.') (F.) Diurèse. An abundant excretion of urine.

DIURETIC, Diureticus, Ischuret'ic, Uret'icus, Urina'lis, (F.) Diurétique. A medicine which has the property of increasing the secretion of urine. Diuretics act by producing a discharge of the watery and other parts of the blood; and, by such discharge, indirectly promote absorption over the whole system. Hence, they are employed in dropsy. To this class belong squill, juniper, digitalis, &c. Some of them appear to affect the system of nutrition, by modifying the metamorphosis of tissue, and giving occasion to the separation of tissue materials from the blood by the kidneys. Hence they were called, by Dr. Golding Bird, Renal alteratives. To this class belong the alkalies, alkaline salts, &c.

DIURETICA, Arnica Montana.

DIURETICOÆSTHESIS, Diuresiæsthesis.

DIURISM, Diuresis.

DIVARICATIO, (di, and varicare, 'to straddle.') Ectropion.

DIVERSORIUM CHYLI, Receptaculum chyli.

DIVERTICULA SPIRITUM ANIMALIUM, Ganglions, nervous.

DIVERTICULUM, Deverticulum. (F.) Diverticule. 'A turning;' (divertere, (di, and vertere), 'to turn aside.') A blind tube branching out of the course of a longer one. An organ which is capable of receiving an unusual quantity of blood, when the circulation is obstructed or modified elsewhere, is said to act as a diverticulum. Also, a malformation or diseased appearance of a part, in which it passes out of its regular course. It is sometimes applied to such a condition of the alimentary canal. Also, a hole to get out at. A by-passage. See Ectrope.

DIVERTICULUM NUCULI, The opening through which the round ligaments of the uterus pass.

DIVERTICULUM PHARYNGIS, Pharyngocele—d. Vateri, Plica longitudinalis Vateri.

DIVIDING, Dividens, (dividere, divisum, (di or dis, and the Hetruscan verb iduo, 'to part or portion.') (F.) Divisif. That which divides or separates.

DIVIDING BANDAGE, Fascia dividens, (F.) Bandage divisif, is a bandage employed for the purpose of keeping parts separated from each other. It is used particularly to prevent improper union; as in cases of burns of the neck or other parts.

DIVINATIO, (divino, divinatum, (from divus, 'divine,' 'to foresee,' 'divine.') Mantia.

DIVISIF, Dividing.

DIVISION, Divisio, Div'esis. Same etymon as Dividing. The accidental separation of parts naturally united; in other words, a wound or solution of continuity. Most frequently, however, it means an operation, which consists in cutting certain parts, with the view of fulfilling some therapeutical indication.

DIVULSIO, Dias'pasis, (divellere, (di, and vellere, vulsum), 'to pull asunder.') A term used in Surgery, to express the rupture or laceration of organs by external violence.

DIVULSIO URINÆ, Cloudiness of urine.—See Enæorema.

DIXON'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, Pilulæ antibiliosæ.

DIYLISIS, (διυλισις,) Colatio.

DIYLISMUS, (διυλισμος,) Colatio.

DIZZINESS, Vertigo.

DIZZY, (Sax. dirf, dirfz.) Vertiginosus.

DOCCIONE, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is at Lucca, in Italy. It is a thermal saline.

DOCHMĒ, (δοχμη.) A measure of the Greeks, equal to about four fingers' breadth: Dactylodochmē.

DOCIMASIA, (δοκιμασια,) Docimasiticæ, Docimæsiolog'ia, (δοκιμασιω,) 'I try or prove the quality of any thing.' The act of assaying.

DOCIMASIA MEDICAMENTO'RUM ET VENENORUM. The testing of medicines and poisons.

DOCIMASIA PULMONUM, D. Pulmonalis, Pneobiomanti'a. Pneobiomanti'a, Pneobiomanti'a. Lung proof, Respiration proof. Different proofs to which the organs of respiration of a new-born child are subjected, for the purpose of detecting whether it has or has not respired after birth; in other words, whether it was born alive or dead;—Pneusiobiognosis, Pneusiobioscopè. These consist, chiefly, 1. In testing the lungs with water, for the purpose of seeing whether they are specifically heavier or lighter than that fluid. This is called Docimasia Pulmonum hydrostatica, or the Hydrostatic Test. If lighter, it would be some evidence that the fœtus had respired: 2. In comparing the weight of the lungs with that of the whole body; the weight of lungs in which respiration has taken place being nearly twice as great. This is Docimasia Pulmonum Stat'ica, or Plouquet's Stat'ic Test; and, 3. By measuring the circumference of the thorax and lungs; and comparing their dimensions with those of an infant which has not respired. That is Daniel's Test. These tests, singly, afford only probable evidence; but when united, the deductions may be more conclusive.

DOCIMASIOLOGIA, (docimasia, and logos, 'a treatise.') Docimasia.

DOCKMACKIE, Viburnum acerifolium.

DOCK, (Sax. doce.) Rumex—d. Bitter, Rumex obtusifolius—d. Bloody, Rumex sanguineus—d. Bloody-veined, Rumex sanguineus—d. Blunt-leaved, Rumex obtusifolius.

DOCK CRESSSES, Lapsana.

DOCK, CURLED, Rumex crispus—d. Sour, Rumex acetosus, R. crispus—d. Sour, boreal, Oxyria reniformis—d. Spatter, Nuphar advena—d. Water, Rumex hydrolapathum—d. Wild, sharp-pointed, Rumex acutus—d. Yellow, Rumex crispus.

DOCKEN (Sc. and Prov.) ('dock.') Rumex.

DOCKNA SURA, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is in the Krapach mountains. The water contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of soda, chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, silica, and iron.

DOCTEUR, Doctor, Physician.

DOCTOR, Med'icus, (doctus, 'learned'; 'un homme qui devrait être docteur.') (F.) Docteur. Frequently applied to any one who practises medicine; although properly confined to him who has received his degree of Doctor of Medicine. See Physician.

'To Doctor' is sometimes used, vulgarly, for 'to treat with drugs.'

DOCTORS' STUFF, see Medicament.

DOCTRINA GALLIANA ('doctrine of Gall.') Craniology—d. Soteria, Medicina.

DOCTRINE HOMŒOPATHIQUE, Homœopathy.

DOCTRINE, MEDICAL, Doctrina Med'ica. The principles or positions of any medical sect or master. Medicine has been too full of doctrines. One of the first was that of Herodicus of Selivraæ, who recommended gymnastic exercises in disease. The chief founders of doctrines have been Hippocrates, Serapion of Alexandria, Philinus of Cos, Herophilus, Asclepiades, Themison of Laodicea, Thesalus of Tralles, Soranus of Ephesus, Leonides of Alexandria, Athenæus of Attalia, Archigenes of Apamæa, Agathinus of Sparta, Galenus, Paracelsus, John Baptist van Helmont, Sylvius de le Boe, Keill, Hamberger, Piteairne, H. Boerhaave, J. D. Stahl, Frederick Hoffman, George Baglivi, Cullen, Darwin, John Brown, Beddoes, Girtanner, Reil, Rush, Rasori, and Broussais.

DOCTRINE, PHYSIOLOGICAL, Broussais.

DODDER, Cuscuta glomerata—d. American, Cuscuta glomerata—d. of Thyme, Cuscuta epithymum.

DODECADACTYLITIS, (dodecadactylon, and itis.) Duodenitis.

DODECADACTYLON, (δωδεκα, 'twelve,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger.') Duodenum.

DODECAPHARMACUM, (δωδεκα, 'twelve,' and φαρμακον, 'a medicine.') An ancient name given to all medicines which consisted of twelve ingredients. See Apostolorum Unguentum.

DODECATHŒON, (δωδεκα, 'twelve,' and τιθημι, 'I put'; or from θεος, a god, after the twelve Grecian gods.) An antidote, consisting of twelve simple substances.

DODECATHŒON, Sanicula—d. Plinii, Pinguicula vulgaris.

DODONŒA, (after R. Dodoens, of Leyden,) Myrica gale.

DODONŒA THUNBERGIANA. A shrub of the Nat. Ord. Sapindaceæ, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope. A decoction of the root is used as a gentle cathartic in fever.

DODRANS, Spithama.

DOGCHOAK, Cynanche.

DOG DAYS, (F.) Jours Caniculaire. During these days, comprised between the 24th of July and the 23d of August, the temperature of the air in Europe is generally high and oppressive. They have received this name from the dogstar, Canicula, Σείριος, Sirius—a very brilliant star in the constellation of the great dog, which rises and sets, at this time, with the sun. It was formerly believed to be a period particularly unpropitious to health; that it was dangerous to purge during it; and other phantasies were indulged in regard to it.

DOGGRASS, Triticum repens.

DOGHIP, see Rosa canina.

DOGMATIC, (δογματικός, from δογμα, gen. δογματος, from δοκω, 'I think.') Dogmaticus, (F.) Dogmatique. The name of an ancient medical sect; so called, because its members endeavoured, by reasoning, to discover the essence of diseases and their occult causes; whilst the Empirics, their rivals, confined themselves strictly to experience; i. e., to the observation of facts. The union of the two modes of investigation makes the rational physician. These sectarians are likewise called Dogmatists, and their doctrine Dogmatism.

The founders of the sect were Hippocrates, Thesalus, Draco, and Polybius; and the most celebrated of its supporters were Diocles of Carysta, Praxagoras of Cos, Chryssippus of Soli, Herophilus, and Erasistratus.

DOGS' BANE, Apocynum androsæmifolium—d. Bane, bitter, Apocynum androsæmifolium.

DOGS' GRASS, Triticum repens.

DOGS' STONES, Orchis mascula.

DOGSTAR, Canicula.

DOGTREE, Cornus Florida.

DOGWOOD, Cornus Florida—d. Blueberried, Cornus sericea—d. Female, Cornus sericea—d. Florida, Cornus Florida—d. Great flowered, Cornus Florida—d. Jamaica, Piscidia erythrina—d. New England, Cornus sericea—d. Panicked, Cornus paniculata—d. Pond, Cephalanthus occidentalis—d. Round-leaved, Cornus circinata—d. Silky-leaved, Cornus sericea—d. Striped, Acer Pennsylvanicum—d. Swamp, Cornus sericea, Ptelea trifoliata—d. Virginian, male, Cornus Florida—d. White, Cornus paniculata.

DOIGT, Digitus—d. Auriculaire, Auricular finger—d. Hippocraticque, Finger, Hippocratic—d. Milieu, see Digitus—d. Petit, see Digitus—d. Surnuméraire, Digitus supernumerarius.

DOIGTIER, (from doigt.) Digitale, Digitalis—d. d'Astrubali, see Digitale.

DOIGTS PALMÉS, Dactylion.

DOITRE, (Sc.), see Dementia.

DOKE, Contusion.

DOLABRA, (dolare, 'to hew.') Ascia, Doloire.

DOLIC, Dolichos.

DOLICHOCEPHALÆ (GENTES); (δολίχος, 'long,' and κεφαλή, 'head.') 'Longheads.' Na- tions of men whose cerebral lobes completely cover the cerebellum—as the Kelts, Germans, negroes, &c.—Retzius.

DOLICHOCEPHALIA. Monstrosity, in which the head is abnormally long.

DOLICHOS, (δολίχος, 'long,' as applied to the pods.) A genus of plants of the leguminous family, (F.) Dolie, Dolique. It includes a number of species, generally indigenous in India or America. The Dolichos Lablab, or Lablab, is found in Egypt. (Prospero Alpini.) Its fruit is eaten there, like the haricot with us. The Dolichos Sinen'sis, is eaten in China, and is stored up as a provision for long voyages. The Dolichos Tuberosus (F.) Pois Patate of Martinique, has tuberous roots of the size of both fists, and has the consistence and taste of the turnip. The Dolichos Bulbosus of the West Indies resembles the turnip;—and from the seeds of the Dolichos Soja, the Japanese prepare the well-known sauce Soy, which they term Soja. The most important in medicine is the DOLICHOS PRURIENS, Dolichos, Stizolobium, Mucuna pruriens, Negrelia pruriens, Cochuge, Coc'itch, Adsa'ria Pa'ta. Order, Leguminosæ. (F.) Pois à gratter. The stiff hairs of the Dolichos Pods, called Dolichos Pubes, D. Pruriensis pubes, Dolichis Set'te Leguminum, Lan'go Sil'i-quæ hirsute, Mucuna (Ph. U. S.), are the parts used in medicine. They excite an intolerable, prurient sensation, when applied to the skin; but do not irritate the mucous membrane over which they pass, when administered internally. The Dolichos is a mechanical anthelmintic, and is useful in cases of ascarides lumbricoides, and oxyures vermiculares. Dose, gr. v to x, of the pubes, in molasses.

Mucuna pruri'ta, a distinct species, but possessing similar properties, grows in the East Indies.

DOLIQUE, Dolichos.

DOLOIRE (F.), As'cia, Dola'bra, 'a carpenter's axe,' (from dolare, 'to hew.')

A Bandage en dovoire is one in which the turns are so placed, that each one covers two-thirds of that which is immediately beneath it. It has received the name Doloire from its representing the obliquity of the edge of the instrument whose name it bears. See Bandage.

DOLOR, gen. Dolo'ris, Pain—d. Ani, Proctalgia—d. Capitis, Cephalalgia—d. Cephalicus, Cephalalgia—d. Colicus, Colic—d. Crucians faciei, Neuralgia, facial—d. Dentium, Odontalgia—d. Dentium à stridore, Hæmodia—d. Faciei, Neuralgia, facial—d. Ischiadicus nervosus, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—d. Lenis, Hypodynia—d. Mitis, Hypodynia—d. Nephreticus, Nephralgia—d. Pectoris externus, Plenodynia—d. Pudendum, Pudendagra—d. Rheumaticus et arthriticus, Rheumatism.

DOLORES AD PARTUM, (pl. of Dolor), Pains, labour—d. Intestinorum, Colic—d. Parturientis, Pains, labour—d. Post partum, Pains, after—d. Puerperarum, Pains, after—d. Rodentes, Pains, gnawing.

DOLORIFIC, (dolor, 'pain,' and facere, 'to make.')

Odynopoetic.

DOLP (Sc.). (Icel. doef.) Nates.

DOMBEY'A EXCEL'SATA, (after Dombey, a French botanist.) Araucaria Dombey'i. A tree of Chili, which furnishes Dombeya turpentina; a glutinous, milky-looking fluid of a strong odour and taste.

DOMESTIC, Domes'ticus, (domus, 'a house.')

The term Domes'tic or Pop'ular Medicine has been given to treatises written for the purpose of enabling those who are not of the profession to treat diseases, which may occur in their families, without the necessity of calling in a physician. The term, likewise, signifies—medicine, when thus practised. It is probable, that such works have been attended with mischievous as well as advantageous results.

DOMINARUM AQUA, ('ladies' water.')

A medicine described by Myrepsus, which he considered emmenagogue.

DOMPTE-VENIN, ('poison-tamer, alexipharmic.')

Asclepias vincetoxicum.

DOMUS LEPROSARIA, ('a house for the leprous.')

DOREA, Hemeralops.

DOREMA AMMONIACUM, gen. Dorc'matis, see Ammoniac, Gum.

DORMITATIO, (dormitare, dormitatum, 'to be sleepy.')

Somnolency.

DORMITIO, (dormire, 'to sleep.')

Sleep—d. Lucumoriana, see Lucumorianus.

DORONIC, Doronicum pardalianches—d. d'Allemagne, Arnica montana.

DORONICUM ARNICA, Arnica montana—d. Cordatum, D. Pardalianches—d. Germanicum, Arnica montana—d. Officinale, D. Pardalianches—d. Oppositifolium, Arnica montana.

DORONICUM PARDALIANCHES, D. Romanum seu Cordatum seu Officinale, Ro'man Leopard's Bane, (F.) Doronic, Doronicque, Mort aux Panthères. The root of this plant resembles Arnica Montana in its properties.

DORONICUM PLANTAGINIS FOLIO, Arnica montana—d. Romanum, D. Pardalianches.

DORSAD, see Dorsal Aspect.

DORSAL, Dorsa'lis, (from dorsum.) Notie'us, No'tal, Ter'gal. Relating to the back of the body, or of one of its parts; as the Dorsal vertebrae, nerves, &c.; Dorsal artery of the tongue, penis, &c.; Dorsal region of the foot, hand, &c.; Dorsal Consumption, &c.

DORSAL ASPECT. According to Dr. Barclay, an aspect towards the dorsum or backbone. Dorsad is used by the same writer adverbially, to signify 'towards the dorsal aspect.'

DORSAL LONG, Longissimus dorsi.

DORSALIS, Dorsal.

DORSALIS PEXIS (Nervus). The branch of the internal pudic nerve, which is distributed to the upper part of the male organ; and to the clitoris of the female.

DORSCH, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

DORSE, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

DORSTENIA BRASILIENSIS, (after Dr. Dorsten, a botanist of Marburg.) Ca-a'pia.

DORSTENIA CONTRAYERVA, D. Houstonii, Contrayer'va, Drake'na, Cyp'rus longus odor'us seu Pernu'vus, Bezoar'dica Ra'diz, Lis'bon Contrayer'va (F.) Racine de Charcis ou de Dracks (Drake) ou des Philippines. Order, Urticeæ. Ser. Syst. Tetandria Monogynia. A plant of South America, whose root, Contrayer'va (Ph. U. S.), is aromatic, bitter, and astringent. It has been given as a tonic, stimulant and sudorific. Dose, gr. xij to ʒss.

DORSTENIA CORDIFOLIA, D. Brasiliensis—d. Placentoides, D. Brasiliensis—d. Vitella, D. Brasiliensis.

DORSUM, No'tus. The back. Metaph'renon, Ter'gum, (Prov.) Rig, (F.) Dos. The posterior part of the trunk, extending from the inferior and posterior region of the neck as far as the loins. The back of the foot, Dorsum pedis, is the upper part of that organ, opposite the sole: the back of the hand, Dorsum manus, the part opposed to the palm. In the same sense, we say Dorsum penis, Dorsum nasi, for the upper part of those organs.

DORSUM, Vertebral column—d. Ephippii, see Sella turcica—d. Manús, Opisthenar.

DOS, Dorsum.

DOSAGE, (from dose), Posology.

DOSE, Do'sis, (do'sis, from didomi, 'to give,') Præbium, (F.) Prisæ. The quantity of any substance, which ought to form part of a compound medicine, or ought to be exhibited singly, to produce a desired effect. Many circumstances influence the doses of medicine. Women require smaller doses, as a general principle, than men. Habit has a great effect, as well as climate, age, and idiosyncrasy: all these, and other circumstances, must be taken into account; and every general rule on the subject will be found to have numerous exceptions. Some of the mechanical physicians laid it down as a rule, that the doses of medicines must always be as the square of the constitution!—A matter not easy of calculation.

The following Tables will exhibit an approximation, but only an approximation, to the proper doses (according to age) of most substances.

TABLE OF DOSES ACCORDING TO AGE.

|        |                      |         |             |
|--------|----------------------|---------|-------------|
| Age 24 | Let the full dose be | 1       | 1 drachm.   |
| 18     | will require         | 2-3ds.  | 2 scruples. |
| 14     | - - - -              | half.   | ½ drachm.   |
| 7      | - - - -              | 1-3d.   | 1 scruple.  |
| 4      | - - - -              | 1-4th.  | 15 grains.  |
| 3      | - - - -              | 1-6th.  | 10 grains.  |
| 2      | - - - -              | 1-8th.  | 8 grains.   |
| 1      | - - - -              | 1-12th. | 5 grains.   |

The table of doses, according to age, recommended by Dr. Thomas Young, differs in some respects from the above. It, also, affords a general approximation. His rule is, that

For children, under twelve years of age, the doses of most medicines must be diminished in the proportion of the age to the age increased by twelve:

Thus, at two years, to 1-7th; i.e.  $1-7th = \frac{2}{2+12}$

At twenty-one the full dose is given.

DOSES, BROKEN, (F.) Doses réfractées. When an agent is given in small portions it is said to be in broken doses,—refractis dosibus, (F.) à Doses refractées.

DOSIA POWDER, see Powder, dosia.

DOSIOLOGIA, (dosis, and logos, 'a discourse,') Posology.

DOSIS, (do'sis), Dose.

DOSSIL, (Old. F. dosil, 'a stopple,') Boardonnet.

DOTAGE, ([F.] radoter, [D.] dutten, 'to rave,') See Dementia.

DOTHIEIN, (δοθιην), Furunculus.

DOTHIEENTERIA, (dothiēn, εντερον, 'intestine,' and itis), Dothienteritis.

DOTHIENTÉRIE, Dothienteritis.

DOTHINENTERIA, Dothienteritis.

DOTHINENTERITIS, properly Dothiēnenteritis, Dothiēnenteria, Dothiēnenteria, Enteritis pustulosa, Enterodothiēnia, Helcenteritis, Follicular Gastroenteritis, (F.) Dothiēnenterite, Dothiēnenteric, Dothiēnenterie, Dothiēnenterite. An inflammation and ulceration of the glands or follicles of Peyer and Brunner, which Bretonneau considered to be the essence of a large class of fevers, particularly of those of the typhoid character. See Typhus.

DOTHION, (δοθίων), Furunculus.

DOTTRINA MEDICA ITALIANA, ('Italian medical doctrine,') Condrostimulus, (doctrine of.)

DOUBLE, Inguivius.

DOUBLE CONSCIOUSNESS, see Consciousness, double.

DOUBLE HEARING, Dipleco'ia, Dittec'o'ia, Paraeco'sis duplicata seu imperfecta. The action of the one ear unaccordant with that of the other: sounds heard doubly, and in different tones or keys.

DOUBLE-MONSTERS, see Duplication.

DOUBLE-QUARTE, see Quartan.

DOUBLE-QUOTIDIENNE, see Quotidian.

DOUBLE-TIERCE, see Tertian.

DOUBLING GAP, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. They are situated in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, eight miles from Newville. They contain hydrosulphuric acid, carbonates of soda and magnesia, sulphates of soda and magnesia, and chloride of sodium. A chalybeate spring contains carbonate of iron, sulphate and carbonate of magnesia, and chloride of sodium.

DOUCE-AMÈRE, ('sweet bitter,') Solanum dulcamara.

DOUCHE (F.), (modern Latin, ducia, (I.) docciare, 'to pour,') Cataclysmus, Douse. This term is applied to a column of fluid, of a determinate nature and temperature, let fall upon the body. Pump'ing is a variety of the Donche. In using this kind of bath, the fluid is directed upon the part on which we are desirous of acting. The donches descendantes are those in which the fluid falls from a height, — the donches ascendantes, those administered in diseases of the uterus, — the donches horizontales, where the fluid is impelled horizontally, &c. They may be cold or warm, according to circumstances. The apparatus consists of a reservoir of water having a pipe or plug, by means of which the water can be directed as the practitioner may desire. The Douche communicates a considerable and peculiar shock to the nervous system; and is one of the most successful means for taming the furious maniac. It is, also, useful in chronic rheumatism, stiff joints, &c.

Douches of air are occasionally used, as in cases of obstruction of the Eustachian tube by mucus. They are sent from an air-press — of which Deleau and Kramer have invented one each — through a catheter introduced through the nose into the tube.

DOUCHE ÉCOSSAISE, Douche, transition — d. Scotch, Douche, transition.

DOUCHE, TRANSIT'ION, Scotch douche, (F.)

Douche Écossaise. A douche, which consists in the successive use of hot and cold water.

DOUGLAS'S CUL-DE-SAC, (after Dr. James Douglas, the obstetrician and anatomist,) see Uterus.

DOULEUR, (from dolor), Pain, d. de Coté, Pleurodynia — d. des Dents, Odontalgia — d. de l'Estomac, Cardialgia — d. Névralgique de l'Estomac, Cardialgia — d. Pulsative, see Throbbing.

DOULEURS, (pl. of Douleur), Pains, labour — d. Conquassants, see Conquassant.

DOULOUREUX, Painful.

DOUNT (Sc.), (onomatopœia,) Palpitation.

DOUP (Sc.), ([Icel.] doef), Nates.

DOUSE, Douche.

DOUVE, Distoma hepaticum — d. du Foie, Distoma hepaticum — d. Petite, Ranunculus flammula.

DOWN, see Attack.

DOWP (Sc.), ([Icel.] doef), Nates.

DOYLE, Strabismus.

DRACHION, Pugillus.

DRACHM, Drachma, (δραχμη), Dram, (F.) Gros. The ancient name of a piece of money, weighing the eighth part of an ounce. At the present day it is used for this weight.

DRACO, (δρακων, gen. δρακωντος, 'a dragon,') in composition, a dragon or large serpent.

DRACO MITIGATUS, Hydrargyri submuriatis -d. Sylvestris, Achillea ptarmica.

DRACOCEPHALUM CANARIENSE, D. Moldavicum, (draco, and κεφαλη, 'head,' from the shape of the corolla,) Melissa Turcica seu Canariensis, Cedronella triphylla, Alpini Balsamum, Turkey or Canary Balsam, Balm of Gil'ead Tree, (F.) Mélisse de Moldavie. Ord. Labiatae. A Turkish and Siberian plant, which has an aromatic taste, joined with an agreeable flavour. It has been used as a tonic.

DRACONTHÆMA, (draco, and αἷμα, 'blood,') see Calamus rotang.

DRACONTIASIS, see Dracunculus.

DRACONTIUM, Dracunculus. See, also, Dracuncium foetidum

DRACONTIUM FOETIDUM, (from draco), Ictodes foetidus, Symplocarpus foetidus, Po'thos foetida seu Puto'ria, A'rum America'num beta folio, Spathyema foetida, Skunk-cabbage, Skunkweed, Polecatcollard, Cowcollard, Collard, Itchweed, Stink-poke, Scampeabbage, Polecatweed, Hellbore, Ellebore, Irish cabbage. Ord. Aroideae or Araceae. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. This indigenous plant, as some of its names import, is extremely fetid. The property on which its medicinal virtues are dependent, resides in a volatile principle, which is impaired by long keeping, especially in powder. Dose, of the dried root, Dracontium, (Ph. U. S.,) ten to twenty grains. It resembles asafoetida and other fetid gums in its properties; in other words, belongs to the class of reputed antispasmodics.

DRACONTIUM ANGSTIS'PATHA, Symplocarpus, Angustis patha, Nar'rov-spath'ed Skunkcabbage, is possessed of similar properties.

DRACUNCULUS, (dim of draco), D. Gordius, Dracontium, Ve'na Medi'na Arabum, Ve'na seu Gordius Medinen'sis, Medinogordius, Vermiculus Capillaris, Filaria Medinen'sis seu Guineensis, Malaria Dracunculus seu Gordii, Helminthionens Medinen'sis, Muscular Hair'worm, Bi'chios, Bi'cho, Guinea Worm or Thread'worm, (F.) Dragonneau, Ver de Guinée, Ver Filaire, V. de Médine, V. cutané, Veine ou Filaire de Médine. A genus of worms, frequently met with in Indian and African climes. They are characterized by a filiform body, and are smooth and nearly of equal thickness throughout. The Guinea worm, when small, insinuates itself through the cutaneous pores, and penetrates into the areolar membrane and between the muscles; especially between those of the lower limbs, where it occasions a tumour like a boil, which subsequently suppurates, and the head of the worm appears and emerges gradually. The head must then be seized, and the worm be cautiously rolled round a small cylinder of linen or other substance. Care must be taken not to break it, as great pain and obstinate suppuration might be the consequence.

Considerable obscurity rests on this subject. Some even deny that the cases of Dracunculus, on record, are really those of worms.

The morbid phenomena induced by the dracunculus have been termed Dracuntiasis, (F.) Dracontiasis.

DRACUNCULUS, Artemisia dracunculus—d. Polypyllus, Arum dracunculus—d. Pratensis, Achillea ptarmica.

DRAGÉES (F.), (corr. from τραγήματα, 'sweetmeats?') Almonds or dried preserves, covered with white sugar; Sugarplums. Used in pharmacy for sugar-coated medicines.

DRAGÉES DE KEYSER. A pharmaceutical preparation, formerly much celebrated in syphilis. It was composed of acetate of mercury, manna, starch, mucilage, and gum tragacanth.

DRAGMA, gen. Dragmatia, (δραγμα), Pugillus.

DRAGMIS, (δραγμης), Pugillus.

DRAGON (F.), Drag'on. Some authors have given this name to opaque spots on the cornea, and to cataract.

DRAGON CLAW, SCALY, Pterospora-andromedea—d. Green, Arum dracontium—d. Root, Arum triphyllum, Pterospora andromedea—d. Turnip, Arum triphyllum.

DRAGON'S BLOOD, see Calamus rotang.

DRAGONNEAU, (dim. of dragon), Dracunculus.

DRAIN'AGE. The act of depriving parts gradually of their redundant humidity. In Surgery, it means the gradual drawing off of purulent fluids from deep-seated abscesses, by means of hollow sounds,—the Drainage chirurgical of Chassignac.

DRAIN'ING, (Sax. drēhnigan, or from (F.) trainer, 'to draw,') Dessicat'io, (F.) Dessèchement. The act of drawing off the water from marshes, for the purpose of destroying the unhealthy emanations which proceed from them. It is a well known fact, that from marshes arise certain emanations or miasmata, with the nature of which we are, however, totally unacquainted, but which are the fertile source of intermittents and other diseases. Draining the soil and converting it into arable land changes its character, and the malaria ceases to be given off. It has happened, however, that although in some such situations intermittents have been got rid of, consumptions have taken their place.

DRATSCH WATER, Godesberg, mineral waters of.

DRAKENA, (after Sir Francis Drake), Dorstenia conrayerva.

DRAM, Drachm; also (Sc.) Melancholic.

DRAP FANON, see Fanon.

DRAPEAU (F.), (from drap, 'cloth,') Vexillum. A bandage, used in wounds, &c., of the nose, to keep the dressings in situ. It is composed of a small triangular compress, having two openings at its inferior part, corresponding to those of the nostrils. It is fixed by means of a bandage, passing from its superior angle over the head, and another passing round the head, under the orbits, so as to join the first at the nape of the neck. Also, Pterygion.

DRASTIC, Dras'ticus, (δραστικός, from δραω, 'I am active,') Cenot'ic, (F.) Drastique. Active. An epithet given to purgatives, which operate powerfully; as elaterium, oil of croton, &c.

DRAUGHT, (past participle of Sax. dragan, 'to draw,') Haus'tus. A term also applied by nurses to the sudden rush of blood to the mammae, occasioned in the mother by the sight, or even thought, of her infant, and which occasions a greatly increased secretion of milk.

DRAUGHT, BLACK, see Infusum sennae composition.

DRAWING, see Digestives.

DRAX, (δραξ), Pugillus.

DREAM, ([G.] Traum), Somnium—d. Waking, see Hallucination.

DRËCHE, Malt.

DREGISTER, Druggist.

DREGS, ([G.] Dreck 'dirt,') Feculence.

DRENCH, (Sax. drēncan, 'to soak,') To give liquid physic by force. A liquid medicine, given by violence, is called "a drench."

DREPANOIDES, (δρεπανοειδής, from δρεπανον, 'a falx or scythe, and eidos, 'resemblance,') Falciform.

DRESS, Vestitus.

DRESS'ER, ([F.] dresser, 'to put right,') An hospital assistant, whose office it is to dress wounds, ulcers, &c. He corresponds in function to the Édve externe of the French hospitals.

DRESS'ING, Cu'ra, Cura'tio, (F.) Pansemēt.

The methodical application of any remedy or apparatus to a diseased part. Also, the remedy or apparatus itself.

DRIBURG, MINERAL WATERS OF. At the small town of Driburg, near Pyrmont, in Germany, there are nine springs, which are rich in saline ingredients, iron, and carbonic acid gas. Their action on the economy is like that of Pyrmont water. They contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonate of iron, chloride of calcium, and chloride of magnesium.

DRIMYPHAGIA, (δριμυφαγια, from δριμυς, 'acid,' 'aromatic,' and φαγω, 'I eat.') An aromatic and exciting diet.

DRIMYS WINTERI, (δριμυς, 'sharp, acid,') Wintera aromatica.

DRINK, (Sax. drincan,) Po'ma, Po'tio, Po'tus, Be'verage, (F.) Boisson. Every liquid introduced into the alimentary canal for the purpose of repairing the loss of the fluid parts of the body. The necessity for its use is indicated by the sensation of thirst. Fluid, taken during a meal, aids in the digestion of the food. Some drinks are exciting and tonic, as the different varieties of beer, wine, and spirits, which we use at table. In a therapeutical point of view, drinks are used to appease the thirst which prevails in febrile affections, or to act as diluents in those and other cases.

The ordinary drinks, according to their material composition, are—1. Water, spring water, river water, well water, &c.—2. Juices and infusions of Animal and Vegetable substances, lemon juice, currant juice, whey, tea, coffee, mattee, &c.—3. Fermented Liquors, wines, ale, beer, cider, perry, &c.—4. Spirituons Liquors, brandy, alcohol, ether, kirschwasser, rum, arack, gin, whisky, ratafia, cordials, &c.

DROSERÀ ROTUNDIFOLIA, (δρροσερος, 'dewy,' ῥόσος, 'dew,' the leaf glands exuding a clear fluid like dew-drops.) The systematic name of the Sun'dew, Ros so'lis, Drosobot'anon, Dro'sium, Rorel'la, (F.) Rosolis, Rosée du soleil, Herbe à la rosée. Ord. Droseraceæ. This plant has a bitter, acid, and caustic taste. It has been used as a rubefacient, and to destroy warts and corns. It has, also, been regarded as a pectoral.

DROSISTICON, see Bosa.

DROSIUM, Drosera rotundifolia.

DROSOBOTANON, (ῥόσος, 'dew,' and βοτανη, 'plant,') Drosera rotundifolia.

DROSOMELI, (ῥόσος, 'dew,' and μελι, 'honey,') Fraxinus ornus.

DROW (Sc.), Syncope.

DROWNING, ASPHYXIA BY, see Asphyxia by submersion.

DRUG, Medicamentum, (F.) Droque. (Ménage derives it from droga, and this from the Persian droa, 'odour,' because many drugs have a strong odour. It is, doubtless, from Teutonic troeken, Sax. drigan, 'to dry,') A name ordinarily applied to simple medicines, but, by extension, to every substance employed in the cure of disease.

DRUG. To prescribe or administer drugs. Most commonly, perhaps, to dose to excess with drugs. One who so doses is sometimes called "a druggier." "To drug," also means to tincture with some medicinal article.

DRUG DISEASE. A morbid condition, which is—or is presumed to be—caused or kept up by the administration of drugs.

DRUG GRINDER, see Pulverization—d. Mill, see Pulverization.

DRUGGER, Druggist, see Drug.
 DRUGGING, Pharmacomania.
 DRUGGIST, Drug'ger, Drug'ster, (Prov.) Dre-gister, Pharmacopola, Materialis'ta, Seplasia'rius, Pharmacopae'us, (F.) Droguiste. One who sells drugs.

DRUGSTER, Druggist.
 DRUM (Sc.), Melancholic—d. of the Ear, Tympanum.

DRUMBELY, Tympanites.
 DRUMSIEVE, see Cribration.
 DRUNKENNESS, Temulentia.
 DRUNKEWORT, Nicotiana tabacum.

DRY'ING, (Sax. drigan, 'to dry.') Desicca'tio, Sicca'tio, Desicca'tio, Exsicca'tio, Xeran'sis, Auan'sis, same etymon as Drug, (F.) Dessiccation. Evaporation or removal of the superfluous humidity in a body.

DRYING OF PLANTS, Desicca'tio herbarum, Desicca'tion of Plants. Those which are very succulent should be dried quickly. They must be spread upon lattice work, covered from the light, and exposed to the heat of the sun or to that of a stove, not exceeding 110° Fahrenheit. The drying of less succulent plants can be effected at a lower temperature. Flowers must be dried very carefully, excluding light. Seeds are dried in a place where there is a free current of air. Pulpy fruits may be exposed to a gentle heat in a stove, which may be gradually elevated. Roots may also be dried in the stove: the tuberosus require to be cut in slices.

DRY NURSE, see Nurse.
 DRYOBALANOPS CAMPHORA, see Camphor.
 DTHOKE, Frambosia.
 DUAL'ITY, Dual'itas, (duo, 'two.') The state or quality of being two.

DUALITY OF THE MIND OR BRAIN. As the organ consists of two hemispheres, they have been regarded by some as separately and distinctly concerned in the mental and moral manifestations.

DUALM (Sc.), Syncope.
 DUCKFOOT, see Kylosis.
 DUCKLEGGED. Having short legs like a duck.

DUELECH, Dulech.
 DUELLA. The ancient name of a weight, which was equivalent to eight scruples.

DUELLUM ('war,') VENEREMUS, Coition.
 DUG, (Sw. dugga, 'to give suck,') Nipple.
 DULCAMARA, (dulcis, 'sweet,' and amarus, 'bitter,') Solanum dulcamara—d. Flexuosa, Solanum dulcamara.

DULCEDO AMORIS, (gen. Dulce'dinis) ('sweetness of love,') Clitoris—d. Sputatorium, see Salivation.

DUL'LECH, Du'lelech. A term employed by Paracelsus and Van Helmont to designate a pretended tartarized substance, which forms in the human body, and produces acute pain, accompanied with great danger.

DULL, (Sax. dole,) Deaf.
 DULSE, Rhodomela palmata—d. Pepper, Lau-rentia pinnatifida.

DUMB, (Sax.  dumb,) see Mutitas.
 DUMBNESS, Mutitas.

DUNBLANE, MINERAL WATERS OF. The springs of Dunblane, in Scotland, contain sulphate of soda, chlorides of sodium and calcium, and carbonate of iron.

DUNG, (Sax.  duns.) Fimus—d. Cow's, Fimns Vaccæ—d. Goose, Fimns anseris—d. Stone-horse, Fimns equinus.

DUNGA, Dengue.
 DUNT (Sc.), (onomatopœia,) Palpitation.

DUODENAL, Duodena'tis, (F.) Duodenal. Relating or pertaining to the duodenum.

DUODENITIS, Dodecadactyl'itis, (F.) Duc-dérite, (duodenum and itis.) Inflammation of the duodenum, characterized by white tongue, bitter-taste, anorexia, fulness and tenderness in the region of the duodenum, and often yellowness of skin, along with the ordinary signs of febrile irritation.

DUODENUM, (duodeni, 'twelve,') Ventriculus Succenturiatus, Ec'physis seu Appen'dix seu Proc'es'sus Ventriculi, Portona'rium, Dodecadactylon. The duodenum is the first part of the intestinal canal, commencing at the pyloric orifice of the stomach, and terminating in the jejunum.

Its length was estimated, by the ancients, to be about twelve fingers' breadth. As it is only partially covered by the peritoneum, it is susceptible of considerable dilatation; hence its name Ventriculus succenturiatus. In the duodenum, chylification takes place after the admixture of the biliary and pancreatic fluids with the chyme.

DUOSTER'NAL. Béclard thus names the second osseous portion of the sternum, which corresponds to the second intercostal space.

DUPLICATION, (duo, 'two,' and plicare, pliatum, 'to fold.')

Duplicatio, Duplicitas, Diplosias/mus, Diplo'sis, (F.) Duplicité. A species of malformation or monstrosity, characterized by the parts concerned being doubled. See *Diplogenesi*s.

DUPPLICATION OF THE FÆTUS, Evolution, spontaneous.

DUPPLICATION, Duplicatura, Reflexion. The folding or reflection of a membrane upon itself; as Duplicature or reflection of the pleura, peritoneum, &c.

DUPPLICITAS MONSTROSA, (duplex, gen. duplicitis, 'double.')

See *Diplogenesi*s.

DUPPLICATE, Duplication.

DUPOND'NIUM. A weight of four drachms.

DUR, (from durus.) Hard.

DURA MA'TER, ('hard mother,' called dura, because of its great resistance; and mater, because it was believed to give rise to every membrane of the body.) Cras'sa seu Du'ra me'ninx, Sclerome'ninx, Pachyme'ninx, Perime'ninx, Me'ninx exte'rior seu scle'ra seu dermato'des seu pache'a of Galen, Dura membra'na cereb'rum am'brise, Cuticula'ria membra'na, (F.) Dure mère, Dure taye (Paré), Méninge, Périméninge (Ch). It is a fibrous, semi-transparent membrane, of a pearly-white colour, thick, and very resisting; lines the cavity of the cranium, and contains the spinal marrow; protects the brain and marrow; and, by its various expansions,—the falx cerebri, tentorium, &c.,—supports the different parts of the cerebral mass. The largest artery of the dura mater is the A. meningea' media.

DURA MATER, LATERAL PROCESSES OF THE, Tentorium—d. m. Testis, Albuginea.

DURATION OF LIFE, see Life—d. of Pregnancy, see Pregnancy.

DURE-MÈRE, Dura mater.

DURE-TAYE, Dura mater.

DURÉE DE LA VIE, ('duration of life,') see Longevity.

DURETÉ D'OREILLE, ('hardness of ear,') Barycoelia—d. de l'Ouie, Deafness.

DURILLON, (from durus.) Callosity.

DURRA, (in India,) Panicum Italicum.

DURUS, Hard.

DUSTING BAG. In pharmacy, a kind of sieve, which consists of a bag made of lawn or other like material, hung inside of a wide-mouthed bottle or tin canister, to the mouth of which it is secured. The powdered substance is put into the bag, and the mouth being closed with a cover, the apparatus is shaken, and the finer particles pass into the bottle or canister.

DUTCHMAN'S PIPE, Aristolochia hirsuta.

DUTROA, Datura stramonium.

DWALE, ([D.] dwalen, 'to wander,') was formerly used to express a lethargic condition. In Devonshire, England, 'to dwale,' means to mutter deliriously.

DWALE, COMMON, Atropa belladonna.

DWARF, (Sax. ƿƿeofg.) Nanus—d. Flag, Iris lacustris.

DWARFISH, see Nanus.

DWARFISHNESS, Nanosomus.

DYERS' BROOM, Genista tinctoria—d. Weed, Genista tinctoria, Reseda luteola.

DYNAMETER, Dynamometer.

DYNAMIC, Dynamical, Dy.namicus, (F.) Dynamique, (from dynamis.) In Mechanics, Dynamics investigates the powers whereby bodies are put in motion, and the laws connected therewith. In Biology, that which relates to the vital forces, to the organism in action, Vital Dynamics. The influences of agents on the organism, which are ascribable to neither mechanical nor chemical causes, are sometimes termed dynami'c. In this sense, it is a favorite term with the homœopaths, who maintain that, by certain processes, called, in the aggregate, dynamiza'tion and potenti'zing, the dynamic powers of a medicine may be set free and developed—as by shaking the bottle in which the article is contained, or by mixing an unlimited number of unmedicated globules with one that is medicated, and shaking them together. In this way, the former become potentized.

DYNAMIC DISEASES, see Organic.

DYNAMICS, VITAL, see Dynamic.

DYNAMICUS, Dynamic.

DYNAMIOMETER, Dynamometer.

DYNAMIS, (δυναμις.) Faculty, Force.

DYNAMIZATION, see Dynamic.

DYNAMOMETER, Dynamiom'eter, Myodynamiom'eter, Myodynamom'eter, (F.) Dynamomètre, (dynamis, and μέτρον, 'measure') An instrument, contrived by M. Regnier for measuring the comparative muscular strength of man and animals. It consists of a spring, which, when pressed upon, causes a needle to move upon a portion of a circle, furnished with a scale of kilogrammes and one of myriagrammes. To measure the strength of the hands, the two branches of the spring are firmly grasped, and brought as near together as the force can carry them. This effort makes the needle traverse, and indicates, on the scale of kilogrammes, the strength of the experimenter's hands. A man, 25 or 30 years of age, exerts a force commonly equal to 50 kilogrammes or 100 pounds.

The strength of the loins of a man, about 30 years of age, as indicated by this instrument, is usually about 30 myriagrammes, or 265 pounds, which shows the weight he is capable of raising.

From experiments made by Péron, in his voyage, on 12 individuals of Van Diemen's Land, 17 of New Holland, 56 of the Island of Timor, 17 Frenchmen belonging to the expedition, and 14 Englishmen in the colony of New South Wales, he found their comparative strength, indicated by the dynamometer, to be as follows:

| NATIVES OF            | STRENGTH.   |       |               |        |
|-----------------------|-------------|-------|---------------|--------|
|                       | of the arm. |       | of the loins. |        |
|                       | Kilog.      | lbs.  | Myri.         | lbs.   |
| 1. Van Diemen's Land. | 50.6        | 101.2 |               |        |
| 2. New Holland.       | 50.8        | 101.6 | 10.2          | 208.08 |
| 3. Timor.             | 58.7        | 117.4 | 11.6          | 238.64 |
| 4. France.            | 69.2        | 138.4 | 15.2          | 310.08 |
| 5. England.           | 71.4        | 142.4 | 15.2          | 332.52 |

DYNAMOMETER OR DYNAM'ETER, MEDIC'INAL. An instrument devised by Dr. Paris, for the purpose of showing the quantity of active matter contained in a given weight or measure of any official compound, with the dose of any preparation, which will be equivalent in strength to a given quantity of any other of the same class. The instrument is more ingenious than useful.

DYNAMOPATHY, (dynamis, and πάθος, 'affection,') Homœopathy.

DYOTA. Diota.

DYS, dys, as a prefix, 'difficult, faulty;' sometimes privative; mostly answering to the particles dis, in, mis, or un, in English.

DYSÆMIA, (dys, and αἷμα, 'blood.') A morbid condition of the blood.

DYSESTHESIA, (δυσαισθησία, Dysæsthesi's, (dys, and αἰσθάνομαι, 'I feel.') Obscure, diminished, or even abolished sensation.

DYSESTHESIA AUDITORIA, Cophosis—d. Gustatoria, Ageusia—d. Interna, Amnesia—d. Olfactoria, Anosmia.

DYSESTHESIA VISUALIS, Parop'sis. Sense of sight vitiated or lost.

DYSESTHESIS, Dysæsthesia.

DYSANAGOGUS, (δυσαναγωγός, from dys, and αγωγώ, 'I bring up.')

DYSANNARRHOPHE'SIS, Dysanarrhoph'i'a; (dys, and αναρροφήσις, 'absorption,') Diminished absorption from morbid causes.

DYS'APHË, Dysaph'i'a, (dys, and ἄφη, 'feeling.')

Morbid touch.

DYAPULOTUS, Dysapul'us, Dysepulot'us, Dysepulot'icus, Dysulot'us, (dys, and ἄπουλω, 'to heal.')

Healing with difficulty.

DYSARTHTRITIS, (dys, and arthritis, 'gout,')

Gout, irregular.

DYSCATABROSIS, (dys, and καταβρωσις, 'the act of eating up,')

Dysphagia.

DYSCATAPO'SIS, (dys, and καταποσις, 'deglutition,')

Dysphagia.

DYSCATAPO'TIA. This term is recommended by Dr. Mead as a substitute for hydrophobia, which means dread of liquids. The dread seems to be partly caused by the difficulty of deglutition.

DYSCHE'ZIA, (dys, and χεῖμα, 'to go to stool,')

Difficult and painful defecation.

DYSCHE'IA, (δυσχρόια, from dys, and χρῶα or χρῶα, 'colour,')

Dyschro'a. Sickly and unhealthy colour of the skin. Used, also, synonymously with the maculæ of Willan.

DYSCHEMATOP'SIA, (dys, χρῶμα, 'colour,' and οψις, 'vision,')

Achromatopsia.

DYSCHYMOSEN, (dys, and χυμος, 'juice,')

Chymoplasia.

DYSCINE'SIA, (F.) Dyscinésie, (δισκυνήσια, from dys, and κίνω, 'I move,')

Difficulty or utter incapability of moving.

DYSCÆLIA, (dys, and καῖα, 'the abdomen,')

Constipation.

DYSCÆLIUS, (δυσκοιλίος,) Constipated.

DYSCOPHO'SIS, (dys, and κοφῶ, 'I am deaf,')

A defect in the sense of hearing.

DYSCO'RIA, Coremetamorph'osis, (dys, and κορη, 'the pupil,')

Irregularity of shape of the pupil.

DYSCRA'SIA, (δυσκράσια, from dys, and κράσις, 'temperament,')

Intemper'ies, Distemperan'tia, Dys'crasy. A bad habit of body. See Dyssthetica.

DYSCRASIA POTATO'RUM. 'Dyscrasia of drinkers.' The aggregate of cachectic phenomena exhibited by those who indulge in alcoholic liquors.

DYSCRASIA SATURNINA, Saturnismus—d. Scrofulosa, Scrofula—d. Tuberculosus, see Tubercle.

DYSCRASIACUM, Spanæmic.

DYSCRASY, Dyscrasia—d. Bilius, Cholosis, Icterus.

DYS'CRITOS, (δυσκρίτος, from dys, and κρίσις, 'judgment,')

That which it is difficult to judge of.

DYSDA'CRIA, Dysducr'g'osis, (dys, and δακρῶν, 'a tear,')

A morbid condition of the tears.

DYSDACRYOSIS, Dysdacria.

DYSECCRIS'IA, (dys, and εκκρίσις, 'excretion,')

Difficult or defective excretion.

DYSECOIA, (δυσκοία, from dys, and ἀκοή, 'audition,')

Barycoia, Deafness.

DYSEL'CIA, (δυσέλκεια, and δυσέλκεια, from dys, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer,')

An ulcer difficult to heal.

DYSEMESIA, (dys, and εμεσις, 'vomiting,')

Vomiturition.

DYSENTERIA, (δυσεντερία,) Dysentery—d. Biliosa, Colocolosis—d. Hæmatera, Dysentery—d. Hepatica, Hepatirrhœa—d. Maligna, Enterocæce—d. Putrida, Enterocæce—d. Scorbatica, Enterocæce—d. Splenica, Melæna—d. Typhodes, Enterocæce.

DYSENTER'IC, (δυσεντερικός,) Dysenter'icus, Dysen'terus, (F.) Dysentérique, Dysentérique. Relating to dysentery.

DYSENTERIE, Dysentery.

DYSENTERIUM, Dysentery.

DYSENTERONERIA, (dys, εντερον, 'intestine, and νευρον, 'a nerve,')

Colic—d. Saturnina, Colica metallica.

DYSENTERY, Dysenter'ia, D. hæmate'ra, Dysenter'ium, (dys, and εντερον, 'intestine,')

Difficul'tas intestino'rum, Dissolut'us mor'bus, Diarrhœ'a carno'sa, Coli'tis, Coloni'tis, Colorecti'tis, Endocoli'tis, Esocoli'tis, Deflux'us Dysenter'icus, Feb'ris Dysenter'ica, Flu'men dysenter'icum, Flux'us dysenter'icus seu cruent'us cum tenes'mo, Rheumatismus intestino'rum cum ul'cerè, Tor'mina, T. Cell'si, Blennenter'ia, Mor'bus dissolut'us, Se'des cruent'æ, L'u'es dysenter'ica, Blood'y Flux; Flux, (F.) Dysentérie, Dysentérie, Flux dysentérique, Flux de Sang.

Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the large intestine; the chief symptoms of which are:—fever, more or less inflammatory, with frequent mucous or bloody evacuations; violent tormina and tenesmus. When the evacuations do not contain blood, it has been called Dysenter'ia alb'a or sim'ple Dysentery, Mycody'senter'ia.

The seat of the disease is, generally, in the colon and rectum. It occurs, particularly, during the summer and autumnal months, and in hot climates more than in cold: frequently, also, in camps and prisons, in consequence of impure air, and imperfect nourishment: and is often epidemic. Sporadic cases of dysentery are, generally, easily managed; but when the disease occurs epidemically, it often exhibits great malignancy. Generally, it yields to mild laxatives, as castor oil, combined with diaphoretic narcotics, such as the pulvis ipecacuanhæ compositus, and counter-irritants to the abdomen; but, at times, the inflammation runs on so speedily to ulceration, that, unless a new action be rapidly excited, death will be the consequence. In such cases, mercury must be rapidly introduced into the system, and narcotics may be combined with it.

The whole management in acute dysentery, must, of course, be strictly antiphlogistic.

An epidemic dysentery prevailed in the 10th century, under the name Scitta.

DYSENTERY, BILIOUS, Colocolosis.

DYSEPULOTICUS, (dys, επι, 'upon,' and ουλω, 'to heal,')

Dysapulotus.

DYSEPULOTUS, Dysapulotus.

DYSGALACTIA, Dysgalia.

DYSGA'LIA, Dysgalac'tia, (dys, and γαλα, gen. γαλακτος, 'milk,')

An unhealthy condition or deprivation of the milk.

DYSGENNE'SIA, (dys, and γεννησις, 'generation,')

Lesion of the generative organs or functions.

DYSGEU'SIA, Diageus'tia, (dys, and γευσις, 'taste,')

A morbid condition of the sense of taste.

DYSHÆMIA, (dys, and αἷμα, 'blood,')

A morbid condition of the blood.

DYSHÆMORRHIC'IA, (dys, αἷμα, 'blood,' and ῥέω, 'to flow,')

Difficulty in the flow of blood,—according to some, of the hemorrhoidal flux. Also, symptoms occasioned by its diminution or suppression.

DYSHAPH'IA, Dysaph'i'a, (dys, and ἄφη,

'touch.') A morbid condition of the sense of touch.

DYSHIDRIA, Dysidria, (dys, and ἵδρωσ, 'sweat.') A morbid state of the perspiration.

DYSIATOS, (dysiatos, dys, and ἰαμαί, 'to heal.') Cura tu difficilis. Difficult to cure.

DYSLALIA, (dys, and λαλεῖν, 'to speak,') Balbuties, Brachylogia.

DYSLOCHIA, Colica lochialis, Hysteralgia lochialis, (dys, and λοχίος, 'relating to parturition,') Diminution or suppression of the lochial discharge.

DYSMASESIS, Dysmasse'sis, Bradymasse'sis, (dys, and μασσει, 'mastication,') Difficult or impeded mastication.

DYSMENIA, (dys, and μηνες, 'the menses,') Dysmenorrhœa.

DYSMENORRHÉE, Dysmenorrhœa.

DYSMENORRHŒA, (from dys, and menorrhœa.) Dysmenia, Paramenia difficilis, Menorrhag'ia stillatit'ia, Menstrua difficil'ia seu Dolorosa, Amenorrhœa difficilis seu partialis, Menstrua dolorif'ici, Menorrhag'ia difficilis, Menstruat'io difficilis seu dolorif'ica, Labo'rius or Difficult Menstruation, (F.) Dysménorrhée, Menstruation difficile, Règles difficiles, Strangurie menstruelle. Catamenia passed with great local pain, especially in the loins:—with sometimes a membranous discharge. Dysmenorrhœa is very difficult of removal, and prevents conception. In the married female, if she should be able to pass one period without pain, and subsequently become pregnant, the morbid action may be broken in upon by gestation, and a perfect cure be obtained. Change of air, soon after marriage, will sometimes give occasion to this desirable result. The affection generally depends upon erethism of the interior of the uterus, called into action at each catamenial period. The violence of the pain requires the liberal use of narcotics.

DYSMNE'SIA, (dys, and μνησις, 'memory,') Defective memory.

DYSMORPHE, (dys, and μορφή, 'shape,') Deformation.

DYSMORPHIA, (dysmorphia), Deformation.

DYSMORPHOSIS, Deformation.

DYSNÉPHRONERVIE, (dys, νεφρός, 'kidney, and νεύρον, 'a nerve,') Nephralgia.

DYSODES, (dysodês), Fetid.

DYSO'DIA, (dysodia, from dys, and οἶω, 'I smell,') Dysod'mia, Dysos'mia, Fœ'tor, (F.) Puanteur. Sauvages has given this generic name to all diseases, characterized by fetid emanations, from whatever part proceeding;—from the mouth, nasal fossæ, bronchia, stomach, axillæ, groins, &c. Also, a stench or stink, Pro'ia.

DYSODMIA, (dysodia), Dysodia.

DYSODONTI'ASIS, Dentit'io difficilis, (dys, and ὀδοντῆσις, 'dentition,') Difficult dentition.

DYSONEIR'US, (dys, and ονειρος, 'a dream,') Insomnia, with restlessness.

DYSO'PIA, properly Dysop'ia, Dysora'sis, (dys, and ὀπταί, 'I see,') Difficulty of seeing: obscurity of vision.

DYSOPIA DISSITORUM, Myopia.

DYSOPIA LATERA'LIS, Parop'sis lateralis, Skuesight, Skewsight, Sight askew. Vision only accurate when the object is placed obliquely. This state is generally caused by some opacity of the cornea.

DYSOPIA LUMINIS, Nyctalopia—d. Proximum, Presbytia—d. Tenebrarum, Hemeralopia.

DYSPSIA, Dysopia.

DYSORASIS, (dys, and ὀρασις, 'vision,') Dysopia.

DYSOREX'IA, Inappeten'tia, Appeti'tus defici'ens, (dys, and ὀρεξις, 'appetite,') Diminution of appetite.

DYSOS'MIA, (dysosmia, from dys, and ὀσμη, 'smell,') Diminution of smell.

DYSOSPHERE'SIA, Dysosphr'e'sis, Dysosphr'e'sia, and ὀσφρησις, 'the sense of smell,') A morbid state of the sense of smell.

DYSOSTO'SIS, (dys, ὀστον, 'a bone, and ὀσις,') A faulty conformation or morbid condition of bone.

DYSPATHIA, (dyspathia, from dys, and πάθος, 'an affection,') See Serious.

DYSPESIA, (dyspe'sia, from dys, and πέσις, 'I concoct,') Limo'sis Dyspe'sia, Anorex'ia, Apep'sia, Bradyppe'sia, Gastroatax'ia, Digest'io deprava'ta seu difficilis seu læ'sa, Gastro-ato'nia, Concoct'io tar'da, Stom'achi resolut'io, Cru'ditas, Pas'sio stomach'ica, Dyspe'ny, Indiges'tion, Diffic'ulty of Digest'ion. A state of the stomach, in which its functions are disturbed, when the presence of other diseases, or when, if other diseases be present, they are of but minor importance. The symptoms of dyspepsia are very various. Those affecting the stomach itself are:—loss of appetite; nausea; pain in the epigastrium or hypochondrium; heart-burn; sense of fullness, or weight in the stomach; acid or fetid eructations; pyrosis, and sense of fluttering or sinking at the pit of the stomach. The sympathetic affections are of the most diversified character. Dyspepsia, being generally of a functional nature, is devoid of danger. When arising from disease of the stomach itself, it is, of course, more serious.

It is usually dependent on irregularity of living, either in the quantity or quality of the food taken: and the most successful treatment is, to put the patient on a diet easy of digestion; to combat the causes, where such are apparent; and, by proper remedies and regimen, to strengthen the system in every practicable manner. A great error exists in regarding it as always a disease of debility. It is often connected with an inflammatory or subinflammatory condition of the mucous lining of the stomach, and of course a very different plan of treatment is required in the two cases. Dyspepsia is often attended with too great a secretion of the gastric acids; but, on other occasions, they would appear to be too small in quantity, so as to constitute alkaline indigestion or neutral indigestion.

DYSPESIA CHLOROSIS, Chlorosis—d. Hypochondriasis, Hypochondriasis—d. Pyrosis, Pyrosis.

DYSPESIODYNIA, (dyspepsia, and ὀδυνη, 'pain,') Cardialgia.

DYSPESODYNIA, Cardialgia.

DYSPESY, Dyspepsia.

DYSPEP'TIC, Dyspepticus, Dyspep'tus, Apep'tic, Apep'ticus. Having relation to dyspepsia, as 'dyspeptic bread.' One who suffers from dyspepsia.

DYSPLEPTICUS, Dyspeptic.

DYSPLEPTODYNIA, (dys, πέπτω, 'I concoct, and ὀδυνη, 'pain,') Cardialgia.

DYSPLEPTUS, (dyspleptus), Dyspeptic.

DYSPERMA'SIA, Dyspermat'ismus, (dys, and σπέρμα, 'sperm,') Difficulty—sometimes incapacity—of voiding the sperm.

DYSPERMATISMUS, (dys, and σπερματισμος, 'discharge of sperm,') Bradyspermatismus.

DYSPHA'GIA, Dyscatatro'sis, Dyscatrop'osis, Deglutit'io difficilis, D. læ'sa, D. impedi'ta, (dys, and φαγω, 'I eat,') Difficulty of deglutition. Dysphagia is almost always symptomatic, either of inflammation or of other disease of the organs of deglutition, or of incomplete obstruction of the œsophagus, by some obstacle within it, or by a neighbouring tumour. At times, it is produced by spasms or paralysis of the œsophagus. The prognosis and treatment vary according to the cause.

DYSPHAGIA ATONICA, Pharyngolœgia—d. Callosa, D. constricta.

DYSPHAGIA CONSTRIC'TA, D. Pharynge'a seu Œsophage'a seu Callo'sa, Strictu'ra Pharyngis seu Œsoph'agi ve'ra seu Callo'sa, Stenochor'ia Œsoph'agi, Œsophagiarc'tia, Œsophagosten'o'ma, Læmosteno'sis. Stricture of the pharynx and œsophagus is an affection which may be the result of pharyngitis or œsophagitis; but more frequently of malignant disease in the parietes of the tube. The only remedy is the bougie.

DYSPHAGIA GLOBOSA, Angone—d. Hysterica, Angone—d. Inflammatoria, Cynanche tonsillar'is—d. Linguosa, Paraglossa—d. Nervosa, Œsophagismus—d. Œsophagea, D. Constric'ta—d. Paralytica, Œsophagoplegia, Pharyngoplegia—d. Pharyngea, D. Constric'ta—d. Ranula, Ranula—d. Scirrhusa, Læmoscirrh'us—d. Spasmodica, Œsophagismus—d. Spastica, Œsophagismus—d. Torpida, Pharyngoplegia—d. Uvulosa, Staphylœdema.

DYSPHO'NIA, Dys'phony, (δυσφωνία, from dys, and φωνη, 'the voice.')

Difficulty of producing and articulating sounds; voice imperfect or depraved. Apho'nia (of some).

DYSPHONIA IMMOBULATA NASALIS, Rhinophonia—d. Immodulata palatina, Asaphia.

DYSPHOR'IA, (δυσφορία, from dys, and φερω, 'I bear.')

Inquietu'do, Asta'sia. Dissatisfaction; restlessness; suffering; indisposition.

DYSPHORIA ANXIETAS, Anxiety—d. Nervosa, Fidgets—d. Simplex, Fidgets.

DYSPHOTIA, (dys, and φως, gen. φωτος, 'light.')

Myopia.

DYSPIO'NIA, (dys, and πιων, 'fat.')

A morbid condition of the adipous substance.

DYSPLASMATIC, (dys, and πλασσειν, 'to form.')

Cacoplastic.

DYSPLASTICUM, Spanæmic.

DYSPNŒE, Dyspnœa—d. Cardiaque, Asthma cardiac.

DYSPNŒ'A, (δυσπνοια, from dys, and πνω, 'I breathe.')

Pseudo-asthma, Amphipnœu'ma, Respiratio diffic'ilis seu bre'vis et ra'ra, Brachy-pnœ'a, Retentio aë'rae, Anhelat'ion, Short breath, Diff'iculty of breathing, (F.) Dyspnœe, Courte Haleine. Dyspnœa may be idiopathic or symptomatic. The latter accompanies almost all thoracic diseases. Urgent dyspnœa has been called Amphipnœu'ma, αμφιπνυμα.

DYSPNŒA CONVULSIVA, Asthma—d. Hydrothoracica, Hydrothorax—d. Montana, Puna—d. Phythothoracica, Pneumothorax—d. Pinguedinosa, Pursiness—d. Pneumatica, Pneumothorax—d. Pyothoracica, Empyema.

DYSSENTÉRIE, Dysentery.

DYSSENTÉRIQUE, Dysenteric.

DYSSIA'LIA, (dys, and σialος, 'saliva.')

A morbid condition of the saliva.

DYSSYN'ODUS, Dyssynu'sia, (δύς, and συνόδος, 'coition.')

Coitus diffic'ilis. Difficulty in coition.

DYSSYNUSIA, (dys, and συνουσια, 'coition.')

Dyssynodus.

DYSTHAN'ATUS, (δυσθανος, from dys, and θανος, 'death.')

That which causes a slow and painful death. One who experiences this kind of death.

DYSTHELA'SIA, (dys, and θηλαζω, 'I give suck.')

Inaptness for suckling.

DYSTERAPEUT'US, (δυσθεραπευτος, from dys, and θεραπεια, 'medical treatment,')

diffic'liter curabilis. That which is difficult of cure.

DYSTHE'SIA, (δυσθεσια, from dys, and τησημ, 'I am situate.')

Dys'thesis, Cachex'ia. Morbid habit. Bad humour. Impatience in disease.

DYSTHET'ICA, Cachex'ia, Dyscras'ia, Cachexies. A morbid condition of the system of nutrition, connected with a faulty state of the blood, producing a diseased habit. The fourth order in the class Hæmatica of Good, including Plethora, Hæmorrhagia, &c.

DYSTHYM'IA, (δυσθυμια, from dys, and θυμος, 'mind.')

Depression, Despond'ency. A bad sign in acute diseases. Also, Melancholy.

DYSTOC'IA, Morostoc'ia, Brachytoc'ia, Retentio fo'etus, (δυστοκια, from dys, and τοκος, 'accouchement.')

(F.) Dystocie. A laborious accouchement, Laborious or morbid, or diff'icult labour, Parodu'ia, Partus diffic'ilis. See Laborious.

DYSTOCIA ABORTIVA, Abortion—d. Dysecysis, Pregnancy, morbid—d. Dysecysis extrauterina, see Pregnancy, pretermatural.

DYSTECCHI'ASIS, Hispid'itas, (dys, and στοιχος, 'order.')

Irregular position of the eye-lashes.

DYSTON'IA, (dys, and τωνος, 'tone.')

Morbid condition of the tone of a tissue or organ.

DYSTR'AUM'IA, (dys, and τραυμα, 'a wound.')

The condition of wounds when they heal with difficulty, as in some persons and climates.

DYSTROPH'IA, (dys, and τροφη, 'nourishment.')

Imperfect or defective nutrition.

DYSULOTUS, (dys, and ουλη, 'a cicatrix.')

Dysapulotus.

DYSURE'SIA, Dysure'sis; (dys, and ουρησις, 'passing the urine.')

Defective secretion and evacuation of the urine.

DYSUR'IA, (δυσουρια,) Dys'ury, Uri'næ diffic'ilis excretio, Strang'ury (of some). (F.) Dysurie. Difficulty of passing the urine. In this affection the urine is voided with pain, and a sensation of heat in some part of the urethra. Dysuria is the first degree of retention of urine. It differs from strangury, in which the urine can only be passed in drops and with great straining.

DYSURIA CALCULOSA, Calculi vesical—d. Irritata, Calculi vesical—d. Mucosa, Cystirrhœa.

DYSURY, Dysuria.

E, (L) as a prefix, 'out of;' 'from.'

EAGLESTONE, Ætites.

EAR, (Sax., eape.) Au'ris, Ous, Ac'oë, (Prov.) Lug, (F.) Oreille. The organ of audition. It is composed of a series of more or less irregular cavities, in which the sonorous rays are successively received and reflected, until they agitate the nerves which are destined to convey the impression to the brain. The ear is contained partly in the substance of the temporal bone; and a part projects externally, behind the joint of the lower jaw. It may be divided into three portions;— the outer or external ear, formed by the auricle and meatus auditorius; the middle ear, comprising the cavity of the tympanum and its dependencies; and the internal ear, comprehending the three semicircular canals, the cochlea and the vestibule; which, together, constitute the osseous labyrinth. Within the cavity of this labyrinth are contained membranes having nearly the shape of the vestibule and semicircular canals, but not extending into the cochlea. These membranes form the membranous labyrinth. Between the osseous and the membranous labyrinth is situate the liquor of Cotunnus, and within the membranous labyrinth is a fluid, termed, by De Blainville, vitriæ auditivæ, from its supposed analogy to the vitreous humour of the eye. The form of the membranous vestibule is not an exact imitation of the osseous cavity, being composed of two distinct sacs, which open into each other,—the one termed the Sacculus vestibularis; the other Sacculus. Each sac contains in its interior a small mass of white calcareous matter resembling powdered chalk, which seems to be suspended in the fluid of the sacs by means of a number of nervous filaments proceeding from the auditory nerve. These are the otocœcæ and otolithes of Breschet.

The auditory nerve is distributed to the cavities of the internal ear.

EARDOCTOR, Aurist—e. Drum, Tympanum—e. Finger, see Digitus—e. Flap, Proptoma auricularum—e. Kecker, Tonsil.

EARNING, (from ([G.] gerinnen, 'to coagulate' [?]). Rennet.

EARPICK, Otolyphus, Otolyphum, Cochlear auricularè, Auriscalpium, (F.) Cure-oreille. A species of small scoop, used for extracting hardened cerumen from the meatus auditorius externus; or to remove foreign bodies from the ear. If carelessly used, it is apt to excite inflammation of the tube.

EARPOWDER, see Otolith.

EARSURGEON, Aurist—e. Surgery, Otiatria.

EARTRUMPET, Tubus acusticus, Acusticum Cornu, Otophone, (F.) Cornet acoustique. An instrument for collecting sound and increasing its intensity, used by those who are hard of hearing. It is, commonly, a kind of cone, formed of silver, tin, or elastic gum, the base of which is turned towards the person who is speaking, and the apex placed in the entrance of the meatus auditorius externus.

EARWAX, Cerumen.

EARWIG, (eruca, 'a caterpillar,' Sax. eapf ǣȝa, 'earworm.') Forficula auricularia.

EARTH CLUB, Orobanche Americana—e. Eater, Geophagist—e. Eating, Geophagism.

EARTH, FULLER'S, Cimolia purpurescens.

EARTH GALL, Veratrum viride.

ÉCHANCRURE (F.), (chancre, [L.] cancer, 'a crab' [?]), Emarginat'io, Emarginat'ura, Incisu'ra. A word employed by anatomists to designate depressions and notches of various shapes, observed on the surface or edges of bones.

ECHANCRURE ETHMOÏDALE is on the nasal bone, which unites with the ethmoid. See ETHMOÏD.

ÉCHANCRURE NASALE, Nasal Notch, belongs to the os frontis, and is articulated with the bones of the nose.

ÉCHANCRURE PAROTIDIENNE, is a triangular space, comprised between the parotid edge of the inferior maxillary bone and the mastoid process, so called because it lodges the parotid gland.

ÉCHANCRURE SCAPULAIRE, Notch, scapular—é. Sciatique grande, see Sciatic Notch—é. Sciatique petite, see Sciatic Notch.

ÉCHARDE, Splinter.

ÉCHARPE, Sling.

ÉCHARPE GRANDE et É. MOYEN, see Sling—é. de J. L. Petit, see Sling—é. Petite, see Sling.

ÉCHAUBOULURES (F.), Échanbouillures, (chaud, 'warm,' and boule, 'bulla' [?]). Sudamina, Hidro'a. A word whose meaning is not fixed. It is applied to any eruption on the surface of the body, accompanied with pricking and other uneasy sensations.

ÉCHAUFFANTS, (échauffer, [L.] calefacere, 'to make warm,') Calefacients.

ÉCHAUFFEMENT (F.), Calefactio, Ercalefactio. Augmentation of heat in the animal economy; the symptoms of which are a more than ordinary sensation of heat, disposition to perspiration, great thirst, general indisposition, flushed countenance, &c. It goes off by the use of antiphlogistics and abstinence. In the vulgar language it is often used synonymously with constipation, and sometimes for simple gonorrhœa, and for chafing.

ÉCHECOLL'ON, (εχεκολλον, from εχω, 'I have,' and κολλα, 'glue,') Echecollum. Any topical glutinous remedy.

ÉCHELLES DU LIMAÇON, Scala of the cochlea.

ÉCHENEIS, (εχεννις), Remora Hildani.

ÉCHETROSIS, (εχετροσις), Bryonia alba.

ÉCHID'NA (εχιδ'να) OCELL'A'TA, Brown ten-inch-long viper. A most formidable viper in the forests of Peru, the bite of which is so rapidly fatal, that it kills a strong man in two or three minutes.

ÉCHINA'CEA PURPU'REA, (εχινος, 'the hedge hog,' owing to the spiny chaff of the disk.) Purple Cone'flower, Black Samp'son; of the Composite Family; indigenous in Ohio and westward; its dull purple flowers appearing in July. The root is aromatic, and used popularly as a carminative.

ÉCHINE, Vertebral column.

ÉCHINOCOCCUS HOMINIS, (εχινος, 'a hedgehog,' and κοκκος, 'a grain or berry,') See Worms—e. Humanus, Hydatid.

ÉCHINODERMAL, (εχινος, 'hedgehog,' and δερμα, 'skin,') Porcupine men.

ÉCHINOGLOSSUM, (εχινος, 'hedgehog,' and γλωσσα, 'tongue,') Ophioglossum vulgatum.

ÉCHINOPHTHALMIA, (εχινος, 'a hedgehog,' and οφθαλμια, 'inflammation of the eye,') Ophthalmia of the eyelids, in which the cilia project like the quills of the hedgehog.

ÉCHIN'OPUS, (εχινος, 'hedgehog,' and ωψ, 'appearance,') Crocodylion, Acanthalu'ca, Scabiosa carduifolia, Sphæroceph'ala elatior, Echi'noprus, Echi'noprus Sphæroceph'alus, Globe thistle. The root and seeds are reputed to be moderately diuretic.

ÉCHINOPUS, (εχινος, 'hedgehog,' and πους, 'a foot,') Echinops.

ÉCHINUS SCANDENS, Allamanda.

ÉCHITES DIFFORMIS, (from εχις, 'the viper,') owing to its smooth, twining shoots.) Forsteriana difformis—e. Subcretica, see Curare.

ECHOS, (ηχος and αχηη), Sound, Tinnitus aurium.

ECHOSCOPE, (ηχος, 'sound,' and σκοπεω, 'I examine,') Auscultation.

ECHOSCOPIUM, Stethoscope.

ECHTYSTEROCYESIS, (from ecto, ὑστερα, 'the uterus,' and κυησις, 'pregnancy,') Pregnancy, extra-uterine.

ECLACTIS'MA, gen. Eclactiam'atis, Eclamp'sis, Eclamp'sia, Epilamp'sis, Effulgescent'ia, (εκλακτιζω, 'I kick,') Epilepsy is often accompanied with flashings of light; and hence Hippocrates has used the last two words for epilepsy. They have all been applied to convulsions.

ÉCLAIR, Astrape.

ÉCLAIRE, Chelidonium majus—é. Petite, Ranunculus ficaria.

ECLAMP'SIA, (εκλαμψις, (ec, and λαμβω, 'I shine,') 'brilliancy,') Flashes of light before the eyes. See Eclactisma. Convulsion, as the convulsions of children, Eclamp'sia infantum, Epilep'sia acuta infantum seu febrilis infantum seu puer'ilis, (F.) Convulsions des Enfants, Eclamp'sie; (probably from εκ, and λαβωμαι, λαμψομαι, 'to seize hold of,')

ECLAMP'SIA GRAVIDA'RUM ET PARTURIEN'TIUM, Puer'peral Convulsions, (F.) Convulsions des femmes enceintes et en couche. Convulsions of pregnant and parturient women.

ECLAMP'SIA INFANTUM, see Eclampsia—e. Nutans, Convulsion, salaam—e. Typhodes, Raphania.

ECLAMP'SIE DES ENFANS, Eclampsia infantum.

ECLECT'IC PHYSIC'IAN'S, Eclect'ici Med'ici, (εκλεκτικος, 'selecting,' from εκλεγω, (εκ, and λεγω,) 'I choose,') A sect of physicians, who professed to choose, from other sects, all the opinions which appeared to them best founded. Agathinus of Sparta, master of Archigenes of Apamea, in Syria, was its reputed founder; and Archigenes and Aretæus were its greatest ornaments. The doctrine was called Eclect'ism, Eclect'ismus, Medic'ina eclect'ica, Eclectic medic'ine. Every judicious physician must be an eclectic.

The term Eclectic is, however, not infrequently applied, in the United States, to one who 'chooses' to adopt exclusive views—the so called Eclectic physicians generally belonging to the class of botanical physicians.

ECLECTISM, see Eclectic.

ELECTUS, (ελεκτος), Eclig'ma, Elig'ma, Elix'is, Eleg'ma, Lambit'ium, Linctus, Linctu'rium, (εκλειχω, (ec, and λειχω,) 'I lick,') (F.) Looch. A medicine, of a thick, syrupy consistence, chiefly used to allay cough, and consisting of pectoral remedies. It was formerly sucked from the end of a liquorice stick, made into a kind of pencil; hence its name Linctus, from lingere, 'to lick.' Although the linctus is usually exhibited in thoracic affections, it may have tonic virtues combined with it.

ELEGMA, gen. Eleg'matis, (ελεγμα), Eclectos—e. Album, Looch album—e. Gummoso-oleosum, Looch album.

ECLIPSIS, (εκλεισις, from ec, and λεισις, 'a scale,') Desquamation, Exfoliation.

ECLIPSITREPANON, (εκληπισις, and πυραυον, 'a trepan,') Exfoliative trepan.

ECLIGMA, gen. Eclig'matis, Eclectos.

ECLIMIA, (εκλιμια, from ec, and λιμος, 'hunger,') Boulimia.

ECLIPSIS, (εκλεισις, from ec, and λειπω, 'I leave,') Syncope.

ÉCLISSE, Splinter.

ECLYSES, (pl. of Eclysis), Adynamia.

EC'LYSIS, Ἐκλύσις; (ἐκλύσις, from ἐκλύω, 'I loosen.') Resolution, prostration of strength; faintness.

EC'LYSIS PNEUMOCARDIACA, Asphyxia.

ECMYZESIS, (ἐκμύζισις, from ἐκ, and μύζειν, 'to suck.') Exsuctio.

ECNEA, (ἐκνοία, from ἐκ, and νοός, 'mind.')

Dementia.

ÉCOLE, (old (F.) Escholé, from Schola.) School

—e. Organicenne, see Organicism.

ECON'OMY, (οικονομία.) Œconomia, (οικία, 'a house,' a family,' and νομός, 'I rule.')

By the term animal economy is understood,—the aggregate of the laws which govern the organism. The word economy is, also, used for the aggregate of parts which constitute man or animals.

ÉCORCE, Cortex—É. Caricocostine, Canella alba

—É. Élèuthérienne, see Croton cascarilla—É. de Suint Lucie, Cinchonæ Caribææ cortex—É. de Winter, see Winters aromatica—É. Fausse de Winter, Canella alba.

ÉCORCHURE, (ex, and cortex.) Chafing, Excoriation.

ÉCOULEMENT, (ex, and colare, 'to strain or flow.')

Discharge, Gonorrhœa—É. Blanc, Leucorrhœa—É. de Sang par l'intestin, Hæmatocœchia.

ÉCOUVILLON, see Écouvillonnement.

ÉCOUVILLONNEMENT (F.). (écouvillon, 'a kind of mop, the sponge of a gun.')

A term used by the French therapeutists for the act of cleansing or applying remedies to a part by means of a mop or brush fixed to the end of a piece of whalebone. Such mop or brush is termed Écouvillon.

ECPHLOGOSIS, (ἐκφλογωσις, from ἐκ, and φλογω, 'I set on fire.')

Inflammation.

ECPHLYSIS, (ἐκ, and φλύω, 'I boil.')

Vesicula—e. Herpes, Herpes—e. Herpes circinatus, Herpes circinatus—e. Herpes exedens, Herpes exedens—e. Herpes miliaris, Herpes phlyctenodes—e. Herpes zoster, Herpes zoster—e. Pompholyx, Pompholyx—e. Rhyphia, Rupia.

ECPHRACTIC, (ἐκφρακτικός.) Deobstruent.

ECPHRACTIC, (ἐκφρακτικός, 'I remove obstruction.')

The action of ephractic or deobstruent remedies.

ECPHRONIA, (ἐκ, and φρον, 'the mind.')

Insanity—e. Mania, Mania—e. Melancholia, Melancholy.

ECPHYAS, (ἐκφύας, from ἐκ, and φύω, 'I grow.')

Appendix vermiformis cæci.

ECPHYMA, gen. Ecp'hymatis, (ἐκφύμα, from ἐκ, and φύω, 'I grow.')

Excrecence, Tumour—e. Callus, Callosity—e. Caruncula, Caruncle—e. Clavus, Corn—e. Œdematicum, Œdema, Phlegmatia dolens—e. Physconia, Physconia—e. Trichomatia, Plica—e. Verruca, Verruca.

ECPHYMATA, (pl. of Ecp'hymata.) Rubeola.

ECPHYSE'SIS, Ἐψφύσις, (ἐκφύσις, from ἐκφύω, 'I breathe through.')

A quick and forced expulsion of air from the lungs.

ECPHYSIS, (ἐκφύσις, from ἐκ, and φύω, 'I grow.')

Aphorisis—e. Ventriculi, Duodenum.

ECPIES'MA, gen. Ecpiēs'matis, (ἐκπιέσιμα, from ἐκπιέω, (ἐκ, and πιέω.) 'I compress.')

Effractura, Impaction, Deces'sio. A fracture of the cranium, with depression of the fragments and compression of the brain.

ECPIES'MUS, (ἐκπιέσιμος.) Expres'sio. Celsus uses these words to signify the forcing of the eye from the orbital cavity, with apparent but not real augmentation of the organ. See Exophthalmia.

ECPLERO'MA, gen. Ecplero'matis, (ἐκπληρωμα, from ἐκ, and πληρω, 'I fill.')

A cushion, a pad. Hippocrates means, by this term, a small pad or ball of leather, or other substance intended to fill the hollow of the arm-pit; used probably in reducing luxations of the shoulder.

EC'PLEXIA, (ἐκπληξία, from ἐκπλησσω, 'to stun.')

Stupor.

EC'PLEXIS, (ἐκπληξις.) Stupor.

EC'PNEUMATOSIS, (ἐκ, and πνεύμα, 'air.')

Expiration.

EC'PNEUSIS, (ἐκπνευσις.) Expiration.

EC'PNOE, (ἐκπνοή.) Expiration.

EC'PTO'MA, gen. Ecpto'matis, Ecpto'sis, Ecpendentia, (ἐκπτωμα, from ἐκπίπτω, (ἐκ, and πίπτω.) 'I fall out.')

This word has been used in various senses, 1. Synonymously with luxation. 2. For the separation of gangrenous parts. 3. For the expulsion of the secundines. 4. For the prolapsus of the womb: and 5. For intestinal or omental hernia.

EC'PTOSIS, (ἐκπτώσις.) Luxation.

EC'PYCTICA, (ἐκ, and πυκταίω, 'to thicken.')

Incrassantia.

EC'PYEMA, gen. Ecpyē'matis, (ἐκπύημα, from ἐκ, and πύον, 'pus.')

Abscess, Suppuration, Empyema.

EC'PYESIS, (ἐκπύεσις.) Abscess, Empyema. Pus-tule—e. Impetigo, Impetigo—e. Porrigo, Porrigo—e. Porrigo crustacea, Porrigo larvalis—e. Porrigo favosa, Porrigo favosa—e. Porrigo furfuracea, Porrigo furfurans—e. Porrigo galeata, Porrigo scutulata—e. Porrigo lupinosa, Porrigo lupinosa—e. Scabies, Psora.

EC'PYETICUS, (ἐκπύητικος.) Suppurative.

ÉCRASEUR, (F.) ('a crusher,' from écraser, 'to crush.')

E. Linéaire, Histotriteur, Sarcoptriteur, Ligature articulée, Sécateur par écrasement. A surgical instrument invented by M. Chassaignac, of Paris, which consists of a steel chain, like that of a chain-saw devoid of teeth, attached at both ends to a steel mandril, which passes through a hollow steel cylinder. The tightening of the chain is made slowly and with great force, and in the last modification of the instrument is effected by an endless screw with a lever handle, working on a nut coggled on its outer side, which plays on a thread cut on the mandril. The slow bruising it makes is rarely followed by hemorrhage, even in the case of hemorrhoids, and other vascular tumours. The operation with the Écraseur has been termed Écrasement ou Broiement linéaire, Sarcoptrie, Incision ou Amputation sèche, and Histotritie.

ÉCREVISSE, ((G.) Krebs.) Crab.

ECREX'IS, Ἐκρηξις, (ἐκρηξις, from ἐκρήγνυμι, (ἐκ, and ρήγνυμι.) 'to break.')

Rupture, laceration.

ECRHYTH'MUS, (ἐκ, and ῥυθμός, 'rhythm.')

A term applied to the pulse, particularly when irregular.

ECROË, (ἐκροή, from ἐκ, and ῥέω, 'to flow.')

Discharge.

ÉCROUELLES, Scrofula—É. Mésentériques, Tabes mesenterica.

EC'RYSIS, (ἐκρύσις, from ἐκρέω, 'I run from.')

A discharge.

EC'SARCOMA, gen. Ec'sarco'matis, (ἐκσάρκωμα, from ἐκ, and σᾶξ, 'flesh.')

A fleshy excrescence of various kinds. See Fungosity, and Sarcoma.

EC'SEMA, gen. Ec'es'matis, Eczema.

EC'STASIS, (ἐξίστημι, (ἐκ, and ίστημι.) 'I am beside myself.')

An ec'stasy or trance, Cirrus ec'stasis, Cat'ochus, Ec'stasis, Cataleps'ia epu'ria, Hyperplexie, (F.) Extase. A state in which certain ideas so completely absorb the mind, that the external sensations are suspended, the voluntary movements arrested, and even the vital actions retarded. In catalepsy, there is, in addition, complete suspension of the intellectual faculties. This last condition is in general described as trance. See, also, Luxation.

ECSTROPIE, (ἐκστροφή.) Extrophia.

ECTASIA, Aneurism—e. Venarum, Varix.

ECTASIS, (ἐκτάσις, from ἐκ, and ταίω, 'stretch.')

Extension, Expansion.

ECTASIS IRIDIS is the extension or expansion of the iris, which occasions diminution of the pupil.

ECTEXIS, (εκτῆξις, from ec, and τηκην, 'to melt.')

ECTHETOPHOTROPHEUM, (εκθετος, 'placed out,' and brephtropheum.) Brephtropheum.

ECTHETOTROPHEUM, (εκθετος, 'placed out,' and τροφειν, 'to nourish.')

ECTHILIMMA, gen. Ecthilim' matis, Exulcera'tio, (εκθλιμμα, from εκθλιβω, 'I express,' 'I bruise.')

Attrition. Chafing, or excoriation, produced by external violence.

ECTHILIPSIS, (εκθλιψις,) Expression.

ECTHYMA or ECTHY'MA, gen. Ecthy'matis,

(εκθυμα, from εκθνω, 'I break out.') and θυμια, Phlyza'cia ag'ria, Thymia, Scabies Ve'ra, Furru'culi atou'ici, Par'u'ous Scall, (F.) Dartre crusta'ceæ, D. fungu'neæ. A cutaneous eruption, characterized by large round pustules, always distinct and seated upon an indurated and highly inflamed base. In the course of a day or two the pustules generally break, and olive-brown incrustations are formed which adhere firmly to the skin. These separate in about a fortnight. The disease requires the antiphlogistic treatment. Under Ecthy'mata, Vogel has designated certain hard, unequal tumours which appear transiently on the skin. See Efflorescence, Exanthem, and Pustule.

ECTHYSTEROCYESIS, (ecto, ὑστερα, 'uterus,' and κνησις, 'pregnancy.')

Pregnancy, extra-uterine.

ECTILOLOTICUS, (ec, and πλλαν, 'to pluck.') Depilatory.

ECTILMUS, Evulsion.

ECTO, (εκτος, 'outside,')

as a prefix, 'outside.'

ECTOBLAST, (ecto, and βλαστος, 'a germ.')

See Cytoblast and Molecule.

ECTOME, (εκτομη, from ec, and τομη, 'incision.')

Castration, Eecope, Entaille, Excision.

ECTOMIA, Castration, Eecope.

ECTOMIAS, (εκτομιας,) Castratus.

ECTOMON, Helleborus niger.

ECTOMOS, (εκτομος,) Castratus.

ECTOPA'GIA, (F.) Ectopagie, (ecto, and πηγνυμι,

'to put together.')

A genus of double monsters, having a common umbilicus, comprising those which are united laterally throughout the whole extent of the thorax.

ECTOPARASITES, (ecto, and parasite),

Epizoa.

ECTOPHYTE, Ectophyton, (ecto, and φυτον,

'a vegetable.')

A vegetable parasite, which grows on the surface of the body.

ECTOPIA, Ectop'isis, Ectopism'us, Entooc'le,

Sit'us alie'nus seu perver'sus seu muta'tus, Anomoto'pie of Piorry, (ec, and τοπος, 'out of place.')

Morbid displacement of parts. See Luxation.

ECTOPIA ANI, Proctocele.

ECTOPIA CORDIS, Cardianas'trophê. Displacement, dislocation, or unnatural position of the heart.

ECTOPIA HERNIOSA, Hernia—e. Splenis, Splenectopia.

ECTOPOCYST'ICUS, (εκποπος, 'out of place,' and κυστις, 'bladder.')

A disease dependent upon displacement of the bladder.

ECTOPROTIC, (improperly for) Eecoprotic.

ECTOZO'A, (sing. Ectozo'on), Ectozo'a, Ectozo'a'ria, (F.) Ectozoaires; (ecto, and ζωον, 'an animal.')

Parasitic animals that infest the exterior of the body,—as lice: a term which, like Helmin'thia errat'icia, Pseudohelmin'thes, and Pseudopar'asites, is applied, also, to worms or larvae of insects that have been introduced into the intestinal canal by accident. Animalcules, most frequently swallowed, are the hairworm, leech, grub of the fly, caddy insect—Phal'ena pinguin'alis; the larve of 'the bee, the spider, the triton palu'stris, lacer'tia aquat'ica, &c. In animals, bots are produced by swallowing the ova of the æstrus or gad-fly. See Helminthia erratica.

ECTRIM'MA, gen. Ectrim'matis, (εκτριμμα, from εκτριβω, (ec, and τριβω), 'I rub off.')

Ulceration of the skin; and particularly that which arises from the pressure of the bed on different parts of the body, after a protracted confinement.

ECTRODACTYL'IA, (εκτροσις, 'abortion,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger.')

A malformation, in which one or more fingers or toes are wanting.

ECTROG'ENY, Ectrogen'ia, Ectrogen'es'is, (εκτροσις, 'abortion,' and γενεσις, 'generation.')

Monstrosity by defect.

ECTRO'MA, gen. Ectro'matis, (εκτρομα,) Abortion.

ECTRO'MELES, (εκτροσις, 'abortion,' and μελος, 'a limb.')

A genus of monsters, in which the limbs are nearly or altogether deficient, as in the ordinary æcetacea.

ECTROPE, Divertic'ulum, (εκτροπω, (from ec, and τροπω), 'I turn off,' 'divert.')

Any duct by which peccant or morbid matter was supposed to be drawn off.

ECTROP'ION, Ectrop'ium, Ever'sio pal'pebræ, Blepharopto'sis Ectrop'ium, Blephanoto'sis, Pal'pebræ infe'rior extro'r'sum flex'a, Dicarcu'tio seu Reflex'io seu Reclina'tio pal'pebr'ium, (F.) Évri'lement des Paup'ières, Reversement des Paup'ières.

Eversion of the eyelids, so that they do not completely cover the globe of the eye. It happens more commonly to the lower than to the upper eyelid. It may be owing to the retraction of the skin, after the cure of an ulcer, wound, or burn of the eyelid; or it may depend on tumefaction or relaxation of the conjunctiva. In the majority of cases, removal of a portion of the conjunctiva will effect a cure; but there are many which defy the efforts of art. The antient called Ectropion of the upper eyelid lagophthal'mia.

ECTROSIS, (εκτροσις,) Abortion.

ECTROSMUS, (εκτροσμος,) Abortion.

ECTROT'IC, (from ectroma, (ec, and τιρωσκω,

'I wound,')

'abortion.')

Ectrot'icus, Abort'ive. An epithet applied to methods for preventing the development or causing the abortion of any disease—as of chancres by the use of caustic; small-pox pustules by the use of mercurial ointment, &c.

ECTYLOTICUS, (ec, and τυλος, 'a protuberance.')

Catheretic.

ECTYMPANOSIS, (εκτυμπανωσις,) Tympanites.

ÉCUMEUX, (same root as scum), Frothy.

ÉCUSONS, (from ecu, old (F.) escu, (L.) scutum,

'a shield.')

'Escutcheons or shields.')

Plasters spread upon the skin; or small bags—sachets— of the shape of escutcheons, filled with odorous powders, which are applied on the skin. See Sachets.

EC'ZEMA, gen. Eczem'atis, (εκζεμα, from εκζωω, (ec, and ζωω), 'I boil out,' 'I effervesce.')

Eczes'ma, Eczes'ma, Pus'tula ar'dens, Cytis'ma Ec'zema, Hu'mid Scall or Tetter, Run'ning Scall, (F.) Dartre squammeuse humide, D. vive, Gale épidémiq'ue. Heat eruption. An eruption of small vesicles on various parts of the skin, usually set close or crowded together; with little or no inflammation around their bases, and unattended by fever.

ECZEMA CAP'ITIS, E. of the hairy scalp.

ECZEMA OF THE FACE, at an advanced stage, and occurring in young children, has been described under the names Crusta lactea and Por-rigo larvatis.

ECZEMA OF THE HAIR'Y SCALP, Ec'zema cap'i-tis, Vesic'ular scall, is often confounded with other affections, under the names Por-rigo and Tinea, which are pustular, not vesicular, in their form. It occurs during dentition, and even afterwards and the discharge is so profuse, that the head appears as if dipped in some glutinous liquid. By and by, the secretion dries into crusts and mats the hair into little separate tufts. The scalp gives evidence of inflammatory excitement, and the lymphatic ganglions of the neck are apt to become inflamed and suppurate.

A variety of humid scalled head, in which the humour from the excoeriated surface runs down upon the hairs, and encloses them in little silvery pellicles or sheaths, has received the name Asbestos Scall.

ECZEMA IMPETIGINODES, Gall. Gro'cers' or Bricklayers' Itch. Produced by the irritation of sugar or lime.

ECZEMA MERCURIALĒ, E. rubrum, Erythema mercuriale seu ichoro'sum, Hydrargyria, Hydrargyro'sis, Hydrargyriasis, Morbus mercurialis, Mercurial lepra or rash. A variety of eczema, arising from the irritation of mercury. The treatment is chiefly palliative, consisting in abluition with mucilaginous infusions or decoctions; mild dressings, where the cuticle has exfoliated; avoiding all irritation; keeping the bowels open; with the use of sulphuric acid and cinchona.

ECZEMA RUBRUM, Eczema mercuriale.

ECZEMATOSSES, (G.) Eczematosen. A family of diseases, in the classification of Fuchs, including morbid conditions of the cutaneous secretions—as of the perspiration, sebaceous and colouring matters, &c., and hence many chronic cutaneous affections. His subdivisions are, ephidro'ses, smegmorrhœ'a, acar'pæ, polycar'pæ, and monocar'pæ.

ECZESIS, (εκζέσις) Effervescence.

ECZESMA, gen. Ecze'smatis, (εκζέσμα) Eczema, Lichen tropicus.

EDDOES, see Arum esculentum.

EDEMATOUS, Edematous.

EDENTATUS, Edentulus.

EDENTULI, Nefrendes.

EDENTULOUS, Eden'tated, Edentulus, Edenta'tus, (e, and dens, gen. dentis, 'a tooth.') An'odus, Ca'rens dentibus, No'des, No'dus, (F.) Édenté. One without teeth. This defect can only be remedied by artificial means. See Nefrendes.

EDERA, Hedera helix.

EDIBLE, (from edere, 'to eat,' and habilis, 'able,') Esculent.

ÉDOÉPHALE, (αἰδοία, 'the sexual organs,' and κεφαλή, 'head.') A monster, which has the two ears near each other, or united under the head, the jaws atrophied; no mouth, and above the eye a tube (trompe) resembling a penis.

EDROPPIT (Sc.), Hydropic.

EDUCATIO INFANTUM, ('bringing up of children,') Pædia.

EDULCORATION, Glycan'sis, Edulcoratio, (e, and dulcis, 'sweet.') An operation, the object of which is to deprive a substance of its acrid and disagreeable taste, or at least to disguise it. Also, the addition of a saccharine substance to a medicine, whose taste it is desirable to modify agreeably.

ÉDULE, (edere, 'to eat,') Comestible.

EDULIS, Comestible.

EE (Sc. and Prov.), Eye.

EEL GRASS, Pila marina.

EESKIN (Sc.), Singulus.

EEWINKER (Sc.), Palpebra.

EF, as a prefix, like e, and ex.

EFFERENT, Eff'ferens, De'vehens, Centrif'ugal, Exod'ic, (effero e, and fero), 'I carry,' 'transport.' Conveying outwards, as from the centre to the periphery.

Vasa efferentia are those lymphatic or chyliferous vessels which issue from the glands to convey their lymph to the thoracic duct; so called to distinguish them from those which pass to those glands, and which have been termed vasa afferentia seu inferentia. Also, nerves that convey the nervous influence from the nervous centres to the circumference. See Aferent.

At the upper extremity of the mediastinum testis, the ducts of the rete testis terminate in from 9 to 30 small ducts, called vasa efferentia seu Graafiana, (F.) Vaisseaux éfférens, which form the Co'ni vasculo'si.

EFFERVESCENCE, (Effervescentia, Ze'sis, Ec'zesis, effervescere (ef, and ferverescere), 'to grow hot.') That agitation, which is produced by the escape of gas through a liquid, independently of the heat of the mixture; such, for instance, as results from the mixture of acetic acid and carbonate of potassa.

In Pathology it has a similar signification. It expresses, in the language of the humorists, a sort of ebullition in the fluids of the living body, produced either by elevation of temperature or by the reaction on each other of the principles contained in the fluids in circulation.

EFFETUS, (ef, and fetus or fætus, 'producing,') Impoverished.

EFFICACIOUS, Eff'ficax, (efficere (ef, and facere), 'to accomplish.') That which produces a great effect,—as 'an efficacious remedy.'

Medic'na ef'ficax, La Médecine efficace, is a term sometimes applied to surgery.

EFFILIA, Ephelides.

EFFLATIO, Ephyphesis.

EFFLATUS, gen. Efflatus, (ef, and flare, flatum, 'to blow,') Ephyphesis.

EFFLORATIO, (ef, and flore, 'to bloom,') Exanthem.

EFFLORESCENCE, Efflora'tio, Efflorescentia, (from efflorescere (ef, and florescere), 'to blow as a flower,') Stribili'go, Ec'thyma.

In Pathology, efflorescence has the same meaning as exanthema; and, in the nosology of Sauvages, the name is given to that order of diseases. Sometimes, it is confined to the cutaneous blush, the exanthe'sis of Good.

Efflorescence is, also, the conversion of a solid substance into a pulverulent state by exposure to the air. In salts this is generally owing to the loss of a part of their water of crystallization.

EFFLORESCENCE ÉRYSIPELATEUSE, Roseolæ.

EFFLORESCENTIA, Efflorescence, Exanthem.

EFFLORESCENTIE, Éteuvres.

EFFLUVIUM, (ef, and fluere, fluxum, 'to flow,') Emanation—e. Latrinarium, Mitte—e. Palustris, Miasm, marsh.

EFFLUXION, see Abortion.

EFFORT, (ef, and fortis, 'strong,') Ni'sus, Nona'tus, Pe'ra. A muscular contraction of greater or less strength, the object of which is, either to resist an external force, or to accomplish a function, which has become naturally laborious;—such are, the act of pushing away, or of drawing a body towards us, and the more or less painful efforts used by the mother to cause the expulsion of the fetus. In France, the word effort is often used synonymously with hernia; and signifies, likewise, the painful twitches of muscles, occasioned by over-exertion, or by the rupture of some of their fleshy fibres. Sauvages calls Efforts des reins, Lumbago à ni'su, the pain in the loins occasioned by bearing too heavy a burden.

EFFORT, Hernia—e. des Reins, see Effort.

EFFOSSIO, (ef, and fodere, fossum, 'to dig,') Exhumation.

EFFRACTURA, (ef, and frangere, fractum, 'to break,') Ecpiesma.

EFFRACTURA CRANII, En'thalasis Cra'nii, Fracture of the Cranium, with depression.

EFFRENTIATIO, (effrenis, 'unbridled,') Hypereatharsis.

EFFUSIO, Efusion—e. Seminis, Ejaculation.

EFFU'SION, Effu'sio, Ec'chysis, (effundere (ef, and fundere, fusum), 'to pour out.'). (F.) Épanchement, (Infiltration is the term generally employed for effusion into the areolar membrane. The pouring out of blood or of any other fluid into the areolar membrane, or into the cavities of the body. The effusion of serum or of coagulable lymph, for instance, is a common result of inflammation of serous membranes.

ÉGARÉ, Wild.

ÉGAREMENT D'ESPRIT, Delirium, Insanity.

EGER, MINERAL WATERS OF THE. In the valley of the Eger, at the western extremity of Bohemia, there are several acidulous springs. One of the most frequented of these is Franzensbad.

EGERIA. In ancient mythology, a nymph to whom pregnant females offered sacrifices ut conceptus alvus facilius egeretur. By some, supposed to have been identical with Lucina.

EGESTA, (e, and gero, gestum, 'to carry,') see Excretion.

EGESTAS, Want.

EGESTIO, Defecation, Dejection, Excretion.

EGG, (Sax. æg.) Ovum—e. Bed, Ovarium—e.

Brandy, see Ovum—e. Plant, Solanum melongena.

EGG, WHITE OF, Albumen ovi.

EGLANTIER DE CHIEN, Rosa canina—e. Sawage, Rosa canina.

EGOBROCHOPHONY, see Egophony.

ÉGOPHONE, Egophony.

EGOPHON'IC, or EGOPH'ONIC, Ægophonicus, (F.) Égophonique. Having the character of, or relating to, egophony.

ÉGOPHONIQUE, Egophonic.

EGOPH'ONY, Ægophonia, (aîç, gen. aigos, 'a goat,' and φωνη, 'voice.'). Capriloquium, Tragophonia, Goat's Voice, Bleating Voice, (F.) Égophonie, Voix chérotante or égophonique ou de Polichinelle ou sénile, Pectoriloquie chérotante. Laënnec has designated by this name, the kind of resonance of the voice heard through the stethoscope, when we examine the chest of one labouring under moderate effusion into one of the pleuræ. The voice, which strikes the ear through the cylinder, is more sharp and harsh than usual, and tremulous and broken, like that of the goat. The patient himself is called Égophone. Bouillaud affirms, that the 'bronchial and bleating voice' (égobronchophonie), is the principal symptom of pleuropneumonia. Egophony exists, however, in cases of hepatization where there is no pleural disease.

EGREGOR'SIS, Vigilia, Vigilie, Vigilantia, Vigilatio, Vigilium, (εγρηγορσις, from εγρηγορειναι, 'I watch.'). Watchfulness. A morbid want of sleep.

EGRESSUS VENTRICULI, Pylorus.

EGRITUDE, (ægritudo, from æger, 'sick,') Disease.

EIDOS, (ειδος,) 'form, resemblance.' The ει is sometimes changed into ω, at the termination of a word. Thus, Hæmato'des for Hæmatoï'des. See Odes.

EILAMIDES, (ειλαμιδες, from ειλω, 'I involve,') Meninges.

EILE'MA, gen. Eile'matis, (ειλημα, from ειλω, 'I roll,') 'a convulsion.' Vogel has given this name to a fixed pain, occupying some portion of the intestinal canal, which the patient compares to the sensation that would be produced by a nail driven into the part.

EILEON, (ειλεων,) Ileon.

EILEUS, Pleus.

ΕΙΛΟΙΔ (Τυμουρι,) Eiloï'des, (ειλω, 'I roll,') and eidos.) A morbid growth of the cutis, coiled or folded.

EILSEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Eilsen is about six German miles from Hanover, at the foot of the Harrelberg. It has eleven springs, of which seven are sulphureous and four chalybeate.

EISANTHE'MA, gen. Eisanthe'matis, Ecanthe'ma inter'num, Entanthe'ma, (εις, 'within,' and αθημα, 'efflorescence.'). An eruption on a mucous membrane;—aphthæ, for example.

EISBOLE, (εισβολη, from εις, 'within,' and βαλλειν, 'to throw,') Attack, Injection.

EISEL, Acetum.

EISPNOE, (εισπνοη, from εις, 'within,' and πνεω, 'I breathe,') Inspiration.

EJACULATIO, Ejaculation—e. Seminis Impedita, Bradyspermatismus.

EJACULA'TION, Ejacula'tio, (e, and jaculo (itself from jacere, 'I throw out,') Gonobol'via, Gonobolis'mus, Ejaculatio seu Proflu'sio seu Efflu'sio Sem'inis, Ex'patria'tio, Patra'tio, Spermob'olē. The emission of sperm. That which occurs during coition has been termed Insemina'tion. The act, by which the fluid is projected out of the urethra.

EJACULA'TOR. That which effects the emission of sperm. See Transversus perinæi.

EJACULATOR SEMINIS, Accelerator urinæ.

EJAC'ULATORY, Ejaculato'rius, Ejac'ulans; (F.) Éjaculateur, Éjaculatoire. Concerned in the ejaculation of sperm.

EJACULATORY DUCTS OR CANALS, Ductus ejaculato'rii, (F.) Conduits ou Canaux ejaculateurs, are formed by the union of the vasa deferentia with the ducts of the vesiculæ seminales. They open at the lateral and anterior parts of the verumontanum, and convey into the urethra the sperm which is discharged from the vesiculæ, as well as that which comes directly from the testicle by the vas deferens. Between them there is often a depression, sometimes of a large size, which is termed Utric'ulus, U. prostaticus, Vesic'ula seu Vesic'ula prostatica, Sinus pocul'aris seu prostaticæ, Corpusculum Weberianum, Weberian organ or cor'puscle, which has been regarded as the analogue to the uterus in the female, and thence called Uterus masculin'us.

EJECTIO, Ejection, Excretion—e. Fæcum, Defecation.

EJECTION, Ejec'tio, (ejicere, ejectum (e, and jacere), 'to throw out or eject.'). The excretion of the feces, urine, sputa, &c.

EL NISPERO, Sapota.

ELABORATION, Elabora'tio, (e, and laborare, laboratum, 'to work.'). This word is used, by physiologists, to signify the various changes which substances susceptible of assimilation undergo, through the action of living organs, before they are capable of serving for nutrition. The food is said to be elaborated in the stomach during the formation of chyme; the chyme is elaborated in the small intestine before it is chyle, &c.

ELÆA, (ελαια,) Olea Europæa.

ELÆAGNUS, (ελαια, 'olive,' and αγνος, 'chaste,') Myrica gale—e. Cordo, Myrica gale.

ELÆOCARPUS COPALLIFERUS, (ελαια, 'olive,' and καρπος, 'fruit,') Copal.

ELEOCÉROLÉ, (ελειων, and κηρος, 'wax,')

ELEOM'ELLI, (ελειων, and μελι, 'honey.'). Dioscorides means, by this, an oil thicker than honey, and of a sweet taste, which flows from the trunk of a tree in Syria. It is acrid and purgative; and sometimes occasions serious symptoms, according to that author.

ELÆOM'ETER, (ελειων, and μετρον, 'measure.'). A very delicate glass hydrometer, for testing the purity of olive or almond oil by determining their densities. The 0 or zero of the scale is the point at which the instrument floats in the oil of poppy seeds. In pure olive oil, it floats at 50°, and the space between these points is divided into 50 equal parts, and numbered accordingly. It floats at 38° or 38½° in pure oil of almonds.

ELÉON, (ελαϊον,) Oil.

ELÉOPH'ANES, (ελεων, and φαινομαι, 'I appear.') That which has the appearance of oil; as Urina eleoph'anea.

ELÉOSAC'CHARUM, (ελεον, and σακχαρ, 'sugar.') O'leosaccharum, Balsaminosaccharum, (F.) Oléosaccharolé. A medicine, composed of essential oil and sugar. It was made by pouring upon an ounce of sugar, reduced to an impalpable powder, ℥ss or ℥j of an essential oil; the mixture being triturated until the two substances were perfectly united.

ELÉOTHES'ION, Uctuarium, (ελεω, and θεις, 'the act of putting or placing.') The oil chamber in the ancient gymnasia, where the body was rubbed with oil before commencing the exercises.

ELAIN, (from ελαιον, 'oil.') See Fat.

ELAIS GUINEENSIS, (from ελαια,) see Cocos butyracea—e. Occidentalis, see Cocos butyracea.

ÉLAN, ('a leap,') Cervus alces.

ÉLANCÉMENT, (e, and lancer, 'to dart.') See Lancing.

ELAPHOBOS'CURM, (ελαφος, 'a deer,' and βοσκειν, 'to eat.') Pastinaca sativa.

ELAPHOM'YCES GRANULA'TUS, E. officinalis, (ελαφος, 'a stag,' and μυκης, 'a fungus.') Lycoperdon cervinum, Cer'vi Bole'tus, Bole'tus cervinus, Tu'ber cervinum, Hart's Truf'fles, Deer Balls, Lycoper'don nuts. Nat. Order, Fungi. Formerly used in the preparation of a Bal'samius apoplecticus, and to promote labour and the secretion of milk. Given, also, as an aphrodisiac. Dose, ℥iss, in powder.

ELAPHRUM ELEMIFERUM, (from ελαφος, 'light,' applied to the wood.) See Amyris elemifera—e. Tomentosum, Fagara aotandra.

ELAPSUS, (e, and labi, lapsus, 'to fall.') Luxation.

ELAS'MA, gen. Elas'matis, (ελασνω, 'I impel.') A clyster pipe.

ELASTES, (ελαστης, 'a driver.') Elasticity.

ELASTIC MEMBRANE, see Membrane.

ELASTICINE, see Fibrous.

ELASTIC'ITY, Elastic'itas, El'ater, El'as'tes, El'ates, Vis el'astica, Tone, Tonic'ity, (F.) Contractilité de Tissu, Contractilité par défaut d'extension, (ελασνω, 'I impel,' ελαστης, 'a driver.') The property by which certain bodies return to their proper size and shape, where these have been modified by pressure or otherwise. It is possessed by the dead as well as by the living solid.

ELATE, (ελατη,) Pinus picea—e. Theleia, Pinus rubra.

ELATER, (ελατηρ,) Elasticity.

ELATERIN, see Momordica elaterium.

ELATERIUM, (ελατηρ, 'a driver.') Extractum elaterii, Momordica elaterium—e. Cordifolium, Momordica elaterium.

ELATES, (ελατης,) Elasticity.

ELATIN, see Momordica elaterium.

ELATINE, Antirrhinum elatine—e. Cymbalaria, Antirrhinum linaria—e. Hastata, Antirrhinum elatine.

ELBOCK (Sc.), Elbow.

EL'BOW, (Sax. elboza,) the bend of the ulna. Cu'bitus, An'con, Pe'chys, U'lna, Um'bo, (Sc.) El'bock, El'buck, (F.) Coude. This word, abstractedly, means the angle formed by the union of two straight bodies. It is particularly applied to the articulation of the arm with the forearm, and especially to the projection formed by the olecranon process at the posterior part of the joints. The anterior part of the joint is called the bend of the elbow, (F.) Pli dn coude.

ELBOW, MINERS', see Miners' Elbow.

ELBUC (Sc.), Elbow.

ELCAJA, Trichilia emetica.

ELCOMA, gen. Elco'matis, Ulcer.

ELCOPLASTY, Helcoplasty.

ELCO'SIS, Helco'sis, Elco'ma, Helco'ma, (ελεκος, 'an ulcer,' and osis.) Ulceration in general. An ulcer. A deep ulceration of the cornea, in consequence of a blow, or of violent inflammation.

Sauvages applies the term to a state of the body, in which there are numerous ulcerations of an obstinate character, complicated with caries, putrescence, low fever, &c.

ELCUSTER, (ελκυστηρ, from ελκυω, 'I draw,') Embryuleus.

ELDER, (Sax. ellarn, (G.) Holder,) Sambucus—e. Common, Sambucus Canadensis—e. Dwarf, Aralia hispida, Smbucus ebulus—e. Prickly, Aralia spinosa—e. Redberried, Sambucus pubens.

ELECAMPANE, (Eoula campana,) Inula hel'anium.

ELECTARIUM, Electuarium.

ELECTARY, Electuarium.

ELECTRICITAS, Electricity—e. Animalis, Galvanism—e. Galvanica, Galvanism—e. Metallica, Galvanism.

ELECTRIC'ITY, Electric'itas, (from ηλεκτρον 'amber,'—the substance in which it was first noticed.) Electricity is used medicinally as an excitant. It has been occasionally employed with success in paralysis, rheumatism, accidental deafness, amaurosis, amenorrhœa, &c, but is not extensively used; and the cases are not always clear in which it could be of service. It may be communicated by means of the electric bath—Bain électrique, as it has been called; which consists in placing the patient upon an insulated stool, and connecting him with the prime conductor, of which he thus becomes a part. The fluid may be communicated by points, sparks, or by shocks, according to the required intensity. See Electricity.

ELECTRICITY, CHEMICAL, Galvanism—e. Contact, Galvanism—e. Magnetic, Electromagnetism—e. Voltaic, Galvanism.

ELECTRIFY, Elec'trize, (electrical, and fito, 'to become,') (F.) Électriser. To produce the electrical condition in a body, or to render it susceptible of producing electrical phenomena. It is often used to signify the act of communicating the electric fluid to man.

ÉLECTRISER, Electrify.

ELECTRIZA'TION, Electrisa'tio, (F.) Électrisation. The medical application of electricity.

Localized electriza'tion, (F.) Electrisation localisée, of Duchenne, of Boulogne, consists in concentrating the electric action in particular parts without electro-puncture or any surgical operation.

It is founded on the greater or less resistance presented by a tissue to electric currents, according to its state of dryness or of moisture; and may be practised by using wet sponges or a metallic knob covered with a piece of wet kid for deep-seated structures, as muscles or any internal viscus; and dry metallic bodies of varying shape, or a metallic brush, for the purpose of cutaneous electrization. Electrization may also be employed for diagnostic purposes; for example, the atrophied muscle of rheumatism contracts well under the galvanic stimulus, whilst the opposite is the case in fatty transformation of the muscular tissue. See Galvanization, localized.

ELECTRO, as a prefix, Electricity.

ELEC'TRODE, (electro, and δῶς, 'way,')

(F.) Rhétrophore ou Réophore. The poles of a galvanic battery are called electrodes.

ELECTRO'DES, (ηλεκτροῦδος, from ἤλεκτρον, 'amber,' and odes. An epithet for evacuations, which shine like amber.

ELECTROLITHOTRITY. The disintegration of calculi in the bladder by the mechanical force of the electrical discharge, applied by an appropriate apparatus.

ELECTROMAGNETISM. An electro-magnetic apparatus is occasionally used in cases of paralysis, or when a powerful excitant has to be applied to a part of the organism. A convenient form consists of a battery of six curved permanent magnets, and an intensity armature, around whose cylinders 1500 yards of fine insulated copper wire are coiled. The ends of the wire communicate respectively, with a pair of directors, each of which holds a piece of sponge, dipped in vinegar or a solution of common salt. When the armature is rotated, and a portion of the body is interposed between the directors, a succession of shocks is received.

ELECTROPUNCTURE, Electropuncturatio, Electropunctura, Electrostixis, and Galvanopuncture, Galvanopunctura. The operation of inserting two or more wires, and then connecting them to the electrodes of the electric or galvanic apparatus. It has been employed therapeutically in cases in which electricity, galvanism, and acupuncture have been indicated.

ELECTROSTIXIS, (electro, and στιξίς, 'puncture.') Electropuncture.

ELECTRUM, (ἤλεκτρον.) Succinum.

ELECTUAIRE, Electuarium—e. Dentifrice, Dentifrice—e. Simple, Conserva.

ELECTUARIUM, Electarium, Opiatum, (Old Eng.) Allectuary, Electuary, Electuary, (F.) Electuaire, Saccharolé mou, (eligere, electum, 'to make choice.') A pharmaceutical composition of a soft consistence, somewhat thicker than honey, and formed of powders, pulps, extracts, syrup, honey, &c. In the London and American Pharmacopœias, electuaries are classed under Confections.

ELECTUARIUM DE ALOË, Opiatum mesentericum—e. Aperiens, Confectio sennæ—e. Aromaticum, Confectio aromatica—e. Cassiæ, Confectio cassiæ—e. Cassiæ fistulæ, Confectio cassiæ—e. Cassiæ sennæ, Confectio sennæ—e. Cassiæ tamarindatum seu lenitivum, Confectio cassiæ—e. Catechu, Confectio catechu compositum—e. Catholicum commune, Confectio sennæ—e. Cinchonæ, Opiatum febrifugum—e. de Croco emendatum, Confectio hyacinthi—e. Diaprunum, Confectio sennæ—e. Eecoproticum, Confectio sennæ—e. de Kinâ kinâ, Opiatum febrifugum—e. Laxativum, Confectio cassiæ—e. Lenitivum, Confectio sennæ—e. Opiatum, Confectio opii—e. Piperis, Confectio piperis—e. Scammonii, Confectio Scammoniiæ—e. Scammonio, Confectio scammoniiæ—e. Sennæ, Confectio sennæ—e. Sennæ compositum, Confectio sennæ—e. Sennæ cum pulpis, Confectio sennæ—e. Solidum, Tabella—e. Thebaicum, Confectio opii.

ELECTUARY, Electuarium—e. Lenitive, Confectio sennæ.

ELÉENCÉPHALE, (ἐλαίον, 'oil,' and ἐνεcephalon.) A fatty matter found by Couerbe in the encephalic neurine.

ELELISPHACUS, (ἐλελισφακος.) Salvia.

ELEMENT, Elementum, (akin to ancient eleo, for oleo, 'to grow' [?],) Principium, P. Primitivum, Stoicheion. A simple, ultimate constituent or principle in the human body, which forms the basis of a fibre or tissue. Also, a constituent of a compound organ. The inorganic elements are simple principles. An organic element, proximate principle or compound of organization, results from the union of certain inorganic elements.

Oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, and nitrogen, are inorganic elements; fibrin, albumen, casein, &c., organic elements.

ELEMENTS, ORGANIC, Principles, immediate—a Sarcous, see Sarcous.

ELEMENTARY CELL, see Cell.

ELEMENTUM, Element—e. Acidificum, Oxygen.

ELEMI, Amyris elemifera.

ELENIUM, Inula helenium.

ELEO'CHARIS PALUS'TRIS, (ἐλος, 'a marsh,' and χαίρω, 'to delight in,') Scirpus palustris; indigenous. Ord. Cyperacæ. The flowering tops, seeds, and roots are astringent, and have been used in diarrhoea and hemorrhage.

ÉLÉOLÉS, (ἐλαίου, 'oil,') Olea medicinalia.

ELEOSELINUM, (ἐλος, 'a marsh,' and σελίον, 'parsley,') Apium petroselinum.

ELEPHANTIASIS, (ελεφαντίας,) Elephantia, Elephantismus, El'ephas, Laz'ari mor'bus seu mal'um, Pachydermia, Phœnic'eus mor'bus, Phymatosis Elephantiasis, (ελεφας, gen. ελεφαντος, 'an elephant,') Various affections have been described under this name, by adding an epithet. It is ordinarily and generally applied to a condition, in which the skin is thick, livid, rugous, tuberculate, and insensible to feeling.

ELEPHANTIASIS OF THE ANTILLES, Barba'does Leg, Glandular disease of Barba'does, (F.) Jambes de Barbade, is the Elephantiasis of many writers, Buene'mia. It is characterized by the leg being enormously tumid and misshapen; skin thickened, livid, and rugous, often scaly; scrotum, arms, or other parts sometimes participating in the affection. The Buene'mia Trop'ica, Cochin leg, is an affection of this kind.

ELEPHANTIASIS ARABICA, Tyri'asis, El'ephas, Elephantiasis, E. Indica, Elephantia Arabum, Le'pra Arabum (of some), Maladie glandulaire, Ladrerie, Yava Skin of the Polynesians [?]. In this the tubercles are chiefly on the face and joints. There is loss of hair, except on the scalp; voice, hoarse and nasal; and the disease is said to be contagious and hereditary. It most frequently attacks the feet; and gives the lower extremity a fancied resemblance to the leg of an elephant, whence its name. The seat of the disease seems to be in the lymphatic vessels and glands, and in the subcutaneous areolar tissue: the inflammatory condition of which is accompanied with general morbid symptoms. Medicine has little or no effect on this loathsome complaint. See Lepra.

ELEPHANTIASIS OF CAYENNE, Mal rouge de Cayenne, seems to be a variety of Lepra, characterized by red and yellow spots, occupying the forehead, ears, hands, loins, &c., afterwards extending and becoming scaly, with deformity of the parts where they are seated, particularly of the face; and ultimately producing cracks, ulcers, caries, and sometimes death.

ELEPHANTIASIS OF THE GREEKS, E. Græcorum, is probably the same disease as Lepra.

ELEPHANTIASIS OF INDIA is characterized by red, livid, or yellowish spots, slightly prominent, to which succeed indolent tumours, formed in the areolar texture. At a more advanced period, the phalanges swell, and become ulcerated; the bones of the nose carious, the lips thickened; and emaciation gradually carries off the patient. For this [?] the term Spiloplaixie was proposed by Duchassaing. It, likewise, belongs to lepra.

ELEPHANTIASIS ITALICA, Pellagra.

ELEPHANTIASIS OF JA'VA is likewise a variety of lepra, characterized by large white tumours on the toes and fingers, resembling serofulous tumefactions. These tumours ulcerate, and the ulcerations spread from the extremities towards the trunk, destroying even the bones. Asputat'ion can alone arrest its progress. The disease is often accompanied by alopecia, and by an eruption of red spots.

ELEPHANTINUM EMLASTRUM, (Ελεφαντινον.) An ancient plaster, composed of 30 parts of ceruus, 45 of wax, oil lbs, water ℥ij. Oribasius and Celsus both mention a plaster of this name, but they are by no means similar in composition.

ELEPHANTOMMA, gen. Elephantom' matis, (ἑλεφας, 'elephant,' and ὀμμα, 'eye.') Buphthalmia.

ELEPHANTOPUS, (F.) Éléphantope; (ελεφας, gen. ελεφαςος, 'elephant,' and πους, 'foot.') One affected with elephantiasis.

ELEPHANTUSIA, (ελεφας, 'ivory.') Phytelephas macrocarpa.

ELEPHAS, gen. Elephan'tis, (ελεφας,) Elephantiasis, Ivory.

ELETTARIA CARDAMOMUM, Amomum cardamomum, and Cardamomum.

ELEUTHERIA, Croton cascarilla.

ÉLEVATEUR, Elevator.—é. Commun de l'aile du nez et de la lèvre supérieure, Levator labii superioris alicque nasi.—é. de l'Œil, Rectus superior oculi.—é. de la Paupière supérieure, Levator palpebræ superioris.

ELEVATIO U'TERI. Ascent of the uterus. This displacement occasionally occurs, in the unimpregnated state, in connection with fibrous uterine, and enlarged ovarian tumours.

ÉLEVATOIRE, Elevator.

ELEVATOR, Lev'ator, (elevare, (e, and levare), 'to lift up.')

(F.) Élévateur. A muscle, whose function it is to raise the part into which it is inserted. See Levator.

ELEVATOR, Elevato'rium, Vec'tis elevato'rius, Élévatoire. A name given to different surgical instruments employed for raising portions of bone which have been depressed, for raising and detaching the portion of bone separated by the crown of the trepan, and for removing stumps of teeth. See Lever.

ELEVATOR ANI, Levator ani—e. Labii inferioris, Levator labii inferioris—e. Labii superioris proprius, Levator labii superioris proprius—e. Labiorum communis, Levator anguli oris—e. Oculi, Rectus superior oculi—e. Patientiæ, Levator scapulæ—e. Scapulæ, Levator scapulæ—e. Testiculi, Cremaster—e. Urethræ, see Transversus perinei.

ELEVATOR, COM'MON. This is a mere lever, the end of which is somewhat bent and made rough, in order that it may less readily slip away from the portion of bone which is to be raised. The instrument is used, by forming a fulcrum for it, either on the hand which holds it, or upon the fingers of the other hand; or by making a fixed point for it on the edge of the opening made with the trephine.

ELEVATOR OF LOUIS differed from the last only in the circumstance of the screw-peg being united to the bridge by a kind of pivot instead of hinge, so that greater extent of motion was permitted.

ELEVATOR OF PETIT' consists of a lever mounted on a handle, and straight throughout its whole length, except at its very end, which is slightly curved, in order that it may be more conveniently put under the portion of bone intended to be elevated. The lever is pierced at various distances from its butt-end with several holes, intended for the reception of a movable screw-peg, fixed on the top of a kind of bridge. This part of the instrument consists of an arch, the ends of which are long, and covered with small pads, and on its centre is the screw-peg already mentioned. By means of these holes the arm of the lever can be lengthened at pleasure.

ELEVATOR TRIP'LOID, Vec'tis triplōi'des. This was so called from its consisting of three branches, uniting above in one common trunk. The latter part was traversed by a long screw, having below a kind of hook, and above a handle for turning it. By turning the screw, the hook was drawn up, and the bone thus elevated.

The simple lever is the only one now used, owing to the want of facility and advantages in the use of the others.

ELEVATOR, UTERINE, see Pessary intrauterine.

ÉLÈVE EXTERNE, (e, and levare, 'to raise,') see House-surgeon—é. Interne, Housesurgeon.

ÉLEVURES (F.), Efflorescentiæ. A generic name, including all the exanthemata, in which there is tumefaction of the tissue of the skin. See Exanthem.

ELFLOCK. A condition of the hair in which it is matted and twisted into locks, as in pliea. Supposed, in olden times, to have been the work of elves or fairies.

ELIASTER, Ilech.

ELICHRYSUM, (ελιχρυσος, from ελη, 'light of the sun,' and χρυσος, 'gold,') Solidago virgaurea—e. Montanum, Antennaria dioica.

ELICOIDES, (ελικωιδης, from ελιξ, 'a tendril,' and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Capreolaris.

ELIGMA, gen. Eliq'matis, Electos.

ELIMINANTIA, (eliminare, (from e, and limen, 'a threshold,') 'to turn out of doors,') Eccritica.

ELIMINATIVES, Eccritica.

ELIQUATIO, (e, and liquare, liquatum, 'to melt,') Colligation.

ELIXATIO, Elix'ation, Eps'e'sis, (from elixus, (e, and lix, 'water, liquor, lye,') 'boiled,' 'sodden,') This word has been used synonymously with Decoctio. The act of boiling.

ELIX'IR, (Arab.) L'sir, Ir'ir, Quel'les, Alex'ir. (The etymology of this word is not clear. Lemery derives it from ελω, 'I extract,' and also from αλεω, 'I aid.' Others believe it to be from Arabic, al-ecsir, or al-eksir, 'chymistry,') An elixir is a medicine composed of various substances held in solution in alcohol. The name has been used, however, for preparations which contain no spirit of wine.

ELIXIR AC'IDUM HALLE'RI seu DIPPEL'II, E. Antipodag'ricum seu Antinephret'icum seu Sulphurico-ac'idum, Gul'te ac'idæ ton'icæ, A'qua Rabe'lii, L'i'quor ac'idus Halle'ri, Mistu'ra sulphurico-ac'idæ, E'ther sulphuricus ac'idus, Ac'idum sulphuricum alcoholisa'tum, A. vitriol'icum vino'sum, Al'cohol Sulphurica'tum, A. sulphuricum, is a mixture of concentrated sulphuric acid and alcohol—in the Eau de Robel, of one part of the former to three of the latter. It is employed as an astringent in hemorrhages, &c.

ELIXIR ALOES, Tinctura aloes composita—e. Anthelminticum Succorum, Tinctura jalapii composita.

ELIXIR ANTIASTHMAT'IC, OF BOERHAAVE. This elixir is composed of alcohol, aniseed, camphor, orris, asarabacca root, calamus aromaticus, liquorice, and elecampane. It is given in asthma, in the dose of 20 or 30 drops.

ELIXIR ANTIHYPOCHONDRICUM, Tinctura cinchonæ amara—e. Antinephreticum, E. acidum Halleri.

ELIXIR ANTISCROF'ULOUS, OF PEYRILHE, is composed of weak alcohol, sulphate of potassa, and gentian root. It is administered in scrofula.

ELIXIR APERITIVUM, Tinctura aloes composita

ELIXIR, BOERHAAVE'S, see Tinctura aloes composita.

ELIXIR OF CALISA'YA. This is made of Calisaya bark ℥j; fresh orange peel ℥ss; cinnamon, coriander, and angelica seeds, āā ℥ij; caraway, aniseed, and cochineal, āā ℥j; brandy and water, of each a sufficient quantity;  syrup ℥℥x. Treat the Calisaya and aromatics with the brandy by percolation, until ℥x have been obtained: continue the percolation with equal parts of brandy and water until ℥xxij have been obtained; then add the syrup to make two pints. A tonic and cordial.

ELIXIR, CARMINATIVE, of SYLVIUS, Tinctura carminativa Sylvii.

ELIXIR CLAUDE'RI, CLAU'DER'S Elix'ir. Made by macerating for a few days carbonate of potassa ℥j; aloe, guaiacum, myrrh, sassafras, rhubarb bruised, of each ℥ij; water f℥xviij; and decanting. Dose, a tablespoonful as a laxative and emmenagogue.

Marsh fever. Also, a kind of fever, characterized by great moisture or sweating.

ELOME, Orpiment.

ELONGA'TION, Elonga'tio, (elongare, elongatum, (e. and longus,) 'to lengthen,' 'extend,') An incomplete luxation, in which the ligaments of an articulation are stretched and the limb lengthened, without total luxation. The word has also been used for the extension required in the reduction of fractures and luxations, and for the increased length of limb. (F.) Allongement, in diseases and dislocations of the hip-joint.

ELREN, (Prov.) Sambucus.

ELTH, (old E.), see Age.

ELUTRIATIO, Decantation, Elutriation.

ELUTRIA'TION, Elutria'tio, (originally eluo, (e. and luo, 'I wash,') 'I wash away, I rinse,') In pharmacy a process by which the finer particles of a powder are separated from the coarser. It consists in diffusing the powder in water, allowing the larger and heavier particles to subside, and then decanting the liquor, that the finer particles may subside.

ELU'VIES, ('a washing away,') An inordinate discharge of any fluid, and also the fluid itself. In the works of some authors it is particularly applied to the mucus which flows from the vagina in cases of leucorrhœa.

ELUXATION, Luxation.

ELYTRA, (pl.), see Elytron.

ELYTRATRESIA, (elytro, and ἀτρητος, 'imperforate,') Colpatresia.

ELYTREURYNTER. (elytro, and εὐρυνω, 'I dilate,') Speculum vaginæ.

ELYTRITIS, (elytro, and ἰτις,) Colpositis, Leucorrhœa.

ELYTRO, (ἐλυτρον, 'a vagina or sheath,') In composition, the vagina.

ELYTROBLENNORRHŒA, (elytro, and blennorrhœa,) Leucorrhœa (vaginal.)

ELYTRIOE'LĒ, (elytro, and ἐληη, 'a tumour,') Vogel has given this name to vaginal hernia, Colpocœ'le.

ELYTRODES, (tunica,) (elytro, and οδες,) Vaginal coat of the testicle.

ELYTRŒDE'MA, Coleæde'ma, Colpæde'ma, (elytro, and οἰδήμα, 'œdema.') Edema of the vagina.

ELYTROI'TIS, (elytro, and itis.) Colposis.

ELY'TRON, (ελυτρον, ελωω, 'I involve.') A sheath. The vagina. The membranes which envelope the spinal marrow are called elytra.

ELYTRON'CUS, Elytroph'y'ma, (elytro, and ογκος, 'a tumour.') A swelling of the vagina.

ELYTROPAP'PUS RHINŒCERO'TIS. A South African bush, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, the whole of which is bitter and resinous. The tops of the branches, infused in wine or brandy, make excellent bitters. The tops are also given in powder to children affected with diarrhœa.

ELYTROPHY'MA, gen. Elytroph'y'matis, (elytro, and φύμα, 'a swelling.') Elytroncus.

ELY'TROPLASTY, Ely'troplas'ticē, (elytro, and πλάσσω, 'I form.') The operation for restoration of the vagina.

ELYTROPTOSIS, (elytro, and πτωσις, 'a falling.') Prolapsus vaginae.

ELYTRORRHAGIA, (elytro, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,') Colporrhagia.

ELYTROR'RHAPHY, Elytorrhaph'ia, Colpor'rhapsy, Kolpor'rhapsy, (elytro, and ῥαφη, 'a suture.') The operation of closing the vagina by suture in cases of proclidentia uteri.

EM and EN, en, 'in, into, within;' also 'excess;' frequently used in this last sense by Dr. Good. A common prefix, generally answering to the prefixes im and in, in English. In composition, before β, π, φ, ψ, and μ, the v is changed into μ; before γ, κ, ξ, and χ, into γ; before λ, into λ; and before ρ generally into ρ.

EMAC'IMATE, Maces'cere, Tabes'cere, (F.) Amagrir'; (emaciare, emaciatum, (e, and maceo, 'to be lean,') 'to grow lean,') To lose flesh, to become lean, to waste away.

EMACIA'TION, Emacia'tio, Extenu'tio, Ma'cies, Macritu'do, Ma'ror, Marco'res, Skeleti'a, Leptysm'us, Leptyn'sis, Pinguet'inis diminiu'tio, (F.) Amagrissement, Dépérissement. That condition of the body, or of a part of the body, in which it grows lean. The state of one who is lean — Leanness Isch'notes, Asar'cia, (F.) Mai-greur.

EMAIL DES DENTS, Enamel of the teeth.

ÉMAILLOTAGE (F.) (maillot, 'swathing or swaddling clothes,') The 'wrapping up' or 'packing up' in dry or wet sheets, which is practised in hydropathic establishments to induce sweating.

EMANA'TION, Emanat'io, Efflu'vium, (emanare, emanatum, (e, and manare, 'to issue or flow from,') The term is applied to a body which proceeds or draws its origin from other bodies—such as the light which emanates from the sun; the miasm which arises from the putrid decomposition of animal or vegetable substances, &c. See Miasm.

EMAN'SIO MEN'SIUM, (e, and manere, mansum, 'to stay,') This term has been applied to amenorrhœa or obstruction of the menses before they have been established. Some have used it for the retention which occurs even after they have been established. The former is the general acceptance.

EMARGINATIO, (e, and margo, gen. marginis, 'a margin,') Échancre, Notch.

EMARGINATURA, Échancre, Notch.

EMASCULATION, Emascula'tio, (emasculare, (e, and masculus, 'a male,') 'to render impotent,') The act of removing or destroying the generative organs of a male animal.

EMASCULATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EMBALMING, (em, and balsamum, 'balsam,') Balsamatio, Smyrnis'mus, Cedela'a, Pollinctu'ra, Neeroced'ra, Conditu'ra Cadaverum, (F.) Embau-

ment, Imbalsamatio. An operation which consists in impregnating the dead body with substances capable of preventing it from becoming putrid, and thus putting it in a condition to be preserved.

EMBAN'MA, gen. Emban'matis, (εμβαμμα, Apoiani'ma, Bamma, (εμβαπτω, (em, and βαπτω, 'I dip,') 'I immerse,') A medicated pickle or sauce.

EMBARRAS, (em, and barrer, 'to bar,') Emphraxis.

EMBARRAS GASTRIQUE (F.), Gast'ric disorder or imped'iment, Collu'vies gas'trica, Sor'des prima'rum via'rum, Sto'tus gas'tricus, Gasteratax'ia, (F.) Gastricitē. Disorder of the stomach, in which there is loss of appetite, with bitterness and clamminess of mouth, white and yellow tongue, feeling of oppression in the epigastrium, and sometimes pain in that region, nausea and bilious or bitter vomiting; this state being accompanied with headach, lassitude, and pain in the back and limbs.

EMBARRAS GASTRO-INTESTINAL, Gastro-intes'tinal disorder. Slight gastro-enteritis, according to the Broussaists, in which the symptoms of the Embarras gastrique and E. intestinal are united.

EMBARRAS INTESTINAL, Intes'tinal disorder. The principal characters assigned to this are:—tension of the abdomen, colic, borborgmi, discharge of flatus per anum, and constipation or diarrhœa.

EMBARRURE, (em, and barré, 'barred,') Engisama.

EMBAU'EMENT, (em, and baume, 'balsam,') Embalming.

EMBOÏTEMENT (F.), 'Encasing,' (em, and boîte, 'a box,') Enadel'phia, Eudadel'phia, Euteradel'phia. This term has been applied to the theory of generation which considers that the germs are encased in each other in the ovary of the female, in such sort that they are developed in succession after impregnation. It is the theory of encasing of germs. One, who believes that all organized bodies are the result of the development of germs encased in each other ad infinitum, is said to be an Infu'itivist.

Monstros'ities by inclu'sion, (F.) Monstruosité's par inclu'sion, are supposed to arise from an accidental emboïtement of germs.

EMBOÏTURE, Diarthrosis.

EMBOLE, (εμβάλλω, (εμ, and βάλλω, 'I put in place,') Reduction of a luxated bone. Reposit'io. Also, a wedge or plug—εμβολη, εμβολον, εμβολος—hence.

EMBOLIA, (F.) Embolies. Diseases produced by plugging or obturation of the bloodvessels. Em'bolism, Embolism'us.

EMBOLIC, Embol'icus, (from εμβολη, 'a wedge or plug,') Relating to plugging or obturation of the vessels, as 'embolic apoplexy.'

EMBOLIMOS, (εμβολιμος, from em, and βάλλω, 'I cast,') Intercalary.

EMBOLISM, see Embolia.

EMBOLUM CEREBRI, Infundibulum of the brain.

EMBONPOINT (F.). 'In good point or plight.' Bo'na corporis habitu'do. The state of the animal body when in full health. Excessive embonpoint constitutes corpulence and obesity, and may become a morbid condition.

EMBONPOINT EXCESSIF, Polysarcia adiposa.

EMBOWELLING, Exenterismus.

EMBREGMA, Embrocatio.

EMBROCATIO, Embrocatio, Irrigatio.

EMBROCA'TION, Embroca'tio, Embreg'ma, Em'broché, Impru'vium, (εμβρεχω, (εμ, and βρεχω, 'I wet,') 'I dip in,') A fluid application to be rubbed on any part of the body. It is often used synonymously with liniment. Originally it was employed in the sense of Fomentation.

EMBROCATIO, GUESTONIAN, see Oleum Terebinthinae rectificatum.

EMBROCHE, (εμβροχη,) Embrocation.

EMBRYO, gen. Embryo'nis, Embryon, (εμβρυον, from em, and βρωω, 'I grow.') Cye'ma. The fecundated germ, in the early stages of its development in utero. At a certain period of its increase, the name fetus is given to it, but at what period is not determined. Generally, the embryo state is considered to extend to the period of quickening.

EMBRYO'TONY, Fet'ūs trucidat'io, (embryo, and κτος, 'destruction.') The act of destroying a fetus in utero, when insurmountable obstacles—as certain deformities of the pelvis—oppose delivery.

EMBRYO'GENY, Embryogen'ia, (F.) Embryogénie; (embryo, and γενωω, 'to generate.') The generation or formation of the embryo.

EMBRYO'GRAPHY, Embryogra'phia, (embryo, and γραφη, 'a description.') The part of anatomy which describes the embryo.

EMBRYO'LOGY, Embryolog'ia, (embryo, and λογος, 'a description.') The doctrine of, or a treatise on, embryonic development.

EMBRYON, (εμβρυον,) Embryo.

EMBRYONAL, Embryonic.

EMBRYON'IC, Embryon'icus, (F.) Embryonique, Embryonnaire, Embryonal. Relating or appertaining to an embryo:—as 'embryonic life.'

EMBRYONIQUE, Embryonic.

EMBRYONNAIRE, Embryonic.

EMBRYOTHLAS'TA, Embryothlas'tes, Embryothlas'tum, (F.) Embryotome, (embryo, and θλαω, 'I break.') An instrument for dividing the fetus piecemeal, in order to effect delivery. A crotchet or other instrument, used, in certain cases of laborious parturition, to break the bones of the fetus, for the purpose of extracting them with greater facility.

EMBRYOTOCIA, (embryo, and τοκος, 'delivery,') Abortion.

EMBRYOTOME, Embryothlasta.

EMBRYOT'OMY, Embryotom'ia, (εμβρυοτομια, from embryo, and τεμνω, 'to cut.') A division of the fetus into fragments, to extract it by piecemeal, when the narrowness of the pelvis or other faulty conformation opposes delivery.

EMBRYOT'ROPHY, Embryotroph'ia, (embryo, and τροφη, 'nourishment.') Fœtal nutrition: Cyot'rophy.

EMBRYUL'CIA, Embryusterul'cia, (embryo, and ἔκω, 'I extract,' 'I draw.') A surgical operation, by which the fetus is extracted by means of appropriate instruments, when faulty conformation or other circumstances prevent delivery by the natural efforts.

EMBRYUL'CUS, (εμβρυουλκος,) Elcus'ter. An iron hook or crotchet, described by Fabricius ab Aquapendente, which was used to extract the fetus in some cases of laborious labor.

EMBRYUSTERULCIA, (embryo, ὑστερα, 'uterus,' and ἔκω, 'I extract,') Embryulcia.

EMENDANS, (emendo, (e, and mendum, 'a fault,') 'to amend,') Corrigent.

ÉMERAUDE, Smaragdus.

EMERAUDES, Hæmorrhoids.

EMERODS, Hæmorrhoids.

EMEROIDS, Hæmorrhoids.

EMESIA, (εμεσια,) Vomiturition.

EMESIS, (εμεσις,) Vomiting.

EMETATROPH'IA, (εμεω, 'I vomit,' and ετροφια, 'want of nourishment,') Atrophy induced by vomiting.

EMETIA, Emctine.

EMET'IC, Emet'icum, Emetopœ'um, Vomito'rium, Vom'itory, Vom'it, Puke, (Prov.) Pick, (εμετικός, from εμεω, 'I vomit,') A substance capable of producing vomiting. (F.) Vomitif, Émetique. [This last term is also given by the French to tartarized antimony—the emetic, as it were, par excellence.]

Tartarized antimony, ipecacuanha, and sulphate of zinc, are the chief emetics. They are valuable agents in disease, and may either act primarily on the stomach, or secondarily on other parts of the system,—the sympathy between the stomach and other parts of the body being very extensive, and an important object of study.

EMETIC ROOT, Euphorbia corollata—e. Tartar. Antimonium tartarizatum—e. Weed, Lobelia inflata.

EMETICOLOGIA, Emctology.

EM'ETINE, Emet'ina, Emet'ia, Vom'itine, Cephæll'num. A vegetable alkali, discovered by M. Pelletier in ipecacuanha, to which it owes its emetic power. It is obtained from different ipecacuanhas, but chiefly from psychot'ria emet'ica, callicoc'ca ipecacuan'ha, and viol'a emet'ica. It is in transparent scales, of a reddish-brown colour, almost inodorous, of a bitter, slightly acrid taste; is unchangeable in the air, soluble in water and alcohol, and insoluble in ether. Three grains of impure emetia or one grain of pure are equal to eighteen of ipecacuanha. See Ipecacuanha.

ÉMÉTIQUE, Antimonium tartarizatum, Emetic.

ÉMÉTISER (F.). To cause vomiting by emetics. In French pharmacy, it is, likewise, used to signify the addition of émétique—tartar of antimony and potassa—to a medicinal preparation.

EMETOCATHARSIS, see Emetocathartic.

EM'ETOCATHARTIC, Em'etocathar'ticus, (emetus, and καθαρτικος, 'a purgative,') A remedy, which at the same time excites vomiting and purging—Em'etocathar'sis.

EMETOL'OGY, Emetolog'ia, Emeticolog'ia, (emetus, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on vomiting, and on emetics.

EMETOPŒUM, (emetus, and ποιω, 'to make,') Emetic.

EMETUS, (εμετος,) Vomiting.

EM'INENCE, (e, and mineo, 'to project,') Eminentia, Protuberant'ia, Ex'ochæ. A projection at the surface of a healthy or diseased organ.

ÉMINENCE PORTE ANTÉRIEURE, Lobulus anonus—é. Porte postérieure, Lobulus Spigelli—é. Sus-pubienne, Mons veneris.

ÉMINENCES BIGÉMINÉES, Quadrigemina corpora—e. Latérales, Corpora olivaria—é. Pyramidales, Corpora pyramidalia—é. Vermiformes du cervelet, Vermiformes processus.

EMINENTIA, Eminence, Protuberantia—e. Annularis, Pons varolii—e. Pyramidalis, Crista vestibuli—e. Thyroidea, Pomum Adami—e. Tympani, Pyramid.

EMINENTLÆ BIGEMINÆ, Quadrigemina tubercula—e. Candicantes, Mammillary Tubercles—e. Lenticulares, Corpora striata—e. Magnæ cerebri, Thalami nervorum opticoium—e. Medianæ internæ, Corpora Pyramidalia—e. Olivares, Corpora olivaria—e. Ouales laterales, Corpora olivaria—e. Pyramidales, Corpora pyramidalia—e. Quadrigemine, Quadrigemina tubercula—e. Tere'tes, Processus tere'tes.

ÉMISSAIRE, (same etymon as Emission,) Emunatory.

EMISSARIA SANTORINI, (F.) Émissaires de Santorini. A name given to some small veins, which communicate with the sinuses of the dura mater, by apertures in the cranium. Such are the parietal, posterior condyloid, mastoid veins, &c.

EMISSION, Emission—e. Seminis, Spermatismus.

EMIS'SION, Emis'sio, (emittere, (e, and mittere, missum), 'to send out,' 'drive out.')

The act by which any matter whatever is thrown from the body. Thus, we say Emission of urine, Emission of semen, &c.

EMISSION SANGUINE, Bloodletting.

EMMAN'UEL. The name of an ointment, much used in the latter part of the 16th century, which was formed by boiling various herbs, as dittany, centaury, plantain, spurge, &c., in wine and afterwards adding pitch, resin, olibanum, turpentine, suet, mastich, myrrh, &c. to form an ointment.

EMMEN'AGOGUES, Emmenago'ga, Emmeni-ago'ga, Ame'nia, (emmenia, and αγω, 'I drive,' or 'expel.')

Men'agogues. A name given to medicines believed to have the power of favouring the discharge of the menses. There is probably no substance which possesses this power directly.

According to different conditions of the system, the most opposite remedies may act as emmenagogues. Black hellebore, savin, madder, polygala senega, and ergot, are by some, reputed to be specific emmenagogues.

EMMENAGOLOG'IA, (emmenagogue, and λογος, 'discourse.')

A treatise of emmenagogues.

EMMENIA, (εμμηρια, from em, and μην, 'a month,')

Menses.

EMMENIAGOGA, Emmenagogues.

EMMENIOP'ATHY, Emmeniopathi'a, (emmenia, and παθος, 'affection.')

An affection or disorder of menstruation.

EMMENOLOG'IA, (emmenia, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

A treatise on menstruation.

EMMENOLOG'ICAL, Emmenolog'icus. Relating or appertaining to menstruation.

EMMYXIUM ARTICULARE, (em, and μυξα, 'mucus,')

Hydrarthrus.

EMOLLIENTIA, Emollients.

EMOL'LIENTS, Emollientia, Malthac'tica, Relaxan'tia, Epiceras'tica, Malac'tica, Lubrican'tia, Malaco'pae'a, Mollien'tia, (from emollire, (e, and mollire,) 'to soften.')

Substances which relax and soften parts that are inflamed, or too tense. They are used both internally and externally: as the former, however, consist of mucilaginous substances, they are generally reckoned as demulcents: the latter, or proper emollients, consist of oils, cataplasms, fomentations, &c.

Oleaginous bodies, rubbed on a part, act by diminishing its cohesion. Fomentations, in cases of internal inflammation, act probably through contiguous sympathy.

The chief emollients:—Adeps, Amygdalæ Oleum; Avenæ Farina; Cera; Cetaceum; Linum; Olivæ Oleum; Sesamum; Tritici Farina, and Ulmus.

EMOLLITIES, Mollities—e. Morbosa, Mollities—e. Ossium, Mollities ossium—e. Uteri morbosa, Hysteromalacia.

EMOLLITIO, Mollities—e. Ventriculi, Gastro-malacia.

ÉMONCTOIRE, Emunctory.

EMOPTOE, Hæmoptysis.

EMOTIO, (e, and moveo, motum, 'to move,')

Delirium, Luxation, Passion.

EMO'TIONAL. Relating to emotion or passion independently of the will:—hence an 'emotional or instinctive impulse.'

EMPASMA, gen. Empasmat'is, (em, and πασσειν, 'to sprinkle,') Cataplasma.

EMPATEMENT, (empâter, (em, and pâte, 'paste,')

'to render pasty or doughy.')

A non-inflammatory engorgement, which retains, more or less, the impression of the finger.

EMPATHE'MA, gen. Empathe'matis, Ma'nia a pathe'matiē, (F.) Manie sans délire; ungovernable passion; (em, and πασσειν, 'suffering.')

Fixed delusion.

EMPEIRIA, (εμπειρια, from em, and πειρα, 'a trial,')

Experience.

EMPETRUM, (εμπετρον, from em, and πετρα, 'a rock,')

Herniaria glabra.

EM'PHLYSIS, (em, and φλυσις, 'a vesicular tumour or eruption,')

Ich'orous Exan'them. An eruption of vesicular pimples, filled progressively with an acrid and colourless, or nearly colourless, fluid, terminating in scurf or laminated scabs.

A genus in the order Ecanthematia, class Hæmatica of Good.

EMPHLYSIS APHTHA, Aphthæ, Stomatitis, aphthous—e. Erysipelas, Erysipelas—e. Miliaria, Miliaria fever—e. Pemphigus, Pemphigus—e. Vaccina inserta, Vaccina—e. Variella, Variella.

EMPHRACTIC, Emphracticus.

EMPHRACTICA, Physonia.

EMPHRACTICUS, Emphractic, (εμφρακτικός, from εμφραττω, (em, and φραττω, 'I shut up,')

'I close,')

'I obstruct.')

Emplastr'iculus, Emplastom'enus. Any substance which, when applied to the skin, was presumed to close the pores.

EMPHRAG'MA, gen. Emphragmat'is, (εμφραγμα.)

Obturamentum, Impedimentum. Anything that obstructs. Hippocrates uses this term to designate the obstacle to delivery on the part of the fœtus, when the presentation is preternatural.

EMPHRAGMA LACRYMALE, Fistula lacrymalis—e. Salivæ, Ranula.

EMPHRAX'IS, (εμφραξις.) Obstruct'io, Obtura'tio, Oppilla'tio, Infarc'tus, Infarc'tio, Farc'tus, Fartus, Infarc'tion.

'Obstruction.' An Embarras or detention in canals or cavities of any substance, which is either morbid from quantity or quality.

EMPHRAXIS HEPATIS, Hepatemphraxis.

EMPHYMA, gen. Emphy'matis, (em, and φυμα, 'a swelling,')

Tumour—e. Encystis, Encystis—e. Encystis atheroma, Atheroma—e. Encystis ganglion, Ganglion, Testudo—e. Encystis meliceris, Meliceris—e. Encystis steatoma, Steatoma—e.

EMPHYSE'MA, gen. Emphyse'matis, (εμφύσημα, from εμφύσσω, (em, and φύσσω, 'I blow,')

'I inflate.')

Infla'tio, Empneumat'osis, Sarci'tes flatu'osis, Emphyse'ma cellulârê seu pneumat'osis, Physon'cus, Tu'mor flatulen'tis, Pneumat'osis, Infla'tion, Winddropsy, (F.) Emphyse'me, Aërethmie of Piorry.

This term is commonly applied to any white, crepitant, shining, elastic, indolent tumor of the integuments, caused by the introduction of air into the areolar texture, Aërodermectasia.

Injuries of the larynx, trachea, or lungs; fractures of the ribs, or wounds penetrating the chest, are the most frequent causes of this affection, which is owing to the air escaping from the air-passages, and insinuating itself into the areolar texture surrounding the wound. There are some cases of emphysema, which are owing to internal causes; and hence a division has been made into the accidental and symptomatic, and the spontaneous and idiopathic.

EMPHYSEMA ABDOMINIS, Tympanitis.

EMPHYSEMA OF THE LUNGS, E. Pulmo'rium, Asth'ma ac'utum ab Emphyse'matê Pulmo'rium, Pneumat'osis Pulmo'rium, Pneumonec'tasis, Pneumec'tasis, (F.) Pneumoëctasie, Emphyse'me du Poupon. A considerable pressure or contusion of the chest, or any violent concussion of the lung, may produce a laceration in that viscus, without injury being done to the parietes of the thorax, and may give occasion to the infiltration of air into the areolar texture, interlob'ular emphysema. La-önnec has described another species of emphysema of the lungs, Vesicular emphysema, Aëropneumonie, Aëropneumonectasie of Piorry, consisting in excessive dilatation of the air-cells, some of which become as large as hemp-seed, ultimately break, and give rise to irregular vesicles at the surface of the lung, some of which are as large as a hazelnut. Physical signs.—The thorax externally, generally or locally, appears unnaturally convex and prominent. The intercostal spaces are widened, but depressed. The inspiratory efforts are increased. The sound on percussion is morbidly clear, but not tympanitic. On auscultation, the inspiratory murmur is feeble or suppressed. The expiration, which is more frequently audible, is prolonged, laborious and wheezing. There are no certain physical signs which can distinguish interlobular emphysema from the vesicular.

Emphysema under the pleuro-pulmonalis is termed, by Piorry, Aërethoropneumonie.

EMPHYSEMA PECTORIS, Pneumothorax—e. Scroti, Physocèle—e. Tympanitis, Tympanites—e. Uteri, Hysterophysitis, Physonetra.

EMPHYSEM'ATOUS, Emphysemato'sus. Relating or appertaining to emphysema.

EMPHYSEME, Emphysema—e. du Poumon, Emphysema of the lungs.

EMPHYTUM THERMUM, (εμφυτον θερμον, (em, and φυω, 'to have naturally,') 'innate heat.' Biofychnum.

EMPIMELIUM POLYSARCIA, (em, and πιωλη, 'fat.')

EMPIRIC or Empiri'ic, Empir'icus, (εμπειρικος, from em, and μειρα, 'a trial,') 'experimental.' One who follows only experience. A sect of physicians, who rejected all theory, and took for their guide experience alone. It was opposed to the dogmatic sect. The Empiric sect prevailed till near the time of Galen. Among its most eminent members, after Philinus and Serapion, were Apollonius, Glaucias, Baechius of Tanagra, and Zeuxis, both disciples of Herophilus,—Heraclides of Tarentum, Cleophrantus (master of Asclepiades), Menodotus of Nicomedia, and Theudas of Laodicea. They occupied themselves, chiefly, with discovering the properties of drugs, and did important service, in this manner, to medicine.

At the present day, the word Empiric is only taken in a bad sense, being employed in nearly the same signification as charlatan or quack.

EMPIRICE, (εμπειρικη), Empiricism.

EMPIRICISM, Empir'ica Ars, Empir'icē, (F.) Empirisme. Medicine founded on experience. It generally, at the present day, signifies quackery.

EMPIRISME, Empiricism.

EMPLASTICUS, (εμπλαστικός, from εμπλασσω, (em, and πλασσειν, 'to form,') 'I spread upon.') A remedy which adheres, as a plaster, to the surface, and in this manner may obstruct the pores (?): an emphractic.

EMPLASTROËNDERMIC, Endermic.

EMPLASTRUM, (εμπλαστρον, same etymon as Emplasticus.) (F.) Emplâtre, Stéaraté. A solid and tenacious compound, adhesive at the ordinary heat of the human body. Some of the plasters owe their consistence to wax and resin; and others to the chemical union which takes place between the semivitreous oxide of lead and oil. Most of them become too consistent by age. When such is the case, they may be remelted by a gentle heat, and oil be added to them.

EMPLASTRUM ADHÆSIVUM, Emplastrum resinæ—e. Adhæsivum Woodstockii, see Sparadrupum Adhæsivum—e. Alexandri, Alexandrine—e. de Althæa, Unguentum de Althæa.

EMPLASTRUM AMMONI'ACI, Ammoni'acum Plaster, (Ammoniac. pur.  $\mathfrak{z}\text{v}$ , Acidi aceticum dil. Oss. Dissolve the ammoniac in the vinegar and strain: then evaporate the solution by means of a water-bath, stirring constantly until it acquires a proper consistence.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a discutient plaster.

EMPLASTRUM AMMONI'ACI CUM HYDRAR'GYRO, Ammoniacum plaster with mercury, (Ammoniaci lbj, Hydrarg. ℥ij, Olei oliv. gr. x, Sulphur. gr. viij.) Rub the mercury with the oil until the globules disappear, then add the ammoniac, previously melted, and mix. Ph. U. S.)

EMPLASTRUM ANDRÉE DE CRUCE, E. de Pice et resinis glutinans—e. Anglicum, see Sparadrupum adhæsivum.

EMPLASTRUM ANTIMONII, Plaster of Antimony, (Antimon. et Potass. tart. in pulv. subtil. ℥j, Picis Burgundicæ. ℥iv. Melt the pitch in a water-bath and strain: add the powder, and stir well on cooling. Ph. U. S. 1863.) An excitant or warm plaster.

EMPLASTRUM AR'NICÆ, Plaster of Ar'nica, Ar'nica plaster, (Ext. Arnicæ alcoholicæ. ℥iiss, Emp. Resinæ. ℥iij. Add the extract to the plaster, previously melted, and mix. Ph. U. S. 1863.) A warm strengthening plaster.

EMPLASTRUM AROMAT'ICUM, Aromatic Plaster, (Thuris. ℥iij, Cereæ flavæ. ℥ss, Pulv. cort. cinnam. ℥vj, Ol. ess. Piment., Ol. ess. Limon. āā ℥ij. Melt the frankincense and wax together, and strain; then add, as it cools, the cinnamon, previously rubbed with the oils, and form a plaster. Ph. D.) Used as a stimulating plaster.

A spice plaster, made by incorporating powdered cinnamon and any other spices with melted suët, has been used in cholera infantum. It is spread on leather or linen, and is renewed twice in the twenty-four hours. Another, for extemporaneous use, is to mix powdered spices with meal or flour and spirits. One, advised by Dr. Parrish, senior, of Philadelphia, consisted of powdered capsicum, cinnamon, and cloves, each  $\mathfrak{z}\text{ij}$ ; rye meal, spirits, and honey, q. s. To be rubbed together on a plate, spread upon a close fabric, and applied as a cataplasm.

EMPLASTRUM ASSAFETIDÆ, E. antihyster'icum, Assafetida plaster, (Emp. plumb., Assafot. sing. lbj, Galban., Cereæ flavæ. āā lbss, Alcohol. dilut. Oij. Dissolve the assafetida and galbanum in the alcohol, in a water-bath, strain while hot, and evaporate to the consistence of honey; add the lead plaster and wax previously melted together, stir the mixture well, and evaporate to the proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) Used as an antispasmodic (?) and anodyne (?) plaster.

EMPLASTRUM ATTRAHENS, E. ceræ—e. Auriculare, Hypotium.

EMPLASTRUM BELLADON'NÆ, Plaster of Belladonna, (Empl. resin. ℥ii, Ext. Belladon. alcoholicæ. ℥i. Add the extract to the plaster, previously melted in a waterbath, and mix. Ph. U. S.) An anodyne application in neuralgia and rheumatism.

EMPLASTRUM CALEFA'CIENS, E. Picis cum canthar'idæ, (Ph. U. S.), Calefacient Plaster, Warm Plaster, Warming plaster, (F.) Emplâtre échauffant. (Cerat. cantharid. (Ph. U. S.), ℥iv, Picis abiet. ℥xlviij. Melt together, and form into a plaster. Ph. U. S.) It is rubefacient and stimulant.

EMPLASTRUM CANTHARIDIS, E. lyttæ—e. Cantharidis vesicatorii compositum, E. lyttæ comp.—e. Cephalicum, E. picis compositum.

EMPLASTRUM CERÆ, E. simplex, E. Attrahens, Wax plaster, (Cereæ flavæ, Sevi Præp. āā lbij, resinæ flavæ, lbj. Melt them together and strain. Ph. L.) It has been considered drawing. It is stimulating.

EMPLASTRUM CUCUTÆ, E. de Cicuta seu coui's macula'ti, Unguentum sol'idum de cicuta, Hemlock plaster, (F.) Emplâtre de Ciguë. (Resinæ abiet. 960 p. Cereæ flavæ, 640 p. Picis albæ, 448 p. Ol. cicuta per decoct. præparat. 128 p. Fol. cicut. recent. 2000 p. Melt the resins, wax and oil; add the cicuta leaves, and boil; strain and add, after having dissolved it in vinegar of squills and cicuta juice, gum ammoniac. 500 p. Ph. P.) It is used as a discutient, especially to scirrhus tumours.

EMPLASTRUM CINEREUM, E Hydrargyri—e. Citrinum, Unguentum de althæa—e. Commune, E. Plumbi—e. Commune cum resinâ, E. resinâ—e. Conii, E. cicutæ.

EMPLASTRUM CUMINI, Cum' min plaster, (Cumin. semin., Carui sem., Lauri bacc., sing. ʒij, Picis aridæ, ʒij, Cere flavæ, ʒij. Melt the pitch and wax together, then add the other ingredients. Ph. L.) It is used as a warm discutient plaster.

Dissolve in a sufficient quantity of alcohol, evaporate to the consistence of honey, and mix carefully all together. Ph. P.) A discutient.

EMPLASTRUM GUMMOSUM, Emplastrum lithar'gyri cum gum'mi seu cum gummat'ibus seu e gummat'ibus resinosis seu Ox'idi Plumbi semic'it' rei gummosum, Gum plaster, Diach'ylon cum gum'mi, Yellow or Gum diach'ylon, (Emp. plumbi, p. viii, Ammoniac., Galbani, Cere flavæ, ʒā p. i. Ph. E.) Properties and uses like the last.

EMPLASTRUM HYDRAR'GYRI, Emplastr. lithar'gyri cum hydrar'gyro, E. cine'reum, Mercu'rial plaster. (F.) Emplâtre mercuriel. (Hydrarg. ʒvj, Ol. oliv., Resin. ʒā ʒij, Emplast. plumbi, ʒj. Melt the oil and resin together, and when cool rub the mercury with them till the globules disappear; then gradually add the lead plaster, previously melted, and mix all. Ph. U. S.) It is stimulant, resolvent, and discutient. Applied as a discutient to venereal and other tumours.

EMPLASTRUM HYDRAR'GYRI COMPOS'ITUM, E. de hydrar'gyro compos'itum seu de Vi'go cum mercu'rio emenda'tum, Com'pound plaster of mer'cury. (Empl. simpl. p. 1250, Cere flavæ, p. 64, Resinæ, p. 64. Melt, and before it congeals add Pulv. g. ammoniac., p. 20, Bdelium, p. 20, Oliban. p. 20, Myrrh. p. 20, Saffron, p. 12. Mix carefully. Take of Mercury, p. 380, Pure turpentine, p. 64, Liquid and Pure Storax, p. 192. Triturate in an iron mortar till the globules disappear: melt all together, and before congealing add essential oil of Lavender, p. 8. Ph. P.) The same properties as the last.

An Emplastrum de Vigo sine mercu'rio seu Vigo'nis sine mercurio, (F.) Emplâtre de Vigo was, at one time, much celebrated as an adhesive plaster or sparadrap. In the Pharmacopœia of Wirtemberg, it was directed to be formed of living frogs and living earthworms boiled with various ordinary plaster ingredients, and other substances, and was termed Emplastrum ranarum simplex seu de Ranis sine mercu'rio.

EMPLASTRUM ICHTHYCOLLE TELE INDUCTUM, see Sparadrapum adhaesivum—e. Irritans, E. lyttæ—e. Lithargyri, E. Plumbi—e. Lithargyri compositum, E. galbani compositum—e. EMPLASTRUM LYTTÆ, E. canthar'idis seu canthar'idis vesicato'rii seu mel'oës vesicatorii, E. vesicato'rium, E. epispas'ticum seu e canthar'id'ibus epispas'ticum solid'ius et tena'cius hæ'rens seu irri'tans seu rubefi'ans, Plaster of the Span'ish or blis'tering fly, Blistering Plaster, Fly Plaster. (Cantharides, in powder, ʒj, Emp. cereæ, ʒss, Adipis. præp. ʒj. Melt the plaster and lard together, and as the mixture becomes thick, on cooling, sprinkle in the flies, and mix. Ph. L.) This is the common blistering plaster. Too much heat must not be used in its preparation. It requires to remain on six or eight hours before its full effect is induced, and it acts sufficiently well, provided even a piece of thin gauze or tissue paper be placed between it and the skin, whilst absorption of the flies is thus prevented. See Blister. The Blistering Cerate of the Ph. U. S., Cera'tum Canthar'idis, is made as follows:—Cantharid in pulv. subtiliss., ʒxij, Cere flavæ, Resinæ, ʒā ʒvij, Adipis, ʒx. To the wax, resin, and lard, previously melted, add the Spanish flies, and stir the mixture constantly until cool.

The Ph. U. S. (1863) has a Cera'tum Extracti Canthar'idis, Cerate of extract of cantharides, formed by adding to an alcoholic extract of cantharides, resin, yellow wax and lard.

EMPLASTRUM LYTTÆ COMPOS'ITUM, E. canthar'idis vesicato'rii compos'itum seu mel'oës vesicato'rii compos'itum, Com'pound plaster of canthar'idis or Span'ish flies. P.*) Used in contusions and fractures as a support.

EMPLASTRUM PLUMBI, E. lithar'gyri seu commu'næ seu diach'ylon seu ox'idi plumbi semivitrei seu ex ox'ido plumbi semivitreo, Diach'ylon simplex, White Diach'ylon, Lead or Diach'ylon plaster. (Plumbi oxid. in pulv. ℥xxx, Olei oliv. ℥lvi, Aquæ q. s. Sift the oxide into the oil; add half a pint of boiling water, and boil until a plaster is formed; adding, from time to time, a little boiling water as that first added is consumed. Ph. U. S.)

A plaster of red lead, Euplas'trum e min'is, was formerly officinal. It was prepared much in the same way as Emplastrum Plumbi, but was kept on the fire and stirred, until it became black, when it was called black plaster. See Emplastrum oxidi ferri rubri.

EMPLASTRUM POLYCHRESTUM, E. resinæ.

EMPLASTRUM POTASSII IOIDIDI, Plaster of Potass'ium (Potass. iodid. ℥j, Thuris, ℥vj; Cerae, ℥vj, Ol. oliv. f℥ij. Ph. L.) This plaster, spread on leather, is applied to indolent tumours.

EMPLASTRUM RANARUM SIMPLEX, see Emplastrum hydrargyri compositum—e. de Ranis sine mercurio, Emplastrum hydrargyri compositum.

EMPLASTRUM RESINÆ, E. adhæsivum seu lithar'gyri cum resinâ seu resinatum seu nymmat'icum seu commu'næ cum resinâ seu Polychrestum seu lithar'gyricum cum resinâ pi'ci, Res'in, Adhæsive or Stick'ing plaster. (Resin, lss. Emp. plumb. lbij. Melt the plaster, with a gentle heat, add the resin, and mix. Ph. U. S.) Employed in wounds and ulcers.

Bayn'ton's adhesive plaster is made by melting one pound of lead plaster and six drachms of resin together.

EMPLASTRUM RESINOSUM, E. Resinæ—e. Robo- rans, E. Ferri (Ph. U. S.), E. oxidi ferri rubri—e. Rubeficans, E. Lyttæ.

EMPLASTRUM SAPONIS, E. saponacea, Soap plaster. (Saponis concis. ℥iv, Emplast. plumb. lbij. Mix the soap with the melted plaster, and boil to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) It is a mild discutient. Applied to tumours, corns, &c.

EMPLASTRUM SIMPLEX, E. ceræ—e. Spermatis ceti, Ceratum cetacei.

EMPLASTRUM THURIS, Frankincense plaster. (Emp. lithar'gyri, lbij, Thuris, lss, Oxid. ferri rubri. ℥ij, Ph. D.) Use:—the same as the plaster of red oxide of iron.

EMPLASTRUM VESICATORIUM, Blister, E. lyttæ—e. de Vigo cum mercurio emendatum, E. hydrargyri compositum.

EMPLATTOMENUS, (εμπατομενος, same etymon as Emplasticius.) Emphracticus.

EMPNEUMATOSIS, (εμπνευματωσις, from em, pneuma, gen. pneuros, 'air,' and osis.) Emphysema, Inspiration.

EMPOISONNEMENT, Poisoning.

EMPORIUM, (εμποριον, from em, and πορεω, 'I transport or send.') The brain was so called, of old, because there all the mental affairs are transacted.

EMPORIUM SPIRITUUM, Sensorium.

EMPOSIS, (em, and ποσις, 'drink.') Imbibition.

EMPREINTE, (em, and premere, 'to press.') Impression.

EMPRESIS, (εμπρησις, from em, and πρησις, 'burning.') Empresina.

EMPRES'MATIS, gen. Empres'matis, Empres'mus, Empres'sis, Inflammation. A genus in the class hæmatica, order phlogotica, of Good. Phlegmat'ice membrano'sæ et parynchymato'sæ, Phlogist'ici, Fe'bres contin'æ inflammato'riæ, Inflammatio inter'na, Cav'na, Inter'nal inflammatio'n.

EMPRESMOMANIA, (εμπρησμος, 'burning,' and mania.) Pyromania.

EMPRESMUS, (εμπρησμος,) Empresma.

EMPRION, (εμπριων, from em, and πριων, 'a saw,') Serrated. Galen has given this name to the pulse, when the sensation produced by the artery under the fingers is analogous to that which would be caused by the unequal teeth of a saw.

EMPROSTHOCYRTOMA, (εμπροσθεν, 'forwards,' κυρτος, 'bent,' and ομα.) Lordosis.

EMPROSTHOTONUS, Emprosthotonia, Entesia tel'amus anti'cus, Tel'amus anti'cus, (εμπροσθονος, from εμπροσθεν, 'forwards,' and τεινω, 'I stretch,' 'I extend.') A variety of tetanus, in which the body is drawn forwards by the permanent contraction of the muscles.

EMPSYCHO'SIS, (ἐμψυχωσις, (em, and ψυχή, 'life.') 'I animate,' 'I vivify.') A word formerly used for the act of animating. The union of the soul with the body.

EMPTOE, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTOICA PASSIO, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYSMA, Sputum.

EMPYE, (ἐμπεύη,) Empyema.

EMPYE'MA, gen. Empyematis, Empyë'is, Em'pyë', (ἐμπεύημα, from em, and πύω, 'pus.') Apostë'ma empye'ma. A collection of blood or pus, and, conventionally, of other fluid, in some cavity of the body, and particularly in that of the pleura. Empyema is one of the terminations of inflammation of the pleura, and is called also. Pytho'raz ve'rus, Pleurorrhœ'a purulenta, Diapye'ma, Ecpye'ma, Ecpye'is, Empyë'is seu Pyo'is pec'toris, Hydrotho'raz purulentus, Dyspnoë'a pythorac'ica, Pneumo'nia suppuratoria, Absces'is pec'toris seu Thora'cis, Pleuraposte'ma, Pleuropye'is, (F.) Empyë'te, Pyopleurite.

The Operation for empyë'ma properly means the making of an opening into the thorax for the purpose of giving issue to the matter collected in the cavity of the pleura, although it has been used for the operation required for the evacuation of any fluid from the chest, or synonymously with Paracentesis thoracis.

EMPYE'SIS, (ἐμπεύησις,) Suppuration. An eruption of phlegmonous pimples, gradually filling with a purulent fluid, and terminating in thick scabs, frequently leaving pits or scabs;—Pustulosa Eranthem. A genus in the order Ezanthematica, class Hæmatica of Good. See Empyema.

EMPYESIS OCULI, Hypopyon—e. Pectoris, Empyema—e. Variola, Variola.

EMPYOCE'LE, Em'pyocèle, (em, πύω, 'pus,' and κελύη, 'tumour,' 'hernia.') A tumour, formed by an accumulation of pus in the scrotum. Different diseases have been described under this name, such as suppuration of the testicle, empyema of the tunica vaginalis, accumulation of pus in the cavity of a hernial sac, abscesses of different kinds formed in the areolar texture of the scrotum, &c.

EMPYOM'PHALUS, (em, πύω, 'pus,' and ὀμφαλός, 'the navel.') This word has been used to designate a suppurating tumour at the umbilicus; or, at times, umbilical hernia, the sac of which is filled with blood.

EMPYREU'MA, gen. Empyreumatis, (ἐμπερεύημα, from em, and πύω, 'fire.') The burnt smell and acid taste, which volatile products—gaseous and liquid—contract, when animal or vegetable substances are decomposed by a strong heat. The cause of this smell is seated in an oil, called empyreumatic, which does not exist in the substance subjected to the operation, but is the result of its decomposition. If the empyreuma occurs when the organic substance is placed in a still with a liquid, it is owing to the solid matter touching the bottom of the vessel to which the fire is applied.

EMPYREUMAT'IC, Empyreumaticus. Belonging to empyreuma,—as an empyreumatic odour.

EM'PYRUS, (ἐμπίρος, from em, and πύω, 'fire.') Febri'itans. One who has fever.

EMPYUS, (ἐμπίυς, from em, and πύω, 'pus.') Purulent.

EMS, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Celebrated springs on the river Lahn, duchy of Nassau. They are thermal (from 83 to 115° Fahrenheit,) and carbonated salines, containing carbonic acid, bicarbonate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and are much used in gastric and intestinal affections, &c. Season from the 1st of June to the 15th of September.

EMUL'GENT, Emul'gens, (emulgere, (e, and mulgere, mulsum), 'to milk out,' 'to draw out.') A name given to the renal artery and vein, because the ancients imagined they milked, as it were, the urine from the kidneys. See Renal.

EMUL'SIFY, (F.) Émulsionner, (emulsió, and fió, 'to become.') To make or form an emulsion.

EMULSIN, see Amygdalin.

EMUL'SIO, Emul'sum, Emul'sion; same etymon as Emulgent. A pharmaceutical preparation, of a milky-white opaque appearance, which is composed of oil, divided and held in suspension in water by means of mucilage. Emulsions have been divided into the true and oily, and into the false or not oily; the latter being composed of resinous substances, balsams, or camphor, rubbed up with dilute alcohol, mucilage, or yolk of egg.

EMULSIO ACA'CIE, E. Arabica, Gum Ar'abic Emul'sion. (Nucleor. amygd. comm. ℥i, aque ℥iij, mucilag. acac. ℥ij, sacch. ℥iv. While beating the decorticated almonds with the sugar and water, add the mucilage.—Ph. E.) Used in the same cases as the next. Under the name Mistu'ra Acac'ia, Gum Ar'abic Mixture, the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia had the following. Mucilag. Acac'ie f ℥iij; Amygdal. dulc. ℥j, and ℥ij; Sacchar. ℥v; Aque Oij. (Imper. meas.) Blanch the almonds; peel them; beat to a smooth pulp first with the sugar, and then with the mucilage; add the water gradually, stirring constantly, and strain through linen or calico.

EMULSIO AMYGD'ALE, E. Sim'plex, Lac amygd'ale, Amygdalatum, Mistu'ra amygd'ale, Emul'sio sive Lac Amygdal'rum, Al'mond emul'sion, mixture or milk, (F.) Lait d'amandes. (Amygdal. dulc. ℥ss; Acac'ie in pulv. ℥ss; Sacchar. ℥ij; Aque destillat. f ℥viij. Macerate the almonds in water, and having removed their external coat, beat them with the gum Arabic and sugar, in a marble mortar, till they are thoroughly mixed; then rub the mixture with the distilled water gradually added, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a diluent and demulcent.

EMULSIO ANTIHYSTERICA, Mistura assafœtidæ—e. Arabica, Emulsió acac'ie Arabicæ.

EMULSIO CAMPHORE, E. Camphorata, Mistu'ra Camphoræ; Camphor Emul'sion. (Camphoræ ℥j, amygd. com. decortic., sacch. com. ℥ã ℥iv, aque ℥vj.—Ph. E.) A convenient form for giving camphor.

EMULSIO GUIAIACINA, Mistura guaiaci—e. Leniens, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO O'LEI AMYGDALA'RUM; Emul'sion of Oil of Al'monds, (Ol. amygd. ℥j, gum acac. pulv. ℥ij, eyrup. ℥j, aque destill. ℥iv. Mix.) A good pectoral or cough mixture.

EMULSIO O'LEI RIC'INI; Cas'tor Oil Emul'sion. (Ol ricini ℥ss, vitelli ori q. s., aque destillat. ℥j.) An aperient draught.

EMULSIO O'LEI TEREBIN'TINÆ; Emul'sion of Oil of Tur'pentine, (Ol. tereb. rect. ℥ij, sacch. alb. ℥ss, vitell. ori j, emuls. amygd. vel aque destillat. ℥vj. Mix.) In rheumatic and nephritic affections. Dose f ℥iiss.

EMULSIO OLEOSA, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO PUR'GANS CUM JALA'PÆ RESI'NA, Purg'ing Emul'sion with Res'in of Jal'ap. (Jalopæ resin. gr. xij, sacch. alb. ℥ij. Triturate for some time, and add gradually half the yolk of an egg; continue to triturate, adding by degrees emuls. simpl. ℥v, aq. flor. aurant. ℥ij.—Ph. P.)

EMULSIO PUR'GANS CUM SCAMMO'NIO; Purg'ing Emul'sion with Scammony. It is prepared like the preceding, substituting only Scammony for the Jalap.

EMULSIO SIMPLEX, E. Amygdalæ.

EMULSION, Emulsio—e. Almond, Emulsio amygdala:—e. Camphor, Emulsio Camphoræ—e. Castor oil, Emulsio olei ricini—e. Gum Arabic, Emulsio acaciæ Arabicæ—e. Huileuse, Looch ex ovo—e. of Oil of Almonds, Emulsio olei amygdalarum—e. of Oil of Turpentine, Emulsio olei terebinthinæ—e. Purgin, with resin of jalap, Emulsio purgans cum jalapæ resinâ—e. Purgin, with scammony, Emulsio purgans cum scammonio.

ÉMULSIONNER, Emulsify.

EMULSIVE, Emulsivus. An epithet given to seeds whence oil may be extracted by expression; such as almonds, apricots, peaches, hemp, rape, melons, gourds; those of the nut kind, and cucurbitaceous and cruciferous plants in general.

EMULSUM, Emulsion.

EMUNCTORIUM, Emunctory—e. Cerebri, Nasus.

EMUNCTORY, Emunctorium, (emungere (e, and mungero, munctum), 'to drain off,' 'to cleanse.') Emissarium, (F.) Emonctoire, Émissaire. Any organ whose office it is to give issue to matters which ought to be excreted. The ancients thought that some organs were more particularly destined to serve as emunctories of others: the nasal fossæ, for example, they believed to be the emunctories of the brain.

EMUNDANTIA, (e, and mundare, 'to cleanse,') Detergents.

EMYS PALUS'TRIS, (εμυς), Salt Water Terrapin. This species of turtle is found exclusively in salt or brackish waters, near the sea shore, along the whole Atlantic coast. It is much prized by the epicure, and is nutritious and sufficiently easy of digestion when dressed plain.

EN, in composition, see Em.

ENADELPHIA, (εν, and ἀδελφος, 'a brother,') Emboîtement.

ENEMA, (εναμα, pl. of εναμων, from εν, and ειμα, 'blood,') Hæmatostatica.

ENEMON, (εναμων,) Styptic.

ENÉORE'MA, gen. Enéore'matis, (εναωρημα, (from εν, and αιωρω, 'I lift up,') 'that which hangs or floats in,') (F.) Enéoreme. The Neph-elé, Nu'bes, Sublimatio, Sublime, Suspensum, S. Urinæ, Suspensæ, Nubecula or cloud which is suspended in the urine as it cools.

ENAM'EL, E. of the Teeth, (εν, and (F.) email,) seu Nitor seu Cortex seu C. striat'a seu Substantia filamentosa (of Malpighi,) S. Adamantina seu Vitrea seu Crusta adamantina Dentium, Odonth'alus, Adamantine or vitreous substance. (F.) Substance vitrée ou émaillée, Email des Dents. The substance which covers the coronæ of the teeth. The enamel is of a milky white colour, and sufficiently hard to strike fire with steel. Its surface is very smooth and polished, and it forms a thicker layer towards the part where the teeth come in contact, and becomes thinner towards the cervix. The fibres of the enamel are perpendicular to the surface of the teeth, on the ivory of which they seem planted, as it were. This gives them a velvety appearance, when examined by the microscope. The enamel has no blood vessels, and is not renewed when removed. It is formed of phosphate of lime, and a very small portion of animal matter. A delicate membrane covers the enamel—cuticle of the enamel, Nasmith's membrane; but so closely united with it, that it can be demonstrated only by the use of chlorohydric acid.

ENAMEL, CUTICLE OF THE, see Enamel.

ENANTHE'MA, gen. Enanthe'matis, (εν, and ανθεω, 'I bloom,') A name recently given to certain eruptions of the mucous membrane, as exanthema is to certain eruptions of the skin.

ENANTHESIS. Rash exanthem. Eruption of red, level, or nearly level, patches, variously figured, irregularly diffused, often confluent, and terminating in cuticular exfoliations. A genus in the order Exanthematica, class Hamatica, of Cullen, including scarlet fever, measles, &c.

ENANTHESIS ROSALIA, Scarlatina—e. Urticaria, Urticaria.

ENANTIOPATHIC, (εναντιος, 'opposite, and παθος, 'affection,') Palliative.

ENARTHRO'SIS, Inarticulatio, Ball and Sock/et-joint, (εν, and αρθρωσις, 'an articulation,') A kind of diarthrodial articulation, in which the head of a bone is received into the cavity of another, and can be moved in all directions. The joint of the os femoris with the os innominatum is one of this character.

ENARTHURUM, (εν, and αρθρον, 'a joint,') A foreign body in a joint.

ENASMA, gen. Enas'matis, (ενασμα, 'that which kindles, from εν, and αωω, 'to kindle,') Fomites.

ENCAN'THIS, (εγκανθις, from εν, and κανθος, 'the angle of the eye,') A tumour, formed by an increase in size, or a degeneration, of the caruncula lacrymalis. Any morbid growth in the inner angle of the eye.

ENCANTHIS BENIGNA. Simple exerescence of the caruncula. It commonly yields to astringent collyria.

ENCANTHIS FUNGOSA. A condition of the semilunar fold and lachrymal caruncle in which they are the seat of morbid growths.

ENCANTHIS INFLAMMATORIA. Inflammation with enlargement—swelling—of the semilunar fold and lachrymal caruncle.

ENCANTHIS MALIGNA has often a cancerous character, and requires extirpation before it has attained any considerable size.

ENCARDITIS, Endocarditis.

ENCARPUS, (εγκαρπος, from εν, and καρπος, 'fruit,') Pregnant.

ENCASING, Emboîtement.

ENCATALEPSIS, Catalepsy.

ENCATHIS'MA, gen. Encathis'matis, Semicupium. With the ancients, Encathis'ma (εγκαθισμα, from εν, and καθίζω, 'I seat upon,') meant a vapour-bath taken sitting.

ENCAUMA, gen. Encaum'atis, (εγκουμα, from εν, and καωω, 'I burn,') Epicau'mis, Epicau'sis, Encau'sis. A tumour produced by a burn. A burn. Also, an ulcer of the transparent cornea, occasioning loss of the humours.

ENCAUSIS, (εγκανθις,) Burn, Encauma, Moxibustion.

ENCAUSSE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Encausse is a village in the department of the Haute-Garonne, which possesses several saline acidulous springs.

ENCAVURE, (εν, and caver, 'to hollow,') Argema.

ENCEINTE, (sine cinctu, 'without a zone,') (Isidore,) or from εν, and cingere, cinctum, 'to surround,') Pregnant.

ENCENS, (incendere, incensum, 'to burn,') Juniperus lycia.

ENCENSIER, Rosmarinus.

ENCEPHALALGIA, (encephalon, and αλγος, 'pain,') Cephalalgia—e. Hydrocælia, Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHALIC, Encephalicus, (from encephalon.) That which is situate in the head. A name given to several parts which relate to the encephalon, as the encephalic membrane, muscles, &c.

ENCEPHALITIS, (encephalon, and itis.) This term has been used, by some nosologists, synonymously with Cephalitis and Phrenitis. By others, it has been appropriated to inflammation of the brain, in contradistinction to that of the meninges.

ENCEPHALITIS EXSUDATORIA, Hydrocephalus internus—e. Infantum, Hydrocephalus internus

—e. Inolationis, Coup-de-soieil—e. Membranosa, Meningitis—e. Peripherica, Meningitis—e. Pustulatum, Delirium tremens.

ENCEPHALIUM, (dim. of encephalon,) Cerebellum.

ENCEPHALOCELE, (Ἐνκεφαλοcele, (encephalon, and κηλη, 'a tumour') Her'nia seu Fun'gus Cer'ebr'i, H. Cerebra'lis, Craniocele, Her'nia of the Brain. This may be a congenital or accidental affection. In the former case, it is dependent upon tardy ossification of the fontanelles or some faulty conformation. In the latter, it is owing to some considerable loss of substance in the parietes of the cranium, produced by fractures, wounds with a cutting instrument, caries, the application of the trephine, &c. In slight congenital encephalocele, gentle pressure may be exerted upon the protruded portion. When the disease is of considerable extent, it is fatal. In accidental encephalocele, similar means must be used for confining the tumour, and preserving it from the action of external bodies.

ENCEPHALOCYTHESIS, (encephalon, and χυειν, 'to pour out,') Hydrocephalus internus—e. Senilis, Apoplexy, serous.

ENCEPHALODYNIA, (encephalon, and δυνη, 'pain,') Cephalalgia.

ENCEPHALOHÆMIA, (encephalon, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Cephalæmia.

ENCEPHALOHÉMIE, Cephalæmia.

ENCEPHALOID, Encephaloïdes, Ceph'aloid, Cephaloïdes, Cephalo'ma, (encephalon, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Lænnec has given the term Enceph'aloid or Cer'ebriform matter to one of the morbid substances commonly formed by scirrhous or cancerous tumours. It is either encysted, in irregular masses without cysts, or infiltrated into the texture of the diseased organ. This name was given to it in consequence of its resemblance, when fully developed, to the medullary substance of the brain. It is also called Fun'gus medullaris seu cancro'sus medullaris seu cerebra'lis, Sarco'ma medulla'rè, Spongoid inflamm'ation, Cav'cer moll'is seu medulla'ris, Carcino'ma medulla'rè seu spongiosum, Carci'nus spongiosus, Stru'na fungosa, Myelo'ma, Myelom'yces, Myelom'yces, Galactomyces, Galactospon'gus, Tel'a accidenta'lis medulla'ris, (F.) Matière cérébriforme, Carcinome mou et spongieux, Tumeur encéphaloïde ou spongieuse ou ossivore ou pulpeuse ou fongôide ou fongueuse ou spléni'forme, Fongus médullaire, Carcinôme sangiant, Cancer mou ou encéphaloïde ou médullaire ou cérébriforme; Milt'like tumour, Med'ullary sarco'ma, Cellular can'cer, Fun'goid or Hematoc'er'ebriform disease.

ENCEPHALOID TUMOUR OF THE LUNG, Phthisis, cancerous.

ENCEPHALOLOG'IA, (encephalon, and logos, 'a description,') A description of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOMALACIA, (encephalon, and μαλακια, 'softness,') Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOMALACOSIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOMALAXIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOMENINGITIS, Meningocephalitis.

ENCEPH'ALON, (εγκεφαλον, from en, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Enceph'alum, Enceph'alus, En'kerph'alum. That which is situate in the head. This name has generally been given to the brain, cerebellum, and mesocephalon. At times, it includes likewise the medulla spinalis, when it is also called the Cer'ebro-spi'nal, and Neur'al axis. Under the term Cra'nio-spi'nal axis or centre of automa'tic actions, Dr. Carpenter includes the sensory ganglia—the respiratory and stomato-gastric ganglia forming the centre of the medulla oblongata and the spinal ganglia or true spinal •ord.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA, (F.) Encéphalopathie,

(encephalon, and παθος, 'disease,') A disease of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA LITERATO'RUM. The condition of brain, supposed to be produced by over-tasking it.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA PUERPERALIS, Mania, puerperal—e. Saturnina, see Encéphalopathie saturnine.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE, Encephalopathia—e. Crapuleuse, Delirium tremens.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE SATURNINE, Encephalopathi'a Saturni'na. Encephalic disorder occasioned by the poison of lead.

ENCEPHALOPHTHISIS, (encephalon, and 'phtthisis,') see Encephalopoyosis.

ENCEPHALOPHY'MATA, pl. of Encephalophy'ma, Phymato'ses seu Strumo'ses seu Tuber'cula cer'ebr'i, (encephalon, and φυμα, gen. φυματος, 'a tumour,') Tubercles of the brain.

ENCEPHALOPYO'SIS, (encephalon, and πυω, 'pus,') Apost'e'ma seu Absces'sus seu Helco'sis cer'ebr'i. Suppuration of the brain. When accompanied with emaciation and hectic, it is called Encephalophth'osis.

ENCEPHALORACHIDIAN, Cephalospinal.

ENCEPHALORRHAGIA, (encephalon, and ραγη, 'a breaking forth,') see Apoplexy.

ENCEPHALOSCOPIA, (encephalon, and σκοπω, 'I examine,') Craniology.

ENCEPHALOSEPSIS, (encephalon, and σπειν, 'to corrupt,') Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOSIS OF THE LIVER, (encephalon, and osis,) Hepatoscirrhus.

ENCEPHALOSISMUS, (encephalon, and σεισμος, 'a shaking,') Concussion of the brain.

ENCEPHALOSTROMOSIS, (encephalon, and struma, 'scrofula,') see Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHALUM, Encephalon.

ENCEPHALUS, (εγκεφαλος,) Encephalon.

ENCEPHALUS OPISTHIUS, (εγκεφαλος οπισθιος, [οπισθιος, 'behind,'] ) Cerebellum.

ENCEROSIS, (en, and κερος, 'wax,') Inceration.

ENCHARAXIS, (εγχαραξις, from en, and χαρασσειν, 'to scarify,') Scarification.

ENCHATONNEMENT, Chatonnement.

ENCHEIRE'SIS, Encheire'sis, Enchei'ria, (εγχειρησις, from en, and χειρ, 'the hand,') Galen uses this term as a part of the title to one of his works, which treats of dissection. It means the manual treatment of any subject.

ENCHEIRIA, Encheiresis.

ENCHIFRÈNEMENT, Coryza.

ENCHIRESIS, Encheiresis.

ENCHONDROMA, gen. Enchondro'matis, (en, χόνδρος, 'a cartilage, and oma,) Chondroma.

ENCHORIONOSUS, (en, χωρος, 'a place, and νοσος, 'a disease,') Endemic.

ENCHORIUS, (εγχωριος,) Endemic.

ENCHRISTON, (εγχριστον, from en, and χυειν, 'to anoint,') Liniment.

ENCHUSA, Anchusa.

ENCHYLO'SIS, (εγκυλωσις, from εγκυλιζω, 'I press out juice,') Extraction.

ENCHYMA, gen. Enchym'atis, (εγχυμα, from en, and χυειν, 'to pour,') Infusum, Plethora.

ENCHYMO'MA, gen. Enchymo'matis, Enchymo'sis, (εγχυμομα, from en, χυω, 'I pour, and oma.) By the ancients this word was used to designate the sudden effusion of blood into the cutaneous vessels, which arises from joy, anger, or shame; in the last instance constituting blushing. It differs from echymosis in there being, in the latter, extravasation of blood into the areolar texture, and its being produced by an external cause; a contusion, for example.

ENCHYSIS, (εγχυσις,) Infusion.

ENCLAVE, (en, and (L.) cludere, 'to shut,') Wedged.

ENCLAVEMENT, see Wedged.

ENCLUME, Incus.

ENCLYDASTICUS, intus fluctuans, (εγκλυδαστικός, from εγκλύδαζομαι (en, and κλύω, 'to wash'), 'to float in.') Floating in or between;—applied to liquids, e. g., to scrum, pus, &c., contained in any cavity.

ENCLYSMA, gen. Enclys'matis, (εγκλυσμα, from en, and κλύειν, 'to wash,') Clyster.

ENCŒLIA, (εγκοιλια, from en, and κοιλια, 'the belly,') The abdominal viscera. The entrails.

ENCŒLIALGLIA, (encœlia, and αλγος, 'pain,') Tormina—e. Inflammatoria, Encœlitis.

ENCŒLITIS, Encœli'tis, Encœlialg'ia inflammato'ria, Inflammatio abdominal'is; (encœlia, and itis.) Inflammation of all the abdominal viscera.

ENCOLEO'SIS, (en, κολεως, 'a sheath,' and osis.) Invagination.

ENCOLPIS'MUS, (en, and κολπος, 'the vagina,') Injection or introduction of any thing into the vagina.

ENCOLPITIS, Col'prophlegm'hymen'itis; (en, κολπος, 'the vagina,' and itis.) Inflammation of the lining membrane of the vagina.

ENCOPE, (εγκοπη, from en, and κοπτειν, 'to cut,') Diacope, Incision.

ENCRANION, (en, and κρανιον, 'the skull,') Cerebellum.

ENCRANIS, Cerebellum.

ENCŒRE, Atramentum.

ENCYESIS, (εγκυσις, from en, and κυσις, 'pregnancy,') Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYMON, (εγκυμον, from en, and κνειν, 'to be pregnant,') Pregnancy.

ENCYMOSIA, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYSIS, (εγκυσις,') Pregnancy.

ENCYST'ED, Cyst'idē obduc'tus, Sacculat'us, Sacculat'us, Sac'cated, Sac'culated, Pouch'ed. Enclosed in a kyst or cyst, or pouch; (en, and κυστις, 'a bladder,') (F.) Encystē. An epithet given to certain tumours, or solid or fluid collections enclosed in a particular envelope or cyst. They are movable and often elastic to the touch.

ENCYS'TIS, gen. Encys'tidis, Encys'tes, Tu'mor tunica'tus seu cyst'icus, Emp'h'y'ma encys'tis. Lu'p'ia, Glan'dula Avicenn'æ, No'dus. An encysted tumour.

ENADELPHIA, (endo, and ἀδελφος, 'a brother,') see Embœtement.

ENDAN'GIUM; properly Endang'ion or Endangi'um, Membra'na vaso'rum communi's, (F.) Tunique commune de Bichat; (endo, and αγγειον, 'a vessel,') The serous or lining membrane of vessels.

ENDARTERITIS, (endo, and arter'itis 'inflammation of an artery,') Inflammation of the inner coat of an artery.

ENDEICTICUS, (ἐνδεικτικός,') Indicant.

ENDEIXIOLOGY, Endeixiolog'ia, (endeixis, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The doctrine of indications.

ENDEIXIS, (ἐνδειξις, from en, and δείκνυμι, 'to show,') Indication.

ENDEMIA, Endemic.

ENDEMIC, Endem'ical, Ende'mia, Regiona'lis mor'bus, Ende'micus; (en, and ἔθνος, 'the people,') Encho'rius, Enchorion'osus, Vernac'ulus seu Ende'mius Mor'bus, En'demy, (F.) Endémie, Maladie régionale. A disease is said to be endemic, (F.) Endémique, or to arise from endemic'ity, (F.) endémicité, when it is owing to some peculiarity in a situation or locality. Thus, ague is endemic in marshy countries; goitre at the base of lofty mountains, &c. Some authors use the term in the same sense as epidemic. We have no accurate knowledge of the emanations or other circumstances which give occasion to endemic affections. We seem to know that some emanation from marshy lands does produce intermittents: but we are ignorant of the nature of such emanation.

ENDÉMICITÉ, see Endemic.

ENDEMICITY, see Endemic.

ENDEMIOL'OGY, Endemiolog'ia, (endemic, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The doctrine of endemic diseases.

ENDÉMIQUE, Endemic.

ENDEMY, Endemic.

ENDEPIDERMIS, Epithelium.

ENDERMIC, Euder'matic, Ende'r'micus, Ende'rmat'icus, Emplas'troënde'r'mic, (F.) Endermique, (en, and ἔσμα, 'the skin,') An epithet given to the method of treating diseases by placing the therapeutical agent in contact with the skin, especially after the cuticle has been removed; Ende'r'mism, Endermis'mus, Ende'rmo'sis, Meth'odus ende'r'mica seu ende'rmat'ica, Diadermat'ria, Morphia, strychnia, &c., are often administered in this way.

ENDERMIS, see Endermic.

ENDERMISMUS, see Endermic.

ENDERMOSIS, see Endermic.

EN'DESIS, (en, and δεω, 'I bind,') A ligature, bandage, connexion. Hippocrates has so termed the ankle-joint.

ENDIVE, Cichorium endivia—e. Wild, Cichorium intybus,

ENDIVIA, Cichorium endivia.

ENDIXIS, (en, and δεικνυμι, 'to show,') Indication.

EN'DO, (ἐνδόν, 'within,') as a prefix, within.

ENDOARTITIS, (endo, and aortitis, 'inflammation of the aorta,') Inflammation of the lining membrane of the aorta.

ENDOARTERITIS, (endo, and arteritis,) see Arteritis.

ENDOBLAST, (endo, and βλαστος, 'a germ,') see Periblast.

ENDOCARDE, Endocardium.

ENDOCARD' DIAC, Endocardi'dial, Endocardi'acus. Relating to the endocardium, or to the interior of the heart; as 'endocardiac sound or murmur,'—a sound produced within the cavities of the heart, in contradistinction to exocardiac, exocardial, or extraocardial sounds or murmurs, which are induced by conditions of the external surface of the organ.

ENDOCARDITIS, Encardi'tis, Cardi'tis interna, Inflammatio superfic'iei inter'ne cor'dis, Inter'nal Cardi'tis, Inflammation of the inter'nal men'brane of the heart, (F.) Endocardite: (endo-cardium, and itis.) In this disease, the heart's action is visibly increased, and very manifest to the touch; the hand is strongly repelled, and, at moments, is sensible of a trembling vibratory motion. Percussion gives a dull sound over a surface of several inches, owing, according to Bouilland, to the inflammatory turgescence of the heart, and the engorged state of its cavities. On auscultation, a bruit de soufflet is generally heard, masking one or both sounds of the heart; and the ear is sensible of a metallic ringing with each systole of the ventricle. The pulsations are rapid as well as strong, and, with few exceptions, irregular, unequal and intermittent. The pulse, by the way, does not always indicate the force or number of the heart's contractions.

ENDOCARDIUM, (endo, and καρδια, 'the heart,') (F.) Endocarde. The membrane that lines the interior of the heart.

ENCHORION, see Chorion.

ENDOCOLITIS, (endo, colon, and itis,) Dysentery.

ENDOCYMIEN, (endo, and κυμα, 'the product of conception,') A double monster by inclusion. See Embœtement.

ENDODONTITIS, (F.) Inflammation de la Pulpe dentaire, Inflammation of the Dent'al mem'brane, (endo, οδους, gen. οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and itis.) Inflammation of the lining membrane of a tooth.

ENDOËNTERITIS. see Enteritis.

ENDOGASTRITIS, Esogastritis, (endo, and gastritis, 'inflammation of the stomach.') Inflammation of the living membrane of the stomach.

ENDOGEN, see Endogenous.

ENDOG'ENOUS, (endo, and γεννω, 'I engender.') A term first applied to plants—hence called End'ogens—in which the new woody matter is deposited within the old, and towards the centre. In the animal, cells are often formed endog'-enously, or within the cells, as in the case of the sperm vesicles.

An endog'eous an'eurism is one that originates spontaneously from lesions of the inner coat of the arteries.

ENDOLYMPH, Vitrine auditive.

ENDOMETRITIS, (endo, and metritis, 'inflammation of the uterus.') Inflammation of the lining membrane of the uterus. When accompanied with a diphtheritic exudation, it is sometimes called Endometritis croup'osa.

ENDONARTERITIS, see Arteritis.

ENDONEPHRITIS, (endo, and nephritis.) Inflammation of the lining membrane of the pelvis of the kidney.

ENDOPERICARDITIS, (F.) Endopéricardite, (endo, and pericarditis.) Inflammation of the endocardium and pericardium.

ENDOPHLEBITIS, (endo, and phlebitis.) Phlebitis. Inflammation of the inner coat of a vein.

ENDOPLAST, (endo, and πλασσειν, 'to form,') see Periplast.

ENDORMIE, (en, and dormir, 'to sleep,') Datura stramonium.

ENDOSIS, (ενδοσις, from en, and διδωμι, 'to give up,') Remission.

ENDOSKELETON, see Skeleton.

ENDOSMIC, Endosmotic.

ENDOSMOSE', Endosmo'sis, Antoth'esis, Antothism'us, Pertru'sio nut'ua, Double Imbibit'ion, (endo, and ωσμοσ, 'impulse,') A term first used by Dutrochet, to express the action by which fluids pass from without to within organic membranes. The action of two fluids on each other, when separated by a membrane. The general conditions of the phenomena are—first, that they should have an affinity for the interposed membrane; and secondly, that they should have an affinity for each other, and be miscible.

At times, endosmose is used to signify the passage of the more transmissible fluid, whilst exosmose signifies that of the least transmissible.

The rapidity with which endosmose is accomplished varies according to the nature of the septum or tissue and of the penetrating body, and to the penetrability of the tissue.

ENDOSMOT'IC, Endosmot'icus, Endos'mic, Endos'micus; same etymon. Belonging to endosmose:—as an 'endosmotic current.'

ENDOSQUELETTE, see Skeleton.

ENDOSTEITIS, (from endosteum and itis.) Inflammation of the internal periosteum.

ENDOSTEUM, (endo, and οσσειν, 'a bone,') Medullary membrane.

ENDOÛTERITIS, (endo, and uteritis,) see Metritis.

ENDUIT (F.), ([L.] indueré, 'to put upon, 'to put on,') A coat; a fur. This term is often applied to a layer of greater or less thickness which covers the surface of certain organs, and particularly of the tongue and the interior of the mouth. The enduit is designated variously, according to its appearance,—enduit bilieux, jaune, blanc, &c.—a bilious, yellow, white coat or fur, &c. It is at times owing to the evaporation of the watery portions of the secretions; at others, to a morbid condition of the secretions;—generally, to both causes combined. The tongue, in such a condition, is said to be coated or furred; sometimes, loaded.

ENDUIT CHOROÏDIEN, see Choroid.

ENDURCISSEMENT, (en, and durcir, ([L.] durus, 'hard,') 'to harden,') Induration—e. du Cerveau, Sclerencephalia—e. du Cœur, Cardiosclerosis—e. Rouge, see Hepatization—e. du Tissu cellulaire, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ENDYMA VENTRICULORUM, (ενδύμα, 'a garment,' from en, and δύειν, 'to put on,') Ependyma ventriculorum.

ENECEMA, (ενεσμα, from en, and νησμα, 'a sound,') Tinnitus aurium.

ENECIA, (ηνεσις, 'continued,') Synocha—e. Cauma, Synocha—e. Synochus, Synochus—e. Synochus Puerperarum, see Peritonitis—a. Typhus, Typhus.

EN'EMA, gen. Enem'atis, (ενεμα, from ει ημι, (εν, and ημα, 'to send in,') Clyster.

ENEMA ALOES, Clyster of Aloës. (Aloës,  $\mathfrak{J}$ ij; Potass. carbon. gr. xv; Decoct. Hordei, Oss, (Imp. meas.,) M. Ph. L.) Used in cases of ascariides and amenorrhœa.

ENEMA ANOD'YNUM, Enema O'pii; An'odyne or Starch and O'pium Clyster. (Decoct. amyli  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥iv; Tinct. opii  $\mathfrak{m}$ . xxx. M.) Exhibited in cases of severe diarrhœa or dysentery.

ENEMA ASSAFŒTIDÆ, E. Fœtidum.

ENEMA CATHART'ICUM: Cathart'ic or Purg'ing Clyster. (Olei. oliv.  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥j; Sulph. Magnes.  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥j; Mucilag. acaciæ  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥xvi. M.)

ENEMA COLOCYNTH'IDIS, Clyster of Col'o'ynth. (Ext. Colocynth.  $\mathfrak{ss}$ ; Sapon. mollis  $\mathfrak{z}$ j; Aquæ, Oj. (Imp. meas.,) M. Ph. L.) An efficient cathartic clyster.

ENEMA COMM'UNÈ; Com'mon or Domest'ic Clyster. (Water gruel or mollasses and water Oss or Oj; add a little oil or lard, and a spoonful of common salt.) Given as a cathartic enema; and, without the common salt, as an emollient.

ENEMA FŒT'IDUM, E. assafœtidæ, Fœt'id Clyster, Clyster of assafœt'ida, Mistu'ra assafœtidæ pro clysmate, Assafœt'ia tonicum et antispa'smod'icium seu in'citans et sed'ans, (F.) Lavement anti-spasmodique. (The last, with the addition of  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij of the tincture of assafœt'ida.) Given as an antispasmodic and anodyne.

ENEMA MAGNESIÆ SULPHATIS, E. Catharticum.

ENEMA NICOTIÆNÆ; E. Tabac'ci, Tobac'co Clyster. This generally consists of from half a pint to a pint of the Infusum Tabac'ci. It is employed in cases of strangulated hernia; but occasionally acts as a fatal poison when given in this way. The smoke of tobacco is sometimes thrown up the rectum to produce the same medicinal effects as the infusion.

ENEMA OPII, E. Anodynum.

ENEMA TABACI, E. Nicotianæ.

ENEMA TEREBIN'THINÆ: Tur'pentine Clyster. (Ol. tereb.  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥j. Decoct. hordei  $\mathfrak{f}$ ℥xix, one yolk of egg. Incorporate the turpentine with the yolk, then add the gruel.) To be administered in cases of ascariides, (oxyures.)

ENEPIDERM'IC, Enepiderm'icus, (en, εν, 'upon,' and δερμα, 'the skin,') An epithet given to the method of treating diseases, which consists in the application of medicines, as plasters, blisters, &c., to the skin.

ENERGIA, Action, Energy. Force.

ENERGY, Energi'a, (ενεργια, from en, and εργον, 'action,') Action. Acting power. Also, vigour; as the 'muscular energy;' the 'brain acts with energy.'

ENERVATIO, Aponeurosis, Enervation.

ENERVATION, Enervat'io, (e, and nervus, 'strength,') The act of weakening—the state of being weakened. See Debility.

ENERVATIONES TENDINÆ, Inscriptiones tendinæ musculorum.

ENERVITAS, Inertia.
 ENFANCE, Infancy.
 ENFANT, Infans—e. Légitime, see Legitimate—e. à Terme, see Foetus.
 ENFANTEMENT, Parturition.
 ENFLURE, (en, and flare, 'to blow,') Swelling, Œdema—e. des Jambes et des cuisses de la femme accouchée, Phlegmatia dolens.
 ENFONCEMENT SCAPHOÏDE, (en, and fonceur, 'to find the bottom,' fond,) Scaphoides fossa.
 ENFONCEURE, Arthrodia.
 ENFONCURE, Arthrodia.
 ENGASTRIMISME, see Engastrimyth.
 ENGASTRIMYSME, see Engastrimyth.
 ENGAS'TRIMYTH; (εγγαστρίμυθος,) Engastrimythus, Englottogastor, Gastrilogo'us, Ventriiloq'uus, Gastril'oquist, En'rycles, Eurycl'itus, Enteroman'tis, Gastroman'tis, (en, γαστήρ, 'the belly,' and μῦθος, 'I discourse,') Ventri'l'oquist. (F.) Ventriiloque, Gastriloque. One who possesses the art of modifying his natural voice, so that it seems to come from a greater or less distance, and from different directions. It was formerly believed that such persons spoke from the belly; hence their name. It is an imitative art, and is called VENTRILQUIISM; (F.) Engastrimisme, Engastrimysme.
 ENGISO'MA, Engisoma.
 ENGLURE, (en, and geler, 'to be frozen,') Chillsain.
 ENG'HIEN MONTMOR'ENCY, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Engchien-les-Bains. A hydro-sulphurous water, four leagues from Paris, near Montmorency, which is possessed of some celebrity. It contains chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonate of lime, silica, sulphohydrate of lime and magnesia, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid and nitrogen. Season, from the first of May to October.
 ENGISO'MA, gen. Engiso'matis, Eugeiso'ma, Engizo'ma, (εγγιζω, 'I approximate,') (F.) Embarrure. A species of fracture of the skull, in which a splinter passes beneath the sound portion of the bone, and compresses the brain. Also, a kind of instrument used in fractures of the clavicle.
 ENGLISH DISEASE, Rachitis.
 ENGLOTTOGASTOR, (εγγλοτογαστωρ, from en, γλῶττα, 'the tongue,' and γαστήρ, 'the stomach,') Engastrimyth.
 ENGOMPHOSIS, (εγγομφωσις,) Gomphosis.
 ENGAGEMENT, (en, and [F.] gorge, 'the throat,') An obstruction occurring in the vessels of a part, giving rise to augmentation of volume. Congestion.
 ENGAGEMENT DES MEMBRES ABDOMINAUX À LA SUITE DES COUCHES, Phlegmatia dolens—e. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia—e. Laitéux des membres abdominaux, Phlegmatia dolens.
 ENGOUEMENT (F.), Obstruct'ic, Iner'tia, (from [L.] angere, 'to choke,') Accumulation in a hollow organ, of the matters secreted by it or carried into it. There is said to be Engouement des bronches, when the mucus accumulates in the bronchia; and Engouement des intestins, when the matters which ought to pass through the intestines are detained; as in a case of strangulated hernia.
 ENGOUEMENT DES POUMONS, E. of the lungs, in Pathological Anatomy, signifies that state of the lungs, in which a mixture of air and thin fluid escapes from them when cut into.
 ENGOURDISSEMENT, Torpor.
 ENGRAFT, Graft.
 ENGRENURE, Suture.
 ENHÆMATOSIS, Hæmatosis.

ENIXA, (enitor, enixus, 'to bring forth') Puerpera.
 ENIXIO FŒTÛS, Parturition.
 ENIXUS FŒTÛS, Parturition.
 ENKEPHALON, (εγκεφαλον,) Encephalon.
 ENKYSTÉ, Encysted.
 ENKYSTEMENT, Chatoonnement.
 ENMETRITIS, see Metritis.
 ENNEAPHAR'MACUS, (εννια, 'nine,' and φαρμακον, 'a medicine,') A medicine, composed of nine simple ingredients. A pessary, so formed. The Antidotus Heraclidis, described by Galen, and some plasters by Aëtius and Celsus, are, likewise, termed enneapharmaca.
 ENNEURO'SIS, (en, and νευρον, 'nerve,') Inneurosis.
 ENORMIS, (e, and norma, 'rule,') Abnormous.
 ENORMITAS CORDIS, Heart, hypertrophy.
 ENORMON, (ενορμων,) Hor'mon, Im'petum fa'ciens, (en, and ορμω, 'I rouse,' 'excite,') A word used by Hippocrates in the same sense as vital principle is by modern physiologists.
 ENOSIS, (ενωσις, from en, and ως, 'one,') Insestion.
 ENOSTO'SIS, Entostosis, (en, οστων, 'a bone,' and οσις,) A morbid growth of bone inward—the opposite to exostosis.
 ENRAGE, (en, and rage, 'rabies,') Rabid.
 ENRHUMER, (en, and rhume, 'rheuma,') See Cold.
 ENROUEMENT, (en, and (L.) raucus, 'hoarse,') Raucedo.
 ENRYTH'MOS, (ενρυθμος, from en, and ρυθμος, 'number,') Having rhythm. An epithet applied to the pulse when its pulsations occur with some degree of order. It is opposed to Aryth'mos, and differs from Euryth'mos, which signifies 'regular.'
 ENS. A being. Paracelsus meant, by this term, the power exerted by certain beings on the body. He speaks of the Ens Dei, E. Astro'rum, E. natural'e, E. virtut'is, E. morbo'rum, E. de potentibus, spiritibus, &c. These absurd denominations suggested to some of the ancient chymists a name for certain chymical preparations. The muriate of ammonia and iron was called Ens martis; the muriate of ammonia and copper, Ens ven'eris; and Ens pri'mum was, with the alchemists, the name of a tincture which they considered possessed of the power of transmuting metals.
 ENS MARTIS, Ferrum ammoniatum—e. Veneris Boylei, Ferrum ammoniatum.
 ENSIFORM, Ensiform'is, (ensis, 'a sword,' and forma, 'form,') Sword-like.
 ENSIFORM APOPHY'SES or PROC'ESSES are the lesser alæ of the sphenoid bone.
 ENSIFORM APPEN'DIX or CAR'TILAGE is the xiphoid appendix of the sternum. See Xiphoid.
 ENSIFORMIS, Xiphoid.
 ENSISTERN'AL. Relating to the ensiform process of the sternum. Bèclard gave this name to the last osseous portion of the sternum. He also called it l'os ultimi-sternal. See Ultimosternal.
 ENSOMATO'SIS, (ενσωματωσις, from en, and σωμα, gen. σωματος, 'a body,') Incorporati'o.
 ENSTALAX'IS, (en, and σταλαζειν, 'to drop,') Instillation.
 EN'STROPHE, (en, and στροφω, 'I turn,') Inversion of a part, as of the eyelids.
 ENTAILE (F.), (en, and tailler, 'to cut,') Excis'io, Ec'copè, Ec'tomè. A deep wound made by a sharp instrument obliquely. Entailles and Taillades are, also, used to designate deep scarifications, made for the purpose of producing a speedy disengagement of any tumefied part, such, for example, as are made in the tongue in certain cases of glossitis.

ENTAMURE (F.), (en, and ταμειν, 'to cut.') A slight incision or laceration.

ENTANTHEMA, gen. Entanthe'matis, Eisanthema.

ENTASIA, (en, and ταειν, 'to stretch.') Tonic spasm—e. Articularis, Contractura—e. Loxia, Torticollis—e. Priapismus, Priapismus—e. Systemma. Cramp—e. Tetanus, Tetanus—e. Tetanus anticus, Emprosthotonus—e. Trismus, Trismus.

ENTASIS, (εντασις,) Tonic spasm.
ENTATICUS, (εντατικός,) Intensivus. A medicine which invigorates the venereal appetite.

ENTELMINTHA, (ento, and ελμινθ, gen. ελμινθος, 'a worm.') Worms.

ENTEDEMMENT, ((L) in, and tendere, 'to stretch, direct.') as intendere animum, 'to direct the mind.') Intellect.

ENTERADELPHIA, (enteron, and αδελφος, 'a brother.') See Embrùtement.

ENTERADENES, (enteron, and αδην, 'a gland.') The mucous glands of the intestines.

ENTERADENOGRAPHY, Enteradenographia, (enteron, αδην, 'gland,' and γραφη, 'a description.') A description of the intestinal glands.

ENTERADENOLOGY, Enteradenolog'ia, (enteron, αδην, 'gland,' and λογος, 'a treatise.') That part of anatomy which treats of the intestinal glands.

ENTERAËRECTASIA, (enteron, αηρ, 'air,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.') Tympanitis.

ENTERALGIA, Enterodyn'ia, (enteron, and αλγος, 'pain.') Pain in the intestines. Colic.

ENTERALGIA ACUTA, Enteritis—e. Indammatoria. Enteritis—e. Saturnia, Colica metallica.

ENTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTERANGIEMPHRAX'IS, Enterangiemphrax'is, (enteron, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and εμφρασις, 'I obstruct.') Obstruction of the vessels of the intestines.

ENTERATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia Intestino'rum, (enteron, and atrophia, 'want of nutrition.') Atrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERAUXË, (εντερον, 'intestine,' and αυξη, 'increase.') Hypertrophy of the muscular coat of the intestines.

ENTERECHE'MA, gen. Enteroche'matis, (enteron, and ηχη, ηχος, ηχημα, 'sound.') Sonitus intestinalis. The sound of the movement of the intestines, heard by the stethoscope.

ENTERECTASIS, Dilata'tio Intestino'rum, (enteron, and εκτασις, 'dilatation.') Dilatation of the intestines, as in tympanitis.

ENTERELCO'SIS, Enterhelco'sis, Enterhelco'sis, (enteron, and ελκος, 'ulceration.') Ulceration of intestines—Ulceratio intestinalis, Ulcera intestinalia.

ENTERELESIA, (enteron, and ελειν, 'to involve.') Peus.

ENTERELOSIS, Peus.

ENTEREMPHRAX'IS, Intarctus Intestino'rum, Intarctatio intestino'rum interna, (F.) Étranglement des Intestins, É. Intestinale, (enteron, and εμβρασις, 'obstruction.') Obstruction of the Intestines from accumulation of fæces or otherwise. Also, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTERENCHYTA, Enterenchytes, (enteron, ειν, and ευω, 'I pour.') Any surgical instrument for administering injections.

ENTEREPIPLOCELE, Enteröepiplocele.

ENTEREPILOMPHALOCE'LE, Enterepi-plomp'halocele, (enteron, ειπλον, 'omentum,' ομφαλος, 'navel,' and κηλη, 'rupture.') Hernia of the umbilicus, with protrusion of the omentum and intestine.

ENTERHELICOSIS, Enterelcoisis—e. Nervosa, Typhus (abdominal.)

ENTERHYPERTROPH'IA, Hypertroph'ia intestino'rum, (enteron, and hypertrophia, 'excessiva nutrition.') Hypertrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERIC, (from enteron,) Intestinal.

ENTERICA. Diseases affecting the alimentary canal. Order I., Class I. (Cælica), of Good. Also, medicines affecting the alimentary canal.

ENTERICI (MORBI), in the classification of Dr. William Farr, means bowel diseases.

ENTERICUS, (εντερικος,) Intestinal.

ENTÉRIQUE, Intestinal.

ENTÉRITE, Enteritis—e. Folliculense, see Typhus—e. Typhohémique, Typhoid fever.

ENTÉRITIS, (enteron, and itis,) Inflammation of the intestines. Empres'ma Enteritis, Intestino'rum inflammatio, Neocolitis, Chordopneus, Cum'm'a Enteritis, Enterophlog'ia, Enterophlog'osis, Colica acuta seu inflammato'ria, Peus inflammato'rius, Enteralgia acuta seu inflammato'ria, Febris intestino'rum seu ili'aca inflammato'ria, Enteropy'ra, (F.) Entérite, Inflammation des Intestins. The essential symptoms of this disease are:—violent abdominal pain, increased on pressure; with vomiting and inflammatory fever. Enteritis may affect both the peritoneal and the mucous coat of the intestines; and, in violent cases, all the coats may be implicated. The structure of the mucous and peritoneal coats is different: so are their functions in health and in disease. The inflammation of the serous coat, Seroöenteritis, Exo-enteritis, resembles that of the cellular membrane; the inflammation of the mucous coat, that of the skin. The former is usually, therefore, of a more active character. Inflammation of the mucous coat, Esoöenteritis, Endoöenteritis, Mucoöenteritis, Mucous Enteritis, Phlegmymenitis enterica, is generally attended with diarrhoea, and its pathology is identical with that of dysentery. Inflammation of the peritoneal coat is, on the other hand, generally attended with constipation.

Enteritis of the peritoneal coat, for such usually is the meaning of the word in the abstract, requires the most active treatment. Copious bleeding, followed up by a large dose of opium—and, if the symptoms be not decidedly ameliorated, repeating the bleeding and opium—warm fomentations, and blisters, are the chief agents to be relied upon. Purgatives ought not to be exhibited until the inflammation and spasm are abated by the use of the bleeding and opium. When the physician is called early, this plan will usually succeed. Sometimes, Enteritis passes into a chronic state, requiring much careful management. Broussais considered inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach and intestines as the proximate cause of the phenomena of fevers.

ENTEROBRO'SIS, Enterorrh'es'is, Perforatio Intestino'rum, (F.) Perforation des Intestins, (enteron, and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.') Perforation of the intestines.

ENTEROC'ACÉ, Dysent'ria putrida seu typhodes seu scorbutica seu maligna, (enteron, and κακος, 'evil.') Adynamic dysentery, accompanied by phenomena indicating a pseudomembranous and gangrenous state of the lining membrane of the large intestine.

ENTEROCE'LE, Enteroccele, Hernia intestinalis, (εντροκηλη, from enteron, and κηλη, 'a hernia,' tumour.') Abdominal hernia, which contains only a portion of intestine, is so called.

ENTEROCELETES, (εντροκηλητες,) Enterocel'

Ulcus (επιτεροκηλικός.) Affected with intestinal hernia.

ENTEROCEPHALOPYRA INFANTUM, (enteron, κεφαλή, 'head,' and πυρ, 'fire or fever.') Hydrocephalus Internus.

ENTEROCÆLICUS, (enteron, and κοιλία, 'the abdomen.') Relating to the cavity of the abdomen.

ENTEROCOLITIS, (F.) Entéro-colite, (enteron, and colitis, 'inflammation of the colon.') Inflammation of the small intestine and colon.

ENTEROCYSTOCELĒ, En'terocystocele, (enteron, κύστις, 'a bladder,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.') Hernia formed by the bladder and a portion of intestine.

ENTERODAR'SIS, (enteron, and δαρσις, 'skinning.') Excoriation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERODOTHIENIA, (enteron, and δόζη, 'a pustule.') Dothineritis.

ENTERODYNIA, (enteron, and οδυνη, 'pain.') Enteralgia.

ENTEROĒPIPLOCELĒ, En'teroēpiplocele, Enteroplocele, Her'nia intestina'lis omentalis, (enteron, επιπλοών, 'the omentum,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') Hernia, formed by intestine and omentum.

ENTEROĒPIPLOMPHALUS, (enteron, επιπλοών, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλός, 'the umbilicus.') Umbilical hernia, containing intestine and omentum. Almost all umbilical herniæ are of this kind.

ENTEROGRAPHY, Enterographia, (enteron, and γραφή, 'description.') The part of anatomy which describes the intestines.

ENTEROHEMORRHAGIA, Hæmatochezia.

ENTEROHELICOSIS, Enterocœcosis.

ENTEROHYDROCELĒ, En'terohydrocele, (enteron, ύδωρ, 'water,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') Intestinal hernia complicated with hydrocele.

ENTEROHYDROMPHALUS, (enteron, ύδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλός, 'the navel.') Umbilical hernia, in which the sac contains, along with a portion of intestine, a quantity of serum.

ENTEROISCHIOCELĒ, En'teroischiocele, (enteron, ισχίον, 'ischium,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') Ischia'lic her'nia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROLITHIASIS, (enteron, and λιθιασις, 'the formation of stone.') The formation of concretions in the intestines.

ENTEROLITHUS, see Calculi of the stomach and intestines—e. Bezoardus, Bezoar—e. Scybalum, Scybala.

ENTEROLOGY, Enterologia, (enteron, and λογος, 'a discourse.') The part of anatomy which treats of the intestines.

ENTEROMALACIA, Enteromalax'is, (F.) Ru-mollissement de l'Intestin, (enteron, and μαλασσω, 'I soften.') Softening of the mucous or other coats of the intestine.

ENTEROMALAXIS, Enteromalacia.

ENTEROMANTIS, (enteron, and μαντις, 'a diviner.') Engastrimyth.

ENTEROMEROCELĒ, En'teromerocele, (enteron, μηρος, 'the thigh,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') Crural hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROMESENTERIC, Enteromesenter'icus, (F.) Entéro-mésentérique. Relating to the intestine and mesentery.

ENTEROMESENTERICA FEBRIS. MM. Petit and Serres have given this name to the typhoid form of adynamic fever, in which the intestines are ulcerated, with enlargement of the corresponding mesenteric glands. See Typhus.

ENTÉROMÉSENTERITE, Tabes mesenterica—e. Mésentérite typhoïde, see Typhus.

ENTEROMORPHA COMPRES'SA, (enteron, and μορφη, 'shape.') One of the algae, used by the Sandwich Islanders as an esculent.

ENTEROMPHALOCÈLE, En'terom'phalocete, Enteromphalus.

ENTEROMPHALUS, EnteromphalocelĒ, (enteron, and ομφαλός, 'umbilicus.') Umbilical hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROMYCODORITIS, (enteron, μυκος, 'slime,' ύρα, 'skin,' and ιτις.) Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERON, (επιτερον, from εως, 'within.') Intestine.

ENTEROPARALYSIS, Enterople'gia, Paral'ysis intestino'rnm, (enteron, and παραλσις, 'paralysis.') Paralysis of the intestines.

ENTEROPARISAGOGE, (enteron, παρα, εις, 'in,' and αγω, 'to lead.') Intussusceptio.

ENTEROPATHIA, Enterop'athy, (enteron, and παθος, 'disease.') Disease of the intestines in general.

ENTEROPATHIA CANCEROSA, Enteroscirrhus, Enterosteno'sis scirr'ho'sa seu organ'ica, Enterosarco'mia, Indura'tio seu Scirr'hus seu Can'cer seu Carcino'ma Intestino'rnm, (F.) Cancer des Intestins. Cancer of the intestines.

ENTEROPERISTOLE, Enterosp'lig'ma, Her'nia incarcerata, Incarcerata'nto intestino'rnm, (enteron, and περιστελλω, 'I contract.') Constriction or obstruction of the intestines, from a cause which acts either within the abdomen, or without it, as in strangulated hernia.

ENTEROPHLOGIA, (enteron, and φλεγω, 'I inflame.') Enteritis.

ENTEROPHLOGOSIS, Enteritis.

ENTEROPHTHISIS, (enteron, and φθισις, 'consumption.') Consumption of the bowels. Consumption owing to suppuration in the intestines.

ENTEROPHYMATA, (enteron, and φυμα, 'a swelling.') Tuber'cula intestino'rnm. Tubercles of the intestines.

ENTEROPLASTY, En'teroplast'icē, (enteron, and πλασσω, 'I form.') A plastic operation for the restoration of an intestine.

ENTEROPLÉGIA, (enteron, and πληγη, 'a stroke.') Enteroparalysis.

ENTEROPYRA, (enteron, and πυρ, 'fire or fever.') Enteritis. Also, enteromesenteric fever, Entéropyrrie of Alibert.

ENTEROPYRA ASIATICA, Cholera—e. Biliosa, Fever, biliosa.

ENTERORRHAGY, Enterorrhagia.

ENTERORRHAPHIA, Enterorrhaphia.

ENTERORRHAGIA, Enteror'rhagy, Enteror'hagy, (enteron, and ραγη, 'violent rupture.') Hemorrhage, or excessive discharge from the bowels.

ENTERORRHAGIA SIMPLEX, Hæmatochezia.

ENTERORRHAGY, Enterorrhagia.

ENTERORRHAPHIA, Enteror'rhaphē, Enteroraph'ia, Enteror'r'haphy, (enteron, and ράφη, 'a suture.') Suture of the intestines, for the relief of injuries done to them.

ENTERORRHEUMA, gen. Enterorrheum'atis, Rheumatismus Intestino'rnm, (enteron, and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism.') Rheumatism of the intestines.

ENTERORRHEXIS, (enteron, and ρησσω, 'to break.') Enterobrosis.

ENTERORRHEA, (enteron, and ρεω, 'so flow.') Diarrhœa, Melœna.

ENTEROSARCOCELĒ, En'terosar'cocele, (enteron, σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.') Intestinal hernia, complicated with fleshy excrescence, or rather sarcocele.

ENTEROSARCOMIA, (enteron, and σαξ, gen. σαμκος, 'flesh.') Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSCHEOCELĒ, Enteros'cheocele, Enteroschoce'le, (enteron, οσχρον, 'the scrotum,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') Scrotal hernia consisting of intestine.

ENTEROSCIRRHUS, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSES, (επιτερον, 'intestine.') A class of disease, comprehending all those that are seated in the intestines.

ENTEROSPHIGMA, (enteron, and σφιγγω, 'to bind tightly,') Enteroperistole.

ENTEROSTENOSIS, (enteron, and στενωσις, 'stricture,') Stricture or constriction of the intestines. See Ileus.

ENTEROSTENOSIS ORGANICA, Enteropathia cancerosa—e. Scirrhusa, Enteropathia cancerosa—e. Volvulus, Ileus.

ENTEROTOME, Enterotomus, (enteron, and τέμνω, 'I cut,') A name given by J. Cloquet to an instrument for promptly opening the intestinal canal through its whole extent. It consists of a pair of scissors, one blade of which is much longer than the other, and rounded at its extremity. This is passed into the intestine.

ENTEROTOMIA, Enterotomy. In anatomy, it signifies dissection of the intestines. In surgery, it means an operation, little used, which consists in opening the intestines, in order to evacuate the fecal matters accumulated in it; for example, in certain cases of hernia, accompanied with contraction of the intestinal canal; in operations for an artificial anus, performed on the newborn, where the rectum is imperforate or not existing, &c.

ENTEROTOMY, Enterotomia.

ENTEROTYPHUS, see Typhus.

ENTEROZOA, (entero, and ζῷον, 'an animal,') Worms.

ENTERYDROCELÉ, Enterohydrocelé, (enteron, ὕδωρ, 'water,' and ῥήξις, 'rupture,') Intestinal hernia, with hydrocele.

ENTHELMINTHES, (ento, and ἔλμινθ, gen. ἔλμινθος, 'a worm,') Worms.

ENTHEOMANIA, (ενθεος, en, and θεος, 'God,') 'inspired,' and mania,) Demonomania.

ENTHET'IC, Enthet'icus, ἐνθετικός, (en, and θετικός, 'placed, introduced,') Put in, introduced.—as Euthetic diseases, Euthetici (Morbi) of Dr. William Farr, those produced by inoculation or infection.

ENTHLASIS, Enphlasis, ἰλιόσις, (en, and θλάω, 'I break,') A fracture of the cranium, with comminution, in which the bone is depressed, or has lost its level.

ENTHLASIS CRANII, Effractura Cranii.

ENTITÉ, Entity.

ENTITÉY, Ent'itas, (F.) Entité, (ens, gen. entis, 'a being,') The being or essence of anything. It has been used somewhat vaguely, in modern French medicine more especially, to signify apparently a general or essential disease, the nature and seat of which cannot be determined.

ENTO, (εντος, 'within,') In composition, within.

ENTOBLAST, (ento, and βλαστης, 'a germ,') See Cytoblast, and Molecule.

ENTOCELE, (ento, and ῥήξις, 'rupture,') Ectopia.

ENTOCELÉ LENTIS, Dislocation of the crystalline into the anterior chamber of the eye.

ENTOGONYAN'CON, Gen'u en'ruin, Calf knee, X leg, (ento, γωνί, 'the knee,' and ἄγκυρα, 'a bend,') Bending of the knees inwards. The state of being knockkneed or in-kneed. (Prov.) Knopkneed, (Sc.) Nulekneed.

ENTOHYALOID MUSCLE, see Metamorphopsia.

ENTONIA, (εντονια,) Tension, Tonic spasm.

ENTON'IC, Enton'icus, En'tonus, (en, and τῶνος, 'tone,') Having great tension or exaggerated action.

ENTONNOIR, (en, and tonne, 'a tun,') Calix, Infundibulum—e. du Ventricule moyen du Cerveau, Infundibulum of the brain.

ENTONUS, (εντονος,) Entonic.

ENTOPARASITES, Worms.

ENTOPHTHALM'IA, (ento, and ophthalmia,) Ophthalmia affecting the interior of the eye.

ENTOPHYTE, Entophyton, pl. Entophyta, (ento, and φυτόν, 'a vegetable,') A vegetable parasite, and especially one growing in the interior of the body. For the chief entophytes, see Fungus.

ENTOPHYT'IC, Entophyt'icus. Of or belonging to an entophyte,—as 'an entophytic growth.'

ENTOPTERYGOID, see Pterygoid.

ENTOP'TIC, Entop'ticus, (ento, and ὄψις, 'vision,') Relating or appertaining to the vision of objects within the organ of sight,—as of the bloodvessels of the retina.

ENTORSE, (en, and torquere, torsum 'to twist,') Sprain.

ENTOSTETHIDIA, (εντοσθηδία,) Entrails.

ENTOSTHIA, (εντοσθία,) Entrails.

ENTOSTHOBLAST, (εντοσθη, 'within,' and βλαστης, 'a germ,') See Cytoblast, and Molecule.

ENTOSTOSIS, (ento, and ὀστέον, 'a bone,') Enostosis.

ENTOTORRHŒA, (ento, and otorrhœa,) See Otorrhœa.

ENTOZŒNA, (ento, and οζῶνα,) See Ozœna.

ENTOXICISMUS, (en, and toxicum, 'a poison,') Poisoning.

ENTOXISMUS, Poisoning.

ENTOZOA, (ento, and ζῷον, 'an animal,') pl. of Entozoon, Worms.

ENTOZOAIRE, Worms.

ENTOZOARIA, Worms.

ENTOZOGENESIS, (entozoa, and γένεσις, 'generation,') Helminthiasis.

ENTOZOON, see Entozoa—e. Folliculorum, Acarus Folliculorum.

ENTRAILLES, Entrails.

ENTRAILS, Splanchn'na, Ence'lia, Viscera, Entosthid'ia, Entost'hia, Entostethid'ia, Intera'nea, (from enteralia, a word of low Latin, coming from εντερον, 'intestine,') It is used for the viscera enclosed in the splanchnic cavities, and especially for those in the abdomen; Bowels, Guts, (F.) Entrailles, Viscères. Exta has had this latter signification, but it was most frequently used by the ancients, as by Pliny, for the thoracic viscera.

ENTRAÎNEMENT, Training.

ENTRECRUISSEMENT, 'Intercrossing.'

The reciprocal passage of fibres, and especially of nerve fibres, from one side of a median line to the other.

ENTREFESSION, (entre, 'between,' and fesses, 'the buttocks,') Chafing.

ENTRICHOMA, (en, and τριχωμα, (τριχί, gen. τριχί,) 'hair,') The tarsal cartilage, and the edge of the eyelids, in which the cilia are implanted.

ENTROP'ION, Entrop'ium, (en, and τροπή, 'I turn,') Inver'sio palpebrarum, Capillit'ium, Trich'iasis, Introreceptio seu Blepharopt'io entrop'ium, Blepharolo'sis, Trich'ia, Trich'iasis. A name given to the inversion or turning inwards of the eyelids, so that the eye-lashes are directed towards the globe of the eye; irritate and inflame it, and give rise to the affection called Trich'iasis.

The contact of the hair with the surface of the eye occasions considerable irritation of the conjunctiva, which is soon followed by chemosis, ulceration of the eye, and other symptoms, such as fever, watchfulness, &c.

If the disease be entropion, as above defined, that is, dependent upon the inversion of the eyelids, it must be remedied,—either by dispersing the œdema or swelling of the eyelids, or by cutting out a portion of the skin. When the disease is dependent on a vicious direction of the cilia, they must be plucked out, and the bulbs be cauterized.

ENTROPIUM, Entropion

ENTYPOSI8, (εντυποσι8,) see Glene.

ENUCLEA'TION, Enuclea'tio, (enucleare, enucleatum, (e, and nucleus,) 'to take out a kernel.'). This term has been proposed for the operation of removing tumours, &c., without cutting into them.

The word is used in Pharmacy for the operation of shelling or removing the kernels of any nut.

ENULA CAMPANA, Inula Helenium.

ENULON, (ενουλον, from en, and ουλον, 'the gum.'). The inner part of the gums. The external part was called οκλον, and that between the teeth αμος.

ENURE'SIS, (ενουρευ, (en, and ουρευ,) 'I void the urine in bed.'). Paru'ria incont'inens, Incontinen'tia ur'i'næ, Ecre'tio Uri'næ involunta'ria seu inopportu'na, Mic'tio involunta'ria, Uraerati'a, Urorrhœ'a, Perirrhœ'a, Anischu'ria, Hyperrrœ'sis, Diam'nis, Involuntary discharge' of u'rine, Incont'inence of u'rine. This affection is most common in advanced life. It may depend on too great irritability of the bladder, or on distension, or injury of the fibres about its neck, paralysis of the organ, Cystoparal'ysis, Cystople'gia; the presence of an irregularly-shaped calculus impacted in the urethra near its commencement; rupture of the bladder and urethra; renal disease; or on pressure exerted on the bladder by the distended womb or by a tumour. It often occurs after difficult labour, but generally yields in the course of a week or ten days; the catheter being introduced twice a day in the mean time.

The treatment must of course vary according to the cause; and when the affection on which it is dependent cannot be removed, the discharge of urine may be prevented, by exerting a degree of compression on the urethra by means of appropriate instruments; or a urinary may be employed to receive the urine as it passes off.

ENVIE, (from L.) invidia. Hangnail, Malacia, Nævus—e. de Vomir, Nausea.

ENYPNION, (ενυπνιον, from en, and 'υπνι8, 'sleep.'). Somnium.

ENYSTRON, (ηνυστρον, from ανειν, 'to complete.'). Abomusus.

ENZOÏTIA, Enzooty.

ENZOÏTY, Enzoô'tia, (F.) Enzoô'tie, (en, and ζωον, 'animal.'). An endemic disease attacking animals.

EP, EPH, EPI, (επ, εφ, επι, 'upon, above.'). in composition, generally means 'augmentation, addition, increase, reciprocal action, repetition.' Hence:

EPACMAS'TICUS, (επακμαστικος, from επ, and ακμαζω, 'I increase.'). An epithet applied to fevers, Fe'bres epacmas'ticæ, whose symptoms go on augmenting in violence, from the commencement to the termination. Such fevers are, also, called Epanadidon'tes.

EPAGOGITIS, (επαγωγιον, 'prejuce,' and itis, inflammation.'). Posthitis.

EPAGOGIUM, (επαγωγιον, from επ, and αγειν, 'to draw.'). Phimosis, Prepuce.

EPANADIPLOSIS, (επαναδιπλωσι8, from επ, and αναδιπλωσι8.) Anadiplosis.

EPANALEPSIS, (επαναληψι8, from επ, and αληψι8.) Anadiplosis, Analepsia.

EPANASTASIS, (επαναστασι8, from επανιστημι, 'to cause to rise up.'). The formation of a tumour. The breaking out of an eruption—Eruptio exanthem'atis. A pustule.

EPANASTEMA, gen. Epanaste'matis, (επαναστημα.) Exanthem, Swelling.

EPANCHEMENT, (e, and πανδρε, πανειν, 'to spread.'). Effusion.

EPANESIS, (επανεισι8, from επανημι, 'to remit.'). Remission.

EPANETUS, Remittent—c. Hecticus, Hectic fever—c. Malignus flavus, Fever, yellow—c. Mitis, Remittent fever.

EPANORTHOSIS, (επ, and ανορθω, 'to make straight.'). Restauratio.

EPANTHEMA, gen. Epanthe'matis, (επ, and ανθος, 'a flower.'). Exanthem.

EPANTHISMA, gen. Epanth'omatis, Exanthem.

EPAPHÆRESIS, (επαφαιρευ, (επ, απο, and αιρευ, 'I take,') 'I take away.'). Repeti'ta subla'tio seu evacua'tio. A repeated abstraction or evacuation. It was formerly used synonymously with repeate'd blood'letting; Phlebotom'ia iteru'ta.

EPAPHRISMUS, (επ, and αφρος, 'froth.'). Despumation.

EPARMA, (επαρμα, from επ, and αιρειν, 'to use up.'). Tumour.

EPARSIS, (επαρσι8.) Tumour.

ÉPAULE, (old F.) espaule, from σπαθη, spatha, 'the scapula.'). Humerus.

EPENCRANIS, (επ, en, and κρανιον, 'the skull.'). Cerebellum.

EPENDYMA, gen. Ependym'atis, (επ, and ενδυω, (επ, and δυω,) 'I enter; hence, επενδυμα, 'an upper garment or cloak.'). Membrane.

EPENDYMA VENTRICULO'RUM, En'dyma seu Indumen'tum ventriculo'rum. The lining membrane of the ventricles of the brain, formed by a prolongation of the pia mater, and probably also of the arachnoid.

ÉPERON, (old F.) esperon, 'spur,') Hippocampus minor—é. des Artères, Spur.

ÉPERVIER, Accipiter.

ÉPERVIÈRE DES MURAILLES, Hieracium murorum.

EPH, in composition, see Ep.

EPHEBÆ'ON, (εφηβαον,) Ephēbæ'um, (εφ, and 'ηβη, 'pubes.'). The parts of generation; also, the region of the pubes, as well as the hair upon the pubes. It meant, likewise, a part of the ancient gymnasium in which the rhetoricians, philosophers, &c., disputed.

EPHEBÆUM, Mons veneris.

EPHEBÆA, or EPHE'BIA, (εφηβεια,) Pubertas. The age of puberty.

EPHEBOSYNE, (εφηβοσυνη,) Puberty.

EPHEBOTES, (εφηβοτης,) Puberty.

EPHEBUS, (εφηβος,) Pu'bens. Pu'ber, (F.) Pu'bère, Éphèbe. One who has attained the age of puberty.

EPHEDRANA, (εφεδρανα, from εφ, and ήρα, 'a seat.'). Nates.

EPHEL'CIS, (εφ, and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.'). The crust or scab of an ulcer.

ÉPHELIDE SCORBUTIQUE, Chloasma.

EPHELIDES, (εφηλιδες, from εφ, and 'ηλιος, 'the sun.'). Epichro'sis, Mac'ula sola'ris, Mac'ule s'ns'æ seu lentica'les, Vitilig'i'nes, Pha'ci, Pan'nus lentica'lis, Lentic'ula, Lenti'go, Eph'elis Lenti'go seu Lentic'ula seu à sol'e, Nigre'do à sol'e, Spilo'sis eph'elis, Æsta'tes, Eph'la, Freck'les, Sunburn, (Prov.) Ferntickles, Fantickles, Fantickles, Fernfreckles, Fanfreckles, Fornfreckles, Freckens, Murples, (F.) Taches de roussure. This term includes not only the yellow lentiginæ, which appear on persons of a fair skin, and the larger brown patches, which also arise from exposure to the direct rays of the sun, but also those large dusky patches which are very similar in appearance, but occur on other parts of the surface, that are constantly covered. See Chloasma. They do not extend farther than the skin. Many cosmetics have been recommended for their removal. Simple spirituous lotions or weak mineral acids, applied a few times in the day, are as effectual as any other means.

One, affected with freckles, is said to be freckled, (Sc.) Fairntickled, Ferntickled, (Prov.) Fann'tickled, Fant'ickled, Fernfreckled, Fornfreckled, Freckened, Murpled, (F.) Tacheté de Roussure.

EPHELIS. (εφηλίς.) see Ephelides—e. Lentigo, Ephelides—e. a Sole, Ephelides.

EPHELOTES, (εφηλοτός, from eph, and ἦλος, 'a nail.')

EPHEMERA. Διὰ ἡμέρας, (εφημερος, 'lasting a day,' from eph, and ἡμέρα, 'a day.')

EPHEMERA ANGLICA PESTILENS, Sudor anglicus—e. Britannica, Sudor anglicus—e. Maligna, Sudor anglicus—e. Mortifera, Plague—e. Pestilentialis, Plague—e. Sutoraria, Sudor anglicus.

EPHEMEROPIRA, (ephemera, and πῦρ, 'fire,' 'fever.')

EPHEMERUS, (εφημερος.) Quotidian.

EPHIALTES HYPOCHONDRIACA, (εφιάλης, from eph, and ἄλλομαι, 'to leap.') EPHIDRO'SES, (G.) Ephidrosen. A division of the family Ekzematosen, of Fuchs, comprising morbid varieties of sweating.

EPHIDRO'SIS, (εφιδρώσις, from eph, and ἵδρω, 'I sweat.')

EPHIDROSIS, Desudatio—e. Cruenta, Sudor cruentus—e. Saccharata, Sudor dulcis.

EPHIDROSIS PROFUSA, E. epontanea seu idiopathica, Hydropedesis, Excudatio, Erudatio, Hyperephidrosis, Hyperhydrosis, Hydorrrhea, Hydropedesis, (F.) Flux de Sueur. An excessive sweating. A colliquative sweat. Such copious perspirations are generally owing to debility, and require the use of tonics, especially of the mineral acids, opium, &c.

EPHIDROSIS SACCHARATA, Sudor dulcis.

EPHIPPIUM, (εφίππιον, from eph, and ἵππος, 'a horse.')

EPH'ODOS, (εφόδος, from eph, and ὁδός, 'a way,' 'a road or avenue to a place.')

EPH'RATA SPRINGS. These are in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. The water is pure; and facilities are afforded for bathing—warm and cold.

EPI, in composition, see Ep.

EPI, (old (F.) epi.) Spica.

EPIALOS, (ἑπιάλος, Hepialos, Quer'cera, Quer'quera. A name given by the ancients to fever, when the hot stage was mingled with irregular chills. Also, the cold stage of fever.

EPIALTES, (επιάλτης, from epi, and ἄλλομαι, 'to leap.')

EPIAN, Framboesia.

EPIBLEMA, gen. Epiblematie, (επιβλημα,) Ca-tablema.

EPIBOLE, (επιβολή,) Incubus.

EPIDEMIC CONSTITUTION, Epidemy—c. Disease, Epidemy—e. Influence, Epidemy.

EPIDÉMICITÉ, see Epidemy.

EPIDÉMICUS, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIOG'RAPHY, Epidemiograph'ia, (epidemy, and γραφη, 'a description.') A history or description of epidemics.

EPIDEMIOLOGY, Epidemiolog'ia, (epidemy, and λογος, 'a description.') The doctrine of epidemics.

EPIDÉMIQUE, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIUS, (επίδημος.) Epidemy.

EPIDEMY, Epidem'ic, Epidem'ia, Mor'bus publicus seu popul'aris seu epidem'icus seu epidem'ius, Epidem'ic disease, (F.) Epidémie. A disease which attacks at the same time a number of individuals, and which is referred to some particular constitutio aeris, or condition of the atmosphere, E. influence, E. constitution, with which we are utterly ignorant. It differs from endemic, the latter being owing to locality; but it is obvious, that should a particular epidemic constitution of the air—epidemic'ity, (F.) épidémicité—exist along with a favouring endemic condition, these combined influences may act in the causation of several of those serious and fatal complaints, which at times visit a district, and are never afterwards met with, or at least not until after the lapse of a considerable period.

EPIDENDRUM VANILLA, (epi, and δένδρον, 'a tree.') See Vanilla.

EPID'ERIS, (επίδερμις.) Epider'rhis, Epider'rhion, Hypod'eris, Hypoder'mis, Hypoder'rhis, (epi, and δερμα, 'a skin.') This word, with some, means the nymphæ; with others, the clitoris; with others, again, the prepuce of the clitoris.

EPIDERMA, gen. Epiderm'atis, Epidermis.

EPIDERMATIS, Epidermis.

EPIDERMEOUS, Epidermic.

EPIDERMIC, Epiderm'icus, Epiderm'al, Epiderm'al'is, Epider'meous, Epider'midal, (F.) Épidermique. Belonging or relating to the epidermis, —as EPIDERMIC CELLS, see Cell, epidermic.

EPIDERMIDAL, Epidermic.

EPIDERMIDON'OSI, Epidermidom'osi, (epidermis, and ωσος, 'disease.') Diseases of the epidermis.

EPIDERMION, Epidermis.

EPIDERMIS, gen. Epider'midis, (επίδερμις, gen. επίδερμιδος.) Epider'mion, Epider'matis, Epider'ma, Epicho'riion, Epicho'rium, Sum'mitas cut'is, Cutic'ula, C. ex'tima seu extre'ma, Cut'is ex'tima seu sum'ma seu ult'ima, Pel'lis sum'ma, Pellic'ula sum'ma seu super'ior, Lam'ina pri'ma cut'is, Oper'culum cut'is, (epi, and δερμα, 'the skin.') Scarf'skin, Cu'ticle. (F.) Surpeau, Cuticule. A transparent, dry, thin membrane, devoid of nerves and vessels, which covers all the surface of the body, except the parts that correspond to the nails. It appears to consist of minute scales, placed one above the other. Chaussier considers it to be formed and reproduced by an excretory action of the true skin; to act like a dry varnish—Stratum Cor'neum—which prevents the immediate contact of bodies with the nervous papillæ, and consequently to deaden tactile impressions, which, without its intervention, might be painful. The Epider'mic, Epider'meous, or Epider'moid System, (as Bichat called it) in general anatomy, comprises three parts. 1. External Epidermis. 2. Epidermis spread over the mucous membranes. 3. The Nails and Hair.

EPIDERMIS LINGUÆ, see Tongue.

EPIDERM'OID, Epidermo'id, (epidermis, and ειδός, 'resemblance.') Resembling the epidermis.

EPIDERRHION, (epi, and δέρμας, 'skin.') Epiteris.

EPIDERRHIS, (επίδερμις.) Clitoris, Epideris.

EPIDERRHITIS, (epiderrhis, and itis.) Clitoritis, Nymphitis.

EPIDÉSIS, (επίδεσις, from epi, and δέω, 'to bind.') Deligation, see Bandage—c. Παμοστάσια, Ligature.

EPIDESMIS, Epidesmus.

EPIDESMUM, Epidesmus.

EPIDESMUS, (επίδεσμος.) Epides'mis, Epides'mum, Superb'iga'men. A fascia, bandage or ligature, by which dressings are secured.

EPIDID'YMIS, gen. Epidi'dym'idis, (επίδιδυμις, gen. επίδιδυμιδος, from epi, and διδυμος, 'a testicle.') Epidi'dymus, Did'y'mis, Paras'tata, Testic'ulus accesso'rius, Cap'ut test'is, Cor'pus varico'sum seu varicif'or'mē test'is, Super'geni'ua'lis, (F.) Corpus variqueux ou variciforme. That which is placed upon the testicle. A small, oblong, vermiform, grayish body, lying along the superior margin of the testicle. The Epididymis is a canal formed by the union of all the seminiferous vessels folded several times upon themselves, after having traversed the Corpus Highmor'ianum. Its lower portion or tail, Auda seu globus seu caput minor, is curved upwards, and is continuous with the vas deferens; the opposite extremity is called the head, globus seu caput major. The length of this canal, folded as it is upon itself and describing numerous curvatures, is, according to Munro, 22 feet.

EPIDIDYMITIS, (epidi'dymis, and itis.) Parastatitis—e. Blennorrhagic, Hernia humoralis.

EPID'OSIS, (επίδωσις, from epi, and δίδωμι, 'to give.') Augmentation, increase. A word applied to the natural increase of the body, or to the increase of a disease.

EPID'ROMĒ, (επίδρομη.) Epidrom'ia, Epiph'ora, (epi, and δρῶω, 'I run.') An afflux or congestion of humours.

EPIDROMIA, (επίδρομια.) Epidrome.

EPIFAGUS AMERICANUS, (epi, and fagus, 'the beech.') Orobanche Virginiana—c. Virginiana, Orobanche Virginiana.

EPIGĒ'A, EPIGE'A or EPIG'I'A RE'PENS, (επιγεα, from epi, and γη, 'the earth,' from its trailing growth.) Trailing Ar'buteus, Ground Lan'rel, May'flower, called, by the Shakers, Grav'elpiant. A small, trailing plant, of the Family Ericaceæ, which grows in sandy woods, or in rocky soil, especially in the shade of pines. Its flowers appear in early spring, and exhale a rich, spicy fragrance. The leaves and stems are prepared and used like uva ursi.

EPIGASTRAL'GIA, (epigastrium, and αλγος, 'pain.') Pain at the epigastrium.

EPIGAS'TRIC, Epigas'triens, Epigas'trius, (epi, and γαστρη, 'the stomach.') This name has been given to several parts.

EPIGASTRIC AR'TERY, Ar'teria epigas'trica, Ar'tère sus-pubienne, (Ch.) It arises from the external iliac, on a level with the crural arch; sometimes by a trunk proper to it, at others by one common to it and the Obturator artery. It ascends upwards and inwards, behind the spermatic cord, follows the outer edge of the rectus abdominis muscle, and anastomoses, towards the umbilicus, with the internal mammary. The epigastric artery anastomoses, also, with the obturator, spermatic, lumbar, and intercostal vessels.

EPIGASTRIC REGION, Re'gio epigas'trica seu cardi'aca seu stomach'ica seu stomacha'lis, is the superior region of the abdomen, comprised between the false ribs on each side, and extending from the lower surface of the diaphragm to two fingers' breadth above the umbilicus. It is divided into three parts, one middle, the epigas'trium,—and two lateral, the hypochon'dria.

EPIGASTRIC VEIN follows nearly the same course as the artery.

EPIGASTRICUS, Epigastric.

EPIGASTRIUM, (επιγαστριον, same etymon as Epigastric.) The belly; the epigastric region.

EPIGASTRIUS, (επιγαστριος), Epigastric.

EPIGASTROCELE, Epigastrocele', (επιγαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia, formed by the stomach; Gas'troce'le. This name has been given more especially to hernia, which occurs towards the upper part of the linea alba or in the epigastric region, whether formed or not by the stomach.

EPIGEA, Epigæa.

EPIGENEMA, gen. Epigene'matis, (επιγενημα), Epigenesis.

EPIGENESIS, (επι, and γενεσις, 'generation,') A theory of conception, according to which the new being is created entirely anew; and receives at once from each parent the materials necessary for its formation. Also, a new formation.

EPIGENESIS, as well as Epigene'ma or Epigene'ma, is, also, applied to any symptom occurring during a disease, without changing its nature. An accessory symptom. Epiginom'enos, Superve'nientis, has a similar acceptance.

EPIGINOMENOS, (επιγινομενος, from επι, and γινομαι, 'to happen,') see Epigenesis.

EPIGLOT'TIC, Epiglot'ticus, (επι, and γλωττις, 'the glottis,') Relating to the epiglottis.

EPIGLOTTIC GLAND, Periglot'tie, Ca'ro glandulo'sa. A collection of small, glandular granula, situate in the adipose, areolar texture at the base of the anterior surface of the epiglottis, in a triangular space, bounded anteriorly by the thyrohyoid membrane and thyroid cartilage. It pours out an unctuous and mucous fluid, which lubricates the epiglottis, keeps it supple and movable, and prevents the larynx from being irritated by the constant passage of the air, in the act of respiration.

EPIGLOT'TIS, gen. Epiglot'tidis, (επιγλωττις, gen. επιγλωττιδος.) Epiglot'tic cartilage, Lig'ula, Oper'entium laryn'gis, Lin'gua Ex'igua, Lin'gua fist'ula, Sublin'guum, Superlin'gula. A fibro-cartilage, situate at the upper part of the larynx, behind the base of the tongue. Its form is oval; texture elastic; thickness greater below than above, and greater in the middle than at the sides. By its smaller extremity, which is the lower, it is attached to the thyroid cartilage; its two surfaces are covered by the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx. The special use of the epiglottis would seem to be to cover the glottis accurately at the moment of deglutition, and, thus, to assist in opposing the passage of alimentary substances into the air tubes.

EPIGLOTTITIS, (epiglottis, and itis.) Inflam'matio Epiglot'tidis, Angi'na epiglottide'a, (F.) Inflammation de l'Épiglotte. Inflammation of the epiglottis.

EPIGLOT'TUM. An instrument, mentioned by Paracelsus, for raising the eyelids. It resembled the epiglottis in shape.

EPIGLOU'TIS, (επι, and γλουτος, 'the buttocks,') The superior region of the nates.

EPIGNA'THUS, (επι, and γναθος, 'the jaw,') A double monster, in which an incomplete foetus is rooted, with its blood vessels in the palate of one more complete.

EPIGONATIS, (επιγονατις, from επι, and γονυ, 'the knee,') Patella.

EPIGONÈ, (επιγονη), Go'nè, Hyporrh'ysis, Progen'ies, Pro'les, Sob'oles, Sub'oles, (επι, and γονη, 'seed,') Offspring. Progeny. Also, Superfecundation.

EPIGONION, Foetus.

EPIGONIS, (επι, and γονυ, 'the knee,') Patella.

EPIGONON, (επι, and γονος, 'progeny,') Superfecundation.

EPIGOUNIS, (επιγουνις, from επι, and γονος, 'the knee,') Patella.

EPIGUNIS, Patella.

EPIULATION, (ε, and pilus, 'a hair,') Depilation.

ÉPILATOIRE, Depilatory.

EPILOTORIUM, Depilatory.

EPILEMP'SIS, Epilepsy.

EPILENTIA, Epilepsy.

EPILEPSY, (επιληψια, ιερη νουσος, σκληρατα νουσος), Epilep'sia, Epilep'sia, Epilemp'sis, Epilen'tia, Sypsa'sia Epilep'sia, Catalen'tia, Deciden'tia, Pas'sio cadu'ca, Heracle'us mor'bus, Hieran'osus, Deprehen'sio, Clon'os epilep'tica, Prehen'sio, Perdit'tio, Epilep'tica pas'sio, Mor'bus comit'ialis seu cadu'ca seu Hercule'us seu sa'cer seu astra'tis seu sidera'tus seu dæmoni'acus seu Sanct'i Johan'nis seu fæ'dus seu puer'i'tis seu mag'nus seu ma'jor seu interlu'nus seu divi'nus seu dæmoni'us seu son'ticus seu seleni'acus seu lumat'icus seu mensa'tis seu deif'ticus seu scelus'tus seu vitriola'tus seu viridel'us seu Sanct'i Valenti'ni, Ma'lum cadu'cum, Analep'sia, Catapto'sis, Insa'nia cadu'ca, Apoplex'tia par'tea, Cadu'ca pas'sio, Lu'æ divi'na seu deif'tica, Vit'i'um cadu'cum seu divi'nium seu Hercule'um, Fall'ing sick'ness, Fall'ing-down, (Old E.) Fallandery, (F.) Mal caduc ou divin ou Saint-Jean ou de Terre, Haut mal, Goutte caduque. (The word is derived from επιλαμβανω, 'future, επιληψω, (ep, and λαβανω, 'I seize,') 'I seize upon,') It is a cerebrospinal disease which may be idiopathic or symptomatic, spontaneous or accidental, and which occurs in paroxysms, with uncertain intervals between. These paroxysms are characterized by loss of consciousness and by convulsive motions of the muscles. Frequently, the fit attacks suddenly; at other times, it is preceded by indisposition, vertigo, and stupor. At times, before the loss of consciousness occurs, a sensation of a cold vapour is felt, hence called aur'a epilep'tica. This appears to rise in some part of the body, proceeds towards the head; and as soon as it has reached the brain the patient falls down. The ordinary duration of a fit is from 5 to 20 minutes. Sometimes it goes off in a few seconds; at others, it is protracted for hours. In all cases, there is a loss of sensation, sudden falling down, distortion of the eyes and face; countenance of a red, purple, or violet colour; grinding of the teeth; foaming at the mouth; convulsions of the limbs; difficult respiration, at times stertorous; with, sometimes, involuntary discharge of feces and urine. After the fit, the patient retains not the least recollection of what has passed, but remains, for some time, affected with headache, stupor, and lassitude.

The disease is cerebrospinal, and is generally organic; but it may be functional and symptomatic of irritation in other parts, as in the stomach, bowels, &c. The prognosis, as to ultimate recovery, is unfavourable. It does not, however, frequently destroy life, but is apt to lead to mental imbecility. Dissection has not thrown light on its pathology.

To the attacks of epilepsy which are unaccompanied by convulsions, as is sometimes the case, the French give the name Petit-mal, and Epilepsie Vertige, Cerebral Epilepsy. Fully formed epilepsy is the Grand-mal of the French, Spi'nal Epilepsy. When furious mania succeeds to a paroxysm, it is termed Ma'nia epilep'tica and Epilep'tic Deliri'um.

In the treatment, the cause must be sought after, and if possible removed. In the paroxysm, but little can be done; but as the tongue is liable to be injured by the teeth, the jaws may be kept open by putting a cork or piece of wood between them. If the fit has been brought on by indigestible food, the stomach must be cleared. It is between the paroxysms that the great effort must be made. Generally, there is considerable irritability and debility of the nervous system, and hence tonics have been found the best remedies. Of these, perhaps, the most powerful, in epilepsy, is the argenti nitras, given regularly and continued for months, if necessary. Preparations of iron, copper, and zinc, have also been used, and vegetable tonics and antispasmodics in general. Counter irritants, as blisters, moxa, &c., may be employed, if necessary, along with this course.

Unfortunately, in many cases, these means are found insufficient, and all that can be done is to palliate, removing carefully the exciting causes; such as the use of spirituous liquors, strong emotions, violent exercise, &c.; and regulating the diet.

EPILEPSY, CEREBRAL, see Epilepsy—e. Spinal, see Epilepsy.

EPILEP'TIC, (επιληπτικός), Epilep'ticus, Epilep'tus, Lunaticus, Caducans. One affected with epilepsy. Any thing relating to epilepsy; as an epilep'tic individ'ual; an epilep'tic symp'tom. Some authors also speak of epilep'tic rem'edies.

EPILEPTIFORM, Epileptoid.

EPILEP'TOID, Epileptoid'es, Epilep'tiform, Epileptiform'is, (epilepsy, and eidos, 'resemblance,') Resembling epilepsy—as 'epileptoid symptoms.'

ÉPILEUR (F.). One employed in the French hospitals to practise epilation in affections involving the hair follicles.

EPILO'BIUM ANGUSTIFOLIUM, (epi, and λοβος, 'a pod,' the flowers seeming as if on a pod.) Great Willow herb. An indigenous plant, Order, Onagraceæ, which flowers in July. The root is emollient and slightly astringent.

EPILOBIUM COLORATUM, Purple-veined Willow herb, has similar properties.

EPILOBIUM VILLOSUM, a South African plant, is used at the Cape of Good Hope as a domestic remedy for cleansing foul ulcers.

EPIM'ANES, (επιμανης, from epi, and μαινομαι, 'I am in a rage at,') A name given to a maniac when in a paroxysm.

EPIMELE'TAI, (επιμελητης, 'a care taker,' from epi, and μελω, 'I take care,') A name by which the ancient Persians called the curers of wounds, who followed their armies.

EPIMOR'IOS, (επιμοριος, 'unequal,' from epi, and μερω, 'I divide,') An epithet applied to the pulse when unequal.

ÉPINARD, ([Old F.] epinard, from épine, (L.) spina, 'a thorn or prickle,') Spinacia—é. Sauvage, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

ÉPINE, ([Old F.] épine,) Spine—é. de Cerf, Rhamnus—é. du Dos, Vertebral column—é. Gutturale, Nasal spine, inferior and posterior—é. Sphénoïdale, Sphenoidal spine—é. Vinette, Oxyacantha Galeni.

EPINEMESIS, (επινημισις, from epi, and νημο, 'to divide,') Dispensation.

EPINEPH'EOS, (επινεφελος, from epi, and νεβηλη, 'a cloud,') Nubilo'us. Presenting a cloud. Applied to the urine.

ÉPINEUX, Spinous—é. du Dos, grand, Spinalis dorsi major: see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum—é. du Dos, petit, see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum.

ÉPINGLE, ([Old F. épingle; from (L.) spinula, dim. of spina, 'a thorn,') Pin.

ÉPINIÈRE, ([Old F.] épinrière,) Spital.

EPINOTTON, (επινωτιον, from epi, and νωτος, 'the back,') Scapula.

EPINYCTIDES, pl. of epinyctis, (επινοκτις, gen. επινοκτιδος, from epi, and νοξ, gen. νοκτος, 'the night,') Eruptions which appear on the skin in the night, and disappear in the day. Pustula liv'ens et noctibus inquit'ans.

EPINYCTIS PRURIGINOSA, Urticaria.

ÉPIONE, (epi, and ων, 'ovum,') Decidua.

EPIPAROXYSMUS. A paroxysm superadded to an ordinary paroxysm.

EPIPASTUM, (επιπαστον, from epi, and πασσιν, 'to sprinkle,') Catapasma.

EPIPE'CHU, (επιπεχον, from epi, and πεχη, 'the elbow,') The upper part of the elbow. The part above the elbow.

EPIPHENOMENON, Post appa'rens, Epi-phenomenon; (same etymon as the next.) Any kind of adventitious symptom which occurs during the progress of an affection; and which is not as intimately connected with the existence of the disease as the symptoms properly so called.

EPIPHANI'A, (επιφανεια, from epi, and φανω, 'I appear,') The external appearance of the body.

EPIPHYGUS VIRGINIANA, (epi, and φηγος, 'the beech,') Oronache Virginiaana.

EPIPHENOMENON, Epihænomenon.

EPIPH'LEBUS, (επιφλεβος, from epi, and φλεβ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein,') An epithet given to those whose veins are very apparent.

EPIPHLEGIA, (epi, and φλεγω, 'I inflame,') Inflammation.

EPIPHLOGISMA, Erysipelatos inflammation.

EPIPHLOGOSIS, Hyperphlogosis.

EPIPH'ORA, (επιφορα, from epi, and φερω, 'I carry,') Dacryoma, Lacrymatio, Delacrymatio, Maacrymatio, Stillicid'ium lacrymarum, Oculus lacrymans, Weeping. (F.) Larmoiement. The watery eye;—an involuntary and constant flow of tears upon the cheek. It is almost always symptomatic of some disease of the lachrymal passages, and occurs when the tears cannot pass into the duc'tus ad nasum. Occasionally, it is owing to the tears being secreted in too great quantity; as in certain cases of ophthalmia. The treatment must of course be directed to the removal of the cause.

EPIPHORA, Epidrome, Ophthalmia—e. Alvi, Diarrhœa—e. Ptyalismus, Salivation.

EPIPHYMATA, (epi, and φυω, 'to grow,') Cutaneous diseases.

EPIPH'YSIS, (επιφυσις, same etymon.) Additamentum. Any portion of a bone, separated from the body of the bone by a cartilage, which becomes converted into bone by age. The epiph'ysis of the fœtus becomes the apoph'ysis of the adult.

EPIPHYSIS CRURIS LONGIORIS INCUDIS, Os orbiculare.

EP'IPHYTE, Epiiph'yton, pl. Epiiph'yta, (epi, and φυων, 'a plant,') Phytopar'asite. A parasite derived from the vegetable kingdom. Epiphytes are divided by Vogel into 1. Vegetations in the human fluids, as the tor'ula cerevis'ie in vomited fluids, and fecal evacuations, and the sar'cina ventriculi. 2. Vegetations on the external skin and its appendages, as in tinca favosa, mentagra, herpes tonsurans and plica polonica; and, 3. Vegetations on the mucous membrane,—as in the aphthæ of children; in the cicatrices of the mucous membrane after typhus, &c. By some, the term epiphytes is restricted to those vegetable parasites which grow on the surface of the body.

EPIPLAS'MA, gen. Epiplasm'at'is, (επιπλασμα, from επιπλασσω, (epi, and πλασσω, 'I smear,') 'I plaster,') Cataplasma. Galen uses it especially for an application of wheaten flour, boiled in hydrelæum, and applied to wounds.

EPIPLE'GIA, (επι, and πληγη, 'a stroke.') Paralysis of the upper extremities.

EPIPLERO'SIS, (επι, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.') Excessive repletion; distension.

EPIPLŌ, from επιπλου, (επι, and πλω, 'I swim or float,') in composition, 'epiploon.'

EPIPLŌCĒ, (επιπλοκη, from επι, and πλεκω, 'I twine,') Coition. Entanglement.

EPIPLŌCĒ IŒSTINA'LIS, Conglomeratio intestino'rum. Conglomeration of the intestines.

EPIPLOCE'LE, Epipl'locele, (επιπλο, and κηλη, 'tumour,') Epipl'loic hernia, Zir'balis hernia, Hernia omenta'lis, Oment'al hernia, (F.) Hernie de l'épiploon. Omental hernia is recognised—but at times with difficulty — by a soft, unequal, pasty tumour, in which no gurgling sound is heard on pressing or reducing it. It is less dangerous than hernia of the intestines.

EPIPLŌENTEROCE'LE, Epipl'loēnterocele, (επιπλο, εντερον, 'intestine,') and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia, formed by the epiploon and a portion of the intestine. It is more commonly called Enteroēpipl'locele.

EPIPLŌENTEROSCHEOCE'LE, Epipl'loēnteros'checele, Epipl'oenteroschoce'le, (επιπλο, εντερον, 'intestine,') σχαιον, 'scrotum,') and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia with omentum and intestine in the scrotum.

EPIPLŌIC, Epipl'oicus. Relating to the epiploon.

EPIPLŌIC APPENDAGES, Appendiculae pinguedinosæ.

EPIPLŌIC AR'TERIES; Arteriae Epipl'oicæ. The arterial branches, which are distributed to the epiploon, and which are given off by the gastroepiploicæ.

EPIPLŌISCHIOCE'LE, Epipl'loisch'iocele, (επιπλο, ισχιον, 'the ischium,') and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia formed by the epiploon through the ischiatic notch.

EPIPLŌÝTIS, (επιπλο, and itis.) Inflammation of the omentum; Oment'itis, Empres'ma peritonit'is omenta'lis, Oment'iti inflamma'tio, Enterit'is epipl'oit'is, Oment'e'is. A form of partial peritonitis.

EPIPLOMEROCE'LE, Epipl'lomerocele, (επιπλο, μηρος, 'the thigh,') and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Femoral hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLOMPHALOCELE, (κηλη, 'a tumour,') Epiplophalon.

EPIPLOMPHALON, Epipl'oōm'phalon, Epipl'lomphaloce'le, Hernia umbilica'lis, (επιπλο, and ομφαλος, 'the navel,') Umbilical hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLŌŌCOMIS'TES, (επιπλο, and κομιζω, 'I carry,') One who has the omentum morbidly large. Also, one labouring under epiplocele.

EPIPLŌŌN, (επιπλου,) Epipl'loum, (επι, and πλω, 'I swim or float,') Oment'tum, Re'te, Reticulum, Der'tron, Zir'bus, Gan'ganē, Gan'gamum, Operimentum intestino'rum. Sac'cus epipl'oicus, Sage'na, The Caul, (Prov.) Flick, Web. A prolongation of the peritoneum, which floats above a portion of the intestines, and is formed of two membranous layers, with vessels and fatty bands distributed through it. Anatomists have described several epiploons. The uses of the omentum are but little known. The chief one seems to be, to retain the viscera in situ, and to give passage to vessels.

EPIPLOON, Col'ic, Col'ic Oment'tum, Oment'tum col'icum, Third Epipl'loon or Oment'tum, is a duplicature of the peritoneum, situate along the ascending portion of the colon, as far as its junction with the transverse portion. It is behind the great epiploon, and fills up the angle formed by the junction of the ascending with the transverse colon. Its two laminae are separated by colic arteries and veins.

EPIPLOON, GASTROCOL'IC, Great Oment'tum, Oment'tum gastrocol'icum seu ma'jus, Peritonæ'um duplica'tum, Re'te ma'jus, Zir'bus adipi'nus, consists of an extensive duplicature, which is free and floating on the folds of the intestines. It is quadrilateral, and longer on the left side than on the right:—its base being fixed, anteriorly, to the great curvature of the stomach; and, posteriorly, to the arch of the colon. It is formed of two laminae, each consisting of two others. In this epiploon a number of vessels is distributed, and there is much fat.

EPIPLOON, GAS'TROHEPAT'IC, Les'ser Oment'tum, Oment'tum hep'atogast'ricum seu mi'nus, Membrana macilentior, is a duplicature of the peritoneum which extends transversely from the right side of the cardia to the corresponding extremity of the fissure of the liver, and downwards from this fissure to the lesser curvature of the stomach, the pylorus and duodenum. Below it is the foramen or hiatus of WINSLOW; and between its laminae are lodged the biliary and hepatic vessels. It contains but little fat. If air be blown in at the foramen of Winslow, the cav'ity or sac of the oment'tum, Sac'cus Peritonæ'i retroventricula'ris, Bur'sa omenta'lis, will be rendered perceptible.

EPIPLOON, GASTROSPLE'NIC, Oment'tum Gastrosp'le'nicum. A reflection of the peritoneum, which passes between the concave surface of the spleen and the stomach, from the cardiac orifice to near its great curvature, and which lodges the vasa brevia and splenic vessels between its laminae.

EPIPLŌSARCOM'PHALUS, (επιπλο, σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') and ομφαλος, 'navel,') Umbilical hernia, formed of indurated omentum.

EPIPLŌSCHEOCE'LE, Epipl'loscheocele, Epipl'loschoce'le, (επιπλο, σχαιον, 'the scrotum,') and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Scrotal hernia, formed by a displacement of the epiploon.

EPIPLOUM, Epiploon.

EPIPNOIA, (επιπνοια, from επι, and πνω, 'I breathe,') Afflatus.

EPIPORŌMA, gen. Epiporo'matis, (επιπρω, (επι, and πρω,) 'I harden,') A topaceous concretion which forms in the joints. The callus of fracture.

EPIR'RHOĒ, (επιρρη,) Epirrhœ'a, (επι, and ρῆω, 'I flow,') Afflux or congestion of humours.

EPIRRHŒA, (επιρροια,) Epirrhoe.

EPIRSARCIDIUM, (επι, and σαρξ, 'flesh,') Anasarca.

EPI'SCHESIS, (επισχεισις, from επισχω, 'I restrain,') Retention. A suppression of excretions.

EPISCHE'T'ICUS, (επισχειτικος,) Sistens, Re'primens, Co'hibens; 'restraining.' An agent that diminishes — secretion, for example.

EPISCHION, (επι, and ισχιον, 'ischium,') Abdomen, Pubes, Pubis os.

EPISCOPALES VALVULÆ, (from episcopus, 'a bishop,') Mitral valves.

EPISEION, (επισειον,) Pubis (os), Vulva, Labium Pudendi, Tressoria.

EPISEMA'SIA, (επισημασια, from επισημαιω, (επι, and σημα, 'a sign,') 'I afford some sign,') Sema'sia. It has been used synonymously with sign, and also with the invasion of an attack of fever. See Annotatio.

EPISI'O, (επισειον, (modern) the labium pudendi,) in composition, labium pudendi.

EPISOCELE, (επισιο, and κηλη, 'rupture,') see Hernia, vulvar.

EPISEDE'MA, (episio, and οιδημα, 'oedema,') Oedema of the labia pudendi.

EPIŠŌI'TIS, (episio, and itis.) Inflammation of the labia pudendi.

EPISION, (επισειον,) Episeion.

EPISONCUS, Episiochy'ma, (episio, and γκος, 'a tumour.') Tumor labio'drum. A swelling or tumour of the labia pudendi.

EPISIOPHYMA, gen. Episiochy'matis, (episio, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Episioncus.

EPISIORRHAG'IA, (episio, and ραγη, 'rupture,') Hemorrhage from the labia pudendi.

EPISIORRHAPHY, Episiorrhaph'ia, (from episio, and ραφη, 'suture,') An operation practised in cases of prolapsus uteri, which consists in paring the opposing surfaces of the labia pudendi, bringing them together and uniting them by suture, so as to diminish the outlet of the vulva.

EPISPA'DIA, (epi, and σπaw, 'I draw,') Hyperasp'adia. The condition of an Epispadias.

EPISPA'DIAS, Epispadiæ'ns, Anosp'adias, Anaspadiæ'ns, Hypersp'adias, Hyperapodiæ'ns, Episp'adian. The opposite to Hypospadias. One who has a preternatural opening of the urethra at the upper part of the penis.

EPISPASTICS, (επισπαστικά) Epispastica, Hel'ctica, (F.) Épispastiques; (same etymon as Epispadia.) An epithet for every medicinal substance which, when applied to the skin, excites pain, heat, and more or less redness, followed by separation of the epidermis,—which is raised up by effused serum,—or by suppuration. Now usually restricted to blisters.

EPISPASTICUM, pl. Epispastica. Blister.

ÉPISPASTIQUES, Epispastics.

EPISPHE'RIA, (epi, and σφαίρα, 'a sphere,') Some physiologists have applied this term to the different convolutions and sinuosities presented by the external surface of the brain.

EPISPLENITIS, see Splenitis.

EPISTACTIS/CHESIS, (epistaxis, and ισχειν, 'to restrain,') Arrest of bleeding from the nose.

EPISTAPHYLINI, (epi, and σταφυλη, 'the uvula,') see Azygos Muscæ.

EPIS'TASIS, Insident'ia, (επιστασις, from epi, and σπaw, 'I rest,') A substance which swims at the surface of urine. It is opposed to the hypostasis or sediment. Epistasis has also been employed synonymously with suppression.

EPIS'TATION (F.), Epistatio, Pistat'ion, Pistat'io, (e, and pistare, 'to pound,') consists in bruising in a mortar soft and parenchymatous substances.

EPISTAX'IS, (epi, and σταζω, 'I flow drop by drop,') Hæmorrhag'ia acti'ca nar'ium, H. varin'ea seu nar'ium, Epistax'is jmi'o'rnm seu arteri'osa, Hæmorrh'ial'ia, Hæmorrhinorrhag'ia, Hæmatis'mus, Rhinorrhag'ia, Stillicid'ium seu Stillat'io Sang'uinis e nar'ibus, Hæmorrhage from the pituitary mem'brane, Bleed'ing at the nose, Nose'bleed, (F.) Hæmorrhagie nasale, Saignement du nez, Hémorrhimie. This is one of the most common varieties of hemorrhage; the organization of the Schneiderian membrane being favourable to it, as the blood-vessels are but slightly supported. It does not generally flow from both nostrils, and is very apt to recur. Puberty is the period at which it is most common. Its exciting causes are:—any thing that will induce local congestions, as running, coughing, blowing the nose, &c., provided there is a disposition to it. A common case of epistaxis requires but little treatment, especially if in a young person. Light diet and a dose or two of the sulphate of magnesia will be sufficient. In more severe attacks, cold and astringent washes of alum, sulphate of zinc, weak sulphuric acid, or creasote, may be used, and the nostrils be plugged anteriorly; but if the bleeding goes on posteriorly, —Choanorrhag'ia—the posterior nares must be plugged likewise,—the patient being kept with the head raised, and on dry diet. The flow of blood has been arrested by directing the patient to stand up with his head elevated, compressing the nostril whence the blood flows with the finger, raising the corresponding arm perpendicularly, and holding it in this position for about two minutes. A less vigorous circulation through the carotids appears to result from the increased force required to carry on the circulation through the upper extremity when raised. To prevent the recurrence, strict diet must be inculcated.

EPISTER'NAL, Episterna'lis, (επι, and στερνον, 'the sternum,') An epithet applied to two bones which form part of the sternum, and are situate upon its superior and lateral part. In the young subject, they are attached to the sternum by a synovial membrane, and a fibrous capsule. They have somewhat the appearance of the pisiform bones, but are of a greater size.

According to Professor Owen, the piece of a segment of an articulate animal, which is immediately above the middle inferior piece or sternum.

EPISTHOT'ONUS, (επισθεν, 'forwards,') and τεινω, 'I extend,') A spasm of the muscles, drawing the body forwards. The word empisthotonus is more commonly employed.

EPISTROPHE, (επιστροφή, from epi, and στρεφω, 'I turn,') Relapse.

EPISTROPHEUS, (επιστροφεις,) Axis.

EPISTROPHUS, (επιστροφος,) Axis.

EPISY'NAN'CHE, (epi, and συνωche or cynanche,) Episyngang'na. A Greek word, used by a modern writer for spasm of the pharynx, by which deglutition is prevented, and the solid and liquid food driven back towards the mouth or nasal fossæ.

EPISYNTHET'IC, Episynthet'icus, (επισυντηθιμη, (επι, συν, and τηθημι,) 'to collect, accumulate,') The name of a medical sect, whose object it was to reconcile the principles of the Methodists with those of the Empirics and Dogmatics. Leonides of Alexandria seems to have been one of the first partisans of this sect; of which we know little.

EPIT'ASIS, (επιτασις, from epi, and τεινειν, 'to extend,') The period of violence of a fever, (Feb'ris inten'sio,) attack or paroxysm; sometimes it is used in the same sense as epistasis, for 'suppression.'

EPITHELIUM, Epithelium.

EPITHE'LIAL, Epithelia'lis, (epi, and θηλη, 'a nipple,') Appertaining or relating to the epithelium,—as epithelial cells, and scales.

EPITHE'LIAL CAN'CE'R, Can'cro'id of the skin, Epitheli'oma, Carcino'na epitheli'o'des, is a morbid growth of epithelial cells; forming an epithelial tumour, which, by some, is regarded as carcinoma. See Canceroid.

EPITHELIOMA, gen. Epitheli'o'matis, (epithelium, and ωμα,) Epithelial cancer.

EPITHE'LIUM, Epithelium, Epithelia, Epithelia, Endepiderm'is. The thin layer of epidermis, which covers parts deprived of derma properly so called,—as the nipple, mucous membranes, lips, &c. Modern histological researches have shown that it exists, in different forms, pavement, cyll'inder, and vibratile or ciliated epithelium. Tes'selated pavement, scaly lam'ellar tub'ular, or flat'tened epithel'ium, Epithel'ium polyed'ricum, and E. lamello'sum, (F.) Épithélium pavimentæ, covers the serous and synovial membranes, the lining of blood-vessels, and the mucous membranes, except where cylinder epithelium exists. It is spread over the mouth, pharynx and œsophagus, conjunctiva, vagina, and entrance of the female urethra. Cyll'inder, column'ar or prismat'ic epithel'ium, Epithel'ium cylind'ricum, (F.) Épithélium cylindrique is found in the intestinal canal, beyond the cardiac orifice of the stomach; in the larger ducts of the salivary glands; in the ductus communis choledochus, prostate, Cowper's glands; vesiculæ seminales, vas deferens, tubuli uriniferi, and urethra of the male; and lines the urinary passages of the female, from the orifice of the urethra to the beginning of the tubuli ariferi of the kidneys. In all these situations, it is continuous with tessellated epithelium, which lines the more delicate ducts of the various glands. For the uses of the eriated epithelium, Epithelium villosus, see Cilia.

Mr. Bowman has applied the term spheroidal to a variety of epithelium, the cells of which, for the most part, retain their primitive roundness; or, being flattened where they touch, acquire a polyhedral figure. At times, these show a disposition to pass into the columnar, or the tessellated variety; and, hence, this form has been called the transitional. The spheroidal epithelium is found in the urinary passages, where it succeeds the columnar epithelium of the urethra at the internal orifice of that canal, and lines the whole of the bladder, ureters and pelvis of the kidneys. It is found, also, in the excretory ducts of the mammary, perspiratory, and of many mucous, glands; and a modification of it lines the inmost secreting cavities or commencing ducts of glands generally.

EPITHEM, Epithema or Epithema, gen. Epithematis, (επιθεμα or επιθεμα, from επι, and τιθημι, 'to place,') This term is applied to topical applications, which cannot be classed either under ointments or plasters. Three sorts of epithems have been usually distinguished,—the liquid, dry, and soft, which comprise fomentations, bags filled with dry substances, and cathylasms.

EPITHEISIS, (επιθεσις.) (Same etymon.) The rectification of crooked limbs by means of instruments.

EPITHYMÆ, (επι, and θεωσ, 'desire,') Morbid desires or longings.

EPITHYMIAMA, gen. Epithymiomatis, (επιθυμιωμα, from επι, and θυμιω, 'fumigation,') Fumigation.

EPITHYMIUM, (επι, and θυμος, 'thyme,') Cuscuta epithymum—e. Officinarium, Cuscuta Europæa.

EPITROCHLEA, (επι, and τροχληα, 'a pulley,') (F.) Epitrochlée. That which is situate above a pulley. Chaussier gives this name to the unequal, round protuberance situate on the inside of the inferior extremity of the humerus above its articular trochlea. It is the part usually called the inner or lesser condyle of the humerus. From it originate several muscles of the forearm, to which it has given part of their names, according to the system of Chaussier.

EPITROCHLO-CARPI-PALMAIRE, Palmaris longus—ε. Cubito-carpium, see Cubital muscles—ε. Métacarpium, Palmaris magnus—ε. Phalanginien communis, Flexor sublimis perforatus—ε. Radialis, Pronator radii teres.

EPIZO'A, pl. of Epizo'on, (F.) Epizoaires. Ectoparasites, (επι, and ζωω, 'an animal,') Parasitic animals, which infest the surface of the body, or the common integument.

EPIZOÛ'TIA, Epizo'oty, Epizo'otie, (F.) Epizo'otie. (Same etymon.) A disease which reigns amongst animals. It corresponds, in the veterinary art, to epidemic in medicine.

EPIZOÛ'TIC, Epizo'otieus. Relating or appertaining to an epizo'oty,—as an 'epizo'otic aptha.' An Epizo'oty.

EPÛCHE, (επι, from επι, and εχω, 'to have or to hold,') Doubt, suspension of judgment—Suspensio sententia. Sometimes employed in the same sense as epichestis or suppression.

EPOCHETEUSIS, (from επι, and τεωω, 'to turn water from its course,') Derivation.

EPODE, (επωδη, from επι, and ωδη, 'a song,') Incantation.

EPO'MIS, (επωμις,) Superhumeralis, (ep, and ωμος, 'the shoulder,') The acromion. The upper part of the shoulder.

EPOMPHALICUM, Epomphalium.

EPOMPHALION, (επομφαλιον,) Uterus.

EPOMPHAL'LIUM, Epomphal'licum, (ep, and ομφαλος, 'the navel,') A medicine which, when placed upon the umbilicus, moves the belly.

ÉPONGE, old (F.) Eponge, Spongia—ε. d'Eplautier, Bedegar.

ÉPOQUES, ('periods,') Menses.

EPOSTOMA, (ep, osteon, and oma) Exostosis.

EPOSTOSIS, (ep, osteon, and osis,) Exostosis.

ÉPREINTE, (e, and premere, 'to press,') Tenesmus.

EPSEMA, gen. Epse'matis, (εψημα, from εψω, 'to boil,') Decoction.

EPESES, Decoction, Elixatio.

EP'SOM, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Epsom is a town in Surrey, about 15 miles from London. The water is a simple saline;—consisting chiefly of sulphate of magnesia, which has consequently received the name of Epsom salts, though no longer prepared from the Epsom water.

ÉPUISEMENT, (ε, and puiser, 'to draw,') Exhaustion.

EPUL'IS, (επουλις, from ep, and ουλω, 'the gum,') Odon'tia exeres'cens, Sarco'ma epul'is, Ulon'cus, Exeres'centia gingiv'ca. (F.) Épulis, Épulis. An excrescence on the gum, sometimes ending in cancer.

EPULOSIS, (επουλωσις, from ep, and ουλω, 'to cicatrize,') Cicatrization.

EPULOTICA, (επουλωτικα,) Cicatrifiantia.

ÉPURGE, (e, and purgare, 'to purge,') Euphorbia lathyris.

ÉQUAL, Equal'is. An epithet applied particularly to the pulse and to respiration. The pulse and respiration are equal, when the pulsations and inspirations which succeed each other are alike in every respect.

EQUILIB'RIMUM, (æquus, 'equal, and librare, 'to weigh,') In medicine, this word is sometimes used to designate that state of organs, fluids and forces, which constitutes health.

EQUINA CAUDA, see Cauda Equina.

EQU'NIA, (equinus, 'belonging to a horse,') Gland'ers, (F.) Morve. A dangerous contagious disorder, accompanied by a pustular eruption, which arises from inoculation with certain diseased fluids generated in the horse, the ass and the mule. Two forms are met with.—E. ut'is, contracted from horses affected with grease, and E. glandulo'sa, a dangerous and commonly fatal disease communicated to man, either in the acute or chronic form, from the glandered horse. The veterinary surgeons make two varieties of the disease in the horse—Gland'ers, Mal'ia, Malios'mus, Mal'lie, Malis, Malleus; and Farcy gland'ers, Farcin'o'ma, Farcin'men, Mollens farcimino'sus, Morb'us farcimino'sus, Cachex'ia lymphat'ica farcimino'sa, (F.) Morve farcin'euse, Farcin;—the former affecting the pituitary membrane and occasioning a profuse discharge from the nostrils, with pustular eruptions or small tumours, which soon suppurate and ulcerate, being attended by symptoms of malignant fever and by gangrene of various parts;—the latter being the same disease, but appearing in the shape of small tumours about the legs, lips, face, neck, &c. of the horse; sometimes very painful, suppurating, and degenerating into foul ulcers. They are often seen together.

The mild cases require little treatment but rest; the more severe generally resist all remedies.

EQUISETUM ARVENSE, (equus, 'a horse, and seta, 'a bristle,') see Hippuris vulgaris—e. Minus, Hippuris vulgaris.

EQUITA'TION, Equitatio, Hippe'ia, Hippa'sia, Hippen'sis, (equitare, equitatum, 'to ride on horseback,') Horseback exercise. A kind of exercise, advisable in many diseases, although improper in others — in uterine affections, for instance. It has been much recommended in phthisis pulmonalis. It is less fatiguing than walking, and consequently more available in disease. But to prevent disease, where much exercise is required, the latter is preferable.

EQUIV'OROUS, Equiv'orus, Hippoph'agous, (equus, 'a horse,' and voro, 'I devour.') Feeding or subsisting on horseflesh.

EQUIV'OCAL, Equiv'ocus, (æquus, 'equal,' and vox, gen. vocis, 'voice.') Those symptoms are occasionally so denominated which belong to several diseases. Generation is said by some to be 'equivocal,' when it is, or seems to be, spontaneous. See Generation.

EQUUS, ('a horse,') Hippus.

ER, in composition, see En.

ÉRABLE, Acer saccharinum.

ERADICA'TION, Eradicatio, (e, and radix, gen. radicis, 'a root.') The act of rooting out, or completely removing a disease.

ERADICATIVE, Eradicans. Any thing possessed of the power of completely rooting out a disease.

ÉRALLEMENT DES PAUPIÈRES, ([L.] e, and radix, 'a ray,') Ectropion.

EROLE, Blister.

EREBINTHUS, Acer arietinum.

ERECTEUR DU PÉNIS, Ischio-cavernosus.

EREC'THITES HIERACIFOLIA, (after Erechthos [?]), Senecio hieracifolius, Fireweed. An indigenous plant, Order, Compositæ, which flowers from July to September. It is said to be an acrid tonic, and astringent, and in large doses emetic.

EREC'TILE TISSUE, Te'la seu Textus erectilis, (erigere, erectum, (e, and rigere,) 'to erect,' 'to become erect,') A tissue, whose principal character is, to be susceptible of dilatation, i. e. of turgescence and increase of size. It is formed of a collection of arteries and veins, intermixed with nervous filaments; the veins varicose, and contained in spaces formed by trabecule of fibrous tissue, being prolongations from the fibrous envelope. Smooth muscular fibres have been detected in it. This tissue exists in the corpora cavernosa of the penis and clitoris, at the lower and inner surface of the vagina, in the spongy part of the urethra, the lips, nipples, iris, &c. Sometimes it is developed accidentally, and constitutes a kind of organic transformation.

EREC'TION, Erectio, Arrectio, Anortho'sis. The state of a part, in which, from having been soft, it becomes stiff, hard and swollen by the accumulation of blood in the areolæ of its tissue, as in the case of the penis—Sty'na, Sty'sis.

ERECTOR CLITORIDIS, Ischio-cavernosus—e. Penis, Ischio-cavernosus—e. Spinae, Sacro-pinalis.

EREMACAUS'IS, (F.) Érémacausie, (ηρημα, 'slowly,' and καυσis, 'combustion,') A term applied by Liebig to the slow combustion, oxidation, or decay of organic matters in the air.

EREMIA, (ηρημα, 'rest,') Acesinesia.

ÉRÉSIPÈLE, Erysipelas.

ERETHYLITICUM, (ερυνδος, 'redness,' and λυσις, 'solution,') Spanæmic.

ERETHISM, Erethismus, Erethis'ia, Irritamentum, Irritatio, (F.) Érêthisme, Érêthisme, (ερεθισμ., 'I irritate,') Irritation. Augmentation of the vital phenomena in any organ or tissue. Or'gasm. Under this name, Mr. Pearson has described a state of the constitution produced by mercury acting on it as a poison. He calls it Mercurialis Erethism or Erethismus. It is characterized by great depression of strength; anxiety about the præcordia; irregular action of the heart; frequent sighing; tremors; small, quick, sometimes intermitting pulse; occasional vomiting; pale, contracted countenance, and sense of coldness; but the tongue is seldom furred, nor are the vital and natural functions much disturbed. In this state any sudden exertion may prove fatal.

ERETHISMA, gen. Erethism'atia, (ερεθισμα,) Rubefacient.

ERETHISMUS, (ερεθισμος,) Erethism, Irritation—e. Ebriosorum, Delirium tremens—e. Hydrophobia, Hydrophobia—e. Onciodynia, Incurbus, Paroniria—e. Simplex, Fidgets.

ERETHISTICUS, (ερεθιστικος,) Erethiticus, Rubefacient.

ERETHIT'IC, Erethit'icus, Erethis'ticus. Belonging or relating to erethism— as "erethitic phenomena," or phenomena of irritation.

ÉRÉTISME, Erethism.

EREUGMOS, (ερευγμος,) Eruetation.

EREUXIS, (ερευξις,) Eruetation, Flatulence.

ERGASTERION, (εργαστηριον, from εργον, 'work,') Laboratory—e. Spiritus, Pulmo.

ER'GOT, ([F.] ergot, 'a spur,') Er'gota or Ergot'a, Secal'è cornu'tum seu water'num seu tur'gidum seu temulentum seu lucul'rians seu clara'tum, Clau'rus secal'inus seu secal'is seu Silig'iniis, Spermo'dia clau'rus, Ma'ter secal'is, Cal'car, Secal'is ma'ter, Ustila'go, Fru'mentum cornu'tum seu cornicula'tum seu lucul'rians seu tur'gidum seu temulentum, Brizoc'erus [?], Melanophy'na, Spur'ced or Horn'ed Rye, Spur, Horn'seed, Cock'spur rye, Cock'spur, (F.) Seigle ergoté ou cornu ou cornouin ou à Éperon ou Ergotisé, Blé cornu, Ergot ou Clou ou Mère de seigle, Bled avorté ou farouche, Faux seigle. Ergot is generally considered to be the result of a disease in rye—Secal'è cereal'è—occurring most frequently when a hot summer succeeds a rainy spring. Decandolle, however, regards it as a parasitic fungus, and calls it Sclero'tium clau'rus; whilst Leveillé esteems it to be a fungus giving a coating to the diseased grain; the medical virtues residing in the coating. This parasitic fungus he calls Sphaec'lia seg'etum. More recently, it has been maintained, that it is a diseased state of the grain occasioned by the growth of a fungus not previously detected, to which the names Ergot'ia abortans seu abortifaciens, O'dinum abortifaciens, Ergotmould, have been given. It is found projecting from among the leaves of the spike or ear, and is a long, crooked excrescence, resembling the spur of a cock, pointed at its extremities, of a dark brown colour externally, and white within.

Ergot has been long used in Germany to act on the uterus, as its names Mutterkorn and Gebärpulver ('womb-grain,' pul'vis partu'riens, pul'vis ad partum) testify. Upwards of fifty years ago, it was recommended in this country for accelerating parturition; and since that period, numerous testimonials have been offered in its favour. Half a drachm of the powder is gently boiled in half a pint of water, and one-third part given every 20 minutes, until proper pains begin. Some recommend the clear watery infusion; others advise the powder; others the oil; and others the wine. It is obvious that, in many cases, the uterine efforts would return in the period which would necessarily elapse in the administration of ergot; so that several of the cases, at least, of reputed efficacy, may not have been dependent upon the assigned agent. Ergot also possesses, it is affirmed, narcotic virtues, which have rendered it useful in hemorrhagic and other affections of excitement.

Bread, made of spurred rye, has been attended with the effects described under ERGOTISM.

ERGOT, ('a spur,') Hippocampus minor—e. de Seigle, Ergot.

ERGOTMOULD, see Ergot.

ERGOTA, Ergot.

ERGOTÆTIA ABORTANS, (ergot. and aria. 'cause,' see Ergot—e. Abortifaciens, see Ergot.

ER'GOTIN, Ergoti'nus, Extractum Ergotæ, Extract of Ergot. (F.) Ergotine, Extrait hémostatique de Boujean. The extract of ergot has been found an excellent hemastatic in the dose of two grains several times a day. It has also been used externally.

ERGOTINE, Ergotin.

ER'GOTISM, Ergoti'smus, from ergota, 'ergot.' Morb'us cereal'is. Poisoning by ergot. An affection produced by the use of spurred rye. At times, the symptoms are limited to vertigo, spasms, and convulsions. See Convulsio cerealis. Most commonly, there is torpor with numbness of the hands and feet, which waste away, lose sensation and the power of motion, and separate from the body by dry gangrene.—Ergoti'smus Sphacelo'eus, Sphac'elus cereal'is, Necro'sis cereal'is, Gangræ'na ustilagin'ea, Necro'sis ustilagin'ea, Ergot or Mil'dew mortification, (F.) Ergotisme gangrèneux, Gangrène des Salinois, Mal de Solignr.

ERGOTISME CONVULSIVE, Convulsio cerealis.

ERGOTISMUS, Ergotism—e. Spasmodicus, Convulsio cerealis—e. Sphacelosus, Ergotism.

ER'ICA VULGAR'IS, (αισκη) Calli'na vulgar'is seu Eri'ca, Common Heath, (Sc.) Heath'er, (F.) Bruyère vulgaire. This has been regarded as diuretic and diaphoretic.

ERIGERON AMBIGUUM, (επιεργον, from επ, 'spring,' and γρον, 'an old man,' owing to the hoary appearance of some of the vernal species,) E. Philadelphiaicum—e. Annum, see E. Canadense.

ERIG'ERON BELLIDIFOLIUM, Robin's plantain, Ro'sy Bet'ty. An indigenous plant of the Composite family; flowering in May. It is said to possess properties like those of E. Philadelphiaicum.

ERIGERON CANADENS'Ë, Can'ada Flea'bane, Pride'weed, Horse'weed, But'terweed, is considered to be allied in properties to E. Philadelphiaicum; and the same may be said of Erig'eron Heterophyllum, E. annum, Sweet Sea'bious or various-leaved Flea'bane; which is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

ERIGERON HETEROPHYLLUM, see E. Canadense—e. Integrifolium, E. Philadelphiaicum.

ERIG'ERON PHILADELPHICUM, E. strigosum seu ambiguum seu integrifolium, Sea'bious, Ske'eisch, Philadelph'ia or Ske'eisch or Narrow-leaf'ed Flea'bane, Da'isy, Cocash, Frost'weed, Field'weed, Squaw'weed, (F.) Vergette de Philadelphie. The plant has been used in decoction or infusion for gouty and gravelly complaints, and is said to operate powerfully as a diuretic and sudorific. The essential oil has been given in uterine hemorrhage. Dose, five drops.

In the Ph. U. S. 1833, Erigeron means the herb of E. Heterophyllum and E. Philadelphiaicum.

ERIGERON STRIGOSUM, E. Philadelphiaicum.

ERIGERUM, Senecio.

ÉRIGNE, (from αιρω, 'to raise,') Hook.

ÉRINE, Hook.

ERIOCEPH'ALUS UMBELLULAT'US, (επιων, 'wool,' and κεφαλη, 'head,' from the character of its flowers.) Wild Rose'mary. A South African shrub, Ord. Composite, which is diuretic, and used by the farmers and Hottentots in various forms of dropsy.

ERIOSPERMUM LATIFOLIUM, (επιων, 'wool,' and σπερμα, 'seed,' from the woolly envelope of the seeds.) A South African plant, the tuber of which is muculent, and used externally in abrasions of the skin, and in superficial ulcers. It is also employed by the Mohammedans, in decoction, in amenorrhœa.

ERODENS, (ε, and rodere, 'to gnaw,') Cautic.

ERODIUM MOSCHATUM, (from ερωδιος, 'a heron,') Geranium moschatum.

EROMANIA, (ερωμανια, from eros, and mania), Erotomania.

ERON'OSUS, Eroni'osus, (ερ, 'spring,' and νοσος or νοσος, 'disease,') A disease which appears chiefly in spring.

EROS, (ερος, gen. εωρος), Love.

EROSIO, Corrosion, Erosion—e. et Perforatio spontanea Ventriculi, Gastromalacia.

EROSION, Erosio, Diabro'sis, Acan'thosis, Corro'sion, (erodere, erodum, (ε, and rodere,) 'to eat away,') The action of a corrosive substance, or the gradual destruction of a part by a substance of that kind. It is often employed in the same sense as ulceration,—spontaneous erosion.

EROSION, GANGRENOUS, OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

EROTIC, Eroticus, (ερωτικος, from eros.) That which is produced by love—as Erotic melancholy, E. delirium, &c.

EROTICOMANIA, Erotomania.

EROTOMANIA, Eromania, Mania erotica, (from eros, and mania, 'mania,') A species of mental alienation caused by love. Erotic melancholy is Love melancholy. Some authors write it Erotico-mania. Also, Nymphomania.

ERPES, (ερπης), Herpes.

ERRABUNDUS, (errare, 'to wander,') Planetes.

ERRAT'IC, Erraticus, Atac'tos, A'typos; Wandering, Irregular. That which disappears and recurs at irregular intervals. This name is given to intermittents, Febres erraticæ, which observe no type. Most commonly, it is applied to pains or to any diseased manifestations which are not fixed, but move from one part to another, as in gout, rheumatism, erysipelas, &c.

ERREUR DE LIEU, Error loci.

ERRHINE, (ερρην), Erri'num or Er'rhinum, Sternutatorium, Sternutatory, Ptar'micum, Aphlegmat'ismus per na'res, Nasa'te, (ερ, and ρην, 'the nose,') A remedy whose action is exerted on the Schneiderian membrane, exciting sneezing and increased discharge. Errhines have been mainly used as local stimulants in head affections.

ERRHINUM, Erhine, Sternutatory.

ER'RHYSIS, (ερ, and ρην, 'I flow,') With some, a draining of blood. A trifling hemorrhage.

ER'RORE LOCI, ('error of place,') Apoplane'sis, (F.) Erreur de Lieu. A term frequently used by Boerhaave to express deviation of fluids, when they enter vessels not destined for them. Boerhaave admitted several orders of capillary vessels, the diameters of which went on decreasing. The largest received red blood, those which came next received only white, others only lymph, whilst the last of all were destined for yet more subtle fluids—for a kind of vapour. When the red globules entered vessels destined for the white, or the white those intended for the thinner fluids, there was, according to the theory of Boerhaave, an error loci, the proximate cause of inflammation and other mischiefs. See Aberration.

ERUCA, Brassica eruca, Snipais—e. Barbarea, Erysimum barbarea—e. Fœtida, Brassica eruca—e. Sativa, Brassica eruca.

ERUCTA'TION, (eructare, eructatum, (ε, and ruetare), 'to belch,') Ructatio, Ereug'mus, Ery'gia, Eructatio, Ructus, Ructa'men, Ructatio, Ereug'is, Restagna'tio, (Old Eng.) Bolke, Bonffe, Belke, (Sc.) Dock'ing, Bok'king, Ruck'ing, Rijt, (Prov.) Kel'ing, Rosp'ing, Rosp'ing, Ri'e'ing, Rijt (N. of England); Belching, (F.) Rot, Rapport. A sonorous emission, by the mouth, of flatus proceeding from the stomach. When so frequent as to occasion a diseased condition, this is termed Ructuositas, Morbns ructuositus.

ERUGATORIA, (e, and ruga, 'a wrinkle.') Tetanothra.

ÉRUGINEUX, Æruginus.

ERUPTIO, (erumpere, eruptum, (e, and rumpere), 'to issue with violence,' 'to break out.')

Eruption—e. Exanthematis, Epanastasis—e. Sanguinis, Hæmorrhagia.

ERUPTION, Eruptio. This word has several meanings. 1. The sudden and copious evacuation of any fluid from a canal or cavity—of serum, blood, pus, &c., for example; 2. The breaking out of an exanthem; and, 3. The exanthem itself, whether simply in the form of a rash, or of pustules, vesicles, &c.

ÉRUPTION ANOMALE, Roseolæ—e. Roseæ, Roseolæ—e. Violet, Ionthus.

ERUPTIVE, Eruptivus. That which is accompanied by an eruption. This small-pox, measles, scarlet fever, miliaria, &c., are eruptive fevers. The term eruptive disease is nearly synonymous with cutaneous disease.

ERVA DE SANTA MARIA, Arum Dracunculæ—e. do Rato, Palicourea Maregraviæ.

ERVALENTA, see Ervum.

ERVUM, E. Ervil'ia, E. plicatum, Vio'ia ervil'ia, Or'obus, (F.) Lentille Ers ou Orobe. In times of scarcity, the seeds have been made into bread, but it is said not to be wholesome. The meal was once much used in poultices; it was formerly called Orob'ion. Under the name Ervalent'a, a secret dietetic preparation has been introduced. It is a vegetable powder, which, when mixed with milk and soup and taken night and morning, is said to have succeeded in removing old and obstinate obstructions! Buchner thinks it is bean-meal, Ditterich, the meal of the seed of Ervum Ervilia.

A specimen of Warton's Ervalent'a, obtained at the dépôt, and analyzed by Dr. Hassall, was found to contain a mixture of the French and German lentil, reduced to powder, including portions of the shells or husks, and of a substance very closely resembling, in its microscopic characters, corn meal. A sample of Du Barry's Revalent'a Arab'ica was found to consist of a mixture of the Egyptian or Arabian lentil and barley meal.

ERVUM ERVILIA, Ervum.

ERVUM LENS, C'cer Lens, Lens esculenta, Pha'cos, the Lent'il, (F.) Lentille. The seed, Pha'cæ, Pha'cæ, Pha'cus, is eaten in many places like peas: they are flatulent and difficult of digestion.

ERVUM PLICATUM, Ervum,

ERYGE, (ερυγη), Eructation.

ERYNGIUM AQUATICUM, (ερυγγιον), E. yuccifolium, Water Eryn'go, But'ton Snake'root. Order, Umbelliferæ. This root, Eryngium, (Ph. U. S.), is nearly allied to the contrayerva of the shops, and acts more especially as a sudorific. It is a secondary article in the Pharm. U. S.

ERYNGIUM CAMPES'TRE. E. vulgare, Centum Cap'ita, Aster inquinat'is, Capitulum Mart'is, A'cus Ven'eris, (F.) Panicaut, Chardon-Roland, is sometimes used for E. maritimum.

ERYNGIUM FETIDUM; indigenous, is said to possess properties like those of valerian and contrayerva.

ERYNGIUM MARITIMUM SEN MARINUM, (ερυγγιον, from ερευγατο, 'to belch.') The Sea Holly or Eryn'go, Æthe'ra Her'ba, (F.) Panicaut Marit'ime. Eryngo root has a slightly aromatic odour, and sweetish and warm taste. It is considered to be diuretic and expectorant, but its powers are so weak, that it is scarcely ever used.

ERYNGIUM VULGARE, E. Campestre—e. Yuccæfolium, E. Aquaticum.

ERYNGO, SEA, Eryngium maritimum—e. Water, Eryngium aquaticum.

ERYSTMUM, E. officina'le, (ερω, 'to draw,' from its power of raising blisters.) Sisymbrium officina'le, Cham'æplion, Hedgemustard, (F.) Vélar, Tortelle, Herbe aux Chantres. This was, formerly, much used for its expectorant and diuretic qualities. The seeds greatly resemble mustard.

ERYSIMUM ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM BARBARE'A, E. hyratum, Arab'is barbarea, Sisymbrium barbarea, Eru'ca barbarea, Barbare'a, B. stricta, (F.) Herbe de Sainte Barbe, has been ranked amongst the antiscorbutic plants. See Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM CORDIFOLIUM, Alliaria—e. Lyratum. E. barbarea.

ERYSIPELA'CEA. (Same etymon as the next.) A family of eruptive diseases, comprising erysipelas, variola, rubéola, and scarlatina.

ERYSIPE'LAS, gen. Erysipel'atis, (ερωσιπelas, from ερω, 'I draw,' and πelas, 'near,' from its tendency to spread, or from ερωσος, 'red.' [?] ) Feb'ris erysipelato'sa seu erysipel'cea, Erythrop'yra, Em'phlysis Erysip'elas, St. Antho'n's fire, Wild'fire, Ig'nis Sancti Ant'o'nii seu Columel'æ seu Sa'cer, Hieropyr, Ieterit'ia rub'ra, Ru'bea ieterit'ia, Vicini't'raha, Vicini't'raetus, Bru'nus, Lug'dus, Rose, (F.) Érysipèle, Érésipète, Feu St. Antoine, Feu sacré, Mal Saint Antoine. A disease, so called because it generally extends gradually to the neighbouring parts. Superficial inflammation of the skin, with general fever, tension and swelling of the part; pain and heat more or less acrid; redness diffused, but more or less circumscribed, and disappearing when pressed upon by the finger, but returning as soon as the pressure is removed. Frequently, small vesicles appear upon the inflamed part, which dry up and fall off, under the form of branny scales. Erysipelas is, generally, an acute affection: its medium duration being from 10 to 14 days. It yields, commonly, to general refrigerant remedies. Topical applications are rarely serviceable. At times, when the disease approaches the phlegmonous character, copious bleeding and other evacuations may be required, as in many cases of erysipelas of the face; but this is not commonly necessary. In most cases, indeed, the general action seems deficient, and it becomes necessary to give tonics.

When erysipelas is of a highly inflammatory character, and invades the parts beneath, it is termed Erysip'elas phlegmono'des, (F.) Érysipèle phlegmonæx: when accompanied with phlyctenæ, and the inflammation terminates in gangrene, Erysip'elas gangreno'sum, (F.) Érysipèle gangrèneux; and when associated with infiltration of serum, Erysip'elas œdamato'sum, (F.) Érysipèle œdamateux.

At times, the surface in erysipelas has a bronzed rather than a red hue—bronzed erysipelas.

ERYSIPELAS, BRONZED, see Erysipelas—e. Gangrenosum, see Erysipelas—e. œdematosum, see Erysipelas—e. Periodica nervosa chronica, Pellagra—e. Phlegmonodes, see Erysipelas—e. Phlyctenoides, Herpes zoster—e. Pustulosa, Herpes zoster—e. Zoster, Herpes zoster.

ERYSIPELATODES, (ερωσιπelaτωδης), Erysipelatous.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS, Erysipelato'des, Erysipelato'sus. Belonging to erysipelas; as an erysipelatous affection.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS INFLAMM'ATION, Inflammat'io erysipelato'sa, Epiphlogis'ma, Cuti'tis, Dermat'itis, is the character of inflammation which distinguishes erysipelas, Erythe'ma erysipelato'sum.

ÉRYSIPELE, Erysipelas—é. Ambulant, see Ambulant—é. Gangrèneux, see Erysipelas—é. œdemateux, see Erysipelas—é. Phlegmonæux, see Erysipelas—é. Pustuleux, Herpes zoster—é. Serpiginæux, see Serpiginous.

ERYSOS, ερωσος, ('red.') Erythema.

ERYTHE'MA, gen. Erythre'matis, (ερυθρῶμα, ερυθρός, 'red, rose-coloured.') Inflammatory blush, Erythre'ma, (F.) Érythème. This name is, sometimes, given to erysipelas, especially when of a local character. It is, also, applied to the morbid redness on the cheeks of the hectic and on the skin covering bubo, phlegmon, &c. It forms the 6th genus of the 3d order, Erxanthemata, of Bateman's classification of cutaneous diseases; and is defined, 'a nearly continuous redness of some portion of the skin, attended with disorder of the constitution, but not contagious.' Many varieties are described by dermatologists,—for example, E. intertrigo, E. fulgax, E. papulatum, E. tuberculatum, E. nodosum, E. lævè, E. centrifugum, E. marginatum, and E. acrodyuia.

ERYTHEMA ACRODYNIA, Acrodynum—e. Ambustio, Burn—e. Anthrax, Anthrax.

ERYTHEMA CENTRIFUGUM. A variety of erythema attacking the face, commencing with a small red spot, and spreading around, so as, at times, to affect the whole face.

ERYTHEMA CIRCINATUM, see E. Marginatum.

ERYTHEMA ENDEMICUM, Pellagra—e. à Frigore, Chlilain.

ERYTHEMA FU'GAX. Patches of erythema, that sometimes appear on the body in febrile diseases, teething children, &c., and which are of brief duration.

ERYTHEMA GANGRÆNOSUM, Anthrax—e. Ichororum, Eczema mercuriale—e. Intertrigo, Chafing.

ERYTHEMA LÆVÈ, (F.) Érythème léger. Slight erythema affecting the skin, as in oedema.

ERYTHEMA MARGINATUM, (F.) Érythème marginal. A form in which the prominent patches of erythema are distinctly separated from the skin at their margins. When they can be distinctly measured or composed we have E. circinatum.

ERYTHEMA MERCURIALE, Eczema mercuriale.

ERYTHEMA NODOSUM, (F.) Érythème noueux. A more severe form of Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHEMA PAPULATUM, (F.) Érythème papuleux. Patches of erythema, which are at first papulated, appearing on the face, neck, breast, &c., of females, and young persons more especially.

ERYTHEMA PELLAGRUM, Pellagra—e. Pernio, Chlilain.

ERYTHEMA SOLARÈ. A name given by the Italians to Pellagra, owing to its being attended with an eruption of small red spots or patches on the parts that are exposed to the sun.

ERYTHEMA TUBERCULATUM, E. tuberculatum, (F.) Érythème tuberculeux. A form of erythema in which the patches are in small lumps.

ERYTHEMATOUS, Erythemat'ic, Erythematous, Erythemat'icus, (F.) Érythémateux. Appertaining or relating to Erythema.

ÉRYTHÈME, Erythema—é. Léger, Erythema lævè—é. Marginal, Erythema marginatum—é. Noueux, Erythema nodosum—é. Papuleux, Erythema papulatum—é. Tuberculeux, Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHRÆA CENTAURIUM, (from ερυθρός, 'red,' 'the flower.') Chironia centaurium—e. Chilensis, Chanchalagua, Chironia Chilensis.

ERYTHRÆMIA, (erythro, and αἷμα, 'blood.') Plethora.

ERYTHRAN'CHÈ, Angi'na erysipelato'sa, (erythro, and αἷμα, 'I suffocate') Erysipelatous or erythematous sore throat.

ERYTHREMA, gen. Erythre'matis, Erythrema.

ERYTHRINA MONOSPERMA, (ερυθρός, 'red,' 'the flowers.') Butea frondosa.

ERYTHRO, (from ερυθρός, 'red,') in composition, red.

ERYTHROCHERAS, (erythro, and chæras.) Cynanche parotidea.

ERYTHRODANUM, (ερυθρός, 'red,') Rubia.

ERYTHROID, Erythro'des, Erythro'ides, (erythro, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.') Reddish.

ERYTHROID COAT, Tu'nica erythro'des. Vaginal coat of the testis.

ERYTHROID VESICLE, Vesic'ula Erythro'idea. A vesicle of the foetus described by Pockels and others. It is pyriform, and much longer than, although of the same breadth as, the umbilical vesicle. Velpeau, Weber, and others, doubt its being a physiological condition.

ERYTHRONIUM, (from ερυθρός, 'red,' which does not, however, apply to the American species.) E. Americanum.

ERYTHRONIUM AMERICANUM, E. flavum seu dens canis seu lanceolata tum seu longifolium, Common Erythronium, Yellow Snakeleaf, Yellow Ad'der's tongue, Ad'derleaf, Dog violet, Dog's tooth violet, Rat'tlesnake violet, Lamb's tongue, Scrof'ula root, Yellow Snow'drop. Ord. Liliaceæ. This plant is possessed of emetic properties, but is rarely, if ever, used. The root and herb, Erythronium, (Ph. U. S.), are in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia the United States.

ERYTHRONIUM DENS CANIS, E. Americanum—e. Flavum, E. Americanum—e. Lanceolatum, E. Americanum—e. Longifolium, E. Americanum.

ERYTHROPLEUM JUDICIALE, (erythro, and πλεω, 'to flow'—from the red juice.) Sassy bark tree.

ERYTHROPYRA, (erythro, and πυρ 'fire, fever,') Erysipelas.

ERYTHRORRHIZA ROTUNDIFOLIA, (erythro, and ῥίζα, 'root,') Galax aphylla.

ERYTHROSIS, (erythro, and οσι.) Plethora.

ERYTHROXYLON COCA, Co'ca, (erythro, and ξυλον, 'wood,') A plant. Ord. Violaceæ, which grows on the eastern slopes of the Andes, is prized in Peru, Chili, and Bolivia, both as a medicine and an article of diet; and serves as a substitute for the tea, coffee, betel, tobacco, hashish, and opium of other peoples. An active alkaloid—Co'caïne, Cocai'na—has been separated from it.

ES'APHÈ, (εσαφω, from εις, and ἀφω, 'I feel,') 'I feel inside,') (F.) Le Toucher, Le Toucher vaginal. The introduction of a finger or fingers into the vagina, for the purpose of examining the condition of the uterus. It is employed to verify the existence or non-existence of pregnancy and its different stages; to detect certain affections or faults of conformation in the genital organs and pelvis; and, during the process of accouchement, to examine into the progress of labour, &c.

ESCA, Aliment.

ESCALDAS, MINERAL WATERS OF, in the department Pyrénées-orientales, France, are thermal sulphureous, containing sulphuret of sodium. Temperature about 103° Fah. The season is from June to the 15th of September.

ESCARA, Eschar.

ESCARGOT, Helix pomatia, Limax.

ESCHALOT, Échalotte.

ES'CHAR, Es'chara, (εσχαρα, Es'cara, (Old Eng.) Asker; a slough, a crust or scab. The crust or disorganized portion, arising from the mortification of a part, and which is distinguishable from the living parts by its colour, consistence, and other physical properties. The inflammation which it excites in the contiguous parts gives occasion to a secretion of pus between the living and dead parts, which ultimately completely separates the latter.

ESCHARA, (εσχαρα, Vulva.

ESCHAROTIC, Escharot'icum, (εσχαρωτικον, from eschar.) Any substance which, when applied upon a living part, gives rise to an eschar, such as caustic potassa: the concentrated mineral acids, &c.

ESCHAROTIC POISON, see Poison.

ESCHELLOHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. This water rises at the foot of a mountain near the convent of Etal in Bavaria. It is a sulphuro-saline.

ESCHID'NA OCELLA'TA. A very poisonous viper, which inhabits the sugar-cane fields of Peru. Its bite is almost instantaneously fatal.

ESCORZONERA, Scorzonera.

ESCREVISSE, ([G.] Krebs,) Crab.

ESCULAPIAN, (from Esculapius.) Medical.

ES'CULENT, Esculentus, Ed'ible, Eat'able, Ciba'rians, (esca, 'food,') (F.) Comestible. Such plants or such parts of plants or animals as may be eaten for food.

ESÈRE, Ordeal nut.

ESKIN, (Sax. ziŕcan, 'to hiccough.') Singultus.

ESO, (eso, 'within,') in composition, within.

ESOCHAS, (εσχας, from eso, and εχειν, 'to have,') Esoche.

ES'OCHE, Es'ochas, A tumour—as a hemorrhoid—within the anus.

ESOCOLITIS, (eso, and colitis.) Dysentery.

ESODIC, (eso, and ὄδος, 'a way,') Afferent.

ESOENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

ESOGASTRITIS, Endogastritis.

ESOTER'IC, (εσωτερος, 'interior,') from eso.)

Private; interior; in contradistinction to Esoter'ic, public, exterior. Hence, we speak of 'esoter'ic and exoter'ic causes of disease.'

ES'OTERISM, MEDICAL. A term used by M. Simon, in his Déontologie médicale, for that esotery, or mystery and secrecy, with which the practitioner performs his daily duties, and which, he conceives, he is compelled to adopt by the prejudices and ignorance of his patients.

ESPACES INTERCOSTAUX, (from spatium, 'a space,') See Costa.

ESPÈCES, Species, see Pulvis—e. Pulvéru-lentes, see Pulvis—e. Vulinéraires, Falltranck.

ES'PILASIS, (es, eis, 'inwards,') and πλασ, 'I break, bruise,') &c.) A fracture of the skull by comminution, the fragments being depressed. See Depression, and Enthlasia.

ESSEN'TIAL, Essentia'lis. The word essential has been applied to the immediate or active principles of vegetables, which were believed to be endowed with the properties of the plants from which they were extracted. Essential oil was so called because it was regarded as the only immediate principle which was essential. This expression is retained. Essential salts are true salts or extracts, which exist, ready formed, in vegetables; and which are obtained by distillation, incineration, or some other process.

An essential disease is synonymous with a general disease; that is, one not depending on any local affection,—not symptomatic. See Entity.

ES'SERA, Es'serè, So'ra, Soir'è, Sa'vè, Mor'bus porci'nus, Ro'sa sal'tans, Urtica'ria porcell'ana, (F.) Anpoules, Porcelaine. (Of Arabic derivation.) A species of cutaneous eruption, consisting of small, reddish tubercles over the whole body, accompanied by a troublesome itching. It seems to be a variety of lichen or urticaria. See Lichen tropicus.

ESSIEU, (from axiculus, dim.) Axis.

ESSOUFFLEMENT, (e, and souffle, 'breath.') Anhelatio.

ESTHEMA, gen. Esthematis, (ἐσθημα, 'a garment.') Vestitus.

ESTHESIS, (ἐσθησις, 'clothing.') Vestitus.

ESTHIOMÈNE, Esthiomenus.

ESTHIOMENUS, Esthiomennus, (ἐσθίω, 'I eat.') Esthedens, (F.) Esthiomene. That which devours or eats away. Certain ulcers and eruptions—Dartres rougeantes—are so called.

ESTIVAL, Estivus; (æstas, gen. æstatis, 'summer.') Happening in summer, belonging to summer. This epithet is given to summer diseases, so called because they reign at that season, and appear to depend on the influence exerted by it on the animal economy. In the United States, the term summer disease or complaint means disorder of the bowels; as diarrhœa, cholera morbus, &c.

ETHEREAL, Æthereal.

ETHEREOUS, Æthereal.

ETHERINE, HYDROCYANATE OF. Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Muriate of, Æther muriaticus. ÉTHÉRISÉ, Etherized.

ETHERISM. The aggregate of phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether—Ætherism'us.

ETHERIZATION, Ætherisatio. The administration of ether by inhalation, as an anæsthetic.

ETHERIZED, Ætherisatus, (F.) Éthérisé. Presenting the phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether.

ÉTHÉROLAT, Éthérot. The product of the distillation of ether on aromatic substances.

ÉTHÉROLATURE, see Tincture.

ÉTHÉROLÉ. A liquid medicine formed of ether and medicinal principles united with it by direct solution or simple mixture.

ÉTHÉROLÉ D'ESSENCE DE TÉRÉBINTHINE. See Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

ÉTHÉROLIQUE, Ethérol'ic. A medicine which has ether for excipient.

ÉTHÉROLOTIF. An ethereal medicine which is exclusively employed externally.

ETHICS, MEDICAL, (ἠθος, 'moral conduct.') Deontology, medical.

ETHIK, Hectic.

ETHIOPIAN, see Homo.

ETHIOPS, see Æthiops.

ETHISIS, (ἠθισις, from ἠθεω, 'to sift.') Filtration.

ETHISMUS, (from ἠθος, 'a sieve.') Filtration.

ETHMO, (ἠθος, 'a sieve,') in composition, a sieve; also, the ethmoid bone.

ETHMOCÉPHALE, Ethmoceph'alus; (ethmo, 'the ethmoidal portion of the nose, and κεφαλή, 'head,') A genus of monsters, with eyes close together, but distinct; the nasal apparatus atrophied and rudimental.

ETHMOÏD, Ethmoïdes, Ethmoï'des, Ethmoï'dens, (ethmo, and oidos, 'form,') Shaped like a sieve.

ETHMOÏD BONE, Os ethmoïdeum seu multifor'me seu spongiosum seu spongoides seu cribro'sum seu cribrifor'me seu cribric'ium seu cristatu'm seu 'oram'inentu'm seu colifor'me seu colatu'm, (F.) Os cribreux. One of the eight bones which compose the cranium; so called, because its upper plate is pierced by a considerable number of holes. The ethmoid bone is situate at the anterior, inferior, and middle part of the base of the cranium. It seems to be composed of a multitude of thin, fragile, semi-transparent laminae, which form more or less spacious cells, called the Ethmoid'al lab'yrinth or cells, distinguished into anterior and posterior. These communicate with the nose, and are lined by a prolongation of the pituitary membrane. The ethmoid bone is constituted of compact tissue, and is surrounded by the Eth'moïd su'ture. It is articulated with the frontal and sphenoidal bones, the cornua sphenoidal'ia, the superior maxillary bones, the palate bones, the ossa turbinata inferiora, the vomer, the proper bones of the nose, and the lacrimal bones.

ETHMOÏD'AL, Ethmoïda'lis. Belonging to the ethmoid bone; as, Ethmoid'al cells, E. su'ture, &c. The Ethmoid'al apoph'ysis or proc'ess is the advanced part of the sphenoid bone, which articulates with the ethmoid. The ethmoid'al ar'teries are two in number, the anterior of which arises from the ophthalmic artery. The origin of the other varies. The Échancrure ethmoïdale of the os frontis receives the ethmoid bones. The Ethmoïdal veins correspond to the arteries.

ETHMOSE, (ἠθμοσ, 'a sieve,') Cellular tissue.

ETHYMPIE, (ἠθμπος, 'a sieve,' and ἔθμη, 'tissue,') Cellular tissue.

ETHYMPH'TIS, Inflammat'io te'tæ cellulosa, Cellulit'is, (ethmyphæ, and itis.) Inflammation of the cellular membrane.

ETHYMPHOTYLOSIS, (ethmyphæ, and τρωσις, 'hardness,') Induration of the cellular tissue.

ETHNOG'RAPHY, Ethnograph'ia; (ἔθνος, 'nation,' and γραφή, 'a description,') A history of the races and families of man.

ETHNOLOGY, Ethnology'ia, (ἔθνος, 'nation,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') The science of the races and families of man.

ETHOS, (ἔθος, 'Habit,')

ÉTHUSE, Æthusa cynapium—É. Méum, Æthusa meum.

ETHYLE, CHLORIDE OF, Æther muriaticus—e. Cyanuret of, Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Iodide of, Æther hydriodicus.

ETICK, Hectic.

ETIOLATION, Blanch'ing, (F.) Étiolément. That state of plants which occurs in consequence of privation of light, when they become pale and watery. In pathology, it is sometimes used to denote the paleness produced in those persons who have been kept long without light; or a similar paleness, the result of chronic disease.

ÉTOILEMENT, Etiolation.

ETIOLOGY, Ætiology.

ÉTIQUE, Hectic.

ETIQUETTE, MEDICAL. Deontology, medical.

ÉTISE, Hecticis—É. Mésentérique, Tabes mesenterica.

ETITA. A singular cutaneous affection described by Du Chaillu as existing amongst the Ashira, in Africa. It consists in the rapid appearance of blotches over the body, the parts being swollen, and as if they had been badly scalded. The skin is raised and a thin matter collects beneath it. It is attended with intolerable itching.

ÉTOUPE, ([old F.] estoupe,) Stupa.

ÉTOURDISSEMENT, Vertigo.

ÉTRANGLE-LOUP, ('strangle wolf,') Paris.

ÉTRANGLEMENT, ([old F.] étranglement, from (L.) strangulare, 'to strangle,') Strangulation, Hysteria—É. des Intestins, Enteremphraxis.

ÉTRANGUILLON, (from étrangler, 'to strangle,') An ancient French appellation for a violent angina accompanied by symptoms of imminent asphyxia.

ÉTRIER, ([old F.] entrier, [L.] strepæ.) Stapes. Also, a bandage, Huit du Cou-de-pied, applied, after bleeding from the foot, to compress the saphena.

ETRON, (ἠτρον,) Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

ETRON'CUS, (etron, and ογκος, 'a tumor,') A tumour of the lower belly.

ETTICK, Hectic fever.

ETILE, Urtica.

ÉTUDE L'HIPPOCAMPE. A name given by Vicq d'Azyr to the upper part of the sphenoidal portion of the lateral ventricle of the brain, which is bounded by the lateral cornu of the corpus callosum.

ÉTUVE, ([old F.] estuve.) Stove—e. Humide, Bath, vapour.

ÉTUVER, to Foment. See Stupa.

EU, (eu,) 'good, proper,' when prefixed to words.

EUEMIA, (eu, and ἄμα, 'blood,') A good condition of the blood.

EUESTHE'SIA, (eu, and αισθησις, 'perception,') Vigorous perception. A good condition of the perceptive faculties.

EUESTHE'TUS, (ευαισθητος,) One whose senses are in full vigor.

EUNALEP'SIS, (eu, and αναληψις, 'recovery,') Rapid restoration to strength.

EUNTHEMON, Anthemis nobilis.

EUCALYPTUS MANNIF'ERA, (eu, and καλυπτος, 'covered,' the flower by the calyx.) From this Australian species, Order, Myrtaceæ, a manna-like substance exudes, which has similar properties to manna.

EUCALYPTUS RESINIFERA, see Kino.

EUCHRŒA, (ευχρσια, from eu, and χρσια, 'colour,') A good or healthy colour of the skin. A good appearance of the surface.

EUCHYMIA, (ευχυμια, from eu, and χυμος, 'juice,') A good state of the humours.

EUCRA'SIA, (ευκρασια, from eu, and κρασις, 'temperament,') A good temperament.

EUDIAPNEUS'TIA, (eu, and διαπνοη, (δία, and πνοη, 'breath,') 'one who breathes well,') Easy transpiration.

EUËCTICA (medicina), (ευεκτικος, (eu, and εκω, 'to hold,') 'conducive to health,') Gymnastics.

EUËL'CES, (ευελκος, from eu, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer,') One in whom wounds and ulcers are readily healed.

EUEMES, Euēm'etos, (ευεμης, from eu, and ευεω, 'I vomit,') That which readily excites vomiting. One who vomits with facility.

EUETHES, (eu, and ἔθος, 'habit,') Benign.

EUEX'IA, (ευεξια, from eu, and ἔξις, 'constitution,') A good constitution.

EUFRAISE, Euphrasia officinalis.

EUGENIA ACRIS, see Spiritus myrciæ.

EUGENIA CARYOPHYLLA'TA, (after Prince Eugene of Savoy,) Garryophyll'us, Caryophyll'us aromaticus, Myrtus caryophyll'us, The Indian tree which affords the clove. Order, Myrtaceæ. The Clove, Caryophyll'us, C. aromaticus, Caryophyll'um, is the unexpanded bud, (F.) Girofle, Gérofle, Gyrophle, Clou de Girofle. Its odour is strong, aromatic, and peculiar; taste, pungent and acrid. Like all substances whose virtue depends upon essential oil, it is stimulant and carminative. It is generally used as a corrigent to other remedies, and in cases where substances containing the essential oils are demanded. The oil—(F.) Huile de Gérofle; O'leum caryophyll'i, Oil of Cloves—has the properties of the cloves.

EUGENIA PIMENTA, Myrtus pimenta.

EUGION, and EUGIUM, (eu, and γη, 'earth,') ευγεις, 'fertile,') Hymen, Uterus, Vulva.

EULË, (εωλη, 'a worm,') Eulw, (εωλα,) with Hippocrates, meant especially worms bred in a wound or ulcer.

EULOPHIA, see Salcp.

EUNUCH, Eunu'chus, (ευνουχος, from ευνυ, 'the bed,' and εκω, 'I keep,') Hemian'drus, Hemian'or, Hemianthro'pus, Sem'imus, Semimas'culus, Semimascula'tus, Sem'ivir, Thla'dias, Thla'sias, Thli'b'ias, Castra'tus, Gal'lus, Excastra'tus, Evir'a'tus, Emascula'tus, Exc'ec'us, Extesticula'tus, Extom'ius, Del'iacus, (Old Eng.) Gelding. (F.) Eunuque. One whose organs of generation have been removed, or so altered, that he is rendered incapable of reproducing his species, or of exercising the act of venery. Eunuchs were common with the ancient Romans. With them, Castra'tus meant one from whom the external organs had been removed: the Spaldo was deprived of the testicles only; whilst the thib'ius and thla'sias preserved the organs, but the testicles were crushed so as to render them unfit for procreation.

In Italy, this horrible mutilation still takes place to improve the voice; and in the East, eunuchs have the surveillance of the seraglio.

EUNUCHISMUS, Castration.

EUNUCHIUM MECONIS, Lactuca.

EUNUCHUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EUNUQUE, Eunuch.

EUOD'ES, (ευωδης, from eu, and οδεν, 'to smell.') Benevolentia.

EUONYMUS, (eu, and ονυμα, 'name.') Quassia similaruba.

EUONYMUS AMERICA'NUS, (eu, and ονυμα, 'name.') Straw'berry bush, Straw'berry tree, Burn'ing bush, In'dian ar'row-wood. A shrub of the Ord. Celastraceae, Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia, which, like the next, is found throughout the United States and Canada; flowering from May to June.

EUONYMUS ATROPURPUREUS, Burn'ing bush, Spin'dle tree, In'dian Ar'row-wood, flowers from June to July.

From these varieties of Euonymus the Wahoo' or Whahoo' bark is said to be obtained. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, it is referred to Euonymus atropurpureus. It is diuretic, antiperiodic, tonic, and a hydragogue cathartic, and has been used in dropsy in infusion, in the proportion of an ounce to a pint of water.

EUPATHIA, (ευπαθεια, from eu, and παθος, 'affection.') A disposition for being affected by pain easily. Also, a good state of health—Euphor'ia.

EUPATOIRE D'AVICENNE, Eupatorium perfoliatum—e. Percefeuille, Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM, (after Mithridates Eupator.) Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM AGERATOIDES, E. Urticifolium, Age'ratum altissimum, White Snake'root; indigenous; flowering in August and September; has the same properties as Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM AROMATICUM, Aromatic Eupatorium or Hemp'weed, has similar properties.

EUPATORIUM CANNABINUM, Eupatorium, E. Arabicum seu Japonicum seu trifoliatum, E. of Avicenna, Cannab'ina aquatica, Trifolium cervinum, Orig'anum aquaticum, Hemp agrimony, Herb of Saint Cuthbert, (F.) Enpatoire d'Avicenne. Ord. Compositae. Sex. Syst. Syngenesia æqualis. The juice of this plant proves violently emetic and purgative, if taken in sufficient quantity. It has been considered diuretic, cathartic, and emetic.

EUPATORIUM CONNATUM, E. perfoliatum—e. Guaco, Guaco—e. Japonicum, E. Cannabinum—e. Mesues, Achillea ageratum.

EUPATORIUM PERFOLIATUM, E. Conna'tum, Bone'set, Thor'oughwort, Thor'oughstem, Thor'oughwax, Veg'etable antimony, Cross'wort, A'gneweed, Feverwort, In'dian sa'ge, Joe-pye, Te'azel, Sweat'ing plant, (F.) Enpatoire percefeuille, is a plant which grows in low, wet meadows throughout the United States. The tops and leaves, gathered after flowering has commenced—Enpatorium, (Ph. U. S.)—are considered to be stimulating, tonic, emetic, purgative, diuretic, and sudorific. Dose, gr. xv of the powder, as a gentle purgative.

EUPATORIUM PURPLE-STALKED, E. purpureum. EUPATORIUM PURPUREUM, Mo'hawk tas'sel, Purple-stalk'ed Enpatorium, Trump'etweed, Joe P'ye'weed, Grav'elroot, is used in similar cases, as well as

EUPATORIUM ROTUNDIFOLIUM, Round-leaved Hemp'weed, Wild hor'e'hound;

EUPATORIUM SESSILIFOLIUM, Up'land Bone'set, and

EUPATORIUM TEUCRIFOLIUM, Wild hor'e'hound, German'der-lew'ed hor'e'hound, Rough bone'set.

EUPATORIUM TRIFOLIATUM, E. Cannabinum—e. Urticifolium, E. ageratoides.

EUPEPSIA, (ευπεψια, from eu, and πεπρω, 'I digest.') A good digestion. The antithesis to dyspepsia.

EUPEPTIC, Enpep'tics, (ευπεπτικος,) Enpep'ticus. Relating to a good digestion. One endowed with a good digestion.

EUPHLOGIA, (eu, and φλεγω, 'I burn.') Mild inflammation.

EUPHONY, Eupho'nia, (ευφωνια, from eu, and φωνη, 'voice.') An agreeable or regular voice.

EUPHORBIA CYPRÆS, E. cyparissias—e. des Marais, E. palustris—e. Vomitive, E. ipecacuanha.

EUPHORBIA CAPITATA, Cacæia. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, (after Euphorbus, physician to Juba.) A Brazilian plant, which is strongly astringent, and not poisonous. It is considered to be one of the best remedies for the bites of serpents. It is, also, called Colubri'na Linnæi'ca.

EUPHORBIA CAPUT MEDU'SÆ. A South African plant, with which, according to Bruce, the wild inhabitants poison their arrows. The Ethiopians use, for the same purpose, Euphor'bia heptago'na, E. viro'sa, and E. cereiformis; the savages, in the most southern part of America, the sap of E. cotinifolia.

EUPHORBIA CEREIFORMIS, see Euphorbia caput Meduseæ.

EUPHORBIA COROLLA'TA, Large flower'ing spurge, Milk'weed, Snakes' milk, Ipecacuan'ha, Hip'po, Picac', Ip'ecac, Milk pur'stain, Purge'root, Emet'ic root, Boe'man's root, Ap'ple root, In'dian Phys'ic; indigenous; has similar properties to the last. The dose of the root is the same.

EUPHORBIA COTINIFOLIA, see Euphorbia caput Meduseæ.

EUPHORBIA CYPARISIAS, E. Cypress'ina, Es'ula mi'nor seu Cypariss'ias, Tithym'alus Cypariss'ias, Cy'press spurge, Well'come to our house, (F.) Enphorbe cyprès. This, like most of the spurges, is very acrimonious. Amongst the rustics, it was formerly called poor man's rhubarb, and was, consequently, a laxative. It is not used.

EUPHORBIA CYPRESSINA, E. Cyparissias.

EUPHORBIA HELIOSCOP'IA, E. obturata, Sun'spurge, Wart'wort spurge; indigenous. The juice has been given in syphilis. It is said to be cathartic.

EUPHORBIA HEPTAGONA, see Euphorbia caput Meduseæ.

EUPHORBIA HYPERICIFOLIA, Large spot'ted spurge, Eye'bright. A native of the United States. It is astringent and tonic. Used in infusion—fʒss to Oj of boiling water. Dose, a tablespoonful. EUPHORBIA MACULA'TA, Milk Pur'stane, Spot'ted spurge, has similar properties.

EUPHORBIA IPECACUAN'HA, Anisophy'dium Ipecacuanha, Ipecacuan'ha spurge, Wild ip'ecac. (F.) Enphorbe vomitive. This species of spurge is common in the southern and middle parts of the United States. The root is a powerful emetic, in the dose of from five to fifteen grains; twenty grains act as a cathartic likewise. In large doses, it acts as a narcotico-acrid.

EUPHORBIA LATH'YRIS. The systematic name of the plant which affords the les'ser catapn'tia seeds, Catapn'tiu mi'nor, Ca'per Spurge, Lath'yris, Gar'den spurge, Ca'per plant, Mole'plant, Tithym'alus latifolius seu lath'yris, Galarch'eus Lath'yris, (F.) Épurge on grande Énne. The seeds—(F.) Graines de Catepnee on d'Épurge on Royales mineures—possess cathartic properties; and an expressed oil of the seeds—O'leum Euphor'biæ Lathyr'idia, (F.) Huile d'Épurge—has been given as a cathartic in the dose of six to twelve drops.

EUPHORBIA MACULATA, see E. hypericifolia—

c. Myrtifolia, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — e. Ob-turata. E. helioscopia.

EUPHORBIA OFFICINARUM. The systematic name of the plant which affords the Euphorbium, Euphorbia gummi-resinosa, Gummi euphorbiae, in greatest abundance. The euphorbium is an in-odorous gum-resin, in yellow tears, which have the appearance of being worm-eaten. It enters into the composition of some plasters, and has been used as an emetic.

EUPHORBIA PALUSTRIS, E. paniculata, Great-er spurge, Esula major, Tithymalus palustris, Galarrhoeus palustris, Marsh spurge, Wretweed, (F.) Euphorbe des marais. The juice is given, in Russia, as a common purge. It is used, too, as an irritant in tinea, warts, &c.

EUPHORBIA PALUSTRIS and E. VILLOSA, or E. PILOSA, have been brought forward as preventives of hydrophobia—the bitten part being washed with a decoction, and, at the same time, the decoction being taken internally.

EUPHORBIA PANICULATA, E. palustris.

EUPHORBIA PARALIAS, Tithymalus paralias, Sea spurge. This is violently cathartic and irritating, and is seldom used.

EUPHORBIA PEPLUS, Petty spurge: indigenous. The powdered root is actively cathartic. It has been given in drops.

EUPHORBIA PILOSA, see Euphorbia palustris — e. Tithymaloides, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — e. Villosa, see Euphorbia palustris — e. Virosa, see Euphorbia caput Medusae.

☞ All the spurges are vesicant and rubefacient, when applied externally.

EUPHORBIVM, Euphorbia officinarum.

EUPHORIA, (εὐφορία, from eu, and φέρω, 'I carry,') Eupathia.

EUPHRAGIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

EUPHRA'SIA, (εὐφρασία, 'cheerfulness;') so called from its effects, E. officinalis seu minima seu imbricata, Ocularia, Euphrasia, Ophthalmica, Eyebright, (F.) Enfraise, Euphrase, Casse-Lunette. It has been recommended in diseases of the eye, but is unworthy of notice.

EUPLASTIC, Euplasticus, (F.) Euplastique: (eu, and πλάσσω, 'I form,') Having the capacity of becoming organizable in a high degree,—as in false membranes resulting from acute inflammation in a healthy person.

EUPLEURUM SERRULATUM, Diosma crenata.

EUPNŒA, (εὐπνοία, from eu, and πνέω, 'I respire,') Freedom or facility of respiration.

EURHYTHMIA, Eurhythmia, (εὐρυθμία, from eu, and ῥυθμός, 'rhythm,') Regularity of the pulse.

EURIBAL, Juribali.

EURODES, (ευρώδης, from eurus, and odes,) Carious.

EURODON'TICUS, (ευρώς, 'putrefaction,' and ὄδους, gen. ὀδόντος, 'a tooth,') Suffering from carious teeth.

EURRYTHMIA, Eurhythmia.

EURUS, (ευρος, 'mould, putrefaction,') Mucor, Ca'ries. Corruption of the humours.

EURYCHORIA, (ευρύς, 'extensive,' and χωρός, 'space,') Sinus.

EURYCLES, (Ευρυκλής, a celebrated soothsayer and ventriloquist,) Engastrimyth.

EURYCLITUS, Engastrimyth.

EURYSMUS, (ευρύνειν, 'to dilate,') Dilatation.

EUSAR'CUS, (εὐσαρκός, from eu, and σάρξ, gen. σαρκός, 'flesh,') One who is fleshy, robust, muscular.

EUSEMIA, (F.) Eusemia, (εὐσημία, from eu, and σημειόν, 'a sign,') A collection of good signs.

EUSOMPHALIEN, (eu, and σμφάλος, 'navel,') A double monster in which each being has a separate navel, and is able to execute, independently, almost all the vital functions.

EUSPLANCH'NIA, (eu, and πλαγχνών, 'a viscus,') A healthy state of the viscera.

EUSTA'CHIAN TUBE, Tubula Eustachiana seu Eustachii seu Aristotelica, Syrin'ga, Syrinx, Meatus earis, Ductus auris palatini, Ister a Palato ad Aur'em, (F.) Trompe ou Conduit d'Eustache, Conduit guttural de l'oreille, (Ch,) (called after Eustachius.) It is partly bony and partly cartilaginous: extending from the cavity of the tympanum to the upper part of the pharynx. Its length is about two inches; the bony portion, which belongs to the temporal bone, is about three-fourths of an inch long. It is lined, internally, by a prolongation of the lining membrane of the pharynx. Its nerves are furnished by the palatine branches of the ganglion of Meckel, and its vessels proceed from those of the pharynx and velum pendulum. The use of the tube seems to be to permit the renewal of air in the cavity of the tympanum.

EUSTA'CHIAN VALVE, Valve of Eustachius, Valvula d'Eustachi ou d'Eustache. A membranous, semilunar fold, which corresponds to the opening of the vena cava inferior into the right auricle of the heart.

EUSTHENIA, Vigor, Exuberantia, (εὐσθενεία, from eu, and σθένος, 'strength,') Flourishing, exuberant health.

EUSTOM'ACHUS, (εὐστομαχος, from eu, and στομαχος, 'stomach,') Digesting rapidly. Having a good stomach.

EUSTROGYLUS GIGAS, Strongylus gigas.

EUTAX'IA, (εὐταξία, from eu, and τάσσω, 'I arrange,') Euthesia. A well-ordered constitution, in which every part has its proper relation. The ready return of a rupture, or of a luxated bone.

EUTHANA'SIA, (εὐθανασία, from eu, and θάνατος, 'death,') An easy death. The opposite to this is Cacoethana'sia.

EUTHESIA, (εὐθεσία, from eu, and θεσις, 'position,') Eutaxia.

EUTHYENTERON, (εὐθύς, 'straight,' and εντέρον, 'intestine,') Rectum.

EUTHYENTEROSTENOMA, (enthycenteron, and στενός, 'narrow,') Stricture of the rectum.

EUTHYM'IA, An'imi tranquillitas, (εὐθυμία, from eu, and θυμός, 'mind,') Tranquillity of mind. A good state of the mental faculties.

EUTHYPNŒE, (εὐθύς, 'straight,' and πνοή, 'breath,') Orthopnoea.

EUTHYPNŒA, Orthopnoea.

EUTOC'IA, (ευτοκία, from eu, and τοκος, 'delivery,') An easy labour. Fecundity.

EUTROPH'IA, (ευτροφία, from eu, and τροφή, 'nourishment,') A good state of nutrition.

EUTROPHIC, Eutrophicus. A term introduced into medical terminology, by the author, for an agent whose action is exerted on the system of nutrition, without necessarily occasioning manifest increase of any of the secretions. The chief eutrophics are,—mercurials, the preparations of iodine, bromine, cod liver oil, the preparations of gold and silver, sulphur, sugar, and sarsaparilla.

EUZOODYNAMIA, (eu, ζωον, 'animal,' and δύναμις, 'power,') Sanitas.

EVAC'UANTS, Evacuanti'a, (e, and vacuare, 'to empty,') (F.) Evacuatifs. Medicines are so called which occasion a discharge by some emunctory: such as purgatives, emetics, &c.

ÉVACUATIFS, Evacuants.

EVACUATIO, Evacuation, Excretion.

EVACUATION, Evacuatio, Lapar'is. The discharge of any matter whatever by the natural passages or by an artificial opening. See Dejection.

ÉVANOUISSEMENT, (from evanescere, e, and vanescere,) 'to fade away,') Syncope.

EVAN ROOT, Geum Virginianum.
 EVAPORATION, Evaporatio, Vaporatio, Exhalatio, (e, and evaporare, vaporatum, 'to emit a vapour.') Transformation of a liquid into vapour, in order to obtain the fixed matters contained in it dry and separate from the liquid. When the vapour is received into a proper vessel and condensed, the process is called distillation. Evaporation produces cold, and this is one of the processes by which the body is cooled, through the evaporation of the perspiratory fluid.

ÉVAUX, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Evaux is situate in Auvergne, in France. The waters are hydrosulphurous and thermal. Season, from the 15th of May to the 1st of October.

EVENTRATION, Eventratio, Hypogastrorhæsis, (e, and venter, 'the belly.') A tumour, formed by a general relaxation of the parietes of the abdomen, and containing a great part of the abdominal viscera. Also, ventral hernia, or that which occurs in any other way than through the natural openings of the abdominal parietes. Lastly, any very extensive wound of the abdominal parietes, with issue of the greater part of the intestines.

EVENTUS, (e, and venire, ventum, 'to come.') Terminatio morbi. The event or issue of a disease, either favourable or unfavourable.

EVERLASTING, DIOECIOUS, Antennaria dioica.

EVERRICULUM, Specillum, (e, and vertere, 'to clean out.') A sort of sound or scoop, used for extracting sand or fragments of stone or clots of blood from the bladder, after or during the operation of lithotomy.

EVERSIO PALPEBRÆ, (e, and vertere, vernum, 'to turn,') Ectropion.

ÉVIGILATION, ([L.] evigilare, evigilatum, 'to awake,') See Sleep.

EVIL, THE, Scrofula—e. King's, Scrofula.

EVIRATIO, (e, and vir, 'a man,') Castration.

EVIRATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EVISCERATION, (e, and viscus, gen. visceris,) Xenterismus.

EVOLUTIO, (e, and volvere, volutum, 'to roll,') Development—e. Spontanea, Evolution, spontaneous.

EVOLUTION OF GERMS, see Generation.

EVOLUTION, SPONTANEOUS, Ver'sio seu Evolutio spontanea, Spontaneous ver'sion, Spontaneous expulsion, Duplication of the foetus. A term, applied, by Dr. Denman, to what he considered to be a spontaneous turning of the fetus in utero, in an arm presentation, in consequence of powerful uterine contractions forcing out the breech and feet, whilst the arm receded. It is now usually considered to be a doubling of the fetus, so that the arm changes its position but little, whilst the breech is forcibly expelled before the upper extremity;—the case becoming similar to a breech presentation.

EVOLUTION, VESICLE OF, Vesicle of development.

EVOMITIO, (e, and vomitio,) Vomiting.

EVONYMUS, Euonymus.

EVULSION, Avul'sion, Evul'sio, (evellere, evulsium (e, and vellere), 'to pluck out,') Apotill'mus, Ectill'mus, Till'mus. The action of plucking out; forcible extraction. (F.) Arrachement. This word is oftener used by the French than by the English surgeons, for the act of extracting certain parts, the presence of which is injurious,—as the teeth, &c.

EW-GOWAN, or Ewe-Gowan, ([Sc.] gowan, 'a daisy,') Bellis.

EX, as a prefix, out of. See Ec.

EX MARIBUS, (ex, and mas, gen. maris, 'a male,') Castratus.

EXACERBATIO, (ex, and acerbar, 'to embitter,') Exacerbation, Paroxysm.

EXACERBATION, Exacerbatio, Exasperatio, Exerescentia. (F.) Redoublement. An increase in the symptoms of a disorder. Often used synonymously with paroxysm.

EXACUM SPICATUM, (ex, and ago, 'to drive,') from its supposed virtue as an expeller of poison,) Coutoubea alba.

EXÆMATOSIS, (ex, αἷμα, 'blood, and the suffix osis,) Hæmatisis.

EXÆMIA, (ex, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Anæmia.

EXÆMUS, Exanguis.

EXÆ'RESIS, (εἰρασις, from εἰρ, and αἶρω, 'I take away,') (F.) Excérèse. A surgical operation, which consists in drawing, extracting, or removing, from the human body, any thing that is useless, noxious, or extraneous. It is a generic term, which includes extraction, evulsion, evacuation, excision, ablation, amputation, &c.

EXÆRESIS, Extraction.

EXAG'GERATED, Exaggeratus, (F.) Eragéré, (exaggero, (ex, and aggero, 'I heap up,') 'I magnify,') Heightened. Increased by expression. An epithet for sounds heard on auscultation and percussion when much increased—Hypereche'sis, Hypereche'ma.

EXAG'GION, (εξαγιον,) Exag'gium. The sixth part of an ounce:—four scruples.

EXAL'MA, gen. Exal'matis, (εἶλαμα, from ex, and αλλομα, 'I leap,') Exal'sis. Hippocrates calls thus the displacement of the vertebræ.

EXALSIS, (εἶλασις,) Exalma, Leap.

EXALTA'TION OF THE VITAL FORCES, Exaltatio virium, (exalto, (ex, and alto,) 'I raise,') This expression has been used, by modern pathologists, to designate a morbid increase in the action of organs, and partly that which occurs in an inflamed organ. Some use exaltation of the vital forces, and inflammation, synonymously.

EXAMBLOMA, gen. Examblo'matis, (εξαμβλωμα, from ex, and αμβλωμα, 'I abort,') Abortion.

EXAMBLOSIS, (εξαμβλωσις,) Abortion.

EXAMEN RIGOROSUM, ('a rigorous examination,') An examination of a candidate for the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the German Universities, which, like the Tentamen medicum, is conducted in Latin, and takes place before the medical faculty on all branches of medicine.

EXANASTOMOSIS, Anastomosis.

EXANASTROPHE, (ex, ανα, and στροφή, 'I turn,') Convalescence.

EXANGI'A, (ex, and αγγειον, 'a vessel,') Exangeli'a. An enlargement or rupture of a blood-vessel, without external opening. A genus in the order Dysthetica, class Hæmatica of Good. It comprises aneurism and varix.

EXANGIA ANEURISMA, Aneurism.

EXAN'GUIOUS, Exsang'guine, Exsanguineus, Exæ'mus, Exsang'guis, (F.) Exsanguis, (ex, and sanguis, 'blood,') Seeming to be bloodless; as a female, who has suffered largely from uterine hemorrhage. See Anæmia.

EXANIA, (ex, and anus,) Proctocele.

EXANIMA'TION, Exanima'tio, (ex, and anima,) This word has two acceptations. Sometimes, it means real death, corresponding with the Greek θανάτος, mors. At others, it signifies apparent death, corresponding with the Greek ἀψυχία, εκψυχία, εκλυσις, An'imi deliquium.

EXANTHEM, Ezanthema, Anthe'ma eruptivum, Epanthe'ma, Efflorescentia, Exanthis'ma, Ec'thy'ma, Epanaste'ma, Epanthe'ma, Epanthis'ma, Efflora'tio, (εξανθημα, from εξ, and ανθηω, 'I bloom,') A rash. (F.) Ezanthème, Élévure. Under this term is comprehended, by some, every kind of eruption, of which the skin is the seat. Others understand by it those eruptions that are accompanied by fever, Febres exanthemat'icæ; incluing, under the head of the major exanthemata, those which attack a person but once in his life, and which are communicated by specific contagion: and, under the minor exanthemata, those which are not marked by these characteristics. Small-pox, measles, cow-pox, &c., belong to the major:—chicken-pox, herpes, lichen, &c., to the minor. The general acceptance of Exanthem is, however, a more or less vivid, circumscribed, or diffuse redness of the skin, which diminishes, or disappears transiently, under the pressure of the finger.

EXANTHEM, CARBUNCULAR, Anthracia—e. Ichorous, Emphysis—e. Pustulosus, Empyesis—e. Rash, Enanthesis.

EXANTHEMA, gen. Exanthe'matis, Eminence, Exanthem—e. Antivariolosum, Vaccina—e. Interuum, Eisanthema.

EXANTHEMA IOD'ICUM. An eruption of dark red definite spots, of various sizes, spreading over the whole body, without the formation of scales, and disappearing only after a long time, and which seems to be produced occasionally by the use of iodine.

EXANTHEMA MILIARIA, Miliary fever—e. Pests, Plague—e. Serosum, Pemphigus—e. Strophulus, Strophulus—e. Urticatum, Urticaria—e. Vaccina, Vaccina—e. Variicella, Variicella.

EXANTHEMAT'ICA, Eruptive fevers. Cutaneous eruptions, essentially accompanied with fever;—the third order in the class Hæmatica of God.

EXANTHEMATIS'CHESIS, Exanthematos'chesis, (exanthem, and αχειν, 'to withhold.')

EXANTHEMATOL'OGY, Exanthematolog'ia, (exanthem, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

EXANTHEMATOPHTHAL'MIA, Ophthalm'ia exanthemat'ica, (exanthem, and οφθαλμια, 'inflammation of the eye.')

EXANTHEMATOUS, Exanthematos'us, Exanthemat'icus, (F.) Exanthématique. Relating or appertaining to exanthem, as "an exanthematos eruption," (F.) Éruption exanthématique.

EXANTHEME INTESTINALE, see Typhus. EXANTHESIS, (εξανθεις,) see Efflorescence—e. Arthrosia, Dengue—e. Roseola, Roseola—e. Rubeola, Rubeola.

EXANTHISMA, (εξανθισμα,) Exanthem.

EXANTHROPIA, (ex, and ανθρωπος, 'man,')

Misanthropia.

EXAPSIDA, (εξαψις, from ex, and απειν, 'to inflame,')

EXARCHIA'TER, Exarchia'tros. Chief of the archiatri, or chief of physicians, a title, like that of Comes Archiatro'rum, given to the chief physician of an emperor or king. Archiater appears to have meant, at times, the same thing.

EXARMA, gen. Exar'matis, (εξαρμα, from ex, and αιρειν, 'to raise up,')

EXAR'SIO, (ex, and ardeo, arsum, 'to burn.')

A burning heat.

EXARTEMA, gen. Exarte'matis, (ex, and αρωα, 'I suspend,')

EXARTERITIS, Exarteri'tis, (ex, and arteria, 'an artery,' and itis,)

Inflammation of the outer coat of an artery.

EXARTHREMA, gen. Exarthre'matis, (εξαρθρημα, from ex, and αρθρον, 'a joint,') EXARTHROMA, gen. Exarthro'mutis, (εξαρθρημα,) Luxation.

EXARTHROSIS, (εξαρθρωσις,) Luxation—e. Parctica, see Pareticus.

EXARTICULATIO, (ex, and articulus, 'a joint,')

EXARYSIS, (εξαρισις,) Exhaustion.

EXASPERATIO, (ex, and asperare, asperatum, 'to sharpen,')

EXACERBATION, see Imbibition.

EXCÆCARIA AGALLOCHA. (excæcare, 'to make blind,')

EXCALEFACTIO, (ex, calidus, 'warm,')

EXCARNA'TION, Excarna'tio, (ex, and caro, gen. carnis, 'flesh.')

A mode of making anatomical preparations, which consists in separating injected vessels from the parts in which they are situate. This is done by means of corrosion by an acid or by putrefaction.

EXCASTRATIO, Castration, Eunuch.

EXCATHISMA, gen. Excathis'matis, (ex, and καθισμα, 'a seat,')

EXCAVATOR DENTAL, (ex, and carare, cautum, 'to make hollow,')

EXCEREBRATIO, (ex, and cerebrum, 'brain,')

EXCERNENT, (ex, and cernere, 'to sift,')

EXCIDENTIA, (ex, and cadere, 'to fall,')

EXCIP'IENT, Excip'iens, (excipere, (ex, and capere, 'to receive,') EXCISIO, Entaille, Excision, (excisio, excidere, excisum, (ex, and cadere, 'to cut off,')

EXCITABIL'ITY, Excitabil'itas. Irritability.

(From excitare, (ex, and citare, citatum, 'to excite,')

EXCITANT, Stimulant.

EXCITATION, Excitatio, Excitement. The act of exciting;

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCITO or EXCITO-MOTORY, (F.) Excitoteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow,

EXCITATION, Excitatio, Excitement. The act of exciting;

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCITO or EXCITO-MOTORY, (F.) Excitoteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall

to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow,

EXCITATION, Excitatio, Excitement. The act of exciting;

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCITO or EXCITO-MOTORY, (F.) Excitoteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall

to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow,

EXCITATION, Excitatio, Excitement. The act of exciting;

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCITO or EXCITO-MOTORY, (F.) Excitoteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall

to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow,

EXCORIATIO, (ex, and corium, 'skin,') Ecdora, Excoriation.

EXCORIATION, Excoriat'io, Excoriat'ura, Am'yché (F.) Écorchure. A slight wound, which removes only the skin.

EXCORIATURA, Excoriation.

EXCREATION, Excreat'io, Excreat'io, Screa'tus, Rasca'tio, (ex, and screare, 'to spit,') Act of spitting. (F.) Crachement. See Exspuitio.

EXCREMENT, Excrement'um, Retrimen'tum, Excret'um, Excret'io, Perit'oma, Diachore'ma, Aph'odos, Aphodeu'ma, Apocho'reon, Apo'crisis, Arda, Ar'dalus, (excernere, excretum, (ex, and cernere,) 'to separate,' 'cleanse,') Everything, which is evacuated from the body of an animal by the natural emunctories as superfluous; such as the fecal matters, the urine, perspiration, nasal mucus, &c. Generally, however, the term is restricted to the fecal evacuations;—Purgament'a, He'dra, Se'des, Fæ'ces, Ster'cus, Cac'cæ, Spat'ile, (especially when liquid,) Deject'io alvi'na, O'nera al'vi seu vent'ris, Sor'des vent'ris, Hypochore'ma, Cæ'lia, Hypochore'sis, Mer'da, Mer'dus, Catar-rhex'is, Co'prus, Co'pranon, Scor.

EXCREMENT, HUMAN, Stercus humanum.

EXCREMENTITIAL, Excrementit'ius, Excrementit'ius, (F.) Excrémentieux, Excrémentiel. That which is similar to excrement, and forms part of it. Excrementitial humours or parts are those destined to be evacuated as incapable of administering to the nutrition of the body.

EXCREMENTORECREMENTITIAL, Excrementorecrementit'ius. Animal fluids intended to be partly absorbed and partly rejected.

EXCRESCENCE, Exerescen'tia, Eephy'ma, Phymat'osis, Hypersarco'sis, Sarcophy'ia, Ca'ro exeres'cens, (exrescere, (ex, and rescere,) 'to grow outwards,') (Sc.) Squalme. (F.) Excroissance. A tumour, which forms at the surface of organs, and especially on the skin, mucous membranes, or ulcerated surfaces. Exrescences differ in size, shape, cause, &c., and each requires its own treatment, Warts, condylomata, polypi, hemorrhoids, belong to this head.

EXCRESCENTIA, Exacerbation, Protuberance, Tumour—e. Carnosa, Sarcoma—e. Fungosa, Fungosity—e. Gingivæ, Epulis—e. Vesicæ urinariæ carnosæ, Cysthypersarcosis.

EXCRETA, see Excretion.

EXCRÉTEUR, Excretory.

EXCRETIO, Excretion, Excrement—e. Alvina, Defecation—e. Fæcum alvinarum, Defecation—e. Urinae involuntaria, Enuresis.

EXCRETION, Excret'io, Ec'crisis, Evacuat'io, Eject'io, Expul'sio, Eges'tio, Diachore'sis, (excernere, excretum, (ex, and cernere,) 'to separate,') The separation or throwing off of those matters, Excrete'ta, Eges'ta, Ion'ta, Apion'ta, from the body of an animal, which are supposed to be useless, as the urine, perspiration, and fæces.

EXCRÉTOIRE, Excretory.

EXCRETORY OR EXCRETORY, Excretori'us, (F.) Excréteur ou Excrétoire. An Excretory vessel or duct, Ductus excretori'us, is one which transmits the fluid secreted by a gland either externally or into the reservoirs into which it has to be deposited. The existence of an excretory duct was regarded as a distinctive character of the glands properly so called.

EXCRETORY ORGAN means any one charged with the office of excreting; thus, the skin is said to be an excretory organ, because through it the perspiration takes place.

EXCRETUM, Excrement.

EXCROISSANCE, Exrescence.

EXCUTIA VENTRICULI, (ex, and quatio, 'to shake,') Stom'ach Brush. An instrument, composed of iron or brass wire, at one of the extremities of which is a pencil of bristles. Some ancient authors proposed this to extract foreign bodies from the œsophagus, as well as to cleanse the stomach of viscid and tenacious matters adhering to it.

EXECHEBRONCHUS, (εξεχειν, 'to project,' and βρογχος, 'the throat,') Bronchocele.

EXECEGLUTI, (εξεχειν, 'to project,' and γλουται, 'the nates,') Exischioi.

EXEDENS, (ex, and edere, 'to eat,') see Heresis.

EXELCOSIS, (ex, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer,') see Ulceration.

EXELCYS'MUS, (εξελευσμος, from ex, and ἔλκω, 'I draw,') Extraction. Also the act of breaking out into ulcers.

EXENCÉPHALE, (ex, and εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon,') A genus of monsters, in which the encephalon is situate in a great measure out of the cranium, the upper portion of which is almost wholly wanting.

EXENTERATION, Exenterismus.

EXENTERIS'MUS, Exenter'isis, Exenterat'io, Exenterat'io, Eviscerat'io, Deviscerat'io, Umbow'elling, Embow'elling or Imbow'elling, Viscerat'io, (ex, and εντερον, 'an intestine,') The operation of taking out the bowels.

EXERA'MA, gen. Exera'matis, (εξεραμα, from ex, and εραω, 'I pour out,') Any thing cast out. Vomiting; or the matter vomited.

EXERCISE, Exercita'tio, Exercit'ium, Asce'sis, Gymna'sion, (exercere, exercitum, 'to work,') Every motion of the body arising from the contraction of muscles subjected to the will. Also, the action of any organ whatever. Exercises may be active or passive. The passive are referred to under the head of Gestation. The chief active exercises are:—walking, running, dancing, hunting, fencing, playing at ball, cricket, racket, quoits, swimming, declamation, and singing. Exercise is an important prophylactic, particularly for those disposed to be plethoric. It improves the digestion; augments the secretions; and, when used in moderation, gives strength to the body; but when carried to excess, produces debility and disease.

EXÈRÈSE, Exaresis.

EXERRHO'SIS, (ex, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') The discharge which takes place by insensible perspiration.

EXFETATION, see Pregnancy.

EXFOLIATIF, Exfoliative.

EXFOLIATION, Enfoliat'io, Desquamatio, Eclep'isis, (ex, and folium, 'a leaf,') By this is meant the separation of the dead portions of a bone, tendon, aponeurosis, or cartilage, under the form of lamellæ or small scales. Exfoliation is accomplished by the instinctive action of the parts, and its object is to detach the dead portion from those subjacent, which are still alive. For this purpose the latter throw out fleshy granulations, and a more or less abundant supuration occurs, which tends to separate the exfoliated part—now become an extraneous body. The ancients distinguished exfoliation into sensible and insensible, according as the dead portions of bone were detached in fragments of greater or less size, or in very thin pieces, and in an almost insensible manner. When the dead part embraces all or almost all the substance of a bone, it takes the name Sequestrum.

EXFO'LIATIVE, Exfoliativ'us, Desquamato'rius, (F.) Exfoliatif. That which takes away by leaves or scales. The term has been applied to certain medicines, which were regarded as proper to hasten exfoliation, such as alcohol, oil of turpentine, tincture of myrrh, &c.

EXFOLIATIVE TREPAN, Ecclépiotrep'anum. An ancient raspatory, or instrument for scraping exfoliating portions of bone.

EXHALAISON, Exhalation.

EXHALANT, Exhalant, Exhalans, (exhalare, exhalatum, (ex, and halere, 'to breathe,') 'to exhale, throw out.')

EXHALANT VESSELS, Vasæ exhalantia, are very minute, and rise from the arterial capillary system. They are situate in every tissue of the body, and on the surface of the mucous and serous membranes and skin; on which each pours its particular fluid. Bichat distinguished three sets. 1. The external, terminating on the mucous and external dermoid system, where they pour the matter of perspiration. 2. The internal, comprising those of the areolar and medullary tissues, and of synovial surfaces; and, 3. The nutritive exhalants, which vary in each organ where they are found, and preside over the phenomena of composition and increase of every part of the body. The exhalants are the antagonists of the absorbents. They are imaginary, as a distinct set from the capillary vessels.

EXHALATIO, Evaporation, Exhalation.

EXHALATION, Exhalatio; (same etymon as Exhalant,) Anathymiasis, Aponeusis, (F.) Exhalaison. A function, by virtue of which certain fluids, obtained from the blood, are spread, in the form of dew, in the areolæ of the different textures, or at the surface of membranes; either for the sake of being thrown out of the body, or to serve ulterior purposes. The sweat is a liquid excrementitious exhalation; the serous fluid of the pleura, a liquid recrementitious exhalation.

Exhalation is also applied to that which exhales from any body whatever, organic or inorganic, dead or living.

EXHALATION, PULMONARY, see Perspiration.

EXHAUST'ION, Exhaustio, Vires exhaustæ, (exaurire, exhaustum, (ex, and haurire,') 'to draw out.') (F.) Épuisement. Loss of strength, occasioned by excessive evacuations, great fatigue or privation of food, or by disease.

EXHIL'ARANT, Exhilians, (ex, and hilaro, 'I make merry.') An agent that exhilarates or enlivens.

EXHUMA'TION, Exhumatio, Effusio, (ex, and humus, 'the ground.') The disinterment of a corpse. The circumstances which render this necessary are:—1. Judicial investigations relative to the body of the person inhumed. 2. The removal of a body from one cemetery to another; and, 3. The evacuation of cemeteries or sepulchral vaults. The operation is attended with much unpleasant smell and annoyance, and requires the use of disinfecting agents, of which one of the most available is chlorinated lime. See Disinfection. The putrid effluvia from animal substances are not, however, found to excite endemic disease.

EXIDIA AURICULA JUDÆ, Peziza auricula.

EXINANIT'ION, Exinanitio, (ex, and inanis, 'empty.') Extreme exhaustion; complete evacuation.

EXIS'CHIUM, (ex, and ischion, 'the ischium.') Prominence of the hips.

EXIS'CHIUS, (εξισχιος, Exischius. A luxation of the os femoris. Those with large nates, and prominent hips, were formerly called Exischioi and Execheglyti.

EXITURA, (exire, exitum, (ex, and eo,') 'to go out.') According to some, any abscess which discharges. Paracelsus calls thus every kind of putrid excrement.

EXITUS, gen. Exitūs. The outer termination or exit of a canal. The termination of a disease.

EXO, (εξω, 'without, outwards.')

EXOARTERITIS, see Arteritis.

EXOCARDIAC, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDIAL, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDITIS, Pericarditis.

EX'OCHAS, Ex'ochæ, (εξοχας, from εζεω, (εξ, and εχω, 'I project.') A soft tumour—as a hemorrhoid—outside of the anus. An outward pile.

EXOCHÊ, (εξοχη, Eminence, Exochas.

EXOCHORION, see Chorion.

EXOCOLITIS, see Colitis.

EXOCULATIO, (ex, and oculus, 'an eye.') Want of eyes. Want of vision. Blindness.

EXOCYS'TÊ, Exocystis, (exo, and κυστις, 'the bladder.') A prolapsus of the bladder into the urethra. Also called Prolapsus vesicæ, Edoptosis vesicæ, (F.) Renversement de la vessie.

EXOCYS'TÊ NOELIA'NA. Protrusion of the inner membrane of the bladder. So called from M. Noel, who first accurately described it.

EXOCYS'TÊ SOLINGENIA'NA. Protrusion of the neck of the bladder. Called after M. Solingen, who first accurately described it.

EXODIC, Effluent.

EXŒDESIS, (ex, and οιδω, 'to swell.') Swelling.

EXOËNTERITIS, see Enteritis.

EXOG'ENOUS, (exo, and γενω, 'I engender.') A term first applied to plants—hence called Ex'ogens—in which the wood increases by annual additions to the outside.

In animal anatomy, processes which shoot out from any part are termed exog'enuous. An exogenous aneurism is one caused by division, from without, of the arterial walls.

EXOGENS, see Exogenous.

EXOGONIUM PURGA, Convolvulus jalapa.

EXOGONYAN'CON, (exo, γων, 'the knee,') and αγων, 'an elbow.') Bowing of the knees outwards.

EXOLINE, Exolinc, (low [L.] exonium, 'an excuse, from exonerare, 'to exonerate' [?].) In France, a certificate of excuse, exemption, or dispensation, given to those summoned to appear before a court of justice, and who are unable to do so.

EXOLCE, (εξολκη, from ex, and ελω, 'I draw.') Extraction.

EXOLUTION, Syncope.

EXOMETRA, (exo, and μετρα, 'uterus.') Pro-lapsus uteri.

EXOMOIOSIS, (εξομοιωσις, from ex, and ομοιος, 'like.') Assimilation.

EXOMPHALOCELE, (exomphalus, and κληη, 'rupture.') Exomphalus.

EXOMPHALUS, Exomphalum, (εξομφαλον, Exumbilicatio, Exomphalocèle, Omphalocèle, Hernia umbilicalis, Omphalocèle, Omphaloproptosis, Prolapsus umbilici, (F.) Hernie ombilicale, H. du nombril, Umbilical hernia, (ex, and ομφαλος, 'the navel.') Hernia occurring at the navel. This affection happens more frequently in infants, and takes place by the umbilical ring. In adults, it occurs more commonly in females than in males; and, when it does so, the sac passes in the vicinity of the umbilicus. The organs found in this kind of hernia are particularly—the epiploon, the jejunum, the arch of the colon, and sometimes the stomach. The tumour is, in general, round, and presents all the characters of hernia. It is, commonly, readily reducible, and not subject to strangulation. It must be reduced, and retained by an elastic bandage, made in the form of a girdle, and furnished with a pad at its middle part. When strangulated, the stricture may be divided upwards and towards the left side.

EXONCOMA, gen. Exoncomatis, (εξογκωμα, Exoncomosis, (ex, ογκος, 'a tumour,') and ομα, 'a large, prominent tumour. Usel, by Galen, for protuberance of the vertebrae after luxation.

EXONCOSIS, (ex, γκος, 'a tumour,' and osis.)
Exoncoma—e. Linguae, Glossoncus.

EXONEIROGMIUS, (εξονειρωγμος, from ex, and νειρωσσω, (ονειρος, 'a dream,') 'to dream lasciviously.') Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEIROISIS, Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEURISM, (εξο, and νευρον, 'a nerve.')

Magnetism, animal.

EXOPHTHALMIA, Πτο'σις seu Prolap'sus seu Prociden'tia Oc'uli seu Bul'bi Oc'uli, Exorbitis-mus, Ophthalmoccl'e, Ophthalmopto'sis, Oc'uli toti'us prominen'tia, (ex, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.')

(F.) Procidence de l'œil. A protrusion of the eye from its orbit, occasioned by an abscess or tumour in the areolar texture of the orbit; by exostosis of the parietes of the orbit, &c. In exophthalmia, the eye is pressed forwards; the eyelids are raised and separated, so that they can no longer cover the eye and defend it from the action of extraneous bodies; it becomes inflamed, and the sight is disturbed or destroyed. The treatment of course depends upon the cause. An anæmic condition, accompanied by protrusion of the eyeballs, palpitation of the heart and arteries, and tumefaction of the thyroid gland, has been described under the names Cachex'ia exophthal'mica, Exophthal'mic goitre, Maladie de Basedow, and Anæmic protrusion of the eye-balls, (F.) Cachexie exophthalmique.

EXOPHTHALMIA FUNGOSA, Sarcosis bulbi—e. Sarcomatica, Sarcosis bulbi.

EXOPHTHALMIC, Exophthal'micus, (F.) Exophthalmique. Appertaining or relating to exophthalmia.

EXOPHTHALMUS, (εξοφθαλμος.) Goggle-eyed, (Prov.) Grozet-eyed. One whose eyes are very prominent. The opposite to Cœlophthalmus.

EXORBITISMUS, (ex, and orbita, 'orbit.')

Exophthalmia.

EXORMIA, (ex, and ορμαιω, 'to break forth,')

Papula—e. Lichen, Lichen—e. Prurigo, Prurigo—e. Strophulus, Strophulus.

EXORTUS UNGUIUM, ('the beginning of the nails.')

See Nail.

EXOSIS, (εξωσις, from ex, and ωσειω, 'to impel.')

Luxation.

EXOSKELETON, see Skeleton.

EXOSMIC, Exosmotic.

EXOSMOSE', Exosmo'sis, Transuda'tion, (ex, and ωσμοσ, 'impulse.')

The opposite to Endosmose. The act by which substances transude from within to without an animal or other membrane.

EXOSMOTIC, Exosmot'icus, Ecos'mic, Exos'micus. Belonging to Exosmose—as an exosmotic current.

EXOSSATIO, (ex, and os, gen. ossis, 'a bone.')

Exostosis.

EXOSTEMMA or EXOSTEMA CARIBÆUM, gen. Exostemmat'is, (exo, 'without,' and στεμμα, 'a crown.')

Cinchonæ caribææ cortex.

EXOSTOMA, Exostosis.

EXOSTOSE, Exostosis—e. des Dents, Exostosis dentium—e. Sous-ungéale, see Subungual.

EXOSTO'SIS, Hyperosto'sis, Emphy'ma exostosis, Ecosto'ma, Eposto'ma, Eposto'sis, Osteo'ma, Osto'ma, Osteoph'ya, Osteonco'sis, Exossa'tio, Os'sis Eminen'tia, Os'teophyte; (F.) Exostose, (ex, and οσσειον, 'a bone.')

An osseous tumour, which forms at the surface of bones, or in their cavities. Various kinds have been enumerated. Ivory Exostosis, (F.) E. eburnée;—that which has the appearance and consistence of ivory. Laminar Exostosis, (F.) E. laminée;—that which is formed of laminae in superposition, or of distinct filaments. The Spongy Exostosis is that whose structure is analogous to the spongy tissue of bones. Exostoses are sometimes distinguished into the true, which seem to be a projection of the osseous substance, and the same organization and hardness as that substance; and the false or osteo-sarcoma. Exostosis may depend on syphilis, scrofula, rickets, gut, &c. In such cases, it is important to get rid of the primary disease.

Those exostoses, which occur within the bones, have by some been called Enosto'ses.

EXOSTOSIS, Spina ventosa.

EXOSTOSIS DENT'IIUM, (F.) Exostose des Dents.

Exostosis of the teeth.

EXOSTOSIS SEATOMATODES, Osteosteatomia—e. Subungual, see Subungual.

EXOTERIC, (εξωτερικος, 'outer.')

See Esoteric.

EXOTHESIS, (εξωθησις, from εξωθειω, 'I put out.')

Luxation.

EXOTIC, Eco'ticus, (εξωτικος, from εξω, 'with-out.')

That which comes from abroad. Plants or drugs which are procured from abroad are so called. It is opposed to indigenous.

EXOTICADEN'IA, (exotic, and αδενω, 'I dislike.')

Aversion for exotic drugs.

EXOTICHEMATOSIS, (exotic, and hæmatisis.)

Transfusion.

EXOTICOMAN'IA, (exotic, and mania.)

The opposite to exoticadenia. Fondness for exotic remedies.

EXOTICOSYM'PHYSIS, (exotic, and συμφυσις, 'a growing together.')

A union or growing together of foreign bodies, as of a foreign body with the human.

EXPANSIO, (expandere, expansum, (ex, and pandere, 'to open,')

'to spread out.')

Expansion—e. Musculosa, Platysma myoides.

EXPAN'SION, Expan'sio. A prolongation or spreading out presented by certain organs. Thus, we say an aponeurotic expansion, &c.

EXPATRATIO, (ex, and patratio, 'copulation.')

Ejaculation (of Sperm).

EXPECTANT, Exspec'tans, (expectare, expectatum, (ex, and spectare, 'to look,') 'to wait.')

That which waits:—as Expectant Medicine,—La Médecine expectante. See Expectation.

EXPECTA'TION, Expecta'tio. The word expectation has been applied, in medicine, to that method, which consists in observing the progress of diseases, and removing deranging influences, without prescribing active medicines, unless such shall be imperiously required. It consists, in fact, in leaving the disease almost wholly to the efforts of nature, and has been termed the art of curing diseases by expectation or waiting, Ars sanan'di cum expectatio'nē.

EXPECTORANT, Expectorative, Expectorans, Anacathar'ticus, Sputato'rius, Antibech'icus, Pty'smagogue, (ex, and pectus, gen. pectoris, 'the breast.')

A medicine capable of facilitating or provoking expectoration. There is probably no such thing as a direct expectorant. They all act through the system, or by impressions made on parts at a distance, which, through the medium of general, continuous, or contiguous sympathy, excite the secretory vessels of the air-passages into action. The following are the chief reputed expectorants:—Ammoniacum; Asafetida; Galbanum; Ipecacuanha; Myroxylon; Myrrha; Inhalations of Iodine, Stramonium, Tar, Burning Wool, Tobacco, &c.; Scilla; Senega, and Tolutanum.

EXPECTORATIO, Expectoration—e. Sanguinis, Hæmoptysis—e. Solida, Cynanche trachealis.

EXPECTORA'TION, Expectora'tio, Echel'ysis, Bex hu'mida, Anap'tysis, Prop'tysis, Stethocathar'tis, Anacathar'tis, Anabex'is, Rais'ing. The act of expelling from the chest matters or secretions collected or existing there. It is, likewise, used for the expectorated matter.

EXPECTORATION, PRUNE-JUICE, see Prune-juice.

EXPECTORATION DE SANG, Hæmoptysis.
EXPECTORATIVE, Expectorant.

EXPELLENS, (expellere, (ex, and pellere), 'to drive away.') Expulsive.

EXPERIENCE, Experientia, Peir'a, Empeir'a, (ex, and πειρα, 'a trial.') A knowledge of things acquired by observation. In medicine, this knowledge can be obtained both by the practitioner's own experience, and by that obtained from tradition and from books. To profit by experience requires a mind capable of appreciating the proper relations between cause and effect; and hence it happens, that false experience, Experientia fallax, is extremely common; and that a man had better, in many instances, trust to that which he has learned from others, than to his own fallacious observation.

The union of accurate observation by the physician with that handed down by medical writers constitutes perfect experience, so far as it is attainable in any individual case.

EXPÉRIENCE, Experiment—e. de Mariotte, Mariotte, experiment of.

EXPERIENTIA, Experience.

EXPERIMENT, Experimentum, (F.) Expérience. A trial, made on the bodies of men or animals, for the purpose of detecting the effect of a remedy, or of becoming better acquainted with their structure, functions, or peculiarities. In a more general sense, it means any trial instituted with the intent of becoming better acquainted with any thing. By experiments on living animals, we have obtained much valuable information in the various departments of medicine; but particularly in physiology and toxicology.

EXPERIMENT OF MARIOTTE, see Mariotte.

EXPERIMENT OF WEPFER, Experimentum Wepferianum. An experiment attributed to Wepfer, which consisted in injecting air into the blood-vessels of animals, with the view of observing its effects on the economy.

EXPERTS NUPTIARUM, ('ignorant of marriage rites,') Virgin.

EXPERT, (F.) Expertus, (ex, and peritus, 'skilled,') Expert. Skillful or of good experience. A physician, charged with the duty of making a report, (F.) Expertise, upon any case of legal medicine.

EXPERTISE, see Expert.

EXPIRATION, Expiratio, Expiratio, Ec-pnoë, Ecpneumato'sis, Ecpnen'sis, Apopne'sis, Apopne'noë, Apopne'a, (expirare, (ex, and spirare, spiratum), 'to breathe out,') The act of expelling from the chest, the air received during inspiration. 'To expire,' is, also, to emit the last breath, or 'to die.' See Vital capacity.

EXPIRATORY, Expiratio'ni inser'viens. Relating or appertaining to expiration. The expiratory muscles are all those which contribute to diminish the cavity of the chest, for the purpose of expelling the air contained in the lungs or of producing expiration. These muscles are, chiefly, the intercostals, triangularis sterni, quadratus lumborum, serratus posticus inferior, the oblique and recti muscles of the abdomen, and the sacrolumbal.

EXPIRE, see Expiration.

EXPLORATIO, (explorare, exploratum, 'to search into,') Exploration—e. Abdominis, Abdominoscopia.

EXPLORATION, Exploratio, Recognit'io. The act of observing and attentively examining or investigating every thing connected with a case of disease. The word is chiefly used in this sense by the French practitioners.

EXPLORATOR, CHEST. An instrument, proposed by Dr. B. Babington for exploring the chest in cases of empyema. It consists of a needle, contained in the smallest sized canula. This is passed between the ribs into the chest.

The needle is then withdrawn, and the escape of fluid indicates the nature of the case.

EXPLORATORIUM, Sound, Specillum.

EXPRESION, Expres'sio, Ecpres'mns, Ecthlip'sis, (ex, and premere, pressum, 'to press,') The act of compressing a substance, for the purpose of separating from it the fluids which it contains. Also, the manner in which impressions made upon us are depicted; especially in the traits of the countenance.

EXPRESSION OF SWEAT, (F.) Sueur d'expression, is a term given to the passive perspiration observable in very debilitated individuals.

EXPUITION, Exspuition.

EXPULSIF, Expulsive.

EXPULSIO, (expellere, expulsum, (ex, and pellere), 'to drive away,') Excretion—e. Fæcum, Defecation—e. Fœtus, Parturition.

EXPULSION, SPONTANEOUS, Evolution, spontaneous.

EXPULSIVE, Expellens, Expulso'rius, (F.) Expulsif. Driving out.

An expul'sive band'age, (F.) Bandage expulsif, is one constructed with the view of compressing a part, from which we are desirous of expelling pus, serum, &c. Certain medicines were formerly called expul'sives, which were believed to have the power of driving the humours towards the skin;—as diaphoretics, and sudorifics.

EXPULTRIX, see Vis expultrix.

EXSANGUE, (ex, and sanguis, 'blood,') Exanguis.

EXSANGUINE, Exanguis.

EXSANGUINITY, Anæmia.

EXSANGUIS, Exanguis. Exsang'uis is used by Ausonius for one exhausted by venery;—as sanguis meant sperm as well as blood. See Sperm.

EXSARCOMA, gen. Exsarco'matis, Sarcoma.

EXSCREATIO, Excretion.

EXSECTIO, Exsection—e. Virilium, Castration.

EXSECTION, Exsec'tio, (ex, and secare, sectum, 'to cut,') The cutting out of any thing, as of a nerve.

EXSECTUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXSICCATIO, (ex, and siccare, siccatum, 'to dry,') Drying.

EXSICCATIVA, Desiccativa.

EXSOLUTIO, (ex, and solvere, solutum, 'to loosen,') Elysis.

EXSPIRATION, Expiration.

EXSPUIT'ION, Exspuit'io, Sput'io, Sputa'tio, Anachremp'sis, Apochremp'sis, Chremp'sis, Pty'sis, Anacine'ma, Anacine'sis, (F.) Expuition, Sputation, (ex, and spuo, 'I spit,') Rejection of the matters accumulated in the pharynx and larynx; spitting.

EXSTASIS, Ecstasis.

EXTINCTIO, see Extinctio.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpation—e. Linguae, Glossectomia—e. Testiculorum, Castratio.

EXTROPH'IA, Ex'trophy, Ect'strophê, (ex, and στροφη, 'turning,') Extrover'sio, Extrover'sion. Eversion or turning out of a part—as of the eyelids. A term used by M. Chaussier for certain displacements of organs, and especially of the urinary bladder.

EXTROPH'IA OR EX'TROPHY OF THE BLAD'DER, (F.) Renversement de la Vessie, is a faulty conformation, in which the organ opens above the pubes; so that in the hypogastric region there is a red, mucous surface, formed by the inner coat of the bladder; on which two prominences are distinguishable, corresponding to the openings of the ureters.

EXSUCCATIO, (ex, and succus, 'juice,') Echinoma.

EXSUCTIO, Suc'tio, Ecmysce'sis, (ex, and sugere, suctum, 'to suck,') The action of sucking.

EXSUDATIO, (ex, and sudare, sudatum, 'to sweat,') Ehidrosis, Exudation.

ENSUFFLATIO, (ex, and sufflare, sufflatum, 'to blow.') Ephysepsis.

EXTRA, see Entrails.

EXTASE, Ecstasie.

EXTEMPORANEUS, Extempora'neus, Extempora'lis, (F.) Extemporane, (ex, and tempus, gen. temporis, 'time.')

Those prescriptions are called 'extemporaneous,' or 'magistral,' which are made on the spot, and composed according to the prescription of the physician.

EXTENSEUR COMMUN DES DOIGTS, (extendere, (ex, and tendere, tensum), 'to stretch out.')

Extensor digitorum communis—e. Commun des orteils, Extensor communis digitorum pedis—e. Court du Pouce, Extensor pollicis brevis—e. Long du Pouce, Extensor longus pollicis—e. Petit des orteils, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis—e. Propre de l'Index, Extensor proprius indicis—e. Propre du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti.

EXTENSIBILITY, Extensibil'itus, (extensio, and habilis, 'able.')

A property, possessed by certain bodies, of being capable of extension or elongation.

EXTENSIO, Extension, Tetanus.

EXTENSION, Extens'io, Tu'sis, Ec'tasis, Cu'ta'asis, Ana'tasis, An operation in surgery, in which either by the hands alone, or by straps, a fractured or luxated limb is pulled strongly, to restore it to its natural position. It is the opposite of Counterextension.

EXTENSOR. (F.) Extenseur. A muscle, whose office is to extend certain parts.

EXTENSOR BREVIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, Ped'icus, (F.) Calcaneo-phalangien commun, of DUMAS; Muscle p'edieux ou petit extenseur des orteils, Calcaneo-sus-phalangettien commun—(Ch.), Carré du pied; Short Extensor of the Toes. A muscle, situate on the dorsal region of the foot. It arises from the external surface of the calcaneum, and at the anterior edge of a ligament, which unites that bone to the astragalus. Anteriorly, each of its divisions terminates by a small tendon, which is fixed successively, at the superior part of the posterior extremity of the first phalanx of the great toe, and to the second and last phalanges of the next three toes. Its use is to extend the first four toes, and to direct them a little outwards.

EXTENSOR CARPI RADIALIS BREVIOR, see Radialis—e. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital muscles.

EXTENSOR COMMUNIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, E. Longus Digitorum Pedis, E. Digitorum longus, Cnemodactyle'us, (F.) Péronéo-tibi-sus-phalangettien commun, Péronéo-sus-phalangettien commun, Extenseur commun des Orteils. This muscle is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is long, thin, flattened, simple, and fleshy above, and divided into four tendons below. It arises from the outer tuberosity of the tibia and the anterior surface of the fibula, and is inserted into the superior part of the posterior extremity of the second and third phalanges of the last four toes. It extends the three phalanges of these toes.

EXTENSOR DIGITORUM COMMUNIS, E. digitorum communis manūs cum extensorē pro'prio auricularis, Digito'rum Ten'sor; (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangettien commun—(Ch.) Extenseur commun des Doigts, Common Extensor of the Fingers. A long, flattened muscle; simple above, and divided into four portions inferiorly. It is situate at the posterior part of the forearm; arises from the external tuberosity of the humerus, from the aponeurotic septa situate between it and the neighbouring muscles, and is inserted at the posterior surface of the second and third phalanges of the last four fingers. This muscle extends the phalanges of the last four fingers upon each other, and upon the metacarpal bone. It can, also, extend the hand on the forearm.

digitorum pedis—e. Dorsi communis, Sacro-spinalis—e. Indicis, E. Proprius indicis—e. Internodii ossis pollicis, E. longus pollicis—e. Minor Pollicis manūs, E. pollicis brevis—e. Ossis metacarpi pollicis manūs, Abductor longus pollicis—e. Longus digitorum pedis, E. communis digitorum pedis.

EXTENSOR POL'LICIS BREVIS, E. minor pollicis manūs seu primi in'erno'dii seu pollicis primus seu secun'di interno'dii (DOUGLAS.) seu secun'di interno'dii ossis pollicis; (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du pouce,—(Ch.), Court extenseur du pouce. Seated at the posterior and inferior part of the forearm. It is thin, long, and broader at its middle than at the extremities. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted behind the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the thumb, and aids in supination.

EXTENSOR POL'LICIS LONGUS; E. major pollicis manūs seu secun'di interno'dii seu pollicis secun'di seu tertii interno'dii (DOUGLAS.) seu interno'dii ossis pollicis, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangettien du pouce,—(Ch.), Muscle long extenseur du pouce. This muscle is long, flat, and fusiform; and is seated at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted at the posterior part of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the last phalanx of the thumb upon the first. See Extensor proprius pollicis pedis.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS IN'DICIS, E. pro'prius primi dig'iti manūs, E. In'dicis, Indica'tor seu secun'di interno'dii in'dicis pro'prius, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangettien de l'Index,—(Ch.), Extenseur propre de l'Index. This muscle is long and thin; broader in the middle than at the extremities; and is situate at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna, and is inserted at the posterior part of the upper extremity of the second and third phalanges of the index-finger. It extends the three phalanges of the index-finger; and has, besides, the same uses as the other extensors of the fingers.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS MINIMI DIG'ITI, (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangettien du petit doigt,—(Ch.), Extenseur propre du petit doigt. Situate on the inside of the Extensor communis digitorum. It arises from the external condyle of the os humeri and the aponeurotic septa seated between it. the extensor communis digitorum, and the extensor carpi ulnaris; and is inserted into the last two phalanges of the little finger. Its use is to extend the little finger, and even the hand upon the forearm.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS POL'LICIS PE'DIS, E. pro'prius Hallucis seu Longus (DOUGLAS.) seu pollicis longus, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du pouce, Péronéo-sus-phalangettien du pouce,—(Ch.) This muscle is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is fleshy, broad, flat above; small and tendinous below. It arises from the anterior part of the middle third of the fibula, and is inserted into the posterior part of the superior extremity of the last phalanx of the great toe. It extends the last phalanx of the great toe upon the first, and the first upon the first metacarpal bone.

EXTENSOR SECUNDI INTERNODII, E. pollicis brevis, Extensor pollicis longus—e. Secundi internodii indicis proprius, E. proprius indicis—e. Tertii internodii, E. pollicis longus—*e. EXTENSOR TARSII MAGNUS, E. Tar'si sural'is. A name given, by some anatomists, to the gastrocnemius and soleus combined.

EXTENSOR TARSII MINOR, Plantar muscle.

EXTENUATIO, (extenuare, extenuatum, (ex, and tenuis, 'to make thin,')) Emaciation.

EXTERGENTIA, (extergere, (ex, and tergere, 'to clean,') 'to wipe clean,') Detergents.

EXTERNAL DISEASES, (exter, 'without,') Extrinsic Diseases, Mor'bi exteri sui seu extrin'seci, Surg'ical diseases, (F.) Maladies externes. Those diseases which occupy the surface of the body, and form the object of surgical pathology, requiring, generally, external means, or surgical operations.

EXTERNAT. The post or office of an externe.

EXTERNE, see Housesurgeon.

EXTERNUS AURIS, Laxator tympani — e. Mallei, Laxator tympani.

EXTESICULATUS, (ex, and testiculus, 'a testicle,') Castratus, Eunuch.

EXTINCTIO, Death — e. Hydrargyri, Extinction of Mercury — e. Mercurii, Extinction of Mercury.

EXTINCTIO VO'cis, (F.) Extinction de voix. The French use this term for cases in which the voice is not wholly suppressed, but produces only feeble sounds:—Incomplete aphonia.

EXTINCTIO MERCURI, Extinction of Mercury seu Hydrargyri. Trituration of mercury with lard or other substance, until the metallic globules disappear. The mercury is then so divided, that it forms a black powder, generally considered to be a protoxide of mercury, but perhaps, erroneously.

EXTINCTION OF MERCURY, Extinctio Mercurii — e. de Voic, Extinctio voicis.

EXTIRPATION, Extirpa'tio, Abla'tio, Aphæ'resis, (extirpare, (ex, and stirps, 'a root,') 'to root out,') The complete removal or destruction of any part, either by cutting instruments or the action of caustics. Thus, we speak of the extirpation of cancer, polypus, encysted tumour, &c.

EXTOMIUS, (ex, and tomus, 'to cut,') Eunuch.

EXTOZOA, (pl. of Ectozo'ou,) Ectozoa.

EXTOZOAIRES, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOARIA, Ectozoa.

EXTRA (L.), in composition, 'on the outside, without.'

EXTRA - PELVIO - PUBI - TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator externus.

EXTRACARDIAL, see Endocardiac.

EXTRACTA, see Extractum — e. Fluida, see Extractum.

EXTRACTIF, Extractive — e. Orygéné, Apothème.

EXTRACTIO, Extraction, Extractum.

EXTRACT'ION, Extract'io, Exæ'resis, Exel'cæ, Exelcys'mus, Enchylo'sis. The act of removing an extraneous substance from any part of the body. Thus, a splinter is said to be extracted. It is also applied to the removal of certain parts. The cataract is said to be extracted; a tooth is extracted, when carious, &c.

EXTRACTIVE, (F.) Extractif. A peculiar, presumed principle, which has been admitted in extracts. Thus, bitter extractive is the immediate principle of bitter vegetables, &c. The term is, also, applied to ill defined animal matters met with on analysis.

EXTRACTIVE, OXIDIZED, Apothème.

EXTRACTS, see Extractum — e. Fluid, see Extractum.

EXTRACTUM, Echchyl'na, Extract'io, Ex'tract, (F.) Extrait, Apostolè. An extract is prepared by evaporating vegetable solutions, till a tenacious mass is obtained. When prepared from an infusion or decoction, it is called a watery; from ether, an etheral; and from alcohol an alcoholic or a spiritous extract. Both kinds contain all the principles of the vegetable that are soluble in the menstrua with which they are prepared; but the volatile parts are dissipated, and some of the fixed parts are decomposed; the proper extractive is oxygenized, and the virtues of the vegetable substance are altered or destroyed. Extracts are hard, soft, or fluid: the consistence of the soft being such as to retain the pillular form without the addition of a powder. A patent was taken out, many years ago, by a Mr. Barry, of London, for preparing them in vacuo; and, as the temperature is much lower than in the ordinary method, the virtues of the plant are less altered, and the extracts are generally green. Extracts are also prepared by displacement or percolation. They have, likewise, received different names, according to their predominant principle. The gummy or mu'cous, or mucilag'ineous, are those which are mainly composed of gum or mucilage. Gum tragacanth may be considered a pure gummy extract. Gelat'ineous extracts are those composed especially of gelatin; res'ineous extracts, those of a resinous character; extract'ores'ineous, those composed of extractive or colouring matter and resin; gum-res'ineous, those containing gum and resin; and sapona'ceous or sapona'ceous saline, those containing a notable quantity of saline substances and a resinous matter, so combined with mucus and other soluble substances, that they cannot be separated. Under the name Fluid Extracts—Extracta Fluida seu Liquida—a class of preparations has been introduced into the Pharmacopœias, the distinctive character of which is, the concentration of the active ingredients of medicinal substances into a small bulk, in the liquid form.

EXTRACTUM ABSIN'THII CACUMINUM, Extract of Wormwood. (A decoction defecated and evaporated.) The flavour is dissipated along with the essential oil. It is a bitter tonic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, in pill.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI, Extract of Aconite, Succus spissatus aconiti napelli, (from the inspissated juice without defecation.) It is esteemed to be narcotic and diuretic; and has been given in the cases referred to under Aconitum. Dose, gr. j, gradually increasing it.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Aconite. (Aconit. in pulv. crass. ℥j; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Moisten the aconite with half a pint of diluted alcohol: let it stand for 24 hours: transfer it to a displacement apparatus, and gradually add the remainder of the diluted alcohol. When the last portion of this has penetrated the aconite, pour in from time to time water sufficient to keep the powder covered. Stop the filtration when the liquid which passes begins to produce a precipitate, as it falls, in that which has already passed. Distil off the alcohol, and evaporate to a proper consistence.—Ph. U. S. 1851. A modified formula has been received into the Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM AL'OEË, Extract of Aloes, E. aloës aquosum seu purificatum, Purified extract of aloes. (The gummy part extracted by boiling water, defecated and inspissated.) Dose, gr. v. to gr. xv.

EXTRACTUM ALOES AQUOSUM, E. aloës—e. Aloes purificatum, E. aloës.

EXTRACTUM ANTHEMIDIS, E. anthemidis nobilis seu chamemeli seu florum chamemeli, Extract of Chamomile. The volatile oil is dissipated in this preparation. It is a pure, grateful bitter, and is tonic and stomachic. Dose, gr. x. to gr. xx, in pill.

EXTRACTUM AR'NICÆ ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Ar'nica. (Ph. U. S. 1863.) Prepared in a similar manner to the Extractum Aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM ASPARAGI, see Asparagus.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ LIQUIDUM, Liquid Extract of Belladonna. A preparation introduced into the British Pharmacopœia (1864). Astringent, in diarrhoea and dysentery. Dose, fʒss, or more.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ, Succus spissatus atropæ belladonnæ, Extract of Belladonna (an expressed juice inspissated). Properties same as those of the plant. Dose, gr. i, gradually increased. It dilates the pupil when applied to the eye.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic extract of Belladonna. (Prepared like the extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM BUCHU FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Buchu. This is official in the Ph. U. S. 1863.

EXTRACTUM CANNABIS, see Bangué.

EXTRACTUM CANNABIS PURIFICATUM, Purified Extract of Hemp, of the Ph. U. S. 1863, is made by rubbing Extract of Hemp in Alcohol; adding alcohol and macerating; filtering and evaporating to dryness. Dose, half a grain.

EXTRACTUM CAR'NIS, Extract of Flesh. An extract formed by evaporating beef tea in a water-bath. It can be kept for sale. An ounce of it may represent thirty-two ounces of meat.

EXTRACTUM CASCARILLÆ RESINOSUM, Resinous extract of cascarrilla. (Cort. cascarrillæ, in pulv. crass. ℥j; Sp. vini rect. ℔iv. Digest for four days; then decant and strain; boil the residuum in ten pints of water to two; filter and evaporate the decoction, and distil the tincture in a retort, till both are thickened; then mix and evaporate to a pilular consistence.) Dose, gr. x. to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM CATECHU, Catechu—e. Catharticum, E. Colocynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CATHOLICUM, (F.) Extrait Catholique. This epithet is given to pills composed of aloes, black hellebore, and colocynth, resin of jalap, and scammony. See, also, Extractum Colocynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CHAMÊMELI, E. Anthemidis—e. Cicuta, E. Conii.

EXTRACTUM CIMICIFUGÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Cimicifuga, is official in the Ph. U. S. (1863). Dose, ℥xv. to xx.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ, E. Cort'icis Peruvia'ni seu Cincho'næ Mol'le, Extract of Cincho'na or of Bark. (A decoction evaporated.) The active principles are similar to those of the bark in substance; but it is not so effectual, owing to the chymical change induced in the drug during the boiling. When reduced, by drying, to a state fit for being powdered, it is called Hard Extract of Bark, Extractum Cort'icis Peruvia'ni durum, E. Cincho'næ durum. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ (Ph. U. S. 1863.) E. Cincho'næ Flavæ, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842). An alcoholic extract of yellow cinchona made by exhausting the bark by means of alcohol in a percolator, and evaporating to the proper consistence. Fluid Extract of Cinchona, Extractum Cincho'næ Fluidum, is official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, 1863. Dose, fʒss.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ PAL'IDÆ, may be prepared in the same manner.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RESINOSUM, E. Cincho'næ lance'foliæ seu Cincho'næ Rubræ resinosum, Res'ineous Extract of Bark, E. Cincho'næ Res'inae. The aqueo-spirituous extract contains both the extractive and resin of the bark. Dose, gr. x to xxx.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RUBRÆ, may be prepared in the same manner as Extractum cinchona flavæ.

EXTRACTUM COLCHICI, Extract of Colchicum, is prepared in the same manner as Extractum Aconiti. Dose, one or two grains.

EXTRACTUM COLCHICI ACETICUM, Acetous or Acetic Extract of Colchicum. (Colchic. rad. in pulv. lbj, Acid. acet. fʒiv, Aquæ q. s. To the acid add a pint of water, and mix this with the root. Put the mixture in a percolator, and pour on water until the liquid that passes has little or no taste. Evaporate to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. j to gr. iij.

EXTRACTUM COLCHICI RADICIS FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Colchicum Root; and Extractum Colchici Seminis Fluidum, Fluid Extract of Colchicum Seed, are official in the Ph. U. S. 1863. Dose, ℥x.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYNTHIDIS, Extract of Colocynth. (Ph. L. & E.) (A watery infusion or decoction of colocynth evaporated.) Cathartic, in the dose of from gr. v to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYNTHIDIS ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Colocynth. (Obtained by the action of diluted alcohol on colocynth, by maceration, percolation, and evaporation.) (Ph. U. S. 1863.)

EXTRACTUM COLOCYNTHIDIS COMPOSITUM, E. Catharticum seu Catholicum seu Quercetani Compound Extract of Colocynth. (Colocynth. pulp. concis. ʒvj, Aloes, pulv. ʒxij, Scammon, pulv. ʒiv, Cardamon. pulv. ʒj, Saponis ʒiij, Alcohol. dilut. cong. Macerate the pulp in the spirit at a gentle heat for four days; strain; add the aloes and scammony; then distil off the spirit and mix in the cardamon seeds. Ph. U. S.)

In the Ph. U. S. of 1863, it is directed to be made of Alcoholic Extract of Colocynth, in fine powder, ʒiiiss; Socotrine Aloes, in fine powder, ʒxij; Resin of Scammony, in fine powder, ʒiij; Cardamon, in fine powder, ʒi; Soap, in fine powder, ʒiii; mixed well and kept in a well-stopped bottle. It is an active cathartic, and is used in obstinate visceral obstructions, &c. Dose, gr. vj. to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM CONII, E. Cicute, Succus cicute spissatus, S. spissatus conii maculati, Extract of Hemlock. (In the Ph. U. S. of 1863, fresh hemlock is sprinkled with water, and the juice expressed, filtered, and evaporated.) Employed in the same cases as the conium. Dose, gr. iij to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM CONII ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Hemlock. (Prepared like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two grains.

A Fluid Extract of Hemlock, Extractum Conii Fluidum, is in the Ph. U. S. (1863.) Dose, ℥v.

EXTRACTUM CONVULVULI JALAPÆ, E. jalapæ—e. Corticis Peruviani, E. Cinchonæ.

EXTRACTUM CUBEBÆ FLUIDUM, Oleoresina Cubebe, (Ph. U. S. 1863.) Fluid Extract of Cubebs. (Cubebs exhausted by ether through percolation, and the solution evaporated. Dose, from 5 to 30 minims.)

EXTRACTUM DIGITALIS, Extract of Foxglove. (Prepared like Extractum conii.) Dose, from half a grain to a grain.

EXTRACTUM DIGITALIS ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Digitalis (Ph. U. S. 1863), is prepared like Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM DULCAMARÆ, Extract of Bittersweet. (Prepared by displacement, by means of diluted alcohol, from bittersweet in moderately fine powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose fʒj.

A Fluid Extract of Bittersweet, Extractum Dulcamaræ Fluidum, is in the Ph. U. S. for 1863.

EXTRACTUM ELATÆRII, Elate'rium, Extract of Elaterium. (The fecula of the expressed juice of the fruit of Momordica elaterium.) It is violently cathartic, hydragogue, and sometimes emetic. Dose, gr. ss every hour till it operates.

EXTRACTUM ERGOTÆ, Ergotin. A Fluid Ex- tract of Ergot, Extractum Ergotæ Fluidum, is in the Ph. U. S. 1863. Dose, ℥xxx to fʒi.

EXTRACTUM FILICIS ÆTHEREUM, see Polypodium filix mas.

EXTRACTUM GENIŒ TÆ CACUMINUM, Extract of Broom Tops. Diuretic and stomachic. Dose, ʒss to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM GENTIANÆ, E. Gentianæ luteæ seu Radicis Gentianæ, Extract of Gentian. (The evaporated decoction.) Prepared also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Properties like those of Gentian. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

A Fluid Extract of Gentian, Extractum Gentianæ Fluidum, is in the Ph. U. S. for 1863. Dose, fʒj.

EXTRACTUM GLYCYRRHIZÆ, Succus Glycyrrhizæ inspissatus seu Liquiritiæ, Spanish Juice, Italian Juice, Black Sugar, Extract of Liquorice. (The evaporated decoction.) It is demulcent, taken ad libitum.

Refined Liquorice, which is sold in the form of cylinders, is made by gently evaporating a solution of the pure extract of liquorice with half its weight of gum Arabic, rolling the mass and cutting it into lengths, and then polishing, by rolling them together in a box.

EXTRACTUM GRAMINIS, Extract of Grass. An extract prepared from Triticum repens. It is considered by the Germans to be a mild tonic; and is greatly used, especially in convalescence from fever. It is probably devoid of all injurious properties, and, as probably, totally inefficacious.

EXTRACTUM HEMATOXYLI, E. Hematoxyli Campechiani seu Scolobis Hematoxyli, Extract of Logwood. (The evaporated decoction.) It is astringent. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, E. Hellebori nigri, Extract of Black Hellebore. (The evaporated decoction.) In large doses, this is cathartic; in smaller, diuretic, resolvent, [?] and emmenagogue. [?] Dose, as a cathartic, gr. x to ʒj; as an emmenagogue, gr. iij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, (Ph. U. S. 1851.) E. H. Alcoholicum, Alcoholic Extract of Black Hellebore, (Ph. U. S. 1863), is prepared from Black Hellebore, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum. Dose, like the last.

EXTRACTUM HUMULI, E. Lupuli, Extract of hops. (The evaporated decoction.) It is tonic, anodyne, [?] diuretic. [?] Dose, gr. v to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI, Succus spissatus Hyoscyami, Extract of Henbane. (The expressed juice, inspissated without defecation, or the expressed juice of the bruised leaf sprinkled with water, heated to the boiling point; strained, and evaporated. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Its virtues are narcotic. Dose, gr. iij to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Henbane. (Prepared from leaves of Hyoscyamus, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum, Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two grains. A fluid Extract of Henbane, Extractum hyoscyami fluidum is official in the Ph. U. S. (1863.) Dose, ℥v.

EXTRACTUM IGNATIÆ ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Ignatia. (Ignatia exhausted by alcohol in a percolator; and the solution evaporated to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, half a grain to a grain.

EXTRACTUM IPECACUANHÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Ipecacuanha. Admitted into the Ph. U. S. for 1863. Dose, ℥v. to xx.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ, E. Convulvuli Jalapæ seu Jalapii seu Jalapæ, Extract of Jalap. (A spirituous tincture distilled; and an aqueous decoction evaporated; the residua being mixed together; kept both soft and hard.) It is cathartic and hydragogue. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ RESINOSUM, Resinous Jalapæ, (Ph. U. S.), Resinous Extract of Jalap.

(Made by exhausting Jalap powder, by displacement by alcohol; throwing down the resin from the fluid by means of water, and drying the precipitate.) Properties like the last.

EXTRACTUM JUGLANDIS, Extract of Butternut. (Prepared by displacement from butternut, in moderately coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. x to xx.

EXTRACTUM KRAME'RIÆ, Extract of Rhat'any. (Prepared by displacement from rhatany, in moderately fine powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. x to xx.

EXTRACTUM LACTU'CÆ, Succus spissatus Lactuce sativæ, Extract of Lettuce. (Leaves of fresh lettuce ½j; beat them in a stone mortar, sprinkling them with water; then express the juice and evaporate, without allowing it to subside until it acquires a proper degree of consistence.) It is said to be narcotic and diaphoretic. Dose, gr. iij to gr. x.

An extract is, sometimes, made from the juice of the wild lettuce, Lactuca vi'rosa, which is regarded as diuretic.

EXTRACTUM LUPULI'NÆ FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Lu'pulin. Admitted into the Ph. U. S. 1863. Dose, ℥v to x.

EXTRACTUM MARTIS ACETICUM, Ferri Acetas.

EXTRACTUM NUCIS VOM'ICÆ ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Nuc Vomica, see Strychnos nux vomica. Dose, ½ a grain to a grain.

EXTRACTUM O'PII, E. Opii aquosum seu Theba'icum seu Opii gummosum, Extract of O'pium, Laud'awum opiatum seu simp'lex, O'pium colatum seu deparat'um. (A watery solution defecated and evaporated.) Dose gr. ss to gr. iss, — about half that of opium.

A Fluid Extract of Opium, Extractum opii liquidum, is official in the Ph. B. 1864.)

EXTRACTUM PANCHYMAGO'GUM. A drastic medicine, composed of colocynth, bruised with its seeds; senna bruised; black hellebore root, Agaric, Scammony, in powder, Extract of Aloes, and Powder of Diarrhodon, into which roses entered.

EXTRACTUM PAPAV'ERIS, E. Papaveris somniferi seu Papaveris al'bi, Extract of white pop'py. (The decoction evaporated.) It possesses nearly the same virtues as opium, but is much weaker. Dose, gr. ij to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM PAREIR'Æ, Extract of Pareir'a Bra'va. Prepared like Extractum Hæmatoxyli. Dose, ten grains to half a drachm.

A Fluid Extract of Pareira, Extractum Pareiræ liquidum, is official in the Ph. B. 1864. Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM PIP'ERIS FLU'IDUM, Oleoresina Piperis. (Ph. U. S. 1863), Flu'id Extract of Black Pep'per. (Black pepper exhausted by ether through percolation, the solution evaporated, and the piperin in crystals separated by expression.) Dose, one to five minims.

EXTRACTUM PODOPHYLLI, Extract of May'apple. (Prepared from podophyllum, in coarse powder, in the same manner as the Extract of cinchona.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv, as a cathartic.

EXTRACTUM PRU'NI VIRGINI'NÆ, Fluid Extract of Wild Cherry Bark. Admitted into the Ph. U. S. for 1863. Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM PURGANS, see Hedera helix — e. Quercetani, E. Colocynthidis compositum.

EXTRACTUM QUAS'SIÆ, Extract of Quassia. (Prepared by displacement from Quassia in moderately fine powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, as a tonic, five grains and more.

EXTRACTUM COR'TICIS QUERCUS, Extract of oak bark. (The decoction evaporated.) It is astringent and tonic.

EXTRACTUM QUI'NÆ, Quinæ sulphas impur'us. (This is made by evaporating the liquor poured off the crystals of sulphate of quinia to the consistence of a pilular mass.) Twenty-four grains will generally arrest an intermittent.

EXTRACTUM RHE'I, E. Rh. alcoholicum, Extract of Rhubarb. (A solution in diluted alcohol by percolation evaporated.) Uses like those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM RHEI FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Rhubarb, is in the Pharmacopœia of the United States. Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM RU'DII, Extract of Rndius, (F) Extrait de Rudius. (Pills made of colocynth, agaric, scammony, roots of black hellebore and jalap, socotrine aloes, cinnamon, mace, cloves, and alcohol.) See Pilule Aloes et Colocynthidis.

EXTRACTUM RU'TÆ GRAVEOLE'NTIS, E. Rutæ seu folio'rum Rutæ, Extract of Rue. (A decoction evaporated.) The volatile oil being dissipated in the boiling, this is not a good preparation. Tonic, stomachic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM FOLI'ORUM SABI'NÆ, Extract of Sav'ine. (A decoction evaporated.) The same remarks may be made on this preparation as on the last. Tonic. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SANGUINIS BOVINI, see Blood.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARIL'LE, Extract of Sarsaparilla. (A strained decoction evaporated.) Virtues the same as those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. Extractum Sarsaparillæ of the United States Pharmacopœia is prepared from Sarsaparilla, in coarse powder, like the Extractum acniti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla, Ph. U. S. for 1863, is a simple fluid extract.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ FLU'IDUM COMPOSITUM, E. Sarsæ Liquidum, E. Sarsæ Fluidum, Compound Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla, (Extractum Sarsaparillæ Fluidum, Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla, Ph. U. S. 1851.) (Sarsaparilla concis. et contus. ℥xvj, Glycyrrhiz. contus., Sassafr. rad. contus. aa ℥ij, Mezerei concis. ℥vj, Sacchar. ℥xij, Alcohol. dilut. Oviij. Macerate, with the exception of the sugar, for 14 days; express and filter; evaporate to f℥xij; and add the sugar. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, a fluidrachm.

EXTRACTUM SATURNI, GOULARD'S, Liquor plumbi subacetatis—e. Scobis Hæmatoxyli, E. hæmatoxyli.

EXTRACTUM SCAMMO'NI, Resina Scammonii, Scammonie Resina. The resinous cathartic principle of scammony obtained from scammony root by means of alcohol.

EXTRACTUM SEN'EGÆ ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Senega. (Prepared by displacement from Senega and diluted alcohol;—the tincture being evaporated to the proper consistence. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, gr. v to x.

EXTRACTUM SENNÆ FLU'IDUM, Flu'id Extract of Sen'na, is prepared from senna, by displacement by diluted alcohol, adding sugar, and evaporating. (Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, f℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SERPENTA'RIÆ FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Serpentina. (Prepared by displacement by diluted alcohol.) Ph. U. S. 1863. Dose, f℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SPIG'ELLE FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Spigelia. (Prepared from Spigelia by displacement by diluted alcohol, and evaporation.) Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM SPIG'ELLE ET SENNÆ FLU'IDUM, Flu'id Extract of Spigelia et Sen'na. (A mixture of the fluid extracts of spigelia and senna; carbonate of potassa and oils of anise and caraway. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM STRAMO'NI, (Ph. U. S. 1863), E. Stramonii folio'rum, Extract of Stramonium or of Stramonium leaves. (The expressed juice inspissated.) The Extractum Stramonii Seminis, Extract of Stramonium Seed, is made from the powdered seed by means of diluted alcohol, with the aid of the percolator;—the solution being evaporated.

EXTRACTUM STRAMONII ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcoholic

Extract of Stramonium, (Ph. U. S. 1863.) is made in like manner from the recently dried leaves. These Extracts are used as narcotics in asthma and other spasmodic affections. Dose, of Extractum Stramonii, gr. ij to gr. v, of E. s. Alcoholium, gr.  $\frac{1}{2}$  to gr. i.

EXTRACTUM STYRACIS, see Styraç.

EXTRACTUM TARAX'ACI, E. Herbæ et Radis às Tarax'aci, Ex'tract of Dan'delion. (The strained juice evaporated.) It has been considered deobstruent, laxative, and diuretic. Dose, gr. x to  $\mathfrak{z}$ j.

A fluid extract of Dan'delion, Extractum Tarax'aci flu'idum, is official in the Ph. U. S. for 1863.

EXTRACTUM THEBAICUM, E. Opii.

EXTRACTUM U'VÆ UR'SI, Ex'tract of U'va Ur'si. (The Decoction evaporated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xxx.

A fluid Extract of Uva Ursi, Extractum Uvæ Ursi Flu'idum, is official in the Ph. U. S. for 1863. Dose,  $\mathfrak{z}$ j.

EXTRACTUM VALERIA'NÆ, Ex'tract of Vale'rian. (The expressed decoction evaporated.) The virtues of the valerian being dependent upon its essential oil, this is an objectionable preparation. Dose, gr. x to  $\mathfrak{z}$ j.

EXTRACTUM VALERIANÆ ALCOHOL'ICUM, Alcohol'ic Extract of Valerian. (Made from Valerian root, in fine powder, by displacement with diluted alcohol, and evaporation: Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, gr. iij to v.

A fluid extract of Valerian, Extractum Valerianæ flu'idum, is in the Pharmacopœia U. S. It is prepared by exhausting the valerian by ether and alcohol, through the percolator, and evaporating. Dose,  $\mathfrak{z}$ j to  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij.

EXTRACTUM VERA'TRI VIR'IDIS FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of American Hellebore, is official in the Ph. U. S. for 1863. Dose,  $\mathfrak{m}$ v to x.

EXTRACTUM ZINGIB'ERIS FLU'IDUM, Fluid Extract of Ginger, is prepared by exhausting ginger with alcohol by displacement and evaporation. Dose,  $\mathfrak{m}$ x to xv.

EXTRAIT, Extract — e. des Fruits, Rob — e. Hémostatique de Boujean, Ergotin — e. de Kino, Kino — e. de Viande, Osmazome.

EXTRA'NEOUS BODY, For'eign bod'y, Cor'pus extra'neum, C. exter'num, C. alie'num, (F.) Corps étranger. Any solid, liquid, or gaseous substance, inanimate or animate, proceeding from without, or formed in the body; which constitutes no part of the body, but occupies, in the substance of the textures, or some of the cavities, a place foreign to it.

EXTRAVASA'TION, Extravasatio, Extravasation, (extra, and vassu, 'vessels.') Escape of a fluid — extravasatum — from the vessel containing it, and infiltration or effusion of the fluid into the surrounding textures. Such fluid is said to be extravasated, (F.) Extravasé.

EXTRAVASATUM, see Extravasatio.

EXTRAVASÉ, see Extravasation.

EXTRAVASION, Extravasation.

EXTREM'ITY, Extrem'itas, (F.) Extrémité; (extremus, 'the outermost.') The end or termination of a thing. The limbs, acrote'ria, have been so called, — as the upper and lower extremities. See Membrum. It has been, also, used to express the last moments of life; as when we say, a patient is in extremity, (F.) le malade est à l'extrémité, à toute extrémité.

EXTRINSIC, Extrin'secus, ('from without.') That which comes from without. This term has been used for muscles, which surround certain organs and attach them to the neighbouring parts; in order to distinguish them from other muscles, which enter into the intimate composition of those organs, and which have been named intrinsic. Thus, there are extrinsic and intrinsic muscles of the tongue, ear, &c.

EXTROVERSI'O, (extra, and vertere, versum, to turn.') Extrophia.

EXTUBERANTIA, (ex, and tuber, 'a prominence.') Protuberance.

EXTUBERATIO, Protuberance.

EXTUMEFACTIO, (ex, tumere, 'to swell,' and facere, factum, 'to make.') Swelling.

EXTUS'SIO, (ex, and tussis, 'a cough.') 'I cough with expectoration.'

EXUBER, (ex, and ubera, 'breasts;') Apogalactus. A child which has been weaned.

EXUDATION, Exsudatio, Exsudatio, (ex, and sudare, sudatum, 'to sweat.') The oozing of a material through the pores of a membranc. Also, the material which issues in this manner. See Diapedesis, Exhalation, and Endosmose.

EXUDATION CORPUSCLES, see Corpuscles, exudation.

EXULCERATIO, (ex, and ulcus, gen. ulceris, 'an ulcer.') Eethlimma, Ulceration — e. Uteri, Hysterolosis — e. Ventriculi, Gastrelcrose.

EXUMBILICATIO, (ex, and umbilicus, 'the navel.') Exomphalus.

EXUSTIO, (ex, and urere, ustum, 'to burn.') Cauterization.

EXUTOIRE, Exutory, Fongiculus.

EXUTORIUM, (exuere, exutum, 'to draw or put out.') Fongiculus.

EXUTORY, Fongiculus.

EXUVIÆ, see Exuviation.

EXUVIA'TION, Exuvia'tio, (exuere, 'to put off.') The shedding or casting off of parts, as the deciduous teeth, the skins of serpents, &c., which are hence called Exuvia.

EYE, (Sax. eaz, Teuton. A uge,) Oculus, Ops, Omnia, Ophthalmos, Illos, Opytilos (Doric.) Visorium Org'num, (Sc.) Ee, plural Eeu, (F.) Œil. The eye is the immediate organ of vision. It is seated in the orbit, while its dependencies, called by Haller Tutam'ina Oculi, occupy the circumference of the cavity, and are composed of the eyebrows, the eyelids, cilia, glands of Meibomius, &c. The Ball, Globe, or Bulb of the Eye, Bulbus Oculi, is covered anteriorly by the tunica conjunctiva; is moved by six muscles, four straight, two oblique; and is constituted of membranes, as the sclerotic, cornea, choroid, tunica Jacobi, retina, iris, hyaloïd, and, in the fetus, the membrana pupillaris; and of fluids, called Humours, or Media, — the aqueous, crystalline, and vitreous. The eyeball is invested with a membranous tunic, which separates it from the other structures of the orbit, and forms a smooth, hollow surface, by which its motions are facilitated. This investment has been called cell'ular cap'side of the eye, oc'ular capsule, t'u'vica vagina'lis oc'uli, vag'inal coat, and submus'cular fascia of the eye. The vessels of the eye proceed from the ophthalmic artery. The nerves, except the optic, are chiefly furnished from the ophthalmic ganglion. The following are the dimensions, &c., of the organ, on the authority of Petit, Young, Gordon, and Brewster:

|  |      |

FABRICA ANDROGYNA, ('androgynous make,') Hermaphrodeity.

FACE, Facies, Vultus, Vultus, Prosopeon, Stoma, (F.) Face, (facere, 'to make or form,') The face is the anterior part of the head. It is formed of 13 bones,—the two superior maxillary, the two malar, the two ossa nasi, the two ossa unguis, the vomer, the two ossa spongiosa inferiora, the two palate bones, and the inferior maxillary, without including the frontal portion of the os frontis, and the 32 teeth, which may be considered to form part of it. Its numerous muscles are chiefly destined for the organs of sight, hearing, taste, and smell. Its arteries proceed from the external carotid; its veins end in the jugular, and its nerves draw their origin immediately from the brain.

The face experiences alterations in disease, which it is important to attend to. It is yellow in jaundice; pale and puffy in dropsy; and its expression is very different according to the seat of irritation, so that, in infants, by an attention to medical physiognomy, we can often detect the seat of disease. Hippocrates has well depicted the change which it experiences in one exhausted by long sickness, by great evacuations, excessive hunger, watchfulness, &c., threatening dissolution. Hence this state has been called Facies Hippocratica, Facies Cadaverica, F. Tortuul'is. In this, the nose is pinched; the eyes are sunk; the temples hollow; the ears cold, and retracted; the skin of the forehead tense, and dry; the complexion livid; the lips pendent, relaxed, and cold, &c.

The term Face (F.) is likewise given to one of the aspects of an organ; thus, we say, the superior face of the stomach.

FACE AGUE, Neuralgia, facial.

FACE INJECTÉE, see Vultueux—f. Vultueuse, see Vultueux.

FAC'ET, (F.) Facette, (dim. of Face.) Faciecula. A small face. A small, circumscribed portion of the surface of a bone, as the articula-facette of a bone.

FACHINGEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are at no great distance from those of Geilenau, and two miles north of Wisbaden. They contain free carbonic acid; carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda; chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

FACIAL, Facia'lis, (from facies.) Belonging to, or connected with, the face. See Facial vein.

FACIAL ANGLE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL ARTERY, Labial artery, Angular or external maxillary artery, A. palato-labial—(Ch.), is a branch of the external carotid, which rises beneath the digastricus, and is distributed to almost every part of the face. It furnishes the inferior palatal, submental, superior labial, inferior labial, and dorsalis nasi. Chaussier calls the external carotid artery, Facial Artery.

FACIAL LINE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL NERVE, Ramus du'rior septime conjugationis, Sympatheticus minor, Par septimum seu facia'le, Communicans faciei nervus, Portio du'ra of the 7th pair, Respiratory nerve of the face. This nerve arises from the inferior and lateral part of the tuber annulare, in the groove which separates it from the medulla oblongata, external to the corpora olivaria, and by the side of the auditory nerve. It issues from the cranium by the meatus auditorius internus; enters the aqueduct of Fallopius; receives a branch of the Vidian nerve; forms a gangliform swelling—Intumescencia gangliformis;—sends off filaments to the internal muscles of the malleus and stapes; furnishes, according to many anatomists, that called Chorda Tympani; makes its exit at the foramen stylo-mastoideum, and divides into two branches—the temporo-facial, and cervico-facial. On the face it is termed Pes auseri'nus, Plexus nervo'sum auseri'nus. See Portio Wrisbergii.

FACIAL VEIN, Pal'ato-labial—(Ch.), arises between the skin and frontalis muscle, and bears the name Ve'na Fronta'lis, V. Pre'parata, Ve'ine frontale ou V. Pre'parate. It then descends, vertically, towards the greater angle of the eye, where it is called Angula'ris; and afterwards descends, obliquely, on the face, to open into the internal jugular, after having received branches, which correspond with those of the facial artery. It is only in the latter part of its course that it is called Facial Vein.

FACIECULA, (dim. of Facies), Facet.

FAC'IENT, (faciens, 'making,' facio, 'I make.') A suffix, as in Calefacient, Rubefacient, &c., 'warm making,' 'red making.'

FACIES, Face—f. Cadaverica, see Face—f. Conca'va pedis, Sole—f. Hippocratica, see Face—f. Inferior pedis, Sole—f. Tortualis, see Face.

FACTICE, Factitious.

FACTIT'IOUS, Factit'ius, (F.) Factice, (facere, factum, 'to make,') Artificial. That which is made by art, in opposition to what is natural, or found already existing in nature. Thus, we say, factitious mineral waters for artificial mineral waters.

FACULTAS, Faculty—f. Auctrix, Plastic force—f. Formatrix, Plastic force—f. Nutrix, Plastic force—f. Vegetativa, Plastic force—f. Zotica, Vitalis.

FACULTATES NATURALES, ('natural faculties,') see Function.

FACULTY, Facultas, Dyn'namis, Vir'tus, Po'tency, Pow'er, Vir'tus, (F.) Faculté (facilis, (itself from facere, 'to make,') 'what can be made or done,') The power of executing any function or act. The collection of the intellectual faculties constitutes the understanding. We say, also, vital faculties, for vital properties, &c. Faculty likewise means the whole body of the medical profession, and, also, a body of medical or other professors.

FÆCAL, (from fæces), Stercoraceous—f. Retention, Constipation.

FÆCES, (pl. of Fæx), Feces, Chersæ, 'the dregs of any thing,') Fæculence, (F.) Fèces. The alvine evacuations are so called; (F.) Garderoberes; the excrements, Imparita'tes alvi'na, Fæcal matter, (F.) Matière fécale. See Excrement.

FÆCES INDURATÆ, ('indurated faeces,') Scybala.

FÆCOSITAS, (fæx, gen. fæcis), Fæculence.

FÆCULA, Fecula.

FÆCULENTIA, Feculence.

FÆX, Feculence. See Fæces.

FAGARA OCTAN'DRA, (fagus, 'the beech,' which it resembles.) Xanthox'ylum octan'dra, Elaph'rium tomento'sum, Am'yris tomento'sa. Ord. Rutaceæ. The systematic name of the plant, which affords Tacamahac, a resinous substance, that exudes from the tree Tacamahaca, which has a fragrant, delightful smell, was formerly in high estimation, as an ingredient in warm, stimulating plasters, and was given internally, like the balsams generally. The East India Tacamahac, Balsamum Vir'idè seu Cal'aba seu Ma'rie, O'leum Ma'rie, (F.) Bume de Calaba, Bume vert, B. Marie, is yielded by Calophyllum inophyllum Balsama'ria inophyllum.

The name Tacamahac is also given to a resin furnished by Populus balsamif'era seu tacamahac'a, (F.) Peuplier baumier ou de la Caroline, which grows in the northern parts of America and Siberia.

FAGARA PIPERITA, Xanthox'ylum piperitum, Jap'ane'se pepper, (F.) Fagarier poivre, a native of Japan, possesses the qualities of pepper, and is used as such by the Japanese. It is also, employed as a rubefacient cataplasm.

FAGARAS'TRUM CAPEN'SE, (after Fagara.) Nat. Ord. Xanthoxyleæ. A South African plant, the fruit of which is known to the Colonists as wild Card'amom; and, on account of its aromatic qualities, is prescribed in flatulency and paralysis.

FAGARIER POIVRE, Fagara octandra.

FAGOPIRYUM, (fagus, 'the beech,' and πυρος, 'wheat,') Polygonum fagopyrum.

FAGUS, (ῥυγος, from φαγω, 'to eat,' [?] F. sylvatica).

FAGUS CASTA'NEA. The systematic name of the Chestnut Tree; Castanea, C. vulgaris seu ves'ca, Lo'pina, Glans Jo'vis Theophrast'i, Ju'piter's or Sardin'ian A'corn; Com'mon Chestnut, (F.) Châtaigner commun, of the Oak Family. Ord. Cupuliferæ. Sex. Syst. Monoclea Polyandria. The Chestnut, Castanea nux, (F.) Châtaigne, is farinaceous and nutritious, but not easy of digestion.

FAGUS CASTA'NEA PU'MILA. The Chin'quapin or Chin'quapin, Castanea Pu'mila, (F.) Châtaigner nain. The nut of this American tree is eaten like the chestnut. The bark, Castanea (Ph. U. S.), has been used in intermittents.

FAGUS PURPUREA, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS SYLVATICA. The systematic name of the Beech, Fagus, F. Sylvestris seu purpu'rea, Ox'ya, Balan'da, Yalan'ida; the Beech Tree, (F.) Hêtre. The Beech-nut or Beech-mast, (F.) Faine, affords an oil, by expression, which is of a palatable character, and is eaten in some places instead of butter. It has been supposed to be a good vermifuge, but it is no better than any mild oil.

FAGUS SYLVESTRIS, F. sylvatica.

FAIBLESSE, (from febilis, 'deplorable,' or from debilis, 'weak,' [?]) Debility.

FALM, (from fames), Hunger—f. Canine, Boulimia—f. de Loup, Fames lupina.

FALINE, see Fagus sylvatica.

FALINT, (from Sax. fȳnigean, 'to decay,') see Syncope.

FALINTING, Syncope—f. Fit, Syncope.

FALINTINESS, see Syncope.

FALTNESH, Languor, Syncope.

FAIRBURN, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. The mineral waters at this place, which is in the county of Ross, in Scotland, are sulphureous, and frequented.

FAIRNTICKLED, see Ephelides.

FAISANDÉES (VIANDES), (from faisan, 'a pheasant,' hence, game in general kept until it is percent.) See Hyposaprus.

FAISCEAU, Fasciculus—f. Intermédiaire de Wrisberg, Portio Wrisbergii—f. Petit, Fasciculus.

FALX, ('a burthen,' from fascis, 'a bundle,') Fœtus.

FALCADINA, see Scherlievo.

FALCES, (pl.), see Falx.

FAL'CIFORM, Falciform'is, Drepano'ides, (falx, gen. faleis, 'a scythe,' and forma, 'shape,') Having the shape of a scythe. This term has been applied to different parts. See Falx, and Sinus.

FALCIFORM EXPAN'SION OF THE FAS'CIA LA'TA is the scythe-shaped reflection of the fascia lata, which forms, upwards and upwards, the opening for the vena saphæna, and is attached to the crural arch by its superior extremity, forming the anterior paries of the canal of the same name.

FALLACIA, (fallax, 'deceitful,') Hallucination.

FALLACIA OPTICA, An optic illusion.

FALLAND-EVYL, Epilepsy.

FALLING DOWN, Epilepsy.

FALLING SICKNESS, Epilepsy.

FALLOPIAN TUBE, see Tube, Fallopian.

FALLOPOISON, Amianthum muscætoxicum.

FALLTRANCK, Faltranck (G.), literally, a drink against falls. A vulnerary. It is a mixture of several aromatic and slightly astringent plants, which grow chiefly in the Swiss Alps, and hence the name—Vulnéraire Suisse—given to such dried plants cut into fragments. They are called, also, Espèces Vulnéraires, and Thé Suisse. Within the present century, in England, a kind of vulnerary beer was often prescribed, in country practice, in all cases of inward bruises. It bore the name Cerevis'ia nigra, or black beer, and was formed by infusing certain reputed vulnerary herbs in beer or ale.

The infusion of the Falltranck is aromatic, and slightly agreeable, but of no use in the cases for which it has been particularly recommended.

FALMOUTH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Falmouth, in Cornwall, England, resembles that of Penzance; and, like it, is in many respects, a favourable retreat for the phtisical during the winter months.

FALSA VIA, False passage.

FALSE, Fal'sus, No'thus, Pseudo' (in composition,) Spu'rious, Bas'tard, (F.) Faux, Fausse, (from fallere, falsum, 'to deceive.') This epithet has been frequently added to peripneumony, pleurisy, &c., to designate a disease similar to these, but less severe. Most commonly, a severe catarrh or pleurodynia has received the name. See Peripneumonia notha.

FALSE PASS'AGE, Fal'sa Via, (F.) Fausse Route. An accidental passage, made in surgical operations, and particularly in introducing the catheter. The catheter is sometimes passed through into the rectum.

FALSE WATERS, False Deliv'ery, (F.) Hydral-lante. Water, which sometimes collects between the amnion and chorion, and is commonly discharged before the birth of the child.

We say, also, False Ribs, False Rhubarb, &c.

FALSETTO VOICE, ([J] diim of falso, 'false,') see Voice.

FALSIFICA'TION, Adultera'tio, (falsus, 'false,' and facere, 'to make.') A fraudulent imitation or alteration of an aliment or medicine by different admixtures. It is synonymous with adultera'tion and sophistica'tion. By Dr. Hassall, the practice of adulteration is defined as the intentional addition to an article, for purposes of gain or deception, of any substance or substances, the presence of which is not acknowledged in the name under which the article is sold.

The following table was prepared to indicate common falsifications practised with some of the most useful drugs. Of late years, increased attention has been drawn to the alarming extent to which the adulterations of both drugs and aliments have been carried. The object has been seriously examined and reported on by a committee of the British House of Commons, and two elaborate works have been published by Dr. Hassall,—the one "On Food and its Adulterations," (1855); and the other entitled "Adulterations Detected," (1857), both in food and medicines, comprising the Reports of the Analytical Sanitary Commission of "the Lancet," &c. &c., (1857.) The principal means for the detection of such adulterations are afforded by chemistry and the microscope. The former has always been employed for the purpose; but the latter only recently. It is especially adapted for the detection of animal and vegetable admixtures, on the presence of which chemistry can shed little or no light. Th distinctive characters of many of the pure articles employed in medicine are given in the Pharmacopœias, as in that of the United States (1833.)

|  | { Lead .....                                   | { Sulphuretted hydrogen causes a dark precipitate.   |
| ACIDUM ARSENIOSUM.Arsenious Acid.   | { Chalk, Sulphate of Lime, Sulphate of Baryta. | { Not volatilizable by heat.   |
| ACIDUM CITRICUM.Citric Acid.  | { Tartaric and Oxalic Acids .....              | { Their presence is indicated by forming a granular sediment in a concentrated solution of a neutral salt of potassa.                                    |
| ACIDUM MURIATICUM.Muriatic Acid.  | { Sulphuric Acid .....                         | { Deposits by evaporation the salts it may contain; precipitates with solution of hydrochlorate of baryta if it contains sulphuric acid.                 |
| ACIDUM NITRICUM.Nitric Acid.  | { Muriatic and Sulphuric Acids.                | { The presence of chlorine is indicated by a precipitate with nitrate of silver: that of sulphuric acid by the same result with hydrochlorate of baryta. |
| ACIDUM SULPHURICUM.Sulphuric Acid.  | { Muriatic and Nitric Acids .....              | { The presence of muriatic and nitric acid is indicated by the smell, when the acid tested is strongly heated.   |
| ETHER RECTIFICATUS.Rectified Ether.   | { Too dilute, Sulphuric Acid .....             | { The s. g. detects this. By acetate of baryta. Precipitate white.   |
| AMMONLE AQUA.Water of Ammonia.AMMONLE CARBONAS.Carbonate of Ammonia. | { Alcohol .....                                | { With phosphorus a milky instead of limpid solution is formed.  |
|  | { Carbonic Acid .....                          | { A precipitation occurs on adding a solution of muriate of lime. It should be capable of complete volatilization by heat.                               |
| AMMONIACUM .....   | { .....   | { The Gutta Ammoniaci are white, clear, and dry. The lump Ammoniacum, lapis Ammoniaci , is often adulterated with common resin.            |
| ANTIMONII SULPHURETUM.Sulphuret of Antimony.  | { .....   | { It ought to be entirely volatilized by a red heat. Imparts a foliated texture, and is not vaporizable.   |
|  | { Lead.  | { A smell of garlic is emitted when thrown on live coals.  |
|  | { Arsenic .....                                | { Are not vaporizable.   |

| ARGENTI NITRASNitrate of Silver.                        | Copper .....  | The solution assumes a blue colour, when supersaturated with ammonia. It may be suspected when the salt deliquesces.  |
|  | Nitrate of Potassa.....   | The adulteration with nitrate of potassa is easily recognized by the fracture of a stick of it, which is radiated when pure, and granular if adulterated: or by precipitating a solution of the salts with a sufficient quantity of muriatic acid, and evaporating the clear liquor: the nitrate of potassa or other salts will remain.   |
| BALSAMUM PERUVIANUM.Balsam of Peru.                     | A mixture of Resin and some Volatile Oil, with Benzoin.   | Not easily detected.  |
| CALUMBA.Columbo.  | A menisperm from Ceylon, tinged Bryony root, and the root of Frasera Walleri.                  | The true is distinguishable from the false Columbo by adding to an infusion of the root, a few drops of solution of sulph. iron, which gives to the infusion of the false Columbo a greenish black colour; but produces no change in the other.   |
| CAPSICUM.Cayenne Pepper.                                | Chloride of Sodium .....  | This disposes it to deliquesce.   |
|  | Red Lead.....   | Digest in acetic acid, and add a solution of sulphuret of ammonia—a dark-coloured precipitate will be produced.   |
| CASTOREUM.Castor.                                       | A mixture of dried blood, gum ammoniac, and a little real castor, stuffed into the scrotum of a goat. | Smell and taste will generally detect the fraud.  |
| CERA ALBA.White Wax.                                    | White Lead.....   | Melt the wax, the oxide will subside.   |
|  | Tallow.....   | The cake has not its ordinary translucency.   |
|  | Earth or Peasmeal.....  | May be suspected when the cake is brittle and colour grayish.   |
| CERA FLAVA.Yellow Wax.                                  | Resin.....  | Put it in cold alcohol, which will dissolve the resin, without acting on the wax.   |
|  | Tallow.....   | Is known by the greater softness and unctuousity, and its smell when melted. Turmeric is generally added in this case to obviate the paleness.  |
| CINCHONA.Bark.  | This is variously adulterated, but generally with the Carthagena and other inferior barks.     | Can only be detected by practice, and examining into the quantity of quinia, or cinchonia, or both, which it contains.  |
| COCCUS.Cochineal.                                       | Pieces of dough formed in moulds, and coloured with cochineal.  | Throw it into water, the adulteration will appear.  |
| COPAIBA.Balsam of Copaiva.                              | Fixed Oils. ....  | If it does not retain its spherical form when dropped into water, its adulteration may be inferred.   |
|  | Fibres of smoked Beef .....   | Mix one part of strong liquid ammonia of 22°, with three parts of copaiba. If pure, the mixture will, in a few minutes, become transparent; if not, it will remain opaque.  |
| CROCUS.Saffron.   | Petals of Calendula officinalis , and Carthamus Tinctorius.                             | Affords an unpleasant odour when thrown on live coals.  |
| CUBEBA.Cubeb.   | Turkey Yellow Berries, or the dried fruit of Rhamnus Catharticus.                              | Infuse the specimen in hot water, and the difference will be perceptible.   |
|  | False Angustura sometimes sold for it.   | Detected by attentive examination.  |
| CUSPARIA CORTEX.Angustura or Cusparia Bark.             | Common Resin.....   | The epidermis of the true Cusparia is characterized by being covered with a matter resembling the rust of iron. False cusparia bark yields brucia and strychnia; the true yields neither.   |
| GUAIAACA RESINA.Resin of Guaiacum.                      | Manchineel Gum.....   | Detected by the turpentine smell emitted when thrown upon hot coals.  |
|  | Corrosive Sublimate and Sub-nitrate of Bismuth.   | Add to the tincture a few drops of the spirit of nitre, and dilute with water; the guaiacum is precipitated—the adulteration floats in white stræ.  |
| HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDUM MITE.Calomel.                      | Carbonate of Lead, Sulphate of Baryta, and Carbonate of Baryta.                                       | A precipitation will be produced by the carbonate of potassa, from a solution made by boiling the suspected sample with a small portion of muriate of ammonia in distilled water; or, the presence of deutochloride of mercury is indicated by warning gently a small quantity of calomel in alcohol, filtering and adding to the clear liquor some linewater, by which a reddish yellow precipitate is afforded. When calomel is rubbed with a fixed alkali, it ought to become intensely black, and not exhibit any orange hue. |
|  | Red Lead, Red Oxide of Iron, Brick Dust.  | Not volatilized by heat,—the carbonates effervesce with acids.  |
| HYDRARGYRI OXIDUM RUBRUM.Red Oxide of Mercury.          | Ivory Black.....  | Digest in acetic acid: add sulphuret of ammonia, which will produce a dark coloured precipitate. It should be totally volatilized by heat.  |
| HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM NIGRUM.                                     | Red Lead, Red Oxide of Iron, Brick Dust.  | Throw a suspected portion on hot coals—the residuum will detect the fraud.  |
| HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM RUBRUM.Red Sulphuret of Mercury. | Plumbago, Charcoal, and Oxide of Manganese.   | Digest in acetic acid, and add sulphuret of ammonia—a black precipitate will be produced. Does not wholly sublime like the genuine article.   |
| IODINIUM.Iodine.  | Bryony Root, spurious or false Jalap Root, and Liquorice Root.  | The tests of its purity are—that it is freely soluble in ether and alcohol. Heated on a piece of glass or porcelain, it sublimes without residuum, rising in purple vapour. With starch in cold solution it produces a blue colour.   |
| JALAPÆ RADIX.Jalap Root.                                |   | Bryony root is of a paler colour, and less compact texture, and does not easily burn at the flame of a candle. Liquorice is detected by the taste.  |

| MAGNESIA.  | Lime.....Sulphuret of Lime.....   | Detected by the solution in dilute sulphuric acid affording a precipitate with oxalate of ammonia.Gives off, when moistened, the smell of sulphuretted hydrogen.  |
| MAGNESIE CARBONAS.Carbonate of Magnesia.         | Chalk.....Gypsum.....   | Detected by adding dilute sulphuric acid to the suspected substance, when, if chalk be present, there will be a white insoluble precipitate.Boil in distilled water, and test the solution by a barytic and oxalic reagent.   |
| MANNA.   | A factitious article, consisting of honey or sugar, mixed with scammony, is said to be sometimes sold for it.  | The colour, weight, transparency, and taste detect it.  |
| MORPHIA ET EJUS SALES.Morphia, and its Salts.    |   | Morphia and its salts, when placed in contact with nitric acid, are coloured red; with persalts of iron, blue. They are perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and acidulated warm water. When morphia is mixed with narcotina, the adulteration is ascertained by mixing them with sulphuric ether, which dissolves the narcotina, without sensibly affecting the morphia. The bag must not appear to have been opened.This may be suspected, if it emits a fetid smoke when inflamed. |
| MOSCHUS.Musk.                                    | Dried Blood.....Asphaltum.....Fine particles of Lead.....   | Discovered by its melting and running before it inflames. Rub with water. The metallic particles will subside.  |
| OLEA DESTILLATA.Essential Oils.                  | Fixed Oils.....Alcohol.....   | Touch writing paper with it, and hold it before the fire: fixed oil leaves a stain of greaseAdd water; a milkiness and increase of temperature occurs.  |
| OLEUM RICINI.Castor Oil.                         | Olive or Almond or Poppy Oil.Extract of Liquorice, Bullets and Stones sometimes;Extract of Poppy, of Chelidonium majus, and other vegetables. Molasses, G Arabic, G. Tragacanth, Linseed Oil, Cow's Dung. | Alcohol S. g. 820 will mix with any proportion of castor oil, whilst it dissolves very little of the others.The best opium is covered with leaves and the reddish capsules of a species of Rumex. The inferior kinds have capsules adherent. It is bad when soft and friable, when intensely black or mixed with many impurities, and when sweet. The quantity of morphia affords the best test.  |
| OPIUM.   | Chlorides of Potassium, and Sodium, Nitrate and Carbonate of Potassa.   | The adulteration is ascertained by precipitating a solution of the salt with nitrate of silver, and treating the precipitate with ammonia, which dissolves the chloride of silver, without acting upon the iodide of this metal.  |
| POTASSII IODIDUM.Iodide of Potassium.            | Mannite, Sugar of Milk, Starch, Chalk.  | The genuine salt leaves no residue when submitted to calcination: is perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and in water slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid.   |
| QUINIE SULPHAS.Sulphate of Quinia.               | Brucea.....   | By the red color produced by contact with nitric acid.  |
| STRYCHNIE ET EJUS SALES.Strychnia and its Salts. | Chalk and Carbonate of Magnesia.White Lead.....   | Sulphuric acid excites an effervescence.Sulphuric acid forms an insoluble sulphate of lead.   |

The following table by Dr. Hassall is a classified list of various substances ascertained by him to be employed for the adulteration of different dietetic articles, — to imitate bulk and weight, and give colour, smell, or taste, or other properties. It sufficiently exhibits the considerable number of substances possessing qualities more or less injurious, which are employed in the adulteration of food.

| PORTER AND STOUT.....  | Water.....  | Sugar, Treacle.....  | Sugar, Treacle, Salt.  |
| PICKLES.....   |   | Salts of Copper, usually the Acetate of Copper, Bole Armenian, and sometimes Venetian Red.                                       |  |
| POTTED MEATS AND FISH.   | Flour, probably Wheat-flour boiled.   |  |  |
| PRESERVES.....   | Salts of Copper, including the Acetate.   |  |  |
| PEPPER.....  | Wheat and Pea Flour, Ground Rice, Ground Mustard Seeds, Linseed Meal, P. D. or Pepper Dust.   |  |  |
| SNUFF.....   |   | The Chromates of Potash, Chromate of Lead, Ferruginous earths, chiefly Umbers, Red and Yellow Ochre, Red Lead, or Oxide of Lead. | The Chromates of Potash, Carbonate of Ammonia, Lime, Powdered Glass or Silice, Powdered Orris-root.      |
| SUGAR.....   | Wheat-flour in two cases only, Potato-flour, and Tapioca-starch.  |  |  |
| SPICES:  |   |  |  |
| CLOVES.....  | Powdered Clove-stalks in one case.  |  |  |
| CINNAMON.....  | Cassia, Wheat-flour, Sago-meal, and mixtures of these; East India Arrow-root, Potato-flour.   |  |  |
| PIMENTO.....   | Mustard Husk in one instance.   |  |  |
| MIXED SPICE.....   | Wheat, Sago, and Potato Flours, Ground Rice, Two Vegetable Substances, one of which resembled Linseed.  |  |  |
| SAUCES, as the Essences of Anchovies, Lobsters, and Shrimps, and Tomato Sauce. |   | Red ferruginous earths, as Bole Armenian and Venetian Red.   |  |
| TEA.....   | Exhausted Tea Leaves; Leaves, other than those of Tea, British and Foreign.—as, amongst the former, those of Sycamore, Horse-chesnut, and Plum; Lie Tea,* Paddy Husk, Sand, Starch. | Plumbago, or Black Lead, Gum, Indigo, Prussian Blue, Turmeric, Chinese Yellow, China Clay, Soapstone or French Chalk.            | Sulphate of Iron, Catechu, Gum, La Veno Beno, Chinese, Botanical Powder.†                                |
| TOBACCO.....   | Water, Sugar, Treacle, and Salts...   | Sugar, Treacle.....  | Oil.   |
| VINEGAR.....   | Water.....  | Burnt Sugar.....   | Sulphuric Acid.  |

* 'Lie Tea' is so termed from being spurious. It is formed of the dust of tea leaves, and at times of other leaves and sand made into small masses by means of starch or gum; which are painted and coloured so as to resemble either black or green gunpowder tea.

† Called, also, the 'Chinese Tea Improver,' is said to be a mixture of a very small portion of tea powder, with upwards of 90 per cent. of catechu. The 'Chinese Botanical Powder' is an imitation of this.

FALTRANCK, Falltranck.

FALX, gen. Falcis, ('a scythe.') Anatomists have given this name to several membranous reflections having the shape of a falx or scythe.

FALX CEREBEL'LI, Falx mi'nor, Septum Cerebelli seu partem occipitalē, Processus falciformis Cerebelli, (F.) Faux du cervelet, Septum median du cervelet, (Ch.), is a triangular process of the dura mater opposite the internal occipital protuberance. Its base is attached to the middle of the tentorium, and its top or apex bifurcates, to proceed to the sides of the foramen magnum. Its convex surface is towards the cranium, and its concave in the fissure or groove, which separates the two lobes of the cerebellum.

FALX CEREBRI, F. major, Vertical superior longitudinal process, Mediastinum cerebri, Septum Cerebri, Processus falciformis duræ matris, (F.) Faux du cerveau, Repli longitudinal de la méninge, (Ch.) The greatest process of the dura mater. It extends from the fore to the hind part of the skull, on the median line; is broad behind and narrow before, and is lodged in the groove which separates the hemispheres from each other—the interlobular fissure. At its superior part is situated the longitudinal sinus (superior), and at its lower, corresponding to the edge of the scythe, the inferior longitudinal sinus. Its anterior extremity is attached to the crista galli; its posterior is continuous with the tentorium cerebelli, and contains the straight sinus.

FALX MAJOR, Falx cerebri—f. Minor, Falx cerebelli.

FALX OF THE PERITONE'UM, GREAT, F. peritonei maxima, (F.) Grande faux du péritoine, Faux de la Veine Omphalique, Faux of the umbilical vein, is a reflection of the peritoneum, which ascends from the umbilicus to the anterior and inferior surface of the liver.

FALCES OF THE PERITONE'UM, LESS'ER, Falces Peritonei min'ime, (F.) Petites faux du péritoine, are the lateral ligaments of the liver, and the reflections which the peritoneum forms, raised up by the umbilical arteries.

FALX OF THE UMBILICAL VEIN, Falx, great, of the Peritoneum.

FAME, Lancet.

FAMELICUS, (from fames), Hungry.

FAMELICA FEBRIS, Fever accompanied with insatiable hunger.

FAMES, Hunger—f. Bovina, Bouldimia—f. Canina, Bouldimia.

FAMES LUPI'NA, ('wolf hunger,') Lycorex'is, (F.) Faim de Loup. Authors have described, under this name, a kind of bouldimia, or depravation of the digestive functions, in which the patient eats voraciously, and passes his food, almost immediately afterwards, per anum.

FAMIGERATISSIMUM EMPLASTRUM, (fama, 'fame,' and gero, 'I wear.') A plaster extolled in ague, and made of aromatic, irritating substances. It was applied to the wrist.

FAMILIARICA SELLA, (familia, 'a household,' and sella, 'a seat or stool.') Close stool.

FAMILY DISEASES, see Hereditary.

FANCULUM, Anethum.

FANCY MARK, Nævus.

FANFECKLES, Ephelides.

FANG, (from Sax. fanzen, 'to seize.') Radix.

FANON, (F.), (G.) Fahne, 'a banner, ensign, standard,' (L.) pannus, 'a cloth,' Ferula, Leetulus stramineus, Thorulus stramineus. A splint of a particular shape, employed in fractures of the thigh and leg to keep the bones in contact.

The Fanons were divided into true and false. The true fanon consists of a cylinder of straw, strongly surrounded with a cord or riband, in the centre of which a stick is usually placed to insure its solidity. The false consists of a thick piece of linen, made flat like a compress, and folded at the extremities. It was placed between the fractured limb and the true fanon. The Drap-fanon is a large piece of common cloth placed between the fractured limb, in which the fanon or lateral splints are rolled.

FANTICKLES, Ephelides.

FAN'TOM, Phantom, Phantom'a, (φάντασμα, 'a spectre,') (F.) Phantomé, Fantomé. This word has two acceptations. It means the spectres and images which the imagination presents to the sick, when asleep or awake; and, also, the figure called Man'nikin, Man'ikin, and Man'akin, (F.) Monnequin, on which surgeons practice the application of bandages, or the accoucheur the manual part of midwifery—Phantom'a obstetric'ium.

Fantom or Phantom Tu'mour is one that forms, in the abdomen for example, simulating organic disease, and occasionally exceedingly deceptive.

FAR'ADIC, (F.) Faradique. Relating or appertaining to faradisation or electricity of induction.

FARADISA'TION, Far'adism, (after Faraday, the celebrated physicist.) A term proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, for electricity of induction, or the localised application, therapeutically, of induction currents—the currents, in other words, which are instantaneously developed in metallic conductors under the influence of voltaic or magnetic currents, or even of the earth.

FARCIMEN, (farcire, 'to stuff.') See Equinia.

FARCINIALIS MEMBRANA SEU TUNICA, (farcinem, 'a sausage,') Allantois.

FARCIN, ([Celt.] farciñh, from far, 'a horse,') See Equinia.

FARCINOMA, Equinia.

FARCTU'RA, Far'ura, (farcire, farctum, or farctum, 'to stuff,') The operation of introducing medicinal substances into the cavities of animals or of fruits, which have been previously emptied.

FARCTUS, ('stuffed,') Emphraxis.

FARCY GLANDERS, see Equinia.

FARDE, ([G.] farbe, 'color,') Paint.

FARDEAU, ([Celt.] fardeall, 'a burden,') Mole.

FARFARA, Tussilago—f. Bechium, Tussilago.

FARIGOLE, Thymus.

FARI'NA, (far, 'corn,' or grain of any kind, of which it is made.) Al'ghiton, Crim'non, Al'eton, Aleur'on, Al'ema, (F.) Farine. Meal or Flour. The powder, obtained by grinding the seeds of the gramineous, leguminous, and cucurbitaceous plants in particular. It is highly nutritious and much used, dietetically as well as medicinally. In the pharmacopœias of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, Fari'na means wheat flour—Fari'na Trit'ici.

Leath's Alimentary Fari'na or Homœopathic Fari'na'ceous Food, is said to consist principally of wheat flour, slightly baked, and sweetened with sugar, together with potato flour and a very small quantity of Indian corn meal and tapioca.

FARINA AMYGDALARUM, see Amygdala.

FARINA, COMPOUND'ED, BAST'ER'S, is said to consist of wheat flour, sweetened with sugar.

FARINA, NUTRIT'IOUS, MAID'MAN'S, is said to consist of potato flour, artificially coloured of a pink or rosy hue, the colouring matter being probably rose pink.

FARINA TRIT'ICI, Wheat flour; F. Secali, Rye flour or meal; F. Hor'dei, Barley meal; F. Avena'cea, Oat meal, &c. See Amylum.

FARINE RESOLVENT'ES, (F.) Farines Résolutives. This name was formerly given to a mixture of the farina of four different plants; Lupine, Lupinus albus; Erenum Ervilia; Vicia faba, and Barley, Hordeum distichum. They were recommended to form cataplasms.

FARINA'CEOUS, Fari'na'ceus, Fari'nosus, (F.) Farinacé, Farineux, Meal'y. Having the appearance or nature of farina. A term given to all articles of food which contain farina. The term Farinacea includes all those substances called cerealia, legumina, &c., which contain farina, and are employed as nutriment.

Hard's farinaceous food is fine wheat flour, which has been subjected to some heating process. Braden's farinaceous food is said to be wheat flour, baked.

In Pathology, the epithet farinaceous, (F.) farineux, is applied to certain eruptions, in which the epidermis exfoliates in small particles similar to farina.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, BRADEN'S, see Farinaceous—f. Food, Hard's, see Farinaceous—f. Food, homoeopathic, see Farina.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PLUMBE'S, is said to consist principally of bean or pea flour, most probably the former, with a little Tacca arrowroot, some potato flour, and a very little Maranta arrowroot.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PRINCE ARTHUR'S, for infants and invalids of all ages, is said to consist entirely of wheat flour, slightly baked.

FARINARIUM, Alia.

FARINE, Farina.

FARINES RÉSOLUTIVES, Farinæ resolutives.

FARINEUX, Farinaceous.

FARINOSUS, Farinaceous.

FARMERY, Hospital.

FARNTICKLES, Ephelides.

FARRIER, (from ferrarius, relating to ferrum, 'iron,' 'a blacksmith.') Hippiaater.

FARSIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

FART, (Sax. fart, Teut. fahren, 'to go;—fahrt, 'a voyage,' or by onomatopœia; [G.] Furz.) Bdelius, Bdulus, Bdelygnia, Bdelygnus, Bom'bus, Por'de, Phy'sa, Phy'se, Flatus, Crep'itus, C. ventris, (F.) Pet. A sonorous or other discharge of wind from behind. A low word, but of respectable parentage.

FARTURA, Farctura.

FARTUS, (farvere, farctum or fartum, 'to stuff.') Emphraxia.

FAS'CIA, (a band, from fos, 'that which is binding.') Ligatio, Ligatu'ra, Alligatu'ra, Anadesmus, Viv'iculum, Spar'ganon, Epides'mus, Vinctus. A band'age, fil'let, rol'ler, lig'ature. The aponeurotic expansions of muscles, which bind parts together, are likewise termed Fasciæ. See Tænia.

FASCIA APONEUROTICA FEMORIS, Fascia lata aponeurosis—f. Capitalis, Boinet d'Hippocrate, Capelina—f. Capitis, Diadema—f. Cooperi, F. Transversalis.

FASCIA, CRIBRIFORM, F. Cribriform'is. The sieve-like portion of the fascia lata; so called 'from its being pierced by numerous openings for the passage of lymphatic vessels.

FASCIA DENTA'TA, F. D. Tari'ni, Corps godronné, of Vicq d'Azyr. A band of gray matter seen beneath the tænia hippocampi on raising it up, which runs along the inner border of the cornu ammonis. It is, as it were, crenated by transverse furrows.

FASCIA DIGITALIS, Gantelet—f. Diopthalmica, Binoculus—f. Dividens, Dividing bandage—f. Heliodori, T. bandage.

FASCIA ILL'ACA, Il'iac aponeuro'sis. An aponeurosis which proceeds from the tendon of the psaos minor, or which arises from the anterior surface of the psaos magnus, when the former muscle does not exist. It is attached, externally, to the inner edge of the crest of the ilium, below and anteriorly,—on one side to the crural arch, sending an expansion to the fascia transversalis; and on the other, continuous with the deep-seated lamina of the fascia lata, which forms the posterior paries of the crural canal. Within and behind, the fascia iliaca is attached to the brim of the pelvis, and is continuous with the aponeurosis, which M. Jules Cloquet has called Pel'vian. The iliac aponeurosis covers the iliac and psaos muscles, which it separates from the peritonæum.

FASCIA INFUNDIB'ULIFORMIS, is a funnel-shaped offset from the fascia transversalis, which is prolonged as a sheath upon the vas deferens and spermatic vessels as they pass out of the abdomen.

FASCIA INGUINALIS, Spica.

FASCIA LA'TA. A name given by anatomists to an aponeurosis, and to a muscle.

FASCIA LATA APONEURO'SIS, F. aponeurot'ica fem'oris, Vag'ina fem'oris, Crural or Fem'oral Aponeuro'sis, is the most extensive in the body, and envelopes all the muscles of the thigh. Above, it is attached to the outer edge of the ilium; before, it arises from the crural arch by two distinct laminae, separated by the femoral vessels, and becoming confounded a little below the part where the great vena saphæna opens into the crural vein. Of these two laminae, the one is more anterior and thicker than the other, and may be considered as a prolongation of the aponeurosis of the external oblique: it is intimately united to Poupart's ligament. The other, which is thinner, is behind, and deeper seated, and, after its union with the former, proceeds to be inserted into the pubis. Inferiorly, the fascia lata becomes confounded with the tendon of the triceps, and is attached to the external tuberosity of the tibia. The use of the fascia lata, like that of other aponeuroses, is to strengthen the action of the muscles, &c.

FASCIA LA'TA MUSCLE, Ten'sor vagi'næ fem'oris, Fascia'lis, Membrano'sus, Musculus aponeuro'sis seu fas'ciæ latæ seu fem'oris membrano'sus, (F.) Il'io-aponeuro'si-femoral, Il'io-aponeuro'ti-femoral—(Ch.) Tenseur de l'aponevrose fémorale. A muscle, situate at the upper and outer part of the thigh. It arises, above, from the outer part of the anterior and superior spine of the ilium; and is inserted, below, between the two laminae of the fascia lata, which it stretches and raises when it contracts.

FASCIA, OBTURATOR, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Internal, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Lateral, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Superior, see Pelvic aponeuroses.

FASCIA PRO'PRIA. A layer of areolar tissue derived from the sheath of the femoral vessels—or, according to some, from the cribriform fascia. It is one of the coverings of femoral hernia, and is generally pretty dense about the neck of the hernia; but thin or even wanting on its fundus.

FASCIA REPENS, Spica—f. Scapularis, Scapulary—f. Sculteti, Bandage of separate strips—f. Semicircularis, Tænia semicircularis—f. Spiralis, Ascia—f. Stellata, Stella—f. Submuscular, see Vaginal (of the eye).

FASCIA, SUBPERITONE'AL, Subperitone'al aponeuro'sis. A thin tendinous layer on the outer surface of the peritonæum.

FASCIA SUPERFICIA'LIS, Superfici'al aponeuro'sis of the abdomen and thigh, (F.) Aponevrose superficielle de l'abdomen et de la cuisse. A very thin aponeurosis, which covers the muscles and aponeuroses of the abdomen; passes before the crural arch, to which it adheres with some degree of force; sends a membranous sheath, which surrounds the spermatic cord, and is continuous with the dartos, which it assists in forming. The fascia superficialis presents, beneath the crural arch, very distinct fibres, whose direction is parallel to the fold of the thigh. It is applied over the fascia lata aponeurosis, and is attached, internally, to the ascending ramus of the ischium, near the root of the corpus cavernosum. Before the descent of the testicle from the abdomen, the fascia super- facialis is very manifestly continuous with the Gubernaculum testis.

FASCIA TIFORMIS, T. bandage—f. Tortilis, Tour-niquet.

FASCIA TRANSVERSA' LIS, F. Cooperi. An aponeurosis, which separates the transversalis muscle from the peritoneum in the inguinal region. It arises above the posterior edge of the crural arch, where it, seems to be continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle. Above, it is lost in the areolar tissue at the internal surface of the transversalis abdominis. Within, it is continuous with the outer edge of the tendon of the rectus muscle and Gimbernat's ligament; below, it is continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique, and receives an expansion from the Fascia Iliaca. Towards its middle and a little above the crural arch, the fascia transversalis has the wide orifice of a canal, which is occupied, in the female, by the round ligament of the uterus; and in man, furnishes an expansion, that serves as a sheath to the spermatic vessels.

FASCIÆ (pl. of Fascia). Also, Swathing clothes—f. Coli, see Colon—f. Ligamentosæ Coli, see Colon.

FASCIALIS, Fascia lata muscle, Sartorius—f. Longus, Sartorius—f. Sutorius, Sartorius.

FASCIARUM APLICATIO, Deligation.

FASCIATIO, Deligation, see Bandage—f. Cucullata, Couvrechef.

FASCICLE, Fasciculus.

FASCICULATED PORTION OF THE PEDUNCLE, see Peduncles of the Brain.

FASCICULI (pl. of Fasciculus) CORTICALES, Ferrein, pyramid of—f. Graciles, see Corpora restiformia.

FASCICULI INNOMINATI. Two large bundles of fibres in the interior of the medulla oblongata, behind the corpora olivaria, and more or less apparent between those bodies and the corpora restiformia. They ascend, and become apparent in the fourth ventricle, under the name Fasciculi seu Proccensus teretes.

FASCICULUS, Phacellus, Phacelus, Fascicle, (dim. of fascia, 'a band,') 'a small bundle.' Desme'dion. In Anatomy, it is employed in this sense, as 'a fasciculus of fibres.' (F.) Fascicule, Faisceau ou Petit Faisceau, Trousseau. In Pharmacy, it means Manipulus, Cheuplethes, 'a handful.' Musa Brassavolus says,—as much as can be held in two fingers.

FASCICULUS CUNEATUS, Reinforcement, fasciculus of—f. of Reinforcement, Reinforcement, F. of.

FASCICULUS UNCINATUS. A white bundle, seen on the lateral aspect of the cerebral hemispheres, passing across the bottom of the fissure of Sylvius, and connecting the anterior with the middle and posterior lobes. The fibres of this fasciculus expand at each extremity, and the superficial portions of them curve or hook sharply between the contiguous parts of the anterior and middle lobes, whence the epithet 'uncinatus.'

FASCINOSUS, (from fascinum.) Membrosus.

FASCINUM, Dildo, Penis.

FASTIDIUM, (abridged from fatis tædium.) Fastidiousness, Squeamishness, or the condition of a stomach that is really affected with nausea.

FASTIDIUM CIBI, Asitia, Disgust—f. Potûs, Loathing of drink.

FASTIGIUM, 'the top,' (from fastus, 'elevation,') Acme.

FASTING, (from Sax. fæstan.) Limo'sis ex-pers protracta, Inedia, Nesti'a, Jejunium, (F.) Jéûne. Loss or want of appetite without any other apparent affection of the stomach; so that the system can sustain almost total abstinence for a long time without faintness. Some wonderful cases of this kind, Auorex'ia mirabilis, are on record. See Abstinence.

FAT, (G. fett, Sax. fæt.) Pingue'do, Pim'clê, Pi'ar, Li'pê, Li'pos, Ste'ar, A'deps, Se'cum, Se'bium, Cor'pus adipo'sum, Azun'gia, (F.) Graisse. A soft, white, animal substance; inodorous; insipid; oily; inflammable; easy to melt; spoiling in the air, and becoming rancid by union with oxygen; almost insoluble in alcohol; insoluble in water; soluble in fixed oils. Fat is formed of the immediate principles, stearin, margarin, and olein or elain, all of which are regarded as salts composed of stearic, margaric and oleic acids, and a common base, to which, from its sweetish taste, the name Glyc'er'in, Glycer'ua, Glycer'ium. (F.) Glycérine has been given. To these are, almost always, joined an odorous and a colouring principle. GLYCERIN, Glycer'ua, was introduced into the edition of the Pharmacopœia of the U. S. (1851), in which it was directed to be prepared as follows:—Lead plaster, recently prepared and yet fluid, and boiling water, of each a gallon; mix; stir briskly for 15 minutes; allow it to cool, and pour off the liquid. Evaporate until it has the s. g. 1.15, and pass slowly through it a current of sulphohydric acid until a black precipitate is no longer thrown down. Filter and boil until the sulphohydric acid is driven off, and evaporate the liquid until it ceases to lose weight.

In the last edition of the Pharmacopœia (1863), it has been transferred to the primary list of the Materia Medica.

Glycerin is a colourless or straw-coloured syrupy fluid; s. g. 1.25. It is soluble in water and in alcohol, but not in ether. It is used in the form of lotion, composed of half an ounce to ten fluid-ounces of water, in cutaneous diseases, as psoriasis, pityriasis, lepra, and ichthyosis. It keeps the part moist, as it does not evaporate readily. A Glycerin ointment may be made of Spermaceti ℥ss; White wax ℥i; Oil of almonds ℥ij; Glycerin ℥j. Melt the spermaceti and wax with the oil, and incorporate the glycerin in a mortar. It may be used wherever a mild ointment is demanded.

Fat is found in a number of animal tissues, and is very abundant in the neighbourhood of the kidneys and in the epiploon. It is generally fluid in the cetacea; soft, and of a strong smell in the carnivora; solid, and inodorous in the ruminating animal; white, and abundant in young animals; and yellowish in old. It generally forms about a twentieth part of the weight of the human body. The fat, considered physiologically, has, for its function, to protect the organs; maintain their temperature; and to serve for nutrition in case of need; as is observed in torpid animals.

FAT, Corpulent—f. Cells, Fatty vesicles.

FAT, MACKAW, see Cocos butyracea.

FATIGATIO, (fatigare, fatigatum, 'to fatigue,') Copos.

FATIGUE, Copos.

FAT'TY, (Sax. fæt; past participle of fætan, 'to nourish,') Adipo'sus, Adipat'us, Pimel'icus, Pimelo'des, Liparo'des, Li'parus, Pie'ros, Ad'ipous, Pi'guid, Pingued'inous. Relating to fat. Resembling or containing fat. The cellular membrane has been called fatty or ad'ipous; from an opinion that, in its areolæ, the fat is deposited. The areolar membrane, however, merely lodges, be tween its lamellæ and filaments, the vesicles in which the fat is contained.

FATTY DEGENERATION OF THE LIVER, Adiposis hepatica.

FATTY LIG'AMENT, Ad'ipous lig'ament. This name has been given to a reflection of the synovial membrane of the knee joint, which passes from the ligamentum patellæ towards the cavity that separates the condyles of the femur.

FATTY LIVER, Adiposis hepatica.

FATTY MEM'BRANE, Ad'ipous mem'brane, Ad'ipous tis'sue. The subcutaneous areolar tissue, or that containing the fatty or adipose vesicles.

FATTY VES'ICLES, Sac'culi adiposi, Ad'ipous ves'icles, Fat cells. This name is given to small burse or membranous vesicles which enclose the fat, and are found situate in the areolæ of the areolar tissue. These vesicles vary much in size. Generally, they are round and globular; and, in certain subjects, receive vessels which are very apparent. They form so many small sacs without apertures, in the interior of which are filaments arranged like septa. In fatty subjects, the adipose vesicles are very perceptible, being attached to the areolar tissue and neighbouring parts by a vascular pedicle. Raspail affirms that there is the most striking analogy between the nature of the adipose granules and that of the amylaceous grains.

FATTY VES'SELS, Ad'ipous ves'sels. The vessels connected with the fat. Some anatomists have called Adipous canals, (F.) Conduits adipeux, the vessels to which they attribute the secretion of fat.

FATUISME, Fatuitas.

FATUITAS, Moro'sis, Stultit'ia, Stupor ment'is, Ament'ia; (F.) Fatuisme, Fatuité, (from fatuus, 'foolish.') Mental imbecility. Idiotism. Dementia. One affected with fatuity is said to be fat'uus, (Sc.) Duupid.

FAUCIAL, (from fauces.) Pharyngeal.

FAUCITIS, (fauces, and itis.) Isthmitis.

FAUNO'RUM LUDIB'RIA, 'The sports of the Faun.' Some authors have called thus incubus; others, epilepsy.

FAUQUIER SPRINGS, see Virginia, Mineral Waters of.

FAUSSE, (from falsus,) False—f. Conception, Conception, false.

FAUSSE COUCHE (F.), ('false birth.') Vannu parturivium. Some authors have used this term for the expulsion of different bodies constituting false conceptions; such as moles, hydatids, clots of blood, &c. Most accoucheurs use the term synonymously with abortion.

FAUSSE GROSSESE, ('false pregnancy.') Pregnancy, false—f. Membrane, Membrane, false—f. Pleurésie, Pleurisy, false—f. Pneumonic, Peripneumonia notha.

FAUSSE POSITION (F.), False position. The French use this term, in vulgar language, to indicate any attitude in which torpor, tingling, and loss of power over the motion of a part, are produced by too strong contraction or painful compression.

FAUSSE RHABARBE, ('false rhubarb.') Thalietron—f. Route, False passage—f. Variole, Variella.

FAUSTINI PASTIL'LI, 'Faustinus's Lozenges.' These were once celebrated. They were composed of burnt paper, quicklime, oxide of arsenic, sandarach, lentils, &c.

FAVEUX, Favosus.

FAVIFORMIS, (favus, 'honeycomb,' and forma, 'shape.') Favosus.

FAVOSUS, favus, similar to a honeycomb. Faviformis, Favous, (F.) Faveux. An epithet given to a species of porrigo. Cer'ion, Ké'ri'on, Favus; it means also a state of ulceration resembling a honeycomb.

FAVULUS; (dim. of favus, 'a honeycomb.') Favuli is used by Dr. S. G. Morton, of Philadelphia, for the honeycomb-like depressions in the lining membrane of the stomach—the stomach-cells of Messrs. Todd and Bowman.

FEB'RUA, (februus, 'I purge.') In ancient mythology, a goddess who presided over menstruation.

FECAL, Stercoraceous—f. Matter, see Fæces.

FÈCES, Fæces.

FÈCONDATION, Fecundation.

FÈCONDITÉ, Fecundity.

FEC'ULA, Fæcula, (dim. of fæces.) An immediate principle of vegetables, composed of hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon. It exists in several plants, and has different names, according to that which furnishes it. (F.) Fæcule, Amygdolè When extracted from wheat or barley, it is called starch, Amylum. When from Cyclus circinalis, Sa'go;—from Orchis mo'rio, Salap. We say, also, Fæcula of the Potato, Bryonia, Arum, Manioc, &c.

FECULA AMYLACEA, Amylum.

FECULA GREEN. This name is given to a green, solid matter, of variable character, which is believed to be resinous, and which renders turbid several kinds of juices extracted from vegetables. It is also called Chlorophyll.

FECULA MARANTÆ, Arrow-root—f. Tapicka, see Jatropha manihot.

FÈCULE, Fæcula.

FEC'ULENCE, Fæculentia, Fæculositas, Fæc', plural Fæces, Lem'ma, Lee, Depos'it, Dregs. In

Pharmacy, feculent, albuminous, or other substances, which are deposited from turbid fluids.

FECULENT, Fæculentus, Hypotrygon, Trygo'des. 'Foul, dreggy, excrementitious;' as a feculent fluid, feculent evacuations, &c.

FECUND, Fæcundus, Fæcundus, (F.) Fécond. Fruitful, prolific.

FECUNDA'TION, Fæcunda'tio, Impregna'tion, Impregna'tio, Ingravida'tio, Pregna'tio, Gravida'tio, Pregna'tus, Fructifica'tio, Cyc'esis, Encyc'esis, Encymo'sia, Procrea'tion, (F.) Fécondation. The act by which, in organized beings, the material furnished by the generative organs of the female, unites with that prepared by those of the male, so that a new being results.

FECUN'DITY, Entoc'ia, Polygon'ia, Polytoc'ia, Fæcunditas, Productivitas, (F.) Fécondité. The faculty of reproduction, possessed by organized bodies.

It has been estimated that, throughout a country, taking one marriage with another, not more than 4 children are the result; and in towns only 35 children in 10 marriages.

FEE, Psychorages, Sostrum.

FEET, BURN'ING OF THE. A singular cachectic disease, described by Mr. Malcolmson as occurring in India, the prominent symptom of which was a sense of burning in the feet.

FÉGARITE, Cancer aquaticus, Stomatitis, pseudo-membranous.

FEIGNED DISEASES, Mor'bi dissimula'ti seu simula'ti seu celati seu infit'ati seu pseudo'lei, Sim'ulated or Pretend'ed diseases, (F.) Maladies dissimulées ou simulées ou feintes ou supposées. The tricks employed, by impostors, to induce a belief that they are attacked with diseases when they are not. These are generally assumed by beggars to obtain alms; by criminals to escape punishment; and by soldiers to be exempt from duty.

The following table exhibits the chief feigned, pretended, simulated or excited diseases, or disqualifications, with the means of detection:—

| DISEASES, &c.                     | HOW FEIGNED.   | HOW DETECTED.  |
|-----------------------------------|--|--|
| ABORTION.                         | { By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.  | { By constant and minute attention.  |
| ABSTINENCE.                       | .....  |  |
| AMAUROTIC BLINDNESS.              | { By applying the extract of belladonna or datura stramonium to the eye.   | { Amaurosis is characterized by dilated pupil. Where these substances have been applied, the effects will go off in ten days or a fortnight.   |
| APHONIA.                          | .....  | { By anæsthetics, and, under their use, or otherwise, taking the person off his guard.   |
| APOPLEXY.                         | { By falling down as if deprived of sensation and consciousness.   | { By powerful stimulants; an electric shock; application of hot water, sternutatories, actual cautery, &c.   |
| CACHEXIA, ANEMIA, AND DEBILITY.   | { Using substances to make the face appear pale and livid. Indulging freely in wine, and privation of sleep prior to examination.  | { By examining if the pulse be strong, and the skin hot, and whether there be loss of appetite or of strength, or swelling of the limbs, or unmistakable feebleness of the vital actions.  |
| CALCULI, EXCRETION OF.            | { Putting sand, pebbles, &c. into the urine.   | { By the aid of chymistry. We are acquainted with the chymical composition of urinary calculi.   |
| CANCEROUS ULCER.                  | { By gluing on a portion of a spleen with the smooth side to the skin, leaving on the outside the appearance of an ulcerated surface.  | { By noticing whether there be signs of cachexia, and by attentive examination of the part.  |
| CATALEPSY                         | { By seeming to be suddenly motionless, the joints remaining flexible, and external objects making no impression.  | { By powerful stimulants, as recommended under apoplexy. Letting fall a drop of boiling water on the back. Proposing to use the actual cautery, and seeing whether the pulse rises.  |
| CHOREA.                           | { By assuming the convulsive motions of a part which characterize chorea.  | { By examining the patient whilst he may imagine himself unobserved, and seeing whether the convulsive motions go on. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.  |
| CONTRACTION OF JOINTS IN GENERAL. | .....  | { Mode of discrimination sometimes so obscure as to deceive the most practised and attentive. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.  |
| CONTRACTION OF THE FINGERS.       | .....  | { Introduce a cord between the fingers and the palm of the hand, and gradually apply weights so as to expand the fingers. Confine him so that he cannot obtain his food without using his clenched hand. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia. |
| CONVULSIONS.                      | .....  | { When feigned, they do not present the rigidity of muscles or the rapidity of action which characterize the real. The mode of detection must be the same as in epilepsy.  |
| CORNEA, OPAQUE.                   | { Produced by the application of a strong acid, by acrid powders, as quicklime, &c.  | { The existence of the opacity can be detected by attentive observation.   |
| ECTANEUS DISEASES.                | { Some articles of diet will bring on urticaria or netterash , in particular individuals, as shellfish, bitter almonds, &c. By acrids, acids, or any irritants applied to the surface. An ointment of tartarized antimony causes a painful pustular eruption. See Porrijo, in this list. | { By careful watching and examination on the part of practitioner and nurse.   |
| DEAFDUMBNESS                      | .....  | { The really deaf and dumb acquire an expression of countenance and gestures which it is difficult to assume. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.  |

|--------------------------------------|---|--|
| DEAFNESS.                            | It may be assumed or excited by putting a pea in the ear, or by inserting irritants, so as to induce inflammation and temporary loss of function.   | Make a noise when not expected, and see if the countenance varies or pulse rises. Put to sleep by opium, and then fire a pistol close to the ear, when he may be thrown off his guard. Examine the ear to see if any trick has been played there. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.                    |
| DEATH.                               | Some persons possess the power of suspending or moderating the action of the heart.   | If suspected, the plan recommended under apoplexy will be found most efficacious.  |
| DEBILITY, see CACHEXIA.              |   |  |
| DEFORMITY.                           | .....   | Examine the part and its articulation naked, and compare it with the opposite.   |
| DELIRIUM.                            | .....   | Real delirium is accompanied by bodily disease; with general wandering and incoherency. The feigned is more confined to special subjects.  |
| DELIVERY.                            | After enlargement produced artificially, a subsidence of the tumefaction; the parts being moistened by borrowed blood, and the child of another substituted as the female's own.  | Can only be positively detected by examination per vaginam . Soon after delivery, the vagina will be relaxed and the lochial discharge be flowing in greater abundance, the shorter the time that may have elapsed since delivery.  |
| DIARRHŒA.                            | Said to have been caused by a mixture of vinegar and burnt cork. May be occasioned by the use of any of the purgative roots, &c.  | When diarrhœa is feigned by the lower classes, inspect the linen; if clean, the bowels are probably not much out of order. Let every individual have a close stool of his own; and inspect the evacuations, taking care that one suffering under the disease does not lend his evacuations to another. |
| DROPSY.                              | May be feigned, like pregnancy, by wearing pads. The anasarous condition of the lower limbs has been caused by applying a ligature round them. By inflating the cellular membrane of the abdomen.                         | Can be detected by attentive examination. There will be a want of that leucophlegmatic habit which accompanies and characterizes dropsy.   |
| DYSENTERY.                           | May be feigned, like diarrhœa, by adding a little blood to the evacuations, or by introducing a soap, or some more irritating, suppository.   | Same rules as under diarrhœa.  |
| EPILEPSY.                            | The foaming of the mouth has been produced by keeping a piece of soap in it.  | Sensation in epilepsy is totally abolished. If any remain, disease probably feigned. Incontractility of pupil, which occurs in epilepsy, cannot be feigned. Same means to be used as in feigned apoplexy.  |
| FEVER.                               | By various stimulants, as wine, brandy, pepper; swallowing a small quantity of tobacco, or introducing it into the anus. Flour or chalk used to whiten the tongue. Redness of skin, caused by friction with a hard brush. | This deceit is generally developed by an examination of a day or two. Where flour or chalk has been used to whiten the tongue, the line of demarcation between the whitened part and the clean, healthy margin of the tongue, is too well marked to escape observation.                                |
| FISTULA IN ANO.                      | By making an incision near the verge of the anus, and introducing into it an acrid tent, such as the root of white hellebore .   | By careful examination.  |
| FRACTURES.                           | There is generally nothing but the man's own testimony. He complains of pain in the part; if fracture of the skull be feigned, he states, perhaps, that he becomes deranged on tasting liquor.                            | By attentive examination.  |
| HEMATEMESIS.                         | By drinking the blood of some animal, or using some coloured liquid, and then throwing it up.   | By cutting off the supply of the fluid and careful examination.  |
| HEMOPTYSIS.                          | By secreting bullock's blood for the purpose of colouring the saliva; making small incisions in the mouth; using bole armeniac or paint of vermillion.  | Blood from the lungs is frothy and light-coloured. Mouth and fauces must be carefully inspected, and the individual be observed.   |
| HEMORRHOIDS.                         | By introducing bladders of rats or of small fish partly into the rectum. The linen has also been stained with borrowed blood.   | The means are obvious.   |
| HEART, DISEASES OF, see PALPITATION. |   |  |
| HEPATITIS.                           | .....   | Unless the person be a well-educated man, acute inflammation of the liver will be detected by the absence of marks of strong inflammatory action. Chronic liver disease is, frequently, not characterized by wellmarked symptoms, and hence, when assumed, is difficult of detection.           |
| HERNIA.                              | In the same manner as hydrocele;—by inflation.  | The detection is easy.   |
| HYDROCELE.                           | By puncturing the skin of the scrotum, and inflating the cellular membrane.   | Do.  |
| HYDROCEPHALUS.                       | By opening the integuments of the head near the vertex, e. g. and blowing in air.   | Do.  |
| Hysteria.                            | .....   | Does not easily resist the application of strong sternutatories to the nostrils. Attentive examination necessary.  |

| DISEASES, &c.                 | HOW FEIGNED.   | HOW DETECTED.   |
|-------------------------------|--|---|
| INSANITY.                     | .....  | The expression of countenance cannot easily be feigned. Nor can the affection be kept up so long as in real mental alienation. The individual cannot do so long without food, sleep, &c.  |
| JAUNDICE.                     | By colouring the skin with an infusion of turmeric or tincture of rhubarb. Clay-coloured stools produced by taking daily a small quantity of muriatic acid. High-coloured urine by rhubarb taken internally.                                     | The eyes cannot be coloured, although smoke has been used for this purpose. The skin must be washed to remove the colouring matter if any exist, and the supply of acid and rhubarb be prevented.   |
| LAMENESS.                     | By keeping the limb in a contracted state, and resisting any efforts to move it.   | By two persons taking hold of the individual and moving rapidly along with him; and when they are tired having relays. The impostor will generally give in. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.   |
| MENSTRUATION.                 | By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.  | By cutting off the supply.  |
| MYOPIA.                       | .....  | Present an open book, and apply the leaves close to the nose. If it cannot be read distinctly, when thus placed, or when glasses proper for short-sightedness are used, the disease is feigned.   |
| OPHTHALMIA.                   | Excited by a variety of acrid and corrosive substances applied to the eye; as lime, &c.A portion of black muslin, spread over the cornea. The eyelashes are sometimes extracted, and caustic applied to excite disease in the palpebra.      | When ophthalmia is thus excited, its progress is ordinarily very rapid, arriving at its height within a few hours.  |
| OZENA.                        | By impregnating a piece of sponge with some offensive juices or oils, mixed with decayed cheese, and putting the imbued sponge into the nostrils.  | .....   |
| PAINS.                        | .....  | The detection is here often difficult. The non-existence of pain cannot be proved, and great pain may be present without any appearance externally.The imposition is more frequently detected by inconsistencies and contradictions in the patient's history of the case, than in any other manner. |
| PALPITATION.                  | White hellebore, given in the dose of 10 or 12 grains, and repeated, will occasion general indisposition, and undue action of the heart.   | Cut off the supply.   |
| SHAKING PALSY.                | .....  | May be suspected, if the person be in an ordinary state of vigour. Use violent remedies and means, recommended under Chorea.  |
| PARALYSIS.                    | .....  | Violent remedies are here required. Cold affusion, actual cautery, electric shocks, &c. By anæsthetics, as under Aphonia.   |
| PHTHISIS PULMONALIS.          | Individuals with long necks and contracted shoulders have simulated phthisis, by covering the chest with blisters, cicatrices of issues, &c., and by taking drugs which cause paleness.  | By attentive examination of the symptoms.   |
| POLYPUS NASI.                 | By introducing the testicle of a young cock, or the kidney of a rabbit, into the nostril, and retaining it there by means of a sponge fastened to it.  | .....   |
| PORRIGO OR SCALDED HEAD.      | By applying nitric acid to the head, after protecting the face with fatty substances; but the chronic state is imitated by the use of depilatories of different kinds applied sometimes in patches, so as to resemble Porrigo decalvans . | .....   |
| PREGNANCY.                    | By wearing pads, and assuming the longing after particular articles of diet, &c.   | By the absence of the areola; the presence of a pad; and, if necessary, by examination per vaginam .   |
| PROLAPSUS ANI.                | By a portion of the intestine of the ox, in which a sponge filled with a mixture of blood and milk is placed.  | .....   |
| PROLAPSUS UTERI.              | By a similar fraud.  | .....   |
| PULSE, WEAKNESS OR DEFECT OF. | By ligatures applied to the corresponding arm. Slowness of pulse may be caused by the use of Veratrum viride .  | By examining whether the arteries of the two arms beat alike; and if a ligature be placed on the arm.   |
| RHEUMATISM, CHRONIC.          | By complaining of great suffering on moving the limbs, and of pain and stiffness of the joints.  | By careful observation, and the use of anæsthetics, as under Aphonia. It is frequently feigned, and not easy of detection. See Pains.   |
| SCROFULA.                     | By exciting ulcers below the angles of the jaw.  | By examining the general habit, and observing whether the ulcerations be glandular, and the discharge of a scrofulous character.  |

| DISEASES, &c.                                      | HOW FEIGNED.   | HOW DETECTED.  |
|--|--|--|
| SCURVY.  | By covering the teeth with wax, and then applying acid corrosive substances to the gums.   | By examining the general habit; whether debilitated, cachectic, and possessing the usual general signs of scorbuts. Simulators of this defect generally state, that it is connate, or ascribe it to a fit of apoplexy or severe fever. Where the organs of speech were perfect, and the moral evidence of the previous existence of the infirmity was not satisfactory, the French authorities used to confine the soldiers, and not supply them with food, until they called for it without stammering. |
| STAMMERING.  | .....  | .....  |
| STRABISMUS.  | .....  | If the person be roused suddenly from sleep, the eyes will be right, as they also are during sleep. Under anæsthetics they would be so likewise.   |
| STRUCTURE OF THE URETHRA.SWELLING OF THE LEGS. | By ligatures round the thighs.   | By passing a bougie. Examine the limbs uncovered.  |
| SYNCOPE.   | Ligatures are sometimes used to prevent the pulse being felt. By applying lotions to the face to make it pale.   | By using stertuatories. By the absence of some of the symptoms of syncope. Examine the naked arms. Wash the face.  |
| TUBERCULOSIS, see Phthisis.                        | .....  | .....  |
| TYMPANT.   | Persons have possessed the power of swallowing air, so as to distend the stomach, and simulate tympany.  | .....  |
| ULCER OF THE EAR.                                  | By introducing a tent, imbued with blistering plaster into the ear, and repeating the application, until the tube becomes ulcerated, and a discharge of puriform matter is established. The fetid smell is imitated, by dropping into the ear a mixture of empyreumatic oil, asafetida, and old cheese. Also, by introducing a little honey into the meatus. | By careful examination.  |
| ULCERS OF THE LEGS, &c.                            | By corrosives, or irritants. Sometimes by abrasion, by rubbing sand on the shinbone. At others, they are pretended, by gluing on a piece of spleen or the skin of a frog.  | Artificial ulcers have, usually, a more distinct margin, and are more readily healed than others; the latter being generally indicative of an impaired constitution.   |
| URINE, BLOODY.                                     | The fruit of the Indian Fig ( Cactus opuntia ) colours the urine as red as blood. Cantharides will cause it. Blood may also be procured and mixed with the urine.   | By making the patient pass his urine in the presence of the physician, and examining the vessel before and after. By cutting off the supply of any substance which could cause the appearance.   |
| URINE, INCONTINENCE OF.                            | .....  | Difficult, at times, of detection. Give the person a full dose of opium, and introduce the catheter when he is asleep. If there be urine, the incontinence is feigned.   |
| VARIKOSE VEINS.                                    | By a ligature, placed tightly round the limb. This may be excited in this manner, or aggravated if already existing.   | By examining the limb.   |

FEMUR, Me'rus, Me'rium. The thigh. Also, the thighbone, Os fem'oris, (F.) L'os de la Cuisse. The strongest and longest of all the bones of the body, extending from the pelvis to the tibia, and forming the solid part of the thigh. The femur is cylindrical, slightly curved anteriorly, unsymmetrical and oblique downwards and inwards.

The body of the bone is prismatic, and has, behind, a prominent ridge, the linea aspera.

FENES'TRA, 'a window,' (akin to φαινα, 'I show,') (F.) Fenêtre. Anatomists have given this name to two apertures, situate in the inner paries of the cavity of the tympanum. The one of these is the Fenes'tra ovalis seu vestibula'ris, Fora'men ova'le. It is oval-shaped; situate at the base of the stapes, and corresponds with the cavity of the vestibule. The other is the Fenes'tra rotunda seu cochlea'ris seu triquetra, Fora'men rotundum. It is closed by a fine, transparent membrane, called Membrana Tym'pani secunda'ria, Tym'panum mi-nus seu secunda'rium, Membrana fenes'tre rotun-dæ, and corresponds to the inner scala of the cochlea.

FÉRINE, Feri'nus; ('savage, brutal; from fera, 'a wild beast,') Therio'des. A term, ap-plied to any malignant or noxious disease. In France it is used only when joined to Toux; Toux férine, a dry, obstinate, and painful cough.

FER'MENT, Fermen'tum, (quasi fervimentum, from ferveo, 'I boil, I am hot,') Zy'ma, Zymo-ma, Lev'eu, (F.) Lévain. The Iatrochymists ap-plied this name to imaginary substances, Fer-men'ta mor'bi, to which they attributed the power of producing disease, by exciting a fermentation in the humours.

FERMENTA'TION, Fermenta'tio, Zymo'sis, Æstua'tio, Caus'is, Bras'mos. An intestinal movement, occurring spontaneously in a liquid; whence result certain substances, that did not pre-viously exist in it.

The chemical physicians attributed all diseases to an imaginary fermentation of the humours.

FERO'NIA ELEPHAN'TUM, (from the god-dess Ferou'ia.) A tree of India, Order Aurantia-cææ, which yields a gum closely resembling Gum Arabic. Dr. Pereira thinks it not improbable, that a part of the East India gum taken to Eng-land may be the produce of this tree. The leaves are aromatic, of an odour resembling anise, and are used as a carminative.

FERONIA PELLUCIDA, Covolan.

FERRAMENTUM, Sider'ium, Instrumentum fer'reum, (from ferrum.) Any surgical instrument made of iron. By the vulgar, in France, the word fer'rements means the instruments used in difficult labours.

FERRARIA, Scrophularia aquatica.

FERRATED, Chalybeate.

FERRATUS, (from ferrum.) Chalybeate.

FERREIN', CANAL' OF, Ductus Ferrei'ni. A triangular channel, which Ferrein supposed to re-sult from the approximation of the free edges of the eyelids applied to the globe of the eye; and which he considered adapted for directing the tears towards the puncta lacrymalia, during sleep. The canal is, probably, imaginary.

The same name is likewise given to the cortical canals,—the first portions of the uriniferous ducts, whilst still in the cortical substance of the kidney.

FERREIN, PYRAMIDS OF, Pyram'ides Ferrei'ni. A triangular channel, of the kidney, according to Ferrein, consists of, at least, 700 subordinate cones or pyramids. To these last the names Pyram'ides of Ferrein, Pyram'ides ren'ales Ferrei'ni, Fascie-uli pyramida'les, Fasc'iculi cortical'es, Lob'uli re'm-

FERRI ACE'TAS, Extractum mart'is aceti-cum, Ac'eticum mart'ale, Ac'etate of Iron, Iron Liq'uor, (F.) Acétate de fer. A preparation of the Dublin Pharmacopœia, made by digesting 1 part of carbonate of iron in 6 parts of acetic acid for three days, and filtering. Dose, as a tonic and astringent, ℞v to ℞xx, in water.

FERRI ÆRUGO, F. Subcarbonas.

FERRI ET ALUMINÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Iron and Alumina, is made by treating bicarbonated solution of soft iron and carbonated solution of pure washed alumina, with sulphuric acid. It has been recommended as a valuable astringent. Dose, from five to ten grains.

FERRI ET AMMONIÆ MURIAS, Ferrum ammoniatum.

FERRI ET AMMONIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Iron and Ammonia, Ammonio-ferric alum. (Liq. ferri tersulphat. Oij; Ammon. sulph. ℥ivss. Add the sulphate of ammonia to the solution boiling hot; stir until it is dissolved, and crystallize. Ph. U. S. 1863.)

FERRI ET AMMONIÆ TARTRAS, F. Ammonio-tartras, Tartrate of Ammonia and Iron, (Ph. U. S. 1863,) is formed by dissolving hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of bitartrate of ammonia; evaporating, and drying to form scales. Dose, iv to x grains.

FERRI AMMONIOCHLORIDUM, Ferrum ammoniatum.

FERRI AMMONIOCI'TRAS, Ammonie ferrocitras, Ferrum ammonioaceticum, Ammonioacetate of Iron, Citrate of ammonia and iron. (Prepared by adding ammonia to citrate of iron, so as to neutralize the excess of acid.) In the Ph. U. S. 1863, Ferri et Ammonie Citras, Citrate of Iron and Ammonia, is prepared by evaporating to the consistence of syrup, and drying on plates of glass a mixture of the official Liquor Ferri Citratis, Oj; and Liquor Ammonie, f℥vj. Dose, gr. v to gr. viij. A POTASSIOCI'TRATE and a SO'DIOCI'TRATE OF IRON have also been introduced; and a CITRATE OF THE MAGNETIC OXIDE OF IRON prepared by combining the magnetic oxide with citric acid.

FERRI AMMONIOTARTRAS, Ammonio-tartrate of Iron. (This salt is best made by dissolving to saturation freshly precipitated hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of bitartrate of ammonia, and evaporating to dryness.) It is very soluble. The dose is five grains or more in pill or solution.

FERRI ARSENIAS, Arsenate of Iron—f. Borussian, Prussian blue—f. Bromidum, see Bromine—f. Carbonas, F. subcarbonas—f. Carbonas saccharatum, see F. Protocarbonas—f. Carbonas cum Saccharo, see Ferri Protocarbonas—f. Carbonatum, Graphites—f. Carburetum, Graphites.

FERRI CHLORIDUM, F. Sesquichloridum seu Perchloridum, (F.) Trichlorure ou Perchlorure de fer, Chloride, Sesquichloride, Perchloride or Muriate of Iron, is obtained by dissolving sesquichloride of iron in muriatic acid, or by the action of muriatic acid and nitric acid on iron. (Ph. U. S. 1863.) It is generally prescribed in the form of Tinctura Ferri Chloridi. A concentrated solution of the perchloride has been used as an injection for the radical cure of aneurism, and it has been employed wherever a powerful styptic has been needed. It forms the Liquor Ferri Perchloridi, (Ph. B. 1864,) Liquor Ferri sesquichloridi, Liquor Ferri muratiaci oxydati, Oleum Martis, Liquor stypticus Loofii; and is the basis of Ellerman's Disinfectant.

FERRI CI'TRAS, Ferrum citricum, Citrate of Iron. Two citrates of iron are prepared—the Sesquicitrate or Citrate of the Sesquioxide; and the Citrate of the Protoxide. The former, Ferri citras, is official in the Ph. U. S., in which it is directed to be prepared (Ph. U. S. 1863) from the official Liquor Ferri Citratis. The citrates resemble, in their medical properties, the tartrate and the lactate of the metal. Dose, five grains or more.

FERRI CYANURETUM, Prussian blue—f. Deuto-carbonas fuscus, F. subcarbonas—f. Deutoxydum nigrum, Æthiops martial—f. Ferrocyanas, Prussian blue—f. Ferrocyanidum, Prussian blue—f. Ferrocyanuretum, Prussian blue.

FERRI ET LUM. The pharmacopœial name (Ph. U. S. 1851) of iron wire.

FERRI HYDRIOBAS, F. Iodidum—f. Hydrocyanas, Prussian blue—f. Hyperearbonate, Graphites.

FERRI IO'DIDUM, F. Ioduretum, Ferrum iodatum, Iodide, or Ioduret of Iron, (F.) Iodure de fer, Iodure ferreux; in solution, Hydroiodate of Iron, Ferri hydroiodas, Ferrum hydroiodatum, (F.) Hydroiodate de fer. (Iodin. ℥ij, Ferri rament. ℥j, Aq. destillat. Oiss.) Mix the iodine with a pint of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, stirring constantly. Heat the mixture gently until the liquid acquires a light greenish colour; then filter; and, after the liquid has passed, pour upon the filter half a pint of the distilled water, boiling hot. When this has passed, evaporate the filtered liquor, at a temperature not exceeding 212°, in an iron vessel, to dryness; keep the dry iodide in a closely stopped bottle. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. iij to gr. x or more.

FERRI IODURETUM, F. Iodidum.

FERRI LACTAS, Ferrum lacticum, Lactate of Iron, L. of Protoxide of Iron, (F.) Lactate de Fer. (Prepared by digesting in a sand-bath, at a low temperature, diluted lactic acid with iron filings.) It is employed in the same cases as the precipitated subcarbonate of iron, and especially in chlorosis. Twelve grains of the lactate may be given in the 24 hours, in the form of lozenges.

FERRI LIMATU'RA PURIFICATA, Purified Iron Filings:—purified by means of the magnet, for internal use. The filings are, also, called Ferri Scobs, F. Ramenta et Filla, Ferri seu Martis Limatura, Speculum Iudicum, Ferri in pulverem resolutio, (F.) Limaille de Fer. They are considered to possess the general properties of iron;—the iron becoming oxidized.

FERRI ET MAGNESIÆ CI'TRAS, Citrate of Iron and magnesia, is prepared by dissolving hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of citric acid, saturated with carbonate of magnesia, and evaporating to dryness. It is soluble in water, and does not constipate. Dose, from four grains to fifteen, in solution.

FERRI NITRAS, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Nitratis Liquor, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Oxidum fuscum, F. subcarbonas—f. Oxidum hydratatum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratatum—f. Percyanidum, Prussian blue—f. Peroxydum hydratatum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratatum—f. Persequintras, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Persulphas, see Ferri sulphas.

FERRI PHOSPHAS, Phosphate of Iron, (Ferri Sulphat. ℥v, Sodæ Phosphat. ℥vi, Aquæ cong.) Dissolve the sulphate of iron and phosphate of soda, severally, in four pints of the water; then mix the solutions, and set the mixture by, that the powder may subside; lastly, having poured off the supernatant liquor, wash the phosphate of iron with water, and dry it with a gentle heat.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 5 to 10 grains as a chalybeate. Rarely used.

The British Pharmacopœia (1864) has a Syrupus Ferri Phosphatis, Syrup of Phosphate of Iron—gr. iijss of the phosphate to f℥j of syrup—the dose of which is a fluidrachm or more.

Ferri Pyrophosphas, Pyrophosphate of Iron, has been introduced into the Ph. U. S. for 1863.

FERRI ET POTASSÆ TARTRAS, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Potassio-citras, see Ferri ammonio-citras—f. Potassio-tartras, Ferrum tartarizatum.

FERRI PROTOCARBONAS, Protocarbonate of Iron, (F.) Carbonate de Fer. The protocarbonate of iron, thrown down from a solution of the sulphate of iron by the carbonate of soda, readily attracts oxygen and becomes converted into the sesquioxide. To prevent this, it may be associated with honey and sugar, and the mixture be reduced by evaporation to a pilular consistence. The mass constitutes the Ferruginous Pills, Pilules ferrugineuses, of Vallet, Vallet's Pills. See Pilule Ferri Carbonatis. The Edinburgh Pharmacopœia contained the Ferri Carbo'nis Saccharatum Ferri Carbo'nis cum Sac'charo, Sac'charine Carbonate of Iron, prepared in this manner. It is the Ferrum Carbo'nicum Saccharatum of Klauer, the Ferri Carbo'nis Saccharata, Sac'charated Carbonate of Iron of the Ph. B. (1864).

The protocarbonate is given in the same diseases as the lactate of iron; ten or fifteen grains in the course of the twenty-four hours.

FERRI PROTOSULPHAS VIRIDIS, F. Sulphas—f. Prussias, Prussian blue.

FERRI PULVIS, (Ph. U. S. 1851,) Ferrous powder seu reductum seu reductum (Ph. U. S. 1863,) seu metallicum, Powder of iron, Reduced Iron, Queenæ's Iron, (Fer réduit, F. réduit par l'hydrogène, prepared by passing a stream of hydrogen gas over the sesquioxide of iron, contained in an iron or porcelain tube heated to low redness. It is very liable to become oxidated, and must be kept in a dry, well-stopped bottle. It has been prescribed in anæmic, and especially in chlorotic, cases. The ordinary dose is three to six grains, or more, three times a day, in pill made with sugar and gum. A formula for its preparation from subcarbonate of iron, is given in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, 1863.

FERRI PYROPHOSPHAS, see Ferri phosphas.

FERRI ET QUINLE CITRAS, Ferrous and Quinine citricum, Citrate of Iron and Quinine, formed by the union of four parts of citrate of iron and one part of citrate of quinia, has been prescribed in cases where a combination of these tonics was indicated. In the Ph. U. S. 1863, it is formed by decomposing an acid solution of sulphate of quinia by water of ammonia, and adding the precipitated quinia to a solution of citrate of iron until it is dissolved; evaporating to the consistence of syrup, and drying on plates of glass in scales.

FERRI RAMENTA, F. limatura—f. Rubigo, F. Subcarbonas—f. Scobs, F. limatura—f. Sesquichloridum, Ferri chloridum—f. Sesquinitratum, Liquor Ferri nitratum—f. Sesquioxidum, F. subcarbonas præcipitatus—f. Sodio citras, see Ferri ammonio-citras.

FERRI SUBCARBONAS, F. Carbo'nis, F. Rubi'go, Ferrous precipitatum, Chalybis Rubi'go præparata. (The last two terms, as well as Ferri'go, are applied to the subcarbonate or rust, Aru'go Ferri, Cacaferris, formed by the action of moist air on metallic iron.) A protoxide of iron, oxidized by the decomposition of water; the carbonic acid being attracted from the air. Dose, gr. v to ʒss and more.

Ferri Subcarbo'nis, Subcarbonate of iron, Precipitated carbonate of iron, may be precipitated from sulphate of iron by carbonate of soda. The following is the formula of the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Ferri sulph. ʒviij; Sodæ carb. ʒix; Aquæ bullient. cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and carbonate of soda severally in four pints of the water, then mix the solutions, and having stirred the mixture, set it by that the powder may subside: having poured off the liquor, wash the subcarbonate with hot water, wrap it in bibulous paper, and dry with a gentle heat. It has, also, been called Ferri sesquioxidum, Oxidum ferri fuscum, O. ferri rubrum, Deutocarbonas Ferri fuscus, Crocus martis apertius, Ses- quioxide or peroxide of iron, (F.) Peroxiide de fer, Safran de Mars apéritif.

FERRI SULPHAS, Sul Martis, Vitriolum Martis seu Ferri, Ferrum Vitriolatum, Sulphas seu Protosulphas Ferri viridis, Calca'dinum, Cal'catar, Cal'cotar, Chalcanthum, Calcite'a, Atramentum sutorium, Vitriol, Vitriolum viride, Anima Hepatis, Sulphate of Iron, Green Vitriol, Copperas, (F.) Sulfate de fer. The Pharmacopœia of the United States directs it to be made by the action of sulphuric acid ʒxviij, on iron wire, cut in pieces, ʒxij—water, a gallon,—evaporating, crystallizing, and drying the crystals on bibulous paper. This salt is inodorous, and of a strong styptic taste. The crystals are light green, transparent, rhomboidal; and soluble in two parts of water. It is tonic and anthelminthic. Dose, gr. j to vj and more.

Ferri Persulphas, Persulphate of Iron, Monsel's salt, (F.) Persulfate de fer, Sel de Monsel, is a powerful coagulant and styptic, introduced by M. Monsel. A formula for the Liq'nor Ferri Subsulphatis, Solution of Subsulphate of Iron, Solution of Persulphate of Iron, Monsel's solution, is in the Ph. U. S. 1863. (Ferri sulphat. in pulv. crass. ʒxij; Acid sulphur. ʒj and gr. xxx; Acid nitric. ʒj and gr. ccc; Aq. destillat. q. s. To the acids, mixed with half a pint of the water, and heated to the boiling point, add the sulphate gradually, stirring until effervescence ceases. Boil briskly until nitrous vapours are no longer perceived, and the colour is deep ruby red. When nearly cold, add enough water to make it measure fʒxij.

FERRI SULPHAS CALCINATUM, Colcothar.

FERRI SULPHAS EXSICCATUM, F. S. Exsiccata, (Ph. U. S. 1863,) Ferri Sulphas siccatum, is Sulphate of Iron exposed to a moderate heat, until it is capable of being reduced to powder. In this form it can be made into pills. Three grains may be esteemed equivalent to five of the crystallized salt.

FERRI SULPHURETUM Sulphuret of Iron, Iron pyrites, (F.) Sulfure de fer, may be made by heating one part of sublimed sulphur over three parts of iron filings in a crucible until the mass begins to glow. It is employed as a ready means for obtaining hydrosulphuric acid gas by the addition of sulphuric or chlorohydric acid.

FERRI TANNAS, Ferrous tannicum, Tannate of Iron, (F.) Tannate de fer. This salt is usually obtained by adding a solution of a salt of sesquioxide of iron, as the persulphate, to a decoction of nut-galls. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, and has been extolled, especially in chlorosis.

FERRI TARTARUM, Ferrous tartarizatum—f. Tritoxydum, Colcothar.

FERRI VALERIANAS, Ferrous Valerianicum, Valerianate of Iron, (F.) Valerianate de fer. (Formed by the action of valerianic acid on oxide of iron.) It is a dark brick-red powder, insoluble in water, and has been given in hysteria complicating chlorosis. Dose, from two to four grains. The Dublin Pharmacopœia of 1850 has a formula for this salt.

FERRICUS HYDRAS, (from ferrum), Ferrous oxydum hydratum.

FERRIQUE, (from fer), Chalybeate.

FERROMANGAN'IC, Ferromanganicus. Composed of iron and manganese—as a “ferromanganic preparation.”

FERROSALINE MIXTURE, see Mixture, ferrosaline.

FERRUGINEOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGINOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGO, gen. Ferruginis, (ferrum and rubigo, ‘rust,’) Ferri subcarbonas, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum.

FERRUM, Mars, Side'ros, Metallum hæmatopœticum, Iron, (F.) Fer. A metal of a bluish-gray colour; fibrous texture; brilliant and finegrained fracture. Specific gravity 7.600 to 7.800; hard, ductile, malleable, and magnetic. The medicinal virtues of iron are tonic; producing fetid eructations, when it takes effect, owing to its meeting with acid in the stomach, which oxidizes it, and causes the evolution of hydrogen gas. When given in the metallic state, the filings are chiefly used; but the oxides and salts are most commonly employed.

Ferrum (Ph. U. S. 1863) means Ferri filium, and F. ramentum.

FERRUM AMMONIACALE, F. ammoniatum—f. Ammoniaco-citricum, Ferri ammonio-citras.

FERRUM AMMONIATUM, F. ammoniacale, Murias Ammoniacae et Ferri, Ferri ammonio-chloridum, Flores martiales seu salis ammoniaci martiales, Ens martis seu Ven'eria Boylei, Sal martis muriaticum sublimatum, S. ammoniacum martiale, Ammonium muriaticum martiale seu martiale, Ammonium hydrochloratum ferratum, A'troph Paracelsi, Culendule minerales, Ammoniated Iron, Ammonio-chloride of Iron, (F.) Muriate d'ammoniaque et de fer. A mixture of the hydro-chlorates of ammonia and iron. [Ferri Subcarb. ʒiij; Acid muriat. fʒx; Ammon. muriat. ℞ijss; Aq. destillat. Oiv. Mix the subcarbonate with the acid in a glass vessel and digest for two hours; then add the muriate previously dissolved in distilled water, and having filtered the liquor, evaporate to dryness. Rub to powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. iij to gr. xv.

FERRUM OXYDATUM HYDRATUM, Ferri Oxidum Hydratum (Ph. U. S.) seu Peroxidum Hydratum, Ferrugo, Hydras Ferriacus, Hydroxide of Iron, Hydrated peroxide of Iron, Hydrated Tritoxide of Iron. It may be prepared by taking a solution of sulphate of iron, increasing its dose of oxygen by heating it with nitric acid, and precipitating the oxide by adding pure ammonia in excess, washing the precipitate, and keeping it moist.

In the Ph. U. S. 1863, it is directed to be prepared by adding water of ammonia to a solution of tersulphate of iron; washing the precipitate until the washings pass nearly tasteless. It is then mixed with water and transferred to a wide-mouthed bottle, which must be kept well-stopped.

It has been brought forward as an antidote to arsenic; and many cases of its efficacy have been published.

From 10 to 20 parts of the hydrated oxide would seem to be more than sufficient to convert 1 part of arsenious acid into the basic salt of iron.

les; Tartarized Iron, Tartrate of Potassa and Iron, (F.) Tartrate de potasse et de fer; in balls or pellets, Boules de Mars ou de Nancy ou d'Acier, (formed from the union of hydrated oxide of iron and bitartrate of potassa, Ph. U. S.) It is one of the mildest of the salts of iron, and not unpalatable. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

The Tinctura Martis Aperitiva, Tincture of Ludwig; Alcohol cum Sulphatè Ferri tartarizatus; Tinctura Martis Glauberi is, essentially, a solution of this salt. Eau de Boule, a solution of the salt in water, is used in contusions.

The Boules de Molsheim are prepared by adding to five parts of the Boules de Mars one part of benzoin and as much turpentine.

Helvetius's Styptic was composed of the filings of iron and tartar, mixed to a proper consistence with French brandy. It was called in England Eaton's Styptic; but this is now formed of Sulphate of Iron.

FE'VEr, Febri's, (feritas, 'wildness,' or from feror, 'heat,' or from ferbro, 'I purify,') Pyr, Pyrætus, (F.) Fièvre. One of the most frequent and dangerous affections to which the body is liable. A person has an attack of fever, when he is affected with rigors, followed by increased heat of skin, quick pulse, languor, and lassitude. Rigors, increased heat, and frequency of pulse have each been assumed as the essential character of fever. It is not characterized, however, by any one, but depends upon the coexistence of many symptoms. Fevers have been usually divided into the idiopathic or essential, and the symptomatic. The idiopathic arise without any obvious local cause. The symptomatic are dependent upon local irritation. Idiopathic fevers may be divided into three classes:—1. Those attended with distinct paroxysms:—intermittents. 2. Remittent and continued fevers: and 3. Fevers complicated with eruptions,—the exanthematous. These divisions admit of great variety, owing to climate, season, soil, age, &c. All ages and climates are liable to fever; and its exciting causes are very numerous. These causes may be common; as irritations in the intestines; external injuries, stimulants, &c.; or they may be specific; as miasmata, contagion, &c. The greatest diversity has prevailed regarding the theory of fever. Its primary seat has been placed in the brain, mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines, skin, nerves, blood-vessels, liver, vena cava, pancreas, &c. It would seem, however, that although, in fever, the whole of the functions are morbidly impressed, the arguments in favour of the impression being first made on the nervous system and the system of nutrition are the strongest. The exciting cause of fever, whatever it may be, produces an irregular action in the system of nutrition, which is soon conveyed to the rest of the system, owing to the extensive sympathy which exists between every part of the body; and it is probable, that all those local inflammations and congestions are the consequence, rather than the cause, of this disordered condition of the system. The general character of fever is clearly shown by examination of the blood. When fever is devoid of inflammatory complication, the quantity of fibrin is in no case augmented. It frequently remains in the healthy proportion, and at times diminishes to an extent not met with in any other acute disease. The alteration of the blood in fevers, which consists generally in a diminution of the fibrinous element, is the reverse of what occurs in inflammation.

Many phenomena of fever are influenced by that periodicity, which we notice in the exercise of several of the functions of the body. The types of intermittents are strong evidences of such an influence.

In the treatment of fever, it is important to bear in mind, 1. Its tendency, particularly in the case of the exanthemata, to run a definite course, and terminate in restoration to health. 2. The disposition to local determination or hyperæmiæ:—the most frequent cause of the fatal termination of fever; a circumstance requiring the vigilant attention of the physician. 3. That the symptoms must be attentively studied, in order to deduce, as far as possible from them, the indications of cure. Lastly, attention must be paid to the prevalent epidemic. There are particular seasons in which fevers are very malignant; and others in which they are as mild; circumstances which necessarily have an effect upon the treatment.

FEVER AND AGUE, Intermittent Fever—f. Acclimating, F. strangers'.

FEVER, A'DENOMENINGE'AL, Fe'bris a'denomeninge'a seu mesenter'ica (BAGLIVI) seu mucosa, Mor'bus mucosus, Gastroduodenop'yra, Mucosus or Pituitous or Catar'rh'al Fe'ver, Phlegmap'yra, Phlegmop'yra, Phlegmatop'yra, Gastrobronchitis. Fever, accompanied with considerable mucous secretion; especially from the digestive tube.

FEVER, ADENØNERVOUS, Plague.

FEVER, ADYNAM'IC, Fe'bris adynam'ica, Asthemicop'yra, Asthemicopyr'etus, Asthenop'yra, Asthenopyr'etus. Fever attended with great prostration of the vital powers—as Typhoid and Typhus fever.

FEVER, AF'RICAN, Fe'bris Africa'na. The malignant bilious remittent fever, which prevails on the western coast of Africa.

FEVER, ALGID, see Algidus.

FEVER ANOM'ALOUS, Fe'bris Anom'ala seu er- rat'ica seu irregula'ris seu va'ga. A fever, whose progress and type are irregular.

FEVER, APHON'IC, Fe'bris apho'nica. A variety of intermittent, in which the voice is lost during the paroxysm.

FEVER, APOPLEC'TIC, Fe'bris apoplec'tica seu comato'des seu lethar'gica seu soporosa, Comatose Fe'ver. An intermittent or continued fever, attended with apoplectic symptoms.

FEVER, ARTHRIT'IC. Fever, characterized by inflammation of the joints,—as in gout and rheumatism.

FEVER, ARTICULAR ERUPTIVE, Dengue—f. Articular rheumatic, Dengue.

FEVER, ARTIFIC'IAL, Fe'bris artific'ialis seu ar'te promo'ta. Fever produced designedly by the internal or external use of stimulants.

FEVER, ASTHEN'IC, Fe'bris asthen'ica. Fever accompanied with debility. It may include every variety of fever under certain circumstances, but is generally appropriated to typhus.

FEVER, ASTHMAT'IC, Fe'bris asthmat'ica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of asthma.

FEVER, ATAXOADYNAM'IC, Fe'bris ataxoödy'nam'ica. Fever characterized by symptoms of ataxia and adynamia.

FEVER, BARCELONA, Fever, yellow—f. Bastard, Illegitimate fever.

FEVER, CAMP. Any continued fever occurring in camp or in the army. Formerly it meant the typhus of armies. See Typhus gravior.

FEVER, CARDIAL'GIC, Fe'bris Cardial'gica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with violent cardialgia during the paroxysm.

FEVER, CARDIT'IC. Intermittent fever, accompanied with pain at the heart.

FEVER, CATARRHAL, F. adenomeningal.

FEVER, CEPHALAL'GIC, Fe'bris cephalal'gica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with intense pain of the head. Also, intermittent cephalgia.

FEVER, CEPHAL'IC, Fe'bris cephal'ica. A febrile affection of children—intermediate between the acute form of active cerebral congestion and the chronic form—which is attended by fever, pain in the head, disorder, or more generally constipation of the bowels, and a train of phenomena often supposed to be premonitory of an attack of hydrocephalus.

FEVER, CER'EBRAL, Brain fe'ver. Fever, generally of an ataxic character, in which the brain is considerably affected.

FEVER, CHA'GRES, Panama Fe'ver A severe form of endemic fever, common on the isthmus of Panama.

FEVER, CHILDBED, Fever, puerperal, Puerperal Fever—f. Childbed, low, see Peritonitis.

FEVER, CHOLERIC, Febris cholericæ. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of cholera morbus.

FEVER, CHOLERIC, OF INFANTS, Cholera infantum.

FEVER, CHRONIC, Febris Chronica. Some authors apply this name to protracted fevers; others to hectic fever.

FEVER, COLLIGATIVE, Febris tabida seu colliquativa. Fever, characterized by rapid emaciation, copious evacuations, and rapid prostration of strength.

FEVER, COMATOSE, F. apoplectic.

FEVER, CONGESTIVE, Febris congestiva. Fever accompanied by obscure symptoms; or by great oppression and depression; in which it is difficult—and often impossible—to induce reaction. Congestive fevers occur in various parts of this country, especially in the fall; and they are very common in India. The term congestive fever is often used in some parts of the south of the United States very indefinitely,—to include winter typhus, and typhoid fevers, typhoid pneumonia, as well as intermittents and autumnal remittents.

FEVER, CONTINENT, see Continent and Continued fever—f. Continual, see Continued fever—f. Continued, common, Synochus.

FEVER, CONVULSIVE, Febris convulsiva. A pernicious intermittent or remittent, accompanied by convulsions.

FEVER, COUNTRY. Fever occasioned by exposure to the miasms of a highly malarious locality. A term much used in the Southern States.

FEVER, DELIRIOUS, Febris cum delirio, (F.) Fièvre délirante. A pernicious intermittent, characterized by delirium in the paroxysms.

FEVER, DEPURATORY, Febris depuratoria. A fever, to which was attributed the property of purifying the blood; or which indicated, that such a supposed depuration had occurred.

FEVER, DIAPHORETIC, Febris diaphoretica, Febris sudatoria. A pernicious intermittent, with excessive sweating during the fit.

FEVER, DIARY, Ephemera.

FEVER, DIGESTIVE. The chilliness, followed by increased heat and quickness of pulse, which frequently accompanies digestion.

FEVER, DOUBLE, (F.) Fièvre double ou doublee. An intermittent, which has two paroxysms in a given time, instead of one.

FEVER, DOUBLE QUARTAN. A fever, whose paroxysms occur two days in succession, and fail the third day; the first paroxysm resembling the 4th, and the second the 5th.

FEVER, DOUBLE QUOTIDIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return twice every day at corresponding hours.

FEVER, DOUBLE TERTIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return every day; the first corresponding with the 3d, the second with the 4th, and so on.

FEVER, DUODECIMANE, Febris duodecimana. A supposititious intermittent, whose paroxysms recur on the 12th day, or every 11 days.

FEVER, DYNAMIC, Synocha—f. Endemial, Remittent F.—f. Endemic, Remittent F.—f. Endemial, Remittent F.—f. Enteric, see Typhus—f. Ephemeral, Ephemera.

FEVER, EPILEPTIC, Febris epileptica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with attacks of epilepsy.

FEVER, EROTIC, Febris erotica, (F.) Fièvre d'amour. A chronic fever, occasioned by unpropitious love.

FEVER, ERRATIC, see Erratic—f. Eruptive, Exanthematica—f. Eruptive, articular, Dengue—f. Exacerbating; Remittent Fever.

FEVER, FAINTING, OF PERSIA. A singular and fatal epidemic, presenting some points of analogy with cholera, which prevailed at Teheran in the autumn of 1842.

FEVER, FAMINE, Febris à faim. The febrile phenomena induced by want of food.

FEVER, FIVE DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, GANGRENOUS, Febris gangranodes. Fever, accompanied by gangrene of various parts, and especially of the limbs and genitals. Sénac describes an intermittent of this kind.

FEVER, GASTRALGIC. An intermittent accompanied with acute burning lacerating pain at the stomach.

FEVER, GASTRIC, Febris gastrica seu gastrica biliosa, Gastropylra, Gastropylretus, Gastrocholosis, Hepato-gastrocholosis, Stomachic fever, Synochus Bilio-sa. A name given by some to bilious fever, which has appeared to them to be dependent on an affection of the stomach. Also, called, Meningogastric fever, Febris meningogastrica, Meningogastritis, Gastromeningitis, Harvest fever, (F.) Fièvre de la Moisson, F. Meningo-gastrique.

FEVER, GASTRO-ADYNAMIC, Febris gastro-ady-namica. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are joined with those of adynamic fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ANGIOTENIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious are united with those of inflammatory fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ATAXIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are united with those of ataxic fever.

FEVER, GIBRALTAR, Fever, yellow—f. Hæmagastric, F. yellow.

FEVER, HÆMORRHOIC, Febris hæmoptica. A variety of masked intermittent, in which periodical hæmoptysis is the chief symptom.

FEVER, HARVEST, F. Gastric.

FEVER, HAY, Catarrhus æstivus, Chortathma, Summer Catarrh, Hay Asthma, Rose Catarrh, Summer Bronchitis. A catarrh to which certain persons are subject in summer, and which has been ascribed in England to the effluvia of hay, but this is not the probable cause. It is a catarrh with sneezing, headache, weeping, snuffing and cough, with, at times, fever and general discomfort. It is not uncommon in this country. It disappears spontaneously,—to recur on subsequent years about the same period.

FEVER, HEBDOMADAL. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms return weekly, and on the same day.

FEVER, HECTIC, see Consumption, and Hectic Fever.

FEVER, HEPATIC or HEPATAGIC. A pernicious intermittent, with violent pain in the right hypochondrium.

FEVER, HILL. A modification of remittent, occurring in the hilly districts of India.

FEVER, HOSPITAL, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, HUMORAL, Febris humoralis. Fever in which an alteration or deterioration of the humors is suspected.

FEVER, HUNGARY, Febris Hungarica seu Pannonica, Luës Pannonia, Morbus Ungaricus, Cephaloncosus, Vermis cerebri, (F.) Fièvre Hongroise ou de Hongrie. An epidemic typhus, common amongst the soldiers in barracks, in Hungary.

FEVER, HYDROPHOBIC, Febris hydrophobica. Pernicious intermittent, with dread of liquids.

FEVER, HYSTERIC, Febris hysterica. Hysteria, accompanied by fever. Hysteria, occurring with each paroxysm of an intermittent.

FEVER, ICTERIC, Febris icterica. Fever, accompanied with jaundice. Some intermittents exhibit this complication at each paroxysm.

FEVER, ICTERIC, REMITTING, see Relapse.

FEVER, INFANTILE REMITTING, Febris infantium remittens, F. vermino'sa, (of many), F. mucosa vermino'sa, F. lenta, Sporious wormfever, Remitting fever of children, Hectica infantilis. A fever occurring in childhood, which often assumes many of the characters of hydrocephalus. It appears generally to be dependent upon a morbid condition of the stomach and bowels.

FEVER, INFLAMMATORY, Synocha.

FEVER, INSIDIOUS. Fever, which, at first, seems devoid of danger, but may subsequently become of a more or less malignant character.

FEVER, INTERMITTENT, see Intermittent fever—f. Irritative, Irritation, morbid—f. Jail, Typhus gravior—f. Jungle, see Jungle fever.

FEVER, LAKE. Fever produced by exposure to the malaria in the neighbourhood of the northern lakes of this country.

FEVER, LENTICULAR, Miliary fever.

FEVER, LO'CHIAL, Febris lochia'lis. That acceleration of the circulation which sometimes occurs during the discharge of the lochia.

FEVER, LUNG, Catarrh, Pneumonia—f. Maculated, Typhus.

FEVER, MALARIAL or MALARIOUS. Fever induced by malarious or miasmatic emanations; hence also called Miasmatic fever. Intermittent and remittent fever belong to this class.

FEVER, MALIGNANT, Febris maligna. Fever which may make its approaches insidiously, and subsequently becomes formidable. Any fever which exhibits a very dangerous aspect. Typhus gravior.

FEVER, MALIGNANT PESTILENTIAL, Fever, yellow—f. Marsh, Elodes (febris.)

FEVER, MASK'ED, Febris larvata, (F.) Fièvre larvée; Dead or Dumb Ague, Dumb Chill. An anomalous intermittent, the paroxysms of which have not the regular stages, or are masked.

FEVER, MENINGOGASTRIC, Fever gastric.

FEVER, MESENTERIC, Febris mesenterica. A name given, by Baglivi, to a species of fever which appears to have belonged either to the nucons or bilious.

FEVER, MIASMATIC, F. Malarial.

FEVER, MILK, Febris lactea, Galaetopyra, Galaetopyretus, (F.) Fièvre de lait ou lactense ou lactée. The fever which precedes or accompanies the secretion of milk in women recently delivered. It comes on generally about the third day after delivery, and is characterized by quick pulse; increased heat; redness of face; diminution or temporary suspension of the lochial discharge; tumefaction and tension of the breasts. It commonly terminates in twenty-four hours, and often with profuse perspiration. It requires the use of antiphlogistics, with dry diet.

FEVER, MIXED, Synochus.

FEVER, MOUNTAIN. Fever belonging to mountainous regions. A form of fever, said to be peculiar to the elevated regions of the Rocky Mountains; and seen only at an altitude of 7000 feet and upwards.

FEVER, MUCOUS, F. Adenomeningeal.

FEVER, NEPHRITIC, Febris nephritica. Intermittent fever, accompanied with nephritic pain during the paroxysm.

FEVER, NERVOUS, Febris nervosa seu neurodes seu lenta nervosa, Neurop'ya, Neurop'yetus. A variety of Typhus; the Typhus mitior of Cullen; now, generally, however, it is esteemed a distinct disease. See Typhoid fever.

FEVER, NERVOUS, WITH EXANTHEMATOUS ERUPTION, Typhus.

FEVER, NEURALGIC, Dengue.

FEVER, NI'GER. A malignant fever, of the bilious remittent kind, which proved fatal to many in the expeditions sent out by the British government to explore the Niger, in the years 1841-42, and previously.

FEVER, NON'ANE, Febris non'ana. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms recur every ninth day, or every eight days.

FEVER, OCTANE, Febris oct'ana. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every eighth day.

FEVER, PALUDAL, Intermittent—f. Panama, Fever, Chagres—f. Paroxysmal, Remittent fever—f. Periodic, F. Periodical, Intermittent.

FEVER, PERIODICAL or PERIODIC, Febris periodica. An intermittent or remittent fever.

FEVER, PERNICIOUS, Febris pernicio'sa. Intermittent fever, when attended with great danger, and which destroys the majority of those affected by it in the first four or five paroxysms; sometimes in the very first.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, Febris pestilentia'lis. The Plague. Also a severe case of typhus. The yellow fever and sweating sickness have, likewise, been thus designated.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, OF CATTLE, Murr—f. Pettechial, Typhus—f. Ptituitous, F. adenomeningeal.

FEVER, PLEURITIC. An intermittent or remittent, accompanied with inflammation of the pleura.

FEVER, PNEUMONIC, Febris pneumonica. An intermittent, accompanied with inflammation of the lungs. Also, pneumonia.

FEVER POISON, see Poison.

FEVER, PSEUDO, Irritation, morbid.

FEVER, PUERPERAL, Febris puerper'alis, Child-bed fever, (F.) Fièvre puerpérale. This name has been given to several acute diseases, supervening on delivery. It means, generally, a malignant variety of peritonitis, which runs its course very rapidly, and passes into a typhoid condition, unless met, at the very onset, by the most active sedative measures. By the generality of practitioners, it is esteemed to be eminently contagious; some, however, deny that it is so. See Peritonitis, and Puerperal fever.

FEVER, PUERPERAL, ADYNAMIC or MALIGNANT, see Peritonitis—f. Puking, Milk sickness.

FEVER, PU'RULENT, Febris purulenta. Fever, which accompanies suppuration.

FEVER, PUTRID, Typhus gravior—f. Pythogenic, Typhoid fever.

FEVER, QUINT'AN, Febris quinta'na. A fever, whose paroxysms return every fifth day. It is rarely or never seen.

FEVER, QUOTIDIAN, see Quotidian.

FEVER, QUINIC, (F.) Fièvre quinique, F. de Quinquina. A fever, accompanied by a cutaneous eruption, said to affect those who are engaged in the preparation of the sulphate of quinia. The French use the term Fièvres à quinquina for intermittents, which cinchona alone cures.

FEVER, RECURRENT, see Relapse—f. Red Tongue, see Typhus.

FEVER, REGULAR, Febris regularis seu exquisita. An intermittent whose paroxysms follow a determinate type. It is opposed to atypic. Sometimes opposed to anomalous.

FEVER, RELAPSING, see Relapse.

FEVER, REMITTENT, see Remittent Fever—f. Remittent, Bilious, see Relapse—f. Remittent of children, F. infantile remittent—f. Remittent, infantile, see Fever, infantile remittent—f. Remitting icteric, see Relapse—f. Rheumatic, Rheumatism, acute.

FEVER ROOT, Triosteum perfoliatum.

FEVER, SCORBUTIC, Febris scorbutica. The febrile movement, which sometimes accompanies scorbutus or scurvy.

FEVER, SEASONING, F., strangers'.

FEVER, SECONDARY. A febrile condition which recurs in certain affections after having ceased; such as the secondary fever, which comes on at the time of the maturation of the variolous pustules, or as the eruption of scarlatina, &c., disappears.

FEVER, SEPT'AN, Febris sept'ana. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every six days, and consequently on the seventh.

FEVER, SEVEN DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, SEX'TAN, Febris sexta'na. A fever, which recurs every five days, and consequently on the sixth.

FEVER, SHIP, see Typhus.

FEVER, SIM'PLE, Febris Sim'plex. Simple fever is that which has no predominant character—bilious, inflammatory, or nervous; and which is unaccompanied by any local determination, hyperæmia, or complication. It may be continued, remittent, or intermittent.

FEVER, SIMPLE CONTIN'UED. This is the most favourable form of continued fever, and has a tendency to wear itself out, provided only the lædentiâ be avoided. The prognosis is consequently favourable, and the treatment simple; consisting in perfect repose of body and mind, abstinence, and relieving the thirst by cold drinks.

FEVER, SINGUL'TOUS, Febris singultu'osa seu lygno'des seu lyngo'des. Fever, accompanied with singultus or hiccough.

FEVER, SOLAR, Dengue—f. Spotted, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, STER'CORAL, Febris stercora'tis. Fever, produced by an accumulation of feces in the intestines.

FEVER, STOMACHIC, Gastric Fever.

FEVER, STRA'NGERS', Acclim'ating or Sea'soning fever. Yellow, or remittent fever, which is endemic in certain places, and to which strangers are especially liable.

FEVER, SUBCONTINUAL, Remittent Fever.

FEVER, SUBIN'TRANT, Febris subin'traus. An intermittent, in which one paroxysm is scarcely finished before the other begins.

FEVER, SUN, Dengue—f. Sweating, Sudor Anglicus.

FEVER, SYN'OPAL, Febris syncopa'tis seu minu'ta, (F.) Fèvre syncopale. A variety of pernicious intermittent, in which there is, in every paroxysm, one or more faintings.

FEVER, SYNCHOID, Synochus.

FEVER, SYPHILIT'IC, Febris syp'hilit'ica. Fever, accompanying syphilis, or supposed to be owing to a syphilitic taint.

FEVER, TER'TIAN, Febris tert'iana. A fever, whose paroxysm returns on the third day, and consequently every two days.

FEVER, THIRD DAY, Tertian.

FEVER, TRAG'IC, Febris Trag'ica. A low fever, in which the patient declaims like an actor during the delirium.

FEVER, TRAUMAT'IC, Febris traumati'ca. The fever, which supervenes on wounds or great surgical operations.

FEVER, TREMBLING, Intermittent fever.

FEVER, TY'PHOMALA'RIAL, Miasmatic ty'phoid fever. A fever in which there is a mixture of the phenomena of typhous and malarial fevers;—a combination not unfrequently seen in active military service.

FEVER, TYPHOID, see Typhus—f. Typhoid, of India, Cholera—f. Typhous, Typhus—f. Varicellar, see Varioloid—f. Varioloid, see Varioloid.

FEVER, VER'MINOUS, Febris vermino'sa, Helmintho'gyra, Worm fever. Fever, produced by the presence of worms in the digestive tube, or accompanied by their expulsion.

FEVER, VER'NAL, Febris ver'nalis. An intermittent or other fever occurring in the spring. Vernal intermittents were formerly considered salubrious.

"An ague in the spring
Is physic for a king."

FEVER, VESICULAR, Feinphigus.

FEVER, WAL'CHEREN, Gallow'ness. The remittents and intermittents to which the British troops were exposed, who were attached to the expedition to Walcheren, in 1809.

FEVER, WATER BRAIN, Hydrocephalus internus—f. Winter, see Tongue, black—f. Worm, Verminous F.—f. Worm, spurious, Fever, infantile remittent.

FEVER, YEL'LOW, Febris fla'va, F. seu Pestis Americana, F. fla'va Americano'rum, F. tropica, F. contin'ua putrida ictero'des Carolinien'sis, F. elo'des ictero'des, F. maligna biliosa Americæ, F. maligna fla'va Indiæ Occident'alis, F. tor'vica, Cholo'sis America'na, Ochroty'phus, Loimocholo'sis, Pestilentia hamagastica, Pestis occident'alis seu intertropicalis, Vomitus nig'er, Epan'e'ma malignum fla'vus, Remittens ictero'des, Trituoph'ys Americana, Ty'phus ictero'des, Ochro'gyra, Synochus ictero'des, Endemial Can'nis of the West Indies, Can'nis tropicus endem'icus, Bilious remitt'ing yellow fever, Malignant pestilent'ial fever, (F.) Fèvre jaune d'Amérique, F. matelote, F. gastrodynamique, F. de la Barbade, F. de Siam, F. Ictérique, F. Gastro-hépatique, Typhus miasmaticque atarique putride jaune, T. jaune, T. d'Amérique; Vomito prieto, Vomito negro, Mal de Siam, Hæmagast'ric Fever or Pestilence, Black vomit, Bulam', Gibra'tar, and Barcelo'na Fever,—ulyg., in the West Indies, Mulat' to Jack and Yellow Jack. A very acute and dangerous febrile affection; so called, because complicated, in its second stage, with a jaundiced appearance, accompanied by vomiting of black matter. Sauvages, Cullen, and others regard it as a variety of typhus; and Pinel, as a species of gastro-dynamic or bilious putrid fever. It occurs, endemically, annually within the tropics; but is met with epidemically in the temperate regions. Broussais regards the disease as gastro-enteritis, asperated by atmospheric heat; so that it runs through its stages with much greater rapidity than the gastro-enteritis of our climates. The yellow colour of the skin, according to him, is owing to the inflammation of the small intestine,—and especially of the duodenum,—augmenting the secretion of the liver, and at the same time preventing its discharge into the duodenum. The pathology of this affection, as well as its origin, is still unsettled. The treatment must generally be of the most active nature at the onset; consisting in bleeding largely, and exhibiting mercury, so as to excite a new action, if possible;—the other symptoms being combated according to general principles. It must vary, however, according to the epidemic.

FEVER, YELLOW, MILD, see Relapse.

FEVERBUSH, Laurus benzoin, Prinos.

FEVER DROPS, WARBURG'S, see Bebeert.

FEVERET, Febricula.

FEVERFEW, (febris and fugare, 'to drive away,') Matricaria.

FEVERFOULLIE, Matricaria.

FEVERISH, Feverona, Febr'iens, Febri'cus, (F.) Fèvreux. That which causes fever, or is febrifugient or febrif'ic; as feverish food, feverish diet, &c. Also, the state of one labouring under fever, Feverish. If affected with intermittent fever, he is said, in Suffolk, England, to be agorified.

FEVERISHNESS, Febri'cat'io, Febri'culosa'ity. The state of having fever. A slight febrile disorder.

FEVEROUS, Feverish.

FEVERROOT, Pterospora andromedæ.

FEVERSEEK, see Feverish.

FEVERTREE, Pinckneya pubens.

FEVERWOOD, Laurus benzoin.

FEVERWORT, Eupatorium perfoliatum, Triosteum.

FEWS, Sempervivum tectorum.

FEY, Psychorages.

FEYK, Fidgets.

FIBER, ([G.] Biber,) Castor fiber.

FIBRA, Fibre—f. Aurea, Coptis—f. Nervea, Nerve-fibre—f. Sanguinis, Fibrin.

FIBRÆ ARCIFORMES, see Arciform.

FIBRE, Fibra, Is, Cle'don, Filum. An organic filament, of a solid consistence, and more or less extensible, which enters into the composition of every animal and vegetable texture. The simple or elementary fibre of the ancients, from a particular assemblage and arrangement of which every texture of the body was conceived to be constituted, is entirely ideal. The moderns usually admit, with Haller and Blumenbach, three elementary fibres or tissues. 1. The cellular or areolar, formed chiefly of thin plates, of a whitish colour, and extensible, which seems to consist of concrete gelatin. 2. The nervous, pulpy, or medullary, formed of a soft substance, contained in a cellular sheath, and consisting of albumen united to a fatty matter. 3. The muscular, composed of round filaments, of a grayish or reddish colour, and formed of fibrin. Chaussier has added to these the albugineous fibre, but it seems to differ from the cellular fibre only in greater condensation of the molecules. See Fibrous.

A very small or ultimate fibre is called a Fibril or Fibrilla.

FIBRE, ALBUGINEOUS, see Albuginea—f. Lisse, see Muscular fibre—f. Striée, see Muscular fibre.

FIBRES, CONVERG'ING. Nervous fibres, whose office it is to associate different portions of the nervous centres with each other. They form the Commissures.

FIBRES, DIVERG'ING. The fibres composing the columns of the medulla oblongata, which separate in their progress to the periphery of the cerebrum and cerebellum.

FIBRES OF MÜLLER, see Tunica Jacobi.

FIBRES OF REMAK'. Fibres described by Remak as peculiar to the sympathetic nerve, but which Valentin considers to be neurilemma, and to consist of fibrocellular bundles.

FIBREUX, Fibrous.

FIBRIL, see Fibre.

FIBRILLA, (dim. of fibra,) Fibril—f. Muscularis, Muscular fibre.

FIBRILLAR, Fibrillar'is. Relating or appertaining to fibrils.

FIBRILLATION, Fibrillatio. The formation of fibrils.

FIBRIN, (from fibre,) Fibrine, Fibr'ina, Fibr'ine, Fibra sanguinis, Materia fibrosa, Lymph'a plastica, Matière fibreuse du sang. An immediate animal principle—solid, white, and inodorous; insipid; heavier than water; without action on the vegetable blues; elastic, when moist; hard and brittle when dry. It enters into the composition of the chyle and the blood; is the self-coagulable material in them, and is produced in the retrograde metamorphosis of the tissues. It is in small proportion in the blood; but its epher increases in inflammation, whilst in continued fever it is diminished. Muscular fibrin, Spy'tonin, Musculin, has been shown, however, to be different from that of the blood. In certain diseased actions, Fibrin or Coagulable lymph, Gluten, is separated from the blood, and is found in considerable quantity on the surfaces of membranes, and in the cavities of the body. See Liquor Sanguinis.

Fibrin is likewise a proximate principle of vegetables, and differs but little in chemical composition from animal fibrin; nor does it differ much from albumen and casein.

Fibrin is very nutritious.

FIBRINATION, Fibrinatio. The act of adding fibrin to the blood. The opposite to debrination.

FIBRINOGENOUS. (A hybrid term, from fibrin, and γενω or γεννω, 'I engender,') Producing fibrin. The fibrinogenous or fibrin-producing material appears to be a product of the metamorphosis of tissue.

FIBRINOUS, Fibrinosus, (F.) Fibrineus. That which is composed of fibrin, or has the appearance of fibrin.

FIBRO, in composition, appertaining or relating to fibrous tissue.

FIBROAREOLAR. Fibrocellular.

FIBROBRONCHITIS. Fibrous or rheumatic inflammation of the bronchial tubes.

FIBROCAR'TILAGE, Fibrocartilago. An organic tissue, partaking of the nature of the fibrous tissue, and of that of cartilage. It is dense, resisting, elastic, firm, supple, and flexible. Fibrocartilages are distinguished into,—1. Membriform, or those which serve as moulds to certain parts, as the alae nasi and eyelids. 2. Vag'ini-form, or those which form sheaths for the sliding of tendons. 3. Interartic'ular, those which are met with in the movable articulations. 4. Unif'ing, (F.) Fibro-cartilages d'union, which form a junction between two bones, as the symphysis pubis. Fibrocartilages are sometimes formed adventitiously, as the result of a morbid process in different organs.

FIBROCELLULARES, TARSAL, see Tarsus.

FIBROCELLULINES INTERVERTEBRALES, Intervertebral cartilages.

FIBROCELLULAR, Fibrocellular'is, Fibroareolar, Fibroareolar'is. That which partakes of the fibrous and of the cellular or areolar tissue, as the fascia transversalis.

FIBROCELLULAR TUMOUR, Tumour, fibrocellular.

FIBROMA, gen. Fibro'matis, (fibro, and oma,) Tumour, fibrous.

FIBROMUCOUS, Fibromucosus, (F.) Fibromuqueux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and of mucous membranes. A term applied to fibrous membranes, which are intimately united with other membranes of a mucous nature, as the pituitary membrane, the membrane of the urethra, &c.

FIBROPLAS'TIC, Fibro-plasticus, (F.) Fibroplastique, (from fibro, and πλασσω, 'I form,') An epithet for a morbid formation, constituted of the elements of areolar tissue transformed, in part, into fibre.

FIBROPLASTIC TUMOUR, Sarcoma.

FIBROSE'ROUS, Fibroserosus, (F.) Fibroseréux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and serous membranes. Membranes, composed of a fibrous, and a serous sheet, intimately united:—

as the Dura Mater, Pericardium, Tunica albuginea testis, &c.

FIBROID, Fibrous, Tumour, fibrous.

FIBROUS, Fibrosus, Fibroid, (F.) Fibreux. Composed of fibres. Certain membranes, as the dura mater, periosteum, ligamentous capsules of the joints, &c., are fibrous. The fibrous system of Bichat includes the system of organs formed by the albugineous fibre of Chaussier. It comprises, particularly, the periosteum and perichondrium; the articular capsules and ligaments; the tendons; the dura mater, pericardium, tunica sclerotica, tunica albuginea testis, outer membrane of the spleen, &c. Under simple fibrous tissues, Te'tæ fibrosæ, certain writers have classed the white and yellow fibrous tissues, and areolar tissue. Both the yellow and the white may be detected in the areolar tissue. The white is said to exist alone in ligaments, tendons, fibrous membranes, aponeuroses, &c. The yellow, (F.) Tissu jaune, exists separately in the middle coat of the arteries, the chordæ vocales, ligamentum nuchæ of quadrupeds, &c. It differs from the white in possessing a high degree of elasticity, owing to the presence of a Instinct principle, called by MM. Robin and Verdé Élasticière.

FIBROUS GROWTH, Tumour, fibrous—f. Matter of the Brain, see Cerebrum—f. Membranes, see Membranes, fibrous.

FIB'ULA, (for Fibigula [?], from figo, 'to fix,' 'a clasp, or brace,') Cru'ris ra'dius, Can'na mi'nor, Os per'onē, Per'onē, Perone'um, Foc'ile mi'nus, Su'ra, Ar'u'do mi'nor, Fia'tula Cru'ris, Tib'ia mi'nima, Os tib'ie mi'nus, Spellbone, The splinter bone of the leg. (F.) Péroné. The long, small bone, situate at the outer part of the leg. The superior or tibial extremity of the fibula is rounded and forms the caput or head. It is articulated with the tibia. Its inferior or tarsal extremity is broader than the superior. It is articulated with the tibia and astragalus, and forms the malleolus externus or outer ankle by means of its coronoid process. The body of the bone has three faces, having more or less prominent edges. It is separated from the tibia by the interosseous space, and is developed by three points of ossification; one at the body, and one at each extremity. It prevents the foot from turning outwards.

FIBULAD, see Fibular aspect.

FIBULAR, Peroneal.

FIB'ULAR AS'PECT. An aspect towards the side on which the fibula is situated. Fib'ulad is used by the same writer adverbially, to signify 'towards the fibular aspect.'

FIBULATIO, (fibula, 'a clasp,') Infibulatio.

FIC, Ficus.

FICAIRE, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICARIA, (from ficus, 'a fig,') Scrophularia aquatica—f. Communis, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Ranunculoides, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Verna, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICATIO, Ficus.

FICICION, Physician.

FICOID, Ficoi'des, Ficoïdens, (ficus, 'a fig, and eidos, 'resemblance,') Resembling a fig in form or character.

FICOSA EMINENTIA, Ficus.

FICOSIS, (ficus, and the suffix osis), Ficus.

FICOUS, Fico'sus. Relating or appertaining to ficus.

FICUS, Sy'cē, Sy'cea, Sy'cum, Syco'sis, Syco'ma, Fico'sis, Fica'tio, Fico'sus Tu'mor, Fico'sa eminent'ia, Mar'i'ca, (F.) Fic. A fleshy excrescence, often soft and reddish, sometimes hard and scirrhus, hanging by a peduncle, or formed like a fig, occurring on the eyelids, chin, tongue, anus (Ischias), or organs of generation. The fici seated on the last-mentioned parts are generally of a syphilitic character.

Ficus, F. Carica.

FICUS CAR'ICA, F. vulga'ris seu commu'nis. The systematic name of the fig-tree, (F.) Figuier. Ord. Urticaceae. Car'ica, F'i'cus, Sy'cē, (F.) Figue, the fig, is a pleasant fruit when ripe, as well as when dried in the state in which it is found in the shops—Ficus, (Ph. U. S.) It is used, at times, in place of a cataplasm; especially in gum-boils.

FICUS COMMUNIS, F. Carica—f. Indiæ grana, Coccus cacti—f. Indica, Musa paradisiaca, see Caoutchouc, Carica papaya, and Lacca—f. Religiosa, see Lacca.

FIDERIS, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. These waters, in the Canton of the Grisons, are strong, acidulous, and alkaline, and possess all the virtues of the class.

FID'GETS. (Of doubtful etymology.) Dysphor'ia sim'plex, D. nervo'sa, Erethis'mus sim'plex, Tituba'tio, Creep'ers, (Sc.) Fyck, (F.) Frétillement. General restlessness and troublesome uneasiness of the nerves and muscles, with increased sensibility, and inability of fixing the attention, accompanied with a perpetual desire for changing the position. See Agacement des Nerfs.

FIDICINALES, (from fidicen, 'a harper,') Lumbrales manus.

FIE, Psychorages.

FIGURA VENOSA, ('venous figure,') Circulus venosus.

FIGURATIO, (figurare, figuratum, 'to fashion,') Imagination.

FIGURE, Countenance.

FIGURÉ, (F.) An epithet for a compressive bandage, applied over the head after bleeding from the frontal vein. It has also been called bandage royal.

FIGWORT, Scrophularia nodosa—f. Water, greater, Scrophularia aquatica.

FILA NERVEA, Nerve-fibres—f. Spermatica, Spermatozoa.

FILACEOUS, Filamentous.

FILAIRE DE MEDINE (Filaria), Dracunculus.

FILAMENT, Filum, Filamentum, (dim. of filum, 'a thread.') This word is used synonymously with filibril; thus, we say a nervous or cellular filament or filibril. Also, the glairy, thread-like substance which forms in the urine in some diseases, and which depends on a particular secretion from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages.

FILAMENT OF MÜLLER, see Tunica Jacobi.

FILAMEN'TOUS, Filamentosus. Filaceous; thread-like; filiform. Containing thread-like substances, as the tunica filamentosa or decidua:—Filamentous urine; urine containing thread-like substances.

FILAMENTUM, Filament, Frænum.

FILARIA GUINEENSIS, (from filum, 'a thread.') Dracunculus—f. Hominis bronchialis, see Worms—f. Medinensis, Dracunculus—f. Oculi, see Worms.

FILLET, (from filum, 'a thread,') Fascia, Laqueus—f. of the Corpus Callosum, Gyrus fornicatus.

FILL'ING, (from Sax. fyllan, 'to fill,') A term employed in dentistry for the operation of stuffing the cavity of a carious tooth with some indestructible substance, to prevent the access of extraneous matters. Also called stopping, stuffing—Odontopleurosis. The materials employed for filling are gold foil, sponge or crystalline gold, tin foil, lead, mastie, gutta percha, &c. See Plugging.

FILTRATION, Filtratio, Percolatio, Ethisis, Ethismus, (from filtrum.) A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in passing a fluid through a filter or strainer, for the purpose of clarifying it. In ancient physiology, it meant the action by which the different humours of the body are separated from the mass of the blood.

FIL'TRUM. A filter, (F.) Filtre; (from low Latin feltrum, (F.) feutre, 'felt or filled cloth,' which was used to form it [?]). Any porous material; such as sand, some kinds of freestone, powdered charcoal, pounded glass, flannel, unsized paper, &c., through which a fluid is passed for the purpose of separating it from the matters suspended in it.

FILUM, ('a thread,' akin to pilus, 'a hair,') Filament—f. Musculare, Muscular fibre—f. Tæniaforme, Tæniola.

FILUM TERMINALE. A slender ligament, prolonged from the nervous sheath, formed by the spinal pia mater, which descends through the centre of the cauda equina, and is attached to the dura mater, lining the canal of the coccyx.

FIM'BRIA, Purpura. A band; a fringe; as the fimbria or fimbriated or fringed extremity of the Falloppian tube.

FIMBRIÆ CARNOSÆ COLI, Appendiculæ pinguedinosæ—f. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube, Falloppian.

FIMBRIATED, see Fimbria.

FIMUS, Borborus, Onthus, Stercus, (F.) Fiente. Dung, excrement.

FIMUS seu STERCUS AN'SERIS, Goosedung, was applied as a poultice to the feet in malignant fever. See Chenocropus.

FIMUS EQUINUS, Stercus e'qui non castrati. Stonehorse dung was once thought antipleuritic.

FIMUS VACCÆ, Cow dung, was employed as a cataplasm, especially in gout.

FINCKLE, (Fœniculum.) Anethum.

FINGER, Sax. pinġer, from penġ, 'to take,') Digitus—f. Ear, see Digitus.

FINGER, HIPPOCRATIC, Dig'itus Hippocraticus, (F.) Doigt Hippocratique. A fusiform tumefaction of the last phalanx of the index finger especially, with curving of the nails, mentioned by Hippocrates as characteristic of phthisis; but present, perhaps, in all cases of profound and protracted disturbance of hæmotosis.

FINGER, MIDDLE, Medius digitus—f. Ring, Annular finger.

FINGER STALL, Digitale.

FINGER, SUPERNUMERARY, see Monster.

FISSURA LONGITUDINALIS, ANTERIOR ET POSTERIOR. Two vertical fissures in the median line, in front of and behind the medulla oblongata, which divide it superficially into two symmetrical lateral columns.

FISSURA MAGNA VULVÆ, see Rima—f. Palpebrarum, see Palpebra—f. Pilaris, Trichismus.

FISSURA TRANSVERSA MAGNA CEREBRI, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain.

FISSURE, Fissu'ra, Schis'ma, Scissu'ra, Rhê'gê, Rhê'ua, Rhê'g'mus, (findece, fissum, 'to cleave.')

A long and narrow cleft or opening in a bone—Rhê'gê, Ceas'ma, (F.) Fissure, Fente, Seissure.

FISSURE has various acceptations. A fracture, Catag'ma fissu'ra, in which the bone is cracked, not separated, as in fracture. A narrow, long, and superficial solution of continuity, around the external openings of the mucous membranes. A sort of chap—(F.) Gerçure—observed on the hands, particularly on the callous hands of workmen in certain mechanical employments. Small chapped ulcerations, sometimes noticed in young children, owing to the contact of the fæces and urine with the fine delicate skin of the thighs, nates, and genital organs. Clefts of a more or less deep nature, occurring on the genital organs in the vicinity of the anus, in those labouring under syphilis. These are usually called rhagades. See Monster.

FISSURE OF BICHAT, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain—f. Capillary, see Pilatô.

FISSURE, CEN'TRAL. The aggregate of the cavities or ventricles of the brain. Meckel considers them but one cavity, in the form of a cross.

FISSURE OF GLASER, Fissure, glenoid—f. of Glaserius, F. Glenoid.

FISSURE, GLE'NOID, Fis'sure of Gla'ser or Gla'serius, (F.) Fissure ou Scissure de Glaser, Fente glenôidale ou Fêlure de Glaser, divides the glenoid cavity of the temporal bone into two parts, and gives passage to the chorda tympani, &c.

FISSURE OF THE HE'LI'X. A small vertical fissure of the helix of the ear, a little above the tubercle for the attachment of the atrahens aurem muscle.

FISSURE, INFRAORBITAR, Suborbitar fissure.

FISSURE, LONGITU'DINAL, OF THE BRAIN, Fissu'ra cerebri longitudina'lis. The space which separates the two hemispheres of the brain.

FISSURE, ORBITAR, see Orbitar fissure—f. Orbitar, inferior, Spheno-maxillary fissure—f. Orbitar, superior, Sphenoidal fissure—f. Portal, see Liver.

FISSURE OF ROLAN'DO. A transverse fissure placed between two superior cerebral convolutions, which are met with above the fissure of Sylvius.

FISSURE, SEMILU'NAR. A notch at the anterior edge of the cerebellum, where it receives fibres which connect it to the cerebellum and mesocephalon.

FISSURE OF SYL'VIUS, Fissu'ra seu Fos'sa Mag'na Syl'vii. A deep, narrow sulcus, which ascends obliquely backwards from the temporal ala of the sphenoid bone, near to the middle of the parietal bone, and which parts the anterior and middle lobes of the cerebrum on each side.

FISSURE OF THE TRA'GUS. A fissure on the anterior surface of the tragus of the ear.

FISSURE, TRANS'VERSE, OF THE BRAIN, Great transverse fis'sure, Fis'sure of Bi'chat, Fissu'ra seu Ri'ma transver'sa mag'na cerebri. A fissure which passes beneath and behind the edge of the middle lobe of the brain, and extends beneath the hemisphere of one side to the same point of the opposite side.

FISSURES OF THE LIVER, see Liver.

FIST, (Sax. fýrct.) Pýgmê, Pug'nus, (F.) Poing. The clenched hand.

FIS'TULA, ('a pipe or reed,') Syr'inx, Syrin'ga, Aul'us, Fis'tule: when of a small size, Aul'us. A solution of continuity, of greater or less depth and sinuosity; the opening of which is narrow, and the disease kept up by an altered texture of parts, so that it is not disposed to heal. A fistula is incomplete or blind, when it has but one opening; and complete when there are two, the one communicating with an internal cavity the other externally. It is lined in its whole course by a membrane which seems analogous to mucous membranes. Incomplete fistule may be internal or external. The former are those which open internally; the latter those which open externally. External incomplete fistule are kept up by caries or necrosis of bones, by extraneous bodies in any of the living textures, or by purulent cavities, the walls of which have not become united. Internal incomplete fistule generally soon become complete, since the discharge that escapes from them into the cavities into which they open has a constant tendency to make its way outwardly, and soon occasions ulceration of the integuments. Fistule have received different names, according to the discharge which they afford, and the organs in which they are seated,—as lachrymal, biliary, salivary, synovial, and urinary—Fis'tula ur'inae, U'rias. The great object of treatment in fistulous sores is to bring on an altered condition of the parietes of the canal, by astringent or stimulating injections, caustics, the knife, pressure, &c. Those which are dependent on diseased bone, cartilage, tendon, &c., do not heal until after the exfoliation of the morbid part. Fistule of excretory ducts are produced either by an injury of the duct itself or by the retention and accumulation of the fluids to which they have to give passage. Thus, Fis'tula lacrymal'is, Dacryosyr'inx, Emp'rag'ma lacrymal'e, Hý'drops sac'ci lacrymal'is, Drops'y of the lachrymal sac, commonly proceeds from the obliteration of the nasal ducts, or from atony of the lachrymal sac; which circumstances prevent the tears from passing into the nostrils.

FISTULA IN A'NO, Anal fistula, Archosyr'inx, generally occurs from some mechanical pressure or impediment. The principal indication in the treatment of these fistule of the excretory canals being to put a stop to the constant discharge of the secretions, &c., through the preternatural channel, the fistulous passage is at times laid open, and a communication established with the natural excretory canal; at others, strong pressure is employed to procure its obliteration.

FIVE FINGERS, Panax quinquefolium.

FIXATIO MONONGÆ, Melancholy, see Mononœa.

FIX'ED, Fix'us, (figere, fixum, 'to fasten.')

A body not capable of being volatilized by fire is said to be fixed. Thus, we say fixed oils, in contradistinction to volatile oils.

FIXEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is four leagues from Waldsassen, in Bavaria. It contains carbonic acid, holding in solution carbonates of lime and magnesia; chlorides of lime and magnesia, carbonate of soda and silica. In Bavaria, it replaces the Seltzer water.

FIXI DENTES. The teeth of the second dentition.

FLABELLATION, Flabella'tio, (flabellare, flabellatum, (from flabrum, 'a blast of wind,') 'to agitate the air,') An operation recommended by Ambrose Paré, which consists in keeping fractured limbs cool, as well as the dressings surrounding them, by the renewal of the air around them, either by the use of a fan, or the repeated change of position of the parts affected.

FLABELLUM ET VENTILABRUM CORDIS, ('the fan and winnowing machine of the heart,') Pulmo.

FLACCIDITY, Flaccid'itas, (flaccidus, 'flabby,' 'soft,') Softness of a part, so as to offer little resistance on pressure.

FLAG, BLUE, Iris versicolor—f. Blue, slender, Iris Virginia—f. Dwarf, Iris lacustris—f. Myrtle, Acorus calamus—f. Root, Acorus calamus.

FLAMMULA, (dim. of flamma), Fleam, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Cordis, Biolychnium—f. Jovis, Clematis recta—f. Vitalis, Animal heat, Biolychnium, Vital principle.

FLANCS, Flanks.

FLANKS, Il'ia, Il'ea, La'goncs, Lap'ara, Ce'neo'nes, (Prov.) Lists, (F.) Flancs, Les Îles. The regions of the body which extend, on the sides, from the inferior margin of the chest to the crista tili.

FLAP, (F.) Lambeau. A portion of the soft parts of the body separated from those beneath, but still attached by the base. Hence there may be 'flap wounds,' (F.) Plaies à lambeaux, and 'flap operations,' (F.) Opérations à lambeaux. When the flap is taken from one part, and applied to another, in plastic operations, the operation is said to be by migration of the flap, (F.) Migration du Lambeau. At times, the flap is made to slide over the part to which it has to adhere:—the operation is then said to be by the sliding of the flap, (F.) Glissement du Lambeau. The flap is also, at times, rolled, inverted, &c., (F.) Roulement ou Inversion du Lambeau.

FLAP DOCK, Digitalis.

FLAP OPERATION OF AMPUTATION, Amputation à lambeaux.

FLAT TOP, Vernonia Novboracensis.

FLATUARIUS, (from flare, flatum, 'to blow,') Alchymist.

FLATUÆUX, Windy.

Wind emitted from, or accumulated in, the digestive tube especially.

FLATULENT, Windy.

FLATULENTIA, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITÉ, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITY, Flatulence

FLATUS, (from flare, flatum, 'to blow,') Crepitation. Flatulence—f. Furiosus, Ambulo-flatulentus—f. Spina, Spina ventosa.

FLAVEDO CORTICUM CITRI, (from flaveo, 'to be yellow,') see Citrus medica.

FLAVOUR, (F.) flairer, 'to smell,') The quality of a sapid body, which is appreciated by the taste and smell combined, and more especially by the latter. Some physiologists consider that flavour is effected through the smell alone.

FLAVUS, Yellow.

FLAX, COMMON, (Sax. pleax, plex, (G.) Flachs.) Linum usitatissimum—f. Purging, Linum catharticum.

FLAXSEED, see Linum usitatissimum—f. Seed Meal, see Linum usitatissimum—f. Seed tea, In-fusum lini compositum.

FLEAM, Flam'ma, Flam'mula, ('a flame,' from its shape [?]) Schaste'rium, Fossa'rium, Plebeo'ommum. (F.) Flamme, Flammette. A surgical instrument used for the operation of phlebotomy. It consists of a small metallic box, containing a spear-pointed cutting instrument, which, by means of a spring, can be forced into the vein. It is much used in Germany and some other European countries, and is not unfrequently employed in America; but is scarcely ever seen in France or Great Britain.

FLEXIBILITY, Flexibil'itas, (flectere, flexum, 'to bend,') Capability of being bent. A physical property of the tissues, which varies greatly ac-according to the structure. The tendons exhibit this property in a marked manner.

FLEXIO, Campsis, Flexion.

FLEX'ION, Flex'io, Cum'pē. The state of being bent. The action of a flexor muscle.

FLEX'OR, 'a bender,' (F.) Fléchisseur. A muscle, whose office it is to bend certain parts.

FLEXOR ACCESSORIUS, see Flexor longus digitorum pedis.

FLEXOR BREVIS DIGITORUM PEDIS PERFORATUS, F. Sublimis seu brevis seu digitorum brevis seu perforatus pedis, Perforatus seu flexor secundi internodii digitorum pedis, (F.) Calcaneo-sous-phalangien commun, Calcaneo-sous-phalangien commun,—(Ch.), Muscle court fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, placed at the middle of the sole of the foot. It is narrower and thicker behind than before, where it is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior part of the inferior surface of the os calcis, and is inserted at the inferior surface of the second phalanx of the last four toes. It bends the second phalanges of the toes on the first, and the first on the metatarsal bones; in this manner augmenting the concavity of the vault of the foot.

FLEXOR BREVIS MINIMI DIGITI, F. Parvus minimi digiti.

FLEXOR BREVIS MINIMI DIGITI PEDIS, Parvulus minimi, (F.) Court fléchisseur du petit orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du petit orteil—(Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and outer part of the sole of the foot. It arises from the posterior extremity of the fifth metatarsal bone, and is inserted into the posterior part of the first phalanx of the little toe, which it bends.

FLEXOR BREVIS POLLICIS MANUS, F. secundi internodii, F. primi et secundi ossis pollicis, The'nar, (F.) Court fléchisseur du pouce, Carpophalangien du pouce—(Ch.), Demi-interosseux du pouce. A muscle, situate at the outer part of the palm of the hand. It is divided into two portions by the tendon of the Flexor longus pollicis. It arises from the os magnum, the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the third metacarpal bone; and is inserted into the superior part of the first phalanx of the thumb, and into the two ossa sesamoidea at the articulation of the first phalanx with the first metacarpal bone. Its use is to bend the first phalanx of the thumb on the first metacarpal bone, and the latter upon the trapezium.

FLEXOR BREVIS POLLICIS PEDIS, F. brevis seu hallucis seu brevis pollicis, (F.) Tarso-phalangien du pouce, Court fléchisseur du gros orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du premier orteil—(Ch.) It is situate at the anterior and inner part of the sole of the foot; is thin and narrow behind; thick and divided into two portions before. It arises from the inferior part of the os calcis and the last two cuneiform bones, and is inserted at the inferior part of the base of the first phalanx of the great toe, and into the two sesamoid bones of the corresponding metatarso-phalangian articulation. It bends the first phalanx of the great toe on the first metacarpal bone.

FLEXOR CARPI RADIALIS, Palmaris magnus—f. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital (muscles)—f. Hallucis, F. brevis pollicis pedis—f. Hallucis longus, F. longus pollicis pedis.

FLEXOR LONGUS DIGITORUM PEDIS PROFUNDUS PERFORANS; Perforans seu Flexor profundus, Perodactylus, Peronodactylus, Peronodactylus, Peronodactylus, Flexor digitorum longus seu Perforans pedis, Perforans seu Flexor tertii internodii digitorum pedis; (F.) Tibio-phalangien—(Ch.), Grand ou long fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, situate at the posterior and deep-seated part of the leg. It is broader at its middle than at its extremities, the inferior of which is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior surface of the tibia, and its tendons are attached to the posterior part of the lower surface of the three phalanges of the last four toes. It bends the three phalanges on each other, and the toes on the metatarsus, and extends the foot on the leg.

The Accessorius Flexoris Longi Digitorum Pedis, Flexor accessorius, Cavo quadrata Syl'rii, C. accessorius, Massa carnea Jacobi Syl'rii, Planta'ris ve'rus, (F.) Accessoire du long fléchisseur commun des orteils, Carré (Chair), is a small muscle of the sole of the foot, which passes obliquely from the os calcis to the outer edge of the flexor longus, whose force it augments, and obliquity it corrects.

FLEXOR LONGUS POLLICIS MANUS, F. longus pollicis, F. tertii internodii seu longissimus pollicis; (F.) Radio-phalangien du pouce,—(Ch.) Situate at the anterior and profound part of the forearm. It arises from the upper three quarters of the anterior surface of the radius and interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the anterior surface of the last phalanx of the thumb. It bends the second phalanx of the thumb on the first; the first on the corresponding metacarpal bone, and this upon the radius. It can, also, bend the hand on the forearm.

FLEXOR LONGUS POLLICIS PEDIS, F. Hallucis seu Pollicis longus, (F.) Péroué-phalangien du gros orteil, Long fléchisseur du gros orteil, Péroué-sous-phalangien du pouce,—(Ch.) It is situate at the posterior and profound part of the leg. It arises from the posterior surface of the fibula and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by means of a long tendon, into the inferior part of the first phalanx of the great toe. It bends the third phalanx on the first, and this upon the corresponding metatarsal bone. It augments the concavity of the sole of the foot, and extends the foot on the leg.

FLEXOR OSSIS METACARPI POLLICIS, Opponens pollicis.

FLEXOR PARVUS MINIMI DIGITI, F. brevis minimi digiti manus, Abductor minimi digiti, Hypothénar Riola'ni seu minimi digiti, (F.) Carpophalangien du petit doigt—(Ch.), Court fléchisseur du petit doigt. It arises from the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the process of the os unciniforme, and is inserted at the inner side of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the little finger. It bends the first phalanx of the little finger.

FLEXOR PERFORANS, F. profundus perforans—f. Perforatus, F. sublimis perforatus—f. Perforatus pedis, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Primi internodii, Opponens pollicis—f. Primi internodii digitorum manus, Lumbricalis manus—f. Primi et secundi ossis pollicis, F. brevis pollicis manus.

FLEXOR PROFUNDUS PERFORANS, F. Profundus seu Perforans seu tertii internodii digitorum manus, Perforans manus; (F.) Cubito-phalangien commun—(Ch.) Fléchisseur profond des doigts. A thick, flat, long muscle, seated beneath the Flexor sublimis perforans. Its upper extremity is simple, and arises from the anterior surface of the ulna and from the interosseous ligament. Its inferior extremity terminates by four tendons, which, after having passed through slits in the sublimis, are inserted into the anterior surface of the last phalanges of the four fingers. It bends the third phalanges on the second, and, in other respects, has the same use as the flexor sublimis perforatus.

FLEXOR SECUNDI INTERNODII DIGITORUM PEDIS, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Tertii internodii, F. longus pollicis manus—f. Tertii internodii digitorum manus, F. profundus perforans—f. Tertii internodii digitorum pedis, F. longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—f. Sublimis, F. brevis digitorum pedis.

FLEXOR SUBLIMIS PERFORATUS, F. Perforatus, (F.), Fléchisseur sublime ou superficiel des doigts, Épitrochlo-phalangien commun, — (Ch.) It is a thick, flat, muscle, seated at the anterior part of the forearm. Its upper extremity, which is simple, arises from the internal condyle of the os humeri;—from the coronoid process of the ulna, and from the anterior edge of the radius. Its lower extremity divides into four tendons, which slide under the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and are inserted into the second phalanges of the last four fingers, after having been slit to allow the tendons of the flexor profundus to pass through them. This muscle bends the second phalanges on the first; these on the carpal bones, and the hand on the forearm.

FLOCCULUS; (dim. of flocus, 'a flock of wool,') Pneumogastrie lobule, Lobulus pneumogastrieus. A long and slender prominence, extending from the side of the vallicula around the corpus testiforme to the crus cerebelli, lying behind the filaments of the pneumogastric nerves.

FLOODING, (from Sax. flod, from pløpan, 'to flow,') Metrorrhagia.

FLOR DE MISTELA, see Mistura.

FLOR'ENCE, CLIMATE OF. This agreeable Italian city is by no means a favourable residence for the phthisical invalid. Sir James Clark affirms, indeed, that he does not know any class of invalids for whom Florence offers a favourable residence. It is subject to sudden vicissitudes of temperature, and to cold, piercing winds during the winter and spring.

FLOWER DE LUCE, Iris Germanica.

FLOWERS, Flo'res, (F.) Flours. The ancient chymists gave this name to different solid and volatile substances obtained by sublimation. The term is not yet entirely banished from chymical and medical language, as Flowers of Benjamin, Flowers of Sulphur, &c.

FLOWERS, Menses.

FLOWERS, FOUR CARMINATIVE, Quatuor flores carminati'vi, were chamomile, dill, feverfew, and melilot.

FLOWERS, FOUR COR'DIAL, Quatuor flores cordia'les, were formerly, borage, bugloss, roses, and violets.

FLUCTUATIO, (fluctuare, fluctuatus, (fluctus, 'a wave,') 'to undulate,') Fluctuation—f. Aurium, Tinnitus aurium.

FLUCTUATION, Fluctuatio, Undulatio, (F.) Undulation. The undulation of a fluid collected in any natural or artificial cavity, which is felt by pressure or by percussion, properly practised—peripheric fluctuation. In ascites, the fluctuation is felt by one of the hands being applied to one side of the abdomen whilst the other side is struck with the other hand. In abscesses, fluctuation is perceived by pressing on the tumour, with one or two fingers alternately, on opposite points.

FLUEURS, (from fluere, 'to flow,') Menses—f. Blanchés, Leucorrhœa.

FLUID, Fluidus, (fluere, 'to flow,') A body whose particles move easily on each other; but have not sufficient cohesion to remain united when subjected to pressure. The human body is largely composed of fluids.

The mean results of experiments by M. Chevreul, which consisted in drying the human body in vacuo, with a very moderate degree of heat, gave the proportion of water about 6.667 in the 10.000.

FLUMEN DYSENTERICUM, (flumen, 'a stream,' from fluere, 'to flow,') Dysentery.

FLUM'ERY, (corrupted from frumenty [?]), (Scotch) Sov'ens. A preparation of oatmeal, which forms a light article of food during convalescence. It may be made as follows:—Take of oatmeal or groats, a quart. Rub with two quarts of hot water, and let the mixture stand until it becomes sour; then add another quart of hot water, and strain through a hair sieve. Let it stand till a white sediment is deposited: decant, and wash the sediment with cold water. Boil this with fresh water till it forms a mucilage, stirring the whole time.

FLUOR, (from fluere, 'to flow,') Flux—f. Albus intestinorum, Cœliac flux—f. Albus malignus, Gonorrhœa impura—f. Muliebri, Leucorrhœa—f. Muliebri non Gallicis, Leucorrhœa—f. Sanguinis pulmonum, Hæmoptysis—f. Sanguinis vesicæ, Cystorrhagia.

FLUSH, Flush'ing, (F.) Rougeurs, Bouffés de Chaleur; ([G.] fliessen, 'to flow,') The temporary redness and heat produced by accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the face; as the eudlen 'flush' or 'blush of emotion:' the 'flush of hectic.'

FLUX. Fluxus, Profluxum. Fluor, Flow, (fluere, fluxum, 'to flow.') A discharge. Rhy'sis. In nosology, it comprises a series of affections, the principal symptom of which is the discharge of fluid. Generally it is employed for dysentery.

FLUX, BILIOUS, Fluxus biliosus. A discharge of bile, either by vomiting or by stool, or by both, as in cholera.

FLUX, BLOODY, Dysentery — f. de Bouche, Salivation — f. Bronchique, Bronchorrhœa — f. Dysentérique, Dysentery — f. Hemorrhoidal, see Hæmorrhoids — f. Hépatique, Hepatirrhœa — *f. FLUXION, Flux'io, Affluxus. A flow of blood or other humour towards any organ with greater force than natural. A determination. Thus we say, in those disposed to apoplexy, there is a fluxion or determination of blood to the head.

FLUXION CATARRHALE, Catarrh — f. sur les Dents, Odontalgia.

FLUXION DÉ POITRINE, (F.) By this name, the French often understand acute pulmonary catarrh, and pleurisy, but most commonly peripneumony.

FLUXUS, gen. Fluxus, Discharge — f. Alvinus, Diarrhœa — f. Capillorum, Alopecia — f. Chylosus, Cœliac flux — f. Cœliacus, Cœliac flux — f. Cœliacus per renes, Chyluria — *f. FŒMEN, Femen, Perineum.

FŒMINA, Female, Woman.

FŒMINESCENTIA, Feminescence.

FŒNICULUM, (dim. of fœnum, 'hay,') Anethum — f. Aquaticum, Phellandrium aquaticum — f. Erraticum, Peucedanum silaus — f. Marinum, Crithmum maritimum — f. Officinale, Anethum — f. Porcinum, Peucedanum — f. Vulgare, Anethum.

FŒNUGREEK, Trigonella fœnum.

FŒNUM CAMELORUM, ('hay of camels,')

Junens odoratus — f. Græcum, Trigonella fœnum.

FŒTAB'ULUM, (fœteo, 'to smell badly,') An encysted abscess.

FŒTAL. Fœtal'is. Relating to the fœtus. A name given to the parts connected with the fœtus. Thus we say — the fœtal surface of the placenta, in contradistinction to the uterine or maternal surface.

FŒTAL CIRCULATION differs from that of the adult in several respects. Commencing with the placenta, where it probably undergoes some change analogous to what occurs in the lungs in extra-uterine existence, the blood proceeds by the umbilical vein as far as the liver, where a part of it is poured into the vena porta; the other proceeds into the vena cava inferior; the latter, having received the suprahepatic veins, pours its blood into the right auricle. From the right auricle, a part of the blood is sent into the right ventricle; the rest passes directly through into the left auricle, by the foramen ovale. When the right ventricle contracts, the blood is sent into the pulmonary artery; but as the function of respiration is not going on, little blood passes to the lungs; the rest goes through the ductus arteriosus into the aorta. The blood, received by the left auricle from the lungs, as well as that which passed through the foramen ovale, is transmitted into the left ventricle, by the contraction of which it is sent into the aorta, and by means of the umbilical arteries, which arise from the hypogastric, it is returned to the placenta.

FŒTAL HEAD. The diameters of this at the full period are as follows:—1. The Biparietal or transverse, extending from one parietal protuberance to the other, and measuring 3½ inches. 2. The Temporal, from one temple to another, 3 inches. 3. The Occipito-mental, from the occiput to the chin; the greatest of all, 5 inches. 4. The Occipito-frontal or antero-posterior, 4½ or 4¼ inches. 5. The Cervico-bregmatic, from the nape of the neck to the centre of the anterior fontanelle. 6. The Fronto-mental, from the forehead to the chin, about 3½ inches. 7. The Trachelo-bregmatic, from the front of the neck to the anterior fontanelle, 3½ inches. 8. The Vertical diameter, from the vertex to the base of the cranium.

FŒTAL NUTRITION, Cyotrophy.

FŒTATION, Pregnancy.

FŒTICIDE, Fœticid'ium, (fœtus, and cœdere, 'to kill,') Aborticid'ium. Criminal abortion.

FŒTIDUS, Fetid.

FŒTOR, ('a bad smell,') Dysodia.

FŒTOR ALARUM, The disagreeable rank odour exhaled from the axillæ.

FŒTOR ORIS, Breath, offensive.

FŒTUS, Fœtus, Cye'ma, O'nus ven'tris, Sarc'ina. The young of any creature. The unborn child. (F.) Fœtus, Faix, Fruit. By ἔμψυ, Cye'mu, Hippocrates meant the fecundated, but still imperfect, germ. It corresponded with the term embryo, as now used; whilst ἔμψρον, 'embryo,' signified the fœtus at a more advanced stage of utero-gestation. The majority of anatomists apply to the germ the name embryo, which it retains until the third month of gestation, and with some until the period of quickening; whilst fœtus is applied to it in its latter stages. The terms are, however, often used indiscriminately. When the ovule has been fecundated in the ovarium, it proceeds slowly towards, and enters the uterus, with which it becomes ultimately connected by means of the placenta. When first seen, the fœtus has the form of a gelatinous flake, which some have compared to an ant, a grain of barley, a worm curved upon itself, &c. The fetal increment is very rapid in the first, third, fourth, and sixth months of its formation, and at the end of nine months it has attained its full dimensions—Enfant à terme. Generally, there is but one fœtus in utero; sometimes, there are two; rarely three. The fœtus presents considerable difference in its shape, weight, length, situation in the womb, pro-

Issue, (F.) Fonticule, Cautére, Erutoire. A small ulcer produced by art, either by the aid of caustics or of cutting instruments; the discharge from which is kept up with a view to fulfil certain the-rapeutical indications. The Pea issue, (F.) Fonti- cienne à pois, is kept up by means of a pea placed in it. This pea, (F.) Pois à cautère, is sometimes formed of wax; at others, the young, blasted fruit of the orange is employed. The common dried garden pea answers the purpose. The seton is also an issue.

FORCE, (fortis, 'strong,') Vis, Potentia, En- ergi'a, Dyn'amis, Cratus. Any power which produces an action. Those powers which are inherent in organization are called vital forces. We say, also, organic force, and muscular force, to designate that of the organs in general, or of the muscles in particular. To the latter the word
Dyn'amis, énergis, corresponds; and the absence of this force is termed adyn'amia. The vital forces have to be carefully studied by the pathologist.
 The doctrine of diseases is greatly dependent on their augmentation or diminution; freedom or oppression, &c.

FOR'CEPS, gen. For'cipis, (quasi ferriceps, from ferrum, 'iron,' and capio, 'I take,') Pinceps, La'bis, Volsel'ix. An instrument, for removing bodies which it would be inconvenient or impracticable to seize with the fingers. (F.) Pince, Pin- cette. There are various kinds of forceps, 1. The ordinary kind, contained in every dressing-case, for removing lint, &c., from wounds or ulcers.
 (F.) Pince à pansement ou à anneau. 2. Dissect- ing or Ligature or Arterial For'ceps, (F.) Pince à dissection, P. à ligature, to lay hold of delicate parts. 3. Polypus For'ceps, Tooth For'ceps, For- ceps of Museux, (F.) Pince de Museux, for laying hold of the tonsils or other parts to be removed.
 4. The Bull'et For'ceps, (F.) Tireballe. 5. The Lithot'omy For'ceps, Lithol'abon, Lithago'pum, Ten- ac'ulo, Volsel'ix, which resembles the Craniotomy
Forceps, (F.) Tenette. 6. The Cataract For'ceps, (F.) Pince à Cataracte, resembling the dissecting forceps, but much finer. 7. The Pince à graine, the branches of which can be brought together, and retained by a movable sheath.

Forceps is also an instrument used by obstetrical practitioners to embrace the head, and bring it through the pelvis. It consists of two branches, blades or levers; one of which, in the case of the short forceps, is passed over the ear of the child, and the other opposite the former, so that the blades may lock. When the head is securely included between the blades, the operation of extraction can be commenced. See Parturition.

FORE, Ante.

FORE'ARM, Antibra'chium, Pyg'mè, Pars inferior bra'chii, Cu'bitus, (F.) Avant-bras. The part of the upper extremity, comprised between the arm and the hand. It is composed of two bones—radius and ulna—and 20 muscles.

FOREFRONT, Front.

FOREHEAD, Front.

FOREMILK, Colostrum.

FOREIGN BODY, Extraneous body.

FORENSIC ANATOMY, (Forum, 'a court of justice,') see Anatomy—f. Medicine, Medicine, legal.

FORES, (pl. of foris, 'a gate,') Vulva.

FORESKIN, Prepuce.

FORETOP, Front.

FOREXEP, Ciseau, Scissors—f. Dentaria, Dentagra.

FORFIC'ULA AURICULA'RIA, (dim. of forfec, 'scissors,') Ear'wig. An insect of the Order Orthoptera, which occasionally enters the meatus auditorius externus, and excites intense pain. It may be destroyed by tobacco-smoke, or by oil poured into the meatus.

FORGES, MINERAL WATERS OF. Forges is situate four leagues from Gournay, in the department of Seine Inférieure, France. There are three springs, which are acidulous chalybeates. These are called Royal, Reinette, and Cardinal, in honor of Louis XIII., Queen Anne of Austria, and Cardinal Richelieu, who used them.

FORMATIVE, (formare, formatum, 'to form,') Plastic.

FORM'ICA, Myr'mex. 'The ant or pismire.' (F.) Fourmi. It contains an acid juice and gross oil, which were formerly extolled as aphrodisiacs. The chrysalides of the animal are said to be diuretic and carminative; and have been used in dropsy. Also the name of a black wart, verru'ca formica'ria, with a broad base and cleft surface; so called because the pain attending it resembles the biting of an ant, μυρμηκία, myrme'cia. A varicose tumour on the anus and glans penis. Miliary herpes.

FORMICA AMBULATORIA, Herpes circinatus—f. Corrosiva, Herpes exedens.

FORMICANT, Formi'cans, Myrme'cizon, (from formica,) (F.) Fourmillant. An epithet given to the pulse, Pulsus formi'cans, when extremely small, scarcely perceptible, unequal, and communicating a sensation like that of the motion of an ant felt through a thin texture.

FORMICA'TION, Formica'tio, Myrme'cias'mus, Myrme'ciasis, Myrme'cis'mus, Myrme'co'sis, Stupor formi'cans. (F.) Fourmilleant. A pain, compared with that which would be caused by a number of ants creeping on a part.

FORMIX, (from formica, [?]) Herpes esthiomenus.

FORMULA, (dim. of forma, 'form or manner,') Prescription—f. Extemporanea, see Magistral—f. Magistralis, see Magistral—f. Medica, Prescription—f. Officialis, see Magistral.

FORM'ULARY, Formula'rium, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Nar'thecz. One skilled in preparing writs or forms of process. A collection of medical formulæ or receipts.

FORM'ULE, Prescription.

FORMYL, PERCHLORIDE OF. Chloroform.

FORMYLE, IODURE DE, Iodoform.

FORMYLUM CHLORATUM, Chloroform.

FOR'NIX, gen. For'niciis, 'an arch or vault.' F. cer'ebri seu trilat'erus seu tricuspidalis, Psal'lis, Psalid'ium, Cav'era, Testu'do cer'ebri, Ar'vus medulla'ris, (F.) Trigoue céreb'ral—(Ch.) Voûte à trois piliers, Triangle Médullaire. A medullary body in the brain, below the corpus callosum and above the middle ventricle, on the median line. This body, which is curved upon itself, terminates anteriorly by a prolongation, which constitutes its anterior pillar, Crus seu Colum'na for'niciis, (F.) Pilier antérieur; and posteriorly by two similar prolongations, called posterior pillars or crura. See Achiculum, and Vault.

FORNIX CEREBRI, Fornix—f. Cranii, Calva.

FORNPECKLES, Ephelides.

FORPEX, gen. For'piciis, Scissors.

FORRET, ('forehead,') Front.

FORSTERA'NIA DIFFORM'IS, Ech'ites difform'is seu puber'ula; indigenous; Ord. Apocynaceæ; is said so be used as a wash with milk to remove freckles. The juice destroys warts.

FORTIFIANT, (fortis, 'strong,' and facere, 'to make,') Corroborant, Tonic.

FORTAITUDE, Hysteralgia.

FORTYKNOT, Achyranthes repens.

FOSSA, Fos'sea, (fodis, fossam, 'I dig,') Scama, (F.) Fosse. A cavity of greater or less depth, the entrance to which is always larger than the base. The fossæ of bones have been called simple, when they belong to one bone only, as the parietal fossæ; and compound, (F.) Fosses composées, when several concur in their formation, as the orbital fossæ, temporal fossæ, &c.

FOSSA, AMYGDALOID, Amygdaloid excav'ion. The space between the anterior and posterior pillars of the fauces, which is occupied by the tonsils.

FOSSA AMYN'TÆ. A kind of bandage, used in fractures of the nose; so called, by Galen, from Amyntas of Rhodes, its inventor. It consisted of a long band, applied round the head, the turns of which crossed at the root of the nose.

FOSSA CANINA, Canine fossa.

FOSSA CEREBEL'LI, (F.) Fosse cérébelleuse. The inferior occipital fossa, which lodges the corresponding portion of the cerebellum.

FOSSA CORONA'LIS, Cor'on'al or front'al fos'sa. A depression on the orbital plate of the frontal or coronal bone, which supports the anterior lobe of the brain.

FOSSA CORONOI'DEA, Cor'onoid fos'sa. A cavity before the inferior extremity of the humerus, in which the coronoid process of the ulna is engaged during the flexion of the forearm.

FOSSA COTYLOIDEA, see Cotyloid.

FOSSA, DIGAS'TRIC, Fos'sa digas'trica. A deep groove on the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which gives origin to the digastric muscle.

FOSSA ETHMOIDA'LIS, Eth'moid fos'sa. A shallow gutter on the upper surface of the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, in which is lodged the expanded portion of the olfactory nerves.

FOSSA OF THE GALLBLADDER, see Gallbladder—f. Genu, Poples—f. Glandis, see Glans.

FOSSA GUTTURA'LIS, Guttural fos'sa. The depression which forms the guttural region of the base of the cranium, between the foramen magnum and posterior nares.

FOSSA HYALOIDEA, see Hyaloid (Fossa)—f. Iliac, see Iliac fossæ—f. Infraorbital, Canine fossa—f. Infra-spinous, see Infraspinata fossa.

FOSSA INNOMINATA. The space between the helix and antihelix of the ear.

FOSSA, ISCHIO-RECTAL, Perineal fossa—f. Jugularis, Jugular fossa—f. Lacrymalis, Lacrymal fossa—f. Lenticularis, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Magna Muliebris, Vulva—f. Magna Sylvii, Fissura Sylvii.

FOSSA, MENTAL, Fos'sa menta'lis. A small depression on each side of the symphysis on the anterior surface of the body of the maxilla inferior, for the attachment of muscles.

FOSSA NAVICULARIS, Navicular fossa.

FOSSA OCCIPITALIS, Occipital fos'sa. The occipital fossae are four in number: the superior or cerebral, and the inferior or cerebellous. They are separated by a groove, which lodges the lateral sinus.

FOSSA OVALIS, see Ovalis fossa—f. Palatina, Palate—f. Patellaris, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Perinaei, Perineal fossa—f. Pituitaria, Sella Turcica.

FOSSA PLOPITEA, Plophite' al fos'sa. The hollow of the ham;—the plopital region.

FOSSA, PORTAL, see Liver—f. Scaphoides, Navicularis fossa.

FOSSA SIGMOÏDEA, Sul'cus sinûs latera'lis. A broad deep groove on the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which supports part of the lateral sinus.

FOSSA, SUBORBITAR, Canine fossa.

FOSSA, SUBPYRAMIDAL, F. subpyramida'lis. A deep fossa under the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda in the middle ear, remarkable for its constancy, and pierced by several foramina at the bottom.

FOSSA SUPRASPINOÏDALIS, Pituitaria fossa—f. Supraspinata, see Supraspinatus—f. of Sylvii, Fissure of S.—f. Temporalis, Temporal fossa—f. Transversa, see Liver—f. Umbilicalis, see Liver.

FOSSÆ CEREBRALES, Cerebra' l fos'sæ. Fossæ or excavations at the base of the cranium. They are nine in number: three occupy the median line, and three are placed at each side. They are distinguished into anterior, middle, and posterior.

FOSSÆ DIGITALES, see Impression.

FOSSÆ, Fossa—f. Basiliare, Basiliary fossa—f. Sous-épineuse, Infra-spinata fossa—f. Sous-épineuse, Fossa supra-spinata—f. de la Vésicule biliaire, see Gallbladder.

FOSSÆ CONDYLÓIDIENNES, (pl. of fosse,) Condylóidea foramina—f. Nasales, Ouvertures postérieures des, Nares, posterior.

FOSETTE (F.), (dim. of fossa.) Scrobiculus, Bothrion. Several depressions are so called. A dimpled chin, Fossette du menton, consists in a slight depression, which certain persons have on the chin. A dimple of the cheek, (F.) Fossette des joues, a depression which occurs on the cheeks of certain persons when they laugh. Scrobiculus cordis, Antica'rdion, Præcor'dium, (F.) Fossette du cœur, is the depression observed on a level with the xiphoid cartilage at the anterior and inferior part of the chest. It is, also, called pit of the stomach, (F.) Creux de l'estomac.

FOSETTE, Fos'sula, A'nulus, Bothrion, is also a small ulcer of the transparent cornea, the centre of which is deep.

FOSETTE ANGLAIRE DU QUATRIÈME VENTRICULE, Calamus scriptorius—f. du Cœur, Scrobiculus cordis.

FOSSORIUM, (fossor, 'a digger,') Fleam.

FOSSULA, (dim. of fossa, 'a ditch,') Argema, Fossette, Fovea.

FOTHERGILL'S PILLS, see Pilule aloes et colocynthidis.

FOTUS, (fovere, fotum, 'to keep warm,) Fomentation—f. Communis, Decoctum papaveris.

FOU, Fol, Insane.

FOUETS, Sempervivum tectorum.

FOUGÈRE DOUCE, Polypodium—f. Fernelle, Asplenium filix fœmina, Pteris aquilina—f. Grande, Pteris aquilina—f. Mâle, Polypodium filix mas.

FOUL DISEASE, Syphilis.

FOULURE, Sprain.

FOUNDLING HOSPITAL, Brephtropheum.

FOURCHE, (F.), (fourché, 'cleft' from furca, 'a fork,') Apostema Phalan'gum. A French provincial term for small abscesses which form on the fingers and hands of working people. Also, an instrument, invented by M. J. L. Petit, for compressing the ranine artery in cases of hemorrhage from that vessel.

FOURCHETTE, (dim. of fourche, 'a fork,') Furcilla, a little fork, Fur'cula. A surgical instrument used for raising and supporting the tongue, during the operation of dividing the frænum.

Fourchette, in anatomy, is the posterior commissure of the labia majora, called, also, Frænum, Frænum pudendi, Fur'cula Labio'rûm; The cartilago ensiformis: so called from its being sometimes cleft like a fork. Also, the semilunar notch at the superior or clavicular extremity of the sternum.

FOURM, Formica.

FOURMILLANT, (from fourmi,) Formicant.

FOURMILLEMENT, Formication.

FOUSEL OIL, ((G.) Fusel, 'bad brandy,') see Oil, fusel.

FOVEA, dim. Fove'ola, (fodio, 'I dig,') Boethrus, a slight depression, Fos'sula. The pudendum muliebre; see Vulva. The fossa navicularis, A vapour-bath for the lower extremities.

FOVEA AXILLARIS, Axilla—f. Centralis retinae, Foramen centrale—f. Elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Hemisphærica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Lacrymalis, Lacrymal fossa, see Fossa—f. Navicularis, see Urethra—f. Oculi, Orbit—f. Ovalis, Ovalis fossa—f. Semi-elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Sulciformis, see Crista Vestibuli.

FOVEOLA, see Fovea.

POWER, Syncope.

POXBERRY, Arbutus uva ursi.

POXGLOVE, Digitalis.

FOYER, ((L.) focus, 'a fire place,') Fomes morbi.

FRACTIONNEMENT, (frangere, fractum, 'to break, 'to bruise,') Segmentation.

FRACTURA, Fracture—f. Dentis, Odontoclasia.

FRACTURE, Fractu'ra, Cata'gma, C. Fractu'ra, Cata'xis, Cla'sis, Clas'ma, Ag'mè, Ag'ma, Diar'rhagè. A solution of continuity in a bone, Osteoc'lasia. A simple fracture is when the bone only is divided. A compound fracture is a division of the bone with a wound of the integuments communicating with the bone,—the bone, indeed, generally protruding. In a com'minuted fracture, Al'phite'don, ἀλφειτῶν, Cary'edon Cata'gma, κωνιδον καραγπα, the bone is broken into several pieces; and in a complicated fracture there is, in addition to the injury done to the bone, a lesion of some considerable vessel, nervous trunk, &c. Fractures are also termed transverse, oblique, &c., according to their direction. The treatment of fractures consists, in general, in reducing the fragments when displaced; maintaining them when reduced; preventing the symptoms which may be likely to arise; and combating them when they occur. The reduction of fractures must be effected by extension, counter-extension, and coaptation. The parts are kept in apposition by position, rest, and an appropriate apparatus. The position must vary according to the kind of fracture. Commonly, the fractured limb is placed on a horizontal or slightly inclined plane, in a state of extension; or rather in a middle state between extension and flexion, according to the case.

FRACTURE, CAMERATED, Camerosis.

FRACTURE OF THE RA'DIUS, BAR'TON'S, Bar'ton's fracture. A term applied to a fracture of the lower extremity of the radius, which commences at the articular surface, and extends upwards for an inch or more, to terminate on the dorsal aspect. Owing to the extensor muscles drawing up the separated portion of the bone, and with it the carpus, a deformity results, which has been confounded with simple dislocation. In consequence of the fracture having been well described by Dr. John Rhea Barton, of Philadelphia, it is often called after him.

FRACTURE OF THE RA'DIUS, COL'LES'S, Col'les's Fracture. A name given to a fracture of the radius at the distance of about an inch and a half above the radio-carpal articulation, well described by Professor Colles, of Dublin.

FRACTURE EN RAVE, Raphanedon.

FRACTURES PAR RÉSONNANCE, see Contraffisura.

FRÆNA MORGAGNII, (pl. of frænnum), F. of the Valve of Bauhin.

FRÆNA OF THE VALVE OF BAU'HIN, (F.) Freins de la valvule de Bauhin. A name given by Morgagni to the projecting lines formed by the junction of the extremities of the two lips of the ileo-cæcal valve. They are also called Fræna and Retinacula Morgagnii.

FRÆNULUM, (dim. of frænnum), see Frænnum, Bride—f. Clitoridis, Frænnum clitoridis—f. Epiglottidis, Glossoepiglottic ligament—f. Labiolum, Fourchette—f. Novum, Tania semicircularis—f. Pudendi, Fourchette.

FRÆNULUM VE'LI MEDULLA'RIS ANTERIO'RIS. A narrow slip, given off by the commissure of the encephalic testes, which strengthens the junction of the testes with the valve of Vieussens.

FRÆNUM, Fre'nnum, (F.) Frein, 'a bridle.'—Frænulum, File'tum, Filamen'tum. 'A small bridle.'—A bridle. Names given to several membranous folds, which bridle and retain certain organs.

FRÆNUM CLITO'RIDIS, Frænulum Clito'ridis, (F.) Frein du Clitoris. A slight duplicature formed by the union of the internal portions of the upper extremity of the nymphæ.

FRÆNUM EPIGLOTTIDIS, Glosso-epiglottic ligament—f. Glandis, F. Penis.

FRÆNUM LABIO'RUM, (F.) Frein des lèvres. There are two of these; one for the upper, the other for the lower lip. They unite these parts to the maxillary bone, and are formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth. Also, the Fourchette.

FRÆNUM LIN'GUÆ, Frænulum seu Vinculum Lingvæ, Glossodes'mus, File'tum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la langue, is a triangular reflection formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth, and situate between the inferior paries of that cavity and the inferior surface of the tongue. When the frænnum extends as far as the extremity of the tongue, it cramps its movements, interferes with sucking, &c. This inconvenience is remedied by carefully snipping it with a pair of seissors. The French call this Opération du filet.

FRÆNUM PE'NIS, F. seu Frænulum seu Vinculum Præputii, F. Glandis, Cynodes'mion, Cynodes'mus, Vinculum Can'uum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la verge, is a membranous reflection which fixes the prepuce to the lower part of the glans. When too short, it prevents the prepuce from sliding over the glans.

FRÆNUM PRÆPUTII, F. Penis.

FRAGA'RIA, (frago, 'I smell sweetly.') The Strawberry, Fraga'ria vesca seu vulga'ris seu sem- perflo'rens, Chama'batus, (F.) Fraisier. Ord. Rosaceæ. The fruit is agreeable and wholesome, and the roots have been esteemed tonic and slightly diuretic. The fruit is the Fragrum, koparov, of the ancients; (F.) Fraise.

FRAGARIA ANSERINA, Potentilla anserina—f. Pentaphyllum, Potentilla reptans—f. Tormentilla officinalis, Tormentilla.

FRAGARIA VIRGINIA'NA, Wild Strawberry. An indigenous plant, which has astringent leaves.

FRAGILE VITREUM, Fragilitas ossium.

FRAGILITAS, Ruptibilitas, Ruptilitas, (fragilis, 'brittle,' from frango, 'I break.')

FRAGILITY, Brittleness. The state of being easily broken or torn.

FRAGILITAS OS'SIUM, Osteopathyrosis, Paros'tia frag'ilis, Brittleness of the bones, Friability of the bones, Frag'ile vitreum. Pathologists have given this name to the extreme facility with which bones break in certain diseases of the osseous texture. It is owing to a deficiency of the animal matter.

FRAGMENT, Fragmentum, Fragmen, Ramen'tum, (frangere, fractum, 'to break.')

The French use this term for the two portions of a fractured bone; thus, they speak of the superior and the inferior fragment.

FRAGMENTS, PREC'IOUS. A name formerly given, in Pharmacy, to the garnet, hyacinth, emerald, sapphire and topaz. The Arabs falsely attributed to them cordial and alexiterial properties.

FRAGON, Ruscus.

FRAGUM, see Fragaria.

FRAISE, see Fragaria.

FRAISIER, Fragaria.

FRAMBÆSIA, Frambæ'sia, Le'pra fungif'era, ([F.], framboise, 'a raspberry.')

Syph'ilis Indica, Anthra'cia ru'bula, Thymio'sis, Th. seu Lues Indica, Vari'ola Amboinen'sis, Le'pra fungif'era, Scroph'ula Molucca'na. The Yaws, Epian, Pian. A disease of the Antilles and of Africa, characterized by tumours, of a contagious character, which resemble strawberries, raspberries, or champignons; ulcerate, and are accompanied by emaciation. The Pian, for so the Indians call it, differs somewhat in America and Africa.

Pian of America, Frambæ'sia America'na, Anthra'cia Ru'bula Americana, occurs under similar circumstances with the next, and seems to be transmitted by copulation. The tumours have a similar form, and are greater in proportion to their paucity. In some cases they are mixed with ulcers.

Pian of Guinea, Frambæ'sia Guineen'sis, Anthra'cia Ru'bula Guineen'sis, is common amongst the negroes, especially in childhood and youth. It begins by small spots, which appear on different parts, and especially on the organs of generation and around the anus; these spots disappear, and are transformed into an eschar, to which an excrescence succeeds, that grows slowly, and has the shape above described.

The treatment is nearly the same in the two varieties. The tumours will yield to mercurial friction, when small. When large, they must be destroyed by caustic. In both cases, mercury must be given to prevent a recurrence.

An endemic disease resembling yaws was observed in the Feejee Islands by the medical officers of the United States' Exploring Expedition. It is called by the natives Dhoko.

FRAMBÆSIA ILLYRICA, Scherlievo—f. Scotica, Sibbens.

FRAMBOISE, Rubus idæus.

FRANCOLIN, Attagen.

FRANGES SYNOVIALES, ('synovial fringes,') Synovial glands.

FRANGIPANE. An article of food, prepared by evaporating to dryness, in a water-bath, milk mixed with almonds and sugar.

FRANGULA ALNUS. (frangere, 'to break,' from its brittleness.) Rhamnus frangula.

FRANKFORT, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are in Beaver County, Pennsylvania, near the village of Frankfort. Cane spring and Leiper spring contain carbonic acid, carbonates of iron and magnesia, hydrosulphuric acid, chloride of sodium, and a small portion of bitumen. They are recommended in dyspepsia, rheumatic and cutaneous affections, and in a variety of diseases.

FRANKINCENSE, COMMON, (frank, and 'incense,') see Pinus abies—f. African, Daniellia thurifera—f. Tree, Daniellia thurifera—f. True, Juniperus lycia.

FRANZENSBAD, FRANZBAD, or FRANZENBRUNN, MINERAL WATERS OF. A celebrated water at Eger, in Bohemia, which contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid gas. The springs are called Franzenbrunn.

FRANZO, Spirocolon.

FRAPPER, ('to strike,') Percuss.

FRASERA. (after John Fraser, a botanical collector,) Calumba. American—f. Carolinensis, see Calumba—f. Officinalis, see Calumba—f. Verticillata, Calumba, American—f. Walteri, see Calumba.

FRATER UTERINUS, ('uterine brother,') see Uterinus frater.

FRATERNITAS, (frater, 'a brother,') Adelphixia.

FRATRATIO, Adelphixia.

FRAXINELLA DICTAMNUS, (dim of fraxinus.) Dictamnus albus—f. White, Dictamnus albus.

FRAXINUS AMERICANA, White Ash; and FRAXINUS QUADRANGULATA, Blue Ash, indigenous: Ord. Oleaceæ; have bitter and astringent barks, and have been used as antiperiodics.

FRAXINUS APETALA, F. excelsior—f. Aurea, F. excelsior—f. Crispa, F. excelsior—f. Excelsa, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS EXCELSIOR. The systematic name of the Ash tree, Fraxinus sylvatica, F. apetalia seu auræa seu crispata seu excelsa seu pendula seu verrucosa, Bumelia seu Macedonica Fraxinus, Bumelia, (F.) Frêne. The fresh bark has a moderately strong, bitterish taste. It has been said to possess resolvent and diuretic qualities, and has been given in intermittents, and in gout and rheumatism, and as an antidote to serpent bites. The seeds, called Bird's tongue, Lingua acis, Ornithoglossa, have been exhibited as diuretics, in the dose of a drachm. Its sap has been extolled against deafness.

FRAXINUS FLORIFERA, F. ornus—f. Macedonica, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS ORNUS, F. melia seu paniculata seu florifera, Ornus mannifera seu rotundifolia. The systematic name of the tree whence manna flows. This substance is also called Man'na Calabrinna, Ros Calabrinus, Aëromeli, Drooneli, Dryoneli, Mel æërium, Succus orni concretus. In Sicily, not only the Fraxinus ornus, but also the F. rotundifolia and F. excelsior are regularly cultivated for the purpose of procuring manna, which is their condensed juice. Manna is inodorous, sweetish, with a very slight degree of bitterness; in friable flakes, of a whitish or pale yellow colour; opaque, and soluble in water and alcohol. It is laxative, and is used as a purgative for children, who take it readily on account of its sweetness. More generally it is employed as an adjunct to other purgatives. Dose, ʒss to ʒij. Its immediate principle is called Mannite or Mannin. This has been recommended by Ma-genlie as a substitute for manna. Dose, ʒij. for children.

FRAXINUS PANICULATA, F. ornus—f. Quadrangulata, see F. Americana—f. Rotundifolia, F. ornus.

FRAYEUR NOCTURNE, ('nocturnal fright,') Panophobia.

FRECKENS, ([G.] Fleck, a 'spot,') Ephelides.

FRECKLED, see Ephelides.

FRECKLES, Ephelides.

FREEMAN'S BATHING SPIRITS, see Lini-mentum saponis compositum.

FREIN, Frænum—f. du Clitoris, Frænum clitoridis—f. de la Langue, Frænum linguæ—f. des Lèvres, Frænum labiorum—f. de la Verge, Frænum penis.

FREINS DE LA VALVULE DE BAUHIN, Fræna of the valve of Bauhin.

FREINWALDE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are in Brandenburg, twelve leagues from Berlin. They contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of lime, carbonates of lime and magnesia, iron, &c., and are used in asthenic diseases.

FRÉMISSEMENT, Fremitus, Shuddering.

FRÉMISSEMENT CATAIKE, (F.) 'Cat's purr, or iremitus.' Pur'ring Tre'mor. Lænnec has given this name to the agitation which is sensible to the hand when applied on the præcordial region, and which he considers a sign of ossification or other contraction of the auriculo-ventricular openings. The name was chosen by him from the analogy of the sound to the purring of a cat.

FREMITUS, (fræmere, fræmitum, 'to murmur,') Bruissement, Frémissement, Shuddering.

The PE'CTORAL or VO'CAL FREMITUS, Pec'toral Vibration, Tactile vibration is an obscure diffused resonance of the voice which is felt when the hand is applied to the chest.

A FRICTION FREMITUS is perceptible to the hands in many cases of pleurisy, when the surfaces of the pleura have become roughened from deposition, as well as in rare cases of pericarditis. In the former cases, it is called the pleural; in the latter, the pericardial friction fremitus.

FREMITUS, HYDATID, Son hydatique.

FRENA, (pl. of frænum), see Alveolus.

FRENCH CRUST, Syphilis—f. Distemper, Syphilis—f. Letter, Condom—f. Nut, Juglans regia—f. Pox, Syphilis.

FRET, (Sax. fræosan, 'to rub,' and frætan, 'to eat or gnaw,') Chafing, Herpes.

FRÉTILLEMENT, Fidgets.

FRETTING, Tormina.

FRICTATIO, (fricare, friectum, 'to rub,') Fric-tion.

FRICTATOIRES, (from fricare, 'to rub,') See Shampooing.

FRICTATORIUM, Liniment.

FRICTATRIX, Tribas.

FRI'CE, Fricum, Friconium. A medicine which the ancients employed under the form of friction. They distinguished the Fricæ sicca and F. mollæ.

FRICTONIUM, Fricæ.

FRICTA, Colophonia.

FRICTIO, Friction—f. Humida, see Friction—f. Sicca, see Friction.

FRICITION, Fric'tio, Fricatio, Anatribe, Anatripsis, Trypsis, Chirapsia. The action of rubbing—as of a part of the surface of the body—more or less forcibly, with the hands, a brush, flannel, &c., constituting Xerotribia, Xerotripsis, Fric'tio sic'ca or dry fric'tion or rub'bing, or with ointments, liniments, tinctures, &c., constituting moist fric'tion or rub'bing, Fric'tio hu'mida. It is a useful means for exciting the action of the skin.

FRICION FREMITUS, see Fremitus—f. Sound, Bruit de frottement.

FRICTRIX, Tribas.

FRICTUM, Liniment.

FRICUM, Frice.

FRIENDBACK, Hangnail.

FRIGEFACIENTIA, (frigus, 'cold,' and facere, 'to make.') Refrigerants.

FRIGID, Frig'idus, (F.) Froid, (frigeo, 'to be cold.') Cold. Not easily moved to sexual desire; Imbellis ad ven'erem. Impotent.

FRIGIDARIUM, Bath, cold.

FRIGIDITY, Frigid'itas. A sensation of cold. Also, impotence and sterility. Frigidity of the stomach is a state of debility of that organ, imputed to excessive venery,—the Anorexia exhaustivum of Sauvages.

FRIGIDUS, Frigid.

FRIGORIFIC, (frigus, 'cold,' and fio, 'I become.') That which has the power of producing cold. The best FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES are the following. Their effects are owing to the rapid absorption of heat when solids pass into the liquid state.

Frigorific Mixtures may also be made by the rapid solution of salts, without the use of snow or ice. The salts must be finely powdered and dry.

FRIGUS, gen. Fri'goris, Cold—f. Tenue, see Rigor.

FRINGE TREE, Chionanthus Virginica.

FRINGED, ([F.] frange, 'a fringe.') Laciniated.

FRISSEON, (from frigere, 'to be cold,') Rigor.

FRISSEONNEMENT, Horripilation.

FROGLEAF, Brasenia Hydropeletis.

FROG TONGUE, Ranula.

FROGS' SPAWN, Sperma ranarum.

FROID, (from frigidus), Cold, Frigid—f. Glacial, Ice cold.

FROISSEMENT, [F.] (from low L. frussare, 'to bruise.') Rubbing, bruising.

FROISSEMENT PULMONAIRE, Bruit de froissement pulmonaire, Pulmonary crumpling sound. A name given by M. Fournet to a respiratory sound, which communicates to the ear the sensation of the rubbing (froissement) of a texture compressed against a hard body. It is by no means well defined.

FRÔLEMENT, (F.) 'Grazing or touching lightly.'

FRÔLEMENT PÉRICARDIQUE, Bruit de frôlement péricardique. Rustling noise of the pericardium. A sound resembling that produced by the crumpling of a piece of parchment or of thick silken stuff, accompanying the systole and diastole of the heart. It indicates roughness of the pericardium induced by disease.

FROMAGE, Cheese.

FRUMENT, (from [L.] frumentum,) Triticum.

FRONCEMENT, Corrugation.

FRONCLE, Furunculus.

FRONDE, Funda.

FRONS, gen. Frontis, Front.

FRONT, Frons, Meto'pon, Sto'ma, Forehead, Forefront, Fore'top, Brow, (Sc.) Forret. That part of the visage which extends from one temple to the other, and is comprised in a vertical direction, between the roots of the hair and the superciliary ridges.

FRON'TAL, Fronta'lis. Relating or belonging to the front. This name has been given to several parts. Winslow, Sömmering, and others, call the anterior part of the occipito-frontalis—the frontal muscle or fronta'lis, Musculo'sa Front'is Cutem movens substantia Par of Vesalius.

FRONTAL ARTERY, Arteria supra-orbita'lis, is given off by the ophthalmic, which is itself a branch of the internal carotid. It makes its exit from the skull at the upper part of the base of the orbit, and ascends the forehead between the bone and the orbicularis palpebrarum; dividing into three or four branches, which are distributed to the neighboring muscles.

FRONTAL BONE, Os front'is seu corona'le seu inverecundum seu pup'pis seu sincip'itis seu pro'æ seu ratio'nis, Meto'pon. A double bone in the fœtus, single in the adult, situate at the base of the cranium, and at the superior part of the face. It forms the vault of the orbit; lodges the ethmoid bone in a notch at its middle part; and is articulated, besides, with the sphenoid, parietal, and nasal bones, the ossa unguis, superior maxillary, and malar bones.

FRONTAL FUR'ROW extends upwards from the frontal spine, and becomes gradually larger in its course, to lodge the upper part of the superior longitudinal sinus, and to give attachment to the falx cerebri.

FRONTAL NERVE, Palpébro-frontal—(Ch.), is the greatest of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve,—the first division of the fifth pair. It proceeds along the superior paries of the orbit, and divides into two branches:—the one internal, which makes its exit from the orbital fossa, passing beneath the pulley of the oblique muscle:—the other, external, issuing from the same cavity by the foramen orbitarium superius.

FRONTAL PROTUBERANCE, F. tuberosity, Tubercula frontalis, Suggundium superciliosum. The protuberance of the frontal bone above the superciliary arch.

FRONTAL SINUSES, Sinus Frontales, Metopopetra, Prosopopetra, Sinus Superciliares seu pituitarii frontis, Cavernæ frontis, are two deep cavities in the substance of the frontal bone, separated from each other by a median septum, and opening, below, into the anterior cells of the ethmoid bone.

FRONTAL SPINE, Crista interna, is situate in the middle of the under part of the bone, and is formed by the coalescence of the inner tables for the attachment of the falx cerebri.

Surgeons have given the name FRONTALIS to a bandage or topical application to the forehead. Such have, also, been called πρωτοπαια and ανακλήματα.

FRONTAL TUBEROSITY, Frontal protuberance.

FRONTALĒ, (from frons.) A medicine applied to the forehead.

FRONTALIS ET OCCIPITALIS, Occipitofrontalis.

FRONTALIS VERUS, Corrugator supercilii.

FRONTODYMIA, see Cephalodymia.

FRONTOETHMOID FORAMEN, Cæcum foramen—f. Nasal, Pyramidalis nasi—f. Sourcilier, Corrugator supercilii.

FROSTBITE, Congelation.

FROSTPLANT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWEED, Erigeron Philadelphicum, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWORT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROTHY, (αφρός, 'froth.' [?]) Spumous, (F.) Spumeux, Écumeux, Mousseux. An epithet given to the fœces or sputa when mixed with air.

FROTTEMENT, (from low L. fricare, itself from fricare, 'to rub.') See Bruit de frottement.

FROTTEMENT GLOBULAIRE. A name given by M. Simonnet to the pulse in aortic regurgitation, when it is jerking; and, in well-marked cases, appears as if the blood consisted of several little masses, which passed in succession under the finger applied to the artery.

FRUCTIFICATIO, (fructus and facere, 'to make,') Fecundation.

FRUCTUS, Fruit—f. Horæi, Fruit (summer)—f. Immaturus, Abortion.

FRUGIVOROUS, Frugivorus, (fruges, 'fruits,' and voro, 'I eat.') One that eats fruits.

FRUIT, Fructus, (fruor, fructus, 'to enjoy.') Carpos. In botany, the seed with its enclosing pericarp. In the ordinary acceptation, it means exclusively seed cases, which are eatable; and, generally, such as require no preparation to render them fit for food. The effects of fruits on the body, in a medical as well as a dietetical point of view, are various. They may be distinguished into classes; for, whilst the Cerealia, for example, afford fruits which are highly nutritious, the Summer Fruits (Fructus Horæi), which include strawberries, cherries, currants, mulberries, raspberries, figs, grapes, &c., are refrigerant and grateful, but afford little nourishment.

Fruit, (F.), is the fœtus, whilst contained in the womb of the mother.

FRUIT-SUGAR, Glucose.

FRUMENT, Frumenti, Furmenti, (frumentum, 'wheat or grain,' quasi frugimentum, from fruges, 'fruits.') Pottage made of wheat. Food made of wheat boiled in milk.

FRUMENTUM, Sitos. Any kind of grain from which bread was made; especially wheat.

FRUMENTUM, Triticum—f. Corniculatum, Ergot—f. Cornutum, Ergot—f. Luxurians, Ergot—f. Temulentum, Ergot—f. Turgidum, Ergot.

FRUSTRATOIRE (F.) Any liquor, taken a short time after eating, for the purpose of assisting digestion when difficult. Sugared water, eau sucrée, or water with the addition of a little brandy, or some aromatic substance, is commonly used for this purpose.

FRUTEX BACCIFER BRAZILIENSIS, Caagivivou—f. Indicus spinosus, Cara schulli.

FUCUS, (φυκος, 'sea weed,') F. vesiculosus, Paint.

FUCUS AMYLAÆUS, Jaff'na, Ed'ible or Ceylon Moss, Plocaria candida, Gracilaria seu Sphaerococcus seu Gigartina seu Fucus lichenoides, Marine Moss. This moss belongs to the natural order Algae. It was introduced some years ago into England, from India. It is white, filiform and fibrous, and has the usual odour of sea-weeds. Its medical properties are similar to those of Irish moss.

FUCUS, BLADDER, F. vesiculosus.

FUCUS CRISPUS, F. Irlandicus, Lic'hen Carrageen, Chondrus (Ph. U. S.), Ch. crispus seu polymorphus, Sphaerococcus crispus, U'va crisp'a, Irish Pearl, Carrageen', Carrageen' or Corrigeen' moss, (F.) Mousse d'Irlande ou perlée. This Fucus is found on the coasts of England, Ireland, Western France, Spain, and Portugal, and as far as the tropics. It is also a native of the United States. In Ireland, it is used by the poor as an article of diet. As met with in America, it is of light yellow colour, and resembles plates of horn, crisped and translucent. An agreeable jelly is obtained from it by boiling it in water or milk, which forms a good article of diet in consumptive cases. Its properties are indeed exactly like those of the Iceland Moss.

FUCUS HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana—f. Inflatus, F. vesiculosus—f. Irlandicus, Fucus crispus—f. Lichenoides, F. amyloaceus—f. Saccharine, Rhodomela palmata.

FUCUS VESICULOSUS, Fucus, F. inflatus, Halidrys vesiculosus, Querqus seu Lactuca Marina, Bladder Fucus, Sea Oak, Sea Wrack, Yellow Bladderwrack, (F.) Varec éscicieux, Chêne marin. It has been said to be a useful assistant to seawater in the cure of disorders of the glands. When the wrack, in fruit, is dried, cleaned, exposed to a red-heat in a crucible with a perforated lid, and is reduced to powder, it forms the Æthiops vegetabilis—the Pulvis Quercus Marinæ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia—which is used, like the burnt sponge, in bronchocœle and other scrofulous swellings. Its efficacy depends on the iodine it contains. Dose, gr. x to ℥ij, mixed in molasses or honey. See Soda.

FUGA DÆMONUM, ('aversion of the demons,') Hypericum perforatum.

FUGACIOUS, Fugax, gen. fugacis, (F.) Fugace, (fugere, 'to fly.') An epithet given to certain symptoms, which appear and disappear almost immediately afterwards; as a fugacious redness,—a fugacious swelling, Tumor fugax, &c.

FUGAX, Fugacious.

FUGE, (fugo, 'I expel,') 'an expeller.' A common suffix. Hence, Febrifuge, Vermifuge, &c.

FUGILĒ, Fugilla. This term has several acceptations. It means, 1. The cerumen of the ear. 2. The nebulous suspension in, or deposition from, the urine. 3. An abscess near the ear. 4. Abscess in general.

FUGILLA, Fugile.

FULGUR, gen. Ful'guis, 'lightning,' (from fulgere, 'to flash,') Astrape.

FULG'INOUS, Fuligino'sus, Lignyo'des, (F.) Fulgineus, (fuligo, gen. fuliginis, 'soot,') Having the colour of soot. An epithet given to certain parts, as the lips, teeth, or tongue, when they assume a brownish colour, or rather are covered with a coat of that colour,—Fuliginos'ity.

FULIGO, gen. Fulig'ivis, Lig'uis, Soot, (F.) Sue. &c., Wood'soot, Ful'go Lig'ui, consists of volatile alkaline salt, empyreumatic oil, fixed alkali, &c. A tincture, Tinctu'ra Fulig'ivis, prepared from it, has been recommended as a powerful antispasmodic in hysterical cases. (Fulig. Lign. 3j; Potass. subcarb. lbs; Ammon. muriat. ʒi; Aque fluvial. Oij. Digest for three days.) This tincture bears the name Soot drops and Fit drops. An ointment of soot has been used in various cutaneous diseases.

FULIGO ALBA PHILOSOPHORUM, Ammonia murias.

FULIGO'KALI, (fuligo, 'soot,' and kali, 'potassa,') This is an analogous preparation to anthrakokali; soot being used in the place of coal. It is employed in the same diseases. What might be regarded as a weak solution of fuligokali has been used for many years in Philadelphia, under the names medical lye, soot tea, alkaline solution, dyspeptic lye, and Physick's lye tea. It is made by mixing a quart of hickory ashes; half a pint of soot; and a gallon of boiling water; allowing the mixture to stand for twenty-four hours, and decanting.

FULLERS' EARTH, Cimolia purpurescens.

FULMEN, ('lightning,' from fulgere, 'to flash,') Astrape.

FULMICOTON, (fulmen and cotton,) see Colodion.

FULNESS, Repletio, Plen'itude, Pletho'ra, Repletio. The state of being filled. Also, a feeling of weight or distension in the stomach or other part of the system.

FUMARIA, (from fumus, 'smoke,' from its smell,) Fumaria officinalis seu media, Fumaria ter'ra, Cap'nos, Herba melancholif'uga, Sola'men Scabioso'rum, Fumitory, Common Fumitory, Fumiter'ra, (F.) Fumeterre, Fiel de terre, Pisse-sang. Ord. Fumariaceæ. The leaves are extremely succulent, and have a bitter, somewhat saline, taste. The infusion of the dried leaves and the expressed juice of the fresh plant have been extolled for their property of clearing the skin of many disorders of the leprous kind.

FUMARIA BULBO'SA, F. ca'va seu ma'ior, Borchhausen'ia seu Capno'ides ca'va, Aristolochi'a fabracea seu ca'va seu vulgar'is rotu'nda, Coryd'al'is bulbo'sa seu ca'va seu tubero'sa, Capno'chis. (F.) Fumeterre bulbeuse. The root of this plant was formerly given as an emmenagogue and antelmintic.

FUMARIA CAVA, F. bulbosa — f. Major, F. bulbosa — f. Media, Fumaria — f. Officinalis, Fumaria.

FUMETERRE, Fumaria.

FUMIGATIO, (fumigare, fumigatum, 'to make smoke,'—fumus,) Fumigation — f. Antilomica (Gaubii, see Disinfection — f. Guytoniensis, see Disinfection — f. Smythiana, see Disinfection).

FUMIGATION, Fumigatio, Suffit'us, Suffit'io, Suffumigatio, Suffumig'ium, Suffumentum, Apo-capnismus, Thymia'ca, Epithymia'ca, Hypothymia'ca, Hypothymia'sis, Thymia'sis, Capnismus, Hypocapnismus, Hypocapnism'ca, Hypat'mus, Hypat'mis'mus, Anathymia'sis. An operation, the object of which is to fill a circumscribed space with gas or vapour, with the intention either of purifying the air, of perfuming it, or of charging it with a substance proper for acting upon a part of the surface of the human body. See Sulphurous acid. Hence, fumigations have been distinguished into aqueous, aromatic, sulphureous, mercurial, disinfecting, Guytonian, &c. Benzoin generally constitutes the chief ingredient in the Fumigating Pastilles, to which any variety of odoriferous substances may be added. The following are formulæ.

R. Benzoin. ʒi; Cascarilla ʒss; Myrrh. ʒj; Ol. myrist., Ol. caryoph. aa gtt. x; Potassæ nitrat. ʒss; Carbon. lign. ʒvj; Mucil. trag. q. s.—or Reduce the solid ingredients to powder, and mix the whole into a plastic mass, which must be formed into cones, flattened at the base, and dried, first in the air, and afterwards in a stove.

FUMIGATION, CHLORINE, see Disinfection — f. Nitrous, see Disinfection — f. Oxymuratic, see Disinfection.

FUMITERRA, Fumaria.

FUMITORY, Fumaria.

FUMUS ALBUS, Hydrargyrum — f. Citrinus, Sulphur — f. Terræ, Fumaria.

FUNAMBULA'TIO, (funis, 'a cord,' and ambulare, 'to walk,') An exercise with the ancients, which consisted in scaling ropes.

FUNCTION, Functio, Actio, (F.) Functio; (fungor, functus, 'to act,' 'perform,') The action of an organ or set of organs. Any act, necessary for accomplishing a vital phenomenon. A function is a special office in the animal economy, which has, as its instrument, an organ or apparatus of organs. Thus respiration is a function. Its object is the conversion of venous into arterial blood, and its instrument is the lungs. The ancient physiologists divided the functions into vital, animal, and natural. They called vital functions those which are essential to life, as innervation, circulation, respiration; animal functions, those which belong to the encephalon; viz.: the functions of the intellect, the affections of the mind, and the voluntary motions; and natural functions, Facultates seu Actio'es naturales, those relating to assimilation, such as the actions of the abdominal viscera, of the absorbent and exhalant vessels, &c. Bichat divided the functions into those which relate to the preservation of the individual, and those that relate to the preservation of the species. The former he subdivided into animal and organic. The animal functions or functions of relation are those of the intellect, sensation, locomotion, and voice. The organic functions include digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, secretion, nutrition, and calorification. The functions, whose object is the preservation of the species—the organic, nutritive, or vegetative functions—are all those that relate to generation;—such as conception, gestation, accouchement, &c. Each of these admits of numerous subdivisions in a complete course of Physiology;—for so the doctrine of the functions is called.

FUNCTIONAL, Functio'nalis, (F.) Functio'nal. Relating or belonging to the function of an organ, or to the functions in general.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASES, see Organic Diseases.

FUNCTIONAL OR VITAL PHENOMENA are those produced by some modification in the action of an organ or organs, in contradistinction to those of a material or physical character;—thus we distinguish the functional phenomena of phthisis from those indicated by physical diagnosis — the physical phenomena.

FUN'DA, 'a sling,' Sphen'donē, (F.) Fronde. A bandage, composed of a fillet or long compress, cleft at its extremities to within about two inches of its middle. It is used in diseases of the nose and chin, and especially in cases of fracture of the lower jaw. In such case it has, also, been called Mentonnière, because placed beneath the chin; from (F.) Menton, 'the chin.'

FUNDAMENT, (fundare, 'to found; to lay the fundus or bottom of anything.') Anus—f. Falling down of the, Proctocoele.

FUNDAMEN'TAL, (F.) Fondamental. Some anatomists have called the sacrum Os Fundamentale, because it seems to serve as a base to the vertebral column. The sphenoid bone has likewise been so denominated, from its being situate at the base of the cranium.

FUNDUS, 'the bottom.' (F.) Fond. The base of any organ which ends in a neck, or has an external aperture, as the Fundus vesicæ, F. uteri, &c. Also, the Vulva.

FUNDUS VAGINÆ, Laquear vaginae.

FUNES CORDIS, Columnæ carnae—f. Semicirculares, Semicircular canals—f. Ventriculi, see stomach.

FUNGIFORM PAPILLÆ, (fungus, 'a mushroom,' and forma, 'shape,') see Papillæ of the Tongue.

FUN'GOID, Fungoides, Mycodes, Fungiformis, Fun'giform, (F.) Fongoide, Fongiforme, (fungus, and eidos, 'resemblance,') That which has the shape of, or grows in some measure like a mushroom, as the fungoid or fungiform papillæ of the tongue.

FUNGOID DISEASE, Encephaloid.

FUNGOSITY, Fungositas, Carro luxurians seu fungosa, Ecsarco'ma, Hypersarco'ma, Hypersarco'sis, Prond Flesh, (F.) Fongosité. The quality of that which is fungous:—fungous excrescence, Excrescentia fungosa. The fungosities which arise in wounds or ulcers are easily repressed by gentle compression, dry lint, the sulphas cupri, or other gentle caustics. At times, the more powerful are necessary, and sometimes excision is required.

FUN'GOUS, Fungosus, (F.) Fongueux. Having the characters of fungosity or fungus—as a fungous wound.

FUN'GUS, Mycetes, (F.) Fongus, Champignon. The mushroom order of plants; class Cryptogamia, in the Linnæan system. The fungi or champignons, Ord. Mucoraceæ, (F.) Mucédinées ou Mucorinées, which are found as parasites in man, and the mammalia, are the following, according to M. Robin,—Trichophyton tonsurans, on the hairy scalp; T. sporuloides, on ulcers; Microsporum Adouvi, in the hair follicles; M. mentagrophytes, at the roots of the hair; M. furfur, in the skin; Mucor mucedo, in a cavity of gangrene of the lung; Acho'riou Schönlein's, in the hairy scalp and hair follicles; Aspergillus species, [?] in the meatus auditorius externus; Puccinia favi, in favus; Oidium albicans, in aphthæ; and Champignon du poumon, in the lung.

In Pathology, Fungus is commonly used synonymously with fungosity, mycosis. M. Breschet has proposed to restrict the term fungosity to vegetations which arise on denuded surfaces, and to apply the term fungus to the tumours which form in the substance of the textures, without any external ulceration. Fici and warts, for example, would be fungi of the skin.

FUNGUS ALBUS SALIGNEUS, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Articuli, Spina ventosa—f. Bleeding, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Cancerosus hæmatodes, Hæmatodes F.—f. Cancerosus medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebralis, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebri, Encephalocoele—f. Chirurgorum, Lycoperdon—f. Cynosbati, Bedeguar—f. Faginosus, Morchella esculenta—f. Hæmatodes, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Ignarius, Boletus ignarius—f. Laricis, Boletus laricis—f. of Malta, Cynomorion coccineum—f. Medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Melanoides, Cancer, melanotic—f. Melitensis, Cynomorion coccineum—f. Petræus marinus, Umbiliculus marinus—f. Porriginis, see Porrigo favosa—f.

FUN'IC, Funicus, (F.) Funique, (from funis, 'a cord,') Relating or appertaining to the Funis umbilicalis.

FUNIC BELLOWS' SOUND or SOUFFLE, see Bellows' Sound, funic.

FUNICULI GRAC'ILES, (pl. of Funiculus,) (dim. of funis, 'a cord,') Posterior Median Collumnus or Fasciculi of the medulla oblongata. Along the posterior border of each corpus testiforme, and separated from it by a groove, is a narrow white cord, separated from its fellow by the fissura longitudinalis posterior. The pair of cords are the funiculi graciles. Each funiculus forms an enlargement—processus clavatus—at its upper end, and is then lost in the corpus testiforme.

FUNICULI SILIQUÆ. Longitudinal fibres seen in the groove which separates the corpus olivare from the corpus pyramidale and corpus testiforme. They enclose the base of the corpus olivare,—those which lie on its inner side forming the funiculus internus; and those on its outer side the funiculus externus.

FUNICULUS, (dim. of funis,) Cord—f. Anterior (of the spinal marrow), see Nerve—f. Externus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Internus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Posterior (of the spinal marrow), see Nerve—f. Spermaticus, Spermatic cord—f. Tympani, Chorda tympani.

FUNICULUS UMBILICALIS, Funis umbilicalis, (dim. of funis, 'a cord,') Intestinulum, Vinculum umbilicale, Omphalonæuron, Umbilical cord, Navelstring. (F.) Cordon ombilicale. A cord-like substance, which extends from the placenta to the umbilicus of the fœtus. It is composed of the amnion, an albuminous secretion called the Jelly of the Cord, cellular substance, an umbilical vein, and two umbilical arteries. The former conveys the blood from the placenta to the fœtus—the latter return it. All these parts are surrounded by a sheath—Investitura seu Vagina funiculi umbilicalis. Its usual length is from 16 to 22 inches.

FUNICULUS VARICOSUS, Cirsocele.

FUNIQUE, Funic.

FUNIS, Cord, Lacqueus—f. Argentæus, Medula spinalis—f. Hippocratis, Achillis tendo—f. Umbilicalis, Funiculus umbilicalis.

FUNK, (from fungus [?]) Boletus ignarius.

FUNNEL, see Infundibulum.

FUNNYBONE. When the ulnar nerve is suddenly and forcibly pressed upon above the elbow, it gives occasion to a tingling in the fingers to which it is distributed. In familiar language this is said to be produced by pressing on the "funnybone."

FUR, (low (L.) furra,) Enduit.

FURCELLA, Furcula; (dim. of furca, 'a fork,') The upper part of the sternum; the clavicle. The Fourchette.

FURCELLA INFERIOR, Xiphoid cartilage.

FURCHMÜHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These Bavarian springs contain carbonic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, carbonates of lime and soda; chlorides of lime and magnesium, oxides of iron and magnesium, &c.

FURCIFER, (furca, 'a fork,' and ferre, 'to carry,') Penis.

FURCILLA, (dim. of furca, 'a fork,') Fourchette.

FURCULA, (dim. of furca, 'a fork,') Furcella, Clavicle, Fourchette.

FUREUR UTÉRINE, ('uterine furor,') Nymphomania.

FUR'FUR, (from far, 'grain,') Bran, Pit'yron, Ach'yron, Apobras'ma, Lem'ma, Canta'brum, (F.) Son. The decoction is sometimes employed as an emollient.

FURFURA, Scarf.

FURFURACEOUS, Scurf'y, Canica'ceous, Pityr'ous, Pityr'oides, Pityr'o'des, (F.) Furfuracé. Resembling bran. A name given to eruptions, in which the epidermis is detached in small scales resembling bran. Also, a bran-like sediment observed at times in the urine;—Uri'na furfur'acea, Sedimentum Uri'ne pityr'oides.

FURFURAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURFURATIO, Desquamation, Porrigo, Pityriasis.

FURFURIN, Furfuri'na. By the action of dilute sulphuric acid on corn meal or bran an oil is obtained—furf'urul or furf'urole. By the action of ammonia on this, furf'uramide or furf'urrolamide results; and by the action of dilute potassa on this the alkaloid furfurine is obtained. This was found by Professor Simpson, of Edinburgh, to possess tonic, if not antiperiodic properties.

FURFURISCA, Pityriasis.

FURFUROL, see Furfurine.

FURFUROLAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURIA INFERNALIS. A kind of vermiform insect, scarcely two lines long, common in Sweden, which flies about and stings both man and animals, exciting the most excruciating torture.

FURIBUNDUS, (furere, 'to be mad,') Maniodes.

FURIOSUS, Maniodes.

FURIOUS, Maniodes.

FURMAGE, ([F.] fromage,) Cheese.

FURMENTY, Frument.

FURNAS, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal chalybeate water in St. Michael's, Azores, which contains carbonic acid, and carbonate of iron.

FURONCLE, Furunculus.

FURONCLE GUÉPIER, Wasp's nest fur'uncle or boil. A malignant boil, which generally attacks the nape and region of the neck, and rarely others than old people. Hence it has been called Old People's boil.

FURONCULEUX, Furuncular.

FUROR, Mania—f. Brevis, Rage—f. Mania, Mania—f. Uterinus, Nymphomania.

FURRED, see Enduit.

FURROW, MENTOLABIAL, see Mentolabial furrow.

FURUN'ULAR, Furun'culous, Furunculo'sus, (F.) Furuncul'ous, (furere, 'to rage,?' [?] or from fur, 'a thief'—see Felon.) Relating or appertaining to furunculus,—as 'a furuncular epidemic.'

FURUNCLE, Furunculus.

FURUNCULI ATONICI, Ecthyma—f. Venetriculus, see Furunculus.

FURUN'CULOID, Furunculoi'des, (furunculus, and αἰός, 'resemblance,') Resembling furunculus,—as 'a furunculoïd epidemic.'

FURUN'CLUS, Chi'ados, Chi'oli, Doth'ies, Doth'ion, Furun'culus suppurato'rius, F. Ve'rus, F. benign'us, Phy'na furun'culus, Absces'sus nucleat'us, Fur'uncle, Boil, Bile, (Sc.) Bruick, Bruk, (Prov.) Pinsuceal, (F.) Furuncle, Froncle, Cloo. A small phlegmon, which appears under the form of a conical, hard, circumscribed tumour, having its seat in the dermal texture. At the end of an uncertain period, it becomes pointed, white or yellow, and gives exit to pus mixed with blood. When it breaks, a small, grayish, fibrous mass sometimes appears, which consists of dead areolar tissue. This is called the Core, Set'fast, Sit'fast, Ventric'ulus seu Nu'cleus Furun'culi, (F.) Bourbillon. The abscess does not heal until after its separation. The indications of treatment are,—to discuss by the application of leeches and warm fomentations;—or, if this cannot be done, to encourage suppuration by warm, emollient cataplasms. When suppuration is entirely established, the part may be opened or suffered to break, according to circumstances.

The term blind boil is given to an indolent, imperfectly suppurating, phlegmonous tumour, of the kind described above, which is often seated in a sebaceous follicle, as in Acne indurata.

FURUNCULUS GANGRÆNOSUS, Anthrax—f. Malignus, Anthrax.

FUSARIA VERMICULARIS, (from fusus, 'a spindle,') Ascaris vermicularis—f. Visceralis et renalis, Strongylus gigas.

FUSÉE PURULENTE (F.), (from fusus, 'a spindle,') The long and sinuous route which pus takes, in certain cases, in making its way to the surface. These Fusées almost always form beneath the skin between the muscles; or along aponeuroses, bones, tendons, &c.

FUSEL OIL, ([G.] Fusel, 'bad brandy,') see Oil, fusel.

FUSIBILITY, see Fusion.

FUSIBLE, see Fusion.

FUSION, Fu'sio, Melt'ing, Liquefaction; (fundere, fusum, 'to melt,') In chemistry, the transition of a solid body into a liquid by the aid of heat. Substances capable of such transition are said to be fu'sible; or to be possessed of fusi'bility.

FUSTIC TREE, (from (F.) fustet.) Cladastrix tinctoria.

FUTUTIO, (futvere, 'to have sexual intercourse,') Coition.

FUTUTRIX, Tribas.

G.

THE Greek G, Γ, with the ancient Greek physicians, signified an ounce.

GAB, ([Da.] gab,) Mouth.

GABALLA, Cabal.

GABIR'EA, (γαβίρσα,) A fatty kind of myrrh, mentioned by Dioscorides.

GADUS ÆGLIFINUS, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Callarius, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Carbonarius, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Lota, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Merluccius, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Morrhuæ, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Pollachius, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

GÆEPHAGIA, Geophagism.

GÆEPHAGUS, Geophagist.

GÆOPHAGIA, (γαια, 'earth,' and φαγειν, 'to eat,') Geophagism.

GÆOPHAGUS, Geophagist.

GAGEL, Myrica gale.

GAHET, Cagot.

GAÏAC, Guaiacum.

GAILLET ACCROCHANT, Galium aparine—g. Crochant, Galium aparine—g. Jaune, Galium verum—g. Vrai, Galium verum.

GALNE, Vagina or sheath—g. de l'Apophyse styloïde, Vaginal process of the temporal bone—g. de la Veine porte, Vagina or sheath of the vena porta.

GAITLING, (dinn. of (Sc.) gat, 'a child,') Infans.

GALA, (γαλα,) Milk.

GALACTACRASIA, (galacto, α, and κρᾶσις, 'mixture.') A morbid mixture or constitution of the milk.

GALACTACRATIA, (galacto, α, and κρᾶσις, 'power.') Galactia.

GALACTÆMIA, (galacto, and ἄμα, 'blood.') A condition of the blood in which it contains milk.

GALACTAGOGA, (galacto, and ἄγω, 'to drive.') Galactopœtia.

GALACTAPOSTEMA, gen. Galactapostematis, (galacto, and ἀποστήμα, 'abscess.') Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTIA, Galactirrhœa, Galactorrhœa, Lactis redundantiæ, Polygalactia, Galactozemïa. A redundant flow of milk, either in a female who is suckling, or in one who is not. It may occur without being provoked by suckling. When to a great extent, it sometimes causes wasting; Talbes lactea, T. nutritivum. Dr. Good uses Galactia, in his Nosology, for 'morbid flow or deficiency of milk,' Galactocrati'a.

GALACTICUS, (γαλακτικός.) Lactic.

GALACTIDROSIS, (galacto, and ἴρωσις, 'sweating.') Sweating of milk.

GALACTIFER, (galacto, and ferro, 'to carry.') Galactophorus.

GALACTINE, Casein.

GALACTINUS, Lactic.

GALACTIRRHŒA, (galacto, and ῥέω, 'to flow.') Galactia.

GALACTIS, (γαλακτίς.) Galaxias.

GALACTISCHESIS, Galactoschesis, Lactis retentio, (galacto, and ἴκω, 'to restrain.') Retention or suppression of milk.

GALACTITES, (γαλακτίτης.) Galaxias.

GALACTO, (γαλα, gen. γαλακτός.) in composition, milk.

GALACTOCATARACTA, Cataract, milky.

GALACTOCELĒ, Galactocèle, Galactoncus, LactocelĒ. (galacto, and κήλη, 'a tumour.') Tumor lacteus. Distension of one or more of the galactophorous sinuses by milk. Lactiferous engorgement. The French use the term Poïl for such engorgement; a relic of an idea, as old as Aristotle, that a hair swallowed may have obstructed one of the milk tubes, which must be got rid of by sucking.

The name has, also, been given by Vidal de Cassis to a tumour produced by an effusion of a white liquid into the tunica vaginalis, which he considered to be true milk.

GALACTODEN'DRON UTILĒ, (galacto, and δένδρον, 'a tree.') Palo de Vacca, Arbol de Leche, Coco tree of South America. Family, Urticaceæ. When an incision is made into the trunk, a fluid similar to milk flows out, which is agreeable and nutritious.

GALACTODES, (γαλακτώδης, from galacto, and ὄδης.) In Hippocrates, the term signifies milk-warm, and likewise a milky colour, as of the urine—urina galactodes.

GALACTODIĒ'TA, Diæta lactea seu lactis, (galacto, and ἄμα, 'dict.')

A milk diet.

GALACTODIARRHŒA, Cœliac Flux.

GALACTOGANGLION, (galacto, and γάγγλιον, 'a knot.') Milk knot.

GALACTOHÆMIA, Galacthæmia, Galæmia, (galacto, and ἄμα, 'blood.') Lactis sanguinolenti Excretio. The secretion of bloody or bloodlike milk.

GALACTOID, Galactoides, (γαλακτοειδής, from galacto, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.') Resembling milk.

GALACTOMASTOPARIECTOMA, (galacto, μαστός, 'breast,' and παρεκτείνειν, 'to extend.') Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTOMĒTER, Lactom'eter, (galacto, and μέτρον, 'measure.') An instrument for appreciating the quantity of cream in milk. It is a kind of graduated separatory or épreuvette—the degrees on the scale indicating the thickness of the layer of cream that forms on the surface of the milk.

GALACTOMYCES, (galacto, and μυκήσις, 'a fungus.') See Encephaloid.

GALACTONCUS, (galacto, and ογκος, 'a swelling.') Galactocœle.

GALACTOPH'AGOUS, (γαλακτοφάγος.) Galactoph'agus, Lacti'dorus, sometimes used substantively; (galacto, and φάγω, 'I eat.') That which feeds on milk. A name given to certain people, with whom milk appears to constitute the chief nourishment.

GALACTOPHORA, (galacto, and φέρω, 'I bear.') Galactopœtia.

GALACTOPHORITIS, (galactophorous, (ducts) and itis.) Inflammation of the galactophorous ducts. It has been inaccurately used for ulceration of the top of the nipple towards their orifices.

GALACTOPHOROUS, (galacto, and φέρω, 'to bear.') Lactiferous—g. Ducts, Lactiferous ducts—g. Receptacle, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sac, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sinuses, see Lactiferous vessels.

GALACTOPH'ORUS. Some accoucheurs have given this name to an instrument intended to facilitate sucking, when the faulty conformation of the nipple prevents the child from laying hold of it.

GALACTOPHYGUS, (galacto, and φεγγειν, 'to shun.') That which arrests or disperses the secretion of milk. Hence Galactoph'ygga Medicament'a.

GALACTOPLA'NIA, Metas'tasis seu Aberra'tio seu Vix extraördinariæ lactis, Galactorrhœa erro'nea, (galacto, and πλανη, 'wandering.') Extravasation of milk into the areolar membrane. Secretion of milk elsewhere than from the breasts.

GALACTOPLERO'SIS, (galacto, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.') Redundance of milk.

GALACTOPOEA, (galacto, and ποιω, 'I make.') Galactopœtia.

GALACTOPOESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPOE'TICA, (γαλακτοποιητικά.) Galactoph'ora, Galactago'ga, Galactopoe'a. Substances to which has been attributed the property of favouring the secretion of milk and augmenting its quantity.

GALACTOPOIESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPO'SIA, (γαλακτοποσία, from galacto, and ποσις, 'drink.') The drinking of milk. Treatment of a disease by means of milk.

GALACTOP'OTES, (γαλακτοποσις.) Galactop'otus, Lactip'otor. A drinker of milk. One subjected to a milk diet.

GALACTOPYRA, (galacto, and πυρ, 'fire, fever.') Fever, milk.

GALACTOPYRETUS, (πυρετός, 'fever,') Fever, milk.

GALACTORRHŒA, (galacto, and ῥέω, 'to flow.') Galactia—g. Erronea, Galactoplasia—g. Saccharata, Saccharorrhœa lactea.

GALACTOSACCHARUM, Saccharum lactis.

GALACTOSCHESIS, Galactischesis.

GALACTO'SIS, Galactopoe'isis, Galactopoe'isis, Secre'tio lactis; (γαλακτώσις, from galacto, and ὄσις.) The secretion or formation of milk.

GALACTOSPONGUS, (galacto, and σπγγος 'a sponge, a fungus.') See Encephaloid.

GALACTOT'ROPHĒ, Galactotroph'ia, (γαλακτοτροφία, from galacto, and τροφή, 'nourishment.') Nourishment by means of milk.

GALACTOZEMIA, (galacto, and ζημια, 'loss.') Loss of milk. Also, Galactia.

GALACTU'CHOS, γαλακτούχος, from galactos, and χεῖν, 'to have.') Suckling. Giving milk.

GALACTURIA, (galacto, and ούρον, 'urine.') Chyluria.

GALÆMIA, (gala and αἷμα, 'blood.') Galactohæmia.

GALANGA, Maranta galanga.

GALANGAL, Maranta galanga.

GALANGALE, Cyperus longus.

GALARIPS, Allamanda.

GALARRHÆUS LATHYRIS, (gala, and ῥαῦ, 'to flow.') Euphorbia lathyris—g. Palustris, Euphorbia palustris.

GALAX APHYLLA, (from gala.) G. rotundifolia, Erythrorrhiza rotundifolia; Cor'penter's leaf, Beetleweed; indigenous; Order, Ericaceæ. The root is astringent, and the leaves, in domestic practice, are applied to cuts and wounds.

GALAXIA, (from gala.) Thoracic duct.

GALAXIAS, (γαλαξίας.) Galactites, Galactitis. A milk stone. A stone supposed to be capable of promoting the secretion of milk.

GALBANUM, (γαλβανῦν.) see Bubon galbanum—g. Long-leaved, Bubon galbanum.

GALBULUS, (galbus, 'yellow.') A kind of congenital jaundice, in which the yellow colour continues through life. It is rather a defect in colour than a disease.

GALE, Myrica gale—g. Scotch, Myrica gale—g. Sweet, Myrica gale.

GALE, (from galla, 'a gallnut,' produced by the puncture of an insect. (?) Psora—g. Canine, Psoriasis—g. Epidémique, Eczema—g. Miliàire, Psoriasis—g. Sèche, Lichen, Psoriasis.

GALÉ ODORANT, Myrica gale.

GALEA. A helmet, (γαλεα, 'a cat,' of the skin of which it was formerly made.) A name given to the amios, and also to the bandage of Galen. In Pathology, it indicates a headach affecting the whole head. See, also, Caul.

GALEA APONEUROTICA CAP'ITIS, Ga'lea tendin'ea Santor'ni, Ga'lea cap'itis, Membra'na epicra'nia. The tendinous expansion which unites the frontal and occipital portions of the occipitofrontalis muscle.

GALEAMAUROSIS, (γαλεα, 'a cat,') Amaurotic cat's eye.

GALÉAN'CON, Galian'con, (γαλεα, 'a cat,' 'a weasel,' and αγκων, 'an elbow.') Mustela'neus. One who has two short arms.

GALÉANTHROPY, Galeanthro'pia, (γαλεα, 'a cat,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man,') A variety of melancholy in which the patient believes himself changed into a cat. An affection similar to lycanthropy and cynanthropy.

GALE'GA, (from gala, which it increases [?]) G. officinalis seu vulgaris seu Pes'icia, Ruta cap'ra'ria, Goat's Rue, (F.) Rue de chèvre, Faux Indigo. Ord. Leguminosæ. It is slightly aromatic, and was once used as a sudorific and alexiterial in malignant fevers, &c.

GALEGA APOLLINEA, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Persica, Galega—g. Purpurea, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Toxicaria, Tephrosia toxicaria.

GALEGA VIRGINICA, Tephrosia Virginia'na, Tur'key Pea, Hoar'y Pea, Dev'il's shoe'strings, Virginia Goat's rue or catgut, is used in some parts of the United States as an anthelmintic. The decoction of the root is given.

GALEGA VULGARIS, Galega.

GALENE, Graphites.

GALENEA, Graphites.

GALEN'IC, Galen'ical, Gale'nicus, Gale'nius, (F.) Galénique, (after Galen.) That which relates to the doctrine of Galen or to Galenism. Used, substantively, for drugs that are not chymical.

GALENIC MEDICINE, Galenism.

GA'LENISM, Galen'ic med'icine. The doctrine of Galen.

GA'LENIST, Galenis'ta, Galenis'tes. A follower of the doctrine of Galen.

GALENIUS, Galenic.

GALEOBDOLO, (γαλεοβόλον, from γαλεα, 'a weasel,' and βύλλω, 'to emit a stench,') Galeopsis.

GALEOPDOLO, Galeopsis.

GALEOP'SIDE, Galeopsis grandiflora.

GALEOPSIS, Lamium album.

GALEOP'SIS, Galiop'sis, Galeob'dolon, Galeop'dolon, La'mium ru'brum, Urti'ca in'ers magna' fatid'is'sima, Stach'ys fat'ida, Hedgenettle, (F.) Ortie morte des bois. Ord. Labiateæ. (γαλεα, 'a weasel,' and οφ'is, 'appearance' the corolla having been supposed to resemble the head of the weasel.) This plant was formerly reckoned a vulnerary and anodyne.

GALEOPSIS ANGUSTIFOLIA, G. grandiflora—g. Dubia, G. grandiflora.

GALEOPSIS GRANDIFLO'RA, G. Ochrole'ca seu la'dannu seu angustifolia seu du'bia seu prostrata seu villo'sa, Tetrakit longiflorum, G. Seg'letum, Her'ba Sideri'tidis, (F.) Galeopside, Chanvre bâlard. This plant is regarded in Germany as a 'bitter resolvent.' It is the basis, also, of a celebrated nostrum, the Blankenheimer Tea, called likewise Lieber's pectoral and phthisical herbs (Liebersche Brust oder Auszehrun'gs-Kräuter), which has enjoyed great repute in pectoral complaints. The tops of the plant are given in decoction (℞), boiled in a pint of water for a quarter of an hour.) This quantity to be taken in a day.

GALEOPSIS LADANUM, G. grandiflora—g. Ochroleuca, G. grandiflora—g. Prostrata, G. grandiflora—g. Segetum, G. grandiflora.

GALEOPSIS VERSICOLOR, is possessed of the same virtues.

GALEOPSIS VILLOSA, G. grandiflora.

GALEROPIA, (γαλεπος, 'bright,' and οφ'is, 'vision,') Oxyopia.

GALEUX, (from galle, 'itch,') Psoric.

GA'LIA, (from galle, 'galls,') An ancient composition, in which galls were an ingredient,—the Ga'lia pu'ra. There was also a Ga'lia aromati'ca, moscha'ta seu musca'ta, which consisted of a mixture of several perfumes, such as musk.

GALIANCON, (γαλιακων.) Galeancon.

GALIOPSIS, Galeopsis.

GALVANISATION, Galvanization.

GALVANISM, Galvanis'mus, Electric'itas animalis seu Galvan'ica seu metal'lica, Irritamentum metallicum seu metallicum, Vol'ta'ic or Chemical or Contact Electricity. (After Galvani.) A series of phenomena, consisting in sensible movements, executed by animal parts, which are endowed with irritability, when placed in connexion with two metallic plates of different nature, between which a communication is established by direct contact or by means of a metallic wire. Galvanism has been employed medicinally in the same cases as electricity, and especially in neuralgic affections. It has been applied in the form of plates—'Mansford's plates.' In asthma, for example, a small blister, the size of a dollar, may be placed on the neck over the course of the phrenic and pneumogastric nerves, and another on the side, in the region of the diaphragm. One metal is placed mediately or immediately over the vesicated surface on the neck, and another over that in the side. They are then connected by means of a wire. The new nervous impression, in this way induced, is often signally beneficial.

Galvanic chains have been devised for the same purpose. The one most in use, called, after its inventor, 'Pulvermacher's Hydroelectric Chain Battery,' is a modification of the voltaic pile, capable of being employed topically.

GALVANIZATION, Galvanisatio, (F.) Galvanisation. The medical application of the current of galvanic electricity. The act of affecting with galvanism.

GALVANIZATION, LOCALIZED, Galvanism, localized, (F.) Galvanisation localisée. A mode of employing galvanism, proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, by which, he conceives, the electric influence may be arrested, at will, in the skin: or, without any incision or puncture, the skin may be traversed, and the electric influence be limited to the organs which it covers—to the nerves, muscles, and even the bones. See Electrization, localized.

GALVANOPUNCTURE, Electropuncture.

GAMBA, Patella.

GAMBARUS, (καμπαρος.) Crab.

GAMBIER, see Catechu and Nauclea gambir.

GAMBIR, see Catechu and Nauclea gambir.

GAMBOGIA, Cambogia.

GAMBODIA, Cambogia.

GAMMARUS, (καμαρα, 'an arch,') Crab.

GAM'MATA FERRAMEN'TA. Cauteries, having the shape of the Greek letter Γ, gamma, which were used for cauterizing hernie.

GAMMAUT, Gammot. The Italians, according to Scultetus, gave this name to a kind of crooked bistouri, used for opening abscesses.

GAMMISMUS, Psammismus.

GAMPHE, (γαμφη.) Gena, Maxillary Bone.

GAMPHELE, (γαμφηλη.) Gena, Maxillary Bone.

GANCARDE, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Simple sulphurous springs in the department of Landes, France. The season is from the 1st of May to the 15th of September.

GANGAME, (γαγγαμη, 'a drag net,') Epiploon.

GANGAMUM, (γαγγαμον.) Epiploon.

GANGLIAR, Ganglionic.

GANGLIATED, Ganglionic.

GANG'LIFORM, (ganglion, and forma, 'form,') Gang'lioform, Gang'liformis. Having the shape of a ganglion.

GANGLIITIS, (ganglion and itis.) Ganglionitis.

GANGLIOLUM, (dim. of ganglion.) A small ganglion.

GANGLIOMA, (ganglion and oma.) A tumour of the glands or of the lymphatic ganglions; and especially epithelioma of them.

GANG'LION, (γαγγλιον, 'a knot,') Gang'lion. In anatomy, a name generally given to a knot-like enlargement in the course of a nerve. It is applied, however, to organs differing considerably from each other in size, colour, texture, functions, &c. They are divided into gland'iform, lymphatic, and ner'vous. 1. Gland'iform gang'lions, called also ad'enoïd, vas'cular, and sanguin'eous gang'lions: blind, apor'ic, driet'less, blood, and vas'cular glands.—gland'ulæ vasculo'sæ; gland'ulæ spur'ria, &c., are organs of whose functions we are, in general, ignorant; and which have the appearance of glands. They are formed of agglomerated globules, pervaded by blood-vessels surrounded by areolar membrane, and contain a milky or yellowish fluid. To this class belong the spleen, thymus, thyroid, and supra-renal glands. They are, doubtless, concerned in sanguification. 2. Lymphatic gang'lions. See Conglobate. 3. Ner'vous gang'lions, Gang'lia seu Ganglio'nes seu No'di seu Nodi Nervo'rum, Tumores seu Plex'us ganglioform'es, Plex'us glandifor'mes, Tuber'cula nodosa Nervo'rum, Divertic'ula spirituum animalium, Gang'lia of increase, Form'ative gang'lia. Enlargements or knots in the course of a nerve. They belong, in general, to the system of the great sympathetic. One exists on the posterior root of every spinal nerve, and on one cerebral,—the 5th. Bichat regarded them as so many small brains, or centres of nervous action, independent of the encephalon, and intended exclusively for organic life. Being formed by the union of the cerebral and spinal nerves, they may send out the influence of both these nervous centres to the parts to which the nerves proceeding from them are distributed. Ganglia are chiefly composed of vesicular neurine; and appear to be concerned in the formation and dispensation of nerve power.

GANGLION, Empy'ma encyst'is gang'lion. A globular, hard, indolent tumour, without change in the colour of the skin; of a size varying from that of a pea, to that of an egg, and always situate in the course of a tendon. The tumour is formed of a viscid, albuminous fluid, contained in a cyst of greater or less thickness. The cyst is sometimes loose; but in the majority of cases it communicates, by a narrow footstalk, with the sheath of a tendon, or even with the synovial capsule of a neighbouring articulation. The causes are generally unknown. The treatment consists in compression, percussion, the use of disiccants, extirpation, or incision.

GANGLIONARY, Ganglionic.

GANGLIONES NERVORUM, Ganglions, nervous.

GANGLIONIC, Ganglion'icous, Gang'lionary, Gang'liar, Gang'liated, from ganglion, (F.) Ganglionnaire. Relating to ganglia. Nerves are so called in the course of which ganglions are met with; as the greater part of the branches of the great sympathetic or trisplanchnic, the posterior roots of the spinal nerves, &c. Ganglion'ics, according to Dr. Pereira, are agents, which affect the ganglionic or great sympathetic system of nerves (?).—as stimulants and sedatives.

GANGLIONIC NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve—g. Nervous System, see Trisplanchnic nerve.

GANGLIONITIS, Gangliit'is, (ganglion, and itis.) Inflammation of a nervous ganglion. Sometimes used for inflammation of a lymphatic ganglion.

GANGLIONITIS PERIPHERICA et MEDULLARIS, Cholera.

GANGLIONNAIRE, Ganglionic.

GANGLIUM, Ganglion—g. Gasseri, Ganglion of Gasser.

GANGRÆNICUS, (γαγγραινωσ.) Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNODES, (gangræna, and odes.) Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNOP'SIS, (gangræna, and οψις, 'the countenance,') Cancer aquaticus; also, gangrenous inflammation of the eyelids; Blepharitis gangrenosa.

GANGRÆNO'SIS, (γαγγραινωσις, from gangræna, and osis.) Gangræscencia. The state of being gangrenous or of becoming gangrenous.

GANGRE-NOSUS, Gangrenous.

GANGRENE, Gangræna, Cancræna, Hot mortification, (F.) Gangrène, G. Chaude, Asphyxie des parties. Privation of life or partial death of an organ. Authors have generally distinguished mortification into two stages; naming the first incipient mortification or gangrene. It is attended with a sudden diminution of feeling in the part affected; livid discoloration; detachment of the cuticle, under which a turbid fluid is effused; with crepitation, owing to the disengagement of air into the areolar texture. When the part has become quite black, and incapable of all feeling, circulation, and life, it constitutes the second stage, or mortification, and is called phacelus. Gangrene, however, is frequently used synonymously with mortification.—local asphyxia being the term employed for that condition, in which the parts are in a state of suspended animation, and, consequently, susceptible of resuscitation. When the part is filled with fluid entering into putrefaction, the affection is called humid gangrene, (F.) Gangrène humide: on the other hand, when it is dry and shrivelled, it constitutes dry gangrene; (F.) Gangrène sèche. To this class belongs the gangræna senilis, G. Potii, Presby-phacelus, or spontaneous gangrene of old people, which rarely admits of cure. Whatever may be the kind of gangrene, it may be caused by violent inflammation, contusion, a burn, congelation, the ligature of a large arterial trunk, or by some inappreciable internal cause.

The treatment, both of external and internal gangrene, varies according to the causes which produce it. Gangrene from excessive inflammation is obviated by antiphlogistics; and that from intense cold by cautiously restoring the circulation by cold frictions, &c. When the gangrene has become developed, the separation of the eschars must be encouraged by emollient applications, if there be considerable reaction; or by tonics and stimulants, if the reaction be insufficient.

GANGRÈNEUX, Gangrenous.

GANGRENOUS, Gangrænicus, Gangrænosus, Gangrænosus, (F.) Gangrèneux. Affected with or relating to gangrene.

GANGRENOUS EROSION OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

GANJAH, Gunjah.

GANNAL'S SOLUTION, see Alumina Acetas.

GANTELET (F.), Chirotheca, Fascia digitalis, Gantlet; (from (F.) gant, 'a glove.') A sort of bandage which envelops the hand and fingers like a glove. It is made with a long roller, about an inch broad, and is applied so that the fingers are covered to their tips, when it is called Gantelet entier or complet. The Demigantelet includes only the hand and base of the fingers. Both bandages are used in fractures and luxations of the fingers, burns of the hand, &c. See Chirotheca.

GAOL CACHEXIA, see Cachexia, gaol.

GAPING, (Sax. geapan, 'to gape.') Yawning.

GARANÇE, Rubia.

GARCINIA CAMBO'GIA, G. seu Cambogia gutta, Mangosta'na Cambogia. Ord. Guttifera. (after Dr. L. Garcin, an English traveller, who accurately described it.) A tree of Ceylon, Family, Guttifera, which affords a concrete juice similar to Gamboge.

GARCINIA GUTTA, G. Cambogia.

GARCINIA MANGOSTA'NA, Mangosta'na Garcinia. The systematic name of the Mangostan, Mangonstan, Mangostine or Mangosteen tree, Mangosta'na. It grows in great abundance in Java and the Molucca islands. The fruit, which is about the size of an orange, is delicious, and is eaten in almost every disorder. The dried bark is used medicinally in dysentery and tenesmus: and a strong decoction has been much esteemed in ulcerated sore throat.

GARCINIA PURPU'REA. From this species a concrete oil of Mangosteen is obtained, which is called, in India, Ko'kum butter, Kokum being the Indian name of Mangosteen. The oil is extracted from the fruit by boiling. It is used in India in cases of chaps.

GARÇON, (old (F.) gars, 'a lad.') Boy.

GARDE-MALADE, (garder, 'to take care of,' and malade, 'a sick person.')

GARDENIA DUMETORUM, (after Dr. Alex. Garden, of Carolina,) Randia dumetorum—g. Spinosa, G. dumetorum.

GARDEROBE, Artemisia abrotanum.

GARDEROBES, Fœces.

GARDOUCHES, Vesiculae seminales.

GARETUM, (low [L.]) Poples.

GARGALISMUS, Gargalus.

GARGALUS, (γαργαλος, from γαργαλιζω, 'to tickle.')

GARGAREON, (γαργαρον), Uvula.

GARGARISATIO, Gargarism.

GAR'GARISM, Gargaris'mus, Gargaris'ma, Anagargalic'ton, Gargaris'mum, Collu'tio, Diacly's'ma, Anagargaris'ton, Anagargaris'mus, Anaco-chylis'mus, Anaco-chylis'mus, Titillamentum (from γαργαριζω, 'I wash the mouth,' 'I gargle, formed by onomatopœia.) A gargle. Any liquid medicine intended to be retained in the mouth, for a certain time, and to be thrown in contact with the uvula, velum pendulum, tonsils, &c. For this purpose, the liquid is agitated by the air issuing from the larynx, the head being thrown back. Gargles are employed in cynanche tonsillar and other diseases of the fauces, and are made of stimulants, sedatives, astringents, refrigerants, &c., according to circumstances.

The process is termed garg'ling, gargarisatio. The term collu'torium or collu'torium oris is generally restricted to a wash for the mouth.

GARGET, Phytolacca decandra.

GARGLE, Gargarism.

GARGLING, see Gargarism.

GARGUILLEMENT, (formed, like Gargarism, by onomatopœia.) Borborygmus, Gurgling. See Râle muqueux.

GA'ROU BARK, Daphne gnidium.

GARETUM, Poples.

GARROPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata.

GARROT', (F.) Garrot, (garrotter, 'to tie fast.')

A compressing bandage, tightened by twisting a small cylinder of wood, by which the arteries of a limb are compressed, for the purpose of suspending the flow of blood in cases of hemorrhage, aneurism, amputation, &c.

GARROTILL, Cynanche maligna.

GARRULITAS, (garric, 'to chatter.')

GARULEUM BIPINNA'TUM, (corr. from cæruleum, 'blue'—the flowers.) A South African plant, Ord. Composite; known under the name Snake-root, from its reputed effects as an antidote to the bites of venomous serpents. The root is a great favourite with the Boers in chest diseases—as asthma—and in affections in which a free secretion from the mucous membrane of the bronchia is indicated. It has diaphoretic properties, and acts as a diuretic in gout and dropsy. It is given in decoction or tincture. Dr. Pappé thinks the root ought to have a place in the Materia Medica.

GARUM, (γαρον.) Licula'men, Liqua'men. The ancient Romans gave this name to a kind of pickle made by collecting the liquor which flowed from a salted and half-putrefied fish, (γαρος.) It was used as a condiment.

GARVANCE, Cicer arietinum.

GASPING, (same etymon as gaping [?]), Anhelatio.

GASTEIN, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Gastein or Gasteiner Wildbad is in the Noric Alps, Austria. The waters are thermal. Temp. 106° to 118° Fah. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, chloride of potassium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, magnesia, manganese, iron, &c.

GAS'TER, (ἡ στήθη, 'belly.') The abdomen. At times, but rarely, the uterus. Also, the stomach, in particular.

GASTER MUSCULI, see Muscle.

GASTERALGIA, Gastralgia.

GASTERANAX, (gaster, and αναξ, 'a king.') A name given by Dolæus to a hypothetical vital principle, corresponding to the Archæus of Van Helmont, the seat of which he placed in the lower belly. See Bithnimalca.

GASTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Gasterangemphraxis.

GASTERANGEMPHRAX'IS, Gasterangemphrax'is, Gasteremphrax'is. Obstruction of the pylorus; (gaster, and αγχω, 'I strangle,' and εμφρασις, 'I obstruct.') Also, and properly, obstruction or congestion of the vessels of the stomach.

GASTÉRASE, (from gaster.) Pepsin.

GASTERASTHEN'IA, Imbecill'itus, seu Aton'ia seu Lax'itas ventriculi; (gaster, and ασθενεια, 'debility.') Debility of the stomach.

GASTRELCO'TASIS, Gastreco'tasia, Gastraneurys'ma, Dilata'tio ventriculi; (gastro, and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of the stomach.

GASTRELCOBROSIS, (gastro, ελκος, 'ulcer,' and βρωσις, 'eating,') Gastrobro'sis ulcerosa.

GASTRELCO'SIS, Ulcera'tio seu Erculcern'tio seu Ul'cera ventriculi, (gastro, ad ελκος, 'ulceration,') Ulceration of the stomach. When accompanied with hectic, it constitutes Gastrophth'is, Gastroph'thoë.

GASTRELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean Section.

GASTRENEPHALO'MA, Gastromyelo'ma, Gastromyelo'sis, Gastroencephalo'sis, (gastro, εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,' and ονια.) Encephaloid of the stomach.

GASTRENCHYTA, (gastro, εν, and χυνω, 'to pour,') Stomach pump.

GASTRENERIC, Gastroentericus.

GASTRENERITIC, Gastroenteritic

GASTRENERITIS, Gastroenteritis.

GASTRETEROMALA'CIA, Gastreteromala'cia's, (gastro, εντερον, 'intestine,' and μαλακια, 'softening,') Softening of the stomach and intestines.

GASTREPATICUS, Gastrohepatic.

GASTREPATIT'IS, Inflammat'io ventriculi et hepatis; (gastro, and hepatitis.) Inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTREPIPLOICUS, Gastroëpiloic.

GASTRETHIS'IA; (gastro, and ερεθισμα, 'I irritate,') Irritation of the stomach.

GAST'RIC, Gast'ricus; (from gaster.) Belonging or relating to the stomach.

GASTRIC ACIDS, see Gastric juice.

GASTRIC AR'TERIES, are three in number, Arteria gastro-epiplo'ica dex'tra, A. gastro-epiplo'ica sinis'tra, and A. corona'tio ventriculi.

GASTRIC JUICE, Suc'cus gast'ricus, Men'strum seu Fermentum ventriculi, (F.) Suc Gastrique, Gast'ric Acid. A fluid, secreted from the mucous membrane of the stomach. As met with, it is a mixture of the fluids secreted by that organ with those of the supra-diaphragmatic portion of the alimentary canal. Owing to such admixture, the most contrary properties have been assigned to it. That such a fluid is secreted, which concurs powerfully in digestion, is evident from many considerations, and has been positively proved by the author and numerous others. It was found by him to contain, in man, chlorohydric and acetic acids, which are associated with a ferment, pepsin. The gastric fluid in cases of sudden death sometimes corrodes and perforates the stomach; giving rise to interesting questions in medical jurisprudence.

GASTRIC NERVES. The two cords by which the pneumogastric nerves terminate, and which descend on the two surfaces of the stomach; as well as the filaments of the great sympathetic, which accompany the gastric vessels.

GASTRIC PLEX'US, Plexus corona'rius ventriculi. A nervous net-work, formed by the solar plexus. It accompanies the Arteria corona'ria ventriculi, and passes along the lesser curvature of the stomach, to which it gives branches.

GASTRIC VEINS follow the same distribution as the arteries, and open into the Vena porta abdominalis.

GASTRICISM, Gastricis'mus, (from gaster.) A name by which is designated the medical theory, that refers all, or almost all, diseases to an accumulation of saburræ in the digestive passages.

GASTRICITÈ, Embarras gastrique.

GASTRILQ'UE, (gastro, and loquor, 'I speak,') Engastrimyth.

GASTRILQUIST, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILQUUS, Engastrimyth.

GASTRIMARGUS, (γαστρίμαργος, from gastro, and μαργω, 'I rage,') Glutton.

GASTRINUM, Potash

GASTRISMUS, (γαστρίσμος,) Gluttony, see Saburra.

GASTRIT'IC, Gastriticus, (gastro, and itis.) Relating to gastritis.

GASTRITIS, Ventriculi inflammatio, Caum'a seu Empres'sa seu Cardialgia inflammato'ria, Feb'ris stomach'ica inflammato'ria, Inflammat'io gastrit'is, I. ventriculi seu stom'achi, Phleg'monè ventriculi, Inflammat'ion of the stom'ach, (F.) Inflammat'ion de l'Estomac, Gastrite, Catarrhe gastrique. A disease, characterized by pyrexia; great anxiety; heat and pain in the epigastrium, increased by taking any thing into the stomach; vomiting and hiccup. Gastritis may either be seated in the peritoneal or mucous coat. It is most frequently in the latter—Esogastritis, Endogastritis, Gastrumycoderit'is, Gastrit'is mucosa—being excited directly by acrid ingesta. It requires the most active treatment;—bleeding, blistering, fomentations, diluents, &c. Some degree of inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach was considered by the followers of Broussais to be present in almost all fevers; and the various forms of dyspepsia have been supposed by some to be nothing more than chronic endogastrit'is.

GASTRITIS ARTHRITICA, Cœliagra.

GASTRO, (from gaster,) in composition, the stomach, or belly.

GASTROARTHIRITIS, Gout—g. Ataxia, Dyspepsia—g. Atonia, Dyspepsia—g. Bronchitis, Fever, adenomenigeal—g. Enterite intense, Synocha—g. Enterite, with nervous affection of the brain, see Typhus—g. Enteritis, follicular, Dothinenteritis; see Typhus.

GASTROBRO'SIS, Perforatio ventriculi, Gastrorrhex'is, (F.) Perforatio de l'Estomac; (gastro, and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing,') Corrosion and perforation of the stomach.

GASTROBRO'SIS ULCERO'SA, Gastrocubro'sis. Destruction and perforation of the coats of the stomach by ulceration.

GASTROCE'LE, Gastrocele, (gastro, and κλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia of the stom'ach, Hernia ventriculi, (F.) Hernia de l'Estomac. Hernia formed by the stomach through the upper part of the linea alba: a disease, the existence of which has been doubted by many. See Epigastrocele.

GASTROCEPHALITIS, (gastro, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis.) Inflammation of the stomach and head,—a not uncommon concomitant of certain malignant fevers.

GASTROCHOLOSIS, (gastro, χολη, 'bile,' and osis.) Fever, gastric.

GASTROCNEME, (gastro, and κνημη, 'the leg,') Sura.

GASTROCNEMIA, (γαστροκνημια,) Sura.

GASTROCNEMII. The name of the two fleshy masses which occupy the posterior and superficial part of the leg, Gemelli; (F.) Gastrocnemius, Jumeaux de la jambe, Bifémoro-calcaneiens—(Ch. ;) the two constituting the Gastrocnemius externus, of English anatomists. These muscles are distinguished into internal and external, which are distinct above, but united at their inferior extremity. They are long, flat, and thick; and arise—the former from the posterior part of the outer condyle of the femur; the latter, from the posterior part of the inner condyle of the same bone. The aponeurosis, which unites these muscles below, joins with that of the Solaris, and forms with it a large tendon, which, under the name Tendo Achillis, is inserted at the posterior part of the calcaneum. These muscles extend the foot on the leg, and the leg on the foot. They can, also, bend the leg and the thigh reciprocally on each other. For the Gastrocnemius internus, see Soleus.

GASTROCNEMIUM, Sura.

GASTROCELIACUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCELIACUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCOLIC, see Epiploon, gastrocolic.

GASTROCOLICA, Cardialgia.

GASTROCOLIT'IS, (gastro, κωλον, 'colon,' and itis.) Inflammation of the stomach and colon.

GASTROCOLPOTOMIA, (gastro, κολπος, 'vagina,' and τομη, 'section,') see Cæsarean section.

GASTRODIDYMUS, Gastrodymus, Didymus Symphogast'rius, Psod'ymsus; (gastro, and δίδυμος, 'a twin,') A monstrosity in which twins are united by the abdomen.

GASTRODUODENAL, Gastroduodena'lis. Relating to the stomach and duodenum.

GASTRODUODENIT'IS, (F.) Gastro-duodénite. Inflammation of the stomach and duodenum, an affection, which figured largely in the system of Broussais. See Gastro-enteritis.

GASTRODUODENOPYRA, (gastro, duodenum, and πυρ, 'fire or fever,') Fever, adenomenigeal.

GASTRODYNE, (gastro, and δύνη, 'pain,') Cardialgia.

GASTRODYNIA, Cardialgia—g. Flatulenta. Colica flatulenta.

GASTROELYTROTOMIA, (gastro, ελυτρον, 'vagina,' and τομη, 'section,') see Cæsarean section.

GASTROËNTERAL'GIA, (gastro, εντερον, 'in testine,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the stomach and intestine.

GASTROËNTER'IC, Gastroenter'icus, Gastroenter'ic, Gastroenter'icus, Gastroëntes'tinal, (gastro, and εντερον, 'intestine,') Relating to the stomach and intestine.

GASTROËNTERITE, Gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERIT'IC, Gastroenterit'icus, Gastroenterit'ic, Gastroenterit'icus, (gastro, εντερον, 'intestine,' and itis.) Relating to gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERIT'IS, Gastroenterit'is, Inflammat'io ventriculi et Intestinorum, (F.) Gastroenterite, Gastroenter'ic disease. Inflammation of the stomach and small intestine. According to Broussais, the essential fevers of authors are gastro-enteritis, simple, or complicated.

GASTROËPIPLOIC, Gastroëpiplo'icus, Gastroëpiplo'icus, (gastro, and επιπloon, 'the epiploon,') That which relates to the stomach and epiploon.

GASTROËPIPLOIC ARTERIES, Gastric inferior arteries, are two in number, and distinguished into right and left. The right, also called Gastrohepat'ic, Gastric inferior dex'tra, Gastroëpiplo'ica dex'tra, is furnished by the hepatic artery. It descends behind the pylorus, and passes from right to left, along the great curvature of the stomach. It gives branches to the pancreas, duodenum, stomach, omentum majus, and terminates by anastomosing with the Gastroëpiplo'ica sinis'tra seu inferior sinis'tra. This—the left—arises from the splenic artery. It is of considerable magnitude, and passes from left to right, along the great curvature of the stomach, distributing its branches more particularly to the stomach and omentum majus. It terminates by joining the right gastroëpiploic.

GASTROËPIPLOIC GANG'LIONS are the lymphatic ganglions or glands, situated towards the great curvature of the stomach, between the two anterior laminae of the omentum majus.

GASTROËPIPLOIC VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into right and left. They empty themselves;—the former, into the superior mesenteric: the latter, into the splenic vein.

GASTROHÆMORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTROHEPAT'IC, Gastrohepat'icus, Hepato-gastr'icus, Gastrohepat'ic, (gastro, and ήπαρ, gen. ήπατος, 'the liver,') Relating to the stomach and liver. This name has been given to several organs. See Epiploon, gastrohepat'ic, &c.

GASTROHEPATITIS, (gastro, 'ήπαρ', 'hepat'ic,

'liver,' and itis.) Simultaneous inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTROHYSTERTOMY, (gastro, 'stomach,' hystera, 'uterus,' and tomē, 'section,') Cæsarean section.

GASTROINTESTINAL, Gastroënteric.

GASTROLIENALIS, (gastro, and lien, 'the spleen,') Gastroplenic.

GASTROLITHIASIS, (gastro, and lithiasis.) The formation of concretions, gastrolithi, in the stomach.

GASTROMALACIA, Gastromalaxia.

GASTROMALAXIA, Gastromalacia, Gastromalaco'sis, Malucogaster, Malax's ventriculi, Dissolutio ventriculi, Emollitio ventriculi, Pseudophlogo'sis ventriculi resolutiva et colligativa, Metamorpho'sis ventriculi gelatiniformis, Erosio et perforatio epoutanea ventriculi, Resolutio et diarrho'sis ventriculi, (F.) Ramollissement de l'Estomac, (gastro, and μαλαξίς, 'softening,') Softening of the stomach, induced at times by the gastric secretions after death,—Resolutio ventriculi anteopertica.

GASTROMANTIS, (gastro, and ματις, 'a diviner,') Engastrimyth.

GASTROMELES, (gastro, and μελος, 'a limb,') A monster with one or more supernumerary limbs on the abdomen.

GASTROME'NIA, (gastro, and μην, 'a month,') Vicarious menstruation from the stomach.

GASTROMENINGITIS, (gastro, and μηνίγτις, 'inflammation of the membranes of the brain,') Fever, gastric.

GASTROMETROTOMY, (gastro, μητρα, 'the uterus,' and τομή, 'section,') Cæsarean section.

GASTROMYCODERIS, (gastro, μυκος, 'mucus,' and δερίς, 'skin,') See Stomach.

GASTROMYCODERITIS, (itis, 'inflammation,') See Gastritis.

GASTROME'LOMA, (gastro, μελος, 'medulla, marrow,' and the suffix oma.) Gastroencephaloma.

GASTRONOSUS, (gastro, and νοσος, 'a disease,') Gastropathy.

GASTROPARALYSIS, Gastroparēgia, Paralysis ventriculi, (gastro, and paralysis.) Paralysis of the stomach.

GASTROP'ATHY, Gastropathia, Gastron'osus, Gastron'usis, (gastro, and πάθος, 'disease,') Disease of the stomach.

GASTROPERIODY'NIA, (gastro, περί, 'around,' and όδυνη, 'pain,') Sool (India). A violent periodical neuralgic pain at the pit of the stomach, not uncommon in Hindoostan.

GASTROPHREN'IC, Gastrophrenicus, (gastro, and φρένες, 'the diaphragm,') Belonging to the stomach and diaphragm.

GASTROPHRENIC LIGAMENT is a reflection of the peritoneum, which descends from the inferior surface of the diaphragm to the cardia.

GASTROPH'THISIS, (gastro, and φθίω, 'I waste away,') Gastroleosis.

GASTROPH'THOE, Gastroleosis.

GASTROPLEGIA, (gastro, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Gastroparalysis.

GASTROPYRA, (gastro, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, gastric.

GASTROPYRETUS, Fever, gastric.

GASTRO'RAPHY, Gastro'raphy, Gastrorrhaphia, Gastro'r raphē, Sutura abdominalis, (gastro, and ράφή, 'a suture,') The suture used for uniting wounds penetrating the abdomen, when they are too extensive or too unequal to be kept in contact by position, adhesive plaster, or appropriate bandages. The interrupted and quilled sutures are those chiefly employed.

GASTRO'RRHAGIA, (gastro, and ρήγνυμι, 'to break forth,') Hæmatemesis.

GASTRO'RRHENSIS, (gastro, and ρήξις, 'rupture,') Gastrobrosis.

GASTRO'RRHŒA, (gastro, and ῥέω, 'I flow,')

Blennorrhœa seu Fluxus ventriculi, (F.) Flu-migneux de l'estomac, Catarrhe stomaci. A morbid condition of the stomach, which consists in the secretion of an excessive quantity of mucus from the lining membrane. Also, Cœlicæ flux.

GASTROSCIR'RHUS, Induratio ventriculi scirrhusa, Scirrhus seu Carcinoma ventriculi. Scirrhus induration or cancer of the stomach.

GASTROSCOPIA, (gastro, and σκοπεω, 'I examine,') Abdominoscopia.

GASTRO'SES, (from gaster, and osis.) A generic name for diseases which are seated in the stomach.

GASTROSPLE'NIC, Gastrosplicus, Gastroliena'lis, (gastro, and σπλην, 'the spleen,') Relating to stomach and spleen.

GASTROSTENOSIS, (gastro, στενω, 'contracted,' and osis.) Stricture of the stomach.

GASTROSTENOSIS CARDIACA or PYLORICA. Narrowness of the cardiac and pyloric orifices of the stomach from cancer of that organ.

GASTROT'OMY, (gastro, and τομή, 'section,') Several different operations have been so called.

1. The Cæsarean Section. 2. An incision made into the abdomen for the purpose of removing some internal strangulation or volvulus, or to reduce hernia, Laparotomy; and, 3. The opening made in the stomach to remove a foreign body which has passed into it through the œsophagus.

GASTRYP'ERNEURIA, (gastro, ὑπερ, 'in excess,' and νευρον, 'a nerve,') Morbidly increased activity of the nerves of the stomach.

GÂTEAU FÉBRILE, ('fever cake,') Ague cake.

GATEUX, ([F. from gater, 'to spoil,') A name given in the insane hospitals, and in the hospitals for incurables and the aged in France, to persons who are incapable of attending to themselves, and have lost all sense of cleanliness.

GATHERING, Abscess, Suppuration.

GATILLIER, Vitex.

GAUDIA FEDA, ('foul enjoyments,') Masturbation.

GAULTHERIA, Gaultheria procumbens, Gaultheria repens (?), Mountain Tea, Bat'ridge Ber'ry, Ber'ried Tea, Grouse'berry, Deer'berry, Spice'berry, Tea'berry, Red berry, Win'tergreen, Red berry Tea, Ground'berry, Ground 'ry, Ground holly, Hill ber'ry, Box ber'ry, Chequer ber'ry, (F.) Gaulthérie, Palomnier, Thé du Canada, (after Dr. Gaulthier, of Quebec.) Ord. Ericaceæ. An American plant, the leaves of which—Gaultheria (Ph. U. S.)—are one of the principal articles of the materia medica of some Indian tribes. The infusion of the leaves is stimulant and anodyne, and is said to have been used with advantage in asthma. The oil—O'leum Gaultherie, Ph. U. S.—is used, chiefly on account of its pleasant flavour, to cover the taste of other medicines.

GAUNTLET, (from gant, 'a glove,') Gantelet.

GAUQUAVA, Smilax China.

GAUTIERA REPENS (?), Gaultheria.

GAY FEATHER, Liatris spicata.

GAYAC, Guaiaecum.

GAYLUSSACIA RESINOSA, Vaccinium resinosum, Black Huck'leberry. Order, Ericaceæ. (after Gay-Lussac.) An indigenous plant, whose fruit is sweet and agreeable. The leaves and root, as well as those of GAYLUSSACIA DUMOSA, Dwarf huckleberry, and of G. FRONDOSA, Blue tangle, indigenous, are used in decoction as astringents in diarrhœa, sore throat, &c.

GAZ, Gaz, (Sax. gajt, [G.] Geist, 'spirit,') Air. Van Helmont first designated by this name—the etymology of which is not certain—the carbonic acid developed in the vinous fermentation. Afterwards, the term was appropriated to every permanently elastic fluid; that is, which preserves its aëriiform state at all temperatures; and ultimately it was extended to all æriform bodies; which were divided into permanent and non-permanent gases. The latter are generally termed vapours; they return to the liquid state, when a portion of their caloric is abstracted. The permanent gases, or gazes properly so called, are numerous, and may be divided into three sections with regard to their effects on the animal economy.

- |   |   |   |
|---|---|---|
| 1. Irrespirablegazes.           | { | Ammoniacal gaz, chlorohydric acid gas, deutoxide of nitrogen, nitrous acid gaz, and chlorine.                           |
| 2. Negatively deleteriousgazes. |   | Hydrogen, nitrogen, carbonic acid.  |
| 3. Positively deleteriousgazes. |   | Oxygen, protoxide of nitrogen, carburetted hydrogen, carbonic oxide, sulphuretted hydrogen, and arseniuretted hydrogen. |

It is proper to remark that the term respirable has been very differently employed by different writers. Sometimes it has meant the power of supporting life when applied to the blood in the lungs. At others, all gases have been deemed irrespirable which are incapable of being introduced into the lungs by voluntary efforts,—without any relation to their power of maintaining vitality; and this is perhaps the best sense. The gazes were at one time employed in medicine under great expectations, especially by the enthusiastic Beddoes; but they are now scarcely ever had recourse to. They differ considerably in their effects on the animal economy. Some, as oxygen, are exciting; others, as azote, depressing; whilst others, again, as the Protoxide of nitrogen or laughing gas, produce the most singular effects.

GAZ DES BALLONS, ('gaz of the balloons,') Hydrogen.

GAZ, PULMONARY, Gaz of the lungs. A name given to the expired air, which contains, besides common air, an increase of carbonic acid, water, and some animal matter.

GAZ SAN'GUINIS, ('gas of blood,') Gaz animalis sanguinis, Hal'itus seu Aur'a seu Va'por sanguinis, Spiritus rosi'ferus, Hæmat'mus. The halitus, or vapour, given off by freshly drawn blood.

GAZEL, Ribes nigrum.

GAZELLE, Antilopus.

GAZ'EOUS or GA'ZEOUS, Gaseous, Gazeo'sus, (F.) Gazeux. Relating or appertaining to, or having the form or character of, gas.

GAZ'OGENE, (gas, and γενωω, 'I generate.')

A name given to a portable apparatus for preparing aerated or carbonated water,—as the soda water of the shops.

GAZEUX, Gazeous.

GE'ANT, Giant.

GE'ANTISME, see Giant.

GE'BARPULVER, ('labor-powder,') Ergot.

GEDE'OLA. The convex part of the liver, according to Du Cange.

GEILNAU, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Geilnau is a village in the grand duchy of Nassau, at no great distance from Frankfort. The waters contain carbonic acid, carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda, chloride of sodium, and carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron.

GEISMAR, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. The mineral waters of Geismar, in Bavaria, are acidulous chalybeates.

GEISO'MA, (γεισωμα, like γεισων, 'the eaves of a house.')

Geisum.

GEIS'UM, (γεισων,) Gei'son. The part of the frontal bone over the eyes.

GELAPPIUM, (from Jalapa or Xalapa, in Mexico.) Convolvulus jalapa.

GELASINI DENTES, (γελαστοι, from γελωω, 'I laugh,')

28

GELASMUS, (from γελωω, 'I laugh.')

Canine laugh.

GELATIG'ENOUS, (gelatin, and γενωω or γενωωω, 'I engender.')

That which forms gelatinous structure. Dr. Carpenter restricts the term to substances yielding gelatin. The propriety of this may well be questioned.

GEL'ATIN, Gel'atine, Gelati'na, Gal're'da, (F.) Gelatine, Gêlée, 'gelly or jelly,' (from gelare, 'to freeze, congeal.')

An immediate animal principle. It is semitransparent, insipid, inodorous, insoluble in cold water, very soluble in hot, which it thickens, and transforms into jelly on cooling. Gelatin is a nutritious substance; and, when dissolved in a considerable quantity of water, forms an emollient fluid, much used in therapeutics, but not the most easy of digestion. Two forms of gelatin are admitted—the one glutin or gelatin proper; the other chondrin.

GELATIN OF WHAR'TON, Gelati'na Whartoniana, Jelly of the Cord. A soft, dense, fluid, gelatinous substance, which envelops the umbilical cord, and is conceived by some to be inservient to the nutrition of the fetus.

GELATINA AQUATICA, ('aquatic gelatin,') Brasenia hydropeltis.

GÉLATINE DES CARILLAGES, ('gelatin of cartilages,') Chondrin.

GELATINIFORM MATTER OF THE INTES'TINE, Albuminosæ.

GELAT'INOUS, Gelati'nosus, (F.) Gélatineux. Relating or appertaining to or having the character or appearance of gelatin or jelly. Viscid.

GELATINOUS NERVE-FIBRE, see Nerve fibres.

GELATIO, (gelare, gelatum, 'to freeze, congeal.')

Congelation.

GELDING, ([G.] gelten, 'to castrate.')

Castration, Eunuch.

GELÉE, Gelly—g. contre le Goître, Balsam, ioduretted.

GEL'LY, Jelly, Jus gela'tum seu coagula'tum, Ge'lu, (F.) Gêlée, (from gelare, 'to congeal.')

A substance of a soft consistence, tremulous, and transparent, which is obtained by an appropriate treatment from animal or vegetable matters; hence the distinction into animal and vegetable jelly. The former is merely a concentrated solution of gelatin, left to cool.

Vegetable Jelly is found in the juice of the currant, mulberry, and of almost all acid fruits, when ripe. It is of itself colourless, but almost always retains a little colouring matter of the fruit which has furnished it. It has an agreeable taste; is scarcely soluble in cold water, but boiling water dissolves it readily: the jelly is, however, almost all deposited on cooling. If this aqueous solution be boiled for a long time, it becomes analogous to mucilage, and loses the property of being jellied on cooling.

GELSEM'INUM or GELSE'MIUM NIT'IDUM, G. Sempervirens, Bigno'nia sempervirens, Yel'low Jes'samine. The flowers, root, &c., of this shrub of the Southern States, Sec. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, Nat. Ord. Apocynæ, are narcotic, and the effluvia from the former are said sometimes to induce stupor.

GELU, Gelly.

GELUS, (γελως,) Risus.

GEMELLI, ('twins,') Gastrocnemii, Ischio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMEL'LUS, Gem'inus, Did'y'mus, (F.) Jumeau, Jumelle, Besson, Bessonne. One of two children, twins, born at the same accouchement, or gestation. Also, relating to twins, as a 'twin conception.'

GEMELLUS MUS'COLUS. Cowper applies this name to the long portion of the triceps brachialis united to the inner portion.

GEMINI, ('twins,') Ischiotrochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMINUM CENTRUM SEMICIRCULARE, Tænia semicircularis.

GEMINUS, Gemellus.

GEMIPOMA, Mamma.

GÉMISSEMENT, (from gémir, 'to groan or moan,') See Moaning.

GEMMA, ('a bud,') Granulation—g. Oculi, Crystalline.

GEMMATION, see Generation—g. Generation by, see Generation.

GEMMPARITÉ, (gemma, 'a bud,' and pario, 'to bring forth,') See Generation.

GEMMPAROUS, see Generation.

GEMURSA, a corn; also, a name given by the ancients to a disease seated between the toes;—the nature of which is unknown to us.

GEN, (from γενωω, 'I generate,') in composition, generating.

GENA, (γενωω.) The Cheek, Wang, Ge'nys, Paré'a, Gamphé, Gomphé'le, Gna'thos, Gnath'mus, Ma'la, (Sc.) Wouge, (F.) Jone. The cheeks form the lateral parts of the mouth. Externally, they have no precise limits; they are continuous, above, with the lower eyelid; below, they descend as far as the base of the jaw; before, they terminate at the alæ nasi, and at the commissures of the lips; and behind, at the ear. Their thickness varies according to the degree of fatness of the individual. They are formed of three layers;—one dermoid, another muscular, and the third mucous.

GENCIVES, Gingivæ.

GENEANTHROPY, (gen, and ανθρωπος, 'man,') Anthropogenia.

GENE'AS, (γενεας, from γενωω, 'the chin,') Lani'go pri'ma, Probat'binum. The downy hairs which first cover the cheek. Also, a bandage which passes under the chin.

GENEION, (γενειον.) Beard, Mentum.

GENERAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy—g. Practitioner, Surgeonapothecary.

GÉNÉRALE, Influenza.

GENERATIO, gen. Generatio'nis, Generation—g. Æquivoca, see Generation—g. Calculi, Lithia—g. Homogenea, see Generation—g. Primigena, see Generation—g. Primitiva, see Generation—g. Originaria, see Generation—g. Spontanea, see Generation.

GENERATION, Genera'tio, Gen'esis, Gemm'esis, Go'nè, Go'nus, Procrea'tio, Procrea'tion, Breed'ing, [L.] genere, genitum, γγωω, or γενωω 'I engender,') Under this name physiologists comprehend the aggregate of functions, which concur, in organized beings, towards the production of their kind. The act of generation means the union of the sexes. See Coition. The writers of antiquity believed, that all organized bodies are produced, either by what is termed univocal or regular generation, Homogen'esis, Genera'tio homogen'esis, Propaga'tio, which applies to the upper classes of animals and vegetables, or by spontaneous generation, Autogen'ia, Heterogen'esis, Heterogen'ia, Generatio heterogen'ea seu æquivoca seu primiti'va seu primig'ena seu originaria seu spontanea, Spontéparité (Dugès), which they considered applicable to the very lowest classes only, as the mushroom, the worm, the frog, &c. There are still many distinguished naturalists who consider that beings, low in the scale of animality, are produced in the latter way. Spontaneous generation and equivocal generation have been regarded by many to be synonymous. Others, however, mean by spontaneous generation, the production of a new being from the mere combination of inorganic elements; whilst by equivocal generation they understand the evolution of a new being from organized beings dissimilar to themselves, through some irregularity in their functions, or through the incipient decay or degeneration of their tissues. As to the mode in which regular generation is accomplished, there have been many views. According to the doctrine of Hippocrates, and of the ancient philosophers, the ovaries of the female furnish a prolific fluid, similar to that of the male; and the foetus results from the mixture of the two seeds in copulation. Steno and others conceived, that the ovaries contain ova, which are not developed until vivified by the male sperm. Bonnet and Spallanzani believed in the pre-existence of germs, created since the origin of the world, but encased in each other, and becoming developed in succession; whence it would follow that the ovary of the first female must have contained the germs of all subsequent generations: and that the number of these germs must go on always diminishing, until ultimately extinct. This was the system of evolution of germs. According to Leenuhoek, the ovaries do not contain eggs, but vesicles destined to receive animalcules; which, in his view, live in the sperm. Thousands of these animalcules are thrown into the uterus during copulation, and the most expeditious and vigorous reaches the ovary, after having scattered and destroyed its competitors. Buffon—admitting the hypothesis of the two seeds—supposed that they were formed of molecules proceeding from every part of the body of each parent; and that, by a kind of elective affinity, those which were furnished by the head, the trunk, or the extremities of the male parent, could only unite with those proceeding from the same parts of the female. Before him, Maupertuis, admitting, with many of the ancient philosophers, the system of Epigen'esis, and adopting, as regarded the composition of the sperm, a theory analogous to that of Buffon, had supposed that the molecules, capable of being organized, were attracted towards a centre; that the nose attracts the two eyes; the body, the arms; the arms, the hands, &c. nearly as the particles of a salt, dissolved in a liquid, arrange themselves in regular crystals around the same nucleus. These and various other systems have been successively proposed and abandoned, and the mystery of generation remains impenetrable.

The simplest kind of reproduction does not require sexual organs. The animal separates into several fragments, which form so many new individuals. This is Fissip'arous generation, Fissip'arism, G. from fis'sion, (F.) Fissiparité, Scissiparité, Scission, Cloisonnement, Reproduction ou Multiplication méristématique, Gemmip'arous generation, (F.) Gemmiparité, Génération par Gemmation, Survulation ou Bourgeoisement, consists in the formation of buds, sporules or germs on some part of the body, which at a particular period drop off and form as many new individuals. These kinds of reproduction require but one parent—Monog'eny. In Ovip'arous generation, (F.) Oviparité, the egg is hatched out of the body. In Ovivivip'arous generation, the new being is hatched in the excretory passages. In Vivip'arous generation, the new individual is born under its appropriate form; and in marsup'ial or marsup'iate generation, the young being, born at a very early stage of development, is received and nourished in a marsupium or pouch. In alternate generation, (F.) Génération alternante, the young not only do not resemble the parent at birth, but remain dissimilar during their whole life, so that their relationship is not apparent until a succeeding generation. Thus, the cercaria undergoes a change into the distoma. See Metagenesis. All these kinds of reproduction require the union of sexes—Dig'eny.

All the acts comprising the function of generation in man may be referred to five great heads. 1. Copulation. 2. Conception or fecundation. 3. Gen- tation or Pregnancy. 4. Delivery or Accouchement; and, 5. Lactation.

GENEROUS, Generosus, (γενικος, gen. generis, 'a race;') generosus, 'of a noble race, noble.' A name given to wines which contain a great quantity of alcohol.

GÉNÈSE, Genesis.

GENESIAL, Genital.

GENESIOLOGY, Genesiologia, (γενεσιολογια, 'generation,' and λογος, 'a discourse.') The doctrine of generation.

GÉNÉSIQUE, Genital.

GÉNÉSIQUE, LE, Appetite, venereal.

GENESIS, (γενεσις,) Generation. Also, origin or first formation—as the genesis, (F.) Génése, of the teeth.

GENÉT, (old [F.] Genet: from genista,) Spartium scoparium—g. à Balai, Spartium scoparium—g. des Teinturiers, Genista tinctoria.

GENETHLIACUS, (γενεθλιος, 'natal,' 'pertaining to nativity,') A name given by the ancients to certain astrologers, who, from the state of the heavens at the time of the birth of an individual, predicted his future character and the events of his life.

GENETICA, (γενεσις, 'generation,') Diseases of the sexual functions; the 5th class in Good's Nosology. Also, agents that act on the sexual organs.

GENETICUS, (γεννητικος,) Genital.

GÉNÉTIQUE, Genital.

GENEVA, (from genièvre, 'juniper, gin,') Gin, see Spirit.

GENÉVRIER, Juniperus communis—g. Oxycedre, Juniperus oxycedrus.

GENGIVITE, (gingivæ, 'the gums,' and itis,) Ulitis.

GÉNI, Genian.

GENIAN, Geniana, Genioid, (γενιον, 'the chin,') The Genian apophysis or process, (F.) Apophyse génieune ou géné, is situate at the posterior part of the symphysis menti, and is formed of four small tubercles.

GENICULATUM, (from geniculum, 'a small knee or joint,' from genu, 'the knee,') see Corpora geniculata.

GÉNIE, Genius. The French sometimes apply this term to diseases nearly synonymously with nature; as Génie inflammatoire, G. bilieux, G. adynamique. Some use it in the same sense as type; Génie intermittent. The unwonted predominance of any mental faculty is also so called.

GÉNIEN, Genian.

GENIÈVRE, (from juniperus,) Gin, Juniperus communis (the berry.)

GENI'O, (from γενιον, 'chin,') in composition, the chin.

GENIOGLOSSUS, Geniohyoglossus, (genio, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue,') Mesoglossus, Mesoglotus, Nonus linguæ musculus. The name of a flat, triangular muscle, which extends from the genian apophysis to the inferior surface of the os hyoides and tongue, which last it carries forward.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOGLLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

GENIOHYOIDEUS, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOÏDEUS, Geniohyoïdes, Geniohyoï-

des, Meutobicorn'eus, (genio, and βωϊνς, 'the os hyoides,') A muscle which arises from the genian apophysis, and is inserted at the anterior part of the body of the os hyoides. Its use is to raise the os hyoides, and carry it forwards. It may, also, contribute to depress the lower jaw in contracting towards the os hyoides.

GENIOPHARYNGE'US, (genio, and φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx,') A name given, by some anatomists, to a bundle of fibres which passes from the lower jaw to the sides of the pharynx, and forms part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GENIOPLASTY, Genioplastice, (genio, and πλασσω, 'I form,') The operation for restoring the chin. At times used instead of Genioplasty for the operation for restoring the cheek.

GEN'IPA OBLONGIFOLIA, Huito. A plant of Peru, with the juice of which the Indians paint their legs, to protect them against the stings of insects.

GENIPI and G. ALBUM, Achillea moschata, Artemisia rupestris—g. Blanc, Artemisia rupestris—g. Verum, Achillea atrata.

GENISTA, Spartium scoparium—g. Canariensis, see Rhodium lignum—g. Hirsuta, Spartium scoparium—g. Scoparia, Spartium scoparium.

GENISTA SPINOSA IN'DICA, Buhel Schulli. Ord. Leguminosæ. An oriental tree, a decoction of the roots of which is diuretic. The leaves boiled in vinegar have the same effect.

GENISTA TINCTORIA, Genistoides tinctoria, Spartium tinctorium, Dyers broom or weed, Green weed, Wood waxen, Woodweed, (F.) Genêt des Teinturiers. A shrub cultivated in this country and in Europe. The flowering tops and seed have been used in medicine. It has the same properties as Spartium scoparium.

GENISTOIDES TINCTORIA, (genista, and αιδω, 'resemblance,') Genista tinctoria.

GEN'TAL, (from geno, for gigno, 'to generate,') Genitalis, Geneticus, Generatio'ni inseriens, Genesial, Geneticus, (F.) Génital, Généti- que, Génési-
que. That which belongs or relates to generation.

GENITAL OR'GANS, Sex'ual Or'gans, Puden'da, Natura'lia, Natura, Edo'a, Me'zea, Me'sa, Mo'ri-
on: Genital, Noble, Natural or Private parts; Privities, Privy parts, Privy Members, the Parts, Pars, Pars corporis seu obscœ'na, Partes, Par'tes genita'les seu generatio'ni inserien'tes seu obscœ'ne, Me'dea, Veren'da, In'guen, Genita'lia, Genet'lica, Gym'na, Mem'bra puden'da, Or'gana generatio'ni inserien'tia, O. sez'ualia seu genita'lia, (F.) Organes génitiaux, Parties génitales ou honteuses ou génétoires ou nobles ou sexuelles ou naturelles, Les Parties Génitales. The parts that are insertive to the reproduction of the species. These are very different in the male and female. In man, they are numerous; some secreting the sperm, as the testicles and their appendages; others retaining it, as the vesiculæ seminales; and another for carrying it into the organs of the female,—the penis. In the female, the parts of generation form an apparatus, perhaps more complicated than that of the male. Some are insertive to copulation, as the vulva, vagina, &c., others to conception and the preservation of the product for a determinate time,—as the uterus and its appendages; whilst others concur in the alimentation of the infant after birth, as the mammæ.

GENITALE, Sperm—g. Caput, Glans.

GENITALIA, Genital organs—g. Viri, Pudibilia.

GENITOCRURAL NERVE, Nervus genitocruralis, Subpub'ial or Internal inguinal nerve. A branch of the second lumbar nerve, which passes through the psoas muscle, and approaching the femoral arch divides into two branches,—an internal, scrotal, or genital, nervus spermaticus seu puden'dus exter'nus, and an external or femoral cutaneous branch, lum'bo-inguinalis.

GENITOÛRINARY, see Urogenital.

GÉNITOIRES, Genital Organs.

GENITURA. That which is fecundated or engendered in the maternal womb. This word has been used synonymously with embryo, fœtus, and infant. Also, the sperm; and the penis. See GONE.

GENIUM, (γενειον,) Mentum.

GENNESIS, (γεννησις,) Generation.

GENNETICA, (γεννητικα,) Genital Organs.

GENNETICI, (Morbi,) Aidoici, Edæci, in the classification of Dr. Wm. Farr are genital diseases.

GENNETICOCNES'MUS, (gennetica, and κνησμος, 'itching,') Itching of the genital organs.

GENNETICON'OSI, Genneticonou'si, (gennetica, and νοσος, 'disease,') Disease of the genitals.

GENNETICUS, (γεννητικος,) Genital.

GEN'ŌA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of this Italian city and its vicinity has been often selected as favourable for the phthisical valetudinarian during the winter; but it is now admitted to be decidedly improper for pulmonary affections, being subject to frequent and rapid changes of temperature, and to dry cold winds from the north, alternating with warm moist winds from the south-east.

GENONU'SI, Morbi sexūs, (genos, 'sex,' and νοσος, 'disease,') Sexual diseases.

GENOPLASTIC, (γενν, 'the jaw,' and πλασσω, 'I form,') Meloplastic.

GENOU, Genu.

GÉNOUILLES, (Corps,) (from geniculum, 'a small knee or joint,') Corpora geniculata.

GENOUILLET, Convallaria polygonatum.

GENRE, Genus.

GENSANG, Panax quinquefolium.

GENTIA, Gentianina.

GENTIAN, (after Gentius, King of Illyria, who used some species medicinally,) Gentiana lutea, Triosteum—g. Blue, Gentiana catesbæi—g. Catesbian, Gentiana catesbæi—g. Horse, Triosteum—g. Southern, Gentiana catesbæi—g. White, Laserpitium latifolium, Triosteum—g. Yellow, Gentiana lutea, see Calumba.

GENTIANA, G. lutea—g. Alba, Laserpitium latifolium—g. Amarylloides, G. quinqueflora—g. Cachenlaguen, Chironia Chilensis—g. Centaurium, Chironia centaurium.

GENTIANA CATESBÆI, G. Catesbia'na, Blue Gentian, Catesbian or Southern Gentian, Blue-bells, Bitterroot. Ord. Gentianaceæ. It is a pure and simple bitter, and the root may be used wherever that of the Gentiana lutea is proper.

GENTIANA'NA CHIRAY'TA, G. Chirayi'ta, Henrice'a Pharmacear'cha, Swer'tia, Agatho'tes chirayi'ta, Ophelia chirai'ta, Chire'ta, (Ph. U. S.), Chirai'ta (Ph. B. 1864), Chirayi'ta, Chirai'ta. A native of India, the herb and root of which has been much employed in that country, in dyspepsia, and as an antiperiodic in intermittents. It is preferred by some to sarsaparilla, where the latter is considered to be indicated,—as after large quantities of mercury have been taken, or where profuse salivation has been induced. It has also been advised in atonic leucorrhœa. It yields its virtues to alcohol and water.

GENTIANA CRINITA, see G. quinqueflora—g. Gerardi, Chironia centaurium.

GENTIANA LU'TEA. The systematic name of the official gentian; Gentiana, G. major seu velerum seu rubra, Swer'tia lutea, Asterias lutea, Yellow Gentian, Gentian, Fel'wort. Ord. Gentianæ. (F.) Gentiane jaune. This is a plant common in the mountains of Europe. The root is almost inodorous, extremely bitter, and yields its virtues to ether, alcohol, and water. It is tonic and stomachic; and in large doses, aperient.

Dose, gr. x to ℥ij. It is most frequently, however, used in infusion or tincture.

GENTIANA MAJOR, G. lutea—g. Ochroleuca, see G. saponaria—g. Peruviana, Chironia Chilensis.

GENTIANA QUINQUEFLO'RA, G. Amaryllōides, Five-flowered Gentian; and GENTIANA CRINITA, Fring'ed Gentian, indigenous, are possessed of like virtues.

GENTIANA RUBRA, G. lutea.

GENTIANA SAPONARIA, Soapwort Gentian, and G. ochroleuca, Sampson's Snake-root, indigenous, have the properties of Gentiana lutea; and are said also to be diaphoretic.

GENTIANA VETERUM, G. lutea.

GENTIANE JAUNE, Gentiana lutea.

GENTIANINA, Gentianine, Gentianin, Gentiana'nia, Gentia. A supposed neutral substance, obtained from gentian, and, by some, presumed to be its active principle. It is not so.

GENITILITIUS, Hereditary.

GENU, Go'ny, (γενν,) (F.) Genou. The articulation of the leg with the thigh;—the Fem'orotib'ial or knee-joint, articulatio genu, the knee. It is the most complicated in the body, and is formed by the inferior extremity of the femur, the superior extremity of the tibia, and the rotula. The articular surfaces of the bones are covered by layers of cartilage—more or less thick—and by the synovial membrane of the articulation. The soft parts of this joint are,—the ligamentum patellæ, two lateral ligaments, distinguished by the names internal and external; a posterior ligament, Ligamentum post'vnum Winslow'ii; and two crucial ligaments,—the one anterior, and the other posterior; two interarticular fibro-cartilages; some albugineous fibres, which form an imperfect capsule, &c. The knee receives its arteries from the femoral and popliteal. They bear the name articular. Its veins have the same distribution as the arteries, and discharge their blood into the saphena and crural. Its nerves are furnished by the sciatic, popliteal, and crural. The joint is protected by the tendons and muscles which surround it.

The French use the term Articulation en genou for a joint, in which the head of a bone is received into a bony cavity of another, where it rolls and moves in all directions.

GENU CORPORIS CALLOSI, see Corpus callosum—g. Varum, Entogonyneon.

GENUGRA, (genu, and αγρα, 'seizure,') Gonagra.

GENUINUS, (from genus,) Legitimate.

GEN'US, gen. Gen'esis, (F.) Genre, (genos, 'race,') A collection or group of species, analogous to each other, and which can be united by common characters. When a species cannot be referred to a known genus, it constitutes a distinct one.

GENUS CURATIONIS, Ratio medendi.

GENY, (γενν,) Genys.

GENYANTRAL'GIA, (geny, αντρον, 'the antrum,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRI'TIS, (geny, αντρον, 'the antrum, and itis.) Inflammation of the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRUM, (geny, and αντρον, 'a cave,') Antrum of Highmore.

GENYOCYNANCHE, (geny, and cynanche,) Cynanche parotidæa.

GENYOPLASTY, (geny, and πλασσω, 'I form,') see Genioplasty.

GENYS, (genys,) Genu, 'the jaw;' also the chin and the beard. See Genæa.

GEOFFRÆA INER'MIS, Geoffræa, G. racemosa seu Piso'nis seu Jamaicen'sis, Vonacarp'oua America'na, Geoffroy'a, Cabbag'ium, Andi'ra inermis seu racemosa, Cab'bage Tree, Cab'bage Bark Tree, Wormbark Tree. Ord. Leguminosæ

Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria, (after Dr. E. F. Geoffroy, a French naturalist.) The odour of the bark is very unpleasant. It is anthelmintic and cathartic. Dose of the powder, ℥j to ℥ij.

GEOFFRÆA JAMAICENSIS, G. inermis—g. Pisonis. G. inermis—g. Racemosa, G. inermis.

GEOFFRÆA SURINAMENSIS, Andi'ra Surinamensis, has similar properties.

Hutteneschmidt has separated the active principles of G. Jamaicaensis and G. Surinamensis, to which he has given the names Jamaicine and Surinamine. They are alkaline.

GEOFFRÆA VERMIFUGA, Andi'ra ibai, Arriba, Skolemo'ra Fernambucensis; a South American plant, has a fruit, the almond of which, called Angéline, has a reputation at Rio Janeiro as a vermifuge. Dose, a grain to fifteen; or it may be given in infusion.

GEOFFROYA, Geoffræa inermis—g. Jamaicaensis, G. inermis.

GEOGRAPHY, MEDICAL, Geographia Medica, (γῆ, 'the earth,' and γραφῶ, 'I describe,') Nosogeography, Nosogeographia, Nosochthonographia, Nosochthonologia. The description of the surface of the globe as regards the influence of situation on the health, vital functions, and diseases of its inhabitants, vegetable and animal; but principally on those of man.

GEOPHAGISM, Geophagia, Gæophagia, Gæphagia, Gæphagia, Earth-eating, Clay-eating, Dirt-eating, (γῆ, 'earth,' and φαγῶ, 'I eat,') The act or practice of eating earth. See Chthonophagia.

GEOPHAGIST; Geophagus, Gæophagus, Gæphagus, Earth-eater, Clay-eater. One who eats earth.

GEORGIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The water of Indian Springs, in Butts County, is sulphureous. The Warm Springs, in Meriwether County, have a temperature of 90° Fah. Madison's Springs, in Madison County, are chalybeate; and so are Rowland's Springs, in Cass County. All these are frequented by invalids.

GEREÖLOG'IA, properly Geratolog'ia, (γενῆς, γενῆς, 'old age,' and λόγος, 'a discourse,') The doctrine, or a description, of old age.

GERAFLOURIS, Dianthus caryophyllus.

GERANIS, (γενῆς, 'a crane,' which it resembled.) A bandage, used by the ancients in cases of fractured clavicle. Some authors attribute it to Hippocrates; others, to Perigenes.

GERANIUM, (from γενῆς, 'a crane,' because its pistil is long, like the bill of the crane.) Ord. Geraniaceæ. The Crane's Bill.

GERANIUM CAROLINIANUM, see G. Robertianum—g. Fœtidum, G. Robertianum—g. Maculatum, see Geranium, and G. Moschatum.

GERANIUM MOSCHATUM, Erodium Moschatum, (F.) Bec de grue musqué. A European plant, esteemed to be excitant and diaphoretic.

GERANIUM NOYBORACENSE, G. Maculatum—g. Purpureum, G. Robertianum.

GERANIUM ROBERTIANUM, G. fœtidum seu purpureum, Stink'ing Crane's Bill, Herb Robert, (F.) Herbe à Robert, Bec de Grue Robertin. This plant was, at one time, used as an antispasmodic and slight stimulant, as well as for an external application in various painful sores and inflammations.

Geranium Carolinianum, has similar properties. Most of the species of geranium have been used as astringents. In some of the northwestern parts of the United States, the rhizoma of Geranium maculatum—Geranium, (Ph. U. S.). G. Noreboracense, Spot'ted Crane's Bill, Crow-foot, Allum root, Tormentil, Stork's bill—is called Racine à Bequet, after a person of that name. It is highly extolled by the Western Indians as an antisyphilitic.

GERAS, (γενῆς) Senectus.

GERATICI (Morbi), (γενῆς, gen. γενῆς, old age.) Developmental diseases of old people, in the classification of Dr. W. Farr.

GERATOLOGIA, Geræologia.

GERÇURE, Fissure.

GERM, Ger'men, Blas'tè, Blas'te'ma, (F.) Germe. The rudiment of a new being, not yet developed, or which is still adherent to the mother.

GERM FORCE, Plastic force.

GERMANDER, COMMON, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Creeping, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Marum, Teucrium marum—g. Small, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Water, Teucrium scordium.

GERMANDRÉE AQUATIQUE. Teucrium scordium—g. Maritime, Teucrium marum—g. Officinale, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Scorodone, Teucrium scordium.

GERME, Germ—g. Faux, Conception, false.

GERMEN, gen. Ger'minis, (from gerere, 'to produce,') Germ, Sperm—g. Dentale, Dental Pulp—g. Falsum, Mole—g. Spurious, Conception, false.

GERMINAL, Germinative, Germinalis, Germinativus, (F.) Germinatif; (from germen.) Relating or belonging to a germ; as "germinal cell."

GERMINAL CELL, see Cytoblast—g. Membrane and Vesicle, see Molecule—g. Nucleus, see Molecule—g. Spot, see Molecule—g. Vesicle, see Molecule.

GERMS, DISSEMINATION OF, Panspermia—g. Pre-existence of, see Preformation.

GERO, GERONTO, (γενῆς, gen. γενῆς, 'an aged person,') in composition the same.

GEROBOS'CIA, Gerontobos'cia, (gero, and βοσκῆ, 'food,') Nourishment or maintenance proper for the aged.

GEROCOMEUM, Gerocomium.

GEROCOM'IA, Gerocom'icè, Gerontocom'icè, (gero, 'an aged person,' and κομῶ, 'to take care of,') The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of the health of the aged:—the hygiene of old people.

GEROCOMICÈ, Gerocomia.

GEROCOM'UM, Gerocom'um, Preshyodoch'um, Gerontocom'um, Gerotroph'um. An hospital for the aged.

GÉROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GÉROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GERONTATROPHIA, (geronto and atroph'ia), Marasmus senilis.

GERONTO, in composition, see Gero.

GERONTOBOS'CIA, Geroboscia.

GERONTOCOMICE, Gerocomia.

GERONTOCOMIUM, Gerocomium.

GERONTO'PIA, (geronto, and ὤψ, 'the eye,') Weakness of sight of the aged.

GERONTOTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GERONTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GEROTOX'ON, Gerontox'on, Gerontotox'on, Lenco'ma Gerontotox'on, Mac'nla cor'neæ arcu'ata, Ar'cus senil'is; (gero, and τόξον, 'a bow,') A bow shaped opacity at the under margin of the cornea, common to old people, and supposed, by some, to be an indication of the existence of fatty degeneration of the heart.

GEROTROPHEUM, (gero, and τρέφειν, 'to nourish,') Gerocomium.

GEROTROPHIA, (gero, and τρέφειν, 'to nourish,') Geroboscia.

GERSA, Plumbi subcarbonas—g. Serpentariæ, see Arum maculatum.

GÉSIER, ('gizzard,') Ventriculus callosus.

GES'TA, 'things done,' (gerere, gestum, 'to do,') Acta. A Latin term, introduced by Hallé into medical language, to designate, among the objects which belong to hygiene, the functions which consist in the voluntary movements of muscles and organs. In the class Gesta are found sleep, the waking state, movements or locomotion, and rest.

GESTA'TION, Gesta'tio, Pho'ra, (gestare, ges- tatum, 'to carry.') The time during which a female who has conceived carries the embryo in her uterus. See Pregnancy. Gestation, likewise, signifies the bearing or carrying of an individual; a kind of exercise easier than that in which he moves by virtue of his own powers. Thus, we speak of gestation on horseback, in a carriage, &c.

GESTATION, PROTRACT'ED. Pregnancy protracted beyond the usual period. See Pregnancy.

GESTICULATION, Gesticulatio, (gestus, from gerere, gestum, 'to carry,' 'the carriage of the body.') The act of making many gestures; a symptom in disease, which indicates great encephalic erethism. It is met with in numerous affections.

GETHYL' LIS SPIRA' LIS. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amaryllidæ, the orange-coloured fruit of which has a peculiar fragrance. An infusion in spirit or tincture is used in flatulence and colic.

GEUM, G. rivale—G. Caryophyllum, G. urbanum—G. Nutans, G. rivale—G. Palustre, G. rivale.

GE'UM RIVA' LĒ, G. palmistrè seu nutans, Caryophylla ta aquatica seu nutans, Benedic'ta sylvestris, Water or Purple a'vens, Choc'olate root, (F.) Benoîte aquatique ou des Ruissaux. Ord. Rosacæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Polygynia. The root—Geum (Ph. U. S.)—is astringent. It has been much extolled in the cure of intermittents, diarrhœa, hemorrhage, &c.

GEUM URBA'NUM, G. caryophyllum, Caryophylla ta, C. vulgaris seu urbana, Caryophyllus vulg'aris, Sanamun'da, Lugophthalmus, Caryophylla, Janamun'da, Her'ba benedic'ta, Com'mon a'vens, Herb Ben'net, Yellow avens, Star of the North, Bless'ed herb, (F.) Benoîte. The root of this plant has a smell not unlike that of cloves. Taste bitterish, austere; virtues yielded to water and alcohol. It has been used in intermittents, dysentery, chronic diarrhœa, debility, &c. Dose, ʒss to ʒj of the powder.

GEUM VER'NUM, West'ern ear'ly a'vens, has the same properties as GEUM VIRGINIA'NUM, White a'vens, A'vens, Ev'an root, Choc'olate root, Ben'net, Throatroot, Cne'all, (F.) Benoîte de Virginie, common from Maine to Carolina and Kentucky, flowering in June and July. It has the same medical properties as Geum rivale.

GEUMA, gen. Geum'atis, (γευμα.) Taste.

GEUSION'OSI, (gensis, and oosis, 'disease.') Gensiosis. Diseases of the organ or sense of taste.

GEUSIS, (γευσis.) Taste. Rarely, the root of the tongue—Radix lingue.

GEUTHMOS, (γευθμος.) Taste.

GEZIB, see Pastinaca opponax.

GE'ZIT, Cagot.

GE'ZITAIN, Cagot.

GHERKIN, ([G.] Gurke, 'a cucumber,') see Cucumis sativus.

GHITA JECOMO, Cambogia.

GIALAPPA, (from Jalapa or Xalapa, in Mexico.) Convolvulus Jalapa.

GI'ANT, Gi'gas, (F.) Géant, (from γίγας, gen. γίγαντος.) One much above the ordinary stature or of excessive growth—Macrosomia, Macrosomatia, Magnitudo gigantea, (F.) Géantisme.

GIBBA, Hump.

GIBBER, Hump.

GIBBEROSITAS, Gibbositas.

GIBBOSITAS, Gibberositas, Cyphosis, Rhachioyphosis, (gibbus, gibbous, 'something arched or vaulted; prominent,') Gibbosity, Gibbousness, Curvature of the spine, Hyboma. A phenomenon which occurs in different diseases, particularly in rickets and caries of the vertebræ. See Hump.

GIBBOSITAS CARIOSA, Vertebral disease.

GIBBOUSNESS, Gibbositas.

GIBBUS, Hump—G. Pottii, Vertebral disease.

GIB'LETS. (According to Minshew, from goblet, 'a mouthful' [?]; but, according to Junius, from (F.) gibier, 'game,') The word seems to be the old (F.) Gibeletz, Gibelet, &c., i. e. Gibier, (L.) Cibarium, 'food,' (F.) Abatis. It means, generally, the parts which are cut off from a goose before it is roasted. Also, the extremities of fowls, such as the head, wings, feet; to which are sometimes added the liver, gizzard, &c. Soup, made from these, is moderately nutritious.

GIDDINESS, Vertigo.

GIDDY, (Sax. gīdig.) Vertiginous.

GIPTS. A name given to white specks on the finger-nails, which have been superstitiously supposed to portend gifts.

GIGANTESQUE, Gigantic.

GIGANTEUS, (γίγαντας, and γίγαντος, from gigas.) Gigantic.

GIGAN'TIC, Gigante'us, Giganto'des, (F.) Gigantesque. Relating to one much above the ordinary stature.

GIGANTODES, (γίγαντώδης, from gigas, and odes.) Gigantic.

GIGARTINA HELMINTHOCORTON, Coralina Corsicana—G. Lichenoides, Fucus amyloaceus.

GIGARUM SERPENTARIA, (gigas and arum.) Arum dracunculus.

GIGAS, gen. gigantis, (γίγας, gen. γίγαντος.) Giant.

GILARUM, Thymus serpyllum.

GILEAD, BALM OF, see Amyris opobalsamum.

GILET DE FORCE, Waistcoat, strait.

GILL, Glechoma hederacea.

GILL-GO-BY-GROUND, Glechoma hederacea.

GILLA THEOPHRASTI, Zinci sulphas—G. Vitrioli, Zinci sulphas.

GILLE'NIA STIPULA'CEA, (after Arnoldus Gilenius, a German physician, [?]) Small-flowered Indian Physic, has the same properties as GILLENIA TRIFOLIATA, Spiræa trifoliata, Com'mon Gille'nia, Indian Physic, West'ern Drop'wort, Indian Hip'po, Ipecac, Bow'man's root, Menthol sweet, Beaumont root, (F.) Gillénie. Ord. Rosacæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Pentagynia. The root of this shrub, and of G. stipulacea—Gille'nia, (Ph. U. S.)—which grows plentifully in the United States, is a safe and efficacious emetic, in the dose of about 30 grains. It resembles ipeacuanha in its properties.

GILLÉ'NIE, Gillenia trifoliata.

GILLFLOWER, (July flower, or from Caryophyllum, [?]) Dianthus caryophyllus.

GILLON, Viscum album.

GIMBERNAT'S LIGAMENT, (after Gimbernat, a Spanish surgical writer.) A fibrous, triangular expansion, which is detached from the posterior and inner part of the crural arch, and is inserted into the crest of the pubis. This ligament forms the inner part of the superior aperture of the crural canal. It is one of the most frequent causes of strangulation in crural hernia.

GIN, Hollands, Gene'va, (F.) Genèvre. This spirit, which is distilled from corn and juniper berries, or from some substitute for them, is largely used in Great Britain, by the lower classes particularly, and is extremely detrimental to them. It possesses the properties of other spirituous liquors, but is diuretic, and, in popular medicine, is more used than other varieties, in cases of colic or intestinal pain of any kind. Schiedam Schnappe is understood to be Hollands of good quality. See Spirit.

GIN DRINKER'S LIVER, Liver, nutmeg—G. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

GINGIBRA'CIUM, (gingivæ, 'the gums,' and brachium.) A name given to the scurvy, because the gums and arms are chiefly affected by it. It has also been called Gingipe'dium, because the lower limbs are in many cases the seat of scorbutic spots. See Porphyræ nautica.

GINGIPEDIUM, (gingivæ, 'the gums,' and pes, gen. pedis, 'the foot,') see Gingibrachium, Porphyræ nautica.

GINGIVÆ, (gignere, 'to beget,' because the teeth are, as it were, begotten in them. [?]) The gums, U'la, sing. U'lon; U'bum, Carnic'ula, (F.) Gencivæ. The portion of the mucous membrane of the mouth which covers the maxillary bones to the level of the alveolar arches. The gums are formed of a red tissue, more or less solid, and of a fibro-mucous nature, which adheres strongly to the necks of the teeth, and transmits, between the roots and their alveoli, a very thin expansion,—the alveolodental periosteum. The gums fix the teeth and contribute greatly to their stability. In the aged, after the loss of the teeth, they become fibrous and very solid, and are inservient to mastication.

GINGIVALIS, Ulet'icus, U'licus. Relating to the gums.

GINGLYMOID, Ginglymoïdeus, Ginglymo'des, (γινγλυμος, 'a ginglymus or hinge,' and εidos, 'resemblance,') Resembling a ginglymus or hinge. An epithet applied to joints which resemble a hinge, as a ginglymoid joint.

GINGLYMUS, (γινγλυμος.) Cardinamen'tum, Car'do, 'a hinge,' (F.) Charnière, Articulation en charnière. A species of diarthrodial articulation, which only admits of motion in two directions, like a hinge,—as the knee-joint or elbow-joint.

GINSENG, Panax quinquefolium—g. Asiatic, Panax Schinseng—g. Blue, Caulophyllum thalictroides—g. Yellow, Caulophyllum thalictroides—g. Horse, Triosteum—g. White, Triosteum.

GIRARD-ROUSSIN, Asarum.

GIRDLE, ([Sax.] zýppel), Cingulum.

GIRL. This seems, formerly, to have been an appellation common to both sexes. Many etymologists deduce the word from the Su. G., *Kar*l, 'a man.' [?] It means a young female, (L.) Fil'ia, from φειν, 'to love'; Pu'era, Puel'la, Pusa, Pu-sill'a; (F.) Fille.

GLABEL'LAR. An epithet by Dr. Barclay for an aspect towards the glabella. Glabbellad is used adverbially to signify 'towards the glabellar aspect.'

GLABRITIES, (glaber, 'smooth,') Cavities.

GLACE, (from glacies.) Ice.

GLA'CIAL, Glacia'lis, (from glacies.) Icy; having the appearance of ice; as 'glacial phosphoric acid.'

GLACIALE, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum.

GLACIALIS, Glacial—g. Humor, Crystalline.

GLACIES, (from gelu, [?]) Ice.

GLADI'OLUS, (dim. of gladius, 'a sword,') from the sword-like shape of its leaf,) Gladiolus communis—g. Cæruleus, Iris Germanica.

GLADI'OLUS COMMUNIS, G. vulg'aris, Victoria'lis rotunda seu femine'a, Corn'flag, (F.) Glau'eul. Ord. Iridiæ. The root of this plant has been considered aphrodisiac. Applied in cataplasms, it has been extolled against scrofulous tumours.

GLADIOLUS LUTEUS, Iris pseudacorus—g. Vulgaris, G. communis.

GLADIUS, ('a sword,') Penis.

GLAIR, Albumen.

GLAIRES, see Parturition.

GLAMA, (γλαμη) Lippitudo, Chassie.

GLAND, Glans, dim. Glan'dula, 'an acorn, a kernel;' Aden. The ancient anatomists gave this name to a number of organs of a texture generally soft, and a shape more or less globular, but differing greatly in their nature and functions. They applied it, for instance, 1. To those organs which separate from the blood, any fluid whatever. When such organs were composed of several lobules, united by common vessels, they received the name conglomerate glands, as the parotid, pancreas, &c. 2. To the reddish and spongy, knot-like bodies, which are met with in the course of the lymphatics. These they called conglobate glands;—see Ganglion, (lymphatic;) and 3dly and lastly, to various other organs, whose intimate texture and functions are still unknown, as the Pineal gland, Pituitary gland, Glands of Pacchioni, Thyroid gland, Thymus gland, Suprarenal glands, &c. Chaussier restricts the word gland to those softish, granular, lobated organs, composed of vessels, and a particular texture, of which there are in the human body, the lacrimal, salivary, and mammary, the testicles, the liver, pancreas, and kidneys. These permanent glands, or glands with permanent ducts, are all destined to draw from the blood the molecules necessary for the formation of new fluids, and to convey these fluids externally, by means of one or more excretory ducts. Several glands, besides their excretory ducts, have special reservoirs, in which the fluids, secreted by them, collect, remain for a greater or less space of time, and undergo slight modifications before being evacuated;—such are, the gall-bladder for the liver, the urinary bladder for the kidneys, &c. Each gland has an organization peculiar to it, but we know not the intimate nature of the glandular texture. Malpighi believed that the vessels terminate in small, solid masses, to which he gave the name—glan'dular grains or ac'ini. In these, he considered, the excretory ducts originate. Ruyseh thought that the glands are entirely vascular, and that the excretory ducts are immediately continuous with the vasa afferentia, &c. The most accepted view, perhaps, is, that the secreting vessel is distributed on the animal membrane, which lines the minute excretory ducts, and that the secretion is effected from the liquor sanguinis by means of cells.

The term Glande (F.) is sometimes appropriated to the tumour formed by inflammation or engorgement of a lymphatic ganglion.

GLANDULAIRE, Glandular.

GLAND'ULAR, Glandula'ris, Glandulo'sus, (F.) Glandulaire, Glanduleux. Having the appearance, form, or texture of Glands; as a glandular body, a glandular texture, &c.

GLANDULAR SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney.

GLANDULE OF MALPIGHI, see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLANDULEUX, Glandular.

GLANDULO'SOCAR'NEUS. Ruysch gives this epithet to fleshy excrescences which he found in the bladder.

GLANDULOSUS, Glandular.

GLANS, gen. Glan'dis, ('an acorn,') Bal'anus, Cy'taros, Cus'pis, Ca'put, C. Pe'nis, Geni'tale ca'put, (F.) Gland. The extremity of the penis and of the clitoris. The glans penis is of a conical, slightly flattened shape. It is continuous with the urethra, which opens at its apex; and is circumscribed by a projecting edge, called the Coro'na glandis, behind which is a depression. Col'um seu Sul'cus retroglan'dularis, Fos'sa glan'dis. It is covered by a thin mucous membrane; is furnished, at its base, with sebaceous follicles, called glan'dulæ odorif'ere Tysoni, the secretion from which is termed Smegma prepu'tii; and can, almost always, be covered by the reflection of the skin, called the prepu'ce. Lastly, it is formed of a spongy texture, susceptible of being thrown into erection.

GLANS, Bronchocele, Gland, Pessary, Suppository.

GLANS CLITO'RIDIS is smaller. It is imperforate, and covered with a sort of prepuce formed by the mucous membrane of the vulva.

GLAUBER'S SALTS, (after R. Glauber, a German chemist,) Soda, sulphate of.

GLAUCEDO, gen. Glauc'e'dinis, Glaucoma.

GLAUCO'MA, gen. Glauc'o'matis, (γλαυκωμα, from γλαυκος, 'sea-green,' and ομα.) Glauc'o'sis, Glauc'e'do, Catarac'ta glauc'a, Oc'ulus Cas'sius, Cas'sius, Phthar'ma glauc'o'ma, Parop'sis glauc'o'sis, Apoglauc'o'sis. Amongst the older pathologists, this word was used synonymously with cataract. It is now ordinarily applied to opacity of the vitreous humour or of the tunica hyaloidea, which manifests itself by a grayish, or greenish spot, apparent through the pupil. The diagnosis is generally difficult; and the disease is almost always incurable.

GLAUCOMA WOUHOU'SI, Cataract.

GLAUCOSIS, (γλαυκωσις), Glaucoma.

GLENOID. Glene.

GLE'NOID. Glenoid'al, Glenoid'al'is, Glenoid'es, Glenoid'es, Glenoid'eus, (glene, and eidos, 'resemblance,') (F.) Glenoïde, Glenoïdale, Glenoïdien. Any shallow, articular cavity, γληνη, gle'nê, which receives the head of a bone; such as, 1. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the scapula, Fos'sa glenoïdea, Omoceph'ylê, Acetab'ulum hu'meri, Cur'vitas hu'meri glenoïdes, Eutyp'osis, situate at the anterior angle of the scapula; and articulated with the head of the humerus. 2. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the temporal bone. It is seated between the two roots of the zygomatic process, and receives the condyle of the lower jaw.

GLENOID LIG'AMENT, (F.) Ligament Glénoïdien. is a fibro-cartilaginous ring or bourrelet, which seems formed by the expansion of the tendon of the long head of the biceps brachialis, and surrounds the glenoid cavity of the scapula, the depth of which it increases.

GLÉNOÏDALE. Glenoid.

GLEVED (Sc.), see Strabismus.

GLISCHRAS'MA. gen. Glischras'm'atis, Glischrot'es, (from γλισχος, (γλια, 'glue,') 'gluey,') Lentor. visciditas.

GLISCHROCH'OLUS, (γλισχος, 'gluey,' and χολη, 'bile,') An epithet for excrement which is glutinous and bilious.

GLOB'ULE. Glob'ulus, Sphæ'rion, Sphærid'ion, Sphæ'rula, (dim. of globus, 'a ball,') A small globe.

GLOBULES, RED. OF THE BLOOD, Blood glob'ules, Blood cor'puscles, Blood disks, Blood es'icles, Glob'uli seu Vesic'ule seu Sphæ'rulæ seu Follic'uli seu Corpus'cula seu Cell'ule seu Partic'ule seu Gran'ula sanguinis, (F.) Globules ou Cellules rouges du sang, Disques sanguins, Hématies of Robin, are small bodies, which are particularly observable when the transparent parts of cold-blooded animals are examined by the aid of the microscope; and are met with in the blood of all animals. They are circular in the mammalia, and elliptical in birds and cold-blooded animals; are flat in all animals, and generally composed of a central nucleus enclosed in a membranous sac. Chemically, they consist of hæmatin and globulin—hæmato-glob'ulin. The chemical composition of the nucleus, where it exists,—it does not in man,—has been by some regarded as fibrin; by others, as fat; and by others, again, as a species of horn, to which the name u'clein has been given. See Globulin. Their average long diameter in man is about  $\frac{1}{3000}$ th part of an inch.

Besides these, the blood contains white or pale globules, (F.) Globules blancs, Leucocorpuscles, which are probably lymph and chyle corpuscles in process of development into red corpuscles.

Dried blood globules of the ox have been given internally in cases of anæmia.

The minute pellets of the homœopathist are called globules.

GLOB'ULIN, Glob'uline, Blood u'clein. The colourless substance that remains after the abstraction of the colouring matter of the blood-globule. It is a peculiar albuminous principle. The globulin of Berzelius consists of the envelopes of the blood globules, and of the part of their contents that remains after the extraction of the hæmatin. Lecanu regards it as identical with albumen; and, according to Mulder, it belongs to the combinations of protein. Robin and Verdeil consider it to be albuminose.

The term globulin is likewise given by M. Donné to small granulations appertaining to the chyle, which are observable in the blood with the microscope. They are small, white, roundish, isolated or irregularly agglomerated grains; of about the 1-300 of a millimètre in diameter, and are regarded by M. Donné as the first elements of the blood-globules. They are the white granulated corpuscles of Mandl.

GLOMERULE, Glomerulus; (dim. of glomus, 'a ball.') A small ball or clew, formed by an agglomeration of vessels; as Glomerule of Malpighi; see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOMERULI RENALES, Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOXOÏN, Gloxoin, Gloxoinum, Nitroglycerin. A substance prepared by adding glycerin to a mixture of sulphuric acid and fuming nitric acid; pouring it into water and washing upon a filter. It is an oleaginous substance, of a sweet taste, little soluble in water, but readily in alcohol and ether. A drop, brought in contact with the lips, or even the vapour, is said to have caused the most distressing headache; hence it has been used in headache by the homeopaths.

GLOS'SA, (γλωσσα), Glotta, 'the tongue.' The power of speech. Speech.

GLOSSAGRA, (glossa, and agra, 'a seizure.') Glossalgia.

GLOSSAL, Glossalis, (from glossa.) Relating or appertaining to the tongue.

GLOSSAL'GIA, Gloss'agra, Glottal'gia, Glott'agra, (glossa, and αλγος, 'pain.') Pain in the tongue.

GLOSSANIS'CHUM, Glossanoch'eus, Glossan'ochum, (glossa, and αχεν, 'to hold up.') An instrument for holding up the tongue.

GLOSSANOCHÆUS, Glossanischum.

GLOSSANOCHUM, Glossanischum.

GLOSSANTHRAX, Pestis glossanthrax, (F.) Boussole, (glossa, and ασπάζ, 'a carbuncle.') Carbuncle of the Tongue. A disease more common in cattle than in man.

GLOSSEPIGLOT'TIC, Glosssepiglot'tiens. Relating to the tongue and epiglottis, as Ligamentum glosssepiglot'ticum.

GLOSSIANUS, Lingual muscle.

GLOSSYNA MOR'SITANS, Tsetse. An insect of South Africa, not much larger than the common housefly, the bite of which, according to Dr. Livingstone, is death to the ox, horse and dog; whilst it is harmless to man and wild animals, and even to calves so long as they suck.

GLOSSY'TIS, (glossa, and itis), Glosson'eus inflammatorius, Angi'na lingua'ria seu lingua'lis, Inflammatio Lin'guæ, Inflammation of the tongue, (F.) Inflammation de la Langue. When confined to the mucous membrane, it is of slight importance. That which affects the whole of the tongue is a serious disease, and requires the vigorous use of antiphlogistics. It is rare.

GLOSSO, (γλωσσα, 'the tongue.') In composition, relating or appertaining to the tongue.

GLOSSOC'Æ, (glossa, and κακος, 'evil.') Ulceration of the tongue, with symptoms of adynamic fever.

GLOSSOCARCINO'MA, gen. Glossocarcinomat'is, Glossocair'rhuis, Carcino'ma Lin'guæ, (glossa, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.') Cancer of the tongue.

GLOSSOCAT'CHUS, Glossocat'ochê, (γλωσσοκατοχων), Catagloss'um, Catagloss'um, (glossa, and κατοχων, 'I arrest.') Ling'ue Detentor, Tongue-holder, (F.) Abaisseur de la langue. An instrument, the invention of which is attributed to Paulus of Ægina, and which was employed to depress the tongue, in order to examine diseases of the fauces. It was composed of two branches; one of which had, at its extremity, a plate for depressing the tongue; whilst the other, shaped like a horse-shoe, was applied under the chin. The finger, or the handle of a spoon, or a spatula, is generally used in similar cases.

GLOSSOC'ELE, (glossa, and κληη, 'hernia,' 'tumour.') Hernia of the Tongue, Paragloss'e, Protop'ona lin'guæ, Glossomeg'istis, Glossop'tosis. Projection of the tongue from the mouth. It depends, generally, on an inflammatory swelling of the organ. At times, however, a chronic glossoccele, or sort of œdematous engorgement, is met with; which proceeds to a great length, and deforms the dental arches, the lips, &c. Inflammatory glossoccele must be combated by antiphlogistics. In the œdematous kind, such as is sometimes caused by excessive salivation, the infiltrated fluid may be pressed back by the hand of the practitioner, to get the tongue behind the teeth; and it may be kept there by a piece of gauze tied over the mouth. The chronic, elongated kind sometimes requires amputation of a portion of the organ.

GLOSSOCOMA, (glossa, and coma.) Glossospasmus.

GLOSSOC'OMON, Glossoc'ommu, Glossocomi'on, (γλωσσοκομιον, from glossa, and κομω, 'I guard.') The ancients gave this name to a small case for holding the tongues of their wind instruments. By extension, it was applied to the box or cradle in which fractured limbs were kept. We find, in the old writers, a Glossocomon of Hippocrates, of Nymphodoros, Galen, &c.

GLOSSODESMUS, (glossa, and δεσμος, 'a bandage.') Frænum linguæ.

GLOSSOËPIGLOT'TIC, Glossœpiglot'tiens. That which belongs to the tongue and epiglottis. Some anatomists have so denominated certain fleshy fibres, which pass from the base of the tongue towards the epiglottis. These muscles are more evident in some of the mammalia than in man; and their use seems to be,—to raise the epiglottis, and to remove it farther from the glottis. Santorini, who described them after Eustachius, calls them Retractor'es Epiglot'tidis.

GLOSSOËPIGLOT'TIC LIG'AMENT, Frænum seu Fræ'mulum epiglot'tidis, Ligamentum membrana'centum, Velamentum lin'guæ. Three folds of mucous membrane, which connect the anterior surface of the epiglottis with the root of the tongue.

GLOSSO'GRAPHY, Glossogra'phia, (glossa, and γραφη, 'a description.') An anatomical description of the tongue.

GLOSSOY'AL. A name given, by Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, to the posterior cornua of the os hyoides.

GLOSSOL'OGY, Glossolog'ia, (glossa, and λογος, 'a treatise,' 'a discourse.') A treatise on the tongue. Nomenclature.

GLOSSOL'YSIS, Glossople'gia, Paral'ysis lin'guæ, P. Nervi hypogloss'i, (glossa, and λυσις, 'solution.') Paralysis of the tongue.

GLOSSOMANTI'A, Prognosis ex lin'guâ, (glossa, and μαντεια, 'divination.') Prognosis from the state of the tongue.

GLOSSOMEGISTUS, (glossa, and μεγιστος, 'the greatest,') Glossocelc, Paraglossa.

GLOSSO'N'CUS, (glossa, and ογκος, 'tumour.') Ervoico'sis lin'guæ. Swelling of the tongue.

GLOSSONCUS INFLAMMATORIUS, Glossitis.

GLOSSOPALATINUS, Glossostaphylinus.

GLOSSOPHARYNGEAL, Glossopharyngeus, Pharyngo-glossal—g. p. Nerve, Pharyngo-glossal nerve.

GLOSSOPHARYNGE'US, Glossopharynge'al. Belonging to the tongue and pharynx. Some anatomists thus designate certain fleshy bundles, which arise from the lateral parts of the base of the tongue, and are inserted into the parietes of the pharynx. They form part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GLOSSOPLÉGIA, (glossa, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Glossolysis.

GLOSSOPTOSIS, (γλωσσο, and πτωσις, 'a falling,') Glossocele.

GLOSSOSCIRRHUS, Γλωσσοσκαρρῖνος.

GLOSSOSCOP'IA, (γλωσσο, and σκοπεῖν, 'I view,') Inspection of the tongue as an index of disease.

GLOSSOSEMIOT'ICĒ, (γλωσσο, and σημειοτις, 'semiology,') The signs of disease taken from the tongue.

GLOSSOSPASMUS, Γλωσσοσπασμῖς, Σπασμὸς λίν'γου, (γλωσσ and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Cramp or spasm of the tongue.

GLOSSOSPAT'HA, Spatula pro d'vè, (γλωσσο, and σπάθη, 'spatula,') A spatula for pressing down the tongue to enable the fauces to be examined.

GLOSSOSTAPHYLINUS, (γλωσσο, and σταφύλη, 'the uvula,') Glossostaphylinus, Pala'toglossus, Constrictor Isthmi Fau'cium. A small, thin, narrow, and long muscle, which arises from the base of the tongue, and is inserted at the inferior and lateral part of the velum palati, in the anterior pillar of which it is situate. Its use is to contract the isthmus faucium, by depressing the velum palati, and raising the base of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTERE'SIS, Lingue Ectirp'atio, (γλωσσο, and στερησις, 'privation,') Extirpation of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTROPH'IA, (γλωσσο, and στρεφω, 'I turn,') Doubling of the point of the tongue upwards and backwards,—said to have been a mode of suicide. [?]

GLOSSOTOMY, Glossotomia, (γλωσσο, and τομειν, 'to cut,') Dissection of the tongue. Amputation of the tongue.

GLOSSYPERTROPH'IA, (γλωσσο, ὑπερ, 'over,,' and τρέφειν, 'to nourish,') Hypertrophy or supernutrition of the tongue.

GLOTTA, (γλωττα,) Glossa, Tongue.

GLOTTAGRA, (glotta, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Glossalgia.

GLOTTALGIA, (glotta, and αλγος, 'pain,') Glossalgia.

GLOTTICUS, (γλωπτικός,) Pertaining to the tongue.

GLOTTIS, gen. Glottidis, (γλωπτις, 'the mouth-piece of a flute,') Lig'ula, Liv'gula. A small oblong aperture in the larynx, comprised between the chordæ vocales. It is narrow, anteriorly; wider, posteriorly; and is capable of being modified by muscular contraction, as may be required by the voice. It is by the chordæ vocales, that voice is produced. The glottis is nearly an inch long in the adult male; less in the female and child. Rima Glottidis being the aperture in which the voice is produced, and therefore synonymous with Glottis, as given above.

Glottis is, by some, used synonymously with ventricle of the larynx: with others, it includes the whole of the larynx.

GLOTTIS, LIPS OF THE, Thyreo-arytenoid ligaments—g. Spasm of the, Asthma thymicum.

GLOUGLOU D'UNE BOUTEILLE, (formed by onomatopoeia,) Gurgling.

GLOUTERON, Arctium Lappa—g. Petit, Xanthium.

GLOUTIUS, (from γλωυτος, 'the brecch,') Gluteal—g. Maximus et extimus, Gluteus maximus—g. Secundus et medius, Gluteus medius—g. Tertius et intimus, Gluteus minimus.

GLOUTON, Glutton.

GLOWWORM, Cicindela.

GLUANT, Glutinous.

GLUCÆMIA, (γλυκος, 'sweet,' and αἷμα, 'blood,') Glycœmia.

GLUCOGENESIS, Glycogeny.

GLUCENIA, Glycogeny.

GLUCOHÆMIA, Glycœmia.

GLUCOSE, better Gly'cose, (γλυκος, 'sweet,') Grape, Fruit, Starch, and Honey sugar. A variety of sugar, that occurs naturally in many vegetable juices, and in honey. Compared with cane sugar, it is much less soluble in water, and less disposed to crystallize: and, when injected into the blood-vessels, does not pass off to the like extent by the kidneys. Diabetic, Urinary, and Hepatic sugar appear to have the same chemical composition as Glucose.

GLUCOSIQUE, Saccharine.

GLUCOSURIA, (γλυκος, 'sweet,' and ουρον, 'urine,') Diabetes mellitus.

GLUEBONE, Osteocolla.

GLUE, FISH, Ichthyocolla.

GLUMPOT, Gallipot.

GLUTEUS MAGNUS, (γλωυτος, 'the buttock, 'the breech,') G. maximus—g. Major, G. maximus.

GLUTEUS MAXIMUS, G. Major seu magnus, Maximus et extimus Glout'ius, (F.) Muscle grand fessier, Ilio-sacro-fémoral; Sacro-fémoral, (Ch.)

This muscle is situate at the posterior part of the pelvis, and at the upper and posterior part of the thigh. It is large, thick, and quadrilateral; and is attached, above, to the posterior part of the crista ili, to the part of the ilium comprised between the crista and the upper curved line, to the posterior surface of the sacrum, coccyx, and great sacro-sciatic ligament; and below, it terminates by a broad aponeurosis, which is inserted into the rugged surface that descends from the trochanter major to the linea aspera of the femur. This muscle extends the thigh on the pelvis, and rotates the thigh outwards. It is greatly concerned in station and progression.

GLUTEUS MEDIUS, Glout'ius Secundus et Medius, (F.) Ilio-trochantérien; Grand Ilio-trochantérien, (Ch.,) Moyen Fessier. This muscle is situate in part beneath the preceding; it is broad, very thick, radiated, and triangular; attached, above, to the crista ili, and to the part of the outer surface of that bone comprised between the three anterior fourths of its crista, its upper curved line, and its lower; and below, it ends by a tendon, inserted at the upper edge of the great trochanter. It is an abductor of the thigh; but can turn the thigh outwards or inwards, according as its posterior or inferior fibres are thrown separately into contraction.

GLUTEUS MINIMUS, G. minor, Tertius et Intimus Glout'ius, (F.) Petit Fessier;—Ilio-ischii-trochantérien, Petit Ilio-trochantérien (Ch.) This muscle, which is situate beneath the preceding, is flat, triangular, and with radiated fibres. It is attached, above, to the external surface of the os ili, from the inferior curved line to the acetabulum; and, below, is inserted into the anterior part of the great trochanter. It has the same uses as the preceding.

GLUTEUS MINOR, G. minimus.

GLUTE'AL, or GLU'TEAL, Glout'ius, Glute'us. (F.) Fessier. That which belongs or relates to the nates. This name has been given to many parts which compose the nates.

GLUTEAL APONEURO'SIS. The upper and back part of the femoral fascia. In it is a remarkable opening, called the gluteal arch, for the passage of the gluteal vessels and nerves.

GLUTEAL ARCH, see Gluteal aponeurosis.

GLUTEAL ARTERY, Posterior Iliac Artery, (F.) Artère fessière, is one of the largest branches of the hypogastric. It makes its exit from the pelvis at the upper part of the superior sciatic foramen; gains the posterior part of the pelvis, and divides into two branches;—the one superficial, the other deepened. The last subdivides into three secondary branches, whose ramifications are distributed particularly to the Glutei, Longissimus Dorsi, Sacro-lumbalis, &c., and anastomose with the sciatic and internal circumflex arteries.

GLUTEAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf Fessier, is a large branch, furnished by the 5th pair of lumbar nerves. It is chiefly distributed to the gluteal muscles.

GLUTEAL VEIN, (F.) Veine fessière, follows the same march as the artery of the same name.

GLUTEN, gen. Glutinis, ('glue, paste.') Glutinum, Lentor, Veg'etable Gluten, Veg'etable Cuscin. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is soft, of a grayish white, viscid consistence, and very elastic. Exposed to the air, it becomes hard, brown, and fragile; and, in moist air, putrefies. Water and alcohol do not dissolve it. It is soluble in vegetable, and in weak mineral, acids, at a high temperature. The farinæ, in which it is found, are those preferred for the preparation of bread; on account of the property it has of making the paste rise. It is a compound of protein, and hence has been ranged amongst the "proteinaceous alimentary principles" by Dr. Pereira. By washing wheaten dough with a stream of water, the gum, sugar, starch, and vegetable albumen are removed; the ductile, tenacious, elastic, gray mass left is the gluten, common gluten, Beccari's gluten. Pure gluten is the soluble portion on boiling common gluten in alcohol. Granulated gluten, Gluten granule, is a paste made by adding wheat gluten to ordinary wheat. It is said to form an agreeable and nutritious aliment.

GLUTEN ARTICULORUM, Synovia—g. Beccaria's, see Gluten—g. Bread, see Bread, gluten—g. Common, see Gluten—g. Granulated, see Gluten—g. Granule, see Gluten—g. Pure, see Gluten.

GLUTL (γλουτοι.) Nates.

GLUTIA, (γλουτια.) Nates, Quadrigenina corpora.

GLÜTIN, see Gelatin.

GLUTINANS, (glutinare, glutinatum, 'to glue,') Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIF, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIO, Agglutination.

GLUTINEUX, Glutinous.

GLUTINOUS, Glutinosus, Colloides, (gluten, 'paste, glue,') (F.) Glutineux, Gluant. An epithet given to substances taken from the animal or vegetable kingdom, and endowed with unusual viscosity. The decoctions of marsh-mallows, and figs, and the jelly of hartshorn, are said to be glutinous.

GLUTINUM, Gluten.

GLUTITIS, (γλουτι, 'the nates,' and itis.) Inflammation of the nates.

GLUTOI, (γλουτοι.) Nates.

GLUTOPYOISIS, (γλουτοι, 'the nates,' and πυωσις, 'suppuration,') Suppuration of the nates.

GLUTTON, Gluto, Gluto, (glutire, 'to gulp down,') Gastrimargus, Gnat'hon, Hel'luo, Mandu, Gulo'sus, Lur'co, Bellygod, (F.) Glouton, Gourmand, Goulon. An excessive eater.

GLUTTONY, Limo'sis Helluo'sium, Gastris'mus, (F.) Gourmandise. Excessive appetite, owing often to habitual indulgence.

GLUTTUPATENS, (gluttus, and patere, 'to extend,') Stomach.

GLUTTUS, Œsophagus.

GLUTUS, (sing. of gluti, 'the nates,') Trochanter major.

GLYCEMIA, Glycœmia.

GLYCAMIL, (from glycerin, and amyllum.) Plasma.

GLYCANSIS, (γλυκανσις, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet,') Edulcoration.

GLYCASMA, gen. Glycasm'atis, (γλυκυσ, 'sweet,') A sweet wine, prepared from must.

GLYCERATON, (γλυκερος, 'sweet,') Glycyrrhiza.

GLYCERIN, (γλυκυσ, 'sweet,') see Fat—g. Butyrate of, see Butter.

GLYCEROLE, (F.) Glycérolé. A combination of glycerin with some other remedial agent. See Plasma.

GLYCINE APIOS, (from glyco.) Apios tuberosa.

GLYCIPICROS, (glyco, and πικρος, 'bitter,') Solanum dulcamara.

GLYCO, GLYCY, (from γλυκυσ, 'sweet,') in composition, sweet.

GLYCOGENE, Glycogenic matter.

GLYCOGEN, Glycogenic matter.

GLYCOGEN'IC, Glycogenicus. Relating or appertaining to the formation of sugar.

GLYCOGENIC MATTER, Gly'cogen, Gly'cocœne, Hep'atine, Am'yton, Am'yloid, Liverstarch. The peculiar substance in the liver, or elsewhere, which is converted into sugar. In chemical qualities it is said to be the intermediate between starch and dextrin, and to pass readily into sugar in the presence of any animal ferment.

GLYCOG'ENY, Glycogen'ia, Glycogen'esis, Glycogen'ia, Glycogen'esis, (F.) Glycogénie, (glyco, and γένεσις, 'generation,') Generation or formation of sugar,—as in the liver.

GLYCOHÆMIA, Glycœhæmia, Glycæ'mia, Glucæ'mia, (glyco, and hæma, 'blood,') A saccharine condition of the blood.

GLYCOSE, Glucose.

GLYCOSIQUE, (from glyco.) Saccharine.

GLYCOSURIA, (glyco, and ουρον, 'urine,') Diabetes mellitus.

GLYCY, in composition, see Glyco.

GLYCYPHYTON, (glycy, and φυτον, 'a plant,') Glycyrrhiza.

GLYCYRRHIZA, (glycy, and ρίζα, 'a root,') G. Glabra seu Læ'vis, Liquorit'ia Scyth'ica, Glycera'ton, Glycyrrh'ytton, Adip'sos, Al'inios, Liq'uorice, Lic'orice, (F.) Réglisse, Bois doux. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sez. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this southern European plant is inodorous; has a sweet taste; is mucilaginous; and leaves, when unpeeled, a degree of bitterness in the mouth. It is used as a demulcent, and chiefly in catarrh. The extract, made from it and sold in the shops, is known under the name Spanish Liquorice or Liquorice Juice, (F.) Jus de Réglisse. The sweet principle has been called Sicc'charo-gum'mita.

Pectoral Balsam of Liquorice—a quack preparation—is said by Dr. Paris to consist chiefly of Paregoric Elixir, strongly impregnated with Oil of Aniseed.

GLYCYRRHÆA, (glycy, and ῥεω, 'I flow,') A discharge of saccharine fluid from the system.

GLYCYRRHÆA URINOSA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLYSTER, Clyster.

GLYSTER HERBS, Her'bæ pro Encm'atē. The herbs ordinarily sold by the English apothecary under this title, are:—mallow leaves, one part; chamomile flowers, one part. (℞iss of these to Oj of water.)

GNAMPISIS, Curvature.

GNAPHALIUM DIOICUM, (γναφαλον, 'a lock of wool,') owing to the floccose down of the leaves.) Antennaria dioica.

GNAPHALIUM MARGARITÆCEUM, Antemaria Margaritæ'cea, Cud'veed, Pearly Life everlasting. An indigenous plant, growing in woods and fields, and flowering in August. Its virtues are not defined, and the same may be said of

GNAPHALIUM PLANTAGINIFOLIUM seu Plantagineum, Antennaria plantaginifolia; and GNAPHALIUM POLYCEPH'ALUM; Sweet-scented Life everlasting, Catfoot. They appear to be mild astringents.

GNATHALGIA, (gnatho, and αλγος, 'pain,') Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHANCYLOSIS, (gnatho, and αγκυλωσις, 'stiffness of joint,') Ankylosis of the lower jaw.

GNATHANTROPOL'YPUS, (gnathanthrum, 'the antrum of Highmore,') and polyypus.) Polyypus of the antrum of Highmore.

GNATHANTRUM, (gnatho, and αντρον, 'antrum,') Antrum of Highmore.

GNATHITIS, Inflammat'io ge'næ, (gnatho, and itis.) Inflammation of the cheek or upper jaw.

GNATHMUS, (γναθος.) Gnathus.

GNATHO, (γναθος,) in composition, the jaw or cheek.

GNATHOCEPHALUS, (gnatho, and κεφαλη, 'head.') A monster which has no head visible externally, but exhibits voluminous jaws.

GNATHOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GNATHON, (γναθων,) Glutton.

GNATHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHOPLASTY, Gnathoplastice, (gnatho, and πλαστικός, 'formative.') The formation of an artificial cheek.

GNATHOPLEGIA, Gnathoparalysis, (gnatho, and πληγη, 'a stroke.') Paralysis of the cheek. Gnathoparalysis is employed by Fuchs to signify paralysis of the lesser portion of the trifacial nerve, which supplies the muscles of mastication.

GNATHORRHAG'IA, (gnatho, and ῥηγνυμι, 'to burst forth.') Hemorrhage from the internal surface of the cheeks.

GNATHOSPASMUS, Trismus.

GNATHUS, (γναθος.) Gnath'mus, (κνω, 'I scrape, rub.') The cheek, the jaw. Also, the part of the jaws in which the teeth are fixed. See Bucca. Genæ. and Maxillary Bone.

GNESIUS, (γνησιος,) Legitimate.

GNOME, (γνημη.) Intellect.

GNOSIS, (γνησις,) 'knowledge.' A common suffix, as in Diagnosis, Prognosis, &c.

GOACONAX, see Toluifera balsamum.

GOADBY'S SOLUTION, see Solution, Goadby's.

GOATS' BEARD, COMMON, Tragopogon.

GOATS' MILK, see Milk, goats'—g. Milk, artificial, see Milk, goats'—g. Thorn, Astragalus verus.

GOB, Mouth.

GOBELET EMÉTIQUE, Goblet, emetic.

GOB'LET, EMET'IC, Poc'ulum emeticum seu vomitorium, Cu'ltir vomitorius, (F.) Gobelet émetique. A vessel, made by pouring melted antimony into a mould. By putting wine into this and allowing it to stand some time, it acquires the property of producing vomiting. This kind of emetic has been long rejected, as the practitioner could never be certain of the dose he exhibited.

GOD'S MARK. A mark, formerly placed on houses, in England, as a sign that the plague was there.

GOD'BOLD'S VEG'ETABLE BAL'SAM. A quack medicine, said to consist chiefly of simple oxymel.

GODESBERG, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. These waters, at Godesberg, a German mile from Bonn, are an efficacious, acidulous chalybeate, formerly known by the name, Draitech Water. They contain chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, and carbonate of iron.

GOD'FREY'S COR'DIAL. A celebrated nostrum, for which Dr. Paris has given the following formula: Infuse ℥ij of sassafras, and of the seeds of carraway, coriander, and anise, each ℥j, in six pints of water. Simmer the mixture until reduced to ℔iv; then add ℔vj of treacle, and boil the whole for a few minutes. When cold, add ℥iij of tincture of opium. The following form is recommended by a committee of the Philadelphia college of Pharmacy: Tinct. Opii Oiss; Syrupi Nigri Oxxvj; Alcoholis Oij; Aquæ Oxxvj; Carbonatis Potassæ ℥ijss; Olei Sassafras ℥iv. M. It is anodyne.

GODRONNÉ (CANAL), Canalis Petitianus seu Petiti, Couronne citrière, Canal de PETIT ou godronné, Canal or Bul'ular Canal of Petit. Petit gave this name (from [F.] godron, 'a plait or fold,') to the semicircular canal, formed by the tunica hyaloidea around the edge of the crystalline; because it appears plaited or festooned as it were.

GOËTRE, (from guttur, 'throat,' [?]) Bronchocele.

GOOGLE-EYED, Exophthalmus.

GOITRE, (from guttur, 'throat,' [?]) Bronchocele—g. Exophthalmic, see Exophthalmia—g. Leaf, see Lamina.

GOIT'RE STICKS. In South America the stems of a seaweed are so called, because, according to Dr. Royle, they are chewed by the inhabitants where goitre prevails.

GOIT'ROUS, (F.) Goitreux. Relating or appertaining to goitre. One affected by goitre or Bronchocele, Goitred.

GOLD; (Sax. gōld.) Aurum, Chry'sos, Sol, Rez metallo'rum, (F.) Or. A solid, yellow, very brilliant, hard, very ductile, malleable, tenacious, and heavy metal; found in nature either in its native state or combined with a little silver, copper, or iron; s. g. 19.25.

Muriate or Chloride of Gold, Aur'i Chloridum seu Terchloridum seu Murias seu Chloruretum, Aur'um muriat'icum seu Chlorat'um seu Oxydulat'um muriat'icum seu Sali'tum, (F.) Chlorure ou Muriate ou Hydrochlorate d'or has been admitted into the Pharmacopœia of the United States, and into that of Paris, &c. The formulæ, however, differ. That of the United States is a muriate with two bases; and is prepared, according to the form of Dr. Christien, by dissolving the gold in a mixture of nitric and muriatic acids, and adding chloride of sodium to the residuum after evaporation; then redissolving and evaporating slowly to dryness. The Parisian formula for the Muriate d'or, Murias seu Chloruretum Aur'i, consists in simply dissolving the gold in the acids, and evaporating to dryness. It has been recommended as an antisyphilitic in old, rebellious, venereal affections, exostoses, and in venereal, scrofulous, or cancerous glandular enlargements. Dose, gr. 1-8th to gr. ss, rubbed on the tongue or gums. Internally, one-sixteenth of a grain, in pills.

GONIOCATH'ETER, (γωνια, 'an angle,' and καθητηρ, 'a catheter,') An angular or crooked catheter.

GONIOM'E'LE, (γωνια, 'an angle,' and μηλη, 'a probe,') An angular or crooked probe or sound.

GONIOM'ETER, Goniometrum, (γωνια, 'an angle,' and μετρον, 'a measure,') An instrument for measuring angles.

A 'FACIAL GONIOMETER' has been invented by Mr. Turnpenny, of Philadelphia, which is well adapted for measuring the facial angle.

GONO, (from γονος, 'sperm,') in composition, Sperm.

GONOBOLIA, (gono, and βολη, from βαλλειν, 'to throw,') Ejaculation, spermatic.

GONOC'ACE, Gonarthroc'acæ, (gony, and κακος, 'evil,') Tumor genu albus. White swelling of the knee. Hydrarthrus.

GONOC'ELE, (gono, and κηλη, 'a tumor,') Spermatocœle.

GONOF'DES, (gono, and αιδος, 'appearance,') Genit'uræ sim'ilis. Similar to sperm. Sperm'atoid, Spermato'id'es, Spermato'd'es. A term appropriated to any substance which resembles sperm.

GONOL'OBUS MACROPHYL'LUS, (γωνια, 'an angle,' and λοβος, 'a pod,') indigenous. Nat. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. The root is cathartic. It is said to furnish a juice with which the Indians poison their arrows [?].

GONOPOETICUS, (gono, and ποιω, 'I make,') Spermatozœus.

GONORRHÉE BÂTARDE, Gonorrhœa spuria.

GONORRHŒA, (erroneously called from gono, and ρω, 'I flow,' because the older writers believed it to be a flux of semen;) Blennorrhag'ia, Blennorrhœ'a, B. urethral'is, Blennorrhœ'ia, Phallorrhœ'a, Medorrhœ'a, M. vir'ilis, Catar'rhœus gonorrhœ'a seu ure'thræ, Urethrit'is, Inflammatio ure'thræ, Urethral'gia, Profluvium mucosum ure'thræ, Catar'rhus urethral'is, (F.) Écoulement, Ure'thrite, Ure'trite. An inflammatory discharge of mucus from the membrane of the urethra in both sexes; and from that of the prepuce in man, and the vagina in woman. It may be excited spontaneously, or by irritants applied directly to the membrane; but is usually produced by impure connexion. Two great varieties have been generally reckoned.—I. GONORRHŒA PURA SEU BENIGNA. That which does not follow an impure connexion; rha'a catarrhalis seu noncontagio'sa; and, 2. GONORRŒEA IMPURA, malig'na, contagio'sa, syphilitica, et virulenta; Fluor albus malig'nus, Fluxus venereus, Blennorrhœa luo'des, Biptorrhœa, Myxio'sis, Lues gonorrhœica, Seroph'ula gonorrhœica, Tuberc'ula gonorrhœica, Clap. (Old E.) Chaudpys, (F.) Chandepisse; that which is the result of impure commerce. The French also distinguish the Chandepisse sèche, or that unaccompanied with discharge, and the Chandepisse cordée, Gonorrhœa corda'ta, Chordurethri'tis, or that accompanied with chordee, and which of course occurs only in the male. See Chordee. It is the kind that most frequently engages the attention of the practitioner, and is characterized by mucous discharge from the urethra or vagina, intermixed with specific matter, and accompanied with burning pain on micturition. It is decidedly infectious. It is, however, a distinct disease from syphilis, and never produces it. Its duration is various, but the inflammatory symptoms usually subside in four or five weeks, generally leaving behind more or less of the gonorrhœa mucosa or gleet. Gonorrhœa of every kind, attended with any inflammatory symptoms, is best treated by the antiphlogistic regimen, avoiding every kind of irritation, and keeping the body cool by small doses of salts, and the urine diluted by the mildest fluids. After the inflammatory symptoms have subsided, cubebæ, or the balsam of copaiba, exhibited in the dose of ʒss to ʒj three times a day, will be found effectual: indeed, during the existence of the inflammatory symptoms, it often affords decided relief. Injections are rarely required.

(F.) Échauffement, Blennorrhag'ia benigna, Cau'torrhœ'a benigna, Catar'rhus Ure'thræ, Gonor-

Sometimes, gonorrhœa affects the glans: when it is called Gonorrhœa Spuria seu Balani. Balanoblenorrhœa, Balanorrhœa, Balani'tis, Blennorrhag'ia spuria seu no'tha, (F.) Blennorrhagie du gland, Gonorrhée bâtarde, Fausse Blennorrhagie. It requires only cleanliness and cooling lotions. This is the simple form of balanitis. It may, however, be of the impure kind—Balanorrhag'ia, (F.) Balanite contagiense. When implicating both glans and prepuce, it is Balano-posthi'tis.

Some other varieties of gonorrhœa have been enumerated, but they are of little moment.

In consequence of repeated attacks of gonorrhœa, or of the debility induced by a single attack, it not unfrequently happens, as already remarked, that a constant, small discharge occurs, or remains behind, after all danger of infection is removed. The great difference between it and gonorrhœa is, that it is uninfectious. The discharge consists of globular particles, contained in a slimy mucus, and is generally devoid of that yellow colour which characterizes the discharge of gonorrhœa virulenta. It is unattended with pain, scalding, &c. To this state the names Gleet, Gonorrhœa mucosa, Blennorrhœa chron'ica, Blennorrhœa, &c. have been given. It is commonly a disease of some duration, and demands the use of the copaiba, astringent injections; and, if obstinate, the introduction of the bongie.

GORG'ET, ([F.] gorge, 'the throat,') Cannalis emalical'us, Ductor canalicul'us, (F.) Gorget. An instrument representing a long gutter, in the shape of a throat, which is especially employed in the operations of lithotomy and fistula in ano.

GORGET, CUTTING, see Gorget and Lithotomy.

GORGET FOR FIS'TULA IN ANO consists of a semi-cylindrical wooden staff, four inches long, without including the handle, and furnished with a wide groove. This is introduced into the rectum, to prevent the point of the bistoury from injuring the intestine, when the internal orifice of the fistula is deeply situate, and it is desirable to perform the operation by incision. This instrument, invented by Marchetti, has been modified by Percy, Runge, &c.

Desault invented an instrument for conducting the wire by the anus, in the operation for fistula by ligature. He called it Gorget à repoussoir.

GORGET, LITHOTOMY, (F.) Gorgeter Lithotome, Cutting Gorg'et, is the one used in the operation for the stone, for the purpose of dividing the prostate and the neck of the bladder, so as to enable the surgeon to introduce the forceps and extract the stone. At the end of this gorget is a crest or beak, which fits the groove of the staff, and admits of the gorget being passed along it into the bladder. Besides cutting, there are also blunt gorges, intended to be introduced into the wound—their concavity serving as a guide for the forceps into the bladder.

The chief modifications in the gorge have been made by Andouillet, Bell, Blicke, Bromfield, Cline, Desault, Foubert, Hawkins, Larrey, Lefèvre, Michælis, Thomas, &c.

GORGONEI FONTES, (from the fabulous Gorgons, who had the power of turning all who beheld them to stone.) Fountains described by Libavius as containing water which possessed a petrifying property; probably, water holding in solution supercarbonate of lime.

The gout was formerly regarded as a catarrh, and received its name from (F.) goutte, (L.) gutta, 'a drop;' because it was believed to be produced by a liquid, which distilled, goutte à goutte, 'drop by drop,' on the diseased part. This name, which seems to have been first used about the year 1270, has been admitted into the different languages of Europe. Gout is an inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints. It almost always attacks, first, the great toe; whence it passes to the other smaller joints, after having produced, or been attended with, various sympathetic phenomena, particularly in the digestive organs: after this, it may attack the greater articulations. It is an affection which is extremely fugitive, and variable in its recurrence. It may be acquired, or hereditary. In the former case, it rarely appears before the age of thirty-five; in the latter, it is frequently observed earlier. It is often difficult to distinguish it from rheumatism. A combination is, indeed, supposed to exist sometimes; hence called Rheumatic gout. During the paroxysm or fit, a burning, lancinating pain is experienced in the affected joint, attended with tumefaction, tension, and redness. One or more joints may be attacked, either at the same time or in succession; and, in either case, the attack terminates by resolution in a few days. This is the Arthritis acuta seu inflammato'ria seu regula'ris, Regular gout, Arthro'sia pod'agra regula'ris, Arth'ragra legit'ima seu vera seu genu'na seu norma'lis, (F.) Goutte régulière chaude. At other times, pains in the joints exist, of more or less acute character; the swelling being without redness. These pains persist, augment, and diminish irregularly, without exhibiting intermission, and, consequently, without having distinct paroxysms. The disease is then called atonic, asthenic, imperfect or irregular gout, Chronic G., Arthritis atonica seu asthenica, Arthro'sia Pod'agra larvata, Dysarthrit'is, Arth'ragra. It is commonly called in France Goutte froide, Goutte blanche. It may appear primarily, or succeed attacks of regular gout.

Gout does not always confine itself to the joints. It may attack the internal organs: when it is called Arthritis aber'rans seu errat'ica seu planet'ica seu vaga, Planar'thragra, Arth'ragra anom'ala, Pod'agra aber'rans, Vare'ni, Wandering, misplaced, or anomalous gout, (F.) Goutte vague.

Ret'rograde gout, Arthritis retro'rada, Pod'agra retro'rada, Arthro'sia Podagra complicata, Rece'dent or misplac'ed gout, (F.) Goutte remontée, G. malplacée, G. rentrée, is when it leaves the joints suddenly and attacks some internal organ, as the stomach, intestines, lungs, brain, &c.

Gout is also called, according to the part it may affect, Podagra, Gonagra, Chiro'agra, &c. It may be acute or chronic, and may give rise to concretions, which are chiefly composed of urate of soda. See Calculus, (arthritic.) It may, also, give occasion to nodosities, when it is called Arthritis nodosa, (F.) Goutte nouée.

The treatment of active gout is antiphlogistic, and the local disorder should be but little interfered with. Colchicum seems to have great power over the disease. It forms the basis of the Eau médicinale d'Husson, a celebrated French gout-remedy. The author—a long sufferer—relies wholly on the Vinum colchici radicis. The bowels must be kept regular by rhubarb and magnesia; and a recurrence of the disease be prevented by abstemious habits.

GRAMEN CRUCIS CYPEROIDIS, Gramen Ægyptiacum, Ægyptian Cock's foot grass. Ord. Gramineæ. The roots and plants possess the virtues of the Triticum repens, and have been recommended in the earlier stages of dropsy. They were, formerly, considered to possess many other properties.

GRAMEN DIOSCORIDIS, Triticum repens—g. Major, Sarsaparilla Germanica—g. Orientale, Juncus odoratus—g. Repens, Triticum repens—g. Rubrum, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

GRAMIA, Chassie, Lippitudo.

GRAMINIVOROUS, Graminivorus, (gramen, gen. graminis, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat,') Feeding or subsisting on grass.

GRAMMARIUM, Gramme, Scruple.

GRAMME, (γραμμ,) Gramma'rium. An ancient weight, equivalent to the 24th part of an ounce, or to 24 grains or a scruple, avoirdupois. At the present day, the gramme is equal in weight to a cubed centimètre of water; or to 18 grains, poids de marc—15.434 grains, Troy.

GRAMME, (γραμμ,) Iris, Line.

GRAMMITIS AUREA, Asplenium ceterach—g. Ceterach, Asplenium ceterach.

GRANDEB'ALÆ, The hair in the arm-pits.

GRANDGORE, ([Sc.]) Syphilis.

GRANDINOSUM OS, (from grando, 'hail,') Cuboid.

GRANDO, 'hail,' Chalaza.

GRANIVOROUS, Graminivorus, (granum, 'a grain,' and voro, 'I eat,') Feeding or subsisting on grain or seeds.

GRANTRISTUM, Anthrax.

GRANULA SANGUINIS, (pl. of Granulum, and dim. of Grana,) Globules of the blood—g. Seminis, see Sperm.

GRANULAR, Granulous, Granulo'sus, (F.) Granulé, Granuleux, (from granule,) Composed of or containing granules or small particles,—as 'granular eyelid,' 'membrana granulosa,' &c., &c.

GRANULAR CONJUNCTIVA, Trachoma—g. Degeneration or Disorganization of the Kidney, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—g. Eyelid, Trachoma—g. Layer, Membrana granulosa—g. Liver, Cirrhosis—g. Tin, see Tin.

GRANULATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

GRANULATION, Granulatio, (from granule,) Gemma, (F.) Bourgeon, B. charnu. Granulations are the reddish, conical, flesh-like shoots, which form at the surface of suppurating wounds and ulcers. They are the product of inflammatory excitement, and may be produced in indolent ulcers, by exciting the parts by proper stimulants. They form the basis of the cicatrix.

GRANULATION is, likewise, a name given by the modern French physicians to an organic lesion, consisting in the formation of small, round, firm, shining, semi-transparent tumours, of the size and shape of millet-seed, or of a pea; which are met with in the lungs particularly, and in considerable quantity; often without materially interfering with their functions.

In pharmacy, granulation is a process by which a metal is reduced to fine grains, by melting it, and causing it, whilst liquid, to pass through a kind of sieve into a vessel of water,—as in the making of shot:— or by making or rubbing the melted metal in an appropriate box or vessel,— as in the formation of granular tin or granulated zinc.

GRANULATIONS OÛRÉBRALES, Glandule Pacchioni.

GRANULATIONS, MILIARY, Miliary tubercles, are the small, transparent grains, of variable size, from that of a millet-seed to that of a grain of hemp which are presumed to be the primitive state of tubercles.

GRAN'ULE, Gran'ulum; (dim. of granum, 'a grain.')

A small grain; a small compact particle; a cytoblast. Used, in French pharmacy, for a sugar-coated pill, or any small dragée.

GRANULES SEMINAL, Gran'ula sem'inalis. Minute, rounded, granulated bodies, observable in the semen, which are, in all cases, much less numerous than the spermatozooids. See Sperm.

GRANULEUX, Granular.

GRANULUM, Granule.

GRANULOUS, Granular.

GRANUM, Grain.

GRANVILLE'S LOTION, see Lotion, Granville's counter-irritant.

GRAPE, ([F.] groppe, 'a cluster, a bunch,') see Vitis vinifera—g. Sea-side, see Kino.

GRAPECURE, (F.) Cure de raisin, (G.) Traubenkur, Weintraubenkur. A medication in Germany, which consists in the use of the grape for both meat and drink; nothing more at the farthest being allowed than a piece of dry bread. This diet is continued for weeks. Its effects are altogether revellent, and resemble in many respects those of hydropathy.

GRAPES, DRIPED, Uvæ passæ.

GRAPHIDOIDES, (γραφίσις, gen. γραφίδος, 'a style,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Styloid.

GRAPHIOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIS'CUS, (γραφίσκος,) Graphis'cus Di'ocletis. An instrument invented by Diocles for extracting darts [?]. Said, in many of the Dictionaries, but erroneously, to be described by Celsus. He speaks only of the Cyathis'cus Di'ocletis, Δοκλειος κυαθίσκος. See Cyathiscus.

GRAPHITES, (from γραφω, 'to write,') Plumbago, Supercarbure'tum seu Carbur'e'tum Fer'ri, Ferri Carbona'tum seu Supercarbure'tum, Car'bo mine'r'alis, Galena, Galē'nē, Plumb'um nig'rum, Ceruss'ua nigra, Gr'aphite, Car'bur'et of iron, Black lead, Wad, (F.) Crayon noir, Plombagine, Charbon minéral, Carbure de fer. This substance has been esteemed slightly astringent and desiccative. It has been advised by Weinhold in the cure of herpes.

GRAPHOÏDES, (γραφίσις, 'a style,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Styloid.

GRAPHOSPASMUS, (γραφω, 'I write,' and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Cramp, writers'.

GRAS DES CADAUVRES, 'fat of dead bodies,' ([L.] crassius, 'thick, fat,') Adipocire—g. des Cimetières, Adipocire.

GRAS FONDURE (F.), Diarrhœa adiposa, literally, 'molten grease.' A species of diarrhœa, referred to by old writers; accompanied with great emaciation, and in which the evacuations contain fat-like matter. According to Sauvages, the Grasfondure differs from colliquative diarrhœa in not being attended with hectic fever.

GRAS DE JAMBE, Sura.

GRASS, (Sax. grær,) Asparagus, Triticum repens—g. Bear's, Yucca filamentosa—g. Bermuda, Cynodon dactylon—g. Bitter, Aletris farinosa—g. Blue-eyed, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum—g. Brome, Bromus ciliatus—g. Brome, soft, Bromus ciliatus—g. Canary, cultivated, Phalaris Canariensis—g. Couch, Triticum repens—g. Dog, Triticum repens—g. Eel, Pila marina—g. GRASS, PHYSIC, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum—g. Rib, Plantago lanceolata—g. Scurvy, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum—g. Silk, Yucca filamentosa—g. Sweet, Acorus Calamus.

GRASS TREE, Xanthorrhœa.

GRASS, VIPERS', Scorzonera—g. Yellow-eyed, Xyris bulbosa.

GRASSET (F.), (from crassus, 'thick' [?]). The anterior region of the thigh, bounded below by the patella.

GRASSEYEMENT (F.), 'speaking thick.' (from gras, 'thick,') Sol'nis blæsus, Rotacis'mus. According to Sauvages, a vicious pronunciation of the letter r. They who speak thick, like the inhabitants of Newcastle, in England, or of Havre, in France, have difficulty in pronouncing the r, and they frequently substitute for it the letter l; but this does not properly constitute Grasseyement. It consists in this: that, in words in which the letter r is joined to another consonant, a sort of burring or guttural rolling is heard, nearly like that produced by gargling. See Rotacism.

GRASUS, (γρασος,) Cinabra, Hircismus.

GRATIA DEI, ('grace of God,') Gratiola officinalis.

GRATIOLA CENTAUROIÏDES, G. officinalis.
GRATIOLA OFFICINALIS, Digit'alis min'ima, Grat'ia Dei, Gratiola Centaurioïdes, Hedge hyssop, Herb of Grace, gratia, 'grace or favour,' owing to its presumed excellent medical virtues.) It is a native of the South of Europe. (F.) Gratiol'e, Séné des prés, Petite digitale, Herbe au pauvre homme. The plant is inodorous; taste strong, bitter, nauseous. It is possessed of anthelmintic, purgative, emetic, and diuretic properties. Dose, ten grains.

GRATIOLE, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATELLE, (from gratter, 'to scratch,') Psoriasis.

GRATTERON, Galium aparine.

GRATTOIR, Raspatorium.

GRAVATIF, (from [L.] gravis,) Heavy.

GRAVE, (from gravis,) Serious—g. Plant, Datura sanguinea.

GRAVEDO, gen. Gravedinis, (from gravis,) Catarrh, Coryza,—g. Neonatorum, Snuffles.

GRAVEL, (dim. of old [F.] grave, 'a pebble' itself, perhaps, from [Teut.] graben, 'to dig out,') Lith'ia renal'ia areno'sa, Lith'iasis nephrit'ica seu renal'is, (F.) Gravelle. A disease occasioned by small concretions, similar to sand or gravel, Gla'rea, (F.) Gravier, which forms in the kidneys, passes along the ureters to the bladder, and is expelled with the urine. These concretions, which are commonly composed of urates and an animal matter, are deposited at the bottom of the vessel, immediately after the excretion of the urine; and, by their hardness and resistance under the finger, differ considerably from the ordinary sediment of that liquid. A vegetable diet and alkaline drinks are the best prophylactics. See Calculi, urinary. A fit of the Gravel, Nephral'gia calculo'sa seu areno'sa, Col'lica nephrit'ica, is the excruciating suffering induced by the passage of gravel from the kidney to the bladder. It can only be relieved by anæsthetics, opiates, the warm bath, &c.

When the deposit is in fine particles, it is termed Sand, Are'na, Are'nula, Psam'ma, Psammus.

GRAVEL GRASS, Galium verum.

GRAVEL, PILEOUS or HAIR'Y, (F.) Gravelle pileuse. A species of gravel containing hairs, phosphate of lime, ammoniaco-magnesian phosphate, and a little uric acid.

GRAVEL PLANT, Epigœa repens—g. Root, Eupatorium purpureum.

GRAVELEUX, Calculous.
GRAVELLE, (see Gravel,) Chalaza, Gravel—g. Pileuse, Gravel, pileous.
GRAVEOLENS, (gravis, and oleo, 'I smell,') Fetid.
GRAVID, (from gravis,) Pregnant.
GRAVIDIN, (from gravid,) A sediment in the urine of pregnant women, which, according to Stark, by its decomposition gives rise to the pellicle kysteine. It differs from albumen, casein and gelatin.
GRAVIDITAS, Fecundation, Pregnancy—g. Abdominalis, Pregnancy, abdominal—g. Extra-uterina, see Pregnancy—g. Extra-uterina in Ovario, Pregnancy, ovarian—g. Extra-uterina Secundaria, Metacyesis—g. Interstitialis, Pregnancy, interstitial—g. Molaris, Mole—g. Ovarii, Pregnancy, ovarian—g. Spuria, Pregnancy, false—g. Tubaria, Pregnancy, tubal, Salpingocycosis—g. Uteri substantiâ, Pregnancy, interstitial—g. Uterina, Pregnancy.
GRAVIER, Gravel.
GRAVIMETER, (gravis, and μετρον, 'a measure,') Areometer.
GRAVIS, Heavy.
GRAVITY, SPECIFIC, Gravitas specifica, (F.) Pesanteur spécifique. The relation between the weight of a body and its bulk; thus, supposing four bodies to be of the same size, but to weigh, one four, another three, another two, and the fourth one; the specific gravity of the first will be four times greater than that of the last. The specific gravities of different bodies are, therefore, as the weights, bulk for bulk. For solids, and liquids, water is taken as the unit; atmospheric air for the gases. Thus, water is 1.000; mercury, at the common temperature, 13.58. Whence, we conclude mercury is between thirteen and fourteen times heavier than water.
 When the specific gravity of a substance is given, its temperature is assumed to be at 60° Fah.
GRAYHAIRD, see Poliosis.
GRAY MATTER OF THE BRAIN, Cortex cerebri, see Neurine.
GRAYMILL, Lithospermum officinale.
GREASE, ([F.] Graisse, 'fat.'). A specific inflammation, affecting the skin of the heels of the horse, which is especially interesting from the circumstance, that the matter, if inserted under the cuticle of an unprotected individual, may give rise to an affection—grease-pox, variola equina—which preserves the person from smallpox. [?]

GRENOUILLE, ('a frog,') Rana esculenta.
GRENOUILLETTE, (dim. of grenouille, 'a frog,') Ranula.
GRÉOULX, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Sulphuretted springs in the department of Basses-Alpes, France. Temperature, about 100° Fah. The season is from the first of May to the first of October.
GRESSURA, Perineum.
GRESSUS, gen. Gressûs, (gradior, gressus, 'to step,') Walking.
GREVURE, (from grever, 'to aggrieve, to burden' [?]) Hernia.
GRÎAS CAULIFLO'RA; (from γρᾶν, 'to eat,') Anchovy Pear. The fruit of a tree of the Nat. Ord. Onagrea, which grows in the West Indies. It is large, has a stone, and is eaten.
GRIELUM, Apium petroselinum, Smyrnum olusatrum.
GRIFF, see Mulatto.
GRIFFO, see Mulatto.
GRINCEMENT DES DENTS, 'grinding the teeth,' (by onomatopoeia [?]), Brygmus.
GRINCOMES, (old [E.]), Syphilis.
GRINDER. One who grinds or polishes, see Quizzer.
GRINDERS, Molar teeth—g. Asthma, see Asthma, grinders'—g. Disease, see Asthma, grinders'—g. Rot, see Asthma, grinders'.

GRIPPE, CUTTING ON THE, (from (F.) gripper, Sax. gripan, 'to clutch,' 'to seize,') See Lithotomy.
GRIPES, (same etymon,) Tormina, Colic.
GRIPES, WATERY. A popular name for a dangerous disease of infancy, common in England, which does not differ essentially from the cholera infantum of this country.
GRIPHOSIS, (γριπος, 'bent,') Onychogryphosis.
GRIPPE (F.), (gripper, 'to clutch,' 'to seize,') A vulgar name for several catarrhal diseases, which have reigned epidemically; as the influenza.
GRIPPE, Pinched.
GRISOU, see Hydrogen carburetted.
GRISTLE, (Sax. gripcle,) Cartilage.
GRITS, Groats.
GRIT GRU'EL, Water gruel. This is made as follows:—Take three ounces of grits; wash them well in cold water, and, having poured off the fluid, put them into four pints of fresh water, and boil slowly until the water is reduced one-half; then strain through a sieve. It is a good demulcent, and is employed also as a vehicle for clysters.
Cornmeal Gruel may be made in like manner—two large spoonfuls to a pint of water.
 Milk may be added to both of these.
GROAN, (from Sax. groman, 'to groan,' by onomatopoeia.) See Suspirium.
GROATS, (from Sax. gryt,) Gru'tum, Avena excorticata; (F.) Gruau, Oatmeal, (Yorkshire.) Oats, hulled, but unground, (Lancashire.) Hulled oats, half ground. Oats that have the hulls taken off; Grits, (Prov.) Cutlins. When crushed, they are termed Emb'den groats. In America, fine hominy is called Grits, and wheat prepared in the same way is likewise so designated. It is also called wheat'en hom'iny. See Avena.
GROATS, CRACOW, Semolina.
GROCERS' ITCH, see Eczema Impetiginodes, Psoriasis.
GROGBLOSSOMS, Gutta rosea.
GROGROSES, Gutta rosea.
GROIN, Inguen.
GROMWELL, Lithospermum officinale.

GROMYL, Lithospermum officinale.

GROOVE, Fur'rou, Sul'eus, (F.) Rainurc. (Icelandic, grafa, Sax. grapan, 'to dig.') A channel or gutter in a bone or surgical instrument. See Couliasse.

GROOVE, PRIMITIVE, Primitive streak or trace, Nota primitiva. A bright streak in the long axis of the pellucid part of the area germinativa after it presents a central pellucid and a peripheral opaque part, and passes from the round to the pear shape.

GROOV'ED. Sulca'tus, Stria'tus, Canalicula'tus, (F.) Cannelé ou Canelé ou Canaliculé. Canaliculated. Having a small channel or gutter, as a grooved probe.—Aulucome'lé, Culome'lé, Specill'um Sulca'tum.

GROS, Drachm.

GROS COU, 'large neck,' (from crassus, 'thick.') Bronchocele—g. Retombé, Passerina tartonraira.

GROSELLER NOIR, Ribes nigrum—g. Rouge, Ribes rubrum.

GROSELLLES, (from grossulus, dim. of grossus, 'a small fig.')

Ribes nigrum—g. Rouge, Ribes rubrum.

GROSSE GORGE, ('large throat,') Bronchocele.

GROSSESSE, (from gros, grosse, 'large,') Pregnancy—*g. Abdominale, Pregnancy, abdominal—g. Afetale, Pregnancy, afetal—g. Bigéminale, Pregnancy, bigeminal—g. Complexe, Pregnancy, complex—g. GROSSULARIA, Ribes uva crispa—g. Nigra, Ribes nigrum—g. Non spinosa, Ribes nigrum—g. Rubra, Ribes rubrum.

GROTTO DEI SERPI (I.) 'Grotto of serpents.' A grotto near Braccano, in Italy, filled with warm water, to which invalids, affected with skin diseases, resort.

GROUILLEMENT D'ENTRAILLES, ('rumbling of the bowels,') Borborygmus.

GROUND BERRY, Gaultheria—g. Holly, Gaultheria—g. Ivy, Gaultheria, Glechoma hederacea—g. Nut, Apios tuberosa, Arachis hypogea, Pignut—g. Pine, Teucrium chamæpitys—g. Pine, French, Teucrium iva.

GROUNDIESWALLOW (Sc.), Senecio.

GROUNDSEL, ([Sax.] grunneþelge.) Senecio—g. Tree, Baccharis halimifolia.

GROUSEBERRY, Gaultheria.

GROWTH, (Sax. grapan, 'to grow.')

Incrementum, Crescencia, Anaplo'sis, Anaptyxis, (F.) Croissance, Crue. The development of the body; particularly in the direction of its height. Also, any adventitious tissue; thus, we speak of a morbid growth or formation. See Development.

GROZET-EYED, (Prov.) Exophthalmus.

GRUAU, see Groats.

GRUB, Larve, see Ectozaa.

GRUBS, Aene punctata.

GRUEL, GRIT, see Grits—g. Water, see Avena, and Grits.

GRUFF, (Teutonic ge, and ru h, 'rough.')

In pharmacy, the coarse residue, which will not pass through the sieve in pulverization.

GRUMEAU, (from grumus,) Coagulum.

GRUMOUS, Grumo'sus, (F.) Grumelé, Grumeleux, (grumus, 'a clot.') Clotted.

GRUMUS, Coagulum.

GRUTUM. 'Groats.' Grutum Mil'ium, Mil'ium. A hard white tubercle of the skin, resembling, in size and appearance, a millet-seed, found on the eyelids, the root of the nose, the scrotum and ear. See, also, Groats.

GRYPHI'US PES. The Griffon's foot, (F.) Pied de Griffon. An instrument of which Ambrose Paré speaks, which was used for extracting moles from the uterus.

GRYPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRYPHOSIS, (γρυψος, 'bent,' and osis.) Incurvatio. Curvature or crookedness in general. Crookedness or incurvation of the nails. See Onychogryphosis.

GRYPOTES, (γρυπτης,) see Grypus.

GRYPUS, (from γρυψος, 'bent.')

One who has a crooked or aquiline nose. The condition is termed Grypotes.

GUA'CO, Hua'co. The name of a plant, Eupatorium Guaco, described by Humboldt and Bonpland under the name Mikania Guaco, Ord. Compositae, which grows in the valleys of Madalena, Rio Cauca, &c., in South America. The negroes use the juice against the bites of poisonous reptiles;—both in the way of prevention and cure. It has been, of late, brought forward as a remedy in cholera.

GUAIAIC, see Guaiaicum.

GUAIACI LIGNUM, see Guaiaicum—g. Resina, see Guaiaicum.

GUAIAICINE, see Guaiaicum.

GUAIAICUM, G. Officina'le seu America'num, Lignum vitæ seu sanctum seu benedictum seu Ind'icum, Pal'us sanctus, Hagioc'ylum, (F.) Gayac, Gaïac, Ord. Zygophyllæ. The resin—Guaïaci Res'ina, Guaïac, (F.) Résine ou Gomme de Gaïac—and the wood—Guaïaci lignum—are both used in medicine. Their odour is slightly fragrant; taste warm and bitter, of the resin more so than of the wood. The resin is concrete, brittle; colour, externally, greenish; internally grayish. Water dissolves about one-tenth; alcohol 95 parts. It is soluble, also, in liquor potassæ 15 parts, liquor ammoniæ 38 parts. The powder is whitish, but changes to green in the air. The base of the guaiaicum is a peculiar resin, called Guaïacine.

Guaiaicum is stimulant and diaphoretic; and in large doses, purgative. It is administered in chronic rheumatism, gout, cutaneous diseases, and the sequelæ of syphilis. Dose of resin, gr. v to xx:—to purge, gr. xx to xl.

Guaïacum sanctum, and G. angustifolium have the same virtues as G. officinale.

GUALTHERIA, Gaultheria.

GUANO,—according to Tschudi, properly Huano, 'dung'—is formed of the excrements of different kinds of marine birds—mews, divers, sheerbreaks, &c., but especially of the Sula variegata. It is found in enormous layers in the South American islands of the Pacific, and is used as manure.

GUARANA, Paulinia.

GUARANHEM, Monesia.

GUARANIN, see Coffea Arabica.

GUARAPO. A fermented liquor made, in Peru, of sugarcane pulp and water. It is a very favourite beverage of the negroes.

GUARD (for a bed), Al'esse.

GUARERBA ORBA, Momordica elaterium.

GUAVA APPLE, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAYAVA, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAZA, see Bangue.

GUBERNACULUM DENTIS, ('rudder of the tooth,' from gubernare, 'to govern.')

A cord which passes from the follicle of the permanent tooth along a small long canal behind the alveolus of the milk tooth, and becomes continuous with the gum. The gubernaculum has been supposed to direct the permanent tooth outwards. The canal has been termed Pter dentia.

GUBERNACULUM TESTIS, Gubernaculum testis Hunteri, G. Hunteri, Hunteri Ligamentum suspensorium Testis, (F.) Gouvernail du testicule. A triangular, fibro-cellular cord; which, in the fetus, arises from the ramus of the ischium and the skin of the scrotum, and proceeds to the posterior part of the testicle, before this organ issues from the abdomen. It has been supposed to be a continuation of the fascia superficialis with muscular fibres from the internal oblique muscle, which pass upwards to the testis when in the abdomen; and by their contraction draw the testis down, and ultimately form the cremaster muscle.

GUÉRISABLE, Curable.

GUI, Viscum album—g. de Chêne, Viscum album.

GUIDER, ('leader.') Tendon.

GUILANDINA MORINGA, (after Melchior Guilandinus (Wieland), a professor at Padua,) Hyperanthe'ra moringa. A plant, Ord. Leguminosæ, which affords the Ben nut, and the lignum nephriticum. It is also called Morin'ga Oleifera seu Zeylan'ica seu Nux ben. Under the name Guilandina moringa, Linnæus is said to have confounded Moringa pterygosperma and M. ap'tera. Hyperanthe'ra moringa is a synonyme of the former species. The nut Ben, Ben nux, Glans unguenta'ria, Balanus Myrep'ica, San'dalum cœruleum, Oily Acorn or Ben nut, is a West India nut which furnishes an oil. O'leum Balan'num, Oil of Ben, that does not become rancid by age, and is hence used by perfumers. It is purgative.

The wood of the Guilandina is called Lignum Nephriticum, and has been used in decoction, in affections of the urinary organs.

GUILLOTINE TONSIL, (after Guillotin, the reviver of the maiden, a Scotch instrument of decapitation.) Amygdalotome.

GUILTY CUPS, (Prov.) Ranunculus acris.

GUIMAUVE, Althæa—g. Veloutée, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

GULA, (akin to collum [?]) Œsophagus, Pharynx.

GULÉ IMBECILLITAS, ('weakness of the throat,') Pharyngoplegia—g. Principium, Pharynx.

GULLET, (from gula.) Œsophagus.

GULLION (Prov.), Colic.

GULOSUS, (from gula, 'the gullet,') Glutton.

GULSCHOCH, (Sc. from Belg. Geelzucht, 'yellow disease,') Icterus.

GUM, WHITE, Liquidambar styraciflua, Strophulus—g. Yellow, Icterus infantum.

GUM'MA, gen. Gumma'tis, (F.) Gomme. An elastic tumour formed in the periosteum occupying particularly the cranium and sternum, and produced by the syphilitic virus, when it has been long in the constitution. It is so called, because, when opened, it contains a matter like gum. These tumours—gumma'ta—are likewise termed Tubercula gumma'ta and Tumores gumma'ti, (F.) Tumeurs gommeuses.

GUM'MI, (σπυμ) Commi, (F.) Gomme. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is a solid, uncrystallizable, inodorous substance, of a mawkish taste, unchangeable in the air, insoluble in alcohol, but soluble in water, with which it forms a mucilage. It is obtained from various species of mimosa and prunus; and consequently there are many varieties of gum. They are used in medicine as demulcents, emollients, and relaxants, particularly in catarrh, intestinal irritations, &c.; and in Pharmacy, are employed in the formation of emulsions, pills, &c.

GUMMI NOS'TRAS, (F.) Gomme du Pays, Indig'genous Gum. These generic names are given to several species of gum, which flow spontaneously from certain indigenous fruit trees,—such as the almond, cherry, peach, apricot, &c. The indigenous gums have nearly the same properties as gum Arabic; but they are inferior to it.

GUMMI ORENBURGENSE, see Pinus larix—g. Pnacia, see Pastinaca opoponax—g. ad Podagram, Cambogia.

GUMMIRE'S'NA, Gumresin. A milky juice, obtained by making incisions into the branches, stalks and roots of certain vegetables. Gum-resins are compounds of resin, gum, often with essential oil, and different other vegetable matters. They are solid, opaque, brittle, of a strong odour, acid taste, variable colour, and are heavier than water. Water dissolves a part of them, and alcohol another; hence proof spirit is the proper menstruum. The generality of the gum-resins are powerful stimulants to the whole or to parts of the economy. The chief are asafoetida, gum-ammoniac, euphorbium, galbanum, combo, myrrh, alibanum, opoponax, scammony, aloes, &c.

 GUNNERA PERPEN'SA, (after J. Ernst Gunner, a botanist and bishop of Drontheim.) A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Urticaceæ; the decoction of which is taken as a domestic remedy by the farmers, as a tonic in dyspepsia. A tincture has been used in gravel. An infusion of the leaves is demulcent, and is employed in pulmonary affections. The leaves are applied, fresh, to wounds and ulcers.
 GURGES, gen. Gur'gitis, Pharynx.
 GURGITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temp. at its source, 176° Fah. It contains carbonic acid, carbonates of lime, magnesia, iron and soda, sulphates of lime and soda, chloride of sodium and silica.
 GURG'LING. 'Gushing with noise,' as water from a bottle. (Same etymon as gargling.) (F.) Garyouillement. The rhonchus or râle heard on auscultation when there is a cavity in the lungs containing pus. It is the 'cavernous rattle or rhonchus,' Râle caverneux. The size of the bubbles heard varies, and hence the rhonchus has been called cav'ernous and cavern'ulous, (F.) Râle cavernuleux. If the cavern be large, this râle will nearly resemble the gurgling of a bottle (glouglou d'une bouteille;) if, on the contrary, the cavern be small, it will not differ from the râle muqueux.
 GURGULIO, (like curculio.) Penis, Uvula.

 GUTTA, ('a drop,') Apoplexy, Cambogia, Gout.
 GUTTA. A Drop, Stalagma, Stranx, Alun'sel, Stilla, (F.) Goutte. A quantity of liquid, generally valued, in pharmacy, at the weight of a grain. The weight, however, varies, according to different circumstances, as the degree of tenacity of the fluid, and the extent of moist surface to which the suspended drop is attached before it falls; and it was found by Mr. Alsop to be influenced by the size of the bottle, and the angle of inclination at which it was held during the operation of dropping. The following are some of his results as to the number of drops required to measure a fluidrachm, when dropped from a large and a small bottle.

Prof. Wm. Procter, of Philadelphia, has given a table of the number of drops to a fluidrachm of essential oils, when dropped from the bottles from which they are commonly dispensed, and from a minim measure; and Mr. Edward Parrish one of different liquids dropped, under like circumstances, from pint and half pint tincture bottles, and from a minim measure. The following is the number of drops of different liquids equivalent to a fluidrachm—the result of the observations of Mr. Brand, of Philadelphia.

| One fluidrachm of  | Drops        |

By the plural—guttæ—is meant a pharmaceutical mixture—Mistura contracta—to be given in drops. Gutta and Guttæ, also, signify certain cutaneous spots or eruptions.

GUTTA GAMANDRÆ, Cambogia—g. Gamba, Cambogia—g. Opaca, Cataract.

GUTTA PER'CHA, Gutta tu'ban, Gomme getta'nia. The concrete juice of a tree—Isonan'dra gutta—which is indigenous in Singapore and its vicinity, and belongs to the Natural Order Sapotaceæ. Plunged in boiling water it softens, when it may be moulded like caoutchouc to any form, which it retains on cooling. Splints and other instruments have been made of it.

A solution of gutta percha, in chloroform—Troum'aticine—has been used with advantage, topically, in various cutaneous affections, scrofulous and indolent ulcers, and as an ectrotic in small-pox.

GUTTA ROSACÆA SYPHILITICA, Crown of Venus.
 GUTTA RO'SEA, G. Rosa'cea, Ion'thus corymb'ifer, Crus'ta serpigino'sa seu prurigino'sa, Ac'nè rosa'cea, Rose'ola acno'sa, Thylaci'itis, Bac'chia, Butiga, Car'uncled Face, Ro'sy Drop or Whelk, Coppernose, Bottlenose, Grogghlossoms, Groggrose, Brandy'face, Rumbid, (F.) Couperose, Goutte Rose, Bourgeons, Dartre pustuleuse couperose. An eruption of small, suppurating tubercles, with shining redness, and an irregular granular appearance of the skin of the part of the face which is affected. The redness commonly appears first at the end of the nose, and then spreads on both sides. It is often produced by hard drinking. Its cure must be attempted by regular regimen, and cooling means internally; weak spirituous or saturnine lotions externally. The affection is usually very obstinate.

GUTTA SERENA, Amaurosis—g. Tuban, Gutta percha.

GUTTÆ, pl. of Gutta—g. Abbatis Rousseau, Laudanum abbat'is Rousseau—g. Acidæ tonicæ, Elixir Acidum Halleri—g. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gum—g. Nervinæ, Alcohol sulfurico-æthereus ferri.

GUTTÆ NIGRÆ, 'black drops,' Acetum o'pii, Common Black Drop, (F.) Gouttes noires. (Opii, ℥ viij, Aceti destillat. ℥ ij. Infuse.)

The celebrated Black Drop, Lan'caster or Qual'ker's Black Drop, may be made as follows. Take half a pound of opium, sliced; three pints of good verjuice, (juice of the wild crab,) one and a half ounce of nutmegs, and half an ounce of saffron. Boil to a proper thickness, and add a quarter of a pound of sugar, and two spoonfuls of yeast. Set the whole in a warm place, near the fire, for six or eight weeks; then place it in the open air until it becomes a syrup. Lastly, decant, filter, and bottle it up, adding a little sugar to each bottle. One drop is equal to three of laudanum; and it is nearly devoid of all the unpleasant exciting effects of the latter. An analogous formula is contained in the Pharmacopœia of the United States under the name Acetum opii, Vinegar of Opium. In the last edition, (1863,) a more easy mode of preparation is given. It consists in the entire extraction of the opium and aromatics by diluted acetic acid; the addition of sugar; and the dilution of the whole, so that a fluidounce shall contain 75 grains of opium. A grain of opium is represented by about 6½ minims.

GUTTERIA, (from guttur), Bronchocele.

GUTTUR, gen. Gutturis. The throat; the larynx; the trachea.

GUTTUR GLOBOSUM, ('globous throat,') Bronchocele—g. Tumidum, Bronchocele.

GUTTURAL, Gutturalis, (from guttur.) Relating or belonging to the throat.

The Superior Thyroideal Artery is sometimes called Guttural Artery.

A Guttural Cough is one occasioned by irritation of the larynx or trachea.

A Guttural Sound is one produced, as it were, in the throat.

GUTTURALIS CARTILAGO, Arytenoid Cartilage.

GUTTURIS OS, ('bone of the throat,') Hyoides os.

GUTTURNIA, Arytenoid cartilages.

GYMNA, (from γυμνος, 'naked,') Genital Organs.

GYMNASION, (γυμνασιον), Exercise.

GYMNASIUM, (from γυμνασιον.) Palæstra. An establishment amongst the ancients, intended for bodily exercises, as wrestling, running, &c.; a term now used, in Germany more especially, for an academy or higher school.

GYM'NAST, Gymnas'tes, (γυμναστης), Gymnas'ta. The manager of a gymnasium. One, whose profession it is to prevent or cure diseases by gymnastics.

GYMNAS'TICS, Gymnas'tica, (γυμναστική, (τεχνη),) Medic'ina gymnas'tica seu enec'tica, Somasce'tica, (F.) Gymnastique, Somasce'tique. That part of hygienic medicine which treats of bodily exercises. It is called Med'ical Gymnastics. The ancients had also Athlet'ic Gymnastics, and Military Gymnastics. Herodotus, of Selivraea, first proposed gymnastics for the cure of disease.

GYMNAS'TIQUE, Gymnastics.

GYMNEUR'A LACTIF'ERUM, Ceylon Apocynaceæ, the juice of which is used by the Cingalese as milk.

GYMNOC'LADUS CANADEN'SIS, Cof'fee Tree, Kentuck'y Cof'fee-bean Tree, Mahog'any, Nick'ar Tree, Bou'dne. Order, Leguminosæ; (γυμνος, 'naked,' and κλαδος, 'a branch,') An indigenous tree, which grows from Ohio to Louisiana. The leaves are cathartic, and said to contain cystin. The seeds are a good substitute for coffee.

GYMNOGRAMME CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOPTERIS CETERACH, (γυμνος, 'naked,' and πτερις, 'fern,') Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOSIS, (γυμνωσις, from γυμνος, 'naked,') Denudation.

GYNÆCANER, (gynæco, and ανηρ, 'a man,') Vir effemina'tus. An effeminate man.

GYNÆCANTHE, (gynæco, and ανθος, 'a flower,') Tamus communis.

GYNÆCATOP'TRON, (gynæco, and κατοπτρον, 'a speculum,') A speculum for investigating the female organs of generation.

GYNÆCEA, Gynæceia.

GYNÆCEI'A, (γυναικεια), Gynæci'a, Gynæce'i'a.)

The catamenia;—the lochia. The diseases of women in general.

GYNÆCEUM, Antimonium, Vulva.

GYNÆCE'US, (γυναικειος), Belonging to women Female. Feminine.

GYNÆCIA, (γυναικεια), Gynæceia, Menses.

GYNÆCO, (from γυνη, gen. γυναικος, 'a woman,') In composition, woman.

GYNÆCOLOG'IA, Gynecol'ogy, (gynæco, and λογος, 'a description,') The doctrine of the nature, diseases, &c. of women.

GYNÆCOMA'NIA, (gynæco, and μανια, 'mania,' 'rage,') That species of insanity, which arises from love for women. Some have used the word synonymously with nymphomania.

GYNÆCOMAS'TUS, Gynæcomas'thus, (gynæco, and μαστος, 'a breast,') A man whose breasts are as large as those of a woman. The condition is called Gynæcoma'zia.

A considerable enlargement of the breasts of a female was formerly called Gynæcomas'ton.

GYNÆCOMA'ZIA, see Gynæcomastus.

GYNÆCOMYS'TAX, gen. Gynæcomys'tacis, (gynæco, and μυσταξ, 'the beard,') The hair on the pubes of women.

GYNÆCOPH'O'NUS, (gynæco, and φωνη, 'voice,') A man who has an effeminate voice.

GYNANDRIA, (gynæ, and ανηρ, gen. ανδρος, 'a man,') Hermaphroditism.

GYNANDROP'SIS PENTAPHYL'LA, Cleo'nē pentaphylla; Ord. Capparidacæ; an indigenous plant, is possessed of liaphoretic properties. The juice alone, or mixed with oil, has been used in earache.

GYNANDRUS, (gynæ, and ανηρ, gen. ανδρος, 'a man,') Gynanthropus.

GYNANTHRO'PUS, Gynan'drus, (gynæ, and ανθρωπος, 'a man,') An hermaphrodite who belongs more to the male than to the female sex.

GYNATRE'SIA, (gynæ, and ατρησις, 'imperforate,') Closure or imperforation of the external parts of generation of the female.

GYNE, (γυνη), Female, Woman.

GYNECOLOGY, Gynæcologia.

GYNI'ACL (MORBI,) (from gynæ ) Developmental diseases of women, as chlorosis; those attending the parturient state and amenorrhœa, according to the classification of Dr. W. Farr.

GYNIDA, Hermaphrodite.

GYNOARIUM, (gynæ, and ωαριον, 'ovarium,') Ovarium.

GYNOCARDIA ODORATA, (gynæ, and καρδια, 'a heart,') Chaulmoogra.

GYNOPLAS'TIC, Gynoplas'ticus, (gynæ, and πλασσω, 'I form,') The gynoplastic operation is employed for opening or dilating the closed or contracted genital openings of the female.

GYPSYWEED, Lycopus sinuatus, and L. Virginicus.

GYRI CEREBRI, (pl. of gyrus) Convolutions (cerebral),—g. Cochlææ, Scalæ of the Cochlea—g. Intestinales, see Anse—g. Operti, see Insula Cerebri.

GYROMIA VIRGINICA, Medeola Virginica.

GYROPHLE, (from caryophyllum), see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GYROPHORA, see Trips de Roche.

GYRUS, (γυρος, 'a circle,') Convolution.

GYRUS INTESTINALIS, Anse intestinalis.

GYRUS FORNICA'TUS, 'arched circle or convolution,') Fillet of the cor'pus callo'sum. A large convolution of the brain, which lies horizontally on the corpus callosum, and may be traced forwards and backwards to the base of the brain, terminating by each extremity at the fissure of Sylvius. The surface of the hemisphere, where it comes in contact with the corpus callosum, is bounded by it.

GYTLING, (dim. of Sc. get, 'a child,') Infans.

H.

HABBERING (Sc.), (from Belg. haperen, 'to stutter.')

HAB-EL-KALIMBAT, Pistacia terebinthus.

HABBI, Hagnia Abyssinica.

HABBLING (Sc.), (from Su. G. happla, 'to stutter.')

HABE'NA, ('a bridle,' from habeo, 'to have or hold,') Tel'amon. A bandage for uniting the lips of wounds; which, of old, in many instances, replaced the suture.

HABENÆ OF THE PINEAL GLAND, see Pineal gland.

HABENULÆ OF THE PINEAL GLAND, (dim. of habena,) see Pineal gland.

HABIL'LA DE CARTHAGE'NA, (dim. of haba, (L.) faba, 'a bean,') Bejuco, Carthage'na Bean, (F.) Fève de Carthagène. A kind of bean of South America, famed as an effectual antidote for the poison of all serpents, if a small quantity be eaten immediately.

HABIT, Habitu'do, (habere, habitum, 'to have or to hold,') Assuetu'do, Mos, U'cus, Conuetu'do, Ethos, Hexis, Ethemos'ynê, (F.) Habitude, Accoutumance. Habit is the aptitude for repeating certain acts:—or, a facility, which results from the frequent repetition of the same act. It is, according to vulgar expression, 'a second nature.' Habit may predispose to certain diseases, or it may protect against them. It ought not to be lost sight of, in attending to the progress of disease, or its treatment.

HABIT OF BODY, Constitu'tio, Hab'itus, H. Cor'poris, Catas'tasis, Hexis, Epiphani'a, (F.) Habitude extérieure, Habitude du Corps. The aggregate of the physical qualities of the human body.

HABITUDE, Habit—h. du Corps, Habit of body—h. Extérieure, Habit of body.

HABITUDO, (habere, 'to have or to hold,') Habit.

HABITUS, Habit of body—h. Apoplecticus, Apoplectic habit—h. Corporis, Habit of body—h. Quadratus, see Apoplectic—h. Torosus, see Apoplectic.

HABROMA'NIA, (ἀβρος, 'gay,' and μανία, 'mania,') Insanity in which the delusions are of a gay character.

HACHICH, see Bangue.

HACHISCH, Bangue.

HACHSE (Sc.), Pain.

HACKBERRY, Celtis occidentalis, Prunus padus.

HADDOCK, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

HÆMA, gen. Hæ'matis, (ἷμα, gen. ἱματός,) 'blood.'

HÆMACHROINE, (ἡμα, and χρῶμα, 'to colour,') Hæmateine.

HÆMACHRO'SES, ([G.] Hämachrosen, (from hæma, and χρῶσις, 'coloration,') A family of diseases in which the blood has its colour different from usual, as in purpura and cyanosis.

HÆMACTUS, (ἱμακτός,) Bloody.

HÆMACY'ANIN, (ἡμα, and κυανός, 'blue,') A blue colouring matter, detected by Sanson in healthy blood, and in bile by some chemists, but not by others.

HÆMADON'OSUS, (ἡμα, and ὄσος, 'a disease,') Hæmatangion'osus, Hæmatangion'u'sus, Hæmatangio'sis. Disease of the bloodvessels.

HÆMADOSTO'SIS, (ἡμα, and ὄστωσις, 'a bony tumour,') Ossification of the bloodvessels.

HÆMADROMOMETER, Hæmodynamometer.

HÆMADYNAMETER, Hæmodynamometer.

HÆMADYNAM'ICS, (F.) Hæmodynamique,

(ἡμα, and δύναμις, 'power,') The mechanism of the circulation of the blood.

HÆMADYNAMOMETER, Hæmodynamom'eter, Hæmatodynamom'eter, Hæmodynam'eter, Hæmatom'eter, (F.) Hæmodynamomètre, Hæmodynamètre, Hénonètre, (ἡμα, δύναμις, 'power,' and μέτρον, 'a measure,') An instrument for measuring the force of the blood in the vessels. It consists of a bent glass tube, the lower bent part of which is filled with mercury. A brass head is fitted into the artery, and a solution of carbonate of soda is interposed between the mercury and the blood, which is allowed to enter the tube for the purpose of preventing its coagulation. The pressure of the blood on the mercury in the descending portion of the bent tube causes the metal to rise in the ascending portion; and the degree to which it rises indicates the pressure under which the blood moves. A modification of this instrument has been called Cardiom'eter, (F.) Cardiomètre.

HÆMAGASTER, Hæmatogaster.

HÆMAGASTRIC or HÆMOGASTRIC PESTILENCE, Fever, yellow.

HÆMAGOGUM, Pæonia.

HÆMAGO'GUS, (ἡμα, and αγω, 'I drive off,') A medicine which promotes the menstrual and hemorrhoidal discharges.

HÆMAL, (from hæma.) Relating to the blood or bloodvessels.

HÆMAL ARCH. The arch formed by the projections anteriorly of the ribs and sternum from the bodies of the vertebrae. It encloses the great bloodvessels.

HÆMAL AXIS, Aorta—h. Spine, Sternum.

HÆMALOPIA, (ἡμα, and ὤψ, 'the eye,') Hemophthalmia.

HÆMALOPIS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMALOPS, (ἡμα and ὤψ.) Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMAN'THUS COCCIN'EUS, (ἡμα, and ανθος, 'a flower,') A beautiful South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amaryllideæ, the bulb of which is employed as a diuretic. It is given as an oxy-mel in asthma and dropsy. The fresh leaves are antiseptic, and applied to foul, flabby ulcers, and in anthrax.

HÆMANTLI'A, (ἡμα, and αντλεω, 'I pump out,') An exhausting syringe, to which a reservoir is attached, containing a needle. It is used for obtaining blood for hæmatological investigations.

HÆMAPERITONIRRHAG'IA, (F.) Hæmapéritonirrhagie, (ἡμα, περιτοναίον, 'peritoneum,' and ῥαγη, 'a rupture,') An exhalation of blood into the peritoneum.

HÆMAPHÆTIN, Hæmatophæ'tin, Hæmophæ'tin, (ἡμα, and φαῖσις, 'of a dusky colour,') A term applied by Simon to the brown colouring matter of the blood, supposed by some to be nothing more than hæmatin modified by an alkali. In the urine it is called Urohæ'matin.

HÆMAPH'OBUS, Hæmaph'obus, (ἡμα, and φοβός, 'dread,') One who has a dread of blood:—who cannot look at it without fainting.

HÆMAPOPHYSES, (ἡμα, and ασφραω, 'I shoot forth,') Costal cartilages, see Costa.

HÆMAPOR'IA, Hæmatopor'ia, Hæmatopor'iu, Oligohæ'mia, Oligæ'mia, (ἡμα, and σπορος, 'poor,') Paucity of blood. See Anæmia.

HÆMAPTYSIS, (ἡμαπτυσίς,) Hæmoptysis.

HÆMAS, (ἡμάς, gen. ἡμάδος,) A bloodvessel.

HÆMASTATICA, Hæmatostatica.

HÆMASTATICS, Hæmatostoi'cæ, (ἡμα, and στατική, 'statics,') The statics of the blood and bloodvessels; Hæmatost'icæ.

HÆMATALLOSCOPY. Hæmatoscop'ia, (hæmato, αλλοιος, 'different,' and σκοπειν, 'to view.')

The mode of distinguishing different kinds of blood from each other.

HÆMATANAGOGĒ, (hæmato, ἀνα, and ἀγω, 'I drive off,') Hæmatemesis.

HÆMATANGIONOSUS, (hæmato, αγγιον, 'a vessel,' and νόσος, 'a disease,') Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATANGIOSIS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATAPORIA. Hæmaporia.

HÆMATAPORRHOSIS, (hæmato, ἀπο, and ρῆσις, 'serum,' and οσις,) Cholera.

HÆMATAPOSTĒMA. gen. Hæmatapostē' matis, (hæmato, and ἀποστῆμα, 'an abscess,') An abscess which contains blood.

HÆMATOULICA, (hæmato, and αυλος, 'a tube,') Vascular system.

HÆMATEC'LYSIS. Hæmotex'ia, Hæmotex'ia, Hæmatol'ysis, Hæmatosep'isis, Sanguinis dissol'utio, (hæmato and εκλυσις, 'loosening,') Dissolution of the blood.

HÆMATELĒUM, (hæmato, and ελαιον, 'oil,') see Blood.

HÆMATEM'ESIS, (hæmato, and εμιω, 'I vomit,')

Hæmorrh'agia, Hæmatem'esis, Vomit'us cruent'us, Vomit'us seu Vomit'io Sanguinis, Gastrorrhag'ia, Gastro-hæmorrhag'ia, Hæmorrhag'ia ventric'uli, Hæmorrh'ea ventric'uli, Hæmatanag'gē, Vomiting of Blood, (F.) Hémotémèse, Vomissement de sang.

Hæmatemesis is generally preceded by a feeling of oppression, weight, and dull or pungent pain in the epigastric and in the hypochondriac regions: by anxiety, and, occasionally, by syncope. Blood is then passed by vomiting, and sometimes, also, by stool,—the blood being generally of a grumous aspect. Hæmatemesis may be active or passive, acute or chronic. The blood effused proceeds from rupture of vessel, or from a sanguineous exhalation at the surface of the mucous membrane of the stomach. It is often observed in females whose menstrual secretion is irregularly performed. It is not of much danger, except when connected with disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen. On dissection of those who have died from protracted hæmatemeses,—for the acute kind is comparatively devoid of danger,—the mucous membrane of the stomach is found red and inflamed, or black, and the vessels considerably dilated. Complete abstinence from food; rest; the horizontal posture; bleeding, if the hemorrhage be active; cold, acidulous drinks, &c., constitute the usual treatment.

HÆMATENCEPHALUM, (hæmato, and encephalon,) Apoplexy.

HÆMATEPAGOGĒ, (hæmato, ἐπι, and ἀγω, 'I drive,') Congestion.

HÆMATERUS, (ἀμαρτηρος; from αἷμα, 'blood,') Sanguine.

HÆMATERYTHRUM, (hæmato, and ερυθρος, 'red,') Hæmatin.

HÆMATEXOSTOSIS, (hæmato, and exostosis,) Osteosarcoma.

HÆMATHIDROSIS, (hæmato, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATHORAX. Hæmatothorax.

HÆMATIA, (from hæma,) Jusculum nigrum Lacedæmoniorum.

HÆMATIASIS, (from hæma,) Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATIC, (from hæma,) Sanguine—h. Crystals, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMAT'ICA, (from hæma,) Diseases of the sanguineous function:—the third class in the nosology of Good. Also, medicines that act on the blood. (Pereira.)

HÆMATICA DOCTRINA, Hæmatology.

HÆMATICUS, (ἀμαρτηκος; from hæma,) Bloody, Sanguine.

HÆMATIDROSIS, (hæmato, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATIN. Hæmat'ina, Hem'atine, Hem'itia, Hæ'matosin, Hem'atosine, Hæmoter'ythrum, Hæmer'ythrum, Zo'hæmatin, Hæmoch'roin, Hæmatoch'roine, Phæ'nodine, Phæ'nicine, Hæmatoch'roite, Cru'orin, Rubrin, Glob'ulin of some; Kouge in Sang; (from hæma.) The red colouring matter of the blood. It resides in distinct particles or globules, and, in the opinion of some observers, in the envelope of the globules. It appears to be of a peculiar character, and one that has not yet been determined by the chemist. That the colour of the blood is not owing to the peroxide of iron which it contains is shown by the fact mentioned by Scherer, that he removed the iron by acids, and yet a deep red tincture was formed when alcohol was added to the residuum.

HÆMATIN'IC, Hæmatin'ic, Hæmatin'icous, (from hæmatin.) An agent that augments the number of red corpuscles or the hæmatin of the blood.

HÆMATINIC CRYSTALS, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATINUS, (from hæma,) Sanguine.

HÆMATIS'CHESIS, Hæmis'chesis, Hæmocr'yph'ia, (hæma, and ιαχειν, 'to suppress,')

The retention or suppression of a natural or artificial flow of blood.

HÆMATISMUS, (from hæma,) Epistaxis, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATISTH'MUS, (hæmato, and σθμος, 'pharynx,')

Hæmorrhage into the pharynx.

HÆMATI'TES, Hæmat'itis, (ἀμαρτηρος.) Resembling blood. Lapis Hæmat'ites. A beautiful ore of iron, called also, Bloodstone, Ochrea rubra, Oxydum fer'ricum crystallizatum nativum, Ferrum Hæmatites. When finely levigated, and freed from the grosser parts, by frequent washings with water, it has been long recommended in hemorrhage, fluxes, uterine obstructions, &c., in doses of from one scruple to three or four. Also, a vessel that contains blood, ἀμαρτηρις φλεψ.

HÆMATITIS, Hæmitis.

HÆMATMUS, (hæma, and ατμος, 'vapour,')

Gaz sanguinis.

HÆMATO, (from αἷμα, gen. αἵματος, 'blood,') in composition, blood.

HÆMATOCATHAR'TICA, (hæmato, and καθαρσις, 'purification or purgation,')

Remedies for purifying the blood.

HÆMATOCE'LE, (hæmato, and κλη, 'tumour,')

A tumour formed by blood. By some, this term has been applied to a tumour formed by blood, effused into the areolar texture of the scrotum. Others have used it for tumours arising from effusion of blood into the tunica vaginalis:—hæmatocèle, according to them, differing from hydrocèle, only in the character of the effusion. (Heister.)

Others, again, have applied it to effusions of blood into the interior of the tunica albuginea itself. (Richter.) The first is the usual acceptation. It is most commonly caused by wounds or contusions: and requires the use of antiphlogistics, discutients, &c. Sometimes it is necessary to evacuate the effused blood.

HÆMATOCELE ARTERIOSA, Aneurism.

HÆMATOCEPH'ALUS, (hæmato, and κεφαλη, 'head,')

(F.) Hématocéphale. A monster in which an effusion of blood in the head has given occasion to more or less singular deformities.

HÆMATOCEREBRIFORM DISEASE, (hæmato, cerebrum, 'brain,' and forma, 'form,')

Encephaloid.

HÆMATOCHEZ'IA, (hæmato, and χεζω, 'I go to stool,')

Sedes cruent'is, Catarrh'is vera, Enterorrhag'ia simp'lex, Diarrh'ea cruenta seu sanguinolenta, Hæmato-diarrh'ea, Hæmorrhag'ia intestin'drum, Ent'ero-hæmorrhag'ia, (F.) Hæmorrhagie des intestins, Écoulement de sang par l'intestin. Discharge of blood by stool. See Melæna.

HÆMATOCHROITE (hæmatic, and χροα, 'colour,')

Hæmatin.

HÆMATOCHYSIS, (hæmato and χρω, 'to pour out,') Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOCE'LIA, (hæmato, and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen,') Effusion of blood into the abdomen.

HÆMATOCOL'PUS, (hæmato, and κολπος, 'vagina,') Effusion of blood into the vagina. Accumulation of blood owing to occlusion of the vagina.

HÆMATOCRYSTALLIN, (hæmato, and κρυσταλλος, 'a crystal,') Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATOCYANOPATHIA, (hæmato, κυανος, 'blue; παθος, 'affection,') Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYANOSIS, (hæmato, and κυανωσις, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYSTE, (hæmato, and κυστις, 'a bladder,') Hæmatoma saccatum.

HÆMATOCYST'IS, (hæmato, and κυστις, 'bladder,') Hemorrhage into the bladder.

HÆMATO'DES, Hæmatoides, Sanguin'ens, Hæmatoid, Hem'atoid, ('αιματοειδης, from hæmato, and odes.) That which contains blood, or has the character of blood.

HÆMATODES FUS'GUS, Hæmatomyces, Fungus cancro'sus hæmato'des, Melæ'na fungo'sa carci'no'id'es, Angidiospon'gus, Angiom'yces, Hæmatospon'gus, Tu'mor fungo'sus sanguin'ens seu anom'alus, Carcino'ma Hæmato'des, Carcino'ma Spongio'sum, Spon'goid inflammation, Pulpy or Med'ullary Sarc'o'ma, Bleed'ing Fungus, Soft Can'cer, (F.) Carcinôme sanglant, Hæmatoncie fungoïde. An extremely alarming carcinomatous affection, which was first described, with accuracy, by Mr. John Burns, of Glasgow. It consists in the development of cancerous tumours, with violent heat and pain, and with fungus and bleeding excrescences. Even when the diseased part is extirpated at a very early period, recovery rarely follows; other organs being generally implicated at the same time. Fungus hæmatodes was the term first applied to the disease by Mr. Hey of Leeds. Mr. J. Burns called it Spongioïd inflammation, from the spongy, elastic feel, which peculiarly characterizes it, and continues even after ulceration has taken place. The disease has, most frequently, been met with in the eyeball, the upper and lower extremities, testicle and mamma; but it occurs in the uterus, ovary, liver, spleen, brain, lungs, thyroid gland, and in the hip and shoulder joints.

Some French surgeons designate, by this name, those tumours which were formerly termed anormales, cavernenses, variqueuses, called Érectiles by Dupuytren, Hæmatoncies, by Alibert, and Telan'giectasie by Gräfe.

HÆMATODIARRHŒA, Hæmatochezia.

HÆMATODYNAMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMATOGASTER, (hæmato, and γαστρο, 'stomach,') Effusion of blood into the stomach.

HÆMATOGENESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOGENETICA, (hæmato, and γενεσις, 'generation,') Hæmatopoetica.

HÆMATOGLOBULIN, see Globules of the blood.

HÆMATOGRA'PHIA, Hæmatog'raphy, (hæmato, and γραφη, 'a description,') A description of the blood.

HÆM'ATOID, (hæmato, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling blood. Hæmatodes. —

HÆMATO'IDIN, Hæmatocry'stallin, Hæmatin'ic, hæmat'ic, hæmin or blood crystals, (F.) Hæmatoïdine, Cristaux d'Hématine. A substance found in the midst, or in the vicinity, of effusions of blood, which is either in amorphous masses, or, more frequently, in minute rhomboidal crystals, or in fine needles. It is considered to be hematin separated from the globules of the blood, and passed from the state of a non-crystallizable organic substance to one of a crystalline chemical compound.

HÆMATOL'OGY, Hematol'ogy, Hæmatolog'ia,

Hæmat'ica doctri'na, (F.) Hématologie, (hæmat, and λογος, 'a discourse,') That part of medicine which treats of the blood.

HÆMATOLOGY, PATHOLOG'ICAL, (F.) Hématologie pathologique. Observation of the blood to detect its varying characters in disease.

HÆMATOLY'SES, (G.) Hæmatoly'sen, (hæmato, and λυσις, 'solution,') An order of diseases in which there is diminished coagulability of the blood.

HÆMATOLYSIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanamic.

HÆMATO'MA, (from hæmato, and ωμα,) Thrombus, Tumor sanguin'ens. A bloody tumour, especially of the scalp of the newborn.

HÆMATO'MA SACCA'TUM. An encysted tumour containing blood — Hæmatocys'te.

HÆMATOMANTI'A, (hæmato, and μαντεια, 'divination,') Judgment of disease from the appearance of the blood.

HÆMATOMATRA, (hæmato, and ματρα, 'uterus,') Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMETACHYSIS, (hæmato, meta, and χρω, 'I pour,') Transfusio sanguinis.

HÆMATOMETRA, (hæmato, and μητρα, 'the uterus,') Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMMA, gen. Hæmatom'matis, (hæmato, and ομμα, 'the eye,') Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOMPHALOC'E'LE, Hæmatom'phalum, Hæmatom'phalus, (hæmato, ομφαλος, 'the navel, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Umbilical hernia, the sac of which encloses a bloody serum, or which has, at its surface, a number of varicose veins; constituting Varicom'phalus.

HÆMATOMPHALUM, (hæmato, and ομφαλος, 'the navel,') Hæmatomphalocoele.

HÆMATOMYCES, (hæmato, and μυκης, 'a fungus,') Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATOM'CUS, (F.) Hématoncie, (hæmato, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Alibert has given this name to Nævi mater'ni, Varicose tumours. He admits three varieties:—the H. fungoïde, H. framboisée, and H. tubéreuse.

HÆMATON'OSUS, Hæmat'iasis, Hæmatopathi'a, Hæmopath'i'a, Nosohæ'mia, (hæmato, and νοσος, 'disease,') A disease of the blood. A hæmic or blood disease. (F.) Nosohémie.

HÆMATOPATHIA, (hæmato, and παθος, 'an affection,') Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATOPEDESIS, (hæmato, and πηδω, 'I spring,') see Diapedesis.

HÆMATOPERICAR'DIUM, (hæmato, and pericardium,) Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMATOPHÆUM, Hæmaphæin.

HÆMATOPHIL'IA, Hæmophil'ia, Hæmorrhophil'ia, Idiosynera'ia hæmorrhag'ica, (F.) Hæmophilie, (hæmato, and φιλω, 'I love,') A hemorrhagic diathesis.

HÆMATOPHLEBOS'TASIS. Sudden suppression of a hemorrhage;—from σπασις αιματος φλεβων, 'suppression of the blood of the veins.'

HÆMATOPHOB'IA, Hæmophob'ia, (F.) Hæmophobic, (hæmato, and φοβος, 'dread,') Dread or horror at the sight of blood, producing syncope, &c. Of old, they who were afraid of, or opposed to, bloodletting, were called hæmoph'oboi, blood-funkers.

HÆMATOPHTHALMIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPH'THORES, (G.) Hæmatoph'thoren; (hæmato, and φθορα, 'corruption,') An order of diseases in the classification of Fuchs, in which the blood is materially altered in composition, as in typhus.

HÆMATOP'ISIS, (F.) Hématopisic. M. Capuron, of Paris, has applied the term Hématopisic utérine, from analogy with Hydropisic utérine, to a collection of blood which sometimes takes place in the uterus, when, owing to faulty conformation, the exit of the menstrual flux is prevented.

HEMATOPLA'NIA, Hæmato-pla-ne'sis, Hæmo-pla'nia, (hæmato, and πλανη, 'wandering.')(F.) Hæmoplanie. A vicarious hemorrhage.

HEMATOPLANIA MENSTRUALIS, Menstruation. vicarious.

HEMATOPLASMA, gen. Hæmatoplasm'atis, Liqueur sanguinis.

HEMATOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HEMATOPŒA, (hæmato, and ποιω, 'I make,') Hæmatopœtica.

HEMATOPOËSIS, Hæmatosis.

HEMATOPOËT'ICA, (ἀιματοποιητικα), Hæmatopœ'a, Hæmatogenet'ica, 'bloodmakers.' Agents that favour hæmatisis. Iron was called by the ancients metal'lum hæmatopœt'icum.

HEMATOPOIESIS, Hæmatosis.

HEMATOPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HEMATOPS, (hæmato, and ωψ, 'the eye,') Hæmophthalmia.

HEMATOPSIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HEMATOPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HEMATOPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HEMATORRHACHIS, (hæmato, and ῥαχίς, 'the spine,') Apoplexia myelitica.

HEMATORRHAGIA, Hæmorrhagia.

HEMATORRHŒA, (hæmato, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Hæmorrhagia.

HEMATORRHOSIS, (hæmato, and ῥῆσις, 'serum,') Cholera.

HEMATORRHYSIS, (hæmato, and ῥίω, 'to flow,') Hæmorrhagia.

HEMATOSCHEOCE'LE, Hæmoscheoc'e'le, Hæmos'cheum, (hæmato, σχεον, 'serotum,' and κληη, 'tumour,') Effusion of blood into the serotum.

HEMATOSCHEUM, (hæmato, and σχεον, 'serotum,') Hæmoscheocele.

HEMATOSCOPIA, Hæmoscop'ia, (F.) Hæmorrhoscopia, (hæmato, and σκοπεω, 'I view,') An examination of blood drawn.

HEMATOSEPSIS, (hæmato, and σψίσις, 'putrefaction,') Hæmateclysis.

HEMATOSIN, (from hæma,) Hæmatin.

HEMATO'SIS, (ἀιματωσις, from hæmato, and osis,) Exhæmato'sis, Enhæmato'sis, Hæmatopœis'is, Hæmatopœ'sis, Hæmatogen'esis, Procreat'io sanguinis, Decarboniza'tion or Atmosphera'tion of the blood, Sanguifica'tion. The transformation of the venous blood and chyle into arterial blood by respiration. Called, also, Aëra'tion, and Arterializa'tion, of the blood. Formation of blood in general.

HEMATOSPILIA, (hæmato, and σπιλις, 'a spot,') Purpura hæmorrhagica.

HEMATOSPONGUS, (hæmato, and σπυγγος, 'a sponge, a fungus,') Hæmatodes fungus.

HEMATOSTAT'ICA, (hæmato, and στατική, 'statics,') Ischæ'mia, Hæmostat'ica, Hæmatostat'ica, Hæmostat'ics, Hæmatostat'ica, Hæmostat'ics, Enæ'ma, (F.) Hæmatostatiques, Hæmatatiques, Hæmatistiques. The doctrine of the motion of the blood in living bodies. Also, remedies for stopping blood. Styptics; (from hæmato, and στατικός, 'restraining,') HEMATOSTEON, (hæmato, and οστεον, 'a bone,') Effusion of blood into the bones or joints.

HEMATOSYMPHORESIS, (hæmato, and συμφορησις, 'an accumulation,') Congestion.

HEMATOSYNAGOGE, (hæmato, and συναγωγή, 'a collection,') Congestion.

HEMATOTELANGIOSIS, (hæmato, τελος, 'end,' αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and osis,) Telangiectasia.

HEMATOTHORAX, gen. Hæmatothora'cis, Hæmatho'raz, Hæmatho'raz, Hæmopt'ysis inter'na, Pleurorrhœ'a sanguin'ea, Pleurorrhag'ia, Pneumorrhag'ia inter'na, Hæmorrhag'ic Pleurisy, Pleur'al hæmorrhage, (from hæmato, and θωραξ, 'the chest,') Extravasation of blood into the chest.

HEMATOTOXIC, Toxæmic.

HEMATOXIC, Toxæmic.

HEMATOXYLON, H. Campechianum.

HEMATOXYLON CAMPECHIA'NUM, (hæmato, and ξύλον, 'wood,') Acacia Zeylan'ica, Logwood. The part of the tree used in medicine is the wood, Hæmatox'yl'i Lig'num, Lignum Campechen'se seu Campechia'num seu Campeca'num seu Indicum seu Sappan seu Brasil'ium rubrum seu cæru'leum, Hæmatox'ylum, Hæmatox'ylon (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Bois de Compêche. Family, Leguminosæ. Ser. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. Logwood is almost inodorous; of a sweetish, sub-astringent taste; and deep red colour. Its virtues are extracted both by water and alcohol. It is astringent and tonic, and is used in the protracted stages of diarrhœa and dysentery.

HEMATOZO'A, pl. of Hæmatozo'on, (F.) Hæmatozoaires, (hæmato, and ζωον, 'animal,') (F.) Verræ sanguinæ. Entozoa in the blood.

HEMATURESIS, Hæmaturia.

HEMATURIA, Hæmatur'ia, (hæmato, and ουρεω, 'I make urine,') Voiding of blood by urine. Hæmorrhag'ia hæmatu'ria, H. ex vi'is urinari'is, Hæmure'sis, Hæmu'ria, Mic'tio Cruen'ta seu Sanguin'ea, Mic'tus Cruen'tus seu Sanguin'eus, Hæmorrhœ'a via'rum urinaria'rum, Sangu'is in Ur'ina, Bloody urine, (F.) Pissement de Sang, Hæmaturie, Hæmure'sie. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages. Like other hemorrhages, it may be active or passive. It may proceed from the kidneys, Nephroemorrhag'ia, bladder or urethra. The essential symptoms are:—blood, evacuated by the urethra; preceded by pain in the region of the bladder or kidneys, and accompanied by faintness. Whencesoever it proceeds, hæmaturia is usually ascribed to exhalation; rupture of vessels not being thought common in the mucous membranes. Active hæmaturia requires general or local blood-letting; diluent and cooling drinks; absolute rest; and the horizontal posture. The chronic kind is more troublesome. It requires acidulated or aluminous drinks; chalybeates and tonics in general. When hæmaturia is excessive, cold injections may be thrown into the rectum or into the vagina of women, and topical applications be made to the perineum.

HEMATURIA CYSTICA, Cystorrhagia—h. Ejaculatoria, Spermatozystidorrhagia—h. Seminalis, Spermatozystidorrhagia—h. Stillatitia, Urethrorrhagia.

HEMAXIS, (ἀιμασσω, 'to let blood,') Blood-letting.

HEMENCEPHALUS, (hæma, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon,') Apoplexy.

HEMENDOCARDIUM, (F.) Hæmendocarde, (hæma, and 'endocardium,') Inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

HEMERYTHRUM, (hæma, and ἔρυθρος, 'red,') Hæmatin.

HÆMIC, Hæmic, Hæ'micus, (from hæma,) Relating or appertaining to blood; as a "hæmic disease."—a blood disease.

HÆMIDROSIS, (hæma, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') see Diapedesis.

HÆMIN CRYSTALS, see Hæmatoïdin.

HÆMISCHESIS, Hæmischesis.

HÆMITIS, Hæmat'itis, (hæma, and itis,) Inflammation of the blood. (F.) Hémite. The alteration of the blood that occurs in inflammatory diseases. (Piorry.) Inflammatory blood, Phlogæ'mia.

HÆMOARTHRTIS, Rheumatism (acute).

HÆMOCARDIORRHAG'IA, Hæmocard'ium, Apoplexia cor'dis, Apoplexy of the heart, (F.) Hæmorrhagie ou Apoplexie du Cœur, Hæmocardie, (hæma, καρδια, 'the heart,' and ῥήγνυμι, 'I break forth,') Effusion of blood into the substance of the heart.

HÆMOCARDIUM, (hæma, and καρδια, 'heart,') Hæmocardiorrhagia.

HÆMOCERCHNOS. This term has received two acceptations, owing to the different senses in which κερχνος is employed; signifying, sometimes, hissing; at others, dry. Consequently, the Hellenists have translated the compound word, at times, by spitting of blood, with hissing in the throat; at others, by evacuation of dry matters.

HEMOCRYPHIA, (hæma, and κρυπτεν, 'to conceal,') Hæmatischesia.

HEMOIDES, ('αἰμωδης, from hæma, and odes,) Sanguine.

HEMO'DIA, Hæmōdiās'mus, Hemo'dia, Hebe-tu'do seu Stu'por Den'tium, (αἱμωδω, from hæma, 'blood,' and ὀδους, 'tooth,') 'I have pain in the teeth.' Great sensibility of the teeth, and especially Agacement or the setting on edge of those bodies by acid or acerb substances. It is also called Odon'tia Stupo'ris, Odon'tia'gia hæmo'dia, Do'tor den'tium à strido'rē, Cataplex'is, Odon'tamblyg'mus, Olonthypæsthes'tis, Toothedge.

HEMODIASMUS, Hæmōdia.

HEMODROMOM'ETER, Hæmadromom'eter, (hæma, δρομος, 'course,' and μετρον, 'a measure,') An instrument for measuring the rate of the blood's movement. It consists of a glass tube 52 inches long, containing water, bent into the form of a hairpin, which is substituted for a segment of the bloodvessel, the velocity of the blood in which it is required to measure. The column of blood, which comes from the heart, pushes the column of water before it, and thus enables the velocity of the blood to be estimated.

HEMODYNAMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HEMOGASTRIC, Hæmagastic.

HEMOIDES, (hæma, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Sanguine.

HEMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HEMOMETRECTA'VIA, (hæma, μετρα, 'uterus,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of the womb from blood.

HEMOPATHIA, (hæma, and παθος, 'affection,') Hæmatonosus.

HEMOPERICARDIUM, Pericardit'is exsudato'ria, (F.) Hémopéricarde, (hæmo, and pericardium.) Effusion of blood in the pericardium.

HEMOPERITONÆ'UM, (hæmo, and περιτοναϊον, 'peritoneum,') Effusion of blood into the peritoneum.

HEMOPEX'LE, (G.) Ηἱμοπεξίη, (hæmo, and ηξίς, 'coagulation,') An order of diseases in which there is increased coagulability of the blood.—Hyperu'ois san'guinis, of Fuchs.

HEMOPHEUM, Hæmaphein.

HEMOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HEMOPHOBIA, Hæmatophobia.

HEMOPHOBOI, see Hæmatophobia.

HEMOPHTHAL'MIA, Hæmatophthal'mia, Hæmatop'tia, (hæma, and ὀφθαλμος, 'eye,') Hæmalop'ia, Hæmalop'is, Hæ'malops, Hype'mia seu Apoplex'ia oc'uli, (F.) Hémophthalmie. Effusion of blood into the eye. When the extravasation is external, it is called Hemophthal'mia exter'na, Hyposphag'ma and Hæmalops exter'nus; when internal, Hæmophthal'mia inter'na, Hydrophthal'mus cruent'us, Hypoch'ysis hæmato'des, Hæmaton'ma, and Hæ'malops inter'nus. A bloodshot eye.

HEMOPLANIA, Hæmatoplania—h. Menstrualis, Menstruation, vicarious.

HEMOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HEMOPROCTIA, (hæma, and πρωκτος, 'anus,') Hæmorrhoids.

HEMOPTOË, Hæmoptysis—h. Laryngea et trachealis, Tracheorrhagia.

HEMOP'TOÏC, Hæmopto'icus, (F.) Hémoptique, Hémoptiquè, Hémoptysique. Relating or appertaining to hæmoptysis. One affected with hæmoptysis.

HEMOP'TOSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HEMOP'TYSIS, (hæmo, and πτω, 'I spit,') Hæmorrhag'ia, Hæmop'tysis, Hæmap'tysis, Hæmoptys'ia, Hæmatop'tysis, Emp'toë, E mop'toë, Eupto'ica pas'sio, Hæmoptys'mus, Hæmopto'sis, Spu'tum san'guinis seu cruentum, San'guinis flu'or pulmo'nium, E mopto'ica pas'sio, Hæmorrhœ'a pulmo'nalis, Cruent'a exspu'tio, Hæmorrhag'ia pulmo'nis seu bron'chica, Pas'sio hæmopto'ica, Reje'ctio san'guinis à pulmo'nibus, Expecto'atio san'guinis, Pneumorrhag'ia, Pneumorrhag'ia, Pneumonorrhœ'a, Bronchorrhag'ia, Emp'tysis, Hæmoptoë, Spitting of blood, (F.) Hémoptysie, Crachement de sang, Expectoration de sang, Angi-airrhémie, Angi-airrhagie, Hémangiarrhagie, of Piorry. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the lungs; characterized by the expectoration of more or less florid and frothy blood. It is generally preceded by cough; dyspnoea; sense of heat in the chest, &c. It is important to discriminate between hæmoptysis produced by some accidental cause acting irregularly or periodically on the lungs; and that which is, as it were, constitutional, and dependent on organic affection of the lungs or heart, or some faulty conformation of the chest. These two varieties differ as much in their prognosis and method of treatment as in their causes. Constitutional hæmoptysis is a serious disease, almost always announcing phthisis pulmonalis. The accidental variety is chiefly dangerous by frequent recurrence, and consequent great loss of blood.

The general causes of hæmoptysis are the same as those of other kinds of hemorrhage. It has, besides, particular causes; such as too great exercise of the lungs; loud speaking; playing on wind instruments, breathing acrid vapours, &c. It usually occurs between puberty and the age of 35. A sudden and terrific kind of hæmoptysis is sometimes met with; consisting in a great afflux of blood to the lungs. This has been called Pulmonary Ap'oplexy, Apoplex'ia pulmo'nalis seu pulmo'nium, Pneumorrhag'ia, Infarctus hæmorrhag'icus pulmo'nis, I. hæmopto'icus Laënnec'ii, (F.) Apoplexie pulmonaire, Hémoptysie foudroyante, Hémorrhagie interstitielle du Poumon. Infiltration of blood into the air-cells may occur without any spitting of blood. Any extravasation of blood into the tissue of the lungs has been termed by M. Hendrin pneumohémorrhagie.

Physical signs. Percussion may not always aid us in hæmoptysis, but generally a circumscribed dulness will be perceived. The inspiratory murmur, on auscultation, is feeble or absent, locally; and is replaced by bronchial respiration and bronchophony. A fine liquid crepitus is detected around the affected part; and in the larger tubes, near the spine, a liquid bubbling rchonus is usually heard. The value of these signs is determined by the nature of the expectoration. The treatment of hæmoptysis must be like that of internal hemorrhage in general.

HEMOP'TYSIS INTERNA, Hæmatothorax—h. Laryngea et trachealis, Tracheorrhagia—h. Phthisis, Phthisis pulmonalis.

HEMOP'TYSMUS, Hæmoptysis.

HEMORMESIS, (hæma, and ὀμωω, 'to drive on,') Congestion, Hyperæmia.

HEMORRHACHIS, (hæma, and ἄξας, 'the spine,') Apoplexia myelica.

HEMORRHAGE, Hæmorrhagia.

HEMORRHAG'IA, (hæma, and ἔργυρι, 'I break forth,') San'guinis profu'vium copio'sum, Sanguiflux'us, Hæmatoch'ysis, Aïmorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhœ'a, Hæmatorrhag'ia, Hæmatis'mus, Hæmatorrhœ'a, Hæmatorrh'ysis, Hæmor'r'ysis, Profu'vium seu Prorup'tio seu Erup'tio seu Profu'sio san'guinis, Hem'orrhage, Hemorrhage, Bleeding, Loss of blood, Rup'turing, bursting, or breaking of a bloodvessel, (Prov.) Floating, (F.) Hémorrhagie ou Hémorrhagie, Perte de sang, Flux de sang. Any discharge of blood from vessels destined to contain it; with or without rupture of their coats. Hemorrhages may be spontaneous or Traumatic: the first belong to the domain of medicine, the latter to that of surgery. They may, also, be internal or external; general—as in scurvy—or local. The hemorrhages by exhalation—those which chiefly interest the physician—have been classed, by Pinel, as follows:—1. Hemorrhage of the Mucous Membranes; Epistaxis, Hæmoptysis, Hæmatemesis, Hæmorrhoids, Hæmaturia, Uterine Hemorrhage. 2. Hemorrhage of the Tissues; Cutaneous, Cellular, Serous, Synovial.

Hemorrhages have generally been distinguished into active and passive: in other words into those dependent upon augmentation of the organic actions, and those dependent upon debility. According to Broussais, no spontaneous hemorrhage is passive; all are active,—that is, produced by increased action and excess of irritation of the blood-vessels: they may occur with debility, but not from debility. He calls those only passive hemorrhages, which are owing to an external lesion of the vessels. Hemorrhages have been, by some, divided into constitutional, or those depending on original conformation;—accidental, or those produced by some adventitious cause; supplementary, or those which succeed others; symptomatic, critical, &c. A secondary hemorrhage is one that occurs some time after wounds or operations.

When hemorrhage takes place into any tissue, or is interstitial, it receives the name, with many, of apoplexy.

Active Hemorrhage, Hemorrhag'ia acti'va seu arterio'sa, Caumi'a hæmorrhag'icium, Angier'rag'ia, occurs chiefly in the young and plethoric. Good living; the use of fermented liquor, excessive exercise, or too sedentary a life, may perhaps be ranked as predisponent causes. It is commonly preceded by heaviness and pulsation in the part,—owing to the afflux of blood and consequent hyperæmia,—and by coldness of the extremities. The blood, evacuated, is generally of a florid red. In such active hemorrhages, the great indications of treatment will be, to diminish plethora where it exists, and to lessen the heart's action. Bleeding, purgatives, and cold, with dry diet, will be the chief agents.

Passive Hemorrhage, Hæmorrhag'ia passi'va seu veno'sa, Profusio, P. hæmorrhag'ica, occurs in those of weak constitution; or who have been debilitated by protracted disease, poor diet, long watching, excessive evacuations, &c.

The direct causes may be; previous active hemorrhage; scorbutus, or any thing capable of inducing atony or asthenic hyperæmia of the small vessels. These hemorrhages are not preceded by excitement or by any signs of local determination. They are usually accompanied by paleness of the countenance; feeble pulse; fainting, &c. The indications of treatment will be:—to restore the action of the small vessels and the general tone of the system: hence the utility of styptics and cold externally; and of tonics and astringents, creasote, mineral acids, &c., internally. Hemorrhage also occurs from mechanical hyperæmia, as when hæmoptysis is produced by tubercles in the lungs; apoplexy by softening of the encephalic nerve; hæmatemesis by disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen, &c.

In Traumatic Hemorrhages, or those which are the consequences of wounds of arterial or venous trunks, the blood is of a florid red colour, and issues by jets and pulses, if it proceed from an artery; whilst it is of a deeper red, issues slowly and by a continuous flow, if from a vein. If the capillary vessels be alone divided, the blood is merely effused at the surface of the wound. Of the means used for arresting these traumatic hemorrhages, some act mechanically as absorbents, ligature, and compression; others chymically, as fire, caustic, creasote, astringents, &c.

HEMORRHŒID'AL, Hemorrhoid'al, Hæmorrhoid'al'is, Hæmorrhō'idens. Relating to hemorrhoids; as hemorrhoidal flux, hemorrhoidal tumours, &c.

HEMORRHŒIDAL ARTERIES have been distinguished into superior, middle, and inferior. The first is the termination of the inferior mesenteric artery, which assumes the name superior hæmorrhoidal, when it reaches the upper and posterior part of the rectum. The middle hæmorrhoidal is furnished by the hypogastric or internal pudic. It ramifies on the inferior and anterior part of the rectum. The inferior hæmorrhoidal arteries are branches of the internal pudic, furnished to the inferior part of the rectum and to the muscles of the anus.

HEMORRHŒIDAL NERVES. These emanate from the sciatic and hypogastric plexuses; and cover the rectum with their numerous filaments.

HEMORRHŒIDAL VEINS follow the same distribution, and generally empty themselves into the lesser mesenteric. Some of them assist in the formation of the hypogastric vein.

HEMORRHŒIDAL VESSELS, Vasa sed'alia, are those vessels which are distributed to the rectum—the seat of hemorrhoids.

HEMORRHŒIDRO'SIS, (hemorrhōis, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') Sweating of hemorrhoidal blood. (?) (Boeck.)

HEMORRHŒIS, Aimor'rhois, Asclepias'mus, (hæmo, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') Aimor'rois, Proct'ica Maris'ca, Maris'ca, Proct'al'gia Hæmorrhoid'al'is, Morbus Hæmorrhoidalis, Hemorrhoids, Piles, Em'eroids, Em'eroids, Em'erandes, (F.) Hémorrhoides. The essential symptoms of this affection are:—Livid and painful tubercles or excrescences, (Hemorrhoid'al Tumours,) usually attended with a discharge of mucus or blood, (Hemorrhoidal flux, Hæmorrhag'ia proctica, Proctor'rhois, Hæmoproct'ica, Hæmorrhœ'a vasor'um hæmorrhoid'al'ium, (F.) Hémoproctie, Hémoproctie. The most common causes of piles are a sedentary life; accumulation of feces in the rectum; violent efforts at stool; pregnancy, &c. The precursory symptoms are:—pains in the loins; stupor of the lower limbs; and uneasiness in the abdomen and rectum, with more or less gastric, cerebral, and indeed general disorder;—constituting the Diathesis Hæmorrhoidalis, Moltus seu Tar'ba Hæmorrhoidalis, and Molimen Hæmorrhoidale, of most of the writers of Continental Europe. To these symptoms follow one or more round, smooth, renitent, painful, pulsating, and erectile tumours, around the margin of the anus, or within the anus; some pouring out blood occasionally. After having remained, for a time, tense and painful, they gradually shrink and disappear. The chief symptoms, occasioned by hæmorrhoidal tumours, when much inflamed, are:—constant pain, liable, however, to exacerbations, and to become augmented by the least pressure, or by the passage of the fæces, and obliging the patient to preserve the horizontal posture.

Hæmorrhoids have generally been distinguished into—Hæmorrhoides Fluentes seu Mariscoe, Proctica Marisca cruenta, Bleeding or Open Piles; and into H. non fluentes, Proctica Marisca cæca, Hæmorrhoides cæcæ seu fures, Hæmorrhoidales nodi, Shut or blind piles. They have, also, been divided into internal or occuli, and external, according to their situation; and into accidental or constitutional.

Hæmorrhoidal Tumours are extremely troublesome, by their disposition to frequent recurrence; and they are apt to induce fistula; otherwise, they are devoid of danger. When anatomically examined, they are found not to consist in a varicose dilatation of the veins of the rectum; but to be formed of a very close, spongy, texture; similar to that which surrounds the orifice of the vagina; and to be erectile, like it. They are surrounded by a delicate membrane, and have no internal cavity. The treatment, in mild cases of hæmorrhoidal tumours, is simple. Rest; the horizontal posture; the use of mild laxatives, as sulphur, castor oil, and emollient glysters, will be sufficient. If they be much inflamed, leeches may be applied; and warm cataplasms or cold lotions, according to circumstances, be prescribed, with abstinence, and cooling drinks. Afterwards, an ointment, composed of powdered galls and opium, may afford relief. It is in the relaxed kind, that such ointment, and the internal use of Ward's Paste, can alone be expected to afford much benefit. If, after repeated attacks, the tumours remain hard and painful, and threaten fistula, they may be removed.

By Hæmorrhoidal Flux, Fluxus hæmorrhoidalis, Proctorrhagia, is meant the hæmorrhage which takes place from the rectum, owing to hæmorrhoids. It is a common affection. The quantity of blood discharged is various; at times, it is very trifling; at others, sufficient to induce great debility, and even death. It is announced and accompanied by the same symptoms as precede and attend hæmorrhoidal tumours. Like other hæmorrhages, it may be active or passive, accidental or constitutional. The prognosis is rarely unfavourable. The affection may, almost always, be relieved by properly adapted means. These resemble such as are necessary in hæmorrhages in general. Perfect quietude, mental and corporeal; light diet; cooling drinks; bleeding, if the symptoms indicate it; astringents, if the disease be protracted and passive, such as the Tinctura Ferri Chloridi; aspersions of cold water on the anus; astringent injections; plugging, and compression. Such will be the principal remedial agents. When the hæmorrhage has become habitual, or is vicarious, some caution may be required in checking it; and, if inconvenience arise from a sudden suppression, its return may be solicited by the semicupium, sitting over warm water, aloetic purgatives, glysters, irritating suppositories, &c.; or leeches may be applied to the anus.

To the internal bleeding pile, a soft, red, strawberrylike elevation of the mucous membrane, Dr. Houston, of Dublin, gives the name vascular tumour. For its removal he recommends the application of nitric acid, so as to produce sloughing of its surface.

Some authors have described a species of Leucorrhœa Analis, or whitish discharge from the anus, which often attends ordinary hæmorrhoids. This they have called Proctica marisca mucosa, Hæmorrhœis albæ, Hæmorrhagia mucosa, Leucorrhœis. It requires no special mention.

The term Hæmorrhoid is applied at times to varicose veins developed elsewhere, as at the orifice of the uterus. See Metraemorrhoides.

HÆMORRHOIS CRUENTA, see Hæmorrhois—h. ab Exaniâ, Proctocœle—h. Procedens, Proctocœle.

HÆMORRHOIS CHESIS, (hæma, hæw, 'I flow,' and ιχω, 'I restrain.') Retentio fluxus hæmorrhoidalis. Suppression or retention of the hæmorrhoidal flux.

HÆMORRHOPHESIS, Absorptio sanguinis, (hæma, and ροφω, 'I sip up.') Absorption of blood.

HÆMORRHOPHILIA, (hæma, hæw, 'to flow,' and φιλω, 'to love.') Hæmatophilia.

HÆMORRHOSCOPIA, (hæma, hæw, 'to flow,' and σκοπω, 'to examine.') Hæmatosopia.

HÆMORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMOSCHEOCELE, Hæmatoschecele.

HÆMOSCOPIA, Hæmatosopia.

HÆMOSPASIA, see Hæmospastic.

HÆMOSPASTIC, (F.) Hémospastique, (hæma, and σπασω, 'I draw.') An agent which draws or attracts blood to a part; as a cupping-glass. The operation is termed Hæmospasia, (F.) Hémospasie. It is generally applied to a process by which the air is exhausted over a considerable surface, as over one or more of the extremities, by an appropriate pneumatic apparatus.

HÆMOSTASIA, Hæmostasis, Epidæsis, Sanguinis stagnatio, (F.) Hémotastie, (hæma, and στασις, 'stagnation.') Stagnation of blood. This name has also been given to any operation, the object of which is to arrest the flow of blood, as by compression or ligation of the great vessels, (F.) Perstriction.

HÆMOSTATIC, PAGLIARI'S, Pagliari's Styptic, Aqua Pagliarii, (F.) Eau de Pagliari. A styptic liquor, said to be of great power, discovered by M. Pagliari, a pharmacist at Rome. It is composed as follows.—Eight ounces of tincture of benzoin, one pound of alum, and ten pounds of water, are boiled together for six hours in a glazed earthen vessel, the vaporized water being constantly replaced by hot water, so as not to interrupt the ebullition, and the resinous mass being kept stirred round. The fluid is then filtered, and kept in stoppered bottles. A drop of the fluid, poured into a glass containing human blood, produces an instantaneous magma.

HÆMOSTATICUS, Hæmatostaticus.

HÆMOTACHOMETRY, Hæmotachometria, (hæma, ταχος, 'swiftness,' and μετροω, 'I measure.') The measurement of the velocity of the blood. An instrument, devised for this purpose by Viërrordt, is called by him Hæmotachometer.

HÆMOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMOTEXIA, Hæmateclisis,

HÆMOTEXIS, (hæma, and τηξις, 'solution,') Hæmateclisis.

HÆMOTHORAX, Hæmothorax.

HÆMOTOXIC, Toxæmic.

HÆMOTROPHY or HÆMOTROPHY, Hæmatrophia, (hæma, and τροφω, 'nourishment.') Excess of sanguineous nourishment.

HÆMOTUS, (hæma, and ους, gen. ωπης, 'the ear.') Effusion of blood into the ear.

HÆMURESIS, Hæmaturia.
 HÆMURIA, Hæmaturia.
 HÆMYDOR, (hæma, and ύδωρ, 'water.') Serum of the blood.
 HÆMYDRIA, Hydroæmia.
 HEREDITARIUS, (hæres, gen. hære'dis, 'an heir.') Hereditary.
 HESITATIO, (hæsitare, hæsitatum, 'to stick fast.') Balbuties.
 HEVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.
 HAG (Prov.), Abdomen.
 HAGARD, Haggard.
 HAGBERRY, Prunus padus.
 HAGE'NIA ABYSSINICA, Brayera anthelmintica, Bank'sia Abyssinica, (after Prof. K. G. Hagen, of Königsberg.) An Abyssinian tree; Order, Rosaceæ; Sexual System, Icosandria Digynia, which the natives plant round their habitations as an ornament. The infusion or decoction of its flowers, Flores cosso, is employed by them as an anthelmintic, especially in cases of tape-worm. It is called there Cus'so or Cous'so, Kos'so, Kous'so, Koo'so, Kus'so, Kivo'so, Cotz, Cabotz, and Habbi.

The flowers and unripe fruit—Brayera, Koosso—are official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States. An active resinous principle has been obtained from the flowers, to which the names Tæniin and Koussin have been given. The dose of this is from gr. xx to xl.

HAG'GARD, ([G.] haggard, 'lean,') [F.] Haggard. The French use the term Air haggard, Ceil haggard, 'Haggard air,' 'Haggard eye,' for a physiognomy in which there is at once an expression of madness and terror.

HAGIOSPERMUM, (άγιος, 'holy,' and σπέρμα, 'seed.') Artemisia santonica.

HAGIOXYLUM, (άγιος, 'holy,' and ξυλον, 'wood.') Guaiacum.

HÄHNEMANNISM, (after Dr. S. C. F. Hahnemann, the founder,) Homœopathy.

HALL, (Sax. hægel.) Chalaza.

HAIR, (Sax. hæp, Cri'nis, P'ilus, Thrix, Pile, (F.) Poil.) A conical, corneous substance, the free portion or shaft, scap'pus, of which issues to a greater or less distance from the skin, to the tissue of which it adheres by a bulb or button, bulbus p'ili, seated in a hair follicle—folliculus pili—made by an inversion of the integument, the epidermis of which forms a "root sheath," vagina pili. At the base of the hair follicle there is a small papilla, well supplied with bloodvessels and nerves, Papilla pili; at times called, but improperly, Papula seu Blastema pili. The hair receives various names in different parts—as Beard, Cilia, Eyebrows, Hair of the head (Capilli), &c. See Capillus.

HAIR DYE, TWIGGS'S. A preparation much used to give colour to the hair. It may be formed of precipitated sulphur and acetate of lead, each ʒj; rose water, fʒiv; triturated together in a mortar. It should be applied twice a day until the desired effect is produced.

HAIR, FALLING OFF OF THE, Alopecia.

HAIR FOLLICLE, see Hair.

HAIR, MATTED, Plica—h. Plaited, Plica—h. Trichomatose, Plica.

HAIR WORM, Seta equina, see Ectozoa—h. Worm, muscular, Draconculus.

HAIRY, Pileous. Also, covered with hair.

HAKE, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

HALL, ('αλς, 'αλος,) Salt.

HALL'ATION, Hala'tinn, (dim. of hal.) A pungent remedy with the ancients, which contained salts.

HALCHEMIA. The alchemists so called the art of fusing salts; (hal, and χεω, 'I pour out.')

HALCYON, (άλκυων,) Alcyon.

HALCYONIUM ROTUNDUM, ('αλκυονειον,) Pila marina.

HALEINE, (from halare, 'to emit a vapour,') Breath—h. Courte, Dyspnoea.

HALELÆ'ON, Halelæ'um, (hal, and λαιον, 'oil.') Oleum Sale mixtum. A mixture of oil and salt, for removing swellings of the joints.—

HALÉTERATION, see Alteration.

HALFCASTE, Halfcast, see Caste. A term applied in India to the offspring of a Hindoo and a European: since, extended to the offspring of mixed races. The subjoined list from Tschudi shows the parentage of the different varieties of halfcastes, and also the proper designations of the latter, as observed in South America.

HALICA, Alica.

HALICACABUM, ('αλς, 'the sea,' and κκαθος, 'nightshade.') Physalis.

HALICES, Pandiculæ.

HALIDRYS VESICULOSA ('αλς, 'the sea,' and δρυσ, 'the oak,') Fucus vesiculosus.

HALINA'TRUM, Halini'trum, Haloni'trum: ('αλς, 'salt,' and natrum or natron.) A name given by the ancients to subcarbonate of soda containing a little subcarbonate of ammoniac, which is found, ready-formed, on the plaster of damp walls, in places inhabited by man or animals. Also, Potassæ nitras.

HALINTRUM, see Halinatrum.

HALINUS, ('αλιος, from 'αλς, 'salt,') Saline.

HALITUOUS, or HALIT'UOUS, Halit'uus, (halitus, 'vapour,') (F.) Halitueux. The skin is said to be halitueuse (F.), when covered with a gentle moisture. The vapour, exhaled in all the cavities of the body, so long as the blood is warm, is called Hal'itus. The odorous vapour, exhaled by the blood itself whilst warm, is called Hal'itus Sanguinis.

HALITUS, ('vapour,') Breath, see Halituous—h. Oris Fetidus, Breath, offensive—h. Sanguinis, Gaz sanguinis. See Halituous.

HALL, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. The springs of Hall, in Upper Austria, contain iodine.

HALL'S, (DR. MARSHALL,) READY METHOD, see Ready Method.

HALLUCINATIO, (hallucinari, [or hallucinari] hallucinatus, 'to be deceived.') Hallucination—h. Hypochondriasis, Hypochondriasis—h. Vertigo, Vertigo.

HALLUCINATION, Hallucinatione, Hallucinatione, Falla'cia, Illu'sio, I. sensus, Socor'dia, Alu'sio, Alucinatio, Parova'sis, Somnio'tio in statu rig'itili, Idolum, Waking dream, Phan'tasm. A morbid error, in one or more of the senses. Perception of objects which do not in fact exert any impression on the external senses. Hallucination or delusion almost always, if not always, depends on disorder of the brain, but is not an index of insanity, unless the patient believes in the existence of the subject of the hallucination.

HALLUS, Pollex pedis.

HALLUX, Pollex pedis.

HALME, ('αλμη, 'saltwater.') Muria.

HALMYRIS, ('αλμυρις, 'saltwater.') See Muria.

HALMYRODES, Salsuginosus, Salsuginosus, ('αλμυρος, 'αλμη, 'seawater,' 'αλς, 'salt,') 'saltish,' and odes.) An epithet given to any affection in which the heat feels pungent under the finger of the physician.

HALMYRUS, ('αλμυρος,) Saline.

HALO, gen. Halo'nis, ('αλος, 'a circle,') Areola.

HALO SIGNATUS. The impression made by the ciliary processes on the anterior surface of the vitreous humour. So called from its consisting of a circle of indentations. Called by Haller, Stri'æ ret'inæ subject'æ ligament'æ cilia'ri; by Winslow, Sulci cilia' res.

HALODERÆUM, (hal, and εραον, 'a collar,' from ερα, 'neck,') Colla'rium sali'num. A collar of salt applied to the neck, as in cases of croup.

HALOGENE, (hal, and γεννω, 'to generate,') Chlorine.

HALOIDUM OXYGENATUM, (hal, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Potassæ murias hyperoxygenatus.

HALONITRUM, Halinatrum.

HALOPE'GÆ, (hal, and πηγη, 'a spring,') Mineral waters whose chief ingredient is common salt—chloride of sodium.

HALOS, ('αλος,) Areola.

HALOTYLE, Cul'cita sali'na, (hal, and τυλη, 'a bolster,') A bolster or pillow of salt, recommended in croup.

HALSBANE [Sc.], (Sax. halp, 'the neck,' and ban, 'bone,') Clavicle.

HALSE, (Sax. halp,) Collum, Throat.

HALTE'RES, ('αλητες, from 'αλλομαι, 'to leap,') Pieces of lead held in the hands by the ancients, to assist them in leaping.

HALLUCINATIO, Hallucination.

HALYCODES, ('αλυκωδης,) Saline.

HALYSIS LATA, ('αλυσος, 'a chain,') Bothrioccephalus latus—h. Membranacea, Bothrioccephalus latus—h. Solium, Tœnia solium.

HAM, (Sax. ham,) Poples.

HAMAMELIS VIRGINIANA, ('αμα, 'like to,' and μηλις, 'an apple-tree,') H. Virginica seu macrophylla, Witch hazel, Winter witch hazel, Snapping hazelmit, Winter bloom. Ord. Hamamelaceæ. The bark of this tree, which is a native of the United States, is somewhat bitter and sensibly astringent; but it has not been much used. A cataplasm of the inner rind of the bark is said to have been found efficacious in painful inflammation of the eyes.

HAMARTHRI'TIS, Holarthrit'is, Catholarthrit'is, Arthrit'is universal'is, (αμα, 'at once,' and arthrit'is.) Gout in all the joints. Universal gout.

HAMCH (Prov.), Coxofemoral articulation.

HAM'MA, gen. Hamm'atis, (αμμα,) Nodus, 'a tie.' A knot, used for retaining bandages on any part. A truss.

HAMMERING (Prov.), Balbuties.

HAMPSTEAD, MINERAL WATERS OF These waters, situate in the neighbourhood of London, are a good chalybeate.

HAMSTRING, see Hamstrings.

HAM'STRINGS, (F.) Jurvetiers. The strings or tendons of the ham.

The HAMSTRING MUSCLES are the biceps femoris, whose tendon forms the outer hamstring; and the semimembranosus, semitendinosus, gracilis and sartorius, whose tendons form the inner hamstring.

'To hamstring' means to cut the strings or tendons of the ham.

HAMULAR PROCESS, see Hamulus.

HAM'ULUS, (dim. of hamus, 'a hook,') A hook or crook; Anci'stron. Also, any hook-like process; as the hamulus or hamular process of the pterygoid process of the sphenoid bone, which projects from the termination of the internal pterygoid plate.

HAMULUS LAMINÆ SPIRALIS, see Lamina spiralis.

HAMUS, 'a hook,' see Hamulus.

HANCHE, Haunch.

HANCLETH (Sc.), Malleolus.

HAND, (Sax. hand, hand,) Manus.

HANDS, DROPPED, Hand-drop, Wrist-drop. A popular term for the paralysis of the hand induced by the action of lead.

HANDWOMAN, Midwife.

HANDWRIST (Prov.), Carpus.

HANGERS, Crusta genu equinae.

HANG'NAIL, (old Eng.) Agnail, (Prov.) Ang nail, (Sax. angnægl; from ange, 'troublesome, and nægl, 'a nail,') Stepmother's blessing, Wit-springs, Nail-spring, Nang-nail, Friend-back, (F.) Énie. A portion of epidermis, detached so as to tear the integument in the vicinity of the finger nails.

HANNEBANE, ('henbane,') Hyoscyamus.

HAPANTIS'MUS, (from nas, gen. panos, or δπας, gen. άπαντος, 'all,') Obliteratio completa. The matting or growing together of organic parts.

HAPHÈ, άφη, 'feeling, touch.' Hence:

HAPHON'OSI, Haphonosi'si, (haphè, άπος, 'simple,' and ωσος, 'disease,') Morbi tactūs. Diseases of the sense of touch.

HAPLOACNE, (άπλος, 'simple,' and αcne,) Acne simplex.

HAPLOPATH'IA, (άπλος, 'simple,' and παθος, 'disease,') Morbus simplex. A simple or uncomplicated affection.

HAPLOTOM'IA, Simplex sectio, Incisio simplex, Operatio simplex, (άπλος, 'simple,' and τομη, 'incision,') A simple incision.

HAPSIS, (άψις,) Touch.

HAPTODYSPHORIA, Tactus dolorificus; (άππος, 'touched,' and δυσφορος, 'difficult to be borne,') Painful to the touch.

HAPTOGEN, Haptogenus.

HAPTOGENE, Haptogenus.

HAPTOG'ENOUS, Haptog'enus, Haptogen, (F.) Haptogène, (άππω, 'I attach,' and γεννω, 'I engender,') Ascherson calls the pellicle, which forms around fatty matter when albumen is brought in contact with it, Haptogen membrane, (F.) Membrane haptogène.

HAPTOT'ICA, Haptot'icè, ('άππω, 'to touch,') The doctrine of the phenomena of touch.

HARD, (Sax. hard,) Dur'us, Scler'os, (F.) Dur. That which offers much resistance. In anatomy, the hard parts are those which compose the osseous basis of the body; in other words, the skeleton. See Pulse, hard.

HARD'S FARINACEOUS FOOD, see Farinaeous.

HARDENING, Induration.

HARDESIA, Hibernicus lapis.

HARDHACK, Spiraea tomentosa.

HARDS, see Falsifications, table of.

HARD TACK. Army and navy bread, baked without salt and kiln dried.

HARELIP, Lagoch'ius, Lagos'toma, Lagen'tomum, La'bium Lepori'num, Olopho'nia Lubii Lo-ba'ta, Lepori'num ros'trum, (Sc.) Hare'shaw, (Prov.) Hay'scale, (F.) Bec de Lièvre. A fissure or perpendicular division of one or both lips. It has been so called, in consequence of the upper lip of the hare being thus divided. Harelip is generally congenital; at other times it is accidental, or produced by a wound, the edges of which have not been brought into contact, and have healed separately. It is simple, when there is but one division; double, when there are two; and complicated, when there is, at the same time, a division or cleft of the superior maxillary bone and of the palate—Cleft or fissured palate, Wolf's jaw, Palatum fissum, Rictus lupi'nus; or a projection of the teeth into the separation of the lip.

In the Harelip operation, there are two indications to be fulfilled. First, to pare, with the knife or scissors, the edges of the cleft, and, afterwards, to preserve them in contact; in order to cause adhesion. This last object is accomplished by means of pins, passed through the edges of the division; in other words, by the twisted suture. The projecting teeth must, of course, be previously removed. If there be separation of the palate, it will become less and less after the union of the lip, or the operation of staphylorrhaphy may be performed upon it.

HARE'S EAR, Bupleurum rotundifolium—h. Eye, Lagophthalmia.

HARESHAW (Sc.), Harelip.

HARGNE, Hernia—h. Anévrysmale, Cirsomphalus.

HARGNEUX, see Hernial.

HARICOT, Phaseolus vulgaris—h. Grand de Pérou, Jatropha curcas.

HARMALIA, (άρμαλία) Aliment.

HAR'MONY, Harmo'nia, Harmus, (primarily from ἄρω, 'I adjust.') Anatomists have called Suture by Harmony, or simply Harmony, False or superficial suture, Sutura os'sium spur'ia, Comp'ages os'sium per lineam simp'licem, an immovable articulation, in which the depressions and eminences, presented by the bony surfaces, are but slightly marked; so that it might be presumed that the junction of the bones took place by simple apposition of their surfaces. An instance of harmony occurs in the union of the superior maxillary bones with each other.

HARMUS, (ἄρμος, from ἄρω, 'I adjust.') Articulation, Harmony.

HARNPAN, ([G.] Hirn, 'the brain.') Cranium.

HARRODSBURG SPRINGS, see Kentucky, Mineral Waters of.

HAR'ROWGATE, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. The villages of High and Low Harrogate are situated in the centre of the county of York, near Knaresborough, twenty miles from York, and fifteen from Leeds. Here are several valuable sulphureous and chalybeate springs. The sulphureous springs contain chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, bicarbonate of soda, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid, carburetted hydrogen, and azote. The chalybeate springs contain protoxide of iron, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonic acid, azote, and oxygen. For the former, Harrogate is celebrated and frequented.

HARROWGATE SALTS, ARTIFIC'IAL. are much employed, and not unfrequently by those who drink the genuine water, for the purpose of increasing its aperient power. They may be made as follows:—Potass. Sulph. cum Sulph. ℥vj; Potass. bitart. ℥j; Magnes. Sulph. in pulv. ℥vj; M.

The usual dose is a teaspoonful, in a small tumblerful of tepid water, early in the morning.

HARROWGATE WA'TER, ARTIFIC'IAL, may be formed of common salt, ℥v; water, Oij; impregnated with the gas from sulphuret of potassa and sulphuric acid, aa ℥iv. The following form has also been recommended. R. Potass. Sulphat. cum sulph. (Ph. Ed.) ℥j; Potass. bitart. ℥ss; Magnes. sulphat. ℥vj; Aque destillat. Oij. One-half to be taken for a dose.

HARTFELL, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Hartfell Spa is about five miles from Moffat, in Scotland. The water is a chalybeate, and is much used.

HARTSHORN, Cervus, Cornu cervi, Liquor cornu cervi—h. and Oil, Linimentum ammoniac carbonatis—h. Red, Spiritus lavandulæ compositus.

HARTS' TONGUE, Asplenium scolopendrium.

HARTS' TRUFFLES, Elaphomyces granulatus.

HARTWORT OF MARSEILLES, Seseli tortuosum.

HASCHISCH, see Bangue.

HASCHISCHIN, see Bangue.

HASTA, 'a spear,' Penis—h. Nuptialis, Penis—h. Virilis, Penis.

HASTEELLA, (dim. of hasta,) Splint.

HASTINGS, CLIMATE OF. This place has the reputation of being one of the mildest and most sheltered winter residences on the south coast of England. Owing to its low situation, and the height of the neighbouring cliffs, it is protected in a great degree from all northerly winds; and hence is found a favourable residence generally for invalids labouring under diseases of the chest.

HASTULA REGIS, (dim. of hasta,) Asphodelus ramosus.

HATFIELD'S TINCTURE, see Tinctura Guaiaci ammoniata.

HATREL (Sc.), ([G.] Eiter, 'pus.') Abscess.

HAUNCH, Coxa, Coxen'dix, of the Latins; αχχον, or αχχων, of the Greeks; Ancha, Ischion, Omphys, Hip, Huckle, Cossa, (Prov.) Hubbon, Shoup (F.) Hanche. The region of the trunk which is formed by the lateral parts of the pelvis and the hip-joint, including the soft parts. In women, on account of the greater width of the pelvis, the haunches are more marked and prominent than in men.

HAUNCHBONE, Ilion.

HAUSE, (Sax. haly,) Collum, Throat.

HAUST, (Sax. hpopta, (G.) Husten,) Tussis.

HAUSTEL'ATE, Haustellatus, haurio, haustum, 'I drink up.') An epithet for the structure of mouth, which is adapted for drinking or pumping up liquids. Insects, which possess that kind of mouth, are so named. Ehrenberg refers the fancied spermatozoa to the haustellate entozoa.

HAUSTRA COLI, (haustum, 'a bucket,') See Colon.

HAUST'US, gen. Haustus, (haurire, haustum, 'to drink,') Potio, dim. Potim'cula. A Draught. A liquid medicine, which can be taken at a draught.

HAUSTUS NIGER, ('black draught,') see Infusum sennæ.

HAUT MAL, ('great disease; from (L.) altus, 'high, great,' and malum, 'disease,') Epilepsy.

HAUTLÉ. An'imal bread of the Mex'icans. A bread made of three species of hemipterous insects belonging to the group of water bugs.

HAVAN'A OR HAVAN'NAH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Cuba is often selected for the phthisical invalid during the winter months, and so far as regards elevation and comparative equality of temperature, it is more favourable for those of weak lungs than parts of the United States. The mean annual temperature is high (78°), but the difference between the mean temperature of the warmest and coldest months is twice as great as at Madeira.

HAVER, ([G.] Hafer,) Avena.
HAVERSIAN CANALS, (after Dr. Clopton Havers,) Canals, nutritive, of Bones.

HAW (Prov.), Hungry.

HAW, BLACK, (Sax. hæg,) Viburnum prunifolium.

HAWKNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

HAWKWEED, VEINY, Hieracium venosum.

HAWSE. (Sax. halp,) Throat.

HAWTHORN, WHITE, Mespilus oxycantha.

HAY ASTHMA, Fever, Hay.

HAY, CAMEL'S, Juncus odoratus.

HAYRIF, Galium aparine.

HAYSCALE (Prov.), Helleborus.

HAZEL, BEAKED, (Sax. hærl,) Corylus rostrata.

HAZEL CROTTLES, Lichen pulmonarius—h. Nut, snapping, Hamamelis Virginiana—h. Nut tree, Corylus avellana.

HAZEL, WITCH, Hamamelis Virginiana, Sorbus aucuparia.

HAZELRAW, Lichen pulmonarius.

HEAD, (Sax. heafod, heafod, heaved;) the past participle of heafan, ('to heave up.'). Caput, Cui'ra, Carē, Ceph'alē, Cy'bē, Poll, Palet, (Prov.) Hede, Pore, Scop, (F.) Tête. The head forms the upper extremity of the body, and tops the skeleton. It consists of the cranium and face. The first, which comprises all the superior and posterior part, has the encephalon in its cavity: the latter forms only the anterior part, and serves as the receptacle for the greater part of the organs of the senses.

HEAD, WATER IN THE, Hydrocephalus.

HEAD ACHE, Cephalæa, Cephalalgia—h. Ache, intermittent, Cephalalgia periodica—h. Ache, sick, Cephalæa spasmodica.

HEAD-MOULD-SHOT. An old name for the condition of the skull in which the bones ride, or are shot, over each other at the sutures.

HEADSWOMAN (Prov.), Midwife.

HEAD'Y. Affecting the head. (F.) Capiteux. That which inebriates readily. An epithet, applied to wines which possess this quality.

HEAL, (Sax. heel,) Sanitas.

HEALALL, Collinsonia Canadensis, Prunella vulgaris, Scrophularia nodosa.

HEALING, Curative—h. Art, Medicine—h. Picce, see Touch, royal.

HEALTH, (Sax. hæll,) Sanitas.

HEALTHY, Salutory, All, whole; not diseased.

HEARING, HARDNESS OF, (Sax. hefan, 'to hear.'). Deafness—h. Perverse, Paracusis perversa.

HEART, (Sax. heort, (G.) Herz,) Cor, Cear, Cer, Car'dia, (F.) Cœur. An azygous muscle, of an irregularly pyramidal shape; situate obliquely and a little to the left side, in the chest;—resting on the diaphragm by one of its surfaces;—suspended by its base from the great vessels; free and movable in the rest of its extent, and surrounded by the pericardium. The right side of the body of the heart is thin and sharp, and is called Margo acutus: the left is thick and round, and termed Margo obtusus. It is hollow within, and contains four cavities; two of which, with thinner and less fleshy walls, receive the blood from the lungs and the rest of the body; and pour it into two others, with thick and very fleshy parietes, which send it to the lungs and to every part of the body. Of these cavities, the former are called auricles, the latter ventricles. The right auricle and right ventricle form the Pulmon'ic or right or anterior heart, Cor venosum seu pulmona'le, (F.) Cœur du poumon, C. du sang noir, C. droit, C. antérieur: and the left auricle and ventricle, the system'ic, corporeal, left, or aortic heart, Cor arteriosum seu aorticum, (F.) Cœur du corps, C. gauche, C. cortique ou C. rouge. In the adult, these are totally distinct from each other, being separated by a partition;—the septum cordis. Into the right auricle, the venæ cavæ,—superior and inferior,—and the coronary vein, open. The pulmonary artery arises from the right ventricle (see Conus arteriosus): the four pulmonary veins open into the left auricle, and the aorta arises from the left ventricle.

The mean weight of the heart, in the adult, from the twenty-fifth to the sixtieth year, is, according to Bouillaud, from eight to nine ounces. The dimensions, according to Lobstein and Bouillaud, are as follows:—Length, from base to apex, five inches six lines; breadth, at the base, three inches; thickness of the walls of the left ventricle, seven lines; at a finger's breadth above the apex, four lines; thickness of the walls of the right ventricle, two and a quarter lines; at the apex, half a line; thickness of right auricle, one line; of the left auricle, half a line. The heart is covered, externally, by a very thin, membranous reflection from the pericardium. The muscular structure of which it is constituted is much thicker in the parietes of the ventricle than in those of the auricles. Its cavities are lined by a very delicate membrane, the endocardium, which is continuous with the inner membrane of the arteries, as regards the left cavities, and with that of the veins, as regards the right. Its arteries—the coronary—arise from the commencement of the aorta. Its nerves proceed, chiefly, from the pneumogastric and the cervical ganglions of the great sympathetic. The heart is the great agent in the circulation. By its contraction, the blood is sent over every part of the body. Its action does not seem to be directly owing to nervous influence received from the brain or spinal marrow, or from both. The circulation may, indeed, be kept up for some time, if both brain and spinal marrow be destroyed.

When the ear is applied to the chest, a dull, lengthened sound is heard, which is synchronous with the arterial pulse. This is instantly succeeded by a sharp, quick sound, like that of the valve of a bellows or the lapping of a dog, and this is followed by a period of repose. The first sound appears to be mainly produced by the contraction of the ventricles; the second, by the reflux of the blood against the semilunar valves. These are what are called the Sounds of the Heart, Cardiache'mata, Son'itus cordis seu cardi'aci. (F.) Bruits du Cœur. Dr. C. J. B. Williams suggests the word lubb-dup as conveying a notion of the two sounds. The Beating or Impulse of the heart, Heart-stroke, Apex beat, Pulsus seu Ictus cordis, (F.) Impulsion du Cœur, against the parietes of the chest, is mainly caused by the systole of the heart, which tends to project it forwards. It is doubted, however, by some, whether the impulsion is produced by the dilatation or the contraction of the ventricles.

The following table exhibits the different actions of the heart, and their coincidence with its sounds and impulse. It presumes, that the period from the commencement of one pulsation to that of another is divided into eight parts; and if the case of a person, whose pulse beats sixty times in a minute, be taken, each of these parts will represent the eighth of a second.

The heart is subject to different organic diseases; the chief of which are aneurism, contraction of the apertures, and rupture of its parietes.

HEART, ATROPHY OF THE, Atroph'ia seu Ariditas seu Pith'ois Cordis, Cardiostroph'ia, Acardiostroph'ia. A condition of the organ in which there is diminution in the thickness of the parietes of the whole organ.

HEART, BEATING OF THE, see Heart.

HEART CLOT, see Polypus.

HEART, DILATATION OF THE, see Aneurism—h. Displacement of the, Ectopia Cordis—h. Fatty, Steatosis cordis.

HEART, HYPERTROPHY OF THE, Hypertroph'ia Cordis, Hypercord'ia, Hypercord'is Cordis, Hypercardiostroph'ia, Cardianz'e, Aneurysma cordis act'cum (Corvisart), Cor bœv'ium seu taur'ium, Emu'mitas cordis. (F.) Hypertrophie du Cœur. Supernutrition of the muscular parietes of the heart, which are thicker than usual; the cavities being generally diminished. The physical signs which indicate it are the following. In cases of long standing, the præcordial region is generally prominent; the pulsations of the heart are visible over a greater extent than natural; and a marked vibration is communicated to the hand when placed on the cardiac region. The dull sound on percussion is more extensive than natural; and on auscultation there is a permanent increase of the force and extent of the heart's action: there is no increase, however, of frequency, and the rhythm is regular. The pulse is generally strong, full, and hard.

HEART, CONCENTRIC HYPERTROPHY OF THE. (F.) Hypertrophie concentrique, Hypertrophie centripète du Cœur, Rétrai't ventriculaire, Cardiacotie. is when the parietes augment at the expense of the cavities.

HEART, HYPERTROPHY WITH DILATATION OF THE, Active aneurism, Eccentric hypertrophy. In this affection, the pulsations can be seen and felt over a larger space, and the apex is more to the left and lower down than natural. The impulse is less steady, but at times more violent than that which accompanies simple hypertrophy. Percussion gives more distinct evidence of the enlargement, the sound being more extensively dull. On auscultation, the impulse is often violent, but irregular; in extreme cases, it produces the sensation of a large mass of flesh rolling or revolving beneath the ear. The pulse is strong, full, and vibratory. The shock of the heart's action is often transmitted to the whole person, and to the bed on which the patient is lying.

HEAT, (past participle of Sax. hætan, 'to make warm') Calor, Ther'ma. (F.) Chaleur. The material cause, which produces the sensation—or the particular sensation itself—produced by a body of an elevated temperature, on our organs, especially on the organs of touch. Modern chymists have given the name Caloric to the principle, whatever may be its nature, which is the cause of heat. When we touch a body of a temperature superior to our own, a portion of caloric passes from the body to the hand, and produces the sensation of heat. If, on the contrary, we touch a body of a temperature inferior to our own, we communicate a portion of our caloric to it, and experience the sensation of cold. Our own sensations are but imperfect indexes of temperature. Two men meeting at the middle of a mountain,—the one ascending, the other descending,—will experience different sensations. The one ascending, passes from a warmer to a colder atmosphere;—the one descending from a colder to a warmer.

The chief instrument for measuring heat, used in medicine, is the thermometer. Of this there are three kinds:—that of Fahrenheit, that of Réaumur, and that of Celsius or the Centigrade.

To reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 5, and add 32: thus,  $40^{\circ} \text{Cent.} \times 9 \div 5 + 32 = 104^{\circ} \text{Fah.}$  To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Centigrade, subtract 32, multiply by 5, and divide by 9: thus,  $104^{\circ} \text{Fah.} - 32 \times 5 \div 9 = 40^{\circ} \text{Cent.}$  To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 4, and add 32: thus,  $32^{\circ} \text{Réaumur.} \times 9 \div 4 + 32 = 104^{\circ} \text{Fah.}$  To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Réaumur, subtract 32, multiply by 4, and divide by 9: thus,  $104^{\circ} \text{Fah.} - 32 \times 4 \div 9 = 32^{\circ} \text{Réaumur.}$  To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Centigrade, multiply by 5, and divide by 4: thus  $32^{\circ} \text{Réaumur.} \times 5 \div 4 = 40^{\circ} \text{Cent.}$ ; and, lastly, to reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Réaumur, multiply by 4, and divide by 5: thus,  $40^{\circ} \text{Cent.} \times 4 \div 5 = 32^{\circ} \text{Réaumur.}$

By the term gentle heat, Ph. U. S., 1863, is meant any temperature between  $90^{\circ}$  and  $100^{\circ}$ .

The normal temperature of the body may be regarded as on the average, from  $98^{\circ}$  to  $100^{\circ}$  or upwards. The blood of the right side of the heart is slightly hotter than that of the left; and the highest temperature observed is where the suprahepatic veins empty their blood into the vena cava ascendens. See Animal heat.

The human body can bear a high degree of heat diffused in the atmosphere. There are cases on record, where air of  $400^{\circ}$  and upwards, of Fahrenheit's scale, has been breathed with impunity for a short time. It can likewise withstand very severe cold. In the expedition of Capt. Back to the Arctic regions, the thermometer was as low as  $-70^{\circ}$  of Fahr., and Sir George Simpson affirms, that it has fallen in Siberia to  $-83^{\circ}$ , or  $115^{\circ}$  below the freezing point. Dr. Kane, in the Arctic regions, in 1855-54, observed the range of eleven spirit thermometers, selected as standards, to vary from  $-60^{\circ}$  to  $-75^{\circ}$ . The mean annual temperature was  $5^{\circ} 2$ , the lowest ever registered.

Excessive heat disposes the body to gastric and intestinal diseases, and particularly to inflammation and enlargement of the liver: hence, the frequency of such affections within the torrid zone. Heat is often used therapeutically; the actual cautery, at a white heat, disorganizes the parts to which it is applied: a lesser degree occasions violent inflammation. Heat higher than that of the human body is excitant: of a lower degree, sedative. Excessive cold acts as a powerful sedative—in ducing sleep, the tendency to which, after long exposure, becomes irresistible. Many of the topical applications—as cataplasms—act wholly by virtue of their warmth and moisture.

HEAT, Ardor venereus, Pruritus, (F.) Chaleurs, Chaleurs des Animaux, Folie, Rut, is the periodical sexual desire experienced by animals,—Œstruation. It is supposed by some to be owing to the periodical maturation and discharge of ova.—Oculation.

HEAT, ACRID, see Acrid—h. Animal, see Animal Heat.

HEAT APOPLEX, see Coup-de-soleil.

HEAT, INTERNAL, (F.) Chaleur interne, is a sensation of heat felt by the patient, but not sensible to the touch. External heat, (F.) Chaleur extérieure, that which can be felt by others. Heat

Ardor, is called moist, (F.) halitense, when accompanied with moisture, like that felt after bathing; dry, (F.) sèche, when the skin has not its ordinary softness. It is called acrid and pungent, Calor mordax, (F.) âcre et mordicante, when it conveys a disagreeable tingling to the fingers. The French employ the terms nerveux heat and errat'ic heat, Chaleur nerveuse and Chaleur erratique, for that which comes by flushes, alternating with chills, and which moves rapidly from one part to another. M. Double has used the term septic heat, (F.) Chaleur septique, for that which produces a pungent sensation on the hand, similar to that of acrid heat, but milder and more uniform, and which is accompanied with feebleness and frequency of pulse, &c.

HEAT, PRICKLY, Lichen tropicus.

HEATH COMMON, (Sax. hæð), Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER (Sc.), Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER-CLU, (Se.) Malleolus.

HEATOPHONICS, (ἑαυτον, 'of himself,' and φωνη, 'voice,') see Autophonia.

HEAVINESS, Somnolency.

HEAVING, (from Sax. heafan, 'to heave, to raise,') Vomiturition.

HEAVY, Gravis, (F.) Gravatif, (Sax. hæfig, hæfīg.) An epithet given to any condition which consists in a sensation of weight or heaviness, or is accompanied by such sensation.

HEBDOMADAL CYCLE, (ἑβδομας, 'a week,' from ἑπτα, 'seven,') see Cycle.

HEBDOMADARIA, Octana.

HEBĒ, (ἡβη,) Juventa, Juventus, Juventus, Ho'ra. In antiquity, the goddess of puberty. The word has been employed to designate, 1. The first hair that grows on the pubes, 2. The pubic region, and 3. Puberty.

HEBETES, (ἡβητης,) Adolescens.

HEBETER, (ἡβητηρ,) Adolescens.

HEBETUDO ANIMI, (hebes, 'dull,') Imbecility — h. Dentium, Hæmodia — h. Visus, Amblyopia, Astenopia, Caligo.

HEBRADENDRON CAMBOGIOIDES, see Cambogia.

HE'BREWS, MED'ICINE OF THE. Medicine seems to have been at a very low ebb with the ancient Hebrews. Of anatomy they knew nothing. Their physiology was imperfect and filled with superstitions; and their therapeutics unsatisfactory. Hygiene appears to have been most attended to. Of the other departments of medicine we cannot judge of their knowledge.

HECATONIA PALUSTRIS, (from ἑκατον, 'a hundred,' from its numerous flowers,) Ranunculus scleratus.

HECATOPHYLLA, (ἑκατον, 'a hundred,' and φυλλον, 'a leaf,') Rosa cistifolia.

HECH, (by onomatopœia,) Anhelatio.

HECKBERRY (Prov.), Prunus padus.

HECTEUS, (ἑκτευς,) A Greek measure, containing about 72 chopines or pints.

HECTIC, Hecticus, (from ἔξις, 'habit,') (F.) Hectique, Étique. Relating or appertaining to the constitution or habit.

HECTIC FEVER, Febris hectica seu phthis'ica seu marasmo'des seu tab'ida seu len'ia seu amphimer'ina hectica seu amato'ria, Hectico'p'gra, Hectico'p'etos, Hect'ica, Amphimer'ina hect'ica, Synteco'p'gra, Syntectico'p'gra, Marasmo'p'gra, Lencopy'ria, Epan'etus hect'icus, Chloro'sis amato'ria, Ect'ick, (Sc.) Ethick, Etick, (F.) Fièvre Hectique ou Étique, (ἔξις, 'habit of body;' because in this disease every part of the body is emaciated; or, perhaps, from ἐκτικω, 'I consume,' 'I am exhausted,') The name of a slow, continued, or remittent fever, which generally accompanies the end of organic affections, and has been esteemed idiopathic, although it is probably always symptomatic. It is the fever of irritation and debility; and is characterized by progressive emaciation, frequent pulse, hot skin,—especially of the palms of the hands and soles of the feet,—and, towards the end, colliquative sweats and diarrhœa. Being symptomatic, it can only be removed by getting rid of the original affection. This is generally difficult, and almost hopeless in the disease which it most commonly accompanies,—consumption.

HECTICA, Hectic Fever—h. Infantilis, Fever, infantile remittent.

HECTICOPYRA, (ἑκτικός, 'hectic,' and πυρ, 'fire or fever,') Hectic fever.

HECTICOPYRETOS, (ἑκτικός, 'hectic,' and πυρετος, 'fever,') Hectic fever.

HECTICUS, (ἑκτικός,) Hectic.

HECTIQUE, Hectic.

HECTISIS, (F.) Étisie. The state of those who have hectic fever.

HECTOGRAMME, Hectogramma, (ἑκατον, 'a hundred,' and γραμμα.) A measure of 100 grammes, i. e., 3 ounces, 1 drachm, and 44 grains, Troy.

HECTOLITRE. A measure containing 100 litres or 26.42 wine pints.

HECUSIUS, (ἑκουσιος, and ἑκων,) Voluntary.

HEDE (Sc.), Head.

HEDEO'MA, Hedeo'ma pulegioid'es, (ἡδου, 'agreeable,') Omni'la pulegioid'es, Melissa pulegioid'es, Pennyroyal, Tick'weed, Stink'ing Balm, Squaw'mint. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Labiatae. An indigenous plant, common in all parts of the United States, and, which, where it is abundant, perfumes the air for a considerable distance. It is employed in the same cases as the mints and the English pennyroyal. In popular practice it is used as an emmenagogue.

The O'leum Hedeo'mæ (Ph. U. S.) or Oil of Pennyroyal is used as a stimulating carminative, dropped on sugar. Dose, 2 to 6 drops.

HERERA ARBorea, H. Helix.

HERERA HELIX, Hed'era arbo'rea, Bac'chica, Cis'sus, Cit'tos, Ed'era, Corymb'eltra, Corym'bos, Ivy, (Sc.) Bind'wood, (F.) Lierre, L. commun ou grim'pant. Ord. Araliaceae. The taste of ivy leaves is bitter, styptic, and nauseous. They are not used in medicine. According to Haller, they were recommended in Germany against atrophy of children; and the common people of England sometimes apply them to running sores and to keep issues open. The berries were supposed, by the ancients, to have an emetic and purgative quality; and a watery extract was made from them, called by Quercetanus Extractum purgans. From the stalk of the tree a resinous juice exudes, in warm climates, called Gummi Hed'erae, Ivy Gum, (F.) Gomme de lierre, Résine de lierre. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, but is not used.

HERERA TERRESTRIS, Glechoma hederacea.

HERERULA, (dim of hedera), Glechoma hederacea.

HEDEVERK, ([Sax.] heapod-hæare,) Cephalalgia.

HEDEWARK, Cephalalgia.

HE'DRA, (ἡδρα, ἕδρη, 'a vestige,' 'a seat,') A seat. A fracture of the bones of the cranium, in which the trace of the fracturing instrument is still perceptible. It was, also, used by the ancients, for the anus, the breech, excrement, a privy, a night-chair, and for the bottom of an abscess.

HEDROCELE, (hedra, and κληη, 'a tumour,') Proctocele.

HEDY, in composition (from ἡδους,) sweet, agreeable.

HEDYCH'ROUM, (hedy, and χροα, 'colour,') A remedy of a pleasant colour. Applied to certain trochs, the chief constituent of which was theriac.

HEDYPHONIA, (hedy, and φωνη, 'voice.') Sweetness of voice.

HEDYPNEUS'TUS, Hedyp'neous, (hedy, and πνεω, 'I breathe.') Breathing sweetly or softly. Smelling sweetly.

HEDYPNOIS TARAXACUM, (hedy, and πνεω, 'to breathe,' from its scenting the breath.) Leon-todon taraxacum.

HEDYSARUM ALHAGI, (ἡδύσαρον, from hedy, and αρωμα.) Agv'

HEDYSMA, gen. Hedysm'atis, (ἡδύσμα.) Condi-ment.

HEEL, (Sax. hel), see Calcaneum—h. Clubfoot, see Kylosis—h. String, Achillis tendo.

HEGH, (by onomatopoeia.) Anhelatio.

HEIL, (Sax. hæl.) Sanitas.

HELCENTERITIS, (helco, and enteritis.) Do-thinenteritis.

HELCO, in composition, from ελκος, 'an ulcer.'

HELCOCA'CE, Cachelco'ma, (helco, and κακη, 'badness.') A malignant ulcer.

HELCODES, (ἑλκώδης, from helco, and odes.) Ulcerated, Ulcerous.

HELCOLOGY, Helcolog'ia, (helco, and λογος, 'a discourse.') The doctrine of, or a treatise on, ulcers.

HELCOMA, gen. Helco'matis, (ἑλκωμα.) Ulcer.

HELCOMENIA, (helco, and μηνης, 'menses,') Menelcosis.

HELCOPTHAL'MIA, Ophthal'mia ulcero'sa. Ophthalmia with ulceration.

HEL'COPLASTY, Hel'koplasty, El'koplasty, Elc'oplasty; (helco, and πλασσω, 'I form.') An operation which consists in grafting on an ulcer a piece of skin from the opposite limb, or from the limb of another person, when the destruction of skin is too great to permit the healing process.

HELICOSIS, (ἑλκωσις, from helco and osis.) El-cosis, Ulceration—h. Cerebri, Enecephalopyosis—h. Laryngis, Phthisis laryngea—h. Pulmonalis, Phthisis pulmonalis—h. Renalis, Nephrelosis—h. Uteri, see Metrophthisis—h. Vesicæ, Cysto-phthisis.

HELCOSTAPHYLO'MA, gen. Helcostaphylo'matis, (helco, and σταφυλωμα, 'staphyloma.') Staphyloma ending in ulceration.

HELCOXERO'SIS, (helco, and ξηρωσις, 'dry-ness.') The drying of an ulcer.

HELCTICA, (from ἔλκω, 'to draw,') Epispas-tics.

HELCUS, (ἑλκος.) Ulcer.

HELCOYDRION, Helcody'rium, ἑλκυδριον, (dim. of Helcus.) Ulcus culum. A small ulcer, a superficial ulceration of the cornea.

HELCYSTER, (ἑλκυστηρ, from ἔλκω, 'I draw,') An iron hook or crotchet for extracting the fœtus. See Crotchet.

HELENIUM, (after Helena [?]), Inula heleni-um.

HELIAN'UM AUTUMNA'LĒ, False Sun'flower, Sneeze'wort, Sneeze'weed, Sicamp Sun'flower, Yel-low star, Ox'eye. Ord. Compositæ. An indig-enous herb, with large goldenyellow compound flowers, which appear in August. All its parts are bitter and somewhat acrid, and when snuffed up the nostrils in powder are powerful sternuta-tories.

HELIAN'THEMUM CANADEN'SĒ, ('ἡλιος, 'sun,' and ανθεμον, 'flower.') Helianthemum (Ph. U. S.), Cistus Canaden'sis, Frost'wort, Frost'weed, Frostplaut, Rockrose. Ord. Cistaceæ. An herba-ceous plant, having large yellow flowers, which grows in all parts of the United States, and flowers, in the Middle States, in June. It has an astringent, slightly aromatic, and bitterish taste. It has been prescribed in serofula, but probably is nothing more than an aromatic tonic.

HELIAN'THEMUM CORYMBO'SUM, Rockrose, an indigenous plant, is used in the same cases.

HELIASIS, (ἡλιασις, from 'ἡλιος, 'the sun,') Astrabolismus, Insolation.

HELICH'RYSUM NUDIFOLIUM, (ἡλιος, 'sun,' and χρυσοσ, 'gold,') Caffer tea. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is de-mulcent, and, in the form of infusion, is recom-mended in catarrh, phthisis, and other pulmonary affections.

HELICHRYSUM SERPYLLIFO'LIUM, Hol'tentots'tea, and HELICHBYSUM AURICULA'TUM have simi-lar virtues.

HELICIA, ('ἡλικια.) Age.

HELICINE, Helic'inius, Helic'oides, Helico-des, (from ἑλιξ, gen. ελικος, 'the tendril of the vinc.')

Resembling in form the tendril of the vine.

HELICINE ARTERIES of the penis, as described by J. Müller, are short vessels given off from the larger branches, as well as from the finest twigs of the artery of the organ: most of those come off at a right angle, and project into the cavity of the spongy substance, either terminating ab-ruptly or swelling out into a club-like process without again subdividing. Almost all these vessels are bent like a horn, so that the end de-scribes half a circle or somewhat more. They have a great resemblance to the tendrils of the vine, whence their name. A minute examination of them, either with the lens or the microscope, shows that, although they at all times project into the venous cavities of the corpora cavernosa, they are not entirely naked, but are covered with a delicate membrane, which, under the microscope, appears granular.

HELICIS MA'JOR, (gen. of helix.) A muscle of the ear, which originates from the anterior, acute part of the helix, upon which it ascends and is inserted into the helix. It pulls the part into which it is inserted a little downwards and forwards.

HELICIS MI'NOR. This muscle originates from the under and fore part of the helix, and is in-serted into the helix, near the fissure in the carti-lage, opposite the concha. Its use is to contract the fissure.

HELICOIDES, ('ελιξ, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Helicine.

HELICOTRE'MA, gen. Helicotre'matis, ('ελιξ, 'helix,' and τρομα, 'a foramen,') The hole by which the two scales of the cochlea communicate at the apex.

HELIENCEPHALITIS, ('ἡλιος, 'the sun,' and encephalitis.) see Coup de Soleil.

HELIGMUS, ('ἡλιγμος, from 'ελισσω, 'to turn round,') Convolution.

HELIKIA, ('ἡλικια.) Age.

HELIOMYELITIS, ('ἡλιος, 'the sun,' μυελος, 'the marrow,' and itis.) Myelitis from exposure to the sun.

HELIONOSIS, ('ἡλιος, 'the sun,') Insolation.

HELIOPSYDRA'CIUM, ('ἡλιος, 'the sun,' and psydriacium.) A psydriacum or pustule from ex-posure to the sun.

HELIOSCIADIUM NODIFLORUM, (ἡλιος, 'the sun,' and σκιάδιον, 'a parasol,') Sium.

HELIOSIS, ('ἡλιωσις.) Astrabolismus, Insola-tion.

HELIOTROPE, ('ἡλιος, 'the sun,' and τροπω, 'I turn,') Heliotropium Europæum.

HELIOTROPION, Cichorium intybus.

HELIOTROPIMUM EUROPE'UM, H. erec-tum seu caues'cens seu sup'ium, Verruca'ria. The Heliotrope, (F.) Tournefol, Herbe aux ver-rues. Ord. Boraginaceæ. This plant is con-sidered to possess aperient properties; and to be capable of destroying cutaneous excrescences; hence one of its names.

HELIOTROPIMUM IN'DICUM, an East India plant, naturalized in some of the Western and Southern States, probably has similar virtues.

HELIX, gen. Hel'icis, ('ελιξ, gen. ελικος, 'the tendril of the vine,' from ελειν, 'to envelop,' 'to roll.') Cope'olus. The fold is thus called, which forms the outer circumference or ring of the external ear.

HELIX, Limax.

HELIX ΡΟΜΑΪΤΙΑ, (F.) Limaçon. Colimaçon, Escargot. A large kind of snail, transported from the south of Europe to England by Sir Kenelme Digby, for his lady when in a decline. It was considered highly restorative.

HELLA, Incubus.

HELLEBORASTER, (from 'ελληβορος.) Helleborus foetidus—h. Foetidus, Helleborus foetidus.

HELLEBORE, Dracontium foetidum—h. American. Veratrum viride—h. black, Helleborus niger—h. Blanc, Veratrum album—h. Green, Helleborus viridis—h. Noir, Helleborus niger—h. Stinking, Helleborus foetidus—h. Swamp, Veratrum viride—h. White, Veratrum album.

HELLEBORIS'MUS, (from 'ελληβορος.) Elleboris'mus. The method of treating disease, amongst the ancients, by hellebore. This comprised not only the choice, preparation, and administration of the medicine, but, likewise, the knowledge and employment of preliminary precautions and remedies proper for aiding its action, and preventing the pernicious effects which it might occasion.

HELLEBORUS, ('ελληβορος.) H. niger—h. Albus, Veratrum album.

HELLEBORUS FŒTIDUS, Helleboros'ter, Elleboras'ter, Stink'ing Hel'ebore or Bear's foot, Set'tercort, (F.) Hellébore ou Ellébore fétide, Pied de Griffon, Pas de lion. Ordi. Ranunculaceæ. The leaves of this plant are said to be aulchmintic. The smell of the fresh plant is extremely fetid, and the taste bitter and acrid. It usually acts as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS GRANDIFLORUS, H. niger.

HELLEBORUS NIGER, H. grandiflorus, Elleb'orus niger, Melampod'ium, Melamporchi'um, Ectom'us, Black Hel'ebore, Mel'ampode, Christ'mas Rose, Clovetouque, (F.) Hellébore noir. The root of this European plant—Helleborus, (Ph. U. S.)—has a disagreeable odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is possessed of cathartic properties, and has been recommended as an emmenagogue. It has been given in mania, melaucholia, dropsy, suppressed menses, &c. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS TRIFOLIUS, Coptis.

HELLEBORUS VIRIDIS, Green Hel'ebore. A European plant, naturalized on Long Island, has similar properties to the last.

HELLECBRA, Sedum.

HELLENIA GRANDIFLORA, (after C. N. Hellenius, professor at Abo,) Costus.

HELMETFLOWER, YELLOW, Aconitum Anthora.

HELMET POD, Jeffersonia Bartoni.

HELMINS, gen. Helmin'this, plur. Helmin'thes seu Elmin'thes, (from 'ελμινς, gen. 'ελμινδος, 'a worm,') A worm; an entozoon.

HELMINTHAGOGUE, (helmintho, and αγω, 'to drive,') Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHI, Worms.

HELMINTHIA, Helminthiasis—h. Alvi, Worms.

HELMIS'THIA ERRAT'ICA, Worms, introduced by accident and without finding a proper habitation in the stomach or intestines; producing spasmodic colic, with severe tormina, and occasionally vomiting or dejections of blood; the 12th genus of the order Enterica, class Culiacæ, of Good.

HELMINTHIA PODICIS, Worms.

HELMINTH'IASIS, Helminthogen'esis. A generic name for the condition which gives occasion to the presence of intestinal worms. It is, also, called Helmin'thia, Vermin'atio, Mor'bus vermin'osus, St'atus vermin'osus, Sabur'ra vermin'osa, Scoleci'asis, Scolec'es'is, Entozoo'gen'esis, Parasiti's'mus intestinal'is, Worm disease, Invermin'ation, Vermin'atio. See Worms.

HÉMADYNAMIQUE, Hæmadynamics.

HÉMAPÉRITONIRRHAGIE, Hæmaperitonirrhag'ia, (hema, peritonæum, and ήρνημ, 'I break forth,') Hemorrhage into the peritonæum.

HÉMAPROCTIE, (hema, and πρωκτος, 'anus,') Hæmorrhoids.

HÉMATATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.

HÉMATIDROSE, (hema, and ίρως, 'sweat,') Sudor cruentus.

HÉMATIES, Globules, red, of the blood.

HEMATIN, Hæmatin.

HEMATO, in composition, see Hema.

HÉMATO-ENCÉPHALIE, Apoplexy.

HÉMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÉMATOÏDINE, Hæmatoïdin.

HÉMATOLOGIE, Hæmatology.

HÉMATOLOGY, Hæmatology.

HÉMATOMYÉLIE, (hema, and μυελος, 'marrow,') Hémorrhagie de la Moëlle Épinière.

HÉMATONCIE, Hæmatoncus, see Hæmatodes fungus—h. Fongoïde, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÉMATOPISIE, Hæmatops.

HÉMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HÉMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMATOSTATICS, Hæmatostatica.

HÉMATOSTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica

HÉMATOZOAIRES, Hæmatozoa.

HEMATURIE, Hæmaturia.

HÆMENDOCARDE, Hæmendocardium.

HEMERA, ('ἡμερα, 'a day.'). Dies. Hence:

HEMERALOPIA, see Nyctalopia.

HEMERALOP'IA, (hemera, and σκοποι, 'I see.')

Hæmeralops, Dys'opia seu Coli'go tenebra'rum, Parop'sis Noctif'uga, V'isus diurn'us, Nyctalo'pis (of some), Nyctotyphlo'is, Amblyo'pia crepuscula'ris, Cæcitas crepuscula'ris seu nocturna, A'cies diurna, Daysight, Dayvis'ion, Henblind'ness, Nightblind'ness, Nocturnal Amauro'sis, (F.) Héméralopie, Vue diurne, Avenglement de Nuit, Cécité nocturne. A disease, in which the eyes enjoy the faculty of seeing, whilst the sun is above the horizon, but are incapable of seeing by the aid of artificial light. Its causes are not evident. The eye, when carefully examined, presents no alteration, either in its membranes or humours.

HEMERALOPS, gen. Hemeralo'pis, Do'rea. One labouring under hemeralopia. Also, Hemeralopia.

HEMERATYPHLOSIS, (hemera, τυφλος, 'blind,' and osis.) Nyctalopia.

HEMERODROMA, gen. Hemerodro'matis, (hemera, and δρομος, 'a course,') Ephemera.

HEMEROPATHIA; (hemera, and παθος, 'an affection.')

A disease, which continues only a day; or, which is only observed during the day.

HEMEROTYPHLOSIS, (hemera, τυφλος, 'blind,' and osis.) Nyctalopia.

HEMI, ('ἡμι, 'ἡμισυς,') 'half,' 'semi.' Hence:

HEMIACEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hémiacéphale, (hemi, a, and κεφαλη, 'head.')

A monster whose head is represented by a shapeless tumour, with some appendages or cutaneous folds anteriorly, the thoracic extremities existing.

HEMIAMAUSOSIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIANDRUS, ('ἡμιάνδρος, from hemi, and ανδρ, gen. άνδρος, 'a man,') Eunuch.

HEMIANOR, (hemi, and ανηρ, 'a man,') Eunuch.

HEMIANTHROPIA, ('ἡμιάνθρωπια, from hemi, and άνθρωπος, 'a man,') Mania.

HEMIANTHROPUS, Eunuch, Maniac.

HEMIÁZYGÁ (Vena), see Azygos vein.

HEMIC, Hæmic.

HEMICEPHALÆA, (hemi, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Hemicrania.

HEMICEPHALÆUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALIUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPH'ALUS, Hemienceph'alus, Semiceph'alus. One who has half a head.

HEMICRANIA, ('ἡμικρανία.) Hemicephalæ'a, Migra'na, Gra'na, Hemip'gia, Hemipe'gia, Heterocrania, Menopa'gia, Menope'gia, Cephalæ'a Hemicra'nia, Hemipath'i'a, Neural'gia cerebralis, Hem'icrany, Mé'grim, (hemi, and κρανιον, 'cranium.')

(F.) Migraine. Pain, confined to one-half the head. It is almost always of an intermittent character;—at times, continuing only as long as the sun is above the horizon; and hence sometimes called Sun pain,—and is cured by cinchona, arsenic, and the remedies adapted for intermittents.

HEMICRANIA IDIOPATHICA, Neuralgia, facial.

HEMICRANY, Hemicrania.

HEMIDESMUS IN'DICUS, (hemi, and δεσμος, 'a tie,' in allusion to the filaments,) Perip'loca In'dica, Asclepias Pseudosar'sa, Sarsaparil'la In'dica, Nannari, In'dian Sarsaparil'la. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. A Hindoostanee plant, the root of which, Hemidesm'us (Ph. B.), has a peculiar aromatic odour, and a bitterish taste. It is used in India as a substitute for sarsaparilla.

HEMIDIALYSIS, (hemi, and διαλυσις, 'dissolution,') Hemiplegia.

HEMIDIAPHORE'SIS, Transpira'tio Uni-

luta'ra; (hemi, and διαφορησις, 'perspiration,') Perspiration of one-half the body.

HEMIECTON, ('ἡμιακτον,) Hemiec'teon, Semisect'um. A vessel capable of containing 36 chopines or pints, and in which fumigations were formerly made in diseases of the uterus and vagina.

HEMIENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hémiencéphale, (hemi, and εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon,') A monster, which has no trace of the organs of the senses, and yet has a brain nearly natural. See Hemiccephalus.

HEMIG'YUNUS, ('ἡμιγυνος, from ἡμισι, and γυνη, 'a woman,') One who is effeminate, or half a woman.

HEMIM'ELES, (F.) Hémimède, (hemi, and μελος, 'a limb,') A genus of monsters, in which the upper or lower extremities are very defective—mere stumps,—and the fingers and toes are entirely wanting or very imperfect.

HEMIME'RION, (hemi, and μερα, 'a part,') 'One half part.' Also, half a drachm.

HEMI'NA, ('ἡμινα.) A Greek measure, answering to the Coty'le κοτύλη, i. e. one half the sextarius, or about half a pint, English.

HEMIOBOL'ION, ('ἡμιβολιον,) Hemio'b'olon. Half the obolus. A weight of about five grains.

HEMIOL'IOS, ('ἡμιολιος.) A weight of 12 drachms, or oz. 1½. See Sescuncia.

HEMIO'PIA, Hemio'pis, Hemio'pi'asis, Suffu'sio dimid'ians, V'isus dimidia'tus, Marmor'ygē Hippocr'atis, Hemiamauros'is, Amauro'sis dimidia'ta, (F.) Hémiopie, Hémiop'sie; (hemi, and σκοποι, 'I see,') Depraved vision, in which the person sees only one half of an object.

HEMIOPIASIS, Hemiopia.

HÉMIOP'SIE, Hemiopia.

HEMIOPSIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIPA'GES, Dicor'yp'hæus dihyogog'atrius, Octo'pus gymnaheoceph'alus, (hemi, and πηγνυμι, 'I fasten,') A monstrosity, in which twins are united from the navel to the vertex.

HEMIPAGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPATHIA, (hemi, and παθος, 'affection,') Hemicrania.

HEMIPLEGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPHO'NIA, (hemi, and φωνη, 'voice,') Great weakness of voice. The husky voice of those affected with cholera.

HEMIPLE'GIA, Hemiple'xia, Hemidia'l'ysis, Para'l'ysis Hemiple'gia, Semiple'gia, Semisidera'tio, (hemi, and πλησσω, or πληττω, 'I strike,') Paralysis of one side of the body. See Paralysis. One so palsied is said to be hemiple'g'ic, semi-sidera'tus.

HEMIPLEGIA FACIALIS, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMIPLEXIA, ('ἡμιπληξία,) Hemiplegia.

HEMIPROSPLEGIA, (hemi, προσσωπον, 'face, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMISPHERÆ CEREBRI, Hemispheres of the brain.

HEMISPHERE, Hemisphæ'ra, Hemisphæ'rium, (hemi, and σφαира, 'a sphere,') One half of a sphere or of a body having a spheroidal shape.

HEMISPHERES OF THE BRAIN, Hemisphæ'ræ cer'ebr'i, Hemispher'ical gan'glia, are the upper spheroidal portions of the brain, separated from each other by the falx cerebri.

HEMISPHERICAL GANGLIA, Hemispheres of the brain.

HÉMITE, Hæmitis.

HEMITRITÆA (FE'BRIS), ('ἡμιτριταίος (πυρετός,) Fe'bris semitert'iana seu sequial'tera, (F.) Hémitritée, Demitierce, Fèvre demitierce, (hemi, and τριταίος, 'tertian,') A semitertian fever, so called because it seems to possess both the characters of the tertian and quotidian intermittents.

HEMIUNCIA, (hemi, and οὐνχία, 'an ounce,') Hemiuncion.

HEMIUNCION, Hemion'cia, Semin'cia, Semin'cia Half an ounce.

HEMLOCK, Pinus Canadensis, Conium maculatum — h. American, Cicuta maculata — h. Bastard, Cerberophyllum sylvestris — h. Common, Conium maculatum.

HEMLOCK DROPWORT, Ceanothe.

HEMLOCK, GROUND, Taxus Canadensis.

HEMLOCK GUM, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Pitch, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Poison, Conium — h. Spruce, Pinus Canadensis.

HEMLOCK, WATER, AMERICAN, Cicuta maculata, Cicuta aquatica — h. Water, fine-leaved, Phellandrium aquaticum — h. Wild, Cicuta maculata.

HÉMOANGIAIRRHAGIE, (hemo, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' απρ, 'air,' and βήρυθμι, 'to break forth,') Hæmoptysis.

HÉMOCARDE, (hemo, and καρδία, 'heart,')
Hæmocardiorrhagia.

HÉMOCARDIOPLASTIES, (hemo, καρδία, 'heart,' and πλασσω, 'to form,') see Polypus.

HÉMODIA, Hæmodia.

HEMO, in composition, see Hema.

HÉMODYNAMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMODYNAMOMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMOENCÉPHALORRHAGIE, (hemo, en-cephalon, and βήρυθμι, 'to break forth,')
Apoplexy.

HÉMOHÉPATORRHAGIE, Hepatorrhagia.

HÉMOMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMOYÉLORRHAGIE, (hemo, μυελος, 'marrow,' and βήρυθμι, 'to break forth,')
Apoplexy, spinal.

HÉMOPÉRICARDE, Hæmopericardium.

HÉMOPHILIE, Hæmatophilia.

HÉMOPHOBIE, Hæmatophobia.

HÉMOPHTHALMIE, Hæmophthalmia.

HÉMOPLANIE, Hæmatoplasia.

HÉMOPROCTIE, see Hæmorrhoids.

Passive*, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Pituitary membrane, Epistaxis — h. Pleural, Hæmatothorax — h. Post partum, see Post partum — h. Secondary, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Skin, Sudor cruentus — h. Spinal, Apoplexy, spinal — h. Spontaneous, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Supplementary, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Symptomatic, see Hæmorrhagia — h. of the Tissues, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Traumatic, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Uterine, Metroorrhagia.

HEMORRHAG'IC, Hæmorrhag'icus, (F.) Hæmorrhagique. Relating or appertaining to hemorrhage.

HEMORRHAGIC PLEURISY, Hæmatothorax.

HÉMORRHAGIE BUCCALE, Stomatorrhagia — h. Cérébrale, Apoplexy — h. du Cœur, Hæmocardiorrhagia — h. du Foie, Hepatorrhagia — h. Intestinelle, Apoplexy — h. Intestinelle du Poupon, Hæmoptysis — h. des Intestins, Hæmatocœchia — h. de la Matrice, Metroorrhagia — h. Méningée, Apoplexy meningeal — h. de la Moëlle épinière, Apoplexy myelitic — h. Nasale, Epistaxis — h. de la Vessie, Cystirrhagia.

HEMORRHAGI'AROUS, (F.) Hæmorrhagipare, (hæmorrhagia, and parire, 'to bring forth,') That which gives occasion to hemorrhage: thus, softening of the neurine may be hæmorrhagiparous.

HÉMORRHÉE, Hæmorrhœa.

HÉMORRHINIE, (hemo, and ῥιν, 'the nose,')
Epistaxis.

HÉMORRHÔDAIRE (F.). One who is subject to hemorrhoids.

HEMORRHOIDAL, Hæmorrhoidal.

HÉMORRHÔIDES, Hæmorrhoids — h. Areugles, Cœcæ hæmorrhoides. See Hæmorrhoids.

HEMORRHIDS, see Hæmorrhoids.

HÉMORRHOSCOPIE, (hemo, ῥέω, 'to flow,' and σκοπεω, 'to examine,') Hæmatoscopy.

HÉMOSPASIE, Hæmospasia.

HÉMOSPASIQUE, Hæmospastic.

HÉMOSTASIE, Hæmostasia.

HEMOSTATICS, Hæmostatica.

HEP, (Sax. heap.) see Rosa canina.

HE'PAR, gen. He'patis, (ἥπαρ, gen. ἥπαρος, 'liver,') A name for substances resembling liver in appearance. The ancient name for the liver of sulphur, Hepar sulphuris: which is sometimes a compound of sulphur and potassium; at others, of sulphur and potassa. See Potassæ sulphuretum.

HEPAR ADIPOSUM, Adiposis hepatica — h. Adulterinum, Spleen.

HEPAR ANTIMONIA'TUM is a compound of a sulphuret of antimony and an alkali. See Oxydum stibii sulphuratum.

HEPAR KALINUM, Potassii sulphuretum.

HEPAR MARTIA'LE, A compound of sulphuret of potassa and an oxide of iron.

HEPAR SANGUINIS, see Blood — h. Sinistrum, Spleen.

HEPAR SACCENTARIA'TUM. An additional liver or liver lobe; a case of malformation.

HEPAR SULPHURIS, Potassii sulphuretum — h. Sulphuris calcareum, Calceis sulphuretum — h. Sulphuris volatile, Ammoniac sulphuretum — h. Uterinum, Placenta — h. Variegatum, Liver nutmeg.

HEPATAL'GIA, Hepatodyn'ia, Neural'gia he'patis, Col'lica hepatic'a, (hepato, and algos, 'pain,') (F.) Hepatalgie. Pain in the liver. Neuralgie of the liver, (F.) Néuralgie du Foie.

HEPATALGIA CALCULOSA, Colica hepatica — h. Pettitiana, Turgescencia vesiculæ felleæ — h. Phlegmonoides, Hepatitis.

HEPATAPOSTE'MA, gen. Hepataposte'matis, (hepato, and αποστημα, 'an abscess,') Abscess of the liver.

HEPATATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia seu Aridu'ra he'patis, (hepato, and atrophia, 'atrophy,') Atrophy of the liver: — a general concomitant of Cirrho'sis he'patis.

HEPATAUX'Ë, Hypertroph'ia he'patis, (hepato, and αυξη, 'increase,') (F.) Hyperhépatotrophie, Hypertrophie du foie. Hypertrophy of the liver.

HEPATECHE'MA, gen. Hepateche'matis, Son'itus hepatic'us, (hepato, and ῥημα, 'sound,') Sound rendered by the liver on percussion.

HEPATEMPHRAXIS, (Hepato, and εμφρασις, 'I obstruct.') Emphrax'is hepatis. Hepatic obstruction.

HEPATEMCEPHALO'MA, gen. Hepatecephalo'matis, Hepatomyceloma, Fungus hepatis medullaris, (Hepato, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.') Enccephaloid of the liver.

HEPATERUS, (ἥπαρος.) Hepaticus, Jecorarius. A variety of diarrhæa, Fluxus hepaticus.

HEPATHĒMORRHAG'IA, Hemorrhag'ia hepatica, Hepatorrhag'ia, Apoplex'ia hepatica, (F.) Hémorrhagie du foie, Hémohépatorrhagie, (Hepato, and αιμορραγία, 'hemorrhage.') Hemorrhage from the liver.

HEPATIC, Hepaticus, Hepate'rus, Hepato'idēs, Hepato'des, Jecorarius, Jec'oral, (F.) Hépatique, Jécoraire, (from ἥπαρ, gen. ἥπαρος, 'liver.') Belonging or relating to or resembling liver.

HEPATIC ARTERY, Art'ria Hepatica. One of the three branches given off by the cœliac. It passes towards the inferior surface of the liver; where it divides into two branches, a right and a left, which proceed towards the corresponding parts of that organ. The right branch gives off the cystic artery. Before dividing, the hepatic artery sends off two considerable branches, the A. pylorica and Gastroepiploica dextra.

HEPATIC DUCT, Ductus hepaticus, (F.) Canal hépatique, is about three fingers' breadth in length, and of the size of a quill. It is formed by the union of the biliary ducts, and joins the cystic duct at a very acute angle, to form the ductus choledochus. Its function is to convey the bile from the liver towards the duodenum.

HEPATIC ISLETS, see Liver—h. Lobules, see Liver.

HEPATIC PLEX'US, Plex'us hepaticus, consists of nervous filaments, sent by the cœliac plexus to the liver, which accompany the hepatic artery.

HEPATIC VEINS, Suprahepatic Veins, Venæ cavae hepaticæ, (F.) Veines supra-hépatiques, Intra-lobular veins, do not follow the course of the arteries of the same name. They arise in the substance of the liver; converge towards the posterior margin of that viscus, and open into the vena cava inferior. They convey away the blood carried to the liver by the hepatic artery and vena porta.

HEPAT'ICA. Medicines believed to be capable of affecting the liver.

HEPATICA, (lobed like the liver.) H. triloba—h. Americana, H. triloba—h. Fontana, Marchantia polymorpha—h. Nobilis, H. triloba—h. Stellata, Asperula odorata.

HEPATICA TRI'LOBA, H. Americana, Anemone hepatica seu no'bilis, Her'ba trinitatis, Hepatica, Hepaticus flos, Trifolium hepaticum seu aurcum, Liverwort, Liverweed, Tref'oil, Noble Liverwort, Herb Trinity, (F.) Hépatique des jardins. The leaves—Hepatica—Ph. U. S.—are a gentle astringent, but not possessed of much virtue.

HEPATICULA. (dim. of ἥπαρ, gen. ἥπαρος, 'liver.') Hepatitis, chronic.

HEPATICUS, (ἥπατικός.) Hepatic, Hepaterus—h. Flos, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIFACTIO, (hepato, and facere, factum, 'to make.') Hepatization.

HEPATINE. Glycogenic matter.

HÉPATIQUE, Hepatic—h. Étoilée, Asperula odorata—h. des Fontaines, Marchantia polymorpha—h. des Jardins, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIRRHŒA, Flux'us hepaticus, Dysenter'ia hepatica, Diarrhœa hepatica, Hepatorrhœa, Hepatocholorrhœa, Hepato'dysenter'ia, Hepatorrhag'ia, (F.) Hépatirrhée, Flux hépatique, (hepato, and ῥεω, 'I flow.') A species of diarrhœa in which the excreted matters seem to come from the liver, or are much mixed with bile.

HEPATIC SUSPENSORIUM, Ligament, suspensory, of the liver.

HEPATISATIO, Hepatization—h. Pulmonum, Hepatization of the Lungs.

HÉPATISATION, Hepatization—h. Grise, see Hepatization—h. Rouge, see Hepatization.

HEPATITIS, Empres'ua hepatic'is, Causa seu Inflammatio hepatis, I. Jecin'oria, F'bris hepatica inflammatoria, Hepatal'gia phlogmonoi'des, Morb'us jecin'oria, Hepato'phlegmon, Inflammation of the liver, (F.) Hépatite, Inflammation du foie, Pièce (Provincial: hepato, and itis.) It may be seated either in the peritoneal covering, Sclerohepatitis, Hepatitis velamentosa seu externa, Periton'itis hepatica, Perihepatitis; or in the substance of the liver, Hepatitis parenchymatosa; or in both, Purohepatitis, and may be acute or chronic. The peculiar symptoms are:—pain in the right hypochondrium, shooting to the back and right shoulder, and increased on pressure; difficulty of lying on the left side; sometimes jaundice with cough, and synocha. Its termination is generally by resolution:—in tropical climates it often runs on to suppuration, Jecin'oria vomica, Hepatitis apostematosa, the abscess breaking either externally, or forming a communication with the intestines or chest, or breaking into the cavity of the abdomen. The causes are those of inflammation in general. Heat predisposes to it; hence its greater frequency in hot climates. On dissection of those who have died of it, the liver has been found hard and enlarged; colour of a deep purple; or the membranes have been more or less vascular; or adhesions, or tubercles, or hydatids, or abscesses, or biliary calculi may be met with. The treatment must be bold. Bleeding, general and local, fomentations, blisters, purgatives, and the antiphlogistic regimen. In hot climates especially, a new action must be excited by mercury as early as possible.

HEPATITIS APOSTEMATOSA, see Hepatitis.

HEPATITIS CHRONIC, Hepatic'is chronica, Inflammatio hepatis lenta, Hepatitis occulta, Hepatic'ula, Subinflammatio hepatis, (F.) Chronic'hépatite, Chronic liver disease, is not as common as is believed. It may be suspected from the existence of the symptoms above mentioned, when in a minor degree; enlargement, constant dull pain in the region of the liver; sallow countenance; highcolored urine; claycolored feces &c. The great object of treatment is to excite a new action by mercury and counter-irritants, and to keep the liver free by cathartics.

HEPATITIS CYSTICA, Cholecystitis—h. Externæ, see Hepatitis—h. Occulta, H. chronic—h. Parenchymatosa, see Hepatitis—h. Velamentosa, see Hepatitis.

HEPATIZA'TION, Hepatisatio, Hepatisatio, (ἥπαρ, ἥπαρος, 'liver.') Conversion into a liver-like substance. Applied to the lungs when gorged with effused matters, so that they are no longer pervious to the air—Hepaticatio pulmonum, Car'nificatio pulmonum. In such state, they are said to be hep'atized.

HEPATIZATION, GRAY. (F.) Hépatisation grise, Induration grise, Ramollissement gris, Infiltration purulente, characterizes the third stage of pneumonia or stage of purulent infiltration.

HEPATIZATION, RED. (F.) Hépatisation rouge, Endurcissement rouge, Ramollissement rouge, characterizes the first stage of consolidation of the lungs in pneumonia.

HEPATIZON, (ἥπαριζον, 'to resemble the liver,') Chloasma.

HEPATO, (from ἥπαρ, gen. ἥπαρος, 'liver,') in composition, liver.

HEPATOCA'CE, (hepato, and κακός, 'evil,') Gangrene of the liver.

HEPATOCELĒ, (hepato, and εἶλη, 'a tumour,')

Hep'ua hepatica; Hep'ua of the liv'er. (F.) Hecvie du foie. The liver has never been found entirely out of the abdominal cavity. Increase of its bulk, or injuries of the parietes of the abdomen, have been the sole cause of the protrusions which have been occasionally met with, especially in infants, in whom the upper part of the linea alba is very weak, and indeed scarcely seems to exist. Sauvages has distinguished two species of hepatocele:—the ventral (in the linea alba), and the umbilical or hepatomph'alum.

HEPATOCHOLORRHŒA, (hepato, χολη, 'bile,' and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATO'COLICUM. A ligament of the liver, described by Haller, as passing from the gall-bladder and contiguous sinus portarum, across the duodenum, to the colon. Another, termed Hepato-re'nal, descends from the root of the liver to the kidney. They are both peritoneal.

HEPATOCYS'TIC, Hepatocyst'icus, Cystidepat'icus, (F.) Hépatocystique, (hepato, and κυστις, 'bladder,') Relating to the liver and gall-bladder.

HEPATOCYSTIC DUCT, Ductus hepatocyst'icus. The choledoch duct.

HEPATODES, Hepatic.

HEPATODYME, Hepatod'ymus, (hepato, and ἄνυμος, 'a twin,') A monster united at the liver, and double above.

HEPATODYNIA, (hepato, and ὄννη, 'pain,') Hepatalgia.

HEPATODYSENTERIA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOGASTRIC, Gastrohepatic.

HEPATOGASTROCHOLOSIS, (hepato, γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and χολη, 'bile,') Fever, bilious, Fever, gastric.

HEPATOG'RAPHY, Hepatogra'phia, (hepato, and γραφη, 'a description,') The part of anatomy which describes the liver.

HEPATOHE'MIA, Hyperæ'mia hepatis, Hepatic Engorgement, (F.) Hypérémie du Foie, (hepato, and 'αἷμα, 'blood,') Sanguineous congestion of the liver.

HEPATOÏDES, ('παροιῶδες, from hepato, and εἶδος, 'form,') Hepatic.

HEPATOLITHIASIS, (hepato, and λίθιασις, 'formation of stone,') The formation of concretions. Hepatolithi, in the liver.

HEPATOLOG'Y, Hepatolog'ia, (hepato, and λογος, 'a discourse,' 'treatise,') A treatise on the liver.

HEPATOMALA'CIA, (hepato, and μαλακία, 'softness,') Malacœ'is hepatis, (F.) Ramollissement du Foie. Softening of the liver.

HEPATOMPHALUS, (hepato, and ομφαλος, 'navel,') Hernia of the liver at the umbilicus.

HEPATOMYELOMA, gen. Hepatomyelo'matis, (hepato, and μυελος, 'marrow,') Hepatencephaloma.

HEPATON'CUS, (hepato, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Tumefaction of the liver.

HEPATOPAREC'TAMA, gen. Hepatoparec'tim'atis, (hepato, and παρεκταμα, 'considerable extension,') Excessive enlargement of the liver.

HEPATOPATHI'Æ, (hepato, and παθος, 'affection,') Liver disease. Disease of the liver.

HÉPATOPATHIE CANCÉREUSE, Hepato-scirrhus—h. Tuberculeuse, Hépatotriummose.

HEPATOPHLEGMONE, (hepato, and φλεγμων, 'inflammation,') Hepatitis.

HEPATOPHITHI'SIS, Phthisis hepatica, (hepato, and φθω, 'I consume,') Consumption from suppuration of the liver.

HEPATORRHAGIA, (hepato, and ῥήγνμι, 'I break forth,') Hepatirrhœa, Hepathæmorrhagia.

HEPATORRHEX'IS, (hepato, and ῥήξις, 'rupture,') Rupture of the liver.

HEPATORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÉPOTOSARCOMIE, (hepato, and sarcoma,) Hepato-scirrhus.

HEPATOSCIR'RHUS, (hepato, and σκιρρος, 'cancerous induration,') Scirrhus hepatis, Eucéphalo'sis or Carcinoma of the liver, (F.) Hépatosarcomie, Hépatopathie cancéreuse, Cancer du Foie, Scirrhus or Cancer of the liver.

HEPATOSTRUMOSIS, Tubercula hepatis, (F.) Tubercules du Foie, Hépatopathie tuberculeuse; (hepato, and stroma, 'a tumour,' 'a scrofulous tumour,') Tubercle of the liver.

HEPATOT'OMY, (hepato, and τεμνω, 'I cut,') Dissection of the liver.

HEPIALOS, (ἥπιαλος,) Epialos.

HEPS, (pl. of hep,) see Rosa canina.

HEPSEMA, gen. Hepse'matis, (ἔψημα,) Decoction.

HEPSESIS, (ἔψισις,) Decoction.

HEPTAL'ION GRAVE'OLENS, Hogwort, Bears' fright. An indigenous plant, which has a fetid porcine smell; and is said to be used by the Indians as a diaphoretic, cathartic, &c.

HEPTAPHAR'MACUM, (ἑπτα, 'seven,' and φαρμακον, 'a remedy,') A medicine composed of seven substances; ceruse, litharge, pitch, wax, colophony, frankincense, and bullock's fat. It was regarded as laxative, suppurating and healing.

HEPTAPHYLLUM, (ἑπτα, 'seven,' and φυλλον, 'a leaf,') Tormentilla.

HEPTAPLEURON, (ἑπτα, 'seven,' and πλευρον, 'a rib,') Plantago major.

HERACLEUM, (dedicated to 'Ἡρακλῆς, 'Hercules,') see H. lanatum—h. Branca, H. spondylium.

HERACLE'UM SPONDYL'ICUM, H. Branca, Branca ursina seu Germanica, Spoudyl'ium, Spondyl'ium, Cow Parsnep, All'heal, Cnemumille, (Sc.) Bunelicand, (Prov.) Cushia, (F.) Berce, Braucur-sine bâtarde, Fausse Acanthe. Order, Umbellifereæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The root of this plant has a strong, rank smell; and a pungent, almost caustic, taste. It has been given as a tonic, stomachic and carminative; both in powder and in decoction. The Russians, Lithuanians, and Poles obtain from its seeds and leaves, by fermentation, a very intoxicating spirituous liquor, which they call Parst.

The root of Heracleum Lanatum, Masterwort, Cow parsnep,—Heracleum (Ph. U. S.)—is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

HERACLEUS MORBUS, (Ἡρακλειος, 'herculean,') Epilepsy.

HERB, Herba, Bot'anē. A nonligneous plant, which dies down to the ground at least, in winter.

HERB, BLESSED, Geum urbanum—h. Christopher, Actæa spicata.

HERB-DOCTOR, Botanical doctor or physic'ian, Root doctor. One who treats diseases altogether by herbs, as the—so called—'Thomsonians.'

HERB OF GRACE, Gratiola officinalis—h. Mastich, common, Thymus mastichina—h. Mastich, Syrian, Teucrium marum—h. Peter, Primula veris—h. Robert, Geranium Robertianum—h. of Saint Cunegonde, Eupatorium cannabinum—h. Sophia, Sisymbrium sophia—h. Trinity, Hepatica triloba.

HERBIER, Herbarium, Ingluvies.

HERBIV'OROUS, Herbiv'orus, (F.) Herbivore, (herba, and voro, 'I eat.') An epithet applied to animals which feed on herbs.

HERBORIST, Herba'rius, (from herba.) One who deals in useful plants. An Herb'alist or Herb'arist.

HERBORIZATION, Herba'rium inquisit'io. An excursion, made with the view of collecting plants. Such excursions are directed by the Apothecaries' Company of London, for the use of their apprentices, &c.

HERBS, FIVE CAP'ILLARY, Quin'que her'bæ capilla'res, were, anciently, hart's tongue; black, white, and golden maidenhair, and spleenwort.

HERBS, FIVE EMOL'LIENT, Quin'que her'bæ emol'lientes, were, anciently, beet, mallow, marshmallow, French mercury, and violet.

HERCULES ALLHEAL, Pastinaca oregonæ.
HERCULEUS MORBUS, (Ἡρακλειος νοσος,) Eri-lepsy.

HERÉDITAIRE, Hereditary.

HERED'ITARY, Hæredit'arius, Heredit'arius, Gentili'us, Syn'phytos, Syn'genes, (F.) Héréditaire, (hæres, gen. hære'dis, 'an heir.') An epithet given to diseases, communicated from progenitors. This communication is termed, by the French, Hérédité. Such diseases may exist at birth; or they may supervene at a more or less advanced period of existence. Hereditary diseases, Morbi heredit'arii, (F.) Maladies héréditaires, often prevail amongst several members of a family, or are family diseases or complaints.

HERÉDITE, see Hereditary.

HERMAPHRODE'ITY, Hermaphrodit'is'ia, Hermaphrodit'is'mus, Hermaphrodit'ismus, Fab'rica androg'yna, Androgyn'ia, Gynan'dria, Hermaph'rodism, Hermaph'roditism; (from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and Αφροδιτη, 'Venus.') Appertaining to Mercury and Venus. Union of the two sexes in the same individual.

HERMAPHRODISIA, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPH'RODITE, Hermaphrodit'us, Gyn'ida, Androg'ynus, (Sc.) Scarcht, (Prov.) Scrat. One who possesses the attributes of male and female: who unites in himself the two sexes. A term, applied to an animal or plant which is, at the same time, both male and female. True hermaphrodites are only met with in the lower degrees of the animal scale, amongst the zoophytes, mollusca, or gasteropoda. The individuals of the human species, regarded as hermaphrodites, owe this appearance to a vicious conformation of the genital organs; a kind of monstrosity, which renders them unfit for generation, although an attentive examination may exhibit the true sex. Hermaphrodites have, likewise, been described, which, instead of uniting the attributes of both sexes, cannot be considered male or female. These have been called neut'ral hermaph'rodites.

HERMAPHRODIT'IC, Hermaphrodit'icus, Androg'ynus, (F.) Hermaphrodit'ique. Relating or appertaining to an hermaphrodite.

HERMAPHRODITISMUS, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPHRODITUS, Hermaphrodite.

HERMET'ICA DOCTRINA, Hermética ars, (F.) Hermétique. The doctrine of Hermes, a celebrated Egyptian philosopher, who is considered the father of alchemy. That part of chymistry, whose object was the pretended transmutation of the metals.

HERMODAC'TYLUS, Dactyle'tus, An'ima articulo'rum, ('Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger;' or rather from Hermus, a river in Asia, upon whose banks it grows, and δακτυλος, 'a date;' or from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a date;') (F.) Hermodactyle, Hermodacte or Hermodate. The root of the Hermodac'tyl was formerly used as a cathartic. By some, it is supposed to be identical with the Iris tuberosa. The best testimony seems to be in favour of its being a variety of the colchicum, — Col'chicum Illy'ricum. Under the name Hermodactyls, roots or bulbs of an unknown plant, growing in the countries about the eastern extremity of the Mediterranean, are sold in the shops of Europe.

HERMODATE, Hermodactylus.

HERMOPH'ILUS, ('Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and φιλος, 'a lover.') One who is fond of mercury as a medicine.

HERN'IA, (from 'ερως, a sprout, 'a shoot,' [?], Ru'mex, Ruptu'ra, R. hernia'osa, Crepatu'ra, Ectop'ia hernia'osa, Ce'lè, Ruptu'ra Bursa, (F.) Hernie, Hargue, Descente, Effort, Greveure,

Rompeurc. Any tumour, formed by the displacement of a viscus or a portion of a viscus, which has escaped from its natural cavity by some aperture, and projects externally. Herniæ have been divided into,—1. Hernia of the Brain; Encephalocele; 2. Hernia of the Thorax; Pneumocele; 3. Hernia of the Abdomen.

Abdominal Herniæ are remarkable for their frequency, variety, and the danger attending them. They are produced by the protrusion of the viscera, contained in the abdomen, through the natural or accidental apertures in the parietes of that cavity. The organs, which form them most frequently, are the intestines and the epiploon. These herniæ have been divided, according to the apertures by which they escape, into:

1. Inguinal or Suprapubian Herniæ. These issue by the inguinal canal: they are called Bubonocele, when small; and Scrotal Hernia or Oscchocele, in man, when they descend into the scrotum:—Vulvar Hernia or Pudendal or Labial Hernia, Episiocele, in women, when they extend to the labia majora. 2. Crural or Femoral Hernia, Me'rocele, when they issue by the crural canal. 3. Infrapubian Hernia, (F.) Hernie sous-pubienne, Oideocèle, Opeocèle, Opodocèle, Hernia foraminis ovalis se obturatoria, when the viscera escape through the opening, which gives passage to the infra-pubic vessels. 4. Ischiatic or Sciatic Hernia; when it takes place through the sacro-sciatic notch. 5. Umbilical Hernia, Exomphalos, Omphalocèle; when it occurs at the umbilicus or near it. 6. Epigastric Hernia;—occurring through the linea alba, above the umbilicus. 7. Hypogastric or Infräumbilical Hernia, Cæliocèle, Hypogastrocèle,—when it occurs through the linea alba below the umbilicus. 8. Perineal Hernia, Mesococèle, Hernia perinæi, Perinocèle, Perinocèle,—when it takes place through the levator ani, and appears at the perineum. 9. Vaginal Hernia, Coleocèle seu Elytrocèle—through the parietes of the vagina. 10. Diaphragmatic Hernia, Diaphragmatocele; when it passes through the diaphragm.

Herniæ are likewise distinguished,—according to the viscera forming them,—into Enterocèle, Epiplocele, Enteroepiplocele, Gastrocèle, Cystocèle, Hepatocele, Splenocèle, &c.

When a hernia can be restored to its natural cavity, by the aid of pressure, &c., properly applied, it is said to be reducible. It is, on the contrary, irreducible, when adhesion, bulk, &c., oppose its return. When the aperture, which has given passage to the hernia, occasions more or less constriction of the protruded portion, the hernia is said to be incarcerated or strangulated; and, if the constriction be not removed, constipation, hiccough, vomiting, and all the signs of violent inflammation, followed by gangrene, supervene, with alteration of the features, small pulse, cold extremities, and death.

The therapeutical indications are,—1. As regards reducible hernia:—to replace the viscera in the abdomen by the taxis; and to retain them there by the use of a truss, which, if properly adapted, may effect a radical cure. 2. As regards irreducible hernia:—to support the tumour by an appropriate suspensory bandage. 3. As regards strangulated hernia:—to have recourse to the taxis; bloodletting; warm bath; tobacco glysters; ice to the tumour; and, if these should not succeed, to perform an operation, which consists in dividing the covering of the hernia, and cutting the aponeurotic ring, which causes the strangulation;—reducing the displaced viscera, unless their diseased condition should require them to be retained without;—dressing the wound appropriately:—restoring the course of the fæces by means of gentle glysters—preventing or combating inflammation of the abdominal viscera;—conducting the wound to cicatrization, by appropriate means; and afterwards supporting the cicatrix by a bandage.

The word hernia was also used, of old, for the serotum, and, not unfrequently, for the testicle.

HERNIA, CONGENITAL, Hernia congenita, is a protrusion of some of the contents of the abdomen into the Tunica vaginalis testis, owing to a want of adhesion between its sides, after the descent of the testicle.

HERNIA CORNEÆ, Ceratocele—h. Crural, Merocele—h. Epiploic, Epiplocele—h. Femoral, Merocele—h. Foraminis ovalis, see Hernia—h. Gutturis, Bronchocele—h. Hepatica, Hepatocele.

HERNIA HUMORALIS, Empresna Orchitis, Didymitis, Orchitis, Orchiditis, Testitis, Inflammatio testium, Inflammation of the Testicle, Swell'd Testicle, Hernia Ven'ris, Orchiocele, Orchidocele, Orchidon'ens, (F.) Inflammation du testicule, Orchite. Swelling and inflammation of the testicle is a common symptom of gonorrhœa, (F.) Chaudépissée tombée dans les Bourses; but it may arise from external injuries, or from other causes. It is a disease which cannot be mistaken, and the treatment must obviously be strongly antiphlogistic, supporting the testicle during the treatment, and for some time afterwards; methodical compression has also been found useful. The disease is not generally of a serious character, going off as suddenly as it comes on. As it affects the epididymis more especially, when supervening on gonorrhœa or blennorrhœa, it is sometimes termed blennorrhag'ic epididymitis.

HERNIA LITT'RICA, H. e Diverticulo Intestini. Hernia first described by Littre, in which the intestinal canal proper is not included in the hernial sac, the protruded portion of intestine consisting of a digital prolongation of the ileum, which Littre concluded was formed by the gradual extension of a knuckle of the bowel, that had been engaged in the inguinal canal.

HERNIA OF THE LIVER, Hepatocele—h. of the Lung, Pneumocele.

HERNIA, MESOCOLIC, Hernia Mesocolica. Hernia, caused by the bowels gliding between the layers of the mesocolon.

HERNIAIRE, Hernial, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIAL, Herniarins, Hernious, (F.) Herniaire. Belonging to, or concerning hernia:—as Hernial Bandage, Hernial Sac, &c.

(F.) Herniè, Herniated, is applied to a part enveloped in a hernial sac.

(F.) Hernieux, Hargneux, Cele'les, Ruptured, Burst, Bursten, means one affected with hernia; and Chirurgien herniaire, one who devotes himself to the treatment of hernia.

HERNIA'RIA GLA'BRA, H. vulgaria seu hirsuta seu alpestris seu an'nuua seu cin'e'ra seu frutic'osa, Milligra'na, Em'petrum, Rup'turewort, from hernia, which it was supposed to cure.)

(F.) Herniaire, Turquette, Herniole, Herbe Turque. Ord. Paronychiea. This plant, which as its name imports, was formerly considered efficacious in the cure of hernia, seems destitute of all virtues.

HERNIARIUS, Hernial.

HERNIATED, see Hernial.

HERNIE, Hernia — h. Charnue, Sarcocele — h. de l'Épiploon, Epiplocele — h. de l'Estomac, Gastrocele — h. du Foie, Hepatocele — *h. HERNIÉ, Hernial.

HERNIEMPHRAG'MUS, Herniemp'hrax'is, (hernia, and εμπραγμος, 'obstruction.') The mechanical obstruction of a hernial canal for the radical cure of the hernia.

HERNIEUX, see Hernial.

HERNIOLE, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIOTOMY, (hernia, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Celotomia.

HERNIOS, Hernial.

HERO'IC, Hero'icus, Hero'ius, Hero'us, (ήρωας, 'a hero.') An epithet applied to remedies or practice of a violent character.

HERPEDON, (ερπηδων,) Herpes.

HERPEN. (ερπην,) Herpes.

HERPES, gen. Herpe'tis, (ερπης, genitive, ερπητος,) Erpes, Herpe'don, Her'pen, Ser'pens, (ερπω, 'I creep,' because it creeps and spreads about the skin;) Ec'phlysis Her'pes, Cytis'ma Her'pes, Olophlyctis, Tetter, Fret. (F.) Herpes, Dartre. A vesicular disease, which, in most of its forms, passes through a regular course of increase, maturation, decline, and termination, in from 10 to 14 days. The vesicles arise in distinct, but irregular clusters, which commonly appear in quick succession, and near together, on an inflamed base; generally attended with heat, pain, and considerable constitutional disorder. The term, like most others which refer to cutaneous diseases, has not been accurately defined. The ancients had three varieties: the milliary, κνυχριας; vesicular, φλυκταινους, and eroding, εσθιομενος. Bateman has the following varieties:

1. HERPES PHLYCTENOIDES, Her'pes milia'ris, Ec'phlysis Her'pes Milia'ris, Nirles, (F.) Dartre phlyctenoïde, in which the vesicles are millet-sized; pellucid; clusters commencing on an uncertain part of the body, and being progressively strewed over the rest of the surface; succeeded by fresh crops.

2. HERPES ZOSTER, Zos'ter, Zo'na ig'nea seu serpigin'osa, Ig'nis Per'sicus, Cinzill'a, Cin'gulum, Sa'cer ig'nis, Ec'phlysis Her'pes zos'ter, Her'pes peris'celis, Erysip'elas zos'ter seu phlyctenoïdes seu pustulo'osa, Zo'na, Cir'cinius, Perizo'ma, (F.) Ceinture, C. dartreuse, Feu Persique, Erysipèle pustuleux, Shingles, (Prov.) Cruels, in which the vesicles are pearl-sized; the clusters spreading round the body like a girdle; at times confluent, and occasionally preceded by constitutional irritation.

3. HERPES CIRCINATUS, Formi'ca ambulato'ria, An'nullus re'pens, Her'pes Serpi'go, Serpi'go, Ec'phlysis Her'pes Circinatus, Ringworm, Vesic'ular Ringworm, (F.) Herpes circinatus, consisting of vesicles with a reddish base, uniting in rings; the area of the rings slightly discoloured, often followed by fresh crops. 4. HERPES LABIALIS, and 5. HERPES PRÆPUTIALIS, Aph'the præputii, Ulcus'cula præputii, appearing, respectively, on the lips and prepuce. 6. HERPES IRIS, Iris, Rainbow worm, occurring in small circular patches, each of which is composed of concentric rings of different colours. To these may be added, HERPES EX'EDENS, H. esthiom'enus seu depas'cens seu fe'rus seu estiom'enus seu fe'rox, Ec'phlysis Her'pes ex'edens, Dar'ta excoriati'ca seu malig'na, Lup'us non ex'edens, Vitil'igo (?), Leucè (?). Formi'ca corrosi'va, For'mix, Pop'ula fe'ra, Ulc'erat'io Ringworm, A'gria, (F.) Dartre rongeante, in which the vesicles are hard; clusters thronged: fluid dense, yellow or reddish, hot, acrid, corroding the subjacent skin, and spreading in serpentine trails.

All the varieties demand simply an antiphlogistic treatment, when attended with febrile irritation. The herpes circinatus, alone, requires the use of astringent applications which have the power of repressing the eruption.

HERPETIC, Herpe'ticus, Her'peticus, (ερπητικός,) (F.) Herpétique, Dartreux. Possessing the nature of herpes.

HERPETOGRAPHY, Herpetogra'phia, (herpes, and γραφη, 'a description,') A description of the different forms of herpes, as Herpetology, Herpetolog'ia, is a treatise on the same; and also on reptiles. (from ερπειον, 'a reptile,')

HERPETON, (ερπητον,) Herpe'ticon, (ερπειν, 'to creep,') A creeping eruption or ulcer.

HERPYLOS, (ερπελος,) Thymus serpyllum.

HERRENSCHWAND'S SPECIFIC, see Specific of Herrenschwand.

HERRIN (Prov.), Urine.

HERSKET, (Heartsæld,) Ardor ventriculi.

HESPERIS ALLIARIA, (εσπερα, 'evening,') Alliaria.

HETERADELPH'IA, Heterodidym'ia, Heterodym'ia, (hetero, and ἀδελφος, 'a brother,') A double monstrosity, in which the components of the double bodies are very unequal, and of which one portion may be regarded as the stem or trunk, to which another organized part, or even a whole body, less developed than itself, is affixed as a parasite.

HETERADEN'IC, Heteraden'icus, (F.) Hétéradénique, (hetero, and αἶνυς, 'a gland,') An accidental tissue is so termed, which has a glandular structure, but occurs in parts devoid of glands.

HETERO, (ετερος, 'other,') in composition, other.

HETEROCHRON'IA, Aberra'tio tem'poris, (hetero, and χρονος, 'time,') A deviation as to time in the formation or action of parts.

HETEROCHRON'ICUS, Heteroch'ronicus, (hetero, and χρονος, 'time,') Relating to difference of time.

Pulsus heterochron'icus. A pulse of varying rhythm. An irregular or intermittent pulse.

HETEROCHYMEUSIS, (hetero, and χυμος, 'mixture,') A state of the blood in which it contains other matters than in health, as uræa, bile, &c.

HETEROCLITE, (ἑτεροκλιτός, from hetero, and κλίω, 'I bend,') see Homology, and Tissuus.

HETEROCRANIA, (hetero, and cranium.) Hemierania.

HETEROCRIN'IA, (hetero, and κρῖνω, 'I separate,') Modification in the situation of secretions.

HETEROIDYMYIA, (hetero, and δίδυμος, 'a twin,') Heteradelphia.

HETERODYMYIA, Heteradelphia.

HETEROGENESIS, (hetero, and γενεσις, 'generation,') see Generation. Also, any anomaly in organic formation.

HETEROLA LIA, (hetero, and λαλέω, 'to speak,') Heterophonia.

HETEROLOGOUS TISSUES, (hetero, and λογος, 'a condition,') see Tissuus.

HETEROMET'RIA, (hetero, and μετρον, 'a measure,') A variation in the quantity of parts.

HETEROMORPH'ISM, Heteromorphis'mus, (hetero, and μορφή, 'shape,') A deviation from the natural shape of parts.

HETEROMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HETEROPAG'IA, (hetero, and παγω, 'I unite together,') A double monstrosity, in which the accessory subject, which is very small and imperfect, but provided with a distinct head, and at least rudimental lower limbs, has its body implanted in the anterior surface of the body of the principal subject.

HETEROPATHIC, (hetero, and πάθος, 'affection,') Allopathic.

HETEROPHO'NIA, hetero, and φωνή, 'voice,') A cracked or broken voice. A change of the voice or speech—Hetero'ph'ia.

HETEROPHTHAL'MIA, (hetero, and ὀφθαλμος, 'eye,') A difference in the two eyes, — as when one squints, or is of a different colour.

HETEROPLA'SIA, (F.) Hétéroplasië, (hetero, and πλασσω, 'to form,') Same etymon as the next. The formation of a heteroplasm.

HETEROPLASM, Heteroplasm'us. A morbid formation foreign to the economy, and which is composed of elements different from those that are found in it in the normal condition.

HETEROPLAS'TY, Heteroplas'ticë, Heteroplas'tia. Irregular plastic or formative actions or operations, that do not admit of exact classification.

HETEROPROSO'PUS, (hetero, and πρῶσπον, 'countenance,') A monster having two faces.

HET'EROPUS, (hetero, and πους, 'foot,') One who has one foot different from the other.

HETEROREXIA, (hetero, and ορέξις, 'appetite,') Malacia.

HETERORRHYTH'MUS, (hetero, and ῥυθμος, 'rhythm,') Having another rhythm. An epithet given to the pulse, when it is such, in any individual, as is usually felt at a different age.

HETEROSARCO'SES, (hetero, σαρξ, 'flesh, and οσις,) A class of diseases which consist in the formation of accidental tissues.

HETEROTAX'IA, (F.) Hétérotaxie, (hetero, and τάξις, 'order,') A malformation, which consists in the general transposition of organs. A change in the relation of organs.

HETEROTOP'IA, Aberra'tio lo'ci, (F.) Hétérotopie, (hetero, and τοπος, 'place,') A deviation from the natural position of parts. This has been called by M. Gueniot, objec'tive heterotopia in contradistinction to subject'ive heterotopia, which he applies to a sensation of displacement or approximation; such as is experienced in the stump of an amputated limb.

HÉ'TRE, Fagus sylvatica.

HEUCHERA, (after Heucher, a professor and botanist at Witttemberg,) see H. cortusa—h. Acerifolia. H. cortusa.

HEUCHERA CORTU'SA, H. America'na seu Ace'ro'ph'ia seu Vis'cida, Cortu'sa America'na, Al'um

Root, Amer'ican Sauc'le, Groundwuple, Cliffwe'ed, Splittrock, Heuchère d'Amérique. Ord. Saxifragaceæ. The root—Heuchera (Ph. U. S.)—is a powerful astringent, and is the basis of a cancer powder. The American Indians apply the powdered root to wounds, ulcers, and cancers. It is said to have been sold for colchicum.

HEUCHERA RICHARDSONII, which abounds on the rocks of Churchill River, is used medicinally by the Cree Indians, who chew its astringent root, and apply it as a vulnerary to wounds and sores.

HEUCHERA VISCIDA, H. cortusa.

HEUCHÈRE, Heuchera.

HEUCK-BANE, (Sc.) Ischion.

HEUDELLOTIA AFRICANA, (after Heudelot, a garden director on the Senegal,) see Edillium.

HEUKS (Prov.), (by onomatopœia.) Singultus.

HEVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.

HEXAGIUM, (ἑξάγων, from ἕξ, 'six,') Sextula.

HEXAGONE ARTÉRIELLE, (ἕξ, 'six, and γωνία, 'an angle,') See Circulus Willisii.

HEXATHYRIDIDIUM VENARUM, (ἕξ, 'six, and θύρα, 'a door, θύριδιον, 'a little door,') See Worms.

HEXIS, (ἕξις.) Habit, habit of body, constitution. Hence, hectic, cachectic, &c.

HEYLE (Sc.). ([Sax.] hæl.) Sanitas.

HHABB, see Bouton d'Alpe.

HIA TSAO TONG TCHONG, Sphæria Sinen'sis.

HIA'TUS, (hiare, hiatum, 'to gape, 'to open,') A foramen or aperture. Mouth. The vulva. Also, yawning.

HIATUS CANALIS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii.

HIATUS DIAPHRAG'MATIS AOR'TICUS, Semicirculus exculp'tus. The opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the abdominal aorta.

HIATUS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii—h. Occipito-pétreus, Lacerum posterius foramen—h. Sphéno-pétreus, Lacerum anterius foramen.

HIATUS OF WIN'SLOW, Fora'men Winslo'eii, Fora'men of Winslow. An opening—situate behind the lesser omentum, and behind the vessels and nerves of the liver—which forms a communication between the peritoneal cavity and that of the omenta.

HIBERNATION, Hiberna'tio, Wintersleep, (F.) Sommeil hiberna'l, (from hibernare, 'to winter,') The state of torpidity in which certain animals pass the winter:—the organic actions being reduced so low that animation seems to be suspended.

HIBERNICUS LA'PIS, Teg'ula seu Arde'sia ([F.] Ardoise, 'slate,') Hibernica, Harde'sia, Irish Slate. A kind of slate or very hard stone, found in different parts of Ireland, in masses of a bluish-black colour, which stains the hands. It has been taken, powdered, in spruce-beer, against inward contusions.

HIBISCUS, (ἱβίσκος.) Althæa.

HIBI'SCUS ABELMOS'CHUS, Abelmos'chus, A. moscha'tus. Ord. Malvaceæ. The name of the plant, whose seeds are called Gra'na Musch'i or Musk'-seed. It is the Belmus'chus, Abelmos'chus, Gra'nium Mos'chi, Ket'mia Ægypti'aca; Mosch'us Arabum, Ægyptia moscha'ta, Ba'mia moscha'ta, Al'cea, A. Ind'ica seu Ægypti'aca Villo'sa, Abelmosch, Abelmusk, Muskmallone, (F.) Graine de Musc, Herbe à la poudre de Chypre, Ambrette, Guinmaure veloutée. It is indigenous in Egypt and the Indies. The seeds are chiefly used as perfumes; and especially in the formation of Cyprus Powder.

HIBISCUS ESCULEN'TUS, O'kra, O'kro, Gom'bo. A plant, the green pods of which abound in mucilage, and are much used in the West Indies for soups. In Constantinople, and other portions of the East, the root is employed as a demulcent like Aithæa.

HIBISCUS POPULÆUS, Balimba'go. A small Molucca tree. The fruit is full of a juice similar to camboge. The root is emetic. It is used in chronic diarrhœa, colic, dyspepsia, &c.

HIBRIDA, Hybrid.

HICCOUGH, ([G.] Hick, and Hickop, by onomatopœia.) Singultus.

HICCUP, Singultus.

HICKET, Singultus.

HICK'ORY. The name of several American trees of the genus Carya; Order, Juglandaceæ. The leaves are usually aromatic; and are reputed to be antispasmodic [?]. The bark of those species that have bitter nuts, as Carya amara and C. porcinæ, is somewhat astringent. Some of them bear fruit that is much esteemed, as Carya oliviformis, 'Pecan' or 'Pecan' nut, and C. sulcata, and C. alba, 'Shellbark' or 'Shagbark'. The Hickory nut is called, also, Kiskitomas nut.

HICKOT, Singultus.

HICQUET, Singultus.

HID'DEN SEIZURES. An expression employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for obscure' encephalic and spinal attacks, of an epileptoid character for example, which may be immediately owing to trachelismus.

HIDEBOUND, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HIDRISCHESES, Hidroschesis.

HIDROA, (ἰδρωα, from hydros), Desudatio, Échauboultures, Hydroa, Sudamina.

HIDRON'OSUS, Hidronus, (hidro, and nosos, 'a disease.') A disease accompanied by violent sweats. Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRONUSUS, Hidronosus.

HIDROPEDESIS, (hidros, and πῆδω, 'to bound.') Ephidrosis.

HIDROPHOROS, (hidros, and φέρω, 'to carry.') Sudoriferous.

HIDROPOETICUM, (hidros, and ποιεω, 'to make.') Sudorific.

HIDROPYRÆ, (hidros, and πυρ, 'fever.') Sudor Anglicus.

HIDROPYRETUS, (hidros, and πυρετος, 'fever.') Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRORRHŒA, (hidros, and ῥέω, 'to flow.') Ephidrosis.

HIDROS, (ἰδωσις, gen. ἰδρωσις.) Sudor, 'sweat.'

HIDROS'CHESIS, Hidrischesis, Retentio sudoris, (hidros, and σχεσις, 'retention.') Suppression of perspiration.

HIDROSIS, (ἰδρωσις, from hidros.) Ephidrosis.

HIDROTERION, (from hidros.) Achiculum.

HIDROTERIUM, Sudorific.

HIDROTICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROTIQUE, Sudorific.

HIDRO'TIUM, (dim. of hidros.) A gentle sweat or perspiration.

HIDROTOPEUM, (hidros, and ποιεω, 'to make.') Sudorific.

HÏËBLE, (from ebulus, 'the elder.') Sambucus ebulus.

HIERA OF COLOCYNTH, H. Diacolocynthidos.

HÏËRA DIACOLOCYN'THIDOS, (ἱερα, 'holy.') Hiera of Colocynth. An electuary, composed of 10 parts of colocynth, as much agaric, germander, white horehound, stœchas: — 5 parts of opoponax, as much sagapenum, parsley, round birwort root, and white pepper: — 4 parts of spikenard, cinnamon, myrrh, and saffron: and 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and 5 drachms of honey.

HIERA LOGADII, Hiera pieræ — h. Nosos, (ερα nosos, 'holy disease,') Epilepsy.

HIERA PÏËCRA, (ερα nosos, 'holy,') and πικρος, 'bitter.') Holy bitter. Pulvis aloëticus, formerly called Hiera logadii when made into an electuary with honey. It is now kept in the form of dry powder; — prepared by mixing socotrine aloes, one pound, with 3 ounces of canella alba. See Pulvis aloës cum canella.

HIERA SYRINX, (ἱερα σφινγίξ, 'holy tube,') Vertebral column.

HIERACI'TES, (ἱερακιτης, from ἱεραξ, gen. ἱερακος, 'a hawk.') La'pis Accip'itrum. The ancient name of a precious stone, believed to be capable of arresting the hemorrhoidal flux.

HIERACIUM LACHENALII, (ἱερακιον, 'hawk-weed,' from ἱεραξ, gen. ἱερακος, 'a hawk.') H. murorum.

HIERACIUM MURO'RUM, H. Lachena'llii, Pulmonaria Gall'ica, Auric'ula mur'is major, (F.) Épervière des murailles, Pulmonaire des Français. Ord. Composite. A European plant, which is a slight tonic.

HIERACIUM OLERACEUM, Sonchus oleraceus.

HIERACIUM PILOSEL'LA. The systematic name of the Auric'ula Mur'is, Pilose'lla, P. Alpi'na, Myosotis, Mouse-ear, (F.) Piloselle, Oreille de Souris. This plant contains a bitter, lactescent juice, which has a slight degree of astringency. The roots are more powerful than the leaves.

HIERACIUM VENO'SUM, Rattlesnakeweed, Veiny Hawkweed, Bloodwort, indigenous, has similar properties.

HIERANOS'US, (ἱερα nosos, 'holy disease,') Chorea, Convulsion, Epilepsy.

HIERAX, (ἱεραξ, gen. ἱερακος, 'the sparrowhawk,') Accipiter.

HIEROBOTANE, (ἱεραβοτανη, from ἱερος, 'holy, and βοτανη, 'herb,') Verbena officinalis.

HIEROGLYPH'ICA, (ἱερογλυφικα, from ἱερος, 'holy,' and γλυφω, 'I carve,') A name given to the signs employed in medicine; and, also, to the folds in the hands, feet, and forehead, which afford chiromancy its pretended oracles.

HIEROPYR, (ἱερος, 'holy,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Erysipelas.

HÏKRY PIKRY, (Hiera picra), Pulvis aloes et Canellæ.

HÏLE DU FOIE, see Liver.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY, see Balsam of Honey, Hill's—h. Essence of Bardana, Tinctura guaiaci.

HILLBERRY, Gaultheria.

HILL FEVER, see Fever, hill.

HILON, (F.) Hilum, improperly Hil'us, 'the black spot on the top of a bean.' A name given by some writers to a small blackish tumour, formed by the protrusion of the iris through an opening in the transparent cornea, so called from its comparison with the hile or black mark presented by the vicia faba at one of its extremities. In Botany, the Hile or Hilum is the cicatrix of a seed, which indicates the place by which it was attached in the cavity of the pericarp. It is the umbilicus of the seed. The fissure of the spleen, kidney, lung, ovary, &c., is, also, called Hil'us. See Porta.

HILUM, Hilon.

HILUS, Hilon—h. Hepatis, see Liver.

HÏLUS LIEN'ALIS, Incisur'a lien'al'is. The concave part of the spleen.

HÏLUS REN'ALIS, Incisur'a ren'al'is, Hil'us of the kidney. The concave part of the kidney.

HILWORT, Mentha pulegium.

HIMANTOMA, see Himas.

HIMANTOSIS, Himas.

HIMAS, gen. Himant'os, (ἱμας, gen. ἱμαντ'ος, 'a thong of leather,') The uvula; likewise elongation, and extenuation of the uvula. It is also called Himant'osis, Himant'oma. See Staphylo'dema.

HIMEROS, (ἡμιρος, 'amorous desire,') Ubidu.

HINDBERRIES, see Rubus idæus

HINDHEEL, Tanacetum.

HIP, ([Sax.] hipe.) Haunch, Hypochondriasis—h. bone, Ilion—h. Disease, Coxarum morbus—h. Joint, Coxofemoral articulation—h. Tree, Rosa canina.

HIPP'PACĒ, (ἵππακη, from ἵππος, 'a horse.') Ca-sens Equi'nus. A cheese prepared from mare's milk.

HIPPANTHRO'PIA, (hippo, and ἀνθρωπος, 'a man.') A variety of melancholy, in which the patient believes himself changed to a horse. The Greek word ἵππαθρῶπος, means the fabulous Centaur.

HIPPASIA, (ἵππασία,) Equestration.

HIPPED, Hypochondriac.

HIPPEIA, (ἵππεα,) Equestration.

HIPPEUSIS, (ἵππευσις,) Equestration.

HIPPIA'TER, Hippiatrus, Medicus equarius, (hippo, and ἵατρος, 'a physician.') A farrier. A horse doctor. A horse leech. Used also for one who treats the diseases of other domestic animals; Veterinarus, Mulomedicus, Medicus Veterina-ris, Zoia'trus.

HIPPIATRI'A, Hippiatrica, Hippiatricē, Medic'na equaria, (F.) Hippiatrique. A science, whose object is the knowledge of the diseases of the horse. It is sometimes made to include other domestic animals. See Veterinary art.

HIPPIATRIQUE, Hippiatria.

HIPPIATRUS, Hippiater.

HIPPO, (ἵππος, 'a horse,') in composition, 'horse.' It often expresses 'greatness, excess,' like Bou, Bu, Horse, Ox, &c.

HIPPO, Ipecacuanha. A corruption, in Ire-land, of Ipecacuanha; and hence applied, at times, in the United States, to the American plant, Euphorbia Corollata, which is, also, called Ipecacuanha.

HIPPO, INDIAN, Gillenia trifoliata.

HIPPOCAMPE GRANDE, (ἵπποκαμπος, 'the sea horse,') Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAMPUS MAJOR, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAM'PUS MI'NOR, Pes hippocampi mi'nor, Un'guis, U. A'vis seu Halleri, O'crea, Collic'ulus ca'cæe posterioris ventriculo'rūm latera'lium, Cul'car a'vis, Un'coform Em'ine'nce, (F.) Ergot, Épe-ron. A medullary tubercle or projection, observed in the posterior cornu of the lateral ventricle of the brain.

HIPPOCENTAUREA CENTAURIUM, Chi-ronia centaureum.

HIPPOCRAS, (from being strained through Hippocrates' sleeve [?]), see Claret.

HIPPOCRATES, CAP OF, Bonnet d'Xippo-crate—h. Sleeve, Chanse.

HIPPOCRAT'IC, Hippocrat'icus, (F.) Hippo-crate'ique. Relating to Hippocrates, or concerning his doctrine,—as Hippocratic doctrine, Hippo-crate'ic face, &c.

HIPPOCRATISM, Hippocratism'us. The doc-trine of Hippocrates, which consisted in observing and following nature, as indicated by her pre-sumed efforts, and the crises set up by her.

HIPPOCRATIST. A partisan of the Hippo-crate'ic doctrine.

HIPPOGLOSSUM, Ruscus hypoglossum.

HIPPOGONYOLEPUS, (hippo, γων, 'the knee,' and λεπός, 'a scale,') Crusta genu equine.

HIPPOLAPATHUM, (ἵππολαπαθόν, from hippo, and ἵπαθον.) Rumex patientia.

HIPPOLITHUS, (hippo, and λίθος, 'a stone,') Bezoard of the horse.

HIPPOMANĒ MANCINEL'LA, (hippo, and μανία, 'madness,' 'horse, or violent madness,') Manchineel, (F.) Mancenillier. Family, Euphor-biaceæ. Sec. Syst. Monœcia Monadelphia. A c'cious tree of South America, with the milky 'uice of which the Indians poison their arrows. The fruit, also, is highly poisonous.

HIPPOMANES ('ἵππομανής). Applied to a mare in the state of heat or rutting. Also the secretion from the vagina of a mare in that condition. Used, of old, in the preparation of philters.

HIPPOMARATHRUM, (ἵππομαραθρον, from hippo, and marathrum.) Peucedanum silaus.

HIPPOPATHOL'OGY, Hippopatholog'ia, (hippo, παθος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') The science of the diseases of the horse. Pathology of the horse.

HIPPOPHAGOUS, (hippo, and φαγω, 'I eat,') Equivorous.

HIPPOPEUS, (hippo, and πους, 'a foot,') See Kyllosis.

HIPPOS, ('ἵππος,) Equus.

HIPPOSELINUM, ('ἵπποσελίον,) Smyrniun olusatrum.

HIPPOSTEOL'OGY, Hipposteolog'ia, (hippo, σστέον, 'a bone,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') Oste-ology of the horse.

HIPPOT'OMY, Hippotom'ia, (hippo, and τέμνω, 'to cut,') Anatomy of the horse.

HIPPU'RIA, (hippo, and ούρον, 'urine,' be-cause the urine contains hippuric acid, which is found in the urine of the horse.) A pathological condition in which there is an excess of hippuric acid in the urine.

HIPPURIC ACID, see Acid, hippuric.

HIPPURIS VULGARIS, (hippo, and ούρα, 'a tail,') The systematic name of the Horse's Tail, Mare's Tail, Equisetum minus, Equisetum, (F.) Prêle, Preele, Asprêlé, Queue de cheval. It is an astringent, and frequently used, as tea, by the vulgar, in diarrhoea and hemorrhage. The same virtues are attributed to the Equisetum arven'sē, E. fluviat'ilē, E. limo'sum, &c.

HIP'PUS, (ἵππος,) E'quis, Nictat'io. A disease of the eyes, in which from birth they perpetually twinkle, like those of a man on horseback. [?] Also, a tremulous condition of the iris, which oc-casions repeated alternations of contraction and dilatation of the pupil; Iridot'romus, Iridodone-sis, Iridopla'nia, Tremor I'ridis.

HIPS, (Sax. heopa.) The fruit of the dog-rose, Rosa canina: chiefly used as a confection. See Confectio Rosæ Canina.

HIRCIS'MUS, Hirc'us, Hir'quis, Gra'sus, (hircus, 'a goat,') Stinking like a goat; applied especially to the odour of the secretions of the axilla.

HIRCUS, ('a goat,') Canthus (greater), Hir-cismus, Tragus—h. Alarum, Cinabra.

HIRPLING (Prov. and Sc.), Claudication.

HIRQUITAL'ITAS, (from hircus, 'a goat,') Parapho'nia pu'berum. Goat's voice. See Ego-phony.

HIRQUUS, ('a goat,') Hircus, Canthus (great-er), Hircismus, Tragus.

HIRSUT'IES, (hirtus, 'hairy,') Das'yma, Das'ytes, Tricho'sis, Hirsut'ies, Hair'iness. Growth of hairs on extraneous parts, or superfluous growth on parts; as in cases of bearded women. When congenital, it is termed Hirsut'ies adna'ta.

HIRUDO, gen. Hiru'dinis. The Leech, Sangui'suga, Bdel'la, (F.) Sanguis. (haurio, 'I draw out,' or from hæreo, 'I stick,') [?] In medicine, Hirudo seu Sanguis'uga Medicinal'is, Bdel'la Medicinal'is or Medic'inal Leech, and Hirudo Sanguisuga officinal'is are generally employed.

In the United States, H. dec'ora is used. The leech lives in fresh water, and feeds on the blood of animals, which it sucks, after having pierced the skin with its three sharp teeth. This habit has been taken advantage of to produce local bloodletting. In applying the leech, the part must be wiped dry; and if there be difficulty in making it suck, a little milk or cream may be applied. When satiated, it will drop off, and by applying a little salt or vinegar to its head it will disgorge the blood. A good English leech will take about half an ounce of blood, including that which flows by fomenting the part subsequently.

The American takes less.

HIRUDO ARTIFICIALIS. Antlia sanguisuga—h. Decura, see Hirudo—h. Medicinalis, Hirudo.

HIRUNDINARIA, (from hirundo.) Asclepias vincetoxicum, Lysimachia nummularia.

HIRUNDO, gen. Hirun'dinae, Chel'idon, (from hærendo, 'by sticking,' because it sticks its nests against walls. [?]) The Scallion. The nests of the swallow were once employed as rubefacients, boiled in vinegar. The edible birds' nests of the Hirundo esculenta of the Indian Archipelago, are highly prized, especially by the Chinese, as an article of diet. They have not been accurately analysed, but seem to be of a mucilaginous character. They are formed by the bird vomiting the food which it has taken. See Alcyon.

HISPANICUM VIRIDE, ('Spanish green.') Cupri subacetata.

HISPIDITAS, (hispidus, 'hairy,') Dystœchia-sis, Phalangosis.

HISPIDULA, Antennaria dioicum.

HISSING RESPIRATION, see Râle sibilant.

HISTIOLOGICAL, Histiological.

HISTIOLOGY, ἱστολογία, dim. of ἵστος, 'a tissue,' and λόγος, 'a description,') Histology.

HISTOCHEMIA, see Chymistry.

HISTOCHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

HISTOCHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

HISTODIALYSIS, (histos, and ἀλυσις, 'dissolu-tion,') A morbid dissolution of the tissues.

HISTOGENETIC, Histogenet'icus, 'Tissue making.' (Same etymon as the next.) Relating or appertaining to histogeny or the formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOGENETIC ELEMENTS OF NUTRITION, see Plastic Element.

HISTOGENY, Histogen'ia, Histogen'esis, (F.) Histogénie, Tissue formation, (histos, and γενεσις, 'generation,') The formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOLOGIA, (histos, and λόγος, 'a descrip-tion,') Histology.

HISTOLOGICAL, Histolog'icus, Histolog'ical, Histolog'icus. Relating to histology. Applied, also, at times, to the natural transformations that occur in the tissues in the embryo, in contradistinction to morphological, which applies to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo.

HISTOLOGY, Histolog'ia, Histolog'ia, Histolog'ia, (histos, and λόγος, 'a description,') Anatomy (general). The term is also more particularly appropriated to the minute anatomy of the tissues. See Anatomy.

Pathological Histology, Microscopic patho-logical Anatomy, is the morbid anatomy of the tissues.

HISTOLYSIS, (histos, and λυσις, 'solution,') The decay and dissolution of the organic tissues and of the blood. It includes the various forms of retrograde metamorphosis and degeneration.

HISTONOMY, Histonom'ia, (histos, and νόμος, 'law,') The aggregate of laws which preside over the formation and arrangement of the organic tissues.

HISTORY, MEDICAL, Histo'ria Medicinæ. A narration of the chief circumstances, and the persons connected with them, in the progress of medicine.

HISTOS, (ἵστος, 'a web or tissue,') The organic texture. Textura seu Te'la organ'ica.

HISTOTOMY, Histotom'ia, (histos, and τομή, 'incision,') Dissection of the tissues.

HISTOTRITEUR, (histo, and tereō, 'to rub,') Écraseur.

HISTOTRITIE, see Écraseur.

HIVE SYRUP, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HIVES, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria Vari-cella, (from Sax. heapan, 'to raise,') [?] in Scotland, according to Dr. Jameson, Hives or Hives means any eruption of the skin, proceeding from an internal cause: and, in Lothian, it is used to denote both the red and the yellow gum. In the United States it is vaguely employed; most frequently, perhaps, for Urticaria.

HIVES, BOLD, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria—h. Eating, Rupia escharotica.

HOARHOUD, Marrubium.

HOARSENESS, (from Sax. hap, by onomatopœia.) Raucedo.

HOAST, (Sax. hþōrta, [G.] Huster.) Tussis.

HOBBIL, Idiot.

HOBNAIL LIVER, Cirrhosis of the liver.

Liver, nutmeg.

HOIST, ([Sc.] Sax. hþōrta, [G.] Husten.) Tussis.

HOLANENCEPHALIA, (ὅλος, 'the whole,' and anencephalia.) Entire absence of brain,—the same as Anencephalia.

HOLARTHTRITIS, (ὅλος, 'the whole,' and arthrit'is.) Hamarthrit'is.

HOLCÉ, (ὄλεον.) A drachm.

HOLCIMUS, (ὄλεμος, from ὄλεον, 'a weight,') A tumour of the liver.

HOLCUS SORGHUM, Panicum Italicum.

HOLENE (Sc.), (Sax. hōlen.) Ilex aquifolium.

HOLERA, Cholera.

HOLES, BURNT, Rupia escharotica.

HOLLANDS, Gin.

HOLLEN, ([Prov.] Sax. hōlen.) Ilex aquifolium.

HOLLY, AMERICAN, (Sax. hōlen.) Ilex opaca—h. Common, Ilex aquifolium—h. Dahoon, Ilex vomitoria—h. Ground, Pyrola maculata, Pyrola umbellata—h. Sea, Eryngium maritimum.

HOLLYHOCK, COMMON, Alcea rosea.

HOLMES WEED, Scrophularia nodosa.

HOLMISCUS, (ὄλμισκος.) Alveolus.

HOLMUS, (ὄλμος.) Mortar.

HOLO, (from ὅλος, 'whole,') in composition, the whole.

HOLOCYRON, Tenacium chamæpitys.

HOLOGANGLIITIS, (holo, gauglion, and itis.) Cholera.

HOLONARCO'SIS, (holo, and ναρκωσις, 'stupor,') Narcosis of the whole body. Torpēfac-tio uniuersa'lis.

HOLOPATHY, Holopath'ia, (F.) Holopathie, (ὅλος, 'whole,' and πάθος, 'affection,') A doctrine which teaches that diseases, as they present themselves, are but phases or 'episodes' of a general affection of the organism—such affection or diathesis producing the phases, when circumstances favor their manifestation.

HOLOPHYCTIDES, Phlyctæna.

HOLOSTEUM ALSINE, Alsine media.

HOLOSTEUS, (holo, and στέον, 'a bone,') Osteocolla.

HOLOTETANUS, (holo, and tetanus.) See Tetanus.

HOLOTONIA, (holo, and τενω, 'I stretch,') Holotonicus, Tetanus.

HOLOTONICUS, Holoton'ia. A spasm of the whole body—a variety of tetanus.

HOLYN (Sc.), (Sax. hōleyn.) Ilex aquifolium.

HOLYWELL, MINERAL WATERS (of Holywell is a town in Wales, and takes its name from the famous well of St. Winifred. It is a simple cold water, remarkable for its purity.

HOMAGRA, Omagra.

HOMŒOPATHY, Homœopathy.

HOMERDA, (homo, 'man,' and merda, 'excrement,') Stercus humanum.

HOMERIA COLLINA, (after Homer,) Cape Tulip. A poisonous South African plant, Nat. Ord. Iridææ, the bulb of which acts as a violent acro-narcotic, producing fatal results very speedily.

HOMESICKNESS, Nostalgia.

HOMICIDAL, Truculentus, F'rus, (homo, 'man,' and caedo, 'I kill.')

Pertaining or relating to homicide or the killing of man.

HOMICIDAL INSANITY, Homicidal Monomania, (F.) Monomanie homicide. Insanity, with an irresistible impulse to destroy life.

HOMINY, WHEATEN, see Groats.

HOMIOSIS, Homoiosis.

HOMME, Homo.

HOMO, gen. Hom'inis, (F.) Homme, Man,—the chief and most perfect of the mammalia; in Greek, ανθρωπος, Anthrōpos, from ana, 'upwards,' and πρῆξις, 'I turn,' because man, alone, of all animals, possesses the natural power of standing erect. He is also the only animal whose incisor teeth, wedged in a projecting jaw, are absolutely vertical. Man is especially distinguished from other mammalia by the faculty which he possesses of classing his ideas; comparing them with each other; and connecting, representing, and transmitting them by signs and articulate sounds. He possesses in the highest degree all the attributes of intelligence—memory, judgment, and imagination. He inhabits all countries—the burning regions of the torrid zone, and the chilling atmosphere of the polar climes. In different situations he presents in his figure, colour and stature, differences which have caused mankind to be divided by naturalists into races or varieties. The number of such races can only be approximated. Blumenbach admits five—the Caucasian, Ethiopian, Mongolian, Malay, and American. Every division must necessarily be arbitrary, and the individuals composing each variety are far from being alike.

HOMO ALATUS, ('winged man,') see Alatus.

HOMO CAUDA'TUS, 'tailed man.' A fabulous, tailed variety of the human species, 'incola orbis antarctici,' admitted by Linnaeus, although he is uncertain whether to rank them with men or apes!

HOMO FATUUS, Idiot.

HOMOËD'RUS, (οἶνον, 'together,' and εἶρα, 'scat.')

Having the same seat. Morbi homoëdri: diseases that have the same seat.

HOMŒO, (from ομοιος, 'like,') in composition, like.

HOMŒOMORPHOUS, (homæo, and μορφή, 'shape.')

See Homology.

HOMŒOPATH, Homœopathist.

HOMŒOPATH'IC, Homœopath'icus, Homœopath'ices, (F.) Homœopathique. Relating to homœopathy.

HOMŒOPATHIE, Homœopathy.

HOMŒOPATHIQUE, Homœopathic.

HOMŒOPATHIST, Homœopath, Homœopath'icus, Homœopathis'ta, Homœopathis'tes. One who believes in homœopathy.

HOMŒOP'ATHY, Homœopath'ia, Homœopath'icæ, Ars homœopath'ica, Homœop'athy, Hahnemannism, Dynamop'athy, (F.) Homœopathie, Homœothérapeutique, Homœosympathie, Doctrine homœo-organique, (homæo, and παθῆς, 'affection.')

A fanciful doctrine, which maintains that disordered actions in the human body are to be cured by inducing other disordered actions of a like kind [similia similibus], and this to be accomplished by infinitesimally small doses, often of apparently inert agents: the decillionth part of a grain of charcoal, for example, is an authorized dose. It has also been called Glob'ulism.

So long ago as in the writings of Gregory the Great, there is the following remark: "Mos medicinæ est ut aliquando similia similibus, aliquando contraria contrariis curet. Nam sæpe calida calidis, frigida frigidis, sæpe autem frigida calidis, calida frigidis sanare consuevit."

HOMŒOPLAS'IA, (from homæo, and πλασσω, 'I form.')

The formation of accidental tissues similar to the normal; the opposite to heteroplasia.

HOMŒOSIS, Homoiosis.

HOMŒOSYMPATHIE, Homœopathy.

HOMŒOTHÉRAPEUTIQUE, Homœopathy.

HOMŒOZ'YGY, (homæo, and ζυγω, 'I join together.')

(F.) Soi-pour-soi. The law of association of organs, by which like parts adhere to like parts.

HOMOETHNIA, (ομοεθνια) Sympathy.

HOMOGENESIS, (homo, and γενεσις, 'generation.')

See Generation.

HOMOIOPATHIA, (ομοιοπαθεια, from homæo, and παθῆς, 'affection.')

Sympathy.

HOMIOI'SIS, Homæo'sis, Homio'sis, (ομοιωσις, from ομοιωω, 'I assimilate.')

An elaboration of the nutritious juice, by which it becomes proper for assimilation.

HOMOLINON, (ομος, 'raw,' and λιον, 'flax.')

See Apolinosis.

HOMOLOG'ICAL, Homolog'icus; (same etym.)

Relating or appertaining to homology, as homological anatomy.

HOMOLOGOUS, (ομος, 'like,' and λογος, 'condition.')

See Homology.

HOM'OLOGUE, Homol'ogous. A term applied to the same organ in different animals under every variety of form and function. (Owen.)

HOMOL'OGY. The doctrine of similarity of structure. Thus, the two sides of the body are said to be 'homologous.'

Homol'ogous, homomorph'ous, or homœomorph'ous tissues are those that resemble others; in opposition to heterol'ogous, heteroclitite, or heteromorph'ous, which are new formations.

Homology seems now to be accepted as the designation of the doctrine or study, the subject of which is the relations of the parts of animal bodies.

HOMOMORPHOUS, (ομος, 'like,' and μορφή, 'shape.')

See Homology.

HOMONOPAGIA, Cephalalgia.

HOMOPHAGUS, Omophagus.

HOMOPLAS'TY, (ομος, 'like,' and πλασσω, 'I form.')

The formation of homologous tissues.

HOMOPLATA, (ομος, 'shoulder,' and πλατυς, 'broad.')

Scapula.

HOMOT'ONUS, (ομοτονος, from ομος, 'like,' and τονος, 'tone.')

Æqual'is. That which has the same tone. A continued fever, whose symptoms have an equal intensity during the whole course of the disease, has been so called. See Acmasticos and Synocha.

HOMOTYPE, (from homo, and τυπος, 'type.')

A repetition of the same essential part,—in the series of vertebral segments, for example. (Owen.)

HONE, (Prov. hone, 'to swell.')

A kind of swelling in the cheek.

HONESTY, Lunaria rediviva.

HONEWORT, FIELD, (used in the treatment of hone. [?])

Sison amomum.

HONEY?, (Sax. hunig,) Mel—h. Balsam of Hill's, see Mel—h. Bloom, Apocynum androsæmifolium—h. of Borate of Soda, Mel boracis—h. of Borax, Mel boracis—h. Clarified, Mel despumatum—h. Prepared, Mel præparatum—h. of Roses, Mel rosæ—h. of Squill, compound, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HOODWORT, Scutellaria lateriflora.

HOOK, (Sax. hoec, hoec), Uncus, Uncinus, Aucyra, (F.) Érigne, Airigne ou Érine. An instrument, consisting of a steel wire, flattened at the middle, and having the extremities crooked and pointed. Some hooks are furnished with a handle at one extremity—the other having one or two hooks;—constituting the single or double hook. The hook is used by anatomists and surgeons to lay hold of, and raise up, certain parts, the dissection of which is delicate, or which would slip from the fingers.

The Tenaculum is a variety of the hook.

HOOK, BLUNT, Ich'thya, Ich'thyē, O'nyx, Unguis ferr'us. An instrument which is passed over the flexures of the joints to assist in bringing down the foetus in parturition.

HOOP TREE, Melia azedarach.

HOOPER'S PILLS, Pilule Aloes et Myrrhæ.

HOOPINGCOUGH, (from the attendant hoop.) Pertussis—h. Roche's Embrocation for, see Roche.

HOP, (D.] hop.) Humulus lupulus—h. Pillow, see Humulus lupulus—h. Plant, Humulus lupulus—h. Tree, Ptelea trifoliata.

HOPLOCHRIS'MA, gen. Hoplochris'matis, (ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and χρῆσμα, 'salve,') Unguentum arma'rium, Arm'atory or Sympathet'ic Unguent. A salve which was supposed to cure wounds by sympathy,—the instrument with which the wound was inflicted being anointed with it.

HOPLOMOCH'LION, (ὅπλομοχλιον, from ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and μοχλος, 'a lever,') The name of an iron machine or apparatus, which embraced the whole body like armour. A figure of it is given by Fabricius ab Aquapendente.

HOQUET, (by onomatopœia, like Hiccup.) Singultus.

HORA, (ώρα), Hebe.

HORÆA, (ώραια), Menses.

HORÆOTES, (ὥραιότης), Maturity.

HORDEI MALTUM, 'malt of barley,' Malt.

HORDEOLUM, (dim. of hordeum), Ordeolum, Post'hia, Sclerophthal'mia, Cri'thē, Crithid'ion, Stye, Sty'an, Stine, (F.) Orgelet, Orgeolet. A small, inflammatory tumour, of the nature of a boil, which exhibits itself near the free edge of the eyelids, particularly near the inner angle of the eye.

HOR'DEUM, Or'deum, Cri'thē. The seeds of Hor'deum vulg'a'rē or Scotch Bar'ley, Ord. Gramineæ, are ranked amongst the Cerealia. (F.) Orge. They afford a mucilaginous decoction, which is employed as a diluent and antiphlogistic. The seeds of the Hor'deum dist'ichon seu æstivum, Zoe'riton dist'ichum, and H. hexast'ichon possess similar properties. Barley is freed from its shells in mills, forming the Hor'deum mundatum seu decoctatum seu excoctatum, Hor'deum of the Pharmacopœias; and, at times, is rubbed into small, round grains, somewhat like pearls, when it is called Hor'deum perlatum, Pearl Bar'ley, (F.) Orge perlé, and forms the Hor'deum denudatum seu perlatum, the Hor'dei sem'ina tu'nica nudata of some Pharmacopœias, — Hor'deum (Ph. U. S. and Ph. B.)

HORME, (ὄρμη), Instinct.

HORMINUM, (from ὄρμαιν, 'to incite,' as to venery), Salvia horminum—h. Coloratum, Salvia horminum—h. Sativum, Salvia horminum.

HORMON, (ὄρμων), Enormon.

HORN, (Sax. horn), Coru.

HORN POX, see Varicella.

HORNSEED, Ergot.

HORNY, Corneous.

HORN'Y EXCRESCENCES, Lepido'sis, Ichthy'asis cornig'era, Cor'nua cuta'nea, (F.) Corues de la Peau. Certain excrescences, which occasionally form on some part of the skin, and resemble, in shape, the horns of an animal.

HORN'Y SUBSTANCE, see Tooth.

HORRENTIA, (horrere, 'to shudder,') Horripilation.

HOR'RIDA CUT'IS, Cut'is seu Car'o aseri'na seu Gallino'cca, Dermatospasm'ia, Spasm'ia peripher'ica, Goose'skin, (F.) Chair de poule. A state of the skin produced by cold or fear, and accompanying the rigor of an intermittent. It is produced, essentially, by the action of microscopic muscular fibres—the arrectores pilorum.

HORRIPILATION, Horripilatio, Horror, Horren'tia, Phr'icē, Phric'simus, Phric'asis, Phr'icia, (horrere, 'to bristle,' and pilus, 'hair,') (F.) Horripilation, Frissonnement. General chilliness, preceding fever, and accompanied with bristling of the hairs over the body.

HORROR, (horrere, 'to shudder,') Horripilation—h. Ciborum. Disgust for food.

HORRORS, THE, see Delirium tremens.

HORSE RADISH, Cochlearia armoracia.

HORSESHOE HEAD. An old name for the condition of the skull in children, in which the sutures are too open,—the coronal suture presenting the form of a horseshoe.

HORSE'S TAIL, Hippuris vulgaris.

HORSE WEED, Ambrosia trifida, Collinsonia Canadensis, Erigeron Canadense.

HORTULUS CUPIDINIS, (dim. of hortus), Vulva.

HORTUS, ('a garden,') Vulva—h. Siccus, Herbarium.

HOSE (Prov.), (from [Sax.] haly), Collum, Throat.

HOSEFISH, Sepia.

HOSPITAL, (primarily from hospes, gen. hosp'itis, 'a guest,') Nosocom'ium, Adynatocom'ium, Adynatodoch'ium, Xenodoc'ium, Xenodoch'ium, Infirma'rium, Infirmato'rarium, Nosodoch'ium, Val'etudina'rium, Infirm'ary, (Old. Eng.) Farm'cry, Spit'al, (F.) Hôpital, Infirmerie, contracted in old [F.] to hostel, and hôtel. An establishment for the reception of the sick, in which they are maintained and treated medically. Hospitals were first instituted about the end of the 4th century a period at which the word ισοκομιειον was employed, for the first time, by St. Jerome. They may be general, receiving all cases; or special, admitting only the subjects of certain diseases. See Nosocomial.

HOSPITAL GANGRENE, Phagedæna gangræno'sa, Pu'trid or Malig'nant Ulcer, Gangræ'na Nosocomio'rums seu Nosocomia'lis seu Contagio'sa, Sphac'elus nosocomia'lis, Hos'pital Sore, Putre'do, (F.) Pou'rritue ou Gangrène d'hôpital. Gangrene, occurring in wounds or ulcers, in hospitals, the air of which has been vitiated by the accumulation of patients, or some other circumstance. Hospital Gangrene—many different varieties of which are met with, and always accompanied or preceded by fever—commonly commences with suppression of the suppuration of the wound, which becomes covered with a grayish and tenacious sanies. The gangrene then manifests itself. It extends from the centre of the ulcerated surface towards the edges; these become swollen, painful, and everted; and the patient dies with all the signs of typhus. The treatment must be varied according to circumstances. Sometimes, it requires the use of stimulating, acid, caustic, and antiseptic applications; with, occasionally, the actual cautery, aided by the exhibition of tonics, internally:—at others, the antiphlogistic regimen and emollient applications may be necessary.

HUMEURS FROIDES, 'cold humors,' Scrofula.

HUMIDE RADICALE, (humeo, 'to be moist,') Humidum radicale.

HUMIDUM NATIVUM, H. radicale—h. Nativum Articulorum, Synovia—h. Primigenium, H. radicale.

HUMIDUM RADICALĒ, Hu'midum primigen'ium seu nativum seu seminale, Rad'ical Moist'ure. (F.) Humide radicale. Names formerly given to the liquid which was conceived to give flexibility and proper consistence to the different organic textures.

HUMIDUM SEMINALE, H. radicale.

HUMILIS, 'humble,' (from humus, 'the ground,') Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMILUS, Humulus.

HUMLOIK (Sc.), Conium.

HUMMUS, see Achicolum.

HUMOR, Humour—h. Albigneus, Aqueous humour—h. Articularis, Synovia—h. Ceruminus, Cerumen—h. Doridis, Water, sea—h. Genitalis, Sperm—h. Glacialis, Crystalline, Corpus vitreum—*h. HUMORAL, Humoral'is. Proceeding from, or connected with, the humours.

HUMORES INQUILINI, 'alien humors,' Recremental Secretions.

HUMORIQUE, see Bruit humorique.

HUMORISM, Hu'moral Pathology, Pathology'ia humeral'is. A medical theory, founded exclusively on the parts which the humours were considered to play in the production of disease. Although traces of this system may be found in the most remote antiquity, the creation, or, at all events, the arrangement of it may be attributed to Galen, who enveloped it in metaphysical subtleties relating to the union between the elements and the four cardinal humours.

HUMORISTS. The Galenical and other physicians, who attributed all diseases to the depraved state of the humours, or to vicious juices collected in the body.

HUMOUR. Humor, (from humeo, 'to be moist,') Hygr'asia, Hygre'don, Hy'grum, (F.) Humeur. Every fluid substance of an organized body;—as the blood, chyle, lymph, &c. The Hu'mours, Chy'mi, Humo'res, differ considerably as to number and quality in the different species of organized beings; and even in the same species, according to the state of health or disease. The ancients reduced them to four; which they called cardinal humours:—the blood, phlegm, yellow bile, and atrabillis or black bile. It is not easy to give a satisfactory classification of the humours.

HUMP. (Perhaps from umbo, 'the boss of a buckler,') Hunch, Bunch, Boss, Gib'ber, Gib'bus, Gib'ba, Tu'ber, (F.) Bosse. A prominence, formed by a deviation of the bones of the trunk. Commonly, it is formed by the spine or sternum, and is seated at the posterior or anterior part of the trunk. It may, also, be produced by deviation of the ribs or pelvis. The spine may be curved in three principal directions. 1. Backwards, the most common case; this the ancients called κυρῶσις, Cyph'osis, Gibbos'itas, Rachio-cyph'osis. 2. Forwards, Lordo'osis, Recurva'tio; and 3. Laterally, Scolio'osis, Obtupa'tio. Most curvatures occur at a very early age, and are caused by scrofula, rickets, &c.; and, not unfrequently, they are accompanied by caries of the vertebrae. See Vertebral disease. One who is affected with a hump, or is hump'backed, Hunch'backed, Bunch'backed, Hump'ty, Huckshoul'd'ered, Shrumpshoul'd'ered, (Sc.) Hul'giebacked, Trudge'backed, (Prov.) Croop'backed, is called, by the French, bossu.

HUMPBACKED, see Hump.

HUMPTY, see Hump.

HUMULUS, (from humus, 'the ground,' on which it creeps,) Humulus lupulus.

HUMULUS LUPULUS, Lu'pulus, L. scan'dens seu commun'is seu salicetr'is, Hu'mulus, Hu'milus, Convul'sulus peren'nis, the Hopplant, Nat. Ord. Urticaceæ. (F.) Houblon, Vigne du nord. Its cones or strobiles, Hu'muli strob'ili, Hu'mulus (Ph. U. S.), have a fragrant odour; and a bitter, aromatic taste, depending on a peculiar principle, named Lu'pulin, extractive and essential oil, which may be extracted, equally, by water and spirit, from the dried strobiles. The hop is employed as a tonic and hypnotic, and enters into the composition of ale and beer.

The Hop pill'ion, Pulvi'nar Hu'muli, has long been used for producing sleep.

HUNCH. Hump—h. Backed, see Hump.

HUNGARICA FEBRIS, Fever, Hungary.

HUNGER, (Sax. hunger.) Fa'mes, Li'mua, Pei'nē, Pei'na, Eau'ris, Jeju'nium, Jeju'nitas, Eau'rit'io, Eau'ri'go, (F.) Faim. The necessity for taking food. Hunger is an internal sensation, which some authors have attributed to the friction between the sides of the stomach in its empty state; others, to the compression of the nerves, when the organ is contracted; others, to the action of the gastric juice, &c. It is dictated by the wants of the system;—rather we know not. See Appetite.

HUNGERCURE, Limotherapeia.

HUNGRY, Famel'icus, Li'micus. Limo'des; (Prov.) Havc, (vulg.) Peck'ish. Affected with hunger.

HUNTINGDON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Huntingdon Springs, called "Warm Springs," are seated five miles north of the town of Huntingdon, in Pennsylvania. They are resorted to, but have not been well examined.

HUNTSMAN'S CUP, Sarracenia purpurea.

HU'RA BRASILIENSIS, Assacon, Assacu, Usacu. A Brazilian tree, of the Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, which, in form of the extract of the bark, is esteemed a specific in leprosy. It is, also, given in elephantiasis, and as an anthelmintic.

HURDLES (Sc.), Nates.

HURTLBERRY, Vaccinium myrtillus.

HYA-HYA, Tabernæmontana utilis.

HYACINTH, WILD, (ὕακινθος.) Scilla esculenta.

HYACINTHUS MUSCARI, Bulbus vomitorius.

HYÆNAN'CHË GLOBO'SA, (ἡαῖνα, hyæna, and αγκυρ, 'to strangle,') An arborescent shrub of South Africa. Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, the fruit of which, pounded, is used to destroy hyænas and other beasts of prey, and seems to contain strychnia.

HYALEUS, (from hales, 'glass,') Hyaline.

HY'ALINE, Hyal'imus, Hyale'us, Vit'reus, Vit'reous, (F.) Vitreus, Vitré. Glassy. Resembling glass.

HYALINE SUBSTANCE, Cytoblastema.

HYALITIS, Inflammatiō tūnicæ hyaloides, Hyaloiditis, Vitrocapulitis. (F.) Hyalite (hyalo, and itis.) Inflammation of the hyaloid membrane of the eye.

HYALO, (from υαλος, 'glass,') in composition, vitreous.

HYALOID, Hyaloides, Hyaloides, (F.) Hyaloides, (hyalo, and oides, 'resemblance,') Vitreiform; resembling glass. Also relating or appertaining to the hyaloid body, membrane, &c. (F.) Hyaloidien.

HYALOID CANAL, see Hyaloid membrane.

HYALOID FOS'SA, Fos'su Hyaloidæ, is a cup-like excavation in the vitreous humour, in which the crystalline is imbedded.

HYALOID MEMBRANE, Hyalomēnion, Tunica Hyaloidæ seu Vitreæ, Membra'na Arachnoidea, is the extremely delicate membrane, which forms the exterior covering of the vitreous humour, and transmits within it prolongations, which divide it into cells. Fallopius discovered this membrane, and gave it the name Hyaloid. On a level with the entrance of the optic nerve into the eye, the hyaloid membrane has been described as forming, by reflection, a cylindrical canal, which pierces the vitreous humour from behind to before, as far as the posterior part of the crystalline. See Canal, hyaloid. At its anterior part is a depression—Fossa patella'ris seu lenticula'ris—for the reception of the crystalline lens.

HYALOIDIEN, see Hyaloid.

HYALOIDITIS, Hyalitis.

HY'ALOMENINX, (hyalo, and μνηξ, 'a membrane,') Hyaloid membrane.

HYALONIXIS, (hyalo, and ωσσω, 'to push,') see Cataract.

HYALONYXIS, see Cataract.

HYALOS, (υαλος.) Vitrum.

HYANCHE, (βαγχη, from βς, 'a swine,') and αγχω, 'I choke,') Cynanche tonsillarlis.

HYBOMA, gen. Hybomatls, (υβωμα, from υβωω, 'to make convex,') Gibbositas.

HYBRID, Hybrida, Hybrida, (F.) Hybride, (υβρις, gen. υβριδος, 'mongrel or mungrel,') (F.) Mētis, Mulet. A being born of two different species,—as the mule. The term is applied to plants as well as to animals. The result is termed Hybridity or Hybridism. Hybrid is often, also, used to designate words which are formed from two different languages—as uteritis, for inflammation of the uterus, in place of metritis.

HYBRIDISM, see Hybrid.

HYBRIDITY, see Hybrid.

HYDALEUS, (υδαλεος.) Hydropic.

HYDARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDARTHURUS, Hydrathrus.

HYDAS, (υδας.) Hydor.

HYDATID, Hydatls, Bulla, Aqu'ula, Hydro'a, Hydrocystis, Hygrocystis, Tæ'nia hydatig'ena, Echinococcus lumina'nis, (υδωρ, gen. υδατος, 'water,') This name was long given to every encysted tumour which contained an aqueous and transparent fluid. Many pathologists subsequently applied it to vesicles, softer than the tissue of membranes, more or less transparent, which are developed within organs, but without adhering to their tissues. It is by no means clear that these formations are really entozoa. They have been found in various parts of the body; sometimes in the uterus, occasioning signs nearly similar to those of pregnancy, but being sooner or later expelled. The expulsion is generally attended with more or less hemorrhage. See Acephalocyst.

Hydatls, Aqu'ula, Phlyctæ'nula, Verru'ca Palpebrarum, Mil'ium, also, meant a small, transparent tumour of the eyelids.

HYDATIDES (pl. of hydatls) CERVICIS UTERI, Nabothi glandulae.

HYDATIDIFORM, Hydatiform.

HYDATIDOCE'LE, Hydatocœle, (hydatid, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Oscocœle containing hydatids; see the Oscocœle'le hydatido'sa, Hydatidoscœocœ'le of Sauvages.

HYDATIDOÏDES, Hydatoid.

HYDATIDO'MA, (hydatid and oma.) A tumour caused by hydatids.

HYDATIDOSCŒOCELE, (hydatid, οσχοων, 'serotum,' and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hydatidocœle.

HYDATIFORM, Hydatiform'is, Hydatidiform, Hydatidiform'is, (hydatid, and forma, 'form,') Resembling an hydatid.

HYDATINUS, (υδωρ, gen. υδατος, 'water,') Hydatoid.

HYDATIS, gen. Hydat'idis, Hydatid—h. Fina, Cysticercus cellulosæ.

HYDATIS'MUS. The noise caused by the fluctuation of pus contained in an abscess.

HYDATO, (υδας, gen. υδατος, or υδωρ, gen. υδατος, 'water,') In composition, water.

HYDATOCELE, Hydatidocœle, Hydrocœle.

HYDATOCH'OLEOS, (hydatid, and χολη, 'bile,') Aquo'so-bil'ious. An epithet given to evacuated matters when mixed with water and bile.

HYDATODES, (υδατωδης, from hydatid, and odes,) Aqueous.

HY'DATOID, Hydatoid'is, A'queous, Aquo'sus, Hydatoid'is, Hydat'imus, Hydatoid'is, Hydatidoides, (hydatid, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Watery. Resembling water. This name has been given to the membrane of the aqueous humour; and, also, to the aqueous humour itself. Vinum hydatoid'is; wine and water.

HYDATONCUS, (hydatid, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDATOPO'SIA, (υδατοποσια, from hydatid, and ποσις, 'drinking,') Water-drinking;—hence

HYDATOP'OTES, (υδατοποτης.) A water-drinker.

HYDATOTHERAPEIA, (hydatid, and therapeia.) Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDRIASIS, (υδριασις.) Dropsy.

HYDERICUS, (from hyderus.) Hydropic.

HYDERODES, (υδρωδης, from hyderus and odes.) Hydropic.

HYDERONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDERUS, (υδερως.) Anasarca, Hydrops.

HYDRACHNIS, (hydro, and αχη, 'down,') or sordes,) used as Varicella.

HYDRADEN, (hydro, and αδην, 'a gland,') Conglobate gland.

HYDRADENITIS, Inflammatiō glandula'rum lymphaticæ'rum, (hydraden, and itis.) Inflammation of a lymphatic gland.

HYDRÆDUS, (hydro, and αιδωια, 'genital organs,') Œdema of the female organs.

HYDRÆMIA, (hydro, and αιμα, 'blood,') Hydroæmia.

HYDRAGOGA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGIA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGICA, Hydragogues.

HY'DRAGOGUES, Hydrago'ga, Hydrago'gia, Hydrago'gica, Hydrop'ica, Hydro'lica, Aquidu'ca, (hydro, and αγω, 'I expel,') Medicines, which, by causing watery evacuations, are believed to be capable of expelling serum effused into any part of the body. These are generally cathartics or diuretics.

HYDRAGOGUM BOYLEI, Argenti nitras.

HYDRALLANTE, False Waters.

HYDRAL'LAS, (hydro, and αλλας, 'a sausage,') see Allantois. A morbid increase in the quantity of the fluid of the allantois.

HYDRALMÆ, (hydro, and αλημ, 'saltness,') Waters, mineral (saline).

HYDRAM'NIOS, (hydro, and 'amnios,') An excessive quantity of the liquor amnii.

HYDRANGE'A or HYDRAN'GEA ARBORIS'CENS, (hydro, and αγγειον, 'a vessel,') H. vulg'aris, Sevenbark, Wild Hydran'gea, Bis'smum. Ord. Hydrangeæ. An indigenous plant, which flowers in July. The leaves are said to be tonic, sialogogue, cathartic, diuretic, and antilithic.

HYDRANGEITIS, (hydrangia, and itis.) Angiolenicitis.

HYDRANGIA, (hydro, and αγγιον, 'a vessel,') Lymphatic vessels.

HYDRANGIOGRAPHIA, (hydrangia, and γραφία, 'a description,') Angioidrography.

HYDRANGIOTOMIA, (hydrangia, and τομή, 'to cut,') Angioidrotomy.

HYDRARGYRANATRIP'SIS, Hydrargyren-trip'sis, (hydrargyrum, and αψίς, 'rubbing in,') The rubbing in of a preparation of quicksilver.—Hydrargyrotrip'sis.

HYDRARGYRENTRIPSIS, Hydrargyranat-ripsis.

HYDRARGYRI ACETAS, Hydrargyrus acetatus—h. Bichloridum, H. oxymurias—h. Bicyanidum, H. cyanuretum—h. Biniodidum, H. iodidum rubrum—h. Binoxydum, H. oxydum rubrum—h. Bisulphuretum, H. sulphuretum rubrum—h. Borussias, H. cyanuretum—h. Bromidum, see Bromine—h. Calx alba, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Chloridum, H. submurias—h. Chloridum corrosivum, H. Oxymurias—h. Chloridum mite, H. submurias.

HYDRARGYRI CYANURETUM, H. Cyan'idum seu Borussias seu Bicyan'idum, Hydrargyrum Cyanogenatum seu Hydrocyan'icium seu Borussicum seu Zoët'icium, Prussias Hydrargyri, Cyanuret' or Prussiate of Mercury, (F.) Cyanure de Mercury. (Made by boiling ferrocyanide of iron with red oxide of mercury, filtering, evaporating, and crystallizing.) A modification of this process is contained in the Ph. U. S. 1863. This preparation has been strongly recommended as a powerful antisyphilitic, and is admitted into the Parisian codex. Twelve to twenty-four grains may be dissolved in a quart of distilled water, and three or four spoonfuls of the solution be taken daily in a glass of any appropriate liquid.

HYDRARGYRI DEUTOIODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Deuto-ioduretum, see Iodine—h. Deutonitras, see H. nitras—h. Dipernitras, see H. nitras—h. Hyperoxides, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM, H. Iodidum vir'idè, (Ph. U. S. 1863, and Ph. B. 1864), H. Protoiod'idum seu Proto-ioduretum seu Subiod'idum, Hydrargyrum Ioda'tum sta'tum seu Iodidula'tum, Iod'idum seu Iodure'tum hydrargyros'um, Protoiodure'tum mercu'rii, Hydrargyrus ioda'tus seu ioda'tus flavus, Mercu'rius oxydula'tus hydr'id'icus, Podide, Proti'odide or Green Iodide of Mercury, (F.) Protoiodure ou Proti'odure de Mercure, (Hydrarg. 3j, Iodini ʒv, Alcohol q. s. Rub the mercury and iodine together, adding sufficient alcohol to form a soft paste, and continue the trituration till the globules disappear. Dry the iodide in the dark, with a gentle heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle, the light excluded.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one grain, gradually raised to three or four.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM CHLORIDI, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM RUBRUM, H. Biniod'idum seu Deuto-iod'idum seu Deuto-iodure'tum seu Period'idum, Hydrargyrum ioda'tum rubrum seu Bi'ioda'tum seu Perioda'tum, Iode'tum seu Iod'idum Hydrargy'icium, Deutoiodure'tum mercu'rii, Hydrargyrus perioda'tus seu bi'ioda'tus seu ioda'tus ruber, Red Podide, Bini'odide, Deuti'odide and Peri'odide of Mercury, (F.) Deuti'odure ou Bi'iodure ou Peri'odure de Mercure, (Hydrarg. corros. chlorid. ʒj, Potassii iodid. ʒx, Aquæ destillat. Oij. Dissolve the chloride in a pint and a half, and the iodide of potassium in half a pint of distilled water, and mix the solutions. Collect the precipitate on a filter, and, having washed it with distilled water, dry it with a moderate heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, onesixteenth to one-fourth of a grain.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM VIRIDE, H. Iodidum—h. Murias basi Oxydi imperfecti, H. oxymurias—h. Murias corrosivus, H. oxymurias—h. Murias dulcis sublimatus, H. submurias—h. Murias oxygenatus, H. Oxymurias—h. Murias spirituosus liquidus, Liquor hydrargyri oxymuriatis—h. Murias suboxygenatus præcipitatione paratus, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum.

HYDRARGYRI NITRAS, Nitras Hydrargyri in crystall'os concre'tus, Hydrargyrum nitricum, Mercu'rius nitro'sus fri'gore para'tus, Nitras hydrargy'ro'sus, Azo'tas hydrargy'ro'sus, Li'quor Hydrargyri supernitrat'is, Hydrargyri pernitrat'is Li'quor (Ph. D.), Solution of supernitrate of mercury, Solution of supernitrate of deutox'ide of mercury, (F.) Deutozotate acide liquide de mercure, Nitrate acide de mercure, made by dissolving four parts of mercury in eight of nitric acid, and evaporating the solution to nine parts, has been used as a caustic in malignant ulcerations and cancerous affections. Li'quor Hydrargyri Nitrat'is, Solution of Nitrate of Mercury, is in the Ph. U. S., 1863; and Hydrargyri Nitrat'is Li'quor ac'idus in the Ph. B. (1864.)

It is used in the formation of the Soluble Mercury of Hahnemann.

An ac'id nitrate of mercury, Hydrargyri deuto-nitras seu dipernitras seu supernitras, Mercu'rius nitro'sus cal'idè para'tus, Nitras hydrargy'icus, Azo'tas hydrargy'ro'sus liq'uidus, Li'quor Hydrargyri supernitrat'is, Hydrargyri pernitrat'is Li'quor (Ph. D.), Solution of supernitrate of mercury, Solution of supernitrate of deutox'ide of mercury, (F.) Deutozotate acide liquide de mercure, Nitrate acide de mercure, made by dissolving four parts of mercury in eight of nitric acid, and evaporating the solution to nine parts, has been used as a caustic in malignant ulcerations and cancerous affections. Li'quor Hydrargyri Nitrat'is, Solution of Nitrate of Mercury, is in the Ph. U. S., 1863; and Hydrargyri Nitrat'is Li'quor ac'idus in the Ph. B. (1864.)

Ward's White Drops,—a once celebrated antiscorbutic nostrum,—were prepared by dissolving mercury in nitric acid, and adding a solution of carbonate of ammonia; or, frequently, they consisted of a solution of sublimate with carbonate of ammonia.

HYDRARGYRI NITRICOÏXYDUM, Hydrargyri oxidum rubrum (Ph. U. S.), Hydrargyrum nitrat'us ruber, Mercu'rius corrosivus ruber seu præcipita'tus corrosivus seu præcipita'tus ruber seu corall'inus, Arcadum corall'num, Pul'vis prin'cipis, Præcipita'tus ruber, Oxydum hydrargyri completum seu hydrargy'icium, Panace'a mercu'rii rubra, Pul'vis Joân'nis de Vigo, Oxo'des hydrargyri rubrum, Hyerozo'des hydrargyri, Oxy'dum hydrargyri nitricum seu hydrargyri rubrum per ac'idum nitricum, Nitric ox'ide of mercury, Red præcipitate, (F.) Oxide nitrique de mercure, Précipité rouge ou per se, Mercure corallin, Nitrate de mercure rouge. (Hydrarg. ʒxxxv; Acid. nitric. fʒxviiij; Aquæ Oij. Dissolve the mercury with a gentle heat, in the acid and water previously mixed, and evaporate to dryness. Rub into powder, and heat in a very shallow vessel till red vapours cease to rise.—Ph. U. S.) It is a stimulant and escharotic, and used as such in foul ulcers, being sprinkled on the part in fine powder, or united with lard into an ointment.

HYDRARGYRI OXIDES RUBRUM, Hydrargyri nitricooxydum—h. Oxydi murias ammoniacalis, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Oxydulum nigrum, H. Oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM CINE'REUM, Æ'thiops persè, Mercu'rius nig'er Mosca'ti seu præcipita'tus nig'er, Oxydum hydrargyri nig'rum seu hydrargyros'um seu hydrargy'icium præcipitatum, Oxy'dulum hydrargyri nig'rum, Pul'vis mercuri'alis cine'reus, Mercu'rius cine'reus, Turpe'thum nig'rum, Gray or Black oxide of Mercury, (F.) Oxide de mercure cendré, Oxide gris ou noir de mercure, Protoxide de mercure. This oxide is made in various ways. It may be formed by boiling submuriate of mercury in lime water. The dose of this Pul'vis Hydrargyri cine'reus is from two to ten grains. There are four other preparations of it in estimation, viz.—Plenck's soluti'on, made by rubbing mercury with mucilage. 2. By rubbing equal parts of sugar and mercury together. 3. A compound of honey or liquorice and purified mercury. 4. The blue pill, and blue ointment. All these form the usual properties of mercury.

The Hydrargyri Oxidum Nigrum of the Ph. U. S. is made as follows:—Hydrarg. chlorid. nit., Potassa,  $\text{aa}$   $\text{ʒiv}$ , Aque Oj. Dissolve the potassa in the water, allow the dregs to subside, and pour off the clear solution. To this add the chloride, and stir constantly till the black oxide is formed. Pour off the supernatant liquor, wash the black oxide with distilled water, and dry with a gentle heat. Dose, one or two grains.

The Mercurius solubilis of Hahnemann is formed from a black oxide of mercury. It is the Mercurius solubilis Hahnemannii, Oxidum hydrargyri nigri mediantē ammoniā ex protonitrato trē hydrargyri precipitatum, Azotatē hydrargyroso-ammoniācis, (F.) Azotate de mercure et d'ammoniaque, Oxyde gris ou noir de Mercure, Précipité noir, Turbith noir, which has been esteemed, in Germany and France, as an antisyphilitic. Dose gr. 1-5th to gr. i. It is used in the same cases as the Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM NIGRUM, H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nigrum mediantē ammoniā et protonitrato hydrargyri precipitatum, see H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nitrūm, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM RUBRUM, H. Binoxydum, Mercurius calcinatus, Hydrargyrus calcinatus, (F.) Oxide de Mercure rouge. Red oxide of mercury. (Made by precipitation from a solution of bichloride of mercury by solution of potassa.) See Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

It is stimulant and escharotic; and in large doses, emetic. Owing to the violence of its operation, it is seldom given internally.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDEM RUBRUM PER ACIDUM NITRICUM, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—h. Oxydum saccharatum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Oxydum sulphuricum, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYMURIAS, H. Chloridum Corrosivum (Ph. U. S.) seu Bichloridum seu Permurias, Hydrargyris muriatas, Murias hydrargyri corrosivus seu oxygenatus seu hydrargyri haesi oxydi imperfecti seu hydrargyri corrosivum, Sublimatus corrosivus, Sublimatum corrosivum, Hydrargyrum corrosivum sublimatum, Mercurius corrosivus seu corrosivus sublimatus, Supermurias hydrargyri, (F.) Deutochlorure ou Bichlorure de mercure, Muriate oxygéné de mercure, Sublimé corrosif; Bichloride ou Oxymuriate ou Corrosive muriate of mercury, Corrosive sublimate. (Hydrarg. ʒij, Acid sulphur. ʒiij, Sodii chlorid. ʒiiss. Boil the mercury with the sulphuric acid until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the chloride of sodium, in an earthenware mortar; then sublime with a gradually increasing heat.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as an antisyphilitic eutrophic in venereal complaints, old cutaneous affections, &c. Gr. iij to Oj of water is a good gargle in venereal sore-throat, or as an injection in gonorrhoea. Externally, it is applied in cases of tetter, and to destroy fungus, or stimulate old ulcers. Dose, gr. 1-16 to gr. 1-8, in pill, once in twenty-four hours. White of egg is the best antidote to it, when taken in an overdose.

The YELLOW WASH, A'qua phagedenica, Lotio Hydrargyri flava, Phagedenic Wash, is made by adding corrosive sublimate to lime-water, usually in the proportion of fifteen grains to half a pint. It is a common application to syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI PERIODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Permurias, Hydrargyri oxymurias—h. Proto-iodidum, H. Iodidum—h. Proto-ioduretum, H. Iodidum—h. Prototartras, H. tartras—h. Prusias, H. cyanuretum—h. Saccharum vermifugum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Subchloridum, H. Submurias—h. Subiodidum, H. Iodidum.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS, H. Chloridum seu Subchloridum seu Chloridum nitre (Ph. U. S.), Calomelas, (Ph. B. 1864), Calomelanos Turqueti, Calomeli, Hydrargyrum muriatum nitre, Hydrargyris muriatas seu Chloratus nitris, Hydrargyri submurias, Dra'co mitigatus, Submurias hydrargyri nitris, Submurias Hydrargyri sublimatum, Mercurius dulcis seu dulcis sublimatus; when precipitated, M. dulcis precipitatum, M. sublimatus dulcis, M. Zoticus Hartmanni.—Panacea Mercurialis when nine times sublimed), Murias hydrargyri dulcis sublimatus, Aquila, Manua Metallo'rum, Panchymag'num minern'le, P. Quercetanus, mild chloride, protochloride, submuriate, subchloride, or mild muriate of Mercury, Calomel, (F.) Mercre doux, Protochlorure de mercure. Mild chloride of mercury is thus directed to be prepared in the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—(Mercury, ʒiij; Sulphuric Acid, ʒiij; Chloride of Sodium, ʒiiss; Distilled water, a sufficient quantity. Boil two pounds of the mercury with the sulphuric acid, until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the remainder of the mercury, in an earthenware mortar, until they are thoroughly mixed. Then add the chloride of sodium, and rub it with the other ingredients till all the globules disappear: afterwards sublime. Reduce the sublimed matter to a very fine powder, and wash it frequently with boiling distilled water, till the washings afford no precipitate upon the addition of liquid ammonia; then dry it.) Properties:—antisyphilitic and sialagogue: in large doses, purgative. Dose: one or two grains given at night gradually excite pytalism. Gr. v. to xx. purge. Children bear larger doses than adults.

The BLACK WASH, Lotio Hydrargyri nigra, is formed of calomel,  $\text{ʒij}$ ; Lime-water, Oj. Used for syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS AMMONIATUM, Hydrargyrum precipitatum—h. Subsulphas flavus, Hydrargyris vitriolatus—h. Subsulphas peroxidati, Hydrargyris vitriolatus—h. Sulphas, Hydrargyris vitriolatus.

(Hydrarg. ʒxl; Sulphur. ʒviij. Mix the mercury with the sulphur melted over the fire; and as soon as the mass begins to swell remove the vessel from the fire, and cover it with considerable force to prevent combustion. Rub the mass into powder and sublime. (Ph. U. S.)

It is an antisyphilitic, but chiefly used in fumigation against venereal ulcers of the nose, mouth, and throat:— $\text{ʒss}$  being thrown on a red-hot iron. This preparation is the basis of a nostrum, called Boerhaave's Red Pill.

HYDRARGYRI SPERMURIAS, H. oxymurias—h. Supernitras, see Hydrargyri nitras.

HYDRARGYRI TARTRAS, H. Prototartras, Tartrate of Mercury. Antisyphilitic. Dose, one or two grains twice a day.

HYDRARGYRI ET ARSENICI IODIDUM, Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of.

HYDRARGYRI ET QUINLE PROTOCHLORIDUM, Protochloride of Mercury and Quinia. A combination of mild chloride of mercury and quinia, administered in obstinate cutaneous diseases.

HYDRARGYRIA, Eczema mercuriale.

HYDRARGYRIASIS, Hydrargyros'is. Disease induced by the use of mercury; Morb'us Mercurialis, Mercurial disease, (F.) Maladie Mercurielle. Poisoning by mercury. Eczema mercuriale. Also, the phenomena produced by mercury on the organism. Mercurialism, Mercurialis'mus.

A fluid, brilliant metal; of a slightly bluish white colour; fluid above—39° of Fah. and under 656°. S. g., when liquid, 13.568 (Cavendish); easily oxydized. Metallic quicksilver does not act on the body, when taken into the stomach; but if oxydized, and combined with acids, it acts powerfully. It has been exhibited in cases of constriction of the bowels and in intussusception, from a notion that it must certainly pass through the bowels by its gravity. The water, in which mercury has been boiled, has been recommended as a vermifuge; but probably enjoys no such property, as chemical tests do not exhibit the presence of the metal. When the crude metal is distilled in an iron retort, it forms the Hydrargyrum purificatum.

Rub them together till the globules disappear. Ph. U. S.) A protoxide of mercury, formed by trituration with carbonate of lime. It is somewhat uncertain; and consequently not much employed as a mercurial. It possesses the properties of the black oxide of mercury, and may be advantageously exhibited in cases of diarrhœa in children, dependent upon acidity and vitiated secretions. Dose, gr. v to ʒss, twice a day, in any viscid substance.

HYDRARGYRUM CUM MAGNE'SIÂ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia resembles it in properties.

Dissolve the chloride in the water, with the aid of heat, and to the solution, when cold, add the solution of ammonia, frequently stirring. Wash the precipitate till it is tasteless, and dry it.—Ph. U. S.)

A peroxide, combined with muriatic acid and ammonia, forming a triple salt. It is used in powder, to destroy vermin; and, united with lard, for the same purpose, as well as in scabies and some other cutaneous affections.

HYDRARGYRUM SACCHARATUM, Ethiops saccharatus, Mercurius saccharatus, Oxidum hydrargyri saccharatum, Saccharum hydrargyri vermijugum. A mild mercurial formula in several of the Pharmacopœias of continental Europe; formed by trituring one part of mercury with two of ichite sugar. It is used in the venereal affections of children.

HYDRARGYRUM ZOOTICUM, Hydrargyri cyanuretum.

HYDRARGYRUS, Hydrargyrum.

HYDRARGYRUS ACETAT'US, Sperma mercurii, Terra foliata mercurii, Mercurius acetatus, Hydrargyri Acet'us, Acet'us seu Protoacet'us Hydrargyri, Ac'etate of mercury. This was the basis of Keyser's pills, and was once much celebrated in the cure of the venereal disease. The dose is from three to five grains, but it is not much used.

The formula for Keyser's antivenereal pills was as follows:—Hydrarg. Acet. ʒiv; Manna ʒxxx; Amyli ʒij; Muc. G. Trag. q. s. To be made into pills of gr. vj each. Dose, two pills.

Pour off the liquor, and wash the yellow precipitated powder repeatedly with hot water; then dry it.—Ph. U. S.) Two grains of this mercurial act on the stomach violently. It is sometimes recommended as an emetic in amaurosis.

HYDRARTHROS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTH'RUS, Hydar'thus, H. synoria'tis, Hydrar'thron, Hydar'thros, Spina vento'sa of Rhazes and Avicenna, Arthri'tis Hydrar'thros, Hydar'thro'sis, Hydrarthro'sis, Arthro'e'dema, Emphy'm articula'rē, Tu'mor al'bus, White Swell'ing, (hydro, and αρθρον, 'a joint'.) (F.) Tumeur blanche, T. lymphatique des articulations. Hydrarthrus is now generally restricted to dropsy of the articulations, Hydrops articulo'rum.

White swelling is a formidable strumous disease. It may attack any one of the joints; but is most commonly met with in the knee, the haunch, the foot, the elbow, and generally occurs in scrofulous children. It consists, at times, in tumefaction, and softening of the soft parts and ligaments, which surround the joints; at others, in swelling and caries of the articular extremities of bones; or both these states may exist at the same time. The treatment consists in the employment of counter-irritants; the use of iodine internally and externally, &c. Also, Synovia.

HYDRAS'PIS EXPAN'SA, (hydro and ασπις, 'a round shield.') Great fresh-water Tortoise. On the sandy banks of rivers in Peru this animal buries its eggs, from which the Indians extract oil. Its flesh supplies well-flavoured food.

HYDRETEROCE'LE, (hydro, εντερον, 'intestine,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.')

Intestinal hernia, the sac of which encloses fluid.

HYDRETEROMPHALOCE'LE, Hydrete'rom'phalus, (hydro, εντερον, 'intestine,' μφαλος, 'umbilicus,' and κηλη, 'rupture.')

Umbilical hernia with intestine and water in the sac.

HYDRETEROMPHALUS, Hydreterom'phaloc'ele.

HYDREPIGASTRIUM, see Ascites.

HYDREPIPOCE'LE, (hydro, επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'rupture.')

Omental hernia, with water in the sac.

HYDREPILOM'PHALUS, Hydrepi'loμφaloc'e'lē, (hydro, επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and μφαλος, 'umbilicus.')

Umbilical hernia, with omentum and water in the sac.

HYDRETRUM, (hydro, and πτερον, 'the lower belly,')

Ascites.

HYDRO, (from ὑδωρ, gen. ὑδατος, 'water,')

in composition, water.

HYDRO'A, Hidro'a, Aqu'ula, Bo'a, Plan'ta noct'is, (ὑδωρ, 'water.')

An affection, which consists in an accumulation of water or serous fluid under the epidermis.

Some have used hydroa synonymously with sudamina; others with pemphigus. In the first case, it has generally, however, been written hidro'a, from ἵδρω, 'sweat,' and in the latter hidro'a. See Hydatid.

HYDROËMIA, Hydræ'mia, Hæmy'dria; (F.) Hydrémie, (hydro, and αἷμα, 'blood.')

Anæmia. The state of the blood in which the watery constituents are in excess.

HYDROA'ËRIC, Hydroaë'ricus, (F.) Hydroaë'rique, (hydro, and αἶρ, 'air.')

An epithet for the sound rendered on percussing or ausculting cavities in which there are water and air.

HYDROAËROPLEURIE, (hydro, αἶρ, 'air,' and πλευρα, 'side,')

Hydropneumothorax.

HYDROËRION, Hydroërh'oron, Hydroërh'oria, Hydroë'rion, Hydroë'arium, Ouri'drops, Hy'drops ova'rrii, Asci'tes ova'rrii, A. succat'us, (F.)

A term generally applied to a collection of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum or in some of the coverings, either of the testicle or spermatic cord. To the first of these varieties the names — External Hydrocele, H. œdematoides, (F.) H. par infiltration have been given: and to the second, those of Hydroc'e'lē inter'na, H. tu'nicæ vaginal'is tes'tis, Hydr'el'ytron, (F.) H. par épanchement. When the collection occurs in the envelope of the testicle, it is called H. of the tu'nicæ vaginal'is; and the epithet congen'ital is added, when the interior of the membrane, in which it is situate, still communicates freely with the cavity of the abdomen. When it exists in the spermatic chord, it is called encyst'ed, or diffused Hy'drocele of the spermatic cord, as the case may be. The tumour of the distended scrotum is oblong; greater below than above; indolent and semi-transparent. When it becomes inconveniently large, the fluid may be evacuated by puncturing with a trocar, but, as it collects again, this operation can only be considered palliative. The radical cure consists, usually, in injecting some irritating liquid through the canula of the trocar, which has been left in after puncturing. This is kept in the tunica vaginalis for a few minutes, and then withdrawn. The coat inflames; adhesion takes place, and the cavity is obliterated.

HYDROCELE OF THE NECK. A tumour, filled with a watery fluid, occupying some portion of the neck.

HYDROCELE PERITONÆI, Ascites—h. Spinalis, Hydrothorachis.

HYDROCE'LIC, Hydroce'licus, (δρόκηλικός.) Relating or appertaining to hydrocele.

HYDROCENO'SIS, (hydro, and κενωσις, 'evacuation.') The evacuation of water morbidly accumulated in the body.

HYDROCÉPHALE AIGUE, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALITIS, (hydrocephalus, and itis.) Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCEPHALOCELE, (hydrocephalus, and κηλη, 'a rupture or protrusion,') Hydrocephalocele.

HYDROCÉPHALOËCTASIE, (hydrocephalus, and εκτασις, 'extension,') Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDROCEPH'ALUS, (δρόκεφαλος,) Hydroceph'alum, Hydrocra'nia, Hydrocra'nium, Hydroceph'alium. Hydroceph'alê, Hy'drops Cap'itis seu Cer'ebrî, (hydro, and κεφαλη, 'the head.') Water of the head, Drop'sy of the head, Drop'sy of the brain. A collection of water within the head. It may be internal or external.

HYDROCEPHALUS ACUTUS, H. internus—h. Acutus senum, Apoplexy, serous—h. Adnatus, see H. chronicus.

HYDROCEPHALUS CHRON'ICUS, Hydrecephalocel'ê, Hy'drops Cap'itis, seu arachnoïdeæ, Hydrocephalus exter'nus, (F.) Hydrocéphale, Hydrocéphaloëctasie of some, may exist at birth. Hydreceph'alon, Hydroceph'alus congen'itus seu adnatus commonly commences at an early period of existence, and the accumulation of fluid gradually produces distension of the brain, and of the skull, with separation of the sutures. It commonly proves fatal before puberty.

HYDROCEPHALUS CONGENITUS, see H. chronicus.

HYDROCEPHALUS EXTERNUS, Œde'ma cap'itis, Cephalœde'ma of some, is a mere infiltration into the subcutaneous cellular tissue of the cranium. See Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDROCEPHALUS INTER'US, Hydroceph'alus acutus seu meningeus, Hy'drops cer'ebrî, Encephal'algia hydrop'ica, Encephali'tis exudato'ria, Encephali'tis seu Meningi'tis Infan'tum seu Hydroceph'al'ica, Mor'bus cerebra'lis Why'tii, Euterocephalot'ypa Infan'tum, Hydrophlogo'sis Ventrículo'rurum cer'ebrî, Encephaloch'y'sis, Pheui'cula hydroceph'al'ica, Hydreceph'alus, Hydrecephali'tis, Hydreceph'alium, Hydrocephali'tis, Hydromeningi'tis, Fe'bris seu Apoplex'ia hydroceph'al'ica, Car'us hydroceph'alus, Water Brain Fe'ver, Why't's Disease', (F.) Hydrocéphale aiguë, Fièvre cérébrale des Enfans, is generally seated, according to modern observers, in the meninges and surface of the encephalon, and is a tuber'cular meningi'tis, Meningi'tis seu Menin'gia tuberculosa, Encephalostroma'sis, Gran'ular or Scroph'ulous meningi'tis, (F.) Méningite tuberculeuse ou granuleuse, Pæden'céphalie of Piorry. It is observed particularly in childhood. Its march is extremely acute and often very rapid; admitting, generally, however, of division into three stages. The symptoms of the first stage are those of general febrile irritation, with headache, intolerance of light and sound, delirium, &c. Those of the second, which generally denote that the inflammation has ended in effusion, are, great slowness of pulse, crying out as if in distress, moaning, dilated pupil, squinting, &c.; and lastly, in the third stage—profound stupor, paralysis, convulsions, involuntary evacuations, quick pulse, and frequently death. The disease is of uncertain duration; sometimes, destroying in two or three days; at others, extending to two or three weeks. The prognosis is unfavourable. The treatment must be active during the stage of excitement,—precisely that which is necessary in phrenitis. In the second stage, the indication is;—to promote the absorption of the effused fluid. This must be done by counter-irritants, and mercury, chiefly. On dissection, water is generally found in the ventricles, or at the base of the brain; or there are evidences of previous vascular excitement, as effusions of coagulable lymph, &c.

When the effusion occurs suddenly, either primarily, or secondarily in the course of some other disease, it has been termed, by the Germans, Wasserschlag, Water Stroke.

HYDROCH'YSES, (G.) Hydrochysen, (hydro, and χυσις, 'effusion.') A family of diseases, according to the classification of Fuchs, in which there is a sudden effusion of serous fluid, as in serous apoplexy, hydrocephalus, &c.

HYDROCIRSOCE'LE, Hygrocirsoce'le, Hygroce'le, (hydro, κίρσος, 'varix,' and κηλη, 'tumour.') A tumour, formed by the varicose distension of the veins of the spermatic cord, and by the accumulation of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum.

HYDROCELLIA, (hydro, and κυλια, 'the abdomen.') Ascites.

HYDROCONIUM, (hydro, and κονιος, 'dusty.') Bath, shower.

HYDROCOT'YLE ASIAT'ICA, (hydro, and κωτυλη, 'a cup,' from growing in moist places, and the leaves being like cups.) Codagam, Pes equin'us, Asiatic Pen'nywort. Order, Umbelliferae. A plant of India, Cape of Good Hope, and Jamaica, where it is supposed to be possessed of astringent and diuretic properties. The leaves are applied to bruised parts to prevent inflammation. The Hydrocotyle has been extolled, in India, as a remedy for lepra.

HYDROCOT'YLÊ CENTE'LLA. A South African plant, the roots and stalks of which are astringent; and used in diarrhœa and dysentery.

siqne. This acid exists in a great variety of native combinations in the vegetable kingdom, and imparts to them certain properties, which have been long known and esteemed; as in the bitter almond, cherry laurel, leaves of the peach tree, kernels of fruit, pips of apples, &c. When concentrated, it is liquid, colourless, of a strong smell and taste, at first cool, afterwards burning. Its s. g. at 7° Centigrade, is 0.7058. It is very volatile, and enters into ebullition at 80° Fah. It speedily undergoes decomposition, sometimes in less than an hour, and consists of a peculiar gaseous and highly-inflammable compound of carbon and nitrogen, to which the name Cyanogen has been assigned; and of hydrogen, which acts as the acidifying principle: hence its name Hydrocyanic acid. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1851 and 1863,) two formulæ for the preparation of the Ac'idum hydrocyanicum dilutum—Ac'idum hydrocyanicum, Ph. U. S. of 1842—are given; the one from the Ferrocyanide of Potassium; the other from the Cyanide of Silver. Both of these as well as the Ac'idum hydrocyanicum dilutum of the British Pharmacopœia (1863), contain 2 per cent. of the anhydrous acid. According to Magendie, the acid, prepared after Scheele's method—the one in common use—is of irregular medicinal power: he, therefore, recommends Gay Lussac's acid, diluted with six times its volume, or 8.5 times its weight of distilled water, for medicinal purposes, and this he calls Medic'inal Prussic Acid. Dr. Ure has proposed, that the specific gravity should indicate that which is proper for medicinal exhibition; and, after experiments of the specific gravity of the acids obtained by different processes, he states, that the acid, usually prescribed, is of s. g. 0.996 or 0.997. Great caution is, however, necessary. One drop of pure prussic acid may instantly destroy, and the animal show hardly any traces of irritability, a few moments after death. It has been advised in laryngeal phthisis, in pulmonary phthisis, pulmonary inflammation and irritation, dyspepsia, uterine affections, hectic cough, cancer, chronic rheumatism, and mania, and as a local remedy in impetiginous affections; but, although possessed of powerful sedative properties, it is so unmanageable and the preparation so uncertain, that it is not much used. The Dose of Scheele's Acid, or of the Medicinal Prussic Acid, is from a quarter of a drop to two drops.

HYDROCYS'TIS, (hydro, and κυστις, 'a bladder.') A cyst containing a watery or serous fluid. A hydratid. Also, saccated ascites.

HYDRODERMA, gen. Hydroderm'atis, (hydro, and δερμα, 'skin.') Anasarca.

HYDRODES, (ὕδρωσις.) Aquous.

HYDRODIARRHŒA, Diarrhœa, serous.

HYDRŒDEMA, gen. Hydrœd'ematiss, Œdema.

HYDRŒNCÉPHALORRHŒE, (hydro, 'encephalon,' and ῥέω, 'to flow.') Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRŒNTEROËPIPOCLE'LE, (Hydro'epi-ploënteroce'lê; (hydro, εντερον, 'intestine,' and επιπλοον, 'omentum.') Enteroepipocle, the sac of which contains a serous fluid.

HYDRŒNTEROËPIPLOMPH'ALUM, (hydro, εντερον, 'an intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the caul,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.') Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains intestine, epiploon, and serum.

HYDRŒNTEROMP'HIALUM, Hydrenterom'phalum; (hydro, εντερον, 'an intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.') Hernia umbilicalis, the sac of which contains intestine and serum.

HYDRŒPIPOCLE'LE, (hydro, επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.') Hernia, formed by omentum, the sac of which contains serum.

HYDRŒPIPOËNTEROCELE, Hydroentero-epipocle.

HYDRŒPIPLOMPH'ALUM, (hydro, επιπλοον,

'omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.') Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains epiploon and serum.

HYDRŒG'ALA, gen. Hydrogalact'is, (hydro, and γαλα, 'milk.') A mixture of water and milk.

HYDRŒGASTER, (ὕδρογαστηρ, from hydro, and γαστηρ, 'the stomach, the belly.') Ascites.

HY'DROGEN, Hydrogen'ium, Inflam'mable air, Phlogis'ton, Princip'ium hydrogenc'ium seu hydro'genium, Mephi'tis inflammab'ilis, (F.) Hydrogène, Phlogogène, Air inflammable, Gaz des ballons, (hydro, and γεννω, 'I produce.') This gas, when breathed, proves fatal from containing no oxygen. When diluted with two-thirds of atmospheric air, it occasions some diminution of muscular power and sensibility, and a reduction of the force of the circulation. It has been respired in catarrh, hæmoptysis, and phthisis.

HYDROGEN, BINOX'IDE or PEROX'IDE OF, Ox'ygenated water, is a combination of water with a mixing weight of oxygen. It is liquid, and very prone to decomposition. It is a powerful oxidizing agent, and has been given as an excitant, in asphyxia, cholera and narcotic poisoning; and in cachectic affections,—cancer, diabetes, &c.

HYDROGEN, CARBURET'ED, Inflam'mable air, Firedamp, of miners, (F.) Hydrogène carboné ou proto-carboné, Grisou—obtained by passing the vapour of water over charcoal, at the temperature of ignition, in an iron tube—has been found possessed of properties like hydrogen, and has been used, diluted, in like cases. After an explosion of fire damp in mines, there remains the after damp, choke damp, or black damp, consisting of carbonic acid and nitrogen, which occasions a greater loss of life, perhaps, than the explosion.

HYDROGEN, PEROXIDE OF, Hydrogen, binoxide of.

HYDROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Water.

HYDROGEN, SULPH'URET'ED, Hydrosulph'uric, Sulphhy'dric, Sulphohy'dric or Hydrothion'ic ac'id, Hydrothi'on, Gaz hepatic'um seu hydrogen'ium sulphura'tum, Mephi'tis hepatic'a, (F.) Hydrogène sulfuré, Acide hydrosulfurique, Air puant ou hépatique, may be disengaged from any of the sulphurets by the addition of a strong acid. It is a violent poison, but has been recommended to be inhaled, diluted, to allay the increased irritability which occasionally exists after diseases of the lungs. See Hydrosulphuretted Water.

HYDROGENATION, See Hydrogénéses.

HYDROGÈNE, Hydrogen—h. Carboné ou protocarbone, Hydrogen, carburetted—h. Sulfuré, Hydrogen, sulphuretted.

HYDROGÈNÈSES. Baumes gives this name to diseases which he fancifully considers to depend upon disturbed hydrogenation. In it he includes intermittent and remittent fevers.

HYDROGENOSULPHURETUM AMMONIACÆ LIQUIDUM, Ammonie sulphuretum.

HYDROGLOSSA, (hydro, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.') Ranula.

HYDROGRAPHY, (hydro, and γραφω, 'to describe.') See Hydrology.

HYDROHÉMIE, (hydro, and αἷμα, 'blood.') Anæmia, Hydroemætia.

HYDROHYMENT'IS, Orrhohymenti'tis, Orrhymeni'tis, (hydro, 'υμην', 'a membrane,' and itis.) Inflammation of a serous membrane.

HYDROHYSTERA, (hydro, and 'υστερα', 'uterus.') Hydrometra.

HYDROLÆUM, Hydrelæon.

HYDROLAPATHUM, (hydro, and λαπαθον, 'the dock.') Rumex hydrolapathum.

HYDROLATA, ('ὕδωρ', 'water.') Aquæ destillatæ.

HYDROLATS, Aquæ destillatæ, Water, distilled.

HYDROLÉ, Decoction, Fomentation, Lotion, Mucilage, Potion, Tisane. See Hydrolicæ.

HYDROLICA, (F.) Hydrolicæ, ('ύδωρ, 'water.') Watery solutions of the active principles of medicinal agents. Those prepared by solution or admixture are termed, by some of the modern French pharmaciens, Hydrolés; those by distillation, Hydrolats.

HYDROLIQUES, Hydrolicæ.

HYDROLITE, Decoction, Mucilage, Potion.

HYDROLOGY, Hydrolog'ia, (hydro, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

A treatise on water. By the term Medical Hydrology is meant that part of physics, whose object is the study of water, considered as it respects medicine; and, consequently, embracing that of mineral waters. Medical Hydrography comprises the study of the influence exerted by the sea or by navigation on the health of man.

HYDROLOTIF, (hydro, and lavare, lotum, 'to wash.')

Fomentation, Lotion.

HYDROMANIA, (hydro, and μανια, 'mania.')

A name given by Strambi to pellagra, in which the patient has a strong propensity to drown himself.

HYDROMEDIASTINUM, Hy'drops mediastini. Effusion of serous fluid into the mediastinum.

HYDROMEL, Hydrom'eli, (ύδρομηλι, from hydro, and μηλι, 'honey.')

A'qua mul'sa, Meliti'tis, Mul'sum, Mellic'ratum, Mellic'ratum, Braggart, Me'do. A liquid medicine, prepared with an ounce and a half of honey and a pint of tepid water. It is used as a demulcent and laxative, and is generally known under the names Simple hydromel, Vinous hydromel, Mead, Hydrom'eli vino'sum, C'nomel, is a drink made by fermenting honey and water, and is much used in some countries. As a common drink, mead is often made of honey and some alcoholic liquor well beaten together. See Mahogany.

HYDROMELLÉ. A preparation formed like the syrups, using hydromel in place of sugar.

HYDROMENINGITIS, Aquomembranitis, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROMETER, (hydro, and μετρον, 'a measure.')

Areometer.

HYDROMETRA, Hydrom'etria, Hydrohyster'a, Hydrometrecta'ria, Hysteri'tes, Hysterede'ma, Hy'drops u'teri, (hydro, and μητρα, 'the womb.')

Dropsy of the womb. A disease characterized by circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrium, —with obscure fluctuation, progressively enlarging, without ischury or pregnancy. If it ever occur, it must be a rare disease.

HYDROMETRECTASIA, (hydro, μητρα, 'uterus,' and εκτασις, 'extension.')

Hydrometra.

HYDROMPHALUM, Hy'drops umbilical'is, Exom'phalus aquo'sus, Her'nia umbil'ci aquo'sa, (hydro, and μφαλος, 'the navel.')

A tumour, formed by the accumulation of serum in the sac of umbilical hernia; or simply by distension of the navel in cases of ascites.

HYDROMYRIN'GA, Hydromy'rinx, Hydrops tym'pani, (hydro, and myringa or myrinx, 'the membrana tympani.')

Dropsy of the drum of the ear; giving rise to difficulty of hearing.—Dysece'a hydroy'rica.

HYDROMYRINX, Hydromyringa.

HYDRONCUS, (hydro, and γκος, 'a tumour.')

Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDRONEPHROSIS, (F.) Hydrone'phrose, Hydrone'rale distension, (hydro, νεφρος, 'kidney,' and οσις.)

An accumulation in the kidney, owing to the obstruction of the tubes of the papillæ.

HYDRONOSUS, (hydro, and νοσος, 'a disease.')

Hydros.

HYDRONUSUS, Hydros.

HYDROOARIUM, Hydrooarion.

HYDROPHORON, (hydro, φορος, 'egg bearing.')

Hydrooarion.

HYDROOARIUM, Hydrooarion.

HYDROPATHIC, Hydropath'icus, Hydriat'ricus, (hydro, and παθος, 'affection.')

Relating to hydrophathy or the water-cure,—as a hydropathic physician, Hydriu'ter, Hydriu'trus, Hydrop'athist.

HYDROPATHIST, see Hydropathic.

HYDROPATHY, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDROPEDESIS, (F.) Hydrope'dése, (from hydro, and πεδω, 'I spring out.')

Ephidro'sis. Excessive sweating.

HYDROPEGE, (hydro, and πηγη, 'a spring.')

Water, spring.

HYDROPELTIS PURPUREA, (hydro, and πελτη, 'a buckler,' a waterplant with leaves like buckler,)

Brasenia hydropeltis.

HYDROPERICARDE, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDIA, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDITIS, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDIUM, Hydropericar'dia, Hydropericard'i'tis, (hydro, and pericardium.)

Hy'drops Pericar'dii, Hydrocar'dia, Dropsy of the pericar'dium, (F.) Hydropericarde, Hydroperisie du Péricarde. This is not a common disease. Palpitations; irregular or intermitting pulse; excessive dyspnoea, amounting often to orthopnoea, and dulness over a large space on percussion, will cause the pericardium to be suspected. The treatment is that of dropsies in general. It is, usually, however, of the active kind.

HYDROPERIONE, (hydro, περι, 'around,' and ων, 'an egg, or ovum.')

The seroalbuminous substance, secreted by the lining of the uterus prior to the arrival of the impregnated ovum in that cavity.

HYDROPERITONEUM, Ascites.

HYDROPERITONIE, Ascites.

HYDROPHAL'LUS, (hydro, and φαλλος, 'the male organ.')

Œdema of the male organ

HYDROPHIMOSIS, Phimosi's œdemat'is.

HYDROPHLEGMASIA TEXTU'LARIS, Phlegmasia alba.

HYDROPHLOGOSIS VENTRICULORUM CEREBRI, (hydro, and φλογωσις, 'inflammation.')

Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROPHOBIA, ('ύδροφοβια, from hydro, and φοβος, 'dread.')

Paraphob'ia, Parorhob'ia, Phobobodip'son, Pheu'gydron, Phengorhob'ia, Cynolys'sa, Cynolys'sum, Mor'bus Hydrophob'icus seu hydroph'obus, Lycan'chè, Lycan'chis, Aërophob'ia, Phreni'tis l'u'trans, Lyt'ta, Lys'sa, L. cani'na, Pantophob'ia, Ra'bies cani'na, Erethi'smus hydrophobia, Clo'nos hydrophobia, Hygrophobia, A'que me'tus, Canine' mad'ness, Wa'terfright, (F.) Rage; Mal de Saint Hubert.

The term Ra'bies is more appropriate for the aggregate of symptoms resulting from the bite of rabid animals. Hydrophobia literally signifies a 'dread of water;' and consequently, ought to be applied to one of the symptoms of rabies, rather than to the disease itself. It is a symptom which appears occasionally in other nervous affections. Rabies is susceptible of spontaneous development in the dog, wolf, cat, and fox, which can thence transmit it to other quadrupeds or to man; but it has not been proved that it can supervene,—without their having been previously bitten,—in animals of other species; or that the latter can, when bitten, communicate it to others. Many facts induce the belief, that the saliva and bronchial mucus are the sole vehicles of the rabid virus; the effects of which upon the economy sometimes appear almost immediately after the bite, and are, at others, apparently dormant for a considerable period. The chief symptoms are— a sense of dryness and constriction of the throat; excessive thirst; difficult deglutition; aversion for, and horror at, the sight of liquids as well as of brilliant objects; red, animated countenance; great nervous irritability; frothy saliva; grinding of the teeth, &c. Death most commonly happens before the fifth day. Hydrophobia has hitherto resisted all therapeutical means. Those which ally irritation are obviously most called for. In the way of prevention, the bitten part should always be excised, where practicable; and cauterized.

In some cases, symptoms like those which follow the bite of a rabid animal are said to have come on spontaneously. This affection has been termed nervous or spontaneous hydrophobia.

HYDROPHTHAL'MIA, (hydro, and ὀφθαλμος, 'the eye,') Hydrophthal'mus, Dropsy of the eye, Hy'drops Oculi, Buphtal'mus, Zoöphthal'mus, Oculus Bovi'nus seu Bu'bulus seu Elephan'tinus, Ophthalmopto'sis, Parop'sis Staphylo'na sim'plex, (F.) Hydrophthal'mie, Hydropsie de l'œil. This affection is caused, at times, by an increase in the quantity of the aqueous, at others, of the vitreous, humour. In the former case, the iris is concave anteriorly, and pushed backwards:—in the latter, it is convex, and pushed forwards. Most commonly, the disease seems to depend on both humours at the same time. Hydrophthalia sometimes affects both eyes; at others, only one. Children are more exposed to it than adults or old persons. The treatment must vary according to the cause; its longer or shorter duration; greater or less extent, &c. Hence, according to circumstances, hydragogue medicines, purgatives, general and local blood-letting, blisters, setons, moxa, cupping-glasses, fomentations, collyria, and fumigations of different kinds, have been employed. When all means fail, and the disease continues to make progress, the fluid may be evacuated by a puncture made with a cataract needle at the lower part of the transparent cornea.

HYDROPHTHAL'MIA, CONICAL, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYDROPHTHAL'MION. An oedematous swelling of the conjunctiva in hydropic persons.

HYDROPNEMOSAR'CA, (hydro, πνευμα, 'wind, air,' and σαρξ, 'flesh,') An abscess, containing water, air, and matters similar to flesh.

HYDROPNEMOTHOR'AX, gen. Hydro pneumothora'cis, Hydroædropleurie, (hydro, πνευμων, 'the lung,' and θωραξ, 'the chest,') Pneumothorax with effusion of blood into the chest. See Pneumothorax.

HYDROPOI'DES, (ὕδροποιδης, from hydro, and εἶδος, 'likeness,') An epithet for watery excretions, such as sometimes take place in hydrotics.

HYDROPO'TA, Hydropotes, (ὕδροποτος, from hydro, and ποτις, 'a drinker,') Pota'tor Aquæ, A water drinker. One who drinks only water, or drinks it in an extraordinary quantity.

HY'DROPS, gen. Hydro'psis, (ὕδρωψ, from ὕδωρ, 'water,') Phlegma'tia, Hy'deros, Hyderi'asis, Affectus hydero'des, Hydro'psis, Hydro'psia, Affectus hydero'des, Hydro'psis, Hydro'psia, Hydro'psis, Hydro'psia, Hydro'rrhoë, Hydro'rrhoë, Polyhy'dria, Hydro'nosis, Hydro'nusis, Dropsy, Hy'dropsy, (Old Eng.) Drop'yk, (F.) Hydro'psie. A preternatural collection of a serous fluid in any cavity of the body, or in the areolar texture. When the areolar texture of the whole body is more or less filled with fluid, the disease is called Anasar'ca or Leucophlegma'tia;—and when this variety is local or partial, it is called Œde'ma. The chief dropsies, designated from their seat, are:—Anasarca, Hydrocephalus, Hydroarachitis, Hydrothorax, Hydropericardium, Ascites, Hydrometra, Hydrocæle, &c.

Encyst'ed Dropsy, Hy'drops sacca'tus, incaeratus seu cyst'icus, is that variety in which the fluid is enclosed in a sac or cyst; so that it has no communication with the surrounding parts. Dropsy of the Ovarium, Hydros seu Ascites Ovari'i, Ascites sacca'tus, is an instance of this variety.

Dropsy may be active or passive. The former consists in an increased action of the exhalants, so that those vessels pour out much more fluid than is absorbed: the latter arises from a state of atony of the absorbent vessels, which allows of an accumulation of fluid. It may also be mechanical, or produced by obstructions to the circulation, as in cases of diseased liver. Active dropsy, occurring accidentally in a sound individual, generally ends favourably. That which supervenes on other diseases, or is symptomatic of some internal affection, is rarely curable.

The treatment consists in the use of all those remedies which act on the various secretions: so that, the demand being increased, the supply will have to be increased accordingly; and in this manner some of the collected fluid may be taken up by the absorbents. To this end bleeding if the dropsy be very active; purgatives, diuretics, sudorifics, sialagogues, &c., are the remedies chiefly depended upon.

HYDROPSIA, Hydrops.

HYDROPSY, Hydrops.

HYDROPYR'ETOS, (hydro, and πυρετος, 'fever;') Febriis sudato'ria. Fever with sweating. Hydropyretos would be more proper; from ἰδρωσ, 'sweat.' See Sudor Anglicus.

HYDRORA'CHIS, (hydro, and ῥαχis, 'the spine.') Hydrorrhachis, Hydrorachis'tis, Hydrorachia, Myeloch'ysis, Hy'drops Cavita'tis Colu'næ Vertebralis seu Spinae Vertebralis seu Medullæ spinæ seu Spinae, Hydrocelè spinæ, Hydrorachis'tis spino'sa. An effusion of serum, often owing to inflammation of the spinal membranes—myelitis escudati'va—and forming a soft, frequently transparent, tumour, constituted of the membranes of the spinal marrow, which are distended and projecting backwards from the vertebral canal, the posterior parietis of which, when the affection is congenital, is wanting to a certain extent—Spina bif'ida, Atelorachid'ia, Hydrorachis dehiscens seu congen'ita, Schistorachis, Spina. The disease is often accompanied with paralysis of the lower extremities. It is congenital, and situate in the lumbar or sacral regions. It is almost always fatal:—the tumour rupturing, and death occurring instantaneously. On dissection, a simple separation or complete absence of the spinous processes of the vertebræ is perceived, with, at times, destruction or absence of spinal marrow. The treatment is the same as in hydrocephalus chronicus; and, as in it, advantage seems occasionally to have been derived by puncturing with a fine needle.

HYDRORACHIS DEHISCENS, see Hydrorachis.

HYDRORACHITIS, gen. Hydrorachitidis, Hydrorachis.

HYDRORACHIS, gen. Hydrorachidis, (from hydro, and ῥαχis, 'a testicle,') Hydrocele.

HYDRORÉNALE DISTENSION, Hydro-nephrosis.

HYDRORRHACHIA, Hydrorachis.

HYDRORRHACHIS, Hydrorachis—h. Congenita, see Hydrorachis—h. Dehiscens, see Hydrorachis.

HYDRORRHAGIE, (hydro, and ῥηγνυμι, 'to break forth,') Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRORRHŒ, Hydrops.

HYDRORRHŒA, (hydro, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Hydrops. Also, a copious watery discharge,—as from the vagina.

HYDRORRHŒOUS, Hydrops.

HYDRORTHOPNŒ'Á, (hydro, and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing, except in the erect posture,') Orthopnoea, owing to a collection of water in the chest.

HYDROSAC'CHARUM, A'qua saccharo'ria, (F.) Eau sucrée. Sugared water. Syrupus simplex.

HYDROSAL'PINX, gen. Hydrosalpin'gis, Hy'drops tubu'rum Fallo'pii; (hydro, and σπινγξ, 'a tube,') Dropsy of the Fallopiian tube.

HYDROSAR'CA, (hydro, and σαρξ, 'flesh,') A tumour containing a fluid, as well as portions of flesh. Also, Anasarca.

HYDROSARCOCE'LĒ, (hydro, σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κληη, 'a tumour,') Sarcohydrocelè. A tumour, formed by a sarcocele, complicated with dropsy of the tunica vaginalis.

HYDROSCHEOCE'LĒ, (hydro, and σχεοει, 'scrotum,') Hydroscœce'lè uquo'sa; (hydro, σχεον, 'the scrotum,' and κληη, 'rupture,') A collection of water in the scrotum. Hydrocele.

HYDROSCHEŒONIE, Hydrocele.

HYDROSCHEUM, (hydro, and σχεον, 'the scrotum,') Hydrocele.

HYDROSIS, Hidrosis.

HYDROSTATIC BED, Water bed—h. Test of Infanticide, see Docimasia.

HYDROSUDOPATHY, (hydro, sudo, 'I sweat,' and παθος, 'affection,') Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDROSUDOTHERAPE'IA, Hydro'sud'athy, Hydro'pathi'a, Hydro'sudop'athy, Hydr'i'asis, Asa'hydr'iatri'ca, Hydr'iatri'a, Hydatotherape'ia, Hydrotherape'ia, Watercure, [G.] Wasserkur, (hydro, sudo, 'I sweat,' and θεραπεω, 'I cure,') A badly compounded word, formed to express the mode of treating diseases systematically by cold water, sweating, &c.

HYDROSULPH'URETTED WA'TER, A'qua hydrosulphurata sim'plex, A. hepat'ica, (F.) E'gua hydrosulphurée simple. (Sulphuret of iron 1000 parts, sulphuric acid 2000 parts, distilled water 4000 parts; add the water to the acid, and put the sulphuret of iron into a retort, to which a Wolff's apparatus of five or six vessels is adapted; the last containing about an ounce of potassa, dissolved in a quart of water. Pour the diluted acid gradually on the sulphuret, and ultimately throw away the water in the last vessel. Ph. P.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and deobstruent [?], and is used in rheumatism, diseases of the skin, &c.

It has been also called Ac'idum Hydrothion'icium liq'idum.

HYDROSULPHURETUM AMMONIACALE AQUOSUM, Ammonie sulphuretum—h. Ammoniacum. Ammonie sulphuretum.

HYDROTHERAPE'IA, (hydro, and θεραπεω, 'I cure,') Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDROTHION, (hydro, and θειον, 'sulphur,') Hydrogen, sulphuretted.

HYDROTHO'RAX, gen. Hydrothorac'is, (hydro, and θωραξ, 'the chest,') Hy'drops Thora'cis seu pectoris seu pulmonis seu pleuræ, Stethoch'ysis, Pleurorrhœ'ia lymphatica seu sero'sa, Dyspno'ea et Orthopno'ea a hydrothorac'ica, (F.) Hydro'psie de Poitrine ou des Plèvres, Dropsy of the Chest. Idiopathic hydrothorax, termed by Laënnec, Hydro'psie des plèvres, Dropsy of the Pleuræ—by Piorry, Hydropleurie—is a rare disease, and not easy of diagnosis. It generally exists only on one side, which, if the fluid effused be considerable, projects more than the other. Dyspnoea, and fluctuation perceptible to the ear, are characteristic symptoms. When the chest is examined with the stethoscope, respiration is found to be wanting every where except at the root of the lung. The sound is also dull on percussion.

Effusion into the chest, as a result of inflammation of some thoracic viscus, is as common as the other is rare. It is usually a fatal symptom. It has been called symptomatic hydrothorax.

In hydrothorax, the course of treatment proper in dropsics in general must be adopted. Diure-tics seem here to be especially useful; probably on account of the great activity of pulmonary absorption. Paracentesis can rarely be serviceable.

HYDROTHORAX CHYLOSUS, Chylothorax—h. Purulentus, Empyema.

HYDROTICA, (ὕδωρ, 'water,') Hydragogues.

HYDROTIS, gen. Hydro'tidis, (hydro, and ous, gen. ωτος, 'the ear,') Dropsy of the ear. Properly, an accumulation of mucous or muco-purulent matter in the middle ear.

HYDRURESIS, (hydro, and ουρον, 'urine,') Diabetes.

HYDRURIA, Diabetes, see Urine.

HYÈRES. This small town, agreeably situated on the declivity of a hill, about two miles from the Mediterranean, and twelve from Toulon, is the least exceptional residence in Provence for the pulmonary invalid. It is in some measure protected from the northerly winds, but, according to Sir James Clark, not sufficiently so from the mistral to render it a very desirable residence for the phthisical.

HYGEA, Hygiene, Sanitas.

HYGEIA, (ὑγία,) Sanitas.

HYGEISMUS, Hygiene.

HYGEIST, Hygienist.

HYGEOL'OGY, Hygeolog'ia, Hygiolog'ia, Hygiolog'ia, Hygiolog'ogy, (from hygia, 'health,') Soteriolog'ogy. A treatise on health or on hygiene.

HYGIANSIS, (ὑγιασις,) Sanitas.

HYGIASIS, (ὑγιασις,) Sanitas.

HYGIASMA, gen. Hygiasm'atis, (ὑγιασμα,) Medicament.

HYGIAS'TICA DOCTRINA. The doctrine of health. The doctrine of the restoration of health.

HYGIASTICUS, Salutary.

HYGIEA, Sanitas.

HYGIEIA, (ὑγία,) Hygiene, Sanitas.

HYGIEINUS, (εὐγίαιος,) Salutary.

HYGIEIOLOGIA, Hygeology.

HYGIÈNE [F.], generally Anglicised Hygiene, and pronounced hy'geen, (ὑγία, 'health,') Hygeis'mus, Hygiei'nè, Hygie'sis, Hygie'i'a, Hygie'i'a, Hygie'i'a, Hyge'i'a, Hygie'i'nè, Hygie'i'cs, Medicina conservati'va seu diastotica. The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of health. It embraces a knowledge of healthy man, both in society and individually, as well as of the objects used and employed by him, with their influence on his constitution and organs. See Regimen.

HYGIÈNIC, (pronounced, also, hygeen'ic,) (F.) Hygiénique. (Same etymon.) Relating to Hygiene—as hygienic precautions, hygienic rules, &c. &c.

HYGIENICS, Hygiene.

HYGIÈNIQUE, Hygienic.

HYGIEN'IST, (pronounced hygeen'ist,) Hyge'ist. One who understands the principles of hygiene.

HYGIERUS, (ὑγιερὸς,) Salutary.

HYGIEISIS, Hygiene.

HYGIOLOGY, Hygeology.

HY'GRA, (ὑγρὸς, 'moist,') Liquid plasters;—Hygrempl'astr'a.

HYGRASIA, (ὑγρασία,) Humour.

HYGRACHEMA, gen. Hygrache'mat'is, (hygro, and αχημα, sound,') Son'itus fluidi. The sound of fluid, heard by auscultation or otherwise.

HYGREDON, (ὑγρὸν,) Humour.

HYGREMPLASTRA, Hygra.

HYGRO, (ὑγρὸς, 'humid,') in composition, humid.

HYGROBLEPHAR'ICI, (hygro, and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid,') Hygrophthal'mici. The excretory ducts of the lachrymal gland have been so called.

HYGROBRONCHIORRHIONCHUS, Râle muqueux.

HYGROCATARAC'TA, (hygro, and καταρακτης, 'cataract,') Cataract'ua liq'uida. Liquid or fluid cataract.

HYGROCELE, (hygro, and κηλη, 'a rupture, a tumor,') Hydrocirsocele.

HYGROCOLLYRIA, see Collyrium.

HYGROCYSTIS, (hygro, and κυστις, 'a bladder,') Hydatid.

HYGRO'LOGY, Hygrogol'gia, (hygro, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The anatomy of the fluids of the body.

HYGRO'MA, gen. Hygrom'atis, (ὑγρος, 'moist,') Tumor cysticus sero'sus, Cyst'is sero'va. Dropsy of the bursa mucosæ.

HYGROMET'RIC, Hygromet'ricus, (F.) Hygrométrique. Relating or appertaining to hygrometry.

HYGROMETRIC PROP'ERTY of an organized tissue, (F.) Hygrométricité, Hygroscopicité, is that by which it gives off to the air and receives from it moisture under varying conditions of that medium.

HYGROMÉTRICITÉ, Hygrometric property.

HYGROMETRY, Hygromet'ria, Hygrosco'pia, (hygro, and μετρον, 'measure,') The part of physics which concerns the measurement of the dryness or humidity of the atmosphere. It is probable that diseases are frequently caused by the varying moisture of the atmosphere or by changes in its weight or temperature. The hygrometer ought, consequently, to form part of every apparatus for medical meteorological observations.

HYGRON, (ὑγρος, 'liquid,') Liqueor.

HYGROPHOBIA, (hygro, and φοβος, 'dread,') Hydrophobia.

HYGROPHITHAL'MIA, (hygro, and ophthal'mia,) Ophthalmia with much lachrymation.

HYGROPHITHALMICI, Hygropharicæ.

HYGROPISSOS, (hygro, and πισσος, 'pitch,') See Pinus sylvestris.

HYGROSCOPIA, (hygro, and σκοπεω, 'I examine,') Hygrometry.

HYGROSCOPICITÉ, see Hygrometric.

HYGROTES, (ὑγροτης,) Humour, Liqueor.

HYGRUM, (ὑγρος, 'liquid,') Humour.

HY'LE, (ὑλη, materia, matter, wood,') Materia Medica; also, the Philosopher's stone.

HYLE IATRICE, (ὑλη ιατρικη,) Materia Medica.

HYLISIS, (ὑλιζω, 'to strain,') Colatio.

HYLISMUS, (ὑλισμος,) Colatio.

HYLISTERION, (ὑλιστηριον,) Colatorium.

HYLOPH'AGOUS, (hyle, 'wood,,' and φαγω, 'I eat,') One that feeds upon the young shoots of trees, roots, &c. Hylophagous tribes yet exist in some parts of Africa.

HYLOZO'ISM, Hylozoism'us, (hyle, and ζωη, 'life,') Materialism. A doctrine that life is the result of matter or organization.

HY'MEN, gen. Hy'men'is, (ὑμην, 'marriage, nuptial song, membrane or pellicle,') Clau'strum seu Flo's seu Sigil'lum seu Custo'dia seu Colum'na seu Zo'na virgin'a'lis, Clau'strum virgin'a'le, Flo's virgin'a'lis, Cir'culus membrano'sus, Buc'ton, Interseptum virgin'a'le, Cen'to virgin'a'lis, Argu'mentum Integri'tatis, Muni'mentum seu Zo'na Cas'tita'tis, Pannic'ulus hymen'us seu virgin'a'lis, Eugi'on, Eugi'um, Val'vula seu Membran'ula luna'ta vagi'na, Vir'ginal membrane. The semi-lunar, parabolic, or circular fold, situate at the outer orifice of the vagina in virgins, especially during youth and prior to menstruation. This membrane is ordinarily ruptured by the first venereal act, and is effaced by accouchement; some irregular flaps remaining, to which the name Carruc'ule Myrtifor'mes has been given by reason of their resemblance to the leaves of the myrtle. Many circumstances of an innocent character may occasion a rupture or destruction of this membrane. It is often, indeed, found absent in children soon after birth; whilst it may remain entire after copulation. Hence the presence of the hymen does not absolutely prove virginity; nor does its absence prove incontinence, although its presence would be primâ facie evidence of continence.

HYMEN, (ὑμηνί,) Membrane—h. Diaphragton, Mediastinum.

HYMENÆA, (after the god Hymen,) see Copal—h. Courbaril, see Animo.

HYMENICA AMENORRHŒA. Amenorrhœa occasioned by closure of the hymen.

HYMENICUS, Hymenodes. Relating to the hymen. Also, membranous.

HYMENITIS, (hymen, and itis.) Membranous inflammation. Inflammation of an internal membrane.

HYMENIUM, (ὑμενιον, dim. of hymen.) Membran'ula. A fine, delicate membrane.

HYMENODES, (ὑμενωδης,) Hymenicus.

HYMENOGANGLIITIS, Cholera.

HYMENOG'ENY, Hymenogen'ia, (F.) Hymenogénie, (hymen, and γεννω, 'I engender.') The production of membranes by the effect of simple contact of two liquids, as albumen and fat, when the former gives a coating to the globules of the latter. (Ascherson.)

HYMENOGRAPHY, Hymenogra'phia, (hymen, and γραφο, 'I describe.') That part of anatomy whose object is the description of the different membranes.

HYMENOL'OGY, Hymenolog'ia, (hymen, and λογος, 'a description.') A treatise on the membranes.

HYMENOPHTHALMIA, Ophthalmia membranarum.

HYMENORRHAPHY, Hymenorrha'phia, (hymen, and ραφη, 'a suture.') A form of elytrorrhaphy, in which the operation is performed in the natural situation of the hymen.

HYMENOT'OMY, Hymenotom'ia, (hymen, and τενω, 'I cut, I dissect.') The part of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the membranes. The term has also been applied to the incision of the hymen, practised in certain cases of imperforation of the vagina, in order to give exit to the blood retained and accumulated in the cavity of the uterus.

HYMNIUM, (contracted from hymenium.) Amnios.

HYO, in composition, an abridgment of Hyoides os.

HYOBASIOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYOCHONDROGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOTHYREODES, Thyreohyoideus.

HYODEPIGLOTTICUS, Hyoepiglotticus.

HYODES, Hyoides.

HYOEPIGLOT'TICUS, Hyoepiglot'ticus. Belonging to the os hyoides and epiglottis. Some anatomists have given the name Hyo-epiglottic ligament to a bundle of condensed arcolar tissue, which passes from the posterior part of the body of the hyoid bone to the base of the epiglottic fibro-cartilage.

HYOGLOSSO-BASI-PHARYNGIEN, Constrictor pharyngis.

HYOGLOS'SUS, Hyo'deoglossus, Hyochoondroglossus, Hypo'siloglossus, Cer'atoglossus of Douglass and Cowper: Basiocerotachondroglossus. A large, thin, quadrilateral muscle, situate at the anterior and superior part of the neck. Its insertions at three different points of the os hyoides permit it to be divided into three portions:—the first (Cer'atoglossus of Albinus), is attached to the great cornu of the os hyoides; the second (Basioglossus of Albinus), arises from the superior part of the body of the same bone; and the third (Chondro- glossus of Albinus), arises from the lesser cornu and the cartilage situate between the body and the greater cornu. The fibres of these three bundles are inserted into the lateral and inferior parts of the tongue. This muscle depresses the base of the tongue, or raises the os hyoides, when the tongue is fixed.

HYOTHYREOÏDEUS, Thyreohyoideus.

HYOTHYROID, Thyreohyoïd.

HYOID BONE, Hyoïdes, os.

HYOÏDES OS, (ὑοειδης, the Greek ὑ and ειδης, 'shape.') Os Bico'r'nè seu hypseloï'des seu Lamb'doï'des seu Gul'turis seu Guttur'a'lè seu Liu'guæ seu Lingua'lè, Upsilonoï'des, Ypsilonoïdes. The Hyoid Bone, Hyoïdeus, Hyo'des. The hyoid bone is a very movable osseous arch; of a parabolic shape; convex before, and suspended horizontally in the substance of the soft parts of the neck, between the base of the tongue and the larynx. This bone, separated entirely from the rest of the skeleton, is composed of five distinct portions, susceptible of motion on each other. The first and most central is the body of the hyoid, Ossi'culum me'dium Hyoï'dis, which affords attachment to several muscles; the two others are lateral, and bear the name of branches or greater cornua. The last two are smaller, situate above the other, and are known under the name lesser cornua and styloid cornua, the Os'sa pisi'formia lingua'lia of Sömmerring, Os'sa seu Gra'na seu Ossi'cula seu Cor'pora seu Corpus'cula tritice'. The os hyoides is ossified from five vertic.

HYOÏDES PRIMUS, Sterno-hyoïdeus.

HYOÏDEUS, Hyoïdes.

HYOÏDIS QUARTUS MUSCULUS, Omohyoïdeus.

HYOSCYAMUS, (ἵς, 'a swine,' and κωμος, 'a bean,' eaten by swine.) Fa'ba suil'ia, Ben'gi, Jusqu'amus, Hyoscyamus ni'ger seu ag're'stis, Apollina'ris, Alter'cum, Ag'onè, Altercan'genon, Hen'bane, Poison Tobac'co, Stink'ing night'shade. (F.) Jusqu'ame, Fève a Cochon, Hannebane, Pote-lée, Porcelet. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves, Hyoscy'ami Fo'lium, and seeds, Hyoscy'ami Semen, Ph. U. S. 1863, are the parts used in medicine. Their odour is narcotic and peculiar; taste insipid and mucilaginous. The virtues are yielded to proof spirit. Hyoscyamus is narcotic, anodyne, antispasmodic, and slightly stimulant. It is used as a substitute for opium, where the latter disagrees; and is applied, externally, as a cataplasm in cancer and glandular swellings. Dose, gr. iij to x of the powder. An alkaloid was obtained from it by Brandes, Hyosciamine, Jusquiamine.

HYOSCYAMUS AGRESTIS, Hyoscyamus.

HYOSCYAMUS ALBUS, White Hen'bane, possesses similar virtues.

HYOSCYAMUS LUTEUS, Nicotiana rustica—h. Niger, Hyoscyamus—h. Peruvianus, Nicotiana tabacum.

HYOSCYAMUS SCOPO'LIA, Scopoli'na atropoï'des. The herb and root of this plant, which grows in Illyria, Hungary, Croatia, Gallizia, and Bavaria, are used in the same cases as belladonna. Dose of the powder, half a grain.

HYPACTICUS, (ὑπακτικός, from ὑπο, and αγω, 'I drive,') Cathartic.

HYPE'MIA, (hypo, and αιμα, 'blood,') Hypoæ'mia, Hypohe'mia, Hyphe'mia, Oligæ'mia, Oligo hæ'mia, Anæ'mia, (F.) Hyphe'mie. Deficiency of blood. Also, extravasation of blood.

HYPEREMIA Oculi, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPAGOGE, (ὑπαγωγῆ, from ὑπο, and αγω, 'I drive,') Dejection.

HYPAGOGEUS, (ὑπαγωγος,) Laxative.

HYPALEIM'MA, gen. Hypaleim'matis, (hypo, and αλειψω, 'I anoint,') Hypaleim'ma, Hypaleip'tum, Hypalip'tum. An ointment or liniment to be rubbed or spread on a part.

HYPALEIPTRIS, ('υπαλειπτρις,) Hypaleiptrum. HYPALEIP'TRON, ('υπαλειπτρον,) Hypaleip'trum, Hypaleip'tris, Hypalip'trum, Specil'ium, Spatha. A sort of spatula for spreading ointments.

HYPALEIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPALEIPTUM, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIMMA, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPAMAURO'SIS, (hypo, and amaurosis;) Amauro'sis imperfecta. Imperfect amaurosis; Meramauro'sis.

HYPANO'NIUM, (hypo, and αγκον, 'the elbow.')

A pillow for supporting the elbow in surgical cases.

HYAPOPLEX'IA, (hypo, and apoplexia.)

An incomplete attack of apoplexy.

HYPATISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPATMUS, ('υπατμος, from hypo, and ατμος,

'vapor.')

HYPAUCHE'NIUM, (hypo, and αυχην, 'the neck.')

A pillow or cushion for the neck.

HYPECCHORESIS, ('υπεκχορησις, from hypo, ec, and χωρεω, 'to make vacant.')

HYPECCHORETICUS, Laxative.

HYPELATUS, (hypo, and ελαυνω, 'to drive,')

Cathartic, Laxative.

HYPENTATIOMA, (hypo, and εναντιος, 'opposite.')

Allopathy.

HYPENTANTIOSIS, Allopathy.

HYPE'NE, ('υπηνη.)

The beard which grows under the chin, according to some. Also, the upper lip. See Mystax.

HYPENETES, ('υπηνητης,) Adolescens.

HYPER, 'υπερ, 'above,' 'in excess.'

HYPERA'U'SIS, Oxycoeli'a, Hyperac'o'e,

Phthogody'spho'ria, (F.) Hyperacousie, (hyper, and αουη, 'audition.')

Excessive sensibility of the organ of hearing.

HYPERADENO'SIS, Hyperadeno'ma, Hyper-

troph'ia glandula'rum, (hyper, αδην, 'a gland,' and osis.)

Hyper trophy of a gland.

HYPERÆ'MIA, Hyperhæ'mia, Hyperæ'mio'sis,

Hæmorie'sis, (F.) Hyperémie, Hyperhémie, Angiohémie,

(hyper, and 'αίμα,' 'blood.')

Preternatural accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels, more especially local plethora—pletho'ra partia'lis; congestion. Various forms of hyperæmia are admitted by pathologists,—for example, the active or sthenic; the asthenic or passive; the cadaveric, or that which forms immediately before or after death; the hypostatic, which occurs in depending parts, and the mechanical, which is produced by some mechanical impediment.

HYPERÆMIA ABDOMINIS, Cœliæmia—h. Activa,

Inflammati—h. of the Brain, Cephalæmia—h.

Capitis, Cephalæmia—h. Cerebri, Cephalæmia—h.

Pectoris, Stethæmia—h. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia

—h. Pulmonum, Stethæmia—h. of the Lungs, Stethæmia.

HYPERÆMIC, Hyperæ'micus, Hyperæ'mial,

Ceugest'ed, Blood'shot, (F.) Hyperémie. Affected with hyperæmia.

HYPERÆMOSIS, Hyperæ'mia.

HYPERÆSTHESIA, (hyper, and αισθησις, 'the faculty of feeling.')

Hyperæsthesia—h. Linguae, Hyperguestia—h.

Olfactoria, Hyperosphresia—h. Plexus cardiaci,

Angina pectoris—h. Psychica, Hypochochondriasis.

HYPERÆSTHET'ICA, Agents that are conceived to augment general sensibility—as strychnia,

brucia, &c.

HYPERANARRHOPHE'SIS, (hyper, and αναρροησις,

'absorption.')

Excessive absorption.

HYPERANTHERA MORINGA, (hyper, 'in excess,' and ανθηρα, 'anther,')

Guilandina moringa.

HYPERANTHRAXIS, (hyper, and ανθραξ, 'a coal,')

see Cholera.

HYPERAPH'IA, Oxyaph'h'e, Oxyaph'h'ia, (hyper, and 'αψη,' 'touch.')

Excessive acuteness of touch.

HYPERAPHRODIS'IA, (hyper, and αφροδιτη,

'Venus.')

Excessive venereal desire.

HYPERASTHENIA, (hyper, and ασθενεια,

'weakness.')

Excessive debility.

HYPERAUXE'SIS, (hyper, and αυξησις, 'augmentation.')

Hyperepid'osis. Excessive increase or enlargement of a part, as Hyperaux'e'sis I'ridis, an excessive enlargement of the iris, so as to stop up the pupil.

HYPERBOLIC (attitude), ('υπερβολικος, from hyper, and βαλλω, 'I throw;'

'excessive.')

Galen, by this term, designates certain extraordinary attitudes, in which the limbs and vertebral column are in a state of complete extension or flexion.

HYPERBO'REAN, Hyperbor'eus, ('υπερβορειος, from hyper, and βορειας, 'the north wind.')

A race of men found at the extreme north of the two continents, in the vicinity of the polar circle. It includes the Thibetans,

Ostiaks, Kamtschadales, Laplanders, Samoiedoes,

Esquimaux, &c.

HYPERBU'LIA, (hyper, and βουλη, 'will.')

Ungovernable will or volition.

HYPERCARDIA, (hyper, and καρδια, 'heart,')

Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCARDIOTROPHIA, (hyper, καρδια,

'heart,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.')

Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCATAPINO'SIS, (hyper, καταπινειν, 'to sip up,') and osis.)

Excessive activity of absorption.

HYPERCATHAR'SIS, Hypercine'sis, Hyper'eios,

Superpurgat'io, Ej'rentiat'io, (hyper, and καθαρισις,

'purgation.')

Superpurgation.

HYPERCENO'SIS, (hyper, and κενωσις, 'evacuation.')

Excessive evacuation, as of blood, bile, &c.

HYPERCERASIS, (hyper, and κερας, 'the cornea,')

Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCERATOSIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCHOLIA, (hyper, and χολη, 'bile.')

Polycholia.

HYPERCHRO'MA, gen. Hyperchro'matis, (hyper, and χρωμα, 'colour.')

A red fleshy excrescence at the inner angle of the eye, near the caruncula lacrymalis, which sometimes grows very large, so as to separate the eyelids and interfere with their movements.

HYPERCHROMATOP'SIA, Hyperchromatop'sy,

(hyper, χρωμα, gen. χρωματος, 'colour,' and οψις,

'vision.')

A defect of vision, owing to which ideas of colour are attached to objects, which convey no such coloured impressions to a healthy eye. It is the antithesis to achromatopsia.

HYPERCINESIA, Hypercine'sis, (hyper, and κινωσις,

'I move,')

'motion.')

Excessive motion. Under the term hypercinesis, Romberg includes the spasmodic neuroses.

HYPERCINESIA HYSTERIA, Hysteria—h. Nervosa, see Irritable—h. Uterina, Hysteria.

HYPERCINESIS GASTRICA, Hypochochondriasis.

HYPERCONJUNCTIVITE, see Ophthalmia.

HYPERCORYPHO'SIS, (hyper, and κορυφη,

'the vertex;'

'the extreme point of anything.')

The lobes of the liver and lungs.

HYPERCRIN'IA, Hyperdic'risis, Chymoze'mia,

(hyper, and κρινω, 'I separate.')

A morbid increase in the quantity of the secretions.

HYPER'CRISIS, Superæcre'tio, Superævacua'tio,

Superævacua'tio. An excessive crisis, or evacuation;

a flux.—A very violent, critical effort, or too copious critical evacuations.

HYPERCYEMA, gen. Hypercy'ematis, (hyper, and κλειν,

'to conceive.')

Superfoetation.

HYPERCYESIS, Superfoetation.
HYPERDERMATO'SIS, Hyperdermato'ma,
Hyperdermo'sis, Hyperderma'ma, (hyper, δέρμα,
'skin,' and osis.) Hypertrophy of the skin.

HYPERDIACRISIS, (hyper, δια, and κρίνω,
'I separate,') Hypercrinia.

HYPERDIURESIS, Diabetes.

HYPERDYNAMIA, (hyper, and δύναμις, strength,') Hypersthenia.

HYPERDYNAM'IC, Hyperdynam'icus. Appertaining to or having the characters of hyperdynamia, or excessive strength—of the vital powers more especially.

HYPERECHEMA, gen. Hyperèche'matis, (hyper, and ἤχω, 'to sound,') See Exaggerated.

HYPERECHESIS, see Exaggerated.

HYPEREMESIS, Hyperemes'ia, Vom'itus profusus, (hyper, and εμεω, 'I vomit,') Excessive vomiting.

HYPERÉMIE, Hyperæmia—h. Cérébrale, Cephalæmia—h. du Cerveau, Cephalæmia—h. du Foie, Hepatohæmia—h. Hypostatique, see Hypostatic—h. de la Moëlle épinière, Hypermyelohæmia—h. des Poumons, Stethæmia.

HYPERÉMIE, Hyperæmie.

HYPERENCÉPHALOTROPHIE; (hyper, εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon,' and τροφή, 'nourishment,') Hypertrophy of the encephalon of Pierry.

HYPERENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hyperencéphale, (hyper, and encephalon.) A monster whose excessive brain is situate in the skull.

HYPERENDOSMOSE, Inflammation.

HYPERENERGI'A, (hyper, and ενέργεια, 'activity,') Excessive activity, as of the nervous system.

HYPEREPHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPEREPIDOSIS, (hyper, and επιδοσις, 'increase,') Hyperauxesis.

HYPERÉRETHIS'IA, (hyper, and ερεθίζω, 'I excite,') Excessive irritability.

HYPERESTHÉSIE, Hyperæsthesis.

HYPERFIBRINATION, Hyperinosis.

HYPERGENESIS, (hyper, and γενεσις, 'generation,') (F.) Hypergénésie, Hyperplastie. The excess of formative power, which gives occasion to monstrosities by excess of parts. See Monster.

HYPERGEUS'TIA, Hypergeus'is, Hyperæsthésia lin'gue, Oxygeus'ia, (hyper, and γεύσις, 'taste,') Excessive sensibility of the organ of taste.

HYPERHÆMATOSIS, Inflammation.

HYPERHÆMIA, Hyperæmia.

HYPERHÉMIE, Hyperæmia.

HYPERHÉPATOTROPHIE, (hyper, ἥπαρ, gen. ἡπατος, 'liver,' and τροφή, 'nourishment,') Hepatauxie.

HYPERHIDROSIS, (hyper, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') Epidrosis.

HYPERHÓ'RA, (hyper, and ῥοα, 'manhood,') Premature development of the body, or of some part.

HYPER'ICUM, or HYPER'ICUM BACCIFERUM, (ὑπερικόν,) Arbus'cula gummi'fera Brazili'en'sis, Caca-opia. Ord. Hypericaceæ. A Brazilian tree, whose bark emits a juice, when wounded, which resembles gamboge. Hypericum is considered by Linnæus to be derived from ὑπερ, 'over,' and ικων, 'an image or spectre;' from its having been fancied to possess the power of driving away evil spirits.

HYPERICUM OFFICINALE, H. perforatum—H. officinarum, H. perforatum.

HYPERICUM PERFORATUM, Hypericum, H. officinále seu officinárum seu vulgarè seu Virgin'icum, Ful'ga Dæ'monium, Androsæ'mum, Có'rion, Perforated or Common St. John's Wort, (F.) Mil-lepertuis ordinaire. It is aromatic and astringent, and enters into a number of aromatic preparations; and, amongst others, into the Falltranks. It was, at one time, much used in dysentery, hem-orrhages, &c. The juice is acrid. The Oil of St. John's Wort, Red oil, Limen'tum seu O'leum hyperici, Bol'satum hyperici sim'plex, is made by infusing  $\frac{3}{4}$  iv of the flowers in a quart of olive oil. It is applied to recent bruises.

HYPERICUM SARO'THRA, Or'angegrass, Pineveen, indigenous, is applied in domestic practice, boiled, to contusions and sprains.

HYPERICUM VIRGINICUM, H. perforatum—h. Vulgare, H. perforatum,

HYPERIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERINESIS, (ὑπερινσις, from hyper, and ινω, 'to purge,') Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOS, (ὑπερινος,) Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINO'SIS, Ino'sis, Hyperplas'ma, (hyper, ις, gen. ινος, 'fibre,' and osis.) The condition of the blood in which it contains an increase in the proportion of fibrin, Hyperfibrin'ation, Superfibrin'ation, a decrease of the ratio of red corpuscles, with excess of fibrin, and an increase of the fat,—as in inflammation. In proportion to the increase of the fibrin and fat, and the decrease of the corpuscles, the whole solid residue will be diminished. Also, morbidly increased muscular activity.

HYPERINOT'IC, Hyperino'ticus. Appertaining or relating to hyperinosis.

HYPERLYMPH'IA, (F.) Hyperlymphie, (hyper, and lymph'a.) Excessive formation or accumulation of lymph.

HYPERMÉTROHÉMIE, Metrohæmia.

HYPERMETROP'IA, (hyper, μετρον, 'a measure,' and οψις, 'vision,') Presbyopia.

HYPERMNE'SIA, (from hyper, and μνησμαι, 'I recollect,') Excessive memory.

HYPERMYELOHÆMIA, (F.) Hypérémie de la Moëlle Épinière, Congestion sanguine rachidienne, (hyper, μυελος, 'marrow,' and αἷμα, 'blood,') Hyperæmia of the spinal marrow.

HYPERNÉPHROTROPHIE, (hyper, νέφρος, 'kidney,' and τροφή, 'nourishment,') Hypertrophy of the kidney.

HYPERNEUR'IA, (hyper, and νευρον, 'a nerve,') Excessive nervous activity

HYPERNEURO'MA. Morbid development of the neurine or nervous masses.

HYPEROPHARYNGEUS, Palatopharyngeus.

HYPERO'A, (ὑπερωα, from hyper, and ωω, 'a high place,') The palatine arch,—the base of the cranium; the palate.

HYPEROÏ'TIS, Inflammat'io palat'i, Anji'na Palat'ina, (F.) Inflammation du Palais; (hyperoia, and itis.) Inflammation of the velum palati.

HYPEROÏCHAS'MA, gen. Hyperoïchas'matis, (hyperoia, and χασμα, 'an opening,') Lycost'oma, Palat'tum fissum. Fissure of the palate.

HYPEROPSIA, (hyper, and οψις, 'vision,') Oxyopia.

HYPEROS, (ὑπερος,) Pylum.

HYPEROSMIA, (hyper, and οσμη, 'smell,') Hyperosphresia.

HYPEROSPHERE'SIA, Hyperos'mia, Hyperæsthésia olfact'oria, Olfac'tus acut'us, (hyper, and οσφροσις, 'smell,') Excessive acuteness of the smell.

HYPEROSTOSIS, (hyper, οστιον, 'a bone,' and osis.) Exostosis.

HYPERPATHI'A, (hyper, and παθος, 'affection,') Excessive sensibility in disease.

HYPERPHLEBO'SIS, (hyper, φλεβ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein,' and osis.) Too great development of the venous system; predominant venosity.

HYPERPHLEGMASIA, Hyperphlogosis.

HYPERPHLOGO'SIS, Épiphlogo'sis, Hyperphlegma'sia, Inflammat'io peracuta, (hyper, and φλογωσις, 'inflammation,') A high degree of inflammation.

HYPERPHRÉNIE, (hyper, and φρην, 'the mind,') Mania.

HYPERPIMELE, (hyper, and πιμην, 'fat,') see Polysarcia.

HYPERPLASMA, gen. Hyperplasm'atis, (hyper, and πλασσω, 'to form,') Hyperinosis.

HYPERPLASIA, (hyper, and πλασσω, 'to form,') Excess of formative action.

HYPERPLASTIE, Hypergenesis.

HYPERPLEXIE, (hyper, and πλησσω, 'to strike,') Ecstasis.

HYPERPNEUSTIA, (hyper, and πνεω, 'to blow,') Flatulence.

HYPERPRESBYTIA, Presbytia.

HYPERSARCOMA, gen. Hyperсарco'matis, Hyperсарco'sis, Hypersarc'is, (hyper, and сарco-ma.) A soft fungous excrescence, especially such as appears upon ulcerated parts:—a fungosity.

HYPERSARCOSIS, (hyper, and сарcosis.) Excrescence, Fungosity—h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERSARXIS, (hyper, and сарξ, 'flesh,') Hypersarcoma.

HYPERSPADIAS, (hyper, and σπασω, 'to draw,') Epispadias.

HYPERSPASMI, (hyper, and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Convulsion.

HYPERSPLENOTROPHIE, (hyper, splen, and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Splenoncus.

HYPERSPONGIA, (hyper, σπογγος, 'a sponge, a fungus,') Spina ventosa.

HYPERSTHENIA, Hyperdyna'mia, Hyperzo'dyna'mia, St'a'tus inflammator'ius ve'rus, (hyper, and sthenos, 'strength,') Super-excitement. A morbid condition, characterized by over-excitement of all the vital phenomena.

HYPERSTHENIC, Stimulant.

HYPERSTHENICUS, see Active, Stimulant.

HYPERTONIA, (hyper, and τονος, 'tone,') Excess of tone in parts. It is opposed to atony.

HYPERTRICHOSIS, (hyper, and τριξ, gen. τριχος, 'hair,') Excessive production of hair.

HYPERTROPHÆMIA, (hyper, τροφη, 'nourishment, and αιμα, 'blood,') A state in which the plastic powers of the blood are increased.

HYPERTROPHIA, (hyper, and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Hypertrophy—h. Cerebri, Phrenauxe—h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Glandularum, Hyperadenosis—h. Hepatis, Hepatauxe—h. Intestinorum, Enterhypertrophia—h. Lienis, Splenoncus—h. Splenis, Splenoncus—h. Unguim, Onychauxe—h. Uteri, Metrauxe—h. Vesicæ urinariæ, Cystauxe.

HYPERTROPHIE, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIE, Hypertrophy—h. du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Centripète du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Concentrique du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. du Foie, Hepatauxe—h. de la Rate, Splenoncus—h. du Corps Thyroïde, Bronchocele.

HYPERTROPHIED, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIEN, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHOUS, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHY, or HYPERTROPHY, Hypertroph'ia, Supernutrit'io, (F.) Hypertrophie, Supernutrition. The state of a part in which the nutrition is performed with greater activity; and which, on that account, at length acquires unusual bulk. The part thus affected is said to be hyper'trophied or hyper'trophous. Hypertrophie is used by Neligan, as Hypertrophien is by Simon, for an order of cutaneous diseases, characterized by hypertrophy of the derma, or epidermis, or both, or of the hair follicles.

HYPERURESIS, (hyper, and ουρον, 'urine,') Enuresis—h. Aquosa, Diabetes.

HYPERURORRHÉE, (hyper, ουρον, 'urine, and ρρω, 'to flow,') Diabetes—h. Saccharine, Diabetes (mellitus.)

HYPERZOODYNAMIA, (hyper, ζωον, 'animal, and δυναμις, 'power,') Hypersthenia.

HYPEX'ODUS, (υπεξοδος, from υππο, and εξοδος, 'an exit,') An alvine discharge or flux.

HYPEZOCUS, (υππο, and ζωννυμα, 'to gird,') Diaphragm, Pleura. See Hypozoma.

HYPIA, (υψη,) Texture.

HYPIEMEA, gen. Hyphæ'matis, (υππο, and αιμα, 'blood,') Ecchymoma.

HYPIEMIA, Hypræmia.

HYPIEMATO'SIS, Hyphæmato'sis, (υππο, and αιματωσις, 'sanguification,') Morbidly diminished hæmatisis.—Sanguificatio'tio debil'ior.

HYPIEMOS, (υππο, and αιμα, 'blood,') Subcrenatus.

HYPIE, (υψη,) Texture.

HYPIEMIE, Hypræmia.

HYPIHYDROS, (υππο, and υδωρ, 'water,') Hydropic.

HYPINO'SIS, Hypoplas'ma, (υππο, and ισ, ινος, 'fibre,') The condition of the blood in which the quantity of fibrin is frequently less than in health, or if it amounts to the usual quantity, its proportion to the blood corpuscles is less than in health: the quantity of corpuscles is either absolutely increased or their proportion to the fibrin is larger than in healthy blood; the quantity of solid constituents is also frequently larger than in health. Such is the condition of the blood in fevers, hemorrhages, and polyæmia.

HYPINOTICAL, Hypnot'icus. Relating or appertaining to hypnosis.

HYPINÆSTHESIS, (υπνος, and αισθησις, 'feeling,') Somnolency.

HYPNAGO'GIC, Hypnago'gicus, (υπνος, and αγωγος, 'a leader,') Leading to sleep.

Hypnagogic hallucinations are those visions which occur when we are half asleep.

HYPNIA'TER, (F.) Hypniatre, (υπνος, and ιατρος, 'a physician,') A name given to deluded or designing persons who have affirmed that they were able, during their 'magnetic sleep,' to diagnose disease and its appropriate treatment.

HYPNIC, Hyp'nicus, (υπνικος, from υπνος.) An agent that affects sleep.

HYPNOBATES, (υπνος, and βαινω, 'to move,') Somnambulist.

HYPNOBADISIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBASIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATASIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNODES, (υπνωδης, from υπνος, 'sleep, and οδης.) One in a state of slumber or somnolency.

HYPNODIA, (υπνωδια,) Somnolency.

HYPNOLOG'ICA, Hypnolog'icæ, (υπνος, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of hygiene which treats of sleep.

HYPNOL'OGY, Hypnolog'ia, (F.) Hypnologicæ, (υπνος, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on sleep. The doctrine of sleep.

HYPNONERGIA, (υπνος, and ενεργεια, 'action,') Somnambulism.

HYPNOPHOB'IA, (υπνος, and φοβος, 'dread,') Dread of sleep. Incubus.

HYPNOPÆUS, (υπνοποιος, from υπνος, and ποιω, 'to make,') Somniferous.

HYPNOS, (υπνος,) Sleep.

HYPNOS'IS, (υπνος, and οσις.) The super-vention or production of sleep.

HYPNOSIS BIOMAGNETICA, Sleep, magnetic.

HYPNOTIC, Somniferous.

HYPNOTIQUE, Somniferous.

HYPNOTISM, (from υπνος,) see Magnetism, animal.

HYPNOTIZED, see Mesmerized.

HYPO, (υπο, 'sub,') 'under, in composition.

HYPO, Hypochondriasis.

HYPO.EMA, gen. Hypowæ'matis, (υππο, and αιμα, 'blood,') Ecchymoma.

HYPOÆMIA, Echymoma, Hæmæmia.

HYOPBLEPHARUM, (hypo, and βλεφαρον, eyelid.) Tumefaction under one or both eyelids. Also, an artificial eye, placed under the eyelids.

HYPOCAPNISMA, gen. Hypocapniæ, (ὑποκαπνισμα, from hypo, and καπνος, 'smoke,') Fumigation, Suffimentum.

HYPOCAPNISMUS, (ὑποκαπνισμος,) Fumigation.

HYPOCARODES, Subsopora, (ὑποκαρώδης, from hypo, καρος, 'a heavy sleep,' and odes,) One who is in a state approaching carus.

HYPOCATHARISIS, (ὑποκαθάρσις, from hypo, and καθάρσις, 'purgation,') Feeble purgation. Opposed to hypercatharsis.

HYPOCATHARTICUS, Laxative.

HYPOCAUSTUM, (ὑποκαυστον, from hypo, and καίω, 'I burn,') A name given to a stove, or any such contrivance, to sweat in. Also, a furnace in any subterraneous place, used for heating baths:—ὑποκαυστον, Balnearium, Vaporarium.

HYPOCEPHALÆUM, (ὑποκεφαλαίον, from hypo, and κεφαλή, 'head,') A pillow for the head.

HYPOCERCHALEON, (ὑποκερχαλεόν, from hypo, and κερχαλός, 'hoarse,') Roughness of the fauces affecting the voice.

HYPOCHLORETUM SULPHUROSUM, Sulphur chloride of.

HYPOCHLOROMELAS, sub pallidè nigricans, (hypo, χλωρός, 'green,' and μελας, 'black,') A term applied to one whose skin is pale, with a blackish hue.

HYPOCHONDRE, Hypochondrium, Subcartilaginæum, Re'gio Hypochondri'aca, Hypochondriacæ Re'gion, (ὑποχόνδριον, from hypo, and χόνδρος, 'a cartilage,') Each lateral and superior region of the abdomen is so called, because it is bounded by the cartilaginous margin of the false ribs, which forms the base of the chest. There is a right and a left hypochondrium.

HYPOCHONDRIAC, (ὑποχονδριακός,) Hypochondriacus, Hypochondriacal, Vaporosa, Vaporosa, (F.) Hypochondriacæ. Belonging to hypochondriasis. One labouring under hypochondriasis; hippel.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis, Hypochondrialgia, (hypochondre, and άλγος, 'pain,') Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIACUS, Hypochondriac.

HYPOCHONDRIASIS, Alu'ia seu Hullucinat'io hypochondriasis, Mor'bus hypochondriacus seu resiccatorius seu ructuosus, M'ltum hypochondriacum, Hypochondriaci'us, Hypochondriaci'smus, Dyspep'sia hypochondriasis, Pass'io seu Affect'io hypochondri'aca, Hullucinatio hypochondri'aca, Anathym'ia, Hypercin'sis gastrica, Hyperæsthes'ia p'ys'chica, Spl'enes, Melanchol'ia ner'cea seu flatu'ia seu hypochondri'aca, Suffoca'tio hypochondri'aca, Mor'bus flatuosus seu flatulentus seu erudit'io, Fo'mæ ventric'alis, Mirach'ia, (from Arab. mirach, 'the belly,') Morbus mirach'ialis, Hypochondri'um, Hyp'o, Hip, Spleen, Vapors, English Malady, Loc Sp'irit'ia, (F.) Hypochondrie, Maladie imaginaire ou Anglaise, Affection Vaporeuse, Vapors, V. de Rate. This disease is probably so called, from the circumstance of some hypochondriacs having felt an uneasy sensation in the hypochondriac regions. The disease seems really to be, as Pinel has classed it, a species of neurosis, and of mental alienation, which is observed in persons who in other respects are of sound judgment, but who reason erroneously on whatever concerns their own health. Hypochondriasis is characterized by disordered digestion, without fever or local lesion; flatulence; borborygmi; extreme increase of sensibility; palpitations; illusions of the senses: a succession of morbid feelings, which appear to simulate the greater part of diseases; panics: exaggerated uneasiness of various kinds; chiefly in what regards the health, &c. Indigestion has usually been considered the cause of hypochondriasis. They are, unquestionably, much connected with each other: but there is every reason to believe, that the seat of the affection is really, though functionally, in the brain. The disease almost always appears at the adult age, most commonly in irritable individuals; and in those exhausted, or rather in the habit of being exhausted, by mental labour, overwhelmed with domestic or public affairs, &c.

The treatment is almost entirely moral. The condition of the digestive function must, however, be accurately attended to.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRISM, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRUM, Hypochondriac.

HYPOCHOREMA, gen. Hypochoreætis, (ὑποχώραμα, from hypo, and χωρεω, 'to make vacant,') Excrement.

HYPOCHORESIS, (ὑποχώρασις,) Dejection, Defecation, Excrement.

HYPOCHORETICUS, Cathartic.

HYPOCHYMA, gen. Hypochym'atis, (ὑποχυμα, from hypo, and χυω, 'to pour,') Cataract.

HYPOCHYSIS HÆMATODES, (ὑποχυσίς, from hypo, and χυω, 'to pour,') Hæmophthalmia.

HYPOCISTIS, (ὑποκίστις,) Cytinus.

HYPOCLEPTICUM, (hypo, and κλεπω, 'I steal,') A chymical vessel, formerly used for separating oil from water.

HYPOCLYSIS, Hypoclystus, (ὑποκλύσις, and ὑποκλύω, from hypo, and κλύω, 'to wash out,') as by a clyster.) Cleansing by a clyster.

HYPOCÆLIS, (ὑποκαίλις,) Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCÆLIUM, (ὑποκαίλιον, from hypo, and καίλιον, 'abdomen,') Abdomen.

HYPOCÆLUM, Hypocoilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCOÏLON, Hypocoilon, Hypocoilum, (hypo, and καίλον, 'a cavity,') A cavity situate under the lower eyelid. The lower eyelid itself.

HYPOCOPHOSIS, (hypo, and κωφός, 'deaf,') Barrocia, Deafness.

HYPOCRANIUM (ΑΡΩΣΤΕΜΑ), (hypo, and κρανίον, 'the cranium,') A collection of pus between the cranium and dura mater.

HYPOCRATES, (hypo, and κρατος, 'strength,') Infirm.

HYPOCYLUM, Hypocoilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCYPHUS, (ὑποκυφός, from hypo, and κυφός, 'gibbous,') Slightly humpedbacked.

HYPOCYSTOTOMIA, (hypo, κύστις, 'bladder,' and τομή, 'section,') see Lithotomy.

HYPODERIS, (ὑποδερίς, from hypo, and δερίς, 'skin,') Epideris.

HYPODERMATOMY, Hypodermatom'ia, (hypo, δέρμα, 'the skin,' and τομή, 'incision,') The section of subcutaneous parts, as of tendons and muscles.

HYPODERMIC, Hypodermicus, (F.) Hypodermique, (hypo, and δέρμα, 'skin,') That which is under the skin,—as 'hypodermic medication,' (F.) Médication hypodermique; that which consists in the application of remedies—as morphia—under the skin.

HYPODERMIS, Clitoris, Epideris.

HYPODERRHIS, (see Hypoderis,) Epideris. Also, the lower and fore part of the neck, (from hypo, and δέρω, 'neck,')

HYPODESIS, or HYPODESIS, (ὑποδέσις, or ὑποδέσις, from hypo, and δέω, 'to bind,') see Bandage.

HYPODESMA, gen. Hypodesm'atis, (ὑποδέσμα, from hypo, and δέσσω, 'a bandage,') see Bandage.

HYPODYNAMIC, (hypo, and δυναμις, 'power,') Adynamic.

HYPODYNIA, (hypo, and δύω, 'pain,') Dolor mi'tis seu le'nis. A slight pain.

HYPOGALA, (hypo, and γάλα, 'milk,') Hypopyon.

HYPOGASTRALGIA, (hypogastrium, and άλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the hypogastrium.

HYPOGAS'TRIC, Hypogast'ricus, Hypogast'ricus, ('υπογασ'tριος.) (F.) Hypogastrique. Relating or belonging to the hypogastrium.

HYPOGASTRIC AR'TERY, A. Ili'aca inter'na, A. Ili'aca poste'rior, (F.) Artère hypogastrique, A. pelvienne—(Ch.) is the more internal of the two branches into which the primary iliac divides. It descends into the cavity of the pelvis, and gives off a considerable number of branches, which arise, at times, separately; at others, by common trunks. These branches are, 1. The posterior, i.e. the ilio-lumbar arteries, lateral, sacral, and gluteal. 2. The anterior, i.e. the umbilical, vesical, and obturator. 3. The interval,—the middle hemorrhoidal arteries, uterine, and vaginal in women. 4. The inferior, i.e. the ischiatric arteries, and internal pudic.

HYPOGASTRIC GAN'GLION. A large nervous ganglion, described by Dr. Robt. Lee, as seated on each side of the cervix uteri, immediately behind the ureter; which receives the greater number of the nerves of the hypogastric and sacral plexuses, and distributes branches to the uterus, vagina, bladder, and rectum.

HYPOGASTRIC OPERATION OF LITHOT'OMY, (F.) Traille hypogastrique. The high operation, or that practised above the pubes.

HYPOGASTRIC PLEX'US, Plexus hypogastrique or sous-mésentérique of Winslow, is situate at the lateral and posterior parts of the rectum and the bas fond of the bladder. It is formed by the sacral nerves and the inferior mesenteric plexus, and gives off numerous filaments, which accompany the arteries that pass to the rectum and genital organs.

HYPOGASTRIC VEIN, (F.) Veine hypogastrique, furnishes nearly the same branches.

HYPOGASTRION, ('υπογασ'tριον.) Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

HYPOGASTRIUM, Hypogast'rium, (hypo, and γαστρο, 'the stomach or belly;') Etron, Aræ'a, Stachys [?], Ven'ter i'mius, V. par'vus, Aquatic'ulus, Su'men, Ru'men; and the lower part of the abdomen. The Hypogastric re'gion, Re'gio hypogast'rica seu hypogast'ria, which extends as high as three fingers' breadth beneath the umbilicus, is divided into three secondary regions—one middle or pubic, and two lateral or inguinal.

HYPOGASTRIUM, Hypogastric.

HYPOGASTROCE'LE, (hypogastrium, and κηλη, 'a tumour.') Hernia in the hypogastric region, occurring through the separated fibres of the lower part of the linea alba. See Hernia, hypogastric.

HYPOGASTRODID'YMUS, Did'yimus Sym'pho'hypogast'ricus, Ischiopa'ges, (hypogastrium, and εἰσ'μος, 'a twin.') A monstrosity in which twins are united by the hypogastrium.

HYPOGASTRORRH'EXIS, (hypogastrium, and ῥήξις, 'rupture,') Eventration.

HYPOGLOSSA, Hypoglotlides.

HYPOGLOSSAL NERVE, Hypoglossus.

HYPOGLOSSIA, Hypoglotlides.

HYPOGLOSSADENI'TIS, (hypo, γλωσσα, 'tongue,' ἀδην, 'a gland,' and ιτις.) Inflamma'tio glandula'rum sublingua'lium. Inflammation of the sublingual gland.

HYPOGLOSSIDIA, Hypoglotlides.

HYPOGLOSSIS, ('υπογλωσσις,) Hypogloss'ium, Hypoglot'tia, Hypoglot'tia, (hypo, and γλωσσα, 'tongue,') The under surface of the tongue; anything under the tongue; and, hence, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSIUM, Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSUM, ('υπογλωσσον,) Ruscus hypoglossum, Ranula.

HYPOGLOS'SUS, ('υπογλωσσος.) That which is under the tongue.

HYPOGLOSSUS, Lingua'lis Me'dius, Hypogloss'al or Lingual or Gust'atory Nerve. (F.) Nerf Hypoglosse ou Grand Hypoglosse, Hypoglossien (Ch.), is the ninth pair of nerves, Par no'num, Ner'vus hypogloss'us seu lo'quens, of many anatomists. It arises by ten or twelve very fine filaments from the grooves, which separate the corpora pyramidalia from the corpora olivaria; issues from the cranium by the foramen condyloideum anterius; and divides, near the angle of the jaw, into two branches; the one, the cervica'lis descendens or descen'dens noni, which forms, with the cervical plexus, a large anastomotic arch, and furnishes branches to several of the muscles of the neck. The other, the lingual branch, is the continuation of the principal trunk, and gives its numerous filaments to the muscles of the tongue and pharynx. The ninth pair communicates motion to the muscles to which it is distributed.

HYPOGLOTTA, Hypoglossis, Hypoglotlides. HYPOGLOTTIDES (PIL'ULÆ,) Hypogloss'ia, Hypoglot'tia, Hypogloss'ia, Hypoglot'tia, Hypogloss'id'ia, Pil'ulæ sublingua'les. Pills placed under the tongue to dissolve there.

HYPOGLOTTIS, ('υπογλωττις,) Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLU'TIS, ('υπογλωττις,) (hypo, and γλωτος, 'the breech,') The lower and projecting part of the nates.

HYPOGNATHADEN, (hypo, γναθος, 'the jaw,' and ἀδην, 'a gland,') Submaxillary gland.

HYPOGNATHADENI'TIS, Hypogloss'adeni'tis, (hypognathaden, and ιτις.) Inflammation of the submaxillary gland.

HYPOHE'MA, gen. Hypohæ'matis, (hypo, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Effusion of blood into the chambers of the eye. It is generally absorbed in time.

HYPOHEMATOSIS, Hypohæmatisis.

HYPOHE'MIA, Hypæmia.

HYPOLEPSIOMANIA, (hypo, ληψις, 'a seizure,' and μανία,) Melancholy.

HYPO'MIA, (hypo, and ᾠμος, 'the shoulder,') That which lies under the shoulder, as the axilla.

HYPOMO'RIA, (hypo, and μωρια, 'folly,') Slight imbecility of mind, or slight delirium.

HYPONARTHÉCIE, Hyponarthe'cia, (hypo, and ναρθήξ, 'a splint,') A term used by M. Mayor for his mode of treating fractures by position only,—the limb resting upon a properly cushioned board or splint.

HYPONEU'RIA, (hypo, and νευρον, 'a nerve,') Morbidly diminished nervous energy.

HYPON'OMUS, (ὑπονομος, from hypo, and νομω, 'I feed,') Ulcus subtus depas'cens. A deep fistula or ulcer.

HYPON'YCHON, (hypo, and ονυξ, gen. ονυκος, 'a nail,') Echymot'ia Hyponychon. Effusion of blood under a nail.

HYPOPATH'IA, Subaffect'io, (hypo, and παθος, 'affection,') A disease of a slight character.

HYPOPAT'US, (hypo, and πατω, 'to go,') Dejection.

HYPOPE'DIUM, (hypo, and pes, 'the foot,') A cataplasm for the sole of the foot.

HYPOPH'ASIS, (hypo, and φαίνω, 'I appear,') The state of the eyes in which the white only is seen through the opening of the eyelids.

HYPOPHLEGMASIA, Subinflammatio.

HYPOPH'ORA, (hypo, and φερω, 'I carry,') Ulcus sinu'sum seu fiatulo'sum. A fistulous ulcer, also, a dejection.

HYPOPHOSPHITES, see Calcis hypophosphis.

HYPOPH'THALMIA, Hypopyon.

HYPOPH'THALMION, (hypo, and οφθαλμος, 'the eye,') That part under the eye where œdema generally commences in chronic diseases and in cachexia.

HYPOPHYSIS, (hypo, and φωω, 'to bring forth,') Cataract, Epigone—h. Cerebri, Pituitary gland.

HYPOPYON, see Hypopyon.

HYPOPITYS LANUGINO'SA, (hypo, and πitys, 'a pine tree,') American Pine-sap, Falsus

Beech-drops, Birds' Nest. Indigenous; flowering from June to August. Order, Ericaceæ. Used as a nerve in the form of the powdered root.

HYP'PIUM. ('ὑπιπιον,) (hyppo, and ωψ, 'eye,') The part of the face under the eye:—a black eye.

HYP'PICUM OS. Malaë os.
HYP'PLOASMA. gen. Hypoplasmatiss, (hyppo, and πλασσω, 'to form,') Hypinosis.

HYP'PLASTĒ'MA. (F.) Hypoplastiæ, (hyppo, πλαστικός, 'formative,' and αἷμα, 'blood,') Diminished plasticity of the blood.

HYP'OPLEURIUS, (hyppo, and πλευρα, 'a rib,') Pleura.

HYP'OP'DIA, Supplanta'lia, Suppeda'nea, (hyppo, and πους, 'the foot,') Remedies, as sinapisms, which are applied under the foot.

HYP'OP'YON, Hypopyum, Hypophthal'mia, Pyrophthal'mia, Emphy'eis seu Diarpy'eis seu Abscess'eus Oculi, Ocul'us purulent'us, Lunell'a, Hypop'ala, Hypop'yum lac'teum, Pyc'osis, Parop'osis Staphylo'ma purulentum; (hyppo, and πους, 'pus; because the pus is under the cornea,') This name has been given to small abscesses between the laminae of the cornea, as well as to different purulent collections in the chambers of the eye; hence, some pathologists have distinguished Hypop'yon of the chambers from Hypop'yon of the cor'nea. In abscesses of the chambers, the purulent matter is mixed with the aqueous humour, which it renders turbid; and is deposited particularly at the lower part of the eye; forming behind the cornea a kind of whitish crescent, that rises more or less before the pupil, and closes it entirely or in part. It requires the use of local and general antiphlogistics, and sorbafacients. At times, it is necessary to puncture the cornea and evacuate the pus.

Hyp'opion was used by Galen to signify "an effusion of blood under the eyelids and tunica conjunctiva, or under the lower eyelid." (Blancard.)

HYP'OPYUM LACTEUM. Hypopyon.
HYP'ORIN'ION, Hyporrhini'um, ('ὑπορρινιον, from hyppo, and ριν, 'the nose,') That part of the beard which grows beneath the nose. The mustaches. Also, the upper lip.

HYP'ORRHĀ'CHIS, ('ὑπορραχίς, from hyppo, and ραχίς, 'the spine, the back,') The hollow in the small of the back.

HYP'ORRHYSIS, (hyppo, and ῥω, 'to flow,') Defluxion, Prolapsus.

HYP'OSAP'RUS, Sub'putris, (hyppo, and σαπρος, 'putrid,') Putres'cens. Growing putrid; slightly putrid. Game, of various kinds, (F.) Viandes faisandées, is, at times, preferred in an incipient state of decomposition, which certainly renders it more digestible.

HYP'OSAR'CA, (hyppo, and σαρξ, 'flesh;') Hyposarcid'us. Anasarca. In the Nosologies of Linnæus and Cullen, it is synonymous with Physocoina.

HYP'OSARCIDIUS, Anasarca, Hyposarca.

HYP'OSARCO'SIS, (hyppo, and σαρκωσις, 'a fleshy growth,') A small, fleshy growth:—a wart.

HYP'OSIAGON, (hyppo, and σιγων, 'the jaw-bone,' 'lower jawbone,') Maxillary bone, inferior.

HYP'OSIAGONARTHRI'TIS, (hyposiagon, αρθρον, 'a joint,' and ιτις,) Inflammat'io artic'uli maxill'æ inferio'ria. Inflammation of the joint of the lower jaw.

HYP'OSIALADEN, (hyppo, σιαλον, 'saliva,' and αδην, 'a gland,') Submaxillary gland.

HYP'OSIALADENITIS, (hyposialaden, and ιτις,) Hypognathadenitis.

HYP'OSPA'DIA, Hypospadi'asis, (hyppo, and σπασω, 'I draw,') A malformation, in which the canal of the urethra, instead of opening at the apex of the glans, terminates at its base, or beneath the penis, at a greater or less distance from the symphysis pubis. When the orifice of the urethra is very near the root of the penis, the scrotum is divided, as it were, into two great labia; and this malformation has often been taken for a case of hermaphroditism. Hypospadia is ordinarily incurable; and an idea has been entertained that it is the cause of impotence. It is not exactly so; but it renders impregnation less probable.

HYP'OSPA'DIAS, Hypospadi'us, Hypospad'icus, Hypospad'ian, (F.) Hypospade. One affected with hypospadia.

HYP'OSPADIASIS, Hypospadia.
HYP'OSP'ATHIS'MUS, ('ὑποσπαθισμος, from hyppo, and σπαθιον, 'a ladle or spatula,') A surgical operation, with the ancients, in cases of severe 'defluxion to the eyes,' which consisted in incisions made in the scalp down to the bone, and the insertion of an instrument called a spath'ion or hypospathis'ter, to enable the intermediate parts to be divided. The precise character of the operation is not well described, and it is no longer known.

HYP'OSP'ATHISTER, see Hypospathismus.
HYP'OSPHAG'MA, gen. Hyposphag'matis, (hyppo, and σφαζω, 'I kill,') The coagulated blood, which is collected when an animal is killed and used for food. Also, an effusion of blood, especially under the conjunctiva.

HYP'OSP'ATHYLE, (hyppo, and σφαθλη, 'uvula,') Staphyloedema.

HYP'OSTAPHYLITIS, (hypostaphyle, and ιτις,) see Staphylitis.

HYP'OSTASIS, ('ὑποστασις, from hyppo, and στασις, 'the act of placing,') A morbid deposition in the body. Sediment.

HYP'OSTAT'IC, Hypostat'icus, (F.) Hypostatique, (hyppo, and στασις, 'stagnation,') Relating to hypostases, sediments or depositions.

HYP'OSTATIC HYP'ERE'MIA, Hyperémie or Congestion hypostatique. A congestion of blood in the vessels of a part, caused by its depending position.

HYP'OSTHENIA, (hyppo, and σθενος, 'strength,') Debility.

HYP'OSTHENIC, Controstimulant.

HYP'OSTHĒNIQUE, Controstimulant.

HYP'OSTROPHE, ('ὑποστροφή, from hyppo, and στροφω, 'I turn,') Act of a patient in turning himself. Also, a relapse or return of a disease.

HYP'OSTYPT'IC, Hypostyp'ticus, (hyppo, and στυψίς, 'constriction,') A feeble astringent.

HYP'OSYPH'ILIS, (hyppo, and syphilitis,) A mild form of syphilis.

HYP'OTHEMA, ('ὑποθεμα, from hyppo, and τιθημι, 'to place,') Suppository.

HYP'OTHĒNAR, Sub'vola, ('ὑποθεναρ, from hyppo, and θεναρ, 'the palm of the hand or sole of the foot,') Hypothenar Em'inance. The fleshy projection of the palmar surface of the hand, which corresponds with the little finger, and is supported by the fifth metacarpal bone. This eminence is formed of four muscles: the Palmaris brevis, Adductor seu Flexor brevis minimi digiti, and Opponens minimi digiti. The name Hypothenar has also been given to different muscles of the hand. The Hypothenar minimi dig'iti of Riolan comprehended the Adductor, Flexor brevis and Opponens minimi digiti; and his muscle, Hypoth'enar pol'l'icis, corresponded to the Adductor and a portion of the Flexor brevis pol'l'icis. Winslow called the Adductor minimi digiti, muscle petit hypothénar or hypothénar du petit doigt.

HYP'OTHĒNAR MINIMI DIGITI, Flexor parvus minimi digiti—h. Minor metacarpus, Adductor minimi digiti—h. Riolani, Flexor parvus minimi digiti.

HYPOTHETON, (hypo, and τιθεμι, 'to place,') Suppository.

HYPOTHYMIAMA, gen. Hypothyamia'matis, Fumigation.

HYPOTHYMIASIS, ('υποθυμιασις, from hypo, and θυμιαω, 'to fumigate,') Fumigation.

HYPO'TIUM (Emplastrum;) (hypo, and ous, gen. ωτος, 'the ear,') Emplastrum auricularè; a plaster applied behind or under the ear.

HYPOTROPE, ('υποτροπη, from hypo, and τροπω, 'to turn,') Relapse.

HYPOTROPH'IA, Hypotrophy, (hypo, and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Scanty nourishment or nutrition. Atrophy.

HYPOTROPIASMUS, ('υποτροπισμος, from hypo, and τροπω, 'to turn,') Relapse.

HYPOTRYGUS, (υποτρυγος, from hypo, and τρυξ, gen. ωρυγος, 'lees,') Feculent.

HYPOUCANNA, Ipecacuanha.

HYPOXEMIE, (hypo, oxygen, and αιμα, 'blood,') Asphyxia.

HYPOX'YS EREC'TA, Star'grass; (hypo, and ξυς, 'sharp,' because the pod is acute at the base [?]); indigenous; Order, Amaryllidaceæ. The root is eaten, and has been used as a vulnerary, and in chronic ulcers; and in ague.

HYPOZO'MA, gen. Hypozom'atis, ('υποζωμα, from hypo, and ζωωμνυ, 'I bind round;') Membrana succin'gens. A membrane or septum, as the mediastinum, diaphragm, &c.

HYPOCRAS, (see Hippocras.) Claret.

HYPSELOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYPSILODES, OS, ('υ, the Greek letter υ psi-ion.) Hyoides os.

HYPSILOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYPSONOSUS, ('υψος, 'height,' and νοσος, 'disease,') Puna.

HYP SOPH'ONUS, ('υψος, 'height,' and φωνη, 'voice,') One who has a clear high voice.

HYP SISIS, ('υψωσις, 'lifting on high,') Sublimation.

HYPTIASMA, ('υπτιαω, 'I lie with the face upwards,') Supination.

HYPTIAS'MUS, ('υπτιασμος.) Lying in a supine posture. Also, inversion of the stomach, as in nausea, regurgitation, or vomiting.

HYP U' LUS, ('υπουλος, from hypo, and ουλη, 'cicatrix,') Imperfectly cicatrized.

Ulcera hypu'la. Ulcers healed at the top, but not at the bottom.

HYRA'CEUM. A substance found in the Cape Colony, which Thunberg and other travellers mistook for a kind of bitumen, Stone sweat; but, according to Dr. Pappé, it is obtained from the urine of the Klipdas or Hy'rax Capen'sis, which, when passed, is thick and of a glutinous nature. The animal is in the habit of evacuating the urine at one spot, where its aqueous parts evaporate in the sun—the more tenacious adhering to the rock and hardening.

In smell, and medical properties, it most resembles castor, which, according to Dr. Pappé, it may replace. It is used by the Cape farmers in nervous and spasmodic affections.

HYRAX CAPENSIS, gen. Hy'racis, see Hyraceanum.

HYRTOCHEILIDES, (χειλος, 'a lip,') Labia pudendi. See Lips.

HYSSOPE, Hyssopus.

HYSSOP, Hyssopus—h. Hedge, Gratiola officinalis.

HYSSOPT'ES, ('υσσωπιτης.) Ancient name of a wine, of which hyssop was the chief ingredient, and which Dioscorides extolled in chronic inflammation of the chest. It was regarded as diuretic and emmenagogue.

HYSSO'PUS ('υσσωπος), from the Hebr. Azob, Caiani'ala, Hyssopus officinalis, Common hyssop,

Ysope, (F.) Hyssope. It has been chiefly used as an aromatic, stimulant and pectoral, in the form of infusion.

HYSTERA, ('υστερα,) Secundines, Uterus.

HYSTERAL'GIA, Hysterodynia, (F.) Fortraître, (hystero, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the uterus. See Metralgia. Irritable uterus, (F.) Névrologie de l'utérus. Hippocrates uses the epithet Hyster'al'ges, υστεραλγος, for any thing that excites uterine pain; and, especially, [?] for vinegar.

HYSTERALGIA CATARRHALIS, Metrorrhœuma—h. Galaetia, Phlegmatia alba dolens—h. Lochialis, Dyslochia—h. Rheumatica, Metrorrhœuma.

HYSTERAPOPNIXIS, (hystero, apo, and πνιγω, 'to strangle,') Angone.

HYSTERATRE'PSIA, Atretomet'ria, (hystero, and ατρεος, 'imperforate,') Imperforation of the os uteri.

HYSTERELCO'SIS, (hystero, ελκος, 'an ulcer,' and οσια.) Uteri exulceratio, Uteri ul'cus. Ulceration of the uterus.

HYSTERELO'SIS, (hystero, and ελειν, 'to turn,') Hysteroloxia.

HYSTEREMPHYSEMA, gen. Hysteremphys'e'matis, Physometra.

HYSTERIA, ('υστερα, 'the uterus,') H. va'ga, Hysteria'mus, Hysterism'us, Hyste'rias, Hysteri'asis, Hysteropath'ia, Hypercine'sia uteri'na seu hyste'ria, Uteri adsec'u'sus, Suffoca'tio hyste'rica seu uteri'na seu mul'ierum, Asth'ma u'teri, Præfo'ca'tio mat'ricis seu uteri'na, Synp'sia hyste'ria, Malum hyste'ricum seu hyste'ricohypochondriacum, Vapo'res uteri'ni, Affectio seu Pas'sio hyste'rica, Mor'bus hyste'ricus, Strangula'tio uteri'na seu Vul've, Va'pors, Hyste'ric, Hyste'ric fit, Mo'ther, (F.) Hystérie, Mal de Mère, Maladie imaginaire, Passion hystérique, Suffocation utérine, ou de matrice, Ascension de la matrice, Névrose utérine, Étranglement, Épilepsie utérine, Vapeurs, Manx ou Attaques de Nerfs. A species of neurosis, classed amongst the spasmi by Sauvages and Cullen, and in the Névroses de la génération, by Pinel. It received the name hysteria, because it was reputed to have its seat in the uterus. It generally occurs in paroxysms; the principal characters of which consist in alternate fits of laughing and crying, with a sensation as if a ball ascends from the hypogastrum towards the stomach, chest, and neck, producing a sense of strangulation. If the attack be violent, there is, sometimes, loss of consciousness (although the presence of consciousness generally distinguishes hysteria from epilepsy) and convulsions. The duration of the attacks is very variable. It appears to be dependent upon irregularity of nervous distribution in very impressible persons, and is not confined to the female; for well-marked cases of hysteria are occasionally met with in men. During the fit,—dashing cold water on the face, stimulants applied to the nose, or exhibited internally, and antispasmodics, form the therapeutical agents. Exercise, tranquillity of mind, amusing and agreeable occupations constitute the prophylactics. See Mania, dancing.

HYSTERICA CATALEPTICA, Catalepsy—h. Vaga, Hysteria.

HYSTERIAS, Hysteria.

HYSTERIASIS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICA, see Hysterical.

HYSTERICAL, Hyste'ricus, Va'pourish, Va'pouring, (F.) Hystérique. Relating to or affected with hysteria.

The word hysterica was used by Martial for a female affected with nymphomania or with strong sexual desires.

HYSTERICISMUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICUS, ('υστερικος, from 'υστερα, 'ute-rus,') 'Hysterical.

HYSTĒRIE, Hysteria.
HYSTERISMUS, Hysteria.
HYSTĒRITE, Metritis.
HYSTERITES, Hydrometra.
HYSTERITIS, (hystero, and itis.) Metritis.
HYSTERO, (from ὑστῆρα, ὑστῆρη, 'the uterus,') in composition, uterus.
HYSTEROCARCINOMA, Metrocarcinoma.
HYSTEROCELĒ, (hystero, and κηλη, 'hernia,')
Metrocelē, Her'nia uteri. Hernia of the womb, (F.)
Hernie de l'Uterus. This is a rare disease. The womb may protrude through the inguinal or the crural canal, or through the lower part of the line alba.
HYSTEROCELE ΝΥΔΑ, Prolapsus uteri.
HYSTEROCNESMUS, (hystero, and κνησμος,
'itching,') Pruritus of the uterus or genitals.
HYSTEROCOLICA, Colica uterina.
HYSTEROCRANIUM, (ὑστερος, 'behind,' and κρανιον, 'cranium,') Occiput.
HYSTEROCYESIS, (hystero, and κειν, 'to be pregnant,') Pregnancy.
HYSTEROCYSTIC, Hysterocysticus, (F.) Hys-
terocystique, (hystero, and κυστις, 'the bladder,') Relating to the uterus and bladder. Some authors have called Hysterocystic Retention of urine, that which is caused by the compression of the bladder by the uterus, during pregnancy.
HYSTEROCYSTOCELĒ, (hystero, κυστις, 'the bladder,' and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia of the uterus complicated with displacement of the bladder.
HYSTEROODYNIA, (hystero, and οδυνη, 'pain,')
Hysteralgia.
HYSTEROEDEMA, gen. Hysteroedematia, (hys- tero, and οίδημα, 'a swelling,') Hydrometra.
HYSTEROID, Hysteroïdes, Hysteroïdes, Hys- teroid'al, Hysteroïd'alis, (hysteria, and ειδος, 're-

'softness,') Softness of the uterus during pregnancy, which renders it liable to rupture in labour.
HYSTEROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.
HYSTEROMANIA, Nymphomania.
HYSTEROMETER, (hystero, and μετρον,
'measure,') See Sound, uterine.
HYSTĒROMĒTRE, Sound, uterine.
HYSTEROCHLIUM, (hystero, and μολιον,
'a lever,') Lever.
HYSTERON'CUS, (hystero, and γκως, 'tumour,')
Metron'cus, Hysteropty'ma, Metrophy'ma, Tu'mor u'teri. A tumour of the uterus.
HYSTEROPARALYSIS, Hysterople'gia, (hys- tero, and παράλυσις, 'paralysis,') Paralysis of the uterus.
HYSTEROPATHIA, (hystero, and παθος, 'af*fection,')* Disease or suffering in the uterus.
Also, hysteria, and deuteropathia.

HYSTEROPHYMA, (hystero, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Hystero'nous.
HYSTEROPHYSE, Hysteroophysis, Physome-
tra.
HYSTEROPI'YSIS, Hysteropty'ysis, (hystero, and πνεση, 'wind,') Distension of the uterus with air: Emphty'sia uteri.
HYSTEROPLĒGIA, (hystero, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Hystero'paralysis.
HYSTEROPI'NX, (hystero, and πιξ, 'suffocation,') Angone.
HYSTEROPLYPUS, Metro'plypus.
HYSTEROPEOPHIA, (hystero, and φοβος, 'a sound,') Physometra.
HYSTEROPTO'SIS, (hystero, and πτωσις, 'fall,')
Prolap'sus uteri. Also, Inver'sio uteri, Anat'rophē uteri. In a general sense, a protrusion of any part of the genital organs or of excrecences from them into the genital passages; Edopto'sia.
HYSTEROPTOSIS, Prolap'sus uteri—h. Vaginae,
Prolapsus vaginae.
HYSTERRRHAGIA SANGUINEA, (hystero, and ρρηγμα, 'to break forth,') Metro'rrhagia.
HYSTERRHĒXIS, (hystero, and ρηξις, 'rupture,') Uterus, rupture of the.
HYSTERRHĒA, (hystero, and ρηνω, 'to

HYSTEROSALPINX, gen. Hysterosalpin'gia, (hystero, and σαλπιξ, 'a trumpet,') Tube, Fallo- pian.
HYSTEROSCIRRHUS, Metro'scirrhus.
HYSTEROSCOPE, (hystero, and σκοπεω, 'I view,') A metallic mirror, used by Colombat de l'Isère, in inspecting the state of the os uteri, to throw the rays of a taper to the bottom of the speculum uteri.
HYSTEROSPASM'US, (hystero, and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Spasm of the uterus. Also, hysterical spasm.
HYSTEROSTOMA, gen. Hysterostomat'is, (hys- tero, and στομα, 'mouth,') Os uteri.
HYSTEROSTOMAT'OMUS, (F.) Hystérosto- matome, (hysterotoma, and τεμαίω, 'to cut,') An instrument invented by Couleury for dividing the os uteri, when it is important to deliver immediately, as in cases of convulsions.
HYSTEROSTOMIUM, (hystero, and στομα, 'mouth,') Os uteri.
HYSTEROSYNZESIS, (hystero, and συνζησις,
'sitting together,') Metro'synzesis.
HYSTĒROTKOTOMIA, (hystero, τοκος,
'parturition,' and τομη, 'section,') Cæsarean
section.
HYSTĒROTOME, (hystero, and τομη, 'section,')
Hysterotomus.
HYSTĒROTOM'IA, Hysterotomy, (F.) Hysté- rotomie. Cæsarean section. Also, dissection of the uterus.
HYSTĒROTOMOTOCIA, (hystero, τομη, 'section,' and τοκος, 'parturition,') Cæsarean section.
HYSTĒROTOMUS, Hysterotome, Metro'omus, Me'trotome, (hystero, and τομη, 'section,') An instrument for dividing the womb through the vagina. It is a kind of Bistouri ca l'é, and is intended to divide the cervix and os uteri.—Hys-
terostomat'omus.
HYSTĒROTISM'US, (hystero, and τρίβω, 'I gnash,') Spasmodic contraction of the uterus, especially of its mouth.
HYSTRIASIS, Hystriciasis.

IATRI'NĒ (iatriynē), Medicina. Also, a female practitioner of medicine, Med'ica, Mul'ier med'- ica. A doctress. A midwife.

IATRI'ON, (iatriōn), Iā'trion, Ietri'on, Medica- tr'ina. The house or office of a physician or surgeon. Also, the physician's fee or honorarium.

IATRIQUE, Medical.

IATROCHEMIA, (iatro, and chemia), Chymi-atria.

IATROCHYMIA, Chymiatría.

IATROGNOM'ICA, Iatrognom'icē, (iatro, and γινωσκω, 'I know.') A knowledge of medical objects.

IATROLEIPTES, Iatraleptes.

IATROLOG'IA, Iatrol'ogy, (iatro, and logos,
'a description.') A treatise on physic and physicians.

IATROMAN'TIS, (iatro, and μαντεια, 'divination.') A physician who is a soothsayer.

IATROMATHEMATICAL PHYSIC'IAN, Iatromathe- matic'ici, Iatronemath'ici, Mechanical physicians. A sect which flourished about the middle of the seventeenth century, and of which Borelli was the founder.

IATRON, (iatron), Iatron.

IATROPHYSICS, Physics, medical.

IATROS, (iartos), Iatrus.

IATROSOPHIS'TA, (iatros, and σοφιστης, 'one skilled in an art or science.') A learned, or thoroughly educated physician.

IATROTECH'NA, Iatrotech'nes, (iatrotech'nos, from iatro, and τεχνη, 'art.') A practical physician or surgeon.

IATROTECHNICE, Medicina, Therapeutics.

IATRUS, (iartos), Physician; also, a surgeon.

IBERIS, (iberis), Lepidium iberis.

IBE'RS AMA'RA, Bitter caud'lystif, (F.) Passa- rage, from Iberia, where it is indigenous. A small herbaceous plant, Ord. Cruciferae, indigenous in Europe, which was employed, of old, in gout, rheumatism, &c. The seeds have been used, in the dose of one to three grains, in asthma, bronchitis, dropsy, and hypertrophy of the heart. It is said to possess acro-narcotic properties; but it is not much used.

IBERIS BURSA PASTORIS, Thlaspi bursa—i.
Campestris, Thlaspi campestre—i. Sophia, Carda- mine pratensis.

IBICUIBA, Beeniba, Beeniba nux. A species of nut from Brazil, the emulsive kernel of which is ranked amongst balsamic remedies.

IBIS, (ibis). A bird held sacred by the Egyptians. When sick, it is asserted that it was wont to inject the water of the Nile into its fundament:
whence, according to Langius, was learned the use of glysters.

IBISCHA MISMALVA, Althæa.

IBISCUS, (ιβισκος), Althæa.

IBIXUMA, Saponaria.

ICE, (Sax. ir), Gla'cies, Fro'zen water, (F.)
Glacc. Iced water is much used internally, as the best refrigerant in fever. It is, also, applied externally, in cases of external inflammation, as well as in phrenitic and hernial affections, &c., in the form of the ice cap and ice cataplasms or ice poult- ices, formed by half filling a bladder with pounded ice.

ICE CAP, see Ice.

ICE COLD, Ice cold, (F.) Froid glacial. A very strong morbid sensation of cold, compared by the patient to that which would be produced by the application of pieces of ice.

ICE POULTICE, see Ice.

ICELAND, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Hot springs are found in every part of Iceland. The most noted of these is one called Geysir, two days' journey from Hecla, and near Skalholt. The diameter of the basin is 59 feet; and the height to which the water is thrown is often more than 100. The heat of the water is 212°.

ICEPLANT, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum, Monotropa uniflora.

ICH'NOS, (ichnos). The foot. The sole of the foot.
The heel.

ICHOR, (ichor), Ichor, Sa'nies, Sordes, Virus,
Pus malignum, Tubum. The serum of the blood.
A thin, aqueous, and acrid discharge. A corrupted humor.

ICHOROI'DES, (ichor, and ειδος, 'resemblance')
Ichoros.

ICH'OROUS, Ichorosus, Ichoroi'des, Sa'niosus,
Sa'niosus, (F.) Ichoreux, Sa'nieux. Belonging to or resembling ichor.

ICHORRHÆMIA, (ichor, and αιμα, 'blood.')
A diseased condition induced, according to Vir- chow, by the presence of corrupted or vitiated humors in the blood.

ICHOS, (ichos), Ichor.

ICHTHYA, (ιχθυα, 'a fishhook.') Hook, blunt.

ICHTHYO, (ιχθυς, gen. ιχθυος, 'a fish.') In composition, fish.

ICHTHYOCOL'LA, (ichthyo, and κolla, 'glue.')
Col'la Pis'cium, I'singlass, Fishglue, (F.) Ichthyo- colle, Colle de Poisson. A name given to the dried swimming bladder or sound of Acipen'ser hu'so, and other species of fish, which is almost wholly composed of gelatin, and is employed in medicine in the formation of nutritive jellies. It is, also, occasionally used in anatomical injections. The English Court Plaster is made with it. In Russia, the Acipenser is not the only genus from which isinglass is procured; it is also obtained from Si- lur'is Glanis, which Dr. Royle suggests to be the source of the Samoyr or Somoyr Isinglass of commerce. The sounds of the cod, ling, hake, &c.

yield it. From these it is made in New England; and, in England, is termed New York Isinglass.

ICHTHYOPHAGISTS, Ichthyoph'agi, (ἰχθυοφάγοι, from ichthyo, and φαγω, 'I eat.')(F.) Ichthyophages. People who feed habitually on fish;—generally the most uncivilized of mankind.

ICHTHYOPHAGOUS, (ἰχθυοφάγος,) Piscivorous.

ICHTHYOSE, Ichthyosis.

ICHTHYOSIS, (ἰχθυσ, 'a fish,') from the resemblance of the scales to those of a fish. Lepido'sis Ichthy'asis, L. Ichthyo'sis, Lepra Ichthyo'sis, Alvaras ni'gra (Arab.), Impeti'go excorticat'i'va, (F.) Ichthyose; Fishskin, Porc'upine Disease. A permanently harsh, dry, scaly, and, in some cases, almost horny texture of the integuments of the body, unconnected with internal disorder. Willan and Bateman have two varieties, I. simplex and I. cornua. Alibert has three, the I. nacrée or pearly, the I. coruée, and the I. pellagre or Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS PELLAGRA, Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS SEBA'CEA, Seba'ceous Ichthyo'sis.

A morbid incrustation of a concrete subaceous substance upon the surface of the epidermis, confounded, according to Mr. E. Wilson, with ichthyosis, to which it bears a close resemblance. In many cases there is neither redness nor heat, nor is the affection often accompanied by constitutional symptoms.

ICHTHYOTOX'ICUM, (ichthyo, and τοξικον, 'a poison,') Ich'thyius, fish poison.

ICHTHYIUS, Ichthyotoxicum.

ICICA ARACOUCHINI, (name in Guyana.)

Aracouchini is a balsam, extracted by incision from this tree in Guyana. The Galibis use it for healing wounds.

ICICA ICICARIBA, see Amyris elemifera.

ICTAR, (ικταρ,) Vulva.

ICTÈRE, Icterus—i. Bleu, Cyanopathy—i. des Nouveau-nés, Icterus infantum—i. Noire, Melæna.

ICTERIC, Ictericus.

ICTÉRICIE, Icterus.

ICTERICUS, (ικτερικος,) Antiicteric. Also, relating to, or resembling Icterus; Icter'ic, Icteroï'des, Ictero'des, (F.) Ictérique.

ICTERITIA ALBA, Chlorosis—i. Flava, Icterus—i. Rubea, Erysipelas—i. Rubra, Erysipelas.

ICTERODES, (ικτερωδής, from icterus and odes,) Ictericus.

ICTERUS, I. fla'vus seu ve'rus, (ικτερος, from ικτις, a species of weasel, whose eyes are yellow [?]. Icteros meant, with the ancients, a yellow bird, perhaps the Oriole.) Morbus arcuatus seu arquatus. Leseoli morbus (Paracelsus), Auru'go, Auri'go, Mor'bus re'gius seu Inte'olus, Cholelith'ia ic'terus, Cholihæ'mia, Cholæ'mia, Cholopla'nia, Oholo'sis, Dermatocolo'sis, Suffu'sio aurigin'o'sa seu fel'lis seu bi'lis, Icterit'ia seu icteric'ia fla'va. I'vus fla'vus seu icteroï'des, Cachex'ia icter'ica, Fel'lis suffu'sio seu obstruc'tio seu superfu'sio, Bil'ious Dys'crasy, Jau'n'dice, Yel'loice, Jau'ders, Jau'n'ders, (Sc.) Gul'schoch, (Prov.) Jo'nas, Yellot. (F.) Ictère, Ictéricie, Jau'nisse, Bile répandue. A disease, the principal symptom of which is yellowness of the skin and eyes, with white fæces and high-coloured urine. It admits of various causes: in fact, anything which can directly or indirectly obstruct the course of the bile, so that it is taken into the mass of blood, produces the yellowness of surface; the bile being separated by the kidneys, causes yellowness of urine, and its being prevented from reaching the intestine occasions the pale-coloured fæces. The prognosis, in ordinary cases, is favourable;—when complicated with hepatic disease, unfavorable. The treatment is simple:—an emetic or purgative, given occasionally so as to solicit the return of the bile to its ordinary channels; light tonics; unirritating diet; cheerful company, &c.

ICTERUS ALBUS, Chlorosis—i. Cæruleus, Cyanopathy.

ICTERUS INFAN'TUM, I. Neonatorum, Neotoc'iet'erus, Pædi'et'erus, Auri'go neophyto'rum, Yel'loic gum, Yellou'gouca, (F.) Ictère des nouveau-nés, is a common affection, and frequently dependent upon obstruction of the choledoch duct by the meconium. It requires time; and castor oil, occasionally.

ICTERUS MELAS, Melæna—i. Neonatorum, I. infantum—i. Niger, Melæna.

ICTERUS SATURNI'NUS, Lead jaundice. The earthy-yellow hue in saturnine cachexy.

ICTERUS VIR'IDIS, Green jaundice. Icterus when the skin is of a green or olive hue.

ICTODES FETIDUS, (from ικτις, 'a weasel,') Dracontium fetidum.

ICTUS, gen. Ictûs; 'a stroke or blow;' (from ικο, ictum, 'to strike,') Ple'gê, Pla'ga. Ictus sol'is, a stroke of the sun.—See Coup de soleil. Ictus, also, means the pulsation of an artery, and the sting of a bee or other insect.

ICTUS, Blow—i. Cordis, see Heart—i. Cordis et arteriarum, Pulse—i. Sanguinis, Apoplexy—i. Solis, Coup de soleil.

IDE'A, I'dea, (idea,) Ido'lum, Ideach [? Paracelsus], (F.) Idée, (from ιδω, 'I see.')

The image or representation of an object in the mind

IDEA, FIX'ED or PREDOMINANT, I'dea fix'a. Ideopeg'ma. Tension of the mind on one notion; often observed in insanity.

IDEA MORBI. Knowledge or idea of a disease.

IDEACH, Idea.

IDEAGENOUS, (idea, and γενεα, 'to generate,') Sentient.

IDE'AL, Idea'lis. Mental, notional, fancied.

Mor'bi idea'les. Ideal diseases. Diseases of the imagination.

IDEA'TION, Idea'tio. The establishment of a distinct mental representation or idea of an object.

IDÉE, Idea.

IDEN'TITY (PERSONAL), Iden'titas, (ἴ.) Identité, (idem, 'the same.')

Same'ness. It is sometimes a question in legal medicine to decide upon personal identity: that is, whether an individual be the same he represents himself to be. Physical marks form the great criteria.

IDEOL'OGY, Ideolog'ia, (idea, and λογος, 'a discourse,')

The science of ideas. Intellectual philosophy.

IDEOMOT'OR. A name given by Dr. Carpenter to muscular movements, the result of complete engrossment by an idea, which he regards as automatic, although originating in the cerebrum.

IDEOPEGMA, gen. Ideopeg'matis, (idea, and πηγμα, 'to fasten,')

Idea, fixed.

IDEOSYNCHYSIE, (idea, and συχysis, 'confusion,')

Delirium.

IDIAPOCAUSIS, (idea, apo, and καιω, 'I burn,')

Combustio, human.

IDIEMPRESIS, (idio, and εμπρησις, 'burning,')

Combustio, human.

IDIO, (from ιδιος,) in composition, proper, peculiar.

IDIOCRASIS, (idio, and κρασις, 'mixture,')

Idiosyncrasy.

IDIOCTONIA, (idio, and κτονος, 'murder,')

Suicide.

IDIOCY, Idiotism.

IDIOMIASMATA, see Miasm.

IDIOPATHIA, Idiopath'eia, Protopath'ia, Pro'prius affectus, Mor'bus idiopath'icus seu pro'prius seu prima'rius seu protopath'icus seu origina'lis, Ma'lum prima'rium, (idio, and παθες affection.) A primary disease; one not depending on any other.

IDIOPATHIC, Pro'prio hab'itu seu constitutione propria pendens, Idiopath'icus, Idiopathes. (F.) Idiopathique. Primary affections and their symptoms are so denominated.

IDIOPTCY, (idio, and opsis, 'vision,') Achromatopsia.

IDIOPTS, see Achromatopsia.

IDIOSYNCRASIA, Idiosyncrasy—i. Hæmorrhagia, Hæmatophilia—i. Olfactoria, Parosmia.

IDIOSYNCRASY, Idiocrasy, Idiosyncrasis, Idiosyncrastia, Idiopath'ia, Idiocrasis, Idiosyncrasis'ia, (F.) Idiosyncrasy, (idio, syn, 'with,' and crasis, 'mixture,') A peculiarity of constitution, in which one person is affected by an agent, which, in numerous others, would produce no effect. Thus, shell-fish, bitter almonds, produce urticaria in some, by virtue of their idiosyncrasies. Others faint at the sight of blood, &c.

ID'IOT, Idiota, (ἀίωτης, 'an ignorant person,') Now used for one who is fatuous, or who does not possess sufficient intellectual faculties for the social condition, and for preserving himself from danger,—Ho'mo fatuus, (Prov.) Dal'cop, Fond'ling, Hob'bil. In law, one who has been without understanding from his birth, and whom the law presumes to be never likely to attain any.

IDIOTIA, Idiotism—i. Endermica, Cretinism.

IDIOTIE, Idiotism.

ID'IOTISM, Idiotis'mus, Idiota'ia, Imbecill'itas ment'is; Mo'ria de'mens, Ana'a, Mo'ria, Moro'sis, Meio'sis, Fatu'itas, Amen'tia, Dement'ia natura'lis, Stupid'itas, Vecor'dia, Imbecill'itas Ingen'ii, Idiocy, Idiotey, Fatu'ity. (F.) Démence innée, Idiotisme, Idiotie, Apsychisme of Piorry. A species of unsound mind, characterized by more or less complete obliteration of the intellectual and moral faculties. It may supervene on mania and melancholia, when it is termed Dement'ia, but more commonly it depends upon original conformation. It may also be symptomatic of organic disease of the brain, which has come on after birth. Idiottism exists in various degrees. Some idiots are mere automata, exhibiting scarcely any sensibility to external impressions; others are capable of articulating a few words, and possess certain mental emotions to a limited extent. The physiognomy is usually vacant, step unsteady, and articulation imperfect or broken. The affection is almost always incurable; but it may often be palliated.

ID'IOTISME, Idiotism.

ID'IOTISMUS, Idiotism—i. Endemicus, Cretinism.

ID'IOTROPIA, (idio, and τροπω, 'to turn,') Idiosyncrasy.

IDOLUM, (εἰδωλον,) Hallucination, Idea.

IDROSIS, (ἰδρωσις, 'sweat,') Ephidrosis.

IETRIION, (ἰητριον, ἰητριον,) Iatrimon.

IF, Taxus baccata.

IFFIDES, Plumbi subcarbonas.

IGDE, (ἰγδρ) Mortar.

IGDIS, (ἰγδεις,) Mortar.

IGNATIA AMARA, ('bitterignatia,') Strychnos Ignat'ii, Ignatia'na Philippin'ica. Ord. Apocynaceae. The systematic name of the plant which affords St. Ignatius's Bean, Fa'ba In'dica seu Sancti Ignat'ii seu febrif'uga, (F.) Ignatie, Fève de Saint Ignace, Noix d'Igasur. The seeds, Ignat'ia (Ph. U. S.), are bitter and poisonous, containing strychnia, and only appear to differ from nux vomica in containing a larger proportion of that alkaloid.

IGNATIE, Ignatia amara.

IGNAVIA, ('laziness,' from in. priv. and gravis, 'industrialious,') Inertia—i. seu Ignavitas partium genitalium, Impotentia.

IGNIS, 'fire.' Hence:

IGNIS ACTUALIS, Cauterium—i. Animalis, Animal heat.

IGNIS CAL'IDUS. 'A hot fire.' A violent inflammation, about to degenerate into gangrene.

IGNIS COLUMELLE, Erysipelas.

IGNIS FRIG'IDUS. 'A cold fire.' Sphacelus.

IGNIS NATURALIS, Animal heat—i. Persicus, Anthrax, see Herpes zoster—i. Philosophicus, Phosphorus—i. Potentialis, see Cauterium—i. Sacer, Erysipelas, Herpes zoster—i. Sancti Antonii, Erysipelas.

IGNIS SAPIEN'TUM. The ancient name for the heat of horses' dung.

IGNIS SYLVAT'ICUS, I. sylvest'ris seu volat'icus seu vola'grius, Stroph'ulus sylvest'ris seu volat'icus, Wild'fire rash, (F.) Feu sauvage ou volage, Flamboise. Probably, the Porri'go larva'lis or Crusta lac'tea of infants. Also, a transient redness of the face and neck, sometimes observed in hysterical and chlorotic females.

IGNIS SYLVESTRIS, I. sylvaticus—i. Vitalis, Animal heat—i. Volagrius, I. sylvaticus—i. Volaticus, I. sylvaticus.

IGNIVOROUS, (ignis, and voro, 'I devour,') Pyrophagus.

IGNYE, (ἰγνυα,) Poples.

IGNYS, (ἰγνυς,) Poples.

IL, as a prefix, see Im.

ILAPHIS, Arctium lappa.

ILEA, Flanks.

ILEAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILEA DELPH'US, (ileum, and ἀδελφος, 'brother,') A double monster, united at the pelvis, and below.

ILECH, Y'lech, Pei'as, Pias'ter, Ytia'ter, Elias'ter, Pias'trum, Ilei'ados, Ilei'dos, Ilei'adum, Ili'adus. Terms used by Paracelsus to designate the first matter:—the beginning of every thing.

ILEIADOS, Ilech.

ILEIADUM, Ilech.

ILEIAS, Ilech.

ILEIDOS, Ilech.

ILEITIS, (F.) Péite, (ileo, and itis,) Inflammation of the ileum.

ILEO, in composition, ileum or ilium.

ILEOCE'CAL, Ileocec'alis. Relating to the ileum and cæcum,—as the ileocec'cal valve.

ILEOCHOLOSIS, (ileo, and χολη, 'bile,') Diarrhœa, bilious.

ILEOCOL'IC, Ileocol'icus, (F.) Péo-colique. Relating to the ileum and colon:—as the ileo-colic valve or valve of Bauhin.

ILEOCOLITIS, see Enteritis.

ILEODICLIDITE, (ileo, δικαις, gen. δικαιδος, 'a valve,' and itis,) see Typhus.

ILEOLOMBAIRE, Ileolumbar.

ILEOLUM'BAR, Ileolumba'lis, Iliolumba'ris, (F.) Néolombaire. Belonging to the ilium and lumbar region.

ILEOLUMBAR AR'TERY, Iliolumbar artery, Iliaco-muscular, (Ch.) is given off by the hypogastric, opposite the base of the sacrum. It ascends behind the psoas muscle, and divides into two branches;—an ascending and a transverse, which give off numerous ramifications to the neighbouring parts.

ILEOLUMBAR LIG'AMENT, Iliolumbar or Iliolumbover'tebral ligament, Vertebro-iliac ligament, is a broad, membraniform, triangular ligament, extending horizontally from the transverse process of the 5th lumbar vertebra to the upper and posterior part of the iliac crest. It unites the vertebral column with the psoas.

IL'EON, I'evon, E'i'leon, I'l'ium, Intesti'num circumvolutum, (ειλεω, 'to turn,' 'to twist,') Anatomists have given this name to the longest portion of the small intestine, which extends from the jejunum to the cæcum. It was so called from its forming a considerable number of convolutions.

ILEOPYRA, (ileo, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') see Typhus.

ILEOSIS, Ileus.

ILEOTYPHUS, see Typhus.

ILES, Flanks.

ILEUM, Ileon.

IL'EUS, Εἰλεός, (εἰλεός, from εἰλω, 'I twist,')

Col'ica Ileus seu spasmod'ica, Enterole'sia, Enterole'sis, Ileus spasmod'icus, Chordap'sus, Passio Il'aca, Iliac or Ileac Passion, Vol'vulus, Ile'o'sis, Misere'rè me'i, Convol'vulus, Tormentum, Intercep'tio Intestino'rum, Enterosten'o'sis volvulus, (F.) Colique de Miséricorde, C. de Miséré'rè, Passio iliaque. A disease, characterized by deep-seated pain in the abdomen, stercoraceous vomiting, and obstinate constipation. It is occasioned by hernia or other obstruction to the passage of the fæces through a part of the intestinal canal, Enterosten'o'sis. The term Ileus has been applied to various affections—to simple nervous colic, intussusception, and to strangulation of the small intestine, &c. Various remedies have been employed;—the majority for the purpose of forcing alvine evacuations,—as purgatives, in draught, pill, or glyster; suppositories, tobacco glysters; pure mercury; leaden bullets; antispasmodics and narcotics; blisters to the epigastrium; ice by the mouth, or injected into the rectum. Some of these have, occasionally, succeeded,—especially the tobacco glyster, and ice to the tumour, where the disease has been occasioned by strangulated hernia. It is very dangerous.

ILEUS FLAVUS, Icterus—i. Icteroides, Icterus—i. Inflammatorius, Enteritis.

ILEX AQUIFOLIUM, gen. Ilicis. The systematic name of the Common Holly, Aquifolium, Agrifolium, πρινος of the ancients [?]. (Prov.) Hol'len, (Sc.) Hol'yn, Hol'ene, (F.) Houx, H. commun ou Chêne vert. Ord. Aquifoliaceæ. The leaves of this plant have been recommended as tonic, astringent, and antiseptic, and have been prescribed in atonic gout, intermittents, dyspepsia, &c. Il'icine, the active principle, has also been advised. It is obtained by dissolving the alcoholic extract of the leaves of the holly in water, and successively treating it with the subacetate of lead, sulphuric acid, and carbonate of lime. The filtered and evaporated product is then dissolved in alcohol; and the mixture filtered and evaporated in shallow vessels.

ILEX CASSINE, Ilex vomitoria.

ILEX MA'JOR. From the berries of this tree, called by the Spaniards Bellotas, a juice may be expressed, which forms a slightly astringent emulsion with water, and has been recommended by some Spanish physicians in humid cough, hæmoptysis, &c.

ILEX MATE, Ilex paraguensis.

ILEX OPA'CA, American Holly, grows throughout the Atlantic portion of the United States. It is said to possess the same properties as the European variety.

ILEX PARAGUEN'SIS, Vibur'num lævigatum seu Cassinoides, Cassi'nè Pera'gua seu Carolinia'na, I. Matè; a native of Paraguay. It affords the celebrated Mattee or Matè, Folia Apalachines seu Pera'gna, which is drunk in place of the Chinese tea by the people of Paraguay. By M. Lenoble, of Montevideo, the mate is referred to Psora'lea glandulosa.

ILEX VOMITO'RIA, I. Cassi'ne, Cassi'na, Dahoon' hol'y, Apalach'inè Gal'lis, Southsea Tea, Ev'ergreen Cassi'nè, Cassè'na, Yaupon, Yopon, (F.) Thé des Apalaches, Houx Apalachine, Apalachine, Thé de la Mer du Snd. A tree, indigenous in the southern parts of the United States. The leaves, when dried, are aromatic, stimulant, stomachic, and expectorant, and are used as a tea. When fresh, they are emetic and cathartic.

ILIA, Flanks.

IL'IAC, Il'iacus, Il'ial, (F.) Iliaque, (from ilia.) Relating to, or connected with, the flanks.

ILIAC AR'TERIES, Arte'riæ Il'iacæ. This term has been given to several arteries. The Primary Iliacs, (F.) A. Iliacæ primitivæ, — A. Pelvicurales, (Ch.) arise from the bifurcation of the aorta, opposite the body of the 4th lumbar vertebra, and descend, in a divergent manner; until, opposite the sacro-iliac symphysis, they divide into two considerable trunks,—the internal Iliac or hypogastric (which see), and the external Iliac—Portio Iliaque de la crurale, (Ch.) This proceeds from the sacro-iliac juncture as far as the crural arch, when it assumes the name Femoral Artery. Before passing under the arch it gives off two pretty considerable branches,—the Epigastric, and the Circumflex'a Il'ii. This last, which is called, also, anterior Iliac by some anatomists, — Circumflexe de l'Ilium (Ch.)—leaves the external iliac at the crural arch. It ascends along the outer edge of the iliacus muscle, and divides into two branches—an internal and an external.

The Iliaca Inter'na M'ior seu Il'lumba'lis is a small artery, which sometimes arises from the hypogastric; at others, from the beginning of the gluteal. It is sent, chiefly, to the psoas and iliacus internus muscles.

ILIAC CREST, Crist'a Il'ii, is the upper margin of the ilium. (F.) Crête Iliaque. It is very thick, and curved like the Italic S. It affords attachment to the broad muscles of the abdomen.

ILIAC FO'SÆ are two in number; the internal, the depression presented by the ilium on its interior, and at the upper part in which the Iliacus internus is lodged:—and the external, an excavation on the outer surface of the same bone, occupied by the Glutæi muscles.

ILIAC MUS'CLE, INTER'NAL, Il'iacus internus Muscle, Il'iacus, Iliaco-trochantérien (Ch.); Femur moven'tium sept'imus, Iliac muscle, is situated in the fossa iliaca, and at the anterior and superior part of the thigh. It is broad, radiated, triangular; and is attached, above, to the two upper thirds of the fossa iliaca, and to the internal part of the iliac crest:—below, it terminates by a tendon, which is common to it and the psoas magnus, and is fixed into the lesser trochanter. When this muscle contracts, it bends the pelvis on the thigh outwards, and prevents the trunk from falling backwards.

ILIAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILIAC RE'GIONS, Regio'nes il'iacæ, Inan'ia, are the sides of the abdomen between the ribs and the hips.

ILIAC SPINES, Spi'nous Proc'esses of the Il'ium, are four in number. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. Of the anterior, one is superior. It bounds the crista ilii anteriorly, and affords origin to the sartorius muscle. The other is inferior, and receives the tendinous origin of the rectus femoris.

The two Posterior Iliac Spines are divided, like the anterior, into superior and inferior. They afford insertion to strong ligaments, which unite the ilium with the sacrum.

ILIACO-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Iliacus internus.

ILIACUS, Iliac muscle, internal—i. Externus Pyramidalis.

ILIADUS, Ilech.

ILIAL, Iliac.

ILIASTER, Ilech.

ILIASTRUM, Ilech.

ILINGOS, (ιλιγγος.) Vertigo.

ILIO. In composition, relating or appertaining to the ilion or ileon.

ILIO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Aponévrois-fémoral, Fascia lata muscle—i. Costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Cresti-tibial, Sartorius—i. Femoral, Coxofemoral—i. Hypogastricus (nervus), Musculocutaneous nerve, superior—i. Inguinal, Musculocutaneous nerve, inferior—i. Ischii-trochantérien, Glutæus minimus—i. Lombi-costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Lombo-costo-abdominal, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Lumbalis, Iliolumbar, see Iliac arteries—i. Lumbovertebral ligament, Iliolumbar-ligament.

ILIOPECTINEA, Ileopectinea, (F.) Ilio-pectiné, Ilio-pectineal. Belonging to the ilium and to the pecten or pubis.

ILIOPECTINEAL EM'INENCE is so called from being formed by the junction of the ramus of the ilium with that of the pubis. It affords attachment to the psoas minor.

ILIOPECTINEA LIN'EA, Línea innomina'ta, is the projecting line or ridge of the ilium and pubis, which forms part of the brim of the pelvis.

ILIOPECTINEAL, Sartorius.

ILIOPSOIT'IS, (ilio, ψοαί, 'the loins, and itis.) Inflammation of the ilium and psoas muscle.

ILIO-PUBO-COSTO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus externus abdominis—i. Rotulien, Rectus femoris—i. Sacral, Sacro-iliac—i. Sacral articulation, Sacro-iliac articulation—i. Sacro-fémoral, Glutæus major—i. Scrotal nerve, Musculo-cutaneous, superior—i. Trochantérien, Glutæus medius—i. Trochantérien petit, Glutæus minimus.

IL'ION, I'ium. I'veum, Haunch or Hip bone. The largest of the three bones which constitute the os innominatum in the fœtus and child. (It was probably so called from its seeming to support the intestine ilion; or, perhaps, because its crest is curved upon itself, from ειλεω, 'I twist,' 'I roll.') This portion of the os innominatum is usually so called in the adult. The posterior surface is called Dorsum, the internal Venter. The upper semicircular edge is the Crista or Spine, at the anterior part of which is the anterior and superior spinous process; and, below, the anterior and inferior spinous process. At the back part of the spine are two spinous processes, the posterior and superior, and posterior and inferior. See Iliac spines.

ILITHY'IA, (Ειλιθυια), Luci'na, Juno Lucina. The goddess who presided over parturient females, with the Greeks and Romans.

IL'UM, Ileum, Ilium.

IL'KESTON, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Ilkeston is in Derbyshire, England, about eight miles from Nottingham. The water contains carbonate of lime and soda, chloride of calcium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of soda, carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid, and a little iron.

ILL, Sick.

ILLACRYMATIO, (il, and lacryma, 'a tear,') Epiphora.

ILLECEBRA, (from illicere, 'to allure,') Sedum—i. Major, Sedum telephium.

ILLECEBRUM POLY-GONOÏDES, Achyrantes repens—i. Vermiculare, Sedum.

ILLEGITIMATE, Illegit'imus, (F.) Illegitime, (il, and legitimus, (lex, legis, 'law,') 'legitimate,') Bastard. That which is contrary to law: which has not the conditions required by law, as an illegitimate birth—one out of wedlock; base-born, love-begot, love-child.

ILLEGITIMATE or BAST'ARD is also applied to diseases—as to fevers, whose progress is anomalous. See False.

ILLI, (ιλλοι), see Strabismus.

ILLIC'IUM ANISA'TUM, (illicere, 'to allure,') Yellowflowered An'ise, An'iseed Tree, Star Anise, An'ism stella'tum seu Sinen'se, Se'men Ba'dian, (F.) Anis de la Chine, A. étoilé, Ba'diane. Ord. Magnoliacæ. Scr. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The seeds are used like the ani-seed. The same tree is supposed to furnish the aromatic bark called Cortex An'isi Stella'ti, Cortex La'cola.

Illicium Anisatum is said to furnish much of the so-called Oil of An'ise, used in the United States.

ILLICUM FLORIDA'NUM, Florida An'ise Tree, Star Anise, Sweet Laurel. An evergreen shrub, the bark, leaves, &c., of which have a spicy odour like anise, and might be used for it.

ILLICUM PARVIFLO'RUM, a shrub of the hilly regions of Georgia and Carolina, has a flavour closely resembling that of saffraas root.

ILLIDES, (ιλλος, gen. ιλλιδος, 'one who squints,') See Strabismus.

ILLINITIO, (il, and lino, litum, 'to anoint,') Inunction.

ILLISIO, (il, and ludere, 'to strike violently,') Enthlasis.

ILLITIO, (il, and lino, litum, 'to anoint,') Inunction.

ILLITUS, Inunction.

ILLNESS, Disease—i. Monthly, see Menses.

ILLOS, (ιλλος,) Eye, Strabismus.

ILLO'SIS, Ilo'sis, (from illos, and osis.) Distortion of the eyes. Strabismus.

ILLUSIO, (il, and ludere, lusum, 'to play,') Illusion—i. Sensûs, Hallucination.

ILLUSION, Hallucination.

ILLUTAMENTUM, see Illutatio.

ILLUTA'TIO, (il, and lutum, 'mud,') A word used by the ancients for the act of covering any part of the body with mud—illutamentum—with therapeutical views.

ILLOSIS, Illosis.

ILOTS DU FOIE, ('Islets of the Liver,') see Liver.

IM, IN, IR. In composition, generally mean in; occasionally, however, they have the privative sense of un.

IMAGINA'TION, Imaginatio, Figura'tio, Phanta'sia, Dienoö'ma, (imago, gen. imag'inis, 'image,') The faculty of forming in the mind an assemblage of images and combinations of ideas which are not always in direct connection with external objects.

IMBALSAMATION, Embalming.

IMBECIL'ITY, Imbecill'itas, Stupid'itas, Hebetudo an'imi, Oligopsych'ia, (F.) Imbecillité. Weakness, especially of the intellect; incoherency; Imbecill'itas mentis.

IMBECILLIS, Infirm.

IMBECILLITAS, Imbecility—i. Ingenii, Idiostism, Imbecility—i. Mentis, Idiostism, Imbecility—i. Ventriculi, Gasterasthenia.

IMBELLIS AD VENEREM, ('powerless for venery,') Frigid.

IMBER'BIS, Imber'bns, Agenei'os, Apo'gon, (im, and barba, 'beard,') Devoid of beard, beardless.

IMBIBITIO, (imbibere (in, and bibere), 'to drink, to imbibe,') Absorption, Imbibition.

IMBIBIT'ION, Imbibit'io, Emp'osis, Aspiratio. The action by which a body becomes penetrated by a liquid. See Endosmose. The reverse action has been called Exbibition. Many of the phenomena of absorption are owing to imbibition.

IMBIBITION, DOUBLE, Endosmose.

IMBOWELLING, Exenterismus.

IMBEX ('a tile,') NARIUM, Septum narium.

IMBRICATA SAXATILIS, Lichen saxatilis.

IMBRICATED, Imbricatus, (F.) Imbriqué; (imbrex, 'a tile,') Placed over each other like the tiles of a roof.

IMMERSUS, (im, and mergere, mersum, 'to dip,') because hidden, as it were? Subscapularis muscle.

IM'MINENCE, Imminen'tia, (imminea (im, and mineo, ('to hang over.') Staying over or upon; impending. Some authors have designated by this term the period which precedes the invasion of a disease, when certain indications foretell its approach.

IMMINENCE MORBIDE, Diathesis, Predisposition.

IMMISSIO CATHETERIS, (im, and mittere, missum, 'to send.') Catheterismus.

IMMISSOR, Catheter.

IMMOBILITAS, (im, movere, 'to move,' and habilis, 'able.') Acinesia—i. Pupillæ, Amaurosis.

IMMODERANTIA, (im, and moderari, 'to be moderate.') Intemperance.

IMMODERATIO, Intemperance.

IMMOVABLE APPARATUS, see Apparatus, immovable.

IMMUTANS, (im, and mutare, 'to change.') Alterative.

IMPACTED, (impingere (in, and pingere, pac-tum.) 'to drive in,' 'to strike against.') Wedged.

IMPAC'TION, Impac'tio. A collision. A fracture of the cranium, ribs, or sternum, with depression of some of the fragments and projection of others externally. See Epiepsia.

IMPATIENS BALSAMINA, Bal'sam weed, Touch me not, (called from the sudden bursting of the pods when touched.) Ord. Balsaminaceæ. This probably resembles the other species in its properties.

IMPATIENS FULVA and I. PAL'LIDA, Touch me not, Jew'el weed, Bal'sam weed, Slip'pers, Cell-andine, Quick in the hand, Weath'ercocks, Snop-weed. Indigenous plants, having tender, juicy, almost transparent stems, and yellow flowers, which appear in July and August. They are found in low, moist ground, in every part of the Union. The properties are probably the same as those of

IMPATIENS NOLME TAN'GERE of Europe, which has an acrid taste, and acts as an emetic, cathartic, and diuretic.

IMPATIENTIA VESICÆ, (im, and patior, passus, 'to suffer.') Cysterethismus.

IMPEDIMENTUM, ('obstruction,') Embpragma.

IMPÉRATOIRE, Imperatoria.

IMPERATORIA, (from imperare, imperatum, 'to command;' from its commanding virtues.) I. Ostru'thium, Seli'num ostru'thium seu Imperato'ria, Angel'ica officina'lis, Astruthium, Ostruthium, Astran'tia, Magistra'ntia, Mast'ertorc; (old F.) Anstruche, Impératoire. Ord. Umbelliferæ. The roots of this plant were formerly considered divi-num reme'dium. They are merely aromatic and bitter, and are not used.

IMPERATORIA SYLVESTRIS, Angelica sylvestris.

IMPERFORATE, (im, per, 'through,' and forare, 'to bore.') Atretus.

IMPERFORATIO, Imperforation—i. Ani, Atresia ani adnata, Proctatresia—i. Pupillæ, Synezisis—i. Uteri, Metratresia.

IMPERFORATIO, Imperforatio, Atre'sia, Atretis'mus. Absence of a natural aperture; as of the mouth, anus, vulva, nostrils, &c. It is congenital, being dependent upon faulty conformation.

IMPERFORATION DE L'ANUS, Atresia ani adnata.

IMPERIAL. A pleasant, cooling drink, formed of bitartrate of potassa  $\zeta$ ss; one lemon, cut into slices; white sugar lbs; and water Oij. Let the mixture stand for half an hour, and strain.

IMPERIUM, ('an order,') Prescription.

IMPETIGINOSITAS, Impetigo.

IMPETIG'INOSUS, Impetiginosus, (F.) Impé-tigineux. Having the nature of, or relating to, impetigo.

IMPETIG'O, gen. Impetig'iniis, (impeto, 'I invade.') Impetiginositas, Dar'ta, Der'bia, Im'petas, Peti'go, Ecpye'sis seu Phly'sis irp'eti'go, Le'pra Squamo'sa, Melita'graria, Runn'ing Scall or Tel'ter, Crust'ed, Pust'ular or Hu'mid Tetter or Scall, Con'rap, (F.) Dartre, D. crustaceæ ou croû-teuse, Lèpre humide. A word used in various acceptations. With some writers it is synonymous with itch. In others, it means a variety of herpes. Sauvages employs it as a generic term, under which he comprises syphilis, scorbutus, rachitis, elephantiasis, the itch, tinea, serofula, &c. It forms, also, a genus in the class Cochæxiæ of Cullen. In Bateman, it is the first genus of the 5th order, Pustule, and is defined—the humid or run-ning tetter; consisting of small pustules denominated Psudra'cia. It is unaccompanied by fever; not contagious, or communicable by inoculation. He has five species:—the I. figura'ta, I. spar'sa, I. erysipelato'des, I. scab'ida, and I. ro'dens. See Psoriasis.

IMPETIGO EXCORTICATIVA, Ichthyosis—i. Figurata, Porrigo lupinosa—i. Pellagra, Pellagra—i. Ulcerata, Zerna.

IMPETUM FACIENS, ('impulse making,') Enormon.

IMPETUS, Impetigo, Paroxysm.

IMPLACENTAL, see Placenta.

IMPLICATIONES RETICULARES NERVORUM, ('reticulated entwining of nerves,') Plexus nervorum.

IMPLIC'ITI MORBI, Implicati seu compli-cati Morbi, (im, and plico, 'to fold,') Diseases which exist in an organ, and produce, concurrently, disorders in other organs.

IMPLUVIUM, (im, and pluere, 'to rain,') Embrocation; Bath, shower.

IMPOSTEM. (corr. from apostem. [?]) Abscess.

IMPOSTHUME, Abscess.

IMPOTENCE, Acrati'a, Impotentia, I. generan'di, Agene'sia, Age'ne'sis, Igno'via seu Ignav'itas par'tium genit'alium, (F.) Impuissance; (im, and potens, 'able,') Loss of power over one or more of the members. Commonly, it means want of sexual vigor; incapacity for copulation, and chiefly on the part of the male. Astys'ia, Astyp'h'ia, Ayno'dia, Adyna'mia viri'lis. It has also been used synonymously with sterility. Impotence may be absolute or relative, constitutional or local, direct or indirect, permanent or temporary.

IMPOTENTIA, Adynamia, Impotence—i. Generandi, Impotence.

IMPOV'ERISHED, Effe'tus, Depau'peratus, (F.) Appau'ri. ('Having become poor;') originally from (L.) pauper, (F.) pauvre, 'poor,') The Humorists applied this epithet to a humour deprived of a part of its constituents, and particularly to the blood. This fluid was considered to be impoverished when it was pale, without the proper consistence, and abounding in serum. It was, on the contrary, rich, in their opinion, when of a scarlet colour; possessing due consistence; when it coagulated promptly, and the quantity of serum, compared with that of the clot, was by no means considerable.

IMPRÆGNATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPREGNATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPRESSIBILITY, (impressio, and habilis, 'able,') See Sensibility—i. Great, Hyperes-thesis.

IMPRES'SION, Impres'sio (in, and premere, pressum, 'to press,') Pros'bolæ, (F.) Empr'inte. A more or less deep indentation which certain organs seem to make on others. Inequalities observable on the bones, which appear to be made by the subjacent organs.

IMPRESSIONS DIG'ITAL, Impressio'nes digita'te cran'ii, Fos'sæ digita'les, are the depressions of various forms, observable at the inner surface of the cranium, which look at first view as if they were made with the fingers.

IMPRESSIONABILITÉ, see Sensibility.

IMPU'BER, Impu'bes, Impu'bis, Ane'bus, Capilla'tus, (F.) Impubere, (in, and puber, 'at the age of puberty.')

One who has not attained the age of puberty.

IMPUBES, Impuber.

IMPUDICUS, (in, and pu'dicus, 'modest.')

See Digitus.

IMPU'ISSANCE, (in, and pu'issance, 'power,' from posse, 'to be able.')

Impotence.

IMPULSE DIASTOLIC, (in, and pellere, pubsum, 'to drive.')

Impulsus diastolicus, Back stroke of the heart. A jog or stroke which has been termed the 'back stroke,' felt at the end of each pulsation, and which would seem to be owing to the reëlling of the ventricles.

IMPULSE OF THE HEART, see Heart.

IMPULSION DU CŒUR, see Heart.

IMPURITATES ALVINÆ, (in, and purus, 'pure.')

Fæces.

IMPURITIES, Acatarsia.

IN, in composition, see Im.

INANIA, (inanis, 'empty.')

Iliac regions.

INAN'IMATE, Inanimatus, (F.) Inanimé. Not animated or possessed of life.

INANITIATED, (from inanire, inanimus, 'to empty.')

See Inanitation.

INANTIA'TION, Inantia'tio. The act of being exhausted for want of nourishment. One so exhausted is said to be inani'tiated.

INANIT'ION, Inanit'io, Inan'itas, Ceno'sis. Exhaustion for want of nourishment. To die from inanition is to die from exhaustion.

INAPPETENTIA, (in, and appeto, 'to desire.')

Anorexia, Dysorexia.

INARTICULATIO, (in, and articulus, 'a joint.')

Eanarthrosis.

INAURA'TION, Inaura'tio, (in, and aurum, 'gold.')

The gilding of pills or boluses.

INCANTAMENTUM, (in, and cantare, cantatum, 'to sing,'—for example, a magical song.)

Charm.

INCANTA'TION, Incanta'tio, Incantamen'tum, Epo'dé. A mode of curing diseases by charms, &c., defended by Paracelsus, Van Helmont, and others.

INCARCERA'TIO, (in, 'in,' and carcer, 'prison.')

Chatonnement, Incarceration—i. Intestinorum, Enteroprostole—i. Intestinorum interna, Enteremphaxis.

INCARCERA'TION, Incarceratio. Hernia is said to be 'incarcerated,' (F.) Incarcéré, Hernia incarcerata, when, owing to constriction about the neck of the hernial sac or elsewhere, it cannot be reduced with facility. Incarceration is sometimes used in the same sense as strangulation.

INCAR'NANS, Incarnat'ivus, Sarco'ticus, Pleuro'ticus, Anapleuro'ticus, Sarco'tic, (F.) Incarnatif, Plérotique, (in, and caro, gen. carnis, 'flesh.')

Medicines which were fancied to promote the regeneration of the flesh. Certain bandages and sutures have also been so called.

INCARNATIF, Incarnans.

INCARNATIO, Incarnation—i. Unguim, Onychogryphosis.

INCARNA'TION, Incarna'tio. Growth of flesh or granulations.

INCARNATUS, Carneous.

INCEN'DIUM, (incendere, incensum, (in, and andere, 'to burn.')

Pyrex'ia, Cau'sis, Phlogo'nis. A burning fever or any burning heat. Incendium febrile, Incensio. Inflammation, Phlegmon.

INCENDIUM SPONTANEUM, Combustion, human.

INCENSIO, Incendium.

INCENTIVUM, Stimulant.

INCERA'TION, Incera'tio, Eucero'sis, (in, and cera, 'wax.')

The act of incorporating wax with some other body; or, rather, the operation whose object is to communicate to a dry substance the consistence of wax.

INCERNIC'ULUM, (incernere (in, and cernere, 'to sift.')

A strainer or sieve.

INCESSUS, (inceedo, incessum, 'to go.')

Walking.

INCIDENT'IA, (incidere, incisum, (in, and cedere, 'to cut.')

(F.) Incisifs. This name was formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the property of cutting thick or coagulated humours. The fixed alkalis, hydrosulphurets of alkalis, sulphurous water, &c., were considered to belong to this class.

INCINCTA, (in, and cingere, ciunctum, 'to gird.')

Pregnant.

INCINERA'TION, Incinera'tio, Cinera'tion, Cinefactio, (in, and cinis, gen. cineris, 'ashes.')

In pharmacy, a process by which animal or vegetable substances are reduced to ashes.

INCISIFS, Incidentia, Incisive.

INCISIO, (incidere, incisum, 'to cut.')

Cut, Incision—i. Simplex, Haplotomia.

INCIS'ION, Incis'io, En'copé, Incisu'ra, Incisus, To'mé, (F.) Taillade. A methodical division of soft parts with a cutting instrument.

INCISION SÈCHE, ('dry incision.')

See Écarseur.

INCIS'IVE, Incis'ivus, Incisori'us, (F.) Incisif. Relating or appertaining to the incisor teeth.

Fos'sa incisiva seu myrtifor'mis is a depression in the superior maxillary bone, above the incisor teeth.

INCISIVE BONE, Intermaxillary bone—i. Canal, see Palatine canals.

INCISIVE NERVE, Nervus incisivus. A branch of the inferior dental nerve, which supplies the incisor teeth.

INCISIVE TEETH, Incisor Teeth, Den'tes incisores seu tom'ici seu cte'nes seu dichaste'res seu gelasi'vi seu primo'res seu raso'rii. The teeth which occupy the anterior part of the upper and lower jaws are so called, because they are used for cutting the food in the manner of cutting instruments. The two middle incisors of the upper jaw are, at times, called Butter teeth.

INCISIVUS (MUSCULUS), Levator labii superioris proprius—i. Inferior, Levator labii inferioris—i. Lateralis et pyramidalis, Levator labii superioris alæque nasi—i. Medius, Depressor alæ nasi.

INCISOR TEETH, Incisive teeth.

INCISORIUM, Tom'ion. An operating table. A scalpel.

INCISORIUS, Incisive.

INCISURA, Échancrure, Incision—i. Crucialis, Crucial Incision—i. Ischiadica Major, Sciatic notch, greater—i. Ischiadica Minor, Sciatic notch, lesser—i. Lienalis, Hilus lienalis—i. Renalis, Hilus renalis—i. Scapularis, Notch, scapular—i. Septi, see Ventricles of the brain.

INCISURA TRAG'ICA, Notch of the Con'cha. A wide, deep and rounded notch, which separates the tragus from the antitragus.

INCISURES DE SANTORINI, Santorini, fissures of.

INCISUS, Incision.

INCITABILITY, (incitare, 'to put in quick motion,' and habilis, 'able,') Irritability.

INCITAMENTUM, Stimulus.

INCITANS, Stimulant.

INCITATIO, Stimulation.

INCITO or INCITO MOTOR, (F.) Incito-moteur. An epithet, applied to an action the reverse of excitomotor; as in the case of muscular motion, which commences in the nervous centres and excites the muscles to contraction.

INCLAVATIO, (in, and clavus, 'a nail,')

Gomphosis, see Wedged.

INCLINATIO, (inclinare, inclinatum, 'to bend down.') Decline—i. Cœli, Climate.

INCLUSION, MONSTROSITY BY, (in, and cludere, clusum, 'to shut,') Emboîtement.

INCLUSUS, see Wedged.

INCOCTUS, (in, and coquere, coctum, 'to cook,') see Crudity.

INCOHERENCE, Incohe'rency, (F.) Anacolutie, Révasserie; (in, co, and hærrere, 'to stick,') Want of dependence of one part on another. The condition of the mental manifestations in dementia, &c.

INCOMPATIBLE, (in, competere, 'to agree,' and habilis, 'able,') A substance, which cannot be prescribed with another, without interfering with its chemical composition or medicinal activity.

INCONTINENTIA, (in, and contineo, 'I contain,') Anepist'chesis. 'Incontinence.' Inability to retain the natural evacuations. Abuse of the pleasures of love.

INCONTINENTIA ALVI, Diarrhœa—i. Urinæ, Enuresis, Scœrœcrasia.

INCORPORATION, Incorpora'tio, Corpora'tio, Ensomato'sis, Metensomato'sis (in, and corpus, gen. corporis, 'a body,') An operation, by which medicines are mixed with soft or liquid bodies, in order to give them a certain consistence. Also, the thorough admixture of various substances.

INCRASSANTIA, Incrassati'va, Inviscan'tia, Spissan'tia, Epepy'tica, Condensan'tia, Pachy'n'tica, Psychot'ica, Pycnicmas'tica, (in, and crassus, 'thick,') Medicines which were formerly believed to possess the power of thickening the humours, when too thin. All mucilaginous substances were so regarded.

INCRASSATIVA, Incrassantia.

INCREASE, Incremen'tum, Aux'is, Auxe'sis, (in, and creascere, 'to grow,') (F.) Accroissement. Augmentation of the size or weight of a body, by the application of new molecules around those which already exist.

INCREMENTUM, Augmentation, Growth, Increase.

INCRUCIATIO, (in, and cruciare, cruciatum, 'to cross,') Decussation.

INCRUSTATION, Incrusta'tio, (in, and crusta, 'a crust,') Coni'asis. The act of forming a crust on the surface of a body, as well as the crust itself. Also, the calcareous deposits or cartilaginous plates, which sometimes form in organs.

INCUBATION, Incuba'tio, Incubit'io, Incubit'us, (incubare, incubitum, (in, and cupare, 'to lie upon,') This word, which is used in natural history for the sitting of birds upon their eggs, is employed, figuratively, in medicine, for the period that elapses between the introduction of a morbid principle into the animal economy and the invasion of the disease; and, likewise, for the maintenance of a temperature of warm air—say of 98° of Fahrenheit—around a diseased part.

INCUBES, see Incubus.

INCUBITIO, Incubation.

INCUBITUS, Incubation.

INCUBO, Incubus.

INCUBUS. In'cubo, Epial'tes, Epial'tes, I. nocturnus, Hypnophob'ia, Epilep'sia nocturna, Asthma nocturnum, Pnigal'ion, Suc'cubus, Oneirodyn'ia gra'teans, Erethis'mus oneirodyn'ia, Nocturna oppres'sio, Epib'ole, Babuzicarius, Nightmare, Wild'mare, Ri'dinghag, (Prov.) Bitch-daughter, Hella, (F.) Cauchemar, Caucherieille, Cochemar, Oneirodynie gravative. A sensation of a distressing weight at the epigastrium during sleep, and of impossibility of motion, speech, or respiration; the patient at length awaking in terror, after extreme anxiety. Nightmare is often the effect of difficult digestion or of an uneasy position of the body. At other times, it occurs in consequence of severe emotions. The sensation of suffocation was formerly ascribed to the person's being possessed, and the male spirits were called incubæ—the female succubæ. The disease requires no particular treatment. The causes must be avoided.

INCUBUS VIGILANTIUM, Epial'tes vigilan'tium, E. hypochondri'aca, Daymare. This is produced during wakefulness; the sense of pressure being severe and extending over the abdomen; respiration frequent, laborious, and constricted; eyes fixed; sighing, deep and violent; intellect, undisturbed.

INCUNABULA, (in, and cupabula [pl.], 'a cradle,') Swathing clothes.

INCUNEATIO, (in, and cuneus, 'a wedge,') Gomphosis, see Wedged.

INCURABLE, Incurab'ilis, Rem'ediless, Irrem'ediable, Insanab'ilis, Anal'thes, Anaces'tos, Atherap'entus, (F.) Inguérissable, (in, and cura, 'cure,') Not susceptible of cure;—applied to both patients and diseases.

INCURIA, (in, and cura, 'care,') Acedia.

INCURSUS ARTERIARUM, (in, and currere, cursum, 'to run,') Pulse.

INCURVATIO, (in, and curvare, curvatum, 'to crook,') Gryposis.

INCUS, gen. Incu'dis, (in, and cupere, cusum, 'to hammer,') 'an anvil.' Ac'mon, Os incu'di sim'ile, Ossic'ulum Incu'di seu mola'ri den'ti comparat'um, (F.) Enclume. One of the small bones of the ear, so called from its fancied resemblance to a smith's anvil. It is situate in the cavity of the tympanum, between the malleus and orbicular. Its body is articulated with the malleus; its horizontal ramus, which is the shortest, corresponds with the entrance of the mastoid cells; and its vertical ramus is articulated with the os orbicular. The incus is composed of a compact tissue, and is developed from a single point of ossification.

INDEX, gen. In'dicis, Dig'itus index seu secundus seu salutato'rius, Demonstra'tor, Indica'tor, Indicato'rius, Li'chanos, Dei'ticus, (indicare, 'to point out,') The forefinger, index finger: See Digitus.

INDIAN ARROW WOOD, see Euconymis—i. Bread, see Lycoperdon tuber—i. Cup, Sarracenia purpurea—i. Loaf, see Lycoperdon tuber—i. Mallow, Abutilon Avicennæ—i. Paint, Hydrastis Canadensis—i. Physic, Gillenia trifoliata—i. Physic, small-flowered, Gillenia stipulæata.

INDIAN SPRINGS, see Georgia, Mineral waters of.

INDIANA, MINERAL WATERS OF. A medicinal spring, near Jeffersonville, is much frequented. Its waters are strongly impregnated with sulphur and iron.

INDICANT, In'dicans, Endeic'ticus, (F.) Indicatif, (from indicare, 'to point out,') Any thing which, in the course of a disease, or in what precedes or accompanies it, concurs in pointing out the means to be used for its cure.

INDICATIF, Indicant.

INDICATING DAYS, Dies Indices seu Indicato'rii seu Indican'tes seu Contemplan'tes, (F.) Jours indicateurs. Hippocrates and others have thus called the middle day of the septenary; because they imagined, that indications were sometimes given then of the crisis which would occur in the last day of the septenary.

INDICATION, Indica'tio, Accusa'tio, Delat'tio, Endeix'is, Endex'is, Boethemat'icum Seme'ion. The object proposed in the employment of any means which are had recourse to for the cure of disease. It may also be defined—the manifestation afforded by the disease itself of what is proper to be done for its removal.

INDICATOR, Extensor proprius indicis, see Digitus, and Index.

INDICUM, (from India.) Indigo.

INDICUS COLOR, Indigo.

INDIGENCE, (indigeo, (from in, and egeo.) 'to be needy,') Want.

INDIG'ENOUS, Indig'ena, 'Inborn,' (indu, for 'in,' and geno, for gigno, 'I generate,') Whatever is native in a country, in opposition to exotic; as an indigenous remedy, indigenous disease, &c.

INDIGESTION, (in, and digerere, digestum, 'to set in order,') Dyspepsia—i. Alkaline, see Dyspepsia—i. Neutral, see Dyspepsia.

INDIGITATIO, (in, and digitus, 'a finger,') Intussusceptio.

INDIGNABUNDUS, (indignari, 'to be indignant,') Rectus externus oculi.

INDIGNATORIUS, Rectus externus oculi.

INDIGO, Indigum, Indicum, Indicus color, Pigmentum Indicum, (from India.) A dye-stuff, in small solid masses, of a deep azure blue colour, and devoid of smell and taste. It is obtained, by a fermentative process, from Indigofera anil, (I. suffruticosa), I. argentea, (I. articulata seu tinctoria seu glauca seu colorata), and I. tinctoria seu Indica, and is sometimes used by the apothecary for colouring certain preparations. It has likewise been administered internally in spasmodic diseases, especially in epilepsy. The dose may be at first grains, but it may be elevated to drachms.

INDIGO, FALSE, (TALL WHITE), see Sophora tinctoria—i. Indigo Faux, Galega officinalis—i. Weed, Sophora tinctoria—i. Wild, Sophora tinctoria—i. Yellow, Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGOFERA, (indigo, and fero, 'to bear,') see Indigo, Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGO, Indigo.

INDISPOSIT'ION, Mal'a disposit'io, Dysposit'io, (F.) Malaise, (in, and disponere, dispositum, 'to put in order,') The state of being unwell. A slight functional disturbance, which may scarcely bear the name of disease. A feeling of sickness—sensus ægritudinis; vulgarly an all-overish feeling.

INDOLENT, Indolens, (in, and dolere, 'to be in pain,') Exhibiting little or no pain. An epithet particularly applied to certain tumours.

INDOLENTIA, Anodynia.

IND'OLES, (in, and olescere, 'to grow,') A natural disposition or character.

INDOLES AN'IMI. The natural disposition or character of mind.

INDOLES MORBI. The nature or character of a disease.

INDOSYNCLONUS, (Ind, 'India,' and σνχλωος, 'tremor,') Beriberi.

INDUCTIO, Apogogē, (inducere, (in, and ducere, ductum), 'to lead in,') A word used especially for the action of extending a plaster upon linen.

INDUCTION, ELECTRICITY OF. Faradization.

INDUCULA, (inducere, 'to put on,') Waistcoat, strait.

INDUMENTUM CORDIS, (inducere, 'to put on, to cover,') Pericardium—i. Nervorum, Neurilemma—i. Ventriculorum, Ependyma ventriculorum.

INDUR'ANS, (in, and durus, 'hard,') Scleroticus, Sclerunticus, Sclerynticus. A medicine which hardens the parts to which it is applied.

INDURATIO, Induration—i. Intestinorum, Enteropathia cancerosa—i. Maligna, Scirrhus—i. Renum, Nephroscleria—i. Telæ cellulosæ neonatorum, see Induration—i. Ventriculi scirrhosa, Gastrocirrhus.

INDUR'ATION, Induratio, Sclerys'ma, Sclerys'mus, Callositas, Indurescentia, Porona, Porosis, Hard'ening, (F.) Endureissement. The hardness which supervenes, occasionally, in an inflamed part. It is one of the terminations of inflammation, and is owing to a change in the nutrition of the part.

INDURATION OF THE ARE'OLAR OR CEL'LULAR TISSUE, Induratio cellulosa, Induratio seu Opilatio te'læ cellulosæ neonatorum, Ethymphytosis, Œdema neonatorum, Compact' Œdema of Infants, Cat'ochus Infantum, Scleremia, Sclerema, Sclero'ma, Scleroder'mia, Cn'tis ten'sa chronica, Dermatopisclerosis, Dermatopisclerys'mus, Phlegm'asia cellul'aria, Scirrhos'aria neonatorum, Scler'asis neonatorum, Sclero'sis, Stipatio te'læ cellulosæ Infantum, Skin'boud Disease, Skin'bind, Skin'tight, Hide'boud, (F.) Endureissement du tissu cellulaire; Œdème du tissu cellulaire des nouveau-nés, Asphyxie lente des nouveau-nés, Squirrosarque, is a disease which attacks infants a few days after birth, and which Chausser proposed to call Sclerème, from σκληρος, 'hard.'

The Induration of the areolar tissue of the adult, Sclerostosis cutanea, has been regarded as the result of inflammation of the corium, Chorionitis.

INDURATION OF THE BRAIN, Sclerencephalia—i. Grise, see Hepaticization.

INDURATUS, (F.) Induré. Affected with induration—as 'an indurated chancre.'

INDURESCENTIA, Induration.

INDU'SIUM, (inducere, 'to put on,') Chitoniscus. Strictly, 'a shirt,' 'a small tunic.' Some have so called the amnion.

INE'BRIANT, Inebrians, Phantasiticus; (in, and ebrio, 'I intoxicate,') Intoxicating. An agent that intoxicates.

INEBRIATION, Tumulentia.

INEBRIATION QUINIQUE, Quininism.

INEDIA, (in, and edere, 'to eat,') Fasting.

INERTIA, (in, and ars, gen. artis, 'art,') Ignavia, Ener'vitas. Sluggishness, inactivity.

INERTIA OF THE WOMB, (F.) Inertie de la matrice. The diminution and even total cessation of the contractions of the uterus during labour; as well as the species of languor into which it sometimes falls after the expulsion of the foetus.

INERTIE PAR ÉPUISEMENT, ('inertia by exhaustion,') see Parturition—i. de la Matrice, Inertia of the Womb.

INESIS, (ινσις), Cenosis.

INETHMUS, (ινεθμος), Cenosis.

IN EXTREMIS, ('at the extremity or point of death,') Psychorages.

INFANCY, Infantia, (in, and fans, from fari, 'to speak,') Early childhood. Childhood; Ne'piotes, Paid'ia, (F.) Enfance. It generally includes the age from birth till the seventh year. See Age.

INFANS, gen. Infantis, Pæ'dion, Paid'ion, Ne'pios, Puer, (Sc.) Gail'ling, Gyl'ling. (Old Eng. and Prov.) Barn; (Sc.) Bairn, (F.) Enfant. An infant, a baby, a child, one in infancy. In law, one who has not attained the age of legal capacity; which is, in general, fixed at twenty-one years.

INFANS REGENS NATUS, Nouveau-né.

INFANTIA, Infancy.

INFANTICIDE, Infanticidium, Tecnoctonia, Childmurder, (infans, infantis, 'a child,' and cædere, 'to kill,') The murder of a child newly born, or on the point of being born. It may be perpetrated by the mother, or by some other person, either by commission, that is, in consequence of a direct voluntary act;—or by omission of those cares which are necessary for the preservation of the new-born.

INFARCTION, (from in, and farcire, farcitum, 'to stuff,') Emphraxis.

INFARCTUS, Emphraxis—i. Hæmoptoicus Laennecii, see Hæmoptysis—i. Intestinorum, Enteremphraxis—i. Lactei extremitatum, Phlegmatolens—i. Liensis, Splenoncus.

INFARCTUS MAM'MÆ LACTEUS, Lactis concretio'nes, No'di seu Throm'bi lactei, Trichi'asis lac'

ova. Knotty tumours of the female mammae, owing to the accumulation and arrest of milk in the galactophorous ducts.

INFARCTUS UTERI, Metremphraxis.

INFECTANT, Infectans, (infectere, infectum, [in, and facere, 'to make'; 'to taint.']) That which can taint or infect.

INFECTIEUX, see Contagious.

INFECTIO PURULENTA, see Pyohæmia.

INFECTION, see Contagion—i. Putrid, Septæmia.

INFECTIOUS, see Contagious.

INFECUNDITY, (in, and fecundus, 'fruitful.')

INFECUNDUS, Sterile.

INFERENT, see Afferent.

INFERNAL, Infer'nus; ('relating to hell.')

A name applied to caustic—La'pis Infer'nalis—on account of its strong burning properties.

INFIBULATIO, Fibula'tio, Infibula'tion, Ancerterias'mus; (in, and fibula, 'a clasp.') (F.) Bouclement. An operation, formerly practised, which consisted in passing a ring through the prepuce, after having drawn it over the glans;—in order to prevent coition. The ancients employed infibulation with their gladiators to preserve all their strength by depriving them of venery. In the women, to preserve their chastity, the ring was passed through the labia majora.

IN FILTRATED, Infiltratus, (F.) Infiltré. Affected with infiltration.

INFILTRATION, Infiltratio, (in, and filtrare, filtratum, 'to filter.') Effusion. The passage or effusion of a fluid into the areolæ of any texture, and particularly of the areolar membrane. The fluid effused is ordinarily the Liquor sanguinis, sound or altered—sometimes blood or pus, fæces, or urine. When infiltration of a serous fluid is general, it constitutes anasarca; when local, œdema.

INFILTRATION PURULENTE, see Hepatization.

INFINITESIMAL. Infinites'imus, (in, and finitus, 'limited.') Unlimited. An epithet employed by the homœopaths for their endless subdivisions of drugs:—the decillionth of a grain, for example, is "an infinitesimal dose."

INFINITIVIST, see Emboîtement.

INFIRM, Infirmus, Imbecillitas, Deb'ititas, As'thenes, Hypoc'rates, (in, and firmus, 'firm.') Not firm or sound; weak; feeble.

INFIRMARIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMARY, Hospital.

INFIRMATORIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMERIE, Hospital.

INFIRMIER (F.), Infirmarius, Nosocomus, Cura'tor infirmo'rum. One employed in an hospital or infirmary to take care of the sick.

INFIRMITY, Infirm'itas, Asthen'ia, Arrhos'tia, Invaletu'do. Any disease which has become habitual, either owing to its chronic character, or its numerous relapses.

INFIRMUS, Abebasos, Infirm.

INFLAMED, (Old Eng.) Flamed, Inflammat'us, (F.) Enflammé, Phlogosé,—Phlogosé, according to some,—(in, and flamma, 'flame, fire.') Affected with inflammation. A sore, when inflamed, is said to look irritated, angry.

INFLAMMABLE AIR, Hydrogen, carburetted.

INFLAMMATION, Inflammat'io, so called in consequence of the acute or burning pain felt in a part affected with it. Phleg'moné, Phlog'osis, Echphlog'osis, Epiphleg'ia, Exap'osis. Phlegm'osis, Causo'ma, Empres'ma, Phlog'ia, Hypercondensose (Dutrochet), Inced'dium, Hyperhæmat'osis, Hyperæ'mia act'iva, Phlebople'osis ephræctica; (F.) Inflammation, improperly Anguite. Altered nutrition in a part is occasioned by some agency;—owing to which the blood flows into the capillary vessels in greater abundance than natural, and those vessels become over-dilated and enfeebled; whence result pain, redness, heat, tension, and swelling; symptoms which appear in greater or less severity, according to the structure, vital properties, and functions of the part affected, and its connexion with other parts, as well as according to the constitution of the individual.

Simple accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the part is hyperæmia, not inflammation. The latter requires, in addition, altered nutrition of the vessels themselves, and the surrounding tissues.

The inflammations of the areolar and serous membranes greatly agree;—and those of the mucous and skin; the former being more active, and constituting the phlegmonous variety;—the latter, the erythematic or erysipelatous. Of this variety is the diffusive inflammation produced by morbid poisons,—as during dissection, where solutions of continuity exist in the fingers of the operator. It is seen, too, in workers in bone, and hence has been called bone fever. Preparatory to the turning of bones, it is customary to macerate them in water. The fluid soon becomes putrid, and if the hands be kept in it diffusive inflammation results.

Inflammation may end by resolution, suppuration, gangrene, adhesion, effusion, or induration. Each of the inflammations of internal organs has received a name according to the organ affected;—as, gastritis, cephalitis, enteritis, hepatitis, &c. Besides the above inflammations, it has been considered, that there is an instinctive kind established for the union of parts which have been divided, whether the union takes place immediately, or by the aid of an intermediate body. This is the adhesive inflammation of some; but it may well be questioned whether inflammation is ever desirable in such cases. See Adhesion, Callus, Cicatrix. Broussais considered that the term inflammation should include every local exaltation of the organic movements which is sufficiently great to disturb the harmony of the functions, and disorganize the texture in which it is situated. He farther extended the name inflammation to irritations which do not induce disorganization of the textures, and which had been previously, and are still, called fevers.

Examination of the blood drawn always exhibits an increase of the fibrinous element—the average proportion of which, in healthy blood, is about three in the thousand. In inflammation, it at times rises as high as ten. In fevers unaccompanied with inflammation, the proportion is natural, or below the average; but whenever inflammation supervenes, it immediately rises.

External inflammation is easily detected by the characters already mentioned:—internal, by disturbance of function and pain upon pressure; but the last sign is often not available. Both forms require the removal of all irritation, and the reduction of vascular excitement and nervous irritability; hence, blood-letting—local and general—sedatives, refrigerants, and counter-irritants become valuable remedies in almost all cases of inflammation.

Inflammation is not always of the active kind. There is a form, Inflammatio debilis, which occurs in low conditions of the system, and in broken down constitutions, which, like many forms of chronic inflammation, requires a stimulant, rather than a sedative, mode of treatment.

INFRA COSTALES, see Intercostal muscles.

INFRA DIAPHRAGMATIC, Infradiaphragmaticus, (F.) Sousdiaphragmatique. Situate under the diaphragm.

INFRAMAXILLARIS, Sub-maxillary.

INFRAMAXILLOSTERNODYMIA, Cephalosomatodymia.

INFRAORBITAR, Suborbitar.

INFRAPUBIAN, Infrapubiana, (F.) Souspubien. That which is situate beneath the pubis. See Subpubic.

INFRAPUBIAN LIGAMENT, Triangular ligament.

INFRASCAPULARIS, Subscapularis.

INFRASPINALIS, Infra-spinatus.

INFRASPINATUS, Infraspina, (infra, and spina, 'spine.') Situate beneath the spine of the scapula.

INFRASPINATA FOS'SA, (F.) Fosse sous-épineuse. A large excavation on the posterior surface of the scapula, beneath its spine. It is filled by the INFRASPINATUS (Mus'cle). Grand Scapulo-trochiterien, Suprascapularis inferior (Ch.), (F.) Sous-épineux, which is broad, flat, and triangular. It is attached, by its base, to the three inner quarters of the fossa; and is inserted, by a long tendon, into the middle part of the great tuberosity of the os humeri (Troch'lier.) It turns the arm outwards, and, when the arm is elevated, carries it backwards.

INFRICTION, (in, and fricare, frictum, 'to rub,') Inunction.

INFRINGENS, (in, and frangere, fractum, 'to break,') Corrigent.

INFUNDIBULUM, (in, and fundere, fusum, 'to pour,') A Fun'nel, Tritor'ium, Choa'nè, Choa'nus, (F.) Entonnoir,—of which various kinds are employed in pharmaceutical operations. A name, given to many parts which, more or less, resemble a funnel. See Proventriculus, and Pulmo. It is particularly appropriated to the following organs:—

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE BRAIN, Infundibulum seu Pel'ris seu Choa'na seu Cyathus seu Scy'phus seu Con'cha seu Lacu'na seu Em'bolum seu Aquæ-due'tus seu La'brum seu Conca'ritas conchula'ris seu Process'us orbicula'ris Cer'e'br'i. (F.) Entonnoir du ventricule moyen du cerveau, Tige Pituitaire, Tige sus-sphénoïdale. A depression in the inferior paries of the middle ventricle, above the pituitary gland. It was, anciently, regarded as a canal by which the fluid, collected in the ventricles of the brain, was evacuated, and poured into the nasal fossæ.

INFUNDIBULUM CEREBRI, I. of the Brain.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE COCH'LEA, I. Coch'lea, Scy'phus Vieussen'ii seu audito'rius, Cucul'lus, Canalis Scala'rum commu'nis. This, with the modiolus, forms the nucleus around which the gyri of the cochlea pass. It is an imperfect funnel, the apex of which is common with that of the modiolus; and the base is covered with the apex of the cochlea, termed Cu'pola.

In Surgery, infundibula or funnels are used to direct steam or vapours; to conduct the actual cautery to certain morbid parts, &c.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE ETHMOID BONE, OR OF THE NASAL FOSSÆ. One of the anterior cells of that bone, which is broad and expanded above, and narrow below; opening, above, into the frontal sinus; below, into the anterior part of the middle meatus of the nasal fossæ.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE HEART, Conus arteriosus—i. of the Kidney, see Calix—i. Lacrymale, Lachrymal Sac—i. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube Fallopii—i. Ventriculi, Œsophagus.

INFUSÉ, Infusion.

INFUSION, Infusio, En'chysis, (infundere (in, and fundere, fusum), 'to pour in,' 'to introduce,') A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in pouring a hot or cold fluid upon a substance whose medical virtues it is desired to extract. Infusion is, also, used for the product of this operation. Infusum, En'chyma, (F.) Infusion, Infusé. In Surgery, Infusion—Chirurg'ia infusoria, Ars clysmatica nova—is the act of introducing into the veins medicinal substances, by aid of an instrument called Infusor. See Infusoir. This mode of introducing medicines was called Ars infusoria.

INFUSION OF ANGSTURA, Infusum Cuspariæ—i. of Bark, Infusum cinchonæ—i. of Buchu, Infusum Diosmæ—i. of Calumba, Infusum calumbæ—i. of Cascarilla, Infusum cascarillæ—i. of Catechu, Infusum catechu compositum—i. of Cayenne pepper, Infusum capsici—i. of Chamomile, Infusum anthemidis—i. of Chiretta, Infusum Chiretæ—i. of Cinchona, Infusum cinchonæ—i. of Cloves, Infusum Caryophyllorum—i. of Cusparia, Infusum cuspariæ—i. of Dandelion, Infusum Taraxaci—i. of Ergot, Infusum Ergotæ—i. of Foxglove, Infusum digitalis—i. of Gentian, compound, Infusum gentianæ compositum—i. of Ginger, Infusum Zingiberis—i. of Hops, Infusum humuli—i. of Horseradish, compound, Infusum armoraciæ compositum—i. of Kousoo, Infusum Cusso—i. of Linseed, Infusum lini compositum—i. of Matico, Infusum matico—i. of Mint, compound, Infusum menthæ compositum—i. of Orange-peel, compound, Infusum aurantii compositum—i. of Pareira Brava, Infusum Pareiræ—i. of Pinkroot, Infusum spigeliæ—i. of Quassia, Infusum quassiæ—i. of Rhatany, Infusum Krameriæ—i. of Rhubarb, Infusum rhei—i. of the Rose, Infusum rosæ compositum—i. of Roses, acid, Infusum Rosæ acidum—i. of Sage, Infusum salviæ—i. of Sarsaparilla, Infusum sarsaparillæ—i. of Sassafras pith, Infusum sassafras medullæ—i. of Seneka, Infusum Senegæ—i. of Senna, Infusum sennæ compositum—i. of Simaruba, Infusum simarubæ—i. of Slippery elm, Infusum ulmi—i. of Thoroughwort, Infusum eupatorii—i. of Tobacco, Infusum tabaci—i. of Valerian, Infusum valerianæ—i. of Virginia snake-root, Infusum serpentariæ—i. of Wild cherry, Infusum pruni Virginianæ.

INFUSOIR (F.), Infusor. An instrument for injecting medicinal substances into the veins. It was a kind of funnel, the elongated apex of which was stopped by a metallic rod, which could be withdrawn when the apex was introduced into a vein.

INFUSUM, Infusion.

INFUSUM ACACIÆ CATECHI, I. catechu compositum—i. Amarum vinosum, Vinum gentianæ compositum—i. Angusturæ, I. cuspariæ.

INFUSUM ANTHEMIDIS, Hydrochamomaimellum, Infusion of Chamomile. (Anthemid. flor.  $\frac{3}{ss}$ ; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for ten minutes in a covered vessel, and strain.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{ij}$  to  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$ .

INFUSUM ARMORACIÆ COMPOSITUM, I. Armoraciæ (Ph. U. S.) Compound Infusion of Horseradish. (Armorac. concis., Sinapis cont.,  $\frac{3}{j}$ ; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{ij}$  to  $f\frac{3}{ijj}$ .

INFUSUM AURANTII COMPOSITUM, Compound Infusion of Orange Peel. (Aurant. cort. sicc.  $\frac{3}{ij}$ ; Limon. cort. recent.  $\frac{3}{j}$ ; Caryoph. cont.  $\frac{3}{ss}$ ; Aq. fervent. Oss. Macerate for fifteen minutes, and strain.—Ph. L.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$  to  $f\frac{3}{ij}$ .

INFUSUM BRASIL. WORT—i. Buchu, Infusum Diosmæ—i. Bynes, Wort.

INFUSUM CALUMBÆ, I. Calombæ seu Colombæ, Infusion of Calumb'a. (Calumb. rad. concis.  $\frac{3}{ss}$ ; Aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain. Made also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$  to  $\frac{3}{ijj}$ .

INFUSUM CAPSICI, Infusion of Cayenne Pepper. (Capsic. in. pulv. crass.  $\frac{3}{ss}$ ; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$ .

INFUSUM CARYOPHYLLI, Infusion of Cloves. (Caryoph. contus.  $\frac{3}{j}$ ; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose,  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$  to  $f\frac{3}{ijj}$ .

INFUSUM CASCARILLÆ, Infusion of Cascarilla. (Cascarill. contus.  $\frac{3}{j}$ ; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Made also by displacement, Ph. U. S. Dose,  $f\frac{3}{iiss}$  to  $f\frac{3}{ijj}$ .

INFUSUM CASSIÆ SENNÆ, I. sennæ composi- lum.

INFUSUM CAT'ECU COMPOS'ITUM, I. Catechu seu Aca'cie Catechu, Infusion of Cat'echu. (Catechu, in pulv. ℥ss; Cinnam. cont. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain. Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss to f℥ij.

INFUSUM CHIRET'Æ, I. Chirait'æ (Ph. B. 1864.) Infusion of Chiretta. (Chirette, ℥iv; Aq. fervent. Oj. (Imp. meas.) Infuse for two hours, and strain. Dose, as a tonic, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM CINCHO'NÆ, I. Cinchonæ lancifoliae, Infusion of Cincho'na. (Cinch. contus. ℥j; Aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) This infusion may also be made from the same quantity of bark in coarse powder by the process of displacement with hot or cold water. Dose, f℥j to f℥ij. The Pharmacopœia of the United States has an Infusum Cincho'ne flavæ, Infusion of yellow cinchona, and an Infusum Cinchonæ rubræ, Infusion of red cinchona—Infusum Cincho'ne Compositum (Ph. U. S. 1851)—which are made as follows: (Cinchon. flav. vel rubr. in pulv. ℥j; Acid. sulph. aromat. f℥j; aquæ, Oj.) Made by displacement. Dose, same as the last.

INFUSUM CINCHONÆ COMPOSITUM, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Cinchonæ flavæ, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Cinchonæ lancifoliae, Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Cinchonæ rubræ, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Columbæ, I. Columbæ.

INFUSUM CUSPARIÆ, I. Angusturæ, Infusion of Cusparia (Cuspar. cort. contus. ℥ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain. Made also by displacement.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM CUS'SO, Infusion of Kou'sso, (Kou'sso, in coarse powder, ℥i; boiling Distilled water, f℥iv. Infuse in a covered vessel for fifteen minutes, without straining. Ph. B. 1864.) For a dose.

INFUSUM DIGITALIS, I. Digitalis purpurea, Infusion of Fox'glove. (Digital. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Tinct. cinnamomi, f℥j. Macerate for two hours, and add sp. cinnam. f℥j.) Dose, f℥j.

INFUSUM DIOS'MÆ, (Ph. U. S., 1842.) I. Buch'u. (Ph. U. S., 1851.) I. Buch'co. (Ph. B. 1864.) Infusion of Buch'u. (Diosm. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss.

INFUSUM ER'GOTÆ, Infusion of Ergot. (Ergot. in pulv. crass. ℥ij; Aq. bullient. f℥ix.) Infuse for an hour, in a covered vessel, and strain. (Ph. D.) Dose, as a parturifacient, f℥ij.

INFUSUM EUPATORI, Infusion of Tho'rough-wort. (Eupator. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥ij.

INFUSUM GENTIANÆ COMPOS'ITUM, Compound Infusion of Gentian. (Gentian. cont. ℥ss; Aurant. amar. cort., Coriandr. contus. āā ℥j; Alcohol. dilut. f℥iv; Aquæ, f℥xij. First pour on the alcohol, and, three hours afterwards, the water; then macerate for twelve hours, and strain. Prepared also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

Mars'den's Antiscorbutic Drops, an empirical preparation, consist of a solution of corrosive sublimate in an infusion of gentian.

INFUSUM HU'MULLI, I. Lupuli, Infusion of Hops. (Humul. ℥ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss to f℥ij.

INFUSUM JUNIP'ERI, Infusion of Juniper. The common mode of making this infusion is by an ounce of Juniper Berries to a pint of boiling water. The whole may be taken in the twenty-four hours.

INFUSUM KRAME'RIÆ, Infusion of Rhat'any, (Kramer. contus. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for four hours, and strain. Made also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss.

INFUSUM LINI, I. L. compositum.

INFUSUM LINI COMPOS'ITUM (Ph. U. S., 1851), (I. Lini, 1842.) I. Lini usitatis'simi, Infusion of Lin'seed, Flax'seed Tea. (Lini sem. cont. ℥ss; Glycyrrh. rad. cont. ℥ij; Aquæ bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, a teacupful, adlibitum.

INFUSUM LUPULI, Infusum Humuli—i. Malti, Wort.

INFUSUM MATI'CO, I. Mati'cæ, Infusion of Mati'co. (Matico, ℥ss (avoirdupois); Aq. bullient. Oj. (Imp. meas.) Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f℥iss to f℥ij.

INFUSUM MEN'THÆ VIR'IDIS, Infusion of Spear'mint, Mint Tea. (Menthæ virid. ℥ij; Aquæ bullient. Oj. Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM PAREI'RÆ, Infusion of Pareira Bra'va. (Pareir. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj.) Infuse for two hours, and strain. (Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, f℥j or f℥ij.

INFUSUM PICIS EMPYREUMATICÆ LIQUIDÆ, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Picis liquidæ, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Polygalæ, Infusum Senegæ.

INFUSUM PRUNI VIRGINIÆ, Infusion of Wild Cherry Bark. (Prun. Virginian. cont. ℥ss; Aquæ, Oj. Macerate for 24 hours, and strain. Prepared, also, by displacement. Ph. U. S. 1863.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM QUAS'SIÆ, I. Quassie excel'sæ, Infusion of Quassia. (Quassia lign. cont. ℥ij; Aq. (frigid.) Oj. Macerate for twelve hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM RHEI, An'ima Rhei, Infusion of Rhu'barb. (Rhei, cont. ℥ij; Aq. ferv. Ojss. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j to f℥iv.

INFUSUM RO'SÆ AC'IDUM, Acid Infusion of Ro'ses. (Ros. Gallic. ℥i; Acid. Sulph. d. f℥j; Aq. destillat. bullient. f℥x. Add the acid to the water; infuse the petals in the mixture for half an hour, and strain. Ph. B. 1864.)

INFUSUM RO'SÆ COMPOS'ITUM, I. Rosæ Gallicæ, Infusion of the Rose. (Ros. Gallic. ℥iv; Aq. bullient. Ojss; Acid. sulph. d. f℥ij; Succh. purif. ℥iss. Add the water, and afterwards the acid;—macerate for half an hour; strain, and add the sugar.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iss to Ojss.

INFUSUM SAL'VÆ, Infusion of Sage, Sage Tea. (Salv. ℥ss; Aq. bullient. Oj; macerate for half an hour, and strain.)

INFUSUM SARSAPARILLÆ, Infusion of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. contus. ℥j; Aquæ bullient. Oj. Digest for two hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It may also be prepared by displacement. Dose, f℥ij to f℥iv.

INFUSUM SASS'AFRAS, I. Sassafras medullæ, Mucila'go Sassafras, Infusion of Sassafras Pith, Mucilage of Sassafras Pith. (Sassafras medull. ℥ij; Aquæ (frigid.) Oj. Macerate for three hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) An emollient collyrium, and a demulcent drink.

INFUSUM SEN'EGÆ, Infusum Polygalæ, Infusion of Sen'eka. (Seneg. ℥x; Aq. bullient. (Imp. meas.) Infuse for four hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

INFUSUM SENNÆ, I. S. Compositum, I. Cas'sie Sennæ seu Sennæ simplex, Aqua laxat'iva Viennensis, Infusion of Senna. (Sennæ, ℥j; Coriandr. cont. ℥j; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j to f℥ij, as a cathartic.

The Black Draught, Black Dose, Black bottle, Haus'tus ni'ger, is usually formed of this infusion. It may be made of Infus. sennæ, f℥v; Aq. cinnam. f℥j; Mannæ, ℥iv; Magnæ. sulph. ℥vj. Dose, a wineglassful.

Sel'way's Prepared Essence of Senna is a concentrated infusion of the leaves in combination with an alkali.

INFUSUM SENNE COMPOSITUM, I. sennæ.

INFUSUM SERPENTARIE, Infusion of Virgin's Snake-root. (Serpentar.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain. Prepared, also, by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ ss.

INFUSUM SIMARUBÆ, Infusion of Sinaruba. (Simarub. cort. cont.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ij; Aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ ij to f $\frac{3}{4}$ ij.

INFUSUM SPIGELLE, Infusion of Pinkroot. (Spigel.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ iv to Oss.

INFUSUM TABACI, Infusion of Tobacco. (Tabac. fol.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ij; Aq. ferv. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Half of this per anum in strangulated hernia.

INFUSUM TARAXACI, Infusion of Dan'delion. (Taraxac. contus.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ij; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ ss, as a diuretic, &c.

INFUSUM ULMI, Mucila'go Ulmi, Infusion of Slippery Elm, Slippery Elm Tea, Mucilage of Slippery Elm bark. This preparation, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, is made by infusing one ounce of slippery elm bark in a pint of boiling water.

INFUSUM VALERIANÆ, Infusion of Valerian. (Rad. valerian. in pulv. crass.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain. Prepared, also, by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ ss to  $\frac{3}{4}$ ij.

INFUSUM ZINGIBERIS, Infusion of Gin'ger, Gin'ger Tea. (Zingib. contus.  $\frac{3}{4}$ ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\frac{3}{4}$ ss to f $\frac{3}{4}$ ij, as a carminative.

ING'Å. A genus of plants, Ord. Leguminosæ, belonging to South America, many of the species of which are possessed of astringent properties. Inga bark is used in South America as a tonic astringent in diarrhœa, gonorrhœa, &c. An extract, prepared from it, possesses all the properties of rhatany.

INGENIUM (Morbi), (in, and geno, for gigno, 'to generate.') The nature or genius of a disease. This word is employed, especially by the French, synonymously with nature. They speak, for instance, of Génie inflammatoire, bilieux, &c. Some, also, use génie in the place of type of an intermittent.

INGESTA, (in, and gerere, gestum, 'to bear or carry.') Substances, introduced into the body by the digestive passages; as food, condiments, drinks, &c.

INGLUVIES, Aples'tia, Vic'tus intemperant'ia. Gluttony, Insatiableness; also, the Crop or Crag or Gorge of Birds, (F.) Jabot; and the first stomach or paunch of ruminant animals—Pen'ula, Ru'men, Pan'tices, Ven'ter magnus, (F.) Panse, Herbie, Double. Also, the Pharynx.

INGRAS'SIAS, APOPH'YSES OF. The lesser œle of the sphenoid bone.

INGRAVIDATION, (in, and gravidus, 'pregnant,') Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRESSUS SUPERIOR, ('superior entrance,') Cardia.

INGUEN, gen. In'guinis, Ede'on, Bu'bon, Bu'bo, Groin, (Prov.) Lank, Last, Lisk, Lesk; (F.) Aine. The oblique fold or depression which separates the abdomen from the thigh. It is only, properly speaking, a line that extends from the anterior and superior spinous process of the ilium to the middle part of the horizontal ramus of the pubis. Also, the genital organs.

INGUÉRISABLE, (F.) (in, and guérir, 'to cure,') Incurable.

INGUINAL, Inguinal'is, (from inguen.) Belonging or relating to the groin. This epithet has been given to various parts met with in the region of the groin or inguinal region.

INGUINAL AR'TERY is that portion of the femoral artery situate immediately beneath the crural arch in the inguinal region.

INGUINAL CANAL' is a canal, about two inches in length, proceeding obliquely downwards, upwards and forwards at the lower part of the abdomen; through which passes the spermatic cord, in men, and the round ligament of the uterus in women. This canal is formed, inferiorly and anteriorly, by the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle; posteriorly by the fascia transversalis, which is joined to the preceding aponeurosis, and forms with it a deep channel, into which are received the lesser oblique and transversalis muscles. The inguinal canal has two apertures; the one, the lower and inner, is called the inguinal or abdominal ring. It is bounded by two strong tendinous pillars which fix it—the innermost to the symphysis, the outermost to the spine of the pubis. The upper and outer aperture is formed by the fascia transversalis. From the edge of this aperture arises a membranous funnel,—a prolongation of the fascia transversalis,—which receives the spermatic vessels; forms their proper sheath, and accompanies them as far as the testicle. On its inside lies the epigastric artery. Above it, is the lower edge of the transversalis muscle: and, below, it is bounded by the channel of the greater oblique. By following the oblique direction of this canal, and passing, consequently, on the outside of the epigastric artery, the viscera are displaced, so as to constitute internal inguinal hernia.

INGUINAL GLANDS, Glan'dulæ inguinal'es, (F.) Glandes inguinales, are the lymphatic glands or ganglions of the groin. There are two sets, one superficial; the other deep-seated; the former are larger, and their number varies, but on the average there are eight or ten which are placed irregularly about Poupart's ligament. The latter, or deep-seated, are situate behind the others around the femoral artery and vein.

INGUINAL RE'GION, Re'gio inguinal'is, Bubo, Inguen. The region of the groin.

INGUINAL RING, Abdom'nal Ring, An'nulus abdom'inis, (F.) Anneau Inguinal, is the inferior aperture of the inguinal canal.

INGUINOCUTA'NEUS. A name given by Professor Chaussier to the middle ramus of the anterior branch of the first lumbar nerve, because it sends its numerous filaments to the groin, scrotum, and to the skin of the superior part of the thigh.

INHÆRENS, Inherent.

INHALATIO, (in, and halare, 'to breathe,') Absorption, Inhalation—i. Cutis, see Absorption.

INHALA'TION, Inhalat'io. The act of drawing air or vapour into the lungs—Inhalat'io pulmonal'is. Also, absorption.

INHA'LER. An apparatus for inhalation. Mudge's Inhaler is an apparatus for inhaling the steam of hot water, in affections of the air-passages. It consists of a pewter tankard provided with a lid, into which a flexible tube is inserted. Through this the vapour is inhaled.

INHÉRENT, Inhæ'rens, (in, and hæ'rere, 'to stick,') That which adheres, or which is joined or united to any thing.

INHERENT CAUTERY, (F.) Cautère inhérent, is the actual cautery, left in contact with a part until it is reduced to the state of a deep eschar.

INHIBITORY, Inhibito'rius, (inhibeo, (in, and habeo,)) 'I hold in, 'I restrain.' A term which has been applied to nerves, which, when methodically excited, seem to repress the action of muscles to which they are distributed.

INHUMA'TION, Inhumat'io, (inhumare, inhumatum, (in, and humus,)) 'I put in the ground,') The sepulture of the dead. This belongs to the subject of medical polic. Also, digestion of substances in earth or dung. See Arenatio.

INIAD, see Inial.

INIAL, (from inion.) An epithet, proposed by Dr. Barclay for an aspect towards the plane of the ridge of the occiput. Iniad is employed by him adverbially to signify 'towards the inial aspect.'

INIENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Iniencephale, (inion, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.') A monster whose encephalon is in great part in the cranium, and in part out of it, behind, and a little beneath the cranium, which is open in its occipital portion.—(I. G. St. Hilaire.)

INIODYMUS, (ινω, and δυειν, 'to mingle,') Diprosopus.

INION, (ινον.) Some of the Greek physicians give this name to the occiput, or the ridge of the occiput; others to the back part of the neck, and the muscles of the occiput. Blancard says it is the commencement of the spinal marrow.

INIOPS, Iniopie, (inion, and ωψ, 'the eye, face,') A monster, double above the umbilicus, which has two ears very near each other, or only one median ear, and above it, at a greater or less distance, a median orbit and eye, more or less imperfect. The rudimental face appearing to be directly opposite the principal face suggested the name to I. G. St. Hilaire.

INI'TIS, Inohyem'itis, (is, gen. ινος, 'a fibre,') and itis.) Fibrous inflammation.

INITIUM, (in, and ire, 'to go,') 'a beginning,' Arche—i. Asperæ arteriæ, Larynx—i. Extuberans coli, Cæcum.

INIUM, (ινον.) The nucha. Also, the muscles at the back of the neck. See Inion.

INJACULA'TIO, (in, and jaculor, jaculatus, 'to shoot,') A term employed by Van Helmont to designate an acute pain of the stomach, with rigidity and immobility of the body.

INJECT'ED, Injectus, (injicere, injectum, (in, and jacere,) 'to throw into,') The face and other parts are said to be injected, when the accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels gives them an evident red colour. A subject or part of a subject is also said to be injected, when its vessels have been filled, by the anatomist, with an appropriate composition.

INJECT'ION, Injectio, Eis'bolis. The act of introducing, by means of a syringe or other instrument, a liquid into a cavity of the body. The liquid injected is also called an injection. Anatomists use injections—Injectiones anatomicæ—for filling the cavities of vessels, in order that they may be rendered more apparent, and their dissection be facilitated. For this purpose, they employ syringes of different dimensions, and various materials. The most common injections are made of soot, wax, and turpentine, coloured with lamp-black, vermilion, &c. There are three kinds chiefly used by anatomists,—the coarse, the fine, and the minute. The finest injections for histological researches are made with ether as a menstruum.

INJECTION, Clyster—i. Matthews's, see Tinctura cantharidis.

INJECTIONES ANATOMICÆ, see Injection.

IN-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

INK, ([D.] inkt.) Atramentum.

INKBERRY, Prinos glaber.

IN'NATE, (in, and nascor, natus, 'I am born,') (F.) Inné. Inborn.

INNATE DISEASES, Mor'bi conati seu congeniti, (F.) Maladies innées. Diseases with which the infant is born. They are not always hereditary, as hereditary diseases are not always innate.

INNERLEITH'EN, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF These springs, situate near the Tweed, and supposed to be the scene of "St. Ronan's Well," contain chlorides of sodium and calcium, and carbonate of magnesia.

INNERVA'TION, Innervatio, Enneuro'sis, (in, and nervus, 'a nerve,') By this term is meant—the nervous influence, necessary for the maintenance of life and the functions of the various organs;—an influence of whose character and source we are ignorant. It seems to resemble the galvanic or electric agencies. See Nerves.

INNOMINA'TUS, Anonymus, (in, and nomen, 'a name,') (F.) Innominé, Anonyme. Having no name. See Anonymous.

INNOMINATA ARTE'RIA, Brachiocephalic artery, Arteria anonyma, Right Subclavian, (F.) Artère innominée, Artère brachio-céphalique (Ch.), is the trunk common to the right primitive carotid and to the subclavian. It arises from the anterior part of the arch of the aorta, ascends obliquely to the right, along the trachea; and, after a course of about an inch in length, divides into two trunks, which go off at right angles. The one is external—the right subclavian proper; the other superior—the primitive carotid of the same side.

INNOMINATA CARTILAGO, Cricoid.

INNOMINATA CAV'ITAS. A cavity of the outer ear, between the helix and anthelex.

INNOMINATA FOSSA, see Fossa—i. Linea, see Ilio-pectinea Linea.

INNOMINATA MINO'RA OSSA, Lesser Ossa innominata, Ossicula innominata. Some anatomists have given this name to the three cuneiform bones of the tarsus.

INNOMINATA OSSICULA, Innominata minora ossa—i. Tunica Oculi, Sclerotic.

INNOMINATA VE'NÆ, OF VIEU'SSENS. Vieussens has given this name to two or three veins, which arise on the anterior surface and right margin of the heart, and open into the auricle towards its right margin. The term VENÆ INNOMINATÆ OF MECKEL is given to the brachiocephalic veins, which are generally included in the description of the subclavian vein, and correspond to the arteria innominata, being formed by the union of the internal jugular vein and the subclavian properly so called, which correspond to the common carotid and subclavian arteries.

INNOMINATI SEU ANONYMI NERV. Some anatomists have thus called the nerves of the fifth pair.

INNOMINATUM FORA'MEN. A foramen, near the middle of the anterior surface of the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, leading backwards for the passage of the Vidian nerve, reflected from the 2d branch of the 5th to the portio dura of the 7th pair.

INNOMINATUM OS, Os Coxen'dicis seu Coxæ seu anonymum seu pelvis lateralis, Ache-bone, Aitch-bone, (F.) Os innominé, Os Coxal, Os anonyme. A very large, flat bone, which forms the anterior and lateral paries of the pelvis. It is curved upon itself in two opposite directions. In the first periods of life, it is composed of three portions;—the ilium, ischium, and pubis, which join each other in the acetabulum. It is articulated before with its fellow,—behind with the sacrum; and laterally with the femur.

INNOMINÉ, Innominatus.

INNUTRITIO OSSUM, Rachitis.

INO, (is, ινος, 'a fibre,') in composition. fibre.

INOC'ULABLE, (inoculare (in, and oculus, 'an eye,') 'to ingraft,') Capable of inoculation, or of being communicated by inoculation.

INOCULA'TION, Inoculatio, Insi'tio, Insi'tio variola'rum. Any operation by which small-pox, for example, may be artificially communicated, by introducing the virus of the particular disease into the economy, by means of a puncture or scratch made in the skin. When the word inoculation is used alone, it usually means that for the small-pox.—Variola'tion. See Syphilization.

INOCULATION, COWPOX, Vaccination—i. Jennerian. Vaccination.

INOCULATOR, In'sitor. One who practises inoculation.

INODULAIRE, (from νωδης, 'fibrous,') see Tissue, inodular.

INODULAR TISSUE, see Tissue, inodular.

INODULE. Tissue, inodular.

INOGENESIS, (ino, and γενεσις, 'generation,') Inosis.

INOHYLOMA, gen. Inohylo'matis, (ino, 'υλη, 'matter,' and ομα.) Tumour, fibrous.

INOHYMENT'ITIS, (ino, 'υμην, 'a membrane,' and ιτις.) Inflamma'tio telæ fibro'se. Inflammation of the fibrous tissue.

INOMA, (from ιν, gen. ωος, 'a fibre,') Scirrhus. Tumour, fibrous.

INONCTION, Inunction.

INOPEX'IA, (ino, and πηξις, 'coagulation,') Increased coagulability of fibrin.

INOPOLYPUS, (ino, and πολυπους,) see Polypus.

INORGAN'IC, Inorgan'icus, Unor'ganized, (F.) Inorgan'ique, (in, and οργανον, 'an organ,') A term applied to bodies which have no organs;—such as minerals. At the present day, naturalists admit but two classes of bodies,—the organized and inorganic. Parts of the body which, like the epidermis, are devoid of blood vessels and nerves, have been called anorgan'ic.

INOSCLERO'MA, gen. Inosclero'matis, (ino, and σκληρωμα, 'induration,') Induration of the fibrous tissue.

INOSCULATIO, (in, and osculum, dim. of os, 'a mouth,') Anastomosis.

INOSIS, (ιν, gen. ωος, 'a fibre,') Hyperinosis. Also, fibre formation, Inogen'esis.

IN'OSITE, In'osit, Muscle sugar, (from ιν, gen. ωος, 'a fibre,') An unfermentable sugar, found only in muscle.

INOSTEATO'MA, (ino, and steatoma.) A tumour of a mixed fibrous and steatomatous character.

INQUIES, Inquietude.

INQUIETUDE, Inquietude.

INQUIETATIO, Inquietu'do, In'quies, Inquieta'tio, Jactita'tio, (in, and quies, quiet'is, 'rest,') Agitation or trouble, caused by indisposition. Restlessness.

INQUINAMENTUM, (inquinare, 'to pollute,') Miasm.

INQUISITIO MEDICOLEGALIS, (in, and quæere, quæsitum, 'to search,') see Medicolegal.

INSALIVATION, Insaliva'tio, (in, and saliva.) The mixture of the food with the saliva, and other secretions of the mouth.

INSALU'BRIOUS, Insalu'bris, (in, and salu'bris, 'healthy,') That which is unhealthy,—which injures the health.

INSANABILIS, (in, sanare, 'to cure,' and habilis, 'able,') Incurable.

INSANE, Insanus: (in, and sanus, 'sound,') Alienus'tus, Cra'zy, Mad, Nonsane, Dement'ed, De-ranged, Bed'lamite, (Sc.) Du'ft, Wod, (F.) Aliéné, Fou, Insensé. One affected with mental aberration, or of unsound mind.

INSANIA, Mania—i. Cadiva, Epilepsy—i. Lupina, Lycanthropia—i. Puerperarum, Mania, puerperal.

INSANITAS, Insanity.

INSAN'ITY, Insania, Insan'itas. Mental aliena'tion, Abaliena'tio seu Alienatio Men'tis, Arrept'io, Unsound Mind, Derangement, Deranged intellect, Cra'ziness, Madness, Phrensy, Frenzy, (Sc.) Duff'in, Duff'ing, Wod'nes; Aphros'yné, Ephro'nia, Ephros'yné, Paral'ugé, Parallax'is, Delir'ia, Vesa'nies, Delir'ium (Crichton), Insipi-erentia, (F.) Folie, Egarement d'Esprit, Paraphré-nie, Cérébrie. This term includes all the varieties of unsound mind,—Mania, Melancholia, Moral Insanity, Dementia, and Idiocy. A slight degree of insanity is sometimes popularly called "a kink in the head;" in Scotland, "a bee in the bonnet."

INSANITY, HOMICIDAL, see Homicidal—i. Incoherent, Dementia—i. Moral, Pathomania—i. Puerperal, Mania, puerperal—i. Religious, Sebastomania—i. Senile, Delirium senile—i. Suicidal, see Suicide.

INSANUS, Insane.

INSCRIPTION, (in, and scribere, scriptum, 'to write,') see Matriculate.

INSCRIPTIONES TENDIN'EE MUSCULO'RUM, Intersectio'nes seu Enercatio'nes tendin'ee musculo'rum, Interme'dia ligamenta'lia seu ner'væ. The tendinous portions which cross several muscles, and especially the straight muscles of the abdomen.

INSEC'TICIDE, (insecum, 'an insect, and cædere, 'to kill,') A substance that destroys insects.

INSEMINATION, (in, and semen, gen. seminis, 'seed,') see Ejaculation.

INSENESCENTIA, (in, and senescere, 'to grow old,') Agerasia.

INSENSE, Insane.

INSENSIBIL'ITY, Anæsth'esia, Insensibil'itas, (in, sensus, 'feeling,' and habilis, 'able,') Loss or absence of sensibility. It is very common in cerebral affections, and may extend to every part, or be limited to one or more. Some organs are much more sensible than others. The bones, cartilages, ligaments, &c., are insensible in health, but acutely sensible in disease.

INSEN'SIBLE, Sensibilita'te ca'rens. That which is devoid of sensibility. This word is applied, also, to phenomena which cease to be appreciable to the senses. Thus, we say, the pulse becomes insensible.

INSERT'ION, Inser'tio, Symph'ysis, Eno'sis, (inserere, insertum (in, and serere, 'to join or knit,') 'to ingraft,') (F.) Attache. The attachment of one part to another. Insertions occur chiefly in bones, cartilages, and fibrous organs; thus, we speak of the insertion of muscular fibres into a tendon or aponeurosis; the insertion of a tendon, aponeurosis, or ligament, into a cartilage or bone. The word insertion has likewise been used by pathologists for the act of inoculating or introducing a virus into the body.

INSES'SIO, (insidere, insestum (in, and sedere, 'to sit in,') This term is, sometimes, applied to a vapour bath, the person being seated in a perforated chair, beneath which a vessel, filled with hot water, or the hot decoction of some plant, is placed. See Bath, half, and Semicupium.

INSESSUS, Bath, half.

INSCIUM, (inseco, 'to cut up,') Iscium.

INSIDEN'TIA, (insideo (in, and sedere, 'to sit in or upon,') Epis'tasis. Any things which swim on or in—the urine, for example. It is opposed to the Hypos'tases or subsidentia.

INSIPIEN'TIA, (in, and sapiens, 'wise,') Insanity.

INSITIO, (inserere, insitum, 'to engraft,') Grafting, Inoculation—i. Ciliorum, Blepharoplastice—i. Dentis, Transplantation Dentis—i. Variolarum, Inoculation.

INSOLATION, Insola'tio (in, and sol, 'the sun,') Soliva'tio, Aprica'tio, Helio'sis, Heli'osis, Heliono'sis, Siri'osis. Exposure to the sun. Exposure of a patient to the rays of the sun is, sometimes, had recourse to, with the view of rousing the vital forces when languishing, or of producing irritation of the skin. Insolation is occasionally used in the same sense as coup de soleil.

In Pharmacy, insolation means the drying of chemical and pharmaceutical substances.

INSOLATIONE DE PRIMIVERA, ('spring insolation,') Pellagra.

INSOM'NIA, Insom'nitas, Sahara, Zoara, Per-rig'illum, Pernoctatio, App'nia, Agryp'nia, Ahypp'nia, Anyp'nia, Typhom'nia, Sleep'lessness, Vig'itance, (in, negative, and somnus, 'sleep,') 'absence of sleep,') This may exist alone, and constitute a true disease; or it may be connected with another affection. It is an unequivocal sign of suffering in some organ; even when the patient experiences no pain.

INSOMNIUM, (in, and somnus, 'sleep,') Somnium.

INSPECTIO MEDICOLEGALIS, (inspicere, inspectum, 'to look into,') see Medicolegal.

INSPIR'ATEUR, Inspiratory.

INSPIR'ATION, Inspira'tio, Empneumato'sis, Eisp'noe, Adspira'tio, Aspira'tio, (in, and spirare, spiratum, 'to breathe,') The action by which the air penetrates into the interior of the lungs. A movement opposed to that of expiration. As regards the average quantity of air received into the lungs at each inspiration, there is much discrepancy amongst observers. The following table sufficiently exhibits this:—

|  | Cubic inches at each inspiration. |
|--|-----------------------------------|
| Reil .....   | 42 to 100                         |
| Menzies,Sauvages,Hales,Haller,Ellis,Sprengel,Simmerring,Thomson,Bostock, | 40                                |
| Jurin .....  | 35 to 38                          |
| Fontana .....  | 35                                |
| Richerand .....  | 30 to 40                          |
| Dalton (John) .....  | 30                                |
| Jeffreys .....   | 26                                |
| Herbst .....   | 24 to 30                          |
| Herholdt .....   | 20 to 29                          |
| Jurine and Couthupe .....  | 20                                |
| Allen and Pepys .....  | 16½                               |
| J. Borelli .....   | 15 to 40                          |
| Goodwyn .....  | 14                                |
| Sir H. Davy .....  | 13 to 17                          |
| Abernethy and Mojon .....  | 12                                |
| Keutsch .....  | 6 to 12                           |

From 20 to 25 cubic inches may be regarded as a fair average.

INSPIRATION, CROWING, see Asthma thymicum—i. Muscles of, see Inspiratory.

INSPIRATION OF VENOUS BLOOD. By this is meant the aspiration of blood towards the heart, occasioned by the approach to a vacuum produced by the dilatation of the thorax during inspiration.

INSPIRATORY, Inspiratio'ni inser'vians, (F.) Inspirateur. A name given to muscles, which, by their contraction, augment the size of the chest, and thus produce inspiration. The diaphragm and intercostal muscles are the chief agents of inspiration. In cases where deep inspirations are necessary, the action of these muscles is aided by the contraction of the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, subclavius, serratus major anticus, scapularis, serratus posticus superior, &c. Most of these muscles become inspiratory, by taking their fixed point at the part which they ordinarily move, acting inversely and elevating the ribs.

INSPI'SANT, Inspis'ans, (in, and epissare, epissatum, 'to thicken,') Any remedial agent that renders the blood thicker, directly, or indirectly. The opposite of diluent.

INSPISSA'TIO, Pyeno'sis. The act of rendering thick; as in the formation of an extract—Suc'cus Inspissatus.

INSTEP, Col'lum pe'dis, Neck of the foot, (F.) Cou-de-pied, Cou-de-pied. The projection at the upper part of the foot, near its articulation with the leg—the tarsus.

INSTILLA'TION, Enstalla'tis, Instilla'tio, (in,

'in,' and stilla, 'a drop,') The act of pouring a liquid drop by drop.

INSTINCT, (L.) Instinctus, (instinguere, instinctum, 'to impel,') 'inwardly moved,') Brut'ia, Hor'me. The action of the living principle, whenever manifestly directing its operations to the health, preservation, or reproduction of a living frame or any part of such frame—Mol'i'men natu'ræ salutari'um. The law of instinct is, consequently, the law of the living principle, and instinctive actions are the actions of the living principle. Instinct is natural. Reason is acquired.

INSTINCTIVE, Instinctus, (F.) Instinctif. Relating to or caused by instinct; as instinctive actions. See Emotional, and Instinct. Those instinctive actions of animals which are owing to impressions made on the sensory ganglia, exciting respondent motor influences that are propagated to the various muscles of the body, are termed consensual. Consensual movements which accompany voluntary efforts without our consciousness are termed associated, (F.) Associés.

INSTITUTES OF MEDICINE, (institutum, 'a principle,' from instituere, (in, and statuere,) 'to establish,') see Theory of medicine.

INSTITUTUM ORTHOPÆDICUM, Orthopedic institution.

INSTRUMENT, Instrumen'tum, (from instruere, (in, and struere,) 'to put together,') Or'ganum. A tool, an agent.

INSTRUMENTA, Pudibilia.

INSTRUMENTUM, Instrument—i. Chirurgicum. A surgical tool or instrument.

INSTRUMENTUM DIGESTIO'NIS. The digestive apparatus.

INSTRUMENTUM INSTRUMENTORUM, Manus.

INSUFFIC'IENTY, (F.) Insuffisance; (in, and sufficere, 'to suffice,') Inadequateness to any end or purpose, — as Insufficiency of the valves of the heart, (F.) Insuffisance des valvules du Cœur; — a condition in which they are not adapted, as in health, to properly close the apertures.

INSUFFISANCE, Insufficiency—i. des Valvules du Cœur, Insufficiency of the valves of the heart.

INSUFFLA'TION, Insuffla'tio, (in, suf, and flare, 'to blow,') The act of blowing a gas or vapour into some cavity of the body; as when tobacco smoke is injected into the rectum; or when air is blown into the mouths of newborn children to excite the respiratory function.

INSULA, ('an island,') Insula cerebri.

INSULA CEREBRI, Island or In'sula of Reil. The intermediate lobe of the brain, Lo'bus interme'dius cerebri. A remarkable group of convolutions—Gy'ri oper'ti—within the fissure of Sylvius. It is called, by Cruveilhier, Lob'ule of the fissure of Syl'vius, Lobule of the corpus striatum. The 'island' of Reil, with the substantia perforata, forms the base of the corpus striatum.

INSULA SANGUINIS, see Blood.

INSULÆ, Maculæ albæ—i. Pulmonales, see Pulmo.

INSULTUS, (insilio, insultum, 'to attack,') Attack, Paroxysm.

INSURANCE OF LIFE, see Life Insurance.

INTEGRITAS, (integer, 'whole,') Sanitas, Virginity.

INTEGUMENT, Integumentum, Tegumentum, Tegumen, Teg'imen, Teg'men, Involu'crum seu Velamen'tum corp'oris commu'ne, Vela'men seu Velamentum natu'rum, (in, and tegere, tectum, 'to cover,') (F.) Tégument. Any thing which serves to cover, to envelop. The skin, including the cuticle, rete mucosum, and cutis vera, is the common integument or tegument of the body.

INTEGUMENTA FœTÛS. Membranes of the fœtus.

INTEGUMENTUM, Integument—i. Commu'ne, Integumentum.

INTELLECT, Intellectus, Nous, Mens, Gno'mē, Noos, Nūs, (intelligere, intellectum, (inter, and legere, 'to choose;') 'to understand,' 'conceive,' 'know.') (F.) Entendement, Intelligence. The aggregate of the intellectual faculties—perception, formation of ideas, memory, and judgment. Their exercise constitutes intellection, Noe'sis, Syn'esis.

INTELLECT, DERANGED, Insanity.

INTELLECTION, see Intellect.

INTELLIGENCE, Intellect.

INTEMPERANCE, Intemperant'ia, Immoderant'ia, Immoderatio, Acra'sia, Acola'sia, Ples'monē, Amel'ria, Aples'tia, (in, and temperare, 'to temper.') Immoderate use of food and drink, especially the latter;—a fruitful source of disease.

INTEMPERIES. Dyscrasia. Derangement in the constitution of the atmosphere and of the seasons; bad constitution; derangement or disorder in the humours of the body.

INTENSIVUS, (in, and tendere, tensum, 'to stretch;') Entaticus.

INTENTION, Intentio, (in, and tendere, tensum or tentum, 'to stretch;') Propositum. The object which one proposes. In surgery, a wound is said to heal by the first intention, Reunio per primam intentio'nem, when cicatrization occurs without suppuration; union by the second intention, Reunio per secundam intentio'nem, being that which does not occur until the surfaces have suppurated. To obtain union by the first intention, the edges of a recent wound must be brought in apposition and kept together by means of adhesive plasters and a proper bandage. Delpech has substituted for those expressions, Réunion primitive, and Réunion secondaire.

INTER, in composition, between.

INTERANEA, (intra, 'within;') Entrails.

INTERARTICULAR, Interarticula'ris; (F.) Interarticulaire, (inter, and articulus, 'a joint;') Parts situate between the articulations are so called; as interarticular cartilages, interarticular ligaments, &c.

INTERCADENCE, Intercadent'ia, Intercident'ia, (in, and cadere, 'to fall;') Disorder of the arterial pulsations, so that, every now and then, a supernumerary pulsation occurs. The pulse, in such case, is said to be intercurrent.

INTERCALARY, Intercala'ris, Inter'cidens, Embol'inos, Interpola'tus, Provocto'rius, (F.) Intercalcaire, (intercalare, 'to insert;') The days which occur between those that are critical. The term has, also, been applied to the days of apyrexia in intermittent fevers.

INTERCELLULAR, Intercellula'ris, (F.) Intercellulaire; (inter, and cellula, 'a small cell, a cellule;') That which is between cells or cellules.

INTERCELLULAR FLUID, Liquor Sanguinis.

INTERCELLULAR PASSAGES. A term given by Mr. Rainey to irregular passages through the substance of the lung, which form the terminations of the bronchial tubes, are clustered with aircells, and not lined by mucous membrane. [?]

INTERCELLULAR SUBSTANCE, see Cytoblastema.

INTERCEPTIO, (from intercipere, interceptum, inter, and capere, 'to intercept;') A bandage by the aid of which the ancients proposed to arrest the progress of the material cause of gout and rheumatism; and which consisted in covering the affected limbs with carded wool; surrounding them, afterwards, with broad bandages, applied from the fingers to the axilla, or from the toes to the groin.

INTERCEPTIO INTESTINORUM, Ileus.

INTERCERVICAUX, (inter, and cervix, gen. cervicis, 'neck;') Interspinales colli.

INTERCIDENS, (inter, and cadere, 'to fall;') Intercalary.

INTERCIDENTIA, Intercadence.

INTERCILIUM, (inter, and cilium, 'eyelid;') Mezophryon.

INTERCLAVICULAR, Interclavicula'ris, (F.) Interclaviculaire, (inter, and clavicula, 'a clavicle;') That which is placed between the clavicles.

INTERCLAVICULAR LIGAMENT is a fibrous bundle, placed transversely above the extremity of the sternum, between the heads of the two clavicles. This ligament is flat. Its fibres, which are always longer above than below, are separated by small apertures, which are traversed by vessels. It prevents the separation of the two clavicles in the forced depression of the shoulder.

INTERCOSTAL, Intercosta'lis, (inter, and costa, 'a rib;') Mesopleu'rus, Mesopleu'rius. That which is situate between the ribs.

INTERCOSTAL ARTERIES vary in number. There is constantly, however, a superior, Arteria Intercosta'lis superior seu Intercosta'lis subclavia, which is given off from the posterior part of the subclavian, and which sends branches into the first two or three intercostal spaces; and, generally, eight or nine inferior or aortic intercostals. These arise from the lateral and posterior parts of the pectoral aorta, and ascend obliquely in front of the vertebral column, to gain the intercostal spaces, where they divide into a dorsal branch and an intercostal, properly so called.

INTERCOSTAL MUSCLES are distinguished into internal, — inter-pléurocostaux of Dumas, — and external. The former are inserted into the inner lip, the latter into the outer lip of the edge of the ribs. The fibres of the external intercostals are directed obliquely downwards and forwards; and those of the internal downwards and backwards. Both are inspiratory or expiratory muscles, according as they take their origin on the upper or lower rib. Some small, fleshy fibres, seen occasionally at the inner surface of the thorax, descending obliquely from one rib to another, have been called Infra-costales, (F.) Soucostaux.

INTERCOSTAL NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve.

INTERCOSTAL NERVES, Branches souscostales (Ch.), Costal or Dorsal nerves, proceed from the anterior branches of the dorsal nerves. They are twelve in number, and are distributed especially to the muscles of the parietes of the chest and abdomen.

INTERCOSTAL SPACE, Intervallum seu Interstitium intercostale, Mesopleu'ricum, Mesopleu'rium, is the interval which separates one rib from that immediately above or below it.

INTERCOSTAL VEINS are distinguished like the arteries. The right superior intercostal vein is often wanting. When it exists, it opens into the back part of the subclavian. The same vein of the left side is very large. It communicates with the demi-azygos, receives the left bronchial vein, and opens into the corresponding subclavian. The right inferior intercostal veins open into the vena azygos; and those of the left into the demi-azygos.

INTERCOSTHUMERAL NERVES. So called from their origin and distribution. They are the cutaneous branches of the second and third intercostal nerves.

INTERCURRENT, Intercurrens, (inter, and currere, 'to run;') Diseases are so called which supervene at different seasons of the year, or which cannot be considered as belonging to any particular season. A disease is likewise so termed which occurs in the course of another disease, as Intercurrent Pneumonia.

INTERCUTANEOUS, Subcutaneous.

INTERDENTIUM, (inter, and dens, gen. dentis, 'a tooth;') The interval between teeth of the same order.

INTERDIGITARE, Interdigital.

INTERDIGITAL, Interdigita'lis, (F.) Interdigitaire; (inter, and digitus, 'a finger;') That which relates to the spaces between the fingers. Interdigital space, (F.) Espace interdigitaire, is used, also, for the commissure between the fingers.

INTERDIGIT'IUM. A corn or wart, which grows between the fingers and toes, especially between the latter.

INTERÉPINEUX, Interspinal—i. Cervicæux, Interspinalis colli.

INTERFEMINEUM, (inter, 'between,' and femem. gen. feminis, the inner part of the thigh,) Perinæum. Vulva.

INTERFINIUM NARIUM, (inter, and finis, 'a boundary,') Septum narium.

INTERFEMINEUM, Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFORAMINEUM, Perinæum.

INTERGANGLION'IC, Interganglion'icus, (inter, and ganglion, 'a knot,') An epithet for nervous cords, placed between ganglia, which they connect together.

INTERITUS, (intereo, interitum, 'to perish,') Death.

INTERLOBAR, Interloba'ris, (F.) Interlobaire, (inter, and lobus, 'a lobe,') That which is between the lobes,—as of the lungs.

INTERLOBULAR, Interlobula'ris, (F.) Interlobulaire, Interlobulinaire, (inter, and lobulus, 'a small lobe,') That which is between lobules,—as of the lungs.

INTERLOBULAR FIS'SURES. The intervals between the lobules of the liver. The narrower spaces are called Fissu'ræ interlobula'res, the wider Spa'tia interlobula'ria. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR PLEXUS OF THE BILIARY DUCTS. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR SPACES. The angular interstices formed in the liver by the apposition of several lobules.

INTERLOBULAR TIS'SUE, Tex'tum interlobula'rè, Ligamenta interlobula'ria pulmo'nium. The cellular tissue between the pulmonary lobules.

INTERLOBULAR VEINS, see Liver.

INTERLOBULINAIRE, Interlobular.

INTERMAXILLARY, Intermaxilla'ris, (F.) Intermaxilloire, (inter, and maxilla, 'a jaw,') That which is situate between the maxillary bones.

INTERMAXILLARY BONE, Inci'sive, Pallatine, or La'bial bone, is a bony portion, wedged in between the two superior maxillary bones, which supports the upper incisors. This bone is found in the mammalia; and, also, in the human fœtus.

INTERMÈDE, (inter, and medius, 'middle,') Exipient.

INTERMEDIA LIGAMENTALIA seu NERVEA, Inscriptions tendinæ musculorum.

INTERMÉDIAIRE DE WRISBERG, Portio Wrisbergii.

INTERMEDIATE VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

INTERMENT, PREMATURE, (in, and terra, 'earth,') Zoothapsis.

INTERMIS'SION, Intermis'sio, Dialeip'sis, Dialip'sis, Tempus intercala'rè, Interval'lum, Interval, (inter, and mittere, missum, 'to put or send,') (F.) Intermittence. The interval which occurs between two paroxysms of an intermittent or other disease—during which the patient is almost in his natural state. There is said to be intermission of the pulse, when, in a given number of pulsations, one or more may be wanting.

INTERMITTENCE, Intermission.

INTERMITTENT, Intermit'tens. That which has intermissions.

INTERMITTENT FEVER, Fe'bris intermit'tens, Dialeip'gra, Intermittens, An'etus, Pyretotypo'sis, A'gue, Aque and Fe'ber, Fever and Aque, Palu'dal or Period'ic Fever, (Prov.) Aqah, Coldchill, Shaking, Shakes, (Old Eng.) Ak'sis, Auggere, Axes; (F.) Fièrere intermittente, F. d'Accès, F. des marais, F. Périodique, is a fever consisting of paroxysms, with a complete state of apyrexia in the intervals. The chief types are Quotid'ian, Tertian, and Quart'an. The symptoms of intermittents are those of a decided and completely marked cold stage, or Stage of Concentration, (F.) Stade de froid, attended with paleness; collapse; impaired sensibility; and coldness, more or less diffused, followed by general rigors. After this occurs the hot stage, or stage of expansion, (F.) Stade de la chaleur, the heat returning partially and irregularly, and at length becoming universal, and much above the standard of health.

The pulse is now hard and strong; tongue white; urine, high-coloured; thirst, considerable. At length, the sweating stage, or stage of termination, (F.) Stade de sueur, makes its appearance; the moisture usually beginning on the forehead, face, and neck, and soon extending universally; the heat abating; thirst ceasing; the urine throwing down a sediment, and the functions being gradually restored to their wonted state. The tertian type is the most common, and the quartan the most severe. The quotidian more readily changes into a remittent and continued fever. The quartan has, generally, the longest cold stage, the tertian the longest hot. The chief exciting cause is marsh miasma, the malaria of the Italians. Ague, also, occurs in districts where there are no marshy emanations. Such districts are, generally, of a volcanic nature;—further we know not. When the disease has once attacked an individual, it is apt to recur. The prognosis is, in general, favourable, as far as regards life; but long protracted intermittents are apt to induce visceral obstructions, and engorgements, which may end in dropsy. In some countries, the disease is of a very pernicious character. The indications of treatment are, 1. To abate the violence of the paroxysm; and, 2. To prevent its return. The first indication demands the adoption of the general principles and remedies required in ordinary fever. The second is the most important. The period of apyrexia is that for action. The means for fulfilling this indication are:—the use of emetics, purgatives, anti-periodics, as cinchona, quinia, &c., arsenic, and forcible impressions made on the mind of the patient.

INTERMUS'ULAR, Intermuscula'ris, (F.) Intermusculaire, (inter, and musculus, 'a muscle,') That which is placed between muscles.

INTERMUSCULAR APONEURO'SES are aponeurotic laminae or septa, situate between muscles, to which they often give attachment.

INTERNAL, In'ner, Inter'nus. That which is placed on the inside. This epithet is given to parts that look towards an imaginary central plane, which divides the body into two equal and symmetrical portions, as well as to those which correspond with a cavity. Thus, we say—the internal or inner surface of the arm or thigh, skull, &c.

INTERNAL DISEASES, Morbi inter'ni, are those which occupy the inner parts of the body. Their investigation belongs to the physician; external diseases falling under the management of the surgeon.

INTERNAT, (F.) The post or office of an interne.

INTERNE, see Housesurgeon.

INTERNODIA DIGITORUM MANUS, (inter, and nodus, 'a knot,') Phalanges of the fingers—i. Digitum pedis, Phalanges of the toes.

INTERNO'DIUM. The part of the fingers between the joints. A phalanx.

INTERNUN'CIAL, Internuncia'lis, (inter, and nuncius, 'a messenger,') Relating or belonging to a messenger between parties. A term applied by Mr. Hunter to the functions of the nervous system.

INTERNUNTII DIES, Critical days.

INTERNUS AURIS, ('internal of the ear,') Tensor tympani—i. Mallei, Tensor tympani.

INTEROSSEOUS, Interosseus, (F.) Interosseus, (inter, and os, 'a bone.')

That which is situated between the bones.

INTEROSSEOUS ARTERIES OF THE FOREARM AND HAND. Of these there are several. The common interosseous artery arises from the posterior part of the ulnar, a little below the bicipital tuberosity of the radius; passes backwards and divides into two branches: the one called anterior interosseous descends vertically, anterior to the interosseous ligament; the other, called posterior interosseous, passes above the ligament, appears at its posterior part and divides into two great branches,—the posterior recurrent radial and the posterior interosseous, properly so called. In the hand,—1. The dorsal metacarpal interosseous arteries are given off by the dorsalis carpi, a division of the radial artery. 2. The palmar interosseous arteries, which arise from the convexity of the deep palmar arch, and give off the middle interosseous arteries. 3. The dorsal interosceous of the index, proceeding directly from the radial artery. In the foot, are distinguished:—1. The dorsal interosseous arteries, three in number, which arise from the artery of the metatarsus, a branch of the dorsalis tarsi. 2. The plantar interosseous arteries, which are, also, three in number, and arise from the plantar arch.

INTEROSSEOUS LIGAMENTS. Ligaments seated between certain bones, which they unite; such are the ligaments between the radius and ulna, and between the tibia and fibula.

INTEROSSEOUS MUSCLES. These occupy the spaces between the bones of the metacarpus and metatarsus; and, consequently, belong,—some to the hand, others to the foot.

INTEROSSEOUS NERVE is a branch, given off by the median nerve, which descends before the interosseous ligament, accompanying the artery of the same name.

INTEROSSEOUS VEINS have the same arrangement as the arteries.

INTEROSSEUS MANUS, (F.) Muscle interosseux de la main,—Métacarpo-phalangien-latéral suspalmaire et métacarpo-phalangien latéral, (Ch.) These muscles are seven in number; two for each of the three middle fingers, and one for the little finger. Four are situated on the back of the hand, and three only in the palm. They are inserted into the metacarpal bones, and send a tendon to the tendon of the extensor communis. According to their office, they are, to each finger, an adductor and an abductor. The index has a dorsal abductor and a palmar one. The middle finger has two dorsal muscles for adductor and abductor; the ring finger has a dorsal adductor and a palmar abductor; and the little finger has only one interosseous abductor, which is palmar. These muscles produce abduction and adduction of the fingers, which they can also extend, owing to their connexion with the extensor tendons.

INTEROSSEUS PEDIS, Métatarso-phalangien-latéral, (Ch.) The number, arrangement, shape, and uses of these are the same as in the case of the preceding muscles. Four are dorsal, and three plantar: six belong to the three middle toes and one to the little toe. The great toe is devoid of them. As in the hand, they are distinguished, in each toe, into abductor and adductor.

INTERNUS QUARTUS, Prior annularis—i. Secundus, Prior medii digiti.

INTEROSSEUX DE LA MAIN, Interosseus manus.

INTERPARIETAL BONE, Os Interparietale. A bone found in the skulls of the children of the Peruvian races. It lies in the situation of the upper angle of the occipital bone, where the parietal bones separate from each other; and is the analogue of the interparietal bone of ruminants and carnivora.

INTERPEDUNCULAR, Interpeduncularis; (inter, and pedunculi, 'peduncles.')

A term, applied to that which is placed between the peduncles of the encephalon,—as Interpeduncular space; a lozengeshaped interval, behind the diverging peduncles or crura of the cerebrum, in which are found the posterior perforated space, corpora albicantia, tuber cinereum, infundibulum, and pituitary body.

INTERPELLATUS (Morbus,) (interpello, [inter, and pello,] 'I interrupt.')

A term, by which Paracelsus designated those diseases whose progress is unequal, and paroxysms irregular.

INTERPLÉVRO-COSTAUX, ('interpleuro-costals,')

Intercostal muscles.

INTERPOLATUS, (interpolare, interpolarum, 'to give a new form to.') Intercalary.

INTERRUPTIO MENSTRUATIONIS, Amenorrhœa.

INTERSCAPULAR, Interscapularis, (F.) Interscapulaire, (inter, and scapula.)

A term, which is between the shoulders; as the interscapular region. The Interscapular cavities, Cavitates scapularæ, are the depressions between the scapulæ and the spinous processes of the vertebrae.

INTERSCAPULIUM. The spine of the scapula.

INTERSECTIO, (inter, and seco, sectum, 'to cut.')

Decussation, Intersection.

INTERSECTION, Intersectio, Diacopœ. The point where two lines meet and cut each other.

The name aponeurotic intersection is given to fibrous bands, which certain muscles present in their length, and by which they seem interrupted. Aponeurotic intersections are found in the recti muscles of the abdomen; in the semimembranosus, complexus, sterno-thyroideus, &c.

INTERSECTIONS TENDINEÆ MUSCULORUM, Inscriptiones tendineæ musculorum.

INTERSEPIMENTUM THORACIS, (intersepicio, 'to fence about.')

Mediastinum.

INTERSEPTA HORIZONTALIA PACCHIONI, Tentorium.

INTERSEPTUM, (inter, and septum, 'a partition.')

The uvula. The septum narium. The diaphragm.

INTERSEPTUM NARIUM, Septum narium—i. Virginalis, Hymen.

INTERSPINAL, Interspinalis, (inter, and spina, 'the spine.')

(F.) Interspinaux. That which is seated between the spinous processes.

INTERSPINAL LIGAMENT, Membraena interspinalis, (F.) Ligament interspinaux.

These occupy the intervals between the spinous processes in the back and loins. In the neck, they are replaced by the muscles of the same name. They prevent the too great flexion of the spine, and keep the spinous processes in situ. The outermost thickened portions of these are, sometimes, termed Ligamenta a'picium.

INTERSPINALES COLLI, Spinales Colli minores, Spinaliti, (F.) Interspinaux-cervicaux, Intercervicaux, (Ch.)

These are twelve in number, and occupy, in two parallel rows, the intervals between the spinous processes of the cervical vertebrae, from that of the atlas and vertebra dentata, to that between the last cervical and first dorsal vertebra. They are flat, thin, and quadrilateral. These muscles contribute to the extension of the neck and to throwing the head backwards.

INTERSPINALES DORSI ET LUMBORUM; portions of the Transversaire-epineux of Boyer, and the sacro-spinal of Chaussier. These muscles are of two kinds. The one (Muscle grand epineux du dos, of Winslow) representing fleshy bundles of different lengths, applied upon the lateral surfaces of the spinous processes, from the third dorsal vertebra to the second lumbar. The other (Muscle petit épineux du dos, Winslow) covered by the preceding. They are situate on each side of the interspinal ligament, in the form of small, short, flat bundles, which pass from one spinous process to the second, third or fourth above it. These muscles aid in extending the vertebral column; and incline it a little to one side, when they act on one side only.

INTERSTICE, Interstitium, Arwo'ma, (inter, and sistere, 'to place.') Diaste'ma, Intercallum. Anatomists have given this name to the intervals between organs. The iliac crest, crista ilii, for example, has two lips and an interstice between them, which affords attachment to the lesser oblique muscle of the abdomen.

INTERSTICE, Pore.

INTERSTITIAL, Interstitialis, (F.) Interstitiel. Applied to that which occurs in the interstices of an organ,—as 'interstitial absorption,' 'interstitial pregnancy,' &c.

INTERSTITIUM, Interstices—i. Ciliare, Ciliary ligament—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space—i. Jugulare, Throat.

INTERINCTUS, (inter, and tingere, tinctum, 'to dye.') Discrete.

INTERTRACHÉLIENS, (inter, and τραχηλος, 'the neck.') Intertransversales colli.

INTERTRANSVERSAIRE, Intertransversalis—i. des Lombes, Intertransversales lumborum.

INTERTRANSVERSALIS, Intertransversarius, (F.) Intertransversaire. That which is placed between the transverse processes of the vertebrae.

INTERTRANSVERSALES COLLI, (F.) Intertransversaires cervicaux, Intertrachéliens, (Ch.) These are small, muscular bundles; quadrilateral; thin and flat; situate, in pairs, in the intervals between the transverse processes of the neck, except between the first and second, where there is only one. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former are six in number; the latter five. These muscles bring the transverse processes of the neck nearer each other, and contribute to the lateral flexion of the neck.

INTERTRANSVERSALES LUMBORUM, Musculi intertransversarii lumborum, (F.) Intertransversaires des lombes. These are almost entirely fleshy, and ten in number; five on each side. They are similar to the preceding in general arrangement; except that they are more marked, and not placed in two rows. Each intertransverse space contains only one. They are quadrilateral, and flat. The first occupies the space between the transverse processes of the first lumbar and the last dorsal vertebra; and the last is between that of the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebrae. These muscles incline the lumbar region laterally; and straighten it when inclined to one side.

INTERTRIGO, gen. Intertrig'inis, (inter, and terere, 'to rub.') Chafing—i. Podicis, Chafing.

INTERVAL, (inter, and vallum, 'a rampart.') Intermisium—i. Lucid, see Lucid.

INTERVALLUM, (same etymon.) Intermisium, Interstices—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space.

INTERVENIUM, (inter, and vena, 'a vein.') Mesoplebium.

INTERVERTEBRAL, Intervertebralis, (inter, and vertebra.) That which is situate between the vertebrae.

INTERVERTEBRAL CARTILAGES, Fibrocartilages or discs, Ligamenta intervertebralia, Fibrocartilaginea intervertebrales. These organs are of a fibrocartilaginous nature; sections of a cylinder; flexible; whitish; resisting; and situate between the bodies of the vertebrae,—from the space between the second and third as far as that between the last vertebra and sacrum. Their form is accommodated to that of the vertebra with which they are in connexion; so that, in the neck and loins, they are oval, whilst in the dorsal region they are nearly circular.

INTERVERTEBRAL DISCS, Intervertebral cartilages—i. Fibrocartilages, Intervertebral cartilages.

INTESTABILIS, (in, and testis, 'a testicle.') Castratus.

INTESTATUS, Castratus.

INTESTIN, Intestine.

INTESTINAL, Intestinalis, Entericus, Enteric, (F.) Entérique, (intus, 'within.') That which belongs to the intestines,—as intestinal canal, &c. Bordeu uses the term Pouls intestinal for a pulse, which he conceived to announce an approaching crisis by the intestines.

INTESTINAL JUICE, Succus entericus.

INTESTINAL TUBE OR TRACT, Cana'lis seu Tractus intestinalis. The canal formed by the intestines from the pyloric orifice of the stomach to the anus.

INTESTINE, Intestinum. Ent'eron, Chor'da, Gut, Ned'ya (pl.), Pan'tices (pl.), Bocl'i (pl.), Bow'el, (F.) Intestin, Boya'u. A musculomembranous canal, variously convoluted, which extends from the stomach to the anus, and is situate in the abdominal cavity; the greater part of which it fills. In man, its length is six or eight times that of the body. It is divided into two principal portions, called small intestine and large intestine. The former, Intestinum tenu'is, I. grac'ile, Arw'a, (F.) Intestin grêle, constituting nearly four-fifths of the whole length, begins at the stomach and terminates in the right iliac region. It is divided into duodenum, jejunum and ileum. Some anatomists give the name small intestine to the last two only; which are kept in place by the mesentery, and form a large paquet, occupying the umbilical and hypogastric regions, a part of the flanks, of the iliac regions, and of the cavity of the pelvis. It is composed of, 1. A serous membrane, which is peritoneal. 2. Of a muscular coat, whose fibres are very pale, and are placed, in part, longitudinally; but the greater part transversely. 3. Of a whitish, mucous membrane; villous, and forming folds or valves—valvule conniventes—at its inner surface, and furnished with a number of mucous follicles, called glands of Lieberkühn, (Crypts or Follicles of Lieberkühn,) and in the duodenum with the glands of Brunner. The arteries of the small intestine proceed from the superior mesenteric; its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves proceed from the superior mesenteric plexus. The large intestine, Intestinum cras'sum, Megalocœ'lia, (F.) Gros intestin, forms a sequence to the small. It is much shorter, and is solidly attached in the regions of the abdomen which it occupies. It begins in the right iliac region; ascends along the right flank, till beneath the liver, when it crosses the upper part of the abdomen, descends into the left iliac fossa, and plunges into the pelvic cavity, to gain the anus. The great intestine is usually divided into three portions,—the cæcum, colon and rectum. It receives its arteries from the superior and inferior mesenterics. Its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves are furnished by the mesenteric plexuses. Its lymphatic vessels, which are much less numerous than those of the small intestine, pass into the ganglions or glands seated between the different reflections of the peritoneum, which fix it to the abdominal parietes. The use of the intestines is,—in the upper part, to effect the chylification of the food and the absorption of the chyle;—in the lower, to serve as a reservoir, where the excrementitious portion of the food collects; and, also, as an excretory duct, which effects its expulsion.

INTESTINORUM LEVITAS, Lientery.

INTESTINULA CEREBRI, Convolutions (cerebral)—i. Meibomii, Meibomius, glands of.

INTESTINULUM, (dim. of intestinum.) Funiculus umbilicalis.

INTESTINUM, Intestine—i. Cellulatum, Colon—i. Circumvolutum, Ileon—i. Crassum, Colon. see Intestine—i. Gracile, see Intestine—i. Grande, Colon—i. Laxum, Colon—i. Majus, Colon—i. Medium, Mesentery—i. Plenum, Colon—i. Rectum, Rectum—i. Tenne, see Intestine.

INTIMUM UNGUIS, (intimus, 'inmost.') Nail, root of the.

INTONATIO INTESTINALIS, (intonare, intonatum, 'to make a noise.') Borborygmus.

INTORSIO, (in, and torquere, tortum, 'to wrench.') Distortion.

INTOXICATIO, (in, and τοξικον, 'a poison.') Poisoning—i. Arsenicalis, Arsenicium—i. Opiaca, Meconismus—i. Saturnina, Saturnismus.

INTOXICATION, Poisoning, Temulencia—i. Antimoniale, Stibialism—i. des Marais, see Miasm.

INTOXICATION SATURNINE, Lead poisoning; saturnine cachexy. The aggregate of symptoms which present themselves prior to an attack of lead colic.

INTRA (L.), Intro, in composition, within.

INTRAÄRTICULAR, Intraärticula'ris; (intra, 'within,' and articulus, 'a joint.') Relating or appertaining to the interior of a joint—as intraärticular suppuration.

INTRALINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

INTRALOBULAR, Intralobula'ris, (F.) Intralobulaire, Intralobulaire, (intra, and lobulus, 'a lobe.') Relating to the space within a lobe:—as the "intralobular veins," venæ seu venulæ intralobulares seu centrales of the liver—veins which communicate with the interlobular veins, and are the radicles of the hepatic veins.

INTRAOCULAR, Intraöcula'ris, (from intra, and oculus, 'the eye.') That which is within the eye.

INTRA-PELVIO TROCHANTÉRIEN, (intra, pelvis, and trochantère.) Obturator internus.

INTRAÛTERINE, Intraüteri'nus, (intra, and uterus.) That which takes place within the womb—as intraüterine life.

INTRAVAG'INAL, Intravagina'lis, (intra, and vagina.) Relating or appertaining to the interior of the vagina.

INTRAVASA'TION, Intravasa'tio, (intra, and vas, 'a vessel.') The entrance into vessels of matters formed outside of them or in their parietes.

INTRICATURA, (in, and tricolor, tricatus, 'to make difficulties.') Decussation.

INTRIN'SIC, Intrin'secus, (F.) Intrin'sèque, (intra, and secus, 'towards.') Applied to the internal muscles of certain organs, as to those of the ear, tongue, and larynx. Linnæus gave the name Intrin'seci to internal diseases.

INTRO (L.), in composition, see Intro.

INTROITUS PELVIS, (intro, and ire, itum, 'to go.') See Pelvis—i. Vagina, Rima vulvæ, see Vagina.

INTROMIS'SION, Intromis'sio, (intro, and mittere, missum, 'to send.') The act of introducing one body into another—as Intromis'sio Pe'nis, (F.) Intromission de la Verge.

INTROPELVIM'ETER, (F.) Intropelvimètre. An instrument, proposed by Madame Boivin, to measure the diameters of the pelvis. It differs from the pelvimeter of Contouly, in one of its branches being intended to be introduced into the rectum.

INTROSUSCEPTIO, (intro, and suscipio, suscceptum, 'to receive.') Intussusceptio—i. Entropion, Entropion.

INTUBUM, (εντοβον.) Cichorium endivia—i. Erraticum, Cichorium intybus.

INTUMES'CENCE, Intumescen'tia, Onco'sis, Dionco'sis, (intumescere (in, and tumescere), 'to swell.') Augmentation of size in a part or in the whole of the body. Sauvages uses the word Intumescen'tiæ for an order of diseases, in which he comprehends polyseria, pneumatosis, anasarca, œdema, physconia, and pregnancy.

INTUMESCENTIA, Intumescence—i. Gangliiformis, Ganglion of Gasser, see Facial nerve—i. Lactea Mammaram, Sparganosus—i. Lienis, Splenoncus—i. Semilunaris, Ganglion of Gasser.

INTUS INVERSUS, (intus, 'within,' and inversus, 'inverted.') Transposition of the viscera.

INTUSSUSCEPTIO, (intus, 'within,' and suscipio, suscceptum, 'I receive.') Introssusceptio. In physiology—the mode of increase peculiar to organized bodies. In pathology, like Convolvulus, Volutus seu Susceptio seu Parisago'gê intestino'rum, Chordap'sus, Euteroparisago'gê, Indigita'tio, Tornentum, and Invagina'tio, it means the introduction of one part of the intestinal canal—intussusceptum—into another, which serves it as a sort of vagina or sheath. Generally, it is the upper part of the small intestine which is received into the lower—intussuscip'iens—when the intussusception is said to be progres'sive. At times, however, it is retrograde. As the disease cannot be positively detected by the symptoms, it must be treated upon general principles. At times, the invaginated portion has separated and been voided per anum,—the patient recovering. The disease is, however, of a very dangerous character.

INTUSSUSCEPTUM, see Intussusceptio.

INTUSSUSCIP'ENS, see Intussusceptio.

INTYBUM, Cichorium endivia.

INTYBUS HORTENSIS, Cichorium endivia.

INULA, (corr. from Helenum.) [?] See Inula helenium—i. Britannica, I. dysenterica—i. Common, I. helenium—i. Conyzæa, I. dysenterica.

IN'ULA DYSENTERICA. The systematic name of the Lesser Inula, I. Britannica seu Conyze'a, Aster dysenteri'cus seu undulatus, Pulicaria dysenterica, Conyza, C. media, Ar'nica Sueden'sia seu epu'ria, Cuni'la mac'cula seu me'dia, Cunila'go, (Prov.) Mare's fat, (F.) Aunée ou Aulnée antidysentérique, Herbe de Saint Roch. Nat. Ord. Composite. This plant was once considered to possess great antidysenteric virtues. The whole plant is acrid and somewhat aromatic.

INULA HELEN'UM. The systematic name of the El'ecampane, Eu'ula, E. camp'na, Elen'ium, Nectarium, Helen'ium, Aster helen'ium seu officinalis, Corvisar'tia helen'um, Common In'ula, (F.) Aunée ou Aulnée, Aunée ou Aulnée officinale. The root In'ula (Ph. U. S.) was formerly in high esteem in dyspepsia, cachexia, pulmonary affections, &c. It is now scarcely used.

INULA, LESSER, Inula dysenterica—i. Squarrosa, Conyza squarrosa.

INUNC'TIO, (inungere, inunctum (in, and ungere, unctum), 'to anoint.') Inunction, Liniment

INUNC'TION, Inunc'tio, Perunc'tio, Illit'io, Illit'us, Illinit'io, Oblinit'io, Chri'sis, Catach'risis, Diach'risis, Epich'risis, Unc'tio. The act of rubbing in an ointment or a liniment, Unc'tion, Infric'tion, (F.) Ouaction, Inouction. Inunction of the whole body with a piece of bacon, lard, or with oil, has been recommended in scarlatina, measles, and in scrofulous or tuberculous cachexia.

INUNDATIO, (inundare, inundatum (in, and undare), 'to flow over.') Depuration.

INUSTIO, (in, and urere, ustum, 'to burn.') Cauterization, Cauterium.

INUSTORIUM, Cauterium.

INVAG'INATED, Invagina'tus, (in, and va- gina, 'a sheath.') Applied to a part which is received into another, as into a sheath.

The invaginated or slit and tail bandage is one in which strips or tails pass through appropriate slits or button-holes.

INVAGINATIO, Invagination, Intussusceptio. INVAGINATIO, Invagina'tio, Encoleo'sis. Intussusceptio. Also, an operation which consists in introducing one end of a divided intestine into the other, with the view of restoring the continuity of the intestinal canal.

The name Invagination is likewise given to an operation for the radical cure of crural hernia, which consists in introducing into the crural canal a thick tent of charpie, the effect of which is, by compression and adhesive inflammation, to obliterate the neck of the hernial sac.

INVALETUDO, (in, and valetudo, 'health.') Infirmary.

INVALID', (in, and validus, 'strong.') Valetudinary.

INVALIDING, (F.) Réforme. The removal from the army of a soldier who has become, from infirmity, unfit for service. Such was the meaning of the term in the service generally; but an Invalid Corps is now established in the United States, to which lighter and special duties are assigned, in hospitals and elsewhere.

INVALIDUS, Valetudinary.

INVASIO, (in, and vadere, vasum, 'to go.') Arche, Attack, Paroxysm.

INVERMINATION, (in, and verminare, verminatum, 'to have worms,'—vermes). Helminthiasis.

INVERSO PALPEBRARUM, (in, and vertere, versum, 'to turn.') Entropion—i. Uteri, Hysteroptosis, Uterus, inversion of the.

INVERSION DU LAMBEAU, see Flap—i. de la Matrice, Uterus, inversion of the.

INVERTENTIA, Absorbents, Antacids.

INVESTITURA FUNICULI UMBILICALIS, (in, and vestis, 'a garment,') see Funiculus umbilicalis.

INVENTERATUS, (in, and vetus, gen. veteris, 'old,') Chronic.

INVISCIANTIA, (in, and viscum, 'bird lime,') Incrassantia.

INVISCIATIO OC'ULI. A morbid adhesion of the eyelids to each other, or to the globe of the eye. Also, gluing together of the eyelids by a viscid secretion.

INVOLONTAIRE, Involuntary.

INVOLUCRUM, Involumentum, (involvere in, and volvere, volutum, 'to fold in,') A covering: hence Involucra cerebri, the membranes of the brain. Involucra nervorum, the sheaths of the nerves.

INVOLUCRUM CORDIS, Pericardium—i. Corporis commune, Integument—i. Lingue, see Tongue—i. Membranaceum, Decidia reflexa—i. Nervorum, Neurilemma—i. Reti comparatum, Retina.

INVOLUMENTUM, Involverum.

INVOLUNTARY, Involuntarius, (F.) Involontaire, (in, and voluntas, 'will,') Not under the influence of the will.

INVOLVENTIA, Demulcents.

IODATED, Iodized.

IODE, (iōdis, 'violet colored,') Iodine.

IODÉ, Iodized.

IODES, (iōs, 'verdigris,') Æruginous.

IODETUM HYDRARGYRICUM, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

IODHYDRARGYRITE DE CHLORURE

MERCUREUX, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

IODIC or IODIC, Iod'icus, (F.) Iodique. Containing iodine.

IODIDUM HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDI, Mercury, iodide of chloride of—i. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—i. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri iodidum.

IODINE, Iod'ina, Iod'inum (Ph. U. S., 1842', Iodin'ium (Ph. U. S., 1851), Iodin'eum, Iod'ina (Ph. B., 1864), Iod'ium, Iod'ium, Iod'ium, (F.) Iode, (iōdis, violat'ceus, 'of a violet colour;') so called from the violet vapour it exhales when volatilized.) It is contained in the mother waters of certain fuci, and is obtained by pouring an excess of concentrated sulphuric acid on the water obtained by burning different fuci, lixiviating the ashes and concentrating the liquor. The mixture is placed in a retort to which a receiver is attached, and is boiled. The iodine passes over and is condensed. It is solid, in the form of plates; of a bluish gray colour, of a metallic brightness, and smell similar to that of the chloride of sulphur. Its s. g. is 4.946. When heated, it becomes volatilized, and affords the vapour which characterizes it. With oxygen it forms Iod'ic acid, and with hydrogen Hydriod'ic acid. The tincture of iodine and the iodides have been employed with great success in the treatment of goitre and of some scrofulous affections. It must be administered in a very small dose and for a long period. It is said to be apt, however, to induce cholera morbus, signs of great nervous irritability, Iodon'thêë, (F.) Iresse iodique, and emaciation of the mammae. When these symptoms, collectively termed Iodism, Iodo'sis, and Iodin'ia, (F.) Cachexie iodée, are urgent, the dose may be diminished, or it may be wholly discontinued, and afterwards resumed. When exposed to the air in a room, it has been found an effective antilobronic.

Various preparations of iodine are employed in medicine.

IODINED, Iodized,

IODINIA, see Iodine.

IODINIUM, Iodine.

IODINUM, Iodine.

IODIQUE, Iodic.

IODISM, see Iodine.

IODIUM, Iodine.

I'ODIZED, I'odined, I'odated, Ioda'tus, Iodisa'tus, (F.) Iodé. Impregnated or affected with iodine or its preparations.

I'ODOFORM, Iodoformum, (F.) Iodoforme, Iodure de formyle; (so called from its analogy to chloroform.) It is obtained by the reaction on each other of iodine, bicarbonate of potassa, water, and alcohol. It is in crystalline plates, of a beautiful citrine colour; and may be given in the same cases as iodine and the iodides. Dose, one grain, three times a day. It is the sesquiodide of carbon. See Carbonis sesquiodidum.

IOGNOGNOSIE, Iodognosis.

IOGNOGNOSIS, (F.) Iodognosie; (iōdum, and γνωσις, 'knowledge,') A knowledge of iodine in its various relations.

IOHYDRARGYRATE OF POTASSIUM, see Iodine.

IODOMETHE, (iodine, and μεθη, 'drunkenness,') See Iodine.

IODOPE'GÆ, (iōdum, and πηγή, 'a spring,') Mineral waters containing iodine.

IODOPHTHISIE, (iōdum, and φθισις, 'phthisis,') Loss of flesh and strength produced by iodine.

IODOSIS, see Iodine.

IODUM, Iodine.

IODURE FERREUX, Ferri iodidum.

IODURE DE FORMYLE, Iodoform—i. de Mercure, Hydrargyri iodidum—i. de Plomb, Plumbi iodidum—i. Plombique, Plumbi iodidum—i. de Potassium, Potassæ hydriodas—i. de Quinine, Quinæ hydriodas—i. de Soufre, Sulphuris iodidum—i. de Zinc, Zinci iodidum.

Amyli, see Iodine.—i. Hydrargyrosnm, Hydrargyri iodidum.—i. Sulphuris, see Iodine.

ION. (iov.) Viola.

IONIA, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IONID' IUM MARCUCCL, (dim. of iov, 'the violet,' or from iov, and eidōs, 'resemblance,') Cinchunchulli—a South American plant. Sec. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Violariæ; said to be extremely efficacious in the Mal de San Lazaro, of Colombia.

IONIUM, (iov, 'a violet,') Iodine.

IONTA, (iota.) see Excretion.

ION'THUS, Varius, Violet Eruption, (σθος, from iov, 'the violet,' and σθος, 'a flower,' or σθος, 'fondness' [?].) An unsuppurative, tubercular tumour; stationary; chiefly on the face. A genus in the class Hæmatica, order Phlogotica of Good.

IONTHUS CORYMBIFER, Gutta rosea—i. Varus, Acne.

IONUM, (iov, 'a violet,') Iodine.

IOTACIS'MUS, (from the Greek letter Iota.) Defective articulation,—the patient not being able to pronounce the palatals j and g soft.

IOULUS, (ιωλος.) Julus.

IPECAC, Apocynum androsæmifolium, Euphorbia corollata, Gillenla trifoliata, Ipeacuanha, Triosteum—i. American, Apocynum androsæmifolium—i. Wild, Euphorbia ipeacuanha.

IPECACUAN'HA, In common parlance, often abridged to Ipecac, and in Ireland to Hippo. The pharmacopœial name of the root of Cephaël's sen Calliocoeca ipeacuan'ha, Ipeacuan'ha, Ipeacuan, Cagosanga, Hyppocuan'na, Hippocuan'na, (F.) Ipeacuanha annelé. Nat. Ord. Cinchonacæ. It is also obtained from the Psycho'tria emet'ica of Peru. The odour of the root, Ipeacuan'ha root, Ipeacuan'ha ra'dix, Ra'dix Brazilian'sis, Ipeacuanha (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Racine Brésilienne (of Brésil),—is faint and peculiar; taste bitter, subacid, and mucilaginous; both water and alcohol extract its virtues, which depend on a peculiar principle, called Emet'ica. It is emetic in large doses; sudorific in smaller. Dose, as an emetic, gr. xx to xxx,—alone, or united with gr. i. to ij of tartarized antimony.

IPECACUANHA, Euphorbia corollata, Pedilanus tithymaloides—i. Annelé, Ipeacuanha—i. Bastard, Aselepias curassavica, Triostem perfoliatum—i. Blanc de l'Île de France, Tylophora asthmatica—i. Blanc de St. Domingue, Aselepias curassavica—i. of the Isle of France, Tylophora asthmatica.

IPECACUANHA, WHITE, is obtained from different species of Richardsonia and Ionid'ium. Viiola ipeacuan'ha seu Sol'ea ipeacuan'ha seu Pombal'ea ipeacuan'ha also affords it. It is weaker than the gray.

IPO, Upas—i. Toxicaria, see Upas.

IR, as a prefix, has the signification of Im.

IRA, Rage.

IRACUNDUS, (from ira.) Rectus externus oculi.

IRAL'GIA, Ireal'gia, Iridal'gia, (iris, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the iris.

IRASCIBLE, (ira, 'anger,') Rectus externus oculi.

TREALGIA, Iralgia.

IREONCION, (iris, and ογκος, 'a hook,') Iriancistrion.

I'RIAN, Iria'nus, (F.) Irien. Belonging or relating to the iris.

I'RIANCIS'TRON, Iridancist'ron, Irean'cion, (iris, and αγκιστρον, 'a hook,') A hooked instrument, used by Schlagintweit in the formation of an artificial pupil.

IRIDÆA EDU'LIS. One of the Algæ, eaten in Scotland and the Southwest of England.

IRIDALGIA, (irido, and αλγος, 'pain,') Iralgia.

IRIDANCISTRON, Iriancistrion.

IRIDAREO'SIS, (irido, and αραιωσις, 'diminution,') Atrophy of the iris.

IRIDAUXE'SIS, (irido, and αυξησις, 'augmentation,') Staphylo'ma Iridis, S. Uveæ, Iridonco'sis, Lymphon'cus Iridis. Exudation of fibrin into the tissue of the iris.

IRIDECTOMEDIALYSIS, (irido, εκτομη, 'excision,' and διαλυσις, 'separation,') see Coretomia.

IRIDECTOMIA, (irido, and εκτομη, 'excision,') see Coretomia.

IRIDENCELEISIS, (irido, en, and κλειω, 'to close,') see Coretomia.

IRIDENCEISMUS, see Coretomia.

IRIDERE'MIA, (irido, and ερημος, 'deprived of,') Iridostere'sis. Absence of iris, either apparent or real.

IRID'ESIS, (iris and εσω, 'I bind,') An operation for artificial pupil, which consists in opening the cornea so as to admit the canula forceps, and, by it, drawing out a portion of the iris near its cellular attachment, and strangulating a piece of it by means of a thread of moistened silk.

IRIDITIS, (irido, and itis.) Iritis.

I'RIDO, (from iris, gen. ιριδος), in composition, iris.

IRIDOCELE, (irido, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Ptoxis iridis.

IRIDOCOLOBOMA, Coloboma iridis.

IRIDODIALYSIS, (irido, and διαλυσις, 'separation,') Coretomia.

IRIDODONE'SIS, (irido, and δονεσις, 'I shake,') Tremulousness of the iris. See Hippus.

IRIDOMALA'CIA, (irido, and μαλακία, 'softness,') Molleness or softening of the iris.

IRIDOMELANO'MA, gen. Iridomelanomat'is, Iridomelano'sis, (irido, and μελανειν, 'to colour black,') The deposition of black matter on the tissue of the iris.

IRIDONCO'SIS, Iridon'cus, Ironco'sis, Hyperronco'sis Iridis, (irido, and ογκος, 'a swelling,') Tumefaction or thickening of the iris. Also Iridanxesis.

IRIDONCUS, Iridoncosis.

IRIDOPERIPHACI'TIS, Iridoperiphaki'tis, (irido, περι, 'around,' and phacitis, inflammation of the lens.) Inflammation of the anterior hemisphere of the capsule of the lens.

IRIDOPLANIA, (irido, and πλωη, 'wandering,') Hippus.

IRIDOPTOSIS, Ptoxis iridis.

IRIDORRHAGAS, gen. Iridorrhagadis, Iridorrhog'e, Iridor'rhex, Iridoschis'ma, Fissu'ra i'ridis, (irido, and ρῆγας, 'a fissure,') Fissure of the iris. See Coloboma.

IRIDORRHOGE, (irido, and ρῆγη, 'a fissure,') Iridorrhagas.

IRIDORRHOX, (irido, and ρῶξ, 'a fissure,') Iridorrhagas.

IRIDOSCHISMA, gen. Iridoschism'atia, (irido, and σχισμα, 'a fissure,') Coloboma Iridis, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDOSTERESIS, (irido, and στερησις, 'privation,') Irideremia.

IRIDOTOMENCEISIS, (irido, τομη, 'section,' and εγκλειω, 'to include,') Coretomia.

IRIDOTOMEDIALYSIS, (irido, τομη, 'section,' and διαλυσις, 'separation,') see Coretomia.

IRIDOTOMIA, (irido, and τομη, 'section,') see Coretomia.

IRIDOTROMUS, (irido, and τρεμος, 'trembling,') Hippus.

IRIEN, Irian.

IRIS, gen. Fridis, (ipis, gen. ipōs), Gram'mē. So called from its resembling the rainbow in a variety of colours. A membrane, stretched vertically at the anterior part of the eye, in the midst of the aqueous humour, in which it forms a kind of circular, flat partition, separating the anterior from the posterior chamber. It is perforated by a circular opening called the pupil, which is constantly varying its dimensions, owing to the varying contractions of the fibres of the iris. Its posterior surface has been called nea, from the thick, black varnish which covers it. The pigmentary stratum, on its free surface, appears to be bounded by a delicate, but sharply defined, line, which, has been described as a special membrane—Membra'na pigmenti seu lim'itans seu lim'itans Paci'ni seu Jaco'bi Arnold. The greater circumference of the iris is adherent to the ciliary processes and circle. It has an external plane of radiated fibres and an internal one of circular fibres, which serve—the one to dilate, the other to contract the aperture of the pupil. The iris receives the irian nerves. Its arteries are furnished by the long ciliary arteries, which form two circles by their anastomoses; the one very broad, near the great circumference; the other, smaller, and seated around the circumference of the pupil. The veins of the iris empty themselves into the Vasa vorticosa, and into the long ciliary veins. The use of the iris seems to be,—to regulate by its dilatation or contraction, the quantity of luminous rays necessary for distinct vision. The different colours of the iris occasion the variety in the colours of the human eye.

IRIS, see Herpes Iris—i. Common, I. Germanica—i. Commis, I. Germanica—i. de Florencia, I. Florentina.

IRIS FLORENTINA, Flor'entine i'ris or or'ris, (F.) Iris de Florencia. Order, Iridaceæ. The rhizoma of this plant is extremely acrid in its recent state; and, when chewed, excites a pungent heat in the mouth, that continues for several hours. When dried, the acrimony is lost, or nearly so, and the smell is very agreeable. It is indebted to its agreeable flavour for its retention in the pharmacopœias, although it is ranked as an expectorant. The orris root of the shops is said to consist of the rhizomes of three species—I. Florentina, I. pallida, and I. Germanica.

IRIS FÆTIDISSIMA, I. fœtida, Spath'ulæ fœtida, Xy'ris, Stinking i'ris, (F.) Iris puant, Gaylen puant. The root has been esteemed antispasmodic and narcotic.

IRIS GERMANICA. The systematic name of the Flower-de-Luce, Iris nostras seu vulgaris, Aier'sa, Common i'ris or or'ris, Gladi'olus ær'n'leus, (F.) Iris commun, Flambe. The fresh roots have a disagreeable smell, and an acrid, nauseous taste. They are powerfully cathartic, and are given in dyspepsia, where such remedies are indicated.

IRIS HEXAGONA, I. versicolor.

IRIS LACUS'TRIS, Dwarf flag, Dwarf lake iris; has the properties of I. versicolor.

IRIS LAKE, DWARF, I. lacustris—i. Lucea, I. pseudacorus—i. des Marais, I. pseudacorus—i. Nostras, I. Germanica—i. Palustris, I. pseudacorus.

IRIS PSEUDACORUS. The systematic name of the Yellow waterflag, Iris palustris seu lutca, Gladi'olus luteus, Ac'orns vulga'ris seu adulteri'nis seu palustris, Pseudac'orus, But'ouan, (F.) Iris des marais, Fausc acore, Flambe bâtarde, Acore bâlard. The root has an acrid, styptic taste. It is an emetic, sialagogue, and acrid astringent. The expressed juice is diuretic, and said to be a useful application to serpiginous and other cutaneous affections. Rubbed on the gums, or chewed, it is said to cure toothache.

IRIS PUANT, I. fœtidissima—i. Stinking, I. fœtidissima.

IRIS VERSICOLOR, I. hexagona, Blue flag. The rhizoma of this is an active cathartic, and has been much used, as such, by the American Indians. It is reputed to be diuretic.

IRIS VIRGINICA, Slender Blue flag; and Iris verna, are said to have virtues like those of I. versicolor.

IRIS VULGARIS, I. Germanica.

IRISITIS, Iritis.

IRITIS, Inflammation of the i'ris, Inflammatio i'ridis, Iris'itis, Iridi'tis, (iris, and itis), Uve'itis of some. The chief symptoms are;—change in the colour of the iris; fibres less movable; tooth-like processes shooting into the pupil; pupil irregularly contracted, with the ordinary signs of inflammation of the eye. If the inflammation does not yield, suppuration takes place; and although the matter may be absorbed, the iris remains immovable. It is often caused by syphilis. The general principles of treatment are, to deplete largely and exhibit mercury freely; along with attention to other means advisable in ophthalmia. The free use of quinia is sometimes serviceable. When the inflammation is seated in the serous covering of the iris, it is termed Iritis serosa.

IRONCOSIS, Iridoncosis.

IRRADIATION, Irradiatio, (ir, and radius, 'a ray.') Shooting or proceeding from a centre—as an 'irradiating pain.'

IRREDUCIBLE, (F.) Irreductible. An epithet given to fractures, luxations, herniæ, &c., when they cannot be reduced.

IRREDUCTIBLE, Irreducible.

IRREGULAR, Irregularis, Anomalous, (ir, and regula, 'a rule.') A term chiefly applied to the types of a disease; and also, to the pulse when its beats are separated by unequal intervals.

IRREGULAR PRACTITIONER. One who does not practise his profession according to rules sanctioned by law or custom.

IRREMEDIABLE, Incurable.

IRREPTIO, (ir, and repto, reptum, 'to creep,') Attack.

IRRIGATION, Irrigatio, Embrocatio, Irroratio: 'the act of watering or moistening,' (ir, and rigare, rigatum, 'to water.') The methodical application of water to an affected part, to keep it constantly wet.

IRRITABILITAS, (irritare, 'to excite,') Irritability—i. Halleriana, Irritability—i. Morbosa, see Subsultus tendinum—i. Vesicæ, Cysterethismus.

IRRITABILITY, Irritabilitas, (F.) Irritabilität; Via irritabilitatis, V. Vita, V. insita, V. insita of Haller Vita's of Gorter, Oscillatio of Boerhaave, Tonic power of Stahl, Vita propria, Irritabilitas Halleriana, Inherent power, Contractility, Excitability, &c. (F.) Irritabilität, I. Hallerienne. A power, possessed by all living, organized bodies of being acted upon by certain stimuli, and of moving responsive to such stimuli. It is the ultimate vital property.

IRRITABLE, Irritabilis, (irritare, 'to excite,' and habilis, 'capable.') That which is endowed with irritability. Every living organized tissue is irritable; that is, capable of feeling an appropriate stimulus, and of moving responsive to such stimulus. Irritable is often used in the same sense as impressible, as when we speak of an irritable person, or habit, or temper. This last condition has been variously termed—Debilitas nervosa, D. Erethisica, Hypercænesia nervosa, Neurasthenia, Neurosthenia, Sensibilitas anomala, S. Morbosa, S. acuta.

IRRITAMEN, Irritant, Stimulus.

IRRITAMENTUM, Erethism, Irritant, Stimulus—i. Metallicum, Galvanism.

IRRITANT, Irritans, Irritamentum, Irritamentum. That which causes irritation or pain, heat and tension; either mechanically, as puncture, acupuncture, or scarification; chemically, as the alkalies and acids; or in a specific manner, as cantharides.

Irritants—Irritantia, Excitantia—are of great use in the treatment of disease.

IRRITATED, see Inflamed.

IRRITATING POISON, see Poison.

IRRITATIO, Erethism, Gargale, Irritation.

IRRITATION, Irritatio, Erethismus. The state of a tissue or organ, in which there is excess of vital movement; commonly manifested by increase of the circulation and sensibility. Broussais defines irritation to be;—the condition of an organ, the excitation of which is carried to so high a degree, that the equilibrium resulting from the balance of all the functions is broken. In this signification, he also uses the word surirritation, which he considered as a higher degree, and as the essential cause of fever. Irritation is the common precursor of inflammation.

IRRITATION, MOR'BID, Constitutional irritation, Irritative fever, Pseudofever, is that excitement which occurs after injuries done to the body, or to any part thereof;—constituting cases of diseased sympathy.

IRRITATIVE FEVER, Irritation, morbid.

IRRORATIO, (ir, and ros, gen. roris, 'dew,') Irrigation.

IS, (is, gen. is, is), Fibre.

ISADELPHIA, (isos, 'equal,' and adelphos, 'brother,') A double monstrosity, in which both bodies are equally and perfectly developed, and possessed of independent vital organs; and which are united by parts of little significance.

ISATIS TINCTORIA, (isaris), Wood, Pos'tel. Ord. Capparidaceæ. A European plant, whose leaves have a fugitive pungent smell, and an acrid durable taste. They are not used, however, in medicine at the present day, but are the source of the dye-stuff, wood.

ISCA, (ισκη), Boletus ignarius.

ISCHEMIA, (ischia, and αμα, 'blood,') Morbid retention or suppression of an habitual flux of blood, as of the hemorrhoidal or menstrual flux or of epistaxis. See Hæmatostatica. Also local arterial anæmia, in which the blood is prevented from flowing into the parts for which it is destined. (Virchow.)

ISCHEMON, Ischemum. A medicine which restrains or stops bleeding.

ISCHAS, (ισχας, gen. ισχιδος, 'a dried fig,') see Ficus.

IS'CHESIS, (from ισχω, 'to restrain,') Suppression or retention of a discharge or secretion.

IS'CHIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. In this volcanic isle, five miles from Naples, there are several thermal waters, one of which, that of Gurgitello—raises the thermometer of Fah. to 167°.

ISCHIACUS, (ισχιακος), Ischiatic.

ISCHIADELPHIUS, (ischion, and αδελφος, 'a brother,') Ischiopages.

ISCHIADICUS MORBUS, (from ischias.) Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervus Sciatic nerve.

ISCHIAOCOCELE, Ischiococele.

ISCHIA'GRA, or ISCHIA'GRA, Is'chias, Ischial'gia, (ischion, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') A name given to ischiatic gout. Femoro-popliteal neuralgia has, also, been so called.

IS'CHIAL, Ischialis. Relating or belonging to the ischion.

ISCHIALGIA, (ischion, and αλγος, 'pain,') Ischiagra, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHIAS, gen. Ischias, (ισχιας, gen. ισχιαδος), Ischiagra—i. Nervosa antica, Neuralgia femoro-prætibialis—i. Nervosa Cotunnii, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervosa digitalis, Neuralgia cubito-digitalis—i. Nervosa postica, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Rheumatica, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Sparganosi, Phlegmatia dolens.

ISCHIATIC, Ischiad'ic, Ischiad'icus, Ischiad'icus, Ischi'acus, Sciatic, (ischion, (F.) Ischiaticque, (from ischion), whence the word Sciatic.) An epithet given to parts connected with the ischium. The SCIATIC NOTCH'S, (F.) Échancures Ischiatiques, are formed by this bone; the ISCHIATIC SPINE belongs to it, and gives attachment to the small sacro-sciatic ligament. The TUBEROSITY OF THE IS'CHIUM, Os sedentarium. Tuber Ischii, (F.) Tubérosité sciaticque, is formed by it. It receives the insertions of different muscles of the thigh, and forms the projection on which the body rests when seated.

ISCHIATIC ARTERY, Sciatic Artery, (F.) Artère Fémoro-Poplitée (Ch.) arises singly from the hypogastric, or with the gluteal; and seems to be really a continuation of the trunk of the hypogastric. It issues from the pelvis, at the lower part of the great sciatic notch; and, afterwards, divides into a considerable number of branches, which are distributed particularly to the posterior and superior region of the thigh.

ISCHIATIC REGION, Sciatic region; Regio ischiadica. The region of the hip.

ISCHIATIC VEIN presents the same arrangement as the artery.

ISCHIATICUS, (ισχιακός, from ischias.) Sciatic.

ISCHIATOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCHIDRO'SIS, Sudoris suppressio, Oligidria, (ischio, and ιδρωσ, 'sweat.') Suppression of perspiration.

ISCHIOCAVERNOSUS. Belonging to the ischium and corpus cavernosum.

ISCHIOCAVERNOSUS muscle, Collateralis, Director or Erector seu Sustentator Penis, (F.) Érecteur du Pénis, Ischio-uréthral, (Ch.) is a small, long, flat muscle, which surrounds the origin of the corpus cavernosum. It is fixed below to the inner side of the tuberosity of the ischium, and above to the root of the penis, where it is confounded with the fibrous membrane of the corpus cavernosum. It draws the root of the penis downwards and backwards.

ISCHIOCAVERNOSUS of the female, Erector seu Sustentator seu Superior rotundus clitoridis, (F.) Ischio-clitoridien, Ischio sous-clitorien, (Ch.), is arranged nearly as in the male, but is less bulky. It arises, by aponeurosis, from the tuberosity of the ischium, and terminates by embracing the corpus cavernosum of the clitoris, to the erection of which it appears to contribute.

ISCHIOCE'LE, Ischiatocele, Ischiadocele, Her'nia ischiadica; (ischion, and κληη, 'tumour') Ischiatic hernia. One in which the viscera issue by the great sciatic notch. It is a rare disease. The protruded parts must be reduced—the patient being placed in a favourable position, and they must be retained by a bandage.

ISCHIOCLITORIANUS. That which is connected with the ischium and clitoris.

ISCHIOCLITORIAN ARTERY of Chaussier is a division of the internal pudic, which furnishes the two arteries of the clitoris—the superficial and deep-seated.

ISCHIOCLITORIAN NERVE, of the same professor, is the superior branch of the pudic nerve, which is distributed to the clitoris.

ISCHIOCLITORIDIEN, Ischiocavernosus—i. Coccygeus, Coccygeus—i. Créti-tibial, Semitendinosus—i. Femoralis, Adductor magnus—i. Fémoro-péronier, Biceps flexor cruris.

ISCHIODYMIA, (ischion, and δυειν, 'to mingle,' or διδυμος, 'a twin.') See Somatodymia.

IS'CHION, (ισχον.) Is'chium, Os is'chii, Os coxæ, en'dicis, Hucklebone, Seatbone, (Sc.) Heuckbane, Hukebane, Lunyiebane, (Prov.) Chancebone, Pinbone, (F.) Os de l'assiette, (from ισχω, 'I support,' or from ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain;'—because that bone serves as a base or support for the trunk, when we are seated, see Ischiatic.) The lowermost of the three portions which compose the os innominatum in the fœtus and young individual. The inferior region of the same bone has, also, been called is'chium, in the adult. According to Hesychius, the ancients designated by the word ischion the capsular ligament of the coxo-femoral articulation, as well as the articulation itself.

ISCHION, Haunch.

ISCHIONEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHIOPA'GES, Ischiadelph'us, (ischion, and παγω, 'I fasten.') A monstrous union of two fetuses, in which they are attached to each other by the ischia. See Hypogastrodilymus.

ISCHIO-PÉNIEN, see Pudic Nerve.

ISCHIO-PÉRINÉAL, Transversus perinæi.

ISCHIOPTHY'SIS, Tabes cox'ria seu ischiad'ica, Phthisis ischiad'ica, (ischion, and phthisis.) Phthisis in consequence of suppuration of the hip-joint. See Coxarum morbus.

ISCHIO-POPLITI-FÉMORAL, Semi-membranosus—i. Popliti-tibial, Semi-membranosus—i. Prétibial, Semitendinosus.

ISCHIOPROSTATICUS. Winslow, Santorini, Albinus, and Sömmering, have given this name to the fibres of the transversus perinæi muscle, which go towards the prostate.

ISCHIORETAL FOSSA, Perineal fossa.

ISCHIO-SOUS-CLITORIEN, Ischio-cavernosus—i. Sous-trochantérien, Quadratus femoris—i. Spini-trochantérien, Ischiotrochanterianus—i. Uréthral, Ischiocavernosus.

ISCHIOSIS, (from ischion.) Neuralgia femoropoplitea.

ISCHIOTROCHANTERIA'NUS, Gem'ini, Gemelli. Part of the Marsupia'lis of Cowper; Cur'neum Marsup'ium, Ischio-spini-trochantérien, Secu'dus et tert'ius quadrigen'inus, (F.) Muscle cannelé, Accessoire de l'obturateur interne. Two small, fleshy bundles, long and flat, which arise—the superior on the outside of the sciatic spine; the inferior behind the tuberosity of the ischium. Both pass horizontally outwards, and are attached to the tendon of the obturator internus, which they accompany into the fossa of the trochanter. These muscles are rotators of the lower limb outwards. They can, also, turn the pelvis on the femur, in standing on one foot.

ISCHIUM, Ischion.

ISCHL MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. These springs, which are in Upper Austria, contain iodine and bromine.

ISCHNOPHO'NIA, (ισχνος, 'slender,' and φωνη, 'voice.') Slenderness of voice.

ISCHNOTES, (ισχνότης.) Emaciation.

ISCHO, (ισχω, 'to restrain,') in composition, arrest, retention.

ISCHOBLENNIA, (ischio, and βλεννα, 'mucus.') The suppression of a mucous discharge.

ISCHOCENO'SIS, (ischio, and κωσις, 'evacuation.') Retention or suppression of a natural evacuation—as of the menses.

ISCHOCHOL'IA, (ischio, and χολη, 'bile.') Retention bilis. Retention or suppression of the biliary secretion.

ISCHOCOILIA, (ischio, and κοιλια, 'the bowels.') Constipation.

ISCHOCOPRIA, (ischio, and κοπρος, 'excrement,') Constipation.

ISCHOGALAC'TIA, Retentio lactis, (ischio, and γαλα, gen. γαλακτος, 'milk,') Want of milk in the mamma.

ISCHOLOCH'IA or Ischoloche'ia, Lochios'chesis, Suppressio lochio'rum, (ischio, and λοχεια, 'the lochial discharge,') Retentio lochio'rum. Suppression of the lochial discharge.

ISCHOMENIA, (ischio, and μηνες, 'the menses,') Amenorrhœa.

ISCHOPHONIA, (ισχοφωνια, from ischio, and φωνη, 'voice,') Balbuties.

ISCHOSPER'MIA, (ischio, and σπερμα, 'sperm,') Sem'inis retentio. Retention or suppression of the spermatic secretion.

ISCHURET'IC, Ischuret'icum, (F.) Ischurétique, (ischio, and ουρον, 'urine,') A medicine for relieving suppression of urine. A diuretic.

ISCHURIA, (ἰσχυρία) Urinæ suppressio, Stoppage of urine, Suppression of urine, Paruria retentiva. Retention of, or impossibility of discharging, the urine, Anurothée of Piorry. Often restricted to suppression of the secretion, Renal Ischuria, Anuria, Anuresis, Nephranuria, Anurocinie of Piorry, Ischuria.

Ischuria Vera is that in which the urine, having accumulated in the bladder, the patient is unable to pass it, notwithstanding the inclination which constantly distresses him. In false ischuria, Paruria inops, P. retentiva renalis, Ischuria nottha seu epuria, of some, (F.) Suppression d'Urine, owing to some disease of the kidney or ureters, the urine cannot reach the bladder.

Ischuria has likewise received various other names, according to the seat and character of the obstacle which opposes the exit of the urine: hence the expressions—Renal, Ureteric, Vesical, Urethral, and Calculus Ischuria. Vesical Ischuria is generally used synonymously with Retention of Urine, which see.

ISCHURIA CYSTOPLEGMATICA, Cystirrhœa—i. Phimosia, see Phimosicus—i. Spasmodica, Cystospasmus—i. Spuria, see Ischuria—i. Urethralis à phimosi, see Phimosicus—i. Vera, see Ischuria—i. Vesicalis, Retention of urine.

ISICIUM, (αἰκίον) Psicos, Insicium, Tomaculum, Tomaculum, Tomaculum. A kind of sausage, formed of mixed meat and spices.

ISINGLASS, ([G.] Hausen, 'a sturgeon,' and Blase, 'a bladder,') Ichthyocolla.

ISINGLASS, JAPANESE. A substance, obtained from seaweed, in China, which is used as a substitute in the formation of jellies, under the name seaweed jelly. It is sent from Singapore, sweetened, flavoured, and ready for use. In this state it may be kept for several years.

ISIR, Elixir.

ISIS NOBILIS, see Coral.

ISLAND OF REIL, Insula cerebri.

ISLE OF WIGHT, CLIMATE OF. This beautiful island is a favourable summer retreat for invalids. Undercliff is the situation chosen as a winter residence for phthisical valetudinarians. Cowes, Niton, Sandown, Shanklin, and Ryde, are delightful summer residences.

ISNARDIA PALUSTRIS, (after D'Isnard, a French botanist,) Ludwigia palustris.

ISO, (ἴσος, 'equal,') in composition, equal.

ISOCHRONOUS, Isochronus, Isochronus, Isodromus, (F.) Isochrome, (iso, and χρόνος, 'time,') That which takes place in the same time, or in equal times. The pulsations of the arteries, in various parts of the body, are nearly isochronous.

ISOCHRYSON, Auro compar, (iso, and χρυσός, 'gold,') A collyrium, described by Galen as worth its weight in gold. Libavius has also given this name to an amalgam, made with equal parts of antimony and mercury.

ISOCRATES, (iso, and κρατος, 'strength,' or κεραννυμι, 'to mix,') A mixture of equal parts of wine and water.

ISODROMUS, (iso, and δρομος, 'a course,') Isochronous.

ISOLUSIN, (iso, and λωω, 'to wash,' because washed in water and rectified spirit,) see Polygala senega.

ISOMERIC, Isomericus, Isomerus, Isomerus, Isomerus, (iso, and μέρος, 'part,') An epithet applied to different bodies which agree in composition, but differ in properties. The condition is termed Isomerism.

ISOMERISM, see Isomeric.

ISOMORPHISM, (iso, and μορφη, 'form,') see Isomorphism.

ISOMORPHOUS, Isomorphus, Isomorphicus. An epithet applied to different bodies which have the same crystalline form. The condition is called Isomorphism.

ISONANDRA GUTTA, see Gutta percha.

ISOPATHIA, Isopathy, (iso, and παθος, 'disease,') This term has been used by some of the German writers to signify the cure of diseases by the disease itself, or its products;—under the hypothesis, that every contagious disease contains in its contagious matter the means for its cure;—thus, that variola may be cured by homœopathic doses of variolous matter; syphilis, by venereal matter, &c., &c. Others have given to isopathy another form;—maintaining, that every diseased organ has its remedy in the same organ,—that eating liver, for example, will remove disease of the liver!

Dr. J. M. B. Harden, of Georgia, has used the term "Parallexism of Diseases;" for "the disposition of diseases to 'anastomose with each other,' or to wear each other's livery."

ISSUE, (from exeo, (ex, and eo,) 'to go out,') Fonticulus—i. Picus, Aurantia curassavatica, see Fonticulus.

ISTHME DU GOSIER, Isthmus of the fauces.

ISTHMION, (ἰσθμιον) Isthmus, Pharynx.

ISTHMITIS, Inflammati Faucium seu Palati, Angina simplex seu mitis seu faucium Angor faucium, Cyanche simplex, Fauciitis (F.) Angine simplex, (ἰσθμιον, and itia.) Inflammation of the isthmus faucium, and of the fauces See Cyananche pharyngea, and Angina.

ISTHMIUM, (ἰσθμιον) Isthmus.

ISTHMOCATARRHUS, (ἰσθμιον, and καταρροή, 'catarrh,') Catarrh of the fauces.

ISTHMODYNIA, (ἰσθμιον, and ὄδον, 'pain,') Pain in the fauces.

ISTHMOPLÉGIA; (ἰσθμιον, and πλῆγη, 'stroke,') Paralysis of the fauces.

ISTHMOS, (ἰσθμος,) Isthmus, Pharynx.

ISTHMOTYPHUS, Cyananche maligna.

ISTHMUS, (ἰσθμος,) Isthmion, Isthmion, (F.) Isthme. A tongue of land joining a peninsula to a continent, or which separates two seas; a narrow pass. Anatomists have given the name Isthmus of the Fauces, I. Faucium, Claustrum Gutturis, (F.) Isthme du gosier, to the strait which separates the mouth from the pharynx. It is formed above by the velum palati and uvula; at the sides, by the pillars of the fauces and the tonsils; and below, by the base of the tongue. Also, the Fauces.

ISTHMUS OF THE ENCEPHALON. The narrowed and constricted portion of the encephalic mass, situate between the cerebrum, the cerebellum and the medulla oblongata, which corresponds to the free margin of the tentorium cerebelli, and comprises the pons varolii, and middle peduncles of the cerebellum, the peduncles of the cerebrum, the tubercula quadrigemina, the superior peduncles of the cerebellum, and the valve of Vieussens.

ISTHMUS OF THE FOSSA OVALIS: Isthmus Vieussensii, Strigarch cartilagineosa cordis, is the prominent arch formed above the fossa ovalis by the union of the two pillars which bound the cavity.

ISTHMUS HEPATIS, see Lobulus anonymus.

ISTHMUS OF THE THYROID GLAND is a narrow band that unites the two chief lobules composing the thyroid gland.

ISTHMUS URETHRÆ, see Urethra—i. Uteri, see Uterus—i. Vieussenii, Isthmus of the fossa ovalis, see Ovalis fossa.

ITALIAN JUICE, Extractum glycyrrhizæ.

ITALICUS MORBUS, ('Italian disease,') Syphilis.

ITCH, (ἰτχια,) Psora—i. Animalcule, see Psora—i. of Animals, Scabies ferina.

ITCH, BAKERS', see Psoriasis—i. Barbers', Sycosis—i. Bricklayers', Eczema impetiginodes.

ITCH, COW-POX. A cutaneous eruption, observed and described by Göllis, which appeared after the fourteenth day from vaccination, and consisted of isolated vesicles, often filled with a puriform fluid.

ITCH, DRUNKARDS', Psora ebriorum—i. Grocers', see Psoriasis.

ITCH INSECT, see Psora—i. Mite, see Psora.

ITCH, VENEREAL, Scherlievo.

ITCH WEED, Veratrum viride.

ITCH'ING, Parapsis pruritus, Antalgia pruriginosa, Pruritus, Prurigo, Onesmos, Onesma, (Sc.) Youk, Yuke, (F.) Prurit, Démangeaison. A sensation, more inconvenient than painful, seated especially at the surface of the body, which provokes the patient to scratch the part. It may be either an external or an internal sensation: that is, produced by an external body, or by some modification in the organic actions of the part to which it is referred.

ITEA, (1782,) Salix.

ITER ('a way or passage,' gen. Itin'eris) A TERTIO AD QUARTUM VENTRICULUM, Aqueductus Sylvii—i. Dentis, see Gubernaculum dentis—i. Femineum, Perinæum—i. ad Infundibulum, Vulva—i. a Palato ad Aurem, Eustachian tube—i. ad Quartum ventriculum, Aqueductus Sylvii—i. ad Tertium ventriculum, Vulva—i. Urinæ, Urethra—i. Urinarium, Urethra.

ITHYPHAL' LUS, (ἰθυφαλλος, from ἰθυσ, 'straight,' and φαλλος, 'penis.') An amulet, in the form of an erect penis, anciently worn round the neck, to which were attributed alexiterial properties.

ITINERARIUM, (iter, gen. itin'eris, 'a way or journey,') Conductor, Director.

ITIS, (ἴτις, 'bold,' 'rash,' [?].) A suffix denoting inflammation;—as encephalitis, inflammation of the encephalon;—Pleuritis, inflammation of the pleura. According to some, as Kraus, encephalitis, for example, was, with the ancients, the adjective agreeing with νόσος, 'a disease,' understood to express a disease of the encephalon, and it was only in modern times, that the suffix was used to denote inflammation.

IVA, Teucrium iva—i. Arthritica, Teucrium

chamæpitys—i. Moschata Monspeliensium, Teucrium iva—i. Pecanga, Smilax sarsaparilla.

IVETTE MUSQUÉE, (dim. of Iva,) Teucrium iva—i. Petite, Teucrium chamæpitys.

Ivoire, Ivory—i. Végétal. Phytelephas macrocarpa.

IVORY, E'bur, El'ephas, (F.) Ivoire. The tusk of the elephant. It is chiefly composed of phosphate of lime, and is used for the fabrication of pessaries, artificial teeth, handles of instruments, &c. Formerly, when calcined to whiteness, it entered into some pharmaceutical preparations. It was regarded as astringent and anthelmintic, and was called Spo'dium.

The dentine is the ivory of the human tooth. See Tooth.

IVORY BLACK, see Carbo animalis.

IVORY, VEGETABLE, Phytelephas macrocarpa.

The seed of this plant, Pinho'nes Ind'ici, Sem'ina Ric'ini ma'jores, Fa'ba cathartica, Avella'na cathartica, Nux cathartica America'na seu Barbade'nsis, Phys'ic or Barba'does Nut, (F.) Pignon d'Inde, Médecinier cathartique, Grand haricot de Pérou, Pignon de Barbarie ou des Barbades, Noix cathartique, N. Américaine ou des Barbades, affords a quantity of oil,—Oleum infernale, O. Ric'ini ma'joris—given, in many places, like the castor oil; to which, indeed, it is nearly allied. They contain a peculiar acid, the Jatroph'ic or Igasaur'ic.

The seeds of JATROPHA MULTIFIDA are called Purging Nuts, and give out a similar oil.

JATROPHA ELASTICA, see Caoutchouc.

JATROPHA MANIHOT, Jan'ipha Man'ihot, Man'ihot utilis'ima, Bitter Cassa'va: the plant affording the Cassa'va or Cassa'ca Root, Caca'ri, Cassa'cè, Cazabi, Pain de Madagascar, Ric'innus Mi'nor, Man'ioc, Mandioc, Magnoc, Man'iot, Yuc'ca, Mani'bar, Aipi, Aipima cozera, Atipipoca, Jani'pna. The juice of the root is extremely acrid and poisonous. What remains, after expressing it, is made into cakes or meal; of which the cassava or cassava bread is formed. This bread constitutes a principal food of the inhabitants of those parts where it grows.

The fecula of the root forms Tapio'ca, Cipipa, Fec'ula Tapio'ka, Am'ylum manihot'icum, which is very nutritious. It may be prepared in the same manner as sago.

A factitious Tapioca is met with in the shops, which is in very small, smooth, spherical grains, and is supposed to be prepared from potato starch. It is sold under the name pearl tapioca.

JATROPHA U'RENS. A most deadly plant. The touch of its five bristly stings had nearly cost Mr. Smith, curator of Kew gardens, his life.

JOANNETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF.

Several springs are found at Joannette, about five leagues from Angers, in France. The waters are both cold and warm, and contain sulphate of lime; subcarbonate of soda; chloride of sodium; some iron; chloride of calcium, and, sometimes, a kind of saponaceous matter. They are chiefly used as a tonic in chlorosis, leucorrhœa, &c.

JOE PYE, Eupatorium perfoliatum, and E. purpureum.

JOHNE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Johne is a village near Dol in Franche-Comté, France, where is a mineral spring, which contains subcarbonate of soda, and subcarbonates of magnesia and iron. It is used chiefly as a bath in certain diseases of the skin, and in atonic affections.

JOHNNY JUMPER, Viola tricolor.

JUDÆ'US, Judaicus seu Phœnicites La'pis, Tecol'ithos, (F.) Pierre Judaïque. A stone, found in Judæa, Palestine, &c. Called, also, Lapis Syriacus. It was formerly esteemed to be diuretic and lithontriptic.

JUDGMENT, Judic'ium, (F.) Jugement, (from judicare, 'to judge.')

The faculty of the intellect, by which ideas are compared with each other, and their relative worth appreciated.

JUDICATORII DIES, Critical days.

JUDICIUM, (from judex, gen. judicis, 'a judge.')

Judgment.

TUGA ALVEOLARIA, (pl. of jugum, 'a yoke,')

Alveolar arches.

JUGA CEREBRALIA. Prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, between the digital impressions.

JUGAL, Zygomatic—j. Process, Zygomatic process.

JUGAL RE'GION, Re'gio Juga'lis. The region of the cheek-bone.

JUGALE OS, Malæ os.

JUGALIS, Zygomatic.

JUGALIS SUTU'RA. The suture which unites the Os Malæ or Os Juga'lè with the superior maxillary bone. Also, the sagittal suture.

JUGEMENT, Judgment.

JUGEOLINE, Sesamum orientale.

JUGLANS, gen. Juglan'dis, (Ju-glans, quasi Jovis glans,) J. cinerea, J. regia—j. Black Juglans nigra.

JUGLANS CINER'EA, But'ter or Oil Nut, White Wal'nut. Ord. Juglandacæa. The inner bark of the root of this tree, Juglans (Ph. U. S.), which is abundant in the United States, is used in medicine, in the form of extract, as an efficacious and mild laxative, in doses of from 10 to 20 grains. It is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUGLANS NI'GRA, Black Juglans, Black Walnut; indigenous. The rind of the unripe fruit is said to remove ringworm and tetter. A decoction has been given as an anthelmintic.

JUGLANS RE'GIA, Juglans, Nux Juglans, Carya basilica, Carya. The Wal'nut, French nut, (F.) Noyer, the tree; Noir, the nut, Car'yon. The unripe fruit, in the state in which it is pickled, was formerly esteemed to be anthelmintic. The putamen or green rind of the walnut (F.) Brou de Noir, has been celebrated as a powerful antisyphilitic, and used as a sort of diet drink. The kernel is an agreeable article of dessert; but, like all nuts, is difficult of digestion. The expressed oil, Huile de Noir, is used in France as an aliment, and, like other fixed oils, is laxative.

Various preparations of the leaves have been recommended in serofulous affections.

JUG'ULAR, Jugula'ris, (F.) Jugulaire, (jugulum, (dim. of jugum, because the 'yoke' was attached there,) 'the throat.')

Relating to the throat.

JUGULAR FOS'SA, Fos'sa Jugula'ris, is a cavity in the petroëoccipital suture. It is formed by the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and by the occipital bone, and lodges the origin of the internal jugular vein. It is, sometimes, called thimble-like cavity.

JUGULAR VEINS, Venæ Jugula'res seu sphagitides seu apoplectiæ seu sopora'les. These are situate at the lateral and anterior parts of the neck. They are two on each side; one external, the other internal. 1. The External Jugular Vein, Trachélo-sous-cutané, (Ch.) is of less size than the internal. It descends, almost vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the cervix of the lower jaw to the subclavian vein, into which it opens, a little above the internal jugular. It is formed by the internal maxillary, superficial temporal, and posterior auricular veins. It is this vein which is commonly opened in bleeding in the neck. 2. The Internal Jugular Vein, V. Céphalique (Ch.), Vena apoplectica, is much larger, and more deeply seated than the preceding. It descends, vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the posterior part of the foramen lacerum posterius as far as the subclavian vein. It commences at the sinus of the jugular vein, (F.) Golfe de la veine jugulaire, and receives the blood, which returns by the sinus of the dura mater, and that of the facial, lingual, pharyngeal, superior thyroid, occipital, and diploic veins.

JUGULATION, Jugula'tio, (from jugulare, jugulatum, 'to strangle.')

The sudden cutting short of a disease by remedial agents.

JUGULUM, (dim. of jugum, 'a yoke.') Clavicle, Throat—j. Uteri, Collum uteri.

JUGUM PENIS, ('yoke of the penis,') Preæurtive.

JUICE, EXPRESSED, see Succus—j. Musclee, see Muscle juice.

JUJUBE, Ju'juba, Ziz'yphum, Bac'cæ ju'jubæ, B. Ziz'yphi. (Of Arabic origin.) The fruit of Rhamnus Ziz'yphus seu Ziz'yphus vulgaria. Ord. Rhamnææ. A native of the south of Europe. It was formerly ranked amongst the pectoral fruits. It has an agreeable sweet taste. The fruits of two other species of Zizyphus—Z. jujuba, Rhamnus jujuba, Mons'na arbo'rea, a native of the East Indies, and Z. lotus, Rhamnus lotus, Zizyphus nitida seu sativæ seu sylicæstris, growing in North Africa, possess properties similar to those of Zizyphus vulgaris.

JUJUBE Paste, Paste of jujubes.

JULAPIUM, Julep—j. Camphoræ, Mistura Camphoræ.

JULEB, Julep.

JULEP, Jula'pium, Jule'pus, Zula'pium, Juleb of the Persians. A sweet drink. A demulcent, acidulous or mucilaginous mixture.

JUMPERS, see Convulsionnaire.

JUNCTURA, (jungere, junctum, 'to join,') Articulation.

JUN'CUS ODORA'TUS, (jungere, junctum, 'to join,' in allusion to the use of rushes for bands. [?]) Andropogon schœnan'tus seu bicoloris seu citrat'us seu citriod'rus, Cymbopogon schœnan'tus, Pœ'nium camelo'rum, Jun'cus aromati'cus, Schœnan'tus, Schœnan'thum, Call'amus odora'tus, Squinan'tus, Græ'men orienta'le, Cam'el's hay, Sweet rush, (F.) Jonc odorant, Foin de chameau. Ord. Graminææ. The dried plant, which is generally procured from Turkey and Arabia, has an agreeable smell, and a warm, bitterish taste. It was formerly used as a stomachic and deobstruent.

JUNGLE FEVER. A variety of remittent occurring in the jungle districts of India.

JUNIPER TREE, Juniperus communis.

JUNIPERUM VINUM. Wine impregnated with juniper berries.

JUNIPERUS COMMUNIS, (J. Sæc'ica, Arceuthosifera, Ju'niper tree, (Sc.) Jenepere. Family, Conifereæ. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Monadelphia. The berries or fruit, Juniper'us (Ph. U. S.), Akat'alis, Akat'era, (Sc.) Eat'in ber'ries, El'nagh bo'uillon, are ordered in the pharmacopœias. Their odour is strong, but not unpleasant. Taste warm, pungent. Properties dependent upon essential oil, which they yield to both water and alcohol. Dose, ℥j to ℥ss, rubbed with sugar. In Holland, juniper berries are used for flavouring gin. The oil, O'leum juniperi, possesses the virtues of the plant. It is called by Ruland, Targar. (F.) Genévrier (the plant), Genèvre (the berry).

JUNIPERUS LY'CIA. This plant—Thu'rea, Th. vir'ga, Ar'bor thurif'era—has been supposed to afford the true Frank'incense, Cedrus, Olib'anum, O. Arab'icum, Thus Libano'tis, Libano'tum, Lib'anos, Thus mas'culum, Thus ve'rum, (F.) Encens. By some, however, it is supposed to be the produce of an Am'yris, and by others of Boswell'ia floribunda, B. Papyrif'era, Ploes'steu floribunda. The odour of olibanum is peculiar and aromatic; taste bitterish and slightly pungent; partly soluble in alcohol, and forming a milky emulsion when triturated with water. It was formerly used in dysentery and hæmoptysis, but is now never employed except as a perfume in a sick room.

Boswell'ia serrata, B. thurif'era of India, Persia and Arabia, is said to yield East India Olib'anum, O. Ind'icum.

JUNIPERUS OXYCE'DRUS, (F.) Genévrier Oxycèdre, Cade, Oxycèdre, Oxycèdre, grows in the south of Europe, Siberia, &c. By combustion of the wood, a liquid tar, O'leum cad'inum, Juniperi o'leum empyreumati'cum, Oil of Cade, (F.) Huile de Cade ou de Genévrier, is obtained, which is employed externally in various chronic cutaneous and other diseases.

JUNIPERUS SABI'NA, Sabi'na, S. ster'ilis, Savi'na, Brut'a, Ce'drus baccif'era, Com'mou or bar'ren sarin; Brut'hu, Ba'rathron, Bo'rathron, (F.) Sabine, Savinier. The odour of savin tops, Sabi'na of the pharmacopœias, is strong and disagreeable. Taste hot, acrid, and bitter, depending on an essential oil. Their operation is stimulant, emmenagogue, anthelmintic, and abortive; externally irritant. Dose, internally, gr. v to x of the powder. As a local irritant, they are applied in powder or formed into a cerate. The essential oil, O'leum Sabi'næ (Ph. U. S.), has the virtues of the savine. Dose, two to five drops.

JUNIPERUS SUECICA, J. communis.

JUNIPERUS VIRGINIA'NA, Red ce'dar. This tree is known throughout the United States by the name of sav'ine, and is often used for the same purposes. The tops are official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUNK, (from juncus, 'a bulrush,') Pad.

JUNO LUCINA, (Goddess of childbirth,) Ilithyia.

JUNO'S TEARS, Verbena officinalis.

JUPITER, (Jæus, and πατηρ, 'father,') Tin.

JUS'CULUM NY'GRUM LACEDÆMONIO'RUM, Me'tas Zo'mos, (μετας ζωμος), Hæmat'ia, Black broth of the Lacedæmonians. A celebrated mess in antiquity, the ingredients of which are not known. It was supposed to be made of blood—hog's blood,—treated in some way, and, therefore, resembling perhaps—as suggested by Warner—the modern black pudding.

JUSÉE (F.) An aqueous maceratum of tan, coarsely powdered, in which the skins of animals have been steeped for a time, in the preparation of leather. An extract has been prepared from this, which has been prescribed in syrup and in pill; each pill containing about a grain and a half of the extract; and two being taken daily in phthisis, and in general debility connected with serofula and rickets.

JUSQUIAMINE, Hyoscyamus.

JUSQUIAMUS, Hyoscyamus.

JUSQUITAME, Hyoscyamus.

JUSTICIA ADHATODA, (after J. Justice, a Scotch botanist,) Adhatoda—j. Bivalvis, Adulasso.

JUSTICIA ECBOLITUM, Carim curvini. A Malabar plant, the root of which, and the leaves, in decoction, are considered in the country to be lithontriptic.

JUSTICIA PECTORALIS. A West India plant, which is slightly astringent. (F.) Carmantine, C. Pectorale, Herbs aux Charpentiers.

JUVANS, pl. Juvan'tia, (juvare, 'to aid,') Auzil'ium, Remed'um. A medicine or substance of any kind, which relieves a disorder. An Adjuvant.

JUVENIS, Adolescens.

JUVENTA, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUVENTAS, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUVENTUS, Adolescence, Hebe.

JUXTAPOSIT'ION, Juxtaposit'io, (juxta, 'near to,' and ponere, positum, 'to place,') The mode of increase proper to minerals; which consists in the successive application of new molecules upon those that form the primitive nucleus. It is opposed to intususception.

 KENTUCK'Y, MINERAL WATERS OF. The Olympian Springs, Mudlick, in this State, are near the sources of Licking river. There are three different kinds, in the space of half a mile. One of them is saline, impregnated with sulphur;—another is chalybeate, and a third a sulphureous spring. In various parts of Kentucky, there are saline waters, which are frequented by invalids. The Salines at Bigbone, formerly employed in the manufacture of salt, are resorted to. A spring, near Harrodsburg, in Mercer County, is strongly impregnated with sulphate of magnesia, and is much visited. At the Blue Licks, on both banks of the Licking river, there are sulphureous saline waters.

 KERMES, Chermes, Alkermes. One of the species of the genus kermes lives on a green oak, and is called Coc'enus ilicis, Kermes animal, Coc'ci granum, Coc'cenum, C. baph'icem seu infectorium seu tinctorium seu scarlatinum, &c. The oak, to which allusion has been made, is known by botanists under the name Querc'us coccifera, and grows abundantly in the uncultivated lands of southern France, Spain, and in the islands of the Grecian Archipelago. The kermes inhabiting it has the appearance of a small, spherical, inanimate shell. Its colour is reddish-brown, and it is covered with a slightly ashecoloured dust. This is the kermes of the shops. It is now only used in dyeing; but was formerly reputed to possess aphrodisiac, analeptic, antiabortive, and other virtues.

 KERNMILK, ((Sc. and Prov.) 'churnmilk,') Buttermilk.
 KER'OSOLENE. A liquid product of the destructive distillation of coal, of very low specific gravity, say '6346. It has anæsthetic properties, but is not easily managed.
 KERVA, Ricinus communis.
 KESLOP, (Prov. from Sax. cepelob, 'curdled milk,') Rennet.

KETCH'UP, Catch'up, Cat'sup, (the Kitjap of the Chinese [?]). A pickle prepared from the liquor of the mushroom, walnut, tomato, &c.

KETMIA ÆGYPTIACA, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

KEY, (Sax. cæg,) Clavis, Cleis, Clavis Anglica, (F.) Clef; Clef de Garangeot. An instrument, used for extracting teeth. It consists of a firm handle, with a claw at right angles to it, and moving upon a pivot. This claw embraces the tooth. It has undergone several modifications, and hence various instruments are used under this denomination. The French have the Clef à pompe, Clef à pivot, and Clef à noir.

KEYRI CHEIRI, Cheiranthus cheiri.

KHALA MIMUC, Bit noben.

KHAYA SENEGALENSIS, Swietenia Senegalensis.

KHUS-KHUS, Andropogon muricatus.

KIASTER, properly Chias'ter, (χιασεν, 'to cross,') A species of bandage, having the form of the Greek letter χ, which the ancients used for approximating, and maintaining in contact, the fragments of the patella, in cases of fracture of that bone. It was applied in the form of the figure 8.

KIBE, Chilblain.

KIBISITOME, (κιβισις, 'a sac or wallet,' and τιμειν, 'to cut,') Cystitome.

KIDNEY, (etymology uncertain.) Serenius derives it fancifully from Su. Goth. qued, the belly; and nigh, (quasi, quidney.) Ren, Neph'ros, (Sc.) Neir, Nere, (F.) Rein. The kidneys or reins are the secretory organs of the urine. They are two glands, situate deeply,—the one on the right, and the other on the left side—in the hypochondres: at the sides of the lumbar vertebræ; behind the peritoneum; and in the midst of an abundant, fatty areolar tissue, Tu'nica seu Capsula adiposa. The kidney is of a reddish-brown colour; oval form; and flattened on two surfaces. It has, at its internal margin, a deep fissure, by which the renal vessels and nerves enter or quit the organ, and the ureter issues. It resembles, pretty accurately, the haricot or kidney-bean. Two substances are readily distinguishable in it;—the outer, secern'ing, cortical, glandular or vascular, Substantia corticalis seu glandulosa, which secretes the urine; and the inner, tubular, medullary, uriniferous, conoidal or radiated, Substantia Medullaris seu Tubulosa seu Fibrosa, which appears under the form of small cones or unequal papillæ or mammillæ, each resulting from the union of small capillary tubes, adherent by one of their extremities to the cortical substance; and opening, by the other, at the summit of the cone, into calices, a species of membranous tubes, more or less numerous, which transmit the urine of the papillæ to the pelvis. By the pelvis is meant a small, membranous sac, of an irregularly oval shape, at the base of which are the orifices of the calices, and the other extremity of which is continuous with the ureter. The kidney is surrounded by a fibrous membrane proper to it, Perinephrus, Tunica propria seu albuginea. It has been shown by Mr. Bowman and others that the renal artery is distributed to the corpora Malpighiana, forming a pellet of convolutions, which is received into a flask-like dilatation of the ureter—Bowman's Capsule, and through which—it is conceived—the watery portion of the urine is separated. The blood then becomes venous, and is distributed by different veins—portal veins of the kidney—to the convoluted tubes through which the proper urine is secreted. Hence the blood passes into the renal vein. The intermediate vessels between the Malpighian bodies and the convoluted tubes have been termed the Portal System of the Kidney.

KIDNEYBEAN, Phaseolus vulgaris.

KIDNEY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE. Morbus Brightii seu albuminosis seu granulosus Renum, Nephritis albuminosa seu sciatia, Neph- ria, Nephrochylazo'sis, Nephrococco'sis, Uroze'mia albuminosa, Cachectic or Associated nephritis, Inflammation of the Malpighian corpuscles, Disease of Bright, Granular Degeneration or Disorganization of the Kidney, Granular Kidney of Bright, Cachectic nephritis, Chalazonephritis, (F.) Maladie de Bright, Néphrite albumineuse, État Granuleux or Dégénérescence granulée du Rein, Albuminorrhée. A granular disease of the cortical part of the kidney, characterized by the secretion of urine that contains albumen, and is of less specific gravity than natural, and which destroys by inducing other diseases. It was first described by Dr. Bright, of London.

KIDNEY, GRANULAR, OF BRIGHT, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

KIDNEY, MOVABLE. A condition of the kidney, usually congenital, in which the renal vessels are so elongated as to permit the kidney to be moved in certain directions. The tumour, formed by it, and felt on pressure, may readily be mistaken for disease of other parts.

KI'ESTEÏNE, properly Ky'esteïne, Ki'esteïn, Ky'estin or Ky'estein, Kyestein, Ki'estin, Ki'estine, Cy'esteïne or Cy'estein, Kiesthein, (F.) Kyestéine, (κίαιν, 'to be pregnant,' and εσθης, 'a garment or pellice.')

A peculiar albuminoid pellice, which forms on the urine of a pregnant female when it is allowed to stand for a few days. It is whitish, opalescent, slightly granular, and may be compared to the fatty substance that swims on the surface of soups, after they have been allowed to cool. When taken in conjunction with other phenomena, it is a valuable aid in the diagnosis of early pregnancy.

KIESTIN'IC, Kiestin'icus. Relating or appertaining to kiesteine; as 'kiestinic urine.'

KIL'BURN, MINERAL WA'TERS OF. These springs contain carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid; carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron; sulphates of soda, lime, and magnesia, and chloride of sodium.

KILE, Uleer.

KILL LAMB, Andromeda mariana.

KIL'GRAMME, Chiliogram'ma, (χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.')

The weight of a thousand grammes;—two pounds, eight ounces, one drachm, and twenty-four grains, Troy.

KILOLITRE, (χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and λιτρα, 'a litre.')

A measure containing a thousand litres.

KINA KINA (Peruvian), Cinchona.

KINKINA, (Peruv. Kina.) Cinchona.

KINKIKIN'NICK. An Indian term for a mixture of tobacco, leaves of the sumach and twigs of the willow, which is used as tobacco.

KI'NO, (Ind.) Gum'mi Gambien'se seu adstrin'gens Pothergilli, Af'rican, East India or Amboy'na kino, (F.) Gomme, suc ou extrait de kino. The trees, whence one variety of this resin is obtained, are not botanically ascertained. The London college ascribes it to Pterocarpus erinacea; the Edinburgh to Eucalyptus resinifera seu gummifera, Prou bark; and the Dublin to Buteu frondosa. The Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1842,) defines it to be "an extract obtained from an uncertain plant." The later editions, and the British Pharmacopœia, (1864,) state it to be the inspissated juice of Pterocarpus marsupium (De Candolle) and of other plants. On wounding the bark, the kino flows drop by drop. A West India variety is said to be derived from Coccoloba urifera or Seaside Grape; and a Bo'any Bay kino is said to be the concrete juice of Eucalyptus resinifera or broeu gumtree of New Holland. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Myrtaceæ. Kino consists chiefly of tannic and gallic acids, oxide of iron, and colouring matter. It is inodorous; the taste a sweetish bitter; and it is sometimes gritty between the teeth. It comes to us in fragments of a dark ruby red colour, and is easily pulverized. Its properties are powerfully astringent. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx in powder.

KIONORRHAPHIA, (κίωρ, 'uvula,' and ῥαφή, 'suture,') Staphylorrhaphy.

KI'OTOME, Ki'otomus, (κίωρ, 'a pillar,' 'a support,' and τεμνω, 'to cut,') (F.) Concebride. An instrument invented by Desault to cut any accidental brides or filaments in the rectum and bladder; and which he afterwards used for the removal of the tonsils. It is composed of a flat, silver sheath, open at one edge. This sheath is provided with a cutting blade, which can be forced through the opening, and thus all the parts can be divided with which it comes in contact.

KIPPERNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

KIRATE. A weight of four grains, according to Blancard.

KIRIAGHUMA, Gymneura lactiferum.

KIRKLAND'S NEUTRAL CERATE, see Cerate, Kirkland's Neutral.

KNARESBOROUGH, MINERAL WATERS OF, see Harrowgate, mineral waters of.

KNEADING, (from Sax. cnæsan, 'to kneed,') Shampooing.

KNEE, (Sax. cnæp;) Genu—k. Encircled hoof, Crusta genu equinæ.

KNEE, HOUSEMAID'S. An inflammation of the bursa, which in most individuals is in front of the patella—(F.) Bourse prérotulienne,—and is apt to inflame and enlarge from effusion in those in whom it is subjected to much pressure. Hence its name. It is a form of capsular rheumatism.

KNEEHOLLY, Ruscus.

KNEEJOINT, Genu.

KNEE SCAB, Crusta genu equinæ.

KNIFE, (Sax. cnif, (F.) Cnif.) Cul'ter, Smi'tel, Cultell'us, Tomeil'us, Tome'us, Machæ'ra, Machæ'ron, Machæ'ris, (F.) Couteau. A cutting instrument, used in surgery to divide the soft parts, and which only differs from the bistouri or scalpel in being usually larger.

The most common knives are the following:

KNIFE, AMPUTATION, (F.) Couteau à amputation, C. droit, Cul'ter rec'tus. This is the largest of the knives used in surgery. Formerly, they were curved; now they are straight, and provided with one or two edges.

KNIFE, CAT'ARACT, Cerat'omus, Kerat'omus, (F.) Couteau à cataracte. The cataract knives of Richter, Wenzel, Ward, and others, being intended to perform the section of the transparent cornea, are so shaped as to exactly fill the small wound made by them: and thus to prevent the discharge of the aqueous humour, until the section is completed. The blade of the knives of Wenzel and Ward resembles a very narrow lancet, blunt in the posterior five-sixths of one of its edges. The blade of that of Richter is pyramidal, cutting through the whole length of its inferior edge, and also blunt in the five-sixths of the upper.

KNIFE, CHES'ELDEN'S. A knife with a fixed handle; very convex on its edge, concave on the back, which was used by Cheselden in lithotomy.

KNIFE, CROOK'ED, Cul'ter falcat'us, Culter cur'vus, (F.) Couteau courbe. A knife, which is crooked and concave on its cutting edge. It was formerly employed in amputation of the limbs.

KNIFE, CROTCH'ET, Cutell'us un'cus, (F.) Couteau à crochet. A steel instrument, composed of a round staff, furnished with a handle at one extremity, and at the other with a curved knife. It was formerly used to cut to pieces monstrous fetuses in utero, and to open the head when necessary.

KNIFE, DOUBLEEDG'ED, An'ceps cutell'us, Amphis'mela, Amphis'milè, Cat'ling, (F.) Couteau à deux tranchans ou désarticulateur ou interosseux. A knife, the blade of which is straight and sharp on both sides. It is used for disarticulating bones; and for cutting the soft parts situate between the bones, in amputation of the leg and forearm.

KNIFE EN SERPETTE (F.) Couteau en serpette. A sort of knife, of the shape of a serpette or pruningknife, invented by Desault for dividing the bony paries of the maxillary sinus, for the purpose of extracting fungi from it.

KNIFE, LENTIC'ULAR, Cul'ter lenticula'ris, (F.) Couteau lenticulaire. An instrument, used in the operation of trepanning, for removing inequalities in the inner table of the skull, which may have been left by the crown of the trephine around the opening made by it. It is formed of a lenticular button, fixed at the extremity of an iron staff, which is convex on one side, flat on the other; sharp at both edges, and mounted on an ebony handle.

KNIFE, LITHOT'OMY, (F.) Couteau lithotome. A name, given by Foubert to a large knife, the narrow blade of which, four and a half inches in length, was sharp in its whole extent, and made an obtuse angle with the handle. He used it in the lateral operation.

KNIFE, POLYPS, Polypotome.

KNIFE, ROOTCUTTING. In Pharmacy, a knife moving on a joint at its pointed extremity, by which roots and other ligneous matters are divided in pharmaceutical processes.

KNIFESMAN, see Surgery, salvation.

KNITBACK, (Prov.) Symphytum.

KNOBWEED, Collinsonia.

KNOCK-KNEED, Entogonyaneon.

KNOT, (Sax. cnotta.) Tubercle.

KNOT, PACK'ER'S, (F.) Nœud d'emballeur. A compressive bandage, used for arresting hemorrhage from the temporal artery or its branches. The nœud d'emballleur is made with a double-headed roller, five ells long. A graduated compress is placed over the opening in the artery, and the bandage is applied over it; the balls of the roller being carried horizontally round to the opposite temple, where they are crossed obliquely and carried back to the part where the compress is situate. The hands are then changed with the rollers, crossing them so as to form a knot, and taking one above the head; the other beneath the chin. They are then crossed again, so as to form several knots, one above the other. This bandage is called, by some surgeons, so'lar or oblique chevestre or capistrum.

KNOT, SUR'GEON'S, No'dus chirurgicus, (F.) Nœud du chirurgien. A double knot made by passing the thread twice through the same noose. This knot is used frequently in the ligature of arteries, the umbilical cord, &c.

KNOTBERRIES, Rubus chamæmorus.

KNOTGRASS, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOTROOT, Collinsonia Canadensis.

KNOTWEED, Collinsonia Canadensis, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOWLTO'NIA VESICATO'RIA, (after Thomas Knowlton, of the botanic garden at Eltham.) Nat. Order, Ranunculaceæ. An acrid plant of South Africa, used by the Cape colonists as a blister in rheumatism.

KOHL SALAD, ('cabbage salad,') Cold slaw.

KOINOMIASMATA, (κοινος, 'common,') and miasmata,) see Miasm.

KOKUM, Garcinia purpurea—k. Butter, see Garcinia purpurea.

KOLERUS, a name given by Paracelsus to a dry ulcer.

KOLPORRAPHY, (κολπος, 'vagina,' and ραφή, 'suture,') Elytrorrhaphy.

KOLTO, Plica.

KUA KAHHA, Curcuma longa.

KUKUI OIL, see Aleurites triloba.

KUMBECEPHAL'IC, Cymbcephal'ic, (κυμβη, 'a canoe,' and κεφαλή, 'head,') According to Professor Daniel Wilson, having a boat-shaped head.

KUMYSS, Kou'myss, Kou'mis. A beverage used in families of the people of Tartary. It resembles sour buttermilk, without being greasy. According to Sir George Simpson, it is prepared in a very simple way from mare's milk, which is merely allowed to stand for some days in a leathern churn till it becomes sour. It is then bottled for use. This drink is rather nutritious than exhilarating; but from the same material the Burats and the Kirghez prepare an intoxicating spirit in which they indulge to excess. A similar preparation is said to be in use in the Orkney and Shetland islands.

KUNAREE, Nerium odorum.

KUSSAUDE, Convolvulus panduratus.

KUTKULEJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTU KURUNJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTUBUTH. An Arabic name for a species of melancholy in which the patient is never quiet at any one place, but wanders about here and there, see Cuttubuth. Also, the name of an insect, which lives at the surface of stagnant waters, and is in a constant state of agitation. Some lexicographers imagine that it is on account of this last circumstance, that the name of the insect has been given to the disease.

KWOSO, Hagenia Abyssinica.

KYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

KYAPUTTY, Caieput.

KYESTEINE, Kiesteine.

KYESTINIC, Kiestinic.

KYLLOPODIA, (κυλλος, 'crooked,' and πους, gen. πόος, 'a foot,') Kyllosis.

KYLLO'SIS, (κυλλος, 'crooked,' 'lame,') Cyello'sis, Kyilopodia. Professor Chaussier so calls congenital distortion of the feet, Club'foot, Polt'foot, Stump'foot, (Prov.) Pommel'foot, Pummel'foot, Tal'ipes, (F.) Pied bot. Of this there are many varieties. In one, the foot, instead of resting on the soil, by the whole plantar surface, touches it only with the metatarsophalangean articulations. It seems as if turned backwards and broken upon the leg, (Pes seu Tal'ipes Equi'nis, Hip'porus, Oxyrod'ia, Tip'foot, Horse'foot.) In other cases the foot is twisted inwards, (Val'rus, Tal'ipes varus, Blesop'odes, Ble'sopus, Cyil'opus, Cyilop'oda, Cyilopod'ion, Lo'ripes, Cross'foot, (F.) Cug-neur,) so that it rests only on the ground on its outer edge; or it may be twisted outwards, (Val' rus, Tal'ipes Valgus, Out'low foot,) or rest only on its inner edge, or on the back part of the heel, Talipes calca'neus, Heel club'foot. In the flat'foot or splay'foot, Duck'foot, Splat'foot, Sur'opus, Plat'ypus, Platy'pod'ia, (F.) Pied plat, the plantar surface of the foot is flattened instead of being concave.

These deformities are rarely accidental. They are almost always congenital, and may be rectified, at an early period, by proper mechanical means to strengthen the foot gradually, and restore it to its proper shape and direction; and if these means fail, the tendons and muscles concerned in the deformity may be divided. A similar affection of the hand is called, by the French, Main bot.

KYMOGRAPH'ION, Cymograph'ion; (κυμα, 'wave,' and γραφω, 'I describe,') A wave describer or measurer. An instrument invented by Ludwig, which is self-registering, and exhibits the relation between the waves of the pulse and the undulations produced by respiration.

KYNA, Pastinaca opponax.

KYPHOSIS, Cyphosis—k. Inflammatoria, Vertebral disease—k. Paralytica, Vertebral disease.

KYPHOSKOLIOSIS, (κυφος, 'gibbons,' and σκολιος, 'crooked,') Cyphoma.

KYST, Cyst, Kys'tis, Cys'tis, Kys'te, Cys'te, (κυστις, κυστη, 'a bladder,' 'pouch,') (F.) Kyste. This term is generally applied to a pouch or sac, —Cysto'ma—without opening, and commonly of a membranous nature, which is accidentally developed in one of the natural cavities, or in the substance of organs. Many theories have been successively emitted to explain the formation of cysts, but none are entirely satisfactory. Some are formed by a thin, translucent membrane, having scarcely the thickness of the arachnoid; others of a whitish, fibro-cellular membrane, more or less thick. Some contain cartilaginous or bony flakes. The greater part have but one cavity; others, on the contrary, have several, separated by incomplete or imperfect septa, as is frequently seen in those developed in the ovaries. The matter contained in cysts is sometimes limpid, serous, yellowish white, reddish, and, at others, more or less thick, albuminous, adipous, or caseous. The tumour, formed by them, is called Encysted.

KYSTE, Kyst—k. Anevrysmal, Aneurismal sac.

KYSTEIN, Kiesteine.

KYSTHITIS, Cynth'itis, (κυσθος, 'the vagina,' and itis.) Inflammation of the vulva and of the mucous membrane of the vagina.

KYSTIQUE, Cystic.

KYSTHOPTO'SIS, (κυσθος, 'the vagina,' and πτωω, 'I fall,') Prolapsus or inversion of the vagina.

KYSTITOME, Cystitome.

KYSTOTOMY, Cystotomy.

KYTE (Sc. and Prov.), Abdomen, Stomach.

KYTARRHAG'IA, (κυτταριον, 'an alveolus,' and βαλω or βηγγω, 'I break forth,') Discharge of blood from an alveolus.

LABIAL, Labialis, (from labium, 'a lip') Relating or appertaining to the lips.

LABIAL, Orbicularis oris.

LABIAL ARTERY, Haller and Sabatier call thus the facial artery of the majority of anatomists. The labial arteries, properly so called, coronary arteries of the lips, [F.] Coronaires des Lèvres, are two in number. The superior arises from the facial, above, and very close to, the commissure of the lips. It is large and tortuous, and is distributed to the upper lip. The lower arises from the facial, at a considerable distance from the commissure, and proceeds, in a serpentine course, into the substance of the lower lip, to which it is distributed.

LABIAL GLANDS. This name is given to a multitude of muciparous follicles, of some size, round, prominent, and separate from each other, which are found on the inner surface of the lips, below the mucous membrane.

LABIAL VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into superior and inferior. They open into the facial vein:—a division of the internal jugular.

LABIALIS, Orbicularis oris.

LABIDOMETER, Labimeter.

LABIMETER, (F.) Labimètre on Labidomètre, (from λαβη, gen. λαβης, 'forceps,' and μετρον, 'measure,') A scale adapted to the handles of the forceps, which indicates the distance of the blades from each other, when applied to the head of the child in utero.

LABIS, gen. Labidius, (λαβη, from λαβωμαι, 'to seize,') Forceps.

LABIUM, (λαβωμαι, 'to seize,') [F.] Lip—l. Leporinum, Harelip—l. Uteri, Amphideum.

LABLAE, Dolichos labialis.

LABORANS, (from labor, 'disease,') Sick.

LABORATOIRE, Laboratory.

LABORATORIUM, Laboratory—l. Chymicum see pharmaceuticum, see Pharmacopœia.

LABORATORY, Laboratorium, Ergasterium, (F.) Laboratoire, (laborare, laboratum, 'to work,') A workshop. A place for preparing chemical or pharmaceutical products, &c.

LABORIOSUS, Laborious, Sick.

LABORIOUS, Laboriosus, (F.) Laborieux, (from labor, 'difficulty,') Delivery is said to be laborious, Partus laboriosus, Mogostocia, (F.) Accouchement laborieux, when attended with more difficulty and suffering than usual. With some, laboriosus labor means one that requires the use of instruments. See Dystocia, and Parturition.

LABOUR, (labor) Parturition.

LABOUR CHAIR, Obstetric chair. A chair, in which a parturient woman is placed during delivery.

LABOUR COMPLICATED, see Parturition—l. Difficult, Dystocia—l. Dry, Partus siccus—l. Forced, see Parturition—l. Impracticable, see Parturition—l. Laborious, see Laboriosus—l. Morbid, Dystocia.

LABOUR PAINS, see Pains.

LABOUR POWERLESS, see Parturition—l. Premature, Parturition, (premature)—l. Preternatural, Metastocia, see Parturition.

LABOUR SHOW, see Parturition.

LABRISULCIUM, (labrum, and sulcus, 'a furrow,') Cheliceae, Stomacae.

LABRUM, Lip—l. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain.

LABRUSCA, Bryonia alba.

LABYRINTH, (λαβυρινθος,) Labyrinthus, Antrum buccinoceum. A place, full of turnings, the exit of which is not easily discoverable. Anatomists have given this name to the aggregate of parts, constituting the internal ear. Labyrinthus auris internae, Intima pars organus auditus, Labyrinthine cavity of the ear. The Labyrinth is situated between the tympanum and meatus auditorius internus. It is composed of several cavities, which communicate with each other in the dried bone: as the vestibule, cochlea, semicircular canals, &c. It is lined by perosteum, and also by a pulpy membrane, constituting the membraneous labyrinth, on which the auditory nerve is regularly dispersed. This membrane forms two sacs in the vestibule, called sacculus vestibulari and sacculus, respectively, which resemble in shape that of the bony cavities containing them. Each sac contains calcareous matter, constituting the Otoliths and Otonianis. When the sac is laid open, upon the upper and outer part, a partition appears, partaking of the nature of the sac, and called by Meckel, Septum vestibuli neredo-membranoceum.

Labyrinthus is also applied to the lateral portions of the ethmoid bone, which are formed of large irregular cells.

LABYRINTH, Membranous, see Labyrinth.

LABYRINTHIC, Labyrinthicus, Labyrinthoides, (F.) Labyrinthique. Relating or appertaining to the labyrinth.

LABYRINTHIC CAVITY OF THE EAR, Labyrinth.

LABYRINTHODES, (λαβυρινθος, from labyrinthos, and odes,) Labyrinthice.

LABYRINTHUS, (λαβυρινθος,) Labyrinth—l. Auris Internae, see Labyrinth.

LAC, Lacca, Laqueus, Milk—l. Ammoniaci, Mistura ammoniaci—l. Amygdalae, Emulsio amygdalae—l. Asafoetidae, Mistura asafoetidae—l. Avis, Albumen ovi—l. Guaiaci, Mistura Guaiaci.

LAC, GUM, Lacca.

LAC LUNE, Marga candida—l. Maris, Spermium, Pressum, Card—l. Primum Puerperae, Colostrum.

LAC SEED, Lacca—l. Shell, Lacca—l. Stick, Lacca.

LACAPHTHON. Presumed to be the bark of some fir or other tree. It entered into the composition of the Cypus, used in fumigations. Supposed to be the Narcophthum or Nosaphthum.

LACCA, (lakah, Arab.,) Gummi lacceæ, Stick, Gum, Seed, or Shell Lac, (F.) Laque, Gomme Laque. Lac is a substance formed by an insect, and deposited on different species of trees, chiefly in the East Indies,—for example, on Quercus lacciferum, and two species of Ficus,—Ficus religiosa, and F. Indica. The various kinds, distinguished in commerce, are stick-lac, which is the substance in its natural state, investing the small twigs of the tree; and seed-lac, which is the same broken off. When melted it is called shell-lac.

Lac was, at one time, used in the form of tincture, as a tonic and astringent; and it still forms part of particulate dentifrices.

LACERATION, Laceratio, (laccare, laccatus, 'to tear,') Rhegma, Rhegimus, Rhegma, Ruptura, Rupinus, Dilaceratio, Sparagmus, (F.) Arrachement, Déchirement, Dilacération, Bruisement. The act of tearing or rending. The breach made by tearing or rending; as a lacerated wound, Troxis valvus laceratum, Laceratura, Vulnus laceratum.

LACERATURA, see Laceration.

LACERTA, Lizard—l. Aquatica, see Ectozoa.

LACERTI CORDIS, Columnæ carnea—l. Muscularum, see Muscular fibre.

LACERTOSUS, Muscular.

LACERTULI CORDIS, (dim. of Lacertus,) Columnæ carnea.

LACERTUS, Brachium, Muscle, see Muscular fibre.

LACERUM, (lacer, 'torn,') Any thing torn, or appearing as if torn. (F.) Déchiré.

LACERUM FORAMEN ANTERIUS, (F.) Trou déchiré antérieur, Hiatus spheno-petrous, (Ch.) is an irregular opening, formed by the sphenoid, occipital, and petrous portion of the temporal bone. It is closed by cartilage, and forms a kind of fontanelle, situated at the termination of the petro-occipital suture.

LACERUM FORAMEN POSTERIUS, Foramen jugularé, F. lacerum in Basi Crani, (F.) Trou déchiré postérieur, Hiatus occipito-pétreux, (Ch.) is formed by the occipital bone, and the inferior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone. Through it, the internal jugular vein, the eighth pair of nerves, and accessory nerve pass out of the cranium.

LACERUM FORAMEN SUPERIUS, Sphenoidal fissure.

LACH'ANON, (λαχανον, from λαχανω, 'I dig.') A pot herb; Oliv, pl. Olera, a vegetable used as food. (F.) Potager.

LACHESIS PICTA, see Arrow-poison.

LACHESIS RHOMBEATA, Flammon. A poisonous serpent common in the lower forests of Peru.

LACHNANTH'ES TINCTORIA, (λαχνη, 'wool,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' owing to its woolly flowers.) Dilat'ris tinctoria, Red'root: indigenous. Ord. Hæmodoracææ. The root is astringent and tonic.

LACHRYMA, (δακρυμα,) Tear; see Vitis vinifera.

LACHRYMAL, Lacrymal, Lacryma'lis, (from lacryma.) Belonging to the tears. This epithet is given to various parts.

LACHRYMAL APPARATUS, see Lachrymal Passages.

LACHRYMAL ARTERY proceeds from the ophthalmic; and distributes its principal branches to the lachrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL BONE, Unguis os.

LACHRYMAL CANAL' or DUCT, Nasal Canal' or duct, Dacryoso'ten, Canalis lacryma'lis seu orb'bite nasa'lis seu Sac'ci lacryma'lis, Duct'us ad Nasum seu Nasa'lis orb'bite, is formed by the superior maxillary bone, os unguis, and os turbinatum inferius; and is seated in the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. It is lined by a prolongation of the mucous membrane of the lachrymal sac; and its inferior orifice is furnished with a valvular duplication. This duct transmits the tears, which have been absorbed at the great angle of the eye, by the puncta lacrymalia, into the nasal fossæ.

LACHRYMAL CARUNCLE, see Caruncula lacrymalis—1. Cyst, Dacryops—1. Duct, Lachrymal Canal.

LACHRYMAL FOS'SA, Fossa seu Fo'vea lacryma'lis, is a slight depression at the upper part of the orbit, which lodges the lachrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL GLAND, Glandula lacryma'lis seu innomina'ta Gale'ni, is seated in a depression of the frontal bone at the upper, anterior, and outer part of the orbit. It is of about the size of an almond; and of an oval shape, flattened above and below:—its great diameter being the antero-posterior. It is composed of several small lobules, united by areolar tissue, and separated by it as well as by vessels and nerves which creep in the intervals. This gland has seven or eight excretory ducts, which open behind the upper eyelid. Its use is to secrete the tears, and pour them on the globe of the eye by the excretory ducts.

LACHRYMAL GROOVE, (F.) Gouttière lacrymale, is the bony channel, which lodges the lachrymal sac. It is seated at the anterior and inner part of the orbit and is formed by the os unguis and the ascending process of the upper jaw bone.

LACHRYMAL HER'NIA, Lachrymal Tu'mour, Her'nia Sac'ci Lacryma'lis, is when the tears enter the puncta, but cannot pass to the nose, and accumulate. By Anel, this was called Dropsy of the Lachrymal sac.

LACHRYMAL MUSCLE, Tensor tarsi.

LACHRYMAL NERVE is the smallest of the three branches formed by the ophthalmic nerve. It is distributed, particularly, to the lachrymal gland and to the upper eyelid. In its course it gives off a sphenomaxillary and a malar filament.

LACHRYMAL PAPILLA, see Lachrymal Puncta.

LACHRYMAL PASSAGES, Vivæ lacryma'les, (F.) Voies lacrymales. The organs concerned in the secretion of tears, in spreading them over the eye, and taking them up again to transmit them into the nasal fossæ. The lachrymal passages are composed of the lachrymal gland, caruncle, puncta, ducts, lachrymal sac, and nasal duct, which, together, form the lachrymal apparatus, (F.) Appareil lacrymal.

LACHRYMAL PUNCTA, Tear puncta, Puncta Lacryma'lia, Spiram'ina Palpebra'rum, (F.) Points lacrymaux, are two small, round, and contractile openings, situate in the centre of a tubercle or papilla, Papilla lacryma'lis, Tuber'culum lacryma'le, about a line and a half distant from the inner commissure of the eyelids, and continuous with the lachrymal ducts. These ducts, Lacryma'les Canaliculi, Canales seu Ductus lacryma'les, Ductus lacrymales laterales seu puncto'rum lacryma'lium, Cor'nea lacryma'lia seu lima'cium, Collic'is puncto'rum lacrymalium, Canaliculi lima'cium, (F.) Conduits lacrymaux, are two in number—a superior and an inferior—which extend from the puncta to the lachrymal sac. They seem formed by a very delicate prolongation of the conjunctiva, which is continuous with the mucous membrane of the lachrymal sac, (F.) Reservoir des larmes:—the Sac'cus seu S'c'cus seu Lac'cus lacryma'lis, Dacryocyst'is, Infundibulum lacryma'le.

LACHRYMAL SAC, see Lachrymal puncta.

LACHRYMAL TUBERCLE, see Lachrymal puncta.

LACHRYMAL VEINS accompany the artery of the same name, and open into the ophthalmic and palpebral veins.

LACHRYMATION, Lacrymatio—1. Sanguineo, Dacryhæmorrhysis.

LACINIA, 'a hem or fringe,' hence

LACINLÆ TUBARUM FALLOPII, see Tube, Fallopian.

LACINIATED, Lacinia'tus, (F.) Lacinié, (from lacinia.) Fringed,—as the lacinated extremities of the Fallopian tubes.

LACIS, (F.) (from lacer, 'to lace,') Plexus.

LACMUS, Lichen roccella—1. Tinctorius, Lichen roccella.

LACONICUM, (used by the Lacæones, Lacedæmonians.) Vaporarium, see Stove.

LACQ, Laqueus.

LACRIMA, Tear.

LACRUMA, Tear.

LACRYMA, Tear.

LACRYMAL, Lachrymal.

LACHRYMALIS, Lachrymal.

LACRYMA'TIO, Lachryma'tion, (from lacryma.) Epiphora. Also, a profuse secretion of tears from any cause,—weeping, Fletus, Plora'tio, Plora'tus.

LACRYMINE, see Tears.

LACTALBUMEN, (lac, gen. lactis, 'milk,' and albumen.) Casein.

LACTANS, (lactare, 'to give milk,') Nurse.

LACTA'RIMUM, Lacticin'ium, (from lac.) Food prepared from milk. Milk diet or food.

LACTATE DE FER, Ferri lactas—1. de Quinine, Quinina lactas.

LACTA'TION, Lacta'tio, Thelasia, Thelasmus, (lactare, lactatum, (lac, 'milk,') 'to suckle,' 'to give milk,') Suck'ling:—the giving of suck, (F.) Allaitement. The French make four varieties of lactation. 1. Allaitement maternel—Maternal Lactation, when the mother suckles the child. 2. A. étranger mercenaire,—when another suckles it. 3. A. artificial, when the child is brought up by hand. 4. A. animal, when the child is suckled by an animal.

LACTÉ, Lactic.

LACTEAL, Lactic—1. Sac, see Lactiferous vessels—1. Swelling, Lactiferous swelling.

LACTEALS, Chyliferous vessels.

LACTEIN, Milk, solidified.

LACTENS, (lacteo, 'to suck,') Sucking child.

LACTES, Mesentery, Pancreas.

LACTEUS, Lactic.

LACTIC, Lac'teus, Galacticus, Galactinus, Lac'teal, Milky, (F.) Lacté, Laiteux. Appertaining to, or resembling milk.

LACTIC ACID, Ac'idium Lac'teum seu Lac'tis seu Lac'ticum, Acid of milk, Galact'ic, Nan'ceic or Ca'seic Ac'id, (F.) Acide Lactique. This has been recommended as a therapeutical agent in atonic dyspepsia, owing to its being presumed to be one of the gastric acids secreted in health. It is given either in the form of lemonade or of lozenge. The acid is obtained either from milk or from the juice of the red beet. S. g. 1.212.

LACTICA (Arab.), Typhoid.

LACTICANS, (from lac, 'milk,') Nurse.

LACTICINIUM, Lactarium.

LACTIFÈRE, Lactiferous.

LACTIFÈROUS, Galactoph'orous, Lac'tifer, (F.) Lactifère, (lac, and fero, 'I carry,') Milk-conveying.

LACTIFEROUS or LACTEAL SWELLING. A tumefaction of the breast, supposed by Sir Astley Cooper to arise from a large collection of milk in one of the lactiferous tubes, the result of chronic inflammation of the tube near the nipple, with closure of its aperture, and obliteration of the canal for an inch or more. The tube requires to be punctured.

LACTIFEROUS VESSELS, Lactif'eros or Galactoph'orous Ducts, Tu'buli lactif'eri, Ductus lactif'eri seu lac'tei, (F.) Vaisseaux ou conduits lactifères, are the excretory ducts of the mammary gland, each of which, running towards the nipple, dilates beneath the areola into an elongated sacculus—the lacteal or galactophorous sac, receptacle or sinus, sac'culus seu si'nus lactiferus.

LACTIFUGA, Lac'tifuge, (lac, and fugo, 'I drive away,') Medicines which dispel milk.

LACTIGO, gen. Lactig'inis, (from lac, 'milk,') Porrigo larvalis.

LACTIN. Sugar of milk.

LACTINATED, Lactina'tus (from lactin.) Relating or appertaining to lactin. Lactin, or sugar of milk, being hard, it is used for the division and dilution of substances; and powders thus formed have been called lactinated powders.

LACTINIA. Food prepared with milk.

LACTIPOTOR, (lac, and potare, 'to drink,') Galactopotes.

LACTIS CONCRETIONES, Infarctus Mam-mæ lactis.

LACTIS REDUNDANTIA, Galactia—1. Retentio, Galactischesis—1. Sanguinolenti Excretio, Galactohæmia.

LACTISUGIUM, (lac, and sugere, 'to suck,') Antlia lactea.

LACTIVORUS, (lac, and vorare, 'to devour,') Galactophagous.

LACTOCELE, (lac, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Galactocèle.

LACTOLINE, Milk, solidified.

LACTOMETER, (lac, and μετρον, 'a measure,') Galactometer.

LACTOSE, (from lac, 'milk,') Sugar of milk.

LACTUCA, (from lac, 'milk,') so called, from its milky juice. Lactuca Sat'iva, Let'tuce, Gar'den Lettuce, Eunu'chium Mec'o'nis, Thri'dax, Thri'dar'inè, Cher'bas, (F.) Laitue ordinaire; Ord. Com- posita, is used as a wholesome salad. The seeds possess a quantity of oil, which, when formed into an emulsion, has been advised in ardur urinae, &c.

The inspissated juice, Lactuca'rium, Thri'dacè, Lettuce opium, resembles, in odour and appearance, that of opium, and is, like it, narcotic, but uncertain. Dose. gr. j to x, and more.

LACTUCA ELONGATA, see L. virosa—1. Floridana, Mulgedium Floridanum—1. Graveolens, L. virosa—1. Marina, Fucus vesiculosus.

LACTUCA SCAR'OLA, L. Sylves'tris, Scar'olu, (F.) Laitue Scariole ou Sauvage, possesses a stronger degree of bitterness than L. sativa. It has similar virtues with Z. virosa.

LACTUCA SYLVESTRIS, L. scariola—1. Villosa, Mulgedium acuminatum.

LACTUCA VIRO'SA, L. grave'olens, Strongscented Lettuce, (F.) Laitue vireuse. The odour of this plant, the leaves of which are used in medicine, is strongly narcotic, and the taste bitter. They are narcotic, diuretic, and aperient; and have been used in dropsies. Lactuca elong'ata, Wild Lettuce of the United States, has been employed for L. virosa.

LACTUCARIUM, see Lactuca.

LACTUCIMEN, (from lac, 'milk,') Aphthæ.

LACTUCIMINA, Aphthæ.

LACTUMEN, (from lac, 'milk,') Porrigo larvalis.

LACTUMINA, Aphthæ.

LACUNA, Canalic'ulus, (dim. of lacus, 'a lake, or deep ditch, or cistern,' λακος, and λακος.) A Fos'sa or Ditch. A small cavity in a mucous membrane, the parietes of which secrete a viscid humour. It is used synonymously with crypt. Also, the external opening of such cavity.

LACUNA, Crypta, Fontanella—1. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain, Pituitary gland.

LACUNA seu SULCUS seu SULCULUS LABII SUPERIO'RIS, Amab'ilè, Amato'rium, Phil'trum. The hollow of the upper lip under the nose.

LACUNA MAGNA, see Urethra.

LACUNE, (pl. of Lacuna), see Urethra.

LACUNE OF BONE. Certain dark stellate spots, with threadlike lines radiating from them, seen under a high magnifying power. These were at first believed to be solid os'seous or bone cor'puscles or cells, Corpus'cula os'sium, Cor'puscles of Purkinje, (F.) Cellules des os ou osseuses, Corpuscules des os ou noirs ou ramifiés ou calcaires, Ostéoplastes; but are now regarded as excavations in the bone—Sac'culi chalicoph'ori—with minute tubes or canaliculi proceeding from them, and communicating with the Haversian canals. The lacunæ and canaliculi are fibres concerned in the transit of nutrient fluid through the osseous tissue.

LACUNE GRAAFIA'NÆ, L. mucosæ vul'væ. The mucous follicles of the vagina.

LACUNE MUCOSÆ VULVÆ, L. Graafianæ—1. Palpebrarum, Meibomius, glands of.

LACUNAR, La'quear, 'an arched roof or ceiling.' The roof of a chamber. Hence,

LACUNAR OR'BITÆ. The roof of the orbit.

LACUNAR VENTRICULI QUARTI SUPERIOR, Va-vula Vieussenii.

LACUNE DE LA LANGUE, Cæcum tora-men—1. de Morgagni, see Urethra.

LACUS LACRYMALIS, (lacus, 'a lake,' or cistern, λακος.) Lachrymal sac.

LACUS LACRYMA'RUM. A small space in the inner angle of the eye between the lids, towards which the tears flow, and at which the triangular canal formed between the closed lids terminates.

LADA, Piper nigrum.

LADANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LADENDO, Influenza.

LADIES' MANTLE, Alchemilla.

LADIES' SLIPPER, SHOWY, Cypripedium

spectabile—l. Slipper, stemless, Cypripedium acaule—l. Slipper, yellow, Cypripedium luteum.

LADIES' SMOCK, Cardamine pratensis.

LADRE, (from Lazarus [?]), Leprous.

LADRIERIE (F.), (from ladre.) (F.) Léproserie, Maladerie. A vulgar name for elephantiasis, or lepra. Also, an hospital for the reception of the leprous, Leprosarium, Do'mus leprosar'ia, Lepor hospital.

LADYBIRD, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYBUG, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYCOW, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADY CRESPIGNY'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LADY HESKETH'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LADY WEBSTER'S PILLS, see Pilulæ Aloes et Kinæ Kinæ.

LADY'S THUMB, Polygonum persicaria.

LÆDENS, pl. Læden'tia, (lædo, 'I hurt.') Any thing hurtful or injurious, as to the economy.

LÆMOPARALYSIS, (læmus, and paralysis.) Œsophoparagia.

LÆMOSCIRRHUS, Cancer pharyng'is et œsoph'agi, Læmosten'ois seu Dyspha'gia scirrho'sa; (from læmus, and scirrh'os, 'scirrhous'; Cancer of the pharynx or œsophagus.

LÆMOSTENOSIS, (læmus, and stenosis, 'narrowness'.) Dysphagia constricta—l. Scirrhusa, Læmoscirrhus.

LÆMUS, (λαμος.) Pharynx.

LÆSIO, (lædere, læsum, 'to hurt.') Lesion—l. Continui, see Continuity, solution of.

LÆTIFICANTIA, (lætifico (lætus, and facio).) 'I make glad.' Medicines formerly used as cordials, in depression of spirits, &c.

LÆVIGATIO, (lævis, 'light, smooth.') Levigation.

LÆVITAS INTESTINORUM, (lævis, 'smooth.') Lientery.

LAG TEETH, Molar teeth.

LAGENTOMUM, (λαγος, 'a hare,' en, and τομη, 'section.') Harelip.

LÄGERBEER, see Cerevisia.

LAGNEA, (λαγνια.) Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNEIA, (λαγνια.) Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNESIS, (from λαγνος, 'lustful.') Furor Femininus, Nymphomania—l. Furor masculinus, Satyriasis—l. Salacitas, Satyriasis.

LAGNEUMA, (λαγνευμα.) Coition, Sperm.

LAGNIA, (λαγνια.) Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNOSIS, (from λαγνος, 'lustful.') Satyriasis.

LAGOCHELLUS, (λαγος, 'hare,' and χελος, 'lip.') Harelip.

LAGONES, (λαγones.) Flanks.

LAGONOPONOS, (lagones, and ponos, 'suffering.') Pleurodynia.

LAGOPHTHALMIA, (λαγος, 'a hare,' and οφθαλμος, 'an eye.') Lagophthalmus, Lepori'nus Œculus, Hare's Eye, (F.) Œil de Lièvre. A vicious arrangement of the upper eyelid, which is so retracted that it cannot cover the globe of the eye during sleep. It has been asserted that this condition of the eye is natural in the hare when asleep.

LAGOPHTHALMUS, (λαγοφθαλμος.) Lagophthalmia, Geum urbanum.

LAGOSTOMA, gen. Lagostom'atis, (λαγος, 'hare,' and στωμα, 'mouth.') Harelip.

LAÏ, Ai.

LAIT RÉPANDU, ('milk diffused.') (F.) L. épanché. A popular expression in France, under which is comprehended every kind of disease—and particularly vague pains—occurring after delivery; all being ascribed to diffusion or deposition of milk.

LAIT DE TERRE, ('milk of earth.') Magnesiæ carbonas—l. de Vache, Milk of the cow—l. Virginal, Virgin's milk.

LAITERON DOUX, (from lait, from its milky juice.) Sonchus oleraceus.

LAÏTEUX, Lactic.

LAÏTAT, ([F.] from lait.) Sour whey in which different wild fruits have been macerated. Said to be much used in the Jura as a refreshing drink.

LAÏTUE ORDINAIRE, (from lait, from its milky juice.) Lettuce—l. Sauvage, Lactuca scariola—l. Scariote, Lactuca scariola—l. Vireuse, Lactuca virosa.

LAÏTY, La'ici, (λαος, 'the people.') Formerly, and generally at the present day, the people as distinguished from the clergy. Frequently, however, employed in the sense of the people as distinguished from those of the other learned professions. A lay'man is one of the laity.

LAKEWEED, Polygonum hydropiper.

LALIA, (λαλια, 'speech.') Voice, articulated.

LALLA'TION, Lalla'tio, Lambdacis'mus, Labdacis'mus, Lut'laby speech. Sauvages uses this term for a vicious pronunciation, in which the letter L is improperly doubled or softened or substituted for R.

LAMAC, Acaciæ gummi.

LAMBACISMUS, (from the Greek letter Λ, λαμβάα) Lallation.

LAMB'DOID, Lambdoid'al, Lambdoï'des, Lambdo'des, Lambdoï'deus, (Λ, λαμβάα), and εἶδος, 'shape, resemblance.') Anatomists have given the name LAMBDOID'AL SUTURE, Sutur'a Lambdoï'dæ seu lambdoï'des seu lambdoïdea seu Pro'ria, to the suture, formed by the parietal bones and the occipital, because it resembles the letter Λ (lambda) of the Greeks. It is the Occip'ito-pari'etal suture, Suture occipitale, (Ch.) In this suture, the ossa Wormiana are most frequently met with; and the denticulations are most distinctly marked.

LAMBEAÛ, Flap.

LAMBITIVUM, (lambere, 'to lick.') Eclectos.

LAMBKILL, Kalmia latifolia.

LAMBKILLER, Andromeda mariana.

LAME, Lamina—l. Cornée, Tænia semicircularis—l. Ruyschienne, Ruyschiana tunica—l. Vitrée, see Table.

LAMELLA, Lamina—l. Plana, Planum os.

LAMEL'LAR, Lamello'sus, Lam'inated, (F.) Lamelle, Lamelleux, Lam'ineux, composed of thin laminae or leaves—as the Lamellar or laminated tissue; i. e. the areolar tissue.

LAMELLÉ, Lamellar.

LAMELLEUX, Lamellar.

LAMENESS, Claudication.

LAMIER, Lamium album.

LAM'INA, Lamel'la, ('a plate.') Lame. A thin, flat part of a bone, a plate or table, as the cribriform lamina or plate of the ethmoid bone. Lamina and Lamella are generally used synonymously; although the latter is properly a diminutive of the former.

LAMINA CILIARIS, Ciliary zone.

LAMINA CINER'EA. A thin layer of gray substance which forms the anterior part of the inferior boundary of the third ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA COR'NEA, Tænia Tor'ini. A yellowish band or a thickening of the lining membrane of the ventricle, by which the vena corporis striati is overlaid in the lateral ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA CRIBROSA, Cribiform lamella—1. Cribrosa ossis ethmoidæ, see Cribellæ—1. Fusca, see Sclerotica—1. Fusca of the Choroid, see Choroidea tunica—1. Medullaris triangularis cerebri, Lyra—1. Papyracea, Planum os—1. Perforata anterior, Locus perforatus anticus—1. Perforata posterior, see Tarini pons.

LAMINA PERITONÆI EXTERNA. The outer lamina or fold of the peritonæum.

LAMINA PRIMA CUTIS, Epidermis.

LAMINA SPIRALIS, Sep'tum sca'læ seu coch'leæ audit'oriæ. A partition between the scallæ of the cochlea. The largest part of this, next the modiolus, is formed of bone. The remainder, or that part next the opposite side of the scallæ, is composed of a cartilaginous membrane, called by Val-salva, Zo'na seu Zo'nula Coch'leæ. By some anatomists the lamina is divided into a Zona os'sea and Z. mollis. By others it is considered to consist of four laminae, when examined with a strong glass: a Zona os'sea next to the modiolus—a Zona coria'cea on the outer side of this; a Zona vesicula'ris—and a Zona membrana'cea, which is, perhaps, the lining membrane of the cochlea. At the apex of the cochlea, the lamina spiralis terminates by a pointed hook-shaped process, ham'ulus lam'inæ spiralis.

LAMINA OF A VERTEBRA, see Vertebra.

LAMINÆ DORSALÆ, Dor'sal lam'inæ. Two oval masses on each side of the primitive groove of the embryo, which approach so as to form a groove, in which are lodged the future brain and spinal marrow.

LAMINÆ SPONGIOSÆ NASI, Turbinate bones.

LAMINÆ VENTRALÆ, L. viscera'les. Thickened prolongations of the serous layer of the germinal membrane, which, by their union, form the anterior wall of the trunk of the new being.

LAMINARIA DIGITATA, Tan'gle, Sea tan'gle. One of the Algæ eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets with the Pepperdulse. It has been proposed to make tents of it.

The leaf of a seaweed—a species of Laminaria—is employed in the Himalayas under the name of goitre leaf; so called because chewed by the inhabitants where goitre prevails.

LAMINATED, Lamellar.

LAMINEUX, Lamellar.

LAMIUM ALBUM, (from lama, 'a ditch or bog,' because often found there. [?]) L. foliosum, Urtica mor'tua, Galeop'sis, Archangel'ica, Dead or White Archangel Nettle (F.) Ortie blanche ou morte, (Sc.) Day'nettle, Lamier. Ord. Labiatae. Infusions of this plant have been recommended in uterine hemorrhage and leucorrhœa. It is not used.

LAMIUM AMPLEXICAUL'È, Dead Nettle, Henbit; naturalized; flowering from May to October; is regarded as tonic, diaphoretic, and laxative.

LAMIUM FOLIOSUM, L. album—1. Moutanum, Melittis melissophyllum—1. Plinii, Melittis melissophyllum—1. Rubrum, Galeopsis.

LAMOTTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These thermal springs are in the department of Isère, France. Temperature, 184°.

LAMPOURDE, Xanthium.

LAMPROPHONUS, (λαμ'ροφ'ωνος, from λαμ'ρος, 'clear,' and φωνη, 'voice.') One who has a clear voice.

LAMPSONA, (λαψ'ων.) Lapsana.

LAMPYRIS NOCTILUCA, (λαμ'πυρις, from λαμ'πω, 'to shine,' and ουρα, 'a tail.') Cicindela.

LANA PHILOSOPHORUM, ('wool of philosophers.') Zinci oxydum.

LANARIA, (from lana, 'wool.') Saponaria, Verbascum nigrum.

LANCE DE MAURICEAU, (F.) An instrument invented by Mauriceau for perforating the head of the fetus. A perforator.

LANCELET, Lancet.

LANCEOLA, Lancet.

LAN'CET, Lance'ola, Lancet'ta, Schaste'rioris, Scal'pum chirur'gicum, Lancetlet, (Prov.) Fame. (F.) Lancette, (dim. of lancea, 'a lance or spear.') A surgical instrument used in the operation of phlebotomy. It is composed of two parts—the handle, (F.) Chasse, and the blade, (F.) Lame. The former is made of two small plates of ivory, bone, or shell, movable on the blade, for whose preservation they are intended. The blade is formed of well-polished steel. Lancets are made of different shapes; some being broad-shouldered—others, spear-pointed. The French distinguished three kinds: 1. Lancette à grain d'orge, which, on account of the almost oval shape of its point, makes a large opening. 2. The L. à langue de serpent, which is very narrow towards the point; and 3. L. à grain d'avoine, which holds a medium station between the two former, and is generally preferred.

The Abscess Lancet is merely a large lancet for the purpose of opening abscesses.

The employment of a lancet for opening abscesses, &c., is called Lancing.

LANCETTA, Lancet.

LANCETTE, Lancet.

LANCETTIER, (F.) A lancet case.

LANCINANT, Lancing.

LANCINATING, Lancinans, (lancinans, lancinatum, (from lancea, 'a lance,') 'to strike or thrust through,') (F.) Lancinant, (substantive, Élancement.) A species of pain which consists in lacerations or shootings, similar to those that would be produced by the introduction of a sharp instrument into the suffering part. It is especially in cancer that this kind of pain is felt.

LANCING, see Lancet—1. the Gums, Déchaussement, see Gum lancet.

LAND'S END, CLIMATE OF. The climate of the Land's End, in England, resembles that of the south of Devonshire, but is more relaxing. It is considered to be most likely to prove beneficial in consumptive cases in which the disease is accompanied by an irritated state of the pulmonary mucous membrane, producing a dry cough. Where the system is relaxed, and the secretion from the lungs considerable, the climate, it is conceived, will generally prove injurious. As a brumal retreat, the southern coast of Devonshire would seem to be preferable to it.

LANGDEBEF, ('ox tongue,') Anchusa officinalis.

LANGÆAC, MINERAL WATERS OF. Acidulous mineral waters at Langæac, in the department of Haute Loire, France. They are employed as refrigerant, aperient, and diuretic. They contain carbonic acid, carbonates of soda and magnesia, and a little iron.

LANGENSCHWALBACH, Schwalbach.

LAN'GH A'QUA EPILEP'TICA, Epilep'tic Water of Lan'ghius, formerly employed against epilepsy. It was composed of the flowers of convallaria and lavender, Spanish wine, cinnamon, nutmeg, mistletoe, peony and ditany roots, long pepper, cubebæ, and rosemary flowers.

LANGUE, (from lingua.) Tongue—1. Abaisseur de la Glossocatochus—1. de Carpe, Fish-tongue, see Lever—1. de Cerf, Asplegium scolopendrium—1. de Chetal, Ruscus hypoglossum—1. de Chien, Cynoglossum—1. de Serpent, Ophioglossum vulgatum.

LANGUEUR, Languor.

LANGUOR, Aph'esia, Faint'ness, (F.) Langueur. A species of stony, depression or debility, which generally comes on slowly.

LANGWORT (Prov.), Veratrum album.

LANIARI DENT'ES, (F.) Dents Laniaires, (from laniare, 'to tear,') The canine teeth.

LANK (Prov.). Inguen.

LANTANA, Sage-tree, Blue-berry, (F.) Cat-leau. The leaves of this indigenous plant form a finescented tea, like L. Cam'ara or Baha'ma Tea, and L. Pseudotheca or Brazil Tea. The tea is used as a diaphoretic.

LANUGO, gen. Lanuginis, Pili cutis, Plu'ma, (lana, 'wool.') The soft, fine hair on different parts of the body, especially in the young.

LANUGO PRIMA, Gneais—1. Pudendorum, Pubes—1. Siliqua hirsuta, see Dolichos puriens.

LANUVIUM, (from lana, 'wool.') Vulva.

LAONICA CURATIO seu CU'RA, (λαος, 'the people.') A popular mode of treating the gout in the middle ages, "which consisted in the employment of local applications proper for evacuating the morbid matter." [?]

LAOS, Tin.

LAPACTICUS, (λαπαζειν, 'to evacuate.') Cathartic, Laxative.

LAPAGMA, (λαπαγμα.) An evacuation.

LAPARA, (λαπαρα.) Abdomen, Flanks, Lumbi.

LAPARENTEROTOMIA, Laparoenterotomy.

LAPAROCE'LE, La'paroccele, (lapara, and κηλη, 'rupture.') Lum'bar Her'nia, through a separation of the fibres of the quadratus lumborum, and a protrusion of the aponeurosis of the transverse muscle on the outside of the mass common to the sacrolumbalis and longissimus dorsi.

LAPAROCYSTOTOMIA, (lapara, κυστις, 'bladder,' and τομη, 'section.') See Lithotomy.

LAPAROELYTROTOMIA, (lapara, ελυτρον, 'vagina,' and τομη, 'section.') Cæsarean section.

LAPAROENTEROTOMY, Lap'aroenterotom'ia, Laparenterotom'ia, (lapara, εντερον, 'intestine,' and τομη, 'incision.') The operation of opening the abdomen and intestinal canal for the removal of disease.

LAPAROSCOPIA, (lapara, and σκοπεω, 'to examine.') Abdominoscopia.

LAPAROTOMY, Laparotom'ia, (lapara, and τομη, 'section.') Gastrotoomy, especially when executed in the lumbar region. See Gastrotoomy.

LAPATHUS, (λαπαθος.) Rumex acutus.

LAPATHUM, (λαπαθον.) L. acutum, Rumex acutus—1. Aquaticum, Rumex hydrolapathum—1. Chinense, Rheum—1. Hortense, Rumex patientia—1. Orientele, Rheum—1. Pratense, Rumex acetosus—1. Sanguineum, Rumex sanguineus—1. Scutatum, Rumex scutatus—1. Sylvestre, Rumex acutus, R. obtusifolius—1. Unctuosum, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

LAPAXIS, (λαπαξις.) Evacuation.

LAPE, (λαπη.) Mucus.

LAPIDILLUM, (lapis, gen. lapidis, 'a stone.') Blasius has given this name to a kind of scoop used for extracting stone from the bladder.

LAPILLATIO, (from lapillus.) Lithia.

LAPILLI GLANDULÆ PINEALIS, see Pineal gland.

LAPILLUS, (dim. of lapis, 'a stone.') A small stone; gravel; a grain of sand.

LAPIS, gen. Lap'idis, Calculus—1. Accipitrum, Hieracites—1. Ærosus, Calamina—1. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gum—1. Animalis, Blood—1. Armenius, Melochites—1. Aureus, Urine—1. Bezoardicus, Bezoar—1. Cæruleus, Cupri sulphas—1. Calaminaris, Calamina—1. Carnæolus, Cornelian—1. Causticus, Potassa cum calce, Potassa fusa—1. Collymus, Ætites—1. Contraeryvæ, Pulvis contraeryvæ compositus—1. Cyanus, L. lazuli.

LAPIS DIVINUS, L. Ophthalmicus seu Ophthalmicus Sti. Ivesii. Cuprum alumina'tum, (F.) Pierre divine, (Cupri sulphat., Alumini., Potass. nitrat. ã ʒj. Melt together, adding at the end Camphor. ʒjss.) Employed to make an eye-water, ʒij ad aquæ ʒiv.

LAPIS FULMINEUS, Ceraunium—1. Hematites, Hæmatites—1. Hæraclæus, Magnet—1. Infernalis,

Argentî nitras—1. Infernalis alkalinus, Potassa fusa—1. Infernalis sive septicus, Potassa cum calce—1. Judaicus, Judæus (lapis).

LAPIS LAZULI, L. Cy'anus, Asulci, Laz'ulite, (F.) Pierre d'azur. A stone, of a beautiful blue colour; opaque; and close-grained; fracture, dull. It is composed of silex; alumina; carbonate and sulphate of lime; oxide of iron, and water. It was formerly looked upon as a purgative and emetic, and given in epilepsy.

LAPIS MALUCENSIS, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine—1. Nauticus, Magnet—1. Ophthalmicus, L. Divinus—1. Ophthalmicus St. Ivesii, L. Divinus—1. Phœnicites, Judæus (lapis)—1. Porcinus, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine—1. Prunellæ, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus—1. Pumicis, Pumex—1. Sardius, Cornelian—1. Septicus, Causticum commune, Potassa fusa—1. Specularis, S. lucidum—1. Syderitis, Magnet—1. Syriacus, Judæus (lapis)—1. Vini, Potassæ supertartas impurus.

LAPPA, (λαβειν, 'to lay hold of.') Arethium lappa, Galium aparine, Lippitudo—1. Minor, Xanthium.

LAPPULA HEPATICA, Agrimony.

LAP' SANA, (λαψανη), Lamp'sana, Napi'um, Papilla'ris her'ba, Dockcrasses, Nipplewort, (Sc.) Bol'gan leaves, (F.) Lamp'sane, Herbe aux Mamelles. This plant is a lactescent bitter. It has been chiefly employed, however, as an external application to sore nipples, &c.

LAPSUS PILORUM, ('falling of hairs.') Alopecia.

LAQ, Laqueus.

LAQUE, Lacca.

LAQUEAR, ('an arched roof or ceiling.') Lacunar.

LA'QUEAR VAGI'NÆ, Fun'dus Vagi'næ (luquear, 'the inward roof of a house'). The part of the vagina in which the cervix uteri terminates.

LA'QUEUS, ('a noose, a snare;') Fu'nis. A cord, ligature or bandage, with running knots;—a Noose, a loop. A fillet, Bro'chos, Pach'etos, (F.) Lac, Laq on Luq. The term is applied to a bandage or fillet of any kind, attached by means of a loop upon any part, with the view of fixing it; as in certain cases of labour, where a hand or foot presents; or to facilitate extension in luxations and fractures.

Also!—A prominent band in the brain, Lemnis'cus, behind the brachium posterius of the corpora quadrigemina, which marks the course of the superior division of the fasciculus olivaris.

LAQUEUS GUT'TURIS, 'Nose of the throat.' Violent inflammation of the tonsils, in which the patient appears as if suffocated by a noose. According to some, gangrenous cynanche.

LARCH, Pinus larix.

LARD, (from lardum.) Adeps—1. Benzoated, Unguentum Benzoini.

LARDAOË, Lardaceous.

LARDA'CEOUS, Larda'ceus, Lar'deus, Lard'i'form, Lard'i'formis, (F.) Lardacé; (from lardum.) An epithet given to certain organic alterations in the textures, whose aspect and consistence resemble lard. (F.) Tissus lardacées. They constitute what has been termed the Larda'ceous or Chol'esterinic Disease. From their waxy appearance the pathological condition has been called Cero'ma.

LARDEUS, Lardaceous.

LARDIFORM, Lardaceous.

LARDUM, Adeps.

LARGE, (from largus.) Broad.

LARDUM, Adeps.

LARIX, gen. Lar'icis, (λαριξ, gen. λαρικος.) Pinus larix—1. Communis, Pinus larix—1. Decidua, Pinus larix—1. Europæa, Pinus larix—1. Pyramidalis, Pinus larix.

LARKSPUR, BRANCHING, Delphinium consolida.

LARME. (from lacryma.) Tear.

LARMOIEMENT, (from larmoyer, 'to shed tears.') Epiphora.

LARNAUDÉS, DISINFECTING LIQUID OF. see Zinci sulphas.

LAROCHE POSAY, MINÉRAL WATERS OF. Simple sulphurous waters in the department of Vienne, France. Season from the 1st of June to the 15th of September.

LARREA MEXICANA, (after J. A. de Larrea, a Spanish savant.) L. glutinosum, Creosote plant. Order, Zygophyllaceae. A shrub growing in Arkansas, Southern Texas, New Mexico, and Northern Mexico, which abounds in a strong-scented resinous matter; and is used, externally and internally, in rheumatism, and in syphilitic, and other pains.

LARVA, Mask. Also the larva, grub, or vermiform condition of an insect: the first change it experiences after leaving the ovum. Larves of insects are occasionally developed in the intestinal canal from ova swallowed. See Ectozoa.

LARVE, Mask.

LARVÉ, Masked.

LARYNGÉ, Laryngeal.

LARYNGE'AL or Laryngeal, Larynge'us, (F.) Laryngé, Laryngien, (from larynx.) That which belongs to the larynx.

LARYNGEAL ARTERIES are given off from the thyroid arteries.

LARYNGEAL NERVES, (F.) Nervi Laryngé, are two in number;—a superior and an inferior. The superior laryngeal nerve is given off from the trunk of the pneumogastric, at the upper and deep part of the neck. It passes downwards and inwards, behind the internal carotid artery, and divides into two secondary branches; the one, external, which distributes its filaments, on the outside of the larynx, to the sterno-thyroid, hyo-thyroid, constrictor inferior, crico-thyroid muscles, &c. The other, the internal, which crosses the thyro-hyoid membrane, and gives filaments to the epiglottis, the mucous membranes of the pharynx and larynx, to the arytenoid gland, the arytenoid and crico-thyroid muscles, and ultimately intermingles with the inferior laryngeal nerve. The inferior laryngeal nerves or recurrents, Nervi recurrenti, Ramæuz Trachæaux (Ch.), arise from the trunk of the pneumogastric within the thorax. They ascend in the furrow, which separates the trachea from the œsophagus, to be distributed on the neck, after having been reflected:—the left around the arch of the aorta; the right, around the corresponding subclavian. They send off filaments to the cardiac plexuses; to the pareties of the œsophagus, and trachea; to the thyroid gland; to the inferior constrictor of the pharynx; the posterior and lateral crico-arytenoid and thyro-arytenoid muscles; and to the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx.

LARYNGEAL PHTHISIS, Phtthisis, laryngeal.

LARYNGEAL POUCHES, Small culi-de-sac, which lead from the anterior part of each ventricle of the larynx upwards, for the space of half an inch, between the superior ligaments on the inner side, and the thyroid cartilage on the outer, reaching as high as the upper border of that cartilage at the sides of the epiglottis. Numerous small glands open into them.

LARYNGEAL SOUND, Laryngeche.

LARYNGEAL VEINS open into the internal jugular. Winslow gives the name laryngeal to the superior thyroid artery.

LARYNGEAL VOICE, see Voice.

LARYNGE'CHÉ, (laryngo, and χη, or χης, 'sound'.) The laryngeal sound heard by the stethoscope during breathing and speaking.

LARYNGEMPHRAXIS, (laryngo, and μφοραξις,

'obstruction.')

Obstruction of the larynx from any cause.

LARYNGIEN, Laryngeal.

LARYNGISM'US, Spasm of glottis, giving occasion to contraction or closure of the opening.

LARYNGISMUS STRIDULUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGITIS, (laryngo, and ιτις,) Inflammatio Laryngitis, Cynanché seu Angina laryngea, Inflammation of the Larynx, (F.) Laryngitis, Catarrhe laryngien, Angine laryngé. This disease, in some measure, resembles croup; but is usually devoid of that peculiar sonorous inspiration, which attends the latter. There is, also, pain upon pressing the larynx; and, whilst laryngitis is a disease of more advanced life, croup attacks children. The membraniform exudation is, also, absent; probably, because the inflammation, being seated above the glottis, the coagulable lymph is readily expectorated. It requires the most active treatment.

Simple Laryngitis is called by some mucosa Laryngitis, Laryngitis acuta seu mucosa acuta, (F.) Laryngite muqueuse, to distinguish it from submucosa Laryngitis or Œdema of the glottis.

Chronic Laryngitis is generally regarded as synonymous with laryngeal phthisis; but it may exist independently.

LARYNGO (from λαρυγξ, gen. λαρυγγος,) in composition, larynx.

LARYNGOCACE, (laryngo, and κακος, 'bad.')

Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGOCATARRHUS, Catarrhus Laryngæus et trachæalis, Catarrh affecting the larynx and trachea more especially, as indicated by alteration of the voice—hoarseness—itching and sensation of burning in those parts; short cough and expectoration, &c.

LARYNGO-ET-TRACHEO-PHTHISIS, Phtthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOGRAPHY, Laryngogra'phia; (laryngo, and γραφειν, 'a description.')

An anatomical description of the larynx.

LARYNGOL'OGY, (laryngo, and λογος, 'description.')

A treatise on the larynx.

LARYNGOPARALYSIS, see Aphonia.

LARYNGOPH'ONY, Laryngopho'nia, Tracheoph'ony, Laryngeal voice, Tracheal voice; (laryngo, and φωνη, 'voice.')

The sound heard in health, when the stethoscope is placed over the larynx or trachea at the time a person speaks. The voice appears to pass immediately up to the ear of the auscultator. A similar physical sign exists when there is a cavity in the lungs, and the instrument is placed over it whilst the patient speaks. See Pectoriloquy.

LARYNGOPHTHISIS, Phtthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOSCOPY, Laryngoscop'ia, (laryngo, and σκοπεω, 'I view.')

Inspection of the larynx.

An instrument, on the same principle as the ophthalmoscope, which, by means of a mirror, en-bles the larynx to be inspected, is termed a laryngoscope, lar'ynx spec'ulum.

LARYNGOSPASMUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGOSTASIS, (laryngo, and stasis, 'a settling, or stagnation,') Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGOSTENO'SIS, (laryngo, and στένωσις, 'contraction,') Contraction or narrowness of the larynx.

LARYNGOTOMY, Laryngotom'ia, (laryngo, and τομή, 'to cut,') A surgical operation, which consists in opening the larynx, either to extract a foreign body, or to remedy an obstruction of the glottis. The operation is, sometimes, erroneously called Bronchotomy, and Tracheotomy.

LARYNGOTRACHEITIS, Cynanche trachealis—1. Tracheitis with Diphtheritic exudation, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNX, gen. Laryng'is, (λαρυγξ, gen. λαρυγγος,) Caput seu Operculum seu Int'ium seu P'nis superior seu Terminus superior seu Part' prima as'peræ art'ria. The apparatus of voice is situate at the superior and anterior part of the neck; and at the top of the trachea, with which it communicates. It is composed of four cartilages,—the thyroid, cricoid, and two arytenoid; is moved by a number of muscles, and lined by a mucous membrane, having certain membranous reflections, constituting the superior and the inferior ligaments of the glottis, &c.

The larynx is destined to give passage to the air, in the act of respiration, and to impress upon it certain modifications, which constitute voice. Its dimensions vary in different individuals. In men, it is always larger, and situate lower, than in women.

LARYNX, PELLICULAR or PLASTIC INFLAMMATION OF THE, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNX SPECULUM, Laryngoscope.

LAS'ANUM, (λασάνη,) Aph'edra, Aph'edron, Sella familiar'is, (F.) Chaise perchée. A close stool.

LASCIVIA, (from lascivus,) Satyriasis.

LASCIVITAS, Satyriasis.

LASCIVUS, Libidinous.

LASER, Laserpitium—1. à Largez feuilles, Laserpitium latifolium.

LASERPIT'IUM, La'ser, Sil'phium, στος αιλ'ιον. A term applied, anciently, both to a plant and its juice, regarding the nature of neither of which we possess any precise information. Bentley, Laurence, Geoffroi, &c., regard it to have been the same as asafoetida:—Theophrastus, Dioscorides, and the ancient scholiast of Aristophanes, however, by assigning a sweet and agreeable flavour to the laserpitium, discountenance the idea. From whatever plant obtained, it was so rare, and consequently so costly, that the Romans deposited it in the public treasury. It was obtained from Cyrene—Sucus Cyren'icus—and likewise from Persia—the latter being the most valuable. The Laserpitium is called by Avicenna, Al'ihit.

LASERPIT'IUM ASPERUM, L. latifolium.

LASERPIT'IUM LATIFOLIUM, L. asperum, Gentia'na al'ba, White Gent'ian, Cerva'ria al'ba; (F.) Laser à larges feuilles. The root of this plant is bitter and tonic.

LASERPIT'IUM MONTANUM, L. siler.

LASERPIT'IUM SIL'ER, L. trifolia'tum seu monta'nam, Ses'eli, Seselis, Sil'ler montan'um seu lancifol'ium, Heart'wort, Sermountain. The seeds and roots are possessed of aromatic properties.

LASERPIT'IUM TRIFOLIATUM, L. siler.

LASK, Diarrhoea.

LASSITUDE OCULAIRE, Copyopia.

LASSITUDO, (lassus, 'tired,') Copos.

LAST, Inguen.

LATENS IN ORE, ('lying hid in the mouth,') Pterygoideus internus.

LATENT, La'tens, (latere, 'to lie hid,') 'lying hid,' 'concealed.' An epithet applied to certain diseases or states of disease, in which the symptoms are so concealed and obscure, morb' occult'i, as to escape the observation of the physician. Thus, we say latent inflammation, latent period of smallpox.

LATERAD, (latus, gen. lateris, 'the side,') A term used averbially by Dr. Barclay to signify 'towards the lateral aspect.'

LATERAL ASPECT, see Mesial.

LATERIT'IOUS, Laterit'ius, Lateric'ius, (F.) Briqueté, (later, gen. lateris, 'a brick,') An epithet applied to the bricklike sediment, occasionally deposited in the urine of people afflicted with fever; Sedimentum urinae lateric'ium;—(F.) Urine briqueté.

LATEROFLEX'ION, Lat'eroflex'io, (latus, gen. lateris, and flexio, 'a bending,') A bending to one side,—as of the uterus.

LATÉRO-VERSION, (F.) Lat'erover'sio. A turning or version to one side,—as of the uterus.

LATESCENTIS CHORDÆ MUSCULUS, ('muscle of the hidden cord,') Palmaris longus.

LATEX NIVEUS, ('snowy liquor,') Milk.

LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris.

LATIB'ULUM, (from lateo, 'I lie hid,') The foyer of a febrile poison; whence it spreads to every part to induce a paroxysm. See Clapier.

LAT'ICA, (from lateo, 'I lie hid,') Amphimer'ina lat'ica of Sauvages. A species of quotidian remittent, whose paroxysms are very long, and which is accompanied with latent or slightly developed fever,—whence its name.

LATICES LACTEI, Receptaculum chyli.

LATISSIMUS COLLI, (superlative of latus, 'broad,') Platysma myoides.

LATIS'SIMUS DORSI, Aniscal'por, Bra'chium movens quartus, (F.) Lombo-huméral (Ch.), Dorsilombo-sacro-huméral, Muscle grand dorsal, M. très large du dos. A flat muscle; broad, especially below; thin; quadrilateral; and situate at the posterior, lateral, and inferior region of the trunk. It is attached to the posterior half of the outer lip of the crest of the ilium; to the posterior surface of the sacrum; to the spinous processes of the six or seven last dorsal vertebrae, to all those of the loins, and to the last four false ribs, and is inserted by a strong tendon at the posterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. Its upper fibres are almost horizontal; the middle very long and oblique upwards and outwards; and the anterior almost vertical. This muscle carries the arm backwards, depressing it, and making it turn on its axis. It also draws backwards and downwards the prominence of the shoulder. When, suspended by an arm, we make an effort to raise ourselves, it draws the trunk towards the arm. It can, also, raise the ribs by assuming its fixed point on the humerus, and become an inspiratory muscle.

LATITUDO HUMERI, (from latus, 'broad,') Scapula.

LATTICE WORK, (from (F.) latte, 'a lath,') Cancelli.

LATUS, Broad—1. Ani, Levator ani.

LAU, see Spirit.

LAUCANIA, (λακκάνια,) Leuca'nia, Lau'chanè. The fauces and œsophagus. Also, the chin.

LAURENT, SAINT, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring, five leagues from Joyeuse in France. Temp. 127° Fahr.

LAURENTIA PINNATIFIDA, Pepperdulse. One of the Algae, eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets of Edinburgh along with Laminaria digitata or Tangle.

LAUREOLA, (dim. of Laurus, 'laurel,') Daphne laureola.

LAURIER, Laurus—l. Alexandrin, Ruscus hypoglossum—l. Amandier, Prunus laurocerasus—l. d'Apollon, Laurus—l. Cerise, Prunus laurocerasus—l. de Ceylon, Laurus cinnamomum—l. Commun, Laurus—l. des Cuisines, Laurus—l. des Montagnes, Kalmia latifolia—l. Noble, Laurus—l. Rose, Nerium oleander—l. de Trébisonde, Prunus laurocerasus.

LAUROCERASUS, (Laurus and cerasus, 'the cherry tree,') Prunus laurocerasus.

LAUROSE, (from Laurus,) Nerium oleander.

LAURUS, Laurus nobilis, Daphnē, Laur'el, Sweet Bay. Nat. Ord. Lauraceæ. (F.) Laurier, L. noble ou des cuisines ou commun ou d'Apollon. The leaves and berries, Laurus (Ph. L.), have a sweet, fragrant smell, and an aromatic, astringent taste. Sweet bay has been advised as a stomachic and carminative, but is now rarely used. It is, sometimes, employed as a fomentation and in gylsters; and the berries are an ingredient in the Emplastrum Cuminī.

LAURUS ÆSTIVALIS, L. benzoin—l. Alexandrina angustifolia, Ruscus hypoglossum.

LAURUS BENZOÏN, Benzoin odoriferum, Laurus Pseudobenzoin seu æstivalis, Spice wood, Spice bush, Ben'jamin bush, Allspice bush, Wild allspice, Spice berry, Fever wood, Fever bush. An indigenous shrub, growing in moist, shady places, in all parts of the United States; flowering early in spring. All parts of the shrub have a spicy, agreeable flavour, which is strongest in the bark and berries. An infusion or decoction of the small branches is used in popular practice as a vermifuge, and an agreeable drink in low fevers. The bark has been used in intermittents; the berries, dried and powdered, for allspice. The oil of the berries is used as an excitant.

LAURUS CAMPHORA, see Camphor—l. Canella, L. Cassia.

LAURUS CASSIA, L. Canella, Per'sea cassia. The species of Laurus which yields the Cassia, Cassia, Canella, Cassia lignea seu cinnamomea, C. lignea Malabarica, Cortex Canellæ Malabaricæ, Cortex cras'sior, Xylo-cassia, Canella Malabarica et Javan'sis, *C. The bark and leaves abound with the flavour of cinnamon, for which they may be substituted; but they are much weaker. The unopened flowerbuds are used in the same manner. AQUA CASSIÆ, Water of Cassia, prepared by distillation, is official in the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia.

LAURUS CINNAMOMIDES, Nectandra cinnamomoides.

LAURUS CINNAMOMUM, Per'sea cinnamomum, Cinnamomum, C. Zeylanicum, Darsi'ni, Darsi'ni, Cinnamon, Xylocinnamomum, Curdo Canella, (Sc.) Cannel, (F.) Cannelle, Baume de Cannelle, Cannelle officinale ou de Ceylon. Cinnamon bark, which is obtained, also, from Cinnamomum aromaticum, is stimulant and carminative, and is employed, chiefly, as a grateful aromatic, to cover the taste of nauseous remedies. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. The Flowers, called Cassia Flores in the shops, possess aromatic and astringent virtues, and may be used wherever cinnamon is required. The volatile oil of the bark—Oleum Cinnamomi—Oil of Cinnamon, is official in the Pharm. U. S.

LAURUS CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—l. Culliban, L. Cullilawan.

LAURUS CULILAWAN, L. Cullilaban seu Caryophyllus, Cinnamomum Cullilawan. The tree that affords the Cortex Cullilawan seu Cullilaban, Cullilawan, Cortex caryophyllodes seu Caryophylloides Amboinensis. This bark resembles the sassafras in appearance and properties, and is used in Java as a condiment.

LAURUS SAS'SAFRAS, Per'sea sas'safra, Sassafras, S. officinalis, Cor'nus mas odora'ta, Anhuiba, Ague-tree, Ague-tree, (F.) Paranne. Indigenous in the United States. Sassafras wood and root, and especially the bark of the root, Sassafras Radicis Cortex (Ph. U. S.), have been considered stimulant, sudorific, and diuretic. The virtues depend upon essential oil, Oleum Sas'safra, the odour of which is not unlike that of fennel. It has been used in cutaneous diseases, chronic rheumatism, &c., in the form of infusion, which has also been taken as tea. See Saloop.

The pith of the stems, Sassafras medulla, (Ph. U. S.), abounds in gummy matter, which it readily imparts to water, forming a limpid mucilage, which is much employed as a collyrium in ophthalmia, and as a drink in dysentery, catarrh, &c. (one drachm of the pith to a pint of boiling water).

LAUTIS'SIMA VINA, Superlative of laurus, 'elegant,') Wines were formerly so called, which were strongly impregnated with myrrh.

LAVACRUM OPHTHALMICUM, (from lavare, 'to wash,') see Collyrium.

LAVAMENTUM, (from lavare, 'to wash,') Clyster.

LAVANDE, Lavandula—l. de Mer. Static limonium—l. Triste, Static limonium.

LENTIL, Ervum lens.

LENTILLE, Ervum lens—l. Crystalline, Crys- talline—l. Ers. Ervum ervilia.

LENTIS'CINUM VINUM, (from Lentiscus, 'the mastich tree.') Wine impregnated with mastich.

LENTISCUS VULGARIS, Pistacia lentiscus.

LENTITIA, Lentor.

LENTITIS, (lens, gen. lentis, and itis), Phaci- tis.

LENTITUDO, Lentor.

LENTOR, Lentit'ia, Lentitu'do, (lentus, 'clam- my.') A viscosity or siziness of any fluid. See Gluten.

LENUM, (λῆνος, 'a pool or lake,') Torcular Herophili.

LEON, (λεων, gen. λεωντος, 'a lion,') in compo- sition, lion.

LEONO'TIS LEONU'RUS. (leon, and ovs, gen. ovros, 'ear.')

Ord. Labiatae. A South African plant, which has a peculiar smell and nauseous taste, and is said to produce narcotic effects if incautiously used. It is employed in decoction in chronic cutaneous diseases. The Hottentots smoke it like tobacco, and take a decoction of its leaves as a strong cathartic. It is also given as an emmenagogue. In the eastern districts of the Cape Colony, Leonotis ova'ta, (Prov.) Crowpar- nep. Male, is used for the same purpose.

LEONOTIS OVATA, see Leonotis leonurus.

LEONTI'ASIS, Leontion, (λεων, 'a lion.')

A name given to lepra of the face, from some fancied resemblance between the countenance of those labouring under it and that of the lion. To this kind of lepra the epithets le'onine and le'ontine have been given.

LEONTICE THALICTROIDES, Caulophyl- um thalictroides.

LEONTION, Leontiasis.

LEON'TODON TARAX'ACUM, (leon, and odous, gen. odovros, 'a tooth,')

L. officina'le seu vul- ga're, Tarax'acum officina'le seu Dens Leo'nis, Dens leonis, Hedy'nois tarax'acum, Urina'ria, Caput Mon'achi, Dan'delion, Piss-a-bed, (Prov.) Shitabed, Puffball, (Sc.) Dentilium, (F.) Pissenlit, Liondent, Dent de lion, Couronne de Moine. Order, Compositae. The young leaves are sometimes eaten as salad. The roots are, also, roasted and used as a substitute for coffee. The root, Tarax- acum, (Ph. U. S.), is, moreover, reputed to be aperient and diuretic; hence its vulgar names. Its efficacy is doubtful.

LEONTOPODIUM, (leon, and πους, gen. podos, 'a foot,')

Alchemilla.

LEONU'RUS, (leon, and ουρα, 'a tail.')

Lion's Tail.

LEONURUS CARDI'ACA, Agripal'ma Gall'is, Maru- riu'mum, Cardi'aca cris'pa seu triloba'ta seu vul- ga'ris, Her'ba cardi'aca seu Pal'te lapin'e, Mother-wort, Throat-wort, (F.) Agripaume. Ord. Labiatae. Its properties are those of a nauseous bitter; and hence it has been used in hysteria and other nervous affections.

LEONURUS LANATUS, Ballota lanata.

LEOPARD'S BANE, ROMAN, Arnica monta- na, Doronicum pardalianches.

LEPER, see Leprosus—l. Hospital, Ladrerie.

LEPIA CAMPESTRIS, Thlaspi campestre—l. Sativa, Lepidium Iberis.

LEPID'IUM, (from λεπις, gen. λεπιδος, 'a scale,') so called from its supposed usefulness in cleansing the skin from scales and impurities.) Pepper- wort. Ord. Crucifere.

LEPIDIUM CAMPESTRE, Thlaspi campestre.

LEPID'IUM IBE'RIIS, Ibe'ris, Cardaman'tica, Sci- arica cress'es. This plant possesses a warm, penetrating, pungent taste, like other cresses, and is recommended as an antiscorbutic, anti- septic, and stomachic.

LEPIDIUM SATI'VUM, Lep'ia sati'va, Thlaspi nasturtium seu sati'vum, Nasturtium horten'se seu sati'vum, Gar'den cress, Ditt'ander, Green mus- tard, (F.) Cresson alenois, Cresson des Jardins. This plant possesses warm, stimulating prop- erties, and is used like the last.

LEPIDIUM SQUAMATUM, Cochlearia coronopus.

LEPIDO, (from λεπις, gen. λεπιδος, 'a scale,') in composition, scale.

LEPIDODES, (lepidos, and odes), Squamous.

LEPIDOIDES, (lepidos, and eidos, 'resem- blance,')

Squamous.

LEPIDOÏDE, Squamous.

LEPIDOSARCO'MA, gen. Lepidosarco'matis, Tumor squamosiformis carno'sus. A fleshy tumour, covered with scales; (lepidos, and σάρκωμα, 'a fleshy tumour,')

Marcus Aurelius Severinus describes tumours of this kind in the interior of the mouth.

LEPIDOSIS, (lepidos, and osis), Scaly disease.

LEPIDOTIS CLAVATA, Lycopodium clava- tum.

LEPIRA, Lepira.

LEPIS, (λεπις, gen. λεπιδος), Scale.

LEPISMA, gen. Lepis'matis, Squamous portion.

LEPORINUM LABIUM, (lepus, gen. lep'oris, 'a hare,')

Harelip—l. Rostrum, Harelip.

LEPORINUS OCLUS, Lagophthalmia.

LEPOSTEOPH'YTON; (lepis, οστέον, 'a bone,') and φύτον, 'a plant or growth,')

A thin scale of bone, the result of a morbid growth.

LE'PRA, Lep'ira, (λεπρος, 'scaly,')

Lepido'sis Lepri'asis, Lepro'sis, Lepro'sitas, Vitili'go, Lep'ra Græco'rum, Her'pes furfuraceus circina'tus, Lep- rosy, Lep'ery, (Sc.) Lep'ry, Lipper, (F.) Lèpre, Mal Saint-Mau, Dartre furfuracée arrondie. This term has been applied to various affections, very different in character. 1. To the Lep'rosy of the Jews, Leu'ce, Lepido'sis Lepri'asis canes'cers, Lep- pra Mosa'ica seu Hebræo'rum,—a variety of the Al'phos or Lep'ra alphi'odes. The leuce was, generally, not scaly, but consisted of smooth, shining patches, on which the hair turned white and silky, and the skin, with the muscular flesh, lost its sensibility. It was incurable. 2. To the Elephantiasis or Lep'ra of the Arabs, see Elephan- tiasis; and 3. To the Lep'ra of the Greeks, which includes all the varieties met with at the present day. It is characterized by scaly patches of different sizes, but having always nearly a circular form. Bateman and Willan describe three chief varieties of this lepra.

1. Lep'ra alphi'odes, Lepido'sis Lepri'asis al- bida, Al'phos, Morphe'a al'ba, Vitili'go al'phus, Al'barus al'ba, Al'barus, Al'barus, Lèpre écailleuse of Alibert, White lep'rosy. An affection, charac- terized by white patches, surrounded by a rose- coloured areola, which appears here and there on the surface; depressed in the middle.

2. Lep'ra nigricans seu me'las seu maculo'sa nigra, Vitili'go Me'las seu nigra, Morphe'a seu Al'barus nigra, Me'las, Lepido'sis lepri'asis ni- gricans, Black lep'rosy; in which the scales are livid; the size of half a dollar; and diffused over the body, but less widely than in the Alphi'odes. The French pathologists usually admit three species of lepra, to which they give the epithets scaly, (squamæus, crustaceus, (crustacée), and tuber- cular, (tuberculeus,) according as the skin may be covered with scales, crusts, or tubercles.

3. Lep'ra vulga'ris, Lepido'sis lepri'asis vulga- ris, Dartre furfuracée arrondie, of Alibert, charac- terized as follows: scales glabrous, whitish size of a crown piece; preceded by smaller reddish and glossy elevations of the skin, encircled by a dry, red, and slightly elevated border; often confluent; sometimes covering the whole of the body except the face.

Lepra appears to be endemic in Egypt, in Java, and certain parts of Norway and Sweden. Imperfect and faulty nutriment seems to contribute to its development. The means, best adapted for its removal, are:—a mild, unirritating diet, emollient fomentations—sulphureous baths, fumigations, &c.; but, often, all remedial agents will be found ineffectual.

LEPSIS, (λήψις.) Attack.

LEPTANDRA VIRGINICA, (lepto, and anthe, 'an anther,') Vero'nica seu Padero'ta Virgin'ica, Cul'ver's phys'ic. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ. An indigenous plant, which grows throughout the United States, and flowers in August. The flowers are white, and terminate the stem in a long spike. A variety with purple flowers has been described, as LEPTANDRA PURPUREA, Phys'ic root, Black root, Whorl'yroot, Cul'ver's root, Brinton root, Bowman root. The root is bitter and nauseous, and when fresh is emetic and cathartic. In the dried state it is more uncertain. Dose of the powder, gr. xx to ʒj.

LEPTO, (from λεπτος,) in composition, thin, light.

LEPTOCEPHALIA, (lepto, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Monstrosity, in which the head is abnormally small.

LEPTOCHROA, Lep'tochros, (lepto, and χροα, χροα, 'the colour of the skin: the skin,') Fineness, thinness of skin.

LEPTOCHYMIA, (lepto, and χυμος, 'a juice,') Morbid thinness of the juices.

LEPTOHYMÉNIA, (lepto, and ὑμην, 'a membrane,') Thinness, delicacy of membrane.

LEPTOMER'IA, (lepto, and μέρος, 'a part,') Fineness, delicacy of bodily formation.

LEPTONTIQUES, (λεπτινωω, 'to make thin,') Attenuans.

LEPTOPHONIA, (lepto, and φωνη, 'voice,') Oxyphonia.

LEPTOSPERMUM LEUCADENDRUM, (lepto, and σπερμα, 'a seed,') Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEPTOTHRIX, (lepto, and θριξ, gen. τριχος, 'hair,') Leptotrichus.

LEPTOTRICH'IA. Fineness of hair.

LEPTOTRICHUS, Lep'tothrix. One who has fine hair.

LEPTOTROPH'IA, Microtroph'ia, Microtroph'ia, (lepto, and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Light nutrition.

LEPTYNSIS, λεπτινωσις, from λεπτινωω, 'to make thin,') Emaciation.

LEPTYNTICA, Attenuans.

LEPTYNSMUS, (λεπτινωσμος,) Emaciation.

LEPYR, (Sc.) Lepra.

LEREMA, gen. Lere'matis, (ληρημα,) see Dementia.

LERESIS, (ληρησις,) see Dementia.

LERUS, (ληρος,) Delirium, see Dementia.

LESEOLI MORBUS, Icterus.

LESE'OLUS. According to Paracelsus, a perfectly transparent salt, which cured jaundice; hence Lesekli morbus.

LE'SION, Læ'sio, (lædere, læsum, 'to injure,') Derangement, disorder; any morbid change, either in the exercise of functions or in the texture of organs. Organic lesion is synonymous with organic disease.

LESION OF CONTINUITY, see Continuity, solution of.

LESK (Prov.), Inguen.

LESSIVE, Lixivium.

LESSIVE DES SAVONNIERS, ('lye of soapboilers,') Liqueur potassæ. Also, a solution of caustic soda in water, containing about 3 parts of soda to 8 of water.

LESSIVE DE TARTRE, ('lye of tartar,') Liqueur potassæ subcarbonatis.

LETALITAS, (letum, 'death,') see Mortal.

LETHALIS, (letum, 'death,') Lethiferous, Mortal.

LETHALITÉ, see Mortal.

LETHAR'GIC, Lethar'gicus, Veterno'sus, (F.) Léthargique, (ληθη, 'oblivion,') and αργος, 'inactive,') Relating to lethargy; affected with lethargy.

LÉTHARGIQUE, Lethargic.

LETHARGY, Lethar'gia, Lethar'gus, Ca'us lethargus, Veter'nis, Obliv'io mers. A constant state of stupor from which it is almost impossible to arouse the individual; and, if aroused, he speedily relapses into his former condition.

LETHEA, (ληθη, 'oblivion,') Papaver.

LE'THEON, (ληθη, 'oblivion,') A name at first given to sulphuric ether, when inhaled as an anæsthetic agent.

LETHIF'EROUS, Lethifer, Letha lis, Lethif'icus, Mortifer, Mortiferous, (F.) Léthifère, (ληθη, 'oblivion,') and φερω, 'I bear,') Deathbearing; deadly.

LEUCÉTHIOPIE, see Albino.

LEUCHÆMIA, Leucæmia.

LEUCITIS, (leuco, and itis,) Sclerotitis.

LEUCO, (from λευκος, 'white,') in composition, white.

LEUCOCYTE, (leuco, and κυτος, 'a cell,') see Cytoid, and Globules of the blood.

LEUCOCYTHÆMIA, 'white cell blood,' (leuco, κυτος, 'cell, and 'αίμα, 'blood,') A condition of the blood, which consists in a superabundant development of the white corpuscles,—Polyleucocythæmia—a disease which has been observed at times to be accompanied by enlargement of the spleen and liver, and at others by increased size of the lymphatic glands, organs which are concerned in hæmatisis. It is the Leucocyto'sis of Virchow. See Leucæmia.

LEUCOCYTOSIS, (leuco, and κυτος, 'cell,') Leucocythæmia.

LEUCOCYTOTIC, Leucocyto'ticus. Relating or appertaining to Leucocytosis.

LEUCODENDRON, (leuco, and δένδρον, 'tree,') Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEUCÆNUS, (leuco, and οινος, 'wine,') see Wine.

LEUCOÏUM, (leuco, and ιων, 'the violet,') Lunaria rediviva—L. Luteum, Cheiranthus cheiri.

LEUCOL, Leukoleinum.

LEUCOLACHANUM, (leuco, and λαχανον, 'herb,') Valeriana.

LEUCOLEIN, Leukoleinum.

LEUCOMA, gen. Leuco'matis, (from λευκος, 'white,') Oculo'rum albu'go, Leucom'ma, Leuco'sis, Albu'go, Al'bulæ, Ceratoleucom'ma, Ephel'otes. Leucoma and Albugo are often used synonymously to denote a white opacity of the cornea. Both are essentially different from nebula of the cornea; nebula being usually the result of chronic ophthalmia and an effusion of a milky serum into the texture of the delicate continuation of the conjunctiva over the cornea:—the others are the result of violent, acute ophthalmia. In this state, a thick, coagulable lymph is extravasated from the arteries, sometimes superficially, at other times deeply into the substance of the cornea. On other occasions, the disease consists of a firm, callous cicatrix on this membrane,—the effect of a wound or ulcer with loss of substance. The affection is more difficult of cure in proportion to its duration and to the age of the individual; the activity of the absorbents being greater in youth. If inflammation still exist, antiphlogistics must be persevered in, and, afterwards, gentle stimulants be used to excite absorption; along with the internal use of mercury or iodine.

LEUCOMA, Albumen—L. Gerontotoxon, Gerontoxon—L. Margaritaceum, see Margaritaceus.

LEUCOMMA, gen. Leucom'matis, Leucoma.

LEUCOMORIA, (λευκος, 'feeble,' and μορια, 'fatuity,') Cuttubuth.

LEUCONECRO'SIS, (leuco, and νεκρωσις, 'death,') A form of dry gangrene,—the opposite in appearance to anthracoconerosis.

LEUCONYMPHÆA, Nymphæa alba.

LEUCOPATHIA, (leuco, and παθος, 'affection,') see Albino, Chlorosis—L. Partialis acquisita, Achroma.

LEUCOPHAGIUM, (leuco, and φαγω, 'to eat,') Blancmanger.

LEUCOPHLEGMA'TIA, Leucophlegma'sia, Hy'drops leucophlegma'tia, Tumescen'tia pituit'o'sa, (leuco, and φλεγμα, gen. φλεγματος, 'phlegm,') A dropsical habit. Hydroacchæ'ia. Some writers use the word synonymously with anasarca and œdema; others with emphysema.

LEUCOPHLEGMATIA ÆTHIOPUM, Chthonophagia.

LEUCOPPERA, (leuco, and πιπρι, 'pepper,') Piper album.

LEUCOPYRIA, (leuco, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Hectic fever.

LEUCORRHÉE, Leucorrhœa.

LEUCORRHÆIC, Leucorrhœ'al, Leucorrhœ'icus, (F.) Leucorrhœique, (same etymon as Leucorrhœa.) Relating or appertaining to leucorrhœa.

A more or less abundant discharge of a white, yellowish, (yellow) or greenish mucus; resulting from acute or chronic inflammation, or from irritation of the membrane lining the genital organs of the female. Vag'inal Leucorrhœa has been termed Blenorrhœ'a seu Flu'or al'bus vag'inæ, Leucorrhœ'a, Medorrhœ'a vaginæ, Vagini'tis, Elytroblenorrhœ'a, Colporrhœ'a.—Uterine Leucorrhœa has received the names Flu'or al'bus uteri, Leucorrhœ'a seu Medorrhœ'a uteri, Metroblemmorrhœ'a, Blenometri'tis, Blenmetrorrhœ'a, Metroblemmozen'ia, Metrocatarr'hus, Metroleucorrhœ'a, (F.) Leucorrhée utérine, Catarrhe utérin. It is often attended with pain and a sense of heaviness in the loins, abdomen and thighs; disordered digestive functions, &c., so that, at times, the health suffers largely, although there are few females who are not occasionally subject to moderate leucorrhœa. Attention to the general health, change of air, keeping up a perspirable state of the surface by flannel worn next the skin, the horizontal posture, &c., do more than pharmaceutical agents; which are almost entirely confined to astringent injections. These may be employed, when the discharge is so great as to require them.

LEUCORRHŒA ANALIS, see Hæmorrhœis—L. Nabothi, see Parturition.

LEUCORRHŒIS, (leuco, and ῥέω, 'to flow,') See Hæmorrhœis.

LEUCO'SES, (from λευκος, 'white,' and σις.) In the nosology of M. Alibert, all the diseases of the lymphatic apparatus. The 7th family in his Nosologie. In that of Fuchs it is a family of diseases, (G.) Leukosen, which includes the various forms of anæmia.

LEUCOSIS, (λευκωσις,) Leucoma, Paleness. See Albino.

LEUK or LOCHE, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Saline chalybeate waters, about six leagues distant from Sion. They contain chloride of sodium, with a little sulphate of magnesia; sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonic acid, and protoxide of iron.

LEUKÆMIA, Leucæmia.

LEUKOLEIN'UM, Chinolein'um, Leucoleine, Leu'colein, Chi'nolein, Chi'nolin, Qui'nolin, (from leuco, and λαιον, 'oil,') [?] This substance is the product of the dry distillation of coal; mixed with picolin, anilin and other substances, in mineral tar. It is procured, also, by heating quinia, cinchonina, and strychnia, with as concentrated a ley of potassa as can be made. Its specific gravity is 1.081; and it is slightly soluble in water, and miscible in all proportions with alcohol, ether, and essential oils.

LEVAIN, (levare, 'to raise.')

 Ferment.

LEVANDIÈRE, Midwife.

LEVATOR, (levare, 'to raise.')

 Elevator,

LEVATOR AN'GULI O'RIS, Abductor labiorum, Elevator labiorum communis, Caninus, (F.) Sus-maxillo-labialis, Petit sus-maxillo-labialis (Ch.), Muscle canin. A small, flat, long, quadrilateral muscle, which arises from the fossa canina, and is inserted at the commissure of the lips, where it is confounded with the triangularis. It raises the corner of the mouth, and draws it towards the ear.

LEVATOR A'NI, Levator magnus seu inter'nus, Lat'us a'ni, Elevator a'ni, Se'dem attollens, Diaphragma pel'vis, (F.) Pubio-coccygien annulaire, Sous-pubio-coccygien (Ch.), Releveur de l'an. A muscle situate at the lower part of the pelvis. It is broad, flat, quadrilateral, and broader above than below. It represents a kind of membranous partition, which closes the outlet of the pelvis, and the upper concavity of which is opposed to that of the diaphragm. It is attached, above, to the posterior surface of the body of the pubis, to the upper part of the obturator foramen, and to the spine of the ischium, and is inserted into the coccyx, into an aponeurotic line common to it and its fellow, and into the lateral parts of the rectum. This muscle supports the rectum; raises it in below. It carries it upwards during the evacuation of the excrement. It can, also, compress the bladder and vesiculae seminales, and thus favour the expulsion of the urine and sperm.

LEVATOR GLAN'DULE THYROIDÆE. A muscle occasionally found connected with the upper border or isthmus of the thyroid gland; and attached superiorly to the body of the os hyoides, or to the thyroid cartilage.

LEVATOR LABII INFERIORIS, L. menti, Elevator labii inferioris seu labii inferioris proprius, Incisivus inferior, Musculus penicillatus, (F.) Houpe du menton, Releveur de la lèvre inférieure ou du menton. A portion of the mento-labial of Chaussier. A small muscle situate before the symphysis menti. It is thick, conical, and attached by its apex to a fossette at the side of the symphysis in the inferior maxillary bone. Its fibres proceed, diverging and vanishing in the manner of a tuft, (F.) Houpe, on the skin of the chin. This muscle raises the chin, and pushes upwards the lower lip.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIORIS A'LEQUE NA'SI, Incisivus lateralis et pyramidalis, (F.) Grand sus-maxillo-labialis (Ch.), Élévateur commun de l'aile du nez et de la lèvre supérieure. This muscle is a fleshy, thin, triangular bundle, situate at the sides of the nose. It arises from the ascending process of the superior maxillary bone; thence its fibres descend in a diverging manner, a part being inserted into the ala of the nose, and a part losing themselves in the upper lip. This muscle raises the upper lip and ala nasi, which it draws a little outwards.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIORIS PROPRIUS, Musculus incisivus, Elevator labii superioris proprius, (F.) Moyen sus-maxillo-labialis, (Ch.), Orbito-maxillo-labialis. This thin, flat, quadrilateral muscle is situate at the middle and inner part of the face. It arises from the os male and the os maxillare superius, and is inserted into the upper lip, which it raises, at the same time carrying it a little outwards.

LEVATOR MENTI, Levator labii inferioris.

LEVATOR OCULI, Rectus superior oculi.

LEVATOR PALATI, L. Palati Mol'lis, Petro-salpin'gostaphylinus, Salpin'gostaphylinus inter'nus, Salpin'gostaphylinus, Pter'ygostaphylinus exter'nus, Sph'e'nostaphylinus, Sph'e'nopalatinus, Peristaphylinus inter'nus superior, Péto-staphylin, (Ch.). This muscle is long, narrow, and almost round above; broader and flatter inferiorly. It arises from the lower surface of the pars petrosa; and from the cartilage of the Eustachian tube; and is inserted into the substance of the velum palati. Its use is to raise the velum palati.

LEVATOR PALPEBRÆ SUPERIORIS, Pal'pebræ superioris primus, Aper'tor Oculi, Ape'riens Palpebrarum rectus, Recl'usor palpebrarum, (F.) Orbito-palpébral (Ch.), Orbito-sus-palpébral, Élévateur de la paupière supérieur. A long, small, thin muscle, situate at the upper part of the orbital cavity. By its posterior extremity it is inserted into the little ala of the sphenoid bone, immediately in front of the foramen opticum, and by its anterior extremity, which is expanded, it terminates at the upper margin of the tarsal cartilage of the eyelid. This muscle raises the upper eyelid, draws it backwards, and sinks it into the orbit.

LEVATOR PROSTATÆ, (F.) Releveur de la prostate. Santorini has given this name to the anterior fibres of the levator ani, which embrace the prostate.

LEVATOR SCAPULÆ, Elevator scapulæ, E. seu Musculus Patientiæ, Angularis, Levator proprius scapulæ, (F.) Trachélo-scapulaire, (Ch.), Angulaire de l'omoplate, Releveur de l'omoplate. This muscle is so called because it is attached to the upper and internal angle of the scapula. It is situate at the posterior and lateral part of the neck, and at the upper part of the back. It is long, flat, and broader above than below. In this latter direction, it is inserted into the superior internal angle of the scapula; and in the former, into the tops of the transverse processes of the first four cervical vertebrae. It depresses the prominence of the shoulder by raising the posterior angle of the scapula, on which it impresses a kind of rotary motion. It can, also, draw the head to one side.

LEVATOR PROPRIUS SCAPULÆ, Levator scapulæ.

LEVATOR URE'THRE, (F.) Releveur de l'Urèthre. Santorini describes under this name a portion of the transversus perinaei muscle.

LEVATORES COSTARUM, Supracostales.

LEVEN, (from levare, 'to raise.')

 Ferment.

LEVER, (from levare, 'to lift up.')

Vec'tis, Moch'lus, Porre'ctum. An inflexible rod, turning round a fixed point, and used for moving bodies, bearing burdens, or raising them. The point on which the lever moves is called the Fulcrum Hypomoch'lion. The force which moves the lever is called the power; and the weight to be moved the resistance. There are three kinds of levers. A lever of the first kind has the fulcrum between the power and resistance. A lever of the second kind has the resistance between the fulcrum and power; whilst a lever of the third kind has the power between the fulcrum and resistance. In the locomotive system of the human body, we have examples of all the three kinds. The bones represent levers; the muscles of locomotion are the power; the weight of parts to be moved constitutes the resistance. The fulcra are, at times, the joints; at others, the ground, &c. The head moves on the neck as a lever of the first kind; the first cervical vertebra forming the fulcrum. We rise on tiptoe by a lever of the second kind, the fulcrum being the ground under the toes; and we have examples of a lever of the third kind in the flexion of the forearm on the arm, in the elevation of the arm, &c.

LEVER, Hysteroch'litum, Mochlis'eus, Vcc'tis obetric'i'us, Vcc'tis, (F.) Levier, is an instrument curved at the extremity, and having a fenestra. It is used to assist the extraction of the child's head when instrumental aid is necessary, or as a lever proper or as a tractor. Levers are also used by the dentist for extracting stumps, &c. The Levier de l'Écluse, Langue de Carpe, Trevelin, Pied de biche, Punch, is employed for extracting the molar teeth.

LEVYATHAN PENIS, Pria'pus Cc'ti, Bale'nas. The penis of the whale. This singular medicine was at one time given in powder in cases of dysentery and leucorrhœa.

LEVIER, Lever—l. de l'Écluse, see Lever,

LEVIGATION, Læviga'tio, (lævigare, lævigatum (lævis, 'smooth,') 'to bruise small.')

Porphyri'za'tion. An operation by which bodies are reduced to very fine powder. It is performed by putting substances already pulverized into water; the coarser parts are not long in being deposited, whilst the finer molecules remain suspended in the water. The liquor is decanted into another vessel, and suffered to remain at rest until the fine particles are collected at the bottom. The fluid part is then separated by decantation.

LEVISTICUM, Ligusticum levisticum.

LÈVRE, (from labrum,) Lip.

LÈVRES GRANDES, Labia pudendi—l. Petites, Nymphæ—l. de la Vulve, Labia pudendi.

LEVÛRE, (from levare, 'to raise,') Yest—l. de la Bière, Yest.

LIXIPHARMACUS, (ληγην, 'to make cease,' and φαρμακον, 'a poison,') Alexipharmic.

LIXIPYRETICUS, (ληγην, 'to make cease,' and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Febrifuge.

LEY, Lixivium, Lye—l. Soap, Liquor potassæ.

LEYSERA GNAPHALOIDES, (after Fr. W. von Leyser, of Halle.) A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Composite, which is emollient, and highly recommended at the Cape in catarrh, cough, and even in phthisis.

LÉZARD, Lizard.

LIANE À RÉGLISSE, Abrus precatorius.

LIA'TRIS SPICATA, Gayfeather, Button snakeroot. Ord. Composite. An indigenous plant, growing in meadows and moist grounds in the Middle and Southern States. Its beautiful purple compound flowers are in a spike. They appear in August. The root has been considered diuretic.

LIATRIS SCARIO'SA and L. SQUARRO'SA, Throatwort, Sow'wort, Back'ache root, Dev'il'sbite, Blazing Star, Prairie pines, Rough root, are called from their reputed powers in bites from the rattlesnake, Rattle'snake's master. The roots, bruised, are applied to the wound; and the decoction, in milk, is given internally.

LIBANOTIS ANNUA, (from λίβανος, 'the frankincense tree,') Athamanta cretensis—l. Coronaria, Rosmarinus—l. Cretensis, Athamanta cretensis—l. Hirsuta, Athamanta cretensis.

LIBANOTUS, see Juniperus lycia.

LIBANUS, (λίβανος,) Juniperus lycia.

LIBER PHARMACEUTICUS, ('pharmaceutical book,') Dispensary.

LIBIDINIS SĒDES, ('seat of lust,') Clitoris.

LIBIDINOSUS, (libido, gen. libid'inis, 'lust,') Libidinous.

LIBIDINOUS, Libidinosus, Lascivus, Veneriv'agus, Lecherous, Lick'orous. Lewd; lustful.

LIBIDO, gen. Libid'inis. Desire, necessity. Authors speak of Libi'do ur'i'næ, Libi'do intes'tini. Some employ it synonymously with Pruri'go; others, with Salac'itus, Lubi'do, H'i'meros.

LIBOS, (λίβος, from λείβω, 'to drop,') A dejection from the eyes.

LIBRA, (λίτρα,) Pound.

LICENTIATE, (licet, 'it is permitted,') Permis'sus, (F.) Licencié. One licensed to practise his profession.

LICHANOS, (λίχανος,) Index, see Digitus.

LICHE, Body.

LICHEN, gen. Liche'nis, (λίχην or λίχην, pronounced li'ken.) Exor'mia Li'chen, Le'i'chen, Serpi'go, Volat'ica, Pap'ula, P. sic'ca, Peti'go, Pust'ula sic'ca, Scu'bies sic'ca seu a'gria, Licheni'asia adult'o'rum, Li'chenous rash, (F.) Gale sèche, Dartre furfuracée volante, Possée. The cutaneous affection described under this name by the Greek writers is not clearly defined. Some have believed it to be Impetigo, but this is doubtful. The name is now generally applied to a diffuse eruption of red pimples, accompanied by a troublesome sense of tingling or pricking. Drs. Willan and Bateman define it—"an extensive eruption of papulae affecting adults, connected with internal disorder, usually terminating in scurf; recurrent, not contagious." One of their varieties, however, the Lichen Tropicus, does not accord well with this definition; for it affects children as well as adults, and is unconnected with internal disorder.

LICHEN A'GRIVUS, L. A'gria, Exor'mia Li'chen fe'rns, Li'chen fe'rns, Pap'ula a'gria, Wild Li'chen, is distinguished by pimples in clusters or patches, surrounded by a red halo; the cuticle growing gradually harsh, thickened, and chappy, often preceded by general irritation. In addition to antiphlogistics, a cooling ointment may be used, to allay itching.

LICHEN BARBATUS PLICATUS, L. plicatus.

LICHEN CIRCUMSCRIP'TUS is characterized by clusters or patches of papulae, having a well defined margin, and an irregularly circular form; continuing for six or eight weeks. These varieties require but little medical treatment. The antiphlogistic plan is all that is necessary.

LICHEN FERUS, Lichen agrius.

LICHEN LIVIDUS. The papulae have a dark red or livid hue, without any fever. They are more permanent in this variety. It requires the mineral acids and bark.

LICHEN PILA'RIS, Exor'mia Li'chen pila'ris is merely a modification of the preceding; the papulae appearing at the roots of the hair.

LICHEN SIM'PLEX, Exor'mia Li'chen sim'plex, consists of an eruption of red papulae, appearing first on the face or arms, and afterwards extending over the body; preceded for a few days by slight febrile irritation, which usually ceases when the eruption appears,—with an unpleasant sense of tingling during the night. It generally dies away in ten days or a fortnight.

LICHEN TROP'ICUS, Exor'mia Li'chen trop'icus, Eze'es'ma, Es'sera [?], Sindam'ina [?], Prickly Heat, Summer Rash. The pimples are bright red, and of the size of a small pin's head; with heat, itching, and pricking, as if by needles. It is local; produced by excessive heat; and disappears when the weather becomes cooler, or the individual is inured to the climate.

LICHEN URTICA'TUS, L. Urtico'sus, Exor'mia Li'chen urtico'sus, is another variety. The Nettle Li'chen consists of papulae, accompanied by wheals like those of nettle rash. A variety of this is said to be called, in America, blights.

LICHEN, Wild, Lichen agrius.

LICHEN APHTHO'SUS, Pelti'dea aphtho'sa; Ord. Lichenaceæ; is said to be cathartic and anthelmintic.

LICHEN ARBORUM, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Barbatus plicatus, Lichen plicatus—l. Blanc de Neige, L. caninus—l. Bôttier, L. pyxidatus.

LICHEN CAN'INUS seu spu'rins seu terres'tris seu veno'sus seu ciner'ens terres'tris, Mus'cus can'i-nus, Phys'cia nival'is, Peltig'era can'i-na, Pelti- aca canina seu leucorrhiza seu mala'cea seu amplissima seu spuria, Ashcoloured Ground Liverwort, (F.) Lichen contre-rage, Lichen blanc de neige. This cryptogamous plant was, for a long time, considered capable of preventing and curing Rabies canina. It has, also, been used in mania and in spasmodic asthma.

LICHEN CARRAGEEN, Fucus crispus—l. Cinereus terrestris, L. caninus—l. Cocciferus, L. pyxidatus—l. Entonnoir, L. pyxidatus—l. Eryngifolius, L. islandicus—l. Floridus hirtus, L. plicatus—l. Hirtus, L. plicatus.

LICHEN ISLANDICUS, L. eryngifolius, Lichen des Islandicium, Loba'ria Islandica, Muscus Islandicus seu catharticus, Clado'nia seu Physcia seu Cetra'ria seu Parmelia Islandica, Iceland Lichen or Liverwort or Moss, (F.) Lichen d'Islande, Mousse marine perlée, Mousse d'Islande. This plant is inodorous, with a bitter and mucilaginous taste. It is esteemed to be tonic, demulcent, and nutrient. Dose, ℥i to ℥iv, being first steeped in water holding in solution some carbonate of potassa to extract the bitter, and then boiled in milk. A bitter principle has been extracted from it, termed Cetrarin, Cetrarinum, Cetra'rium, which has been given in intermittents.

LICHEN LACINIATUS, L. saxatilis—l. Parietinus, Parmelia parietina.

LICHEN Plicatus, L. hirtus seu barbatus plicatus seu Floridus hirtus, Parmelia plicata, Usne'a plicata, U. hirta seu Florida hirta, Muscus arbo'reus seu albus seu quer'nus, Quercini Her'ba. This plant is applied, by the Laplanders, as an astringent, to bleeding vessels; and to parts which are excoriated after long journeys.

LICHEN PULMONARIUS, L. arborum seu reticulatus, Parmelia pulmona'cea, Reticularia officinalis, Muscus pulmonarius quercinus, Pulmonaria arbo'rea, Loba'ria pulmonaria, Sticta pulmona'cea, Oak Lungs, Tree Lungwort, Ha'zel Cro'tles, Ha'zelraut, (F.) Lichen pulmonaire, Pulmonaire en arbre ou de chène. This plant is subastringent, and rather acid. It was once in high repute for curing diseases of the lungs.

LICHEN PYXIDATUS, Muscus Pyxidatus, Scyphophorus pyxidatus, Muscus pyxoides terrestris, Lichen pyxidatus major seu cocciferus, Her'ba Ig'nis, Cup Moss, (F.) Lichen entonnoir, Lichen Bôtier, L. Pyxidé. This plant is subastringent, and has been used in decoction in hooping-cough.

LICHEN CONTRE RAGE, L. caninus.

LICHEN RETICULATUS, L. pulmonarius.

LICHEN ROCCEL'LA, Parmelia roccella, Roc'cella, R. tinctoria, Seta'ria roccella, Lit'mus, Lac'mus, L. tinctorius, Or'chill, Canada Ar'chell, Chin'ny Weed, Herb Ar'chell, (F.) Orseille. The chief use of this plant is as a blue dye. It has been employed to allay cough in phthisis, &c.

The blue pigment—Lit'mus—is much used as a delicate test for acid—in the urine for example. Blue Litmus paper is unsized paper steeped in tincture of litmus—which is made of Litmus powder ℥i, proof spirit, ℥xx, and dried. It is reddened by acids. Red litmus paper is unsized paper steeped in tincture of litmus, which has been previously reddened by the addition of a very small quantity of sulphuric acid, and dried. The blue colour is restored by alkalis.

LICHEN ROCK, Tripe de roche.

LICHEN SAXATILIS, L. tinctorius seu lacinia'tus, Parmelia saxatilis, Imbricaria saxatilis, Loba'ria saxatilis, Muscus seu Usne'a Cva'nii hum'ni. This moss, when found growing on a human skull, was formerly in high estimation against head affections, &c.

LICHEN SPURICUS, L. caninus—l. Stellatus, Marchantia polymorpha—l. Tinctorius, L. Saxatilis—l. Wall, yellow, Parmelia parietina.

LICHENIASIS ADULTORUM, Lichen—l. Strophulus, Strophulus.

LICHENOID, Lichenoides, (lichen, and oides, 'resemblance,') Resembling lichen.

LICHENOIDES, Lichenoid—l. Islandicum Lichen Islandicum.

LICINIUM, (from linum, 'thread' [?]), Tent.

LICKOROUS, Libidinous.

LICORICE, Glycyrrhiza.

LICULMEN, Garum.

LIEB'ENSTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF These waters, situated in the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen, are amongst the strongest acidulous chalybeates in Germany. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, sulphate of lime, chloride of calcium, carbonate of lime, chloride of magnesium, and carbonate of iron.

LIEBERKÜHN'S GLANDS or FOLLICLES, Glandulae seu Cryp'tæ Lieberkühnia'næ, so called from their first describer, are fine, columnar, blind sacs, the openings of which are from 1-20th to 1-30th of a line in diameter, so closely placed over the whole of the small intestine as to give the mucous membrane a general sieve-like or perforated appearance. They secrete the succus entericus.

LIEBERSCHE AUSZEHRUNG'S KRAUTER, ('Lieber's consumption herbs,') see Galeopsis grandiflora—l. Brustkrauter, see Galeopsis grandiflora.

LIEBWERDA, MINERAL WATERS OF. Liebwerda is a Bohemian village, near the Silesian frontier. The springs are much frequented. There are four, all of which are rich in carbonic acid, and contain but little saline matter.

LIEGE, (from leger, 'light,') Suber.

LIEN (F.) (from lier, [L.] ligure, 'to bind,') Vinculum. A band, strap or garter, used in certain operations; as to tie patients during the operation of lithotomy; to fix the apparatus in fracture, &c.

LIEN, Spleen—l. Accessorius, Lienculus—l. Ingens, Splenoncus—l. Succenturiatus, Lienculus.

LIEN'CVLUS, (dim. of lien, 'spleen,') Lien succenturiatus seu accessorius. A supernumerary spleen.

LIENITIS, (lien, and itis,) Splenitis.

LIENOSUS, Splenice.

LIENTERIC, Lientericus, (F.) Lientérique. Relating or appertaining to lientery.

LIENTÉRIE, Lientery.

LIENTERY, Lienteria, (λειος, laevia, 'smooth,' 'slippery,' and εντερον, 'intestine,') Lax'ritus seu Lax'itus intestino'rum, Diarrhea' lienteria, Fluxus Lientericus, Chymorrhœa seu Lax'itus ingesto'rum, Bromatoëc'crisis, Diarrhea' Dyspeptica seu cum Ape'ria seu Ingesto'rum, (F.) Lientérie, Slip'periness of the Guts. Frequent liquid evacuations, the food only half digested. This condition is always symptomatic of great irritation in the intestinal canal, the sensibility of which is so much augmented that it cannot bear the sojourn of the food in it.

LIERRE, Hedera helix—l. Grimpant, Hedera helix—l. Terrestre, Glechoma hederacea.

LIFE, (Sax. lip, lyg,) Vita, Bios, Bi'otê, Bi'otos, Zo'ê, Pneum'a, Spir'itus, (F.) Vie. The state of organized beings, during which, owing to the union of an unknown force with matter, they are capable of performing functions different from those that regulate other natural bodies: all of which functions, however numerous and diversified, work to one end. Life has only a limited duration; beyond which,—the organic functions ceasing to be executed,—the body is given up to the agency of chemical affinity. Hence Bichat has defined life to be—the aggregate of the functions which resist death. On account of the difference that exists among the vital functions, be applied the term Organic Life to the functions, inservient to composition and decomposition;—as digestion, respiration, circulation, calorification, absorption, secretion, and nutrition; and Animal life, to the functions which connect man and animals with external bodies; as the understanding, sensations, locomotion and voice.

LIFEBLOOD. A term commonly used for a twitching or quivering of the eyelids—a kind of involuntary or muscular tic. See Cillo.

LIFE, DURATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE EVERLASTING, Gnaphalium margaritaceum—l. Everlasting, plaintain, Antennaria plantaginifolia—l. Everlasting, sweetscented, Gnaphalium polycephalum.

LIFE, EXPECTATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE INSURANCE. A contract entered into, usually by an insurance company, to pay a certain sum of money on a person's death, on the condition of his paying an annual premium during his life. The medical practitioner may be applied to, to certify that the life of the insured is one that is insurable according to the rules of the company.

LIFE ROOT, Senecio aureus.

LIFE, VALUE OF, see Longevity, and Mortality.

LIFE'S BLOOD, Lifeblood, Cillo.

LIGAMENT, Ligamentum, (ligare, ligatum, 'to bind;') Desmus, Syndesmus, Colligamen, Copula. A name given to fibrous structures, which serve to unite bones, and to form articulations; hence the division into interosseous and articular ligaments. They are of a white, close texture; are but little extensible, and difficult to break. The name ligament has, also, been given to any membranous fold, which retains an organ in its situation.

TABLE OF THE PRINCIPAL LIGAMENTS.

- 1. Of the Lower Jaw.
  - Capsular ligament.
  - Suspensory ligament of the stylo-glossus.
  - Lateral ligament.
- 2. Connecting the Head with the first and second Vertebrae, and these with each other.
  - Two capsular ligaments between atlas and head.
  - Circular ligament.
  - Two capsular between atlas and axis.
  - Perpendicular ligament.
  - Two lateral or moderator ligaments.
  - Transverse ligament and its appendices.
- 3. Of the other Vertebrae.
  - Anterior common.
  - Crucial intervertebral.
  - Ligaments running from the edge of the bony arch and spinous process of one vertebra to that of the next.
  - Interspinous ligament.
  - Ligamentum nuchæ.
  - Intertransverse.
  - Capsular.
  - Posterior or internal common.
- 4. Of the Ribs, Sternum, &c.
  - Capsular of the head of ribs.
  - Capsular of the tubercles.
  - Ligamenta transversaria interna.
  - Ligamenta transversaria externa.
  - Ligamenta cervicis costarum externa.
  - Ligamentous fibres running from the margins of the extremities of the ribs to the corresponding cartilages.
  - Radiated ligaments from cartilage of ribs to the sternum.
  - Capsular ligaments of the cartilages of the ribs.
  - Proper membrane of sternum.
  - L. of cartilage ensiformis.
  - Tendinous expansions over the intercostales, &c.

- Two transverse,—one superior and one inferior.
- Pliosacral.
- Capsular of the sacroiliac synchondrosis.
- Two sacroschiatic.—posterior and anterior, with the superior and inferior appendices.
- Longitudinal of os coccygis.
- Inguinal ligament.
- Capsular of symphysis pubis.
- Ligament of foramen thyroideum.
- Radiated ligament.
- Capsular.
- Interclavicular.
- Ligamentum rhomboideum.
- Claviculoacromial.
- Conoid.
- Trapezoid.
- Anterior triangular.
- Proper posterior.
- Capsular.
- Capsular.
- Brachioûlnar.
- Brachioradial.
- Coronary of the radius.
- Anterior and posterior accessory.
- Intermuscular of the os humeri.
- Interosseous ligament.
- Oblique or chorda transversalis cubiti.
- Capsular.
- Capsular.
- Two lateral.
- Mucous.
- Annular.
- Capsular.
- Short ligaments,—oblique, transverse, capsular, and proper.
- Articular lateral.
- Straight, perpendicular, &c.
- Interosseous, at the bases and heads,—dorsal, lateral, palmar.
- Capsular.
- Lateral.
- Annular.
- Vaginal or flexor tendons.
- Vaginal or crucial of the phalanges.
- Accessory of the flexor tendons.
- Posterior annular.
- Vaginal of extensors.
- Transverse of extensors.
- Capsular and accessory slips.
- Round or teres ligament.
- Cartilaginous ligament.
- Double cartilaginous ligament.
- Ligamenta mucosa.
- Lateral,—internal and external.
- External short lateral ligament.
- Posterior ligament.
- Ligament of the patella.
- Capsular.
- Ligamentum alare,—majus et minus.
- Ligamentum mucosum.
- Two crucial,—anterior and posterior.
- Transverse.
- Capsular.
- Interosseous.
- Anterior superior.
- Posterior superior.
- Anterior ligament of the fibula.
- Posterior of fibula.
- Deltoides of tib'æ.
- Capsular.

- Capsular.
Short ligaments.
Capsular, broad superior, and lateral ligaments, connecting astragalus and naviculare.
Superior, lateral, and inferior, fixing os calcis to os cuboides.
Long, oblique, and rhomboid, forming the inferior ligaments.
Superior superficial, interosseous and inferior transverse ligaments, fixing the os naviculare and os cuboides.
Superior lateral and plantar, which fix the os naviculare and cuneiform.
Superior-superficial and plantar, connecting the os cuboides, and os cuneiforme externum.
Dorsal and plantar, uniting the ossa cuneiformia.
The proper capsular of each bone.
22. Of the Tarsus.....
Capsular.
Dorsal, plantar, lateral, straight, oblique, and transverse.
24. Connecting the Metatarsal Bones.
Dorsal, plantar, and lateral, connecting the metatarsal bones.
Transverse ligaments.
25. Of the Phalanges of the Toes.
Capsular.
Lateral.
Annular.
Vaginal of the tendons of the peronei.
Laciniated.
Vaginal of the tendon of the flexor longus pollicis.
Vaginal and crucial of the tendons of the flexors of the toes.
Accessory of the flexor tendons of the toes.
Transverse of the extensor tendons.
26. Retaining the Tendons of the Muscles of the Foot and Toes in situ.
Capsular.
Lateral.
Annular.
Vaginal of the tendons of the peronei.
Laciniated.
Vaginal of the tendon of the flexor longus pollicis.
Vaginal and crucial of the tendons of the flexors of the toes.
Accessory of the flexor tendons of the toes.
Transverse of the extensor tendons.

LIGAMENT, ANTERIOR, OF THE BLADDER. A name given by the older anatomists to a portion of the superior pelvic aponeuroses, which becomes attached to the front of the neck of the bladder.

LIGAMENT ARTÉRIEL, Arterial ligament—l. Camper's, Perineal fascia—l. Cervical suprascapular, see Suprascapular ligamenta—l. Ciliaire, Ciliary ligament.

LIGAMENT, CORONARY, OF THE LIVER, is a reflection formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior margin of the liver, and the lower surface of the diaphragm. See Falx.

LIGAMENT, COSTOXIPHOID, Xiphoid ligament—l. Dentelé, Denticulatum ligamentum—l. Denticulé, Denticulatum ligamentum—l. Dorsolumbo-suprascapular, see Suprascapular ligamenta—l. of Fallopius, Crural arch—l. Gimbernat's, see Gimbernat's ligament—l. Glossepiglottic, see Glossepiglottic—l. Infrapubian, Triangular ligament—l. Interépineux, Interspersal ligament—l. of the Ovary, see Ovarium—l. Palmar inferior, Metacarpal ligament—l. Poupert's, Crural arch—l. Rond, Teres ligamentum—l. Sur-épineux cervical, see Suprascapular ligamenta—l. Sur-épineux-dorsolumbaire, see Suprascapular ligamenta—l. Suspensory, of the liver, see Suspensory—l. Triangular, Perineal fascia.

LIGAMENT OF ZINN, Ten'don of Zinn, Ten'do oculi. A tendon from which the inferior rectus muscle of the eye arises, in common with the rectus internus and rectus externus.

LIGAMENTARIS, Ligamentous.

LIGAMENTEUX, Ligamentous.

LIGAMENTOSUS, Ligamentous.

LIGAMENTOUS, Ligamento'sus, Ligamenta'ris, Ligamentarius, Des'mous, Desmo'sus, (F.) Ligamenteux, Desmeux. Having the character of, or relating to, a ligament.

LIGATE, see Ligature.

LIGATIO, Fascia, Ligature—l. Lingux, Aphonia.

LIGATION, see Ligature.

LIGATURA, Ligature, Fascia—l. Glandis, Phimosis.

LIG'ATURE, Ligatu'ra, Liga'tio, Alligatu'ra, Deligatio, Vincitu'ra, Fas'cia, Epid'esis. This word has various acceptations. It means, 1. The thread with which an artery or vein is tied, to prevent or arrest hemorrhage. 2. The cord, or thread, or wire, used for removing tumours, &c. 3. The bandage used for phlebotomy. Ligature is, also, sometimes applied to the act of tying an artery or considerable vessel—Ligatio, Deligatio; and occasionally we meet with the terms 'to ligature' and 'to ligate,' used unnecessarily in this sense, in place of to take up or tie a vessel. When the artery alone is tied, the ligature is said to be immediate; when any of the surrounding parts are included, it is said to be mediate. The ligature occasions obliteration or adhesion of the arterial parietes, by cutting through the middle and internal coats; the adhesion being favoured by the formation of a coagulum, which acts, in some degree, as a barrier against the impulse of the blood, and subsequently disappears by absorption.

LIGATURE ARTICULÉE, Écraseur.

LIGHT, (Sax. leohτ, līht,) (G.) Licht, Lus, Lu'men, Phos, (F.) Lumière. An extremely rare fluid; diffused over the universe; emanating from the sun and fixed stars; traversing more than four millions of leagues in a minute; passing through transparent bodies, which refract it according to their density and combustibility; and arrested by opaque bodies, by which it is reflected at an angle equal to the angle of incidence. It is the cause of colour in all bodies, being entirely reflected by white surfaces and absorbed by black. It is decomposed in passing through a transparent prism into seven rays—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, and violet.

Light acts upon the body as a gentle and salutary stimulus. It urges to exercise, whilst privation of it induces sleep and inactivity, and disposes to obesity. Hence it is, that, in rural economy, animals which are undergoing the process of fattening are kept in obscurity. When vegetables are deprived of light, their nutrition is interfered with, and they become etiolated. To a certain extent this applies to animals, and there-is every reason to believe, that want of light prevents the due development of organized bodies. It has been found that, when tadpoles were deprived of light, they did not undergo the perfect metamorphosis into the frog, but that monstrosities from arrest of development were induced.

LIGHTNING, (from light.) Astrape.

LIGHTS, (from lht, 'light,' from their little specific gravity,) Pulmo—l. Rising of the Cynanchae trachealis.

LIGNE, Line—l. Apré, Linea aspera—l. Blanche, Linea alba—l. Courbe, Curved line—l. Médiane de l'abdomen, Linea alba—l. Semilunaire de Spiegel, Linea semilunaris Spigelii—l. Soustrachantérienne, Linea aspera.

LIG'NEOUS, Ligno'sus, (lignum, 'wood,') (F.) Ligneux. Woody. Having the character or appearance of wood; as 'Lig'neous Scirrhus,' or S. of the mamma, which has for its principal characteristics, hardness, the inextensibility of wood, and no defined limits. (Velpeau.) A form of this, in plates, or diffused over the mammary integuments, is termed, by M. Velpeau, Squirre eu cuirasse.

LIGNIN, (from lignum, 'wood,') Ligneous or woody fibre; the fibrous structure of vegetable substances.

LIGNUM ALOËS, ('wood of aloes,') Agallochum—l. Aspalathi, Agallochum—l. Benedictum, Guaiacum—l. Brasilianum rubrum, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Cæruleum, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Campechense, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Campechianum, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Campeceanum, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Colubrinum, see Strychnos—l. Febrifugum, Quassia—l. Hæmatoxylyl, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Indicum, Guaiacum, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Infelix, Sambucus—l. Nephriticum, Guilandina Moringa (the wood)—l. Pavana, Croton tiglium—l. Quassia, see Quassia—l. Sanctum, Guaiacum—l. Sandalinum, see Pterocarpus santalinus—l. Sappan, Hæmatoxylon campechianum—l. Serpentum, Ophioxylon serpentinum—l. Vite, Guaiacum.

LIGNYODES, (λιγνώδης, from lignus, and odes), Fuliginous.

LIGNYS, (λιγνύς), Fuligo.

LIG'ULA, Ling'ula, 'a small tongue, a tongue of land; the tongue of a shoe.' The clavicle; also, the giottis and epiglottis. A measure containing 3 drachms and a scruple, or about half an ounce. Also, a species of bandage or ligature.

LIGUSTICUM, (from Λιγυστικός, appertaining to Liguria.) L. Levisticum.

LIGUSTICUM ACTÆIFOLIUM, Thapsium actæifolium, Angel'ica bécida, Angel'ica Neu'do, White root, indigenous; Ord. Umbelliferae. The root is aromatic and carminative.

LIGUSTICUM CAPILLACUM, Æthusa meum—l. Carvi, Carum—l. Fœniculum, Anethum.

LIGUSTICUM LEVISTICUM, Levisticum, Laserpitium Germanicum, Ligusticum, Angel'ica levis'ticum seu paludapifolia, Lov'age, (F.) Livèche, Ache des montagnes. Ord. Umbelliferae. The properties of this plant are said to be stimulant, carminative, emmenagogue, &c.

LIGUSTICUM MEUM, Æthusa meum—l. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum.

LIGUSTICUM PODAGRARIA, Podagra'ria ægopodinum, Ægopodinum seu Sison podagra'ria, Pimpinella angelica'folia, Sison vulgare, Tragoselinum angel'ica, Ses'eli ægopodinum, Angel'ica sylvestris, Goutweed. A British plant, once considered useful in cases of gout.

LIGUSTICUM SILAUS, Peucedanum silaus.

LIGUSTRUM ÆGYPTIACUM, (ligare, 'to bind,' because used for bands.) Lawsonia inermis.

LIGUSTRUM VULGARÆ, Pri'v'et, Pri'v'y, Prim, (F.) Trœne. Ord. Oleaceæ. A shrub, which grows wild both in Europe and in the United States, usually in hedges. The leaves are astrigent and bitter; and the flowers, which are snow-white, and of an agreeable odour, have been employed in decoction, in sore throat, and ulcerous stomatitis. The berries are said to be cathartic.

LILAC, COMMON, Syringa vulgaris—l. Vulgaris, Syringa vulgaris.

LILI, Lilium Paracelsi.

LILIA'GO, (dim. of lilium, 'the lily,') Spiderwort; Lilias'trum. This plant was formerly said to be alexipharmic and carminative.

LILIASTRUM, Liliago.

LIL'LIUM CAN'DIDUM, ('white lily,') L. album, Lei'ri'on, Cri'non. The white lily. (F.) Lis blanc. Ord. Liliaceæ. The infusion of the flowers of the lily in olive oil is emollient, and often applied externally, under the name of Lily oil, (F.) Huile de lis. The scales of the bulb, roasted, are sometimes employed as maturatives.

LILIUM CONVALLIUM, Convallaria maialis.

LILIUM PARACEL'SI, Tinctura Metallorum, Lili. A medicine employed by Paracelsus. It was prepared by melting in a crucible four ounces of each of the following alloys; Antimony and iron, antimony and tin, antimony and copper, previously mixed with eighteen ounces of nitrate of potassa and as much salt of tartar. The melted mass, when pulverized, was treated with rectified alcohol, which really dissolved only the potassa set at liberty by the decomposition experienced by the nitre and salt of tartar. The Lilium Paracelsi was used as a cordial. It entered into the composition of the theriacal elixir, &c.

L'IMA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Peru does not appear to be favourable to the generation of consumption; and Lima would seem to be a good residence for the phthisical valetudinarian. Many have been benefited by a residence there; but when they have gone farther south, as to Chili, the effect, according to Dr. M. Burrough, has generally been fatal.

LIMA DENTARIA, ('dental file,') Scalprum dentarium.

LIMACIEN (F.), (from limacon, [limax, gen. lima'cis, 'the snail,'] 'the cochlea of the ear,') A branch of the acoustic or labyrinthic nerve sent to the cochlea.

LIMACON, Cochlea, Helix pomatia, Limax—l. Rampes du, see Cochlea.

LIMACUM CORNUA, ('snails' horns,') see Lachrymal puncta.

LIMANCHIA, (λμαγχία, from limus, and αγχευ, 'to torture,') Abstinence.

LIMA'TIO, (limare, limatum, 'to file,') 'Filing.' An operation employed by the dentist more especially to prevent immediate contact of the teeth with each other.

LIMATURA FERRI, Ferri Limatura.

LIMAX, gen. Lima'cis, (λιμαξ, gen. λιμαξος;) Helix, Slug or Snail, (F.) Limaçon, Colimaçon, Escargot. A syrup has been prepared from these animals, which has been given in phthisis, &c. The raw snails have also been taken in consumption. They have been used as food.

LIMB, (Sax. lim.) Membrum.

LIME, (from limon.) A fruit like a small lemon, the juice of which is strongly acid, and is much used for making punch. It is, also, used in long voyages as an antiscorbutic, &c. It is a species of lemon, the fruit of Citrus ac'ida, Citrus limetta.

LIME, (Sax. lim.) Calx—l. Carbonate of, Creta—l. Chloride of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chlorite of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chloruret of, Calcis chloridum—l. Hydrate of, see Calx—l. Hydrosulphate of, Calcis sulphuretum—l. Hypochlorite of, Calcis chloridum—l. Hypophosphite of, Calcis hypophosphis—l. Muriate of, solution of, see Calcis murias—l. Oxymuriate of, Calcis chloridum—l. Phosphate of, see Cornu ustum—l. Bone Phosphate of, see Cornu ustum—l. Phosphate of, precipitated, see Cornu cervi—l. Slaked, see Calx—l. Sulphuret of, Calcis sulphuretum.

LIME TREE, Tilia—l. Water, Liquor calcis—l. Water, compound, Liquor calcis compositus.

LIMELLIER, see Citrus mella rosa.

LIMICUS, (from limus.) Hungry.

LIMITROPHES, (limes, 'a boundary,' and τροφειν, 'to nourish,') see Trisplanchnic nerve.

LIMNE, (λιμνη) Marsh.

LIMNE'MIC, Limnæ'mic, Limnhæ'mic, Limnæ'micus, Limnhæ'micus, (λιμνη, 'a marsh,' and αίμα, 'blood,') An epithet given to affections induced by paludal emanations; (F.) Affections limn-hémiques.

LIMNOMEPHITIS, (limne, and mephitis,) see Miasm.

LIMONCTIONIA, (λιμοκτονία, from limus, and κρονος, 'death,') Abstinence to death. Death from hunger. Suicide by hunger.

LIMODES, (λιμοδής, limus, and odes,) Hungry.

LIMON, see Citrus medica.

LIMONADA, Lemonade.

LIMONADE, Lemonade—l. Gazeuse, see Lemonade—l. Sèche, Lemonade, dry; see Citric acid.

LIMONIUM, Stactis limonium—l. Malum, see Citrus medica.

LIMONUM BACCA, see Citrus medica.

LIMOPHTHYSIS, (from limus, and φθισις, 'wasting,') Wasting from privation of food.

LIMOSIS, (from limus,) Stomach disease, Morbid appetite. A genus in the class Caliciaca, order Enterica, of Good.

LIMOTHERAPEIA, Nestitherapeia, Nestotherapeia, Nestiatri'a, Peinotherapeia, Cura'tio mor'bi per in'ediam, (limus and θεραπεία, 'treatment,') Hunger-cure. Cure by fasting.

LIMUS, (λιμος) Hunger.

LIN, Linum usitatissimum—l. Graines de, see Linum usitatissimum—l. Purgatif, Linum catharticum.

LINAIRE, Antirrhinum linaria.

LINAMENTUM, (from linum,) Lintum.

LINARIA, (from linum, owing to the similarity of the leaves,) Antirrhinum linaria—l. Cymbalaria, Antirrhinum linaria—l. Elatine, Antirrhinum elatine—l. Vulgaris, Antirrhinum linaria.

LINCTUARIUM, (from lingere, inctum, 'to lick,') Electos.

LINCTUS, gen. Linctus, Electos—l. Albus, Looch album—l. Amygdalinus, Looch album—l. ad Aphthas, Mel boracis—l. de Borace, Mel boracis—l. Communis, Looch album.

LIND, (Sax. lind,) Tilia.

LINDEN TREE, Tilia, Tilia Americana.

LINE, Lin'ea, Gram'me, (F.) Ligne. Extent in length, considered without regard to breadth or thickness. As a measure, it means the 12th part of an inch; with some, however, the 10th part of an inch.

MEDIAN LINE OF THE BODY is an imaginary line supposed to set out from the top of the head and to fall between the feet, so as to divide the body vertically into two equal and symmetrical parts.

LINE, (from linum,) Linteum, Linum usitatissimum.

LINÆA, Line.

LIN'EA AL'BA, Linea alba Abdom'inis, (F.) Ligne blanche ou médiane de l'abdomen (Ch.), Cand'idula abdom'inis lin'ea, Lin'ea cent'ralis. A tendinous, strong, and highly resisting cord; extending from the ensiform cartilage of the sternum to the symphysis pubis, with the umbilicus near its middle. The linea alba is formed by the decussation of the aponeurosis of the abdominal muscles; and its use is to limit the movement of the chest backwards; to prevent it from separating too far from the pelvis, and to furnish a fixed point for the muscles of the abdomen in their contraction.

LINÆA AS'PERA, Rug'ged ridge, (F.) Ligne âpre, Ligne sous-trochantérienne, (Ch.) A rough projection at the posterior surface of the femur, which gives attachment to muscles.

LINÆÆ ALBICANTES. (pl. of linea, 'a line,') The white lines left where the skin, as of the abdomen or mammæ, has been greatly stretched.

LINÆÆ ARCCATÆ, Curved lines—l. Semicirculares externæ, Curved lines.

LINÆÆ SEMILUNA'RES are the lines which bound the outer margin of the recti muscles of the abdomen. They are formed by the union of the abdominal tendons. The lines which cross these muscles are called Linææ transversæ.

LINÆA SEMILUNA'RI'S SPIGE'LII, (F.) Ligne semi-lunaire de Spiegel. The semilunar notched inner edge of the fleshy portion of the transversalis abdominis, at the point where the muscular fibres are in connexion with the tendinous or aponeurotic fibres, which serve for the insertion of the muscle.

LINÆÆ TIBIÆ, An'guli tib'ie. Sharp lines on the tibia.

LINÆÆ TRANSVERSÆ, see L. semilunares, and Processus teretes.

LINÉAIRE, Linear.

LIN'EAMENT, Lineamentum, (linea, 'a line,' lineare, 'to mark by lines,') A delicate trait observed on the countenance, which constitutes its special character, enables us to preserve its image, and is the cause of resemblance to others. A feature.

Bonnet gave the name Linéament to the first traces of organization in the embryo of man and animals.

LIN'EAR, Linea'ris, Lined'rius, (from linea, 'a line,') (F.) Linéaire. Pathologists apply the epithet linear to fractures which are very narrow, and in which the fragments are scarcely separated.

LIN'EOLA, (dim. of linea,) A small line.

LIN'EOLÆ MAMMA'RUM. The white lines on the breasts.

LINGISM, (after Ling, of Sweden, the proposer,) Kinesipathy.

LINGUA, (from lingere, 'to lick,') Tongue—l. Avis, see Fraxinus excelsior—l. Bovis, Anchusa officinalis—l. Canina, Cynoglossum—l. Cervina, Asplenium scolopendrium—l. Exigua, Epiglottis—l. Prognosis ex, Glossomantia—l. Serpentaria, Ophioglossum vulgatum.

LINGUADENT'AL, Linguodental Linguodent'alis, Linguodent'alis, (from lingua, 'the tongue,' and dens, gen. dentis, 'a tooth,') Relating or appertaining to the tongue and teeth.

LINGUAL, Lingua'lis, (from lingua.) Relating or belonging to the tongue.

LINGUAL ARTERY, Arteria lingua'lis, arises from the external carotid; and, after several tortuosities, reaches the base of the tongue, becomes horizontal, and, under the name Raminc', advances to the tip, where it anastomoses with its fellow. In its course, it gives off the Dorsalis lingue and sublingual.

LINGUAL MUS'CLE, Lingua'lis, Ba'sio-glos'sus (Cowper), Glossia'mus, is a small, long, fasciculus of fibres, hidden beneath the sides of the tongue, between the hyoglossus and styloglossus muscles, which are on the outside, and the genioglossus, within. This muscle passes from the base to the tip of the tongue; and, at its sides, is confounded with the muscles just referred to. It shortens the tongue, depresses its point, and can carry it to the right or left side.

LINGUAL NERVE is a name which has been given to the ninth pair or hypoglossus. It is, generally applied to a branch given off from the Inferior maxillary, or third branch of the fifth pair. Near its origin it runs close to, and anastomoses with, the chorda tympani. It afterwards gives off a considerable number of filaments which are distributed to the tongue, and some of which are said to have been even traced as far as the papillæ;—a distribution which has occasioned it to be regarded as the Gustatory nerve, (F.) Nerf gustatif. It is doubtless the nerve of general sensibility to the tongue.

LINGUAL VEIN follows nearly the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal jugular.

LINGUALIS, Lingula musele.

LINGUETTA LAMINOSA, (dim. of lingua), Lingula.

LINGULA, (dim. of lingua), Ligula.

LIN'GULA, Linguel'ta lamino'sa. A thin, transversely grooved lobule of gray substance, derived from the anterior border of the cerebellum, which, for a short distance, lies over the velum medullare anterius. A depression in the cerebellum in front of the lingula is called (F.) Niche, Recess'us.

LINGULA FISTULÆ, Epiglottis.

LINGUODENTAL, Linguadental.

LINI FARINA, see Linum usitatissimum—l. Usitatissimi semina, see Linum usitatissimum.

LIN'IMENT, Linimen'tum, Li'tus, Enchris'ton, Catachris'ton, Perich'risis, Perichris'ton, Aleiph'a, Aleim'na, Enchris'ta, Fric'tum, Fricato'rium, Inunctio, (from linire, linim, 'to anoint.') An unctuous medicine, containing usually oil or lard, which is used externally in the form of friction.

LINIMENT OF ACONITE, Linimentum Aconiti—l. of Ammonia, Compound, see Lotion, Granville's.

LINIMENT AMMONIACAL, Linimentum ammoniæ—l. de carbonate d'Ammoniaque, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

LINIMENT, ANODYNE, Linimentum opii.

LINIMENT ANTIHÉMORRHOÏDALE DE SIEUR ANDRY, (F.) This is formed of Narbonne honey, Olive oil, and Turpentine.

LINIMENT ANTIPARALYTIQUE, (F.) Composed of subcarbonate of ammonia alcoholized, oil, black soap, and oil of rosemary.

LINIMENT, ANTISCROFULOUS, of HUFELAND. Composed of fresh ox-gall, White soap, Unguentum althææ, Volatile oil of petroleum, Carbonate of ammonia, and Camphor.

LINIMENT OF BELLADONNA, Linimentum Belladonnæ.

camphoratum—l. Cantharide camphré, Linimentum e cantharidibus camphoratum—l. of Chloroform, Linimentum chloroformi—l. Croton oil, Linimentum crotonis—l. d'Eau de chaux, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. of Iodine, Linimentum Iodi—l. of Lime-water, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. de Mercure, Linimentum hydrargyri—l. Mercurial, Linimentum hydrargyri—l. Oléo-calcaire, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. of Opium, Linimentum opii.

LINIMENT RÉSOLUTIF DE POTT, composed of oil of turpentine and marriatic acid. Used in rheumatism, swellings, &c.

LINIMENT, SAINT JOHN LONG'S. A liniment used by a celebrated empiric at the commencement of the second quarter of the 19th century. It is said to have consisted of oil of turpentine and acetic acid, held in suspension by yolk of egg. It was a powerful counterirritant.

LINIMENT DE SAVON, Linimentum saponis compositum—l. de Savon opiacé, Linimentum saponis et opii.

LINIMENT SAVONNEUX HYDROSULFURÉ DE JADELOT. Composed of sulphuret of potass, ℥vj; white soap, ℔ij; oil of poppy, ℔vij; oil of thyme, ℥ij. Used in iteh.

LINIMENTUM, Liniment.

LINIMENTUM ACONITI, Lin'iment of Ac'onite. (Aconite root, in powder, ℥xx; Camphor, ℥j; Rectified spirit, f℥xxx or q. s. Moisten the aconite with a portion of the spirit and macerate for seven days; then percolate into a receiver containing the camphor, until one pint is procured. Ph. B. 1864.) In neuralgic and other pains,—℥xx or xxx being rubbed on the part.

LINIMENTUM ÆRUGINIS, Ox'yment Æruginis, Unguentum Ægyptiacum, Mellitum de acetate cupri, Lin'iment of verd'igris, (F.) Liniment de Vert-de-gris, Miel d'acétate de cuivre. (Ærugin. cont. ℥j; Acet. ℥vij; Mellis despum. pond. ℥xiv. Liquefied, strained, and inspissated by boiling.—Ph. L.) It is used as an escharotic and detergent;—diluted, as a gargle in venereal ulcerations and in foul ulcers.

LINIMENTUM ALBUM, Ceratum cetacei, Unguentum cetacei—l. ad Ambustiones, L. aquæ calcis.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ, Sa'po ammoniac'lis, Linimen'tum ammoniatum seu ammoniæum seu Anglica'num, Sa'po ammoniæ olea'ceus, Unguentum album resolutens, O'leum ammoniac'li, Strong lin'iment of ammo'nia, Volatile lin'iment, (F.) Liniment volatil ou ammoniacal, Savon ammoniacal. (Aq. ammon. f℥j; Olei olivæ, ℥ij. Mix.—Ph. U. S.) A stimulating and rubefacient soap.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ CARBONATIS, Lin'iment of subcarb'onate of ammo'nia, Linimen'tum ammoniæ sesquicarbonat'is, L. volat'ile, Harts'horn and oil, (F.) Liniment de carbonate d'ammoniaque. (Solut. subcarb. ammon. f℥j; Olei oliv. f℥ij. Shake till they unite.—Ph. L.) A stimulating liniment, mostly used to relieve rheumatic pains, bruises, &c.

LINIMENTUM A'QUÆ CAL'ICIS, L. Calcis (Ph. U. S.), L. ad ambustio'nes, O'leum li'ni cum cal'cè, Sa'

po calca'rius, Liniment of lime-water, Carron oil, (because much used in the Carron iron works in Scotland), (F.) Liniment d'eau de chaux, Savon calcaire, Liniment calcaire ou oléo-calcaire. (Olei lini, ʒvij; Aquæ calcis, fʒvij. Misc.) A cooling and emollient application to burns and scalds.

LINIMENTUM ARCEI, Unguentum elmi compositum.

LINIMENTUM BELLADONNÆ, Liniment of Belladonna. (Belladonna root, in powder, ʒxxx; Camphor, ʒj; Rectified spirit, fʒxxx, or a sufficiency. Prepared like Linimentum Aconiti, so that a pint is produced.—Ph. B. 1864.) Applied like Extractum Aconiti.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ, O'leum Camphoratum, Solutio camphoræ oleosa, Camphor liniment, (F.) Liniment Camphræ, (Camphoræ, ʒij; Olei olivæ, ʒxij. Dissolve.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ COMPOSITUM, L. saponato-ammoniato-camphoratum, Compound camphor liniment, Ward's essence for the head-ache. (Camphor, ʒiiss; Ol. Lavand. fʒj; Sp. rectificat. fʒxvij; Liqueur ammon. fortior. fʒij. Dissolve the camphor and oil in the spirit; add the ammonia, and shake till they are mixed. Ph. L.) It is stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CANTHARIDIS, Liniment of Spanish Flies. (Cantharid. in pulv. ʒj; Ol. terebinth. Oss. Digest for three hours by means of a water-bath, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Used as an excitant liniment in adynamic cases.

LINIMENTUM E CANTHARIDIBUS CAMPHORATUM, Camphorated liniment of cantharides, (F.) L. cantharide camphræ. (Tinct. cantharid. ʒss; Ol. amygd. dulc. ʒiv; Sapon. amygd. ʒj; Camphor. ʒss. Dissolve the camphor in the oil, and add the mixture to the tincture and soap.—Ph. P.) Rubefacient, and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CHLOROFORMI, Liniment of Chloroform. (Chloroform. purif. ʒij; Ol. Oliv. ʒiv. M.—Ph. U. S. 1863.) fʒss to fʒj to be applied.

LINIMENTUM CROTONIS, Croton Oil Liniment, (Ol. Croton. fʒj; Ol. Terebinth. fʒvij. M. Ph. D. Croton oil, fʒss; Olive oil, fʒiiss, Mix, Ph. B. 1864.) Rubefacient, causing an eruption when continued.

LINIMENTUM HYDRARGYRI, L. Hydrargyri compositum, Mercurial liniment, (F.) L. de Mercure. (Ung. Hyd. fort. Adip. præp. āā ʒiv; Camphoræ, ʒj; Sp. rect. et. xv; Liqueur ammon. fʒiv. Rub the camphor with the spirit; add the ointment and lard; and, lastly, gradually add the solution.—Ph. L.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient to venereal swellings, &c.

LINIMENTUM HYPERICI, see Hypericum perforatum.

LINIMENTUM IODI, Liniment of Iodine. (Iod. ʒij; Potass. iodid. ʒss; Sp. rectific. fʒv. Dissolve. Ph. B. 1864.) To paint the part.

LINIMENTUM OPII, Liniment of Opium, Anodyne Liniment. (Sapon. ʒvj; Opii. ʒiiss; Camphor. ʒij; Ol. Rosmarini. fʒvij; Spirit rectificat. Oij. (Imp. meas.) Macerate the soap and opium in the spirit for three hours; filter, and add the oil and camphor.—Ph. L.) Anodyne and slightly rubefacient.

LINIMENTUM PLUMBATI, Unguentum plumbi superacetatis—L. Saponaceum opiatum, L. Saponis et opii.

LINIMENTUM SAPONACEUM HYDROSULPHURATUM. (Common Soap, 500 p. Liquefy in a water bath in an earthen vessel; and add white poppy oil, 250 p. Mix intimately, and add dry sulphuret of potass, 100 p. Beat together, and add oil of poppy seed, 750 p.—Ph. P.) In cutaneous affections, as psora, herpes, &c.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS CAMPHORATUM, L. S. compositum, L. Saponato-camphoratum, Balsamum opodeldoc, Tinctura saponis camphorata (Ph. U. S.), Linimentum Saponis (Ph. U. S. 1863), Opodeldoc, Steer's Opodeldoc, Soap Liniment, Compound Soap Liniment, (F.) L. de Savon. (Sapon. rasur. ʒiv; Camphor. ʒij; Ol. Rosmarini fʒss; Aquæ fʒiv; Alcohol. Oij. Mix the alcohol and water: digest the soap in the mixture by means of a water-bath, until it is dissolved; filter, and add the camphor and oil.—Stimulant and anodyne; in bruises, local pains, &c.

Freeman's Ba'thing Spirit's consist of Lin. sapon. camphoratum, coloured with Daffy's elixir.

Jackson's Ba'thing Spirit's differ from Freeman's in the addition of some essential oils.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS COMPOSITUM, L. S. camphoratum.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS ET OPII, L. saponaceum opiatum, Soap and opium liniment, Bates's anodyne balsam, Balsamum anodynum, Tinctura saponis et opii, (F.) L. de Savon opiacé. (Saponis duri. ʒiv; Opii. ʒj; Camphoræ, ʒij; Olci rosmarini. fʒss; Alcohol. Oij.—Ph. E.) Anodyne; in chronic rheumatism and local pains in general.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Simple Liniment. (Ol. Oliv. 4 p.; Cereæ albæ, 1 p. fiat linimentum.—Ph. E.) Emollient; used in chaps, &c.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Unguentum cereæ.

LINIMENTUM TEREBINTHINÆ, L. Terebinthina'tum, Turpentine liniment. (Cerat. resinæ, ʒj; Ol. terebinth. Oss. Melt the cerate and stir in the oil.) A stimulant; applied to burns, &c.

LINIMENTUM TEREBINTHINÆ ACETICUM, Liniment of Turpentine and Acetic Acid. (Ol. Tereb. fʒi; Ac. Acet. fʒi; Linim. Camphor. fʒi; M. Ph. B. 1864.) Said to resemble St. John Long's liniment.

LINIMENTUM VOLATILE, L. Ammoniac carbonatis.

LINN. (Sax. linn.) Tilia Americana.

LINNÆA, L. Borealis. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ, (after Linnaeus.) This plant has a bitter, subastringent taste; and is used, in some places, in the form of fomentation, in rheumatic pains. An infusion in milk is used in Switzerland for the cure of sciatica.

LINOSPERMUM, (λινον, 'flax,' and σπέρμα, 'seed.') See Linum usitatissimum.

LINSEED, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINT, Carbasus, Linteam.

LINTEAMEN, Linteam, Pledget.

LINTEUM, 'a linen cloth,' (from linum, 'flax, linen,') L. carp'tum seu rasum, Lintea'men, Oth'onæ, Othon'ion, Carbasus, Car'basus, Car'p'ia, Mo'tos, Mo'te, Mo'tum, Linamentum, Till'ma, Xys'tos, Xys'ma, Ach'næ, Lint, Line, (F.) Charpie. A soft, flocculent substance, made by scraping old linen cloth, (F.) Charpie râpée, or by unravelling old linen cut into small pieces—(F.) Charpie brute; and employed in surgery as a dressing to wounds, ulcers, &c., either simply or covered with ointment. Picked oak'um has been recommended as a substitute for lints in dressings.

LINTEUM CARPTUM, see Linteum—L. Rasum, see Linteum—l. Scissum, Splitcloth (bandage.)

LINUM (λινον), see Linteum, and Linum usitatissimum—L. Arvense, L. usitatissimum.

LINUM CATHARTICUM, L. minimum, Chamælinum, Pur'ging flax, Mill mount'ain, (F.) Lin purgatif. Ord. Linacæ. This plant is possessed of cathartic properties, and has a bitterish, disagreeable taste. Dose, ʒj, in substance.

LINUM USITATISSIMUM, L. arvense, Com'mo'

flax, Lin. (F.) Lin. The seed, Linum, (Ph. U. S.), Sem'ina l'ni usitatis'simi, Linosp'er'mum, Linseed, Flax'seed, (F.) Grains de lin, are inodorous, and almost tasteless; yielding mucilage to warm water, and oil by expression. They are demulcent and emollient. Linseed, when ground into powder, L'ni Far'ina, Flax'seed meal, (Ph. U. S.) forms a good emollient poultice. It is only necessary to stir the powder into boiling water. The oil, O'leum l'ni, Flax'seed or Lin'seed oil, (F.) Huile de Lin, is emollient and demulcent.

LIONDENT, ('lion's tooth') Leontodon taraxacum.

LION'S FOOT, Nabalus albus, Prenanthes—l's. Tail, Leonurus.

LIOPODIA, see Leiciopus.

LIOPUS, Leiciopus.

LIP, (Sax. and Germ. Lippe.) Che'ilos, La'bium, La'brum, (F.) Lèvre. [In Entomology, labium means the lower lip,—labrum, the upper.] The lips are composed of different muscular fasciculi, nerves, and vessels, covered by the skin and mucous membrane of the mouth. They circumscribe the anterior aperture of that cavity; and are inservient to mastication, pronunciation, &c. They are distinguished into upper and lower—Anoche'ilon; and Catoche'ilon, (Prov.) Fipple—and are placed in front of each jaw, forming between them the anterior aperture of the mouth. They unite at each side, and form what are called the angles or commissures of the mouth—Chal'ini. Their free edge is covered with a mucous membrane, of a more or less livid red, according to the individual. They receive their arteries from the external carotid. Their veins open into the two jugulars. Their lymphatic vessels descend into the ganglions situate beneath the chin. Their nerves are derived from the infraorbital, mental, and facial.

LIPS, La'bia, (F.) Lèvres de la vulve, are folds belonging to the genital organs of the female, and distinguished into—1. La'bia puden'di seu Cun'i seu majo'ra, Episi'a, A'la puden'di mulie'bris, Hyrtoche'ilides, Ru'pes, A'la majo'ra, Crem'noi, Piniac'ula, (F.) Grandes Lèvres. These are two membranous folds, thicker above than below, which limit the vulva laterally, and extend from the inferior part of the mons veneris to the perinæum. They unite anteriorly and posteriorly, forming commissures; the posterior of which is called Fourchette. Their outer surface is convex; formed of skin and covered with hair. The inner surface is white, and covered by a mucous membrane, continuous with that lining the other parts of the vulva. The space between the skin and mucous membrane is filled with a fatty tissue and fibrous bands, some fibres of the constrictor vaginae muscle, vessels, and nerves. 2. Labia puden'di mino'ra, see Nymphæ.

We speak, also, of the lips of a wound, ulcer, &c., when alluding to the edges of these solutions of continuity.

LIPÆMIA, Piarhæmia.

LIPARA, (from liparus.) Plasters, containing much oil or fat.

LIPARIA, (from liparus.) see Polysarcia.

LIPAROCE'LE, Lipoc'e'lè, (liparus, and κηλη, 'tumour.') Lipo'ma, or fatty tumour of the scrotum, Her'nia pinguedino'sa scroti.

LIPARODES, (from liparus, and odes.) Fatty.

LIPARODÉ, Cerate.

LIPAROLÉ, Pomatum, Pommade.

LIPAROTES (λιπαρός), see Polysarcia.

LIPAROTRICH'IA, (liparus, and τριχ, gen. αχος, 'hair.') Too great oiliness of the hair.

LIPARUS (λιπαρός), Fatty.

LIPASMA (λιπασμα), see Polysarcia.

LIPE (λίπη), Fat.

LIPHÆMIA, Leiphæmia.

LIPHÆMOS, Leiphæmos.

LIPOCELE, (lipè, and κηλη, 'tumour.') Liparocèle,

LIPODERM'IA, (leipo, and δερμα, 'skin.') Aposthia.

LIPODERMUS, Leipodermus.

LIPO'MA, gen. Lipo'matis, (F.) Lipòma, (from lipè, and oma.) A fatty tumour of an encysted or other character.

LIPOMATODES, (lipoma, and odes), Lipomatous.

LIPOM'ATOUS, Lipomato'sus, Lipomato'des, (F.) Lipomateux. Having the nature of lipoma—as a 'lipomatous mass.'

LIPÔME, Lipoma.

LIPOME'RIA, Leipome'ria, (leipo, and μερος, a 'part.') Monstrosity from arrest of development, or from defect. Deficiency of one or more of the parts of the body; for example, in one who has only four fingers.

LIPOPSYCH'IA, (λειποψυχια, from leipo, and ψυχη, 'breath.') Syncope.

LIPOSIS, (from lipus, and osis), see Polysarcia.

A copious secretion of the sebaceous humour of the eyelids which renders them gummy. It is owing to a state of chronic inflammation of the tarsal margins; the eyelids being generally red, tumefied, and painful.

LIPPITUDO NEONATORUM, see Ophthalmia.

LIPPUS, one affected with blear eye; blear-eyed; (F.) Chassieux.

LIPSIS (λειψις) ANIMI, ('a forsaking of mind.') Syncope.

LIPSOTRICH'IA, (λειψις, 'a forsaking,' and τριχ, gen. αχος, 'hair.') Alopecia, Calvities.

LIPUS (λιπος), Fat.

LIQUAMEN, gen. Liqua'minis, ('a liquid mixture,' from liquare, 'to dissolve.') Garum.

LIQUAM'UMIA, Adeps huma'nus. Human fat.

LIQUARIUM, (liquare, liquatum, 'to melt or dissolve.') Syrupus simplex.

LIQUATIO, Liquefaction.

LIQUEF'ACIENT, Liquefac'iens, (liquere, 'to be liquid,' and facere, 'to make.') A medicinal agent, which seems to have the power of liquefying solid depositions. To this class mercury, iodine, &c., have been referred by some.

LIQUEF'AC'TION, Liqua'tio, Liquefac'tio. Transformation of a solid substance into a liquid. It is used particularly in speaking of metals and fatty bodies, see Fusion.

LIQUIDAMBAR ASPLENIFOLIA, Comptonia asplenifolia—l. Officialis, see Styrax—l. Peregrina, Comptonia asplenifolia.

LIQUIDAMBAR STYRACIFLUA, Liquidambar,
Sweet gum, White gum. Ord. Balsamineæ. The name of the tree which affords the Liquidambar, and Styrax liquidambar, Styrax liquidambar or Liquidambar styraciflua. Liquid amber is a resinous juice of a yellow colour, inclining to red; at first of about the consistence of turpentine; by age, hardening into a solid, brittle mass. It is not used medicinally.

Styrax Liquidambar is obtained from this plant by boiling. There are two sorts.—one more pure than the other. It is used occasionally, as a stomachic, in the form of plaster.

LIQUIDE AMNIOTIQUE, Liquor amnii—l.
Céphalo-rachidienne, Cephalo-spinal fluid.

LIQUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid.

LIQUIRITIA, Glycyrrhiza.

LIQUOR, gen. Liquoris, (from liquere, 'to be liquid.') Liquamen, Hygrom, Hygrotes, (F.)
Liqueur. A name given to many compound liquids, and especially to those the bases of which are water and alcohol.

LIQUOR ACIDUS HALLERI, Elixir acidum Hal-leri—l. Ethereus, Ether—l. Ethereus sulphuricus,
Spiritus ætheris sulphurici.

LIQUOR ALUMINIS COMPOSITUS, *Aqua alumiand filter through paper.) Detergent and stimulant. Used as a collyrium, when properly diluted, in ophthalmia; as an injection in gleet, leucorrhœa, &c.

LIQUOR EX AMMONIÆ ET OLEO SUCCINI, Spiritus
ammoniac succinatus.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ, L. ammoniæ puræ, Alcali
ammoniacum fluidum, Ammonia liquidum seu
caustica liquidum seu pura liquidum, Lixivium
ammoniacale, Spiritus salis ammoniaci aquosus,
Aqua ammoniacæ seu ammoniacæ causticæ, Liquidum
ammoniacum, Solutio ammoniacæ, (F.) Ammoniaque liquide. Directed to be made in the Ph. U. S.
from Muriate of Ammonia, in fine powder;
Lime, and Water. Heat is applied so as to drive off the ammonia, which is made to pass into the distilled water. Liquor Ammoniacæ may also be made by mixing one part of liquor ammoniacæ for-tior with two parts of distilled water. Its s. g. is 0.960. LIQUOR AMMONIÆ PORTIOR, Stronger solution of ammonia, Aqua Ammoniacæ fortior, Stronger water of ammonia, (Ph. U. S. 1863.) is an aqueous solution of ammonia of the s. g. 0.900; that of Ph. B.
1864, is 0.891. Liquor ammoniacæ is stimulant, antacid, and rubefacient. Dose, gr. x to xx, in water or milk.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ ACETATIS, Alcali ammoniacum acetatum, A. volatile acetatum, Aqua
acetatis ammoniacæ seu ammoniacæ acetate, Solu-tio acetate ammoniacæ, Acetum ammoniacum,

Oij. Ammon. carbonat. q. s. Add the salt to the acid until it is saturated. Ph. U. S. 1851.) A sudorific; externally, cooling. Dose, fʒij to fʒiiss.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ CITRATIS, Solutio of Citrate of Ammonia. This preparation is official in the Dublin Pharmacopœia. It is made by saturating a solution of citric acid with sesquicarbonate of ammonia. It is given in cases of adynamic fever.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ SESQUICARBONATIS, Liquor
Ammoniacæ Subcarbonatis.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ SUBCARBONATIS, Liquor
Ammoniacæ Sesquicarbonatis, Solutio subcarbonatis

LIQUOR AMNII, Aqua amnii. The liquor of the amnios. (F.) Eau ou Liqueur de l'Amnios, Liquide amniotique. The fluid exhaled by the amnios, and which envelops the fœtus during the whole period of uterogestation. It is often simply called the waters. (F.) Les Eaux. Its relative quantity diminishes as pregnancy advances, although its absolute quantity continues to increase till the period of delivery. In some women, only five or six ounces are met with: in others, it amounts to pints. It is limpid, yellowish, or whitish; exhales a faint smell, and has a slightly saline taste. It contains water in considerable quantity; albumen: chloride of sodium; phosphate of lime; and alkaline substance; and a particular acid. It facilitates the dilatation of the uterus, and aids delivery by acting as a soft wedge enclosed in its membranes, Bag of waters,
Poche des Eaux, &c. It is probably inservient to useful purposes in the nutrition of the fœtus.

LIQUOR AMNII, FALSE. The fluid contained between the amnion and chorion in the early periods of fetal existence.

LIQUOR ANODYNE, HOFFMANN'S, Spiritus ætheris
sulphurici compositus—l. Anodynus martialis,
Alcohol sulphuricoæthereus ferri.

LIQUOR ANODYNUS TEREBINTHINATUS, A formula prescribed by Rademacher in cases of gall-stone, and of obstructions and indurations of the liver and spleen. It was composed of Hoffmann's anodyne liquor ʒj; Rectified oil of turpentine ʒij.
Dose, 5 to 10 drops. It resembles the Remède de
Durande, Mixture lithontriptique de Durand, M. de Whitt, Éthérolé d'essence de térébenthine, which is formed of Sulphuric ether, 30 parts; Essence of turpentine, 15 parts. It is used in the same cases.

LIQUOR ANTIMONII TARTARIZATI, L. Tartari
emetici, Solutio of Tartarized Antimony.
(Antim. et potass. tartrat. gr. liv, Aq. destillat.
Oj; Solve et adde Sp. Vini rectif. fʒviij.) Emetic, like the Vinum antimonij; and in the same dose.

LIQUOR ANTIMONII TERCHLORIDI, see Antimo-nium muriatum.

bonatis pur.*, sing. gr. lxxiv, Aque destillat. q. s.
Boil together the arsenious acid and carbonate of potassa with twelve fluidounces of distilled water, in a glass vessel, until the arsenic is di-solved. When the solution is cold, add Spirit.
lavand. c. fʒiv, and as much distilled water as will make the whole one pint. Ph. U. S. fʒj contains gr. ss of the arsenious acid. Dose, gr. x.

LIQUOR ARSENICALIS BIETULI, see Arseniate of ammonia.—I. Arsenicalis Pearsonii, see Arseniate of soda.

LIQUOR ARSENICI CHLO'RIDI, Solution of Chloride of Arsenic, of the London Pharmacopœia of 1851, is made by boiling Arsenic acid ℥ss, in Hydrochloric acid f℥ss (Imp. meas.), mixed with a fluidounce of distilled water, until it is dissolved: then adding water to make the quantity a pint (Imp. meas.) Each fluidounce contains a grain and a half of arsenious acid, or an equivalent quantity of terchloride. Properties the same as those of Liquor Arsenicalis. It is a substitute for, and imitation of, De Valangin's Arsenical Solution, Solutio solventis mineralis, much used by many British practitioners. Dose, gtt. v. to x.

LIQUOR ARSENICI ET HYDRARGYRI IODIDI, see Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of.

LIQUOR ATROP'IE, Solution of Atropia, (Atropia, in crystals gr. iv, Rectified Spirit f℥j; Distilled water, f℥vij.) Dissolve the atropia in the mixed fluid, Ph. B. 1864.) Used by the oculist to dilate the pupil, a drop being placed on the eye.

LIQUOR BARI CHLORIDI, Baryta, muriate of, solution of.—I. Bellostii, L. Hydrargyri nitrici—I. Calci chloridi, see Calci muriatis.

LIQUOR CAL' CIS, Solutio cal'cis, A'qua cal'cis seu benedicta seu Calca'rie n'væ, Calca'ria pu'ra liquida, Solution of Lime, Lime-water, (F.) Eau de chaux. (Calci ℥iv., Aq. destill. cong. Pour the water on the lime, and stir. Let it stand in a covered vessel three hours; bottle the lime and water in stopped bottles, and use the clear solution.) It is astringent, tonic, and antacid; and is used in diarrhœa, diabetes, heartburn, &c., and as a lotion to foul and cancerous ulcers, &c. Dose, f℥ij to Oss, in milk.

The British Pharmacopœia has a Liquor Cal'cis saccharatus, Saccharated Solution of Lime, which is made by mixing slaked lime ℥j, with refined sugar, in powder, ℥ij; putting them in a bottle containing a pint of distilled water; shaking occasionally for a few hours and separating the clear solution. Dose, f℥ss to f℥i.

LIQUOR CAL' CIS CHLORINAT' E, L. C. Chlorat'æ, Solution of Chlorinated Lime, is made by triturating half a pound of chlorinated lime with half a gallon of water; shaking the mixture; filtering, and keeping in a well-stopped bottle. Used in the same cases as chlorinated lime. Dose, f℥ss to f℥j.

LIQUOR CAL' CIS COMPOS' ITUS, A'qua Cal'cis compos'ita seu benedicta compos'ita, Compound lime-water, (F.) Eau de chaux composé. (Lign. quaiac. ras. ℔ss, Rad. glycyrrh. ℥j, Cort. cassafras. ℥ss; Semin. coriand. ℥ij, Liquor. calci. Ovj. Macerate for two days, and filter.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and astringent, and is used in cutaneous affections.

LIQUOR FERRI ALKALI'NI, Solution of Alkaline Iron, (F.) Liqueur de fer alkaline. (Ferri ℥iiss, Acid. nitric. ℥ij, Aquæ destillat. f℥vj, Liq. potass. subcarb. f℥vj. To the acid and water mixed, add the iron; and, after the effervescence, add the clear solution, gradually, to the liq. potassæ subcarb.; shaking it occasionally till it assumes a deep browned colour, and the effervescence stops. After six hours' settling, pour off the clear solution. Ph. L.) It is tonic like other preparations of iron. Dose, f℥ss to f℥iiss.

LIQUOR FERRI CITRA'TIS, Solution of Citrate of Iron, (Ph. U. S. 1863,) (made by saturating with citric acid the hydrated oxide of iron formed by decomposing the solution of tersulphate of iron by evaporation of ammonia; and reducing the liquid by evaporation to the proper measure.) Used to prepare the Ferri citras.

LIQUOR FERRI IO'DIDI, Solution of Iodide of Iron, Syrupus Ferri io'didi, (Ph. U. S. 1863,) Syrup of Iodide of Iron. (Iodin. ℥ij, Ferri rament. ℥j, Sacchar. pulv. ℥xij, Aquæ destillat. q. s. Mix the iodine with f℥x of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, constantly stirring. Heat the mixture gently until the liquor acquires a light greenish colour; then, having added the sugar, continue the heat a short time, and filter. Lastly, pour distilled water upon the filter, and allow it to pass until the whole of the filtered liquor measures twenty fluidounces. Keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S. 1851.) Dose, 20 or 30 drops.

LIQUOR FERRI MURIATIS, Tinctura ferri muriatis—I. Ferri muriaticæ oxydati, see Ferri chloridum.

LIQUOR FERRI NITRA'TIS, L. Ferri Sesquinitrat'is seu ternitrat'is seu pernitrat'is, Solutio Ferri nitrat'is, Solution of nitrate, of ternitrate of sesquioxide, or of sesquinitrate, of iron, has been recommended in chronic diarrhœa and dysentery. Its virtues exactly resemble those of chloride of iron. It is prepared as follows:—Ferri fili incis. ℥iiss, Acid. nitric. f℥v, Aq. destillat. q. s. Mix the acid and a pint of distilled water, until the gas ceases to be given off; filter, and add distilled water to make f℥xxxvi—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 10 to 20 drops.

LIQUOR FERRI PERCHLORIDI, see Ferri chloridium—I. Ferri sesquichlorati, see Ferri chloridium—I. Ferri subsulphatis, see Ferri sulphas.

LIQUOR FERRI TER'SULPHAT'IS, Solution of Tersulphate of Iron. (Ferri sulph. in pulv. crass. ℥xij; Acid. sulphur. ℥ij and gr. lx; Acid. nitric. ℥j and gr. cccx; Aq. q. s. Mix the acid with half a pint of the water; heat the mixture to the boiling point, and add the sulphate of iron gradually until effervescence ceases. Continue the heat until the solution has a reddish brown colour, and is free from nitrous odour. Add water, when nearly cold, to make a pint and a half. Ph. U. S., 1863.) Used in the formation of different chalybeate preparations.

LITHECTASY, Lithectasia, Lithagogectasia, Lithodectasia, (lithos, and εκτασια, 'dilatation;') Cystectasy. An operation which consists in extracting stone from the bladder by dilating the neck of the organ, after making an incision in the perineum, and opening the membranous portion of the urethra.

LITHIA, (from lithos), Lith'iasis, Lithogen'ia, Urolith'iasis, Cachex'ia calculosa, Calculi Morbus, Lopilla'tio, Genera'tio calculi. The formation of stone, gravel, or concretions in the human body.

Also, an affection in which the eyelids are edged with small, hard, and stone-like concretions.

Lithia is also the oxide of lith'ium, lith'ion or Lithon.

LITHIA CARBONATE OF, Lith'ix Carbo'nas, Lith'ium Carbo'nicum, (F.) Carbonate de Lithine. A salt found in certain mineral waters, which have been serviceable in lithuria by its power of dissolving uric acid and the urates. Hence, it has been suggested in that morbid condition. It may be obtained by decomposing chloride of lithium by means of carbonate of ammonia. Dose, gr. v to x, three or four times a day. It has, also, been injected into the bladder, in cases of deposition of lithuria and oxaluria.

Cit'rate of Lith'ia, Lith'ix cit'ras made by the action of citric acid on carbonate of lithia is official in the Ph. B. for 1864. It has been given in gout. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx.

LITHURIA, Lithuria.

LITHOBEXIS, (lithos, and βηξ, 'a cough.') Cough with calculous expectoration.

LITHOCENOSIS, (lithos, and κενωσις, 'evacuation,') Lithotriety.

LITHOCLAST, (lithos, and κλω, 'to break,') see Lithotriety.

LITHOCLASTIA, Lithotriety.

LITHOCYSTOTOMY, (lithos, κυστις, 'bladder,' and τομη, 'incision,') Lithotomy.

LITHODECTASIA, (lithos, ὁδος, 'a way,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Lithectasy.

LITHODIALYSIS, Lithol'ysis, (lithos, and διαλυω, 'to dissolve,') The dissolving of a stone in the bladder.

LITHODRAS'SIC, Lithodras'sicus, (F.) Lithodras'sique, (lithos, and δρασσειν, 'to seize hold of,') An epithet given to a form of stone forceps—Pince lithodras'sique—used in the operation of lithotriety, by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou.

LITHOGENIA, (lithos, and γεννωω, 'to generate,') Lithia.

LITHOID, Lithoides, Lithoid'es, (lithos, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Of the nature of stone, or resembling stone: as

LITHODES OS, see Temporal bone.

LITHOLABE (F.), Lithol'abum, (lithos, and λαβω, λαβανω, 'I seize hold of,') An instrument, employed for laying hold of a stone in the bladder, and keeping it fixed, so that lithotritic instruments can act upon it.

LITHOLABON, Forceps, (lithotomy.)

LITHOLABUM. An instrument concerned in extracting stone from the bladder. It had various shapes.

LITHOLYSIS, (lithos, and λυω, 'I dissolve,') Lithodialysis.

LITH'OLYTE. An instrument, of the catheter kind, for conveying solvents of calculi into the bladder.

LITHOLYTIC, Lithontripctic.

LITHOMETRA, (lithos, and μετρα, 'the uterus,') Ossous, or other concretions of the uterus.

LITHOMYLIE, (lithos, and μυλη, 'a mill,') Lithotriety.

LITHON, see Lithia.

LITHONEPHRITIS, see Nephritis.

LITHONLYTIC, (lithos, and λυω, 'I dissolve,') Lithontripctic.

LITHONTHRYPTIC, (lithos, and θρυπτω, 'I break in pieces,') Lithontripctic.

LITHONTRIP'TIC, Lithontrip'ticus, Lithon-thryp'tic, Litholyt'ic, Lithonlyt'ic, Calculif'ragus, Saxif'ragus, (lithos, and τριβω, 'I rub,') A remedy believed to be capable of dissolving calculi in the urinary passages. There is not much reliance to be placed upon such remedies. By antilithics exhibited according to the chemical character of the calculus, (see Calculi, urinary,) the disease may be prevented from increasing; but most of the vaunted lithontriptics for dissolving the calculus already formed have been found unworthy of the high encomiums which have accompanied their introduction.

LITHOP'EDION, Infans lapid'eus, Osteop'edion, (lithos, and παις, gen. παῖδος, 'a child,') A foetus, petrified in the body of the mother.

LITHOPH'AGUS, (lithos, and φαγω, 'I eat,') A stone-eater. Cases are on record of persons who have swallowed stones for purposes of exhibition.

LITHOPHTHISIS, see Calculi, pulmonary, and Lithiasis pulmonum.

LITHOPRINIE (lithos, and πριεν, 'to saw,') Lithotriety.

LITHOPRIONE, (lithos, and πριων, 'a saw,') An instrument proposed by M. Leroy for preventing the fragments of a calculus, when subjected to lithotriety, from falling into the bladder. It is a variety of litholabe.

LITHOPRISIE, (lithos, and πριεν, 'to saw,') Lithotriety.

LITHORINEUR, (lithos, and ριεν, 'to file,') An instrument, proposed by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou for filing down calculi in the bladder.

LITHOS, (λιθος,) Calculus.

LITHOSPER'MUM OFFICINA'LE, (λιθωσπερρον, from litho, and σπέρμα, 'seed,') Mil'lium So'lis, Ægon'yehon, Grom'well, Grom'ill, Grom'yl, Graymill, Gray millet, Bas'tard Al'kanet, Little-wale, (F.) Grémil officinal, Herbe aux Perles. Ord. Boraginæ. The seeds of this plant were formerly supposed, from their stony hardness, (lithos, and σπέρμα, 'seed,') to be efficacious in calculous affections. They have, also, been considered diuretic.

LITHOSPERMUM VILLOSUM, Anchusa tinctoria.

LITHOTEC'NION, (lithos, and τεκνον, 'a child,') Lithopædion.

LITHOTERE'THIRUM, (lithos, and τερειν, 'to rub,') A lithotritor.

LITHOTHLIBIE (F.), (lithos, and θλιβω, 'I crush,') The crushing of a friable calculus between a finger, passed by the rectum or vagina as far as the bas-fond of the bladder, and a catheter introduced into the bladder.

LITHOTHRYP'SIS, (lithos, and θρυπτω, 'I break in pieces,') Lithotriety.

LITHOTHRYPATORS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTOME, Lithot'onus, (lithos, and τομή, 'an incision.') This name has been given to a number of instruments of different shapes and sizes which are used in the operation for the stone, to cut the neck or body of the bladder. They ought with more propriety to be called Cystotomes.

The Lithotome Caché of Frère Côme is the most known, and is still occasionally used. It is composed of a handle and a flattened sheath, slightly curved: in this there is a cutting blade, which can be forced out, by pressing upon a bas-cule or lever, to any extent that may be wished by the operator.

A Double Lithotome was used by Dupuytren in his bilateral operation. See Lithotomy.

LITHOTOMIST, Lithot'omus. One who devotes himself entirely to operating for the stone. One who practises lithotomy.

LITHOTOMY, Lithotom'ia, Cystotom'ia, Urolithotom'ia, Sec'tio vesic'alis, Lithocystol'omy, (F.) Lithotomie, Taille. The operation by which a stone is extracted from the bladder. The methods according to which this operation may be practised are reducible to five principal, each of which has experienced numerous modifications.

1. The Meth'od of Celsus, Meth'odus Celsia'na, Cystotom'ia cum appa'ratu par'vo, Appa'ratu Minor, Cutting on the Gripe. This consisted in cutting upon the stone after having made it project at the perinæum by means of the fingers introduced into the rectum. The method was attended with several inconveniences; such as the difficulty of dividing the parts neatly, injury done to the bladder, as well as the impossibility of drawing down the stone in many persons. It is sometimes also called Meth'odus Gnytonia'na; from Guy de Chauliac having endeavored to remove from it the discredit into which it had fallen in his time. It was termed Apparatus Minor, (F.) Le petit appareil, from the small number of instruments required in it.

2. Apparatus Major. This method was invented in 1520 by John de Romani, a surgeon of Cremona, and communicated by him to Mariano Santo di Barletta, whence it was long called Maria'no's Meth'od, Sec'tio Maria'na. It was called, also, Apparatus Major, and Cystotom'ia seu Meth'odus cum appa'ratu mag'no, (F.) Le grand appareil, from the number of instruments required in it. An incision was made on the median line; but the neck of the bladder was not comprehended in it. It was merely dilated. The greater apparatus was liable to many inconveniences; such as ecchymoses; contusion; inflammation of the neck of the bladder; abscesses; urinary fistulæ; incontinence of urine, impotence, &c.

3. The High Operation, Appa'ratu alt'us, Cystotom'ia cum appa'ratu alt'o, C. Hypogastrica, Epicystotom'ia, Laparocystotom'ia, Sec'tio seu Meth'odus Franconia'na, S. Hypogastrica seu alt'a, (F.) Haut appareil, Taille Hypogastrique, Taille sus-pubienne, was first practised by Peter Franco, about the middle of the 16th century. It consisted in pushing the stone above the pubis by the fingers introduced into the rectum. Rousset afterwards proposed to make the bladder rise above the pubis by injecting it. The method had fallen into discredit, when Frère Côme revived it. It is used when the calculus is very large. It was practised by opening first the membranous part of the urethra upon the catheter passed into the canal. Through this incision the Soude à dard—a species of catheter, having a spear-pointed stilet—was introduced into the bladder. An incision was then made into the linea alba, above the symphysis pubis, of about four or five fingers' breadth, and the peritonæum detached to avoid wounding it. The stilet was pushed through the bladder, and used as a director for the knife, with which the bladder was divided anteriorly, as far as the neck; and the stone extracted. It was performed in England by Douglass in 1719, and since by others, with various modifications.

4. The Lateral Operation, Hypocystotom'ia, Cystotom'ia latera'lis, Cystoachenotom'ia, Cystotrachelotom'ia, Urethroachenotom'ia, Urethro-cystotrachelotom'ia, Sec'tio latera'lis, Appa'ratu latera'lis, (F.) Appareil lateralisé, so named from the prostate gland and neck of the bladder being cut laterally, was probably invented by Peter Franco. It was introduced into France by Frère Jacques de Beaulieu. He performed it with rude instruments invented by himself, and improved by the suggestions of some of the Parisian surgeons. In England, it received its earliest and most important improvements from the celebrated Cheselden. It is the method practised at the present day, according to different modes of procedure. In this method, the patient is placed upon a table; his legs and thighs are bent and separated; the hands being tied to the feet. The perinæum is then shaved, and a staff is introduced into the bladder, the handle being turned towards the right groin of the patient. An oblique incision is now made from the raphe to the middle of a line drawn from the anus to the tuberosity of the ischium of the left side; and, taking the staff for a guide, the integuments, areolar tissue of the perinæum, membranous portion of the urethra, transversus perinæi muscle, bulbo-cavernosus, some fibres of the levator ani, the prostate and neck of the bladder, are successively divided. For this latter part of the operation, the knife, the beaked bistoury, Bistouri ou Lithotome Caché, cutting gorget, &c., is used, according to the particular preference. The forceps are now introduced into the bladder, and the stone extracted. In the operation care must be taken not to injure the rectum or the great arterial vessels distributed to the perinæum.

A variety of the Lateral Apparatus, called by the French Appareil latéral, consisted in cutting into the bas fond of the bladder, without touching the neck of that organ; but it was soon abandoned, on account of its inconveniences.

The method of Le Cat and of Pajola—Urethro-cystoëneurysmatotom'ia—consists in dividing the prostate in part only,—the enlargement of the wound being effected by a peculiar dilator.

The Bilateral Operation is founded on that of Celsus. It consists in making an incision posterior to the bulb of the urethra, and anterior to the anus, involving both sides of the perinæum by crossing the raphe at right angles: an incision is then made through the membranous part of the urethra, and the prostate may be cut bilaterally, either with the double lithotome of Dupuytren, or the prostatic bisector of Dr. Stevens, of New York.

5. Lithotomy by the Rectum, Proctocystotom'ia, Sec'tio rectovesic'alis, (F.) Taille par la Rectum, Taille postérieure, T. Recto-vésicale. This was proposed by Vegetius in the 16th century; but it was never noticed until M. Sanson, in the year 1817, attracted attention to it; since which time it has been successfully performed in many instances. It consists in penetrating the bladder through the paries corresponding with the rectum by first cutting the sphincter ani and rectum above; the root of the penis, and penetrating the bladder by the neck of that organ, dividing the prostate, or by its bas-fond.

Lithotomy in women, from the shortness of the urethra, is a comparatively insignificant operation.

LITHOTOMY BY THE RECTUM, see Lithotomy—1. by the Vagina, see Lithotomy.

LITHOTRESIS, (lithos, and τρησις, 'perforation.')(F.) Lithotrésie. Lithotrixy. Also, perforating a vesical calculus with the view of facilitating its being crushed in the operation of lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSIS, (lithos, and τριψα, 'I rub down.')(F.) Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSY, Lithotrixy

LITHOTRIPTORS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITES, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITERS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITOR, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITY, Lithotritia, Lithotrypisy, Lithotripsy, Lithotripisy, Lithotripsy, Lithotripsyis, Lithotripsis, Lithoceno'sis, Lithoclastia, (F.) Lithotritie, Lithoprinsie, Lithoprisie, Lithomytie, Broiement de la Pierre. The operation of breaking, bruising, or sawing the stone in the bladder. It has been performed of late years with success by French, and after them by English and American, surgeons. The instruments employed for this purpose are called, in the abstract, Lithotrites, Lithotriteurs, Lithotritors, Lithotrip'tors, Lithotryp'tors, Lithotryp'tes, and Lith'oclasts. The most celebrated are those of Civiale, Jacobson, Heurteloup, and Weiss. See Brise-Pierre articulé; and Percuteur courbé à Marteau.

LITHOTRYPETE, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOXIDURIA, (lithos, oxide, and ουρον, 'urine.')(F.) The discharge of urine containing lithic or xanthic oxide.

LITHURIA, Lithuria, Lithure'sis, Lithourorrhée of Piorry, (lithos, and ουρον, 'urine.')(F.) Lithic or Lithic Acid Diathesis. The condition of the system and of the urine in which deposits of lithic acid and the lithates—Lithic sediments or concretions—take place in the urine. See Urine.

LITHUS, (λίθος,) Calculus.

LITMUS, Lichen roccella.—L. Paper, see Lichen roccella.

LITRA, (λίτρα,) Litre, Pound.

LITRE (F.), Litra. A measure containing a cubed decimetre, which is equal nearly to 2.1135 pints. The ancients gave the name litra, λίτρα, to a measure capable of containing 16 ounces of liquid.

LITSÆA CUBEBA, Piper cubeba.—L. Piperita, Piper cubeba.

LITTLE-WALE, Lithospermum officinale.

LITUS, (linere, litum, 'to anoint.')(F.) Liniment.

LIVÈCHE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LIVER, (Sax. līper,) He'par, Je'neur, Jec'imus, (F.) Foie. The liver is the largest gland in the body. It is an azygous organ; unsymmetrical; very heavy; and of a brownish colour; occupying the whole of the right hypochondrium, and a part of the epigastrium. Above, it corresponds to the diaphragm; below, to the stomach, transverse colon, and right kidney; behind, to the vertebral column, aorta, and vena cava; and before, to the base of the chest. Its upper surface is convex; the lower, irregularly convex and concave, so that anatomists have divided the organ into three lobes,—a large or right or colic lobe;—a lesser lobe, lobule, or inferior lobe, the Lobulus Spigelii,—and a middle or left lobe. At its inferior surface are observed:—1. A Sulcus or Furrow or Fissure, called horizontal or longitudinal fissure, Fos'sa Umbilicalis, Sulcus anteroposterior Jec'oris seu horizontalis Jec'oris seu longitudinalis Jec'oris seu sinist'ris Jec'oris seu Umbilicalis, (F.) Sillon horizontal, longitudinal ou de la veine ombilicale, which lodges, in the fossa, the umbilical vein, and ductus venosus. 2. The Principal Fissure, termed Sulcus Transversus, Fos'sa transversa, Transverse fos'sa, Sinus Porta'rum, Por'ta, P. seu Ma'nus Jec'oris seu He'

patis, Fos'sa or Fis'sure of the Ve'na por'ta, Por'tal Fissure or Fos'sa, (F.) Grande scissure du foie, Sillon transversal ou de la veine porte, Hile du foie, which receives the sinus of the vena porta. 3. The Fissure of the Ve'na Cav'a inf'erior, (F.) Sillon ou Gouttiere de la veine cave inf'érieure, situate at the posterior margin of the organ, and lodging the vena cava inferior. 4. The Lobulus Spigelii or posterior por'tal eminence. 5. The anterior por'tal eminence, Aur'iga seu Lobulus anony'mus. 6. Depressions corresponding to the upper surface of the stomach, gallbladder, arch of the colon, right kidney, &c. Continued from the fossa umbilicalis is a small fossa called Fos'sa duct'us venos'i, between the left lobe and Lobulus Spigelii. The posterior margin of the liver is very thick; much more so than the anterior. The liver is surrounded by a serous or peritoneal covering, which forms for it a suspensory or broad ligament and two lateral and triangular ligaments. See Falx. The bloodvessels of the liver are very numerous. The hepatic artery and vena porta furnish it with the blood necessary for its nutrition and the secretion of bile. The hepatic veins convey away the blood which has served those purposes. The lymphatic vessels are very numerous; some being superficial; others deepseated. The nerves are also numerous, and proceed from the pneumogastric, diaphragmatic, and the hepatic plexuses.

The intimate structure of the parenchyma of the liver has been well studied. When cut, it presents a porous appearance, owing to the division of a multitude of small vessels. When torn, it seems formed of granulations;—the intimate structure of which has given rise to many hypotheses. In these granulations are contained the radicles of the excretory ducts of the bile; the union of which constitutes the hepatic duct. According to Mr. Kiernan, the intimate structure consists of a number of lobules—hepatic lobules, hepatic islets—(F.) Lobules hépatiques, Îlots du foie, Lob'ulins—composed of intra-lobular or hepatic veins—ve'næ intra-lobula'res seu centra'les—which convey the blood back that has been insertive to the secretion of bile. The interlobular plexus of veins—ve'næ interlobula'res—is formed by branches of the vena porta, which contain both the blood of the vena porta and of the hepatic artery: both of which, according to Mr. Kiernan, furnish the pabulum of the biliary secretion. The biliary ducts form likewise an interlobular plexus, having an arrangement similar to that of the interlobular veins. Mr. Kiernan's views are embraced by many anatomists; but are denied by others.

The liver is, perhaps, the only organ which, independently of the red blood carried to it by the hepatic artery, receives black blood by the vena porta. The general opinion is, that the blood of the vena porta furnishes the bile, whilst the hepatic artery affords blood for the nutrition of the liver. It is probable, however, that bile is secreted from the blood of the latter vessel. Besides bile, the liver forms sugar, and is a great assimilating organ.

The liver is liable to a number of diseases. The principal are—hepatitis or inflammation, cancer, biliary calculi, encysted and other tumours or tubercles, hydatids, &c.; and it has at times been the fashion to regard it as the cause of symptoms with which it is no wise connected.

LIVER, He'par. Under this name the ancients designated several substances having a brownish colour analogous to that of the liver, and composed of sulphur and some other body. See Potassæ Sulphuretum, Liver of Sulphur.

Liver of Antimony is the semivitreous sulphuret.

LIVER, ALBUMINOUS, L. am'yloid, 'arda'ceous, scrofulous, wax'y. Altered nutrition of the liver, in which its substance is altered so as to have those epithets applied to it.

LIVER, AMYLOID, L. albuminosus.

LIVER DISEASE, Hepatopathia—l. Fatty, Adiposus hepatica—l. Gin, L. nutmeg—l. Gin-drinkers', L. nutmeg—l. Granulated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER, HOBNAIL, Cirrhosis of the liver—l. Lardaceous, Liver albuminosus—l. Mamillated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER, NUTMEG, He'par variegatum, Tu'beriform liv'er. An appearance of the liver when cut across, resembling that of the section of a nutmeg, Myristicatio hepatis, supposed by some to be the result of intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks; but occurring under other causes. The terms whie'ky liv'er, gindrinkers' liv'er, and gin liv'er, occasionally applied to it, are, consequently, not distinctive. Under the name Pigment liv'er, Frerichs describes the liver as it sometimes appears in those who die from the effects of malarious fevers; when it is of a steel gray or blackish, or, not unfrequently, chocolate colour; brown insulated figures on a dark ground—a condition, which "is produced by an accumulation of pigment matter in the vascular apparatus of the gland."

LIXIV'IAL, Lixivio'sus, (F.) Lixiviel, Lixivien.

An ancient term for salts obtained by washing vegetable ashes,—as the fixed alkalis.

LIXIVIA'TION, Elisiviat'ion, Lixiviat'io. An operation which consists in washing wood-ashes with water, so as to dissolve the soluble parts. The filtered liquor is the ley.

LIXIVIEL, Lixivial.

LIXIV'IUM, Lixiv'ia, Cont'ia, Lec, Ley, Lye, (F.) Lessive. Any solution containing potassa or soda—Sal Lixivio'sum—in excess. In domestic practice a ley is made from wood-ashes, and mixed with the ordinary basis of a poultice, to form a ley cataplasm or poultice, which is applied to whitlow and similar local inflammations.

LIZ'ARD, Laer'ta, Laer'tus, (said to be so called in consequence of its limbs resembling the arms (laer'ti) of man [?].) Sau'ra, Sau'ros, (F.) Lézard. Lizards were formerly employed in medicine as sudorifics; and were, at one time, extolled in syphilis, cutaneous affections, and in cancer.

LIZARD'S TAIL, Saururus cernuus.

LOADED, see Enduit.

LOADSTONE, (from lead and stone,) Magnet.

LOATHING, (Sax. laðian, 'to loathe,') Disgust.

LOBAIRE, Lobar.

LO'BAR, Loba'ris, (F.) Lobaire. Relating or appertaining to a lobe or lobes.

LOBARIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus—l. Pulmonaria, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Saxatilis, Lichen Saxatilis.

LO'BATED, Loba'tus, (F.) Lobé, (from lobe.) Divided into lobes; as Lob'ulated, Lobala'tus, (F.) Lobulé, means divided into lobules.

LOBE, (Λοβος, Lo'bus. A round, projecting part of an organ. The liver, lungs, and brain, for example, have lobes.

The under surface of the brain is divided into two anterior, two lateral, two posterior, and two intermediate lobes or processes. These Chaussier calls lobules of the brain: the cerebral hemispheres he terms lobes.

LOBE, BIVEN'TRAL. A wedged-shaped lobe of the cerebellum, situate behind the amygdala.

LOBE DOUDÉNAL, Lobulus Spigelii.

LOBE OF THE EAR, Lob'ule of the Ear, is a soft, rounded prominence, which terminates the circumference of the pavilion inferiorly, and is pierced in those who wear rings.

LOBE PANCRÉATIQUE, Lobulus Spigelii—l. Petit du foie, Lobulus Spigelii—l. de Spigel, Lobulus Spigelii.

LOBÉ, Lobated.

LOBELIA, (after Lobel, a Flemish botanist,) L. inflata—l. Blue, L. syphilitica.

LOBELIA CARDINAL'IS, Lobe'lia coccin'ea, Trache'llium America'num, Car'dinal Plant, Car'dinal Flow'er, Scar'let Lobe'lia. Ord. Lobeliaceæ. This species is indigenous in the United States. It blooms in autumn, having beautiful carmine flowers. The root is a reputed anthelmintic with the Indians.

LOBELIA COCCINEA, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA INFLA'TA, Ind'ian or Wild Tobac'co, Pike Weed, Asth'ma Weed, Eye'bright, Emet'ic Weed, Lobe'lia (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Lobélie, L. enflée. The prominent virtues of this American plant are those of an emetic. In smaller doses it is sedative, and has been given as a pectoral in croup, asthma, &c. It is, also, sudorific and cathartic, and is an acro-narcotic poison. Twenty grains acts as an emetic.

LOBELIA, PALESPIKED, L. spicata.

LOBELIA, PINIFOLIA. A South African plant, the root of which is excitant and diaphoretic. A decoction of it is sometimes used in the Cape Colony as a domestic remedy in cutaneous affections, chronic rheumatism, and gout.

LOBELIA, SCARLET, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA SPICA'TA, Palespiked Lobelia; indigenous: is a diuretic.

LOBELIA SYPHILIT'ICA, L. reflex'a, Ranun'culus Virginia'nus, Rapan'tium Syphilit'icum, Blue Lobe'lia, Blue Car'dinal Flow'er. The root of this plant, which is indigenous in the United States, is an emetic and drastic cathartic. It has been used in syphilis; hence its name. The mode of preparing it is to boil  $\frac{3}{4}$ s of the dried root in Oxij of water, until the fluid is reduced to Ovij. Dose, Oss.

LOBÉLIE, Lobelia—l. Enflée, Lobelia inflata.

LOBES BIJUMEAUX, Quadrigenina tubercula—l. Cerebral, see Lobe.

LOBES OF THE LIVER, Pin'nae seu Lo'bi seu Pin'nae hepatis. See Lobule.

LOBES, OPTIC, Quadrigenima tubercula—l. Optiques, Quadrigenima tubercula.

LOBI (pl. of lobus), HEPATIS, Lobes of the liver—l. Pulmonum, see Pulmo.

LOBLOLLY, see Avena.

LOBLOL'LY BOY, ('water gruel boy.') An attendant and aid to the surgeon on board ship.

LOBULAR, Lobula'ris, (F.) Lobulaire. Relating to or belonging to a lobule:—as lobular pneumonia, (F.) Pneumonie lobulaire, P. mamelonée, P. disséminée. Pneumonia anatomically characterized by nuclei of red or gray hepatization disseminated in variable numbers in one or both lungs.

LOBULAR BIL'IARY PLEX'US. The plexus formed of lobular hepatic ducts, which are derived chiefly from the interlobular. This plexus forms the principal part of the substance of the lobule.

LOBULAR VE'NOUS PLEX'US. The plexus interposed between the interlobular portal veins, and the intralobular hepatic vein.

LOBULATED, see Lobated.

LOB'ULE, Lob'ulus, (dim. of lobus.) Mr. Kiernan uses the term lobule, for the acinus of the liver of many anatomists.

LOBULINS, see Liver.

LOBULUS, Lobule—l. Accessorius anterior quadratus, L. anonymus.

LOB'ULUS seu LO'BUS ANON'Y'MUS, L. accessorius anterior quadratus, L. quadratus, (F.) Lobule carré, L. antérieur du foie, Éminence porte antérieure. This is situate in the liver between the passage for the round ligament and the gallbladder, and is less prominent, but broader, than the Lobulus caudatus. From the lobulus anonymus a bridge runs across the passage for the round ligament. It is called Pons seu Isth'mus hepatis.

LOBULUS seu LO'BUS CAUDA'TUS, Processus caudatus. This is merely the root or one of the angles of the lobulus Spigelii, advancing towards the middle of the lower side of the great lobe, and representing a kind of tail. Also, the termination of the helix and anthelix of the ear, which is separated from the concha by an extensive fissure.

LOBULUS CENTRA'LIS. A small lobule or prominence of the superior vermiform process of the cerebellum situate in the incisura anterior.

LOBULUS seu LO'BUS SPIGE'LII, L. posterior seu posticus papillatus, (F.) Éminence porte postérieure, Lobule ou Petit lobe du foie, Lobe de Spigel ou duodénal ou paucercatique, is situate near the spine, upon the left side of the great lobe of the liver, and is of a pyramidal shape, projecting, like a nipple, between the cardia and vena cava, at the small curvature of the stomach.

LO'CAL, Local'is, (from locus, 'a place,') Top' icus, Mer'icus, Partia'lis, Top'ical, (F.) Locale, Top'ique. Affections are called local—Morbi locales—when confined to a part, without implicating the general system; or, at all events, only secondarily. Local is thus opposed to general. In the classification of Dr. Wm. Farr, Local diseases, Monorgan'ici (Morbi), include sporadic diseases in which the functions of particular organs and systems are disturbed or obliterated, with or without inflammation; sometimes hereditary.

A local or topical application is one used externally. See Topic.

LOCH. Loch.

LOCH'IA or LO'CHIA, (λοχεια, λοχια), Purgamenta Puerper'ii seu U'teri, Purgatio puerper'ii, Ly'ma, (λοχος, 'a woman in childbed,' λοχεια, 'parturition;') (F.) Lochies, Suites de couches, Vidanges. The cleannings. A serosanguineous discharge following delivery. During the first two or three days, it is bloody; but afterwards becomes green-coloured,—green waters—and exhales a disagreeable and peculiar odour. The lochia, in different stages, have received the names Lochia cruenta, L. serosa and L. alba seu mucosa seu lac'tea. The duration, quantity, and character of the discharge vary according to numerous circumstances. It flows from the part of the uterus which formed a medium of communication between the mother and foetus, and continues, usually, from 14 to 21 days. See Parturition.

LOCHIOCELIITIS, (λοχεια, 'childbirth,' κοιλια, 'abdomen,' and itis), Puerperal fever.

LOCHIODOCHUM, Lochiodochium.

LOCHIOPIRYA, (λοχεια, 'childbirth,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Puerperal fever.

LOCHIORRHAG'IA, (lochius, and ῥηγνυμι, 'to break forth,') An immoderate flow of the lochia. Hemorrhage from the uterus in the childbed state.

LOCHIORRHE'A, (lochia, and ῥεω, 'I flow,') (F.) Lochiorrhée. Discharge or immoderate discharge of the lochia.

LOCHIORUM RETENTIO, Ischlochchia.

LOCHIOSCHESIS, (lochia, and σχησις, 'to restrain,') Ischlochchia.

LOCH'UCH, Loch.

LOCHODOCH'UM, Lochiodoch'um, (lochios, and δοχημα, 'I receive,') An institution for the reception of pregnant and childbed females. A Lyngin hospital.

LOCHOMETRITIS, (lochios, μητρα, 'uterus,' and itis.) see Metritis.

LOCHOMETROPHLEBITIS, (lochios, μητρα, 'uterus,' and phlebitis.) see Phlebitis.

LOCHOOPHORITIS, (locho, oöphoron, 'ovary,' and itis.) see Oaritis.

LOCHOPERITONITIS, see Peritonitis.

LOCHOS, (λοχος.) Puerpera.

LOCL (pl. of locus, 'a place,') Uterus—l. Mu liebres, Uterus, Vulva.

LOCK HOS'PITAL. A term of uncertain origin, generally given to venereal hospitals in Great Britain.

LOCKED JAW, Trismus.

LOCKING Coxofemoral articulation.

LOCOMOTEUR, Locomotive.

LOCOMOTILITY, see Locomotion.

LOCOMO'TION, Locomoti'o, (locus, 'a place,' and moecere, motum, 'to move,') An action peculiar to animal bodies, by which they transport themselves from place to place. It, as well as musculati'o, has also been used for the function of animal movements. The faculty is sometimes called Locomotiv'ity and Locomotiv'ity.

LOCOMOTION OF AN AR'TERY, is the movement produced in vessels having a curvature, by the impulse of the blood sent from the heart, which tends to straighten the artery, and causes the movement in question.

LOCOMO'TIVE, Locomoto'ry, Locomoto'rius, (F.) Locomoteur: (same etymon.) Relating or appertaining to locomotion — as 'the locomotive or locomotory apparatus,' (F.) Appareil locomoteur.

LOCOMOTIVITY, see Locomotion.

LOCULAMENTA COLI, (pl. of loculamentum, (from locus), 'a compartment, a cell,') see Colon.

LOCULAIRE, Locular.

LOC'ULAR, Locula'ris, (F.) Loculaire, Loculeux, (loculus, dim. of locus, 'a place,' 'a small place,') Provided with or divided into small spaces or compartments.

LOCULEUX, Locular.

LOCUS CINEREUS, Substantia ferruginea.

LOCUS NIGER, see Peduncles of the Brain.

LOCUS PERFORATUS ANTI'CUS seu ANTE'RIOR.

A triangular flat surface of the brain, which corresponds to the posterior extremity of each olfactory process in front of the optic tract, and near the entrance of the fissure of Sylvius: Substantia seu Lam'ina perforata anterior.

LOCUS PERFORATUS POSTICUS, see Tarini pons.

LOCUST, BLACK, Robinia Pseudo-acacia.

LOCUST EATERS, Acridophagi—l. Plant, Cassia Marilandica—l. Tree, Robinia Pseudo-acacia.

LOCUST, YELLOW, Cladrastis tinctoria.

LODGED, Wedged.

LODOICEA, see Coco of the Maldives.

LOECHE, MINERAL WATERS OF, Leuk, mineral waters of.

LEMME, (λοιμη), Plague.

LEMIA, (λοιμη), Plague.

LEMICUM, (from λοιμικος, 'pertaining to the plague,') see Læmology.

LEMOCHOLOSIS, (læmos, and χολη, 'bile,') Fever, yellow.

LEMOCOMI'UM, (læme, and κομεω, 'I take care of,') A hospital for those affected with plague.

LEMOGRAPHY, Loimography.

LEMOLOGIUM, see Læmology.

LEMOL'OGY, Læmolog'ia, (læmos, and λογος, 'a description,') The doctrine of plague and pestilential diseases. A treatise on the same,—Læmicum, Læmolog'ium.

LEMOPHTHALMIA, see Ophthalmia.

LEMOPYRA, (læmos, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Plague.

LEMOS, (λοιμος), Plague.

LOGADES, (λογας, pl. λογαδες, 'white of the eye,') Sclerotic.

LOGADITIS, (logades, and itis), Sclerotitis.

LOGIATROS, Logiat'er, (logos, and ιατρος, 'a physician,') In the bad sense, a position without experience; a mere theorist. In the good sense, a rational physician; one who treats disease according to theoretical or scientific principles.

LOGONEURO'SES, (logos, and νευρον, 'a nerve,') Diseases of the mental activity.

LOGOS, (λογος), Reason.

LOGWOOD, Hæmatoxylon Campechianum.

LOHOCH, Looch.

LOIMOCHOLOSIS, (loimos, and χολη, 'bile,') Fever, yellow.

LOIMOGRAPHY, Loimograph'ia, Læmog'raphy, (læmo, and γραφω, 'I describe,') A description of the plague and pestilential diseases.

LOIMOLOGY, (loimos, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Læmology.

LOIMOS, (λοιμος), Plague.

LOINS, ([W.] Πνευν.) Lumbi.

LOISELEURIA PROCUMBENS, (after Loiseleur Deslongchamps, the botanist.) Azalea procumbens; indigenous; Order, Ericaceæ; has some reputation as an astringent.

LOLIACEUM RADICE REPENTE, (after Lolium,) Triticum repens.

LIOLIUM ANNUUM, L. temulentum.

LIOLIUM TEMULENT'UM, L. av'num, Crapa'lia seu Crapa'lia temulent'a, Bromus temuler'tus, Dar'

nel, (Prov.) Cock'grass, Jum, (F.) Herbe d'Ivrogne, Ieraie, Ieroie. A species of the genus Lolium; Ord. Graminæ; Scx. Syst. Triandria digynia, which has decidedly poisonous properties; occasioning, when mixed in bread or beer, intoxication, vertigo, nausea, and vomiting.

LOMBAIRE, Lumbar.

LOMBES, Lumbi.

LOMBRIC, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LOMBRICAUX, Lumbricales.

LOMBRICOÏDE, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LOXCHADES, (for Logades), see Sclerotic.

LOXCHADITIS, (for Logaditis), Sclerotitis.

LOXCHITIS, (λοχχον, 'the head of a lance,') Polypodium filix mas.

LONG, Longus, ([Sax.] lang, long), Ma'eros. That which is much greater in length than in breadth; as the long bones. The epithet is, also, applied to several muscles, to distinguish them from others of similar function, when the latter are shorter. We say, for instance, long flexors, and long extensors, in opposition to short flexors, and short extensors.

LONG DU COU, Longus colli—l. du Dos, Longissimus dorsi.

LONGÆVUS, (longus, 'long,' and ævum, 'age,') Macrobiotic.

LONGANON, Rectum.

LONGAON, Rectum.

LONGAS, Rectum.

LONGEV'ITY, Longæ'vitas, (F.) Longévité, (longus, 'long,' and ævum, 'age,') Macrobé'is, Macrob'iotes. The prolongation of existence to an advanced age. Haller collected examples of more than one thousand centenarians. He had knowledge of sixty-two persons aged from 110 to 120 years; of twenty-nine, from 120 to 130 years; and of fifteen, who had attained from 130 to 140 years. Beyond this advanced age, examples of longevity are much more rare and less sufficiently attested.

Longevity also means length or duration of life, (F.) Durée de la vie. The mean age at death, (F.) Vie moyenne, of different classes and professions enables an estimate to be formed of the expectation or value of life in each.

LONGING, Malacia.

LONGISSIMUS, (superlative of longus.) A term applied to parts, which are very long in their relation to others.

LONGIS'SIMUS DORSI, Semispina'tus, (F.) Lombo-dorso-trachélien. Portion costo-trachélienne du sacro-spinal (Ch.), Long dorsal, Long du dos, is situate vertically at the posterior part of the trunk, and fills, in a great measure, the vertebral furrows. It is thick and almost square below; thin and pointed above. It is attached to the posterior surface of the sacrum, to the transverse processes of all the lumbar and dorsal vertebrae, and to the inferior margin of the last 7 or 8 ribs. It maintains the vertebral column in a straight position; straightens it when bent forwards, and can even carry it back. It also assists in the rotatory motion of the trunk.

LONGISSIMUS FEMORIS, Sartorius—l. Oculi, Obliquus superior oculi.

LONGSIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

LONGUS, Long.

LON'GUS COL'LI, ('long [muscle] of the neck,') (F.) Pré-dorso-cervical, Pré-dorso-atloïdien, (Ch.), Long du cou. This muscle is situate at the anterior and superior part of the vertebral column. It is long, flat, and broader at its middle than at its extremities, which are pointed. It is attached to the anterior surface of the bodies of the first three dorsal and last six cervical vertebrae; to the intervertebral ligaments; to the anterior edge of the transverse processes of the last five cervical vertebrae; and to the tubercle on the anterior arch of the first. This muscle bends the cervical vertebrae upon each other and upon the dorsal vertebrae. If the upper portion acts on one side only, it occasions the rotation of the atlas on the vertebra dentata; and, consequently, of the head on the neck.

LONGICERA BRACHYPODA, (called after Lonicera, a German botanist.) Ord. Caprifoliaceae. A Japanese plant. An infusion or decoction of the leaves is possessed of diuretic properties.

LONGICERA PERICLYMENUM, L. Germanica, Periclymenum, P. vulgare, Caprifolium, C. Periclymenum seu sylvaricum seu distinctum, Common Woodbine, Honeysuckle, (Prov.) Suckling, (F.) Chèvre-feuille. This common plant is slightly astringent and tonic, and was formerly much used in gargles.

LONGICERA SEMPERVIRENS, Caprifolium sempervirens, Scarlet or Trumpet Honeysuckle. Indigenous. A syrup of the leaves is said to have been given in asthma and in amygdalitis. [?]

LONGK, Coxofemoral articulation.

LO' OCH, Lo'hoch, Loch, Loch'och, (of Arabic extraction.) A. linctus. See Eclegma and Eclectos.

LOOCH ABSQUÈ EMULSIONÈ PARATUM, Looch préparé sans émulsion; Lo'och préparé without emulsion. (Pule. g. trag. gr. xvj—gr. xxx, Ol. amygd. dulc. ℥ss, Sacchar. ℥j, Aquæ ℥iij, Aquæ flor. aurant. ℥ij. Mix by rubbing in a marble mortar. Ph. P.) Demulcent.

LOOCH ALBUM, L. amygdalinum, Linctus albus seu amygdalinus seu communis, Eclegma album seu gummo-soleolum, (F.) Looch blanc, L. b. amygdalin, L. b. pectoral. (Amygd. dulc. ℥ss, Amygd. amar. No. ij, Sacchar. alb. ℥iv. Make an emulsion by gradually adding ℥iv of Water. Then take Pule. tragacanth. gr. xvj. Ol. amygd. dulc. recent. ℥ss, Sacch. ℥ij. Add the almond milk gradually to this, and afterwards Aq. flor. aurant. ℥ij. Ph. P.) It is demulcent and pectoral.

LOOCH EX OVO, L. pectoralē le'niens, Po'tio seu emul'sio seu mistu'ra le'niens seu ole'sa, Looch of Egg, (F.) Looch d'œuf, Looch rouge, Émulsion huileuse, Mixture calmante, Potion pectorale, Lait adoucissant. (Vitell. ovi. recent. ℥ss, Ol. amygd. dulc. ℥ss, Syrup. althææ, ℥j. Rub in a mortar, and add by degrees, Aq. flor. aurant. ℥j, Aq. papav. rhæad. ℥ij. Ph. P.) Virtues the same as the preceding.

LOOCH VIRIDÈ, L. cum cro'co et pista'ciis, (F.) Looch vert. (Syrup. Violar. ℥j, Tinet. croci gtt. xx, Aquæ, ℥iv. Mix, and add Pistacia semin. sic. ℥vj. Ph. P.) Virtues like the last.

LOOK, Looch—l. d'œuf, Looch ex ovo—l. Préparé sans émulsion, Looch absque emulsione paratum.

LOOSESTRIFE, CREEPING, Lysimachia nummularia—l. Fourleaved, Lysimachia quadrifolia.

LOOSENESS OF THE BOWELS, Diarrhoea—l. of the Teeth, Odontoseis.

LOPEZ RA'DIX, Ra'dix lopeziana seu In'dica lopeziana. The root of an unknown Indian tree, not possessed of any remarkable smell or taste, or of any appearance of resinous matter. It has been extolled, notwithstanding, in cases of colliquative diarrhoea. Gaubius compares its action to that of simarouba, but thinks it more efficacious.

LOPHADIA, Lophia.

LOPHIA (λοφια), Lophadi'a, Lophos. The upper part of the neck. The first vertebra of the back—Ver'tebra dor'si prima.

LOPHOS (λοφος), Lophia.

LOPIA, Fagus castanea.

LOQUAC'ITY, Garrulitas; (from loqui, 'to speak,') Loquacitè. (F.) Babillement. The act of speaking with volubility. It is sometimes a symptom of disease, and is observable in hysteria, &c.

LOQUELA, (from loqui, 'to speak,') Voice, articulated—l. Abolita, Aphonia—l. Blæsa, Balbuties—l. Impedita, Baryphonia.

LORDO'SIS, Lordo'ma. (from λόςος, 'curved,' 'bent,') Repanda'tio, Repan'ditas. A name given to curvatures of the bones in general; and particularly to that of the vertebral column forwards; Sp'i'na dor'si intror'sum flex'a, Emprotho-cyrto'ma. This gives rise to the projection of the sternum called chickenbreasted or pigeon-breasted; the Pectus carina'tum, Pig'con breast, Narrow chest.

LORICA'TIO, (loricare, 'to plaster,' 'to encrust,') In Pharmacy, the application of a coating of clay, or other substance, to vessels which are to be exposed to fire.

LORIND MATR'ICIS, Epilepsia uteri'na, Convulsivus uteri mor'bus. A barbarous name given to a pretended epilepsy of the womb.

LORIPES, gen. Lorip'edis, (lorum, 'a thong,' and pes, 'a foot,') See Kyllosis.

LORUS, Hydrargyrum.

LOSANGE, Labella.

LOT, Urine.

LOTA MOLVA, see Oleum jecoris aselli—l. Vulgaris, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

LOTIO, (lavare, lotum, 'to wash,') Clyster, Lotion—l. Cupri sulphatis camphorata, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates—l. Rubra, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates.

LOTIO RUBRA, Red wash, (Hydrarg. chlorid. corrosiv. gr. xviii; H. sulphureti rubr. gr. ix; Creasot. ℥vi; Aquæ f℥viij.) May be used in the proportion of f℥j; to from f℥i to f℥iij of water, like the yellow wash.

LOTIO SAPONACEA, see Sapo.

LO'TION, Lo'tio, Lotu'ra, Collu'tion, (F.) Hydrolotif, Hydrole. A fluid external application. Lotions are ordinarily applied by wetting linen in them and keeping it on the part affected.

LOTION, BARLOW'S, Lotion of Sulph'uret of potass'ium. (Potassii sulphur. ℥ij; Sapon. ℥ss; Aq. Calcis, f℥viiss; Alcohol. dilut. f℥ij. M.) Used in various chronic cutaneous diseases.

LOTION, CAMPHORATED, OF BATES, Bates's camphorated water, Lo'tio cupri sulphatis camphorata, Lo'tio rubra, Red wash. (Cupri sulphat. ℥ij; Bol. rubr. ℥ij; Camphor. ℥ss; Aq. bullient. Oj. Strain through linen. f℥ij of this, added to f℥ij of water, is Bates's Collyrium, Collyrium Bateanum, which may also be made extemporaneously as follows:—Cupri sulphat. gr. viij; Bol. gr. viij; Camphor. gr. ij; Aq. bullient. f℥viij.) Mix and filter. See Lotio rubra.

LOTION, FEBRE'S. A cancer remedy, which consisted of Arsenic, gr. x; Water, Oj; Extract of hemlock, ℥j; Liquor Plumbi subacetatis, f℥iij; Laudanum, f℥j.

LOTION, GOULARD'S, Liquor plumbi subacetatis dilutus.

LOTION, GOWLAND'S. An empirical preparation. (Bitter almonds, ℥j; Sugar, ℥ij; Distilled water, ℔ij. Grind together, strain, and add Cor- rosive sublimate, ℞ij, previously ground with Sp. vini rect. ℞ij.) Used in obstinate eruptions.

LOTION, GRANVILLE'S COUNTERIRRITANT, Granville's Lotion, Granville's anti-lymphs lotion. Of this lotion, Dr. Granville gives two forms—a milder, and a stronger. The milder is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. ℞ij; Sp. Rosmarin. ℞vj; Tinct. camphor. ℞ij, M.

The stronger is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. ℞x; Spir. Rosmar. ℞ss; Tinct. camphor. ℞ij, M.

The stronger lotion vesicates rapidly. A piece of cotton or linen folded six or seven times, or a piece of thick flannel, may be imbued with it, and laid for a few minutes on the part to be irritated.

The Dublin Pharmacopœia has a Linimentum Ammoniac Compositum, Compound Liniment of Ammonia, which is a close imitation of Granville's Lotion.

LOTION, HAN'NAY'S Preventive wash. This famous nostrum for the prevention of venereal infection was nothing more than a solution of caustic potassa.

LOTION, HYDROCYAN'IC, Lo'tio Ac'idi Hydrocyan'ici. (Hydrocyanic acid, ℞iv; Rectified spirit of wine, ℞j; Distilled water, ℞vss.) Used with much success in impetigo, &c.

LOTION, STRUVE'S, FOR HOOP'ING-COUGH. (Antim. et Potass. tart. ℞j; Aquæ, ℞ij. Add Tinct. cantharid. ℞j.) A counterirritant to the chest.

LOTIUM, Urine.

LUBRICANTIA, (lubricare, 'to make slippery,') Demulcents, Emollients.

LUBRICUM CAPUT, ('slippery or smooth head,') Penis.

LUC'CA, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS AND CLIMATE OF. The baths and waters, near this ancient Italian city, have been long celebrated. They are thermal, and resemble, in properties, those of Plombières in France, and of Bath, England. They contain carbonic acid, sulphates of alumina, soda, magnesia, and iron. There are ten different sources, the temperature of which varies from 94° to 130° Fah.

Luca is much frequented in summer; partly on account of its mineral waters, but more on account of the coolness of the situation.

LUCHON, Bagnères-de-Luchon.

LUC'ID, Lu'cidus, (luceo, 'I shine.')

In medicine, the word lucid is particularly applied to the intervals, Interv'la lu'cida, of apparent reason, which occur in mental alienation.

LUCIFERMATCHMAKERS' DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

LUCIF'UGUS, (lux, gen. lucis, 'light,' and fu-gere, 'to shun,') Photoph'obus, Photoph'ob'icus. Dreading or avoiding the light.

LUJULA, (corruption of Hallelujah), Oxalis acetosella.

LULLABY SPEECH, Lallation.

LUMBA'GO, gen. Lumbag'inis, (from lumbi.) Arthro'sia lumbo'rum, Lumba'go seu Nephral'gia rheumat'ica, Rachirrh'eum'a, Rachiorrh'eum'a, Rheumatism'us dors'al'is, Osphyrrh'eum'a. Rheumatism affecting the lumbar region.

Lumba'go psöä'd'ica, L. apostemato'sa, L. ab arthro'acë. Pain in the loins from abscess. See Psöitis.

LUMBAGO A NISU, (a nisu, 'from effort,') see Effort.

LUM'BAR, Lumba'ris seu Lumba'lis, (F.) Lombaire, (from lumbi.) Belonging or having reference to the loins.

LUMBAR AB'SCESS, Pso'as ab'scess, Apostema psöä'ticum, Abscess'us lumbo'rum, Moi'bus psöä'd'icus. This abscess is so called from the matter being found on the side of the psöas muscle, or betwixt that and the iliacus internus. Between these muscles is a quantity of loose, areolar substance; and when an abscess takes place there, it can find no outlet except by a distant course. Generally, it descends along the psöas muscle, forming a swelling immediately beneath Poupart's ligament; at times, however, it extends down the thigh under the fascia. Severe hectic follows the bursting of the abscess, and often death. Its causes are,—serofula, injury to the loins, &c.

When, from the pain of the back continuing for some time, with other symptoms, the disease is suspected, caustics, or the moxa, applied opposite the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebrae, may be recommended; and, when the abscess is ready for opening, it may be emptied by repeated discharges of the matter, through a small opening, made with a lancet, or small, lancetpointed trocar. The medical treatment consists in supporting the system, under the great reparative efforts required of it.

LUMBAR ARTERIES are four or five in number on each side. They arise from the sides of the abdominal aorta, and pass behind the muscles situate in front of the lumbar portion of the spine, to gain the broad muscles of the abdomen. They give off, 1. Spinal branches. 2. Anterior, posterior, and external muscular branches.

LUMBAR NERVES are five in number, and issue from the vertebral column by the spinal foramina of the loins. The first lumbar nerve gives off three branches:—the external or ilio-crotal; the middle or inguino-cutaneous, and the internal or infra-pubic. Along with the three pairs below it, it forms the lumbar plexus.

LUMBAR PLEX'US, Portio lombaire du plexus crural (Ch.), Plexus Lumbo-abdominal. This plexus is formed by the union of the Rami communican'tes of the anterior branches of the first four lumbar nerves. It is situate behind the psöas muscle, and before the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebrae. It furnishes, besides the branches which proceed from the first pair, several filaments, that are distributed to the psöas muscle, to the iliacus, the integuments, and glands of the groin; and three great branches,—the crural, obturator, and lumbocral.

LUMBAR REGION, Lumbi.

LUMBAR VEINS have an arrangement analogous to that of the arteries of the same name. They communicate with the vertebral sinuses, azygous veins, &c., and pass into the vena cava inferior.

LUMBARIS EXTERNUS, Quadratus lumbo-rum—l. Internus, Psoas magnus.

LUM'BI, (pl. of lumbus.) The Loins or Loins, Lum'bar re'gion, (Old. Eng.) Leude, (Sc.) Leudis; Re'gio lum'balis, Lap'ara, Pso'a, plural Pso'as, Os'phys, Re'ius, (F.) Lombes. The posterior regions of the abdomen, comprised between the base of the chest and the pelvis. The parts which enter into the formation of the lumbar region are,—the skin; a considerable quantity of areolar texture; broad and strong aponeuroses;—the Latissimus Dorsi, Obliquus externus, and Obliquus internus abdominis, Transversalis abdominis, Quadratus lumbo-rum, and the mass common to the Sacro-lumbalis, Longissimus dorsi, and Multifidus spinæ. These muscles surround the lumbar region of the vertebral column. The vessels, nerves, &c. of the loins, are called lumbar.

LUMBO, in composition, relating or belonging to the loins or lumbar vertebrae.

LUMBOCOSTALIS, Sacrospinalis.

LUM'BOSA'CRAL. Belonging to the lumbar and sacral regions. (F.) Lumbo-sacrë. Bichat calls this a very large nerve, given off from the anterior branch of the fifth lumbar pair, which descends into the pelvis before the sacrum to join the sciatic plexus.

LUMBRICA'LIS, Vermicula'ris. Resembling a lumbricus or 'earthworm,' Lumbricoïdes. A name given to small muscles, (F.) Lombricus, met with in the palm of the hand and sole of the foot.

LUMBRICA'LES MA'NÛS, Fidicina'les, Flex'or primi internodii digitorum manus seu perforatus lumbrical'is, (F.) Annuli-tendino-phalangicus, Palmi-phalangicus. Four small, fleshy, thin, round, long, fusiform fasciculi, situate in the palm of the hand, and distinguished into first, second, third, and fourth, counting from without to within. They arise from the tendons of the flexor communis digitorum, and are inserted at the outer and posterior side of the superior extremity of the first phalanges of the last four fingers. These muscles bend the fingers on the metacarpus, and fix the tendons of the flexor digitorum communis.

LUMBRICALES PE'DIS, (F.) Planti-tendino-phalangicus, Planti-sous-phalangicus, (Ch.) They are analogous to those of the hand in form, number, and arrangement. They increase the flexion of the toes, and draw them inward.

LUMBRICUS, ('earthworm,') Ascaris lumbricoïdes—l. Latus, Bothriocephalus latus, Tænia solium—l. Teres hominis, Ascaris lumbricoïdes.

LUMBUS VENERIS, ('loin of Venus,') Achillea millefolium.

LUMEN, gen. Luminiis, Light, Pupil—l. Constans, Phosphorus.

LUMIÈRE, (from lumen, 'a light,') Light.

LUMINOSITY, Phosphorescence.

LUNA, ('the moon,') Argentum, Moon—l. Albini, Sciatic notch, lesser—l. Imperfecta, Bismuth—l. Potabilis, Argentii nitras.

LUNACY, see Lunatic.

LUNAR, Luna'ris, (from luna, 'the moon, silver,') Relating or appertaining to the moon. See Lunatic;—or to silver, as 'Lunar caustic.'

LUNA'RE OS, Os semilunare. The second bone in the upper row of the ear.

LUNARIA, (luna, 'the moon,') Menses.

LUNARIA REDIV'VA, Leucoïum, Bulbonach, Sa'tin, Hon'esty. Ord. Cruciferae. Said, by Ray, to be a warm diuretic.

LUNARIS, Lunatic.

LUN'ATIC, Lunatic'us, Luna'ris, Luna'rius, Lunar, (F.) Lunatique, (from luna.) Relating to the moon. An epithet given to diseases—as epilepsy and insanity—which were supposed to appear at certain phases of the moon; or to those who were affected by them; Lunatici, Selenitici. The term lunatic (Moon'ed, Moon'struck, Selenoble'tus), is now restricted to one labouring under lunacy or mental alienation, Dementia accidentalis seu adventitia, that is, under any form of unsoundness of mind, except idiocy. In law, a lunatic is one who has had an understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident, has lost the use of his reason, and become non compos mentis or non compos.

LUNATICUS, Epileptic, Lunatic, Somnambulist.

LUNATISMUS, Somnambulism.

LUNE, (from luna, 'the moon,') A fit of lunacy or insanity; a mad freak.

LUNE, Moon—l. d'Eau, Nymphæa alba.

LUNELLA, (dim. of luna, 'the moon,') Hyppoon.

LUNES, (pl. of lune, 'a moon or month,') Menses.

LUNETTES ORDINAIRES, (dim. of luna, 'moon,' from their shape,) Spectacles.

LUNG, (Sax. lunge.) Pulmo—l. Black, of coal miners, Anthracosis—l. Cancer of the, Phthisis, cancerous—l. Collapse of the, see Atelectasis pulmonum.

LUNG FEVER, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

LUNG, PERFORATING ABSCESS OF THE. A purulent collection, which forms exterior to the lung, and afterwards perforates its tissue, so that it is evacuated through the bronchial tubes.

LUNG PROOF, Doemiasia pulmonum—l. Vesicles, see Pulmo—l. Wort, Pulmonaria—l. Wort, cow's, Verbascum nigrum—l. Wort, tree, Lichen pulmonarius.

LUNULA, (dim. of luna, 'the moon,') Onyx—l. Unguiculus, see Nail—l. Scapulæ, Notch, scapular.

LUNYIE (Se.), Lumbi.

LUNYIEBANE, Ischion.

LUPIA, (from λυπω, 'to harass,') Eneystis, Wen—l. Junctura, Spina ventosa.

LUPINUS. Under this term the white lupin, Lupinus albus seu sativus, (F.) Lupin blanc, Ord. Leguminosæ, is often meant. The seeds, which were much eaten in the days of Pliny and of Galen, are now neglected. The meal is, however, occasionally used as an anthelmintic, and as a cataplasm.

LUPOID, Lupoides, (lupus, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling, or having the character of, lupus.

LUPULINA, Lu'pulin, Lupulin'ic glands. A substance which exists in Humulus lupulus or hop. It is in the form of small, shining, yellowish grains, which cover the base of the scales of the hop; is pulverulent, and of an aromatic odour. When analyzed, it is found to contain resin, volatile oil in small quantity, and a bitter principle—Lu'pulate. It is aromatic and tonic, and—according to some—narcotic.

LUPULINIC GLANDS, Lupulina.

LUPULITE, see Lupulina.

LUPULUS, Humulus lupulus—l. Communis, Humulus lupulus—l. Saliariatus, Humulus lupulus—l. Scandens, Humulus lupulus.

LUPUS, 'a wolf.' (So named from its rapacity.) Lu'pus ex'edens seu vo'rax seu dev'orans, Jup'cob's Ul'cer, Ul'cus Tubercul'osum, Can'cer seu Phymato'sis lu'pus, No'li me tang'ere. (F.) Loup. Tubercular excreescences, with ragged, spreading ulcerations, chiefly about the ala nasi, where they destroy the skin, &c., for some depth. Sometimes they appear in the cheek, circularly, or in the shape of a sort of ringworm, destroying the substance, and leaving a deep and deformed cicatrix. The knife or caustic should be used to separate the sound from the morbid parts. Arsenic has been given internally with advantage. See, also, Herpes exedens, and Lycoides.

LUPUS CANCROUS, Cancer—l. Devorans, see

Lupus—l. Exedens, Lupus—l. Varicosus, Nævus—l. Vorax, Herpes exedens, see Lupus.

LURCO, Glutton.

LURID, Lu'ridus. Pale-yellow, sallow,—applied to the complexion.

LURKEYDISH, Mentha pulegium.

LUROR, (λαρος, 'pale,') Paleness.

LUSCIOSITAS, Luscitas, Myopia.

LUSCIOSUS, Borgne, Myops.

LUSCITAS, Lusciositas, Luscit'ies, Luscit'ion, (Lusciosus, 'dim-sighted,') Strabismus. The term has also been given to any case of obliquity in which the eye is fixed in an unnatural position. The obliquity termed Cockeye is a form of Luscitas.

LUSCITIES, Luscitas.

LUSCUS, ('one eyed,') Borgne.

LUSS (Se.), Pityriasis.

LUSTRAMENTUM, (lustrare, 'to purify,') Chartie.

LUT, Lute.

LUTE, Lu'tum, 'mud,' Cæmentum. (F.) Lut. A composition employed either for closing apertures in a pharmaceutical instrument, or for covering the surface of retorts, tubes, &c., which have to support a great degree of heat. Lutes are composed differently, according to the object to be accomplished. Commonly, they are made of linseed meal and starch. The fat lute is formed of clay and drying oil. Sometimes, the white of egg and lime are used; and that which is employed for covering vessels, intended to be strongly heated, is made of clay, sifted sand, and water.

LUTEOLA, (dim. of luteus,) Reseda luteola.

LUTEUS, Yellow.

LUTRON, (λουτρον, from λουειν, 'to wash,') A bath. Also, an ophthalmic medicine.

LUX, gen. Lu'cis, Light.

LUXATIO, Luxation—l. Imperfecta, Sprain.

LUXATION, Eluxation, (luxare, luxatum, 'to put out of place,') Dislocatio, Olisthema, Luxatio, Dislocatio, Ecclisis, Stremma, Luxaturæ, Ectopia, Eptosis, Ela'pus, Lygis'mus, Emotio, Ec'stasis, Exarthrema, Paracine'ma, E. luxatio, Exarthroma, Exarthrosis, Exosis, Exothesis, Paratopia, Streblosis, Delocatio, Exarticulatio, (F.) Luxation, Dislocation, Déboîtement. A displacement of a part from its proper situation. A putting out of joint. A displacement of two or more bones, whose articular surfaces have lost, wholly, or in part, their natural connexion; either owing to external violence, (accidental luxation), or to disease of some of the parts about the joint (spontaneous luxation.) Luxation is complete when the bones have entirely lost their natural connexion; incomplete,—Luxatio imperfecta, Subluxatio—when they partly preserve it; and compound, when a wound communicates with the luxated joint. The general indications of treatment, are;—1. To reduce the protruded bone to its original place. 2. To retain it in situ. 3. To obviate any attendant or consequent symptoms.

To reduce requires extension, counterextension, and coaptation.

LUXEUIL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters, at the town of Luxeuil, at the foot of the Vosges, in the department of Haute Saône. Five springs are thermal, and two cold. They seem to contain carbonic acid, carbonates of iron and lime, and chloride of sodium; and are employed as aperient, tonic, and stimulant.

LYCANCHE, Lycan'chis, (lyco, and αγκη, 'I strangle,') Wolf quin'sy, Wolf choak;—as Cynanche means Dog choak. Also, hydrophobia. See Lycoides.

LYCANCHIS, Lycanche.

LYCANTHROPE, see Lycanthropia.

LYCANTHROPIA, (lyco, and ανθρωπος, 'a man,') Lyca'um, Insa'ntia lupi'na, Lycoma'ntia. A variety of melancholy, in which the person believes himself to be changed into a wolf, and imitates the voice and habits of that animal. One so circumstanced is called a Ly'canthrope, Lycanthropus.

LYCANTHROPUS, see Lycanthropia.

LYCAUM, Lycanthropia.

LYCHNIDIUM, (λυχνιδιον, dim. of λυχνος, 'a light,') Biolychnium.

LYCHNIS GITHA'GO, (λυχνις,) Agrostem'ma githa'go, Corn cockle, Rose can'pion. A naturalized European plant. Ord. Caryophyllaceæ. The seeds are somewhat acrid, but not poisonous. They were at one time, employed in cutaneous diseases, and in hemorrhage, and as a topical application to ulcers and fistule.

LYCHNIS OFFICINALIS, Saponaria—L. Sylvestris, Saponaria.

LYCHNIUM, (from λυχνος, 'a light,') Biolychnium.

LY'CIUM, (Λυκιον.) A medicinal substance, anciently obtained from the roots and branches of a thorny shrub growing in Lycia. It was astringent, and used in dysentery, ulcers of the gums, &c. By some, it has been considered to be the catechu.

LYCO, (from λυκος, 'a wolf,') in composition, wolf.

LYCODONTES, (lyco, and odontos, 'a tooth,') Canine teeth.

LYCOÏ'DES, Lycoides, (lyco, and αἰδός, 'form,') Lupo sim'ilis. An epithet for a species of cyananche, called, also, Lupus and Strangulator, and absurdly attributed to excessive retention of sperm in its reservoirs, and its passage into the blood [?].

LYCOMANIA, (lyco and mania,) Lycanthropia.

LYCOPE DE VIRGINIE, Lycopus Virginicus.

LYCOPER'DON, (lyco, and περδω, 'I break wind,') L. Bovista seu Arrhizon seu Globosum, Bovista, Crep'itus Lupi, Fun'gus Chirurgo'rum, Puffball, Bullfists, Mol'tipuffs, (Prov.) Puff, (Sc.) Deil's Snuffbox, (F.) Vesseloup. Ord. Fungi. The puff-ball dries into a very fine, light brownish dust, which is sometimes used as a mechanical styptic to arrest hemorrhage.

LYCOPERDON PRO'TEUS, Common puffball. The fumes of this substance have been found to produce anæsthetization in animals.

LYCOPERDON TU'BER, L. Gulosorum, Tu'ber Agricoc'antium seu Cibarium seu Gulosorum seu Nigram, Tu'bera Ter'ræ, Trubs, Truffle (pronounced troofle), (F.) Truffe. A fleshy, firm body, unknown in its mode of reproduction, which is found under ground, especially in different parts of France, Italy, &c., and is much esteemed as an aliment. It seems to belong to the champignons, and has a particular perfume. Aphrodisiac virtues have been ascribed to it.

A Virginia truffle is called Tuckaho'. It is the Sclerotium giganteum, and is sometimes named Indian bread and Indian loaf.

LYCOPEDE, Lycopodium.

LYCOPO'DIUM, (lyco, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') L. Clavatum seu Officinale, Lepidotis clavata, Cingularia, Muscus clavatus, Clubmoss, Wolf'sclaw, Witchmeal. Ord. Lycopodiaceæ. This is the largest of the European mosses. The dust, or spores, Lycopodium, (Ph. U. S.), which fills the capsules of its spikes, is very inflammable, and hence has been called Veg'etabile Sulphur;—

and, also, Fari'na seu Pul'vis seu Se'men seu Sulphur Lycopo'dii, (F.) Lycopode, Soufre végétal. It is used in France and in the United States to roll pills and boluses in; and in medicine is a desiccative in the excoriations to which infants are liable. It is collected chiefly in Switzerland and Germany for commerce.

LYCOPODIUM CLAVATUM, Lycopodium.

LYCOPODIUM COMPLANATUM, Common Club-moss, Ground Pine; indigenous; has the same properties as Lycopodium selago.

LYCOPODIUM SELA'GO, L. Recurvum, Plananthus fastigiatus seu selago, Muscus erectus seu Catharticus, Selago, Up'right Clubmoss, Fir Clubmoss, Up'right Firmoss. A decoction of this plant acts violently as an emetic and purgative; and was formerly, on this account, used as an abortive. It is also employed to kill vermin.

LYCOPUS, L. Virginicus seu uniflorus seu pumila, Bugleweed, Water Bugle, Water Horehound, Gypsyweed, Paul's Bet'ony, (F.) Lycopus de Virginie, (lyco, and πους, 'a foot,' from the likeness of the leaves.) This indigenous herb, Scæ. Syst. Diandria Monogynia, Nat. Ord. Labiate, grows throughout the greater part of the United States. The whole herb is said to be slightly narcotic. It is given in infusion, (Lycop. ʒj; Aq. fervent. Oj.) Dose, Oss to Oj.

LYCOPUS PUMILA, Lycopus.

LYCOPUS SINUATUS, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, indigenous, has similar properties.

LYCOPUS UNIFLORUS, L. pumila—L. Virginicus, Lycopus.

LYCOREXIS, (lyco, and αρεξίς, 'appetite,') Fames lupina.

LYCOSA TARENTULA, see Tarantula.

LYCOSTOMA, (lyco, and στομα, 'mouth,') Hyperoëchasma.

LYE, ([Sax.] leah, læs,) Lixivium, Ley—L. Dyspeptic, see Fuligokali—L. Medical, see Fuligokali—L. Tea, Physick, see Fuligokali.

LYGISMUS, (λυγισμος, from λυγίζω, 'to bend,') Luxation.

LYGODES, (lygnus, and odes,) Singultus.

LYGMUS, (λυγμος,) Singultus.

LYGODES, (λυγωδης,) Singultus.

LYING-DOWN STATE, Parturient state.

LYING-IN STATE, Parturient state.

LYMA, Lochia, (λυω, 'to wash,') also, filth or sordes, (to be washed away.) Ly'më.

LYME, (λυμα,) Lyma.

LYMPH, Lymph'a, (akin to νυμφη, 'water,' by changing v into λ.) White blood, Lymph'a Nutrit'ia, (F.) Lymphe. A name given to the fluid contained in the lymphatic vessels and thoracic duct of animals, which have been made to fast for 24 hours. According to Chevreul, the lymph of the dog contains water, fibrin, albumen, common salt, subcarbonate of soda, phosphates of lime and magnesia, and carbonate of lime. The properties and composition of lymph vary somewhat according to the part whence the lymphatic vessels obtain it. Generally, it is under the form of a transparent, slightly alkaline fluid, sometimes of a madder-red or yellowish colour,—of a spermiac odour, and saline taste; soluble in water,—the solution becoming turbid, when mixed with alcohol. When left to itself, it coagulates. The clot or solid portion becomes of a scarlet red, if put in contact with oxygen; and of a purple red, if placed in carbonic acid.

Like the blood, the lymph consists of a fluid—Liquor lymphæ—in which lymph corpuscles or globules are suspended.

The lymph is probably the product of internal absorption in different parts of the body: it then flows along the lymphatic vessels, uniting with the chyle, and is poured with it into the veins; thus becoming one of the materials of the blood. According to others, the blood, when it reaches the arterial radicles, is divided into two portions,—the one red, which is carried to the heart,—the other serous or white, which is absorbed by the lymphatic vessels, and constitutes the lymph. By others, again, the lymphatics are considered to be the vessels of return for the white blood sent to certain tissues. White blood, however, has probably no existence.

The word lymph is sometimes used unhappily by the surgeon to signify liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH, COAGULABLE, Fibrin, Liquor sanguinis. LYMPH CORPUSCLES, see Lymph—l. Globules, see Lymph—l. Hearts, Lymphatic hearts.

LYMPH, PLASTIC, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHADENITIS, (lymph and adenitis.) Inflammatio glandularum lymphaticarum, Adenitis lymphatica, (F.) Adénie lymphatique. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland or ganglion.

LYMPHÆDUCTUS, (lympna, and ductus, 'a duct,') Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIITIS, (lymphangia and itis.) Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIA, (lympna, and αγγειον, 'a vessel,') Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIECTASIS, Lymphœcrysma, (lymphangia, and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOGRAPHY, Lymphangiographia, (lymphangia, and γραφη, 'a description,') A description of the lymphatic vessels.

LAMPHANGIOITIS, (lymphangia, and itis.) Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIOL'OGY, (lymphangia, and λογος, 'a description,') A treatise on the lymphatics.

LYMPHANGI'ON, sing. of Lymphangia.

LYMPHANGIOT'OMY, Lymphangiotomy, (from lymphangia, and τομη, 'incision,') The anatomy or dissection of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGITIS, (lymphangia, and itis.) Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGION'CUS, Lymphon'cus, (lympna, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Tamefaction of the lymphatics.

LYMPHATIC, Lymphaticus, (F.) Lymphatique. That which relates to lymph; also, abounding in lymph. See Phlegmatic.

LYMPHATIC HEARTS, Lymphhearts. The frog and several other animals are provided with large receptacles for the lymph immediately underneath the skin, which exhibit distinct and regular pulsations like the sanguiferous heart. Their use appears to be to propel the lymph.

LYMPHATIC SYSTEM is that particuliar system of organs which is inservient to the formation and circulation of lymph. These organs are:

1. LYMPHATIC GANG'LIONS OR GLANDS, see Conglobate.

2. LYMPHATIC VES'SELS, Lymphæductus, Lymphangia, Lymphangia, Venæ lymphaticæ, Ductus serosi, Vasæ lymphatica seu resorbentia seu hydræagogæ, Hydrangia &c. These are very numerous. Arising at the surface of membranes and in the tissue of the organs, they carry into the veins the lymph from those parts. Lymphatic vessels are found in almost every part. Wherever they are met with, however, they form two orders,—one superficial, the other deepseated;—the two orders frequently communicating with each other. Lymphatic vessels are generally smaller than arteries and veins. They are very thin, diaphanous, and cylindrical; but present, here and there, more or less considerable dilatations, caused by valves in their interior. They are slightly tortuous in their course; their anastomoses are very numerous, and they often cross each other, forming successive plexuses. Of the arrangement of the extreme radicles we are ignorant. All the branches, before joining the principal trunks, pass through lymphatic ganglions, in which they are convoluted, or subdivided almost ad infinitum. They are formed of an outer areolar membrane and an internal coat, similar to that of the veins; of the latter, the valves are formed. All the lymphatics of the body ultimately discharge themselves at the junction of the subelavian and internal jugular veins. Two of these trunks are considerably larger than the others,—the thoracic duct, and the great trunk of the right side, (F.) La grande veine lymphatique droite. The former receives the lymphatics of the abdomen, of the lower extremities, the left side of the thorax, the left upper extremity, and the corresponding side of the head and neck; the latter receives those of the right upper extremity, and of the right side of the head, neck and thorax.

LYMPHATITIS, (lympna, and itis.) Angioloecitis.

LYMPHEURYSMA, (lympna, and συσμα, 'dilatation,') Lymphangiectasis.

LYMPHITIS, (lympna, and itis.) Angioloecitis.

LYMPHIZA'TION. A term used by Professor Gross to signify effusion of coagulable lymph. It is not a happy word, inasmuch as lymph has another meaning, whilst the term 'coagulable lymph' is now almost abandoned.

LYMPHOCHEZ'IA, (lympna, and χεζω, 'I go to stool,') Serous diarrhœa.

LYMPHONCUS, (lympna, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Lymphangioncus—l. Iridis, Iridæxesis.

LYMPHOPYRA, (lympna, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, adenomeningeal.

LYMPHORRHAG'IA, (lympna, and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth,') Discharge of lymph from a lymphatic vessel, owing to a lesion of its coats.

LYMPHO'SIS, (F.) Lymphose. The preparation or elaboration of lymph.

LYMPHOT'OMY, (lympna, and τεμνω, 'I cut,') Dissection of the lymphatics.

LYNCH'S EMBROCA'TION. An emollient nostrum, formed of olive oil impregnated with bergamot and other essences, and coloured with alkanet root.

LYNGODES, (λυγγωδης), Singultous—l. Febris, Fever, singultous.

LYNN WAHOO, Ulmus alata.

LYNX, (λυξ, gen. λυκος), Singultus.

LYPE, (λυπη, 'sadness,') Athymia.

LYPEMANIA, (lype, and mania), Melancholy.

LYPERIA CRO'CEA, (from λυπρος, 'sad,' from the dull color of the flowers.) A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ, the flowers of which closely resemble saffron in smell and taste, and possess similar medicinal virtues.

LYPEROPHRE'NIE, (λυπρος, 'sad,' and φρηνη, 'the mind,') Melancholy.

LYPOTHYM'IA, (lype, and θυμος, 'the mind,') Very great sadness or despondency.

LYRA, (λυρα, 'the lyre,') Psalter, Psalterium, Corpus Psallōides, Lyra Davidis, Lamina medullaris triangularis cerebri, Spatium trigonum. The under surface of the posterior part of the body of the fornix is impressed with numerous transverse and oblique lines, which have been so called from some resemblance they bear to the ancient lyre.

LYSIA, Lysis.

LYSIMACHIA NUMMULARIA, (λυσιμαχια, from λυσις, 'solution,' and μαχη, 'strife,') L. nemorum, Nummularia, Hirundinaria, Centinor'bia,

Creeping Loosestrife, Moneywort, (F.) Herbe aux écus. Ord. Primulacææ. This plant was formerly accounted vulnerary. It has been considered to possess antiscorbutic and astringent qualities, and has been used in leucorrhœa.

LYSIMACHIA PURPUREA, Lythrum salicaria.

LYSIMACHIA QUADRIFO-LIA, Fourleaved Loosestrife, Crosswort, an indigenous plant, is astringent; and has been used as a stomachic and antiperiodic.

LYSIS, (λυσις, from λυω, 'I dissolve,') Ly'sia. Solution. A common suffix; also, a name given to a solution or termination of disease, which is operated insensibly; that is, gradually and without critical symptoms.

LYSSAS, (λυσσα;) Maniodes.

LYSSETER, (λυσητηρ, Maniodes.

LYSSODEC'TUS, (λυσοδεκτος, from λυσω, and δεκτω, 'I bite,') Hydrophobus; Canine rabido moriens. One who has been bitten by a mad dog, or is actually labouring under hydrophobia.

LYSSODEG'MA, gen. Lyssodeg'matis, Lyssodeg'mus, Lyssodex'ia. The bite of a mad dog.

LYSSODEXIS, Lyssodegma.

LYTE'RIOUS, (λυτηριος, (from λυω, 'I dissolve,') 'solving,') An epithet given to those signs which announce the solution of a very violent disease.

LYTHRUM ALATUM, (from λυθρον, 'blood, and dust,') on account of the colour of the flowers of some species, see Lythrum salicaria—L. Hyscopifolia, Lythrum salicaria.

LYTHRUM SALICA'RIA, Lysima'chia purpurea, Salicaria vulgaris seu epica'ta;—the Common or Purple Willow Herb. Ord. Lythraceæ. The herb, root, and flowers possess a considerable degree of astringency, and are used, occasionally, in the cure of diarrhœa and dysentery, leucorrhœa, hæmoptysis, &c.

Lythrum Hyscopifolia, and L. Ala'tum; indige-nous, have similar properties.

LYTTA CÆRULEA, (from λυττω, 'to be mad,') from its irritant properties [?], see Cantharis—L. Gigas mas, see Cantharis—L. Ruficeps, see Cantharis.

LYTTA BU'FIPES. Class, Insecta; Ord. Coleoptera. A variety of Lytta, peculiar to Chili, which is more active as a vesicant than the cantharis, or the Lytta vittata.

LYTTA SEGETUM, see Cantharis—L. Vesicatoria, Cantharis.

LYTTA VITTA'TA, Cantharis vittata, Potato Fly, (F.) Cantharide tache'te. Four species of meloë that blister are found in the United States. The lytta vittata feeds principally upon the potato plant, and, at the proper season of the year, may be collected in immense numbers. The potato fly resembles the cantharides in every property, and is fully equal to them.

M.

M. This letter signifies, in prescriptions, manipulus, 'a handful.' Also, Misce, 'mix.' See Abbreviation.

MAAGONI, Swietenia Mahogani.

MACAHALEF, see Calaf.

MACAPATLL, Smilax sarsaparilla.

MACARO'NI. An alimentary paste, moulded of a cylindrical shape, and formed of rice or wheat flour. It is eaten—when boiled—in soup; prepared with cheese, &c. See Turundæ Italica.

Also, a name formerly given to a pulverulent compound of sugar and glass of antimony, introduced into France by the Italian monks, and employed, at the hospital La Charité, in the treatment of painters' colic.

MACARONS, Biscuits, medicinal.

MACE, see Myristica moschata—m. Reed, Typha latifolia.

MACEDON'ICUM EMPLASTRUM, (μακεδονικον, from Μακεδονια, Macedonia.) An ancient plaster referred to by Aëtius.

MACEDONISUM, (from Macedonia,) Smyr-nium olusatrum.

MACER, ('lean,') Gracilis.

MACERA'TION, Maceratio, (macerare, maceratum, 'to soften by water,') An operation which consists in infusing, usually without heat, a solid substance in a liquid, so as to extract its virtues.

MACERA'TUM, (F.) Macéré. The product of maceration.

MACERONA, Smyrniolum olusatrum.

MACESCERE, Emaciate.

MACHERA, (μαχαηρα,) Culter, Knife, Penis.

MECHERIDION, Machærium.

MACHÆ'RION, Machæ'rius, Machærid'ion, Gladi'olus, (μαχαηρα, 'a sword; μαχη, 'a fight,') A knife. An amputating knife. Rufus of Ephesus asserts, that the Aruspices gave this name to a part of the liver of animals.

MACHÆRIS, (μαχαηρις,) Knife, Novacula.

MACHA'ON, gen. Machao'nis, (Μαχαων.) The son of Esculapius, and a celebrated physician.

MACHAÖ'NIA seu MACHAÖ'NICA ARS, (called after Machaon,) Medicine. The Healing Art.

MACH'INAL, Mechanicus, (μαχανη, 'a contrivance,') This epithet is added especially by French writers to the word movement, to express that the will takes no part in it.

MACHINE', Mach'ina, Machinamen'tum, Mech'anè, Mechane'ma. (same etymon.) A more or less compound instrument or arrangement for putting a body in motion, or for producing any action whatever. Physiologists sometimes use it for the animal body;—as the machine or animal machine.

MACHLOS'YNE, (μαχλοσην, from μαχλος, 'unchaste,') Nymphomania.

MACHOIRE, (from [L.] masticare, 'to chew,') Maxillary bone—m. Diacranienne, Maxillary bone, lower—m. Syncranienne, Maxillary bone, superior.

MACIES, Atrophy, Emaciation—m. Infantum, Tabes mesenterica.

MACILENTUS, (macere, 'to be lean,') Gracilis.

MACIS, (μακις,) see Myristica moschata.

MACRAU'CHEN, gen. Macrau'chenis, (μακραυ'χην, from macro, and αυ'χην, neck,') Lon'go collo præ'ditus. One who has a long neck.

MACRE FLOTTANTE, Trapa natans.

MACRITUDO, (macere, 'to be lean,') Emaciation.

MACRO, (from μακος, 'long,') in composition, long.

MACROBIOSIS, (μακροβίωσις, from macro, and βίος, 'life,') Longevity.

MACROBIOTES, (μακροβιωτής,) Longevity.

MACROBIOTIC, Macrobioticus, Macrobiotus, Macro'bivus, Longē'veus, Macobiotique. That which lives a long time. The macrobiotic art, Macrobiot'ics, (F.) Macrobiotique, is the art of living a long time.

MACROBIOTUS, (μακροβιωτος,) Macriobiotic.

MACROBIUS, (μακροβιος,) Macriobiotic.

MACROCEPHALIA, (macro, and κεφαλή, 'head,') see Capitones.

MACROCEPH'ALUS, (μακροκεφαλος,) Μικροceph'alus. (F.) Macrocephale; Qui magnum caput habet. 'One who has a large head.' This epithet is given to children born with heads so large that they seem to be hydrocephalic; but in which the unusual development is owing to a large size of the brain. Such are supposed to be more than ordinary liable to convulsions. [?] The term has also been applied by Hippocrates to certain Asiatics who had long heads. See Capitones.

MACROCHIRIA, (macro, and χηρ, 'hand,') Monstrosity, characterized by excessive development of the hands.

MACROCO'LLIA, (μακροκωλια, from macro, and κωλον, 'a limb,') Great length of limbs in general, and of the lower limbs in particular.

MACROCOSM, Macrocosmus, (macro, and κοσμος, 'world,') The universe, in contradistinction to Microcosm, which means man.

MACRODACTYLUS, (μακροδακτυλος, from macro, and δακτυλος, 'a finger,') Having long fingers.

MACROGASTER PLATYPUS, (macro, and γαστηρ, 'belly,') Acarus folliculorum.

MACROGLOSSA, (macro, and γλωσσα, 'tongue,') The condition of a Macroglossus.

MACROGLOS'SUS. One who has a very large or prolapsed tongue. See Paraglossa.

MACROMEL'IA, (macro, and μελος, 'limb,') Monstrosity, which consists in the excessive size of a limb.

MACRONOSIE, (μακρονοσια, from macro, and νοσος, 'disease,') Chronic diseases.

MACROPHAL'LUS, (macro, and φалλος, 'the male organ,') A large size of the male organ.

MACROPHO'NUS, (macro, and φωνη, 'voice,') One who has a strong voice.

MACROPHTHAL'MUS, (macro, and οφθαλμος, 'eye,') Having large eyes.

MACROPHYSOCEPH'ALUS, (macro, φυσα, 'air,' and κεφαλη, 'head,') A word used by Ambrose Paré to designate an augmentation of the head of the fetus, produced by a sort of emphysema [?], which retards delivery.

MACROPIPER, (macro, and πιπερι, 'pepper,') Piper longum.

MACROPNE'A, (μακροπνοια, from macro, and πνευ, 'I breathe,') A long and deep respiration.

MACROP'NUS, Macrop'notis, (μακροπνους, and μακροπνοος,) Long-breathed. One who breathes slowly:—a word met with in some authors.

MACROP'ODUS, Mac'ropus, Megal'opus, (μακροπους, from macro, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'foot,') One who has a large foot.

MACROPROS'PIA, (macro, and προσωπον, 'face,') Monstrosity, characterized by excessive size of face.

MACROPUS, Macropodus.

MACROR, Emaciation.

MACROR'RHIS, gen. Macrorrh'inis, (μακρορhis, from macro, and ρhis, or ρην, 'nose,') One who has a long nose.

MACROS'CELES, Orura longa habens; (μακροσελος, from macro, and σελος, 'the leg,') One who has long legs.

MACROSLIE, (μακρος, 'long,') Chronic diseases.

MACROSOMATIA, (macro, and σωμα, gen. σωματος, 'body,') see Giant.

MACROSOMIA, see Giant.

MACRO'TES, (macro, and ους, ωτος, 'an ear,') One who has long ears.

MACROTYS RACEMOSA, (same etymon, from its capsules,) see Actæa racemosa.

MAC'ULA. A spot. Dyschro'ca, Ce'lis, La'ves, (F.) Tache. A permanent discoloration of some portion of the skin, often with a change of its texture. Ephelis, Nævus, Spilus, &c., belong to Macule.

MACULA, Molecule—m. Aurea, see Foramen centrale retinae—m. Cornæ, Caligo—m. Cornæ arcuata, Gerotoxon—m. Cornæ margaritacea, Paralampsis—m. Cribrosa, see Auditory canal, internal—m. Emortuosa, see Suggillation—m. Flava, see Foramen centrale retinae—m. Fusca, Ephelides—m. Germinativa, see Molecule—m. Hepatica, Chloasma materna, Nævus—m. Lenticularis, Ephelides—m. Lutea retinae, see Foramen centrale—m. Matrialis, Nævus—m. Matrieis, Nævus—m. Nigra, see Optic nerve—m. Solaris, Ephelides.

MAC'ULÆ AL'BÆ, (pl. of macula,) M. Lac'tes, In'sulse, Mil'kapots. White spots, seen on scrous membranes, especially on that investing the heart, and which appear to be the result of previous inflammatory action.

MACULÆ ANTE OCULOS VOLITANTES, Metamorphopsia—m. Lactea, M. Albæ.

MACULO'SUS, Mac'ulose, Maculous, Mac'ulated, (F) Maculeux. Spotted. Containing maculæ or spots.

MAD, ([Sax.] gemæb,) Insane—m. Apple plant, Solanum melongena—m. Doctor, Psychiater.

MADAR, Mudar.

MADARO'SIS, (μαδαρωσις, from μαδω, 'to be bald,') Mudaro'ma, Made'sis, Madar'otes, Made'ma, Mad'isis, Deplumatio, Mil'pha, Milpho'sis, Ptilo's, Ptilo'sis, Culcit'ies. Loss of the hair, particularly of the eyelashes.

MADAROTES, (μαδαροτης,) Madarosis.

MADDER, DYERS.' ([Sax. madder,) Rubia.

MADE'IRA, CLIMATE OF. This island is much frequented by pulmonary invalids, on account of the mildness and equability of its climate. Owing, indeed, to the mildness of the winter, and the coolness of the summer, together with the remarkable equality of the temperature during day and night, as well as throughout the year, it has been considered that the climate of Madeira is the finest in the northern hemisphere. Sir James Clark is of opinion that there is no place on the continent of Europe, with which he is acquainted, where the pulmonary invalid could reside with so much advantage, during the whole year, as in Madeira.

MADELCON, (μαδελκων,) Bdellium.

MADEMA, gen. Made'matis, (μαδημα, from μαδω, 'to be bald,') Madarosis.

MADESIS, (μαδσις, from μαδω, 'to be bald,') Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISIS (μαδισις), Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISON SPRINGS, see Georgia, Mineral waters of.

MADISTE'RIMUM, (μαδιστηριον, from μαδισω, 'to make bald,') Trichola'bium, Trichol'abis, Vol'sella. Tweezers. An instrument for extracting hairs.

MADJOUND, Madjoun. A mixture of powdered hemp and honey, used as a narcotic agent, like tobacco, by the Algerines.

MADNESS, Insanity—m. Canine, Hydrophobia—m. Raving or furious, Mania.

MA'DOR, Moisture. A cold sweat.

MADORIUS, Mudar.

MADRE'ORA OCLATA, see Coral.

MADWEED, Scutellaria lateriflora.

M.E.A (μαα), Midwife.

MÆEIA (μαία), Obstetrics.

MÆEUMA (μαίωμα), see Parturition.

MÆEUTICA ARS. Obstetrics.

MÆIA (μαία), Obstetrics.

MAESA PICTA, Saoria.

MÆUSIS (μαύσις), Parturition.

MÆUTRIA (μαύτρια), Midwife.

MAGDAL'IA, (μαγδαλία, from μασσειν, 'to knead,') Magdal'oon, Mag'dalis. 'Crumb of bread.' Any medicine, as a pill, formed of crumb of bread. A roll of plaster.

MAGEIRICE, (μαγειρικη [τεχνη].) Culinary art.

MAGGOT PIMPLE, see Aene.

MA'GIS (μαγος, 'a cake,') A sort of cake, composed of cloves, garlic and cheese, beaten together.

MAGISTERIUM, Magistery—m. Bismuthi, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Jalapæ, Resin of Jalap—m. Marcasite, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Plumbi, Plumbi subcarbonas—m. Sulphuris, Sulphur lotum—m. Tartari purgans, Potassæ acetas.

MAG'ISTRY, Magiste'rium, (magister, 'a master,') Certain precipitates from saline solutions were formerly so called; as well as other medicines, the preparation of which was kept secret.

MAGISTRY OF BISMUTH, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MAG'ISTRAL or MAGIS'TRAL, Magistra'lis. Extempora'neous. A prescription is so called—Form'ula magistra'lis seu extempora'neæ—which is prepared extemporaneously; an offic'inal prescription—Form'ula officina'lis—being such as has been prepared for some time before it is prescribed.

MAGISTRANTIA, (magistrare, 'to rule,') Imperatoria.

MAG'MA, gen. Mag'matis, (μαγμα,) (F.) Marc. The thick residuum, obtained after expressing certain substances to extract the fluid parts from them. The grounds which remain after treating a substance with water, alcohol, or any other menstruum. Also, a salve of a certain consistence.

MAGMA OF MARC OF OLIVES is the residuum after the greatest possible quantity of oil has been extracted from olives by making them ferment. It was formerly employed as a stimulant, under the form of a bath—to which the name Bain de Marc was given by the French.

MAGMA OF MARC OF GRAPES, Bry'tia, was once employed for the same purposes.

MAGMA RÉTICULÉ, 'reticulated magma.' The gelatiniform substance found between the chorion and amnion in the early period of embryonic existence.

MAGNES, gen. Magne'tis, (μαγνης), Magnet.

MAGNES ARSENICA'LIS. (Sulphur, White arsenic, and Common antimony, of each equal parts. Mix by fusion.) It is corrosive. See Magnetic plaster.

MAGNES EPILEPSIÆ, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MAGNE'SIA, Abarna'has, Cham'bar, Ter'ra ama'ra, Magnesia ter'ra, Talc earth; (from magnes, or from Magnesia in Lydia.) An alkaline earth whose metallic base is magnesium. The term Magnesia was employed, of old, for any substance that seemed to have the power of attracting some principle from the air. At present it is restricted to—

MAGNESIA, M. usta seu calcina'ta, Cal'cined Magnesia, Ox'ide of magnesium, (F.) Magnésie brûlée, Magnésie, M. Caustique. (This is obtained by exposing carbonate of magnesia to a strong heat, to drive off the carbonic acid.) It is inodorous taste very slightly bitter; in the form of a white, light, spongy, soft powder. S. g. 2-3; requiring 2000 times its weight of water for its solution. It is antacid, and laxative when it meets with acid in the stomach. Dose, gr. x to ʒj in water or milk.

Hen'ry's, Hus'band's, and Ell'is's Magnesia, are dense forms of this preparation.

A light Magnesia, Magne'sia le'vis, differing from the above only in its greater levity, is official in the British Pharmacopœia (1864).

MAGNESIA, ACETATE OF, Magnesie acetas—m. Aerata, Magnesie carbonas—m. Alba, M. carbonas—m. Calcinata, M. usta—m. Citrate of, Magnesie citras—m. Dinneford's, see Magnesia, fluid—m. Edinburgensis, M. carbonas.

MAGNESIA, EFFERVES'cing, Mox'on's. (Magnes. carb.; M. Sulphat.; Sodæ bicarbon., Acid tartaric. aa partes æquales; to be pulverized, well dried, mixed, and enclosed in bottles hermetically sealed.) Dose, a teaspoonful in half a tumbler of water, drunk in a state of effervescence.

MAGNESIA, ELLIS'S, see Magnesia.

MAGNESIA, FLU'ID, Under this name a preparation is designated, which consists of a solution of carbonate of magnesia in carbonated water. It is also termed car'bonated magne'sia wa'ter, a'e-rated mag'nesia wa'ter, and conden'sed solut'ion of magne'sia, (F.) Eau magnésienne. Dinneford's Magnesia is a solution of this kind.

MAGNESIA, HENRY'S, Magnesia—m. Husband's, see Magnesia—m. Mitis, Magnesie carbonas—m. Muriate of, Magnesi chloridum—m. Nigra, Manganese, black oxide of.

MAGNESIA OPALI'NA. A name given by Léméry to a mixture of equal parts of antimony, nitrate of potassa, and chloride of sodium, decrepitated. It has emetic properties, but is not used.

MAGNESIA SALIS AMARI, Magnesie carbonas—m. Salis Ebsdamensis, Magnesie carbonas—m. Saturni, Antimonium—m. Solution of, condensed, M. fluid—m. Subcarbonate of, Magnesie carbonas—m. Subcarbonate of, hydrated, Magnesie carbonas—m. Terra, Magnesia—m. Vitriolata, Magnesie sulphas—m. Usta, Magnesia—m. and Soda, sulphate of, see Soda, sulphate of.

MAGNE'SIÆ ACE'TAS, Ac'etate of Magnesie. (This salt is prepared by saturating carbonate of magnesia with acetic acid.) It is of syrupy consistence, and about four ounces is a dose. It acts like citrate of magnesia.

MAGNE'SIÆ CARBO'NAS seu Subcarbonas, Magne'sia (Dublin), M. æra'ta seu carbo'nica seu al'ba, M. Subcarbo'nica seu M'itis seu Edinburgen'sis seu Sal'is Ebsdamen'sis seu Salis ama'ri, Carbo'nas magne'sicum, Lac ter'æ, Hypocarb'onas magne'sie, Terra ama'ra æra'ta seu absorbens mine'ra'lis seu talco'sa oxyanthrac'o'ides, Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, Hy'drated Subcar'bonate of Magnesia (F.) Sous-carbonate ou Carbonate de Magnésie, Magnésie aérée ou blanche ou crayeuse ou crée ou effervescente ou moienne ou Anglaise, Onice ou Terre magnésienne, Lait de Terre, Panacée Anglaise, Poudre de Sentinelli ou de Valentini ou du Comte de Palme ou de Zwinger. (Prepared from sulphate of magnesia by subcarbonate of potassa.) It is inodorous; insipid; light; white; spongy; opaque; effervescing with acids; insoluble in water. Properties the same as the last; but the carbonic acid, when set free, sometimes causes unpleasant gastric distension.

A heavy and a light carbonate of magnesia—Magne'siæ Carbo'nas (M. C. Ponderosum, Ph. D.) and Magne'siæ carbo'nas le'vis are official in the British Pharmacopœia (1864).

MAGNE'SIÆ CI'TRAS, Cit'rate of Magnesia, (F.) Citrate de Magnésie. A saline preparation, formed by saturating a solution of citric acid with either magnesia or its carbonate. Dose, an ounce. It is devoid of the bitter taste of the magnesian salts.

A solution in water, or in mineral water, sweetened with syrup, and acidulated with citric acid, makes an agreeable purgative. A simple solution in water has been called magnesium lemonade. In the effervescent state, it is the effervescent magnesian lemonade. The Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851) has a form for the LIQUOR MAGNESIÆ CITRATIS, Solution of Citrate of Magnesia. (Carbonate of magnesia, ℥v; Citric acid, ℥viiss; Syrup of citric acid, f℥ij; Water, a sufficient quantity. Dissolve the citric acid in f℥iv of water, and add ℥iv of the carbonate of magnesia, previously rubbed with f℥iij of water. When the reaction has ceased, filter into a strong f℥xij glass bottle, into which the syrup of citric acid has been previously introduced. Rub the remaining carbonate of magnesia with f℥ij of water, and pour the mixture into the bottle, which must be well corked, and secured with twine; and shake the mixture occasionally until it becomes transparent. A modified form is introduced into the Ph. U. S. for 1863.) As a cathartic the whole of this may be taken.

MAGNESIÆ HYPOCARBONAS, M. carbonas—m. Subearbonas, M. carbonas.

MAGNESIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphas Magnesiæ purificata, Magnesia vitriolata, Sul catharticus amarus seu catharticum amarum seu amarum seu Anglicanum seu Anglicum seu Epsomensis seu catharticus Anglicanus seu Sedlicensis seu Ebsdamenis seu Seydschitzenis, Terra amara sulphurica, Vitriolicum Magnesiæ, Sulphate of Magnesia, Epsom Salt, Bitter purging Salt, (F.) Sulfate de magnésie, Sel admirable de Lénévry, Sel d'Égra. (Generally obtained from seawater.) Its taste is bitter and disagreeable. It is soluble in an equal quantity of water at 60°. It is purgative and diuretic. Dose, as a cathartic, ℥ss to ℥ij.

MAGNESIÆ VITROLICUM, Magnesiæ sulphas.

MAGNESIAN LEMONADE, Magnesiæ citras.

MAGNÉSIE AÉRÉE, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Anglaise, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Blauche, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Brûlée, Magnesia usta—m. Carbonate de, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Caus-tique, Magnesia usta—m. Citræ de, Magnesiæ citras—m. Crayeuse, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Douce, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Effervescente, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Moyenne, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Souscarbonate de, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Sulfate de, Magnesiæ sulphas.

MAGNESIÏ CHLORIDUM, Chloride of Magnesium, Muriate of Magnesia. This bitter deliquescent salt has been given as a mild and effective cholagogue cathartic, in the dose of half an ounce to the adult. Being deliquescent, it may be kept dissolved in its weight of water.

MAGNESIUM, see Magnesia—m. Chloride of, Magnesiï chloridum—m. Oxide of, Magnesia usta.

MAGNET, Magnes, Magnete, Magnitia, Fer-rum Magnes attractivum, Siderites, Sideritis, La'pis heracleus seu Syderitis seu nancticus, Ad'ament, (from Magnes, its discoverer, or from Magnesia, where it is said to have been first found.) (F.) Aimant, Pierre d'Aimant. The magnet or loadstone. An amorphous, oxydulated ore of iron, which exerts an attraction on unmagnetized iron, and has the property of exhibiting poles; that is, of pointing by one of its extremities to the north. This ore, by constant or long rubbing, communicates its properties to iron; and thus artificial magnets are formed. Magnetic ore is found in many countries, and particularly in the island of Elba. The magnet is sometimes used to extract specula of iron from the eye or from wounds. It has been employed as an antispasmodic; but acts only through the imagination. The powder has been given as a tonic. In Pharmacy, it is used to purify iron filings. It attracts the iron, and the impurities remain behind. It formerly entered, as an ingredient, into several plasters, to draw bullets and heads of arrows from the body—as the Emplastrum divinum Nicola'i, the Emplastrum nigricum of Augsburg, the Opodeldoch, and Attractivum of Paracelsus, &c.

MAGNETES (μαγνητις), Magnet.

MAGNETIC, Magnétique, (F.) Magnétique. That which belongs or relates to magnetism;—mineral or animal.

MAGNETIC FLUID. A name given to the imponderable fluid to which the magnet owes its virtues. By analogy it is applied to a particular principle, supposed to be the source of organic actions, which affects, it is conceived, the nervous system principally, and is susceptible of being transmitted from one living body to another, by contact or simple approximation, and especially under the influence of fixed volition. See Magnetism, Animal.

MAGNETIC PLASTER. A plaster, at present, not used. It has for its base a mixture, called Magnæ arsenicalis; formed of equal parts of antimony, sulphur and arsenic melted together in a glass cucurbit. The name Magnetic plaster was, likewise, given to one that contained powdered magnet.

MAGNETINUS, Potassæ supertartras impurus.

MAGNÉTISEUR, Magnetizer.

MAGNETISM, ANIMAL, Mesmerism, Path-etism, Psycheism, Neurogama, Bioga'mia, Biomagnetismus, Zoömagnetismus, Exon'eurism (proposed by Mr. H. Mayo), Anthropomagnetismus, Gar'gale, Gargalis'mus, Gar'galus. Properties attributed to the influence of a particular principle, which has been compared to that which characterizes the magnet. It is supposed to be transmitted from one person to another, and to impress peculiar modifications on organic action, especially on that of the nerves. The discussions, to which this strange belief has given rise, are by no means terminated. There is no evidence whatever of the existence of such a fluid. Highly impressible persons can be thrown into a kind of hysterical or 'magnetic' sleep and somnambulism, designated by Mr. Braid, hypnotism, neurohypnotism, and nervous sleep, and at times called, after him, Braid'ism; but farther than this, the efforts of the magnetizer cannot reach. It is a mode of action upon the nerves through the medium of the senses.

MAGNETIZATION, Mesmerization.

MAGNETIZED, Mesmerized.

MAGNETIZER, Mesmerizer.

MAGNETICOÉLECTRICITY, see Electro-magnetism.

MAGNETIS (μαγνητις), Magnet.

MAGNITUDO CORPORIS, ('size of the body,') Stature—m. Gigantea, see Giant.

MAGNOC, Jatropha manihot.

MAGNOLIA FRAGRANS, (after P. Magnol, a Professor of Botany at Montpellier.) M. glauca.

MAGNOLIA GLAUCA, Magnolia, M. fragrans, Small Magnolia, Swamp Sassafras, Elk Bark, Indian Bark, White Laurel, Sweet Bay, Beaver Wood, Beaver Tree, White Bay, Cincho'na of Virginia, Castor Bay, Sweet or Laurel magnolia, (F.) Magnolier glauque. Ord. Magnoliaceæ. The bark is possessed of tonic properties, resembling those of casarilla, canella, &c. The same may be said of the Magnolia tripet'ala seu Umbrel'la, Umbrel'la tree; the M. acuminata or Cucumber tree, the M. grandiflora and M. macrophylla, Laurel, Elkwood, Silverleaf, Big leaf, White Bay, Beavertree, Elk Bark, Big bloom.

Magnolia (Ph. U. S.), is the bark of Magnolia glauca, M. acuminata, and M. tripet'ala.

MAGNOLIER GLAUQUE, Magnolia glauca.

MAGNUM DEI DONUM, ('great gift of God,') Cinchona.

MAGNUM OS, ('great bone,') The third bone of the lower row of the carpus, reckoning from the thumb. It is the largest bone of the carpus; and is, also, called Os capitulum; (F.) Grand Os.

MAG'RUMS. A popular name in the State of New York for a singular convulsive affection, which resembles chorea. It rarely, however, occurs before the adult age; never ceases spontaneously, and when fully developed, is devoid of any paroxysmal character.

MAGUEY, Agave Americana.

MAHAGONI, Swietenia mahogani.

MAHMOUDY, Convolvulus scammonia.

MAHOGAN-FEBRIFUGE, Swietenia febrifuga.

MAHOGANY, Gymnocladus Canadensis, Swietenia mahogani. Also, a drink in use among the Cornish fishermen of England, which is made of two parts of gin and one part treacle, well beaten together. An analogous drink—a mixture of whisky and honey, (see Mead, under Hydromel,) is known in the Highlands of Scotland by the name Ath'ol por'ridge.

MAHOGANY, MOUNTAIN, Betula lenta.

MAHOGANY TREE, Swietenia mahogani.

MAHURA, Covolum.

MAIANTHEMUM, (Maius, May, and αυξημον, 'a flower,') Convallaria maialis.

MALADRERIE, (from mal, and ludrerie.) Ludrerie.

MALADY, ENGLISH, Hypochondriasis.

MALEŒ OS, (malum, 'an apple,' so called from its roundness.) Zygo'ma, Os mala'rè seu Juga'tè seu Jugamen'tum seu Gen'ne seu Zygomat'icum seu Hypo'pium seu Subocula'rè seu Pudi'cum, (F.) Os Mala'ire ou Zygomatique ou de la Pommette. The cheek or malar bone. This bone is situate at the lateral and superior part of the face; and constitutes the zygomatic region of the cheek. It is irregularly quadrilateral. Its outer surface is convex, covered by muscles and skin, and pierced with canals, called malar, through which vessels and nerves pass. Its upper surface is concave, and forms part of the orbit. Its posterior surface is concave, and enters into the composition of the temporal fossa. This bone is thick and cellular. It is articulated with the frontal, temporal, sphenoid, and superior maxillary bones, and is developed by a single point of ossification.

The part of the face made prominent by it, the French call Pommette.

MALAG'MA, gen. Malag'matis, (μαλαγμα, from μαλακω, 'I soften,') An emollient cataplasm, and, in general, every local application which enjoys the property of softening organic tissues.

MAL'IS, (μαλῖς), Malias'mus, Cuta'neous termina'tion, Helmintho'cus. The cuticle or skin infested with animalcules.—Phtheiri'asis, Parasiti's-mus superfi'ciei. In Persia, this affection is produced by the Guinea worm; in South America, by the Chigre; and in Europe, occasionally by the Louse. See Equinia, and Phtheiriasis.

MALIS DRACUNCULUS, Dracunculus—m. Gordii, Dracunculus—m. Pediculi, Phtheiriasis.

MALLENDERS, Malandria.

MALLE'OLAR, Malleola'ris, (from malleolus.) (F.) Malléolaire. Belonging or relating to the ankles.

MALLEOLAR ARTERIES are two branches furnished by the anterior tibial about the instep; the one—the internal—passes transversely behind the tendon of the tibialis anticus, to be distributed in the vicinity of the malleolus internus;—the other—the external—glides behind the tendons of the extensor communis digitorum pedis and the peroneus brevis, and sends its branches to the parts which surround the outer ankle, as well as to the outer region of the tarsus.

MALLE'OLUS, (dim. of malleus, 'a mallet.') Racet'a, Raset'a, Ras'cha, Raset'a, Rose'ta, Sphy'ra, Sphyron, Tal'us, Diab'ebos, Tale'olus, Pe'za, An'kle, (Prov.) An'cler, An'clet, An'cliff, An'clow, An'kley, Rick, (Sc.) Cute, Coot, Hancleth, Heatherclu, (F.) Malléole, Cheville du Pied. The two projections formed by the bones of the leg at their inferior part. The inner belongs to the tibia; the outer to the fibula. The ankles afford attachment to ligaments; and each has a sort of gutter, in which certain tendons slide. See Malleus.

MAL'LET, Malle'olus, (F.) Maillet. A kind of hammer, used with a gouge for removing or cutting bones, in certain surgical and anatomical operations.

MAL'LEUS, ('a mallet,') Malle'olus, Ossic'ulum malle'olo assimila'tum, (F.) Marteau. The longest and outermost of the four small bones of the ear. It is situate at the outer part of the tympanum, and is united to the membrana tympani. It has, 1. An oval head, which is articulated behind with the incus, and is supported by a narrow part called the neck: this has, anteriorly, a long apophysis, which is engaged in the glenoid fissure, and is called the Apophysis or Process, Processus grac'ilis, of Rau. It affords attachment to the anterior seu externus mallei muscle. 2. A handle, which forms an obtuse angle with the neck, and corresponds to the membrane of the tympanum, which it seems to draw inwards. It is furnished at its upper extremity with a process—the processus bre'vis, to which the internus mal'lei is attached. This bone is developed by a single point of ossification.

MALLEUS, Equinia—M. farciminosus, see Equinia—m. Slender Process of the Grêle apophyse du marteau.

MALLOW, COMMON, Malva—m. Compound decoction of, Decoctum malvæ compositum—m. Indian, Abutilon Avicennæ—m. Yellow, Abutilon Avicennæ.

MALLS, Rubeola.

MAL'MEDY, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Malmedy is a town in Rhenish Prussia, between Spa and Coblenz. In its immediate vicinity are several acidulous chalybeate springs.

MALOBATHRUM, (μαλοβαθρον), Malobathrum.

MALOGRANATUM, (malum, 'an apple,') Punica granatum, 'a grain,'—having grainlike seeds.) Punica granatum.

MALPIGHI, ACINI OF, Corpora Malpighiana.

MALPIG'HIA MOUREL'LA (after Malpighi), (F.) Mourellier, Simarouba faux. The bark of this shrub—a native of Cayenne—is reputed to be febrifuge, and useful in diarrhœa.

MALPIGHIAN BODIES, Corpora Malpighiana—m. b. Inflammation of the Kidney, Bright's disease of the—m. b. of the Spleen, see Spleen—m. Vesicles, see Pulmo.

MALPRAX'IS, Malu praxia, Malum reg'imen. Bad management or treatment.

MALT, (Sax. mealt.) (μαλττα, 'I soften.' [?]) By'nè, Mal'tum, Hor'dei mal'tum, Bra'sium, (F.) Drèche. Barley made to germinate, for the purpose of forming beer. It has been recommended in medicine as antiscorbutic, antiscrofulous, &c.

MALT SPIRIT. A spirit distilled from malt. It is the basis of most of the spirituous cordials.

MAL'TA, CLY'MATE OF. The climate of Malta is pretty equable, the range of temperature in the twenty-four hours being rarely more than 6°. The air is almost always dry and clear. The most disagreeable wind is the sirocco, which is the source of more or less suffering to the pulmonary invalid. The winter climate is favourable. Dr. Liddell thinks that no place which he has seen in the south of Europe can compete with Malta for a mild, dry, bracing air in November, December, and part of January; and during the other winter and spring months he thinks it is equal to any of them.

MAL'THA, (μαλθα), Mal'thè, (μαλττω, 'I soften.') Wax, particularly soft wax.

MALTHAXIS, (μαλθαξις), Mollities.

MALTHE, (μαλθη), Maltha.

MALTUM, Malt.

MALUS, ('an apple tree,') Pyrus malus—m. Aurantia major, Citrus aurantium—m. Communis, Pyrus malus—m. Dasyphylla, Pyrus malus.

MALUS IN'DICA, Bilumbi biting-bing of Bontius. Ord. Rosaceæ. The juice of this East India tree is cooling, and is drunk as a cure for fevers. The leaves, boiled and made into a cataplasm with rice, are famed in all sorts of tumours. The juice, mixed with arrack, is drunk for the cure of diarrhœa. The ripe fruit is eaten as a delicacy, and the unripe is made into a pickle for the use of the table.

MALUS LIMONIA ACIDA, see Citrus medica—m. Medica, see Citrus medica—m. Sylvestris, Pyrus malus.

MAL'VA, (from μαλαγ, 'soft,') Mal'væ sylves'tris seu vulg'aris, Com'mon Mal'low, (F.) Mauve sauvage. Ord. Malvacæ. The leaves and flowers are chiefly used in fomentations, cataplasms, and emollient enemata. Its properties are demulcent.

Malva rotundifolia, Mal'achè, Mal'ochè, has like virtues, as well as the other varieties.

MALVAT DE LANGUEDOC, see Anthrax.

MALVAVICUM, (malva, and vicum, 'bird lime,') Althæa.

MALVERN, WATERS OF. The village of Great Malvern (pronounced Mal'vern), in Worcestershire, England, has for many years been celebrated for a spring of remarkable purity, which has acquired the name of the Holy well. It is a carbonated water, containing carbonates of soda and iron, sulphate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and is chiefly used externally in cutaneous affections.

MAMA PIAN. (F.) Maman pian. An ulcer of a bad aspect, which is the commencement of the pian, and which, after having destroyed the flesh, extends to the bones. It is also called the Mother of Pians, (F.) La mère des pians.

MAM'EI, Mam'oe, Mon'in or Tod'dy tree. From incisions made in the branches of this West Indian tree, a copious discharge of pellucid liquor occurs, which is called Momin or Toddy wine. It is diuretic, and is esteemed to be a good antilithic and lithontriptic. See Mammea Americana.

MAMELLE, (dim. of mamma,) see Mamma.

MAMELON, Nipple.

MAMELONNE, Mammillated.

MAMELONS DU REIN, Papillæ of the kidney.

MAMILLA, Mammula, (dim. of mamma,) see Mamma.

MAMILLAIRE, Mammillary.

MAMILLARY, Mammillary.

MAM'MA, (mamma, one of the earliest cries of the infant, ascribed to a desire for food.) Mas'thos, Mas'tus, Maz'os, The'te, Tit'thé, Tit'this, Tit'thos, Tit'ty, Ru'ma, Rumis, U'ber, Nu'trix, Gemi-po'ma. The fé'male breast, Pap, Pappe, (Mam'milla, Mam'illa being the male breast), (F.) Mamelle. A glandular organ proper to a class of animals—the mammalia—and intended for the secretion of milk. The mammæ exist in both sexes, but they acquire a much greater size in the female, especially during pregnancy and lactation. In women, before the age of puberty, the breasts are but little developed. At this period, however, towards the central part of each breast, the skin suddenly changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint. It is of a reddish brown in women who have suckled several children. This circle has a rugous appearance, owing to the presence of sebaceous glands, and is called Are'ola or Anre'ola. These glands—Tu'bercles of the Are'ola of Sir Astley Cooper—furnish an unctuous fluid for defending the nipple from the action of the mouth of the sucking infant. In the midst of the aureola is the nipple, a conoidal eminence, of a rosy tint, susceptible of erection, and at the surface of which the galactophorous ducts open. Besides the skin covering them, the breasts are also composed of a layer of fatty areolar tissue, more or less thick; of a large gland; excretory ducts; vessels, nerves, &c. See Mammary.

In the animal the mamma is called the U'd'er, U'ber, the Bag, (Prov.) Yewer.

The breasts plus the space between are called the boosm, si'nus, col'pus. At times these terms are restricted to the space between the breasts. (F.) Sein.

Mamma also means a nurse.

MAMMAIRE, (from mamma,) Mammary.

MAMMAL, pl. Mammalia, Mam'mifer, Mammif'erous animal, (from mamma.) An animal that suckles its young.

MAM'MARY, Mamma'rius, (F.) Mammaire. Relating to the breasts.

MAMMARY ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MAMMARY ARTERIES are three in number.

They are distinguished into—1. The Internal Mam'mary, Ar'teria sterna'lis, A. Sous-sternal (Ch.), Internal thora'ic. It arises from the subclavian, and descends obliquely inwards, from its origin to the cartilage of the third rib. Below the diaphragm it divides into two branches; the one external, the other internal. From its origin until its bifurcation, it gives branches to the muscles and glands of the neck, to the thymus, mediastinum, pericardium, and œsophagus. In each intercostal space it gives off internal and external musculo-cutaneous branches, and also on each side the superior diaphragmatic. Its two ultimate branches are distributed on the parietes of the abdomen, and anastomose with the external mammary, intercostal, lumbar, circumflexa ilii, and epigastric arteries. 2. The External Mam'mary Ar'teries are two in number, and are distinguished into superior and inferior. The superior external mam'mary, First of the thora'ics (Ch.), Superior external thora'ic, Superior thora'ic, is furnished by the axillary artery. It descends obliquely forwards between the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, to which it is distributed by a considerable number of branches. The inferior external mam'mary, the second of the thora'ics (Ch.), Long or inferior thora'ic, arises from the axillary artery, a little below the preceding. It descends vertically over the lateral part of the thorax; curves afterwards inwards; becomes subcutaneous, and divides into a number of branches, which surround the breast. It gives branches to the pectoralis major, serratus major anticus, the intercostal muscles, the glands of the axilla, and the integuments of the breast.

MAMMARY GLAND, Glan'dula lactifera, Mastaden, is the secretory organ of the milk. It is situate in the substance of the breast, to which it gives shape. The tissue of this gland results from the assemblage of lobes of different size, united intimately by a dense areolar tissue. Each of these is composed of several lobules, formed of round granulations, of a rosy white colour, and of the size of a poppy seed. The glandular grains give rise to the radicles of the excretory canals of the mamma, which are called galactophorous or lactiferous. These excretory vessels unite in ramusculi, rami, and in trunks of greater or less size; collect towards the centre of the gland; are tortuous, very extensible, and semi-transparent. All terminate in sinuses, situate near the base of the nipple, which are commonly from 15 to 18 in number. These sinuses are very short, conical, and united by areolar tissue. From their summits a fasciculus of new ducts sets out, which occupy the centre of the nipple and open separately at its surface. The arteries of the mammary gland come from the thora'ic, axillary, intercostal, and internal mammary. The veins accompany the arteries; the nerves are furnished by the intercostals and brachial plexus; the lymphatic vessels are very numerous, and form two layers. They communicate with those of the thorax, and pass into the axillary ganglions.

MAMMARY SARCO'MA, Mas'toid sarco'ma of Abernethy, Emphy'ma sarco'ma mamma'rum. A tumour, of the colour and texture of the mammary gland; dense and whitish; sometimes softer and brownish; often producing an extirpation a malignant ulcer with indurated edges. Found in various parts of the body and limbs.

MAMMARY VEINS follow the same course as the arteries, and have received the same denominations. The internal mam'mary vein of the right side opens into the superior cava; that of the left into the corresponding subclavian vein. The external mam'mary veins open into the axillary vein.

MAM'MEA AMERICANA, (F.) Abricot sauge. Ord. Guttifere. The systematic name of the tree on which the mam'mee or mamei fruit grows. This fruit has a delightful flavour when ripe, and is much cultivated in Jamaica, where it is generally sold in the markets as one of the best fruits of the island. See Mammea Americana.

MAMMEA' TA, Mammo'sa, (from mamma.) One who has large breasts.

MAMMELLA, (dim. of mamma.) Nipple.

MAMMILLAIRE, Mammillary.
MAMMILLARIS, (from mammilla.) Mastoid.
MAMMILLARY, Mammilla'ris, (from mammilla, (F.) Mammillaire, Mammillaire.) Having the shape of a nipple. See Mastoid.

MAMMILLARY EM'INENCE is a name given, 1. To more or less marked prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, which correspond to the anfractuositities of the cranium. 2. To white, round, medullary tubercles of the size of a pea, situate at the base of the brain, behind the gray substance from which the Tige pituitaire of the French anatomists arises. These Mammillary Tubercles, Corpora albican'tia seu candican'tia seu mammilla'ria seu risiformia, Bulbi fornicis, Mammillæ seu Globuli medullares, Prominentiæ albican'tes, Processus mammilla'ares cer'ebrî, Protensio'es glandula'res, Eminentie candican'tes, Priorum crurum fornicis bulbi, Willis's Glands, (F.) Bulbes de la voûte à trois piliers, Tubercles pisiformes (Ch.), are united to each other by a small grayish band, which corresponds with the third ventricle. They receive the anterior prolongations of the fornix.

Some ancient anatomists, taking the nervous trunks, to which Willis first gave the name of olfactory nerves, for simple appendages of the brain, called them on account of their shape, Caruncule mammilla'ares. Vesalius, Fallopius, Columbus, and several others, termed them Processus mammilla'ares cer'ebrî ad na'es. They have also been called Trigona olfactoria.

MAMMILLATED, (F.) Mamelonné. That which has mammiform projections on its surface.

MAMMILLATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.
MAMMITE, Mastitis.
MAMMITIS, (mamma, and itis), Mastitis.
MAMMOSA, Mammeata.

MAM'MULA, (dim. of mamma.) Manilla. A small breast.

MAMOE, Mamei.
MAN, (Sax. man or mon,) Aner, Anthropos, Homo.

MANAKIN, (dim. of man.) Fantom.

MANE, Arachis hypogæa.

MANGANESE, Mangane'sium, Manga'nium, Man'ganum, ([G.] Manganerz, 'Mangan earth,') [?]. A metal, which is pretty abundant in nature in an oxidized state. It is of a grayish-white colour, resembling some varieties of cast iron, is hard and brittle, and destitute of magnetic properties. Specific gravity about 8.

MANGANESE, BLACK OXIDE OF, Mangane'sii oxidum seu oxidum nigrum seu Binox'idum, Tetrox'idum of manganese, Magne'sia nigra, Mangane'sium vitrario'rum seu oxydatum nativum seu nigrum seu ochraceum nigrum seu oxydatum nativum, Man'ganum oxydatum nativum, Molybdaenum magne'sii, Oxo'des man'gani nativæ, Peroxydum magne'sii nigrum nativum, Superoxydum man'gancium, (F.) Oxyde noir de manganese. This oxide is not much used in medicine. It has been advised to dust the affected parts, in tinea capitis, with the powder. It was officinal in the Edinburgh pharmacopœia, and is used in preparing chlorine, solution of chlorine, and solution of chlorinated soda.

MANGANESE, SALTS OF, see Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANESE OXYDE NOIR DE, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANESE, SULPHATE OF, Mangane'sii Sulphas seu Protoxydi Sulphas, Sulphate of Protoxide of Manganese. A rosecoloured and very soluble salt, isomorphous with sulphate of magnesia. It is prepared on a large scale for the use of the dyer, by heating, in a close vessel, peroxide of manganese and coal, and dissolving the impure protoxide, thus obtained, in sulphuric acid, with the addition of a little chlorohydric acid towards the end of the process. The solution is evaporated to dryness, and again exposed to a red heat, by which the persulphate of iron is decomposed. Water then dissolves the pure sulphate of manganese, leaving the oxide of iron behind.

This salt has been recommended as a cholagogue, in doses of a drachm or two.

The salts of manganese have been prescribed in chlorosis and amenorrhœa, and as substitutes for chalybeates generally. The subcarbonate and the oxide have been chiefly employed. The chloride is the basis of Mr. James Young's disinfectant.

MANGE, ([F.] démangeaison, 'itching,') Scabies ferina.

MANGIFERA INDICA, M. domestica, (man-go, 'the fruit,' and fero, 'I bear.')

The Man'go tree, (F.) Manguier. Ord. Terebinthaceae. A tree cultivated over Asia, and in South America. Mangos, when ripe, are juicy, of a good flavour, and so fragrant as to perfume the air to a considerable distance. They are eaten, either raw or preserved with sugar. From the expressed juice a wine is prepared; and the remainder of the kernel can be reduced to an excellent flour for bread.

MANGO TREE, Mangifera Indica.

MANGONISATIO, (from μαγανω, 'a deception,') Falsification.

MANGONIUM, Falsification.

MANGOSTAN, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGOSTANA, Garcinia mangostana—m. Cambogia, Garcinia cambogia—m. Garcinia, Garcinia mangostana.

MANHOOD, Adult age.

MANIA, (μανία,) Furor, Hemianthro'phia, Fu-ror seu Ephro'nia seu Delir'ium ma'nia, Insu'nia, Delir'ium mani'acum seu furio'sum, Ma'nia uni-versa'lis, Yea'nia ma'nia, (F.) Manie, Hyper-phrénie, Ra'ving or furious mad'ness, (Sc.) Wod-nes, (from μωγνα, 'I am furious.')

With some, it means insanity. Disorder of the intellect, in which there is erroneous judgment or hallucination, which impels to acts of fury. If the raving be not directed to a single object, it is mania properly so called; if to one object, it constitutes monomania, which term is, however, usually given to melancholy. Mania attacks adults chiefly; and women more frequently than men. The prognosis is unfavourable. About onethird never recover; and they who do are apt to relapse. Separation is one of the most effective means of treatment, with attention to the corporeal condition and every thing that can add to the mental comfort of the patient, and turn his thoughts away from the subjects of his delusion. In the violence of the paroxysms, recourse must be had to the strait waistcoat, the shower bath, &c. Separation should be continued for some weeks during convalescence, with the view of preventing a relapse.

MANIA, DANC'ING. Danc'ing plague. A form of convulsion, which has appeared, at various times, epidemically under the form of St. Vitus's dance, St. John's dance, Tarantism, Hysteria, Tigretier (in Abyssinia), and diseased sympathy; and which has been fully described by Hecker in his 'Epidemics of the Middle Ages.' See Convul-sionnaire.

MANŒUVRE (F.), anglicized, and pronounced manœvre, (main, 'the hand,' and œuvre, 'work.')

A dexterous movement. Applied in France to the practice of surgical or obstetrical operations on the dead body or phantom; Opera'tio chirur-gica seu obstet'rica.

MANSANA ARBOREA, see Jujube.

MANSFORD'S PLATES, see Galvanism.

MANSORIUS, (mandere, manum, 'to chew,')

Buccinator.

MANSTUPRA'TIO, (manus, 'the hand,' and stuprare, stupratum, 'to ravish,')

Masturbation.

MANTELE, ('a napkin,')

Bandage (body).

MANTIA, Man'tica, Man'ticæ, in English, mancy; a common suffix, from μανεια, denoting 'divination;' Divina'tio, Prædivinatio, Præsi'gium.

MANTILE, ('a napkin,')

Bandage (body).

MANTLE, (mantelam, 'a cloak,')

Panniculus carnosus.

MANUBRIUM, (from manus.) The handle of any thing:—as manu'brum mal'lei, pet'olus mal'lei, 'the handle of the malleus.'

MANUBRIUM, Chasse—m. Manus, Radius.

MANUBRIUM STERNI. The uppermost broad part of the sternum.

MANULUVIUM, (manus, 'the hand, and lavo, 'I wash,')

Bath, hand, Maniluvium.

MAN'US. gen. Man'us, Choir, Chir, Instrumen-tum instrumento'rum, Hand, Paw, (F.) Main. The part which terminates the upper extremity in man, and which is inservient to prehension and touch. It extends from the fold of the wrist to the extremity of the fingers. The hand is sustained by a bony skeleton, composed of a number of pieces, movable on each other; of muscles, tendons, cartilages, ligaments, vessels, nerves, &c. It is divided into three parts—the carpus or wrist, the metacarpus, and fingers. Its concave surface is called the palm; the convex surface the back of the hand. The facility of being able to oppose the thumb to the fingers in order to seize objects forms one of the distinctive characters of the human hand.

MANUS CHRISTI PERLA'TA. A name anciently given to troches, prepared of pearls and sugar of roses. They were called Ma'nus Christi i' sim'plices, when pearls were not employed.

MANUS DE'I. An ancient plaster, prepared of voax, myrrh, frankincense, mastich, gum ammoniac, galbanum, oil, &c. See Opium.

MARANSIS, (μαρανσις,) Atrophy.

MARANTA, (after Maranta, a Venetian physician,) Arrowroot—m. Arundinacea, Arrowroot.

MARANTA GALAN'GA, Alpinia galan'ga, Amomum galan'ga, Galan'ga. Ord. Zingiberaceae. The smaller galan'gal. Two kinds of galangal are mentioned in the pharmacopœias; the greater, obtained from Kampferia galan'ga, and the smaller, from the root of Maranta galan'ga. The dried root is brought from China, in pieces from one to two inches in length, but scarcely half as thick; branched; full of knots and joints, with several circular rings, of a reddish brown colour, on the outside, and brownish within. It was formerly much used as a warm stomachic bitter, and generally ordered in bitter infusions.

MARANTIC, Maranticus, (F.) Marantique, (from maransis, 'atrophy,') Of, or belonging to, maransis or atrophy.

MARASCHINO, see Spirit.

MARASMO'YRA, Febris marasmo'des, (marasmus, and πυρ, 'fever,') Fever of emaciation in general. Hectic fever.

MARIENBAD, MINERAL WA'TERS OF. Celebrated springs in Bohemia. The Kreuzbrunn contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid. Season, from the 1st of June to the 15th of September.

MARIGOLD, DIAMOND FIG, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum—m. Garden, Calendula officinalis—m. Marsh, Caltha palustris—m. Single, Calendula officinalis—m. Wild, Calendula arvensis.

MARIOTTE, EXPERIMENT OF, (F.) Expérience de Mariotte. A celebrated experiment of the Abbé Mariotte, which consists in placing two small round spots on a wall at some distance from each other, standing opposite the left-hand object, and looking at it with the right eye, the left being closed. By walking backwards, until the distance from the object is about five times as great as the distance between the two objects, the latter will be found to disappear. Mariotte and, after him, many ophthalmologists, inferred that the optic nerve, on which the ray doubtless falls in this experiment, is insensible; and hence that the choroid may be the seat of vision,—not the retina. The inference is illogical; for it doubtless falls on the part of the optic nerve without doubt, where the central artery enters, and the central vein leaves the eyeball, and where there is necessarily no neurine.

MARIS, (μαρις,) Ancient name of a measure, containing 83 pints and 4 ounces.

MARISCA, ('a large fig,') Ficus, Hæmorrhoidis.

MAR'ROW, (Sax. mearþ, My'elos, Osteomy'elon, Medu'lla, M. os'sium, Medullary Juice, Axin'gia de Mum'ia, Mum'ia de Medu'llis, (F.) Moëlle, Suc médullaire. The oily, inflammable, whitish or yellowish juice, which fills the medullary canal of the long bones, the cancellated structure at the extremities of those bones, the diploë of flat bones, and the interior of short bones. The marrow is furnished by the exhalation of the medullary membrane. It is fluid during life, and appears under the form of small points or brilliant grains after death. It is enveloped in the medullary membrane.

In the bony canals it is called Oil of Bones.

MARROW, SPINAL, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertebral, Medulla spinalis.

MARRUBE BLANC, Marrubium—m. Noir, Ballota foetida.

MARRUBIUM, M. vulgare' seu album seu Germanicum, Pra'sium, Phra'sum, Hoarhound, Horehound, (F.) Marrube blanc. Ord. Labiatae. The leaves have a moderately strong, aromatic smell; and a very bitter, penetrating, diffusive, and durable taste. It has often been given in coughs and asthmas, united with sugar. Dose. ℥ss to ℥j, in infusion; dose of extract, gr. x to ℥ss.

FORB'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, is made as follows:—horehound, liquorice root, āā ℔ij and ℥vij; water, q. s. to strain ℔vj. Infuse. To the strained liquor add:—proof spirit or brandy, ℔12; camphor, ℥j and ℥ij; opium and benj'min, āā ℥j; dried squills, ℥ij; oil of aniseed, ℥j; honey, ℔ij and ℥vij. It is pectoral.

MARSEILLES, CLIMATE OF. The remarks made upon the climate of Montpellier apply even in greater force to that of Marseilles. It possesses all the objectionable qualities of the climate of southeastern France.

MARSH, (Sax. mearþ, Lim'nē, He'lus, Pa'lus, (F.) Marais. Marshy districts give off emanations, which are the fruitful source of disease and the cause of great insalubrity in many countries. The chief disease, occasioned by the malaria or miasm, is intermittent fever. Hence it becomes important to drain such regions, if practicable. Some marshy countries are not so liable to phthisis pulmonalis, and it has been found, that where intermittents have been got rid of by draining, consumption has, at times, become frequent. The most unhealthy periods for residence in a marshy district are during the existence of the summer and autumnal heats; at which times the water becomes evaporated, and the marshy bottom is more or less exposed to the sun's rays. This postulatium seems necessary for the production of the miasmata: for whilst the marsh is well covered with water, no miasm is given off.

MASCULUS, (dim. of Mas, 'a male,') Male.

MASESIS, (μασησις,) Mastication.
 MASETER, (μασητηρ,) Masseter.
 MASHUA (S.). A tuberous root of a flat, pyramidal shape, which is cultivated and cooked like the potato by the Serranos of Peru. It is watery and insipid, but nevertheless is much eaten by them. The Indians use the mashua as a medicine in dropsy, dyspepsia, and dysentery: The plant is unknown to botanists.

MASK, Lar'va, (F.) Musque, Larve. A bandage applied over the face, as a sort of mask, in cases of burns, scalds, or erysipelas. It serves to preserve the parts from the contact of air, and to retain topical applications in situ. It is made of a piece of linen, of the size of the face, in which apertures are made corresponding to the eyes, nose, and mouth, and which is fixed by means of strings stitched to the four angles.

MASK'ED, Larva'tus, (F.) Larvé. Disguised, —as a "masked fever," or one which is not clearly developed. See Fever, masked.

MAS'LACH, Mos'lich, Amph'i'on, Anfi'on. A medicine much used by the Turks, and into the composition of which opium enters. It is excitant.

MASQUE, Mask.

MASS, Ma'za, Mas'sa, (F.) Masse, (μασσω, 'I knead,') The compound, from which pills have to be formed.

MASSA, Mass — m. Carnea Jacobi Sylvii, see Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans — m. de Dactylis, Paste, date — m. de Extracto glycyrrhizæ, Pasta glycyrrhizæ, &c. — m. de Gummi Arabico, Paste, marshmallow — m. de Zizyphorum fructu, Paste of jujubes.

MASSAGE, (from μασσω, 'to knead,') Sham-pooing.

MASSE, Mass — m. d'Eau, Typha latifolia.

MASSEMA, (μασημα,) Mastication.

MASSEMENT, (from μασσω, 'to knead,') Sham-pooing.

MASSEPAINS, (μασσω, 'to knead,' and pain, 'bread,') Biscuits, medicinal.

MASSES APOPHYSAIRES, ('apophysar masses,') see Vertebrae.

MASESIS, (μασησις,) Mastication.

MASSETER, Mase'ter, πασαγμα, ('I chew,') Musculus mandibularis, (F.) Zygomato-maxillaire. A muscle situate at the posterior part of the cheek, and lying upon the ramus of the lower jaw-bone. It is long, quadrilateral, and is attached, above, to the inferior edge and to the inner surface of the zygomatic arch; below, it terminates at the angle of the jaw, and at the outer surface and inferior margin of the ramus of that bone. It is composed of an intermixture of fleshy and aponeurotic fibres. Its office is to raise the lower jaw, and to act in mastication.

MASSETER INTERNUS, Pterygoideus internus.

MASSETER'IC, Masseter'ine, Masseter'icus, Masseter'i'nus, (F.) Massétérin, Mussétérique. Relating or belonging to the masseter muscle.

MASSETERINE, Masseteric.

MASSETERINE ARTERY arises from the trunk of the internal maxillary or temporalis profunda posterior, and is distributed to the masseter muscle, after having passed, horizontally, through the sigmoid notch of the lower jaw-bone.

MASSETERINE NERVE, is given off from the inferior maxillary branch of the fifth pair. It passes through the sigmoid notch, and is distributed on the inner surface of the masseter. In luxation of the lower jaw, this nerve is strongly stretched, and considerable pain, consequently, produced.

MASSETERINE VEIN has the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal maxillary vein.

MASSETERINUS, Masseteric.

MASSETTE, Typha latifolia.

MASSICOT, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

MASSING, (from μασσω, 'to knead,') Sham-pooing.

MASSULA, (dim. of massa,) Molecule.

MASTADEN, (mastos, and αδην, 'a gland,') see Mamma.

MASTADENITIS, (mastaden, and itis,) Mastitis.

MASTALGIA, (mastos, and αλγος, 'pain,') Mastodynia.

MASTAX, (μασταξ,) Mystax.

MASTEMA, Masticatory.

MASTER OF THE WOODS, Galium circæzans.

MASTERWORT, Angelica atropurpurea, Heracleum lanatum, Imperatoria.

MASTHELICOSIS, (mastos, and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer,') Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTHOS, (μασθος,) Mamma.

MASTIC, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICA'TION, Mastica'tio, Mase'sis, Mase'sis, Masse'ma, Manduca'tio, Commanduca'tio, Manduca'tion, Chew'ing, Chaw'ing, masticare, masticatum, 'to chew,') The action of bruising food in the mouth, to prepare it for the digestion it has to undergo in the stomach. This is executed by the joint action of the tongue, cheeks, and lips, which push the alimentary substance between the teeth; and by the motions of the lower jaw it is cut, torn, or bruised.

MASTICATORY, Masticato'rium, Maste'ma, Diamaste'ma, (F.) Masticatoire. Chewing. Relating or appertaining to mastication or chewing. Also, a substance, chewed with the intention of exciting the secretion of saliva.

MASTICATORY NERVE, see Trigemini — m. Spasm of the face, Trisinus.

MASTICH, (μαστιχη,) see Pistacia lentiscus — m. Herb, common, Thymus mastichina — m. Herb, Syrian, Teucrium thymum — m. Tree, Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHE, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHELEON, (mastich, and ελαιον, 'oil,') see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHINA GALLORUM, (after mastich,) Thymus mastichina.

MASTIGODES HOMINIS, Trichocephalus.

MASTIGO'SIS, (μαστιγωσις, from μαστιγωω, 'I whip,') Flagella'tio, Flagella'tion, Scourg'ing. Employed by the ancients as a remedy in many diseases.

The Flagellation or Scourging Mania, was a form of theomania, which prevailed in Europe, in the 13th and 14th centuries. They who were affected with it were termed Flagell'ants.

MASTITIS, Mastoï'tis, Mammi'tis, Mazoï'tis, Inflamma'tio Mam'mæ, Mastadeni'tis, (F.) Inflammation des Mamelles, Mammitis, (mastos, and itis.) Inflammation of the breast. Inflammation of the mammary gland of the pregnant or parturient female is vulgarly called a weed or weed, and a weed in the breast.

MASTITIS APOSTEMATOSA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTITIS PUERPERA'TIS. Inflammation of the mamma in the childbed woman.

MASTIX, (after mastich,) see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTOCARCINO'MA, (mastos and carcinoma,) Carcinoma or cancer of the breast.

MASTOCHONDRO'SIS, (mastos, χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and osis,) A cartilaginous formation in the breast.

MASTODES, (μαστωδης,) Mastoid.

MASTODYN'IA, Mastody'gia, Mazodyn'ia, (mastos, and αδυν, 'pain,') Pain in the breasts; a form of neuralgia. See Neuralgia mammae.

MASTODYNIA APOSTEMATOSA, Phlegmoné Mam'mæ, Masth'co'sis, Masti'tis apostematosa, Galac- tapete'ma, Galactomastoprecto'ma, Absces'sus Mam'mæ seu lac'teus, Phleg'monê Mastodyn'ia, Ab'scess of the Breast, Mam'mary Ab'scess, Milk-abscess. Phlegmonous inflammation of the breast, running on to suppuration, generally in the child-bed female. It is one of the best examples of acute phlegmonous inflammation, and requires the active use of appropriate treatment. A 'broken breast,' in common parlance, means an abscess of the breast, which has suppurated, and opened spontaneously.

MASTODYNIA POLYGALA, Sparganosis—m. Polygala, Mastospargosis.

MAS'TOID, (μαστοειδής) Mastoi'des, Masto'des, Mastoïdeus, Mamuilla'ris, Papi'lli seu maumilliformis, Mamuifora'is, Mau'mifora, (F.) Mastoïde, Mastoïdien, (mastos, and edos, 'resemblance.') Having the form of a nipple. Also, that which relates to the mastoid process, Mastoïdeus.

MASTOID AP'ERTURE. The opening of communication between the cavity of the tympanum and the mastoid cells.

MASTOID AR'TERY, Arte'ria mastoïdea. A posterior branch of the external carotid artery.

MASTOID CAN'CEr. A kind of firm carcinomatous growth, the section of which is thought to resemble the boiled udder of the cow.

MASTOID CELLS, Cell'ulæ Mastoïdeæ, Au'trum mastoïdeum, Mas'toid Si'nuses. These are situate in the mastoid process; communicate with each other, and open into the cavity of the tympanum. Their use seems to be to increase the intensity of sound.

MASTOID FOR'AMEN is situate behind the mastoid process, and gives passage to a small artery of the dura mater, as well as to a vein which opens into the lateral sinus.

MASTOID Fos'sa, (F.) Gouttière mastoïdienne, is a depression at the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which forms part of the lateral sinus.

MASTOID OR DIGAS'TRIC GROOVE, (F.) Rainure mastoïdienne ou digastrique, is a groove, situate at the inner side of the mastoid process, which affords attachment to the posterior belly of the digastric muscle.

MASTOID MUSCLE, POSTERIOR, Splenius.

MASTOID OR MAM'MIFORM OR MAM'MILLARY PROC'ESS, Proces'sus mastoïdeus, Apoph'ysis mamuilla'ris, Pars mastoïdea, is situate at the inferior and posterior part of the temporal bone, and gives attachment to the digastric and mastoid muscles.

MASTOÏDE, Mastoid.

MASTOÏDEUS, Sternocleidomastoïdeus—m. Lateralis, Complexus minor.

MASTOÏDOCONCHINIEN, Retrahens auris—m. Géniën, Digastricus—m. Hyogéniën, Digastricus—m. Oriculaire, Retrahens auris.

MASTOME'NIA, (mastos, and μην, 'a month.') Vicarious menstruation from the mamma.

MASTON'CUS, Theloa'cus, (mastos, and ογκος, 'a tumour.') A tumefaction of the nipple, or of the breast itself. When the tumour is of an adipous character it is termed Mastopion'cus or Mastopimeloa'cus.

MASTONCUS POLYGALACTICUS, Mastospargosis.

MASTOPAREC'TAMA, gen. Mastoparectem'atis, (mastos, and παρεκτα, 'excessive distension.') Immoderate distension of the mammae.

MASTOPATHI'A, (mastos, and παθος, 'disease.') An affection of the breast.

MASTOPIMELONCUS, (mastos, τιμωλη, 'fat, and ογκος, 'tumour,') see Mastoncus.

MASTOPIONCUS, (mastos, πωω, 'fat, and ογκος, 'tumour,') see Mastoncus.

MASTORRHAG'IA, (mastos, and ῥηγνυμι, 'to break forth.') An unusual flow of milk.

MASTOS, (μαστος) Mamma.

MASTOSCIR'RIUS, (mastos, and σκίρριος, 'a hard tumour.') Scirrhus, or hard cancer of the breast

MASTOSPARGO'SIS, Mastody'ia polygala Maston'cus polygalacticus, (mastos, and σπργαω, 'I am full to bursting.') Fulness of the breasts with milk, so that they are ready to burst.

MASTOSYRINX, gen. Mastosyrin'gia, Fis'tula mamuæ, (mastos, and σφύριξ, 'a pipe,') Fistula of the mamma.

MASTURBA'TION, (maus, 'hand, and stupro, 'I ravish,') Cinn'dia, Gar'galê, Gar'galus, Gargalis'mus, Mastupra'tio, Maustupra'tio, Maustupra'tio, Ona'nia, On'anism, Edeogargaris'mus, Edeogargar'galus, Auaplas'mus, Chiroma'nia, Gau'dia fa'ca, Duct'io p'rop'rii, Vol'untary Pollutio, Self Pollutio, Selfabuse, Secret vice, (F.) Abus de soimême, Attoucheuent. Excitement of the genital organs by the hand.

MASTURBA'TOR, Mastupra'tor, Manustupra'tor, Mascarp'pio. One given to masturbation.

MASTUS, (μαστος) Mamma.

MAT'SON (F.) A dull or flat sound. The obscure noise, (F.) Matité, afforded in certain diseases when any part, as the chest, is percussed. It has been compared to that produced when the thigh is struck. It is opposed to the Son clair, or 'clear sound.'

MATCHES DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

MATE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATECO, Matico.

MATELLA, (like Matula.) Urinal.

MATER, gen. Matris, (μητηρ, 'mother,) Uterus—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Herbarum, Artemisia vulgaris—m. Metallorum, Hydrargyrum—m. Mollis, Pia mater—m. Perlarum, see Pearl—m. Pia, Pia mater—m. Secalis, Ergot—m. Tenuis, Pia mater.

MATERIA, (from mater, 'mother, [?]) Matter—m. Fibrosa, Fibrin.

MATE'RIA MED'ICA, Pharmacolog'ia, Pharmacology, Acol'ogy or Akol'ogy or Accolog'ia, Hylê Iat'ricê, Iamatolog'ia, Iamatol'ogy, (F.) Matière Médicale. The division of medical science which treats of the knowledge of medicines; their action on the animal economy, and mode of administration. The study of the Materia Medica is one of great importance;—it is a study of the tools with which the practitioner has to work in the cure of disease. Much labour has been spent in contriving classifications of the Materia Medica. Some have arranged the articles according to their natural resemblances: others according to their real or presumed virtues: others, according to their active constituent principles. The Pharmacopœias place them alphabetically. Perhaps the best classification would be one founded on the agency exerted by the articles on the different tissues; but this arrangement, in the present state of science, is by no means easy; and, moreover, ideas in regard to the action of medicines are so associated with certain terms,—as narcotics, tonics, sedatives, &c., employed to denote certain operations, which they are esteemed capable of producing, that, to abandon them, would be to throw obstacles in the way of the student, without the ultimate advantage accruing to him of possessing a better knowledge of the modus operandi of medicines than when a classification, somewhat resembling those usually embraced, is adopted.

The following is the classification given by the Author, in his "General Therapeutics and Materia Medica," 6th edit., Philad., 1857:—

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| 1. Agents that affect prominently the alimentary canal or its contents. | {Emetics,Cathartics,Anthelmintics.} |
| 2. Agents that affect prominently the respiratory organs,               |   |
|   | {Expectorants.}                             |

|   |   |
|---|---|
| 3. Agents that affect prominently the follicular or glandular organs, | } Erhines.Sialogogues,Diuretics,Antilitics,Diaphoretics.  |

| 5. Agents that affect prominently the organs of reproduction,         | } Narcotics,Tetanics,Antispasmodics.Emmenagogues,Parturificients.   |
| 6. Agents that affect various organs,                                 |   |
| 7. Agents whose action is prominently chemical,                       | } Excitants,Tonics,Astringents,Sedatives,Refrigerants,Revellents,Eutrophics.Antacids,Antalkalics,Disinfectants. |
| 8. Agents whose action is prominently mechanical,                     |   |

Of old, the Materia Medica consisted of more articles than at present. The tendency, indeed, is, and must be, to diminish it still further; to get rid of those articles which possess no advantages over others equally common, or whose properties are doubtful. In a dictionary, it becomes necessary to insert all that have been reputed to possess virtues; but the majority are unnecessary. The catalogue might be largely reduced with impunity.

MATTER, Materia, Hy'lē, Mat'ries, (F.) Matière. Any substance which enters into the composition of a body. In Medicine, it is sometimes applied to the substance of evacuations; and is also used synonymously with pus. 'To matter' is to suppurate or discharge pus or matter.

MATTING OF PARTS, Hapantismus.

MATULA, Urinal.

MATURATIF, Maturative.

MATURATION, Maturatio, (maturare, maturatum, 'to ripen.') Pepus'mus, Pepan'sis. Progression of an abscess towards maturity. The state of maturity. Coction.

MATURATIVE, Maturans, Pepanticos, (F.) Maturatif. A medicine which favours the maturation of an inflammatory tumour.

MATURATUS, Coacted.

MATURITY, Maturitas, Horn'otes, (F.) Maturité. The state of fruits and seeds, when comparatively developed. State of an abscess, in which the pus is completely formed.

MATURITY, PRECOCIUS, Precocity.

MAUDLIN, Achillea ageratum—m. Tansey, Achillea ageratum—m. Wort, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MAULES, Rubecola.

MAUVE SAUVAGE, Malva.

MAUX (pl. of mal) DE NERFS, Hysteria.

MAW, (Sax. magā.) Stomach—m. Bound, Constipated—m. Worm, Ascaris.

MAXILLA, (from mala, 'the cheek.' [?]) Maxillary Bone.

MAXILLARY, Maxillaris, (F.) Maxillaire, (from maxilla, 'a jaw,' μασχαται, 'I chew.') Relating or belonging to the jaws.

MAXILLARY ARTERIES are three in number. 1. External maxillary. See Facial. 2. Internal maxillary—A. Guturo-maxillaire (Ch.). This arises from the external carotid with the temporal. It is remarkable for its complex course, and for the number of branches which it transmits to the deep-seated parts of the face. Immediately after its origin, it buries itself under the neck of the lower jaw, curving inwards and downwards. It then advances directly inwards: proceeding in the space between the two pterygoid muscles towards the maxillary tuberosity. It turns again, becomes vertical, and ascends into the bottom of the zygomatic fossa, until, having arrived at the floor of the orbit, it takes a horizontal and transverse direction; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, and divides into several branches. See Artery, (table.)

MAXILLARY BONE, Maxilla, Mandibula, Gam'phē, Gam'phelē, Gua'thus, Mo'la, Sig'on, Jaw'bone, (Prov.) Chaff'bone, Chall, Chanle, Chavel, Chaw'bone, Gill, (F.) Mâchoire. A name given to two bones, which support the teeth, and, by means of them, are inservient to the cutting, bruising, and tearing of alimentary substances.

MAXILLARY BONE, INFERIOR, Lower jawbone, Os Maxilla'rē inferius, Maxilla inferior, Hypognathion, (F.) Os maxillaire (Ch.), Mâchoire dia-cranienne, is a symmetrical, nearly parabolic bone, the middle portion of which is horizontal, and called the body; and the posterior is vertical, the angular portions being termed Rami or branches. These have behind a parotidean edge, which forms—by uniting with the base—the angle of the jaw. The branches terminate above by two processes, separated by the sigmoid notch or fossa: the anterior of which is called the coronoid; the posterior, the condyloid process or maxillary condyle, supported by a Cer'vix, Collum, or Neck. The chief parts observed in the lower jaw are—1. Externally,—the Symphysis men'ti, Apoph'ysis men'ti, Ment'al fora'men, and the external oblique line. 2. Internally,—the Genian-apoph'ysis, the intern'al or Myl'oid oblique lines, and the entrance of the dental canal. The lower jaw has, also, an alveolar edge, which contains alveoli for the reception of the teeth. The lower jawbone is developed by two points of ossification, which unite at the symphysis of the chin. It is articulated with the temporal bone and with the teeth.

MAXILLARY BONE, SUPERIOR, Upper jawbone, Maxilla superior seu zygerania, Os maxilla'rē superius, (F.) Os sus-maxillaire (Ch.), Mâchoire supracranienne. The upper jawbones are to the face what the sphenoid bone is to the cranium. They are articulated with all the portions composing it. They determine, almost alone, the shape of the face, and give it solidity. Their size is considerable; form unequal. They occupy the middle and anterior part of the face; and enter into the composition of the nasal fossæ, orbit, and mouth. The chief parts observable in the upper jaw are—1. Externally,—the Nasal proc'ess, Processus nasal'is seu frontalis seu ascendens, (F.) Apophyse montante, the superior or orbital surface, Superf'icies orbitalis, Planum orbitale, which forms almost the entire floor of the orbit, the Fora'men infra-orbitarium, Zygomatic proc'ess, Canine or Myl'tiform fossa. 2. Internally,—the Palatine proc'ess, Anterior palatine canal, and the Antrum of Highmore. Its circumference is very unequal, and it has behind a round, unequal prominence, called the Maxillary tuberosity, which is pierced by the posterior dental canal. Anteriorly, there is a notch, which forms part of the anterior aperture of the nasal fossæ, and beneath, an eminence, called the anterior nasal spine. The lower part of this circumference forms the alveolar margin. Each superior maxillary bone is articulated with the ethmoid, frontal, nasal, lachrymal, palatine, inferior spongy, vomer, its fellow, the teeth of the upper jaw, and sometimes the sphenoid bone. It is developed by four or five points of ossification.

MAXILLARY NERVES are two in number, and formed of the second and third branches of the fifth pair. The Superior Maxillary Nerve, Nerv sus-maxillaire (Ch.), arises from the middle of the gangliform enlargement of the fifth pair; passes forwards, and issues from the cranium through the foramen rotundum of the sphenoid bone; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, which it crosses horizontally; passes into the infraorbital canal, which it traverses; and makes its exit to vanish on the cheek. It gives off the following branches,—the orbital, a branch which goes to the sphenopalatine ganglion; posterior dental branches; the anterior dental,—and terminates in the infraorbital nerves, which are divided into superior, inferior, and internal. The inferior maxillary nerve, Nerv maxillaire (Ch.), is the largest of the three branches furnished by the fifth pair. It issues from the cranium by the foramen ovale of the sphenoid. Having reached the zygomatic fossa, it divides into two trunks; the one superior and external, which gives off the temporales profundi, masseterine, buccal, and pterygoids;—the other—inferior and internal—the larger of the two, which furnishes the inferior dental, lingual, and auricular.

MAXILLARY VEINS present the same arrangement as the arteries they accompany.

MAYHEM, Maihem, Maiming, (low Latin mahemium, 'maim or loss of a limb,' old French, mahem or maheme.) The act of depriving a person of a limb necessary for his defence.

MAYNARD'S ADHESIVE LIQUID, Collo-

MAYS, Zea mays—m. Americana, Zea mays—in Zea, Zea mays.

MAYWORM, TRUE, Meloe maialis.

MAYZ, Zea mays.

MAZA (μαζα), Mass, Placenta.

MAZALYSIS, Mazolysis.

MAZICUS, (from maza.) Relating to the placenta.

MAZISCH'ESIS, (maza, and σχεσις, 'holding,' 'retention.') Retention of the placenta.

MAZODYNIA, (μαζος, 'a breast,' and δύνη, 'pain,') Mastodynia.

MAZOITIS, (μαζος, 'breast,' and ίτις.) Mastitis.

MAZOLYSIS, Mazal'ysis, (maza, and λυσις, 'solution,') Separation of the placenta.

MAZOPATHY'A, (maza, and παθος, 'disease,') A disease of the placenta. One originating from the placenta.

MAZOS (μαζος), Mamma.

MECHANE (μηχανη), Machine.

MECHANEMA (μηχανημα), Machine.

MECHAN'ICAL, Mechan'ic'us, (μηχανικος, from mechane.) An epithet given to irritating bodies, which do not act chymically—as a mechanical irritant.

MECHANICAL or IATROMATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iat'romechan'ici seu Iatromathemat'ici, are such as refer every function, healthy or morbid, to mechanical or mathematical principles;—Mech'ic'na mechan'ica.

MECHAN'ICS, AN'IMAL. That part of physiology whose objects are to investigate the laws of equilibrium and motion of the animal body.

MECH'ANISM, Mechanism'us. The structure of a body: the collection or aggregate of the parts of a machine; the mode in which forces produce any effect, &c.

MECHANOL'OGY, Mechanolog'ia, (mechane, and λογος, 'a description,') A description of, or treatise on, machines or apparatus used in medicine or surgery.

MÈCHE, (from myxa, 'the wick of a lamp or candle,') Tent. This term is usually applied in French surgery to a collection of threads of charpie, cotton or raw silk, united together, which are used for detaching sinuous or fistulous ulcers; or to keep open or enlarge natural or artificial apertures. They are generally applied by means of an instrument called Porte-mèche.

MECHOACANÆ RADIX, Convolvulus mechoacan.

MECON'ETER, (F.) Méconètre, (μηκος, 'length,' and μετρον, 'measure,') A kind of graduated compass,—compas de proportion,—used at the Hospice de Maternité of Paris, to measure the length of newborn infants.

MECON (μηκων), Meconium, Opium, Papaver.

MECONICUM, (μηκων, 'the poppy,') Opiate.

MECONS'MUS, Intoxicat'io opii'dea; Poisoning by opium.

MECO'NIUM, (μηκωνιον, from μηκων, 'the poppy,') the inspissated juice of the poppy; Pop'py juice, Papaver'culum; Opium. Also, the excrement, Purgament'ia Infant'is, Me'con, passed by the infant a short time after birth, which had accumulated in the intestines during pregnancy. It is of a greenish or deep black colour, and very viscid. It seems formed of the mucous secretions of the intestines mixed with bile.

MECONOLOG'IA, Opiolog'ia; (μηκων, 'opium,' and λογος, 'a description,') A treatise on opium.

MECONOPSIS DIPHYLLA, (μηκων, 'poppy,' and οψις, 'appearance,') Stylophorum diphyllum.

MEDICINARE, Physician.

MEDEA, Genital organs.

MÉDECIN, (from medeor, 'to heal,') Physician—m. Consultant, Consulting physician—m. de Fous, see Psychiatria—m. Piqueur, see Piqueur.

MEDEIT'IS, (medea, and ίτις.) Inflammation of the genital organs.

MEDELA, (medeor, 'to heal,') Curation.

MEDE'NI. A term used by Paracelsus for cutaneous ulcerations like those of boils.

MEDEOLA VERTICILLIFOLIA, (after Medea, the sorceress,) M. Virginica.

MEDEOLA VIRGIN'ICA, M. verticillifolia, Gyro'n'ia Virgin'ica, Ind'ian cucumber. Order, Smilacæ. An indigenous herb, growing in every part of the United States, the root of which resembles a small cucumber. It has been thought to be diuretic.

MÉDIAN, Medi'anus; (medium, 'the middle,') That which is situate in the middle.

MEDIAN LINE. A vertical line, supposed to divide a body longitudinally into two equal parts; the one right, the other left. Chaussier calls the lignée alba the ligne médiane of the abdomen.

MEDIAN NERVE, Median digital, (Ch.) This nerve arises chiefly from the anterior branches of the last two cervical nerves and first dorsal. The fifth and sixth cervical pairs also send it a branch, which separates from the musculocutaneous nerve. The median nerve descends the inner part of the arm along the biceps muscle. Opposite the elbow joint it buries itself behind the aponeurosis of that muscle, and engages itself between the two fasciculi of the pronator teres. Lower down, it is situated between the flexors—sublimis and profundus—and passes, with their tendons, under the anterior annular ligament; it then divides into five branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the thenar eminence, to the lumbricales, the integuments of the thumb, the index, middle finger, and outer part of the ring finger. This nerve gives no branches to the arm. In the forearm, it furnishes filaments to all the pronator and flexor muscles; and one of them accompanies the anterior interosseous artery. It also gives off a filament to the integuments of the palm of the hand.

MEDIAN VEINS. Three of the superficial veins of the forearm are so called. The median basilic—the median cephalic and common median or fulvis brachii. See Basilic and Cephalic.

MEDIANUM, Mediastium, Mesentery.

MEDIAS'TINAL, Mediastina'lis, (F.) Médiastin. Relating to the mediastinum.

MEDIASTINAL ARTERIES are very delicate arterial branches, distributed in the areolar texture of the mediastinum. They are distinguished, according to their situation, into anterior and posterior.

MEDIASTINITIS, Mesodmitis.

MEDIASTINUM, Mediasti'nus, (quasi, in medio stans, as being in the middle; Mesod'mē, Media'nium, Mesotē'chium, Mesotē'chum, Sep'tum thorac'is, Hy'men Diaphrag'aton, Membra'na Diaphrag'aton seu thorac'em intersep'iens, Intersep'iens'tum thorac'is, Ribitō'r'ium, Dissipiens'tum thorac'is, (F.) Médiastin. A membranous space formed by the approximation of the pleuræ, dividing the chest into two parts, the one right, the other left. The mediastinum, formed by a double reflection of the pleura, extends from the spine to the posterior surface of the sternum. Its anterior part, called Anterior mediastinum, Mediastinum pectora'le, lodges, at its upper part, the thymus gland in the fœtus, and is filled below with fatty areolar tissue. Its posterior part, parallel to the spine, is occupied by the œsophagus, vena azygos, thoracic duct, the lower part of the windpipe, the origin of the bronchia and a number of lymphatic glands. This part is called the posterior mediastinum—Mediastinum dorsa'le.

By some anatomists, Mediastinum is defined to be the pleural walls of the membranous space, whilst the space itself is termed Cavum mediasti'ni.

Medsine; Phys'ic, Rem'edy, Rem'etic, (F.) Remède. A medicine. Any substance exhibited with the view of curing or allaying morbid action. Medicines are obtained from the three kingdoms of nature, and are divided into internal and external, according as they are administered internally or applied externally.

In common language, medicine is often called Stuff, Doctors' stuff, and, in the Southern States, Truck.

MEDICAMENTAL, Medicinal.

MÉDICAMENTER, see Physician.

MÉDICAMENTEUX, Medicinal.

MEDICAMENTO'SUS LA'PIS, Medic'inal stone, (F.) Pierre médicamenteuse. A name formerly given to a mixture of peroxyd of iron, litharge, alum, nitre, sal ammoniac, and vinegar: evaporated and calcined at a red heat for an hour. The product was regarded as eminently astringent.

MEDICAMENTUM, Drug, Medicament—m. ex Palmulis, Diaphenicon.

MEDICAS'TER, Medicastra. An ignorant practitioner. A charlatan.

MEDICA'TION, Medica'tio. The change in the animal economy produced by the operation of remedies. Treatment by medicine. The act of impregnating with some medicine.

MEDULLA. (from medius, 'in the middle,') Marrow—m. Cerebri, see Cerebrum—m. Dorsalis, M. Spinalis—m. Dorsualis, M. Spinalis—m. Nervorum, Neurine.

MEDULLA OBLONGATA, Oblong medulla, Cerebrum protuberance, Nervous system of the senses, (Gall), Cerebrum elongatum, Mesocephalon, (F.) Mésocéphale, Moëlle allongée, Mésencéphale, (Ch.)

The medullary substance that lies within the cranium upon the basiliary process of the occipital bone. The anterior surface which rests in the basiliary groove, is impressed by the basiliary artery. At the upper extremity, and on its posterior surface are the Tubercula quadrigenina. At the same extremity, the medulla gives rise to two prolongations, the Peduncles of the brain, separated from each other by the mammillary eminences, and becoming lost in the optic thalami. The lower extremity is called the tail or Rachidian bulb, Bulbus medullæ spinalis seu rachidicus (F.) Bulbe rachidien, and is continuous with the medulla spinalis. It is to this part only that some anatomists apply the name Medulla oblongata. From the posterior angles two other prolongations arise, called Peduncles of the cerebellum. The medulla oblongata has several eminences—the Pons varolii, Corpora pyramidalia, C. olivaria, &c.—and it has a longitudinal fissure before, and another behind, called the anterior and the posterior median fissure. The vesicular neurine in the centre of the medulla is the nervous centre of respiration and deglutition: hence it has been called centrum vitale.

MEDULLA OSSIUM, Marrow—m. Spinæ, M. spinalis.

MEDULLA SPINALIS seu Spinæ seu dorsualis seu vertebralis seu dorsalis, Corda spinalis, Funis argenteus, Myelus, M. rachites seu notivus seu diachænius seu psorites, Myelon, Notomyelus, Rachites, Ælon, Processus rachidianus, Sacra fistula, Spinal prolongation, Vertebral marrow, Spinal cord or neurion, Nervous system of voluntary motion and tactile impression (Gall), (F.) Moëlle épinière, Moëlle vertébrale, called by Ch., Prolongement rachidien of the encephalon, is the continuation of the medulla oblongata. It commences at the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, and descends in the vertebral canal as low as the 2d lumbar vertebra, without filling it; presenting, in its course, several evident enlargements. It is grooved on both its anterior and posterior surfaces by a furrow, which divides it, in its whole length, into two great nervous cords, intimately united with each other. It terminates by an oval tubercle, whence a number of nerves set out called Cauda equina, (F.) Queue de cheval, from its resemblance to a horse's tail. The spinal marrow has no analogy, as regards its structure, with the marrow of long bones. It is formed of two substances; one white, the other gray, presenting an inverse arrangement to that which they have in the brain, the white being external, the gray at the centre, Substantia grisea centralis. It is enveloped by a yellowish, fibrous membrane, very resisting, which seems to be continued insensibly from the pia mater, and by two other membranes, which are merely prolongations of the arachnoid and dura mater. See Nerve.

MEDULLA VERTEBRALIS, M. spinalis.

MEDULLÆ (pl. of medulla.) Sperm.

MEDULLARY, Medullaris, (F.) Médullaire, (from medulla.) Relating to the marrow, or analogous to marrow.

MEDULLARY ARTERIES. The arteries, which enter bones and pass to the marrow.

MEDULLARY CANAL, see Canal, medullary—m. Cells, see Medullary Membrane—m. Juice, Marrow—m. Matter, see Nerve-fibres—m. Matter of the brain, see Cerebrum.

MEDULLARY MEMBRANE, Periosteum Interneum, Endosteum, Perymyelium. A vascular, areolar web of extreme tenuity, which envelops the marrow and lines the inner surface of the medullary canal of the long bones. This membrane has been considered as a species of internal periosteum of those bones. It has numerous vessels, which bury themselves in the thickness of the marrow; and others which nourish the innermost plates of the bone. The cells formed by it are termed Cellule seu Sarculi medullares.

MEDULLARY NEURINE, see Neurine—m. Sarcoma, Encephaloid, Hæmatodes fungus—m. Sheath, see Nervefibres.

MEDULLARY SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney—m. s. of Schwann, see Nerve-fibre.

MEDULLARY SYSTEM. Bichat gives this name to the marrow and its membranes. He distinguishes two species of medullary systems; the one occupies the cellular tissue at the extremities of the long bones and that of the flat and short bones; the other is found merely in the central canal of long bones.

MEDULLARY TUMOUR OF THE LUNGS, Phthisis, cancerous.

MEDULLITIS, (medulla and itis.) Myelitis. M. Gerdy uses Medullite for inflammation of the marrow of bones, Osteomyelitis;—Myelitis being usually appropriated to inflammation of the spinal marrow.

MEERAN, Daucus carota.

MEGALANTHROPOGENESIS, (megalos, ανθρωπος, 'man,' and γενεσις, 'birth.') A term used by a French physician, named Robert, to designate the art of procreating great men; men of mind; men of genius. He considered that they may be perpetuated by always taking care to have talented men united to clever women!

MEGALO, (from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great.') In composition, great.

MEGALOCARDIA, (megalos, and καρδια, 'heart.') The state of having a very large heart.

MEGALOCÆLIA, (megalos, and καλια, 'abdomen,') Intestine, great, Megalosplanchnia.

MEGALOMELIA, (megalos, and μελος, 'a limb,') A monstrosity characterized by very large limbs.

MEGALOPHONIA, (megalos, and φωνη, 'voice,') The condition of having a full, strong voice.

MEGALOPHTHALMUS, (megalos, and οφθαλμος, 'eye,') A congenital deformity, in which the eye is inordinately large.

MEGALOPUS, (megalos, and πους, 'a foot,') Macropodus.

MEGALOSPLANCHNUS, (megalos, and πλαγχων, 'a viscus,') Megalocœlia. Hippocrates applies the epithet to those in whom a viscus, or the viscera, are tumid. Some have used the substantive Megalosplanchnia for the tumour itself.

MEGALOSPLENIA, (megalos, and σπλην, 'the spleen,') Splenoncus.

MEGETHOS, (μεγας, 'great,') Stature.

MEGRIM, (from [F.] migraine, itself abridged from hemicrania.) Hemicrania.

MEIBOMIUS, GLANDS OF, Follicles of M., Palpebral or Ciliary Follicles, Glandule sebaceæ ciliaræ seu Meibomia. Intestina Meibomia, Lacuum palpebrarum (F.) Folliculus palpebrarum or ciliaris, Glandes de Meibomius. Small sebaceous follicles, called after Meibomius, although known long before his description of them. They are situate in special grooves in the tarsal cartilages; and are ranged by the side of each other, in the form of yellowish, parallel, and vertical lines; sometimes straight, at others, tortuous. They may be seen at the inner surface of the eyelids, through the conjunctiva, and secrete a sebaceous humour, called Humor of Meibomius, Lipiti'do, Gum, (F.) Chassie.

MEIOSIS, (μειωσις, from μειωω, 'I lessen,') Meiosis, Miosis, Imminutio, Minutio, Minutio. The period of a disease, in which the symptoms begin to diminish;—the decline. Remission. Also, idiotism.

Propria, Basement membrane, and Folliculi Graafiani, see Cortex ovi—m. Pupillaris, Pupillary membrane.

MEMBRANA PUTAM'INIS, (putamen, 'a shell or husk.')

Pellicula O'vi. The membrane adherent to the inner surface of the eggshell.—Putamen seu Testa O'vi.

MEMBRANA RETIFORMIS CHORII, Decidua reflexa—m. Ruysschiana, Choroid (inner layer.)

MEMBRANA SACCIFORM'IS. A separate synovial membrane for the inferior radiocubital articulation, which covers the upper surface of the triangular ligament, and the sort of incomplete ring which circumscribes the head of the ulna.

MEMBRANA SEMIPELLUCIDA, Caligo—m. Serosa, Membrane (serous)—m. Sinuosa, Decidua—m. Subcostalis, Pleura—m. Succingens, Diaphragm, Pleura.

MEMBRANA TES'TE, Shell mem'brane. The membrane that lines the shell of the bird's egg:—a simple membrane.

MEMBRANA THORACEM INTERSEPIENS, Mediastinum—m. Tympani, see Tympanum—m. Tympani secundaria, see Fenestra—m. Urinaria, Allantois—m. Uteri interna evoluta, Decidua—m. Uvea, Uvea—m. Vasculosa cerebri, Pia mater—m. Vasorum Communis, Endangiun—m. Verricularis, Retina.

MEMBRANA VERSICOLOR. A peculiar membrane—according to Mr. Fielding, of Hull—situate immediately behind the retina, and in connexion with it. It is separable into distinct layers from the choroid, and is supplied with bloodvessels.

MEMBRANA WACHENDORFIANA, Pupillary membrane.

MEMBRANACEOUS, Membranous.

MEMBRANE, Membra'na, Hy'men, Me'ninx, Epen'dyma, Pannic'ulus, Pan'nicle. A name given to different thin organs, representing a species of supple, more or less elastic, webs; varying in their structure and vital properties, and intended, in general, to absorb or secrete certain fluids; and to separate, envelop, and form other organs. Bichat has divided the membranes into simple and compound.

Simple membranes comprise three orders. 1. Mucous mem'brane, Membra'na muco'sa seu pituitosa seu pituitaria, Phleg'mymen, Blen'nymen, Phlegmat'hymen, Myco'derma, (F.) Muqueuse, Membrane muqueuse, Membrane folliculeuse (Ch.), is so called, on account of the mucous fluid by which it is constantly lubricated. Mucous membranes line the canals, cavities, and hollow organs, which communicate externally by different apertures on the skin. Bichat refers them to two great divisions—the gastro-pulmonary, and the genito-urinary. The mucous membranes have a striking analogy with the cutaneous tissue, in organization, functions, and diseases. They are composed of corium, papillæ, and epidermis; and are furnished with a multitude of follicles, which secrete a viscid humour,—mucus. They receive a quantity of arterial vessels, veins, lymphatics, and nerves. 2. The Serous mem'branes, Membra'næ sero'sæ, Orrhohym'enes, Orrrhym'enes, M. villosæ simplices (Ch.), are transparent, thin, and composed of one lamina. One surface adheres to other textures; the other is smooth, polished, and moistened by a serous fluid. They are arranged—in the form of sacs without apertures—as great, intermediate reservoirs for the exhalant and absorbent systems, in which the serous fluid, in passing from one system, tarries some time before it enters the other. The serous membranes resemble the areolar membrane in structure and diseases. They facilitate the motion on each other of the organs which they envelop. They may be divided into (a) Serous membranes, properly so called; as the arachnoid, pleura, peritoneum, and tunica vaginalis. (b) Synovial membranes or capsules; which belong to joints, tendons, aponeuroses, &c. These membranes—mucous and serous—are constituted of similar layers—epithelium, basement membrane, condensed areolar tissue; and a looser form of areolar tissue, termed sub-mucous in one case,—subserous in the other. 3. Fibrous mem'branes, Membraues albugineuses (Ch.) These are almost all continuous, and terminate at the periosteum—their common centre. They have been divided into two sections. 1. Enveloping aponeuro'ses, Aponeuro'ses of insertion, Fibrous capsules of the joints, and Fibrous sheaths of tendons. 2. The Periostæum, Du'ra ma'ter, Sclerotica, Tunica albugin'ea testis, Fibrous mem'brane of the spleen, &c. The fibrous membranes are not free or moistened by any particular fluid. They adhere by both surfaces to the neighbouring parts; are firm, resisting, but slightly elastic, and of a white colour; sometimes pearly and glistening. Their vessels are numerous, in some, as in the dura mater and periosteum; in others, scarcely perceptible, as in the aponeuroses. The presence of nerves has never been proved, although several circumstances, regarding their sensibility, render their existence probable. The fibrous membranes serve, in general, to augment the solidity of the organs which they envelop; to retain the muscles in their respective positions; to favour the motion of the limbs, and that of the muscles and skin; to form canals and rings for the passage of different organs, &c.

Bichat admits three species of Compound Membranes. 1. The Serofibrous, formed of a serous and fibrous lamina, intimately adherent to each other;—as the pericardium, dura mater, and tunica albuginea. 2. The Serous, formed of a serous and mucous lamina;—as the gall-bladder at its lower part. 3. The Fibromucous, constituted of the union of a fibrous and mucous membrane; as the mucous membrane of the nasal fossæ, gums, &c. Chaussier admits six kinds of membranes. 1. The lam'inated. See Cellular Tissue. 2. The serous or simple villous. 3. The follicular or complicated villous. 4. The musc'ular or flesh'y. 5. The albugin'eous. 6. The albuminous.

MEMBRANE, ACCIDENTAL, M. false—m. Accidentelle, M. false—m. Adnæe, Conjunctiva—m. Adventitious, M. false—m. Anhistous, Decidua—m. of Arnold, see Iris.

MEMBRANE, BASEMENT, Primary or lim'itary membrane, Membr'na pro'pria. A delicate structureless lamella of membrane found beneath the epidermis or epithelium, on all the free surfaces of the body.

MEMBRANE CADUQUE, Decidua—m. Caduque réfléchi, Decidua reflexa—m. de Demours, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea—m. de Descemet, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea.

MEMBRANE, ELASTIC, Membr'na elastica. Membrane formed of the elastic areolar tissue, and which occurs in the coats of vessels, especially of the arteries, in the trachea and bronchi, &c.

MEMBRANE, FALSE, Accidental or Adventitious membrane, Pseudomembrane, Pseudymen, Pseudomeninge, (F.) Fausse membrane, M. accidentelle. Membranous productions, which form on all the free natural surfaces, and on every free accidental surface, are so called. They are, in general, produced by the exudation of a fibrinous matter, susceptible of organization, which takes place in consequence of inflammation of the various tissues. These accidental membranes occur on the skin after the application of a blister; on mucous surfaces, as in croup; on the parietes of inflamed veins and arteries, &c. The cicatrices of wounds are formed of them.

By some it has been proposed to give the name pseudo-membrane to fibrinous exudations, as in diphtheritis, which are devoid of organization, whilst neo-membrane may be applied to such fresh productions, as from serous membranes, as have become supplied with vessels and nerves.

MEMBRANE FAUSSE, Membrane, false—m. Fibrous, see Membrane—m. Germinal, see Molecule—m. Granular, Membrana granulosa—m. Granulose, Membrana granulosa—m. Hapto-gen, see Haptogenous—m. Hyaloid, see Hyaloid membrane—m. Jacob's, Tunica Jacobi—m. Lim'itary, Membrane, basement—m. Mucous, see Membrane—m. Mucusee, see Membrane—m. Nasale, Pituitary membrane—m. Nasmyth's, see Enamel—m. Olfactive, Pituitary membrane—m. Pituitaire, Pituitary membrane—m. Primary, Membrane, basement—m. Pseudo, M. false—m. Ruyschienne, Choroid (inner layer), Ruyschiana tunica—m. de Schneider, Pituitary membrane—m. Schneiderian, Pituitary membrane—m. Serous, see Membrane—m. Shell, Membrana teste—m. Simple, see Membrane—m. Synovial, see Membrane—m. du Tympan, see Tympanum—m. Tympanal, see Tympanum—m. Utéro-épichoroidale, Decidua—m. Virginal, Hymen—m. Vitellary, Zona pellucida—m. Vitelline, Zona pellucida.

MEMBRANES ALBUGINEUSES, Membranes, fibrous, see Albuginea—m. Folliculeuses, Membranes, mucous—m. Veloutées, Villous membranes—m. Villieuses simples, Membranes, serous.

MEMBRANES OF THE FÆTUS, Membr'ne fætum involv'ntes, Velamenta infantis, Integumenta fætus, The membranes. The membranes which immediately envelop the foetus in the cavity of the uterus, and the rupture of which gives rise to the discharge of the liquor amnii. These membranes are the decidua, chorion, and amnion.

MEMBRANES, THE, Membranes of the Fœtus.

MEMBRANEUX, Membranous.

MEMBRANIFORM or MEMBRANIFORM, Membraniformis, (membrana and forma;)—resembling a membrane. A name given to thin and flat parts, which resemble membranes.

MEMBRANIFORM MUSCLES. Very broad and thin muscles, as the platysma myoides, obliquus abdominis, &c.

MEMBRANOSUS, (from membrana;) Fascia lata muscile, Membranous.

MEMBRANOUS, Membranosus, Membranosus, Hymenodes, (F.) Membranæus. Having the nature of membrane. Formed of membrane.

MEMBRANULA, (dim. of membrana;) Hymenium, Membranule—m. Coronæ ciliaris, see Ciliary—m. Lunata vaginæ, Hymen—m. Nervorum, Neurilemma—m. Semilunaris conjunctivæ, Valvula semilunaris.

MEMBRANULE, Membran'ula. A small membrane.

MEMBRE, Membrum—m. Viril, Penis.

MEMBROSUS, Membro'sus, Mentulatus, Mutoniatus, Nasatus, valdè Mentulatus, Fascinosus, Pso'lon, (F.) Membri, (from membrum, 'the male organ.')

One whose penis is very large.

MEMBRU, Membrus.

MEMBRUM, Ar'tus, Me'los, Co'lon, a limb, a member, (F.) Membre. The limbs or extremities or members of animals are certain parts exterior to the body, which are more or less apparent, long, and movable. It is by means of their limbs, that animals transport themselves from one place to another; and that they defend themselves, or attack others. The limbs are arranged on each side of the trunk, with which they are articulated. In man, they are four in number:—two upper or thoracic, and two lower, pelvic or abdominal. Also, the male organ.

MEMBRUM GENITALE VIRORUM, Penis—m. Mulibre, Clitoris—m. Seminale, Penis—m. Virile, Penis.

MÉMOIRE, Memory—m. Perte de, Amnesia.

MEMORIA, Memory—m. Deleta, Amnesia.

MEM'ORY, Memoria, Mne'moria, Recordatio, Recordatus, (F.) Mémoire. The cerebral faculty, by virtue of which past impressions are recalled to the mind.

MEMPHITES LA'PIS. A sort of stone, found anciently in the environs of Memphis; which was esteemed narcotic.

MENAGOGUES, (menes, and αγω, 'to drive.')

Emmenagogues.

MENDESION, Ægyptiacum.

MENE (μην), Moon.

MENECRATIS ACCIPITER, Accipiter.

MENELCO'SIS, Hæcomé'ria, (menes, and ελεωσις, 'ulceration.')

Vicarious menstruation from an ulcer.

MENES (μηνς), Menses.

MÉNESPAUSIE, (menes, and παυσις, 'to cause to cease.')

See Menses.

MENFRIGE, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MENIDRO'SIS, (menes, and ίρρωσις, 'sweating.')

A sweating of menstrual blood.

MENINGARTHIRO'ACÉ, Inflammat'io membrana'rum articulatio'nis, Arthromeningi'tis, (μενι'νγο, αρθρον, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'disease.')

Inflammation of the membranes of a joint.

MÉNINGE, (from meninx;) Dura mater.

MENINGÉ, Meningeal.

MENINGE'AL, or MENIN'GEAL, Menin'geus, (F.) Méningé. Relating to the meninges, or merely to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL APOPLEXY, see Apoplexy.

MENINGEAL ARTERY, MID'DLE, Arte'ria meningea me'dia seu Sphenospino'sa seu Du'ra Ma'tris me'dia ma'xima seu Sphenospina'lis, Spi'nal

Ar'tery, (F.) Artère méningée moyenne ou Sphéno-épineuse, ou Épineuse, is the largest of the branches given off by the internal maxillary artery. It enters the cranium by the foramen spinale, and distributes its branches chiefly to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL VES'SELS, Va'sa meningea. The vessels of the membranes of the brain.

MENIN'GES, (μηνιγγες, pl. of meninx.) Eilam'ides, Ma'tres seu Involu'era cer'ebr'i, Omen'to seu Velamen'ta cerebra'lia. The three membranes which envelop the brain—Dura mater, Arachnoid, and Pia mater.

MENINGETTE, Pia mater.

MENINGIA TUBERCULOSA, see Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGIITIS, Meningitis, and, especially, Inflammation of the meningium or arachnoid membrane.

MENINGI'NA, (F.) Méningine. A name given by Chaussier to the pia mater, united to the cerebral layer of the arachnoid.

MENINGINA, INNER LAMINA OF THE, Pia mater.

MÉNINGINE, Meningina.

MÉNINGITE, CÉRÉBRO-SPINALE, Meningitis, cerebro-spinal.

MENINGIN'ITIS, (meningina, and itis.) Inflammation of the meningina.

MENINGION, (μηνιγγιον, dim. of μηνιξ, 'a membrane.') Arachnoid membrane.

MENINGIS CUSTOS, Meningophylax.

MENINGITE, Meningitis—m. Granulosea, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Rachidiene, Meningitis, spinal—m. Tuberculense, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGI'TIS, Meningi'tis, Encephali'tis peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, (F.) Inflammation de la membrane séreuse céphalo-rachidienne, Méningite, (meninges, and itis.) Inflammation of a membrane and especially of the meninges or membranes of the brain. See Phrenitis.

MENINGITIS ARTHRITICA, Cephalagra.

MENINGITIS, CERÉBROSPINAL, Myeli'tis petechial'is, Cer'ebral or cer'ebrosp'inal ty'phus, (F.) Méningite cérébro-spinale, Fievre cérébro-spinale, Typhus cérébro-spinale. An alarmingly fatal form of epidemic fever, which prevailed in different countries of Europe, and, also, in certain portions of the United States, near the middle of the 19th century. It is considered, by Boudin, to constitute the cerebro-spinal form of the nosological group of typhus.

MENINGI'TIS GRANULAR, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Hydrocephalica, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Infantum, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Membranosa, M. spinal.

MENINGITIS MESENCEPHALICA, Inflammation of the meninges of the medulla oblongata and pons varolii more especially.

MENINGITIS PERIPHERICA, M. spinal—m. Phantasmatophora, Delirium tremens—m. Potatorum, Delirium tremens—m. Rachidian, M. spinal—m. Scrophulous, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGITIS, SPINAL, M. Rachid'ian, M. Spinal'is seu peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, Perimyeli'tis, My'elomeningi'tis, (F.) Méningite rachidienne. Inflammation of the meninges of the spinal marrow.

MENINGITIS, TUBERCULAR, see Hydrocephalus internus—m. Tuberculosa, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENIN'GIUM, (μηνιγγιον, dim. of μηνιξ, 'a membrane.') A fine, delicate membrane. The tunica arachnoidea of the brain.

MENINGO, (μηνιξ, gen. μηνιγγος, 'membrane,') in composition, membrane.

MENINGOCEPHALI'TIS, Meningoencephali'tis, Ceph'alomeningi'tis, Enceph'alomeningi'tis, (from meningo, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis.) Inflammation of the membranes and brain.

MENINGOGASTRIC FEVER, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOGASTRITIS, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOMALA'CIA, (meningo, and μαλακία, 'softening,') Softening of membranes in general.

MENINGOPH'YLAX, Custos mening'is, Depresso'rium, (F.) Dépressoire, (from meningo, and φύλαξ, 'a preserver,') An instrument for depressing the dura mater, and guarding it from injury, whilst the bone is cut or rasped.

MENINGORRHŒA, (meningo, and ῥεω, 'I flow,') Effusion of blood upon or between the membranes of the brain.

MENINGO'SIS. The union of bones by μενδ of membrane; e. g. the articulation of the bones of the cranium in the fœtus. Meningosis is a variety of Syndesmosis.

MENINGO S O M P H Y S I S, Meningosyzygi'a, (meningo, and συνψυσις, 'growing together,') Adhesion of or by membrane. Adhesion of the membranes of the brain to each other, or to the brain.

MENINGOSYZYGIA, (meningo, and συζυγία, 'a conjunction,') Meningosymphysis.

MENINGU'RIA; (meningo, and ουρον, 'urine,') The passage of urine containing membranous shreds.

MENINX, gen. Menin'gis, (μηνιξ, gen. μηνιγγος.) Membrane, (especially one that invests the brain) m. Choroides, Pia mater—m. Crassa, Dura mater—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Exterior, Dura mater—m. Interior, Pia mater—m. Media, Arachnoid membrane—m. Pacheia, Dura mater—m. Sclera, Dura mater—m. Serosa, Arachnoid membrane—m. Vasculosa, Pia mater.

MENISCHESSIS, (menes, and ισχειν, 'to restrain,') see Amenorrhœa.

MENISCI, (μηνισκος, dim. of μηνη, 'moon,') Cartilages, interarticular.

MENISPERMUM ANGULATUM, (μηνη, 'the moon,' and σπέρμα, 'seed,' in allusion to the crescentic shape of the seed.) M. Canadense.

MENISPERMUM CANADENSE, M. angulatum, Ord. Menispermaceæ. A climbing plant, growing in various parts of the United States. Said to be used in Virginia as a substitute for sarsaparilla in serofula, and to be called, in the West, Sarsaparilla. It is an excitant tonic.

MENISPERMUM COCCULUS, M. glaucum, Anamir'ta Cocculus seu paniculata, Cocculus suberosus. The systematic name of the plant, the dried fruit of which are well known by the name of Cocculus Indicus seu suberosus, Indian Berries, Bac'cæ Piscator'icæ, Indian Cock'les, Coc'cus Indicus, Coc'culi officinarum, Coc'ci orientales, Gra'na Orient'is, (F.) Coque du Levant, C. levant. These berries are remarkable for their inebriating and destructive quality to fish. The deleterious principle appears to reside in the kernel, and in the active principle called Picrotox'ine. Cocculus Indicus has been used in decoction to kill vermin. It has, at times, been added to beer, by fraudulent tradesmen, to render it more inebriating.

MENISPERMUM GLAUCUM, M. cocculus—m. Palmatum, Calumba.

MENISPERMUM TUBERCULATUM, M. Verrucosum, Cocculus crispus. A Chinese plant, an extract from the root of which is tonic to the stomach and bowels, and possesses some astringency. Dose, 5 to 10 grains.

The same may be said of Menispermum Cordifolium—the Golmcha, of Bengal.

MENISPERMUM VERRUCOSUM, M. tuberculatum.

MENOCRYPHIA, (menes, and κρυπτος, 'concealed,') Amenorrhœa.

MENOLIPSIS, (menes, and λειψις, 'want,') see Menses.

MENOPAUSIS, (menes, and παυειν, 'to cause to cease,') see Menses.

MENOPHANIA, (menses, and φαῖνω, 'to appear,') see Menses.

MENOPHANIA, (menses, and πλῆθη, 'a wandering,') Menstruation, vicarious.

MENORRHAG'IA, (menses, and ὄνυμι, 'to flow fierce,') Flow of the menses. Frequently, the word is used synonymously with uterine hemorrhage or metrorrhagia, or for immoderate flow of the menses—profuse menstruation, Parame'nia superflua seu profusa, Menorrhag'ia rubra, Catamenio'rum fluxus immodicus, Menstrua immodica seu superflua, Menorrhœa.

MENORRHAGIA, Menstruation, Metrorrhagia—m. Alba, Leucorrhœa—m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Erronea, Menstruation, erronea—m. Stillatitia, Dysmenorrhœa.

MENORRHŒA, (menses, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') The ordinary flow of the menses. Also, too long continuing, or too often returning, menstruation. Menorrhagia.

MENOSCHESIS, (menses, and ἄχω, 'to hold,') see Amenorrhœa.

MENOSTASIA, (menses, and ἵστας, 'standing,') Amenorrhœa.

MENOS'TASIS. This word, according to some, signifies the retention of the menses and their accumulation in the uterus. According to others, it means the acute pain which, in some females, precedes each appearance of the menses: a pain which has been presumed to proceed from the stasis of blood in the capillary vessels of the uterus.

MENOXEN'IA, Menoxeno'sis. (menses, and ξενος, 'foreign,') Irregular menstruation.

MENOXENOSIS, Menoxenia.

MENS, Anima, Intellect.

MEN'SA, Τραπέζα, 'a table.' The upper superficial part or corona of the jaw teeth.

MEN'SES, pl. of Mensis, (from μην, 'a month,')
