M. Muliebres, Mulieb'ria, Mēnes, Fluxus menstrualis seu lunaris, Profluviū mulieb'riū seu genitale mulieb're, Consuetudo menstrualis, Catamenia, Menstrua, Emmēnia, Tributum lunare seu menstrualis, Purgatio'nes, P. menstrualis, Gynæceia Aphed'ria, Cur'sus menstrualis, Horæ, Luna'ria, Courses, Men'strual flux, Monthly courses or periods, Flou'ers, Turus, Terms, the Reds, Troubles, (F.) Mois, Règles, Lunes, Flueurs, Affaires, Époques, Ordinaires, Purgations, Fleurs, Menstrues. The sanguinous evacuation from the uterus; Sanguis menstrualis, Men'strual blood, the monthly occurrence of which constitutes menstruation or monthly illness. The first appearance of the menses—menopha'nia—is usually preceded by the discharge of a fluid whitish matter from the vagina: by nervous excitement, and by vague pains and heaviness in the loins and thighs; numbness of the limbs, tumefaction and hardness of the breasts, &c. More or less indisposition and irritability also precede each successive recurrence of the menstrual flux. In temperate climates, each period, men'strual period, per'iodus lunaris, ordinarily continues from three to six days; and the quantity lost varies from four to eight ounces. The menses continue to flow from the period of puberty till the age of 45 or 50. At the term of its natural cessation, Menop'isis, Ménospansie (Gardanne), Menopaus'is, the flux becomes irregular; and this irregularity is occasionally accompanied with symptoms of dropsy, glandular tumours, &c., constituting the Parame'nia cessatio'nis of Good, and what is called the critical time or turn or change of life; yet it does not appear that the mortality is increased by it. With the immediate causes of menstruation we are unacquainted. We express only our ignorance, when we assert it to depend upon periodicity; the discharge comes from the vessels of the uterus and vagina, and differs from ordinary blood by its peculiar odour, and by its not coagulating. It is evidently connected with the condition of the ovaries, and—it is generally supposed—with the periodical discharge of ova from them. It is arrested, as a general principle, during pregnancy and lactation. In warm climates, women usually begin to menstruate early, and cease sooner than in the temperate regions. The quantity lost is also greater. In the colder regions, the reverse of this holds as a general rule.

Dried menstrual blood, especially of a woman in her first menstruation—Sanguinis vir'ginis primum menstrua'tæ—was formerly given internally as an anti-epileptic.

MENSTRUATION, VICARIOUS, is that which occurs from other parts than the uterus. It is called Parame'nia erro'ria, Menorrhag'ia erronea, Men'strum per alie'na loca excretio, Men'sces devii, Aberratio menstrualis seu menstruorum, Menstruatio per insolitas vias, Hæmatopla'nia seu Hæmopla'nia menstrual'is, Menopla'nia, (F.) Déviatio des Règles, Règles déviées. At times, the discharged fluid has all the characters of the menstrual; at others, it appears to be mere blood.

MENSTRUATUS, Menstruat.

MENSTRUE, Menstruum.

MENSTRUUEL, Catamenial.

MENSTRUES, Menses.

MENSTRUOUS, Catamenial. Also, one affected with the menses or catamenia.

MENSTRUUM, (F.) Menstrue, (from mensis, 'a month,')—the menstruum being, of old, usually continued in action for a month.) The monthly discharge of the female. The plural, menstrua, is now, however, always used for the menses. The name was formerly given to every substance which possesses the property of dissolving others slowly and with the aid of heat. At present, it is used synonymously with solvent. Thus—water, alcohol, ether, acids, oils, &c., are menstrua.

MENSTRUUM ACRI, Nitromuriatic acid—m. Ventriculi. Gastric juice.

MENSURA MEDICA. A measure of 48 ounces.

MENSURATIO, Meta'tio, (from mensura,

'measure.') Measurement, Medical measuring. One of the means used for exploring the state of the thoracic and other cavities. It consists in a comparative measurement of each side of the chest, by means of a riband extended from the median line of the sternum to the spine. When effusion exists on one side, the measurement is usually greater than on the other. When, on the other hand, a portion of a lung has ceased, for some time, to exert its respiratory functions, the corresponding side of the chest becomes smaller, in consequence of the contraction of the pleura, retraction of the pulmonary tissue, and greater approximation of the ribs. Instruments have been devised for this purpose. See Stethometer.

MENTA, Mentha, Penis.

MENTAGRA, (mentum, 'the chin,' and aypa, 'a seizure,') Sycosis—m. Infantum, Porrigo lupinosa.

MEN'TAGRAPHYTE, Men'tagrophyte, Microsporon mentagrophytes, from mentagra, and αυρον, 'a plant.' A name proposed by M. Gruby, of Vienna, for a cryptogamous plant, which he considers to produce mentagra.

MENTAL, Mentalis, (mens, gen. mentis,) belonging or relating to the mind, as mental phenomenon, mental diseases (Morbi mentales), &c.

In Anatomy, mental, Mentalis, (F.) Mentonier, signifies that which relates to the chin; (from mentum.)

MENTAL ARTERY, (F.) Artère mentonnière. This is given off by the inferior dental, and issues at the mental foramen to be distributed on the lower lip.

MENTAL FORAMEN, Anterior maxillary F., (F.) Trou mentonnier, is the outer orifice of the inferior dental canal. It is situated on the outer surface of the lower jaw-bone, opposite the second incisor, or the canine tooth, and gives passage to the vessels and nerves.

MENTAL FOSSA, (see Fossa, mental.)

MENTAL NERVE, (F.) Nerv mentonnier, is furnished by the inferior dental nerve. It issues by the mental foramen, and is distributed, in numerous filaments, to the muscles of the lower lip.

MENTAL REGION, Regio mentalis. The region of the chin.

MEN'THA seu MEN'TA AQUAT'ICA, (μινθη, μινθα, μινθος, 'mint,') M. palustris seu hirsuta seu rotundifolia palustris, Menthastrum, Sisymbrium menthastrum, Balsamus palustris, Watermint, (F.) Menthe aquatique, M. rouge. Nat. Ord. Labiatae. This is less agreeable than the Mentha viridis, and more bitter and pungent. It is used like spearmint.

MENTHA BALSAMEA, M. piperita.

MENTHA CAPEN'SIS, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, possesses the medical properties of the mints.

MENTHA CERVINA, Hart's pennyroyal, Hys'sop-leaved mint, Pulegium cervinum, (F.) Menthe cervine. Possesses the properties of pennyroyal, but is very unpleasant.

MENTHA CRIS'PA, M. hircynica, Colymbifera minor, Curled Mint, (F.) Menthe frisée ou crépe, Baume d'eau à feuilles ridées. Possesses the properties of peppermint.

MENTHA GENTILIS, M. viridis — m. Hercynica, M. crispa — m. Hirsuta, M. Aquatica — m. Lævigata, M. viridis — m. Officinalis, M. piperita — m. Palustris, M. Aquatica.

MENTHA PIPERITA, M. Piperitis seu officinalis seu balsamea, Peppermint, (F.) Menthe poivrée. The odour of this variety is strong and agreeable. Taste, pungent, aromatic, and producing a sensation of coldness in the mouth. Virtues depend upon essential oil and camphor. It is stomachic and carminative. It is chiefly used in the form of essential oil—the oleum menthae piperitæ.

Essence of Peppermint consists of ol. menthae pip. ʒij, sp. vin. rectif., coloured with spinach leaves, Oij. See Tinctura olei menthae piperitæ.

MENTHA PULE'GIUM, Pulegium, P. regale seu latifolium, Glechon, Pennyroyal, Pud'inggrass, (Prov.) Hil'wort, Lur'key-dish, Or'gan, (F.) Poni-liot. The oil—O'leum pule'gii, Oil of pennyroyal, —possesses the virtues of the plant. It resembles the mints in general in properties. Amongst the vulgar, it is esteemed an emmenagogue. A'QUA PULE'GII, A'qua Menthae pule'gii, Pennyroyal Water, was official in the Edinburgh and Dublin Pharmacopœias.

MENTHA ROMANA, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Rotundifolia palustris, M. aquatica — m. Saracenicæ, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita — m. Sativa, M. viridis — m. Spicata, M. viridis.

MENTHA VIRIDIS, M. Sativa seu vulgaris seu gentilis seu spicata seu lævigata, Spear'mint, (F.) Menthe sauvage ou verte ou des jardins, Baume des jardins. Odour strong, aromatic; taste warm, austere, bitterish. Virtues the same as those of the peppermint. The Oleum menthae viridis is obtained from it.

MENTHA VULGARIS, M. viridis.

MENTHASTRUM, Mentha aquatica.

MENTHE AQUATIQUE, Mentha aquatica — m. Cervine, Mentha cervina — m. Cogh. Tanacetum balsamita — m. Crépe, Mentha crispa — m. Frisée, Mentha crispa — m. des Jardins, Mentha viridis — m. Poivrée, Mentha piperita — m. Romaine, Balsamita suaveolens — m. Rouge, Mentha aquatica — m. Sauvage, Mentha viridis — m. Verte, Mentha viridis.

MENTIGO, (from mentum, 'chin,') Porrigo larvalis, Sycosis.

MENTISME, (from mens, gen. mentis, 'mind,') Any irregular movement of the mind, whether from emotion or a vivid imagination.

MEN'TOBICORNEUS, (mentum, 'chin,' and bicornens, 'two horned,') Geniohyoides.

MEN'TOLA'BIAL, Mentolabialis, (from mentum, 'the chin,' and labium, 'a lip.') Under this name Chaussier has united the muscles Levator labii inferioris, and Quadratus. See Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTOLABIAL FUR'ROW: a transverse depression situate between the lower lip and the chin, which is remarkable for the perpendicular direction of the hairs growing upon it.

MENTON, Mentum.

MENTONNE(I), (F.) Menton—now in France. A small village on the Mediterranean, in a sheltered bay bounded by Capes St. Martin and Murtola, which is much frequented by valetudinarians, especially those laboring under pulmonary affections.

MENTONNIER, Mental — m. Labial, Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTONNIÈRE, see Funda.

MENTULA, (like menta,) Penis — m. Facititia, Dildo — m. Muliebris, Cercosis, Clitoris — m. Parva, Pipinna.

MEN'TULAGRA, (mentula, 'the penis,' and aypa, 'a seizure,') A convulsive erection of the mentula or penis; such as is said to be sometimes observed in eunuchs. See Pudendagra.

MENTULATUS, Membrosus.

MEN'TUM, Geni'on, Geni'um, Anth'reon, Chin. (F.) Menton. The inferior and middle part of the face, situate below the lower lip. The chin is formed of skin, areolar tissue, muscles, vessels, nerves, and the os maxillare inferius.

MENYAN'THES TRIFOLIATA, Menyanthes, Minyan'thes, (men, and ανθος, 'a flower,' because it keeps in flower about a month [?].) Trifolium paludosum seu aquaticum seu palustre seu fibri- num, Wa'ter tref'oil, Buck'bean, Bog'bean. Nat. Ord. Gentianacææ. (F.) Trêfle d'eau ou des Maraîs ou de Caster. The taste is intensely bitter, and is extracted by water. It is tonic, anthelmintic, diuretic, cathartic, and, in large doses, emetic. In some countries, it is used as a substitute for hops in making beer.

MENYANTHES VER'NA, American buck'bean, Mars'h tref'oil, Wa'ter sham'rock, Bit'ter root, has similar properties.

MEOSIS, Meiosis.

MEPHIT'IC, Mephit'icus, (F.) Méphitique; (from mephitis.) Any thing possessed of an unwholesome property; chiefly applied to exhalations.

MERPHITIC ACID, Carbonic acid—m. Air, Carbonic acid.

MEPHITIS, see Mephitism.—m. Hepatica, Hydrogen, sulphuretted—m. Inflammabilis, Hydrogen—m. Urinosa, Ammonia.

MEPHITISM, Mephitism'us, (F.) Méphitisme. Any pernicious exhalation. Mephit'is and Mophe'ta, (F.) Mofette ou Monfette, are old names for nitrogen; and, in general, for all exhalations and gases that are unfit for respiration.

MERACUS, Merus.

MERAMAUROSIS, (mero, and amaurosis), Hypamaurosis.

MERANÆSTHESIS, Meranæsthes'ia, (mero, av, 'privative,' and αισθησις, 'sensation.') Insensibility of a part of the body.

MERATROPH'IA, (mero, and ατροφία, 'want of nourishment.') Atrophy of some part of the body.

It has been esteemed cathartic, hypnotic and cosmetic, and has been chiefly used by way of laxement. See Chenopodium Bonus Henricus.

MERCURIALIS HU'MOR, Hu'mor melanchol'ic'us. A supposititious humour with the older physicians, out of which they presumed that morbi melanchol'ici seu mercurio'les arose.

MERCURIALIS PEREN'NIS, Cynocram'bê, Can'na bras'sica, M. mont'nu, M. Sylvest'ris, Dog's mercury, (F.) Mercuriale vivace, M. de chien, M. des bois. This plant is possessed of acronarcotic properties.

MERCURIALISMUS, Hydrargyriasis.

MERCURIALIST, Mercurialis'ta. One inordinately addicted to prescribing mercury.

MERCURIALIZA'TION. The state of being affected by mercury. One under the influence of mercury is said to be mercurialized.

(Made by the reaction of iodine on mild chloride of mercury.) Two iodides may be prepared—the iodide and the biniodide. Both are violent irritants; the biniodide, especially, is a powerful caustic. Both have been given in scrofula. The biniodide is only used externally like nitrate of silver in scrofulous and certain syphilitic ulcerations. An ointment of the iodide (gr. xv ad adipis ʒij) is rubbed on scrofulous tumefactions.

MERDA, Excrement.

MERDIVOMUS, (merda, and vomo, 'I vomit,') Copremetus.

MERDUS, Excrement.

MÈRE DES PIANS (F.), ('mother of the pians,' from [L.] mater, 'mother,') Pian—m. de Seigle, Ergot.

MEREMPHRAX'IS, (mero, and εμφραξις, 'obstruction,') Obstruction or infarction of an organ or part.

MERICUS, (μερικος,) Local.

MERIDROSIS, Su'dor partialis seu localis; (mero, and ιδρωσις, 'sweating,') A partial perspiration.

MERIMNA, (μεριμνα,) Cura.

MERIMNE, (μεριμνη,) Cura.

MERISIER, (from cerise, [?]) Prunus avium.

MERISMAT'IC, Merismaticus, (F.) Mérismatique; (μερισμα, gen. μερισματος, 'division,') What takes place by division;—as 'merismatic multiplication or reproduction,' that which occurs by the splitting or division of cells or of whole beings.

MERISMOPÆDIA VENTRICULI, Sarcina ventriculi.

MERKEL'S MUSCLE, Cerato-ericoid.

MERO, (from μερος, 'a part,') in composition, a part.

MEROBALANEUM, (mero, and βαλανειον, 'a bath,') Bath, partial.

MEROBALNEUM, Bath, partial.

MEROCELE, Me'rocele, Miroce'le, Merorrhæ'tis, (meros, and κηλη, 'tumour,') Her'nia cruralis seu femoralis, Fem'oral or crural her'nia, (F.) Hernie crurale ou fémorale. In this hernia, the viscera issue from the abdomen through the crural canal; or through an opening immediately on the outer side of Gimbernat's ligament, which gives passage to lymphatic vessels. This affection is more frequent in the female than in the male, and especially in those who have had children. The tumour, formed by merocele, is generally small, round, and more or less difficult of reduction. In other respects, it possesses all the characters of hernia. The neck of the sac has, close on the outside, the epigastric artery; above, the spermatic cord and spermatic artery in the male—the round ligament in the female; on the inside, Gimbernat's ligament; and, below, the pubes. When the obturator artery arises from the epigastric, it generally passes on the outside of and below the orifice of the sac; sometimes, however, takes a turn above, and then to the inside of the opening. J. Cloquet asserts, that of 134 cases, in one only did he find the epigastric artery on the inside of the orifice of the sac.

The operation, required in strangulation of this variety, may be practised on the aponeurotic opening, by cutting downwards and inwards on the side of Gimbernat's ligament.

MEROCOXYALGIA, (meros, coxa, 'the hip,' and algos, 'pain,') Coxalgia.

MEROL'OGY, Merolog'ia, (F.) Mérologie, (from mero, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The branch of anatomy, which treats of the elementary parts or constituents of the tissues and humours of the organism.

MERO'PIA, (mero, and οψις, 'vision,') A partial obscurity of vision.

MERORRHEU'MA, gen. Merorrhæ'matis, Rheumatis'mus partialis seu localis seu Membro'rurum singulo'rurum; (mero, and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism,') Rheumatism affecting a part. Topical or local rheumatism.

MERORRHÆXIS, (meros, and ρηξις, 'a rupture,') Merocele.

MEROS (μηρος), Femur, Thigh.

MERRYANDREW. An itinerant quack, who exposes his nostrums for sale at fairs and markets. See CHARLATAN.—So called from Dr. Andrew Boorde, who lived in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Queen Mary, and who was in the habit of frequenting fairs and markets, at which he harangued the populace.

MERTEN'SIA VIRGIN'ICA, (after C. H. Mertens, botanist of Bremen,) Pulmonaria Virgin'ica, Virgin'ian Cowslip, Smooth Lungwort; indigenous. Family, Boraginaceæ. The plant is mucilaginous, and may be used as a demulcent.

MERULIUS, Morchella Esculenta—m. Auricula, Peziza auricula.

MERUS, Mer'cus, A'cratos, 'pure, genuine;' as Vinum merum, 'unmixed wine.'

MERUS (μηρος), Femur, Thigh.

MERVINE, MALE, Cypripedium luteum.

MERYCISMUS (μυρκισμος), Rumination.

MERYCOLE, see Rumination.

MERYCOLOG'IA, (μυρκαω, 'I ruminate,' and λογος, 'a description,') Any work on rumination may be so termed.

MERYPERTROPH'IA, (mero, and hypertrophia, 'supernutrition,') Hypertrophy of a part.

MESA, (μεσος, 'middle,') Genital organs.

MESARÆUM, (μεσαραιον, from meso, and αρα, 'small intestines,') Mesentery.

MESARÆICUS, Mesenteric.

MESARAIC, Mesenteric.

MESARTERIT'IS, (meso, and arteriitis, 'inflammation of an artery,') Inflammation of the middle layer of an artery.

MESEMAR, Mismar.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM COPTICUM, see Soda—m. Acinaciforme, see M. Edule.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM CRYSTALLINUM, M. ficoi'des, (μεσμβρυα, 'noon,' because its flowers expand at midday.) Diamond fig-marygold, Iceland, (F.) Glaciale, Crystalline. Nat. Ord. Ficoideæ: a plant common in the neighborhood of Cape Town. It has been recommended in dysuria, ischuria, and some other affections of the urinary organs.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM EDULÈ, and M. acinaciform'e, South African plants, are much used as domestic remedies at the Cape. The expressed juice of the leaves acts as an astringent in dysentery, and as a mild diuretic. It is also used as an antiseptic gargle in malignant sore throat, violent salivation and aphthæ, and as a lotion to burns and scalds.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM FICOIDES, m. Crystallinum.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM TORTUOSUM, also a South

African plant, is said to possess narcotic properties.

MÉSENCÉPHALE, (meso, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon,') Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MESENTERIC, Mesara'ic, Mesentericus, Mesaraicus, Mesareus, (F.) Mésentérique, Mésaraïque. That which relates or belongs to the mesentery.

MESENTERIC ARTERIES are two in number, and distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric, which arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, below the celiac. It immediately descends to the left, forwards, behind the pancreas, and in front of the third portion of the duodenum,—to gain the superior extremity of the mesentery, where it makes a long curvature, the convexity of which is turned forwards and to the left. Towards the termination of the ileum, it ends by anastomosing with a branch of the A. colica dextra inferior. At its concavity, it gives off the three Arterix colicæ dextræ, which belong to the great intestine; and, at its convexity, it sends off fifteen or twenty branches, which are distributed to the small intestines, after having formed numerous arches by their anastomoses.

2. The Inferior Mesenteric Artery arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, an inch and a half before its termination. It descends, on the left side, behind the peritoneum; engages itself in the substance of the iliac mesocolon, forming a considerable curvature, whose convexity faces the left side. When it reaches the brim of the pelvis, it passes along the posterior separation of the mesorectum, and attains the neighbourhood of the anus, under the name Superior hemorrhoidal artery. It gives off no branch at its concave part; but, from the convex, the three Arterix colicæ sinistræ arise.

MESENTERIC DISEASE, Tabes mesenterica.

MESENTERIC GLANDS are the lymphatic ganglions of the mesentery. Through them, the chyliferous vessels pass to the thoracic duct. Their uses are unknown. When diseased, nutrition is interfered with, and atrophy produced.

MESENTERIC HERNIA. If one of the layers of the mesentery be torn by a blow, whilst the other remains in its natural state, the intestines may insinuate themselves into the aperture, and form a kind of hernia. It is not known during life.

MESENTERIC PLEXUSES are furnished by the solar plexus, and have been distinguished into superior and inferior; like the mesenteric arteries which they accompany.

MESENTERIC OR MESARAIC VEINS are two in number, and belong to the vena porta. They are distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric or mesaraic or great mesaraic. This trunk receives, from above to below and on the right side, the three venæ colicæ dextræ and the Gastroepiploica dextra. Into its left side, the veins of the small intestine open. It passes in front of the transverse portion of the duodenum; and, behind the pancreas, unites with the splenic vein to concur in the formation of the vena porta.

The inferior or lesser mesenteric vein corresponds to the artery of the same name, and opens into the splenic, near the union of that vein with the superior mesenteric, and behind the pancreas.

MESENTERITIS, Mesenteritis.

MÉSÉNTÉRIQUE, Mesenteric.

MESENTERITIS, Mesenteritis, Empres'ma peritonitis mesenterica, Enteritis mesenterica, Inflammation of the mesentery, (F.) Mésentérite; (mesentery, and itis.) The pain is here deeper seated and more immediately in the mesenteric region. The external tenderness is less than in some of the other varieties of peritonitis.

MESENTERIUM (μειστερών), Mesentery—m. Crassum, Mesocolon.

MESENTERON, Mesentery.

MESENTEROPHITHISIS, Tabes mesenterica.

MES'ENTERY, Mesenterium, Mesara'ion, Mesara'um, Medi'um, Membra'na pin'guis intestino'rum, Luctes, Mesenteron, Medium intestinum, Epichor'dis; (μειστερων, from meso, and εντρον, 'intestine,') (F.) Mésentère. A term in anatomy, applied to several duplicatures of the peritoneum, which maintain the different portions of the intestinal canal in their respective situations; allowing, however, more or less motion. They are formed of two laminae, between which are contained the corresponding portion of intestine and the vessels that pass to it. One only of these duplicatures has received the name mesentery, properly so called. This belongs to the small intestine, which it suspends and retains in situ. Its posterior margin, which is the smallest, is straight, and descends obliquely from the left side of the body of the second lumbar vertebra to the right iliac fossa. Its anterior margin is curved, undulating, plaited, and corresponds to the whole length of the small intestine. The mesentery contains, between the two laminae which form it, a number of lymphatic ganglions; the trunks and branches of the mesenteric vessels; the nervous plexuses accompanying them, and many lacteals and lymphatics.

MESERA, Tutia.

ME'SIAL, (μεσος, 'middle,') Relating or appertaining to the middle.

MESIAL PLANE, an imaginary plane, dividing the head, neck, and trunk into similar halves, towards right and left. Every aspect towards this plane is mesial; and every aspect towards right or left is lateral; every lateral aspect being dextral or sinistral.

MESIANUM, Aniceton.

MESMERIC or MES'MERIC, Mesmericus; (from Anthony Mesmer, the great promulgator of animal magnetism.) Relating to mesmerism or animal magnetism:—as the 'mesmeric state,' 'mesmeric sleep,' &c. &c.

MESMERISM, Magnetism, animal.

MES'MERIST. A practitioner of, or believer in, mesmerism.

MESMERIZATION, Magnetization. The act of mesmerizing. The state of being mesmerized.

MES'MERIZED, Mesmerizatus, Mag'netized. Affected with mesmerism or animal magnetism. When the person is in a state of 'magnetic sleep,' he is said to be hypnotized.

MES'MERIZER, Animal Magnetizer, Mag'netizer, (F.) Magnétiseur. One who practises mesmerism.

MESMEROPHRENOLOGY, Phrenomagnetism.

MESO, (from μεσος, 'middle,') in composition, middle.

MESOARIUM, (meso, and οαριον), see Ovary.

MESOBLAST, (meso, and βλαστος, 'germ,') See Cytoblast and Molecule.

MESOBREGMATE, (meso, and bregma, 'the top of the head,') See Cranium.

MESOCÆCUM, (meso, and œcum). A name given to a duplicature of the peritoneum, (in some persons only,) at the posterior part of the œcum.

MÉSOCÉPHALE, (μεσο, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MESOCOLON'DRIAC, Mesochondriacus; (meso, and χονδρος, 'cartilage,') A name given by Boerhaave to fleshy fibres situate between the cartilaginous rings of the trachea.

MESOCOLIC, Mesocolicus, (meso, and κωλον, 'the colon,') Belonging or relating to the mesocolon.

MESOCOLON (μεισocolων), Mesocolium, Mesenterium cras'sum. A name given to the duplicatures of the peritoneum, which fix the different parts of the colon to the abdominal parietes. It has received different names, according to its situation. The right lumbar mesocolon fixes the ascending colon to the corresponding lumbar region. The transverse mesocolon arises from the concave arch of the colon, and forms a septum between the epigastric and umbilical regions. Its inferior portion is continuous with the mesentery. The left lumbar mesocolon, which contains the ascending colon, is continuous below with the Iliac mesocolon. The last includes between its layers the sigmoid flexure of the colon, and ends in the mesorectum. Under the right kidney, it is narrow and firm, and forms the right ligament of the colon: at the under end of the left kidney, it forms the left ligament of the colon.

MESOCRANIUM, (meso, and κρανιον, 'skull.') Sinciput.

MESOCRANUM, (μυσοκρανον, from meso, and κρανον, 'skull.') Sinciput.

MESODERMUM, (meso, and δερμα, 'skin.') Corpus mucosum.

MESODME, (μυσοδμη, 'a crossbeam,' from meso, and δομος, 'a house.') Mediastinum.

MESODMITIS, (mesodme, and itis.) Mesothelitis, Mediastinitis, Inflammatio mediastini. Inflammation of the mediastinum.

MESOËPIDID'YMIS, (meso, and επιδιδυμς, 'epididymis.') A double serous fold, like the mesocolon, formed by the tunica vaginalis passing from the body of the epididymis, and uniting it to the testicle.

MESOGASTRIUM, (meso, and γαστηρ, 'belly.') Umbilical region.

MESOGASTRIUM MÜLLERI. A portion of mesentery, which passes from the vertebral column to the left curvature of the stomach.

MESOGLOSSUS, (meso, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.') Genioglossus.

MESOGLOTTUS, (meso, and γλωττα, 'tongue.') Genioglossus.

MESOGONIUM, (meso, and γονυ, 'the knee.') Internodium.

MESOLO'BAR. Belonging or relating to the Mésolobe or Corpus callo'sum.

MESOLOBAR AR'TERIES, Arte'ria mesolob'ia, A. corporis callo'si cerebri, are the arteries of the corpus callosum.

MÉSLOBE, Corpus callosum.

MESLOBUS, (meso, and λοβος, 'a lobe.') Corpus callosum.

MESOMÈTRE, Mesometrium; (meso, and μητρα, 'uterus.') The fold of the peritoneum, which unites the uterus to the abdominal parietes.

MESOMÈ'RIA, (μησομηρια, from meso, and μηρος, 'the thigh.') The parts of the body situate between the thighs and hips.

MESOMERION, Perinæum.

MESOMPHALUM, (meso, and μφαλος, 'navel.') Umbilicus.

MESOPHLEBITIS, (meso, and phlebitis.) Inflammation of a vein. Inflammation of the middle layer of a vein.

MESOPHLEB'IUM, (meso, and φλεβ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein;') Intervenium. The space between two veins.

MESOPH'RYON (μυσοφρυον), Glabell'a, Gabel'la, Intercill'ium, Metopyrium, Na'sal em'inentie, (meso, and φρυα, 'the eyebrows.') The part between the eyebrows.

MESOPLEURIUM, (meso, and πλευρον, 'a rib.') Intercostal space.

MESOPLEURIUS, Intercostal.

MESOR'CHIUM, (meso, and ορχις, 'a testicle.') A duplicature of the peritoneum, which supports the testicle in its passage from the abdomen into the scrotum.

MESORECTUM, (meso, and rectum, 'the intestine rectum.') A triangular refection, formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior surface of the rectum and the anterior surface of the sacrum. Between the two layers of which the mesorectum is composed are found much areolar tissue, and the termination of the inferior mesenteric vessels.

MESOSCELOON, (meso, and σκελος, 'leg.') Perinæum.

MESOSCELOCEL'E, (mesosceloon, and κηλη, 'a rupture.') Hernia, perineal.

MESOSCELOPH'YMA, (mesosceloon, and φυμα, 'swelling.') A tumour of the perinæum.

MESOTH'ENAR, (meso, and θεναρ, 'the thenar,' 'the palm of the hand.') A muscle, which carries the thumb towards the palm. Winslow applied the term to the abductor pollicis, united to the deep-seated portion of the flexor brevis pollicis.

MESOT'ICA, (from mesos, 'middle.') Diseases affecting the parenchyma. Pravity in the quantity or quality of the intermediate or connecting substance of organs; without inflammation, fever, or other derangement of the general health. The first Order, class Eccritica of Good.

MESOT'ECHITIS, (mesothæchum, and itis.) Mesodmitis.

MESOT'ECHIUM, Mediastinum.

MESOT'ECHUM, (μυσοτοιχον, 'a partition wall,' from meso, and τοιχος, 'a wall.') Mediastinum.

MES'PILUS, (μυσιλη, from meso, and πιλος, 'a ball;' from the resemblance of the fruit to half a ball.) Mes'pilus German'ica seu domes'tica. Ord. Rosaceæ. The med'lar, (F.) Néflier. The fruit (F.) Nêfle, and seeds of the medlar, have both been used medicinally:—the immature fruit as an astringent, and the seeds in nephritic diseases. See Cratægus Aria and Sorbus aucuparia.

MESPILUS ARIA, Cratægus aria—m. Domestica, Mespilus, Sorbus domestica—m. Germanica, Mespilus—m. Intermedia, Mespilus oxyacantha—m. Lævigata, Mespilus oxyacantha.

MESPILUS OXYACAN'THA, M. Oxyacanthoides seu interme'dia seu læviga'ta, Oxyacantha, Spi'na al'ba, White Haw'thorn. (F.) Aubépine. The flowers of this uncommon European plant are sometimes used in infusion as a pectoral.

MESPILUS OXYACANTHOIDES, Mespilus oxyacantha.

MESQUITE, GUM. A gum, obtained in New Mexico from a tree of the same family as the Acacia. It has the same virtues as gum Arabic.

META, μετα, Meth', μὲθ', 'with,' 'together with,' 'after,' 'change of form and place.' A common prefix to terms.

METAB'ASIS, Trans'itus, Metab'olê, Metabol'ia, Met'atagê, Metallur'ia, (μεταβασις, from μεταβαινω, (meta, and βαινω, 'I go,') 'I digress.') A change of remedy, practice, &c.

METABOLE, (μεταβολη, from μεταβαλλειν, 'to transpose,') Metabasis, Transformation.

METABOLEL'OGY, Metabolelog'ia; (μεταβολη, (meta, and βαλλω), 'change,' and λογος, 'a description.') A description of the changes which supervene in the course of a disease.

METABOLIA, (μεταβολια), Metabasis.

METABOL'IC, (μεταβολικος), Metabol'icus. Appertaining to change or transformation.

METABOL'IC FORCE. Vis metabol'ica. A term employed by Schwann for the power possessed by living cells of changing the character of the substances brought in contact with them.

METACAR'PAL, Metacarpia'nia, (F.) Métacarpien, (from metacarpus.) Relating or belonging to the metacarpus.

METACARPAL AR'TERY, Arte'ria dorsa'lis metacarp'i, arises from the radial, at the moment it engages itself in the upper extremity of the abductor indicis. It descends obliquely upon the back of the hand. Its branches are distributed to the abductor indicis, and the integuments: some communicate with the dorsalis carpi.

METACARPAL ARTICULA'TIONS are those by which the last four metacarpal bones are united together at their upper extremity.

METACARPAL BONES, or bones which compose the metacarpus, are five in number; and distinguished into first, second, third, &c., beginning from the outer or radial side. They are articulated by their superior extremity with the bones of the second range of the carpus; and by the lower with the first phalanges.

METACARPAL LIGAMENT, Inferior palmar Ligament, is a fibrous band, stretched transversely before the inferior extremities of the last four metacarpal bones, which it keeps in their respective positions.

METACARPAL PHALANGES are the first phalanges of the fingers; so called, because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus.

METACARPAL RANGE or ROW of the carpal bones, (F.) Rangée métacarpienne du carpe, is the lower row of carpal bones; so called because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus. It is composed of the trapezium, trapezoides, magnum, and unciniforme.

METACARPEUS, Abductor metacarpi minimi digiti.

MÉTACARPIEN, Metacarpal—m. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti—m. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

METACARPION, (μετακαρπιον,) Metacarpus.

METACARPOPHALANGÆUS POLLICIS, Abductor pollicis manus.

METACARPOPHALANGIAN, Metacarpophalangiana, Metacarpophalangial, (F.) Métacarpophalangien. That which belongs to the metacarpus and phalanges.

METACARPOPHALANGIAN or METACARPOPHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metacarpus and the corresponding phalanges. In these articulations, the bony surfaces are incrustated with cartilage, covered by a synovial membrane, and kept in connection by means of an anterior and two lateral ligaments.

MÉTACARPOPHALANGIEN LATÉRAL SUS-PALMAIRE, ET METACARPOPHALANGIEN LATÉRAL, Interosseus manus.

METACARPUS, (meta, and καρπος, 'wrist,') Metacarpion, Posibrachia, Postcarpium, Torsus manūs, (F.) Métacarpe. The part of the hand comprised between the carpus and fingers. It is composed of five parallel bones, called metacarpal; forming the back of the hand, externally, and the palm internally.

METACERASMA, gen. Metcerasum, atias, (μετακερασμα, from meta, and κεραννμι, 'to mix,') Cerasma.

METACHEIRIXIS, (meta, and χειρ, 'the hand,') Surgery.

METACHIRISIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISMUS, Surgery.

METACHORESIS, (μεταχωρησις, from meta, and χωρηω, 'to go,') Metastasis.

METACHYSIS, (meta, and χευω, 'to pour,') Transfusion.

METACINEMA, gen. Metacive, matias, (μετακινημα, from meta, and κινωω, 'to move,') Metastasis.

METACINESIS, (μετακινησις,) Metastasis.

METACONDYLE, see Phalanx.

METACYE'SIS, (meta, and κυνησις, 'pregnancy,') Graviditas extraiterina secundaria, Extrauterine pregnancy in which the foetus is at first in the uterus, but subsequently in some other place.

METADERMATOSIS, (meta, and δερμα, gen. dermasos, 'skin,') A morbid development of the epidermis or epithelium.

METAGENESIS, (F.) Metagénese, Alternante generation, (meta, and γεναισις, 'generation,') A term, proposed by Professor Owen, to express the changes of form, which one animal species undergoes in a series of successively produced individuals, extending from the one developed from the ovum to that which becomes the image or last perfected individual. This term he employs in contradistinction to metamorphosis, which he restricts to the changes of form undergone by one and the same individual. See Generation, alternate.

METAL, (μεταλλον,) Metalium. A class of simple bodies; in general, distinguished from others by considerable specific gravity; a particular splendour; almost total opacity; insolubility in water; and the property they have of ringing when struck. Metals have no effect, except of a mechanical nature, when taken into the stomach; unless they have already undergone, or undergo in the stomach, oxidation or union with an acid; when, at times, deleterious compounds may be formed. Copper cents; half-pence; quicksilver; lead, have frequently been swallowed in the metallic state with impunity. Tin and mercury are the only metals prescribed for a mechanical effect; the former as an anthelmintic, —the latter, idly enough, in cases of fancied intussusception.

MÉTAL DES CLOCHES, Bell-metal.

METALLAGE, (μεταλλαγη, from meta, and αλασσω, 'I exchange,') Metabasis.

METALLAXIS, (μεταλλαξις,) Metallage.

METALLIC VOICE, Tintement métallique.

METALLODY'NIA, (μεταλλον, 'a metal,' and οδυνη, 'pain,') Pain owing to the injurious influence of a metal—as lead, quicksilver, &c.

METALLUM, (μεταλλον,) Metal—m. Hæmatu poeticum, Ferum.

METAMORPHICI, (Morbi,) (μεταμορφωω, (meta, and μορφη, 'form,') 'I transform,') Developmental diseases; special diseases, the incidental result of the formative reproductive and nutritive powers. (W. Farr.)

METAMORPHOSIA, Phantasmascopia, Phantasmatoscopia, (μεταμορφωω, (from meta, and μορφη, 'form,') 'I transform,') and οψις, 'vision,') Suffusio, S. Oculorum seu metamorphopsia seu myodes, Imagination (Maitre-Jean), Crup'sia, Marmor'ygge, Marmor'ygge, Mac'ule an'te oculos volitan'tes, Maraug'ia, Oc'uli marmor'ygodes, Vis'io phantas'matum, Vis'us defigur'atus, False sight, (F.) Berlue. Aberration of the sense of sight, which transmits the image of imaginary objects. This affection sometimes depends on a slight opacity in the transparent parts of the eye: the cornea, crystalline, or vitreous humour, when it is symptomatic and of no consequence. At other times, it appears to be idiopathic; and occurs particularly in those who have been in the habit of constantly fixing their eyes on very brilliant or small bodies. The objects fancied to be seen are various. They are sometimes circular, perpetually moving; or shining, or black spots, cobwebs, insects, or pieces of wool — when they are often termed Mus'cæ seu Floc'ci volitan'tes, (F.) Monches volantes, and the condition Vis'us musca'rum, Scotom'ata, Suffusio Myo'des, Myo'deops'ia, Myi'odop'sia, Myo'deops'ia, Myo'deop'sia, Visus musca'rum. These appearances sometimes continue for a few days; being dependent on the state of the nerves of the individual at the time; or they may exist for life, and ultimately impair the sight. Certain of them change their position, and appear to be seated in the humours of the eye, and — it has been supposed — in the vitreous humour more especially: hence the term entohyaloid muscæ applied to them.

If the affection be symptomatic, it is of but little moment. If idiopathic, and connected with any excitement of the brain, which is not often the case, attention will have to be paid to that organ.

METAMORPHOSIS, (μεταμορφωσις, from meta, and μορφηω, 'to shape,') see Metagenesis

METAMORPHOSIS VENTRICULI GELATINIFORMIS, Gastromalacia.

METANGISMUS, (μεταγγισμος, from meta, and αγγιον, 'a vessel,') Decantation.

METAPEDIUM, meta, and ποδιον, dim. of πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') Metatarsus.

METAPHRENON, (μεταφρενον, from meta, and φρενες, 'the diaphragm,') Dorsum.

METAPHYTEIA, (μεταφυτευω, (from meta, and φυω, 'to produce,') 'to transplant,') Transplantation.

METAPODIUM, (meta, and ποδιον, dim. of πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') Metatarsus.

METAPOROPHEA, Metaporopoe'sis, (meta, poros, 'a pore,' and ποιειν, 'to make,') The change produced in the minute pores, in the capillary extremities of vessels,—when they pass from the morbid to the healthy condition. (?)

METAPTO'SIS, (μεταπτωσις,) Metaschematism'us, Metaschemat'isis. Mutation, change; from μεταπτωω, (meta, and πτωω, 'I fall,') 'I digress,') Any change in the form or seat of a disease. Transformation.

METARRHŒA, (μεταρρῳα,) Metar'rhy'sis, (meta, and ρῳα, 'I flow,') Reflux. The transfer of a disease from without to within, or from one part to another.

METARRHYSIS, (μεταρρῳσις,) Metarrhœa.

METASCHEMATISIS, (μετασχηματισις, from meta, and σχημα, 'form,') Metaptosis.

METASCHEMATISMUS, (μετασχηματισμος,) Metaptosis.

METAS'TASIS, (μεταστασις,) Metachore'sis, Metacine'ma, Metacine'sis, (meta, and στημι, 'to place,') Displacement, Translocation. A change in the seat of a disease; attributed, by the Iliumists, to the translation of the morbid matter to a part different from that which it had previously occupied; and by the Solidists, to the displacement of the irritation. It has also been used in the same extensive sense as Metaptosis. Disputes have often been indulged, whether a case of metastasis ought not rather to be esteemed one of extension of the disease. The phenomena of gout and acute rheumatism are in favour of metastasis occasionally supervening.

METASTASIS LACTIS, Galactoplasia, Phlegmatia dolens.

METASTATIC, (μεταστατικός,) Metastatic'us, (F.) Métastatique. Belonging or relating to metastasis. A metastatic crisis is one produced by metastasis:—a metastatic affection, one caused by metastasis, &c. See Abscess, metastatic.

METASYN'CRISIS, (μετασυνκρησις, from meta, and συνκρηνω, 'I join,') Recomposit'ion. A word employed by some disciples of Asclepiades. This physician supposed, that animals are formed by the union or assemblage of atoms. He designated all bodies by the word συνκρηματα, which signifies 'assemblage.' Συνκρηνισθαι, 'to be assembled,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to exist;' and διακρηνισθαι, 'to separate,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to dissolve,' 'to cease to exist.' The word Metasynesis was invented to express the recombination of bodies after their momentary dissolution. Some have rendered the word by the Latin Recorporat'io.

METASYNCRIT'IA, (μετασυνκρητικός,) Metasyn-crit'iana, Recorporat'iva. Belonging or relating to metasynesis. A name formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the virtue of producing the metasynesis or regeneration of the body, or of some of its parts.

METASYNCRITIC CYCLE meant a determinate series of remedies employed for this purpose.

METATAR'SAL, Metatar'sens, (F.) Métatarsien. Relating or belonging to the metatarsus.

METARSAL ARTERY, Artère sus-métatarsienne of Chaussier, arises from the Arteria dorsalis Tar'si; passes transversely over the back of the foot; and furnishes, at its convexity, which is anterior, three branches, called Arteria interos'sea dorsa'les Pe'dis. These branches are distributed in the interosseous spaces.

METARSAL ARTICULATIONS are those resulting from the junction of the metatarsal bones with each other. They are strengthened, behind, by dorsal and plantar ligaments; and before, by a transverse metatarsal ligament, which is plantar, and has the greatest analogy to the inferior transverse metacarpal ligament.

METARSAL BONES, (F.) Os métatarsiens, are five in number, and distinguished by their number: first, second, third, &c., reckoning from the outer side.

METARSAL PHALANXES are the first phalanges of the toes; so called because they are united to the metatarsus.

METARSAL ROW—(F.) Rangée métatarsienne—of the bones of the tarsus, is the second row, or that contiguous to the metatarsus; comprehending the cuboides and three cuneiform bones: some add the scaphoides.

METARSEUS, see Abductor minimi digiti pedis.

MÉTARSIEN, Metatarsal.

MÉTARSUM, Metatarsus.

METARSOPHALAN'GIAN, Metatarsophalangianus, Metatarso-phalangal. Relating to the metatarsus and phalanges.

METARSOPHALANGIAN or METARSOPHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metatarsus and the corresponding phalanges. They bear the greatest analogy to the metacarpophalanganal articulations.

MÉTARSÓ-PHALANGIEN-LATÉRAL, see Interossei pedis—m. Sous-phalangien transversal du premier orteil, Transversus pedis.

METAR'SUS, Metar'sium, Metape'dium, Metapo'dium, Præcor'dium seu Solum pe'dis, Vestig'ium pe'dis, (F.) Métarse, (meta, 'after,' and ταρος, 'the tarsus,') That part of the foot which is situate between the tarsus and toes, corresponding with the metacarpus. It is composed of five parallel bones; one to each toe. Like the metacarpal bones, they are developed from two points of ossification.

METATH'ESIS, (μεταθεσις, from μεταθημι, (meta, and θημι, 'to place,') 'I change place,') Transposit'io, Transposit'ion. An operation, by which a morbid agent is removed from one place to another, where it may produce less disturbance in the exercise of the functions:—as, for example, in the operation of depressing cataract, or when calculus in the urethra is pushed back into the bladder. Also, Derivation.

METATIO, (meto, metatus, 'to measure,') Mensuration.

METATOC'IA, (meta, and τοκος, 'birth,') Parturition in a preternatural manner. Preternatural labour.

METAPTOSIS, (μεταπτωσις, from μεταπτωω, 'to change place,') Diadexis.

MÉTENSOMATOSIS, (μετενσωματωσις, from meta, en, and σωμα, 'body,') Incorporation.

METEORISMUS, (μετεωρισμος, from μετεωριζω, 'to elevate,') Sublimation, Tympanites.

METEOROL'OGY, (μετεωρολογία,) Meteorolog'ia. (μετεωρος, (meta, and αιωρω, 'I lift up,') 'a meteor,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') The science, whose object is the knowledge of the origin, formation, appearance, &c., of meteors. The state of the atmosphere has a most important bearing upon the health of animals. Every epidemic affection has its causes seated there. Meteorological conditions have, hence, ever been attended to by the physician for the purpose of detecting the precise character of any particular epidemic influence. The barometer, thermometer, and hygrometer are the instruments used with this intent—to defect, as well the varying weight or pressure, and the temperature, as the moisture. Perhaps, of the three conditions, the last exerts more influence in the production of disease than either of the others. Our knowledge, however, of this part of physics is extremely limited and unsatisfactory.

METER, (μετρον, 'a measure,') A suffix to words denoting 'a measure,' as in Barometer, Pleximeter, &c. Also uterus, (from μετρον.)

METH. A prefix to terms. See Meta.

METHÆMACHYMIA, (meth, αίμα, 'blood,' and χυω, 'to pour,') Transfusion.

METHÆMATA, (meth, and αίμα, 'blood,') The capillary or intermediate system of vessels in which the blood undergoes the change from venous to arterial, and conversely. See Capillary vessels.

METHE, (μεθη,) Temulentia.

METHEGLIN, ([W.] meddyglynn,) Melizomum.

METHEMERINUS, (μεθημερινος, 'daily,' from meth, and ημερα, 'a day,') Quotidian.

METHOD, (μεθοδος,) Meth'odus, (meth, and ὁδος, 'way,') This word has different acceptations in the sciences. In medicine, curative method, meth'odus medendi, is the methodical treatment of disease.

METHOD OF COUNTING, Method, numerical—m. Mariano's, see Lithotomy.

METHOD, NUMERICAL, Method of Observation or of Counting, of Louis, (F.) Méthode numérique, consists in observing every case and every symptom of a case numerically, so as to ensure, as far as practicable, accuracy of observation; and to enable us, by the analysis and collation of such facts, to deduce general laws and conclusions. Also, the application of numbers to the study of disease. See Statistics, medical.

METHOD, READY, of Dr. Marshall Hall, see Ready Method—m. Sylvester's, see Sylvester's method.

MÉTHODE NUMÉRIQUE, Method, numerical, Statistical, medical—m. Perturbatrice, Perturbatrix (Medicina)—m. Stibio-dermique, see Unguentum antimonii.

METHODICAL COMPRESSION, see Compression.

METHODICS, Methodists.

MÉTHODIQUES, Methodists.

METHODISTS, Methodical sect, Methodics, (F.) Méthodistes, Méthodiques. A sect of physicians whose doctrine was in vogue after that of the Empirics and Dogmatists, towards the end of the first century. According to the Methodists, of whom Themison was the chief, almost every disease is dependent on contraction or relaxation—strictum or laxum. To these two causes, they added a third—mixed or compound—to include those affections which partook of the two characters. The doctrine, Medicina methodica, Methodism'us, Meth'odism, resembled, in some respects, that of Brown.

METHODOLOGY (MEDICAL), Methodology 'ia Med'ica, (methodos, 'method,' and logos, 'a discourse,') A word used, by the French more especially, to signify method applied to the study of any science. Medical Methodology, consequently, means method applied to the study of medicine.

METHODUS, (μεθοδος,) Method—m. Cataleptica, see Cataleptic—m. Celsiana, see Lithotomy—m. Curatoria, Therapeutics.

METH'ODUS DERIVAT'ORIA. The derivative or revellent system of treatment.

METHODUS ENDERMATICA seu ENDERMICA, see Endermic—m. Franconiana, see Lithotomy—m. Guytoniana, see Lithotomy—m. Medendi, Method of cure, Therapeutics.

METHOMA'NIA, (μεθη, 'drunkenness,' and μαγια, 'mania,') An irresistible desire for intoxicating substances. Temulentia.

METHU, (μεθυ,) Wine. See Temulentia.

METHYLE, HYDRATED OXIDE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYLENE, BIHYDRATE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYSMUS, (μεθυσις,) Temulentia.

METHYSMUS, (from μεθη, 'intoxication,') Temulentia.

METHYS'TICUS, (μεθυστικός,) That which causes, or pertains to, drunkenness.

METHYSTOPHYLLUM GLAUC'UM, (μεθυστικός, 'intoxicating,' and φυλλον, 'a leaf,') A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amyridaceæ, an infusion of whose leaves is pleasant to the taste, and is used in bronchitis, asthma, and other thoracic diseases. With the Bushmen and others, it is a favourite beverage, and is called by them Boschjesmanstee, 'Bushman's tea.' It is, also, chewed.

MÉTIS, (from mistus, 'mixed,') see Hybrid.

MÉTISSAGE, Crossing.

METODONT'ASIS, (meta, and ὀδοντασις, 'dentition,') Faulty development of the teeth.

METOPAGES, (μετωπον, 'front,' and πηγνυμι, 'to fix,') Symphysis.

METOPANTRA, (metopon, and αυτρον, 'a cave,') Frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRAL'GIA, (metopantra, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRI'TIS, Inflammat'io s'z'numfrontal'ium, (metopantra, and itis,) Inflammation of the frontal sinuses.

METOPION, Bubon galbanum.

METOPION, (μετωπιος, 'pertaining to the forehead,') Mesophryon.

METOPODYNIA, (metopon, and ὀδυνη, 'pain,') Neuralgia frontalis.

METOPON, (μετωπον, from meta, and ὦψ, 'the eye,') Front, Frontal bone.

MET'OPOSCOPY, Μετοποσκοπ'ια, (μετοποσκοπια, from metopon, and σκοπειν, 'to view,') The art of knowing the temperament and character of a person by inspecting the traits of his forehead or face. See Physiognomy.

METRA, Uterus.

METRÆ, (μητρα, pl. of μητρα, 'the womb,') Secundines.

METRÆMORRHAGIA, (metra, and hæmorrhagia,) Metrorrhagia.

METRÆMORRHŌIDES, (metra, and αιμορροειδες, 'hemorrhoids,') Hemorrhoids or varicose veins at the orifice of the uterus.

METRAL'GIA, Μετροδυν'ια, Uteral'gia, (metra, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the uterus. See Hysteralgia.

METRANÆMIA, (metra, and ανæμία,) An anæmic condition of the uterus.

METRANASTROPHE, (metra, and αναστροφή, 'inversion,') Uterus, inversion of the.

METRANEURYSMUS, (metra, and ανευρυσμος, 'dilatation,') Metureysma.

METRATRE'SIA, Imperforat'io uteri, (metra, and απρησια, 'imperforation,') An unnatural closure of the uterus.

METRATROPI'IA, (metra, α, 'privative,' and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Atrophy or want of development of the uterus.

METRAUX'E, Hypertroph'ia seu Sarco'sis uteri, (metra, and αυξη, 'increase,') Hypertrophy of the uterus.

METRECTA'SIA, (metra, and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of the womb.

METRELCO'SIS, Μετρηλοκο'sis, (metra, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer,') Ulceration of the uterus.

METREMPHRAX'IS, (metra, and εμπρασσω, 'I obstruct,') Obstruction of the womb or of the vessels of the womb—Infarctus uteri. A name under which some authors have confounded chronic inflammation of that viscus, and the different degenerations to which it is exposed.

METREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

METREN'CHYTA, Metren'chytes, (metra, and  $\epsilon\chi\omega$ , 'I inject.') Injection of the uterus. Substances injected into the uterus are called Metren'chyta.

METREURYS'MA, gen. Metreury's matis, Metreury's'mns, (metra, and ευσμα, 'dilatation.') A morbid dilatation of the womb.

METRHELOSIS, Metrelcosis.

METRYMENITIS, (metra,  $\mu\epsilon\mu\upsilon\eta$ , 'membrane,' and itis.) see Metritis.

METRIA, (from metra.) Puerperal fever.

METRIOPATHIA, (μετριος, 'tempered,' and παθος, 'affection.') State of an individual whose passions are temperate.

METRI'TIS, (metra, and itis.) Fe'bris uteri'na, Hyster'itis, Empres'ma Hyster'itis, Inflammat'io U'teri, Metrophlo'osis, Inflammat'io of the U'ter-us or Womb, (F.) Inflammat'ion de la matrice, Hyster'ite. The characteristic symptoms of this affection are:—pain, swelling, and tenderness in the hypogastric region; with heat, pain, and tenderness of the os uteri; vomiting, smallness, and frequency of pulse. It occurs most frequently after delivery, Lochometr'itis, when there is generally suppression of the lochial discharge. The treatment must be vigorous,—bleeding early, so as to make a decided impression; followed by a full dose of opium, fomentations, blisters, &c.

Acute inflammation of the womb, eated in its internal membrane, Eudometr'itis, Metrymen'itis, Eumetr'itis, has been called Inflammat'io catarrh'alis uteri or Acute catarrh', (F.) Catarrhe aigu, of that viscus. It is known by the discharge of a clear, stringy fluid per vaginam; preceded by pains, which, from the hypogastric region, shoot to the thighs, groins, &c., with more or less fever. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment. Chronic metritis sometimes succeeds the acute. To it must be referred the indurations, observed in the uterus, and many of the leucorrhœal discharges to which females are subject.

METRITIS RHEUMATICA, Metrorrhœma—m. Septica, Metrocœce—m. Venosa, see Phlebitis.

METROBLENNORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROBLENNŒZEMIA, (metra,  $\beta\lambda\epsilon\nu\nu\alpha$ , 'mucus,' and  $\zeta\eta\nu\alpha$ , 'loss,' Leucorrhœa uteri.)

METROBOTRYTES, (metra, and  $\beta\upsilon\tau\tau\upsilon\varsigma$ , 'a cluster of grapes,') Cauliflower excrecence of the uterus.

METROC'ACE, Metrit'is sept'ica, Cacome'tra, Cacome'tria, (metra, and κακος, 'evil,') Putrescency or gangrene of the uterus.

METROCAMPUSIA, (metra, and  $\kappa\alpha\mu\psi\iota\varsigma$ , 'a bending,') Hysteroloxia.

METROCARCINO'MA, gen. Metrocarcino'matis, Hystero-carcino'ma, U'teri carcino'ma, Can'cer u'teri, (metra, and  $\kappa\alpha\kappa\iota\nu\alpha$ , 'cancer,') Cancer of the uterus.

METROCATARRHUS, (metra, and  $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\rho\upsilon\varsigma$ , 'catarrh,') Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROCELE, (metra, and  $\kappa\eta\lambda\eta$ , 'a rupture,') Hysterocele.

METROCELIDES, ( $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon\rho$ , 'mother,' and  $\kappa\eta\lambda\iota\varsigma$ , 'a mark,') Nævus.

METROCHOL'OSIS, (metra, and  $\chi\omicron\lambda\omicron\varsigma$ , 'bile,') Febris puerperal'is bilio'sa.

METRODY'NIA, (metra, and  $\delta\omicron\nu\nu\alpha$ , 'pain,') Metralgia.

METROHŒMIA, (F.) Hypermetrôhémie, (metra, and  $\alpha\iota\mu\alpha$ , 'blood,') Hyperæmia or congestion of blood in the uterus.

METROHEMORRHAGE, Metrorrhagia.

METROLEUCORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROLOXIA, (metra, and  $\lambda\omicron\zeta\omicron\varsigma$ , 'oblique,') Hysteroloxia.

METROMALACOMA, gen. Metromalaco'matis, (metra, and  $\mu\alpha\lambda\alpha\kappa\omicron\varsigma$ , 'soft,') Hysteromalacia.

METRCMALACOSIS, Hysteromalacia.

METROMANIA, Nymphomania.

METROMY'ZEUS, (metra, and  $\mu\upsilon\zeta\omega$ , 'I suck,') An exhausting syringe, to be applied to the os uteri for exhausting the womb in cases of amenorrhœa.

METRONCUS, (metra, and  $\omicron\upsilon\kappa\alpha\varsigma$ , 'a tumour,') Hysteroncus.

METROPARAL'YSIS, (metro, and  $\mu\alpha\rho\alpha\lambda\upsilon\sigma\iota\varsigma$ , 'paralysis,') Paralysis of the uterus.

METROPATHIA, (metro, and  $\mu\alpha\theta\omicron\varsigma$ , 'affection,') An affection of the womb.

MÉTRO-PÉRITONITE, Metroperitonitis—m. Puerp'rale, see Peritonitis.

METROPERITONITIS, (metra, and peritonitis.) Inflammat'io u'teri et peritonœ'i, (F.) Métropéritonite. Inflammation of the uterus and peritoneum. Puerperal Fever. See Peritonitis.

METROPHLEBITIS, Phlebometr'itis, (metra,  $\phi\lambda\epsilon\psi$ , gen.  $\phi\lambda\epsilon\beta\omicron\varsigma$ , 'a vein,' and itis.) Inflammation of the veins of the uterus. See Phlebitis.

METROPHLEBITIS PUERPERALIS, see Phlebitis.

METROPHLOGOSIS, (metra, and  $\phi\lambda\omicron\gamma\omega\sigma\iota\varsigma$ , 'inflammation,') Metritis.

METROPHTHISIS, Phthi'sis uteri'na, (metra, and  $\phi\theta\iota\omega$ , 'I consume,') Consumption from ulceration of the uterus—U'lcera seu Helco'sis u'teri.

METROPHYMA, gen. Metrophy'matis, (metra, and  $\phi\upsilon\mu\alpha$ , 'a swelling,') Hysteroncus.

METROPHYSETERION, (metra, and  $\phi\upsilon\sigma\omega\omega$ , 'I inflate,') An instrument for applying gasiform agents to the uterus.

METROPLETHO'RA, Metryperæ'mia, (metra, and  $\mu\lambda\epsilon\theta\omega\rho\alpha$ , 'fulness,') Congestion or hyperæmia of the uterus.

METROPOL'YPUS, Hyst'eropol'ypus, Polyppus U'teri, (metra, and  $\mu\omicron\lambda\upsilon\pi\upsilon\varsigma$ .) Polyppus of the uterus.

METROPROPTOSIS, (metra, pro, and  $\mu\pi\omega\sigma\iota\varsigma$ , 'a falling,') Prolapsus uteri.

METROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METRORRHAG'IA, Metrorrhag'ia, Hæmorrhagia uteri'na seu uteri, Sanguiflux'us uteri'vus, Sanguinis stitlicid'ium ab U'tero, Fluor uteri'ni sanguinis, Profluvium Sanguinis ex u'tero, Hysteroorrhag'ia sanguinea, Hysteroorrhœa, Hæmorrhœa uteri'na (of some), Menorrhag'ia (of some), Hæmatome'tra, Hæmatoma'tra, U'terine Hæmorrhage, Hemorrhage from the Womb, Flooding, Metrokenorrhage, (F.) Hémorrhagie de la Matrice, Pertes, Pertes utérines rouges, P. de sang, (metra, and  $\rho\eta\gamma\gamma\upsilon\mu\iota$ , 'I break forth,') An effusion of blood from the inner surface of the uterus, either at the menstrual or other period; but in a greater quantity than proper. Uterine hemorrhage may be caused by those influences which produce hemorrhage in general. It happens, however, more frequently during pregnancy, and during or after delivery, when the vascular system of the uterus is so circumstanced as to favour its occurrence more than at other times. The termination of metrorrhagia is usually favourable. Should it, however, be very copious, or frequently recur; or should it happen to a great extent after delivery. death may take place very speedily; and, in some cases, without the discharge being perceptible; constituting internal hemorrhage.

Uterine hemorrhage may be active or passive; requiring obviously a different treatment. The main management is similar to that of hemorrhage in general;—the horizontal posture; acid drinks; free admission of cool air; cold applications to the loins, thighs, and abdomen; injection of cold water, even of iced water, into the vagina; plugging the vagina, so as to prevent the discharge per vaginam, and thus induce a coagulum in the mouths of the bleeding vessels. Such will be the special plan adopted where the hemorrhage has occurred in one not recently delivered. In uterine hemorrhage after delivery, the same cooling plan must be followed; but, as the flow of blood is owing to the uterus not contracting so as to constrict its vessels, pressure must be made on the abdomen to aid this; and, if necessary, the hand must be introduced into the uterus to stimulate it to contraction. Should the female be excessively reduced, so as to render the accoucheur apprehensive that she may expire from loss of blood, excitants may be exhibited. The profuse exhibition of opium in such cases is, at least, a doubtful plan.

Transfusion has, at times, been practised as a last resource.

METORRHEU'MA, gen. Metorrhœu'matis, Rheumatismus Uteri, Hysteralgia rheumatica seu catarrhalis, Metritis rheumatica, (F.) Rheumatisme de l'utérus; (metra, and ῥευμα, 'defluxion,' 'rheumatism.') Rheumatism of the uterus.

METORRHEXIS, (metra, and ῥηξις, 'rupture.') Uterus, rupture of the.

METORRHE'ŒA, (metra, and ῥεω, 'I flow.') A protracted discharge of any fluid from the uterus.

METROSALPINGITIS, (metrosalpinx, and itis, 'inflammation.') Inflammation of the Fallopian tube.

METROSALPINGORRHEXIS, (metrosalpinx, and ῥηξις, 'rupture.') Rupture of a Fallopian tube.

METROSALPINX, gen. Metrosalpin'gis, (metra, and σαλπιγξ, 'a trumpet.') Tube, Fallopian.

METROSCIRRHUS, Hysteroscirrhus, Scirrhus seu Carcinoma uteri, (metra, and σκιρρος, 'scirrhus.') Scirrhus of the uterus.

METROSCOLIOMA, (metra, and σκολια, 'oblique.') Hysteroloxia.

METROSCOPE, Metroscopium, (metra, and σκοπεω, 'I view.') An instrument, invented by M. Nauche, for listening to the sounds of the heart of the foetus, in uterogestation, when the sounds and movements are imperceptible through the parietes of the abdomen. The extremity of the instrument—the first notion of which was given to M. Nauche by the stethoscope of Laënnec—is introduced into the vagina and applied against the neck of the uterus.

METROSIDEROS GUMMIFERA, see Kino.

METROSTERE'SIS, (metra, and στερησις, 'privation.') Extirpation of the uterus. Want of uterus.

METROSYNIZE'SIS, Hysterosynize'sis, (metra, and συνιζησης, 'running together.') Morbid union of the uterus to adjacent parts.

MÉTROTOME, Hysterotomus.

METROTOMIA, (metra, and τομη, 'section.') Cæsarean section.

METRYPERÆMIA, (metra, and hyperæmia), Metroplethora.

METRYPERÆSTHESIS, (metra, and hyperæsthesia.) See Uterus, irritable.

MEU, Æthusa meum.

MEULIÈRE, (from mola, 'a mill.') Molar.

MEUM, (from μευον, 'small,' in allusion to the leaves.) Æthusa meum—m. Anethifolium, Æthusa meum—m. Athamanticum, Æthusa meum.

MEURTRISSURE, (from (L.) mors, gen. mortis, 'death.') Contusion.

MEVIUM, Syphilis.

MEZEA (μίζεα), Genital organs.

MEZEREON, Daphne mezereum.

MEZEREUM, Daphne mezereum—m. Acctatum, see Daphne mezereum.

MIAMMA gen. Miamm'otus, (μιαμμα), Miasma.

MIANSIS (μιανσις), Miasma.

MIARIA (μιαρια), Miasma.

MIAS'MA, pl. Mias'mata, M'iasm, (μιασμα, 'a stain,' from μιανω, 'I contaminate.') Miam'ma, Mias'sis, Mia'ria, Mias'mus, Inquinamentum, Mol'rus'sis, Contagium. The word miasm has, by some, been employed synonymously with contagion. It is now used more definitely for any emanation, either from the bodies of the sick, or from animal and vegetable substances, or from the earth, especially in marshy districts, (Marsh poison, Effluvium palustrè, Gas palustrè, Limnæoph'itis, (F.) Intoxication des Marais), which may exert a morbid influence on those who are exposed to its action. To these terrestrial emanations—the Koinomias'mata of Dr. E. Miller, of New York—the Italians give the name aria cattiva, but, more commonly, malaria ('bad air'); a word which has been adopted into other languages. The deleterious effluvia, originating from the decomposition of matter derived from the human body, have been called by Dr. Miller, Idiomias'mata; the epithets Koino and Idio being derived respectively from koinos, 'common, and idios, 'personal.' Of the miasms which arise either from the animal body or from the most unhealthy situations, we know, chemically, nothing. All that we do know is, that, under such circumstances, emanations take place, capable of causing disease in many of those who are exposed to their action.

MIASMAT'IC, Miasmatica. Belonging or relating to miasmata. Sauvages, in his classification of diseases according to their etiology, has a class under the name Morbi miasmatici, miasmatic diseases; and Miasmatici (morbi) is an order of the class Zymotici of Dr. Wm. Farr. A fever that arises from marshy miasms, is styled malaria, paludal, Helopyra, Helopyretus, &c.

MIASMUS, Miasma.

MIAULANT'ES, (miauler, 'to mew,' formed by onomatopœia.) See Convulsioninaire.

MICÆ PANIS, ('crumbs of bread,') see Triticum.

MICATIO CORDIS, (micare, micatum, 'to move quickly,') Systole.

MICHE'LIA CHAMP'ACA, (after P. A. Micheli, a Florentine botanist,) Champaca, Michelia Ts'jampaca. Ord. Magnoliaceæ. An Oriental tree, much prized for the odour and beauty of its flowers. The oily infusion of the flowers is employed in the Moluccas in headache.

MICLE'TA. A medicine used by Mesue for arresting hemorrhage; perhaps, according to Siebenhaar, from the Arabic, michnata, "proved by experience."

MICRANATOMIA, (micro, and anatomia), see Anatomy.

MICRANGIA, (micro, and αγγειον, 'a vessel,') Capillary vessels.

MICRENCEPHALIUM, (micro, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon,') Cerebellum.

MICRENCEPHALON, Cretinism.

MICRENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

MICRO, (μικρος, 'small,') in composition, smah MICROCEPHALIA, (micro, and κεφαλη, 'head,') See Microcephalus.

MICROCEPH'ALUS, Mikroceph'alus, Micro cran'ius. One who has a small head. A monster having a small imperfect head, or a small imperfect cranium. The condition is called Microceph'al'ia, Cranioostenosis, (F.) Microcéphalie: with some it means Idiotism.

MICROCORIA, (micro, and κορη, 'pupil,') Myosis.

MI'CROCOSM, Microcos'mus, (μικροκοσμος), (micro, and κοσμος, 'world,') A little world. Some philosophers have given this appellation to man, whom they consider as the epitome of all that is admirable in the world. The world they call Ma'crocosm, (from μακρος, 'great,')

MICROCOSMETOR, (micro, and κοσμητωρ, (from κοσμων,) 'a regulator,') Vital principle.

MICROCOSM'ICA MACH'INA. The organism of man.

MICROCOSMICA SCIENTIA, Physiology.

MICROCOSMICUM SAL, with the ancients meant the salts of the urine.—Sal ur'ium.

MICROCOSMOGRAPHIA, (microcosmus, and γραφη, 'a description.')

Physiology.

MICROCOSMUS, Microcosm.

MICROCOUSTIC, Microcous'ticus, (micro, and ακουω, 'I hear.')

This word, as well as Microph'lonous, (μικρος, 'small,' and φωνη, 'voice,') means any thing that contributes to increase the intensity of sound—as the speaking trumpet—by collecting the sonorous rays.

MICROCRANIUS, (micro, and κρανιον, 'cran-ium.')

Microcephalus.

MICROGLOS'SIA, (micro, and γλωσσα,

'tongue.')

Original smallness of tongue.

MICROLEUCONYMPHÆA, (from micro, λευκος, 'white,' and νυμφαα.)

Nymphæa alba.

MICROLOGY, (μικρολογία, from micro, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

See Microscopy.

MICROMELUS, Hemim'cles, (micro, and μελος,

'a limb.')

A monster having imperfectly developed extremities.

MICROMMATUS, (μικροματος, from micro, and μμα, gen. μματος, 'the eye.')

Microphthalmus.

MICROPHONOUS, (micro, and φωνη, 'voice.')

See Microcoustic.

MICROPTHAL'MUS, Microm'matus, (micro, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.')

One who has small eyes.

A monster with two small, or imperfectly developed eyes.

A small eye,—Ophthalmid'ium, Ophthal'mium.

MICROPODIA, Micropus.

MICROPROSOPUS, Aproso'pus, (micro, and προσωπον, 'face.')

A monster in which a part of the face is absent.

MI'CROPUS, (micro, and πους, gen. ποδος,

'foot.')

One who has small feet.

The condition is called Micropod'ia.

MI'CROPYLE, Microp'yula, (micro, and πυλη,

'gate.')

An opening in the epiderm of seeds, through which the fecundating pollen enters the ovule to fecundate it.

It has been supposed, that such a micropyle exists in the human ovule.

MICROSCHEIDES, (micro, and σχιδος, gen. σχιδος,

'a testicle.')

They who have very small testicles.

MICROSCOPY or MICROS'COPY, Microscop'ia;

(micro, and σκοπη, 'a view.')

Observation by the microscope;

an important agency in the examination of the healthy and morbid tissues.

A description of the results of such observation is Micrography.

Micrology is often used with the same signification, and for a treatise on the microscope and the results of microscopy.

MICROSOMATIA, (micro, and σωμα, gen. σωματος,

'body.')

Nanosomia.

MICROSOMIA, (micro, and σωμα, 'body.')

Nanosomia.

MICROSPHYC'TUS, (micro, and σφυγμος,

'pulse.')

Smallness or weakness of pulse.

MICROSPORON AUDOUNI, (micro, and σπορον,

'a seed, a spore.')

See Fungus, and Porrigo decalyans—m. Furfur, and Chloasma and Fungus—m. Mentagrophytes,

Mentagrophyte, see Fungus.

MICROS'TOMUS, (micro, and στομα, 'mouth.')

One who has a small mouth.

MICROTE'SIA, (μικροτης, 'smallness,')

Par'tium organica'rum par'vitas morbo'sa.

Morbid smallness of organic parts.

MICROTRAPEZIA, (micro, and τραπεζα,

'a table.')

Leptotrophia.

MICROTRICH'IA, (micro, and τριχη, gen. τριχος,

'hair.')

Fineness or shortness of hair.

MICROTROPHIA, (micro, and τροφή,

Millet. It is so called from the eruption resembling the seed of the milium or millet.

Fever, accompanied by an eruption of small, red, isolated pimples, rarely confluent, but almost always very numerous, slightly raised above the skin, and presenting, at the end of 24 hours, a small vesicle filled with a white transparent fluid, which quickly dries up, and separates in the form of scales. Miliary fever is now rare, in consequence of the cooling practice in fevers and other states of the system.

It is almost always brought on by external heat, and hence the prevention is obvious.

The treatment is simple. It requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, in ordinary cases.

MILK, (Sax. melc.) Lac, Gal'a, Hu'mor lactens, Lactes ni'veus, (F.) Lait. A fluid secreted by the mammary glands of the females of the mammalia. The skimmed milk of the cow, (F.) Lait de Vache, contains water, caseous matter, traces of butter, sugar of milk, chloride of sodium, phosphate, and acetate of potassa, lactic acid, lactate of iron, and earthy phosphates. The cream is formed of butter, casein, and whey, in which there is sugar of milk and salts. When examined by the microscope, milk is seen to contain a large number of particles, of irregular size and shape, varying from  $\frac{1}{32000}$ th to  $\frac{1}{30000}$ th of an inch in diameter, floating in a colorless fluid—liquor lactis. They consist of oily matter, surrounded by a delicate pellicle, and are the milk globules.

Cow's milk is employed for the preparation of cream, butter, cheese, whey, sugar of milk, and frangipane. It is useful in a number of cases of poisoning; either by acting as a demulcent, or by decomposing certain poisons, or by combining with others so as to neutralize them. It is constantly employed as aliment, and may be regarded as an emulsion in which butter and casein are found in suspension. When taken into the stomach, it is coagulated by the gastric fluids, and the coagulum is digested like any other solid. The watery parts are absorbed.

Between milk, flour, and blood, there is great similarity of composition. The following table is given by Dr. Robert Dundas Thomson:

|                        |          |                   |
|------------------------|----------|-------------------|

| Phosphate of soda,     |          |                   |
| lime,                  |          |                   |
| magnesia,              |          |                   |
| iron,                  |          |                   |

From a considerable number of experiments, Messrs. Deyeux and Parmentier class the six kinds of milk, which they examined, according to the following table, as regards the relative quantity of materials they contain.

| CASEIN. | BUTTER. | SUGAR OF MILK. | SERUM. |
|---------|---------|----------------|--------|
| Goat    | Sheep   | Woman          | Ass    |

MILK ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MILK, ALMOND, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MILK AND SODA WATER. An agreeable mode of taking milk in cases where it lies heavily on the stomach. Heat, nearly to boiling, a teacupful of milk; dissolve in it a teaspoonful of sugar, put it into a large tumbler, and pour over it two-thirds of a bottle of soda water.

MILK, ASSES', (F.) Lait d'Assese, considerably resembles human milk, of which it has the consistency, smell, and taste: but it contains a little less cream, and more soft, caseous matter. It is often used by those labouring under pulmonary affections.

Artificial Asses' Milk may be made by taking gelatin  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss; dissolving it, by the aid of heat, in barley water Oij; adding refined sugar  $\mathfrak{z}$ j; pouring into the mixture new milk Oj; and beating the whole with a whisk.

It may also be prepared by dissolving sugar of milk  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij in tepid skimmed cow's milk Oj.

MILK BLOTCH, Porriigo larvalis—m. Crust, Porriigo larvalis.

MILK, EWES, (F.) Lait de Brebis. It affords more cream than cows' milk; but the butter is softer. The caseum, on the contrary, is fatter, and more viscid. It contains less serum than cow's milk. The Roquefort cheeses are made from it.

MILK FEVER, see Fever, milk—m. Glass, Breast glass—m. Globules, see Milk.

MILK, GOATS', (F.) Lait de Chèvre, resembles cows' milk: the butyraceous matter, however, which enters into its composition, is more solid than that of the cow.

Artificial Goat's Milk may be made by taking fresh suet  $\mathfrak{z}$ j; cutting it into small pieces; tying it in a muslin bag, large enough to leave the morsels free from compression; and boiling in a quart of cow's milk, sweetened with a quarter of an ounce of white sugar candy.

Used as a diet in scrofulous cases, and also in phthisis.

MILK, GREEN, Colostrum.

MILK, HU'MAN, (F.) Lait de femme,—contains more sugar of milk, and cream, and less caseum, than cows' milk. Its composition differs according to the distance of time from delivery.

MILK KNOT, Galactoganglion; (F.) Ganglion lacteum. The knots often observed in the breast after inflammation of the organ, or for some time after the suppression of the secretion. They generally end by resolution.

MILK LEG, Phlegmatia dolens.

MILK, MALES', Sperm.

MILK, MARES', (F.) Lait de Jument,—contains only a small quantity of fluid butyraceous matter; a little caseum, softer than that of cows' milk, and more serum.

MILK SCALL, Porriigo larvalis.

MILK SICK'NESS, Sick stom'ach, Swamp sick'ness, Tires, Slows, Stiff joints, Pu'king fever, River sick'ness. A disease occasionally observed in the States of Alabama, Indiana, and Kentucky, which affects both man and cattle, but chiefly the latter. It is attributed in cattle to something eaten or drunk by them; and in man to the eating of the flesh of animals labouring under the disease. Owing to the tremors that characterize it in animals, it is called the Trem'bles. It is endemic.

The symptoms of the disease are such as are produced by the acronarcotic class of poisons—vomiting, purging, extreme nervous agitation, &c.: and the approved indications of treatment appear to be—gentle emetics and laxatives, with quiet, and muciluginous drinks.

MILK, SNAKES', Euphorbia corollata.

MILK, SOLID'IFIED. Milk, to which little less than an equal weight of white sugar has been added, evaporated to dryness. When redissolved in water, it has all the qualities of fresh milk, with the additional quantity of sugar.

To milk, evaporated to dryness, M.M. Griman?

and Galais have given the names Lactolite and Lactene.

MILK SPOTS, Maculæ albæ, Strophulus—m. Stone, Morochthus.

MILK, SUGAR OF, Sugar of milk.

MILLEMORBIA SCROPHULARIA, (mille, 'a thousand,' and morbus, 'a disease') Scrophularia nodosa.

MILLEPEDES, (mille, 'a thousand,' and pedes, 'feet,') Onisci aselli.

MILLEPERTUIS ORDINAIRE, (from mille, 'a thousand,' and pertuis, 'a hole,' because the leaf, when held to the light, seems pierced with holes.) Hypericum perforatum.

MILLET, (from milium, 'millet,') Aphthæ, Miliary fever—m. Barbadoes, Panicum Italicum—m. Common, Panicum miliaceum—m. Gray, Lithospermum officinale—m. Indian, Panicum Italicum—m. des Oiseaux, Panicum Italicum—m. Ordinaire, Panicum miliaceum.

MILLETSEED RASH, Miliary fever.

MIL/LIGRAMME, (mille, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme,') The thousandth part of a gramme:—about 0.0154 Troy grain.

MILLIGRANA, Herniaria glabra.

MILLIMÈTRE, Millim'eter, (mille, 'a thousand,' and μετρον, 'measure,') The thousandth part of the metre:—equal to 0.03937 English inch, or about twofifths of a line.

MILLOT, Miliary fever.

MILPHÆ, (μιλφαί,) Madarosis.

MILPHOSIS, (μιλφωσις,) Madarosis.

MILT (Sax.), Melt, Spleen.

MILTLIKE. An epithet for a form of cancer, characterized by a soft pale growth, containing scarcely any blood;—so called from its resemblance to the milt of a fish.

MILTLIKE TUMOUR, Encephaloid.

MILTUS, Plumbi oxydum rubrum.

MILTWASTE, Asplenium.

MIND, ABSENCE OF, Aphexia socors—m. Abstraction of, Aphexia intenta—m. Unsound, Insanity.

MINERALIUM, Antimonium.

MIN'NERS EL'BOW. An enlargement of a bursa over the olecranon, occurring in such as are in the habit of leaning much upon it; and, therefore, often seen in those who work on the side in low-roofed mines.

MIN'IM, Min'imium, 'the least part or portion.' The 60th part of a fluidrachm. This measure was introduced by the London College of Physicians, in consequence of the uncertainty of the size of the drop, (see Gutta.) The subdivision of the wine pint has, accordingly, been extended to the 60th part of the fluidrachm; and glass measures, called "minim measure," have been adopted by the London College. The proportion between the minims and the drops of various fluid preparations is given under Gutta.

MINIM'ETER, (minimium, and μετρον, 'measure,') An instrument for measuring minims, invented by Mr. Alsop. It consists of a glass tube, graduated from the conical point into minims; and having a piston, by the elevation of which, fluid may be drawn into the tube, and by its depression be forced from it.

MINIM MEASURE. A measure for the divisions of a fluidrachm.

MINIMUM, Minim.

MINISTER GYMNASTÆ, Pædotribes.

MINITHOSIS, (from μινθη, 'to diminish,') Meiosis.

MINIUM, Plumbi oxydum rubrum—m. Græcorum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum—m. Purum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MINOR HELICIS, ('smaller muscle of the helix,') A muscle situate on the posterior border of the helix of the ear, at its commencement in the fossa of the concha.

MINORATIF, Laxative.

MINORATIVUS, (from minor, 'less,') Laxative.

MINT, Mentha—m. Cat, Nepeta—m. Cock, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Curled, Mentha crispata—m. Horse, Monarda coccinea and M. punctata—m. Horse, hairy, Blephilia hirsuta—m. Horse, Ohio, Blephilia hirsuta—m. Horse, sweet, Cunila Mariana—m. Hyssop-leaved, Mentha cervina.

MINT JU'LEP. A drink, consisting of brandy, sugar, and pounded ice, flavoured by sprigs of mint. It is an agreeable alcoholic excitant.

MINT, MOUNTAIN, Monarda coccinea—m. Mountain, common, Pycnanthemum incanum—m. Pepper, Mentha piperita—m. Spear, Mentha viridis—m. Squaw, Hedeoma—m. Stone, Cunila Mariana.

MINT TEA, Infusum Menthae viridis.

MINT, WATER, Mentha aquatica.

MINTHA, (μινθη,) Mint.

MINUTHESES, (from μυνθηω, 'to diminish,') Meiosis.

MINU'TIO MON'ACHI, ('restriction of the monk,') A term said to have been used in the middle ages for any treatment adapted for 'lessening' the sexual energy.

MINYANTHES, Menyanthes.

MIOSIS, Meiosis.

MIRACH, Abdomen.

MIRE (old F.), A physician or surgeon.

MIRLES, Rubcola.

MIROCELE, Merocele.

MIRROT, Daucus Carota.

MISADIR, Ammonia murias.

MISANTHRO'PIA, (μισανθρωπία,) Misan'thropy, Exanthro'pia, Phyganthro'pia, (μισος, 'hatred,' and ανθρωπος, 'man,') Aversion to man and society;—a symptom of melancholy, and hypochondriasis.

MISCARRIAGE, Abortion.

MISCEGENA'TION, (miscere, 'to mix,' and genus, 'a race,') A mixture or amalgamation of races, as of the black with the white.

MISE-BAS, [F.] ('laid down,') Parturition.

MISERERE MEI, ('have pity on me,') Picus.

MISERY (from miser, 'suffering,') see Pain.

MISHME TEETA, Coptis teeta.

MIS'MAR, Mecenar. A name given by Avicenna to a kind of nodus, which forms on the toes as the sequel of contusion or inflammation of those parts.

MISOG'YNY, Misogyn'ia, (μῖσος, 'hatred,' and γυνή, 'a woman,') Hatred of women. Repulsion for sexual intercourse.

MISOPTO'CHUS, (μῖσος, 'hatred,' and πτωχος, 'poor,') That which has hatred for the poor. The gout has been so called by some, because it commonly affects the rich.

MISSADAN, Hydrargyrum.

MISSIO SANGUINIS, Bloodletting.

MISSISSIP'PI, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Cooper's Well, in Hinds County, four miles from Raymond, and thirteen from Jackson, is a sulphurous saline, the chief constituents being the sulphates of soda and magnesia. Of the solid ingredients upwards of 3 per cent. are of peroxide of iron. The waters are chiefly used in chronic gastroënteric affections. Ocean Springs, in Jackson County, is an acidulous sulphurous chalybeate.

MISTIO, (from miscere, mistum, 'to mix,') Mistura.

MISTLETOE, ([Sax.] mýrreltan.) Viscum album—m. Yellowish, Viscum flavescens.

MISTU'RA, Mix'tis, Propolis'ma, Mig'ma, Mis'tio, Mix'tio, Mixtu'ra, Mix'ture; (F.) Potion, Mé-lange. A mingled compound, in which different ingredients are contained in the fluid state, or suspended or not by means of mucilaginous or saccharine matter. In this sense, it is synonymous with the French Potion. In France, however, the word mixture is more frequently understood to mean a liquid medicine, which contains very active substances, and can only be administered by drops. A mixture, in other words, in the French sense, may be regarded as a potion deprived of watery vehicle. When it consists of materials, that require to be shaken up when taken, it is sometimes termed Mistu'ra média.

MISTURA, (S.) A fragrant yellowcoloured water, used as a perfume by the ladies of Peru. It is prepared from gillyflower, jasmine, and flor de mistela (Talinum umbellatum). See Campomanesia lineatifolia.

MISTURA ACACLE, Mucilago Acaciæ.

MISTURA AC'IDI HYDROCYAN'ICI, Mix'ture of Prus'sic acid, Mélange pectoral (Magendie). (Medicinal Prussic acid,  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, Distilled water,  $\mathfrak{z}$ xiv, Pure sugar,  $\mathfrak{z}$ iss. A dessertspoonful every morning and evening, as a pectoral, &c.)

MISTURA AMMONI'ACI, Lac ammoniaci, Mix'ture of ammo'niac. (Ammoniac,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Aquæ Oss. Rub the ammoniacum: adding the water gradually until they are perfectly mixed. Ph. U. S.) Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ ss to  $\mathfrak{z}$ j.

MISTURA AMYGDALÆ, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MISTURA ASAFETIDÆ, Lac asafetidæ, Emulsio antihyster'ica, Mix'ture of asafet'ida. (F.) Lait d'asafetida. (Asafetidæ  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Aquæ Oss. Rub together, adding the water by degrees. Ph. U. S.) Used where pills cannot be swallowed, and as a glyster in irritations during dentition, and in ascariæ. Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ ss to  $\mathfrak{f}$ ziss.

MISTURA ASAFETIDÆ PRO CLYSMATE, Enema fetidum.

MISTURA CAM'PHORÆ, A'qnia cam'phoræ (Ph. U. S.), Cam'phor mix'ture or ju'lep, Mistu'ra camphora'ta, Julep'ium e cam'phorâ seu camphora'tum, (F.) Julep camphrè. (Camphor,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Alcohol,  $\mathfrak{m}$ xl, Magne's carb,  $\mathfrak{z}$ iv, Aquæ Oij. Rub the camphor with the alcohol, and afterwards with the magnesia; add the water, and filter. Ph. U. S.) Virtues like those of camphor. See Emulsio camphoræ.

MISTURA CHLOROPOR'MI, Mix'ture of Chloroform. (Chloroform purif,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss, Camphor, gr. lx, Vitell. ovi, i, Aquæ,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zvj. Rub the yolk with the camphor previously dissolved in the chloroform, and gradually add the water. Ph. U. S., 1863.) Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zij to  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss.

MISTURA CONTRACTA, ('a small mixture,') see Gutta.

MISTURA COR'NU USTI, Decoc'tum cor'nu cervi'ni seu al'bini, Decoc'tion of burnt harts'horn, Mix'ture of burnt harts'horn, White Decoc'tion, (F.) Décoction blanche. (Cornum, ust.  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Acaciæ gum, cont.  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, Aquæ, Oijj. Boil to Oij constantly stirring, and strain. Ph. L.)

MISTURA CREASO'TI, Cre'asote mix'ture. (Creasot, Acid. acetic,  $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$   $\mathfrak{m}$ xvj, Sp. Junip. comp, Syrup,  $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$   $\mathfrak{f}$ zj; Aquæ  $\mathfrak{f}$ zix. Mix the creasote and the acid; add gradually the water, and then the syrup and spirit. Ph. E.) A foudouce contains a minim of creasote.

MISTURA CRE'TÆ, Po'tio carbona'tis cal'cis, Mistu'ra creta'cea, Mucilo'go cre'tica, Chalk or Creta'ceous mix'ture, Chalk ju'lep, (F.) Mixture de Craie. (Creta pp.  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss, Sacchar, Acaciæ gum, in pulv.,  $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$   $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Aquæ cinnam, Aquæ,  $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$   $\mathfrak{f}$ ziv. Misc. Ph. U. S.) Antacid and absorbent. Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zj to  $\mathfrak{f}$ zij.

MISTURA DIABOL'ICA. A mixture under this name is kept in many hospitals, for malingerers. It is made of sundry nauseous ingredients, as aloes, asafetida, castor, &c., and is given so as to keep up a disagreeable impression on the gustatory nerves.

MISTURA EMETI'NÆ VOMITO'RIA, Emet'ic mix'ture of emet'ine. (Emetine 4 gr., Orange flower water  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Syrup  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss; M.) A dessert-spoonful every half hour till it acts.

MISTURA FERRI COMPOS'ITA, Com'pound mix'ture of i'ron, (F.) Mixture de fer composé, Griffith's mixture. (Myrrh, cont.,  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, Potassæ carb, gr. xxv, Aquæ rosæ  $\mathfrak{f}$ zviiss, Ferri sulph, in pulv.  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, Sp. lavand,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss, Sacchar,  $\mathfrak{z}$ j. Rub together the myrrh, subcarbonate of potassa, and sugar; then add, while triturating, the rosewater, spirit of nutmeg; and, lastly, the sulphate of iron. Pour the mixture directly into a glass bottle, and stop it close. Ph. U. S.) It is tonic and emmenagogue, and is useful wherever iron is indicated.

MISTURA FERROSALINA, Mixture, ferrosaline.

MISTURA FERROSA, ('brown mixture,') M. Glycyrrhizæ composita.

MISTURA GLYCYRRHI'ZÆ COMPOS'ITA, Mistu'ra fusca, Com'pound mixture of Li'quorice, Brown Mix'ture, (Extract. Glycyrrhiz. pulv, Acaciæ pulv, Sacchar,  $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$   $\mathfrak{z}$ ss; Tinct. opi camphorat,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zj; Vin. antimôn,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zj; Spirit. æther. nitric,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zss; Aquæ  $\mathfrak{f}$ zixj. Rub the liquorice, gum arabic, and sugar with the water, gradually poured upon them; add the other ingredients and mix. Ph. U. S.) A popular cough medicine, but not deserving of being made officinal. Dose, a table-spoonful or  $\mathfrak{f}$ zss.

MISTURA GUAIA'CI, Mix'ture of guai'ac, Lac guai'aci, Emul'sio guai'ac'ina, Mistu'ra guai'aci gummo'sa seu gum'mi guai'aci Bergeri, Solutio guai'aci gummo'sa seu res'inæ guai'aci agno'sa, (F.) Mixture de Guaiac. (Guaiac. gum resin,  $\mathfrak{z}$ iss, Sacch. pur,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Muc. acaciæ gum,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Aq. cinnam,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zviij. Rub the guaiacum with the sugar; then with the mucilage. Add, gradually, the cinnamon water. Ph. L.) Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zss to  $\mathfrak{f}$ zj.

MISTURA GUMMI GUAIA'CI BERGERI, Mistura Guai'aci—m. Hordei, Decoc'tum, Hordei compositum—m. Leniens, Looch ex ovo—m. Media, see Mistura.

MISTURA MOS'CHI, M. moscha'ta, Musk mix'ture. (Moschi, Acaciæ gum, contus., Sacch. purif, sing.  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, Aq. rosæ  $\mathfrak{f}$ zvj. Rub the musk with the sugar; add the gum, and, by degrees, the rosewater. Ph. L.) Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ zss to  $\mathfrak{f}$ zj.

MISTURA POTASSÆ CITRATIS, Liquor Potassæ Citratiss.

MISTURA SCAMMO'NII, Scam'mony Mix'ture, Scammon, gr. vij, Lactis  $\mathfrak{f}$ zij. Triturate to form an emulsion. Ph. E.) The whole is a cathartic dose.

MISTURA SPIRIT'US V'INI GALL'IC, Bron'dy

Mixture. (Sp. Vin. Gallic., Aq. cinnam. āā f ʒiv; Vitel. ori. ij; Sacchar. ʒss; Ol. cinnam. ℥ ij. M. Ph. L.) An excitant draught for the low stages of fever.

MISTURA STRYCHNINÆ, Mixture of Strychnia. (Distilled water, ʒij, very pure Strychnia, 1 gr., White sugar, ʒij; M.) Dose, a dessertspoonful.

MISTURA SULPHURICO-ACIDA, Elixir acidum Halleri—m. Vulneraria acida, Arquebusade, Eau d'.

MITCHELLIA REPENS, (after Dr. John Mitchell, of Virginia, a botanist.) Partridge berry. A pretty little indigenous trailing evergreen, of the Cinchona family—Cinchonaceæ,—which flowers from June to July. It has been considered an expectorant, emmenagogue, and diuretic; and has been prescribed in dropsy and gout.

MITELLA, (dim. of μῆτρα, mitra, 'a bandage,') Sling.

MITHRIDATE, Mithridatium, Mithridatium medicamentum, Antidotum Mithridatium, Dioscori antidotum, Confectio Damoc'ratis. A very compound electuary, into which entered—Myrrh of Arabia, Saffron, Agaric, Ginger, Cinnamon, Frankincense, Garlic, Mustard, Birthwort, Galbanum, Castor, Long pepper, Opopanax, Bdelium, Gum Arabic, Opium, Gentian, Orris, Sagapenum, Valerian, Acacia, Hypericum, Canary wine, Honey, &c. It was invented by Mithridates, king of Pontus and Bithynia, and was formerly regarded as alexipharmic. It is little used at the present day, and, from its heterogeneous nature, should be wholly abandoned.

MITHRIDATICUM MEDICAMENTUM, Mithridate.

MITHRIDATIUM, Mithridate.

MITIGANS, (mitigare, 'to assuage,') Lenitive.

MITRA HIPPOCRATICA, (μῆτρα, 'a mitre,' 'a bandage,' 'a head dress,') Bonnet d'Hippocrate.

MITRAL, Mitra'lis. Having the form of a mitre; resembling a bishop's mitre.

MITRAL REGURGITATION, see Regurgitation.

MITRAL VALVES, Valvule mitra'les seu Cor'dis mitra'les seu episcopa'les seu bicuspidata'les seu bicuspida'te. Two triangular valves at the opening of communication between the left auricle of the heart and the corresponding ventricle. These valves are formed by the inner membrane of the left cavities of the heart; and are retained on the side of the ventricle by tendinous cords, proceeding from the columnæ carnæ. They form a species of valve, which permits the blood to pass from the auricle into the ventricle and opposes its return.

MITRIUM, (μῆτριον, dim. of μῆτρα, 'a bandage,') Sling.

MITTE (F.), Efflu'vium latrina'rinnm. An emanation exhaled from privies, which strongly irritates the eyes. It consists of ammonia, united to the carbonic and hydrosulphuric acids.

MIUAMARU, see Arrow poison.

MIVA, Marmelade.

MIXIS, (μῆξις,) Coition, Mistura.

MIXTIO, (miscere, mixtum, 'to mix,') Mistura.

MIXTURA, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura—m. Almond, Emulsio Amygdalæ—m. of Ammoniac, Mistura ammoniaci—m. of Asafetida, Mistura asafetidæ.

MIXTURE, BRANDY, Mistura spiritus vini Gallici—m. Brown, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Calicante, Looch ex ovo.

MIXTURE, CAMPHOR, Mistura camphoræ—m. Chalk, Mistura cretæ—m. of Citrate of Potassa, Liquor potassæ citratis.

MIXTURE DE CRAIE, Mistura cretæ—m. of Creasote, Mistura creasoti.

MIXTURE, CRETACEOUS, Mistura cretæ.

MIXTURE OF EMETINE, (emetica,) Mistura emetinæ vomitoria—m. de Fer compositæ, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE, FERROSALINE', Mistura ferrosali'na.

Under this name, the author has long prescribed in public and in private, the following combination in torpor of the colon. Magnes. sulphat. ʒi, Potassæ bitart. ʒi, Ferri sulph. gr. x; by a quart of water. A wineglassful every morning, or rising, until the torpor is removed.

MIXTURE DE GAYAC, Mistura Guaiaci.

MIXTURE, GRIFFITH'S, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE OF-GUAIAC, Mistura Guaiaci—m. of Gum Arabic, see Emulsio Asaciæ—m. of Hartshorn, burnt, Mistura cornu uteri.

MIXTURE, HOPE'S. A mixture recommended by a Mr. Hope in diarrhœa and dysentery. It is essentially a nitrate of morphia. Although the proposer employed the acidum nitrosum of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia, nitric acid is generally used. (Acid. nitros. f ʒj; Aquæ camphor. f ʒviij; Tinct. opii gtt. xl; M.) Dose, a fourth part every three or four hours.

MIXTURE OF IRON, COMPOUND, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE OF LIQUORICE, COMPOUND, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Lithontriptique de Duraude, see Liquor anodynum terebinthinatus—m. of Marsh mallows, Decoetum althææ.

MIXTURE, MUSK, Mistura moschi—m. Neutral, Liquor potassæ citratis.

MIXTURE OF PRUSSIC ACID, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici—m. of Scammony, Mistura scammonii.

MIXTURE, SCUDAMORE'S. A mixture recommended by Sir C. Scudamore in gouty and rheumatic affections, and much prescribed in the United States. Magnes. sulph. ʒj—ʒij; Aquæ menthæ f ʒx; Aceti colchic. f ʒj—f ʒiss; Syrup. croci f ʒj; Magnes. ʒviiij, M. Dose, one, two, or three tablespoonfuls, repeated every two hours in a paroxysm of gout, until from four to six evacuations are produced in the twenty-four hours.

MIXTURE OF STRYCHNIA, Mistura strychniæ—m. de Whitt, see Liquor anodynum terebinthinatus.

MNEME, (μνήμη,) Memory.

MNEMECEPHALICUM BALSAMUM. A very compound medicine, into which entered Balm, Lily, Rosemary, Lavender, Borage, Broom, Roses, Violet, Saffron, Thyme, Storax, Galbanum, &c. Supposed to have great mnemonic virtues.

MNEMONÉUTICE, Mnemonics.

MNEMONICS, Mnemon'icæ, Mnemonéuticæ, Mnemotech'niæ, (μνήμη, 'memory,' μνημονικός, 'appertaining to memory,' from μναμαι, 'I recollect,') The art of aiding the memory; and of forming, in some sort, an artificial memory.

MNEMOTECHNE, (μνήμη, 'memory,' and τεχνη, 'art,') Mnemonics.

MOAN'ING, (Sax. mœnan, 'to grieve,' by onomatopœia,) Respiratio luctuos'a, Mycthis'mos. A plaintive respiration, in which the patient utters audible groans,—moans, (F.) Gémissements.

MOAP-EYE, Myopia.

MOBILE, see Saint Augustine.

MOBILITY, Mobil'itas, (mobilis, contraction of movibilis, 'that can be moved,' from movere, 'to move,' and habilis, 'capable,') The power of being moved. In physiology, great nervous susceptibility, often joined to a disposition to convulsion. Greatly developed excitability.

MOCCASIN FLOWER, Cypripedium acaule, C. luteum—m. Plant, Cypripedium luteum.

MOCILIA, (μολχία, from μολχίω, 'to move,') Reduction of a luxated bone; (from μολχος, 'a lever,')

MOCILICUS, (μολχικός,) Relating or appertaining to mochia. Also, a purgative; (from μολχίω, 'to set in motion,' as with a lever.)

MOCILISCUS, (dim. of μολχος, 'a lever,') Lever.

MOCILUS, (μολχος,) Lever.

MOCHTHUS, (μολχθος,) Agony.

MOCK-KNEES, Crusta genu equinæ.

MODELLING PROC'ESS. A term proposed by Dr. Macartney, of Dublin, to signify the mode in which wounds are healed without inflammation or suppuration, by a deposit of plastic matter from the surface of the wound, by which the gap is more rapidly filled,—portion being laid upon portion, without waste, after the manner of clay in the hands of the sculptor;—hence the term.

MODIOLUS, ('the nave of a wheel.') Pyræmis seu Az'is seu Columel'la coch'lex. A hollow cone in the cochlea of the ear, forming a nucleus, axis, or central pillar, round which the gyri of the cochlea pass. The modiolus forms the inner and larger portion of the central pillar, and is the cavity seen at the bottom of the meatus auditorius internus. It lodges a branch of the auditory nerve. The central portion of the modiolus contains a number of minute canals, and is called in consequence Tractus spiralis foraminulosus. Into these the nerves of the cochlea enter, and pass out at right angles between the bony plates forming the zona ossea of the lamina spiralis, to be expanded on the membranous portion of the lamina.

MODIOLUS, Mas, also means the crown of the trepan.

MODIRA CANIRAM, Strychnos colubrina.

MO'DIUS. A dry measure, the third of an amphora, equal to the bushel.

MO'DUS OPERAN'DI, ('mode of operating.') This term is applied to the general principles upon which remedies act in morbid states of the body;—a subject of much interest, although involved in considerable obscurity.

The following classification will convey some idea of the ways in which different organs may be excited into action.

1. By actual or immediate contact of the remedy, and by absorption or mediate contact.
2. By an impulse conveyed by the nerves, through an impression made on the stomach or elsewhere, or by remote sympathy.
3. By contiguous or continuous sympathy, or by mere proximity or continuity of parts.

MOËLLE, (from medulla;) according to some, from μεελος, 'marrow,') Marrow.—m. Allongée, Medulla oblongata—m. Épinid'ie, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertébrale, Medulla spinalis.

MŒNIA DENTIUM, ('walls of the teeth,') Alveoli dentium.

MËROR, ('sorrow,') Athymia.

MOFETTE. Azote, see Mephitism.

MOF'FAT, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Edin is a village situate about 56 miles S. W. of Edinburgh. The water is a cold sulphureous: containing, in a wine gallon, 36 grains of chloride of sodium, 5 cubic inches of carbonic acid, 4 of nitrogen, and 10 of sulphohydric acid. It resembles Harrogate water in its properties.

A strong chalybeate spring was discovered there about the year 1828, which contains sesquisulphate of peroxide of iron, sulphate of alumina, and uncombined sulphuric acid.

MOGIGRAPHIA, (μογος, 'with difficulty,') and γραφα, 'I write,') Cramp, writers'.

MOGILALIA, Paralal'ia, (μογος, 'with difficulty,') and αλειν, 'to speak,') This word is inaccurately written by Paul Zachias,—Molal'ia, and Molila'ia. Difficult or defective articulation. Impediment of speech. See Balbuties.

MOGOSTOCIA, (μογος, 'difficulty,') and τοκος, 'parturition,') Dystocia, Laborious labour.

MOGUS, (μογος,) Agony.

MOHAWK TASSEL, Eupatorium purpureum.

MOHR'IA THURIF'RAGA, (after Prof. D. M. H. Mohr, a botanist of Kiel.) A South African fern, Nat. Ord. Filices, the dry leaves of which, pulverized and made into an ointment with fat, are serviceable in burns and scalds.

MOIGNON, (from Celt. Moign, 'mained,') Stump.

MOIS, ('month,') Menses.

MOIS'TURE, Ma'dor, (F.) Moiteur. Simple humidity of the skin. The skin is said to be moist or in a state of moisture when there is slight perspiration.

MOITEUR, (old F. moisteur,) Moisture.

MOLA, ('a mill,') Maxillary bone, Molar tooth, Mole, Patella.

MOLAGOODI, Piper nigrum.

MOLAIRE, Molar.

MOLALIA, Mogilalia.

MO'LAR, Molar'is, My'licus, (F.) Molaire, Moulière. That which bruises or grinds; (from molar'is, 'a grindstone,') or mola, 'a mill,')

MOLAR GLANDS. Two small bodies formed by a collection of mucous crypts; seated in the substance of the cheeks, between the masseter and buccinator muscles, and whose excretory ducts open into the mouth opposite the last molar tooth.

MOLAR TEETH, Grind'ers, Saw Teeth, Molares permanentes dent'es, Dent'es molares seu maxillares seu gom'phii seu cluvales, Mo'læ, Gom'phioi, My'lacri, My'lodon'tes, My'lodi, Momis'ci, Lag'teeth, Wall teeth, (Prov.) Az'le teeth, Az'le teeth, Cheek teeth, Wang teeth, (F.) Dents molaires ou mâchelières, occupy the farther part of each alveolar arch. Their coronæ are broader than they are high; unequal; tuberculated; and the roots are more or less subdivided. They are 20 in number, 10 in each jaw. The first two pairs of molar teeth in each jaw have been called lesser molares, premo'lar or bicuspid, Dentes bicuspida'ti seu buccales. The coronæ have two tubercles; the outer being more prominent and larger than the inner. The root is commonly simple; sometimes bifurcated. The other three pairs have been termed, Great molares—Dents multicuspidées (Ch.). Their coronæ are cubical, rounded, and have, at the upper surface, four or five tubercles, separated by deep furrows. The root is divided into two, three, four, and five fangs, which are more or less curved. The third great molaris appears a long time after the others, and hence has been called Dens sapientie or Wisdom tooth.

MOLASSES, Melasses.

MOLE, Mo'la, (moles, 'mass,') My'læ, Zephyrius foetus, Ge'men foetum, Pseudocystis molar'is, Gravid'itas molar'is, Moon calf, old French, Fardean. A fleshy, insensible, at times, soft—at others, hard—mass; of variable and determinate size, which forms in the uterus, and is slightly united by vessels to that organ; from which its feeble vitality is derived. It has been conceived by some to be always owing to imperfect conception; but moles may form in the undoubted virgin. They seem to be owing to a morbid process; and certainly are generally connected with conception. At times, they contain parts of the fetus; but commonly do not. At very different periods, in different women, the diseased mass is expelled from the uterus, with ordinary symptoms of abortion; and the case requires similar management. See, also, Nævus, (Sax. mal.) and Conception, false.

MOLE PLANT, Euphorbia lathyris.

MOLEC'ULAR, Molecula'ris, (F.) Moléculaire. Of or belonging to molecules or minute portions of any thing. Hence molecular death, in contradistinction to somatic death.

MOLECULE, Molecul'ula, Mass'ula: (F.) Molécule, (dim. of moles, 'a mass,') A minute portion of any body. Also, the cicatric'ula, mac'ula, gallat'ura, gelat'inous mole'cule, tread of the cock, or embryo part of the impregnated ovum, observable by the microscope before the ovum has left the ovarium of the hen. It lies under the epidermic coats of the yolk, and upon its proper coat. If the ovum, according to Valentin, be lacerated and its contents minutely examined, the cicatrícula is found like a grayish white disk, which in its whole periphery is dense, granulous, and opaque; but in the centre presents a clear, non-granulous, and perfectly diaphanous point. Purkinje found, that when he removed the dark granulous mass by suction with a small tube, there remained a perfectly transparent vesicle filled with a pellucid lymph, which had a decidedly spherical form, but, being extremely delicate, was easily lacerated, and then its fluid escaped. As he found this, which later naturalists have named—after its discoverer—the Purkinjean vesicle, in the ova of the ovary, but could not see it in ova, which had already entered the oviduct, he gave it the name germinal vesicle, or germ cell, vesic'ula prolif'era seu germinati'va, Blastocyst'inx, (F.) Vésicule germinative. Besides a perfectly colourless fluid, this contains one or more dark corpuscles, which appear as a nucleus through the including membrane in the shape of opaque spots—the ger'minal spot, mac'ula germinati'va seu ger'minans, nu'cleus germinati'vus, Blastocar'dia, Cor'culum ger'minis, Blastocel'lis, Wagne'rian spot or vesicle, (F.) Tache germinative. The small dots, observed by Valentin in the Wagnerian vesicles and arising in them have been termed Valentinian Vesicles. The granulous membrane—its thickened portion, the so-called 'cicatricula,'—and the germinal vesicle, constitute those parts of the ovum which pass immediately into the original foundation of the embryo, the blastoderma or germinal membrane, vesic'ula blastoderma'tica seu blastoder'mica, blastoder'mic vesicle.

In the nomenclature of Professor Agassiz, the yolk membrane is an ectoblast, the 'Purkinjean Vesicle,' a mesoblast; the 'Wagnerian Vesicle' an entoblast, and the 'Valentinian Vesicle,' an entost'oblast. See Cytoblast.

MOLECULE, GELATINOUS, Molecule.

MOLÈNE, Verbascum nigrum.

MOLES GANGLIFORMIS, ('gangliform mass,') Ganglion of Gasser.

MOLIBDÛS, (μολιβδος,) Plumbum.

MOLILALIA, Mogilalia.

MOLIMEN, pl. MOLIMINA, (moliur, 'to strive,') An attempt, a struggle. Hence:

MOLIMEN CRIT'ICUM. An impulsion towards a sudden solution or crisis of a disease.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHAG'ICUM. The hemorrhagic diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHOIDA'LE. The hemorrhoidal diathesis or impulsion. See Hæmorrhoids.

MOLIMEN MENSTRAUA'LE. The menstrual diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN NATURE SALUTARIUM, Instinct.

MOLKENKUR, Whey cure.

MOLLESCENCE, (mollis, 'soft,') Mollities.

MOLLET, (dim. of (F.) mou, mol, 'soft,') Sura.

MOLLIPUFFS, Lycoperdon.

MOLLIS MATER, ('tender mother,') Pia mater.

MOLLIT'IES, (from mollis, 'soft,') Mollescence, Malacismus, Mollit'ia, Mollit'do, Emollit'ies, E. morbo'sa, Mollit'io, Malax'is, Malaco'ma, Malaco'sis, Malthac'is, (F.) Ramollissement; (G.) Malakien of Fuchs. Preternatural softness of an organ or part of an organ.

MOLLITIES CER'E'BRI, Malaco'sis Cer'ebri, Encephalomalacia, Encephomalax'is, Encephomalaco'sis Neurenceph'alus (W. Farr), Cerebromalacia, Encephalosep'sis, Mollescence or soft'ening or a kind of liquefaction of the cerebral substance; the remainder preserving its ordinary consistency. (F.) Ramollissement du cerveau. The neurine often contains small clots of blood, giving rise to what has been termed Apoplexie capillaire, (Cruveilhier.) The symptoms denoting it are equivocal.

MOLLITIES CORDIS, Cardiomalacia.

MOLLITIES MEDUL'LE SPINA' LIS, Myelomala'

cia, (F.) Ramollissement de la Moëlle Épinrière. Softening of the spinal marrow.

MOLLITIES OS'SIUM, Malacosteosis, Malacosteon, Emollit'ies os'sium, Paros'tia flex'ilis, Osteomalaco'sis, Osteomala'cia, Rachit'is seu Rachit'is adultor'um, Spina vento'sa (of some), Soft'ening of the bones, (F.) Ostéo-malacie, Osteo-malaxie, Ostéo-malaxie, Ramollissement des os. A rare affection, in which the bones are deprived of their salts, particularly of the phosphate of lime, and consist only, or mainly, of gelatin; hence they acquire a degree of suppleness which renders them unfit for the performance of their functions. The disease generally affects all the bones; but it is especially remarkable during life in the long bones, which assume any curvature that may be wished. Very violent pain is often experienced in them; and the urine frequently contains an enormous proportion of calcareous phosphate. The patient is compelled to remain in the horizontal posture; the bones no longer being fixed points for the muscles to act upon. The disease, has, hitherto, always terminated fatally, and dissection has exhibited the gelatinous nature of the bones; which, by desiccation, have become transparent, as if they had been macerated in acid.

Experience has afforded no means of relief in this dreadful affliction. The alkaline salts, carthy phosphates, &c. are of little or no use; the disease being in the cells of nutrition.

MOLLITIO, Mollities.

MOLLITUDO, Mollities.

MOLLUS'CUM, Athero'ma, Ochthi'asis, ([L.] Molluscum, 'a knotty growth on the bark of the maple,') A cutaneous affection, which consists of numerous tumours, varying in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg, filled with an atheromatous matter, which are developed in the substance of the derma, and are of various shapes, some having a large base,—others adherent by means of a pedicle.

Molluscum contagio'sum, (F.) Acné molluscoidé, a singular variety, is characterized by the presence of hard, round, tubercles, which are smooth and transparent, and, when pressed, pour out from an orifice in their summits a little opaque or milky fluid.

The disease is probably seated in the sebaceous follicles. If internal treatment be adopted at all, it must consist of eutrophics, as arsenic, iodine, &c. The external treatment consists in the employment of measures calculated to excite the tubercles to inflammation, as by touching them with potassa.

MOLOCHE, (μολοχη,) Malva rotundifolia.

MOLOPES, (μολωψ, 'a weal,') Vibices.

MOLYBDÆNUM MAGNESII, (μολυβδος, 'lead,') Manganese, black oxide of.

MOLYBDŌCACHEXIA, (μολυβδος, 'lead,' and cachexia,) Saturnismus.

MOLYBDOCOLICA, (μολυβδος, 'lead,' and colica,) Colica metallica.

MOLYBDONOSUS, (μολυβδος, 'lead,' and nosos, 'disease,') Leadpoisoning.

MOLYBDOPARESIS, (μολυβδος, 'lead,' and paresis, 'paralysis,') Palsy, lead.

MOLYBDÛS, (μολυβδος,) Plumbum.

MOLYBDOISIS, (from molyb'dus, and osis,) Leadpoisoning.

MOLYNE, (μολυνη,) Anus.

MOLYNIË, (μολυνη,) Anus.

MOLYNSIS, (μολυνσις, from μολυνω, 'to taint,') Miasma.

MOMIE, Mummy.

MOMIN, Mamei.

MOMISCI, Molar teeth. Also the parts of the molar teeth connected with the gums.

MOMORDICA, M. Balsam'ina, (mordico, mordidi, morsum, 'to bite,') Balsam'ina, Neurosp'er- ma cuspidata, Balmapple, Balsam apple, (F.) Balsamine, Pomme de merveille. Ord. Cucurbitaceæ. The fruit of this oriental tree, Pomum mirabilè seu hierosolymitanum, was formerly considered vulnerary.

MOMORDICA ASPERA, M. Elaterium.

MOMORDICA ELATERIUM: M. aspera, Elaterium, Ecbalia Elaterium, Ecbalium officinarum seu agrestis seu cordifolium, Cucumis agrestis seu asini-nas seu sylvestris, Charantia, Guarimba orba, Ecbalium elaterium, Wild, Squirl'ing, or Ass'es' cucumber, (F.) Concombre Sauvage, Momordique. Nat. Order, Cucurbitaceæ. The dried sediment from the juice is the elaterium of the shops. (See Extractum Elaterii.) It is a most powerful cathartic, and, as such, has been used in dropsies. Its active principle is the Elatin, Elaterin or Ec'balin. Dose, gr.  $\frac{1}{2}$  to gr. j. until it operates.

MOMORDIQUE, Momordica elaterium.

MONAD, (μονας, gen. monados, 'a unit.')

A simple particle, or atom, or unit. The smallest of all visible animalcules. A primary cell or germ. MONÆ, Nates.

MONARDA, (after N. Monardes, a Spanish botanist), M. didyma seu coccinea seu purpurea seu Kalmia, Scarlet Rose balm, Mountain mint, Ouse'go Tea, Mountain Balm, Horsemint, Square stalk, Red balm; a beautiful indigenous plant, Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Labiatae, has the excitant properties of Monarda punctata.

MONARDA ALLOPHYL'LA, M. fistulosa—m. Clinopodia, M. fistulosa—m. Coccinea, Monarda—m. Didyma, Monarda.

MONARDA FISTULOSA, M. rugosa and oblongata; M. clinopodia seu alloyhylla, Wild berg-mot, Horsemint. The leaves have a fragrant smell; and an aromatic, somewhat bitter taste. They are reputed to be nervine, stomachic, and deobstruent [?].

MONARDA KALMIANA, Monarda—m. Oblongata, M. fistulosa.

MONARDA PUNCTATA, Horsemint, Monarda, (Ph. U. S.) Indigenous in the United States. Stimulant and carminative. The Oleum monardæ is official in the United States.

MONARDA PURPUREA, Monarda—m. Rugosa, M. fistulosa.

MONDER (F.), (from [L.] mundare, 'to clean.')

To render clean or pure. In Pharmacy, it means to separate any substance from its impure or useless portion. In surgery, monder ou mondifier une plaie, is to clean or debride a wound.

MONDIFICATIFS, ([L.] mundus, 'clean,' and facere, 'to make,')

Detergents. MONDIFIER UNE PLAIE, ('to cleanse a wound,') see Monder.

MONEMERON, Monœ'meron, Monohe'meron; (mono, and ἡμερα, 'a day.')

A name given to several collyria, which were supposed to be capable of curing diseases of the eyes in a day.

MONENTERUM, (mono, and εντερον, 'intestine,')

Colon. MONESIA. A vegetable extract imported into Europe from South America, in hard, thick cakes. It is prepared from the bark of a tree, whose botanical name is uncertain—probably Chrysophyllum glycyphllum seu Buranhem, Buranhem, Guaranhem; Ord. Sapotaceæ. It is very friable, and its fracture very much resembles that of a well-torrefied cocoanut. It is wholly soluble in water; and its taste—which is at first sweet like liquorice—sometimes becomes astringent. It is on account of its astringent properties that it has been prescribed in chronic bronchitis, hæmoptysis, diarrhœa, leucorrhœa, uterine hemorrhage, &c. It has been applied locally, in the form of ointment, (Mones. p. 1, Adipis, p. vij.)

The dose of Monesia is from 12 to 40 grains a day.

MONEYWORT, Lysimachia nummularia.

MONGO'LIAN. Anthropologists give the name Mongolian race to a variety of the human species, spread over a great part of the north of Asia, in China, India, Thibet, the Moluccas, &c. The individuals composing it have the skin of a brown red, forehead flat, nose broad, cheeks prominent, and lips large. See Homo.

MONGREL, ([Sax.] mengan, or mængan, 'to mix,')

Hybrid.

MONPLIES, [Sc.] ('many plies or folds,')

Omasum.

MONISM, Monis'mus, (μονας, 'unity.')

The doctrine, which declares matter and mind to be identical.

MONK PHYSIC' IANS AND SUR'GEONS. A class of practitioners of whom Frère Cosme and Jacques Beaulieu in France, and Pravetz in Germany, were the most distinguished.

MONKSHOOD, Aconitum—m. Common, Aconitum napellus—m. Salutory, Aconitum anthera—m. Wild, Aconitum uncinatum.

MONNI'NA POLYSTA'CHIA, (after Monnino, Count de Florida Blanca, a Spanish promoter of botany.) A beautiful South American plant. Nat. Ord. Polygaleæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Octandria. The bark of the root is a powerful astringent, and much used in South America in diseases of the bowels.

MONNYPLIES, [Sc.] ('many plies or folds,')

Omasum.

MONO, (from μονος, 'one alone,') in composition, one alone, only one.

MONOBLEP'SIS, (mono, and βλεψις, 'sight.')

An affection in which vision is confused, imperfect, and indistinct, when both eyes are employed; but perfect or nearly so, when either eye is used singly.

MONOCAR'PÆ, (mono, and καρπος, 'fruit.')

A division of cutaneous affections, of the family Eczema of Osborn, of Fuchs, which includes strophulus, psyræcia, and ecthyma.

MONOCEPH'ALUS, (μονοκεφαλος, from mono, and κεφαλη, 'head.')

A compound monster having two bodies with a single head.

MONOCLE, Monoculus.

MONOCOLON, Cæcum, Rectum.

MONOCRA'NUS, (mono, and κρανον, κρανιον, 'cranium.')

A monster with one cranium, but with the face in part double.

MONOCULUM, Cæcum.

MONOCULUS, Mon'ocle, Monopthal'mus, Unio'culus, Unoc'ulus, (F.) Monocle, (mono, and oculus, 'an eye.')

A bandage employed to maintain topical applications over one of the eyes. This bandage, called by some surgeons Simplex oculus, (F.)

Ëil simple, is made of a roller three or four ells long, rolled into a single ball. See Cyclops.

MONODIPLO'PIA, (μωω, διπλος, 'double,') and ωψ, 'eye.')

Double vision with one eye. MONEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOGAS'TRIC, Monogas'tricus, (mono, and γαστηρ, 'stomach.')

That which has but one stomach. Man is monogastric; ruminating animals, on the contrary, are polygastric.

MONOGENY, (mono, and γενος, 'kind,')

see Generation. MONOGRAPH, MED'ICAL, Monograph'ia medica, (mono, and γραφη, 'description.')

An ex professo treatise on a single class of diseases, or on a single disease or medical subject.

MONOHEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOMACHON, Cæcum.

MONOMACUM, Cæcum.

MONOMANIA, see Melancholy—m. Homicidal, Homicidal insanity—m. Incendary, Pyromania.

MONOMANIAC, Μονομανι'ακός, (F.) Monomane, Μονομανιακός. One who labours under monomania, or insanity chiefly on one subject.

MONOMANIE. Melancholy—m. Homicide, Homicidal insanity.

MONOMMATOS, (μονοματός, from μονο, and μαμα, 'eye,') Cyclops.

MONOMORIA, (μονο, and μωρία, 'silliness,') see Melancholy.

MONOMPHALUS, (μονο, and σφαλος, 'a navel,') A monster produced by the union of two bodies having a common umbilicus. Such a double monster is called by I. G. St. Hilaire Monomphalius, (F.) Monomphalien.

MONONE'A, (μονο, and νοος, 'thought,') Thought on one subject, as in monomania.

MONOPAGIA, (μονο, and παγίος, 'fixed,') Clavus hystericus, Hemicrania.

MONOPATHY, Μονοπαθί'α, (μονο, and παθος, 'disorder,') A state in which one organ or function is disordered. Applied to melancholy or monomania, which is said to be a monopathic affection.

MONOPEGIA, (μονο, and πηγνμη, 'to fix,') Clavus hystericus, Hemicrania.

MONOPHTHALMUS, (μονο, and οφθαλμος, 'eye,') Cyclops, Monoculus.

MONOPLASTIC, Μονοπλαστικός, (μονο, and πλασσω, 'I form,') That which has one form. A monoplastic element, in histology, is one which retains its primary form.

MONOPODIA, (μονο, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') Symphodia.

MONOPS, (μονωψ, from μονο, and ωψ, 'eye,') Cyclops.

MONOPSIA, (μονο, and οψις, 'vision,') Cyclopia.

MONOPUS, (μονο, and πους, 'a foot,') Having one foot. See Symmeles.

MONORCHIS, gen. Μονορχιδίς, (μονορχις, from μονο, and ορχις, gen. ορχιδος, 'testicle,') (F.) Monorchide. One who has only one testicle. The condition is Monorchid'ia.

MONORGANICI, see Local.

MONOS'CELUS, (μονοσκελής,) (μονο, and σκελος, 'a leg,') One legged.

MONOSTIA, (μονοστίτια, from μονο, and στίτος, 'food, 'repast,') The habit of taking only one meal in the day.

MONOSO'MIAN, (F.) Monosomien, (μονο, and σωμα, 'a body,') An epithet applied to a double monster, which seems, in the first instance, to have had but one body.

MONOT'ROPA UNIFLO'RA, (μονο, and τροπος, 'a turn,—the solitary flower turned to one side,') Indian pipe, Icelandic pipe-plant, Nest root, Fit root. Ord. Ericaceæ. An indigenous plant, whose juice, mixed with water, has been extolled by the Indians in ophthalmia. The dried root in powder has been given in epilepsy and nervous diseases.

MONS VEN'ERIS, ('mount of Venus,') Monticulus Veneris, Ephēbē'um, (F.) Mont de Venus, Pénit, Motte, Éminence sus-pubienne. The more or less projecting eminence, situate at the base of the hypogastrium, above the vulva and in front of the os pubis. At the period of puberty it becomes covered with hair, formerly called Tresso'ria.

At times, mons veneris is applied to the corresponding part in the male.

MONSEL'S SALT, see Ferri sulphas—m. Solution, see Ferri sulphas.

MONSO'NIA OVA'TA, (after Lady Ann Montsen, aid to Lee in his Introduction to Botany,) Keita, of the Hottentots. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope. The root and herb are very astringent, and are used successfully in dysentery.

MON'STER, Mon'strum, ('anything strange,') Portentum, Té'vras, Pe'lor, Pelo'ria, Pelo'rium, Pelo'rum, (F.) Monstra. Any organized being, having an extraordinary vice of conformation, or a preternatural perversion of every part, or of certain parts only.

The following classification embraces the main varieties of malformations—Vit'ia primæ conformatio'nis.—1. Those in which certain parts of the normal body are absent or defective—mon'stra deficient'ia, constituting Ectrog'eny of Serres,—Mon'stro'sity by defect, (F.) Anomalie ou Mon'stro'sité par défaut, Agéné'sie. 2. Those produced by fusion or coalition of organs—coalit'io part'ium, sym'physis. 3. Those, in which parts, united in the normal state, are separated from each other—clefts, fissures. 4. Those in which normal openings are occluded—at're'sia. 5. Those by excess, or in which certain parts have a disproportionate size—mon'stra abundan'tia, Mon'stro'sity by excess, (F.) Mon'stro'sité par excès, Hypergéné'sie. 6. Those, in which one or more parts have an abnormal position—si'tus muta'tus. 7. Those affecting the sexual organs—hermaph'roditism; and to these "true malformations" Vogel adds 8. Diseases of the fœtus, and abnormal states of its envelopes.

Amongst the numerous hypotheses entertained on the origin or cause of monsters, or of monstrosity—terato'sis, mon'stro'sitas, (F.) mon'stro'sité, as the state has been called—three only are worth mentioning. They have been attributed, 1. To the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. 2. To accidental changes, experienced by the fœtus at some period of its uterine existence: and 3. To a primitive defect in the germs. The second seems to be the only one that is philosophical.

Cases of supernumerary fingers and toes, which fall under the 5th division of the above classification, are, probably, owing to an excess of formative action in the part; and it may be a question, whether many of the cases of diplogenesis are not owing to this rather than to a fusion of two germs.

As a medicolegal question, monsters, if capable of action as individuals, have the same rights as other persons.

MONT DE VÉNUS, Mons Veneris.

MONTBRI'SON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Montbrison is a town in France, in the department of the Loire, fifteen leagues from Lyons. There are three cold springs which are highly acidulous, and used as refrigerants and aperients.

MONT-DE-MAR'SAN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-de-Marsan is a small French town, 10 leagues from Dax: where there is a chalybeate spring, somewhat frequented.

MONT-D'OR, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-d'Or is a village seven leagues from Clermont, (Puy-de-Dôme,) at which are several mineral springs, cold and thermal. Those of the Fountain La Madelaine and of the Great Bath, are thermal, temp. 112° Fah., and contain carbonic acid, subcarbonate and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, subcarbonate of lime and magnesia, alumina and oxide of iron. Those of St. Margaret are cold, and contain much carbonic acid. Season, from the 15th of June to the 14th of September.

MONTECATINI, MINERAL WATERS OF. This town is situate near Borgo-Buggiano, in Tuscany. The springs are thermal; ranging from 78° to 118° Fahrenheit.

MONTICULUS CEREBELLI, (dim. of mons, gen. montis, 'a mountain,') see Vermiform processes of the Cerebellum — m. Veneris, Mons veneris.

MONTPELLIER, CLIMATE OF. This seat of a celebrated medical school in the S. E. of France was at one time renowned for its climate, and especially in regard to its adaptation to consumptive cases. This is now exploded, and it is at present esteemed an unfit residence for them. The climate possesses the general characters of that of southeastern France—being dry, hot, and irritating; subject to frequent vicissitudes, and especially to blasts of keen, cold, northerly winds. It is, indeed, most injurious in pulmonary diseases.

MOON, Lu'na, Sele'nē, Me'nē, (Sax. Mona, [G.] Mon d.) (F. Lune. The moon has been supposed to exert considerable influence over the human body, in health and disease. Such influence has been grossly exaggerated. Not many years ago, it would have been heretical to doubt the exacerbation of mania at the full of the moon; yet it is now satisfactorily shown, that if the light be excluded at this period, the lunatic is not excited more than ordinarily.

MOROSITA'TES, (morosus, 'morose,') 'peevish,') 'fretful,') from μορια, and μορωσις, 'stupidity,') A generic name given by Linnæus to an order of Vesania, in which he included pica, bulimia, polydipsia, antipathia, nostalgia, panphobia, satyriasis, nymphomania, tarentismus, and hydrophobia.

MOROTROPHI'TUM, Morocomi'um, Morodochi'um, Manicocomi'um, (μορος, 'fatuous,') and τροφη, 'support,') An insane establishment, lunatic asylum, mad'house, Bed'lam, (F.) Hôpital des fous, Maison petite.

MORPHÆA, Morphew—m. Alba, Lepra alpehoides—m. Nigra, Lepra nigricans.

MORPHEE, Morphew.

MOR'PHEW, (low L.) Morphæ'a, (F.) Morphée. A term vaguely applied to scurfy eruptions on the face. Morphæa was formerly applied to squamous diseases in general.

MORPHIA, (μορφεις, Morpheus, the 'god of sleep,') Morphina—m. Acetate of, Morphinæ acetas—m. Citrate of, see Morphinæ sulphas—m. Lactate of, see Morphinæ sulphas—m. Muriate of, see Morphinæ sulphas—m. Sulphate of, Morphinæ sulphas—m. and Zinc, double iodide of, Zinc and Morphia, double iodide of.

MORPHIC, Morphique.

MOR'PHIATED, Morphiat'us, (F.) Morphiné. Impregnated with morphia or with one of its salts.

MOR'PHICA, (see morpho.) Monstrosities of birth. The 5d order, class Typhica of Good.

MORPHI'NA, Morph'ia, Morphium, Morphi'næ, Morphine. A solid, colourless alkali; crystallizable in beautiful pyramids, truncated and transparent; soluble in alcohol, and slightly so in boiling water. It exists, combined with meconic acid, in opium. It may be obtained by decomposing, by means of ammonia or calcined magnesia, an aqueous solution of opium made in the cold. The following is the process of the Pharm. U. S. Opium, sliced, ℥j; Distilled water, Alcohol, Animal charcoal, each a sufficient quantity; Solution of ammonia, f ʒvj. Macerate the opium with four pints of distilled water for 24 hours, and having worked it with the hand, digest for 24 hours, and strain. Macerate the residue twice successively with distilled water, and strain. Mix the infusions: evaporate to six pints, and filter; then add first five pints of alcohol, and afterwards three fluidounces of the solution of ammonia, previously mixed with half a pint of alcohol. After 24 hours, pour in the remainder of the solution of ammonia, mixed as before with half a pint of alcohol; and set the liquor aside for 24 hours, that crystals may form. To purify these, boil them with two pints of alcohol till they are dissolved; filter the solution, while hot, through animal charcoal, and set it aside to crystallize.

Morphia dissolves perfectly in the acids, which it saturates; and with which it forms very crystallizable salts, with the exception of the acetate. All these salts have a bitter taste, and act upon the animal economy in the same manner as opium, but more powerfully. The acetate is the salt commonly employed in medicine. It was, at one time, supposed that Morphia is the purely sedative part of opium, divested of its irritating properties; but experience has not confirmed this. On the contrary, it will generally disagree where opium does. Onesixth of a grain has been considered equal to a grain of opium.

MORPHINE ACETAS, Morphiæ Acetas, Morphium aceticum, Ac'etate of Morphine, Acetate of Morphia. A salt formed by saturating morphia with acetic acid. (Morphia, in powder, freed from narcotina by boiling with sulphuric ether, ʒj; Distilled water, Oss; Acetic acid, a sufficient quantity. Mix the morphia with the water; then carefully drop in the acid, constantly stirring until the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate the solution in a waterbath to the consistence of syrup. Lastly, dry the acetate with a gentle heat and rub it into powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, from ʒth of a grain to half a grain.

MORPHINE SULPHAS, MORPHIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Morphia. A salt, formed like the sulphate, by saturating morphia with sulphuric acid, evaporating and crystallizing. Dose, the same as of the acetate.

Lactate, Muriate, and Cit'rate of Morphia, Morphiæ cit'ras, have likewise been used; but they possess little or no advantages over the other salts. The sulphate and muriate are officinal in the Ph. U. S. The muriate—MORPHIÆ MURIAS, M. Hydrochloras, (Ph. B., 1864.)—is directed to be prepared as follows. (Morphiæ, in pulv., ʒj; Aquæ destillatæ, Oss; Acid. muriat. q. s. Mix the morphia with the water; carefully drop in the acid, till the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate and crystallize.) Dose from ʒth of a grain to half a grain.

MORPHINÉ, Morphiated.

MORPHIQUE, Morphiæus, Morphiæ, (from morphia. Applied in pharmacy to any composition of morphia.

MORPHIUM, Morphina—m. Aceticum, Morphinæ acetas.

MORPHO, (morpho, 'shape or form,') in composition, the same.

MORPHOLOGICAL, Morpholog'icus, (morpho, and logos, 'a description,') That which has relation to the anatomical conformation of parts. Applied, at times, to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo, in contradistinction to histological, which is applied to the transformation by which the tissues are gradually generated. In comparative anatomy, it is applied to the history of the modifications of forms, which the same organ undergoes in different animals, and, more generally, to the doctrine of the forms of organized bodies.

MORPHOLOGY, Anatomy, see Morphological. MORPHOLYSIS, (morpho, and lysis, 'solution,') Destruction of organization. An agent that occasions such destruction is called a morpholytic.

MORPHOLYTIC, see Morpholysis.

MORPHONOMY, Morphonom'ia, (morpho, and nomos, 'a law,') The laws of organic formation. The department of anatomical science which teaches the laws of organic configuration.

MORPHOTIC, Morphot'icus, (morpho, 'shape,') A term applied to organic or anatomical elements in contradistinction to the inorganic.

MORPHOTOMY, (morpho, and τεμνω, 'to cut,') see Anatomy.

MORPIO, see Pediculus.

MORTA, Pempighis.

MORTAL, Mortal'is, (from mors,) Lethal'is, Leta'lis, Thanato'des, Thanas'imus, (F.) Mortel. That which is subject to death;—that which causes death:—as, man is mortal; a disease is mortal. Of old, it was the custom to have a division of mortal or deadly wounds, which gave rise to many errors in medico-legal investigations, as the mortality, Lethal'itas, Leta'lit'as, (F.) Léthalité, of wounds depends upon various circumstances; and it is often a matter of extreme difficulty to pronounce whether or not a wound is necessarily mortal.

MORTALITY, Mortal'itas, (F.) Mortalité. This word, taken in an extended sense, expresses the condition of all organized bodies,—of being subject to the cessation of life. In the sense in which it is most frequently employed, it signifies, the death rate,—the proportional quantity of individuals who, in a certain population, die in a given time. If we assume the population of the earth to be one thousand millions, and a generation to last thirty-three years; in that space of time, the one thousand millions must all die, and, consequently, the number of deaths will be, by approximation,

|------------------|------------|
| Each year.....   | 30,000,000 |
| Each day.....    | 82,109     |
| Each hour.....   | 3,421      |
| Each minute..... | 57         |
| Each second..... | 1 nearly.  |

If, on the other hand, as has been supposed, the number of deaths is to that of the births as TEN to TWELVE: there will be born,

|                  |              |
|------------------|--------------|
| Each year.....   | 36,000,000   |
| Each day.....    | 98,356       |
| Each hour.....   | 4,098        |
| Each minute..... | 68           |
| Each second..... | 1 & 2-15ths. |

It would not be proper to regard the value of life in different countries, or in different periods in the same country, to be indicated by the average mortality; inasmuch as in one case a greater mortality may occur amongst children, and in another amongst adults.

MORTALITY, BILLS OF, Bills of Necrology, Mortuary Registers, (F.) Tables de Mortalité. Tables, instituted for the purpose of exhibiting the number of deaths, &c., in a given time. Well-kept bills of mortality are of great use to the physician and political economist. Those of London were proverbial for their inaccuracy and insufficiency; especially as regards the complaints of which the persons had died. They were formerly made out by the parish clerks, and the information was conveyed to them by two old women, who were appointed in each parish, and were called Searchers;—their duty being to see that the deceased had died a natural death. This defective system has, however, been abolished; and the Registrar-General's annual reports of births, deaths, and marriages, exhibit how admirably vital statistics are now collected in Great Britain.

MORTAR, Mortarium, Moretarium, Mortarium, P'sso, Ac'oné, P'la, Hol'mus, Ig'de, Ig'dus, (F.) Mortier. A vessel for reducing to powder different solid substances, and for making certain mixtures. Various substances are employed in the construction of mortars;—iron, marble, glass, wedgewood ware, &c.

MORTARIOLUM, (dim. of mortarium, 'a mortar,' or cavity resembling a mortar.) Alveolus.

MORTARIUM, Mortar.

MORTEL, Mortal.

MORTIER, Mortar.

MORTIFER, (mors, gen. mortis, 'death,' and fero, 'I carry.') Lethiferous.

MORTIFICATIO, (mors, gen. mortis, 'death,' and fio, 'I become.') Mortification—m. Pulmonum, Neeropneumonia.

MORTIFICATIO, Mortificatio, Necrosis, Sphacelatio. The loss of vitality in a part of the body. The incipient stage of mortification when the case is still recoverable, is called Gangrene; when totally dead, Sphacelus. Mortification of a bone is called Necrosis.

MORTIFICATION, COLD, Sphacelus—m. Ergot, Ergotism—m. Hot, Gangrene—m. Mildew, Ergotism.

MORTOOTH, Cupri sulphas.

MORTUARY REGISTERS, Mortality, bills of.

MORTUUS, (from mors,) Dead.

MORULA, (from morum, 'a mulberry.') But-ton scurvy.

MORUM (μopov), see Morus nigra—m. Palpebræ internæ, Trachoma carunculosum.

MORUS NIGRA, M. laciniata, Mulberry Tree, Mor'ea, Sycami'nus, Sycami'dea, (F.) Mûrier Noir. Ord. Urticacæ. The fruit of the mulberry tree, Morum, Sycami'num, (F.) Mûre, is pleasant, sweet, subacid, and abounds with a deep violet-coloured juice, Mô'ri suc'cus (Ph. L.). A syrup is directed in the London Pharmacopœia. The bark of the root has been regarded as an aëchiintic.

MORUS RUBRA, Red Mulberry, Wild Mul- berry; indigenous. The root has been used to destroy tænia.

MORVE, (from morbus, 'a disease.') Mucus, Nasal mucus; see Equinia—m. Farcinense, see Equinia.

MOS, gen. Mo'ris, Habit.

MOS MORBI BENIG'NUS seu MALIG'NUS. The benign, or malignant character of a disease.

MOSCHARDI'NA, Muscer'da, (μoσxos, 'musk,') A lozenge for the mouth, composed of musk, ambergris, and other aromatics.

MOSCHELÆ'ON, (μoσxos, 'musk,' and elaiov, 'oil,') Moscola'a. A compound aromatic oil, containing musk.

MOSCHUS, (μoσxos,) Musk—m. Arabum, Hibiscus abelmoschus—m. Facitius, Musk, artificial.

MOSCOLÆA, Moschelæon.

MOSLICH, Maslach.

MOSQUITA, see Mosquito.

MOSQUITO (S.), (dim. of [S.] mosca, 'a fly,') Musquito, Cu'lex mosquit'o. A very troublesome insect in warm, moist situations. Curtains, called Mosquito curtains or bars, are used by way of protection. The entrance of mosquitos into the bed-chamber may also be prevented, to a certain extent, by keeping the doors and windows closed until the lights are extinguished. The pain and itching from the bites are alleviated by washing them with hartshorn.

MOSQUITA is a name given, by the Portuguese, to small, red pimples on the skin, resembling the bites of the mosquito.

MOSS BERRY, Vaccinium oxycoccos—m. Ceylon, Fucus amylaceus—m. Club, Lycopodium—m. Cup, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Edible, Fucus amylaceus—m. Haircap, Polytrichum Juniperinum—m. Iceland, Lichen Islandicus—m. Irish, Fucus crispus—m. Jaffna, Fucus amylaceus—m. Marine, Fucus amylaceus—m. Pearl, Chondrus crispus—m. Stone, Tripe de roche—m. Wall, common yellow, Parmelia parietina.

MOTAMEN, (movere, motum, 'to move,') Motion.

MOTATIO, Motion.

MOTE (μoτη), Carbasus, Linteam.

MOTEUR, Motory.

MOTHERWORT, Leonurus cardiaca, Matricaria.

MOTIL'ITY, Motil'itas, (from movere, motum, 'to move,') (F.) Motilité, Motricité. Faculty of moving; moving power; contractility.

MOTION, Mo'tus, Mo'tio, Mota'tio, Mota'men, Commo'tio, Permo'tio, Cine'sis, Movement, (F.) Movement. The act of changing place. The various motions may be divided into, —First, the voluntary, or those that are executed under the influence of the brain. Secondly, the involuntary, which may be subdivided into, 1. Those of the reflex kind, as the closure of the larynx on the contact of acrid vapours, of the pharynx on that of the food,—a function of the spinal marrow; and, 2. Those that are executed under the organic and other nerves of involuntary function. It is probable, too, that every living tissue is capable of moving responsive to its appropriate irritant. See Irritability.

MOTOR OCULI EXTERNUS, Motor externus, Ner'vus tim'idus seu abd'ncus, (F.) Nerf oculomuscularis externe (Ch.), Nerf moteur oculaire ex-

terne, Sixth pair of nerves, arises from the furrow which separates the pons Varolii from the medulla oblongata. It enters the cavernous sinus; anastomoses on the outside of the carotid artery with two filaments furnished by the superior cervical ganglion; enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, and is lost on the rectus externus oculi. This pair is, also, called Abducentes.

MOTORES OCULORUM, Motorii Oculorum, Oculares communes, Ophthalmici externi, Motor Oculi, M. O. communes, Oculo-motarius, Common Oculo-muscular Nerves, (F.) Nerfs moteurs oculaires communs (Ch.), The third pair of nerves, Par tertium. This nerve arises from a depression at the inner side of the peduncles of the brain, between the tuber annulare and corpora mamillaria. It enters the outer part of the cavernous sinus, and passes into the orbital cavity. Behind the sphenoidal fissure, it divides into two branches; the one superior and the other inferior. The former is lost on the rectus superior oculi and the levator palpebræ superioris; the latter—the larger of the two—divides into three branches, which pass to the rectus internus, rectus inferior, and lesser oblique. The last furnishes a filament, which passes to the ophthalmic ganglion.

MOTORIAL, Motory.

MOTORPATHY, (motor, and πάθος, 'affection,') Kinesipathy.

MOTORY, Mo'tive, Mo'tor, Moto'rial, Mo'trix, Kinet'ic or Cinet'ic, (F.) Moteur. That which moves or causes movement, as motor nerves in contradistinction to sensory.

MOTOS, (μωτος), Linteum, Tent.

MOTO'SIS. The application of lint to a wound.

MOTRICITÉ, Motility.

MOTRIX, (movere, motum, 'to move,') Motory.

MOTTE, Mons veneris.

MOUTH, Sax. muð, Os, Cavum Oris, Stoma, Gab, (Sc.) Moue, (Prov.) Gob, (F.) Bouche. This word sometimes signifies the cavity situated between the jaws, and containing the tongue, &c.;—at others, the outer orifice of that cavity, Peristomium. The mouth, in the first acceptation, Cavitas seu Spatium Oris, is the cavity bounded, above, by the palatine arch; below, by the tongue; before, by the lips; and behind, by the velum palati and pharynx. The sides of the mouth and the organs it contains are lined by a mucous membrane. The anterior aperture of the mouth is, sometimes, called facial—the posterior, pharyngeal. In the mouth are the teeth, gums, alveolar margins, tongue; the excretory ducts of the salivary glands, and those of a number of mucous follicles, &c. It is in this cavity that the food is cut, torn, or bruised by the teeth; is impregnated with saliva, and formed into a mass or bolus, which is then subjected to the act of deglutition. The mouth contains the organs of taste; and it serves in respiration, articulation, expectoration, suction, &c.

The condition of the mouth requires to be attended to in Semeiology. The state of the mucous membrane, like that of the tongue, indicates the condition of the membrane of the alimentary canal generally.

MOUTH, Os, Apertura, Orificium, Hiatus, Peristomium, is, also, applied to the open extremities of vessels or other canals.

MOUTH ROOT, Coptis.

MOUTH SORE, Aphthæ.

MOVEMENT, (movere, motum, 'to move,') Dejection, Motion—m. Cure, Kinesipathy.

MOW (from [F.] moue,) Mouth.

MOXA, Moxiburium. A word by which the Chinese and Japanese designate a cottony substance, which they prepare by beating the dried leaves of the Artemisia moxa,—a kind of mugwort. With this down they form a cone, which is placed upon the part intended to be cauterized, and is set fire to at the top. The heat and pain gradually increase, in proportion as the combustion proceeds downwards, until ultimately an eschar may be formed. In Europe and this country, the same operation is usually practised with a cylinder of cottonwool, or with one formed from the pith of the greater sunflower. This mode of cauterization is employed as a powerful counter-irritant; which it assuredly is. Sloughing may be in some measure prevented, according to Baron Larrey, by the application of liquid ammonia to the burnt part.

The term moxa has been extended to any substance, which by gradual combustion on or near the skin is employed as a counterirritant,—as the electric or galvanic moxa or cant'ery, in which voltaic electricity is employed as the cauterizing agent.

MOXIBURIUM, (moxa, and buvo, for uro, ustum, 'to burn,') Moxa.

MOXIBUSTION, Moxibus'tio, Moxocaus'is, Encaus'is. Mode of cauterization by means of moxa.

MUCHA'RUM, Muca'rum. A barbarous term, formerly used for an aqueous infusion of roses, sweetened, and evaporated to the consistence of syrup.

MUCIFIC, (mucus, and facere, 'to make,') Blennogenous.

MUCIFORM, Muciform'is, Myxo'des, Blenoi'des, Blenoi'deus, (mucus, and forma, 'form,') Resembling mucus in character or appearance.

MUCILAGE, Mucila'go, Muca'go, Muce'do, Mucini'um, (from mucus.) A mixture of gum and a small quantity of matter analogous to mucus, which is found in abundance in linseed, quince-seed, &c. It is obtained by heating in water the parts, or products, of plants which contain it. It is much used in the preparation of emollient cataplasms and the greater part of the demulcent tisanes, (F.) Hydrolysés, Hydrolytées.

MUCITIS, Mycodermi'tis, Blennophlogo'sis, Blennymeni'tis, (mucus and itis.) Inflammation of a mucous membrane.

MUCKSWEAT, (Sc. muck, 'dirt,') Desudatio.

MUCOCE'LE, Hernia sacci lacrymal'is, (mucus, and κηλη, 'rupture,') An enlargement or protrusion of the mucous membrane of the lacrymal passages, giving occasion to fistula lacrymalis. Also, dropsy of the lacrymal sac.

MUCOENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

MUCOPURULENT, Mucopurulentus, Pyoblen'nicus, (from mucus, and pus.) Having the character or appearance of mucus and pus.

MUCOR, Euros, Mucus—m. Mucedo, see Fungus—m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUCORINÉES, see Fungus.

MUCOSIN, see Mucus.

MUCOSITAS, Mucositas, Mucus.

MUCOSITY, Mucos'itas, (F.) Mucosité. A fluid, which resembles mucus, or contains a certain quantity of it.

MUCOUS, Muco'sus, Blenno'des, Myxo'des, (from mucus.) (F.) Muqueux. An epithet for all bodies containing mucilage or mucus. It is, also, sometimes used synonymously with gummy. In pathology, it is occasionally employed to express the seat of a disease, as mucous disease, mucous phlegmasia; that is, having its seat in a mucous membrane.

MUCOUS CORPUSCLES, see Mucus—m. Layer, see Tache embryonnaire—m. Membranes, see Membranes—m. Web, Corpus mucosum.

MUCRO, Apex.

MUCRO seu Cor'lypphè seu Fun'dus seu Ver'tex Cor'dis. The apex or point of the heart.

MUCRO HUMERI, Acromion.

MUCRONATA CARTILAGO, (from micro,) Xiphoid cartilage.

MUCRONATUM OS, Xiphoid cartilage.

MUCULENT, Muculentus, (from mucus.) Slimy, viscid.

MUCUNA, see Dolichos pruriens—m. Pruriens, see Dolichos pruriens.

MUCUS, (μυκός) Mu'cor, Muco'sus hu'mor, Mucos'itas, Myx'a, My'cus, La'pè, Pitui'ta, Blen'na, Zoömy'cus, Zoömyx'a, Pit'uite, An'im'al mu'cus, An'im'al mu'cilage, (F.) Muqueux animal, Morve, Mucilage animal, (presumed to be from mungere, 'to wipe the nose,') A substance, analogous to vegetable mucilage; from which, however, it differs by affording subcarbonate of ammonia on distillation. Mucus exudes through the skin, in a state of combination with a peculiar oily matter; and, drying, forms the epidermis. It constitutes, in part, the different epidermic productions, as the hair, nails, wool, and horn of animals, feathers of birds, and scales of fish. It is found at the surface of the mucous membranes, and presents some difference in its composition and properties, according to the particular mucous membrane from which it is obtained. Its chief organic constituent is an albuminoid compound, —mu'cin, mu'cosin. Mucus preserves the membranes moist, and in a state best fitted for the performance of their functions. The French give the term glairé to the thick, stringy mucus, secreted by the mucous membranes when in a state of disease.

When mucus is examined with the microscope it is found to contain numerous epithelial scales or flattened cells; together with round, granular bodies, commonly termed mucous corpuscles or mucous globules, which are contained in a fluid portion—li'quor mu'ci.

MUCUS CARPHODES, see Carphodes—m. Catharticus, Lichen Islandicus—m. Malpighii, Corpus mucosum—m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUDAR, Madur. The Calotropis mudarrii seu nadarrii, C. gigantea, Asclepias gigantea, Madorins. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. In the Hindoo practice of physic, the bark of the root, as well as the concrete juice of the plant, enters into various compound formulæ for the cure of elephantiasis and many other disorders. Experiments instituted by Dr. Duncan, Jr., exhibit its properties to be like those of ipecacuanha. Mixed with oil it is used in gout in Malabar.

MUDLICK, see Kentucky, mineral waters of.

MUET, (from mutus,) Mute.

MUGUET, (from muscus, 'moss,' [?]) Aphthæ, Convallaria maialis—m. des Bois, Asperula odorata—m. de Mai, Convallaria maialis.

MUGWORT, Artemisia vulgaris.

MULATRE, Mulatto.

MULATTO, (F.) Mulâtre, (S.) Mulata. An individual of the human species engendered of a white and black race, (from mulus, 'a mule.')

The following table, according to Mr. Lawrence, after Ulloa, exhibits the proportion of white blood in the various castes,—arising from the hybridous admixture of white and black,—according to the principles sanctioned by usage.

| PARENTS.                       | OFFSPRING.   | DEGREE OF MIXTURE. |        |       |        |

| Negro and Black Quarteron..... | Black Quinteron.....                               | 1-16               | —      | 15-16 | —      |

The last two were considered to be respectively white and black, in the British West India Islands; and the former, prior to modern changes, were white by law, and consequently free.

Terceron is now scarcely used; and Quarteron or Quadroon takes its place. See Half Caste. The Octoroon is the old Quadroon. In other words, at the present day, a Quadroon is the offspring of a white and mulatto; an Octoroon, of the white and quadroon. No other term is used for farther dilutions.

MULATTO JACK, Fever, yellow.

MULBERRY CALCULUS, ([G.] Maulbeere), see Calculi, urinary and mural.

MULBERRY MASS. The mulberry-like appearance, presented by the embryo at a very early stage, when the different cells have drawn around them a portion of the vitellus or yolk.

MULBERRY RASH, see Typhus—m. Red, Morus rubra—m. Tree, Morus nigra—m. Wild, Morus rubra.

MULES (F.), Mule. Chilblains on the heels.

MULET, (from mulus, 'a mule,') Hybrid.

MULGEDIUM ACUMINATUM, (mulgere, mulsum, 'to milk,') Lactuca villosa, Blue Lettuce; and MULGEDIUM FLORIDANUM, Lactuca Florida'na, Sonchus Florida'nus, False Lettuce; indigenous plants; Order, Composite; have the reputation of curing the bites of rattlesnakes.

MULIEBRIA, (from mulier,) Menses, Vulva.

MULIEBRITY, Mulieritas.

MULIEBROSITAS, (muliebris, appertaining to women,) Philogynia. Fondness for women. Hence, Muliebrosus, Muliera'rius, and Muliero'sus; one who is fond of women.

MULIEBROSUS, see Muliebro-sitas.

MULIER, gen. Mulieris, Woman—m. Medica, see Iatrine—m. Obstetrix, Midwife.

MULIERARIUS, see Muliebro-sitas.

MULIERITAS, Mulieb'ritu, Womanhood. The state of puberty in the female.

MULIEROSUS, see Muliebro-sitas.

MULIER PLENA, ('a full woman,') Pregnant.

MULLED WINE, (from mollire, 'to make milder,') see Wine.

MULLEIN, BLACK, Verbascum nigrum—m. Broad-leaved, great, Verbascum nigrum—m. Yellow, Verbascum nigrum.

MULLER, (from molaris, 'a millstone,' mola, 'a mill,') (F.) Mouleur. A moulder. A stone held in the hand, with which any powder is ground upon a horizontal slab. It is sometimes called mullet, (F.) Mollette.

MULLIGRUBS, Tormina, Colic.

MULLIN, Melizomum.

MULOMEDICINA, (mulus, 'a mule,' and medicina,) Veterinary art.

MULOMEDICUS, see Hippiator.

MULSA ACIDA, (mulsus, 'mixed with honey') Oxyglyceus.

MULSUM, Hydromeli—m. Vinosum, Ænomel.

MULTIFIDUS SPINÆ, (multus, 'many,' and findere, 'to divide,') Transversalis dorsii.

MULTIFËTATION, Multifœtatio, (multus, 'many,' and foetus,) Pregnancy with more than two foetuses.

MULTILOCU'LAR, Multilocularis, (F.) Multiloculaire, (multus, 'many,' and loculus, 'a small place, a cell,') Having many cells or small cavities.

MULTIMAMMÆ, (F.) Multimammæ, (multus, 'many,' and mamma, 'a breast,') A variety of hypergenesis, in which there are supernumerary mammæ.

MULTIP'AROUS, Multip'arus, (F.) Multipare, (multus, 'many,' and parire, 'to bring forth,') One that brings forth several young at the same time. Such a birth is called plural.

MULTIPLICATION MÉRISMATIQUE, see Generation.

MULTITESTIS, (multus, and testis, 'a testicle,') Polyorchis.

MULTITUD O, gen. Multitudinis, (multus, 'many,') Plethora.

MULTIVORANTIA, (multus, and vorare, 'to devour,') Polyphagia.

MULTIVOROUS, Polyphagous.

MUMIA, Mummy—m. de Medullis, Marrow.

MUMISATIO, Mummification.

MUMMIFICATION, Mumia'tio, (mummy, and fit, 'to be made,') Sceletu'sis, Sceletu'sis. The mode of preparing a mummy.

MUM'NY, Mum'nia, (Arab. Moumya, from mum, 'wax,') Rebolea, Rebona, Sceletu'na, (F.) Momie. A dead body simply dried, or dried after having been embalmed. The latter acceptation is the most common. Formerly, the Egyptian mummy was extolled as useful in contusions. It was presumed, also, to have healing, tonic, and resolvent properties. It is now only regarded as an archæal curiosity. See Skeleton.

MUMPS, Cyananche parotidea.

MUNCHATOE, Mystax.

MUNC'TIO, (F.) l'Action de moncher, (mungere, munctum, 'to blow the nose.') The act of blowing the nose.

MUND'IA SPINO'SA, (from mundus, 'clean, neat,' with its appearance.) A plant of the Nat. Ord. Polygalæ, which grows in Southern Africa, and a decoction of whose branches is used in atrophy, phthisis, &c.

MUNDIFICANTIA, (mundus, 'clean,' and facere, 'to make,') Detergents.

MUNDIFICATIVA, Detergents.

MUNGOS RADIX, Ophiorrhiza mungos.

MUNGREL, (see Mongrel.) Hybrid.

MUNIMENTUM CASTITATIS, ('muniment of chastity,') Hymen.

MUQUEUX, Mucosus—m. Animal, Mucus.

MUQUEUSE, Membrane, (Mucosus.)

MUR, Murr, see Coryza.

MÛRAL (F.), Mura'li, ([F.] Mûre, 'a mulberry,') Mulberry. Vesical calculi are so called, when rugous and covered with tubercles or asperities. They are composed of oxalate of lime.

MÛRE, Moro, see Morus nigra.

MURFLES, Ephelides, Papule.

MÛRIA, Hal'më, Salsita'lo, Salse'do, Salsitu'do, Salsu'go, Brine, (F.) Saumure, ('ἀλαμπίς, 'salt water,') This was formerly used as a glyster in dysentery, in certain inveterate neuralgia, &c. Muria was also a kind of pickle or sauce made by the Romans from the tunny fish.

MURIA, Soda, muriate of.

MURIAS AURICONTRICUM, see Gold.

MURIATE D'AMMONIAQUE, Ammoniac murias—m. d'Ammoniac et de fer, Ferrum ammoniatum—m. d'Or, Gold, muriate of, see Gold.

MURIAT'IC AC'ID, (from muria;) Ac'idum sal'is seu mari'num concentra'tum seu sal'is culina'ris seu sal'is mari'ni, Spir'itus sal'is mari'ni seu sal'is Glauberi seu sal'is ac'idus seu fu'mans, Ac'idum hydrochloric'um, A. muriat'icum (Ph. U. S.), Spir'it of salt, (F.) Acide hydrochlorique ou muriatique. An aqueous solution of chlorohydric acid gas of S. g. 1.16. The odour of muriatic acid is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is nearly colourless when pure; but commonly of a pale yellow; volatile; the fumes visible. Muriatic acid is possessed of tonic and antiseptic properties. It is used in typhus; cutaneous eruptions; in gargles for inflammatory and putrid sore throats, (gtt. xxx to fʒvj of water,) &c. When added to a pediluvium, it renders it stimulating.

ACIDUM MURIATICUM DILU'TUM of the Ph. U. S. contain four troycounces of muriatic acid, to a pint of distilled water.

MURIDE, (after Muria.) Bromine.

MÛRIER NOIRE, Morus nigra.

MURIFORM, Moriform'is, ([F.] mûre, 'a mulberry,' and [L.] forma, 'shape,') Mulberry shaped, as Muriform mass or body, (F.) Amas on Corps mûriforme. The collection of vitelline globes proceeding from the segmentation of the vitellus.

MURIGENE, (muria and γεννω, 'to generate,') Chlorine.

MURINA, (after Muria.) Bromine.

MUR'MUR, (F.) Murmure. (A word existing both in the Romanic and Teutonic languages, and probably a variety of onomatopœia;—mur mur expressing the kind of sound which the word indicates.) A low continued or continuously repeated sound, as that of flame, or of a stream running over a stony bottom.

MURMUR AURIUM, Tinnitus Aurium—m. Intestinalis seu Intestini or seu Ventris, Borborygmus.

MURMUR, RESPIRATORY, (F.) Bruit respiratoire ou vésiculaire, Murmure vésiculaire. The noise heard during inspiration and expiration, especially the former. It is produced by the passage of the air through the bronchial tubes and into the air-cells. It has been also called mur' mur of the expansion of the lungs, (F.) Bruit d'expansion pulmonaire; and, when distinctly vesicular, Respiration of the cells or vesicular respiration, (F.) Respiration ou murmure vésiculaire. Vesicular respiration is of course absent when the cells of the lungs have been obliterated from any cause. We may then have the Respiration nulle, Absence du bruit respiratoire, Silence, and Respiration silencieuse of the French writers.

At times, it is rude during inspiration or expiration, or both—the Respiration rude or R. râpeuse of the French. At others, there is a blooming sound, (F.) Souffle, Respiration soufflante, as if some one were blowing into the auscultator's ear through a tube. This is heard in the healthy state over the larynx, trachea, (F.) Souffle trachéal, and about the bifurcation of the bronchia, (F.) Souffle bronchique; but when it proceeds from the lungs it denotes disease. It may be tubular or diffused. In the former, the whiffing murmurs appear to occur in a space limited to the immediate neighbourhood of the part examined. In the latter, they are produced with but moderate intensity, and sometimes at a distance from the ear, over a tolerably extended space.

The respiration, perceived over the trachea and bronchia in health, is called tracheal or bronchial or tubal, (F.) Respiration bronchique, Souffle tubaire, according to the situation in which it is heard.

MURMUR, UTERINE, Bruit placentaire—m. Utero-placental. Bruit placentaire—m. Vesicular, Murmur, respiratory.

MURMUR, WHIFFING, see Murmur, respiratory.

MURR, Mur-rain, (Sax. mýrrþan, 'to destroy,') or from (L.) mori, 'to die,') (F.) Claveau, Clavelle, Pestilent'ial Fe'vor. An epizootic, perhaps contagious, disease, having some resemblance to smallpox, which affects cattle—especially sheep; and is said to have been transferred to man.

MURRAIN, Murr, see Coryza.

MURREN, Murr, Coryza.

MURTON, (μῦρον,) Clitoris.

MURTUM, Clitoris.

MUSA, (after Antonius Musa, physician to Augustus,) M. Paradisiaca—m. Cliffortiana, M. Paradisiaca—m. Mensaria, M. Paradisiaca.

MÛSA PARADISI'ACA, Mu'sa, M. Mensa'ria seu Cliffortia'na, Amu'sa, Pal'ma hu'milis, Ficus Indica, Ba'ta, Plat'anus, Plan'tain tree, (F.) Plaintain-arbre, Platanier, Banancier commun. Family, Musaceæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. It grows in many parts of India and South America. The fruit, which is largely eaten for bread, consists of a mealy substance, Plan'tain meal, Conquin-try. It is clammy; has a sweetish taste, and will dissolve in the mouth without being chewed. The spike of the fruit often weighs forty or fifty pounds. The leaves of the tree serve the Indians for tablecloths and napkins. Being smooth and soft, they are also employed as dressings for blisters. The water from the soft trunk is astringent, and sometimes used in diarrhœa.

MÛSA SAPIEN'TUM. The Bana'na tree, Baco'ba, (F.) Figuier-banancier, Banancier, Bacove. This differs somewhat from the last. The fruit, Bana'na, (S.) Platano, is shorter, straighter, and rounder; the pulp softer and of a more luscious taste. When ripe, it is very agreeable; it is eaten like the plantain, and relished by all ranks of people in the West Indies. Both varieties are natives of Guinea.

MUSC, (from μῦσχος.) Musk.

MUSCA HISPANICA, ('Spanish fly,') Cantharis.

MUSCÆ, ENTOMHYALOID, see Metamorphopsia—m. Volitantes, see Metamorphopsia.

MUSCADE, see Myristica moschata.

MUSCADIER, Myristica moschata.

MUSCERDA, Moschardina. Also, the dung of mice, (mus, 'a mouse,' and merda, 'dung,') formerly given in epilepsy.

MUS'CLE, (old Eng.) Bracon, Musculus, Torius, Lacer'tus, Mys, My'on, (from μῦς, 'a mouse or rat;' because, say some etymologists, the ancients compared the muscles to decayed mice or rats. According to Diemerbroeck, Douglass, Chaussier, &c., μῦς, comes rather from μῦναι, 'to close,' 'to move,' &c., a function proper to muscles. This etymon is the more probable.) Muscles have been divided into those of Animal life or of the life of relation—voluntary muscles—which execute movements under the influence of the will; as the muscles of the limbs, head, trunk, &c., and into those of organic life—involuntary muscles—which contract under the influence of certain special stimuli; as the heart, fleshy fibres of the stomach, &c. Mixed muscles are those which belong partly to each of these divisions;—as the muscles of respiration, and the sphincters. Muscles that act in opposition to each other are called antagonists; thus, every extensor has a flexor for an antagonist, and conversely. Muscles that concur in the same action are termed congen'erous. The muscles present numerous varieties in form, size, situation, use, &c., and have been divided, by some, into long, broad, and short. Each of these divisions comprises simple and compound muscles. Simple or rectilinear muscles have all their fibres in a similar direction, and only one body—as the Sartorius, Pronator quadratus, &c. Compound muscles are those which have only one belly and several tendons, as the flexors of the fingers and toes; or several bellies and several tendons,—as the biceps flexor cubiti, sacrolumbalis, &c. To the compound muscles belong, also, the radiated muscles. Their fibres set out from a common centre, and are arranged like the radii of a circle;—such are the diaphragm, iliacus, temporal, &c. Pen'nated or Pen'niform Muscles: their fibres are arranged in two rows, which are united at a median line, at greater or less angles; nearly as the feathers are inserted into a quill. The palmaris longus is one of these. Sem'ipenniform muscles: their fibres are oblique, as in the last case; but they are inserted only on one side of the tendon. Hollow Muscles are,—the heart, intestines, urinary bladder, &c.

Much difference has existed in the enumeration of muscles. Some authors reckon them at upwards of 400. Chaussier admits only 368. The greater part of them are in pairs. Very few are azygous.

Muscles have been variously named. 1. According to their uses, as diaphragm, buccinator, extensors, flexors, adductors, abductors, levators, depressors, &c. 2. According to their position, as interspinales, interossei, subclavii, poplitei, anconeus, cubitalis, iliacus, temporalis, &c. 3. According to their shape, as trapezii, splenii, lumbricalis, serratus, digastric, deltoid, sealenus, rhomboides, &c. 4. According to their dimensions, as pectoralis major, rectus capitis anticus major, pectoralis minor, glutæus maximus, medius, and minimus. 5. According to their direction, as obliquus abdominis, transversalis abdominis, rectus femoris, rectus abdominis, &c. 6. According to their composition, as semimembranosus, semitendinosus, complexus, &c. 7. According to their attachments, or the different points of the skeleton with which they are connected by means of tendons or aponeuroses; as sternocleidomastoideus, sternohyoideus, &c. On this is grounded the nomenclature of M. Dumas, and that of Chaussier, which is full of meaning.

The end of the muscle, which adheres to the most fixed part, is usually called the origin or head, caput, (F.) Tête; and that which adheres to the more movable part, the insertion or tail, cauda, (F.) Queue; the intervening part or body of the muscle being called the venter, gaster, or belly, Venter musculi, Mc'dium musculi, (F.) Ventre: hence the names gastrocnemii, digastricus, biceps, and triceps; according as they have two bellies, two or three heads, &c.

Muscles are formed,—1. Essentially of the muscular or fleshy fibre, (see Muscular Fibre.) 2. Of Areolar tissue, which unites together the fibres. This areolar tissue is not very visible between the fine and loose fibres; but becomes more so, when they unite in more considerable fasciculi. It forms, moreover, to each muscle, an external envelope, which unites it to the neighbouring parts, and admits of its motion. This envelope was formerly called Tu'nica propria musculorum. 3. Of Arteries. These proceed from neighbouring trunks, and are, generally, very large. Their size and number are always in proportion to the bulk of the muscle. With the exception of some viscera, as the lungs and the kidneys, there are few organs that receive as much blood as the muscles. 4. Of Veins. They follow the same course as the muscles as the arteries. Bichat asserts that they are generally devoid of valves. 5. Of Lymphatics. Of these we know little, and cannot easily follow them between the fleshy fibres. 6. Of Nerves. These are numerous, and of different sizes. They, almost all, proceed from the encephalon; some, however, issue from ganglions, and accompany the arteries. In general, they penetrate the fleshy tissue along with the vessels, with which they are closely united. After they have entered the muscles, they divide and subdivide until they are lost sight of.

MUSCLE CANIN, Levator anguli oris—m. Cannell, Ischiotrochanterianus.

MUSCLE GAVARD, The oblique muscular fibres of the stomach.

MUSCLE GRAND FESSIER, Glutæus major—m. of Guthrie, Compressor urethræ—m. of Horner, Tensor tarsi—m. of Houston, Compressor venæ dorsalis penis.

MUSCLE JUICE. A fluid surrounding the fibres of striated muscle and the fibre-cells of smooth muscles, which differs from the liquor sanguinis of the blood; containing a considerable amount of casein. It seems to be produced within the sarcolemma, through which it exudes.

MUSCLE TRÈS LARGE DU DOS, Latis-simus dorsi—m. Merkel's, ceratocricoid—m. of Wilson, Compressor urethræ.

MUSCULAR, Muscula'ris, Musculo'vus, Toro'

sus, (F.) Musculaire, Musculeux. That which belongs or relates to the muscles. Well furnished with muscles, Laerceto'sus.

MUSCULAR ARTERIES. Arteries that are distributed to the muscles. The name Muscular Arteries of the eye has been especially given to two branches sent off by the ophthalmic artery:—the one, inferior, which furnishes branches to the rectus inferior oculi, lachrymal sac, &c., and some of the anterior ciliary arteries: the other—the superior, which is sometimes wanting; but, when it exists, gives branches to the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris.

MUSCULAR CONTRACTION. The exertion of the power, possessed by muscles, of shortening themselves, or of contracting to produce motion:—muscular motion being the change in the situation and relation of organs, induced by muscular contraction. When a muscle contracts, its fibres assume more the zigzag direction, and the extremities approximate; but the bulk of the whole muscle is not augmented. This contraction takes place, at times, with extreme velocity: a single thrill, in the letter R, can be pronounced in the 1-30,000th part of a minute. The force of contraction, Myody'namis, depends upon the healthy physical condition of the muscle, combined with due energy of the brain. The duration, in voluntary motion, is for a certain time dependent upon the will:—contractions, excited involuntarily, cannot be so long maintained.

MUSCULAR CURRENT. A current which, according to Matteucci, exists in every living muscle, whose tendinous extremities are not equally disposed—one, for example, forming a cord; the other broad and ribbonlike—and which circulates in the muscle from the tendinous extremity to the muscular surface.

MUSCULAR FIBRE, Fleshy fibre, Filum muscula'rè, Fibrill'la muscula'ris. A name given to the filaments, which, by their union, form the muscles. This fibre is flat, soft, downy, linear, but little elastic, and more or less red. It is firmer in adults than in the young or the aged; of the same size in the great and small muscles; and runs its course without bifurcation or ramification. It is but slightly resisting in the dead body, tearing readily; but during life it supports very great efforts without laceration. It is, itself, composed of a considerable number of fibrils, similar to each other, and subdividing almost ad infinitum. The ultimate filaments, into which the fibre can be decomposed by mechanical means, seem to be hollow or tubular. The fibre exists under two forms, the striated or striped, (F.) Fibre striée, and the non-striated, smooth, or unstriped, (F.) Fibre lisse; the muscles composed of the former ministering, as a general rule, to the animal functions,—the latter always, perhaps, to the organic. The colour of the muscular fibres is red in man, and white in several animals. A greater or less number,—united in fasciculi, Fasciculi seu Laerceti musculorum, approximated to each other, and forming a distinct mass, of very variable size and shape, the extremities being attached to bones by means of tendons,—constitutes a muscle. In this are included areolar membrane, vessels and nerves. See Muscle.

MUSCULAR NERVES. The nerves distributed to the muscles are so named. Winslow calls the 4th pair of nerves—Nerf musculaire oblique supérieur.

MUSCULAR SYSTEM. A term given to the aggregate of the muscles of the body.

MUSCULAR VEINS. These bring back the blood, which has been carried to the muscles by the muscular arteries.

MUSCULARIS, 'stout,' 'strong,' Corroborant.

MUSCULATION, See Locomotion.

MUSCULATURE (F.) The condition of the muscular system:—as une bonne musculature, 'a good condition of the muscular system.'

MUSCULEUX, Muscular.

MUSCULI ACCESSORII AD SACROLUMBALÈM, see Sacrolumbalis—m. Papillares, Columnæ carneæ—m. Pectinati, Pectinated muscles.

MUSCULIN, see Fibrin.

MUSCULOCUTANÆUS, Musculocuta'neus, (from musculus, and cutis, 'skin.')

That which appertains to muscles and skin.

MUSCULOCUTANÆUS NERVE. This name is especially given to two nerves;—the one, the External cutaneous nerve, furnished by the brachial plexus (see Cutaneous):—the other, given off from the popliteus externus, (F.) Nerv. Sciaticus, Poplite' externe, Prætibio digital (Ch.). It descends on the anterior and outer part of the leg,—at first, hid among the muscles; becomes superficial about the middle of the leg; and divides into two branches, which pass superficially on the back of the foot. Two musculocutaneous nerves—superior and inferior—proceed from the first lumbar. The superior musculocutaneous—il'ioscrotal, il'iohyopogas'tricus, which divides into two branches,—abdominal and scrotal. The inferior musculocutaneous is smaller than the superior, and is distributed as its name, il'ioin'guinal, indicates.

MUSCULORACHIDÆUS. Belonging or relating to muscles and to the spine. A name given to branches, furnished behind by the intercostal, lumbar, and sacral arteries, which are distributed to the spine and to the muscles of the neighbourhood.

MUSCULOSPIRAL NERVE, Radial nerve.

MUSCULOSA EXPANSIO, ('muscular expansion,') Platysma myoides.

MUSCULOSUS, Muscular.

MUSCULUS, Muscle—m. Aclivis, Obliquus internus abdominis.

MUSCULUS ANOM'ALUS. A muscular fasciculus, attached only to the superior maxillary bone, with which the Levator labii superioris alæque nasi muscle is related.

MUSCULUS AUXILIARIUS, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Constrictorius, Sphincter—m. Cutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Eustachii, Laxator tympani—m. Fallopii, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Femoris membranosa, Fascia lata—m. Patientiæ, Levator scapulae—m. Penicillatus, Levator labii inferioris—m. Risorius Santorini, see Platysma myoides—m. Scandularius, Parathenar—m. Subcutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Succenturiatus, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Succingens, Diaphragm—m. Supercilii, Corrugator supercilii—m. Testicondus, Cremaster—m. Testis, Cremaster—m. Tubæ novæ, Circumflexus.

MUSCUS ARBOREUS, ('tree moss,') Lichen plicatus—m. Caninus, Lichen caninus—m. Catharticus, Lycopodium selago—m. Clavatus, Lycopodium—m. Corallinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Cranii humani, Lichen saxatilis—m. Erectus, Lycopodium selago—m. Helminthocortos, Corallina Corsicana—m. Islandicus, Lichen islandicus—m. Marinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Maritimus, Corallina—m. Pulmonarius quercinus, Lichen pulmonarius—m. Pyxidatus, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Pyxoides terrestris, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Villosus, Peristroma.

MUSEAUDE TANCHE, ('the tench's mouth or snout,') Os uteri.

MUSENA BARK, see Rottlera Schimperii.

MUSEUM ANATOM'ICUM, Supellex anatom'ica. An anatomical museum.

MUSHROOM, ([F.] Mousseron,) Fungus.

MU'SIC, Mu'sica, (F.) Musique, (μουσική, musa, 'a song.')

The art of producing harmonious and cadenced sounds; an art, which has, at times, been beneficially used in diseases, particularly in those of the mind; or on which the mind could act in a salutary manner.

MUSICAL SOUND, Sifflement modulé.

MUSICOMANIA, Musomania, (music, and mania.) A variety of monomania in which the passion for music is carried to such an extent as to derange the intellectual faculties.

MUSING, LISTLESS, (from musa, 'study,') Aphelia otiosa.

MUSIQUE, Music.

MUSK, Mos'chus, Mosch, (Arab.), (F.) Musc. A peculiar concrete animal substance, of a very diffusible odour, bitter taste, and a deep brown colour; solid, and enclosed in the preputial follicles of Mos'chus moschiferus, Musk Deer, (F.) Chevrotain porte-musc. It is possessed of stimulant and antispasmodic properties. Dose, gr. v to ʒj in bolus.

MUSK, ARTIFIC'IAL, Mos'chus factit'ius, Resina Succini. (Ol. succini rectific. 1 part, Acid. nitric. 4 parts. Digest;—a black matter will be deposited, which must be well washed with water.)

MUSKGRAPE FLOWER, Bulbus vomitorius.

MUSKMALLOW, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKROOT, Sunbul.

MUSKSEED, see Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKWOOD, Thymiana.

MUSOMANIA, Musicomania.

MUSQUITO, Mosquito.

MUSSËN'DA FRONDO'SA, Belil'la, Beleson, A decoction of this Ceylonese plant has been esteemed refrigerant.

MUSSEL, Mytilus edulis.

MUSSELLED, see Mytilus edulis.

MUSSITA'TIO, Mussita'tion, (from mussitare, mussitatum, itself from mussare, 'to murmur.')

A condition, in which the tongue and lips move, as in the act of speaking, but without sounds being produced. This sort of murmuring is an unfavourable sign in disease, as indicating great cerebral debility.

MUSTA'CEUM, (from Mustum, 'must,' used in making it.) A kind of wedding-cake with the ancients, which consisted of meal, aniseed, cummin, and several other aromatics; its object—it has been conceived—being to prevent or remove the indigestion occasioned by too great indulgence at the marriage feast. Laureolam in mustaceo quærare—'to seek for glory in pitiful performances.' (Cicero.)

MUSTACHE, Mystax.

MUSTARD, BLACK, [F.] me'atarde, (from molt, 'must,' because the seeds were bruised with vinegar or must—hence, according to some, from mustum ardens, [?]), Sinapis—m. Clammy, Polanisia graveolens—m. Essence of, Whitehead's, see Sinapis—m. False, Polanisia graveolens—m. Green, Lepidium sativum—m. Hedge, Erysimum—m. Mithridate, Thlaspi campestre—m. Stinking hedge, Alliaria—m. Treacle, Thlaspi arvense—m. White, Sinapis alba—m. Wild, Sinapis arvensis.

MUSTELANÆUS, (from mustela, 'a weasel,') Galeonon.

MUSTUM, ('juice of the grape,') Wort.

MUTACIS'MUS, Mutacis'mus, (μωταξίω, 'I use the letter m, μν, too frequently.')

A vicious pronunciation; consisting, according to Sauvages, in the frequent repetition of the letters m, n, and p, which are substituted for others.

MUTA'TIO SEX'US. 'A change or conversion of sex.' A notion prevailed in antiquity that such a conversion was possible.

MUTE, Mu'tus, Dumb, (F.) Muet. Affected with mutities.

MUTEO'SIS, (mutus, 'dumb,') (F.) Mutëosis. Under this name is comprehended every phenomenon of expression, voluntary and involuntary, which impresses the sight or touch.

MUTILA'TION, Mutila'tio, Maim'ing, (mutitus, 'broken.')

The removing or privation of a limb, or of some other external part of the body. In all countries, this crime has been punished with severity.

MUTINUM, Penis.

MUTISME, Mutitas.

MUTITAS, (from mutus, 'dumb,') Alalia, Anaúd'ia, Dumb'ness, Speech'lessness, Mut'ism, (F.) Mutisme, Mutité. Impossibility of articulating sounds; although they can be elicited. Dumbness is often congenital, and united with deafness, of which it is an effect. In some cases it is accidental.

MUTITAS SURDO'RUM, Apho'nia Surdorum, Surdodum'titas, Deaf'lumbness, Deaf'mutism, (F.) Surd'imutité. Speechlessness from deafness; congenital, or produced during infancy. The subjects of this affection are called deaf'dumb, (F.) Sourde-muets.

MUTITÉ, Mutitas.

MUTO, Penis.

MUTTONIATUS, (from muto,) Membrosus.

MUTTERKORN, Ergot.

MUTTON TEA. Prepared from a pound of mutton, freed from the fat and cut into thin slices; and a pint and a half of boiling soft water poured over them, as in the case of beef tea; except that it requires to be boiled for half an hour after the maceration, before it is strained through a sieve.

MUTUNNUS, (from muto,) Priapus.

MUTUS, Mute.

MYACANTHA, Ruscus.

MYALGIA, (myon, and algos, 'pain,') Cramp.

MYASTHENIA, (myon, and ασθενεια, 'debility,') Muscular debility.

MYCES, (μυκης,) Fungus.

MYCETOMA, (from myces, and oma,) Fungus disease. An affection of the hands and feet which prevails extensively in India, and is ascribed to the growth of a fungus,—Chio'nyphé Carteri, (after Dr. H. V. Carter.)

MYCHMUS, (μυχμος,) Suspirium.

MYCHTHISMUS, (μυχθισμος,) Moaning, Suspiration.

MYCODERM'IA, gen. Mycoderm'itis, My'codermi, (myces, and derma, 'skin,') A cryptogamous growth, which constitutes the crusts of favus. See Porrigo favosa. Also, a mucous membrane, see Membrane.

MYCODERMA CEREVISIÆ, Torula cerevisiæ.

MYCODERMA PLI'CÆ, Tricomaph'lyton. A cryptogamous growth, said to be the essence of Plica.

MYCODERMITIS, (mycodermia, and itis,) Mucitis.

MYCODES, (from myces, and odes,) Fungoid.

MYCIDIARRHŒEA, see Diarrhœa.

MYCODYENTERIA, see Dysentery.

MYCOPHTHISIS, see Bronchorrhœa.

MYCORTHOPNŒ'IA. Orthopnea from excessive secretion of mucus in the air passages—Orthopnœ'a pituitosa.

MYCOSIS, (myces, and osis,) Fungus.

MYCTER, (μυκτηρ,) Nasus.

MYCTERES, (μυκτηρες,) Myxæ, Nares.

MYCTEROPHONIA, (mycter, and φωνη, 'voice,') Rhinophonia.

MYCTEROXEROTES, Mycteroxero'sis, (mycter, and ξηροτης, 'dryness,') Narium sic'citas. Dryness of the interior of the nose.

MYCUS, (μυκης,) Mucus.

MYDE'SIS, (μυδαω, 'I abound with moisture, I am putrid,') Moisture. In its most general sense it means corruption. By some it is used for a mucous discharge from inflamed eyelids.

MY'DON, (μυδων,) Fungous or putrid flesh in certain fistulous ulcers. Also, flesh putrid from mouldiness.

MYDRIASIS, Platyco'ria, Platyco'ri'osis, Amydri'asia. A name given by several writers to morbid dilatation of the pupil—Coromydri'osis and by others to weakness of sight produced by hydropthalnia, or superabundance of humours, (from μυδος, 'moisture,')

MYDRIATICUS, Mydriat'ic. Relating to or causing dilatation of the pupil. Certain narcotics, as opium, contract the pupil in poisonous doses; whilst others, as belladonna, dilate it. Owing to this antagonism, the mydriatic belladonna has been given in poisoning from opium.

MYELAL'GIA, (myelus, and algos, 'pain,') Pain in the spinal marrow.

MYELANALOSIS, (myelus, and αναλωσις, 'wasting,') Tabes dorsalis.

MYELAPOPLEXIA, Apoplexia myelitica.

MYELATELI'A, (myelus, and ατελεια, (a. privative, and τελος, 'end,') 'want of end or finish,') Incompleteness of the spinal marrow.

MYELATROPHIA, (myelus, and ατροφια, 'atrophy,') Tabes dorsalis.

MYELIN, (from myelus,) see Nerve fibres.

MYÉLITE, Myelitis.

MYELITIS, M. parenchymato'sa seu spina'tis, Inflammati'o medullæ spina'tis, Spini'tis, Spino-dorsi'tis, Notomyeli'tis, Rachiomyeli'tis, Rachial-gi'tis (of some), (F.) Myélite, Inflammation de la moëlle épine'rie, I. rachidienne, (myelus, and itis,) Inflammation of the spinal marrow or its membranes;—indicated by deep-seated burning pain in the spine, with various nervous and vascular irregularities of function. It is not common. Dr. Marshall Hall proposes to call inflammation of the membranes of the brain Meningi'tis; that of the substance of the brain Myeli'tis.

MYELITIS CONVULSIVA, Chorea, electric—m. Parenchymatosa, Myelitis—m. Petechialis, Meningitis, cerebrospinal—m. Spinalis, Myelitis—m. Exsudativa, Hydrorachis.

MYELOCHYSIS, (myelus, and χωω, 'to pour out,') Hydrorachis.

MYÉLOCONE, (F.) (myelus, and κονια, 'dust,') A mixture of fatty matters found in the substance of the brain. (Coeurbe.)

MYÉLOCYTES, (myelus, and κυτος, 'a mass, body, or cell,') Granules of the brain. Nuclei of the cells of the gray substance.

MYELOGANGLIITIS, (myelus, γαγγλιον, 'a ganglion, and itis,) Cholera (sporadic).

MYÉLOÏD, Myeloï'des, Myelo'des, (myelus, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Marrowlike.

MYELOID TUMOUR, Fibroplast'ic tumour. A sarcomatous tumour, the more characteristic constituents of which are—peculiar many-nucleated corpuscles, which have been recognized as constituents of the marrow and diploe of bones, especially in the fœtus and in early life.

MYELOMA, gen. Myelo'matis, (from myelus,) See Encephaloid.

MYELOMALACIA, (myelus, and μαλακια, 'softness,') Mollities medullæ spinalis.

MYELOMENINGITIS, (myelus, μηνιγξ, 'a membrane, and itis,) Meningitis, spinal.

MYELOMYCES, (myelus, and myces,) see Encephaloid.

MYELON, (from myelus,) Medulla spinalis.

MYELOPARALYSIS, (myelus, and paralysis,) Paraplegia.

MYELOPHTHISIS, Tabes dorsalis—m. Sicca, Tabes mesenterica.

MYELOPHY'MATA, Tuber'cula medullæ spina'tis, (myelus, and φυμα, 'a tumor,') Tubercles of the spinal marrow.

MYÉLOPLAXE, (myelus, and πλαξ, 'a plate or lamella,') Plates or lamellæ with numerous nuclei in the marrow of bones. (Robin.)

MYELORRHAGIA, (myelus, and ρηγνυμι, 'to break forth,') Apoplexia myelitica.

MYELOSPONGUS, (myelus, and σπογγος, 'a sponge, a fungus,') See Encephaloid.

MYELUS, (μυλος,) Marrow, Medulla spinalis—m. Diauchenius, Medulla spinalis—m. Dorsites, Medulla spinalis—m. Noticus, Medulla spinalis—m. Psoticus, Medulla spinalis.

MYENERGIA, (myon, and energia.) Muscular strength.

MYGMUS, (μυγμος.) Suppurium.

MYOCEPHALUM, (μυια, 'a fly,' and κεφαλη, 'head,' from its resemblance.) Ptosis iridis.

MYODEOP'SIA, (μυωδης, 'appertaining to flies,' and οψις, 'vision,') see Metamorphopsia.

MYIODOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYITIS, (myo, and itis.) Myositis, Rheumatism, acute.

MYLABRIS CICHORII, (μυλαβρις.) see Cantharis—m. Punctata, see Cantharis—m. Pustulata, see Cantharis.

MYLACEPHALUS, (μυλη, 'a mole,' a, private, and κεφαλη, 'head,') A monster with only traces of viscera, and without head or extremities.

MYLACRI, (μυλακροι, from μυλη, 'a millstone,') Molar teeth.

MYLACRIS, Patella.

MYLE, (μυλη, 'a millstone,') Patella, Mole.

MYLICUS, Molar.

MYLO, (from μυλη, 'a mill,') In composition, the jaw, especially the lower jaw.

MYLODI, (μυλη, 'a mill,' and οδους, 'a tooth,') Molar teeth.

MYLODONTES, Molar teeth.

MYOLOGOS'SUS. Winslow has given this name to muscular fibres which pass from the posterior part of the myloid line of the lower jaw, and from the sides of the base of the tongue to the parietes of the pharynx. These fibres belong to the constrictor superior pharyngis.

MYLOHYOID FURROW OR GROOVE. A furrow which passes from the superior orifice of the inferior dental canal of the lower jaw in the same direction as the canal, and lodges the mylohyoid nerve, a branch of the inferior-dental.

MYLOHYOID LINE, see Mylohyoideus.

MYLOHYOID NERVE, see Mylohyoid furrow.

MYLOHYOIDEUS, Myloj'ides, Diaphrag'ma oris, (F.) Mylo-hyoidien. The Mylopharyngeus of Morgagni and Santorini. This muscle is situate at the upper and anterior part of the neck, behind the lower jaw. It is broad, flat, and has the form of a truncated triangle. It arises from the internal oblique, internal maxillary, or mylohyoid line of the lower jaw bone, and is inserted at the fore part of the body of the os hyoideus. Its innermost fibres unite with those of the opposite side to form a raphe on the median line. The mylohyoideus raises the os hyoideus and carries it forward, or it depresses the lower jaw.

MYLOPHARYNGEUS, Constrictor pharyngis, Mylo-hyoideus.

MYLOÏDES, Mylohyoideus.

MYOCARDITIS, (myon, and carditis.) Carditis.

MYOCELĒ, My'ocete, (myon, and κηλη, 'a tumor,') A muscular tumor.

MYOCEPHALITIS, Myi'tis cephal'ica, (myon, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis.) Inflammation of the muscles of the head.

MYOCEPHALON, (μυια, 'a fly,' and κεφαλη, 'head,' from its resemblance.) Ptosis iridis.

MYOCELLIAL'GIA, (myon, κοιλια, 'abdomen,' and αλγεω, 'I suffer,') Pain in the muscles of the abdomen.

MYOCELLITIS, Myocellit'is, Inflamma'tio musculo'rum abdominal'ium, (myon, κοιλια, 'lower belly,' and itis.) Inflammation of the muscles of the abdomen.

MYODEMIA, (myon, and ημας, 'fat,') Fatty degeneration of muscle.

MYODEOPSIA, (μυωδης, 'appertaining to flies,' and οψις, 'vision,') Metamorphopsia.

MYO'DES, (myon, and odes.) Like unto muscle. Muscular.

MYODESOPIA, (μυωδης, 'appertaining to flies,' and οψις, 'vision,') Metamorphopsia.

MYODESOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODYNAMIA, Vis musculo'ris, (myon, and δυναμις, 'power,') The force or power of a muscle.

MYODYNAMICS, see Muscular contraction.

MYODYNAMIOMETER, (myodynamia, and μετρον, 'measure,') Dynamometer.

MYODYNAMOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYN'IA, (myon, and δυνη, 'pain,') Pain in the muscles, —rheumatismal or other. Rheumatism.

MYODYNTIA INFLAMMATORIA, Myositis.

MYOGRAPHY, Myogra'phia, (myon, and γραφειν, 'to describe,') An anatomical description of the muscles.

MYO'OID, Myoi'des, (myon, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') An epithet given to tumours composed of fibre cells or muscular fibres of organic life.

MYOLEMMA, gen. Myolem'matis, Myole'ma, (myon, and λεμμα, 'a coat,') The membranous tube of each muscular fibre. It has also the same signification as Sarcolemma.

MY'OLIN, (from myon.) A name given by Mr. Erasmus Wilson to a transparent substance that fills the cells, which he conceives, by their juxtaposition form the ultimate muscular fibril.

MYOL'OGY, Myolog'ia, Sarcolog'ia, Myoiolog'ia, (myon, and λογος, 'a discourse,') That part of anatomy which treats of the muscles.

MYOMALA'CIA, (myon, and μαλακια, 'softness,') Softening of muscle.

MYON, (μυων.) Muscle.

MYONARCO'SIS, (myon, and ναρκη, 'stupor,') Numbness of the muscles.

MYONITIS, (myon, and itis.) Myositis.

MYON'OSUS, Myoni'us, Myopathi'a, (myon, and νοσος, 'disease,') A disease of the muscles.

MYOPALMUS, (myon, and παλμος, 'agitation,') Substultus tendinum.

MYOPARALYSIS, see Paralysis.

MYOPATHIA, (myon, and παθος, 'affection,') Myonosis.

MYOPE, Myops.

MYOPHO'NIA, (myon, and φωνη, 'voice,') The sound of muscular contraction,—as that of the ventricles of the heart during the systole of that organ.

MYO'PIA, Myopi'asis, Luscios'itas, Myo'pis, Paropi'sis propin'qua, Ambly'opia dissito'rum, Dyso'pia dissito'rum, Dyspho'tia, Vit'us ju'venium, (μυς, 'a mouse,' and οψ, 'the eye,') My'opy, Short-sightedness, Nearsightedness, Mouse-eyed, Publindness, (Old E.) Mo'pe-eye, Mo'ar-eye, (F.) Vue courte, V. basse. The state of those who can only see objects very near. The defect is owing to the too great convexity or depth of the eye, or to too great density of the humours, and is palliated by wearing concave glasses.

MYOP'IC, Myopi'cus, Mo'pe-eyed, Mopi'cal, Shortsighted, Por'e'blind, Pur'blind, Spar'blind. Relating or appertaining to myopia.

MYOPODIORTHO'TICON, (myopia, and διορθωτικον, 'having power to correct,') An apparatus for the cure of shortsightedness.

MY'O'PS, Lucio'sus, Myo'pus, My'ope. One affected with myopia or shortsightedness.

MYOPY, Myopia.

MYORRHEX'IS, (myon, and ρηξις, 'rupture,') Rupture of a muscle.

MYOSARCO'MA, gen. Myosarco'matis, (myon, and sarcoma.) A sarcomatous tumour in which muscular fibres are found.

MYO'SIS, (μυω, 'I close the eyes,') Microcor'ia. Smallness of the pupil. Phthi'sis pupilla'ris. Permanent contraction of the pupil. It is usually caused by iritis, and is extremely difficult to cure. When it exists to such an extent as to obliterate the pupil, it is called Synize'cis. Also, Myopia.

MYOSITE, Myositis.

MYOSITIC, Myositicus, from Myosis. Causing contraction of the pupil,—as opium.

MYOSITIS, Myitis, Myositis, Myonitis, Sarcitis, Rheumatismus phlegmonodes, Myodynitis inflammatoria, Phlegmasia myoica, Inflammatio seu Phlegmonè Musculorum, (F.) Myosite, Inflammation des muscles, (myon, and itis.) A name proposed by Sagar for inflammation of the muscles. Also, Rheumatism.

~MYOSOTIS, (μυσοσotis, from μυς, gen. μυος, 'a mouse,' and οσος, gen. ωσος, 'ear.')

Hieracium pilosella, Rheumatism, Rheumatism, acute; (from myon.)

MYOSPASMUS, Cramp.

MYOSITICI (Morbi), (myon, and οσσειον, 'a bone.')

Diseases of the bones and muscles, in the classification of Dr. Wm. Farr.

MYOTILITY, Myotilitas, (F.) Myotilité, (from myon.) Muscular contractility.

MYOTOMY, Myotomia, (myon, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.')

The part of practical anatomy which treats of the dissection of the muscles. Also, the surgical operation of the division of muscles to remove deformity.

MYOTYRBE, (myon, and τυρβη, 'disorder.')

Chorea.

MYRAC'OPUM, (μυρον, 'an ointment,' a, private, and κοπος, 'fatigue.')

An ointment used by the ancients in cases of fatigue.

MYRCIA ACRIS, see Spiritus myrciæ.

MYREPSUS, (μυρεψος, from μυρον, 'an ointment.')

Unguentarius.

MYR'AGRAMME, (μυρια, '10,000,' and γραμμα, 'gramme.')

A weight equal to 10,000 grammes, or to 26 pounds, 9 ounces, and 6 drachms Troy.

MYRIAMÈTRE. A measure of 10,000 metres; equal to 16 miles, 1 furlong, 156 yards, and 14 inches.

MYRICA ASPLENIFOLIA, (after μυρικη, 'the tanarisk.')

Comptonia asplenifolia—m. Cenifera, see Cera flava et alba, and Wax, myrtle.

MYRICA GAL'È, M. palustris, Myrtus Brabantica seu Anglica, Myrtifolia Belgica, Gal'è, Ga'gel, Rhus sylvestris seu Belgica, Ac'aron, Elæagnus, E. Cor'do, Chamælaëagnus, Dodone'a, Dutch myrtle, Sweet gale, Sweet willow, (Sc.) Scotch gale, (F.) Piment Royal, Thé de Simon Pauli, Galé odorant. Ord. Myricaceæ. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Tetandria. The leaves, flowers, and seeds have a strong, fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They are used for destroying moths and cutaneous insects. The infusion is given internally as a stomachic and vermifuge.

MYRICA PALUSTRIS, M. Gale.

MYRINGA, see Tympanum.

MYRINGITIS, Inflammatio tympani, (myrin'ga, 'the membrana tympani,' and itis.) Inflammation of the membrana tympani; and, also, of the tympanum.

MYRINX, gen. Myrin'gis, see Tympanum.

MYRIS, (μυρίς), Myrothe'cè, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Nar'thex, (μυρον, 'a perfumed oil or ointment.')

A perfumed oil jar or ointment box.

MYRIS'TICA, (μυρον, 'a liquid perfume,' from μυρον, 'to flow,' M. Moscha'ta seu aromat'ica seu officinallis seu fra'grans, Comacon. Nat. Ord. Myristicæ. The tree which produces the nutmeg and mace. (F.) Muscadier. The Nutmeg, Myristica, (Ph. U. S.), Myristicæ seu Myristicæ moscha'tæ nucleus, Nux moscha'ta seu unguentaria, Nucis'ta, Nux myristica seu aromat'ica, Chrysobalanus Gale'ni, Unguentaria, As'sala, (F.) Muscade, is the kernel of the fruit. It has a fragrant, aromatic odour; an agreeable pungent taste, and is much used for culinary purposes. Alcohol extracts its active matter. It has the properties of aromatics in general; being stimulant and stomachic. The volatile oil—O'leum myristicæ seu nucis'tæ ether'eum—possesses the virtues of the nutmeg. Dose of the nutmeg, gr. v to ℥j;—of the oil, gtt. iij to gtt. vj.

Mace, Ma'cis, Flo'res macis seu ma'cidis, (F.) Flo'rs de muscade, is the arillus of the fruit. It is membranous, with the odour and taste of the nutmeg, and is possessed of similar qualities. The O'leum macis seu ma'cidis is a fragrant, sebaceous substance, expressed in the East Indies. It is only used externally. It is the Adeps myristicæ, Myristicæ o'leum express'um, O'leum seu Balsamum nucis'tæ, But'ter of nutmegs, Express'ed oil of Mace.

MYRISTICÆ NUCLEUS, see Myristica moschata.

MYRISTICATIO HEPATIS, Liver, nutmeg.

MYRMECIA, (μυρμηκία), Formica.

MYRMECIASIS, (μυρμηκίσις), Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIASMUS, (μυρμηκισμος), Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECISMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIZON, (μυρμηκίζων), Formicant.

MYRMECOSIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMEX, (μυρμηξ), Formica.

MYROBALANUS, (myron, and βαλαος, 'a nut;') so called, because formerly used in ointments;)

Angeloc'acos, Myro'bolan, Glauc' unguenta'ria, Pal'ma unguentario'rum. A dried Indian fruit, of the plum kind, of different species of Terminalia. Ord. Combretaceæ. Of this there are several varieties—the M. Bellir'ica or Bellir'ic myro'balan, Bellegu, Bellerigi, Belnèleg—the M. chebul'ula or Chebul' myro'balan; the M. cit'rina or Yel'low myrobalan, Ara'ra; the M. Em'blica or em'blic myrobalan, and the M. In'dica, As'nar, In'dian or Black myro'balan. All the myrobalans have an unpleasant, bitterish, very austere taste; and strike an inky blackness with a solution of steel. They are said to possess laxative as well as astringent properties.

MYROLE'S, (myron and oleum), see Olea volatilia.

MYRON, (μυρον), Myrum, Unguentum.

MYROPISSOCE'RON. A topical application in alopecia, referred to by Galen; (myron, πισσα, 'pitch,' and κηρος, 'wax.')

MYROPÆUS, (myron and ποιεω, 'to make,')

Unguentarius.

MYROPOLES, (μυροπωλης, from myron, and πωλεω, 'to sell,')

Unguentarius.

MYROSPERMUM FRUTESCENS, (myron, and σπερμα, 'seed,')

Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. Pereire, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. Peruiferum, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. of Sonsonate, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. Toluiferum, see Toluifera Balsamum.

MYROXYLON, (myron, and ξυλον, 'wood,')

see M. Peruiferum.

MYROX'YLON PERUIF'ERUM, Myrosperm'um frutescens seu Peruif'erum, Quinquino, Caburei'ba. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Supposed to be the tree which affords the Peruvian bal'sam, Bal'samum Peruvianum (Ph. U. S.) seu Peruvianum nig'rum seu Perua'nim seu In'dicum, Putzochill, Myrox'yl'i Peruif'eri bal'samum, Myrox'ylon, Caburei'ba, In'dian, Mex'ican, or Amer'ican bal'sam, (F.) Baume de Pérou ou des Indes. This balsam consists of benzoic acid, resin, and essential oil. Its odour is fragrant and aromatic; taste hot and bitter: it is soluble in alcohol, and miscible in water by the aid of mucilage. It is stimulant and tonic, and considered to be expectorant: as such, it has been employed in paralysis, chronic asthma, chronic bronchitis, rheumatism, gleet, leucorrhœa, &c., and externally, for cleansing and stimulating foul indolent ulcers. Dose, gtt. v to gtt. xxx.

White Bal'sam of Peru', Nat'ural bal'sam, Bal' sacum albū, Sty'rax alba, Balsamela'on, is obtained by incision from Myrospermum peruvianum.

The Myroxylon of Sonsonate in Central America—Myrospermum Peruvianum of Dr. Royle, according to the Ph. B. (1864), furnishes balsam of Peru.

MYROXYLON OF SONSONATE, see M. Peruvianum—m. Toluiferum, Toluifera Balsamum.

MYRRHA, (μύρρα,) Bo'la, Stac'tē, Myrrh, Calo'nia, Smyrna, My'rha rubra, (F.) Myrrhe. The exudation (μυρον, from μύρειν, 'to flow') of a plant of Abyssinia or Arabia Felix, the Balsamodendron myrrha. This gum-resin has a fragrant, peculiar odour; and bitter aromatic taste. It is in reddishyellow, light, brittle, irregular tears; partially soluble in distilled water when aided by friction. S. g. 1.360. It is stimulant; and has been used in cachectic affections, humoral asthma, chronic bronchitis, &c. Dose, gr. x. to ʒj.

MYRRHA IMPERFECTA, Bellidium.

MYRRHINE, (μύρρινος,) Myrtus.

MYRRHIS ANNUA, (μύρρις,) Athamanta Crentensis—m. Major, Cherophyllum odoratum—m. Odorata, Cherophyllum odoratum.

MYRSINA AFRICANA, Tatzé.

MYRSINE, (μύρσινος,) Myrtus.

MYRSINELÆ'ON, (μύρσινος, 'myrtle,' and ελαίων, 'oil,') Oil of myrtle.

MYRSINITES, (μύρσινιτις.) Wine in which branches of myrtle have been macerated.

MYRTACANTHA, (myrtus, and ακανθα, 'a thorn,') Ruscus.

MYRTE COMMUN, Myrtus.

MYRTID'ANON, (μυρτιάων, from myrtus, 'myrtle,') An exscescence growing on the trunk of the myrtle, and used as an astringent. With Hippocrates, either the myrtus caryophyllata or myrtus pimenta. [?] Also, a wine.—Vinum Myrtid'annum—made from wild myrtle berries.

MYRTIFOLIA BELGICA, (myrtus, and folium, 'a leaf,') Myrica gale.

MYRTIFORM, Myrtiformis, Myrto'des, (myrtus, and forma, 'shape,') Having the shape of a leaf of myrtle. A name given to a muscel (depressor alæ nasi), to the fossa incisiva; to certain caruncles, &c.

MYRTIFORMIS, Compressor naris, Depressor alæ nasi.

MYRTITES, (μυρτιτις, from μύρτος, 'the myrtle berry,') A name given to a medicine prepared with honey and myrtle berries.

MYRTLE, Myrtus—m. Berry, Vaccinium myrtillus—m. Candleberry, see Wax, myrtle—m. Dutch, Myrica gale—m. Wax, see Wax, myrtle—m. Wild, Ruscus.

MYRTOCHEILIDES, (myrton, and χείλις, 'a small lip,') Nympha.

MYRTOCHILA, (myrton, and χείλος, 'a lip,') Nympha.

MYRTODES, (myrtus, and odes,) Myrtiform.

MYRTON, (μύρτιον,) Clitoris.

MYRTUS, (μύρτος,) Myrtus communis seu communis Italica, Myrsi'nē, Myrrh'i'nē, The Myrtle, (F.) Myrte Commun. Ord. Myrtaceæ. The berries of this plant have been recommended in alvine and uterine fluxes and other disorders of relaxation and debility. They are moderately astringent and somewhat aromatic.

MYRTUS ACRIIS, see Spiritus myrciæ—m. Anglica, Myrica gale—m. Brabantica, Myrica gale—m. Caryophyllata, see Spiritus myrciæ.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLATA, Calyptran'thes caryophyllata, Cas'sia seu Canel'la caryophyllata, (F.) Capelet, Cannelle giroflée. The tree which is considered to afford the Clove bark; Cor'tex caryophyllatus seu caryophyllata. This bark is a warm aromatic; resembling clove with an admixture of cinnamon. It may be used with the same views as cloves or cinnamon.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata—m. Leucodendron, Melaleuca cajuputi.

MYRTUS PIMEN'TA, Eugenia Pimenta. The tree which bears the Jamaica pepper, Pimenta'æ bac'cæ, Pimenta' ber'ries, Pimenta', Piper caryophyllatum seu chid'pæ seu odoratum Jamaicensē seu Jamaicensē seu tabas'cum, Coc'cili' Ind'i aromatici, Amom'mon pimenta', Fructus pimenta', Carive, Caryophyllus Americ'anus seu Pimenta', Allspice, (F.) Poivre de Jamaïque, Toute épice, Assouvon. The unripe berries—Pimenta', Pimenta' (Ph. U. S.)—have an aromatic odour; resembling a mixture of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves; the taste is pungent, but mixed, like the odour. Like other peppers, this is stimulant and carminative. The oil—O'leum Pimenta'—possesses the virtues of the berries. The powdered fruit has been called Quatre épices or Four spices. Dose, gr. v to ʒij.

Aqua Pimenta', Pimenta' wa'ter, is officinal in the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Pharmacopœias. It is carminative. Dose, fʒj or fʒij.

MY'RUM, (μύρον,) My'ron. A perfumed oil or ointment. A liquid perfume. The spontaneously exuding juice of many plants, especially of that from which myrrh is obtained.

MYS, (μύς,) Muscle.

MYSIOLOGIA, (mys, and logos, 'a discourse,') Mysology.

MYSITIS, (mys, and itis, 'inflammation,') Mysitis.

MYS'TAX, gen. Mys'tacis, Mastax, (μυσταξ, gen. μυσταξος,) The hair growing on each side of the upper lip in men. The mustache or mustachio, (Old. Eng.) Monchat'oe, (F.) Monstache. Also, the upper lip.

MYSTE'RION, (μυστηριον, 'a mystery,') An arcanum, nostrum, or secret preparation in general. Also, an antidote, referred to by Galen and others.

MYSTRON, (μυστρον,) A Greek measure, which held about three drachms.

MYTILUS EDU'LIS, (μυτίλος, from mys,) The common mussel, (F.) Moule. A bivalve, the flesh of which, when at all in a state of decomposition, is highly poisonous. When fresh, it is an agreeable, but not very digestible article of diet, producing, in some persons, all the symptoms of urticaria. One affected with such phenomena is said, occasionally, to be mus'selled.

MYU'RUS, Mei'rus. A pulse is so called when it sinks progressively and becomes smaller and smaller like a mouse's tail; (from μύς, 'a mouse,' and ουρα, 'tail,') Pulsus myurus reciprocus, a pulse, which, after having become gradually weaker, resumes, by degrees, its former character.

MYXA, (μύξα,) Mucus, Sebentina.

MYXÆ, (μύξαι,) Narcs.

MYXIOSIS, (from μύξα, 'mucus, and osis,') Gonorrhœa impura.

MYXOIDES, (from μύξα, 'mucus,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Muciform, Mucous.

MYXOR'RHŌOS, (μυξορροος, from μύξα, 'mucus,' and ῥεω, 'I flow,') One who is subject to mucous discharge. Applied to an infant that discharges a considerable quantity of mucus and saliva.

MYXOSARCO'MA, gen. Myxosarco'matis, (μύξα, 'mucus,' and σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') A tumour which is mal'cocar'neous; partly mucous and partly fleshy.

MYXOTER, (μύξωτηρ, from μύξα, 'mucus,') Nasus.

MYZESIS, (μύζω, 'to suck,') Sucking.

N.

N. This letter, in prescriptions, is an abridgment of numero, 'by number.'

NABULUS ALBUS, (from ναβλα, 'a harp,' owing to the lyrate leaves,) Prenanthes alba seu serpentaria, White Lettuce, Lion's Foot, Rattlesnake's Master, Rattlesnake root, Gall of the Earth. An indigenous plant, of the order Compositæ, which, with several other species of the genus, is reputed to possess the power of curing the bites of serpents. The root has been used in dysentery.

NABULUS FRASERI has similar properties.

NABOT, Saccharum candidum.

NABOTHI GLANDULÆ, Ovula seu Ova Nabothi seu Nabothiana, Ovaria Nabothi, Folliculi rotundi et oblongi, Vesiculae seu Bullae rotundae cervicis uteri, V. seminales mulierum, Corpora seu Corpuscula globosa, Glandulae seu Hydatides cervicis uteri, Glands of Naboth, (F.) Onfs ou Vésicules de Naboth. Small, mucous cysts or follicles situate in the interstices of the duplicatures of the lining membrane of the cervix uteri. Naboth, from noticing them in a morbid condition, mistook them for ova; and hence they received the name Ovula Nabothi.

NACRA, Nakra, Nasa. A kind of influenza common in the East Indies.

NACRÉ, ([F.] naere, 'mother of pearl,') Margaritaceus.

NACREOUS, Margaritaceus.

NÆVI, see Nævus—n. Pigmentary, see Nævus.

NÆVOID, Nævoides, (nævus, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling nævus.

NÆVUS, pl. Nævi; Nævus mater-nus seu Sigillum, Nota mater-na, Nevus, Macula matricis seu mater-næ seu matriciales, Notæ infantum, Lupus variolosus, Stigmata, Metrocellides, Congenite notæ, Mother's or Fancy marks, Mother's spots, (F.) Envie, Tache de naissance ou pigmentaire, Signe. Spots of various kinds on the skin of children when born, which have been attributed to the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. They are of various appearances, some much better supplied with blood than others. Some are merely superficial or stain-like spots, Pigmentary nævi; others are prominent, Vascular tumours, and often have long, irregular hairs growing from them. These have usually been called Moles, Spi'li, Spi'li-mata, Epicrho'es spi'li, &c. The red, rosy, violet or bluish spots are called by I. G. St. Hilaire, Taches sanguines;—those of an intermediate hue, between the normal colour and black, Taches melanicmes. See Telangiectasia.

When nævi are superficial, without any disposition to enlarge or spread, they need not be meddled with; but all those that partake of the character of aneurism by anastomosis had better be removed, where practicable.

NÆVUS SIGILLUM, Nævus.

NAFDA, Naphtha.

NAFTA, Naphtha.

NAIL, (Sax. nægl.) Un'guis, O'nyx, (F.) Ongle. A whitish transparent substance, similar to horn, which covers the dorsal extremity of the fingers. Three portions are distinguished in it; the extremity, which is free, at the end of the finger;—the body or middle portion adherent by its inner surface; and the root, Onychorrhiza, Rhizonychia, Ra'dix seu Ma'trix un'guis, In'timum un'guis, (F.) Matrice de l'ongle. The last presents two distinct parts; the one, terminated by a thin, serrated edge, is buried in a duplicature of the skin, Vallœcula un'guis, which acts the part of a naïlfollicle; the other, called Lu'mina seu Semi-c'nicula seu Scl'è seu Ar'ens seu Exor'tna seu

Anat'olè seu Albe'do un'guum, is whitish and of a semilunar shape, and is situate above the part where the epidermis terminates. The nails are composed of a horny tissue, of the same nature as that which forms the hoofs, horns, and scales of different animals. When the nail has been torn off, the papillæ of the skin become covered by a soft, whitish lamina, whose consistency gradually augments. New laminae are then formed underneath, and give the nail the thickness it ought to possess. The corneous substance, being thus constantly produced at the extremity of each of these laminae, the whole of the nail is pushed forwards, and it would grow indefinitely, were it not cut or worn by friction.

The nails protect and support the extremities of the fingers against the impression of hard bodies. They are, also, useful in laying hold of small bodies; and dividing those that have but little consistence.

NAILFOLLICLE, see Nail.

NAILS-PRING, Hangnail.

NAÏN, Nanus.

NAÏSSANCE, (from naescor, natus, 'to be born,') see Parturition.

NAJA TRIPUDIANS, Cobra di Capello.

NAKRA, Nacra.

NANGNAIL, Hangnail.

NANINUS, see Nanus.

NANNARI, Hemidesmus Indicus.

NANNY-BERRY, Viburnum lentago.

NANOCEPHALIA, (nannus, and κεφαλή, 'head,') see Nanocephalus.

NANOCEPHALUS. One of a monstrous state—Nanocephalia—in which the whole head or certain of its parts are too small, whilst the trunk and extremities are normal.

NANOCORMIA, see Nanocormus.

NANOCORMUS, (nannus, and κορμος, 'a trunk,') One of a monstrous condition—Nanocormia—in which the trunk is too small, whilst the head possesses its normal size.

NANOMELIA, see Nanomelus.

NANOMELUS, (nannus, and μῆλος, 'a limb,') One of a monstrous condition—Nanomelia—in which some part of an extremity is too small, and the whole limb too short.

NANOSOMIA, (nannus, and σωμα, 'body,') Microsomia, Microsoma'tia, Dwarf'ishness, (F.) Nanieme. A state in which the entire body with all its parts is smaller than common.

NANOSOMUS, Nanus.

NA'NUS, (nanos;) Pnmil'io, Pn'milo, Pusil'lus, 'a dwarf;' Nanosom'us, (Prov.) Crut, Rope, Spin'nick, (Sc.) Croil, Crok, Dearch, Dersch, Droich, Wrat'ack. (Pn'milus, Pnmil'lus, 'dwarf'ish,') (F.) Nain. One who is much below the usual stature.

The term is applicable to all organized beings from man to the vegetable. Trees have their dwarfs, as the human species have theirs. Some curious authenticated instances of human dwarfs are on record. Bebe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, was 33 inches (French) long, and well proportioned. The Polish nobleman, Borwlaski, who was well made, clever, and a good linguist, measured 28 Paris inches. He had a brother, 34 inches high, and a sister 21. A Friesland peasant, at 26 years of age, had attained 29 Amsterdam inches. C. H. Stöberin, of Nürnberg, was under three feet high at 20, yet he was well proportioned and possessed of talents. General Tom Thumb, so called, was seen by the Author in 1847. He was said to be 15 years old; measured 28 inches in height, and when weighed at the mint was found to weigh 20 pounds and 2 ounces. Two remarkable Indian dwarfs were exhibited in the United States and in Europe, about the middle of the 19th century, under the name of 'Aztec children,'—the boy, from 7 to 8 years of age, was 33½ inches in height, and weighed 20½ pounds;—the girl, from 4 to 6 years of age, was 29½ inches high, and weighed 17 pounds. They were very deficient in intellect. See Pymr.

NAPE OF THE NECK, Nucha.

NAPELLUS VERUS, (dim. of napus, 'a turnip.') Aconitum napellus.

NAPHÆ FLORES, see Citrus aurantium.

NAPHTHA, Acetone.

ΝΑΡΗΘΑ, (ναρδα) Naf'da, Naf'ta, Nap'ta, *Napta*lius, O'leum pētræ albūm; (F.) Naphte; from a Chaldaic and Syriac word signifying bitumen. A bituminous substance, found in Persia, Calabria, Sicily, &c. It is liquid, limpid, of a yellowishwhite colour, a smell slightly resembling that of oil of turpentine, and lighter than water. It resembles petroleum in its properties, and has been chiefly used as an external application; although occasionally, as an anthelmintic, and in inhalation in phthisis pulmonalis. Also, Æther.

ΝΑΡΗΘΑ ΑΣΕΤΙ, Æther acetuosus.—n. Coal Tar, light, see Anæsthetic.—n. Sulphurica, Æther sulphuricus.—n. Vitrioli, Æther sulphuricus.—n. Vitrioli camphorata, Tinctura atherea camphorata.—n. Vitrioli martialis, Tinctura seu Alcohol sulphuricoæthereus ferri.—n. Wood, Acetone.

ΝΑΡΗΘΑΛΙΝ, Naphthali'na. When coal tar is subjected to distillation, naphthaline passes over after coal naphtha. It is a white, shining, concrete, crystalline substance, fusible at 176° and boiling at 423°. It is soluble in alcohol, ether, naphtha and the oils, but insoluble in water. It has been used as an excitant expectorant, in the dose of 8 to 30 grains, in emulsion or syrup, and repeated. It has also been used as an anthelmintic; and, when made into an ointment, in psoriasis, lepra vulgaris, &c.

ΝΑΡΗΦΟΡΜ, Napiform'is, Bul'nioid, Bunioides, (napus, 'a turnip,' and forma, 'shape.') An epithet for a form of scirrhous tumour whose cut surface presents concentric lines resembling those seen in the interior of a turnip.

ΝΑΡΙΟΥΜ, Lapsana. Sinapis.

ΝΑΡΕΣ, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Naples in its general characters resembles that of Nice, but it is more changeable: the sirocco too, which is little known in Nice, is severely felt at Naples. It is not a good residence for the phthisical invalid: Sir James Clark, indeed, considers it altogether unsuitable.

ΝΑΡΕΣ, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the Quarter Santa Lucia, near the coast, is a cold spring, rich in sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is much used as an aperient tonic, and in cutaneous affections.

ΝΑΡΕΣ W'ATER, FACTITIOUS, A'gna Neapolitana seu acid'ula hydrosulphurata, (F.) Eau de Naples. (Acidulous water, containing four times its bulk of carbonic acid,  $\zeta$ xv, and  $\zeta$ ij; Hydro-sulphuretted water,  $\zeta$ ix; Carbonate of soda, gr. viij; Carbonate of magnesia, gr. x. M. Ph. P.)

ΝΑΡΤΑ, Naphtha, Nata.

ΝΑΡΥΣ, (ναρπ, 'mustard,') Sinapis—n. Leucosinapis, Sinapis alba—n. Sylvestris, Brassica napus.

ΝΑΡΥΣ, (ναρπ.) Sinapis.

ΝΑΡΧΑ, (ναρην, 'stupor,') Narcosis.

ΝΑΡΧΑΡΗΘΗ, Narcaphthon.

ΝΑΡΧΑΡΗΘΟΝ, (ναρχαρθον.) Narcaph'thon. The bark of an aromatic tree formerly brought from India. By some, supposed to be that of the tree which affords the olibanum. It was used in fumigation, in diseases of the lungs. See Lacaphthon and Thymiana.

ΝΑΡΧΕ, (ναρην, 'stupor,') Narcosis.

ΝΑΡΧΕΜΑ, (ναρχημα.) Narcosis.

ΝΑΡΧΕΣΙΣ, (ναρχησις.) Narcosis.

ΝΑΡΧΙΣΣΕ ΔΑΥΤΟΜΝΕ, Colechicum autumnale—n. Faux, Narcissus pseudonarcissus—n. des Près, Narcissus pseudonarcissus—n. Sauvage, Narcissus pseudonarcissus.

ΝΑΡΧΙΣΣΟΣ ΠΣΕΥΔΟΝΑΡΧΙΣΣΟΣ, (ναρχισσος, from ναρην, 'stupor,') N. festalis seu glan'cius seu grandiflorus seu hispanicus seu major seu serratius seu sylvestris, Bulbocodium, Pseudonarcissus, Daf'fodil, (old Eng.) Aff'adil, Belle-Blome, (Prov.) Affrodile, Bell'flower, Butter and Eggs, Lent rose. Ord. Amaryl'lidææ. (F.) Narcisse sauvage, Narcisse des près, Faux narcisse, Porillon, Aivalt, Zouzinette, Jeannette. The root is emetic and cathartic, in the dose of  $\zeta$ ij. The flowers are antispasmodic. Dose, 24 grains.

ΝΑΡΧΟΔΕΣ, (ναρχωδες.) Narcotized.

ΝΑΡΧΟΣΙΣ, (ναρχωσις.) Nar'cotism, Nar'cè, Nar'ca, Narce'ma, Narce'sis, Torpe'do, Tor'por, Stu'por, Stupefact'io. The aggregate effects produced by narcotic substances. At times, narcotism is confined to a state of more or less profound stupor; and constitutes, in certain cases, a useful remedial condition; at others, it is a true poisoning, characterized by vertigo, nausea, a state of intoxication, or apoplexy, constant delirium, convulsive motions, &c. Emetics in strong doses, and not much diluted with water; purgatives and gylsters are the first means to be used in this condition. The stupor may afterwards be combated by the use of exciting and stimulating drinks.

The production of narcosis or the effect of narcotics has been called narcotization.

ΝΑΡΧΟΣΙΣ ΦΟΛΛΙΚΟΥΡΤΩΜ. A state of the scalp, which Mr. Erasmus Wilson conceive to be dependent upon torpid action of the hair follicles, and in which the scalp and hair are found covered with a yellowish, dirtylooking powder, composed of an admixture of granular particles and furfuraceous scales.

ΝΑΡΧΟΣΠΑΣΜ'ΟΣ, (narce, and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Stupor combined with spasm.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΑ, Narcotin.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΚΟ ΠΟΙΣΟΝ, see Poison.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΚΟΑΚΡΙΔ, see Poison.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΚΟΣ, Nar'cotica, Car'otica, Obstufacient'ia, Stupefacient'ia, Stupefac'ients, (F.) Stupéfactifs, Stupéfians. Substances, which have the property of stupefying;—as opium, stramonium, and hyoscyamus, (from Narce.) They are used in medicine as soothing agents; exerting their special influence on the brain and tubular matter of the spinal marrow. In small doses, as a general rule, narcotics stimulate; in large, they act as sedatives. The following is a list of the chief narcotics:—Aconitum, Ætherea, Belladonna, Cannabis, Conium, Digitalis, Humulus, Hyoscyamus, Lactucarium, Opium and Morphia, Stramonii Folia, Stramonii Semina, Mental Narcotics, (Appropriate Music, Monotonous sounds, or any succession of monotonous impressions.)

ΝΑΡ'ΚΟΤΙΝ, Narcoti'na, Narce'otia, Anarce'otina, Opia'num; (same etymon,) (F.) Sel de Déréone ou d'opium, Opiane, Principe cristallizable de Déréone. A solid, white, inodorous, and insipid substance; by some considered to be alkaloid; by others neuter; crystallizable in straight prisms with a rhomboidal base; fusible like the fats; soluble in boiling alcohol and ether, and scarcely soluble in water. Narcotin produces all the unpleasant effects of opium; but at the same time, throws the animal into a state of stupor. It is not used in medicine, on account of these objections. The salts, which are very bitter, have been used successfully in India for the cure of intermittents.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΣΜΟΝ, see Narcosis.

ΝΑΡΧΟΤΙΣΜΟΣ, Narcosis.

NARCOTIZED, Torpidus, Narco'des. Affected with stupor, as from the use of a narcotic.

NARD, CELTIC, Valeriana Celtica—n. India, Nardus Indica—n. Indien, Nardus Indica—n. Indighe, Nardus Indica—n. Petit, Aralia nudicaulis—n. Sauvage, Asarum.

NARDUS INDICA, (ναρδος), Spica nar'di seu Indica, Andropogon nar'dus seu citriodor'nis, Ord. Gramineæ [?]; or Nardostachys seu Valeriana seu Patrinia Jatamansi, Valeriana spica; Order, Valerianaceæ; Indian nard, Spikenard. The root of this plant is one of the ingredients in the mithridate and theriaca. It is moderately warm and pungent, and has a flavour by no means disagreeable. It is used by the Orientals as a spice:—(F.) Nard Indien ou Indique. An ointment was formerly used, called Unguentum nard'num. It was prepared of Nard, Malabathrum leaves, Oil of worms, Costus, Amomum, Myrrh, &c., and was used as a detergent.

NARDUS MONTANA, Asarum—n. Rustica, Asarum.

NARES, (pl. of nares), Rh'nes, Cav'itas seu Cav'um seu Ca'eca seu Caver'na na'rium, Na'vus inter'nus, Mycte'res, Myx'e, Na'rium ad'itus, Ocheteum'ata, The nostrils, (Prov.) Suir'rels, Suurtes, (F.) Narines. Two elliptical apertures, situate beneath the nose, and separated from each other by the cartilaginous septum seu columna nasi. These apertures are continually open, and give passage to the air we breathe, and to the mucous fluids secreted in the nasal fossæ.

NARES INTERNÆ, Nasal fossæ.

NARES, POSTERIOR, No'ves postre'mæ, Extre'mæ na'ves, Ostia posteriora seu Choanæ na'rium, Na'rium Ex'itus, (F.) Arrière-narines, Ouvertures postérieures des fosses nasales, are the posterior apertures of the nasal cavities, which establish a communication between those cavities and the pharynx. They are bounded, above, by the body of the sphenoid bone; below, by the palate bone, and the base of the velum pendulum; and, on the outside, by the internal ala of the pterygoid process. They are separated from each other by a septum, of which the vomer is the bony part.

NARIFUSORIA, (nares, 'the nostrils,' and fundero, fusum, 'to pour.') Medicines, which are dropt or put into the nostrils.

NARINES, Nares.

NARIUM ADITUS, ('entrance or passage of the nostrils,') Nares—n. Siccitas, Mycterexotes.

NARROW CHEST, see Lordosis.

NARTHECIA, Formulary, Myris.

NARTHECIUM, (ναρθηκιον, dim. of ναρθηξ, 'a case of ointments,') Formulary, Myris.

NARTHEX, (ναρθηξ.) Formulary, Myris, Splint—n. Asafœtida, see Asafœtida.

NASA, Nacra, Nata.

NASAL, Nasa'lis, (from nasus, 'the nose,') That which relates to the nose.

NASAL ARTERY. This is the largest of the two branches in which the ophthalmic artery terminates. It issues from the orbit, above the tendon of the orbicularis palpebrarum, passes above the side of the root of the nose, and anastomoses with the last extremity of the facial. Haller gave the name nasal to the sphenopalatine. He also called the dorsales nares, furnished by the external maxillary, Nasa'les laterales.

NASAL BONES, Os'na no'si seu nasa'lia, Ossicula na'si, (F.) Os nasale, Os proprius du nez. These bones are situate beneath the nasal notch of the os frontis, and occupy the space between the nasal or angular processes of the superior maxillary bone. Their shape is nearly quadrilateral. They have an external or cutaneous surface, an internal or nasal, and four margins. Each is articulated with its fellow, with the os frontis, ethmoid, and superior maxillary bones. They ossify from a single point.

NASAL CARTILAGE, Cartilago triangula'ris Na'si. A cartilage formed of three portions, which unite at the dorsum nasi, and are distinguished into the cartilage of the septum, and the lateral cartilages. This cartilage is continuous, above, with the ossa nasi, and, inferiorly, with membranous fibrocartilages, which form the supple and movable part of the nostrils. They are two in number—the one before, the other behind.

NASAL DUCT, Lacrymal duct—n. Eminence, Mesophryon.

NASAL FOS'SÆ, Ca'vi na'rium, Na'ves inter'næ. Two large, anfractuous cavities, situate between the orbits below the cranium, and lined by the pituitary or Schneiderian membrane. These cavities have no communication with each other; but the various sinuses in the neighbouring bones—the ethmoidal, sphenoidal, superior maxillary, &c.—all communicate with them. The general cavity of each nostril is divided by the ossa spongiosa into three meatus or passages, which run from before backwards. 1. The Meatus na'rium superior, placed at the upper, inner, and back part of the superior spongy bone. 2. The Meatus med'ius, situate between the superior and inferior spongy bones; and 3. The Meatus inf'rior, situate between the inferior spongy bone and the bottom of the nose. The Schneiderian membrane receives the first pair of nerves, and various branches from the fifth pair. The arteries are furnished by the branches of the internal maxillary, known under the names of sphenopalatine, infraorbital, superior alveolar, palatine, pterygopalatine; by the supraorbital, and ethmoidal branches of the ophthalmic artery; by the internal carotid, superior labial, and dorsales nasi. Its veins are little known, and generally follow the course of the arteries. The lymphatics are almost unknown. The nasal fossæ are the seat of smell; they aid, also, in respiration and phonation.

NASAL MEATUS, see Nasal fossæ.

NASAL MUCUS, Mucus na'rium, Phleg'ma na'rium cras'sum, Mucor seu Pituita seu Blen'na seu Lym'pha muculen'ta na'rium, vulgarly called Snot, Snob, Snoth, (F.) Morve, is the mucus secreted by the Schneiderian membrane.

NASAL NERVE, Naso-palpébral (Ch.), Nasoocula'ris (Sömmering), Nasocilia'ris. One of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve of Willis. It enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, passes along the inner paries of that cavity, and divides, opposite the internal and anterior orbital foramen, into two branches. 1. The internal and posterior, which passes into the Foramen orbitarium internum anterius, enters the cranium beneath the dura mater, and passes into the nasal fossæ, through an aperture at the side of the Crista galli. It afterwards divides into several filaments: one of them—the Nasolobar, of Chaussier—is very small, and descends on the posterior surface of the os nasi, and ramifies on the integuments of the ala nasi. A second terminates near the septum; others descend along the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. 2. The other is external and anterior, and is called the external nasal nerve. It is distributed to the outside of the orbit. Before dividing, the nasal nerve communicates with the ophthalmic ganglion, and gives off two or three ciliary nerves. Sömmering has given the name Posterior Nasal Nerve to the nerves which arise from the internal part of the sphenopalatine ganglion.

NASAL NOTCH, (F.) Échancrure nasale. A semi-circular notch, situate between the nasal prominence of the frontal bone, and articulated with the nasal bones and the nasal processes of the superior maxillary bones.

NASAL PROCESS, Maxillary bone, superior.

NASAL PROMINENCE, (F.) Bosse nasale. A prominence, situate on the median line, at the anterior surface of the os frontis, between the two superciliary arches.

NASAL REGION, Re'gio nasal'is. The region of the nose.

NASAL SPINES. These are three in number.

1. The Superior nasal spine of the os frontis, occupying the middle of its nasal notch, and articulated before with the nasal bones, behind with the ethmoid. 2. The inferior and anterior nasal spine, situate at the inferior part of the anterior opening of the nasal fossæ. It is formed by the two superior maxillary bones; and 3. The inferior and posterior nasal spine, Épine gutturale (Ch.), a process, formed on the mesial line by the two palate bones at the posterior part of the palatine arch.

NASALE, (from nasus.) Errhine.

NASALIS, Compressor naris.

NASALIS LABII SUPERIORIS. A small muscular slip, which runs up from the middle of the orbicularis and the lip to the tip of the nose. It lies exactly in the furrow, and is occasionally a levator of the upper lip, or a depressor of the tip of the nose.

NASAS, Nata.

NASATUS, ('long nosed,' from nasus:—the size of the nose being supposed an index of that of the male organ.) Membrus.

NASCALÈ. A kind of pessary, made of wool, or cotton, which was formerly introduced into the vagina, after being impregnated with oil, ointment, or some other proper medicament.

NASCAPHTHON, Nascaphthon.

NASDA, Nata.

NASI, see Oryza.

NASITAS, (from nasus.) Rhinophonia.

NASITIS, (nasus, and itis.) Rhinitis—n. Pos-tica, Angina nasalis.

NA'SO, Nasutus, (from nasus.) One who has a long nose. In composition, the nose.

NASOCILIARIS (Nervus), Nasal nerve.

NA'SOLA'BIAL, Na'solabialis; (from naso, and labium, 'a lip.')

Relating to the nose and lip.

NASOLABIAL LINE. A line or furrow, which separates the lip from the cheek, and commences at the ala nasi.

NASOLABIALIS. A muscular fasciculus described by Albinus, which arises from the anterior extremity of the septum nasi, and terminates in the orbicularis oris.

NA'SOPAL'ATINE, Na'so-palati'nis. That which belongs to the nose and velum palati.

NASOPALATINE GAN'GLION is situate in the foramen palatinum anterius. Its greater extremity receives the two naso-palatine branches; whilst the smaller gives off two or three filaments, which reach the palatine vault, where they ramify on the membrane of the same name, anastomosing with filaments of the great palatine nerve.

NASOPALATINE NERVE, Nerve of Cotun'nius, is furnished by the sphenopalatine, which proceeds from the ganglion of Meckel. It traverses the vault of the nasal fossæ, and proceeds upon the septum between the two layers of the pituitary membrane. It enters the anterior palatine canal, and terminates at the superior angles of the naso-palatine ganglion, without attaining the mouth.

NASOPALPÉBRAL, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

NASTA, Nata.

NASTURTIUM AMPHIBIUM, (nasus, and torques, 'to twist,' owing to the effect of its pungency,) see Sisymbrium—n. Aquatium, Cardamine pratensis, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Bursa pastoris, Thlaspi bursa—n. Hortense, Lepidium sativum—n. Indicum, Tropæolum majus—n. Officinale, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Palustre, see Sisymbrium—n. Peruvianum, Tropæolum majus—n. Pratense, Cardamine pratensis—n. Sativum, Lepidium sativum.

NASUM DILATANS, ('dilating the nose,') Pyramidalis nasi.

NA'SUS, Na'sum, Nose, ([Sax.] nære, ne're.) Rhin, Rhis, Organon olfactûs seu odoratûs seu olfacto'rium, Promonto'rium fa'ciei, Myxo'ter, Emuncto'rium cer'ebrî, Snout, (Sc.) Neis, Nes, (F.) Nez. The nose is a pyramidal eminence, situate above the anterior apertures of the nasal fossæ, which it covers; and, consequently, occupying the middle and upper part of the face, between the forehead and upper lip, the orbits and the cheeks. Its lateral surfaces form, by uniting angularly, a more or less prominent line, called Dorsum seu Rhod'chis seu Spi'na Na'si, (F.) Dos du nez. This line terminates, anteriorly, by the lobe,—Lobulus. The sides are called Alæ Na'si, Pinnæ Na'ris. (F.) Ailes du nez. The columna is the inferior part of the partition. Its apex or tip has been called Globulus nasi.

The chief varieties of the nose are the aq'uiline, the flat nose, (F.) Nez camarot ou épaté, and the snub nose, (F.) Nez retroussé. The nose is formed, besides its bones, of fibro-cartilage, cartilage, muscles, vessels, and nerves; and its use seems to be to direct odours to the upper part of the nasal fossæ.

NASUS INTERNUS, Nares.

NASUTUS, Naso.

NA'TA, Na'ta, Na'sa, Nas'da, Nas'ta, Na'sas, Nap'ta. A fleshy, indolent excrescence, having the shape of the nates.

NATARON, Natron.

NATA'TION, Nata'tio, (natare, natum, (itself from nare, 'to swim,') Swim'ming. The action of swimming, or of supporting one's self, or moving upon the water. Swimming resembles the horizontal leap in its physiology—the medium being water instead of air. The difference between the specific gravity of the human body and that of water is not great: so that but little exertion is required to keep a part of the body above water. Swimming is a healthy gymnastic exercise, combining the advantages of bathing.

NA'TES, sing. Na'tis, 'a buttock,' Ephre'ra'na, Podex, Clu'nes, Glut'oi, Glut'i, Glut'ia, Sedi'lia, Py'gæ, Mo'na, Bot'tom, Back'side, Poste'riors, But'tocks, (Prov.) Tout, (Sc.) Dowp, Dowp, Dolp, Drod'dum, Hur'dies, Len'dis, &c., (F.) Fesses. Two round projections, at the inferior and posterior part of the trunk, on which we sit, the seat, (F.) Siège. Amongst the mammalia, man alone has the nates prominent and round. They are formed chiefly by the skin, and a thick layer of areolar tissue, which covers the three glutæi muscles.

The cleft between the nates is the Ri'ma clu'num.

NATES CEREBRI, Quadrigenina corpora—n. et Testes, Quadrigenina corpora.

NATIS, see Nates.

NATRIUM, Sodium.

NATRIX, ('a water serpent,') Penis.

NATROCRENÆ, (natron, and κρηνη, 'a well,') Natropegæ.

NA'TRON, (νιτρον.) Na'trum, Na'taron, Ni'trum, Ana'tron, Aphron'i'trum, (from Natron, a lake in Judæa.) A saline compound, very abundant in Egypt, which is almost wholly formed of subcarbonate of soda.

NATRONIUM, Sodium.

NATROPE'GÆ, Natrocrenæ, (natron, and κρηνη, 'a spring,') Soda springs.

NATRUM, Natron—n. Arsenicicum, Arseniate of soda -- n. Biboracicum, Borax -- n. Chloratum liquidum, Liquor sodæ chlorinatæ—n. Muriacicum, Soda, muriate of—n. Muriatum, Soda, muriate of—n. Vitriolatum, Soda, Sulphate of—n. Nitricum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Oxymuriaticum, Soda, chloride of—n. Oxyphosphorodes, Soda, phosphate of—n. Subboracicum, Borax—n. Sulphuricum, Soda, sulphate of—n. Præparatum, Soda, subcarbonate of—n. Tartarizatum, Soda, tartrate of.

NATTA, Nata.

NATULÆ, (dim. of nates.) Quadrigemina tubercula.

NATU'RA, (nasci, natus, 'to be born or arise.') Phy'sis. Nature. Also, the genital organs.

NATURA MORBI. The essence or condition of a disease.

NATURAL PARTS, Genital organs.

NATURALIA, Genital organs.

NA'TURISM, Nat'uralism. A view which attributes every thing to nature, as a sage, prescient, and sanative entity. See Expectation, and Vis Medicatrix Naturæ.

NA'TURIST. A physician who scrupulously investigates, interprets, and follows the indications presented by nature in the treatment of disease.

NATUS MORTUUS, Still-born.

NAU'CLEA GAM'BIR, (navis, 'a ship,' and κλειω, 'to enclose,'—the half capsule being hull-shaped.) Unca'ria gam'biri. A plant of the Nat. Order, Rubiaceæ, native of the Malayan Peninsula and Indian Archipelago, which yields large quantities of the kind of Catechu known by the names Terra Japonica and Square Catechu, and which, in Indian commerce, is called Gambier or Gambir. It is a powerful astringent, much used in tanning, and in medicine. See Catechu.

NAUPATHIA, (navis, 'a ship,' and παθος, 'affection,') Nausea marina.

NAUSEA, (ναυσια.) Nausia, Nausi'asis, Nausio'sis, Nautia, Queas'iness, Squeas'iness, (F.) Nausée, Envie de vomir; (from navis, (L.) navis, 'a ship,' because those unaccustomed to sailing are so affected.) Sickness. Inclination to vomit.

NAUSEA, KREAT'IC, (κρεας, gen. κρεατος, 'flesh,') The sickness and vomiting, excited, in some nervous patients, by the smallest portion of animal food.

NAUSEA MARI'NA, Mor'bus nauticus, Vomitus navigan'tium seu marin'us, Nanpathi'a, Seasick'ness, (F.) Mal de mer. The sickness, vomiting, &c., experienced at sea by those unaccustomed to a seafife; and from which those who are accustomed are not always exempt. It generally ceases when the person becomes habituated to the motion of the vessel, and not till then.

NAUSEABOND, Nauseant.

NAUSEABUNDUS, (from nausea.) Nauseant.

NAU'SEANT, Nau'seans, Nauseubun'dus, (F.) Nauseabond, Nauseéant. An agent that excites nausea, which is a state of diminished action. Nauseants are, hence, valuable remedies in diseases of excitement.

NAUSÉE, Nausea.

NAUSIA, (ναυσια.) Nausea.

NAUSIASIS, Nausea.

NAUSIO'SIS, (nausia and osis.) This word, besides being synonymous with nausea, has been used to express the state of venous hemorrhage, when blood is discharged by jets.

NAUTIA, (ναυτια.) Nausea.

NAVEL, ([Sax.] napela.) Umbilicus—n. String, Funiculus umbilicalis—n. Wort, Cotyledon umbilicus—n. Wort, Venus's, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NAVET, (from napus, 'the turnip,') Brassica rapa—n. du Diable, Bryonia alba—n. Galant, Bryonia alba.

NAVETTE, Brassica rapa.

NAVIC'ULAR, Navicula'ris, Naviform'is, (F.) Naviculaire, (from navicula, 'a little ship,')

NAVICULAR FOS'SA, Fos'sa Navicula'ris seu Scaphoid'es, Navic'ula, Scaph'ula. See Scaphoid. This name has been given, 1. To a small depression between the entrance of the vagina and the posterior commissure of the labia major or fourchette. 2. To a perceptible dilatation, presented by the urethra in man, near the base of the glans. 3. To the superficial depression which separates the two roots of the helix. This is also called Scaph'a.

NAVICULARE OS, Scaphoides os.

NAVIFORMIS, (navis, 'a ship,' and forma, 'form,') Navicular.

NAVIS, ('a ship,') Vulva.

NEARSIGHTEDNESS, Myopia.

NEARTHRO'SIS, (νεος, 'young or new,' and αρθρον, 'a joint,') A new joint.

NEBLE, Nipple.

NEB'ULA, (from νεβηλη, 'a cloud,') Nu'bes, Nubec'ula, Ne'phos, Neph'elē, Nephe'lion, Vit'ens nebulo'sus, (F.) Nage, Ombfrage. A slight speck on the cornea. A mist or cloud suspended in the urine. See Caligo.

NEBULOUS, Nepheloid.

NECESSARY, Necessari'us, (ne, and cessare, 'to cease,') The Necessaries of Life, Vit'æ necessito'ies, (F.) Besoins de la vie, include every thing requisite for the maintenance of life, and particularly food.

NECK, ([Sax.] hnecca, necca.) Collum—n. Derbyshire, Bronchocele.

NECK OF THE FOOT, Instep.

NECK, STIFF, Torticollis—n. Swelled, Bronchocele—n. Wry, Torticollis.

NECK'LACE, AN'ODYNE, (F.) Collier anodin.

These are formed of the roots of hyoscyamus, Job's tears, allspice steeped in brandy, or the seeds of the wild liquorice vine, to suit the fancy of the prescriber. They are employed to facilitate dentition in children, and to procure sleep in fever!

NECKWEED, Veronica beccabunga, V. peregrina.

NECRÆ'MIA, (neero, and αίμα, 'blood,') Death of the blood. Death beginning with the blood.

NECRENCEPHALUS, (neeros, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon,') Mollities cerebri.

NECROBIOSIS, see Degeneration.

NECROBIOT'IC, Necrobioti'cus, (neeros, and βιος, 'life,') Relating or appertaining to necrobiosis or morbid metamorphosis.

NECROCEDIA, (neeros, and κηδēs, 'funereal attentions,') Embalming.

NECROCOMIUM, (neeros, and κομew, 'to care for,') Morgue.

NECRODES, (νεκρωδης, from neeros, and odes.) Cadaverous.

NECRODOCHIUM, (νεκροδοχιον, from neeros, and δοχηαι, 'to receive,') Morgue.

NECROLOGY, BILLS OF, (neeros, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Mortality, bills of.

NEC'ROMANCY, Necromanti'a, Necyomanti'a, (νεκρομαντεια, from neeros, and μαντεια, 'divination,') Divination by the dead. Conjunction; the black art. Nigromanti'o, Negromanti'a, (niger, 'black,' and μαντεια, 'divination,')

NECROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NECRONARCEMA, (neeros, and ναρκεμα, 'stiffness,') Rigor mortis.

NECROPHOB'IA, (neeros, and φοβος, 'fear,') Exaggerated fear of death. This symptom occurs in patients where the disease is not mortal; as in hypochondriasis. In fevers, it is not a good symptom.

NECROPNEUMO'NIA, Pneumo'nia gangrenosa seu typho'sa, Gangr'ena seu Mortificatio seu An'thrax seu Cirrhim'entus Pulmo'nium, Pneumosep'sis, Pneumoc'acē, (F.) Gangrène du Pouton,

Pneumonæronia of Piorry; (necros, and pneumonia.) Gangrenous inflammation of the lungs. This may be diffused or circumscribed. The only pathognomonic symptom is the extraordinary and repulsive odour of the breath and expectoration. The treatment consists in the use of the chlorides internally, or of chlorine by inhalation; allaying irritation by opium, and supporting the patient by winewhey and nourishing diet.

NECROPSIA, (necros, and opsis, 'seeing,') Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROPSY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROS, (νεκρός,) Cadaver.

NECROSCOPIA, (νεκρος, and σκοπεω, 'to examine,') Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOP'IC, Necroscop'icus, (F.) Necroscopique, (necros, and σκοπεω, 'I view,') Relating to necroscopy or examination after death.

NECROSCOPY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSED, see Necrosis.

NECROSEMEIOT'ICÉ, (necros, and σημειον, 'a sign,') The doctrine of the signs of death.

NECRO'SIAL, Necrosial'is, Necrot'ic, Necrot'icus. Relating or appertaining to death or mortification, or to necrosis,—as 'necrosial fever;' the fever that accompanies necrosis.

NECRO'SIS, (F.) Nécrose, (νεκρωσις, from νεκρωω, 'I kill,') Death, mortification. Especially, the state of a bone or of a portion of a bone deprived of life. Osteogangræ'na, Osteonecros'is. The bone, in such case, is said to be necrosed. Necrosis may take place without the surrounding soft parts being struck with gangrene. It is to the bones what gangrene is to the soft parts. The part of the bone affected with necrosis becomes a foreign body, similar to the gangrenous eschar, and its separation must be accomplished by the efforts of nature, or by art. When necrosis occurs in the centre of long bones, it never extends to their articular extremities. The exterior layers of bone form a canal round the dead portion or sequestrum; between these swollen layers and the sequestrum suppuration takes place; the matter presses against the bony canal; perforates it, and is discharged by apertures, which become fistulous.

In the treatment, the exit of the sequestrum must be facilitated by proper incisions, by the application of the trephine to the bone, &c.

NECROSIS CEREALIS, Ergotism—n. Dentium, Dental gangrene—n. Ustilaginea, Ergotism.

NECROSTOA, (necros, and στοα, 'a gallery,') Morgue.

NECROTIC, Necrosial.

NECROTICION, (νεκροτικιον, from necros, and τοκος, 'a child,') A dead or stillborn child.

NECROTOMY, (necros, and τομη, 'section,') Dissection.

NECTAN'DRA CINNAMOMOI'DES, Laurus cinnamomoi'des, Cinnamo'mum sylv'es'trè America'nium: Order, Lauracæ; native of New Grenada, where it is called Canela; has the odour and taste of cinnamon, and is used as such.

NECTANDRA CYMBARUM, Ocote'a cymba'rum seu amara, grows in Oronoko, where it is called Sass'afra's. The bark is aromatic, bitter, and stomachic; and Von Martius thinks it is an ingredient in the curare poison.

NECTANDRA PUCHURY, see Pichurim beans—n. Rodiei, see Bebeery.

NEC'TAR, (νεκταρ, from νη, a particle of negation, and κταω, 'I kill,') A pleasant liquor, feigned by the poets to have been the drink of the gods, and to have rendered immortal those who partook of it. A name given, by the ancients, to many drinks; and particularly to one made with wine, evaporated and sweetened with honey.

NECTARIUM, Inula helenium.

NECUSIA, (νεκω, 'to kill,') see Wound.

NECYOMANTIA, (νεκωσ, 'a dead body,' and μαντια, 'divination,') Necromancy.

NEDYIA, (νηδυια,) Intestines.

NEDYS, (νηδυσ,) The belly, abdomen, stomach, uterus.

NEE'DLE, (Sax. nēdl, nædl, from Teut. n, e t e n, 'to sew,') A'cus, Bel'onè, Ra'phis, Ra'phion, Rha'phis, Rha'phion, Acce'tra, (F.) Aiguille. A steel instrument, used in many professions. In Surgery, a steel, gold, silver, or platinum instrument, that may be round, flat, or triangular, straight, or curved, supported or not by a handle, but having almost always a point, by means of which it can penetrate the textures; and either near the point, or more commonly, near the other extremity, an aperture or eye for the reception of a thread or tape, which it introduces into the parts. The Aiguille à appareil of the French is the ordinary sewing needle used in the making of bandages, &c.

NEEDLE, A'cupuncture, (F.) Aiguille à Acupuncture. An inflexible gold or silver needle; conical, very delicate, four inches long, furnished with a handle, and, at times, with a canula shorter than it by about half an inch. An ordinary needle, waxed at the head, will answer as a substitute for this. See Acupuncture.

NEEDLE, Cat'aract, A'cus ophthal'mica, (F.) Aiguille à cataracte. Needles of gold, silver, and steel have been used; the latter, alone, at the present lay. The cataract needle is employed to depress or tear the crystalline when opaque. This needle is usually made from 15 to 24 lines long; and is attached to a fine handle. The extremity may be, as in Scarpa's and Langenbeck's, pointed, prismatic, triangular and curved; in Dupuytren's and Walther's, flat, curved, and sharp-edged; in Hey's, flat, with a semicircular and sharp end; or, as in Beer's, Siebold's, Schmidt's, Himly's, Von Gräfe's, &c., straight and spearpointed. A mark is generally placed upon the handle to inform the operator,—when the instrument is engaged in the eye,—what side corresponds to the crystalline.

NEEDLE FOR A COUNT'ROPENING, A'cus invagin'ata, (F.) Aiguille à Contre-ouverture ou engagée ou à gaine,—a long, narrow instrument of steel; the point of which is fine and sharp on both sides;—the heel (talon) having an aperture to receive a thread, tape, &c., provided with a flat, silver sheath, shorter than the blade, the point of which it covers when passing through parts that have to be respected.

NEEDLE, DESCHAMPS, Paupè's needle, (F.) Aiguille de Deschamps, A. à manche, &c., is the last described needle fixed to a handle. The eye is placed near the point. It is employed in the ligature of deep-seated arteries.

NEEDLE, FIS'TULA, (F.) Aiguille à Fistule. A long, flat, flexible, silver instrument; having an aperture near one extremity; blunt at the other. This was formerly used for passing a seton into fistulous ulcers. On one of its sides was a groove for guiding a bistouri in case of necessity.

Also, a long, steel instrument, terminated by a point like that of a trocar, which Desault employed for penetrating the rectum, when operating for fistula that had no internal aperture.

NEEDLE, HARELIP, (F.) Aiguille à Bec de Lièvre. A small, silver canula, to which is attached a spearpoint, that can be readily withdrawn. This needle, armed with the point, is introduced at one side of the fissure in the lip, and through the other. The twisted suture is then applied, and the pin withdrawn.

NEEDLE, LIG'ATURE, (F.) Aiguille à ligature. A long, steel instrument, sharp towards one extremity, with an eye near the other, which was formerly used for suspending the circulation of blood prior to amputation, by being passed through the limb, so as to include the principal artery and a part of the muscles and integuments.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, round towards one of its extremities, which was straight, and furnished with an aperture; curved and flat towards the opposite, which was pointed, and had a slight ridge on its concave side. At the commencement of the last century, this instrument was used to pass ligatures around vessels.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, flat, regularly curved in the form of a semicircle, with a sharp or lance point, and a long eye, used with advantage in place of the last.

NEEDLE, PAUPÉ'S, Needle, Deschamps'.

NEEDLE, SE'TON, (F.) Aiguille à Sétou. A long, narrow, steel blade; pointed and sharp at one extremity; pierced at the other by an aperture. The Aiguille à contre-ouverture may be used for the same purpose.

NEEDLE, SU'TURE, (F.) Aiguille à Suture. For the twisted suture, the hare-lip needle is used; for the others, the straight or curved needle: the straight needle is preferable for stitching up the abdomen, &c., in dissection. In the suture of the tendons, a curved needle has been used; flat on both sides, and cutting only at the concave edge, in order that the instrument may pass between the tendinous fibres without dividing them.

NEEDLEBEARER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEDLECARRIER, Porte-aiguille.

NEM, see Melia azedarach.

NEESING, Sneezing.

NÉFLE, Mespilus (the fruit).

NÉFLIER, Mespilus.

NEFREN'DES, properly, 'sucking pigs.' No'doi, Eden'tuli. Persons devoid of teeth. Young children, for instance, who have not cut them; or aged persons, who have lost them. This state is called Nefren'dis, Odon'tia eden'tula.

NEGOTIUM PARTURITIONIS, ('affair of parturition,') Parturition.

NÈGRE, Negro—n. Blanc ('white negro,') Albino.

NEGRETIA PRURIENS, Dolichos pruriens.

NE'GRO, (S. and P. negro, from (L.) niger, 'black,') N'grita, (F.) Nègre. One of the Æthiopian race. See Homo and Mulatto.

NEGRO, PIEN, see Achroma.

NEGROMANTIA, (nijer, 'black,' and μαντεια, 'divination,') see Necromancy.

NELERA, (νειρα,) Abdomen.

NEIGE, Snow.

NEIR, (Sc. niere,) Kidney.

NEIRA, (νειρα,) Abdomen.

NEIS, Nasus.

NELUMBIUM LU'TEUM, Yel'low ne'lumbo, Yel'low wa'ter lily, Pond lily, Water shield, Water nuts, Water chin'capin, Rat'tile nut, Sa'ered bean. A beautiful water plant, common in the United States, and belonging to Nat. Ord. Nymphaeaceæ; Scr. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The leaves are cooling and emollient when applied to the surface. The roots, leaves, and nuts are eaten. The last are called by the Indians and others water chin'capin.

NELUMBO, YELLOW, Nelumbium luteum.

NENDO, Angelica lucida.

NENN'DORF, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Nenndorf is a village three and a half German miles from Hanover. Its cold sulphureous spring is much celebrated.

NENUPHAR, Nymphaea alba—n. Blanc, Nymphaea alba—n. Jaune, Nymphaea lutea—n. Lutea, Nymphaea lutea—n. Odon'rant, Nymphaea odorata.

NEO, (from νεος, 'new,') in composition, new.

NEO'ARTHO'SIS, (neo, and αρθρον, 'a joint,') A new joint; an artificial joint.

NEOG'ALA, (neo, and γαλα, 'milk,') Milk secreted immediately after the colostrum. Also, the colostrum.

NEOGENES, (νεογενης, from neo, and γενω, 'to be born,') Nouveau-né.

NEOGILUS, (νεογιλος,) Nouveau-né.

NEOGNUS, (νεογνος,) Nouveau-né.

NEOGONUS, (νεογονος,) Nouveau-né.

NEOMEMBRANE, see Membrane, false.

NEONATUS, (neo, and νατος, 'born,') Nouveau-né.

NE'OPLASM, Neoplasm'a, gen. Neoplasm'atis, (F.) Néoplasme, (neo, and πλασσω, πλαττω, 'I form,') A new formation or tissue; the product of morbid action.

NE'OPLASTY, Neoplas'ticē. An operative process for the formation of new parts. It includes autoplasty, cicatrization of wounds, and the formation of adhesions.

NEOSCYTECHIUS, (neo, σκυτος, 'leather,' and ηχος, 'a sound,') see Craquement de Cuir neuf.

NEOTOCITERUS, (neo, τοκος, 'one born,' and ιτερνς,) Icterus infantum.

NEOTIA, (νεοτια, 'a nest,'—from the arrangement of the roots,) Goodyera pubescens.

NEP, Nepeta.

NEPEN'THA DESTILLATO'RIA, Bandu'ra. A Ceylonese plant, the root of which is astringent.

NEPEN'THIES, (νεπειθης, from νη, 'neg,' and πειθος, 'grief,') A remedy much extolled by the ancients against sadness and melancholy.

The women of Thebes, according to Diodorus Siciliotes, alone possessed the secret of its composition; and, according to Homer, Helen introduced it from Egypt. Some suppose it to have been opium.

NEPENTHES, Banguē—n. Opiatum, Pilulæ opiatæ.

NEP'ETA, (from Nepete, a town in Italy [?]), N. Cata'ria seu vulga'ris, Cata'ria vulga'ris, Her'ba je'lis, Nep, Cat'uep, Cat'nip, Cat'mint, (F.) Herbe aux Chats, Cataire. Ord. Labiate. The leaves, Cata'ria, (Ph. U. S.), have a smell and taste like those of an admixture of spearmint and pennyroyal. It has been recommended in uterine disorders, dyspepsia, flatulency, &c., like pennyroyal; and is much used on the American continent in domestic medicine, in flatulencies, &c., of children.

NEPETA AGRESTIS, Melissa nepeta—n. Glechoma, Glechoma hederacea—n. Vulgaris, Nepeta.

NEPHALIOTES, (νεφალიστης, from νηφα, 'I abstain,') Temperance.

NEPHELE, (νεφελη, 'a cloud,') Enœorema, Nebula.

NEPHELION, (νεφελιον, 'a little cloud,') Nebula.

NEPHELOID, Nepheloi'des, Nephelo'des, Neb'ulous, Nubilo'sus, (νεφελειωδης, from νεφελη, 'a cloud,' and ειδος, 'resemblance,') An epithet applied to urine when it is cloudy—Uri'na nephelo'des.

NEPHIOS, (νεφος, 'a cloud,') Nebula.

NEPHREPORRHAGIA, (nephrus, and hæmorrhagia,) see Hæmaturia.

NEPHRAL'GIA, Do'tor Nephret'icus, Neural'gia Re'num, (F.) Néuralgie des Reins, Dynérophren'nerie, (nephrus, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain and neuralgia in the kidney.

NEPHRALGIA ARENOSA, see Gravel—n. Calculosa. see Gravel—n. Rheumatica, Lumbago.

NEPHRANURIA, (nephrus, a, priv. and ουρον, 'urine,') Icturia renalis.

NEPHRAPOS'TASIS, Nephrorh'o'sis, Abcess'us ren'al'is, (nephrus, and αποσπασις, 'abscess,') Renal abscess.

NEPHRATON'IA, (nephrus, and ατονια, 'want of tone,') Re'num aton'ia seu paral'ysis. Atony of the kidney.

NEPHRAUX'È, (nephrus, and αυξω, 'to increase,') Enlargement of the kidney.

NEPHRELCOSIS. Nephropyl'sis, Helco'sis renalis, (nephrus, and ἑλκωσις, 'ulceration,') Ulceration of the kidney.

NEPHRELMINTIC. Nephrelminticus, (nephrus, and ἔμυς, gen. ἐμυθός, 'a worm,') That which is owing to the presence of worms in the kidney.

NEPHREMPHRAX'IS, (nephrus, and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct,') A name given by Plouquet to obstruction of the kidneys.

NEPHRETIC, Nephrid'ius, Nephrit'ic, Nephrit'icus, (from nephrus.) That which relates to the kidney. Applied, especially, to pain, &c., seated in the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM, in Materia Medica, means a medicine employed for the cure of diseases of the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRITICUS LAPIS, Tal'cum nephrit'icum, (F.) Pierre néphrétique, Jade néphrite ou orientale. A green, fatty kind of stone, — once used as an amulet against calculus and epilepsy, — an absurd name, as there can be no such remedy.

NEPHRIA, (νεφρος, 'kidney,') Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRID'ION, Pingue'do renalis, (νεφριδιος, 'pertaining to the kidney,') The fat which surrounds the kidney.

NEPHRIDIDIUM, Capsule, renal.

NEPHRIDIUS, (νεφριδιος,) Nephretic.

NEPHRINE, (from nephrus,) Oxyd, cystic, Urea.

NEPHRITE, Nephritis—n. Albumineuse, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRITES, (from nephrus,) Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIC, Nephretic.

NEPHRITICI (morbi), in the classification of Dr. Wm. Farr, renal diseases.

NEPHRITICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRITIS, (from nephrus,) Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIS, Empres'ma Nephrit'is, (nephrus, and itis,) Renum inflammatio, Nephrophleg'moué, — Inflammation of the Kidney, (F.) Néphrite, Inflammation des Reins, is characterized by acute pain; burning heat, and a sensation of weight in the region of one or both kidneys; suppression or diminution of urine; fever; dysuria; ischuria; constipation, more or less obstinate; retraction of the testicle, and numbness of the thigh of the same side. It may be distinguished into simple, and calculus nephritis—Lithonephrit'is. In the latter, the urine often contains small particles of uric acid or of urate of ammonia. The most common causes of nephritis are,—excess in irritating and alcoholic drinks; abuse of diuretics; blows or falls on the region of the kidneys; the presence of renal calculi, &c. It may be distinguished from lumbago by the pain which attends the latter on the slightest motion, &c. It usually terminates by resolution in from one week to two or three. It may, however, end in suppuration—pyonephrite;—or may become chronic—chrononephrite. In the treatment, antiphlogistics, as bleeding, baths, &c., are required to the full extent; with the use of diluents, opiates, &c.

NEPHRITIS ALBUMINENSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Albuminosa, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Cachectic, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Calculous, see Nephritis.

NEPHRITIS DES'QUAMATIVE. A condition of Bright's disease, in which epithelial cells are seen by the microscope in the urine.

NEPHRITIS SOCIATA, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCHALAZOSIS, (nephrus, and χάλαζα, 'hail,' 'granulation,') Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCOCOSIS, (nephrus, and κοκος, 'a grain or berry,') Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCOLICA, Colica nephretica.

NEPHROCYSTOS'IS, (nephrus, and κυστις, 'a cyst or bladder,') and osis.) A morbid condition, which consists in the formation of cysts in the bladder.

NEPHRODES, (νεφρωδης,) Nephroid.

NEPHRODIUM FILIX MAS, (from nephrus,) Polypodium filix mas.

NEPHROGRAPHY, (nephrus, and γραφη, 'a description,') An anatomical description of the kidney.

NEPHROHÆMIA, (nephrus, and ἅμα, 'blood,') Hyperæmia or congestion of the kidney.

NEPHROID, Nephroi'des, Nephroi'des, Reniform'is, (nephrus, and ειδος, 'form, resemblance,') Reniform. Having a resemblance to a kidney—as 'a nephroid cancer,' so called because the morbid growth resembles the kidney in structure.

NEPHROLITHIASIS, (nephrus, and λιθος, 'a stone,') The disease of calculus in the kidney; Lith'ia renalis, Lith'iasis nephrit'ica, L. Renalis. See Gravel.

NEPHROLITH'IC. Belonging to calculi in the kidneys. This epithet has been applied to ischuria, occasioned by calculi formed in the kidneys.

NEPHROLITHOTOMY, Nephrotomy.

NEPHROL'OGY, Nephrolog'ia, (nephrus, and λογος, 'a treatise,') A treatise on the kidneys. Dissertation on the kidneys and their functions.

NEPHROMALAC'IA, (nephrus, and μαλακία, 'softness,') Softening of the kidney.

NEPHRON'CUS, Tumor renalis, (nephrus, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') A tumefaction of the kidney.

NEPHROPARALYSIS, Nephropar'esis, Nephrophle'gia, Paral'ysis renum seu renalis. Paralysis of the kidneys.

NEPHROPARESIS, (nephrus, and παρεσις, 'loss of tone,') Nephroparalysis.

NEPHROPHLEGMAT'IC, Nephrophlegmat'icus, (nephrus, and φλεγμα, gen. φλεγματος, 'phlegm,') A name given, by some authors, to ischuria produced by mucus contained in the urine.

NEPHROPHLEGMONE, (nephrus, and φλεγμονη, 'inflammation,') Nephritis.

NEPHROPTH'ISIS, (nephrus, and φθισις, 'consumption,') Phthisis from suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPLE'GIA, (nephrus, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Nephroparalysis.

NEPHROPLETHOR'IC, Nephropletho'ricus, (nephrus, and πληθωρα, 'plethora,') Belonging to plethora of the kidneys. An epithet given to ischuria dependent upon this cause.

NEPHROPY'IC, Nephropy'icus, (nephrus, and πυον, 'pus,') Belonging to suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPYOSIS, Nephropostasis, Nephrelcosis.

NEPHRORRHAG'IA, Hæmat'uria renalis, Hæmorrhag'ia renum, (nephrus, and ραγη, 'rupture,') Profus'ivum sanguinis e renibus. Hemorrhage from the kidney.

NEPHROS, (νεφρος,) Kidney.

NEPHROSCLE'RIA, (nephrus, and σκληρία, 'hardness,') Induratio renum. Induration of the kidneys.

NEPHROSPAS'TIC, Nephrospas'ticus, (nephrus, and σπασω, 'I draw,') That which depends upon spasm of the kidney. An epithet given to a variety of ischuria.

NEPHROTHROM'OID, Nephrothromboi'des, (nephrus, and θρομβος, 'a clot,') That which depends upon clots of blood, contained in the kidneys or their ducts. An epithet for a species of ischuria.

NEPHROT'OMY, Nephrolithotomy, Nephrotom'ia, Nephrolithotom'ia, Sec'tio renalis, S. re- nis, (nephrus, and νεφειν, 'to cut.') Dissection of the kidney. Also, an operation proposed with the view of extracting calculi formed in the kidney, by means of an incision into the tissue of that organ.

NEPIRUS, (νεπρος.) Kidney.

NEPIOS, (νηπιος.) Infans.

NEPIOTES, (νηπιότης.) Infancy.

NEPTA, Asphalturn.

NÉRION, Nerium oleander.

NÉRIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nérís is on the high road from Moulins to Limoges, eighty leagues from Paris. There are four springs, the water of which is clear, inodorous, tasteless, and has an unctuous feel. It contains carbonic acid gas, carbonate of soda, and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, silicic acid, and an animal matter to which its 'oleaginous' property is probably owing. The waters are generally used in the form of thermal baths. Season, from the 20th of May to the 15th of October.

NERIUM, (νηπιος, 'humid,' because growing in moist places.) N. oleander.

NERIUM ANTIDYSENTERICUM, Wrightia antidysenterica. The tree which affords the Codagupala Bark, Comes'ci cortex, Tillicherry cortex, Cortex profluvii. Family, Apocynæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. (F.) Codagupala, Cropala. The bark of this Malabar tree is of a black colour, externally, and is generally covered with a white moss or scurf. It has an austere, bitter taste, and has been recommended as an astringent in diarrhoea, dysentery, &c.

NERIUM ODO'RUM, Kianaree, of India, is a well known poison, and extensively used as such.

NERIUM OLEAN'DER, Nerium, Rhododaphnis, Rosugo, (F.) Laurier rose, Lawrose, Nérion Rose, Rhododaphné. The leaves are reputed to be narcotic. The infusion is employed internally, in herpetic affections, and the powder, incorporated with lard, is used in the itch.

NEROLI, see Citrus aurantium.

NERONIA'NA seu NERO'NICA PHLEBOTOM'IA. An epithet given, for some cause, to phlebotomy, when more than one vein was opened on the same day, or to bleeding coup sur coup. Termed Neroniana, because the philosopher Seneca was led to death under Nero [?].

NERPRUN PURGATIF, (or Noirprun, 'prunus nigra,') Rhamnus.

NERVE, (νευρον, 'a string,') Nervus, Neuron, (F.) Nerf. (Neuron and Nervus meant also, with the ancients, a tendon and a ligament, Partes nervosæ; and hence the different acceptations of 'nervous'—'a man of nerve—a strong, nervous man; and a weak, nervous woman.') The nerves are tubular cords of the same substance as that which composes the encephalon and spinal marrow. They extend from one or other of the nervous centres to every part of the body, communicating, frequently, with each other; forming plexuses, and, occasionally, ganglions; and being, at length, lost in the parenchyma of organs. There are 42 pairs, and, according to their origin, they are termed Cranial or Encephalic, and Spinal. Each nerve is composed of several filaments or cords placed alongside each other, and is surrounded by a neurilemma. The encephalic nerves, in general, have only one root in the brain, whilst the spinal arise from the marrow by two roots: the one from an anterior fasciculus of filaments, the other from a posterior, separated from each other by the Ligamentum denticulatum; uniting outside this ligament, and presenting, near the intervertebral foramen, a ganglion formed only by the posterior root. The two roots make, afterwards, but one nerve; and, like the encephalic nerves, proceed to their destination, subdividing into rami and ramusculi, until they are finally lost in the texture of the organs. The trunks first formed are commonly round, and proceed alone, or accompany the great vessels, being placed in the areolar spaces which separate the organs, and are thus protected from injury. Their manner of termination we are not acquainted with; whether the nervous pulp, for instance, as is more probably the fact, is distributed or lost in a membrane, as seems to be the case with the nerves of sight, hearing, and smell,—or is looped;—see Corpuscles, Pacinian, and Corpuscula tactilis. Certain it is, that there is considerable difference in the organs, as respects the quantity of nerves that terminate in them; and the particular arrangement of the nervous extremities. Some organs have numerous nerves; others seem to have none: a circumstance which influences considerably the sensibility of parts. Observation has shown, that certain motor fibres cross the median line and affect muscles on the side opposite to that from which they originate; but the influence is very limited. See Entrecroissement.

The Encephalic nerves arise from the encephalon, or are inserted into it, (according as we consider the brain the origin or termination of the nerves;) and make their exit by foramina at the base of the skull. They are 12 in number. The spinal nerves are 31 in number, 8 cervical, 12 dorsal, 5 lumbar, and 6 sacral: the four inferior cervical being much larger than the superior, because they furnish the nerves of the upper extremities.

The brachial internal cutaneous, to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the ulnar margin. 5. The brachial external cutaneous, principally to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the radial margin. 6. The median nerve, to the Cervical Plexus..... 5th, 6th, and 7th Cervical Pairs..... Brachial Plexus..... |

Brachial Plexus..... { forearm, hand, and palmar surface of all the fingers. 7. The cubital nerve, to the last two fingers. 8. The radial, to the first three. 9. The axillary, around the shoulderjoint, and to the neighbouring muscles.

2. Dorsal Nerves, (Nervi dorsales.)

1st Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the brachial plexus.

2d and 3d Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. An intercostal and brachial branch.

4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the intercostals, triangularis sterni, pectoralis major, and to the skin. External branches to the integuments of the chest, the obliquus externus abdominis, and the skin of the abdomen.

8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th Dorsal Pairs... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the transversals, obliquus internus, and rectus muscles, and to the skin of the abdomen. External branches, to the integuments of the chest, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen.

12th Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the first lumbar nerve, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen as far as the iliac crest.

The Posterior Branches of the dorsal nerves are distributed to the muscles and integuments of the back and loins.

3. Lumbar Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Lumbar Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Concurring to form the lumbar plexus.

6th Pair..... { Anterior Branch. Aiding in forming the sciatic plexus.

The Posterior Branches of the lumbar nerves are distributed to the loins, sacrum, and nates.

Lumbar Plexus..... { 1. Musculocutaneous Branches, to the number of three. One superior, to the muscles of the abdomen, to the fold of the groin, and the scrotum: a middle, to the integuments and muscles of the abdomen: and an inferior, to the skin of the thigh. 2. A genitocrural branch to the integuments of the scrotum, the groin, and the thigh. 3. The crural nerve, to the integuments and muscles of the thigh, skin of the leg, and foot. 4. The obturator nerve, to the muscles at the inner part of the thigh. 5. The lumbosacral, to the sciatic plexus. It gives off the gluteal nerve to the glutei muscles.

4. Sacral Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Sacral Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. They form by their union the sciatic plexus.

5th and 6th Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. To the parts in the vicinity of the coccyx.

The Posterior Branches ramify on the muscles and integuments of the nates.

Sciatic Plexus..... { 1. Hemorrhoidal nerves, to the rectum. 2. Vesical, to the bladder. 3. Uterine and vaginal, to the vagina and uterus. 4. Inferior gluteal, to the gluteal muscles, perinaeum, and integuments of the posterior part of the thigh. 5. Pudic, to the perinaeum, penis, or vulva. 6. Sciatic, divided into the external popliteal, which ramifies on the integuments and muscles of the leg, on the dorsum of the foot, and the dorsal surface of the toes; and into the internal popliteal, distributed on the dorsal surface of the two last toes, to the muscles of the foot, and on the plantar surface of all the toes.

Classifications of the nerves have been recommended according to their uses, in preference to the ordinary anatomical arrangement. It has been remarked that the encephalic nerves have generally one root: the spinal two. Experiments and pathological facts have proved that the anterior column of the marrow—funiculus anterior—and the anterior roots of the spinal nerves are inservient to volition or voluntary motion: and that the posterior column—funiculus posterior—and roots are destined for sensibility. Hence the spinal nerves, which have two roots, must be the conductors both of motion and feeling; whilst the encephalic, which, with but few exceptions, have but one, can possess but one of these properties:—they must be either sensitive or motor, according as they arise from the posterior or anterior column of the medulla; and, consequently, three classes of nerves may be distinguished.

- 1. Sensory..... { Arising, by a single root, from the posterior column of the medulla oblongata or spinal marrow.
- 2. Motor..... { Arising, by a single root, from the anterior column of the same parts.
- 3. Sensory and Motor..... { Which have two roots: one from the anterior, and one from the posterior column.

The tubules of all the afferent or sensory nerves cross to the opposite side of the spinal marrow, and an impression received by them is conveyed along the vesicular matter to the sensory ganglia of the encephalon; whilst the efferent or motor fibres cross only at the anterior pyramids of the medulla oblongata.

According to Sir Charles Bell, the medulla oblongata is composed of three columns on each side.—an anterior, a middle, and a posterior. Whilst the anterior and posterior columns produce the nerves of motion and sensation respectively, the middle, according to Sir Charles, gives rise to a third set of nerves—the respiratory. To this order belong:—

- 1. The accessory nerve of Willis, or superior respiratory.
- 2. The par vagum.
- 3. The glossopharyngeal.
- 4. The facial or respiratory of the face.
- 5. The phrenic.
- 6. A nerve which has the same origin as the phrenic;—the external respiratory.

When a horse has been hardridden, every one of these nerves is in action.

This division is now, however, generally abandoned, and there does not seem to be a third column, especially destined for the movements of respiration.

Sir C. Bell, again, reduced the system of nerves to two great classes. 1. Those that are regular, primitive, symmetrical, and common to all animals, from the worm to man, which have double roots, and preside over sensibility and motion; and, 2. The irregular or superadded, which are added to the preceding, in proportion as the organization of animals offers new or more complicated organs. To the first class belong all the spinal nerves and at least one encephalic—the 5th pair;—to the second, the rest of the nervous system.

Dr. Marshall Hall proposed a division of the nervous system, which is calculated to explain many of the anomalous circumstances so frequently witnessed. He proposed to divide all the nerves into, 1. The cerebral or the sentient and voluntary. 2. The true spinal or excitomotory. 3. The ganglionic or cycloganglionic, the nutrient and secretory. If the sentient and voluntary functions be destroyed by a blow upon the head, the sphincter muscles will still contract when irritated, because the irritation is conveyed to the spine, and the reflex action takes place to the muscle so as to throw it into contraction. But if the spinal marrow be now destroyed, the sphincters remain entirely motionless, because the centre of the system is destroyed. Dr. Hall maintained that a peculiar set of nerves constitutes, with the vesicular centre of the marrow as their axis, the second subdivision of the nervous system; and as those of the first subdivision are distinguished into sentient and voluntary, these may be distinguished into the excitor and motor. The first, or the excitor nerves, pursue their course principally from internal surfaces, characterized by peculiar excitabilities, to the centre of the medulla oblongata and m. spinalis; the second or the motor nerves pursue a reflex course from the medulla to the muscles, having peculiar actions concerned principally in ingestion and egestion. The motions connected with the first or cerebral subdivision are sometimes, indeed frequently, spontaneous; those connected with the true spinal are, he believes, always excited. He thought, too, that there is good reason for viewing the fifth and posterior spinal nerves as constituting an external ganglionic system for the nutrition of the external organs; and he proposed to divide the ganglionic subdivision of the nervous system into, 1. The internal ganglionic, which includes that usually denominated the sympathetic, and probably filaments of the pneumogastric; and, 2. The external ganglionic, embracing the fifth and posterior spinal nerves. To the cerebral system he assigned all diseases of sensation, perception, judgment, and volition—therefore all painful, mental, and comatose, and some paralytic diseases. To the true spinal, excitomotory, reflex, or diastolic nervous system, he referred all spasmodic and certain paralytic diseases. He properly added that these two parts of the nervous system influence each other both in health and disease, as they both influence the ganglionic system.

The main views of Dr. Hall on the excitomotory or reflex system have been generally embraced. Much, however, has still to be accomplished, notwithstanding the activity of modern observers, before the precise functions of the different nervous centres can be regarded as definitely determined.

The nerves are sheathed and are united to the neighbouring parts, by an abundant layer of fatty areolar texture, which sends inwards prolongations that separate the nervous cords and filaments from each other. The arterial trunks distributed to them transmit branches into their interior. The veins follow the same course as the arteries. Absorbents are not easily traced even on the greatest trunks.

NERVE FIBRES, Fibra nervæa, Fibra nervæa. In the nerves of the higher animals two forms of nerve fibre exist—the tubular, and the gelatinous. In the minute fibrils or tubules, Tubuli nervæi, full of nervous matter, which constitute the former, there is a difference between the central and peripheral portion;—the former has been called the axis cylinder and primitive and flattened band; the latter, the medullary or white substance of Schwann—nerve medulla, medullary sheath or matter, myelin—being that to which the peculiarly white aspect of cerebro-spinal nerves is principally due. In the gelatinous fibre no tubular envelope can be distinguished, and the white substance of Schwann seems to be wanting. It contains numerous cell-nuclei. See Neurine.

NERVI MOLLES; 'soft nerves.' The anterior branches of the superior cervical ganglion of the great sympathetic, which accompany the carotid artery and its branches, around which they form intricate plexuses, and here and there small ganglia. They are called molles from their softness, and subrufi from their reddish hue.

NERVI ODORATORII, Olfactory nerves—n. Reversivi, Laryngeal inferior nerves—n. Subrufi, Nervi molles—n. Vulnerari, Neurotrosis.

NERVIMOTION, Nervimotio, (nerve, and motio, 'motion.') A name given by M. Dutrochet, to the movement which is caused in the organs of the senses by external agents, and transmitted to the muscles by the nerves.

NERVIMOTOR, (F.) Nervimoteur. An epithet given by M. Dutrochet to external agents which are capable of causing nervimotion.

NERVINE, Nervinus, Neurotic, Nervitic, Antineurotic, Antineuropathic, (F.) Nervin, Névritique, Névrolique. A medicine which acts on the nervous system.

NERVOPATHIC, Neuropathic.

NERVOSISM. The doctrine which maintains that all morbid phenomena are owing to variations in the nerve force.

NERVOUS, Nervosus, Neurodes, Nervens, Neuricus, (F.) Nerveux. (Same etymon.) Relating or belonging to the nerves. Strong. Also, weak, irritable.

NERVOUS ATTACK, (F.) Attaque des nerfs, is an affection accompanied with spasm, pain, and different nervous symptoms, to which impressible individuals are liable.

NERVOUS CENTRES, see Centres, nervous.

NERVOUS DIATHESIS, termed Ataxia spiritalium, Anomalia nervorum, Status nervosus seu crethiticus, Diathesis seu Constitutio nervosa, Nervousness, (F.) Névroisme. Medically, nervousness means unusual impressibility of the nervous system. Formerly, it signified strength, force, and vigour. Recently, it has been applied to a hypochondriacal condition verging upon insanity, occasionally occurring in those in whom the brain has been unduly tasked;—a condition termed by some cerebropathy; by others, brain fog.

NERVOUS DISEASES, Morbi Nervosi, (F.) Maladies nerveuses. Affections seated in the nervous system. To purely functional disease of the nerves Dr. Laycock has given the name neurémia, and to the class of diseases he applies the epithet neurémic.

NERVOUS FLUID, Nervous principle, Fluidum seu Liquidum nervum, Sucus nervus, Spiritus vitalis. The fluid which is supposed to circulate through the nerves, and which has been regarded as the agent of sensation and motion. Of this fluid we know nothing, except that it resembles, in many respects, the electric or galvanic. It was formerly called Animal spirits, Spiritus animalis, (F.) Esprits animaux.

NERVOUS PAIN, Neuralgia.

NERVOUS POWER, Nerve power, Vis nervosa seu nervorum, Neurodynamia, Neurodynamis. The power of the nerves as exhibited in the living organism.

NERVOUS PRINCIPLE, Nervous fluid.

NERVOUS SYSTEM. The nerves and nervous centres considered collectively. See Nerves.

NERVOUS SYSTEM OF THE AUTOMATIC FUNCTIONS, Trisplanchnic nerve—n. System, ganglionic, see Trisplanchnic nerve—n. System, organic, see Trisplanchnic nerve—n. System of the senses, Medulla oblongata—n. System of voluntary motion, &c., Medulla spinalis.

NERVOUSNESS, Nervous diathesis.

NERVUS, see Nerve, Penis—n. Acusticus, Auditory nerve—n. Ambulatorius, Pneumogastric nerve—n. Anonymus, Trigemini—n. Auditorius, Auditory nerve—n. Caroticus, Carotid nerve—n. Cervicofacialis, Cervicofacial nerve—n. Communicans faciei, Facial nerve—n. Cutaneus internus, see Saphenous nerves—n. Cutaneus internus longus, see Saphenous nerves—n. Decimus, Pneumogastric—n. Ganglionicus, Trisplanchnic nerve—n. Genitoocruralis, Genitoocrural nerve—n. Hypoglossus, Hypoglossus.

NERVUS IMPAR. A prolongation of the neurilemma below the lower extremity of the spinal cord, as a fibrous filament, which is inserted into the base of the coccyx. It was formerly regarded as a nerve, hence its name.

NERVUS INCISIVUS, Incisive nerve—n. Innominateus, Trigemini—n. Ischiadicus, Sciatic nerve—n. Juvenilis, Penis—n. Latens, Achillis tendo—n. Lingualis lateralis, Pharyngoglossal nerve—n. Lingualis medius, Hypoglossal nerve—n. Loquens, Hypoglossus—n. Lumboinguinalis, Genitoocrural nerve—n. Mixtus, Trigemini—n. Musculi pterygoidei, Pterygoid nerve—n. Nasociliaris, Nasal nerve—n. Opticus, Optic nerve—n. Pneumogastricus, Pneumogastric—n. Pudendus externus, see Genitoocrural nerve—n. Quintus, Trigemini—n. Spermaticus, see Genitoocrural nerve—n. Subcutaneus male, Orbital nerve—n. Sympatheticus magnus, Trisplanchnic nerve—n. Sympatheticus medius, Trigemini, Pneumogastric nerve—n. Sympatheticus minor, Facial nerve—n. Sympatheticus, Trisplanchnic nerve—n. Sympatheticus medius, Trigemini—n. Temporofacialis, Temporofacial nerve—n. Timidus, Motor oculi externus—n. Tremellus, Trigemini—n. Trisplanchnicus, Trisplanchnic nerve—n. Trochlearis, Patheticus nervus—n. Vagus, Pneumogastric nerve—n. Vagus cum accessorio, Spinal nerve—n. Vasomotorius, Trisplanchnic nerve.

NES, Nasus.

NESPITE, Melissa calamintha.

NESTIA, (νηστια,) Fasting.

NESTIATRIA, (from nestia, and ιατρικη, 'medical treatment,') Limotherapeia.

NESTIS, (νηστις, 'a faster,') Jejunum.

NESTITHERAPEIA, Limotherapeia.

NESTOTHERAPEIA, Limotherapeia.

NESTROOT, Monotropa uniflora.

NETLEAF, Goodyera pubescens.

NETTING, Urine.

NETTLE, ARCHANGEL, WHITE, (Sax. netel,) Lamium album—n. Day, Lamium album—n. Dead, Lamium album, L. amplexicaule—n. Dwarf, Urtica urens—n. Hedge, Galeopsis—n. Horse, Solanum Carolinense—n. Pillbearing, Urticaria pilulifera.

NETTLE RASH, Urticaria—n. Springe, Urticaria.

NETTLE STINGING, COMMON, Urtica.

NETTLE TREE, Celtis occidentalis.

NETWORT, Goodyera pubescens.

NEURADYNAMIA, (neuron, a, and δυναμις, 'power,') Neurasthenia.

NEURÆMIA, (νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αιμα, 'blood,') See Nervous diseases.

NEURÆMIC, see Nervous diseases.

NEURAL, (from neuron.) Relating to a nerve or to the nervous system or centres.

NEURAL ARCH. The arch formed by the posterior projections connected with the body of the vertebra, which protect the medulla.

NEURAL AXIS, see Encephalon—n. Spines, Spinous processes.

NEURALGIA, (neuron, and αλγος, 'pain,') Rheumaticus spinus nervosus, Neurodynia, Nervous pain or pang, (F.) Neuralgie, Névrodyne. A generic name for a number of diseases, the chief symptom of which is a very acute pain, exacerbating or intermitting, which follows the course of a nervous branch, extends to its ramifications, and seems, therefore, to be seated in the nerve. The principal neuralgias have been distinguished by the names facial (of which the infraorbital, maxillary, and frontal are but divisions)—the ilioacrotal, femoropopliteal, femoropretibial, plantar, and cubiti-digital. A division of anomalous neuralgia has likewise been admitted.

All varieties of neuralgia are obstinate, and the greatest diversity of means has been made use of:—bleeding, general and local,—emetics, purgatives, rubefacients, vesicants, actual cautery, narcotics, mercurial frictions, electricity, destruction of a portion of the nerve, &c. The most successful remedy, perhaps, is the carbonate of iron, given in doses of some magnitude; as, for instance, ℞ss or ℞ij twice or thrice a day, in molasses. This plan of treatment, continued for a month or two, will often relieve, and ultimately remove this much dreaded affection. The mode in which it acts is by no means clear; but it is almost as certain as any other remedy used in disease in producing its salutary effects. The bowels must be kept free, and all inflammatory symptoms removed during its administration.

NEURALGIA ANOMALOUS. Under this name Chaussier has included different neuroses, some of which are characterized by acute pains circumscribed within a short compass, or extending by irradiations, but not having their seat in the course of a nerve; and others which are occasioned by tumours in the course of a nerve, or which succeed contusions or incomplete divisions of nerves.

NEURALGIA BRACHIALIS, Brachialgia—n. Brachiothoracica, Angina pectoris—n. Cerebralis, Hemiancra—n. Celiaca, Neuralgia of the solar plexus (Romberg)—n. Cruralis, N. femorotibialis.

NEURALGIA CUBITODIGITALIS, Is'chias nervo'sa digitalis. In this variety the pain extends from the part where the nerve passes under the inner condyle to the back of the hand and to its cubital edge.

NEURALGIA DENTALIS, Odontalgia nervosa.

NEURALGIA, FA'CIAL, Neuralgia fa'ciei, Tris'mus maxilla'ris seu Dolorif'icus seu Clon'icus, Opsial'gia, Dol'or cru'cians fa'ciei seu faciei periodi'cus, Hemiera'nia idiopath'ica, Autal'gia doloro'sa, Tic douloureux, Dol'or fa'ciei seu faciei typ'ico caracte'rē seu faciei Fothergill'i, Rheumatis'mus cancro'sus, Rheumatis'mus larva'us, Proposod'gia, Proposodyn'ia, Fe'bris top'ica, Ophthalmodyn'ia periodi'ca, Tortu'ra O'ris, Affec'tus spasmodicoconvulsivus Labio'rnm, Face ague, is characterized by acute lancinating pains, returning at intervals; and by twinges in certain parts of the face, producing convulsive twitches in the corresponding muscles. It may be seated in the frontal nerve, in the infraorbital, or in the maxillary branch of the fifth pair.

Metopodyn'ia, Brocogae, Neuralgia fronta'lis, Ophthalmodyn'ia, Tic douloureux, Dol'or periodi'cus, &c., commences at the superciliary foramen and extends along the ramifications of the frontal nerve that are distributed on the forehead, upper eyelid, caruncula lacrymalis, and nasal angle of the eyelids. Sometimes it is felt particularly in the orbit.

Neuralgia infraorb'itaria, Dol'or fa'ciei a'trox, Rheumatis'mus cancro'sus, Tris'mus clon'icus, Proposod'gia, Fe'bris top'ica, Odontalgia remittens et intermit'tens, Hemiera'nia s'e'va, Infraorb'itans neuralgia, Tic douloureux, is chiefly felt in the infraorbital foramen, whence it passes to the cheek, upper lip, ala nasi, lower eyelid, &c.

In Neuralgia marilla'ris, Gnathalgia, Gnathoneuralgia, Tic douloureux, Tris'mus catarrha'tis maxilla'ris, the pain usually sets out from the mental foramen and passes to the chin, lips, temple, teeth, and tongue.

NEURALGIA, FALSE. A term assigned to pains along a nerve or its ramifications, produced by some body compressing it,—those pains terminating with the removal of the compressing cause.

NEURALGIA FEM'ORO-POP'LIT'E'A, N. Ischiad'ica,

Sciati'ca, Sci'as, Mal'lum ischiad'icum, Mor'bus ischiad'icus, Pas'sio ischiad'ica, Ischi'agra, Ischiad'gia, Is'chias, Ischio'sis, Ischioneural'gia, Coxal'gia, Dol'or Ischiad'icus nervo'sus, Is'chias, I. nervo'sa Cotu'gnii seu Cotumii, Malum Cotu'gnii, I. nervo'sa post'ica seu rheumati'ca, Neurisch'ias, Cox'agra, Ischiati'ca, (Prov. Devonshire) Bone-share, (F.) Sciatique, Goutte sciatique. This is characterized by pain following the great sciatic nerve from the ischiatic notch to the ham, and along the peroneal surface of the leg to the sole of the foot. It is often considered to be a form of rheumatism—rheumatism of the hip.

NEURALGIA FEM'OROPRETIBIA'LIS, N. cru'ral, Is'chias nervo'sa anti'ca, Scelal'gia anti'ca. In this the pain, setting out from the groin, spreads along the fore part of the thigh, and passes down, chiefly on the inner side of the leg, to the inner ankle and back of the foot.

NEURALGIA FRONTALIS, see N. Facial—n. of the Heart, Angina pectoris.

NEURALGIA HEPATICA, Hepatalgia.

NEURALGIA ILIOSCR'OTAL has been rarely observed. It is characterized by a very acute pain in the course of the branches of the first lumbar pair; this pain follows the crista ili and accompanies the spermatic vessels to the testicle, which is often painfully retracted.

NEURALGIA, INFRAORBITAR, see N. Facial—n. Ischialica, N. Femoropopliteal—n. Lead, see Lead rheumatism—n. Lienis, Splenalgia.

NEURALGIA MAM'ME, Irritable breast. An exceedingly painful affection of the female mamma, unaccompanied by inflammation.

NEURALGIA MAXILLARIS, see N. Facial

NEURALGIA PLANTA'RIIS. This is rare, and the pain is confined to the course of the plantar nerves.

NEURALGIA RENUM, Nephralgia—n. Spinalis, Spinal irritation—n. Testis, Orchidalgia.

NEURANAGENNE'SIS, Neuranaph'ysis, (neuron, and αναγεννω, 'to regenerate,') Regeneration or renewal of a nerve.

NEURANAPHYSIS, (neuron, ανα, 'again,' and φωσ, 'to grow,') Neuranagenesis.

NEURAPOPHYSIS, see Vertebrae.

NEURASTHENIA, Neurady'nia, Debilit'us nervo'sa. Debility or impaired activity of the nerves, (neuron, and ασθενια, 'debility,') See Irritable.

NEURECTOMIA, (neuron, and εκτομη, 'excision,') Excision of a nerve.

NEURICUS, (from neuron,) Nervous.

NEURILEMMA, gen. Neurilemm'atis, Neurile'ma, Neurily'ma, Neury'men, Perineurion, Fis'tula seu Tu'bulus seu Cap'sula seu Involucrum nervo'rum, Membra'na seu Membran'ula seu Tu'nica seu Indumen'tum nervo'rum, Vagi'na nervo'rum, (F.) Névrilème, Périnèvre, (neuron, and λεμμα, 'a coat,') The fine transparent, and apparently fibrous membrane that surrounds the nerves, to every filament of which it forms a true canal.

Robin restricts the term perinèvre to the structure that invests the primitive bundles of nerves; and every nervous filament. It differs from the neurilemma in its ordinary acception, which forms a coat of some thickness in the larger nerves, and supports the nutrient vessels, whilst the perinèvre exhibits no capillaries.

NEURILEMMATITIS, Neurilemm'itis.

NEURILEMMITIS, Neurilemm'itis, Neurolemmat'itis, Neury'men'itis, Neurylym'itis, (F.) Névrilémite, (neurilemma, and itis,) Inflammation of the neurilemma.

NEURIL'ITY, Neuril'itas, (from neuron,) The property, possessed by nerve-fibre, of exciting contraction in a muscle, secretion in a gland, and sensation in a ganglionic centre.

NEURILYMA, (neuron, and ειλυμα, 'a covering,') Neurilemma.

NEURINE, (from neuron.) Medulla nervorum, (F.) Névrine, Albumine cérébrale ou du cerveau. The substance of which the nervous system is composed. It consists chiefly of albumen and a peculiar fatty matter, associated with phosphorus. There are two kinds of neurine—the one vesicular or consisting essentially of nerve vesicles or nerve cells or corpuscules, or, as they are sometimes called, from their prevailing in the ganglia—ganglion corpuscules and ganglion globules; the other, the tubular, formed—as the word imports—of tubules. The former is the cineritious or cortical nervous matter of the older anatomists;—the latter, the white or medullary. The vesicular neurine has appeared to be restricted to the production and distribution of nervepower; the tubular, to its conduction; yet the experiments of Dr. Brown-Séquard show, that the former conveys sensitive impressions from the posterior spinal roots to the brain. Most of the nerve cells are furnished with one process, hence termed unipolar; others have two processes—the bipolar; whilst others are devoid of processes—the apolar.

NEURISCHIAS, Neuralgia femoropoplitæa.

NEURITIC, Nervine.

NEUROITIS, Inflammatiō nervorum, Neurophlogōsis, Neurophlegmonē, (F.) Inflammation des Nerfs, Névrite, (neuron and itis), Inflammation of a nerve.

NEUROBLACIA, (neuron, and βλακεια, 'stupor.') Insensibility of the nerves.

NEUROCHONDRODES, (neuron, χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and odes.) A hard substance between a sinew and a cartilage.

NEURODES, (νευρώδης, from neuron and odes), Nervous.

NEURODYNAMIA, (neuron, and δυναμις, 'power,') Nervous power.

NEURODYNAMIS, Nervous power.

NEURODYNIA, (neuron, and δύνη, 'pain,') Neuralgia.

NEUROGAMIA, (neuron, and γάμος, 'marriage,') Magnetism, animal.

NEUROGLIA, (neuron, and γλία, 'glue,') A form of connective tissue, which binds the nervous elements together. (Virchow.)

NEUROGRAPHY, Neurographia, (F.) Névrographie, (neuron, and γραφία, 'a description,') The part of anatomy which describes the nerves.

NEUROHYPNOLOGY, Neurohypnolog'ia, (neuron, ὑπνος, 'sleep,' and λογος, 'a treatise,') A name given by Mr. Braid to his theory of magnetic sleep. See Magnetism, animal.

NEUROHYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

NEUROLEMMATITIS, Neurilemmatitis.

NEUROLOGY, Neurolog'ia, (F.) Névrologie, (neuron, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of anatomy which treats of the nerves.

NEUROMA, gen. Neuro'matis, (F.) Névrôme, (from neuron.) A morbid enlargement of a nerve. Applied to subcutaneous, circumscribed, and highly painful tumours formed on the tissue of the nerves; and likewise to a small, hard, grayish tumour, Neuromat'ion, Nervous ganglion, painful tubercle, of the size of a pea, which is observed in the course of nerves, and appears to be formed from the neurilemma.

NEUROMALACIA, (neuron, and μαλακία, 'softening,') Softening of nerves.

NEUROMATION, Neuroma.

NEUROMATOID, Neuromatoï'des, (neuroma, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling neuroma; as a 'neuromatoid tumor.'

NEUROMETRÆ, (νευρομητραί), Psoræ.

NEUROMYELITIS, (neuron, μυελος, 'marrow,' and itis.) Inflammation of the medullary matter of the nerves.

NEURON, (νευρον), see Nerve.

NEURONOSOS, Neurom'osus, (neuron, and νοσος, 'a disease,') A disease of the nerves.

NEURONYGMÈ, Neuronygmus, Neuronyg'mis, (neuron, and ὄγμη, 'puncture,') Punctiō ner'vi. Puncture of a nerve.

NEUROPATHIC, Neuropath'icus, Neuropath'ic, (F.) Névropathique, (neuron, and πάθος, 'affection,') Belonging to disease of the nerves, Neuropath'ia, Neurom'osus, Neurop'athy, (F.) Névropathie: see Neuroses.

NEUROPHLEGMONÈ, (neuron, and φλεγμονη, 'inflammation,') Neuritis.

NEUROPHLOGOSIS, (neuron, and φλογωσις, 'inflammation,') Neuritis.

NEUROPLAS'TY, Neuroplas'tice, (F.) Névroplastique, (neuron, and πλαστικός, 'forming,') M. Serres applies this term to a ganglionic alteration of the peripheral nerves.

NEUROPYRA, (neuron, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEUROPYRETUS, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEURO'SES, (F.) Névroses, (neuron, and osis.) A generic name for diseases supposed to have their seat in the nervous system, and which are indicated by disordered sensation, volition, or mental manifestation; without any evident lesion in the structure of the parts, and without any material agent producing them. Such is the usual definition. Broussais attributes them to a state of irritation of the brain and spinal marrow.

NEUROSKELETON, see Skeleton.

NEUROSPASMI, see Spasm.

NEUROSTHENIA, (F.) Névrosthénie, (neuron, and σθένια, 'strength,') Excess of nervous irritation. Nervous irritation.

NEUROTHELÈ, (F.) Névrothèle, (neuron, and θηλή, 'a nipple,') A nervous papilla.

NEUROTHELIC APPARATUS, Corpus papillare.

NEUROTIC, Nervine, see Neurotica.

NEUROTICA. Diseases of the nervous function. The 4th class of Good's Nosology. Neurotics, in the classification of Dr. Taylor, are poisons, which belong to the narcotic and narcotico-acid classes of Orfila. They are divided by him into the Cerebral, as morphia; the Spinal, as strychnia; and the Cerebrospinal, as conia and aconitia.

NEUROTOME, Névroto'me.

NEUROT'OMY, Neurom'ia, (neuron, and τομή, 'incision,') (F.) Névrotomie. Dissection of nerves. Also, an incised wound and section of a nerve.

NEUROTRO'SIS, Neurotros'mus, (neuron, and τροσις, 'wounding,') Nervi vulneratiō. Wound or wounding of a nerve.

NEUROTROSMUS, Neurotrosis.

NEURYMEN, (neuron, and ὑμην, 'a membrane,') Neurilemma.

NEURYMENITIS, Neurilemmatitis.

NEUTA, Neutha. A membrane, according to Paracelsus, which covers the eyes and ears of the fœtus in utero.

NEUTRAL, (neuter, 'neither,') Belonging to neither in particular.

NEUTRAL SALTS, Sec'ondary salts, (F.) Sels neutres. Salts, composed of two primitive saline substances, combined together, and not possessing the characters of acid or of base.

NÉVIS, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Thermal springs in the department of Allier, France. Temperature, 136° to 148° Fahrenheit.

NÉVRAGMIE (F.), (névro, and αγμος, 'fracture,') The bruising or section of a nervous cord.

NÉVRALGIE, Neuralgia—n. du Foie, Hepatalgia—n. des Reins, Nephralgia—n. de l'Utérus, Hysteralgia.

NÉVRILÈME, Neurilemma.

NÉVRILÉMITE, Neurilemmittis.
NÉVRINE, Neurine.
NÉVRITE, Neuritis.
NÉVRITIQUE, Nervine.
NÉVRO (F.), (from neuron,) in composition, 'nerve.'
NÉVRODYNIE, Neuralgia.
NÉVROGRAPHIE, Neurography.
NÉVROLOGIE, Neurology.
NÉVRÔME, Neuroma.
NÉVROPATHIE, Neuropathy.
NÉVROPATHIQUE, Neuropathic.
NÉVROPLASTIE, Neuroplasty.
NÉVROSE DU CŒUR, Angina pectoris—n. Utérine, Hysteria.
NÉVROSES, Neuroses.
NÉVROSISME, Nervousness.
NÉVROSTHÉNIE, Neurosthenia.
NÉVROTHÈLE, Neurothelie.
APPAREIL NÉVROTHÈLE. The papillary apparatus, or arrangement of the skin in the aggregate.
NÉVROTIQUE, Nervine.
NÉVROTOME, Neurotome, Neurot'omus; (from nevro, and τομή, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.') An instrument used by anatomists to dissect the nerves. It is a long and very narrow scalpel, having two edges.
NÉVROTOMIE, Neurotomy.
NEVUS, Nævus.
NEW JERSEY, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the upper part of Morris county and in the county of Hunterdon, near the top of Musconetcong mountain, there are chalybeate springs, which are resorted to. See Schooley's Mountain.
NEW YORK, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief waters are those of Saratoga, Ballston, Sharon, and Avon, which see. A spring at Catskill contains sulphates of magnesia, soda, and lime; carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron, and chlorides of sodium, calcium and magnesium. The Stockport and Columbia springs contain sulphates of magnesia, lime, and soda; chlorides of magnesium and calcium; carbonates of magnesia and lime; organic matter and carbonic acid.
NEXUS STAMINEUS OCULI, ('stamineous connection of the eye;') Ciliary body.
NEZ, Nasus.
NGERENGERE. A singular disease, with the New Zealanders, which Dr. Arthur S. Thomson considers to be a variety of such diseases as the Elephantiasis Græcorum, Lepra of the Cossacks, &c., and which he proposes to call Lepra gangræno'sa.
NICANDRA ANOMALA, (after Nicander, a physician of Colophon,) Anisodus luridus.
NICARAGUA WOOD, see Cæsalpinia.
NIC'COLI SALES, Salts of Nick'el, (F.) Sels de Nickel. These salts are gentle tonics, and have been given with advantage in periodic headache, and in chlorosis and amenorrhœa. The dose of the sulphate is gr. ss or gr. j, three times a day.
NICCOLUM, Nickel.
NICE, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Nice possesses some advantages over the neighbouring climates of Provence and Italy, being free from the sirocco of the latter, and protected from the mistral of the former. Spring is the most unfavourable season. The climate is very dry. It has been a great winter retreat for the consumptive; but does not deserve the encomiums that have been passed upon it.
NICHE, see Lingula.
NICKAR TREE, Gymnocladus Canadensis.

NICK'EL, Nic'olum, (from [G.] Nickel, 'a prostitute.')

A term of detraction, applied by the old German writers to what was regarded as a kind of false copper ore.) A white malleable metal, s. g. 8.8; less oxidizable than iron. The sulphate has been given as a tonic in the dose of half a grain to a grain.

NICKEL, SALTS OF, Niccolli sales.

NICODE'MI O'LEUM, Oil of Nicodemus. An oil made by digesting, for some time,—in a mixture of white wine and olive oil,—old turpentine, litharge, aloes, saffron, oxyd of zinc, &c.

NICOTIANA, (after Jean Nicot, who first introduced it into Europe about 1560,) N. tabacum—n. Minor, N. rustica.

NICOTIANA RUS'TICA, N. mi'nor, Priape'ia, Hyoscy'amus luteus, English or Wild Tobacco. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves possess the properties of tobacco, but are milder.

NICOTIANA TABACUM or TAB'ACUM, Nicotia'na, Her'ba taba'ci, Toba'cum, Pe'tum, Pe'tum, Hyoscy'amus Peruvia'nus, Toba'co, Virgin'ia tobacco, Druuk'wort, (F.) Tabac, Nicotiane. Tobacco is a violent acronarcotic; its properties seeming to depend upon a peculiar principle, Nicotin or Nicotianin. It is narcotic, sedative, diuretic, emetic, cathartic, and errhine. In incarcerated hernia, it is injected, in the form of smoke or infusion, but requires great caution. It is extensively and habitually used as an errhine and sialogogue. The infusion is used to kill vermin, and in some cutaneous eruptions.

NICOTIANE, Nicotiana tabacum.
NICOTIANIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.
NICOTIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.
NICTATIO, Hippus, Nictation.
NICTA'TION, Nicta'tio, Nictita'tio. (nictare, nictatum, 'to wink,') 'winking.' Clo'nus nictita'tio, Blepharism'us, Palpebra'tio, Twink'ling of the eye, (F.) Cignotement, Cillement. A rapid and repeated movement of the eyelids, which open and shut alternately. As occasionally performed, it is physiological; if repeatedly, a disease. It seems to be executed chiefly by the motor 7th pair of nerves; but it is necessary that the excitory 5th pair should likewise be in a state of integrity.

NIDAMENTUM, (nidus, 'a nest,') Decidua.
NIDDICK, Nucha.
NIDOREUX, Nidorous.
NIDOROUS, Nidoro'sus, (F.) Nidoreux, from Ni'dor, Cuis'sa, 'the smell of any thing burnt,' &c. Having the smell of burnt or corrupt animal matter.

NIDUS, ('a nest,') Nidus hirundinis.
NIDUS HIRUN'DINIS, Ni'dus, Swal'low's Nest. A deep fossa in the cerebellum—so called from its fancied resemblance—situate between the velum medullare posterius in front, and the nodulus and uvula behind.

NIEDERBRONN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters in the department of Bas-Rhin, France, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, and carbonic acid.

NIELLE, Nigella.
NIEPA BARK, see Samadera Indica.
NIGELLA, Coptis.
NIGEL'LA, N. Suti'va; Ord. Ranunculacæ; (nigrella, (from niger, 'black,') in allusion to the seed.) Melan'thinum, Cum'mum Ni'grum, Fen'nel flower, Nutmeg flower, Dev'il in a bush, (F.) Nigelle, Nielle, Fenx camin, Fleur Sainte-Catherine. This small southern European and Syrian plant was formerly used medicinally as an expectorant and deobstruent, errhine, sialogogue, &c.

NIGELLE, Nigella.
NIGHTBLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.
NIGHT EYES, Crusta genu equinæ—n. Mare Incubus.

NIGHTSHADE, AMERICAN, Phytolacca decandra—n. Bittersweet, Solanum dulcamara—n. Common, Solanum—n. Deadly, Atropa belladonna—n. Enchanter's, Circæa Lutetiana—n. Garden, Solanum—n. Palestine, Solanum sanctum—n. Red, Phytolacca decandra—n. Stinking, Hyoseyamus niger—n. Vine, Solanum dulcamara—n. Woody, Solanum dulcamara.

NIGREDO À SOLE, ('blackness from the sun,') Ephelides.

NIGRITA, Negro.

NIGRITIES, ('blackness,') Melanopathia—n. Ossium, Caries.

NIGRITISM, Melanopathia.

NIGRITUDO, gen. Nigritudinis, ('blackness,') Melanosis—n. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

NIGROMANTIA, (niger, 'black,' and μαντεία, 'divination,') Neeromancy.

NIGROR, ('blackness,') Melasma.

NIGRUM OCULI, ('black of the eye,') Pupil.

NIHIL ALBUM, Zinci oxydum—n. Griseum, Zinci oxydum.

NILIA CUM, (from Nilus, 'the Nile,') Mel.

NIMA QUASSIOIDES, Sinn'ba quassioides, a native of Nepal and the Himalaya mountains, is as bitter as quassia, and is used like it.

NINDSIN, Sium ninsi.

NINE BARK, Spiræa opulifolia.

NINEDAY FITS, Trismus nascentium.

NINSI, Sium ninsi.

NINSING, Panax quinquefolium.

NINZIN, Sium ninsi.

NIPHABLEPSIA, (νιφα, 'snow,' and ablepsia, 'blindness,') Snowblindness.

NIPPLE, (Sax. nýpele.) The Teat, Tit, Tete, Dug, Pap, (Old Eng.) Neble, Tit'ty; Aromas'tium, Uber, Staph'ylis, Staphyl'ium, Bubo'na, Mam'milla, Mamm'ella, Papill'la, P. mam'mæ, Uberis apex, The'le, Tit'thè, Tit'thos, Tit'thion, Tit'this, (F.) Melon, Bout de sein. The conical tubercle, situated at the centre of the breast. Towards the central part of each breast the skin changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint in young females, or a reddish brown in those who have suckled several children. The circle is called the Aure'ola or Aure'ola of the nipple. The nipple is capable of erection on being excited.

NIPPLE, ARTIFICIAL, Bout de Sein.

NIPPLEWORT, Lapsana.

NIRLES, Herpes phlyctenodes.

NIRMALLEES, Strychnos potatorum.

NIRMILLIES, Strychnos potatorum.

NISUS, Nix'us, Pei'ra, Strain'ing, (nitor, nisus, and nixus, 'to endeavour.') A voluntary retention of the breath, so as to force down the diaphragm; the abdominal muscles being at the same time contracted forcibly. In this manner the contents of the abdomen are compressed; and the evacuation of the fæces, urine, &c., is effected.

NISUS, Effort—n. Formativus, Plastic force.

NISUS PARTURIENTIIUM. The efforts or forcing during parturition.

NITEDULA, (niteo, 'to shine,') Cicindela.

NITON, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs in the Isle of Wight contain iron, and sulphate of alumina and potassa.

NITRAS, gen. Nitrat'is, (from nitre,) Nitrate—n. Hydrargyricus, see Hydrargyri nitras—n. Hydrargyrosus, Hydrargyri nitras—n. Kalicus, Potassæ nitras—n. Lixivie, Potassæ nitras—n. Natricum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Plumbicus, Plumbi nitras—n. Potassæ cum sulphure fusus, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus—n. Subbismuthicum, Bismuth, sub-nitrate of.

NITRATE, Nit'ras, Azo'tas, A'zotatè. A salt, formed of a base and nitric acid. Several nitrates are employed in medicine.

NITRATE ACIDE DE MERCURE, see Hydrargyri nitras—n. d'Ammoniaque, Ammoniac nitras—n. d'Argent, Argenti nitras—n. Mercureux, Hydrargyri nitras.

NITRE, Potassæ nitras—n. Cubic, Soda, nitrate of.

NITRIC, Nit'riens, (F.) Nitrique, (from nitrum, 'nitre,') Appertaining or relating to nitre.

NITRIC ACID, Ac'idum nitricum seu azo'ticum seu sept'icum seu nit'ri, A'qua fortis, Nitrous ac'id, Spir'itus nit'ri duplex seu nitri fulmans seu nitri Glauberi seu nitri ac'idus; Azot'ic acid, Dephlogis'ticated nitrous acid, Ory'septou'ic acid, (F.) Acide nitrique ou azotique. Nitric acid is obtained from nitre—Nitrate of potass'a. Its odour is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is corrosive, liquid, colourless, and transparent. S. g. 1.42. Ph. U. S.

Strong nitric acid is rarely used except as an application to foul, indolent ulcers, or to warts. When given internally, it is in the form of the Acidum nitricum dilu'tum, Spir'itus nitri simplex seu nitri vulg'ris—Dilu'ted nitric acid, which, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1863,) consists of nitric acid, three Troy ounces, water, a pint. Diluted largely with water, it is used, as a drink, in fevers of the typhoid kind; in chronic affections of the liver, syphilis, &c.; but in the latter affections, it is not to be depended upon.

NITROGEN, (nitre, and γεννω, 'I generate,') Azote.

NITROGEN, GASEOUS OXIDE OF, Nit'rous oxide, Protox'ide of nitrogen or of azote, Par'adise, In'tox'icating or Laughing gas, Dephlogis'ticated nitrous gas, Gas azo'ticum oxygenatum. This gas, when respired, produces singular effects; great mental and corporeal excitement; and, generally, so much exhilaration as to render the appellation, "laughing gas" by no means inappropriate. It has not been much used in medicine, although recommended in paralysis. Its effects are too violent and too transient to render it a valuable remedial agent; and, in the delicate, it has been productive of unpleasant effects, inducing palpitation, fainting, and convulsions.

NITROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITROGENÈ, Azote.

NITROGENIUM, Azote.

NITROGENIZED, A'zotèd, A'zotized. (F.) Azotè. Containing nitrogen or azote;—as a nitrogenized, azotèd, or azotized aliment, animal food, for example,—in contradistinction to the non-nitrogenized, nonazotèd, or nonazotized, (F.) Non-azotès, anazotiques, or those that do not contain nitrogen;—saccharine and oleaginous aliments, for example.

NITROGLYCERIN, Glonoin.

NITROMURIATIC ACID, Ac'idum nitromuriaticum seu muriaticum nitro'so'xygena'tum, Mens'trum au'ri, Nitrohydrochlor'ic or Hydrochloro'nitric acid, Aqua re'gia seu sty'g'ia seu re'gia, Chry'salea, (F.) Eau régale. A mixture of the nitric and muriatic acids has been used in diseases of the liver, in the form of a bath for the feet and legs, made sharply acidulous. It has, also, been employed, and with more uniform results, in cutaneous affections. Whatever advantages it may possess in internal diseases—and these advantages are doubtful—they are probably dependent upon the chlorine formed by the mixture, or upon the properties possessed by the mineral acids in general. See Chlorine.

The Acidum nitromuriaticum of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1863) is formed by mixing three Troy ounces of nitric acid with five of muriatic acid.

Acidum Nitromuriaticum dilu'tum, Dilu'ted Ni- troniuriatic Acid is made of nitric acid, a Troy ounce and a half; muriatic acid,  $\frac{3}{4}$ üss; Distilled water, Oj.

NITROUS OXIDE, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITRUM, (νιτρον,) Natron, Potassæ nitras—n. Antiquorum, Soda—n. Cubicum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Factitium, Borax—n. Flammans, Ammoniac nitras—n. Lunare, Argenti nitras—n. Prismaticum, Potassæ nitras—n. Rhomboidale, Soda, nitrate of—n. Saturninum, Plumbi nitras—n. Tabulatum, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus—n. Vitriolatum, Potassæ sulphas—n. Vitriolatum Schroederi, Potassæ sulphas.

NIX, gen. Nivis, Snow—n. Fumans, Calx viva—n. Zinci, Zinci oxydum.

NIXUS, Nisus—n. Parturientium, Nisus parturientium.

NOAH'S ARK, Cypripedium luteum.

NO'BLE, No'bilis. Principal, Essential.

NO'BLE PARTS, Par'tes no'biles seu essential'es. Some anatomists have given this name to parts, without which life cannot exist; such as the heart, liver, lungs, brain, &c. The organs of generation have, likewise, been so called.

NO'CAR, (νωκαρ,) Tor'por Soporif'icium. Lethargic torpor.

NOCTAMBULATIO, (nox, noctis, 'night,' and ambulare, ambulatum, 'to walk,') Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULISMUS, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULUS, Somnambulist.

NOCTISURGIUM, (nox, noctis, 'night,' and urgere, 'to arise,') Somnambulism.

NOCTU'NI OC'ULLI, ('owl's eyes,' from noctua, 'an owl,') Gray or blue eyes.

NOCTURNA BELLA, ('nocturnal wars,') Coitus.

NOCTURNAL, Noctur'nus, Nycter'imus, (from nox, gen. noctis, 'night,') Relating to night, as Febris noctur'na seu nycter'ina. A fever occurring in the night.

NODDING, Annuitio, Nutatio.

NODDLEPOX, Syphilomania.

NODE, No'dus, Emphy'ma exostosis perios'tea, (F.) Nodosité, Nœud. A hard concretion or incrustation, which forms around joints attacked with rheumatism or gout. Some include, under this name, exostoses, articular calculi, ganglions, and even the chronic swellings of the joints known under the name of white swellings.

NODES, (νόδος, from νη, priv. and όδους, 'a tooth,') Edentulus.

NODI DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers—n. Hæmorrhoidales. see Hæmorrhoids—n. Lactea, Infarctus mammæ lacteus—n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous.

NODOI, (νόδοι, sing. νόδος, from νη, priv. and όδους, 'a tooth,') Nefrendes.

NODO'SIS, (from nodus, and osis.) The formation or existence of nodes.

NODOSITÉ, Node.

NOD'ULI ARAN'TII, (pl. of nodulus,) Noduli Morgagnii, Cor'pora Arantii. The small sesa mold bodies situate on the periphery of the semilunar valves of the aorta and pulmonary artery for the better occlusion of the artery.

NODULI MORGAGNII, Noduli Arantii—n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous.

NOD'ULUS, (dim. of nodus, 'a knot,') A small knot. A small prominence or lobule in the portion of the cerebellum, which forms the posterior boundary of the fourth ventricle. The nodulus is on the median line, and before the avula. See Vermiform process, inferior.

NODULUS UTERINI, Pessary.

NO'DUM RELIG'A'RE, ('to fasten a knot or tie,') (F.) Nouer l'Aiguillette. To prevent by enchantment the venereal act; or to render impotent!

NODUS, ('a knot or tie,') Articulatio, Edentulus, Encystis, Hamma—n. Cerebri, Pons Varolii—n. Chirurgicus, Knot, surgeon's—n. Encephali, Nœud de l'Encéphale, Pons Varolii—n. Hystericus, Angone—n. Vitæ, Centrum vitæ.

NOEMA, (νοημα, from νοω, 'to think,') Thought.

NOESIS, (νοησις,) see Intellect.

N'ŒUD, ('a knot,') Node—n. du Chirurgien, Knot, surgeon's—n. d'Emballer, Knot, packer's.

N'ŒUD DE L'ENCÉPHALE (F.), Nodus Enceph'ali. M. Cruveilhier, under this name, includes the pons Varolii, peduncles of the cerebrum and cerebellum, and the tubercula quadrigemina.

N'ŒUD VITAL, ('vital knot,') Centrum vitale.

NŒUDS, (pl. of nœud,) Calculi, arthritic.

NOIR (from [L.] niger, 'black,') ANIMAL, ('animal black,') Carbo animalis—n. d'Os, Carbo animalis.

NOISETIER, Corylus avellana.

NOISETTE, (dim. of noix.) Corylus avellana (nut).

NOIX, ('a walnut,') from nux, gen. nucis, 'a nut,') Juglans regia (nux)—n. Américaine, Jatropha curcas—n. des Barbades, Jatropha curcas—n. Carthartique, Jatropha curcas—n. d'Éou, Trapa natans—n. de Galle, see Quercus infectoria—n. d'Igaxur, Ignatia amara—n. de Serpent, see Thevetia Ahouai—n. Vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica.

NOLI ME TANGERE, ('do not touch me,') Lupus, see Chancereux (Douton).

NOMA, (νομα, from νέω, 'to corrode,') Cancer aquaticus—n. Pudendorum, Colpoceae infantilis.

NO'MAD, Nomade, No'mas, (νομας, gen. νομάδος, from νομα, 'pasturage,') An epithet given to people who have no fixed habitation, and who travel, with their flocks, from country to country, for pasturage. Such are the Tartars. By analogy, the word Nomad'ic has been applied to a spreading ulcer.

NOMBRIL, Umbilicus—n. de Vénus, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NOME, (νομη,) Cancer aquaticus, Phagedænic ulcer.

NO'MENCLATURE, Nomenclatio, Nomenclatura, Onomatolog'ia, Onomatocle'sis, Terminology, Terminology, Glossology, Orismology, (νομα, 'name,' and καλω, 'I call,') A collection of terms or words peculiar to a science or art. In all sciences, nomenclature is an object of importance; and each term should convey to the student a definite meaning. The Lavoisierian nomenclature was a valuable gift to chemistry; and anatomy has derived advantage from the labours of Brantley, Dumas, and Chaussier, who have given names to parts indicative of their situation. See Muscle. The nomenclature of pathology has required the greatest attention; and although repeated attempts have been made to improve it, the barbarous terms that disgrace it are still frequently adopted. It consists of Hebrew and Arabic terms; Greek and Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, German, English, and even Indian, African, and Mexican; often barbarously and illegitimately compounded. A want of principle in forming the technical terms of medicine is everywhere observable. They have been formed for example, — 1. From colour; as Melena, Melas, Atrabilis, Lence, Alphas, Chlorosis, Rubella, Scarlatina, Purpura, &c. 2. From duration; as ephemeral, quotidian, tertian, and quartan, continued, and intermittent, &c. 3. From Birds, Beasts, Fishes, Insects, and Plants; as Rabies canina, Cynarcho, Boulimia, Pica, Hippanthropia, Elephantiasis, Urticaria, Lichen, Ichthyosis, &c. 4. From Persons or Places; as Morbus Heruleus, Facies Hippocratica, Lepra Arabum, Plica Polonica, Sudor Anglicus, Morbus Gallicus, Iguis Sancti Antonii, Chorea Sancti Viti, &c.

NOMUS, (νομος, from νεμω, 'to corrode,') Cancer aquaticus.

NONAZOTED, see Nitrogenized.

NONCOMPOS, Lunatic.

NONCOMPOS MENTIS, ('not possessing mind,') Lunatic.

NONNAT'URALS, Nonnaturalia. Under this term the ancient physicians comprehended air, meat, and drink, sleep and watching, motion and rest, the retentions and excretions, and the affections of the mind. They were so called, because they affect man without entering into his composition, or constituting his nature; but yet are so necessary that he cannot live without them.

NONNITROGENIZED, see Nitrogenized.

NONPLACENTAL, see Placental.

NONSANE, Insane.

NONSTRATED MUSCULAR FIBRE, see Muscular fibre.

NONVIABLE (F.) (from non, and viable.)

Applied to a new-born child not capable of continued existence. See Viable.

NONUS HUMERI PLACENTINI, (nonus, 'the ninth,') Teres minor—n. Lingue musculus, Genioglossus—n. Vesalii, Peronæus tertius.

NOODLES, see Turundæ Italicæ.

NOOS, (νοος,) Intellect.

NORICE, ([F.] Nourrice,) Nurse.

NORMA VERTICALIS, ('vertical rule,') see Normal.

NORMAL, Normalis, (norma, 'a perpendicular,') 'a rule,') According to rule; perpendicular.

The normal line, norma verticalis, of Blumenbach, is a vertical line let fall from the prominence of the frontal bone and shaving the superior maxillary, so as to mark the projection of the latter bone beyond the arch of the forehead.

NORRIS'S DROPS, see Antimonium tartarizatum.

NORTH CAROLINA, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. The chief springs are the Warm and Hot Springs of Buncombe. Temperatures vary from 94° to 104° Fah. They have not much mineral impregnation, and have the properties of the thermal waters in general.

NORTON'S DROPS, Liquor hydrargyri oxy-muriatis.

NORYSS, ([F.] Nourrice,) Nurse.

NOSACERUS, (νοσακερος,) Sickly.

NOSE, Nasus,—n. Bleed, Epistaxis.

NOSE, RUNNING AT THE, Coryza.

NOSELIA, (νοσηλια,) Nosocomie'sis, Nosocomia's. Care of the sick.

NOSEMA, (νοσημα,) gen. Nose'matis, Disease.

NOSENCEPHALUS, (F.) Nosencephale, (νοσος, and εγκεφαλος, 'brain,') A monster whose skull is open only on the frontal and parietal regions, the posterior fontanelle being distinctly present.

NOSERUS, (νοσηρος,) Insalubrious, sick.

NOSEUMA, gen. Noseu'matis, (νοσηυμα,) Disease.

NOSOCHTHONOGRAPHIA, (νοσος, χθων, 'the earth,') and γραφω, 'to describe,') Geography, medical.

NOSOCHTHONOLOGIA, (νοσος, χθων, 'the earth,') and λογος, 'a description,') Geography, medical.

NOSOCOMESIS, (νοσοκομισις, from νοσος, and κομεω, 'to care for,') Noselia.

NOSOCOMIA, Noselia.

NOSOCO'MIAL, Nosocomia'lis, (from Nosocomium.) Relating to an hospital,—as 'nosocomial or hospital fever.'

NOSOCOMIUM, (νοσοκομιον,) Hospital.

NOSOCOMUS, (νοσοκομος,) Infirmier.

NOSOCRATIC, (νοσος, and κρατος, 'power,') Specific.

NOSOCRINIES, (νοσος, and κρινω, 'I separate,') Diacrisis.

NOSODES, (νοσωδης, from νοσος, and οδης,) Insalubrious, Sick, Sickly.

NOSODOCHIUM, (νοσοδοχιον, from νοσος, and δεχομαι, 'to receive,') Hospital.

NOSOGENESIS, (νοσος, and γενεσις, 'generation,') Pathogeny.

NOSOGENIA, (νοσος, and γεννωω, 'to engender,') Pathogeny.

NOSOGENY, Pathogeny.

NOSOGEOGRAPHY, Geography, medical.

NOSOG'RAPHY, Nosograph'ia, (F.) Nosographie, (νοσος, and γραφω, 'I describe,') A description of diseases.

NOSOHÆMIA, (νοσος, and αιμα, 'blood,') Hæmatonosis.

NOSOHÆMIE, Hæmatonosis.

NOSOL'OGISM, Nosolog'ismus. The abuse of nosological arrangements in pathology.

NOSOL'O GY, Nosolog'ia, (F.) Nosologie, (νοσος, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A name given to that part of medicine whose object is the classification of diseases. The most celebrated nosological systems have been those of Sauvages (1763),

Linnaeus (1763), Vogel (1764), Sagar (1776), Macbride (1772), Cullen (1772), Darwin (1796), Selle, Crichton (1804), Parr (1809), Swediaur (1812), Pinel (1813), Young (1813), Good (1817), Hosack (1818), &c. Besides these general nosographies, others have been published on Surgery exclusively, none of which are particularly worthy of enumeration amongst nosological systems. Nosological arrangements have, also, been formed of single families or groups of diseases. Plenck, of Baden, is the author of two different treatises of this kind: the one, a methodical arrangement of the diseases of the eyes, and the other, of cutaneous diseases. Dr. Willan published an arrangement of cutaneous diseases, which was completed by Dr. Bateman, and adopted into the Nosology of Dr. Hosack. Mr. Abernethy, also, published a methodical classification of tumours, and many other partial nosological classifications might be enumerated. Also, Pathology.

NOSON'OMY, Nosononi'ia, (νοσος, and ονομα, 'name,') The nomenclature of diseases.

NOSOPHYTA, (νοσος, and φυτον, 'a plant,') Diseases supposed to be produced by, or to consist in the development of parasitic plants—as porrigo, mentagra, &c.

NOSOPHYTODERMATA, (from nosophyta, and derma, 'skin,') Nosophyta affecting the skin. Mr. Erasmus Wilson reckons five of these—Favus, Trichosis, Mentagra, Alopecia areata, and Chloasma.

NOSOPHE'US, Nosopoië'ticus, (F.) Nosopoië'tique, (νοσος, and ποιωω, 'I make,') That which causes disease.

NOSOPHYTODERMATA, (from nosophyta, and derma, 'skin,') Nosophyta affecting the skin. Mr. Erasmus Wilson reckons five of these—Favus, Trichosis, Mentagra, Alopecia areata, and Chloasma.

NOSOPHE'US, Nosopoië'ticus, (F.) Nosopoië'tique, (νοσος, and ποιωω, 'I make,') That which causes disease.

NOSOPHYTODERMATA, (from nosophyta, and derma, 'skin,') Nosophyta affecting the skin. Mr. Erasmus Wilson reckons five of these—Favus, Trichosis, Mentagra, Alopecia areata, and Chloasma.

NOSOPHE'US, Nosopoië'ticus, (F.) Nosopoië'tique, (νοσος, and ποιωω, 'I make,') That which causes disease.

NOSOPHYTODERMATA, (from nosophyta, and derma, 'skin,') Nosophyta affecting the skin. Mr. Erasmus Wilson reckons five of these—Favus, Trichosis, Mentagra, Alopecia areata, and Chloasma.

NOSOPHE'US, Nosopoië'ticus, (F.) Nosopoië'tique, (νοσος, and ποιωω, 'I make,') That which causes disease.

NOSOPHE'US, Nosopoië'ticus, (F.) Nosopoië'tique, (νοσος, and ποιωω, 'I make,') That which causes disease.

NOSTRASSIA, (nostras, 'of our country,') Nostalgiæ.

NOSTRILS, ([Sax.] nær-ryrn, 'nosehole,') Nares.

NOSTRUM, (noster, 'our own,') Arcanum.

NOSTRUM, CHITTICK'S. An empirical remedy for stone in the bladder, said to be a solution of alkali in veal-broth.

NOTA MATERNA, ('mother's mark,') Nævus —n. Primitiva, Groove, primitive.

NOTÆ INFANTUM, ('infants' marks') Nævi.

NOTAL, (from notus,) Dorsal.

NOTAL'GIA, Notial'gia, (Nostalgiæ, improperly, of Köchlin and others,) (νωτος, 'back,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the back. Spinal irritation.

NOTANENCEPHALIA, (νωτος, and anencephalia,) see Notencephalus.

NOTCH, (Teut. Noche, Ital. Nocchia,) Emarginatio, Emarginaturæ, (F.) Échancreure. A depression or indentation of different shape and size, observed on the circumference or edges of certain bones.

NOTCH OF THE CONCHA, Incisura tragica.

NOTCH, ETHMOID'AL, (F.) Échancreure ethmoïdale, is situate on the frontal bone, and joins the ethmoid.

NOTCHES, ISCHIAT'IC, (F.) Échancreures Ischiaticques, are two in number:—the greater and the less. The former is large, situate at the inferior part of the pelvis, and formed by the sacrum and ilium. It gives passage to the sciatic nerve, pyramidalis muscle, and to the superior gluteal vessels and nerves. The latter is much smaller than the other, from which it is separated by the sciatic spine. It gives passage to the tendon of the obturator internus, and to the internal pudic vessels and nerves.

NOTCH, PAROTID, (F.) Échancreure parotidienne, is the triangular space comprised between the parotid edge of the inferior maxillary bone and the mastoid process; so called, because it lodges the parotid gland. The notches in soft parts are generally called Fissures.

NOTCH, SCAP'ULAR, Incisuræ scapularis, Lunula scapularis, (F.) Échancreure scapulaire. The notch on the superior edge or costa of the scapula, which is converted into a foramen by means of a ligament, and gives passage to the suprascapular nerve.

NOTCH, SEMILUNAR OF THE STERNUM, Fourchette.

NOTENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTENCEPH'ALUS, (νωτος, 'the back,' and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,') A monster whose head, with the brain, is on the back. The condition is termed Notencephalia and Notanencephalia.

NOTHEUSIS, (νοθεισιν,) Degeneration.

NOTHIA, (νοθεια,) Degeneration.

NOTHROTÉS, (νοθροτης,) Torpor.

NOTHUS, (νοθος,) False.

NOTLÆUS, (νωλιατος,) Dorsal—n. Myelus, Medulla spinalis.

NOTIALGIA, Notalgia.

NOTOMÈLE, (notos, and μελος, 'unprofitable,') A monster with superfluous flesh on the back.

NOTOMYELITIS, (notos, and myelitis,) Myelitis.

NOTOMYELUS, (notos, and μυελος, 'marrow,') Medulla spinalis.

NOTUS, (νωτος,) Dorsum, Vertebral column.

NOUË, (Bandage) (F.); 'knotted,' (from nœud, (L.) nodus, 'a knot,') A bandage which has a considerable number of knots placed over each other. It is made with a roller, 6 or 7 ells long, rolled into two balls, and is used to compress the parotid region, after the extirpation of the parotid gland.

Also, an epithet applied to children in whom the disease of rickets has swollen the articulations.

It is, likewise, applied to the gout when it has caused nodes on the joints.

NOUER L'AIGUILLETTE, ('to knot the aiguillette,') Nodum religare.

NOUËT (F.), Nod'ulus. A bag filled with medicinal substances, infused in a liquid to communicate their properties to it.

NOUFFER'S, MADAME, REMEDY, Polypodium filix mas.

NOURRICE, Nurse.

NOURRICIER, Nutritious.

NOURISSON, Nursing.

NOURRITURE, Aliment.

NOUS, (vous,) Intellect.

NOUËRE, (from nouer, 'to knot,') Rachitis.

NOUVEAU-NÉ (F.), 'newborn,' Neonatus, superrimè Natus, Neog'enes, Neog'iles, Neog'ulus, Neog'onus, Neog'nus, Infans recens natus. That which has been just born. A newborn infant.

NOVACULA, Razor.

NOW ([Sc.] from [Sax.] cnolle, 'the top of a hill,') Vertex.

NOYAU, (from noix, 'a nut,') see Cytoblast—n. Cancéreux, see Cancer cell.

NOYAU CENTRAL DES PÉDONCULES DU CERVELET, Corpus dentatum.

NOYER, (from noix, 'a nut, a walnut,') Juglans regia—n. de Ceylon, Adhatoda.

NOYRIS, Nurse.

NUAGE, (from [L.] nubes, 'a cloud,') Nebula—n. de la Cornée, Caligo.

NUBECULA, (dim. of nubes,) Enœorema, Nebula.

NUBES, ('a cloud,') Enœorema, Nebula.

NUBILE, Nu'bilis, Marriageable, Marriable, 'fit to marry.' Generally, the period of puberty is considered to be the age at which both sexes are nubile. They are truly nubile, however, only when they are fitted to procreate healthy and vigorous children, and are competent to discharge their duties as parents.

NUBILITY, Nubil'itas, (F.) Nubilité. The state of being nubile or marriageable.

NUBILOSUS, (nubes, 'a cloud,') Nepheloid.

NUCES (pl. of nux, 'a nut,') AQUATICÆ, ('water nuts,') see Trapa natans—n. Quercûs, see Quercus alba.

NU'CHA, In'ium, Nucha cap'itis, (F.) Nuque. The nuke, hinder part or nape of the neck, (Prov.) Niddick. The part where the spinal marrow begins.

Ligamentum Nuchæ. A strong ligament from the neck, proceeding from one spinous process to another, and inserted into the occipital bone. It is very strong in quadrupeds. It is called in them Parypæax, Paxwax, Packwax, formerly, Faxwax, and Taxwax.

NU'CHAL, Nuchal'is, (from nucha,) Relating or appertaining to the nucha or nape of the neck.

NUCHAL RE'GION, Re'gio nu'chæ seu nuchal'is seu occipital'is infe'rior. The region of the nucha or nape of the neck.

NUCISTA, (from nux, gen. nucis, 'a nut,') see Myristica moschata.

NUCK, CANAL OF. A small prolongation of the peritoneum often sent into the inguinal canal of the female fœtus. So called, from Nuck, who first described it.

NU'CLEATED, Nucleat'us, (F.) Nucléé, (nucleus, 'a kernel,') Having a nucleus or central particle. Applied to the elementary cells of organized tissues; the vital properties of which are seated in the nucleus. See Cytoblast.

NUCLEATED CELL, see Cytoblast.

NUCLA TERRESTRIS, (dim. of nux, gen. nucis, 'a nut,') Bunium bulbocastanum.

NUKE, Nucha.

NULE-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

NUMERICAL METHOD, see Method, numerical.

NUM'MULAR, Nummularis. Num'mulated, (from nummus, 'money,') Relating to money. An epithet applied to the sputa in phthisis, when they flatten at the bottom of the vessel, like a piece of money; and to the mode of aggregation of the red corpuscles of the blood — 'nummular rolls.'

NUMMULARIA, Lysimachia nummularia.

NUMPOST, Abscess.

NUPHAR AD'VENA, (Arab.) Nymphæa ad-vena, Yellow Pondlily, Spatterdock. Order, Nymphaeaceæ; indigenous in Canada and the United States. The root is a popular tonic, and the fresh root bruised is applied as a cataplasm.

NUPHAR LUTEUM, Nymphæa lutea.

NUQUE, Nucha.

NURICE, Nurse.

NURSE, ([Sax.] noþice, Nutrix, (from nutrio, Tithenê, Lactans, Lacticans, Nutrients, Thelactria, Mam'ma, (L.) Nutrice, (F.) Nourrice, (Sc.) Noyris, Noryss, Nurice, Norice. One who suckles her own child or another's. Also, one that has the care of a sick person, Caretaker, (F.) Garde-malade.

NURSE, DRY. One who gives every care to a child, but does not suckle it.

NURSE, MONTH'LY. One who attends a woman during the month of her parturient state.

NURSE, WET, (Sc.) Milkwoman. A female, who suckles the child of another.

To 'nurse artificially,' is to bring up a child by the hand.

NURSING, (from nurse), (F.) Nourisson. An infant nursed by its mother or by another.

NUS, (vous), Intellect.

NUSUS, (vousos), Disease.

NUTA'TION, Nuta'tio, (nutare, nutatum, 'to nod,') Nodding. Also, a constant oscillation of the head, by which it moves involuntarily in one or more directions.

NUTATOR CAPITIS, ('nodder of the head,') Sternocleidomastoideus.

NUTMEG, (nux moschata), see Myristica moschata — n. Butter, see Myristica — n. Flower, Nigella — n. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

NUTMEGS, Testes.

NUTRICATIO, (nutrio, 'to nourish,') Nutri-tion.

NUTRICIER, Nutritious.

NUTRICIUS, Nutritious.

NUTRIENS, Aliment, Nurse.

NUTRIMEN, Aliment.

NUTRIMEN'TAL, Nutrimen'talis, Aliment'al, Aliment'ary, Alimenta'tis, (F.) Alimenteux. Having the qualities of food or nutriment.

NUTRIMENTUM, Aliment, Pabulum.

NUTRITIF, Nutritive.

NUTRIT'ION, Nutrit'io, Nutrica'tio, Nutri-tus, Alit'ra, Threp'sis, (nutrire, nutritum, 'to nourish,') Nutrition is that function by which the nutritive matter already elaborated by the various organic actions, loses its own nature, and assumes that of the different living tissues, — to repair their losses and maintain their strength. Sometimes the word is used in a more extended signification, to express the whole series of actions by which the two constant movements of composition and decomposition are accomplished, in organized bodies. Nutrition, then, would comprehend digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, and assimilation; the latter being nutri-tion, properly so called, and being effected in the intermediate system over the whole of the body, — the cells of the tissues attracting from the blood the elements necessary for their repairation.

NUTRITION, FORCE OF, Plastic force.

NUTRIT'IONAL, Nutritious'tis. Relating or appertaining to nutrition.

NUTRIT'IOUS, Nutric'ius, Nutritive, Alit'ilis, Troph'imus, Tropho'des, (F.) Nourricier, Nutricier, Alibile. Having the quality of nourishing: as nutritious food, nutritious lymph, &c.

NUTRITIOUS or NUTRITIVE ARTERIES, (F.) Ar-tères nutritives. Arterial branches which enter the foramina nutritia of long bones, and penetrate to the medullary membrane.

NUTRITIVE, Nutritious, (F.) Nutritif. Also, relating to nutrition: hence the 'nutritive func-tions,' or those that are concerned in nutrition.

NUTRITUS, Aliment, Nutrition.

NUTRIX, gen. Nutric'is, Mamma, Nurse.

NUTS, WATER, Nelumbium luteum.

NYCTALOPE, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPEX, (νυκταλωπής), see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOP'IA, (νυκταλωπια, from nycto, and optoma, 'I see,') Parop'sis Lucif'uga, Nyctalopi'-asis, Cæcitas diurna, Visus nocturnus, Oxyo'pia, Hemeralo'pia (moderns), Amblyo'pia meridia'na, Hemeratyp'hlo'sis, Hemerotyp'hlo'sis, Photophob'ia, Dyso'pia l'umini's, Visus a'crior, Nyctalopy, Day-blindness, Diurnal amauro'sis, (F.) Vne nocturne, Areuglement de Jour. The faculty of seeing during the night, with privation of the faculty during the day. It affects both eyes at once, when idiopathic. Its duration is uncertain, and treatment very obscure. It is, however, a disease of nervous irritability, and one of excitement of the visual nerve in particular. The indications of cure will consequently be—to allay direct irritation in every way; to excite counterirritation by blisters; and to gradually accustom the eye to the impression of light.

One labouring under this affection is called a Nyctalope, Nyctalops, Nyctalopez.

Nyctalopia has also been used for night blindness. See Hemeralopia.

NYCTALOPS, gen. Nyctalop'is, (νυκταλωψ,) see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPY, Nyctalopya.

NYCTERINUS, (νυκτερινος,) Nocturnal.

NYCTHEMERON, see Dies.

NYCTHEMERUM, (nycto, and ημερα, 'day,') The space of 24 hours, or of a day and night. Certain complaints continue only so long.

NYCTO, (from νυξ, gen. νυκτος, 'night,') in composition, night.

NYCTOBADIA, (nycto, and βαδω, 'to walk or mount,') Somnambulism.

NYCTOBASIS, (nycto, and βασις, 'walking,') Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATESIS, (nycto, and βανω, 'to walk or mount,') Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOTYPHLOSIS, (nycto, and τυφλος, 'blind,') Hemeralopia.

NYGMA, gen. Nyg'matis, (νυγμα, 'a prick,') from νυσσιν, 'to pierce,') Wound, punctured.

NYGMATICUM EMPLASTRUM, ('wound plaster,') Emplastrum resinæ.

NYMPHA, (νυμφα,) Clitoris, see Nymphæ.

NYMPHÆ. (νυμφαι,) Alæ minores seu inter-næ minores clitoridis seu muliebres minores, Carunculæ cuticulares, Cristæ clitoridis, Collieuli vaginæ, Myrtoc'hilla, Myrtoc'hellides, Labia minora seu interna seu pudendi minora, (F.) Nymphes, Petites lèvres. Two membranous folds, which arise from the lateral parts of the prepuce of the clitoris, and descend on the inner surface of the labia majora: terminating, by becoming gradually thinner, about the middle of the circumference of the orifice of the vagina. They are formed each of two folds of the mucous membrane of the vulva; and contain, in their substance, a thin layer of spongy, erectile tissue. Their use seems to be,—not, as was once supposed, to direct the course of the urine, which notion gave rise to their name, (after the fabulous Water nymphs,) but to favour the elongation and dilatation of the vagina in pregnancy and labour.

The word νυμφη, Nymphê, has also been used synonymously with clitoris by Oribasius, Aëtius, &c.

NYMPHÆA ADVENA, (νυμφαια,) Nuphar advena.

NYMPHÆA ALBA, Leuconymphæa, Nen'uphar, Microlenconymphæa, Casta'lia speciosa, White Waterlily, (Sc.) Cam'bieleaf, (F.) Nénuphar ou Némfar blanc, Lis des étangs, Lune ou Volant d'Eau, Nat. Ord. Ranunculacææ. Scz. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. Formerly employed as a demulcent, antaphrodisiac, emollient, and slightly anodyne remedy.

NYMPHÆA INDICA, N. nelumbo—n. Major lutea, N. lutea.

NYMPHÆA LU'TEA, N. ma'jor lu'tea seu umbili- co'lis, Nu'phor lu'teum, Nen'uphar lu'tea, Yellow Waterlily, (Sc.) Cam'bieleaf, (F.) Nénuphar jaune. Used for the same purposes as Nymphæa alba. The flowers are called in Norfolk, England, Braudybottles.

NYMPHÆA NELUM'BO, N. Indica, Fa'ba Ægyptiaca, Cy'anus Ægyptiacus, Pon'tic or Ægyptian Bean. The fruit of this is eaten raw in Egypt and some of the neighbouring countries; and is considered to be tonic and astringent.

NYMPHÆA ODORATA, Sweet-scented Waterlily, Sweet water or White Pond or Toad Lily, Coco or Water Cub'bage, (F.) Nénuphar odorant. An indigenous plant, growing in most parts of the United States in fresh water ponds, and on the borders of streams, and having large white, beautiful, sweet-scented flowers. The root is very astringent and bitter. It is sometimes made into a poultice and used as a discutient.

NYMPHÆA UMBILICALIS, N. lutea.

NYMPHE, (νυμφη,) Clitoris, see Nymphæ.

NYMPHES, Nymphæ.

NYMPHITIS, (nymphæ, and itis,) Epiderrh'itis, Inflamma'tio Clitor'idis. Inflammation of the clitoris.

NYMPHOMA'NIA, (nymphæ, and μανια, 'fury,') Fur'or uteri'nus, Uteroma'nia, Lagne'sis fu'ror femini'nus, Metroma'nia, Ædæogarg'galus, Ædæogargaris'mus, Thelygon'ia, Erotoma'nia, Ædæoma'nia, Aidoioma'nia, Cytheroma'nia, Melancho'lia uteri'na, Sympto'ma turpitu'dinis, Androma'nia, Gynæcoma'nia, Machlos'ynê, Tenti'go vene'rea, Hysteroma'nia, Salac'itas vulvæ, Uteri prur'itus, Brachy'na, Arsa'tum, Æstroma'nia, (F.) Nymphomanie, Fureur utérine. An irresistible and insatiable desire, in females, for the venereal act. It occurs in those particularly, who possess a nervous temperament, and vivid imagination, especially if excited by improper language, masturbation, &c. Its course, as described, is as follows. In the commencement, the sufferer is a prey to perpetual contests between feelings of modesty and impetuous desires. At an after period, she abandons herself to the latter, seeking no longer to restrain them. In the last stage the obscenity is disgusting; and the mental alienation, for such it is, becomes complete. The treatment consists in the use of the same means as are required in the satyriasis of man. When the mental alienation is complete, solitude is indispensable.

NYMPHON'CUS, (nymphæ, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') A morbid tumefaction of the nymphæ.

NYMPHOT'OMY, Nymphotom'ia, Nymphæ'rum Sectio, (F.) Nymphotomie, (nymphæ, and τεμνω, 'to cut,') An operation, known and practised for a long time, which consists in the excision of the nymphæ. The operation is had recourse to, when they are attacked with scirrhus, cancer, fungus, or gangrene; or when they are so large as to interfere with walking or coition. Nymphotomy is the circumcision of the female. It is practised in some countries.

Some authors have used the term Nymphotomy for amputation of the clitoris.

NYSTAG'MUS. A partial rotatory movement of the eyeball from side to side. (F.) Souris. Also, Coma vigil, (νυσταγμος, 'sleep,')

NYXIS, (νυσσιν, 'to pierce,') Punctura.

O.

OAK, BLACK. (Sax. ac, æc.) Quercus tinctoria —o. Common, Quercus robur—o. Jerusalem, Che-nopodium botrys.

OAK LUNGS, Lichen pulmonarius.

OAK OR'CHARD AC'ID SPRINGS. These springs — eight in number—are in Genesee county, New York, eight miles from Lockport. They are acid salines, consisting of free sulphuric acid, sulphate of protoxide of iron, and sulphates of alumina, magnesia, and lime. They are powerfully astringent and tonic.

OAK, POISON, Rhus toxicodendron — o. Red, Quercus rubra montana — o. Sea, Fucus vesiculosus — o. Spanish, Quercus rubra montana — o. White, Quercus alba.

OÄR'IC, Oär'icus, (F.) Oarique, (from oarion.) Relating or appertaining to the ovary.

OÄRIOCYESIS, (oarion, and κρησις, 'pregnancy,') Pregnancy, ovarian.

OÄRION, (ωαριον, from ωον, ovum, 'an egg,') Ovary.

OÄRION'CUS, Oariophy'ma, Ova'rium tu'midum, Tu'mor Ova'rii, (oarion, and ογκος, 'swelling,') Ovarian tumour.

OÄRIOPAREC'TAMA, gen. Oarioparecten'atis, Oophorau'xē, (oarion, and παρετειναι, 'to extend,') Enlargement of the ovary.

OÄRIOP'ATHY, Oariopathi'a, Oophor'opathi'a, (oarion, and παθος, 'affection,') Disease of the ovary.

OÄRIOPHYMA, (oarion, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Oarioncus.

OÄRIORRHEX'IS, (oarion, and ρηξις, 'rupture,') Ruptu'ra Ova'rii. Rupture of the ovary.

OÄRIOSCI'R'RHUS, (oarion, and scirrhus.) Scirrhus of the ovary.

OÄRIOSTERESIS, (oarion, and στερησις, 'privation,') Oariotomy.

OÄRIOT'OMY, Oariotom'i'a, Ovariotom'i'a, Oäriostere'sis, Ovariot'omy, (oarion, and τομη, 'incision,') The operation for removing the ovary.

OÄRIT'IS, Oöphoriti's, Oöri'tis, Inflamma'tio Ova'rii, Oöari'tis, (F.) Inflammation de l'Ovaire, (oarion, and itis.) Inflammation of the ovarium. When occurring in childhood, it is the Lochoöphoritis of some.

OÄRIULE, (oarion, and ἔλη, 'cicatrix,') Corpus luteum.

OÄRIUM, (ωαριον.) Ovary.

OÄRIYDROPS, (oarion, and ἰδρωψ, 'dropsy,') Hydroarion.

OÄRTHROC'ACĒ, (formed by contraction from omöärthroacæ.) Said to be used by Rust to designate inflammation of the scapulohumeral articular surfaces.

OÄTMEAL, see Avena.

OÄTS, (Sax. æten.) Avena — o. Water, Zizania aquatica.

OB (L.), in composition, 'on, before, over, against, towards.' At times, it is only intensive; and, at others, it means inversely. Before c and f, it is often changed into oc, of; and before p, always into op.

OBÄUDITIO, (ob, and andire, auditum, 'to hear,') Barycoia.

OBÄUDITUS, Barycoia.

OBÄECATIO, (ob, and æcare, æcatum, 'to blind,') Cæcitas.

OBÄORMIT'IO, (ob, and dormio, dormitum, 'I sleep,') The state of being asleep; also, of the limbs being asleep;—Stu'por ar'tuum.

OBDUCTIO LEGALIS, Autopsia cadaverica legalis.

OBELÆA RAPHE, (οβελος, 'a spit or arrow,') Sagittal suture.

OBESITAS, ('fatness,') Polysarcia — o. Colli, Struma adiposa — o. Nimia, Pimelosis — o. Viscra, Physconia adiposa.

OBESITĒ, Polysarcia.

OBESITY, Polysarcia.

OBESUS, ('fat,') Corpulent.

OBFUSCATIO, (ob, and fuscare, fuscatum, 'to make dark,') Amaurosis.

OBITUS, (ob, and ire, 'to go,') Death.

OBJECTIVE CONE. The cone of light proceeding from an object, the apex of which is on the object, and the base on the cornea.

OBJECTIVE SENSATIONS, see Sensation.

OBLINITIO, (ob, and linere, 'to besmear,') Inunction.

OBLIQUE, Obli'quus. Any thing inclined, or which deviates from the vertical line. Anatomists have given this name to certain muscles, which have an oblique direction as regards the plane that divides the body into two equal and symmetrical halves. These are:—

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE ABDOMEN. They are two in number, and distinguished into: 1.

Obliquus Exter'nus Abdom'inis seu descen'dens exter'nus seu descendens seu ma'jor, (F.) Ilio-pubo costo-abdom'inal, Costo-abdom'inal (Ch.), Grand oblique, Oblique externe. One of the broadest muscles of the body. It is situate at the lateral and anterior part of the abdomen; and is flat and quadrilateral. It is attached, above, to the outer surface and lower edge of the 7 or 8 last ribs: below, to the anterior third of the external lip of the crista illi: before, it terminates at the linea alba by means of a broad and strong aponeurosis, which covers the rectus, and presents towards its inferior part two very solid fibrous fasciuli, which are inserted, — the one at the symphysis, the other at the spine of the pubis, — under the name of Pillars of the Abdominal Ring. These pillars leave between them an opening, which forms the inferior orifice of the inguinal canal. The obliquus externus abdominis depresses the ribs, and carries them backwards during a strong expiration. It impresses on the chest a movement of rotation, and bends the thorax upon the pelvis, and conversely. It contracts, also, the abdominal cavity. 2. Obliquus Inter'nus Abdom'inis seu ascen'dens seu mi'nor seu inter'nus seu ascendens internus, Mus'culus accl'vis, (F.) Ilio-lombo-costo-abdom'inal, Ilio-abdom'inal (Ch.), Muscle petit oblique ou oblique interne, is broad, especially before; thin, and irregularly quadrilateral, like the preceding, beneath which it is situate. It is attached, above, to the inferior edge of the cartilages of the 5th, 4th, 3d, and 2d false ribs; below, to the anterior two-thirds of the interstice of the crista illi, to the posterior part of the crural arch, and to the pubis; behind, to the spinous processes of the last two lumbar vertebrae, and to those of the first two portions of the sacrum; before, to the linea alba. Its upper fibres run obliquely upwards and forwards; the middle are horizontal; and the lower pass obliquely downwards and forwards.

These last, in the male, are dragged down through the inguinal ring, when the testicle descends, and form the two fasciuli of the cremaster.

The obliquus internus resembles the O. externus in function.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE EYE, Amato'rii, Circumagen'tes, Kotato'res Ocu'li, are two in number. They are distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Super'rior Ocu'li, Amato'rius mus'culus, Trochlea'ris,

Trochlea'tor, Obliquus ma'jor, Circumductio'nis op'isæ, Longis'simus oc'uli. (F.) Optico-trochlei scleroticien, Grand trochléateur (Ch.), Grand oblique de l'œil, Oblique supérieur de l'œil, Amoureux (Muscle), is situate at the inner and upper part of the orbit. It is small, round, fusiform, and reflected upon itself in the middle of its course. Behind, it is attached to the inside of the foramen opticum; and when it arrives opposite the internal orbital process, it becomes a small, round tendon, which slides in a cartilaginous pulley fixed to the os frontis, and is reflected, at an acute angle, to proceed downwards and outwards, and to attach itself to the outer and back part of the globe of the eye. This muscle carries the globe of the eye forwards and inwards; making it experience a movement of rotation, which directs the pupil downwards and inwards. This is conceived to be an involuntary muscle as well as the next. In sleep, according to Sir C. Bell, when the power over the straight or voluntary muscles of the organ is nearly lost, the eye is given up to the oblique muscles, which lodge the transparent cornea under the upper eyelid. At the approach of death, the same thing is observable; hence, the turning up of the eye, at such time, is not an evidence of agony or suffering, but of insensibility. 2. Obliquus Inferior seu mi'nor oc'uli. (F.) Maxillo-scleroticien, Petit Trochléateur (Ch.), Petit oblique ou oblique inférieur de l'œil, is situate at the anterior and inferior part of the orbit. It is flat and attached to the inner and anterior part of the orbital surface of the superior maxillary bone, on the outside of the lachrymal gutter; from thence it passes outwards and backwards, and terminates by an aponeurosis, at the posterior and inner part of the globe of the eye. It carries the globe of the eye inwards and forwards; and directs the pupil upwards and outwards.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE HEAD. These are two in number. 1. Obliquus Superior seu mi'nor Cap'itis, (F.) Trachélo-atloïdo-occipital, Atloïdo-sous-mastôïdien (Ch.), Muscle oblique supérieur ou petit oblique de la tête. This muscle is situate at the sides of, and behind, the articulation of the head: it is flat and attached, on the one hand, to the top of the transverse process of the atlas; and, on the other, terminates at the occipital bone, beneath the inferior curved line, and sometimes, also, at the mastoid region of the temporal bone. It extends the head,—inclining it to one side. 2. Obliquus Inferior Cap'itis, Obliquus ma'jor, (F.) Spini-axoïdo-trachéli-atloïdien, Axoïdo-atloïdien (Ch.), Oblique inférieur ou grand oblique de la tête, is situate at the posterior part of the neck and head. It is round, fusiform; attached to the spinous process of the axis, and proceeds to terminate behind and below the summit of the transverse process of the atlas. It impresses, on the first vertebra and the head, a movement of rotation, which turns the face to one side.

OBLIQUE PROCESSES, see Vertebrae.

OBTUNDATIO, (ob, and truncare, truncatum, 'to cut off,') Decollation.

OBTUNDENS, (F.) Obtondant, (obtundere, (ob, and tundere, 'to beat,') 'to beat against,' and therefore to blunt the edge.) An epithet applied to remedies that were supposed, according to an erroneous theory, to be possessed of the power of blunting the acrimony of the humours. A demulcent is one of these.

OBTURAMENTUM, (obturare, obturatum, 'to stop up,') Emphragma.

OBTURATEUR, Obturator—o. du Palais, Palate, artificial.

OBTURATIO, Emphraxis.

OBTURATIO DES DENTS, Plugging.

OBTURATOR, Obturatorius, (F.) Obturator. An instrument adapted for closing an opening caused by a wound or disease, as 'Obturator of the palate,' see Palate, artificial. Also a name given in anatomy to several parts connected with the Obturator foramen.

OBTURATOR ARTERY, Arteria obturatoria seu obturatrix, (F.) Sous-pubio fémorale (Ch.), Artère obturatrice, arises, most commonly, from the hypogastric. It is, however, frequently given off from the epigastric; a matter of importance to be determined in cases of femoral hernia. Of 500 obturator arteries examined by M. J. Cloquet, 340 were furnished by the hypogastric, and 152 by the epigastric or crural. When it arises from the hypogastric, it passes forwards and outwards, and then turns horizontally into the cavity of the pelvis, to issue from this cavity by the opening left at the upper part of the obturator membrane. When, on the contrary, the obturator artery arises from the epigastric or the crural, it descends obliquely inwards, behind the os pubis, to the obturator foramen. At its exit from the pelvis, the artery divides into two branches, a posterior and an anterior, which are distributed to the muscles of the anterior and superior part of the thigh.

OBTURATOR FORAMEN, Foramen Obturatorium seu obturatum seu infrapubium seu ovalè seu thyroïdeum seu Thyroïdes seu Amplum Pelvis, (F.) Trou sous-pubien. A large opening, of an oval or triangular form, in the anterior part of the os innominatum, on the outside of the symphysis pubis and beneath the horizontal ramus of the os pubis. This foramen is closed by a membranous ligament.

OBTURATOR LIGAMENT OR MEMBRANE, Subpubic membrane, is a fibrous membrane, fixed to the whole circumference of the obturator foramen, except above, where an opening remains for the passage of the vessels and nerves of the same name.

OBTURATOR MUSCLES, Obturatores, Rotatores femoris. These are two in number. They are divided into a. Obturator Externus, Extra-pelvio-pubi-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien externe (Ch.). A muscle, situate at the anterior and inner part of the thigh. It is broad, flat, and triangular; and is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior surface of the os pubis, to that of the ischium, and to the anterior surface of the obturator ligament. Its fleshy fibres converge to the tendon, which proceeds to be inserted at the inferior part of the cavity of the great trochanter. This muscle rotates the thigh outwards.

b. Obturator Internus, Marsupialis, Bursa'lis, Intra-pelvio-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien interne (Ch.), is seated, almost entirely, in the pelvis. It arises from the inner surface of the obturator ligament, and from the posterior part of the circumference of the obturator foramen, and is inserted, by means of a strong tendon, running between the two portions of the gemini, into the cavity at the root of the great trochanter; after having turned upon the ischium, which forms for it a kind of pulley. This muscle also rotates the thigh outwards.

OBTURATOR NERVE, Sous-pubio-fémoral, (Ch.), proceeds principally from the 2d and 3d lumbar nerves. It descends into the pelvis; gains the obturator foramen; gives branches to the obturator muscles, and divides, behind the abductor primus and pectinalis, into two branches; one anterior, whose branches are distributed to the first two adductors, gracilis, and integuments; the other, posterior, distributing its ramifications to the obturator externus and third adductor.

OBTURATOR VEIN has, ordinarily, the same arrangement as the artery. It is common, however, to find it arising from the epigastric; whilst the corresponding artery proceeds from the hypogastric, and conversely.

OBTURATOIRES, Obturator muscles.

OBVOLVENTIA, (obvolere, 'to cover over,') Demulcents.

OC, as a prefix, see Ob.

OCA, Oxalis tuberosa.

OCCECATIO, (oc, and cæcus, 'blind,') Cæcitas.

OCCIPITAL, Occipitalis, (from Occiput, gen. Occipitis.) That which belongs to the occiput.

OCCIPITAL ARTERY. This arises from the posterior part of the external carotid, beneath the parotid. It proceeds backwards, passes between the mastoid process and the transverse process of the atlas; reaches the occipital bone and divides into two branches, which may be called ascending posterior and anterior, and are distributed to the neighbouring muscles and ligaments.

OCCIPITAL BONE, Os occipitis seu occipiti seu occipitalè seu sphenobasilairè seu mem'oriv seu nervosum seu basilairè seu pro're seu pyr'idis seu sextum cranii seu lambdoïdes seu lamb'de seu pap'pis seu nervosum seu fibrosum seu pelvcephalicum, (F.) Os occipitalis, is situate at the posterior and inferior part of the cranium, which it assists in forming. It is flat, symmetrical, and curved upon itself. It presents, 1. An occipital or posterior surface, which is convex, and has, upon the median line, the basilary surface, the foramen magnum, through which passes the spinal marrow with its membranes and vessels,—the external occipital crest, the external occipital protuberance; and, at the sides, the upper curved line, large rough arched ridge or transverse arch or linea semicircularis, the lower curved line, the posterior condyloid fossæ, the condyles for the articulation of this bone with the atlas; and the anterior condyloid fossæ, pierced by a foramen for the passage of the ninth pair of nerves. 2. A cerebral or anterior surface. On the median line are: the basilary fossæ, the inner orifice of the foramen magnum, the internal occipital crest, the internal occipital protuberance, the cruciform spine; a channel, which lodges the termination of the straight sinus, and, on each side, the occipital fossæ, distinguished into superior or cerebral, and inferior or cerebellous, and separated by a groove which lodges the lateral sinus. 3. The surfaces of the occipital bone are separated by four ridges and four angles. The two superior edges are articulated with the parietal bones; the two lower join the temporal; and the anterior angle, under the name basilary process, is united to the sphenoid.

The occipital bone is developed from four points of ossification; and sometimes from a greater number.

OCCIPITAL MUSCLE, Occipitalis. Many anatomists have given this name to the posterior fasciculus of the occipitofrontalis.

OCCIPITAL NERVE, Suboccipital nerve, (F.) Pre-mière paire trachélienne (Ch.), Nerf occipital ou sous-occipital. It arises from the upper part of the spinal marrow by eight or ten filaments, united into two fasciculi. Thus formed, it passes between the foramen magnum and the posterior arch of the atlas; and, at this place, forms a long ganglion, afterwards dividing into two branches. Of these, the anterior, which is long and small, makes a turn above the transverse process of the atlas and forms an anastomotic noose with a branch of the second cervical nerve. The posterior branch, larger and shorter, divides into seven or eight branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the upper and back part of the neck.

OCCIPITAL REGION, Occiput.

OCCIPITAL VEIN. Its roots follow exactly the course of the branches of the artery, and unite into a single trunk, which opens into the internal jugular vein, and sometimes into the external.

OCCIPITUM, Occiput.

OCCIPITOAT'LOID, Occipitoatloïdeus, (F.) Occipitoatloïdien. That which has reference to the occiput and atlas.

OCCIPITOATLOID ARTICULA'TION is the articulation of the condyles of the occipital bone with the superior articular cavities of the atlas. It is strengthened by two ligaments—the one anterior, the other posterior, called occipitoatloïd ligaments: the one extends from the anterior, the other from the posterior arch of the atlas to the corresponding portion of the circumference of the foramen magnum.

OCCIPITOÄX'OID, Occipitoäxöideus, (F.) Occipito-axöïdien. That which relates to the occipital bone and the axis or second vertebra.

OCCIPITOXOID ARTICULATION is the connexion of the occipital bone with the axis or second vertebra, although these bones are not really articulated, but are merely retained in apposition by three strong ligaments, the posterior of which is called the occipito-axoid, and the two others odontoid.

OCCIPITOFRONTA'LIS, Digastricus cranii, Epicranius, Frontalis et occipitalis. The majority of anatomists call by this name the whole of the fleshy plane, with the epicranial or coronal aponeurosis (see Calotte), which covers the head from the occiput to the forehead. It is attached, by its posterior fasciculus, to the two outer thirds of the upper curved line of the occipital bone, and to the outer surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal; and, by its anterior fasciculus, it terminates at the eyebrow, where it becomes confounded with the superciliaris, pyramidalis nasi, and orbicularis palpebrarum.

The occipitofrontalis, by the contraction of its anterior fasciculus, draws forward a part of the integuments of the cranium. It wrinkles the skin of the forehead transversely, and may also contribute to open the eye by its decussation with the orbicularis palpebrarum. The posterior fasciculus of the muscle draws backwards a part of the skin of the cranium, and assists in stretching the common aponeurosis.

OCCIPITOMENINGE'AL. That which belongs to the occipital bone and to the meningeæ or dura mater.

OCCIPITOMENINGEAL AR'TERY, in Chaussier's nomenclature, is a branch of the vertebral, given off to the dura mater at its entrance into the cranium.

OCCIPUT, gen. Occip'itis, Occipit'ium, (oc, and caput, 'the head.') Re'gio occipita'lis, In'ion, Opistho'cranium, Opisthoceph'alon, Hystero'cranium, Pro'ra. The back part of the head, formed by the occipital bone.

OCCIPUT, SORT, Craniotomes.

OCCLU'SION, Occlu'sio, (occludere, occlusum, 'to shut up.') Sometimes this word signifies, simply, the transient approximation of the edges of a natural opening—the occlusion of the eyelids, for example; at others, it is synonymous with imperforation, as occlusion of the pupil, vagina, &c.

OCCULT DISEASES, see Latent.

OCEAN SPRINGS, see Mississippi, mineral waters of.

OCHEMA, gen. Oche'matis, (οχημα,) Vehicle.

OCHETEUMATA, (pl. of οχημα, 'a canal.') Nares.

OCHETOS, (οχητος,) Canal.

OCHEUMA, (οχημα,) Coition, Fecondation.

OCHEUS, (οχευς, from οχω, 'to hold.') Scrotum.

OCHLE'SIS, (οχλος, 'a crowd.') Crowd pruis'oning. A morbid condition induced by the crowding together of sick persons under one roof.

OCHREA (from οχρος, 'pale') RUBRA, ('red ochre.') Hamatites.

OCHRISMA, (ωχρισμα,) Paleness.

OCHROMA, (ωχρος, 'pale.') Paleness.

OCHROPYRA, (ωχρος, 'yellow,' and πυρ, 'fever.') Fever, yellow.

OCHROTES, (ωχροτης,) Paleness.

OCHROTYPHUS, (ωχρος, 'yellow,' and τυφλος,) Fever, yellow.

OCHTHIASIS, (οχθος, 'a hill, a protuberance.') Molluscum.

OCHTHODES, (οχθος, 'the hard edge of an ulcer.') Callous.

OCIMUM ADSCENDENS, (ωκιμον, from ωκυς, 'swift,' owing to its swift growth.) O. Basilicum.

OCIMUM BASIL'ICUM, O. adscendens seu pilo'sum seu racemosum seu citra'tum, Beren'daros, Basil'icum, B. majus seu citra'tum, Berem'on or Cit'ron bas'il, (F.) Basilic' commun. Nat. Ord. Labiate. See. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. This herb has a fragrant odour and aromatic taste. It is used as a condiment, and has been supposed to possess nervine properties.

OCIMUM CARYOPHYLLA'TUM, O. nin'imum, Small or Bush bas'il, possesses properties similar to the former. It is sometimes used as snuff.

OCTA'NA, Hebdomadaria, Fe'bris hebdomadaria, (octo, 'eight.') A fever whose paroxysms recur every week;—a supposititious case.

OCTA'RIOUS, (from octo, 'eight.') A pint. The eighth part of a wine-gallon. Same etymon. It contains sixteen fluidounces (Ph. U. S.)—20 fluidounces imperial measure. See Weights.

OCTOPUS SYNAPHEOCEPHALUS, Hemipages.

OCTOROON, (from octo, 'eight,') see Mulatto.

OCTUNX, (octo, 'eight,' and uncia, 'an ounce.')

A weight of eight ounces.

OC'ULAR, Ocularis, (F.) Oculaire, (from oculis.)

Of or belonging to the eye.

OCULAR CONE. The cone formed within the eye by a pencil of rays proceeding from an object; the base of the cone being on the cornea, the apex on the retina.

OCYODINIC, (ocy, and ὠδίν, 'a labor pain.')

Ocytocic.

OCYPH'ONUS, (ocy, and φόνος, 'murder.')

An agent that kills speedily.

OCYTOCEUS, (ὠκυτοκεύς.) Ocytocic.

OCYTOC'IC, Oxytoc'ic, Ocytoce'us, Ocytoc'ius, Ocyodin'ic, Odinag'ous, (ocy, and τὸκος, 'labor.')

Any thing that expedites parturition.

OCYTOCIUS, (ὠκυτοκίος.) Ocytocic.

OCY'TOCUS, (ὠκυτοκός.) A quick or easy labor.

OD. A term employed by Reichenbach to designate an "effective force," which, according to him, not only manifests itself in contact with man, as in the case of magnets, crystals, the hands, &c., but also at distances, as from the sun, moon, and stars; indeed, from all matter. Such a force is termed by him od'ic.

ODAXIS'MUS, Odaaxes'mus, (ὀδαξησμός, from ὀδᾶξ, 'I bite.')

Odontocne'sis, Odontocnes'mus. A sensation of biting or pricking, as that in the gums which precedes the appearance of the teeth.

ODES, (ὠδός.) A suffix, at times having the signification of oid, but generally indicating, like osus in Latin terms, 'consisting of,' or 'full of.'

ODEUR, Odour.

ODIC, see Od.

ODIN, (ὠδίν.) Pain (labour).

ODINAGOGUS, (odin, and ἀγω, 'I lead.')

See Ocytocic.

ODINOL'YSIS, (odin, and λύσις, 'solution.')

Mitigation of labour pains.

ODINOPE'IA, (odin, and ποιέω, 'I make.')

Agents that excite or encourage labour pains.

ODIS, (ὠδίσ.) Pain (labour).

ODME, (ὀδμή.) Odour.

ODONTAGOGON, (odontag'ogon, odonto, and ἀγω, 'I draw.')

Dentagra.

ODONTAGRA, (odont'agra, from odonto, and ἄγρα, 'a seizure.')

A rheumatic or gouty pain in the teeth. Also, Dentagra.

ODONTAL'GIA, (odont'al'gia, from odonto, and ἄλγος, 'pain.')

Dentitium dol'lor, Tooth'ache, Odont'ia, O. dolorosa, Gomphi'asis, Gomphias'mus, Odontodyn'ia, (F.) Odontalgie, Douleur des dents, Fluxion sur les dents, Mal de dent ou d'amour ou de Saint Médard. A disease dependent upon a variety of causes affecting the cavity of the tooth, but generally owing to caries, which exposes the cavity to the action of the air, and to extraneous matters in general. Hence the treatment consists in plugging the tooth or destroying the sensibility of the nerve by powerful stimulants; and, if these means fail, in extracting the tooth.

ODONTALGIA CARIOSA, Dental gangrene—o. Dentitionis, Dentition—o. Hæmodia, Hæmodia.

ODONTALGIA NERVO'SA, Neural'gia Dent'al'is.

Neuralgia of the teeth. Characterized by periodical pain, shooting with the utmost violence along the branches of the fifth pair distributed to the affected jaw.

ODONTALGIA REMITTENS ET INTERMITTENS; Neuralgia infraorbitaria.

ODONTALGIC, Antiödontalgic.

ÖDONTALGIE, Odontalgia.

ÖDONTALGIQUE, Antiodontalgic.

ODONTAMBLYOGMUS, (odonto, and ἀμβλύνω, 'blunt.')

Hæmodia.

ODONTATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia Dentis, (F.)

Atrophie des Dents, (odonto, and atrophia, 'atrophy.')

Atrophy of the teeth.

ODONTHEMODIA, Hæmodia.

ODONTHAR'PAGA, (odonto, and ἄρπαζειν, 'to lay hold of.')

Dentagra.

ODONTHYALOPH'THORA, (odonthy'alus, 'enamel,' and φθορά, 'corruption.')

Destruction of the enamel of the teeth.

ODONTHYALUS, (odonto, and ἕλας, 'glass.')

Enamel of the teeth.

ODONTHYPERÆSTHESIS, Hæmodia.

ODONTIA, Odontalgia.

ODONT'IA DEFOR'MIS. Deformity of the teeth from error of shape, position, or number.

ODONTIATRIA, Dentistry.

ODONTIC, Antiödontalgic.

ODONTIT'IS, Odontophleg'monë, (odonto, and itis.)

Inflammation of the teeth.

ODONTO, (ὄδοντος, gen. ὀδοντός, 'tooth.')

In composition, tooth.

ODONTOBOTHRI'TIS, Odontophatni'tis, Inflamma'tio alveolo'rum, (odontobothrium, and itis.)

Inflammation of the alveoli.

ODONTOBOTHRIUM, (odonto, and βόθριον, 'a small pit.')

Alveolus.

ODONTOCERAM'IC, Odontoceram'icus, (odonto, and κεραμικός, 'potters' earth.')

Relating or appertaining to porcelain teeth;—as the 'odontoceram'ic art,' Odontoc'er'amotech'ny, the art of making porcelain teeth.

ODONTOCERAMOTECHNY, see Odontoceram'ic.

ODONTOCLA'SIS, (odonto, and κλάσις, 'fracture.')

Fractura den'tis. Fracture of a tooth.

ODONTOG'ENY, Odontogen'ia, Odonto'sis, (odonto, and γενεσις, 'generation.')

Generation or mode of development of the teeth.

ODONTOGLYPHON, (ὀδοντογλύφον, from odonto, and γλύφειν, 'to hollow.')

Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOGLYPHUM, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOG'RAPHY, Odontogra'phia, (odonto, and γράφω, 'a description.')

A description of the teeth.

ODONT'OID, (ὀδοντοειδής.) Odontoï'des, Odonto'des, Dentiform'is, Denta'lis, Dentoides, Pyrenoides, (odonto, and εἶδος, 'shape, resemblance.')

An epithet given to the Processus dentatus of the second vertebra or axis.

ODONTOID LIG'AMENTS, Ligamen'ta ala'ria seu Mauchar'ti, (F.) Ligaments odontoidiens, are two strong and short conical fasciuli, whose truncated summits embrace the sides of the odontoid process, and whose bases are fixed in the fossæ at the inner side of the condyles of the occipital bone. Their direction is obliquely outwards and slightly upwards. They enter into the composition of the occipito-axis articulation, strengthen the junction of the head with the vertebral column, and limit the movement of rotation of the atlas on the axis.

Other ligamentous fibres pass from the highest portion of the processus dentatus to the anterior margin of the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, constituting the Ligamentum suspensorium dent'is.

ODONTOID PROCESS, see Axis.

ODONTOLITHUS, (F.) Odontolithe, (odonto, and λίθος, 'a stone.') A sort of incrustation of a yellowish colour, which forms at the coronæ of the teeth, and is called Tar'tar, Tar'tarus Dentitium, Odont'ia incrus'tans, Cal'culus dent'al'is, (F.) Tartre des dents, T. dentaire. It consists of seventy-nine parts of phosphate of lime, twelve and a half of mucus, one of a particular salivary matter, and seven and a half of animal substance, soluble in chlorohydric acid. A species of infusoria, Dentic'ola hom'inis, has been found in it.

ODONTOL'OGY, Odontolog'ia, (odonto, and λογος, 'a discourse.') A treatise on the teeth.

ODONTOLOXIA, (odonto, and λοξος, 'oblique.') Odontoparallaxis.

ODONTONECROSIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOPARALLAX'IS, Odontolox'ia, (odonto, and παράλλαξις, 'deviation.') Irregularity and obliquity of the teeth, (Prov.) Snaggle teeth.

ODONTOPHATNE, (odonto, and φάτη, 'a crib, a stall.') Alveolus.

ODONTOPHAINITIS, (odontophatne, and itis.) Odontobothritis.

ODONTOPHYIA, (οδοντοφυια, from odonto, and φυω, 'to grow.') Dentition.

ODONTOPLEROSIS, (odonto, and πληρωω, 'I fill.') See Filling.

ODONTOPRISIS, (odonto, and πρισσις, 'gnashing of teeth.') Brygmus, Stridor dentium.

ODONTORRHIZA, (odonto, and ρίζα, 'root.') See Tooth.

ODONTOSEY'SIS, Odontoseis'mus, Dentitium ecacillan'tia, (odonto, and σεισις, 'shaking.') Loose-ness of the teeth.

ODONTOSISMUS, Odontoseisis.

ODONTOSIS, Dentition, Odontogeny.

ODONTOSMEGMA, (οδοντοσμηγμα, from odonto, and σμηγμα, 'a detersive substance.') Dentifrice.

ODONTOSPHACELISIS, (odonto, and σφακελις, 'gangrene.') Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSPHACELISMUS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSTERE'SIS, (odonto, and στερησις, 'privation.') Loss of the teeth.

ODONTOSTERNISM'US, (odonto, and στερνισμ'ος, 'to strike together.') (F.) Claquement. Chattering of the teeth.

ODONTOTECHNY, (odonto, and τεχνη, 'art.') Dentistry.

ODONTOTHECA, (odonto, and θηκη, 'a sheath.') Dental follicle.

ODONTOTHÈQUE, Dental follicle.

ODONTOTHERAPIA, (odonto, and θεραπεια, 'healing.') Dentistry.

ODONTOTHRYP'SIS, Odontotripsis.

ODONTOTRIMMA, gen. Odontotrim'matie, (odonto, and τριβω, 'to rub.') Dentifrice.

ODONTOTRIP'SIS, Odontotryp'sis, Abra'sio dentitium, (F.) Usure des Dents, (odonto, and τριβις, 'friction.') Abrasion or wearing away of the teeth.

ODONTOTRYPY, Odonttrypy.

ODONTTRYPY, Odontotrypy, Odontotryp'ia, (odonto, and τριψω, 'I perforate.') The operation of perforating a tooth to evacuate purulent matter confined in the cavity of the pulp.

ODOR, gen. Odo'ris, Odour.

ODORAMENTUM, (from odor.) Odoriferum.

ODORANT, see Odour.

ODORAT, Olfaction.

ODORATIO, Olfaction.

ODORATUS, Olfaction — o. Deperditus, Anosmia.

ODORIFEROUS GLANDS, see Sebaceous glands.

ODORIFERUM, (odor, and fero, 'I carry;') Odoramen'tum. A medicine that gives odour or flavour. A scent. A perfume.

ODOROUS, see Odour.

ODOS, ('odos,) Way.

O'DOUR, O'dor, Od'mē, Os'mē, (F.) Odeur. A smell. Odours are subtle particles, constantly escaping from the surface of certain bodies hence called odor'ous, (F.) Odorant. They act, in some manner, by actual contact with the nerves of the Schneiderian membrane, and give occasion to the sense of smell or olfaction.

ODOUS, ('odos, gen. odos'ros.) see Teeth.

OD'YNE, (odynē, 'pain.') Do'lor, Odyne'ma. A very common suffix to words; as in Pleurodynē.

ODYNEMA, gen. Odyne'matis, (odynēma.) Odyne.

ODYNEPHO'BIA, (odyne, and φοβω, 'I fear,') Fear or dread of pain.

ODYNODES, ('odynōdes,) Painful.

ODYNOPOET'IC, Odynopoe'ticus, Dolorif'icus, Dolorif'ic, (F.) Odynopoe'tique, Dolorif'ique, (odyne, and ποιω, 'to make,') Causing pain.

ŒCIOMANIA, Oikeioma'nia, (oikeios, 'belonging to a household or family,' and mania.) A form of moral insanity, characterized by domestic perversity.

ŒCONOMIA, (oikonomia, from oikos, 'a house,' and νομος, 'law,') Economy — œ. Animalis, Physiology.

ŒDALICUS, (œdew, 'to swell,') Edematous.

ŒDALIUS, (œdalios.) Edematous.

ŒDE'MA, gen. Œde'matis, (œdēma, 'a swelling,') Hydrom'cus, Œdemat'ia, Hydrom'cus, Hydaton'cus, Hydroœdēma, Hydredēma, Hy'drops cellula'ris ar'tium, Phlegma'tia, Leucophlegma'tia, E-phy'ma œdemat'icm, (F.) Œdème, Œdématis, Enflure. Swelling produced by the accumulation of a serous fluid in the interstices of the areolar texture. This swelling is soft; yields under the finger; preserves the impression for some time, and is pale and without pain. It presents the same characters as anasarca, which is general œdema. Its etiology and treatment are also the same. See Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ACUTUM, see Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ARSENICAL'IS. The swelling of the eyelids and face, induced by continued use of the preparations of arsenic.

ŒDEMA CALIDUM, see Anasarca — œ. Capitis Hydrocephalus externus.

ŒDEMA CEREBRI, (F.) Œdème du cerveau.

Œdema of the brain. A condition of the cerebral pulp, in which there is an infiltration of serous fluid into it, so that it appears more moist or watery than common; and, when sliced or pressed, small drops of water are seen to ooze out.

ŒDEMA COMPACT, Induration of the cellular tissue — œ. Cruentum, Suggillation — œ. Febrile, see Anasarca — œ. Fugax, Anathymiasis.

ŒDEMA OF THE GLOTTIS, Œ. glottidis, Œdem'atous Laryngit'is or angi'na, Laryngit'is embucco'sa seu œdemat'osa seu seropurulent'a, Hy'drops glottidis, Angi'na aquo'sa seu larynge'a œdemat'osa, Submuc'osa Laryngit'is, (F.) Laryngite œdémateuse, L. œdémateuse et séro-purulente ou sub-glottique ou œm-muqueuse, Angine laryngée œdémateuse, Œdème de la glotte. A disease consisting of serous or seropurulent infiltration into the submucous tissue of the lottis. The symptoms resemble those of croup; but the disease attacks the adult rather than the child. The age is, indeed, a principal means of diagnosis between the two affections.

The disease is almost always fatal. The treatment has to vary according to the accompanying general symptoms.

ŒDEMA HYSTERICUM, Anathymiasis.

ŒDEMA LACTEUM, Phlegmatia dolens.

ŒDEMA OF THE LUNGS, Œ. pulmōnum, Pneumoch'ysis, Pneumonœdēma, Hy'drops seu anasar'ca Pulmōnum, Hydropneumōnia, (F.) Œdème du Pommou. Laënnec has so called the infiltration of serum into the tissue of the lung, carried to such an extent as to diminish its permeability to air. It is not an uncommon sequela of pneumonia, and the major exanthemata. The respiration is laborious; the respiratory murmur scarcely perceptible, although the thorax is largely expanded, and there is a slight râle crépissant, particularly at the base and inferior part of the lung. The sound on percussion is clear, and on both sides equally so. The cough is attended with aqueous expectoration. In some cases the respiration becomes perire in a small portion of the summit of the lung.

ŒDEMA NEONATORUM, Induration of the cellular tissue — œ. Palpebrarum, Hydroblepharon — œ. Puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens — œ. Pulmonum, Œdema of the lungs — œ. Pulmonum chronicum, Hydropneumonia — œ. Scroti aqouum, Oschydœdema — œ. Scroti eruentum, Oschœmatœdema — œ. Scroti purulentum, Oscheopyœdema — œ. Scroti urinosum, Urocele — œ. Spaticum, Anathymiasis — œ. Uvulae, Staphylœdema.

ŒDEMATIA, Œdema.

ŒDÉMATIE, Œdema.

ŒDEMATOSARCA, Œdemosarca.

ŒDEMATOSCHEOCELÉ, Œdemoschoecelê, Oscheocelê œdemat'ica. Oscheocele with œdema of the serotum.

ŒDEM'ATOUS, Œdemato'sus, Œdemat'icus, Œdemato'des, Œdal'ius, Œdal'icus, Edem'atous, (F.) Œdémateux. Affected with œdema, (F.) Œdématic; of the nature of œdema.

ŒDÈME, Œdema — œ. du Cerveau, Œdema cerebri — œ. Douloureuse des femmes en couche, Phlegmatia dolens — œ. de la Glotte, Angina œdemata, Œdema of the glottis — œ. des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens — œ. actif des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens — œ. du Tissu cellulaire des nouveau-nés, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ŒDEMOSAR'CA, (œdema, and σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') Œdematosar'ca. A species of tumour mentioned by M. A. Severinus, which holds a middle place between œdema and sarcoma.

ŒDEMOSCHEOCELE, Œdematoschoecele.

ŒIL, (oculus,) Eye — œ. de Bonif, Anthemis tinctoria — œ. Double, Binoculus — œ. de Lièvre, Lagophthalmus — œ. Simple, see Monoculus.

ŒILLET GIROFLÉE, Dianthus caryophyllus.

ŒILLIÈRE, (from œil,) Scaphium oculare.

ŒNIS'THE, Œ. crocata the cheryophyll'li fo'lis, Hem'lock drop'wort, Hem'lock water drop'wort. Nat. Ord. Umbelliferae. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, (œnos, and αιδος, 'a flower,') its flowers smelling like the vinc. A violent poison of the acro-narcotic class. Its juice has been recommended in certain cutaneous diseases; but it is scarcely ever used. It is employed in fomentations.

ŒNANTHE AQUATICA, Phellandrium aquaticum — œ. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum — œ. Striata rigida, Seseli tortuosum.

ŒNELÆ'ON, (œnos, and ελαιον, 'oil,') A mixture of oil and wine. Also, rectified spirit or alcohol.

ŒNODES, (οινωδης, from œnos, and odes,) Vinous.

ŒNOG'ALA, gen. Œnogalac'tis, (οινογαλα, from œnos, and γαλα, 'milk,') — 'a mixture of wine and milk,') According to some, wine as warm as new milk.

ŒNOG'ARON, Garum vino mistum. Wine mixed with garum.

ŒNOIDES, (οινοειδης, from œnos, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Vinous, Winelike.

ŒNOLATURE, (from œnos,) see Vinum.

ŒNOLÉ, see Vinum.

ŒNOLOTIF (F.). A name given by M. Bérat to a medicine intended for external use, whose excipient is wine.

ŒNOMA'NIA, Oinomania, (œnos, and mania,) Delirium tremens. Properly, wine-mania An insatiable desire for intoxicating liquors.

Œ'NOMEL, Œnom'eli, (œnos, and μελι, 'honey,') Mel vino'sum, Mul'sum V'ino'sum. Honey wine. Wine mead. See Hydromel.

ŒNOPHLYGIA, (οινοφλυγία, from œnos, and φλυω, 'to overflow,') Temulentia.

ŒNOPHLYXIS, (οινοφλυξίς,) Temulentia

ŒNOS, (œnos,) Wine.

ŒNOSTAGMA, gen. Œnostag'matis, (œnos, and σταζω, 'to distil,') Spiritus vini rectificatas.

ŒNOTHE'RA BIEN'NIS, (œnos, and θηρ, 'wild,') (?) Œ. Mollis'sima seu murica'ta seu gan'roides, On'agra, Even'ing Prim'rose, Tree Prim'rose, Prim'rose tree, Cweall, Scab'bish. An indigenous plant, common on the borders of fields, and in natural hedges. Ord. Onogrææ. Sex. Syst. Octandria Monogynia. Its properties are most laginous and slightly acid. A decoction has been used in cases of infantile and other eruptions.

ŒNOTHERA GAUROIDES, Œ. biennis — œ. Muricata, Œ. biennis.

ŒSOPHAGE, Œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGE'AL, or ŒSOPHAG'EAL, Œsophag'eus, (from œsophagus,) (F.) Œsophagien. Relating or belonging to the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE DI'APHRAGM, Fora'meu œsophage'um, (F.) Overture œsophagienne du diaphragme. An opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE STOM'ACH. A name given to the superior or cardiac orifice of the stomach, to distinguish it from the inferior or pyloric. See Cardia.

ŒSOPHAGEAL MUS'CLE, Œsophag'eus. Some anatomists have given this name to the transverse muscular fibres which surround the œsophagus at its upper extremity.

ŒSOPHAGEAL TUBE, see Tube, œsophageal.

ŒSOPHAGEURYS'MA, gen. Œsophageurys'matis, (Œsoph'agus succenturia'tus, (œsophagus, and ευρυσμα, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGIALGIA, (œsophagus, and αλγος, 'pain,') Œsophagismus.

ŒSOPHAGIARTICIA, (œsophagus, and arctare, 'to make narrow,') Dysphagia constricta.

ŒSOPHAGIEN, Œsophageal — œ. (muscle), Constrictor Œsophagi.

ŒSOPHAGIS'MUS, Œsophagis'mum, Spasm of the œsophagus, Dysph'agia Spasmod'ica seu Spas'tica seu Nerv'osa, Strict'ra œsoph'agi spasmod'ica, Œsophagial'gia, Œsophagospas'mus, Tenes'mus Gut'tæ, (F.) Ténème de l'œsophage. By some used synonymously with œsophagitis, dysphagia, and contraction of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGITIS, Angi'na seu Cyan'chè œsophag'e'a, Dysph'agia inflammato'ria, Inflammatio œsoph'agi seu Gut'tæ, (F.) Œsophagite, Angine œsophagienne, (œsophagitis, and itis,) Inflammation of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGODYN'IA, (œsophagus, and δύνη, 'pain,') Pain in the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOPATHI'A, Mor'bus Œsoph'agi, (œsophagus, and παθος, 'affection,') A morbid condition of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOPL'EGIA, Dysph'agia paralyt'ica, Lætoparaly'sis, (œsophagus, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Paralysis of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGORRHAG'IA, (œsophagus, and ῥαγη, 'a rupture,') Hemorrhage from the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGORRHŒ'A, (œsophagus, and ῥεω, 'I flow,') Discharge of blood or mucus from the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOSPAS'MUS, (œsophagus, and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Spasm of the œsophagus.

ŒSOPHAGOSTENOMA, (œsophagus, στεγος, 'narrow,' and oma.) Dysphagia constricta.

ŒSOPHAGOTOMY, (Œsophagotomia) (F.) Œsophagotomie, (œsophagus, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.') An incision made into the œsophagus for the purpose of extracting foreign bodies from it.

ŒSOPHAGUS, (œsophagus, from œis, future œisw; I carry,' and φαγω, 'I eat;') Gu'ta, Fistula cibalis, Fistula seu Infundibulum Ventriculi, Vitæ stom'achi et ventris, Glut'us, (F.) Œsophage. The Gullet. A musculomembranous canal, cylindrical, and depressed from before to behind, which extends from the inferior extremity of the pharynx to the upper orifice of the stomach. At its origin, it is situate in the median line; but beneath the larynx, it deviates to the left, and in the chest experiences different reflections. In its cervical portion, it corresponds, behind, with the spine; before, with the larynx and trachea; and, at the sides, it is close to the primitive carotids, internal jugular veins, par vagum, recurrent nerves, &c. In its inferior or thoracic portion, the œsophagus is entirely contained in the posterior mediastinum; and enters the abdomen through the œsophageal aperture, Foramen œsophageum, of the diaphragm. The œsophagus is composed of a very strong muscular layer, sometimes called Tunica vaginalis gut'tis; formed, itself, of two sets of fibres, the external being generally longitudinal, the internal transverse or annular; and of a mucous membrane which is soft, fine, thin, and white, especially at its lower part. It is continuous, above, with the mucous membrane of the pharynx. The mucous follicles, found beneath it, are not numerous, and have been called Œsophageal glands. The arteries of the œsophagus proceed, in the neck, from the thyroid; in the chest, from the bronchial arteries and directly from the aorta;—in the abdomen, from the inferior phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its veins empty themselves into the inferior thyroid, the vena cava superior, the internal mammary, azygos, bronchial, phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its lymphatics pass into the ganglia surrounding it. Its nerves are afforded by the pharyngeal and pulmonary plexuses; by the cardiac nerves; the thoracic ganglia, and, especially, by the pneumogastries and their recurrent branches.

ŒSOPHAGUS SUCCENTURIATUS, Pharyngocele. ŒSTROMANIA, (œstros, 'imperious erotic impulse,' and mania), Nymphomania.

ŒSTRUAL, Œstrualis, (from œstrum.) Appertaining or relating to orgasm, especially venereal orgasm.

ŒSTRUATION, see Heat.

ŒSTRUM, Clitoris, Orgasm.

ŒSTRUM VENÆRIS, Œ. venereum, Œstrus venereus; (œstros, œstrus, 'imperious erotic impulse.')

A vehement desire for sexual intercourse. Orgasm. With some, œstrum signifies Clitoris.

ŒSTRUS, (œstros), Clitoris, Orgasm, see Ectozoa—œ. Venereus, Œstrum venereum.

ŒSYMPUS, (œsymtos, from œis, 'a sheep.')

The greasy matter of unwashed wool; formerly employed in friction in diseased joints.

ŒUF, Ovum, Œ. de De Graaf, Folliculi Graafiani—œ. de Naboth, Nabothi glandule.

OFFICE, PHYSICIAN'S or SURGEON'S, Iatronic.

OFFICINA, for Opificina, (from opifex, (opus, and facio), 'a workman,') 'a shop,' Pharmacoopolium.

OFFICINAL, Officinalis. An epithet for medicines found in the shop of the apothecary, ready prepared—usualia; in opposition to magistral or extemporaneous,—those prepared after the prescription of the physician.

OFFIUM, Affion, Opium.

OFFSPRING, Epigone.

OFFUSCATIO, (of, for ob, and fuscare, 'to make dark,') Amaurosis.

OGLA, Ougala.

OGNON or OIGNON, (from unio), Allium cepa, a Corn—o. Marin, Seilla.

OH'IO, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Yel'low Spring is a chalybeate, situate in Greene county, 64 miles from Cincinnati. It is somewhat frequented.

OLD, Oi'des, (œidōs, from εἶδος, 'form, resemblance.')

A suffix, denoting 'resemblance,' as in ethmoid, sphenoid, &c.

IDIUM ABORTIFACIENS, (ovon, 'an egg,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') see Ergot—o. Albicans, Aphthaphyte—o. Schoenleini, see Porrigo favosa.

OIE, Sorbus domestica.

OIGNON, Oignon.

OIKEIOMANIA, Œciomania.

OIKIOMIASMATA, Oikeiomasmata, (from οἶκος, belonging to a household and miasmata.) Morbific emanations from domestic sources.

OIL, ([Sax.] œl), O'leum, Elæon, (F.) Huile; (from λατα, 'the olive.')

A collective name, under which two classes of fluids are included, very different from each other: those belonging to the one class, are viscid, mawkish, or almost insipid; those of the other are nearly devoid of viscosity, and are caustic and very volatile. The former are called fat or fixed oils; the latter volatile or essential oils or essences.

OKEN'S BODY, Corpus Wolffianum.

OKRA, Hibiscus esculentus.

OLD AGE, Senectus.

OLD MAN, Artemisia abrotanum.

OLD WIFE'S SHIRT, Liriodendron.

O'LEA ANIMA'LIA, Animal oils, (F.) Huiles animales. A name given to fixed oils holding in solution the mucilaginous and gelatinous principles of certain animals, as the Oil of frogs, Oil of scorpions, Oil of spiders, &c. Sometimes, also, the term animal oils is given to empyreumatic oils, produced during the decomposition of animal substances by heat.

OLEA DESTILLATA, O. Volatilia.

OLEA EMPYREUMATICA, Empyreumatic oils, (F.) Huiles empyreumatiques ou pyrogénées, Pyréolines. Oils which have an empyreumatic or burnt smell. They are obtained by treating vegetable or animal matters by heat, in close vessels. They do not exist in organized bodies, but are formed during their decomposition by fire. The animal oil of Dippel is an empyreumatic oil.

OLEA, O. Europæa, O. sativa seu lanceifolia seu polymorpha seu Gallica, Olivea, Ofice tree, Elaea, (F.) Olivier; (Fruit) Olive. Nat. Ord. Jasminæ. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. The leaves of the olive are bitter, and an extract prepared from them, and a substance called oliverina, the bitter principle of the leaves, have been given in Italy as antiperiodics. The fruit, when pickled, is extremely grateful to some stomachs. Olives, as met with in the shops, are prepared from the green, unripe fruit, repeatedly steeped in water. To this, some quicklime or alkaline salt is added, and, afterwards, they are washed and preserved in a pickle of common salt and water. From this fruit is prepared the Olive oil or Salad oil of the Pharmacopœias, which is obtained by grinding and pressing the olives, when thoroughly ripe. The finer and purer oil issues first by gentle pressure, and the inferior sort on heating what is left, and pressing it more strongly. See Oleum Olivæ. In Calabria, an odorous resin exudes from its trunk, which is employed as a perfume by the Neapolitans.

A gum flows from certain wild olives, in warm countries, which consists, according to Pelletier, of a resin, a little benzoic acid, and a peculiar substance, called Olivite. It is in yellow masses, of a slightly acrid taste, and of a vanilla smell. It is called O'lea gummi, O. resinæ, and O. balsamum, (F.) Gomme olivier, and is esteemed astringent and detersive.

OLEA FIXA SEU PIN'GUA, Expressed, Fixed or Fatty oils, (F.) Huiles fixes ou grasses, Oléols. All the oils obtained from the seeds or pericarps of vegetables, without distillation, and which are viscid, but slightly odorous and sapid; lighter than water, and insoluble in alcohol. The rancidity of oils depends on the absorption of oxygen, and therefore they should be kept in bulk as much as possible, and in narrow-necked bottles, so that a very small surface only can be exposed to the air. All the fixed oils are emollient, and, in a certain dose, they act as purgatives and emetics. They are prepared by expressing the fruit or seed containing them.

OLEA FUGA'CIA, Fugacious oils, (F.) Huiles fugaces. A name given to oils which are so volatile that, in order to obtain them, recourse must be had to a different process from that employed for other essential oils. Such are the oils of jessamine, lily, violet, &c.

OLEA GALICA, O. Europæa—o. Lancifolia, O. Europæa.

OLEA MEDICINA'LIA, Medicinal oils, (F.) Huiles Médicinales, E'folés, Solutions parles huiles. A name given to oils prepared by macerating, infusing or boiling medicinal substances in olive or any other fixed oil. These oils may then be regarded as oily solutions of certain medicinal substances; whence they can never be simple. They have, however, been divided into simple and compound medicinal oils. To the former belong the Oils of St. John's wort, of the Solanum nigrum, &c.; to the other—which have often been called Oily balsams, (F.) Baumes huileux—the Balsams of Fioraventi, Metz, &c. Medicinal oils are, almost always, employed externally.

OLEA POLYMORPHA, O. Europæa—o. Sativa, O. Europæa.

OLEA VOLATILIA, O. destillata, Ætherolea, Volatile, Ethereal, Essential, or Distilled Oils, Es'sences, (F.) Huiles volatiles ou essentielles ou distillées ou éthérées, oléolats, oléules. Oils found in aromatic vegetables, and in every part of them, except in the interior of the seeds. The majority are obtained by distillation; but some by expression. They possess unctuousity, inflammability, and viscosity, like the fixed oils; but they are generally odoriferous, pungent, and acrid. The greater part are lighter than water; but some are heavier, and congeal at a moderate temperature. They dissolve, in small quantity, in distilled water, by simple agitation. Almost all are soluble in alcohol. The odour and taste are the usual tests of their goodness. To preserve them, they should be kept in a cool place, in small bottles, quite full and well corked. Volatile oils are possessed of the aromatic properties of the plants whence they are obtained. They are all, when applied externally, stimulant and rubefacient. Pharmaceutical preparations, in which substances are dissolved in volatile oils, (F.) Solutions par les huiles volatiles, are termed by Béral, Myrolés.

OLEAG'INOUS, Oleaginous, Oleous, (F) Oléagineux; (from oleum.) Oily; containing oil,—as 'an oleaginous or oily mixture.'

OLEA'MEN, gen. Oleaminis, Oleamentum, (from oleum.) Any soft ointment prepared of oil.

OLEANDER, (from olea, 'the olive,') Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

OLECRANARTHRI'TIS, (olecranon, ἄρθρον, 'joint,' and itis.) Inflammation of the elbow joint.

OLECRANARTHROC'ACÉ, (olecranon, ἄρθρον, 'articulation,' and ακαία, 'vice or disease,') Inflammation of the articular surfaces of the elbow.

OLECRAN'IAL, (F.) Olécranien. Relating or belonging to the olecranon.

OLECRANOID CAVITY, see Ulna.

OLECRANON, Olecranon, Olecranium, (ὠλεκράνον.) Olecranon nob'ile, (F.) Oléranie, (ὠλεραν, 'the elbow,' and κρανον, 'the head,') Acrole'nion, Additamentum necatum, An'con, Processus anconæus seu uncinatus, Glanis seu Coro'na seu Coro'na post'rior seu Additamentum uncatum Ulnæ, Ver'tex Cu'biti, Patella fix'a, Ros'trum exter'nium seu post'rior, Top of the cubit. Head or protection of the elbow. A large process at the upper extremity of the ulna, on which we lean. When this process is fractured, it is apt to be drawn up by the triceps, and much care is required to keep the parts in apposition.

OLEFIANT GAS, CHLORIDE OF, see Anæsthetic.

OLEIN, (from oleum,) see Fat—o. Codliver, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

OLENE, (ὠλενη.) Ulna.

OLEOCERATUM, Cerate—o. Aquâ subac'tum, Ceratum Galeni.

OLÉO-CÉROLÉ, Cerate.

OLÉOLATS, Olea volatilia.

OLÉOLÉS, Olea volatilia.

OLÉOLS, Olea fixa.

O'LEORESIN, Oleo-resina. A resin dissolved in volatile oil. The oleo-resins are made by passing ether through the powdered drug by displac-ment, and evaporating the ether, until the liquid is of an oily consistence. They not only contain the resin but the essential oil of the drug.

OLEORESIN OF CAPSICUM, Oleoresina Capsici—o. of Cubebs, Extractum Cubebæ fluidum—o. of Ginger, Oleoresina Zingiberis—o. of Lupulin, Oleoresina Lupulina—o. of Pepper, Extractum Piperis fluidum.

OLEORESINA, Oleoresin.

OLEORESINA CAPSICI, Oleoresin of Capsicum. (Prepared by the action of ether on capsicum powder, by displacement, and evaporating the ether.)

OLEORESINA CUBEBÆ, Extractum Cubebæ fluidum.

OLEORESINA LUPULINÆ, Oleoresin of Lupulin. (Prepared like Oleoresina Capsici.)

OLEORESINA PIPERIS, Extractum Piperis fluidum.

OLEORESINA ZINGIBERIS, Oleoresin of Piperoid of Ginger. (Prepared by the action of ether and alcohol on ginger powder, by displacement, and evaporating the volatile part.) Used in the formation of ginger-drops chiefly.

OLÉOSACCHAROLE, Elæosaccharum.

OLEOSACCHARUM, Elæosaccharum.

OLEOSUS, Oleaginous.

OLERA, (pl. of olus, 'a potherb,') see Lachanon.

OLETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. At Olette, in the department Pyrénées Orientales, is a thermal spring, which raises the thermometer to 190° F. It is the hottest in France.

OLEULES, Olea volatilia.

OLEUM, (from olea, 'the olive,') Oil—o. Abietis, see Pinus picea—o. Absinthii, Artemisia absinthium, (oil of)—o. Acusticum, Huile acoustique.

OLEUM ÆTHE'REUM, Spiritus ætheris oleosus, Æthereal oil (formed in the distillation of ether), O'leum vini, Oil of wine, Heavy oil of wine, Sweet oil of vitriol, (F.) Huile douce de vin. A peculiar oleaginous matter, obtained by continuing the distillation, after the whole of the sulphuric ether has passed over in the process for the preparation of the latter. It is used only as an ingredient in the compound spirit of ether. It is official in the Ph. U. S.

OLEUM AMMONIATUM, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius.

OLEUM AMYGDALÆ AMARÆ, Oil of Bitter Almonds. An oil, obtained by distilling with water the kernels or the fruit of Amygdalus communis, variety Amaræ. Its action is like that of hydrocyanic acid—four drops having destroyed a dog. Dose, a quarter of a drop to a drop. A drop to a fluidounce of water forms a wash, which has been used in Prurigo senilis, and other forms of itching.

OLEUM AMYGDALA'RUM, Oleum amygdalæ, O. A. dulcis, (Ph. U. S. 1863,) Oil of Almonds, (F.) Huile d'amandes. (Expressed from sweet almonds, of Amygdalus communis. ℞xvj of almonds yield ℥v of oil.) It is inodorous, insipid, and of a pale straw colour, and is employed as a demulcent and emollient.

OLEUM ANACARDII, see Anacardium occidentale.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ, Animal oil, (F.) Huile animale. An oil obtained by the decomposition of the immediate principles of animals, subjected to the action of heat. It is fetid, and always contains a certain quantity of carbonate of ammonia. See Olea empyreumatica. The name animal oil is sometimes also given to the fat contained in the fatty vesicles. The composition of this fat does not, indeed, differ from that of the fixed oils.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ DIPPE'LII, O. Cor'ni Cer'vi, O.

C. C. rectificatum, O. pyroanimalē depuratum seu animalē æthereum, Pyro'leum os'sium rectificatum, Animal oil, Animal oil of Dippel, (F.) Huile animale de Dippel ou de sorne de cerf, is obtained by distilling animal matters, especially hartshorn, on the naked fire. The carbonate of ammonia, which it contains, renders it partly soluble in water, and communicates to it the stimulant properties for which it is used in medicine. It is employed as an antispasmodic.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ EMPYREUMATICUM CHABERTI, O. Emphyreumaticum seu anthelmin'ticum seu contra tæ'niam Chaberti, Emphyreumatic oil of Chabert, Oil of Chabert, (F.) Huile anthelmin'tique de Chabert, is made by adding one part of animal oil to three parts of oil of turpentine, leaving them to combine for four days, and then distilling three parts. An effective anthelmintic. Dose, a teaspoonful three times a day.

OLEUM ANIMALIZA'TUM PER INFUSIO'NEM, (F.) Huile animalisæ par infusionem, H. aromatiqua ou de petits chiens. A preparation, formerly esteemed tonic and cephalic. It was obtained by boiling new-born puppies in oil, first depriving them of their blood, skin, and intestines. When the decoction was cold, origanum, thyme, pennyroyal, St. John's wort, and marjoram were added.

OLEUM ANISI, see Pimpinella anisum—o. Anthelmin'ticum Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti—o. Anthemidis, see Anthemis nobilis—o. Aurantii, see Citrus aurantium—o. Bala-ninum, Guilandina moringa (oleum)—o. Balsami, see Amyris opobalsamum.

OLEUM BENZO'INI, Oil of Ben'zoin or Ben'jamin. An oil obtained by heating, in a sandbath, the matter which remains after benzoic acid has been separated from benzoin by the aid of heat. It has been regarded as balsamic and sudorific.

OLEUM BERGAMII, see Bergamot.

OLEUM BU'BULUM, Neat'sfoot oil, (F.) Huile de pieds de bœuf. It is obtained by boiling in water for a long time the feet or bones of the beef—Bos domesticus—previously deprived of the hoof. It is introduced into the official list of the Ph. U. S. as an ingredient of the ointment of nitrate of mercury.

OLEUM CACAO SPISSATUM, Butter of Cacao—o. Cadinum, see Juniperus oxycedrus—o. Cajuputi, Caieput (oil)—o. Camphoræ, see Camphor—o. Camphoratum, Linimentum camphoræ—o. Carapæ, see Carapa Guianensis—o. Cari seu Carui, see Carum—o. Caryophylli, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

OLEUM CED'RINUM, Essentia de cedra, (F.) Huile de cédrat. The oil of the peel of citrons, obtained in Italy in a particular manner, without distillation.

OLEUM CHABERTI, O. animale empyreumaticum Chaberti—o. Chenopodii, see Chenopodium anthelmin'ticum—o. Cicium, see Ricinus communis—o. Cinnamomi, see Laurus cinnamomum—o. Contra Tæ'niam Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti.

OLEUM COPAI'BÆ, Oil of Copai'ba, (Copaib. ℞xij; Agnæ, Oxyj. Distil three gallons; separate the oil; return the water to the copai'ba, and again distil three gallons. Separate the oil, and add it to the other. Ph. U. S.) Dose, grt. x to xxx.

OLEUM CORNU CERVI, O. animale Dippelii—o. Cubebæ, see Piper cubeba.

OLEUM ERIGERON'TIS CANADENSIS, Oil of Canada Fleabane. (By distillation from the herb.)

OLEUM EUPHORBIE LATHYRIDIS, see Euphorbia lathyris—o. Fixum nucum cocos butyracæ, see Cocos butyracæ—o. Fœniculi, see Anethum—o. Gabanum, Petroleum—o. Gallinæ, Alkalæ—o. Gaultheriæ, see Gaultheria—o. Hedecome, see Hedeoma pulegioides—o. Hyperici, see Hypericeum perforatum — o. Infernale, Jatropha curcas (oil).

OLEUM GRAMINIS INDICI, Grass oil of Nemaour, Gingergrass oil, Rosa oil; called, by the perfumers, oil of geranium, and oil of rose geranium, and occasionally sold as oil of spikenard, is obtained from Andropogon calamis aromaticus of India. It is used as a perfume, and like the essential oils in general.

OLEUM JECINORIS ASELLI, Oleum jecoris aselli.

OLEUM JECORIS ASELLI, O. Morrhua (Ph. U. S.) seu Jecoris Morrhua seu Jecoris aselli, Acun'gia Ga'di, A. Piscina marina, Cod'liver oil, Cod oil, (F.) Huile de morue ou de Foie de morue. The animal oil, which appears under this name in commerce, is obtained from several of the species belonging to the genus Gadus. The Cod, Gadus morrhua (Ph. B. 1864); the Dorse or Dorsch, Gadus Callarias, Morrhua America'na; the Coalfish, Gadus carbonarius; the Burbot, Gadus lota, Lo'ta vulgari's; the Pollock, Gadus pallasius; the Ling, Lo'ta molva; the Torsk, Bros'mius vulgari's. There is reason also to believe, that on the American coast it is obtained, too, from the Hake, Gadus merluccius, and the Haddock, Gadus oglin'us. The clearest sorts are generally used. An excellent eutrophic, in tuberculous and strumous affections, rheumatism, chronic cutaneous diseases, tumours of the mammae, &c. The dose for an adult is from fʒij to fʒiiss.

Codliver oil, prepared by subjecting codliver oil to a low temperature and separating the olein by pressure, has been used in the same cases as the oil.

Squaliter oil, Oleum ra'ie, obtained from Ra'ia batis and R. clava'ta, is used in the same cases and doses.

OLEUM JECORIS MORRHUE, Oleum jecoris aselli — o. Juniperi, see Juniperis communis — o. Juniperi empyreumaticum, see Juniperus oxycedrus — o. de Kervâ, see Ricinus communis — o. Kervidum, see Ricinus communis.

OLEUM LAURINUM, O. laur'i, Daphnelæon, Oil of boys. An oil obtained from bayberries, and sometimes used in sprains and bruises, unattended with inflammation. See Unguentum laurinum.

OLEUM LAVANDULE, see Lavandula — o. Lentiscinum, Schinelæon — o. Limonis, see Citrus medica — o. Lini, see Linum usitatissimum — o. Lini cum calce, Lini mentum aque calcis.

OLEUM LUCII PISCIS, Oil of Pike. From the liver of the Esox lucius an oil is spontaneously separated, which is used in some countries to remove specks on the cornea.

OLEUM MACIDIS, see Myristica.

OLEUM MALABATHRI, see Malabathrum — o. Mariae, see Fagara octandra — o. Martis, see Ferri chloridum — o. Mastichinum, see Pistacia lentiscus — o. Melaleuce leucodendri, Caieput (oil) — o. Menthae piperitee, see Mentha piperita — o. Menthae viridis, see Mentha viridis — o. Monarda, Monarda punctata — o. Morrhua, O. jecoris aselli.

OLEUM MYRISTICÆ, see Myristica moschata — o. Myristicæ expressum, see Myristica — o. Neroli, see Citrus aurantium — o. Nucistæ, see Myristica — o. Nucistæ æthereum, see Myristica.

OLEUM OLIVÆ, O. Olivarum, Ol'ive or Sal'ad oil. An inodorous, insipid, and transparent oil; obtained by expression from the olive, when ripe. It is demulcent and emollient, — possessing the qualities of the fixed oils in general.

An inferior kind, obtained by boiling olives in water, and skimming the oil from the surface, is also used in Pharmacy. See Olea Europæa.

OLEUM OMPHACINUM, Omotribes — o. Origani, see Origanum — o. Oxydi cupri viride, Balsam, green, of Metz — o. de Palma Christi, see Ricinus communis — o. Palmae, see Cocos butyracea — o. Palmae liquidum, see Ricinus communis — o. Petræ, Petroleum — o. Petræ album, Naphtha — o. Picinum, Brutia, Pisselæum — o. Pimenta, see Myrtus pimenta — o. Pini purissimum, O. terebinthinæ rectificatum — o. Pulegii, see Mentha pulegium — o. Pyro-animale, O. animale Dipellii — o. Raie, see Oleum jecoris aselli — o. Ricini, see Ricinus communis — o. Rosæ, see Rosa centifolia — o. Rosarum, Rhodelæon — o. Rosmarini, see Rosmarinus — o. Rutæ, Peganelæon — o. Rutæ, see Ruta — o. Sabinae, see Juniperus Sabina — o. Sassafras, see Laurus sassafras — o. Sesami, see Sesamum orientale — o. Sinapis, see Sinapis — o. Spicæ, see Lavandula spica — o. Spicæ vulgaris, O. terebinthinæ — o. Succini, see Succinum — o. Succinum rectificatum, see Succinum.

OLEUM SULPHURATUM, Balsamum sulphuris eim'plex, Sulph'uretted oil. (Sulphur, lot. ʒij; Ol. olivæ, ℥j. Heat the oil in a large iron pot, and throw in the sulphur by degrees; stirring the mixture after each addition till they unite.) It is stimulating, and was formerly much used in coughs, asthma, &c., and externally, to foul ulcers.

OLEUM TABACI, Oil of Tobacco. In the form of ointment, (gtt. xx to ʒij of lard,) applied to indolent tumours, ulcers, &c. (An empyreumatic oil, obtained from coarsely powdered tobacco by heating the retort to dull redness.—Ph. U. S.)

OLEUM TARTARI PER DELIQUITUM, Liquor potassæ subcarbonatis — o. Templinum, see Pinus mughos.

OLEUM TEREBINTHINÆ, Oil of Tur'pentine. The volatile oil distilled from the turpentine of pinus palustris, and other species of pinus.

OLEUM TEREBINTHINÆ RECTIFICATUM, O. pinis puris simum O. T. purificatum seu terebinthinæ æthereum, Rectified oil of tur'pentine, Sp. of tur'pentine. Common oil of turpentine is also called Common oil of Spike, Oleum spicæ vulgari's. (Olei terebinth. Oj; Aquæ, Oiv. Distil over the oil.) It is stimulant, diuretic, anthelmintic, and rubefacient. Dose, gtt. x to fʒj.

Guestonian Embrocation for rheumatism consists of Ol. terebinth., Ol. oliv. ʒā fʒiiss; Acid. sulph. dil. fʒij.

OLEUM THEOBROMÆ CACAO EXPRESSUM, Butter of cacao — o. Thymi, see Thymus — o. Tiglii, see Croton tiglium.

OLEUM VALERIANÆ, Oil of Valerian. The distilled oil of the root of Valeriana officinalis. — Ph. U. S. Dose, four or five drops.

OLEUM VINI, O. æthereum — o. Vitrioli, Sulphuric acid — o. Vitrioli dulcis, Æther sulphuricus.

OLFACTIF, Olfactory.

OLFACTION, Olfactus, (olfacere, olfactum, (olere, 'to smell,' and facere, 'to make,') 'to smell,') Osphræ'tis, Osphræ'ria, Osphræ'ria, Osmæ'ria, Odo'ratio, Odo'ratio, Sensus osmometricus, Sensus of smell, Smell'ing. (F.) Odo'rat. The sense by which we perceive the impressions made on the olfactory nerves by the odorous particles suspended in the atmosphere. The olfactory nerve or first pair has usually been considered the great nerve of smell; and it is probably the nerve of special sensibility, general sensibility being communicated by the branches of the fifth pair, distributed on the pituitary membrane of the nose and sinuses.

OLFACTIVE, Olfactory.

OLFACTORY, Olfac'tive, Olfac'tivus, Olfac'torius, Osphran'ticus, Osphran'tivus, Osphræ'ticus, (F.) Olfac'tif. That which belongs to or relates to the sense of smell.

OLFACTORY BULB, see Olfactory nerves.

OLFACTORY FORAMINA, (F.) Trous olfactifs, are the holes in the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, through which the olfactory nerve passes.

OLFACTORY GANGLION, see Olfactory nerves—o. Lobe, see Olfactory nerves.

OLFACTORY NERVES, Ethmoidal nerves, Parietum Nervorum cerebri, Nervi odoratorii. Processus mamillares seu papillares seu mamillares cerebri ad nares seu papillares, Carunculæ mamillares,—the first pair of encephalic nerves. This nerve, which probably arises from the medulla oblongata, is observed to leave the brain, opposite the inner part of the fissure of Sylvius, by three roots; which, by their union, form a triangular knot or expansion. When it reaches the ethmoid fossa it expands and forms a triangular ganglion, or grayish, soft bulb, — Bulbus olfactorius, Olfactory bulb, ganglion, tubercle, or lobe,—which furnishes, from its inferior surface, the branches that have to be distributed to the nasal fossæ. These filaments are numerous; they pass through the foramina in the cribriform plate and enter the nasal fossæ. They are distinguished into the internal, external, and middle. The former are distributed over the mucous membrane, covering the outer paries of the nasal fossæ; the second descend upon the septum, and the third are lost, almost immediately, on the portion of the pituitary membrane that lines the vault of the fossæ.

OLFACTORY TUBERCLE, see Olfactory nerves.

OLFACTUS, gen. Olfactûs, Olfaction—o. Acutus, Hyperosphresia—o. Amissio, Anosmia—o. Deficiens, Anosmia—o. Depravatus, Parosmia.

OLIBANUM, (from λίβανος, 'the frankincense tree' [?]), see Juniperus lycia—o. Arabicum, see Juniperus lycia—o. Indicum, see Juniperus lycia—o. Sylvestre, see Pinus abies—o. Vulgare, see Pinus abies.

OLIGÆMIA, (oligo, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Anæmia, Hæmaphoria, Hypæmia.

OLIGIDRIA, (oligo, and ἔρως, 'sweat,') Ischidrosis.

OLIGO, (from ὀλιγός, 'few, little,') in composition has these significations.

OLIGOBLEN'NIA, (oligo, and βλεννα, 'mucus,') A deficiency of mucus.

OLIGOCOL'IA, (oligo, and χολη, 'bile,') Paucity of bile.

OLIGOC'H'YLUS, (oligo, and χυλός, 'juice, 'chyle,') An epithet for food which is but little nutritive; which furnishes little chyle.

OLIGOCOP'RIA, (oligo, and κοπρος, 'excrement,') Scantiness of alvine evacuations.

OLIGOCYTHÆ'MIA. (oligo, κύτος, 'a cell, and 'αἷμα, 'blood,') A condition of the blood in which there is paucity of red corpuscles.

OLIGODAC'RYA, (oligo, and δακρυή, 'a tear,') Paucity of the lachrymal secretion.

OLIGOGALACTIA, (oligo, and γαλαξ, gen. γαλακτός, 'milk,') Agalactia.

OLIGOGALIA, Agalactia.

OLIGOHÆMIA, (oligo, and 'αἷμα, 'blood,') Anæmia, Hæmaphoria, Hypæmia.

OLIGOMANIA, (oligo, and mania,) see Melancholy.

OLIGOPO'SIA, (oligo, and ποσις, 'drink,') Diminution in the quantity of drinks.

OLIGOPSYCHIA, (oligo, and ψυχη, 'mind,') Imbecility.

OLIGOSIA'LIA, (oligr and σάλων, 'saliva,') Paucity of saliva.

OLIGOSPER'MIA, (oligo, and σπερμα, 'sperm,') Paucity of spermatic secretion.

OLIGOSPOND'YLUS, (oligo, and σπονδυλός, 'a vertebra,') A monster with defective vertebrae.

OLIGOTRICH'IA, (oligo, and τριχός, gen. τριχός, 'hair,') Want of hair. Paucity of hair.

OLIGOTROPH'IA, Par'cior nutrit'io, (oligo, and τροφή, 'I nourish,') Deficient nourishment.

OLIGURE'SIA, Oligure'sis, Oligoure'sis, Oligoure'sia, Oliguria, (oligo, and ουρῶν, 'I pass urine,') Morbidly diminished urinary secretion.

OLIGURIA, Oliguresia.

OLISTHEMA, (ολισθημα, from ολισθαῖν, 'to slip,') Luxation.

OLIVA, ('the olive,') see Olea.

OLIVÆ, Corpora olivaria.

OLIV'ARE, Oliveshaped.

Cauteur Oliveaire, of the French surgeons, is a cautery whose extremity is terminated by a button having the shape of an olive.

OLIVARIS, Oliveshaped.

OLIVARY, Oliveshaped—o. Bodies, Corpora olivaria.

OLIVARY PROC'ESS, Processus Olivaris, is a small ridge, running transversely between, and a little behind, the roots of the anterior clinoid processes of the sphenoid bone, and by some considered as the fourth clinoid process.

OLIVE, see Olea—o. Trec, Olea Europæa.

OLIVESHAPED, Olivaris, Oliviformis, Olivary, (F.) Olivaire. Resembling an olive. See Corpora olivaria.

OLIVES, Corpora olivaria—o. Pickled, Colymbades.

OLIVIER, Olea Europæa—o. de Bohême, Ledum palustre.

OLIVIFORMIS, (oliva, and forma, 'shape,') Oliveshaped.

OLIVINA, see Olea Europæa.

OLA CAPITIS, (olla, 'a pot,') Cranium.

OLMITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temperature, 100° Fahrenheit.

OLOPHLYC'TIS, gen. Olophlyctidis, (ολοφλυκτις, from ὄλος, 'entire, and φλυκτις, 'a vesicle,') Herpes.

OLOPHO'NIA, (ὄλλω, ὄλλυω, 'I lose, and φωνη, 'voice,') Congenital misconstruction of the vocal organs.

OLOPHONIA LABII LOBATA, Harelip—o. Lingua frænata, see Ankyloglossum.

OLSNITIUM, Peucedanum palustre.

OLUS, (pl. of olera, 'a pot herb,') Lachanon.

OLYMPIAN SPRINGS, see Kentucky, mineral waters of.

OMÅ, (ωμα,) in the termination of many pathological words, signifies morbid condition, as in sarcoma, atheroma, &c.

OMACEPH'ALUS, (F.) Omacéphale, (omo, and κεφαλος, 'devoid of head,') A genus of paracephalous monsters, without any neck—a slight depression indicating the limits of the head and body.

O'MAGRA, Ho'magra, (omo, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Gout in the shoulder.

OMAL'GIA, (omo, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the shoulder.

OMARTHRI'TIS, (omo, and αρθρον, 'a joint, and itis,) Inflammation of the shoulder-joint.

OMARTHROC'ACĒ, (omo, αρθρον, 'a joint, and κακός, 'bad,') Arthrocase of the shoulder-joint. Caries or suppuration of the shoulder-joint.

OMAS'UM, Omasus, Psalterium, Man'yplies, (Sc.) Mon'yplies, Mon'yplies, (F.) Fenillet, Millefenillet, Lièret, Psautier. The third stomach of ruminant animals.

OMBILIC, Umbilical.

OMBILICAL, Umbilical.

OMBILICUÉ, Umbilicated.

OMBRAGE, (from umbra, 'a shade,') Nebula.

OMENTA, (pl. of omentum,) Meninges.

OMENTESIS, Epiploitis.

OMENTITIS, (omentum, and itis,) Epiploitis.

OMENTULA, (pl. of omentum, dim. of omentum.) Appendiculae pinguedinosae.

OMENTUM, Epiploon — o. Colicum, Epiploon, colic — o. Gastrocolicum, Epiploon, gastrocolic — o. Gastrosplenic, Epiploon, gastrosplenic — o. Great, Epiploon, gastrocolic — o. Hepatogastri-cum, Epiploon, gastrohepatic — o. Lesser, Epiploon, gastrohepatic — o. Majus, Epiploon, gastrocolic — o. Minus, Epiploon, gastrohepatic — o. Os-sium, Periosteum — o. Sac of the, see Epiploon, gastrohepatic — o. Third, Epiploon, colic.

OMICHESES, (ομικτω, 'to pass urine,') Mictu-rition.

OMICHTMA, (ομικμα.) Urine.

OMI'TIS, (ομο, and 'itis.) Inflammation in or about the shoulder-joint.

OMMA, gen. Ommatiae, (ομμα.) Eye. Vision.

OMNIPHAGUS, (omnis, 'all,' and φαγω, 'to eat,') Omnivorous.

OMNIVORE, Omnivorous.

OMNIVOROUS, Omnivorus, Omniphagus, Pantophagus, (F.) Omnivore, (omnis, 'all,' and voro, 'I eat,') An epithet for animals which eat every kind of food, animal or vegetable — Pantophagieta.

OMO, (from ομος, 'shoulder,') in the composition of anatomical terms, means the scapula or shoulder-blade; in other cases, the shoulder.

OMOCALVICULAR, see Coracoclavicular.

OMOCOTYLE, see Glene.

OMOHOYOIDEUS, (Collocohyoideus, Hyoidie Quartus Musculus, (F.) Scapulo-hyoïdien, Omo-hyoïdien, Omoplat-hyoïdien. This muscle is situate obliquely at the sides and front of the neck. It is slender, long, and flat. It arises from the superior costa of the scapula, near the semilunar notch, and from the ligament that runs across it, and is inserted at the sides of the inferior margin of the body of the os hyoides. It consists of two fasciculi, united by a common tendon, and is a true digastric muscle. It depresses the os hyoides, carrying it a little backwards, and to one side, except when it acts with its fellow, when the bone is depressed, and drawn obliquely backwards.

OMOPHAG'IA, (ομοφαγια.) Omositia, (ωμος, 'raw,' and φαγω, 'I eat,') Fondness for raw food. Eating of raw food.

OMOPH'AGUS, Homoph'agus (improperly.) One who eats raw flesh.

OMOPLAT-HYOÏDIEN, Omo-hyoideus.

OMOPLATE, (ομο, and πλατος, 'broad, flat,') Scapula — o. Col de P, Collum scapulae.

OMOS, (ωμος.) Crude, Humerus.

OMOSITIA, (ωμοσιτια, from ωμος, 'raw,' and ειτος, 'food,') Omphagia.

OMOTAR'ICHOS, (ωμοταριχος, from ομο, and ταριχος, 'pickled,') Salsamentum crudum; Salt-ed Tun'ny Fish, in particular. Properly, the neck or shoulder-piece of a salted animal. Once much recommended against the bites of vipers, and in hydrophobia.

OMOTES, (ωμοτης.) Crudity.

OMOTOCIA, (ωμοτοκια, from ωμος, 'unripe,' and τοκος, 'birth,') Abortion.

OMOT'RIBES, (ωμοτριβης, from ωμος, 'un-ripe,' and τριβω, 'I bruise,') Omphac'inum O'leum. Oil expressed from unripe olives.

OMPFACE, (ομφακη, from ομφαξ, 'an unripe grape,') Verjuice.

OMPFA'CION, (ομφακτιον, from ομφαξ, 'an unripe grape,') — Succus u'vae acer'is, Omphac'ium. The juice of unripe grapes. Also, Verjuice.

OMPFA'CIUS, (ομφακις, from ομφαξ, 'unripe,') An unripe gallnut.

OMPFA'CIUS (VINUM), (ομφακτις.) A name given to wine prepared from the unripe grape.

OMPFACIUM, (ομφακτιον,) Omphacion, Verjuice.

OMPFACOM'ELI, (ομφαξ, 'a unripe grape,') and μελι, 'honey,') A sort of oxymel, made of the juice of unripe grapes and honey.

OMPHALELCO'SIS, (omphalos, and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer,') Ulceration of the navel.

OMPHALEXOCHE, (omphalos, and εζοχη, 'a standing out,') Exomphalus.

OMPHALITIS, (omphalos, and 'itis.) Inflammation of the umbilicus.

OMPHALO, (ομφαλος, 'navel,') in composition, navel.

OMPHALOCARPUS, (omphalos, and καρπος, 'fruit,') Galium aparine.

OMPHALOCELE, (omphalos, and κηλη, 'rupture,') Exomphalos.

OM'PHALOCRA'NIODID'YMUS, (from omphalos, κρανιον, 'the cranium,' and διδυμος, 'a twin,') A double monster, in which the umbilical cord or the rudiment of one foetus is rooted in the cranium of another.

OMPHALOMANTI'A, Omphalomancy, (omphalos, and μαντια, 'prophecy,') A species of divination, practised by credulous matrons, who pretend to be able to know the number of children a female will have, by the number of knots in the navel string of the child.

OM'PHALOMESENTER'IC, Omphalomesen-ter'icus, Omphalomesara'icus, (omphalos, and mesenterium, 'the mesentery,') Appertaining or relating to the umbilicus and mesentery.

OMPHALOMESENTER'IC VES'SELS, Vitel'lome-senter'ic, Vitelline ves'sels. Haller gave this name to two very fine vessels, which spread their ramifications on the parietes of the umbilical vesicle. There is an omphalo-mesenteric artery and vein. The omphalomesenteric artery is a branch of the superior mesenteric:—the vein empties itself into the trunk, or into one of the branches of the superior mesenteric. Velpeau affirms, that they inosculate with a branch of the second or third order of those great vessels, with those in particular that are distributed to the caecum, and he regards them to be the vessels of nutrition of the umbilical vesicle. They are occasionally met with in the foetus, at the full period, under the form of whitish filaments, which extend from the mesenteric vessels to the umbilicus.

OMPHALOMESERA'IC, Omphalomesenteric.

OMPHALONCUS, (omphalos, and σκος, 'a swelling,') Omphalophyma.

OMPHALONEURON, (omphalos, and νευρον, 'a sinew, a ligament,') Funiculus umbilicalis.

OMPHALONEURORRH'EXIS, (omphalonen-ron, and ρηξις, 'rupture,') Omphalorrhaxis.

OMPHALOPHLEBI'TIS, (omphalos, and phlebitis, 'inflammation of a vein,') Inflammation of the umbilical vein.

OMPHALOPHY'MA, gen. Omphalophy'matis, Omphalon'cus, (omphalos, and φεμα, 'tumour,') A tumefaction of the navel.

OMPHALOPROPTOSIS, (omphalos, and προ-πτωσις, 'a falling forwards,') Exomphalus.

OMPHALORRHAG'IA, Omphalor'rhagē, (omphalos, and ρηγμα, 'I break out,') Hemorrhage from the umbilicus, in the new-born in particular.

OMPHALORRHEX'IS, (omphalos, and ρηξις, 'rupture,') Omphalorrhax'is. Rupture of the navel string.

OMPHALOS, (ομφαλος,) Umbilicus.

OMPH'ALOSITE, (omphalos, and σιτα, 'nourishment,') A monster that possesses an imperfect kind of life, which ceases when the umbilical cord is divided.

OMPHALOT'OMY, (ομφαλοτομια,) Omphalotom-ia, (omphalos, and τομω, 'I cut,') The division of the navel string.

OMPHALUS, (ομφαλος,) Umbilicus.

OMUS, (ωμος,) Crude, Humerus.

ONAGRA, Oenothera biennis.

ONANIA, (after Onan,) Masturbation.

ONANISM, Masturbation.

O'NAR, (οναρ,) Somnium.

ONCOME. A Scotch term, according to Sir Walter Scott, for "mysterious diseases, which baffle the regular physician."

ONCOS, (ονκος,) Tumour.

ONCO'SES, (ονκος, and οεις.) Tumours, as diseases.

ONCOSIS, (ονκοσις,) Intumescence.

ONCOT'OMY, Oncotomia, Oncotomy, (ονκος, and τομη, 'incision.') The opening of an abscess with a cutting instrument, or the excision of a tumour.

ONCTION, (from ungere, unctum, 'to anoint,') Inunction.

ONCUS, (ονκος,) Swelling, Tumour.

ONDULATION, (from unda, 'a wave,') Fluctuation.

ONEBERRY, Paris.

ONEIROCRITICUS, Oneirocrites, (oneiros, and κρισις, 'judgment,') One who judges according to dreams.

ONEIRODYN'IA, (oneiros, and δύνη, 'pain,') A painful dream. Incubus and Somnambulism are oneirodynia.

ONEIRODYNIA ACTIVA, Paroniria, Somnambulism—o. Gravans, Incubus.

ONEIRODYNIE GRAVATIVE, Incubus.

ONEIROG'MUS, (ονειρογωγος,) Oneirogynē. A lascivious dream; pollution; nocturnal pollution.

ONEIROGONORRHŒA, Pollution, nocturnal.

ONEIROGONOS, (oneiros, and γενος, 'seed,') Pollution.

ONEIROLOGY, Oneirolog'ia, (oneiros, and λογος, 'a description,') The doctrine of dreams.

ONEIROMANTIA, (oneiros, and μαντεια, 'divination,') The art of divining by dreams; or of interpreting dreams.

ONEIRON, (ονειρον,) Somnium.

ONEIRON'OSUS, (oneiros, and οσος, 'a disease,') Somnia'tio morbo'sa. Morbid, uneasy dreaming.

ONEIROPOLESIS, (ονειροπολησις,) Somnium.

ONEIROPOLIA, (ονειροπολια,) Somnium.

ONEIROS, (ονειρος,) Somnium.

ONERA ALVI, ('load of the bowels,') Excrement—o. Ventris, ('load of the belly,') Excrement.

ONGLADE, (from ungula, dim. of unguis, 'a nail,') See Onychogryphosis.

ONGLE, (from [L.] unguis,) Nail—o. Incarné, Onychogryphosis.

ONGLEE (F.), Digitorum stupor à gelu. Painful numbness at the extremities of the fingers, caused by cold.

ONGLET, (after Ongle,) Pterygion.

ONGUENT, Unguentum—o. d'Althéa, Unguentum de Althæa—o. Blanc, Ceratum cetacei—o. de Blanc de baleine, Unguentum cetacei—o. Blanc de Rhazes, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis—o. de Rhase, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis—o. Citrin centre la gale, Unguentum hydrargyri nitratis—o. Digestif simple, Unguentum digestivum simplex—o. Gris, Unguentum oxidi hydrargyri cinereum—o. de Gnimare, Unguentum de althæa—o. de Laurier, Unguentum laurinum—o. Mercuriel, Unguentum hydrargyri—o. Napolitain, Unguentum hydrargyri—o. de Nitrate de mercure, Unguentum hydrargyri nitratis—o. de Poix et de cire, Basilicon—o. de Soldat, Martiatum unguentum—o. de Sureau, Unguentum sambuci—o. de Tornamira, Unguentum plumbi subcarbonatis.

ONION. COMMON, ([L.] unio,) Allium cepa—o. Sea, Scilla.

ONIS'CUS, Asell'us, Cn'tio, Porcell'io, Porcell'us, Por'culus, (dim. of ovos, 'an ass,') A genus of insects, Class. Crustaceæ, very common in col-lars and dark and moist places.

ONISCI ASELI, Millep'edes, Asel'li, Millep'edæ, Fal'bx, Wood'lice, Slat'ers, Hoy'lice, (F.) Clopor'tes ordinaires, had, at one time, a place in the pharmacopœias. They were considered stimulant and diuretic, and useful in jaundice.

ONITIS, (ονιτις, gen. ονιτιδος,) Origanum dictamnus.

ONKOTOMY, Oncotomy.

ONKOSAT (Arab.), Obolus.

ONOMATOCLEISIS, (ονομα, gen. ονοματος, 'a name, and κλιση, 'to call,') Nomenclature.

ONOMATOLOGIA, (ονοματολογία, from ονομα, gen. ονοματος, 'a name, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Nomenclature.

ONONIS ANTIQUORUM, (ονωνις,) O. spinosa. Ono'nis ARVEN'SIS, (F.) Bugrane des champs, has properties like the next.

ONONIS SPINO'SA, Ano'nis, Res'ta seu Arres'ta bo'vis, Rem'ora Ara'tri, Ono'nis antiquorum, Rest harroic, (F.) Arrête-bœuf, Bugrande épinense, Bugrane, Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this plant was once used as a diuretic.

ONOPORDON ACANTHIIUM, (ωνος, 'the ass, and πεφω, 'to break wind,') Onopordum acanthium, Car'duus tomentosa, Acant'hium, Ac'anus, A. spi'na, Spi'na ul'ba, Col'ton Thistle, (F.) Char-don aux Ane's. Ord. Compositæ. Sex. Syst. Syngenesia Polygamia æqualis. The expressed juice has been recommended as a cure for cancer, applied externally.

ONOPORDUM ACANTHIUM, Onopordon acanthium.

ONTHUS, (ονθος,) Fimus.

ONTOL'OGY, Ontolog'ia, (F.) Ontologie, (from ων, gen. ωνος, 'a being, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A term sometimes used for metaphysics generally; but, more frequently, for that portion of it which deals in generalities; and which embraces, therefore, the speculative and chimerical. It was in this last sense, that Broussais spoke of medical ontology, (F.) Ontologie médicale.

ONYCHA, see Bellium, and Cistus creticus.

ONYCHATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia un'guinum, (onycho, and atrophia, 'want of nourishment,') Atrophy of the nails.

ONYCHAUX'E, Hypertroph'ia un'guinum, (from onycho, and αύξη, 'increase,') Unusual increase of the size and thickness of the nails.

ONYCHEXALLAX'IS, (onycho, and εξαλαξις, 'change,') A morbid condition of the nails.

ONYCHIA, (from ονυξ, gen. ονυχος, 'a nail,') Paronychia.

ONYCHITIS, (onycho, and ιτις.) Inflammation of a nail. See Paronychia.

ONYCHO, (ονυξ, gen. ονυχος, 'a nail,') in com-position, a nail.

ONYCHOCAMPE, (onycho, and καμπε, 'curvature,') Onychogryphosis.

ONYCHOCLAS'IS, (onycho, and κλασις, 'fracture,') Fracture of a nail.

ONYCHOCLINE, Onychostro'ma, (onycho, and κλινη, 'a bed,') The sensitive bed or stroma under the nail.

ONYCHOCRYPTOSIS, (onycho, and κρυπτος, 'concealed,') Onychogryphosis.

ONYCHOGRYPHO'SIS, Onychogrypho'sis, Onychogrypho'sis, Onycho'cam'pè, Grypho'sis, Grypho'sis, (onycho, and gryphosis, 'crookedness,') Curvature of the nails; such as occurs in hectic individuals. Also, growing in of the nails; Onychocrypto'sis, Incarna'tio seu Ar'cua'tio seu Arcu'tra un'guinum, Onyx'is, (F.) Ongle incarné, Onglade.

ONYCHOMANTIA, (onycho, and μαντεια, 'divination,') Divination from the appearance of the nails.

ONYCHON'OSI, Onychom'si, (onycho, and voos, 'a disease.') Disease of the nails.

ONYCHOPH THORA. Onychophtho'ria, Onychophtho'ria, Onychophtho'ria, (onychu, and φθορα, 'degeneration.') A degenerate condition or destruction of the nails.

ONYCHOPHY'MA, gen. Onychophy'matis, (onycho, and φμα, 'a tumour.') A painful degeneration of the nails, which become thick, rough, and crooked. It occurs as a symptom of syphilis and of lepra.

ONYCHOPTO'SIS, Piptonych'ia, Dix'reis Un'gulae, (onycho, and πτωσις, 'falling.') The falling off of the nails.

ONYCOPHTHORA, Onychophtho'ria.

ONYCHORRHIZA, (onycho, and ρίζα, 'a root.')

See Nail.

ONYCHOSTROMA, (onycho, and στρωμα, 'a bed.')

O'NYX, gen. O'nyxis, (from ονξ, gen. ονυχος.) Hook (blunt), Nail, Pterygion. Also, a collection of purulent matter between the laminae of the cornea, having the shape of a nail.

ONYXIS, see Onychogryphosis.

ONYXITIS, (ονξ, and ιτις.) see Paronychia.

OOCYESIS, (οοον, and κυσις, 'pregnancy,')

Pregnancy, ovarian.

OODEOCELE, see Hernia (foraminis ovalis.)

OODES, (οοδος, from οον, 'an egg,' and οδες.)

Aqueous humour, Oval.

OÜG'ALA, (οον, and γαλα, 'milk,')

Oög'la, Og'la, Pula ex Ov'is et Lactē. Milk of eggs. A preparation of eggs and milk.

OOG'LA, Oogala.

OUIDES, (οοιδος, from οον, and αιδος, 'resemblance,')

Aqueous humour, Oval.

OOLEMMA PELLUCIDUM, gen. Oolemma'tiis,

(οον, and λεμμα, 'a sheath,')

Zona pellucida.

OOLEUCON, (οον, and λευκος, 'white,')

Albumen ovi.

OÖLOG'IA, Ovolog'ia, Ovolog'ia, (οον, and λογος, 'a discourse,')

A description of the ovum.

OON, (οον.) Ovum.

OONINE, (from οον.) Albumen.

OÖPH'AGOUS, Oöph'agus, (οον, and φαγω, 'I eat,')

Feeding on eggs.

OOPHORAÜXE, (oophorium, and αυξη, 'increase,')

Oarioparactama.

OOPHORITIS, (oophorium, and ιτις.) Oaritis.

OOPHOROPATHIA, (oophorium, and παθος, 'afection,')

Oariopathy.

OOPHORUM, (οον, and φωρον, 'to bear,')

Ovary.

OORITIS, Oaritis.

OP, as a prefix, see Ob.

OPAC'ITY, Opac'itas, Opakeness, (opacus, 'obscure,')

Quality of that which is opaque. The property possessed by some bodies of not allowing the light to traverse them. It is opposed to transparency.

Opacity of the cornea constitutes albugo or leucoma; — opacity of the crystalline causes cataract.

OPAKE, Opac'us, Opac'ous. An epithet given to bodies, which do not permit the passage of rays of light. The opaque cornea is the scleroticæ, in contradistinction to the transparent cornea or true cornea.

OPAKENESS, Opacity.

OPALESCENT, Opaline.

OP'ALINE, Opalescent. That which resembles the opal. A fluid is said to be opaline when milky, and when it presents an appearance more or less like that of the opal.

OPE, (οπη.) Foramen.

OPEOCELE, (οπε, and εηλη, 'rupture,')

Hernia.

OPERATIO, (opus, gen. operis, 'work,')

Action. Operation—o. Chirurgical, see Operation—o. Chymica seu pharmaceutica, Operation, chymical, &c.—o. Simplex, Haplotomia.

OPERATION, Operatio. The application of instruments to the human body with the view of removing disease. The object of an operation, operatio chirurgica, is generally to divide or reunite parts, to extract extraneous or noxious bodies, and to replace organs that are wanting, by different instruments or artificial means. The principal operatory methods have been called Syn'thesis, Dia'resis, Eca'resis, and Proth'esis. Frequently the most difficult subject connected with an operation is to decide when it is absolutely called for or advisable, and when improper.

OPERATION, BILATERAL, see Lithotomy—o. Cæsarienne, Cæsarean section.

OPERATION, CHYMICAL or PHARMACEUTICAL, Operatio chymica seu pharmaceutica, is any process whose object is the preparation of medicines; their combinations with each other, analysis, and decomposition;—such are, evolution, distillation, sublimation, evaporation, digestion, maceration, infusion, decoction, calcination, &c. Some of these operations are mechanical; others, really chymical.

OPERATION, HIGH, see Lithotomy—o. d Lambeau, see Flap—o. Lateral, see Lithotomy—o. Sigaultian, Symphiseotomy.

OPERATIONS, Capital, see Surgery, operative—o. Major, see Surgery, operative—o. Minor, see Surgery, operative.

OPERATOR. A surgeon who is in the habit of practising the greater operations. One who performs any operation. To be a good operator, the surgeon must be well acquainted with anatomy, and be possessed of strong nerve. See Surgeon.

OPER'CULUM, Operatorium, Operimentum, (from operire, 'to cover,')

A cover or lid. In fishes, the gill cover.

OPER'CULUM ASPERÆ ARTERIÆ, ΛΑΡΥΝΧ--ο

Cutis, Epidermis—o. Pei, Bauhin, valve of—o. Laryngis, Epiglottis—o. Oculi, Palpebra.

OPER'CULUM PAPPILLARUM. A shield for the nipple.

OPERIMENTUM, (from operire, 'to cover,')

Opericulum—o. Intestinorum, Epiploon—o. Præterensum abdominis, Peritoneum.

OPERTORIUM, Opericulum.

OPHELIA CHIRATA, Gentiana chirayta.

OPHIASIS, (οφιασις) Calvities, Porrigo decal vans.

OPHIOGLOSSUM VULGATUM, O. ova'tum seu echinoglossum, (ophis, and γλωσσα, 'tongue,')

Lingua serpentina'ria, Ad'der's Tongue, (F.) Langue de Serpent. Ord. Filices. Sez. Syst. Cryptogamia. This plant was formerly considered to be vulnerary.

OPHIOPH'AGOUS, Ophioph'agus, (ophis, and φαγω, 'I eat,')

An epithet for animals which feed on serpents. Pliny has called certain African tribes by this name.

OPHIORRHIZA, O. mun'gos, (ophis, and ρίζα, 'root,')

Family, Gentianacæ. Sez. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The name of the plant whose root has been called Ra'dix Serpentum, Mun'gos Ra'dix. The bitter root is much esteemed in Java, Sumatra, &c., for preventing the effects that usually follow the bite of the naja, a venomous serpent; with which view it is eaten by the natives. It is, also, a reputed anthelmintic.

OPHIOSTAPHYLON, (ophis, and σταφύλη, 'a grape,')

Bryonia alba.

OPHIOXYLON, Ophioxylum.

OPHIOXYLUM, (ophis, and ξύλον, 'wood,')

Ophioxylum seu Ophioxylum serpenti'num seu trifolia'tum, Acane'ria, Lignum serpent'ium, Ord. Apocynacæ, has been recommended in the bites of serpents, and in intermittents. It is said to be very bitter.

OPHIS, (οφίς.) Serpent.

OPHITES, (οφίτης, from ophis.) Serpenti'num,

Serpentine or Black Porphyry. This rock was formerly worn as an amulet, to cure diseases of the head.

OPHRYS, (ὄφρυς,) Supercilium.

OPHTHALMAGRA, (ὀφθαλμος, and ἀγρᾶ, 'a seizure.') A sudden gouty or other pain of the eye.

OPHTHALMAL'GIA, (ὀφθαλμος, and ἄλγος, 'pain.') Pain in the eye, Neuralgia of the eye.

OPHTHALMEMPASMA, gen. Ophthalmempasm'atis, (ὀφθαλμος, and ἐμπασσῖν, 'to strew upon,') Collyrium siccum.

OPHTHALMIA, (from ὀφθαλμος,) Ophthalmi'tis, Oculo'rum inflamma'tio, Cor'nia ophthalmi'tis, Ophthalmopo'nia, Inflamma'tion of the Eye, Ophthal'my, (F.) Ophthalmie, Ophthalmite, Inflamma'tion de l'œil, Catarrhe oculaire. Three great varieties of ophthalmia, independently of the acute and chronic (which conditions occur in all inflammations,) may be reckoned:—the Ophthalmia membrana'rum, O. purulen'ta, and O. tar'si. The first is characterized by the general symptoms of ophthalmia;—pain and redness of the eye or its appendages; with intolerance of light, and unusual flow of tears; the inflammation being seated chiefly in the coats of the eyeball. It is the Hymenophthal'mia, Ophthalmia tarax'is seu hu'mida seu ve'ra seu chemo'sis, Conjunctivi'tis, Inflamma'tio conjuncti'væ, Symphymeni'tis, Syndemi'tis, Catarr'hal ophthalmia, Ophthalmococonjunctivi'tis, Ophthalmodesmi'tis, Epiph'ora (Galen), Conjuncti'val or Lach'rymose Ophthalmia, Tarax'is (Paulus of Ægina), Chemo'sis (Aëtius), (F.) Conjunctivite, Inflamma'tion de la conjonctive. In the second,—Ophthalmia purulen'ta seu puriform'is Blennophthal'mia, Bleph'aroblenorrhœ'a, Ophthalmoblenorrhœ'a, Blennorrhœ'a ocu'li—the internal surface of the palpebræ associates in the inflammation of the eyeball; and there is a copious secretion of a purulent fluid. An epidemic and contagious [?] variety of this is the Ægyptian Ophthalmia, O. epidem'ica seu purulen'ta epidem'ica seu contagio'sa seu catarrha'lis bel'lica seu bel'lica seu Asia'tica seu purulen'ta contagio'sa, Blennorrhœ'a ocu'li Ægypti'aca, Lemophthal'mia, Conjunctivi'tis puronuco'sa contagio'sa seu Ægypti'aca, Blepharoti's glandula'ris contagio'sa, Ad- ni'tis palpebra'rum contagio'sa, Suppurative ophthalmia, Epidem'ic contagio'sa ophthalmia—called Ægyptian, from its prevalence in Egypt during the British Expedition under Sir Ralph Abercrombie. The inflammation is rapid and destructive; granulations shoot from the tunica conjunctiva, and occasionally there is intolerable pain, often succeeded by delirium. In newborn children, a species of purulent ophthalmia, O. purulen'ta infan'tum seu neonato'rum, Blepharophthal'mia seu Lippitu'do seu Blennorrhœ'a ocu'li seu Ophthal'moblenorrhœ'a seu Blepharoblenorrhœ'a seu Blepharopurorrhœ'a seu Pyophthal'mia, Psorophthal'mia neonato'rum, Adenoynechitoni'tis, Adenologadi'tis, (F.) Ophthalmie puriforme des nouve'nés, in which the palpebræ are florid and peculiarly tumid, is by no means uncommon. It seems to be caused by acrid discharges from the mother, applied to the eye of the infant during its exit; or to the stimulus of the light, when the child first opens its eyes. A severe form of purulent ophthalmia—Hyperconjunctivite (Piorry)—is produced by the application of gonorrhœal matter to the eye. It is the Ophthalmia gonorrhœ'ica, Blennorrhœ'a ocu'li gonorrhœ'ica, Gonorrhoblepharhœ'a, Conjunctivi'tis blennorrhag'ica seu gonorrhœ'ica, Gonorrhœ'al Ophthalmia, (F.) Ophthalmie blennorrhagique, Conjunctivite blennorrhagique.

Ophthalmia is likewise modified by the condition of the constitution, and hence we have strumous, variolous, and other inflammations of the conjunctiva.

The third variety—the Ophthalmia Tar'si seu glutino'sa, Blepharophthal'mia, Blepharoti's, Blepharoti'tis, Blephari'tis, Blepharadeni'tis, Adenophthal'mia, is seated chiefly in the tarsus; the sebaceous crypts secreting a viscid and acrid fluid, that glues and ulcerates its edges, and irritates the eye.

When accompanied with ulceration and much itching, it constitutes Psorophthal'mia, Ocu'li palpebra'rum Scab'ies prurigino'sa, Bleph'arophthal'mia ulcera'sa, Ophthalmia psor'ica, Tin'ea tarsi seu cilia'ris, Tinea of the Eyelids.

The different forms of inflammation of the conjunctiva are thus classified by M. Desmarres:—

|                     |   |                           |   |  |   |  |
|---------------------|---|---------------------------|---|--|---|--|
| Conjunctivitis..... | { | 1. Pure or phlegmonous.   | { | Contagious.-Noncontagious.Miasmatic. |   |  |
|                     |   | 2. Pustular.              |   |  |   |  |

Conjunctivitis, when slight, requires little treatment: the antiphlogistic regimen—and particularly avoiding exposure to light—being all that is necessary. When more severe, along with this, general and local bloodletting, especially by leeches to the side of the septum narium, must be employed, so as to make a decided impression on the system; with nauseating doses of antimony, purgatives, blisters (at some distance from the organ), refrigerants, and astringents, cold or warm, according to circumstances, to the eye. In Purulent Ophthal'my these measures must be still more actively employed, otherwise disorganization will speedily follow;—the granulations which form on the adnata of the eyelids may be removed with the scissors, and the sore be touched with a solution of alum. Ophthalmia Tar'si must be treated on general principles, when severe. It usually, however, requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, with the occasional use, especially at night, of a slightly stimulating ointment, such as the unguentum hydrargyri nitricooxydi, considerably reduced with lard. The ointment prevents the eyelids from being glued together during the night, and thus obviates the irritation caused by attempts at separating them in the morning.

OPHTHALMIATER, (ophthalmos, and ιατρος, 'a physician.') Oculist.

OPHTHALMIATRÍ'A, Ophthalmiatrotechnica, Ophthalmotherapia, (F.) Oculistia. The art of the oculist. Treatment of diseases of the eye.

OPHTHALMIATROTECHNICA, (ophthalmiater, and τεχνη, 'art.') Ophthalmiatria.

OPHTHALMIC, Ophthalmicus, (F.) Ophthalmique, (from ophthalmos.) That which relates or belongs to the eye.

OPHTHALMIC ARTERY, A. orbitaire, (Ch.) arises from the internal carotid, and issues from the cranium by the foramen opticum. At first it is situate at the outer and lower side of the optic nerve, but ascends above this nerve and passes towards the inner angle of the orbit. It furnishes in its course the lacrimal, centralis retinae, infraorbitaria, ciliaries, anterior ciliaries, inferior and superior muscular, anterior and posterior ethmoidals, and superior and inferior palpebrals. After having given off these, it divides into two branches—the frontal and nasal, which furnish a number of ramifications—some superficial, others deepseated.

OPHTHALMIC GANG'LION, Lenticular or Ciliary ganglion, Ganglion ophthalmicum, seu semilunare seu ciliarre, G. orbitaire, (Ch.) is one of the smallest ganglions of the body, and formed by the 5th and 3d pairs of encephalic nerves. It is situate at the outer side of the optic nerve near the bottom of the orbit; it is irregularly quadrilateral and flat; its colour of a reddish gray. Behind, it communicates by its posterior angles—by means of nervous filaments—with the nasal nerve of the ophthalmic, the motor oculi, and offsets from the sympathetic. Each of its anterior angles furnishes a fasciculus of small nerves. These are the ciliary nerves.

OPHTHALMIC NERVE, Ophthalmic Nerve of Willis, Orbito-frontal, (Ch.) is the smallest and first of the three branches given off by the 5th pair. It proceeds along the external paries of the cavernous sinus, and enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure. It divides into three branches, one, external—the lacrimal nerve; another, superior—frontal nerve; and the last, internal—the nasal nerve. See Lacrimal, Frontal, Nasal.

OPHTHALMIC OR OPTIC REM'EDY, Ophthalmicum seu Opticum, (F.) Topique ophthalmique, is a medicine employed locally in ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMIC SINUS, see Cavernous Sinus.

OPHTHALMIC VEIN, has the same arrangement as the artery, which it accompanies in all its divisions. It issues from the orbit at the inner part of the sphenoidal fissure, and discharges its blood into the cavernous sinus.

The name Facial Ophthalmic has been given to the branch by which the facial vein communicates with the ophthalmic.

OPHTHALMICA, Euphrasia officinalis.

OPHTHALMICI EXTERNI, Motores oculorum.

OPHTHALMICUM, Ophthalmic remedy.

OPHTHALMIDIUM, (dim. of ophthalmos), Microphthalmus.

OPHTHALMIE BLENNORRHAGIQUE, see

Ophthalmia.—o. Puriforme des Nouveau-nés, see Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMITE, Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMITIS, (ophthalmos, and itis.) Ophthalmia. Occasionally restricted to inflammation of the globe of the eye, in which both the external and internal structures are involved.

OPHTHALMIUM, (dim. of ophthalmos), Microphthalmus.

OPHTHALMO, (from ὀφθαλμος, 'eye.') In composition, eye.

OPHTHALMOBLENNORRHŒA, Ophthalmia (purulent).—o. Neonatorum, see Ophthalmia (purulenta infantum).

OPHTHALMOCARCINO'MA, gen. Ophthalmocarcino'matis. Cancer of the eye.

OPHTHALMOCELE, (ophthalmos, and κηλη, 'tumor.') Exophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOCHOLOSIS, (ophthalmos, and χολη, 'bile.') Ophthalmia biliosa. Ophthalmia from biliary derangement. [?]

OPHTHALMOCHROITES, (ophthalmos, and χρῆσις, 'to colour.') See Choroidea tunica.

OPHTHALMOCONJUNCTIVITIS, see Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOCOPIA, (ophthalmos, and κοπος, 'fatigue.') Coryopia.

OPHTHALMODESMITIS, (ophthalmodesmum, and itis.) See Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMODESMUM, (ophthalmos, and ἔσμος, 'a band.') Conjunctiva tunica.

OPHTHALMODUI'TA, (ophthalmos, and ὄσκησις, 'servitude.') Eyeserv. The title of a book by Bartisch on diseases of the eye.

OPHTHALMODYN'IA, (ophthalmos, and ὄδυνη, 'pain.') Pain, and especially rheumatic pain of the eye. Plenck has given this name to neuralgia of the frontal nerve, in which the pain radiates particularly towards the bottom of the orbit. See Neuralgia, frontal.

OPHTHALMODYSIA PERIODICA, Neuralgia, facialis.

OPHTHALMŒDE'MA, gen. Ophthalmœdematis, (ophthalmos, and οἴδημα, 'œdema.') Œdema of the conjunctiva.

OPHTHALMOG'RAPHY, (ophthalmos, and γραφη, 'a description.') The part of anatomy which gives a description of the eye. An anatomical description of the eye.

OPHTHALMOLOGY, Ophthalmolog'ia, (ophthalmos, and λογος, 'a discourse.') The part of anatomy which treats of the eye. An anatomical treatise on the eye. A description of the eye in health and disease.

OPHTHALMOMELANO'MA, Ophthalmomelanosis, (ophthalmos, and melanoma.) Melanoma of the eyeball.

OPHTHALMOM'ETER, (ophthalmos, and μετρον, 'measure.') An instrument of the nature of compasses, invented by F. Petit, for measuring the capacity of the anterior and posterior chambers of the eye in anatomical experiments.

OPHTHALMOMYÍ'TIS, Ophthalmomyositis, (ophthalmos, μῦς, 'a muscle,' and itis.) Inflammation of the muscles of the eye.

OPHTHALMOPARALYSIS, Ophthalmoplegia.

OPHTHALMOPHLEBOTOM'IA, (ophthalmos, φλεψ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein,' and τομη, 'incision.') Bleeding from the vessels of the conjunctiva.

OPHTHALMOPHTHAR'SIS, Ophthalmophtharisis, (ophthalmos, and φθορα, 'corruption.') Destruction of the eyeball.

OPHTHALMOPHTHISIS, Ophthalmophtharsis.

OPHTHALMOPLE'GIA, Ophthalmoparal'ysis, (ophthalmos, and πληγωω, 'I strike.') Paralysis of one or more of the muscles of the eye.

OPHTHALMOPONIA, (ophthalmo, and ponos, 'suffering,') Ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOPTOMA, Ophthalmoptosis.

OPHTHALMOPTOSIS, (Ophthalmopto'ma, (ophthalmo, and πτωσις, 'a prolapse,') A word employed by some authors in the sense of exophthalmia, by others in that of hydrophthalmia.

OPHTHALMORRHAG'IA, (ophthalmo, and ῥηγνυμι, 'I break forth,') Hemorrhage from the tunica conjunctiva. It is rare.

OPHTHALMOS, (οφθαλμος,) Eye.

OPHTHALMOSCOPE, see Ophthalmoscopy.

OPHTHALMOSCOPIA, (Ophthalmoscopy, (ophthalmo, and σκοπεω, 'I regard attentively,') The art of judging of the temper, &c., of a person by examining his eyes. The art of judging of health or disease by inspection of the eyes. Exploration of the eyes in order to a diagnosis.

Ophthalmoscope, ophthalmoscop'ium, ophthalmos'copium, Spec'ulum oculi. An instrument which, by reflecting the light on the retina, enables the condition of the interior of the eye to be appreciated. To a form of the ophthalmoscope the name Anagnostis has been given, after a young Greek physician, who, it was thought, invented it.

OPHTHALMOSTA'TUM, (Ophthalm'mostat, (ophthalmo, and στασις, 'station,') Spec'ulum oculi. An instrument for fixing the eye. The action of fixing the eye is termed Ophthalmos'tasis.

OPHTHALMOTHERAPIA, (ophthalmo, and θεραπεία, 'treatment,') Ophthalmiatria.

OPHTHALMOT'OMY, (Ophthalmotom'ia, (ophthalmo, and τομω, 'I cut,') The part of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the eye. It has also been applied to extirpation of the eye.

OPHTHALMOXEROSIS, (ophthalmo, and ξηρωσις, 'dryness,') Xerophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOX'YSIS, (ophthalmos, and ζωω, 'I scrape,') A name given to the scarification sometimes practised on the conjunctiva in cases of ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOXYS'TRUM, (Ophthalmoxys'ter, Ophthalmoxyste'rium, Xys'trum ophthalm'micum. An instrument for scraping the eye. Name given to a small brush, with barbs like an ear of barley or rye, intended to scarify the eyelids in certain cases of ophthalmia.

OPHTHALMOZO'A, (F.) Ophthalmozaires, (ophthalmo, and ζωον, 'an animal,') Entozoa or parasites in the globe of the eye and its appendages.

OPHTHALMUS, (οφθαλμος,) Eye.

OPHTHALMYMENT'IS, (Ophthalmomyment'is, (ophthalmo, μυνη, 'membrane, and ιτις,) Inflammation of one or more of the membranes of the eye.

OPIACÉ, Opiate.

OPIACUM, Opiatum.

OPIANE, Narcotine.

O'PIANINE, (Opiani'na, Opi'a'nia, (from opium,) An alkaloid discovered in opium, which resembles morphia in its properties and doses.

OPIANUM, Narcotine.

OPIAT, Opiate—o. Dentifrice, Dentifrice.

O'PIATE, (Opi'a'tum, Opi'a'cum, Paravera'cum, Meco'nicum, (F.) Opiat, Opiacé, (from opion, (opos, 'juice,') 'opium,') A medicine containing opium. A medicine that procures sleep. An electuary;—formerly, an electuary which contained opium.

O'PIATED, (Opi'a'tus, (F.) Opiaté, Laudanisé. Impregnated with opium or laudanum. Affected by opium or laudanum.

OPIATUM, Opiate.

OPIA'TUM FEBRIF'UGUM, (Electuar'ium de K'ina K'ina; Electuary of Cincho'na. (Pulv. cinch. ʒxxviiij, Ammon. muriat. ʒj, Mellis, Syrup. absinth. ʒā ʒij. Make into an electuary. Ph. P.) Given when cinchona is indicated.

OPIATUM MESENTER'ICUM, (Electuar'ium de Al'oē,

Maria'tē Hydrar'gyri et Fer'ro. (Gum. ammon. ʒss, Semē ʒvj, Hydrar'gyri submuriat., Rad. Ari., Aloēs socotrin. ʒā ʒij, Pulv. scammon. comp. (vulg. de tribus,) Rhei rad. ʒā ʒij, Ferri limatnr. porphyrisat. ʒss. Bruise and mix together, add of Compound syrup of apples double the weight of the other matters, and make into an electuary. Ph. P.) Dose, ʒss to ʒij, in ol'structions of the liver, mesentery, &c.

OPIATUS, Opiated.

OPION, (opion, dim. of opos, 'juice,') Opium

O'PIOPHIL, (Opioph'iler, Opioph'ilus; (opioç, opium, and φιλω, 'I love,') A lover of opium. There was in Paris, in 1853, a club of opium smokers, who called themselves O'piophils.

OPIUMA, (οπισμα,) Succus.

OPISTHENAR, (οπισθεναρ,) Dorsum manus, (opistho, and θεναρ, 'the flat of the hand,') The back of the hand.

OPISTHO, (οπισθε, 'behind, backwards,') in composition the same.

OPISTHOCEPHALON, (opistho, and κεφαλη, 'the head,') Occiput.

OPISTHOCRANIUM, (opistho, and κρανιον, 'the skull,') Occiput.

OPISTHOCYPHOSIS, (οπισθοκυφωσις, from opistho, and κυphosis,) Cyphoma.

OPISTHOLOB'IUM, (Opistho'tium, (opistho, and λοβιον, 'the lobe of the ear,') Any agent applied behind the ear.

OPISTHOTIUM, (opistho, and ous, gen. ωτος, 'the ear,') Opistholobium.

OPISTHOT'ONUS, (οπισθοτονος,) Raptus posterga'neus, Tel'anus dorsal'is seu post'ius seu posterga'neus, (opistho, and τενω, 'I stretch,') A species of tetanus, in which the body is bent backwards.

OPIUM, (opion, dim. of opos, 'juice,') see Papaver—o. Colatum, Extractum opii—o. Depuratum, Extractum opii.

OPIUM EATERS, Theriaki.

OPIUM, LETTUCE, see Lactuca.

OPOBALSAMUM, (opos, 'juice,') and βαλσαμον, 'a balsam,') see Amyris opobalsamum.

OPOCARPASON, Carpasium (juice.)

OPOCEPH'ALUS, (ωψ, 'the face,') and κεφαλη, 'head,') (F.) Opoceph'ale. A genus of monsters having the two ears approximated or united under the head; the jaws atrophied; and no mouth or nose.

OPODELDOCH, Opodeldoch.

OPODEL'DOCH, (Opodel'toch, Opodel'doc. An unmeaning term, frequently used by Paracelsus. Formerly, it signified a plaster for all external injuries, and was occasionally used, generically, like Saponula, for the union of soap with one or more volatile oils: now, it is applied to the Linimentum Saponis Compositum.

OPODELDOCH, STEER'S. A liniment, called after the inventor. There are many formulæ for its preparation. The following is one. Sop. alb. ʒij, Camphor. ʒij, Ol. rorismarini fʒiv, Spiritus vini rectificati Oij. See Linimentum Saponis Compositum.

OPODECELE, (οπη, 'a foramen,') είδος, 'resemblance,') and επλη, 'a rupture,') see Hernia.

OPODIDYMUS or OPODYMUS, (ωψ, 'the face,') and διδυμος, 'double,') Diprosopus.

OPOIDIA GALBANIFERA, (from opos, 'juice,') οποιός, 'juicy,') see Bubon Galbanum.

O'POLÉ, (opos, 'juice,') Succus.

O'POLIDE, Succus.

OPOPANACUM, Pastinaca opopanax.

OPOPANAX, (οσποπανάς; from opos, 'juice,') and παναξ,) see Pastinaca opopanax—o. Chironium, Pastinaca opopanax.

OPOPANAXWORT, Pastanaca opopanax.

OPOIUS, (οπωπιος,) Optic.

OPOPONAX, Pastinaca opopanax.

OPORA, (οπωρα,) see Autumn.

OPORICE, (σώρα, 'autumn.') A medicine, composed of several autumnal fruits, particularly quinces, pomegranates, &c., and wine. It was formerly administered in dysentery, diseases of the stomach, &c.

OPOS, (οπος,) Succus expressus—o. Silphion, Laserpitium.

OPPIDULUM, ('a little town.') Vulva.

OPPIIATIO, (oppillare, oppillatum, 'to shut up.') Emphraxis—o. Tela Cellulosæ, Induration of the cellular tissue.

OPPIIATIVUS, Obstruens.

OPPO'NENS, (F.) Opposant, (op, and ponere, 'to place.') That which faces or is put in opposition to something. The name has been given to two muscles of the hand.

OPPO'NENS MIN'IMI DIG'ITI, (F.) Opposant du petit doigt. Carpo-métacarpien du petit doigt (Ch.), Métacarpien du petit doigt. This muscle has the same shape and arrangement as the preceding, but is of less size. It is situate in the hypothenar eminence. Its fibres are inserted into the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and terminate on the whole length of the inner edge of the 5th metacarpal bone. This muscle carries the 5th metacarpal bone forwards and outwards, and thus augments the concavity of the palm of the hand.

OPPO'NENS POL'ICIS, Flexor ossis metacarpi pollicis, F. primi interos'dii (Douglas), Opponens pollicis manus, Antith'énar sive semi-interosæus pollicis, (F.) Carpo-métacarpien du pouce (Ch.), Métacarpien du pouce, Opposant du Pouce. A small, flat, triangular muscle, situate in the substance of the thenar eminence. It is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and to the trapezium; and on the other, to the whole of the outer margin of the first metacarpal bone. This muscle impresses on the first bone of the metacarpus a movement of rotation, which opposes the thumb to the other fingers.

OPPOSANT, Opponens—o. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti—o. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

OPPRESSIO, (from opprimere, (op, and premere, pressum.) 'to press against,') Catalepsy, Oppression—o. Nocturna, Incubus.

OPPRESSION, Oppress'io, Thlip'sis, Cata-thlip'sis. A state, in which the patient experiences a sensation of weight in the part affected. When employed abstractly, it means, particularly, Oppression of the chest, Oppress'io, Pec'toris, (F.) O. de Poitrine.

OPPRESSION, Oppress'io vi'rium, (F.) Oppression des forces, is, also, used for that condition, at the commencement of fevers, &c., in which the system is opposed rather than debilitated, and where the vascular action arises, as the obstruction to free circulation is relieved by bleeding, purging, &c.

OPS, (ωψ,) Eye.

OPSEONUSI, Opsionusi.

OPSIALGIA, (οψίς, 'the countenance,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Neuralgia, facial.

OPSIGONUS (DENS), (οψιγόνος, from οψέ, 'late,' and γενω, 'to be born,') see Dentition.

OPSIODOUS, (οψέ, 'late,' and οδους, 'a tooth,') see Dentition.

OPSIONUSI, Opseonusi, (οψίς, 'vision,' and ουσος, 'a disease,') Mor'bi vi'sus. Diseases of vision.

OPSIOTOC'IA, (οψέ, 'late,' and τοκος, 'birth,') Partus serotinus. Parturition after the usual period. See Pregnancy.

OPSI, (οψίς, 'countenance,') Pupil, Vision.

OPSONA'NIAC, Opson'anes, (F.) Opsomane, (ψορ, 'aliment,' and μανία,) One who loves some particular aliment to madness.

OPTESIS, (οπτησις, 'roasting or broiling,') Asatio.

OPTIC, (οπτικός, Optic'us, Opo'pioe (F.) Optique, (from οπτοιας, 'I see,') That which relates to vision.

OPTIC CENTRE, Centrum opticum. The optic centre of the crystalline is the point at which the various rays proceeding from an object cross in their way to the retina.

OPTIC COMMISSURE, see Chiasm.

OPTIC FORA'MEN, Fora'men opticum, (F.) Trou optique. A round opening in the sphenoid bone, near the base of its lesser ala, through which the optic nerve passes.

OPTIC GANGLIA, Quadrigenina tubercula.

OPTIC GROOVE, A transverse groove on the superior surface of the sphenoid bone, on which the commissure of the optic nerve rests, and which is continuous on each side with the optic foramen.

OPTIC LOBES, Quadrigenina tubercula.

OPTIC NERVE, Nervus opticus seu vis'ivus seu vis'o'rius, Par secundum seu opticum seu vis'o'rium, Nerve of the 2d pair, Ocular nerve of Chaussier. The optic nerves are remarkable for their size; for their running a longer course within than without, the cranium; and for their furnishing no branch from their origin to their termination. They do not seem to arise, as was long supposed, from the optic thalami, but from the tubercula quadrigenina. Immediately after their origin, the optic tracts, Tractus optici, proceed forwards; are, at first, broad and flat; but afterwards become narrower and round. In front of the fossa pituitaria, they unite and decussate, each nerve proceeding through the optic foramen of the sphenoid bone with the ophthalmic artery, and through the Fora'men opticum choroideæ, to form the retina. The nerve passes to the back part of the globe of the eye, becomes narrower, and enters that organ at a flattened circular papilla—Collie'ulus seu Papill'a nerri optici—to give rise to the nervous expansion called the retina. Between the colliculus and the yellow spot of Sömmerring, a small projection or fold of the retina passes—plica central'is retinæ. Besides its neurilemma, the optic nerve is surrounded by a sheath, furnished by the dura mater. This accompanies it as far as the eye.

The optic nerve is the nerve of special sensibility of the eye. In the centre of the nerve, there is a punctum cæ'cum, mac'ula nigra, where the central artery enters the eye, and the corresponding vein passes out. If a ray of light falls on this spot it is not appreciated.

OPTIC REMEDY, see Ophthalmic remedy—o. Thalami, Thalami nervorum opticorum—o. Tracts, see Optic nerve.

OPTICO-TROCHLÉI-SCLÉROTICIEN, Oblique, superior, of the eye.

OPTICUM, Ophthalmic remedy.

OPTICUS, (οπτικός,) Optic.

OPTILOS, (οπιλος,) Eye.

OPTIQUE, Optic.

OPTOM'ETER, (οπτοματ, 'I see,' and μετρον, 'a measure,') An instrument for measuring the distance of distinct vision.

OPUNTIA, (from Opus, Opus, gen. Opuntis, 'a town of Loeris,) Cactus opuntia—o. Vulgaris, Cactus opuntia.

OR, (from aurum,) Gold—o. Blanc, Platinum—o. Cyanure d', see Gold—o. Divisé, see Gold—o. Hydrochlorate d', see Gold—o. Iodure d', see Gold—o. Métallique, see Gold—o. Nitromuriate d', see Gold—o. Oxide d', see Gold—o. et de Sodium chlorure d', see Gold—o. et de Soude, Hydrochlorate d', see Gold—o. et de Soude, Muriate d', see Gold.

ORA SERRATA, ('serrated edge,') see Ovary (Body).

ORACHE, SPREADING, Atriplex patula—o. Stinking, Chenopodium vulvaria.

ORAL, Vocal, (F.) Oral, (from os, gen. oris, 'a mouth.')

Relating to the mouth or to speech.
ORANGE, (from modern Lat. aurantium, itself from aurum, 'gold'—the colour of the fruit,) Citrus aurantium—o. Bitter, see Citrus aurantium—o. Flowers of the, see Citrus aurantium.

ORANGE GRASS, Hypericum sarothrum—o. Root, Hydrastis Canadensis—o. Tree, Citrus aurantium.

ORANGEADE, (from orange.) A drink, made with orange juice diluted with water. It is antiphlogistic, and often recommended in acute diseases.

ORANGES, see Citrus aurantium—o. Curassoa, Aurantia curassaventa.

ORBES CARTILAGINOSI TRACHEÆ, (orbis, 'circle,') see Trachea.

ORBICULAIRE DES LÈVRES, Orbicularis oris—o. des Pauvères, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

ORBICULAR, Orbicularis, (F.) Orbiculaire, (from orbis, 'a circle,') Spherical, Circular.

ORBICULAR BONE, Os orbicularē seu lenticularē seu Syll'vii seu orbicularē Syll'vii, Globulus stap'edis os'is, Epiph'ysis cruris longioris incudis, Ossiculum orbicularē seu squamosum seu cochlearē seu quar'tum, is the smallest of the four bones of the ear. It is scarcely perceptible, round, convex on two surfaces, and situate between the long ramus of the incus and the head of the stapes.

ORBICULAR MUSCLES are muscles with circular fibres surrounding some natural opening of the body. 1. Orbicularis seu Constrictor Oris, Sphincter Labiorum, Sem'is Demiorbicularis, Suprasemiorbicularis, Labialis, Osculatorius, Basialis, (F.) Labial, Orbiculaire des lèvres. A muscle situate in the substance of the lips, and extending from one commissure to the other. It is formed of two very distinct portions, of a semi-oval shape; one belonging to the upper lip, the other to the lower. Their extremities cross at the commissures, and are confounded with the other muscles of the parts. The use of this fleshy muscle is to bring the lips together, and to close the aperture of the mouth, by making it represent a sort of bouffret with radiated wrinkles. It is an antagonist to every other muscle of the lips. 2. Orbicularis Palpebrarum seu oculi seu palpebrarum ciliaris, Palpebrarum du'o mus'culi, Palpebralis, Constrictor seu Sphincter Palpebrarum seu Oculi, (F.) Naso-palpébral (Ch.); Maxillo-palpébral, Palpébral, Orbiculaire des paupières. A muscle common to both the eyelids, and seated in their substance. It is broad, thin, transversely oval, and cleft in its great diameter. It is attached to the nasal process of the superior maxillary bone; to the internal angular process of the frontal bone, and to the orbitar process of the superior maxillary bone. From these origins the muscle passes outwards, under the skin of the eyelids, surrounding the orbit in a circular manner, extending somewhat beyond it, and covering the upper part of the cheek. It is inserted into the skin of the eyelids, its upper and inner edge being intimately connected with the frontal and corrugator muscles. Its use is to close the eye, by bringing the eyelids together. The part of the orbicularis which covers the cartilages of the eyelids, and which is remarkably thin, is the Musculus Ciliaris of some authors.

ORBICULARIS OCULI, Orbicularis palpebrarum, see Orbicular muscles—o. Oris, see Orbicular muscles—o. Palpebrarum, see Orbicular muscles—o. Palpebrarum ciliaris, see Orbicular muscles—o. Recti, Sphincter ani externus.

ORBICULUS CILIARIS, (dim. of orbis, 'a circle,') Ciliary ligament, Ciliary zone.

ORBIS GENU, Patella.

ORBIT, Orbita, O. oculi, Troch'ia, Conchus seu Cavitas seu Fovea seu Pelvicula oculi, (F.)

Orbite, (from orbis, 'a circle,') The circular cavities are so called, which lodge the organs of sight. The orbis or orbital fossæ or cavities, conchi, κογχαι, are situate at the upper part of the face, and are composed of seven bones, viz.,—the frontal, above; the palate and superior maxillary, below; the sphenoid and malar, externally; and the ethmoid and lachrymal, internally. The orbit is filled by the globe of the eye, with its different accessory parts—muscles, nerves, vessels, the lachrymal gland, &c. Its margin is termed margo orbitalis.

ORBITA, Orbit—o. Oculi, Orbit.

ORBITAL, Orbital—o. Fissure, inferior, Sphenoidal fissure—o. Fissure, superior, Maxillary fissure.

ORBITAL, Orbitarius, Orbitalis, Orbital, (F.) Orbitaire. Relating or belonging to the orbit.

ORBITAR APOPH'YSES or PROC'ESSES terminate the two extremities of the orbitar arch. The external is much more prominent, and is articulated with the cheekbone; the internal is thinner, and joins the os unguis.

ORBITAR ARCH, (F.) Arcade orbitaire, is the projecting, round margin, which separates the frontal and orbital surfaces of the os frontis, and forms a part of the circumference of the orbit.

ORBITAR FIS'SURES, (F.) Fentes orbitaires. These are situate in the orbit. They are two in number: one superior, the Sphenoidal; the other inferior, the Sphenomaxillary.

ORBITAR FORAM'INA. Of these there are several.—1. The Foram'ena orbitarium superioris, (F.) Trou orbitaire supérieur, which is situate at the junction of the inner third of the orbitar arch with its two outer thirds, and gives passage to the frontal nerve. 2. The Foram'ina orbitaria interiora seu interna, Foram'ina Ethmoidea. These are situate at the upper part of the internal parties of the orbit, are formed by the union of two notches of the os frontis with two similar ones of the ethmoid; and are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former gives passage to the ethmoidal filament of the nasal nerve and to a small artery.

ORBITAR NERVE, Nervus orbitalis seu orbitarius seu subcutaneus malar, is a branch given off from the superior maxillary. It enters the orbit by the sphenomaxillary fissure, and divides into two filaments; the one—malar—which passes over the cheekbone, is distributed to the orbicularis palpebrarum, and anastomoses with the facial nerve; the other—temporal—which passes to the temporal fosse, and anastomoses with the inferior maxillary and facial, to become afterwards subcutaneous.

ORBITAR SURFACE, see Maxillary bone (superior).

ORBITO-EXTUS-SCLÉROTICIEN, Rectus externus oculi—o. Intus-Scléroticien, Rectus internus oculi—o. Maxillo-labial, Levator labii superioris proprius—o. Palpébral, Levator palpebræ superioris—o. Sus-palpébral, Levator palpebræ superioris.

ORCHANET, Anchusa tinctoria.

ORCANETTE, Anchusa tinctoria.

ORCHALGIA, Orchidalgia.

ORCHEA, (ορχέα) Serotum.

ORCHEITIS, Osciti's, Oschei'tis, Inflammatio scro'ti, (orchæa, and itis). Inflammation of the serotum, also Hernia humoralis.

ORCHEOCATABASIS, Orchidocatabasis.

ORCHEOCELE, Orchiocèle.

ORCHEOTOMY, (orchis, and τεμνω, 'to cut,') Castration.

ORCHESTROMANIA, (ορχηστρη, 'a dancer, and mania) Chorea.

ORCHIDA, (from orchis,) Spirocolon.

ORCHIDAL'GIA, Orchial'gia, Orchidodyn'ia, Orchiodyn'ia, (orchis, and algos, 'pain.') Pain of the testicle. Neuralgia of the testicle. Irritable testicle; a form of neuralgia.

ORCHIDATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia testiculi, orchis, and atrophia, 'atrophy.') Atrophy or wasting of the testicle.

ORCHIDITIS, (orchis, and itis.) Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIDOCARPUM ARIETINUM, (orchis, and καρπος, 'fruit,') see Carica papaya.

ORCHIDOCATAB'ASIS, Orcheocatab'asis, Descen'sus testiculo'rum, (orchis, and καταβασις, 'descent,') The descent of the testes into the scrotum.

ORCHIDOCELE, (orchis, and κηλη, 'tumor,') Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIDODYNIA, (orchis, and δυνη, 'pain,') Orchidalgia.

ORCHIDOMYELO'MA, (orchis, μυελος, 'marrow,' and oma.) Medullary, fungus of the testicle.

ORCHIDONCUS, (orchis, and ογκος, 'a swelling,') Hernia humoralis.

ORCHIOSCIRR'HUS, see Orchiocoele.

ORCHIDOTOMY, (orchis, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Castration.

ORCHILL, Lichen rocella.

ORCHIOCE'LE, Orcheocel'le, (orchis, or orchea, and κηλη, 'a rupture,') A tumour of the testicle. Scrotal hernia. Hernia humoralis. A name given to several diseases of the testicle and its envelopes, essentially differing from each other.

ORCHIOCE'LE SCIRRHO'SA, Scirrhocel'le, Orchioscirrhus, Orchioscirrhus. A scirrhus tumor of the testis.

ORCHIODYNIA, (orchis, and δυνη, 'pain,') Orchidalgia.

ORCHIOSCIRR'HUS, see Orchiocoele.

ORCHIOTOMIA, (orchis, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Castration.

ORCHIS, gen. Or'chidis or Orchis, (ορχις, gen. ορχιδος or ορχως.) Testicle—o. Bifolia, see Salap—o. Butterfly, Orchis bifolia—o. Latifolia, see Salap—o. maculata, see Salap.

ORCHIS MAS'CU'LA, Saty'ion, Testiculus caninus, Cynosor'chis, Dogs' stones, Mule or'chis, Ball-lockgrass, Male Fools' stones, Twinroot. Ord. Orchidaceae. This root had a place in some pharmacopœias, on account of the glutinous, slimy juice it contains. The root of the Orchis bifolia or Butterfly orchis has likewise been collected. It has been used as a demulcent. Its fancied aphrodisiac virtues seem to be owing to its resemblance to ορχις, 'a testicle,' whence its name.

Salap is obtained from this variety of the orchis, and from the Orchis morio, &c. See Salap.

ORCHIS MILITARIS, see Salap—o. Round-leaved, Large, Platanthera orbiculata.

ORCHITE, Hernia humoralis.

ORCHITIS, (orchis, and itis, 'inflammation,') Hernia humoralis.

ORCHITOMIA, (orchis, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Castration.

ORCHOI, (ορχος, 'a row,') see Tarsus.

ORCHOTOMIA, (orchis, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Castration. Also, removal of the tarsi.

ORDEAL NUT, Calabar' Bean; (F.) Fève du Calabar, Fève éprouve du Calabar; called Esere by the natives of Calabar, is from a plant of the natural family, Leguminosae—the Physostig'ma venenosum—closely resembling a Dolichos. It is possessed of virulent acro-narcotic properties. One or two drops of a solution of an extract of the bean, introduced under the eyelids, rapidly contracts the pupil, and may be used where myosities are indicated. Its active alkaloid is termed Physostig'mine.

ORDEOLUM, Hordeolum.

ORDEUM, Hordeum.

ORDINAIRES, (from (L.) ordo, gen. ordinis, 'an established process,') Menses.

ORDO MEDICINALIS, Police, medical.

ORDONNANCE, (from ordonner, 'to order,') Formula. Prescription.

OREILLE, (from (L.) auris.) Ear—o. d'Âne, Symphytum—o. d'Homme, Asarum—o. d'Ours, Primula veris—o. de Souris, Hieracium pilosella.

OREILLETTE, (dim. of oreille, (L.) auricula, 'a small ear,') Asarum, Auricle of the heart.

OREILLONS, (from oreille,) Parotis, Cynanche parotidæa.

ORELIA GRANDIFLORA, Allamanda.

ORELLANA, see Terra Orleana.

OREOSELINUM, (oros, 'a mountain,' and σελωνος, 'parsley,') Athamanta aureoselinum—o. Africanum, Bubon galbanum—o. Legitimum, Athamanta aureoselinum—o. Nigrum, Athamanta aureoselinum.

OREXIS, (ορεξις.) Appetite, Pyrosis—o. Cynodes, Boulimia.

OR'GAN, Or'ganum, Or'ganon, (οργανον, from εργον, 'work,' 'an instrument,') Part of an organized being, destined to exercise some particular function. Thus, the eyes are organs of sight; the muscles are organs of motion, &c. The collection of organs, which concur in any function, is called apparatus.

ORGAN, Mentha pulegium.

ORGAN OF GIRALDÈS, Corps innominé de Giraldès. A small linear body at the upper end of the testicle in the spermatic cord, regarded by Giraldès as the remains of the Wolffian body, and analogous to the 'appendage to the ovary' of the female.

ORGAN OF ROSENMULLER, Parovarium.

ORGANA GENERATIONI INSERVIENTIA, Genital organs—o. Genitalia, Genital organs—o. Sexualia, Genital organs—o. Sudoripara, see Perspiration—o. Urogenitalia, Urogenital organs—o. Uropoetica, Urinary organs.

ORGANES GÉNITAUX, Genital organs.

ORGAN'IC, (οργανικος.) Organ'icus, (F.) Organique. Relating to an organ or organs, and to beings possessed of organs. Hence, ORGANIC FUNCTIONS are those possessed by both animals and vegetables. It, as well as teleorgan'ic, is also used synonymously with vital, in contradistinction to physical.

ORGANIC CHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

ORGANIC DISEASES or LE'SIONS—Nosorgania of Bouchut—are such as concern the organ itself, in contradistinction to functional, rational, or dynam'ic, which merely concern the function. Of course, organic diseases of a part are always more serious than functional.

ORGANIC NERVOUS SYSTEM, see Trisplanchnic nerve.

ORGANICISM, or ORGAN'ICISM, Organicism'us, (from organ.) The doctrine of the localization of disease, or which refers it always to a material lesion of an organ. Organicism is the antithesis to vitalism. The great principle of the supporters of the former doctrine, (F.) École organicienne, is, that life is the result of organization.

ORGANISATIO, Organization.

ORGANISATUS, Organized.

ORGANISÉ, Organized.

ORGANISM. The living economy. Many physiologists have used this word synonymously with organization; but it more especially designates the aggregate of vital actions in organized beings, animal as well as vegetable. The collection of parts composing an organized body, and the laws which govern it.

OR'GANITE, (from organ.) According to Dr. Milne Edwards, an elementary organ,—a blood-corpusele, for example.

ORGANIZABILITY, (organisatio, and habis lis, 'suitable.') Capability of organization, or of being formed into living tissue. Substances possessed of such capability—as fibrin—are said to be organizable.

ORGANIZABLE, see Organizability.

ORGANIZATION, Organizatio. The manner of structure proper to different beings. It is also employed in the sense of the structure of a part; as the organization of the heart, &c.

ORGANIZATION, COMPOUNDS OF, Principles, immediate.

ORGANIZED, Organisatus, Organisatus, (F.) Organisé. That which is composed of organs.

ORGANIZED BODIES, (F.) Corps organisés, are those endowed with life; i. e. animals and vegetables: in contradistinction to inorganie bodies, which comprise the mineral kingdom. See Corpus.

ORGANO-CHEMIA, Chymistry, organic.

ORGANOGENY, Organogenia, Organogenesis, (organ, and genesis, 'generation.') The doctrine of the formation of different organs.

ORGANOGNOSIA, (organ, and gnosis, 'knowledge.') The knowledge and discrimination of organized bodies.

ORGANOGRAPHY, Organographia, (organ, and grapho, 'a description.') A description of the organs of a living body.

ORGANOLEPTIC, (organ, and ληψις, 'action of receiving,') Plastic.

ORGANOLOGY, (organ, and λογος, 'a description,') Anatomy, Craniology.

ORGANON, (organon), Organ—o. Olfactus, Nasus.

ORGANONOMIA, (organ, and νομος, 'a law.') The doctrine of the laws of organic life.

ORGANOPATHISM, Organopathologia, (organ, and πάθος, 'an affection.') The doctrine of organopathies, or of 'organopathic states,' of Piorry, which consists, essentially, in studying the pathological condition of the organs in each individual case.

ORGANOPLASTIES, (organ, and πλασσειν, 'to form,') see Training.

ORGANOSCOPY, (organ, and σκοπεω, 'I examine,') see Craniology.

ORGANOZOONOMIA, (organ, ζωον, 'an animal,' and νομος, 'a law,') Zoonomia.

ORGANUM, (organon), Instrument, Organ.

ORGASM, (orgasmos), Organismus, Orgosis, (Esturus, Æstrum, (orgawo, 'I desire ardently,' 'I am excited,') A strong impulse or desire for something. State of excitement and turgescence of any organ whatever. Erethism. Applied particularly to the height of venereal excitement in sexual intercourse.

ORGASMUS, Orgasm, Turgescence.

ORGAS'TICA. The second order of the class Genetica of Good. Defined to be diseases affecting the orgasm; organic or constitutional infirmity disordering the power or the desire of procreating.

ORGE, (οργη), Rage.

ORGE, Hordeum—o. Perlé, see Hordecum.

ORGEAT, (from orge, because formerly made with barley water,) Syrupus amygdalæ.

ORGELET, (dim. of orge), Hordecolum.

ORGEOLET, (dim. of orge), Hordecolum.

ORGOSIS, Orgasus.

ORICHALCUM, (aurichalcum, or from oros, 'a mountain,' and χαλκος, 'brass,') Brass.

ORICULAR, Auricular.

ORICULE, Auricle, Pavilion of the ear.

ORIFICIUM, (os, gen. oris, 'a mouth,' and facere, 'to make,') Mouth.—o. Dextrum Ventrliculi, Pylorus—o. Uteri, Os uteri—o. Uterinum, see Uterus—o. Vaginale, see Uterus—o. Ventriculi sinistrum, Cardia.

ORIGANUM, O. vulgare seu heracleoticum, origanum, (from oros, 'a mountain,' and γανος, 'delight,') Cinnila bulbula, Majora'na mancura'na,

Zazarhen'di her'ba, Wild or Common mar'joram, Mancura'na, (F.) Pied de lit. Ord. Labiate. Scar. Syst Didynamia Gymnospermia. This plant resembles marjoram in smell; and has a pungent taste, much like thyme. It is aromatic and stimulant; and its oil possesses the properties of the essential oils in general. The oil, Öleum origani (Ph. U. S.), is very pungent, and is rarely given internally. It is used in toothache.

ORGANUM AQUATICUM, Eupatorium canadense—o. Creticum, O. dictamnus.

ORGANUM DICTAMNUS, O. Creticum, Dictamnus Creticus, Amar'acus tomento'sus, Oni'tis, Ditt'any of Crete, (F.) Dictamme de Crète. The leaves of this plant were once recommended as emmenagogue and alexipharmic.

ORGANUM HERACLEOTICUM, Organum.

ORGANUM MAJORA'NA, O. majorano'sides, Majora'na, M. hortensis, Sweet mor'joram, Samp'suchum, Samp'syechum, Agriorig'anum, Amar'acus, (F.) Marjolaine. Its odour is strong and fragrant; taste aromatic and bitterish. Its properties are those of a stomachic and errhine. It is chiefly used, however, for culinary purposes, and as a snuff in headache.

ORGANUM SYRIACUM, Teucrium marum.

ORIGINAIRE (F.), (origo, gen. originis, 'origin,') This term has been used, by French writers, in the same sense as congenital. It is particularly applied to affections depending upon faulty conformation, or to faulty conformation itself.

ORIGO, (orior, 'to arise,') Aroche.

ORISMOLOGY, (ορισμος, 'a definition,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') Terminology.

ORLEANA, see Terra Orleana.

ORME, (orun), Appetite.

ORME, Ulmus—o. Champêve, Ulmus—o. Pyramidale, Ulmus.

ORMEAUM, Ulmus.

ORMS'KIRK MED'ICINE. A celebrated antilyssic remedy, supposed to consist of Pulv. Crète, ℥ss; Bol. Armen. ℥ij; Alumin. gr. x; Pulv. Iulæ, ℥j; Ol. Anisi, gtt. vj.

This is taken for a dose every morning for six times, in a glass of water, with a small proportion of fresh milk.

ORNAMENTUM FOLIACEUM, see Tube, Fallopian.

ORNITHOGALUM ALTIS'SIMUM. (ορνιθγαλον, a fanciful name, from ornis, gen. ornithos, 'a bird,' and γαλα, 'milk,') A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Asphodeleæ, the fleshy bulb of which is diuretic. An oxymel is prepared of it, which is given in catarrh, asthma, phthisis, and hydrothorax. It resembles squill in its medical properties.

ORNITHOGALUM MARITIMUM, Scilla—o. Squilla, Scilla.

ORNITHOGLOSSA, (ornis, gen. ornithos, 'a bird,' and γλωσσα, 'a tongue,') see Fraxinus excelsior.

ORNUS EUROPEÆ, see Fraxinus ornus—o. Mannifera, Fraxinus ornus—o. Rotundifolia, Fraxinus ornus—o. Sylvestris, Fraxinus excelsior.

OROBANCHÆ VIRGINIA'NA, (orobus, and αγγω, 'I strangle,') Epiphe'gus seu Epifa'gus America'nus seu Virginia'nus, Virginia broomrape, Beechdrops, Cancerroot. Family, Orobanchoidæ. This parasitic plant is astringent, and a peculiar and extremely nauseous bitter. It is most powerful when fresh. It has been used in dysentery; and, externally to obstinate ulcers.

OROBANCHÆ AMERICA'NA, and O. UNIFLORA, have the same properties, and are likewise called Cancerroot, Eartheclub, and Claywort.

OROBÆ, (οροβος), Ervum ervilia.

OROBION, see Ervum ervilia.

OROBOD'ES, (orobus, and ειδος, 'form,') Orobodes. Having the shape of the orobus. A name given to urine, Urina orobodes seu orobod'i- des, when depositing a substance of a fawn colour, like the meal of the orobus.

OROBUS, (οροβος,) Ervum ervilia — o. Faba, Vicia faba.

ORANGE, (from orange, its color,) see Agaric.
ORONOSUS, (ορος, 'a mountain,' and νοσος, 'a disease,') Puna.

OROPHALL'US, (ορος or οροφος, 'the rump,' and φαλλος, 'the male organ,') A monster having a second male organ originating from the rump.

OROS, (ορος,) Croupion, Serum.

ORPIMENT, Auripigmentum, Or'pin, Risigallum, Rissigallum, Olo'anc, Elo'mē, Sī'ra, Lempnia, Spec'ulum cit'rinum, Y'rides, Y'ridē. The native yellow sulphure of arsenic. It is poisonous, but less so than the oxide. It is, also, called Adari'go, Adar'nech, Ahu'sal, Althana'cha, Azar'net. The Turks prepare a depilatory with it, which they call Rus'ma.

ORPIN, Orpiment — o. Brūlant, Sedum — o. Grand, Sedum telephium — o. Reprise, Sedum telephium.

ORPINE, Sedum telephium.

ORRHOCHEZIA, (ορρος, 'serum,' and χεζω, 'to go to stool,') Diarrhœa, serous.

ORRHOCYST'IS, (ορρος, 'serum,' and κυστις, 'a bladder,') An encysted tumour containing a serous fluid.

ORRHOMENES, (ορρος, 'serum,' and μενη, 'a membrane,') see Membrane (serous).

ORRHOMYELITIS, (ορρος, 'serum,' and μενη, 'a membrane,' and ιτις,) Hydroymenitis.

ORRHOPYG'ION, (ορρος, 'extremity,' and πυγη, 'the nates,') The inferior extremity of the vertebral column. The os coccygis. Also, the raphe, extending from the penis to the anus, and separating the serotum into two parts.

ORRHORRHŒ'A, (ορρος, 'serum,' and ρεω, 'I flow,') A morbidly increased secretion of a serous fluid.

ORRHOS, (ορρος,) Croupion, Serum.

ORRHOMENES, (ορρος, 'serum,' and μενη, 'a membrane,') see Membrane (serous).

ORRHOMYELITIS, (orrhymenes, and itis,) Hydroymenitis.

ORRIS, Iris Florentina — o. Common, Iris Germanica,

ORSEILLE, Lichen roccella.

ORTEIL, (from articulus, 'a joint,') Digitus pedis.

ORTHO, (from ορθος,) straight, right, upright, in composition.

ORTHOCOL'UM, (ortho, and κωλον, 'limb,') Stiffness of the limb so that it is kept quite straight.

ORTHODON'TIA, Orthodonticē, Orthodontosie, (ortho, and οδους, gen. οδοντος, 'a tooth,') The part of dentistry which is concerned in the treatment of irregularity of the teeth.

ORTHODORON, (ορθοδωρον, from ortho, and ωρον, 'a palm,') A measure with the Greeks, equal to eleven finger-breadths.

ORTHOGNATHOUS, (ortho, and γναθος, 'jaw,') Having a vertical jaw. A term applied to the form of head in which the facial angle approaches the right angle; Orthognathus.

ORTHOMORPHIA, (ortho, and μορφη, 'shape,') Orthopædia.

ORTHOMORPHOSIS, Orthopædia.

ORTHONTROPIA, (ortho, and εντροπειν, 'to convert,') Orthopædia.

ORTHOPÆDIA, Orthopædicē, Orthomor'phia, Orthomorph'ois, Orthontrop'ia, Orthopæ'dies, (ortho, and παις, gen. παιδος, 'a child,') The part of medicine whose object is to prevent and correct deformity in the bodies of children. Often used, however, with a more extensive signification, to embrace the correction or prevention of deformities at all ages. Orthosomat'ics, Orthosomat'icē, (from ορθος, 'right,' and σωμα, 'body,') has been proposed as a preferable term.

ORTHOPE'DIC, Orthopæ'dicus. Relating to orthopædia, — as Orthopæ'dic Institution, Institutum orthopæ'dicum seu orthopæ'dium: an institution for the correction or prevention of deformities in children.

ORTHOPE'DICS, Orthopædia.

ORTHOPE'DIST, Ortho'ter, Orthopæ'dicus. One who practises orthopædia.

ORTHOPHON'IA, (ortho, and φωνη, 'voice,') A good pronunciation.

ORTHOPHREN'IC, Orthophren'icus, (ortho, and φρη, 'mind,') Relating to sound mind, and to the cure of insanity.

ORTHOPHTHAL'MIC, Orthophthal'micus, (ortho, and οφθαλμος, 'eye,') Relating or belonging to the correction of deviations of the eyeball, — as of strabismus.

ORTHOPNE'A, Suffoca'tio, Straugula'tio, Præfoca'tio, Pniz, Pniz'is, Pniz'is, Pniz'is, Euthyp'noē, Euthypnæ'a, An'gor, Apnæ'a (ortho, and πνω, 'I inspire,') Impracticability of breathing in the horizontal posture. Necessity of being in the erect posture, in order to respire.

ORTHOPNEA CARDIACA, Angina Pectoris — o. Convulsiva, Asthma — o. Cynanchica, Cynanche trachealis — o. Hydrothoracica, Hydrothorax — o. Hysterica, Angone — o. Pituitosa, Mycorthoracæa — o. Tussiculosa, Pertussis.

ORTHOSOMATICE, (ortho, and σωμα, 'body,') Orthopædia.

ORTHOSOMATIQUE, Orthopædia.

ORTHOTER, (ορθωτηρ,) Orthopedist.

ORTHYSTEROPTOMA, gen. Orthysteropto'matis, (ortho, ἰσθηρα, 'uterus,' and πτωμα, 'a fall,') Prolapsus uteri.

ORTHYSTEROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

ORTIE, Urtica — o. Blanche, Lamium album — o. Brūlante, Urtica urens — o. Morte, Lamium album — o. Morte des Bois, Galeopsis — o. Romaine, Urtica pilulifera.

ORTILLUS, (from articulus, 'a joint,') Digitus pedis.

ORTYX, (ορτυξ,) Tetrao coturnix.

ORUS, (ορος,) Croupion, Serum.

ORVALE, Salvia sclarea.

ORVIETANUM. (From the Italian quack, Hieronymus Ferrantes, of Orvieto.) An electuary regarded as an invaluable antidote, and composed of Old theriac, Dried vipers, Scorzonera, Carlina, Imperatorium, Angelica, Bistort, Rosemary, Jusiper, Cinnamon, Cloves, Mace, Honey, and a crowd of other substances. Its medical properties resembled, in some respects, those of the theriac. (It was so called, according to some, because invented by Orvietano, a celebrated charlatan; or, according to others, from Orvieto, a town in Italy.)

ORYZA, (ορυζα,) Ory'za sativ'a, Ory'zum, Rice, (F.) Riz. Family, Gramineæ. Sec. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. A plant, almost aquatic, indigenous in China, one of the richest productions of Egypt, and which prospers in the warmer regions of the four quarters of the globe. The grain included in the husk is called by the Malays Pad'dy, Padī, or Pad'die; when deprived of the husk, Bras, and when boiled, Nasi. Its amylaceous seeds, Ory'za, Ory'zum, Hor'dæum galacticum, nourish more men than those of wheat and rye together. Besides being alimentary, they are demulcent and emollient. Gard'ner's alimentary prepar'ation is very finely ground ricemeal.

Mu'ciage of Rice, Rice water, may be formed by taking one ounce of rice, and, having washed it, macerating it for three hours in a quart of tepid soft water, in a pan placed upon a stove; then boiling the whole slowly for another hour, and straining through a sieve.

It may be sweetened and acidulated, or be prepared with milk, like arrowroot, and be used as a demulcent.

Rice Jelly is made by macerating a sufficient quantity of clean rice in as much water as will cover it; boiling slowly, adding water as it evaporates, until the rice is reduced to a pap, sweetening and flavouring with lemonjuice or vanilla, and passing through a fine sieve into a form or mould. It may be eaten alone or with milk; and is a good dietetic preparation for those of weak digestive powers.

Ground rice. Take a tablespoonful of ground rice, a pint and a half of milk, and half an ounce of cau'died lem'onpeel. Rub the rice smooth with the milk; then add the lemonpeel cut into small pieces; boil for half an hour, and strain whilst the milk is hot. It is used in the same cases as rice jelly.

ORYZUM, (ορυζον,) Oryza.

OSCEDO, (os, 'the mouth,' and ciere, citum, to move,) Yawning.

OSCHEMATŒDEMA, gen. Oschematœdematis, Oschemœdema, Œdema scroti cruentum, (osche, 'aqua,' 'blood,' and oichma, 'œdema.') Effusion of blood into the scrotum.

OSCHÆMÆDEMA, Oschæmatœdema.
 OSCHÆ, (οσχη,) Serotum.
 OSCHÆITIS, (osche, and itis), Orchicitis, Oschitis.
 OSCHÆOCARCINOMA, Cancer, chimney-sweepers'.
 OSCHÆOCE'LE, Oschœce'lê, Serotocelê, (oscheon, and κληη, 'tumour,') Serot'al her'nia, see Bubonocœle. Sauvages uses oschœcele in the sense of Dropsy of the scrotum, see Hydrocele.
 OSCHÆOCELE AQUOSA, Hydroschœcele—o. Flatulenta, Physocele—o. Hydatidosa, Hydatidocœle—o. Œdematica, Œdematoschœcele—o. Seminalis, Spermatocele—o. Urinalis, Urocele—o. Vari-cosa, Variocele.
 OSCHÆOCHALASIE, (oscheon, and χαλασις, 'relaxation,') A tumour resulting from hypertrophy of the areolar tissue of the serotum, and the excessive extension of the skin of the part,—an affection which has been confounded with sarcocele.
 OSCHÆON, (οσχων,) Serotum.
 OSCHÆON'CUS, Oschon'cus, Oschœophy'ma, Oschœophy'ma, (oscheon, and σκος, 'a tumour,') A preternatural swelling of the serotum.
 OSCHÆOPHYMA, (oscheon, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Oscheoncus.
 OSCHÆOPLAS'TIC, Oscheoplas'ticus, (oscheon, and πλασσω, 'I form,') An epithet given to the operation for restoring the serotum when lost. Os'cheoplasty.
 OSCHÆOPYŒDE'MA, gen. Oscheopyœde'matis, Oscheopyœde'ma, Œde'ma scroti purulentum, (oscheon, πων, 'pus,' and œdema.) Purulent tumefaction of the serotum.
 OSCHÆUS, (οσχειος,) Serotum.
 OS'CHION, (οσχιον.) The raised margin of the os uteri. According to some, an excrescence from the os uteri.
 OSCHITIS, Oscheit'is, Oschi'tis, Inflammat'io scrot'i, (osche, and itis.) Inflammation of the serotum.
 OSCHOCARCINOMA, gen. Oschocarcino'matis, Cancer, chimney-sweepers'.
 OSCHŒOLE, Oscheocœle, Serotocœle.
 OSCHONCUS, Oscheoncus.
 OSCHOPHYMA, gen. Oschœophy'matis, (oschus, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Oscheoncus.
 OSCHOPYŒDEMA, Oscheopyœdema.
 OSCHURYŒDE'MA, gen. Oschurœde'matis, (oschus, ουρον, 'urine,' and œdema, 'œdema,') Œdema from effusion of urine into the serotum.
 OSCHUS, (οσχος,) Serotum.
 OSCHYDRŒDE'MA, (oschus, δδωρ, 'water,' and œdema, 'œdema,') Œdema scroti aquosum. Watery œdema of the serotum.
 OSCILLA'TIO, Irritability, Oscillation.
 OSCILLA'TION, Oscilla'tio, (from oscillare, oscillatum, 'to swing,') Vibration, Vibra'men, Vibra'tio, Vibra'tus. Also, a partial rotatory movement of the eyeball to and from its antero-posterior axis.
 OS'CITANT (FEVER), Fe'bris os'citans, (F.) Fèvre oscitante, (oscitare, 'to yawn,' from os, 'the mouth,' and ciere, citum, 'to move,') A fever, in which the patient is continually yawning.
 OSCITATIO, Yawning.
 OSCULATORIUS, (from osculum, dim. of os, 'a mouth,') Orbicularis oris.
 OSCULUM UTERI, (osculum, dim. of os, 'a mouth,') Os uteri.
 OSCUS, (οσχος,) Serotum.
 OSERLE, (from oxalis,) Rumex acetosus—o. Boucher, Rumex scutatus—o. Petite, Rumex scutatus—o. Ronde, Rumex scutatus—o. Rouge, Rumex sanguineus.
 OSIER, (from osier,) Salix alba—o. Red, Cornus sericea.
 OSIS, (ωσις.) A suffix in many terms, which signifies the condition in general; and, in pathological terms, the morbid condition.

 OS'MAZOME, Os'mozome, Osmazo'ma, Osmozo'ma, Os'mazome, Zomod'mum, (F.) Matière extractive du Bouillon, Extrait de viande; Extractive or Sopona'ceous extract of meat; (osme, and ζωμος, 'soup,') M. Thénard gave this name to an extractive matter, contained in muscular flesh and in the blood of animals, which he considers of a peculiar nature. It has an agreeable smell and taste, and is found in Bouillons of meat, in the proportion of one part to seven of gelatin. Vauquelin discovered it in some fungi. It is the substance which gives the flavour of meat to soups, and hence its name. It is a mixture of different crystallizable and uncrystallizable principles with empyreumatic products.
 Osmazome has been prescribed in the dose of ℥ss to ℥j, in broth or in powder, with aromatics, as a stimulant to the digestive actions and a restorer of appetite in convalescence. An Osmazome chocolate, Chocola'ta cum osmazo'ma, has been introduced as an anæsthetic article of diet. It consists of chocolate lbj to osmazome ℥j.
 OSME, (οσμη,) Odour.
 OSMESIS, (οσμησις,) Olfaction.
 OSMDRO'SIS, (osme, and ιδρωσις, 'sweat,') Perspiration of an unusual odour.
 OSMITOP'SIS ASTERISCOIDES, (from οσμη, 'an agreeable odour,') Bell'is. A plant, of the Cape of Good Hope, which, from its smell and taste, seems to contain camphor; hence its antispasmodic virtues. In infusion, it is said to be beneficially employed in cough, hoarseness, and diseases of the chest generally, and is said to be serviceable in flatulent colic. Infused in spirit, spir'itus bell'idis, it has been used successfully as an external remedy in paralysis.
 OSMOMETRICUS SENSUS, (osme, and μετρον, 'measure,') Olfaction.
 OSMON'OSI, Osmonu'si, Mor'bi olfact'us, (osme, and νοσος, 'a disease,') Diseases of olfaction.
 OSMONOSOLOG'IA, (osme, νοσος, 'disease,' and λογος, 'description,') The doctrine of, or a treatise on, the diseases of the sense of smell.
 OSMORRHI'ZA LONGIS'TYLLIS, (osme, and ρίζα, 'a root,') Sweet Cic'ely. An indigenous plant, Order, Umbelliferae, which flowers in May and June. It is an agreeable aromatic, having much of the flavour of anise.
 OSMOSE, Osmo'sis, (ωσμος, 'impulse,') The force by which fluids are impelled through moist membrane and other porous septa, in endosmotic and exosmotic actions.
 OSMOTIC, Osmot'icus. Relating to or belonging to osmose: as 'osmotic force,' the force which induces osmose.
 OSMOZOME, Osmazome.
 OSMUND ROYAL, Osmunda regalis.
 OSMUN'DA CINNAMOM'EA, (from Osmunder, one of the names of Thor, a Scandinavian deity,) Cin'namon Fern. Indigenous; Order, Filices; is regarded to be demulcent, subastringent, and tonic. Boiled in milk, it yields a fine mucilage, which is useful in diarrhœa.
 OSMUN'DA REGA'LIS, O. spectabilis, Filix Flor'ida, Flow'ering Fern, Osmund-royal. This plant was once thought to possess astringent and emmenagogue virtues.
 OSMUNDA SPECTABILIS, O. regalis.
 OSOROR, Opium.
 OSPHRANTERIUS, (οσφραντηριος,) Olfactory.
 OSPHRANTICOS, (οσφραντικος,) Olfactory.
 OSPHRASIA, (οσφρασια,) Olfaction.
 OSPHRESIOLOG'Y, Osphresiology'ia, (osphresis, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on olfaction and odours. Osmol'ogy, Osmolog'ia.
 OSPHRESIS, (οσφρησις,) Olfaction.
 OSPHRETICUS, (οσφρητικος,) Olfactory.

OSPHRIS'TICĒ, (from osphresis.) The doctrine of the phenomena of odours.

OSPHYALGEMA, gen. Osphyalgematiss, (osphyus, and άλγῆμα, 'pain,') Coxalgia.

OSPHYALGIA, (osphyalgia, from osphyus, and άλγος, 'pain,') Coxalgia.

OSPHYARTHROSIS, (osphyus, and arthrosis), Osphyitis.

OSPHYARTHROCE, (osphyus, and arthroce), Coxarum morbus.

OSPHYITIS, Osphyitis, Osphyarthritiss, Inflammatio coxæ, (osphyus, and itis.) Inflammation of the parts about the hip.

OSPHYRRHEUMA, (osphyus, and ῥέυμα, 'rheumatism,') Lumbago.

OSPHYUS, (osphyus), Haunch, Lumbi.

OSPHYTIS, Osphyitis.

OSSA BREGMATIS, Parietal bones—o. Convoluta inferiora, Turbinated bones, inferior—o. Digitorum manus, Phalanges of the fingers—o. Digitorum pedis, Phalanges of the toes—o. Epactalia, Wormiana ossa—o. Nasalia, Nasal bones—o. Nasi, Nasal bones—o. Nervalia, Parietal bones—o. Pisiformia lingualia, see Hyoides, os—o. Raphogeminantia, Wormiana ossa—o. Sesamoides, Sesamoid bones—o. Sincipitis, Parietal bones—o. Spongiosa, Turbinated bones—o. Suturarum, Wormiana ossa—o. Tertia maxillæ superioris, Turbinated bones—o. Tetragona, Parietal bones—o. Triangularia, Sphenoidalia cornua—o. Triangularia Blasii, Wormiana ossa—o. Triquetra, Wormiana ossa—o. Triticea, see Hyoides, os—o. Turbinata, Turbinated bones—o. Verticalia, Parietal bones.

OSSEINE, (from os, 'a bone,') Ostein.

OSSELET, (dim. of os, 'a bone,') Ossiculum.

OSSELETS DE BERTIN, Sphenoidalia cornua—o. de l'Oreille, Ossicula auditûs—o. de l'Ouie, Ossicula auditûs—o. du Tympan, Ossicula auditûs.

OS'SEOUS, Os'seus, Osteo'des, Osto'des, Ostoï'des, Os'toid, (F.) Osseux, (os, 'a bone,') Bony. Resembling bone.

OSSEUX, Osseous.

OSSICLES, Ossicula, see Ossiculum.

OSSICULA, pl. of Ossiculum.

OSSICULA AUDITÛS, O. Aur'is, (F.) Osselets de l'oreille or de l'ouïe or du tympan. The small bones or ossicles situate in the cavity of the tympanum, and forming an uninterrupted chain from the membrane of the tympanum to that of the fenestra ovalis. They are four in number; and their series, from without to within, is as follows: Malleus, Incus, Os orbiculare, Stapes.

OSSICULA BERTINI, Sphenoidalia cornua—o. Innominata, Innominata minor ossa—o. Nasi, Nasal bones—o. Sesamoides, Sesamoid bones—o. Triticea, see Hyoides, os.

OSSICULUM, pl. Ossicula, Osta'rion, (F.) Ossicule, Osselet, (dim. of os, 'a bone,') A small bone.

OSSICULUM COCHLEARE, Orbicular bone—o. Includi Comparatum, Incus—o. Malleolo assimilatum, Malleus—o. Molari denti comparatum, Incus—o. Orbiculare, Orbicular bone—o. Quantum, Orbicular bone—o. Squamosum, Orbicular bone.

OSSIFIC'ATION, Ossificatio, Ossificatio, (os, 'a bone,' and facere, 'to make,') Osteogen'ia, Osteogen'esis, Osteo'sis, Osto'sis. Formation of bone. Development or increase of the osseous system. Ossification takes place in the same manner as the nutrition of other parts. The bones are, at first, mucous, and afterwards cartilaginous; the cartilage at length receives the phosphate of lime, and is, at the same time, replaced by a gelatinous parenchyma, when the bone has acquired the whole of its development.

OSSIFICATION, POINTS OF, Puncta seu Nuc'lei ossificatio'nis, Nuc'lei os'sei, are the points where the ossification of a bone commences, whence it extends to other parts. Almost all the bones present a greater or less number of points of ossification. Besides the natural ossification, which we observe in the fœtus and in the first periods of life, there are also accidental ossifications, such as those frequently remarked, after the inflammation of serous membranes, in the parietes of arteries, and to which the terms Ostheo'xia, Incrusta'tion, and Petrifac'tion have sometimes been applied.

OSSIFRAGA, (os, 'a bone,' and frangere, 'to break,') Osteocolla.

OSSIS SACRI ACUMEN, ('point of the sacrum bone,') Coccyx.

OSSISANA, (os, 'a bone,' and sanare, 'to heal,') Osteocolla.

OSSIV'OROUS, (os, 'a bone,' and oro, 'I devour,') A species of tumour, mentioned by Ruysch, which destroys a bone.

OS'TAGRA, Osteagra, (osteon, and αἴμα, 'seizure,') A forceps to cut or remove portions of bone.

OSTALGIA, (osteon, and άλγος, 'pain,') Osteocopus.

OSTARIUM, (οσταριον, dim of οστέον, 'a bone,') Ossiculum.

OSTARTHROSIS, Arthrophlogosis.

OSTARTHROCE, Spina ventosa.

OSTEAGRA, Ostagra.

OSTEALGIA, Osteocopus.

OSTEIDE, Osteoid.

OS'TEIN, Os'teine, Os'seine, (from osteon.) The animal matter of bone.

OSTEITES, (from osteon), Osteocolla.

OSTEITIS, Osti'tis, (osteon, and itis), Inflammatio Os'sis. Inflammation of bone; characterized by violent shooting and lancinating pains in a bone.

OSTEMBRYON, (osteon, and εμβρυον, 'embryo,') Lithopædion.

OSTEMPY'E/SIS, Osteömpye'sis, Ostempyo'sis, (osteon, and εμπυσις (εν, and πυον), 'effusion of pus,') An abscess in the interior of a bone.

OSTEMPYOSIS, Ostempyosis.

OSTEOANABROSIS, Osteoanabrosis.

OSTEOCE'LE, (osteon, and κλήη, 'a rupture,') A hernia in which the sac is cartilaginous and bony:—a rare case. Also, osseous induration of one or both testicles.

OSTEOCHONDROPHYTE, (osteo, χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and φυω, 'to grow,') Chondroma.

OSTEOCLASIS, (osteo, and κλάσις, 'a fracture,') Fracture.

OSTEOCOL'LA, (osteon, and κόλλα, 'glue,') Gluebone, Stone or Bone binder; Ossif'raga, Holos'teus, Ossa'saria, Ostei'tes, Amos'teus, Osteol'ithos, Stelochi'tes. A name given to petrified carbonate of lime, found in some parts of Germany and other portions of the globe; so called, because it has been supposed to possess the power of favouring the formation of callus in fractures. It is the Chaux carbonatée concrétionnée incrustante of Haüy. Not used.

OSTEOC'OPUS, (οστικοπος), Osteal'gia, Ostal'gia, Osteodyn'ia, Ost'ecope, (osteon, and κοπος, 'fatigue,') Boneache, Bone-ague. Pain in the bones,—as in syphilis.

OSTEOCYST'OID, Osteocystoï'des, (osteon, κύστις, 'a sack or cyst,' and εἶδος, 'appearance,') A morbid growth in bone, consisting of the formation of cysts filled with puriform or other fluid.

OSTEDENTINE, see Tooth.

OSTEODES, (from osteon), Osseous.

OSTEODYNIA, Osteocopus.

OSTEOANGRÆNA, Necrosis.

OSTEOGENIA, (osteon, and γενω, 'to beget,') Ossification.

OSTEOG'RAPHY, Osteogra'phia, (osteon, and γραφειν, 'to describe,') Description of the bones. The part of anatomy which describes the bones.

OSTEOHELICOSIS, (osteon, and ἕλκος, 'an ulcer,') Caries.

OSTEOTOID, Osteotoides, (F.) Ostéide, (osteon, and εἶδος, 'appearance,') An accidental bony production, or more frequently a morbid production, which is a calcareous incrustation—(F.) Concrétion ossiforme—of the normal tissue, or of fibrous tumours.

OSTEOLITHOS, (osteon, and λίθος, 'a stone,') Osteocolla.

OSTEOL'OGY Osteolog'ia, (οστεολογία, from osteon, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of anatomy which treats of bones.

OSTEOLYSIS, Osteol'ysis, (osteon, and λυω, 'I dissolve,') Necrosis or death of the bone, as in hospital gangrene, in which the dead parts are of soft consistence.

OSTEOMA, gen. Osteo'matis, (from osteon,) Exostosis.

OSTEOMALACIA, (osteon, and μαλακία, 'softness,') Mollities ossium—o. Infantum, Rachitis.

OSTEOMALACOSIS, Mollities ossium.

OSTEOMYELITIS, (osteomyelon, and ίτις,) Medullitis.

OSTEOMYELON, (osteon, and μυελος, 'marrow,') Marrow.

OSTEON, (οστέον,) Bone—o. Hieron, Sacrum.

OSTEONABRO'SIS, Osteonabro'sis, (osteon, a, priv., and βρωσις, 'nutriment,') Atrophy of the osseous texture marked by diminution of volume.

OSTEONCOSIS, (osteon, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') see Exostosis.

OSTEON'CUS, (osteon, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') A bony tumour.

OSTEONECROSIS, Necrosis.

OSTEON'OSI, Osteon'osi, (osteon, and νοσος, 'a disease,') Mor'bi os'sium. Diseases of the bones.

OSTEOP'EDION, (osteon, and παιδιον, 'a small child,') Lithopædion.

OSTEOPALINCLA'SIS, (osteon, παλιν, 'again,') and κλασις, 'fracture,') The breaking again of a bone which has united unfavourably.

OSTEOPHY'MA, gen. Osteophy'matis, (osteon, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Osteoncus. Sometimes used in the sense of Exostosis. By Lobstein applied to a bony production originating in the deep-seated layers of the periosteum, in the vicinity of a carious bone, and which seems to be intended to obviate the weakness resulting from the destruction of the bone.

OSTEOPHYTE, (osteon, and φυω, 'to grow,') Exostosis, Osteophyton.

OSTEOPHYTON, Osteophyte. Under this name, Rokitansky describes a deposition of bony matter, found by him on the inner surface of the parietes of the skull of pregnant women.

OSTEOPLASTIC, see Osteoplasty.

OSTEOPLASTY, (F.) Osteoplastie, (osteon, and πλασσειν, 'to form,') An operation by which the total or partial loss of a bone is remedied. The filling of the cavity of a tooth with some appropriate substance; hence termed Osteoplas'tic.

OSTEOPLEU'RA, Pleurost'osis, (osteon, and πλευρον, 'a rib,') Ossification of the cartilages of the ribs.

OSTEOPORO'SIS, Osteosclero'sis, (osteon, and πρωρισις, 'induration,') Induration of a bone, from the deposition of too much bony matter. Also, a bony degeneration, which consists in too great porosity with hardening. [?]

OSTEOPSATHYROSIS, (osteon, and ψαθυρος, 'friable,') Fragilitas ossium.

OSTEOSARCO'MA, gen. Osteosarco'matis, Osteosarco'sis, Sarco'stis, Hæmatecosto'sis, (osteon, σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') and ομα,) Disease of the bony tissue, which consists in softening of its laminae, and their transformation into a fleshy substance, analogous to that of cancer; accompanied with general symptoms of cancerous affection. The word has often, also, been used synonymously with spina ventosa.

OSTEOSARCOSIS, (osteon, σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') and οσις,) Osteosarcoma.

OSTEOSCLEROSIS, (osteon, and σκληρος, 'hard,') Osteoporosis.

OSTEOSION, (from osteon,) Ossification.

OSTEOSPONGIO'MA, gen. Osteospongio'matis, Osteospongio'sis, (osteon, and σπγγος, 'a sponge or fungus,') and ομα,) A fungous condition of bone, Spina ventosa.

OSTEOSTEATO'MA, gen. Osteosteato'matis, Exosto'sis steatomato'des, (osteon, and στέαρ, gen. στέατος, 'suet or fat,') A name given to bony tumours or degenerations, which sometimes belong to osteosarcoma; at others, to spina ventosa, exostosis, &c.

OSTÉOTOME; same etymon as Osteotomy. A bone saw, which has the form of a chain. Also any bone saw, Osteot'omus, Osteotom'ium, Osteotom'icum.

OSTEOTOMICUM, Osteotome.

OSTEOTOMIST, Osteotomis'ta. An instrument, invented by Dr. D. Davis, for cutting the bones of the fetal cranium, where it becomes necessary to greatly reduce the size of the head in parturition.

OSTEOTOMIUM, Osteotome.

OSTEOTOMUS, Osteotome.

OSTEOT'OMY, Osteotom'ia, (osteon, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') (τομη, 'an incision,') The part of practical anatomy whose object is the dissection of bones.

OSTEOTOPHUS, Tophus.

OSTEOTYLUS, (osteon, and τυλος, 'callus,') Callus.

OSTEULCUM, (οστέυλος, from osteon, and ελκειν, 'to draw,') Bonenippers.

OSTEUM, (οστέον,) Bone.

OSTHELCUS, (osteon, and ἕλκος, 'an ulcer,') Caries.

OSTHAXIA, (osteon, and ἔξις, 'habit,') see Ossification.

OSTIARIUS, ('a doorkeeper,') from ostium, 'a door,') Pylorus.

OSTIOLUM, (dim. of ostium,) A small door or gate.

OSTIOLA CORDIS, Valvulæ cordis, Pelliculæ cordis. The valves of the heart.

OSTITIS, Osteitis.

OSTIUM, (from os, 'a mouth,') Orific'ium, a door or gate,—of the heart, for example. The opening—Ostium atrioventriculârê seu ventric'uli venosum—between the auricle and ventricle of each side. Ostium ventric'uli arteriosum, is the opening at the origin of the pulmonary artery and aorta.

OSTIUM ABDOMINALE, see Tube, Fallopian—o. Arteriosum, see Ostium—o. Atrioventriculare, see Ostium—o. Cutaneum, see Urethra—o. Duodenale ventriculi, Pylorus—o. Internum, see Ostium uteri—o. Œsophageum, Cardia.

OSTIUM U'TERI. The vulva; the vagina. The term Ostium inter'nium has been applied to the inferior opening of the uterus, which establishes a free communication between the cavities of the body and neck, and which is often obliterated in old women. The neck of the uterus; the mouth of the uterus. See Uterus.

OSTIUM UTERINUM, see Tube, Fallopian—o. Vaginale urethræ, see Urethra—o. Vesicale, see Urethra—o. Venosum, see Ostium—o. Ventriculi Duodenale seu Pyloricum seu Dextrum seu Inferius, Pylorus.

OSTODES, (οστώδης, from osteon, and οδης,) Osseous.

OSTOIDEA, (osteon, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Osseous.

OSTOIDEA SUBSTANTIA, see Tooth.

OSTOMA, (osteon, and ομα,) Exostosis.

OSTOSIS, (from osteon, and osis.) Ossification.
OSTREA, Ostreum, Ostrea edulis, (F.) Huitre. Class, Acepala. The oyster. The oyster is a wholesome article of diet, often advised as analeptic and easy of digestion.

The shells, Tes'æ Ostreæ, Tes'tæ (Ph. U. S.), Conchæ, (F.) Écailles d'huitres, have been received into the Pharmacopœias, and used medicinally. Their virtues are similar to those of the carbonate of lime. See Creta.

OSTREUM, (ὄστρεον,) Ostrea.

OSTREION, (ὄστρειον,) Ostrea.

OSTRUTHIUM, Imperatoria.

OSWEGO TEA, Monarda coccinea.

OSYRIS, (ὄσυρις,) Antirrhinum linaria.

OTACOUS'TIC, Otacus'ticus, (F.) Otacus'tique, (oto, and ακουω, 'I listen.') Any instrument is so called which improves the sense of hearing, —as the different species of trumpets.

OTAGRA, (ὠταγρα, from oto, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Otalgia.

OTAL'GIA, (ὠταλγια,) O'tagra, Otod'ymē, Otal'gy, (F.) Otalgie, (oto, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the ear; Do'lor au'rium, Spas'mus au'rium, Ear-ache. See Otitis.

OTAL'GIC, Otal'gicus, (F.) Otalgique. An epithet for remedies used in otalgia.

OTEC'HUS, (oto, and ηχος, 'sound,') Tinnitus aurium.

OTEMPLAS'TRUM, Otoplas'ta, Otoplas'trum, (oto, and εμπλαστρον, 'a plaster,') A plaster put behind the ears.

OTEN'CHYTES, (ὠτεγκυτης,) Oten'chyta, (oto, en, 'into,' and χυω, 'I pour,') Siph'o auricula'ris. A species of syringe, used for injecting the ear.

OTHELCO'SIS, (oto, and ελκοςις, 'ulceration,') Ulceration or suppuration of the ear.

OTHONE, (ὀθονη,) Linteam.

OTHONION, (ὀθονιον,) Linteam.

OTHYGROTES, (oto, and υγροτης, 'moisture,') Ottrrhœa.

OTIATER, (oto, and ιατρος, 'physician,') Aurist.

OTIATRI'A, Otiat'ricæ, Otiatri'a, (oto, and ιατρεια, 'medicine,') The business of the aurist. The management of diseases of the ear; Aural Medicine and Surgery, Ear Surgery.

OTIATRICE, Otiatria.

OTIATRUS, Aurist.

O'TIC, O'ticus, (F.) Otique, (from ovs, gen. ωτος, 'ear,') Belonging or relating to the ear. A medicine employed in diseases of the ear.

OTIC GAS'GLION, Otagan'glium, Gan'glio auricula'rē seu oticum, Auric'ular gan'glio, Gan'glio of Ar'nold, (F.) Ganglion maxillo-tympanique. This is a small ganglion, although more than double the size of the ophthalmic; ash-coloured and pulpy like the ganglions of the sympathetic. It is situate in advance of the ganglion of Gasser, on the lower surface of the inferior maxillary nerve, at the inner margin of the foramen ovale of the sphenoid bone. See Petros ganglion.

OTIRRHË'A, Otorrhœ'a, Othy'grotæ, Blenno'torrhœ'a, (F.) Catarhe de l'Oreille, (oto, and ῥευω, 'I flow,') Discharge of a purulent or puriform liquid, from the meatus auditorius externus, Py-orrhœ'a au'rium, Otopyorrhœ'a, Pyoō'torrhœ'a, Otorrhœ'a purulen'ta. It is a symptom of chronic otitis. Some authors, have, indeed, used the term synonymously with chronic otitis. When it extends to the brain, it is termed cer'ebral otorrhœ'a; and when from the middle or internal ear, it is termed Internal otorrhœa, Otorrhœ'a inter'na, and Entotorrhœ'a.

OTIRRHËA, CEREBRAL, see Ottrrhœa.

OTITES, (ωτιτις, 'appertaining or relating to the ear,') see Digitus.

OTITIS, Otophleg'monē, Empres'ma otit'is, Inflamma'tio au'ris, Inflamma'tion of the ear, (F.) Oite, Inflamma'tion de l'oreille, (oto, and ιτις.)

Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the ear, characterized by excruciating pain; intolerable humming in the ear, with a discharge of mucus generally from the meatus externus or from the Eustachian tube. When the inflammation is restricted to the lining membrane of the meatus, it is termed otitis catarrhal'is. Otitis is divided into external and internal, according as it affects the meatus auditorius, or the cavity of the tympanum or internal ear. It may be acute or chronic. Acute otitis commonly terminates in a few days in a favourable manner, with the aid of antiphlogistics. Chronic otit'is, otirrhe'a, is almost always accompanied by a purulent discharge from the meatus auditorius. It is often incurable, and may ultimately give occasion to disease of the internal ear, and even of the brain.

OTITUS CATARRHALIS, see Otitis.

O'TIUM, (ωτιον, dim. of ovs, gen. ωτος, 'ear,') Ota'rium. A small ear. The auricle or pavilion of the ear.

OTO, (from ovs, gen. ωτος, 'the ear,') in composition, ear.

OTOCEPH'ALUS, Mono'tia, (oto, and κεφαλη, 'head,') A monster, whose ears are in contact, or united into one.

OTOCLEI'SIS, (oto, and κλειω, 'I close,') Closure or obstruction of the ear.

OTOCONIA, (oto, and κονια, 'dust,') see Otoliths.

OTODYNE, (oto, and δυνη, 'pain,') Otalgia.

OTOGANGLIUM, Otic ganglion.

OTOLYPHIS, (ωτολυφισ, from oto, and γλυφειω, 'to hollow,') Earpick.

OTOLYPHUM, (ωτολυφον,) Earpick.

OTOG'RAPHY, Otogra'phia, (oto, and γραφη, 'a description,') The part of anatomy which describes the ear.

OTOIATRIA, Otiatria.

O'TOLITHS, Otolithi, Otolithes, (F.) Otolithes, (from oto, and λιθος, 'a stone,') White calcareous substances contained in the membranous vestibule, and seeming to be suspended in the fluid of the vestibule by means of a number of nervous filaments proceeding from the auditory nerve. Their universal presence in the ear of the mammalia would seem to show that they are inservient to audition. When the substance is of a looser consistence, it is called Otocon'ia, (F.) Otoconie, Ear powder, (from oto, and κονια.)

OTOL'OGY, Otolog'ia, (oto, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of anatomy which treats of the ear. An anatomical treatise on the ear.

OTOPATHEMA, Otopathy.

OTOP'ATHY, Otopath'ia, Otopathe'ma, (oto, and παθος, 'affection,') A diseased condition of the ear.

OTOPHLEGMONE, Otitis.

OTOPHONE, (oto, and φωνη, 'sound,') Ear trumpet.

OTOPLASTA, (·oto, and πλασσειν, 'to cover over,') Otempastrum.

OTOPLAS'TICË, O'toplasty, (oto, and πλαστικος, 'forming,') The operation for restoring a lost ear.

OTOPLASTRUM, Otempastrum.

OTOPYORRHËA, (oto, πυω, 'pus,' and ῥευω, 'to flow,') Ottrrhœa.

OTORRHAG'IA, (oto, and ῥαγη, 'rupture,') Bleeding from the ear or ears.

OTORRHEUMATIS'MUS, (oto, and ῥευματισμος, 'rheumatism,') Otal'gia rheumat'ica. Rheumatic earache.

OTORRHËA, Ottrrhœa—o. Cerebral, see Ottrrhœa—o. Interna, see Ottrrhœa—o. Purulenta, Ottrrhœa.

O'TOSCOPE, Otoscop'ium, (oto, and σκοπη, 'examination,') Any instrument for examining the condition of the ear. An elastic stethoscope, the ands of which are tipped with ivory—one to be inserted into the meatus of the patient, and the other applied to the ear of the examiner has been so called; as well as one formed on the principle of the ophthalmoscope, laryngoscope, &c.

OTOT'OMY, Ototom'ia, (oto, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') The part of practical anatomy which teaches the mode of dissecting and preparing the ear.

OTTOFAY ROSES, see Rosa centifolia.

OTTOWAY DISEASE, Mal de la Baie de Saint Paul.

OUACHITA SPRINGS, see Arkansas, mineral waters of.

OUÏE, (from audire, 'to hear,') Audition.

OULA, (ουλα,) Gingivæ.

OULE, (ουλη,) Cicatrix.

OULITIS, (ουλι, and ιτις,) Ulitis.

OULORRHAGIA, (oula, and ρῆγη, 'a breaking forth,') Ulorrhagia.

OUNCE, Un'cia. A weight equal to the 16th part of a pound avoirdupois, the 12th of a pound troy. It is composed of 8 drachms. See Weights and Measures.

OURAQUE, Urachus.

OURARI, Curare.

OUREMA, gen Oure'matis, (ουρημα,) Urine.

OURLES, (from oreille,) Palotitis, Cynanche parotidæa.

OUROLOGY, (ουρον, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Uronology.

OURON, (ουρον,) Urine.

OUROSCOPY, (ουρον, and σκοπεω, 'I examine,') see Uromantia.

OUS, gen. O'ous, (ους, gen. ωτος,) Ear.

OUTHAR, (ουθαρ,) see Mamma.

OUVERTURE CADAVÉRIQUE, Autopsia cadaverica.

OVA GRAAFIANA, Folliculi Graafiani.—o. Nabothi, Nabothi glandule.

OVAIRE, Ovarium.

O'VAL, Ova'lis, Oë'des, Oëi'des, Ova'tus, (F.) Ovale, Ové, (from ovum.) Egg-shaped; elliptic. That which is round and oblong like an egg.

OVAL FORAMEN, Fora'men ova'le, Foramen oë'des, (F.) Trou ovale. The foramen obturatorium; also, the foramen in the inner paries of the middle ear, which opens into the vestibule; the foramen in the sphenoid bone, through which the third branch of the fifth pair issues from the cranium; and the aperture, in the fœtus, between the auricles of the heart. See Botal Foramen.

OVAL FOS'SA, Fossa ova'lis, Fos'sea ova'lis, Valvula seu Vestig'ium Foram'ius ova'lis, is a depression observed in the right auricle of the heart, in the septum, which separates it from the left auricle. It has thick and strong edges, at its upper and fore part, called Colum'næ foram'inis ova'lis, Isth'mus seu An'nulus Vieussæ'ni, An'nulus seu Lim'bus fos'sæ ova'lis: in the fœtus called An'nulus foram'ius seu fos'sæ ova'lis. The fossa ovalis, in the adult, replaces the inter-auricular aperture in the septum auricularum of the fœtus.

OVALBUMEN, Albumen ovi.

OVA'RIAN, Ova'rial, Ovaria'nus, (F.) Ovarien, Ovarique; (from ovarium.) Relating or belonging to the ovary—as Ovarian pregnancy.

OVARIAN ARTERY, Spermatic artery.—o. Dropsy, Hydroörrion.—o. Nerves, Spermatic plexus of nerves.—o. Pregnancy, see Pregnancy, ovarian.—o. Veins, Spermatic veins.—o. Vesicles, Folliculi Graafiani.

OVARIOTOMY, (ovarium, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Oariotomy.

OVARIQUE, Ovarian.

OVARISTS, O'vists. Those physiologists who think that the phenomena of generation, in the human species and in every species of animal, result from the developmen. of the ova or ovula of the female, merely incited by the male. Not many of the physiologists of the present day can be classed among the ovarists. The doctrine is called O'varism and O'vism.

OVARITIS, (ovarium, and ιτις,) Oaritis.

OVARIULE, (ovarium, and ύλη, 'cicatrix,') Corpus luteum.

OVA'R'IUM, (ωαριον, dim. ωον, ovum.) The Ovary, Eggbed; Testis muliebris seu femi-neus, Oa'rion, Ooph'orum, Gynoa'rrium, Vesica rium, (F.) Ovaire. The ovaries are the organs in which the ova are formed in oviparous animals. By analogy, the name has been given to the organs which the ancients called the testicles of the female. They are two ovoid bodies, almost as large as the testicles in man, placed on each side of the uterus, between the Fallopian tube and round ligament, and in the substance of the broad ligament. Their outer extremity gives attachment to one of the projections of the fimbriated extremity of the Fallopian tube; and the internal is fixed to the uterus by a small ligamentous cord, called Ligamentum rotundum ova'rii, Ligament of the O'vary, Mesoa'rrium. The ovaries are composed of a very loose, spongy texture—stroma,—and of small vesicles—Folliculi Graafia'ni,—filled with a clear fluid: these vesicles contain ovules, which detach themselves from the ovarium before and after fecundation, and are carried into the cavity of the uterus by the Fallopian tube.

OVARIUM NABOTHI, Nabothi glandulæ.—o. Tumidum, Oarioneus.

OVATION, see Parturition.

OVATUS, (from ovum,) Oval.

O'VE, Oval.

OVEREATING, COLIC FROM, Colica crapulosa.

OVERO BUTUA, Pareira brava.

OVICAPSULE, (ovum, and capsule,) see Folliculi Graafiani.

OVIDUCT, (ovum, and ductus, 'duct,') Tube, Fallopian.

OVIDUCTUS MULIEBRIS, Tuba Fallopiana.

OVIG'EROUS, O'viger, Ovig'erus; (ovum, and gero, 'I bear,') Containing or producing ova or eggs.

OVIPARITÉ, see Oviparous.

OVIP'AROUS, Ovip'arus, (F.) Ovipare, (ovum, and pario, 'I bring forth,') An epithet applied to animals which are hatched from eggs outside of the body. The condition may be termed Ovip'arousness, (F.) Oviparité. See Generation.

OVIPAROUSNESS, see Oviparous.

OVIPONT, (F.) Oviponte, ([L.] ovum, [F.] œuf, and ponte,) 'the laying of an egg.' A term applied to the escape of the ovum from the ovary; whilst ovulation, includes, also, the process of its maturation.

OVISAC, (ovum, and sac,) see Folliculi Graafiani.—o. Tunic of the, see Folliculi Graafiani.

OVISM, see Ovarists.

OVISTS, Ovarists.

OVULOLOGY, (ovum, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Oologia.

OVOVIVIP'AROUS, (F.) Ovo-vivipare, (ovum, vivus, 'living,' and pario, 'I bring forth,') Oviparous animals, whose ova are hatched within the mother,—vipers, for example. See Generation.

O'VULA (pl. of Ovulum) GRAAFIANA, 'ovules of De Graaf,' Folliculi Graafiani.—o. Nabothi, Nabothi glandulæ.

O'VULAR, Ovula'ris; (from ovulum.) Relating or belonging to the ovule.

OVULATION. The formation of ova in the ovary, and the discharge of the same. Also, the development of the embryo from the egg. See Ovipont.

SPONTANEOUS OVULATION, (F.) Ovulation spontané, is the spontaneous formation and discharge of ova which takes place in the female of the mammalia. See Heat, and Menses.

OVULE, Ovulum.

OVULINE, (from ovulum.) Decidua reflexa.

OVULUM, Ovule, (dim. of ovum.) A small egg. That which has the appearance of a small egg. See Ovum.

OVUM, Oöu, (F.) Ouf, Lgg. The egg of Phasianus Gallus, the common hen, is chiefly used as food. The different parts are, likewise, employed in medicine. The shell, Auran'cun, Auran'tum, (F.) Coque ou Coquille d'ouf, calcined, is esteemed an absorbent. The Oil of the egg is emollient, and is used, externally, to burns and chaps. The Yolk or Yelk of the egg—Vitel'lum seu Vitel'lus o'vi, Lec'ithos—renders oils, &c., miscible with water. Eggs, when lightboiled, are easy of digestion; but, when very hardboiled or fried, they are more rebellious.

Egg Brandy is made by taking of Brandy ℥ʒiv; Cinnamon water, ℥ʒiv; the yolks of two eggs; Sugar, ℥ss; and Oil of cinnamon, gr. ij. Mix the yolks of the eggs first with the water, the oil and the sugar, stirring constantly. Then add the brandy little and little, until a smooth fluid is formed. It is an agreeable mode of giving brandy in adynamic states.

Egg'noy, is a drink made of eggs, rum or brandy, milk and sugar beaten up together.

In Pharmacy, white of egg, which consists chiefly of albumen, is used for clarifying syrups, &c. Yolk of egg, (F.) Jaune d'ouf, beaten up with warm water and sugar, and aromatized with orangeflower water, forms an emulsion, which is emollient, and known under the name Lait de poule or chicken's milk.

Anatomists give the name Ova, O'vula, O'vules, (F.) Enfs, to round vesicles, containing a humour similar to the yolk of egg, which are situate in the ovaries of the female, and, when fecundated, constitute the rudiments of the fœtus. During gestation, the embryo and its enveloping membranes retain the name Ovum, (F.) Enf. The changes induced in the mammalia after impregnation greatly resemble those in the bird.

OVUM, Testicle—o. Hystericum, see Clavus hystericus.

OX, in composition, see Oxy.

* OXALAS SUBPOTASSICUS, Potass, oxalate of.

OXALATIC, Oxalat'icus. Relating to oxalates: hence Oxolat'ic or Oxal'ic acid Diath'esis; the habit of body which favours the formation and deposition of oxalates from the urine.

OXALIC ACID, (oxalis, 'sorrel,') Ac'idum oxal'icum seu sacchar'icum seu hydrocarbo'nicum seu acetosell'æ seu oxal'icum seu sac'chari, Ac'id of sugar or of sor'el, Carbonous acid. An acid found in sorrel. It crystallizes in long, colourless, quadrangular prisms, and is generally found, 'a nature, united with lime or potassa. It has been proposed, in a diluted state, as a refrigerant, but it is unnecessary; and, besides, in quantity, it is a virulently acrid poison. It was once largely employed for cleaning boottops; and, as it strongly resembles the sulphate of magnesia, has often been taken for it. Several fatal cases are, indeed, on record. For its antidotes, &c., see Poison.

OXALIC ACID DIATHESIS, see Oxalatic.

OXALIDE, Oxalis acetosella.

OXALIS ACETOSA, gen. Oxal'idis, (from oxus, 'acid,' owing to the sharpness of its juice,) Rumex acetosus.

OXALIS ACETOSELLA, O. America'na, Ox'ys al'ba. The systematic name of the Woodsorrel, Cuckowbread, Sour Tres'oil, White sor'el, Mountain Sor'el, Trifo'l'ium acetosum, Ox'triphy'l'ium, Lul'ula, Alleh'ja, Acetosella, Ox'zophyl'lon, Ox'triphyll'lon, Pa'nis en'culi, (F.) Surelle, Oxalide, Pain a Coucou, Alleh'ia. Ord. Oxalidaceæ. Ser.

Syst. Decandria Decagynia. This plant has a gratefully acid taste, and is used in salads. It has been esteemed refrigerant, antiscorbutic, and diuretic.

OXALIS AMERICANA, O. Acetosella.

OXALIS STRICATA, Yel'low woodsorrel; indigenous, has similar virtues to O. Acetosella.

OXALIS TUBEROSA, O'ca. A tuberous plant, whose ovalshaped root is used as food by the Peruvians. It is watery, has a sweetish taste, and is much liked.

OXALIUM, Potass, oxalate of.

OXAL'ME, (oxalam, from oxus, and als, 'salt,') A mixture of vinegar and salt.

OXALURIA, Urine, oxalic.

OXELE'ON, (oxelaion, from oxy, and elaion, 'oil,') A mixture of vinegar and oil, used as a condiment.

OXÉOLÉ, (from oxus.) Acétolé.

OX EYE, Helenium autumnale—o. Gall, Bile of the ox.

OXICÉDRE, (oxkeédros.) Juniperus oxycedrus.

OXID, Oxyd.

OXIDATION, Oxydation.

OXIDE, Oxyd.

OXIDUM, Oxyd, see Oxydum.

OXINES, (oxines, [inos], from oxus, 'sharp.' Wine already sour, but not yet vinegar.

OXITRIPHYLLUM, (oxy, and τριφυλλον, 'trefoil,') Oxalis acetosella.

OXODE, Oxyd.

OXODES, (oxodhs.) Acidulous.

OXODES, (from oxy, and oidos, 'resemblance,') Acidulous.

OXTER, Axilla.

OXURE, Oxyd.

OXUS, (oxus.) Aceticum acidum, Acetum.

OXY, (from oxus, 'acute,') in composition, acute, quick, pointed, sharp, acid. In the composition of chemical terms, oxy and ox mean oxygen.

OXYA, (oxya.) Fagus sylvatica.

OXYACANTHA, (oxvakanda, from oxy, and κανθα, 'a thorn,') Mespilus oxyacantha.

OXYCANTHA GALE'NI, Berber'is, B. vulgar'is, Spi'na ac'ida, Crep'is'ium, (F.) Épine vinette, Vinettier. Family, Berberideæ. Ser. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. The Bar'berry. The fruit of the berries, Bar'berries, is gratefully acid, and moderately astringent. By preparing an alcoholic extract of the root Berber'is, (Ph. U. S.) and adding water to it, a pulverulent brown substance is thrown down, which, when dissolved in alcohol and evaporated, yields the bitter principle, Berber'in, which is an excellent stomachic in the dose of ʒ, to 10 grains.

The American Bar'berry, Berber'is Canaden'sis, Pip'peridge Bush, Sou'berry, differs slightly from the European. It flourishes on mountains and hilly districts from Canada to Virginia.

OXYÆSTHESIA, (oxy, and æsthesia.) Hyperæsthesis.

OXYAPHE, (oxy, and αψη, 'touch,') Hyperæsthesia.

OXYAPHIA, Hyperaphia.

OXYBAPHION, (oxubaphion, from oxus, 'acid,' or oxos, 'vinegar,' and βαπτειν, 'to dip,') see Acetabulum.

OXYBLEP'SIA, (oxublep'sia, from oxy, and βλεπω, 'to see,') Acuteness of sight.

OXYBOL'IA, (oxy, and βολη, 'ejection,') Too rapid emission of sperm.

OXYCÉDRE, (oxkeédros.) Juniperus oxycedrus.

OXYCEPHA'LIA, 'Sugar-loaf head,' (oxy, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Monstrosity in which the head is peaked like a sugar-loaf.

OXYCOCOCCO, (oxy, and κοκκος, 'berry,') Vaccinium oxycoccos—o. Maerocarpus, see Vaccinium oxycoccos—o. Palustris, Vaccinium oxycoccos.

OXYCRATE, Oxyera'tum, (oxykraton from oxy, and  $\omega\alpha\omega$ , 'I mix;') Poc'ca, Phus'ca. A mixture of vinegar and water; frequently used in medicine as a refrigerant and antiseptic.

OXYCRO'CEUM EEMPLASTRUM, (oxy, and  $\kappa\rho\alpha\sigma$ , 'saffron,') A plaster, composed of saffron, pitch, colophony, yellow wax, turpentine, galbanum, gum ammoniac, myrrh, olibanum, and mastic. It was employed as a strengthening plaster.

OXYCUM, Oxygen.

OXYD, Ox'id, Ox'ide, Ox'yde, Ox'ydum, Ox'idum, (F.) Oxyde, Oxode, Oxure. A combination, not acid, of a simple body with oxygen.

OXYD, CALCULOUS, Oxyd, cystic.

OXYD, CYSTIC, Cal'culous or Ves'ical oxy'd, Cys'tine, Neph'rine, Scorodod'mine. A species of urinary calculus, having the shape of confused, yellowish, semitransparent, insipid, very hard crystals. When distilled, it furnishes subcarbonate of ammonia, like all nitrogenized matters. It dissolves in the nitric, sulphuric, phosphoric, and oxalic acids.

OXYD, VESICAL, Oxyd, cystic.

OXYDA'TION, Oxyda'tio, Oxida'tion, Oxygena'tion. The action of oxidizing a body; that is, of combining it with oxygen, a combination from which results an oxyd.

OXYDE, Oxyd.

OXYDE D'ANTIMOINE SULFURÉ, Oxydum stibii sulphuratum—o. Gris ou noir de Mercure, see Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

OXYDER'CIA, ( $\sigma\zeta\acute{\nu}\epsilon\mu\alpha$ ,) Oxyder'cia, Vis'us a'cies, (oxy, and  $\acute{\alpha}\kappa\omega\varsigma$ , 'I see,') Sharpness of vision.

OXYDER'CIUS, Oxyder'ces. A medicine which sharpens the sight.

OXYDORCIA, ( $\sigma\zeta\delta\omicron\rho\omicron\kappa\iota\alpha$ ,) Oxydercia.

OXYDUM, Oxid—o. Antimonii cum phosphate calcis, Antimonial powder.

OXYDUM FER'RI NI'GRUM, Fer'ri ox'idum ni'grum, Black oxy'd of iron. The scales, which fall from iron, when heated, consist of iron combined with oxygen. They have been used like the chalybeates in general. The Edinburgh Pharmacopœia has a Fer'ri ox'idum ni'grum, made by precipitating, by ammonia, a solution of the mixed sulphate of protoxide and sesquioxide of iron. An analogous preparation is in the Dublin Pharmacopœia, under the name Fer'ri ox'y'dum magnet'icum, Magnet'ic ox'ide of iron, Mart'ial E'thiops.

OXYDUM FERRICUM CRYSTALLIZATUM NATIVUM, Hæmatites—o. Hydrargyri completum, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—o. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—o. Hydrargyricum præparatum, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—o. Hydrargyrosium, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

OXYDUM STIB'II SULPHURATUM, He'par antimoni'i, Cro'cus metallo'rum seu antimoni'i, (F.) Oxyde d'antimoine sulfuré, Foie d'Antimoine. This was formerly exhibited in the cure of fevers, but it is now rarely employed.

OXYDUM URICUM, Uric oxide.

OXYECOIA, ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\kappa\omicron\iota\alpha$ , from oxy, and  $\acute{\alpha}\kappa\eta$ , 'hearing,') Hyperacusis.

OXYG'ALA, ( $\acute{\alpha}\zeta\upsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\alpha$ , from oxy, and  $\gamma\alpha\lambda\alpha$ , 'milk,') Sour milk. The Oxygala equinum, Caracas' mos, is reckoned amongst the delicacies of the Tartars.

OXYG'ARON, ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\gamma\alpha\rho\omicron\nu$ , from oxy, and  $\gamma\alpha\rho\omicron\nu$ , 'garum,') A composition of garum and vinegar.

OXYGEN, Oxygen'ium, Empy'real, Pure, Vital or dephlogis'ticated Air, Oxyg'enes, Oxy'ium, Princip'ium oxyg'enus seu oxygenet'icum seu acidif'icans seu ac'id'ium, Elementum acidif'icum, (F.) Oxygène, Air du feu; ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\varsigma$ , 'acid,' and  $\gamma\epsilon\gamma\omega\omega$ , 'I engender,' that is, generator of acids;) and such it was believed to be exclusively, at the period when the name was given to it. This is now known not to be the case.) Oxygen is an elementary principle, largely distributed in nature. It exists in the air, in water, in several acids, in all the oxyds, and in vegetable and animal substances. It is obtained by decomposing the peroxyd of manganese or the chlorate of potassa by heat in close vessels. Although oxygen, in the state of admixture in which it is found in the atmosphere, is of vital importance, it cannot be respired in a pure state with impunity. Animals die in it long before the whole of the oxygen is consumed. The properties of oxygen seem to be stimulant. It increases the force and velocity of the pulse, and has, accordingly, been used in cases of chronic debility, chlorosis, asthma, scrofula, dropsy, paralysis, &c. It requires to be diluted with from 10 to 20 parts of atmospheric air; one to two quarts being used during the day.

OXYGENATED WATER, Hydrogen, peroxide of.

OXYGENATION, Oxydation.

OXYGÈNE, Oxygen.

OXYGÈNÈSES. A name given by Baumes to diseases which he attributed to disordered oxygenation.

OXYGEUSIA, (oxy, and  $\gamma\upsilon\sigma\iota\varsigma$ , 'taste,') Hypergæstia.

OXYG'LICUS, Oxyg'lyces, ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\gamma\lambda\upsilon\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$ , from oxy, and  $\lambda\upsilon\lambda\upsilon\varsigma$ , 'sweet;') Mul'sa ac'ida, Acetum mulsuum dul'ce. Prepared by macerating and boiling honeycomb (from which the greater part of the honey has been taken) in water, and adding vinegar. An Oxymel.

OXYHYDROCARBURETUM EX OLEO PYROXYLICO PARATUM, Creasote.

OXYLAPATHUM, (oxy, and  $\lambda\alpha\tau\alpha\delta\omicron\nu$ , 'dock,') Rumex acetus.

OXYMEL, Apom'eli, Mel acetatum, (F.) Acetomel, ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\mu\epsilon\lambda\iota$ , from oxy, and  $\mu\epsilon\lambda\iota$ , 'honey,') Honey and vinegar boiled to a syrupy consistence. (Mel despumat. Ibv. Acid. acetic. ℥viij. Aq. desillat. f℥viij. Add the acid to the water and mix them with the honey previously heated.—Ph. L.) It is cooling;—externally detergent.

OXYMEL ÆRUGINIS, Linimentum Æruginis.

OXYMEL COL'CHICI, O. of mead'ow saffron, (F.) Oxymel colchique. (Rad. Colch. recent. in laminas tenues sectæ ℥j. Aceti destillati ℔j. Mellis despumat. pond. ℔ij. Macerate in a gentle heat for 48 hours. Press and boil the liquor with the honey to the thickness of a syrup; stirring with a wooden spoon. Ph. D.) It is expectorant and diuretic. Dose,  $f\mathfrak{z}$ , in gruel.

OXYMEL COLCHIQUE, O. colchici—o. of Meadow saffron, O. colchici.

OXYMEL SCIL'LE, O. of squills, O. Scillicit'icum, Mel sci'llæ. (Mellis despumat. Oiss. Aceti scillæ, Oij. Boil in a glass vessel over a gentle fire to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) It is reputed to be expectorant and diuretic. Dose,  $f\mathfrak{z}$  to  $f\mathfrak{z}ij$ .

OXYMEL OF SCILL, O. scillæ.

OXYMYRRHINE, (oxy, and  $\mu\upsilon\mu\upsilon\eta$ , 'myrtle,') Ruscus.

OXYMYRSINE, ( $\sigma\zeta\upsilon\mu\upsilon\sigma\iota\tau\eta$ ,) Ruscus.

OXYNGIUM, Adeps suillus.

OXYNI'TRON, (oxy, and  $\nu\iota\tau\rho\omicron\nu$ , 'nitre,') Name of a plaster, composed chiefly of vinegar and nitre, and recommended by Aëtius.

OXYNOSEMA, gen. Oxygnose'matis, (oxy, and  $\nu\alpha\sigma\eta\mu\alpha$ , 'disease,') Acute disease.

OXYNOSOS, (oxy, and  $\nu\omicron\sigma\omicron\varsigma$ , 'disease,') Acute disease.

OXYNUSOS, (oxy, and  $\nu\omicron\sigma\omicron\varsigma$ , 'disease,') Acute disease.

OXYOPIA, Galeo'pia, Hyperop'sia, Suff'u'sio accl'rans, A'cies vis'us, (oxy, and  $\omega\psi$ , 'sight,') Excessive acuteness of the sense of sight. Instances have occurred where persons could see the stars in the day time. The cause is seated in great sensibility of the retina. The term has been used synonymously with nyctalopia.

OXYOSPHERESIA, Oxyosphra'sia, (oxy, and σφαιρσις, 'smell.') Excessive acuteness of the sense of smell.

OXYPHLEGMA'SIA, οξυφλεγμασια, (from oxy, and φλεγμασια.) Acu'ta et ve'hemens inflammatio. A violent inflammation.

OXYPHENICON, (oxy, 'acid,' and φαινικος, 'deep red.' [?]) Tamarindus.

OXYPHONIA, Vox acu'ta; (οξυφωνια, from oxy, and φωνη, 'voice;') Parapho'nia clau'gens sea ulcero'sa, Clau'gor, Vox clango'sa, Leptopho'nia. A shrill and squalling voice.—frequently, a symptom of morbid affection of the larynx.

OXYPHYLLON, (oxy, and φυλλον, 'a leaf') Oxalis acetosella.

OXYPODIA, (oxy, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'foot,') see Kylosis.

OXYREG'MIA, (οξυρεγμα, from oxy, and ερενωω, 'I belch.') Ruc'e'us ac'idus, Acid eructation.

OXYRIA RENIFORM'IS, (οξυς, 'sharp, acid,') Ru'mex dig'y'nus, Bo'real sour'dock, Moun'tain Sor'rel, Welsh sor'rel. A plant, Ord. Polyganaceæ, Scr. Syst. Diandria Digynia, which grows in the northern parts of America and Europe; blossoming in the spring. It possesses the same properties as Oxalis acetosella.

OXYRRHOD'INON, Acetum rosatum, (oxy, and ροδον, 'a rose,') A composition of vinegar and roses. (Ol. rosat.  $\zeta$ ij, acet. rosat.  $\zeta$ j.) Used as a liniment in herpes and erysipelas.

OXYS, (οξυς.) Acid, Acute—o. Alba, Oxalis acetosella.

OXYSAC'CHARUM, (oxy, and σακχαρον, 'sugar,') A mixture of sugar and vinegar; termed Oxysac'charum vomiti'vum, when it held in solution the glass of antimony; and Oxysac'charum scillit'icum, when it contained squills.

OXYSAI DIAPHORETICUM AN'GELI SALÆ. A preparation of Angelo Sala. Acetate of potass exposed to the atmosphere; and consequently fallen into a state of deliquium.

OXYTARTARUS, Potassæ acetat.

OXYTES, (οξυτης.) Acidity.

OXYTOCIA, (oxy, and τιτω, 'I bring forth,') Rapidity of parturition.

OXYTOCIC, Oxy'tocus. A medicine which promotes delivery.

OXYTRIPHYLLON, (oxy, and τριφυλλον, 'trefoil,') Oxalis acetosella.

OXYURE VERMICULAIRE, Ascaris vermicularis.

OXYURIS VERMICULARIS, (oxy, and ουρα, 'a tail,') Ascaris vermicularis.

OYSTER GREEN, Ulva latissima—o. Plant, Tragopogon—o. Root, Tragopogon—o. Vegetable, Tragopogon.

OYSTER SHELLS, Ostreæ testæ—o. s. Prepared, Testa preparata.

OZOSTOMIA, (οζη, 'a stench,' and στομα, 'mouth,') Breath, offensive.

OZÆ'NA, (οζαινα.) Cory'za enton'ica seu purulen'ta seu oze'no'sa seu ulcero'sa seu virulen'ta seu malig'na, P'yorrhœ'a nas'al'is, Entozœ'na, Rhini'tis ulcero'sa, Ulcus na'r'ium fetens, (οζη, 'a fetid smell,') (F.) Ozène, Punaisie. An affection of the pituitary membrane, which gives occasion to a disagreeable odour similar to that of a crushed bed-bug; hence the name Punais, by which the French designate one labouring under ozena. It is, sometimes, owing to caries of the bones; but is, perhaps, most frequently dependent upon syphilitic ulceration of the pituitary membrane, with or without caries of the bones of the nose.

OZÆNA BENIGNA, Coryza, chronic.

OZE, (οζη.) Breath, offensive.

OZEMUN, Albumen.

OZÈNE, Ozæna.

O'ZON, O'ZONE; (οζω, 'I smell of something,') The powerfully odorous matter produced when a current of ordinary electricity passes from pointed bodies into the air. It generally is presumed to be a peculiar modification of oxygen; and in varying quantity in the atmosphere is supposed to affect the health of man; but knowledge of this matter is exceedingly vague.

Air containing ozone is said to be o'zonized, (F.) Ozonisé, Ozoné.

P.

P. A contraction of Pugillus.

P. Æ. A contraction of Partes æquales. } See Abbre-

P. P. A contraction of Pulvis } viation.

PAB'ULUM, Tro'phê, Phor'bê, Alimentum, Nutrimen'tum. Food, aliment. The animal heat and animal spirits—unmeaning terms—were formerly considered the Pabulum vite.

PACAY, Prosopis dulcis.

PACHIO'NI, GLANDS or CORPUSCLES OF, Pachio'nian Bod'ies, Glandulæ Du'ræ Ma'tris seu du'ræ Menin'gis, Tuber'cula par'va seu Cor'pora glandifor'mia du'ræ ma'tris, (F.) Glandes de Pachioni, Gra'ulations cérébrales, (after Pachioni, an Italian anatomist.) Small, whitish, or yellowish bodies, sometimes separate, at others united like a bunch of grapes, which are observed in several parts of the dura and pia mater. They receive vessels, but apparently no nerves. Their texture and uses are unknown. A considerable number is observed in the longitudinal sinus, covered by the internal membrane.

PACHÆ'MIA, Pachyæ'mia, Pachæ'ma, Pachyæ'ma, (pachy, and αιμα, 'blood,') Too great thickness of the blood.

PACHEABLEPHAR'OSIS, Pacheableph'ara,

Pachybleph'aron, Pachyblephar'osis, Pach'ytes, (pachy, and βλεφαρον, 'an eyelid,') A name given, by some authors, to a thickening of the eyelids, produced by tubercles or excrescences formed on their margins. It is the same affection as that which Sauvages designates Col'igo à Pacheablephar'osi.

PACHETOS, (παχετος.) see Laqueus.

PACHULOSIS, (παχυλος, 'thick,') Pachylosis.

PACHY, (παχυς, 'thick,') in composition, thick.

PACHYÆ'MIA, Pachæmia.

PACHYBLEPHARON, Pacheablepharosis.

PACHYCHOL'IA, (pachy, and χολη, 'bile,') Morbid thickness of the bile.

PACHYDERMATOCE'LE, (pachy, δερμα, gen. δερματος, 'skin,' and κηλη, 'a tumour,') A disease of the dermoid tissue, apparently congenital, which increases, at times from a small mole or spot to the size and appearance of a relaxed and very emaciated mamma.

PACHYDERMIA, Elephantiasis.

PACHYLO'SIS, Pachulo'sis, (παχυλος, 'thick,') An inordinate production of the epidermis dependent upon hypertrophy of the papillæ of the skin.

PACHYMEMINGITIS, Per'imeningi'tis, (pa chymeuiax, 'dura mater,' and itis, 'inflammation.')

Inflammation of the dura mater.

PACHYMEMINIX, (pachy, and μνηξις, gen. μνηξιως, 'a membrane,') Dura mater.

PACHYNSIS, (παχυνσις, from παχυνω, 'to make thick,') Polysarcia adiposa.

PACHYNTICA, (παχυντικα.) Incrassantia.

PACHYSMUS, (παχυσμος, from παχυς, 'thick,') Polysarcia adiposa.

PACHYTES, (παχυτης, 'thickness,') Pacheablepharosis.

PACINIAN CORPUSCLES, (after Pacini,) see Corpuscles.

PACKING, OF THE HYDROPATHISTS; Émailottage.

PACKWAX, see Nucha.

PAD, ([S.] Pajado, from paja, 'straw' [?];

Plumaceolus, Pulvillus, Pulvinulus, Parvulus pulvinar;—a cushion, a little cushion; a junk; (F.) Coussinet. A small bag, filled with feathers, wool, hair, bran, chaff, &c. It is used to compress or support parts. In the treatment of certain fractures, soft pads or cushions, called by the French Kemplissages, are placed between the splints and the fractured limb, in order that the prominent parts may not be chafed by the splints.

PADDIE, see Oryza.

PADDY, see Oryza.

PADNOON, Bitoben.

PAD'UA, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Near Padua, in Italy, there are several thermal sulphureous springs, the hottest of which is 188° Fah.

The chief establishments are Abano, Battaglia, and Montegrotto.

PADUS, (παδος.) Prunus padus—P. Avium, Prunus padus—P. Laurocerasus, Prunus laurocerasus.

PÆDAN'CHONĒ, (pædo, and αχων, 'I strange,') Angi'na Sic'ca. Name of a fatal species of cyananche, mentioned by M. A. Severinus; probably the Cyananche Trachealis, or Cyananche Maligina.

PÆDARTHROCEAE, (pædo, and arthroceae.) Spina ventosa.

PÆDATROPH'IA, Atrophia infantilis, Marrasmus lactantium, (pædo, a, priv., and τροφη, 'nourishment,') Atrophy of children. Tabes mesenterica.

PÆDATROPHIA GLANDULOSA, Scrofula.

PÆDENCÉPHALIE, (pædo, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon,') Hydrocephalus internus.

PÆDERAST'IA, (παιδεραστια, Pædiat'io, Cinædia, (F.) Pédérastie, (pædo, and εως, 'love,') The love of boys. A disgraceful passion, common in ancient times, but now unknown. These terms are likewise applied to the crime of sodomy.

PÆDERASTIC, Pæderasticus. Relating or appertaining to pæderastia.

PÆDEROTA VIRGINICA, Leptandra virginica.

PÆD'IA, (παδεια.) Educat'io infautum. The bringing up or education—physical as well as moral—of children.

PÆDIATRI'A, Pædiat'rica, Pædiat'rics, (pædo, and ιατεια, 'medical management,') Treatment of the diseases of children.

PÆDICATIO, (pædicare, pædicatum, 'to commit pæderastia,') Pæderastia.

PÆDICI, Pai'dici (morbi.) Developmental affections, as malformations and teething.—(Dr. W. Farr.)

PÆDICTERUS, (pædo, and icterus, 'jaundice,') Icterus infantum.

PÆDION, (παιδιον.) Infans.

PÆDO, (παις, gen. παιδος, 'a child,') in composition, child, boy.

PÆDOBAROMACROMETER, (pædo, βαρος,

'weight,') μακος, 'large,' and μετρον, 'measure,') Baromacrometer.

PÆDOMETER, (pædo, and μετρον, 'measure,') Baromacrometer.

PÆDON'OSUS, (pædo, and ωσος, 'disease,') A disease of childhood.

PÆDOPHLEBOTOM'IA, (from pædo, φλεψ, 'a vein,' and τομη, 'incision,') Venæsectio puero'rum. Bleeding performed on children.

PÆDOT'RIBES, Min'ister Gymnas'tæ, (pædo, and τιβω, 'I train,') In ancient gymnastics, the officer acquainted with all the prescribed exercises, and who carried them into effect, according to the direction of the superior.

PÆDOT'ROPHY, Pædotroph'ia, (F.) Pédotrophie, (pædo, and τροφη, 'nourishment,') The part of hygiene which concerns the nourishment of children.

PÆEOSYNE, (παιουσνη.) Medicine.

PÆON, (Παιων, 'the god of physic,') Physician.

PÆO'NIA, P. officin'alis seu mas'cula seu nemoralis seu fen'ina seu loba'ta, Hæmag'gum, Pe'ony, or Pi'ony, male and female. (F.) Pivoine, Pione, Herbe Sainte-Rose, (from Παιων, 'the god of physic,') The root, flowers, and seeds were long esteemed powerful medicines. They are feebly astrigent, and have been considered to be narcotic and antispasmodic. They have been given, particularly, in intermittents and epilepsy, but are not now used. The flowers are called Rosæ benedict'æ, R. re'gise.

PÆONICE, (παιωνικη, [τηχη], 'medical, [art.]') Medicina.

PÆONICUS, (παιωνικος.) Medical.

PÆONIS, (παιωνις.) Medicina.

PÆONIUS, (παιωνιος.) Medical.

PAGAPOPLEX'IA, (παγος, 'icy coldness,' and αποπληξια, 'apoplexy,') Apoplexy from cold.

PAGOS, (παγος.) Peritonæum.

PAIDIA, (παδεια.) Infancy.

PAIDICI, Pædici.

PAIN, ([old F.] painer, 'to torment,' Sax. piman, 'to torture,') Dolor, Al'gos, Alge'ma, Alge'do, Alge'is, Od'ynē, Ache, Atich, (Sc.) Hachse, (Prov.) Crazy, Wark; Mis'ery, (especially a constant annoying pain or suffering,) (F.) Douleur. A disagreeable sensation, which scarcely admits of definition. It is generally symptomatic, and is called acute, (F.) aiguë, when sharp and violent; when short and sudden a twinge, and, when more violent, a pang; pungent, (F.) pongitive, when it resembles that which would be produced by a sharp instrument run into the part: heavy, (F.) gravative, when attended with a sensation of weight; tensive, when the part seems distended: lac'inating, when occurring in shoots: lac'rating or tearing, when the part seems to be tearing; burning, (F.) brûlante, when resembling that produced by a burn, &c.

PAIN, SUN, Hemicrania.

PAIN, (from pavis, 'bread,') see Triticum—p. à Coucou, Oxalis acetosella—p. de Madagascar, Jatropha manihot—p. de Porceau, Cyclamen.

PAINFUL, Ody'no'des, (F.) Douloureux. Full of pain.

PAINS, La'bour pains, Throes, Throes, Parturientis dolor'es, O'din, O'dis, Dolor'es ad par'tum, To'mina parturient'ium, (F.) Mal d'Enfant, Douleurs. The uneasy sensations that accompany labor, and are owing to uterine contraction. The pains that precede actual delivery, and are simply employed in dilating the os uteri, are called grinding: those which extrude the child, forcing. Those which take place in the first days after delivery, and are employed in forcing away coagula, &c., are termed Afterpains, Dolor'es seu

Tranchées utérines.

"To take a pain,"—"To try a pain,"—is to make an examination per vaginam, during labour, to discover its progress, character, &c.

The French term the pains, which precede and announce labour, mouches; those which accompany it, douleurs; and those which occur immediately afterwards, tranchées ou coliques.

PAINS, AFTER, see P. labour.

PAINS, GNAW'ING, Dolo're's roden'tes. Pains resembling what might be produced by the gnawing of an animal.

PAINT, (pingere, pictum, 'to paint,' [L.] pinto, (F.) peint;) Pigmentum, Ful'cus, (F.) Fard. A name given to different substances, employed for embellishing the complexion or rendering the skin softer. The substances most commonly used for this purpose are:—the Subn'trate of Bis'muth, (F.) Blanc de fard. A spirituous solution of benzoïn, precipitated by water, and forming Vir'gin's milk, (F.) Lait virginal; the red or rouge of the carthamus; Spanish white; the oxides of lead, tin, and mercury, vermilion, red saunders, &c. All paints may be said to be noxious. They injure the skin; obstruct perspiration; and, thus, frequently lay the foundation for cutaneous affections. See Cosmetic.

PAINT, Indian, Hydrastis Canadensis, Sanguinaria Canadensis—p. Yellow, Hydrastis Canadensis.

PAIS, (παῖς, gen. παῖδος.) Boy.

PALAD, Vertex.

PALÆSTRA, (παιλαστρα, 'a place for wrestling,' from παλῆ, 'wrestling,') Gymnasium.

PALAIS, Palace.

PALAME, (παλαμή.) Palm.

PALATAL, Palatine.

PAL'ATE, Palat'um, Hypero'a, Hypero'um, Uranis'cus, U'ranus, Roof of the mouth, Fos'sa Palati'na, Palat'um stab'ile seu du'r'um seu os'seum, Hard Pal'ate, (F.) Palais. The upper part of the cavity of the mouth; a kind of parabolic vault formed by the two superior maxillary bones and the two palate bones, covered with a thick and dense mucous membrane; bounded, before and at the sides, by the superior dental arch; and behind by the velum palati. A whitish line runs along the middle, from before to behind, at the anterior extremity of which is a tubercle corresponding to the inferior orifice of the anterior palatine canal. The arteries of the palate and corresponding gums proceed from the palatine, alveolar, infraorbital, labial, and buccal branches. The veins follow a similar course. The nerves are given off from the palatine, facial, infraorbital, superior dental, and from the nasopalatine ganglion.

PALATE ARTIFIC'IAL, Obtura'tor for the pal'ate, (F.) Obturateur du Palais. A plate of tortoise-shell, silver, vulcanite, &c., used to close a deficiency of the palate.

PALATE BONE, Os Palati seu basila'rè, (F.) Os Palatin ou du Palais, is a small bone of an irregular shape, situate at the posterior part of the nasal fossæ and palate. It seems formed by the union of two bony plates joined at right angles to each other; so that one is inferior and horizontal;—the other, superior and vertical. The horizontal or palatine portion, Arch of the palate, is quadrilateral. Its upper surface forms part of the nasal fossæ; the lower forms part of the palatine arch, and contains the inferior orifice of the posterior palatine canal. Its anterior edge is articulated with the palatine process of the superior maxillary bone; the posterior is free and sharp. It gives attachment to the velum palati, and presents an eminence, which, when joined with one on the opposite side, forms the posterior nasal spine. Its inner edge is articulated with the corresponding bone; its outer is confounded with the vertical portion. The vertical or ascending portion has the form of a long square. The inner surface forms part of the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. Its outer surface is unequal, and is articulated with the superior maxillary bone; behind, it presents a vertical groove, which forms part of the posterior palatine canal; and, above, a small free surface, which looks into the zygomatic fossa. Its anterior edge is united with the superior maxillary bone; the posterior is unequal, and rests on the internal ala of the pterygoid process. The angle, which it forms by uniting with the posterior edge of the horizontal portion, presents a very prominent pyramidal eminence, called the tuberosity of the palate bone. Its upper margin is surmounted by two eminences;—the one, anterior, called the orbital process;—the other, posterior, the sphenoid process. These two processes are separated by an almost circular notch, which the sphenoid bone forms into a foramen, called the sphenopalatine.

This bone appears to be developed from a single point of ossification. It is articulated with the sphenoid, ethmoid, the cornua sphenoidalia, superior maxillary bone, the inferior spongy bone, the vomer, and its fellow.

PALATE, CLEFT, see Harelip—p. Falling down of the, Uvulitis—p. Fissured, see Harelip—p. Hard, Palate—p. Soft, Velum pendulum palati.

PAL'ATINE, Pal'atal, Palati'nus, Pal'atic, (from palatum.) Relating or belonging to the palate.

PAL'ATINE or PAL'ATAL AR'TERIES are two in number. They are distinguished into, 1. The superior palatine or palatine, Palati'na descendens or Pal'atomax'illary, which leaves the internal maxillary behind the top of the orbit; descends into the pterygomaxillary fissure, and enters the posterior maxillary canal. Its branches are distributed to the velum palati and the nasal fossæ. 2. The inferior or ascending palatine or palatal, which is very small, and separates from the facial near its origin. It passes along the lateral and superior part of the pharynx, between the pillars of the velum palati, and divides into a number of ramusculi, which are distributed to the pharynx, the corresponding tonsil, the Eustachian tube, and the velum palati.

PALATINE CANALS or DUCTS. These are two in number. The anterior, Ductus incis'ivus seu Nasa'lo-palati'nus, Inci'sive canal, is situate at the anterior part of the palatine arch, and is formed by the two superior maxillary bones. It is single beneath, but opens above by two apertures, one into each nasal fossa. The foramen is called Fora'men incis'ivum seu Palati'nium ant'erius seu Alveola'rè ant'erius seu cœ'cum os'sis maxilla'ris superio'ris. The posterior palatine canal is situate at the posterior part of the palate. It is formed by the palate and superior maxillary bones, ascends between these two bones, and in its course gives rise to two or three small accessory palatine canals, which open above the tuberosity of the palate bone. It transmits the nerves and vessels which bear its name. The foramen is called F. Palati'nium poste'rius seu Palatomaxilla'rè seu alveola'rè poste'rius.

PALATINE MEMBRANE is the fibro-mucous membrane that lines the palate or roof of the mouth.

PALATINE or PALATAL NERVES, Guttur'o-palati'ns (Ch.), are three in number, and arise from the inferior part of the sphenopalatine ganglion. 1. The great Palatine, Palatin inf'érieur (Ch.), is situate anteriorly to the two others, and descends into the posterior palatine canal; gives a nasal filament and a staphyline filament, and is distributed on the palate. 2. The middle palatine, Gut'tural (Ch.), which arises behind the preceding, enters one of the accessory palatine canals, and is distributed to the tonsils and velum palati. 3. The little palatine nerve, situate still more backward than the last, which loses itself by several filaments in the uvula, tonsils, and follicles of the palatine membrane.

PALATITE, (palatum, and itis.) Uranisconitis.

PALATITIS, Uranisconitis.

PALATOGLOSSUS, Glossostaphylinus.

PALATOPHARYNGEUS, Pharyngo-staphylinus, Staphylinopharyngeus, Thyropharyngo-staphylinus, part of the Hyperopharyngeus, (F.) Palato-pharyngien, Stylo-pharyngien (Ch.). A membranous muscle, broader at its middle than at its extremities, and situate vertically in the lateral paries of the pharynx and velum palati. It includes the peristaphylopharyngeus, pharyngostaphylinus, and thyrostaphylinus of Winslow. When the palatopharyngei contract together, they depress the velum. They elevate and shorten the pharynx, and act principally in deglutition.

PALATO-PHARYNGIEN, Palatopharyngeus—p. Salpingeus, Circumflexus—p. Salpingien, Circumflexus.

PALATOSTAPHYLINI, see Azygos muscle.

PALATUM, Palate—p. Durum, see Palate—p. Fissum, Hyperoöchasma, see Harelip—p. Mobile, Velum pendulum palati—p. Molle, Velum pendulum palati—p. Osseum, see Palate—p. Pendulum, Velum pendulum palati.

PALE, (παλῆ, 'dust.') Pollen.

PA'LEA CABOT'IL. A fern of Java, the delicate filaments of which, derived from the stipes, act as mechanical styptics.

PALE'NESS, Pal'lor, Och'rotes, Ochro'ma, Ochri'asis, Leuco'sis, Dealba'tio, Lu'ror, (F.) Pâleur. Whiteness of complexion. It appears to be owing to a diminution or alteration of the blood circulating in the capillary vessels, and is often a sign of disease.

PÂLES COULEURS, ('pale colors.') Chlorosis.

PALET, (from [F.] pelote,—'itself,' from pila, 'a ball.') Head.

PALETTE (F.) 'a battle-dore.' Pal'mula, Fer'ula. An instrument of percussion. It has the shape of a spatula with a long handle; is made of very light, white wood, and has been proposed by M. Pery for what is called the Massage, a kind of pressure or kneading, exerted by the hand on the body and limbs, to excite the tone of the skin and subjacent tissues.

Palette (from patella) also means a cup for bleeding; and the xiphoid cartilage [?].

PALETTE DE CABANIS. An instrument, invented by Cabanis, of Geneva, to draw out the extremity of the stylet when passed into the nose, in the operation for fistula lacrymalis. It is composed of two plates of silver, pierced with several holes, and movable on each other. To use it, the instrument must be carried into the nose, so that the holes of the two plates correspond. When the end of the stylet is received into one of these holes, it is pinched, by sliding one of the plates on the other, and is easily withdrawn.

PALETTE À PANSEMENT. A small splint of thin, scooped wood, having the shape of the hand, and used to support the hand in certain cases,—when burnt, for example,—in order to prevent the fingers from being deformed by the cicatrices.

PÂLEUR, ([L.] pallor.) Paleness.

PALI PLAGUE, see Plague.

PALICOUR'EA CRO'CEA, Psycho'tria crocea, Order, Cinchonaceæ, a native of the West Indies, is possessed, according to Von Martius, of emetic properties.

PALICOUR'EA MARGRAAV'II, Erva do rato, Gal-cac'nia Vellozii, a native of Brazil, is poisonous, and employed there to kill rats and mice.

PALICOUR'EA OFFICINA'LIS, a native of Brazil, is reputed to be a powerful diuretic in small doses.

PALICOUR'EA SPECIO'SA, Goldshrub, a native of New Granada and Brazil. The leaves are considered to be antisyphilitic. The decoction in large doses is poisonous.

PALILLO, Campomanesia lineatifolia.

PALIMPISSA, (παλιμπίσσα, 'pitch reboiled,' from παλι, 'again,' and πίσσα, 'pitch.') Pinus sylvestris.

PALINCOTESIS, (παλιγκωσις, from παλι, 'again,' and κωσις, 'animosity,') Recrudescencia.

PALINDROME, Palindromia.

PALINDROM'IA, Paliin'dromé, (παλι, 'again,' and δρομή, 'a course,') This word signifies with some a reflux of fluids from the exterior towards the interior; and, according to others, the relapse of an affection—the recurrence—Recur'sio, Repetit'io,—of a paroxysm or disease,—Mor'bus recidi'dens, Mor'bi recur'sus.

PALINGENESIA, (παλιγγενεσία, from παλι, 'again,' and γενεσις, 'generation,') Regeneration.

PALLA, (παλλά.) Pila.

PALLAT, Vertex.

PALLIATION, Palliatio, (palliare, palliatum, 'to cover, mask,' from pallium, 'a mantle,') The act of palliating; that is, of causing the symptoms of a disease to mitigate, without curing it. The medical art can frequently only moderate the symptoms of a disease, prevent it from making progress, prolong the days of the patient, and diminish his sufferings. This is palliative treatment. (F.) Traitement palliatif.

PALLIATIVE, Palliati'vus, Antipath'ic, Evantiopath'ic, (F.) Palliati'f. A remedy or mode of treatment which only relieves a disease, without curing it. The palliative treatment.—Cu'ra palliati'va, is placed in antithesis to the radical,—Cu'ra radica'lis; see Radical.

PALLIDULUS, (dim. of pallidus, 'pale,') Blafard.

PALLIDUS MORBUS, Chlorosis.

PALLOR, Paleness—p. Virginum, Chlorosis.

PALM, Pal'ma, Pal'amé, Vo'la, V. na'nús, Plate'a, The'nar, Agés, Agos'tus, Poc'ulum, Pal'era, Supel'lex seu Supellectilè Drog'eni's, (F.) Pau'ne ou Creux de la main. The hollow or inside of the hand. It is limited without by the thenar eminence, which answers to the thumb; within, by the hypothenar eminence, which answers to the little finger; above, by the wrist-joint; and below by the four fingers.

PALM. GOMUTO, see Toddy.

PALMA, Palm—p. Christi, ('palm of Christ,') Ricinus communis—p. Cocos, Cocos nucifera—p. Dactylifera, Date tree—p. Humilis, Musa paradisiaca—p. Indica, vinaria Secunda, see Toddy—p. Unguentarium, Myrobalanus.

PALMÆ UTERI PLICATÆ, (pl. of palma, 'the branch of a tree,') Ar'bor vitæ uteri'nis, A. uteri ric'ificans. The arborescent striæ in the interior of the cervix uteri.

PALMAIRE, Palmar—p. Cutané, Palmaris brevis—p. Grand, Palmaris magnus—p. Grêle, Palmaris longus—p. Long, Palmaris longus.

PALMAR, Palma'ris, (F.) Palmaire, (from palma.) That which concerns the palm of the hand. The palm has sometimes been divided into three regions, called palmar. 1. The external palmar region corresponds to the thenar eminence. 2. The internal palmar region is formed by the hypothenar eminence; and 3. The middle palmar region is the hollow of the hand, (F.) Creux de la main.

PALMAR APONEURO'SIS, Palmar fasc'ia. A strong triangular aponeurosis, which arises from the inferior tendon of the palmaris brevis and the anterior annular ligament of the carpus. It covers the whole palm of the hand, and adheres, somewhat strongly, to the skin of the part. The palmar ligaments are small, very numerous, fibrous fasciæ, which unite the different bones of the carpus and metacarpus.

PALMAR ARCHES, (F.) Arcades on Crosses palmares. The curved extremities of the radial and cubital arteries in the palm of the hand. There are two palmar arches:—the one, cubital or superficial,—grande Arcade palmaire of Chaussier, furnishes at its convexity towards the fingers the collateral arteries of the fingers, and the internal collateral of the thumb; the other, the radial, profound, or deep-seated,—petite Arcade palmaire of Chaussier, is deep in the palm of the hand beneath the tendons of the flexor muscles of the fingers. It gives some small branches only to the surrounding parts. The palmar veins accompany the corresponding arteries.

PALMAR ARTERIES, see Palmar arches—p. Fascia, P. aponeurosis.

PALMAR MUSCLES. These are three in number. 1. Palmaris Magnus, Flexor carpi radialis, Radialis internus, (F.) Épitrochlo-métacarpien (Ch.), Palmaire grand, Radial antérieur. A long fusiform muscle, which passes obliquely from the inner tuberosity of the humerus to the upper extremity of the second metacarpal bone. It bends the hand. 2. Palmaris Longus, Latescens choræ musculus, Ulnaris gracilis, (F.) Épitrochlo-carpi-palmaire (Ch.), Palmaire long, P. grêle. This muscle is situate on the inner side of the last. It is very slender, and passes from the inner tuberosity of the humerus to the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and to the palmar aponeurosis, which it seems to form by the vanishing of its fibres. It stretches the palmar aponeurosis, and bends the hand. 3. Palmaris Brevis, Cutro quadrata, Carpiæus, (F.) Palmaire cutané. A small, thin, quadrilateral muscle; situate before the thenar eminence. It passes from the annular ligament of the carpus to the integuments of the palm of the hand, which it wrinkles by its contraction.

PALMAR VEINS, see Palmar arches.

PALMARIS BREVIS, see Palmar muscles—p. Longus, see Palmar muscles—p. Magnus, see Palmar muscles.

PALMETTO, SAW, Chamærops serratula.

PALMI-PHALANGIENS, Lumbricæ manus.

PALMISTRY, (from palma, 'the palm of the hand,') Chirromancy.

PALMOSCOPY or PALMOSCOPY, Palmoscopia, (πάλμος, 'palpitation,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.')

Investigation of the beating of the heart and pulse. Prognosis from the beating of the heart and pulse.

PALMULA, (dim. of palma.) Date, Palette.

PALMUS, (πάλμος.) Palpitation—p. Cordis, Palpitation—p. Plumbarius, Colic, metallic—p. Vomitus, Vomiting.

PALO DE CALENTURAS, (S.) 'fever wood,' Calenturas, Cinchona—p. de Yacca, Galactodendron utile—p. de Velas, Parmentiera cefriferæ.

PALOMMIER, Gaultheria.

PALPA'TION, (palpare, palpationem, 'to feel.')

The sense of touch. It is also used for the mode of exploring diseases by feeling or pressing upon the diseased organ. A delicate and discriminating touch—tactus eruditus—is important in the diagnosis of many morbid conditions.

PALPEBRA, Palpebrum, (supposed to be from palpitare, 'to palpitate,' owing to its frequent motion. [?]) Blepharon, Operculum seu Cœoperculum oculi, Eyelid, (Prov.) Eyebreck, (Sc.) Eewinker, (F.) Paupière. The eyelids are two movable vela, situate in front of the eye; which by their separation permit the organ to receive the impression of light, or by their greater or less occlusion protect it from the influence of too great light, or from the action of extraneous bodies. They are separated, above, from the forehead, by the eyebrows; and, below, are confounded with the cheeks. They are distinguished into upper, Palpebra major seu superior, Epiceclis; and lower, Palpebra minor seu inferior, Hypoecclis, Hypoecclum. The former is much broader and more movable than the latter. They are separated by a transverse cleft—Fissura palpebrarum—and their edges are thick, and furnished with the cilia or eyelashes. Supported by the tarsal cartilages, they unite at the extremities of the transverse diameter of the orbit, forming two angles, the innermost being called the greater angle of the eye, or inner or greater canthus; the other, the lesser, or external angle or canthus. When brought together, a triangular space is left between their posterior surfaces and the conjunctiva, which has been called Rivus lacrymalis. They are formed, 1. Of a thin dermoid texture: 2. Of a muscular membrane,—a portion of the orbicularis: 3. Of a particular fibrous membrane: 4. Of the tarsi: 5. Of a mucous membrane,—a part of the tunica conjunctiva.

Their vessels and nerves are called Palpebral.

PALPEBRA INFERIOR EXTRORSUM FLEXA, Ectropion—p. Tertia, Valvula semilunaris.

PALPEBRÆ SUPERIORIS PRIMUS, ('first [muscle] of the upper eyelid,') Levator palpebræ superioris.

PALPEBRAL, Palpebralis, (F.) Palpebral, Blépharique, (from palpebra.) That which belongs or relates to the eyelid.

PALPEBRAL ARTERIES are those distributed to the eyelids. They are two in number; an upper and a lower. The former arises from the ophthalmic, a little beyond the cartilaginous pulley of the greater oblique muscle, and descends towards the upper eyelid, over which it is distributed. The latter arises at the side of, and a little behind, the preceding, and sends its ramifications to the lower eyelid and the neighbouring parts. The palpebral veins have a similar arrangement; except that some of them open into the temporal and labial veins.

PALPEBRAL FLUX, PU'RIFORM. A puriform discharge, furnished by the glands of Meibomius, when inflamed; and to which Scarpa attributes fistula lacrymalis in many cases.

PALPEBRAL LIG'AMENTS are distinguished into superior and inferior. Some anatomists, with Winslow, have described, under this name, the fibrous layer which is attached,—on the one hand, to the outer part of the circumference of the orbit; on the other, to the tarsal cartilages.

PALPEBRAL NERVES, Nerves of the eyelids, arise, particularly, from the frontal and lachrymal branches; from the ophthalmic nerve of Willis; and from the facial, nasal, and infraorbital branch of the superior maxillary nerve.

PALPITA'TION, Palpita'tio, Pal'mus, P. seu Tremor Cordis, Palpita'tio seu Pulsat'io Cordis,

Vibratio Cordiaca seu Cordis, Cardiognmus, Cardiopal'mus, Subsultio, Clo'nus Pulpatio, (Sc.) Daut, Dout, (F.) Palpitation, P. du Cœur, (palpitare, palpitatum, 'to throb.') A name given to the pulsations of the heart, when they become stronger, more extensive, or more sensible to the individual than ordinarily. Palpitations occur in a number of affections. They are, sometimes, owing to organic diseases of the heart—hypertrophy, inflammation, &c.; at others, to a disease in some other viscus; whilst, frequently, they are merely nervous.

PALPITATION is sometimes felt in the arteries, constituting Palpitatione Arterio'sa.

PANA'DA, (dim. of [L.] pane, [L.] panis, 'bread,') Pana'do, Pana'ta, Panatel'lu. Bread, boiled in water to the consistence of pap; sometimes administered to the sick.

SIMPLE BREAD PANADA may be made by putting any quantity of grated stale bread into enough water to form a moderately thick pulp; covering it up, and leaving it to soak for an hour; then beating it up with two tablespoons of milk, and a small portion of refined sugar, and boiling the whole for ten minutes, stirring all the time.

PANAX QUINQUEFO'LIUM, Aureli'ana seu Ara'lia Canaden'sis, Gin'seng, Nin'sing, Gen'saug, Sing, Red'berry, Five fingers. (Same etymon as Panacea.) Family, Araliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monœcia. This plant grows in North America. The root—Pana'ax (Ph. U. S.), Ra'dix gin'seng—is about the thickness of the little finger; an inch or two in length, often dividing into two branches; of a whitish-yellow colour; wrinkled on the surface, and of a compact, almost horny, texture. It has no smell, but a very sweet taste, combined with a slight degree of aromatic bitterness. It is much esteemed by the Chinese, who pay a high price for it. It is a gentle and agreeable stimulant.

PANAX SCHIN'SENG, Asiat'ic Gin'seng, a native of Asia, has been usually confounded with the last. The root, ra'dix sin'si, has like virtues.

PANBIO'MA, Pambio'ma, gen. Pambio'matis, (pan, and βιος, 'life,') The original animating principle. The general principle of life.

PANCHRESTON, Panchrestum, (πανχρηστος, from pan, and χρηστος, 'useful,') Panacea.

PANCHRESTUM CHINÆ, see Quinium.

PANCHYMAGO'GUM, Pantago'gon, (pan, χυμος, 'juice,' and αγω, 'I drive away,') A medicine which the ancients believed capable of purging away all sorts of humours.

PANCHYMAGOGUM MINERALE, Hydrargyri submurias.

PANCENONOSUS, (pancenus, and νοσος, 'disease,') Pandemic.

PANCENOSUS, Pandemic.

PANCENUS MORBUS, (πανκωνος, from pan, and κωνος, 'common,') Pandemic.

PANCENONUSUS, Pandemic.

PANCRA'TIUM, (πανκρατιον, from pan, and κρατος, 'strength,') An athletic exercise with the Greeks. Applied also to a plant, which was considered all powerful.

PANCREAS, gen. Pancre'atis, (παγκρεας, gen. παγκρεατος, from pan, and κρεας, 'flesh,') i. e. quite fleshy,') Callie'reas, Pan'creum, Lac'tes, Pulvi'nar ventric'uli, To'tum carno'sum, Gland'ula sali'vallis abdom'inis, Pancre'as, Sweet'bread. A gland, deeply seated in the abdomen, and lying transversely on the vertebral column, between the three curvatures of the duodenum, behind the stomach, and to the right of the spleen. Its left extremity is called the tail of the pancreas; it is smaller than the right, which is called the head. At its right portion, it has, almost always, a greater or less prolongation; called, by Winslow, and some others, the les'ser pan'creas, (F.) Petit pancre'as, Pancreas of Acelli, Pancreas mi'nus. The pancreas resembles the salivary glands in structure, and has been called the Abdom'inal Salivary Gland. It is composed of lobes and granulated lobules, distinct, and united by areolar tissue. From each of the granulations of these lobes arise the radicles of its excretory duct, which are very delicate, and united like veins. The duct itself, Duct'us Pancreat'icus seu Wirrung'ia'nus, Pancreat'ic duct, Canal or Duct of Wir'run'gum or Wir'sung, (F.) Canal pancre'atique, proceeds in a serpentine course through the substance of the organ: and when it has reached behind the second portion of the duodenum, it becomes free, and is of the size of a crow's quill. It opens at an acute angle into the choledoch duct, or proceeds close to it, opening separately into the duodenum. The Pancreatic arteries are very numerous and small. They proceed from the cœliac, splenic, superior mesenteric, right gastroepiploic, coronaria ventriculi, and left capsular. Its veins open into the radicles of the vena porta; and, particularly, into the splenic and lesser mesenteric. Its nerves emanate from the solar plexus, and its lymphatics pass into ganglions, to which it gives its name. The pancreas secretes the Pancreatic juice, Succus seu Liquor Pancreaticus, Lympha Pancreatica, (F.) Suc pancréatique, which resembles the saliva. When this juice is mixed with amylaceous matters, it converts them into dextrin and glucose. Its great use appears, however, to be, to emulsify fatty matters by virtue of a peculiar albuminoid principle—pancreatin, coagulable by heat or alcohol—which it contains.

PANCREAS OF ASELLI, see Pancreas—p. Minus, see Pancreas—p. Petit, see Pancreas—p. Second, Brunner's glands.

PANCREATAGIA, (pancreas, and αλγος, 'pain.') Pain or disease of the pancreas.

PANCREATEMPHRAXIS, (pancreas, and εμπρασω, 'I obstruct.') Obstruction of the pancreas.

PANCREATIC, Pancreaticus, (F.) Pancréatique. Relating to or affecting the pancreas.

PANCREATIC ARTERIES, see Pancreas—p. Duct, see Pancreas—p. Juice, see Pancreas—p. Nerves, see Pancreas.

PANCREATIC SARCO'MA OF AB'ERNETHY, Emphy'ma sarco'ma pancreat'icum. A tumour, in irregular masses, connected by loose fibrous substance, like the irregular masses of the pancreas. Found in the areolar substance; but, more usually, in lymphatic glands, chiefly in the female breast.

PANCREATIC VEINS, see Pancreas.

PANCREATIN, see Pancreas.

PANCREATITIS, Inflammatio pancreat'is, (F.) Inflammation du Pancréas, (pancreas, and itis.) Inflammation of the pancreas;—an affection, the phenomena of which are not well known.

PANCREATOID, (pancreas, and ειδός, 'appearance.') Pancreatoides. A tumour resembling the pancreas in structure.

PANCREATON'CUS, (pancreas, and ογκος, 'a swelling.') Tumour of the pancreas.

PANCRENE, (pan, and κρηνη, 'a spring,') Pancreas.

PANCREUM, Pancreas.

PANDA'LEA, Panda'leum. A kind of lozenge used by the Arabian physicians.

PANDALEUM, Pandalea.

PANDALITIUM, (corrupted from panaritium.) Paronychia.

PANDEMIA, (πανδημία.) Pandemic.

PANDEMIC, Pandemy, Pandémia, Morbus Pandémicus seu Pandémus seu Pancœmms, Pancœ'nobus, Pancœnon'obus, Pancœnomus, (F.) Pandémie, (pan, and ἔθνος, 'people.') An epidemic which attacks the whole, or a great part, of the population.

PANDEMIC, Pandemic.

PANDEMY, Pandemic.

PANDICULA'TION, Pandicula'tio, Scordine'ma, Scordinis'mus, Cl'o'mms Pandicula'tio, (pandiculari, (pandere, 'to stretch out,') 'to stretch, as one awaking from sleep.') Stretch'ing, Hal'tices, (pl.) An action, which consists in elevating the upper limbs, and throwing the head and trunk backwards, at the same time that the lower limbs are extended. This series of motions of the extensor muscles is in some measure independent of the will, and is accompanied by yawning, which is equally involuntary. In the state of health, stretching occurs before and after sleep; especially when we are fatigued. It is also observed at the onset of certain paroxysms of fever, hysteria, &c.

PANDOCE'UM, Pandochi'um, Pandoci'um, (pan, and δέχομαι, 'to receive.') A house or hotel that receives all classes. A general hospital, or one that admits all classes.

PANDOCHIUM, (πανόχειον.) Pandoceum.

PANDOCIUM, (πανόκειον.) Pandoceum.

PANG, (like Pain, or from Sax. pingan, 'to prick, to torture,') see Pain—p. Breast, suffocative, Angina pectoris.

PANHIDRO'SIS, (pan, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating,') Sudor universa'lis. Sweating over the whole body.

PANHYPERÆMIA, (pan, and hyperæmia.) Plethora.

PANIC D'ITALIE, Panicum Italicum.

PANIC GRASS, ITALIAN, Panicum Italicum.

PANCAUT, Eryngium campestre—p. Martine, Eryngium maritimum.

PANICUM DACTYLON, Cynodon dactylon.

PAN'ICUM ITAL'ICUM, (from panis, 'bread,') Italian Panic Grass, Indian Millet, Gninea Corn, Barbadoes Millet, Mil'inn Indianum, Sorghum, Hol'ens Sorghum, Durra, (F.) Millet des oiseaux ou à grappes, Panic d'Italie. Nat. Ord. Gramineæ. The seed—Mil'ii Sem'ina—are much esteemed in Italy, being a constant ingredient in soups, and made into a variety of forms for the table.

PANICUM MILIA'CEUM, P. mil'ium, Common Millet, Mil'ium, M. Pan'icum seu Esculent'um, Cen'chron, Cen'chrus, (F.) Mil'lot ordinaire, Mil. Milletseed are esteemed a nutritious article of diet, and are often made into puddings.

PANICUM MILIUM, P. miliaceum.

PANIDRO'SIS, (pan, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweat,') General or universal perspiration.

PANIS, ('bread,') see Triticum æstivum—p. Canicaceæ, see Canicæ—p. Cibiarius seu secundarius, Syncomistos—p. Cuculi, Oxalis acetosella—p. Porcinus, Cyclamen.

PANIVOROUS, Panivorus, (panis, 'bread, and voros, 'I devour,') Subsisting on bread.

PANNA AFRICA'NA. A tœniafuge root, introduced into Germany, and supposed to be the male fern.

PANNI, Swathing clothes.

PANNICLE, (dim. of pannus, 'a web,') Membrane.

PANNICULE, Panniculus—p. Charnu, Panniculus carnosus.

PANNICULUS, (dim. of pannus, 'a web,') (F.) Pannicule. A membrane. Pterygion.

PANNICULUS ADIPOSUS, Cellular membrane.

PANNICULUS CARNO'SUS, Tunica carno'sa, Muscular Web, Man'tle, (F.) Pannicule charnue, is a general covering found in the quadruped, and formed by a thin, subcutaneous muscle, which serves to move the skin. It exists only in certain parts of the human body,—as in the forehead, where it is formed by the occipito-frontalis; in the neck, by the platysma myoides; and, in the scrotum, by the cremaster muscle.

PANNICULUS CORDIS, Pericardium—p. Hymeneus, Hymen—p. Virginalis, Hymen.

PANNIKELL, Cranium.

PAN'NUS. A piece of cloth. A web. This word has several other meanings, many of which are equivocal. It means a tent for a wound, and also an irregular nevus or mark on the skin. Modern ophthalmologists apply it to an opaque and vascular condition of the anterior membrane of the cornea, almost invariably produced by the continuance of purulent or strumous ophthalmia, or by chronic inflammation of the cornea. This part becomes nebulous, covered with red vessels, and opaque. At times, the sclerotic conjunctiva undergoes a similar change to that which occurs in the corneal portion.

PAPA'VER, P. somnif'erum, Me'con, Leth'e'a. The White Pop'py, Papa'ver sativum, (F.) Pavot des Jardins. Ord. Papaveracæ. Sec. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. The ripe CAPSULE OF THE WHITE POPPY, Cod'ia, Sca'phion, Papav'ervis Cap'ut seu Cap'sula, Papa'ver, (Ph. U. S.,) Me'con, Pop'pyhead, is used in fomentation as an anodyne and relaxant to inflamed or ulcerated parts. The expressed oil of the seeds—Poppy oil—is called by the French Huile d'Éillette. It is from the poppy that O'PIUM—called, also, O'pium Theba'icum, Succus Theba'icus, Me'con'ium, O'pion, Ma'nus De'i, Affion, Aff'ium, Am'phiam, A'fium, Osoror, Lau'danum, Me'con, So'pio, (Prov.) Pop'py pill, (F.) O'pium brut or cru—is procured. It is the concrete juice obtained after the flowering of the plant, by making longitudinal incisions in the unripe capsules; and is commonly obtained from the Levant or India, where the poppy grows abundantly. Opium is a compound of morphia, narcotina, meconic acid, codeia, narcenin, meconin, caoutchouc, fecula, resin, oil, and several other substances. Turkey Opium is of a heavy and slightly fetid odour. Its taste is nauseous, bitter, acrid, and warm: it is in flat pieces; solid and tenacious; of a dark brown colour, and yellowish when powdered; making a light brown, interrupted, streak on paper. In East India Opium the odour is the same, and empyreumatic; the taste is less bitter, but more nauseous, and the colour darker. The varieties of opium known in commerce are the Smyrna, the Constantinople, the Egyptian, the Persian, and the Indian. Opium is stimulant in small doses; sedative in large; narcotic and anodyne; operating through the nervous system. It is a most valuable remedy in all painful affections and inflammations, when given so as to produce its full, sedative effects, especially in peritonitis. In diarrhoea and dysentery it acts as an astringent; and in intermittents it will often prevent the paroxysm. In typhus, in small doses, it acts as a cordial; in larger it allays irritation and produces sleep. When applied externally, its narcotic effects are developed; and, hence, it is a useful application to irritable sores, painful tumours, &c. Dose, gr.  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  as a stimulant; gr. j to iij as a sedative.

PAPILLÆ OF THE TONGUE are very numerous and marked. They are observed particularly at the upper surface of the organ, and are distinguished into—1. The Lenticular papillæ, Papillæ mucosæ seu maxillæ seu capitæ seu vullæ seu circumvallatæ seu truncatæ seu calyciformes. They are arranged at the base of the tongue in two oblique lines, having the shape of the letter V, and united angularly at the foramen cæcum. They have, in general, an ovoid or spherical shape, and have seemed to be mucous follicles similar to those of the palate, lips, &c. 2. The Fungiform or Fungoid Papillæ, Papillæ medix seu semilenticulæres, are of indeterminate number, but always more numerous than the preceding. They are irregularly disseminated near the edges and the point of the tongue; have a rounded and flattened head, supported by a short and narrow footstalk. Their tint is whitish. 3. The Conical, Conoidal or Pyramidal papillæ, P. minillæ seu villosæ, are the most numerous of all. Their arrangement is more regular in the forepart of the tongue than behind. They resemble small cones; the base being towards the tongue, and the apex free. The anterior are very small, and have been called Filiform papillæ. They appear to be produced by the terminations of the filaments of the lingual nerve, and are surrounded by an evident vascular network.

PAPILLÆ TRUNCATÆ, see Papillæ of the tongue—p. Vallatæ, see Papillæ of the tongue—p. Villosæ, see Papillæ of the tongue.

PAPILLARY, Papillaris, Papillous, (F.) Papillaire, (from papilla.) Of or belonging to the nipple or to the papilla.

PAPILLARY BODY, Corpus papillare.

PAPILLI-AUT-MAMILLI-FORMIS, Mastoid.

PAPILLIFORM, Papilliformis, (papilla, and forma, 'form.') Having the shape or appearance of a papilla.

PAPILLOMA, gen. Papillo'matis, (papilla, and oma.) A tumour, whose specific elements are those of the papillæ of the normal skin; and which, consequently, is composed of a stem of fibrous or homogeneous connective tissue; is club-shaped, cylindrical or acuminated, and covered with a layer of epithelial cells, similar to those of the normal papilla.

PAPILLOUS, Papillary.

PAPOOSE ROOT, Caulophyllum thalictroides.

PAPPE, Mamma.

PAPPEA CAPEEN'SIS, (after Dr. Karl W. L. Pappel, a botanist of Leipzig.) A small tree of the Nat. Ord. Sapindacæ, common in Cafferland, the fruit of which is called Wild Plum. It furnishes a vinous beverage and excellent vinegar. Its kernel contains an oil, which, although eatable, is somewhat cathartic, and is recommended as an external application in tinea capitis, alopecia, &c.

PAPPUS, (παππος.) The down on the chin and cheeks.

PAPPUS AMERICANUS, Solanum tuberosum.

PAP'ULA, pl. Papulæ. Akin to papilla. A pimple, Ecor'chia, (Prov.) Pouke, Puckle, (Sc.) Pluke, Plouk, (F.) Papule, Bouton, Bourgeon. A small acuminated elevation of the cuticle, with an inflamed base; very seldom containing a fluid, or suppurating, and commonly terminating in scurf or desquamation. An eruption of pimples is called in Devonshire Murples.

Papulæ is the first order of Willan and Bateman's arrangement of cutaneous diseases.

Puncturing. The operation of tapping to evacuate the collected fluid in ascites, ovarian dropsy, &c.

PARACENTESIS THORACIS, Thoracocentesis.

PARACENTETERION, (παρακεντητριον.) Trocar.

PARACENTETERIUM, (παρακεντητριον.) Woolhouse has given this appellation to a small trocar employed by Nuck for puncturing the eye in cases of dropsy of that organ.

PARACENTICION, Trocar.

PARACEPHALUS, (F.) Paracéphale, (from para, and κεφαλή, 'head.')

A genus of monsters, with the head badly formed, but voluminous; the face distinct, with a mouth; rudimental sensorial organs, and thoracic members.

PARACHROEA, (para, and χρoα, 'colour.')

Morbid change of colour of the surface, especially of the face.

PARACHROMA, gen. Parachromo, (para, and χρoμα, 'colour.')

Achromatopsia.

PARACHROSIS, Decoloration.

PARACINEMA, Luxation.

PARACINESES, (para, and κίνησις, 'motion.')

Diseases of the motor nerves; morbid movements of voluntary muscles.

PARACMASIS, (παρκαμασις,) Decline.

PARACMASITIC, Paracemasiticus, (παρκαμασιζω, (para, and ακμή, 'the highest point,') 'I decrease.')

Decreasing. An epithet for a distemper which gradually decreases. Also, according to Galen, the period of life when a person is said to grow old, which he places at from 35 to 49, after which he is said to be old—a definition that would not suit us at the present day.

PARACMASTICUS, (παρκαμαστικός,) see Acmaesticus.

PARACME, (παρακμή,) Decline.

PARACOE, (παρakoε, from para, and akoε, 'hearing.')

See Cophosis, Paracusis.

PARACOPE, (παρakoπη,) Paracopē, (Paracopē, (παρakoπτω, (para, and κοπω, 'I strike,') 'I strike falsely.')

Delirium. In Hippocrates, it means the slight delirium which sometimes occurs in febrile diseases.

PARACOUSIA, (para, and akouω, 'to hear.')

See Cophosia.

PARACRISES, (para, and κρiσις, 'secretion.')

Diseases of the secretory function.

PARACRUSIS, (παρakρoυσις, from para, and κρoυω, 'I strike.')

Paracope.

PARACUSIS, (παρakουσις, from para, and akouσις, 'the act of hearing.')

Cophosis. Also, perverted audition.

PARACUSIS A'CHIS, Auditus a'erior, Paracusis oxycoia. The hearing painfully acute, and intolerant of the lowest sounds; a symptom in otalgia, epilepsy, cephalitis, and febrile affections.

Ageusia. Also, perversion of taste, Parageusia, Parageustia, Alotriogeustia, Gustus depravatus.

PARAGEUSTIA, Paragensis.

PARAGLOSSA, Paraglossē, (para, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.')

Swelling of the tongue; Dysphala- gia Linguo'sa, Glossomegismus, Macroglossa, Prolypsus lingue. Sauvages, under the term Paraglossa deglutitoria, means a pretended doubling of the tongue into the pharynx, (F.) Retournement de la langue. See Glossocle.

PARAGOGE, (παραγωγη, from para, and αγω, 'to lead.')

Abduction, Coaptation.

PARAGOMPHOSIS, Paragomphosis capitis, (para, and γομφωσις, 'a nailing.')

Incomplete wedging of the head of the child in the pelvis during labour.

PARAGUAY-ROUX, see Spilanthus oleracea.

PARALALIA, (para, and λαλια, 'speech.')

Mogilalia—p. Nasalis, Rhinorhonia.

PARALAMP'SIS, (παρалаμψις, from παρалаμπω, (para, and λαμπω, 'I shine,') 'I shine at the side of.')

Macula corneæ margaritacea, Per'la. A cicatrix on the transparent part of the eye.

PARALEREMA, (παρалаρημα, from para, and ληρος, 'foolish talk.')

Delirium.

PARALLAGE, (παρалаγη,) Insanity.

PARALLAGMA, gen. Parallagmatis, (παρалаγμα,) Chevachement.

PARALLAXIS, (παρалаξις, 'aberration.')

Chevachement, Insanity.

PARALLE'LA. A kind of scurfy, cutaneous eruption, affecting the palms of the hands in parallel lines, and symptomatic of the venereal disease, according to Forestus.

PARALLELISM OF DISEASES, Isopathia.

PARALOGIA, (παρалаγια, from para, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

Delirium.

PARALOPH'IA, (para, and λοφια, 'the first vertebra of the back.')

The lower and lateral part of the neck, near the vertebrae.

PARALYSE, Paralytic.

PARALYSIE, Paralysis—p. Musculaire atrophique, Atrophie musculaire progressive—p. Saturnine, Palsy, lead.

PARALYSIS, (παρалаυσις,) Par'esis, Resolutio membrorum seu nervorum, Cu'rus paralyticus, Catal'ysis, (F.) Paralytic, Résolution des membres; Aneur'ia, Aneur'ria, Aner'vism of Piorry; Palsy; (παρалаυω, (para, and λυω, 'I loosen,') 'I relax.')

Abolition or great diminution of the voluntary motions, Myoparalytic, and sometimes of sensation in one or more parts of the body.

Palsy is said to be local when it affects only a few muscles. When it extends to half the body, vertically or horizontally, it is called Hemiple'gia or Paraple'gia. It is commonly symptomatic of disease of the brain or of the nerves themselves, and is a frequent accompaniment, precursor, or successor of apoplexy,—Phrenoparalytic. The immediate cause is, generally, pressure, either by blood effused, or by serum, or by vascular turgescence. At its onset, therefore, blood-letting may be advisable; but, afterwards, the disease becomes one of nervous debility, and requires stimulants to the paralyzed parts, or to the mucous membranes,—frictions, sinapisms, blisters, the moxa, baths, electricity, galvanism, purgatives, and the nux vomica, which last has the property of exciting movements where the will has no longer power. The disease generally admits only of palliation, and is extremely apt to recur.

PARALYSIS, Primula veris.

PARALYSIS AG'ITANS, P. trem'ula, Syn'clonus ballismus, Scelotyr'bē festinans, Tremor, Tro'mos, Shaking Palsy, Trem'bling Palsy. A variety of tremor, in which the muscles are in a perpetual alternation of contraction and relaxation.

PARALYSIS, BELL'S, Bell's Palsy, Histrionic Paralytic or Palsy, Paralytic facialis, Prosopoparalytic, Tris'mus diastrophē Sauvage'sii, Diastrophē Gale'ni, Hemiple'gia facialis, O'ris tort'ura paralytica Linne'e'i, Hemiprosople'gia. The paralysis of the face induced by a lesion of the portio dura has been called Bell's Palsy, owing to Sir Charles Bell having been one of the first to investigate it minutely.

PARALYSIS BERIBERIA, Beriberi—p. Extremittatum, Acroparalysis.

PARALYSIS, DIPHThERIT'IC, P. diphtherit'ica. A singular consequence, at times, of diphtheria, supervening when the patient is convalescing or apparently well. It may affect only the palate or pharynx, or be more general; and usually gets well, although slowly.

PARALYSIS FACIALIS, Paralysis, Bell's—p. General, of the Insane, Dementia paralytica—p. Hemiplegia, Hemiplegia—p. Histrionic, Paralysis, Bell's—p. of the Insane, Dementia paralytica—p. Intestini recti, Protoparalysis—p. Intestinorum, Enteroparalysis—p. Linguae, Glossolysis—p. Medullaris, Paraplegia—p. Metallica, Palsy, lead—p. Venenata—p. Rachialgia, Colic, metallic.

PARALYSIS, RE'FLEX. Palsy occasioned by irritation reflected through the excitomotory nervous system to parts in themselves healthy,—as in the case of palsy from dentition, or of an injury of a nerve on one side of the body occasioning palsy on the other. Reflex paralysis would seem, at times, to assume the paraplegic form—re'flex paraple'gia. The cure must depend on the removal of the primary cause.

PARALYSIS RENUM, Nephroparalysis—p. Saturnine, Paraplegia—p. Tremula, Paralysis agitans—p. Palsy, lead—p. Scorbutica, Pellagra—p. Spinalis, Paraplegia—p. Vaecillans, Chorea.

PARALYSIS VENENATA, Paralysis e venenis, Paralysis from poisons. Paralysis, the result of poisonous substances—as of lead, mercury, arsenic, ergot, &c.

PARALYSIS E VENENIS, P. Venenata—p. Venetriculi, Gastroparalysis.

PARALYT'IC, (παρλυτικός) Paralyticus, Paralyzed, Pal'sied, (F.) Paralysé, Paralytique. Affected with or causing paralysis.

PARALYTIC STROKE, see Stroke, paralytic.

PARALYTICUS, (παρλυτικός) Paralytic.

PARALYZED, Paralytic.

PARAME'NIA, (para, and μην, 'a month.') Menstruatio anom'ala, Menses anom'ali, Mis-menstruation. Difficult menstruation. Disordered menstruation.

PARAMENIA DIFFICILIS, Dysmenorrhœa—p. Errors, Menstruation, vicarious—p. Obstructionis, see Amenorrhœa—p. Profusa, Menorrhagia—p. Superflua, Menorrhagia.

PARAME'RIA, (παρμηρια, para, and μηρος, 'the thigh.') The internal parts of the thigh.

PARAMESOS, (παμεσος, from para, and μεσος, 'the middle.') Annular finger, see Digitus.

PARAMO DE RUIZ, MINERAL WATERS OF. A remarkable acid spring in New Grenada. It contains free sulphuric and chlorohydric acids, and has a temperature of 157° Fah.

PARANEPHRI'TIS, (para, and nephritis.) Inflammation of the renal capsules, Inflammat'io re'num ecenturiato'rum.

PARANEPHRUS, (para, and νεφρος, 'kidney.') Capsule, renal.

PARANGEA, (παρνοια, from para, and νοος, 'understanding.') Delirium, Dementia.

PARANYMPH'US, (παρυνμφος, para, and νυμφη, 'a young spouse, a bride.') A name given by the ancients to him who led the bride to the house of her husband. The term was adopted into the ancient schools of medicine to designate the usual discourse pronounced at the end of the prescribed period of study for licentiate, in which the qualifications and merits of the candidates were described.

PARAPATHIA, (para, and παθος, 'affection.') Pathomania.

PARAPECHYON, (παρπαχών, from para, and πηχυσ, 'the elbow.') Radius.

PARAPHIA, (para, and αφή, 'touch.') Parapsis.

PARAPHIMO'SIS, (παρφαμωσις) Periphimo'sis, Circumligatu'ra, Phimo'sis circumligata, Pe'nis lipoderm'is, (para, and φιρμος, 'I bridle.') Strangulation of the glans penis, owing to the opening of the prepuce being too narrow. It frequently happens in persons affected with phimosis, when the prepuce has been pushed violently behind the base of the glans, during copulation, &c. In paraphimosis the narrow and resisting aperture of the prepuce forms, behind the corona glandis, a kind of ligature, which strangulates the part, causes it to swell and inflame, and even to become gangrenous. Attempts must be made to bring back the prepuce. These excite considerable pain, yet they must be persevered in for some time, and should they not succeed, the ring formed by the tumefied prepuce must be cut transversely, and the antiphlogistic treatment be adopted.

PARAPHOBIA, (para, and φοβος, 'dread.') Hydrophobia.

PARAPHON'IA, παρφωνια, from para, and φωνη, 'voice.') Affection of the voice, when its character or timbre is less agreeable.

PARAPHONIA CLANGENS, Oxyphonia—p. Gutturalis, Asaphia—p. Nasalis, Rhinophonia—p. Puberum, Hirquitalitas—p. Rauca, Raucedo—p. Ulcerosa, Oxyphonia.

PARAPHORA, (παρφορα, from para, and φερω, 'to carry,') Delirium, Paraeope.

PARAPHRENESIS, (para, and φρηνη, 'the mind,') Paraphrenitis—p. Diaphragmatica, Diaphragmitis.

PARAPHREN'IE, Insanity.

PARAPHRENIT'IS, (from para, φρηνη, 'the mind,' or φρενις, 'the diaphragm,' and itis,') Paraphren'e'is, (F.) Paraphrénésie. A name given to inflammation of the diaphragm, which was supposed always to produce delirium:—as well as to the delirium itself accompanying that affection. See Phrenitis.

PARAPHROSYNE, (παρφροσυνη) Delirium.

PARAPLAS'TIC, Paraplasticus, (para, and πλαστικός, 'formative.') Possessed of depraved formative powers,—as Carcinoma, Encephaloma, Melanosis, &c.

PARAPLE'GIA, (παρπληγια) Paraple'gia, Rachio'paraly'sis, Rhachio'paraly'sis, Rhachio'ple'gia, Myelo'paraly'sis, Paraly'sis epina'tialis seu medulla'ris, Ca'rus paraly'sis paraple'gia, (F.) Paraplégie, (para, and πλησσω, 'I strike.') Palsy of the lower half of the body, including the bladder and rectum. It is, generally, owing to disease of some part of the cerebrospinal axis; especially of the spinal portion. The ancients sometimes used the term for incomplete apoplexy. Some authors have, also, made a distinction between paraplegia and paraplexia,—using the former for partial apoplexy,—the latter for general or complete apoplexy.

PARAPLEGIA, REFLEX, see Paralysis, reflex.

PARAPLEURITIS, Pleurodynia.

PARAPLEXIA, (παρπληξια) Paraplegia.

PARAPOPHYSES, see Vertebra.

PARAP'OPLEXY, Parapoplex'ia, (para, and αποπληξια, 'apoplexy.') False apoplexy; a soporose state, resembling apoplexy; and especially that which occurs in the paroxysms of pernicious intermittents.

PARAP'SIS, Paraph'ia, (para, and απτομαι, 'I touch.') Sense of touch or general feeling vitiated or lost.

PARAP'SIS ACRI'S TENERITUDO, Soreness—p. Ex.

pers, Torpor, Anæsthesia—p. Illusoria, Pseudæsthesia—p. Pruritus, Itching.

PARARMA, (παράρμα,) Fimbria.

PARARRHYTHMICUS, Pararrhythmus.

PARARRHYTHMUS, (παράρρυθμος,) Pararrhythmicus, (para, and ῥυθμος, 'rhythm.') An epithet for the pulse, when it has not the rhythm proper to the age and constitution of the individual.

PARATHRE'MA, gen. Parathre'matis, (παρθρημα,) Parathro'ma, Parathre'sis, Pararthro'sis, Paræct'asis, Parastrep'sis, (para, and αρθρον, 'a joint,') Incomplete luxation; subluxation.

PARACEPAS'TRA, (para, and σκεπεζω, 'I cover,') A cap or bandage, which covers the whole head.

PARASCEUE, (παρασκευη, from para, and σκευη, 'equipment,') Apparatus.

PARAS'CHIDES, (παρασχιδες, from para, and σκίζω, 'I cleave,') Fragments or splinters of a broken bone.

PARASITIAIRE, Parasitic.

PAR'ASITE, (παρσιτος,) Parasit'us, (παρσιτευω, (para, and σιτος, 'corn, 'food,') 'I eat by the side of,') Parasites are plants which attach themselves to other plants; and animals which live in or on the bodies of other animals,—so as to subsist at their expense. The mistletoe is a parasitic plant;—the louse a parasitic animal. Examples of parasitic animals are the Pediculus humanus corporis, P. cap'itis, P. pub'is, Pul'lex irritans, P. pen'etrans, the Ac'arus Sca'biei, and the different entozoa.

PARASITIA, (παρασιτια,) Parasitism.

PARASIT'IC, (παρσιτικός,) Parasit'icus, Par'asitoid, Parasitoid'es. Having the nature of, or resembling a parasite, — as 'parasitic growths,' tubercles, cancer, monster, (F.) Parasitaire, &c.

PARASITIC DISEASES, Parasit'ici (morbi) are such as are induced by, or connected with animal or vegetable parasites. See Porrig'o favosa, Psora, &c.

PARASITICIDÈ, (parasite, and cœdere, 'to kill,') Antiparasitic.

PAR'ASITISM, Parasitism'us, Parasit'ia. The condition of a parasite, or of an organized structure or body which lives on another organized body.

PARASITISMUS INTESTINALIS, Helminthiasis—p. Superficiæi, Malis.

PARASITOG'ENY, Parasitogen'ia, Parasitogen'esis, (parasite, and γενω, 'to beget,') The corporeal condition, which favours the development of parasites.

PARASITOID, (parasite, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Parasitic.

PARASITUS, (παρσιτος,) Parasite.

PARASPA'DIA, (para, and σπασω, 'I draw,') A preternatural opening of the urethra at the side of the penis. One whose urethra opens in this manner is called Paraspadie'us and Paraspadias.

PARASPADIËUS, see Paraspadia.

PARAS'PHAGIS, (παρσφαγίς, from para, and σφαγή, 'the throat,') The part of the neck contiguous to the clavicles.

PARAS'TATA, Paras'tates, (παρσστημι, (para, and ιστημι, 'I stand near,') The prostate. In Hippocrates, it means the epididymis. The epididymus were called by Hierophilus and Galen Varico'sæ parastata, to distinguish them from glandulo'sæ parastate or prostate. Rufus of Ephesus called the Tubæ Fallopiæ Parastate varico'sæ.

PARASTATA ADENOIDES, Prostate—p. Glandula, Prostate—p. Glandulosa, Prostate.

PARASTATES, Parastata.

PARASTATI'TIS, Epididymi'tis; (parastata, 'epididymis,' and itis.) Inflammation of the epididymis.

PARASTREM'MA, gen. Parastrem'matis, Parastrophê, (παρσστρεμμα, from παρσστρεφω, (para, and στρέφω, 'I turn,') 'I distort or pervert,') Distortion. Convulsive distortion, especially of the face, the soft parts being drawn laterally.

PARASTREP'SIS, Parastrema.

PARASTROPHE, Parastrema.

PARASYNANCHE, (παρσυναχη,) Cynanche parotidæa.

PARASYSTOLE, (para, and συστολη, 'contraction,') Acinesia.

PARATH'ENAR, Par'sthenar, (para, and σεναρ, 'the sole of the foot,') Winslow called grand parathenar, parathenar major, a portion of the abductor of the little toe, musculus scandula'rius; and petit parathenar, parathenar minor, the short flexor of that toe.

PARATHENAR MAJOR, Abductor minimi digiti pedis—p. Minor, Flexor brevis minimi digiti pedis.

PARATONIA, (para, and τενος, 'tension,') see Spasm.

PARATOPIA, (para, and τοπος, 'place,') Luxation.

PARATOPIË. Diseases in which organs are removed from their proper position. See Ecetopia.

PARATRIMMA, gen. Paratrim'matis, (παρστριμμα, from para, and τριβω, 'to rub,') Chafing.

PARATROPE, (παρστροπη, from para, and τρεπω, 'to turn,') Apoptose.

PARAT'ROPHY, Parat'rophê, Paratroph'ia, (para, and τροφή, 'nourishment,') Misnutrition.

PARBREAKING, ([G.] brechen, 'to vomit,') Vomiting.

PARDALIANCHES, (παρδαλιαιχες, from παρδαλις, 'a panther, and αχχειν, 'to strangle,') Aconitum.

PARDALLANCHUM, Aconitum.

PARC'TAMA, gen. Parc'etamatis, (παρσκταμα,) Parc'etasis, (para, εκ, 'out, and τεινω, 'I stretch,') Immoderate extension, distension, or dilatation of a part—as of the heart.

PARECTASIS, (παρσκτασις,) Parathrema, Paractama.

PAREGOR'IC, (παρηγορικός,) Paregor'icus, Sol'riens, (F.) Parëgorique, (παρηγορω (para, and αγορευω), 'I soothe, I calm,') That which soothes or assuages—as paregoric elixir. An anodyne.

PARËIA, (παρεια,) Gena.

PARËIRA, see P. bra.

PARËIRA BRA'VA, Cissam'pelos Pareira, Pu'rey'ra, Bu'tua, Abu'ta, Albu'tua, Botou, Caa'peba, Overo butua, Wild Vine, Vel'vet leaf. Family, Menispermæe. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Monadelphica. The root of this plant—Pureir'a (Ph. U. S.)—a native of South America and the West Indies, has a sweet taste, with considerable bitterness and slight roughness. It has been recommended in nephritic and calculous affections; but it is not much used. By A. de St. Hilaire, Pareira is assigned to Cissampelos glaber'ima.

PARËLLE, Rumex hydrolapathum, R. patientia.

PAREMPTOSIS, (παρσμπτωσις, 'intrusion,') see Coincidental.

PARENCEPHALIS, (παρσγκεφαλις, from παρσ, and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,') Cerebellum.

PARENCEPHALITIS, (parencephalis, and itis,) Cerebellitis.

PARENCEPHALOC'E'LË, (parencephalis, and κληη, 'a rupture,') Her'nia of the cerebell'ium; a very rare disease. It occurs under the form of a soft, indolent, or slightly painful tumour, without change in the colour of the skin, and is situate in the occipital region. It is constituted of the cerebellum, which escapes through an aperture in the occipital bone. Great attention must be paid not to mistake it for an ordinary tumour, as its extirpation would be attended with fatal consequences.

PARENCEPHALUS, Cerebellum.

PARENCHYMA, gen. Parenchymat'is, (παρεχυμα,) Cu'ro parenchymat'ica seu viscerum seu visceral'is seu viscerosa, Substant'ia parenchymat'osa, Procheu'ma, (F.) Parenchyme. The texture of glandular and other organs, composed of agglomerated globules united by areolar tissue, and tearing with more or less facility. Such is the texture of the liver, kidneys, &c. Παρεχυμα signifies, in Greek, effusion, (para, ex, and χω, 'I pour,') and it was believed, that this tissue consisted of effused blood or other fluid.

PARENCHYMA TESTIS, Pulpa testis.

PARENCHYMAL, Parenchymat'one, Parenchymous, Parenchymat'is, Parenchymat'icus, (F.) Parenchymateux. Belonging or relating to the parenchyma of an organ.

PARENCHYMATITIS, (parenchyma, and itis.) Inflammat'io parenchymat'ica. Inflammation of the substance of an organ.

PARENCHYMATOUS, Parenchymal.

PAR'ESIS, (pareisis, from παρημι, 'I relax,') (F.) Parésie. Paralysis. According to some, a slight, incomplete paralysis, affecting motion but not sensation.

PAR'ESTH'ESIS, Paræsthes'is, Paræsthes'ia, Sens'us imperfect'us, (para, and αίσθησις, 'sensation,') Congenital misconstruction of the external organs of sense. A genus in the nosology of Good. Also, perversion of sensibility.

PAR'ETICA EXARTHROSIS. Luxation from relaxation of the ligaments of a joint.

PAR'ETICUS, (παρετος, 'relaxed,') Relaxant.

PAR'EYRA, Pareira brava.

PAR'FUM, (per, and fumus, 'smoke,') Suffimentum.

PARIERA, Pareira brava.

PARIES, gen. Pariet'is, 'a wall,' Table.

PARI'ETAL, Pariet'al'is, Pariet'inus, (from paries,) (F.) Pari'etal. Appertaining to the parietes or walls of an organ or to the parietal bones.

PARIETAL ARTERY, see P. Bones.

PARIETAL BONES, Os'sa pariet'al'ia seu vertical'ia seu ver'ticis seu sincip'itis seu bregmat'is seu bregmat'ica seu nerval'ia seu tetrago'na, are two fellow-bones, occupying the lateral and upper parts of the cranium, in the formation of which they assist. They have a quadrilateral shape: their external surface is convex; and presents, at its middle part, an eminence called the Pari'etal protuberance, Tu'ber pariet'al'e, (F.) Bosse pariet'ale. Their inner or cerebral surface, which is concave, has a depression that corresponds with the preceding eminence, and which is called the Pari'etal fos'sa, Fos'sa pariet'al'is. Above and behind, near the superior edge of these bones, is a foramen, which does not always exist, called the Pari'etal fora'men, Fora'men pariet'al'e, through which passes a vein—pari'etal vein—that opens into the superior longitudinal sinus of the dura mater: and an artery—pari'etal ar'tery—a branch of the occipital, which ramifies on the same sinus. Each parietal bone is articulated above, with its fellow; below, with the temporal bone: before, with the frontal; behind, with the occipital, and by the anterior and inferior angle with the great ala of the sphenoid; and is developed from a single point of ossification.

PARIETAL FORAMEN, see P. Bones—p. Fossa, see P. Bones—p. Protuberance, see P. Bones—p. Veins, see P. Bones.

PARIETA'RIA, (from paries, 'a wall,' because found on old walls.) P. officin'al'is, Helz'inië, Wittra'ria, Wall pel'litory, (F.) Parietaire commune, Perce-muraille, Annure. Herbe aux murailles ou des Nones. Family, Urticeæ. Sex. Syst. Polygamia Monœcia. This plant contains much nitrate of potassa, and was formerly largely employed as a diuretic, and, also, as an emollient; but it is not such used at the present day.

PARIETARIA PENNSYLVANICA, American Pel'litory, a small weed, flowering from June to August, has been used in juice or decoction as a diuretic, 'deobstruent,' and emmenagogue.

PARI'ETES, (pl. of paries, 'a wall,') (F.) Paro'is. A name given to parts which form the enclosures or limits of different cavities of the body, as the Parietes of the cranium, chest, &c.

PARIETINUS, Parietal.

PARI'S, gen. Pari'dis, P. quadrifolia, Soldanum quadrifolium, U'va inver'sa seu lupi'na seu vulpi'na, One'berry, True'love, (F.) Parisette, Raisin de Reuard, Herbe à Paris, Étrangle-loup. It possesses narcotic properties, and was formerly considered a powerful philter. It is emetic, and is sometimes used externally as a resolvent and anodyne.

PARISAGOGUE INTESTINORUM, (from παρισσαγο, 'to introduce improperly,') Intussusceptio. PARISETTE, Paris.

PARISTH'MIA, (παρισθημια, from para, and ισθμος, 'the throat,') A word employed to designate the tonsils, and, likewise, inflammation of the tonsils, Cyanache tonsillar'is, and Cyanache in general.

PARISTHMIOTOMUS, (paristhmia, and τομμη, 'I cut,') An instrument with which the tonsils were formerly scarified.

PARISTHMITIS, (paristhmia, and itis,) Cyanache, C. tonsillar'is.

PARISTHMIUM, (παρισθημιον,) Tonsil.

PARISWORT, Trillium latifolium.

PARMACITY, (corr. from spermaceti,) Cetaceum—p. Poor Man's, Thlaspi bursa.

PARMELIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus.

PARMELIA PARI'ETINA, Lichen pariet'inus, Yel'low wall Li'chen, Com'mon Yel'low Wall Moss, which grows abundantly on trees and walls, Order, Lichenaceæ, is used in intermittent fever on account of its bitterness.

PARMELIA PLICATA, Lichen plicatus—p. Pulmonacea, Lichen pulmonarius—p. Roccella, Lichen roccella—p. Saxatilis, Lichen Saxatilis.

PARMENTIERA CERIF'ERA, (after Parmentier,) Palo de velas, Candle Tree. A forest tree in the valley of the Chagres,—Nat. Ord. Ericaceæ,—the long cylindrical fruit of which, resembling candles, serves for food for cattle.

PARMENTIÈRE, Solanum tuberosum.

PAROARION, (para, and ωαριον, 'ovarium,') Parovarium.

PAROCHETEUSIS, (παροχευσις, from para, and οχευω, 'to divert water from,') Derivation.

PARODINIA, (para, and ωδιν, 'labour pains,') Dystocia—p. Perversa, Presentation, Preternatural.

PARODONTIDES, (para, and οδους, gen. odontos, 'a tooth,') Tumours on the gums; parulis, &c.

PAROIS, Parietes.

PAROLE, (from low Lat. parabolare. [F.] parler, 'to speak, to parley,') Voice, articulated.

PAROMPHALOC'LE, (para, ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and κληνη, 'rupture,') Hernia near the navel.

PARON'RIA, (para, and ονειρον, 'a dream,') Depraved, disturbed, or morbid dreaming; Oνειροδυν'ia act'iva, Erethis'mus oνειροδυν'ia. The voluntary organs connected with the passing train of ideas, overpowered by the force of the imagination during dreaming, and involuntarily excited to their natural or accustomed actions, while the other organs remain asleep.

PARONIRIA AMBULANS, Somnambulism—p. Salax, Pollution.

PARONYCH'IA, Paronychi'is, Paronychi'tis, Pan'aris, Redu'ria, Rediv'ia, Ver'mis seu Pteryg'ium dig'it'i, Pau'arit'ium, Digit'ium, Pandali'tium, Pa'ssa, Dactyl'itis, Pau'arium, Onych'ia, (F.) Onglade, (para, and ονχις, gen. ωνχες, 'the naïl.) The ancients gave this name to an inflammatory tumour. — Ongch'itis, Ongxi'tis (Gross), — seated near the nail, and involving the pulp or matrix. Some of the moderns have extended it to inflammation of the hand, and even of the forearm. It usually means every phlegmonous tumour of the fingers or toes, and especially of the first phalanx. Four kinds of paronychia are commonly pointed out: 1. That seated between the epidermis and skin, called, vulgarly, in this country, Run'round — in France, Tourniole, Vire. 2. That seated in the subcutaneous areolar tissue. 3. That occupying the sheath of a tendon; and 4. That considered to be seated between the periosteum and bone. The last three are only different degrees of the same disease, constituting Whit'lous, (Prov.) Whickflaw, Teak, (F.) Mal d'aventure: — the worst kinds, in English, are called Fell'on, Caccoparonychia. The inflammation generally commences in the subcutaneous areolar tissue, and spreads to other parts, occasioning excessive lancinating pain, owing to the parts being put upon the stretch; hence, the necessity of dividing them freely, — even down to the bone, when there is reason to believe that the affection belongs to the fourth division, — making use of emollient applications, the antiphlogistic treatment, and opiates to relieve pain.

PARONYCHIA. Asplenium ruta muraria — p. Digitum, Digitium.

PARONYCHIS, Paronychia.

PARONYCHITIS, Paronychia.

PAROPHOBIA, (para, and φοβος, 'dread,') Hydrophobia.

PAROPIA, (παροπια, from para, and ωψ, 'the eye,') Canthus (lesser.)

PAROPLEXIA, (para, and πλησσειν, 'to strike,') Paraplegia.

PAROPTE'SIS, (παροπτεσις, from para, and optasis, 'I roast,') Forcing a sweat by placing a patient before the fire or putting him in a dry bath.

PARORA'SIS, (para, and ορασις, 'I see,') Perversion of sight, which prevents the person from judging accurately of the colour of objects. Achromatopsia, Hallucination.

PARORCHID'IUM, (para, and orchis, gen. ορχιδος, 'testicle,') Any position of one or both testicles, different from that which they ought to occupy in the scrotum; — whether they may not have descended through the abdominal ring, or are drawn up to the groins by the cremaster muscle.

PARORCHIDŒ-ENTEROCE'LE, Hernia parorchidœenterica. Internal hernia complicated with displacement of the testicle.

PAROS'MIA, Anosmia. Also, perversion of smell; Paræsthesia olfactoria, Olfactus depravatus, Idiosyncrasia olfactoria, (from para, and οσμη, 'odour,')

PAROS'TIA, (para, and οστων, 'a bone,') Bones untempered in their substance, and incapable of affording proper support.

PAROSTIA FLEXILIS, Mollities ossium — p. Fragilis, Fragilitas ossium.

PAROTIA, (παρωτις, from para, and οτις, gen. οτις, 'the ear,') Cynanche parotidæa.

PAROTID, Gland'ula parotidæa seu ad An'ea, Parotis, Animal'is, Alim'ent'is. The largest of the salivary glands, seated under the ear, and near the angle of the lower jaw. It is composed of many separate lobes, giving rise to excretory ducts, which unite to form one canal, called the Parotid duct, Sten'o's or Sten'on's canal or duct, — the Ductus superior or Superior salivary canal. of some, see Ductus salivaris superior. This duct, after having advanced horizontally into the substance of the cheek, proceeds through an opening in the buccinator muscle, and terminates in the mouth opposite the second upper molaris. About the middle of its course, it sometimes receives the excretory duct of a glandular body, situate in its vicinity, and called the Accessory Gland of the Parotid, S'cia Parotidis, Gland'ula s'cia parotidis. In the substance of the parotid are found — a number of branches of the facial nerve, of the transverse arteries of the face, and the posterior auricular. It receives, also, some filaments from the inferior maxillary nerve, and from the ascending branches of the superficial cervical plexus. Its lymphatic vessels are somewhat numerous, and pass into ganglions situate at its surface or behind the angle of the jaw. The parotid secretes saliva, and pours it copiously into the mouth.

PAROTID, ACCESSORY GLAND OF THE, see Parotid.

PAROTID APONEURO'SIS. A sheath of great thickness, continuous, below, with the cervical fascia. It forms a frame-work to the parotid by means of fibrous prolongations from its deep surface. Its density accounts for the pain of parotitis, and for the difficulty with which pus makes its way to the surface.

PAROTID ARTERIES, see Parotid — p. Duct, see Parotid — p. Veins, see Parotid.

PAROTIDE, Parotis.

PAROTIDEAN, Parotidæus, (F.) Parotidien. Belonging or relating to the parotid.

PAROTIDITIS, (parotid, and itis,) Cynanche parotidæa, Parotis.

PAROTIDON'CUS, Tumor parotidis, T. Gland'ula parotidæa, (parotid, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Swelling of the parotid.

PAROTIS, gen. Parotidis, (παρωτις, from para, and οτις, gen. οτις, 'ear,') Phlegmonè parotidæa, Inflammatio parotidum, Cynanchè parotidæa, Parotitis, Parotid'itis, Dioscuri, (F.) Parotide, is the name of a tumour seated under the ear; which is reddish, hard, and attended with obtuse pain; the progress to suppuration being slow and difficult. Sometimes it is of a malignant character, sloughing, and long protracted. Some French pathologists restrict the term parotide to symptomatic parotitis — as to that which occurs in plague; whilst they apply the terms Oreillons or Ourles, Parotonicies, to Cynanche Parotidæa or Mumps. Also, the parotid.

PAROTONCIES, (parotid, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') see Parotis.

PAROVA'RIVUM, properly Parovarium, Corpus seu Corpusculum conicum Rosenmülleri, Organ or Body of Rosenmüller, Appendage to the Ovary, (para, and ωαριον, 'the ovary,') A body closely analogous in structure to the epididymis, which is seated between the Fallopian tube and the ovary in the broad ligament. The Corpus Wolffianum concurs in its formation.

PAROXYNTIC, (παροξυντικός,) Paroxyn'ticus, (F.) Paroxyn'ticus, (παροξυνω, 'I excite,') Relating to a paroxysm.

Jours paroxyn'tiques are days on which paroxysms take place.

PAR'OXYSM, (παροξυσμός) Paroxysmus, (παροξυνω, from para, and oxynai, 'to render sharp.' 'I irritate.') Int'petus, Insultus, Invasio, Exacerbatio, Accessio, Accessus, (Old. Eng.) Access, Access, (F.) Exacerbation, Redoublement, Accès. The augmentation which supervenes at equal or unequal intervals in the symptoms of acute diseases. Also, a periodical exacerbation or fit of a disease.

PAROXYSMAL, Paroxysmalis, (F.) Paroxysmique. Of or belonging to a paroxysm;—as a paroxysmal day, (F.) Jour paroxysmique; a day on which a paroxysm of disease occurs.

PAROXYSMUS FEBRILIS, Pyrexia.

PAROXYSTIQUE, Paroxysmal.

PARTHENT'US (Morbis), (παρθενιος, 'relating or appertaining to a virgin,') A disease in a young female. Also, chlorosis.

PARTHENOGEN'ESIS, 'virgin birth,' (παρθενος, 'a virgin,' and γενεσις, 'generation,') The successive production of procreating individuals from a single ovum, without any renewal of fertilization.

PARTHENOL'OGY, Parthenolog'ia, (παρθενεια, 'virginity,' and λογος, 'a description,') A description or consideration of the state of virginity in health or disease.

PARTHENONOSUS, (parthenus, and νοσος, 'disease,') Chlorosis.

PARTHENUS, (παρθενος), Virgin.

PARTIALIS, (pars, gen. partis, 'a part,') Local.

PARTS, THE, Genital organs.

PARTURA, (parturire, parturiturum, itself from parere, 'to bring forth,') Parturition.

PARTURIENT, Parturiens. Bringing forth, or about to bring forth, or having recently brought forth young.

The Parturient, Puerperous, Child'ing, Child'bed or Lying-in or Lying-down state, Confinement, Puerperium, generally comprises the period from parturition to perfect recovery, which is usually a month. In the north of England this is called the steg month, requires careful management, and is subject to various diseases.

A Parturient or Parturifacient is a medicine which induces or promotes labour; as ergot, and perhaps borate of soda. See Abortive.

PARTURIFACIENT, (parturio, 'to bring forth,' and facere, 'to make,') Parturient.

PARTURIT'ION, Puerperium, Partus, Partio, Parturiti'o, Partura, To'cus, To'cetus, Tec'is, Lochi'a, Apocye'sis, Mæu'sis, Maieu'sis, Negotium seu Act'us parturiti'o'nis, Enix'us seu Enix'io seu Expul'sio fact'us, Apol'y'sis, Stat'us parturien'di, Deliv'ery, La'b'our, Child'bearing, Child'birth, Birth, Trav'ail, (Sc.) Childil, Crying, Crying out, (F.) Accouchement, Couche, Travail d'Enfant, Enfantement, Mise-bas. The act of delivery of the fœtus and its appendages; also the state during and immediately after delivery—Childbed, (Sc.) Gizzenbed, Gizzen, see Parturient. Labour is the necessary consequence of conception, pregnancy, and the completion of gestation. It does not take place, at the full time, until after nine months of utero-gestation,—the causes producing it being the contraction of the uterus and abdominal muscles. By different authors, the stages of labour have been variously divided. We may, perhaps, admit of four. The first stage comprises the precursory signs. One, two, or three days before labour, a mucous discharge, streaked with blood, takes place from the vagina, which is called the Signum, Leucorrhœ'a Nabo'thi, Hæmorrhag'ia Nabo'thi, La'b'ourshow or Show, (F.) Gluaires, and along with this, trifling grinding pains, called by the French Mouches, are felt in the loins and abdomen. Second stage.—Peculiar pains, which extend from the lumbar region towards the uterus; tension and dilatation of the neck and orifice of that organ; protrusion into the vagina of the envelopes of the fœtus, forming the bag of waters, (F.) Poche des eaux; and rupture or breaking of the waters. Third stage.—Contractions of the uterus and abdominal muscles; forcing pains; the head of the fœtus becomes engaged in the pelvis: the occiput being commonly situate above the left acetabulum, passes beneath the arch of the pubis. Fourth stage.—The head now presents at the vulva, the perineum being considerably distended; at length it clears the external parts, and the rest of the body is easily disengaged. The child still continues attached to the mother by the umbilical cord, which has to be divided. In the course of fifteen or twenty minutes, trifling pains occur, and the secundines are expelled. This completes delivery—the birth, (F.) naisance of the child. In by far the majority of cases, the head is the presenting part, the occiput directed anteriorly, and the face posteriorly. Of 12,633 children, born at the Hospital La Maternité, in Paris, from the 10th of December, 1797, to the 31st of July, 1806, the following were the presentations:

|  |        |

Labour has received different names, according to the period of pregnancy at which it occurs, and the mode in which it takes place. It is called miscarriage or abortion, prior to the seventh month; premature labour, Omotocia, Partus præcox seu præmaturus, between this and eight months and a half; and labour at the full period, (F.) Accouchement à terme, when it happens at the end of nine months. Labours have likewise been variously divided by different authors. Perhaps the one into Natural and Preternatural, is as good as any;—natural Labour meaning that which would occur without manual assistance; and preternatural, requiring the assistance of art, either by the hand solely, or with the aid of instruments—instrumental labour, which M. Capuron calls Accouchement Mécanique. Professor Hodge admits the following classification:

- EUTOCIA. { Vertex presentations.
Pelvic presentations.
- DYSTOCIA. { Various states of the fœtus..... { Large heads.
Malpresentations.
Plurality of children.
Deformities.

- DYSTOCIA. { Conditions of the pelvis or uterus. { Deformed pelvis.
Displacements of the uterus.
Inordinate excitement.
Deficient excitement.
Local.
General.
- Physiological states
- Pathological states

Powerless labour, the Inertie par épuisement of Madame Lachapelle, is that in which the muscular powers from exhaustion are unable to accomplish delivery.

Forced labour or parturition, (F.) Accouchement ou Avortement provoqué, is labour or abortion, induced by art. When accompanied with other phenomena of a deranging character, it is said to be complicated. When the child, even when reduced in size, cannot pass, it is termed impracticable, &c. See Dystocia.

The French use the term Part, (L.) Partus, at times, synonymously with delivery; at others, with the child, Mæcuma, Mæu'ma. Suppression de part means concealment of delivery; Part légitime, a fetus which comes into the world with the conditions necessary for its enjoying advantages granted by law; and Part illégitime, one that does not fall under those conditions.

TABLE OF THE COURSE AND MANAGEMENT OF DIFFERENT KINDS OF LABOURS.

I. NATURAL LABOURS;

Or those in which Delivery can be effected without Assistance.

- HEAD PRESENTING. (Four Positions.)
  - 1. Occiput towards the Left Acetabulum. { The head with the chin bent upon the breast clears the brim of the pelvis. Movement of rotation produced by the inclined planes of the pelvis; the occipital protuberance is carried behind the symphysis pubis, and the face towards the hollow of the sacrum.
  - 2. Occiput towards the Right Acetabulum. { The head attains the outlet: clears it; the occiput being first disengaged, and the face afterwards, which passes successively along the whole of the hollow of the sacrum. The shoulders enter the brim diagonally; and execute the movement of rotation. The one behind first clears the outlet. The same thing occurs with the nates.
  - 3. Occiput towards the Right Sacroiliac Symphysis. { The same course is here followed: except that after the rotary movement, the face passes behind the symphysis pubis, and the occiput into the hollow of the sacrum. The occiput is first extruded;—the face next.

|  | 1. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the left Acetabulum.            | { The nates enter the brim diagonally; movement of rotation: the one passes behind the symphysis pubis; the other towards the hollow of the sacrum. The one behind is first extruded.   |
|  | 2. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Right Acetabulum.           | { The same thing happens to the shoulders. The chin is bent upon the chest to clear the brim: movement of rotation: the occiput passes behind the symphysis pubis, and the face towards the hollow of the sacrum. The face clears the outlet first; the occiput last. |
|  | 3. Heel, Tibia, or Sacrum towards the Right Sacroiliac Symphysis. | { The same progress, except that after the movement of rotation, the face is towards the pubis, and the occiput towards the sacrum. The face is here again delivered first.   |

II. PRETERNATURAL LABOURS.

1. Those which require Manual Assistance only.

|   |  |
|---|--|
| I. PRESENTATION OF THE HEAD, UPPER EXTREMITIES, BACK, ABDOMEN, &amp;c. | 1. When the labour is without any serious complication, and the head is not in a good position at the brim of the pelvis, endeavours are to be made to place it in its natural position: the hand to be introduced with the fingers united, and the long diameter of the head to be placed diagonally in the brim, if possible. Or the lever may be fixed over the occiput, and, by drawing it down, a closer approximation of the chin and chest may be effected; the position of the head to the pelvis being at the same time attended to.   |
|   | 2. If complicated with syncope, convulsions, hemorrhage, want of uterine action, &amp;c., the feet must be laid hold of, and the child turned. For this purpose, empty the rectum and bladder; and turn, if possible, prior to the escape of the liquor amnii. The female may be placed on her back or left side, with the breech over the edge of the bed. Use the right or left hand, according as the feet of the child are to the right or left side of the pelvis; always so introducing the hand, that the child shall be in its palm, and the back of the hand opposed to the inner surface of the uterus. The hand and arm to be introduced during an interval of pain; and they must be flattened and tranquil whilst the uterus is contracting forcibly. If both feet cannot be readily brought down, seize one, and tie a fillet around it.  |
|   | 3. If the toes point to the vertebral column, or to the abdomen of the mother, the head, in its descent, will not enter the pelvis: the chin and occiput will be hitched on the pubis and promontory of the sacrum. In such case, grasp the nates as soon as they have passed the os externum; and, during a pain, endeavour to direct the toes towards either sacro-iliac synchondrosis. When the fingers can be passed along the body of the child, and over the shoulders to the bend of the elbows, draw down the arms successively. When the body is expelled, and the head filling up the brim, the termination of labour must be accelerated by passing two fingers over the shoulder of the child; using moderate and steady extracting power, whilst one finger of the other hand, passed into the mouth, depresses the chin on the sternum. In this way, the head may be extracted. |

2. Those requiring the assistance of appropriate Instruments.

|                                      |  |
|--------------------------------------|--|
| GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.         | { If the pains become feeble, or inadequate from any cause;—or if the presenting part be firmly wedged in the pelvis; or the woman be becoming exhausted, instrumental assistance may be required. In all such cases, place the female on the back or left side, empty the bladder and rectum; wait till the os uteri is in a fit state; afford assistance during the pains; introduce the instrument during the intervals between the pains: have the patient on her left side (generally); and extract according to the axes of brim and outlet, as the case may be.  |
|                                      | { Apply these to the sides of the head of the child, so that the ears and parietal protuberances may be within the fenestrae. Introduce the left-hand blade first; the index and middle fingers of the right hand guiding it to the ear. With the right hand pass the other in an opposite line, corresponding with the course of the first blade, guided by the fore and middle fingers of the left hand; the third and little fingers being employed to retain the lefthand blade in place; humour the instrument so as to allow the blades to lock. The handles may now be tied gently together. The force used must be from blade to blade, with a gentle, tractile effort. |
| 1. Short Forceps.....         | { Applicable where the head has not entered the brim. The long forceps must be applied, in most cases, over the occiput and face of the child, so that the convex edges of the blades may be towards the hollow of the sacrum. When used, the power may be exerted from side to side, with moderate traction.   |
| 2. Long Forceps.....          | { The lever is applicable to the same cases as the forceps. It must not be used strictly as a lever, but as a hook with which to draw downwards. It may be applied to any part of the head, but is generally hitched on the occiput.  |
| 3. Lever or Vectis.....       | { In certain cases of breech and knee presentation, where the hand is sufficient, it may be necessary to pass over the joint a fillet, or the blunt hook, with which to exert some force of traction. The operation is very simple.   |
| 4. Fillet and Blunt Hook..... | {   |

PRETERNATURAL LABOURS.—CONTINUED.

EMBRULCIA.

Disproportionate size of head, or distorted or deformed pelvis, may require the child to be destroyed, and its bulk lessened; or the Cæsarean section or symphysectomy, or the induction of premature labour may be called for.

The instruments, required here, are the Perforator, Crotchet, and Craniotomy Forceps. Make a steady pressure on the abdomen; pass two fingers of the left hand up to the head; feel for a suture or fontanel; introduce the perforator and bore through, until the progress of the instrument is arrested by its shoulders. Open the handles, and turn the instrument in different directions, so that the opening may be large enough to admit the perforator, with which the brain must be broken down.

If, after this delivery cannot be accomplished without further aid, pass up the craniotomy forceps; open the handles slightly, and introduce the blade without teeth within the cranium. On closing the forceps, a hold is obtained; and a tractive force can now be exerted during the pains, and the extrusion of the child be effected.

Should great difficulty exist at the brim, the bones at the top of the head may have to be removed, until the base alone remains. The chin must then be brought through first.

The crotchet is often used instead of the craniotomy forceps, being passed into the opening made by the perforator, and hooked upon some bony projection in the interior of the skull; but it is not a good instrument. In presentations of the face demanding perforation of the cranium, the perforator should be introduced just above the nose, in the sagittal suture.

When it is necessary to open the head after the lower extremities have been expelled, the perforation must be made behind the ear.

SYMPHYSECTOMY AND CÆSAREAN SECTION.

In cases of great narrowness of the pelvis, the operation of Symphysiotomy has been adopted by French practitioners,—rarely by British or American; and, in extreme cases, recourse has been had to the Cæsarean Section.

If the body of the fetus has been forcibly separated, and the head left in the uterus, it must be laid hold of with one hand, and the forceps be applied; or the head be opened and delivered as under embrulcia. Should the head have been brought away, and the body left behind, the feet must be brought down.

In cases of narrowness of the pelvis, where the fetus, at the full term, cannot be born alive, delivery may be brought about at an earlier period, or as soon as the child is capable of carrying on its functions independently of the mother.

The most advisable plan for accomplishing this object is merely to pass the finger round and round within the os and cervix uteri, so as to detach the decidua—the membranes being thus left entire, and the life of the child not so much endangered, as where the membranes are punctured, and the waters evacuated. Parturition usually follows within forty-eight hours.

SEPARATION OF THE HEAD OF THE FETUS FROM THE BODY.

INDUCTION OF PREMATURE LABOUR.

The laying of eggs by animals—Ovation—is called, in French, Ponte. The term has been applied to the periodical discharge—Pante périodique—of ova. (F.) Chute des Œufs, which is supposed to take place from the ovaries at each menstrual period.

PARTURITION, DRY, Partus siccus.

PARTURIUM VANUM, Fausse couche.

PARTUS, gen. Partus, ( parere, partum, 'to bring forth,') Parturition—p. Abactio, Abortion—p. Abactus, Abortion—p. Cæsareus, Cæsarean section—p. Difficilis, Dystocia—p. Laboriosus, Dystocia, Laborious labour—p. Præcox, Parturition (premature)—p. Præmaturus, Parturition (premature)—p. Serotinus, Opisioticia.

PARTUS SICCUS, Dry labour or parturition. Labour, which is neither preceded nor attended by a discharge of the liquor amnii.

PARULIS, (parulis, from para, and ουλον, 'the gum,') Apostema parulis seu paron'lis, Phlegmonæ Parulis, Gumboil, Alveolar abscess, (F.) Parulie. Small abscesses are so called which generally form in the alveoli and involve the gums, sometimes without any known cause, but which often depend upon carious teeth.

PARURIA, (para, and ουρον, 'I pass urine,') Morbid secretion or discharge of urine.

PARURIA INCONTINENS, Enuresis—p. Incontinens aquosa, see Diabetes—p. Inops, Ischuria, false—p. Mellita, Diabetes—p. Retentionis, Ischuria—p. Retentionis renalis, Ischuria—p. Retentionis vesicalis, Retention of urine—p. Stillatitia, Strangury—p. Stillatitia mucosa, Cystirrhœa.

PARVITAS MORBOSA PARTIUM ORGANICARUM, 'morbid smallness of organic parts,' Microtesia.

PAR'YGRON, (παρυγρον, from para, and υγρον, 'humid,') A liquid or moist preparation for allaying topical inflammation.

PAS, (from [L.] passus,) Step—p. d'Asc, Tas

silago, Speculum oris—p. de Lion, Helleborus foetidus.

PASMA, gen. Pasm'atis, (castrum, 'to sprinkle,') Catapasma.

PASQUE FLOWER, (from flowering about Easter,) Anemone pulsatilla.

PASSA, (patior, passus, 'to suffer,') Paronychia.

PASSE CORINTHIACÆ, (passus, 'dried,') see Vitis Corinthiaca.

PASSAGE, Dejection.

PASSAGES, DIGESTIVE, Ways, digestive—p. Second, Ways, second.

PASSAMBIO, Rio vinaigro.

PASSE-FLEUR, Anemone pulsatilla.

PASSE-PIERRE, ('pass stone,') Crithmum maritimum.

PASSERAGE, Iberis amara—p. Sawage, Cardamine pratensis.

PASSERINA TARTONRAIRA, (from passer, 'a sparrow,' alluding to the beaked seed,) (F.) Passerine de Tarton-raire, Tarton-raire, Gros Retombet, Tristantelle Malherbe. Family, Daphnoidæ. A plant, whose bark is possessed of epispastic properties. An ointment, prepared like that of Mezereon, is said to possess more activity than the latter.

PASSERINE DE TARTON-RAIRE, Passerina tartonraira.

PASSIBILITY, GREAT, (patior, passus, 'to suffer,' and habilitas, 'able,') Hyperæsthesis.

PASSIF, Passive.

PASSIFLORA LAURIFOLIA, (passio, 'passion,' and flos, gen. floris, 'a flower,') Bayleaved Passion flower. Ord. Passifloræ. A native of Surinam. The fruit has a delicious smell and flavour, and quenches thirst, abates heat of the stomach, increases the appetite, &c.

PASSIFLORA MALIFORMIS, Apple-shaped Grenadilla. The fruit of this species is esteemed a delicacy in the West Indies, where it is served up at table in desserts.

Some of the genus are said to possess narcotic and emetic properties.

PASSIO, (patior, passus, 'to suffer,') Disease, Passion—p. Æmoptoica, Hæmoptysis—p. Cadiva, Epilepsy—p. Cardiaca, Cardialgia—p. Cholerica, Cholera—p. Cœliaca, Cœliac flux—p. Felliflua, Cholera—p. Hæmoptoica, Hæmoptysis—p. Hypochondriaca, Hypochondriasis—p. Hysterica, Hysteria—p. Iliaca, Ileus—p. Ischiadica, Neuralgia femoropoplitea—p. Pleuritica, Pleuritis—p. Stomachica, Dyspepsia—p. Ventriculosa, Cœliac flux—p. Vomiciflua, Phthisis pulmonalis.

PASSION, Passio, An'imi Pathe'ma, Affectus, Emotio. An active affection or emotion of the mind; as rage, terror, love, hatred, &c.

PASSION FLOWER, BAYLEAVED, Passiflora laurifolia—p. Hysterique, Hysteria—p. Iliac, Ileus.

PASSIONES (pl. of passio) ANIMI, Affections of the mind.

PASSIVE, Passivus, (F.) Passif. An epithet for diseases which seem owing to a greater or less diminution of the strength, or which are without apparent reaction. Thus, passive hemorrhages are such as supervene in debilitated individuals, or under conditions in which increased action of the arteries can scarcely be presumed. The term passive has, also, been given to aneurisms of the heart with extenuation of the parietes; in opposition to active aneurisms, with thickness of the parietes—hypertrophy.

PASSULE MAJORES, (dim. of passus [uvæ,]) see Vitis vinifera—p. Minores, see Vitis Corinthiaca.

PASSULA'TUM. A medicine in which the pulp of raisins or currants is a chief ingredient.

PASSUS, (pandere, passum, 'to extend,') Step.

PASSY, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. This village is in the vicinity of Paris. There are several springs, containing sulphates of lime, iron, and magnesia, alum, common salt, carbonate of iron, carbonic acid, &c. They are employed as a tonic and astringent.

PASTA, (παστη) Paste—p. de Althæa, Paste, marshmallow—p. Amygdalina, Confection (almond)—p. Cautica Viennensis, see Powder, Vienna—p. de Dactylis, Paste, date—p. Emulsiva, Confection (almond).

PASTA GLYCYRRHIZÆ GUMMA'TA ET ANISA'TA seu Massa de extracto glycyrrhizæ. A compound of Extract of liquorice, Gum Senegal, Sugar, Florence orris-root, and Volatile oil of aniseed. Demulcent.

PASTA DE JUJUBIS, Paste of jujubes—p. Regia, Confection (almond).

PASTA ZIN'CI CHLO'RIDI, (F.) Pâte de Canquoin, Paste of Chloride of Zinc, Canquoin's Caustic Paste. This paste is made of three strengths, consisting, respectively, of Chloride of zinc, 1 part; Wheaten flour, parts 4, 3 and 2; Water, sufficient to make a paste. This caustic destroys the part in a direct ratio with the thickness of the layer applied.

PASTE, Pas'ta, (F.) Pâte. A viscid, tenacious mixture. Also, a compound medicine, like the pastil, but less consistent, flexible, less saccharine, and more mucilaginous. Pastes of opium, &c., are used by the dentist in dental caries to relieve pain; and similar preparations of astringents and aromatics are applied to the gums, to give tone to them, and improve the breath. See Dentifrice.

A convenient paste for attaching labels to glass, or for other services, is made of gum tragacanth and water, to which alum is added. This the author always keeps by him. Another form is to make a solution of Gum Arabic,  $\zeta\text{ij}$ , Boiling water,  $\text{f}\zeta\text{ij}$ , and Glycerin,  $\text{f}\zeta\text{ij}$ ; and another is made by mixing powdered Gum Arabic, and powdered Tragacanth, of each  $\zeta\text{ss}$ , Water,  $\text{f}\zeta\text{iss}$ , Acetic acid,  $\text{℥xx}$ .

PASTE, CAGLIARI, see Turundæ Italicæ.

PASTE OF CHLORIDE OF ZINC, Pasta Zinci chloridi.

PASTE, DATE, Mas'sa seu Pas'ta de dactylis. Composed of dates, sugar, gum Arabic, water, and orange-flower water.—Ph. P. Demulcent.

PASTE OF ICE'LAND MOSS, Pas'ta Lichenis, (F.) Pâte de lichen. A paste made by boiling lichen Islandicus to a proper consistence, and adding gum Arabic and sugar.

The Pâte de Lichen opiacée contains opium in addition; about  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a grain to an ounce.

PASTE, ITALIAN, see Turundæ Italicæ.

PASTE OF JU'JUBES, Pas'ta de jujubis, Mas'sa de zizyphorum fructu, (F.) Pâte de Jujube. Composed of jujubes, gum Senegal, sugar, water, and tincture of lemon-peel. Demulcent.

PASTE, MARSHMAL'LOW, Mas'sa de gummi Arabico, Pas'ta de althæa, (F.) Pâte de Guimauve. A compound of Gum Arabic, Sugar, White of egg, and Orange-flower water.—Ph. P. It is demulcent.

PASTE, TOOTH, see Dentifricium—p. Vienna, see Powder, Vienna—p. Ward's, Confectio piperis nigra.

PASTEL, (dim. of pastas), Isatis tinctoria.

PASTÉQUE, Cucurbita citrullus.

PASTIL, Pastillus, Avic'ula Cypriæ, Candela fumalis, Phthois, Phthoisicus, (dim. of pastas.) A compound of aromatic substances in various shapes; used as a fumigating material when set fire to. See Fumigation.

The French use the term Pastille, (L.) Pastillus, for a solid, dry, round, oblong, square, or triangular compound, whose base is essential oil, and sugar the excipient. These pastilles are in fact small lozenges, and only differ from the tablette in their lesser size. They are termed, also, Saccharolés solides.

PASTILLE, see Pastil.

PASTILLES DIGESTIVES D'HAUTE-RIVE-VICHY, see Trochisci Sodæ bicarbonatis—p. Fumigating, see Fumigation—p. de Renaudot, see Pilule de Hydrargyro, Scammonio et Aloe—p. de Vichy, see Trochisci Sodæ bicarbonatis.

Take of fine White sugar in powder,  $\zeta\text{iv}$ ; Volatile oil of peppermint,  $\zeta\text{ss}$ . Mix, and add the electuary whilst warm. Drop it then on marble, and dry the drops.—Ph. P.)

PASTILLUS, Pastil.

PASTINACA ALTISSIMA, (dim. of pastas, from pastus, 'food,') P. opoponax—p. Anethum, Anethum graveolens—p. Graveolens, Anethum graveolens—p. Opaca, P. sativa.

PASTINACA OPOP'ANAX. Ord. Umbellifereæ. The name of the plant which furnishes the Opoponax. The plant, whence the gumresin is obtained, has, also, been called Fer'ula opoponax seu opop'anax, Pastinaca altissima, Laserpitium seu Selinum chironium, Opoponacium, Pastinaca heracleum seu costivum, Pastinaca, Ky'na, Hercules allheal, Opop'anaxivort.

Opop'anax, Opoponacis gummiresina, Opop'onax, Ge'zir, Pop'anax, Gum'mi Pan'actis, exudes from the roots when wounded. Its odour is strong and peculiar; taste, bitter and acrid. It is met with in the shops, in lumps of a reddish-yellow colour without; white within. It has been recommended as an antispasmodic and emmenagogue; but is seldom used. Dose, gr. x, to  $\text{ʒj}$ , in powder.

PASTINACA PRATENSIS, P. sativa.

PASTINACA SATI'VA, Flaphoboscum, Pastinaca

ayles'tris seu opa'ca seu pruteu'sis, Ane'thum seu Seli'nium pastina'ca, Ban'ica, Gar'den pars'-nep, (F.) Panicis. The root is sweet and nutritious, and is in esteem as an article of food. It has been used as a diuretic and demulcent in calculous affections, &c.

PATEL'LA, Rot'ula, R. ge'nu, Epigon'atis, Epigon'tis, Acromy'lē, Epigon'nis seu Epigu'nis seu Epipi'nis, Mo'la seu On'cha seu Oc'nulus seu Or'bis seu Scit'tum ge'nu, Oscentifor'mē seu discifor'mē seu thyrcoi'des, Supergenua'lis, Cavealo'i'des, My'laeris, My'lē, Gamb'la, Olecranon mob'ilē, (Prov.) Copbone, (F.) Rotule. (Diminutive of patera, 'a bowl,' so called from its shape.) A sort of sesamoid, flat, short, thick, rounded bone, situate in front of the knee, and enveloped in the substance of the tendon common to the extensor muscles of the leg. The posterior surface of the patella is divided into two facettes, united angularly, which are encrusted with cartilages, and each of which is articulated with one of the condyles of the femur. The patella is developed by a single point of ossification. When the patella is fractured, it is difficult to produce bony union. This can only be accomplished by keeping the fractured extremities closely in apposition.

PATENCY OF THE FORAMEN OVALE, (from pateo, 'to be open,') see Cyanopathy.

PATENT MEDICINE, (F.) Médecine brevetée ou patentée, Remède breveté ou patenté. A medicinal compound, for the sale of which the proposer obtains from government an exclusive privilege. A specification of his invention must be registered in the Patent Office, and, hence, it differs from a secret medicine.

PATER OMNIUM VIVENTIUM, ('father of all living,') Penis.

PATERA DIOGENIS, (patera, 'a flat dish,') calm.

PÂTEUX, (from pâte), Clammy.

PATHEMA, (πάθημα) Affection, Disease.

PATHEMATOLOGY, (pathema, gen. pathematis, and logos, 'a discourse,') Pathology.

PATHET'IC, Pathet'icus, Pathétique, (παθητικός, from pathos.) That which moves the passions. A name given to the superior oblique muscle of the eye, and, also, to the 4th pair of nerves.

PATHETIC MUSCLE, Oblique, superior, of the eye.

PATHETIC NERVE, Nervus Pathet'icus seu trochlear'is seu trochleator'is seu trochlear'tor, the 4th pair of nerves, Par quar'tum, (F.) Oculo-musculuire interne (Ch.), Nerf pathétique, is the smallest encephalic nerve. It arises behind the inferior part of the tubercula quadrigemina (testes) at the lateral parts of the valvula Viëssensii. Its roots unite into one thin round cord, which makes a turn upon the peduncles of the brain, and passes into a canal of the dura mater, near the posterior clinoid process. It enters the orbit by the broadest part of the sphenoidal fissure, and terminates in the superior oblique muscle of the eye, by dividing into several filaments.

PATHÉTIQUE, Pathetic.

PATHETISM, Magnetism, animal.

PATHIC, (from pathos), Morbid.

PATHICAL, Morbid.

PATHICUS, Morbid.

PATHE, (πάθη), Alveolus.

PATHOGENET'IC, Pathogenet'icus, Pathogen'

icus, (pathos, and γενεσις, 'generation,') Relating to pathogeny.

PATHOGENETIC PHYSIOL'OGY, Physiolog'ia pathogenet'ica. That part of physiology which relates to the origin of disease.

PATHOGENICUS, Pathogenetic.

PATHOGEN'ENY, Pathogen'ia, Nosogen'esis, Nosogen'ia. The branch of pathology which relates to the generation, production and development of disease.

PATHOGNOMON'IC, Pathognomon'icus, Sig'nium conjunctum seu characterist'icum seu mor'bi essentia'lē, (pathos, and γνωσκω, 'I know,') A characteristic symptom of a disease.

PATHOGR'APHY, Pathograph'ia, (pathos, and γραφω, 'I describe,') A description of disease.

PATHOLOGIA, Pathology — p. Humoralis, Humorism — p. Solidaris, Solidism.

PATHOLOG'ICAL, Patholog'icus, Pathol'ogus, (F.) Pathologique. Relating to pathology. Often used in the sense of pathical.

PATHOLOGICAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy.

PATHOLOGIST, Pathol'ogus, (from pathos, and λογος, 'a discourse,') One versed in pathology.

PATHOL'OGY, Pathematol'ogy, Patholog'ia, Pathematol'og'ia, Patholog'icē, (παθολογική (τεχνη)). The branch of medicine whose object is the knowledge of disease. It has been defined diseased physiology, and physiology of disease. It is divided into general and special. The first considers diseases in common; — the second the particular history of each. It is subdivided into internal and external, or medical and surgical.

PATHOLOGY, HUMORAL, Humorism.

PATHOMA'NIA, Parapath'ia, Moral Insan'ity (pathos, and mania), Ma'nia sine Delir'io. A morbid perversion of the natural feelings, affections, inclinations, temper, habits, moral disposition, and natural impulses, without any remarkable disorder or defect of the intellect or knowing and reasoning faculties, and particularly without any insane hallucination.

PATHOMYOTOM'IA, (pathos, μυς or μωυ, 'muscle,' and τομή, 'incision,') The title of a work by Dr. John Bulwer (1649), being "a dissection of the significative muscles of the affections of the mind."

PATHOPTRIDALGIA, (pathos, πατρις, 'one's fatherland,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Nostalgia.

PATHOPOËT'IC, Pathopœt'icus, (F.) Pathopœtique, (from pathos, and ποιω, 'to make,') Producing disease.

PATHOS, (πάθος) Affection, Disease.

PATIENCE, Rumex patientia — p. Elean, Rumex hydrolopathum — p. Garden, Rumex patientia — p. Rouge, Rumex sanguineus — p. Sauvage, Rumex acutus.

PATIENTIÆ MUSCULUS, Levator scapulæ

PATNE, (πατήνη) Alveolus.

PATOR NA'RRIUM, (pateo, 'to be open,') The cavity or the opening of the nostrils.

PATRATIO, (from patrare, patratum, 'to accomplish,') Coition, Ejaculation, (of sperm.)

PATRINIA JATAMANSI, (after E. L. M. Patrin, a naturalist and traveller of Lyons.) Nardus Indica.

PATTE D'OIE (F.), 'Goose's foot.' An aponeurotic expansion, which covers the internal surface of the tibia at its upper part, and consists of the expansion formed by the tendons of the sartorius, gracilis, and semi-tendinosus muscles

PATURSA, Syphilis.

PAU, CLIMATE OF. Pau is the capital of the department of the Lower Pyrenees, and is about 150 miles from Bordeaux, and 50 from Bayonne. The climate corresponds with that of the southwest of France generally; its great quality is the comparative mildness of its spring, and exemption from cold winds. It is regarded as a favourable winter residence for invalids labouring under chronic affections of the mucous membranes. It is too changeable for the consumptive; and to be avoided by the rheumatic.

PAULLINIA, (after S. Pauli, Prof. of Botany at Copenhagen.) This is an extract from a plant of the same name in Brazil. It is prepared by the Indians, and appears to possess excitant powers. In Brazil, and the neighbouring countries, it is given in the form of tisanæ—the powder being mixed with cocoa—in diarrhoea and dysentery. It has been employed also as a tonic. An extract is prepared in Brazil from Paullinia sorbibilis, Ord. Sapindacæ, known there under the name of Guarana, which is administered in similar pathological cases.

PAÛME DE LA MAIN, Palm.

PAUNCH, (from pantex, pl. pau'tices), Inguivics.

PAUNTA, (παυειν, 'to allay,') Sedatives.

PAUPIÈRE, Palpebra.

PAUSIMENIA, (παυσις, 'cessation,' and μenses, 'menses,') Cessation of the menses.

PAUSIS, (παυσις,) Sedation.

PAVANA WOOD, Croton tiglium.

PAVANNE, Laurus sassafra.

PAVILION, The French give the name pavillon, (L.) Papilio, 'a canopy,' to the expanded extremity of a canal or cavity,—for example, of a catheter, sound, &c.

PAVILION OF THE EAR, Auric'ula, Pia'na, O'tium, A'la, (F.) Auricula ou Oricule, Pavillon de l'oreille, is seated behind the cheeks, beneath the temple, and anterior to the mastoid process. Its size varies in individuals. It is free above, behind, and below. Anteriorly and within, it is continuous with the neighbouring parts. Its outer surface has several prominences, the Hel'ix, Ant'helix, Tra'gus, Antit'ragus, and Lobe; and several cavities—the groove of the Hel'ix, the Fos'sa navicularis seu scaphoïdes, and the Con'cha. The skin which covers the pavilion is very fine, and studded with a number of sebaceous follicles. The auricle is fixed to the head by three fibro-areolar ligaments;—a superior, anterior, and posterior.

PAVILLON DE L'OREILLE, Pavilion of the ear—p. de la Troupe, see Tuba Fallopiana.

PAVIMENTUM CEREBRI, ('pavement of the brain,') Base of the brain.

PAVINA, Æsculus hippocastanum.

PAVITA'TIO, Tre'mor, (paritare, pavitatum, 'to tremble from fear,') Trembling from fright.

PAVOR (L.), Dread. Great fright. Panophobia.

PAVORES NOCTURNI seu DORMIENTIUM. Fear during sleep.

PAVOT, Papaver.

PAW, ([F.] patte, (W.) pawen, 'a foot,') Manus.

PAWPAW, see Carica papaya.

PAXWAX, see Nucha.

PAXYWAXY, see Nucha.

PAZHAR, Bezoar.

PEA, ([F.] pois,) Pisum—p. Garden, Pisum—p. Ground Squirrel; Jeffersoniana Bartoni—p. Hoary, Galega Virginiana—p. Love, Abrus precatorius—p. Nut, Arachis hypogea—p. Partridge, Cassia chamaecrista—p. Turkey, Galega Virginiana.

PEACH, (from Pessicum, corr. from Persicum, 'Persian,') see Amygdalus Persica—p. Brandy, see Amygdalus Persica—p. Tree, Amygdalus Persica—p. Wood, see Cæsalspinia.

PEAGLE, Primula veris.

PEAR, ([Sax.] pepa, [L.] pirum,) see Pyrus malus—p. Alligator, Persea gratissima—p. Anchovy, Grias cauliflora—p. Avocado, Persea gratissima.

PEARL, ([Sax.] pearl,) Per'la, Mar'garon, Margari'ta, Margel'ium, Margel'is, Unio, (F.) Perle. A roundish concretion of a silvery white colour, and brilliant polish, found in several shells, and especially in the Auric'ula margaritif'era, which has, hence, been called Mater perla'rum, Margari'ta, and Mother of pearl, and is much used in the fabrication of handles for surgical instruments, &c. Pearls were formerly given in powder as astringents and antacids. They consist of lime and an animal matter.

PEARL ASH, Potash of commerce.

PEARL, MOTHER OF, see Pearl—p. White, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

PEAU, (from pellis,) Cutis—p. Divine, Condom.

PEAUCIER, (from pellis,) Platysma myoides.

PECAN or PECCAN NUT, see Hickory.

PECCANT, Peccans, (peccare, 'to sin,') Morbid, not healthy. An epithet given by the humourists to the humours when erring in quality or quantity. See Materia Morbosa.

PECHAN, Stomach.

PÉCHE, Peach, see Amygdalus Persica.

PECHEGUERA. A pulmonary disease affecting children three or four months old in South America, which is promptly fatal.

PÉCHER, Amygdalus Persica.

PECHLAGRA, Pechyagra.

PECHING, Anhelatio.

PECHURIM seu PICHURIM CORTEX. A highly aromatic bark, the produce of a species of laurus. It is extremely fragrant, like cinnamon, which it greatly resembles in its properties. In Portugal it is used in the cure of dysentery, &c. See Pichurim beans.

PECHY'AGRA, Pechi'agra, Ancon'agra, (πηχυς, 'the elbow,' and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Gout affecting the elbow.

PECHYS, (πηχυς,) Elbow.

PECHYTYRÈE, Porphyræ nautica.

PECKISH, ('disposed to peck,') (Prov.) Hungary.

PECTE, (πηκτη,) Cheese.

PECTEN, gen. Pect'inis, ('a border, a row,') Pubes. Also, a comb.

PECTEN DENTIUM, see Sepes—p. Veneris, Scandix cerefolium.

PECTIN, (πηκτος, 'coagulated, curdled,') A name given by Braconnot to a principle which forms the basis of vegetable jelly. It is extensively diffused in the juices of pulpy fruits and roots, especially when they are mature; and occasions these juices to coagulate when they are mixed with alcohol or boiled with sugar.

It is the basis of one of the classes of elementary principles of Dr. Pereira—the pectinaceous.

PECTINACEOUS, Pectinosus.

PECTINALIS, (pecten, gen. pect'inis, 'the pubes,') Pectin'us, Mus'culus liv'idus, Pectina'tus, (F.) Pubio-fémoral, Susp'ubio-fémoral (Ch.), Pectiné. This muscle is situated at the inner and upper part of the thigh. It is long, flat, and triangular; is attached, above, to the space which separates the iliopectineal eminence from the spine of the os pubis; and, below, by a flat tendon, to the oblique line which descends from the lesser trochanter to the linea aspera. The pectinalis bends the thigh on the pelvis, and carries it outwards in adduction and rotation. It may also bend the pelvis on the thigh.

PECTINATED, Pectina'tus, Pect'iniiform, Pect'inate, (F.) Pectiné, (from pecten, gen. pect'inis, 'a comb,') Having the shape of the teeth of a comb.

PECTINATED MUS'LES, Pectina'ti mus'culi. The fascicular texture observed in the right auricle of the heart:—Mus'culi Auric'ulæ Pectina'ti. Their main use probably is to prevent the over dilatation of the auricles.

PECTINATUS, Pectinalis.

PECTINÉ, Pectinalis. Pectinated.

PECTINEUS, Pectinalis.

PECTINIFORM, (pecten, 'a comb,' and forma, 'shape,') Pectinated.

PECTINOUS, Pectinal'ceus, Pectino'sus, Pectina'ceous, (from pectin.) Of or belonging to pectin or vegetable jelly,—as a pectinous or pectina'ceous vegetable principle.

PECTORAL, (pectus, 'the breast,') Relating to the breast. See Pectorals.

PECTORAL, GRAND, Pectoralis major.

PECTORALE, Corset.

PECTORALIS INTERNUS, Triangularis sterni.

PECTORALIS MAJOR, Pectoral'is, Sternoclavido-brachial'is, (F.) Sterno-costo-clavio-humeral, Sterno-humeral (Ch.), Grand Pectoral. A large, flat, triangular muscle, situate at the anterior part of the chest, before the axilla. It is attached, on the one hand, by means of aponeurotic fibres, to the inner half of the anterior edge of the clavicle; to the anterior surface of the sternum, and to the cartilages of the first six true ribs;—on the other, by a strong tendon, which is inserted at the anterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. The use of this muscle is to move the arm in various directions. If it be hanging by the side of the body, it carries it inwards and a little forwards. When the arm is raised, it depresses it and carries it inwards. It can, also, move it in rotation inwards. If the humerus be raised and fixed, the pectoralis major draws the trunk towards the upper extremity.

PECTORALIS MINOR, Serrat'us anti'cus mi'nor, (F.) Costo-cervicoidien, (Ch.), Petit Pectoral, Petit dentelé antérieur. This muscle is situate beneath the preceding, at the anterior and upper part of the chest. It is flat and triangular; is attached by its base, which appears digitated, to the upper edge and outer surface of the 3d, 4th, and 5th true ribs, and is inserted at the anterior part of the coracoid process. The pectoralis minor draws the scapula forwards and downwards, and makes it execute a rotatory motion, by virtue of which its inferior angle is carried backwards, and the anterior depressed. When the shoulder is fixed, it elevates the ribs to which it is attached, and aids in the dilatation of the chest.

PECTORALS, Pectoral'ia, Thorac'ica. Medicines considered proper for relieving or removing affections of the chest.

PECTORAL DROPS, BATEMAN'S, consist chiefly of tincture of castor, with some camphor and opium, flavoured by anisced. Gray gives the following formula: Castor, ℥i; Ol. anisi, ℥i; Camph. ℥v; Cocci, ℥ss; Opii, ℥vj; Proof spirit, a gallon.

A form, advised by a committee of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, is the following:—Alcohol. dil. cong. iv; Santal. rubr. ras. ℥i; digere per horas xxiv; cola, et adde Pulv. opii, Pulv. catechu, Camphoræ, āā ℥ij; Ol. Anisi, ℥iv. Digest for ten days.

PECTORILOQUE, (pectus, 'the breast,' and loqui, 'to speak,') One, according to Laënnec, who presents the phenomenon of Pectoril'ism. Also, a stethoscope.

PECTORILOQUIE, Pectoril'ique — p. Chévro-tante, Egophony.

PECTORILOQUOUS BRONCHOPHONY, see Pectoril'ique.

PECTORIL'OUQUY, Pectoril'ouquism, Car'ernous voice, Pectoril'ouquia, (F.) Pectoril'ouque, Voix cavernense, V. articulée. Speech or voice coming from the chest. Laënnec has designated, by this name, the phenomenon often presented by consumptive individuals, when their chests are examined with the stethoscope. The voice seems to issue directly from the chest, and to pass through the central canal of the cylinder,—a phenomenon owing to the voice resounding in the anfractuous cavities, produced in the lungs by the superfluous or breaking down of tubercles, which constitute abscesses or ulcers of the lungs. By some, it is not separated from bronchophony, having been termed, at times, strong bronchophony, and pectoril'ouquous bronchophony. See Laryngophony. Whispering pectoril'ouquy is that produced by the whispering of the patient.

PECTOROSUS, (from pectus.) One who has a broad chest.

PECTUS, gen. Pec'toris. Sternum, Thorax—p. Carinatum, see Carina and Lordosis.

PECULIUM, ('private property,') Penis.

PEDAGRA, Potassa supertartaris impurus.

PEDAL, Peda'lis, Podal'is, Podal'icus, (pes, gen. pedis, 'the foot,') Relating to the foot:—as PEDAL APONEURO'SIS, (F.) Aponévrose pédiense. A thin, aponeurotic layer, which invests the extensor brevis digitorum pedis, and separates the tendons of the foot from each other.

PEDBELLY (Prov.), Physconia.

PÉDÉRASTIE, Pæderastia.

PEDESIS, (πηδῆσις, from πηδάω, 'to leap,') Pulsation.

PEDETHMOS, (πῆθημος), Pulsation.

PEDIAL'GIA, Pedional'gia, Pedionerval'gia, (pedion and algos, 'pain,') Pain in the side of the foot. Neuralgia of the foot in general. An affection of this kind, under the name Pédionalgie, prevailed in 1762 at Savigliano in Piedmont, and in 1806 amongst the military at Padua.

PEDICEL, Pedicel.

PEDICELLATED, Pediculated.

PÉDICELLÉ, Pediculated.

PED'ICLE, Ped'icel, Pedic'ulus, (F.) Pédicule, (dim. of pes, gen. pedis, 'a foot,') A slender stalk; also, the narrow portion of a part of a tumor for example,—from which it was developed, and is supported.

PEDICLE, VITELLINE, see Vesicula umbilicalis.

PEDICULARIA, (from pediculus), Delphinium staphisagria.

PED'ICULATED, Ped'icellated, Ped'icellat'us, Ped'icellat'us, (F.) Pédiculé, Pédicellé. Supported by a pedicle.

PEDICULATIO, (from pediculus), Phthieriasis.

PÉDICULE, Pedicel.

PÉDICULÉ, Pediculated.

PEDIC'ULUS, Pedun'culus, Phtheir, Louse, (Prov.) Bid'dy, (F.) Pou, (dim. of pes, gen. pedis, 'a foot,' from its having many feet.) A genus of parasitic insects. The human body is infested by three kinds: the Bod'ylouse, or Clotheslouse, Pedic'ulus vestiment'i, (F.) Pou de corps; the Headlouse, Pedic'ulus cap'itis, (F.) Pou de la tête, which lives in the hair; the Crablouse, Mor'pion, Fera'lis pedic'ulus, Plat'ula, Phth'irius inguin'al'is, Pedic'ulus Pu'bis, (F.) Mor'pion, which infests the hair of the pubes. Infusion of tobacco, or mercurial ointment, or ointment of white precipitate, or of red precipitate of mercury, readily destroys them. The louse occurring in phthieriasis, pediculus tabescentium, is said to differ from the common louse. Also, a pedicle.

PEDICULUS CAPITIS, see Pediculus — p. Pubis, Crab-louse — p. Tabescentium, see Pediculus — p. Vestiment'i, see Pediculus.

PÉDICURE, (pes, gen. pedis, 'foot,' and curare, 'to care for,') Chiropodist.

PEDICUS, (from pes, gen. pedis.) Extensor brevis digitorum pedis.

PÉDIEUX, (muscle), Extensor brevis digitorum pedis.

PEDIGAMBRA, Ysambra.

PEDILANTHUS TITHYMALOÏDES, (πέδιλον, 'a shoe,' and ανθος, 'a flower,') Euphor'bia tithymaloïdes seu myrtif'olia, Jecubush, Order, Euphorbiacæ, grows in varicose parts of the West Indies. The practitioners of Curaçoa give a decoction in venereal cases. It is also used in domestic practice, in amenorrhœa. It is, moreover, known and used as Ipecacuanha.

PEDILUYIUM, (pedes, 'the feet,' and lavo, 'I wash.') Lavip'edion, (F.) Pédiluve, Bain de pied. A bath for the feet. See Bath.

PEDIOLUS, (dim. of pes, gen. pedis, 'a foot,') Pediolus.

PEDION, (πῆδιον,) Sole.

PEDIONALGIA, Pedialgia.

PEDIONEURALGIA, Pedialgia.

PEDIUM, (πῆδιον,) Tarsus.

PÉDONCULE, Peduncle.

PÉDONCULES DU CERVEAU, Peduncles of the brain—p. du Cervelet, Corpora restiformia—p. du Conarium, Peduncles of the pineal gland—p. de la Glande pinéale, Peduncles of the pineal gland.

PEDORA. The sordes of the eyes, ears, and feet.

PÉDOTROPHIE, Pædotrophy.

PED'UNCLE, Pedunculus, (F.) Pédoncule, (dim. of pes, gen. pedis, 'a foot,') A flower stalk. This term has been applied to different prolongations or appendices of the encephalon.

PEDUNCLES OF THE BRAIN, Pedunculû seu Cru'ra seu Cau'dex cer'ebrî, called, also, Cru'ra anteriora medullæ oblongatæ, (F.) Pédoncules du Cerveau. Two white cords, about  $\frac{3}{4}$ ths of an inch in diameter, on the outside of the corpora albicantia. They arise from the medullary substance of the brain, and gradually approach, till they join the tuber annulare. They are formed, internally, of a mixture of cineritious and medullary matter; the former of which, being of a darker colour at one part than in any other part of the brain, has been called Lo'cus n'iger cru'rûm cer'ebrî, Substantia nigra pedunculû. It separates the main body of peduncular fibres into two parts,—the lower or superficial consists, almost wholly, of white fibres, collected into coarse fasciculi, and is called the crust or basis or fasciculated portion of the peduncle. The upper part is named tegmen'tum.

PEDUNCLES OF THE CEREBELLUM, Pedunculû seu Cru'ra cerebelli, called, also, Cru'ra posteriora, are six in number, three on each side—a superior, a middle, and an inferior. The superior peduncles are generally known as the Processus cerebelli ad testes, Cru'ra cerebelli ad corpora quadrigen'ina, Bra'chia copulati'ca: the inferior are the Processus cerebelli ad medullam oblongatam; and the middle are called, also, Cerebellar peduncles—Processus seu Cru'ra cerebelli ad pontem, Bra'chia pontis.

PEDUNCLES, INFERIOR, OF THE CEREBELLUM, Corpora restiformia—p. of the Medulla oblongata, Corpora restiformia.

PEDUNCLES OF THE PIN'EAL GLAND, Pedunculû conarii, (F.) Pédoncules de la glande pinéale, P. du Conarium, are two medullary bands or strips, which seem to issue from the pineal gland, and proceed on each side upon the upper and inner region of the optic thalami. See Pineal Gland.

PEDUNCULI CEREBELLI, Peduncles of the Cerebellum—p. Cerebrî, Peduncles of the brain—p. Conarii, Peduncles of the pineal gland, see Pineal gland—p. Medullæ oblongatæ, Corpora restiformia.

PEDUNCULUS, Peduncle.

PEGA, (πηγη,) Canthus (lesser).

PEGANELE'ON, O'leum ruta'ceum, O'leum ruta, (πυγανον, 'rue,' and ελαον, 'oil,') Oil of Rue.

PEGANUM, (πυγανον,) Ruta.

PEGMIN, (from πηγνω, 'to coagulate,') Corium phlogisticum.

PEINE, (πεινα,) Hunger.

PEINOTHERAPEIA, (πεινη and θεραπεια, 'treatment,') Limotherapeia.

PEIRA, (πειρα,) Effort, Experience, Nisus.

PELADA, (F.) Pelade. A word of uncertain origin, applied to alopecia, especially to that resulting from syphilis. See Alopecia and Porrigo decalvans.

PELADE, Pelada—p. Achromatuse, Porrigo decalvans—p. Décalvante, Porrigo decalvans.

PELA'GIA. A kind of scaly crust of the hands—sometimes of the legs; at others, of the face. Pellagra [?].

PELAGRA, Pellagra.

PELARGONIUM AN'CEPS, (πελαργος, 'a crane,' from the shape of the capsules,) Peris'tera an'ceps. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ, the decoction of which is used by the Malays in amenorrhœa, and to promote parturition and abortion.

PELARGONIUM ANTIDYSENTER'ICUM, Jenkinsonia antidysenter'ica. This South African plant is used by the natives in dysentery. It is boiled in milk.

PELARGONIUM CUCULLA'TUM. Common on the Table Mountain, Africa. It has been recommended in decoction as an enema in colic, nephritis, and suppression of urine. It is an excellent emollient, and was formerly exported to Holland under the name Herba Althææ.

PELARGONIUM TRIS'TE, Polyac'tium trist'e. The root of this plant, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, is somewhat astringent, and is used there in diarrhœa and dysentery, and as an antelmintic.

PEL'ICAN, Pelicanus, Pelecanus, Pel'ecan, Pel'ecus, (πελεκαν, from πελεκω, 'I cleave,') An instrument, curved at the end like the beak of a pelican. Its use is to extract teeth.

PELI'CIDÉ, Pelidê, Mel coc'tum. Boiled honey.

PELICOMETER, (πελιξ, gen. πελικος, 'a basin,' 'the pelvis,' and μετρον, 'a measur,') Pelymeter.

PELIDNOMA, (πελιδνωμα, from πελιδνος, 'livid,' and ωμα,) Echymoma, Pelioma.

PELIO'MA, gen. Peliomat'is, Pelidnoma, (πελιωμα, from πελος, 'livid,' and ωμα,) A livid echymosis. See Echymoma.

PÉLIOSE, Purpura.

PELIOSIS, (πελιωσις, from πελος, 'livid,' and ωσις,) Purpura hæmorrhagica—p. Rheumatica, see Purpura simplex.

PELLA, (πελλα, 'skin,') Cutis, Prepuce.

PEL'LAGRA, Pell'agra, Ichthyosis seu Tu'ber seu Impet'igo Pell'agra, Elephant'iasis Ital'ica, Lépra Mediolanen'sis seu Lombard'ica, Scorbut'us alpinus, Ma'nia pell'ag'ria, Eryth'e'ma eudem'icium seu pell'agrum, Derm'at'agra, Erysip'elas per'iod'ica nervo'sa chron'ica, Paral'ysis scorbut'ica, Isolazione de Primavera, Male del Sole, Scar'vy of the Alps, (F.) Mal de misère, Scorbut des Alpes; (from πελλα, [?] 'skin,' and αγρα, 'seizure,') A disease, particularly noticed among the Milanese, which consists in the skin becoming covered with wrinkles, and assuming a scaly appearance, especially in the parts exposed to the air. The strength diminishes, the intellectual faculties and sensations become obscure, and cramps, convulsions, and other lesions of muscular contractility supervene. It is a singular endemic affection, and has been supposed to follow everywhere the introduction of Indian corn! Hence the name Raphania maiz'ica, given to it by some of the Italian physicians.

An affection endemic in the Asturias is said to be a variety of pellagra. It is the Rô'sa seu Lépra Astu'rica, Mal de la Rosa.

PEL'LENS, (pellere, 'to drive,') Driving; impelling.

PELLEN'TIA MEDICAMEN'TA are medicines that promote the occurrence of the menstrual or hæmorrhoidal flux.

PELLET, (from pila, 'a ball,') see Glooupe.

PELLICLE, Pellicula.
PELLICULA, Pell'icle, (dim. of pellis, 'a skin.') A thin skin or membrane; a film.

PELLICULA OVI, Membrana putaminis—p. Summa, Epidermis—p. Superior, Epidermis.

PELLICULÆ CORDIS, Ostiola cordis.

PELLIS, Cutis—p. Summa, Epidermis.

PELLITORY, Xanthoxylum fraxineum—p. American, Parietaria Pennsylvaniaica—p. Bastard, Achillea ptarmica—p. of Spain, Anthemis pyrethrum—p. Wall, Parietaria.

PELMA, (πελαα), Sole.

PELOHĒMĪA, (F. Pélohémie, (πελος, 'dark,' and 'αίμα,' 'blood.')

PELOR, (πελωρ), Monster.

PELORIA, (from πελωρ), Monster.

PELORIUM, (from πελωρ), Monster.

PELORUM, (from πελωρ), Monster.

PELOTE DE MER, (from pila, 'a round mass,') Pila marina.

PALTALIS seu PELTATUS CARTILAGO, (πελτη, 'a small shield,') Thyroid cartilage, Xiphoid cartilage.

PELTAN'DRA VIRGIN'ICA, (πελτη, 'a small shield,' and ανθη, gen. ανθος, 'anther,' from the shield-shaped stamens.) Arum Virgin'icum, Callia seu Leon'ia seu Russelov'ria Virgin'ica, Ar'roid Arum, Taraho', Wani'pee; indigenous; of the Order Araceæ. The fresh roots and seeds are acrid stimulants, like Arum.

PELTIDEA AMPLISSIMA, (πελτη, 'a small shield,') Lichen caninus—p. Aphthosa, Lichen aphthosus—p. Canina, Lichen caninus—p. Leucorrhiza, Lichen caninus—p. Malacca, Lichen caninus—p. Spuria, Lichen caninus.

PELTIGERA CANINA, Lichen caninus.

PELUDE, Pellicide.

PELVIC, Pel'vicus, Pelvi'nus, (F. Pelvien, from pelvis.) Belonging or relating to the pelvis.

PELVIC APONEURO'SIS, (F. Aponévrose pelvienne. A tendinous lamina, given off from the sides of the pelvis, and from the entire circumference of the brim, which passes into and lines the pelvis, and is soon divided into two distinct layers;—one external, the lateral pelvic or obturator fascia, which is continued to line the sides of the pelvis, and covers the obturator internus muscle; the other, internal or superior, which passes inwards upon the side of the prostate, bladder, and rectum in the male, and of the bladder, vagina, and rectum in the female, in order to form the floor of the pelvis.

PELVIC CAV'ITY, (F. Cavité pelvienne. The cavity of the pelvis.

PELVIC MEMBERS. The lower extremities.

PELVIC SURFACE OF THE ILIUM. That which faces the pelvic cavity.

PELVICULA OCULLI, (dim. of pelvis, 'a basin,') Orbit.

PELVID'YMUS, (F. Pelvidyme, (pelvis, and δευν, 'to mingle,') A monster united at the pelvis, and double above.

PELVIAN, Pelvic.

PELVIMETER, Pelycom'eter, Pel'icom'eter, Pelyom'eter, Pyelom'eter, (F. Pelvimètre, (pelvis, and μετρον, 'a measure,') A barbarous hybrid. This name has been given to different instruments, invented for measuring the diameters of the pelvis, and particularly the antero-posterior or fore-and-aft diameter of the brim:—Pelvim'etry, (F. Pelvimétrie. Two have been chiefly employed, especially by French practitioners:—the Compass d'épaisseur, and the Pelvimeter of Coutouly. 1. The Compass d'épaisseur or Callipers of Baudeloque, is formed like a pair of compasses—with blunt extremities—the branches of which can be moved at will. One of these is applied on the symphysis pubis, and the other on the sacrum. About three inches must be deducted from this measurement for the thickness of the mons veneris, pubis, and the base of the sacrum. 2. The Pelvimeter of Coutouly resembles the instruments used by shoemakers for measuring the length of the foot. The two branches are introduced, in a state of approximation, into the vagina, and then separated, so that one touches the promontory of the sacrum, the other comes behind the os pubis. It is a barbarous contrivance, and its introduction ought never to be attempted on the living subject. It does not, indeed, seem possible to introduce it without mischief.

The finger is, decidedly, the best pelvimeter, and by it we can judge whether the base of the sacrum be unusually prominent. Measurement of the pelvis by the hand has been called Pelycochirometre'sis; (from πελις, 'the pelvis,' χειρ, 'the hand,' and μετρον, 'a measure,')

PELVIMETRY, see Pelvimeter.

PELVIS, gen. Pelvis, 'a basin,' Cho'ana, Py'elna, Lee'anē, (F. Bassin; from πελος, πελις, or πελυσ, 'a basin,' because fancied to be shaped like an ancient basin.) The part of the trunk which bounds the abdomen below. It is a large, bony, irregular, conoidal cavity,—open above and below,—which supports and contains a part of the intestines, and the urinary and genital organs; and serves, at the same time, as a fixed point for the articulation of the lower limbs, the attachment of their muscles, and the execution of their movements. The pelvis supports, behind, the vertebral column, and is sustained, before, by the ossa femorum. It is situate, in the adult, near the middle part of the body, and is composed of four broad, flat, unequally thick bones, differing much in their shape, size, and arrangement, which touch, are articulated at some part of their surface, and intimately united by means of a number of ligamentous fasciæ. Of these bones, two are behind, on the median line,—the sacrum and the coccyx; the two others are before and at the sides,—the ilia. They are fellows, and unite, before, with each other. The most important parts of the pelvis, in an obstetrical point of view, are the brim and the outlet. The BRIM, Angustia abdominal'is, Intro'itus, Apertur'a pelvis superior, Up'per O'pening or Strait of the Cavity of the Pelvis, (F. Détroit supérieur, D. abdominal, is the narrow part which separates the greater pelvis from the less—the false from the true, Pelvis vera seu mi'nor. In the well-formed woman it is elliptical, and slightly inclined forwards. Its antero-posterior, sacro-pubic or conjugate diameter, in a standard pelvis, measures 4½ inches, but with the soft parts, 3½ inches; its transverse or iliac or lateral, 5½ inches, but with the soft parts 4 inches; and its oblique, Dian'ter of Deventer, with the soft parts, 4½ inches. The OUT'LET, Ex'itus, Inferior o'pening or strait, Angustia perineal'is, (F. Détroit inférieur, D. périnéal, forms the lower aperture of the pelvis. The anteroposterior diameter is here, on account of the mobility of the coccyx, 5 inches: the lateral, 4 inches. The AX'IS OF THE PELVIS is important to be known in obstetrics. The Axis of the Brim is indicated by a straight line drawn from the umbilicus to the apex of the coccyx;—the Axis of the Out'let by a line drawn from the first bone of the sacrum to the entrance of the vagina. An imaginary curved line which indicates the direction of the canal of the pelvis, has occasionally been termed the curve of Call'rus, in consequence of its having been pointedly described by that German obstetrician.

PELVIS AURIUM, Cochlea—p. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain.

PELVIS OF THE KID'NEY, Pelvis renalis seu renum, S'rans, Ven'ter seu Al'veus Re'nium, (F. Bassin. This is a small, membranous pouch, occupying the posterior part of the fissure of the kidney. It is placed behind the renal artery and vein; is elongated from above to below; flattened from before to behind; irregularly oval in figure; and, below, contracts considerably, to be continuous with the ureter. It receives the orifices of the infundibula, which pour the urine secreted in the kidney into its cavity.

PELVIS MINOR, Pelvis—p. Ocularis, Scaphium oculare—p. Renalis, Pelvis of the kidney—p. Renum, Pelvis of the kidney—p. Vera, Pelvis.

PELVITROCHANTE'RIAN, Pelvitrochanteria'nus. That which relates to the pelvis and great trochanter. The Pelvitrochanterian re'gion is formed by the muscles—pyramidalis, two obturators, gemini, and quadratus femoris—which pass from the pelvis to the digital cavity of the great trochanter.

PELYCOHIROMETRESIS, (πελυζ, gen. πελκος, 'pelvis,' χειρ, 'hand,' and μετρον, 'measure,') see Pelvimeter.

PELYCOMETER, (πελυζ, gen. πελκος, 'pelvis,' and μετρον, 'a measure,') Pelvimeter.

PELVYOMETER, Pelvimeter.

PEM'VICAN or PEM'ICAN. Meat cured, pounded, and mixed with fat. It has been much used as nutriment on long overland journeys.

PEMPHIGODES, (πεμφιγός,) Pemphigoid, (F.) Pemphigode. An epithet given by the ancients to the fever that accompanies pemphigus.

PEM'PHIGUS or PEMPHIGUS, Euphlysis Pemphigus, Pompholyx, (from πεμφιζ, gen. πεμφιγος, 'a blister,') Feb'ris bullosa seu vesicularis seu ampull'osa seu pemphigodes seu pemphigodes, Exanthema serosum, Mor'ta, Pemphigus mor'ta seu Helvet'icus seu major seu minor, Mor'dus bullosus seu vesicularis seu ampullaceus, Pem'phix, Pem'phyx, Ty'phus vesicularis, Vesic'ular Fe'ver, Blad'dery Fe'ver, Wa'terblebs, (F.) Fie'dre bullense ou vésculeux, Maladie bullense. A disease, defined to consist of vesicles, scattered over the body; transparent, filbert-sized, with a red, inflamed edge, but without surrounding blush or tumefaction; on breaking, disposed to ulcerate; fluid, pellucid or slightly coloured; fever, adynamic. It is doubtful whether any such idiopathic fever has ever existed: the probability is, that the fever and vesications have been an accidental complication. Cullen thinks the Pemphigus Helveticus must have been malignant sore throat. If, however, such a distinct disease did exist, it was probably only as an endemic-epidemic.

PEM'PHIX, gen. Pemphi'gis, (πεμφιζ,) Pemphigus.

PEM'PHYX, (πεμφιζ,) Pemphigus.

PEMPT'ÆA FEBRIS, (πεμπτος, 'five,') Quintan.

PEN'ÆA MUCRONATA, (after P. Pena, a French botanist,) see Sarcocolla—p. Sarcocolla, Sarcocolla.

PENCHE, Abdomen.

PENCIL LIKE PROCESSES, Styloid processes.

PENDULOUS ABDOMEN, Physconia.

PENDULUM PALATI, (from pendere, 'to hang,') Velum pendulum palati.

PENÉTRANT, Penetrating.

PENÉTRATING, Penetrans, (F.) Péntrant, (penetrare, penetratum, (penitus intrare, 'to go into,') A wound is so called which penetrates one of the great splanchnic cavities—Vulnus penetrans.

A medicine is also so called, which is supposed to pass through the pores, and stimulate.

PENICILLUM, Compress, Penicillus.

PENICIL'LUS, Penicillum, Peniculus, ('a painter's brush; dim. of penis, 'a tail,') A tent or pledget. A pessary. The secreting glandiform extremities of the venæ portæ, (Ac'ini bilio'si), have been so termed, as well as the villous textures.

PENICILLUS, Tent.

PENICULUM, Compress.

PENICULUS, Penicillus, Tent.

PÉNIDE, Penidium.

PENIDES, Saccharum hordeatum.

PENID'IUM, Penidium saccharatum, (penis, 'a tail,' from the shape [?],) (F.) Pévide, Sucre tors. A kind of clarified sugar made up into rolls. Barley sugar. It is demulcent; see Saccharum hordeatum.

PÉNIL, Mons veneris.

PENIS, gen. Pe'nis, 'a tail,' (probably from pendere, 'to hang down,') Can'lis, Co'les, Colis, Can'les, Can'los, Men'tula, Men'ta, Phal'lus, Pe'os, Ste'ma, Na'trix, Cap'ulus, Rhop'ulum, Pos'thē, Pos'thinum, Pros'thim, Cri'thē, Cor'yuē, Vo'mer, Pa'ter on'ium vicu'tium, Pria'pus, Vir'ga, V. vir'i'lis, V. genita'lis, Ver'etrum, Sa'thē, Mem'brum vir'i'le seu semina'le seu genita'le vir'o'rum, Mo'riou, Cy'on, Sic'ula, Tea'tum, Ho'sta, II. nuptia'lis, H. vir'i'lis, Vas, Vas'culum, Pen'ellium, Vir'gula, Vir, Thyr'sus, Ten'sus, Gla'vus, Can'da sa'lax, Can'da, Fas'cinum, F. vir'i'le, Mu'to, Ner'veus, N. fistulosus seu fistula'ris seu juven'lis, Per'tica per se, Sea'pus, Le'co, Curen'lio, Ve'na, Con'tus, Te'lum, Gurgu'lio, Scep'trum, Ar'ma, Gla'dina, Lu'bricum Ca'put, Mu'tinum, Pa'lus, Pes'salus, Ra'dix, Ra'mus, Rutab'ulum, Ar'ma Ven'tris, Colum'na od'istans inguin'ibus, Colum'na, Py'ramis, Trabs, Sp'i'na, Catapul'ta vir'i'lis, Ver'pa, Mache'ra, Tau'rus, Pa'o'le, Tur'tur; the Yard, Male organ, &c., (F.) Verge, Membre viril. This organ, the use of which is to carry the seminal fluid into the female organs of generation, is cylindrical, long, and erectile, and situate before and beneath the symphysis pubis. In the ordinary state, it is soft and pendent in front of the scrotum. During erection, it becomes elongated, upright, and assumes a triangular shape. Its upper surface is called the Dorsum pe'nis, (E.) Dos de la verge; and, at its anterior surface, there is a longitudinal projection formed by the canal of the urethra. The two sides of the penis are round, and its posterior extremity or root is attached to the pelvis. Its anterior extremity is free, and presents the glans, prepuce, and orifice of the urethra. The penis is formed of the corpora cavernosa, the principal seat of erection; the corpus spongiosum of the urethra, for the conveyance of the urine and sperm; and the glans, which terminates the canal. The Arteries of the penis are branches of the internal pudic. The Nerves are correspond with the arteries. The Nerves are from the internal pudic.

PENIS CEREBRI, Pineal gland—p. Factitious, Dildo—p. Femineus, Clitoris—p. Lipodermis, Paraphimosis—p. Muliebris, Clitoris—p. Succedaneus, Dildo.

PENNATUS, Penniform.

PEN'NIFORM, Pemifor'mis, Penna'tus, (penna, 'a pen,' and forma, 'form,') An epithet for muscles whose fleshy fibres are inserted at the side of a middle tendon, like the feathers of a pen on their common stalk. When on one side of the tendon, they are called simple or single penniform; when on both sides, double penniform.

PENNSYLVANIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The most celebrated are those of Bedford. The Carlisle, Ephrata, Yellow Springs, &c., are also frequented.

PENNYCRESS, Thlaspi.

PENNYROYAL, Mentha pulegium, Hedeoma pulegioides—p. Hart's, Mentha cervina.

PENNYWORT, ASIATIC. Hieracocotyle Asiatica.

PENSACOLA, see Saint Augustine.

PENSÉE, Viola tricolor—p. Sawage, Viola tricolor.

PEN'SILE, Pen'silis, (from pendere, 'to hang,') Applied to tumours which hang by small roots.

PENSILIA, (pendere, 'to hang down,') Pudibilia.

PENSY, Viola tricolor.

PENTA, (πεντε, 'five,') in composition, five.

PENTAM'YRON, (πεντα, and μυρον, 'ointment,')

An ancient ointment, consisting of five ingredients. These are said to have been—storax, mastich, wax, opobalsam, and unguentum nardinum.

PENTAPHAR'MACON, (πενταφαρμακον, from pena, and φαρμακον, 'remedy,') Any medicine consisting of five ingredients.

PENTAPHYLLUM, (πενταφυλλον, from pena, and φυλλον, 'a leaf,') Potentilla reptans.

PENT'ATEUCH, (SURG'ICAL), Pentateuchus, (πεντατευχος, from pena, and τευχος, 'a book,') which signifies the five books of Moses—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. By analogy, some surgeons have given the name Surgical Pentateuch to the division of external diseases into five classes:—wounds, ulcers, tumours, luxations, and fractures.

PENTATH'ETUM, (pena, and θημη, 'to place,') An ancient plaster consisting of five ingredients.

PENULA, ('a cover,') Ingluvies.

PENZANCE', CLIMATE OF. This is the chief residence of invalids in Cornwall, England, during the winter. It is situate on Mount's Bay, about ten miles from the Land's End. It is 5½° warmer in winter than in London, 2° colder in summer; scarcely 1° warmer in the spring, and only about 2½° warmer in the autumn. It is a very favourable winter residence for the phthisical invalid.

PEONY, Pæonia.

PEOS, (πεις,) Penis.

PEOT'OMY, Peotom'ia, (from peos, and τομη, 'incision,') Amputation of the penis.

PEPANSIS, (πεπανσις, from πεπαινω, 'to mature,') Coction, Maturation.

PEPANTICUS, (πεπαντικος,) Maturative.

PEPASMUS, (πεπασμος,) Coction, Maturation.

PEPAS'TIC, Pepas'ticus, Peptic, Pep'ticus, (F.) Pépostique, Peptique. A medicine supposed to have the power of favouring the concoction of diseases. Maturative.

PEPEIRUS, (πεπειρος,) Concocted.

PEPERI, (πεπερι,) Piper.

PEPINO (S.). A cucurbitacea, which is cultivated in great abundance in the fields of Peru. The pulp or edible part is solid, juicy, and well flavoured; but is apt to disagree.

PEPO, (πεπων,) Cucurbita pepo—p. Lagenarius, Cucurbita lagenaria—p. Vulgaris, Cucurbita pepo.

PEPPER, (πιπερι,) Piper—p. Black, Piper nigrum—p. Bush, sweet, Clethra alnifolia—p. Cayenne, Capsicum annuum—p. Chilly, Capsicum annuum—p. Cubeb, Piper Cubeba—p. Decorticated, Fulton's, see Piper nigrum—p. Guinea, Capsicum annuum—p. Jamaica, Myrtus Pimento—p. Japanese, Fagara piperita—p. Long, Piper longum.

PEI'PER MALAGUET'TA. This term has been applied to the fruit or seeds of several zingiberaceous plants, as well as to the pimento. It is usually considered to be synonymous with Grana Paradisi, Grains of Paradise, and Grana Guineensis, Guinea Grains.

PEPPER POD, Capsicum annuum—p. Poorman's, Polygonum hydropiper—p. Tailed, Piper cubeba—p. Turnip, Arum triphyllum—p. Wa',

Sedum—p. Water, Polygonum hydropiper—p. Water, of America, Polygonum punctatum—p. White, Piper album.

PEPPERWORT, Lepidium.

PEP'SIN, Pepsin'na, Pepsin'um, Chymosin, Gastérase, Digestive Principle, (from πεψις, 'coction, 'digestion,') A peculiar organic matter, which, in combination with the gastric acid, is considered to form the proper digestive solvent. Its chemical constitution is unknown. It would appear that its presence is necessary to induce changes in the elements of the food, which may enable the gastric acids to exert their proper action on them. One mode of obtaining it is by opening and reversing rennet bags—the fourth stomachs of ruminant animals—and washing them under a thin stream of cold water; scraping off the mucous membrane; reducing it to a pulp, and macerating it in distilled water for twelve hours; filtering, and adding to the liquor a sufficient quantity of acetate of lead; collecting the precipitate, and passing through it a current of sulphuretted hydrogen; filtering again; evaporating at a low temperature, and powdering the dry residue. Pepsin has been given in dyspepsia. A form of it, under the name Poudre nutritive, has been much used. A wine of pepsin has been made of calves' rennets 3, sherry Oij, alcohol, Oss. The rennets are washed clean, cut up, and macerated for fourteen days in the wine, shaking often. The alcohol is then added. Dose, a teaspoonful immediately after eating.

PEPSINUM, Pepsin.

PEPSIS, (πεψις,) Coction, Digestion.

PEP'TIC, Pep'ticus, (πεπτιω, 'I digest,') Pepas'tic. An agent that promotes digestion, or is digestive. Also, applied adjectively to an article of food that is easy of digestion.

PEPTIC PERSUADER, see Pilula aloës et kinæ kina.

PEP'TONE, Pep'tonum, (from πεπτιω, 'I digest,') A presumed definite combination between the solvent fluid in the stomach, and albuminous matters received into the organ as aliments. The same as Albuminose.

PER, 'by or through,' in composition. It often, also, gives intensity to the signification.

PERACEPH'ALUS, (περ, and ακεφαλος, 'acephalus,') (F.) Péacéphale. A genus of monsters comprising one of the most extensive groups of the teratological series, characterized by a sufficiently regular form of the body: the absence of upper extremities,—the thorax being more imperfect than in acephali, or even completely null,—the essential conditions, consequently being in their degree of anomaly passing 'beyond' the true type of the acephalous monster.

PERACUTUS, Catoxys.

PERARTICULATIO, Diarthrosis.

PERATODYNIA, (παρα, 'a pouch for provisions, a stomach, and δύνη, 'pain,') Cardialgia.

PERCE-CRANE, (percer, 'to pierce, and crane, 'cranium,') Perforator.

PERCE-FEUILLE, (percer, 'to pierce, and feuille, 'a leaf,') Bupleurum rotundifolium.

PERCE-MOUSSE, (percer, 'to pierce, and mousse, 'moss,') Polytrichum.

PERCE-MURAILLE, (percer, 'to pierce, and muraille, 'a wall,') Parietaria.

PERCE-PIERRE, (percer, 'to pierce, and pierre, 'a stone,') Cithrum maritimum.

PERCEP'TA, (percipere, perceptum, (per, and capio,) 'to perceive, 'receive,') A word used by some writers on hygiene to indicate, in a general manner, the effects of the nervous action on the animal economy: in other words, the sensations, the functions of the mind, and their deterioration or privation.

PERCEPTIBILITY, see Sensibility.

PERCEPTION, Perceptio. The appreciation which the brain has of an impression made upon an organ of sense.

PERCEPTIVITY. The power of perception.

PERCOLATIO, (percolare, percolatum, (per, and colare, 'to strain through.')) Filtration, Percolation.

PERCOLATION, Percolatio. The terms percolation and displacement are applied, in pharmacy, to an operation of filtration, which consists in placing any substance, the virtues of which have to be extracted by a menstruum, in a funnel-shaped instrument, having a septum perforated with holes, or its tube stuffed with cotton or tow, and pouring fresh portions of the menstruum upon it until all its virtues have been extracted. The operation is used in the formation of certain infusions, extracts, tinctures, &c. See Ph. U. S. 1863.

An instrument used for this purpose is called a displacer or percolator.

PERCOLATOR, see Percolation.

PERCUSS'. Percutere, (per, and quere, 'to strike,') (F.) Percuter, Frapper. To strike upon, with the view of appreciating the resulting sound. To practise percussion.

PERCUS'ION, Epicrousis, Percussio. When immediate or direct percussion is made on the chest or abdomen, the more or less perfect resonance is an index of the state of the contained organs; and the physician is thus aided in his diagnosis. For this purpose the part may be struck with the fingers, gathered into a bundle, and their tips placed upon a level. It is better, however, to employ mediate percussion, which consists in interposing, between the point of the fingers and the part, the finger of the other hand, or a pleximeter, and striking this instead of the naked chest.

PERCUSSION, AUSCULTATORY, see Acouphonia.

PERCUTER, Percuss.

PERCUTEUR COURBE À MARTEAU (F.), ('curved hammer percussor.') An instrument used by Baron Heurteloup in the operation of lithotomy, in which a hammer is employed instead of a screw, to force together the blades of the instrument on the foreign body.

PERDONIUM. A medicated wine of herbs.

PERETERIUM, (περητηριου, from περαιω, 'to bore,') Trepan.

PERETORIUM, Trepan.

PERFORANS, (perforare, (per, and forare,) 'to bore through.') A name given to different muscles, whose tendons pass through intervals between the fibres or tendons of other muscles; hence called perforated. See Flexor Longus Digitorum, &c. Under the name Perforating Arteries, are included, 1. In the hand—arterial branches, given off by the profound palmar arch, which traverse the muscles and interosseous spaces. 2. In the thigh—three or four arteries, furnished by the profunda, which pass through the openings of the abductor magnus. 3. In the foot—the anterior and superior branches of the plantar arch.

PERFORANS CASSERII, see Cutaneous—p. Manus, Flexor profundus perforans—p. Profundus, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERFORATED SPOT, Locus perforatus.

PERFORATING ARTERIES, see Perforans.

PERFORATIO, Perforation—p. Cranii, see

Perforator—p. Intestinorum, Enterobrosis—p. Ventriculi, Gastrobrosis.

PERFORATION, Perforatio, (perforare, perforatum, 'to bore through,') Anatresis, Diatresis. An accidental opening in the continuity of organs, either from an external or internal cause.

PERFORATION, Paraentesis—p. de Æstomac,

Gastrobrosis—p. des Intestins, Enterobrosis—p. Uteri, Uterus, rupture of the.

PERFORATOR, Perforatorium, (F.) Percecrane. An instrument for opening the head of the fœtus in utero, when it is necessary to diminish its size. The operation is called Cephalotomia, Perforatio cranii. The Perforator, most commonly used, is Smellie's Scissors, which present a spear point when the handles are closed; with cutting edges at the sides and exterior, which act when the handles are separated.

PERFORATORIUM, Perforator.

PERFORATUS, (F.) Perforé. That which is pierced. Anatomists have given this name to muscles whose fibres or tendons separate to suffer other parts to pass through them. Such are the Flexor brevis digitorum pedis, F. sublimis perforatus, and Coracobrachialis. Also, to parts that are perforated for any purpose—as the substantia perforata of the brain.

PERFORATUS CASSERII, Coracobrachialis.

PERFORATIO, (per, and fricare, fricatum, 'to rub,') see Intraleptice.

PERFRIGATIO, Perfrigerium, Καταρρυξίς, Peripsyxis (perfrigere, perfrictum, (per, and frigere,) 'to shiver with cold.')

Considerable refrigeration. Great sense of cold:—shivering.

PERFRIGERATIO, see Rigor.

PERFRIGERIUM, Perfrictio.

PERFUSIO, (perfundere, perfusum, (from per, and fundere,) 'to pour over,')

Fomentation—p. Frigida, see Afusio.

PERI, περι, 'about, on all sides, round about, 'also, an augmentative prefix.

PERIÆRESIS, (peri, and αρω, 'I take away,') A sort of circular incision, which the ancients made in the neighbourhood of large abscesses. The periaeresis is now only practised in some cases of tumours.

PERIALGIA, (peri, and αλγος, 'pain,') A very violent pain.

PERIAMMA, gen. Periammatis, (περιμμα, from περι, and απτειν, 'to hang,') Amuletum.

PERIANAL, (peri, and ανος,) Periproctico.

PERIAPTON, (περιαπτος, 'hung around,') Amuletum.

PERIARTERITIS, (from peri, and arteriitis, 'inflammation of an artery,') Inflammation of the sheath of an artery.

PERIBLAST, Periplast, (F.) Périlaste, (peri, and βλαστος, 'a germ,') The amorphous matter, which surrounds the endoblast, endoplast, (F.) Endoblaste or cell nucleus, and undergoes segmentation.

PERIBLEMA, gen. Periblemmatis, (περιβλημα, from peri, and βαλλω, 'to throw,') Catablemma.

PERIBLEP'SIS, (περιβλεψις, from peri, and βλεπω, 'I look,') The wild look that accompanies delirium.

PERIBOLĒ, (περιβολη, from peri, and βαλλω, 'to throw,') The dress of a person. The pericardium. Also, the translation of morbid matters towards the surface of the body.

PERIBROSIS, (περιβρωσις, (peri, and βρωσκω, 'I eat,') 'I eat around.')

Ulceration or erosion at the corners of the eyelids.

PERICECAL, Pericecalis, (peri, and cœcum,). That which surrounds the cœcum, hence 'pericecal abscess, 'pericardial

PERICARDIAC, Pericardiac, Pericardial, Pericardiacus, Pericardicus, (F.) Péricardique.

Relating to the pericardium,—as 'pericardial murmur, 'pericardial effusion, 'pericardial arteries, veins, ' &c. &c.

PERICARDIAL, Pericardiac.

PERICARDIQUE, Pericardium.

PERICARDITIS, (pericardium, and itis,) Inflammatio seu Pleuritis pericardii, Carditis extèrna seu serosa seu membranaea, Erocarditis, Inflammatio of the pericardium, (F.) Péricardite,

Inflammation du Péricarde. This is probably the proper appellation for most of those cases which have received the names Carditis, Cardiopericarditis, Cardopericarditis, and Cardiopericarditis. Along with signs of pyrexia, the local symptoms resemble those of pneumonia. Those which point out that the pericardium is the seat of disease, are the following:—pain, referred to the region of the heart, or the scrobiculus cordis,—sometimes pungent, at others, dull and heavy: palpitation, accompanied with spasmodic twitchings in the neighbourhood of the heart, shooting up to the left shoulder; pulsation, and sometimes soreness of the carotids, with tinnitus aurium and vertigo: the breathing is by catches; dyspnoea considerable; pulse jarring, jerking, peculiar; the tongue white, covered with a mucous coat, and the skin often bathed in sweat, as in acute rheumatism. The physical signs during the first period are as follows. The action of the heart is generally evident to the eye, and may be felt by the hand. There is soreness to the touch over the intercostal spaces, and over a small surface in the epigastric region, when the pressure is directed upwards towards the pericardium. Percussion is usually natural, but at times there is dullness. On auscultation, the cardiac movements are found to be frequent, abrupt, jerking, and tumultuous; often irregular and intermittent. The pulse presents corresponding characters. When effusion of lymph has occurred, percussion may be negative, or be but slightly affected. On auscultation, in addition to the preceding signs, there may be one or more of the rubbing or friction sounds resembling the rustling of parchment, or of a sawing or rasping character. In some cases, the sound is like the creaking of new leather. This has been supposed to be pathognomonic of effused lymph. The most important point in the pathology of pericarditis is its connexion with acute rheumatism; and it forms one of the most dangerous occurrences in the latter disease. It may be acute or chronic: in either case, it is, of course, formidable. The most active depletion must be used; with large doses of opium, counterirritants, and all the means required in the most violent internal inflammations.

PERICARDITIS EXSUDATORIA SANGUIOLENTA, Hæmopericardium.

PERICARDIUM, Pericardion, (peri, and καρδία, 'heart.') Peribolê, Membra'na Cor circumplex'a, Involucrum seu Ar'cula seu Cap'sa seu Cap'sula seu Cam'era seu Indumentum seu Panniculus seu Membra'na seu The'ca seu Sac'cus seu Sac'culus seu Ser'otum seu Vagi'na seu Vesi'ca seu Ar'ca seu Thalamus regalis seu Amphites'ma seu Bur'sa Cor'dis, Sac or Cap'sule of the Heart, (F.) Péricarde. The pericardium is a membranous sac, which envelops the heart, and the arterial and venous trunks that pass from or into it. It is seated in the separation of the mediastinum, above the central aponeurosis of the diaphragm, to which it strongly adheres. Its shape is triangular, like that of the heart, to which it is fitted. The pericardium is composed of two membranes:—the one—external—fibrous; the other—internal—serous. The latter, having lined the inner surface of the external layer, is reflected over the heart, and covers it entirely; (Epicar'dium, (F.) Épicarde), without, however, having the heart within it; in which arrangement it resembles other serous membranes. The pericardium envelops the heart; retains it in position, and facilitates its movements by means of the serous fluid contained in its cavity—Cor'rum pericar'dii—and secreted by the membrane—Liq'vor seu Aqua seu Hu'mor seu Lym'phi seu Uri'na Pericar'dii, Hydrocar'dia, which it contains in greater or less quantity.

The arteries of the pericardium are small, and derived from the superior phrenic, anterior mediastinal and bronchial. The veins accompany them, and open into the brachiocephalic. No nerves have been traced to it. The lymphatics enter the lymphatic glands that surround the vena cava superior.

PERICARDIUM, (περικαρτιον, from peri, and καρπος, 'fruit,') Epicardium.

PERICHOLIA, (peri, and χολη, 'bile,') Poly-cholia.

PERICHONDRI'TIS, Inflamma'tio perichon'drii, (perichondrium, and itis.) Inflammation of the perichondrium: hence Perichondri'tis larynge'a; inflammation of the perichondrium covering the larynx.

PERICHON'DRIUM, (F.) Périchondre, (peri, and χωνδρος, 'a cartilage,') A membrane of a fibrous nature, which covers cartilages that are nonarticular, and bears considerable analogy to the periosteum in organization and uses.

PERICHRISIS, (περιχρησις, from peri, and χρω, 'to anoint,') Circumlitio, Liniment.

PERICHRISTON, Circumlitio, Liniment.

PERIC'LASIS, (περικλασις), (peri, and κλαω, 'I break,') A comminuted fracture, with denudation of the bone.

PERICLYMENUM, (περικλυμενον), Lonicera periclymenum—p. Vulgare, Lonicera periclymenum.

PERICNE'MIA, (peri, and κνημη, 'the leg,') The parts surrounding the tibia:—the tibia itself.

PERICOLONI'TIS, Pericolit'is, (peri, and colonitis.) Inflammation of the areolar tissue surrounding the colon.

PERICOLPI'TIS, (peri, κολπος, 'vagina,') and itis.) Inflammation of the areolar tissue surrounding the vagina.

PERICRANIEDE'MA, gen. Pericraniede'matis, (pericranium, and οδημα, 'a swelling,') Œdema of the head, owing to fluid effused under the pericranium.

PERICRANIUM, Pericranion, Pericrania, (F.) Péricane, (peri, and κρανιον, 'the cranium,') The periosteum, which covers the cranium externally.

PERICYSTI'TIS, (peri, and cystitis.) Inflammation of the areolar tissue separating the bladder from the neighbouring parts.

PERIDER'IA, (peri, and ερα, 'the neck,') Twisting of the cord round the neck of the child.

PERIDES'MIC, Perides'micus, (F.) Perides'mique, (peri, and εσμος, 'a ligament,') Some nosologists have given this name to ischuria caused by a ligature round the penis or by stricture of the urethra.

PERIDES'MIUM. The delicate areolar tissue covering a ligament.

PERIDIASTOLE, see Diastole.

PERIDIDYME, (peri, and ιδώνμος, 'testicle,') See Testicle.

PERIDIDYMI'TIS, (F.) Pérididymite, (peri, ιδώνμος, 'testicle,') and itis.) Inflammation of the tunica albuginea testis.

PERID'ROMUS, (περιρόμος, from peri, and δρμος, 'a course,') The extreme circumference of the hairs of the head.

PERIGLOTIS, (peri, and γλωττα, 'tongue,') Epiglottic gland. See Tongue.

PERIG'RAPHË, (περιγραφη, (περι, and γραφω, 'I write,') 'circumscription,') The aponeurotic intersections of the rectus abdominis are so called.

PERIHEPATITIS, (peri, and hepatitis.) See Hepatitis.

PERILARYNGI'TIS, (peri, and laryngitis.) Inflammation of the areolar tissue surrounding the larynx, which not unfrequently ends in peri laryngeal abscess.

PERILYMPH, Cotunnii, liquor of.
PERIMENINGITIS, (peri, and meningitis.) Pachymeningitis.

PERIMENIX, (peri, and μυγξ, 'a membrane.') Dura mater.

PERIMYELIS, (peri, and μυελος, 'marrow.') Medullary membrane.

PERIMYELITIS, (peri, and myelitis.) Meningitis, spinal.

PERIMYS'IUM, Fascia, (peri, and μυς, 'a muscle.') The areolar membrane or sheath—vagina muscularis—that surrounds a muscle, or its fasciculi. The sheath of the whole muscle is termed Perimysium exter'num; of the fasciculi, Perimysium inter'num.

PER'IN, Pe'ris, (πρην, πηρα, 'a sac or pouch.') With some this means the scrotum; with others, the testicle; with others, the vagina; with others, the peritoneum; and with others, the anus.

PERINEOCELE, (perineum, and κηλη, 'rupture.') Hernia, perineal.

PERINEORRHAPH'IA, Perineor'rhapsy, (perineum, and ρρηξ, 'suture.') Suture of the perineum, (F.) Suture du Périnée, in cases of laceration of the same.

PERINE'UM, (πρην, γεν, πρηνος, 'the scrotum [?].') Interfemin'eum, Interfemin'eum, Interfemin'i'um, Interfem'ina, I'ter femin'eum, Pe'ris, Pe'rin, Perine'um, Gressu'ra, Pl'e'chas, Am'phiplex, Mesos'celon, Mesos'celus, Perine'on, Perine'os, Perine'os, Tra'mē, Tra'mis, Tau'rus, Interforamine'um, Coch'o'nē, Pl'e'chos, Mesome'zion, Pe'men, Re'gio, Perine'i, (F.) Périnée. The space at the inferior region of the trunk, between the ischiatic tuberosities, anus, and genital organs. It is smaller in the female than in the male; has a triangular shape, and is divided into two equal parts by a median line called Ra'phē. It is occasionally ruptured in labour. At times it has been made to extend posteriorly as far as the os coccygis. The part between the pudendum and anus is sometimes called anterior perine'um, to distinguish it from that which extends from the anus to the coccyx, called posterior perine'um.

PERINEAL, Perine'us, Perinea'lis, Perinea'lis. That which relates or belongs to the perineum, as Perineal artery, P. herna, &c.

PERINEAL APONEUROSIS, P. Fascia.
PERINEAL ARTERY, Arteria perinea'lis, Superficia'lis artery of the Perine'um. A branch of the internal pudic distributed to the perineum.

PERINEAL CUTANEOUS NERVE, See Sciatic nerve, lesser.

PERINEAL FAS'CIA, Fascia perine'i, Perine'al aponeuro'sis. The fasciæ,—superficial and deep-seated,—Perine'al lig'ament—Camp'per's lig'ament, Triangular lig'ament,—which belong to the perineum.

PERINEAL FOS'SA, Fos'sa perine'i, Ischioarectal fossa. A conical fossa, the base of which corresponds with the skin; is formed anteriorly by the transversus perinæi muscle; behind, by the inferior border of the glutæus maximus; internally, by the levator ani; and externally, by the tuber ischii. It is filled up with fat and fibrous striae.

PERINEAL ISCHU'RIA, Ischu'ria Perinea'lis. A name given by Sauvages to retention of urine, caused by a tumour seated in the perineum.

PERINEAL LIGAMENT, see P. fascia.

PERINEAL NERVE. A branch of the internal pudic; which is mainly distributed to the perineum and scrotum of the male, and to the vulva and perineum of the female.

PERINEAL REGION, Perine'um.

PERINEAL SEC'TION, Sec'tio perinea'lis. An incision into the perineum for the cure of stricture of the urethra.

PÉRINÉE, Perine'um.

PERINEORRHAPHY, Perineor'rapsy.
PERINEPHRITIS, (F.) Phlegmon périté- phrétique, (peri, and nephritis.) Inflammation of the external areolar and fibrous membranes of the kidney, or of their investing adipose areolar tissue.

PERINEPHRUS, (peri, and νεφρος, 'kidney.')

See Kidney.
PERINEURION, (peri, and νευρον, 'a nerve.')

Neurilemma.

PÉRINÉVRE, Neurilemma.
PERINYC'TIDES, (peri, and νυξ, gen. νυκτος, 'night.')

An eruption appearing at night and disappearing by day.
PERIOD, (περιόδος), Peri'odus, Periode'ia, Periodeu'sis, Sta'dium, Circu'itus, (F.) Période, (peri, and όδος, 'way.')

Cir'cuit. Periods are the different phases or revolutions of a disease; or the epochs which are distinguishable in the course of it. Three periods are commonly enumerated. 1. The augmentation, increase, or progress, (Increment'um;) 2. The ac'mē or height, (F.) État, (Sta'tus;) and 3. The declive, (Decrement'um.) Some authors reckon only the invasion and termination.

Period is sometimes used in describing an intermittent, for the time between the commencement of a paroxysm and that of the next, including the fit as well as interval.

PERIODS, MONTHLY, Menses.
PERIODEIA, (περιόδια) Period.

PERIODEUSIS, Period.

PERIODEUTES, (περιόδευτης, from peri, and όδευω, 'to travel.')

Charlatan.

PERIODIC'ITY, Periodic'itas, Rhythm, (F.)

Périodicité. The aptitude of certain physiological or pathological phenomena, in health or disease, to recur at particular periods, after longer or shorter intervals, during which they cease completely. Diseases thus recurring are called periodical or rhythmical.—Τυπο'ες.

PERIODOL'OGY, Periodolog'ia, (period, όδος, 'period,' and λογος, 'a discourse.')

The doctrine of periodicity in health and disease.
PERIODONTITIS, (F.) Périodontite, Inflammation de la Membrane alvéolo-dentaire, (peri, όδους, gen. οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and itis.) Inflammation of the membrane that lines the socket of a tooth.

PERIODONTITIS GINGIVARUM, Ulitis.

PERIODOSCOPÉ, (period, and σκοπεω, 'I view.')

An instrument, proposed by Dr. Tyler Smith, for the ready calculation of the periodical functions of the sex. It consists of a movable circular dial, upon which the months and days are engraved, fixed on a pivot in the centre of a large plate on which are numbered the different conditions of the reproductive system, as conception, abortion, premature labour, hemorrhage, labour, &c. By a knowledge of the date of conception, say November 14th, and fixing the movable plate opposite the point on the fixed plate which indicates conception, the observer is enabled at once to see that, allowing 280 days for gestation, labour may be expected about the 20th of August. The dial is made of card-board, and is affixed to a small volume, in which its uses and applications are explained.

PERIODUS LUNARIS, 'a lunar period.' See Menses—p. Morbi, Type—p. Sanguinis, Circulation.

PERIODYN'IA, (peri, and όδυνη, 'pain.')

A violent and extensive pain.

PERION, (peri, and ων, 'ovum.')

Decidua.
PERIORBITA, Periosteum or'bitæ, (F.) Péri-orbite, (peri, and orbita, 'the orbit.')

An appellation used by some for the periosteum lining the orbit, which is a continuation of the dura mater. The inflammation of this periosteum is termed

Periorbitis or Periorbititis, and Inflammati'o periorbitæ or orbitæ.

PERIORBITIS, (periorbita, and itis.) See Periorbita.

PERIORBITITIS, see Periorbita.

PERIOSTEITIS, Periostitis.

PERIOSTEOPHYTE, (periosteum, and φω, 'I grow.') An osseous formation, commencing in the periosteum.

PERIOSTEOTOMY, Periosteotomia, (periosteum, and τομή, 'incision.') The operation of dividing the periosteum.

PERIOSTEUM, (περιοστέον.) Periosteon, Periosteos, Periostium, Circumossal'e, Membra'na ossis, Omen'tum ossium, Circumossalis Membra'na, (F.) Périoste, (peri, and οστέον, 'a bone.') The periosteum is a fibrous, white, resisting medium, which surrounds the bones every where, except the teeth at their coronæ, and the parts of bones that are covered with cartilage. The external surface is united in a more or less intimate manner to the neighbouring parts by areolar tissue. Its inner surface covers the bone, whose depressions it accurately follows. It is united to the bone by small, fibrous prolongations; and especially by a prodigious quantity of vessels, which penetrate their substance. The periosteum unites the bones to the neighbouring parts. It assists in their growth, either by furnishing, at its inner surface, as M. Béclard demonstrated, an albuminous exudation, which becomes cartilaginous, and at length ossifies;—or by supporting the vessels which penetrate them to carry the materials of their nutrition. See Medullary membrane.

PERIOSTEUM INTERNUM, Medullary membrane—p. Orbitæ, Periorbita.

PERIOS'TIC, Periosticus, (F.) Périostique. Relating or appertaining to the periosteum, or to parts surrounding a bone.

PERIOSTI'TIS, Periosteitis, Inflammati'o periorbitæ, (periosteum, and itis.) Inflammation of the periosteum.

PERIOS'TOMEDULLI'TIS, (F.) Périostomé-dullite, (periosteum, medulla, 'marrow,' and itis.) Simultaneous inflammation of the periosteum and medulla spinalis.

PERIOS'TO'SIS, (peri, osteon, and osis), (F.) Périostose. Tumour of the periosteum. Tumours are so called which are developed on bones, and formed by their outer membrane. These tumours are more rapidly developed, have a less degree of consistence, and sooner disperse than exostoses, which they resemble greatly.

PERIOSTOSTEITIS, (F.) Périostostéite, (periosteum, οστέον, 'a bone,' and itis.) Simultaneous inflammation of the periosteum and bone.

PERIPHACUS, (peri, and φακος, 'lens.') See Crystalline.

PERIPHERAL, see Peripheral aspect.

PERIPHERAL, Peripheric or Periph'eric, Periph'ericul, (peri, and φέρω, 'I bear.') Relating or appertaining to the periphery or circumference.

PERIPHERAL AS'PECT. An aspect towards the circumference of an organ. Periph'erad is used adverbially to signify 'towards the peripheral aspect.'

PERIPHERAL VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

PERIPHIMOSIS, Paraphimosis.

PERIPHLEBITIS, (peri, and phlebitis, 'inflammation of a vein.') Inflammation of the sheath of a vein.

PERIPLAST, (peri, and πλάσσω, 'to form,') Periblast.

PERIPLEUMONIA. (περιπνευμονία.) Peripneumonia.

PERIPLEURITIS, (peri, and pleuritis.) Inflammation of the subserous areolar tissue of the costal pleura.

PERIPLCOA INDICA, (peri, and πλεω, 'to twine,') Hemidesmus Indicus—p. Mauritiana, Scammony, Bourbon.

PERIPLYSIS, (περιπλυσίς, from peri, and πλυσίς, 'the act of washing,') Profluvium. A copious discharge from any part, especially from the bowels.

PERIPNEUMONIA, Peripneumonia, Peripneumonitis, True peripneumony, (περιπνευμονία, from peri, and πνευμων, 'the lung,') Inflammation of the substance of the lungs. See Pneumonia.

PERIPNEUMONIA BILIOSA. Inflammation of the lungs, accompanied with bilious fever.

PERIPNEUMONIA CATARRHALIS. Bronchitis or pulmonary catarrh, with pain in some part of the chest. Peripneumonia notha.

PERIPNEUMONIA NÓTHA, P. spuria seu pituitosa seu catarrhalis, Pneumonia notha, Pseudoperipneumonia, Pseudoperipneumonia, Pseudoperipneumonitis, Bronchoacé, Blennorrhæax, Obstructio pulmonum pituitosa febrilis, Bronchitis asthenica, False or Bastard Peripneumony, (F.) Péri-pneumonie bâtarde ou fausse, Fausse pneumonie. An inexact name, under which some affections are comprised that resemble pneumonia; and, especially chronic bronchitis with pleurodynia. See Bronchitis (chronic).

PERIPNEUMONIA PITUITOSA, P. notha.

PERIPNEUMONITIS, Peripneumonia.

PERIPNEUMONY, Pneumonia—p. Bastard, Peripneumonia notha.

PERIPNEUMONY, LA'TENT. Peripneumony whose symptoms are so obscure as to be recognized with difficulty.

PERIPROC'TIC, Periprocticus, (F.) Périproctique, (peri, and πρωκτος, 'anus,') Applied to organs or lesions around the anus.

PERIPROCTITIS, (peri, πρωκτος, 'the anus,' and itis.) Inflammation of the areolar tissue surrounding the rectum.

PERIPSYXIS, (περιψύξις, from peri, and ψύχω, 'to become cold,') Catapsyxis, Perifricio.

PERIPYEMA, (περιπύημα, from peri, and πυον, 'pus,') Suppuration around an organ;—a tooth for example.

PERIRRHŒ'A, Perirrhoë, (περρῆοια, from peri, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') Afflux of fluids from every point of the body towards an organ which has to remove them from the economy. Also, enuresis.

PERIS, (περις.) Perin.

PERISCELIS, (peri, and σκελος, 'leg,') Jarretière.

PERISCYPHISMUS, Periscythismus.

PERISCYTHIS'MUS, (περισκυθισμος), Periscythisis, Periscythismus, Periscythisis, Periscyphismus, Scalp'ing, (περισκυθισμος, from peri, and Σκυθης, 'a Scythian,' that is, 'scalping after the manner of the Scythians,') An operation described by Paulus of Ægina. It consisted of an incision made around the cranium, and was employed in habitual weakness of the eyes, pains of the head, &c.

PERISPIAL'SIS, Circumductio, (from peri, and σπάλλω, 'I move,') A circular motion impressed on a luxated bone for the purpose of reducing it.

PERISPLENITIS, (peri, and splenitis), see Splenitis.

PERISSODACTYLUS, (περισσος, 'superabundant,' and δακτυλος, 'finger,') Polydactylus.

PERISTALTIC, Peristalticus, (περισταλτικός, from peri, and σπάλλω, 'to contract,') (F.) Péristaltique. Relating or appertaining to peristole,—as 'peristaltic action.' See Systaltic.

PERISTAPHYLINUS EXTERNUS, (peri, and σταφυλη, υψίλη,) Circumflexus musculus—p.

Inferior, Circumflexus musculus—p. Internus, Levator palati.

PERISTERA ANCEPS, (περιστερα, 'a pigeon,') Pelargonium anceps.

PERISTERIUM, (περιστεριον,) Verbena officinalis.

PERISTER'NA, (peri, and στερον, 'the sternum,') The lateral parts of the chest.

PERIS'TOLĒ, (περιστολη,) Motus Peristalticus seu compressorius seu vermicularis seu testudinens, (from peri, and στελλω, 'to contract,') The peristaltic action of the intestines, Motus peristalticus, (F.) Mouvement ou Action péristaltique. It consists of a kind of undulation or vermicular movement, in appearance irregular, but in which the circular fibres of the muscular membrane of the intestine contract successively, from above downwards, in proportion as the chyme advances in the alimentary canal; so that, being compressed above, it is pushed into the next portion of the intestine, whose fibres are in a state of relaxation. When the fibres contract inversely, they occasion an antiperistaltic action. The peristaltic action is involuntary, and is not under the immediate influence of either brain or spinal marrow. It continues for some time after death.

PERISTOMIUM, (περιστομον, from peri, and στομα, 'mouth,') see Mouth.

PERISTROMA, gen. Peristro'matis, Muscus villulosus, Crus'ta membrana'cea seu vermicularis, (περιστρομα, 'a coverlet, from peri, and σπινωωμι, 'to spread,') The villous or mucous coat of the intestines.

PERISYS'TOLĒ, (peri, and συστολη, 'contraction,') The interval that exists between the systole and diastole of the heart, which is only perceptible in the dying.

PERITERION, (peri, and τερειν, terere, 'to rub, to drill,') Trépan perforatif.

PERITESTIS, (peri, and testis,) Albuginea.

PÉRITOINE, Peritonæum.

PERITOME, (περιτομη, from peri, and τεμνω, 'to cut,') Circumcision.

PERITONÆREN'IS, Peritonæorex'is, (peritonæum, and ρηγνυμι, 'to break out,') Hernia formed by the rupture of the peritonæum.

PERITONÆ'UM, (περιτοναιον, peritonæon, peritonæum, Peritonæ'ion, Peritonæ'om, Peritonæ'os, Periton'ion, Peritonæ'os, Velamen'tum abdominal'e, Tu'nica præ'ten'sa seu Operimentum præ'ten'sum seu Membrana abdominal'is, Pa'gos, Siphac, Sy'phac, Zé'pach, Zi'phac, (F.) Péritoine, (peri, and τενω, 'I stretch,') A serous membrane, which lines the abdominal cavity, Peritonæum parietal'e, extends over the greater part of the organs contained there, Peritonæum intestinal'e seu visceral'e, envelops them wholly or in part, and maintains their respective relations by means of different prolongations and ligamentous folds:—the mesentery, epiploon, mesocolon, &c. Like all the serous membranes, the peritonæum, except in the female, is a sort of sac without aperture, which covers the abdominal organs, without containing them within it, and the internal surface of which is smooth, and lubricated by a serous fluid. In the male fœtus, the peritonæum furnishes a prolongation, which accompanies the testicle at the time of its descent, and, in the female fœtus, forms the Canal of Nuck. Below the neck of the gall-bladder, the peritonæum has a triangular opening, called the Foramen or Hid'rus of Win'slow, through which it proceeds behind the stomach, to form a sort of secondary cavity, called the posterior cavity of the peritonæum, (F.) Arrière cavité péritonéale ou Cavité des Épiploons.

PERITONÆUM DUPLICATUM, Epiploon, gastro-epiploic.

PERITONÆ'AL, Peritonæ'us, (F.) Péritonéal.

That which appertains or relates to the peritonæum.

PÉRITONITE, Peritonitis—p. Puerpérale, see Peritonitis.

PERITONITIS, Empres'ma seu Caum'a Peritonit'is, Peritonæ'itis, Inflammat'io seu Phleg'monë Peritonæ'i, Phlegmæ'sia or Inflammat'io of the Peritonæ'um, (peritonæum, and itis), (F.) Péritonite, Inflammat'ion du Péritoine. The characteristic signs of acute inflammation of the peritonæum are,—violent pain in the abdomen, increased by the slightest pressure, often by the simple weight of the bed-clothes. It generally occurs in the parturient state, Lochoperitonit'is, and begins on the second or third day after delivery. At times, a malignant epidemic, and perhaps contagious, variety has made its appearance, and destroyed numbers of females. This has been described under the name Puerperal Fever, Metropéritonit'is, Enc'cia Syn'ochus Puerperarum, Erythemat'ic or Nonplastic Puerperal Peritonit'is, Typhohæmic Peritonit'is, (F.) Péritonite puerpérale, Métropéritonite puerpérale, Fèvre puerpérale, Typhus puerpérale, Adynam'ic or Malignant Puerperal Fever, Low Fever of Child'bed. It is, according to some, a malignant inflammation of the peritonæum and uterus; according to others, a Uterine Phlebit'is. In any form it requires active treatment, early employed. The appearances on dissection are such as occur whenever a serous membrane has been inflamed, and such inflammation has produced death:—effusion of fluid with flakes of coagulable lymph in it; appearances of vascularity, &c., in the membrane. The treatment—in active peritonitis—must consist of the same course as recommended under Enteritis. In the chronic kind, symptoms must be combated as they arise, and it may be advisable to excite a new action in the system by means of mercury. In the epidemic and malignant variety, unless bleeding be freely employed at the very outset, it does harm. If used early, it may be of decided advantage. Everything depends upon arresting the morbid process at the outset.

PERITONITIS, ERYTHEMATIC, see Peritonitis—p. Hepatic, see Hepatitis—p. Nonplastic, see Peritonitis—p. Puerperal, see Peritonitis—p. Typhohæmic, see Peritonitis.

PERITOMA, (περιτομα, from περισσος, 'over and above,') Excrement.

PERITYPHLITIS, (F.) Pérityphlite, (peri, and typhlitis, 'inflammation of the cæcum,') Inflammation of the areolar substance surrounding the cæcum. See Typhloenteritis.

PERIÜTERINE, Periüterin'us, (F.) Périütérin, (peri, and uterns,) That which is situated around the uterus; hence "periüterine inflammation" or "periüterine phlegmon,"—inflammation of the areolar tissue around the uterus.

PERIWINKLE, LESSER, ([L.] perivincæ, [Sax.] pejuncce), Vinca minor.

PERIZOMA, gen. Perizo'matis, (περιζωμα, from peri, and ζωννυμι, 'to gird,') A bandage; a girdle. In Fabricius Hildanus, a truss. Herpes zoster. The diaphragm.

PERKINISM. A therapeutical means, first employed by Dr. Elisha Perkins, of Norwich, Connecticut, towards the termination of the last century, and named after him. It consisted in drawing over affected or other parts the pointed extremities of two metallic rods, called Metallic Tractors, each made of a different metal. The success obtained was through the influence of the imagination; and, consequently, as a remedial agent, it ranks as high as animal magnetism, but no higher. The operation was, also, called Tractora'tion.

PERKINIST. A believer in, and practiser of, Perkinism.

PERKINIS'TIC. Relating or belonging to Perkinism.

PERLA, Pearl, Paralampsis.

PERLE. Pearl.

PERMISSUS, (permittere, permissum, from per, and mittere, 'to suffer to pass through,') Licentiate.

PERMISTIO, (per, and miscere, mistum or mixtum, 'to mix,') Coition.

PERMIXTIO, Coition.

PERMOTIO, (per, and movere, motum, 'to move,') Motion.

PERNICIEUX, Deleterious.

PERNICIOSUS, (per, and neco, 'to destroy,') Deleterious.

PERNIO, Chilblain.

PERNOCTATIO, (per, and nox, gen. noctis, 'night,') Insomnia.

PERO, (πηρος, 'deficient,') in composition, deficient.

PEROCEPH'ALUS, (pero, and κεφαλη, 'head,') A monster with a defective head.

PEROCORMUS, (pero, and κορμος, 'trunk,') A malformation in which the trunk is defective, and too short, from the absence of one or more vertebrae.—the head and limbs being normal.

PERODACTYLEUS, (peroue, and δακτυλος, 'a finger or toe,') Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERODYN'IA, (πρηρα, 'a sac, stomach,') and οδυνη, 'pain,') see Cardialgia.

PEROMEL'IA, (pero, and μελος, 'a limb,') Congenital misconstruction, or mutilation of the limbs. A genus in the nosology of Good.

PEROM'ELUS. A monster possessed of the deformity mentioned above.

PERONE, (περονη, from πειρω, 'to transfix,') Fibula.

PERONÉ. Fibula—p. Col du, Collum fibulae.

PERON'AL, Peronæus, Fibular'ia, Fib'ular, (F.) Péronier, (from perone.) Belonging or relating to the fibula.

PERONEAL AR'TERY, Fib'ular, A., arises from the popliteal, and is situate deeply in the posterior and outer part of the leg. It gives off branches of little importance. Near the outer ankle, it divides into two branches. 1. The posterior peroneal, which descends behind the lower joint of the fibula, on the outer surface of the calcaneum. 2. The anterior peroneal, which crosses the inferior extremity of the interosseous ligament, to be distributed on the dorsal surface of the foot.

PERONEAL MUS'LES are three in number. 1. Peronæus Brevis seu Secundus seu Anticus seu Medius, Sem'ifibularis, (F.) Grand-péronéo-sus-métatarsien, Court péronéo-latéral, Moyen Péronier. A muscle, situate beneath the peronæus longus. It is attached, above, to the outer surface of the fibula, and terminates, below, at the posterior extremity of the 5th metatarsal bone, after having been reflected beneath the malleolus externus. It extends the foot upon the leg, at the same time raising a little the outer edge. It may, also, act upon the leg, and extend it upon the foot. 2. Peronæus Longus seu primus seu posticus seu max'imus seu posterior, (F.) Tibi-péronéo-tarsien, Long péronier latéral, Péronéo-sus-tarsien, (Ch.) Muscle grand péronier. This muscle is situate at the outer part of the leg. It is long, thick, and triangular above; thin, narrow, and flat below. It is attached above to the outer edge of the upper extremity of the fibula, and to the upper third of the outer surface of that bone. Below, it terminates at the outer part of the posterior extremity of the first metatarsal bone. This muscle extends the foot on the leg, turning its point outward, and raising its outer edge. It acts, also, upon the leg, which it extends on the foot. 3. Peronæus Tertius, No'nus Vesal'ii, (F.) Péronier antérieur, Poit péronéo-sus-métatarsien (Ch.) Petit Péronier. A muscle, situate at the anterior, outer, and inferior part of the leg. It is long and flat, and is attached, above, to the inferior third of the anterior margin and inner surface of the fibula; terminating, below, at the posterior extremity of the 5th metatarsal bone. This muscle bends the foot on the leg, by raising its outer edge. It can, also, bend the leg on the foot.

PERONEAL NERVE, see Popliteal nerves.

PERONEAL VEIN follows the same course as the artery.

PERONEDACTYLUS, (perone, and δακτυλος, 'a finger or toe,') Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERONÉO-LATÉRAL COURT, Peronæus brevis—p. Phalangeien du gros orteil, Flexor longus pollicis pedis—p. Sous-phalangeien du pouce, Flexor longus pollicis pedis—*p. PERONODACTYL'ÆUS, (perone, and δακτυλος, 'a finger or toe,') Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PERONODACTYLUS, Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans.

PEROSOMUS, (pero, and σωμα, 'body,') A monster whose whole body is imperfectly developed.

PEROSPLANCH'NICA, (pero, and πλαγχων, 'a viscus,') Congenital misconstruction of the viscera. A genus in the nosology of Good.

PERPENDICULUM HEPATIS, (perpena'icum, 'a plumb line,') from per, and pendere, 'to hang,') Suspensory ligament of the liver.

PERPERACUTUS. 'Extremely acute.' An epithet applied to very violent and rapid diseases.

PERPLEXI MORBI, (per, and plexere, plexum, 'to interweave,') see Complication.

PERPLICAT'ION, Perplicatio, (per, and plico, plicatum, 'to fold,') A method of tying arteries, which consists in making a small incision in the side of the artery, near its bleeding orifice, introducing a small pair of forceps, seizing the open extremity, and drawing it backward, through the aperture made in the side of the vessel, so as to form a kind of knot.

PERROSIN, see Pinus abies.

PERRY, see Cider.

PERRY COUNTY WARM SPRINGS. These are in Pennsylvania, eleven miles from Carlisle, and fourteen from Harrisburg. Temperature 67°; impregnation not much. They are used for bathing.

PERSEA CAMFORA, (περσεα,) see Camphor—p. Cassia, Laurus cassia—p. Cinnamomum, Laurus cinnamomum—p. Cubeba, Piper cubeba.

PERSEA GRATIS'SIMA, Laurus Persea, Palta tree, Avocado or Alligator Pear. A slender, very high tree of Peru, with a small domelike top, which grows on the eastern declivity of the Andes, and rises, at times, to the height of more than 60 feet. Its fruit—(S.) Palta—which is pear-shaped, is generally much liked. It dissolves, like butter, on the tongue, and hence is called, in some of the French colonies, beurre végétale. The leaves are reckoned balsamic, pectoral, and vulnerary. The seeds are very astringent.

PERSEA PICHURIM, see Pichurim beans—p. Sassafras, Laurus sassafras.

PERSIAN FIRE, see Anthrax.

PERSICA VULGARIS, (Περσικός, 'Persian,') Amygdalus Persica.

PERSPECILLUM, (per, and specio, 'to behold,') see Spectacles.

PERSPIRABILE SANCTORIANUM, (after Sanctorius,) Perspiration.

PERSPIRATION, Perspira'tio, Transpira'tio, Diffusa'tio, Diap'noë, Diapnoë'a, Diapnoë'sis, Perspirabile Sanctoria'nium, (per, and spirare, spiratum, 'to breathe, exhale,') The insensible transpiration or exhalation continually going on at the surface of the skin and membranes. Sensible perspiration is called sweat. The perspiratory fluid is secreted by an appropriate glandular apparatus, termed by Breschet diapnoë'ensons, (F.) Appareil diapnoë'ne; the sudorip'arons glands, Glan'dule sudorip'ares, Organa sudorip'ara, sweat glands, consisting of a convoluted tube, situate beneath the true skin, and of spiral ducts, which open obliquely under the scales of the epidermis. A certain portion of the perspired fluid is thrown off by ordinary physical evaporation.

The Pulmonary exhalation or transpiration is that which takes place into the bronchia, and is sent out with the expired air.

PERSPIRATORY, Perspirato'rius, Transpirato'rius, Transpirato'rius, (F.) Perspiratoire, Transpiratoire. Relating or belonging to, or the product of, perspiration.

PERSTRICTION, (from perstringere, (per, and stringere, strictum), 'to bind,') see Hæmostasia.

PERSUDATIO, (per, and sudare, sudatum, 'to sweat,') Diapedesis.

PERSULTATIO, (per saltare, per saltatum, 'to leap through,' from per, and saltare, 'to leap,') Diapedesis.

PERTE, (from perdere, perditum, 'to lose,') Metrorrhagia—p. d'Appetit. Anorexia—p. de la Mémoire, Amnesia—p. de l'Odorat, Anosmia—p. de Sang, Hæmorrhagia—p. de la Voix, Phonia—p. de la Vue, Cæcitas.

PERTÉRÉBRANT, Pertérébrans, (per, and terebrare, 'to bore,') The French give this epithet to an acute pain—Douleur pertérébrante—which occasions a sensation like that which would be produced by an instrument penetrating and lacerating a part;—the pain from whitlow, for example.

PERTES BLANCHES, (pl. of perte.) Leucorrhœa—p. de Sang, Metrorrhagia—p. Séminales, Spermatorrhœa—p. Utérines, Metrorrhagia—p. Utérines blanches, Leucorrhœa—p. Utérines rouges, Metrorrhagia.

PERTICA PER SE, ('a pole,') Penis.

PERTRUSIO MUTUA, (per, and trudere, trusum, 'to thrust,') Endosmosis.

PERTURBATIONES ANIMI, (perurbare, perurbatum, (per and turbare,) 'to disturb greatly,') Affections of the mind.

PERTURBATRIX (Medici'na,) Perturbating treatment, (F.) Méthode ou Médecine perturbatrice; a mode of treatment in which very active means are employed, and such as impress upon diseases a different course from that natural to them. It is the antithesis to the Medicina expectans. Much evil has resulted from such treatment, especially in febrile diseases.

PERTUSS'AL, Pertussa'lis, Relating or appertaining to pertussis.

PERTUS'SIS, (per, and tussis, 'a cough,') 'a violent cough,' (F.) Tus'sis feri'na seu convulsi'va seu pu'eros strangulans seu quin'ta seu stomacha'lis seu an'hela clamo'sa seu strangulans seu delas'sans seu sifi'ficans seu amphemer'ina seu tussicu'losa seu spasmod'ica seu asin'na seu can'na, Bronch'itis convulsi'va, Bronchocephali'tis, Pneus'sis pertus'sis, Amphemer'ina, Orthopnoë'a tussicu'losa seu claug'osa seu suffocati'va seu clamo'sa seu spasmod'ica, Mor'bus cucull'us seu cuculla'ris, Cucul'bus, Bechorthopnoë'a, Bex convulsi'va seu therio'des, Hoopingcough, Whoopingcough, Chin'cough, King'cough, Kind'cough, (Germ. Kind, 'a child,') (Se.) Kink-host, (Prov.) Kinkhanst, (F.) Coqueluche, Catarrhe ou Bronchite convulsi'va, Toux convulsi've ou quin'tense ou blene, Maladie cucul'aire. A violent convulsive cough, returning by fits (F.) Quintes, at longer or shorter intervals; and consisting of several expirations, followed by a sonorous inspiration or whoop. The fits of coughing generally recur more frequently during the night, morning, and evening, than in the day. It is esteemed to be contagious, and attacks the young more particularly. It is rare for it to effect an individual for the second time. The duration is various,—six or eight weeks or more. Although the paroxysms are very violent, it is not a dangerous disease. It may, however, give rise to other affections, as convulsions, pneumonia, &c., when the complication is very dangerous, as the cause cannot be removed. Those children suffer the least, who evacuate the contents of the stomach during the fit. In the treatment, all that can be done is to palliate. It must be borne in mind, that the disease will, in time, wear itself out. If there be much tensive pain of the head, or fever, bleeding may be required, but it is seldom necessary. Nareotics occasionally afford relief, but it is temporary. Gentle emetics, given occasionally, when the paroxysms are long and dry, give decided relief, and aid in the expectoration of the morbid secretions. After the disease has continued for some weeks, and persists in part from habit, change of air is essential, and this, even should the change be to an atmosphere that is less pure.

PERU, see Lima.

PERUNCTIO, (per, and ungere, unctum, 'to anoint,') Unction.

PERVENCHIE, ([L.] pervinea,) Vinea minor.

PERVERSION, Perversio, (per, and vertere, versum, 'to turn,') Dias'trophè, Diastrem'ma. One of the four modifications of function in disease: the three others being augmentation, diminution, and abolition. The humorists used this term also to designate disorder or morbid change in the fluids.

PERVERSION DE LA TÊTE DES OS ET DES MUSCLES, Loxarthus.

PERVIGILIUM, (per, and vigilare, 'to watch,') Insomnia, Coma vigil.

PES, gen. Pe'dis, (πους, gen. podos,) Ich'nus, (Se.) Fit, (F.) Pied, 'the foot.' The inferior extremity of the abdominal member, representing a bony arch, an elastic vault, which transmits the weight of the body to the ground. It is divided into three parts;—the tarsus, metatarsus, and toes.

PÈSE-ACIDE, (peser, 'to weigh,' and acid), Acidometer—p. Liqueur, Areometer—p. Sirop, Saccharometer.

PESSETTE, Cicer arietinum.

PESSAIRE, Pessary—p. Intra-utérin, Pessary, intra-uterine.

PES'SARY, Pessa'rium, (from πῆσος, 'a small stone or other substance for playing at draughts; a pessary,') Pes'sus, Pes'sum, Pes'sulus, Penicillus, Tu'nis, Nod'ulus uterinus, Supposito'rium uterinum, Glass, Lenni'scus, (F.) Pessaire. A solid instrument, composed of cork, ivory, or elastic gum, which is introduced into the vagina to support the uterus, in cases of prolapsus or relaxation of that organ; to keep vaginal hernia reduced, &c. The ancients made use of medicated pes'saries, which they distinguished into emollient, astringent, aperient, &c., and they are still used. The form of pessaries is very variable;—round, oval, &c., according to fancy and circumstances.

PESSARY, EGYPTIAN, Ægyptius pessus.

PESSARY, INTRA-UTERINE, Stem pes'sary, (F.) Pessaire intra-utérin, Redresseur utérin. An instrument for rectifying uterine displacements—as anteversion and retroversion, consisting of a stem which is introduced into the uterus; this stem is attached to a flattened ovoid bulb or ball, on which the cervix uteri rests.—Connected with this is an external part or wire frame, which is attached, at one extremity, to a flat tubular portion, passing into the vagina, to be fixed to the intra-uterine portion. The wire frame is made to press upon the pubis, so that the pessary can be kept in position in utero. This is essentially the intra-uterine pessary of Professor Simpson of Edinburgh.

A modification of Prof. Simpson's instrument for rectifying malpositions of the uterus has been made by Dr. Sims, of New York. This consists in having a joint or hinge near enough the end to prevent its striking against the fundus uteri, and yet far enough to allow it to enter fully the cavity; making the os uteri the centre of motion. It is called by Dr. Sims the uterine elevator.

PESSARY, STEM, Pessary, intra-uterine.

PESSULUS, (dim. of pesus,) Pessary, Penis.

PESSUM, Pessary.

PESSUS, Pessary.

PEST, (pestis.) Plague.

PESTE, Plague—p. Antonine, Plague of Antoninus—p. d'Athènes, Plague of Athens—p. Noire, Death, Black.

PESTICHIÆ, Petechiæ.

PESTICLE, Petechiæ.

PES'TILENCE, Pestilen'tia, Pestil'itas, (from pestis, 'a pest,') A malignant spreading disease;—applied especially to plague.

PESTILENCE, CHOLEMIC, Cholera spasmodica—p. Glandular, Plague—p. Hæmagastic, Fever, yellow—p. Septic, Plague.

PESTILENTWORT, Tussilago petasites.

PETAUR'UM, (πεταυρον.) A scat suspended by ropes, in which a person taking exercise sat, and was tossed about by assistants.

PETE'CHILÆ, Pete'chiæ, Pestich'ie, Pestic'ie, Punctic'ula, Por'pura maligna, Por'pura Græco'rum, (F.) Pétéchies, (from [L.] Pedechio, 'a flea-bite,') Small spots, similar in shape and colour to flea-bites, which occur spontaneously upon the skin, in the course of severe fevers, &c. They are, under such circumstances, signs of great prostration.

PETECHLÆ SINE FEBRE, Purpura simplex.

PETE'CHIAL, Petechia'lis. Resembling or accompanied by petechiæ.

PETECHIAL SCURVY, Purpura simplex.

PETECHIANOSIS, (petechiæ, and νόσος, 'disease,') Purpura hæmorrhagica.

PETER'S PILLS, Pilulæ Aloës et Cambogiæ—p. Worm lozenges, see Worm lozenges, Sherman's.

PETICULÆ, Petechiæ.

PÉTRÉUX, Petrus—p. Os, see Temporal bone.

PETRO, (πετρα and πετρος, 'rock,') in composition, rock; and the petrous or rocky portion of the temporal bone.

PETRO DEL PORCO, ('stone of the hog,') Bezoar of the Indian porcupine.

PÉTROLE, Petroleum.

PETRO'LEUM, Petrol'eum, Petræ'leum, Fe'træ o'leum, Bitu'men Petrol'eum, Pissel'eum 'ndicium, Rock Oil, Petroleum Barbaden'se, Barba'docs Tur, (F.) Pétrole ou Pétrôle, (petro, and ελαιον, 'oil.') A bituminous substance flowing spontaneously from the earth, in various parts of the world, and abounding on this continent over a large area, embracing a part of Canada West from Lake Ontario to Lake Huron, and portions of Western New York and Western Pennsylvania, the south-eastern half of Ohio, all Northwestern Virginia, and the eastern district of Kentucky. It is of a fetid odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is semi-liquid, tenacious, semi-transparent; of a reddish-brown colour; insoluble in water and alcohol; combines with fixed and essential oils and sulphur; and is partially soluble in ether. The petroleum found at Gabian, near Béziers, in France, has been called Oleum Gabianum, (F.) Huile de Gabian, Petroleum rubrum. It has been given as an excitant expectorant; and, mixed with tincture of asafetida, in tapeworm. It is, also, used externally in chilblains, chronic rheumatism, affections of the joints and skin, and paralysis, and is a disinfectant and parasiticide.

New York Petroleum, called Sen'eca Oil, is used externally in similar cases.

PETROLEUM BARBADENSE, Petroleum.

PETROLEUM SULPHURATUM, Balsamum Sulphuris Barbadiensē,—(Composed of Petrol. Barbadi. ζxvj, Flor. Sulph. ζiv) has been used as a pectoral; and as a detergent to ulcers. It has been accounted antispasmodic and sudorific. Dose, grt. x to xxx. Externally, it is used as a stimulant and discutient.

PETROÛCCIPITAL, Petroûccipitalis. Belonging to the petrous portion of the temporal bone and to the occipital bone.

PETROÛCCIPITAL SUTURE is formed by the junction of the petrous portion of the temporal with the occipital bone. It is a deep groove separating the bones, which have between them a thin layer of cartilage.

PETROSALPIN'GOPHARYNGE'US. A fleshy fasciculus, which extends from the sphenoid bone, from the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and from the Eustachian tube to the upper part of the pharynx. See Constrictor.

PETROSALPINGOSTAPHYLINUS, Circumflexus—p. Salpingo-staphylinus, Levator palati.

PETROSPHENOIDAL, Petrosphenoidalis. Belonging to the petrous portion of the temporal bone and to the sphenoid bone.

PETROSPHENOIDAL SUTURE;—a name given to the small suture which is formed by the anterior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone and the posterior edge of the sphenoid.

PETROSAL, Petrous.

PETROSELINUM, (πετροσελινον, from petro, and σελινον, 'parsley,') Apium petroselinum—p. Macedonicum, Bubon Macedonicum.

PETROSTAPHYLIN, Levator palati.

PETROSUM, OS, see Temporal.

PÉTRÉUS, Petro'sus, Petro'sal, (F.) Pétréur, Pétré, Pierreur, (πέτρος, 'a rock.')

Resembling stone; having the hardness of stone. Relating or belonging to the petrous portion of the temporal bone.

PETROSUS GAN'GLION, Petro'sal Ganglion, Gan'glion of An'dersch, is formed by the glossopharyngeal nerve, shortly after it emerges from the jugular fossa. From this ganglion, M. Jacobson of Copenhagen traced an anastomosing loop through the cavity of the tympanum, which left branches there, and was thence reflected downwards to join the Vidian nerve.—See Otic Ganglion. This has been called the Nerve of Jacobson, Tympanic branch of the glossopharyngeal; and the inoculation, Jacobson's Anastomosis.

PETROSUS PORTION OF TEMPORAL BONE, see Temporal Bone—p. Process, see Temporal Bone.

PETROSUS SİNUSES, Petro'sal SİNuses, are two venous sinuses of the dura mater, connected with the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and distinguished on each side, into:—1. The superior petrosal sİNus. It arises from the cavernous sİNus; follows the upper edge of the petrous portion which affords it a gutter; passes into the great circumference of the tentorium cerebelli, and opens into the lateral sİNus where the latter experiences a bend near the base of the pars petrosa. Its form is triangular. 2. The inferior petrosal sİNus arises from the cavernous sİNus at the same point as the last, with which it communicates at the moment of its origin. It descends between the inferior edge of the pars petrosa and the basilar process, and terminates in the lateral sİNus, at the sinus or gulf of the internal jugular vein. It is triangular, and broader at its extremities than at the middle.

Small glands situate beneath the villous coat of the intestines, (called after Peyer, who well described them.) They are clustered together, (F.) Plaques de Peyer, having a honeycomb appearance—Plaques gaufrées—and are extremely numerous. They occur most in the lower portion of the ileum, and resemble, in their morphology and functions, the lymphatic ganglions. They are, evidently, concerned in the great function of lymphosis.

PE'ZA, (πέζα.) The foot: according to some, the sole of the foot; and to others, the astragalus, the ankle.

PEZIZA seu PEZE'ZA AURIC'ULA, Tremellia auricula Ju'dæ, Auricula Ju'dæ, Auricula-ria sambuci seu sambucina, Exilia auricula Ju'dæ, Merulius auricula, Fungus sambucinus, Agaricus Auriculæ formâ, Jew's Ear. Ord. Fungi. This fungus is said to be astringent; but has chiefly been used in decoction or infusion as a gargle in relaxed sore throat.

PFEE'FERS or PFAF'FERS, MINERAL WATERS OF, Thermæ Piperi'ne, Th. Jaba'ria. These springs, which are in the Swiss Alps, are simply thermal: temperature 100° of Fahrenheit.

PHA'CË, (φακή, 'a grain of the lentil,') Errum lens. Also, chloasma; lens; the crystalline lens; and a flask for the application of heat, so called owing to its flattened lenslike shape.

PHACELLUS, (φακέλλος,) Fasciculus.

PHACELUS, (φακέλος,) Fasciculus.

PHACHYMENTIS, Phacohymenitis.

PHACI, (pl. of Phacius,) Ephelides.

PHA'CICUS, Phaco'tus, Phaco'des, (from phace.) Lens-shaped, lenticular.

PHACITIS, Phacôide'itis, Lenti'tis, Crystall'itis, Crystalloïd'itis, Gleni'tis, (phace, and itis.) Inflammation of the crystalline lens. Inflammation of the capsule of the lens is termed Cap'sul'itis, Corpuscul'itis, Crystallinocapsul'itis, and Phacocyst'itis.

PHACOCOPIIS, (phace, and κοπίς, 'a knife,') Phacopsis.

PHACOCYSTE, (phace, and κύστις, 'a cyst or bladder,') see Crystalline.

PHACOCYSTECTOMIA, (phacocyste, and εκτομή, 'cutting out,') An operation for cataract, which consists in cutting out a part of the capsule of the lens.

PHACOCYSTITIS, (phacocyste, and itis,) see Phacitis.

PHACO'DES, (φακώδης, phace, and odes,) Phaciosis.

PHACHYMENTIS, Phachohymen'itis, Phachymen'itis, Phacymen'itis, Inflammatio capsulæ lenti'tis; (phace, μῆνις, 'a membrane,' and itis.) Inflammation of the capsule of the crystalline.

PHA'COID, Phacoï'des, (from phace, and είδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling a lens. See Crystalline.

PHACOIDEITIS, (phacoid, and itis,) Phacitis.

PHACOMALACIA, (phace, and μαλακός, 'soft,') Cataract, soft.

PHACOMETACHORE'SIS, (phace, and μεταχωρίζω, 'to change place,') Dislocation of the crystalline.

PHAC'OPIS, Phacoc'opsis, Phaco'tus, (phace, and κοπίς, 'a knife,') Scalpellum lenticular'æ. A lenticular-shaped knife.

PHACOPALINGEN'ESIS, (phace, παλιν, 'again,' and γενεσις, 'generation,') Regeneration of the crystalline.

PHACOP'IS, (phace, and ὄψις, 'vision,') The state of one who has chloasma or freckles on the face.

PHACOPTIS'ANA, Phac'cium, (phace, and πίνω, 'drink,') A drink of lentils. A poultice of lentils.

PHACOS, (φακός,) Errum lens.

PHACOSCOTOMA, (phace, and σκοτώμα, 'darkness,') Cataract.

PHACOSCLEROMA, (phace, and σκληρός, 'hard,' and ωμα.) Induration of the crystalline.

PHACOTUS, (φακώτος, 'lens-shaped,') Phacius, Phacopsis.

PHACUS, (φακός,) Errum lens.

PHACHYMENTIS, Phacohymenitis.

PHENOMENOLOGIA, (phænomenon, and λόγος, 'a discourse,') Semiology.

PHENOMENON, (φαινω, 'to manifest,') Phenomenon.

PHENOMENOSCOPIA, (phænomenon, and σκοπέω, 'to examine,') see Symptomatology.

PHAGÆNA, (φαγάνα, from φαγῶ, 'to eat,') Boulimia.

PHAGEDÆNA, (φαγέδαινα, 'a ravenous hunger,' from φαγῶ, 'to eat,') Boulimia, Phagedenic ulcer—p. Gaugrenosa, Hospital gangrene—p. Sloughing of the mouth, Cancer aquaticus.

PHAGEDENIC, Phagede'nicus, Phagede'nicus, Depar'cens, Ro'dent, (F.) Phagédénique, Rougeant. That which rapidly eats away.

PHAGEDENIC CHAN'CRE. A destructive form of primary syphilitic sore. A virulent variety has been long known in the London Hospitals under the name, "Sican alley sore," from the miserable locality inhabited by prostitutes, in which it formerly prevailed.

PHAGEDENIC UL' CER, No'mê, Phagede'na, Ulcus depar'cens seu obambulans seu fer'vium, (F.) Ulcère phagédénique ou rougeant, is one which rapidly eats and corrodes the neighbouring parts.

Phagede'nic, in Materia Medica, is a substance used for destroying fungous granulations in ulcers, &c.

PHAGEDENOUS, Phagedenic.

PHACHYMENTIS, Phacohymenitis.

PHALACRA, (φαλακρά,) Calvities.

PHALACROMA, (φαλακρωμα,) Calvities.

PHALACROSIS, (φαλακρωσις,) Calvities.

PHALACROTIS, (φαλακρωσις,) Alopecia.

PHALÆNA PINGUINALIS, (φαλαίνα, 'a moth,') see Ectozaa.

PHALALA. A barbarous term, employed by Basil Valentine to designate a universal medicine or panacea.

PHALANGAGRA, (phalanx, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Phalangarthritis.

PHAL'ANGAL or PHALAN'GAL, Phalan'gian, Phalangia'mis, (from phalanx.) Having relation to a phalanx.

PHALANGARTHRI'TIS, (phalanx, αρθρον, 'a joint,' and itis,) Phalan'gagra. Gout in the fingers. Inflammation of the joints of the fingers.

PHALANGE, (φαλαγγή,) Phalanx.

PHALANGES DES DOIGTS, see Phalanx—p. of the Fingers, see Phalanx—p. des Orteils, see Phalanx—p. of the Toes, see Phalanx.

PHALANGETTES, see Phalanx.

PHALANGETTIEN. Professor Chaussier uses this term for anything relating to the third phalanx of the fingers or toes,—Phalangien, for what relates to the first,—and Phalanginiën, to the second.

PHALANGIAN, Phalanga.

PHALANGIEN, see Phalangettien.

PHALANGINES, see Phalanx.

PHALANGINIEN, see Phalangettien.

PHALANGIUM ESCULENTUM, (from φαλαγγιον, 'a venomous spider,' whose poison it was supposed to neutralize,) Scilla esculenta.

PHALANGO'SIS, Pisipul'itas, (from φαλαγγίς, 'a row of soldiers,' and osis.) An affection of the eyelids, in which the lashes are arranged in two or three rows. See Trichiasis. Also, dropping of the upper eyelid, from paralysis of the levator palpebræ superioris muscle.

PHALANX, gen. Phalan'gis, (φαλαγγίς, gen. φαλαγγος, 'a row of soldiers,') Phalan'gê, Phalan'go'ma. A name given to the small bones which form the fingers and toes, because placed alongside each other like a phalanx. They are distinguished into the Phalan'ges of the fingers, Os'sa seu Ag'mina seu Ar'cies seu Articuli seu Scat'ic'ula seu Scat'ulae seu No'di seu Interno'dia seu Scy'tal'ides seu Con'dyli Digit'orum Ma'nus; and the Phalanges of the Toes, Os'sa seu Articuli seu Interno'dia Digit'orum Pe'dis. I. Phalanges of the fingers, (F.) Phalanges des doigts. They are, in each hand, fourteen.—three to each finger, and two to the thumb; and are situate one above the other. They are distinguished, numerically, reckoning from the base towards the tip of the finger.

1. The first or metacarpal, Procon'dyli, (F.) Premières phalanges ou Phalanges métacarpiennes.
2. The second or middle phalanges, (F.) Secondes phalanges ou Phalanges moyennes, Phalanges, (Ch.) 3. The third phalanges, Metac'on'dyli, Phalanges unguéales, (F.) Troisièmes phalanges ou Phalanges unguéales ou unguifères ou unguinales, Phalanges (Ch.), which terminate each finger, and support the nail. II. Phalan'ges of the toes, (F.) Phalanges des Orteils. They are the same in number as those of the fingers, but much smaller, and of a very different shape.

The phalanges of a finger or toe are united with each other; and the first with the metacarpal or metatarsal bone. They are developed from two points of ossification; one for the superior extremity, and the other for the body and inferior extremity.

PHALARIS CANARIENSIS, P. ora'to, (φαλαρος,—from φαω, 'I shine,'—'bright, shining,' in application to the seed.) Cultivated Canary Grass, (F.) Alpiste. Ord. Gramineæ. Sec. Syst. Triandria Digynia. The seed of this grass, Canary seed, (F.) Graines d'aspic, afford a nourishing meal. The ancients recommended them for allaying pains in the kidney and bladder.

PHALARIS ZIZANOIDES, Andropogon muricatus.

PHALLAL'GIA, Phallogyn'ia, (phallo, and αλγος, 'pain.') Pain in the male organ.

PHALLANAS'TROPIE, (phallo, and αναστροφή, 'a turning back.') Distortion of the male organ backwards.

PHALLANCYLOSIS, (phallo, and αγκυλωσις, a bending.) Chordee.

PHALLITIS, Priap'itis, (phallo, and itis.) Inflammation of the male organ.

PHALLO, (from φαλλος, 'the male organ,') in composition, the male organ.

PHALLOCA MPSIS, (phallo, and καψις, 'bending,') Chordee.

PHALLOCARCINO'MA, gen. Phallocarcino'matis, (phallo, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer,') Carcinoma or cancer of the penis.

PHALLODYNIA, (phallo, and δυσνη, 'pain,')

PHALLON'CUS, (phallo, and ογκος, 'swelling,') Tumefaction of the male organ.

PHALLOPSOPH'IA, (phallo, and ψοφος, 'a noise,') Discharge of wind from the male urethra.

PHALLORRHAG'IA, (phallo, and ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth,') Hemorrhage from the male urethra. Stomatosis.

PHALLORRHŒA, (phallo, and ρῆω, 'to flow,') Gonorrhœa.

PHALLORRHŒIS'CHESIS, (phallo, ῆσις, 'discharge,' and σχειν, 'to withhold,') Sudden arrest of a gonorrhœal discharge.

PHALLUS, (φαλλος), Dildo, Penis—p. Esculentus, Morchella esculenta.

PHANEROG'AMOUS, Phanerogam'ic, Phanerogam'icus, (F.) Phanérogame, (φανερως, (φαω, 'I shine,') 'evident,' and γαμος, 'marriage,') An epithet used by botanists for plants whose sexual organs are apparent. It is, consequently, the opposite to cryptogamous.

PHANTASIA, (φαντασια, from φανταζω, (φανω, 'to bring to light,') 'to make appear,') Delirium, Imagination.

PHANTASM, Phantas'ma, Phanto'ma, Phas'toa. A phantom, false appearance, apparition. Hallucination. Derangement of the sense of sight or of the intellectual faculties, causing objects to be perceived, which are not before the eyes.

PHANTASMA, gen. Phantasm'atis, (φαντασμα, γεν. φαντασματος,) Phantasm, Pseudoblemsia.

PHANTASMATICUS, (from phantasma,) Phantasticus.

PHANTASMATOSCOPIA, (phantasma, and σκοπειω, 'I view,') Metamorphopsia.

PHANTASMOSCOPIA, Metamorphopsia.

PHANTAS'TICUS, (φανταστικός,) Inebriant.

Creating phantoms—phantasmatic'us.

PHANTOM, (φανω, 'to cause to appear,') Fantom—p. Tumour, see Fantom.

PHANTOMA, gen. Phanto'matis, Phantasm—p. Obstetricium, Fantom.

PHARMACEIA, (φαρμακεια,) Pharmacy, Poisoning.

PHARMACEUM, (φαρμακειον,) Apotheea.

PHARMACEU'MA, gen. Pharmaceu'matis, (φαρμακευμα,) Medicament.

PHARMACEUS, (φαρμακευς,) Apothecary.

PHARMACEUTA, (φαρμακευτης,) Apothecary.

PHARMACEUTIC, Pharmaceut'icus, Pharmaceut'ical, Pharmaceut'ialis, (F.) Pharmaceutique, (from pharmaco.) An epithet for everything belonging to pharmacy. Thus, we say, Pharmaceutical preparations, &c.

PHARMACEUTICE, (φαρμακευτικη [τηχηνη]) Pharmacy.

PHARMACEUTIST, (φαρμακευτης,) Apothecary.

PHARMACEUTRIA, (φαρμακευτρια,) A woman who prepares or deals in drugs or poisons.

PHARMACIA, (φαρμακια,) Pharmacy, Poisoning.

PHARMACIEN, Apothecary.

PHARMACO, (from φαρμακον, 'a medicine, 'poison,') in composition, generally medicine; at times, poison.)

PHARMACOCATAGRAPHOLOG'IA, Catagrap'holog'ia, Ars formulæ concinnandi, (pharmaco, κατα, 'beneath,' γραφη, 'a writing,' and λογος, 'a description,') The art of writing prescriptions.

PHARMACOCHEMYIA, (pharmaco, and chymia,) Chymistry, pharmaceutical.

PHARMACODYNAMICS, (pharmaco, and δυναμις, 'power,') Pharmacodynam'icæ, Dynam'ical Materia Med'ica, Pharmacodynam'ica doctrina, Pharmacodynam'icolog'ia. A division of pharmacology, which considers the effects and uses of medicines.

PHARMACODYNAMIOLOGIA, (same etymon and λογος, 'a discourse,') Pharmacodynamia.

PHARMACOGNO'SIA, Acogno'stia, Acogno'stia, (pharmaco, and γνωσις, 'knowledge,') A division of pharmacology, which treats of simples, or unprepared medicines.

PHARMACOLOGIA, (pharmaco, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Materia medica.

PHARMACOMANIA, (pharmaco, and μανια, 'mania,') A mania for prescribing or for taking or giving medicine, or for drugging.

PHARMACON, (φαρμακον,) Medicament, Poison.

PHARMACOPŒIA, Pharmacopœ'ia, Co'dex medicamentarius, (F.) Pharmacopœe, (pharmaco, and ποιω, 'I make,') A work, containing a collection of formulae for the preparation, &c., of medicines: generally published by authority. Formerly, a chemical laboratory, Laborato'rium chym'icum seu pharmaceut'icum.

PHARMACOPOËSE. The preparation of medicines.

PHARMACOPŒUS, Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPOLA, (φαρμακωπολη, from pharmaco, and πωλειω, 'to sell,') Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPOLE, Apothecary, Druggist.

PHARMACOPLIUM, Apothec'ia, Offici'na, Tuber'na Med'ica. The shop of the druggist or apothecary, (F.) Apothicaiverie.

PHARMACOPOS'IA, (pharmaco, and ποσις, 'a potion,') A liquid medicine, especially one that is cathartic.

PHARMACOSA MEDICAMENTA, from pharmacos. Medicines that contain poisonous substances.

PHARMACOTHE'CA, (φαρμακοθήκη, pharmaco, and θήκη, 'a sheath.')

PHARMACOTHERA'PIA, Pharmacis, (pharmacos, and θεραπεία, 'treatment.')

PHARMACUM, (φάρμακον), Medicament, Poison — p. Ægyptiacum, Ægyptiacum — p. Amatorium, Philter.

PHAR'MACUM AD AU'RES, Ægyptium Medicamentum ad Aures. A name given to a medicine composed of bitter almonds, white pepper, saffron, myrrh, opium, frankincense, castor, verjuice, sulphate of iron, vinegar, pomegranate bark, unguentum nardinum, &c. It was believed to be useful for cleansing fetid ulcers in the ears.

PHARMACURGI'CA, (pharmacos, and εργεον, 'to work.')

PHAR'MACY, Pharmacis, Pharmaceuticis, Pharmacis, (from pharmacos.) The art which teaches the knowledge, choice, preservation, preparation, and combination of medicines. It was formerly divided into Galenical and Chymical. The former, called after Galen, embraced the operations to which medicines were subjected without chymistry;—the latter, Chymical Pharmacy or Pharmaceutic Chymistry, Pharmacochymia, comprised the preparation of medicines founded on the chymical action of their principles.

PHARMAXIS, (φαρμαξίς), Pharmacotherapia, Pharmacy.

PHARNA'CEUM LINEA'RE, (called after Pharnaces, King of Pontus.) A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Paronychiaceæ, employed at the Cape in pulmonary affections. It is generally given in infusion.

PHARUS, (φάρος), Pharynx.

PHARYGATHRON, (φάρυγαθρον), Pharynx.

PHARYGETHRUM, (φάρυγεθρον), Pharynx.

PHARYNGE'UM (SAL.), (from pharynx.) A compound of cream of tartar, nitrate of potassa, burnt alum, and distilled vinegar. It was formerly employed, united with honey and plantain-water, to make gargles, which were advised in quinsy.

PHARYNGALGIA, (pharyngo, and αλγος, 'pain.')

PHARYNGE, Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGE'AL or PHARYNGE'AL, Pharyngæus, Fau'cial, (F.) Pharyngé, Pharyngien, (from pharynx.) That which relates to the pharynx or fauces. A name given to the muscles, vessels, and nerves of the pharynx.

PHARYNGEAL ARTERIES. These are two in number. The one—superior or pterygo-pal'atine, Ramus Pharyngæus superior of Haller—arises from the internal maxillary at the base of the zygomatic fossa, passes through the pterygo-palatine canal, and proceeds to be distributed to the pharynx and the corresponding part of the Eustachian tube. The other—the inferior—Pharyngæa ascendens of Haller—arises from the external carotid, on a level with the facial. It ascends along the lateral and posterior part of the pharynx, and divides into two branches; the one—the pharyngeal, properly so called—is distributed to the pharynx; the other—the meningeal—gives its branches particularly to the dura mater.

PHARYNGEAL NERVE. A branch sent by the pneumogastric to the pharynx. It descends behind the internal carotid; communicates with the glosso-pharyngeal; and divides, opposite the middle constrictor of the pharynx, into a great number of filaments, which anastomose, in a multitude of different directions, with filaments of the glossopharyngeal nerve, of the superior laryngeal branch, and of the first cervical ganglion. These different nervous filaments united constitute the pharyngeal plexus, the irregular meshes of which send numerous ramifications to the pharynx.

PHARYNGEAL VOICE. see Voice.

PHARYNGEMPHRAX'IS, (pharyngo, and εμφραξις, 'obstruction.')

PHARYNGETHRON, (φάρυγγεθρον), Pharynx.

PHARYNGEURYSMA, (pharyngo, and ευρυσμα, 'dilatation.')

PHARYNGICUS, (from pharynx), Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGIEN, Pharyngeal.

PHARYNGISMUS, Pharyngosasmus.

PHARYNGITE, Cynanche pharyngea — p. Tonsillaire, Cynanche tonsillaris.

PHARYNGITIS, (pharyngo, and ίτις), Cynanche pharyngea.

PHARYNGITIS APOSTEMATO'SA. Abscess of the pharynx.

PHARYNGITIS, DIPHTHERIT'IC, Angina pseudomembranacea seu membrana'cea seu pellicularis seu plastica seu diphtheritica seu maligna seu pseudomembranosa seu pestilentialis seu faucium exsudativa Pseudomembranous Inflammation or Diphtheritis or Diphtheria of the Throat, Hogskin angina, (F.) Angine couenneuse ou gutturale couenneuse ou pseudo-membraneuse ou plastique ou diphtheritique, Herpes guttural. Diphtheritic inflammation of the pharynx. See Diphtheritis.

When diphtheria is spoken of, it is usually this affection that is meant; although the local phenomena are rather expressions of the peculiar adynamic condition, termed diphtheritis; which may destroy without much or any evidence of the pharyngeal affection. It is this adynamic condition which demands the main attention;—the pharyngeal exudation requiring but little. During convalescence, peculiar paralytic phenomena supervene at times. See Paralysis, diphtheritic. Diphtheritic pharyngitis is not new. It is manifestly the malignant sore-throat, which is described as having been so fatal—in the time of Horace Walpole, for example. See Cynanche maligna.

PHARYNGITIS, FOLLIC'ULAR, Follicular Inflammation of the Pharynx, Angina folliculosa and A. glandulosa of the Pharynx, Ac'né of the Throat. Inflammation and enlargement of the follicles of the pharynx, occasionally extending to the larynx. Sometimes termed Clergyman's Sorethroat, Rhectoran'chè, Tubercles of the Larynx and Fauces, and Tubercular Sorethroat.

PHARYNGITIS, GANGRENO'S, Cynanche maligna.

PHARYNGO, (φάρυγξ, gen. φάρυγγος, in composition, the pharynx.)

PHARYNGO'CA'CE, (pharyngo, and κακος, 'evil.')

PHARYNGO'CE'LE, Pharyngæurysma, Diverticulum seu Her'nia seu Prolap'sus Œsoph'agi seu pharyngis, Œsoph'agus succenturiatus, (from pharyngo, and κελη, 'a tumour.')

An enlargement at the upper part of the gullet, in which the food sometimes rests in considerable quantity.

PHARYNGODYN'IA, Pharyngal'gia, (pharyngo, and δύνη, 'pain.')

PHARYNGO'GLOSSAL, Glossopharyngeal, Pharyngoglossianus. That which belongs to the pharynx and tongue.

PHARYNGOGLOSSAL NERVE, Glossopharyngeal Nerve, Lingualis lateralis, (F.) Nerv. Glossopharyngien, Pharyngoglossien—a portion of the eighth pair—arises from the superior and lateral parts of the spinal marrow, between the facial and pneumogastric nerves, by several filaments, which soon unite into a single cord, that passes out of the cranium by the foramen lacerum posterius; goes downwards and forwards, and gains the posterior and inferior part of the tongue. Immediately after its exit from the cranium, it gives a branch to the meatus auditorius externus, and receives a filament from the facial, and another from the pneumogastric nerve. It then furnishes two other filaments, which descend upon the carotid artery, and unite at the bottom of the neck with branches from the cervical ganglions and cardiac nerves, and give two filaments to the stylopharyngeus muscle. The glossopharyngeus, after sending a twig or two to the tonsil, to the upper part of the pharynx and membrane of the epiglottis, divides into many branches, which run partly to the margin, and partly to the middle of the root of the tongue; supplying, especially, the papillæ majores, and the parts in their neighbourhood.

By some, this nerve is regarded as the controller of the associated motions of the tongue and pharynx. By others, it is esteemed to be the special nerve of gustation.

PHARYNGOGRAPHY, Pharyngographia, (pharyngo, and γραφη, 'a description,') An anatomical description of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOLOGY, Pharyngologia, (pharyngo, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of anatomy which treats of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOLYSIS, (pharyngo, and λυσις, 'solution,') Pharyngoplegia.

PHARYNGOPARALYSIS, Pharyngoplegia.

PHARYNGOPERISTOLE, (pharyngo, and περιστρω, 'to contract,') Pharyngostenia.

PHARYNGOPLEGIA, (pharyngo, and πληρωσις, 'I strike,') Dysphagia paralytica seu torpida seu atonica, Angina paralytica, Asthenia Deglutitiva, Pharyngolysis, Pharyngoparalysis, Paralysis (Ἐσθθησις, Gu'ia Imbecillitas. Paralysis of the pharynx or œsophagus: commonly a symptom of general paralysis, or of approaching dissolution.

PHARYNGORRHAGIA, (pharyngo, and ῥαγη, 'rupture,') Hemorrhage from the vessels of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOSCOPY, Pharyngosopia (pharyngo, and σκοπεω, 'I view,') Inspection of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOSPASMUS, Pharyngismus, (pharyngo, and σπασμος, 'spasm,') Spasm or cramp of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOSTAPHYLINUS, (pharyngo, and σταφυλη, 'uvula,') Palatopharyngeus.

PHARYNGOSTENIA, Pharyngoperistole, (pharyngo, and στενωσις, 'a narrowness,') Stricture or contraction of the pharynx.

PHARYNGOTOME, Pharyngotomis, (pharyngo, and τεμνω, 'I cut,') An instrument, invented by J. L. Petit, used to scarify inflamed tonsils, and to open abscesses, which form in the parietes of the pharynx. It is composed of a long, narrow blade with a lancet point, enclosed in a sheath or canula of silver slightly curved. This instrument is carried to the part to be cut, and the point of the blade is made to pass out of the sheath, by pressing on a button at the end of the pharyngotome. A spring causes the blade to re-enter as soon as the pressure is removed.

PHARYNGOTOMY, Pharyngotomia. Some authors have used this word synonymously with œsophagotomy. It means, also, scarification of the tonsils, or an incision made for opening abscesses there, &c.

PHARYNX, gen. Pharyngis, (φαρυγξ, gen. φαρυγγος,) Pharyx, Pharynx, Gu'ia, Le'mus, Fauces, Pharyngætrum, Pharyngæthron, Pharyngæthron, Pharyngæthron, Isth'mus, Isth'mion, Ingluvis Principium gut'tæ, Os posterum, Gur'ges,

Bronchus, (from φαρυξ, 'I cut or divide,') (F.) Arrière-bouche, Gosier, Gorge. A species of musculomembranous, symmetrical canal, on the median line, irregularly funnelshaped, and situate between the base of the cranium and the œsophagus, in front of the vertebral column. It is very narrow above; but dilates in the middle, and again contracts below, at its junction with the œsophagus. Into the anterior paries of the pharynx open, successively, from above to below,—the posterior orifices of the nasal fossæ; the Eustachian tubes; the posterior aperture of the mouth, and the top of the larynx. The pharynx is formed, externally, of a muscular coat, and, internally, of a mucous membrane, which is continuous, above, with the Schneiderian membrane; and in the middle, with that of the mouth; below, with that of the œsophagus; and, at the sides, with that of the Eustachian tubes. This membrane has no villi, and presents only a few inequalities, which are owing to the presence of muciparous follicles. The muscular coat of the pharynx is composed of the constrictor muscles, stylopharyngei, and pharyngostaphylini. The vessels and nerves are called pharyngeal. The pharynx serves as a common origin for the digestive and respiratory passages. It gives passage to the air, during respiration; and to the food at the time of deglutition.

PHARYNX, FOLLICULAR INFLAMMATION OF THE, Pharyngitis, follicular.

PHARYNX, gen. Pharyngis, (φαρυξ, gen. φαρυγγος,) Pharynx.

PHASELUS, (φασηλος,) Phaseolus.

PHASEOLUS, (φασηλος, 'a small boat,') P. Vulgaris, Phaseolus, Phase'lus, Fase'lus, Fase'olus, Bo'na, Boo'na, Fa'ba; Kid'ney Bean; French Bean; Bush-bean, String-bean, Snap-bean, Snaps, (F.) Fuséole, Haricot. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sez. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. When young and well boiled, the unripe pods are used as a legume. They are easy of digestion, and delicately flavoured. The sweet taste of the juice is owing to the presence of mannite—phaseolan'nite. The ripe beans—haricot beans—dried, are used in soups, &c.

PHASEOLUS CRE'TICUS, Cajan, Cayan. A decoction of the leaves, according to Ray, restrains the hemorrhoidal flux when excessive.

PHASEOLUS VULGARIS, Phaseolus.

PHASEOMANNITE, see Phaseolus.

PHASIA'OMUS GAL'LUS, (from the river, Phasis, in Colchis, near the Black Sea.) Cocky, (F.) Cog. The parts of generation of the cock, dried and pulverized, were formerly regarded as proper for increasing the quantity of semen. The fat was used as emollient and resolvent; the brain, in diarrhœa; the gall, in freckles and diseases of the eyes. These phantasies are now abandoned.

PHASIOLUS, (φασιολος,) Phaseolus.

PHASMA, (φασμα, from φαω, 'to cause to appear,') Phantasm.

PHATNE, (φαινη, 'a crib with divisions,') Alveolus.

PHATNION, (dim. of phatne,) Alveolus.

PHATNORRHAGIA, Stomatorrhagia alveolarum, (phatne, and ῥιγημι, 'I break forth,') Hemorrhage from the alveoli.

PHAUSINGES, (φαναιγγες, plural of φαναιγγξ, from φαινω, 'I roast,') Spots or blisters on the legs, produced by heat; and, in a more extensive signification, by any other cause. Also, a pustule.

PHELLANDRE, Phellandrium aquaticum.

PHELLANDRIUM AQUATICUM, Phellandrium, Enan'the phellan'drium seu aquat'ica, Ligusticum phellan'drium, Feniculum aquat'icum, Cientaria aquatica, Water Fen'nel, Fineleaved Water Hem'lock, (F.) Phe'llandre, Fenouil d'eau, Ciguë d'eau, Milleville aquatique. Ord. Umbelliferae. Sez. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. This plant is stimulant and narcotic. It has been used in intermittents and dyspepsia. It has, also, been given in phthisis pulmonalis, and in cases of scrofulous atonic ulcers.

PHENE, Benzole.

PHENGOPHOBIA, (φηνγγος, 'light,' and φοβος, 'dread,') Phorophobia.

PHENIG'MUS, (φαινιγγος,) Phœnig'mus, (from φαινίς, 'purple or red,') Red Janu'dice. A cutaneous affection, consisting of redness diffused over the skin, without fever. Sauvages makes it a genus of his order Ictericæ. Also, the act of irritating a part by a stimulating application.

PHENOL, Acid, phenic.

PHÉNOMÈNE, Phenomenon.

PHENOMENON, (φαινόμενον,) Phænomen'onon, (F.) Phénomène, (φαινομαι, 'I appear,') An extraordinary and unexpected event. In Medicine, it means any change, appreciable by our senses, which supervenes in an organ or function:—as the phenomena of the circulation, respiration, &c. It is used in pathology, synonymously with symptom.

PHENYLE, HYDRURET OF, Benzole.

PHEUGYDRON, (φενγω, 'to flee,' and ύδωρ, 'water,') Hydrophobia.

PHIALA, A Phial or Vi'al, (F.) Firole, (φιαλη, φιαλη, 'a broad drinking cup, a saucer,') A small bottle, in which apothecaries are in the habit of sending out their mixtures, draughts, &c.: hence called Med'icine Vials, (F.) Fioles à Médecine. They are usually sold in grosses, and assorted into vials of oz. 8; oz. 4; oz. 3; oz. 2; oz. 1½; oz. 1; and oz. ½.

PHILANAYMICA, (philo, a, and δυναμεις, 'power,') Debilitants.

PHILANTHROPUS, (philo, and ανθρωπος, 'man,') Galium aparine.

PHILIA'TER, Philia'tros, (φιλατρος, philo, and αρτηκη, 'medicine,') An amateur of medicine. One who studies medicine; Studio'sus medic'i'arum.

PHILO, (φιλω, 'I love,') in composition, to love.

PHILOBIO'SIS, (F.) Philobiosie, (philo, and βιος, 'life,') The love of life.

PHILŒ'NIA, (φιλαινα, from philo, and οινος, 'wine,') Love of wine. Addiction to wine.

PHILOGYNIA, (φιλογυνια, from philo, and γυνη, 'a woman,') Muliebrositas.

PHILONIUM LONDINENSE, (after its proposer, Philo,) Confectio opii.

PHILOPATRIDALGIA, (philo, πατρις, 'one's country,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Nostalgia.

PHILOPATRIDOMANIA, (philo, πατρις, 'one's country,' and μανια,) Nostalgia.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE, see Alchymy.

PHILOSOPHIA CORPORIS VIVÍ, Physiology—p. Hermetica, Alchymy—p. per Ignem, Chymistry.

PHIL'TER, (φιλτρον, from φιλω, 'to love,') Philtreum, Phar'macium seu Poc'ulum amato'rium, Amato'rium venefic'ium, (F.) Philtre. A medicine or drink considered capable of causing love.

PHILTRUM, Lacuna labii superioris.

PHILYRA, Tilia.

PHILY'REA LATIFO'LIA, (after Phily'ra, 'mother of Chiron,') A shrub of the south of France and Spain, Ord. Oleaceæ, whose leaves have been used as an astringent in ulcers of the mouth and throat. The flowers, steeped in vinegar, have been applied to the head in headache. The decoction of the leaves is said to be diuretic.

PHIMOS, (φίμος,) Capistrum.

PHIMO'SICUS, Relating to Phimosia. Sauvages calls Ischuria phimo'sica seu urethral'is à phimo'si, the retention of urine which depends upon phimosia.

PHIMO'SIS, improperly Phymo'sis, Capistra'tio, Erago'gium, Ligatu'ra glan'dis, Strictu'ra præ- put'ti, Reductio præput'tii impedita, (φίμω, 'I bind tight,') A disease which consists in a preternatural narrowness of the opening of the prepuce, so that it cannot be carried behind the corona glandis. This affection is most commonly congenital. Sometimes it is accidental, and dependent upon tumefaction of the glans, or of the prepuce, as occurs in syphilis. To remedy this state, the prepuce may be divided by means of a bistoury and director; or circumcision may be practised.

PHIMOSIS ADNATA seu CŒNGENITA seu PUEBILIS, Congenital phimosia—p. Circumligata, Paraphimosia—p. Congenita, P. adnata.

PHIMOSIS ŒDEMATŒ'DES, Hydrophimo'sis. Phimosia with œdematous swelling of the prepuce.

PHIMOSIS PUEBILIS, Ph. adnata.

PHILASMA, gen. Phlasu'atis, (φλασμα, from φλω, 'to bruise,') Contusion.

PHLEBARTERIODIALYSIS, (phlebo, αρτηρια, 'artery,' and διαλυσις, 'a loosing or separating,') see Aneurism.

PHLEBECTA'SIA, Phlebec'tasis, (phlebo, and εκτασις, 'dilatation,') Dilatation of a vein, or of a portion of a vein.

PHLĒBECTIARCTIE, (phlebo, and arcto, 'I contract,') Contraction of a vein.

PHLEBEMPHRAX'IS, (phlebo, and εμφραξις, 'obstruction,') Obstruction of a vein.

PHLEBES, pl. of phlebs, (φλεβεις,) see Artery.

PHLEBEURYSMA, (gen. Phlebeurysm'atis, (phlebo, and ευρυσμα, 'dilatation,') Varix.

PHLEB'ICUS, (φλεβικος,) Relating or appertaining to a vein.

PHLEB'ION, (φλεβιον,) (dim. of phlebs,) A vein. A small vein,—Ve'nula.

PHLEBIS'MUS, (from phlebs.) A term employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for the turgescence of veins, produced by impeding return of the blood. See Trachelismus.

PHLEBITIS, Inflammatio venarum, (F.) Phlébite, Inflammation des veines, (phlebo, and itis.) Inflammation of the inner membrane of a vein, Eudophlebitis, which sometimes follows blood-letting, and extends from the small wound made in that operation to the neighbouring parts of the venous system. The symptoms are, first, inflammation in the punctured part; and, afterwards, a knotty, tense, painful cord, following the direction of the vessel, and accompanied with more or less fever, according to the extent of the inflammation, the nervous symptoms, &c. Phlebitis, also, sometimes supervenes on the ligature or excision of the varices; after amputation, gun-shot wounds, delivery (U'terine Phlebitis, Lochometrophlebitis, Metrophlebitis puerper'alis, Phlebitis uteri'ua, Metri'tis veu'osa), the ligature of the umbilical cord, &c. It may terminate by resolution, suppuration, ulceration, or gangrene.

PHLEBITIS, CRURAL, Phlegmatia dolens—p. Uterina, see Peritonitis, and Phlebitis.

PHLEBO, (φλεβ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein,') In composition, a vein.

PHLEBOG'RAPHY, Phlebogra'phia, (phlebo, and γραφη, 'a description,') A description of the veins.

PHLEB'OLITE, Phlebol'ithus, Vein stone, (F.) Phlébolithe, (phlebo, and λιθος, 'a stone,') A loose concretion, varying in size from that of a currant to that of a pea, occasionally found in the veins. It would seem to be formed in the blood.

PHLEBOLITHUS, Phlebolite.

PHLEBOL'OGY, Phlebolog'ia, (phlebo, and λογος, 'a discourse,') The part of anatomy which treats of the veins.

PHLEBOMETRITIS, (phlebo, and metri'tis,) Metrophlebitis.

PHLEBOP'ALIA, (phlebo, and παλλω, 'I palpitate,') With the an-vents, pulsation, which they conceived to be produced by the veins. See Pulsus venarum.

PHLEBOPHTHALMOTOM'IA, Ophthalmophlebotomia, (phlebo, φθλαμος, 'the eye,' and τρυφω, 'I cut.') Blood-letting in the eye.

PHLEBOPLEROSIS EPIPHRACTICA, (phlebo, and πλῆρωσις, 'fulness,') Inflammation.

PHLEBORRHAG'IA, (φλεβορραγια, from phlebo, and ῥηγνμι, 'I break out,') Rupture of the veins; and, in a more extensive sense, venous hemorrhage.

PHLEBORRHEX'IS, (phlebo, and ῥηξις, 'rupture,') Rupture of a vein. Also, hemorrhage from a vein, Phleborrhag'ia.

PHLEBOSTENO'SIS, (phlebo, and στενωσις, 'contraction,') Constriction or contraction of a vein.

PHLEBOTHROMBOSIS, (phlebo, and thrombosis,) Coagulation of blood in a vein.

PHLEBOTOMOM'ANIA, Phlebotomomania, (phlebotomy, and mania,) An extravagant estimate of the value of blood-letting as a curative agent.

PHLEBOTOMIST, (phlebo, and τρυφω, 'I cut,') A bleeder. One who practises particularly the art of phlebotomy. See Blood-letting.

PHLEBOTOMUM, (φλεβοτομον,) Fleam.

PHLEBOTOMY, (φλεβοτομια,) See Blood-letting.

PHLEBS, (φλεψ, gen. φλεβος,) Vein.

PHLEDONIA, (φλεδονια, from φλεω, 'to talk idly,') Delirium.

PHLEGM, (φλεγμα,) Phleg'ma, Pituita, Pit'uite, Mucus, Moth'er, (F.) Phlegme, Pituite. One of the four natural humours of the ancients, which, according to them, was cold and moist, as atrabillis was cold and dry. It predominated, especially, in winter.

Pituita was afterwards applied to every aqueous or excrementitious humour, such as the saliva, nasal and intestinal mucus, serum, &c. The terms phlegm and pituita are no longer used in physiology,—the different humours having received particular names; but the vulgar still use phlegm to designate a stringy mucus, expectorated, or rejected by vomiting. The ancient chymists gave the name 'phlegm' to aqueous, insipid, and inodorous products obtained by subjecting moist vegetable matters to the action of heat.

PHLEGMA, gen. Phleg'matis, (φλεγμα, gen. φλεγματος,) Phlegm—p. Narium Crassum, Nasal mucus—p. Vitrioli, Sulphuric acid (very dilute.)

PHLEGMAGOGUE, Phlegmagoga, (phlegma, and αγω, 'I expel,') A medicine formerly believed capable of 'cutting' or removing phlegm.

PHLEGMOPYRA, (phlegma, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, adeno-meningeal.

PHLEGMASIA, (φλεγμασια, from φλεγω, 'to inflame,') Inflammation, Phlegmon—p. Adenosa Adenitis—p. Alba dolens puerperarum, Ph. dolens—p. Cellularis, Induration of the cellular tissue—p. Glandulosa, Adenitis—p. Myoica, Myositis—p. of the Peritoneum, Peritonitis.

PHLEGMASIQUE, Inflammatory.

PHLEGMAT'IA, (from phlegma,) (F.) Phlegmatie. Edema, Anasarca, Hydrops.

PHLEGMATIA DO'LENS, P. lac'tea seu alba dolens seu Leucophlegmatia dolens seu Sparagano'sis seu Scelon'gia seu Ede'ma puerperarum, Scelon'cus

unosa'ca serosa, Echy'ma oedemat'icum, Echy'mo'ma lymphat'icum, Is'chias a sparagano'si, Ede'ma lac'tea, Galactede'ma, Infare'tus lac'tei extremitatum, Metas'tasis lactis, Myster'al'gia galactica, Hydrophlegma'sia testis cellulosi, Cru'al Phlebitis, White leg, Swelled leg, Milk leg, White swelling of lying in women, (F.) Phlegmatie puerperale, Edème des nouvelles accouchées, Edème douloureux des femmes en couche, Depôt lacteux sur la cuisse, Edème actif des nouvelles accouchées, Enflure ou Engorgement des jambes et des cuisses de la femme accouchée, E. lacteuse des membranes abdominales. It occurs, for the most part, in the second or third week after delivery:—is limited to the lower extremity, and chiefly to one side; exhibiting to the touch a feeling of numerous irregular prominences under the skin. It is hot, white, and unyielding; and is accompanied, sooner or later, with febrile excitement. After a few days, the heat, hardness, and sensibility diminish, and the limb remains oedematous for a longer or shorter period. The disease frequently, if not generally, consists in the obstruction of the iliac or other veins. Owing to the pressure of the gravid uterus—the flow of blood being obstructed—the liquid part of it is thrown out into the cellular membrane of the limb. Sometimes the vein is found completely obliterated.

The treatment consists in the use of antiphlogistics:—the application of leeches or cupping-glasses near the groin, fomentations to the limb, &c.; and, when the active state has subsided, the use of a roller, applied gently at first, but, afterwards, gradually tightened.

PHLEGMATIA LACTEA, P. dolens.

PHLEGMATIE, see Empresma—p. Membranose et parenchymatose, Empresma.

PHLEGMAT'IC, (φλεγματικός,) Phlegmat'icus, Phlegmat'odes, (F.) Phlegmatique. Abounding in phlegm,—as the 'phlegmatic or lymphatic temperament.'

PHLEGMATIE, Phlegmatia—p. Puerperale, Phlegmatia dolens.

PHLEGMATO'DES, (φλεγματοδης, from phlegma, and odes.) Full of inflammation, or phlegm.

PHLEGMATOCHEMY, (phlegma, and χημια, 'chemistry,') see Chemistry.

PHLEGMATOPYRA, (phlegma, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, adenomeningeal.

PHLEGMATORRHAG'IA, Phlegmatorrhœ'a, Catarrh, (phlegma, and ραγη, 'a breaking forth,') Stahl and his partisans gave this name to a copious secretion, by the nostrils, of a limpid and thin mucus, without inflammation. It is the Coryza Phlegmatorrhag'ia of Sauvages. See Coryza.

PHLEGMATORRHŒA, (phlegma, and ρεω, 'to flow,') Catarrh.

PHLEGMHYMENTIS, Phlegmymentis.

PHLEGMON, (φλεγμων, 'I burn,') Phlogo'sis phlegmonie, Phleg'monie, Phlegma'sia, Is'ced'idiuni, Inflammatio, (Prov.) Beal. Inflammation of the areolar texture accompanied with redness, circumscribed swelling, increased heat and pain; which is, at first, tensile and lancinating; afterwards, pulsatory and heavy. It is apt to terminate in suppuration. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment, until suppuration seems inevitable, when the suppuration must be encouraged as the next favourable termination to resolution.

PHLEGMON PÉRINÉPHRÉTIQUE, Periphrenitis—p. Periuterine, see Periuterine.

PHLEGMONE, (φλεγμονη,) Inflammation, Phlegmon—p. Mammæ, Mastodynia apostematosa—p. Mastodynia, Mastodynia apostematosa—p. Musculorum, Myositis—p. Parotidæa, Parotitis—p. Parulis, Parulis—p. Peritonæi, Peritonitis—p. Ventriculi, Gastritis.

PHLEGMONEUX, Phlegmonous.

PHLEGMONODES, (φλεγμονοδης,) Phlegmonous.

PHLEGMONOID, (phlegmon, and eidos, 'resemblance,') Resembling phlegmon.

PHLEGMONOUS, Phlegmono'sis, Phleg'monoid, (F.) Phlegmoneux, (from phlegmon.) That which relates or belongs to phlegmon.

PHLEGMONOUS INFLAMMATION is the active inflammation of the areolar membrane; in contradistinction to erysipelatous inflammation, or that of the skin.

PHLEGMOPYRA. (phlegma, and πυρ, 'fire, fever,') Fever, adenomeningeal.

PHLEGMORRHAGIA, (phlegma, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,') Bleorrhœa.

PHLEGMORRHAGIE PULMONAIRE, Bronchorrhœa.

PHLEGMORRHŒA, (phlegma, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Bleorrhœa.

PHLEGMYMENITIS, Phlegmymenitis, (phlegma, ἔμνη, 'a membrane, and itis,') Inflammation of a mucous membrane.

PHLEGMYMENITIS ENTERICA, see Enteritis.

PHLEPS, (φλεψ, gen. φλεβος,) Vein.

PHLOGŒMIA, (phlogia, and ἄμα, 'blood,') see Hæmitis.

PHLOGIA, (φλογια,) Inflammation.

PHLOGICUS, (from phlogia,) Inflammatory.

PHLOGISTIC, (from phlogia,) Inflammatory.

PHLOGISTICI, Empresma.

PHLOGISTON, (φλογιστω, 'to burn,') Hydrogen.

PHLOGMUS, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLOGO'DES, (from phlogia, and odes,) Inflam'med, Inflam'matus, Inflam'mat'o'rius. Inflammation. An epithet employed particularly to express the red colour of the face.

PHLOGOGENE, (φλογ, gen. φλογος, 'flame,' and γενω, 'to beget,') Hydrogen.

PHLOGOPYRA, (φλογ, gen. φλογος, 'flame,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Synocha.

PHLOGOSÉ, Inflamed.

PHLOGOSÉD, Inflamed.

PHLOGO'SIS, (φλογωσις,) Incen'dium, Inflam'mation, (from phlogia,) Some writers use this word exclusively for external inflammation—phlegmon; others, for that which is superficial or erysipelatous.

PHLOGOT'ICA, Inflammations. The second order in the class Hæmatica of Good.

PHLOIOS, (φλοιος,) Cortex.

PHLOMUS, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLOOS, (φλοος,) Cortex.

PHLOR'IDZINE, Phlorid'zina, Phlor'idzin, (from phloos, and ῥιζα, 'root,') The bitter or active principle of the root and trunk of the apple, pear, cherry, and plum tree. It is deposited from the decoction on cooling; crystallizes in silky spicula of a dead white colour when in masses; or in long slender prisms or tables, when crystallized with care. 1000 parts of water, at a temperature of from 32° to 71°, only dissolve about one part; but at from 70° to 212°, it is dissolved in all proportions. It is very soluble in pure alcohol, but only slightly so in ether; z. g. 1.429. It has been administered successfully in intermittents, — 10 to 20 grains being generally required to arrest the paroxysm. It may be given either in the form of pill or powder.

PHLOUS, (φλους,) Cortex.

PHLOS, Verbascum thapsus.

PHLYCTÆ'NA, (φλυκταινα, from φλυω, 'to bubble up,') Phlyctæ'nia, Phlyct'is, Phlyzuc'ion, Ampull'a, Holophlyct'is, Phlyct'is, Phly'sis, (F.) Phlyctène. A tumour formed by the accumulation of a serous fluid under the epidermis.

PHLYCTÆNOÏDES, (φλυκταινοειδής,) Phlyctenoid.

PHLYCTÆNOPHTHALMIA, see Phlyctenularia.

PHLYCTÆNOSIS, (φλυκταινωσις,) The formation of phlyctenæ.

PHLYCTÆNULA, (dim. of phlyctæna,) see Hydatic and Phlyctenular.

PHLYCTÈNE, Phlyctæna.

PHLYCTENOID, Phlyctenoi'des, (phlyctæna, and ειδός, 'resemblance,') Resembling phlyctæna. An epithet for a variety of herpes.

PHLYCTEN'ULAR, (from phlyctænula,) Of or belonging to phlyctænula,—as phlyctenular ophthalmia; inflammation of the eye, accompanied with phlyctænulæ on the cornea, phlyctænophthalmia.

PHLYCTIDES, (pl. of phlyctis,) Phlyctenæ.

PHLYCTID'IUM, (dim. of phlyctis,) A circular or annular spot of inflammation of the corium, encircled by a red ring or zone, within which suppuration takes place. The genuine small-pox pustule, and that produced by the application of tartar emetic ointment, are examples of it.

PHLYCTIS, gen. Phlyctidis, (φλυκτις,) Phlyctæna.

PHLY'SIS, (φλυσις, from φλυω, 'to bubble up,') A cutaneous eruption. An ulcerative, subcutaneous tumour: flat, tensile, glabrous: diffused, hot, throbbing; at length fluctuating, with an acrid ichor.

PHLYSIS, Phlyctæna—p. Ecthyma. Ecthyma—p. Impetigo. Impetigo—p. Porrigo, Porrigo—p. Scabies, Psora.

PHLYZACIA, Ecthyma.

PHLYZACION, (φλυζακιον, from φλυζω, 'to bubble up,') Phlyctæna.

PHOBODIPSON, (φοβοδιπον, from φοβος, 'dread,' and διψα, 'thirst,') Hydrophobia.

PHOCOM'ELUS, (φωκη, 'a seal,' and μελος, 'a limb,') A monster, in which the limbs are shortened; the hands and feet appearing to exist alone, and to be inserted immediately on the trunk, as in the seal and the herbivorous cetacea.

PHŒNICINE, (φαινις, gen. φαινικος, 'red,') Hæmatin.

PHŒNICISMUS, (φαινις, gen. φαινικος, 'red,') Rubecula.

PHŒNIGMUS, (φαινιγμος,) Phenigmus—p. Pecthialis, Purpura simplex.

PHŒNIS DACTYLIFERA, (φαινις,) Date tree—p. Excelsa, Date tree.

PHŒNODINE, (from φαινωδής, 'blood red,') Hæmatin.

PHONAS'CIA, (φωνη, 'voice,' and ασκειν, 'to exercise,') The art of exercising the voice.

PHONA'TION, Phona'tio, Phon'e'is, Phon'o'is, (from phone,) The physiology of the voice.

PHONE, (φωνη,) Voice.

PHONESIS, Phonation.

PHONET'IC, Phonet'icus, Pho'nic, Pho'nicus, (F.) Phonétique, Phonique, (φωνητικος, from φωνη, 'sound,' 'voice,') Relating or appertaining to sound or to the voice.

PHO'NICA, (φωνικα, from phone,) The first order of the class Pneumatica, in Good's Nosology. Defined: diseases affecting the vocal avenues:—the passage of the voice impeded, or its power suppressed or depraved.

'PHONIQUE, Phonetic.

PHONON'OSI, Phononi'si, (phone, and νοσος, 'a disease,') Ponopathi'x, Mor'bi vo'cis. Diseases of the voice.

PHONOSIS, Phonation.

PHONOPATHIÆ, (phone, and παθος, 'affection,') Phonosis.

PHORA, (φορα,) Gestation.

PHORBE, (φορβη,) Pabulum.

PHORONOM'IA, (φορμω, 'I move,' and νομος, 'law,') The doctrine of muscular motion.

PHOROUS, (φορος, from φερω, 'I move or carry,') A suffix denoting conveyance. Hence, Galactophorous, &c.

PHOS, (φως, gen. φωτος,) Light.

PHOSPHAS, gen. Phosphatis, Phosphate. A salt formed by the union of phosphoric acid with a salifiable base.

PHOSPHAS CALCIUM STIBIATUM, Antimonial powder—p. Calci stibiatus, Antimonial powder—p. Natrium, Soda, phosphate of.

PHOSPHATE, Phosphas.

PHOSPHAT'IC, Phosphat'icus, (F.) Phosphatique, (from Phosphorus,) Relating to the phosphates; hence the Phosphat'ic Diath'esis is the habit of body which favours or occasions the deposition of the phosphates from the urine.

PHOSPHÈNE, (phos, and φαίνω, 'to become manifest,') Photopsia.

PHOSPHORE, Phosphorus.

PHOSPHORÈNESES. M. Baumes unites, under this generic name, diseases which he attributes to disordered phosphorization; i. e. to excess or deficiency of calcareous phosphates or its decomposition. Amongst these affections he ranks rachitis, osteomalacia, and gout.

PHOSPHORES'ENCE, Phosphorescentia, Luminosity, (from phosphorus.) The properties possessed by certain bodies of being luminous in obscurity, or under particular circumstances. This phosphorescence has been occasionally witnessed in man, when suffering from some wasting disease, and near death.

PHOSPHORIC AC'ID, Ac'idum phosphoricum, (F.) Acide phosphorique. A solid, colourless compound; highly sapid; very soluble in water, and vitrifiable by fire. It exists in bones combined with lime. It has been employed in medicine in the form of lemonade, in passive hemorrhage, typhus, phthisis, marasmus, &c., and in injection in cases of cancer of the uterus. It does not seem preferable to other acids. Acidum phosphoricum glaciat'è, and Acidum phosphoricum dilutum are official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States of 1863.

PHOSPHORNECROSIS, (phosphorus and nerosis.) See Phosphorus.

PHOSPHORURIA, (phosphorus, and ουρον, 'urine,') Urine, phosphorescent. Also, urine containing an excess of phosphates. See Urine.

PHOS'PHORUS, (φωσφορος, 'a lightbearer,' from phos, and φέρω, 'to carry,') Phosphorum, Autophosphorus, Ignis philosophicus, Lu'men constantans, (φως, 'light,' and φέρω, 'I carry,') (F.) Phosphore. An elementary, simple, or undecomposed substance; not metallic; solid; transparent or semitransparent; colourless; brilliant; flexible; of a sensible garlic odour; very inflammable, and susceptible of combining with the oxygen of the atmosphere, at even the ordinary temperature. S. g. 1.8. It does not exist pure in nature, but is found frequently united to other bodies. Its fumes in the manufacture of lucifer and Congreve matches have caused, it is said, necrosis of the lower jaw—Phosphornecrosis, phosphorus jaw disease, Lu'cifermatchmakers' Disease, Matches Disease.

Phosphorus has been used in medicine, dissolved in ether or suspended in the yolk of egg, as a stimulant; but the greatest precautions are necessary in its administration: hence it is rarely employed.

PHOSPHORUS JAW DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

PHOSPHURIA, (phosphorus, and ουρον, 'urine,') Urine, phosphorescent. Also, urine containing an excess of phosphates. See Urine.

PHOTOCAMPSIS, (phos, and καμψις, 'bending,') Refraction.

PHOTOMANIA, (phos, and μανία.) Insane delirium induced by light.

PHOTOPH'OBIA, Phenoph'obia, (phos, and φοβος, 'fear,') Aversion to light;—intolerance of light. Nyctalopia.

PHOTOPHOBICUS, Lucifugus.

PHOTOPHOBPTHAL'MIA, (from phos, φοβος, 'dread,' and ophthalmia.) Ophthalmia with great intolerance of light.

PHOTOPHOBUS, Lucifugus.

PHOTOP'SIA, V'isus lucidus, (phos, and ωψ, 'the eye,') A false perception of light, as of sparks, flashes of fire, &c., occasioned by certain conditions of the retina and brain, and by pressure on the eyeball. When pressure does not induce the luminous appearance, (F.) Phosphène, the existence of amaurosis may be inferred. See Metamorphopsia.

PHOTUR'IA, (phos, and ουρον, 'urine,') A luminous condition of the urine.

PHRAGMUS, (φραγμος, 'a fence,' from φρασσω, 'I enclose,') A row of teeth.

PHRASIS, (φρασις.) Voice, articulated.

PHRASUM, Marrubium.

PHRENITIS, gen. Phrenit'idis, (φρηνιτις, gen. φρηνιτιδος.) Phren'esis, Phren'esia, Phreneti'asis, Phrenis'mus, Phrenetis'mus, Cephalit'is, Encephalit'is, Cerebrit'is, Cephalalg'ia inflammator'ia, Karabitus (Arab.), Sibare, Sphacelis'mus cer'ebr'i, Empres'ma cephalit'is, Siri'asis, Sciri'asis, Sideral'tio, Inflammat'io seu Cavum'a phrenit'is, Phren'sy, Frenzy, Delir'ium, Brain Fever, (F.) Phrénésie, Cérèbrite, Inflammation du cerveau et du cervelet, (from phren, and itis.) A disease characterized by violent pyrexia, pain in the head, redness of the face and eyes, intolerance of light and sound, watchfulness, and delirium, either furious or muttering. Its causes are the same as those of other inflammations: sometimes, however, it is induced by a Coup de soleil; by inebriation; violent mental emotions, &c. Some authors have given the name Phren'itis and Meningit'is to inflammation of the membranes of the brain; and that of Cephalit'is, Encephalit'is, or Cerebrit'is to inflammation of the substance of the brain; but there are no pathognomonic symptoms, which can lead us to refer the seat of the disease to either of those parts exclusively. Phrenitis is, of course, a very dangerous affection, from the importance of the organ concerned. The most active treatment must necessarily be pursued. Repeated bleeding; purging; the application of ice to the shaved head; a position in which the head is raised; and the avoiding of irritation of every kind;—form the remedial means during the violent stage. After this has yielded, counterirritants to the nape of the neck or to other parts of the body will be useful adjuvants. When the brain and meninges were affected only symptomatically, as in inflammation of the diaphragm, the disease was formerly called Paraphrenit'is.

Hydrocephalus acutus is a variety of phrenitis.

 adie pediculaire*, Phthir'ina. A disease which consists in the excessive multiplication of lice on the human body, under conditions in which it does not ordinarily take place, and in spite of cleanliness. It has been asserted that the affection has often caused death. Simple and medicated baths have been recommended for its removal; lotions of the decoction or infusion of tobacco and stavesacre, mercurial frictions, &c.

 duced by inflammation and ulceration of the interior of the larynx, and sometimes by caries of the cartilages. Phthir'is trache'alis, Tracheopht'is, (F.) Phthir'ic trach'ale, is a similar affection, seated in the trachea. Chronic inflammation of the larynx and trachea may exist, however, without tubercles or phtthisis.

tuberculeuse, Crachement de pus. Occasionally, this formidable disease occurs accidentally; but, usually, it is caused by a conformation obtained from progenitors. This, at least, predisposes to it; and but a slight exciting cause may be required to rouse the predisposition into action. It is less a disease of the torrid and frigid zones; and in the temperate regions its pathology is often intimately allied with that of scrofula. It consists in the formation of tubercles in the lungs, which sooner or later soften and break down. In such a constitution, ulcerations of the lungs do not readily heal; and hectic fever—the universal attendant upon irritability and debility—is established. This persists, and gradually wears down the patient, till he ultimately expires, exhausted by the irritative fever. The chief symptoms are the following. The patient feels a sense of uneasiness in the chest, with severe fits of coughing, or a short and dry cough with dyspnoea. This may be considered the incipient stage. The cough then becomes extremely troublesome, especially in the morning; and dyspnoea is increased on the slightest exertion. The expectoration is evidently purulent, with fever in the evening, and circumscribed redness of the cheeks; wasting and colliquative sweats early in the morning. This must be considered the confirmed stage.—Phthisis consummata, Pneumophthisis. In the third, or last stage, the hectic is constant, with small pulse, pungent heat, colliquative sweats, and diarrhoea. The weakness becomes extreme, and the patient exhausted. Physical Signs.—1. In the first stage, whilst there are yet scattered miliary tubercles,—the only appreciable change at the exterior of the chest, and this is not constant, is a want of freedom in the movements under one or both clavicles. Percussion will generally discover a slight diminution of sound corresponding to the summit of one lung. In the same situation, auscultation shows that the inspiratory murmur is either weaker, rougher, or confused. The sound of expiration is more distinct. The voice and cough are rather more resonant, and wheezing or mucous râles are occasionally heard in the same region. 2. When the tubercular deposition has become more abundant, the motion of the chest is more markedly diminished under one or both clavicles. The loss of sound on percussion is more distinct, the inspiration, on auscultation, is bronchial, the expiration louder and more superficial, and the resonance of the voice and cough is increased. The rest of the lung is perhaps healthy, or the respiration may be puerile. 3. When the tubercles are undergoing softening,—in addition to the preceding signs, auscultation exhibits a subcrepitant râle around the apex of the lung, decreasing from above downwards. It is most distinct during or after the cough, and at the close of a deep inspiration. As the disease proceeds, the bubbling becomes successively larger, and ultimately gurgling is heard. The inspiration and expiration are cavernous or tracheal. The voice and cough indicate unusual resonance and pectoriloquy. The intercostal spaces are often depressed locally, and percussion may become gradually clearer and even tympanitic as the cavern increases.

It is only in the incipient state of this formidable disease, that advantage can be expected from any plan of treatment; and of all means that can be devised, that of removing to a climate in which air and exercise can be daily enjoyed during the autumnal, winter, and spring months is the best. See Climate. If this be impracticable, the patient must be kept in a regulated temperature, taking care that the chamber is duly ventilated; and gestation in the open air be used, whenever the atmosphere, although cold, is dry. The other indications will be: 1. To moderate inflammatory action; 2. To support the strength; and, 3. To palliate urgent symptoms. The whole treatment indeed is palliative. Counterirritants relieve pain: demulcents and mild opiates alleviate the cough: the mineral acids, united with opium, relieve the colliquative sweats; and chalk and opium the diarrhoea.

Dr. Wilson Philip has pointed out a particular species of phthisis, which is characterized, in the early stage, by a deranged state of the digestive organs; flatulent, irregular bowels; furred tongue; impaired appetite; unnatural fœces; and the epigastric region more or less full and tender on pressure. The affection of the lungs is here secondary. He calls it Dyspeptic phthisis.

It is divided into anim'al—Zoöphysiolog'ia, or Zoobiolog'ia; and veg'etable—Phytophyiolog'ia, or Phytobiolog'ia, according as it considers the life of animals or of vegetables singly. Compar'ative physiolog'ogy comprises both. Physiology is, also, general or special, according as it treats of life in the abstract or in some particular species. To the latter belongs the Physiology of Man—called, also, Hygienic Physiology to distinguish it from Pathological Physiology or Pathology.

PHYSIOLOGY, PATHOGENETIC, see Pathogenetic.

PHYSIONOMIA, Physiognomy.

PHYSIONOMIE, Physiognomy—p. Égarée, see Wild.

PHYSIS, (φύσις), Natura.

PHYSO, (from φύσα, 'air,') in composition, air.

PHYSOCE'LE, Pneumatocèle, Her'nia ventosa, Oscheocèle flatulenta, Emphyse'ma Scroti, (phýso, and κλήη, 'a tumour,') An emphysematous tumour of the scrotum; probably a case of intestinal hernia, containing much flatus.

PHYSOCEPH'ALUS, (phýso, and κεφαλή, 'head,') (F.) Physocéphale. Emphysematous tumefaction of the head.

PHYSOCELIA, (phýso, and κελία, 'intestines,') Tympanites.

PHYSO'DES, (φυσώδης, from φύσα, 'air,' and odes.) Full of air; apparently full of air—applied to tumours, &c.

PHYSOME'TRA, Emphyse'ma Uteri seu Uteri'mum, Hysteroph'ysē, Hysteremphyse'ma, Metremphyse'ma, Infus'tio Uteri, Tym'pany of the Womb, Uterine tympanites, (from phýso, and μύτρα, 'the womb,') A light, tense, circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrum, obscurely sonorous, with wind occasionally discharged through the os uteri with noise, Hysteropsoph'ia, Ædiæopsoph'ia uteri'na.

PHYSONCUS, (phýso, and ογκος, 'a swelling,') Emphysema.

PHYSOPSOPH'IA, (from phýso, and ψόφος, 'a noise,') A discharge of air with noise.

PHYSOSPASMUS, Colica flatulenta.

PHYSOSTIGMA VENENOSUM, (phýso, and στίγμα, in Botany, the top of the style,) Ordeal nut.

PHYSOSTIGMINE, see Ordeal nut.

PHYSOTHORAX, gen. Physothora'cis, Pneumothorax.

PHYTANATOMY, (phyton, and anatomy,) see Anatomy.

PHYTEL'EPHAS MACROCAR'PA, (phyton, and ελεφας, 'an elephant,') A tree of South America, called, by Willdenow, Elephanta'sia, the dense albumen of whose nut is the vegetable ivory, (F.) Ivoire végétal, which is as durable and nearly as hard as the ivory of the elephant.

PHYTICUS, (φυτικός), Vegetative.

PHYTIVOROUS, (phyton, and voros, 'I devour,') Phytophagous.

PHYTOALOPECIA, (phyto, and alopecia), P'rrigo decalvans.

PHYTOBIOLOGIA, (phyton, βίος, 'life,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') see Physiology.

PHYTOCHEMISTRY, see Chemistry.

PHYTOLAC'CA DECAN'DRA, P. vulga'ris, Pokeweed, American nightshade, Cancerroot, Poke, Skoke, Jucato Calleloe [?], Jal'ap, Pig'oon Ber'ry, Jalap can'cer root, Red weed, Red nightshade, Cocakum, Sola'mum racemo'sum America'num seu magn'num Virginia'num rub'rum, Bl'itum America'num, Gar'gel, (F.) Raisin d'Amérique, Phytolac'ca à dix étamines, Morelle en grappes, Méchoacan de Canada. Ord. Chenopodiaceæ; Ser. Syst. Decandria Decagynia, (phyton, and lacca, because the colour of the juice of the berries resembles that of lacca.) The berries—Phytolac'cæ Boc'ca (Ph. U. S., 1863)—and roots—Phytolac'cæ Ra'dix—are employed. The young stems, when boiled, are sometimes eaten at table; but when old, they must be cautiously used, as the plant is emetic and cathartic. It is most celebrated as a remedy in chronic rheumatism, and is given in the form of tincture of the ripe berries. It is, also, used in eutaneous eruptions, tinea capitis, itch, cancerous ulcers, &c.

The root is gathered and dried in the fall.

PHYTOLAQUE À DIX ÉTAMINES, Phytolacca decandra.

PHYTOLOGIA, (phyton, and λογος, 'a discourse,') see Vegetable—p. Medica, Botany, medical.

PHYTON, (φύτον), Vegetable.

PHYTOPARASITE, Epiphyte.

PHYTOPATHO'LOGY, Phytopatholog'ia, (from phyton, and pathology.) Properly, the pathology of vegetables; but occasionally applied to the knowledge of morbid states induced by vegetable growths.

PHYTOPH'AGOUS, Phytoph'agus; Phytiv'orous, Phytiv'orus; (phyton, and φαγω, 'I eat,') Feeding or subsisting upon vegetables.

PHYTOPHYSIOLOGIA, (phyton, and physiologia), see Physiology.

PHYTOGANIES, (phyton, and οργανον, 'an organ,') A name given by Bouchut to vegetable growths on the living body.

PHYTOSPERM'ATA, (F.) Phytospermes, (phyton, and σπέρμα, 'sperm,') Particles similar to the spermatozooids of animals, observed in vegetables, and presumed to possess a similar agency in reproduction.

PHYTOTOMY, (phyton, and τεμνω, 'to cut,') see Anatomy, (vegetable.)

PHYTOZO'AIRE, (phyton, and ζωον, 'animal,') Zoophyte.

PHYTOZOON, (phyton, and ζωον, 'animal,') Zoophyte.

PIA MA'TER, 'delicate mother,' Pia seu moll'lis seu ten'uis Mater, Pia me'ninx, Meninge interior seu vasculo'sa seu choro'i'des, In'ner lam'ina of the Méninge, (Ch.), Membra'na vasculo'sa Cer'ebr'i, M. Cer'ebr'i ten'uis seu moll'lis seu prof'pria, (F.) Pie mère, Méningette. The pia mater is a very delicate membrane, which covers the brain immediately, penetrates into its anfractuosities, and envelops, also, the cerebellum and the spinal prolongation, &c. Bichat does not regard it as a membrane, properly so called, but as a network of blood-vessels, united by a lax areolar tissue. The Pia Mater exterior is the portion of membrane which covers the exterior of the encephalon, and faces the arachnoid externally. The Pia Mater interior is that which lines the cerebral fosse, into which it penetrates by a cleft situate between the posterior part of the corpus callosum and the fornix; and by two other fissures, situate between the corpora fimbriata and thalami nervorum opticorum. The pia mater contains a great number of granulations similar to the Glandulæ Pacchioni.

PIA MATER TESTIS, Tunica vasculosa—p. Meninge, P. Mater.

PIAN, Frambesia.

PIANS, MOTHER OF, Mama-pian.

PIAR, (πιαρ), Fat.

PIARHÆ'MIA, Piarrhæ'mia, Lipæ'mia, (πιαρ, and αίμα, 'blood,') Fat in the blood.

PICA, Malacia—p. Africanorum, Chthonophagia.

PICAC, Euphorbia corollata.

PICACISM'US, Pica'tio, (πιξ, gen. picis, 'pitch,') Depilation by means of a pitch plaster.

PICATIO, Picacismus.

PICEA, (πιξ, gen. picis, 'pitch,') Pinus abies.

PICERION, (πικεριον), Butter.

PICHU'RIM BEANS. The seed,—Fa'ba Pichurim, F. Pechu'rei, Pa'ra nut, Sas'safra's nut, Puxiri, Brazil'ian nutmeg,—of a tree, supposed to be Per'sea pichurim, Ocote'a pichu'rim seu Puchu'ry, Tetranthe'ra pichurim, Nectan'dra pichu'ry, Puchu'ry or Puchy'ry of the Brazilians, Ord. Lauraceæ, which grows in Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela, and other parts of South America. They are of an elliptical shape; flat on one side, convex on the other; of an aromatic odour between that of nutmeg and of saffras, and of a spicy, pungent taste. The medical properties are the same as those of other aromatics. For the bark, see Pichurim cortex.

PICK, (from puke.) Emetic.

PICKERELWEED, SHOVEL, Unisema deltifolia.

PICOTE, Variola.

PICOTEMENT, (from piquer, 'to prick,') Pricking.

PICOTIN, Arum maculatum.

PICRA, (from πικρος, 'bitter,') Pulvis aloës et canella.

PICRÆNA EXCELSA, (πικρανω, 'to be bitter,') Quassia.

PICRIA, (πικρία.) Bitterness.

PICRIS, (πικρος, 'bitter,') Cichorium intybus.

PICRIUM SPICATUM, Coutoubea alba.

PICROCHOLOS, (πικροχολος, from picros, and χολη, 'bile,') Biliious.

PICROMEL, Bi'l'in, (picros, and μελι, 'honey,') A name given by Thénard to a colourless, soft substance, of an acrid, bitter, saccharine taste, nauseous smell, and very soluble in water, which is considered to be a bi'l'ate of soda. It is not an immediate principle, but a mixture of different substances. It forms part of the bile, and is generally classed amongst the animal immediate principles.

PICROPE'GÆ, Picrope'gae, (picros, and πηγη, 'a spring,') Mineral waters bitter from the presence of chloride of magnesium.

PICROS, (πικρος, 'bitter,') Amarus.

PICROTOX'IN, Picrotox'ina, Picrotox'ine, (picros, and toxicum, 'poison,') A vegetable alkali, discovered by M. Boullay in the Menispermum Cocculus. It crystallizes in quadrangular, white, brilliant, semitransparent prisms; which are excessively bitter, soluble in three parts of alcohol, and in fifteen of boiling water.

The Cocculus Indicus owes its poisonous properties to this principle.

PIE PLANT, Rheum rhabonticum — p. Rhabarb, Rheum rhabonticum.

PIE MÈRE, Pia mater.

PIE-MÉRITE, Inflamma'tio pi'æ m'atriæ, (from pie mère, and ite, for itis.) Inflammation of the pia mater.

They have been considered to possess a styptic quality; and are deemed serviceable in atonic affections of the kidney. See Bunium bulbocastanum.

PIG'S FLARE, Adeps suillus.

PIKROPE'GÆ, Picropegæ.

PIKRY, (from πικρος, 'bitter,') Pulvis aloës et canella.

PIL'A, (πιλος), Sphæ'ra, Pu'la, Ball. A gymnastic exercise, much used by the ancients as well as moderns. Also, a mortar and a pestle — Ac'omé.

PILA, Mortar, Pillar — p. Damarum, Ægagropila.

PILA MARI'NA, Sphæ'ra Mari'na seu Thalass'ia, Halyconium rotundum, (F.) Pelote de Mer, Zostère, Algue marine, A. commune ou des Verriers. Certain light, round, depressed, or oblong masses — inodorous and insipid — in which rushes, hairs, and the debris of shells are met with. These are found on the sea-shores, and have been regarded by Spielmann as consisting chiefly of the roots of the Zostera Mari'na seu Marit'ima, Alga Mari'na, (Big tangles, Ware, Wair, Sea-wear, Sea wrack, Eel grass), Phucagros'tis minor. Iodine is detected in the ashes, which accounts for their success in goitre. They have, also, been given as a vermifuge.

PILA RUPICAPRARUM, Ægagropila.

PILAIRE, Pileous.

PILAR, Pileous.

PILARE MALUM, Trichosis.

PILAT'IO, (pilus, 'a hair,') Fracture of the cranium in which the fissure is narrow, and has the appearance of a hair — a capillary fissure, (F.) Fente capillaire.

PILE, (pilus.) Hair.

PILÉA PU'MILA, (from pilus, 'a hair,') pilosus, 'hairy,') Richweed, Clearweed, Coolweed; indigenous; Order, Urticacæ; flowering from July to September; has been used as a wash in poisoning by Rhus. It has a strong, grateful smell.

PILEOLUM, (dim of pilosus.) Calotte.

PILEOLUS, Caul, Pileus.

PILEOUS, Pilo'sus, Pi'lose, Pi'lous, Pi'lar, (F.) Pileux, Pilaire, (from pilus, 'a hair,') That which relates to the hair. Hairy.

PILEOUS SYSTEM of Bichat is that formed by the hair. It comprises the different species of hair of the human body.

PILL, BLAIR'S. An empirical preparation of colchicum, much used in England in cases of gout.

PILL, BLAUD'S. These pills, proposed by M. Blaud as antichlorotic, are formed as follows:— Take of gum tragacanth, in powder, six grains; water, one drachm. Macerate in a glass or porcelain mortar, until a thick mucilage is formed, and if it be desired to prevent the formation of peroxide of iron, and to make the pill similar to that of Vallet, substitute a drachm of powdered sugar for the mucilage. Add afterwards of sulphate of iron, in powder, half an ounce. Beat well until the mixture is homogeneous, and add subcarbonate of potassa, half an ounce. Beat until the mass becomes of a deepgreen colour, and of a soft consistence. Divide into 48 pills or boluses. Dose, one a day; gradually increasing to two, and afterwards to three.

PILL, EVERLASTING, Pilula æternæ, (F.) Pilula perpetuelle. A pill once in vogue, and said to be composed of metallic antimony. It was believed to have the property of purging as often as it was swallowed. A lady having swallowed one of these pills, became seriously alarmed at its not passing. "Madam," said her physician, "fear not; it has already passed through a hundred patients without any difficulty." — (Paris.)

This is a form that has been employed as a substitute for the Pilules de Lartigue, the composition of which is not known. M. Bouchardat recommends for the same purpose a combination of Extractum colocynthidis compositum, Extractum colchici and Extractum opii, which is almost identical with pills prescribed by Sir Henry Hallford for the gout; the only difference being, that the latter substitutes Dover's powder for the Extractum opii. Prof. Wittstein affirms that their composition is powdered colchicum, two grains; sugar and mucilage, each half a grain.

A pill. (F.) Pilule. A simple or compound medicine, weighing from one to five grains, of a firm consistence and spherical form; intended to be swallowed at once, without chewing. The Pill differs from the Bolus, the latter being softer and larger.

Medicines are often given in the form of pill, on account of their disagreeable taste and odour, and for the like reason they are now sugar-coated. Pilula also means a Pillular mass, or the mass formed by the amalgamation of the different articles that enter into the composition of the pill. To form the mass into pills, it is rolled out and divided by the spatula on a pill tile or by a pill machine.

PIN'EAL or PINE'AL, Pinea'lis, (F.) Pinea'le, (pineae, 'a pine cone,') That which resembles a pine cone.

PINEAL GLAND, Glandula pinealis, Cerebral epiphysis, Caudarium, Conoides corpus, Corpus turbina'tum, Pennis seu Virga seu Turbo cerebri, is a small body, of conical shape; pale red or grayish colour; and soft consistence; situate between the fornix and the tubercula quadrigemina. It almost always contains sabulous particles, Sabulum conarii, Brain Sand, Pineal Sand. When these are grouped together over the base of the gland, they form the Acer'ulus Cerebri of Sömmerring, Acer'uli seu Lapilli Glandulae pinealis. From its anterior parts arise two medullary striæ, which proceed over the posterior commissure; coast along the optic thalami, and unite at the anterior pillar of the fornix,—the Habenæ, Habenulae or reia of the pineal gland—Peduncul'culi conarii, see Peduncles of the Pineal Gland.

The uses of the pineal gland are unknown. Descartes supposed it to be the seat of the soul!

PINNULÆ HEPATIS, Lobes of the liver.

PINO'LI (S.). A preparation used for subsistence on long journeys in the West. It is parched corn, beaten or ground very fine, and sweetened with sugar, to be used with water, and drunk on the march. It is the cold flour of the Indians, and early Western pioneers.

PINONCILLO TREE, Castigleonia lobata.

PINS and NEEDLES, see Leg asleep.

PINSWEAL, Furunculus.

PINT, ([Sax.] pýnτ,) Octarius.

PINTA, (from [S.] pintar, 'to paint,') Blas'tain: a disease, which is said to prevail in Mexico, and to be a variety of Pityriasis versicolor.

PINUS ABIES. P. excel'sa seu pic'e'a, A'b'ies, A. ru'bra seu excel'sa seu pic'e'a, El'at'e thele'a, Pice'a, Nor'way Spruce Fir, Yew'leard Fir. Nat. Ord. Conifere. Sex. Syst. Monoccia Monadelphia. The tops are used in making Spruce Beer.

Ess'ence of Spruce, Essen'tia Abi'etis, is a fluid extract, prepared by decoction from the twigs of this species of fir. From this is made Spruce Beer.

This fir affords the Burgundy pitch and common frankincense. 1. Bur'gundy or White pitch, Pix Burgun'dica (Ph. U. S. 1863) seu al'ba seu ar'ida seu abiet'na seu abi'etis, Resi'na abi'etis hu'mida, R. al'ba hu'mida, P'i'ni abi'etis resi'na spon'te concre'ta, (F.) Poix blanche ou grasse ou jaune ou de Bourgogne. This prepared concrete juice is of a close consistence, rather soft, of a reddishbrown colour, and not unpleasant smell. It is very adhesive to the skin; and, consequently, forms excellent plasters for remaining upon the part for some time;—as in cases of affections of the chest. 2. Abi'etis Resi'na (Ph. L. since 1809), Com'mon Frank'incense, Perrosin, Tus, Thus, Th. femini'num seu ru'ga'r'e, Olib'anum vulga'r'e seu sy'lv'es't'r'e, Resi'na abi'etis sic'ca, Resi'na of the Spruce Fir. It is solid, dry, brittle; externally, brownishyellow; internally, whitish. Used in plasters like the last.

PINUS ABIES, see P. picea—p. Alba, P. picea. PINUS BALSAMEA, A'b'ies balsame'a seu balsamif'era, Pen'cea balsame'a, Bal'sam fir. The tree which affords the Can'ada Bal'sam, Bal'samum Canaden'se seu de Can'ada, Resi'na strobili'na, Terebin'th'ina Canaden'sis seu P'i'ni balsame'a, Can'ada Tur'pentine or Bal'sam, Bal'sam of Fir, (F.) Baume de Canada. It is one of the purest turpentine, and has the common properties of those substances, and is much employed by microscopic observers.

PINUS CANADENSIS, A'b'ies Canaden'sis, Hem'lock, Hemlock Spruce. A tree, which is abundant in Canada, Nova Scotia, and the more northern parts of New England, and is found in the elevated and mountainous regions of the Middle States. The pitch—Pix Canaden'sis, Can'ada Pitch, Hem'lock Pitch—obtained from it is commonly known under the name Hemlock Gum.

PINUS CANDICANS, P. Picea.

PINUS CEM'BRA, P. Monta'na, Aphernous'ti Pine. It yields an agreeably scented turpentine:—the Carp'athian Bal'sam, Bal'samum Carp'athic'um seu Lib'ani, Carp'athic'um, Br'i'ng'on Tur'pentine. The nuts, Cem'bro nuts, Nu'clei Cem'bra, have an eatable kernel, and yield oil. The shoots yield Riga Balsam by distillation.

PINUS DAMAR'RA, Ag'athis Damar'ra, grows in the East India Islands. The juice speedily concretes into a very hard resin,—the Damar'ra turpentine.

PINUS EXCELSA, P. abies—p. Gallicia, P. picea.

PINUS LAR'IX, A'b'ies lar'ix, Lar'ix, L. communis seu decid'ua seu Europ'e'a seu pyramida'lis. The Larch, (F.) Mélèze. From this tree exudes Or'enberg gum, Br'i'ng'on moun'tain, Gum'mi lar'icis seu Orenburgen'se seu Uralen'se, Mon'na Briganti'na seu laric'e'a. It also yields, by boring, Com'mon Ven'ice Tur'pentine, Resi'na Lar'icis, Terebin'th'ina Ven'eta seu laric'ina, P'i'ni Lar'icis resi'na liq'uida, (F.) Térébenthine de Venise ou de Mélèze. It is usually thinner than the other sorts of turpentine.

PINUS MU'GHOS. The Moun'tain or Mu'gho Pine, P'i'nus Pumilio. From the extremities of the branches exudes the Resi'na Strobili'na, of the Germans, or Hungarian Bal'sam. It is also obtained, by expression, from the cones. By distillation, the Hungarian balsam affords the Krum'holz oil, Oleum Templi'num.

PINUS PALUSTRIS, see Pinus sylvestris.

PINUS PICEA, P. A'b'ies, A'b'ies, A. pice'a seu pectinata seu Gal'lica seu al'ba seu can'dic'ana seu vulga'ris seu tarifi'lia, Europ'e'an Sil'ver Fir Tree, El'at'e, (F.) Sapin commun. By piercing the tubercles of the bark of this fir, the Strasburg Turpentine, is obtained:—the Resi'na Abi'etis (Ph. L. before 1809), Oleum Abi'etis, Terebin'th'ina Argentoratensis.

PINUS PINASTER, see P. sylvestris.

PINUS PINEA, Stone Pine, P'i'na, P'i'nus, P. uber'rima seu sati'ra. The nuts, Zir'bel nuts, Pine nuts, Nu'clei P'i'neæ, P'i'nei, Pine'oli, (F.) Pin à pigeons, are eaten raw, or preserved like almonds. They are, also, used in emulsions.

PINUS PUMILIO, see Pinus Mughos—p. Sativa, P. pinea.

PINUS SYLVESTRIS, Pinas'ter, Pen'cē, Scotch Fir. This pine, as well as P. marit'ima (P. Pinaster), and other species of Pinus, affords common turpentine and its oil, resin, tar, and pitch. 1. Com'mon Tur'pentine of Euro'pe, Terebin'th'ina, T. vulga'r'is seu communis, Resi'na pi'ni, Bijou, Horse Tur'pentine, Bordeaux Tur'pentine, (F.) Térébenthine de Bordeaux, Térébenthine commune, is obtained by wounding the tree in hot weather. It is used, chiefly, as a dressing for wounds, &c., in horses, and for the distillation of the oil, (see Oleum Terebinthinae.) The whitu Tur'pentine or common Tur'pentine of America—Terebin'th'ina, Ph. U. S.—is produced chiefly from P'i'nus palustris, Yellow pine, and P. ta'd'a, Loblolly pine, and perhaps from other species inhabiting the Southern States. When the oil is distilled with water, yellow resin, or Ros'in, Resi'na, Ph. U. S., Resi'na flu'va, is left, which is only used in the formation of ointments and plasters. If without the addition of water, the residuum is common resi'na or Col'ophony. 2. When the cold begins to check the exudation of the common turpentine, part of it concretes in the wounds. This is called, in France, Gallipot, Barras; and White Ros'in, Resi'na alba, when hardened after long exposure to the air. 3. When the old trees are subjected to distillation, in a coarse manner, Tar is obtained—Hypog'pissos, Pis'sa, Pix ced'ria seu liq'uida, Resi'na pi'ni empyrenmat'ice liq'uida, Terebin'th'ina empyrenmat'ice, Alchit'ra, Alchit'ra Ced'ria, (F.) Gondron, G. végétale, Poix liq'uide, Brai liq'uide.

Tar water, Aqua Pice'a seu Pice'a, Infusum Pice'e liq'uidæ (Ph. U. S. 1863), seu Pice'e empyrenmat'ice liq'uidæ, Pol'tio pice'a, (F.) Eau de Gondron, which is made by mixing two pints of tar with a gallon of water, stirring with a wooden rod for fifteen minutes, and when the tar has subsided, straining and keeping in well stopped bottles, was, at one time, a fashionable remedy in numerous complaints, and its use has been revived, since its virtues have been presumed to be owing to creasote. It is employed chiefly in pulmonary affections, and the vapour has been recommended in phthisis and other diseases of the lungs. It is used externally as a detergent. A wine or beer of tar, Tar'beer, Jess' beer, has been employed in Philadelphia in similar cases. It may be made by adding to tar enough beer to saturate it, mixing, and allowing them to macerate for three days, with occasional agitation. The dose is a table-spoonful. 4. Com'mon Pitch, Pix nigra, Black Pitch, Bur'nea, Bur'nia, Stone Pitch, Pix sic'ca, P. a'tra, P. nava'lis, Zopis'sa, Palimpis'sa, P. ar'ida (Ph. L. before 1809), (F.) Poix noire, P. noire, is obtained by inspissating tar. It is used only as a resolvent in plasters.

PINUS TÆDA, see P. sylvestris—p. Taxifolia, P. picea—p. Uber'rima, Pinus pinea—p. Vulgaris, P. picea.

PIONE, Pæonia.

PIORTHOPNEA, (πιου, 'fat,' and orthopnea.)
Pneulthopnea.

PIOULQUES (F.). A kind of sucking pump, invented by Louis, for extracting water that had entered internal cavities, in cases of drowning.
A useless instrument.

PIP, Syphilis.

PIPE PLANT, Monotropa uniflora.

— is aromatic; taste at first cooling, afterwards pungent. The active principle is an essential oil — O'leum Cubebe, oil of cubebes — which is officinal in the Pharm. U. S. The properties of the cubeb are stimulant and purgative. It is used only in gonorrhœa. Dose, from ℥j to ʒj, in powder, three or four times a day; if of the volatile oil, 10 or 12 drops.

Tur'key yel'low ber'ries, — the dried fruit of the

(from piper.) A resinoid substance, obtained from the piper nigrum by M. Erstâdt, in which a part of the virtues of the pepper resides. It has been employed, like quinia, in intermittents, and successfully. Dose, gr. v — x.

PIPEROID, Piperoidum, Zingib'erin, (piper, and eidos, 'resemblance.') A yellow syrupy mass obtained by exhausting ginger root by ether. It is soluble in ether, alcohol, and oils, and may be given in tincture, sugar, lozenge, or syrup, in cases where ginger is indicated.

is passed into a liquid to be removed, — from the surface of a precipitate, for example. The liquid is drawn into the tube by applying the mouth to the free extremity.

PIPIN'NA, Ment'ula par'va. A small penis.

PIPPERIDGE BUSH, see Oxyacantha Galeni.

PISISSEWA, Pyrola umbellata — p. Spotted,
Pyrola maculata — p. White, Pyrola maculata.

PIPTONYCHIA, (πιπτα, 'to fall,' and onyx, onyxos, 'the nail,') Onychoptosis.

PIPTOSTEGIA OPERCULATA, see Batata
de purga — p. Pisonis, Convolvulus mechoacan.

PIQUETÉ, (from piquer, 'to prick, to lard,') see Sablé.

PIQÛRE, Puncture, Wound, punctured.

PIQUEURS MÉDECINS, 'Puncture doctors.' A name at one time given in derision, in the Parisian hospitals, to those physicians who employed acupuncture in almost all diseases.

PIRIFORMIS, Pyramidalis.

PIROGOFF'S OPERA'TION. A mode of amputating at the ankle, proposed by Pirogoff, of Russia, which consists in retaining a portion of the calcaneum to impart greater length and roundity to the stump.

PIRTLING, (old E.) Slaving.

PIRUS, see Pyrus malus.

PISA, CLIMATE OF. Pisa has long been celebrated as one of the most favourable climates in Italy, for the consumptive. It is genial, but somewhat oppressive and damp. It is softer than that of Nice, but not so warm; less soft, but less oppressive than that of Rome.

PISCIARELLI, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. A spring at Monte Secco, in Italy, between Lake
Agnano and Solfatara. It is thermal (100° Fah.), sulphureous, and carbonated; and is chiefly used in old ulcers, leucorrhœa, chronic diarrhœa, and in cutaneous affections.

PISCID'IA ERYTHRINA, (piscis, 'a fish,' and cædere, 'to kill,') Jama'ica Dog'wood. Ord.
Leguminosæ. A small branching tree, common in most of the West India Islands; Diadelphia
Decandria of Linnaeus. It is used in the West Indies to poison fish. It appears to be an acro-narcotic, and has been used in the form of a tincture of the bark of the root in toothache.

PISCINA, 'a fish pond,' Baignoire.

PISCIV'OROUS, Pisciv'orus, Ichthyoph'ogous,
Ichthyoph'agus, (piscis, 'a fish,' and voro, 'I eat,')
Feeding or subsisting on fish.

PISIFORM, Pisiform'is, (pisum, 'a pea,' and forma, 'shape,') Pealike, pea-shaped.

PISIFORME, Os, Os lenticula'rè seu orbicula'rè seu ca'tra ord'inem cor'pi, (F.) Os hors du rang, is the fourth bone of the first row of the carpus.
It is round, and gives attachment to the tendon of the cubitalis anterior, and to the anterior transverse ligament of the carpus. It is articulated, behind, with the os cuneiforme.

PISO, Mortar.

PISSA, (πισσα,) Pitch, see Pinus sylvestris.

PISSASPHAL'TUS, Pissasphaltum, Min'eral
Pitch, (piassa, and ασφαλ'τος, 'bitumen,') (F.) Poix minérale. A thicker kind of Petro'leum or Rock oil; formerly employed as a vulnerary. It is synonymous with Glu'tinous bitu'men, Mal'ta bitu'- men, and Min'eral tar.

PISSELE'UM, O'leum Pic'inum, (piassa, and elaion, 'oil,') An oily matter obtained from boiling pitch, and used for the same purposes as tar.

PISSELEUM INDICUM, Petroleum.

PISSEMENT, Micturition — p. de Pus, Pyuria
— p. de Sang, Hæmaturia.

PISSENLIT, 'piss a-bed,' Leontodon taraxacum.

PISSE-SANG, 'piss blood,' Fumaria.

PISSE'ROS, (πίσσηρος, 'made of pitch.') Ancient name of a cerate, prepared of olive oil, oil of roses, and dried pitch. It was, also, called Cera'tum pica'tum, and C. tetraphar'micum.

PISSETES, (πισσητες,) Vinum pica'tum. A wine prepared from tar and the must of the grape. It was regarded to be stomachic.

PISSEOSIS, (from πσσα, 'pitch,') see Depilatory.

PISSEWEED, Anthemis cotula.

PISTACHIO NUTS, (πισταχια,) see Arachis hypogea, Pistacia vera.

PISTACIA CHIA, P. lentiscus.

PISTACIA LENTIS'CUS, P. Chia, Terebin'thus lentis'cus, Leutis'cus vulga'ris, Schi'nos; the Mas'tich Tree. Ord. Terebinthaceæ. The wood of this tree abounds with the resinous principles of mastic; and a tincture made from it has been used in the cure of dyspeptic affections, gout, and dysentery. It yields, by incision, the resin Mas'tich, Mus'tic, Resi'na Lentis'cina, Men'frige, Mas'tiche (Ph. U. S.), Mas'tix, Pista'cie Lentis'ci Resi'na. This resin has an agreeable smell when heated: is almost insipid; in globular, irregular, yellowish, semitransparent masses; soluble in ether; partially so in alcohol. It is stimulant, and has been used in old coughs, and gleet, and is chewed to sweeten the breath. It is sometimes, also, employed to stop holes in carious teeth.

Oil of Mas'tich, Mastichela'on, O'leum Mastich'vnum, is mentioned by Dioscorides.

PISTACIA NARBONENSIS, P. lentiscus—p. Reticulata, P. lentiscus.

PISTACIA TEREBIN'THUS, P. Narbonen'sis seu reticulata seu ve'ra, Tur'pentine Tree, Hab-el-Kal'limbut, Terebin'thus vulga'ris, Termin'thus. The tree which affords the Cy'prus Tur'pentine, Resi'na Terebin'thi, Terebin'thina ve'ra seu Chi'a seu Cy'pria, (F.) Térébinthine de Chio. This substance is classed amongst the resins. It is procured by wounding the bark of the trunk. The best Chio turpentine is of about the consistence of honey; very tenacious, clear, and almost transparent; of a white colour inclining to yellow, and of a fragrant smell; moderately warm to the taste, but free from acrimony and bitterness. It resembles in virtues the other turpentine.

PISTACIA VE'RA, (πισταχ.) Name of the tree which affords the Nux Pista'cia. Pista'chio nuts have a sweetish, unctuous taste, resembling that of sweet almonds. Like these, they afford an oil, and may be formed into an emulsion.

PISTATION, Epistation.

PISTILLUM, (pi'stare, 'to pound,') Pilum.

PISTOLOCHIA, (πιστος, 'faithful,' and λοχεια, 'parturition,') Aristolochia pistolochia.

PISTORIENSIS GLADIUS, (from Pistorium, now Pistoia, in Tuscany, Pistori).

PI'SUM, (πισον,) P. sativ'um, Pea, Gar'den pea, (F.) Pois, P. cultivé. The seeds of the pea. Ord. Leguminosæ, Sec. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria, are much employed as an aliment, both in the fresh and dried state. They are farinaceous, and, when dried, not easy of digestion.

PIT, ([Sax.] pȳc or pic), Pock mark—p. of the Stomach, Fossette du cæcr.

PITA'YA BARK, of South America. The bark of Cincho'na pita'ya, Ord. Cinchonaceæ, is preferred in Colombia to any other. It contains a new vegetable alkali, to which the name Pitayine has been given.

PITAYINE, see Pitaya bark.

PITCAITHLEY, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. These saline springs, at Pitcaithley, about four miles from Perth, Scotland, contain chlorides of sodium and calcium.

PITTA'CIUM. A pitch plaster, (from πιττε 'pitch,')

PITTING, Pock mark.

PITTO'SIS, (from πιττα, 'pitch,') see Depilatory PITTO'TA. Medicines in which pitch is the chief ingredient.

PITTS'BURG, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. A chalybeate mineral spring, situate about four miles south-west of Pittsburg, in Pennsylvania. It contains chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, oxide of iron, sulphate of lime, and carbonic acid.

PITUITA, Mucus, Phlegm—p. Narium, Nasal mucus.

PITUITAIRE, Pituitary, Pituitary membrane.

PITUITARY, Pituita'rius, (F.) Pituitaire, (from pituita.) Concerned in the secretion of mucus or phlegm. A name given to several parts.

PITUITARY BODY, P. Gland—p. Fossa, Sella turcica.

PITUITARY GLAND, Glandula Pituitosa seu pituitaria seu basil'ria, Lacuna seu Appendicula cerebri, Senti'na, Hypoph'ysis seu Appendix cerebri, Glans pituitam excipiens, Corpus pituita're, Pituitary body;—(F.) Glande ou Corps pituitaire, Appendice sus-sphénoïdale du cerveau, (Ch.) A small, round body; the anterior portion of which is of a cineritious yellow hue, and the posterior, which is smaller, is whitish and pulpy. It occupies the sella turcica of the sphenoid bone. Its functions are unknown.

PITUITARY MEMBRANE, Schneide'rian Membrane, Membra'na pituitaria seu olfacto'ria, (F.) Membrane nasale ou olfactive ou pituitaire ou de Schneider, Pituitaire. The mucous membrane which lines the nasal fossæ, and extends to the different cavities communicating with the nose. In the nasal fosse, the membrane appears formed of two layers, intimately united;—the one in contact with the bone is fibrous;—the other is free at one surface. The latter is a mucous membrane, in which papillæ are not easily distinguishable, but which contains them, as well as a number of very small mucous follicles, that open into the cavity of the nares. On penetrating the maxillary, frontal, sphenoidal, and ethmoidal sinuses, the membrane becomes very thin, transparent, less vascular, and seems reduced to its mucous layer. The pituitary membrane receives the impression of odours by means of the expansion of the olfactory nerves upon it. It is the seat of smell.

PITUIITE, Mucus.

PITUITOUS, Pituito'sus, (F.) Pituitéux. (from pituita.) Consisting of, or resembling, or full of mucus or phlegm.

PITYRE'NUS, (πυρηνος,) Acerosus, Furfuraceus.

PITYRI'ASIS, (πυρρον, 'bran,') Lepido'sis Pityri'asis, Pityri'sma, Her'pes furfura'ceus seu fari'no'sus, Porri'go (of some), Tin'ea furfura'cea seu porrigino'sa, Furfura'tio, Furfuris'ca, Dan'driff, Dan'driff, Dander, (Sc.) Luss, (Prov.) Room, Rum'net, (F.) Teigne, Dartre, D. furfuracæ volante;—a very superficial affection; characterized by irregular patches of thin scales, which repeat only exfoliate and recur; but which never form crusts, or are accompanied with excoriations. It is not contagious. It occurs under three or four varieties of form.

PITYRIASIS, Porrigo—p. Nigra, Melasma—p. Versicolor, Chloasma.

PITYRISMA, gen. Pityriasis, (πιτυρισμα,) Pityriasis.

PITYROIDES, (πιτυροειδής, from πιτυρον, 'bran,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Furfuraceus.

PITYRON, (πιτυρον, 'bran,') Furfur.

PIV'OTINE, Pæonia.

PIV'OTING. In dentistry, an operation which consists in fastening a new crown upon the root of a tooth by means of a piece of gold wire, called 'a pivot.'

PIX, gen Picis, (πισσα, 'pitch,') see Pinus sylvestris, Sperm—p. Abietina, see Pinus abies—p. Abietis, see Pinus abies—p. Alba, see Pinus abies—p. Arida, see Pinus abies, and Pinus sylvestris—p. PLACE'BO, 'I will please,' (from placeo.) A medicine, prescribed rather to satisfy the patient than with any expectation of its effecting a cure.

PLACEN'TA, (πλακους, gen. πλακωντος, 'a cake,') P. uteri seu uterina seu uteri car'nea, He'par seu Je'cur uteri'num, Ca'ro seu Affu'sio orbicularis, Mo'za. A soft, spongy, vascular body, adherent to the uterus, and connected with the fœtus by the umbilical cord. It is not in existence during the first period of the embryo state, but its formation commences perhaps with the arrival of the embryo in the uterus. It is generally considered to have two portions, one fœtal, and the other maternal. The fœtal consists of highly vascular villi and tufts, which contain the inosculating loops of the umbilical arteries and umbilical vein of the fœtus. The maternal portion is considered by Dr. Reid to consist, essentially, of a large sac formed by the inner coat of the vascular system of the mother, into which the maternal blood is poured by the curling arteries of the uterus, and from which it is returned by the uteroplacental veins. The tufts and villi of the fœtal placenta are ensheathed by this inner coat of the maternal vascular system; and, according to Prof. Goodsir, two distinct sets of nucleated cells—one maternal and the other fœtal—separate the maternal and fœtal portions where they come in contact, one set of which are probably, he thinks, concerned in the separation of nutritive matter from the maternal blood, and the other destined to convey it into the vessels of the fœtus. The placenta is formed of several lobes or cotyledons, which can be readily distinguished from each other on the uterine surface; but towards the fœtal surface are confounded into one mass. It is composed of the umbilical vessels, areolar tissue, and whitish, resisting filaments, which are vascular ramifications obliterated. Lymphatic vessels have also been presumed to exist in it; and nerves have been traced, proceeding from the great sympathetic of the fœtus.

The umbilical cord usually arises from the centre of the placenta; but occasionally from its edge, when it is called bat'tledore placenta.

The main function of the placenta appears to be like that of the lungs in the adult. It admits of the blood of the fœtus being shown to that of the mother, and undergoing requisite changes. It may, also, be an organ for nutritive absorption, as observed above.

Animals, which have no placenta—as the Marsupialia—are called implacental and nonplacental.

PLACEN'TA, BATTLEDORE, see Placenta—p. Cruoris, see Blood—p. Febrilis, Ague cake—p. Oblata, P. prævia—p. Obvia, P. Prævia.

PLACENTA PRÆ'VIA, (præ, 'before,' and via, 'way,') P. ob'via seu obla'ta. Presentation of the placenta; a condition which gives rise to unavoidable hemorrhage from the uterus. The safety of the female depends upon speedy delivery.

PLACENTA SANGUINIS, see Blood—p. Uteri Succenturiata, Decidua.

PLACEN'TAL, Placentalis, (F.) Placentaire. Relating or appertaining to the placenta. Possessed of a placenta,—as 'a placental mammal.'

PLACENTI'TIS, Placounti'tis, Placoi'tis, Inflamma'tio placen'tæ, (placenta, and itis.) Inflammation of the placenta.

PLACEN'TULA, 'a little cake,' (dim. of placenta, 'a cake,') A rudimental placenta. The placenta of an abortion.

PLACOITIS, (πλακους, 'placenta,' and itis.) Placentitis.

PLACOUNTITIS, (πλακους, gen. πλακωντος, 'placenta,' and itis.) Placentitis.

PLADAROMA, gen. Pladaro'matis, (πλαδαρωμα,) Pladariosis.

PLADARO'SIS, Pladaro'ma, Pladar'otes, (from πλαδαρος, 'soft,' and osis.) A soft tumour on the eyelid, unaccompanied with redness or pain. Trachoma.

PLADAROTES, (πλαδαροτης.) Pladariosis.

PLAFOND DES VENTRICULES DU CER-VEAU, ([F.] plafond, 'a ceiling,' from plat, 'flat,' and fond, 'ground,') Corpus callosum.

PLAGA, (πλαγη,) Ictus, Wound. Formerly, any kind of wound or disease from violence.

PLAGIOBOL'IA, Planobol'ia, (πλαγίος, 'to one side,' and βαλλειν, 'to throw,') Imperfect emission of sperm into the vagina. Emission to one side; sometimes practised to render impregnation less probable.

PLAGUE, (from πληγη, plaga, 'a stroke,') Pes-tis, P. Orienta'lis seu bubona'ria orientalis seu ingui'na'ria seu contagio'sa seu acutiss'ima seu septica seu glandulo'sa seu ad'eno-septica seu ingui'na'ria, Pestil'itas, Ephem'era pestilentialis, E. mortif'era, Ta'bun, Liv'es ingui'na'ria, Clad'es glandula'ria, Phtho'ra, Pestilen'tia, Liv'es, Lo'i-mos, Fe'bris a'denonervo'sa, Læ'mos, Iæ'me, Læ'mia, Læmop'ora, Chaos'da, Anthra'ria Pestis, An'thracoty'phus, Fe'bris pestilens, Syn'ochus pestilentialis, Ty'phus pestis seu pestilentialis seu gravis'simus seu anthra'ciens seu bubon'ciens, Ex-anthe'ma pestis, Pest, Levant plague, Septic or glandular pestilence, The sick'ness, (F.) Peste, Typhus d'Orient, Fièvre du Lévant, F. aléno-nerveuse. An eminently malignant disease; endemic in the Levant; frequently epidemic, and destroying at least twothirds of those it attacks. It is a fever of the most aggravated kind, with affection of the lymphatic glands of the groins or axillæ, and carbuncles. Its miasmata—it has been conceived—adhere to different organic textures, to woollen goods, clothing, and furniture; and may thus be transported to a considerable distance; but this is disputed. The mean duration of the disease is six or seven days; some die in twenty-four hours, others not till ten or twelve days. Pathological anatomy has afforded little light with respect to it. Various means have been used for arresting it, but none have seemed to be pre-eminently distinguished. The great point is, to watch the indications as they develop themselves; and to treat the case, in general, like one of typhus gravior. It is universally agreed that the supuration of the buboes should be aided as far as practicable. For preventing the importation and spread of the plague, the Quarantine Laws were instituted; and when the disease has actually appeared, a cordon sanitaire has been drawn round the infected district, so as to prevent all communication.

PLAGUE OF ANTONINUS, Pes'tis Antoniniana, (F.) Peste Antonine. A severe febrile disease, which prevailed in the Roman empire, during the reign of Antoninus. It began in Asia, and passed westward. It resembled the Plague of Athens.

PLAGUE OF ATHENS, (F.) Pes'te d'Athènes. A febrile disease, which raged at Athens during the Peloponnesian war, in the 5th century before the Christian era; and a description of which is given in Thucydides. It was characterized by a cutaneous eruption, accompanied by small ulcerations, vomiting, affection of the respiratory organs, and diarrhoea. It began in the far East, and, before reaching Athens, ravaged Egypt, and the greater part of the Persian Empire.

PLAGUE, BLACK, Death, Black.

PLAGUE, COLD. A severe form of congestive fever, seen in the Southern States. Bilious pneumonia, in which there is no reaction, has been, also, so called.

PLAGUE CROSS. A cross formerly affixed by the authorities to the door of a house in which there was plague.

PLAGUE, PA'LI. A malignant fever, greatly resembling plague, which prevailed in Rajpootana after July, 1836.

PLAGUE SPOT, Plague token.

PLAGUE TO'KEN, Plague mark, Plague spot. A mark by which one struck with the plague was known. Perhaps the early stage of carbuncle in unfavourable cases. It is described as a small tubercle—Bos'sa—somewhat resembling a wart, callous, and more or less deficient in sensibility, varying in size from that of a millet-seed to that of a bean.

PLAGULA, (dim. of plaga.) Compress, Pledget, Splint.

PLAIE, (from plaga.) Wound—p. d'Arme à fen, Wound, gunshot—p. d'Arquebuse, Wound, gunshot—p. Contuse, Wound, contused—p. Eminentée, Wound, poisoned—p. par Arrachement, Wound, lacerated—p. à Lambeaux, see Flap.

PLAINATIVE, (from [F.] plaindre, 'to complain') (F.) Luctuensis.

PLANANTHUS FASTIGATUS, Lycopodium selago—p. Selago, Lycopodium selago.

PLANARIA LATIUSCULA, (from planus, 'flat,') Distoma hepaticum.

PLANARTHRA'GRA, (πλανη, 'a wandering,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Gout (wandering).

PLANCHER (F.), 'floor.' In anatomy, the inferior wall or boundary of a cavity.

PLANCHER DU CERVEAU, Tentorium.

PLANCUS, (planca, 'a plane, a table,') Leiodermis.

PLANE, (πλανη, 'a wandering,') Plexus.

PLANE, MESIAL, see Mesial.

PLANETSTRUCK, see Sideratio.

PLANE'TES, (πλανητης.) Planeticus, Planeticus, Errabundus, Erratic, (from πλανη, 'a wandering,') An epithet given to diseases whose returns are irregular—especially to intermittent fever; Planetes Fe'bris, F. Erratica, F. Erronea, F. Vaga.

PLANETICA ARTHRITIS, Gout, wandering.

PLANICUS, Planetes.

PLANIPEDES, (planus, 'flat,' and pes, gen. pedis, 'foot,') Steganopodes.

PLANITIES PEDIS, (from planus, 'flat,') Sole.

PLANO'BOLIA, (πλανη, 'a wandering,' and βαλλειν, 'to throw,') Plagiobolia.

PLANODIA, (πλανη, 'a wandering,' and ὄδω, 'a way,') A false passage,—as occasionally results from introducing the catheter.

PLANTA, Sole—p. Noctis, Hydroa, Sudamina—p. Pedis, Sole—p. Prima pedis, Tarsus.

PLANTA'GO, gen. Plantag'inis, (planta, 'sole,' ... from resemblance of the leaves,) P. Major,

Centiner'via, Arnoglos'sum, Septin'ria, Polyneur'on, Heptapleu'ron, Planta'go latifo'lia seu ma'jor seu vulga'ris, Great plantain, Way'bread, (Sc.) Wa'brau leaves, (F.) Plantain commun. Ord. Plantaginaceæ. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. The leaves have been said to be refrigerant, attenuant, subtyptic, and diuretic.

PLANTAGO AQUATICA, Alisma plantago.

PLANTAGO CORDA'TA, Heartleaved plantain, P. LANCEOLA'TA, Ribgrass; and P. VIRGINICA, White plantain, or Rib'wort, indigenous, have properties like Plantago major.

PLANTA'GO CORON'OPUS, Coronopod'ium, Cor'nus cervi'nium, Stell'a ter'ra, Planta'go, Buckshorn Plantain. Properties like the last.

PLANTAGO NITIDA, P. psyllium.

PLANTAGO PSYL'LIUM, P. nitida, Psyll'ium, P. erectum, Pulca'ris her'ba, Crystal'linum, Cynomoi'a, Branch'ing Plantain, Flea'wort, (F.) Herbe aux puces commune. The seeds have a nauseous, mucilaginous taste, and no remarkable smell. The decoction of the seeds is recommended in hoarseness and roughness of the fauces.

PLANTAGO VULGARIS, Plantago.

PLANTAIN DES ALPES, Arnica montana—p. Arbre, Musa paradisiaca—p. Branching, Plantago psyllium—p. Buckshorn, Plantago coronopus—p. Commun, Plantago—p. d'Eau, Alisma plantago—p. Great, Plantago major—p. Heartleaved, Plantago cordata.

PLANTAIN, RATTLESNAKE, Goodyera pubescens—p. Robin's, Erigeron bellidifolium.

PLANTAIN TREE, Musa paradisiaca.

PLANTAIN, WATER, Alisma plantago, Unisena deltifolia—p. White, Plantago Virginia.

PLANTAIRE, Plantar muscle—p. Grête, Plantar muscle.

PLANTAR, (from planta.) Plantaris, (F.) Plantaire. That which relates or belongs to the sole of the foot. This epithet has been given to several parts.

PLANTAR APO'NEURO'SIS, P. fasc'ia. A thick, dense, resisting aponeurosis; of a triangular shape, and superficially situate, which occupies the middle and sides of the sole of the foot, and furnishes insertions to several of the muscles of the region, either directly or through the medium of septa, which it sends between them.

PLANTAR ARCH, see Plantar arteries.

PLANTAR AR'TERIES. These are two in number, and arise from the extremity of the posterior tibial artery. They are distinguished into:—The inter'nal plantar ar'tery, situate above the abductor pollicis pedis. It extends from the termination of the posterior tibial to the trunk of one of the collaterals of that toe.—The exter'nal plantar ar'tery is larger than the preceding, and ought to be considered as the termination of the posterior tibial. Situate above the flexor communis digitorum pedis, it extends from beneath the calcaneum to the posterior extremity of the last metatarsal space. When it has reached this part, it turns from without inwards; advances towards the posterior extremity of the first metatarsal bone, and anastomoses with the perforating branch of the dorsalis tarsi. In the first part of its course, it furnishes calcaneal, articular, muscular, and adipous branches. The second portion of the artery is called the Plantar Arch or Cross. It gives branches in all directions. The inferior and posterior have received no name. The superior—three in number—are the posterior perforating ar'teries. The anterior branches are larger, and there are commonly four. They furnish the anterior perforating, and the collat'erals of the last four toes.

PLANTAR CROSS, see Plantar arteries—p. Fascia, P. aponeurosis.

PLANTAR LIG'AMENTS. A name given to the inferior ligaments, which unite the bones of the tarsus and metatarsus, to distinguish them from the superior, called dorsal.

PLANTAR MUS'CLE, Planta'ris, P. grac'ilis, Tibia'lis grac'ilis, Extensor tar'si mi'nor, (F.) Plantaire, P. Grêle, Jambier grêle, Petit fémoro-calcaneïen, (Ch.) A muscle, situate at the posterior part of the leg. It is long, thin, and narrow. Above, it is attached to the posterior part of the external condyle of the os femoris: below, it terminates by a long tendon, which is attached to the posterior and inner part of the calcaneum. This muscle extends the leg on the foot, and, conversely. It can, also, assist in the flexion of the leg on the thigh.

PLANTAR NERVES. These are two in number, and are furnished by the termination of the posterior tibial nerve. They are distinguished into—1. The internal plantar nerve, which extends from the inferior part of the tibial nerve to both sides of the first three toes, and the inner side of the fourth. It furnishes, also, branches to the abductor of the great toe; to the short flexor of the toes; to the accessory; to the short flexor of the great toe, the lumbricals, &c. 2. The external plantar nerve proceeds from the termination of the posterior tibial to the posterior extremity of the 5th metatarsal bone, and gives branches to the flexor brevis digitorum pedis, the accessory and the abductor of the little toe. This trunk subsequently divides into two branches;—the one—profunda—is distributed to the short flexor of the great toe: the interosseus and abductor pollicis pedis: the other—superficialis—sends filaments to the short flexor of the little toe, the two sides of that toe, the outer side of the 4th, and the last lumbricalis.

PLANTAR RE'GIONS or SUR'FACES are different regions or surfaces of the sole of the foot. Three are generally reckoned,—the internal, middle, and external.

PLANTAR VEINS follow an arrangement similar to that of the arteries.

PLANTARIA, Dengue.

PLANTARIS, Plantar, P. muscle—p. Superficies pedis, Sole—p. Verus, see Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans (accessorius.)

PLANUM OS. The papyraceous or orbital plate of the ethmoid bone—Lamina papyracea, Lamella plantina—was formerly so called.

PLANUM PEDIS, Sole.

PLANUM SUPERIORIS LINGUÆ. The upper surface of the tongue.

PLANURIA, (πλανη, 'a wandering,' and ουρον, 'urine.')

Discharge of urine through unwonted ways.

PLAQUEMINIER D'EUROPE, Diospyros lotus.

PLAQUES GAUFRÉES, 'honeycomb patches,' see Peyer glandulæ—p. Laitenses, see Taches lacteuses—p. de Peyer, see Peyer glandulæ.

PLASMA, gen. Plasmatis, (πλάσμα, 'a thing formed,' from πλάσσειν, 'to form,')

Liquor sanguinis. In antiquity, a gargle or mouthwash to clear the voice. Also, a pharmaceutical preparation from glycerin and starch heated together in the proportion of a fluidounce of the former and seventy grains of the latter in powder, gradually raised to the temperature of about 240°, constantly stirring. It constitutes the basis of different ointments, and keeps better than they do as usually made. Called also Glycamin.

PLASMAT'IC, Plasmaticus, (πλαστικος, 'to form,')

Having the power to give form, plastic.

PLASMEXHIDRÔSIS, (πλάσμα, εξ, 'out of,' and ἵδρωσις 'perspiration.')

Exudation of the plasma of the blood from the vessels.

PLAS'TER, (εμπλάστρον, from πλάσσειν, 'to smear, to cover over,')

PLASTIC, Plasticus, Formativus, Formativus, (F.) Plastique, (πλαστικος, from πλάσσειν, 'to form.')

That which forms, or serves to form.

PLASTIC ELEMENT. One which bears within it the germs of a higher form.—(Gerber.) Plastic or histogenetic or organoleptic elements of nutrition are those elements of food which go to the formation of organized tissue.—See Aliment.

PLASTIC FORCE. The generative or formative power in organized bodies. It is also called Nissus formativus, Vis seu Virtus plastica seu formativa seu essentialis seu reproductiva, Fucultas formatrix seu nutrix seu ancitrix seu vegetativa; Blas alterativum, Motus assimilativus, Anima vegetativa, Plasticus, Virtus formatrix, Plasticitas, Plasticity, Force of Nutrition, F. of assimilation, F. of Formation, F. of vegetation, Puissance du moule intérieur (Buffon), Bildungstricb, Germ force, of the Germans.

PLASTIC LYMPH, Liquor Sanguinis—p. Surgery, Morioplasticæ.

PLASTICISMUS, (πλασσειν, 'to form,') Plastic Foree.

PLASTICITAS, Plastic Foree.

PLASTICITY, Plastic Foree.

PLASTILYTIC, (πλασσειν, 'to form,' and λυω, 'to loose,') Antiplastic.

PLASTILYTICUM (HÆMATOLYTICUM), Spanæmic.

PLASTIQUE, Plastic.

PLASTODYNAMIA, (πλασσειν, 'to form,' and δυναμις, 'foree,') The manifestation of nutritive activity or power.

PLATA, (πλατη, from πλατυς, 'broad,') Seapula.

PLATANO, (platanus), Musa Sapientum.

PLATANIER, (platanus), Musa paradisiaca.

PLATANIÆRA ORBICULATA, (πλατυς, 'wide,' and ωρη, 'for anther,') Large roundleaved Orchis; indigenous. Order, Orchidaceæ; flowering in July. The leaves are large, soft and fleshy, and are used, in certain places, for dressing blisters.

PLATANUS, (πλατανος, from πλατυς, 'broad,') Musa paradisiaca.

PLATEA, (πλατυς, 'broad,') Bothriocephalus latus.

PLATEBONE, Seapula.

PLATEASMA, Platiasmus.

PLATES, MANSFORD'S, see Galvanism.

PLATIASMUS, Plateiasma, (from πλατυς, 'broad,') Excessive development of the lips, causing the articulation to be imperfect.

PLATINA, Platinum.

PLATINUM, Plat'ini, (from [S.] plata, 'silver,') (F.) Platine, Or blanc, Petit argent. The preparations of platinum resemble in their therapeutical properties those of gold. The ΒΙΧΛΟΡΙΔΕ, Plat'ini Bichloridum, made by dissolving platinum in aqua regia, and the ΔΟΥΒΛΕ ΧΛΟΡΙΔΕ of PLATINUM and SODIUM, Sod'ii chloroplatinas, Chloroplatinate of Sodium, prepared by dissolving bichloride of platinum and pure chloride of sodium, in proper proportions, in water, evaporating and crystallizing,—are the preparations used. They are not much prescribed.

PLATULA, (πλατυς, 'broad,') see Pediculus.

PLATY, (πλατυς, 'broad,') in composition, broad.

PLATYBREGMATE, (platy, and bregma), see Cranium.

PLATYCEPHALIC, Platycephalicus, (from platy, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Having a broad skull.

PLATYCORIA, (πλατυκορια, from platy, and κορη, 'pupil,') Mydriasis.

PLATYCORIASIS, Mydriasis.

PLATYELMINS, (platy, and ελμινς, 'worm,') Bothriocephalus.

PLATYNOSIS, (from πλατυς, 'broad,' and osis), Amplificatio. Morbid extension of parts.

PLATYOPHTHALMUS, (πλατυοφθαλμος, from platy, and οφθαλμος, 'eye,') One who has broad eyes. Antimony was of old called Platyophtalmion, under the idea, that it improved the appearance of the eyes.

PLATYPODIA, (platy, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') see Kyllosis.

PLATYPUS, (πλατυπους,) see Kyllosis.

PLATYSMA, gen. Platysmat'is, (πλατυσμα, from πλατυς, 'broad,') Anything broadly extended. A spread plaster.

PLATYSMA MYOIDES, P. Myoides, Musculus cutaneus seu subcutaneus (Winslow), Quadratus genæ seu latissimus colli, Extrahisio musculo'sa, Tetraquius, Stomomast'icou, (F.) Thoraco-maxillo facialis, Thoraco-facial (Ch.), Peaucier. A muscle situate superficially in the lateral parts of the neck. It is flat, broad, and quadrilateral. Its fibres, which are all parallel to each other, pass obliquely upwards, and from without inwards.

They arise from the areolar tissue, which covers the anterior and superior part of the chest; pass before the clavicle, and proceed to attach themselves at the interior part of the symphysis menti, at the external oblique line of the jaw, and at the commissure of the lips. The fibres of this last insertion form a distinct fasciculus, called by some anatomists Musculus Risorius Santorini. The platysma myoides depresses the commissure of the lips, and carries it outwards. It contributes, also, to the depression of the lower jaw. When it contracts, it wrinkles the skin of the neck transversely.

PLATYSTERNUS, (platy, and στερνον, 'the sternum,') One who has a broad, well developed chest.

PLATYSTOMUS, (platy, and στομα, 'mouth,') One who has a broad mouth.

PLAUTUS, Leiopus.

PLECHAS, (πληχας,) Perinaem.

PLECTANÆ, Cornua uteri.

PLECTANÆ, Plica, Plegma, Plexus, (πλεκτανη, from πλεκω, 'I twine,') A fold; a plexus. Also, a cornu of the uterus.

PLECTRUM, (πλεκτρον,') The styloid process of the temporal bone. Also, the uvula, and the tongue.

PLED'GET, ([D.] Plagghe), Plumaceolus, Liuted'men, Plag'ula, (F.) Plumaceau, Plumasseau. A small compress or gâteau of lint—the filaments arranged parallel to each other—flattened between the hands after the extremities have been cut off or folded down. It is applied over wounds, ulcers, &c., to preserve them from the contact of the air, to retain dressings in situ, and to absorb the discharges.

PLEGE, (πληγη,) Blow, Ietus.

PLEGMA, (πληγμα,) Plectean, Plege, Plexus.

PLEGOMETER, (πληγη, 'a stroke,' and μετρον, 'measure,') Pleximeter.

PLEIN (F.), (from plenus, 'full,') The middle part of a roller. See Bandage or Roller.

PLEIOMASTHUS, (πλειων, 'more,' and μασθος, 'a breast,') Polymasthus.

PLEIOMAZIA, (πλειων, 'more,' and μαζος, 'a breast,') see Polymasthus.

PLENA MULIER, 'a full woman,' Pregnant.

PLENCK'S DEPILATORY, see Depilatory, Colley's.

PLENITUDE, (plenus, 'full,') Fulness.

PLENITUDO, Plethora.

PLEOMAZIA, (πλειων, 'more,' and μαζος, 'a breast,') see Polymasthus.

PLEONECTICUS, (πλεονεκτικός, from πλεων, 'more,' and εχειν, 'to have,') Covetous. Desirous to acquire: hence ma'nia pleonectica.

PLEONECTICA ATHYMIA seu MELANCHOLIA. Pleonex'ia. A form of insanity characterised by a desire for gain or by covetousness.

PLEROSIS, (πληρωσις, from πληρης, 'full,' and osis), Repletio, Refectio, Repletio, (F.) Pleurose. Restoration of flesh after sickness. Plethora.

PLEROTICUS, (πλερωτικός, from πληρωω, 'to fill up,') Incarcans.

PLÉROTIQUE, Incarcans.

PLESMONÈ, (πλησμονη,) Plenitudo, Sati'etas, Sati'ety. Intemperance. A condition the opposite to that of hunger.

PLESSER, (πλησσω, 'I strike,') Plexor.

PLESSIMETER, Pleximeter,

PLESSIMÈTRE, Pleximeter.

PLETHOMERIA, (πληθος, 'a great number,' and μερος, 'a part,') Superabundance of parts, as in the case of six fingers to one hand.

PLETHORA, (πληθωρα,) Polyemia, Polyhyperemia, Panhyperemia, Polychymia sanguinea, Angiopleurosis, Angiopleurosis, Erythra-

nia, Erythro'sis, Hæmatopletho'ra, Hæmopletho'ra, Plenitudo, Multitudo, Redundantia, Repletio, Enchymsa, Completio, Pleth'ory, Repletio, (Old Eng.) Plur'isy, Sanguineness, Fullness, (F.) Abundance, Réploudance. The word plethora, which means repletion, Plero'sis, expresses a superabundance of blood in the system, or in some part of it:—hence the division of plethora into general and local; the latter being called, according to its seat, cerebral, pulmonary, uterine, &c. The principal symptoms of plethora exist in the circulatory system; such as redness of the surface, swelling of the veins, increase in the fullness of the pulse, in the strength of the heart's pulsations, &c., with spontaneous hemorrhages occasionally. With these are usually united general heaviness, torpor, lassitude, vertigo, tinnitus aurium, flushes of heat, &c. The blood of plethoric persons differs from healthy blood in the smaller ratio of water which it contains, and especially in the augmentation of the red corpuscles.

The tendency to plethora, or its actual existence, must be obviated by purgatives, proper diet, exercise, &c.; and, if the danger from it be pressing, by bloodletting. This is, however, a doubtful remedy for general plethora, as it increases hæmaturia.

PLETHORA ARTERIO'SA is the form in which the blood is rich in fibrin and red corpuscles—the arterial constitution.

PLETHORA, LOCAL, Hyperæmia — p. Partialis, Hyperæmia.

PLETHOR'IC, (πληθωρικος,) Pletho'ricus, Polyæmic, Polyæmicus, Polyæmatus, Sanguine, Sanguineous, (F.) Pléthorique. Full of blood. Relating to or affected with plethora.

PLETHORICUS, Plethoric.

PLETHORY, Plethora.

PLETHOS, (πληθος,) Satiety.

PLEUMON. (πλευμων,) Pulmo.

PLEUMONIA, Pneumonia.

PLEU'RA, (πλευρα,) Pleu'rum, Pleuro'ma. Membra'na pleur'ica succin'gens seu cost'as succin'gens, M. seu Tu'nica costalis seu subcostalis, Hypopleu'rios, Hypozo'cus, (F.) Plèvre or Pleure. The pleurae are two thin, diaphanous, perspirable membranes, which line each side of the chest, and are reflected thence upon each lung. Like other serous membranes—to which class they belong—each represents a sac without aperture. From the junction of the pleura of each side the mediastina are formed. That portion of the pleura which lines the parietes of the chest is called Pleura Costalis seu parietalis; the portion that covers the lungs, Pleura Pulmonalis. The arteries of the pleurae are from the intercostals, internal mammaries, phrenic, inferior thyroid, &c. The veins correspond with the arteries. They are, also, supplied with lymphatics, but nerves are not traceable in them.

Pleura is also used for Cavity of the Pleura, Sac'cus Pleuræ.

PLEU'RÆ, (pl. of pleura.) The sides of the chest.

PLEU'RAL, Pleural'is, Pleur'icus, Pleur'ites. That which concerns the pleura;—as a pleural fistula, pleural cavity, pleural friction, pleural hemorrhage, &c.

PLEURALGIA, (πλευρα, 'side,' and αλγος, 'pain,') Pleurodyne.

PLEURAPOPHYSES, (πλευρα, 'side,' and ἀρροφύσεις, 'processes,') Costæ veræ, see Costa.

PLEURAPOSTEMA, (pleura, and apostema, 'abscess,') Empyema.

PLEURARTHRO'ACE, (πλευρα, 'a rib,' ἄρθρον, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'bad,') Caries of the ribs.

PLEURE, Pleura.

PLEURESIA, (from pleura, Pleuritis.)

PLEURÉSIE, Pleurisy — p. Fausse, Pleurodynia.

PLEURESIS, (from pleura,) Pleuritis.

PLEURÉTIQUE, Pleuritic.

PLEURICUS, Pleural.

PLEURISY, Pleuritis.

PLEURISY, BILIOUS, Pleur'itis bilio'sa. Pleurisy accompanied with bilious symptoms;—the effect of duodenitis or duodenohepatitis.

PLEURISY, FALSE, Pleurodynia.

PLEURISY, HEAD. A ridiculous term, occasionally used by the vulgar, in the Southern States especially, for bilious pneumonia before the pneumonic phenomena are developed, and whilst the head is prominently affected.

PLEURISY, HEMORRHAGIC, Hæmatothorax — p. Rheumatic, Pleurodynia — p. Root, Asclepias tuberosa.

PLEURISY, TY'PHOID, Pleur'itis typho'ides seu typho'ides seu typho'sa. Pleurisy accompanied by adynamic symptoms.

PLEURITES, (πλευριτης,) Pleural.

PLEURIT'IC, (πλευριτικός,) Pleurit'icus, Pleurit'ical, (F.) Pleurétique; (same etymon as pleuritis.) Relating or appertaining to pleuritis, — as 'pleuritic pain.'

PLEURIT'IS, gen. Pleur'itidis, (πλευρις, from pleura, and itis, or from πλευριτης, (νοσος, 'a disease,' understood,) Morbus lateralis seu pleurit'icus seu costalis, Empres'ma seu Can'na Pleuritis, Pleur'is, Pleur'ia, Pleuritis costalis seu re'ra, Pleurit'ica Fe'bris, Pas'sio pleur'ica, Inflammat'io Pleuræ, Pleur'is, Inflammat'ion of the Pleuræ, (F.) Pleurésie, Fievre pleurétique, Inflammat'ion de la Plèvre, may be acute or chronic. Perhaps the most violent of all internal inflammations is the active form; known by acute, lancinating pain in one side of the chest, increased by inspiration, by coughing, and often by pressure, dyspnoea, the inspirations short and frequent; cough dry, or with little expectoration; and difficulty of lying on the affected side; symptoms, attending the phlegmasia in general, strongly marked.

Physical Signs. There is seldom any perceptible alteration in the exterior of the chest. When effusion has taken place to a great extent, the signs will be similar to those of chronic pleurisy. The motion of the affected side is diminished, and the vibrations of the voice cannot be detected by the hand. There is more or less dulness of sound on percussion, the dulness diminishing or disappearing by change of position. On auscultation, the inspiration is feeble, distant, or inaudible; but change of position modifies it. Egophony is usually present, when the effusion is in moderate quantity, and is best heard over a portion of the thoracic parietes, represented by a band of three inches, running from below the inferior margins of the scapula in the direction of the ribs to the sternum. Simple pleurisy rarely attacks both sides at once: when such is the case, the presence of tubercles may be suspected.

Formerly, a true pleurisy meant one seated in the pleura: a mediastinal pleurisy, one situated in the anterior mediastinum; and false pleurisy or rheumatism'al pleurisy, that which occupies the intercostal muscles. The last has received the name Pleurodynia; that of pleurisy being exclusively appropriated to inflammation of the pleura. Pleurisy has also been distinguished into dry and humid, according as it is or is not accompanied by expectoration. Humid or moist pleurisy is now properly regarded as a complication of pleurisy with pulmonary catarrh. It is the catar'hal pleurisy of some. The majority of the species of pleurisy, admitted by Sauvages, consist of complications.

The causes of pleurisy are like those of other internal inflammations. It may terminate by resolution, effusion, or suppuration.

CHRONIC PLEURISY, which has been particularly described by recent pathologists, most commonly terminates by a serous or purulent effusion, which sometimes simulates hydrothorax; at others, phthisis pulmonalis. It may form slowly, without evident symptoms; or it may succeed acute pleurisy. In the former case, vague pains are felt in the chest, with small, dry cough, oppression at intervals, shivering, irregular febrile symptoms, and hardness of pulse.

Physical Signs. The affected side is smoother, more rounded and motionless; the intercostal spaces are dilated and filled up, or may even protrude slightly. In very chronic cases, however, the affected side may be smaller. The triangular space above the clavicle and the depression immediately above the sternum are often drawn downwards on the diseased side. No vibration is experienced by the hand when the patient speaks. The parietes of the thorax are sometimes oedematous, and fluctuation may be occasionally felt between the ribs. On percussion the sound is dull, or if clear, only so in the upper portions of the chest. On auscultation, there is an absence of the usual sounds over the affected parts, excepting occasionally transmitted sounds. There are no physical signs that can enable us to know whether pus or serum is effused into the chest. The introduction of a grooved needle through the intercostal space, as recommended by Dr. Thomas Davies, would of course settle the question.

On dissection of those who have died of pleurisy, the pleura is found thickened, red, inflamed, and covered with membranous exudations or false membranes. Sometimes it seems cartilaginous and ossified. Its cavity frequently contains serous or seropurulent effusions.

The acute form of the disease requires most active treatment. General bloodletting, to such an extent as to make a very decided impression on the system, and repeated if necessary. This is the most important agent. After the violence of the disease has been got over, counterirritants will be found highly beneficial; as well as when it has passed into the chronic state. The cough may be relieved by demulcents.

Sauvages has given the name PLEURITIS VENTOSA, and Pringle that of PLEURODYNIA VENTOSA, to a pain behind the false ribs, attributed to the presence of air in the intestines.

PLEUROCELE, (pleura, and κηλη, 'a tumour.')

Her'nia of the pleu'ra, Her'nia pleu'rica et pulmo'nalis. This name, employed by Sagar, is inaccurate, as the pleura never protrudes alone. It only forms a hernia, when it serves as an envelope to the lung, to tumours, or to purulent collections, which have protruded from the thoracic parietes.

PLEUROCOLLESIS, (pleura, and κολληω, 'I glue.')

An adhesion between the pleura costalis and pleura pulmonalis.

PLEURODYNE, Pleurodynia.

PLEURODYNIA, Pleural'gia, Pseudopleuritis, Pseudopleurisy, Pleurodynē, Antalgia scolotosa, Parapleuritis, Stethorrhœum'a, Rheumatis'mus pectoris, Pleuritis rheumatica seu muscularis seu notha seu spuria seu spuria simulata, Pneumonia externa, Lagomyonosis, Thoracodyne, Thoracodynia, Thoracomyodynia, Dolor Pectoris externa, Pain in the side, Stitch in the side, False, rheumatic or rheumatismal pleurisy, (Old Eng.) Shott, (Sc.) Caik, (F.) Point de côté, Douleur de côté, Pleurésie faussée; (πλευρα, 'side,' and ὀδυνη, 'pain.') A spasmodic or rheumatic affection, generally seated in the muscles of the chest, and, ordinarily, in the intercostals. It is usually augmented by outward pressure, inspiration, coughing, exertion, moving the thorax, and sometimes even the corresponding arm. It is unaccompanied by fever, cough, or dyspnoea, excepting under the form of a stitch, when dyspnoea exists. It is, generally, by no means obstinate, and yields promptly to warm applications and to cupping or leeches. If it still resists, a blister will, almost always, remove it.

PLEURODYNIA VENTOSA, Pleuritis ventosa.

PLEURODYNIC, Pleurodynical, Pleurodynicus, (F.) Pleurodyrique. Relating or belonging to pleurodynia.

PLEUROMA, gen. Pleuro'matis, (πλευρωμα, from pleura, and oma,) Costa, Pleura.

PLEUROPATHIA, (pleura, and παθος, 'a disease.')

A disease of the pleura.

PLEUROPERIPNEUMONY, Pleuroperipneumonia, Pleuropneumonia, Pneumopleuritis, Pneumopleuritis, Pleuritis pulmonis, Pneumonia pleuritis, (pleura, and peripneumonia.) Inflammation occupying the pleura and the lung at the same time. Pleurisy and peripneumony existing simultaneously. Physical signs. A dull sound is yielded by percussion for a variable extent over the more dependent portions of the affected side. The loss of sound is partially modified by change of position. The respiratory murmur on auscultation is very feeble or absent inferiorly; higher up, the crepitation or bronchial respiration of pneumonia may be detected; round the root of the lung, and near the inferior angle of the scapula, egophony is generally present. There is seldom much enlargement of the affected side, or displacement of the adjacent organs, as in the case of simple chronic pleurisy.

PLEUROPEUMA, gen. Pleuropneumatis, (pleura, and πνευμα, 'wind,') Pneumothorax.

PLEUROPEUMONIA, Pleuroperipneumony.

PLEUROPEUMONITIS, Pleuroperipneumony.

PLEUROPYESIS, (pleura, and πησις, 'suppuration,')

Empyema.

PLEURORRHAGIA, (pleura, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,')

Hæmatothorax.

PLEUROTHOPNŒA, (pleura, ᾠσος, 'erect,' and πνέω, 'I respire.')

Pain of the side, which does not permit the patient to breathe, except when in the vertical position.

PLEUROSO'MUS, (pleura, and σμμα, 'body.')

A malformation in which the fissure is somewhat lateral, with eventration extending chiefly upon the upper part of the abdomen and upon the chest; the upper extremity of the fissured side being more or less atrophied.

PLEUROSTOSIS, (pleura, ὀσσειον, 'a bone,' and ὀσις.)

Ossification of the pleura, or in the cavity of the pleura. Osteopleuria.

PLEUROTETANUS, (πλευρα, 'a side,' and tetanus), Pleurothotonus.

PLEUROTHOTONUS, Pleurotonus, Pleurotelanus, Telanus lateralis, from πλευροθεν, 'laterally,' and τῆνος, 'tension.')

A variety of tetanus, in which the body is curved laterally by the stronger contraction of the muscles of one side of the body.

PLEUROTONUS, (πλευρα, 'a side,' and τείνω, 'to stretch,')

Pleurothotonus.

PLEURUM, (πλευρον), Costa, Pleura.

PLÈVRE, Pleura.

PLEXIM'ETER, Plexon'eter, Plegon'eter, Plessim'eter, Anticoposcop'ium, Anticop'oscope, (F.) Plessimètre, (πλησσω, 'I strike,' and μετρον, 'measure,' 'a measure of percussion.') An ivory plate of a circular or ovoid shape, from an inch and a half to two inches in diameter, and about one-sixth of an inch in thickness. It has either a raised rim or edge, or projecting handles on its upper side, to permit its being held between the finger and thumb of the left hand, whilst it is struck with the right. It is used in percussion of the chest. A piece of metal, a coin, or the finger of the left hand may be used with equal advantage.—See Percussion, mediate.

PLEXOMETER, Pleximeter.

PLEX'OR, (πλησσω, 'I strike.') Ples'ser. Any instrument employed in percussion. The ends of the fingers of the right hand brought together are the best plexor; as the finger of the left is, perhaps, the best pleximeter.

PLEX'US, gen. Plexūs, Pleg'ma, Plect'anē, Plect'nē, Rel'tē, (πλεκω, plecto, plexum, 'to interlace,' 'to entwine.') (F.) Lacis. A network of blood-vessels or of nerves. The nervous plexuses, Implicatio'nes reticula'res seu Tex'tus nervo'rum belong—some to the system of encephalic nerves—others to that of the great sympathetic; whilst some, as the pharyngeal, seem to be formed of the two sets. The plexuses represent complex networks, with more or less loose meshes, formed by the numerous and diversified anastomoses of the nervous filament; from which proceed other branches, that are distributed to organs or to other plexuses.

Incubo'rum seu Serofo'rum, Plica Polon'ica seu Polon'ica Juda'ica seu Cachect'ica seu Saron'ica seu ca'put Medu'sæ seu longica'ra da latera'lis, Affectio Sarmat'ica, Lul'es Sarmat'ica seu Polon'ica seu Trichomat'ica, Helo'sis, Helo'tis, Cir'vagra, Cir'vagra, C. Polono'rum, Ephy'ma tricho'ma, Mor'bus Cirrho'rum, Co'ma Cesare'a, Kol'to, Rhopal'o'sis, Plicat'ra, Plicat'ra, Mat'ted hair, Plait'ed hair, Trichom'atose hair, (F.) Plique, P. Polonaise. A disease endemic in Poland, Lithuania, and other parts of Northern Europe; so* called on account of its being characterized by interlacing, twisting, and agglutination or matting of the hair. By some it has been regarded as a real disease; by others, as the want of attention to cleanliness. However this may be, it generally appears upon the hair of the head, but sometimes on that of other parts, as the beard, the hair of the axilla, pubes, &c. Alibert admits three species of plica. 1. Plica multiform'is, or Plica ca'put Medu'sæ, in which the hairs are mixed and agglutinated in greater or less masses; and this has been again subdivided into two varieties, according as the meshes are almost straight (P. C. M. lacini'ata, [F.] Plique en lanières), or much twisted ([F.] P. en vrilles). 2. Plica longicaud'a, (F.) Plique solitaire ou à queue; when the hair is united into a single long mass, and 3. Plica cœpito'sa, (F.) Plique en masse, in which the hairs are matted into one large, shapeless mass. Pinel places this disease amongst the Cutaneous phlegmasiæ; but it is far from demonstrated, that it is the result of inflammation of the skin. Certain it is, however, that the tangling of the hair is symptomatic of an affection—sui generis—of the dermoid system. The idea that it is entirely owing to want of cleanliness, as has been conceived by some, is not tenable. It has been supposed to be produced by a fungous growth—a mycoder'ma, tri'chomaphyte or tri'chophyte.

PLICE CONNIVENTES, (pl. of plica.) Valvulæ conniventes.

PLICA LONGITUDINALIS VATERI, Diverticulum Vateri, (F.) Pli de Vater. A vertical projection, about an inch in length, formed at the posterior part of the duodenum by the mucous membrane raised up by the common choledoch duct before it opens into the intestine.

PLICE SEMILUNARES, see Urinary bladder, and Uterus.

PLICATO, Plica.

PLICATURA, Plica.

PLICATURE CEREBRI, Gyri cerebri.

PLICHOS, (πλίκος,) Perineum.

PLINTHIUM, (πλινθιον.) A machine invented by one Nileus, which was formerly employed in the reduction of fractures and luxations. Scultetus describes it in his Armamentarium Chirurgicum.

PLOMBAGE DES DENTS, (from plomb, 'lead,') Plugging.

PLOMBAGINE, ('plomb, 'lead,') Graphites.

PLOMBIÈRES, MINERAL WATERS OF. Fon'tes medica'ti Plumba'ri', Ther'mæ Plumba'ria. Plombières is a town in the department of the Vosges, 17 leagues from Nancy, and two from Remiremont. Here are several sources of thermal water. That which is called Sapoum'ceous, (F.) Savonneuse, is formed of the subcarbonate and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, silica, carbonate of lime, and much vegeto-animal matter. This last component, (F.) Plombiérine, when held in solution by means of the subcarbonate of soda, gives to the water an unctuous character. This is the origin of its name. The waters of Plombières are employed as solvents in engorgements of the abdominal viscera, and as alteratives in chronic diseases of the skin. Season, from the 15th of May to the 15th of October.

PLOMBIÉRINE, see Plombières.

PLORATIO, (plorare, ploratum, 'to weep,') Lacrymatio.

PLORATUS, Lacrymatio.

PLOTUS, 'flat,' Leiopis.

PLOUK, (Gael. plucan), Papula.

PLUG'GING, (from [D.] plug.) (F.) Tamponnement. The act of stopping a hole. The introduction of a plug or dossil of lint or rag—(F.) Tampon—into a wound or natural cavity—as the uterus or vagina—to arrest hemorrhage; or of some substance into a carious tooth to prevent toothache, (F.) Plombage ou Obturation des dents. See Filling.

PLUKE, (Gael. plucan), Papula.

PLUM, (Sax. plume), Prunum, Prunus domestica—p. Assyrian, Sebastina.

PLUMA, 'down,' Lanugo.

PLUMACEAU, (from pluma), Pledget.

PLUMACEOLUS, (from pluma), Pad, Pledget.

PLUMASSEAU, Pledget.

PLUMBAGO, (from plumbum, the leaves having lead-coloured spots,) Graphites, Persicaria.

PLUMBA'GO EUROPE'A, P. lapathifolia seu undulata, Dentaria, Orepanella, Squamaria, Dentelaria, Leul'wort, (F.) Dentelaire, Herbe au Cancer, Malherbe. Ord. Plumbaginaceae. Sez. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. The root was formerly much esteemed as a cure for toothache, like the Pellitory of Spain, which, also, is called Dentaria.

PLUMBI ACETAS, P. superacetatis—p. Acetas dilutum alcoholicum, Liqueur plumbi subacetatis dilutus—p. Acidulus siccus, Plumbi superacetatis—p. Azotas, P. nitras—p. Carbonas, P. subcarbonas.

PLUM'BI CHLO'RIDUM, Chloride of Lead, (F.) Chlorure de Plomb. This salt of lead has been used in the form of lotion and ointment in cancerous ulcerations.

PLUMBI DEUTOXYDUM RUBRUM, P. Oxydum rubrum—p. Hydriodas, P. Iodidum—p. Iodhydraz, P. Iodidum.

PLUM'BI IO'DIDUM, P. Iodure'tum seu Hydriodas seu Hydroi'odas seu Iodhy'dras, Plumbum iodatum seu Hydroiod'icium, Iodide or Iod'uret of Lead, (F.) Iodure de Plomb, I. plombique. (This salt is formed by the double decomposition of iodide of potassium and nitrate of lead.) It is used in scrofulous affections internally and externally; and is officinal in the Pharmacopœia U. S. Dose, gr. ss. to gr. iij or iv.

PLUMBI IODURETUM, P. Iodidum.

PLUMBI NI'TRAS, P. Azotas, Plumbum nitricum, Nitras plumbicus, Nitrum saturninum, Nitrate of lead, (F.) Nitrate ou Azotate de Plomb. (A salt formed by the action of diluted nitric acid on litharge.) Nitrate of lead has the same medical action as the other soluble salts of lead, and is a valuable antiseptic. It has been used, also, as an exciting antiseptic to wounds, ulcers, &c., and is the basis of Ledoyen's disinfecting liquid.

PLUMBI NITROSAC'CHARAS, Nitrosaccharate of lead. (Sacchar. p. j; Acid. nitric. p. ij; Aque p. x. Beat together in a porcelain dish as long as chemical action continues: dilute the liquor with water; neutralize with chalk, and to the filtered solution add acetate of lead so long as a precipitate is formed. Collect, wash, and dry the precipitate, which is saccharate of lead. Dissolve in dilute nitric acid, (one part acid to nineteen of water,) filter and evaporate to form crystals, which are transparent, of an amber colour, and in regular hexagonal plates or prisms.)

Advised as a solvent of phosphatic calculi.

PLUMBI OXYDUM seu OXYDUM ALBUM, Plumbi subcarbonas—p. Oxydum carbonatum per acidum acetosum, Plumbi subcarbonas—p. Oxydum fuscum, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

PLUMBI OXYDUM RUBRUM, Min'ium, Milt'us, Dentox'ydum plumbi rubrum, Superox'ydum Plumbosum, Plumbum oxydatum rubrum seu superoxydatum, Sun'dice, Sun'dyax, Red lead, (F.) Oxide de plomb rouge. It is sometimes used to kill vermin.

PLUMBI OXYDUM SEMIVIT'REUM, P. Ocidum (Ph. U. S. 1863), Plumbum oxydatum, Lithargyrus, Lithargyrum, Litharag'ium, Oxydum plumbi fuscum, Spuma argenti, Semivit'rified oxyd of lead or litharge, Calcite'osa, Cath'mia, (F.) Oxide de plomb fondu, Oxide de plomb semivit'reux, (a yellow protoxyd of lead, prepared by heat, combined with carbonic acid.) It occurs in scales of a whitish red colour, and semivit'rified. It is employed for pharmaceutical purposes, as in the Liquor plumbi acetatis, Emplastrum plumbi, &c. Formerly, the Litharge of gold, Chrystitis, Mas'sicot, and Litharge of silver, Almarial, were distinguished in commerce. These were merely ordinary litharge, resembling gold or silver in colour.

PLUMBI SUBCARBO'NAS, Carbo'nas plumbi seu plumbicus, Plumbi Carbo'nas (Ph. U. S.), Plumbum carbo'nicum, P. oxydatum carbo'nicum, Magnesium plumbi, Oxydum plumbi album, Cerussa, Aerugo plumbi, Simmit'ium, Psym'thion, Psym'thus, Blan'ca, Ger'sa, I'fides, Subcarbonate of lead, Cerussa, White lead, Flake white, (F.) Carbonate de plomb, Blanc de plomb, Plomb blanc, Céruse, Blanc d'Argent, Blanc de Céruse, Blanc de Krems, B. de Krems, B. de Kremnitz, Craie de plomb, (prepared by exposing spiral rolls of lead to the fumes of vinegar, in vessels placed in dung.) It is inodorous; has a sweet taste; is brittle; friable; snow white, and of a minute, scaly texture. It is astringent and sedative, and is sprinkled on parts affected with local inflammation, or to prevent chafing in children. It is also used in the formation of ointments and plasters.

PLUMBI SUPERACE'TAS, Cerussa acetata, Plumbi acidulus siccus P. acetatis (Ph. U. S.), Sal seu Saccharum Saturni, Plumbum aceticum, Dulce'do Saturni, Acetas plumbicum crystallisatum, Sui plumbi, Sugar of lead, Supercetate of lead, Protacetate of lead, (F.) Acétate acide de plomb, Sel ou sucre de Saturne. (Plumb. carb. l'ij, Acid acetic, cong. ʒj.) Boil the lead with the acid till it is saturated; then strain through paper, and evaporate to a pellicle that crystals may be formed. Wash the crystals and dry on blotting-paper. Ph. L. In the Ph. B. (1864), it is directed to be prepared by the action of dilute acetic acid on litharge; filtering, evaporating, and crystallizing.) Acetate of lead has a sweet, styptic taste; a very white colour, and silky lustre. It is astringent; and, in weak solution, cooling and sedative; in strong, stimulant. It is given internally, in visceral and other hemorrhages, combined with opium, and is used externally, in solution, in inflammation, burns, bruises, gonorrhœa, &c. Dose, gr. ss to iss.

PLUMBI TANNAS, see Tannin.

PLUMBICUM ACETAS CRYSTALLISATUM, Plumbi superacetatis.

PLUMBOSUM SUPEROXYDUM, Plumbi oxydum rubrum.

PLUMBUM, Molib'dos, Molib'dus, Saturnus, Capricornus, (F.) Plomb. Lead. A solid metal of a bluish white colour; more malleable than ductile; soft enough to be scratched by the nail; very fusible and oxidizable, when heated in the air, and existing, in nature, under a number of different shapes; the principal of which are those of sulphuret and oxyd. S. G. 11.352.

Its use is to form oxides and salts. In its metallic state, it has no action upon the body; but when oxydized or united with an acid, it acts, in large doses, as a powerfully astringent poison.

PNEUMARTHROSIS, (pneuma, αρθρον, 'articulation,' and osis,) Secretion of air into an articular cavity. Seen at times, it is said, after acute rheumatism, but soon disappearing [?].

PNEUMATELECTASIS, (pneumon, and atelectasis,) Atelectasis pulmonum.

PNEUMATHEMIA, Pneumat'emia, (pneuma, and ημα, 'blood,') A morbid condition in which air is developed in the bloodvessels.

PNEUMATHORAX, Pneumothorax.

PNEUMAT'IC, (πνευματικός,) Pneumaticus, Pneumatical, (F.) Pneumatique. Relating to air or life.

PNEUMATIC MEDICINE, Atmiatria.

PNEUMATIC PHYSICI'ANS, Pneumatici, Pneumatists. Name given to a sect of physicians, at the head of whom was Athenæus, who made health and disease to consist in the different proportions of an element—which they called Pneuma, (πνευμα)—to those of the other elementary principles. This πνευμα was a fancied spiritual principle, which the Stoics regarded as an element, different from water, air, earth and fire;—the sole elementary principles previously admitted. The doctrine was called Pneumatism. At the present day, the epithet pneumatic is sometimes applied to those who treat diseases chiefly by the inhalation of gases.

PNEUMATICA, (from pneuma,) Appertaining to the breathing. Diseases of the respiratory function;—the second class in Good's system of nosology. Agents that act on the respiratory organs.

PNEUMATICAL, Pneumatic.

PNEUMATOCELE, (πνευματοκηλη, from pneuma, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Physocèle.

PNEUMATODES, (πνευματοδης, from pneuma, and odes,) One distended with air, or who breathes with difficulty, owing to an accumulation of flatus in the digestive tube; or, according to others, owing to emphysema.

PNEUMATOMETER, (pneuma, and μετρον, 'measure,') Spiromèter.

PNEUMATOMPHALOCÈLE, Pneumatomphalus.

PNEUMATOMPHALUS, Pneumatomphalocèle, (pneuma, and μφαλος, 'umbilicus,') Umbilical intestinal hernia, containing a considerable quantity of flatus.

PNEUMOGAS'TRIC, Pneumogast'ricus, (F.) Pneumogastrique, (pneumon, and γαστηρ, 'the stomach,') Belonging to the lungs and stomach.

PNEUMOGASTRIC NERVES, Eighth pair of nerves (Tenth pair, of some.) Par vagum, Pars va'ga, Va'gus, Nervus vagus seu ambulato'rius seu pneumogast'ricus seu dec'imus seu sympath'icus me'dius, Middle sympath'ic, (F.) Nerfs pneumogastriques ou vagues; so called because distributed especially to the organs contained in the chest and abdomen. This nerve arises from behind the eminentia ovariana and near the corpora testiformia by one or two rows of filaments, regularly arranged. These filaments unite to form a flat cord, which issues from the cranium by the foramen læcerum posterius; behind the glossopharyngeal nerve. At its exit from the cranium, the pneumogastric nerve has the appearance of a very compact plexus—Plexus gangliiformis, Ganglion of the superior laryngeal branch, of Sir Astley Cooper. It then descends along the neck, deeply seated on the outside of the carotid artery and the internal jugular vein. When it has attained the lower part of the neck, it enters the chest, gliding behind the subclavian vein, and passing on the right side, in front of the subclavian artery, and, on the left, before the arch of the aorta. It proceeds, at first, backwards, increasing in size. Afterwards, it passes from behind the bronchia to the œsophagus, which it accompanies through the diaphragm, and terminates on the stomach. In the neck, the pneumogastric nerve anastomoses with the spinal, glosso-pharyngeal, great hypoglossal, and great sympathetic nerves; and furnishes, 1, a pharyngeal branch, 2, a superior laryngeal, 3, cardiac branches. In the chest, it gives off, 1, the inferior laryngeal or recurrent, 2, the pulmonary plexus, and 3, the œsophageal branches. On entering the abdomen, the œsophageal branches, which terminate the pneumogastric, are distributed upon the stomach, and give numerous filaments to that viscus, to the hepatic, cœliac, gastroëpiploic, and solar plexuses. Some go, also, to the pancreas, liver, gall-bladder, duodenum, &c.

PNEUMONEMPHRAXIS, (pneumon, and εμφραξις, 'obstruction,') Congestion and infarction of the lungs.

PNEUMONIA, (πνευμονια, of old, meant a disease of the lungs,) Peripneumonia, Empresma pneumonitis, Pneumonia, Peripneumonia, Pneumonitis, Pulmonitis, Pulmonia, Pulmonaria, Inflammatio pneumonica, I. pectoris acuta seu pulmonum, Pneumostasis, Fœbris pneumonica, Pneumony, Peripneumony, Inflammation of the Lungs, Lung-fever (vulgarly), (F.) Inflammation des poumons, Fièvre pneumonique ou péri-pneumonique, Fluxion de poitrine, Inflammation du parenchyme pulmonaire. (From pneumon.) The chief symptoms of pneumonia are:—pyrexia, accompanied by pain, sometimes obtuse, at others pungent,—in some part of the thorax; pulse more or less quick and hard, according to the violence and extent of the local disorder; pain, aggravated by the cough, which, with dyspnoea, exists throughout the disease. At first, the expectoration is difficult and painful; but, in the course of a few days, it becomes free, and the oppression of breathing is mitigated. When the inflammation, instead of going off by resolution, passes on to suppuration, rigors are experienced; the respiration becomes more oppressed, but less painful, and a sense of weight is felt in one of the pleuræ. Pneumonia may, also, terminate by gangrene—but this rarely happens,—by induration and by hepatization.

Physical Signs. FIRST STAGE, (F.) Engouement. Diminution of the sound is generally observed over the affected part on percussion: auscultation exhibits an equal, dry, crepitating râle, which is best heard at the close of a deep inspiration, and on coughing. The respiratory murmur is intermingled with the crepitant râle, or it may be absent. In the neighbourhood of the affected parts it is natural or puerile. The voice and cough are rather more resonant than usual. SECOND STAGE, (F.) Hépatization rouge. When hepatization has occurred, the motion of the affected side is impeded, and immediately above the sternum and in the corresponding triangular space on either side, there is often an evident depression. Percussion is dull over the affected part in every position of the patient. On auscultation, the crepitation is found to be replaced by bronchial respiration. The respiratory murmur is louder in the other portions of the lung, the voice and cough are more resonant, and the heart's action is more distinct. THIRD STAGE, (F.) Hépatization grise. When suppuration supervenes, the same signs persist; but usually the voice and cough are less resonant, and a coarse, mucous râle is heard. When gangrenous or suppurative cavities are formed, they present the ordinary signs.

The prognosis must be guarded. It is not a disease which we can always subdue. Great extent of inflammation; very considerable oppression; orthopnoea, and difficult expectoration are unfavourable symptoms. The most active treatment is of course necessary. General bleeding forms the sheet anchor,—employed so as to make a decided impression on the system, and repeated, if necessary; local bloodletting; nauseating doses of antimonials; purgatives; and when the violence of the inflammation has been got under,—counterirritants, &c. Chronic pneumonia sometimes succeeds the acute, and, at others, occurs accidentally. It must be managed on general principles. Small bleedings, especially locally; and counterirritants of all kinds are indicated.

PNEUMONIA BILIOSA, P. bilious.

PNEUMONIA, BILIOUS, P. biliiosa, Pneumocholeosis. Inflammation of the lungs, accompanied by gastric fever, and not uncommonly by typhoid symptoms;—Pneumotyphus, Pneumonia typhoides seu typhoides seu typhosa, Putrid, typhoid, adynamic, or erysipellatous pneumonia.

PNEUMONIC, (πνευμονικος.) Pulmonic.

PNEUMONICA, (from pneumon.) Diseases affecting the lungs, their membranes or motive power; characterized by irregular, impeded, or painful respiration. The second order of the class Pneumætica of Good.

PNEUMONICI (morbii), in the classification of Dr. Wm. Farr, means lung diseases.

PNEUMONIC'ULA, (dim. of pneumonia.) A slight inflammation of the lung.

PNEUMONICUS, (πνευμονικός.) Pulmonic.

PNEUMONIE, Pneumonia.

PNEUMONIE DES AGONISANTS, ('pneumonia of the dying,') Pneumonie hypostatique. The hyperæmic engorgement, which takes place in the lungs during the last moments of life, has been so termed. It would seem to be hyperæmia rather than inflammation.

PNEUMONIE DISSÉMINÉE, see Lobular — p. Lobulaire, see Lobular — p. Mamelonée, see Lobular.

PNEUMONIT'IC, Pneumonit'icens. Of, or belonging to pneumonitis, or inflammation of the lungs.

PNEUMONITIS, (pneumon, and itis.) Pneumonia.

PNEUMONOCARCINO'MA, gen. Pneumono-carcinomat'is, (pneumon, and καρκίνωμα, 'cancer,') Cancer of the lungs.

PNEUMONOCELĒ, (pneumon, and κηλη, 'rupture,') Hernia of the lung.

PNEUMONOCE'LE DIAPHRAGMAT'ICA INTER'NA. Hernia of the lung through the diaphragm.

PNEUMONOCELE EXTER'NA seu THORAC'ICA. Hernia through the parietes of the chest.

PNEUMONOCELE THORACICA, P. externa.

PNEUMONŒDEMA, gen. Pneumonœdemat'is, Œdema of the lungs.

PNEUMONOMELANOSIS, see Melanosis.

PNEUMONOMETER, (pneumon, and μετρον, 'measure,') Spirometer.

PNEUMONOMYCO'SIS, (pneumon, μυκη, 'a fungus,' and osis.) A vegetable parasitic growth in the lungs.

PNEUMONOPHTHISIS, Phthisis pulmonalis.

PNEUMONOPHTHOE, (pneumon, and φθοη, 'a wasting away,') Phthisis pulmonalis.

PNEUMONOPLEURESIS, Pleuroperipneumony.

PNEUMONOPLEURITIS, Pleuroperipneumony.

PNEUMONORRHAGIA, (pneumon, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,') Hæmoptysis.

PNEUMONORRHŒEA, (pneumon, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Hæmoptysis.

PNEUMONOSCIR'RHUS, (pneumon, and σκίρρος, 'induration,') Induration of the lungs.

PNEUMONOSES, (from pneumon, and osis.) Pneumoses.

PNEUMONY, Pneumonia.

PNEUMONYPOSTASIS, (pneumon, and ἵπστασις, 'a settling down,') Pneumonia hypostat'ica. Pneumonia in a depending portion of the lung, caused by lying on the back.

PNEUMOPÉRICARDE, Pneumopericardium.

PNEUMOPERICARD'IUM, Pneumopericarditis, Pneumato'sis pericard'ii, (F.) Pneumopéricarde, (pneumon, and pericardium.) Laënnec designates, under this name, the effusion of air into the cavity of the pericardium.

PNEUMOPHTHISIS, Phthisis pulmonalis.

PNEUMOPHYMATA, (pneumon, and φυμα, 'a swelling,') Tubercles of the lungs.

PNEUMOPLEURESIS, Pleuroperipneumony.

PNEUMOPHTHOE, (pneumon, and φθοη, 'a wasting away,') Phthisis pulmonalis.

PNEUMOPYOTHORAX, see Pneumothorax.

PNEUMORRHAGIA, (pneumon, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,') Hæmoptysis — p. Interna, Hæmatothorax.

PNEUMORRHŒEA, (pneumon, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Bronchorrhœa.

PNEUMOSEPSIS, (pneumon, and σηψις, 'putrefaction,') Necropneumonia.

PNEUMOSES, (from pneumon, and osis.) A term under which Alibert comprises every morbid affection of the lungs.

PNEUMOTHORAX, Pneumothorax, Pneumatothorax, Emphysema pectoris, Asthma ærium seu emphysematicum, Dyspnœa pneumat'ica seu physiothorac'ica, Physothorax, Ærothorax, Æropleurie, (pneuma, and thorax.) An accumulation of air in the cavity of the pleura. A complaint generally sudden in its invasion and fatal in its character. In many instances, along with the air, a liquid is effused, consisting of a serous fluid — Hydropneumothorax, or of one that is purulent — Pneumopyothorax. The disease may be spontaneous and simple, but in a large proportion of cases it is complicated with pleurisy and pulmonary tubercles. The signs vary according as there is, or is not, a communication between the pleura and the bronchia. The affected side gives a hollow, tympanitic sound, even where the thickness of the parietes of the thorax is great. When the effusion is considerable, the affected side is dilated, but there is no râle of any kind. When a gaseous and a liquid effusion are present at the same time, the sound on percussion is found to be clear at the superior part of the thorax, but dull inferiorly; hence, by varying the position of the patient, and by consequence that of the contained fluids, the seats of the clear and the dull sound will be varied. When the gaseous effusion is owing to a fistulous communication between the pleura and bronchia, the metallic respiration and resonance are heard; and if there be both gaseous and liquid effusion, with a fistulous communication, in addition to these signs there is the tintement métallique. The presence of liquid may be ascertained by succussion. See Emphysema of the lungs.

PNEUMOT'OMY, Pneumotom'ia, (pneumon, and τεμνω, 'I cut,') Dissection of the lungs.

PNEUMOTYPHUS, Pneumonia, typhoid.

PNEUMOTYPO'SIS, Pneumonia intermit'tens, (pneumon, τυπος, 'a stamp, a type,' and osis.) Pneumonia characterized by periodicity.

PNEUBIOMANTIA, (πνω, 'to breathe,' βιος, 'life,' and μαντεια, 'divination,') Docimasia pulmonum.

PNEUSIOBIOGNOSIS, (pneusis, βιος, 'life,' and γνωσις, 'knowledge,') Docimasia pulmonum.

PNEUSIOBIOSCOPE, (pneusis, βιος, 'life,' and σκοπω, 'to examine,') Docimasia pulmonum.

PNEUSIS, (πνευσις.) Respiration — p. Pertussis, Pertussis — p. Singultus, Singultus — p. Tussis, Tussis.

PNEUSMETER, (pneusis, and μετρον, 'measure,') Spirometer.

PNIGALION, (πνιγλιων, from πνιγω, 'to suffocate,') Inebus.

PNIGMA, (πνιγμα.) Orthopnœa, Strangulation.

PNIGOPHOBIA, (πνιγος, and φοβος, 'dread,') Angina pectoris, Suffocation.

PNIGOS, (πνιγος.) Orthopnœa, Strangulation.

PNIX, gen. Pni'gis, (πνιξ, gen. πνιγος.) Orthopnœa, Strangulation.

PNIXIS, (πνιξις.) Orthopnœa, Strangulation.

PNOE, (πνοη.) Aura, Breath.

PNŒA, (πνοη.) Aura, Breath.

PNŒUM. A nostrum of Dr. Samuel Hahnemann, the founder of the 'Homœopathic System,' which consisted — it is said — of borax only!

PNOOCOLYTICUS, (πνοος, 'breath,' and κωλυειν, 'to hinder,') Asthmatic.

PNOUS, (πνοός,) Aura, Breath.

POADMILK, Colostrum.

POCHE DES EAUX, 'bag of waters,' see Liquor amnii, and Parturition.

POCK, (Teut. p o c e a, 'a pock or little pouch.')

A pustule of smallpox.

POCKARR, Pockmark, see Cicatrix.

POCKBROKEN, see Pockmark.

POCK, KINE, Vaccina.

POCKFRETTE, see Pockmark.

POCKHOLE, Pockmark.

POCK'MARK, Pock'hole, (Prov.) Pockarr, Scrobiculus seu Cicatrix Vari'ole. The mark or pit or pitting left from a smallpox pustule. One pitted with smallpox is said to be pockmarked, pockbroken, pockfretten or pockfretted, (Prov.) Pockurred.

POCKY. Infected with, or appertaining to, or resembling, smallpox or syphilis.

POC'ULUM ('a cup') ABSINTHIA'TUM. This was regarded, in remote ages, as a wholesome beverage; the absinthium, or 'wormwood,' being supposed to act as an antidote to drunkenness.

POCULUM AMATORUM, Philter — p. Diogenis, Palm — p. Emeticum, Goblet, emetic — p. Vomitium, Goblet, emetic.

POD'AGRA, Podarthrit'is, Podorrhœu'ma, Podal'gia, (podō, and agra, 'seizure.')

Pain which attacks the feet. Gout, situate in the articulations of the foot. It has, also, been used in a more extensive signification synonymously with gout.

PODAGRA ABERRANS, Gout, (wandering) — p. Arthritis, Gout — p. Retrograda, Gout, (retrograde.)

PODAGRARIA, Ligusticum podagraria — p. Ægopodium, Ligusticum podagraria.

PODAGR'IC, Podag'rical, (podag'ricos), Podag'ricus, Arthrit'icus, Arthrit'ic, Gout'y, (F.) Gouttenc. Relating or belonging to gout. Affected with, or liable to gout.

PODAGRISM, see Diathesis.

PODALGIA, (ποδάλγια, from podō, and algos, 'pain.')

Pain in the foot. Gout, Podagra.

PODALIC, Pedal — p. Version, see Turning.

PODALIRIA TINCTORIA, (after Podalirius, son of Æsculapius.) Sophora tinctoria.

PODANENCEPHALIA, see Podencephalus.

PODARTHRTIS, Podagra.

PODARTHROC'ACĒ, (podō, arthron, 'an articulation,' and κακός, 'bad.')

Caries of the articulation of the foot.

PODELCO'MA, Podelco'ma, (podō, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer.')

A peculiar ulcerous affection of the foot, described by Prof. Miller, of Edinburgh, which is but little amenable to treatment; and which has been likewise called Morbus tubercul'us pe'dis.

PODENCEPHALIA, see Podencephalus.

PODENCEPH'ALUS, Podanenceph'alus, (podō, and κεφαλή, 'the head.')

A monster whose brain is placed outside the skull, and seems to be supported on a pedicle, which traverses the summit of the skull. This state of monstrosity is termed Podanenceph'al'ia, or more properly, Podenceph'al'ia.

PODEX, (gen. Po'dicis.) Anus, Nates.

PODO, (πους, gen. πόδος, 'a foot,') in composition, foot.

PODODYN'IA, (podō, and δύνη, 'pain.')

Pain in the soles of the feet induced by long standing, as in cutters of garments, &c.

PODŒDE'MA, gen. Podœde'matis, (podō, and ἔδημα, 'a swelling.')

Œdema of the foot.

PODOL'OGY, Podolog'ia, (podō, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

A description of the foot. A treatise on the foot.

PODOPHYLLUM MONTANUM, Mountain May'apple, Man'drake, Wild Lem'on, Ducks'foot, Raccoon' Berry, Yellow Berry, Ground Lem'on, Ord. Berberidaceæ, Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia, (podō, and φυλλον, 'a leaf,' in reference to the shape of the leaf,) has the same properties as

PODOPHYLLUM PELTATUM, Podophyl'lum, Ana-podophyl'lum Canadense, Mayapple, Mandrake. A common plant throughout North America. The fruit is eatable, and esteemed by many. The leaves are said to be poisonous. The root or rhizoma, Podophyllum (Ph. U. S.), is purgative in the dose of 20 grains. It has, also, been used as an anthelmintic. Podophyl'lin, obtained by evaporating an alcoholic solution of the root, or by displacement by alcohol, throwing down the precipitate by water, and drying — Resina Podophyl'li — is an excellent purgative in the dose of 10 grains, and a laxative in the dose of a grain or more. See Resina Podophylli.

PODORRHEUMA, (podō, and ῥευμα, 'a defluxion,')

Podagra.

PODOTH'E'CA, (podō, and θηκη, 'a receptacle, a sheath.')

The cuticle of the foot. An anatomical preparation. Chiroth'e'ca has been used for the cure of the hand.

POECLIA, (ποικιλία, 'a variegated appearance,')

see Achroma.

POËLETTE, Cup, Palette.

POE'PHAGUS, (ποη or ποα, 'a plant, an herb,' and φαγω, 'I eat.')

One who subsists on herbs or vegetables. The act of subsisting or feeding on herbs or vegetables is called Pœphag'ia. Hence Strabo calls the Irish ποηφαγοί.

POGON, (πωγων.) Beard.

POGONI'ASIS, Pogo'nia, (from pogon.) A female beard. Also, great strength or quantity of beard. A female having a beard — Vira'go.

POGO'NIUM, (πωγωνιον, dim. of pogon.) A weak or small beard.

POGONOL'OGY, Pogonolog'ia, (pogon, and λογος, 'a description.')

A description of, or treatise on, the beard.

POGOSTEMON INTERMEDIUS, (pogon, and σπημων, 'a stamen,')

P. Patchouli.

POGOSTE'MON PATCHOULI, P. Sua'vis seu interme'dius, Pucha-Pat, Patchouli. Nat. Ord. Labiate. Native of Penang and the Malayan peninsula. The herb is used as a perfume. The distilled oil is used for the same purpose.

POGOSTEMON SUAVIS, P. Patchouli.

POIHON ANTIAR, Upas — p. Upas, Upas.

POI. A favorite aliment in the Sandwich Islands. It is a sort of paste made from the root of the Kalo — Arum esculentum.

POIDS ET MÉSURES, (from [L.] pondus, 'a weight,')

Weights and measures.

POIGNÉE, (from [L.] pugnus, 'the fist,')

Manipulus.

POIGNET, Carpus.

POIL, [L.] (pilus, 'a hair,')

Galactocœle, Hair.

POILETTE, Cup.

POILS, (pl. of poil,) see Typha latifolia.

POING, [L.] (pugnus.) Fist.

POINT, (from pungere, punctum, 'to prick,')

Puncta, Stitch.

POINT, BLIS'TERING. A name given by Dr. Rush to an indeterminate period in the course of a continued fever, intermediate between the stages of high excitement and collapse, in which blisters will — he thought — usually produce unequivocally good effects.

POINT DE COTÉ, 'stitch of the side,' Pleurodynia.

POINT, VITAL, see Centrum vitale.

POINTING OF AN ABSCESS, see Suppuration.

POINTS LACRYMAUX, Lacrymalia puncta.

POIRE, see Pyrus communis.

POIRÉ, see Cider.

POIREAU, (porrum, 'a leek,') Allium porrum, Verruca.

POIRIER, ([L.] pyrus), Pyrus communis.

POIS, Pisum—p. à Cautère, see Fonticulus—p. Chiche, Cicer arietinum—p. Cultivé, Pisum—p. à Gratter, Dolichos pruriens—p. Patate, Dolichos tuberosus.

POISON, Phar'macon, Phar'macum, Tox'icum, Vene'num, Virus, Deleter'ium, Venena'tion, (F.) Poison. A generic name for all substances which, when introduced into the animal economy, either by cutaneous absorption, respiration, or the digestive canal, act in a noxious manner on the vital properties or the texture of organs. Hence we speak of fœter poison, cholera poison, &c. Poisons exist in the three kingdoms of nature; but those which proceed from animals are often called venoms, as the venom of the viper, scorpio, tarantula, &c.; whilst those that are the products of disease have the name virus. In common parlance, therefore, poison is restricted to deleterious articles, furnished by the mineral and vegetable kingdoms. Orfila has divided poisons into four classes. 1. ACRID, IR'RITATING, CORRO'SIVE, or ESCHAROT'IC, as the concentrated acids and alkalies; mercurial, arsenical, cupreous, and antimonial compounds, cantharides, &c. 2. NARCOT'IC, those that act particularly upon the brain; as hyoscyamus, opium, &c., but without inflaming the organ with which they come in contact. 3. NARCOT'ICOACRID or ACRO-NARCOT'IC; those that act on the brain, or spinal marrow or both, but, at the same time, irritate the parts to which they are applied; as aconite, belladonna, &c. 4. SEP'TIC or PUTRES'CENT; those furnished by the animal kingdom. See Venom and Virus. Various classifications, of a similar character, have been recommended by different toxicologists; but they are liable to the objection, that they throw substances together whose physiological action on the system is very different. It is, indeed, difficult to avoid unnatural compression of matters into places not properly belonging to them in all such arrangements.

The classification of Dr. A. S. Taylor is as follows:

|                 |   |                     |                     |                                     |

|                 |   | VEGETABLE.....      | { Metallic.....     | Metalloids.                         |
|                 |   | ANIMAL.....         | (Savin).            | (Arsenic).                          |
|                 |   |                     | (Cantharides).      |                                     |
| NEUROTICS.....  | { | CEREBEAL.....       | (Morphia).          |                                     |
|                 |   | SPINAL.....         | (Strychnia).        |                                     |
|                 |   | CEREBRO-SPINAL..... | (Conia, Aconitia).  |                                     |

The accurate investigations of modern chemistry, by separating the active alkaloids of different vegetables, have furnished numerous agents for poisoning; and, hence, deaths from morphia and strychnia have repeatedly become subjects of medicolegal inquiry in courts of justice. Like investigations have facilitated the discovery of many toxic substances after death in the contents of the alimentary canal and elsewhere; although the failure of such discovery may not be a positive evidence that no such poison was administered, as it may have been rejected by vomiting; or, if sufficient time has elapsed, may have been eliminated in some other manner.

One of the most astonishing of tests is that by spectrum analysis, which, in certain cases, is capable of detecting the most inconceivably minute portions of a metal,—in one instance the 195,000,000 part of a grain. See Spectrum analysis.

The following table, which exhibits a coup d'œil of the chief poisons, with many of the circumstances of importance connected with them, is not free from the objections above stated

TABLE OF THE CHIEF POISONS

N. B. In all cases the Stomach Pump should be used as soon as possible.

I. INORGANIC POISONS.

| POISONS.   | SYMPTOMS.   | TREATMENT.   | TESTS.   |
|--|---|--|--|
| ACIDS.  | The acids, generally, are strong corrosive poisons. Sour, acid taste, burning in the throat, which is increased by pressure, swallowing, or coughing; eructation, and excruciating pain in the stomach; more or less corrugation of the lining membranes of the mouth and primæ viæ; excoriation about the mouth or such other parts of the skin as the acid may have touched. The matter vomited effervesces with carbonate of lime. The countenance becomes glazed, extremities cold and clammy; convulsions and death. Nitric acid occasions yellow stains, and sulphuric acid, black. | The carbonates of soda, potassa, lime and magnesia, are all antidotes to the acids; calcined magnesia also. They are to be used with the following restrictions: for the acetic, citric, muriatic, sulphuric, and tartaric acids, they may be used indiscriminately. For the nitric and oxalic, carbonates of magnesia and lime can alone be employed with safety. In the case of sulphuric acid, water should not be drunk, on account of the great heat which is produced by their mixture. Subsequent inflammation to be treated by ordinary means. | Sulphuric acid is known by a white precipitate with any salt of baryta, insoluble in nitric acid. Muriatic acid is known by a white precipitate with nitrate of silver, insoluble in nitric acid, which turns black by the action of light. Nitric acid gives rise to orange-coloured fumes, when copper is placed in it, and an ability to dissolve gold when mixed with muriatic acid. Acetic acid exhales the odour of vinegar. Citric acid blackens when heated. Tartaric acid precipitates crystals, with a solution of potassa; and a white precipitate is thrown down by lime-water. Oxalic acid gives a white precipitate with lime-water, which, when heated, is converted into carbonate of lime. |
| Prussic Acid.—Oil of Bitter Almonds.—Laurel Water.  | Is a sedative poison; nausea, giddiness, debility, hurried pulse, weight and pain in the head; eructations having the flavour of the acid; spasms, tetanus, contractile pupil; convulsions, death.  | The carbonates of the alkalis and of magnesia and lime have the inconvenience, that a large quantity of gas is extricated in the stomach. Ammonia is an antidote; but it should not be employed in a very concentrated form. Liquid chlorine has also been found efficacious. The cold douche to the head has been recommended.   | Prussic acid exhales the odour of peach kernels; forms a white precipitate with nitrate of silver neutralized with an alkali, gives a blue precipitate with the persalts of iron.   |
| ALKALIES and their SALTS.   | Violent, caustic, acid taste; great heat in the throat, with destruction of its lining membrane; difficult and painful deglutition; vomiting of bloody matter, which turns the yellow of turmeric brown; acute pain in the stomach; cold sweats, weakness, hicough; violent colic pains, with purging of bloody stools and membranous flakes; death.  | The vegetable acids, such as vinegar, lemon juice, citric and tartaric acid in solution are antidotes to the alkalis and their carbonates. The fixed oils, such as castor, linseed, almond and olive, form soaps with the free alkalis, and therefore destroy their caustic effects.   | The alkalis are known by their action on turmeric paper: restoring the colour of litmus, which has been reddened by an acid.   |
| AMMONIA,Strong Liquor of Water of.—Muriate of Ammonia or Sal Ammoniac.—POTASSA.  |   |  | Carbonates are known by their effervescence with an acid; some of them affect the turmeric paper. Sal ammoniac gives out the pungent odour of ammonia, when mixed with quicklime.  |
| Caustic Potassa, and Liquor Potassa.—Carbonate of Potassa, or Pearl Ash, and Salt of Tartar.—Nitrate of Potassa or Salpêtre.—Sulphuret of Potassium or Liver of Sulphur.—SODA. | The nitrate of potassa will not manifest the effect with turmeric paper. The carbonates, when vomited, will effervesce with acids; and the liver of sulphur will give rise to eructations of sulphuretted hydrogen.   | Poisoning by nitrate of potassa to be treated on general antiphlogistic principles; mucilaginous drinks. Liver of sulphur is said to be decomposed and neutralized by common salt. The liquid chloride of soda will also decompose it.   | Nitrate of potassa decrepitates and deflagrates when thrown on hot coals. Liver of sulphur emits the odour of sulphuretted hydrogen when dissolved, or when treated with an acid.  |
| EARTHS and COMPOUNDS.   | Analogous to those of the corrosive metals. Violent burning in the stomach, vomiting, gripes, diarrhœa; excessive muscular debility, headache, convulsions, death. Lime differs from baryta in being a pure irritant.   | The sulphates of soda and magnesia are prompt and effective antidotes to all the poisonous salts of baryta. Phosphate of soda will also counteract their effects. Lime may be neutralized by dilute acids. Carbonic acid, in soda-water, effervescing draught or yeast, it is supposed, would answer a good purpose. The fixed oils may be employed either for baryta or lime, when not in a compound state.   | Baryta and its salts invariably give a white precipitate, insoluble in acid, with a soluble sulphate.  |
| —BARYTA.—Carbonate of Baryta.—Chloride of Baryum.—Nitrate of Baryta.—LIME.  |   |  | Lime, when dissolved, gives a white precipitate with oxalic acid. Also with carbonic acid or a soluble carbonate. The same of baryta.  |

|---|--|--|---|
| ALCOHOL.—Brandy, Wines, and all Spirituous Liquors.  | Intoxication, and when taken very freely, complete insensibility, with apoplexy or paralysis of one side; the countenance swollen and of a dark-red colour; the breathing difficult, and often stertorous, with a peculiar puffing out of the lips; the breath smells of liquor, which will distinguish the symptoms from those of spontaneous apoplexy.                              | A powerful emetic of white vitriol, or tartar emetic, should be got into the stomach as soon as possible; and if the person has lost the power of swallowing, a flexible catheter or tube should be the means of conveying it thither. The vomiting should be encouraged as much as possible with warm water; and large and active glisters of salt and water should be thrown up. The patient should be placed erect, and if the countenance and other appearances be not improved after these means have been used, the jugular vein may be opened, and cold wet cloths applied to the head, particularly if the body be hotter than natural. If the extremities become cold, warmth and friction should be perseveringly used. |   |
| VOLATILE OILS.—Creosote.Dippel's Animal Oil.Oil of Tar.Oil of Tobacco.Oil of Turpentine.Fusel Oil. | General action, that of irritant poisons. Burning pain, vomiting, pungent taste, purging, &amp;c. The oils of turpentine and tobacco affect the nervous system; the peculiar odour of each oil will be manifested in the matter vomited.  | Creosote is immediately coagulated by albumen Dippel's animal oil may be counteracted with dilute acids and the fixed oils. The other oils have no particular antidotes, and their effects must, therefore, be counteracted upon general principles.  | No better mode of recognizing these substances exists, than that derived from their peculiar odour. Dippel's oil has the pungent odour of ammonia; creosote and oil of tar, a peculiar smell of smoke; the odour of tobacco and turpentine are well known; and fusel oil has a peculiar, offensive, suffocating odour.   |
| GASES.Carbonic Acid, or Fixed Air.Carbonic Oxide.Fumes of Burning Charcoal.Chlorine.Sulphuretted Hydrogen.          | Chlorine produces, when inhaled, violent irritation of the organs of respiration; cough, bloody expectoration, inflammation of the lungs, and permanent pulmonary disease. The other gases, although producing some effect on the respiratory organs, act as poisons, in consequence of their sedative agency. The symptoms, therefore, are those of apoplexy, or narcotic poisoning. | The antidotes to chlorine are the cautious inhalation of ammonia, or sulphuretted hydrogen. The inflammatory symptoms from chlorine to be treated on general principles. For the other gases, cold affusions to the head, blood-letting, artificial respiration. In poisoning by chlorine, ether may be cautiously inhaled.   | Chlorine is recognized by its peculiar odour and bleaching properties. Sulphuretted hydrogen, by its fetid smell, and the rapid blackening of lead. Carbonic acid, by its occasioning turbidness in lime-water placed in its atmosphere. Carbonic oxide, by the blue colour of its flame.  |
| IODINE.Iodide of Potassium.   | Irritant symptoms; burning pain in the throat, lacerating pain in the stomach, and fruitless efforts to vomit; suffusion of the eyes; excessive pain and tenderness of the epigastrium.   | Iodine combines with starch, and forms an insoluble compound. The prompt administration of starch, wheat flour, or other vegetable matter containing fecula, beat up in water, is recommended. Iodide of potassium has no antidote. Vomiting should be promoted by draughts of warm water, and inflammation be subdued by general treatment.  | Iodine is known by its odour, and the formation of a blue precipitate, when brought in contact with a cold solution of starch. Iodide of potassium gives a crystalline precipitate, with tartaric acid in excess. The supernatant fluid will give the blue colour to starch.   |
| METALS.—ANTIMONY.—Tartar Emetic.—Chloride, or Butler of Antimony.Oxide of Antimony.                              | Vomiting. If vomiting do not occur promptly, violent irritant effects are produced. Burning pain in the pit of the stomach; Purging; colicky pains, sense of tightness in the throat, violent cramps; repeated recurrence of vomiting.  | If vomiting have not been produced, it should be brought about by tickling the fauces, and administering copious draughts of warm water. Astringent infusions, such as of galls, oak bark, Peruvian bark, act as antidotes, and should be given promptly; powdered yellow bark may be used, until the infusion is prepared.   | Antimony in solution is best distinguished by the peculiar orange-red precipitate, which it forms with sulphuretted hydrogen or solutions of the hydrosulphates. Free alkalis produce white precipitates. The chloride is known by a white precipitate, when it is poured into water. In its solid forms, it may be known by the formation of white fumes, when heated, which reddens litmus. It may also be converted into chloride, and then precipitated by adding water. |

| ARSENIC. Arsenious Acid, or White Arsenic. Orpiment, or Yellow Sulphuret of Arsenic. King's Yellow. Kentgar, or Red Sulphuret of Arsenic. Fly Powder. Fowler's Solution. Arsenical Paste. Arsenical Soap. Arsenite of Copper. Scheele's Green.  | Violent burning pain in the region of the stomach and bowels; tenderness on pressure; retching; vomiting; sense of dryness and tightness in the throat; thirst; hoarseness and difficulty of speech; the matter vomited, greenish or yellowish, sometimes streaked with blood; diarrhœa; tenesmus; sometimes excoriation of the anus; urinary organs occasionally affected with violent burning pains and suppression; convulsions and cramps; clammy sweats; lividity of the extremities; countenance collapsed; eyes red and sparkling; delirium; death. | The hydrated peroxide of iron diffused through water; or the precipitated carbonate; or the rubigo ferri, in very fine powder, to be administered every five or ten minutes, until relief is obtained. This is particularly efficacious when the white arsenic has been swallowed. If the arsenic have been taken in the form of Fowler's Solution, linewater, in copious draughts, may be given. For either of the other forms, emetics of sulphate of zinc; diluents; demulcents, such as flaxseed tea, infusion of slippery elm, &amp;c. Counter-irritants may be used to relieve the spasm, and violent pain in the stomach. Bleeding, as promoting absorption, should not be employed until the stomach is completely evacuated. Magnesia, freshly precipitated or not too highly calcined has been used with advantage in arsenious acid poisoning. | If the suspected substance can be obtained free from organic matter, the presence of arsenic may readily be shown by boiling it in distilled water, filtering, and testing with, 1st. Ammoniacal sulphate of silver. (Hume's Test) 2d. Ammoniacal sulphate of silver. (Hume's Test) 3d. Sulphuretted hydrogen gas. The first will produce a green precipitate; second, a pale yellow precipitate; third, a bright yellow precipitate, if arsenic be present. A portion of the powder, or one of these precipitates, carefully and thoroughly dried, is then to be mixed with charcoal and exsiccated carbonate of soda, to be placed in a small glass tube, closed at one end, and then to be heated to a red heat in the flame of a lamp. The arsenic will be reduced, and sublime in the upper part of the tube, forming a dark crust, having considerable lustre on its exterior surface, resembling polished steel. By gently heating this crust in a very small flame, crystals of white arsenic will be formed, having a high adamantine lustre. |

| GOLD.—Chloride of Gold.—Fulminating Gold.   | Very analogous to those of other irritant poisons. This substance communicates a pink stain to the flesh, and patches of that colour may be found about the lips, and inside the mouth.   | The salts of gold are decomposed by sulphate of iron; and this has, therefore, been recommended as an antidote. Inflammatory symptoms to be treated on general principles.   | Chloride of gold is very readily decomposed, and the gold separated in a metallic state. Proto-sulphate of iron, nitrate of silver and protochloride of tin, all answer this purpose. The precipitated powder will be found insoluble, except in nitromuriatic acid.  |
| IRON.—Sulphate of Iron,Copperas,Green Vitriol.—Chloride of Iron.  | Symptoms of irritant poisoning; colic pains, constant vomiting and purging. Violent pain in the throat, tension of the epigastrium, coldness of the skin, and feebleness of the pulse.  | Carbonate of soda would be a most excellent antidote to either of these substances. Mucilaginous drinks might also be employed; and particular symptoms relieved by general treatment.   | Iron is recognised by a bluish-black precipitate, with tincture of galls; rich blue, with ferrocyanide of potassium; and a greenish or reddish precipitate, with the free alkalis or their carbonates.  |
| LEAD.Acetate of Lead,Sugar of Lead,Carbonate of Lead,White Lead,Red Oxide, or Red Lead,Litharge.—Wines sweetened by Lead,Water which has been kept in Leaden vessels,Acid food, cooked or left standing in vessels glazed with Lead. | Irritation of the alimentary canal; spasms; nervous symptoms; paralysis, either partial or complete. When taken for some time, in small quantity, violent and obstinate colic; rigidity of abdominal muscles, cramps; remission of pain; obstinate constipation, urine diminished, saliva increased; countenance anxious and gloomy. If relief be not promptly obtained, giddiness, debility, torpor, coma, convulsions and death. The paralysis affects generally the upper extremities. | Sulphate of magnesia and phosphate of soda are both good antidotes for the soluble salts of lead. For the solid forms, dilute sulphuric acid may be drunk. These are applicable to the irritant forms of poisoning by lead. In the chronic form, or colica pictonum, purgatives and anodynes are resorted to; venesection; and external applications to relieve the cramps. The use of strychnia is recommended for the paralysis, and iodide of potassium for the chronic form generally. | Soluble salts of lead yield a white precipitate with sulphates and carbonates in solution. Salts of chromic acid and iodide of potassium occasion a yellow precipitate. Sulphuretted hydrogen, a black precipitate. If solid, the lead may be converted into a state of solution by nitric acid and the dilute solution be tested as above.   |
| MERCURY.Corrosive Sublimiate.—Cyanide of Mercury.—Nitrate of Mercury.—White Precipitate.—Red Oxide, or Red Precipitate.—Sulphate, or Turbith Mineral.—Vermilion, or Red Sulphuret.   | Violent symptoms of irritant poisoning; harsh metallic astringent taste; burning pain in the stomach; vomiting and purging frequently of bloody matter; often irritation of the urinary organs, and sometimes suppression; tightness and burning in the throat, occasionally so great as to prevent speech; countenance not always pale, but sometimes flushed; tendency to doze; stupor, convulsions and death.  | Albumen, in some form, must be promptly administered; either white of eggs beaten up with water, milk, or wheat flour beaten up. The inflammatory symptoms to be counteracted by the usual means. Gold, finely mixed in dust, with fine iron filings. The iron in filings or in powder— ferri pulvis —has been given enclosed in gold leaf. In the chronic form iodide of potassium has been given.   | The free alkalis differ in their precipitates from solutions of mercury. Potassa gives, with corrosive sublimiate, a yellowish one; ammonia, a white; lime-water, an orange; and sulphuretted hydrogen, a black. If a drop of the solution be placed on a piece of gold, and touched with a knife or key, the mercury will be reduced, which amalgamates with the gold, producing a white spot. Protochloride of tin is the best liquid test. It gives a grayish precipitate. All the solid forms of mercury are volatile, and may be reduced by heating them in a glass tube with charcoal and carbonate of soda, when the metallic mercury will sublime, and may be collected in a globule. |
| SILVER.Nitrate of Silver,or Lunar Caustic.  | Those of other irritant poisons.  | Chloride of sodium, or common salt, immediately decomposes this substance, and destroys its activity. Antiphlogistic treatment is to be employed for the inflammatory symptoms.  | Nitrate of silver is distinguished by the formation of a white precipitate, insoluble in nitric acid, with chloride of sodium; a gray precipitate with ammonia, which is redissolved in an excess of ammonia; yellow precipitate with phosphate of soda. The precipitate of chloride of silver, obtained by adding chloride of sodium to the nitrate of silver, is readily reduced, and the metallic silver obtained, by mixing it with dilute sulphuric acid and granulated zinc.  |
| TIN.Chloride of Tin,Solution of Tin,used by Dyers,Oxide of Tin, or Putty Powder.  | The same as those from other irritant poisons, and a peculiar tanned appearance of the villous coat of the stomach.   | Milk to be given copiously, and the subsequent treatment to be regulated by the symptoms.  | The chloride precipitates vegetable colouring matter; also albumen and gelatin. The white oxide is precipitated from its solution by free alkalis; with sulphuretted hydrogen gas, a brown precipitate.   |
| ZINC.Sulphate of Zinc,White Vitriol.—Acetate of Zinc.  | Violent vomiting; astringent taste, burning pain in the stomach; pale countenance; cold extremities; dull eyes; fluttering pulse. Death seldom ensues, in consequence of the emetic effects.  | The vomiting may be relieved by copious draughts of warm water. Carbonate of soda, administered in solution, will decompose the sulphate of zinc. Milk and albumen also act as antidotes. General principles to be observed in the subsequent treatment.   | A white precipitate is thrown down by the free alkalis from the soluble salts of zinc, which becomes yellow when strongly heated—recovering its white colour on cooling. Sulphuretted hydrogen occasions a white precipitate, but only in neutral or alkaline solutions. Sulphohydrate of ammonia is better.  |

| PHOSPHORUS.      | Symptoms of irritant poisoning; pain in the stomach and bowels; vomiting, diarrhoea, tenderness and tension of the abdomen. | An emetic to be promptly administered; copious draughts containing magnesia in suspension; mucilaginous drinks; general treatment for inflammatory symptoms.                        | Phosphorus is known by its ready inflammability, luminousness at ordinary temperatures, and alliaceous odour. |
| GLASS or ENAMEL. | If taken in very coarse powder, it produces irritation and inflammation of the bowels.                                      | Large quantities of crumb of bread should be eaten, to envelop the particles. (?) An emetic of sulphate of zinc should then be given, and vomiting be promoted by demulcent drinks. |   |

After as much as possible of the poison is got rid of, a very strong infusion of coffee, or vinegar diluted with water, may be given with advantage. Camphor mixture with ether may be taken frequently, and if insensibility be considerable, warmth, frictions, and blisters, may be employed. The pulse is variable, but at first generally strong and full; the breathing is quick, and there is great anxiety and dejection, which, if not speedily relieved, soon ends in death. | The stomach to be effectually evacuated by giving four or five grains of tartar emetic, or from ten to twenty of the sulphate of zinc, repeated every quarter of an hour, till the full effect is produced. These means may be assisted by tickling the throat with a feather or the finger. Large and strong glysters of soap dissolved in water, or of salt and gruel, should be speedily administered, to clear the bowels, and assist in getting rid of the poison; and active purgatives may be given after the vomiting has ceased. When as much as possible of the poison has been expelled, the patient may drink, alternately, a tea-cupful of strong hot infusion of coffee, and vinegar diluted with water. If the drowsiness, which is sometimes extreme, and the insensibility bordering on apoplexy, be not remedied by these means, blood may be taken from the jugular vein, blisters may be applied to the neck and legs, and the attention be roused by every means possible. If the heat declines, warmth and frictions must be perseveringly used. Vegetable acids are on no account to be given before the poison is expelled, and it is desirable that but little fluid of any kind should be administered. N. B. Bromine, chlorine, and iodine are said to be antidotes to the alkaloids generally. Electromagnetism has been found efficacious in the drowsiness and sleep of narcotic poisoning. | POISONOUS FISH. Balistes monoceros. Old wife. Cancer astacus. Crawfish. Cancer rutilicos. Land Crab. Clupea thryssa. Yellow-billed Sprat. Coracinus fuscus major. Gray Snapper. Coracinus minor. Hyne. Coryphæna splendens. Dolphin. Mormyra. Blue Parrot Fish. Muræna major. Conger Eel. Mytilus edulis. Mussel. Ostracion globellum. Smooth Bottle Fish. Perca major. Barracuda. Perca venenosa. Grooper. Perca venenata. Rock Fish. Physalia. Portuguese Man of War. Scomber caruleus. Spanish Mackerel. Scomber maximus. King Fish. Scomber thynnus. Bonetta. Sparus chrysopt. Porgée. Tetrodon scleratus. Tunny. Tetrodon ocellatus. Blowér. | In an hour or two, or often in a much shorter time, after the fish has been eaten, a weight at the stomach comes on, with slight vertigo and headache, sense of heat about the head and eyes, considerable thirst, and often an eruption of the skin (urticaria), and in many cases death.   | An emetic should be speedily administered, or, in the absence of it, vomiting may be excited, by tickling the throat with the finger, and taking large draughts of warm water. After full vomiting, an active purgative should be given, to remove any of the noxious matter that may have found its way into the intestines. Vinegar and water may be drunk after the above remedies have operated, and the body may be sponged with the same. Water, made very sweet with sugar, to which ether may be added, may be drunk freely as a corrective, and a very weak solution of alkali has been recommended to obviate the effects of the poison. If spasm ensue; after evacuations, laudanum, in considerable doses, is necessary. If inflammation should occur, the usual means of removing it must be employed.        |
| POISONOUS SERPENTS. Boa crotaloides. Copperhead. Cenchris mockeson. Mockeson. Cerastes nasicornis. Horned Viper of Western Africa. Coluber berus. Viper. Coluber prester. Black Viper. Crotalus, (5 species.) Rattle Snake. Scytale piscivorus. Water Viper.  | A sharp pain in the wounded part, which soon extends over the limb or body; great swelling, at first hard and pale, then reddish, livid, and gangrenous in appearance; faintings, vomitings, convulsions, and sometimes jaundice; pulse small, frequent, and irregular; breathing difficult, cold sweats, the sight fails, and the intellectual faculties are deranged. Inflammation, and often extensive suppuration and gangrene, followed by death. | A cupping-glass to be applied over the wound, or a moderately tight ligature above the bites, and the wound left to bleed after being well washed with warm water; the actual cautery, lunar caustic, or butter of antimony, to be then applied freely to it, and afterwards covered with lint, dipped in equal parts of olive oil and spirit of hartshorn. The ligature to be removed if the inflammation be considerable. Warm, diluting drinks, and small doses of ammonia or hartshorn, to cause perspiration; the patient to be well covered in bed, and a little warm wine given occasionally. If gangrene be threatened, wine may be given more freely, and the bark should be had recourse to. Arsenic, the principal ingredient in the Tanjore Pill, has been strongly recommended, and, also, Bibron's antidote. |
| CANTHARIS VESICATORIA. Spanish, or Blistering Fly. Lytta vittata. Potato Fly.  | Nauseous odour of the breath; acrid taste; burning heat in the throat, stomach, and abdomen; frequent vomitings, often bloody, with copious bloody stools; excruciating pain in the stomach; painful and obstinate priapism, with heat in the bladder, and strangury or retention of urine; frightful convulsions, delirium and death.   | Vomiting to be excited by drinking sweet oil, sugar and water, milk, or linseed tea, very freely. Emollient glysters should be administered, and if symptoms of inflammation of the stomach, kidney, or bladder supervene, they must be subdued by appropriate treatment. Cannphor dissolved in oil may be rubbed over the belly and the thighs.  |
| VENOMOUS INSECTS Tarantula. Scorpion. Vespa crabro. Hornet. Vespa vulgaris. Wasp. Apis mellifica. Bee. Culex pipiens. Gnat. Cæstrus bovis. Gad-fly.   | In general, the sting of these insects occasions only a slight degree of pain and swelling; but occasionally the symptoms are more violent, and sickness and fever are produced by the intensity of the pain.  | Hartshorn and oil may be rubbed on the affected part, and a piece of rag, moistened in the same, or in salt water, may be kept upon it till the pain is removed. A few drops of hartshorn may be given frequently in a little water, and a glass or two of wine may be taken. The sting may, in general, be removed by making strong pressure around it with the barrel of a small watch-key.  |

| SALIVA OF THE RABID DOG. | At an uncertain interval after the bite, generally, however, between the twentieth day and three or four months, pain or uneasiness occurs in the bitten part, though the wound may have been long healed. Anxiety, uneasiness, languor, spasms, horror, disturbed sleep, difficult respiration succeed, and are soon very much increased! violent convulsions affect the whole body, hideously distorting the muscles of the face; the eyes are red and protruded, the tongue swells and often hangs out, and viscid saliva flows from the mouth; there is pain in the stomach, with bilious vomitings, a horror of fluids, and impossibility of drinking them. All these symptoms are aggravated till the sufferer is relieved by death. | Hydrophobia is more easily prevented than cured; indeed, it is doubted whether it ever has been cured. Mercury, arsenic, opium, musk, camphor, acids, wine, vegetable and mineral alkali, oil, various herbs, and many other remedies whose effects are quite opposite, have been employed, but none can be relied on. Large blood-lettings, the warm and cold bath, and almost every other remedial agent, have been tried without success. The bitten part should be completely cut out, even after it has healed, if the symptoms have not yet come on; the part should then be immersed in warm water, or be washed with it as long as it will bleed, and, after the most persevering ablation, caustic should be applied to every part of the surface, and then the wound covered with a poultice, and suffered to heal by granulation. No milder discipline can ensure safety. |

The most energetic poisons are used therapeutically, and often with considerable advantage. They have, of course, to be administered in extremely small doses, to avoid producing true poisoning.

POISONING, Veneficium, Toxicatio, Intoxicatio, Entoxismus, Entoxicismus, Pharmaceutia, Maleficium, Venenatio, (F.) Empoisonnement, Intoxicacion. The art of applying a poisonous substance to any of the textures in a dose capable of occasioning more or less serious symptoms. Rigorously speaking, therefore, if a physician, in treating any case, employs a deleterious medicine in a small dose, which, owing to particular circumstances, produces unpleasant symptoms, he may be said to have poisoned the patient. The term is, however, generally restricted to poisoning by design.

Poisoning has also been used, by a few, to denote the series of symptoms resembling those produced by certain poisons, which occasionally follow the use of substances that are generally innocuous. Overloading the stomach with indigestible food, has, for example, given occasion to symptoms resembling those produced by a narcotic poison, and the effect has been termed poisoning.

Secret poisoning was, at one time, practised as an art. It consisted in administering medicines, which should act as slow poisons, and gradually undermine the strength and life. Its agency was far from being so extensive as was imagined.

POLONYCH'IA, Polyonych'ia, (poly, and ονξ, gen. ουχως, 'a nail.')

The condition of having super-numerary nails,—a rare congenital monstrosity.

POLYFOOT, see Kylosis.

POLY, Poly, (πολυς, 'many, much, full,') in composition:

POLYACTIUM TRISTE, Pelargonium trista.

POLYÆMAT'US, (πολυαιματος,) Plethoric.

POLYÆMIA, (πολυαιμα, from poly, and αιμα, 'blood,')

Plethora.

POLYÆMIC, Plethoric.

POLYÆMICUS, Plethoric.

POLYANHÆMIA, Anæmia.

POLYANHÆMIE, Anæmia.

POLYBLÉN'NIA, (poly, and βλεννα, 'mucus,')

Excessive secretion of mucus.

POLYBRA'CHIA, (poly, and βραχιων, 'an arm.')

A monstrosity characterized by one or more supernumerary arms.

POLYBREP'HA, (poly, and βρεφος, 'a fœtus, a child,')

Pregnancy, compound.

POLYCARP'Æ, (poly, and καρπος, 'fruit.')

A division of cutaneous diseases of the family Eczema tosen, of Fuchs, including Psoriasis, Lichen, Herpes, and Impetigo.

POLY'CERAS, (poly, and κερας, 'horn.')

A monstrous animal having many horns.

POLYCHOL'IA, Perichol'ia, Hyperchol'ia, (poly, and χολη, 'bile,')

Superabundance of bile; such as is supposed to exist in bilious fevers.

POLYCHREST'US, (poly, and χρηστος, 'useful,')

Having many virtues. An ancient name for certain medicines considered to be useful in many diseases.

POLYCHRONIUS, (poly, and χρονος, 'time,')

Chronic.

POLYCHY'LIA, (poly, and χυλος, 'juice,')

Polychy'mia. Fulness of juices.

POLYCHY'MIA, Polychy'lia—p. Sanguinea, Plethora.

POLYCLIN'ICA, (poly, and κλινη, 'bed,')

Provided with many beds;—as an hospital.

POLYCOR'IA, (poly, and κορη, 'pupil,')

The state in which there is more than one pupil.

POLYCRINOSES, (poly, κρινω, 'to separate,') and οσις, see Proflu'vium.

POLYCYE'SIA, Polycye'sis, (poly, and κυσις, 'pregnancy,')

Frequent or quickly recurring pregnancies: also, compound pregnancy.

POLYCYTHE'MIA, (poly, κυτος, 'a cell,' and αιμα, 'blood,')

A condition of the blood in which there is an increase of the red corpuscles.

POLYDACTYL'US, Perissodactylus, (πολυδακτυλος, from poly, and δακτυλος, 'a finger,')

One who has a supernumerary finger or fingers, or toes.

POLYDIP'SIA, (poly, and διψη, 'thirst,')

Sit'is morbo'sa seu inten'sa, Polydip'sia, Dipso'sis a'cens, Excessive thirst, (F.) Soif excessive. A constant desire for drinking, with a sense of dryness in the mouth and throat. It is mostly symptomatic of fever, inflammation, dropsy, excessive discharges, &c., and is so much a part of diabetes, that it has been called Polydipsia.

POLYG'ALA, (πολυγαλον, from poly, and γαλα, 'milk,')

P. vulg'aris, Com'mon Milk'wort. Ord. Polygalaceæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Octandria. The leaves are bitter, and are used in the same cases as the Polygala amara.

POLYGALA AMARA, P. amarell'a seu vulg'aris, Bitt'er Milk'wort. A powerful bitter; and, consequently, tonic. Its reputed virtues are balsamic, demulcent, and corroborant. The Polygala rubell'a, or Bitt'er Polyg'ala of the United States, has the same virtues.

POLYGALA PAUCIFOL'IA, Triclisper'ma grandifl'ora, Dwarf Milk'wort, Little Poll'om, Ev'ergreen Snake'root, (F.) Polygale naine, possesses the same properties as P. senega.

POLYGALA RUBELLA, see Polygala amara.

POLYGALA SEN'EGA, P. Virginia'na seu grandifl'ora. Sen'eka, Rat'tlesnake Milk'wort, Sen'ega, or Rattlesnake root, (F.) Polygale de Virginie ou de Seneka. The bark is the active part of the root, Senega (Ph. U. S.). Its taste is at first acrid, and afterwards very hot and pungent. It was once esteemed to be specific against the poison of the rattlesnake, and in pleurisy, pneumonia, &c., after the inflammatory action had been got under. It has been given also in humoral asthma, chronic rheumatism, dropsy, croup, amenorrhœa, &c. According to Peschier, it contains three principles, Pol'ygalin or Sen'egin, Isol'usin, and Pol'ygalic Acid. Dose, gr. 30 to 40 of the powder.

POLYGALA SERPENTARIA. A shrub of Caffraria, the root of which is considered by the natives as a sure antidote against the bites of venomous serpents.

POLYGALA VIRGINIANA, P. senega—p. Vulgaris, P. amara.

POLYGALACTIA, Polygallia, (poly, and γαλα, gen. γαλακτος, 'milk.') Superabundant secretion of milk; galactia.

POLYGALAE NAINÆ, Polygala paucifolia—p. de Virginie, Polygala Virginiana.

POLYGALIA, Polygalactia.

POLYGALIN, see Polygala senega.

POLYGONATUM, (πολυγωνον, from poly, and γων, 'a knee or joint,') Convallaria polygonatum

—p. Anceps, Convallaria polygonatum—p. Canaliculatum, Convallaria canaliculata—p. Latifolium, Convallaria canaliculata—p. Multiflorum, Convallaria multiflora—p. Pubescens, Convallaria pubescens—p. Uniform, Convallaria polygonatum—p. Vulgare, Convallaria polygonatum.

POLYGONIA, (πολυγωνια, from poly, and γωνια, 'to produce,') Fecundity.

POLYGONIUS, (πολυγωνιος,) Polygonus.

POLYGONUM, (πολυγωνον,) P. avicular'æ, (from poly, and γων, 'a knee or joint,') P. centinod'ium seu erectum, Centinodia, Centumnodia, Sanguinalis Corig'iola, Sanguinaria, Knot'grass, Knot'weed, Bind'weed, Door'weed, (F.) Renouée, Trainasse, Centinod. Ord. Polygonaceæ. Sex. Syst. Octandria Trigynia. This grass is said to be a feeble astringent.

POLYGONUM ACRE, P. hydropiper.

POLYGONUM AMPHIBIUM, P. coccineum, Water Persicaria, of Europe and this country. The roots have been used like sarsaparilla, especially in diseases of the skin.

POLYGONUM BISTORTA, P. bistortoides, Bistorta, Colubri'na, Offic'inal Bistort, Great Bistort or Snake'weed, (F.) Bistorte, Couleuvrine, Serpentaire rouge. The root is a powerful astringent and tonic; and, as such, has been used in internal hemorrhage, atonic diarrhœa, ague, &c. Dose, gr. xv to ʒj.

POLYGONUM BISTORTOIDES, P. bistorta—p. Centinodium, P. aviculare.

POLYGONUM COCCINEUM, P. amphibium.

POLYGONUM DIVARICATUM; East'ern Buck'wheat plant. The roots, reduced to a coarse meal, are said to be much used as an article of diet by the Siberians.

POLYGONUM ERECTUM, P. aviculare.

POLYGONUM FAGOPYRUM, Fagopyrum, F. esculentum, Trit'icum Fagi'num, Buck'wheat, (F.) Sar'raasin, Blé noir. The grain of this plant constitutes a principal article of food with the inhabitants of Russia, Germany, and Switzerland. It is much used in the United States.

POLYGONUM HYDROPIPER, P. ar'æ seu hydro-piperoides (Pursh) seu punctatum, Hydropiper, Persicaria u'rens, Mercur'ius terres'tris, Poor Man's Pepp'per, Bit'ing Arse'smart, Smart'weed, Lake'weed, Wa'terpep'per, (F.) Poivre d'eau, Persicaire poivrée ou brûlante ou âcre, Piment d'eau, Ourage, Renouée âcre. The leaves of this plant have an acrid, burning taste, and resemble those of the arum. They have been recommended as possessing antiseptic, aperient, and diuretic virtues. The fresh leaves have been applied externally as a stimulating cataplasm.

POLYGONUM HYDROPIPEROIDES, P. Hydropiper, P. punctatum. Polygonum hydro-piperoides of Michaux, mild wa'terpep'per; indigenous; has no acrid properties.

POLYGONUM PERSICARIA, Persicaria, P. m'nor seu mi'tis, Plumb'ago, La'dy's Thumb, Heart's ease, (Prov.) Red'shanks, (F.) Persicaire douce. This plant is said to possess vulnerary and antiseptic qualities. It has been given in wine to arrest gangrene.

POLYGONUM PUNCTATUM, P. hydro-piperoides, Wa'ter pep'per of America, Smart'weed, possesses similar properties to Polygonum hydropiper, and is occasionally used internally in gravel, and externally in chronic ulcers. A fluidrachm of the saturated tincture has been extolled in amenorrhœa. See Polygonum hydropiper.

POLYGONUM VIRGINIANUM, Wand-spiked Persicaria, Virgin'ia Bistort; indigenous; is astringent, diuretic, and tonic.

POLYGONUS, Polyg'oni-us, (poly, and γωνια, 'an angle,') Polygonal; multangular,—hence Os polygonum.

POLYGRAMA, gen. Polygro'matis, (poly, and hygrona,) Staphylo-ma.

POLYHYDRIA, Polyh'dria, Polyh'dros'is, (poly, and ἕψως, 'sweat,') Excessive sweating.

POLYHYDRIA, (πολυῖδρια, from poly, and ἕδωρ, 'water,') Hydrops.

POLYHYPERHEMIA, Plethora.

POLYIDRIA, Polyhidria.

POLYIDROSIS, Polyhidria.

POLYLEUCOCYTHÆMIA, Leucocythæmia.

POLYLYMPHIA, Anasarca.

POLYMASTHUS, Pleiomasthus, (poly, and μαστος, 'breast,') (F.) Plurimamme. A monster having several breasts. The condition has been called Polyma'zia, Pleiomaz'ia, and Pleoma'zia.

POLYMAZIA, (poly, and μαστος, 'a breast,') see Polymasthus.

POLYMELIAN, (F.) Polymélien, (poly, and μελος, 'a limb,') An epithet given to monsters characterized by the insertion, in a well formed subject, of one or more accessory limbs, accompanied, at times, by the rudiments of certain other parts.

POLYMERIA, Polymerismus—p. Promiscua translativa, Transposition of the Viscera.

POLYMERISMUS, Polymer'ia, (poly, and μερος, 'a part,') A monstrosity, which consists in the existence of supernumerary organs; as a sixth finger of the hand.

POLYNEURON, Plantago.

POLYNOCHIA, Polonochia.

POLYOP'SIA, Polyop'sy, Polyop'ia, Poly'opsy, (poly, and οψει, 'sight,') Vision is so called, when multiple or manifold.

POLYOPY, Polyopsia.

POLYORCHIS, Multites'tis, (poly, and ορχις, 'a testicle,') One who has more than two testicles.

POLYOREX'IA, (poly, and ορεξις, 'appetite,') Excessive appetite or hunger. A genus in the Gastroes of M. Alibert.

POLYPE'RIA, (poly, and πρως, 'mutilated,') Congenital misconstruction of various parts or organs.

POLYPHAG'IA, Multivoran'tia, (πολυφαγια, from poly, and φαγω, 'I eat,') Voracity. Faculty of eating or subsisting on many kinds of food. See Boulimia.

POLYPHAGOUS, (πολυφαγος,) Polyph'agus, Multiv'orous, (F.) Polyphage. Relating or appertaining to polyphagia.

POLYPHARMAC'IA, Polypharm'acy, (poly, and φαρμακον, 'a medicine,') The prescribing of too many medicines. A prescription, consisting of a number of medicines; hence the name Poly pharmacus, (F.) Polypharmaque, given to one who is in the habit of prescribing a number of medicines, and whose prescriptions are loaded with ingredients. The term is taken in bad part.

POLYPHARMAQUE, see Polypharmacia.

POLYPHYSIA, (poly, and ψυσα, 'wind,') Flatulence.

POLYPIFORM CONCRETIONS, (polyplus, and forma, 'form,') see Polyplus.

POLYPIONIA, (poly, and πιον, 'fat,') see Polysarcia—p. Infantum, see Polysarcia.

POLYPIOSIS, (poly, πιον, 'fat,' and osis,) see Polysarcia.

POLYPLAS'TIC, Polyplasticius, (poly, and πλασσω, 'I form,') That which has many shapes.

POLYPLASTIC ELEMENT, in histology, is one which does not retain its primary shape; but undergoes transformation into others.

POLYPOD'IA, (poly, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') A monstrosity in which there are more than two feet.

POLYPODI'TES, (πολυποδιτης,) Wine impregnated with polyphy.

POLYPOD'IUM, (πολυπόδιον,) P. Vulgarē seu Virginianum seu pinnatifidum, Filix a dulcis, Com'mon Polypody, Feru root, Rock Brake or Brack'en, Brake or Bracken root, (F.) Fougère douce. Ord. Filices. (From poly, and πους, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,' owing to its many roots.) This fern grows in the clefts of rocks, walls, &c., in both hemispheres. It was formerly regarded as a cholagogue, and was given in head diseases. It is not used now.

POLYPODIUM FILIX MAS, Aspid'ium seu Athyrium seu Nephrodium seu Polystichum Filix Mas, A. depas'tum seu eros'tum, Filix pinnata, Pter'is, Blechn'on, Polyrrhizon, Blanc'non Oribal'sii, Lonic'itis, Filix'ula, Filix Mas, F. non ramo'sa dentata, Nephrodium crenatum, Polystichum callipteris, Male Polypody or Fern, (F.) Fougère mâle. The rhizoma of this plant, Filix Mas, Ph. U. S., Filix, Ph. B. (1864,) has been much extolled as an anthelmintic, and in cases of tænia, and has, by many, been placed above all tæniacuges. It was the basis of a once celebrated remedy—Madame Nouffer's. Dose, ʒij to ʒiij of the powdered solid part of the root; followed in the morning by a strong cathartic of cambo or jalap. An ethereal extract has been proposed by Dr. Peschier, of Geneva,—Extractum filicis æthereum, or Oleum filicis, the dose of which is from 12 to 24 grains. Extractum filicis liquidum is officinal in the Ph. B. (1864.) Dose, ℞xxx to fʒj.

POLYPODIUM INCANUM, P. cetaræcinum, Acrostichum polypodioïdes, Polypody, Rock Brake or Bracken; indigenous; has been considered demulcent, cathartic and anthelmintic.

POLYPODY, Polypodium, P. incanum—p. Common, Polypodium—p. Male, Polypodium filix mas.

POL'YPOID, Polypoï'des, (polyplus, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Having the shape of, or resembling, a polyplus.

POLYPORE DU MÉLÈZE, Boletus laricis.

POLYPORUS IGNIARIUS, (poly, and πορος,

'a pore,') Boletus ignarius—p. Officinalis, Boletus laricis.

POLYPO'SIA, (πολυποσια, from poly, and ποσις, 'drink,') Great thirst; desire for drink. Polydipsia.

POLYPO'TOME, Polypot'omus, Pol'ypotome, Poly'ptomus, Pol'ypus knife, (polyplus, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') An instrument for the removal of polyplus by excision.

POLYPOUS, Polypo'sus. Relating, or belonging to, or resembling polyplus.

POLYPTOME, Polypotome.

POL'YPLUS, (πολυπυς,) Pseudometamorpho'sis poly'pousa, (from poly, and πυς, gen. ποδος, 'a foot,') A name given to tumours, which occur in mucous membranes especially; and which have been compared to certain zoophytes. Polyplus may form on every mucous membrane. They are most commonly observed in the nasal fossæ, Rhinopol'ypii, pharynx, and uterus; more rarely in the stomach, intestines, bronchial tubes, bladder, and meatus auditorius externus. They vary much in size, number, mode of adhesion, and intimate nature. Accordingly, they have received various appellations; mucous, soft, vesicular, when their substance has been soft, spongy, vesicular, and, as it were, gorged with fluid. Others have been called hard; and these have been distinguished into fibrinous or fleshy, and into scirrhous or carcerous. Fibrinous polyppi, Pol'ypii fibro'sii, Inopol'ypii, are of a dense, compact texture, and whitish colour. They contain few vessels, and do not degenerate into cancer. The scirrhous or carcinomatous are true cancerous tumours, painful and bleeding. They present all the pathological changes which belong to cancerous affections, and the prognosis is of course unfavourable.

The mode of treating polyppi must differ according to their character. The means used to destroy them have been, 1. To subject them to the action of certain astringent powders or solutions, to obtain their resolution. 2. Cauterization or the application of the actual cautery or caustics. 3. Excision or ablation with a cutting instrument. 4. Extirpation with the fingers or with the polyplus forceps. 5. A ligature, put around them so as to prevent their nutrition. A seton has, also, been sometimes used to gradually destroy the pedicle.

The term POL'YPI,—Pseudopol'ypii, Cardi'tis poly'pousa, Pol'ypiform Concretions, (F.) Concretions poly'puses or poly'piformes ou sanguines du Cœur, Hémocardioplasties, (Piorry,)—has likewise been applied to collections of blood—fibrinous concretions—found in the heart—Heart clots—or great vessels after dissolution. The presence of these concretions during life may be suspected, when in the course of an acute or chronic affection of the heart, or at the close of chronic diseases in general—especially those of the lungs—the heart's action becomes suddenly tumultuous, obscure, and accompanied with a soft bellows' murmur, whilst the general symptoms indicate the effects of obstructed circulation. The right cavities are most frequently affected.

POLYPUS BRONCHIA' LIS, Bronchlemmitis, Bronchi'tis membrana'cea seu exsudati'va seu croup'osa, B. plastic, Bronchial Croup, Chron'ic Croup [?], Pseudomembranous Bronchitis, (F.) Bronchitis pseudo-membraneuse. A membraniform secretion in the bronchial tubes of a diphtheritic character, having the shape, when expectorated, of the bronchia. It is the result of inflammation of the lining membrane of those tubes.

POLYPUS CARNOSUS, Sarcoma—p. Fibrosus, see Polyplus—p. Uteri, Metropolypus.

POLYRRHIZON, (πολυρρίζον, from poly, and ρίζα, 'a root,') Polypodium filix mas.

POLYRRHŒA, (poly, and ῥέω 'to flow,') Profluivium.

POLYSARCIA, Polysarcosis, (πολυσαρκια, from poly, and σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh.') Carnositas, Polysomatia, Adeliparia, Corpulentia, Steatites. Excessive corpulency. Authors have distinguished two varieties of this:—POLYSARCIA CARNO-SA, Corpulency, and P. ADIPO-SA, Polyipio'nia, Polyipio'sis, Pimelo'sis nim'ia, Pachy'sinus, Pachy'n'sis. Obes'itas, Hyperpim'ele, Lipa'ria, Adipo'sis, Polysarc'ia fugino'sa, Empyme'tium polysarc'ia, Barysoma'ia, Barysomat'ica, Lipo'sis, Lipar'otes, Lipas'ma, Pingu'itudo, Pin'guitude, Obes'ity, (F.) Obésité, Embonpoint excessif. A severe regimen and exercise are the best preventives. Children are occasionally met with of unusual fatness, in spite of every care. This morbid disposition has been termed Polyipio'nia infantum and Chloro'sis gigante'a.

POLYSARCIA VISCERUM, Physconia adiposa.
POLYSARCOSIS, Polysarcia.
POLYSCEL'IA, (poly, and σκελος, 'a leg.') A monstrosity, characterized by the presence of one or more supernumerary legs.

POLYSIA'LIA, (poly, and σιαλον, 'saliva.') Excessive discharge of saliva.

POLYSOMAT'IA, (poly, and σωμα, 'body,') Polysarcia.

POLYSO'MIA, (poly, and σωμα, 'body,') A monstrosity characterized by the existence of more bodies than one.

POLYSPAS'TON, (poly, and σπασω, 'I draw.') A powerful instrument for reducing luxations.

POLYSPER'MIA, (πολυσπερμια, from poly, and σπερμα, 'sperm.') Richness or fulness of sperm or seed.

POLYSTHEN'IC, Polysthen'icus, (πολυσθενης, from poly, and σθενος, 'strength.') Having much strength.

POLYSTICUM CALLIPTERIS, Polypodium filix mas—p. Filix mas, Polypodium filix mas.

POLYSTOMA PINGUICOLA, (poly, and στομα, 'a mouth,') see Worms—p. Venarum, see Worms.

POLYTOCIA, (πολυτοκια, from poly, and τοκος, 'a child,') Fecundity.

POLYTRIC, Asplenium trichomanoides.
POLYTRICHA, see Polytrichus.

POLYTRICHUM, (πολυτριχον, from poly, and τριχος, gen. τριχος, 'hair,') P. vulgare, Polytrichon, Adiantum au'reum, Gold'en Maid'enhair, (F.) Perce-mousse. Ord. Musci. It is possessed of astringent properties, and was formerly given in diseases of the lungs, and in calculous affections.

POLYTRICHUM COMMUNE, Asplenium trichomanoides.

POLYTRICHUM JUNIPERINUM, Hair'cap moss, Rob'bin's Rye, common in New England, is said to possess powerful diuretic properties.

POLYTRICHUS, (πολυτριχος.) Very hairy. One that has much hair. The condition is termed Polytrich'ia; although this term is, at times, employed for the growth of hair on parts not usually having it.

POLYTROPH'IA, (poly, and τροφη, 'nourishment.') Abundant or excessive nutrition.

POLYURESIS, (poly, and ουρισις, 'urination,') Diabetes.

POLYURIA, (poly, and ουρον, 'urine,') Diabetes.

POLYUR'ICUS. Sauvages calls Ischu'ria polyur'ica a kind of ischuria, caused by accumulation of urine in the bladder.

POMA, gen. Po'matis, (πομα,) Drink—p. Chinen-sia, (pl. of pomum, 'an apple,') see Citrus aurantium.

POMACEUM, (pomum, 'an apple,') Cider.

POMATUM, Pommatum, (from poma, 'apples,') which formerly entered into its composition.) (F.) Pommade, Liparole, Stéarolé. A pharmaceutical preparation, employed only externally, which differs but little from an ointment, except in having generally less consistence. It is usually scented and coloured to render it more agreeable.

Common Pomatum is made of lard, 12lbs; suet, 4lbs; essence of lemon,  $\frac{3}{4}$  viij.

POMMADE DE GONDRET, P. ammoniacale de Gondret, Caustique ammoniacale, Pomatum seu Unguentum ammoniacalè Gondreti, Gondret's Counterir'ritant, Gondret's ammoniacal Caustic. (Liq. ammon. p. ij; Sevi, p. j; Ol. amygdal. p. j; M.) Used to excite a speedy revulsion in cases of chronic affections of the brain, incipient cataract, amaurosis, &c., as well as to cauterize the integuments deeply.

The above formula is that of the French Codex, but, according to M. Trousseau, it is much too hard for use, unless the weather is warm. He proposes two formulæ, one for summer, the other for winter. In the former, he directs three parts of lard, one of suet, and four of liquor ammoniæ; in the latter, equal parts of lard and liquor ammoniæ.

POMPHOLYGE'RON, (πομφολυγηρον, from πομφολυγος, 'I raise blisters.') The name of a plaster employed by the ancients.

POMPH'OLYX, gen. Pompholyg'is, (πομφολυγ'is, from πομπος, 'a blister.') A small vesicle on the skin. An eruption of bulle or blebs, appearing without any inflammation around them, and without fever. It is the Erythylis Pompholyx of Gœac. See Pemphigus.

POMPHOLYX, Tutia, Zinci oxydum.

POMPIUS, (πομπιος,) Vesicula, Wheal.

POMPION, Cucurbita pepo.

POMUM, see Pyrus malus.

POMUM ADA'MI, Eminentia thyroidea, (F.)

Pomme d'Adam, Ad'am's Apple. The projection formed by the thyroid cartilage in the neck—of males particularly. It is so called from a notion that it was caused by the apple sticking in the throat of our first parent.

POPULAR, AMERICAN, ([F.] Peuplier, [L.] Populus.) Liriodendron—p. Balm of Gilead, Populus Candicans—p. Black, Populus—p. Tree, Liriodendron—p. Tulipbearing, Liriodendron.

POPLES, gen. Poplitis, Gare'tum, Garretum, Ig'nyis, Ig'nyè, Suffra'go, Fos'sa g'e'nu, Fos'sa poplite'a, the Ham, Hough, Hoff, Hock, (F.) Jarret, (from [L.] post, 'behind,' and plico, 'I fold,') The posterior part of the knee joint. The ham forms what is called the popliteal region or space.

POPLESY, Apoplexy.

POPULITÆUS, (from poples.) Popliteal muscle.

POPULITÆ, Poplitæus muscle.

POPULITÆAD, see Popliteal aspect.

POPULITÆAL, Poplitæus, Poplitic, (F.) Poplitè, (from poples.) That which relates to the ham. A name given to various parts.

POPULITÆAL ARTERY—Popliteal portion of the crural,—(Ch.), is really a continuation of the femoral, which changes its name on passing through the abductor magnus muscle. It descends a little obliquely outwards into the hollow of the ham, and extends from the commencement of the lower third of the thigh to the end of the upper quarter of the leg, where it terminates by dividing into the posterior tibial and peroneal arteries. In the ham, it gives off the three superior articular arteries; and, at the top of the leg, the arteries of the gemelli or gemini muscles, gemi branches, (F.) branches jumelles, the two inferior articular arteries, and the tibialis antica.

POPULITÆAL ASPECT. An aspect towards the side on which the poples or ham is situated. (Barclay.) Poplitæad is used by the same writer adverbially, and signifies 'towards the popliteal aspect.'

POPULITÆAL FOSSA, Poples.

POPULITÆAL GLANDS, Glandulæ poplitææ. Lymphatic glands, four in number, seated in the popliteal region or space.

POPULITÆAL MUSCLE, Poplitæus Mus'cle, Subpoplitæus, (F.) Muscle poplitè, Muscle Jarretier, Fémoro-popliti-tibial. (Ch.), is seated in the popliteal region. It is triangular, long, flat; and is inserted, on the one hand, by means of a strong tendon, into the tuberosity at the outer condyle of the femur, terminating below at the upper part of the posterior surface of the tibia. This muscle bends the leg on the thigh, and, reciprocally, the thigh on the leg. When the leg is bent, it causes it to turn, in rotation, inwards.

POPULITÆAL NERVES. They result from the bifurcation of the sciatic, and are two in number, viz. 1. The external poplitæal, Peroneal nerve, Branche péronière, (Ch.) It is smaller than the internal; turns to the outside of the fibula at the upper part of the leg, and divides into the musculocutaneous branch, nerf pré-tibio-digital, (Ch.) and the anterior tibial, nerf pré-tibio-susphalangéaire, (Ch.) 2. The internal poplitæal nerve, Branche tibiale (Ch.), which is larger than the other, and seems to be the real continuation of the sciatic nerve. It descends vertically into the hollow of the ham; and passes beneath the aponeurotic arch of the solaris muscle, beyond which it takes the name tibial nerve. It furnishes the external saphæna nerve, and a number of branches, that are distributed to the posterior muscles of the leg. It then passes to the sole of the foot to be divided into two branches, called Plantar nerves.

POPULITÆAL REGION, Poples—p. Space, Poples.

POPULITÆAL VEIN has the same arrangement as the artery behind which it is situated.

POPULITIC, Popliteal.

POPONAX, see Pastinaca opopanax.

POPPY, ([Sax.] popiz.) see Papaver—p.celandine, Styphorum diphyllum—p. Coïn, red, Papaver rhœas.

POPULUS, P. nigra, Æge'ros, Achero'is, Black pop'lar, (F.) Peuplier, P. noir ou franc. The young buds, oculi or rudiments of the leaves, which appear in the beginning of spring, were formerly used in an official ointment—the unguentum populæum. It was, also, recommended in chronic affections of the lungs.

The bark of Populus Tremuloïdes, American aspen; of P. TREMULA seu pen'dula, Europe'an aspen; and of POPULUS CAN'DICANS, Balm of Gilead Pop'lar, is antiperiodic, and furnishes sall'icin and pop'ulin, in which the properties probably reside.

PORCELAINÉ, Essera, Urticaria.

PORCELET, Hyoscyamus.

PORCELIA TRILOBA, (after A. Porcel, of Spain, a promoter of botany,) see Carica papaya.

PORCELLIO, (dim. of porcus, 'a hog,') Oniscus.

PORCELLUS, Oniscus.

PORCULUS. Oniscus.

PORCUPINE DISEASE, Ichthyosis.

PORCUPINE MEN, Echinodermi. Persons have been so called in whom the cuticle is produced in the form of pointed prolongations, as if it had been moulded on the papillæ, like the shorter and blunter quills of the porcupine.

PORCUS, (πορκος,) Vulva.

PORDE, (πορδη,) Crepitation, Fart.

PORE, Porus, (πορος, 'a passage,') In'terstice. Pores are the excessively minute spaces or interstices which separate the integrant molecules of bodies, and render these bodies permeable. Anatomists formerly gave this name to supposititious openings at the extremities of vessels at the surface of different membranes. Thus EXHALANT PORES have been supposed to exist in the exhalants, to transmit the fluids exhaled.—ABSORBENT PORES to be employed in taking up parts that have to enter the circulation. Pores exist in the cuticle; yet Humboldt, with a powerful magnifying-glass, was unable to observe them. These pores have also been called spira'cula.

A body that is possessed of pores is said to be porous, porous, (F.) Porous.

POREBLIND, (peerblind [?]), Myopic.

PORED MILK, Colostrum.

POREUX, Porous.

PORI (pl. of porus, 'a passage,') BILIA'RII, Ductus biliarii seu biliariferi, Canaliculi biliariferi, Sarculi fellæ. Ducts which receive the bile from the penicilli of the liver, and convey it to the hepatic duct.

PORI CUTANEI, P. Exhalantes seu Sudoriferi seu Resorbentes, Meatus cuticularis. The pores of the skin.

PORILLON, Narcissus pseudonarcissus.

PORNIA, (πορνεία,) Prostitution.

PORNOGRAPHY, Pornographia, (πορνεία, 'prostitution,' and γραφία, 'I describe,') A description of prostitutes or of prostitution, as a matter of public hygiene.

POROCELE, (πωρος, 'callus,' and κηλη, 'a tumour,') A hard tumour of the testicles or its envelopes.

POROMA, gen. Poro'matis, (πωρωμα,) Induration.

POROMPHALOCLE, Poromphalon.

POROMPHALON, Poromphalus, Poromphalocelæ, (πωρος, 'callus,' and ομφαλος, 'navel,') Umbilical hernia with hard and thickened parietes.

POROS, (πορος,) Canal, Meatus; (πωρος,) Callosity.

POROSIS, (πωρωσις,) Chalaza, Induration.

POROSUS, (from poros, 'pore,') Porous.

POROTIC, Poroticus, (F.) Porotique, (from πωρος, 'callus,') A remedy believed to be capable of assisting the formation of callus.

PORPHYRA, πορφύρα, 'purple,') Purpura—p. Græcorum, Petechie—p. Hæmorrhagica, Purpura hæmorrhagica—p. Lacinata, Ulva umbilicalis—p. Umbilicalis, Ulva umbilicalis.

PORPHYRISMA, (from πορφύρα, 'purple,') Scarletina.

PORPHYRISMUS, Scarlatina.

PORPHYRIZATION, Levigation.

PORPHYROTYPHUS, see Typhus.

PORPHYRURIA, Porphyuria, (πορφύρα, 'purple,' and ουρον, 'urine,') A state of the urine—porpuric urine—in which it deposits the remarkable colouring matter—Purpurin, Uro'sacin or Uro'sacin, Rosac'lic acid, Uroë'ythrin, Uro'rhodin, U'rrhodin—in association with urate of ammonia. It is considered to be a modification of Urohematin, hæmaphæin.

POR'PHYRY, Porphyrites, (from πορφύρα,

'purple,') A species of very hard, compound rock, susceptible of considerable polish, and used in the fabrication of mortars and slabs for the apothecary.

PORPHYRY, BLACK, Ophites.

PORPHYRIA, Porphyria.

PORRACE, Porraceus.

PORRACEOUS, Porraceus, Pra'sinus, (from porrum, 'a leek,') (F.) Porrace. Having the green colour of the leek. An epithet given to certain excreted matters,—the sputa, bile and fæces particularly.

PORREAU, Allium porrum.

PORRECTUM, (porrigo, porrectum, 'to stretch,') Lever.

PORRET, Allium porrum.

PORRIDGE, ATHOL, see Mahogany.

PORRIGINE, Porrigio favosa.

PORRIGINEUX, Porriginous.

PORRIGINOSUS, Porriginous.

PORRIG'INOUS, Porriginosus, (F.) Porrigineux. Appertaining to porrigo.

PORRIGO, gen. Porrig'inis, 'scurf or scall in the head,' Tinea, T. Cap'itis, Favus, Furfuratio, Furfures, Ecpye'is seu Phly'sis porrigio, Trichono'sis, Scal'led head in general, Scal'lard; from porrigere, 'to spread,' or from porrum, 'a leek,' from the odour of the discharge. [?] (F.) Teigne, Rache. Some of the varieties are communicable. With the ancients a scurfy affection of the head; dandrif. Since often used like tinea for scalled head in general; and by Willan and Bateman for a class of diseases of the hairy scalp, principally characterized by an eruption of the pustules, called favi and achores, unaccompanied by fever.

PORRIGO CONFERTA, P. scutulata.

PORRIGO DECAL'VANS, Tricho'sis areæ, A'reæ, Alopec'ia areata seu partial'is seu circumscripta, Phytoalope'cia, Trichono'sis furfura'cea, Ty'ria, Tyro'ma, Ophi'asis, Tinea ton'dens, Her'pes seu Tinea tonsu'rans, Vitili'go, Squar'ra ton'dens, Lim'ited or partial Bald'ness (F.) Teigne tondante ou pelade, Pelade achromatense, P. décalvante, Dartre tonsurante, consists of patches of baldness without decay or change of colour in the surrounding hair, the exposed parts of the scalp being glabrous, white, and shining. The morbid condition sometimes spreads, so that the patches coalesce, rendering the baldness extensive. To a vegetable growth, forming a tube around the roots of the hair in Tinea tondens, Gruby gave the name Micro'sporon seu Micro'sporum Audouin'i. It is, also, called Trichoph'yton seu Trichomyces decal'vans. Another vegetable parasite, called Trichoph'yton seu Trychomyces tonsu'rans, (F.) Teigne tonsurante, is developed in the root of the hair. The treatment consists in keeping the scalp cleared by constant shaving, and in the steady application of some stimulating liniment or ointment.

PORRIGO FAVO'SA, Ce'riæ, Favus, Ecpye'is porri'go favo'sa, Tinea favo'sa seu ve'ra, Scab'ies cap'itis favo'sa, Melice'ra, Melice'rum, Melice'ria, Mellifa'vium, Porrigif'oyta, Honeycomb Scall or Tetter, (F.) Teigne favense, Porrigne. This consists in an eruption of pustules common to the head, trunk, and extremities, peaised, flattened at the top, in clusters, often uniting; discharge, fetid; scabs, honeycombed; the cells filled with fluid. It occurs both in early and adult life. Modern researches have satisfied most observers, that the crusts of favus are of vegetable nature, and formed of a parasitic plant, Fungus porrig'inis, belonging, according to Gruby, to the obsolete genus mycoderm'a. MM. J. Müller and Lebert refer it to the genus Oidium, and call it Oid'ium Schönleini's, whilst Remak assigns it to a new genus under the name Acho'zion Schönleini's. The point is not, however, settled. The treatment of this variety must consist in the exhibition of laxatives and the mildest stimulating ointments, such as the Ung. zinci, Ung. hydrargyri præcipitat. alb., &c. Eczema of the hairy scalp is often confounded with Porrigo.

PORRIGO FURFURANS, Epye'sis porrigo furfura'cea, Tin'ea seu Tricho'sis furfuracea seu porrigin'o'sa, Pityri'asis, Teigne furfurace'e of Alibert, commences with an eruption of small aches, the fluid of which soon concretes and separates in innumerable thin, laminated scabs, or scalelike exfoliations. It is attended with a good deal of itching and some soreness of the scalp, to which the disease is confined. It occurs chiefly in adults. In the treatment, the scalp must be kept shaved. The part must be washed repeatedly with soap and water, and an oiled silk cap worn. The nature of the ointments used must vary according to the period of disease and the irritability of the part affected. Zinc ointment; — one made with the Coccus indicus; — the Sulphur ointment; — Citrine ointment; Ung. hydrargyri nitricooxydi; Tar ointment, and Nitric acid ointment have all been found useful. Should inflammation or discharge arise, these applications must of course be intermitted.

PORRIGO LARVALIS, P. lupinosa.

PORRIGO LARVA' LIS, Crusta lac'tea, Epye'sis Porri'go crusta'cea, Menti'go, A'chor, Tin'ea lac'tea seu Fa'cies, Lacti'men, Lacti'go, Milky scall or Te'ter, Milkblotch, (F.) Croûte de lait ou lait-euse, Feux volages. This is, almost exclusively, a disease of infancy. It commonly appears first on the forehead and cheeks, in an eruption of numerous, minute, whitish aches on a red surface. These break and discharge a viscid fluid, which becomes incrustated in thin, yellowish, or greenish scabs. The patches spread, until the whole face becomes, as it were, enveloped in a mask; hence the epithet larvalis. The disease is rather a variety of Eczema. Sometimes the eruption appears on the neck and breast; and, occasionally, on the extremities. In general, the health of the child does not suffer, but the eruption is always attended with much itching and irritation. The treatment consists in mild, tepid ablution, and the application of gently stimulating ointments, as the unguentum zinci. The bowels must be kept in a soluble state by small doses of calomel, or by rhubarb and magnesia.

PORRIGO LUPINO'SA, Tin'ea lupi'na, Fa'veus disper'sus, Sca'bies cap'itis, Epye'sis porrigo lupino'sa, Porri'go larva'tis, Impeti'go figura'ta, Tin'ea granulata seu muc'o'sa, Crusta lac'tea (of some), Ment'agra infantum, (F.) Teigne, Dartre crustace'e flavescente, Favus disse'miné, consists of minute pustules in small patches, mostly commencing on the scalp; the patches terminate in dry, delving scabs, resembling lupine seeds; the interstices often covered with a thin, whitish and exfoliating incrustation. It occurs chiefly in early life, and requires the same treatment as the last.

PORRIGO SCUTULA'TA, P. confer'ta, Tin'ea granulata seu fco'sa, Epye'sis porri'go galea'ta, Acho'res seu Sca'bies cap'itis, Fa'veus confer'tus, Ring'worm of the Scalp, Scal'led head, (F.) Teigne annulaire, T. en anneau, T. nummulaire, Favus en groupes. It commences with clusters of small, light, yellow pustules, which soon scab off; and, if neglected, become hard by accumulation. If the scabs be removed, the surface is left red and shining, but studded with slightly elevated points. If not attended to, it involves the whole head. It occurs in children three or four years of age, and is very unmanageable. The rules laid down under Porri'go furfurans must be here still more perseveringly enforced. The whole tribe of stimulating ointments may be used in succession. No one will always succeed, and hence the necessity of change, provided advantage should not seem to follow any particular application. The Unguentum ad Scabiem of Banyer sometimes cures, when others fail.

PORRIGOPHYTA, (porrigo, and φυτόν, 'a vegetable,') Porri'go favo'sa. Por'rigophyte means the plant of favus or of porrigo favosa.

PORRUM, Allium porrum, Thymion.

PORRUS, Thymion.

POR'TA, Py'te, (F.) Porte, 'a gate.' The part of the liver or other organ—hilus—where its vessels enter as by a gate. See Liver. Also, the Vulva.

PORTA HEPATIS, see Liver—p. Jecoris, see Liver—p. Lienis, see Splen.

PORTA VE'NA, Ve'na por'tæ, V. porta'rum seu ad portas seu porta'lis seu magna seu quæ ad por'tas est seu stelechia' seu lac'tea seu ostia'ria seu arterio'sa seu arteria'lis, Rama'lis ve'na, Jan'itrix, Ma'nus jec'oris seu hep'atis.

The Sys'tem of the ve'na por'ta or the Abdom'inal ve'nous sys'tem or Por'tal sys'tem, (F.) Veine porte, Porte ve'ne, is a vascular apparatus of black blood, situate in the abdomen, and resulting from two distinct orders of vessels, united into one common trunk. 1. One of these trunks, much more extensive than the other, has received the name Vena porta abdominal'is, because it arises from all the organs enclosed in the cavity of the abdomen, except the kidneys and bladder; and, in the female, the uterus. The Abdom'inal ve'na por'ta has two principal roots, the splenic vein and the superior mesenteric, which have their ramifications in all the digestive organs. 2. The other trunk, distributed solely to the liver, has been called the Hepatic ve'na por'ta. It appears to be a continuation of the abdominal vena porta, and proceeds towards the inferior surface of the liver. Opposite the transverse fissure of that organ, it divides, like an artery, into two branches, which, at their union, seem to form a canal or duct, called by some the Sinus of the ve'na por'ta or of the portal vein. These branches are distributed in the substance of the liver, whither they are accompanied by a prolongation of the fibrous capsule of that organ,—the capsule of Glisson. The different branches of the vena porta are devoid of valves. See Liver.

POR'TAL, (from porta.) Relating to the porta of the liver,—as the portal system, or system of the vena porta. By extension, the term has been applied to an analogous system of vessels in the kidney. See Kidney.

PORTAL FISSURE, see Liver—p. Fossa, see Liver—p. System, see Porta Vena—p. System of the kidney, see Kidney—p. Vein, Porta Vena—p. Veins of the kidney, see Kidney.

PORTE-AIGUILLE, Acutenac'ulum, Acuduc'tor, Rhaphidago'gus, Needlecarrier, Needlebearer, ([F.] porter, 'to carry,' and aiguille, 'a needle,') An instrument for accurately laying hold of a needle, and giving it greater length, when it is so fine and small that it cannot be held by the fingers. It is of steel or silver, about two inches long, and throughout the whole, almost, of its length, divided into two branches, so as to form a kind of forceps, capable of being closed by means of a sliding ring. A modification of this instrument was devised by Dr. Physick for taking up deep-seated arteries beyond the reach of a tenaculum or common needle. It consists of a forceps so constructed as to hold in its extremity a needle armed with a ligature. The handles of the forceps are fastened together, temporarily, by a spring or catch; and, when the needle is fairly deposited beneath the vessel, it is disengaged from the forceps and drawn out, leaving the ligature behind, which can be tied without difficulty.

PORTE-BOUGIE (F.) A silver canula similar to that of a trochar, except that it is longer. It is used for conducting bougies into the urethra.

PORTE-CAUSTIQUE, Porte-pierre—p. Feu-ille, Subscapularis.

PORTE-LAQ. An instrument for carrying the laq or fillet over the limb of the fetus, whilst in utero, when turning is necessary.

PORTE-LIGATURE, (porter, 'to carry,' and ligature.) An instrument for conveying a ligature to deep-seated parts.

PORTE-MÈCHE (F.), (from porter, 'to carry,' and mèche, 'a tent.') An instrument for carrying tents or mèches deeply into fistulous openings, or sinuses, to the bottom of ulcers, &c. It is a wire of silver or steel, four or five inches long, having a notch at one extremity, and a button at the other.

PORTE-MOXA (F.). A small instrument for keeping the moxa applied to a part to be cauterized. It consists of a metallic ring—separated from the skin by three supports of ebony—to which a handle is adapted.

PORTE-NŒUD (F.), (from porter, 'to carry,' and nœud, 'a knot.') An instrument for carrying a ligature round the base or pedicle of a tumour.

PORTE-PIERRE (F.), (porter, 'to carry,' and pierre, 'a stone,') Porte-caustique, Causticoph'o-rum, Caustic bearer. An instrument similar to a porte-crayon for carrying lunar caustic.

PORTE-SONDE (F.). An instrument resembling a porte-crayon, employed for holding the style or sonde, and inserting it more readily into the nasal duct, during the operation for fistula lacrymalis.

PORTE VEINE, Porta vena.

PORIENTUM, Monster.

PORTER, (from being drunk by porters,) Cerevisia.

PORTIO DURA, 'hard portion,' Facial nerve—p. Inter duram et mollem, Portio Wisbergii—p. Intermedia Wisbergii, Portio Wisbergii—p. Media inter portionem duram et portionem mollem, Portio Wisbergii.

PORTIO MOLLIS, 'soft portion,' Auditory nerve.

PORTIO WRISBERGII, P. intermedia Wisbergii seu me'dia inter portionem duram et portio-nem mollem seu inter duram et mollem. (F.) Faisceau intermédiaire de Wisberg, Intermédiaire de Wisberg. A small, white fasciculus, intermediate between the portio mollis and portio dura of the seventh pair of nerves, which was first described by Wisberg. The Chorda Tympani is supposed by some to emanate from this nerve.

PORTION COSTO-TRACHÉLIENNE DU SACRO-SPINAL, Longissimus dorsi—p. Écaillense ou squameuse du temporal, Squamous portion of the temporal.

PORTION GODRONNÉE ('plaited') DE LA CORNE D'AMMON. A name given by Vieq d'Azr to a small, denticulated cord, of a compact tissue and granular appearance, which unites the cornu ammonis to the paries of the lateral ventricle.

PORTION LOMBAIRE DU PLEXUS CRURAL, Lumbar plexus.

PORTONARIUM, (from porta, 'a gate,') Pylo-rus, Duodenum.

PORTULACA, P. olera'cea, Andrach'nè, Allium Gallicum, Pur'slane, Pur'slain, (F.) Pour-pier cultivé. This plant abounds with a watery and somewhat acid juice; and is often put into soups or pickled with spices. It is regarded as antiseptic and aperient.

PORUS, (πoros,) Callosity; (πoros,) Canal, Meatus—p. Acusticus, Auditory canal, internal—p. Acusticus externus, Auditory canal, external.

PORUS OPTICS. An opening in the centre of the cribriform lamella of the sclerotic, through which the central artery of the retina enters the eyeball.

POSCA, Oxyerate.

POSE, ([Sax.] τεπορε,) Coryza.

POSITOS, (ποσιμος,) Potable.

POSITION, FALSE, False position.

POSOL'OGY, Posolog'ia, Dosilog'ia, (ποσος, 'quantity,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') Indication of the doses in which the different articles of the materia medica ought to be exhibited. (F.)

Dosage.

POSOQUERIA DUMETORUM, Randia Dumetorum.

POSSÉDÉ, Possessed.

POSSESS'ED, Dæmoni'acus, (F.) Possédé. One affected with epilepsy, or other strange neurotic affection, was formerly supposed to be 'possessed' by a demon. Hence, exorcism and various religious ceremonies, at one time employed to drive off the intruder.

POSS'ET, Poss'etum, (from posea, 'sour wine and water' [?].) Milk curdled with wine, or any acid, or treacle. A preparation of beer and milk; Zythog'ala.

POSSET SACK, see Sack—p. Sago, see Sago.

POSSETTING, Regurgitation (of Infants).

POSTBRACHIALE, (post, 'after,' and brachium, 'arm,') Metacarpus.

POSTCARPIUM, (post, 'after,' and carpus, 'wrist,') Metacarpus.

POSTERIOR ANNULARIS. An external, interosseous muscle, which arises from the corresponding sides of the metacarpal bones of the ringfinger and little finger, and is inserted into the inside of the tendon on the back of the ringfinger. Its use is to draw the ringfinger inwards.

POSTERIOR ACRIS, Retrahens auris.

POSTERIOR INDICIS MA'NŪS. An internal, interosseous muscle, which arises from the inner or ulnar side of the metacarpal bone of the forefinger, and is inserted into the inside of the tendon on the back of the forefinger. Its use is to draw the forefinger inwards.

POSTERIOR INDICIS PE'DIS, Abduc'or Indicis Pe'dis. An external, interosseous muscle, which arises from the contiguous sides of the metatarsal bones of the fore-toe, and second of the small toes, and is inserted into the outside of the root of the first bone of the foretoe. Its use is to pull the foretoe outwards.

POSTERIOR ME'DII DIG'ITI MA'NŪS. An external, interosseous muscle, which arises from the corresponding sides of the metacarpal bones of the middle and ringfingers: and is inserted into the inside of the tendon on the back of the middle finger. Its use is to draw the middle finger inwards.

POSTERIOR ME'DII DIG'ITI PE'DIS, Abduc'tor me'dii dig'iti pe'dis. An external, interosseous muscle, which originates from the contiguous sides of the metatarsal bones of the second and third of the small toes, and is inserted into the outside of the root of the first bone of the second of the small toes. Its use is to pull the toe outwards.

POSTERIOR TER'TII DIG'ITI, Abduc'tor ter'tii dig'iti. An external, interosseous muscle, which arises from the contiguous sides of the metatarsal bones of the third and fourth of the small toes, and is inserted into the outside of the root of the first bone of the third of the small toes. Its use is to pull the toe outwards.

POSTHE, (ποσθη,) Penis, Prepuce.

POSTHET'OMIST, Posthet'omius, (ποσθη, 'prepuce,' and τομη, 'incision,') One who performs the operation of circumcision.

POSTHETOMY, Circumcision.

POSTHIA, (ποσθια,) Hordeolum.

POSTHIOPLASTIC, Posthioplas'ticus, Pos'ho-plas'tic, Posthioplas'ticus, (posthium, and πλασσω, 'I form.) An epithet applied to the operation for restoring the prepuce.

POSTHITIS, Acrobystitis, Acroposthitis, Eppogonitis, (from ποσθν, 'prepuce,' and itis.) Inflammation of the prepuce.

POSTHIUM, (ποσθιον.) Penis, Prepuce.

POSTHOCALYPTRON, (ποσθν, 'penis,' and αλυπτρα, 'a covering,') Condom.

POSTHONCUS, (posthe, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Swelling of the prepuce or penis.

POSTHOPLASTIC, Posthioplastic.

POSTHUMOUS, (post, 'after,' and humus, 'the ground,') Occurring after death.

POSTHUMOUS CHILD. One born after the death of its father, or taken from the dead body of its mother, as by the Cæsarean section.

POSTIME, (impostume,) Abscess.

POSTMORTEM, 'after death;' as 'a postmortem or necroscopic examination.'

POSTNATUS. 'Born after.' In the old law writers, the second son.

POSTPARTUM. 'After delivery.' As 'postpartum hemorrhage.'

POSTPOSITIO, (post, 'after,' and ponere, positum, 'to place,') 'a postponement,') Delay in the return of a paroxysm. It is opposed to anticipatio, which means the return of a paroxysm earlier than its accustomed hour.

In this sense, we speak of an anticipating, and a postponing, intermittent (Febris hysteretica).

POSTURAL, Posturalis, (from ponere, positum, 'to place,') Relating or appertaining to posture or position—as 'postural treatment,' the treatment by position,—of a fractured limb for example.

POSTURAL RESPIRATION, see Ready method.

POTABLE, Potabilis, (potare, 'to drink,' and habilis, 'able,') Potimos, Potos, Posimos, drinkable. Water is said to be potable, when it contains atmospheric air; is not brackish; and has no mineral impregnation of consequence.

POTAGE, (from (L.) potus, 'drink,') see Broth.

POTAGER, Lachanon.

POTAMOPYRA, (ποταμος, 'a river,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Elodes (febris).

POTASH. So called from the pots or vessels in which it was made;—Veg'etabile alkali, Gastrimum. Also, Potass, (F.) Potasse.

POTASH OF COMMERCE, Potassa impura, Impure potassa, Alumen catinum, Cineres Rusiacæ, Subcarbonas potassæ impurus, Potassæ carbonas impurus seu impura, Lixivus cinis, the Pearlash of commerce, is prepared from the ashes of land-plants by calcination, solution in water, filtration, and evaporation. It usually consists of subcarbonate of potassa, sulphate of potassa, chloride of potassium, silex, oxide of iron, &c.

From the ashes of lees of wine, and from vine-twigs, a much purer alkali is obtained. It is called Cinix infectorius seu felcum, Cineres clavellati seu gravellati, Alumen faxcum, (F.) Cendres gravellées ou de sarment.

Another variety of the alkali is afforded by burning argol in a crucible; afterwards powdering and calcining it, till it is nearly white; then dissolving in water, filtering, and evaporating. It is called Salt of Tartar, Sal Tartari, Kali præparatum e tartaro, K. e tartaro, Subcarbonas potassæ purissimus, Potassæ subcarbonas e tartaro. Lastly, when wormwood is burnt to ashes, dissolved in water, filtered, and evaporated to dryness, it affords another variety of vegetable alkali, the Sal absinthii or Salt of wormwood.

Impure potash is used for preparing the subcarbonate for medical use.

POTASS, Potassa, Potassa fusa, Potash. The protoxide of potassium.

(Acid. acetic. Oj, Potassæ bicarbon. q. s. Mix and add, by degrees, enough acetic acid to saturate the alkali; then filter and evaporate till a pellicle is formed, which is to be dried upon bibulous paper; evaporate again in a water-bath, and, removing the pellicles, dry.—Ph. U. S.)

It is cathartic and diuretic. Dose, ʒj to ʒij, or more.

POTASSÆ BICHRÔ'MAS, Ka'li chro'micum ru'drum seu ac'idum seu bichro'micum, Bichro'mate of potas'sa. (Procured by adding sulphuric, nitric, or acetic acid to a solution of the neutral chromate, and setting it aside to crystallize.) It is a violent irritant poison; and has been used as a caustic in cases of morbid growths, in the proportion of from half a drachm to a drachm of the salt to from an ounce to an ounce and a half of water.

POTASSÆ BISULPHAS, P. supersulphas—p. Bitartaras, P. supertartaras.

POTASSÆ CARBO'NAS, Kali aëra'tum, Bicarb'o-nas potas'sæ, Potas'sæ bicarb'o-nas (Ph. U. S., L. E., D. and B.). Deutocarb'o-nas potas'sii, Car'bonate, bicarb'bonate or supercarb'bonate of potassa. This is not caustic, like the subcarbonate of potass, and hence, has been preferred to relieve acidity. (Potass. carbon. Biv. Aquæ destillat. Ox. Pass carbonic acid through the solution until it is saturated, and filter. Evaporate at a heat not exceeding 160°, and dry the crystals on bibulous paper. Carbonic acid is obtained from marble by the addition of dilute sulphuric acid.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. x to ʒss. It is used in forming the soda powders, as well as for its antacid properties.

Distillers and brewers prepare this salt with great facility by suspending a solution of the purified carbonate of potas'sa in the fermenting tun. The alkaline salt is thus surrounded by an atmosphere of carbonic acid; and by absorbing it, it crystallizes into bicarbonate. The salt in powder is called sal aëra'tus. Its composition is between that of a carbonate and of a bicarbonate.

POTASSÆ CHRO'MAS, Ka'li chro'micum fla'tum seu neutra'le, Neutra'l yell'low Chro'mate or Monochro'mate of potassa. (Prepared by igniting a mixture of four parts of native chromite of iron (chrome iron ore) and one part of nitre; dissolving out the chromate of potassa by water, and crystallizing.) It has been used as an emetic, expectorant and diaphoretic. Dose, as an emetic, from two to four grains; as an expectorant, from ʒth to ½ grain. In the proportion of one drachm to 32 ounces of water, it has been used as an antiseptic wash—called by Jacobson Liquor conservat'us.

POTASSÆ CI'TRAS, Cit'rate of potas'sa. (Acid. citric. ʒx, Potass. bicarb. ʒxiv, Aquæ q. s. Dissolve the acid in the water; and after effervescence has ceased, strain and evaporate to dryness. The salt is deliquescent, and must be kept in wellstopped bottles. Ph. U. S.) It possesses the refrigerant properties of the neutral salts, and may be given in fever, when to do little or nothing is the most advisable course. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

POTASSÆ ET FERRI TARTRAS, Ferri tartarizatum—p. Hydras, Potassa fusa.

POTASSÆ HYDRIO'DAS, Potas'sæ Protohydr'i'odas, Potas'sii protox'idi hydr'i'odas, Ka'li Hydr'i'odini'um seu Hydr'i'od'icum, Hydr'i'odas Ka'licus, Hydr'i'odate of pot'ass, (F.) Hydriodate de potasse. If a solution of potass be poured on iodine, an iodate and hydriodate are formed. These may be separated by means of alcohol, which only dissolves the latter of these salts. The hydriodate, or rather the Iodide of Potassium, Ka'lium Ioda'tum, Potassii Iodure'tum seu Io'didum, (F.) Iodure de potassium, may be obtained by evaporation. When the Iodide of potassium is dissolved in water, it becomes the Hydri'odate of Potas'sa.

(The following is the formula in the Ph. U. S. Potass. ʒvj; Iodin. in pulv. ʒxvj; Carbon. ligni in pulv. subtiliss. ʒij; Ag. bullient. Oijj. Dissolve the potassa in the water; add the iodine gradually, stirring until the solution becomes colourless, and continue the additions until the liquid remains slightly coloured from excess of iodine. Evaporate to dryness, stirring in the charcoal towards the close. Rub to powder, and heat to dull redness in an iron crucible, keeping up the temperature for 15 minutes. When cool, dissolve out the saline matter with pure water, filter the solution, evaporate and set aside to crystallize. By evaporating and crystallizing as before, an additional quantity of crystals may be obtained.) Virtues,—those of iodine.

POTASSÆ MU'RIAS, Potas'sii chlo'ridum, Sal Digestivus seu Febrif'ugus Syll'vii, Spir'itus salis mari'ni coagula'tus, Mu'riate of Potass, Chloride of potas'sium. Bitter and refrigerant.

POTASSÆ MU'RIAS HYPEROXYGENA'TA, Potas'sæ Chlo'ras seu oxymu'rias, Oxymu'riate, Hyperoxymu'riate, Chlo'rate or Euchlo'rate of pot'ass, Protochlo'rate of potas'sium, Al'cali vegetabil'is sal'i'to-dephlogistica'tum, Chlorure'tum potas'sæ oxyda'tum, Halo'idum oxygena'tum, Oxyg'eno-chlorure'tum potas'sii, Ka'li chlo'ricum, Chlo'ras Ka'licus depura'tus, (F.) Chlorate de potasse. (It may be prepared by passing chlorine gas into a solution of potassa or carbonate of potassa, evaporating and crystallizing. Chloride of potassium is less soluble and remains in the mother water. A more complex form for its preparation is given in Ph. B. 1864.) It has been regarded as anti-neuropathic, and as an alterative purifier of the blood and humours. It is of doubtful efficacy. Dose, ʒ to 6 grains or more.

POTASSÆ NITRAS, P. Azotas, Nit'rate or Azotate of Pot'ass, Nit'rum, N. prismat'icum, Sal nit'rum, Nitre, Salp'etre, Sal petra, Sal'se'do mu'crum, Sanguin'ca, Berenic'ium, Halin'itrum, Prototi'trate of Potas'sium, Nit'rate of protox'ide of Potas'sium, Ka'li nit'ricum, Nit'ras ka'licus seu lixiv'ia, Azotas potas'sicus, (F.) Nitrate ou Azotate de potasse. (Obtained from the putrefaction of animal matters, in contact with calcareous or alkaline earths, by elixivation; adding, if necessary, woodashes to supply the alkaline basis. It is formed, in an impure state, by nature, in warm climates.)

It is diuretic and refrigerant, and, in large doses, purgative; externally, cooling and detergent. Dose, gr. x to ʒj. In large doses it is an acid poison.

POTASSÆ NITRAS FU'SUS SULPHATIS PATE'ULO MIX'TUS, Sal prunell'æ, Crystal'us minera'lia, Nit'ras potas'sæ cum sal'phur'is fu'sus, Nit'rum tabula'tum, La'pis Prunell'æ, Anod'ynum minera'le, Sorethro'at salt, Mineral crys'tal, (F.) Sel de Prunelle. Nitrate of potass, mixed with a little sulphate of potass and run into moulds. Its properties are those of nitre.

POTASSÆ OXALAS, Ox'alas Acid'ulum Potas'sæ seu Potas'sæ acid'ulus seu ba'sicus, Superox'alas ka'licum seu Potas'sæ, Hyperox'alas Potas'sæ, Sal Acetosel'æ, Oxal'ium, Ka'li oxal'icum acid'ulum, Ox'alas subpotas'sicus, Superox'alate of Protox'ide of Potas'sium, Ox'alate of Pot'ass, Salt of Sor'rel, (F.) Sel d'oseille, Sel à détacher. Prepared from the juice of wood sorrel. It is refrigerant, and is used to make lemonade, &c.

POTASSÆ OXALAS ACIDULUM, Potassæ, oxalate of—p. Oxymurias, P. murias hyperoxygenatus.

POTASSÆ PERMAN'GANAS, Kali Hypermangan'icum, Permaugane'tum potas'sæ, Perman'ganate of potas'sa, Hyperman'ganate of potassa. (May be made by mixing equal parts of deutocarbonate of manganese and chlorate of potassa with rather more than an equal part of caustic potassa, dissolving in a little water, evaporating to dryness and exposing to a temperature just short of redness. By hot water a solution is obtained, which on evaporation crystallizes. A form for its preparation is contained in Ph. B. 1864.) This salt has been given in cases of diabetes. Dose, from gr. ij to gr. v, three times a day. It has been prescribed, also, in obstinate dyspepsia; and has been highly recommended as a caustic, less painful and of more intense action than others; for this purpose, the powder is made into a paste with water. As an antihemic and escharotic combined, in the quantity of 20 grains to the pint of water, it, as well as manganic acid, has been used as a wash to cancerous and other ulcers.

Liquor Potassæ Permanganatis, Solution of Permanganate of Potash, four grains of the permanganate to one fluidounce of water, is official in the British Pharmacopœia of 1864. See Condy's Disinfecting Fluid, which is double the strength of this.

POTASSÆ PICRAS, P. Carbazotas, Picrate or Carbazotate of Potassa: (obtained by neutralizing picric acid with potassa.) It has been used as an antiperiodic. Dose two to five grains.

POTASSÆ PROTOHYDRIDAS, P. hydriodas—p. Puræ fusæ hydras, Potassa fusa—p. et Sodæ tartras, Soda, tartrate of.

POTASSÆ SUBCARBO'NAS, P. Corbo'nas (Ph. U. S.), P. carbo'nas e Lixiv'io Cin'erè, Subcarbo'nas Kal'i, Carbo'nas Potassæ, Kal'i præparatum, Sal Herbarum seu Plantarum seu Tar'tari seu Absinthii, Calcareous Tar'tar, Subcarbonate or Meph'ite of Pot'ass, &c. (See Potash.) (A filtered solution of the impure subcarbonate, Potassæ carbo'nas impur'a (Ph. U. S.), Pearlash (see Potash), evaporated to dryness.) This deliquescent salt is given in the same cases as the potassæ carbonas, than which it is more caustic and disagreeable.

The Parisian Codex has a Subcarbo'nas Potassæ ex tar'taro combus'to, vulgo Sal Tar'tari or Salt of Tar'tar;—(it is the Potassæ carbo'nas pur'us seu pura, Pure Carbonate of Potassa, Ph. U. S.); a Subcarbo'nas Potassæ ex deflagran'tibus simul tar'trat'è acid'ulo et Nitrat'è Potassæ parat'us, vulgo Nitrum ex tar'taro fix'um; and a Subcarbo'nas potassæ ex deflagran'te cum Carbo'nibus Nitrat'è Potassæ parat'us, vulgo Nitrum fix'um. They are all used like the preceding.

POTASSÆ SUBCARBO'NAS IMPURUS, Potash of commerce.

POTASSÆ SUL'PHAS, Kal'i vitriola'tum seu sulphur'icum, Sul'phas Kal'i, Lixiv'ia vitriola'ta, Nitrum vitriola'tum Schroederi, Sal Sapient'ie seu Tar'tari sulphura'tum seu Polychres'tus, Specif'icum Paracell'si, Spiritus vitri'oli coagula'tus Myusich'ti, Al'kali vegeta'bile vitriola'tum, Sal de duob'us, Arcanum duplica'tum, Tar'tarum vitriola'tum, Panac'e'a Dulcis Holsat'ie seu duplic'a'ta, Sul'phate of Potass, (F.) Sulfate de potasse. (The salt, that remains after the distillation of nitric acid, dissolved; the excess of acid saturated with subcarbonate of potass and crystallized.) Purgative and diuretic. Dose,  $\mathfrak{ss}$  to  $\mathfrak{ij}$  as a laxative. In a large dose it has proved an irritant poison.

POTASSÆ SUL'PHAS CUM SUL'PHURÈ, Sal Poly-chres'tus Glaseri, Lixiv'ia Vitriola'ta Sulphu'rea. (Formed by deflagrating nitrate of potass with sublimed sulphur.) Same virtues as the last. Dose, gr. xv to xxx.

POTASSÆ SULPHURETUM, Potassii sulphuretum—p. Superoxalas, Potassæ oxalas.

POTASSÆ SUPERSUL'PHAS, P. Bisul'phas, Sal eni'um seu febrif'ugus of Lem'ery, Supersulphate of Pot'ass, Ac'id Sul'phate or Bisul'phate of Pot'ass, Superprotosulphate of Potassium, (F.) Bisulfate de Potasse. (The salt remaining after the distillation of nitric acid, dissolved, strained, and crystallized.) It is refrigerant and purgative. Dose,  $\mathfrak{ss}$  to  $\mathfrak{ij}$ .

POTASSÆ SUPERTAR'TRAS, P. hypertar'tras, P. Bitar'tras (Ph. U. S.) seu tar'tras ac'id'a, Crystalli Tar'tari, Tar'tras Acid'ulus Potassæ pur'us, T. superpotass'icus, T. subpotass'icus, Supertar'trate of Protol'ide of Potassium, Bitar'trate or Supertar'trate of Pot'ass, Crystals of Tar'tar, Crémor Tar'tari, Cream of Tar'tar (when in powder), Supertar'trate of Pot'ass, (F.) Tartrate acide de potasse, Crème de Tartre. (The tartar of wine purified.) It requires 60 parts of water at 60° to dissolve it. It is mildly purgative, refrigerant and diuretic. Dissolved in water, with a small quantity of white wine, some sugar and lemon-peel, it forms an agreeable beverage in febrile diseases, under the name of Imperial. Dose, as a diuretic,  $\mathfrak{ij}$  to  $\mathfrak{ij}$ ; as a purgative,  $\mathfrak{ss}$  to  $\mathfrak{ij}$ .

POTASSÆ SUPERTAR'TRAS IMPURUS, Tar'tarus crud'us, Tar'tarum, Lapis v'ni, Magnet'us, Pedagra, Tar'tar, (F.) Tartre cru ou brut. It is called, also, Tar'tarum rubrum and Red Ar'gol, when obtained from red wines; Tar'tarum al'bum or White Ar'gol, when from white wines. Tartar is the saline deposit from wines as they become aged; which attaches itself to the sides of the casks and bottles in which they are kept. It consists of a considerable quantity of acidulous tartrate of potass, tartrate of lime, silica, alumen, oxyd of iron, manganese, and a red colouring matter, if the wine be red. It is chiefly used for the preparation of cream of tartar.

POTASSÆ TAR'TRAS, Kal'i tartariza'tum, Al'kali fix'um tartarisa'tum, Tar'tarum solu'bile, Tar'tarus tartariza'tus, Lixiv'ia Tartarisa'ta, Sal Panchres'tum, Tar'tras Kal'i'us seu *lixiv'is, Sal vegetabilis, Al'kali vegetabilè tartariza'tum, Tar'trate of Pot'ass, Sol'uble Tar'tar, (F.) Tartrate de Potasse, (Potassæ carbon.  $\mathfrak{X}$  xj; Potassæ Bitartrat. in pulv. subtiliss.  $\mathfrak{ij}$ ij, vel q. s., Aque bullientis, cong. Dissolve the carbonate of potassa in the water, add the bitartrate to saturation, and boil; filter, evaporate till a pellicle forms, and set aside to crystallize. Pour off the liquid; dry the crystals on bibulous paper, and keep in closelystopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) A saline cathartic in the dose of  $\mathfrak{ij}$  to  $\mathfrak{ij}$ .*

POTASSÆ TAR'TRAS ACIDA, P. supertartras—p. Tartras acidulus purus, P. supertartras—p. Tartras stibialis seu stibiosus, Antimonium tartariza'tum.

POTASSII BROMIDUM, *Potassæ hydrobrom'as, Bromide of potass'ium, (F.) Bromure de Potassium, (Bromin.  $\mathfrak{ij}$ ; Ferri filii,  $\mathfrak{ij}$ ; Potassæ carbon,  $\mathfrak{ij}$ ij, vel q. s.; Ag. destillat., Oiv. Add the iron filings and bromine to a pint and a half of the water; stirring for half an hour. Apply a gentle heat, and when the liquor assumes a greenish colour, add gradually the carbonate of potassa, dissolved in Oiss of the water, until it ceases to cause a precipitate. Continue the heat for half an hour, and filter. Wash the precipitate with the remaining water boiling hot, and filter. Mix the liquors and crystallize by evaporation.—Ph. U. S.) Virtues:—those of iodide of iron. Dose, gr. v to gr. x. It has been used, also, in the treatment of insomnia and restlessness, accompanied by, and dependent upon, nervous excitement. Large doses are said to occasion drowsiness, and to be antaurodisiac. See Bromine.*

POTASSII CHLORIDUM, Potassæ murias—p. Cyanidum, P. Cyanuretum.

POTASSII CYANURETUM, P. Cyan'idum (Ph. U. S., 1863), Cyan'uret of Potassium, Hydrocyanate of Potassa. (Potassii ferrocyanur., in pulv.,  $\mathfrak{z}$ viii; Potass. carbonat. exsicc.,  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij. Mix intimately, and throw into a deep iron crucible, heated to redness; keep up the heat till effervescence ceases, and the fused mass concretes, of a pure white colour, upon a warm glass rod dipped into it; then pour out the liquid carefully into a shallow dish to solidify, stopping before the salt becomes contaminated with the precipitated iron. Break up the mass whilst warm, and preserve in well-stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) Used in the same cases as the hydrocyanic acid. Dose, a quarter of a grain.

POTASSII DEUTOCARBONAS, Potassæ carbonas.

POTASSII FERROCYANURETUM, P. Ferrocyan'idum, Ferrocyanide of Ferrocyanuret of Potassium, Ferrocyanate or Ferropurussiate or Purussiate of Potassa, (F.) Protocyanure jaune de fer et de potassium, Cyanure de fer et de potassium. The yellow double cyanuret of potassium and iron, the salt from which the cyanuret of potassium is obtained by calcination. It is not much used in medicine. It has been advised as an astringent in the colliquative sweats of phthisis, in leucorrhœa, &c.; but it does not seem to be possessed of much activity. Dose, 10 or 15 grains every four or five hours.

POTASSII HYDRARGYROIODIDUM, Potassæ Iodohydrargyris, Hydrargyrum biiodatum cum kali iodato, Kali'um iodatum hydrargyratum, Iodohydrargyrate or Hydrargyroiodide of Potassium. (This salt is made by the combination of iodide of potassium with red iodide of mercury.) Its properties are similar to those of the iodides of mercury, but in a less degree.

POTASSII IODIDUM, Potassæ hydriodas—p. Ioduretum, Potassæ hydriodas—p. Oxygenochloruretum, Potassæ murias hyperoxygenatus—p. Protoxidi hydriodas, Potassæ hydriodas.

POTASSII SULPHOCYANURETUM, Sulphocyanuret of Potassium. This salt has been prepared as a substitute for hydrocyanic acid, and cyanuret of potassium, on the ground of its possessing their advantages without their inconveniences.

POTASSII SULPHURETUM, Potassæ Sulphuretum seu tersulphuretum, Potassæ sulphurata, Kali sulphuretum, He'par Sulphuris seu Kali'um, H. sulphuris sal'num seu sulphuris vulgare, Sulphuretum lixivie seu kali'um, Lix'ure of Sulphur, Sulphuret of Potass, Sulph'urated potassa or pot'ash. (F.) Sulfure de potasse, Sulfure de potassium sulfaté, Foie de Soufre. (Sulphur.  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij, Potassæ carb.  $\mathfrak{z}$ ij. Rub them together, and place the mixture in a covered crucible upon the fire until they unite.) It has been employed in affections of the chest, as an expectorant, in the dose of from  $\mathfrak{z}$ ss to  $\mathfrak{z}$ j, largely diluted; but is chiefly used as a bath or wash in cases of itch, tinea capitis, and other cutaneous affections.)

POTASSII TERSULPHURETUM, Potassii sulphuretum.

POTASSIUM. Same etymon as potash. The metallic base of potassa.

POTENCY, (potens, 'able,') Faculty.

POTENTIA, (potens, 'able,') Force.

POTENTIA seu POTES'TAS COEUS'DI, Capability of copulation.

POTENTIA GENERANDI. The power of procreation.

POTENTIA IRRITANS, Stimulus.

POTENTIAL, Potentia'lis, (F.) Potentiel; (from potentia.) An epithet for remedies which, although energetic, do not act till some time after their application. The caustic alkalies, for instance, are called Potential cauteries in contradistinction to the hot iron, which is termed actual.

POTENTILLA, (from potentia, P.) reptans.

POTENTILLA ANSERINA, P. argenti'na seu impolita seu neglecta, Argenti'na vulgari's, Fragaria anseri'na, Ar'gentine, Chenobos'con, Argentina'ria, Anseri'na, Sil'verweed, Wild tansy, Moor'grass, (F.) Argentine, Potentille, Herbe aux oies. Ord. Rosaceæ. The leaves are mildly astringent and tonic.

POTENTILLA NORVEGICA, Norway Cinquefoil, an indigenous plant, is possessed of similar properties.

POTENTILLA PALUSTRIS, Comarum palustre.

POTENTILLA REP'TANS, Pentaphyllum, Fragaria pentaphyllum, Potentilla, Quinquefo'lium, Q. ma'ina, Com'mon cinquefoil, (F.) Potentille rampante, Quintefeuille. The roots are possessed of astringent properties.

POTENTILLA TORMENTILLA, Tormentilla.

POWDER, VIEN'NA, Pulvis causticus Vindobonensis; (composed of equal parts of Quicklime and Potassa cum calce.) In using it, it is made into a paste—Vien'na paste, Pas'ta caustica Viennensis, (F.) Caustique de Vienne, Pâte Caustique de Vienne—with spirits of wine, and is applied on the diseased part, previously circumscribed by a hole cut in sticking plaster.

To be left on from 10 to 20 minutes, according to the depth of the eschar required. Used in cases of lupous ulceration.

By fusing the potass and lime, and raising the heat so as to cause ebullition, the caustic may be run into cylinders:—when it is called Caustique-Filhos, Causticum Viennensê fulvum Fil'hos, from the name of the author of the process.

POWDERS, CASTILLOX or CASTILHON, so called from the name of the physician who first proposed them. They are formed of Sago, in powder; Salep, in powder; Tragacanth, in powder, each, four parts; Prepared oystershells, one part, Cochineal, half a part, divided into powders of one drachm each; one of which is boiled in a pint of milk, and the decoction used ad libitum, as a demulcent in diarrhœa and dysentery. Dorvault makes poudre de Castillon synonymous with arrow root.

PRÆCOCCIA, (præcox, 'ripening early,') Prunus Armeniaca.

PRÆCOGITY, Precocity.

PRÆCOGNITIO, (præ, and cognitio, 'knowledge,') Prognosis.

PRÆCOR'DIA, (præ, and cor, gen. cordis, 'the heart,') The diaphragm; also, the thoracic viscera, and the epigastrium.

PRÆCOR'DIAL or PRÆCOR'DIAL RE'GION, Re'gio præcordi'aca seu præcordi'alis, is the epigastric region. Also, and more properly, the region of the heart. A line drawn from the inferior margins of the third ribs across the sternum, passes over the valves of the pulmonary artery a little to the left of the mesial line, and those of the aorta are behind them, but about half an inch lower down. A vertical line, coinciding with the left margin of the sternum, has about one-third of the heart, comprising the upper portion of the right ventricle, on the right,—and two-thirds, comprising the lower portion of the right ventricle and the whole of the left, on the left. This is the præcordial region.

PRECUR'SORY, Præcursor'ius, Præmon'itory, Præmonito'rius, (F.) Prémonitoire, Précurseur, (præ, and curro, cursum, 'I run,') That which precedes or foretels.

PRECUR'SORY or PRÉMON'ITORY SIGNS or SYMPTOMS, (F.) Signes précurseurs or prémonitoires, S. avant-coureurs, are those which indicate an approaching disease.

PREDIASTOL'IC or PREDIAS'TOLIC, Prædiastol'icus, (præ, and diastole.) That which precedes the diastole of the heart,—as 'prediastolic friction sound.'

PREDIS'PONENT or PREDISPOSING CAUSES, see Causes, predisponent.

PREDISPOSIT'ION, Prædisposit'io, Semin'ia morbo'rum (Gaubius); (præ, and disponere, dispositum, 'to dispose,') (F.) Prédisposition, Imminence morbide. That constitution or condition of the body, which disposes it to the action of disease under the application of an exciting cause. Thus, in hereditary diseases, the conformation is such, that but a slight exciting cause may be required to produce them. When the disease arises solely from the predisposition, or under the additional influence of an extremely slight exciting cause, it is, by some, termed a disposition.

PREDORS'AL, Prædors'alis, (præ, and dorsum, 'the back,') That which is in front of the back.

PREDORSAL REGION of the vertebral column is the anterior surface of the dorsal region.

PRÉ-DORSO-ATLOIDIEN, Longus colli.

PRÉ-DORSO-CERVICAL, Longus colli.

PRÉEXISTENCE OF GERMS, see Preformation.

PREFORM'ATION, Præformat'io, (præ, 'before,' and formatio, 'forming,') An ancient theory of generation, which maintained that the germs of every part exist, but not visibly, before fecundation, and that fecundation occasions their development. It was the doctrine of præexistence of germs.

PREGNANCY, Prægnat'io, Prægnatus, In-prægnat'io, (from prægnat'io, præ, and genere, 'to beget,') Ingravidat'io, Hysterocye'sis, Gravid'itas, G. uteri'na, En'cymon, Cye'sis, Encye'sis, En'cysis, Encymo'sia, Cyopho'ria, Gestat'io, Fætat'io, Ingravidat'io, Utero-gestat'io; (F.) Grossesse. The state of a female who has within her a fecundated germ, which gradually becomes developed in or out of the uterus. When placed in the cavity of the uterus,—by virtue of the vital force by which it is animated, it becomes attached to the inner surface of that viscus, and obtains from it indirectly the nutriment necessary for its gradual development, during the space of ten lunar months or two hundred and eighty days—the ordinary term or duration of gestation, although the period may be protracted to 300 days or upwards,—at the expiration of which parturition occurs. Pregnancy is commonly limited to a single fetus: at times, the uterus contains two or three.—See Reproduction. Occasionally, one or two moles—the degenerated products of conception—alone occupy the uterus:—at other times, a fetus likewise exists. In certain cases, and owing to accidental circumstances, the fecundated ovum remains in the ovarium, or is arrested in the Fallopian tube. Pregnancy has, accordingly, been distinguished into, 1. Nat'ural or uterine, when the fetus is carried in the cavity of the womb: and, 2. Præ-nat'ural or extra'uterine, Exfætatio, Concep'tio vitio'sa, Paracye'sis seu Eocye'sis, Echthysterocye'sis, Echthysterocye'sis, Dysto'cia seu Dyscye'sis seu Gravid'itas extra'uteri'na, (F.) Grossesse cont'renature,—when it occurs in the ovarium, tube, or cavity of the abdomen.

During pregnancy, the female experiences remarkable changes in the condition of her organs and functions. The genital apparatus is, of course, most affected. The uterus changes its shape, situation, size, and texture. The usual signs of pregnancy are,—suppression of the catamenia; the abdomen gradually enlarging, and forming a hard tumour; the umbilicus prominent in the latter months; the breasts increasing in size; the areola round the nipple becoming darker, and the follicles more developed; kyestein in the urine from an early period; a bluish tint of the vagina after the fourth week; about the fifth month, the evidence by ballotement, the placental souffle, and by the sound of the fetal heart heard on auscultation; the motion of the fetus perceptible, and the neck of the uterus diminishing in length at the advanced periods.

PREGNANCY, ABDOM'INAL, Ecce'sis abdominal'is, Caliocye'sis, Gravid'itas abdominal'is, (F.) Grossesse abdominale. That in which the ovum has escaped into the cavity of the abdomen.

PREGNANCY, AFÆ'TAL, Preg'naency without a fæ'tus, (F.) Grossesse afætale ou sans fæ'tus. Pregnancy produced by a false or degenerate conception, or any other affection, which has given place to unusual development of the uterus. Madame Boivin includes in this class, sarcophyster, hydrohyster, guzohyster, and hematohyster pregnancies.

PREGNANCY, BIGEM'INAL, (F.) Grossesse bigéminale ou gémellaire, Double pregnancy. Pregnancy in which there are twins in utero.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, COM'PLEX, (F.) Grossesse complexe, G. inter-extra-utérine, is when the womb, besides a fetus, contains much water, hydatids, a mole, &c.

PREGNANCY, COM'PC'ND, Polybreph'ia, Polycye'sia, Polycye'sis, (F.) Grossesse composée, is when there are two or three fetuses in the cavity of the uterus.

PREGNANCY, DOUBLE, Pregnancy, bigeminal—

p. Duration of, see Pregnancy — p. Extrauterine, see Pregnancy.

PREGNANCY, FALSE, Graviditas spuria, (F.) Grossesse fautive ou apparente, Pseudocyesis. Authors have thus called different affections of a more or less serious character, which resemble pregnancy; so as, at times, to impose upon the best informed practitioners. These diseases may be seated in the uterus or its dependencies, in the intestines or some other part of the abdomen. They may be;—a mole, hydatids, water, blood, or polypus distending the parietes of the uterus;—chronic enlargement of the uterus; development of tumours, &c., in its substance;—scirrhous; dropsy of the ovaria; ascites; tympanites, &c.

PREGNANCY, FŒTAL, (F.) Grossesse fœtale. Pregnancy in which there is a fœtus, or more than one, in the uterus or out of it. Madame Boivin puts in this class—the solitary, bigeminal, trigeminal, and sarcocœtal pregnancies, which form the first order; and the tubal, ovarial, and abdominal, which constitutes the second.

PREGNANCY, GAZOXYSTER'IC, (F.) Grossesse Gazo-hystérique. Fœtal pregnancy, caused by development of air or gas in the cavity of the womb.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, HŒMATOXYSTER'IC, (F.) Grossesse hémato-hystérique. Fœtal pregnancy, caused by accumulation of blood in the uterus.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, HYDROXYSTER'IC, (F.) Grossesse hydro-hystérique. Fœtal pregnancy, occasioned by the secretion and accumulation of serous fluid in the uterus.

PREGNANCY, INTERSTIT'IAL, Graviditas in uteri substantia seu interstitia'lis. The development of the embryo in the proper substance of the uterus. The case generally terminates fatally at an early period of gestation; the thin external paries of the uterus being ruptured, and the ovum passing into the abdominal cavity.

PREGNANCY, MOR'BID, Paracyesis, Dystocia, Dyscyesis. The progress of pregnancy disturbed or endangered by the supervention of general or local disorder.

PREGNANCY, OVA'RIAN, Eecyesis ovaria, Oöriocyesis, Oöcyesis, Graviditas n'teri seu extrauterina in ovario, (F.) Grossesse ovarienne ou de l'ovaire. Pregnancy in which the fœtus is developed in the interior of the ovary.

PREGNANCY, PLEA OF. A plea, which a woman, capitally convicted, may set up in arrest of execution until she is delivered. See Jury of Matrons, and De ventre inspiciendo.

PREGNANCY, PRETEND'ED. The criminal act of a female, who, not having been delivered, presents an infant as having been born of her. (F.) Supposition de part. This term, in French, likewise includes the case of a female, who, having been delivered of a dead child, substitutes for it a living child which is not hers.

PREGNANCY, SARCOFŒTAL, (F.) Grossesse sarco-fœtale. Pregnancy in which there are one or more fœtuses, and one or more moles.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, SARCOXYSTER'IC, (F.) Grossesse sarco-hystérique. Fœtal pregnancy formed by moles, hydatids, or a false conception.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, SOL'ITARY, (F.) Grossesse solitaire ou simple. Pregnancy in which there is a single fœtus.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, TRIGEM'INAL, (F.) Grossesse trigémiale ou triple. Pregnancy in which there are three fœtuses in the cavity of the uterus.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, TU'BAL, (F.) Grossesse tubaire; Eecyesis tuba'lis, Graviditas tuba'ria. Pregnancy where the fœtus remains and is developed in the Fallopian tube.

PREGNANCY, UTERINE, see Pregnancy.

PREGNANCY, UTEROABDOMINAL, (F.) Grossesse utero-abdominale. Pregnancy consisting of two fœtuses; one in the uterus—the other in the abdominal cavity.—Madame Boivin.

PREGNANCY, UTEROŒVARI'AL, (F.) Grossesse utéro-ovarienne. Pregnancy with two fœtuses, one in the womb, the other in the ovary.

PREGNANCY, UTEROTU'BAL, (F.) Grossesse utéro-tubaire. Pregnancy in which there is at the same time a fœtus in the womb and another in the Fallopian tube.

PREG'NANT, Prægnans, Prægnas, Prægnax Fetus, Fœtus, Eucarpus, Gravidâ, Ple'na mulier, Incinc'ta, Gravid, Breed'ing, (Old Eng.) Beal'ing, (F.) Enceinte. One in a state of pregnancy;—one with child.

PREHENSIO, (prehendere, prehensum, 'to lay hold of,') Prehension, Catalepsy, Epilepsy.

PREHENS'ION, Prehensio. The act of laying hold of.

PREHENSION OF FOOD is the act of seizing and carrying it to the mouth, and introducing it into that cavity. It is, also, called Assumptio, Prolepsis, Prosphora.

PRÉLE, ([L.] asparello, 'rough,'—the stalk,) Hippuris vulgaris.

PRÉLOMBAIRE, Prelumbar.

PREMOLAR, (præ, and molares,) see Molar teeth.

PREMONITORY, (præ, and moneo, 'to admonish,') see Precursory.

PREMORPH'ISM, Præmorphism'us, (præ, and μορφή, 'I shape,') The aggregate of laws by which a new formation is developed from the primordial cell.

PRENAN'THES, (πρηνος, 'bending downward,') and ανθος, 'a flower,') Gall of the Earth, Devil Snake-root, Lion's Foot. There are many species of this indigenous plant, whose root and milky juice are very bitter. They are used in popular practice in dysentery; and in the form of cataplasm to bites of serpents.

PRENANTHES ALBA, Nabalus albus—p. Serpentaria, Nabalus albus.

PRENDRE INSCRIPTION, 'to take inscription,') see Matriçule.

PRÉPARATE (VEINE), see Facial vein.

PREPAR'ATION, Præparatio, (præ, and parare, paratum, 'to get ready,') The act of making ready any substance whatever that has to be employed for any purpose.

Also, the product of any pharmaceutical operation;—Præparatum.

Any part of a body, preserved for the use of the anatomist, or others, is so called.

PREP'UCE, Præputium, Epagogenium, Pos'thê, Pel'la, Pos'thium, Pūtium, Aeropos'thia, Aerobys'tia, Fore'skin, (said to be from præ, and puto, 'to cut off,') or from puto, 'to smell,') or from præ, and pudendum; but, most probably, from pro, or præ, and ποσθιον, 'penis,') The prolongation of the integuments of the penis, which covers the glans. The prepuce is composed of two membranous layers: one external or cutaneous; the other internal or mucous, separated by areolar membrane. The mucous membrane lines the inner surface of the cutaneous layer till beyond the glans, when it is reflected over the latter; forming, behind the corona, a small cul-de-sac, above the corpora cavernosa, which is interrupted by a triangular duplication of the mucous membrane, called the frænum, fixed in the furrow at the inferior part of the glans, and terminating at a little distance from the orifice of the urethra. The clitoris is covered by a semilunar fold formed by a continuation of the skin of the labia. It is called Præputium clitoridis.

PREPUTIAL, Præputialis. Belonging or relating to the prepuce;—as the 'preputial secretion,'—or that which takes place from the lining of the prepuce covering the glans.

PRÆRECTAL, Prærectalis, (præ, and rectum.) applied to that which is in front of the rectum.

PRÉROTULIEN, see Bourse.

PRESBYODOCHIUM, (πρεσβυς, 'old,' and δοχμα, 'to receive,') Gerocoemium.

PRESBYONOSI, (πρεσβυς, 'old,' and νοσος, 'disease,') Diseases of old age.

PRESBYOPE, Presbytes, (F.) Presbyte, (πρεσβυς, 'old,' and ωψ, 'the eye,') One who is long-sighted or affected with presbyopia.

PRESBYOPIA, Presbytia.

PRESBYOPIC, Presbyopicus, Presbytic, Presbyticus, (F.) Presbytique. Relating or belonging to presbyopia or longsightedness.

PRESBYSPHACELUS, (πρεσβυς, 'old,' and σφρακμα.) Gangrene of old people.

PRESBYTIA, Presbyopia, Telora'sia, Amblyopia proximum, Vitus senilis, Hypermetropia, Presbyopia, (F.) Vue longue; (from πρεσβυς, 'an old person,') A very high degree is termed Hyperpresbytia. A condition of vision, common in old persons, which consists in the circumstance of near objects being confusedly seen, whilst those at a greater distance are clearly distinguished. It is supposed to depend generally on diminution of the convexity of the cornea; whence results an alteration in the convergency of the rays, so that they form a focus behind the retina. This defect is remedied by the use of convex glasses, which augment the convergence of the luminous rays. It is, also, called Long-sightedness, Far-sightedness, Parop'sia longinqua, Dysopia proximum.

PRESBYTIC, Presbyopic.

PRESCRIPTION, Præscriptio, (præ, and scribere, scriptum, 'to write,') Anagraphê, Formula, F. medica, Schedula, Imperium, Præscriptum, Præscriptio medica, Receptum, Recepta, Rec'ip'e, Receipt, (F.) Formule, Ordonnance, Recette. The formulae which the physician writes for the composition of medicines adapted to any case of disease. A prescription should be as simple as possible, and should bear upon its face the evidence of the objects to be fulfilled by it. No article should form part of it, unless adapted for serving some useful purpose. A compound prescription has been divided into four parts:—the basis or principal ingredient of the prescription; the adjuvans, or that which is designed to promote the action of the former; the corrigens, or that intended to correct its operation, or obviate any unpleasant symptom which it may be apt to produce; and the constituens, excipient, or vehiculum, constituent, excipient, or vehicle, the substance which gives to the other ingredients consistence or form. All these are seen in the following formula for cathartic pills:

R—Aloës. . . . . ℥ . . . . Basis.
Hydrarg. Chlorid. Mit. gr. x. Adjuvans.
Olei Carui. . . . . gtt. v. Corrigens.
Syrupi. . . . . q. s. Constituen.
M. et fiat pilulæ xx. See Symbol.

It is obvious, however, that most prescriptions are more simple than this. The basis, for example, may require neither adjuvant, corrigent, nor constituent.

The doctrine of medicinal combination is termed Iamatotaxiolog'ia, Iamatotaxiolog'ia, Artis formulæ medicæ combinandi.

The vocabulary in the Author's "Medical Student," second edition, Philad., 1844, will aid not only in translating, but in writing, prescriptions more solito. See, also, Pereira, Selecta de Præscriptis, 14th edition, London, 1864.

PRESENTATION, from (L.t.) præsens, (præ, 'before,' and ens. entis, 'being,') The part of a fœtus which is felt presenting, on examination per vaginam. When the head presents, and especially the vertex, or the feet, knees, or breech, the presentation is said to be natural; when any other part, preternatural; and the labour is styled perverse or preternatural, Parodynia seu Dystocia perver'sa, Cross-births, (F.) Accouchement contre nature. When any part besides the head, feet, knees, or breech presents, the operation of turning becomes necessary.

When a portion of the presenting mass of the fœtus becomes changed for another, in complicated presentations, the case has been termed one of substituted presentation.

PRESERVATIVE, (præ, and servare, 'to save,') Prophylactic.

PRESIS, (πρησις), Swelling.

PRÊSLE, (Prêle), Hippurus vulgaris.

PRESMA, (πρησμα), Swelling.

PRESPI'NAL, Præspinalis, (præ, and spina, 'the spine,') That which is situate before the spine. The prespinal surface of the vertebral column is the anterior surface.

PRESS, Præ'ium, Præ'ium, Pressorium, Pi'ster, Pi'ste'rium, (F.) Pressoir, Presse, (premere, pressum, 'to squeeze,') An instrument for subjecting matters to considerable pressure, for the purpose of separating the liquid from the solid portion.

PRESS OF HEROPHILUS, Torcular Herophili.

PRESSE-ARTÈRE, Serre-nœud de Deschamps, Serre-Artère. An instrument invented by Deschamps for the immediate compression of arteries. It is composed of a plate six or seven lines long, and three broad, and of a rod or stem two inches long, placed perpendicularly above the plate and riveted. At each extremity of the plate is a hole, through which each of the ends of the ligature, to be placed upon the artery, is passed. The ligature is then to be tightened by drawing the ends, and fixing them to the perpendicular rod. This presse-artère or serre-artère, surrounded with charpie, remains in the wound, until there is no longer danger of hemorrhage. The ligature is then cut, and the instrument withdrawn. It is an unnecessary instrument.

PRESSE-URÉTHRE, Ju'gun Pe'nis. A kind of forceps of elastic iron, the branches of which, padded, may be approximated or separated by means of a screw. The penis is introduced between the branches, one of them being applied to the urethra, and the screw is tightened so as to exercise a degree of pressure sufficient to bring the parietes of the canal in contact. This instrument is sometimes used in incontinence of urine, to prevent the constant discharge of that fluid.

PRESSIO, (premere, pressum, 'to press,') Pressure.

PRESSIO'N ABDOMINALE, Pressure, abdominal.

PRESSOIR, Press—p. d'Hérophile, Torcular Herophili.

PRESSORIUM, Press.

PRESSURE, Press'io. The action of pressing. PRESS'URE, ABDOM'NAL, (F.) Pressio' Abdominalc. A mode of examination by means of which the sensibility, size, suppleness, or hardness of any morbid abdominal viscera may be compared, in these respects, with its healthy condition. Bichat proposed, with the view of exploring the state of the thoracic organs, to exert a pressure from below upwards on the abdominal organs, so as to crowd them upon the diaphragm, and thus to diminish the dimensions of the cavity of the chest, noticing to what extent respiration was affected by this action. No great information can of course be derived from it.

PRÉSURE, Rennet.

PRESYSTOLIC or PRESYSYSTOLIC, Præ-systolicus (præ, and systole.) That which precedes the contraction of the heart—as “presystolic friction sound.”

PRETENDED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

PRETIBIAL, Prætibialis, (præ, and tibia, ‘the tibia.’) That which is situate before the tibia; as the iliopretibial and ischiopretibial muscles.

PREVENTIVE, (prævenire, præventum, (præ, and venire), ‘to come before.’) Prophylactic.

PREVENTIVE, ROYAL. An empirical preparation, used as a prophylactic against the venereal pox. It is a solution of acetate of lead,—the Liquor Plumbi Subacetatis dilutus.

PREVERTEBRAL APONEUROSIS. The aponeurosis which covers the muscles of the prevertebral region.

PREVERTEBRAL ARTERY, (F.) Artère prévertébrale ou méningienne postérieure. A ramus of the meningeal branch, and sometimes even of the trunk, of the pharyngeal artery, which is distributed to the prevertebral region.

PREVERTEBRAL MUSCLES, see Cervical region, anterior—p. Region, Cervical region, anterior.

PRIAPEIA, (after Priapus.) Nicotiana rustica.

PRIAPIS/CUS, πριαπισκος.) Name of a piece of wood which forms part of the scamium Hippocraticum, and is like the male organ of generation. Paulus, of Ægina, calls thus a tent of linen shaped like a penis.

PRIAPISM/US, (πριαπισμος.) Tenti'go, T. Pe'nis, Pri'apium, Horu'colic (vulg.), Euta'sia Priapi's-mus, Rhopali's-mus, Sty'ma, Sty'sis, (after Priapus.) Constant and distressing erection, with or without any voluptuous idea or desire for venery. It is often symptomatic; and sometimes the immediate result of morbid causes,—of the action of cantharides, for example. The application of cold liquids to the penis, and the internal use of opium and camphor, are the means usually had recourse to for its removal.

PRIAPITIS, (priapus, ‘penis,’ and itis.) Phallitis.

PRIAPUS, (Πριαπος.) Mutun'vus. In ancient mythology the deity who presided over gardens and the parts of generation, so called propter deformitatem et membri virilis magnitudinem.

PRIAPUS, Penis—p. Cervi, see Cervus—p. Ceti, Leviathan penis.

PRICKET, Sedum acre.

PRICKING, (from [Sax.] priccian, ‘to prick.’) (F.) Picotement. A variety of pain, compared to that which pointed bodies would occasion.

PRIDE OF CHINA, Melia azedarach—p. of India, Melia azedarach—p. Tree, Melia azedarach.

PRIMA CELLA COLI, ‘first cell of the colon,’ Cæcum.

PRIME VIÆ, (F.) Premières voies. ‘The first passages.’ The stomach and intestinal canal:—the lacteals being the secundæ viæ or ‘second passages.’ See Ways, digestive.

PRIMAIRE, Primary.

PRIMARY, Primarius, Primitivus, (F.)

Primitif, Primaire, (from primus, ‘first.’) First in place, time or character; as primary symptoms, in contradistinction to secondary.

PRIMARY CELL, see Cell.

PRIMEVÈRE, (from primum ver ‘first spring.’) Primula veris.

PRIMP'ARA, Primparturievus, (F) Primpare, (primus, ‘first,’ and parere, ‘to bring forth.’) A female who brings forth for the first time.

PRIMPARTURIENS, (primus, ‘first,’ and parturio, ‘to bring forth,’) Primpara.

PRIMISTERNAL, Primisternalis, (primus, ‘the first,’ and sternum, ‘the sternum.’) M. Béclard has called os primisternal or clavicisternal the bony portion of the sternum.

PRIMIT'LE, (from primus, ‘first.’) The first waters or the waters discharged before the extrusion of the fetus.

PRIMITIVE, Primary—p. Band, see Nerve fibres—p. Streak, Groove, primitive.

PRIMORDIAL CELL, see Cell.

PRIMORDIUM, (primus, and ordior, orsus, ‘to begin,’) Arche.

PRIM'ULA VE'RIS, P. officinalis seu varial'ilia, Verbas'culum, Paral'ysis, Her'ba paralys'cos seu paralytica, the Cow'slip, Pa'ngil or Pen'gile, Herb Pe'ter, Pal'sycwort, (Prov.) Cow'striplings, Cow'strophe, Creo'el, (F.) Primevère, Herbe à la paralysie, Fleur de coucou, Oreille d'o'urs, Braûdte; Ord. Primulacææ. Scr. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. The flowers have been considered to be mildly tonic, antispasmodic, and anodyne.

PRIMULA VULGA'RIS. The leaves and roots of this plant have been used as sternutatories.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S FARINACEOUS FOOD, see Farinaceous.

PRINCEPS, gen. Principis, Rectum.

PRINCEPS CERVI'CIS (Arteria), Cervical Artery. A branch of the occipital artery, which descends between the splenius and complexus muscles, and may be followed down to the lower part of the neck.

PRINCEPS POL'ICIS (Arteria), Arteria magna pol'licis. When the two collateral arteries of the thumb take origin from a common trunk—the trunk is the Princeps pollicis.

PRINCIPLES, IMMEDIATE, (F.) Principes immédiats, Matériaux immédiats. A name given to a considerable number of substances, composed of at least three elements, and which are obtained from animals and vegetables without alteration, by simple processes, and, in some measure, immediately.

PRINCIPLES, IMMEDIATE, OF ANIMALS, Pro'imate principles, Organic Elements, Compounds of Organization. These are divided into acid principles, fatty principles and principles which are neither fat nor acid. The first include the uric, rosacic, purpuric, allantoic, caseic, butyric, &c. The fatty principles are:—stearin, elain, cholesterol, &c.; and the last division includes the most important compounds of organization:—fibrin, gelatin, albumen, casein, osmazome, &c.

PRINCIPLES, PROXIMATE, P. immediate.

PRINOS (of the ancients), (πρινος.) Ilex aquifolium.

PRINOS, P. verticillatus, Alcan'na major latifolia dentata, Aquifolium foliis deciduis, Prinos Gronovii seu padifolius, Black Alder, Virgin'ia or Whor'led Win'terberry, Fe'verbush, (F.) Apalachine à feuilles de Prunier. Ord. Aquifoliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. The bark of this common shrub of the United States—Prinos, (Ph. U. S.)—is astringent, bitter, and pungent. The berries are, likewise, bitter. The bark has been used as a substitute for the cinchona in intermittents, and as a tonic.

PRINOS GLABER, see P. lævigatus—p. Gronovii, Prinos.

PRINOS LÆVIGATUS, Smooth Win'terberry, and PRINOS GLABER, Hul'berry; indigenous; have the same properties as Prinos.

PRINOS PADIFOLIUS, Prinos.

PRION, (πριων.) Saw.

PRIONODES, (prion, and odes.) Ser'rated. Applied to the sutures of the head.

PRIOR, 'first, foremost,' as

PRIOR ANNUALARIS, Interos'seus quartus of Winslow. An internal interosseous muscle which arises from the outside of the metacarpal bone of the ringfinger, and is inserted into the outside of the tendon on the back of the ringfinger. Its use is to draw the ringfinger outwards.

PRIOR INDICIS, Exten'sor tertii interno'dii indicis, (F.) Sous-métacarpo-latéri-phalangien. It arises from the outer or radial side of the metacarpal bone of the forefinger, and is inserted into the outside of the tendon on the back of the forefinger. Action:—to draw the finger outwards, towards the thumb.

PRIOR INDICIS PE'DIS, Abduc'tor Indicis pe'dis. An external, interosseous muscle of the foot, which arises from the contiguous sides of the metatarsal bones of the great and fore toes, and is inserted into the inside of the root of the first bone of the foretoe. Action:—to pull the foretoe inwards.

PRIOR MEDII, Prior medii digiti.

PRIOR MEDII DIG'ITI, Prior Me'dii, Sec'ond interos'seus of Douglas. An external interosseous muscle of the hand, which arises from the corresponding sides of the metacarpal bones of the fore and middle fingers, and is inserted into the outside of the tendon on the back of the middle finger. Action:—to draw the middle finger outwards.

PRIOR MEDII DIG'ITI PE'DIS, Adduc'tor me'dii dig'iti pe'dis. An internal, interosseous muscle of the foot, which arises from the inside of the metatarsal bone of the middle toe, and is inserted into the inside of the root of the first bone of the middle toe. Use:—to pull the middle toe inwards, or towards the inner side of the foot.

PRIOR MINIMI DIG'ITI, Adduc'tor min'imi dig'iti. An internal, interosseous muscle of the foot, which originates from the inside of the metatarsal bone of the little toe, and is inserted into the inside of the root of the first bone of the little toe. Action:—to pull the little toe inwards.

PRIOR TERTII DIG'ITI PE'DIS, Adduc'tor tertii dig'iti pe'dis. An internal, interosseous muscle of the foot, which arises from the inner and under part of the metatarsal bone of the third of the small toes, and is inserted into the side of the root of the first bone of the third of the small toes. Action:—to pull the third of the small toes inwards.

Imperforate state of the anus.

PROCTICA, (from proctus.) Pain or derangement about the anus, without primary inflammation. A genus in the class Celiaca, order EutERICA, of Good.

PROCTICA EXANIA, Proctocele — p. Marisca, Hæmorrhoids — p. Simplex, Proctalgia — p. Tenesmus, Tenesmus.

PROCTISIS, (from proctus), Proctitis.

PROCTITIS, Proct'itis, Archit'itis, Clunæ'sia, Cyso'tis, (proctus, and itis.) Inflammation of the anus and rectum. Rectitis.

PROCTITIS GANGREŒNOSA, Proctocæce.

PROCTOCÆCE, Proct'itis gran'ransa (proctus, and κακος, 'evil.')

A disease of the rectum, so called by Fuchs, which, according to him, is common in Peru, in the neighborhood of Quito and Lima, on the Honduras and Mosquito coasts, in Brazil, and on the Gold coast, &c. It is called by the Portuguese, Bicho, and Bicho di Culo; by the people of Quito, Mal del Valle, from its prevalence in the valleys; and in Africa, Bitios de Kis. It is an adynamic, inflammatory condition, frequently ending in gangrene. It has been attributed to bad food, and the use of spices.

PROCTOCELE, (proctus, and κελη, 'hernia.')

Inversion and prolapse of the mucous coat of the rectum, from relaxation of the sphincter, with more or less swelling. In the treatment, the application of cold water and astringent lotions must be recommended; and if other means fail, one of the radii of skin, which converge at the anus, may be snipped off. On cicatrizing, the verge of the anus will be contracted, and the cure probably complete. In the way of palliation, the parts may be retained by an appropriate bandage.

PROCTOCYSTOTOMIA, (proctus, κυστη, 'bladder,' and τομη, 'section,') see Lithotomy.

PROCTODYNIA, (proctus, and δύνη, 'pain,')

Proctalgia.

PROCTON'CUS, (proctus, and ογκος, 'swelling,')

Swelling of the anus.

PROCTOPARALYSIS, Proctople'gia, Paral'ysis Intesti'ni Recti, (proctus, and paralysis.) Paralysis of the muscles of the rectum.

PROCTOPLEGIA, (proctus, and πληγη, 'a stroke,')

Proctoparalysis.

PROCTOPTOMA, gen. Proctopto'matis, (proctus, and πτωμα, 'a fall,')

Proctocele.

PROCTOPTOSIS, (proctus, and πτωσις, 'a falling,')

Proctocele.

PROCTORRHAGIA, (proctus, and ραγη, 'a breaking forth,')

Hæmorrhoidal flux.

PROCTORRHEUMA, gen. Proctorrheu'matis, (proctus, and ρευμα, 'defluxion.')

Rheumatism of the anus.

PROCTORRHEA, (F.) Proctorr'hée, (proctus, and ρευ, 'I flow.')

A discharge of mucus from the anus.

PROCTORRHOIS, (proctus, and ρευ, 'to flow.')

See Hæmorrhoids.

PROCTOS, (προκτος), Anus.

PROCTOSCIRRHUS, (proctus, and σκιρμας, 'hard.')

Scirrhus of the anus.

PROCTOSPASMUS, Tenesmus.

PROCTOSTENOSIS ORGANICA, (proctus, and στενος, 'narrow.')

Stricture of the rectum.

PROCTOTOREU'SIS, (proctus, and τορευω, 'to perforate.')

Perforation of a closed anus.

PROCTUS, (προκτος), Anus.

PROCURATIO ABORTÛS. The promotion of abortion.

PRODIAGNO'SIS, (pro, and diagnosis), Prognostication of a disease to come, — a diagnosis by anticipation.

PRODROMIC or PRODROMIC, Prodrom'icus, (F.) Prodromique. Relating, or belonging, to the prodromus of a disease.

PRODROMUS, (προδρομος, pro, and δρομος, 'course,')

Propath'ia, (F.) Prodrome. Stadium opportunitatis seu prodromo'rum: in contagious diseases, Stadium laten'tis conta'gii. The period immediately preceding an attack of disease; in which the precur'sory signs occur.

PROD'UCT, (producere, productum, (pro, and ducere, 'to lead,')

'to bring forth,')

Productum, (F.) Produit. The result sought to be attained by any pharmaceutical or other operation.

PRODUCTIO, Prolapsus — p. Uvulæ à pituitâ, Staphylœdema.

PRODUCTION, Productio. The act of producing; the thing produced. Also used, especially by the French, synonymously with prolongation. The mesentery is, in this sense, a production of the peritoneum.

PRODUCTION ACCIDENTELLE. An accidental or adventitious structure.

PRODUCTIVITAS, Fecundity.

PRODUIT, Product.

PRODUCTUM, Product.

PROËGUMENÆ CAUSÆ, (προηγούμενος, from pro, and ηγῶμαι, 'to lead.') Causes, predisponent.

PRÆLUM, Press, Tourniquet.

PROËMINENT, Proëminentis, (pro, and emīnere, 'to project.') Some anatomists call the 7th cervical vertebra the proëminent vertebra, on account of the length of its spinous process, which passes the level of that of the neighbouring vertebrae.

PROENCEPHALUS, (F.) Proencéphale, (pro, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.') A monster, whose encephalon is situated, in a great measure, out of, and in advance of, the cranium, which is open in the frontal region.

PRÆOTIA, Præoties, (πρωϊότης or πρωϊότης, from πρωι, 'early.') 'Precocity.' Præcox maturitas, Præcox maturitas. Premature development of sexual organization or power.

PROFLUVII CORTEX, Nerium antidysentericum.

PROFLUVIUM, Discharge, Fluxus, Fluxus, Polyrheus, Flux; (profluo, (pro, and fluo), 'I flow forth.') A term under which—in the plural, Profluvia, Polyrheuses—some nosologists have comprised all morbid discharges or fluxes:—others, increased excretions attended by fever.

PROFLUVIUM ALVI, Diarrhoea—p. Genitale muliebri, Menses—p. Mucosum urethrae, Gonorrhoea—p. Muliebri, Leucorrhoea, Menses—p. Sanguinis, Hæmorrhagia—p. Sanguinis à renibus, Nephorrhagia—p. Sanguinis ex ore, Stomatorrhagia—p. Sanguinis ex utero, Metrorrhagia—p. Seminis, Pollution—p. Ventris, Diarrhoea.

PROFOND, Profundus.

PROFUNDA, fem. of Profundus.

PROFUNDA ARTERIA FEMORIS, A. vas'ta posterior seu muscularis femoris, Artère-grande musculaire de la cuisse. (Ch.) This large branch arises commonly from the posterior part of the crural, between the pubis and lesser trochanter. It descends deeply, situate before the adductors; passes through the third adductor above the opening in it for the trunk of the femoral; and terminates in the short portion of the biceps. The muscularis profunda gives off, 1. The external circumflex: 2. The internal circumflex: and 3. The three perforantes.

PROFUNDA ARTERIA HUMERI, P. superior, Arteria spiralis, (F.) Artère humérale profonde, A. collatérale externe, Grand musculaire du bras, (Ch.) Its origin is variable. When it arises from the brachial artery, it is given off opposite the groove of the humerus destined for the radial nerve, and descends backwards between the three portions of the triceps, accompanied by the nerve; giving branches to that muscle and to the humerus. When it reaches the posterior part of the bone, it divides into two branches, which are distributed to the triceps, supinator longus, &c.

PROFUNDA ARTERIA INFERIOR seu MINOR is often a branch of the last; but, commonly, is given off from the brachial, near the middle of the arm. It gives off branches to the muscles, &c., about the inner side of the os humeri. It is, also, called large communicating ulnar or profundular.

PROFUNDA ARTERIA PE'NIS. Chaussier has given this name to the caavernous artery, which arises from the artery of the penis, furnished by the internal pudic.

PROFUNDA ARTERIA SUPERIOR, Profunda humeri.

Certain muscles are distinguished by the names profund or deepseated, and superficial. Thus, we speak of the superficial and deepseated muscles of the neck, &c.; the Flexor profundus perforans, &c.

PROFUNDUS, (pro, and fundus, 'bottom,' 'having a deep base.') All'ius, (F.) Profund. A name given to different parts, which are seated profoundly as regards others.

PROFUSIO, (pro, and fundere, fusum, 'to pour.') A pouring out, a shedding; see Hæmorrhagia.

PROFUSIO A'QUÆ. The discharge or breaking of the waters at birth.

PROFUSIO SANGUINIS, Hæmorrhagia—p. Seminis, Ejaculation—p. Subcutanea, Purpura simplex.

PROGASTOR, (pro, and γαστήρ, 'belly.') One who has a pendulous belly.

PROGENIES, (pro, and gigno, 'to bring forth,') Epigone.

PROGENY, Epigone.

PROGLOS'SIS, (προγλωσσις, from pro, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue;') Α'πex lin'guæ. The extremity or tip of the tongue.

PROGNATHOUS, Prognathus, (pro, and γναθος, 'the jaw.') Having a projecting jaw. A term applied to the form of the head in which there is a prolongation or forward extension of the jaws, as in the negro.

PROGNOSIS, (προγνωσις), Proëgoreusis, Pro-rheusis, Præcognit'io, Prognosis, Præno'tio, Prænuntia'tio, Præscien'tia, Præscit'io, Prono'cia, Proph'asis, Prædict'io, (F.) Prognostic, Pronostic, (pro, and γνωσις, 'knowledge.') A judgment formed by the physician regarding the future progress and termination of any disease.

PROGNOSIS, GENERAL. The opinion formed of a disease in the abstract. Thus, the General prognosis of Cynanche tonsillarisis is favourable;—of Phthisis pulmonalis, unfavourable.

PROGNOSIS, PARTICULAR. The opinion formed of any particular case of disease. The particular or special prognosis of one case of typhus may be favourable, whilst that of another may be unfavourable.

PROGNOSIS EX LINGUÂ, Glossomantia.

PROGNOSTIC, Prognosticus, (F.) Prognostique, Pronostic. Relating or appertaining to prognosis,—as 'prognostic signs.'

PROGNOSTIC, Prognosis.

PROGNOSTICE, (προγνωστικη) (τεχνη), Prognosis.

PROGNOSTIQUE, Prognostic.

PROGRESSIO, (pro, and gradior, gressus, 'to step,') Augmentation.

PROGRESSION, Walking.

PROGRESSUS, Augmentation.

PROIOTES, (πρωϊότης, or πρωϊότης), Præotia.

PROJECTURA, (pro, and jacio, jactum, 'to throw,') Processus.

PROLABIUM, (pro, and labium, 'lip,') Procheilon.

PROLAPSUS, (prolabor, prolapsus, (pro, and labor, lapus, 'to slide,') 'to slip down.')

Præident'ia, Delaps'io, Delaps'us, Hypor'rhythis, Prop'to'ma, Prop'to'sis, Product'io, Propendent'ia, Prominent'ia, Pto'sis, Ca'sus, a protrusion; a falling down; (F.) Chute. A genus of diseases in the class Locales and order Ectopis of Cullen, distinguished by the falling down of a part through the orifice with which it is naturally connected.

PROLAPSUS ANI, Proctocele—p. Bulbi oculi, Exophthalmia—p. Corneæ, Staphylo'ma or the cornea—p. Iridis, Pto'sis iridis—p. Lingua, Glos- socele, Paraglossa — p. Œsophagi, Pharyngocele — p. Palpebræ, Blepharoptosis — p. Pharyngis, Pharyngocele — p. Umbilici, Exomphalus.

PROLAPSUS UTERI, Exouetra, Metropto'sis, Metropropto'sis, Ædopto'sis seu Procidencia uteri, Hysteropto'sis, Hysterocele lê nu'da, Falling down of the womb, (F.) Abaissement ou Chute ou Descente ou Précipitation de la matrice. Some use the term 'Procidencia Uteri' for a less degree of the affection than prolapsus; — Relaxatio uteri expressing the slightest state of all. A falling down of the uterus, owing to relaxation of the parts about the uterovaginal region. In the treatment, the horizontal posture must be insisted upon; the injection of astringent substances per vaginam be advised; and if the affection be not remedied by these means, a pessary may be employed as a palliative, or the operation of Episi-orrhaphy be performed.

Prolapsus uteri without inversion has been termed Orthohysteropto'ma, and Orthohysteropto'sis.

PROLAPSUS UVULÆ, Staphylœdema.

PROLAPSUS VAGINÆ, Hysteropto'sis seu Ædopto'sis Vaginæ, Coleopto'sis, Colpopto'sis, Elythropto'sis. Protrusion of the upper part of the vagina into the lower. This, like the descent of the uterus, may be relaxatio, procidencia, prolapsus, or complete inversio.

PROLAPSUS VESICÆ, Exocyste.

PROLECTATIO; (prolecture, prolectatum, 'to entice.') Action of separating the finer parts of a body from the grosser.

PROLEPTICS, Prolep'ticêz, (προληψις, 'anticipation,' from pro, and λαμβάνω, 'I seize hold of.') A term proposed by Dr. Laycock to signify the art and science of predicting in medicine.

PROLEPTICUS, (προληπτικός.) Anticipating.

PROLES, (pro, and olescere, 'to grow,') Epigone.

PROLICIDE, Prolucidium, (proles, 'offspring,' and cædere, 'to kill,') Destruction of offspring: a term which includes fœticide as well as infanticide.

PROLIFERATION OF CELLS, (proles, 'offspring,' and fero, 'I carry,') see Cytogeny.

PROLIFIC, Prolificus, (F.) Prolifique, (proles, 'offspring,' and facere, 'to make,') That which has the faculty of engendering. Applied to man, and animals, and to their sperm or seed; as well as to remedies, which, by strengthening the genital organs, increase the secretion of sperm.

PROLIG'EROUS, Pro'liger, Prolig'erus, (F.) Proligère, (proles, 'offspring,' and gero, 'I carry,') That which is connected with carrying the offspring.

PROLIGEROUS DISC or LAY'ER, Discus prolig'erus seu vitell'imus, Stratum prolig'erum, Gonostroma, (F.) Disque proligère. A granular layer, situate generally towards the most prominent part of the ovarian vesicle, in the centre of which the true ovum or ovule exists.

PROLONGEMENT RACHIDIEN, (pro, and longus, 'long,') Medulla spinalis — p. Sous-occipital, Basilary process.

PROMALACTERIUM, (pro, and μαλασσω, 'I soften,') The room, in the ancient gymnasium, in which the body was softened and anointed. One of the operations in bathing.

PROMANUS, (pro, and manus, 'hand,') see Digitus, Pollex.

PROMETOPIDIA, (προμετωπίδα), Frontal bandages.

PROMETO'PIS, Prometopid'ion, (pro, and μετωπον, 'the forehead,') The skin of the forehead, in which wrinkles are.

PROMINENTIA, (pro, and μινεο, 'to jut,') Prolapsus, Protuberance — p. Annularis cerebri, Pons Varolii — p. Corneæ, Cratocele — p. Ossis continua, Apophysis.

PROMINENTLE ALBICANTES, Mammary tubercles — p. Semiövales Medullæ Oblongatæ, Corpora olivaria.

PROMONTOIRE, Promontorium.

PROMONTORIUM, Promontory — p. Faciei, Nasus — p. Ossis sacri, see Sacrum.

PROMONTORY, Promontorium, (F.) Promontoire, (pro, and mons, gen. montis, 'a mountain,') Tu'ber seu Tuberost'itus Tym'pani. A small projection at the inner paries of the cavity of the tympanum, which corresponds to the external scala of the cochlea, and especially to the outer side of the vestibule.

PROMONTORY OF THE SACRUM, see Sacrum.

PRONATEUR, Pronator — p. Carré, Pronator radii quadratus — p. Grand ou rond, Pronator radii teres — p. Petit, Pronator radii quadratus.

PRONATION, Prona'tio, (pronus, 'inclined forwards,') Anatomists understand, by pronation, the motion by which the inferior extremity of the radius passes before the ulna, and thus causes the hand to execute a kind of rotation from without inwards.

PRONATOR. That which produces the motion of pronation. (F.) Pronateur. This name has been given to two of the muscles of the forearm.

PRONATOR OBLIQUUS, P. radii teres — p. Quadratus, P. radii quadratus.

PRONATOR RA'DII QUADRA'TUS, P. quadra'tus seu transvers'us (Winslow) seu ra'dii bre'vis seu ra'dii quadra'tus (Cowper), Quadratus ra'dii, (F.) Cubito-radial (Ch.), Petit ou carré pronateur. This muscle is situate at the anterior, inferior, and profound part of the forearm. It is flat and square, and is attached, within, to the inferior quarter of the anterior surface of the ulna; and, without, to the inferior quarter of the anterior surface of the radius. It produces the motion of pronation.

PRONATOR RA'DII TE'RES, P. te'res sive obli'quus (Winslow), (F.) Epitrochlo-radial (Ch.), Grand ou rond pronateur. A muscle seated at the upper and anterior part of the forearm. It is long, flat, and larger above than below. It is attached, above, to the inner tuberosity of the humerus and to the coronoid process of the ulna. Thence it passes obliquely downwards and outwards, and terminates at the middle of the outer surface of the radius. It causes the radius to turn on the ulna, to produce the motion of pronation. It can, also, bend the forearm on the arm, and conversely.

PRONATOR TERES, P. radii teres.

PRONAUS, (pro, and ναος, 'a temple,') Vestibulum.

PRONERVATIO, (pro, and nervus, 'a tendon,') Aponeurosis, Tendon.

PRONŒA, (προνοια, from pro, and νοω, 'to know,') Prognosis.

PRONONCIATION, Pronunciation.

PRONOSTIC, Prognosis.

PRONOSTIQUE, Prognostic.

PRONUNCIATION, Pronuncia'tio, (F.) Pronunciation, (pro, and annunciare, 'to tell,') The mode of articulating or giving accent or utterance to words.

PROPATIIA, (προπαθεια, from pro, and παθος, 'affection,') Prodromus.

PROPENDINGIA, (pro, and pendere, 'to hang,') Prolapsus.

PROPERTIES, PHYSICAL, OF THE TISSUES. These are flexibility, extensibility, elasticity, racornissement, imbibition and osmose.

PROPERTIES, VITAL. Those which depend upon the vital force, as contractility &c.

PROPERTY, Propri'etas, Virtus, (F.) Propriété, (proprius, 'proper,') That which belongs distinctively to a thing.

PROPHASIS, (προφασις, from προφαινω, 'to su-ounce.) A cause, especially a remote cause. Also, Prognosis.

PROPHYLACTIC, Prophylacticus, Diaphylacticus, Dissuetic, Synergeticus, Præservativus, (F.) Prophylactique, Præservatif, (pro, and φύλασσω, 'I defend.') A preservative or preventive.

PROPHYLACTIC MEDICINE, Hygiene.

PROPHYLAXIS, Prophylaxis, Prophylacticis, Synergicis, Præservativis, Præcautio, Præcustodia. Preservative or preventive treatment.

PROP'OLIS, (προπόλις, from pro, and πόλις, 'city,' literally, 'that which is before the city.') Ceraulthemus, Commotis, Beebread. A red, resinous matter, with which the bees cover the bottom of the hive. Its fume has been esteemed antiasthmatic.

PROP'OMA, gen. Propom'atis, (προπομα, from pro, and πομα, 'a drink.') Ancient name of a medicine composed of seven parts of honey and four of wine. It was taken before a meal.

PROPORTIO, (pro, and portio), Symmetry.

PROPOSITUM, (pro, and ponere, positum, 'to place,') Intention.

PROTOTISMA, gen. Propotism'atis, (προποτισμα), Mistura.

PROTOTISMUS, (προποτισμος, from pro, and ποτιω, 'to give to drink,') Præpro'tio. An ancient name for medicines which were given to the patients before purging them, and, in some sort, to prepare them.

PROPRIETAS, Property.

PROPRIÉTÉ, Property.

PROPRIUS AURIS EXTERNÆ, Retrahens auris.

PROPTOMA, gen. Propto'matis, (pro, and πτω, 'to fall,') Prolapsus.

PROPTOMA ATRICULARIUM, Paræsthesis auditus gl'ac'ca, Flap Ear. Lobe of the ear broad, loose, and pendent from birth.

PROPTOMA SCROTI, Rachosis.

PROPTOSIS, (προπτωσις, pro, and πτωσις, 'a falling down,') Prolapsus—p. Palpebræ, Blepharoptosis—p. Uvulæ, Staphyloedema.

PROPTYSIS, (pro, and πτω, 'to spit,') Expectoration.

PROPYLAMIN, Propylaminum, occurs in chenopodium vulgare, in the flowers of crataegus oxyacantha; the fruit of sorbus aucuparia; in secale cornutum, herring pickle, codliver oil, urine, &c. (It may be prepared from herring pickle, by distillation with caustic potassa, neutralizing the distillate with muriatic acid; purifying the salt by dissolving it in strong alcohol or alcoholic ether, and again distilling with potassa.) It has been used in acute and chronic rheumatism, 25 drops being added to six ounces of mint water sweetened; and a tablespoonful given every two hours. Its virtues have been greatly exaggerated. The chloride and iodide have been given in like cases.

PRORA, Occiput.

PRORRHESIS, (προρρησις), Prognosis.

PRORUPTIO SANGUINIS, (pro, and rumpere, rumpitum, 'to break,') Hæmorrhagia.

PROS, (προς), in composition, generally signifies 'in addition to,' 'over and above,' 'besides.'

PROSARTHROSIS, (pros, and arthron, 'to attach by joints,') Osis, Diarthrosis.

PROSBOLE, (pros, and βάλλω, 'to strike,') Impression.

PROSCHYSIS, (pros, and χυνω, 'to pour,') Affusion.

PROSCOLLESIS, (προσκόλλησις, from pros, and κόλλα, 'glue,') Adherence, Agglutination.

PROSECTEUR, Dissector.

PROSECTIO, (pros, and secare, sectum, 'to cut,') Anatomy.

PROSECTOR, Dissector.

PROSLEPSIS, (προσληψις, from pros, and λαμβάνω, 'to seize hold of,') Prehension.

PROSODOS, (προσόδος, from pros, and ὁδός, 'a way,') Aditus.

PROSOPALGIA, (prosopon, and αλγος, 'pain,') Neuralgia, facial.

PROSOPANTRA, (prosopon, and αντρον, 'a cavity,') Frontal sinuses.

PROSOPANTRITIS, (prosopautra, and itis), Inflammation of the frontal sinuses.

PROSOP'IS DUL'CIS, Ord. Leguminosæ. A tree of rather large size, native of Peru. The fruit—Pacay—is a pod, from 20 to 24 inches long, containing black seeds imbedded in a white, soft, flaky substance; which last is eaten by the Limesos with pleasure.

PROSOPODYNIA, (prosopon, and ἄδυνα, 'pain,') Neuralgia, facial.

PROSOPODYSMORPHIA, (prosopon, ὄψις, 'with difficulty, and μορφή, 'shape,') Malformation or atrophy of the face—as where the process of nutrition suffers from diminished nervous influence.

PROSOPOLOGIA, (prosopon, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Physiognomy.

PROSOPOMANTIA, (prosopon, and μαντεία, 'divination,') Physiognomy.

PROSOPON, (προσωπον), Face.

PROSOPOPARALYSIS, (prosopon, and paralysis), Palsy, Bell's.

PROSORRHEUM'IA, gen. Prosoporrhœum'atis, Rheumatismus fac'ialis, (prosopon, and ῥευμα, 'defluxion,,' rheumatism,) Rheumatism affecting the face.

PROSOPOSIS, (from prosopon), Physiognomy.

PROSOPSPASMUS, (prosopon, and spasmus), Canine laugh.

PROSOPOSTERNODYMIA, (prosopon, στερνον, 'the sternum,' and ἄδυνα, 'to mingle,') see Cephalosomatodymia.

PROSPERITAS VALETUDINIS, (prosper, 'favourable,') Sanitas.

PROSPHORA, (προσφάρα, from pros, and φάρα, 'to bring,') Prehension.

PROSPHYSIS, (προσφύσις), Adhæscencia, Cohærentia, (προσφύσις, 'adhesion, adherence, connexion,,' (from pros, and φύω, 'I grow,') In a more limited sense, this word means morbid adhesion of the eyelids, either between themselves, or with the globe of the eye: Ankylobleph'aron.

PROSTASIS, (προστασις, from pro, and στασις, 'station,,' 'superiority,,' 'preponderance,') A predominance or abundance—as of excrementitious humours.

PROSTATA, Prostate—p. Adenoides, Prostate—p. Bartholini. Cowper's glands in the female—p. Glandula, Prostate—p. Muliebris, Cowper's glands in the female.

PROSTATÆ, Prostate—p. Adenoides, Prostate—p. Glandulosa, Prostate.

PROSTATAL, Prostatic.

PROSTATAL'GIA, (prostate, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the prostate.

PROSTATAUXE, (prostate, and αύξη, 'increase,') Prostatoparæctasis.

PROSTATË, (pro, and στημι, 'I stand,') Prostatata, P. gland'ula, Prostatatæ, P. glandulosa seu adenoides, Paras'tata adenoides seu glandulosa, Ad'stans, Paras'tatæ, P. gland'ula, Tes'tis minor, Cor'pus glandulosum seu glandosum seu adeniforme seu glandiforme seu glandulosum seu adenoides, Assistentes glandulæ, Ad'stites glandulosi; the Prostate gland. A glandular, cordiform body, of the size of a chestnut, situate before the neck of the bladder, behind the symphysis pubis, and surrounding the first portion of the urethra. Its excretory outlets, the number of 10 or 12, open into the part of the urethra that traverses it, and pour into it a whitish viscid humour—Liquor prostat'icus—intended to lubricate the interior of the urethra, and to serve as a vehicle for the sperm in its ejaculation.

PROSTATE, ANTERIOR, see Cowper's glands.

PROSTATELCO'SIS, Prostatelco'sis, (prostate, and 'ελκος,' 'an ulcer.') Ulceration of the prostate.

PROSTATES INFÉRIEURES, Cowper's glands—p. Petites, Cowper's glands.

PROSTATHELCOSIS, (prostate, and 'ελκος,' 'an ulcer,') Prostatelcosis.

PROSTAT'IC, Prostat'icus, Prostat'ical, (F.) Prostatique. That which belongs or relates to the prostate. Winslow has named—Superior Prostatic Muscles—ligaments which pass from the pubis to the lateral parts of the prostate. He, also, calls—Inferior prostatic muscles—the fleshy fibres, which, from the lateral parts of the urethra, near its membranous portion, pass to be inserted into the pubis.

PROSTATIC BISECTOR. An instrument employed by Dr. Stevens, of New York, in the bilateral operation of lithotomy. In form it resembles a large olive, with a beak at the extremity, cutting edges at the sides parallel to its longest axis, and with a straight handle.

PROSTATIC LIQUOR, Liquor prostat'icus. The fluid secreted by the prostate, which mixes with sperm during emission.

PROSTATIC PORTION OF THE URETHRA. The part of the canal of the urethra included by the prostate: it is about 15 lines long.

PROSTATIC SINUS, see Sinus, prostatic.

PROSTATICUS SUPERIOR, Compressor prostate.

PROSTATIQUE, Prostatic.

PROSTATITIS, Inflammatio prostat'ice, (prostate, and itis.) Inflammation of the prostate; when accompanying gonorrhœa, it is the gonorrhœo-prostat'itis.

PROSTATOCELE, (prostate, and κηλη, 'tumour,') Prostatocœlus.

PROSTATOLITHI, (prostate, and λιθος, 'a stone,') see Calculi, urethral.

PROSTATONCUS, Prostatocœle, Tumor prostate, (prostate, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Swelling of the prostate.

PROSTATOPARECTASIS, (prostate, and παρεκτείνω, 'to extend,') Enlargement of the prostate; also, induration of the same, Prostatoscirrhus, Prostatocœle.

PROSTATORRHEA, (F.) Prostatorrhœe, (prostate, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') A morbidly increased discharge from the prostate.

PROSTATOSCIRRHUS, see Prostatoparectasis.

PROSTERNIDIUM, (προστερνίδιον, from pro, and στερνον, 'the sternum,') Any agent applied to the anterior part of the chest; a plaster to the breast.

PROTHESIS, (προθεσις), Adjunctio, Adjectio, Appositio, 'addition, application;' (from pro, and θέτω, 'to put,') That part of surgery, whose object is to add to the human body some artificial part, in place of one that may be wanting, as a wooden leg, an artificial eye, &c. Sometimes written Prothesis, (F.) Prothèse.

PROSTHETA, (προσθετα), Subdita.

PROSTHIUM, (προσθιον), Penis.

PROSTITUTION, Prostitutio, Porni'a, (from prosto, (pro, 'before,' and sto, 'I stand,') 'I stand to be hired,') The condition and practice of a prostitute, (F.) Fille publique, F. de Joie. In many countries of Europe, prostitution is a matter of public hygiene—the prostitutes being regularly examined medically and licensed. In Great Britain, and in this country, it is not subjected to any regulation.

PROSTOMIA, Commissura labiorum; (pro, and στόμα, 'mouth,') The commissure of the lips.

PROSTRATION, Prostratio virium; (pro, and sternere, stratus, 'to throw down,') (F.) Prostration des forces, Abatement. Great depression of strength. Almost total loss of power over the muscles of locomotion.

PROTEA MELLIFERA, (after Proteus.) A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Protaceæ, whose involucre and flowers, at the time of inflorescence, are filled with a sweet watery liquid, which contains a great deal of honey. By inspersion it forms a delicious syrup—Syrupus Proteæ, which is much used in pulmonary affections.

PROTEA LEPIDOCARPOX, and some other Proteæ, supply the same kind of juice.

PROTEAN or PROTE'AN, Proteiform, Proteiform'is, (from Proteus, who could assume various shapes.) Assuming different shades.

PROTEIC, Proteinous.

PROTEIFORMIS, Protean.

PROTEIFORM'IS MORBUS. A disease which assumes various characters.

PROTEÏN, Proteine, Proteïna, (from πρω-ενω, 'I take first rank,') A product of the decomposition of albumen, &c., by potassa. When, according to Mulder, animal albumen, fibrin or casein is dissolved in a moderately strong solution of caustic potassa, and the solution is exposed for some time to a high temperature, these substances are decomposed. The addition of acetic acid causes, in all three, the separation of a gelatinous translucent precipitate which has exactly the same characters and composition. This is protein. The existence of any such radical free from sulphur is denied.

Protein having been regarded as the basis of animal and vegetable fibrin, albumen, casein, and gluten, they have been classed under the "proteinaceous alimentary principle," by Dr. Pereira.

PROTEINACEOUS, Proteinous.

PROTEINOUS, Proteinaceous, Proteinous, Proteic, (F.) Protéineux, Protéique. Of, or belonging to protein;—as "a proteinous alimentary principle." For proteinous, albuminous is now generally substituted.

PROTEÏNEUX, Proteinous.

PROTEÏQUE, Proteinous.

PROTENSIONES GLANDULARES, (pro, and tendere, tensum, 'to stretch,') Mamillary eminences.

PROTHÈSE, Prosthesis.

PROTHESIS, Prosthesis.

PROTMESIS, (προτμησις, from pro, and τρωω, 'to cut,') Umbilicus.

PROTO, (πρωτος, 'first,') in composition, first.

PROTOAZOTATE DE MERCURE, Hydrargyri nitras.

PROTOGALA, (proto, and γαλα, 'milk,') Colostrum.

PROTOIATROS, (proto, and ιατρος, 'physician,') Archiater.

PROTOMEDICUS, Archiater.

PROTOMUS, (pro, and τρωω, 'to cut,') Dissector.

PROTONEPHRIUM, (proto, and νεφρος, 'a kidney,') Corpus Wolffianum.

PROTOORGANISM, Protoorganism'us. A being, whose animal or vegetable nature is so difficult of determination, that it might be referred to either one or the other division of organized bodies. See Zoophyte.

PROTOPATHIA, (proto, and παθος, 'affection,') Idiopathia.

PROTOPHYTE, Protophyton, (proto, and φυτον, 'a plant,') A vegetable production at the foot of the scale; as a cryptogamous plant,—a fungus.

PROTOPLASM, Protoplasma, (proto, and πλασσω, 'to form,') The blastema in the sense of cytoblastema. Also, according to Robin, the liquid contained in the cavities of vegetable cells, or in the embryonic cells, when the embryo has as yet no blood; which liquid is capable, like the liquor sanguinis, of furnishing materials for the origin of other anatomical elements.

PRO'TOPLAST, (proto, and πλασσω, 'to form.')

A primary formation. A first formed organized body—the parent of all others.

PROTOSPOROS, (proto, and σπειρω, 'to sow,')
Os uteri.

PROTOZOIDS, (proto, ζωον, 'an animal,' and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Spermatozoa.

PROTOZO'ON, (F.) Protozoaire, (proto, and ζωον, 'an animal.')

An animal lowest in the scale;—as a monad.

PROTRAHENS LENTIS, (pro, and trahere, 'to draw,') Ciliary muscle.

PROTRUSION, (pro, and trudere, trusum, 'to thrust,') Prolapsus.

PROTRUSOR, Detrusor urinæ.

PROTUBERANCE, Protuberantia, Excuberantia, Prominentia, Eccrescentia, Excuberantia, (pro, 'before,' and tuber, 'a projection,') Bosse, (F.) Bosse. A name given to rough, unequal protuberances, seen at the surface of certain organs; the parietal protuberances, occipital protuberances, annular protuberances, &c.

PROTUBERANCE, ANNULAR, Pons Varolii—p. Cerebral, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii—p. Cylindroide, Cornu ammonis.

PROTUBERANTIA, Eminence, Protuberance—p. Annularis Willisii, Pons Varolii—p. Basilaris, Pons Varolii—p. Cylindrica, Cornu ammonis.

PROUD FLESH, Fungosity.

PROUNE, Prunus domestica.

PROVENTRIC'ULUS, Bulbus glandulosus, Infundibulum, Secund stomach, (pro, and ventriculus, 'the stomach.')

A bulbous expansion at the termination of the œsophagus, immediately above the gizzard of birds, the walls of which are thickly studded with a layer of glands or follicles which secrete a digestive fluid.

PROVERB, MEDICAL, Proverbium medicum. A proverbial expression frequently contains sound sense in its directions. In medicine, the greatest collection is in the Regimen of Health of the School of Salerno, composed in the 11th century, by John of Milan. Yet, although good sense is often inculcated, we frequently meet with the reverse.

Most of the proverbs are hygienic. The following are a few.

1. *Qu' après la soupe un coupe d'excellent vin
Tire un écu de la poche du médecin.*
2. Surge quintâ, grande nonâ, cæna quintâ, dormi nonâ, nec est mortî vita pronâ.
3. Nunquam recte corpus exerceri sine animo, neque animum sine corpore posse.
4. Viande bien machée est à demi digérée.
5. Optimum condimentum fumes.
Appetite is the best sauce.
6. Plures occidit gula quam gladius.
7. Early to bed and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise.
8. One man's meat's another man's poison.
9. An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.

PROVERSIOS, (pro, and vertere, versum, 'to turn,') Anteversion.

PROVINS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Chalybeate springs in the department of Seine et Marne, France, which contain carbonic acid and iron.

PROVOCATORIUS, (pro, and vocare, vocatum, 'to call,') Intercalary.

PROXIMAD, see Proximal aspect.

PROXIMAL, (proximus, 'next,') Proximate; nearest; next.

PROXIMAL ASPECT. An aspect towards the trunk, in the course of an extremity.—Barelay. Proximad is used by the same writer adverbially to signify 'towards the trunk.'

PRUNA, Anthrax.

PRUNE, Prunum.

PRUNE JUICE EXPECTORATION OF SPUTA. The sputa resembling prune juice, which occur in the third or purulent stage of pneumonia.

PRUNEAU, Prunum.

PRUNELLA, (dim. of prunum,) Angina pectoris, Aphthæ, Cynanche, (all from [G.] Braune, 'sorethroat,') Pupil.

PRUNELLA, P. vulgaris seu officina'lis, Brunella, Consolida minor, Symphytum minus, Selfheal, Healall, Bu'gle, (F.) Prunelle, Brunelle; Ord. Labiate. Sec. Syst. Didynamia Gynospemia. This plant has been recommended as an astringent, in hemorrhages and fluxes; and, also, in gargles against aphthæ, and in inflammation of the fauces; hence its name from ([G.] Braune, 'sorethroat.')

PRUNELLÆ SAL, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus.

PRUNELLE, Prunella, Pupil.

PRUNELLIER, (dim. of prunus,) Prunus spinosa.

PRUNELLOE, Prunum Brignolense.

PRUNEOLA SYLVESTRIS, Prunus spinosa.

PRUNES, see Prunum—p. Pulp of, Pruni Pulpa.

PRUNI PUL'PA, Pulp of prunes. (Take of prunes a sufficient quantity, soften them in the vapour of boiling water, and having separated the stones, beat the remainder in a marble mortar and press through a hair-sieve.—Ph. U. S.)

PRUNIER, Prunus domestica—p. Sauvage, Prunus spinosa.

PRU'NUM, Coccyne'lon. A dried Plum, a Prune. (F.) Pruneau. Three sorts of Prunes have been usually ranked amongst the articles of the materia medica. 1. The Prunum Brignolensê; Brignole plum or Prunelloe; from Brignole in Provence. It is of a reddish-yellow colour; and has a very grateful, sweet, subacid taste. 2. The Prunum Gallicum, Prunum (Ph. U. S.), the French Prune; and 3. The Prunum Damascenum, Dam'son, formerly Damascene, Brab'ylon. All these possess the same general qualities as the other summer fruits. They are emollient and laxative.

PRUNUS STELLATUM, Averrhoa carambola.

PRUNUS ACACIA, (προυνη,) Prunus padus.

PRUNUS ARMENI'ACA, Armeni'aca vulgaris seu epiro'tica. The A'pricot, A'pricock. Bericoc'cê, Preoc'cia, (F.) Abricotier. Ord. Rosaceæ. Sec. Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. The apricot, Mellum Armeni'acum, (F.) Abricot, when ripe, is easily digested, and considered as a great delicacy.

PRUNUS AVIUM, P. cer'asus seu sylvest'ris seu macrophy'lla, Cer'asus Avium seu nigra seu dul'cis, Black Cher'ry Tree, (F.) Merisier. The fruit is eaten; and a gum exudes from the tree, the properties of which are similar to those of gum Arabic.

PRUNUS CAPULIN, Capuli, grows in the open fields of Peru; and is cultivated in gardens in the towns. The fruit is acid, and not often eaten; but on account of its agreeable odour it is used in making Pucheros de flores; or with odoriferous flowers to perfume linen.

PRUNUS CER'ASUS, Cer'asus ac'cida seu horten'sis seu vulgaris seu ru'bra. The Red Cherry Tree; (F.) Cerisier. The fruit Cer'asum, Cer'asion, has a pleasant, acidulous sweet flavour. It is wholesome. See Prunus avium.

PRUNUS DOMESTICA. The Plum or Dam'son tree, Coccyne'lea, Proune, (F.) Prunier ordinaire. The damson, when perfectly ripe, affords a wholesome fruit for pies, tarts, &c. It is gently laxative. See Prunum.

PRUNUS HORTENSIS, P. cerasus.

PRUNUS INSIT'IA. The Bull'ace Plum Tree. The fruit of this tree is used like the damson.

PRUNUS LAUROCER'ASUS, Cer'asus laurocerasus, Pa'dus laurocerasus, Poi'son Lau'rel, Cher'ry Laurel, Common Laurel, Laurocerasus, (F.) Laurier-cerise, L. amandier, L. de Trébissonde. The leaves, Laurocer'asus, (Ph. E., D., and B.) have a bitter, styptic taste, with the flavour of bitter almonds. The flowers have a similar flavour. The powdered leaves, applied to the nostrils, excite sneezing. The flavour of the leaves has given occasion to their being employed in tarts, custards, &c.; but in large quantities they are poisonous. The poisonous principle is the prussic acid. The distilled water, called Laurelwater, is poisonous. (See Poisons, Table of.) AN AQUA LAUROCER'ASII, Cherrylaurel water, is official in the Edinburgh, Dublin and British (1864) Pharmacopœias. Dose, ℞ xxx to fʒj.

PRUNUS MACROPHYLLA, P. avium.

PRUNUS PA'DUS, Pa'dus, P. avium, Cer'asus Pa'dus seu racemo'sa sylvest'ris, Wild Cluster or Bird Cher'ry Tree, (Sc.) Hag'berry, Hack'berry, (Prov.) Heck'berry, (F.) Cerisier à grappes, Bois puant. The bark of the tree has a fragrant smell and a bitter, subastringent taste, somewhat similar to that of bitter almonds. It has been recommended in intermittents, &c., in the form of decoction. The berries have been used in dysentery.

PRUNUS SEBESTENA, Sebestena.

PRUNUS SPINO'SA. The Sloe Tree, P. Sylvest'ris seu Aca'cia, Agriococcyne'lea, Agru'na, Agru'ne'la, (F.) Prunellier, Prunier sauvage. The fruit—the sloe—is sometimes employed in gargles, and was formerly much used in hemorrhage, owing to its astringent properties. The Aca'cia nostras seu German'ica seu vulgar'is, Prun'ola sylvest'ris, Succus acaciæ nostrat'is, S. Acaciæ Germanicæ inspissat'us, is obtained from this.

PRUNUS SYLVESTRIS, P. Avium, P. Spinosa.

PRUNUS VIRGINIA'NA, Cer'asus serotina seu Virginia'na, Choke Cher'ry, Wild Cher'ry Tree, (F.) Cerisier de Virginie. The bark of this tree has been found useful in intermittents. The leaves are poisonous to certain animals, and the berries intoxicate different kinds of birds. The Indians use the bark in the cure of syphilis. It is bitter and astringent, and possesses some aromatic warmth, and likewise a sedative quality. It is stimulant and tonic. The leaves contain prussic acid. The distilled oil of the bark is very nearly identical with that of the bitter almond. A strong decoction of the bark is anthelmintic.

PRUNUS VULGARIS, P. Padus.

PRURIG'INOUS, Prurigin'osus, (F.) Prurigneux, (from prurigo.) Relating, or belonging to, or resembling prurigo.

PRURIG'O, gen. Prurig'inie, Pruri'tus, Chris'ma, (prurio, prurimum, 'to itch.')

The word is often used synonymously with itching. Willan and Bateman use the term for a genus of cutaneous diseases, the characteristic symptoms of which are a severe itching, accompanied by an eruption of papule of nearly the same colour as the adjoining cuticle; Ones'mos, Scab'ies papuliform'is, Ecor'mia prurig'o. It affects the whole surface of the skin, under three varieties of form—the P. mil'is, P. form'icans, P. seni'lis, &c., as well as some parts of the body, as the P. pod'icis, and P. puden'di muli'eb'ris, Puden'dagra pruriens, Pruri'tus vulvæ, (F.) Prurit' de la vulve.

PRURIGO, Heat—p. Pedicularis, Phthiriasis.

PRURIT, Itching—p. de la Vulve, see Prurigo.

PRURITUS, (prurio, 'to itch,') Gargalus, Heat, Itching, Prurigo—p. Vulvæ, see Prurigo.

PRUS'SIAN BLUE, Fer'rum Zoët'icum seu Borus'sicum seu Cyanogenat'um seu oxydula'tum hydrocyan'icum, Fer'ri Ferrocy'anas seu Ferrocyanu're'tum seu Ferrocyan'idium (Ph. U. S. 1863) seu Cyanu're'tum seu Percyan'idium, Borus'sias seu Prus'sias seu Hydrocy'anus Fer'ri, Cer'uleum Borus'sicum seu Berolinen'se, Tritohydroferrocyanate, Ferrocyanide, Ferrocyanuret or Ferropru'siate of iron, (F.) Bleu de Prusse, B. de Berlin. Ferri Ferrocy'anium, F. Ferrocy'annu're'tum, Pure Prussian Blue, is directed, in the Ph. U. S., to be made by adding a solution of ferrocyanide of potassium to a solution of ter sulphate of iron, filtering the liquid, and washing the precipitate until the washings pass nearly tasteless, and drying it. This salt is chiefly used in the preparation of the hydrocyanic acid and the cyanide of mercury. It has been advised in the treatment of intermittents, and in epilepsy and serophulosis. Externally, it has been applied to ill-conditioned ulcers. (ʒj to ʒj of cerate.) Dose, four to six grains.

PSALIDIUM, (ψαλίδιον, dim. of psalis,) Fornix.

PSALIS, (ψαλις,) Fornix, Scissors.

PSALTERIUM, (ψαλτηριον, dim. of ψαλτηρ, 'a psalter,') Lyra, Omasum.

PSAMMA, (ψαμμη,) see Gravel.

PSAMMIS'MUS, (ψαμμιςμος,) Ammis'mus, Gammis'mus, (from ψαμμος, 'sand,') Arenal'tio. The application of sand to any part of the body for the cure of disease.

PSAMMODES, (ψαμμοδης, from ψαμμος, and odes,) Sabulous.

PSAMMUS, (ψαμμος,) see Gravel.

PSAUTIER, (from (L.) psalterium,) Omasum.

PSELLIS'MUS, (ψελλισμος,) Psell'otes, (from ψελλίζω, 'I stutter,') Imperfect or depraved state of the articulation. A genus in the class Pneumatica, order Phonicea, of Good.

PSELLIS'MUS NASITAS, Rhinophonia—p. Rho tæcismus, Rotacismus.

PSELLOTES, (ψελλοτης,) Balbuties, Psellismus.

PSEUDACACIA ODORATA, (pseudo, and acacia,) Robinia pseudacacia.

PSEUDAC'OË, Pseudacōia, Pseudecōia, (pseudo, and akōn, 'audition,') Pseudacū'sis. False hearing.

PSEUDACORUS, (pseudo, and acorus,) Iris pseudacorus.

PSEUDÆSTHÈ'SIA, Sen'sus pover'sus, (pseudo, and αισθανομαι, 'I feel,') αισθησις, 'feeling,') Parapsis illus'oria, Pseud'aphē, Pseudaph'ia, (F.) Pseudesthèsie. Depraved feeling. Imaginary sense of touch or general feeling in organs that have no existence. Common to those who have suffered amputation, and to hypochondriacs and the insane.

PSEUDALEI MORBI, (ψευδαλει, 'counterfeit,') from ψεύδης, 'false,') Feigned diseases.

PSEUDALEUS TRICHINA, Trichina spiralis.

PSEUDANGUSTURINUM, (pseudo, and angustura, 'false angustura,') Bruceine.

PSEUDAPHE, (pseudo, and ἄψη, 'touch, feeling,') Pseudæsthesia.

PSEUDARTHRO'SIS, Pseudarticula'tio, Pseudartic'ulus, Articula'tio notha seu artificia'lis, (pseudo, and αρθρον, 'a joint,') A false joint or articulation; Artic'ulus no'tus seu spu'rius seu præternatura'lis, (F.) Articulation surnumévaire.

PSEUDARTICULATIO, Pseudarthrosis.

PSEUDECOIA, Pseudæcoe.

PSEUDENCEPH'ALUS, Paraceph'alus, (pseudo, and εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon,') A monster, whose cranium is open in its whole extent, from before to behind, its base supporting a vascular tumour.

PSEUDESTHÉSIE, Pseudæsthesia.

PSEUDINOMA, (pseudo, is, nos, 'fibre,' and oma.) Scirrhus.

PSEUDO, (ψευδής.) False—p. Asthma, Dyspnoea.

PSEUDOBLEP'SIA, Pseudoblep'sis, Pseudoraisis, Suffusio oculi, (pseudo, and βλεψίς, 'sight.') Pseudop'sia, Parop'sis illusoria, Suffusio, Phantasma, False sight. A generic name, used by Cullen for perversion of vision. See Metamorphopsia.

PSEUDOBLEPSIS, Paropsis.

PSEUDOCARCINOMA LABII, Cancer aquaticus.

PSEUDOCATARACTA, see Cataract.

PSEUDOCHROMIA, (pseudo, and χρῶμα, 'color,') Achromatopsia.

PSEUDOCROUP, Asthma thymicum.

PSEUDOCYESIS, (pseudo, and κύσις, 'pregnancy,') Pregnancy, false—p. Molaris, Mole.

PSEUDOENCEPHALITIS, (pseudencephalus, and itis.) Hydrencephaloid disease.

PSEUDOFEVER, Irritation, morbid.

PSEUDOGEUSIA, Pseudogen'sis, Pseudogen'stia, (pseudo, and γεύσις, 'taste,') Hallucinationis gustus. False taste.

PSEUDOGEUSTIA, Pseudogeusia.

PSEUDOHELMINTHES, (pseudo, and ἕλμινθ, gen. ἕλμινθος, 'a worm,') Ectozoa.

PSEUDOLI'EN, Pseudosplen, (pseudo, and lien, 'spleen,') Glands situate in the neighbourhood of the spleen; probably, lymphatic glands.

PSEUDOMECHOCACANA, Convolvulus panduratus.

PSEUDOMEDICUS, (pseudo, and medicus, 'a physician,') Charlatan.

PSEUDOMELANOTIC FORMATION, (pseudo, and melanosis,) see Anthracosis—p. Meninx, Membrane, false—p. Metamorphosis polyposa, Polypus.

PSEUDOMEMBRANA, (pseudo, and membrana.) Membrane, false.

PSEUDOMEMBRANE, Membrane, false.

PSEUDOMEMBRANOUS, Pseudomembranosus. (F.) Pseudomembraneus. Relating or appertaining to false membranes.

PSEUDONARCISSUS, Narcissus pseudonarcissus.

PSEUDONOMA'NIA, (pseudo, and mania.) A form of insanity, which is characterized by a morbid propensity for lying.

PSEUDOPARASITES, Ectozoa.

PSEUDOPERIPNEUMONIA, Peripneumonia notha.

PSEUDOPHLOGOSIS VENTRICULI RESOLUTIVA ET COLLIQUATIVA, (pseudo, and φλογώσις, 'inflammation,') Gastromalacia.

PSEUDOPHTHISIS. 'False phthisis.' Emaciation occasioned by other cause than organic lesion of the lungs.

PSEUDOPLAS'MATA, (pseudo, and πλασσω, 'I form,') A term applied to malignant heterogeneous tumours.

PSEUDOPLEURITIS, Pleurodynia—p. Polypi, see Polypi—p. Pyrethrum, Achillea ptarmica—p. Spleen, Pseudolien.

PSEUDOPNEUMONIA, Peripneumonia notha.

PSEUDOPNEUMONITIS, Peripneumonia notha.

PSEUDOPSIA, (pseudo, and ψῆξις, 'vision,') Pseudoblepsia.

PSEUDORASIS, (pseudo, and ᾠω, 'to see,') Pseudoblepsia.

PSEUDOREX'IA, Pseudorex'is, (pseudo, and ᾠξις, 'appetite,') False appetite.

PSEUDORHONCHUS, (pseudo, and ῥογχος, 'rattle,') A sound heard during respiration, which appears to be produced, like the ordinary rhonchi, in the air-tubes, but is exterior to them —as in the case of pleural pseudorhonchi. See Rattle and Râle.

PSEUDOSCOP'IC, Pseudoscop'icus, (pseudo, and σκοπεῖν, 'I view,') Conveying false impressions to the eye; as where projecting surfaces are seen depressed, and conversely.

PSEUDOS'MIA, Pseudosphre'sia, Pseudosphre'sis, (pseudo, and σμη, 'smell,') False sense of smell.

PSEUDOSPHERESIA, (pseudo, and σφῆρασις, 'smell,') Pseudosmia.

PSEUDOSYPHILIS, Syphilis pseudosyphilis.

PSEUDOTHANATUS, (pseudo, and θανάτος, 'death,') Asphyxia.

PSEUDOVARIOLÆ, Varicella.

PSEUDYMEN, (pseudo, and ὑμην, 'a membrane,') Membrane, false.

PSEIDIUM POMIF'ERUM. The Apple Guava, Guava, Guayava. Ord. Myrtaceæ. This plant and P. Pyrif'erum bear fruits; those of the former like apples—of the latter like pears. The apple kind has an acid flavour; the other is sweet. Of the inner pulp of either, the natives of the Indies make jellies, and, of the outer rind, tarts, marmalades, &c. They are somewhat astringent; this quality, indeed, exists in every part of the tree, and abundantly in the leaf-buds, which are occasionally boiled with barley and liquorice as an excellent drink in diarrhœa. A simple decoction of the leaves is said to be useful in the itch and most cutaneous eruptions.

PSILOLOSIS, (ψιλλωσις, from ψιλλω, 'to remove the hair,') Depilation.

PSILOTHRUM, (ψιλωθρον, from ψιλλω, 'to remove the hair,') Bryonia alba, Depilatory.

PSIMYTHION, (ψιμυθειον.) Plumbi subcarbonas.

PSIMYTHUS, (ψιμυθος.) Plumbi subcarbonas.

PSOA, (ψωα.) Dysodia.

PSO'Æ, (ψωα), Psoi'æ, Pey'æ, see Lumbi, 'the loins.' The psœa muscles; Alop'eces, Neurom'etra.

PSO'AS MAG'NUS, (ψωα, 'the loins,') Pso'as seu lumb'aris inter'nus, F'émur noventium sex'tus, Pré-lombo-trochantin, Pré-lombo-trochantinien (Ch.). A muscle, seated on the lateral parts of the lumbar portion of the vertebral column; and passing down to the superior and anterior part of the thigh. It is long, fusiform, and attached, above, to the body and transverse processes of the first four lumbar vertebræ and last dorsal. Below, it terminates by a very thick tendon, common to it and the iliacus muscle, — which is inserted into the top of the lesser trochanter. This muscle bends the thigh upon the pelvis, and carries it in rotation outwards. It may, also, bend the pelvis on the thigh, and the loins on the pelvis. It acts considerably in station and progression.

PSOAS PAR'VUS, Pré-lombo-pubien (Ch.). A muscle situate anteriorly to the last. It is long, thin, flat, and narrow, and is attached, above, to the body of the last dorsal vertebra, and below, to the linea ileopectinea, by means of a slender tendon, which furnishes two expansions — one to the iliac aponeurosis, and the other to the pelvis. This muscle bends the vertebral column on the pelvis, and, reciprocally, the pelvis on the vertebral column.

PSODYMUS, (ψωα, 'the loins,' and δυω, 'to mingle,') Gastrodidymus.

PSOÏÆ, Psœæ.

PSOÏTE, Psœitis.

PSOÏTIS, Inflammatio musculi Pso'as, Lumbago inflammatori'ria spœsmad'ica, (F.) Psoïte, Inflammation du muscle Psoas, (ψωα, 'the loins,' 'the psœæ muscles,' and itis.) Inflammation of the psœæ muscles and of the parts situate before the lumbar vertebræ; accompanied, from its commencement, by considerable fever, violent pains in the part affected, and in the thigh of the same side, which remains commonly half bent. Psoritis may terminate by suppuration, and form a lumbar abscess.

PSO'LE, (ψωλον,) Penis. Also, the glans when uncovered.

PSOLON, (ψωλον,) Membrous.

PSOLON'CUS, (psole, and ογκος, 'a tumour,') Swelling of the glans, or of the penis generally.

PSO'LUS, (ψωλος, from psole.) One who has the glans uncovered. One who has been circumcised.

PSOPHOMETER, (psophus, and μετρον, 'a measure.) Stethoscope.

PSOPHIUS, (ψοφος,) a noise; a sound.

PSORA, (ψωρα, from ψωω, 'to scratch,') Scab'ies, Phly'sis seu Epye'sis Scab'ies, Scabi'ola, Itch, Seratch, Scotch fiddle, (Prov.) Ichet, Serat, Yecke, (Sc.) Reif, Youk, Yuke, Yecke, (F.) Gale, Mal Saint-Main, Rogne. A contagious eruption of very minute pimples—pustular, vesicular, papular, intermixed, and alternating, itching intolerably and terminating in scabs. It is found to be connected with an insect of the genus Acarus;—the Ac'arus seu Sarcop'tes seu Sarcop'tus seu Sarcocopt'es seu Phthi'rimum seu Cheyle'tes Scab'iei, Ac'arus Cy'ro, Itch insect, Itch animal'cule, Itch mite, (F.) Ciron. The itch occupies, particularly, the spaces between the fingers, the back of the hands, wrists, elbows, axillæ, groins, hams, &c., and rarely affects the face. The best applications, for its cure, are,—the Unquentum Sulphuris or Ung. Sulph. comp. night and morning; but the unpleasant smell of the sulphur has given occasion to the use of other means;—as the White Hellebore, Potass in deliquescence, Muriate of Ammonia, Sulphuric Acid, &c. The repugnance to the smell of sulphur ought not, however, to be regarded; especially as, in the course of four or five days, it will, in almost all cases, produce a perfect cure.

PSORA AGRIA, Psoriasis inveterata.

PSORA EBRIORUM, Drunck'ard's Itch. An eruption, attended by afflicting itching, to which elderly people, who have been much addicted to drinking alcoholic liquors, are liable.

PSORA LEPROSA, Psoriasis—p. Squamosa, Psoriasis.

PSORALEA, Psoralea pentaphylla.

PSORA'LEA ESCULEN'TA, Breadroot, Indian tur-nip, Pomme blanche ou de Prairie, (ψωραλεος, 'scurfy or scaly,' in reference to its scurfy glands or dots.) Ord. Leguminosæ. A plant, resembling the beet in shape, which is found near the Rocky Mountains. It contains a white pulpy substance, which is sweet and palatable.

PSORA'LEA GLANDULO'SA, Alvaquill'a. A shrub, used in Chili as a vulnerary. The Paraguay tea is referred to it by M. Lenoble, of Montevideo. See Ilex Paraguensis.

PSORALEA PENTAPHYLLA, Psora'lea, Contra-yer'va no'va, Mex'ican Contrace'va. The root is little, if at all, inferior to the contrace'va in its medical properties; which, by the by, are unimportant.

PSORENTERIA, (psora, and εντερον, 'intestine,') Cholera.

PSORIASIS, or PSORIA'SIS, (ψωριασις,) formerly, the state of ψωρα. Lepido'si psori'asis, Serp'e'do, Serpi'go, Impeti'go (of some), Scab'ies sic'ca seu fer'i'na, Psora lepro'sa seu squamo'sa, Scaly Tel'ter, Dry Scale, Dry Scall, (F.) Dartre squameuse lichenoid'e, D. ecailleuse, Grattelle, Gale miliaire, G. canine ou èche. A cutaneous affection, consisting of patches of rough, amorphous scales; continuous, or of indeterminate outline; skin often chappy. Psoriasis occurs under a considerable variety of forms. The surface, under the scales, is more tender and irritable than in icpra, which psoriasis, in some respects, resembles. Dr. Willan has given names to eleven varieties of psoriasis: the chief of which are the Psori'asis gutta'ta, P. diffu'sa, one form of which is the Bu'ker's Itch, Psori'asis pisto'rum, and Grocer's Itch; and another, the Washer'woman's Scall, the P. gyra'ta, and P. invetera'ta seu Psora a'gria. The treatment of irritable psoriasis must be antiphlogistic, with the internal use of the fixed alkalies, sulphur, &c. They do better without any local application. The more local and less inflammatory are ameliorated by emollient and soothing applications; or by slightly stimulating means, scabbing, the Ung. hydrarg. nitri-co-oxid., Ung. oxid'i zinci, &c.

PSORTIC, (ψωρτικός,) Psor'icus (F.) Psorique, Galeux; (from psora.) That which has the nature of itch. A medicine for curing the itch.

PSOROCOMPIUM, (psora, and κομειν, 'I take care of,') An hospital for those affected with itch.

PSORODES, (ψωροδης,) Psorous.

PSO'ROID, Psoro'id; (from psora, and ειδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling psora.

PSOROPHTHALMIA, (ψωροφθαλμια,) see Ophthalmia tarsi—p. Neonatorum, see Ophthalmia (purulenta infantum).

PSORO'ROUS, Psoro'rus, Psoro'des, (from psora,) Appertaining or relating to itch.

PSYÆ, (ψυα,) Psœ.

PSYCHAGOGA, Psychagogia.

PSYCHAGO'GICA, (ψυχολογικα,) Psychago'ga, (psychæ, and αγω, 'I lead,') Medicines which resuscitate, when life seems extinct; as in syncope and apoplexy.

PSYCHAL, Psychical.

PSYCHE, (ψυχη,) Anima, Thymus.

PSYCHEISM, (from psyche,) Magnetism, anim.

PSYCHIA'TER, A'lienist. One who treats diseases of the mind—a Mad-doctor, A'lienist phy-sic'ian, (F.) Médecin de fous, Aliéniste.

PSYCHIATRIA, (psycho, and ιατρεια, 'healing,') Treatment of diseases of the mind.

PSY'CHICAL, Psy'chicus, (ψυχικος, from psyche,) Psy'chal. That which relates to the mind or mental endowments. Psycholog'ical is not unfrequently used with the like signification.

PSYCHICAL or PSYCHOLOGICAL MEDICINE includes the history, pathology, treatment, &c., of mental affections.

PSYCHO, (from ψυχη, anima, 'the mind, the soul,') in composition the same.

PSYCHOLOGICAL, see Psychical.

PSYCHOL'OGY, Psycholog'ia, (psycho, and λογος, 'discourse,') A treatise on the intellectual and moral faculties. Also, the intellectual and moral faculties or sphere.

PSYCHONOSEMA, (psycho, and νοσημα, 'disease,') see Psychoses.

PSYCHONOSOL'OGY, Psychonosolog'ia (psycho, νοσος, 'disease, and λογος, 'a description,') The doctrine of, or a treatise on, diseases of the mind.

PSYCHOPATHIA, (psycho, and παθος, 'affection,') see Psychoses.

PSYCHOPATHIES, Psychoses.

PSYCHOP'ATHIST, Psychopathis'ta. One versed in diseases or affections of the mind.

PSYCHOR'AGES, (ψυχωραγος,) Agoni'zans, Moribundus, Mor'ibund, Fey, Fee, Fie, (psycho, and ραγη, 'rupture,') Dying; in Articulo Mortis, "in the article of death;" in extre'mis. Moribund means, also, one who is dying.

PSYCHORAGIA, (ψυχωραγια,) Agony, Death.

PSYCHORRHAGIA, (ψυχωρραγια,) Agony, Death.

PSYCHO'SIS, (psyche and osis.) Neurosis of the intellect. Disease of the mind; Psychop'athy, Psychonose'ma, Psychopathi'a.

PSYCHOTHERAPEIA, (psyche, and θεραπεωω, 'I attend upon the sick,') Treatment of disease through the mind.

PSYCHOTICA, (from ψυχω, 'to animate,')
Analeptica.

PSYCHOTRIA CROCEA, Palicourea crocea—

p. Emetica, Ipecacuanha.

PSYCHOTROPHUM, (ψυχο, and τροφειν, 'to nourish,') Betonica officinalis.

PSYCHROLUSIA, Psychrolu'stron, (Ψυχρολουσια, from ψυχρος, 'cold,' and λουω, 'I wash,') A cold bath.

PSYCHROPHOBIA, (Ψυχρος, 'cold,' and φοβος, 'fear,') Dread of cold, especially of cold water. Impressibility to cold.

PSYCHTICA, (ψυκτικός, 'cooling,') Refrigerants.

PSYCHUS, (ψυχος,) Cold.

PSYDRACIA, quasi ψυκρα ὑδρακια, 'cold drops,' (Ψυδρακια, from ψυδραξ, gen. Ψυδρακος, 'a small bladder or pimple,') The ancients sometimes used this term for pimples; at others, for vesicles.

Willan and Bateman define Psydracium to be, a small pustule, often irregularly circumscribed, producing but a slight elevation of the cuticle, and terminating in a laminated scab. Many of the psydraeia usually appear together, and become confluent; and, after the discharge of pus, they pour out a thin, watery humour; which frequently forms an irregular incrustation. Frank limits the term to a psoriform eruption, which differs from itch in not originating from an insect, and is not contagious;—perhaps the lichen. Authors have differed regarding its acceptation.

PSYDRACIA ACNE, Acne.

PSYDRACIUM, sing. of Psydracia.

PSYLLIUM, (from ψυλλον, ψυλλα, or ψυλλος, 'a flea,' from the likeness of the seeds,) Plantago psyllium—p. Erectum, Plantago psyllium.

PTARMICA, (παρμηκη; from παρμεν, 'to sneeze,') Achillea ptarmica—p. Montana, Arnica montana.

PTARMICUM, (παρμηκον,) Errhine, Sternutatory.

PTARMUS, (παρμος,) Sneezing.

PTELEA, (πτελεα,) Ulmus.

PTELEA TRIFOLIATA, Shrubby tresfoil, Swamp dogwood, Stink'ing ash, Stink'ing prairie bush, Wingsed, Wufer ash, Hop tree; indigenous. Order, Xanthoxylaceae. Flowering in June. Is said to be possessed of antiperiodic virtues, and to be anthelmintic.

PTERIS, (πτερις, 'a wing,' from the shape of its leaves,) Polypodium filix mas.

PTERIS AQUILINA, Pteris, Thelypteris, Filix Nympheæ seu fœmininæ, Asplenium aquilinum, Common Brake or Bracken, Female Fern; Eagle Fern, Brack'een (F.) Fougère femelle, La grande Fougère. Nat. Ord. Filices. The root is considered to be anthelmintic; and as efficacious as that of the male fern in cases of tapeworm.

PTERIS PALUSTRIS, Asplenium filix fœmina.

PTERNA, (πτερινα and πτερνη,) Calcaneum.

PTERNIUM, (πτερνιον, dim. of pterna,) Calcaneum.

PTERNOBATES, (πτεροβατης, from pterna, and βανω, 'to walk,') Caleigradus.

PTEROCARPUS ERINACEA, see Kino—p. Marsupium, see Kino—p. Sandalinus, P. Santalinus.

PTEROCARPUS SANTALINUS, P. Santalinius, (πτερον, 'a wing,' and καρπος, 'fruit,') Santalum seu Sandalium Indicum, Red Sanders or Saunder's Tree, (F.) Santal rouge. Ord. Leguminosæ. Scr. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. Red Saunders wood, Santalum, (Ph. U. S.,) Pterocarpus, (Ph. B. 1864,) Lignum sandalinius, is used only as a colouring matter: it gives to rectified spirit a fine deep red. The juice of this tree, like that of P. Draco, affords a species of Dragon's Blood.

PTEROCAULON PYNOSTACHYUM, (πτερον, 'a wing,' and καυλος, 'a stalk:' and πυκνος, 'thick,' and σπυγς, 'an ear or spike,') Conyza pycnostachya, Blackroot; indigenous. Order, Compositæ. The root is used as an alternative in the form of decoction. It is said to be possessed of cathartic properties.

PTEROS'PORA ANDROMEDE'Æ, (περον, 'a wing,' and σπαρα, 'seed,' in allusion to the singular wing borne by the seeds,) Scaly Dragouclair, Dragonroot, Ferreroo, Abany beech'drop. An indigenous plant, Nat. Ord. Monotropææ, Scr. Syst. Decandria Monogynia:—found in the State of New York, which blossoms in July. The root has been regarded as an anthelmintic, diuretic, emmenagogue, &c.: but is not used.

PTERYG'ION, Pterygium, (περυγιον, dim. of pteryx, 'a wing,') Al'a, Web [?], Web eye [?], Pin and web [?], O'nyx, Pyo'is, U'guis, (F.) Drapeau, Ouglet. A varicose excrescence of the conjunctiva, of a triangular shape, and commonly occurring at the inner angle of the eye; whence it extends over the cornea. Sometimes two or three pterygia occur on the same eye, and cover the whole cornea with a thick veil, which totally prevents vision. According to Scarpa, the ancients gave the name Pauiculus to this last complication. If the pterygion cannot be dispelled by means of discutient collyria, it must be removed by the scissors.

PTERYGIUM, Pterygion, Scapula—p. Digiti, Paronychia—p. Lardaceum, Pinguecula—p. Pingue, Pinguecula.

PTERYGO, in the composition of anatomical terms, means relating, or appertaining, to the pterygoid processes.

PTERYGO-ANGULI-MAXILLARE, Pterygoideus internus—p. Colli-maxillaire, Pterygoideus externus—p. Maxillaire, graud, Pterygoideus internus—p. Maxillaire, petit, Pterygoideus externus—p. Palatine canal, Pterygoid canal.

PTERYGOPALATINE, Pterygopalati'nis. That which belongs to the pterygoid process and palate.

PTERYGOPALATINE ARTERY or Superior pharyngeal is a very small artery, and is given off by the internal maxillary at the bottom of the zygomatic fossa: after having passed through the pterygopalatine canal, it is distributed to the superior part of the pharynx, the sphenoid bone, and the Eustachian tube.

PTERYGOPALATINE CANAL'. A small canal, formed by the internal ala of the pterygoid process, and the palate bone. It gives passage to the vessels of the same name.

PTERYGOPHARYNGEUS, Constrictor pharyngis—p. Staphylinus, Circumflexus.

PTERYGOSTAPHYLINUS INTERNUS, Llevator palati—p. Sydesmo-staphyly-pharyngien, Constrictor pharyngis.

PTERYGODES, (πτερυγώδες, from pteryx, and odes,) Alatus.

PTERYGOID, Pterygoi'des, Pterygoide'us, Alifor'is, (pteryx, and αἶος, 'form,') A name given to two processes at the inferior surface of the sphenoid bone; the two laminae which form them having been compared to wings. These ala or wings or processes,—Processus alifor'is,—have been distinguished, according to their position, into internal (entopterygoi'd) and external.

PTERYGOID ARTERY, Vid'ian Artery, Rami'nis Duc'tus Pterygoide'i, Arte'ria pharynge'æ superioris, arises from the internal maxillary artery, at the bottom of the zygomatic fossa, and enters the pterygoid canal with the nerve of the same name, to proceed to be distributed on the Eustachian tube and velum palati. The name, pterygoi'd arteries, is likewise given to the branches, which the internal maxillary and some of its divisions, as the meningeal media, and posterior temporalis profunda, furnish to the pterygoid muscles, behind the neck of the lower jaw.

PTERYGOID BONE, Sphenoid.

PTERYGOID CANAL', Vid'ian canal', Duc'tus pte-

rygoideus. Ca nalis Vidianus, (F.) Conduit pterygoïdien ou Vidian, Pterygopalatine canal, is a narrow channel, which traverses, in a direction from before to behind, the base of the pterygoid process, and gives passage to the pterygoid nerve. The foramina of the sphenoid, which terminate the canals, have the same epithets applied to them.

PTERYGOID FOS'SA, Fos'sa Pterygoïde'a, (F.) Fosse pterygoïdienne ou pterygoïde, is the depression which separates the two laminae or alae of the pterygoid process.

PTERYGOID MUS'LES, Ala' res mus'culi, Aliformes mus'culi, are two in number. 1. The Pterygoïde'us exter'nus seu mi'nor, (F.) Pterygocolli-maxillaire, Petit Pterygo-maxillaire (Ch.) Petit pterygoïdien, Pterygoïdien externe, is a thick, short muscle, which arises, by short aponeuroses, from the outer surface of the external ala of the pterygoid process, and from the outer surface of the great ala of the sphenoid bone; and is inserted at the anterior part of the neck of the lower jawbone, and the corresponding part of the interarticular fibrocartilage. This muscle draws the condyle of the lower jaw and the interarticular ligament forwards. It carries the chin forwards, and to the opposite side. If the two external pterygoids act together, the jaw is carried directly forwards. 2. The Pterygoïdeus internus seu ma'jor, Masse'ter internus, Latens in O'ry, (F.) Grand Pterygo-maxillaire, Pterygo-anguli-maxillaire, Grand Pterygoïdien ou Pterygoïdien interne. A thick, quadrilateral muscle, which is attached by short and very strong aponeuroses; above, to the pterygoid fossa, whence it proceeds downwards, backwards, and outwards, to be inserted into the inner surface of the ramus of the lower jaw, near its angle. This muscle raises the lower jaw, and carries it a little forwards. It also performs the grinding motion.

PTERYGOID NERVES. These are two in number. 1. The Pterygoid or Vidian Nerve. It arises from the posterior part of the sphenopalatine ganglion; traverses the Vidian canal of the sphenoid; and, beyond, divides into two filaments. 1. A superior or cranial, Nervus Superficialis sive petrosus, which ascends into the cranium, and enters the hiatus of Fallopius to unite with the facial nerve. 2. An inferior or carotid, Nervus profundus seu ma'jor, which traverses the carotid canal, and unites with the ascending branches of the superior cervical ganglion of the trisplanchnic. The Pterygoid Nerve, properly so called, Nervus musculi pterygoïdei, is given off by the inferior maxillary branch of the 5th pair.

PTERYGOID PROCESSES, see Pterygoid.

PTERYGOIDEUS, Pterygoid.

PTÉRYGOÏDIEN EXTERNE, Pterygoideus externus—p. grand ou interne, Pterygoideus internus—p. Petit, Pterygoideus externus.

PTERYGO'MA, gen. Pterygo'matis, (πτερυγωμα, from pteryx and oma, 'a projecting or pendulous body.')

A swelling of the vulva, which prevents coition.

PTERYX, gen. Pter'ygis, (πτερυξ, gen. πτερυγος), Ala.

PTILOS, (πτίλος), Deplumatio, Madarosis.

PTILO'SIS, (πτίλωσις), Deplumatio, Madarosis.

PTISANA, (πτισανη, 'peeled barley, and a decoction of the same,') Tisane—p. Communis, Decoctum hordei compositum—p. Hippocratica, Decoctum hordei.

PTISSANA, (πτισανη), Tisane.

PTOCHIA'TER, Ptochi'atrus, (πτωχος, 'poor,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.')

A physician to the poor, or to an establishment for the poor.

PTOCHIATRIA. Practice amongst the poor. Also, an institution for the treatment of the diseases of the poor.

PTOCHOCOMI'UM, (πτωχος, 'poor,' and κομω,

'I take care of;') Ptochodochi'um, Ptochei'um, Ptochotrophe'um. An almshouse. An hospital for the poor.

PTOCHODOCHIUM, (πτωχος, 'poor,' and δεχομαι, 'to receive,')

Ptochocomium.

PTOCHOTROPHEUM, (πτωχοτροφειον, from πτωχος, 'poor,' and τρεφειν, 'to nourish,')

Ptochocomium.

PTOMA, gen. Pto'matis, (πτωμα), Carver.

PTOSIS, (πτωσις), Prolapsus—p. Bulbi oculi, Exophthalmia.

PTOSIS IRIDIS, Iridoce'le, Her'nia seu Proci'dent'ia seu Prolap'sus seu Staphylo'ma Iridis, Iridopto'sis. A prolapsus of the iris through a wound of the cornea. It is known by a blackish tubercle, which projects a little from the cornea in various forms, and which, owing to its supposed resemblance to the head of a fly, has been called Myioceph'alon, and Myoceph'alon, (μυια, 'a fly,' and κεφαλη, 'head,')

PTOSIS PALPEBRE, Blepharoptosis.

PTYALOGOGUE, (ptyalum, and αγω, 'to lead,')

Sialogogue.

PTYALIN, (from ptyalum), see Saliva.

PTYALISED, Salivated.

PTYALISM, Salivation.

PTYALOGOGUE, (ptyalum, and αγω, 'to drive,')

Sialogogue.

PTYALUM, (πταλον), Saliva.

PTYELUM, (πτελον), Saliva, Sputum.

PTYSIS, (πτωσις), Expectoration.

PTYSMA, gen. Ptysm'atis, (πτυσμα), Saliva, Sputum.

PTYSMAGOGUE, (ptyσμα, and αγω, 'to drive,')

Sialogogue.

PTYSMATIS'CHESIS, Ptysmatos'chesis, (ptysma, and αχαι, 'to retain,')

Suppression of pulmonary expectoration.

PTYSMATOSCHESIS, Ptysmatische'sis.

PVANTEUR, (from putere, 'to smell badly,')

Dysodia.

PUBENS, 'at the age of puberty,' Ephebus.

PUBER, Ephebus.

PUBERAL, Pubera'lis, Puber'ic or Puber'icæ, Puber'icus. Relating or appertaining to the age of puberty—as 'a puberal disease.'

PUBÈRE, Ephebus.

PUBERIC, Puberal.

PUBERTAS, Ephēbia, Puberty.

PUBERTY, Pu'bertas, He'hē, Pu'bes, Aphrodis'ia, Ephēbi'a, Ephē'bia, Ephē'botes, Ephēbo'synē, Pubes'cence, (F.) Puberté, (from pubescere, 'to begin to have hair on the chin and sexual organs.')

The period of life at which young people of both sexes are pubes'cent or pubic. According to the civil law, puberty occurs at 12 years in females, and 14 in males. The period varies somewhat in different climates, and in different individuals of the same climate.

PUBES, Pu'bis, Epis'chion, Oteis, Pec'ten: the Pu'bic re'gion. The middle part of the hypogastric region; so called, because it is covered with hair, in both sexes, at the period of puberty. The hair is also called Pu'bes, Lanu'go seu Pi'ti Pudendo'rum, Planta'rium, Fem'inal; and, of old, Epicten'ion and pubertas signified the same. See Tressoria.

PUBES, Puberty.

PUBESCENCE, Puberty.

PUBESCENT, see Puberty.

PUBIÆUS, Pubic.

PUBIC, Pu'bian, Pu'bicus, Pubi'cus, (F.)

Pubien. That which belongs to or concerns the pubis.

PUBIC ARCH, Arch of the Pu'bis, (F.) Arcaele pubienne. The arch at the anterior part of the inferior circumference of the pelvis. It is more expanded in the female than in the male, to correspond with the additional functions which she has to execute.

PUBIC ARTICULATION, Symphysis Pu'bis, results from the junction of the ossa pubis. The medium of union is cartilage.

PUBIC LIG'AMENTS are two very solid, fibrous fasciæ, situate before and beneath the symphysis pubis, which they strengthen. The one is called the anterior pubic ligament; the other the inferior or subpubic.

PUBIC RE'GION, Re'gio Pu'bis. The region of the pubes.

PUBIEN, Pubic.

PUBIO-COCCYGIEN-ANNULAIRE, Pubio-coccygeus annularis. Dumas gave this name to the levator ani and ischio-coccygeus, which he considers a single muscle. See Levator Ani.

PUBIO FÉMORAL, Pectinalis—p. Femoralis, Adductor longus femoris — p. Ombilical, Pyramidalis abdominis — p. Prostaticus, Compressor prostatae — p. Sous-ombilical, Pyramidalis abdominis — p. Sternal, Rectus abdominis — p. Urethral, see Compressor Urethrae.

PUBIS, Pubes, Pubis os.

PUBIS OS, Os Pect'linis, Episei'on, Episi'on, Epis'chion, Sharebone, Barbone. (Sc.) Arkbein.

The anterior part of the os innominatum; so called because it corresponds to the genital organs and pubic region. The angle of the pubis is formed by the union of the body and rami of each side.

PUBLICÆ PARTES, 'public parts.' Those organs are so called, the object of whose functions is the nutrition of all the others. Such are the digestive and respiratory organs.

PUCINIA FAVI, (after Th. Puccini, Professor of Anatomy in Florence), see Fungus.

PUCE, (from pulex, gen. pu'licis.) Pulex irritans — p. de Bourgogne, see Anthrax — p. Maligie, see Anthrax — p. Pénétrante, Chique.

PUCELAGE, (from [L.] puella, 'a young girl,') Virginity.

PUCELLE, Virgin.

PUCHURY, see Pichurim beans.

PUCHYRY, see Pichurim beans.

PUCKLE, Papula.

PUDDINGGRASS, Mentha pulegium.

PUDDINGPIPE TREE, Cassia fistula.

PUDENDA, pl. of pudendum, (from pudere, 'to be ashamed,') Genital organs — p. Muliebria, Vulva — p. Virorum, Pudibilia.

PUDEND'AGRA, (pudeuda, and aypa, 'a seizure,') According to some, this term means pain in the genital parts; Do'lor pudeud'rum, Men'tulagra, Edœdym'ia: according to others, it is synonymous with syphilis.

PUDENDAGRA PRURIENS, Prurigo pudendi muliebri.

PUDEND'AL, Pudenda'lis. Relating or pertaining to the pudenda.

PUDENDAL HER'NIA. Hernia, which descends between the vagina and ramus ischii, and forms an oblong tumour in the labium; traceable in the pelvis as far as the os uteri.

PUDENDALIS, Pudendal.

PUDENDUM, FEMALE, Vulva — p. Muliebri, Vulva.

PUDENDUS, Pubic.

PUDIBIL'IA. The male genital organs; Genitalia V'iri, Viril'ia, Penis'ia, Instrumenta, Pudenda virorum, Virilia membra, Andrædæ'a.

PUD'IC, Pud'icus, Pudend'us, (F.) Honteux, (from pudere, 'to be ashamed,') That which causes shame. A name given to the genital organs as well as to different other parts.

PUDIC ARTERIES are distributed to the organs of generation. They are,—1. The internal Pud'ic, Arteria Pud'ica, A. pudenda communis, (F.) Artère honteuse interne, A. Sous-pubienne (Ch.), Genital Artery. It is furnished by the hypogastric, and divides into two branches; the one — the inferior or perineal — which gives off the inferior hemorrhoidal and the artery of the septum; the other — the superior, (F.) Ischiopéniene — which furnishes the transverse perineal artery, and divides into two branches; the artery of the corpus cavernosum, and the dorsalis penis. This latter, in the female, has the name Dorsalis Clitoridis. 2. The external Pud'ic Arteries, (F.) Artères scrotales ou vulvaires (Ch.), A. honteuses externes, which are two in number. The one is superficial or subcutaneous, and the other deep-seated or subaponeurotic. They are given off from the femoral artery, or some one of its branches; and are distributed to the external parts of generation.

PUDIC NERVE, (F.) Nerf honteux ou ischio-pénien ou Ischio-clitorien, is a branch furnished by the sacral plexus, which is distributed to the genital organs; and, especially, to the penis in man, and the clitoris in woman.

PUELLA, Girl.

PUELLUS, (contracted from puerulus,) A little boy.

PUER, Boy, Child, Infans.

Puera, Girl.

PUERILE, Puer'ilis, (from puer, 'a child,') (F.) Puéril. Appertaining or relating to childhood.

Respiration puérile ou exagérée ou supplémentaire ou hyperémiculaire:—a term applied to the respiration when it is heard loud through the stethoscope, as in healthy children.

PUERILITAS, Dementia of the aged.

PUERITIA, see Age.

PUPER'ERA, (puer, and parere, 'to bring forth,') To'kas, Lo'chos, Enis'a, Le'cho, a Lying-in woman, (F.) Femme en Couche, Accouchée. A female in child-bed. One recently delivered. The condition of a woman, recently delivered, is termed, in France, Puerpéralité.

PUPER'ERAL, Puerpera'lis. Relating to parturition and its consequences.

PUPER'ERAL CONVULSIONS, Eclampsia gravidarum et parturientium.

PUPER'ERAL FE'VER. Any fever occurring during the puerperal state—Febris puerpera'rum, Lechop'gra, Lochiocaliti'is, Lochiop'gra, Lochop'gra, Mæ'tria, Child-bed fever. Most commonly restricted to a malignant variety of peritonitis.

PUPER'ERALITÉ, see Puerpera.

PUPER'ERUS, Parturient.

PUFF, ([D.] puffen, 'to blow,') Lycoperdon.

PUFFBALL, Lycoperdon, Leontodon taraxacum.

PUFF, VEILED, see Cavernous respiration.

PUFFINESS, Inflatio, Sufflatio, Tume'factio moll'is, (F.) Bouffissure, Boursouffure. A soft intumescence, without redness, which may be partial or general, and be produced by accumulation of serous fluid, extravasation of blood, effusion of air into the subcutaneous areolar tissue, &c. Puffiness is most frequently seen in the face and legs; and sometimes appears around a wound.

PUGIL'LUS, (dim. of pugnis, 'the fist,') Drac, Dra'chion, Drag'ma, Drag'mis, (F.) Pincé:

The quantity of any substance, which may be taken with the ends of two or three fingers. The eighth part of a handful.

PUGNUS, Manipulus.

PUGTEETH, Canine teeth.

PUISSANCE DU MOULE INTÉRIEUR, 'power of the internal mould,' Plastic force.

PUKE, Emetic.

PUKEWEED, Lobelia inflata.

PUKING, Vomiting, Regurgitation.

PULEGIUM, (from pulex, 'a flea,' to which the odour is disagreeable.) Mentha pulegium—p. Cervinum, Mentha cervina.

PULEX, gen. Pulicis, P. Irritans, P. Vulgaris. The common flea, (F.) Puce. A parasitic insect found on the bodies of man and animals.

PULEX PENETRANS, Chique—p. Vulgaris, P. Irritans.

PULICARIA DYSENTERICA, (from pulex, 'a flea,' to which the odour is disagreeable,) Inula dysenterica.

PULICARIS, Pulicula'ris, (F.) Pulicaire. An epithet given to cutaneous eruptions resembling flea-bites;—and, also, to diseases in which such eruptions occur.

PULICARIS HERBA, Plantago psyllium.

PULLEY, Trochlea.

PÜLLNA, PIL'NA OR BIL'NA, MINERAL WATERS OF. These well known Bohemian bitter springs contain sulphates of soda and magnesia, and chloride of magnesium.

PULLULAT'ION, Pullula'tio, (from pullulare, pullulatum, 'to bud,' 'budding,') A morbid production, which buds, as it were,—condyloma, for example.

PULMO, gen. Pulmonis; (by transposition of the letter l from pleumon.) Pneumon, Pleumon, Spiramentum animæ, Ergasterion spiritûs, Flabellum et ventila'brum cordis, Lights. The essential organ of respiration, which is double, and occupies the two sides of the chest. The lungs, which are of a spongy, soft, flexible, compressible, and dilatable structure, fill exactly the two cavities of the thorax, and are separated from each other by the mediastinum and the heart. The right lung, which is shorter and broader than the left, is divided, by two oblique fissures, into three unequal lobes, Lobi seu Alex pulmo'num. The left has only two lobes, and consequently only one fissure. At the internal surface of those organs, which is slightly concave, there is, about the middle, a pedicle, formed by the bronchia and pulmonary vessels, and called, by anatomists, the root of the lungs, (F.) Racine des Pommons. Essentially, the lungs are composed of prolongations and ramifications of the bronchia, and of the pulmonary arteries and veins,—the divisions of which are supported by a fine, areolar tissue.

When the surface of the lungs is examined in a clear light, we may see, even through the pleura, that their parenchyma is formed by the aggregation of a multitude of small vesicles, of an irregularly spheroid or ovoid shape, full of air, and separated by white and opaque septa, constituting lozengeshaped spaces, which are called lob'ules—lob'uli seu insulæ pulmonares—and which are separated by interlobular areolar tissue. These lobules do not communicate with each other. The vesicles are called Aircells, Air or Lung Vesicles, Spiramenta seu Spiramina seu Cellule Pulmo'num. See Cellules, bronchic. They, who regard the bronchial tubes as terminating in elongated cavities, have termed those cavities Airsacs, Infundibula, Malpighian vesicles, Terminal cavities, &c., and the cuplike cavities, observed in these, have been called alve'oli. They are the aircells.

Along the partitions or septa is deposited, in greater or less quantity, black pulmonary matter, (F.) Matière pulmonaire noire, as it has been called, which seems to be normal. Sometimes it is seen in points; at others, in spots. The colour of the lungs varies according to age and other circumstances. In youth, it is more red; and afterwards, grayish or bluish; often, as if marbled. The pleura pulmonalis is their investing membrane. The air is carried to the lungs by means of the trachea and bronchia. The black venous blood, which requires oxygenation, is conveyed to them from the heart by the pulmonary artery; and when it has undergone this change, it is returned to the heart by the pulmonary veins. The blood-vessels inservient to the nutrition of the lungs are the bronchial arteries. The pulmonary lymphatics are very numerous. Some are superficial; others, deepseated. They pass, for the most part, into the bronchial ganglions or glands. The nerves are furnished by the pulmonary plexus.

PULMOMETER, (pulmo, and μετρον, 'a measure,') Spirometer.

PULMOMETRY, see Spirometer.

PULMONAIRE, Pulmonaria, Pulmonary—p. en Arbre, Lichen pulmonaria—p. de Chêne, Lichen pulmonaria—p. des Français, Hieracium murorum.

PULMONAL, see Pulmonary.

PULMONARIA, P. Officina'lis seu Maculata seu Maculosa, Lung'wort, Spot'ted Lung'wort, Jerusalem Cow'slip, Jerusalem Sage, Spot'ted Comfrey, (F.) Pulmonaire, Sauge de Jerusalem. Ord. Boraginaceæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. The leaves of this plant have been used as demulcents and pectorals; partly from their resemblance to lungs—hence the name, from pulmo, gen. pulmonis, 'the lung'—and partly because they have a slightly mucilaginous taste. The plant is not worthy of notice.

PULMONARIA, Pneumonia—p. Arborea, Lichen pulmonarius—p. Gallica, Hieracium murorum—p. Officialis, Pulmonaria—p. Virginica, Mertensia Virginica.

PULMONARY, Pulmonaria, Pulmonalis, (F.) Pulmonaire, (from pulmo.) That which relates or belongs to the lungs.

Son pulmonal (F.), 'pulmonal or pulmonary sound,' is the sound rendered by the lung on percussion. It means, also, a similar sound rendered on percussing other parts.

PULMONARY ARTERY, Arteria pulmonaris, Vena arterio'sa, arises from the upper and left part of the right ventricle of the heart; whence it passes obliquely upwards and to the left side; dividing into two trunks, opposite the second dorsal vertebra—one passing to each lung. At its origin, it is furnished with three sigmoid or semilunar valves. It carries the blood to the lungs for aeration.

PULMONARY MATTER, BLACK, see Pulmo.

PULMONARY PLEX'US, Plexus pulmonaris: A considerable nervous network, situate behind the bronchia, which is formed by the filaments of the pneumogastric nerve or par vagum, and by other filaments from the inferior cervical ganglion and the first thoracic ganglia. This plexus forms a kind of areolar web, with numerous meshes of different sizes, in which vessels are lodged, surrounded by much areolar tissue. The plexus sends filaments to the bronchia, which they accompany to their extremities.

PULMONARY VEINS, Venæ pulmonares, Arteriæ venosæ. These arise in the lungs from the final terminations of the arteries of the same name; collect in ramusculi and rami of greater and greater size, and ultimately unite in four trunks, two of which issue from each lung to open into the left auricle of the heart. The pulmonary veins have the same structure as the other veins of the body; from which they differ, in conveying arterial blood, as the pulmonary artery differs from the others in conveying venous blood. They carry the blood back to the heart after aeration.

PULMONES TARTARIZATI, Lithiasis pulmonum.

PULMONIA, (from pulmo.) Phthisis pulmonalis, Pneumonia.

PULMONIC, Pulmonicus, Pneumonius, Pulmonarius, Pneumonius, (F.) Pulmonique, Pneumonique. One affected with phthisis—one labouring under disease of the lungs. Any thing relating to or belonging to the lungs. A medicine for the lungs.

PULMONITIS, (pulmo, and itis), Pneumonia.

PULP, Pulpa, Pulpa'men, Sarx, (F.) Pulpe, Pulpolite. The soft and parenchymatous parts of vegetables reduced to a paste by the operation of pulping. Applied, also, to parts of the human body, which have the characters of, or resemble, a pulp.

PULP OF THE FINGERS, (F.) Pulpe des doigts. The fleshy extremity of the fingers.

PULP OF THE TOOTH, Dental pulp.

PULPA, Pulp—p. Cassia, see Cassia fistula—p. Dentis, Dental pulp—p. Pili, see Hair—p. Pruni, see Pruni pulpa—p. Prunorum sylvestrium condita, Conserva pruni sylvestris—p. Tamarindi, see Tamarindi pulpa.

PULPA TESTIS, Parenchyma testis. The parenchyma of the testis.

PULPAMEN, Pulp.

PULPATION, Pulping.

PULPE, Pulp—p. Cérébrale, see Cerebrum—p. Dentaire, Dental pulp—p. des Doigts, Pulp of the fingers.

PULPEUX, Pulpy.

PULPEZIA, Apoplexy.

PULPING, Pulpa'tion, Pulpa'tio, (from pulp.)

An operation, the object of which is to reduce certain vegetable substances to a pulp. For this purpose, they are bruised in a mortar, and then passed through a hair sieve, by the aid of a wooden spatula, called a Pulper, (F.) Pulpoire.

PULPOIRE, see Pulping.

PULPOLITE, Pulp.

PULP'Y, Pulpo'sus, (from pulpa.) (F.) Pulpeux. Full of pulp.

PULQUE, see Agave Americana.

PULS EX OVIS et LACTE, 'pap of eggs and milk,' Oogala.

PULSATIF, (from pulsare, 'to beat,') Throbbing.

PULSATILLA NIGRICANS, Anemone pratensis—p. Patens, Anemone patens—p. Pratensis, Anemone pratensis—p. Vulgaris, Anemone pulsatilla.

PULSATILLA NOIRE, Anemone pratensis—p. des Prés, Anemone pratensis.

PULSATIO, (pulsare, pulsatum, 'to agitate,') Pulsation—p. Cordis, Palpitation.

PULSA'TION, Pulsa'tio, Sphyg'mus, Sphyx'is, Pede'sis, Pedeth'mos, (from pulsare, pulsatum, 'to beat,') (F.) Battement. The beating of the heart and arteries. Also, the beating felt in an inflamed part.

PULSATIVUS, Throbbing.

PULSATORY, Throbbing.

PULSE, Pul'sus, Pulsa'tio, Pul'sus seu Ictus cordis et arteriarum, Incur'sus arteriarum, Sphyg'mus, Sphyg'ma, Diasphyx'is, (F.) Pouls, (from pellere, pulsam, 'to beat,') Beating of the arteries, produced by the afflux of the blood propelled by the heart in its contractions. For the sake of convenience, we choose the radial artery at the wrist to detect the precise character of the pulse. These characters relate to the number of pulsations in a given time; to their degrees of quickness; hardness and strength; to the equality or inequality either of the pulsations themselves or of their intervals; to the development or fullness of the artery, and to the different impressions it may produce on the finger.

The following estimates have been made of the pulse at various ages :

| AGES.              | NUMBER OF PULSATIONS PER MINUTE. |            |            |

It does not appear that the pulse of the aged is less frequent, but the contrary. In general it is more frequent in females and in irritable persons than in males and those of an opposite temperament. In the healthy state, the pulse, besides having the proper number of pulsations, is neither hard nor unusually soft; it is moderately developed; of a medium strength; and perfectly equal, both as regards the pulsations and their intervals. In disease it wanders, more or less, from these physiological conditions. The different characters of the pulse that have been recorded are remarkably numerous. In a dictionary, it is necessary to detail them, although many of them are not now regarded, and some are ridiculous.

PULSE, AR'DENT, Pul'sus ar'dens, (F.) Pouls ardens, Pouls élevé. One which seems to raise itself to a point in order to strike the finger.

PULSE BREATH, see Breath, pulse.

PULSE, CAP'RIZANT, Pul'sus Capri'zans seu dorcadis'sans seu gazel'lans seu fusa'tis, Goaleap pulse, (F.) Pouls caprisant. One which seems to leap, like a goat, as it were; an imperfect dilatation of the artery being succeeded by a fuller and a stronger one.

PULSE, COM'PLEX, (F.) Pouls combiné ou composé, P. compliqué. A pulse which has the character of several critical pulses united.

PULSE, CONTRACT'ED, (F.) Pouls serré ou concentré. One whose pulsations are narrow, deep, and slightly hard. See Concentration.

PULSE, CONVULSIVE, Pul'sus convulsi'vus, (F.) Pouls convulsif. That which is unequally frequent or unequally hard; in short, which resembles the irregular pulsations of a muscular fibre in a state of convulsion.

PULSE, CRIT'ICAL, Pulsus crit'icus. A pulse, which, after having possessed the characters of irritation, becomes free, open, soft, &c.

PULSE, DECURTATE, Pulsus myurus: see, also, Myurus.

PULSE, DEEP, Pulsus profundus, (F.) Pouls profond. One which cannot be felt without difficulty, and without strong pressure by the finger.

PULSE, DEFICIENT, Pulsus deficiens seu an-nuus et circum-nuus, P. Flickering, (F.) Pouls défaillant, P. insensible. One which seems, every instant, about to cease.

PULSE, DEPRESSED, Pulsus depressus, (F.) Pouls déprimé. That which is deep and weak.

PULSE, DEVELOPED, (F.) Pouls développé. That which is broad, full, strong, and frequent.

PULSE, DICROTIC, Pulsus Dicrotus seu bicrotus seu intestinalis seu biferiens seu mallearis seu interiens seu duplex, (F.) Pouls dicrote ou rebondissant ou redoublé. That in which the finger is struck twice at each pulsation; once lightly, the other time more strongly.

PULSE, EQUAL, Pulsus æqualis. That in which the pulsations resemble each other, and return at equal intervals.

PULSE, FEBRILE, Pulsus febrilis. One very frequent.

PULSE, FEEBLE, P. Weak, Pulsus debilis, (F.) Pouls faible. One which strikes the finger feebly.

PULSE, FILIFORM, P. thready. One which resembles a thread slightly vibrating.

PULSE, FLICKERING, Pulse, deficient.

PULSE, FORMICANT, Pulsus formicans, (F.) Pouls formicant. One which resembles, by being small and scarcely perceptible, the motion of an ant.

PULSE, FREQUENT, (F.) Pouls agité ou précipité. One which strikes more frequently than usual in a given time.

PULSE, FULL, Pulsus plenus, (F.) Pouls plein. One which gives the notion of great repletion in the vessel.

PULSE, GOATLEAP, P. Caprizant.

PULSE, GUTTURAL, Pulsus gutturalis, (F.) Pouls guttural. A pulse which has been supposed to indicate the termination of affections of the throat.

PULSE, HARD, Pulsus durus, (F.) Puls dur. That in which the pulp of the finger seems to yield to the pulsation.

PULSE, HECTIC, Pulsus hecticus. The weak, frequent pulse observed in hectic fever.

PULSE, HEMORRHOIDAL, (F.) Pouls des Hémorrhoides. A critical pulse, announcing the appearance of the hemorrhoidal flux. It is described as unequal;—the pulsations not being alike in force, and still less the intervals.

PULSE, HEPATIC, (F.) Pouls du Foie. A pulse imagined to indicate affections of the liver. It is not worthy of description.

PULSE, INFERIOR, (F.) Pouls inférieur ou abdominal ou ventral. One supposed to announce evacuations below the diaphragm.

PULSE, INTERCURRENT, Pulsus intercurrentis seu intercicidens. One in which a superfluous pulsation seems to occur from time to time.

PULSE, INTERMITTENT, (F.) Pouls intercadent. One in which the pulsations fail from time to time.

PULSE, INTES'TINAL, (F.) Pouls des intestins, P. de la diarrhée. A critical pulse, presumed to announce an evacuation by the intestines.

PULSE, INTRICATE, Pulsus intricatus, (F.) Pouls embarrassé. That which is but little developed and unequally slow.

PULSE, IRREGULAR, Pulsus anormalis. One whose pulsations are unequal, and return at unequal intervals.

PULSE OF IRRITATION, Pulsus ab irritatio-nē seu neri-nus seu acriticus. One which is frequent, hard, and contracted.

PULSE, JARRING, P. Vibrating—p. Jerking, Pulse, sharp.

PULSE, LAX'GUID, (F.) Pouls languissant. A slow and feeble pulse.

PULSE, LARGE, Pulsus crassus seu mag-nus, (F.) Pouls grand, P. large. That which is large and full.

PULSE, LONG. One which strikes the finger to a great extent in length.

PULSE, LOW, Pulsus humilis, (F.) Pouls bas. One in which the pulsations are scarcely perceptible.

PULSE, NA'SAL, (F.) Pouls nasal ou capital ou du Nez. One supposed to announce the end of an irritation in the nasal fosse.

PULSE, NAT'URAL, (F.) Pouls naturel des adultes ou parfait ou des adultes ou modéré. One that is equal and regular in strength and frequency; compressible, and devoid of hardness.

PULSE, ORGANIC, (F.) Pouls organique. One which indicates the affected organ, or the organ by which an evacuation will take place.

PULSE, PECTORAL, (F.) Pouls de l'expectoration. A critical pulse, announcing the termination of some pulmonary irritation.

PULSE, QUICK. One which strikes sharply, but not forcibly, against the finger.

PULSE, REG'ULAR, Pulsus normalis seu regularis. One whose pulsations are equal, and succeed each other at equal intervals.

PULSE, RESISTING, (F.) Pouls résistant. One a little tense, a little hard.

PULSE, SHARP, (F.) Pouls prompt ou vite ou vif. One which strikes the finger sharply, rapidly. When to a greater extent, it is called a jerking pulse.

PULSE, SHARPTAILED, Pulsus myurus: see Myurus.

PULSE, SIM'PLE, Pulsus simplex. A critical pulse, indicating an evacuation by one organ only.

PULSE, SLOW, Pulsus tardus seu rarus, (F.) Pouls lent ou tardif ou rare. One which strikes the finger slowly.

PULSE, SMALL, Pulsus parvus, (F.) Pouls petit. One whose pulsations are slender and weak.

PULSE, SOFT, Pulsus mollis, (F.) Pouls mou. One which yields under the finger.

PULSE, STOM'ACHAL, (F.) Pouls stomacal ou de l'estomac. One supposed to announce an evacuation by the stomach.

PULSE, STRONG, Pulsus fortis, (F.) Pouls fort, P. véhément. One which strikes the finger strongly.

PULSE, SUPE'RIOR, Pulsus Superior, (F.) Pouls supérieur. A critical pulse, supervening on irritation of organs situate above the diaphragm.

PULSE, SUP'PLE, Pulsus elasticus, (F.) Pouls souple. One in which the pulsations have strength without hardness.

PULSE OF SWEAT, Pulsus Sudoralis, (F.) Pouls Sudoral ou de la sueur. A critical pulse, indicating an approaching perspiration.

PULSE, TENSE, P. Cordy, Pulsus tensus, (F.) Pouls tendu, P. roide. One in which the artery resembles a cord fixed at its two extremities. When resembling a wire, it is called wiry.

PULSE, THREADY, P. filiform.

PULSE, TREM'LOUS, Pulsus tremulus, (F.) Pouls tremblant ou palpitant. One in which each pulsation oscillates.

PULSE, UN'DULATING, Pulsus fluctuosus seu fluens seu incidens Solanii, (F.) Pouls ondulant ou ondoyant. One which resembles, in its movements, those of the waves.

PULSE, UNEQUAL, Pulsus inæqualis, (F.) Pouls inégal. One whose pulsations are not alike, or return at unequal intervals.

PULSE, URINAL, Pulsus urinæ, (F.) Pouls

de l'Urine. A critical pulse, fancied to denote an approaching evacuation of urine.

PULSE, UTERINE, Pul'sus uterinus, (F.) Poul's Uterine ou de la Matrice ou des Règles. One which indicates the flow of the menses, or the occurrence of metrorrhagia.

PULSE, VAGINAL, Pul'sus vagina'lis. The pulsation of the arteria vaginalis, which is increased in pregnancy, during abortion, labour, &c.

PULSE, VENOUS, Pulsus Venarum.

PULSE, VERMICULAR. That which imitates the movement of a worm.

PULSE, VIBRATING, Jar'ring Pulse. One in which the artery seems to vibrate like a musical string.

PULSE, WIRY, see Pulse, tense.

PULSELESS, Aphy'ctus, Devoid of pulsation.

PULSELESSNESS, Asphyxia.

PULSEY, Cataplasma.

PULSIFIC, Pul'sif'icus, (pulsus, 'pulse,' and facere, 'to make,') That which causes or excites pulsation.

PULSILEGIUM, Pulsilo'ginum, Pulsim'eter, (pulsus, and lego, 'I read,') Sphygmole'ginum, Sphygmon'eter, Sphygmoscop'ium, Sphyg'moscope. Any instrument for measuring the quickness or force of the pulse.

PULSIMANTA, (pulsus, and μαντα, 'divination,') The art of predicting or prognosticating by the pulse.

PULSIMETER, (pulsus, and μετρον, 'measure,') Pulsilegium.

PULVERIZABLE, Pul'verable. (From pulvis, gen. pulveris, 'powder,' and habilis, 'able,')

Capable of being reduced to powder.

PULVERIZATION, Pulverisa'tio, Pulvera'tio, Coniosto'sis, (F.) Pulvérisation. The operation of dividing substances, so as to reduce them to powder.

Most drugs are reduced to powder by persons who make it a special business, and who are called drug grinders. This is done on a large scale in drug mills; and the implements used are the grinding mill and the stamping mill. In the shop of the apothecary, pulverization is effected by the pestle and mortar, and the sieve.

Where substances require the addition of other bodies to facilitate their reduction to powder, — as where camphor needs a few drops of alcohol — the process is called pulverization by mediation.

PULVERMACHER'S CHAIN BATTERY, see Galvanism.

PULVÉROLÉS, see Pulvis.

PULVERULENT, Pulverulent'us, (from pulvis,) Reduced to the state of a fine powder. Covered, as it were, with dust. An epithet applied to the eyes when they appear dirty, and, as it were, sprinkled with dust, by reason of granulations or grayish striae, resulting from thickening of the mucous fluid of the conjunctiva.

unaccustomed to breathe the rarified atmosphere. It strongly resembles sea-sickness, with a most acute and depressing throbbing in the head. It does not often affect the respiration greatly.

PUNANS, (perhaps from puer, 'to stink,' and noz, 'the nose,') see Ozæna.

PUNAISE, Cimex.

PUNAISIE, Ozæna.

PUNCH, Rhi'zagra, (pungere, punctum, 'to prick,') Repulso'rium, (F.) Repoussoir. A surgical instrument used for extracting the stumps of teeth. See Lever.

Also, an agreeable alcoholic drink, made of spirit, wine, sugar, lemon juice, and water. Milk is sometimes substituted wholly or in part for the water; the lemon juice being left out and nutmeg added: it then forms Milk Punch. Punch, as a drink, is said to be of oriental origin, and to be derived from Persian puuji or Sanscrit paucha, 'five,' from the number of ingredients that entered into its composition [?].

PUNCTA, Punctum, Punctus, (pungere, punctum, 'to prick, to dot,') a point, a prick, a puncture.

PUNCTA OSSIFICATIO'NIS, Ossification, points of.

PUNCTURE, Punctura, Punctio, Cente'sis, Paracente'sis, Nyx'is, Tre'sis Punctura, (F.) Figure. A wound made by a pointed instrument, as a sword, bayonet, needle, thorn, &c. A puncture is, generally, of trifling consequence; but, sometimes, it becomes important from the parts implicated, and the after consequences.

PUNCTURE DOCTORS, Piqueurs médecins.

PUNCTURING, Compunctio, Paracente'sis, (F.) Ponction. The operation of opening, by means of a trocar, lancet, &c., any natural or accidental cavity, with the view of evacuating any fluid, effused or accumulated therein. Paracente'sis is a sort of puncturing.

PUNCTUS, 'a point,' Puncta—p. Ruber Saliens, Punctum saliens.

PUNGENT, (F.) Pongitif. Pain is said to be pungent, when it seems as if a pointed instrument was forced into the suffering part.

PUNICA GRANATUM, (Punica, 'Punic, Carthaginian,' whose colors were a deep red, ζαυζι;) The Pomegranate, Rho'a, Rhoe'a, Granat'um, (F.) Grenadier: Ord. Myrtaceæ. Ser. Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. The rind of the fruit, called Malico'rium, Malico'rium, Granati Fructus Cortex (Ph. U. S.); and the flowers—called Balans'tine flowers—are used in medicine. They have been employed both internally and externally as astringents. The seeds are called Cocco'nes. The portion, however, of the plant, that has attained most celebrity, is the bark of the root, Granati Rodi'eis Cortex (Ph. U. S.), which appears to be very efficacious in taenia. It is given in decoction, (Granat. rad. cort.  $\mathfrak{S}$ ij; Aque Oij, boiled to Oiss.) Dose,  $\mathfrak{f}$ ij, every half hour. Three or four doses are usually sufficient to expel the worm.

The bark contains a peculiar matter called Grenadin.

PUNK, Boletus igniarius.

PUOGENIA, Pyogenia.

PUPIL, Pupilla, Pupula, Pupill'io, Vis'io, Op'sis, Co'rè, Co'ra, Rhox, Fenes'tra seu Ni'grum seu Fora'men Oc'uli, Pruell'ia, Lu'men, Gle'uè, Sight or Ap'ple or Ball of the eye, (Sc.) Blak of the Eye, (Prov.) Candle, (F.) Pupille, Pruelle, (from pupa, 'a babe,' pupilla, 'a little babe;' so called from the image seen in the eye.) The aperture of the iris, through which the rays of light pass that have to impress the image of an object on the retina. This aperture can be dilated or contracted so as to allow a greater or smaller quantity of luminous rays to penetrate. The pupil, in man, is round, and by it the anterior and posterior chambers of the eye communicate with each other. In the fetus, during the first six months of gestation, it is closed by the pupillary membrane.

PUPIL CLOSURE OF THE, Synezisis.

PUPIL PIN'HOLE. A condition of the pupil in typhus, in which it is so contracted as to resemble a pinhole. It indicates a dangerous form of brain affection.

PUPILLÆ VELUM, 'curtain of the pupil,' Pupillary membrane.

PUPILLARIS HERBA, Lapsana.

PUPILLARY, Pupilla'ris, (F.) Pupillaire. That which belongs to the pupil.

PUPILLARY MEMBRANE, Membrana Pupilla'ris, Pupillæ Velum, Membrana Wachendorffiana. The central aperture of the iris is closed, in the fetus, during a certain period of gestation, by a very thin membrane. It disappears in the seventh month.

PUPPET ROOT, Veratrum viride.

PUPPIS OS, 'stern bone,' Frontal bone.

PUPULA, Pupil.

PUPULÆ, A'pices digito'rum. The pulps or extremities of the fingers.

PURBLIND, (peerblind [?]) Myopic.

PURBLINDNESS, Myopia.

PURGAMENT, (from purgare, 'to cleanse,') Purgative.

PURGAMENTA, Excrement—p. Alba, Leucorrhœa—p. Infantis, Meconium—p. Puerperii, Lochia—p. Uteri, Lochia.

PURGATION, Catharsis.

PURGATIONES, (pl. of purgatio, 'cleansing,') Menses—p. Menstruæ, Menses.

PURGATIONS, Menses.

PURGATIVE, Purgati'vus, Pur'gans, Moch'licus, Catoret'icus, Catoret'icus, Anthar'tic, Pur'gament, Purge, (F.) Purgatif. A medicine which operates more powerfully on the bowels than a laxative, stimulating the muscular, and exciting increased secretion from the mucous coat.

PURGE, Purgative—p. Root, Euphorbia corollata.

PURGING, Diarrhœa.

PURIFICANS, Purific'ius, (purus, 'pure,' and facere, 'to make,') Purifying; hence:—

PURIFICANTIA, Medicines that cleanse or purify the blood.

PURIFICUS, Purificans.

PURIFORM, Puriform'is, (pus, gen. puris, and forma, 'form.') Having the appearance of pus.

PURL. A medicated malt liquor, in which wormwood and aromatics are infused. Also, boiled beer having gin, sugar and spice mixed with it.

PUROHEPATITIS, (pus, gen. puris, and hepatitis.) see Hepatitis.

PURROMUCOUS, Purromucosus, (pus, gen. puris, and mucosus.) Having the character or appearance of pus and mucus.

PURPLE OF CASSIUS, Purpura Minera'lis Cassii, (F.) Pourpre de Cassius. A precipitate, obtained by adding the protochloride of tin to a dilute solution of gold; or by dipping rods of tin in a solution of gold in diluted chlorohydric acid. Used in syphilis.

PURPLES, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

PURPURA, Porph'ura, 'a purple colour.' This word has been employed in many senses. It generally means livid spots on the skin from extravasated blood, with languor and loss of muscular strength, and pains in the limbs.—(F.) Pourpre.

In PURPURA SIMPLEX, Porph'ura sim'plex, Petechie si'nè fe'brè, Peliosis, Phæni'g'mus Petechia'lis, Profusio subcuta'nea, Pete'chial Scur'vy, the spots are numerous, small and fleabite-shaped; chiefly on the breast, arms, and legs; with paleness of countenance. At times, the affection is accompanied by severe pains in the extremities, constituting Peliosis rheumat'ica.

In PURPURA HÆMORRHAGICA, Porph'ura hæmorrhag'ica, Stomac'acè universa'lia, Hæmorrhagia universa'lia, Petechiano'sis, Mor'bus maculo'sus hæmorrhag'icus Werthof'ii, Peliosis hæmorrhag'ica, Scorbutus, Hæmorrh'ica petechia'lis, Hæmatosp'ilia, Laud Scur'vy, Pur'plex, (F.) Scorbut, S. de Terre, Maladie de Werthof, Hémacélinose, Pétirose hémorrhagique—the spots are circular, and of different sizes; often in stripes or patches, irregularly scattered over the thighs, arms, and trunk; with occasional hæmorrhage from the mouth, nostrils, or viscera, and great debility and depression of spirits.

In PURPURA NAUTICA, Por'phyra nautica, Scorbutus, Pechytr'be, Gingibra'chium, Gingep'dium, Sceloty'be, Stomac'acè, Scorbutus nauticus, Sea scur'vy, (Sic.) Scrubie, (F.) Scorbut, there are spots of different hues, intermixed with the livid, principally at the roots of the hair; the teeth are loose; the gums are spongy and bleeding; the breath is fetid, and the debility universal and extreme. This occurs chiefly at sea, after exposure to a moist, cold, foul atmosphere; with long use of one kind of food and of stagnant water.

All these varieties of purpura considerably resemble each other. In the first two, however, there seems, at times, to be some excitement, which has led to the employment of purgatives, and even of bleeding, with advantage. They are dependent upon a peculiar diathesis, which has been termed Scorbutic Cachex'ia, Lues Scorbutica, and Cæochym'ia Scorbutica. Generally speaking, the use of the mineral acids will be indicated; and, in sea scurvy, vegetable acids must be regarded as the best antiscorbutics. Nitre is, also, a good antiscorbutic, and in cases of great prostration it may be united with cinchona or turpentine. Tamarinds and cream of tartar, made into drink, are also serviceable. But the great remedy is change from low to cheerful spirits; from filth to cleanliness; and from a cold and damp, to a temperate and dry climate, with sufficiency and change of food, and especially the use of green vegetables.

The general principles of management are the same in sea, as in land scurvy.

PURULENCE, (from pus, gen. puris.) Pus, Suppuration.

PURULENCY, Pus, Suppuration.

PURULENT, Purulentus, Em'pyus, Pyo'des, Py'icus. That which has the character of pus or consists of pus; as, purulent matter, a purulent collection, &c.

PURULENT DEPOSIT, Pus.

PURULENTIA, Suppuration.

PURVAIN, Verbena officinalis.

PUS, gen. Pu'ris, (πῦς, and πύον), Hu'mor purulentus, Py'on, Py'os, Mat'ter, Pu'ru'lent deposit, Pu'rulence, Pu'rulency, (Sc.) Woursum, Worsum. A secretion from inflamed textures, and especially from the areolar membrane. It is, almost always, of the same nature, whatever may be the part it proceeds from. Pus of a good quality,—laudable pus, Pus bonum seu laudabile seu nutritivum seu verum, (F.) Pus louable,—is of a yellowish-white colour, opaque, inodorous, and of a creamy appearance. Heat, acids, and alcohol coagulate it. When analyzed by Schwilgué, it afforded albumen and water, a particular extractive substance, and a small quantity of soda, phosphate of lime, and other salts. Normal pus consists essentially of two distinct parts, pus corpuscles or pus globules, Cy'toid corpuscles of Henle—and a colourless, aqueous fluid, li'quor pu'ris, in which the corpuscles are suspended. A variety of the pus corpuscles is described by M. Lebert under the name py'oid. Fully formed pus is aplastic.

PUSA, Girl.

PUSH, Pustule.

PUSILLA, (dim. of pusa.) Girl.

PUSILLATUM, Pusilla'tum, (from pusillus, 'small' [?].) A coarse powder,

PUSILLUS, 'small,' Nanus.

PUSKILE, Pustule.

PUSTULA, (from pus.) Pustule—p. Ardens, Eczema—p. Gangrænosa, see Anthrax—p. Oria, Apthæ—p. Livida Estoniæ, see Anthrax—p. Maligna, see Anthrax.

PUSTULÆ SICCÆ, 'dry pustules,' Lichen.

PUSTULAR, Pustulous, Pustula'ria, Pustulo'sus, (F.) Pustulenz. Of or belonging to pustules. Affected with pustules.

PUSTULATION, Pustula'tio, (pustulare, pustulatum, 'to cause pustules,') The formation of pustules.

PUSTULE, Pus'kile, Push, Pus'tula, Ecpye'sis, Ec'thyma, Beuath, Bubô, Epyanos'tasis. An elevation of the cuticle, with an inflamed base.

Willan and Bateman reckon four varieties of pustules, Phlyza'cium, Psudra'cium, Achor, and Facus. The varolous pustule is often called, by the French, Grain; English, Pock.

PUSTULE MALIGNÆ, see Anthrax.

PUSTULOUS, Pustular.

PUSULATUM, Pusillatum.

PUSUS, Boy.

PUT TO BED, Deliver.

PUTAMEN OVI, ('shell of an egg,' from putare, 'to cast off,') see Membrana putaminis.

PUTIUM (ποσθιον.) Prepuce.

PUTREDO, gen. Putred'inis, 'rotteness,' Hospital Gangrene, Putrefaction.

PUTREFACTIO, Putrefact'io, Putrescent'ia, Sep'is, Sap'rotas, Se'pedon, Put'rid or Putrefact'ive fermentatio, Put'ros, (putris, 'rotten,' and facere, 'to make,') A decomposition, experienced by animal substances, when deprived of life, and placed under special circumstances. The presence of water is indispensable; the temperature most favourable to it, is from 60° to 90° of Fahrenheit. The most common products of putrefaction are, water, carbonic acid, acetic acid, ammonia, carburetted hydrogen, and a semi-putrid substance, which is volatilized, and has an infected odour. It has been supposed that something like putrefaction may occur in the living body, as in case of putrid fever. To this condition, Piorry has given the name Typhohæ'mia, conceiving it to be owing to alteration of the blood by putrid animal matters. Putrefaction or Putrescence properly signifies the state of becoming putrid: whilst Putrid'ity, Putre'do, Putrid'itas, Put'ridness, (F.) Putridité, Pourriture, is the state of rotteness.

PUTRESCENT, (from putrescere, 'to grow rotten,') Hyposaprus—p. Poison, see Poison.

PUTRESCENTIA, Putrefaction — p. Uteri gravidi, Hysteromalacia.

PUTRID, Put'ridus, Sap'ros, Sepedono'des, (F.) Putride, (putreo, 'to rot,') An epithet for affections, in which the matters excreted and the transpiration itself exhale a smell of putridity. It is particularly applied to typhus.

PUTRIDITAS, see Putrefaction.

PUTRIDITY, see Putrefaction.

PUTRILA'G O, gen. Putrilag'inis, (puter, 'rotten,') (F.) Putrilage. The pulaceous matter or slough, which forms in certain gangrenous and other ulcers, and is thrown off.

PUTROI, Putrefaction.

PUTZSCHILL, see Myroxylon Peruiferum.

PUXIRI, see Pichurim beans.

PYÆMIA, Pyohæmia.

PYARID, (πυαρ.) Colostrum.

PYARTHROSIS, (πυο, arthron, 'a joint,' and osis.) Suppuration of a joint.

PYAR'THRUM, (πυο, and arthron, 'joint,') A suppurated joint.

PYCNA'NTHEMUM INCA'NUM, (πυκνος, 'dense,' and ανθερον, 'a blossom,') Clinopodium inca'num, Com'umou Moun'tain Mint, Wild Basil. An indigenous plant of the mint family — Ord. Labiate—which flowers in August. It has the aromatic properties of the mints.

PYCNA'NTHEMUM LINIFOLIUM, Virginia Thyme, has like virtues.

PYCNICMA'SIA, Pycnic'masis, (πυκνος, 'thick,' and ικμας, and ικμασια, 'moisture,') A thickening of the juices.

PYCNICMASTICA, Incrassantia.

PYCNOMETER, (πυκνος, 'thick,' and μετρον, 'measure,') Areometer.

PYCNOSIS, πυκνωσις, from πυκνος, 'thick,' and οσις, Inspissatio.

PYCNOTICA, (πυκνωτικα.) Incrassantia.

PYEC'CHYSIS, (πυος, 'pus,' and εκχυσις, 'effusion,') An effusion of pus.

PYELITIS, (F.) Pyélite, (pyelus, and itis.) Inflammation of the pelvis and calices of the kidney.

PYELOMETER, (pyelus, and μετρον, 'measure,') Pelvimeter.

PYELONEPHRITIS, (pyelus, νεφρος, 'kidney,' and itis.) Inflammation of the kidney, and of the pelvis and calices.

PYELUS, (πυελος.) Pelvis.

PYEMESIS, Pyoemesis.

PYESIS, (πυρσις.) Suppuration.

PYETIA, (πυετια.) Colostrum, Rennet.

PYGE, (πυγη.) Nates.

PYGMÆUS, (πυγμαιος, from πυγη, 'pygme,') Pygmy.

PYGMÆ, (πυγη.) Fist, Forearm.

PYGMÆE, Pygmy.

PYGMÆ, Pigmæ, Pigmæ'us, (F.) Pigmæe, (from πυγη, as big as the fist or forearm.) A dwarf. The Pygmæi were a fabulous nation of dwarfs in the extreme parts of India; or, according to others, in Ethiopia.

PYGODID'YMUS, Did'ymus, symphoroperinæ'us, Pyggori'ges, (pyge, and ιδυμος, 'a twin,') A monstrosity, in which twins are united by the sacrum and coccyx.

PYGM'ELES, (F.) Pyggonèle, (pyge, and μελες, 'unprofitable,') A monster with excessive growth on the nates or rump.

PYGOPAGES, (pyge, and παγω, 'to fix,') Pygodidymus.

PYICUS, (from πυος, 'pus,') Purulent.

PYLE, (πυλη, 'a gate,') Porta.

PYLEMPHRAXIS, (pyle, 'a gate,' and εμφραξις, 'obstruction,') Obstruction of the vena porta.

PYLEPHLEBITIS, (pyle, φλεβ, gen. φλεβος, 'a vein,' and itis.) Inflammation of the vena porta.

PYLORIC, Pylori'cus, (F.) Pylorice, (from pylorus.) That which relates to the pylorus. An epithet given to different parts.

PYLORIC ARTERY, Arte'ria Coronaria dextra, (F.) Petite artère gastrique droite, arises from the hepatic, and is distributed to the pylorus and to the lesser curvature of the stomach, anastomosing, particularly, with the A. coronaria ventriculi and A. gastroëpiploica dextra.

PYLORIC VEIN follows the same distribution as the artery.

PYLORIQUE, Pyloric.

PYLORUS, (πυλωρος), Jan'itor, Portona'rium, (πυλη, 'a gate,' and ορος, 'a guardian,') Ostium ventriculi duodena'te seu pylori'cum seu dex'trion seu infe'rius, Orific'ium dextrum seu infe'rius seu Egres'sus seu Os infe'rius seu An'nulus seu Sphinc'ter ventriculi, Ostia'rius, (F.) Pylore. The lower or right orifice of the stomach—Orifice intestinal (Ch.)—is called Pylorus, because it closes the entrance into the intestinal canal, and is furnished with a circular, flattened, fibro-mucous ring, which occasions the total closure of the stomach during digestion in that organ. This ring has been called the Valve of the Pylorus, Sphinc'ter Pylori, Pylorus propriè sic dictus, (F.) Valvule du pylore. It is a fold of the mucous and muscular membranes of the stomach; and is the Pyloric muscle of some authors.

PYO, in composition, means pus, (from πυος, 'pus,')

PYOBLENNICUS, (πυο, and βλεννα, 'mucus,') Mucopurulent.

PYOBLENNORRHEA, (πυο, βλεννα, 'mucus,' and ρρω, 'I flow,') A discharge of puriform mucus.

PYOCENO'SIS, (πυο, and κενωσις, 'evacuation,') Evacuation of pus.

PYOCHÆZIA, Diarrhœa purulenta, (πυο, and χεζω, 'I go to stool,') Discharge of pus by stool. Purulent diarrhœa.

PYOCÆLIA, Ascites purulenta, (pyo, and κοιλία, 'the belly.') Pus in the abdominal cavity.

PYOCYSTIS, (pyo, and κυστίς, 'a sac,') Vomica.

PYODES, (πυώδης.) Purulent.

PYŒDE'MA, gen. Pyœdē'matis, (pyo, and οἴδημα, 'swelling,') Tumor of the surface owing to effusion of pus.

PYŒM'ESIS, Pyem'esis, Vom'itus purulent'us, (pyo, and εμεῖς, 'the act of vomiting,') Vomiting of pus.

PYŒMIE, (pyo, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Pyohæmia.

PYŒGENESIS, Pyogenia.

PYŒGENETIC, Pyogenic.

PYŒGEN'IA, Pyogen'ia, Pyogen'esis, Pyopoë'is, (pyo, and γενῶσθαι, 'to generate,') Generation of pus. The theory or mechanism of the formation of pus. Some have believed that pus is formed by the arterial system, and is deposited, by way of excretion, in the inflamed parts; others, that it is formed by the destruction of solid parts. It seems to be owing to a degeneration of the liquor sanguinis and exudation corpuscles.

PYŒGENIA CORROSIVA, Ulceration—p. Simplex, Suppuration.

PYŒGEN'IC, Pyogen'icus, Pyogenet'ic, Pyogenet'icus, (F.) Pyogénique, Pyogénétique. Having relation to the formation of pus.

PYŒHÆ'MIA, Pyæ'mia, (F.) Pyohémie, Pyhémie, Pyôémie, (pyo, and αἷμα, 'blood,') Alteration of the blood by pus, giving occasion to the Diath'esis seu Infect'io purulenta.

PYŒOID, (πυώδης, from pyo, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling pus.

PYŒID CORPUSCLES or GLOBULES, see Pus.

PYOMA, gen. Pyo'matis, Pyonoma.

PYOME'TRA, P. purulenta, (pyo, and metra.) A collection of pus in the uterus.

PYOMETRA PURULENTA, Pyometra.

PYON, (πυον.) Pus.

PYONÉPHRITE, (pyo, and nephritis;) see Nephritis.

PYONO'MA, gen. Pyono'matis, Pyo'ma, (from pyo, and oma.) A suppurating sore.

PYŒOTORRHŒA, (pyo, and otorrhœa;) Otirrhœa.

PYOPERICAR'DIA, (pyo, and pericardium;) Pyopericar'dium. A collection of pus in the pericardium.

PYOPHTHALMIA, (pyo, and ophthalmia;) Hypopyon—p. Neomatorum, see Ophthalmia (purulenta infantum).

PYOPLA'NIA, (pyo, and πλανος, 'wandering,') An extension of pus to other parts; purulent infiltration.

PYOPLEURITE, (pyo, and pleuritis;) Empyema.

PYŒOËSIS, (pyo, and ποιεω, 'to make,') Pyogenia.

PYŒOËTIC, Suppurative.

PYOP'TYSIS, (pyo, and πτύω, 'I spit,') Spitting of pus.

PYORRHAG'IA, (pyo, and ῥαγή, 'violent rupture,') A sudden discharge of a large collection of matter.

PYORRHŒA, (πυορροία, from pyo, and ῥέω, 'I flow,') A discharge of pus.

PYORRHŒA ALVINA, Pyochezia—p. Aurium, Otirrhœa—p. Nasalis, Ozœna—p. Palpebræ, Blepharopyorrhœa—p. Urinæ, Pyuria—p. Viarum lacrymalium, Dacryopyorrhœa.

PYOS, (πυος.) Pus. Also, first milk, colostrum.

PYOSIS, (πυώσις;) Hypopyon, Pterygion, Suppuration—p. Pectoris, Empyema.

PYOTHORAX VERUS, (pyo, and thorax;) Empyema.

PYOTORRHŒE, (pyo, and otirrhœa;) Otirrhœa.

PYOTURIA, (pyo, and ουρον, 'urine,') Pyuria.

PYR, (πυρ;) Fever.

PYRA, (πυρα, from πυρ, 'fire,') Anthrax—p. Crustumina, Crustuminum—p. Crustumina, Crustuminum.

PYR'AMID, Py'amis, Enaiōent'ia pyramidal'is tym'pani, (πυραμῖς, gen. πυραμῖδος, from πυρ, 'flame,' which has a conical shape.) A small bony projection in the cavity of the tympanum, which is excavated, to lodge the muscles of the stapes. The Centrepia of the trephine. A small, obtusely pointed eminence of the inferior veruiform process of the cerebellum.

PYRAMID, see Calumba—p. of Malacarne, Veruiform process, inferior.

PYRAMIDALE (OS), Cuneiform, (bone.)

PYRAMIDAL'IS, P. Fem'oris, Il'i'acus exte'rius, Pyriform'is, Piriform'is, Pri'mus et super'ior quadrigem'inus, (F.) Sacro-trochantérien (Ch.), Pyramidal de la cuisse. A flat, triangular muscle, situate at the posterior part of the pelvis. By its base, it is attached to the anterior surface of the sacrum; to the corresponding surface of the great sacrosciatic ligament and to the posterior part of the ilium. It terminates by a tendon, which is attached to the inner surface of the great trochanter. This muscle is a rotator of the thigh outwards, or of the pelvis in an opposite direction.

PYRAMIDAL'IS ABDOM'INIS, Mus'culus Fallo'pii seu succenturi'atus seu ancilia'rius, (F.) Pubio-ombilical, Tubio-sous-ombilical (Ch.), Pyramidal de l'abdomen. A small, fleshy, pyramidal fasciculus, whose existence is not constant; and which is inserted, by its base, into the upper part of the pubis, and terminates, by its summit, at the inferior part of the linea alba. When it contracts, it stretches the linea alba.

PYRAMIDALIS FEMORIS, Pyramidalis.

PYRAMIDALIS NA'SI, Proc'erus na'si, Na'sum dilatans, (F.) Fronto-nasal (Ch.), Pyramidal du nez. A thin, triangular muscle, which has its summit upwards. Above, it is continuous with the occipitofrontalis. It descends vertically before the root of the nose, on which it terminates, becoming confounded with the transversalis. This muscle wrinkles the skin of the root of the nose transversely, and stretches that which covers the tip.

PYRAMIDES, (pl. of pyramis;) Corpora pyramidalia.

PYRAMIDES ANTÉRIEURES, Corpora pyramidalia—p. Ferreini, Ferrein, pyramides of—p. Malpighiane, Papillæ of the kidney—p. Postérieures du cervelet, Corpora restiformia.

PYRETICO'SIS, (from pyretus), Morbus febrilis. A febrile affection.

PYRETICUS, (from pyretus), Febrifuge, Ferbrile.

PYRETOGEN'ESIS, Pyretogen'ia, (pyretus, and genesis, 'generation.') The origin and formation of fever.

PYRETOGENET'IC, (same etymon,) Stimulant.

PYRETOGRAPH'IA, (pyretus, and γραφη, 'a description.') A description of fever.

PYRETOL'OGY, Pyretolog'ia, (pyretus, and λογος, 'a discourse.') Pyrol'ogy. A treatise on fevers. A title sometimes given to a monograph on fever.

PYRETOTYPOSIS, (pyretus, τυπος, 'type, order,' and osis), Intermittent.

PYRETUS, (πυρεος), Fever.

PYREX'IA, Pyrex'is, (πυρεξις, from πυρ), Fever. The febrile condition. Also, a paroxysm of fever—Paroxysmus febrilis.

PYREX'IAE, Febrile diseases. The first class of Cullen's Nosology.

PYRI MARTIALES, (pl. of pyrus, 'a pile, or pear,') Ferrum tartarizatum.

PYRIA, (πυρια), Fomentation, see Stove.

PYRIATERIUM, (πυριατηριον), see Stove.

PYRICAUSTUM, (πυρικαυστος, from πυρ, 'fire,' and καω, 'to kindle,') Burn.

PYRIFORMIS, (pyrus, 'a pear,' and forma, 'shape,') Pyramidalis.

PYRIPH'LEGES, (πυρφλεγεις), Pyriphlectus, (πυρφλεκτος, from πυρ, and φλεγω, 'I burn,') One who has a burning fever.

PYRITES, IRON, (from πυρ, 'fire,') Ferri sulphuretum.

PYR'MONT, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. A celebrated mineral spring on the Weser in Westphalia, four leagues from Hamelot. The waters are tonic, and contain chlorides of sodium and magnesium, sulphates of soda and magnesia, and carbonates of iron, lime, and magnesia dissolved in carbonic acid, with some resinous [?] principle. It is a highly carbonated chalybeate. Season, from the 10th of June to the 1st of September.

ARTIFIC'IAL PYR'MONT WA'TER may be formed of Epsom salt, gr. xv; Common salt, gr. v; Magnesia, gr. x; Iron filings, gr. v; Water, Oij; impregnated with the gas from Marble-powder and Sulphuric acid, ℞ ʒvij.

PYRE'NUS, (πυρ, 'fire,' and οινος, 'wine,') Spiritus rectificatus.

PYROLA, P. rotundifolia, Roundleaved Pyrola or Win'tergreen; Shinleaf. Ord. Ericaceae. (Dim. of pyrus, 'a pear tree,' from a fancied resemblance of the foliage.) This plant was once used as a gentle astringent and tonic.

PYROLA MACULA'TA, Chimaph'ila Macula'ta, Spotted Pipsis'seava, Spotted Win'tergreen, Whiteleaf, White Pipsis'seava, King's cure, Ground holly, Rheumatism weed, &c., has similar properties.

PYROLA, ROUNDLEAVED, Pyrola.

PYROLA UMBELLA'TA, Chimaph'ila seu Chimoph'ila umbella'ta, C. Corymbo'sa, Ground holly, Pipsis'seava, Win'tergreen, Rheumatism-weed, Prince's pine, Herbe a pisser (Canada). This common American plant is allied to the uva ursi in botanical as well as medical qualities. It is tonic and diuretic. The bruised leaves irritate the skin. From the decoction or infusion an agreeable beverage may be formed, by adding sugar, ginger to flavour it, and yeast to produce fermentation. Under the name Pipsis'seava Beer it has been used in scrofulous affections.

PYROLEUM OSSIUM RECTIFICATUM, (πυρ, 'fire,' and oleum, 'oil,') Oleum animale Dipelii.

PYROLIG'NEOUS AC'ID, (πυρ, 'fire,' and λιγνιον, 'wood,') Ac'idum pyroaceticum seu pyro- liq'neum seu pyrolig'neum seu pyroxylicum seu liq'ni pyroileonum seu aceticum empyreumaticum seu liq'neum seu ligno'rum empyreumaticum, Pyrolig'nic ac'id, (F.) Acide pyroclétique ou pyrolique ou pyroligneux, Vinaigre de bois. An acid, obtained by distillation from wood, coal, &c., which was once believed to be of a peculiar character. It is now known to be formed of acetic acid and an empyreumatic oil, from which it may be freed; and, in this state, is sold in commerce for Acetum distillatum, Acetic acid of commerce, Ac'idum aceticum e Ligno vend'le. It is used for similar purposes as distilled vinegar, and for preserving animal substances. It has also been used as an antiseptic in gangrene and sphacelus, and to foul ulcers; wherever indeed creasote is indicated.—The dose of the impure pyroligneous acid internally is from five to thirty drops, three or four times a day.

PYROMA'NIA, Empresomonia, Incen'diary monoman'ia, (πυρ, 'fire,' and μανια.) Insanity, with an irresistible desire to destroy by fire.

PYROPH'AGUS, Igniv'orous, (πυρ, 'fire,' and φαγω, 'I eat,') One who eats fire. A juggler, who eats substances in a state of ignition.

PYRUS, (πυρος), Triticum.

PYRO'SIS, (from πυρω, 'to burn,') Ptyalis mus pyros'icus, Limo'sis cardiac'gia sputato'ria, As'dor seu Ebullit'io stom'achi seu ventric'uli, Cardiac'gia sputato'ria, Pyros'is Snee'ica, Apoeno'sis vom'itus pyros'is, Dyspeps'ia pyros'is, Cnemidog'nia, Orce'is (of some), So'da, Waterbrash, Wa'terqualm, Wa'terping, Blackwater, (F.) Ardeur de l'estomac, Fer chaud, Fer rouge, Cremaison, Gorgosset. This affection consists of a hot sensation in the stomach, with eructations of an acrid, burning liquid, that causes a distressing sensation in the parts over which it passes. Attention to diet, and the use of bitter absorbents, will usually relieve, when the disease is functional. Occasionally, it is symptomatic of organic disease of the stomach.

Pyrosis also signified, of old, inflammation, gangrene, and a burn.

PYROSIS STECICA, Pyrosis.

PYROSOPHIA, (πυρ, 'fire,' and σοφια, 'wisdom,') Chymistry.

PYROTECHNIA, (πυρ, 'fire,' and τεχνη, 'art,') Chymistry.

PYROTECHNY, Pyrotechn'ie, Pyrotech'nia. Art of making fire-works, &c. Also, chymistry. M. Percy has used the term Pyrotechnie Chirurgicale for the art of applying fire or the actual cautery in surgery.

PYROTHONIDE, (πυρ, 'fire,' and θωπη, 'linen,') Liq'nor pyroileosus e lin'teo para'tus. A kind of pyrogenous or empyreumatic oil, produced by the combustion of textures of hemp, linen, or cotton in a copper vessel. The brown product is acid. Its medical properties probably resemble those of creasote. Diluted with three or four times its weight of water, it has been used as a gargle in cynanche tonsillariv, but is not now employed.

It is said, also, to be a popular remedy for toothache and skin diseases. When prepared from rags, it is called Rag oil; when from paper, Paper oil. (F.) Huile de Papier.

PYROTICUS, (πυρωτικός, from πυρω, 'to burn,') Caustic.

PYROXYLIN, (πυρ, 'fire,' and ξυλον, 'wood,') Gun cotton, see Collodion.

PYRUS, (from πυρ, 'fire,' because flame is shaped like the pear,) see Pyrus malus—p. Americana, Sorbus Americana.

PYRUS CYDO'NIA, Cydo'nia malifor'mis seu vulgari's, Sor'bus Cydo'nia, Cydo'nia, Coto'nia, Quince Tree, (F.) Coignassier, Cognassier. Ord. Rosaceae. Sax. Syst. Icosandria Pentagynia. The fruit is termed Cydo'nia malum, Malum ca'dunum seu coto'neum, Me'luu cyto'niuu, Quiace, (F.) Coign. Quince-seed—Cydo'niuum (Ph. U. S.)—are sometimes used in decoction as a demulcent. The fruit makes a pleasant preserve.

PYRUS DOMESTICA, Sorbus domestica.

PYRUS MA'LUS, Ma'lus, M. dasyphylla seu communis seu sylvestris, Sor'bus ma'lus, Me'lea, the Ap'ple Tree, (F.) Pommier. The apple—Po'mum, Ma'tum, (F.) Pomme—is an agreeable fruit when ripe. When unripe, it disagrees, especially with those of weak digestive powers. The same may be said of the pear, (F.) Poire; the fruit of Pyrus communis, P. Sor'bus seu Sati'va, Pi'rus, A'pios, (F.) Poirier.

Ap'ple Bran'dy is a spirituous liquor obtained from the juice of the apple, and much used in the United States.

PYTHOGENIC FEVER, (πυθω, 'to putrefy,' and γενναω, 'to generate.') Typhoid fever.

PYTHIA, (πυθια,) Colostrum, Rennet.

PYTISMA, (πυτισμα,) Sputum.

PYUL'CON, Pyn'cum, (πυυλον, from pyo, and ελαω, 'I extract.') (F.) Tire-pus. A surgical instrument for extracting pus from any cavity. Many pyulea have been employed, all of which act as exhausting syringes.

PYURIA, Pyotu'ria, Pyorrhœ'a urina'lis, (F.) Pyurie, Pissement de Pus, (pyo, and ουρον, 'urine.') Discharge of purulent urine: a symptom which occurs in many diseases; particularly in cases of renal calculi, and in organic affections of the bladder. It receives various epithets, according to the part whence the pus proceeds:—as Pyuria urethra'lis, P. ren'a'lis, and P. vesica'lis.

PYURIA CHYLOSA, Chyluria—p. Lactea, Chyluria—p. Mucosa, Cystirrhœa—p. Serosa, Cystirrhœa—p. Viscida, Cystirrhœa.

PYXIS, gen. Pyx'idis, (πυξίς, gen. πυξίδος, made of box-wood, πυξός, Pyxus.) A box; a pill-box. Also, an emollient ointment.

PYXIS, Boîte, see Cotyloid.

Q.

Q, see Abbreviation.

QUABEBE, Piper cubeba.

QUACK, Charlatan.

QUACK MEDICINE, Arcanum.

QUACKSALVER, ([G.] Quacksalber, from quaken, 'to quack,' and Salbe, 'salve,') Charlatan.

QUADRANS, Quar'ta pars li'bræ. A quarter of a pound. Three ounces (Troy.)

QUADRA'TUS, (F.) Carré, (quadrus, 'square,') A name for muscles whose figure approaches a square. Depressor Labii inferioris, Quadratus femoris.

QUADRATUS DORSI, Q. lumborum.

QUADRATUS FEMORIS, Quadra'tus, Quar'tus quadrigen'ius quadratus, (F.) Tuber-ischio-trochantérien, (Ch.) Ischio-sous-trochantérien, Carré de la Cuisse. A muscle situate at the posterior and upper part of the thigh. It is thin, flat, and, quadrilateral, and is attached to the outer part of the tuberosity of the ischium; whence it proceeds transversely to the inferior part of the posterior margin of the great trochanter. It rotates the limb, turning the toe outwards.

QUADRATUS GENÆ, Platysma myoides—q. Radii. Pronator radii quadratus.

QUADRATUS LUMBO'RUM, Quadra'tus seu Lumbaris exter'nus, Q. dor'si, Flectens par lumborum, (F.) Ilio-costal, (Ch.) Ilio-lombi-costal, Carré des lombes. A flat, somewhat thick, irregularly quadrilateral muscle, situate in the loins, at the sides of the vertebral column. It is attached, below, to the crista ilii and ilio-lumbar ligament; and above, to the inferior margin of the last rib; and besides, to the base of the transverse processes of the last four lumbar vertebrae. This muscle inclines the loins to its side; depresses the last rib, and is thus a muscle of respiration. It can also raise the hip.

QUADRATUS MENTI, Depressor labii inferioris.

QUADRIGA, (quatuor, 'four,' and jugum, 'a yoke,') Cataphracta.

QUADRIGEMINA TUBER'CUA, (quatuor, 'four,' and geminus, 'double,') Éminentie Quadrigen'ine seu Bigem'ine, Optic Lobes, Optic Ganglia, Pons Sylv'ii, Cor'pora quadrigen'ina seu bigem'ina, Nates et Testes, (F.) Tubercules quadrigemeaux ou bijumeaux, Éminences sigéminées, Lobes optiques ou bijumeaux. Four medulary tubercles, situate at the posterior surface of the tuber annulare. They are white, externally; gray, internally; oblong; rounded; connected by pairs, and separated by two grooves, which divide them crucially. Of these tubercles—the superior called Nates, Nat'es, Tuber'cula anterio'ra, Glu'tia, are larger and more prominent than the lower, called Testes, Tuber'cula posterio'ra. The pineal gland corresponds exactly to the point of intersection of the two furrows that separate them.

They give origin to the optic nerves.

QUADRIGEMINUS PRIMUS ET SUPERIOR, Pyramidalis—q. Quartus quadratus, Quadratus femoris—q. Secundus et tertius, Ischiotrochanterianus.

QUADRIGEMINA TUBER'CUA, (quatuor, 'four,' and mamma, 'a breast,') Four breasted.

QUADRI'MAMMA'TUS, Tetramas'thus, (quatuor, 'four,' and mamma, 'a breast,') Four breasted.

QUADROON, (from [L.] quatuor, 'four,' a fourth part,) see Mulatto—q. Black, see Mulatto.

QUÆ EX QUIBUS, (quæ ex quibus.) A Hippocratic phrase, which comprised the vicissitude, succession, and transmutation of diseases, of which mutation and succession four species were chiefly enumerated,—epigenesis, metaptosis, metastasis, and apostasis or abscess. Stephanus Rodericus, a Castro wrote a small work under the title "Quæ ex quibus," de Morborum Vicissitudinibus.

QUAFADIL, Melanthium Virginicum.

QUAHOIL, Cacao.

QUAIL, (low L. qualea, [F.] Caille,) Tetrao coturnix.

QUAMASH, Camassia esculenta—q. Eastern, Seilla esculenta.

QUANDROS. Ancient name for a precious stone, believed to exist in the brain of the vulture; and to which was attributed the property of augmenting the secretion of milk, and preserving from deadly accidents. No such stone exists.

QUAR'ANTINE, Quar'entine, Quarentaine, ([I.] Quaranti'na, itself from quaranta, 'forty,') Quarantine. The time during which travellers, returning from a country where the plague or any other pestilential disease exists, are compelled to remain on board ship or in a lazaretto. They, as well as the ship, are said 'to perform quarantine.'

and 'to be quarantined.' Quarantine is sometimes extended beyond forty days, whilst its duration is generally much less. It is sometimes enforced by land; for example, when contagious diseases require the establishment of cordons sanitaires, and when persons are desirous of leaving infected districts. During quarantine, no communication is allowed between the travellers and the inhabitants of the country. Quarantine is a great impediment to commerce; and is, doubtless, very frequently enforced when there is but little danger of contagion. The evils, however, that might arise from the introduction of a widely-spreading contagious disease, are so disastrous, as to induce legislators to maintain these laws in perhaps an unnecessary degree of rigour.

QUAR'TAN, Quarta'nus, (from quartus, 'the fourth,') Quarta'na Febris, Ac'etus Quarta'nus, Terta'rus, Quar'tan Ague, (F.) Quarte. An intermittent, the paroxysms of which recur every fourth day, leaving between them two days' interval. We speak also of the Quar'tan Type. A Double Quar'tan, (F.) Double quarte, is one in which one paroxysm occurs on the third and another on the second day, so that there is only one day of apyrexia and two of paroxysms in succession;—the paroxysms of every fourth day resembling each other. A Triple Quar'tan is one in which there is a paroxysm every day; and on every three days the paroxysms correspond. A redoub'ling or repeat'ing quar'tan, (F.) Fiev're quarte doublee, is one in which there are two paroxysms every fourth day. See Intermittent.

QUARTANUS, Quartan—q. Remittens, Tetartophia.

QUARTA'RIOUS. An ancient measure, equal to one-fourth of the sextarius. See Weights and Measures.

QUARTE, ([L.] quartus, 'a fourth,') Quartan.

QUARTERON. (from [L.] quatuor, 'four,' a fourth part,) see Mulatto—q. Black, Mulatto.

QUARTISTERNAL, Quadrister'nalis. The fourth osseous portion of the sternum, corresponding to the fourth intercostal space.

QUARTIO, (quatuor, 'four, being foursided,') Astragalus.

QUASSATIO, (from quassare, quassatum, 'to shake,') Conquassation.

QUASSATURA, Conquassation.

QUASS'IA, (Ph. U. S.), Lignum Quassie, Febrif'ngum lignum, Quassy, (F.) Quassie, Bois amer. The wood of Quassia amara—and of Q. excel'sa, Picro'na excel'sa, Bittera febrif'nga, Lofty Bitterwood Tree, Bitter ash, Simaru'ba excel'sa, Ord. Simarubacee; West India trees. The former is the Jamaica Quassia—the one in common use; the latter the Surinam Quassia. Quassia, called after Quassi, a Surinam negro, who first employed it in the fevers of the country. It is an intensely durable bitter, without astringency; and has been employed as a tonic and stomachic. It is generally given in the form of infusion. The bitter principle is called Quassin, Quassinin, Quassin and Bitterin.

QUASSIA SIMAROU'BA, Simarou'ba, Simaru'ba, S. officina'lis, Euon'yms, Bitter Simaruba, Moutain Damson. The bark of the root, Simaru'ba, (Ph. U. S.), is bitter, and not unpleasant. Both water and alcohol extract its virtues. It is not astringent. It is exhibited wherever a simple tonic is required.

QUASSIN, see Quassia.

QUASSIT, see Quassia.

QUATERNIO, (from quatuor, 'four,' having four sides,) Astragalus.

QUATRE ÉPICES, 'four spices,' see Myrtus pimenta.

QUATRIO, (from quatuor, 'four,' having four sides,) Astragalus.

QUEASINESS, Nausea.

QUEEN OF THE MEADOW, Spiræa lobata—q. of the Prairie, Spiræa ulmaria.

QUEEN'S DELIGHT, Stillingia—q. Root, Stillingia.

QUELLES, Elixir.

QUENOUILLE D'EAU, Typha latifolia.

QUERCERA, (from καρκαρειν, 'to tremble,') Epialos.

QUERCINI HERBA, Lichen plicatus.

QUERCULA MINOR, (dim. of quercus,) Tenucrium chamædrys.

QUERC'US AL'BA, White Oak; QUERC'US RO'BUR, Common Oak; Q. TINCTORIA, Black Oak; Q. RUBRA MONTANA, Red Oak or Spainish Oak; Q. PEDUNCULATA, Common British Oak. Ord. Cupuliferae. Sec. Syst. Monœcia Polyandria; (F.) Chêne. The bark of all these varieties—Querc'us—is, probably, alike in medicinal properties. It is powerfully astringent and tonic, and has been used internally in intermittents, and externally in decoction, as an astringent wash, where such is indicated.

The A'corn, (Prov.) Ackerns, Nux Querc'ens, (F.) Gland, was at one time much used as food; and a decoction was once recommended in dysentery and diarrhœa, in glandular obstructions, &c. A pessary made of it has been advised in immoderate flow of the menses. It is not much used. Roasted acorns, (F. Glands torréfiés), have been used in the same cases as the decoction.

QUERCUS COCCIFERA, see Kermes.

QUERCUS INFECTORIA. A tree of Asia Minor, which affords Turkey or Nut Galls, Gallæ Turcicæ seu Querc'us seu Tincto'ria, Nux Gallæ, Galla maxima orbiculata, Cæcis, Gallæ, Galls, Galnut, (F.) Noix de Galle, Galle de chêne, Cus-senoles. The nut-gall—Gall'a (Ph. U. S.)—is a morbid protuberance or tubercle, produced by the puncture of the Diplo'lepis seu Cynips Gallæ Tincto'rie, Cynips Querc'us folii. It is powerfully astringent and tonic, and has been employed in diarrhœa, intestinal hemorrhage, and intermittents; but is chiefly used, externally, in gargles, and injections. The powder, made into an ointment with lard, is used in piles. The ordinary nutgalls of the shops, are procured from the Levant. The large Mec'ca or Bus'sorah galls, at times called Dead Sea ap'ples, Mad ap'ples, and ap'ples of Sod'om, are produced on Quercus infectoria.

There are upwards of thirty species of oak in the United States, all of which are probably more or less astringent and tonic.

QUERCUS MARINA, Fucus vesiculosus—q. Suber, see Suber.

QUERQUERA, (from καρκαρειν, 'to tremble,') Epialos.

QUEUE DE CHEVAL, 'horse's tail,' (from [L.] cauda, 'a tail,') Hippuris vulgaris, Cauda equina, see Medulla spinalis—q. de la Moëlle épinière, Cauda equina—q. de Pourceau, Peucedanum—q. de Rat, Sium lunare.

QUICK-IN-THE-HAND, Impatiens.

QUICKEN TREE, Sorbus aucuparia.

QUICK'ENING, (Sax. þicean, 'to make alive,')

The period of gestation when the motion of the fœtus first becomes perceptible. This usually occurs about the eighteenth week, and was at one time erroneously believed to mark the time at which the fœtus becomes alive—Animatio facta. It need scarcely be said, that it possesses the principle of life from the moment of the union of the materials furnished by the sexes at a fecundating copulation. When the motion is felt, the female is said to be 'quick with child'

QUICKENS, Triticum repens.

QUICKLIME, Calx viva.

QUICKSILVER, Hydrargyrum.

QUIES, 'rest,' Acinesia.

QUINA, (from quinquina.) Quinine—q. do Campo, Strychnos pseudoquina—q. Quina, Cinchona.

QUINIA, EXTRACT OF, Quinæ sulphas impurus. A preparation which consists in evaporating the liquor poured off the crystals of sulphate of quinia, to the consistence of a pilular mass.

It has the properties of sulphate of quinia, and its active principle appears to be amorphous quinia or chinioidine. Twenty-four grains will generally arrest ague.

QUINIA, FERROCYANATE OF, Quinæ ferrocyanas—q. Hydriodate of, Quinæ hydriodas—q. Hypophosphite of, see Calcis hypophosphis—q. Impure sulphate of, Quinia, extract of—*q. QUINIA AND CINCHONIA, Tannate of, Quinæ et Cinchonie tannas.

QUINIA ACETAS, Chiniûm acetium, Acetas Chiniûi seu Chiniûni seu Chiniûnicus seu Quiniûnis seu Quiniûni seu Quiniûni seu Kiniûni, Quiûna acetica, Ac'etate of Quiûnia or of Quinine'. (Prepared by saturating Quinia with diluted Acetic acid.) Has the properties of the other salts of Quinia.

QUINIA ARSENIAS, Quiniûnis seu Quiniûnis Arsenias, Chiniûnum Arsenico'sum seu Arsenic'ium, Arseniate of Quiûnia or of Quiûna or of Quinine', (F.) Arseniûte de quinine. (Formed by the union of arsenic acid and quinia.) Employed as an antiperiodic in the dose of from three quarters of a grain to a grain and a half in the twenty-four hours.

QUINIA AR'SENIS, Q. Diar'senis, Ar'senite of Quiûnia. (A salt resulting from the double decomposition of arsenite of potassa and sulphate of quinia.) It has been used in chronic cutaneous diseases; and as an antiperiodic in ague, neuralgia, &c. Dose, one-third of a grain, three times a day.

QUINIA CI'TRAS, Quiûnæ seu Chiniûni ci'tras, Ci'tras chiniûnicus seu quiniûnicus, Chiniûnum seu Chiniûnum Ci'tricum, Ci'trate of Quiûnia or Quiûna or Quinine'. (Formed from the union of citric acid and quinia.) It has the same properties as the sulphate.

QUINIA DIARSENIS, Quinæ Arsenis.

QUINIA FERROCYANAS, Chiniûnum ferrocyanogenatum seu ferrohydrocyan'ium, Ferrocyanate or hydrocyanof'er'ate of Quiûnia or of Quinine'. (This salt is obtained by the decomposition of sulphate of quinia by means of a solution of ferrocyanuret of potassium.) It has all the properties of sulphate of quinia, and, according to some, in a superior degree.

QUINIA HYDRIODAS, Chiniûnum hydriod'icum, Hydriodate or Iodhydrate of Quiûnia; called, also, Ioduretum seu Iodidum Quiniûre, Ioduret or Iodide of Quiûnia, (F.) Hydriodate ou Iodhydrate ou Iodure de Quinine. (This is formed by precipitating sulphate of quinia by means of iodide of potassium.) Given in serofulous affections; half a grain to a grain, three times a day, to a child.

An iodide and a biniodide have been formed; the latter made by mixing double the quantity of iodide of potassium with sulphate of quinia.

AN IODIDE OF IODHYDRATE OF QUINIA, (F.) Iodure d'Iodhydrate de Quinine, is prepared by pouring into an acid solution of quinia a solution of iodide of iron, containing a slight excess of iodine. The precipitate is treated with boiling alcohol: the liquor filtered, and crystals suffered to form. The salt possesses all the properties of the other salts of quinia. Under the name, Hydriodate of Iron and Quiûnia, a preparation was introduced by Mr. Battley. It is possessed of tonic and antiperiodic virtues.

QUINIA IODIDUM, Quinæ hydriodas—q. Ioduretum, Quinæ hydriodas.

QUINIA LACTAS, Chiniûm lact'icum, Chiniûm lacticum, Lactate of Quiûnia or of Quinine', (F.) Lactate de quinine. (Made by the action of lactic acid on quinia.) Used in the same cases as the other salts of quinia.

QUINIA MURIAS, Chiniûm muriat'icum seu salitum seu hydrochloricum, Murias chiniûnicus, Muriate of Quiûnia or of Quinine'. (May be prepared by dissolving quinia in dilute muriatic acid.) Given as an antiperiodic. Dose, half a grain to a grain.

QUINIA NITRAS, Chiniûm seu Chiniûnum nitricum, Nitrate of Quiûnia or of Quinine', (F.) Nitrate ou Azotate de quinine. (May be formed by the addition of nitric acid to quinia.) Its properties are those of the sulphate of quinia.

QUINIA PHOSPHAS, Chiniûm seu Chiniûnum phosphoricum, Phosphate of Quiûnia or of Quinine'; (may be prepared by the addition of dilute phosphoric acid to quinia.) It is thought by many to be next to the sulphate of quinia in its remedial powers.

QUINIA SULPHAS, Quinine, sulphate of.

QUINIA VALERIANAS, Chiniûnum seu Chiniûnum Valerian'icum, Vale'rianate of Quiûnia, of Quiûna, or of Quinine'; (may be formed by the union of valerianic acid with quinia.) It has the properties of the salts of quinia. Dose, gr. j to gr. v.

QUINIA ET CINCHONIA TAN'NAS, Chiniûnum seu Chiniûnum tan'nicum, Tan'nate of Quiûnia and Cinchonia. This salt has the same properties as the salts of quinia in general.

QUINICINE, Quinici'na, Quinic'ia. When a salt of quinia is exposed to heat with certain precautions, the alkaloid is changed into another isomeric with it, to which this name has been given.

Quinicine, and its sulphate, possess the same medical properties as quinia and its salts. Dose, gr. v to gr. xv.

QUINICUS, Cinchonia.

QUINIDIA, Quinidi'na, Quini'dine, Chini'dine, Cin'chotin. An alkaloid of the cinchonas—of many of the genuine at least—obtained from them by the same process as that by which quinia is obtained from the barks that yield it. Its sulphate is more soluble however than the sulphate of quinia, and it is left, therefore, in the mother waters.

The salts of quiniidia are markedly antiperiodic. From gr. x to gr. xxx will usually arrest a paroxysm.

QUININE', or QUI'NINE, (from quinquina.) Quiûnia, Quiûna, Kiniûnum, Ki'num, Sul'essentielle corticis Peruvia'ni, Chiniûnum, Quiûnia. An alkaline, encrystallizable substance; under the form of a porous, whitish mass; almost insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol and ether. It ferms, with acids, salts that are in general soluble. It is obtained from different cinchonas, but chiefly from the yellow, and is the active principle of those valuable drugs.

QUININE, ACETATE OF, Quinæ acetas—q. Arseniate of, Quinæ arsenias—q. Arsenite of, Quinæ arsenis—q. Azotite of, Quinia nitras—q. Citrate of, Quinia citras—q. Ferrocyanate of, Quinia ferrocyanas—q. Hydriodate de, Quinia hydriodas—q. Iodhydrate de, Quinia hydriodas—q. Nitrate of, Quinia nitras—q. Phosphate of, Quinia phosphas.

QUININE, QUI'NA or QUI'NIA, SULPHATE OF, Qui'ne seu Qui'ne seu Quini'ne Sul'phas, Qui'ne Disul'phas, Chini'num seu Chini'num Sulph'ricum, (F.) Sulfate de Quinine—the salt usually employed in medicine—occurs in needles of a pearly and satiny appearance. It is employed with great success in the treatment of intermittents; and is available in many cases, where the bark in substance could not be retained, or would be injurious. Dose, as a tonic, from 3 to 10 grains in the 24 hours. As an antiperiodic it may be carried much farther. Its action, in a large dose, is decidedly sedative. (It is obtained, by treating the yellow bark with sulphuric acid. The following form is adopted in the Pharmacopœia of the United States,—Cinchon. flav. in pulv. crass. ℥iv; Acid. muriat. fʒiij; Calcis, in pulv. ʒv; Aque, cong. v; Acid. Sulphur., Alcohol., Carbon animal, aā q. s. Boil the bark in one-third of the water mixed with one-third of the muriatic acid, and strain through linen. Boil the residue twice successively with the same quantity of acid and water as before, and strain. Mix the decoctions, and, while the liquor is hot, gradually add the lime, previously mixed with two pints of water, stirring constantly, until the quinia is completely precipitated. Wash the precipitate with distilled water, and having pressed and dried it, digest it in boiling alcohol. Pour off the liquor and repeat the digestion several times, until the alcohol is no longer rendered bitter. Mix the liquors, and distil off the alcohol, until a brown viscid mass remains. Upon this substance, removed from the vessel, pour about half a gallon of distilled water, and having heated the mixture to the boiling point, add as much sulphuric acid as may be necessary to dissolve the impure alkali. Then add an ounce and a half of animal charcoal; boil for two minutes; filter the liquor while hot, and set it aside to crystallize. Should the liquor, before filtration, be entirely neutral, acidulate it very slightly with sulphuric acid. Should it, on the contrary, change the colour of litmus paper to a bright red, add more animal charcoal. Separate the crystals from the liquor, dissolve them in boiling water slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid; add a little animal charcoal, filter and set aside to crystallize. Wrap the crystals in bibulous paper, and dry with a gentle heat. The motherwaters may be made to yield an additional quantity of sulphate of quinia by precipitating the quinia with solution of ammonia, and treating the precipitated alkali with water, sulphuric acid, and animal charcoal, as before.)

QUININE, TANNATE OF, Quinia et cinchonie tannas—q. Valerianate of, Quinia valerianas.

QUININISM or QUININISM, Quininis' mus, Qui'nism, Cin'chonism, (F.) Inébrition ou Ivesse quinine. The aggregate of encephalic or neuropathic phenomena induced by overdoses of quinia.

QUINOIDINE, Chinioidine.

QUINIQUE, Cinchonic.

QUINIUM. An alcoholic extract, made from cinchona barks the composition of which is known, and which are mixed together in such proportions that the quinia and the cinchonia exist in the relation of two of the former to one of the latter. It is used in pills or in wine, and is said to represent, faithfully, all the useful principles of cinchona. To a similar preparation containing quinia and cinchonia, in the proportion of 91 of the former to 25 of the latter, M. Labarraque has given the name Panchres'tum Chi'nic.

QUINOLIN, (quina, and ελαιον, 'oil,') Leukoleinum.

QUINOL'OGY, Quinolog'ia, Cinchonol'ogy, Cinchonolog'ia, (quina, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on the cinchonas, or on quinia.

QUINQUEFOLIUM, (quinque, 'five,' and folium, 'a leaf,') Potentilla reptans—Quinquefolium majus, Potentilla reptans.

QUINQUINA, (Peruvian kina kina,) Cinchona—q. Aromatique, Croton cascarilla—q. Bicolor, Cinchona Caribæa cortex—q. Faux de Virginie, Cusparia febrifuga—*q. QUINQUINO, Myroxylon periferum.

QUINSY, Cynanche, C. tonsillarisis—q. Nervous, Angone—q. Wolf, Lycanche.

QUINTAN, Febris quinta'na seu pempte'a seu quinta; (from quintus, 'a fifth,') A fever whose paroxysms return only every five days inclusively; and between which there are, consequently, three days of apyrexia.

QUINTE (F.), (formed, like kink, by onomatopœia [?]). This word is used synonymously with paroxysm or fit, when speaking of cough,—as une Quinte de Toux—'a fit of coughing,' (Sc.) Kink. Also, the influenza.

QUINTEFEUILLE. ([F.] quinte, 'a fifth,' and feuille, 'a leaf,') Potentilla reptans.

QUINTERON, (from quintus, 'a fifth,') see Mulatto—q. black, see Mulatto.

QUINTES, see Quinte, and Pertussis.

QUINTES'SENCE, Quin'ta Essen'tia, 'fifth essence.' A name formerly given to alcohol, impregnated with the principles of some drug. It was, consequently, often synonymous with Alcoholic tincture. The most volatile principles of bodies were, also, called Quintes'sences.

QUINTISTER'NAL. The fifth ossous portion of the sternum. It corresponds to the 5th and 6th intercostal spaces.

QUINUA, Chenopodium quinoa.

QUIZ'ZER, Grinder. One who examines and prepares students in medical colleges on the subjects taught in them.

QUOTIDIAN, Quotidia'nus, Ephemer'us, (F.) Quotidien—itself from quotidie, 'daily,' (quot, 'every,' and dies, 'day,') That which takes place every day.

QUOTIDIAN FE'VER, Q. a'que, Fe'bris quotidiana seu hemer'sia seu hemer'ina seu ephemer'era seu methemer'ina seu methemer'ia, An'etus quotidiana'nus, Cathemer'us, Cathemer'inus, Methemer'inus, Amphemer'inus, Amphemer'inus, Amphemer'us, Quotidia'nus, (F.) Fièvre quotidienne, is an intermittent, the paroxysms of which recur every day.

A sim'ple, doub'le, or trip'le quotidia'n, is a quotidian, which has one, two, or three paroxysms in the 24 hours.

R.

R or R̄ is placed at the commencement of a prescription as a contraction of Rac'ij. (See Abbreviation.) Originally, it was the sign ♃ of Jupiter, and was placed at the top of a formula, to propitiate the king of the gods, that the compound might act favourably.

RABDOIDES, (SUTURA,) (ραβδοειδής, from ραβδος, 'a rod,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Sagittal suture.

RABID, Rob'idus, (F.) Rabique, Rabiélique, (from rabies, [robo, 'I am mad or furious,'] 'canine madness,') That which belongs to hydrophobia; as rabid virus, &c. Rabid also means affected with hydrophobia, (F) Enragé.

RABIÉLIQUE, Rabid.

RABIES CANINA, Hydrophobia.

RABIQUE, Rabid.

RACAHOUT, Amylum quer'neum. A name given by the Arabs to the starch prepared from an edible acorn obtained from Quer'cus Ilex, but, according to Plagge, the so called Racahout of the Arabs, sold in Paris, is a compound of potatoe, starch, chocolate, and aromatics,—as vanilla.

RACCOON BERRY, Podophyllum montanum.

RACE, (from radice, ablative of radix, 'root,') Breed. The union or aggregate of individuals whose conformation or particular condition differs perceptibly from those of neighbouring varieties. In the human species, several races are designated. See Homo.

RACÉMEUX, Racemosus.

RACEMOUSUS, Rac'emeus, Rac'emoae, (F.) Racémeux, (from racemus.) In clusters, like grapes.

RACEMUS. A cluster—as of grapes.

RACHAMEL'CA, (Hebr. רחם [rechem], 'the womb,' and כֶּלֶךְ [molech], 'a king,') Rechamal'ca. A peculiar formative principle, supposed, by Dolez, to exist in the uterus.

RACHE, Porrijo.

RACHILI, (ραχίς, 'the spine,') Rhachitæ.

RACHIALGIA, (rachis, and αλγος, 'pain,') Colic, metallic, Rhachialgia, Rhachiodiæna. Vertebral disease—r. Mesenterica, Tabes mesenterica—r. Pictoniensium, Colic, metallic—r. Pictonium, Colic, metallic.

RACHIALGIE MÉSENTÉRIQUE, Tabes mesenterica.

RACHIALGITIS, Rachialgitis.

RACHIDIAN, (from rachis,) Spinal—r. Arteries, Spinal arteries—r. Bulb, see Medulla oblongata—r. Canal, Vertebral canal.

RACHIDIEN, Spinal.

RACHIOPHYMA, Rachiphyma.

RACHIPHYMA, gen. Rachiphymatis, Rhachiphy'ma, RachioPHY'ma, Tu'mor Dor'si, (rachis, and φυμα, 'a tumour,') A tumour on the spine or on the back.

RACHIS, gen. Rach'idis, (ραχίς, gen. ραχίδος,) Vertebral column.

RACHIS'AGRA, Rhachis'agra, Rhachid'agra, Rhache'agra, Rhachid'agra, Rhachit'is spina'lis, (rachis, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') A gouty or rheumatic affection of the spine.

RACHITÆ, Rhachitæ.

RACHITIC, (ραχίτης.) Rachit'icus, Rhachit'icus, (F.) Rachitique. Relating or appertaining to, or affected with rachitis or rickets. Weak, feeble in the joints; defective in development.

RACHITIS, Rhachit'is. Inflammation of the spine. Also, Cyrtos'is Ra'chia, Cyrtou'osus, Morb'us Ang'licus, Osteomalacia Infantum, Tabes pector'ea; Innutrit'io os'sium, Spina nodo'sa,

Rachitis'mus, English disease, Rick'ets, (from ραχίς, 'the spine,' ραχίτης νοσος, 'spine disease,') (F.) Rachitisme, Nouure. A disease not known in England before the first quarter of the seventeenth century, and then termed Rickets, (probably from the Sax. ricg or hric, (Sc. and Prov.,) Rig, all of which signify the back. Glisson first gave it the scientific name, from Rachis, which, in Greek, also means the spine.) It is characterized by crookedness of the long bones; swelling of their extremities; crooked spine; prominent abdomen; large head; and often precocity of intellect. It is accompanied by leanness, general debility, indigestion; and frequently induces atrophy and hectic. Rickets occurs, particularly, during the first years of existence, in weakly children, born of rickety or serofulous parents; brought up in damp or confined situations; who are badly nourished, and do not take sufficient exercise. The progress and termination of the disease are very variable. Some children gradually recover their health: others become more and more deformed, and ultimately die of consumption, dropsy, or other organic disease. The treatment is almost wholly hygienic. Pure air; a healthy situation; nourishing diet; exercise; sea or common cold bathing, and tonics, afford the best prospect of success.

RACHITIS ADULTORUM, Mollities ossium.

RACHITISME, Rachitis.

RACHITOME, (rachis and τεμνω, 'to cut,') An anatomical instrument for opening the medulla spinalis without injuring the medulla.

RACHOSIS, Rhachos'is, Raco'sis (from ραχος, or ραχος, 'I wrinkle,' and osis.) A relaxation of the scrotum. Propt'oma seu Lux'us Scrot'i, Scrotum pendulum. An excoarition of the relaxed pendulum.

RACINES DU CERVELET, (pl. of racine,) Corpora testiformia.

RACK, Arack.

RACLURES DES BOYAUX, (from racler, 'to scrape,') see Abrasion. Ramenta intestinum.

RACORNISSEMENT (F.), (racornir, ([L.] cornu, 'horn,') 'to make hard as horn,') Cor'nij-nication. A physical property, possessed by animal substances, which consists in a kind of contractility, accompanied with sudden corrugation and curling. It is produced by heat, and by chemical agents, especially by the strong mineral acids.

RACOSIS, (ρακοςίς.) Rachosis.

RADCLIFFE'S ELIXIR, see Tinctura aloes composita.

RADESYGE, Radzyge.

RADEZYGE, Radzyge.

RADIAD, see Radial aspect.

RADIAL, Radial'is, (from radius.) That which relates to the radius.

RADIAL ANTERIEUR, Palmaris magnus.

RADIAL ART'ERY, A. externa Cu'biti. It arises from the brachial, at the upper and anterior part of the forearm; descends on the outer side as far as the lower part of the radius, and proceeds downwards and backwards towards the superior extremity of the space which separates the first two metacarpal bones. It then buries itself in the palm of the hand, where it forms the profund or radial palmar arch. The radial artery gives off the recurrent radial, several radiomuscular branches, the transverse palmar radiocarpal artery, the external superficial artery of the palm of the hand, the external dorsal of the thumb, the dorsalis carpi, dorsal interosseous artery of the index, &c.

RADIAL ASPECT. An aspect towards the side on which the radius is situated.—(Barclay.) Radial is used by the same writer, adverbially, to signify 'towards the radial aspect.'

RADIAL EXTERNE PREMIER, see Radialis — r. Externe second, see Radialis — r. Grand, see Radialis.

RADIAL NERVE, Radio-digital (Ch.), Spiral Nerve, Spiral muscular N., Musculospiral nerve, arises from the four inferior branches of the brachial plexus. It is, at first, situate behind the other nerves of the plexus. It then becomes engaged between the three portions of the triceps brachialis, passes behind the humerus, and descends between the supinator longus and brachialis internus, as far as opposite the upper extremity of the radius. In its course it gives numerous filaments to the triceps, supinator longus, extensor carpi radialis longior, and to the integuments. Opposite to the upper extremity of the radius it divides into two branches;—the one posterior, which turns backwards into the substance of the supinator brevis, and when it has reached the space between the two layers of muscles on the posterior surface of the forearm, divides into a great number of filaments, which are distributed to those muscles, and to the integuments of the hand. The other branch is anterior: it descends before the supinator brevis and the radius; until, near the inferior third of that bone, it engages itself between the tendons of the supinator longus and extensor carpi radialis longior; and, becoming afterwards subcutaneous, divides into two branches, whose filaments are distributed to the integuments of the thumb, index, middle finger, to the outside of the ring-finger, and to the first interosseous muscle of the back of the hand.

RADIAL PETIT, see Radialis.

RADIAL VEINS, DEEPSEATED. These follow the same course as the radial artery.

RADIALIS EXTENSOR LONGIOR, R. externus longior.

RADIALIS EXTERNUS BREVIOR, Extensor Carpi Radialis Brevis, Radialis secundus, (F.) Second radial externe, Petit radial, Épicondyléo-métacarpien, (Ch.) An extensor muscle of the wrist, situate beneath the extensor carpi radialis longior. It is attached, above, to the external tuberosity of the humerus, and terminates, below, by a long tendon, inserted into the posterior part of the upper extremity of the third bone of the metacarpus. It has the same uses as the next muscle.

RADIALIS EXTERNUS LONGIOR, Extensor Carpi Radialis Longior, Radialis externus primus, (F.) Premier radial externe, Grand radial, Huméro-sub-métacarpien, (Ch.) It is seated at the outer part of the forearm; is thin, but thicker on the outside than on the inside. It is attached, above, to the inferior part of the outer edge, and to the corresponding tuberosity of the humerus; and terminates, below, by a long tendon, which is attached to the superior extremity of the second bone of the metacarpus. It extends the hand on the forearm.

RAD'ATED, Rad'atus, (from radius, 'a ray,')

(F.) Rayonné. That which is arranged in rays; in lines, diverging from a common centre. An epithet given to several ligaments, &c.; as to those which unite the ribs to the sternum; those which unite the tibia and fibula at their inferior extremity, &c.

RADIATED SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney.

RAD'ICAL, Rad'ic'alis, (from radix.) A rad'ical cure, cura rad'ic'alis, is one in which the disease is destroyed, as it were, from the root. It is used in opposition to pal'liative cure.

RADICAL MOISTURE, Humidum radicale.

RADICAL VESSELS, Vas'cular Rad'icles, (F.) Radicles vasculaires, are the small vessels that take their origin in the tissues, and by their union form larger vessels.

RADICAL VINEGAR, Aceticum acidum.

RADICES HYOIDEI OSSIS, (pl. of radix.) Cornua hyoidei ossis.

RADICIS'ECA, Rhizot'omis, Rhizot'omist, (radix and secare, 'to cut.')

One employed in collecting and preparing roots was formerly so called.

RADICLE, Rad'icula.

RADICULA, Rad'icle, (F.) Rad'icula, (dim. of radix, 'a root.')

A small root or rootlet; also, Raphanus hortensis.

RADICULES VASCULAIRES, Radical vessels.

RADII CILIAIRES, (radius, 'a ray,' pl. radii.) Ciliary processes.

RADII FRONTIS. The folds or wrinkles of the forehead.

RAD'IO, (from radius.) In composition the radius.

RAD'IOCARPAL, Radiocarpia'nus. That which relates to the radius and carpus.

RAD'IOCARPAL ARTICULATION is the wrist joint, or articulation of the os scaphoides, os semilunare, and os cuneiforme of the carpus with the inferior surface of the radius, and the fibro-cartilage, situate below the ulna. It is strengthened by lateral, anterior, and posterior ligaments.

RAD'IOCARPAL TRANSVERSE PALMAR ARTERY, (F.) Artère Radio-carpienne-transversale-pal-maire. A transverse branch, given off by the radial artery, opposite the lower edge of the pronator quadratus, which sends several branches to the anterior or palmar surface of the carpus.

RAD'IO-CUTANÉ (NERF), see Cutaneous — r. Phalangétien du pouce, Flexor longus pollicis manus.

RADIOLUS, (dim. of radius, 'a rod or spoke.')

Sound.

RAD'IDIOMUS'CLAR, Radiomuscula'ris. A name given to the branches sent off from the radial artery to the muscles of the forearm in the first part of its course; as well as to the nervous filaments which the radial nerve sends to the same muscles.

RAD'IS, (radix.) Raphanus hortensis — r. de Cheral, Cochlearia armoracia.

RAD'ISH, Raphanus hortensis — r. Water, Nasturtium amphibium.

RAD'IUŠ, 'a staff,' 'a rod,' 'a spoke:' — so called from its shape. Cer'cis, Foe'ile mi'nus seu supe'rius, Can'na mi'nor, Os ad cubita'le, Additamentum ul'næ, Man'brum ma'nus, Parape'chyon, Arm'do bra'chii mi'nor, (F.) Os du Rayon. A long, prismatic bone, the upper and lesser extremity of which is called the head. This is supported by a cer'vix or neck. At the part where the neck is confounded with the body of the bone is the tubercle or bicip'ital tuberosity or eminence for the insertion of the biceps. The radius is articulated, above, with the os humeri and with the lesser sigmoid cavity of the ulna: below, with the scaphoides, semilunare, and the head of the ulna. Its inferior extremity, which is larger than the superior, is flattened before and behind; is irregularly quadrilateral; and has, below, a double facette to be articulated with the first two bones of the carpus. On the outer side is the styloid process; and, on the inner, a concave facette, which joins the ulna. Behind, are grooves for the passage of the extensor tendons. The radius is developed from three points of ossification; one for the body, and one for each extremity.

RADIUS, COL DU, Collum radii.

RA'DIX, gen. Radi'cis, Rh'za, (F.) Racine.

♂ root; also, the male organ.

Radix, Root or fang of a tooth, is the part contained in the alveolus. The radix or root of the nail is the portion hidden under the skin. Surgeons give the name to prolongations, sent by scirrhus, cancerous, or other tumors into the neighboring parts.

Five Aperient Roots, Quinque radi'ces aperient'es, were, of old, asparagus, butchers' broom, fennel, parsley, and smallage.

Five Lesser Aperient Roots, Quinque radi'ces aperient'es mino'res, were caper, dandelion, eryngo, madder, and restharrow.

RADULA, (from radere, 'to scrape,') Raspatorium.

RADZY'GĚ, Radzygin, Radesyge, Radezyge, (from obsolete Da. word rada, 'malignant, and syge, 'disease,') The'ria, (properly The'ria, from θηριον (θηρας), 'a malignant ulcer,') Le'pra borea'lis seu Norveg'ica, Norwe'gian Lep'rosy. A name given, in Norway, to a disease, bearing considerable analogy to the yaws. Some have esteemed it a species of lepra or elephantiasis, and others a syphiloid affection.

Another form—the Spedalske, or Spedalskhed—of Norway, appears to be a variety of tubercular lepra. Under the epithelial scales, numerous acari have been found; and the affection has been called Scab'ies crusto'sa, and Scab'ies Norveg'ica Boeck'ii, after Boeck, who well described a case of it.

RAFFLE'SIA ARNOLD'I, (after Sir Stamford Raffles.) A plant of Java. Order, Rafflesiaceæ, a decoction of which is employed there as an astringent in relaxed conditions of the genitourinary apparatus.

RAFRAÏCHISSANT, (re, and fraîche, 'cool,') from [L.] refrigerescere, 'to become cool again,') Refrigerant.

RAGE, Ira, Fu'r'ror bre'vis, Or'gē, Thy'mos, (F.) Colère, Rage. Violent passion, characterized by contraction of the muscles of the face, violence in every movement, extreme irritation of the nervous system, acceleration of the blood's motion, and, generally, redness and swelling of the face.

RAGE, (ραγη,) Rhage.

RAGE, (from [L.] rabies,) Hydrophobia, Rage. RAGE DE TÊTE. An epidemic and fatal malady, which prevailed in France in 1481. It was presumed to be epidemic meningitis.

RAGLE (F.), (said to be derived from an Arabic word, which signifies 'to traverse the desert,') A kind of hallucination observed in travellers in the deserts, which resembles the effect of intoxicating liquors, opium, &c.

RAISINS, Uvæ passæ, see Vitis vinifera—r. de Corinthe, see Vitis Corinthia.

RAISON, ([L.] ratio,) Reason.

RAKASI'RA. An American balsam; of a brownish or brownishred colour; semitransparent; brittle; softening and becoming tenacious by heat; inodorous when cold, but exhaling a very agreeable smell when heated; and possessing a balsamic and slightly bitter taste. The precise vegetable that furnishes it is not known. It has been used chiefly as a balsam in gonorrhœa and urinary affections.

RAKETEETH. A term, used in the north of England for teeth which are wide apart, and similar to those of a rake.

RAKIA, see Spirit.

RÂLE, (F.) Rat'tle, Rhon'chus, Rhen'chus, Rhenx'is, (from [D.] Ratel,) Cerch'mus, Rhog'mus (probably an example of onomatopœia). Noise produced by the air in passing through mucus, of which the lungs are unable to free themselves. This condition, Râle trachéal, is chiefly observed at the approach of death, and is commonly called "the rattles."

The term Râle has been given to different sounds during respiration, caused by the air in connection with fluid contained in the bronchi or areolæ of the pulmonary tissue; which are perceived by the stethoscope. Râle has generally been used for a 'moist' sound, heard on auscultation of the chest, whilst rhonchus has meant a 'dry' sound.

RÂLE MUQUEUX, R. bronchique humide, Rhon'chus mucosus, Hygrobronchiorrhon'chus, Mul'cous Rat'tle. The sound produced by the passage of air through mucus accumulated in the larger bronchi or trachea, or through softened tubercular matter. This râle occurs in catarrh, and in softened tubercle. When carried to a very high degree, it constitutes gurg'ling, (F.) Gargouillement. The subcrep'itant rhon'chus, (F.) Râle sous-crep'itant, is produced by the bubbling of air through liquid of variable consistence in the minute bronchial tubes. When heard at the base of both lungs, it is a sign of capillary bronchitis. When heard at the base of one only, it is generally connected with tubercles higher up.

RÂLE SIBILANT, Rhon'chus sibilans seu sibilans, Sib'ilant Rat'tle. A slight, though prolonged, whistling sound, occurring either at the commencement of inspiration or of expiration, owing to the presence of mucus, thin and viscid, but not abundant, which obstructs, more or less completely, the smaller bronchial ramifications

It is seated in the small tubes, and occurs in the first stage of bronchitis. The click'ing and whist'ling varieties differ, in the former being short, the latter prolonged. The former is a quick, sharp sibilus or whistle, which ceases almost instantaneously; the latter a prolonged sibilus, of less sharpness, lasting almost the whole time of the movement which it accompanies. To these may be added the hissing variety, the name sufficiently indicating its character.

RÂLE SONORE, R. bronchique sec ou rouflant, Rhombus sonorus, Sonorous Rat'tle. A sound resembling at times the snoring—(F.) Roufflement—of a person asleep; at others the sound of the bass string of an instrument when rubbed with the finger; and not unfrequently the cooing—(F.) Roucoulement—of a dove. It seems to be caused by a contraction of the bronchial tubes, and is characteristic of chronic catarrh.

RÂLE SOUS-CRÉPITANT, see Râle muqueux—r. Trachéal, see Râle—r. Vésiculaire, see Crépitant.

RAMEAU, Ramus.

RAMBERGE, Mercurialis.

RAMEN'TA INTESTINORUM, (pl. of ramentum), Scrapings of the Intestines, (F.) Raclures des Boyaux. The shreds or scrapings, as it were, of the mucous membrane of the bowels, often discharged in malignant dysentery. The evacuation in which these are contained has been termed Diachorema xymatodes.

RAMENTUM, (contracted from radimentum, from radere, 'to scrape,') Fragment, Scobs.

RAMEX, gen. Radicis, Hernia—r. Varicosus, Varicocele.

RAMIFICATION, Ramificatio, (ramus, and facere, 'to make,') A division of arteries, veins, or nerves into branches. Also, a branch itself.

RAMILLE, (from ramus.) Ramusulus.

RAMOLLISSEMENT, (re, and mollir, (from [L.] mollis, 'soft,') 'to soften,') Mollities—r. du Cerveau, Mollities cerebri—r. du Cœur, Cardiomalacia—r. de l'Estomac, Gastromalacia—r. du Foie, Hepatomalacia—r. Gris, see Hepatisation—r. de l'Intestin, Enteromalacia—r. de la Moelle épinière, Mollities medullæ spinalis—r. des Os, Mollities ossium—r. Rouge, see Hepatisation.

RAMPANT, (F.) ramper, 'to climb,' from [L.] reperere, 'to creep,') Repens, Reptans. That which creeps or crawls. The French Bandage rampant has the folds arranged spirally around the part, leaving intervals between them. It is a retentive bandage, but is easily displaced, and, therefore, not employed.

RAMPE, Scala.

RAMPES DU LIMAÇON, Scalae of the cochlea.

RAMPHOS, (ραμφος, 'a beak,') Rostrum.

RAMULUS, (dim. of ramus.) Ramusculus.

RAMUS, Cladus, Branch, (F.) Rameau. A division of an artery, vein, or nerve. Also, the male organ.

RAMUS DURIOR SEPTIMÆ CONJUGATIONIS, Facial nerve.

RAMUSCULUS, (dim. of ramus.) Ra'mulus, Ramusculus, Sar'culus, Cladis'cus. A division of a ramus. (F.) Ramuscule, Ramille.

RANA, Ranula.

RANA ESCULENTA, 'esculent frog,' (F.) Grenouille. This frog and the bull-frog, Rana Taurina, are eaten as delicacies. They are nutritious, and easily digested.

RANCE, Rancid.

RAN'CID, Ran'cidus, Sa'pros, (F.) Rance, (rancere, 'to be stale,') An epithet given to fatty bodies, which have become acrid from age or the contact of air. Mild ointments may thus become very irritating, and unfit for the purposes for which they were originally intended.

RAN'DIA DUMETORUM, 'R. of thickets,'

(after J. Rand, a botanist of London,) R. Spino'sa, Can'thium Coronatum, Garden'ia seu Posoqueria Dumetorum seu Spino'sa. A Coromandel shrub; Ord. Cinchonaceae; the fruit of which, bruised and thrown on the water, intoxicates, or even kills fish. In the form of powder it is a powerful emetic.

RANDIA SPINOSA, R. dumetorum.

RANINE, Rani'na, (from rana, 'a frog,' 'shaped like a frog,') The portion of the lingual artery which advances horizontally between the genioglossus and lingualis muscles as far as the point of the tongue. The ranine vein follows the same course as the artery, and opens into the internal jugular or into the superior thyroid.

RANTREE, Sorbus aucuparia.

RAN'NULA, (dim. of rana, 'a frog,' so called from its resemblance,) Dyepha'gia Ra'nula, Emphrag'ma saliva'rè, Ba'trachos, Batra'chium, Hydroglos'sa, Hypoglos'sis, Hypoglos'sum, Hypoglot'tis, Hypoglos'sium, Ra'na, Frog'tongue, (F.) Grenouillette. A small, soft, fluctuating, and semitransparent tumour, which forms under the tongue, owing to the accumulation of saliva in Wharton's duct. In order to give exit to the accumulated fluid, and to establish a permanent opening for the discharge of the saliva, the cyst may be punctured, and the opening maintained by a minute cylinder, with a button at each extremity, as has been recommended by Dupuytren; or a portion of the cyst may be removed by the scissors, and the mouth be frequently washed by any astringent lotion. Sometimes the salivary duct is found plugged by a small calculus.

RANULA LAPIDEA, see Calculi salivary.

RANUNCULUS, Crowfoot, (F.) Renoncule, (Sc.) Yellow gow'an, Ord. Ranunculaceae; See. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia, (dim. of rana, 'a frog,' because found in marshy places where frogs abound.) A genus of plants, most of the species of which, when taken internally, act as acrid poisons. They are, also, acrid and vesicant when applied to the skin, and have accordingly been often used as counter-irritants. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, Ranunculus is the cormus and herb of Ranunculus bulbosus. The following species answer to the above description.

RANUNCULUS ABORTIVUS, Smallflowered Crow-foot, Chick'enpepper.

RANUNCULUS ACRIS, R. pratensis seu Steven'ii seu ru'fulus seu sylicat'icus seu Sic'ulus, Up'right Meadow or Tall Crow'foot, Bul'ter Cups, (Prov.) Crai'sey, Guill'y Cups, Yellowweed, Blis'terweed, Pile'wort, Bur'wort, Mead'owbloom, Yellow's, (F.) Bouton d'or.

RANUNCULUS ALBUS, Anemone nemorosa—r. Aquaticus, R. scleratus.

RANUNCULUS BULBOSUS, R. lætis, Bul'bous or Bulbousrooted Crow'foot, Bul'ter Cups, (F.) Renoncule bulbeuse, Bassinet.

RANUNCULUS DIGITATUS, R. scleratus—r. Declinatus, R. flammula.

RANUNCULUS FICARIA, R. ver'nus seu præ'cox, Chelido'nium mi'nus, Scrophula'ria mi'nor, Fic'aria ranunculo'id'es seu ver'na seu commu'nis, Chelido'nia rotundifolia mi'nor, Curs'onia hemorhoida'lis her'ba, Egole'thon, Les'ser cell'andine, Pile'wort, (F.) Petite Chêlidoine, Petite Éclairé, Ficaire, Herbe aux hémorrhôides. The leaves and root have been used medicinally; the leaves as an antiscorbutic; the root as a cataplasm in piles.

RANUNCULUS FLAMMULA, R. declinat'us, Flam'mula, Surrec'ta al'ba, Smal'ler Wa'ter Crow'foot, Less'er Spear'wort, (F.) Petite Douve.

RANUNCULUS ILLYRICUS.

RANUNCULUS LINGUA.

RANUNCULUS LÆTUS, R. bulbosus—r. Nemorosus, Anemone nemorosa—r. Palustris, R. scleratus.

RANUNCULUS PENNSYLVANICUS, Bristly Crow-foot.

RANUNCULUS PRÆCOX, R. ficaria—1. Pratensis, R. acris.

RANUNCULUS PUBESCENS. Grows in ditches and marshes in South Africa. The expressed juice is used by the Cape Colonists in cancerous ulcers.

RANUNCULUS REPENS, Creeping Crow-foot.

RANUNCULUS RUFULUS, R. acris.

RANUNCULUS SCCLERATUS, R. Palustris seu umbellatus seu digitatus seu aquaticus, Rivus A'pium, Her'ba Sardo'nia, Her'ba Scclerata, Hecato'nia palustris, Marsh or Crush'd or Cel'ery-leaved Crow-foot.

RAPA, Rapum, Rapus, Rarys, Raphis, Raphus, Raph'anus, Raphys, Rhaphis, Rhaphus, Rhoph'anus, Rharys, and Rhophys. These terms were applied, of old, to the cabbage or turnip kind.

RAPA NAPUS, (ραπυς.) Brassica rapa—r. Rotunda, Brassica rapa.

RAPE, (ραπα.) Brassica napus: also, Stuprum, (from rapio, 'to ravish'.)

RAPHANE'DON, (ραφανιον, from ραφανς, 'a radish, like a radish'.) Rhaphanedon. A transverse fracture of a long bone, leaving no splinters; what has been called, in France, Fracture en rave.

RAPHAN'IA, Convulsio Raphania, Rhaphania, Mor'bus spasmodicus malignus seu popul'aris seu Silesi'acus, Eelamp'sia typhoides, Synclonus Raphania. Linnæus gives this name to a convulsive disease, not uncommon in Germany and Sweden, and which has been attributed to the seeds of the Raph'anus Raphanistrum seu sylvestris, Raphanistrum seg'atum seu arven'se, Raph'istrum, being mixed with the corn. The convulsions are seated in the limbs, and are attended with acute pain. See Convulsio cerealis.

RAPHANIA MAÏZTICA, Pellagra.

RAPHANIS, (ραφανις.) Raphanus hortensis—r. Magna, Cochlearia armoracia.

RAPHANISTRUM ARVENSE, see Raphania.

RAPHANUS, Rapa, R. hortensis.

RAPHANUS HORTENSIS, Raph'anus, R. sativus seu niger, Raph'anis, Rhaph'anus, Radic'ula, Rhaphys, Ra'phys, Rharys, Ra'ryys, Rad'ish, (F.) Raisfort, Radis. Ord. Cruciferae. Sex. Syst. Tetradynamia Siliquosa. The root of this plant is a common esculent. It has, also, been given as a diuretic in calculous affections. The juice, made into a syrup, is exhibited to relieve hoarseness. Radishes have long been celebrated as antiscorbutics.

RAPHANUS MARINUS, Cochlearia armoracia—r. Raphanistrum, see Raphania—r. Rusticanus, Cochlearia armoracia—r. Sylvestris, see Raphania.

RA'PHĒ, Rha'phē, (ραφή, 'a suture'.) A name given to prominent lines resembling a raised stitch. Such is the raphe or transis which divides the scrotum into two parts, and which extends from the anterior part of the anus to the extremity of the penis. The name Ra'phē seu Ra'phē superior seu Lin'ea Media'na seu Sutu'ra cor'poris callo'si exte'ria seu chor'da longitudina'lis Lancis'ii is, also, given to two prominent lines which are longitudinal and parallel, and are seen at the upper surface of the corpus callosum, extending from the anterior to the posterior extremity of that commissure.

RAPHEX, Chenopodium vulvaria.

RAPHIANKIS'TRON, (ραφιων, 'a needle,' and αγκιστρον, 'a hook'.) An instrument employed in the formation of artificial pupil.

RAPHION, (ραφιων, dim. of ραφης, 'a needle,') Needle.

RAPHIS, (ραφης.) Needle, see Rapa.

RAPHUS, Rapa.

RAPHYS, Rapa, Raphanus hortensis.

RAPISTRUM, (from rapa.) see Raphania.

RAPONTIC, Rheum raphonticum.

RAPPORT (F.), (re, and portare, 'to bring,') Relat'io, Renunciat'io, 'a report.' A deposition made by a physician or surgeon, to prove the condition of a person, the nature of a disease, the existence or non-existence of pregnancy, sudden or violent death, &c. Formerly, there were the Rapports dénonciatifs, made at the desire of the injured or their friends, and intended to point out to the judges the details of the crime or misdemeanor,—the Rapports provisoires, the object of which was to obtain provisions for the injured individual, both as regarded food and medicine, and to defray the expenses of prosecution,—and Rapports mixtes, or those which were both dénonciatifs and provisoires. At present, reports or depositions are generally divided into judiciary, or those which serve to throw light on the subject matter of any civil or criminal cause; and administrative, which afford information on subjects relating to any branch of the public administration, as on the nuisance, or otherwise, of certain establishments, the character of any epidemic, &c.

RAPPORT, Eructation, Regurgitation.

RAPTUS, (rapio, raptum, 'to seize violently and suddenly'.) A violent and sudden attack or seizure.

RAPTUS HÆMORRHAG'ICUS. A hemorrhagic attack or seizure.

RAPTUS NERVO'RUM. A sudden and violent nervous seizure. A spasm or cramp.

RAPTUS POSTERGANÆUS, (raptus, post, 'behind,' and tergum, 'the back,') Opisthotonus.

RAPUM, Rapa—r. Majus, Brassica rapa.

RAPUNTIIUM SYPHILITICUM, (from rapum.) Lobelia syphilitica.

RÁPURE, Rasura.

RAPUS, Rapa.

RAPYS, Rapa, Raphanus hortensis.

RAQUETTE, Cactus opuntia.

RARE (F.), Rarus, 'rare.' An epithet for the respiration and pulse, when less frequent than in health.

RAREFA'CIENS, Rarifaciens, Aræol'icus, (F.) Raréfiant, (rarus, 'rare, thin,' and facere, 'to make.')

Medicines were so termed, which were supposed to be possessed of the power of giving more bulk or extension to the blood or other humours.

RAREFIANT, Rarefaciens.

RARIFACIENS, Rarefaciens.

RA'RITAS, (F.) Raréte. Rarity; scantiness; fewness.

RA'RITAS DEN'TIUM. A large space between the teeth, which appear to be, and may be, too few.

RASCATIO, Excretion.

RASCETA, Carpus, Malleolus—r. Pedis, Tarsus.

RASCHA, Carpus, Malleolus.

RASETA, Carpus, Malleolus.

RASETTA, Carpus, Malleolus.

RASH, Exanthem—r. Canker, see Cynanche maligna—r. Fever, Scarlatina—r. Lichenosus, Lichen—r. Mercurial, Eczema mercuriale—r. Mulberry, see Typhus—r. Nettle, Urticaria—r. Rose, Roseola—r. Summer, Lichen tropicus—r. Tooth, Strophulus—r. Wildfire, Ignis sylvaticus.

RASION (F.), Ra'sio, (from radere, rasum, 'to shave, scrape'.) In pharmacy, the division of substances by the rasp or file.

RASOIR, Razor.

RASORIAN, see Controstimulus.

RASO'RISM. The Italian medical doctrine of contro-stimulus, of which Rasori was the founder.

RASORIUM, (radere, rasum, 'to scrape,') Rasporium.

RASPATO'RIUM, (from râper, [old F.] rasper, 'to rasp,') Raso'rium, Rat'ula, Scal'prum raso'rium, Xys'ter, Xyste'rium, Xys'trum, Rad'ula, Runci'na, Runci'nula, Scal'prum, Ras'patory, (F.) Rugine, Grattoir. An instrument used for rasping bones, to detach the periosteum, — either in certain surgical operations, or for anatomical purposes.

RASPBERRY, Rubus idæus — r. Black, see Rubus strigosus — r. Ground, Hydrastis Canadensis — r. Wild, Rubus strigosus.

RASPING, Eructation.

RASPS, Rubus idæus.

RASSETA PEDIS, Tarsus.

RASTETA, Carpus, Malleolus.

RASU'RA, Xys'ma, Xys'mus, (F.) Râpure, (radere, rasum, 'to scrape,') A rasure, or scratch, or erosion. Also, the rasping or shaving of any substance; as Rasu'ræ Cor'ni Cer'vi, Harte's horn sha'rings.

RASURA, Scabs.

RATAFLA, (pron. Ratafe'a, and Rat'afee,) (F.)

Alcoolé sucré, Saccharo-alcoolé. A liquor, prepared by imparting to ardent spirits the flavor of various kinds of fruits, adding sugar.

RATANHY, Krameria ratanhia — r. of the Antilles, Krameria ixina.

RATE, Spleen.

RATELEUX, Splaneticus.

RÂTELIER, (from rateau, 'a rack,') see Dentier.

RA'TIO, Rationalitas, (reor, ratus, 'to think,') A reason, a cause, an explanation, a mode or manner; as Ratio symptom'atum, an explanation of the symptoms, — Ratio meden'di, Genus curatio'nis, Via curan'di; the reason, mode or manner of cure.

RATIO MEDENDI, see Ratio — r. Symptomatum, see Ratio.

RA'TION, (from ratio, 'a proportion,') Dia'rium. The daily allowance of necessaries, especially of food, to a soldier or sailor.

Diet rations are founded on principles laid down under Dietary; and in all civilized countries they are, in essential respects, the same. The following table is given by Professor Horsford of the rations of the more important armies in active service.

The reduction of the 'marching ration' in bulk and weight, without impairing its nutritive power, has received much attention. Professor Horsford has proposed one consisting of roasted and ground wheat or self-raising flour,—prepared by intimately incorporating bicarbonate of soda and pulverulent acid phosphate of lime with flour, and forming a dough with water,—and boiled or roasted whole beef, saused, dried and compressed, which, he says, is very palatable, imperishable, less expensive, of greatly reduced weight and bulk; requiring, therefore, less transportation, and "will subsist an army in health indefinitely long.

RATIONAL, Rationalis, (F.) Rationnel. That which is conformable to reason. This epithet is often opposed to empirical; as rational treatment. The French, also, say Signes rationnels, in opposition to Signes sensibles. See Organic.

RATIONALITAS, Ratio.

RATSBANE, Arsenious acid.

RATTLE, ([G.] Rattel), Râle.

RATTLES, THE, see Râle.

RATTLEBUSH, Sophora tinctoria.

RATTLESNAKE, Crotalus horridus—r. Leaf, Goodyera pubescens—r. Plantain, Goodyera pubescens—r. Root, Nabalus albus, Polygala senega, Trillium latifolium—r. Weed, Hieracium vesicosum.

RATTLESNAKE'S MASTER, Agave Virginica, Liatris scariosa, Nabalus albus.

RATTLEWEED, Actæa racemosa.

RATULA, Raspatorium.

RAUCEDO, gen. Rauce'dimis, Rau'citas, Paraphonia rau'ca, Asper'itas Arte'riæ as'persæ, Vox rau'ca, Bran'chus, Hoarseness, (Sc.) Roup, (Prov.) Raup, (F.) Enrouement, Raueté, (raucus, 'hoarse.') A change in the voice, which loses its smoothness and becomes low and obscure. It is a common symptom in diseases of the larynx and trachea.

RAUCEDO CATARRHÆLIS. Hoarseness from cold.

RAUCITAS, Raucedo.

RAUCITÉ, Raucedo.

RAUCOUS, Rau'cus, (F.) Rauque, 'hoarse;' as a raucous voice—Vox rauca seu raucis'ona.

RAUQUE, Raucous.

RAVE, (from rapa), Brassica rapa.

RAVERY, Delirium.

RAWP, Raucedo.

RAY, Diarrhœa.

RAYONNÉ, (from [F.] rayon, [L.] radius, 'a ray,') Radiated.

RAYONS SOUS-IRIENS, Ciliary processes.

RA'ZOR, Cul'ter tonsor'ius, Machæ'ris, Novacula, Xy'rum, Xy'rus, (F.) Rasoïr, (radere, rasum, 'to shave,') An instrument for shaving. Used in surgery to remove hairs, where they would interfere with any operation.

RE (L.), in composition, 'back, in return, again.' Before vowels, at times; and before h and d, it becomes red.

REACHING, (from [Sax.] pæcan, 'to reach,') Vomitition.

REACTION, Reâctio, (re, 'again,' and agere, actum, 'to act,') An action of resistance to a power applied. A species of vital movement or excitement, tending to prevent or destroy the effects of any noxious power applied to the animal economy, and which, by some, has been attributed to the vis medicatrix nature. It is certainly dependent on the organic instinctive actions of the frame. It is the state of activity which succeeds the action on the nervous system of certain morbid influences.

READ, Rennet.

READY METHOD, Marshall Hall's Method. A mode of restoring respiration in cases of apnoea, proposed by Dr. Marshall Hall. It consists in placing the body in the prone position, making gentle pressure on the back; then removing the pressure, and turning the body on its side and a little beyond, executing these movements sixteen times in the minute. It is also termed the method of prone and postural respiration in apnoea.

REALGAR, Realgal, Arlada, Arladar, Auripigmentum rubrum, Arsenicum rubrum factitium, Abessi, Sandar'acha Græcorum, Red Sulphuret of Ar'senic. A violent poison. See Poison.

REAM, Cream.

REASON, Ra'tio, Lo'gos, (F.) Raison. The faculty or property of the mind by means of which man perceives the distinction between right and wrong, in physics as well as in morals. Reason is a just conclusion resulting from the comparison of two ideas, by virtue of which we form a judgment.

REBOLEA, Mummy.

REBONA, Mummy. Also, dried feces, Ster'cus adnst'um.

REBOUTEUR, (re, and bouter, 'to put,') Renoueur.

RECEIV'ER, Ampul'la, (F.) Ballon, Recipient, (recipere, receptum, (re, and capere, 'to take,') 'to take, to receive,') In pharmacy, a wide-necked globular vessel, the neck of which widens gradually outwards, to receive the tapering beak of the retort, in distillation. Like the retort, the receiver may be plain or tubulated.

A quilled receiver is one that has a tapering tube from its lower surface, which is inserted into a graduated bottle through a cork joint, when it is desirable to know accurately the amount of fluid that has passed over.

RECEPTA, Prescription.

RECEPTACULA DURÆ MATRIS, (from receptare, receptatum, 'to receive,') Sinuses of the dura mater.

RECEPTACULUM CHYLI, 'receptacle of the chyle;' R. Pecqueti seu Pecquetianum, Diversorium seu Stag'num chy'li, Sac'culus chy'lifer seu ro'rifer seu lac'teus, Al'veus ampullosus seu ampullos'ens, Utric'ulus lac'teus, Yesc'ula chy'li, Ampul'la chyli'fera seu chy'li, Cister'na lumb'aris seu Chy'li, Chyloco'stis, Chylodochi'um, Lat'ices lac'tei, Lum'bar cis'tern, Res'ervoir of Pec'quet, (F.) Réservoir du chyle, R. de Pecquet, Cisterne lombaire. A considerable dilatation of the thoracic duct, in front of the lumbar region of the vertebral column. It is the commencement of the duct.

RECEPTACULUM COTUS'NI. A triangular space, formed by a separation of the two laminae of the dura mater of the internal ear, near the middle of the posterior surface of the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, where the aquæductus vestibuli terminates. It is always filled with the Fluid of Cotugno.

RECEPTACULUM PECQUETI, R. Chyli—r. Sellæ equinæ lateribus appositum, Cavernous sinus.

RECEPTA'RII MED'ICI, (from receptum.) Physicians, according to Langius, who, without any reason, collect from pharmacopœias and chemical works masses of receipts (recepta) sufficient to load wagons, ("quibus plaustra onerare possent.")

RECEPTIV'ITY, Recepti'vitas, (F.) Réceptivité, (recipere, receptum, 'to receive,') A word used by Tissot to express the susceptibility of certain organs to receive morbid impressions.

RECEPTUM, Prescription.

RECESSUS. 'a retreat,' Abscess, see Lingula Sinus—r. Sulciformis, see Fovea vestibuli.

RECETTE, Prescription.

RECHAMELCA, Rachamelca.

RECHUTE, (re, and chute, 'a fall,') see Relapse.

RECIDIVA MORBI, (re-videre, (re, and cadere), 'to fall back.') Relapse.

RÉCIDIVE, see Relapse.

REC'IPĒ, (L.) (re, and capere, 'to take.') A Latin word which signifies 'take,' (F.) Prenez, and with which prescriptions are commenced. It is, often, represented by R, R̄, and was formerly by ℞, the symbol of Jove. See Abbreviation, and R. Substantively, Recipe means a prescription or receipt.

RÉCIPIENT, Receiver.

RECIPROCATIÖN, VIBRATIONS OF, see Sound.

RECLINATIO, Reclination—r. Palpebrarum, Ectropion.

RECLINATIO, Reclinatio, (reclinare, reclinatum, (re, and clinare, 'to bend,') 'to bend back,') A mode of operating for the cataract, which consists in applying the needle in a certain manner to the anterior surface of the cataract and depressing it into the vitreous humour, in such a way that the front surface of the cataract is the upper, and its back surface the lower one.

RECLUSOR PALPEBRARUM, (from recludere, reclusum, 'to open,') Levator palpebræ superioris.

RECOMPOSITION, Metasynchrisis.

RECONVALESCENTIA, (re, and convalescere, 'to get well,') Convalescence.

RECORDATIO, (from recordari, recordatus, 'to remember,') Memory.

RECORDATUS, Memory.

RECORPORATIVUS, (re, and corporare, 'to form into a body,') Metasynchritic.

RECOVERY, (from recuperare, (re, and capio, 'to take,') 'to regain,') Restauraatio.

RECREATIO, (re, and creare, 'to create,') Restauraatio.

RECREMENT, Recrementum, (re, and cernere, cretum, 'to sift,') Of old, dross, excrement. With the moderns, a humour, which, after having been separated from the blood, is again returned to it; such as the saliva, the secretion of serous membranes, &c. Such fluids are said to be recrementitial, (F.) Récrementeux, Récrementiel, Humeurs inquilini.

RECREMENTA (pl. of recrementum) VESICÆ, Urine.

RÉCREMENTEUX, see Recrement.

RECREMENTITIAL FLUIDS, see Recrement.

RECREMENTOËXCREMENTIT'IAL. Applied to secreted fluids, as the saliva, bile, &c., which are in part reabsorbed and in part excreted.

RECREMENTUM, Recrement.

RECRUDESCENTIA, Palincote'sis, Recrudescence, (re, and crudus, 'raw,') An increase of a disease after a temporary remission.

RECTAL, Rectalis. Appertaining, or relating, to the rectum,—as 'rectal tubc.' See Tube, rectal.

RECTIFICA'TION, Rectificatio, (rectum, 'right,' and facere, 'to make,') An operation by which certain liquids are purified by distilling them, either singly or after admixture with other substances.

RECTITIS, (rectum, and itis), properly architis or proctitis. Inflammation of the rectum. Proctalgia inflammatoria.

RECTO, in composition, relating or belonging to the rectum.

RECTOCLE, (recto, and κληη, 'ruptur,') Cystocle.

RECTOSTENOSIS, (recto, and στυος, 'contracted,') Stricture of the rectum.

RECTOÛTERINE, Rectoüterinus, (recto, and uterus.) Appertaining, or relating, to the rectum and uterus.

RECTOÛTERINE CUL-DE-SAC, see Uterus—1.

FOLLS, see Uterus—r. Pouch, see Uterus.

RECTOVAG'INAL, (recto, and vagina), Rectovaginalis. That which relates or belongs to the rectum and vagina.

RECTOVAGINAL CUL-DE-SAC or POUCH is formed by the reflection of the peritoneum from the upper third of the vagina to the rectum.

RECTOVAGINAL FIS'TULA is owing to a preternatural communication between the rectum and vagina through the above septum.

RECTOVAGINAL SEP'TUM, (F.) Cloison rectovaginale, is formed by the junction—back to back—(or by what the French term adossement) of the rectum and vagina. It separates these two canals from each other.

RECTOVES'ICAL, (recto, and vesica, 'the bladder,') Rectovesicalis. Having relation to the rectum and bladder; as the 'rectovesical fold or pouch or cul-de-sac' of the peritoneum, between the rectum and bladder. See Urinary Bladder.

RECTUM, from rectus, 'straight,' so called from a notion that it is straight, which it is not. Intestinum Rectum, Apeuthys'menos, Euthyseteron, Lon'gaon, Lou'gas, Lou'ganou, Ar'chos, Cys'savos, Prin'ceps, Monoco'lou [?], Bumgut, (Prov.) Jotgut. The third and last portion of the great intestine. It forms the continuation of the sigmoid flexure of the colon, occupies the posterior part of the pelvis, and extends from the left side of the sacro-vertebral articulation to the coccyx, before which it opens outwards by the orifice called the anus. It is cylindrical, but sacculated, as it were, at its inferior portion, where it is consequently larger, and is attached to the sacrum by the mesorectum. Like the other portions of the canal it is formed of three membranes. Towards the lower extremity, some parallel and longitudinal wrinkles are observable on its inner surface: these are the Col'umnae, Columnæ car'næe of the Rectum or of Morgagni, (F.) Columnæ du rectum or de Morgagni. They are merely folds of the mucous membrane, between which is a number of Lacunæ. The arteries of the rectum are numerous. They proceed from the inferior mesenteric, hypogastric, and internal pudic, and are called hemorrhoidal. The veins open, partly into the hypogastric vein, partly into the inferior mesenteric. The nerves proceed from the sciatic and hypogastric plexuses. The rectum receives the fecal matters, as they pass from the colon, which serves as a reservoir for them.

RECTUS, 'straight.' (F.) Droit. A term, used in anatomy for parts that pursue a straight course;—as RECTUS ABDOM'INIS, (F.) Pubio-sternal, Sternopubien (Ch.), Droit de l'abdomen. A long flat muscle, situate at the anterior part of the abdomen, and separated from that of the opposite side by the linea alba. It is attached, above, to the cartilages of the last three true ribs; and, below, to the pubis by a very strong tendon, the outer edge of which is continuous with the fascia transversalis. This muscle is enclosed in an aponeurotic sheath; and, in its course, has three or four transverse aponeurotic intersections. It bends the chest on the pelvis, and conversely.

RECTUS ANTERIOR BREVIS. Rectus capitis internus minor—r. Anterior longus, R. capitis internus major—r. Capitis anticus longus, R. c. internus major.

RECTUS CAPITIS INTERNUS MA'JOR, R. internus major seu anterior longus seu capitis anticus longus, (F.) Trachélo-basilaire, Grand droit antérieur de la tête. This muscle is long in proportion to its breadth, flat, and broader above than below. It is situate at the anterior and lateral part of the neck, and arises from the transverse processes of the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth cervical vertebrae. It is inserted into the basilar process of the occipital bone.

RECTUS CAP'ITIS INTER'NUS MI'NOR, R. inter'nus mi'nor seu ant'e'rior bre'vis, Rec'uens, An'nens, (F.) Petit trachélo-basilaire, Petit droit ant'érieur de la tête. This is situate deeper than the last. It is thin, flattened, irregularly quadrilateral, and passes from the anterior surface of the body of the first vertebra, near the origin of the transverse process, to be inserted into the basilar process.

RECTUS CAP'ITIS LATERA'LIS, R. latera'lis seu latera'lis Fallo'pii, Transversa'lis anti'eus pri'mus, (F.) Trachélo-atloïdo-basilaire, Atloïdo-sous-occipital (Ch.), Droit latéral de la tête. There is a muscle of this name on each side of the head. It is flat, quadrilateral, and passes from the transverse process of the atlas to the occiput, behind the jugular fossa. It inclines the head to one side.

RECTUS CAP'ITIS POSTI'CUS MA'JOR, R. Ma'jor Cap'itis posti'eus mi'nor (Albinus), Spin'a'roïdo-occipita'lis, (F.) Arôïdo-occipitale (Ch.), Grand droit postérieur de la tête. A flat, triangular muscle, situate at the posterior and superior part of the neck. It extends from the spinous process of the second cervical vertebra to the external surface of the lower semicircular ridge of the occipital bone. This muscle extends the head, inclines it to one side, and causes it to experience a rotary motion, which directs the face to its side.

RECTUS CAP'ITIS POSTI'CUS MI'NOR, R. mi'nor, (F.) Taber-atloïdo-occipital, Atloïdo-occipital (Ch.), Petit droit postérieur de la tête. A flat, triangular muscle, situate beneath the last, which passes from the posterior arch of the atlas to the occipital bone. It extends the head.

RECTUS CAPITIS POSTICUS MINOR, R. c. p. major — r. Cruris, R. femoris.

RECTUS EXTER'NUS OC'ULI, Abduct'or oc'uli, Indignabundus, Indignat'orins, Iracundus, Oc'ulum mo'vens secu'ndus, (F.) Droit externe, Iracible ou Abducteur, Orbito-exterus-scléroticien. All the recti muscles of the eye, four in number, arise from the bottom of the orbit, and are inserted into the sclerotic coat of the eye. The Rectus externus is divided, at its posterior extremity, into two portions, one of which is attached to the outer part of the foramen opticum, and the other to the sphenoid bone.

RECTUS FEM'ORIS, Rec'tus seu Grac'ilis ant'e'rior seu cruris, (F.) Ilio-rotulien, Droit antérieur de la cuisse. A straight muscle, seated at the anterior part of the thigh. It extends from the anterior and inferior spine of the ilium and the cotyloid cavity of the patella. This muscle extends the leg upon the thigh, and conversely. It can, also, bend the thigh upon the pelvis or carry the pelvis forward.

RECTUS INFERIOR FEMORIS, Gracilis.

RECTUS INFE'RIOR OC'ULI, Depres'sor oculi, Timidus, Dep'rimens, Humilis, Oc'ulum mo'vens qua'r'tus, (F.) Sous-optico-sphéno-scléroticien, Droit inférieur ou abaïsseur de l'œil, Muscle humble, arises below the optic foramen from the sphenoid bone. It depresses the eye.

RECTUS INTERNUS MAJOR, R. capitis internus major — r. Internus minor, R. capitis internus minor.

RECTUS INTERNUS OC'ULI, Addu'cens seu Adduct'or oc'uli, Bibit'orins, Oc'uli ad'ductor, Oc'ulum mo'vens pri'mus, (F.) Orbito-intus-scléroticien, Droit interne de l'œil ou adducteur ou buvneur. It arises from the sphenoid at the inferior part of the foramen opticum. It turns the eye towards the nose.

RECTUS LATERALIS, R. capitis lateralis — r. Lateralis Fallopii, R. capitis lateralis — r. Major, R. capitis posticus major — r. Minor, R. capitis posticus minor.

RECTUS SUPERIOR OC'ULI, Atto'leus oc'uli seu oc'ulum, Leva'tor seu Eleva'tor oc'uli, Super'bus, Oc'ulum mo'vens ter'tius, (F.) Superbe, Sus-optico-sphéno-scléroticien, Droit supérieur ou Élévateur de l'œil, Dédaigneux, is attached to the circumference of the foramen opticum.

All the recti muscles are concerned in the voluntary motions of the eye. The oblique muscles have been supposed by Sir C. Bell to execute the involuntary.

RECUBITORIUM, (recumbere, recubitum, 'to recline,') Anaëlinterium.

RECUPERATIO, Restauratio.

RECUPERATION, (from recuperare, recuperatum, 'to recover,') Restauratio.

RECUPERATIVE, Recu'peratory. Restorative. Recovering. Belonging to recovery.

RECURRENT, Recur'rens, (from recurvere, (re, and currere), 'to run back,') A name given to several arterial and nervous branches, which seem to re-ascend towards the origin of the trunk whence they emanate; also, to a disease that relapses.

RECURRENT ARTERIES. This name has been given to several arteries of the forearm, and to one of the leg. In the forearm, there are, 1. The Radial recur'rent, Artère récurrente de l'épicondyle (Ch.), which arises from the superior part of the radial, and ascends between the supinator longus, s. brevis, and the brachialis internus. 2. The ant'e'rior cu'bital recur'rent, A. récurrente de l'épitrachlée (Ch.), which arises from the upper and inner part of the cubital, and ascends between the pronator teres and brachialis internus. 3. The post'e'rior cu'bital recur'rent, which arises from the preceding artery, or from the cubital itself, and ascends between the olecranon and internal tuberosity of the humerus. 4. The post'e'rior rad'ial recur'rent, A. récurrente olécranéenne (Ch.). It arises from the posterior interosseous, and ascends between the posterior cubital and anconeus muscles. In the leg, the Ar'teria recur'rens tibia'lis, A. récurrente au genou (Ch.), is furnished by the anterior tibial, and ascends to the tibialis anticus muscle.

RECURRENT BANDAGES are formed by convolutions of bandages, which make a kind of cap for the part—as the head—to which they are applied.

RECURRENT FEVER, see Relapse.

RECURVATIO, (re, and curvus, 'crooked,') see Hump.

RECUTITUS, (re, 'back,' and cutis, 'skin,') Apella.

REDBEAN, Abrus precatorius.

REDBERRY, Arbutus uva ursi, Gaultheria, Panax quinquefolium — r. Bitter, Cornus Florida — r. Swamp, Vaccinium oxycoccos.

REDGOWN, see Strophulus.

REDGUM, see Strophulus.

RED HEAD, Asclepias Curassavica.

REDMAILKES, Papaver rhœas.

REDROD, Cornus sericea.

RED ROOT, Celastrus, Lachnanthes tinctoria, Sanguinaria Canadensis.

REDSHANKS, Polygonum persicaria.

RED WATER TREL, see Sassy Bark.

RED WEED, Phytolacca decandra.

REDIBIA, Paronychia.

REDIMICULUM, ('a chaplet,') Diadema.

REDINGOTES ANGLAISES, 'English riding coats, frock coats,' see Condom.

REDINTEGRATIO, (re, and integer, 'entire,') Regeneration, Restauratio.

RÉDONDANCE, (re, and unda, 'a wave,') Plethora.

REDOUBLEMENT, (re, and doubler, 'to double,') Exacerbation, Paroxysm.

REDRESSEUR UTÉRIN, (re, and dresser, 'to make straight,') Pessary, intrauterine.

REDS, (from the colour,) Menstrua.

REDUCTIO, (reducere, reductum, (re, and ducere, ducere, 'to lead,') 'to bring back,') Reduction, Taxis—r. Præputii impedita, Phimosis.

REDUCTIO, (Reductio, Redpositio, Restitutio, Diapylaxis, Diaplasimus, Syntaxis. A surgical operation, the object of which is to restore displaced parts to their original situation. Thus, we say the reduction or setting of a fracture, when the displaced parts are again brought to their proper relative situation. The reduction of a hernia is the restoration of the protruded parts to the cavity of the abdomen. This is, also, called Taxis.

In pharmacy, the process of restoring oxides, chlorides, sulphurets, &c., to the metallic state.

REDUNDANTIA, (re, and unda, 'a wave,') Plethora.

REDUVIA, Paronychia.

REED MACE, Typha latifolia.

REFECTIO, (reficere, refectionem, 'to restore,' from re, and facere, 'to make,') Restitutio.

REFECTIVA, Analeptica.

REFECTUS, Restauratio.

REFICIENTIA, Analeptica.

RÉFLECTIF, Reflex.

REFLECTION, (re, and flexere, flexum, 'to bend,') Reflexio, (F.) Reflexion. A bending or turning back. Duplicature. The act of turning the mind back on its actions; so as to constitute contemplation, deliberation.

REFLECTOR EPIGLOTTIDIS. A muscle, which arises from the arytenoid cartilage and inner part of the thyroid, and is inserted into the lateral edges of the epiglottis.

REFLEX, (Reflexus, (F.) Réflexe, Réflexif, 'same etymon as Reflection.') A term applied to an action, which consists in the reflection by an efferent nerve of an impression conveyed to a nervous centre by an afferent nerve; hence reflex movement, reflex paralysis, reflex epilepsy, &c.

A reflex action is generally regarded to be one executed without consciousness; like the 'reflex or excito-motory movements' of Dr. Marshall Hall.

REFLEX MOVEMENTS, see Motion—r. System of nerves, see Excitomotory, and Nerves.

REFLEXIO, Reflection—r. Palpebrarum, Ectropion.

RÉFLEXION, Reflection.

RÉFORME, Invaliding.

REFRACTION, Refractio, Photocampsis, Diacclusis, (re, and frangere, fractum, 'to break,') The change of direction which rays of light experience when they pass obliquely from one medium into another of different density. If the light passes from a rarer to a denser medium, it approaches the perpendicular raised at the point of immersion. The contrary occurs, when it goes from a denser to a rarer medium. The theory of lenses, telescopes, and of the eye, rests entirely on this property of light.

RÉFRIGÉRANT, see Alembic.

REFRIGÉRANTS, Refrigerantia, Psyc'tica, Antither'ma, Frigefacientia, (F.) Rafraichissants, Réfrigeratifs, Desaltérants, (re, and frigere, 'to cool,') Medicines which depress the morbid temperature of the body. The chief reputed refrigerants are the Potassæ Nitræ [?], the Sodæ Boras [?], but chiefly the abstraction of caloric by ice and cold drinks, cold water, cold lemonades, sodawater, and effervescing draughts internally; and externally, cool air, cold water, evaporating lotions, and frigorific mixtures.

RÉFRIGÉRATIFS, Refrigerants.

REFRIGERATOR, see Alembic.

REGENERATIO, (re, and generare, generatum, 'to beget,') Regeneration, Reproduction.

REGENERATION, Regeneratio, Palingenesis, Palingenesia, Redintegratio. Reproduction of a part of the body, which has been destroyed.

REGIMEN, gen. Regiminis, (F.) Régime, (regere, 'to govern,') The rational and methodical use of food, and of everything essential to life; both in a state of health and disease. It is often restricted, in its meaning, to Diet. It is sometimes used synonymously with hygiene.

Régime Sanitaire and Système Sanitaire, mean the measures and regulations adopted to prevent the development and propagation of diseases reputed to be pestilential, — especially plague, yellow fever, and cholera.

REGIMINAL, Regiminalis, (from regimen, gen. regiminis.) Relating or appertaining to regimen, — as 'regiminal treatment,' or treatment by regimen.

REGINA PRATI, 'queen of the meadow,' Spiraea ulmaria.

REGIO, Region.

REGIO AURICULARIS. The region of the ear.

REGIO BUCCA' LIS. The region of the cheek.

REGIO CARD'ACA, Epigastric region.

REGIO CERVIC'ALIS. The region of the neck. The cervical region.

REGIO EPIGASTRICA, Epigastrium.

REGIO FACIA' LIS. The facial region.

REGIO FRONTA' LIS. The frontal region.

REGIO GASTRICA, Umbilical region — r. Hypochondriaca, Hypochondre — r. Hypogastrica, see Hypogastrium — r. Iliaca, Iliac region — r. Inguinalis, Inguinal region — r. Ischiadica, Ischiadic region — r. Jugalis, Jugal region — r. Lumbalis, Lumbi — r. Mentalis, Mental region — r. Mesogastrica, Umbilical region — r. Nasalis, Nasal region — r. Nuchæ, Nuchal region — r. Nuchalis, Nuchal region — r. Occipitalis, Occiput — r. Occipitalis inferior, Nuchal region — r. Perinæi, Perinæum — r. Præcordiaca, Præcordial region — r. Pubis, Pubic region — r. Stomachalis, Epigastric region — r. Stomachica, Epigastric region — r. Temporalis, Temple — r. Umbilicalis, Umbilical region.

REGION, Regio, (regere, 'to direct,') Anatomists have called regions determinate spaces on the surface of the body or of different organs. Thus, the abdomen has been divided into several; to which different names have been given. See Abdomen, Epigastrium, Hypochondrium, Hypogastrium.

RÉGION OMBILICALE, Umbilical region.

REGIONAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy.

RÈGLES, (from regula, 'a rule,') Menses — r. Dèvies, Menstruation, vicarious — r. Difficiles, Dysmenorrhœa.

RÉGLISSE, Glycyrrhiza.

RÈGNE ANIMAL, (from regnum, 'a kingdom,') see Animal.

REG'ULAR, Regularis, (F.) Régulier, (from regula, (regere, 'to govern,') 'a rule,') According to rule. Applied to the types of a disease, and to the pulse, when according to rule.

REGULAR PRACTITIONER. One who practises his profession according to the rules established by law or professional custom.

REGULUS, (dim. of rex, gen. regis, 'a king,') A pure metal. One reduced from its ore.

REGULUS ANTIMONI, Antimonium.

REGURGITATION, Regurgitatio, (re, and gurgere, gen. gur'gitis, 'a gulf,') The act by which a canal or reservoir throws back substances accumulated in it. Mitral regurgitation, for example, means the reflux of blood through the left auriculo-ventricular opening, during the contraction of the left ventricle. Regurgitation is also applied to the pu'king or poss'cting of infants; and to the rising of solids or fluids into the mouth in the adult, — from re, and gorge, (gurgere, 'the throat,') (F.) Rapport. What is called "vomiting at pleasure" is regurgitation.

The substances brought call the mouth by regurgitation, the French call Revois.

REIF, (from Sax. hneof), Psora.

REIN, (from [L.] ren, gen. renis), Kidney.

REINE DES PRÉS, 'queen of the meadows,' Spiraea ulmaria.

REINERZ, MINERAL WATERS OF. Rein-erz is a small town in Silesia, three German miles from Glatz. The waters are acidulous chalybeates. The principal springs are the tepid drinking spring, the cold spring, and three bathing springs.

REINFORCEMENT, FASCICULUS OF, F. Cuneatus. A band of fibres from the corpus innominatum or lateral part of the anterolateral column of the medulla, which is continued up behind and around the corpus olivare, is lined on its inner or central surface with ciceritious substance, enlarges as it ascends, passes over the upper surface of the pons Varolii, and is expanded into the optic thalamus. It thus forms, in its course, the anterior paries of the fourth ventricle, and is brought into view by brushing away the tuberculum cinereum or gray matter of the ventricle. This band has received the name owing to its constantly increasing as it ascends, and being mixed up with gray matter on its inner face, from which it seems to derive new fibres.

REINS, (from [L.] ren, pl. renes), Kidneys, Lumbi.

REINS SUCCENTURIÉS ou SUCCENTURIAUX, Capsules, renal.

REJECTIO, Anagoge, (rejicere, rejectum, (re, and jacere, 'to cast,') 'to cast back.')

Every excretion by the mouth,—spitting, expectoration, regurgitation, or vomiting.

REJECTIO SANGUINIS E PULMONIBUS, Hæmoptysis.

REJUVENESCENCE, Rejuvenescentia, (re, and juvenescens, 'growing young: [juvenis, 'a youth.]) A renewal of youth. The state of being young again. The assumption of the characteristics of youth by the aged.

RELÂCHANT, Relaxant.

RELÂCHEMENT, Relaxation.

RELAPSE, Hypotrophé, Epistrophé, Hypotrophé, Morb'bi Recidiva, Hypotropiasmus, (re, and labor, lapsus, 'to fall down.')

The return of a disease during, or shortly after, convalescence. The French use Rechute in this sense; and Récidive (Morb'bi recidivus) for the return of a complaint, at a greater or less period after the complete recovery of health.

The terms Relapsing or Recurrent fever, Short fever, Five-day fever, Seven-day fever, Bilious Remittent fever, Remitting Icteric fever, and Mild Yellow fever, Typhus seu Febris recurrens, (F.) Fièvre à rechute, have been given to a form of continued fever, which has occasionally appeared epidemically, as in Edinburgh, in 1843 and 1847, and was generally attended with icteric symptoms. The main phenomena disappeared at about the end of a week; but in many cases a relapse occurred about the end of a fortnight. Few died of the affection.

RELAPSING FEVER, see Relapse.

RELATIO, (re, and ferre, latum, 'to carry,')

Rapport.
RELATION, FUNCTIONS OF, see Function.

RELAXANT, Laxans, Malacticum, Chalacticum, Pareticum, (F.) Relâchant, (re, and laxare, 'to loosen.')

A medicine which diminishes the tension of organs. Mucilaginous and fatty substances are relaxants.

RELAXANTIA, Emollients.

RELAXATIO, Relaxation—r. Cordis et arteriarum, Diastole.

RELAXATION, Relaxatio. Chalactis, Chalactis, (F.) Relâchement. In Physiology, relaxation is opposed to contraction. In Pathology, it means great looseness of a part.

RELÈVE PAUPIÈRE, ([L.] re, and levare, 'to raise.')

An instrument for raising the eyelid.
RELEVEUR DE L'ANUS, Levator ani—r. de la Lèvre inférieure, Levator labii inferioris—r. du Menton, Levator labii inferioris—r. de l'Omoplate, Levator scapule—r. de la Prostate, Levator prostate—r. de l'Urèthre, Levator urethrae.

RELIGIOUS DISEASES, (F.) Maladies religieuses. Diseases affecting the nervous system, and arising from the excitement of religious emotions. See Convulsionnaire.

RELIQUAT (F.), (from [L.] relinquere, relictum, 'to leave.')

The remnant or remains of a disease.

REMAK FIBRES, (after Remak, the German physiologist), see Fibres, Remak.

REMANSIO MENSIIUM, (re, and maneo, manum, 'to stay,')

Amenorrhœa.

REMÈDE, ([L.] remedium), Clyster, Medicament—r. du Capuchin, Liquor hydrargyri nitrici—r. du Duc d'Antin, Liquor hydrargyri nitrici—r. de Dnrande, Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

REMEDIAL, Medicinal.

REMEDIAL, Medicinal.

REMEDILESS, Incurable.

REMEDIIUM, (re, and mederi, 'to heal,')

Juans, Medicament—r. Dentifricium, Dentifrice.

REMEDY, Medicament—r. English, Cinchona.

REMETIC, Medicament.

REMISSIO, (re, and mittere, missum, 'to send,')

Decline, Remission—r. Cordis et Arteriarum, Diastole—r. Morb'bi, Remission—r. Virium, Atony.

REMIS'ION, Remis'sio, Epan'sio, An'sis, Submis'sio, Aph'sis, En'dosis, Meio'sis. In a more extensive signification, a temporary diminution of the symptoms of a disease, either acute or chronic. Remis'sio mor'bi. Diminution in the febrile symptoms, such as occurs in a remittent fever between the exacerbations.

REMITTENS, Remittent—r. Icterodes, Fever, yellow.

REMITTENT, Remit'tens, Remit'ting. Any disease which presents remissions.

REMITTENT OF CHILDREN, Fever, infantile, remittent.

REMITTENT FEVER, Febris remit'tens, Epan'sis, Exacerbating, paroxysmal, subcontinuel, endem'ic, endem'ial or endem'ical fever, (F.) Fièvre rémittente, is one which strikingly exacerbates and remits, but without intermission. The ordinary bilious fever of the United States is a simple remittent—Epan'etus mit'tis, (F.) Fièvre rémittente simple.

REMITTENT FEVER, BILIOUS, Remittent fever, see Relapse.

REMITTING ICTERIC FEVER, see Relapse.

REMORA, (re, and mora, 'delay.')

Stoppage, stagnation.—as of blood. Also, the name of two surgical instruments, intended to retain parts in situ.

The one was used, formerly, in castration, to prevent the intestines from protruding at the inguinal ring; the other, called Remora Hildani, (F.) Arrêt d'Hildan, Echene'is, was employed to maintain fractures and luxations reduced. It is not now used.

REMORA ARATRI, Ononis spinosa—r. Hildani, see Remora.

REN, Kidney.

RENAL, Renal'is, (from ren.) That which relates to the kidney.

RENAL ALTERNATIVES, see Alternatives.

RENAL ARTERIES, Emulgent arteries, are very large and short, and commonly two in number—one to each kidney. They arise from the sides of the abdominal aorta, forming with it a right angle. The left is commonly a little more anterior and elevated than the right. After a short course, they arrive at the fissure of the kidney, where they divide, before entering it, into three or four very considerable branches.

RENAL CAPSULE, Capsule, renal.—r. Nerve, see Splanchnic nerves.

RENAL PLEX'USES, Emulg'ent Plex'uses. These are two:—one on each side. They proceed from fasciuli of the solar and cœliac plexuses; from the outer side of the semilunar ganglion and the final expansion of the small splanchnic nerves. These plexuses begin by three or four ganglions, situate at the commencement of the renal artery; and they give off from their circumference many fine, straight filaments, which do not anastomose, and which enter the kidney with the divisions of the renal artery. These divisions they accompany.

RENAL VEINS, Emulg'ent Veins. These are very large. Their roots follow the same course as the arteries in the substance of the kidney. In the fissure or pelvic portion of the kidney, they unite into a single trunk, which passes transversely inwards, and opens at the side of the vena cava descendens.

RENCHUS, (ῥῆχος.) Snoring, Stertor.

REN'CUSUS, Renic'ulus, Ren'ulus, (dim. of ren.) A small kidney. A lobe of the kidney.

RENDERING, (as lard,) see Adeps præparatus.

RENDLES, Rennet.

RENEAL'MIA EXALTA'TA, (after P. and M. L. Renéaulme, botanical writers of France,) Alpin'ia exalta'ta seu tubula'ta, (F.) Rénéaulme. A plant of British Guiana, which is possessed of diaphoretic and diuretic properties; and, in large doses, is emetic. It is much used there in dropsy, rheumatism, dysentery, &c. The bruised rhizoma is the part employed.

RENES SUCCENTURIATI, (succenturio, 'a subcenturion,') Capsules, renal.

RENICULUS, (dim. of ren.) Renculus.

RENIFORM, (ren, and forma, 'shape,') Nephroid.

RENNES, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Thermal salines in the department of Aube, France, containing carbonic acid and chloride of magnesium. Temperature, 103° to 121° of Fah. Season, from the 1st of May to October.

RENNET, Renn'et, Coäg'ulum, Py'tia, Pyc'tia, (from [G.] gerinnen, 'to coagulate' [?],) (F.) Présure, Caille-lait. When the fourth stomach or Abomasus of the calf is salted and dried, it possesses the property of coagulating milk, when a portion of it is soaked in water, and the infusion—Ren'net, Ren'dles, Ron'ning, (Prov.) Healop, Cheeselope, Yernin, Earn'ing, Preaser, Read, Run'ning, Steep—is added to milk. Liquid rennet or Rennet wine may be made, according to Mr. Wm. Procter, Jr., of fresh rennets, (about three,)  $\frac{3}{4}$  xxiv; chloride of sodium, three trounces; alcohol, f  $\frac{3}{4}$  vj; white wine, f  $\frac{3}{4}$  xvj; water, q. s.) A table-spoonful of this solution coagulates a quart of milk to a firm curd.

RENNET WHEY, see Serum lactis.

RENON'CuLE, Ranunculus—r. Bulbense, Ranunculus bulbosus.

RENOUÉE, (re, and nouer, 'to knot,') Polygonum aviculare—r. Acre, Polygonum hydropiper.

RENOUEUR, (F.) Rebouteur, Rhabilleur, re, and nouer, (nodus, 'a knot,') 'to tie or knot,') A bone-doctor:—a bonesetter. One who makes a trade of reducing fractures and dislocations.

RENOVATIO, (re, and novare, novatum, 'to make new,') Ananæosis.

RENSELAERIA VIRGINICA, (after General Van Rensselaer, of Albany,) Peltandra Virginica.

RENUENS, (renno, 'to deny by a motion of the head,') Rectus capitis internus minor.

RENULUS, (dim. of ren.) Renculus.

RENUM ATONIA, 'atony of the kidneys,' Nephratonia—r. Paralysis, Nephratonia.

RENUNCIATIO, (re, and nunciare, nunciatum, 'to tell,') Rapport.

RENVÈSEMENT DE LA LANGUE, (re, and vertre, versum, 'to turn,') Paraglossa—r. de la Matrice, Uterus, inversion of the—r. des Pau-pières, Ectropion—r. du Rectum, Proctocele—r. de la Vessie, Exocyste, Extrophia of the bladder.

RENOVIS, (re, and envoyer, 'to send,') see Regurgitation.

RÉOPHORE, (ron, 'a current,' and φερω, 'to carry,') Electrode.

REPANDATIO, (repandus, re, and pandere, 'to spread,') 'spread backwards,') Lordosis.

REPARATIO, (re, and parare, paratum, 'to set in order,') Restauratio.

REPARATIVE, Repar'atory. Having the power of restoring or repairing.

REPELLENTIA, Repellents.

REPEL'LENTS, Repellen'tia, Repercutien'tia, Apocru'stica, Stal'tica, Repercus'sives, (F.) Répercussifs, (re, and pellere, 'to drive,') Medicines which, when applied to a tumefied part, cause the fluids, that render it tumid, to recede, as it were, from it. Astringents, cold water, ice, &c., are repellents.

RÉPERCUSSIFS, (re, and percutio, percussum, per, and quater, 'to shake or batter,') 'I strike back,') Repellents.

REPERCUSSIO, Contra-fissura, Repercussion. REPERCUS'SION, Repercus'sio, Anac'lasis.

Disappearance of a tumour or cutaneous eruption, in consequence of the application of a repellent. The action of a repellent remedy. The French writers use the term Délitescence, Delitescen'tia, for the sudden disappearance of a tumour, inflammation, eruptive disease, or purulent collection, without the disease occurring in any other part of the body: in this respect delitescence differs from metastasis. Délitescence of an inflammation or 'sudden disappearance' is distinguished by certain French pathologists from Resolution. Repercussion also means Ballottement.

REPERCUSSIVES, Repellents.

REPERCUTIENTIA, Repellents.

REPLETIO, (re, 'again,' and pleo, 'to fill,') Fulness, Plethora.

REPLI LONGITUDINAL DE LA MÉNINGE, (repli, 'a fold,' from [L.] re, and plicare, 'to fold,') Falx cerebri.

REPOSITIO, (re, and ponere, positum, 'to place,') Anaplasia, Reduction, Taxis.

REPOUSSOIR, (re, and pellere, pulsium, 'to drive,') Punch—r. d'Arêtes, Probang.

REPRIMENS, (re, and premere, 'to press,') Epi-scheticus.

REPRODUCTION, Reproduc'tio, Regenera'tio, re, and producere, productum, pro, and ducere, 'to lead,') 'to bring forth,') The function by which living bodies produce bodies similar to themselves. See Generation. As a general remark, it will be found true, that the larger animals are uniparous; and the smaller, which are more exposed to destruction, multiparous.

REPRODUCTION MÉRISMATIQUE, see Generation.

REPRODUCTIV'ITAS, (F.) Reproductivité, Capability of reproducing.

REPULSORIUM, (re, and pellere, pulsium, 'to drive,') Punch.

REPURGA'TIO, Anacathar'sis, re, and pur-gare, purgatum, 'to cleanse,') According to Castelli, purgation by transpiration or by expectoration. Medicines producing this effect are called Repurgan'tia.

REQUIES, gen. Requie'tis, re, and quies, 'rest,') Acinesia.

REQUIETIO, (re, and quiescere, quietum, 'to become at rest,') Acinesia.

RES CONTRA NATURAM, ('Things against nature,') (F.) Choses contre-nature, are those things which tend to destroy man;—as disease, and every thing connected with it.

RES CULINARIA, Culinary art—r. Medica, Medicina.

RES NATURALES, 'natural things,' (F.) Choses naturelles. Those things, which, by their union, were conceived to constitute the nature of man; such as the elements, temperaments, humours, spirits, &c.

RES NON NATURALES, 'things not natural,' (?) (F.) Choses non-naturelles. Those things which, anciently, formed the matter of hygiene. See Nonnaturals.

RES VENEREA, Coition—r. Vestitaria, Vestitus. RESCISION, (re, and scindere, scissum, 'to cut asunder,') see Amputation.

RÉSEAU, (from reticulum, dim. of rete, 'a net,') Rete, Reticulum—r. Admirabile, Rete mirabile—r. Intermédiare, see Corpus spongiosum urethrae—r. Merveilleux, Rete mirabile.

RESECTIO, Resection—r. Articulorum, see Resection.

RESECTIO, Resectio, (resicare, resectum, (re, and secare,) 'to cut off,') Act of cutting or paring off. A name, given, especially by the French surgeons, to operations in which the carious extremities of long bones, or the unconsolidated extremities of fractured bones forming irregular joints, are removed with the saw.—Resectio articulo'rum, Decapitatio articulo'rum.

RESEDA CRISPATA, (from resedo, (re, and sedare, 'to settle,') 'to calm or assuage,') R. Luteola—r. Lanceolata, R. Luteola.

RESEDA LUTEOLA, R. lanceolata seu crispata, Luteola, Weld, Dyer's Weed. A European plant naturalized in the United States, which was at one time used as a diaphoretic and diuretic.

RESERANS, (from resero, 'to open,') Apertient.

RESERVE AIR, see Respiration.

RÉSERVOIR DE LA BILE, ([L.] re, and servare, 'to keep,') Gallbladder—r. du Chyle, Receptaculum chyli—r. des Larmes, Lachrymal sac—r. of Pecquet, Receptaculum chyli—r. de Pecquet, Receptaculum chyli—r. of the Thymus, see Thymus.

RESIDENTIA, (resido, 'to settle or sink down,') Sediment.

RESIDUAL AIR, see Respiration.

RESIMUS, 'turned up, bent back,' Camus.

RESIN, Resina, Rhetinē, (F.) Résine, (from ρῆω, 'to flow,') A vegetable product, commonly dry and concrete, more or less brittle, inodorous or slightly odorous, insipid, or of an acrid warm taste; of a smooth, glassy fracture, heavier than water, inflammable, insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol, ether, and yolk of egg, and negatively electrifiable by friction. Many resins are used in medicine; the greater part are purgative and irritating. Some act like acrid poisons. See Pinus sylvestris.

RESIN, ACAROID, see Xanthorrhœa—r. Botany Bay, see Xanthorrhœa—r. Cayenne, Caoutchouc—r. of New Holland, see Xanthorrhœa—r. of the Spruce fir, see Pinus abies—r. of Jalap, Extractum Jalapæ resinosum—r. of Mayapple, Resina Podophylli—r. of Xanthorrhœa, see Xanthorrhœa.

RESINA PODOPHYLLI, Resin of May Apple, (Ph. U. S. 1863.) Podophyllin. (Prepared from the powdered rhizoma of Podophyllum in the same manner as the Resina Jalapæ from Jalap root.) See Podophyllum petatum. Dose, gr. j or gr. ij.

RESINA SCAMMULI, Extractum scammonii.

RESINA STROBILINA, see Pinus balsamea, and Pinus mughos—r. Terebinthi, see Pistacia terebinthus.

RESINATUM, Rhetinites. Wine impregnated with resin, used by the ancients as a stomachic.

RÉSINE, Resin—r. de Cayenne, Caoutchouc—r. Élastique, Caoutchouc—r. de Guânc, see Guaiacum—r. Gomart, see Bursera gummifera—r. de Lierre, see Hedera helix.

RÉSINÉINE, Résinone, Résinéone, (from resin.) A solid or liquid product obtained by the distillation of rosin and lime or an alkali.

RESINOCE'UM, Rhetinoce'ron, (ῥηῖν, 'resin,' and κερως, 'wax,') A mixture of resin and wax.

RÉSINONE, Résinéine.

RESINOSA, in Pharmacy, resinous substances.

RÉSOLUTIFS, (resolvere, (re, and solvere, solutum,) 'to loosen,') Discutients.

RESOLUTIO, Resolutio—r. et Diabrosis Ventriculi, Gastromalacia—r. Membrorum, Paralysis.

RESOLUTIO MORBI. The resolution or disappearance of a disease; especially when without any critical evacuation.

RESOLUTIO NERVORUM, Paralysis—r. Ventriculi atopeptica, Gastromalacia—r. Virium, Dialysis.

RESOLUTION, Resolutio, Discussio. Removal or disappearance, as of a disease. Resolution is one of the terminations of inflammation, in which the inflamed part returns gradually, and without suppuration, to the healthy condition. Also, looseness, weakness.

RÉSOLUTION DES MEMBRES, Paralysis. RESOLVENTIA, (from resolvere, 'to loosen, to dissipate,') Discutients.

RES'ONANCE, (F.) Retentissement, Résonnance, Résonnement, (re, and sono, 'I sound,') a return of sound; a resounding; a reverberation of sounds. A thrilling of the voice more loud than natural; or its existence in a part where it is not heard in health,—as detected by auscultation. A thickened and hardened state of the lungs, caused either by a mass of crude tubercles, or by inflammation. It is generally considered to produce this phenomenon, by rendering the lung a better conductor of the murmur of the voice in the bronchi. Hence the origin of the term Bronchophony, (bronchus, and φωνη, 'voice,') (F.) Voix bronchique, Voix tubaire, V. bourdonnante.

Resonance is also used in the sense of resounding; as when the chest is said to be resonant on percussion.

RESONANCE, VESIC'ULOTYMPANIT'IC, see Vesiculotympanitic—r. Vibrations of, see Sound.

RES'ONANT, Res'onans, Res'onns, (F.) Retentissant, Résonnant. Resounding. See Resonance.

RESONANTUS, Contraffisura. RÉSONNANCE, Resonance.

RÉSONNEMENT, Resonance.

RESORBENS, (re, and sorbere, sorptum, 'to suck up,') Absorbent.

RESORPTIO, Absorption, Resorption—r. Cutanea, see Absorption—r. Cutis, see Absorption.

RESORPTION, Resorptio. Absorption of a fluid which has been previously deposited in a part, as of pus, blood, serum, &c.

RESPIRABLE. Respirabilis, (respiratio, and habilis, 'fit,') Capable of being breathed. Adapted for respiration.

RESPIRAMEN, (respiro, (re, and spiro, 'I take breath,') Respiration.

RESPIRAMENTUM, Respiration.

RESPIRATEUR, Respirator, Respiratory.

RESPIRATIO, Respiration—r. Abolita, Apnoea—r. Brevis, Dyspnœa—r. Difficilis, Dyspnœa—r. Stertens, Stertor—r. Sterterosa, see Stertor—r. Stertuosa, Stertor.

RESPIRATION, Respiratio, Αναπνοή, Αναπνευσις, Pneusis spiratio, Respiramen, Respiramentum, Respiratus, Respiratus, Spiritus. A function proper to animals, the object of which is, to place the materials of the blood—the mixture of the venous blood with lymph and chyle—in contact with atmospheric air, in order that it may acquire the vivifying qualities which belong to arterial blood. The organs for executing this function are, in the mammalia, birds, and reptiles, the lungs. In man, the respiration consists of mechanical and chymical phenomena. The mechanical are Inspiration and Expiration. The evident chymical phenomena consist in the formation of a certain quantity of carbonic acid, the absorption of a part of the oxygen of the air, and the disengagement of a quantity of water in the state of vapour. In the healthy condition the respiration is easy, gentle, regular, and without noise. In man, the respirations are generally about 35 per minute in the first year of life; 25 during the second; 20 at puberty; and 18 in the adult age.

The air of respiration has been divided into first, the residual air, or that which cannot be expelled from the lungs, but remains after a full and forcible expiration, estimated at 120 cubic inches: secondly, the supplementary or reserve air, or that which can be expelled by a forcible expiration, after an ordinary outbreathing, valued at 130 cubic inches: thirdly, the breath, tidal or breathing air, valued at 26 cubic inches: and fourthly, the complementary or complemental air, or that which can be inhaled after an ordinary inspiration, which amounts to 100 cubic inches. This estimate gives 250 cubic inches as the average volume of air which the chest contains after an ordinary expiration.

RESPIRATION BRONCHIQUE, see Murmur, respiratory.

RESPIRATION, BRONCHOVESICULAR. A morbid modification of the respiratory murmur, having more or less of the characters of the bronchial and vesicular respiration combined.—(Flint.) It denotes incomplete solidification of the lung, as from the presence of tubercle.

RESPIRATION OF THE CELLS, Murmur, respiratory—r. Coggedwheel, Respiration, jerking—r. Entrecompée, Respiration, jerking—r. Empêchée, Respiration, jerking—r. Exagérée, see puerile—r. Hypervésiculaire, see Puerile.

RESPIRATION, JERK'ING, Coggedwheel, or Wavy respiration, (F.) R. Saccadée ou Entrecompée ou Empêchée. When the murmur of inspiration, in place of being continuous, is interrupted as by starts, it is called 'jerking.' It is a concomitant of incipient pleurisy, pleurodynia, spasmodic asthma, and tuberculous of the lung with corresponding pleuritic adhesion.

RESPIRATION, LUCTUEUSE, see Luc*tuens*—r. Metallic, Tintement métallique—r. Nullæ, see Murmur, respiratory.

RESPIRATOIRE, Respiratory.

RESPIRATOR, (F.) Respirateur. Various instruments, under this name, have been devised for the purpose of tempering the air before it reaches the lungs in winter. One of the best is that of Jeffrey, which is made of several layers of fine wire tissue.

RESPIRATORIUM VENTRIS, Diaphragm.

RESPIRATORY, Respiratorius, (F.) Respirateur, Respiratoire. Appertaining to respiration. An epithet applied to the murmur heard by auscultation in a healthy adult, during inspiration and expiration. It marks the entrance of the air into the cells, and its passage out of them. See Murmur.

RESPIRATORY, EXTERNAL, NERVE, see Thoracic nerves.

RESPIRATORY GANGLIA, see Encephalon.

RESPIRATORY, INTERNAL, NERVES, Diaphragmatic Nerves—r. Nerve of the face, Facial Nerve—r. Nerve, Superior, Spinal Nerve.

RESPIRATORY PERIOD. The time from the commencement of one inspiration to the occurrence of the next. If this period be regarded as four seconds; a half second, it has been considered, may be occupied in health by inspiration; a half second in expiration, and two seconds in repose.

RESPIRATORY TRACT, Tractus respiratorius. A middle column of the spinal marrow, described by Sir Charles Bell as that whence the respiratory nerves originate. See Nerves.

RESPIRATUS, Respiration.

RESPIRATUS, Respiration.

RESSERRANT, (re, and serre, 'to lock up,') Constipating.

RESSERRÉ VENTRE, Constipation.

RESTA BOVIS, Ononis spinosa.

RESTAGNATIO, (re, and stagnare, stagnatum, 'to overflow,') Eruetion.

RESTAURANS, Analeptic, Corroborant.

RESTAURATIO, Refectio, Refectus, Analepsis, Anatrepsis, Anacom'idè, Anactes'is, Apocatas'is, Recuperatio, (restaurare, restauratum, 'to repair,') Restoration of strength, after disease or great fatigue; Epanortho'sis, Recreat'io, Redintegratio, Restauratio virium. Return of the organs to their normal condition. Recovery, Recuperation, Reparation.

RESTAURATIO VIRIUM, see Restauratio.

RESTHARROW, Ononis spinosa.

RESTIFORM, Restiformis, (restis, 'a rope,' and forma, 'shape,') Shaped like a rope, as the 'corpora restiformia,' restiform bodies.

RESTIFORMIS PROCESSUS, Coracoid.

RESTITUTIO, (restitu, restitutum, (re, and statuo, 'to set up,') 'to set up again,') Reduction—r. Organica, Morioplastice—r. Partium deperditum, Morioplastice.

RESTLESSNESS, Agitation.

RESTORATION, Restauratio.

RESTORATIVE, Analeptic, Corroborant.

RESTRICTIO INTESTINI RECTI seu ANI, (re, and stringere, strictum, 'to tighten,') Stricture of the rectum.

RESUMPTIVUS, Resumptorius, (re and sumere, sumptum, 'to take,') Causing to resume.

Resumptivum. Any agent calculated to restore flesh and strength to one who has been reduced.

RESUMPTORIUS, Resumptivus.

RESURRECTION MAN, Resurrectionist.

RESURRECTIONIST, Resurrectio man, Body snatcher, (re, and surgere, surrectum, 'to arise.') An individual who violates the sanctuary of the grave to obtain subjects for dissection.

RESUSCITATION, Resuscitatio, (resuscitāre, (re, and excitare [sursum citare se cire]), 'to move up,' 'to stir up anew.') Revivificatio. The restoration of persons, apparently dead, to life. See Asphyxia and Suffocation.

RETCHING, ([Sax.] ræcan, 'to retch,') Vomiturition.

RETĒ, 'a net,' Dictyon, (F.) Réseau. A name given to the interlacing and decussation of blood-vessels, lymphatics, fibres, and nerves when they form a kind of network. Plexus.

RETE has also been applied to the epiploon.

RETE MAJUS, Epiploon, gastrocolic.

RETE MALPIGII, Corpus mucosum.

RETE MIRABĪLE, (F.) Réseau admirable, R. merveilleux. A name given to the ramifications and anastomoses of the internal carotid and vertebral arteries at the base of the brain.

RETE MIRABĪLE seu RETE VASCULO-SUM MALPIGII is the plexus formed on the cells of the lungs by the minute ramifications of the pulmonary artery.

RETE MUCOSUM, Corpus mucosum.

RETE TESTIS, Rete Vasculorum Testis seu Halleri. An irregular plexus or network, formed by the communication of the Vasa recta, Tubuli seu ductuli recti, Tubuli seminiferi recti, (F.) Vaisseaux droits, at the upper and back part of the testicle. These Vasa recta are sent out at the back part of the testicle, from the convoluted seminal tubes. The Rete Vasculosum Testis sends out from twelve to eighteen straight tubes, called Vasa efferentia, which convey the semen from the testis to the epididymus.

RETENTIO, Retention—r. Aerea, Dyspnoea—r. Alvina, Constipation—r. Bilis, Isocholia.

RETENTIO FLUXUS HÆMORRHOÏDALIS. Suppression of the hæmorrhoidal flux.

RETENTIO PŒTIS, Dystocia—r. Lactis, Ischogalactia—r. Lochiorum, Ischiolochia—r. Mensium, See Amenorrhœa—r. Spermatis, Ischospemia—r. Sudoris, Hydrochesis.

RETENTION, Retentio, Apolepsia, Apolepsis, (retinere, retentum, (re, and tenere, 'to hold,') 'to hold back,') Accumulation of a solid or liquid substance in canals intended for its excretion, or in a reservoir intended to contain it for a short period.

RETENTION OF URINE, Paruria Retentio nis vesicalis, Ischuria vesicalis, Retentio Urinæ, (F.) Rétention d'urine. A disease in which the urine accumulated in the bladder cannot be evacuated; or, at least, cannot be passed without extreme difficulty. In the former case, the retention is said to be complete; in the latter, incomplete. Many writers have distinguished three degrees of this affection, to which they have given the names Dysuria, Strangury, and Ischury. Retention of urine may depend upon loss of contractility, paralysis of the bladder, &c., or on some obstacle to the passing of the urine, as in cases of pressure of the womb on the bladder, of tumours in its vicinity, foreign bodies in its cavity, inflammation of the urethra, swelling of the prostate, stricture, &c. The pain is extremely violent, and the bladder may be found distended above the pubis. The treatment consists in introducing the catheter, or puncturing the bladder, and in combating the cause, which has produced the retention, by particular means adapted to each case.

RETENTISSANT, (re, and timire, 'to tinkle,' to ring,') Resonant.

RETENTISSEMENT, Resonance—r. Autophonique, see Autophonia.

RETIÀ UTERI, (pl. of rete,) see Uterus.

RETICULAR, Retiform, Reticularis, Retinans, Amphiblestrôides, Dictôides, Retiformis, (from reticulum,) (F.) Réticulaire. That which resembles a net. An epithet applied to many structures in the body.

RETICULAR BODY, Corpus mucosum—r. Substantia, Cellular tissue.

RETICULARIA OFFICINALIS, Lichen pulmonarius.

RETICULUM, (dim. of rete,) The Bonnet or Honeycomb bug or stomach, (Sc.) Kingshood, (F.) Bonnet, Réseau—the second stomach of the ruminant animal. See also, Epiploon, and Recte.

RETICULUM CUTANEUM, Recte mucosum—r. Mucosum, Recte mucosum.

RETIFORM, (rete, and forma, 'shape,') Reticular.

RETINA, (from rete,) Tunica retina seu reticularis seu retiformis seu ultima seu nervea oculi, Involutum reti comparatum, Verricularis membraua, Amphiblestrôides membraua, (F.) Rétine. A soft, pulpy, grayish, semitransparent, very thin membrane; extending from the optic nerve to the crystalline, embracing the vitreous humour, and lining the choroid; without, however, adhering to either of those parts. It terminates by a defined edge—marginis dentatus—at the posterior extremities of the ciliary processes. It is constituted, according to most anatomists, by the expansion of the optic nerve. The retina appears to be formed of several laminae; so joined together, that it is difficult to discriminate them. One—the inner—is medullary, and pulpy; another—the outer—is stronger, and fibrovascular. The retina is the essential organ of vision; on it the images of objects are impressed. Both it and the optic nerve are devoid of general sensibility. They may be punctured or lacerated without pain being experienced. The nerve of general sensibility distributed to the eye is the fifth pair.

RETINACULA, see Retinaculum—r. Morgagnii, see Fræna of the valve of Bauhin.

RETINACULUM, (retinere, (re, and tenere, 'to hold,') 'to hold back,') A surgical instrument, formerly used in the operation of castration; and in that of hernia, to prevent the intestines from falling into the scrotum. Retinacula are also band-like extensions of a cellulomembranous structure, which seem to suspend the ovum in the Follicle of De Graaf. They appear to correspond to the chalazæ of the egg of the bird. See also Bride.

RETINACULUM TENDINUM PERONEORUM, Vaginata mulleolaris externa. The ligamentous sheaths that retain in situ at the outer ankle the tendons of the peroneal muscles.

RETINAL, Retinalis. Relating or appertaining to the retina.

RÉTINE, Retina.

RETINITIS, Inflammatio Retinæ, Amphiblestrôiditis, Dictyitis, (F.) Rétinite, retina and itis.) Inflammation of the retina; an uncommon affection, except as an accompaniment of other forms of ophthalmia.

RÉTINOLÉ, see Rhétinolé.

RÉTINOLÉ, see Rhétinolé.

RETINOSCOPY, Retinoscopia, (retina, and σκοπεω, 'I view,') Examination of the retina.

RETINUS, (from rete,) Reticular.

RETOMBET, GROS, Passerina tartonraira.

RETORT, Retorta, Ba'ca, Cor'um, Cornuta, Cornuca, Cornucopia, (F.) Cornue, (retorqueo, (re, and torqueo, tor'tum,) 'I bend back,') A vessel, commonly of glass or earthenware, employed in distillation. It may be plain, or have a tubulure for admitting substances whilst the distillation is going on. In the latter case, it is said to be tubulated, (F.) Cornue tubulée.

RETraction, Retractio, (retrahere, (re, and trahere, tractum), 'to draw back,') State of a part, when drawn towards the centre of the body or backwards;—as retraction of the testicles. Sometimes it is used synonymously with shortening or drawing up; as in retraction of the thigh.

RÉTRACTION DE LA MATRICE, Retroversio uteri.

RETRACTOR ANGULI ORIS, Buccinator.

RETRACTENS AURIS, (from retrahere, 'to draw back,') Posterior seu Triceps Auris, Triangularis, Retrahens Auriculæ seu Auriculam, Secundum proprium Auriculæ, Bicaudalis, Depressiva Auriculæ, Proprius Auris externæ, (F.) Mastoido-conchinnien, Mastoido-orculaire (Ch.), Auriculaire postérieur. It consists of one or more small fasciculi, or fleshy, thin, somewhat irregular fibres, situated behind the ear. These are attached to the mastoid process, and pass horizontally forwards, to terminate at the convexity formed by the concha of the ear. If this muscle had any use, it would carry the ear backwards.

RETRAIT VENTRICULAIRE, Heart, hypotrophy of the.

RÉTRÉCISSEMENT, (re, and étrécir, [old F.] estrécir, (from [L.] stringere, strictum), 'to make narrow,') Aretatio, Stricture—r. de l'Urèthre, Urethrostenosis.

RETRIMENTA VESICÆ, Urine.

RETRIMENTUM, ('dregs,' from re, and terere, 'to cleanse as by rubbing,') Excrement.

RETRO (L), in composition, behind, backwards.

RETROCESION, Retrocesio, Retrocesus, Retrogressus, (retrocedere, retrocessum, (retro, and cedere, 'to give place,') The act of going back. A disappearance or metastasis of a tumour, eruption, &c., from the outer part of the body to the inner.

RETROCESSUS, Retrocession.

RETROFLEXIO UTERI, (retro, and flectere, flectum, 'to bend,') see Retroversio uteri.

RETROGRESSUS, (retro, and gradior, gressus, 'to step,') Retrocession.

RETROPHARYNGEAL, Retropharyngeus, (retro, and pharynx, gen. pharyngis, 'the pharynx,') Relating to parts behind the pharynx,—as 'retropharyngeal abscess,—an abscess behind the pharynx.

RETROPULSION DE LA MATRICE, (retro, and pellere, pulsum, 'to drive,') Retroversio uteri.

RETROÛTERINE, Retroûterinus, (F.) Rétro-utérin, (retro, and uterus.) Behind the uterus, as retroûterine abscess, (F.) Abcès rétro-utérin;—an abscess seated behind the uterus.

RETROVACCINATION, (retro, and vaccination.) Vaccination with matter obtained from the cow, after inoculating the animal with vaccine matter from the human subject.

RETROVER'SIO UTERI, (retro, and vertere, versum, 'to turn,') Retrover'sion of the Uterus, Edopto'sis Uteri retrocesus, Anapod'sis seu Anapod'simus Uteri, (F.) Rétroversion, Rétraction, Obliquité ou Rétropulsion de la Matrice. A change in the position of the uterus so that the fundus of the organ is turned towards the concavity of the sacrum, whilst the neck is directed towards the symphysis pubis. This displacement is commonly attended with constipation, tenesmus, and retention of urine. Its usual period of occurrence is between the third and fourth months of pregnancy; before the uterus has escaped above the superior aperture of the pelvis. In the treatment, the catheter must be regularly used twice a day, until the uterus, by its growth, rises above the pelvis. The catheter should be small, flat, and curved considerably more than common, in consequence of the distorted course of the urethra. The bowels must be kept open; and absolute rest, in a recumbent posture, be enjoined. Should it be impracticable to draw off the urine, attempts must be made to replace the uterus. The woman being on her hands and knees, the fore and middle fingers of the accoucheur's left hand are to be passed up the rectum to the fundus uteri; which they must elevate, whilst the cervix uteri is carefully depressed by two fingers of the right hand in the vagina. Should the fingers employed to elevate the fundus not be long enough to effect this object, a piece of whalebone may be substituted, having a small piece of sponge attached to one extremity as a pad.

A simple inclination, or bending of the uterus, backwards, is termed Retroflexion of the Uterus, Retroflexio Uteri: not unfrequently, however, this is used synonymously with Retroversion of the Uterus.

RÉTROVERSION DE LA MATRICE, Retroversio uteri.

RHACHIALGIA, Rachialgia, Rhachiodynia, Spinal irritation.

RHACHIALGITIS, (rhachis, αλγος, 'pain,' and itis.) Spinal irritation, Myelitis.

RHACHIDAGRA, Rachisagra, Rachialgia, Rhachiodynia.

RHACHIOCYPHOSIS, Gibbositas, Hump.

RHACHIODYN'IA, (rhachis, and δύνη, 'pain;') Rhachio'dyn'ia. Pain in the vertebral column.

RHACHIOMYELITIS, (rhachis, and myelitis.) Myelitis.

RHACHIOMYELOPHTHISIS, (rhachis, μελος, 'marrow,' and phthisis.) Tabes dorsalis.

RHACHIOPARALYSIS, (rhachis, and paralysis.) Paraplegia.

RHACHIOPLEGIA, (rhachis, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Paraplegia.

RHACHIOSCOLIOMA, (rhachis, and scolioma.) Scoliosis.

RHACHIOSCOLIOSIS, (rhachis, and scoliosis.) Scoliosis.

RHACHIOSTROPHO'SIS, (rhachis, and στρεφω, 'I turn;') Contortio colu'm'ne vertebr'al'is. Deviation of the vertebral column.

RHACHIOTOMUS, Rhachio'tomum, (rhachis, and τομη, 'incision.')

An instrument for opening the vertebral column.

RHACHIPAG'IA, Rachip'ag'ia, (rhachis, and παγω, 'I fasten.')

A monstrous union of two fetuses, in which they are connected at the spine.

RHACHIPARALYSIS, (rhachis, and paralysis.) Paraplegia.

RHACHIPHYMA, Rachiphyma.

RHACHIRRHEUMA, gen. Rhachirrh'eum'atis, (rhachis, and ρ'ευμα, 'a defluxion, rheumatism,')

Lumbago.

RHACHIS, gen. Rha'ch'id'is, (ραχ'ις, gen. ραχ'ιδος.)

Vertebral column—r. Nasi, see Nasus.

RHACHISAGRA, Rachisagra.

RHACHIT'EA, (from rhachis.) Rhachit'ei, Rachit'ea, Rhach'ea, or Rachit'ei. The muscles of the spine.

RHACHITES, Spinal; Medullaspinalis, (ραχ'ιτης α'νελος.)

see also Rachitis, (ραχ'ιτης ν'οσος.)

RHACHOSIS, Rachosis.

RHACHUS, (ραχος.) Rha'cus, Rha'cus, (from ραγω, or ρηγνυμι, 'to break.')

A wrinkle. A laceration of the skin. A lacerated ulcer—al'cus lac'erum.

RHACUS, (ραχος.) Rhachus, Wrinkle.

RHÆBAUCHEN, (ρ'αιβος, 'crooked,' and αυχων, 'neck,')

Torticollis.

RHÆBOCRANIA, (ρ'αιβος, 'crooked,' and κρανον, 'skull,')

Torticollis.

RHÆBODERE, (ρ'αιβος, 'crooked,' and δερη, 'neck,')

Torticollis.

RHÆBOSCELIA, (ρ'αιβος, 'crooked,' and σκελος, 'leg,')

see Rhæbosis.

RHÆBO'SIS, (from ρ'αιβος, 'crooked,' and οσις.)

Crookedness, as of the legs,—Rhæboscel'ia, Scelocamb'osis.

RHAGADES, (ραγαδες,) pl. of rhagus, (ραγας, gen. ραγαδος.)

Rhaga'dia, (from ραγω, or ρηγνυμι, 'to break or rend,')

Scissu'ra, Fissu'ra, F'iss'ra. Ruptures, chaps, or narrow and long ulcers, which form near the origin of mucous membranes, especially around the anus, and which are generally owing to the syphilitic virus.

RHAGOÏ'DES, Rhago'des, Rhagoïdeus, Rha'gicus, (ραγοϊδης, from ραζ, gen. ραγος, 'a berry; 'a grape.')

Grape-like; as Tunica Rhagoïdes: the uvea. Also, the choroid coat of the eye.

RHAGUS, (ραγος,) Rhachus, Wrinkle.

RHAMNI BACCÆ, see Rhamnus—r. Succus, see Rhamnus.

RHAM'NUS, (ρ'αμνος,) R. catharticus, Sp'ina cervi'na seu domestica seu infecto'ria, Rham'nus solut'us, Cervi'sip'i'na, Buck'thorn, Purg'ing buck'thorn, (F.) Nerprun purgatif, Bourguépine, Épine de cerf. Family, Rhamnaceæ. Secr. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. The berries—Rhamni Baccæ—have a faint and disagreeable odour; and bitterish, nauseous taste. Their juice—Rhamni Succus—is cathartic, and apt to excite griping, which must be obviated by the use of diluents.

RHAMNUS ALATER'NUS, R. Hispan'icus, Alater'nus latifolius, Com'mou alater'nus, (F.) Alaterne. The leaves have been used as detergents and astringents, in the form of gargle especially.

RHAMNUS FRAN'GULA, Black Al'der, Fran'gula Al'nus, Al'nus Ni'gra, (F.) Anne noir, Bour'dane, Bourgène. All the parts of this tree, as well as of the common alder, are astringent and bitter. The bark is most so. The inner, yellow bark of the trunk or root, once called Rhabar'barum plebeio'rum, acts as a cathartic. It has also been employed as an anthelmintic.

RHETINITES, (ρητινιτης,) Resinatum.

RHETINOCERON, (rhetine, and κ'ησος, 'wax,')

Resinatum.

RHETINOÏDES, see Rhétinolé.

RHÉTINOLÉ, (from rhetine.) A name given by M. Béral to a medicine which results from the union of a resin with other medicinal substances. The Rhétinols of Béal differ from the Rhétinoïdes in containing but one resin, whilst in the latter there are several.

RHÉTINOTON, (from rhetine.) Resination.

RHETORANCHE, (ῥητωρ, 'a public speaker,' and αγχο, 'to strangle,') see Pharyngitis, follicular.

RHEUM, (pronounced room.) Rheûma, (F.) Rhume; (ῥευμα, from ῥεω, 'to flow,') Any thin watery discharge from mucous membranes or skin; as the thin discharge from the air passages arising from cold.

RHEUM, SALT. A popular name in the United States, like 'tetter,' for various cutaneous affections of the eczematous and herpetic forms more especially. It is at times applied to a kind of chronic psoriasis; and likewise to cutaneous affections in those who immerse the hands in metallic or acid solutions. It has been defined "a vague and indefinite popular name, applied to almost all the non-febrile cutaneous eruptions which are common among adults, except ring-worm and itch."

RHEÛM, Rhabarbarum, Rheûon, Rha, Rheûum, Lap'athum orientale seu Chinensê, Rhabarbarum velum seu Tartaricum seu Sibericum seu Turcicum, Rhûbarb, (F.) Rhabarbe, Rhubarbe. From Rha, (ῥη, 'Pa,') now called Volga, a river in Russia from which it was first brought. Ord. Polygonaceæ. Sex. Syst. Enneandria Trigynia. The root—Rheûm—is the part used in medicine. Its odour is aromatic, peculiar, and rather nauseous; taste, somewhat aromatic, subacid, bitterish, and astringent. It colours the saliva and the urine yellow. It is easily pulverized, and forms a powder of a bright buff-yellow colour. Both water and spirit extract its virtues. Rhubarb root is purgative, stomachic and astringent. [?] It is chiefly used for the properties first mentioned. Externally, the powder is sometimes sprinkled over ulcers, to assist their granulation. Dose,  $\mathfrak{Dj}$  to  $\mathfrak{ʒss}$  of the powder. In a smaller dose, it is stomachic. Numerous species of Rheum, Rh. palmatum, Rh. undulatum, and Rh. compactum, yield the rhubarb-root.

The rhubarbs most used in the United States are the Chinese or Ind'ia Rhûbarb—Rheûm Sinesê seu Indicum; the Russian, Turkey or Bucharian Rhûbarb—Rheûm Rus'sicum seu Turcicum; and Europe'an Rhûbarb.

RHEUM COMPACTUM, Rheum—r. Indicum, see Rheum—r. Palmatum, Rheum.

RHEUM RHAPONTICUM, Rhapontic Rhûbarb; Rhaponticum, Rhabarbarum Dioscoridis seu Antiquorum, (F.) Rhapontique, Rhapontic, Rapontic. The root of this seems to have been the rhubarb of the ancients. It is more astringent than that of the rheum palmatum, and less purgative; for the latter purpose, two or three drachms being required for a dose. French, Rhapontic, or Crimea Rhubarb, is obtained from this species, as well as from Rh. undulatum, and Rh. compactum.

Rheum rhaponticum is the Pie rhubarb or Pie plant cultivated for its fleshy esulent leafstalks.

RHEUM RUSSICUM, see Rheum—r. Sinense, see Rheum—r. Turcicum, see Rheum—r. Undulatum, see Rheum.

RHEÛMA, gen. Rheûmatis, (ῥευμα, gen. ῥευματος, from ῥεω, 'to flow,') Catarrh, Diarrhœa, Rheum, Rheumatism. Also, inflammation of a fibrous tissue, as in rheumatism and gout. In composition, a flow, a defluxion; also, rheumatism.

RHEUMA CATARRHALE, Bronchitis, (chronic)—r. Epidemicum, Bronchitis, chronic, Catarrh, epidemic—r. Pectoris, Catarrh—r. Uteri, Leucorrhœa.

RHEUMATIC, (ῥευματικός.) Rheumat'icus, Rheumatism'al, (F.) Rhumatimal, Rhumatique. Belonging to rheumatism; as rheumatic fever. Also, applied to one affected with rheumatism; (F.) Rhumatisant.

RHEUMATIC DIATHESIS, Diathesis rheumat'ica. The special condition of the body that gives occasion to rheumatism. It may exist without presenting the usual phenomena in the joints; whilst the heart may be seriously affected.

RHEUMATICS, Rheumatism.

RHEUMATISM, Catarrh'ica, (from rheuma,) Do'lor Rheumat'icus et arthrit'icus, (Hoffman.) Rheumat'osis, Myosot'is, Rheûma, Myodyn'ia, (vulg.) Rhen'matiz, Rhenmat'ices, (F.) Rhumatisme. A kind of shifting phlegmasia or neuralgia, sometimes seated in the muscles, sometimes in the parts surrounding the joints; and at others, within them. Hence the names Muscular, Articular, and Synovial, which have been applied to it. The disease may be acute, or chronic.

RHEUMATISM OF THE ABDOMEN, Cœliorheuma.

RHEUMATISM, ACUTE', Rheumatism'us acutus seu articulo'rum acutus seu univers'alis febrilis seu inflammato'rius seu hypersthen'icus, Arthro'sia acuta, Rheumatop'yra, Rheunap'yra, Fe'bris rheumat'ica inflammato'ria, Syn'ocha rheumat'ica, Myosot'is, Myit'is, Caul'na seu Arthrit'is rheumatism'us, Arthrorheumatism'us, Synov'itis rheumatism'al'is, Hæmoarthrit'is, Rheumat'ic Fe'ver, (F.) Rhumatisme aigu, Rh. articulaire aigu, Fie'vre rhumatismale, usually comes on with the ordinary symptoms of fever; soon after which, or simultaneously, or even before the appearance of febrile signs, excruciating pains are felt in different parts of the body, particularly in the larger joints, which are more or less red and swollen; the pain shifting from one to the other, at times with great rapidity. The disease rarely terminates in less than six weeks, during the greater part of which period the febrile symptoms remain severe; and, what is peculiar to the disease, the skin may be covered daily with a profuse perspiration, although it feels extremely hot, and the pulse appears in no way modified by it. It is one of the essential symptoms of the affection, and consequently affords no relief. The only danger to be apprehended from acute rheumatism, notwithstanding the apparent severity of the symptoms, is the translation or extension of the disease—metastatic rheumatism—to some internal part, especially to the heart. This tendency must always be borne in mind. Acute rheumatism seldom terminates in chronic; they who are liable to the former are rarely so to the latter, and conversely. The disease will generally run its course in spite of treatment. The usual antiphlogistic plan had better be pursued during the first days of the disease. Bloodletting may be employed, if the vigour of the patient and of the disease seem to require it; but, although the blood is generally buffy, bleeding does not usually seem to afford much relief. The bowels must be kept open; effervescent draughts be administered, and opium be given in full doses to allay pain. This is, generally, all that is necessary during the first week; after which, advantage will usually be obtained from the exhibition of the sulphate of quinia with sulphuric acid. It does not augment the excitement, and will be found proper in almost all cases. Rheumatic inflammation is very different from other varieties, and this may account for the anomaly. After a few weeks the disease usually goes off, but leaves the patient very liable to a recurrence on slight exposures or errors of diet. At times, acute rheumatism of the joints puts on the appearance of gout, and seems to be a complication of the two affections. It is then called Gouty or Arthritic rheumatism or Rheumatic gout, Rheumatic arthritis, Rheumatoid arthritis, Rheumatoid arthritis, Arthritic rheumatism or Arthritic rheumatism.

RHEUMATISM OF THE ARM, Brachiorrheuma—r. Arthritic, see Rheumatism, acute—r. of the Bladder, Cystorrhœma—r. of the Bowels, Enterorrhœma.

RHEUMATISM, CAP'SULAR, Rheumatismus capsularis. Rheumatism seated in the lining membrane of the joints and bursæ of the tendons. The parts most liable to its attacks are the feet and hands, where it is generally easily recognized by the enlargement of the joints; but the peculiar characters of the disease are, perhaps, most strikingly seen when it attacks the knee.

RHEUMATISM OF THE CHEST, Pleurodynia.

RHEUMATISM, CHRONIC, Arthrosia chronica, Rheumatismus chronicus seu nonfebrilis seu vulgaris seu inveteratus seu habitualis seu frigidus, Rheumatoidgia, Rhumatoidgia, Rheumatodynia, Arthrodynia, Arthritis arthrodynia, (F.) Rhumatisme chronique, Rhumatologie, is attended with pains in the hips, shoulders, knees, and other large joints. These are at times confined to one joint; at others, shift from one to another, without occasioning inflammation or fever. In this manner the complaint often continues for a great length of time, and then goes off. There is no danger attendant upon it; but the patient may become lame, and is always liable to painful recurrences. Neither variety generally terminates in suppuration; but effusion of coagulable lymph is apt to occur, so as to occasion permanent thickening of the parts. The great preventive of chronic rheumatism, and one of the most valuable curative agents, is flannel, worn next the skin. The whole class of rubefacients may, also, be used with advantage. The warm bath, especially the natural warm bath, the temperature of which does not vary, is, perhaps, the most successful remedy of all.

RHEX'IS, ρήξις, from ρήγνυμι, 'to break,') Rheuma, Dirup'tio, Rup'tio, Ruptura, Rupture. Rupture of a vessel or organ. Spontaneous opening of an abscess.

RHEXIS OC'ULLI. Bursting of the eye from any cause; spontaneous or excited.

RHICNO'SIS, (ῥιχνοσις, from ῥιχνομαί, 'to become wrinkled,') Cul'tis corrugatio. Wrinkling of the skin from extenuation of the body; opposed to εκασις, or distension from repletion.

RHIGOS, (ῥιγος.) Rigor.

RHIN, gen. Rh'nis, (ῥιν, gen. ῥινος.) Nasus.

RHINAL'GIA, Rhinodynia, (rhin, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain in the nose.

RHINAL'GIA AB-INTRU'SIS. Pain in the nose from foreign bodies.

RHINAL'GIA VERMINOSA. Pain in the nose from worms.

RHINAN'CHONĒ, Rhinan'gia, Rhinostegnosia, (rhin, and αγχωνη, 'narrowness,') Contraction of the nose. Snuffles.

RHINANGIA, Rhinan'chone, Snuffles.

RHINENCEPHALIA, (rhin, εν, 'in, and κεφαλη, 'head,') Cyclopia.

RHINEN'CHYSIS, Rhinenchysis, (rhin, εν, 'in, and χυω, 'I pour,') An infusion or injection, made into the nostrils, with a syringe called Rhinen'chites.

RHINES, (pl. of rhin.) Nares.

RHIN'TIS, Nasi'tis, (rhin, and itis.) Inflammation of the nose. Coryza.

RHINITIS ULCEROSA, Ozena.

RHINOBLENNORRHŒA, Rhinorrhœa.

RHINOC'ACĒ, Coryza scarlatino'sa, (rhin, and κακος, 'evil,') The offensive discharge from the nose, and other symptoms indicating a morbid condition of the Schneiderian membrane, that accompany the worst forms of scarlatina.

RHINOCATARRHUS, Coryza.

RHINOCNES'MUS, (rhin, and κνησις, 'itching,') Itching of the nose.

RHINODACRYOLITHUS, (rhin, δακρουν, 'a tear, and λιθος, 'a stone,') see Dacryolite.

RHINODYNIA, (rhin, and δύνη, 'pain,') Rhinalgia.

RHINOLITE, (rhin, and λιθος, 'a stone,') see Dacryolite.

RHINOPHONIA, (rhin, and φωνη, 'the voice,') A nasal voice, called, also, Dysphonia immodulata nas'alis, Porophonia nas'alis seu res'onans, Psellismus nasitas, Mycterophonia, Nasitas, Vox seu Paralia nasalis. Speaking through the nose.

RHINOPLASTY, Rhinoplastia, Rhinoplastica (ars), (F.) Rhinoplastic, (rhin, and πλασσω, 'I form.') The operation for forming a new nose, which dates far back. Three chief methods have been described: 1. The method of Celsus, which consists in bringing forward the skin of the cheeks, and forming a septum, if necessary, from the upper lip. 2. The Italian or Paliacottian method or operation, called, also, the German method, on account of the application made of it by Von Gräfe, which consists in paring the edges of the nostrils, and uniting them to a graft taken from the arm, but left attached to it, until union has taken place; and 3. The Indian method—practised for ages in the East Indies, where cutting off the nose has been a common punishment for criminals—now generally adopted, in which the graft is taken from the forehead.

RHINOPOLYPUS, (rhin, and πολύπους), Polypus of the nose.

RHINOPTIA, (rhin, and οπται, 'I see.') The act of seeing over the nose. Squinting over the nose.

RHINORRHAGIA, (rhin, and ῥαγη, 'a breaking forth,') Epistaxis.

RHINORRHAPHY, Rhinorrhaphia, (rhin, and ῥαφη, 'a suture.') An operation for the removal of epicanthis, which consists in pinching up a longitudinal fold of the skin, including this fold in two elliptical incisions, removing it, and bringing together the edges of the wound by harelip suture.

RHINORRHEA, Rhinorrhœa, (rhin, and ῥεω, 'I flow.') A discharge of limpid mucus from the nose without any inflammatory symptom. A gleet from the nose.

RHINOSCOPE, Rhinoscopium, (rhin, and σκοπεω, 'I view.') An instrument of the speculum kind for inspecting the nasal passages. The operation is termed Rhinoscopy, Rhinoscopia.

RHINOSCOPY, see Rhinoscope.

RHINOSIS, (ῥινος, 'a skin, leather,'—or from ῥιγος 'rugous.') The state of looseness and excess of skin observed in phthisis.

RHINOSTEGNOSIS, (rhin, and στεγνωσις, 'a constriction or obstruction,') Rhinanchone.

RHIPTASMUS, (ῥιπτασμος, from ῥιπτω, 'to throw,') Jactation.

RHIPTOLUSIA, (ῥιπτω, 'to throw,' and λουω, 'to wash,') Affusion.

RHIS, gen. Rhi'nis, (ῥις, gen. ῥίνος), Nasus.

RHIZA, (ῥίζα), Radix.

RHIZAGRA, (ῥιζαγρα, from rhiza, and αγρα, 'seizure,') Punch.

RHIZODONTTRYPY, Rhizodontotrypy, (rhiza, odontis, gen. odontos, 'a tooth,' and τρύπωω, 'I perforate,') Perforation of the root of a tooth for the discharge of fluid.

RHIZOMA, Rhizome, (from rhiza.) The part of the root of a plant, which consists of wood or flesh, as in the carrot.

RHIZONYCHIA, (rhiza, and ονυξ, gen. ονυχος, 'a nail,') see Nail.

RHIZOPHAGUS, (ῥιζοφαγος, from rhiza, and φαγω, 'I eat,') One who lives on roots.

RHIZOTOMIST, (ῥιζοτομος, from rhiza, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Radiscea.

RHIZOTOMUS, Apothecary.

RHOA, (ῥοα), Punica granatum.

RHODELE'ON, Oleum rosarum, (rhodon, and λαιον, 'oil,') Oil of roses, or oil impregnated with roses.

RHO'DIA, Rhodi'ola rosea, Ro'sea, Rose'wort, (F.) Rhodiote, (rhodon, owing to its odour.) Sex. Syst. Diccia Octandria. The root, Roseroot, when dry, has a very pleasant smell, and is slightly astringent. It is not used.

RHO'DINUS, (ῥόδινος), Rho'dius, Rosa'ceus, Ro'seus, Rosa'tus, (F.) Rosat, Rosy. Formed of, or containing, roses.

RHODIOLA ROSEA, (dim. of rhodia), Rhodia.

RHODIOLE, Rhodia.

RHODI'TES VINUM, (ῥοδῆτης οἶνος.) Wine in which roses have been macerated.

RHO'DIUM LIG'NUM, Rho'dium or Rose'wood, (from rhodon.) The wood or root of a tree supposed to be Genis'ta Canariensis of Linnaeus. (F.) Bois de rose, Bois de Chypre. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphica Decandria. The essential oil is a perfume, and possesses cordial and tonic virtues. Its smell is attractive to fish, rats, &c.

RHODIUS, Rhodium.

RHODODAPHNE, (ῥοδοδάφνη), Nerium oleander.

RHODODAPHNIS, Nerium oleander.

RHODODEN'DRON CHRYSAN'THEMUM, R. chrysan'them seu aureum seu officina'le, Oleander, Rosebay, Yell'ow rhododendron, Mountain Laurel, (F.) Rosage, R. chrysanthe, Rose de Sibérie, (ῥοδοδένδρον, from rhodon, and δένδρον, 'a tree,') Nat. Ord. Ericaceæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. This plant has been recommended in rheumatism, gout, and syphilis. In an overdose it produces aeronarcotic symptoms.

RHODO'DENDRON MAX'IMUM, Great Laurel, American Rosebay. An indigenous shrub, Ord. Ericaceæ, which flowers in July. It is stimulant and astringent, and has been used by the Indians in gout and rheumatism.

RHODO'DENDRON PUNCTATUM. Indigenous; has similar properties.

RHODOME'LA PALMA'TA, Dulse, Saccharine Fu'cus. One of the Algæ, eaten in large quantities throughout the maritime countries of the north of Europe, and in the Grecian Archipelago.

RHODOMELI, (rhodon, and μελι, 'honey,') Mel roseæ.

RHODON, (ῥόδον), Rosa, Rosa centifolia.

RHODOSACCHARUM, (rhodon, and σακχαρον, 'sugar,') Confectio rosæ gallicæ.

RHODOSTACTON, (ῥοδοστακτον), Mel roseæ.

RHODOSTAGMA, (rhodon, and σταγμα, 'that which has been dropped,') Aqua rosæ.

RHOEA, (ῥοα), Punica granatum.

RHEAS, gen. Rhe'adis, see Papaver rhœas.

RHEBDESIS, (ῥοιβήδεις, from ῥοιβήω, 'to sup up,') Absorption.

RHEUM, Rheum.

RHOGMUS, (ῥωγμος), Râle.

RHOI'TES, (ῥοιτης), a wine impregnated with the pomegranate, (from ῥοα, the pomegranate.) A confection, made by boiling the juice of the pomegranate in honey.

RHOMBOI'DE'US, (ῥομβος, 'a rhombus, whose sides are equal, with two obtuse and two acute angles.) Rhomboideus major and minor, Rhomboï'des, Cervici-dorso-scapulairé. A muscle situate at the posterior inferior part of the neck, and at the posterior part of the back. It has a rhomboidal shape, and is attached, by its inner edge, to the posterior cervical ligament, and to the spinous processes of the last cervical vertebra, and of the first four or five dorsal. By its outer edge, it is attached to the spinal or posterior edge of the scapula. It is divided into two fasciculi, constituting the Rhomboideus major and Rh. minor, the latter being situate higher than the other. This muscle draws the scapula backwards and upwards, and impresses upon it a rotatory motion, which brings its inferior angle nearer to the spine; and, consequently, depresses the anterior angle and the shoulder.

RHOMBOS, (ῥομβος.) A bandage mentioned by Galen; so called on account of its rhomboidal shape.

RHON'CHAL, Rhönchalis, (rhönchus, 'rattle,') Relating or appertaining to rhönchus;—as 'rhönchalis fluctuation;' the fremitus that occurs through the influence of respiration as an attendant on cavernous rhönchi.

RHONCHUS, (ῥῶγος,) Rale, Snoring, Stertor—r. Cavernous, see Gurgling—r. Cavernulous, see Gurgling.

RHON'CHUS, CLICK'ING. A rhönchus which has been considered positively indicative of the existence of tubercles in the lungs. [2]

ORK (America), (F.) Sumac vénéneux. The leaves—Toxicodendron (Ph. U. S.)—have been used in paralytic affections and eruptions. It is poisonous, like Rh. radicans. Dose, gr. ss. to gr. iv.

RHUS TYPHINA, Stag's horn Sumach, and RHUS COPALLINA, Mountain Sumach, have similar properties with Rhus glabra.

RHUS VENENATA, Poison Sumach, and RHUS PRÊMILA, have similar properties with Rhus toxicodendron.

RHUS VERNIX, Rh. radicans.

RHYAS, (ῥυας, from ῥέω, 'I flow,') Rhy'sis. An ulceration of the lachrymal caruncle with a constant flow of tears.

RHYMA, (ῥυμα,) Medicament.
RHYMPARIA, (ῥυμπάρια, from ῥυπος, 'dirt,') Rupia, Sordes primarium viarum.

RHYPIA, (ῥυπία,) Rupia.
RHYPUS, (ῥυπος,) Sordes.

RHYPTICA, (from ῥυπτω,) Detergents.
RHYPTICUS, Abstergent.

RHYSIS, (ῥυσις,) Flux, Rhyas.
RHYSSEMA, gen. Rhyssematiss, (ῥυσσημα,) Wrinkle.

RHYTHM, Rhyth'mus, (ῥυθμος,) (F.) Rhythme, 'measured movement.' The order of proportion, as regards time, which reigns between the different movements of an organ, or of the organism in health and disease. Thus, rhythm is applied to the diurnal variations of the pulse; and to the paroxysmal movements of an intermittent.

RHYTHMICAL, (ῥυθμικός,) Periodical.
RHYTHMICAL CONTRACTIONS OF MUSCLES are those that succeed one another after regular intervals.

RHYTHMUS, (ῥυθμος,) Rhythm.
RHYTIDOSIS, (ῥυτίδωσις,) Rutidosis.

RHYTIS, (ῥυτις,) Wrinkle.

RIBES (of Arab. origin) GLOSSULARIA, R. uva crispa.

RIBES NIGRUM, R. ol'idum, Grossularia nigra, Cassia, Black Currant, Gazel, (F.) Grosellier noir. Ord. Grossulacæ. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. The berries—Black currants—have been recommended in sore-throat, and as diuretics. The leaves have been advised for the same purpose. They are chiefly used as preserves.

RIBES OFFICINALE, R. rubrum—r. Olidum, R. nigrum.

RIBES RUBRUM, R. officinale seu vulgare, Grossularia seu spinosa seu rubra, Red currant, (F.) Grosellier rouge; of which the Whit is only a variety. It is cultivated, and affords an agreeable fruit—Red currants, (F.) Groselles. It possesses the qualities of the subacid fruits in general, and makes an excellent preserve.

RIBES UVA CRISPA, R. grossularia, Common gooseberry. The fruit—Grossularia, (F.) Groselle à maquereau, Gooseberry. Feberry—is agreeable, and makes a good preserve.

RIBES VULGARE, R. rubrum.
RIBGRASS, Plantago lanceolata.

RICHLI-EAF, Collinsonia Canadensis.

RICHWEED, Aetna racemosa, Ambrosia trifida, Collinsonia Canadensis, Pilea pumila.

RICIN, Ricinus communis.

RICINOIDES, (ricinus, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Jatropha curcas.

RICINUS COMMUNIS, (from ricinus, 'a tick,' which its seed resembles,) Ricinus vulgaris seu viridis, Palma Christi, Cataputia major, Faba purgativa, Cereva, Kerva, Cici, Castor oil plant, (F.) Ricin, Fèbe purgatif. Ord. Euphorbiaceae. Ser. Syst. Monœcia Monadelphia. Castor-oil seeds, whence the oil is obtained, are inodorous; taste acrid and slightly sweetish. One or two seeds—Sem'ina Cataputia majoris seu Ric'ini vulg'aris—will act as a cathartic; but the oil is alone used. It is obtained by bruising the castor-seeds, previously decorticated, and then expressing the oil without the application of heat. Recently-drawn castor oil, Oléum de kerva seu kervi'num, Alker'va, O. Ric'ini seu Cic'inum seu Palma liquidum seu de Palma Christi, Carapat, Karapat,—in the United States often called simply Oil, (F.) Huile de Ricin—is inodorous and nearly insipid. It is cathartic, operating speedily, and may be used in all cases where powerfully stimulating purgatives would be injurious. Dose, fʒj to fʒiiss. Hufeland recommends that a drop of croton oil shall be added to an ounce of the oil of poppy, and that the mixture shall be called O'leum Ric'ini Officinale.

At the Cape of Good Hope, the oil is obtained from Ricinus liv'idus.

A variety of Ricinus at Cape Verd is employed by the inhabitants to increase the secretion of milk. It is applied in the form of poultice, made with the green leaves to the mammae, or of a strong decoction, with which the mammae and the external parts of generation are washed.

ROOT, (Dan. rod,) Radix—r. Ague, Aletris farinosa—r. Bitter, Apocynum androsæmifolium—r. Canada, Asclepias tuberosa—r. Colic, Aletris Root Doctor, Herb doctor.

Root, Red, Celastrus, Lænanthes tinctoria—r. Rough, Liatriis.

Root of SCARCITY, Beta hybrida.

Root, SQUAW, Actæa racemosa—r. Sweet, Acorus calamus—r. Unicorn, Aletris farinosa—r. White, Ligusticum actæofofolium—r. Yellow, Jeffersonia Bartoni, Xanthoxia apiifolia.

ROPE, Nanus.

ROPE BARK, Dirca palustris.

ROQUETTE, (from eruca [?]), Brassica eruca, Soda.

RORELLA, (dim. of ros, gen. roris, 'dew,') Drosera rotundifolia.

RORIFEROUS, Ror'ifer, (F.) Rorifere, (ros, 'dew,' and ferre, 'to carry,') An epithet given to vessels which pour exhaled fluids on the surface of organs.

RORIFEROUS DUCT, Thoracic duct.

ROS, gen. Ro'ris, 'dew,' Sperm—r. Calabrinus, Fraxinus ornus—r. Solis, Drosera rotundifolia.

ROSA, 'rose,' R. centifolia—r. Afzeliana, R. canina.

ROSA AL'BA, R. usitatissima seu leucantha. The White Rose, (F.) Rosier blanc. Ord. Rosaceæ. Sez. Syst. Icosandria Polygynia. The flowers of this species possess similar but inferior qualities to the damask.

ROSA ARMATA, R. canina—r. Asturica, see Pellagra—r. Austriaca, R. Gallica—r. Calycina, R. canina.

ROSA CAN'NA, R. sylvestris seu sentio'sa seu Scartzia'na seu Afzelia'na seu armata seu calyci'na seu rubra vulgaria, Cynor'rhodon, Caninu'bus, Caninus Sentis, Cynocyl'neus, Cynospor'tum, Cynos'batus, Dogrose, Wild Bri'ar, Hip Tree, (F.) Rose du chien, Eplantier de chien, E. sauvage. The fruit of this variety, called Hips or Hips, Hyps, (Sc.) Doghip, has a sourish taste, and is formed into a conserve. See Confectio cynosbati. It is seldom employed, except to give form to more active remedies; as to pills, boluses, linctuses, &c.

ROSA CENTIFOLIA, Rosa, R. Damascena seu Pallida, Hecatophylla, Dam'ask, Pale, Hundred leaved or Cal'bage rose, (F.) Rosier à cent feuilles, Rhodon. The petals of this rose have an extremely fragrant odour, and sub-acidulous taste. They are laxative; but are scarcely used for any purposes except for the distillation of rose water.

Oil of Roses, Oleum Rosæ, Attar, Otto or Essence of Roses, and the formation of a syrup.

ROSA DAMASCENA, R. centifolia.

ROSA GAL'LICA, R. Austri'aca seu rubra, Red Rose, (F.) Rosier de Provins. The petals of this variety are astringent; and are used in infusion, conserve, &c.

ROSA LEUCANTHA, R. alba—r. Pallida, R. centifolia—r. Rubra, R. Gallica—r. Rubra vulgaris, R. canina—r. Saltans, Essera—r. Senticosa, R. canina—r. Swartziana, R. canina—r. Sylvestris, R. canina—r. Usitatissima, R. alba.

ROSACE, Roseola.

ROSACEUS, (from rosa.) Rhodinus.

ROSAGE, Nerium oleander, Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

ROSAGO, gen. *Rosag'*inis, Nerium oleander.

ROSALIA, (from rosa, 'the rose,' from its colour.) Scarlatina.

ROSALIE, Scarlatina.

ROSA'T, (from rosa, 'the rose,' from its colour.) Rhodinus.

ROSATUS, Rhodinus.

ROSE, Erysipelas, (from its colour,) Rosa—r. Cabbage, Rosa centifolia—r. Campion, Lychnis githago—r. Christmas, Helleborus niger—r. Copper, Papaver rhœas—r. Corn, Papaver rhœas—r. Damask, Rosa centifolia—r. Dog, Rosa canina—r. Dog, conserve or confection of, Confectio rosæ canina.

ROSE DROP, Gutta rosæa—r. Du Chien, Rosa canina.

ROSE, HUNDREDLEAVED, Rosa centifolia—r. Marine, Rosmarinus—r. Pale, Rosa centifolia.

ROSE RASH, Roseola.

ROSE, RED, Rosa Gallica—r. Rock, Helianthemum Corymbosum.

ROSE DE SIBÉRIE, Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

ROSE SPOTS, Spots, red.

ROSE, WHITE, Rosa alba.

ROSEA, Rhodia.

ROSEBALM, SCARLET, Monarda coccinea.

ROSEBAY, AMERICAN, Rhododendron maximum.

ROSEÉ DU SOLEIL, 'sundew,' Drosera rotundifolia.

ROSELLINA, (from rosa, 'the rose,' on account of its colour.) Roseola.

ROSEMARY, Rosmarinus—r. Marsh, Stachyminum, and S. Caroliniana—r. Wild, Eriocephalus umbellatus.

ROSENHEIM, MINERAL WATERS OF. Rosenheim is 34 miles S. E. from Munich, in Bavaria. The waters contain sulphuretted hydrogen, carbonic acid, carbonate of lime, chlorides of calcium and magnesium, carbonate of soda, and oxide of iron. They are used as tonics.

ROSENMÜLLER, ORGAN OF, Parovarium.

ROSEOLA, Ecanthe'sis Rose'ola, Rose Rash, (F.) Roséole, Éruption anormale, Rosace, Fèvre rouge, Efflorescence érysipléatense, (from rosa, 'the rose,' on account of the colour.) An efflorescence in blushing patches, gradually deepening to a rose-colour, mostly circular or oval; often alternately fading and reviving; sometimes, with a colourless nucleus; and chiefly on the cheeks, neck, or arms. It is frequently found, as a symptom, in dentition, dyspepsia, rheumatism, &c., and is of no consequence. See Roseolæ, Rubeola, and Scarlatina.

ROSEOLA ACNOSA, Gutta rosæa.

ROSEOLA ÆSTIVA. The affection which prevails in summer. The eruption is of a darker colour, and is attended with more itching.

ROSEOLA ANNULATA. Characterized by patches in the form of rosecoloured rays, with central areas of the colour of the skin.

ROSEOLA FICOSA, Syccosis—r. Typhosa, Spots, red—r. Variolosa, Roseolæ.

ROSE'OLÆ, Rose'ola, Roselli'na, Rube'ola spon'ria, False or French measles, (F.) Roséole, Fausse rougeole. This name is given by some to an acute exanthem, midway between measles and scarlatina, and which belongs to neither one nor the other, as it affords no protection against either. It is, also, termed Rube'olæ by some, and Rube'oloid, a term, which is applicable to any eruption resembling rubeola. An eruption which often precedes that of smallpox is termed Roseola Variolosa.

ROSEOLE, Roseola, Roseolæ.

ROSEPINK, Chironia angularis.

RO'SES, MILK OF. A cosmetic wash, formed, according to one method, of Subcarbonate of potass, gr. vj; Oil of almonds, ℥j; Essence of bergamot, ℥ij; Rose water, ℥ijj; Orange flower water, ℥ij. Mix.

ROSEUS, (from rosa.) Rhodinus.

ROSEWOOD, Rhodium lignum.

ROSEWORT, Rhodia.

ROSIER BLANC, Rosa alba—r. à Cent Feuilles, R. centifolia—r. de Provins, Rosa Gallica.

ROXIN, BLACK, (from resina.) Colophonia—r. Brown, Colophonia.

ROXIN WEED, Silphium laciniatum.

ROXIN, WHITE, see Pinus sylvestris—r. Yellow, see Pinus sylvestris.

ROSIO STOMACHI, (from rodere, rosum, 'to corrode,') Cardialgia—r. Ventriculi, Cardialgia.

ROSMARINUM, Rosmarinus.

ROSMARINUS, (ros, 'dew,' and marinus, 'marine,') R. officinalis ros latifolius seu hortensis, Alchachil, Libanotis coronaria, Dendrolibanus, Rose'mary, (F.) Romarin, Rose marine, Encensier; Ord. Labiate. Ser. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. The tops of this plant, Rosmarin'us (Ph. U. S.), Herba Anthos, have a fragrant, grateful smell; and an aromatic, warm, bitterish taste, which is dependent upon an essential oil, combined with camphor. Rosemary has been recommended in nervous headaches, in the form of infusion. It is now rarely used, except for its odour. The flower is called Anthos, an'Sos. Its oil—O'leum Rosmarini—is official. From two to six or ten drops are given in nervous complaints, rubbed up with sugar.

ROSMARINUS HORTENSIS, Rosmarinus—r. Latifolius, Rosmarinus—r. Officialis, Rosmarinus—r. Stechadis facie, Teucrium creticum—r. Sylvestris, Ledum sylvestre.

ROSSALIA, (from rosa, 'the rose,' from its colour.) Scarlatina—r. Squamosa, Scarlatina.

ROSSIGNOL, (pron. Rosignol.) A name given, in France, to an affection to which pressmen are subject. It is a sprain, followed by tumefaction of the radio-carpal joint.

ROSSOLIO, see Spirit.

ROS'TRUM, Ram'phos, 'a beak.' (F.) Bec. A name given to several old forepaws, on account of their resemblance to the beaks of different birds. The principal were the Rostrum corvi'num, anati'num, psittaci'num, vultur'num, cyg'neum seu alori'num, grui'num, lucerti'num, &c.

ROSTRUM EXTERNUM, Olecranon—r. Percinnum, Acromion—r. Posterior, Olecranon—r. Sphenoidale, Azygos processus.

ROSY BETTY, Erigeron bedifoloidum—r. Bush, Spirea tomentosa—r. Drop, Gutta rosæa—r. Wheel, Gutta rosæa.

ROT, (from [L.] ructus), Eructation.

ROT, GRINDERS', Asthma, grinders'.

ROTACISM, Rotacism'us, Rottacism'us, properly Rhotacism'us, Pællis'mus rhotacism'us, (F.) Grasseyement. A vicious pronunciation of the Greek, P, Rau, common in the northern parts of England; especially near Newcastle. Called, there, the Burr or Burrh.

ROTACISMUS, (ῥωτακισμός) Grasseyement, Rotacism.

ROTATIO, (rotare, rotatum, 'to turn round,') Diarthrosis.

ROTA'TOR, (rotare, rotatum, (rota, 'a wheel,') 'to turn round.') (F.) Rotateur. A name given to several muscles that turn the parts to which they are attached upon their axes;—such as the oblique muscles of the eyes, the pronators, supinators, &c.

ROTOR, Trochanter.

ROTAT'ORES DORS'I. Eleven small muscles on each side of the dorsal vertebræ, which arise from the point or upper edge of each transverse process, and pass to the lower edge of the arch of the vertebræ above, as far as the base of the transverse process. Their action is to rotate the individual vertebræ on each other.

ROTATORES FEMORIS, Obturatores—r. Oculi, Oblique muscles of the eye.

ROTCOLL, Cochlearia armoracia.

ROTTACISMUS, Rotaicism.

ROTTLE'RA SCHIMPERI, (after Dr. Rottler, a Danish missionary.) A large tree of Abyssinia, Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, the bark of which, called Cortex muse'ni, and formerly known as Cortex Brayeræ anthelminticæ, mixed with kosso, is used in that country against tapeworm.

ROTTLE'RA TINCT'ORIA. A euphorbiaceous plant of India. A powder is attached to the fruit capsule of this plant, which is brushed off and collected when the fruit is dry. It is called Kameyla, Rottle'ra, (Ph. U. S., 1863,) or Kameela, Kame'la (Ph. B. 1864); is used in Northern India as a vermifuge for dogs; and has proved effectual against tapeworm in man. The dose is two or three drachms, which purges.

ROTULA, (dim. of rota, 'a wheel,') Patella, Trochiseus—r. Genu, Patella.

ROTULAD, see Rotular aspect.

ROT'ULAR, (from rotula.) Relating or appertaining to the patella.

ROTULAR AS'PECT. An aspect towards the side on which the rotula is situated.—(Barclay.) Rotulad is used by the same writer, adverbially, to signify 'towards the rotular aspect.'

ROTULE, Patella.

ROTU'LIAN, Rotulianus, (F.) Rotulien. Relating or belonging to the rotula or patella.

RÖTUNDUS, (from rota, 'a wheel,') Round.

ROUCOU, Terra Orleansa.

ROU'EN, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. This water, known under the name, Eau des fontaines de la Marignefie, is cold, and contains carbonate of iron, carbonic acid, carbonate of lime, chloride of calcium, &c. It is tonic.

ROUGE, 'red,' (from [L.] rubeo, 'to be red,') see Coleothar—r. d'Angleterre, Coleothar—r. de Prusse, Coleothar—r. du Sing, Hæmatin.

ROUGEOLE, (from [F.] rouge, 'red,') Rubella—r. Fausse, Roseola.

ROUGEURS, (from [F.] rouge, 'red,') Flush.

ROUGH ROOT, Liatriis.

ROUILLÉ, (originally from rubigo, 'rust,') Rubiginous.

ROULEMENT DU LAMBEAU, 'rolling of the flap,' see Flap.

ROUND, Te'ra, Rotundus, (F.) Rond, (from [L.] rotundus.) Anatomists have given this name to many organs whose fibres are collected in round fasciuli. See Te'ra.

ROUND FORA'MEN, Foramen rotundum. A foramen of the sphenoid bone, a little behind the foramen lacerum superius, which gives passage to the second branch of the fifth pair of nerves, called superior maxillary.

ROUND HEART, Thaspium atropurpureum.

ROUND LIG'AMENTS OF THE U'TERUS, Ligament'la rotund'la U'teri, (F.) Cordons sus-pubiens (Ch.), Cordons vasculaires, Ligaments ronds de l'utérus. Two cords, which arise from the lateral and superior parts of the uterus, whence they proceed towards the abdominal rings, which they pass through, and terminate by vanishing in the areolar tissue of the groins, mons veneris, and labia majora. These cords are whitish, flattened, and narrower in the middle than at the extremities. According to Mr. Rainey, they are composed chiefly of the striped muscular fibre.

ROUTREE, Sorbus aucuparia.

ROUP, (like croup, by onomatopœia [?],) Cyananche trachealis, Raucedo.

ROUPE, Rhus coriaria.

ROUTINE PRACTITIONER, Routinist.

ROUTINIST, pronounced routeen'ist; (F.) Routinier; ([F.] routine, 'a regular habit or practice, unvaried by circumstances,' from route, 'a road,') One who practises in such an unvaried manner:—a routine practitioner.

ROUVRE, Rhus coriaria.

ROVE, (from rive,) Seab.

ROVING, 'wandering,' Delirium.

ROWANTREE, Sorbus aucuparia.

ROWLAND'S SPRINGS, see Georgia, mineral waters of.

ROWTING, (from [Sax.] hrutan, 'to snore,') Snoring.

RUBBER, INDIAN, Caoutchouc.

RUBBING, ([G.] reiben, 'to rub,') Friction—r. Dry, see Friction—r. Moist, see Friction.

RUBBING SOUND, Bruit de Frottement.

RUBE'DO, gen. Rube'dinis, Ru'bor, 'redness,' (from rubere, 'to be red,') A diffused, but not spotted, redness on any part of the skin; like that which arises from blushing. Blushing.

RUBEFA'CIENT, Erethis'ma, Erethi'ticum, Rubefa'ciens, (rubere, 'red,' and facio, 'I make,') (F.) Rubéfiant. That which produces redness. A medicine which causes redness of the skin. The action is called Rubefaction.

RUBÉFIANT, Rubefacient.

RUBE'OLA, Rubeola vulgaris, (from rubo, 'I am red,') Rose'ola, Exanth'e'sis, Rube'ola, Veter'na, Blac'cia, Fer'se, Blac'tia, Bovill'e, Morbill'i, Scarlat'na pustulo'sa seu mil'ia'ris, Feb'ris morbill'o'sa, Ty'phus morbill'o'sus, Phencis'mus, Ech'phy'mata, Measles, (Sc.) Mirles, (Prov.) Creas, Creuds, Malls, Maules, Meas'lings, (F.) Rougeole, Fièvre morbill'euse. One of the major exanthemata; generally affecting individuals but once, and produced by specific contagion. The rash usually appears on the fourth, but sometimes on the third, fifth, or sixth day of a febrile disorder; and, after a continuance of four days, gradually declines with the fever. The disease generally commences from ten to fourteen days after the contagion has been received. The eruption first shows itself in distinct, red, and nearly circular spots, somewhat less than the ordinary areola of flea-bites. As these increase in number, they coalesce; forming small patches of an irregular figure, but approaching nearest to that of semicircles or crescents. These patches are intermixed with single, circular dots and with interstices of the natural colour of the skin. On the face they are slightly raised, so as to give the sensation of inequality of surface to the finger passed over the cuticle. The disappearance of the eruption is followed by desquamation of the cuticle. Measles is not dangerous of itself; but it is liable to induce pneumonia in winter, and dysentery in summer, which are, at times, very fatal. These are apt to come on at the time of, or soon after, the disappearance of the eruption. When they supervene, they must be treated as idiopathic affections. It demands a general antiphlogistic treatment. Willan has pointed out a kind of RUBEOLA SP'URIA, which he calls RUBEOLA sine CATARRHO. In this the rash runs its regular course, with little fever or catarrhal affection; affording no certain security against the common or regular disease. He also gives the name, RUBEOLA NIGRA or BLACK MEASLES, to an unusual appearance of the measles about the seventh or eighth day, when the rash becomes suddenly livid, with a mixture of yellow. It is devoid of inconvenience or danger; and is removed in a week or ten days by the mineral acids and tonics.

Epidemic measles has occasionally prevailed largely in the military service, and has been called Camp Measles.

RUBEOLA SPURIA, Roseola.

RUBEOLÆ, Roseolæ.

RUBEOLOID, (rubeola, and oid.) see Roseola.

RUBIA, (from ruber, 'red,') R. tinctorum seu peregrina seu syboethris seu ma'jor, Erythrad-annum, Ra'dix rubra, Dyer's Mad'der, Mad'der, (F.) Garance. Family, Rubiaceæ. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. The root—Ru'bia, (Ph. U. S.)—has a bitterish, somewhat austere, taste, and a slight, not agreeable, smell. It was formerly considered deobstruent, detergent, and diuretic.

RUBIGINOUS, Rubiginosus, (from rubigo, gen. rubig'inis, 'rust,') (F.) Rouillé, Rusty. Having the colour of rust. An epithet given to the sputa in certain cases of pneumonia.

RUBINUS VERUS, (from ruber, 'red,') Anthrax.

RUBOR, 'redness,' Rubedo.

RUBRICA FABRILIS, (from ruber, 'red,') A red, heavy, earthy matter, formerly employed for making drying plasters; Hard Ruddle, Red Chalk.

RUBRICA SINOP'ICA. A heavy, compact, reddish earth from Sinope: formerly used in diarrhœa.

RUBRIN, (from ruber, 'red,') Hæmatin.

RUBUS, (from ruber, 'red,') The pharmacopœial name (Ph. U. S. 1863) of the root of Rubus Canadensis and Rubus villosus.

RUBUS AFFINIS, R. fruticosus.

RUBUS ARCTICUS, Shrub'by Straw'berry, Bac'cæ Norland'icæ. Ord. Rosacæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Polygynia. The fruit is recommended by Linnæus as possessing antiseptic, refrigerant, and antiscorbutic qualities.

RUBUS BATES, R. cæsius.

RUBUS CÆSIUS, R. Bates, Dew'berry plant, (F.) Ronce bleue. The fruit resembles the blackberry in appearance and properties. The bark of the root of R. Tricida'lis seu Canaden'sis seu procumbens seu flagella'ris, American Dew'berry, Low Blackberry, is astringent.

RUBUS CANADENSIS, see R. cæsius.

RUBUS CHAMÆMORUS, Cloud'berry Tree, Chamæmorus, C. Norve'gica, Chamædryis, Cloud'berries, Knoberries, (F.) Ronce de Montagne. The ripe fruit is sometimes prepared as a jam, and used in fevers, &c., to allay thirst. It has been much extolled as an antiscorbutic.

RUBUS FLAGELLARIS, see R. cæsius—r. Frambœianus, R. idæus—r. Fruondosus, R. fruticosus.

RUBUS FRUTICOSUS, R. affinis seu paniculatus seu niger seu frondosus seu rugla'ris, Com'mon Bram'ble, which affords Black'berries, Bram'bleberries, (Prov.) Bum'blekites, (F.) Ronce noire. The berries are eaten as a summer fruit, of which they form a poor variety. The bark of the root of the Rubus villosus, American Blackberry, High or standing Blackberry, Hairy American Bram'ble, is astringent, and has been used in the last stages of dysentery, and in cholera infantum.

RUBUS IDEUS, R. frambœsianus, Ba'tos; Rasp'berry, (F.) Framboise, Ronce. The fruit of the best varieties—Rasps, (Prov.) Hindberries—is extremely agreeable; and is much used. It was, formerly, called Batton moron, (Барвов морон).

RUBUS NIGER, R. paniculatus—r. Occidentalis, see R. strigosus—r. Paniculatus, R. fruticosus—r. Procumbens, see R. cæsius.

RUBUS STRIGOSUS, Wild red rasp'berry, of the United States. The leaves are often used as a mild astringent, as well as those of Rubus occidentalis, Black Rasp'berry.

RUBUS TRIVIALIS, see Rubus cæsius—r. Villosus, see Rubus fruticosus—r. Vulgaris, R. fruticosus.

RUCKING (from ructus.) Eructation.

RUCTAMEN, (from ructare, ructatum, 'to belch,') Eructation.

RUCTATIO, Eructation.

RUCTUATIO, Eructation.

RUCTUOSITAS, see Eructation.

RUCTUS, Eructation—r. Acidus, Oxyregmia—r. Nidorosus, Cnissoregna.

RUDBECK'IA LACINIA'TA, (after the Rudbecks, of Upsal.) Coneflower, Thimbleweed; indigenous: Order, Compositæ; is diuretic, and has been given in nephritic affections.

RUDDELE, HARD, Rubrica fabrilis.

RUDIMENTAL, Rudimenta'lis, (F.) Rudimenta'le, (rudimentum, (from rudis, 'rude,') 'the first beginning,') That which is but slightly developed.

RUDOLPHIA FRONDOSA, (after C. A. Rudolphi, a botanist of Jena,) Butea frondosa.

RUELLES, Wrinkles.

RUEPT, (from rive, river.) Eructation.

RUGA, pl. Rugæ, Wrinkle.

RUGINE, (from Runcina.) Raspatorium.

RUGISSEMENT, Rugitus.

RUGITUS, Brycheth'mus, (rugire, rugitum, 'to roar,') (F.) Rugissement. A Latin word, which ordinarily expresses the roaring of the lion; and which is used, by some medical writers, to designate a particular species of borborygmus compared to it.

RUGOSE, (from rugæ.) Wrinkled.

RUGOUS, Wrinkled.

RUM, Tafia, Spir'itus Jamaïcæ'nis, Molas'ses Spirit, (F.) Rhum. A spirit distilled from sugar, or molasses. See Spirit.

RUMA, Mamma.

RUM, BAY, Spiritus myricæ.

RUM BUDS, Gutta rosea.

RUMEX ACETOSELLA, gen. Ru'micis, (from rumo, 'to suck,' in allusion to the Romans sucking it, to allay thirst [?]), Sheep Sor'rel, Field Sorrel; indigenous; has similar virtues with RUMEX ACETO'SUS, R. tuberosus seu intermedius, Lap'athum pratens'se, Ox'alis Aceto'sa, Aceto'sa vulg'aris seu pratens'sis seu no'stras, Anac'yris, A. arven'sis, Sour dock, Sor'rel, Com'mon Sor'rel, (Sc.) Docken, (F.) Oseille, Vinette, Aigrette, Surelle. Ord. Polygonacæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Trigynia. The leaves are sour, and are used in cookery, and also as a refrigerant.

RUMEX ACUTUS, Sharp-pointed Wild dock, Oxylap'athum, Lap'athum, L. sylvestrê seu acutatum, Ru'mex, R. paludosus seu pusillus, Lap'athus, (F.) Pattience sauvage. A decoction of the root has long been used in cutaneous affections. It is, sometimes, employed for the cure of the itch.

RUMEX ÆTENSIS, R. scutatus.

RUMEX ALPI'SUS, Aceto'sa Alpi'na. The systematic name of the plant that affords Monk's Rhubarb, (F.) Rhabarbe des Moines. See Rumex patientia.

RUMEX HYDROLAP'ATHUM, Water Dock, (Old Eng.) Brokeleak, Hydrilapathum, Rumex aquat'icus seu Britan'nica, Her'ba Britan'nica, Lap'athum aquat'icum, (F.) Parelle, Potience d'eau. The leaves of this plant are subacrid, and said to be laxative. The root has been used as a tonic, astringent, and antiscorbutic. It has also been employed externally in some cutaneous affections.

RUMEX INTERMEDIUS, R. acetosus.

RUMEX OBTUSIFO'LIUS, Lap'athum sylv'es'trê, Bluntleaved Dock, Bit'ter dock. The root of this, as well as of R. CRISPUS, Cur'led, or Sour, or Yellow Dock—Rumex, (Ph. U. S.,)—has similar virtues to those of the other species. Both have been used in decoction in the same cases as sarsaparilla.

RUMEX OXYOTUS, R. scutatus—r. Paludosus, R. acutus.

RUMEX PATIEN'TIA, R. confer'tus, Lap'athum horten'se, Rhabar'barum monacho'rum, Hippolap'athum, Patien'tia, Gar'den Pat'ience, Monk's Rhubarb, (F.) Patience, Rhubarbe sauvage, Parelle. This root, which is supposed to possess the virtues of rhubarb, but in an inferior degree, is, according to Linnæus, obtained from the Rumex patientia; according to Murray, from the Rumex alpinus.

RUMEX PUSILLUS, R. acutus.

RUMEX SANGUIN'EUS. The root of the blood'y dock or bloody vein'ed Dock, has an austere and astringent taste; and has been employed in dysentery. It is called, also, Lap'athum sanguin'eum, (F.) Oseille ou Patience Rouge, Saugdragon.

RUMEX SCUTA'TUS, R. glaucus seu hastifolius seu Amen'sis seu oxyotus seu hastatus, Aceto'sa rotundifolia seu Romana seu Rotundifolia horten'sis seu scuta'ta, Lap'athum scuta'tum seu rotundifolia, Roman or Gar'den Sor'rel, Green Sauce, French Sor'rel, (F.) Oseille boucher, Oseille ronde, Petite Oseille. Virtues the same as those of the common sorrel.

RUMEX TUBEROSUS, R. acetosus.

RUMINATION, Rumina'tio, (ruminare, 'to chew again,' from ruma or rumen, 'the ingluvies,') Merycismus. A function peculiar to ruminating animals, by which they chew a second time the food they have swallowed. An analogous phenomenon is sometimes seen in man. One who ruminates is termed, in French, mérycole.

RUMIS, Mamma.

RUMMET, Pityriasis.

RUMP, ([D. Romp, [G.] Rumpf,) Croupon—r. Bone, Coccyx.

RUNCHES, Sinapis arvensis.

RUNCINA, 'a plane,' Rasporium.

RUNCINULA, (dim. of runcina,) Rasporium.

RUNKILL, Wrinkle.

RUNKLE, Wrinkle.

RUNNET, Rennet.

RUNNING, Cur'sus, (F.) Course. A succession of leaps, executed with rapidity, to transport the body quickly from one place to another.

RUNNING, Rennet.

RUN ROUND, see Paronychia.

RUNSH, Sinapis arvensis.

RUPES, 'cliffs,' Lips of the Vulva. See Lip.

RUPIA, Rhy'pia, Ul'cus aton'icum, Ec'phlysis Rhy'pia, Rhypp'ria, (from rupes, 'filth,') An eruption of large flattish blebs, which contain a fluid—at first serous, afterwards puriform, and often bloody, which rapidly concretes into crusts, at the base of which are ulcers of variable depths.

It requires the use of tonics internally, and of stimulating ointments externally.

RUPIA ESCHAROT'ICA, Pem'phigus infantilis seu granulosus; known in Ireland under the names—white blisters, eat'ing hives, and burnt holes. An affection which bears a close similarity to pemphigus, particularly in the absence of a thick rugous crust, whilst in its chief feature, that of ulceration, it evidently belongs to Rupia.

RUPIAL, Rupia'lis. Appertaining or relating to rupia.

RUPTIBILITAS, (ruptio and habilis, 'able,') Fragilitas.

RUPTILITAS, Fragilitas.

RUPTIO, (from rumpere, ruptum, 'to break,') Rhexis.

RUPTORIUM, (from rumpere, ruptum, 'to break,') Cauterium—r. Commune, Potassa fusa.

RUPTURE, (from rumpere, ruptum, 'to break or burst,') Hernia, Rhexis—r. du Cœur, Cardiorrhæxis—r. of the Groin, Bubonocèle—r. de la Matrice, Uterus, rupture of the—r. Wort, Herniaria glabra.

RUPTURED, see Hernial.

RUS'CUS, R. aculeatus, Brus'cus, Oxymyr'rhinê, Oxymyr'sinê, Myrtacantha, Catan'gelus, Myaacantha, Scopia re'gia, Wild Myrtle, Centromyrr'inê, But'cher's Broom, (Prov.) Kneeholly, (F.) Petit houx, Fragon. Ord. Smilacæ. Sez. Syst. Diocia Monadelphica. The root has been recommended as an aperient and diuretic.

RUSCUS ACULEATUS, Ruscus.

RUSCUS HYPOGLOS'SUM, Uculo'ria, Hypoglossum, Hypoglossum [?], Bislina'gna, Bonifacia, Laurus Alexandrina angustifolia, (F.) Louvier Alexandrin, Langue de cheval. Formerly used against relaxed uvula.

RUSH, SWEET, ([Sax.] ripc, ripc, 'a reed,') Acorus calamus, Juncus odoratus.

RUSH, UTERINE, ([D.] ruischen, 'to murmur,') Bruit placentaire.

RUSMA, see Orpiment.

RUSPINIS STYPTIC, (pron. Ruspeen'is,) see Styptic, Ruspini's.

RUSPINI'S TINCTURE FOR THE TEETH. An empirical preparation, composed of Florentine orris ℥viiij, Cloves ℥j, Rectified spirit Oij, Ambergis ℥j.

RUT, (from rugitus, 'the exclamation of animals in heat,') Heat.

RUTA, (ῥῦτα), R. graveolens seu horten'sis seu altera, Peg'anum, Besa'sa, Common Rue, (F.) Rue, Rhue, Rue sauvage, Herbe de grace; Ord. Rutacæ. Sez. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. The plant has a strong, ungrateful odour, and bitter pungent taste. It is so acrid as to blister the skin. Its properties are reputed to be tonic, stimulant, anti-spasmodic, and emmenagogue. Dose, gr. xv to ℥ij. The leaves are officinal—Ru'ta. (Ph. U. S.)

O'leum Ru'tæ, distil'ed Oil of Rue, is antispasmodic; and, externally, rubefacient. Dose, gtt. ij to vj.

RUTA ALTERA, Ruta—r. Capraria, Galega officinalis—r. Graveolens, Ruta—r. Hortensis, Ruta—r. Muraria, Asplenium ruta muraria.

RUTABULUM, Penis.

RUTA'CEUM, (from ruta.) Vinegar of rue.

RUTIDOMA, gen. Rutido'matis, see Rutidosia.

RUTIDOSIS, Rutido'sis, Rhytido'sis, (ῥυτιδωσις, from ῥυτιδω, 'I wrinkle,' and osis.) The act of wrinkling; as Rutido'ma means a shrivelled or wrinkled body. A destruction or atrophy of the eye. Corrugation and subsidence of the cornea.

RUYSCHIA'NA TU'NICA, (F.) Lime ou Membrane Ruyschienne. According to Ruysch, (pron. Risch), the Dutch anatomist, and the greater part of his disciples, the choroid coat of the eye is formed of two laminae. His son gave to the inner the name Tu'nica Ruyschia'na or Membra'na Ruyschia'na seu Ruysch'i'i.

Tu'nica Cellulo'sa Ruyschia'na is the areolar substance under the peritoneal covering of the stomach. It is not numbered among the coats of that organ.

RYE, ([Sax.] ryze), Secale—r. Horned, Ergot—r. Robbin's, Polytrichum juniperinum—r. Spurred, Ergot,

RYTIDOSIS, Rutidosis.

RYTIS, (ρυτις) Wrinkle.

S.

S, S. A. &c., see Abbreviation.

S. ROMANUM, Sigmoid flexure of the Colon.

SAAG, Urine.

SABADILLA, ([S.] Cebadilla), Veratrum sabadilla, see Veratrina.

SABADILLIN, see Veratrina.

SABATILLA, Veratrum sabadilla.

SABBATIA, (after Sabbati, an Italian botanist), Chironia angularis—s. Angularis, Chironia angularis.

SABINA, Juniperus sabina.

SABINE, Juniperus sabina.

SABLÉ, 'sanded,' (from sabulum, 'sand.')

Having the appearance as if strewed with sand. The terms sablé and piqueté are sometimes applied to the brain, when a slice of it exhibits red points as if it had been strewed with red sand. Such is the case in cerebral hyperæmia.

SABOT DE VÉNUS JAUNE, 'yellow sabot of Venus,' Cypripedium luteum.

SABUCUS, Sambucus.

SAB'ULOUS, Sabulo'sus, Areno'sus, Peanmo'des, (sabulum, 'sand.')

The sandy deposit often seen in the urine.

SABULUM CONARII, see Pineal gland.

SABURA, Saburra.

SABUR'RA, Sabu'ra, Sor'des, (F.) Saburre. This word signifies, by derivation, 'coarse sand, or ballast,' sabulum. In its common acceptation, it means foulness of the stomach, as it is sometimes called;—vitiated matters supposed to be retained and accumulated in the stomach—the result of imperfect digestion—and which have been sometimes considered as a morbid product of the mucous secretion of that organ, or of the biliary secretion; at others, as a residuum from alimentary substances badly digested. The Sabur'ral state, Collu'vies gastrica, Crudita'tes ventriculi, Gastris'mus, (F.) Embarras gastrique, État saburral, is an accumulation of saburrae in the stomach, (F.) Saburres gastriques, which the Humorists considered to be the cause of a number of diseases.

SABURRA VERMINOSA, Helminthiasis.

SABUR'RAL, Saburra'lis. Relating or appertaining to saburrae,—as the 'saburral state.'

SABURRATIO, Arenatio.

SABURRE, Saburra.

SABURRES GASTRIQUES, see Saburra.

SAC, see Sack—s. Herniaire, Hernial sac—s. Lachrymal, see Lachrymal puncta—s. of the Omentum, see Epiploon, gastrohepatic.

SACCADÉ, see Respiration, jerking.

SACCATE, Sacca'tus, (from sacus, 'a sac,') Encysted. Also, ponched, as the Colon. Sacculated, Saccula'tus, are diminutives of Succated, and Saccatus.

SACCHAR, (σακχαρ), Saccharum.

SACCHARHYDROLE, Syrup.

SACCHARI FÆX, 'dregs of sugar,' Mel'ses.

SACCHARINA, Saccharolés.

SAC'CHARINE, Sacchari'nis, (F.) Saccharin, Glucosique, Glycosique, (from saccharum, 'sugar.')

Having the nature of, or containing, sugar.

SACCHARO-ALCOOLÉ, Ratafia.

SACCHAROGUMMITA, (saccharum, and gummi), see Glycyrrhiza.

SACCHAROLÉ LIQUIDE, Mellitum, Syrup—s. Mout, Conserva, Electuarium—s. Solide, see Pastel, and Tabella.

SACCHAROLÉS (F.), Sacchari'na, (from saccharum.) A name given by MM. Henry and Guibourt to medicines which have sugar or honey for excipient, or for predominant principle. M. Béral so calls an exact mixture of pulverized sugar with other substances also in powder, but in less quantity.

SACCHAROMETER, (F.) Saccharomètre, Pèse-sirop, (saccharum, and μετρον, 'measure.')

A hydrometer adapted for determining the density of syrups. See Areometer.

SACCHAROMYCES, (saccharum, and μυκης, 'fungus,') Torula cerevisia.

SACCHARORRHŒA, (saccharum, and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Glycyrrhœa—s. Cutanea, Sudor dulcis.

SACCHARORRHŒA LAC'TEA, Galactorrhœa sacchara'ta. A secretion of unusually sweet milk.

SACCHARORRHŒA PULMONA' LIS, Sputum dul'cè seu sacchara'tum. The copious excretion of unusually sweet matter from the lungs.

SACCHARORRHŒA URINOSA, Diabetes mellitus.

SAC'CHARUM, (σακχαρον), Sac'char, (σακχαρ, from Arabic, or rather Sanscrit, Sakar, 'white earth,') Su'char, Suc'char, Sul'ter, Zu'char, Zu'caro, As'sakur, Ti'gala, Zac'charum, Zo'zar, Zu'charum, Zuc'carum, Zu'chra, Mel arundina'ceum, Sugar, (F.) Sucre. The produce of the juice of Sac'charum officina'rum seu officina'lè of Linnaeus, Call'amus In'dicus seu Sacchari'nis, Arum'do saccharif'era of Sloane; Sugar Cane, (F.) Canne à Sucre, Cannamelle. Ord. Gramineae; Ser. Syst. Triandria Dignia; and also of the beet, maple, Chinese sugarcane, (Sorghum sacchara'tum), &c.

True Sugars are those with which alcoholic fermentation may be effected, by the addition of yeast and water. They are:—

| Species. | Varieties.  |
|-----------------|--|
| 1.....          | { Hard sugar of the cane, maple, beet, chestnut, &c.                     |
| 2.....          | { Liquid sugar, sugar of malt, of the sweet potato, molasses, honey, &c. |
| 3.....          | { Hard sugar of the grape, ripe fruits, starch, diabetes, &c.            |
| 4.....          | { Hard sugar of the mushroom.  |

Imper'fect sugars are those in which alcoholic fermentation cannot be effected by means of yeast and water.

posterior surface of the sacrum; which appear to terminate the vertebral grooves or gutters.

SACRAL NERVES, (F.) Nerfs sacrés, are generally six in number. They arise from the termination of the spinal marrow. The first, united with the great cord which descends from the lumbar plexus, concurs with the three others in the formation of the sacral or sciatic plexus. The third and fourth, with branches of the great sympathetic, form the hypogastric plexus. The fifth and sixth (coecyge'al nerve) are distributed to the ischio-coecygeus muscle, and to the sphincter and levator ani.

SACRAL PLEX'US, Sciatic plex'us—the sacral portion of the cranial plex'us of Chaussier, constituted as just mentioned, is situate in front of the pyramidalis. It gives off, backwards, two branches, called the pubic, (F.) honteux, and the lesser sciatic. It terminates in the great sciatic nerve.

SACRÉ, Sacral.

SACRO, in composition, relating or belonging to the sacrum.

SACROCOCCYGE'AL, Sacrocoecyge'us. Relating to the sacrum and coccyx.

SACROCOCCYGEAL ARTICULA'TION is that of the lower extremity of the sacrum with the superior facette of the coccyx. It is closed by two ligaments,—an anterior and a posterior sacro-coecygeal.

SACRO-COSTALIS, (costa, 'a rib,') Sacrolumbalis—s. Femoral, Glutæus major.

SACROCOXAL'GIA, (sacro, coxa, 'the hip,' and algos, 'pain,') Some authors have called thus a rheumatic affection of the sacroiliac symphysis.

SACROÏLIAC, Sacroïli'aenus. That which relates to the sacrum and ilium.

SACROÏLIAC ARTICULA'TION, SYM'PHYSIS OR SYNCHONDRO'SIS, Il'iosacral articulation, sym'physis or synchondro'sis, is the union of two surfaces,—two inclined planes, broader above than below; one formed by the sacrum, the other by the ilium. Both surfaces are incrustated by an articular cartilage. The bands which strengthen them are the two sacrosciatic ligaments, the sacrospinal, a sacroïliac ligament, and some irregular fibres. The sacroïliac ligament is a very thick assemblage of short, dense, irregular fibres, occupying the space which the sacrum and ilium leave between them, behind their articular surface. Some authors have termed some irregular fibres, situate in front of the sacroiliac articulation, anterior sacroïliac ligaments, in opposition to the preceding fascia, which they call posterior sacroïliac.

SACROÏSCHIATICUS, Sacrosciatic.

SACROLOMBAIRE, Sacrolumbalis.

SACROLUMBALIS, Sacrolumbal.

SACROLUMBAR, Sacrolumba'lis, Sacro-lumba'ire. That which belongs to the sacrum and loins.

SACROLUMBAR, Sacrolumba'lis, Sacrolumba'ris Muscle, Sacrocostalis, Dorsotrachélian portion of the Sacrospinal, of Chaussier, (F.) Lombocosto-trachélien, Sacro-lumba'ire, is seated at the posterior part of the trunk; is thick and triangular below; flat and thin in the remainder, and terminates in a point at its upper extremity. It is attached to the posterior surface of the sacrum; to the corresponding portion of the crista ili; to the extremities of the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebræ; to the angles of the eleven inferior ribs; to the tuberosity of the first, and the posterior tubercle of the transverse processes of the last five cervical vertebræ. The sacrolumbalis straightens the vertebral column when bent forwards, and maintains it straight. By means of its insertion into the ribs, it can elevate or depress these bones, according as it contracts from above to below, or from below to above. It acts, consequently, sometimes as an inspiratory, at others as an expiratory muscle.

From six or eight of the lower ribs arises an equal number of fleshy portions, which terminate at the inner side of this muscle, and are called Mus'culi Accessor'ii seu Additamentum ad Sacrolumba'lem, (F.) Accessoires du Sacro-lumba'ire.

From the upper part of the sacrolumbalis a fleshy slip, called Cervical'is descendens, Cervicalis descendens Dienerbroeck'ii, Transversalis collateralis colli, Accessor'ius ad Sacrolumba'lem, (F.) Transversaire grêle, runs up, to be fixed to the transverse processes of the fourth, fifth, and sixth cervical vertebræ, by three distinct tendons. These last parts, though separated by some anatomists, belong to the sacrolumbalis.

SACROSCIATIC, Sacroïschiat'icus. That which belongs to the sacrum and ischium.

SACROSCIATIC LIGAMENTS are two ligaments which assist in securing the sacroiliac articulation. The great or posterior sacrosciatic ligament extends from the crista ili and the sides of the sacrum and coccyx to the tuberosity of the ischium. The less or anterior sacrosciatic ligament arises from the same point, and terminates in the spine of the ischium.

SACROSPINAL, Dorsotrachélian portion of the sacrolumbalis.

SACROSPINALIS. That which relates to the sacrum and spine. Under this name, Chaussier describes the sacrolumbalis, longissimus dorsi, transversalis, transversospinalis, and intertransversalis muscles. He divides it into three portions. It is the Erector' ep'ine, Extensor dorsi communis, Lumbocostalis.

SACROTROCHANTÉRIEN, Pyramidalis.

SACROVERTEBRAL, Sacrovertebra'lis. That which relates to the sacrum and the vertebræ.

SACROVERTEBRAL ARTICULA'TION is the junction of the last vertebræ of the loins with the sacrum. The angle, which these two bones form at the anterior part, has been called the Promontory of the Sacrum, or the Sacrover'tebral Angle.

SACROVERTEBRAL LIGAMENT is a strong ligament, which passes from the anterior part of each of the transverse processes of the last lumbar vertebra to be attached to the base of the sacrum. Its use is to maintain the articulation of those two bones in situ.

SACRUM, (neuter of sacer,) Os sacrum seu basilare seu Alagus seu latum seu clivium, Ver'tebra magna, Albagia'zi, Héron ostéon, Clu'nis, Subver'tebra, Subver'tebrium, Vel'ula, (from sacer, 'sacred,' because it contributes to protect the genital organs, which were considered sacred; or because it was offered in sacrifice.) The bone, which forms the posterior part of the pelvis, and is a continuation of the vertebral column. The sacrum is symmetrical and triangular, situate at the posterior part of the pelvis, and concave anteriorly. It has: 1. A pelvic or anterior surface, which corresponds to the pelvic cavity, and has four transverse furrows, that point out the parts where the primitive portions of the bone were separated from each other. On each side there are four foramina, called anterior sacral; these are oblique, and decrease in size from above downwards. Through them pass the anterior branches of the sacral nerves. 2. A spinal or posterior surface, which is convex, rough, and covered by muscles. Upon the median line are four horizontal, tubercular eminences, forming a continuation of the spinous processes of the vertebræ; and below, a triangular notch, where the sacral canal terminates. On each side of the surface are four foramina, called posterior sacral, which are smaller than the anterior, and give passage to the posterior branches of the sacral nerves. 3. The costal and spine or base. Its greatest extent is transversely. It is articulated with the last lumbar vertebra. On it is seen the orifice of the sacral canal, of a triangular shape, which decreases in width from above downward; terminates the vertebral canal; is lined by a prolongation of the cerebral membranes; contains the fasciculi of the sacral nerves; communicates, externally, by the sacral foramina; and terminates at the triangular notch on the posterior surface of the bone. At the sides of the upper orifice of the sacral canal are two articular processes, which receive the articular processes of the last lumbar vertebra. The projection, formed by the union of the base of the sacrum with the last lumbar vertebra, is called the Promontory, Promontorium Osseum Sacri, Great Angle of the Sacrum or Sacro-vertebral Angle. 4. A coecygeal fovea or d'apez. (F.) Fovea coccygea ou Sommet, which is very narrow, and is articulated with the coccyx. 5. Two lateral margins, which have, above, a broad, oblique surface, articulated with the ilium.

The sacrum is developed by 30 to 36 points of ossification.

- SADDLE, TURKISH, Sella Turcica.
SERES, Seres.
SAFFLOW, Carthamus tinctorius.
SAFFLOWER, Carthamus tinctorius.
SAFFRON, (Arab. zafarou, 'yellow.' [?]) Crocus—s. Bastard, Carthamus tinctorius—s. Dyers', Carthamus tinctorius.
SAFFRON FLOWER, Carthamus tinctorius.

SAFRANUM, Carthamus tinctorius.
SAFRÉ, Smalt.
SAGA, Midwife. In ancient Rome, the Sage exercised, also, the calling of magicians, procurers, and perfumers; and were more especially called upon to induce abortion. Also, Sago.

SAGABAN, Apies tuberosa.
SAGAPENUM, (sagapenum.) Sag'opin, Scorpi'num, (F.) Gummæ scorpionique. A gumresin, supposed to be obtained from the Perisla Persica, Ord. Umbelliferae. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. Its odour is fetid and alliaceous; taste pungent, bitterish, nauseous. It is in small, agglutinated masses of a yellow colour; tenacious; breaking with a horny fracture. It is a reputed antispasmodic and emmenagogue. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

- SAGAPIN, Sagapenum.
SAGE, Salvia—s. Indian, Eupatorium perforiatum—s. Jerusalem, Pulmonaria.
SAGE TEA, Infusum salviae.
SAGE TREE, Lantana.
SAGE, WILD, Salvia Africana, S. Lyrata.

SAGIMEN VITRI, Soda, subcarbonate of.
SAGITTAL, Sagittalis, Sagittatus, (from sagitta, 'an arrow,')

SAGITTAL FURROW, Sagittal Groove, (F.) Gouttière sagittale, is a channel on the median line of the inner surface of the skullcap. It is excavated in the os frontis, in the two parietal and occipital bones, and extends from the crista galli to the internal occipital protuberance. It lodges the longitudinal sinus, which has been called the sagittal sinus.

SAGITTAL SUTURE, Oblig'a sutu'ra seu Ra'plé, Sutu'ra Virg'u'ta seu Jugo'lis seu Roh'dai'dea, Rhob'dai'dea, Rhob'do'dea, Rhob'di'dea seu Bi-parieta'lis seu Interparieta'lis. The suture which unites the two parietal bones, and which extends, from before to behind, on the median line, from the coronal suture to the lambdoidal. It is so called, from sagitta, 'an arrow,' because it seems to meet the coronal suture as an arrow meets the string of a bow.

SAGITTARIA VARIABILIS, (from sagitta, 'an arrow,' owing to the prevalent form of the leaves.) Ar'rocheud, Ar'rocheuf, Ar'rocheud, Wapota of Oregon; Nat. Ord. Alismaceae. Esculent, yielding fecula like arrow-root. The roots are cooling and subastringent, and are at times applied to the feet in cases of yaws and dropsical swellings of the legs. The leaves are applied to the breasts to dispel milk.

SAGITTARIUM ALEXIPHARMACUM, Mai'ca ra'di'da, Can'na In'dica, Arwa' In'dica. A root cultivated in the West Indies, and supposed to be a remedy for wounds by poisoned arrows.

SAGITTATUS, Sagittal.
SAGO, Sa'gna, Sa'ga, Sa'gn, Sa'gu, Am'gylun palma'cum, (F.) Sagon, Sago; saga is the Malay name for various palms.) A fecula, obtained from the pith of the Sa'gna Rumph'i'i, Sp'as circina'lis, C. rotunda, &c., growing in the Moluccas, Philippine Isles, &c., and which is brought to us in small grains. The same substance is, also, obtained from the West Indies, but it is inferior to that from the East. By boiling in water or milk, sago becomes soft and transparent, and forms an agreeable and nutritious food in febrile, catenulous, and other disorders. It is made palatable by sugar, lemonjuice, or wine, where the last is not contraindicated.

To make sago into a proper mucilage for the sick, a tablespoonful of it should be macerated in a pint of water for two hours, and then boiled for fifteen minutes, stirring assiduously. Care must be taken, that the grains are perfectly dissolved by long boiling and constant stirring.

Sago pisset is made by putting sago, ʒij, into water, Oj; boiling until the mucilage is formed; then rubbing sugar, ʒss, on the rind of a lemon, and putting it with structure of ginger, ʒʒ, into sherry, Oss; adding this mixture to the mucilage, and boiling for five minutes.—It is a good restorative.

SAGNEMENT DU NEZ, 'bleeding of the nose,' Epistaxis.

SAILORS, DISEASES, &c., OF. Sailors, by nature of their occupation, are liable to many diseases. Several of these may, however, be warded off by proper attention to cleanliness and ventilation.

SAIN BOIS, 'health wood,' Daphne gnidium—s. Diorz, (from sagina, 'fatness,') Adeps praparatus.

SAINT AMAND, MINERAL WATERS OF. Sulphuretted waters, in the department of Du Nord, France. They contain carbonic and sulphohydric acids. The Boue or deposit contains sulphohydric acid, and salts of iron and magnesia. Temperature, 64° to 82° Fahrenheit. Season, from the 1st of June to the 1st of September.

SAINT ANTHONY'S FIRE, Erysipelas.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, CLIMATE OF. This sea-port of Florida is a frequent retreat during the winter season for the valetudinarian from the more northern parts of the United States. The climate is certainly comparatively mild and equable; but it is liable to frequent northeast storms. There are only a few days, however, in winter, in which the invalid cannot take exercise in the open air. Tampa Bay, and Pensacola, in Florida, and Mobile, in Alabama, which are sometimes visited by the consumptive, are less liable to the storms in question.

SAINT CATHERINE'S SPRINGS, see Canada, Mineral waters of.

SAINT CHARLES'S ROOT, Carlo Sancto (Radix).

SAINT CROIX, Santa Cruz.

SAINT JAMES'S WORT, Senecio Jacobæa, Thlaspi bursa.

SAINT KITTS, see West Indies.

SAINT LEONARD'S, CLIMATE OF. This place, which is situate about a mile to the westward of Hastings, in Sussex, England, is less sheltered than it, and is therefore a less favourable retreat, during the winter months, for the phthisical valetudinarian.

SAINT MYON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Some cold, acidulous waters at Saint Myon, near Riom, in the department of Puy-de-dôme. They contain free carbonic acid, subcarbonate of soda, chloride of sodium, and carbonate and sulphate of lime.

SAINT NECTAIRE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Springs in the department of Puy-de-Dôme, France. They contain carbonic acid, bicarbonate of soda, and chloride of sodium. Temperature, 75° to 103° Fah. Season, from June 15th to September 15th.

SAINT PARDAUX, MINERAL WATERS OF. Chalybeate springs in the department of Alier, France. They contain carbonic acid and iron.

SAINT SAUVEUR, MINERAL WATERS OF. Sulphurous waters in the department of Hautes-Pyrénées, France. Temperature, 76° to 93° Fah. The springs are frequented from May to October.

SAINT VINCENT'S, see West Indies.

SALAAM or SALAM CONVULSION, see Convulsion, Salaam.

SALAB, Salep.

SALACITAS, Salacity, Satyriasis — s. Vulvæ, Nymphomania.

SALAC'ITY, Sala'cionnessæ, Sala'citas, (F.) Salacité, (salax, sala'cis, 'lustful, lecherous.) Lecherousness; strong desire for venery.

SALAD, (from [L.] sal, salt, [F.] salé, 'salted,') Sollet, (F.) Salade. Fresh herbs — as lettuce, dressed with salt, oil, vinegar, &c.

SALAD, CORN, Valeriana dentata.

SALAP, Salep.

SALCOMBE, CLIMATE OF. A small place — the Montpellier of Huxham — which is one of the warmest spots on the S. W. coast of England, and, therefore, in this respect adapted for the phthisical invalid as a winter retreat.

SALEP', Salop', Saloop' (usually so pronounced.) Salab', Salop'. The prepared bulb of the Orchis mas'cula and other species of Orchis. The salep of Cachmere is from a species of Euloph'ia. Salep is in small, irregular, hard masses. In its composition in relation to water, it is closely analogous to tragacanth. It is possessed of similar virtue with sago, tapioca, &c. The mucilage is prepared by dissolving the powdered salep in hot water, with assiduous stirring, and adding to the solution sugar and milk. An indigenous salep has been made in France from Orechis maculata, O. bifolia, O. maculata, O. militaris, and O. latifolia. See Saloop.

SALEP, OTAHEITE, Arrowroot (Tahiti).

SALER'NUM, SCHOOL OF. An ancient school of medicine at Salerno in Italy. It was established by Charlemagne, in 802; and was the first Christian university at which medicine was taught. It was much celebrated, especially in the 12th century, and, on its account, Salerno was self-styled Civitas Hippocratica. The work on hygiene, "De Conservanda Valetudine," which bears its name, has passed through several editions in various languages. It is supposed to have been written by John of Milan, in 1100, and is in Leonine verses.

SALICARIA, (from salix.) Lythrum salicaria.

SALICIN, see Salix.

SALICORNIA ARABICA, &c., (sal, 'salt,' from its abounding in salt.) see Soda.

SALINE', Salinus, Salina'cins, Salinae'cidus, Salinus, Sal'sus, Hal'inus, Hal'myrus, Halico'des, Sali'nonis, (from sal.) That which contains a salt, or has the properties of a salt.

SALINE DRAUGHT or MIX'TURE. This may be made as follows:—Potass. carbon. ʒj, Acid. citric. seu tartar. gr. xv Succ. limon. recent. ʒss, Aque, fʒviij, Syrup. cinjusis, ʒj. M. Given in divided doses as a febrifuge.

SALINE EFFERVES'ING DRAUGHT or MIX'TURE is made by adding a due proportion of either of the acids above mentioned, or of lemon-juice, to the proper proportion of the carbonate of soda or of potassa. About 25 grains of the acid saturate 30 grains of the carbonate. See Powders, soda.

SALINES, see Kentucky, mineral waters of.

SALINOUS, Saline.

SALIS AMMONIACI FLORES, Ammonia carbonas.

SALITIO, (salio, 'to leap,') Leap.

SALITUS, (from sal.) Saline.

SALIUM, Saliva.

SALIUNCA, Valeriana Celtica.

SALIV'Æ, (probably from salax.) Si'alon, Si'alos, Si'elon, Pty's'na, Pty'alum, Pty'elium, Sal'ium, Sputa'men, Sputamen'tium, Sputum, Spit'tle, (Old Eng.) Spank, (Prov.) Spoat. An inodorous, insipid, transparent, slightly viscid fluid; secreted by the parotid, submaxillary and sublingual glands, and poured into the mouth by the ducts of Steno, Wharton, and Rivinus; the use of which is to mix with the alimentary bolus, and to serve in the process of digestion. It is composed, according to Berzelius, of 992.2 parts of water, 2.9 of a particular animal matter, soluble in water, and insoluble in alcohol, (pty'alim. princip'ium salivæ'te, mate'ria sial'ina, Cal'sein of the salivæ, Sal'teary albu'men.) of 1.4 of mucus, 1.7 of chlorides of potassium and sodium, 0.9 of lactate of soda and animal matter, and 0.2 of soda.

SALIVARIS, Salivary—s. Herba, Anthemis pyrethrum.

SALIVARY, Saliva'rius, Saliva'ris, Salivo'sus, Saliv'al or Saliv'al, Saliv'ous, (F.) Salivaire. That which belongs to the saliva.

SALIVARY ALBUMEN, see Saliva—s. Calculi, see Calculi, salivary.

SALIVARY FIS'TULÆ, Si'alosyrin'ges, are such as depend upon an accidental opening into the excre-tory ducts of the salivary glands. Fistulæ are most commonly met with in the duct of Steno.

SALIVARY GLANDS, Secreting organs of the saliva, Saliv'al glands, are situate symmetrically, to the number of four, on each side of the face. Their form is very irregular, and their extent varies according to individuals. Their excretory ducts—Ductus Saliva'rii, (F.) Canaux ou Conduits salivaires—carry the saliva directly into the mouth, without pouring it into any intermediate reservoir, as happens in the case of some of the other glands. The salivary glands have been distinguished into, — 1. The parot'id; 2. The submaxillary; 3. The sublingual; and 4. The intra-lingual or lin'gual, seated at the inferior surface of the tongue, where the mucous membrane forms a fringed fold.

SALIVATED, Saliva'tus, Pty'alise'd. Sial'ochous, (from saliva.) Affected with salivation.

SALIVATIO, Salivation—s. Mercur'ialis, Salivation, mercurial.

SALIVATION, Saliva'tio, S. cal'icia, Epiph'ora pty'alismus, Sialis'mus, Sputum O'ris, Sial'achus, Sialis'mus, Sialorrh'o'ea, Sialoz'e'mia, Pty'alismus, Pty'alism, Flux'us saliv'æ, (F.) Flux de Bonne, Flux salivaire, Pty'alisme. A superabundant secretion of saliva; occasioned either locally, by the use of irritating masticatories, or under the influence of some cause which acts on the whole economy, and especially of mercurial preparations. In this last case it is accompanied by a coppery taste in the mouth, by swelling of the gums, and sometimes by looseness of the teeth. Salivation may usually be diminished by the use of astringents, laxatives, &c.

Pty'alismus acutus sympath'icus, Salivæ flux'us cit'bo viso, Mouth watering, the increased flow of saliva produced by the sight, smell, or thought of agreeable food, is a species of ptyalism, as well as the Pty'alismus acutus mellitus, Apoceno'sis pty'alismus mellitus, Dulce'do Sputatorum, or Sicce't spittle. In this, the saliva has a sweet or mucilaginous taste.

SALIVATION, MERCUR'IAL, Saliva'tio mercuria'lis, Sialoz'e'mia seu Pty'alismus mercuria'lis, P. hydrargy'rat'us, (F.) Pty'alisme mercuriel, Salivation mercurielle. Salivation produced by mercury. The stomatitis that accompanies it is termed mercurial, Hydrargyrostomatit'is, (F.) Stomatite mercurielle.

SALIVATION MERCURIELLE, Salivation, mercurial.

SALIVATUM, (from saliva.) Sialagogue.

SALIVATUM, Salivated.

SALIVOSUS, Salivary.

SALIVOUS, Salivary.

SA'LIX, gen. Salic'is. The Willow, Pten, (Prov.) Solly, Sal'lywith'y, (Sc.) Sanch, Sangh, Willan, (F.) Saulc. A genus of plants in the Linnæan system. Ord. Salicaceæ.

SALIX ÆGYPTIACA, Calaf.

SALIX FRAG'ILIS, S. pen'dula seu decip'iens seu amygdali'na seu persicifolia seu Russchiana seu Trevirani, Cruck or Bedford willow (Ph. D.) SA'LIX AL'BA, S. cæru'lea seu vitell'ina, White willow (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Osier. SALIX LATIFOLIA, Broadleaved willow. SALIX CA'PREA, S. Sphaecl'ata seu tomentosa, or Great roundleaved willow (Ph. L.) SALIX PENTAN'DRIA seu HERMAPHRODITICA. SALIX HU'MILIS, Low bush willow, Speckled willow. SALIX ERIOCEPH'ALA. The bark of these and other willows has a slightly aromatic odour, and a bitter astringent taste, which is nearly the same in all the species. It is tonic and astringent, and has been used in intermittents, and in cases of dyspepsia, worms, &c. The active neutral principle has been separated, and called Salicin or Salicine, Salic'ina, Salic'inum. It has been found in about fourteen species of salix and eight species of Populus; it like the quinia in melicirral efficacy. Dose, ℞i to ℞j of the powder. Dose of Salticin from 4 to 6 grains.

SALLENDERS, Malandria.

SALLIS, Adeps.

SALLOW, (from [F.] sale, 'dirty,') Lurid.

SALLY, Salix.

SALLYWITHY, Salix.

SALMIAC, (contraction of sal ammoniac), Ammoniac murias.

SALOOP, Salep. Also, sassafras tea flavored with milk and sugar. Under this name a tea is sold in the streets of London which consists of an infusion of the wood of Laurus Sassafras with the addition of milk and sugar—Sassafras Tea. Sassafras tea has been long drunk as ordinary tea in different parts of the United States, where it is sometimes called Sassa tea.

SALOP, Salep.

SALPETRA, (sal, and petra, 'rock,') Potassæ nitras. Soda, nitrate of.

SALPINGEMPHRAX'IS, (salpingo, and εμφραξις, 'obstruction,') Obstruction of the Eustachian tube.—a cause of deafness.

SALPINGITIS, (salpingo, and itis.) Inflammation of the Eustachian tube.

SALPINGO, (from salpinx), in composition, the Eustachian, or the Fallopiian, tube.

SALPINGOCATHETERISMUS, (salpingo, and catheterismus.) Catheterism of the Eustachian tube.

SALPINGOCYTESIS, Paracyesis tubar'ia, Geard'itas tubar'ia, (salpingo, and κυστις, 'pregnancy,') Tubal pregnancy.—See Pregnancy, tubal.

SALPINGOMALLÉEN, Tensor tympani.

SALPINGOPHARYNGÆUS, (salpingo, and φάρυγξ, 'the pharynx,') Valsalva and Douglas have given this name to a bundle of fibres, which passes from the Eustachian tube to the pharynx.

SALPINGOSTAPHYLINUS, Circumflex muscle—s. Staphylinus internus, Levator palati.

SALPINGOSTENOCHORIA, (salpingo, στενος, 'narrow,' and χωρα, 'space,') Narrowness or stricture of the Eustachian tube.

SALPINX, gen. Salpin'gis, (σαλπιγξ, gen. σαλπιγγος.) Tuba.

SALSIFY, Tragopogon porrifolium.

SALSAMENTUM CRUDUM, ('salted fish,' from salsus, 'salted,') Omotarichos.

SALSAPARILLA GERMANICA, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

SALSEDO, gen. Salse'dinis, (from salsus, 'salt,') Muria—s. Mucrum, Potassæ nitras.

SALSILAGO, (from salsus, 'salt,') Muria.

SALSITUDO, gen. Salsit'udinis, (from salsus, 'salt,') Muria.

SALSOLA DECUMBENS, S. Kali.

SALSO'LA KALI, S. Decum'bens, Ka'li so'lda seu epi'usum cochlea'tum, Tra'gus sive Tra'gum Matth'oli, Prick'ly Salt'wort. Ord. Chenopodiaceæ; (from salsus, owing to its saline properties.) This plant, as well as Salsola sat'iva and Salsola soda seu longifolia, Kali iner'uvis, Her'ba vi'tri, produces the alkaline salt, commonly called Barilla, Soda, or Kelp.

SALSOLA LONGIFOLIA, S. Kali—s. Sativa, &c., see S. Kali, and Soda—s. Soda, see S. Kali.

SALSUGINOSUS, 'briny,' (from salsus.) Halimurodes.

SALSUGO, gen. Salsu'ginis, (from salsus, 'salt,') Muria.

SALSUS, Saline.

SALT, Sal, Hal, Hals, ('hals,') (F.) Sal. A name formerly given to a considerable number of substances of very different nature. At present, chymists apply the term Salts generally, to the combination of an acid with one or more bases. Neutral salts are those in which the acid and base reciprocally saturate each other. Acid salts or supersalts, (F.) Sur-sels, are those in which the acid predominates over the base, and the prefixes bi and ter indicate the proportion of acid. Alkaline salts or subsalts, (F.) Sous-sels, those in which the base is predominant, when the prefixes di and tre indicate the proportion of base. The different denominations of the salts are compounded, 1. Of the name of the acid: the termination of which is changed into ite, when the name of the acid is in ous;—ate, when it is in ic. Thus the salts formed by the sulphurous acid are sulphites; those by the sulphuric, sulphates. 2. This name is followed up by that of the oxyd, which enters into the composition of the salt. Thus, the sulphate of protoxyd of iron is a combination of sulphuric acid with the protoxyd of that metal. Frequently, to shorten the name, the word oxyd is suppressed; and proto, deuto, trito, &c., put before the acid:—as protosulphate of iron. Simple salts are those resulting from the combination of an acid with a single base; double salts with two different bases: triple with three, &c. A haloid salt is one constituted after the type of common salt, or which contains a metal and a saltrical, as chlorine, iodine, &c. An oxyacid is formed from the combination of an acid with an oxyd.

When salt is used in an abstract sense, it means the chloride of sodium.

SALTANS ROSA, Urticaria.

SALTATIO, (saltare, saltatum, 'to dance,') Dancing—s. Sancti Viti, Chorea.

SALTERTON. A village about four miles to the eastward of Exmouth, England, frequented as a winter abode by invalids. It is in a small, open valley on the seashore, and is well protected from winds, particularly the northerly.

SALTISH, Halmurodes.

SALTPETRE, (sal, and petra, 'a rock,') Potassæ nitras.

SALTUS, gen. Salt'us, (saltire, saltum, 'to leap,') Leap, Vulva—s. Tendinum, Subsultus tendinum.

SALTWORT, PRICKLY, Salsola kali.

SALUBRIOUS, (from salubris.) Salutory.

SALUBRIOUSNESS, Salubrity.

SALUBRIS, (from salus.) Salutory.

SALUBRITY, Salu'britas, Salu'brioness, (F.) Salubrité, (from salubris.) Any thing which contributes to the health of individuals or of communities. Situations differ materially from each other in this respect; and the cause of the difference is often an interesting topic of inquiry.

SALUS, gen. Salu'tis, Sanitics.

SALUTAIRE, Salutory.

SALUTARY, Salutaria, Salubar, Salubris, Hygieus, Hygiasticus, Hygieus, Saluberrimus, (F.) Salutare, Salubre, (from salus.) Healthy. That which is favourable to health. Some diseases have been considered salutary; but this is doubtful.

SALUTIFEROUS, Salutifer, (salus, and fero, 'I bear.') Bringing health; health-bearing.

SALVATELLA, Vena salvatella, is situated on the back of the hand, near its inner margin. It begins on the posterior surface of the fingers and dorsal surface of the hand, by a plexus, formed by a number of radicles, frequently anastomosing with each other; it then ascends to the inner part of the forearm, where it takes the name—posterior cubital. The ancients recommended this vein to be opened in certain diseases, as in melancholic and hypochondriacal affections; and they attributed to such abstraction of blood considerable efficacy in the cure of disease: hence its name, (from salvere, 'to be well'.)

SALVE ([Sax.] reap, [G.] Salbe.) Unguentum—s. Blistering, Unguentum lyttæ—s. Desherler's. Ceratum resinæ compositum—s. Eye. Unguentum oxidi zinci impuri—s. Eye, Singleton's, Unguentum hydrargyri nitricooxydi—s. Healing, Cerate of calamine.

SALVIA, (from salveo, 'to be well.' owing to its reputed healing qualities;) S. officinalis seu hortensis seu ulyria seu niuvor, Eleliophacius, Sage, Save, (F.) Sauge, Petite Sauge, Thé d'Europe ou de France. Ord. Labiata. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. Sage leaves, Salvia (Ph. U. S.), have a peculiar, aromatic odour, and a warm, aromatic, bitterish taste. Their virtues depend upon an essential oil. They are tonic, stimulant, and carminative. In the form of a weak infusion, Sage is occasionally used as a diluent, and as a wash for sore mouth. Dose, gr. xv to xxx or more.

SALVIA AFRICANA, Wild Sage, a South African species, has the same medical properties as Salvia.

SALVIA COLORATA, Salvia.

SALVIA HORMINUM, S. colorata, Horminum, H. coloratum seu antivum, (F.) Sauge-hormin, of the Pharmacopœias, is used in similar cases.

SALVIA HORTENSIS, Salvia.

SALVIA LYRATA, Wild Sage, Cancerweed; indigenous. The fresh leaves, bruised, are used to destroy warts. It has been supposed to be of use in cancer.

SALVIA MINOR, Salvia—s. Officinalis, Salvia.

SALVIA SCLAREA, Sclarea, Gallitrichum, Ethiopia, Biserma, Colus Jovis, Common Clarry, (F.) Sauge sclaire, Grand nuge, Orvale on Tantebonne. The leaves have been recommended as emmenagogue and antispasmodics.

SALVIA VITÆ, Asplenium ruta muraria—s. Vulgaris, Salvia.

SAMADERA INDICA, Ord. Simarubæ, furnishes the Niepa bark, which is possessed of antiperiodic properties.

SAMBØ, see Malatto.

Sambo, and Zambo, also signify the offspring of the Indian and Negro.

SAMBUCUS, (from saubon, an ancient musical instrument, said to have been made of its wood.) Sabu'cus, Sambucus nigra seu ulyria seu arboresca, Actis, Isuleiz lifnum; El'der, El'borne, El'tretee, El'larne, (Sc.) Boar'tree, Bore'tree, Bow'tree, (Prov.) Bol'try tree, Bur'tree, El'lat, El'ren, Sone, (F.) Sureau commun, Supier. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digenia—(the flower and bark were formerly called Cano'pium).

The flowers, Sambucus, (Ph. U. S.), berries, and bark of the elder have been used in medicine. The flowers have been reputed diaphoretic and discent; the berries, aperient and sulforic; the bark, purgative, and in small doses, deobstruent. The flowers are sometimes used in fomentations, and to form a cooling ointment.

SAMBUCCUS ARBOREA, Sambucus—s. Chamaeacte, S. ebulus.

SAMBUCCUS EBULUS, S. Chamaed're sen helion seu hu'milia seu herba'cea, EBulus, Chamaed're, Od'ocis, Dwarf elder, Danewort, (F.) Hèbè, Yèble. The root, interior bark, leaves, flowers, berries, (Bacca seu Grani Actes.) and seeds, have all been given in moderate doses as resolvents and deobstruents; and in large doses as hydragogues.

The berries of Sambucus Canadensis, the Common Elder of America, are made official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States—Sambucus. A distilled water of the flowers, Aqua Sambuci, Elder Water, is official in the London and Edinburgh Pharmacopœias.

SAMBUCCUS HELION, Sambucus ebulus—s. Herbacea, S. ebulus—s. Humilis, S. ebulus—s. Nigra, Sambucus.

SAMBUCCUS PUBENS, S. pubescens seu racemosa, Redberried Elder; indigenous. The bark, in decoction, is said to be a valuable hydragogue cathartic.

SAMBUCCUS RACEMOSA, S. pubens—s. Vulgaris, Sambucus.

SAMMITERRA, Samian Earth. An argillaceous earth, found in the island of Samos, to which were ascribed virtues similar to those of the Terra Lemni.

SAMMIUS LAPIDIS, Samian stone. A stone found in the Isle of Samos, which the ancients believed to be astringent and refrigerant.

SAMPHIRE, Cithium maritimum.

SAMPSON, BLACK, Echinacea purpurea.

SAMPSONCHON, (σαμψυχον.) Origanum majorana.

SAMPSYCHINON, (σαμψυχον.) Sampsonchinum. An ointment composed of σαμψυχον, which was perhaps marjoram.

SAMPSYCHUM, (σαμψυχον.) Origanum majorana.

SAN GIULIANO, MINERAL WATERS OF. At the foot of the mountain San Giuliano, a league and a half from Pisa, are several mineral springs; temperature from 84° to 107° Fah.

The spring, Pozzetto, contains carbonic acid, sulphates of soda, lime, and magnesia; chlorides of sodium and magnesium; carbonates of lime and magnesia; argil and silica.

SANABILIS, (sanare, 'to heal,' and habilis, 'able,') Curable.

SANABLE, Curable.

SANAMUNDA, Geum urbanum.

SANATIO, (sanare, sanatum, 'to cure,') Curation, Cure.

SANATIVE, Curative.

SANATORIUM, Sanitarium.

SANATORY, Curative.

SAND, ([Sax.] rauo.) see Gravel.

SANDBLIND, nearly blind. A defect of vision, in which small particles seem to fly before the eyes. See Metamorphopsia.

SAND, Breax, see Pineal gland—s. Pineal, see Pineal gland.

SANDALUM CÆRULEUM, Guilandina moringa—s. Rubrum, Pterocarpus santalinus.

SANDARAC, Sandaracha, Gum Juniper or Sandarach, Pounce, Gummi Juniperi, Sawla'rica, Ver'nix sic'ca, Resi'na Juniperi, (F.) Sandaracque, Gomme de Genérier. A name given, by the Arabs, to an odorous resin, that flows from the Thuya ophyllia. Ord. Coniferæ. Sex. Syst. Monœcia Monadelphia. It is stimulant, like all the resins; but is very little used.

SANDARACHA GRÆCORUM, (σαρδαραχη.) Realgar.

SANDERS, see Saunders.

SANDIVER, (saint-de-verre, 'dross of glass,' [?]) see Vitrum.

SANDIX, Plumbi oxydum rubrum.

SANDYX, (σάνδης), Plumbi oxydum rubrum.

SANG, (from [L.] sanguis), Blood, Panax quinquefolium—s. Arteriel, Arterial blood—s. Dragon, Rumex sanguineus, see Calamus rotang—s. Globules du, Globules of the blood—s. Perte de, Hæmorrhagia.

SANGAREE'. Wine and water, sweetened and spiced. First used in the West Indies.

SANGLOT, (from singulus.) Sob.

SANGRA'DO, ([S.] sangrador, 'a bleeder.') A doctor, in Gil Blas, who was a heroic bleeder; and hence, popularly applied to such a one.

SANGSUE, (from sanguisuga), Hirudo.

SANGUIDUCTUS DURÆ MATRIS, (sanguis, 'blood,' and ducere, ductum, 'to lead,') Sinuses of the dura mater.

SANGUIFICATIO, (sanguis, 'blood,' and facere, 'to make,') Hæmatisis—s. Debilior, Hyphæutatisis.

SANGUIFLUXUS, gen. Sanguifluxūs, (sanguis, 'blood,' and fluere, fluxum, 'to flow,') Hæmorrhagia—s. Uterinus, Metrorrhagia.

SANGUIMOTION, (sanguis, 'blood,' and movere, motum, 'to move,') Circulation.

SANGUIMOTORY, Circulatory.

SANGUIN (Vaisseau), Bloodvessel.

SANGUINALIS CORRIGIOLA, (from sanguis, because used to stop blood,) Polygonum aviculare.

SANGUINARIA, (from sanguis, 'blood,' owing to the colour of its juice.) S. Canadensis seu acutis, Blood'root, Blood'wort, Puccoon', Red Puccoon', Red Root, Ind'ian Paint, Turmeric. Nat. Ord. Papaveraceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. A North American plant, the rhizoma—Sanguinaria (Ph. U. S.)—and seeds of which are used in medicine. They are emetic. Dose of the powder, 8 to 20 grains. They are said to reduce the velocity of the pulse, like digitalis.

SANGUINARIA, Polygonum aviculare.

SANGUINE, Sanguineus, Sanguinosus, Hæmaticus, Hæmatodes, Hæmateus, Hæmatimus, Hæmodes, Hæmoids, Sanguineus, Hæmatic, (F.) Sanguin, (from sanguis.) Bloody, bloodlike; having the colour of blood, as 'a sanguine countenance.' Relating to, or containing blood—as 'sanguine temperament.' Plethoric.

SANGUINEA, Potassæ nitras.

SANGUINENESS, Plethora.

SANGUINEOUS, Plethoric, Sanguine.

SANGUINEUS, Sanguine.

SANGUINIS ABSORPTIO, Hæmorrhophesis—s. Congestio, Congestion—s. Dissolutio, Hæmatoclysis—s. Fluor, Hæmoptysis—s. Fluor vesicæ, Hystorrhagia—s. Ictus, Apoplexy—s. Missio, Bloodletting—s. Profluvium copiosum, Hæmorrhagia—s. Profluvium ex ore, Stomatorrhagia—s. Stagnatio, Hemostasis.

SANGUINOLENT, Sanguinolentus, (from sanguis.) Tinged with blood. An epithet applied, particularly, to the sputa when so tinged. Bloody.

SANGUINOSUS, Sanguine.

SANGUIPURGIUM, (sanguis, and purgare, 'to cleanse,') Purgation of the blood. A name given by some authors to mild fevers, from an idea that they purged the blood of noxious matters.

SANGUIS, gen. Sanguinis, Blood, Sperm—s. Concretus, Coagulum—s. Draconis, see Calamus rotang—s. Hirci siccatus, see Blood—s. Menstruus, see Menses—s. in Urinâ, Hæmaturia—s. Virginis primum menstruate, see Menses.

SANGUISOR'BA CANADENSIS, Can'ada Burnett, (sanguis, 'blood,' and sorbere, 'to absorb,' so called from its astringency.) A tall indigenous plant—Ord. Rosaceæ—with white, sometimes purple, flowers, which appear from August to October. It has the same virtues as SANGUISOR'BA OFFICINALIS, S. car'nea seu rubra, Italian Pimpinell, Pimpinella Italica seu officinalis, (F.) Pimpinelle noire. It was formerly used as an astringent and tonic, in hemorrhages, dysentery, &c.

SANGUISUGA, (sanguis, 'blood,' and sugere, 'to suck,') Hirudo.

SANGUISUGUM. A barbarous term, to denote too great an accumulation of blood in the heart.

SANICLE, Sanicula, S. Marilandica—s. American, Heuchera cortusa—s. de Mariland, Sanicula Marilandica—s. Yorkshire, Pinguicula vulgaris.

SANICULA, (from sano, 'I heal,') Saxifraga granulata.

SANICULA, S. Europæa seu officinarum seu mas, Astrantia diapipeia, Caucalis Sanicula, Cucullata, Dodecatheon, Symphytum petraeum, Diapipeia, D. cortusa, Sanicle, Wood March, (F.) Toute-saine. Ord. Umbellifereæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. This herb was formerly used as a mild astringent. It is bitterish, and somewhat austere.

SANICULA EBORACENSIS, Pinguicula vulgaris—s. Europæa, Sanicula.

SANICULA MARILAN'DICA, Sanicle, Maryland Sanicle, Black Snake'root, (F.) Sanicle de Mariland. This indigenous plant grows in marshes, or low and shaded ground. It is possessed of tonic virtues; and the powdered root is employed in popular practice as a favourite remedy in intermittent fever. It has been recommended, also, in chorea.

SANICULA MONTANA, Pinguicula vulgaris—s. Officinarum, Sanicula.

SANIDO'DES, (σανίδωδες, 'resembling a board,' from sans, gen. σανός, 'a board,' and odes.) One whose thorax is flat, like a board.

SANIE, Sanies.

SANIES, Pchor, Ta'bun, Virus, Pus malignum seu corrosivum, (F.) Sanie, (corr. from sanguis, 'blood,') A thin, serous fluid, presenting some of the qualities of pus and blood, and commonly exhaled at the surface of ulcers.

SANIEUX, Ichorous.

SANIOSUS, Ichorous.

SANIOUS, Ichorous.

SANITAIRE, Sanitary.

SANITA'RIUM, Sanatorium, (sanitas, 'health,') A retreat selected for valetudinarians, in consequence of its salubrity. Also, an establishment for the treatment of the sick.

SANITARY, San'atory, (F.) Sanitaire. That which relates to health, and especially to public health; as 'Sanitary commission.'

SANITAS, (sanus, 'healthy,') Hygie'na, Hyge'na, Hygion'sis, Hyg'asis, Integ'ritas, Prosper'itas, Valetudinis, Sal'us, Hygie'na, Valetu'do, Valitu'do, Valetu'do bona seu secundu'la seu com'moda, Hyge'na, Enzoodyna'mia, Health, (Sc.) Heil, Heyle, Heal, (F.) Santé, (from sonus, 'sound,') Health has been defined,—a state in which all the functions are exerted with regularity and harmony. A person may, however, be in health, although certain functions are not performed. A blind man, for example, has health when all his functions, except sight, proceed with regularity. Sanity is often used for soundness of mind.

SANITAS, Cure.

SANITY, Sanitas.

SANKIRA, Smilax China.

SANS PAIRE, 'pairless,' (Veine), Azygos vein.

SANTA CRUZ, CLIMATE OF. This West India island is frequently selected as a winter retreat for the physical valetudinarian from the United States; but it does not seem entitled to any preference, in such cases, over the other islands of the West Indies, whilst its general salubrity is said to be less than that of many.

SANTAL BLANC, Santalum album—s. Rouge, Pterocarpus santalinus.

SANTALUM, see Pterocarpus santalinus.

SANTALUM ALBUM, S. citrinum seu pallidum seu myrtifolium, Siv'ium myrtifolium, Yellow Sand'ers. (F.) Santal blanc. Ord. Santalaceæ. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. The virtues of the wood of the white sanders reside in a volatile oil and resinous principle. The odour is fragrant, and resembles a mixture of ambergris and roses. It has been used as a stimulant and sudorific, but is not now employed. The sanders woods are called, collectively, in French, Santaux.

SANTALUM MYRTIFOLIUM, S. album—s. Rubrum, Pterocarpus santalinus.

SANTÉ, Sanitas.

SANTONICA, see Artemisia santonica.

SANTONICUM, (from Santonía, its native place.) Artemisia santonica.

SANTONINE, Santoninum, San'tonin, Ci'nin. A peculiar crystalline substance obtained from Artemisia Santonica. It is directed, in the Ph. U. S. for 1863, to be prepared by digesting santonica, lime and alcohol together, and expressing; distilling off the alcohol and evaporating; adding acetic acid until in slight excess; washing the resulting crystalline mass, and drying it; boiling the dry residue with alcohol; and, having digested the tincture for several hours with animal charcoal, filtering, and setting aside to crystallize. Santonine possesses the anthelmintic properties of the plant. Dose, five or six grains.

SANTORINI, FIS'SURES OF, (F.) Inci'sures ou Scissures de Santorini, (after the Italian anatomist.) Clefts at the upper and back of the fibro-cartilaginous portion of the external ear.

SANTORINI, TUBERCLES OF. Small cartilaginous projections at the top of the arytenoid cartilages, which support the ligaments of the glottis. See Corniculum Laryngis.

SA'NYÉ, Sinapis.

SAO'RIA, Sauar'ja, Sava'ri, (a Guiana name.) The ripe and dried fruit of Mae'sa seu Bæob'otrys pice'a, an Abyssinian tree, which is administered in its native country, in powder, in doses of from 32 to 44 grammes, as a téniafuge.

SAP, ([Sax.] ræp. [G.] Saft.) Ar'borum Suc'cus seu Lymph'a, (F.) Sève. The circulating fluid of the vegetable, which corresponds to the blood of the animal.

SAPA, see Rob.

SAPHA'DA. Paracelsus has given this name to reddish scales adherent to the hair in some eruptions of the hairy scalp.

SAPHE'NA, Saphena.

SAPHATUM, Asaphatum.

SAPHE'NA, Saphæ'na, (σαφης, 'manifest,' 'evident.')(F.) Saphène. A name given to two subcutaneous veins of the lower limb. These are: 1. The GREAT SAPHE'NA VEIN, S. inter'na, Tibio-malleolar (Ch.), (F.) Grande Veine Saphène ou Saphène interne. Its radicles occupy the inner part of the great toe, and form a transverse arch on the back of the foot, which unites with the saphena externa, and receives at its convex part, which is turned forwards, a number of branches, coming from the toes. These radicles, when united, ascend before the inner ankle, and form a trunk, the size of which is farther increased by several branches that proceed from the region of the tarsus, and that of the metatarsus. This trunk ascends vertically at the inner part of the leg; passes behind the inner condyle of the femur; proceeds along the inner part of the thigh; receives other subcutaneous veins, such as the abdominal subcutaneous, the external pudic, &c. and passes through the inferior opening of the crural canal to empty itself into the femoral vein. 2. The LES'SER VE'NA SAPHE'NA or Saphe'na ex- ter'na, Perone'omalleolar Vein of Chaussier, (F.) Petite Veine Saphène ou Saphène externe, commences by several roots, which are spread over the dorsum and outer side of the foot, and embrace the outer ankle. Behind this, they unite into a single trunk, which ascends obliquely, approaching the tendo Achillis, and proceeds vertically towards the ham to open into the popliteal vein.

SAPHÈNE, Saphena.

SAPHE'NOUS, Saphenous; (from saphena.) Of or belonging to the saphena.

SAPHE'NOUS NERVES are two in number, and are branches of the crural or femoral nerve. They are the short saphenous—ner'vus cuta'neus internus; and the long saphenous—ner'vus cuta'neus internus longus.

The external saphenous, formed by the union of the communicans poplitei and communicans peronei, passes down the leg by the side of the external saphenous vein of the foot.

SAPHE'NOUS O'PENING. An oval, and somewhat oblique, opening in the fascia lata, a little below Poupart's ligament, for the transmission of the principal superficial vessels. Here, likewise, femoral hernia descends.

SAP'ID, Sap'orous, Sap'idus, (F.) Savoureux, (sapere, 'to taste.')

Possested of sapidity. Having the power of affecting the organs of taste.

SAPID'ITY, Sap'idness, Sap'orous'ity, Sap'or, (F.) Sapidité. The quality of bodies that gives them taste.

SAPIN COMMUN, ([L.] Sapinus), Pinus picea.

SAPIN'DUS, (sapo, and Indus, 'Indian soap,') S. Saponaria, Saponaria, Soap-tree, (F.) Savonnier commun. Ord. Sapindacæ. The name of the plant that affords the Soapnuts, Saponaria Nuculæ, Bac'æe Bermuden'ses, Soapberries. A spherical fruit about the size of a cherry, the cortical part of which is yellow, glossy, and so transparent as to show the spherical black nut that rattles within, and includes a white kernel. The cortical part of this fruit, which has similar effects with soap in washing, has been recommended in chlorosis, and as a stomachic and deobstruent.

SA'PO, gen. Sapo'nis, (σαπων, [Sax.] ræpe.) Smegma, (F.) Sapon. A product obtained by treating fatty bodies with caustic alkalies dissolved in water. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, it means Soap made with soda and olive oil. See Sapo medicinalis.

YEL'LOW SOAP is formed of turpentine, oil, and alkali. A soap of subcarbonate of potassa and oil of turpentine—Sapo terebin'thinæ—was formerly used for indolent swellings, under the name of Starkey's soap.

Castile Soap, being made of fine olive oil, is generally used internally. The yellow and soft soaps are the most stimulating; and are, consequently best adapted for particular cutaneous eruptions.

Internally, soap is purgative and diuretic; externally, it is detergent and stimulant. Soapy water is used with the greatest success, in cases of poisoning by acids. It is mostly applied externally to bruises and sprains. In Pharmacy, it is used to favour the solution of resins.

SAPO AC'CIDUS, Ac'id Soap, is a combination of a fixed oil with an acid.

SAPO AMMONIACALIS, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius—s. Ammoniæ oleaceus, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius—s. Amygdalinus, Sapo medicinalis—s. Cacaotinus, Sapo coconus—s. Calcareus, Linimentum aquæ calcis—s. Castiliensis, see Sapo medicinalis.

SAPO COCO'NEUS, Sapo cacaoti'nis, Soap of Coconut Oil, (F.) Savon de cacao, has been much used in Germany in herpetic affections.

SAPO DURIS, S. medicinalis—s. Hispanicus, see S. medicinalis—s. Kalicus, S. Mollis.

SAPO LIQ'UIDUS, Liq'uid Soap, L'otio saponacea, is a cosmetic, which is composed of Olive oil  $\bar{\zeta}$ iv, Ol. tartari per deliquium  $\bar{\zeta}$ ss. Rub together, and add Aq. rosarum,  $\bar{\zeta}$ xij.

SAPO MEDICINA'LIS, Sapo amygdal'imus, Mcdiell'ual Soap, (F.) Savon médicinol, is made of oil of sweet almonds and half its weight of caustic alkali, or, like the Sapo Hispanicus seu Castilien'sis, Spanish or Castile soap, Sapo durus, Sapo (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Savon dur, of olive oil and soda.

SAPO MOL'LIS, S. vir'idis seu n'iger seu kal'icus, Common or Soft Soap, (F.) Savon mou ou noir, is made of potash and oil or tallow. The Sapo vulgaris or 'common soap' of the Pharm. U. S. is made with soda and animal oil.

SAPO N'IGER, Black Soap, Melanosmegma, is a composition of train oil and an alkali: and GREEN SOAP, Sapo vir'idis, of hempseed, linseed, or rape oil, with an alkali. See Sapo mollis.

SAPO TERE'BINTHINE, see Sapo—s. Vegetabilis, Pulvis gummosus alkalinus—s. Viridis, Sapo mollis—s. Vulgaris, see Sapo mollis.

SAPONA'CEOUS, Saponaceus, (F.) Saponacé, (from sapo.) Soapy. Containing soap, as Lini-mentum saponaceum, Soap liniment.

SAPONAIRE, Saponaria.

SAPONA'RIA, (from sapo,—the juice forming a lather with water.) Soapwort, Brusewort, Bouc'ing Bet, Stru'thium, Lona'ria, Lych'uis officinalis seu syly'es'tris, Ibi'uma, Boot'ia vulgaris, (F.) Saponaire, Saronnière. Ord. Caryophyllacæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Digynia. A decoction of the leaves of this plant has been recommended in scrofula, cancer, old syphilis, cutaneous eruptions, jaundice, visceral obstructions, &c. It is hardly ever used.

SAPONARIA, Sapindus saponaria.

SAPONARIE NUCULÆ, see Sapindus saponaria.

SAPONÉ. Soap, to which are added substances capable of communicating to it new properties, without affecting its own.

SAPONEA. A pectoral medicine, prepared with sweetened syrup of violets, and oil of sweet almonds.

SAPONULÉ. A tincture (alcoolé), sufficiently charged with soap to cause it to assume a gelatinous shape.

SAPONULES, Sapon'uli, (F.) Savonules. Imperfect soaps formed by combinations of volatile or essential oils with different bases. See Opo-deloch.

ACID SAPONULES are combinations of such oils with different acids.

SAPONURE. A medicine, formed of soap, in powder, and of resinous or extractive matters.

SAPOR. Sapidity, Savour.

SAPOROSITY, Sapidity.

SAPOROUS, Sapid.

SAPOTA, S. A'chras, Ac'hras Sapo'ta seu australis seu Zapo'ta, El mispero, Oralf'ruited Sapota, (F.) Sapotier, Sapotillier, Sapotillo. Fam. Sapotacæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Digynia. A tree which grows in the Antilles, and particularly at St. Domingo. Its fruit is much esteemed. It resembles the marmalade of quinces; and hence has been called natural marmalade. The seeds make an emulsion, which has been given in nephritic affections. The bark has been recommended as a febrifuge.

SAPOTA ACHRAS, Sapota.

SAPOTIER, Sapota.

SAPOTILLA, Sapota.

SAPOTILLIER, Sapota.

SAPOPYRÆ, (σαπρος, 'putrid,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Typhus gravior.

SAPROS, (σαπρος,) Putrid, Rancid.

SAPROS'TOMUS, (σαπρος, and στομα, 'mouth,') One who has an offensive breath.

SAPROTÆS, (σαπρωτης,) Putrefaction.

SAR'APOTES, Sarapotes, ('σαρω, 'I grin,' and ποτς, 'the foot,') One who has a large foot; whose toes are largely separated, or whose feet are much asunder in walking. See Kyllosis.

SARATOGA, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. The Saratoga Springs in New York are ten miles north-east from Ballston. They contain the same ingredients as those of the latter place; and are much frequented by visitors from every part of the United States. The following analysis has been given — the Congress spring. In a wine gallon — gaseous contents:—carbonic acid, 311 cubic inches; atmospheric air, 7. Solid contents: chloride of sodium, gr. 385; iodide of sodium, gr. 3.5; bicarbonate of soda, gr. 8.982; bicarbonate of magnesia, gr. 95.788; carbonate of lime, gr. 98.098; carbonate of iron, gr. 5.075; silica, gr. 1.5; bromide of potassium, a trace. Total, gr. 597.943.

The Wul'ton or I'odine spring contains chloride of sodium, carbonate of magnesia, and iodide of sodium.

SARCEPIPLOCELE, Sarcoëpiplocele.

SARCEPIPLOMPHALOCELE, Sarcoëpiplomphalocèle.

SARCEPIPLOMPHALUS, Sarcoëpiplomphalus.

SARCEUX, Sarcous.

SARCIDIUM, (σαρκιδιον, dim. of σαρξ, 'flesh,') Caruncle.

SARCINA, 'a pack, a burthen,' Fœtus.

SARCINA VENTRIC'ULI, S. Goodwin'ii, Merismopœ'dia ventriculi, (Robin.) A microscopic cryptogamous plant found in the fluid of water-brash.

SARCION, (σαρκιον,) Caruncle.

SARCITES, (from σαρξ, 'flesh,') Anasarca — s. Flatusosa, Emphysema.

SARCITIS, (σαρξ, 'flesh,' and itis,) Myositis.

SARCO, (σαρξ, gen. σαρκος, 'flesh,') in composition, flesh.

SARCOCE'LĒ, Her'nia carno'sa, Scir'rhus Testic'uli, (sarco, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Sarco'ma scroti, (F.) Hernie charnue. Scirrhous or cancer of the testicle. This disease affects adults particularly; and appears most commonly after an inflammatory swelling of the testicle. Sometimes it is dependent upon a blow; at others, it makes its appearance without any appreciable cause. It is well known by a hard, heavy, ovoid or spherical swelling of the testicle, which is, at first, slightly, or not at all painful, and merely causes an unpleasant traction on the spermatic cord. There is no heat or change of colour of the skin; the spermatic cord is swollen, and participates in the affection; very painful shootings occur; the lymphatic glands of the abdomen become swollen, and form a tumour, which may, at times, be felt through the abdomen; and the patient, at length, dies with every sign of the cancerous diathesis. The prognosis is very unfavourable. The only means, indeed, that can save life, is the extirpation of the testicle.

SARCOCOL'LA, (F.) Colle-chair, (σαρκοκolla, from sarco, and κolla, 'glue,') A resinous matter, obtained from Peuce'a Sarcocol'la, P. mucronata, and other species of Penæa, an African shrub, which has been so called from a belief that it facilitates the consolidation of flesh. It is in the form of small, oblong, semitransparent globules, of a yellowish or reddish hue, and smells like aniseed. It was once employed as an astringent and detergent.

SARCOOPTES, (sarco, and σπηω, 'to wound,') see Psora.

SARCODES, (from σαρξ, 'flesh,' and odes,) Car-nous.

SARCOËPIPOCELE, Sarcepi'poc'el'e, (sarco, επιπλοον, 'the epiploon,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.') Epiploce, complicated with sarcoma or sarcocele.

SARCOËPIPLOM'PHALUS, Sarcepi'pilot'p'halus, Sarcepi'pilot'p'haloc'el'e, (sarco, επιπλοον, 'the epiploon,' and σφαλος, 'the navel.') Umbilical hernia, formed by scirrhus epiploon or complicated with sarcoma.

SARCOHYDROCELE, Hydro-sarcocele.

SARCOID, Sarco'id'es, (sarcoideis, from sarco, and ειδος, 'resemblance.') Resembling flesh.

SARCOLEM'MA, gen. Sarcoleu'matis, Sarcole'ma, (sarco, and λεμμα, 'a coat.') The sheath which surrounds the fibrils of muscle that form a fibre. It is quite distinct from the areolar membrane that binds the fibres into fasciculi. See Perymysium.

SARCOLOGIA, (sarco, and λογος, 'a discourse,') Myology, Sarcology.

SARCOLOGY, Sarcolog'ia. The part of anatomy which treats of the soft parts. It comprises myology, angiology, neurology, and splanchnology.

SARCOMA, gen. Sarco'matis, (sarcoma, Emphy'ma Sarco'ma, Sarcomatous tumour, Sarco'mis, Sarcoph'yia, Escarco'ma, Escarco'mu, Tu'mor car'neus, Escarco'mia carno'sa, Poly'gus carno'sus, (sarx, 'flesh,' and oma.) Any species of excrescence having a fleshy consistence.

SARCOMA, CARCINOMATOUS, Scirrhus—s. Cereosis, see Cereosis—s. Epulis, Epulis—s. Gelatinous, see Tumour, fibrocellular—s. Mastoid, Mammary sarcoma—s. Medullary, see Encephaloid—s. Medullary, see Encephaloid, Hæmatodes fungus—s. Pulpy, Hæmatodes fungus—s. Scroti, Sarcocele.

SARCOMA, COMMON VASCULAR or ORGANIZED of Abernethy, Emphy'ma Sarco'ma Vasculo'sum, is vascular throughout: texture simple: when bulky, napped on the surface with arborescent veins. Found over the body and limbs generally.

SARCOMATEUX, Sarcomatous.

SARCOMATODES, Sarcomatous.

SARCOMATOSUS, Sarcomatous.

SARCOMATOUS, Sarcomatous, Sarcomato'd'es, (F.) Sarcomateux. Belonging to, or having the characters of sarcoma.

SARCOMPHALUM, (sarcomphalon.) Sarcomphalus.

SARCOMPHALUS, Sarcom'phalum, (sarco, and σφαλος, 'navel.') A scirrhus or fleshy tumour, developed at the navel.

SARCOMYCES, (sarco, and μυκης, 'fungus,') Sarcopongus.

SARCOPHAGUS, (sarco'phagos, from sarco, and φάγω, 'to eat,') Carnivorous, Cathartic.

SARCOPHYIA, (sarco, and φυω, 'to grow,') Excrescence, Sarcoma.

SARCOPSYLLA PENETRANS, (sarco, and ψυλλα, 'a flea,') Chique.

SARCOPE, Acarus.

SARCPOTES SCABIEI, (sarco, and σκαπω, 'to wound,') see Psora.

SARCOPYO'DES, (sarco, πους, 'pus,' and οδης.) Having the appearance of pus mixed with flesh. An epithet given to certain excreted matters, and particularly to the sputa of those labouring under consumption.

SARCO'SIS, (sarco'sis, from sarx, gen. sarcos, 'flesh,' and οσις.) The formation of flesh. Also, sarcoma.

SARCO'SIS BUL'BI, Escarphal'mia fungo'sa seu sarcomat'ica. A fleshy growth from the globe of the eye.

SARCO'SIS UTERI, Metrauxis.

SARCO'SPONG'US, Sarcosp'ongus, (sarco, and σπογγος, 'fungus,') A fleshy fungus.

SARCO'STOSIS, (sarco, and οστος, 'formation of bone,') Osteosarcoma.

SARCO'TH'LASIS, Sarcothlas'ma, (sarco, and θλαω, 'I bruise,') Cu'ro contu'sa. A bruise of the flesh.

SARCOTIC, (sarco'ticos.) Incarnans.

SARCOTRIPTEUR, (sarco, and τριβω, 'to rub down,') Écraseur.

SARCOTRIPSIE, see Écraseur.

SARCOUS, (F.) Sarcous, (from sarx, gen. sarcos, 'flesh,') Of, or belonging to, flesh or muscle—as 'sarcons tissue.'

SARCOUS ELEMENTS, Primitive particles. The elementary particles, which, by their union, form the mass of muscular fibre.

SARDIASIS, (from Σαρδω, Sardinia, because the Sardinia herba, which grew there, was said to produce it.) Canine laugh, Risus sardonius.

SARDONIA HERBA, Ranunculus sceleratus.

SARDONIASIS, (same etymon as Sardiasis.) Canine laugh, Risus sardonius.

SARDONIUS RISUS, Canine laugh.

SARE, Essera.

SAROTHAMNUS SCOPARIUS, (sarpos, 'a broom, and Σαρπος, 'a shrub,') Spartium scoparium.

SARRACENIA, (after Dr. Sarrazin, of Quebec, Sidenaddle plant, Fly'trap.) The root of Sarracenia flava and S. variol'ris is bitter and astringent, and has been used in South Carolina, as a domestic remedy in dyspepsia. The root of Sarracenia purpurea or pitcher plant, Indiou or Huntsman's cap, is used, in infusion, by the Indians of the North, as a remedy for smallpox; both in the way of prevention and cure.

SARRASIN, (after the Saracens,) Polygonum fagopyrum.

SARRETE, Trismus infantum.

SARRIETTE, Satureia hortensis—s. de Crête, Satureia capitata.

SARSA, Smilax sarsaparilla.

SARSAPARILLA, ([S.] Zorza, 'a briar,' and parilla, 'a little vine,' or, according to some, from Parillo, a physician who first employed it.) Menispermum Canadense, Smilax S.

SARSAPARILLA FALSE, Aralia nudicaulis.

SARSAPARILLA GERMANICA, Gra'men maj'or seu rubrum, Salsaparilla Germanica, Cu'ez Arend'ria, (F.) Loiche, L. des Sables, Salspareille d'Allemagne, Chiendent rouge. Ord. Cyperaceæ. Sec. Syst. Monocœcia Triandria. A plant, which grows plentifully on the seacoasts of Europe. It has been recommended in some mucous affections of the trachea, in rheumatism, gout, &c.

SARSAPARILLA INDIAN, Hemidesmus Indicus—s. Wild, Aralia nudicaulis.

SARTAPARILLA, Smilax sarsaparilla.

SARTORIUS, (sartor, 'a tailor,' because used in crossing the legs.) Sarto'rius, Longi'ssimus Fem'oris, Fasci'alis, F. Longus seu into'rius, (F.) Neo-cresti-tibial, Neo-prætibial (Ch.), Conturvier. A muscle situate at the anterior part of the thigh. It is long, small, and flattened, and extends, obliquely, from the anterior and superior spine of the ilium to the superior and inner part of the tibia. This muscle can, also, bend the pelvis on the thigh, and conversely.

SARX, (sarx, gen. sarcos.) Flesh, Pulp.

SARZA, ([S.] sarza, 'a briar,') Smilax sarsaparilla.

SAS'SA GUM. A gum, occasionally carried into the European markets from the East, and answering exactly to Bruce's description of the product of a tree, which he calls Sassa. It has considerable resemblance to Gum Tragacanth.

SASSAFRAS, Laurus sasafra, Nectandra cymbarum—s. Medulla, see Laurus sasafra—s. Nut, see Pichurin beans—s. Radicis cortex, see Laurus sasafra.

SASSAFRAS SWAMP, Magnolia glauca.

SASSAFRAS TEA, Saloop.

SAS'SY BARK. A poisonous bark of a large tree—Genus, Erythrophle'um, E. Guineen'se; Nat. Ord. Fabaceæ; Redwater tree of Sierra Leone—growing in Western and Central Africa, used in an ordeal to which persons, suspected of witchcraft, secret murder, and other crimes, are subjected, to test their innocence or guilt. Hence it is called, in Congo, ordeal bark, and in Ashantee and Liberia, doon bark.

SAT'ELLITE, Satel'les, gen. Satel'litis. That which guards. That which is placed near.

SATELLITE VEINS are those that accompany arteries.

SATHE, (σαθη,) Penis.

SATIAs, Satiety.

SATIES, Satiety.

SATIETAS, Plesmone, Satiety,

SATIETY, Sati'etas, Satu'ritas, Sat'ias, Sat'ites, Saturatio, Asē, Ple'thos, Ples'monē, (satiare, from satis, 'enough,' 'to give enough,') Disgust for food; commonly produced by repletion.

SATIN, Lunaria rediviva.

SATURANS, (saturare, saturatum, (satis, 'enough,') 'to satiate,') Absorbent (medicine.)

SATURATIO, Satiety, Saturation.

SATURATIO, Saturatio. The state of a compound in which its elements are combined in such proportion that a fresh quantity of either cannot be added without producing excess. When an acid or an alkali is directed to be saturated, the saturation is determined by litmus and turmeric.

SATUREIA CAPITA'TA, (from Σατυρος, 'the Satyrs,' owing to its presumed power of exciting to venery.) Cil'iated Sa'toory, Thy'mus, T. sylv'es'tris seu Cre'ticus, Cum'illa, (F.) Sarriette de Crète. Ord. Labiate. Sex. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. Possesses similar properties to thyme.

SATUREIA HORTENS'ISIS, Satureia, S. sati'va, Cum'illa sati'va Plin'ii, Thym'bra, Sum'mer Sa'toory, (F.) Sarriette. An aromatic plant, cultivated for culinary purposes. It has been used, as an excitant, in anorexia, anaphrodisia, &c.

SATUREIA ORIGANOIDES, Cunila mariana — s. Sativa, S. hortensis.

SATURITAS, (saturare, 'to satiate,') Satiety.

SATURNI DULCEDO, Plumbi superacetat.

SATURNINE, Saturni'nus, (from saturnus), Containing, or caused by, lead.

SATURNINE BREATH. The peculiar odour of the breath in one labouring under Saturnism.

SATURNISMUS, Intoxica'tio seu Cachex'ia seu Dyscras'ia saturni'na, Molybdo-cachex'ia, (F.) Maladie de plomb, (from saturnus.) Poisoning by lead: lead-poisoning; saturnine cachexy.

SATURNUS, Plumbum.

SATYRIASIS, (σατυριασις, from Σατυρος, 'a Satyr,' because the Satyrs were greatly addicted to venery.) S. fu'rens, Satyrias'mus, Satyris'mus, Estroma'nia, Tenti'go vene'rea, Salac'itas, Bra-chu'na, Lagne'sis Salac'itas, L. fu'ror masculi'nus, Lagne'as, Lagni'as, Lagno'sis, Lasciv'ia, Lasciv'itas, Tenti'go vere'tri. An irresistible desire, in man, to have frequent connexion with the female, accompanied by the power of doing so without exhaustion. The causes are commonly obscure. Sometimes, the abuse of aphrodisia has occasioned it. The principal symptoms are:—almost constant erection; irresistible and almost insatiable desire for venery; frequent nocturnal pollutions. Cold lotions; the cold bath; a mild diet; active exercise, &c. are the only means that can be adopted for its removal.

SATYRIASIS FURENS, Satyriasis.

SATYRIASMUS, Satyriasis.

SATYRION, (σατυριον), Orchis mascula.

SATYRISMUS, (σατυρισμος), Satyriasis.

SATYRIUM, Goodyera pubescens.

SAUARJA, Saoria.

SAUCE ALONE, Alliaria.

SAUCE, GREEN, Rumex scutatus.

SAUCH, ([Sax.] palh), Salix.

SAUERKRAUT (G.), 'sour cabbage,' Sour-croit, (F.) Chou-croûte. A culinary preparation, made with chopped cabbage, left to attain an incipient state of acetous fermentation. It is reputed by the Germans to be salubrious, easy of digestion, and eminently antiscorbutic.

SAUGE, Salvia — s. des Bois, Teucrium scordium — s. Grande, Salvia sclarea — s. Hormin, Salvia horminum — s. de Jérusalem, Pulmonaria — s. Petite, Salvia — s. Sclérée, Salvia sclarea.

SAUGH, ([Sax.] palh), Salix.

SAULE, Salix.

SAUMURE, (from sal, and muria), Muria.

SAUNDERS, RED, Pterocarpus santalinus — s. Trec, Pterocarpus santalinus — s. Yellow, Santalum album.

SAURA, (σαυρα) Lizard.

SAURURUS CERNUUS, (sauru, 'lizard,' and oupa, 'a tail,') Lizard's Tail, Breast weed. Indigenous; Order, Saururaceæ; flowering in June. It has been used in lumbago. The bruised root is emollient, and is a popular application to inflamed breasts.

SAUSAGE POISON, Allantotoxiicum.

SAUT, ([L.] salvus), Leap.

SAUTEUSES, 'leapers,' see Convulsionnaire.

SAUVE-VIE, 'save life,' Asplenium ruta-muraria.

SAVE, Salvia.

SAVEUR, Savour.

SAVINE, Juniperus sabina.

SAVINIER, Juniperus sabina.

SAVON, Sapo — s. Ammoniacal, Linimentum ammoniac fortius — s. Cacao, Sapo cocœus — s. Calcaire, Linimentum aquæ calcis — s. Dur, Sapo durus — s. Médicinal, Sapo medicinalis — s. Mou, Sapo mollis — s. Noir, Sapo mollis.

SAVONNIER COMMUN, (from savon), Sapindus saponaria.

SAVONNIÈRE, Saponaria.

SAVONULE, Saponulus.

SAVONULUS, Saponulus.

SA'VOR, Sa'por, Taste, (F.) Saveur. Quality of bodies, by which they act upon the sense of taste. Chymists, at times, avail themselves of this quality to analyse an unknown substance.

SA'VORY, Sap'idus, (F.) Savoureux. An epithet given to bodies that have taste; and particularly to those that excite a very agreeable impression on the organ of taste.

SAVORY, CILIATED, Satureia capitata — s. Summer, Satureia hortensis.

SAVOREUX, Savory.

SAVOYAN, Galium verum.

SAW, Pr'ion, Ser'ra, ([Da.] Sawe, [Sax.] raga), (F.) Scie. A surgical instrument, made like a common saw; and used for sawing the bones in amputations, or for removing exostoses, &c. Saws of different sizes and shapes are used in surgery. The crown of the trepan is nothing more than a species of circular saw.

SAW, AMPUTATION, Ser'ra amputato'ria. The saw used in amputation.

SAW, HEY'S. An instrument used by Mr. Hey, of Leeds, in fractures of the cranium. It consists of a long handle, to which a small saw with a convex or straight edge is attached, and by which a piece of bone of any shape may be removed. With the trephine, the saw must always be circular.

SAW PALMETTO, Chamærops serratula — s. Wort, Liatriis.

SAXIFRAGA, (saxum, 'a stone,' and frango, 'I break,') Pimpinella saxifraga — s. Anglica, Peucedanum silaus. See Calcifraga.

SAXIFRAGA CRASSIFOLIA. Ord. Saxifragaceæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Dignia. The root of this species of saxifrage has been extolled by Pallas, as preëminently antiseptic.

SAXIFRAGA GRANULATA, S. alba, Sanicula, Se'dum, White saxifrage. (F.) Saxifrage granulée. Recommended as diuretic and lithontriptic; but not used.

SAXIFRAGA RUBRA, Spiræa filipendula—s. Vulgaris. Peucedanum silaus.

SAXIFRAGE, BURNET, Pimpinella saxifraga—s. Granulée, Saxifraga granulata—s. Meadow, Peucedanum silaus—s. White, Saxifraga granulata.

SAXIFRAGUS, (saxum, 'a stone,' and frango, 'I break,') Lithontriptic.

SAXONICUS PULVIS. A powder, prepared with the roots of the wild and the cultivated angelica; the asclepias vincetoxicum, &c. It was considered formerly as an antidote.

SCAB, Scab'ies, Crus'ta, Scall, (Prov.) Rove, (F.) Crôte. An incrustation, which forms upon a sore, owing to the concretion of the fluid discharged from it. An eschar.

SCAB'BY or SCAB'BED. Covered or diseased with scabs.

SCABIES, (scabere, 'to scratch,') Psora—s. Agria, Lichen—s. Capitis, Porrigo lupinosa, Porrigo scutulata—s. Capitis favosa, Porrigo favosa—s. Crustosa, Radzyge—s. Fera, Ecthyma.

SCABIES FERINA, Itch of animals, Mange, (pronounced Mänge.) A cutaneous disease, which affects almost all domestic animals, but especially the horse, sheep, dog, and cow. It is said to have been transmitted to man; but this is questionable.

SCABIES FERINA, Psoriasis—s. Norwegica Boeckii, Radzyge—s. Papuliformis, Prurigo—s. Sicca, Lichen, Psoriasis—s. Veneria contagiosa, Schetlievo.

SCABIEUSE ORDINAIRE, Scabiosa.

SCABIOLA, Scabies.

SCABIOSA, (scaber, 'rough,' owing to its rough hairy surface,) S. arven'sis, Triche'ra arven'sis, Field Scabious, (Sc.) Eastwingswort, (F.) Scabiosa ordinair. Ord. Dipsacææ. Sex. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. The plant is bitter and subastringent, and was formerly used in the cure of leprous affections and diseased lungs.

SCABIOSA ARVENSIS, Scabiosa—s. Carduifolia, Echinops.

SCABIOSA SUCCI'SA, Succi'sa, S. pratens'is, Asterocceph'alus succi'sa, Mor'sus Diab'oli, Dev'il's bit, (F.) Mors du Diable, has similar properties.

SCABIOUS, Erigeron Philadelphicum—s. Field, Scabiosa—s. Sweet, Erigeron heterophyllum.

SCABISH, Oenothera biennis.

SCABRITIES, (scaber, 'rough,') Lichen, Tra-choma.

SCÆVOLA, see Bela-modagam.

SCÆLA, (F.) Rampe, 'a ladder.' A machine formerly used for reducing dislocations of the humerus.

SCALE OF THE COCH'LEA, Gy'ri seu Duc'tus spi-ræ'les seu Cana'les coch'leæ, (F.) Rampes ou Échelles du Limaçon—are the cavities in the cochlea, separated from each other by the spiral septum. The one—Scæ'la inter'na seu poste'rior seu infe'rior coch'leæ, S. tym'pani—would communicate with the cavitas tympani by the fenestra rotunda, were it not for the membrane that closes it. The other—Scæ'la exter'na seu ante'rior seu supe'rior coch'leæ, S. vestib'uli—opens into the cavity of the vestibule. The scælae communicate with each other by an opening at the top of the partition.

SCALA ANTERIOR COCHLÆE, see Scala—s. Clausæ, see Scala—s. Externa cochlææ, see Scala—s. Inferior cochlææ, see Scala—s. Interior cochlææ, see Scala—s. Posterior cochlææ, see Scala

—s. Superior cochlææ, see Scala—s. Tympani, see Cochlæa, and Scala—s. Vestibuli, see Cochlæa, and Scala.

SCALDRICKS, Sinapis arvensis.

SCALE, (Sax. scæle, from scellan, 'to divide, separate;' [G.] Schale, 'shell, peel;') Squa'ma, Le'pis, (F.) Écaille, Écaille. An opaque and thickened lamina of cuticle, commonly produced by some degree of inflammation of the true skin, over which it is formed.

SCALE, DRY, Psoriasis.

SCALÈNE ANTÉRIEUR, Scalenus anticus—s. Postérieur, Scalenus posticus.

SCALÈNEUS, (σκαληνος, 'irregular or unequal,') Geometers employ this word to designate a triangle whose three sides are unequal. Anatomists have given the name to two muscles. 1. SCALÈNEUS ANTI'CUS, Portion of the Costotrachelian (Ch.), (F.) Scalène antérieur, is situate at the internal and inferior part of the neck. It is long and triangular; and is inserted, below, at the upper surface of the first rib; and, above, at the anterior tubercle of the transverse processes of the 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th cervical vertebræ. This muscle bends the neck, and draws it to its side. It can also raise the first rib. 2. SCALÈNEUS POSTI'CUS, (F.) Scalène postérieur, Portion of the Costotrachelian (Ch.), is situate behind the last. It is, also, long and triangular; but more bulky than the S. anticus. It is attached, below, to the outer surface of the first two ribs; and terminates, above, at the summit of the transverse processes of the last six vertebræ of the neck. This muscle bends the neck laterally, and can elevate the first two ribs. Some anatomists, as Albinus and Sömmerring, have described five scalenus muscles on each side, and have called them Scalenus pri'or, S. min'imus, S. latera'lis, S. me'dius, S. posti'cus. Riolan and Chaussier only describe one scalenus muscle on each side. Cowper and Douglas, and the generality of the English anatomists, admit three, S. anti'cus, S. me'dius, and S. posti'cus; or, pri'mus, secun'dus, and ter'tius; Winslow, Boyer, and many of the French anatomists,—two, as above described.

SCAL'LING—same etymon as Scale—in dentistry, is an operation which consists in removing the tartar from the teeth.

SCALL, (Scale [?]) ([Sc.] Skalc,) Impetigo, Scab—s. Asbestos, see Eczema of the hairy scalp—s. Crusted, Impetigo—s. Dry, Psoriasis—s. Honeycomb, Porrigo favosa—s. Humid, Eczema—s. Milky, Porrigo larvalis—s. Papulosa, Ecthyma—s. Running, Eczema, Impetigo—s. Vesicular, Eczema capitis—s. Washerwoman's, Psoriasis diffusa.

SCALLARD, (from scall,) Porrigo.

SCALLED HEAD, Porrigo, P. scutulata.

SCALP, ([D.] Schelp, 'a shell,') (Old Eng.) Scop. The integuments covering the head. The hair'y scalp is called, also, Capilli'tium, Tricho'ton, Cæs'aria, (F.) Chevelure, Cuir chevelu.

SCAL'PEL, Scalpel'um, Scalpel'um, Cul'ter, Inciso'rium, Smi'tion; (from scalpo, 'to cut,') A cutting instrument, formed of a blade of well-tempered steel, very sharp, of variable shape and size, and fixed solidly in a handle. Its use is to divide the soft parts in operations, dissection, &c.

SCALPELLUM, Scalpel—s. Lenticulare, Phacopis.

SCALPELLUS, Bistouri, Scalpel.

SCALPEUM, Bistouri.

SCALPRUM, (scalpo, 'to cut, to scrape,') Ras-patorium—s. Chirurgicum, Lancet.

SCALPRUM DENTARIUM, Li'ma denta'ria. A tooth file. A dental file, or file used by the dentist.

SCALPRUM RASORIUM, Rasatorium.

SCALY, (from scale,) Squamous.

SCALY DISEASES OF SQUAMÆ, Lepido'ses, form the second order in Willan and Bateman's system of cutaneous diseases.

SCAMMA, (σκάρμα,) Fossa.

SCAMMONÉE D'ALEP, Convolvulus scammonia.

SCAMMONIA, see Convolvulus Scammonia.

SCAMMONIÆ RADIX, see Convolvulus Scammonia—s. Resina, Extractum Scammonii.

SCAMMONIUM, (σκαμωνία, σκαμμωνιον,) see Convolvulus scammonia—s. Syriacum, Convolvulus scammonia.

SCAMMONY, Convolvulus scammonia.

SCAMMONY, BOU'RON. The concrete juice of *Periploca Mauritia*na.

SCAMMONY, GERMAN, see Convolvulus sepium.

SCAMMONY OF MONTPELLIER, Cynanchum Monipeliacum.

SCAMNUM HIPPOCRATICUM, (scamnum, 'a bench,') Ba'thron Hippocrati'on of Galen, (F.) Banc d'Hippocrate. A machine invented by Hippocrates for reducing fractures. It was a sort of bed, six feet long, on which the patient was fixed. Straps were attached above and below the fracture or luxation, and extension and counterextension were effected by a winch. It is described by Galen, Oribasius, Scultetus, &c. See Bathron.

SCANDIX, gen. Scan'dicis, (σκανδίζ,) S. Cerefolium.

SCANDIX BULBOCASTANUM, Bunium bulbocastanum.

SCANDIX CEREOFOLIUM, Scandix, Scandix, Pecten Ven'eris, Cerefolium, Dau'cus Segrin'ius, Chærophyll'ium, Ch. Sati'nium seu Cerefolium, Anthriscus cerefolium, Chærefolium, Cher'vil, (F.) Cerfeuil. Ord. Umbellifere. See Syst. Pentandria Digynia. A culinary herb, which is slightly aromatic and grateful. It is said to be gently aperient and diuretic.

SCANDIX ODORATA, Sweet Cic'ely. Properties the same as the other. Also, Chærophyllum odoratum.

SCANDULARIUS MUSCULUS, (scandere, 'to climb,') Parathenus, Transversus pedis.

SCANDYX, (σκανδύξ,) Scandix cerefolium.

SCAPHA, (σκαφη,) Scaphus, (σκαφος, from σκαπ'ω, 'I make hollow,') The excavation or cavity of the external ear, between the helix and anthelix. The meatus auditorius externus. The rima vulvæ. Also the name of a bandage for the head, mentioned by Galen, and called, likewise, Tho'lna Dioclet'nis.

SCAPHION, (σκαφιον, dim. of σκαφη, 'a trough,') Cranium, Papaver (Capsule).

SCAPHIUM OCULARE, Pel'vis Ocularis, Eyeglass. (F.) Bassin ou Gondole oculaire, Œil-lidre. A small porcelain, glass, or metallic vessel, used for applying lotions to the eye.

SCAPHOCARPOSUPERPHIALANGIUS POLLICIS, Abductor pollicis brevis.

SCAPHOID, Scaphoi'des, (σκαφη, 'a skiff,') and εϊδος, 'form,') A name given to several parts.

SCAPHOID BONE OF THE FOOT, Os Scaphoi'des Pedis seu navicula'rè seu cymbifor'mis, Boatlike bone, (F.) Scaphoïde du Pied. This bone is situate at the forepart of the astragalus and inner part of the foot. The posterior surface forms a cavity, somewhat like that of a boat, for receiving the head of the astragalus. There is a prominence at the inner side of the bone, for the insertion of tendons, muscles, and strong ligaments. The forepart of the bone is convex, and divided into three articular surfaces for articulation with the ossa cuneiformia. Between the os naviculare and astragalus, the foot has its principal lateral and rotary motions; although each of the other joints of the tarsus contributes a little. Part of the "bialis posticus is inserted into it.

SCAPHOID BONE OF THE HAND, Os Scaphoi'des Manûs seu navicula'rè seu cymbifor'mis, Boatlike bone, (F.) Scaphoïde de la main. The first bone of the first row of the carpus. The upper surface is convex, and articulated with the radius. The under and outer surfaces are also convex,—to be articulated with the trapezium and trapezoides. Between the upper and under cartilaginous surfaces there is a rough fossa for the insertion of the capsular ligament. The anterior and inner surface has an oval cavity, where it is articulated with the os magnum, which gives name to the bone. There is a process on the outer end of the bone, for the attachment of part of the anterior transverse ligament of the wrist.

SCAPHOID FOS'SA, Fos'sa Scaphoi'des, (F.) Enfoncement Scaphoïde. A small cavity at the upper part of the internal ala of the pterygoid process, in which the peristaphylinus internus is attached.

SCAPHOÏDE DE LA MAIN, Os scaphoides manûs—s. du Pied, Os scaphoides pedis.

SCAPHOÏDOÄSTRAG'ALAN, Scaphoïdoüs-tragala'us. That which relates to the scaphoid bone and astragalus. The articulation of these bones is so called; and the ligament which strengthens it is termed the Scaphoïdoüs-tragalan ligament.

SCAPHOÏDOCUBOÏD, Scaphoïdocuboïde'us. That which relates to the scaphoid and cuboid bones. The articulation of those bones is so called.

SCAPHULA, (dim. of scapha,) Navicularis fossa.

SCAPHUS, (σκαφος, 'a skiff, a trough,') Auditory canal, external, Rima vulvæ, Scapha.

SCAP'ULA, Scap'ulum, Pla'ta, Omo'plata, Homo'plata, Scop'tula, Epinot'ion, Latitudo hu'meri, Omo'platè, Os latum hu'meri, Scutum thora'cis seu cor'dis, Spa'tha, Spath'ula, Pteryg'ium, Ché'lo'nium, Spat'ula; Bladebone, Shoulderblade, (Prov.) Shieldbone, Platebone, Spadebone, (F.) Omo'plate. An irregular, broad, flat bone, of a triangular shape, situate at the posterior part of the shoulder. It has, 1. A posterior or dorsal surface or Dorsum, Testu'do scap'ule, divided transversely into two parts by a triangular process, called Spine of the Scapula; which terminates by a considerable eminence, called Acromion. Above the spine, is the Fos'sa supraspi'uta; below it, the F. infraspi'uta. 2. An anterior or costal surface or venter, forming the Fos'sa subscapula'ris. 3. A superior or cervical edge, which is thin, and terminates, anteriorly, by a strong, curved apophysis, called the coracoid process. 4. A posterior or vertebral edge, called, also, the base. 5. An outer or axillary or inferior edge, having a thick, truncated angle, in which is the glenoid cavity. With this is articulated the head of the humerus. The glenoid cavity is separated from the body of the bone by a narrow part called the cervix or neck. The edges or margins are, also, called costæ. The scapula has three angles—an inferior, superior, and anterior.

SCAPULA, Humerus.

SCAP'ULE NA'SI, Par'tes laterales na'si. The lateral parts of the nose.

SCAPULAIRE, Scapular.

SCAPULAR'GIA, (scapula, 'the shoulderblade,' and algos, 'pain,') Arthralgia of the scapula.

SCAP'ULAR, Scap'ulary, Scapula'ris, (F.) Scapulaire, (from scapula.) That which relates or belongs to the scapula.

SCAPULAR APONEUROSIS. A broad, thin aponeurosis, with decussating fibres; which is attached, above, to the spine of the scapula; below, to a crest between the teres major and infraspi- natus; within, to the spinal edge of the scapula: and which, at its middle, unites with the thin aponeurosis that covers a part of the external surface of the deltoid.

SCAPULAR ARTERIES. These are several. 1. The Superior scapular, Superficial scapular of Süssminger, Dorsalis scapulae superior, Transversalis scapulae, T. Humeri. This arises from the subclavian; and often from the inferior thyroid, or from a trunk common to it and the posterior scapular or transverse scapular or cervical. It passes behind the clavicle, above the superior edge of the scapula, and buries itself between the dorsal surface of that bone and the muscles inserted into it. 2. The Inferior scapular or common scapular or internal scapular or subscapular artery, A. Thoracica axillaris seu alaris, is of considerable size. It arises from the inferior part of the axillary artery, behind the brachial plexus—gives off several branches to the armpit, and divides into two branches:—the one, Scapularis interna, and the smaller of the two, is distributed, almost entirely, to the serratus major anticus, and latissimus dorsi; the other, the larger of the two, Dorsalis Scapulae inferior seu Circumflexa Scapularis, which distributes its branches to the subscapular, supraspinal and infraspinous regions.

SCAPULAR NOTCH, see Notch, scapular.

SCAPULAR VEINS follow the same course as the arteries, which they accompany.

SCAPULARE, Scapulary.

SCAPULARY, Scapularis, Fascia Scapularis. A broad, linen bandage, divided into two tails for three quarters of its length, the undivided extremity of which is attached to the posterior and middle part of a bandage carried round the body; the tails passing over the shoulders; and being attached to the anterior part of the body bandage, to prevent it from slipping down.

SCAPULO, in composition, the scapula.

SCAPULODYN'IA, (scapula, and ὄννη, 'pain.') Pain or rheumatism of the shoulder.

SCAPULO-HUMERAL. An epithet given to the shoulderjoint. It is an orbicular articulation, resulting from the reception of the head of the humerus into the glenoid cavity of the scapula. To keep the bones in connection, there are: 1. A very strong, conoidal capsular ligament; passing from the circumference of the glenoid cavity around the neck of the humerus. 2. A fibrocartilaginous ring, called the glenoid ligament, and a synovial capsule.

SCAPULO-HUMÉRAL, Teres major—s. Huméro-olécranién, Triceps extensor cubiti—s. Hyoidien, Omoxyoideus—s. Radialis, Biceps flexor cubiti—s. Trochitérien, grand, Infraspinatus.

SCAPUS, (σκαπός, 'a shaft, a stalk,') Penis, see Hair.

SCAR, (εσκαρά, [F.] escarre.) Cicatrix.

SCAR, Seam. To mark with a cicatrix or seam;—as scarred, (Sc.) arred, means marked with a cicatrix or seam.

SCARABEOLUS HEMISPHERICUS, (dim. of scarabeus.) Coccus caeti.

SCARBOROUGH, MIN'ERAL WATERS OF. Scarborough Spa. A celebrated English chalybeate, at Scarborough, in Yorkshire. One of the springs is a simple, carbonated chalybeate, like that of Tunbridge: the other has an admixture of purging salt. Scarborough, having the additional advantage of seabathing, is much frequented by invalids.

SCARCHT, ([Sax.] scritchta.) Hermaphrodite.

SCARDAMYG'MUS, (σκαρδάμυγος.) Scardamygia, (F.) Clignement, (from σκαρδάμωσθαι, 'to wink.') Winking. Closure of the eyelids.

SCARFSKIN, Epidermis.

SCARIFICATEUR, Scarificator.

SCARIFICATION, Scarificatio, Amyg'is, Sch'is, Caticus'mus, Amyg'mus, Schas'mus, Encharax'is, (scarificare, scarificatum, σκαρδαμαρ, 'to make a slight scratch.') The act of scarifying. Also, a small incision, Amyg'hé, made into the skin with a lancet, bistoury, or scarificator, for different therapeutical purposes,—as to draw blood, or to discharge some effused fluid. When the scarifications are very superficial, and do not go farther than the skin, they are termed by the French, Monchetures.

SCARIFICATOR, Scarificatorium, Schaste'rium, (F.) Scarificateur. An instrument for making scarifications. It consists of a small brass box, of a cubical shape, in which 10 or 12 lancet points turn upon a common pivot. By means of a spring, all these blades can be made to issue at once, and make as many scarifications.

SCARIFICATORIUM, Scarificator.

SCARIOLA, Cichorium endivia, Lactuca scariola.

SCARIOLE, Cichorium endivia.

SCARLATA, Scarlatina.

SCARLATINA, ([L.] scarlatte, 'a deep red.') Scarlat'a, Emauthe'is Rosa'lia, Rosa'lia, Rossa'lia, R. Squamo'sa, Rosa'lia, Rube'olæ, of some, Morbilli ignei seu confluentes, Morbus scarlatin'us, Fe'bris scarlatino'sa seu ru'bra, Gut'turis morbus epidem'icus Forest'i, Puc'pura, Typhus scarlatin'us, Porphyris'mus, Porphyris'tas, Scarlet or Rashfever, (F.) Fièvre rouge, F. pourpre. The characteristic symptoms of scarlatina are:—a scarlet flush, appearing about the second day of fever on the face, neck, and fauces; and progressively spreading over the body; terminating about the 7th day. Two great varieties may be reckoned:—the S. simplex seu febris seu benigna seu sine anginâ, in which the fever is moderate and terminates with the efflorescence; prostration of strength being trifling;—and the S. Angino'sa seu Paristhmit'ica seu Cynanch'ica seu mit'ior, in which the fever is severe; the throat ulcerated; the eruption later in its appearance, and less extensive; often changing to a livid hue. Scarlatina maligna seu gravior, has been reckoned a variety of this, in its worst degree. It agrees with the Cynanche maligna of Cullen.

Scarlatina belongs to the major exanthemata, and is a disease, chiefly, of children. The eruption differs from that of measles, in being an efflorescence not raised above the cuticle. Measles, too, is attended with catarrhal symptoms, whilst the complication, in scarlatina, is cynanche.

The disease is generally regarded as eminently contagious, but doubt may and does exist on this point. To the zymotic principle, the name Scarlatiniu has been given.

The treatment of simple scarlatina need not be much. It must be antiphlogistic. If the throat be very much ulcerated, acid gargles, and counter-irritants must be employed; and if the affection becomes manifestly typhoid, and the sore throat of a malignant character, the case must be treated like typhus gravior; with antiseptic gargles of bark, acid, &c. Anasarca sometimes supervenes on scarlatina, and requires attention. Purgatives are here demanded as well as the use of sorbefacients, such as mercury and squill, &c.

SCARLATININ, see Scarlatina.

SCARLATINOID, Scarlatinoi'des, (scarlatina, and εδος, 'resemblance.') Resembling scarlatina.

SCARLATINOUS or SCARLATINOUS, Scarlatinal, Scarlatinosus. Relating or appertaining to scarlatina.

SCARLET BERRY, Solanum dulcamara—s. Fever, Scarlatina.

SCARRED, see Scar.

SCATACRASIA, (σκαρ, gen. σκατος, 'excrement,' and κρσις, 'mixture,') Scoracrasia.

SCATACRATIA, (σκαρ, gen. σκατος, 'excrement,' and κρατία, 'want of power,') see Scoracrasia.

SCAW, Sambucus.

SCEAU DE SALOMON, 'seal of Solomon,' Convallaria polygonatum.

SCCAL'GIA, (scelos, and αλγος, 'pain,') Pain of the leg.

SCCALGIA ANTICA, Neuralgia femoropretibialis—s. Postica, Neuralgia femoropoplitea—s. Puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens.

SCELETEUMA, Skeleteuma, (σκελετευμα,) Mummy.

SCELETEU'SIS, Skeleten'sis, (σκελετενω, 'to desiccate, to pickle,') Mummification. Also, the mode of making a skeleton, Skeletopæ'ia, Syn-tar'ia.

SCELETOGRAPHY, Skeletography.

SCELETOLOGIA, Skeletology.

SCELETON, Skeleton.

SCELETOPŒA, Sceleteusis, Skeletopæ'ia.

SCELETUM, Skeleton—s. Artificial, see Skeleton—s. Naturale, see Skeleton.

SCELONCUS, (scelos, and ογκος, 'a tumour,')

A tumour of the leg. Phlegmatia dolens.

SCOLORRHEUMA, Rheumatis'mus cru'ris, (scelos, and ρηνμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism,') Rheumatism of the leg.

SCELOS, (σκελος,) Leg.

SCELSCAMBOSIS, (scelos, and σκαμβος, 'crooked,') see Rhæbosis.

SCELOTYRBE, (σκελοτυρβη, from scelos, and τυρβη, 'tumult,') Chorea, Porphyræ nautica—s. Febrilis, see Subsultus tendinum—s. Festinans, Paralysis agitans—s. Tarantismus, Chorea.

SCENOMENIX, (σκηνος, 'a hut,' and μνηξις, 'a membrane,') see Cell.

SCENOTHEORIA, (σκηνος, 'a hut,' and θεωρια, 'theory,') Cell doctrine.

SEPARNON, (σκαπαρνον,) Amnios, Ascia.

SEPASTERIUM, (from σκαπισω, 'to enwrap,') Couvrecchef.

SCEPASTRUM, Couvrecchef.

SCEPTRUM, (σκαπτρον,) Penis.

SCHASIS, (σχασις,) Scarification.

SCHASMUS, (σχασμος,) Scarification.

SCHASTERION, (σχαστηριον,) Fleam, Lancet, Scarificator.

SCEBA ARABUM, Artemisia santonica.

SCHEDULA, (dim. of scheda, 'a leaf of paper,') Prescription.

SCHERBET', Sherbet, Serbet, Tscherbet, Sorbetum, Sorbetum, Sorbetum, Sorbet. A drink prepared by the Turks, Persians, Egyptians, &c., with sugar and the juice of acid fruits.

SCHERLIE'VO, Skerljevo, Male di Scherlievo, Male di Breno, Male di Fiume, Male di Scarlievo, Male scabioso venereo, Margaretizza, Morb'us Croat'us seu fluminen'sis, Frambo'sia Illyr'ica, Scab'ies venereæ contagio'sa, Vener'eal Itch. A name given to a particular form of syphilis, observed in Illyria. It is said to be capable of being communicated without immediate contact; and that its principal symptoms are:—pains in the bones, ulceration of the fauces, pustules, and fungous growths in different parts of the body.

Affections, known by this name, as well as by those of Male di Breno, Falcadi'na, Boala and Freaga, have prevailed in the frontier countries of the Austrian empire, and were generally regarded as contagious, of syphilitic origin, and as having been introduced from a surrounding country. The terms appear, however, in the course of time, to have been applied to a variety of ulcers, eruptions, and other morbid conditions in no way connected with syphilis, so that they lost their former signification.

SCHERO'MA, gen. Schero'matis, (from σχεωσις, 'a shore, dry land,') A dryness of the eye from the want of lachrymal secretion.

SCHIAS, Ischias, Neuralgia femoropoplitea.

SCHIATICUS, Sciatic.

SCHIDAKE'DON, (σχιδακιδον,) Schidacæ'dum, Schindacæ'dum, Schindal'amus, Schindal'mus, (from σχιζω, 'I cleave,') A longitudinal fracture of a bone.

SCHINDACEDUM, Schidakedon.

SCHINDALAMUS, (σχινδαλαμους,) Schidakedon, Schindylesis.

SCHINDALESIS, Schindylesis.

SCHINDALMUS, (σχινδαλμους,) Schidakedon, Schindylesis.

SCHINDYLE'SIS, (σχινδυλησις,) Schindale'sis, Schindal'amus, Schindal'mus, (from σχινδυλω, 'I split into small pieces,')

An articulation of bones—by furrowing, as it were, as in that of the vomer, which constitutes, in part, the septum narium. Also, the act of splitting into small pieces.

SCHINELÆ'ON, (σχινηλαιον, from σχινος, 'the mastic tree,' and ελαιον, 'oil,') Oleum lentis'cinium. Oil of mastic.

SCHINOCEPHALUS, (σχινης, 'the squill,' and κεφαλη, 'head,') Scillocephalus.

SCHINOS, (σχινος,) Pistacia Lentiscus, Scilla.

SCHINZ'NACH or HAPS'BURG, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are situated three leagues from Baden, and are amongst the most celebrated bathing-places in Switzerland. The waters are of a saline sulphureous kind; and have a high reputation in cutaneous and rheumatic affections, visceral obstructions, and glandular enlargements. They contain sulphate of lime, sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, and oxide of iron; sulphohydric acid, and carbonic acid gases. The season is from the 15th of May to the 15th of September.

SCHISMA, gen. Schism'atis, (σχισμα,) Fissure, Rima.

SCHISTOCEPH'ALUS, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and κεφαλη, 'head,') A monster having some part of the head cleft or fissured.

SCHISTOCOR'MUS, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and κορμος, 'trunk,') Schistotho'rax. A monster having part or the whole of the trunk cleft or fissured.

SCHISTOM'ELUS, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and μελος, 'a limb,') A monster whose limbs are fissured.

SCHISTORRHACHIS, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and ραχις, 'spine,') Hydrorachis.

SCHISTOSOM'US, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and σωμα, 'body,') A malformation of the abdomen, in which the fissure and evagination extend over the entire length of the abdomen; the lower extremities being absent, or very little developed, so that the body appears as if truncated inferiorly.

SCHISTOTHORAX, (σχιστος, 'cleft,' and tho'rax,) Schistocormus.

SCHIZA, (σχιζα,) Rima—s. Vulvæ, Rima vulvæ.

SCHIZATRICH'IA, Trichos'chisis, Schizotrich'ia (σχιζω, 'I split,' and τριχis, 'a hair,') The splitting of the hairs at their extremities.

SCHLANGENBAD or SCHLAGENBACH, MINERAL WATERS OF. Schlangenbad is a much-frequented watering-place in Germany. The waters contain a little carbonic acid, and carbonate of soda. Temperature 86° of Fahrenheit.

SCHNAPPS, SCHIEDAM, see Gin.

SCHNEIDERIAN MEMBRANE, Pituitary membrane.

SCHENANTHUS, (σχοινός, 'the common rush,' and ανθος, 'a flower,') Juncus odoratus.

SCHOLA, (σχολή,) School.

SCHOLLERA OXYCOCCOS, Vaccinium oxycoccos.

SCHOOL, Scho'la, (F.) École. A place of education. In Europe, the large Medical Schools are usually attached to the universities. In England, however, there has been no medical school of celebrity at either of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge; owing greatly to their provincial situation. Of late, two schools have existed in London, attached to the London University—University College and King's College. Excellent schools are now connected with the hospitals there, and in the larger towns in the provinces. The medical schools of Europe which have been most celebrated, are those of Edinburgh, Leyden, Berlin, Halle, Tubingen, Paris, Montpellier, Bologna, Padua, Pavia, and Pisa. In the United States, the medical schools are very numerous. Those of Philadelphia and New York are the most largely attended.

SCHOOL'EY'S MOUN'TAIN, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. The waters of this New Jersey Spring are a carbonated chalybeate. According to Dr. McNevin, they contain extractive, chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonate of lime, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, silice, and carbonate, and oxide of iron.

SCHOUSBŒA COCCINEA, (after P. K. A. Schousboe, a Danish botanist,) Cacoucia coccinea.

SCHUBERTIA DISTICHA, (after G. H. von Schubert, Professor of Natural History at Munich,) Taxodium distichum.

SCHWAL'BACH or LANGENSCHWAL'BACH, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. Schwabach is a town of Germany, seated on the Aa, 32 miles west of Frankfort. The waters contain chloride of sodium, carbonates of lime and magnesia, iron, sulphate of lime, carbonic acid, oxygen, &c. Employed as a tonic.

SCHWANN, WHITE SUBSTANCE OF, see Substance, white, of Schwann.

SCHWEN'DECK, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. These waters are about 5 leagues from München, in Bavaria. They contain carbonic acid; carbonate and sulphate of lime, chloride of calcium; chloride of magnesium; carbonate of soda, and oxide of iron, and are much used for cutaneous affections.

SCIAT'IC, Sciat'icus, Ischiat'ic, Ischiat'icus, Schiat'icus, (F.) Sciaticque, (from ισχιον, 'the haunch,') Formed by contraction from ischiatric, which latter is still used. See Ischiatic. Used substantively for sciatica.

SCIATIC NERVE, GREAT, Nervus ischiad'icus, Great fem'oro-poplite'al (Ch.), (F.) Grand nerf sciaticque, ought to be esteemed a continuation of the sacral plexus. It issues from the pelvis between the pyramidalis and superior gemellus; descends along the posterior part of the thigh; and after having given branches to the gemini, quadratus, obturator externus, glutæus maximus, semimembranosus, semitendinosus, biceps and third abductor muscles, it divides, about the inferior third of the thigh, into two branches; the one, named the external popliteal; the other, the internal.

SCIATIC NERVE, LES'SER, Infe'rior glut'e'al branch of the sac'ral plex'us, Les'ser fem'oro-poplite'al nerve (Ch.), (F.) Nerf petit sciaticque, which seems especially formed by the 2d and 3d sacral, is given off from the lower part of the plexus, and escapes from the pelvis beneath the pyramidalis muscle. It gives branches—nervi cut'anei clunium infe'iores—to the glutæus maximus; a sciatic branch or inf'rapel'vic cut'aneous or peri- ne'al cut'aneous, Pudend'alis lon'gus infe'rior, which passes under the tuberosity of the ischium, and furnishes filaments to the glutæus maximus, and to the muscles of the perinæum, urethra, penis, scrotum, &c.; and a posterior femoral cut'aneous branch—middle posterior cutaneous nerve—the filaments of which traverse the femoral aponeurosis, to be distributed on the skin of the posterior part of the thigh. The principal branch of the lesser sciatic nerve divides, near the ham, into two or three filaments, which descend under the integuments almost as far as the inferior part of the leg.

SCIATIC NOTCH, GREAT, Sciatic For'ameu, Incis'u'ra ischiad'ica ma'ior, (F.) Grande échancreure sciaticque ou grand trou sciaticque, is a large notch at the posterior edge of each os innominatum, below the posterior and inferior iliac spine, which is converted into a foramen by the sacrum and sacrosciatic ligaments. The les'ser sciatic notch, Incis'u'ra ischiad'ica mi'nor, Lu'na Albi'ni, (F.) Petite échancreure ischiaticque, is much smaller than the last, from which it is separated by the sciatic spine. It gives passage to the tendon of the obturator internus, and to the internal pudic vessels and nerves.

SCIATIC REGION, Ischiadic region.

SCIATIC SPINE, Spine of the Is'chium, Sp'inosus Proc'ess of the Is'chium, is a short, flat, pyramidal eminence on the os innominatum, above the preceding foramen; which gives insertion to the lesser sacrosciatic ligament.

SCIATICA, Neuralgia femoropoplitea.

SCIATIQUE, Neuralgia femoropoplitea, Sciatica.

SCIE, (from secare, 'to cut,') Saw.

SCIENTIA HERMETICA, 'Hermetic science,' Alchymy—s. Medendi, Medicina—s. Medica, Medicina.

SCI'EROPIA, (σκιερως, 'shady,' and ωψ, 'the eye,') A defect of vision, in which all objects have a darker hue than natural.

SCIL'LA, (σκιλλα, from σκίζω, 'I cleave, I split,' or from σκελλω, 'I dry,') Sc'illa seu Squill'a marit'ima, Squill'a, As'chil, Schi'nos, Oculus Typho'nis, Oruithof'alum marit'imum seu squill'a, Stella'ris seu Urgi'nea scilla, Ce'pa mar'ina, Squilla, Squill or sea onion, Eye of Typhou, (F.) Scille, Onion marin. Ord. Liliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. Native of Spain, Austria, &c. The bulb or root of the squill, Scilla (Ph. U. S.), has a bitter, nauseous taste, and is extremely acrid; inflaming the skin when rubbed on it. Its acrimony, on which its virtues depend, is destroyed by heat, drying, and keeping. It is extracted by vinegar, spirit, and water. In large doses, squill is emetic and purgative; in small doses, diuretic and expectorant. Its active principle has been called scill'itin. Dose, gr. j to v of the dried root, united or not with mercury.

SCILLA ESCULEN'TA, Phalan'gium escule'ntum, East'ern Quamash', Wild Hy'acinth; indigenous; flowering in May. An article of diet amongst the Western Indians. It is made into bread and poultices for inflamed breasts.

SCILLIT'IC, Scillit'icus, (F.) Scillitique, (from scilla.) Containing squill.

SCILLITIN, see Scilla.

SCILLOCEPH'ALUS, Schinoceph'alus, (σκιλλα, 'the squill,' and κεφαλη, 'head,') One who has a large bulbiform head.

SCIN'CUS, (σκιγνος or σκιγγος.) A species of Sau'rus or Lacer'ta, common in Egypt, and much extolled by the ancients as alexipharmic and aphrodisiac.

SCINTIL'LA VEN'ERIS, 'a spark, a relic of Venus.' A name given, by Paracelsus, to the impotence and loss of power in the limbs produced by syphilis.

SCINTILLEMENT DE L'ŒIL, (from scintilla, 'a spark,') 'sparkling of the eye,' Confusio.

SCIAM'ACHY, (σκιαμαχία, Skiam'achia, Skiam'achia, (σκία, 'a shade,' and μάχη, 'a fight,') A gymnastic exercise with the ancients, which consisted in a mock encounter at boxing and jumping with one's own shadow.

SCIRRHUS, (σκιρρος,) Scirrhus.

SCIRPUS PALUSTRIS, (scirpus, 'a rush,')

Eleocharis palustris.

SCIRRHE, Scirrhus.

SCIRRHOBLEPHARONCUS, (scirrhus, βλεφαρον, 'eyelid,' and ογκος, 'swelling,') see Scleriasis.

SCIRRHOCELE, (scirrhus, and κληη, 'rupture,') Orchocele scirrhusa.

SCIRRHODES, (σκιρρώδης, from scirrhus, and odes,) Scirrhus.

SCIRRHOGAS'TRIA, Scirrhus ventriculi, (F.) Squirrogastrie; (scirrhus, and γαστήρ, 'stomach,') Scirrhus of the stomach.

SCIRRHOID, Scirrhoïdes, Scirrho'des, (scirrhus, and εἶδος, 'resemblance,') Resembling scirrhus.

SCIRRHOMA, gen. Scirrhomatis, (σκιρρωμα,) Scirrhus.

SCIRRHOPHTHAL'MIA, Sclerophthalmia, (scirrhus, and οφθαλμος 'eye,') Cancer oculi. Cancer of the eye.

SCIRRHOPHTHALMIA PALPEBRARUM, see Scleriasis.

SCIRRHOSARCA NEONATOEUM, (scirrhus, and σαρξ, gen. sarxos, 'flesh,') Induration of the cellular tissue.

SCIRRHOSIS, (from scirrhus,) Scirrhus.

SCIRRHUS, Scirrhus, Scirrho'sus, Scirrho'des, (F.) Squirrheus, (from scirrhus,) Of or belonging to scirrhus.

SCIRRHUS SARCO'MA OF AB'ERNETHY, Emphy'ma sarco'ma scirrho'sum. Hard, rigid, vascular infarction of glandular follicles; indolent, insentient, glabrous; sometimes shrinking and becoming more indurated. Found in glandulous structures.

SCIRRHUS, Scirrhus, Squirrhus, Skirrhus, Scirrho'ma, Scirrho'sis, Cancer scirrhus, Carcino'ma simplex seu fibro'sum, Induratio maligna, Sclero'sis, Pseudino'ma, Insoma, Carcinom'atous sarco'ma, Hard or Fibrous cancer; (from σκιρρός, 'hard, indurated,') (F.) Squirrhe, Squirre, Schirre, Skirre, Cancer dur ou squirrheux ou fibreux. A disease, so called from the hardness that characterizes it. It is a state of induration, of a peculiar kind, affecting glandular structures generally, but capable of occurring in other textures. It usually precedes carcinoma, of which it may, indeed, be considered as the first stage. Scirrhus must not be confounded with the induration which succeeds inflammation, although the two states are often complicated, and may stand, occasionally, in the relation of cause and effect to each other. Scirrhus is ordinarily accompanied by violent shooting pains. It is also irregular on its surface; and when cut into has a bluish or grayish white colour. When the surgeon is satisfied of the existence of scirrhus, he had better remove it at once. No other treatment seems to possess much advantage.

Galen uses the term Scirrho'sis for a livid excrescence caused by inflammation.

see Generation.

SCISSIPARITÉ, (scindere, scissum, 'to split,' and pario, 'to bring forth,') see Generation.

SCISSORS, Seis'sor, a carver, (scindere, scie- sum, 'to cut,') For'fex, For'pex, Poa'lis, To'mis, (F.) Ciseaux. A wellknown instrument in common use, and often employed in surgery. Scissors are composed of two cutting blades, crossing each other and moving upon an axis. They are straight or curved. Sometimes the curve is on the flat side, when they are called, in France, Ciseaux à culler; at others, on their edges. The scissors, bent so that the blades make an obtuse angle with the handles, are also much used. They are called in France Ciseaux coudés. Scissors are used for dividing soft, loose, isolated parts, which it would be difficult to reach and to cut with the bistoury. They are employed, likewise, in the operation for harelip, and for removing warts, fungous excrescences, &c.

SCISSORS, SMELLIE'S, see Perforator.

SCLAREA, Salvia sclarea.

SCLEREMA, gen. Sclerematis, (from scleros,) Induration of the cellular tissue.

SCLÉRÈME, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SCLEREMIA, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SCLEREMUS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SCLERENEPHALIA, Induratio cerebri, (scleros, and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,') (F.) Endurcissement du cerveau. Induration of the brain.

SCLERIA, (σκληρία, from scleros,) Scleriasis.

SCLERIASIS, (σκληρωσις, from scleros,) Sclero'ma, Sclero'sis, Sclero'ria, Sclerys'mus, Seph'irus. Any kind of hardness or induration. Sometimes, hardness of the eyelids, Callositas seu Scirrhophthalmia seu Scirrhus palpebrarum, Scirrhoblepharous; at others, hardness of the genital organs of the female; probably synonymous with scirrhus. Hardness of the bones, Fragilitas Ossium.

SCLERITIS, Scleroticus.

SCLEROCATARACTA, see Cataract.

SCLERODERMA, gen. Sclerodermatis, (scleros, and δερμα, 'skin,') Induration of the areolar tissue.

SCLERODES, (σκληρώδης, 'hard,' and odes,) Sclerotic.

SCLEROIRITIS. Inflammation of the sclerotic and iris.

SCLEROMA, (from scleros,) Induration of the areolar tissue, Scleriasis.

SCLEROMENINX, gen. Scleromenin'gis, (scleros, and μηνιγξ, 'membrane,') Dura mater.

SCLERONYXIS, Scleroticonyxis.

SCLEROPHTHALMIA, (σκληροφθαλμία,) Hordeolum, Schirophthalmia.

SCLEROS, (σκληρος,) Hard.

SCLEROSARCO'MA, gen. Sclerosarco'matis, (scleros, and σαρκομα, 'a fleshy tumour,') A hard, fleshy tumour seated on the gums, and resembling a cock's comb.

SCLEROSIS, (from scleros,) see Induration of the areolar tissue, and Scleriasis. With Virchow, thickening with condensation.

SCLEROSTENOSIS CUTANEA, (scleros, and στενος, 'contracted,') Induration of the areolar tissue.

SCLEROT'IC, Sclerot'ica, Sclero'des, (from scleros,) Cor'nea opa'ca, Tu'nicia du'ra seu albuginea seu duri'or et crassi'or seu ext'ima seu al'ba seu can'dida seu innomina'ta oculi, Sclero'tis, (F.) Scleroticque. A hard, resisting, opaque membrane, of a pearly white colour and fibrous nature, which covers nearly the posterior four-fifths of the globe of the eye, and has the form of a sphere truncated before. It is strengthened by the expansion of the muscles of the eye, to which expansion many anatomists have given the name Tunica albuginea. The subconjunctival sclerotic, (F.) Blanc de l'œil, forms the white of the eye, Albumeu seu Album seu Albugo oculi, Lou'chades, Log'ades, Lou'cades. The sclerotic is penetrated posteriorly by a round opening, for the passage of the optic nerve; and, anteriorly, it has a much larger opening, into which the transparent cornea is received. There are, besides, many small oblong apertures in it for the passage of nerves and vessels proceeding to the interior of the eye. Its inner surface is of a light brown colour, owing to a delicate areolar tissue containing brown pigment cells; and hence called Membrana seu Lamina fusca. In the fetus, the sclerotic may be separated into two very distinct laminae.

SCLEROTICA CERATOIDES, Cornea.

SCLEROTICECTOM'IA, Sclerectomia, (sclerotic, and εκτομη, 'excision.') The operation for forming an artificial pupil by excision of a portion of the sclerotic.

SCLEROTICITIS, Sclerotitis.

SCLEROTICONYX'IS, Scleronyx'is, Scleroto-nyx'is, (sclerotic, and νύξις, 'puncturing?') Perforation of the sclerotic in the operation for cataract by depression.

SCLEROTICOTOM'IA, (sclerotic, and τομη, 'incision?') The operation for cataract by cutting through the sclerotic.

SCLEROTICUS, (from scleros,) Indurans.

SCLE'ROTIQUE, Sclerotic.

SCLEROTIS, (from scleros,) Sclerotic.

SCLEROTI'TIS, Inflammatio Sclerotica, Leucit'is, Lonchadi'tis, Logadi'tis, Sclerit'is, Sclerociti'tis, Rheumatic ophthalmia, Ophthalmia arthrit'ica, (sclerotic, and itis.) Inflammation of the sclerotic coat of the eye.

SCLEROTIUM CLAVUS, (from scleros,) see Ergot—s. Giganteum, see Lycoperdon tuber.

SCLEROTOMIA, Scleroticectomia.

SCLERUNTICUS, (σκληρυντικός,) Indurans.

SCLERUS, (σκληρος,) Induration, Scirrhus.

SCLERYMEN, Sclerotic.

SCLERYMENTIS, (sclerymen, and itis.) Inflammation of the sclerotic coat of the eye.

SCLERYNTICUS, (σκληρυντικός,) Indurans.

SCLERY'S'MA, (σκληρυσμα, from Scleros.) Induration; also, induration of the liver.

SCLERYSMUS, (σκληρυσμος,) Scleriasis.

SCLOPETA'RIOUS, Sclopet'icus, (from sclopetum, 'a gun.') Relating to a gun. Hence, A'qua sclopetaria seu sclopet'ica, a water for gunshot wounds. Vul'nera sclopetaria seu sclopet'ica, gunshot wounds, &c.

SCLOPETOPLAGÆ, (sclopetum, 'a gun,' and plaga, 'a wound,') Wounds, gunshot.

SCOB'S, gen. Scob'is, Pri's'ma, Xys'ma, Ramen'tum, Rasu'ra. A shaving; also, an alkali; and the scoria of any metal.

SCOLECISIS, (σκοληκισίς,) Helminthiasis.

SCOLECIASIS, (σκοληκίαισις,) Helminthiasis.

SCOLECOLOGIA, (σκοληγή, 'a worm,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') Helminthology.

SCOLEX, (σκοληξ,) Ascaris lumbricoides. Scolex was used by Müller, generically, for some imperfectly developed forms of Tænia. The head of these being the most characteristic part, it was generally applied to the heads of all forms of cystic and tape worms. It has now no generic meaning, as the beings to which it was applied were immature forms of other genera. (Lankester.)

SCOLIOMA, (σκολίωμα,) Scoliosis.

SCOLIO'SIS, gen. Scolie'is, Scolio'ma, Skolio'is, Rhachioscolio'ma, (σκολίωσις, from σκολιος,

'crooked,' and οσίς.) A distortion of the spine to one side. See Gibbositas and Hump.

SCOLOPENDRA, (σκολοπενδρά,) Asplenium scolopendrium.

SCOLOPENDRIA, Asplenium ceterach, and A. scolopendrium.

SCOLOPENDRIUM LINGUA, Asplenium scolopendrium—s. Officinatum, Asplenium scolopendrium—s. Phyllitis, Asplenium scolopendrium—s. Ruta muraria, Asplenium ruta muraria—s. Vulgare, Asplenium scolopendrium.

SCOLOPOMACHÆRION, (σκολοπάς, 'the woodcock,' and μαχαιρα, 'a knife;' so called because it is bent a little at the extremity like a woodcock's bill.) A sort of bluntpointed bistoury.

SCOLYMUS SATIVUS, (σκολύμος,) Cynara scolymus.

SCOOP, (Teut. Schoepe,) Cochlea'rē, (F.) Curette. A surgical instrument of the shape of a spoon, which is used for the extraction of certain foreign bodies. The scoop is often employed to extract balls impacted in the soft parts; to remove calculi from the urinary bladder in lithotomy, &c. A small scoop is sometimes used to extract foreign bodies from the meatus auditorius externus, nasal fossæ, &c.

SCOP, (scalp,) Head, Scalp.

SCOPA REGIA, (σκόρα, 'a broom,') Ruscus.

SCOPARIN, see Spartum scoparium.

SCOPARIUS, (σκόρα, 'a broom,') see Spartum scoparium.

SCOPE, σκόπη, Scop'y, Scop'ia, Scop'ium, Scopos, (from σκοπεω, 'I look around,') A common suffix to words meaning 'view, inspection,' as stethoscope, stethoscopy, &c.

SCOPOLINA ATROPOIDES, (after J. A. Scopoli, Prof. at Pavia,) Hyoscyamus scopolia

SCOPTULA, Scapula.

SCOPULA, (dim. of scopa, 'a broom,') Brush.

SCOR, (σκαρ, gen. σκáros,) Excrement.

SCORACRATI'A, Scoracra'sia, Scatacra'sia, Scatacrati'a, Copracra'ti'a, Copracra'sia, Incontin'entia Al'vi, (scor, and κρατια, 'want of control,') Want of power to retain the fæces. Involuntary evacuation of the fæces.

Scoracrasia, Scatacrasia, and Copracrasia, although used in the same sense as scoracrasia, really mean undue admixture of the excrement. See Scatacrasia.

SCORBUT, Porphyra nautica, Purpura hæmorrhagica—s. des Alpes, Pellagra—s. de Terre, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

SCORBUTIC, Scorbut'icus, (F.) Scorbutique, (from scorbutus, 'scurvy,') That which belongs to scurvy. One affected with scurvy.

SCORBUTUS, ([G.] Scharboeck) see Purpura—s. Alpinus, Pellagra—s. Nauticus, Porphyra nautica—s. Oris, Cancer aquaticus.

SCORDINEMA, (σκορδίνημα,) Carebaria, Pandiculation.

SCORDINISMUS, (σκορδίνισμος,) Carebaria, Pandiculation.

SCORDIUM, (σκορδιον, perhaps from scordon, 'garlic,' from similarity of smell,) Teucrium scordium.

SCORDON, (σκορδον,) Allium.

SCORITH, Sulphur.

SCORIUM, Scrotum.

SCORODON, (σκορδοδον,) Allium.

SCORODOSMINE, (scorodon, and σσημ, 'odour,') Oxyd, cystic.

SCORPIODEX'IS, (σκορπιος, 'scorpion,' and ἔηξις, 'bite:'—more properly, SCORPIOSTIG'MA; (from σκορπιος, and στίγμα, 'puncture,') The sting of the scorpion.

SCORPION, Scor'pio, Scor'pius, (σκορπιον and σκορπιος, from σκορπισθαι, 'I enrage,') A genus of insects having a sting at the extremity of their tail, with which they make dangerous wounds.

An Oil of Scorpion was once made from them, which is not now used.

SCORPIOSTIGMA, (scorpius, and σκorpion, 'a puncture,') Scorpiodexis.

SCORPIUS, (σκόπιος,) Scorpion.

SCORTUM, 'a skin, leather,' Scrotum.

SCORZONE'RA, S. humilis seu lanata seu nerodia, Escorzone'ra, (from scuro, old Spanish for a viper,) Vipera'ria, Serpentaria Hispanica, Officinal viper's grass, Viper's grass, Goat's grass. Family, Cichoraceae. Ser. Syst. Syngenesia Polygamia. The roots have been used as alexipharmics, and in hypochondriacal disorders and obstructions of the viscera. The root of the Scorzonera Hispanica is esculent, but inefficacious as a drug.

SCOTAS'MA, gen. Scotasmatis, Scoto'ma, Scoto'dia, Scoto'sis, Scotos; (from σκοτος, 'darkness,') Obscurity of vision, darkness, Suffusio rad'iana. Also Scotodinia.

SCOTCH FIDDLE, Psora.

SCOTODIA, (σκότοδια,) Scotasma, Scotodinia.

SCOTODIN'IA, Scoto'ma, Div'nis Scoto'ma, Scotod'ine, Tenebrico'sa vertigo, Scot'os, Scotas'ma, Scoto'sis, Scot'omy, (σκότωμα, from σκοτος, 'darkness,' and δνωω, 'I turn round,') Giddiness, with impaired sight, often succeeded by headache. See Vertigo.

SCOTOMA, gen. Scotomatis, (σκότωμα,) Scotasma, Scotodinia.

SCOTOS, (σκοτος,) Scotasma, Scotodinia.

SCOTOSIS, (σκότωσις,) Scotodinia.

SCOTT'S ACID BATH, Nitromuriatic'ae ac'id bath. A bath of dilute aqua regia, employed by Dr. Scott, of India, as a remedy in hepatic diseases. Three pints by measure of muriatic acid, and two of nitric acid, are mixed to form the aqua regia. In preparing this for use, a pint of it is mixed with an equal quantity of water. The acid bath consists of three ounces of this dilute acid to every gallon of water.

SCOUR, ([Sax.] scour), Diarrhoea.

SCOURGING, Mastigosis—s. Mania, see Mastigosis.

SCOURING, Diarrhoea.

SCRAT, ([Sax.] scrahta), Hermaphrodite; ([G.] kratzen, 'to scratch,') Psora.

SCRATCH, Psora.

SCREATUS, (screare, screatum, 'to hawk,') Excreation.

SCRIBE PALSY, Cramp, writers'.

SCRIPULUM, Sruple.

SCRIPTIUM, Sruple.

SCRIPTULUM, Sruple.

SCRIPULUS, Sruple.

SCRIVENER'S CRAMP, Cramp, writers'.

SCROBIC'ULUS, (dim. of scrobs, 'a ditch,') Scrobic'ulum, (F.) Scrobicule, Fossette. A little ditch or furrow.

SCROBIC'ULUS COR'DIS, Anticar'dium, Procar'dium, (F.) Fossette du cœur, Avant-cœur, Anticœur. The pit of the stomach. The depression at the anterior part of the abdomen, below the xiphoid cartilage.

SCROBICULUS VARIOLE, Pockmark.

SCROFF'Æ, Serofula.

SCROF'ULA, Seroph'ula, Seroph'ulæ, (from scrofo, 'a sow,' as Chœras is from χοιρος, 'a hog,' because swine were presumed to be subject to a similar complaint.) Serofulo'sis, Mor'bus serophuloso'sis, Vit'ium serophuloso'sum, Pædatroph'ia glandulo'sa, Stru'ma, Chæ'ras, Co'r'ras, Ta'bes Glandula'ris, Adeno'sis serofulo'sa, Serof'fic, King's evil, The Evil, Quince, Cruels, and Crenels (Scotticè), (F.) Serophules, Serofules, Strumes, Écrouelles, Humeurs froides, Tubercules des glandes lymphatiques, Mal du Roi. A morbid state of the system usually characterized by indolent, glandular tumours, chiefly in the neck; suppurating slowly and imperfectly, and healing with difficulty; the disease ordinarily occurring in those of a sanguine temperament, with thick upper lip, &c. The tumours, after suppuration, degenerate into ulcers; which, in process of time, cicatrize, leaving scars. The internal organs are apt to be attacked in those disposed to serofula; hence they are often the subjects of phthisis and mesenteric affections. Serofula is hereditary; and is frequently excited by insufficient or improper regimen, and by a close, confined air during the first years of existence. The best treatment is:—to strengthen the system by animal diet; pure air, and exercise, cold bathing, or seawater bathing, &c.

SCROFULA ABDOMINALIS INTERNA, Physconia strumosa.

SCROFULAIRE, Serophularia nodosa—s. Aquatique, Serophularia aquatica.

SCROFULARIA, Serophularia.

SCROFULES, Serofula.

SCROFULÉUX, Serofulose.

SCROFULIDE, Serophulide. An affection of the skin or mucous membranes, dependent on serofulosis.

SCROFULISM, see Diathesis.

SCROFULO'SIS, Serophulo'sis, Caco'chym'ia seu Cachex'ia seu Dyscrasia serofulo'sa, and Serofulous cachex'ia, are used to signify the cachectic state of the system, which characterizes serofula. See Diathesis.

SCROF'ULOUS, Serophulo'sus, Serophula'rius, Stru'mous, Strumo'sus, (F.) Serofuleux, Strumeux. Suffering from, or relating to, serofula,—as serofulous cachex'ia, see Serofula.

SCROGEGGED, Cnemosecoliosis.

SCROOBYGRASS, Cochlearia officinalis.

SCROOF, Scurf.

SCROPHULA, Serofula—s. Mesenterica, Tabes mesenterica—s. Moluccana, Frambœsia.

SCROPHULÆ, Serofula—s. Gonorrhœica, Gonorrhœa impura.

SCROPHULARIA, (from serofula, against which it has been employed.) S. Nodosa.

SCROPHULARIA AQUAT'ICA, Beton'ica aquat'ica, Ficaria, Ferra'ria, Castrav'gula, Greater Water Fig'wort, Water Bel'ony, (F.) Serofulaire aquatique. Ord. Serophulariacee. The leaves are celebrated as correctors of the bad flavour of senna. They were at one time regarded as eminently antiscrofulous, stomachic, and carminative.

SCROPHULARIA FETIDA, Serophularia nodosa—s. Lanceolata, S. Nodosa—s. Marilandica, S. Nodosa—s. Minor, Ranunculus ficaria.

SCROPHULARIA NODO'SA, S. fetida seu vulgar'is seu lancolata seu Marilan'dica, Millemor'bia, Serophularia, Fig'wort, Ken'nelwort, Holmes'weed, Heal'all, (F.) Serofulaire, Herbe aux écrouelles. The root and leaves of this plant have been celebrated, both as an internal and external remedy, against inflammations, piles, serofulous tumours, ulcers, &c.

SCROPHULARIA VULGARIS, Serophularia nodosa.

SCROPHULARIUS, Serofulosus.

SCROPHULES, Serofula—s. Mésentériques, Tabes mesenterica.

SCROPHULIDE, Serofulide.

SCROPHULOSIS, see Diathesis.

SCROPHULOSUS, Serofulosus.

SCRO'TAL, Scro'talis, (from scrotum.) Relating to the scrotum; as Hernia scro'talis, scrotal hernia.

SCROTAL NERVE, see Genitocrural Nerve.

SCROTOCE'LE, Oscœocele, Oschœcele, (scrotum, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') Hernia Scro'talis, Scro'tal hernia. Inguinal hernia, descending into the scrotum.

SCRO'TUM, (scortum, 'a skin, leather,') Scor'rium, Os'chè, Os'cheus, Os'chus, Os'cus, Os'cheon, Och'œus, Pe'r'ri, Scro'tum Col'ens, U'lenus, Marsu'pium, Bur'sula, Bur'su seu Bur'sa tes'tium seu virilis, Orchus, Folliculus genitalis, Her'nia, the Purse, the Cud, Cuds, (F.) Les bourses. The integuments which cover the testes. These are nothing more than a prolongation of the skin of the inner part of the thighs, perinæum, and penis. The skin is remarkable for its brown colour, for the numerous rugæ, especially when the scrotum is contracted; for the great number of sebaceous follicles it contains; and for the long and few hairs which issue from it in the adult. The scrotum is divided into two equal parts by a raphe, which extends from the anus to the root of the penis. Its organization is similar to that of the skin of other parts of the body, except that the chorion is thinner.

SCROTUM CORDIS, Pericardium — s. Pendulum, Rachosis.

SCRUBIE, (scrubj.) Purpura nautica.

SCRUBIE GRASS, Cochlearia officinalis.

SCRUPLE, Diob'olon, Gramma'rium, Scrup'ulus, Scrupulum, Scrip'tulus, Scrip'tulum, Scrip'tium, Scrip'tulum, Scrip'tum, Scrip'tulus. A weight of twenty grains, Troy; twentyfour grains, Poids de marc.

SCUDAMORE'S MIXTURE, see Mixture, Scudamore's.

SCULL, (Dan. skal, or from scutella, 'a cup,' [?]) Cranium — s. Cap, Calvaria.

SCURE, ([Sax.] scurf), (Prov. Scroof; Furf'fura. Small exfoliations of the cuticle are so called.

SCURFY, Furfuraceous.

SCURVY, (from scurf, or from [G.] Scharbock), see Purpura — s. of the Alps, Pellagra — s. Button, see Button scurvy — s. Land, Purpura hæmorrhagica — s. Petechial, Purpura simplex — s. Sea, Porphyræ nautica.

SCURVY GRASS, Sisyriehium Bermudianum — s. Grass, common, Cochlearia officinalis — s. Grass, lemon, Cochlearia officinalis — s. Grass, wild, Cochlearia coronopus.

SCUTELLA, (dim. of scutra, 'a dish,') Cup.

SCUTELLARIA CAROLINIANA, (from scutella, 'a cup,' in allusion to the form of the calyx,) S. integrifolia.

SCUTELLARIA GALERICULA'TA, Cass'ida galericula'ta, Tertiana'ria, Skull'cap, (F.) Casside bleue, Toque. Ord. Labiatae. Sex. Syst. Didymia Angiospermia. This plant has a bitter taste and a garlic smell. It has been esteemed especially serviceable in tertian ague.

SCUTELLARIA HYSSOPIFOLIA, S. integrifolia.

SCUTELLARIA INTEGRIFOLIA, S. hyssopifolia seu Caroliniana,—another indigenous variety,—is an intense bitter.

SCUTELLARIA LATERIFLO'RA, Skull'cap, Mad-dog skull'cap, Mad'weed, Hood'wort, Blue Pimpernel. An indigenous plant, Scutellaria, (Ph. U. S.) which grows in all parts of the United States in moist places. It was at one time esteemed a preventive of hydrophobia, but is probably possessed of little virtue of any kind. By some, however, it is regarded as a good nerve.

SCUTICULA DIGITORUM MANÛS, Phalanges of the fingers.

SCUTTER, Diarrhoea.

SCUTLE DIGITORUM MANÛS, (pl. of scutula, 'a cylinder,') Phalanges of the fingers.

SCUTUM, 'a shield,' Thyroid cartilage — s. Cordis, Scapula, Sternum — s. Genu, Patella — s. Pectoris, Sternum, Thorax.

SCUTUM STOMACH'ICUM. A large plaster, applied to the breast or stomach.

SCUTUM THORACIS, Scapula.

SCYB'ALA, (pl. of σκυβαλον, 'dung,') Entero'litus Scyb'alum, Excrementa Alvi siccio'ra, Fæces indura'tæ, (F.) Scybales. Hard fecal matters discharged in round lumps.

SCYLLA, Scilla.

SCYPHOPHORUS PYXIDATUS, (σκυφος, 'a cup,' and φερα, 'to bear,') Lichen pyxidatus.

SCYPHUS AUDITORIUS, (σκυφος, 'a cup,') Infundibulum of the cochlea — s. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain — s. Vieussenii, Infundibulum of the cochlea.

SCYROS, (σκυρος), Callosity.

SCYTHALIDES DIGITORUM MANÛS, (σκυ'ταλεις, gen. σκυταλεις, 'a staff,') Phalanges of the fingers.

SCYTHICA (RADIX,) (from Scythia), Glycyrrhiza.

SCYTHROPASMUS, (from σκυθρος, 'gloomy;' σχυθροπαζειν, 'to look gloomy,') Vultus tel'ricus et mac'ulus. A gloomy, depressed countenance, of bad augury in serious diseases.

SCYTITIS, (σκυτος, 'a skin,' and itis), Cytitis.

SCYTO DEPSIUM, (σκυτοδψευα, 'to curry leather,') Tannin.

SEA AIR. The air in the neighbourhood of the sea contains saline particles commingled with it, which render it a valuable change for scrofulous and debilitated individuals. The sea and seacoast are usually, also, more equable in their temperature than places inland.

SEA SICKNESS, Nausea marina — s. Tangle, Laminaria digitata — s. Ware, see Pila marina — s. Water, see Water, sea — s. Wrack, Pila marina.

SEAL, GOLDEN, ([Sax.] rigel, [L.] sigillum), Hydrastis Canadensis — s. Medicine, Cochet — s. Solomon's, Convallaria polygonatum — s. Solomon's, great, Convallaria canaliculata — s. Solomon's, smaller, Convallaria pubescens.

SEAM (Sax.), Cicatrix.

SEARCHER, Body searcher.

SEARCHING, ([F.] chercher, 'to seek,') Probing. Also, the operation of ascertaining, by the introduction of a metallic instrument, whether there is a stone in the bladder;—Sound'ing.

SEARCHLOT, ([Sax.] rap, 'a sore,') A cloth to cover a sore; a plaster.

SEAS'ON, Tempes'tas, (F.) Saison, (from statio, 'station,') [?] One of the four great divisions of the year, reckoned by the return of the sun in its annual course, — Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. It is to the seasons that we are indebted for the organic changes in the vegetable kingdom; and their mutation exerts a powerful influence on man.

SEASONING, (from [F.] saison, season,') Acclimation — s. Fever, Fever, stranger's.

SEAT, (from [L.] sedeo, 'to sit,') Anus, Nates — s. Bone, Ischion.

SEBACÉ, Sebaceous.

SEBACEOFOLLICULAR, see Sebaceous.

SEBA'CEOUS, Seba'ceus, (F.) Sébacé, (from sebum.) That which has the nature of suet, — as sebaceous or sebaceofollicular tumours.

SEBACEOUS FLUX, Stearrhœa.

SEBACEOUS, SEBIPAROUS or SEBIFEROUS GLANDS, Sebaceous Follicles or Crypts, Folliculi seba'cei, Cryptæ seba'ceæ, Oil or Mil'itary glands, are small hollow organs, of a rounded or pyriform shape, seated in the substance of the skin, and opening on its surface by a small, excretory duct; furnishing a yellow, unctuous humour, Smeg'ma cuta'neum, Se'bium cuta'neum, having some analogy with suet, which is destined to lubricate the surface of the body. Follicles of a similar nature exist around the corona glandis of the male, and under the skin of the labia majora and nymphæ of the female. They secrete a sebaceous matter, which emits a peculiar odour; and hence, after the name of one who described them, G. Tyson, they are called Gland'ulæ odorif'erae Tyso'ni, G. Tyso'ni, Ty'son's glands, and, also, Gland'ulæ odorif'erae seu seba'ceæ gland'is, G. cor'onæ pe'nis, Folliculi seba'cei cor'onæ gland'is, Gland'ulæ odorif'erae præputii, Cryptæ præputia'les.

SEBASTOMANIA, (σεβαστος, 'worshipped,' and mania.) Religious insanity, Demonomania.

SEBESTENA, Cor'dia myxa seu sebeste'na seu Africa'na seu domes'tica seu obli'qua, Sebeste'na affine'dalis, Seb'esten, Seb'tena, Myx'a, Cor'nus sanguinea, Pru'nus sebeste'na, Smoothleaved Cor'dia, Assy'rian plum, (F.) Sebestier myxa. Ord. Cordiaceæ. The dark, black fruit of the Sebeste'na possesses glutinous and aperient qualities, and is exhibited, in decoction, in various diseases of the chest.

SEBESTIER MYXA, Sebestena.

SEBIFEROUS, (sebum, 'suet, fat,' and ferre, 'to carry,') see Sebaceous.

SEBIPAROUS, (sebum, 'suet, fat,' and pario, 'to bring forth,') see Sebaceous.

SEBORRHAGIA, (sebum, 'suet, fat,' and ῥαγν, 'a breaking forth,') Stearrhœa.

SEBORRHOEA, (sebum, 'suet, fat,' and ῥεω, 'to flow,') Stearrhœa.

SEBSTEN, Sebestina.

SEBUM, Pinguedo, Sevum — s. Cutaneum, see Sebaceous glands — s. Palpebrale, Chaussie — s. Præputiale, Smegma præputii.

SECALE, (secare, 'to cut,' [?]) S. cerealë seu barbatum. The Rye plant. (F.) Seigle. Ord. Gramineæ. Rye is chiefly used as an article of diet, particularly in the northern parts of Europe, where a spirit is also extracted from it. The grain is disposed to aescency; and hence its internal use at first generally produces a laxative effect.

SECALE BARBATUM, Secale — s. Cornutum. Ergot — s. Luxurians, Ergot — s. Maternum turgidum seu tumulentum, Ergot.

SECALIS MATER, Ergot.

SÉCATEUR DES AMYGDALÉS, (from secare, 'to cut,') Amygdalotome — s. par Écrasement, Écraseur.

SECCERNENT, (seccernere, 'to separate,') Secreting.

SECCERNING, Secreting — s. Substance of the kidney, see Kidney.

SECESSIO FÆCUM, (secedere, secessum, 'to secede,') Defecation.

SECESSUS, Vulva — s. Niger, Melæna.

SÈCHE, Sepia.

SECLUSORIUM, (secludere, seclusum, 'to shut up,') Sac.

SECONDARY, (secundus, 'the second,') (F.) Secondaire. Something that acts subordinately to another; as the secondary symptoms of a disease; that is, those which supervene on the primary. A secondary amputation is one performed after the constitutional effects of an injury have mainly passed away. See Fever, secondary, and Hæmorrhagia, for Secondary Hemorrhage.

SECONDIVES, Secundines.

SECRETA, (pl. of secretum.) Same etymon as Secretion. Things or matters secreted or separated from the blood.

SÉCRÉTEUR, Secreting.

SECRETING, Secreto'rius, Secer'ning, Secer'nent, Secre'tory or Sec'retory, Excer'nent, (F.) Sécréteur, Sécrétoire. That which secretes,—as a secreting organ.

SECRETIO, Secretion — s. Lactis, Galactosis — s. Lotii, Uropoësis — s. Urinæ, Uropoësis — s. Vicaria, see Vicarius.

SECRETION, Secre'tio, Apoc'risis, (seccernere, secretum, 'to separate,') An organic function, which is chiefly executed in the glands, and consists in an elaboration or separation of the materials of the blood, at the very extremities of the arterial system, or rather of the vascular secretory system; and which differs in each organ according to its particular structure; hence the formation of different fluids—bile, saliva, urine, milk, &c.

The term is, also, applied to the thing secreted,—Secre'tum. The secretions are of three kinds,—exhalant, follicular, and glandular. Simple secretions are those which exist ready formed in the blood, and pass out of the vessels by an act of exosmosis, whilst the more complicated are formed from the liquor sanguinis by cell agency. The latter alone are, by some, called Secretions.

SÉCRÉTOIRE, Secreting.

SECRETOMOTORY, Secre'tomoto'rius. An epithet applied to nerves which influence secretion in the manner of excitomotory nerves

SECRETORIUS, Secreting.

SECRETORY, Secreting.

SECRETUM, see Secretion.

SECT, METHODICAL, (secta, from secare, sectum, 'to cut,') Methodists.

SECTIO, gen. Sectio'nis, Sect'ion. The act of cutting. A division.

SECTIO ALTA, see Lithotomy — s. Anatomica, Dissection — s. Cadaveris, Autopsia cadaverica — s. Cadaveris legalis, Autopsia calaverica — s. Cæsarea, Cæsarean section — s. Franconiana, see Lithotomy — s. Hypogastrica, see Lithotomy — s. Lateralis, see Lithotomy — s. Legalis, Autopsia calaverica legalis — s. Mariana, see Lithotomy — s. Nympharum, Nymphotomy — s. Perinaealis, Perineal section — s. Rectovesicalis, see Lithotomy — s. Renalis, Nephrotomy — s. Tendinum, Tenotomy — s. Vaginovesicalis, Colpocystotomia — s. Vesicalis, Lithotomy.

SECTION, Sectio — s. Sigaultian, Symphyseotomy.

SECUNDÆ, (secundus, 'the second,') Secundines.

SECUNDINÆ, Secundines.

SECUNDINES, Hys'tera, Deuter'ion, Me'træ, Secun'dæ, Secun'd'na, Afterbirth, Afterburthen. (F.) Arrière-faix, Secundines, Délivre, (from secundus, 'second,') All that remains in the uterus after the birth of the child,—viz., the placenta, a portion of the umbilical cord, and the membranes of the ovum. These are commonly not expelled till some time after the birth of the fetus; hence their name. See Délivrance.

SECUNDUS PROPRIORUM AURICULÆ, Retrahens auris.

SECUS, Sex.

SEDANTIA, Sedatives.

SEDATION, Seda'tion, (sedare, sedatum, 'to settle or assuage,') Pau'sis, Catapau'sis. The effect induced by sedatives.

SEDATIVES, Seda'tiva, Pau'on'ta, Sedan'tia, Ade'cta, Catasta'tica, Deprimen'tia, Depress'ants, (F.) Sédatifs, Culmants, Tempé'rants. Medicines which directly depress the vital forces, and which are consequently employed whenever it is necessary to diminish preternaturally increased action. The chief reputed sedatives are Acidum Hydrocyanicum, Acidum Hydrosulphuricum, Tabacum, Misio Sanguinis, and certain gases by inhalation, as azote, carbonic acid, [?] carburetted and sulphuretted hydrogen.

SEDEM ATTOLLENS, 'raising the seat,' Levator ani.

SEDES, (sedeo, 'to sit,') Anus, Excrement — s. Cruente, Dysentery, Hæmatochezia — s. Lactescentes, Cœliac flux — s. Procidua, Proctocele.

SEDHÆE, Bangue.

SEDIMENT, Sedimen'tum, Lem'ma, Residen'tia, (from sedeo, 'to sink down,') (F.) Dépôt. A deposit formed by the precipitation of some one or more of the substances held in solution or suspension by a liquid. That which is formed in urine, at the time of cooling, has been called Hypostasis, Hypostema, Residentia, Subsidentia, (F.) Dépôt de l'urine. This sediment or deposit varies in different states of the system. In calculous affections it is one of the most important objects of attention.

SEDIMENTUM, Sediment—s. Urinæ laterium, see Lateritious—s. Urinæ pityroides, see Furfuraceous.

SEDILIA, (sedere, 'to sit,') Nates.

SED'LITZ, MINERAL WATERS OF, Seidlitz water. Springs in Bohemia, near Prague, which are simple salines. They contain sulphate and carbonate of magnesia, chloride of magnesium, sulphates of potassa, soda, and lime, carbonic acid and carbonate of lime. They are employed as purgatives in a multitude of diseases.

ARTIFICIAL SED'LITZ POW'DERS, in no respect, however, resembling the natural ingredients, are formed of Sodæ et Potassæ tartreas ʒij, Sodæ carbon. ʒij, in one paper; Acid. tartaric. gr. xxxv, in another. For half a pint of water. They are called, also, Rochelle powders.

SÉDON BRŪLANT, Sedum—s. Reprise, Sedum telephium.

SED'UM, S. d'ocré seu glacia'le seu mi'nus seu vermicula'rè, (sedes, 'I sit,' owing to its attachment to rocks and walls,') Illec'ebra, Hellec'ebra, Illec'ebrium, Vermicula'rè, Vermicula'ris, Pi'per mura'lè, Semperv'itum d'ocré, Aci'chryson, Æo'nium, Wall pepper, Jack of the Buttery, Prick'et, Bird's bread, Stoncrop, Biting Stoncrop, Small House'leek, (F.) Joubarbe âcre, Orpin brûlant, Vermiculaire brûlante, Sédon brûlant, Ord. Crassulacæe. Sex. Syst. Decandria Pentagynia. In its recent state it is very acrid, and proves both emetic and cathartic. Externally, in the form of cataplasm, it produces vesications and erosions. It has been recommended in cancerous and malignant ulcers.

SEDUM RHODIOLA and S. AL'BUM, (F.) Triquetradame, have similar properties.

SEDUM, Saxifraga granulata—s. Album, see Sedum—s. Glaciale, Sedum—s. Majus, Sempervivum tectorum—s. Minus, Sedum—s. Rhodiola, see Sedum.

SEDUM TELEPHIUM, S. telephoi'des, Fa'ba cras'sa, Cras'sula. C. Ma'jor, Illec'ebra ma'jor, Tele'phium, Faba'ria cras'sula, Fa'ba cras'sea, Anacamp'eros, A. albicans seu triphyl'la seu vul'gari's, Orpine, (F.) Sédon reprise, Grand orpin, Fève épaisse, Joubarbe des vignes, Herbe à la coupure, H. aux Charpentiers. Formerly used as a cataplasm in cuts, hemorrhoids, corns, whitlows, &c.

SEDUM TELEPHOIDES, S. Telephium—s. Vermiculare, Sedum.

SEED, ([Sax.] ræd.) Semen. Sperm.

SEGMENTA CARTILAGINEA, (pl. of segmentum, 'a segment,') see Trachea.

SEGMENTA'TION, Segmenta'tio, (segmentum, 'a segment,' itself from ecco, 'to cut,') The act of being divided into segments or portions. (F.) Segmentation, Fractionnement, Sillonement. A term applied to the division of the vitellus or yolk into 'segments,' each containing a transparent vesicle, which may be a descendant of the primordial or germ cell.

SEGNIT'IA, Segnit'ies, (from segnis, 'sluggish,') Sluggishness or torpor in the exercise of a function:—as SEGNITIES AL'VI, Torpor of the bowels; SEGNITIES VIR'UM, Languor.

SEGNITIES, Segnitia.

SEGRAY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Near Pithiviers, in Gâtinais, in the French department of Loiret. there is a chalybeate spring, which has some reputation.

SEGU, Sago.

SEIDLITZ, Sedlitz.

SEIDSCHÜTZ, SEYDSCHÜTZ or SAID-SCHÜTZ, MINERAL WATERS OF. Bitter springs, in the neighbourhood of those of Püllna and Sedlitz, in Bohemia, which contain chiefly sulphate, nitrate, muriate, and carbonate of magnesia, sulphates of potassa, soda, and lime; carbonate of lime, iron and manganese. The water is an excellent cathartic, and is well known in Europe.

SELAGO, gen. Selaginis, Camphorosma Monspeliaca, Lycopodium selago.

SELENE, (σεληνη,) Moon, see Nail.

SELENIACI, (σεληνιακοι, from selene,) see Lunatic.

SELENIASIS, (from selene,) Somnambulism.

SELENIASMUS, Somnambulism.

SELENOBLETUS, (σεληνοβλητος, from selene, and βλλη, 'to strike,') Lunatic.

SELENOGAMIA, (selene, and γαμος, 'marriage,') Somnambulism.

SELENOPLEGE, (selene, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') see Coup de soleil.

SELENOPLEXIA, see Coup de soleil.

SELFABUSE, Masturbation.

SELFHEAL, Prunella.

SELFLIMITED. An epithet applied to diseases which appear to run a definite course, but little modified by treatment, — small-pox, for example.

SELF POLLUTION, Masturbation.

SELI'BRA, for Semil'bra, Semb'la, 'half a pound.' Six ounces, Troy; eight Avoirdupois.

SELINITES, (σελιαιτες,) Wine impregnated with the seeds of the σαλιου or parsley.

A depression at the upper surface of the sphenoid bone, which is bounded, anteriorly and posteriorly, by the clinoid processes, and lodges the pituitary gland. It is so called from its resemblance to a Turkish saddle. The broad rough plate, behind, and somewhat overhanging the Sella Turcica, is the Dorsum Ephipp'ii.

SELLE TURCIQUE, Sella Turcica—s. du Turc, Sella Turcica.

SELS NEUTRES, Neutral salts.

SELTZ or SELTZ'ER, MINERAL WATERS OF. Cold, acidulous springs, the source of which is at Seltz, nine leagues from Strasburg, and in the Department of the Bas-Rhin. They contain carbonates of lime, magnesia, and soda, chloride of sodium, and much carbonic acid. They are refrigerant, tonic, diuretic, and aperient. They are not frequented.

ARTIFICIAL SELTZER WATER may be made from maric acid gr. xxxv, water Oj, white marble gr. iij. Stop up till dissolved. Add carbonate of Magnesia, gr. v, and, after some time, subcarbonate of soda, gr. xxxij. Close it till used.

SEMBELLA, Selibra.

SEMECARPUS ANACARDIUM, (σημιον, 'a mark,' and καρμος, 'fruit,') Avicennia tomentosa.

SEMEIOGRAPHY, (σημειογραφία,) Semeiographia, Semiography, Semiographia, Symptomatography, (σημιων, 'a symptom,' and γραφη, 'a description,') A description of symptoms or signs of disease.

SEMEIOLOGY, Semeiologie, Semiology, Semiologie, Phænomenologie, (σημιων, 'a symptom,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') (F.) Sémiotique. The branch of pathology whose object is the doctrine of the symptom or signs of disease.

SEMEION, (σημιον,) Sign, Symptom—s. Boethematum, Indication.

SEMEIOSIS, (σημiosis,) Semeiology.

SEMEIOTICE, (σημειωτική,) Semeiology.

ΣΕΜΕΙΟΤΙΚΗ, Semeiology.

SEMEN, gen. Seminis, (særo, 'to sow,') That which is sown. Seed of plants and animals.

SEMEN, Sperm—s. Badian, Illicium anisatum—s. Cina, see Artemisia santonica—s. Contra, see Artemisia santonica—s. Contra d'Alep, Artemisia santonica—s. Contra vermes, Artemisia santonica—s. Masculinum seu virile seu genitale, Sperm—s. Mulibre, Sperm (of the female)—s. Sanctum, see Artemisia santonica—s. Santonici, see Artemisia santonica—s. Zedoaria, see Artemisia santonica.

SEMENCE, (from semen,) Seed, Sperm.

SEMI, (from ἡμισον, 'half,') Semi or demi, in composition, universally signifies 'half;' both in French and English.

SEMIANIMIS, Semimortuus, Semivivex, Semivivus, (semi, and animus, 'life,') Half-living. Half-dead.

SEMI BULB OF THE FEMALE, Bulbus vestibuli.

SEMICANALICULUS, (semi, and canaliculus, 'a small channel,') Sulcus.

SEMICANALIS, (semi, and canalis, 'a channel,') Sulcus.

SEMICEPHALUS, Hemicephalus.

SEMICIRCULI OSSEI, Semicircular canals.

SEMICIRCULAR, Semicircularis, (semi, and circulus, 'a circle,') (F.) Demicirculaire. That which represents the half of a circle.

SEMICIRCULAR CANALS, Canales seu Ductus semicirculares seu tubiformes seu circulares, Semicirculi ossei, Funes seu Canaliculi semicirculares labyrinthi, (F.) Canaux demicirculaires, are seated in the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, and open into the vestibule, behind which they are situate. They are three in number, of which one is superior or vertical,—canalis semicircularis verticalis superior; another posterior or oblique,—canalis semicircularis verticalis posterior, and the third exterior or horizontal,—canalis semicircularis horizontalis. Their parietes are formed of a bony, compact, hard plate. Their uses in audition are not known: at their termination they have the elliptical arrangements called ampullæ; and by both extremities they open into the vestibule, in the sac at its superior part—the Sacculus Ellipticus, Alveus seu Utriculus seu Sinus communis, Sinus seu Alveus utriculo-sus, Sacculus vestibuli or Median sinus, Utriculus. In front of the S. ellipticus, nearer the cochlea, and opposite the foramen ovale, is the Sacculus sphaericus, or Sacculus.

SEMICIRCULUS EXSCULPTUS, s. miculæ cut out. Hiatus diaphragmatis aorticæ.

SEMICONGIUS. Half a gallon, or four pints.

SEMICUBIUM, Semicubium, Insectio, Insectus, Eucathisma, Eccathisma, (F.) Demi bain, (semi, and cubare, 'to lie down,') A half-bath, or such as receives only the hips or extremities.

SEMICUPIUM, Bath, half, Semicubium.

SEMIFIBULÆUS, Peronæus brevis.

SEMIHOMO, (semi, 'half,' and homo, 'man,') Atropa mandragora.

SEMIINTEROSSEUS INDICIS, Abductor indicis.

SEMIINTEROSSEUS POLLICIS, Opponens pollicis.

SEMILIBRA, Selibra.

SEMILLA DEL GUACHARO. Various kinds of hard and dry fruits, found in the stomach of the young Guacharo, a sort of nocturnal bird. The fruits are a celebrated South American remedy in Ague.

SEMILUNAR, Semilunaris, (F.) Demilunaire ou Semilunaire, (semi, and luna, 'the moon,') Having the shape of a halfmoon.

SEMILUNAR CARTILAGES, Semilunar fibrocartilages, Sigmoïd cartilages, Cartilagines sigmoïdes seu semilunares, are two fibrocartilages, which exist between the condyles of the os femoris and the articular surfaces of the tibia. The innermost, which is longer from before to behind than transversely, is nearly semicircular. The outermost forms almost an entire circle; an arrangement, in both cases, corresponding to the different surfaces of the tibia. They are thicker at their outer circumference, which is convex, than at the inner, which is concave and very thin. Both are inserted, before and behind, into the spine of the tibia by means of fibrous fasciæ.

SEMILUNAR GANGLION,—Ganglion abdominale seu splanchnicum seu transversum seu solarè, G. surréal, (Ch.), belongs to the great sympathetic. These ganglia present considerable variety, and are deeply situate in the abdomen, above and behind the suprarenal capsules. They correspond, posteriorly, to the pillars of the diaphragm and the aorta. They have the shape of a crescent reversed, often surrounded by other ganglia of a smaller size. From their periphery numerous filaments proceed, which go to the formation of the solar plexus.

SEMILUNAR NOTCH OF THE STERNUM, Fourchette—s. Valves, Sigmoid valves.

SEMILUNARE OS, Lunare os.

SEMILUNULA UNGUITUM, (semi, and lunula, dim. of luna, 'moon,') see Nail.

SEMIMAS, (semi, and mas, 'a male,') Eunuch.

SEMIMASCULATUS, Eunuch.

SEMIMASCULUS, (semi, and masculus, 'male,') Eunuch.

SEMIMEMBRANEOSUS, Semimembranosus.

SEMIMEMBRANOSUS, (semi, and membrana, 'membrane,') Semimembranosus, (F.) Ischio-popliteo-femoral, Ischio-popliteo-tibialis, (Ch.) Demimembraneux. A muscle situate at the posterior part of the thigh. It is flat, thin, narrow, and aponeurotic in its upper third; broader and fleshy in the middle, and tendinous below. It is attached above to the tuberosity of the ischium; and below—by a tendon, which has three divisions—to the outer condyle of the femur, and to the posterior and inner part of the internal tuberosity of the tibia. This muscle is a rotator inwards, and a flexor of the leg. It can also bend the thigh upon the leg. In standing it maintains the pelvis in position, and can even draw it downwards.

SEMIMORTUUS, (semi, and mortuus, 'dead,') Semianimis.

SEMINA (pl. of semen, 'seed') CATAPUTLÆ MAJORIS, see Ricinus communis.

SEMINA FRIGIDA MAJORA. The great or cold seeds. The ancients gave this name to the emul-five seeds of the cucumber, melon, gourd, and watermelon.

SEMINA FRIGIDA MINORA. The lesser cold seeds. The ancients gave this name to the seeds of the lettuce, purslane, endive, and cichory.

SEMINA RICINI VULGARIS, see Ricinus communis.

SEMINALIS, (from semen.) Spermatic—s. Filaments, Spermatozoa—s. Fluid, Sperm—s. Granules, see Granule.

SEMINALE MEMBRUM, 'seminal member,' Penis.

SEMINALIS, Spermatic.

SEMINERVOSUS, (semi, and nervus, 'a sinew,') Semitenosus.

SEMINEX, (semi, and nex, 'death,') Semianimis.

SEMINIA MORBORUM, (seminium, 'a seed store,') Predisposition.

SEMINIFEROUS, (semen, and fero, 'I carry,') Spermatoferous. An epithet given to the vessels which secrete and convey the seminal fluid.

SEMINIST, (from semen.) Animalculist. The term was, also, used for one, who believed, that the new being was formed by an admixture of the seed of the male with the supposititious seed of the female.

SEMINIUM, 'a seed store,' Sperm.

SEMEOGRAPHY, Semeiography.

SEMEOLOGY, Semeiology.

SEMION, (σημιον.) Sign.

SEMIORBICULARIS, see Orbicular muscles.

SEMIOTICE, Semeiotice—s. Faciæ, Physiognomy.

SEMIPESTIS, Typhus.

SEMIPLÉGIA, (semi, and πληγη, 'a stroke,') Hemiplegia.

SEMISEXIMUM, Hemiecton.

SEMICILICUS. A weight of one drachm or three scruples.

SEMISIDERATIO, (semi, and sideratus, 'planet struck,') Hemiplegia.

SEMISIDERATUS, see Hemiplegia.

SEMIOMNIS, (semi, and omnis, 'sleep,') Coma.

SEMIOPITUS, (semi, and sopio, sopitum, 'to put to sleep,') Coma.

SEMIOPORUS, (semi, and sopor, 'sleep,') Coma.

SEMIPECULUM, (semi, and speculum, 'a mirror,') An instrument used for dilating the incision made into the neck of the bladder in the operation of lithotomy.

SEMISPINALIS COLLI, Semispinalis seu transversospinalis seu spinalis seu transversalis colli, Articulospinalis, Spinalis cervicis, Transverso-spinal, (F.) Demi-épineux ou transversaire-épineux du cou. This muscle arises from the transverse processes of the six uppermost vertebræ, by an equal number of distinct tendons, which run obliquely under the complexus, and is inserted into the spinous processes of all the cervical vertebræ, except the first and last. Its action is, to extend the neck obliquely backwards and to one side.

SEMISPINALIS DORSI, Semispinalis externus, Transversospinalis dorsalis, Semispinalis (Riolan.) Transversospinal, (F.) Demi-épineux du dos, Transversaire-épineux du dos. This muscle arises from the transverse processes of the seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth dorsal vertebræ, by as many distinct tendons, which soon grow fleshy; and then again become tendinous, and are inserted into the spinous processes of the sixth or seventh uppermost dorsal, and two lowest cervical vertebræ, by as many tendons. Its action is, to extend the spine obliquely backwards.

SEMISPINALIS EXTERNUS, Semispinalis dorsis—s. Internus, Transversalis dorsis—s. Spinatus, Longissimus dorsis, Semispinalis dorsis.

SEMISPINATUS COLLI, Semispinalis colli.

SEMIS'ISIS, Sé'nis. The half of a pound, ounce, drachm, &c.

SEMITENDINOSUS, Seminerveus, (F.) Ischio-crèti-tibial, Ischio-prètibial, (Ch.) Demi-tendineux, Demi-nerveux. This muscle is situate at the posterior part of the thigh. It extends obliquely, downwards and inwards, from the tuberosity of the ischium—to which it is attached by a flat tendon, common to it and the biceps—as far as the posterior and inner part of the tibia, to which it is attached by means of another round tendon. Its fibres are commonly interrupted by an aponeurosis. Its uses are the same as those of the semimembranosus.

SEMITERTIANA, (semi, and tertiana, 'tertian,') Hemitritæa.

SEMIUNCIA, (semi, and uncia, 'an ounce,') Hemiuncion.

SEMIVIR, (semi, and vir, 'a man,') Eunuch.

SEMIVIVUS, (semi, and vivus, 'alive,') Semianimis.

SEMOLA, BUL'LOCK'S; a farinaceous article of diet, which is recommended as highly nutritious and easily digestible, consequently well adapted for infants and invalids, is said to consist of the gluten of wheat, with a small proportion of starch. Semola and Semolina resemble each other greatly. They appear, indeed, to be identical.

SEMOLINA, Man'na croup. This may be made by grinding wheat in an apparatus, separating the flour from the middlings, dressing the latter four different times in a bolting mill, and sifting through parchment sieves, until the product is perfectly freed from bran. In Poland, it is called Cra'cio groats.

Semolina is generally imported into England from the Baltic, and in Russia is said to be manufactured from buckwheat. It has a granular form like some kinds of oatmeal, a dingy white colour, a farinaceous, somewhat insipid, taste, and is well adapted for the diet of children affected with derangement of the bowels. A recent analysis makes it consist of the gluten of wheat with a certain proportion of the starch, part of the latter having been removed.

SEMPERVIVUM ACRE, (semper, 'always, and vivus, 'alive, because always green.) Sedum.

SEMPERVIVUM TECTORUM, S. majus seu tectorum Aizoön, Betahalalen, Buphthalmus, Bar'ba Jo'cis, Agrosin'ara, Andrachahara, Chryso-sper-mum, Houzeleck, Sen'green, Feves, Fouets, (Prov.) Cyphel, Jupiter's Beard, (F.) Joubarbe des toits. The leaves have a mild, subacid austerly, and are often applied to bruises and old ulcers.

SEMPRESSES' PALSY, see Palsy, sempresesses.

SEMUDA, (σμηδα.) Betula.

SEMUNCIA, Hemiuncion.

SENA. Cassia senna.

SÉNÉ, Cassia senna—s. d'Amérique, Cassia Marilandica—s. Faux, Colutea—s. Indigène, Colutea—s. des Prés, Griatiola officinalis.

SENEBIERA CORONOPUS, (after J. Sénéquier, the naturalist, of Geneva.) Cochlearia coronopus.

SENECA OIL, (after the Seneca Indians.) Petroleum, (New York.)

SENECIO, S. vulgaris, (senex, 'an old man, in allusion to the grayish down on many species;) Erig'erum, Cortalon, Erig'erum, Ground'ael, Fire'weed, (Sc.) Groundie Swallow, (F.) Senecion commun. Ord. Composite. Sex. Syst. Syngenesia Polygamia Superflua. A common plant in Europe; frequently applied, bruised, to inflammations and ulcers, as a refrigerant and antiseptic.

SENECIO AUREUS, Gold'en rag'weed, Wild ralle'rian, Life root, Squac root; indigenous, is a excitant, diaphoretic, and diuretic. The dried plant is used in decoction;— $\frac{3}{4}$ ss to Oj of water.

SENECIO HIERACIFOLIUS, Erechtithes hieracifolius.

SENECIO JACOBÆA, Jacobina, St. James's Wort, Ragwort, (Sc.) Bunede, Weebo, (F.) Jacobée. The leaves have a roughish, bitter, subacid, and extremely nauseous taste. A decoction has been used in dysentery. A poultice of the leaves has been recommended in rheumatic affections; and a decoction of the root has often been employed in cases of wounds and bruises.

SENEÇON COMMUN, Senecio.

SENECTA, Senectus.

SENECTA AN'GIUM. The cast skin of a serpent. A decoction of it is said to cure deafness!

SENECTA DECREPITA, Decrepitude—s. Extrema, Decrepitude—s. Summa, Decrepitude—s. Ultima, Decrepitude.

SENECT' TUS, Senecta, (from senex, 'an old person;') Gerias, Senium, Æt'as senilis seu proec'ta seu ma'la, Old age, Senility, (F.) Viellisse. The last period of life, commencing, according to some, at 60 years of age,—according to M. Flourens, at 70,—but varying according to numerous circumstances. It is characterized by progressive diminution of the physical and moral faculties.

SENECTUS ULTIMA, Decrepitude.

SENEGA, Polygala senega.

SENEGAL', GUM, Gum'mi Senegalen'sē seu Sen'eca seu Sen'ega seu Sen'ica. The exudation from Aca'cia seu Mimo'sa Sen'egal.—Ord. Leguminosæ. See Syst. Polygala Monocia—growing in the country of Africa through which the river Senegal runs. It is in loose or single drops, much larger than gum Arabic, or the gum which exudes from the cherry tree; and is much more difficult of solution than the former.

SENEGIN, see Polygala senega.

SÉNÉGRALN, Trigonella sœnum.

SENEKA, Polygala senega.

SÉNEVÉ, Sinapis.

SENGREEN, Sempervivum tectorum.

SENILE, Seni'tis, (F.) Sénile, (from senex, 'an old person;') Relating or belonging to old age:—as 'senile delirium;' dotage.

SENILITY, Senectus.

SENNA, Cassia senna—s. Alexandrina, Cassia senna—s. American, Cassia Marilandica—s. Bladder, Colutea arborescens—s. Essence of, prepared, Selway's see Infusum sennæ compositum—s. Germanica, Colutea—s. Italiana, Cassia senna—s. Prairie, Cassia chamæcrista—s. Wild, Cassia chamæcrista, Cassia Marilandica.

SENS, Sense,—s. Genital, Appetite, venereal.

SENSA'TION, Sensa'tio, (sentire, sensum, 'to feel;') Æsthe'ma. The consciousness or cognizance by the brain of an impression caused by an external body on the organs of the senses. (F.) Sentiment. It is not necessarily, however, confined to bodies external to us; for we can receive an impression by touching any part of our own body. The body which communicates the impressions needs but to be external to the part impressed. Sensations are divided into external, internal, and morbid. The external are communicated by the five organs of the senses. The internal are such as occur within the body, and arise from some alteration in the function of the part, for the time being. Hunger and thirst are internal sensations, as well as all the natural wants. Morbid sensations may be either internal or external. Objective sensations are produced by impressions on the peripheral nerves; as in vision, audition, &c. Subjective sensations, are such as originate centrally or in the encephalon,—as tinnitus aurium.

SENSATIONAL, Sentient.

SENSE, Sen'sus, Sen'sio, Æsthe'sis. (F.) Sens.

A faculty, possessed by animals, of appreciating impressions from external objects. The senses are five in number: sight, hearing, smell, taste and touch. Of these, the first two and the last administer more to the intellect; and, hence, have been called, by some, the intellectual senses; the other two seem more connected with the nutrition of the body: and, hence, have been termed corporeal or nutritive senses. Other senses have been suggested—as the intense sensation experienced during the venereal act; a sense of heat and cold; a muscular sense, a common sense or cœnæsthesia, &c.

SENSES, NERVOUS SYSTEM OF THE, Medulla oblongata.

SENSIBILITAS, Sensibility—s. Anomala, see Irritable—s. Aucta, see Irritable—s. Morbosa, see Irritable.

SENSIBILITY, Sensibilit'as, (sentire, sensum, 'to feel,' and habilis, 'able,') Æsthe'ma. The faculty of receiving and transmitting impressions, and having the consciousness of them. It thus includes three secondary properties, Impressibility, ([F.] Impressionabilité, Impressibilité), Transmissibility, and Perceptibility. Bichat defines it as the property possessed by living bodies, of receiving impressions, whether the individual be conscious of them or not. In the former case, where conscious, he calls the sensibility animal: in the latter, where not, he terms it organic. This last is common to vegetables and animals, and presides over nutrition, absorption, exhalation, secretion, &c. The other does not exist in vegetables: it is the origin of the sensations—olfaction, vision, gustation, audition, thirst, hunger, pain, &c. There are few parts of the animal body, which are not sensible—if not in health—in disease. The free extremities of the hair and nails, and the epidermis, are not so. See Insensibility.

SENSIFEROUS, (sensus, and ferre, 'to carry,') Sentient.

SENSIO, Sense.

SENSITIVE, Sensit'ivus, (F.) Sensitif. Having the faculty of feeling. Relating or appertaining to the senses, or to sensation.

SENSORIUM, Sensorium.

SENSORIVOLIT'IONAL. A term applied to nervous fibres which pass to and from the cerebro-spinal axis, and are respectively concerned in sensation and volition.

SENSORIAL, Sentient.

SENSORIAL POWER, according to Dr. Wilson Phillip, is composed of the two functions of sensation and volition. Dr. Darwin included in it the power of muscular contraction; but it ought not to be extended to acts in which there is not consciousness.

SENSORIUM, S. commu'nē, Organon sensorium internum, Sensitorium, Emporium spirituum, Æsthetorium, Sensory. The common centre of sensations.

SENSORY, Sensorium, Sentient.

SENSORY GANG'LIA. A name given by Dr. Carpenter to a series of ganglionic masses at the base of the brain, which are in direct communication with the nerves of sensation—as the olfactory, optic, auditory, and gustatory.

SENSORY NERVES, Nerves of sensa'tion, are so called in contradistinction to Motor nerves. There are general sensory nerves—as those connected with the posterior part of the spinal marrow, and the fifth pair; and special sensory, as those of the senses.

SENSUS ÆGRITUDINIS, 'a feeling of sickness,' Indisposition—s. Osmometricus, Olfaction—s. Perversus, Pseudæsthesia.

SENTIENT, Sen'tiens, (from sentire, 'to feel,') Sensory, Ideä'genus, Sensorial, Sensational, Sensiferous. Feeling; causing feeling.

SENTIENT EXTREMITIES OF NERVES are their minute terminations in the organs.

SENTIMENT, see Sensation.

SENTINA, Pituitary gland.

SEPARATIO RIGUM, (separare, separatum, 'to separate.') A surgical instrument, for separating the pericranium from the skull.

A Separatory, Vitrum Hypoclepticum, is a pharmaceutical vessel for separating fluids of different densities from each other.

SEPEDOGENESIS, Sepedonogenesis.

SEPEDON, (σηπεδον.) Putrefaction.

SEPEDONODES, (σηπεδονωδης.) Putrid.

SEPEDONOGENESIS, Sepedonogenesis, (sepedon, and γενεσις, 'generation.') A septic disposition or tendency; such as is met with in typhus gravior.

SE'PES, Se'pes, 'a hedge,' 'a row;' as Se'pes seu Se'ries seu Pec'ten dentium:—a row of teeth.

SEPS DENTIUM, see Sepses.

SEPHIRUS, Scleriosis.

SE'PIA, (σηπια) S. officinalis, Se'pium, Cattlefish, (Sc.) Hosefish, Slievefish, (F.) Sèche. Class, Cephalopoda. The oesophage part of the cuttlefish: (F.) Os de Sèche—Præcipitans magnum—has been used as an absorbent, and is often added to toothpowders.

SEPLASIA'RIOUS. A name formerly given to one who sold perfumes, ointments, &c. (It is derived from Seplasia, the name of a public place at Capua, where such preparations were frequently sold.) A druggist.

SEPSICHYMIA, Septochoymia.

SEPSIS, (σηψις.) Putrefaction.

SEPTÆMIA, Septæ'mia, Septicæ'mia, (σηπτος, 'putrid,' and αιμα, 'blood:') Putrid infection. A morbid condition of the blood produced by septic or putrid matters.

SEPTAL, Septa'lis, (from Septum.) Relating, or appertaining to, a septum: as 'septal walls of the heart'—those that separate the cavities from each other.

SEPTANA FEBRIS, (septem, 'seven,') Fever, septan.

SEPTENARY, Septena'rius, (F.) Septenaire, (septem, 'seven,') 'Consisting of seven.' The septenary years of the old believers in critical periods were times at which, it was supposed, important changes might be expected to take place. The grand climacteric was fixed at 63, and it was considered that if a person passed that age, he had wellfounded expectations that his life might be protracted to 90.

SEPTENNIAD, (septem, 'seven,') Climacteric, (years.)

SEPTERIUS, (σηπτηριος.) Septic.

SEPTIFOLI, UPRIGHT, (septem, 'seven,' and folium, 'a leaf,') Tormentilla.

SEPTHÆMIA, Septæmia.

SEPTIC, Sept'icus, Se'pticus, Sept'eri, (Sept'eri, (σηπτος, 'putrid,') That which produces putrefaction. A substance which corrodes and disorganizes the soft parts without causing much pain.

SEPTIC POISON, see Poison.

SEPTICÆMIA, Septæmia.

SEPTIMESTRIS FŒTUS, (septem, 'seven,' and mensis, 'a month,') see Fœtus septimestris.

SEPTINERVIA, (septem, 'seven,' and nervus, 'a nerve,') Plantago.

SEPTOCHYMIA, Sepsichymia, (σηπτος, 'putrid,' and χυμος, 'juice,') Putrefaction or putrescency of the humours.

SEPTON, (from σηπτος, 'putrid,') Azote.

SEPTOPYRA, (σηπτος, 'putrid,' and πυρ, 'fever,') Typhus gravior.

SEPTULUM, (dim. of septum.) A division between small spaces or cavities— as the septula or fibrous cords given off by the mediastinum testis to be inserted into the inner surface of the tunica albuginea.

SEPTUM, (F.) Cloison, 'a partition,' (from sepio, septum, 'I fence in,') A part destined to separate two cavities from each other, or to divide a principal cavity into several secondary cavities.

These septa are numerous in the human body. The chief are the following:—

SEPTUM ATRIORUM, S. Auricula'rum. The septum or partition between the auricles of the heart.

SEPTUM AURICULARUM, S. Atriorum—s. Cerebelli, Falx cerebelli—s. Cerebri, Falx cerebri—s. Cochleæ auditoria, Lamina spiralis.

SEPTUM CORDIS, Septum me'dium cordis. The partition which separates the two ventricles of the heart.

SEPTUM CRURALE, see Crural canal—s. Encephali, Tentorium.

SEPTUM LUCIDUM seu pellucidum seu tenue et pellucidum seu medium, Speculum, S. lucidum, La'pis specularis, Mediastinum seu Diaphragma ventriculo'rum laterali'um cerebri, (F.) Septum median (Ch.), Cloison transparente. The soft portion or medullary substance, which separates the two lateral ventricles of the brain from each other. This septum is composed of two laminae; between which a small cavity exists, filled by a serous fluid, ventriculus septi pellucidi: see Ventricles of the Brain. The brothers Wenzel are of opinion that this cavity is lined by a peculiar membrane.

SEPTUM MEDIAN, S. lucidum—s. Median du cercelet, Falx cerebelli—s. Medium cerebri, S. lucidum.

SEPTUM NARIVM, Interseptum seu Dissepimentum seu Interfinitum seu Discrimen seu Int'brez seu Diaphragma narium, (F.) Cloison des Fosses nasales. The partition between the nares. It is formed by the vomer, the perpendicular plate of the ethmoid bone, and a cartilage of a triangular shape. These parts are lined by the pituitary membrane, which receives a considerable number of nerves and vessels.

SEPTUM NASI, see Nares.

SEPTUM PARVUM OCCIPITALE, Falx cerebelli—s. Pectiniforme, see Cavernous bodies—s. Pellucidum, S. lucidum—s. Scalæ, Lamina spiralis—s. Staphylin, Velum pendulum palati—s. Tenue et pellucidum, S. lucidum—s. Thoracis, Mediastinum—s. Transverse, Tentorium—s. Transversum, Diaphragm—s. Vestibuli nervosomembranaceum, see Labyrinth.

SEPTUS, (σηπτος.) Septicus.

SEPUM, Serum.

SEQUESTRUM, (sequestrare, 'to separate from,') (F.) Séquestre. The portion of bone, in necrosis, which is dead, and separated from the living bone; acting, whilst retained, as an extraneous body. When the sequester is superficial and small, it is called Exfoliation. The portion of bone surrounding it is the Cap'sulu sequestralis.

SERAPEUM, Syrup.

SERAPINON, Sagapenum.

SERAPIUM, Syrup.

SERBET, Scherbet.

SÉREUX, Serous.

SERICOCARPUS TORTIFOLIUS, (σηρικος, 'silken,' and καρπος, 'fruit,') Conyza bijolia'ta, Aster tortifolius; indigenous; Order, Compositæ: is said to be diuretic.

SERICUM, (σηρικον.) Silk; from Seres—the Thibetans probably— from whom it was first obtained. (F.) Soie. The thread spun by the Bombyx Mori or Silkworm. Silk is used by surgeons for ligatures, &c.

SEMICUM ANGLICUM, see Sparadrapum adhæsivum.

SERIDION, Seriola.

SERIES DENTIUM, 'a row of teeth' see Sepses.

SERIEUX, Serious.

SERINGUE, Syringe.

SERIOIA, (serpis, gen. serpidos.) Cichorium intybus.

SERIOUS, Serius, (F.) Sérieux, Grave. A term applied to a disease, Dyspathia, Morbus gra'vis, and to a symptom that is attended with danger.

SERIS, (serpis.) Cichorium intybus.

SERMOUNTAIN, Laserpitium album.

SERO, in composition, Serous membrane.

SEROCOLITIS, see Colitis.

SEROCYSTIC, Serocysticus. An epithet for tumours of the female breast, which consist, in the first stage, of one or more membranous cysts, produced perhaps by dilatation of portions of the lactiferous tubes.

SEROËNTERITIS, see Enteritis.

SEROHEPATITIS, see Hepatitis.

SEROLIN, Serolina, (serum, and oleum.) A peculiar fatty matter, found by Boudet, in the blood. According to Dr. Austin Flint, jr., normal faeces contain serolin or ster'corin produced by a transformation of the cholesterol of the bile during the digestive act.

SEROSITE, Serum.

SEROSITY, Serum.

SEROUS, Serosus, (F.) Séreuse, (from serum.) Thin; watery. Relating to the most watery portion of animal fluids, or to membranes that secrete them. See Serum.

SEROUS LAYER, see Tache embryonnaire—s. Membranes, Membranes, serous.

SERPEDO, (serpere, 'to creep,') Psoriasis.

SERPENS, Serpent.

SERPENT, Serpens, Anaïgnis, Ophis, (from serpere, 'to creep,') A snake.

SNAKE BROTH was, at one time, recommended as a restorative.

Many serpents are venomous: and the bites of some fatal. See Poisons, table of.

SERPENT À LUNETTES, 'spectacled snake,' Cobra di Capello—s. à Sonnettes, Crotalus horridus.

SERPENTAIRE NOIRE, Actæa racemosa—s. Rouge, Polygonum bistorta.

SERPENTARIA, (from serpens, gen. serpentis, 'a snake,') 'snake root,' Aristolochia serpentaria—s. Gallorum, Arum draconeulius—s. Hispanica, Scorzonera—s. Minor, Arum maculatum—s. Nigra, Actæa racemosa.

SERPENTARIE BRAZILIENSIS RADIX, Cainaea radix.

SERPENTARIN, see Aristolochia serpentaria.

SERPENTIN, 'winding as a serpent,' see Alembic.

SERPENTINE, (from serpens, 'a serpent,') Ophites.

SERPENTINUS, Ophites.

SERPES, (serpere, 'to creep,') Herpes.

SERPIG'INOUS, (from serpere, 'to creep,') (F.) Serpiginæus. An epithet given to certain affections, which creep, as it were, from one part to another,—'Serpiginous erysipelas,' (F.) Érysipèle serpiginæus.

SERPIGO, gen. Serpi'ginis, (from serpere, 'to creep,') Herpes circinatus, Lichen psoriasis.

SERPILLUM, (from serpere, 'to creep,') Thymus serpyllum.

SERPOLET, Thymus serpyllum.

SERPULLUM, (έρπυλλον.) Thymus serpyllum.

SERPYLELLUM, (έρπυλλον, from έρπειν, serpere, 'to creep,') Thymus serpyllum—s. Citratum, see Thymus serpyllum.

SERRA, Saw—s. Amputatoria, Saw, amputation—s. Versatilis, Trapan.

SERRATED, Serratus, (from serra, 'a saw,') Dentate, Sawshaped.

SERRATULA AMA'RA, dim. of serratus, 'sawshaped,' applied to the leaves owing to their serrated shape. Family, Cynarocephaleæ. Ser. Syst. Syngenesia Polygamia aqualis. A species of Suaevort, recommended in ague.

SERRATULA BEHEN, Centaurea behen.

SERRATUS, (from serra, 'a saw,') Dentate.

SERRATUS, ANTIUS MINOR, Pectoralis minor.

SERRATUS MAG'NUS. So called from its serrated appearance; (from serra, 'a saw,') Serratus ma'jor anti'cus, S. ma'jor, (F.) Costo-basi-scapulaire, Costo-scapulaire (Ch.), Grand dentelé. A very broad (especially anteriorly), thin, flat, irregularly quadrilateral muscle, situate at the sides of the thorax. It is attached, before, to the external surface of the first 8 or 9 ribs, by as many distinct digitations; and, behind, to the spinal edge of the scapula. The superior fibres are almost horizontal; the lower become gradually more and more oblique upwards and backwards. This muscle carries the scapula forwards, and causes it to execute a movement of rotation, which directs its inferior angle forwards, and the anterior upwards. When the shoulder is fixed, it raises the ribs.

SERRATUS MAJOR, Serratus magnus—s. Major anticus, Serratus magnus.

SERRATUS POSTI'CUS INFE'RIOR, (F.) Dorso-lombo-costal, Lombo-costal (Ch.), Petit dentelé postérieur et inférieure. A broader and thinner muscle than the following, but nearly of the same shape. It is situate obliquely at the lower part of the back; and extends from the spinous processes of the last two or three dorsal vertebrae, and the first two or three lumbar, to the inferior margin of the last four false ribs. This muscle depresses the ribs, and thus concurs in expiration. It is an antagonist to the next.

SERRATUS POSTI'CUS SUPE'RIOR, (F.) Cervico-dorso-costal, Dorso-costal, (Ch.), Petit dentelé supérieur. A flat, thin, quadrilateral muscle; situate obliquely at the posterior inferior part of the neck, and the superior part of the back. It passes from the posterior cervical ligament, the spinous process of the last cervical vertebra; from the spinous processes of the first two or three dorsal, to the second, third, fourth, and fifth ribs; into which it is inserted by as many digitations. It raises the ribs, and is, consequently, an inspiratory muscle.

SERRE-ARTÈRE, (serrer, 'to press,' and artère, 'artery,') Presse-artère.

SERRE-COU (F.) (serrer, 'to press,' and cou, 'the neck,') An instrument, invented by Chabert, for compressing the jugular vein, in bleeding from that vessel. It surrounds the neck like a collar, and, by means of a pad, exerts the necessary pressure.

SERRE-FINE (F.), (serrer, 'to press,' and fin, 'fine,') A small spring forceps, invented by M. Vidal. It is formed of a wire of metal, turned in the middle into two spirals, one in front of the other. This constitutes the spring. Each branch describes nearly the letter S; and one extremity forms the spiral, the other lays hold of the parts to be united.

SERRE-NEUD (F.) (serrer, 'to press,' and neud, 'a knot,') This name has been given to various instruments, employed by the surgeon for tightening a ligature passed round a pediculated tumour, or any part which has to be destroyed by ligature slowly and gradually. Thus, there is the serre-neud of Roderic, the contracteur of Herbiniaux, the serre-neud of Desault, &c.

SERRE NEUD DE DESCHAMPS, Presse-artère.

SERTULA CAMPANA, (dim. of serta, 'a garland,') Trifolium melilotus.

SERUM, 'whcy,' (probably from serus, 'late,' because it remains after the butter and cheese have been separated from milk,) see Serum Lactis.

Or'chos, O'ros, Seros'ity. (F.) Sérosité. The most watery portion of animal fluids, exhaled by serous membranes. It is a constituent part of blood, milk, &c. Also, Sperin.

SERUM OF THE BLOOD, Ha'my'dor, Or'chos, Sérum seu P'chor san'guinis, (F.) Sérum du Sang, is the liquid which separates from the blood, when coagulated at rest. It is of a greenish-yellow colour; viscid, slightly coagulable by heat, acids, and alcohol. It is composed of water; chloride of sodium; certain phosphates; and albumen, constantly united to soda, almost in a saponaceous combination.

The fluid which exudes from the albumen of the serum of the blood, when coagulated by heat, is by some called seros'ity.

SERUM LAC'TIS, A'qua Lac'tis; Serum of Milk, Whey, (Prov.) Whig, (F.) Sérum du lait, Petit lait. That part of milk from which the butter and caseous matter have been separated. It is a transparent, citrine-coloured liquid, containing sugar of milk, mucilage, acetic acid, phosphate of lime, and some other saline substances. It is used as a slightly nutritious diluent and refrigerant. The French have magistral formulæ, the basis of which is whey. They are called Petits-laits, or 'wehys.'

SERUM LAC'TIS HOFFMAN'NI, (F.) Petit-lait d'Hoffmann, is a name given to the liquid resulting from treating with boiling water milk which has been evaporated to an almost solid consistence. It is not much used.

REN'NET WHEY is made thus: milk 2 pints; rennet  $\frac{3}{4}$ ss, infused in a little hot water; mix and keep in a gentle heat for some hours, then strain.

SERUM DU SANG, S. of the blood.

SERUM SANGUINIS, Serum of the blood.

SERUM OF SE'ROUS MEMBRANES, Sérum membrana'rum serosa'rum, Wa'ter of Drop'sy, (F.) Sérum des membranes séreuses, Eau des hydro-piques. It resembles the serum of the blood, — especially in cases of hydrocele. The water of hydrothorax and ascites contains much less albumen: — sometimes enough to coagulate on the application of heat: at others, not.

SERVICE, MOUNTAIN, Sorbus aucuparia.

SERVICE TREE, Sorbus domestica.

SERVIETTE EN CARRÉ, 'a napkin in square,' Couvrechef.

SÉSAME, Sesamum orientale.

SES'AMOID, Sesamoï'des, Sesamo'des, Sesamoïdeus, (σάσσην, 'a grain of sesamum,' and είδος, 'resemblance.')

SESAMOID BONES, Os'sa seu Ossic'ula sesamoïdea, are small bones, situate in the substance of tendons, near certain joints. Their number is various. They are commonly more in the male than female. Two are constantly met with beneath the metatarsophalangeal articulations of the great toe. Sometimes, the articulations of other bones of the metatarsus with the phalanges of the toes have them likewise. In the hand, there are two before the metacarpophalangeal joint of the thumb. At times, they are met with in the other metacarpophalangeal articulations. Occasionally, two exist behind the condyles of the femur, in the tendons of the gastrocnemii muscles. A considerable os sesamoideum is also met with in the tendon of the peronæus longus. These bones are commonly round, and flattened only on one surface, which is incrustated with cartilage. Their size is very variable, according to the joints in which they exist. Traces of sesamoid bones are not observed in infants: in them, they are replaced by small, cartilaginous concretions. They are developed by a single point of ossification: and are, like the patella (which is a true sesamoid bone), composed of much cellular substance, covered by a thin layer of compact tissue. The use of these bones is, — to allow the tendon to be inserted into the lever at a greater angle; and thus enable the power to act more advantageously.

Riolan has given the name Ossa sesamoïdea to two bony points sometimes met with; — the one at the outer side of the carotid canal of the temporal bone; and the other at the edge of the cavernous sinus, at the side of the internal carotid artery.

SESAMUM, (σάσσημον, σάσσημη), see Sesamum orientale.

SES'AMUM ORIENTA'LE, S. edu'te seu oleif'erum seu Indicum [?], Ben'nē, Oil'y Grain, (F.) Sésame, Jugcoline. Ord. Bignoniaceæ. The seeds of this African plant are cultivated in Georgia and South Carolina, where the negroes use them with Indian corn as an article of food. They yield a larger proportion of oil than any other vegetable; one hundred weight producing ninety pounds of oil, which is, at least, equal to Florence oil.

Ben'ne oil, O'leum Ses'ami, the oil of the seed, is used in the Southern States as a laxative. The leaves — Sesami folium, (Ph. U. S. 1863) — which are referred to Sesamum orientale and S. Indicum, afford, by infusion, an excellent mucilage.

SESCUN'CIA, Sesquini'cia, Hemio'ion. An ounce and a half. See Sesqui.

SESELI, (σέσσηλι) Laserpitium siler — s. Ægopodium, Ligusticum podagraria — s. Annuum, S. tortuosum — s. Carum, Carum — s. Carvi, Carum — s. Creticum, Tordylium officinale — s. Feniculifolium, Sison ammi — s. Graveolens, Apium graveolens — s. Meum, Æthusa meum — s. Pilans, S. tortuosum — s. Prætenae, Peucedanum silaus — s. des Prés, Peucedanum silaus.

SESELI TORTUOSUM, S. Massilien'se seu annuum seu patens, Enan'thē striat'a rig'ida, Hartwort of Marseilles. The seeds have a warm taste; and a greater degree of pungency than those of Laserpitium siler, which is the Seseli of the Pharmacoepias.

SESELIS, Laserpitium siler.

SESEQUI. This word, joined with any number, weight, measure, &c., signifies one and a half; as sesquigramm, 'a grain and a half.'

SESQUIUNCIA, Sesuncia.

SE'TA EQUINA, 'horsehair.' Hair'worm, Helmin'thus Gor'dii. A kind of worm, found in stagnant water, from 4 to 6 inches long, and twisted into various knots and contortions; colour pale-brown, with dark extremities. It is common in the intestines of the Laplanders; causing the Coll'ica Lappon'ica, in which the gripings are, at times, exceedingly severe.

SE'TA'CEUM, Se'ton, (F.) Séton, (from seta, 'a bristle.')

A long strip of fine linen or cotton twist, passed through the skin and areolar membrane, to keep up an issue; or through suppurating cavities, between the fragments of fractured bones, &c., to fulfil certain indications. The term is, also, applied to the issue so established. The operation is simple. It consists in laying hold of a fold of skin, and passing a seton-needle through it, with the thread attached. Every day a fresh portion of the thread is drawn through the sore. Setons are established in many diseases; — in obstinate ophthalmia, cephalalgia; epilepsy, thoracic and abdominal affections, &c.; but they are not as much used as formerly.

SE'TARIA ROCCELLA, (from seta, 'a bristle,') Lichen roccella.

SE'TFAST, see Furunculus.

SE'TON, Setacem.

SE'TTERWORT, Helleborus foetidus.

SEVADILLA, ([S.] Sebadilla), Veratrum sabadilla.

SEVATIO, (from sevum.) Steatoma.

SEVE, ([Sax.] sæp, [G.] S a ft, 'juice,') Sap.

SEVENBARK, Hydrangea arborescens.

SEVENDAYS' DISEASE, see Trismus.

SEVRAGE, (from [L.] separare, 'to separate,') Weaning.

SEVUM, Se'bum, Se'pum, Ste'ar, A'deps oril'li, Se'rum vervecinum. Suet, mutton suet; Pin-guedo.

SEVUM CETI, (cetus, 'whale,') Cetaceum.

SEVUM PREPARATUM, Se'rum, (Ph. U. S.),—Ovil'li se'rum preparatum, Prepa'rad Su'ct, (F.) Graisse de Mouton, Suif, is formed by cutting suet in pieces; melting over a slow fire, and straining through linen. It is emollient, and is sometimes boiled in milk ( $\frac{3}{4}$ ij to Oj), and is used in diarrhœa and dysentery. Its principal employment is in the formation of plasters.

SEVUM VERVECINUM, Sevum.

SEX, Sex'us, Sex'us. The physical difference between male and female in animals and vegetables;—as the Male sex, Sex'us pot'ior seu fort'ior seu vir'ilis; and the Female sex, Sex'us sequ'ior, S. mul'iebris, Al'ter Sex'us, 'The Sex.'

SEXTANS, (from sextus, 'the sixth;') Sex'ta pars li'bre. The sixth part of a pound.

SHACKLEHAMMED, see Cnemosciosis.

SHAD'DOCK, S. Or'ange. The fruit of Citrus decuma'na, called after the captain of a vessel who first took it to the West Indies from China. It is large; but inferior to the orange in flavour. It keeps, however, longer; and, hence, is useful on long voyages.

SHAGBARK, see Hickory.

SHAKERS, see Convulsionnaire.

SHAKES, Intermittent.

SHAKING, Intermittent, see Rigor.

SHALLOT, Echalotte.

SHAM ABRAHAM, see Abraham man.

SHAMPOO'ING, Cham'pooing, Mass'ing, (F.)

Massage, Massement. A Hindoo process, which consists in pressing the body of the bather in a peculiar manner; cracking the various joints, and employing blows and friction. A variety of this was employed by the ancients in their baths. With the Romans, the operators were called Fricato'res and Tractato'res.

'Kneading' consists in pressing alternately upon a part of the body to arouse the muscles to more energetic action. It is employed at times in dyspepsia.

SHAMROCK, INDIAN, (Ir. Seanrog or shamrog.) Trillium latifolium—s. Water, Menyanthes verna.

SHANKER, Chancre.

SHAN'NONDALE SALINE' SPRINGS. These are within a few miles of Charlestown, Jefferson County, Virginia. They are mildly aperient and diuretic.

SHAPE, Vulva.

SHARON SPRINGS, NEW YORK. These springs, which are situate about 10 or 12 miles south of Canajoharie, N. Y., and 45 miles west of Albany, are much frequented. They contain, according to the analysis of Dr. Chilton, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, sulphohydrate of soda, sulphohydrate of lime, vegetable extractive matter, and free sulphohydric acid gas. Their temperature is 48° Fah.

SHEATH, ([Sax.] reāse.) Vagina.

SHEDDING OF THE TEETH, see Dentition.

SHOTT, (shoot), Plenrodynia.

SHOULDER, ([Sax.] reulþre), Humerus—s. Blade, Scapula—s. Bone, Humerus.

SHOUP, Haunch.

SHOVEL PICKEREL WEED, Unisema deltifolia—s. Pond, Unisema deltifolia.

SHOW, see Parturition.

SHOWCHOO, see Spirit.

SHOWERBATH, see Bath.

SHRUB, (perhaps, from Arabic, sharab, 'syrup, or corr. from syrup.) A compound of spirits, lemonjuice, and sugar.

SHRUB, SWEET, Calycanthus—s. Sweetscented, Calycanthus.

SHRUMPSHOULDERED, see Hump.

SHUD'DERING, Frem'titus, (from [G.] Schaud'ar, Schauer.) (F.) Frémissement, Trem-saïllement. A peculiar sensation, felt either externally or internally; and which seems to be the result of a spasmodic movement of the parts in which it occurs. A slight feeling of cold sometimes accompanies it. It is, at times, the result of a moral cause, and is often the precursor of shivering.

SHULLBANE, Humerus.
SHUMAC, Rhus coriaria.
SIAGANTRITIS, (siagon, αντρον, 'a cavity,' and itis.) Inflammation of the lining membrane of the antrum of Highmore.

SIAGON, (σιαγων,) Maxillary bone.
SIAGO'NAGRA, (siagon, and αγρα, 'a seizure,') Arthritis maxilla'ris. A gouty or rheumatic affection of the joint of the lower jaw.

SIALACHUS, (from sialon,) Salivation.
SIALADENITIS, (sialon, αδην, 'a gland,' and itis.) Inflammation of a salivary gland. At times, improperly written Syaladentitis.

SIAL'AGOGUE, Sialago'gus, Sial'ogogue, Pty-al'agogue, Pty's'naogogue, Sali'veans, Saliva'tum, Salivocinet'icus, Apoplegmat'icansus per os, (F.) Salivant; (sialon, and αγω, 'I drive,') That which provokes the secretion of saliva. Pyrethrum and mercury are sialogogues. Sialogogues may be of two kinds, those which act through the circulation, and those which act immediately on the salivary organs. Mercury belongs to the former, — pyrethrum to the latter class. The chief sialogogues are armoracia, calamus, mezereum, pyrethrum, tabacum, and zingiber.

SIAL'ICA, (from sialon.) Medicines, which affect the salivary glands.

SIALISMUS, (σιαλισμος,) Salivation.
SIALOCHOUS, (σιαλοχος, from sialon, and χωσ, 'to pour,') Salivated.

SIALOCINETICUS, (sialon, and κινω, 'to move,') Sialogogue.

SIALOLITHI, (sialon, and λιθος, 'a stone,') Calculi, salivary.

SIALOLOG'IA, (sialon, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on saliva.

SIALON, (σιalon,) Saliva.

SIALORRHŒA, (sialon, and ρω, 'to flow,') Salivation.

SIALOS, (σιalos,) Saliva.

SIALOS'CHESIS, (sialon, and σχεσις, 'retention,') Retention or suppression of the saliva.

SIALOSYRINGES, (sialon, and συριγξ, 'a pipe,') Salivary fistulae.

SIALOZEMIA, (sialon, and ζημια, 'loss,') Salivation—s. Mercurialis, Salivation, mercurial.

SIAMESE TWINS, see Twins, Siamese.

SIBARE, Phrenitis.

SIB'BENS, Siv'bens, Frambæ'sia Scot'tica. An infectious disease in the mountainous parts of Scotland, viewed to be of the venereal kind. Siv'in, in the Keltic, means raspberry; and it is said that, in this affection, fungi appear like raspberries. From siv'in, the inhabitants have made siv'in, sibben, sibbens, and sivvens. By some, this affection is regarded as a complication of the venereal and itch. In the Orkneys, sibbens means itch.

SIB'ILANT, Sib'ilus, Sib'ilans, (sibilo, 'I hiss, I whistle,') Making a hissing or whistling sound. See Râle sibilant.

SIBILISMUS AURIUM, 'hissing or whistling of the ears,' see Tinnitus aurium.

SIBILUS AURIUM, see Tinnitus aurium.

SICCANT'IA, (siccare, siccatum, 'to dry,') Xeran'tica, (F.) Siccatis. Drying medicines. See Desiccative.

SICLIUM, Sicilium.

SICUA, (σικυα,) Cuppingglass.

SICULA, (dim. of sica, 'a dagger,') Beta, Penis.

SICYEDON, (σικυηδον,) Cauldon.

SICYOS, (σικυος,) Cucumis sativus.

SIDA ABUTILON, Abutilon Avicennæ.

SIDE, PAIN IN THE, Pleurodynia.

SIDERATIO, Syderatio, Sidera'tion, (sidus, gen. sid'eriæ, 'a star,' because the condition was thought to be produced by the influence of the stars.) The state of one struck suddenly, without apparent cause, and as if by the influence of the stars or planets—Plan'et struck. The ancients comprised under this name, different morbid conditions, such as paralysis, apoplexy, and gangrene.

SIDERATIO, Apoplexy, Asphyxia, Phrenitis—s. Ossis, Spina ventosa.

SIDERATION, Astrobolismus, Sideratio.

SIDERION, (σιδηριον, 'an iron tool,') Ferramentum.

SIDERITES, (σιδηριτης, from sideros,) Magnet.

SIDERITIS, Magnet, Teucrum chamæpitys.

SIDEROKRENÆ, (sideros, and κρηνη, 'a spring,') Water, mineral, (chalybeate.)

SIDEROPEGE, (sideros, and πηγη, 'a spring,') Water, mineral (chalybeate.)

SIDEROS, (σιδηρος,) Ferrum.

SIDEROXYLON, (sideros, and ξυλον, 'wood,') Chrysophyllum cainito.

SIDESADDLEPLANT, Sarracenia.

SIDHEE, see Gunjah.

SID'MOUTH, CLIMATE OF. Sidmouth is in Devonshire, England, on the seabeach, at the mouth of the Sid. It is much frequented by invalids, both during the summer and winter. The climate is, however, damp, and subject to sea-fogs.

SIÉGE, (originally from sedes, 'seat,') Anus, nates.

SIELISMUS, (σιελισμος,) Salivation.

SIELON, (σιελον,) Saliva.

SIEVE, ([Sax.] rife, rýfe,) see Cribration—s. Drum, see Cribration.

SIFPLEMENT (F.), ([L.] sibilare, from sifler, 'to whistle,') Whistling.

SIFPLEMENT MODULÉ, Chant des artères, Bruit musical, 'modulated whistling, or music of the arteries,') Musical sound. A kind of sound heard on auscultation, resembling, at times, the humming of certain insects. Various musical sounds, (F.) Bruits musicaux, are described from fancied resemblances:—as Bruit de picotement, resembling the clucking of the hen;—Bruit de jappement, resembling the barking or yelping of a young dog, Bruit de rouet, resembling the noise of a spinning wheel, &c.

The sound is chiefly met with in those labouring under chlorosis.

SIGAULTIAN SECTION, (after Dr. J. R. Sigault, a French physician,) Symphyseotomy.

SIGE, (sign), Taciturnity.

SIGH, ([Sax.] gihan, 'to sigh,') Suspirium.

SIGHT, ([Sax.] gepiht), Vision—s. Askew, Dysopia lateralis—s. False, Metamorphopsia, Pseudoblepsia—s. Feebleness of, Amblyopia.

SIGILLATION, Sigilla'tio, (from sigillum, 'a seal,') The mark of a cicatrix.

SIGILLUM SALAMONIS, (dim. of signum, 'a mark,' 'Solomon's seal,') Convallaria polygonatum—s. Virginittas, Ilymen.

SIGMATOID, Sigmoid.

SIGMOID, Sigmoid'al, Sig'matoid, Sigmoï'des, Sigmoï'des, Sigmoï'deus; (sigma, and idos, 'resemblance,') That which has the form of the Greek Σ, or of C, an old form of the sigma.

SIGMOID CARTILAGES, Semilunar cartilages.

SIGMOID CAVITIES or Fos'sæ of the UL'NA, (F.) Cavités ou Fosses sigmoï'des, are two notches at the upper part of that bone,—one for the reception of the humerus; the other for that of the radius.

SIGMOID FLEXURE of the Co'lon, Flexu'ra sigmoï'des seu ili'aca, S. Roma'num, is a turn the colon takes immediately before its termination in the rectum. See Colon.

SIGMOID FOSSA (of the temporal bone), Fossa sigmoidea.

SIGMOID or SEMILUNAR VALVES, Valvulæ Sigmoï'dæ seu semilunares, Processus Sigmoï'des, (F.) Valvules sigmoï'des ou semilunaires, are three valvular folds, at the commencement of the pulmonary artery and aorta. These valves have the form of a crescent, when applied against the parietes of the vessel. When the blood is sent from the ventricles by their contraction, the valves are applied against the sides of the vessel; but, during the diastole of the ventricle, they are depressed, and prevent the blood from returning to the heart. At the middle of the convexity of each valve is a small, hard, triangular granulum, called Corpusculum seu Globulus Arantii, which completely closes up the passage. It is, also, called Corpusculum Morgagni and G. Scamoidæum, (F.) Globule d'Arantius.

SIGN, Signum, Signon, (F.) Signe. Any present or past circumstance, afforded by the examination of a patient, or of matters concerning him, whence a conclusion may be drawn regarding the nature and seat of his disease. The phenomena which precede the disease are called anæsthetic or commemorative signs;—those which accompany it are termed diagnostic, if they reveal the nature or seat of the disease,—prognostic, when they indicate its probable duration and termination. See Symptom.

SIGNA ASSIDENTIA, see Assidens.

SIGNATURE, Signatu'ra, Signa'tio, (signum, 'a sign,') This term was applied in the Eastern countries, in the middle ages, to mystic characters of good or bad augury, with which it was pretended that every one was marked by the star under which he was born.

SIGNATURES of PLANTS meant certain peculiarities in their external formation or colour, which indicated that they were adapted for particular diseases;—as in the case of the Lungwort, Liverwort, &c.

SIGNE, Nævus—s. Avant-courens, Precursory signs—s. Précurseurs, Precursory signs.

SIMUS, (σῆμος), Camus.

SINA LEVANTICA, Artemisia santonica.

SINAPELÆ'ON, (σιναπελαιον), from sinapis, and λαιον, 'oil,') Oil impregnated with mustard.

SINAPI, (σινάπι) Sinapis.

SINAP'IS, S. nigra, scu cer'vina scu Oliveria'na, Bras'sica ni'gra, Na'pus, Eru'ca, Sina'pē, Sina'pi, Sine'pi, Napi'um, Na'py, Com'mion Black Mustard, (F.) Motilde noire ou grise, Sénevé, Sauvé. Ord. Crucifereæ. Sex. Syst. Tetradynamia Siliquosa. The seeds are inodorous, when entire; but, when bruised, the odour is very pungent; taste bitterish and acrid. They yield their virtues to water, and afford a bland oil by expression. The seeds are stimulant, diuretic, emetic, and rubefacient. They are sometimes recommended to be swallowed whole, in dyspepsia, torpor of the bowels, &c. Externally, they are applied in the form of cataplasm. See Sinapism.

SINAPIS AL'BA, S. folio'sa, Bonan'nia officina'lis, Na'pus Leucosinad'pis, White Mustard, also, is used medicinally. It is somewhat less pungent than the black. The distilled oil—O'leum Sina'pis—is a powerful stimulant and rubefacient. In the pharmacopœias of the United States and London, Sinapis is the seeds of Sinapis nigra and Sinapis alba.

White'head's Es'sence of Mustard consists of oil of turpentine, camphor, and a portion of spirit of Rosemary: to which is added a small quantity of flour of mustard. It is a celebrated embrocation for rheumatism, &c.

White'head's Es'sence of Mustard Pills consist of yellow resin and balsam of tolu enough to make into pills.

Mustard Whey is made by taking bruised mustard seeds,  $\frac{zss}$ , and milk,  $\mathcal{Oj}$ . Boil together until the milk is curdled, and strain.

This whey is used in dropsy.

SINAPIS ARVEN'SIS, S. Timoria'na, Char'lock, Wild Mustard, Gar'lock, Chad'lock, Runnsh, (Sc.) Rnnch'es, Scald'ricks, Skel'lock, Skel'lie. The seeds are sometimes substituted for black mustard.

SINAPISM, Sinapis'mus, (from sinapis.) A cataplasm, of which mustard forms the basis, which is used for exciting redness, and acting as a counterirritant. It is prepared by mixing flour of mustard and vinegar together for the due consistence. See Cataplasmata sinapis.

SIN'CIPUT, gen. Sincip'itis, (from semi, 'half,' and caput, 'head,' or sumum caput, 'top of the head,') Sincip'ital Re'gion, Syn'ciput, Hemicephal'eum. The French use it synonymously with Vertex, Mesocranium, Mesocranium. By some, it is applied to the frontal region or forehead or forehalf of the cranium, Hemicephal'ium, Hemiceph'alum. The parietal bones have been called sincip'ital bones, Ossa sincip'itis, (F.) Oss du sinciput.

SINDON, (σίνδων, 'fine linen,') A small piece of rag, or round pledget, supported by a thread at the middle, and introduced into the opening in the cranium made by the trephine.

SINEPI, (σινηπι) Sinapis.

SINEW, ([Sax.] ſinep.) Tendon.

SINGLETON'S GOLDEN OINTMENT is formed of sulphuret of arsenic (realgar), and lard or spermaceti ointment.

SINGULT'OUS, Lygmo'des, Lygo'des, Lyngo'des, (F.) Singultineux, (from singultus.) Relating to or affected with hicough.

SINGUL'TUS, Lynx, Lyg'mus, Spirismolyg'mus, Clo'nus scu Pnen'sis singul'tus, Hic'cough, Hic'cup, (old E.) Hicket or Hickot, Hicquet, (Prov.) Heuks, Yex, Yux, Yoke, (Sc.) Es'kin, Ees'kin, (F.) Hoguet. A noise made by the sudden and involuntary contraction of the diaphragm, and the simultaneous contraction of the glottis, which arrest the air in the trachea. It is a symptom of many morbid conditions, and especially of gangrene, but occurs, frequently, in persons otherwise in good health. Also, a sob.

SIN'ISTRAD, (sinister, 'to the left hand,') A term used by Dr. Barclay, adverbially, to signify 'towards the sinistral aspect.' See Mesial.

SINISTRAL ASPECT, see Mesial.

SINKING, FATAL, Shock, nervous.

SINUEUX, Sinuosis.

SINUOSITAS, Sinus.

SIN'UOUS, Sinuosus, (F.) Simuex, (simulare, 'to bow, to curve,') An epithet given to certain ulcers, and especially to certain fistule, which are tortuous.

SIN'US, gen. Sinūs, 'a bay or curve,' Sinuositas, Abscou'sio, Enrycho'ria, Reces'sus, (F.) Golfe. Any cavity, the interior of which is more expanded than the entrance. In this sense, anatomists have applied the term to cavities in certain bones of the head and face. It has been, also, applied to certain venous canals, into which a number of vessels empty themselves; such as the sinuses of the dura mater and of the spine; the sinus of the vena porta; uterine sinuses, &c.;—and to the bosom, and the vulva.

In urgery, it means a long, narrow, hollow track, leading from some abscess, diseased bone, &c., (F.) Clapier.

Sinuses of bones form part of the nasal cavities. They are the frontal, sphenoidal, maxillary, &c. The name has also been given, occasionally, to the ethmoid and mastoid cells.

SINUS ACUSTICUS. Auditory canal, internal—s. Ampullaceus, Cavitas elliptica—s. Aortici, Sinuses of Valsalva—s. Arteriosus, S. pulmonalis—s. Basilar, Sinus transversus—s. Cavernosus, Cavernosus sinus—s. Cavernosi uteri, Sinus uterini—s. Cavernosus, Cavernosus sinus—s. Cerebri, Ventricles of the brain—s. Choroidien, S. quartus—s. Circular, of Ridley, Sinus coronarius—s. Circularis, S. coronarius—s. Communis, see Semicircular canals—s. Coronaire du cœur, see Cardiac veins.

onary sinus. A venous canal, which surrounds, in a more or less regular manner, the pituitary fossa and gland, emptying itself into the corresponding cavernous sinus by each of its extremities.

SINUS, CORONARY, Sinus coronarius — s. Coronary of the heart, Sinus coronary, venous.

SINUS CORONARY, VE'NOSUS, Cor'onary sinus of the heart. A name given, on account of its great size, to that portion of the great coronary vein which embraces the left auriculoventricular furrow.

SINUS COXÆ, see Cotyloid.

SINUS DEX'TER COR'DIS, S. vena'rum cava'rum seu veno'sus, Sac'cus vena'rum cava'rum. The right auricle of the heart: — A'trium cordis dextrum. See Auricula.

SINUS DROIT, S. quartus.

SINUSES OF THE DU'RA MA'TER, S. seu Fis'tule seu Cavita'tes seu Ventric'uli seu Tu'buli seu Sinug'ductus seu Receptac'ula Du'rae ma'tris, are formed by a separation of the layers of the dura mater, which acts as a substitute for the outer membrane of veins. Bichat admits only four great sinuses, of which all the others seem to be dependencies; — the two lateral sinuses, the straight sinus, and the longitudinal sinus. To the lateral sinuses belong, — the petrous sinuses, superior and inferior; the transverse sinus; the cavernous sinuses; the coronary sinus, and the occipital sinuses. To the straight sinus belongs the inferior longitudinal. The longitudinal sinus, properly so called, has no sinus under its dependence.

SINUS FALCIFORMIS INFERIOR, S. longitudinalis inferior — s. Falciformis superior, S. longitudinalis superior — s. Fourth, Torenlar Herophili — s. Genæ pituitarius, Antrum of Highmore — s. of the Jugular vein, see Jugular veins — s. Laerymalis, Lachrymal sac — s. Lactiferus, see Lactiferous vessels.

SINUSES OF THE LARYNX, Ventricles of the larynx.

SINUSES, LAT'ERAL, Sinus transvers'i, S. mag'ni, S. latera'les, (F.) Sinus lateraux. Each of these sinuses, distinguished into right and left, begins at the torcular Herophili or confluence of the sinuses, and terminates at the sinus of the jugular vein.

SINUS LATÉRAUX, Sinuses, lateral.

SINUSES, LONGITU'DINAL, S. Longitudina'les. These are two in number. 1. SUPERIOR LONGITU'DINAL SINUS, S. falciformis superior seu triangularis, Sinus medianus, (Ch.) A long, triangular canal; convex above, concave below; which occupies the whole of the upper edge of the falx cerebri. It is broad behind, and much narrower before, where it commences by a cul-de-sac, at the crista galli of the ethmoid bone. It passes along the frontal or coronal crest, sagittal suture, and the vertical groove of the occipital bone. It receives several veins from the dura mater; and all those that are spread over the convex and plain surfaces of the two hemispheres of the brain. It discharges itself into the upper part of the torcular Herophili. 2. INFERIOR LONGITU'DINAL SINUS, S. falciformis inferior, Vena jug'alis cerebri. This is much narrower than the last, and occupies the inferior edge of the falx cerebri, from its anterior third to the tentorium cerebelli, where it terminates, commonly by two branches, in the straight sinus.

SINUS MAGNI, Sinuses, lateral — s. Maxillary, Antrum of Highmore — s. Median, Sinus longitudinal superior — s. Median, see Semicircular canals — s. Mulebris, Vagina.

SINUS, OCCIP'ITAL, Sinus occipita'lis. These sinuses commence at the sides of the foramen magnum ossis occipitis, and ascend — becoming broader and nearer each other — into the substance of the falx cerebelli, where they frequently unite. Each opens into the inferior part of the torcular Herophili. They receive the veins of the falx cerebelli, of the dura mater which lines the fossæ cerebelli, and of the posterior part of the cerebellum. Haller and Süssmering have given them the name of posterior occipital sinuses, to distinguish them from the transverse sinus, which they have called anterior occipital sinus.

SINUS OCCIPITALIS ANTERIOR, Sinus transversus — s. Ophthalmic, see Cavernous sinuses — s. Ovatius, see Crista vestibuli — s. Perpendicularis, S. quartus — s. Pituitary frontis, Frontal sinuses — s. Pocularis, see Ejaculatory ducts — s. Polymorphus, Cavernous sinus — s. Portarius, see Liver — s. Prostate, see Ejaculatory Ducts — s. Pudendi, Vagina — s. Pudoris, Vagina, Vulva — s. Pulmonales, Sinuses of Valsalva.

SINUS PULMONA' LIS, S. sinis'ter cor'dis seu vena'rum pulmona'lium seu arterio'vus, Sac'cus vena'rum pulmona'lium, A'trium cor'dis sinis'trum. The left auricle of the heart. See Auricula.

SINUS OF THE PULMONARY VEINS, Auricle, left. SINUS QUARTUS, S. perpendicularis, Straight sinus, (F.) Sinus choroidien (Ch.), Sinus droit. This sinus — triangular throughout; wide posteriorly; narrower anteriorly; slightly oblique downwards and backwards — passes along the base of the falx cerebri, from the termination of the inferior longitudinal sinus to the torcular Herophili. It receives the inferior longitudinal sinus, the veins of the lateral ventricles or vene Galeni, the superior cerebellous veins, &c.

SINUS RENUM, Pelvis of the kidney — s. Rhomboides, see Ventricles of the brain — s. Rotundus, see Crista vestibuli — s. of Santorini, Bulbus vestibuli, and cavernous body of the vagina — s. of the Septum lucidum, Ventricle, fifth — s. Sinister cordis, S. pulmonalis — s. Sphenoidalis, Cavernous sinus, see Sphenoid bone — s. Straight, S. quartus — s. Superciliaries, Frontal sinuses — s. Terminalis, Circulus venosus — s. Transversi, Sinuses, lateral.

SINUS TRANSVER'SUS, S. occipita'lis anterior, Basilar sinus. This sinus lies transversely at the anterior part of the basilar process of the occipital bone. It forms a communication between the two petrous sinuses, and the cavernous sinus of one side, and those of the other. Its breadth is commonly very great. It is situated between two layers of the dura mater, and presents, internally, a kind of cavernous tissue.

SINUS TRIANGULARIS, S. longitudinalis superior — s. Urogenitalis, Urogenital sinus.

SINUS UTERINI, S. caverno'si Uteri, Uterine sinuses. A name given to cavities, formed by the uterine veins in the substance of the uterine parietes. They are very large during pregnancy.

SINUS UTRICULOSUS, see Semicircular canals — s. des Vaisseaux séminifères, Corpus Highmori.

SINUSES OF VALSALVA, Sinus Valsalva, are three depressions in the aorta — Sinus aortic'i, — and pulmonary artery — Sinus pulmona'les — immediately opposite the semilunar valves. Their use is to leave the edges of the valves free, so that they can be caught by the reflux blood. Where the aorta is about to send off the first of its large branches, at the top of the thorax, it is of great size, and has been called the Large sinus of Valsalva.

SINUS OF THE VENA CAVA, Auricle, right — s. Venarum eavarum, S. dexter cordis — s. Venarum pulmonalium, S. pulmonalis — s. Venosus, S. dexter cordis.

SINUSES, VERTEBRAL, (F.) Sinus vertebraux. Two great venous sinuses, different from those of the dura mater, which extend the whole length of the vertebral canal, from the occipital foramen to the end of the sacrum, behind the bodies of the vertebrae, before the dura mater, and at the sides of the posterior vertebral ligament. At their inner side they communicate with each other by means of branches, which form true transverse sinuses. They are situate at the middle of the body of each vertebra, passing under the posterior vertebral ligament. They receive, at their middle part, the veins that arise in the spongy tissue of the vertebræ. By their external side, the vertebral sinuses communicate with the posterior branches of the vertebral, intercostal, and lumbar veins. At their posterior side they receive the veins, which creep on the prolongation of the dura mater that envelops the marrow.

SINUS VULVÆ, Rima vulvæ.

SIPEERI, Bebeeru.

SIPEERINE, see Bebeeru.

SIPHAC, Peritonium.

SIPHILIS, Syphilis.

SIPHITA, Sannabulism—s. Prava, Choreia.

SIPHO, Siphon—s. Auricularis, Otenthytes—

s. Urinæ, Diabetes.

SIPHON, Sí'pho, (σῖφων, 'a tube.') A bent tube, whose limbs are of unequal length, employed in pharmacy for transferring liquids from one vessel to another. With this view, the shorter limb is plunged into the liquid; and air is sucked from the extremity of the longer limb. The pressure of the atmosphere forces the fluid through the tube; and the flow will continue as long as the extremity of the longer limb is below the level of the fluid in which the shorter limb is immersed.

An exhausting syringe is, at times, attached to the longer extremity of the siphon, by means of which the air can be drawn from it.

SIPHON, PLUNG'ING. An instrument used in pharmacy for obtaining a specimen,—at times, a measured specimen,—of any liquid. With this view, the instrument is immersed into the liquid, and allowed to remain there until full. The opening at the top is then closed with the thumb; and the contents, thus removed, are allowed to flow out by removing the thumb and permitting the entrance of air. It is a form of the pipette.

SIPHONIA CAHUCHU, (from σῖφων, 'a tube,' from the use made of it,) see Caoutchouc—s. Elastic, see Caoutchouc.

SIPHONO'MA, Syphono'ma, (F.) Tumeur tubuleuse, (from σῖφων, 'a tube.') A tumor of fibrous appearance and composed of parallel or intersecting tubes.—(Henle.)

SIPHUNCULUS, (dim. of σῖφων, 'a tube,') Syringe.

SIRA, Orpiment.

SIRENS, Symmeles.

SIRIASIS, (σιριασις, a disease supposed to be produced by Sirius, 'the dog star' or by the sun.) Coup de Soleil, Insolation, Phrenitis—s. Ægyptiaca, Coup de Soleil.

SIRIUM MYRTIFOLIUM, Santalum album.

SIRIUS, (σειρως,) Canicula.

SIROP, Syrop.

SIRUP, Syrup.

SISON AMMI, (σιων,) Æthi'na am'mi, Cnidium tenuifolium, Pimpinella laterifolia, Seseli fœniculifolium. Ord. Umbelliferae. Sec. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. The plant that affords the Am'mi ve'rum of the shops; (F.) Ammi des Boutiques. The seeds—Semen Am'mios cret'ici seu ve'ri—were once used as a carminative.

SISON AMOMUM, (F.) Amome faux, is considered to be excitant and diuretic. It is the field honeywort.

SISON ANISUM, Pimpinella anisum—s. Podagraria, Ligusticum podagraria.

SISTENS, (sistere, 'to still,') Epischeticus.

SISYMBRIUM ALLIARIA, (σισυμβριον,) Alliaria—s. Barbarea, Erysimum barbarea—s. Erucastrum, Brassica eruca—s. Menthastrum, Mentha aquatica.

SISYMBRIUM NASTURTIIUM, Nasturtium aquaticum seu officinale, La'ver odoratum, Cratave' sinna, Cress'si, Cardamin'is fontana seu nasturtium, Watercress, (F.) Cresson de fontaine. Ord. Cruciferae. Sec. Syst. Tetradymania Siliquosa. Watercresses are commonly used in salad. They have obtained a place in the materia medica for their antiscorbatic qualities.

SISYMBRIUM OFFICINALE, Erysimum—s. Parviflorum, S. sophia.

SISYMBRIUM SOPHIA, S. parviflorum, Herb Sophia, Sophia Chirurgorum, Fliz or Fluc-weed, (F.) Sagee des Chirurgiens. It was once reputed to be anthelmintic, and valuable in hysterical affections. It is not used.

Other species of Nasturtium, as N. PALUSTRE, Marsh watercress; and N. AMPHIBIUM, Water-radish, possess similar virtues with Nasturtium officinale.

SISYRINCHIUM BERMUDI'ANUM, (σισυρινχιον,) Blue-eyed Lily, Physic or Scor'vy grass; indigenous; Order, Iridaceae; flowering from June to August. Used as a cathartic by the Thomsionians. A decoction of the root is acrid and cathartic.

SITFAST, see Furunculus.

SITHE, 'sigh,' Suspirium.

SITICULOSUS, (from sitis,) Dipsodes, see Alterative.

SITIENS, (sitis, 'to thirst,') Dipsodes.

SITIS, Thirst—s. Intensa, Polydipsia—s. Morbosa, Polydipsia.

SITKA, MINERAL WATERS OF. See Archangel, New, mineral waters of.

SITOPHOBIA, (σιτος, 'food,' and φοβος, 'dread,') Intense dread of food.

SITOS, (σιτος,) Aliment.

SITUS ALIENUS, 'a foreign position,' Ectopia—s. Anomalus seu perversus intestinorum, Splanchnectopia—s. Mutatus, Ectopia, see Monster—s. Perversus, Ectopia.

SITZBATH, 'a seat bath,' see Bath, half.

SIVUM, (σιον,) S. nodiflorum seu angustifolium seu Berula seu erectum seu incisum, Apium sivum, Helioscadium nodiflorum, Berula angustifolia, Berula, Creeping Waterparsnep, (F.) Berle nodiflore. Ord. Umbelliferae. Sec. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. It is stimulant, and supposed to be diuretic and lithontripctic. It is, sometimes, employed in cutaneous eruptions.

SIVUM ANGUSTIFOLIUM, S. nodiflorum—s. Apium, Apium graveolens—s. Berula, S. nodiflorum—s. Bulbocastanum, Bunium bulbocastanum—s. Carvi, Carum—s. Erectum, S. nodiflorum—s. Graveolens, Apium graveolens—s. Incisum, S. nodiflorum.

SIVUM LATIFOLIUM is the common Waterparsnep of the United States. It is said to be poisonous.

SIVUM LUNA'RE. The root is eaten by the Chepewyans. It has an agreeable nutty flavour. By the Canadians, it is called Quene de Rat. The poisonous roots of Cicuta virosa, C. maculata, and C. bulbifera, according to Sir J. Richardson, are often mistaken for it.

SIVUM NIN'SI. The plant whose root is called Ra'dix Nin'si, Nin'zin, Niud'sin. This root was long supposed to be the same as ginseng, and it possesses similar, though weaker, properties. See Panax schinseng.

SIVUM NODIFLORUM, Sium—s. Silaus, Peucedanum silaus.

SIVUM SIS'ARUM, Skir'ret, (F.) Chervi, Girole, is used as a salad in Europe; and has been thought a useful diet in chest affections.

SIVUM VULGARE, Ligusticum podagraria.

SIVVEN, (Gael.) Rubus idæus.

SIVVENS, Sibbens.

SIZY, (W. Syth, 'glue,') see Corium phlogisticum SKAW, Scall.

SKEELY, (from [G.] scheelen, 'to squint,') Strabismus.

SKELETEUMA, Sceleteuma.

SKELETEUSIS, Mummification, Sceletusis.

SKELETA, (σκελετα,) Emaciation.

SKELETOGRAPHY, Skeletograph'ia, Sceletograph'ia, Sceletograph'ia, (σκελετον, and γραφη, 'a description.') A description of the skeleton.

SKELETOLOGY, Skeletolog'ia, Sceletolog'ia, Sceletolog'ia, (σκελετολογ'ια, (F.) Squelettologie, (σκελετον, and λογος, 'a discourse.') A treatise on the solid parts of the body. This part of anatomy comprehends Osteology, and Synatomy.

SKELETON, Scel'etum, Scel'eton, Cada'ver exsiccatum; (Old Eng. and Prov.) Al'omy, Anat'omy, (Sc.) Spaig, (F.) Squelette, Charpente ossense; (σκελετος, 'dried up,' from σκελλω, 'I dry.') A dried body. The aggregate of the hard parts of the body, or the bones. A skeleton is found in almost all animals, although it may not always be formed in the same manner. In some, as in the crustacea and testacea, it is wholly or partly external, Ex'oskeleton, Derm'oskeleton. In others, as in birds, the mammalia, &c., it is internal, En'doskeleton, Neur'oskeleton, (F.) Endo-squelette. It serves as a support for other organs. On it the general shape of the body and of its various parts is greatly dependent. When the bones are united by their natural ligaments, the skeleton is said to be natural, Scel'etum natura'lē; when articulated by means of wires, artificial or articulated, Scel'etum artificial'e.

SKELETOPE'IA, Scel'etopa'ia, Scel'etopa'ia, (σκελετοπη, and ποιω, 'I make.') The part of practical anatomy which treats of the preparation of bones, and the construction of skeletons. Bones are prepared to exhibit their conformation, structure, chymical composition, mode of development, and changes; the different cavities formed by their union; and to demonstrate their connexions, relations, modes of union, &c.

SKELLIE, Sinapis arvensis, Strabismus.

SKELLOCH, Sinapis arvensis.

SKERLJEVO, Scherlievo.

SKEVISCH, (from Scabious, [?]) Erigeron Philadelphicum.

SKEVISH, FLEABANE, Erigeron Philadelphicum.

SKEWSIGHT, 'oblique sight,' Dysopia lateralis.

SKIN, ([Sax.] scin), Cutis.

SKINBIND, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SKINBOUND DISEASE, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SKIN, BRONZED, see Capsule, renal—s. Scarf, Epidermis.

SKINTIGHT, Induration of the cellular tissue.

SKIOMACHIA, Sciomachy.

SKIRRE, Scirrhus.

SKIRRET, Sium sisarum.

SKIRRIUS, Scirrhus.

SKITTER, (from [Sax.] scetan, 'to throw out,') Diarrhœa.

SKOKE, Phytolacca decandra.

SKOLEMORA FERNAMBUCENSIS, (σκολημη, 'a worm,' and μωρω, 'to stupefy,') Geoffrea vermicifuga.

SKOLIOSIS, Sceliosis.

SKUESIGHT, 'oblique sight,' Dysopia lateralis.

SKULL, (Dan. skul), Cranium.

SKULLCAP, Calva, Calvaria, Scutellaria galericulata—s. Cap, maddog, Scutellaria laterifolia.

SKUNKCABBAGE, (from having a strong and offensive odour like that of the skunk,) Dracontium foetidum.

SKUNKWEED, Dracontium foetidum.

SLAB, Tortioellis.

SLABBERING, Slavering.

SLATE, IRISH, Hibernicus lapis

SLATERS, Onisci aselli.

SLATKAIA TRAVA, see Spirit.

SLAV'ERING, Slav'bering, Slob'bering, Driv'elling, (Old E.) Pict'ling, (from saliva.) Ptyalis-mus in'ers, (F.) Bave. Involuntary flow of saliva, from sluggishness of deglutition, without increased secretion. It is seen in the infant, the aged, and the idiot.

SLEEP, (Sax. slēp), Som'nus, Somp'nus, So'por, Dormit'io, Hyp'nos, (F.) Sommeil. Temporary interruption of our relations with external objects. A repose of the organs of sense, intellectual faculties, and voluntary motion.

The act of quitting this condition is called Awak'ing, (F.) Évigation, Réveil. Sometimes this is progressive and natural; at others, sudden and starting; (F.) Réveil en sursaut,—as in nightmare, affections of the heart, hypochondriasis, &c.

SLEEP, MAGNETIC, Hypno'sis biomagnet'ica, is the sleep induced by the so-called animal magnetism. See Magnetism, animal.

SLEEP, NERVOUS, see Magnetism, animal.

SLEEP, WINTER, Hibernation.

SLEEPLESSNESS, Insomnium.

SLEEPWALKING, Somnambulism.

SLIACS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Sliacs is a favourite bathing-place in Hungary, a few miles from Neusohl. Some of the waters are cold; others, thermal: the former are carbonated chalybeates; the latter are much used in the same cases as thermal springs in general.

SLIDING OF THE FLAP, see Flap.

SLEEVFISH, Sepia.

SLING, ([G.] Schlinge), Mitel'la, Mit'rimum, (F.) Écharpe. A bandage employed to keep the forearm bent on the arm, in cases of injury done to those parts, in fracture of the clavicle, injury of the hands, &c. A handkerchief is often sufficient for this purpose. It must be folded diagonally, and be tied, by the extremities, round the neck. The French surgeons have used many varieties of Écharpes or Slings; as the Grande écharpe, Écharpe moyenne, Petite écharpe, Écharpe de J. L. Petit, &c.

SLIPPERS, Impatiens.

SLIT AND TAIL BANDAGE, Invaginated bandage.

SLOBBERING, Slavering.

SLOE, ([Sax.] sla), Viburnum prunifolium.

SLOETREE, Prunus spinosa.

SLOKE; GREEN, Ulva latissima.

SLOPS, Slop diet. (Slop is, probably, the past participle of slip.) Liquid food, which is largely watery, and contains little that is nutritious.

SLOUGH, ([Sax.] slug), Escar.

SLOVEN WOOD, Artemisia abrotanum.

SLOWS, Milk-sickness.

SLUG, (D. slak), Limax—s. Sea. Biche de Mer.

SLUMBER, ([Sax.] slumpeian, 'to slumber,') Somnolency.

SMALLAGE, Apium graveolens.

SMALLPOX, Variola—s. Modified, Varioloid.

SMALT, ([G.] Schmalte), Protoxide of Cobalt, Smaltum, Sofre, Zaffre, A'zur, Blue Starch. This oxyd has been given in rheumatism, in the dose of ten to twenty grains. A larger quantity excites vomiting.

SMARAG'DUS, (σμαραγδος), (F.) Émeraude. The emerald. It was formerly regarded as a tonic.

SMARTWEED, Polygonum hydropiper, P. punctatum.

SMEARCASE, see Cheese.

SMECTICA, (σμηκτικός, 'cleansing,') Detergents.

SMECTIS, (σμηκτις), Cimolia terra.

SMECTRIS, (σμηκτρις), Cimolia terra.

SMEGMA, gen. Smeig'matis, (σμηγμα, gen. σμηγματος, from σμηγεω, 'to wipe, to cleanse,') Soap, grease, a salve, a liniment. Also, the secretion from the sebaceous follicles of the skin.

SMEGMA ARTICULARE, Synovia—s. Cutaneum, see Sebaceous glands.

SMEGMA PRÆPUTII, Sebum præputiale. The fatty secretion from the sebaceous follicles of the glans penis.

SMEGMATORRHEA, (smegma, and βρω, 'to flow,') Steorrhœa.

SMEGMORRHEA, Steorrhœa.

SMELL, SENSE OF, Olfaction.

SMELLING, Olfaction.

SMELLOME'S OINTMENT FOR THE EYES, Ceratum resinæ.

SMILACINA RACEMOSA, (from smilar.) False Spikenard; indigenous; Ord. Liliaceæ; is said to be alterative, diuretic and diaphoretic.

SMILAX, gen. Smilacis, (σμιλαξ,) Taxus baccata—s. Aspera Chinensis, Smilax China—s. Aspera Peruviana, Smilax sarsaparilla—s. Canellæfolia, S. pseudochina.

SMILAX CHINA, S. aspera Chinensis. Ord. Smilacæ. Ser. Syst. Diœcia Hexandria. The root; China, Ch. orientalis seu poudeiosa seu ve'ra, Sankira, Gauquava, Chi'na root, (F.) Squine, Esquine, Racine de Chine. Formerly much used in cutaneous and venereal affections.

SMILAX GLAUCA; indigenous; has similar virtues to those of Sarsaparilla.

SMILAX HEDEREFOLIA, S. pseudochina—s. India Spinosa, Smilax pseudochina—s. Officinalis, Smilax sarsaparilla.

SMILAX PSEUDOCI'NA, S. Indica spino'sa seu canellæfolia seu hederæfolia, Chi'na occidentalis seu spuria nodo'sa, Americæ or West India China. In scrofulous disorders, the root has been often preferred to the oriental kind. In other cases, it possesses similar virtues.

SMILAX SARSAPARILLA, S. officinalis, Sarsaparilla, Sartaparilla, Smilax aspera Peruviana, Sar'za, Sir'sa, Caricillan'di, P'ca Pecan'ga, Macapatli, Zar'za, Zarzaparilla, (F.) Sabsepareille. The root of this and other species of Smilax, Sarsaparilla, (Ph. U. S.), is inodorous; taste bitterish, feculeaceous, and fibrous; of a dark colour externally; white within. It is possessed of diuretic and demulcent properties, and has been often employed in the sequelæ of syphilis; when, after a mercurial course, nocturnal pains, ulcerations, &c., continue. It has, also, been advised in scrofula, chronic rheumatism, &c.; but its efficacy is, to say the least of it, a matter of doubt. Dose, ℞j to ℞j of the powder:

It is obtained from Honduras, Brazil, and Peru—the varieties being called respectively, Honduras, (F.) Sabsepareille de Honduras; Brazil, (F.) S. de Brésil ou de Portugal, and Peruviana Sarsaparilla, (F.) S. de Pérou ou caraque.

SMILAX TAMNOIDES; indigenous; has similar properties.

SMILE, (σμιλη.) A curved, two-edged bistoury. A knife.

SMILION, (σμιλιον, dim. of smile,) Scalpel.

SMIT, (participle of smite,) Contagion.

SMITTLE, see Contagious.

SMYRNA, (σμύρνα,) Myrrha.

SMYRNISMUS, (from smyrna,) Embalming.

SMYRNIUM OLUSATRUM, Smyrniûm, (from smyrna; the odour of the seeds resembling that of myrrh;) Hipposeli'num, Macero'na, Macedonis'ium, Her'ba Alexandri'na, Gri'elium, Agricoceli'num, Alexan'ders, Alsan'ders. A plant formerly cultivated for culinary purposes. The seeds are bitter and aromatic, and the roots more powerfully bitter. They have been recommended as resolvents, diuretics, emmenagogues, &c.

SNAG. A tooth standing alone or projecting beyond the others.

SNAGGLETEETH, Odontoparallaxis.

SNAGREL, Aristolochia serpentaria.

SNAIL, ([Sax.] nael,) Limax—s. Snell, Cochlea.

SLAKEHEAD, Chelone glabra.

SNAKE, HOODED, Cobra di Capello—s. Spectacled, Cobra di Capello.

SNAPS, Phaseolus.

SNEEZEWORT, Achillea ptarmica, Helenium autumnale.

SNEEZ'ING, (Sax. niesan, [G.] niesen, 'to sneeze,' an example of onomatopœia,) Clo'nus Sternutatio, Sternutatio, Sternutamentum, Sternumentum, Ptar'mus, (Sc.) Nees'ing, (F.) Éternement. A convulsive motion of the expiratory muscles, by which the air is driven rapidly, and rushes sonorously, through the nasal fossæ, carrying with it the mucus and foreign bodies which adhere to the pituitary membrane, and have occasioned the movement.

SNIRRELS, Nares.

SNOB, Nasal mucus.

SNO'RING, Sno're, ([Sax.] snorna.) Rhen'chus, Ren'chus, Rhenx'is, Ron'chus, Rhon'chus, Ster'tor, (Sc.) Row'ing, (F.) Ronflement. Noise made in the posterior part of the mouth and nasal fossæ during the movements of inspiration, particularly in sleep, both when the person is in health, and in disease, as in apoplexy. In certain affections of the chest—in some cases of pulmonary catarrh—a kind of snoring may be distinctly heard by applying the ear or the stethoscope to the chest.

SNOT, Nasal mucus.

SNOTH, Nasal mucus.

SNOOT, ([D.] snuit,) Nasus.

SNOW, (Sax. snaf,) Nix, Chi'on, (F.) Neige. Water in a solid state, which falls from the atmosphere in white flakes. It is used externally as a tonic and disient.

SNOWBALL, Cephalanthus occidentalis.

SNOWBERRY, Symphoricarpos racemosus.

SNOW BLINDNESS, Niphaleps'ia. Blindness produced by the reflection of the solar light from snow. As a preventive, Snow Eyes are used by the Esquimaux. These are made of extremely light wood, with a bridge resting on the nose like spectacles, and a narrow slit for the passage of the light.

SNOWDROP TREE, Chionanthus Virginica.

SNOW EYES, see Snow blindness.

SNUFF, CEPHALIC, ([D.] snuff,) Pulvis asari compositus.

SNUFFLES, ([D.] snuffelen, 'to breathe hard through the nose,' probably an example of onomatopœia.) Grav'elo neonato'rum, Rhinan'gia, Rhinuach'onæ. Breathing hard through the nose, often owing to accumulation of the mucous secretions,—an affection to which infants are liable, and which is relieved by oiling the interior of the nostrils.

SNURLE, Coryza.

SNURLES, Nares.

SOAP, ([Sax.] sape.) Sapo—s. Acid, see sapo.

SOAP BERRIES, Sapindus saponaria.

SOAPWORT. Saponaria.

SOB. Singultus, ([Sax.] jeopjan, 'to grieve,' probably an example of onomatopoeia;) (F.) Sauglot. A spasmodic, sudden, and momentary contraction of the diaphragm, immediately followed by relaxation, by which the little air, that the contraction has caused to enter the chest, is driven out with noise. It is an evidence of corporeal or mental suffering.

SOBBY, Corpulent.

SOBOLES, 'offspring,' Epigone.

SOBRIETAS, Temperance.

SOCIA PAROTIDIS, 'companion of the parotid,' see Parotid.

SOCIETY, Societas, (F.) Société, (socius, 'a companion.') An association for the promotion of some common object.

SOCIETIES, MEDICAL. Associations of medical gentlemen for the promotion of science have been numerous, and productive of valuable results. In the United States, societies exist in many of the States, possessing the power of examining into the qualifications of every one who may be desirous of practising within their particular jurisdiction. In some of the States, however, the qualified and unqualified are permitted to exercise their profession with equal privileges and immunities.

Amongst the medical associations that have issued from time to time useful transactions or publications are the following: IN AMERICA,—The Massachusetts Medical Society; the Physico-medical, and Medical Societies of the State of New York; the College of Physicians and the Pathological Society of Philadelphia, and the American Medical Association. IN EUROPE,—The Association of Fellows and Licentiates of the King's and Queen's College of Physicians of Ireland; the Medico-surgical and Phrenological Societies of Edinburgh; the College of Physicians, the Medicochirurgical, the Medical, the Sydenham, New Sydenham, the Pathological, the Epidemiological, and Obstetrical Societies of London; the Associated Apothecaries and Surgeon Apothecaries of England and Wales, and the Provincial Medical and Surgical Association; the Royal Academy of Surgery, the Royal Society of Medicine, the Société Médicale d'Emulation, the Société de Médecine, the Royal Academy of Medicine, the Société Médicale d'Observation, and the Société de Biologie, of Paris; the Medicochirurgical Academy of Vienna; the Medical Societies of Berlin and Copenhagen, &c., &c. IN ASIA,—The Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta.

Valuable medical essays are likewise contained in the published Transactions of the American Philosophical Society; the Royal Societies of London, Edinburgh, Göttingen, &c.; the Imperial Academy of Sciences of Paris; the Imperial Society of Sciences of St. Petersburg and Vienna; the Royal Academy of Sciences of Turin; the Academia Imperialis Leopoldina Naturæ Curiosum, &c.

SOCORDIA, (socor, gen. socordis, from se, 'separation,' and cor, gen. cordis, 'heart,') 'without intellect,' Hallucination.

SO'DA. (An Arabic word,) (F.) Soude. Protoxide of sodium, is obtained by adding caustic lime to a solution of carbonate of soda. The soda in solution may be obtained by evaporation as hydrate of soda. Its action is like that of potassa; but it is not official.

Soda impura, Bari'la, Bariglia, Baril'lor, So'da Hispanica, Ana'tron, Na'tron, Ana'ton, Na'tron Antiquorum, Kelp, Aphron'trum, Sal alkali'nis sic'nis fossilis, Carbo'nis So'dæ impurus, Subcarbo'nis So'dæim pura, Ana'tron; the mineral alkali is obtained from several sources:—naturally, in Egypt; artificially, from the incineration of marine plants; and from the decomposition of sulphate of soda, &c. It is principally, however, derived from plants growing on the sea-coast;—as the Sal'sola sativa, S. soda, S. tragus, Salicornia herbacea, Salicornia Arabica, &c. The Barilla ashes are from the ashes of the Salicornia Europæa;—the Kelp, Soude de Vareeg, from the Fucus vesiculosus and other varieties;—the Turkey Barilla, Roquette, Centre du Levant, Rochet'ta Alexandrina, from the Mesembryanthemum Cup'ticum;—the Allicant Barilla, Soda Alican'tina seu Alome'nis, from the Mesembryanthemum nodiflorum;—and the Carthage'na Barilla, from the Salicornia and Sal'sola.

Impure subcarbonate of soda, (F.) Soude du commerce, consists of subcarbonate of soda, potash, chloride of sodium, clay and other earthy substances. It is chiefly used for preparing the pure subcarbonate.

SODA, Cardialgia, Cephalalgia, Pyrosis.

SODA ACETA'TA, Sodæ Acet'as, Ac'etate of Soda, Terra folia'ta minera'lia, (F.) Acétute de soude. This salt is used in similar cases with the acetate of potass.

SODA AËRATA, Sodæ carbonas—s. Alonensis, Soda—s. Biborate of Borax—s. Bicarbonate of Sodæ carbonas—s. Bilate of Pieromel—s. Borate of Borax—s. Boraxata, Borax.

SODA, CAR'BO'NATE OF, Sodæ Carbo'nas seu Bicarb'onas, Carbo'nis Na'tricum, So'da Aëra'ta, Carbonate or Bicarbonate of Soda, Carbonate of protoxide of So'dium, (F.) Carbonate de Soude, S. effervescente ou aëré ou crayeuse. (Sodæ subcarb. lbj, Aquæ destill. Oijj. Dissolve the subcarbonate of soda, and pass carbonic acid through the solution; set it aside to crystallize.) Its use is the same as the subcarbonate, than which it is less caustic, and better adapted for effervescing draughts.

SODA CAUS'TICA, Protoxide of So'dium, Caus'tice Soda, (F.) Soude caustique, S. à la Chaux, Soude pure. (The impure subcarbonate, treated by quicklime, and consequently deprived of its carbonic acid.) It may be used as a caustic like the Potassa fusa, and is even preferable to it, as it does not deliquesce and run.

SODA, CHLO'RIDE OF, S. Chlorinat'a, So'dæ Chlo'ridum seu Chloruretum, Chlorinat'ed Soda, Natrum Oxymuriat'icum, Oxymuriate of Soda, (F.) Chlorure de Soude, Chlorure d'oxide de Sodium. This salt is used as a disinfecting agent; both to remove offensive smells in chambers, and to alter the condition of fetid ulcers. See Liquor Sodæ Chlorinatæ.

SODA, CHLORINATED, Soda, chloride of—s. Hispánica, see Soda—s. Hydrochlorate of Soda, muriate of—s. Hypophosphite of, see Calcis hypophosphis.

SODA, HYPOSUL'PHITE OF, Sodæ hypossul'phis, (F.) Hypossulfité de Soude. This salt has been absurdly over extolled in chronic cutaneous, and serofulous affections, and especially in tuberculosis of the lungs. Dose, gr. x and more. It is given in syrup.

SODA IMPURA, see Soda.

SODA, LITHATE OF, Urate of Soda—s. Mephitæ of Soda, subcarbonate of.

SODA, MU'Riate OF, S. muriat'a seu muriat'ica, Al'kali minera'le salit'rum, So'dæ mu'rias, Sul commu'nis seu culina'ris seu font'ium seu gem'mæ seu mari'nus seu vul'nis seu fossilis seu lu'cidum, Mu'ria, Na'tron muriat'um, Na'trum muriat'icum, Hydrochlor'inas Na'tricus, Chloruretum So'dii, So'dii Chlo'ridum, Com'mon salt, Seasalt, Rock salt, Bay-salt, White salt, Quadrichlo'ruret of So'dium, Hydrochlor'ate of protoxide of So'dium, Hydrochlor'ate of Soda, Chlo'ride of So'dium, (F.) Chlorure de Sodium, Sel marin, Sel de Cuisine. In an impure state, this salt is one of the most abundant of natural productions. It is soluble in 3 parts of water, and is tonic, purgative, and anthelmiotic. Externally, stimulant. It is a well-known and useful colinary substance. It has been greatly recommended as an antiperiodic in the dose of  $\mathfrak{ss}$  or  $\mathfrak{ʒi}$ .

SODA, NITRATE OF, Sodæ Nitras seu Azotas, Natron seu Natron nitricum, Nitras seu Nitricus, Alkali minera'le nitratum, Natron Rhomboida'le seu eubicum, Nitras Nitricum, Salp'etra, Nitrate of protoxide of Sodium, Protonitrate of Sodium, Cubic Nitre. Occurs, native, in Peru; but may be made by neutralizing carbonate of soda by nitric acid, evaporating and crystallizing.

Its virtues are similar to those of the nitrate of potassa, for which it has been substituted.

SODA, NITRITE OF. (Made by heating a mixture of nitrate of soda and charcoal in a crucible to dull redness. When the salt has become white, raise the heat to melt it; pour it on a clean flag stone; break it into fragments, and preserve in a stoppered bottle.)

Used in the preparation of the Spiritus Ætheris Nitrosi of the British Pharmacopœia. (1864.)

SODA, OXYMURIATE OF, Soda, chloride of.

SODA, PHOSPHATE OF, S. Phosphorata, Sodæ phosphas, Phosphas Natricum, Natron Orthophosphorates, Sal mirabilè perlatum, Alkali minera'le phosphoratum, Sulphosphate of protoxide of Sodium, Subphosphate of Sodium, Subphosphate of Soda, Tribasic phosphate of Soda, Tasteless purg'ing salt, (F.) Phosphate de Soude, Sel admirable perlè. (Bone burnt to whiteness and powdered, ℥x; Sulphuric acid, ℥vj; Carbonate of soda, q. s. Mix the bone with the acid in a covered vessel, add a gallon of water, and stir. Digest for three days, occasionally adding a little water to that lost by evaporation, and frequently stirring the mixture. Pour in now a gallon of boiling water, and strain through linen, gradually adding more boiling water, until the liquor passes nearly tasteless. Set the strained liquor by, that the dregs may subside; from which pour off the clear solution, and boil down to a gallon. To this solution, poured off from the dregs and heated in an iron vessel, add by degrees the carbonate of soda previously dissolved in hot water, until effervescence ceases, and the phosphoric acid is completely neutralized; then filter the liquor, and set it aside to crystallize. Having removed the crystals, add, if necessary, a small quantity of carbonate of soda to the liquor, so as to render it slightly alkaline; then alternately evaporate and crystallize so long as crystals are produced. Lastly, preserve the crystals in a well stopped bottle.—Ph. U. S.) Cathartic, in the dose of from  $\mathfrak{ss}$  to  $\mathfrak{ʒi}$ .

SODA, PHOSPHATE OF, TRIBASIC, S. Phosphate of.

SODA POWDERS, see Powders, Soda.—s. Springs, see Water, Mineral (gaseous).

SODA, SUBCARBONATE OF, Sodæ Subcarbonas, S. Carbonas (Ph. U. S.), Natron preparatum, Sal Soda, S. alkali, Flos Salis, Sangi'men Vitri, Salt of Soda or of Barrilla, Subcarbonate of protoxide of Sodium, Meph'ite of Soda, (F.) Sous-carbonate de Soude. The impure carbonate, dissolved in water; the solution filtered and crystallized. Soluble in two parts of water at 60°. It is much used as an antacid; and also as a 'deobstruent' in serofulous and other affections. Dose, gr. x to  $\mathfrak{ss}$ .

The dried Subcarbonate of Soda, Sodæ Subcarbonas exsiccata, Sodæ carbonas exsiccata, Carbonas Sodæ siccatum, (F.) Sous-carbonate de Soude dessèché, is employed as an antacid and lithontriptic. Dose, gr. x to xv.

SODA, SUBPHOSPHATE OF, S. phosphate of.

SODA, SULPHATE OF, Sodæ Sulphas, Natron vitriola'tum, Sal catharticus seu mirabilis Glauberi, Alkali minera'le sulphuricum, Natron sulphuricum, Soda vitriola'ta, Sulphas natricus, Apel'rient Salt of Fred'rick, Glauber's Salt, (F.) Sulfate de Soude. (Obtained from the salt that remains after the distillation of muriatic acid; the superabundant acid being saturated with subcarbonate of soda.) It is soluble in three parts of water at 60°; is purgative, and, in small doses, diuretic. Dose,  $\mathfrak{ʒj}$  to  $\mathfrak{ʒx}$ .

The Lymington Glauber's Salts is a Sulphate of Magnesia and Soda, and is obtained from the mother liquor of sea-water, or by dissolving Epsom salt in a solution of Glauber's salt.

SODA, TARTRATE OF, Tartrate of potass and Soda, Tar'tarised Soda, Rochelle' or Seignette's Salt, Soda Tartariza'ta, Sal Expellen'sis seu Seignette'i seu Polychrestum Seignetti, Natron tartarizatum, Tar'tris potassæ et Sodæ, Sodæ et Potassæ Tar'tras (Ph. U. S. 1851), Potassæ et Sodæ tar'tras, (Ph. U. S. 1863), Sodæ potassiatartras, Tar'tras Potassæ et Sodæ, (F.) Tartrate de potasse et de Soude, (Sodæ carb. ℥i; Potass. bitart. in pulv.  $\mathfrak{xxvj}$ , Ag. bullient. ℥v. Dissolve the carbonate in water; and add, gradually, the bitartrate. Filter the solution and crystallize.—Ph. U. S.) It is a gentle cathartic. Dose,  $\mathfrak{ss}$  to  $\mathfrak{ʒj}$ .

SODA, URATE OF, Urate of Soda—s. Valerianate of, Soda valerianas—s. Vitriolata, S. sulphate of.

SODA WATER, Acidulous water, simple.

SODA AND SILVER, HYPOSULPHITE OF, Sodæ et Argenti Hyposulphis.

SODÆ ACETAS, Soda, acetate of—s. Arsenias, Arseniate of soda—s. Azotas, Soda, nitrate of—s. Biboras, Borax—s. Bicarbonas, Soda, carbonate of—s. Boras, Borax—s. Boras alcaliescens, Borax—s. Subcarbonas impura, Soda.

SODÆ SULPHIS, Sulphite of soda, may be made by passing a stream of sulphurous acid gas into a strong solution of carbonate of soda, digesting the solution with sulphur at a gentle heat for several days, evaporating, and crystallizing.

SODÆ VALERIANAS, Valerianate of soda, is admitted into the Pharmacopœia of the United States for 1863. It is chiefly employed for obtaining the other valerianates.

SODÆ ET ARGENTI HYPOSULPHIS, Hyposulphite of soda and silver, (F.) Hyposulphite de Soude et d'Argent. (This salt is formed by pouring a solution of hyposulphite of soda over oxide of silver recently precipitated by potassa, until the oxide is entirely dissolved. Crystals are afforded by evaporation.) A solution of it is used in the same cases as one of the nitrate of silver.

SODÆ ET POTASSÆ TARTRAS, Soda, tartrate of.

SODII AUROTERTHLORIDUM, see Gold—s. Chloridum, Soda, muriate of—s. Chloruretum, Soda, muriate of.

SODII IODIDUM, Iodide of sodium. This salt has been prescribed in the same cases as the iodide of potassium.

SODIUM, Natrium, Natronium, (from soda.) The metallic basis of soda.

SODIUM, CARBONATE OF PROXIDE OF, Sodæ carbonas—s. Chloride of, Soda, muriate of—s. Chlorure de, Soda, muriate of—s. Chlorure d'oxide de, Soda, chloride of—s. Protonitrate of, Soda, nitrate of—s. SODOMA GALLORUM, (Sodom, and Galli, 'the French') Syphilis.

SODOMIA, (from Sodom, 'the sin of Sodom,') Buggery.

SODOMY, Buggery.

SOFTENING, (from [Sax.] soft), Mollities.

SOI-POUR-SOI, 'self for self,' Homœozygy.

SOIE, (originally from [L.] seta, 'a bristle,' [?]), Sericum.

SOIF, (from [L.] sitis), Thirst—s. Excessive, Polydipsia.

SOL, 'the sun,' Gold.

SOLAIRE, Solar.

SOLLUNAR, Sollunaris; (sol, 'the sun,' and luna, 'the moon,') An epithet applied to a fancied influence exerted by the sun and moon on man in a state of health and disease.

SOLA MEN INTESTINORUM, (from solor, 'to comfort,') Pimpinella anisum—s. Scabiosorum, Fumaria.

SOLANOID, Solanoides, (solanum, 'the potato,' and oidos, 'resemblance,') Resembling a potato; potato-like. An epithet applied to a form of cancer, which appears to be intermediate between scirrhous and encephaloid, increasing more rapidly than the former, yet approaching it in firmness.

SOLANUM, (from solor, 'to soothe,' [?]) S. nigrum seu vulgarè seu vulgarum, Common or Green Nightshade, (F.) Morelle à fruit noir. Family, Solanaceæ. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. A narcotic poison. The Haile de Morelle is made, by macerating in oil, for several days, the leaves and fruit of this plant. The oil is anodyne and disientic.

SOLANUM CAROLINENSE, Horse nettle; indigenous. The juice of the berries is said to have been employed successfully in idiopathic tetanus. [?]

SOLANUM DULCAMARA, S. scan'dens seu ligu'osum, Dulcamara, D. flexu'osa, Glyciph'eros, Amar'ra dul'cis, Σπυρακος of Theophrastus, Bittersweet, Woody Nightshade, Bittersweet Nightshade, Bittersweet Vine, Nightshade Vine, Violet bloom, (F.) Douce-omère, Morelle grimpante, Vigne de Judée. The taste of the stalks—Dulcamara (Ph. U. S.)—is bitter, followed by sweetness; hence its name. It has been used in many diseases, as a diuretic and sudorific, especially in chronic rheumatism, humoral asthma, dropsy, various skin diseases, scrofula, and jaundice; but is of doubtful efficacy. Dose, in powder, ℥j to ʒj.

SOLANUM ESCULENTUM, S. tuberosum—s. Fœtidum, Datura stramonium—s. Furiosum, Atropa belladonna—s. Hortense nigrum, Atropa belladonna—s. Humboldtii, S. Lycopersicum—s. Le-thale, Atropa belladonna—s. Lignosum, S. dulcamara.

SOLANUM LYCOPERSICUM; Lycopersicum esculentum, L. p'imum am'oris seu Humboldtii seu pseudolycopersicum, Ma'lun lycopersicum, Love-apple plant. The fruit of this, called Tomato, Tomato or Love-apple, (F.) Pomme d'Amour, is much eaten in the United States; and, with the French, Spaniards, Portuguese, &c., forms an esteemed sauce.

SOLANUM MAGNUM VIRGINIANUM RUBRUM, Phytolacca decandra—s. Maniacum, Atropa belladonna, Datura stramonium—s. Melanocerasum, Atropa belladonna.

SOLANUM MELONGENA, Melon'gena, Egg-plant, Mad-Apple plant; (F.) Aubergine. A native of Asia, Africa, and America. Its oblong, egg-shaped fruit, Pomum Melon'genæ, Ma'lun insid'uum, is prepared in soups and sauces, in those countries, like the tomato.

SOLANUM NIGRUM, Solanum.

SOLANUM NYVEUM. A South African plant, the leaves of which, applied to foul ulcers, cleanse them. The fresh juice of the berries and leaves, made into an ointment with lard or fat, is used by the farmers for the same purpose.

SOLANUM PARMENTERII, S. tuberosum—s. Pseudolycopersicum, S. Lycopersicum—s. Quadrifolium, Paris—s. Racemosum Americanum, Phytolacca decandra.

SOLANUM SANC'TUM; Pal'estine Nightshade. The fruit of this is globular, and is much eaten in the countries where it is a native.

SOLANUM SCANDENS, S. Dulcamara.

SOLANUM TUBEROSUM, S. esculentum seu Parmenterii, Lycopersicum tuberosum, Paris Americanum, Pap'us Americanum, Americanum Tuberosum, Battata Virginiana, Battatas; the Potato, (F.) Pomme de Terre, Parmenière. A native of Peru. A nutritious and wholesome vegetable; one of the most useful, indeed, that exists. One hundred pounds of potatoes afford ten pounds of starch, which is equal to arrow-root, as a nutrient and demulcent. It is called Potato Flour, P. Starch, French Sa'go, Petit Saque, Common Arrow-root, &c.

SOLANUM URENS, Capsicum annuum—s. Vesicarium, Physalis.

SOLANUM VIRGINIANUM; indigenous; is said to resemble Solanum nigrum in its properties.

SOLANUM VULGARE, Solanum.

SOLAR, Solaris, (F.) Solaire, (sol, gen. solis, 'the sun,') Relating to the sun; having rays like the sun.

SOLAR PLEXUS, Plexus solaris, Centrum commun'ne, Cerebrum abdominal'e. A collection of ganglions and filaments, interweaving and anastomosing with each other repeatedly, and belonging to the system of the great sympathetic. This vast plexus, lying on the vertebral column, the aorta, and the pillars of the diaphragm, has a very irregular shape. The ganglions and filaments composing it are soft, reddish, and almost all issue from the semilunar ganglions. It receives, also, branches from the pneumogastrics. It seems to be chiefly intended for the aorta, and accompanies all its branches; furnishing many secondary plexuses, which are called the infradiaphragmatic, cœliacæ, superior mesentericæ, inferior mesentericæ, renal or emulgent, epimericæ, &c.

SOLDANELLA, (from solidare, 'to make firm,') Convolvulus soldanella.

SOLDIER'S WEED, Matico.

SOLE, ([Sax.] fol), Solum, S. pedis, So'lea, (from solum, 'the ground,') Basis cor'poris, Ichnus, Superficies plantaris pedis, Pet'ina, Vestigium, Pe'dion, Pe'za, Pe'lma, Planta, Plantaris superficies pedis, Facies conca'va seu inferior seu Plantum seu Conca'vum seu Pars inferior seu Plant'ies seu Plant'a seu Vo'la pedis, (F.) Plante du Pied. The sole of the foot; the under surface of the foot.

SOLEA, Sole—s. Ipecacuanha, see Ipecacuanha.

SOLEAIRE, Soleus.

SOLEN, Canal, Cradle; see Solenarium, and Vertebral column.

SOLENARIUM, (σωληναριον, from σωλην, 'a canal, a pipe,') An instrument of surgery, representing a kind of gutter, in the cavity of which the penis was placed, like a limb in a cradle. The word Solen itself—σωλην, Canal'is—was used, in antiquity, for a grooved channel or cradle, in which a fractured limb was placed.

SOLENOSTEMMA ARGEL, Cynanchum olea-folium.

SOLEUS, Gastrocnemius infer'nis, Tibio-calcæus (Ch.), (F.) Solaire, (from solea, 'a sole of a shoe,' owing to its shape.) A muscle situated at the posterior part of the leg. It is broad, flat, and almost oval; and is attached, above, to the posterior edge of the fibula, to the oblique line on the posterior surface, and to the inner edge of the tibia. It terminates, below, by a large tendon, which unites to that of the gastrocnemius ex- ternus, to form the tendo Achillis. This muscle extends the foot on the leg, and conversely.

SOLICATIO, (from sol, gen. solis, 'the sun,') Insolation.

SOLID, Solidus, Stereos, (from solum, 'the ground,') A body whose integrant molecules are so united by the force of cohesion, that they will not separate by their own weight. The solids, in the human body, are the bones, cartilages, tendons, muscles, ligaments, arteries, veins, nerves, membranes, skin, &c. The anatomy, or rather study of the solids, is called Stereology, from στερεος, 'solid,' and λογος, 'a discourse.'

SOLIDA'GO, gen. Solidag'inis, (from solidare, 'to make firm,' in allusion to its properties as a vulnerary.) See Solidago virgaurea.

SOLIDAGO RIG'IDA, Rig'id Gold'enrod, Bones'typtic; indigenous; one of the Composite family, flowering in August and September; is astringent and tonic.

SOLIDAGO SARACENICA, S. virgaurea.

SOLIDAGO VIRGAUREA, S. vulg'aris seu Saracenic'a, Vir'ga au'rea, Her'ba do'rea, Con'yza co'ma au'rea, Sym'phytum Petr'eum, Eli'chrysum, Consol'ida Saracenic'a, Gold'en rod, (F.) Verge d'or, Herbe des juifs. The leaves of Solidago odora—SOLIDA'GO (Ph. U. S.)—Fra'grant or Sweet-scented Goldenrod—and the flowers, have been recommended as aperients and tonics, in urinary diseases, and in internal hemorrhage.

SOLIDAGO VULGARIS, S. virgaurea.

SOLIDISM, (from solidus, 'solid,') Patholog'ia solidaris. The doctrine of those physicians who refer all diseases to alterations of the solid parts of the body. To the believers in this doctrine, the appellation Solidists has been given. The solidists think that the solids alone are endowed with vital properties; that they alone can receive the impression of morbid agents, and be the seat of pathological phenomena. Solidism has been the prevalent doctrine. It is scarcely necessary to say, that in all our investigations, the condition of both solids and fluids must be regarded.

SOLIUM, 'a bathing tub,' Baignoire; also, Tænia solium, (from solus, because considered to be found solitary or alone.)

SOLUBILITY, Solubil'itas, (solvere, solutum, 'to dissolve,' and habilis, 'able,') That property of a body by virtue of which it can be dissolved in a menstruum; when it is said to be soluble.

SOLUBLE, Solubil'is. Relaxing. Applied to the bowels when gently relaxed. See Solubility.

SOLUM, Sole—s. Pedis, Metatarsus, Sole.

SOLUTÉ, (from solvere, solutum, 'to dissolve,') Solution.

SOLUTION, Solutio, Ly'sis, (F.) Dis'solution. An operation which consists in dissolving a solid body in a menstruum. Likewise, the product of such operation—Solutum, (F.) Soluté. It means, also, with many, the termination of a disease;—with others, a termination accompanied by critical signs;—and, with others, again, it is synonymous with crisis.

SOLUTIVUS, Laxative.

SOLUTUM, Solution.

SOLVENS, (from solvere, 'to dissolve,') Solvent—s. Minerale, Liqueur arsenicalis.

SOLVENT, Solvens, (F.) Foulant. A medicine supposed to possess the property of dissolving or removing obstructions and extraneous substances. Thus we have solvents of the stone in the bladder, &c. See Dissolventia.

SOLVENT, MINERAL, Liqueur arsenicalis.

SOMA, (σῶμα, gen. σώματος), Body, Corpus.

SOMASCETICS, (soma, and ασκησις, 'exercise,') Gymnastics.

SOMASCÉTIQUE, Gymnastics.

SOMAT'IC or SO'MATIC, (σωματικός), Somat'icus, (F.) Somatique, (from soma.) That which concerns the body;—as somatic death, or death of the body, in contradistinction to molecular death or the death of a part.

SOMATODYM'IA, (soma, and δύω, 'I enter into,') A double monstrosity in which the trunks are united. Of this, there are several varieties:—Vertebrodym'ia, where the union is by the vertebra; Ischiodym'ia, by the ossa ischii; Sternodym'ia, by the sternum; Supraomphalodym'ia, (F.) Sus-omphalodymie, by the superumbilical regions; Sup'ra et in'fra-omphalodymia, by the superior and inferior umbilical regions; and Sterno-omphalodymia, where the union is by both the sternal and the umbilical regions.

SOMATOL'OGY, Somatolog'ia, (soma, and λογος, 'a discourse,') A treatise on the human body. Anatomy.

SOMATOTOMY, (soma, and τεμνειν, 'to cut,') Anatomy.

SOMMEIL, (from [L.] somnus.) Sleep—s. Hiberna, Hibernation.

SOMMET, (from [L.] summus, 'highest,') Vertex.

SOMNAMBULATION, Somnambulism.

SOMNAMBULISM, Somnambula'tio, Hypnotate'sis, Hypnotata'sis, Hypnota'tia, Hypnotad'isis, Hypnot'asis, Rhenab'us, Lunatis'mus, Hypnonerg'ia, Selenoga'n'ia, Nyctobate'sis, Autonyctoba'tia, Selen'asis, Selenias'mus, Somnambulis'mus, Nyctob'asis, Noctambula'tio, Noctambulis'mus, Nyctoba'dia, Nyctoba'tia, Siph'ia, Syph'ia, Pavoni'ria ambulans, Noctisur'gium, Oncirodyn'ia act'iva, Cenospu'dia, Som'novig'il, Somnambula'tion, Steepwalking, (somnus, and ambulare, ambulum, 'to walk,') A condition of the brain which occasions the individual to execute, during sleep, some of those actions that commonly take place when awake. It has been imagined that the somnambulist is guided solely by his subjective sensations; but there are many facts which induce the belief that the external senses are not always entirely suspended. The causes of somnambulism are very obscure; and the principal indication of treatment is,—to arrange the bed-chamber of the somnambulist, that he cannot get out of it during sleep; and to avoid suppers, as well as all bodily and mental excitement.

SOMNAMBULISM, MAGNETIC, MESMERIC, or ARTIFICIAL, Somnambulis'mus artificial'is, Cataph'ora magnet'ica, Somni'p'athy, is that peculiar condition, into which individuals are thrown by the Animal Magnetizer. It occurs only in those of weak nervous temperament; in hysterical females, &c. See Magnetism, animal.

SOMNAMBULISMUS, Somnambulism—s. Artificialis, Somnambulism, magnetic.

SOMNAMBULIST, Somnan'bulus, Hybnot'ates, Hypnot'ates, Noctamb'ulus, Lunati'cus, Noctambulo, Somnan'bulus. A sleep-walker.

SOMNAMBULIS'TIC, Somnan'bulous. Relating or appertaining to somnambulism,—as the 'somnambulis'tic state.'

SOMNAMBULO, Somnambulist.

SOMNAMBULOUS, Somnambulist.

SOMNIA'TIO, (somnium, 'a dream,') The act of dreaming.

SOMNIATIO MORBOSA, Oncironosus—s. m Statu vigili. Hallucination.

SOMNIF'EROUS, Som'nifer, Soporifer, Hypnot'icus, Hypnopus'us, Soporati'cus, Soporif'ic, Soporif'ic'rous, (F.) Hypnotique, Somni'f'ere, Assoupi'ssant, Soporati', Soporif'ere, Soporif'ique; an epithet for a medicine which causes sleep, (from somnus, and fero, 'I carry,')

SOMNIL'OUQUIST, Somniloqu'us, (F.) Somniloque, (from somnus, 'sleep,' and loquor, 'I speak,') One who talks in his sleep.

SOMNILO'QUIUM, Somniloquis'mus, Somnil'ouquism. Talking in the sleep.

SOMNILOQUUS, Somniloquist.

SOMNIUM, (from somnus.) Enypp'niou, Inson'niam, Onci'ros, Onci'ron, Onar, Onciropol'ia, a Dream, (F.) Sveuin, Seeving, Seeeyung, Sve-yung, (F.) Rêve, Songe. A confused assemblage, or accidental and involuntary combination of ideas and images, which present themselves to the mind during sleep. Dr. S. Mitchell, of New York, used the word Somnium to signify the state between sleeping and waking, in which persons perform acts of which they are unconscious.

For 'waking dreams,' see Hallucination.

Those distressing dreams which occur during a state of half sleep, are called, by the French, Rêvasseries.

SOMNOLENCY, Somnolen'tia, Hypnæthe'sis, Hypno'dia, Dormita'tio, Ca'rus Lethar'gus Cataph'ora, Cataph'ora, Co'ma, Somnolent'um, Stun'ber, Heaviness, (F.) Assoupi'ssement; (from somnus.) Sleepiness. Also a state intermediate between sleeping and waking. It is often a symptom of disease.

SOMNOPATHY, (somnus, and πάθος, 'affection,') Somnambulism, magnetic.

SOMNOVIGIL, (somnus, and vigil, 'awake,') Somnambulism.

SOMNUS, Sleep.

SOMP'NUS, Sleep.

SON, Surfur, (from summus, the last;—that which remains last in the sieve.) Also, Sound, (from sonus.)

SON HYDATIQUE, Hydat'ic sound, Hydat'id frem'tus. A sound, heard on percussion over tumours containing hydatids. The sensation experienced by the finger, is like that given by a watch struck on the surface opposite the glass.

SON'CHUS, (σῶχος), S. Olera'ceus, Hiera'cium olera'ceum, Southistle, Sicnethistle, (F.) Laiteron doux. Ord. Cichoraceæ. Most of the species of Sonchus abound with a milky juice, which is very bitter, and said to possess diuretic virtues.

SONCHUS FLORIDANUS, Mulgedium Floridanum. SONDE, Sound, Specillum—s. Cannelée, Director.

SONDE D'ANEL. A very fine stylet of silver, awl-shaped at one end. It is used for probing the lachrymal passages through the punctum lachrymale.

SONDE DE BELLOC. An instrument invented by Belloc for plugging the nasal fossæ, in cases of hemorrhage. It consists of a curved silver canula, open at both ends, and furnished with a button. The instrument is passed through the nares to the throat; and a plug is attached to the button, so that, when the instrument is drawn forwards through the nose, the posterior nostril is stopped.

SONDE BRISÉE (F.), Eyed probe. A long, straight stylet, composed of two parts, which may be screwed to each other; blunt at one end, and furnished at the other with an eye, so that it may be used either as a probe for punctured wounds, or for a seton needle.

SONDE À CONDUCTEUR (F.). A modification of the ordinary catheter;—to facilitate the changing of catheters, without the fear of making false passages. It is a common catheter, open at its beak. The Stylet or Mandrin is one half longer than that of the ordinary catheter. To use the instrument, the stylet is pushed into the cavity of the bladder through the catheter. The latter is then withdrawn by slipping it over the stylet, which is kept in its place, and serves as a guide to a fresh catheter.

SONDE À DARD, (dard, 'a dart,') see Lithotomy (high operation).

SONDE DE LAFOREST. A small, crooked canula, used for probing the nasal duct from below upwards, and for throwing injections into it.

SONDE ou PINCE DE HUNTER. A cylindrical silver canula; of the size of a common catheter; open at both extremities, and containing a wire of iron, one of the ends of which is split into two parts; each being terminated by a small silver scoop, and separating from each other by virtue of their elasticity, when pushed out of the canula, and again approximating when drawn in. It has been used for laying hold of small calculi in the urethra.

SONDE UTÉRINE, Sound, uterine—s. de Valenciennes, Soda.

SONGE, Somnium.

SONITUS AURIUM, 'sound of the ears,' Tinnitus aurium—s. Cardiacus, see Heart, (sounds)—s. Cordis, see Heart, (sounds)—s. Fluidi, HygrecHEMA—s. Hepaticus, HepatecHEMA—s. Intestinalis, EnterecHEMA—s. Stomachicus, GasterreHEMA.

SONOROUS RHONCHUS, Râle sonore.

SONUS, Sound—s. Vocis, Accent.

SOOJA, see Dolichos.

SOOJIE, BASTER'S, a farinaceous article of diet, is said to consist of wheat flour sweetened with sugar.

SOOL, Gastroperiodydia.

SOOT, ([Sax.] rooz, rooz.) Fuligo—s. Tea, see Fuligokali—s. Wart, Cancer, chimneysweepers'.

SOPHIA, (σοφία, 'wisdom,' from its virtues,) Sisybrium sophia—s. Chirurgorum, Sisybrium sophia.

SOPHISTICATIO, (from σοφιστικός, after the manner of the Sophists, 'captious, deceitful,') Falsification.

SOPHO'RA HEPTAPHYL'LA, Anticholerica. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. The root and seeds of this shrub are intensely bitter, and are said to have been found useful in cholera, colic, dysentery, &c.

SOPHORA TINCTORIA, Baptisia seu Podalisia Tinctoria, Indigafera, Wild Indigo, Indigo Weed, Broom, Indigo Broom, Horse-fly Weed, Yellow Broom, Clover Broom, Rat'tle Bush, Yellow Indigo. An American plant, the taste of whose root is unpleasant, subacid, and nauseous—very similar to that of ipecacuanha. In a large dose, the bark of the root acts both as an emetic and cathartic. It has been considered antiseptic and febrifuge, and has been used, in the form of fomentation or cataplasm, in phagedenic and gangrenous ulcers. A liniment, prepared by simmering the cortical part of the root in cream, has been found an efficacious application to sore nipples and to ulcerated breasts.

Baptisia Leucaantha, Tall white false Indigo, an indigenous plant, has the same properties.

SOPHRONISTÆ DENTES, (from σωφρονεω, 'to act wisely,') see Dentition.

SOPHROSTERES DENTES, see Dentition.

SOPHROSYNE, (σωφροσύνη) Temperance.

SOPIENS, (σωπιο, 'to put to sleep,') Paregoric.

SOPIO, Opium.

SOP'OR, Sleep, and especially, a profound sleep, from which the person can be roused with difficulty. It is a symptom in many of the neuroses.

SOPOR CAROTICUS, Carus.

SOPORARIE ARTERIÆ, Carotids.

SOPORATIVUS, (from sopor.) Somniferous.

SOPORIFEROUS, (sopor, and ferre, 'to carry,') Somniferous.

SOPORIFIC, (sopor, and facere, 'to make,') Somniferous.

SOPOROUS, So'porus, (F.) Soporeur, (from sopor.) Sleepy: causing sleep.

SORA, Essera.

SORB TREE, Sorbus domestica.

SORBASTRELLA, Pimpinella saxifraga.

SORBIFA'CIENT, Sorbifaciens, (sorbere, 'to suck in,' and facere, 'to make,') A remedy that promotes absorption.

The following are the chief sorbefacients or modifiers of nutritive action—entropics:—Acida Vegetabilia; Alkalia; Ammoniacum; Brominium; Galbanum; Hydrargyri Præparata; Iodinum; Liquor Calcii chloridi; Spongia usta; Compression, (methodical); Friction; Mental Sorbefacients, (Imagination, Emotions.)

SORBET, Scherbet.

SORBETHUM, Scherbet.

SORBETTUM, Scherbet.

SORBETUM, Scherbet.

SORBIER DES OISELEURS, Sorbus aucuparia.

SORBIN, see Sorbus domestica.

SORBITIO, (sorbere, 'to drink,') Jus.

SORBIT'IO CARNIS seu EX CAR'NE. Broth or soup made of meat.

SORBITIUM, Jus.

SORBUM, see Sorbus domestica.

SORBUS, Cratægus aria, S. domestica—s. Alpina, Cratægus aria.

SORBUS AMERICA'NA, Pyrus America'na, American Mountain Ash. The bark resembles that of the Wild Cherry, and might be used in the same cases.

SORBUS ARIA, Cratægus aria.

SORBUS AUCUPARIA, Mes'pilus, M. aucuparia, Mountain Service, Sorbus of the birdcatchers, Mountain Ash, Quick'en tree, Roun tree, Wit'chen, Witch haz'el, Witchwood. (Sc.) Ro'deu tree, Roun tree, Rouan tree, Rone, (Prov.) Keer, Rontra, (F.) Sorbier des Oiseleurs, Frêne sauvage. Ord. Rosaceæ. The berries—(Sc.) Rodens—of this tree are employed for similar purposes as those of Sorbus domestica.

SORBUS OF THE BIRDCATCHERS, S. Aucuparia.

SORBUS CYDONIA, Pyrus cydonia.

SORBUS DOMESTICA, Sor'bus, Pyrus domestica, Mes'pilus domestica, Oie, Service or Sorb Tree, (F.) Cormier. Family, Rosaceæ. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Trigynia. The fruit of this tree, Sorbium, is astringent, and has been recommended in diarrhoea and dysentery. It is given in the form of rob. A kind of cider is made from it, and also brandy. A saccharine matter extracted from the fruit has been called Sorb'ine.

SORBUS MALUS, Pyrus malus.

SOR'DES, 'filth,' Rhy'pus. A dirty-looking sanies, discharged from ulcers. Also, accumulations of the secretions of the mouth, on the teeth in adynamic fevers more especially, and of foul matters in the stomach—Sordes primærum viarum, Rhypparia. The French call an ulcer, exhibiting such an appearance, sordide. Also dirt of any kind.

SORDICULÆ AURIUM, (dim. of sordes, 'filth,') Cerumen.

SORE, ([Sax.] rap.) Ulcer.

SORE BAY. A disease which Moseley considers to be a true cancer. It is endemic in the Bay of Honduras.

SORE MOUTH, Stomatitis—s. m. Gangrenous, Cancer aquaticus—s. Swanalley, see Phagedenic chancer—s. Throat, Cynanche—s. Throat, Clergyman's, Pharyngitis, follicular—s. Throat, inflammatory, Cynanche tonsillaris—s. Throat, putrid, Cynanche maligna—s. Throat, tubercular, Pharyngitis, follicular—s. Throat, ulcerous, Cynanche maligna.

SORENESS, Parap'isis d'cris tueritu'do. Painful uneasiness or tenderness, local or general, on being touched with a pressure that does not usually excite distressing feeling. Often, a febrile symptom. Also, the tenderness of a wound, ulcer, &c.

SORGHUM, Panicum Italicum—s. Saccharum, see Saccharum.

SOROCCO, Puna.

SOROCHE, Puna.

SORORATIO, (from sorores, 'sisters,' sororia, 'to grow up or swell together,') The period at which the breasts of the female become developed. The act of becoming thus developed. A young maiden, whose mammae begin to show, —sororiant'es nann'iae—was formerly called sororians vir'go.

SORREL, COMMON, ([F.] Suelle, from (Sax.) rup, 'sour,') Rumex acetosus—s. Field, Rumex acetosella—s. French, Rumex scutatus—s. Garden, Rumex scutatus—s. Mountain, Oxalis acetosella, Oxyria reniformis—s. Roman, Rumex scutatus—s. Salt of, Potass, oxalate of—s. Sheep, Rumex acetosella.

SORREL TREE, Andromeda arborea, A. mariana.

SORREL, WELSH, Oxyria reniformis—s. White, Oxalis acetosella—s. Wood, yellow, Oxalis stricta.

SORROCHE, Puna.

SOSTRUM, Sostrum, (σωστρον, from σωζειν, 'to save,' and σωτηρ, 'a preserver,') A reward given to one who saves the life of another. A physician's fee or honorarium, (F.) Honoraire.

SOTERIA DOCTRINA, (σωτηριος, 'preservative,') Medicina.

SOTERIE AQUÆ, Waters, mineral.

SOTERIOLOGY, Soteriolog'ia, (σωτηριος, 'preservative,' and λογος, 'a discourse,') Hygeology.

SOTIREL'LA. Ancient name of a medicine composed of opium and other narcotics, nutmeg, saffron, camphor, and saot. It was used in certain diseases of the teeth.

SOTRUM, (σωτρον,) Sostrum.

SOUBRELANGUE, Ankyloglossia.

SOUBRESAUT DES TENDONS, Subsultus tendinum.

SOUCHERLOON, Bit noden.

SOUCHE DES INDES, Curcuma longa—s. Odorant, Cyperus longus—s. Rond, Cyperus rotundus.

SOUCI (old F.), Souleie, (from [L.] solssequium, like heliotrope, 'a follower of the sun,') Calendula officinalis, Panophobia—s. des Alpes, Arnica montana—s. des Champs, Calendula arvensis—s. Orдинаire, Calendula officinalis.

SOUDE, Soda—s. Acetate de, Soda, acetate of—s. Aéré, Sodæ carbonas—s. Borate de, Borax—s. Borate sursaturé de, Borax—s. Carbonate de, Sodæ carbonas—s. Caustique, Sodæ caustica—s. à la Chanx, Sodæ caustica—s. Chlorure de, Soda, chloride of—s. du Commerce, Soda—s. Crayeuse, Sodæ carbonas—s. Effervescente, Sodæ carbonas—s. Hyposulfite de, Soda, hypsulphite of—s. Phosphate de, Soda, phosphate of—s. et de Potasse, tartrate de, Soda, tartrate of—s. Pure, Sodæ caustica—s. Sousborate de, Borax—s. Sous-carbonate de, Soda, subcarbonate of—s. Sulfate aë, Soda, sulphate of.

SOUFFLE, (from sufflare, (sub, and flare,) 'to blow,') see Murmur, respiratory—s. Amphorique, see Cavernous respiration—s. Bronchique, see Murmur, respiratory—s. Funic, Bellows' sound, funic—s. Métallique, see Cavernous respiration—s. Placentaire, Bruit placentaire—s. Trachéal, see Murmur, respiratory—s. Tubaire, see Murmur, respiratory—s. Utérin, Bruit placentaire—s. Voilé see Cavernous respiration.

SOUFFLE, WHISPERING. A bellows' sound heard over solidified lung and excavations when the patient whispers.

SOUFFRANCE, Suffering.

SOUFRE, Sulphur—s. Carburé, Carbonis sulphuretum—s. Iodure de, Sulphuris iodidum—s. Sublimé, Sulphur sublimatum—s. Végétal, Lycopodium.

SOULLURE ([F.] soüller, salir, ([Sax.] rylan, 'to soil,') Pollution.

SOULA'MEA AMA'RA, Rex amarorum. A shrub of the Moluccas; Order, Polygalaceae; all the parts of which have great bitterness—"horrenda amarities." It is employed by the Malays, and, it is said, with success, in cholera and pleurisy; and as a febrifuge.

SOUND, Specill'um, Stylus, Explorator'rium, Rad'obus, (F.) Sonde. An instrument used by surgeons to discover whether there be a stone in the bladder. It is usually made of highly polished steel, and is shaped like the catheter. The operation is termed sounding.

The French Sonde has, however, a more extensive signification. It means different instruments introduced into cavities of certain organs, or into wounds, fistulas, &c., to probe their condition, or to fulfil some therapeutical indication. See Sonde.

SOUND, So'nus, ([Sax.] Ʒon,) E'chon, Noise, (F.) Son, Bruit. The sensation produced on the auditory nerve by the vibrations of a sonorous body. Sounds may be propagated in three modes. 1. By reciprocal'tion or con'sonance, as when a sounding body, of a definite pitch, produces a musical tone when another body of the same pitch is sounded near it. 2. By res'onance, as when a sounding body is placed in connection with another, one or more of whose parts may be thrown into reciprocal vibration; and 3. By conduc'tion, as where the vibrations are transmitted through fluid, liquid, or solid media.

SOUND, ([L.] sanus, [Sax.] Ʒund,) Healthy.

SOUND, U'TERINE, U'terine bongie, (F.) Sonde utérine. An instrument somewhat similar to a small male catheter, to be introduced into the cavity of the uterus, in the diagnosis of diseases of that viscus. When notched on the stem, it enables the size of the uterine cavity to be appreciated, and becomes a good hysteron'eter, (F.) Hysteron'ètre.

SOUNDING, Searching, see Sound—s. the Chest, see Auscultation.

SOUNDNESS OF MIND, Sanity.

SOWENS, ([Sax.] jeape, 'paste,') Flummery.

SOY, see Dolichos soja.

SOYMIDA FEBRIFUGA, Swietenia febrifuga.

SPA, MIN'ERAL WA'TERS OF. A town seven leagues southeast of Liège, where there are several springs, possessing a sharp acidulous taste; containing much carbonic acid, carbonates of iron, lime, and magnesia; carbonate of soda, and chloride of sodium. The water is much used as a tonic. Season, from the 1st of June to the 15th of October.

SPA WA'TER, ARTIFICI'AL. (Sodæ subcarb., gr. viij; Magnesiæ carbon., ℥j; Limat. ferri., gr. iij; Sodii chlorid., gr. j; Aquæ, Oijj. Impregnate with gas from Marble powder and Sulph. acid., ʒā ℥x.)

SPADEBONE, Scapula.

SPADO, (σπαδων), Castratus, Spasm.

SPADON, (σπαδων), Castratus, Spasm.

SPAGYRIA, Chymistry.

SPAG'YRISTS, (σπαω, 'I separate,' and αγρωω, 'I assemble;' because they reduced compounds into elements, and formed the latter into compounds [?].) A sect of physicians, who pretended to account for the changes that occur in the human body in health and disease, in the same manner as the chymists of their day explained those of the inorganic kingdom. Medic'na Paracelsist'ca seu Spagyrica, was likewise called Hermet'ca, because it was believed that the means of cure adopted in it had been found in the books of Hermes.

SPAIG, Skeleton.

SPANÆMIA, (σπανος, 'poor,' and αίμα, 'blood,') Poverty of the blood. Diminution in the quantity of red corpuscles of the blood,—as where bleeding has been carried beyond certain limits.

SPANÆMIC, Spanæmicum (remedium), Dysplas'ticum, Plastily'icum et erethily'icum, Hæmatoly'icum, Dyscras'icum. Relating to spanæmia.

A medicine whose protracted use is said to impoverish the blood,—as iodine, bromine, &c.

SPANDARAPUM, Sparadrapum.

SPANING, ([G.] spānen, 'to wean,') Weaning — s. Brash, Brash, weaning.

SPANISH FLY, Cantharis — s. Juice, Extractum glycyrrhizæ.

SPANNADRAPUM, Sparadrapum.

SPANAP'OGON, (σπανος, 'rare,' and πρωων, 'beard,') One who has lost his beard, or has a thin beard.

The Greeks called those who had little beard, or who had lost it, Spanopogones.

SPARADRAPA, Sparadrapum.

SPARADRAPIER. The name of a machine for spreading sparadraps. A Plaster machine. It consists of a table, with two raised pieces, movable, and furnished with points, by which the cloth can be stretched, and of a lamina or blade of metal to extend the plaster over it.

SPARADRA'PUM, Sparadrapa, Sparadrapus, Spor'adrap, Tela emplast'ca seu emplast'rica, Spaudrad'pum, Spanadr'icum, (F.) Sparadrap. Any adhesive plaster spread upon linen or paper, (F.) Papier médicamenté. The chief sparadraps are the following:—

SPARADRAPUM ADHESIVUM, Adhesive Plaster. A spread plaster of the Emplast'rum adhesivum. It is also called Strap'ping.

English Courtplaster is a Sparadrap, (F.) Taffetas agglutinatif, T. gommé, Taffetas d'Angleterre, Ser'icum Anglicum, Emplast'rum Anglicum, E. Anglicanum, E. Adhesivum Woodstock'i, E. Icthyocol'te tel'æ indur'um, E. Glutin'osum, Tel'la Ichthyocol'te glutin'osa, Psinglass Plas'ter. (It is made by stretching black silk, and brushing it over with a solution of isinglass ℥i, in proof spirit ℥xij, to which tinc. benzoin. ℥ij, are added. When dry, this is repeated five times; after which two coats are given it of a solution of tereb. Chie ℥iv, in tinc. benz. ℥vj, which render it less liable to crack.)

Lis'ton's P'singlass Plas'ter is made by spreading several coats of strong solution of isinglass in weak spirit over oiled silk, or, still better, over animal membrane previously prepared for the purpose from the peritoneal coat of the cæcum of the ox.

SPARADRAPUM PRO FONTIC'ULIS, Is'sue Plas'ter, is sometimes made of simple diachylon, ℥ij; Burgundy pitch and sarcocolla, each ℥iv; common turpentine, ℥j. Spread upon linen and polished with a moistened calendering glass rubber.

SPARADRAPUM seu TE'LA GALTERI, Defeu'sive Plas'ter, (F.) Toile de Gautier. (This is made of Olive oil, ℔ss; Suet, ℥iv; Wax, ℥x; Litharge, Common turpentine, Thus, and Mastic, ʒā, ℥ij; Bole armenica, Flour, ʒā ℥j. Pour it, while liquid, upon cloth, and spread.) Used for issues and to keep on dressings.

SPARADRA'PUM VESICATO'RUM. Several substances have been introduced as substitutes for blistering plaster, (see Emplastrum Lyttæ), under the names, Tel'la vesicato'ria, Blist'ering Tis'sue, &c., and other forms of which are the Taffetas vésicant ou épispastique, Papier épispastique, ou vésicant, Charta vesicato'ria. They are made of an ethereal or alcoholic extract of cautharides, or of cautharidia, mixed with wax, and spread, in a very fine layer, on silk or paper previously oiled or waxed. They are efficient agents.

SPARADRAPUM VIR'IDÆ, Cornplaster. (This may be made of Yellow wax, ℥ij; Burgundy pitch, ℥xij; Common turpentine, ℥vj; Verdigris, ℥ij; spread on cloth and polished.)

Kennedy's Cornplaster is made of Yellow wax, ℥ij; Venice turpentine, ℥ij; Verdigris, ℥j.

SPARADRAPUS, Sparadrapum.

SPARAGMA, gen. Sparag'niatis, (σπαραγωω, 'to tear,') Laceration.

SPARAGMUS, (σπαραγμος, 'tearing,') Spasmodic SPARAGRASS, Asparagus.

SPARAGUS, Asparagus.

SPARALLIUM, Clyster uteri'nis. An injection into the vagina.

SPAREDIA. A bandage covered with the white of egg.

SPARGANIUM RAMOSUM, (σπαργάνιον.) Great Burreed, (from sparganon, owing to the band-like leaves.) Indigenous; Order, Typhaceæ; flowering in July and August. The roots are substringent, but esculent; yielding a fine fecula, similar to salep. They are sometimes made into a poultice for inflamed mamma.

SPARGANON, Spar'ganum, (σπαργανον, from σπαργω, 'I swathe,' 'I wrap.') 'Swathing clothes;' a kind of bandage, with which children were formerly surrounded. Also, a fascia or band.

SPARGANOSIS, Spargo'sis, (σπαργανωσις, from σπαργω, 'I am full to bursting.') Extreme distension, as of the breasts by milk; Intumescencia lactea mamma'rum, Mastodyn'ia polyg'ala. Sparganosis also means the wrapping of a child in swathing clothes.

SPARGANOSIS PUPERFERARUM, Phlegmatia dolens.

SPARGANUM, Sparganon.

SPARGOSIS, (σπαργωσις.) Sparganosis.

SPARROWGRASS, Asparagus.

SPARSUS, (spargere, sparsum, 'to throw here and there,') Sporadic.

SPARTEIN, see Spartium scoparium.

SPARTIUM JUN'CEUM, (σπαρτον, 'a rope,'—the ancients using its branches or bark to form a rope.) Span'ish broom. Ord. Leguminosæ. A small European shrub, cultivated in the gardens of the United States, on account of its yellow flowers. The seeds are diuretic and tonic, in small doses; emetic and cathartic in large. They have been used in dropsy—10 or 15 grains three times a day.

SPARTIUM SCOPARIUM, Saratham'nis scopar'ina, Cyt'isus scopar'ina, Genis'ta, G. scopar'ia seu hirsut'a, Cytisogenis'ta, Broom, (F.) Genêt à balai. Broom Tops, Spart'ii Cac'mina, Scopar'ius, (Ph. U. S.) have a bitter taste, and are possessed of diuretic properties. They have been used in dropsies. Dose, of the powder, ℞j to ℥j. All the genisteæ have similar virtues. A decoction of genista, along with the cauterization of the pustules under the tongue, has been recommended in hydrophobia. An organic liquid base—Spar'tein—has been separated from it, which has narcotic properties; and a yellow crystallized substance, Scoparin, which is diuretic.

SPARTIUM TINCTORIUM, Genista tinctoria.

SPASIS, (σπασις.) Spasm.

SPASM, Spas'mus, Spas'ma, Spa'sis, Sparag'mus, Synol'cē, Spa'do, Spadon, (F.) Spasme, (σπασμος, from σπασω, 'I draw.') The Greeks gave this name to all kinds of convulsions. It is now usually applied to involuntary muscular contractions; and these, again, have been divided into tonic spasm, Paraton'ia, which consists in permanent rigidity and immobility of the muscles that are the seat of it (see Tetanus); and clonic spasm, which consists in alternate contractions and relaxations (see Convulsion).

Cullen has a class, Spas'mi—the neurospas'mi of Fuchs.

SPASM, CLONIC, Convulsion—s. Cynic, see Canine laugh.

SPASM OF THE GLOTTIS, Asthma thymicum—s. Histrionic, of the Face, see Tic—s. of the Larynx, Asthma thymicum—s. Masticatory, of the Face, Trismus—s. with Rigidity, Tetanus.

SPASM, WRITERS'. Involuntary spasms of the muscles of the thumb, or thumb and index finger, observed, at times, in those who are much accustomed to writing. See Cramp, writers'.

SPASMA, Spasm.

SPASMATIC, see Spasmodicus. Dr. Marshall Hall used the word spasmat'ic for one, in a convulsive disease, in the state of excitement. Spas'matode he employs for one unexcited.

SPASMATICUS, (from σπασμα.) Spasmodicus. SPASMATODES, (σπασματώδης, from σπασμος, and odes.) Spasmodicus.

SPASME, Spasm—s. de la Glotte et du Thorax, Asthma thymicum—s. de la Vessie, Cystospasmus.

SPASMI, see Spasm.

SPASMODES, (σπασμωδης.) Convulsive.

SPASMODIC, Spasmodicus.

SPASMOL'OGY, Spasmodog'ia, (σπασμος, and λογος, 'a treatise.') A treatise on spasm.

SPASMOLYGMUS, (σπασμους, and λυγμος, 'hicough,') Singultus.

SPASMOPH'ILIA, Convulsibil'itas, Convulsibil'ity, (F.) Convulsibilit'e: (σπασμος, and φιλειω, 'I love,') Tendency to convulsions from unusual excitability of the motor nervous system.

SPASMOT'ICUS, Spasmat'icus, Spasmat'odes, Spas'ticus, Spas'tic, Spasmod'ic, Spasmat'ic, Spasmod'ic, (F.) Spasmodique, Spas'tique, (from σπασμος.) Anything relating to spasm. Also, an antispasmodic.

Morbi constrict'o'rii, M. spasmat'ici, &c., are diseases accompanied with spasm.

SPASMUS, (σπασμος.) Convulsion, Spasm—s. Aurium, Oalgia—s. Bronchialis, Asthma—s. Caninus, see Canine laugh—s. Clonicus, Convulsion—f. Cynicus, see Canine laugh—s. Facialis, Tic—s. SPAS'NIA, (same etymon as Spasm.[?]) A term used by Mercurialis to designate the lancinating pain produced, at times, in the chest by violent fits of coughing.

SPASTIC, (σπαστικός.) Spasmodicus, Tonic spasm.

SPASTICUM, Tetanic.

SPATHA, (σπαθη, a broad, flat instrument for stirring liquids, spreading plasters, &c.) Hypaleipton scapula.

SPATHIES'TER, (from σπασω, 'to draw,') A surgical instrument, used by P. Amman for drawing the prepuce over the glans, when too short.

SPATHOMELE, (spatha, and μηλη, 'a probe,') Spatula.

SPATHULA, Scapula, Spatula—s. Fœtida, Iris fœtidissima.

SPATHYEMA FÆTIDA, Dracontium fœtidum. SPATIA INTERLOBULARES, (pl. of spatium, 'a space,') Interlobular fissures.

SPAT'ILE, (σπαρילה, 'human excrement,') A liquid fecal evacuation. Excrement.

SPATIUM ORIS, 'space of the mouth,' Mouth—s. Trigonum, Lyra.

SPATTERDOCK, Nuphar advena.

SPAT'ULA, Spath'ula, (dim. of Spatha.) Spathome'le, Specill'um latum. A flat instrument used for spreading plasters, stirring ointments, holding down the tongue, &c. Also, the spatula.

SPATULA PRO ORE, Glossospatha.

SPAUD, Humerus.

SPAUD, Saliva.

SPAUTBONE, Humerus.

SPAUBONE, Humerus.

SPAYING, (from σπασω, 'to draw;' [L.] spado, 'a castrated person,') see Castration.

SPEARWORT, Ranunculus flammula.

SPEAUTER, Zinc.

SPECIAL, see Specific.

SPEC'IALIST, (F.) Spécialiste, (fron. species,

'a peculiar sort.') One who devotes himself to a speciality; as to diseases of particular parts, as of the eye, ear, chest, &c.

SPECIES, (F.) Espèces, Spécies. Official mixtures of substances cut or bruised. Sometimes used for compound powders, as it always appears to have been formerly. See Pulvis.

From species comes spice, (F.) Épice.

SPECIES AROMATICÆ, Pulvis cinnamomi compositus—s. Diacinnamomi, Pulvis cinnamomi compositus—s. Diacretæ, Pulvis cretæ compos.—s. Diagalapæ, Pulvis jalapæ compositus—s. Diambra sine odoratis, Pulvis cinnamomi compositus—s. Diatragacanthæ frigidæ, Pulvis tragacanthæ compositus—s. Hieræ picræ, Pulvis aloes cum canellâ—s. Lætificantes Rhazis, Pulvis cinnamomi compositus—s. e Scordio cum opio, Pulvis cretæ compositus cum opio—s. e Scordio sine opio, Pulvis cretæ compositus.

SPECIFIC, Spécifiqueus, Nosocrat'ic, (F.) Spécifique (species, 'a peculiar sort,' and facere, 'to make.') A substance to which is attributed the special property of removing some particular disease. Probably no such remedy exists. Mercury in syphilis, and sulphur in the itch, have been regarded as the strongest examples. The word is also used adjectively in the sense of special; as "mercury has a specific or special action on the salivary glands." See Specificity, morbid.

SPECIFIC OF HERRENSCHWAND. A once celebrated German vermifuge. It is said to have consisted of 10 grains of Gamboge, with 20 of Carbonate of Potassa. It is affirmed, that mercury and arsenic have also been found in it.

SPECIFICITÉ MORBIDE, Specificity, morbid.

SPECIFICITY, MORBID, (F.) Spécificité morbide, is the occult quality of a disease which gives occasion to peculiarity in its nature, evolution and treatment. Such is said to be a specific disease.

SPECIFICUM PARACELSI, Potassæ sulphas.

SPECULUM, Me'l'e, Sty'lus, Explorato'rium, (from specio, 'I examine,') Spécul'rium, a Probe, (F.) Stilet, Stylet, Sonde. A surgical instrument, employed for examining wounds, fistulas, and for passing setons, &c. It is usually formed of silver; and is terminated, at one end, by an olive-shaped button. The eyed probe has an aperture at the other extremity.

The perforator of the Trocar is called a Stylet'; as well as the wire or metallic rod of the flexible catheter, which gives it shape and firmness.

SPECILLUM, Everriculum, Hypaleipton, Sound—s. Auricularium, Apyromele—s. Cereum, Bougie—s. Excavatum, Stylus excavatus—s. Latum, Spatula—s. Minus, Melotis—s. Sulcatum, see Grooved.

SPECIOLÉ, Species.

SPECKS OF THE CORNEA, see Caligo.

SPECLARION, (σπεκλαριον.) Specillum.

SPECTACLES, (spectare, 'to behold;') Conspicilla, (Sc.) Breeks, (F.) Besicles, Lunettes ordinaires, Conservees. Glasses to assist the sight; arranged so as to be adapted to both eyes. These glasses are more or less concave or convex, according as the sight is more or less short, (myopic), or long, (presbyopic.) When the glass is adapted to one eye, it is called an Eye-glass, Conspicillum, Perspicillum, Vitrum ocula'r'e.

SPECTRUM, Spectre, (F.) Spectre, (from specio, spectrum, 'to see.') An appearance real or imaginary.

SPECTRUM ANALYSIS, Prismatic analysis. A most delicate method of analysis, which consists in decomposing, by means of a prism, the coloured light given by the salts of metals to the colourless flames of alcohol or coal gas. It is a useful aid to quantitative analysis, as the coloured flame of each metal, even in the minutest quantities, is found to give a well marked and characteristic spectrum. Bunsen estimated, that the amount of sodium which admitted of detection by prismatic analysis was the 195,000,000th part of a grain; of lithium the 70,000,000th; of potassium, the 60,000th; of barium the same; of strontian, the 1,000,000th; and of calcium the 100,000,000th of a grain. See Poisons.

SPECTRUM, OCULAR, Spectrum ocula'r'e, (F.) Spectre oculaire. A disturbance of vision, which consists in the appearance of objects after the objects themselves have been withdrawn. See Colours, accidental.

SPECTRUM, SOLAR, Spectrum Sold'a'r'e, (F.) Spectre solaire. The coloured image produced by white light, which has been decomposed by passing through a prism. It consists of seven different coloured fringes, arranged in the following order—red, orange, yellow, blue, green, indigo, and violet. Three of these—blue, red, and yellow—are simple; the others being mixtures of them.

SPECULARIS LAPIS. A transparent mineral, but of what nature is not clear, which was formerly employed in epilepsy. In old times it was used for glass.

SPECULUM, Catop'ter, Catop'tron, Diop'tron. (In Latin, 'a mirror'; from specio, 'to behold.') In surgery, it means different instruments for dilating cavities, and facilitating their examination. See Dilator. There are various instruments of this kind,—the S. Ani, S. Auris, S. Vaginae, (Colpeurynter, Elytreurynter,) S. Matr'icis, S. Oculi, S. Oris ([F.] Bâillon, Pas d'Âne,) S. Gutturis, S. Vesicæ.

SPELTRUM, Zinnum.

SPERAGE, Asparagus.

SPERAGUS, Asparagus.

SERM, gen. Sperm'atis, Sperma, (σπερμα, gen. σπερματος, from σπειρω, 'I sow.') Spermatic fluid or liquor, Seminal fluid, Seed, Semen, S. viri'l'e seu masculin'um seu genita'l'e, Semin'ium, Genita'l'e, Medull'e, Eos, San'guis, S'e'rum, Hu'mor genita'l'is seu semin'al'is seu venereus, Uri'na genita'l'is, Genit'ura, Sperm'a viri'l'e, Sperm'ium, Th'o'r'us, Lac ma'r'is, Lagne'a, Lagn'a, Lagueu'ma, Ger'men, Vita'l'e vi'rus, Male's milk, Prop'agatory or genital' liquor, Vit'al or quick'ening ven'ous, (F.) Semen, Fluide séminal. A whitish, viscid fluid, of a peculiar smell, secreted by the testicles, whence it is carried by the vasa deferentia to the vesiculæ seminales, to be thrown into the vagina, during coition, through the ejaculatory ducts and the urethra. It is the fecundating fluid, and must come into actual contact with the germ of the female. The Aura sem'inis, Gonorrh'ea, is incapable of effecting fecundation. The semen, at the time of emission, is composed of two different fluids; the one liquid and transparent, which is considered to be the secretion of the prostate, — the other, white, and as thick as mucilage; the product of the testicular secretion. The sperm contains, according to Vauquelin, 900 parts of water, 50 of animal mucilage, 10 of soda, and 30 of calcareous phosphate. The animal matter is peculiar, and by some termed spermatin.

Microscopic observations show that it contains spermatozoa, or more properly spermatozooids; for their animalcular nature is not demonstrated. They are produced in cells — spermeells — and have probably no more title to be considered animalcular, than the cilia of the ciliated epithelium. By careful examination, other minute, round, granulated bodies may almost always be detected, which are in all cases much less numerous than the spermatozoa. These bodies are the seminal granules, granula seminalia. Pure sperm, in its most perfect state, consists principally of spermatozooids and seminal granules; both of which are enveloped in a small quantity of fluid, U'quor seminalis, spermatic liquor.

It has been imagined, but erroneously, that during coition there is a secretion of female sperm — Semen mul'ebre, Thelygonum. The increased secretion that takes place is chiefly from the glands of Duverney.

Sperm also means spermaceti.

SPERM CELL, see Sperm.

SPERMA, Sperm — s. Mercurii, Hydrargyrus acetatus.

SPERMA RANA'RUM, Sperni'ola seu Sperni'olum seu Sperni'ola seu Sperni'olum rana'rum. Frog's spawn. Once used in medicine.

SPERMACE'II, (sperma, and cetus, 'a whale,') Cetaceum — s. Whale, see Cetaceum.

SPERMACRASIA, (sperma, a, priv. and κρasis, 'mixture,') Spermatorrhœa.

SPERMATACRASIA, Spermatorrhœa.

SPERMATACRATIA, (sperma, a, priv. κρatos, 'power,') Spermatorrhœa.

SPERMAT'IC, Spermat'icus, Semina'lis, Sem'inal, (F.) Spermatique, (σπερματικός, from sperma.) That which relates to the sperm. A name given to different parts connected with the organs of generation.

SPERMATIC ARTERIES, Arte'rie Spermat'ice seu preparan'tes, (F.) Artères testiculaires, A. de l'ovaire (Ch.), are two in number — one on each side — and arise from the sides of the aorta, sometimes from the renal arteries. They descend, almost vertically, at the sides of the vertebral column, and are distributed differently in the two sexes. In man, the spermatic artery, situate at the side of the vas deferens, issues by the abdominal ring; gives numerous ramifications to the spermatic cord, and divides into fasciculi of branches, one of which goes to the testicle, — the other to the epididymis. In the female, the spermatic artery, ova'rian or uteroovarian artery, dips into the pelvis, and passes to the ovary, Fallopian tube, and round ligament.

SPERMATIC CORD or CHORD, Testic'ular Cord, Funic'ulus Spermat'icus, Spermatochord'a, (F.) Cordon spermatique ou testiculaire. The vascular and nervous chord, by which the testicle is suspended. It is composed of the spermatic artery and veins; of other small vessels; of lymphatics; of nervous filaments from the spermatic plexus, and from the genito-crural branch of the lumbo-abdominal plexus; of the vas deferens, and, very often, of a fibrocellular cord, which unites the peritoneum to the upper part of the tunica vaginalis, and in which encysted hydrocele of the spermatic cord occurs. All these parts are united together by a very lax, areolar tissue, and surrounded by coats, which, reckoning from without, are: — 1. The skin and areolar membrane.

2. A fibrocellular membrane, formed by the fascia superficialis. 3. A very thin layer, formed by fibres of the cremaster muscle, united archwise before, and often also behind, the cord. 4. The proper sheath of the spermatic vessels, or the tubular prolongation furnished by the fascia transversalis to the chord, on a level with the superior orifice of the inguinal canal. The spermatic cord is commonly shorter on the right side than on the left; and of a different size in different individuals. It ascends almost vertically, from the superior margin of the testicle as far as the lower orifice of the inguinal canal; passes through this canal and enters the abdomen, crossing the epigastric artery. Here it forms an evident elbow, directing its course backward. At this part, also, the organs composing it separate from each other: — the vas deferens descending into the pelvis to pass behind the bladder; — the bloodvessels and lymphatics ascending towards the lumbar region, &c.

SPERMATIC FILAMENTS, Spermatozoa — s. Fluid, Sperm.

SPERMATIC GANG'LION. A large ganglion, formed by branches from the hypogastric ganglion, and from the spermatic plexus. It supplies the fundus uteri. Besides these ganglia, Dr. Robt. Lee describes vesical and vag'inal ganglia, and anterior and posterior subperitoneal ganglia and plexuses, which communicate with the preceding, and constitute an extensive nervous rete over the entire uterus.

SPERMATIC LIQUOR, Liqueur seminis, see Sperm.

SPERMATIC PAS'SAGES or WAYS, Vitæ Spermat'ice, are the canals concerned in the excretion of semen. See Testicle.

SPERMATIC PLEX'USES of nerves, Plex'us testicula'res, are two in number, and are furnished by the renal plexuses. Their filaments, called Spermatic nerves, follow the arteries of the same name to the testicle in man; and to the ovary and Fallopian tube in the female, — ova'rian nerves. They cannot be traced into the substance of these organs.

SPERMATIC VEINS — ve'væ spermat'ice — are two or three in number on each side. They accompany the spermatic artery, and open — those of the right, into the vena cava inferior; those of the left, into the corresponding renal vein. These veins form, above the testicle, a kind of venous network, called, by some, the Spermat'ic plex'us and corpus varicosum; and another plexus before the psoas muscles, called the Corpus pampini-forme.

SPERMATIN, see Sperm.

SPERMATIQUE, Spermatic.

SPERMATIS'MUS, Emis'sio seminalis, Spermob'olè, (from sperma.) The emission of sperm.

Spermatism or Animal'culism is the doctrine which maintains that the embryo is produced by the so called spermatic animalcules.

SPERMATIST, Animalculist.

SPERMATOCE'LE, Hernia seminalis scrot'i, Oscheoce'le seminalis, Gonocel'e, (sperma, and κηλη, 'a tumour,') The ancients gave this name to certain swellings of the testicle which were regarded as produced by an accumulation of sperm in the organ. Also, varicocele.

SPERMATOCHORDA, (sperma, and chorda.) Spermatic chord.

SPERMATOCLEMMMA, (sperma, and κλεπτω, 'to steal,') see Pollution.

SPERMATOCLEPSIS, see Pollution.

SPERMATOCYSTIDES, (sperma, and κυστις, 'a bladder,') Vesiculæ seminales.

SPERMATOCYSTIT'IS, (spermatocystis, and itis.) Inflammation of a vesicula seminalis.

SPERMATOCYSTIDORRHAG'IA, Caulorrhag'ia ejaculato'ria, Hæmat'uria ejaculato'ria seu seminalis, (spermatocystides, and ῥαγη, 'a 'breaking forth.') A discharge of blood from the urethra in the act of ejaculation of sperm.

SPERMATODES, (σπερματώδης, from sperma, and odes), Gonoides.

SPERMATOGON'IA, Spermogonia, (Spermatopœia, Spermatopœsis, Spermi'um, Spermi'um, and γεννω, 'to beget.')

The preparation or secretion of sperm.

SPERMATOID, (sperma, and ειδος, 'resemblance.')

Gonoides.

SPERMATOLEPSIS, (sperma, and ληψις, 'a taking away.')

See Pollution.

SPERMATOLIPSIS, See Pollution.

SPERMATOL'OGY, Spermatology, (sperma, and λογος, 'a discourse.')

A treatise on sperm.

SPERMATOPH'OROUS, Seminif'erous, (sperma, and φωσ, 'I carry.')

Sperm bearing. The cells or granules in the sperm have been so called.

SPERMATOPŒIA, (sperma, and ποιω, 'to make.')

Spermatogonia.

SPERMATOŒESIS, Spermatogonia.

SPERMATOŒETIC, Spermatopœus.

SPERMATOPŒ'US, Spermatopœiticus, Spermatopœit'ic, Gonopœ'us, Gonopœit'icus, Gonopœit'icus.

Food to which has been attributed the property of augmenting the secretion of semen; and, consequently, of exciting the venereal act.

Very succulent and very nutritious substances have been so considered.

SPERMATORRHŒ'A, Spermorrhœa, (Spermaera'sia, Spermatopœ'isia, Spermatocra'sia, Gonacra'sia, Gonacra'tia, Gonozel'mia, Spermatocra'tia, Gonorrhœa ve'ra, (F.) Flux de Sperme, Pollutions, Pertes séminales, (sperma, and ρω, 'I flow.')

An emission of sperm, without copulation. See Gonorrhœa, and Pollution.

SPERMATORRHŒA ATONICA, Gonorrhœa laxorum.

SPERMATOS'CHESIS, (sperma, and σχέσις, 'retention.')

Retention or suppression of the spermatic secretion.

SPERMATOZEMIA, (sperma, and ζημια, 'loss.')

Spermatorrhœa.

SPERMATOZO'A, pl. of Spermatozo'on, Zoosperm'ata, Spermozo'a, (sperma, and ζωον, 'animal.')

Animal'cula semin'al'ia seu sperm'al'ia, Fil'ia sperm'al'ia, Corpus'cula sem'in'ia, Vermic'uli sperm'al'ici, Spermatozo'id's, Protozo'id's, Sem'in'al'ia or sperm'al'ic fill'aments, Sperm'al'ic or sem'in'al' animal'cules, (F.) Zoö'spermes, Spermatozoöit'eres.

Reputed animalcules seen in the sperm; by physiologists considered to be the formative agents furnished by the male in generation. See Sperm.

SPERMATOZOAIRES, Spermatozoa.

SPERMATOZOIDS, (sperma, ζωον, 'animal,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.')

Spermatozoa.

SPERMIDUCT, (sperma, and ductus, 'a duct.')

Diferens, vas.

SPERMIOIUM RANARUM, Sperma ranarum.

SPERMIIUM, Sperm, Spermatogonia.

SPERMIOBOL'E, (sperma, and βαλλω, 'to throw.')

See Ejaculation, Spasmodism.

SPERMOEDIA CLAVUS, (sperma, and οίδησ, 'to swell.')

The diseased seeds. Ergot.

SPERMOGONIA, Spermatogonia.

SPERM'OLITH, Spermolithus, (sperma, and λιθος, 'a stone.')

A calculus in the spermatic duct or vesicula seminalis.

SPERMONEURALGIA, (sperma, and neuralgia.)

Neuralgia of the spermatic cord.

SPERMOPHLEBECTASIA, (sperma, φλεψ, 'a vein,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.')

A varicose condition of the spermatic veins.

SPERMORRHŒA, Spermorrhœa.

SPERMIOZOA, (sperma, and ζωον, 'animal,')

Spermatozoa.

SPERNIOIUM RANARUM, Sperma ranarum.

SPEWING, (Sax. spīpan; (Gr.) πτωω; (L.) ptuo, 'to spit.')

Vomiting.

SPHAC'ELATED, Sphacelatus, (F.) Sphacelë.

Struck with sphacelus.

SPHACELATION, (from sphacelus), Mortification.

SPHACÈLE, Sphacelus—s. de la Bouche, Cancercr aquaticus.

SPHACELIA SEGETUM, (from sphacelus), see Ergot.

SPHACELISMUS, Sphacelus—s. Cerebri, Phrenitis.

SPHAC'ELUS, (σφάκελος,) Gangræ'na Sphacelus, Sphacel'ismus, Cold mortification, (F.) Sphacèle, Gangrène froide, (from σφαζω, 'I slay.')

This word is used, by some, synonymously with gangrene; by others, with gangrene, when it occupies the whole substance of a limb.

Commonly, it means the disorganized portion, in cases of mortification, anthraconecro'sis, which must be thrown off,—or is, in other words, totally dead.

The foul disorganized portion of an ulcer—called the slough—must be considered a kind of sphacelus.

Sphacelus was formerly used to denote excessive pain; and also agitation from excessive pain, or violent emotion.

SPHACELUS CEREALIS, Ergotism—s. Nosocomialis, Hospital gangrene.

SPHÆRA, (σφαῖρα, 'a ball.')

Pila marina—s. Thalassia, Pila marina.

SPHÆRANTHUS INDICUS, (sphæra, and ανθος, 'a flower.')

Adaca.

SPHÆRIA SINEN'SIS, (σφαῖρα, 'a globe,')

Hia Tsao Tom Tchom, Hia Tsao Tong Tchong, Totsu Kaso, Sand'ner plant wint'ner worm, Veg'table cat'erpillar.

A fungus which projects from the neck of a lepidopterous insect. It is highly esteemed by the Chinese as a tonic, like ginseng.

SPHÆRIDION, (dim. of sphæra), Globule, Pilula.

SPHÆRION, Globule, Pilula.

SPHÆROCEPHALA ELATIOR, (sphæra, and κεφαλη, 'head.')

Echinops.

SPHÆROCOCCUS CRISPUS, (sphæra, and κοκκος, 'a berry,')

Fucus crispus—s. Helminthochortus, Corallina Corsicana—s. Lichenoides, Fucus amylicoccus.

SPHÆRULA GALENI, (dim. of sphæra), Pilula.

SPHÆRULÆ SANGUINIS, Globules of the blood.

SPHAGE, (σφαγή,) Throat.

SPHENDONE, (σφενδονη, 'a sling,')

Funda.

SPHENO, in the composition of anatomical terms, the sphenoid bone.

SPHENOCEPHALIA, (σφην, 'a wedge,' and κεφαλη, 'head.')

Monstrosity, in which the head is wedge-shaped, owing to the projection of the anterior fontanel region.

SPHENO-ÉPINEUSE, 'sphenospinous,' (Artère), Meningeal artery, middle.

SPHENO'OID, (σφηνοειδής,) Sphenoid'es, Sphenoid'es, Sphenoid'es, Sphenoid'alis, (F.) Sphénoïde, (σφην, 'a wedge,' and οειδής, 'resemblance.')

Wedge-shaped. Hence,

SPHENOID BONE, Sphenoïdes os, Os basilairë seu cuneifor'më seu cu'neo comparat'um seu sphenoid'alë seu multifor'më seu azygos seu papilla'rë seu polyomor'phon seu paxilla'rë seu basilla'rë seu alefor'më seu sphécoidëum seu respirat'or'më seu inconjugat'um seu pterygoïdeum seu ala'tum seu colat'or'ri, Pter'ygoid bone.

An azygos bone, situate on the median line, and at the base of the cranium.

It articulates with all the other bones of that cavity; supports them, and strengthens their union.

Its form is singular, and resembles a bat with its wings extended. It has, 1. An inferior or quintal surface, on which is situate the crista, that joins the vomer; a channel, which concurs in forming the pterygoplatine foramen; the pterygoid process; the pterygoid fossa; the scaphoid depression; the Vidian or pterygoid canal; the foramina—ovale, spinale, &c. 2. A superior or cerebral surface, on which are:—the clinoid processes; the pituitary fossa; the foramina (ovale, rotundum, and spinale); the Apophysis of Ingrassias or lesser wing; the foramen opticum, &c. 3. An occipital or posterior surface, which is articulated with the basillary process of the occipital bone. 4. An anterior or orbitary surface; having, anteriorly, a crista to unite with the ethmoid bone; and, on each side, a round aperture, which leads into two cavities in the substance of the bone, separated by a middle septum, and called the sphenoidal sinuses or cells. 5. Two zygomaticotemporal or external surfaces, which correspond to the temporal and zygomatic fossæ.

Some divide the sphenoid into body or middle portion; and ala, which are four in number, and are subdivided into great (Temporal Plates or Wings, Alæ magnæ) and little (Apophyses of Ingrassias, Alæ minores, Processus cusiformes).

The Sphenoid suture surrounds the bone.

SPHENOID, SPINOUS PROCESS OF THE, Sphenoid spine.

SPHENOIDAL, Sphenoïdalis. That which belongs or relates to the sphenoid bone.

SPHENOIDAL CELLS, see Sphenoid bone.

SPHENOIDAL CORNUA, Cornua Sphenoïdalia, Ossicula Bertini, Ossa triangulæria, Pyramids of Wislar, (F.) Cornets sphénoïdaux ou de Bertin, Osselets de Bertin. Two small, thin, and curved bones, situate between the sphenoid and ethmoid, with which they are confounded in the adult. They have the shape of a hollow pyramid, with the base turned backwards, and are developed by a single point of ossification. They are articulated with the sphenoid, ethmoid, palate bone, and vomer.

SPHENOIDAL OR SUPERIOR ORBITARY FISSURE, Foramen lac'rum superius, (F.) Fente sphénoïdale, is a large fissure, situate between the great and little ala of the sphenoid. It is seen at the upper and back part of the orbit, between which and the cranium it is a means of communication, and transmits the third, fourth, and sixth pair of nerves, and the first branch of the fifth pair, to the eye and its appendages.

SPHENOIDAL SINUSES, see Sphenoid.

SPHENOIDAL SPINE, Spina seu Crista sphenoidalis, (F.) Épine sphénoïdale, Spineus Process of the Sphenoid;—1. A projecting crista at the inferior surface of the sphenoid bone, for articulation with the vomer. 2. A triangular process, Apophyse sous-temporale (Ch.), met with near the posterior margin of the same bone, behind the foramen spinale. At the point of the spinous process, a styloid process is frequently met with.

SPHENOIDES, (σφηνοειδής.) Cuneiform, Sphenoid—s. Os, Sphenoid bone.

SPHENOMAXILLARY, Sphenomaxillaris. That which relates to the sphenoid and maxillary bones.

SPHENOMAXILLARY FISSURE, Inferior orbitary Fissure, (F.) Fente sphéno-maxillaire ou orbitaire inférieure; called, also, Foramen lac'rum inferius seu sphenomaxillare, is situate at the posterior part of the angle formed by the union of the internal and inferior parietes of the orbit. It is constituted, above, by the sphenoid bone; below, by the superior maxillary and palate bones; and, before, by the malar bone. It is narrower at the middle than at the extremities, and forms a communication between the orbital cavity and the zygomatic fossa.

SPHENOMAXILLARY FOSSA is a name given by some anatomists to a depression at the union of the sphenomaxillary and pterygomaxillary fissures.

SPHENOÖRBITAR. A name given by Bé-clard to the anterior part of the body of the sphenoid bone, which is developed by a variable number of points of ossification.

SPHENOPALATINE, Sphenopalatinus. That which relates to the sphenoid and palate bones.

SPHENOPALATINE ARTERY, Large lateral nasal A., is the termination of the internal maxillary. It enters at the posterior part of the superior meatus of the nose, through the sphenopalatine foramen, and spreads its numerous branches on the pituitary membrane covering the septum, the cornua, and the meatus.

SPHENOPALATINE FORAMEN is a round aperture, formed by the vertical portion of the os palati and the sphenoid. It establishes a communication between the nasal fossæ and the zygomatic fossa.

SPHENOPALATINE GANGLION, Ganglion of Meckel, Sphenoidal G. (Ch.). A small, nervous, cordiform, or triangular ganglion, of variable size, situate without the foramen sphenopalatinum, in the pterygomaxillary fissure. It seems suspended by several nervous filaments to the trunk of the superior maxillary nerve, and gives off internal or sphenopalatine filaments, inferior or palatine filaments, and a posterior filament, which is the Vidian or pterygoid nerve.

SPHENOPALATINE NERVES, Lateral nasal nerves, arise from the ganglion—just described—at its inner part, and enter the nasal fossæ by the sphenopalatine foramen. They are five or six in number, and distribute their filaments to the outer and inner parietes of the nasal fossæ. One of the most remarkable branches is the Nasopalatine.

SPHENOPALATINUS, Levator palati.

SPHENOPARIETAL, Sphenoparietalis. That which belongs or relates to the sphenoid and parietal bones.

SPHENOPARIETAL SUTURE is formed by the articulation of the extremity of the greater ala of the sphenoid with the anterior and inferior angle of the parietal bone.

SPHENOPTERYGOPALATINUS, Circumflexus—s. Salpingo-malléus, Laxator tympani—s. Salpingostaphylinus, Circumflexus.

SPHENOSTIS, (σφηνωσις.) see Wedged.

SPHENOSTAPHYLINUS, Levator palati.

SPHENOTEMPORAL, Sphenotemporalis. That which belongs to the sphenoid and temporal bones.

SPHENOTEMPORAL SUTURE is the suture at the articulation of the great ala of the sphenoid bone with the squamous portion of the temporal. Béclard gave the name sphenotemporal to the posterior part of the body of the sphenoid, which is developed by distinct points of ossification.

SPHEX, (σφῆξ.) Wasp.

SPHINCTER, gen. Sphincteris, (σφιγκτήρ), Constrictor, Musculus constrictorius, (from σφιγγω, 'I constrict.') A name given to several annular muscles, which constrict or close certain natural openings.

SPHINCTER ANI, Annularis Ani. Many anatomists have described two sphincter muscles of the anus:—1. The S. externus seu cutaneus, Aspidicus, Coccygio-cutaneus-sphincter, Orbicularis Recti, Constrictor Ani, Coccygio-anal, (Ch.) It is situate around the anus; is elliptical from before to behind; flattened, and pierced at its middle. Its fibres describe concentric arcs, which are attached, behind, to the extremity of the coccyx, by a dense, areolar substance; and are confounded, anteriorly, with the bulbo-cavernosi and transversi perinæi muscles. This muscle contracts and closes the anus. 2. The inner or internal Sphincter Ani, Sphincter intestinalis of Winslow, is by many anatomists considered as the termination of the circular fibres of the rectum. It is annular, and situate around the infe-the extremity of the rectum, to the extent of about a finger's breadth. It has the same uses as the other.

SPHINCTER VESICÆ, Sphincter of the blad'der. Some anatomists have given this name to whitish, elastic, and circular fibres, which surround the neck of the bladder, but do not constitute a particular muscle. Morgagni has given the name PSEUDOSPHINCTER to the anterior fibres of the levator ani, which pass beneath the neck of the bladder, and, by their contraction, close that opening. See Compressor urethræ.

SPHONDYLIIUM, (σφουδύλιον,) Heraclium spondylium.

SPHONGUS, (σφογγος,) Fungus, Spongia.

SPHRAGIDONYCHARGOCOME'IA, (σφραγίς, 'a seal,' ονυχ, gen. ονυχος, 'a nail,' αργος, 'white,' or perhaps αργυρος, 'silver,' and κομω, 'I adorn.') A charlatan who adorned his fingers to the very nails with rings.

SPHYGMA, (σφυγμη,) Pulse.

SPICA, Lavandula Spica.

SPICA, Fas'cia re'pens, Spica band'age, (F.) Épi. A bandage so called in consequence of its somewhat resembling a spike of barley. The turns of the bandage cross like the letter V;—each leaving a third of the roller uncovered. It is distinguished into ascending and descending. It may be applied over various parts of the body, and in a different manner in each case: thus, there is the Spica seu Fas'cia inguinalis, Spica inguinalis duplex, the spica for the shoulder, and another for the thumb.

A term of no definite meaning, as is obvious from these various words having been considered its synonyms. By some, it is defined to be—a disease of the osseous system, in which the texture of the bone dilates, seeming to be distended with air, and constituting a variety of osteosarcoma. By others, it is considered to be a tumour arising from an internal cavity of a bone; occurring most frequently in the carpus or tarsus. The term itself is a translation from the Arabic of Rhazes. See, also, Hydrarthrus, and Mollities Ossium.

SPINA VERTEBRALIS, Vertebral column.

SPINACH, Spinacia.

SPINACHIA, Spinacia.

SPINACIA, Spinacia, Spinacia oleracea, Spinage, Spinach, (from spina, 'a thorn or prickle,') (F.) Epinard. Ord. Chenopodiaceæ. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Pentandria. A plant which resembles the cabbage in its dietetic powers. The leaves boiled, with the addition of oil, form a good emollient cataplasm. It has been used in phthisical complaints; but its medicinal properties, if it have any, are not now regarded.

SPINACIA OLERACEA, Spinacea.

SPINÆ, (pl. of spina,) Spinous processes — s. Ventositas, Spina ventosa.

SPINAGE, Spinacia.

SPINAL, Spinalis, Spinosus, Spinatus, Rhachites, Rachidian, (F.) Épinière, Rachidien, (from spina, 'spine,') That which relates to the vertebral column.

SPINAL ACCESSORY, Spinal nerve.

SPINAL ARTERIES, Artèrie spinales, are two in number, viz.: 1. The posterior spinal, Artère médiane postérieure du Rachis, (Ch.) It arises from the vertebral, near the corpora pyramidalia, and descends on the posterior surface of the spinal marrow, distributing its ramifications to it. 2. The anterior spinal artery, A. médiane antérieure, (Ch.,) is larger than the last, and rises, also, from the vertebral. It descends, in a serpentine manner, upon the anterior surface of the marrow; furnishes ramusculi to it, and unites with that of the opposite side, opposite the foramen magnum occipitis. A very tortuous branch arises from this union, which tends as far as the inferior extremity of the marrow, to which it sends numerous divisions.

The term Spinal Arteries or Rachidian Arteries is also given, in the abstract, to all the arteries of the spinal marrow and vertebral canal. The same may be said of the veins and nerves.

SPINAL CORD, Medulla spinalis.

SPINAL FORAMINA, (F.) Trous rachidiens, in the abstract, are the foramina formed by every two contiguous vertebrae, through which the spinal nerves issue. See Vertebral. The term Foramen Spinalè seu spinosum is especially applied, however, to a small foramen, in front of the spinous process of the sphenoid bone, through which the middle artery of the dura mater enters the cranium. It is, likewise, called Foramen sphenospinosum, (F.) Trou Sphéno-épineux ou petit rond, Trou épineux.

SPINAL GANGLION, see Encephalon.

SPINAL IRRITATION, Rhachialgitis, Rhachialgia, Neuralgia spinalis, Notalgia. A modern pathological view, which refers most nervous diseases to irritation of the spinal cord. This irritation is presumed to be indicated by tenderness on pressure over the spinous process of one or more vertebrae or over the nerves proceeding from the cord and distributed to the parts at the sides of the spine. Such tenderness, however, by no means indicates the pathological condition in question, as it is often met with in those enjoying perfect health. The treatment advised is cupping and counterirritation on each side of the spine, which may be beneficial in such diseases, no matter what part of the frame may be in a morbid state, by exciting a new and revealing impression on a very sensible portion of the cutaneous surface.

SPINAL MARROW, Medulla spinalis.

SPINAL NERVE, Accessory of the Par vagum or Sth pair, Accessory nerve of Willis, Spinal Accessory, Superior respiratory N., Elevænth pair of encephalic nerves, (F.) Spino-cranio-trapézien, Trachélo-dorsal (Ch.), arises from the medulla spinalis, within the vertebral canal, between the anterior and posterior roots of the cervical nerves, at a greater or less distance from the cranium. The roots unite to form the nerve, which ascends into the cranium through the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, and issues by the foramen lacrum posterius, crossing the sternocleidomastoideus, to which it gives filaments, and losing itself entirely on the trapezius muscle. The pneumogastric and spinal accessory nerves together—nervus vagus cum accessorio—resemble the spinal nerves; the former, with its ganglion, being the posterior root; the latter the anterior.

The spinal accessory appears to be the nerve of voice—vocal nerve.

SPINAL NERVES, Vertebral nerves — s. Prolongation, Medulla spinalis.

SPINAL SYSTEM OF NERVES, see Nerves.

SPINALES COLLI MINORES, Interspinales colli — s. Transversales lumborum, Transversalis dors.

SPINALIS CERVICIS, Semispinalis colli — s. Colli, Semispinalis colli.

SPINALIS DORSI, Spinalis dors major, (F.) Grand épineux du dos. Winslow calls thus some fleshy fasciuli, which are situate on the lateral surfaces of the spinous processes; from the third dorsal vertebra to the first or second lumbar; and which form part of the transversospinalis of most authors. The same anatomist calls — Spinalis Dors minor, Petit épineux du dos — some small, fleshy fibres, situate on each side of the interspinal ligament. They are short, flat, and pass from one spinous process to another. Like the preceding, they form part of the transversospinalis. All these fleshy fasciuli strengthen the vertebral column.

SPINATI, Interspinales colli.

SPINATUS, Spinal.

SPINDLE TREE, Euonymus Americanus.

SPINITIS, (spina, 'the spine,' and itis,) Myelitis.

SPINNICK, Nannus.

SPINODORSITIS, (spina, dorsum, 'the back,' and itis,) Myelitis.

SPINOLA, (from spina, 'the spine,') see Hydrorachis.

SPINOSUS, (from spina, 'the spine,') Spinal.

SPI'NOUS, Spinosus, (F.) Épineux, (from spina, 'a thorn,') Having the shape of a spine or thorn.

SPINOUS PROCESSES or APOPHYSES of the Vertebra, Acanthæ, Spinæ, Cynolophi, Neural Spines of Owen, (F.) Apophyzes épineuses, are situate at the posterior part of each vertebra, and afford attachment to the muscles, whose office it is to extend the spine. See Vertebra.

SPINTHEROPIA, (σπινθηρ, 'a spark, and οψις, 'vision,') Confusio.

SPINULA, (dim. of spina, 'a thorn,') Pin.

SPIRACULA, (pl. of spiraculum, (F.) Spiracules, (from spiro, 'to breathe,') 'breathing holes.' Respiratory pores of the skin.

SPIRÆ CEREBRI, (σπῆρα, spira, 'a fold, a winding,') Convulsions, cerebral.

SPIRÆA DENUdata, (from spira, 'a spire,') S. ulmaria.

SPIRÆA FILIPENDULA, Filipendula, Saxifraga rubra, Dropwort, (F.) Filipendule. Ord. Rosaceæ. Scr. Syst. Icosandria Pentagynia. The root of this plant is said to possess astringent and lithontriptic virtues.

SPIRÆA LOBATA, S. Palma'ta, Queen of the Prairie, American Meadow-sweet. An oil, resembling oleum gaultheriæ, is obtained from the roots and stems.

SPIRÆA OPULIFOLIA, Opulus-leaved Spiræa, Nine Bark, has similar properties.

SPIRÆA PALMATA, S. lobata.

SPIRÆA TOMENTOSA, Hardhack, Red meadow-sweet, Steckplebush, Red'sy bush, Whiteleaf. The root of this indigenous species, Spiræa (Ph. U. S.), which is abundant in the northern States of the Union, is tonic and astringent; and is usually administered either in the form of extract or decoction, (Spirææ, ℞ss; Aque, ℞j.)

SPIRÆA TRIFOLIATA, Gillenia trifoliata.

SPIRÆA ULMARIA, S. denuda'ta, Ulmaria, U. popul'tris, Regi'na Pra'ti, Bar'ba ca'præ, Bar'bnla capri'na, Mead'ow Sweet, Queen of the Meadow's, (F.) Ulmair, Spirée ulmaire, Reine des Prés, Vignette, Herbe aux Abeilles. The leaves have been recommended as mild astringents and diuretics—the flowers as antispasmodics and diaphoretics.

SPIRIMENTA PULMONUM, 'airholes of the lungs,' (from spirare, 'to breathe,') see Pulmo.

SPIRIMENTUM ANIMÆ, 'airhole of the breath,' Pulmo.

SPIRAMINA PALPEBRARUM, 'pores of the eyelids,' Lachrymal puncta—s. Pulmonum, see Pulmo.

SPIRATIO, (spirare, spiratum, 'to breathe,') Respiration.

SPIRÉE ULMAIRE, Spiræa ulmaria.

SPIRIT, Spir'itus, (spirare, 'to breathe, to exhale,') (F.) Espirit, Alcoolat. A name given to every liquid product of distillation. Spirits were formerly distinguished into—inflammable, acid, and alkaline; and consequently a number of substances were crowded together, which often resembled each other in no other property than in being volatile. The term is now confined to alcoholic liquors, of which the following are the chief:

Arrack'. Distilled from coarse palm sugar, named jaggery; fermented with the bark of the Mim'sia leucophle'a; also from rice and the fermented juice of the Palm; made in India. Its varieties are:—

1. Mah'wah Arrack'. Made in India from the flowers of the Madhwa tree, Bos'sia butyra'cea.

2. Tba. Made from palm wine, in the Philippine Islands. See Arack.

Araka. Distilled, by the Tartars, from koumis, fermented mares' milk.

Araki. Distilled from dates, by the Egyptians.

Arika. A variety of koumis, distilled from fermented mares' milk, in Tartary and Iceland.

Bran'dy. Distilled from wine, figs, peaches, persimmon, apple, mulberries, and sometimes other fruits, in Europe, Asia, North and South America, wherever wine is made. The best brandy is that of Cognac; the next, that of Bordeaux and Rochelle. The varieties are—

1. Aguardiente, (S.) In Peru, the common brandy obtained from grapes is the Aguardiente de Pisco, so called, because shipped at the port of Pisco. Another kind, much dearer, and of excellent flavour, is made from Muscatel grapes, and is called Aguardiente de Italia. It is sometimes seen in the United States.

2. Lon. Made from rice, in Siam.

3. Rakia. Made in Dalmatia from the husks of grapes mixed with aromatics.

4. Rosolio. Made at Dantzic, from a compound of brandy, rossolis, and other plants.

5. Troster. Made on the Rhine, from the husks of grapes, fermented with barley and rye.

6. Sekiskayvodka. Made from the lees of wine and fruit at Seio.

Gene'va, Holland's, (genièvre, French for juniper.) Distilled from malted barley and rye, rectified on juniper berries, in Holland. Its variety is—

Gin. Made in England, from malted barley, rye, potatoes; rectified with turpentine.

Goldwasser. Distilled at Dantzic, from wheat, barley, and rye, rectified with aniseed, cinnamon, and other spices.

Kirschwasser. Distilled from the Malaeheb cherry, in Switzerland.

Maraschino, Marasquin'o. Distilled from the Macarska or Marasea cherry, at Zara, the capital of Dalmatia.

Rum, (supposed to be derived from the terminal syllable of the word saccharum: but this is questionable. Distilled, in the West Indies and South America, from canesugar and molasses, and in North America from maplesugar. Its variety is—

Sakee, Saki. A Japanese beverage, distilled from rice.

Stakkaia trava. Made in Kamschatka, from a sweet grass.

Showchoo. Distilled, in China, from the lees of mandarin, a wine made from boiled rice.

Whis'ky, (supposed to be derived from uisque, the first two syllables of uisquebaugh, the original name in Ireland,—itself from Irish uisge and beatha, 'life,' Uisge beatha, Aqua vite, 'Water of life.' (Distilled, in Scotland and Ireland, from malted and raw barley, rye, oats, and potatoes; and in the south of France, from sloes.) In Ireland it was called builceann, or madness of the head. The best Scotch whisky is Glenliv'et, the best Irish, Emmishool'en.

Whisky, Spir'itus Frumen'ti, is officinal in the Pharmacopœia of the United States. It is the spirit obtained from fermented grain by distillation, and contains from 48 to 56 per cent. of absolute alcohol.

Y-wer-a. Distilled, in the Sandwich Islands, from the root of the Teeroot, baked, pounded, and fermented.

To these may be added an intoxicating liquor made by the Afghans, from ewes' milk; and that made in Kamschatka, from a species of mushroom, named mushomer.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS AROMATICUS, Æther Sulphuricus cum alcoholæ aromaticus, Elixir vitrioli dulcè, Sweet Elixir of Vitriol, Vigan's Elixir of Vitriol, Aromatic Spirit of Æther. (Cinnam. cort. contus. ʒij, Cardam. sem. contus. ʒiiss, Piperis longi fruct. cont., Zingib. rad. concis. sing. ʒj, Spiritus aetheris sulphurici. Oj. Macerate, for 14 days, in a stopped glass vessel, and strain. Ph. L.) It is used as a stimulant in nervous affections. Dose, fʒss to fʒj.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS CHLORATI, Spiritus aetheris muriatici—s. Aetheris compositus, Spiritus Aetheris sulphurici compositus—s. Aetheris hydrochlorici, Spiritus Aetheris muriatici.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS MURIATICI, Sp. Æ. Hydrochlorici, Sp. Æ. chlorati, Sp. Æ. Muriatici, Sp. Muriatici aetheris, Sp. Sallis dulcis, Æther Muriatici alcoholicus, Sp. chloratus alcoholicus, Spirit of hydrochloric or muriatic ether, Dulcified marine acid. An old preparation, made by adding one part of Muriatic acid to three parts of Rectified spirit, and distilling. Its action is like that of the spiritus aetheris nitrici.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS NITRICI, (Ph. U. S. 1851.) Sp. Ætheris nitrosi (Ph. U. S. 1863 and Ph. B. 1864) seu nitri dulcis seu Ætheris nitrosus, Æther nitricus alcoholatus, seu nitricocolcolicus, Acidum Nitri dulcificatum, Sweet Spirit of Nitre, Nitre drops, Spirit of Nitric Ether, (F.) Ether azotens alcoholisè, Liqueur anodine nitreuse. (Nitrate of Potassa, in coarse powder, lbij, Sulphuric acid, lbiss; Alcohol, Oixss; Diluted Alcohol, Oj; Carbonate of Potassa, ʒj. Mix the nitrate of potassa and the alcohol in a large glass retort, and having gradually poured in the acid, digest with a gentle heat for two hours; then raise the heat, and distil a gallon. To the distilled liquor add the diluted alcohol and carbonate of potassa, and again distil a gallon.—Ph. U. S.) A modified form is given in the Ph. U. S. for 1863, s. g. 0-837, Ph. B. (1864), 0-843. In the latter it is distilled from a mixture of Sulphuric acid and Rectified spirit poured on Nitrite of soda. It is refrigerant, diuretic, antispasmodic, and diaphoretic. Dose, gtt. xxv to fʒj. Specific gravity, 0-834.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS OLEOSUS, Spiritus Ætheris sulphurici compositus, Oleum aetherum.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS SULPHURICI, Sp. Ætheris, Æther Sulphuricus cum Alcoholæ, Liqor Ætheris Sulphuricus, Spiritus Vitrioli dulcis, S. Ætheris vitriolici, Liqor Sulphuricus alcoholisatus, Spirit of Sulphuric Ether. (Æther. sulphuric. Oss; Sp. rect. Oj. Mix. Ph. L.) Stimulant, diaphoretic, diuretic, and antispasmodic. Dose, fʒss to fʒij.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS SULPHURICI COMPOSITUS, (Ph. U. S. 1842), S. aetheris vitriolici compositus, Æther hydricus alcoholisè, Æther sulphuricus alcoholisè, seu Ætheris compositus (Ph. U. S., 1863) seu Spiritus aetheris oleosus, Liqor anodini seu anodynus mineralis Hoffmanni, Compound Spirit of Sulphuric Ether, Hoffmann's Anodyne Liqor, (F.) Esprit d'Æther sulphurique, Liqueur anodine d'Hoffmann. (Æther. Oss; Alcohol, Oj; Æther. fʒij. Mix.) A stimulant and antispasmodic. Specific gravity, 0-816.

SPIRITUS ÆTHERIS VITRIOLICI COMPOSITUS, Spiritus aetheris sulphurici comp.

SPIRITUS AMMONIÆ, Alkali ammoniacum spirituosum, Alcohol ammoniacum, Sp. salis ammoniaci, Sp. salis ammoniaci vinosus seu dulcis seu dulcificatus, Ammoniacæ alcoholisata, Liqor ammoniaci vinosus, L. ammoniacæ spirituosus, Lixivium ammoniacalè vinosum, Solutio subcarbonatis ammoniaci spirituosæ, (F.) Esprit d'ammoniaque. (Ammon. muriat. in pulv. subtilissim., Calcis, aa lbj; Alcohol, fʒxx; Aquæ, Ovj. The water is employed to slake the lime; the muriate of ammonia is then well mixed with it, and by means of heat the ammonia is made to pass into the distilled water contained in a quart bottle. Ph. U. S.) Stimulant and antispasmodic. Dose, fʒss to fʒj.

SPIRITUS AMMONIÆ COMPOSITUS, Spiritus aromaticus.

SPIRITUS AMMONIÆ FÆTIDUS, Sp. volatilis fætidus, Alcohol ammoniacum fætidum, Tinctura assafœtidæ ammoniacata, Fætid Spirit of Ammonia, Fii Drops. (Ammon. muriat. ʒx, Potass. carb. ʒxvj, Sp. rectificat., Aquæ, aa Oij, (Imp. meas.), Assafœtid. ʒv. Distil. Oij, (Imp. meas.) Ph. L.) Stimulant and antispasmodic. Dose, fʒss to ʒj.

SPIRITUS AMMONIÆ SUCCINATUS, Sp. Ammoniacæ cum Succino, Sp. Cornu cervi succinatum, Sp. Sallis Ammoniacæ lactescens seu lacteus, Tinctura ammoniacæ composita, Ammoniacum succinatum, Aqna Lactea, Liqor ammoniaci succinici seu ex Ammoniacæ et Oleo Succini, L. ex citans, Ammo- nim succinicum liquidum, Succinated Spirit of Ammonia, Compound Eau de Luce. (Mastich. ℥ij, Sp. rect. f℥ix; Ol. Lavand. gtt. xiv; Ol. succin. gtt. iv; Liq. ammon. f℥x. Macerate the mastich in the alcohol, and pour off the clear tincture: add the rest and shake. Ph. L.) Stimulant and antispasmodic. Dose, gtt. x to f℥ss or f℥j.
