

LOCAL SILVER MINE

G. B. WOODBERRY TELLS OF DISCOVERY IN DEAD HORSE CANYON

It is always the gold of a distant land that is good, as the Scripture says. What is near at hand has but little value in the eyes of those who look for treasures in the earth. Men had to come all the way from Pennsylvania to California to demonstrate to the natives the millions of dollars that lay in the earth in the shape of oil. Men have had to come into all the western States from other States and lands to convince the district people that the earth contained treasures over which they daily walked indifferent to their value. Such was the history of the tungsten mines on the Mojave desert.

"However," said Mr. G. B. Woodberry, candidate for the City council, in talking of the features of the Glendale district, the other day, "that was not the case with Glendale district. Men have prospected in the canyons and hills to the north of the city and what is more, have discovered valuable minerals there. It stands to reason that the parts of the Sierras that lie north of Glendale should have as much mineral in them as other sections that have been proved up.

"It was back in the late '80's that two old prospectors came to the Glendale district and built a cabin out in Dead Horse canyon, which is a branch of Sycamore canyon. They had prospected round quite a bit before they settled down there. After due prospecting they found "float." It was silver float. Testing this out they were convinced that if they could find the vein they would have a fortune.

"Working away day after day they finally struck a spot in the canyon which seemed good to them and they began an adit into the face of the hill. Following along their adit they crossed a streak of sulphide ore. I am not well enough versed in the history of their find to say what kind of ore it was; but it seemed good enough to them and they began working it.

"Convinced of the value of their find they managed to convince others also and had no difficulty in inducing some of the Valley stores to give them credit. This kept them going until they had their tunnel driven in more than 100 feet when they were stopped by an injunction of some kind.

"It was most unfortunate for the miners and for their grubstakers. The men had never questioned their own right to go ahead and find what they could thinking that the mining laws of the United States and of California gave them absolute right to do so. However, it appeared that by an old agreement with the Roman Catholic authorities when the region became United States territory, the church was granted the exclusive right to mine all minerals in the ground in this particular territory.

"Some of the Glendalians at that time thought this was not the case and they made up a defense fund and took the case to law; but when the original church charter was read in court the judge dismissed the case at once. So the poor miners had to throw up their mine and all their hard work went for nothing.

"The story was revived the other day after the heavy rains had washed away the debris from the mouth of the old tunnel and revealed the old workings. Some of the casual visitors to the canyon found the old workings and were anxious to learn who had worked there and if they had found anything. As a matter of fact there are probably not very many now who remember the incident, although it created a great deal of talk and interest at the time. There is no doubt that the old mine contained valuable ore and it seems a pity that some of those veins are not being worked at present. It should be possible to get leases on the mineralized lands if anyone thought it worth while. It should also be possible to have assays made of the mineral matter in the old adit. The result might be interesting.

JEWISH RELIEF FUND

S. H. GOLDSTEIN MAKES FINANCIAL REPORT IN FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Crowded congregations listened attentively to the interesting services in the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. Two events of importance naturally occupied all minds. One was the report of the committee that has been handling the collection of funds for the relief of the Jews in Europe and the other was the farewell address of the pastor, the Rev. John Troy, who preached for the last time as pastor of the church. Mr. Troy's powerful addresses will be published in the Glendale News tomorrow. At the evening service church letters were granted to the Rev. John, Mrs. Troy, and F. W. Troy, also to Al Jennings and Mrs. Jennings.

Mr. S. H. Goldstein on behalf of the local Jewish Relief committee reported that the contributions for the fund were as follows:

RECEIPTS
Tag Day Committee.....	$139.45
Cash Contributions.....	23.12
Subscriptions.....	217.75
	$380.32
DISBURSEMENTS
Deposit 1st Nat. Bank.....	$298.07
Cash with Chairman.....	23.75
Printing and Advertising.....	18.50
Error in Cash.....	1.50
To be Collected.....	38.50
	$380.32

All the outstanding cash will be collected and a few more subscriptions amounting to about $30 are expected. Mr. Goldstein also tendered the thanks of the local committee to all who had assisted in making the mass meeting and Tag day a success, the City Trustees, Mr. Jensen of the Palace-Grand, the Glendale Transfer company, Mr. C. O. Pulliam, Rabbi Myers, and the Hon. Joseph Scott for their services at the mass meeting; Mrs. West and Mrs. Boyer for their music, Prof. Lowinsky and his admirable orchestra, the Fire department for participating in the parade; Mr. Bode and the High School band, the Valley Supply company, members of all the churches in the city who helped officially and individually, the ladies and gentlemen who sold tags, Mr. Ed. Lee of the First National bank for handling the funds and to the Glendale Evening News for its support of the movement.

Already a check for $300 has been sent to the Central committee in New York and about $50 more will probably follow.

The Central committee reports that all over the United States the response has been liberal and that a sum of $400,126.02 has been raised. This money came from 12,799 sources representing more than 100,000 individuals, men, women and children. The total expense of carrying on this work was only about 3 per cent of the total amount subscribed. After having sent relief funds to Russia, Poland, Austria, Hungary, Galicia and Turkey, and also to Palestine (soup kitchens have been established in Jerusalem and wherever needed), the balance in the bank at present is $64,035.10, and it is expected that another $100,000 will yet come in from the sale of stamps and certificates.

Meanwhile the immediate needs of a great many of the perishing Jews have been attended to and it is hoped that the sufferers may be idled over the worst till the war comes to an end.

MISS MCLENNAN ENTERTAINS

Miss Jeanette McClennan proved herself a most charming young hostess on Saturday afternoon when she entertained twenty-two young ladies at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Preston, 725 Adams street. While the party was in celebration of no special event, decorations of red, white and blue were most appropriate for the month. The same color scheme was carried out in the favors and in the dainty refreshments served during the afternoon. Misses Katherine Phillips, Florence Heacock, Hazel Flower and Cecelia Lyon displayed their nimble wits in various guessing games and were the winners of pretty prizes which they will treasure as mementoes of the delightful afternoon.

Guests for the afternoon were Misses Florence Heacock, Marjorie Imler, Katherine Renshaw, Katherine Phillips, Mildred Wight, Lula Butler, Margaret Boucher, Esther Schremp, Ernestine Lyons, Evangeline Hunchberger, Cecelia Lyons, Clyde Brooks, Gwendolyn Claffin, Aldine Norton, Dorothy Hunt, Edith Ewins, Hazel Flower, Marian Carmichael, Mary Wilkin, Fanny Hagin, Bess Smith and Winifred Jones.

The wave of attack is running along the line. In the Champagne region 1000 yards of French trenches were taken. It is also reported that forty yards of British trenches were dynamited. JOHN M. ESHELMAN DIES SUDDENLY

LIEUT.-GOV. OF CALIFORNIA TAKEN ILL ON TRAIN EXPIRES ALONE AT INDIO

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
EL CENTRO, Feb. 28.—John M. Eshelman, lieutenant-governor of California, died somewhat suddenly while on his way from San Francisco to El Centro, where he had one of his residences. The lieutenant governor was taken suddenly ill on the train which stopped at Indio, where Mr. Eshelman got out. He was taken to the Southern Pacific hotel and given a room while medical attendance was sought for him. He has always suffered more or less from pulmonary troubles. On the train he was attacked by a fit of coughing which became so alarming that it was seen he must get medical aid. The coughing continued after the lieutenant-governor was taken to his room. While alone there he suddenly expired. He was heard calling for assistance, but died before aid could reach him. He was 42 years of age, having been born in 1874. His body was taken in charge by the Masons at Indio and will probably be conveyed to Los Angeles, where his home is.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP MALOJA, WHICH STRUCK MINE IN STRAITS OF DOVER, SANK IN HEAVY SEA

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)
LONDON, Feb. 28.—Revised reports of the loss of the Peninsular and Oriental liner Maloja, which sank after striking a floating mine in the Straits of Dover, show a much greater loss of life than at first stated. The liner carried a crew of 200, mostly Lascars, most of them were drowned. She had 119 passengers, most of whom were saved. The vessel was prepared for disaster and most of the passengers had on lifebelts. The greater number got off in the lifeboats which were swinging out on the davits; but a number perished by jumping into the sea in panic.

THE PHILIPPINES

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE, BY HAROLD VENSKE OF GLENDALE HIGH SCHOOL

The question of Philippine independence is a question of great importance; a modern topic in every sense. It has been and is the subject of much discussion in congress. The interests of the United States and the Philippines are immediately involved, and much depends upon the correct decision of this question.

After some study of the question "I" arrived at the conclusion that, since no promise of independence has been made, the question is wholly and solely economical, and from this standpoint the best interests of the United States and the welfare of the Filipinos will be secured, not through independence, but through retention of the islands.

It is strange that some believe the United States government promised the Philippines independence. It is amusing to note from what sources they secured such an idea. President McKinley, in a speech at Frisco shortly after our acquisition of the islands, made this statement: "These Philippine islands are ours, not to subjugate, but to emancipate; not to rule in the power of might, but to take to those distant people the principles of liberty, of freedom of conscience, and of opportunity that are enjoyed by the people of the United States." This statement is interpreted by some as a promise of independence. The whole thing is absurd; in the first place, the president is not an absolute monarch who can dictate and establish our policies without the consent of the people, and in the second place, the language of this quotation is far from independence. Any one who knows of the conditions of oppression, anarchy and revolution that existed in the islands at that time, and the possibility of the superior American people domineering over the inferior Filipinos will realize the true meaning of President McKinley's words. Lewis R. Freeman, who has spent a good many years in the Philippines as a servant of the government and who is a careful, capable student of the independence question, shows that these theories of promised independence have been definitely branded fabrication; and specifically states "there was no such promise made, either in Washington or by any responsible American military, naval or consular representative in the Orient." It is true that two political parties in the United States favor Philippine independence, at a time when they think proper. But the mere fact that such a feeling exists in a couple of parties cannot be construed as a promise. I most heartily agree with Freeman when he says: "These party planks will have to be translated into something more tangible, while the party is in power, before they can be regarded as promises." Upon close investigation we find that all of those statements to the effect that we promised the Philippines independence are based on nothing less than hot air. And so far as the question of independence is concerned, the keeping of a promise is in no way involved (for we have made no promises). Consequently Philippine independence resolves itself into an economic question, and, as I said before, must take into consideration those most concerned.

Let us first consider the interests of the United States. Upon first thought to some, it might seem selfish to consider ourselves, but when one realizes how prominently we figure in this question and how greatly we will be affected, there remains no reason why we, with a sense of justice should not stand up for our interests.

The retention of the islands will be advantageous to us politically, commercially and in military and naval ways. A few object to retention for those reasons, saying that it is inconsistent with our past policy. Why, it is the very essence of our past policy; the history of the United States or that of any other country for that matter has been the acquisition of territory and the permanent retention of it. We acquired the Louisiana territory, Florida, Texas, Oregon, California, Alaska; in fact, practically all we have has been acquired by pursuing this policy, for the very same reasons. So I see no reason why we should not pursue the same policy in the case of the Philippines. Well, to go on with the advantages to be secured by retention, let us take up the political advantage first. It has been well demonstrated that the Pacific region is and will be the center of interest in the civilized world—and by retaining the Philippine Isl-

RAINFALL FOR THE STORM

According to the statistics of Mr. H. E. Bartlett, who keeps the record of the local rainfall, nearly two inches of rain have fallen during the storm that began Friday night. The amount of rain that fell up to Sunday morning was 1.85 inches. The additional rain that has fallen since will probably bring the record up to two inches or more for the storm. There is still rain in sight, but the worst of the storm seems to be over. This makes the rainfall for the season 24.61 inches. The rain coming at the present moment has done a great deal of good and the ground that was gradually becoming parched is now in excellent condition.

lands we get a commanding, controlling and impregnable position for our future dealings. The great importance of this position cannot be over-estimated. Our possession of it gives us a reason and the right to assert a commanding attitude towards things affecting that region; for an example, we can turn to China. Our successful maintenance of the "open door" in China is due almost entirely to the position we occupied in the Philippines. It gave us a reason for "butting in" in this affair. "To do this (retain possession of the Philippines) is only proper and essential to the future prosperity of the United States," says J. W. Foster, the great American diplomat, in his book "American Diplomacy in the Orient." Such an act will also improve our foreign relations; it will avoid international distrust and jealousy, which would surely result should the islands be cast adrift from our sheltering harbor; for in the latter case the islands would become the prey of several covetous nations.

DEFENSIVE COAST RAILROADS

In these days when the matter of national defense is being agitated all over the country it is interesting to note the working of the strategic railroads the Germans began years ago to prepare to carry their troops at a moment's notice to any part of the frontier of France, Belgium or Russia. That network of railroads was so organized in times of peace that when war came every employe on them became a soldier and the whole system passed as did all the railroads in the country into the power and under the supervision of the war office.

That was an advantage that shows how Germany had made ready for the war and shows also how little the other countries thought of war. None of them dreamed of making such a system. It was practically not needed for peaceful purposes. Germany, however, did not rest content with that advantage. She carried her system of railroads as far as possible into Russian Poland and the railway accompanying the troops brings them the abundant supplies of ammunition that have made it possible to batter a way through a difficult country. She has spread another network of railways through Belgium to the various points of the western front and has made the holding of that front possible and the present smash in the direction of Verdun a matter of greater ease than it would otherwise have been.

The Germans have constructed, in addition to their other railroads, a new railroad that traverses every point of the great front toward the Verdun fortress and makes possible the hurrying up of troops and the constant supply of ammunition. That has been an immense advantage and is a foreshadowing of the increased use of the railway which will be necessary in every future war.

It is significant that this means of defense and offense is not by any means a new matter. Kitchener when he made his great preparations for his advance through the Soudan desert—preparations which took eleven years—included among them as the most important a railroad from Cairo to the front. It took 200,000 men, if not more, to guard the railroad to the front from Capetown to Pretoria and Johannesburg, in the Boer war, and without that railway the troops that advanced would have perished.

It is, therefore, not out of the way to listen to the proposal of George L. Campbell of Williamsport, Pa., who suggests that the United States should build a defensive railroad around the rim of the United States about which thousands of coast defense guns could be moved to whatever point they might be needed. This, he maintains, would put this country in a position of defense that no nation could overcome. This Belt Line Defense system would pay for itself in times of peace. It would become a popular travel system, bringing tourists to many points otherwise not likely to be visited. It would also transport troops in time of war and by connections with other main lines would make possible such a mobilization on any part of either coast as would make the United States inviolable.

With a standard gauge, double track, military railroad of this kind, further equipped with a special gauge for heavy gun trucks, trains of guns of the heaviest dimensions could be moved with ease from point to point. The United States could bring thousands of guns to bear in this manner against the hundreds of any invading fleet. In view of what Germany has done with railroads this plan seems worthy of attention.

REVIVING THE RURAL CHURCH

It is interesting to those who live on the edge of a large rural district to learn what is being done elsewhere to revive the rural church as a means of community benefit. It has been found that all over the United States the country churches have been dying at an abnormal rate. Reasons for these conditions are not far to seek. In the first place the country has been overstocked with churches. The country regions are sparsely populated and every community is not in a position to support one, two or three churches in its midst.

Therefore a great many men of national standing who are interested in the life of the rural communities, knowing that they are or should be the life of the nation, are engaged in a movement to make the rural church in the United States not only the religious, but also the social, commercial and agricultural center for the farmer and his wife and children.

It is felt by men like President Wilson and Gifford Pinchot, both of whom are selected as typical of men opposite in many political ideas, but as one in their desire to advance humanity and the people of the United States, that the country is standing today on the threshold of a great movement which will bring back to the church in the country and the smaller towns the great power for good it used to have. It is not contended that the church should take the functions of the Grange or the agricultural school; but it is believed that the failure of the country churches, through their ministers, to get into productive touch with the work and needs of the country people is one of the fundamental reasons for the present weakness of the country church. Good farms, good roads, good schools are necessary to the success of churches and active churches should assist powerfully in securing such material improvements.

President Wilson and those who, like him, are interested in this question, are not advocating the strengthening or weakening of any one denomination at the expense of another. They are merely seeking the truth about conditions together with remedies that are both wise and practicable.

In order to carry out this idea Ohio was selected as a field for the first intensive rural church reform campaign. A survey by the State shows that 800 of the 5000 Ohio country churches have been abandoned, one-third is growing, while two-thirds have ceased to grow or are dying. Eighty-three per cent of the Ohio rural churches have a membership of less than 100 each. Only 6 per cent have individual preachers; the others have from one-half to one-sixth of some minister's time.

It is planned to combine the strength of these country churches and to establish at the logical points community churches which, in

There is no doubt that a similar movement in the country districts all over the United States, but specially in the western States, would result in the prevention of overlapping of church work, duplication of that work and the dissipation of religious energy in a thousand different channels.

London has opened a school for English waiters. Hitherto the German and Austrian "kellner" and the French and Italian competitors in the same field have monopolized the work of waiting on the guests in the fashionable hotels. One reason for this has been because the English-speaking man does not take kindly to the work of waiting on others. He is of the dominant race and whether he be an American or a Briton his English-speaking tongue does not take naturally to the obsequious phrases nor listen patiently to the rebuke or abuse of his patrons. On the other hand the French, Italians and Germans are natural waiters by reason of greater adaptability. They can perform their functions with grace and ease and also preserve their self-respect and hold at arm's length, metaphorically, the patron who inclines to lord it over them. All this is to be changed in Britain after this if the Britons have their way. The Frenchman will be welcomed as of yore and be "bon camarade" when his work is done; so will the Italian. It looks, however, as though the reign of German and Austrian, Greek and Bulgarian, were at an end in British restaurants and hotels. The British are to pay the British waiter better and to eliminate the Teuton altogether.

QUAINT HOLLAND SCENES

Edward Perfield, the artist, gives us some charming descriptions of Holland in his book, "Holland Sketches." He writes:

"Along the quay in the busy harbor of Rotterdam, the quaint Dutch boats are crowded, creaking rhythmically with the rise and fall of the water, side by side, stern to rudderpost, jostling one another in a great confusion of picturesque lines and gay carvings. At all the little cabin windows are clean lace curtains, and on the deck, brass and copper pots are drying in the sun. Hanging from spars and ropes, the family wash flutters its many hues against the windy sky. Chubby, red-cheeked children climb in and out of the cabin doors, or press their round noses against the tiny window panes. The women gossip in the sun, or chatter around in pursuit of their household duties, while the men lounge about, their hands in the pockets of their baggy breeches, and survey this scene of nomadic housekeeping with content.

"Early that afternoon the great brown sail was hoisted and our tubby boat waddled through the lock, into the placid canal, and out into the country. How fresh and clean and flat it was, and how vividly green was the grass! The canals, little and big, ran in every direction, one moment sparkling brilliantly in the sun and the next obscuring under the soft gloom of a racing cloud-shadow. Here and there in the distance, the arms of a windmill were silently whirling, and occasionally red-tiled roofs made a lovely note of color above their encircling trees.

"A brick roadway ran along by the canal that we traveled, and I was constrained to make an occasional note of the people and traffic that passed to and from the town. I don't know why, but all the men seemed . . . grave. They were dressed—in many instances it would be more correct to say that they were patched—in blue and brown, with an occasional admixture of red. Holland is certainly the land of artistic patches. Take, for instance, our very worthy captain; a thrifty man, and prosperous, with a neat sun tucked away. Yet see his shirt, patched and repatched—and patched again, in varying shades of red and brown, until it has been completely metamorphosed. As to the original color, no man knoweth, but here is wonderful mosaic of soft tones, put together with skill and patience.

"The women are not nearly so solemn, or so be-patched as the men, and they seem to be waging an incessant warfare against dirt and rust; scrubbing pots and pans at the backs of the quaint little houses, scrubbing the door sills and steps in front; and we passed one overzealous woman, scrubbing a weather-beaten fence as if it were the one ambition of her life.

RECLAMATION WORK SUMMARY

A summary of the work of the U. S. Reclamation Service up to the beginning of the present fiscal year shows that it has dug 9,592 miles of canals and ditches.

"Here comes a cart at a brisk pace, drawn by a dog so small as to be ridiculously out of proportion to his burden. Occasionally we passed curiously fashioned wagons drawn by heavy, slow-moving horses. These wagons have no shafts. In their stead is a big rudder-like affair in front, with which the driver steers. Quite a nautical arrangement, this.

"We moored for the night beside the roadway, and I lay on the deck . . . listening to the sibilant noises of the wind in the grass and the rigging. I saw the twinkling lights in the farm-houses disappear, one by one, and I felt the indescribable hush that settles over a sleeping country."

TROPICO

The all-day meeting of N. P. Banks Post, and Corps, on Friday, the 25th inst., was of unusual interest, as a goodly number were present from sister Corps and Posts, to assist in the work and social activities of the two bodies.

The Post holds its regular meetings every fourth Friday in the forenoon, and after the dinner, at noon, a short program is carried out, when the Corps holds its regular meeting, making the day one of pleasure to all, for the true-hearted social life on these occasions helps to bind the societies together in a more perfect union; for it is a day when all live on the sunny side of the street instead of the shady; a day when the "Boys in Blue" meet the "Boys in Gray" with hearty hand-shakes and live over again, in story, the days of long ago, when they were so widely separated in thoughts—if not in heart.

At the present time nothing seems to separate the old comrades in the good will toward each other, and especially in the trend of present day affairs, for all alike advocate "Preparedness," and scorn the acclaim of "Peace at Any Price," as advocated by some of our statesmen.

After the palatable feast provided by the Woman's Relief Corps, and to which about a hundred paid their respects, the program which, except the music, was carried out exclusively by the comrades, was presented by Comrade Emick, commander of the Post, and was as follows:

"America," by all. Salute to the Flag.

Rev. Rader spoke earnestly not only on Patriotism, but "Temperance."

Comrade Hull recited "Mothers of Men," after which all united in singing "The Star Spangled Banner," with Mrs. Gertrude Griffin at the piano.

Comrade Howell, from Crockett Post 112, Iowa, gave a pleasing talk on the trend of the times, followed by Comrades Greig of Minnesota and Comrade Crouch of Robley D. Evans Post, Los Angeles, whose glowing tributes to our country and its upholders were greeted with cheers. At the close of the social hour the Corps went into session. Mrs. Frances Alcumbrack of Eagle Rock became a member. The committee on the work for the success of the day was: Mesdames Quintina Hammond, Elizabeth Spafford, Phoebe Myers, Susie Ogler, Margaret Hibbert and Mary Milligan.

Through an error in the account of the golden wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Pratt, which was held in G. A. R. hall recently, there was an omission of two of the most pleasing numbers on the splendidly arranged program, which added so much to the pleasures of the delightful celebration. Miss Dorothy Armstrong, whose violin selections are always especially pleasing, gave several numbers, being accompanied by her equally talented sister, Miss Phoebe Armstrong, who is an accomplished pianist. Another appreciated number on the program was a piano solo rendered by Mrs. Winona Crawford, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" variations.

After a few weeks' visit to his family, W. E. Burke of N. Central avenue left for Oklahoma Sunday morning, on a business trip.

Mrs. Anna L. Gallow, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Z. L. Bathrick, of West Palmer avenue, returned to her ranch home near Owensmouth, this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. White, who have resided on North Central avenue for several years, have removed to Elizabeth Lake, where they will reside in the future.

THE RED DESERT

West of Creston is obtained the first comprehensive view of the Red Desert of Wyoming. A few miles north of the railroad track is a great stretch of sand dunes, which extends 100 miles, from Green River to North Platte River. The dunes, many of them more than a hundred feet high, are constantly traveling with the prevailing winds in a general easterly direction. If a few camels and an Arab or two were added to the scene, the spectator could easily imagine himself in the Sahara Desert. Frequent mirages, endless variety of feature, and wonderful coloring make the desert far from the monotonous stretch it may seem to be at first glance. As the name suggests, the dominant colors are red—russet, brick-red, and vermilion—but there is every tone of gray and brown, with not a few shades of green, purple, and yellow. Unlike the colors of an eastern American landscape, those of the Red Desert are not dependent on the season, for there is little vegetation to hide the coloring of the rocks and soil.

Despite the sparsity of vegetable growth, the Red Desert of Wyoming is a winter sheep range. The scattered "bunch grass," which looks so meager and dry, is in fact excellent forage, curing into hay where it grew and having a high nutritive value. In summer, when the desert is dry and water holes are few, the sheep are herded in the mountains, where water is abundant and grass is green and tender. The early snows, falling first in the higher mountains and extending week by week to lower altitudes, drive the flocks into the rough fall range between the mountains

LECTURE ON ARMENIANS

In the Congregational church Sunday night, Dr. Partridge, formerly a missionary in Asia Minor, lectured on the Armenian massacres. He stated that the massacres at the present time were much worse than they were 20 years ago but that the American people are very slightly aroused now as compared with what they were twenty years ago. During Dr. Partridge's residence at the Teachers' college in Sivas, he had ample opportunity to witness the manner in which the Turks are exterminating the Armenians.

To begin with they drafted into the army all the men between the ages of 18 and 45. Then the Turkish troops began assembling in all the towns; shortly afterward orders were issued for all Armenian families to get ready to be moved to "agricultural centers" where they would be settled. The unfortunate old men, old women, young women and children got ready. Crossing over a river the old men were thrust into the stream and drowned. Coming to a lonely part of the road the old women and children were taken out and knocked in the head with rifle butts. The young women were given over to the soldiery.

In this way, according to Dr. Partridge's own knowledge, a company of 5000 that set out was reduced to 130. Men who had been in America and had taken degrees in the American universities and then had returned home to teach their people were all murdered. These men were over 45 years of age in the prime of life but too old for the army. Not one of them was left alive, unless a few managed to escape.

One-half of the nation has already perished, and when the cruelties are ended, if they ever are, barely one-fourth of the nation will be left alive. Should the war continue much longer, however, it is likely that there will be no Armenian nation on the face of the earth.

OVERLAND CREATES SENSATION

An Overland automobile, owned by Mr. C. W. Winters of Chicago, carrying five passengers, made the remarkable record of travelling 29 miles on one gallon of gasoline. The car had been run over three thousand miles prior to the test.

The total weight of the car and five passengers was 3930 pounds, which on the mileage secured, equals 56.9 ton miles per gallon. The test was made over the boulevards of Chicago, and held under the official supervision of The American Automobile Association representative, Mr. F. E. Edwards, who was assisted by Mr. H. A. Tarantous of the technical committee of the Chicago Automobile club.

With one gallon of gasoline of 58 degrees hydrometer reading, the Overland went 29 miles, breaking all world's records on four cylinder water cooled cars.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY

"Fifty years ago the words 'university life' would have had a strange and foreign sound," writes President Hadley of Yale University, in an article which appeared in the Youths Companion, "The American boy 'went to college.' The name 'university' looked well enough on the outside of a catalogue; it might be useful in getting gifts from benefactors or appropriations from the state legislature, but nobody employed it in everyday speech except 'cranks' and freshmen. And the freshmen soon learned better."

President Hadley goes on to give interesting descriptions of conditions as they existed in the old-time colleges, to draw comparisons between those conditions and the ones we know today. In the first place, of course, the colleges were very small; their buildings consisted of the regular, familiar type of brick dormitories, a few of them, a recitation hall or two, with a belfry in front and within rooms filled with bare benches. There was the college church, perhaps a kitchen, and some common rooms for the use of the men. In most colleges the library was lodged in the top story of a recitation hall; there were no laboratories, no museums, no gymnasiums.

"The arrangements for play were quite as rudimentary as those for study," says President Hadley. "The complicated modern apparatus of athletic fields and gymnasium had not yet sprung into being. If there was a river; students could take their exercise in boats; otherwise they contented themselves with walking. Riding was discouraged as too ostentatious. If the boys wanted to play ball, they went out to the nearest piece of open ground and played it, without previous practice or training. "Intercollegiate boat racing began in 1853, intercollegiate ball games 15 years later; but those races and games were impromptu affairs compared with what we have now." The main amusements of the students were in the house; those boys who came from homes where books were few found much entertainment in the college library. The fun-loving often turned to practical jokes, which were played upon both pupils and professors; the professors had to know how to turn the jokes against the boys themselves.

There is one old story of a professor who, on approaching his desk, found a goose tied to his chair, craning its long neck over the desk as he drew near. Turning to the students, he said at once, "Gentlemen, I see that you have secured a competent instructor;" and with that he left the room. That professor was never again the butt of the practical jokers.

Most of the older American colleges were founded for the benefit of men training for the ministry. Much Latin and Greek were studied; few students expected to make great use of these subjects after they left college and so their interest in them was only to get as good marks as they could. It was a sort of contest between professors and pupils as to how much the professors could force the pupils to learn.

But in the middle of the nineteenth century there came changes which altered the colleges greatly. First, there was the founding of professional schools where students prepared for some one line. Second, there evolved the technical colleges, on the model of West Point, where students were given certain subjects in addition to being prepared for their particular callings. To both of these schools students went because they wanted the benefit of the learning which they could get there. Then, thirdly, came the introduction of the elective system, whereby students were in a degree able to select their subjects of study. Most college men now feel that a boy gets a better education if he is studying subjects which interest him than if he is forced to study those which do not interest him.

Following these three great changes has come the wide development of the American college into a university. There are now a number of courses from which students may select their work; there is cooperation between professors and students, as there should be. Each specialized subject has provision made for its needs—laboratories, libraries, museums, machine shops. The university is no longer a place where students contend with each other to see who can do best or get the highest marks,

NEW SILK SWEATERS

The maid of sports
 Is out of sorts
 With her erstwhile silk sweater;
 She now just dotes
 On Jersey coats
 And in them looks much better.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—If little Miss Up-to-the-Minute had to appear on the golf course today in anything so passe as a sweater her putting would undoubtedly turn to pouting. It couldn't possibly serve her in a tennis game and in a sweater in a motor she'd never be in style. To be smart when she goes in a boat she must go in a coat. It's a case of off with the old love of a sweater and on with the new love of a silk Jersey sport coat. This is the answer why the lovely fifteen dollar sweaters of last year are now offered to the not too finicky dressers for $4.98 at the February sales.

These new Jersey sport coats come in solid colors or stripes in all the popular shades and may be either silk or wool Jersey, to suit your taste or your pocketbooks.

They are all loose fitting and hip length. One stunning model has a yoke in front and back and an odd belt made like two belts, one above the other and cuffs made of two deep bands to ape the belt. The rolling collar is a white detachable one.

Another plain toned coat has raglan sleeves with deep cuffs, deep square collar and the belt, to which the coat is shirred in the back, turns into sash ends in front.

A striped model has a deep collar and reveals a wide belt, patch pockets and set-in sleeves. It is trimmed in novelty buttons of white centered in the same color as the stripe in the coat. A smart wool Jersey coat is shirred on two cords at the belt line in the back and has sash ends in front. It has that newest note of the season, the cape collar and patch pockets shirred across the top.

Appropos of pockets, a mention of them in a description of any feminine garment will soon be superfluous as they are featured on frocks, coats, suits, skirts and blouses in reckless profusion and construction. Entire sport suits of the Jersey cloth are even more chic than the separate coats.

One striking one of white has a deep double cape collar of red Jersey with a red band around the bottom of the coat and red cuffs.

These cape collars, by the way, are to be wished on our shoulders outside the field of sports and along with peplums and pockets add the 1916 touches to all our new suits and frocks. As for the material in which they are developed it is no other than Jersey cloth.

So you see whether you be a true sportswoman or not, you are bound to be sporty and sport the fabrics and features first made for the sport maid.

HOUSE OPERATED BY ELECTRICITY

GARDINER, Mo., February 28.—The house at 56 Walter street, overlooking the Kennebec river, a structure that is known historically as the Indian block-house, might almost be said to be electrified.

Edgar E. Ramsdell lives there. He likes electricity and is full of the subject. He likes to experiment along both practical and theoretical lines. He believes electricity has a mission and he makes the subtle fluid work its passages in his own abode.

As one approaches the front door it opens automatically. It is operated from the inside by push buttons. This plan was inaugurated chiefly to save steps when members of the household are coming in at frequent intervals during the day.

One of the first objects seen on entering the front room is a calendar clock that gives the day of the week and month, as well as the correct time, and winds itself every eight minutes. The dates all change instantaneously when the stroke comes that marks the midnight hour. The clock strikes the hour and the half hour on three gongs located in different parts of the house. On a large switchboard there are also shown a number of fire alarm boxes, all of them ready to operate at any moment. Mr. Ramsdell takes great delight in showing the mechanism of these fire alarm boxes and the contrast between the old and new patents.

The sewing machine in the sitting room is run by electricity, all the cooking is done by electricity close to the dining room table, where all the latest devices are installed, and the clothes are washed by electricity. There are electric flatirons, devices for securing all grades of light, especially constructed electric reflectors for the sewing table and another very powerful white light for looking down the throats of his children, if sick with colds or other maladies. There is also a full line of electric heating pads for keeping everybody warm at night and for use in cases of sickness. About everything in the dining room is run by electricity except the thermometer and Mr. Ramsdell says he knows of no way to hitch that up.

Wasatch Range were laid down as sand and mud on the bottom of the ancient sea, where they became compacted and hardened into sandstone, shale, and limestone. The sea bottom eventually became land. As mother earth has aged her skin has cracked and wrinkled. In the Utah-Nevada region many long cracks were formed and the rocks on one side or the other were moved slowly upward or downward, forming long ridges along the cracks, steep on one side and gently sloping on the other. Such breaks in the earth's crust are called faults. A fault may be a few or hundreds of miles long, and the distance which the rock beds on one side slip past those on the other may range from a fraction of an inch to thousands of feet. When the rocks on one side are shoved up over those on the other side, the break is called a reverse or overthrust fault. (Overland Guidebook, Bulletin 612, U. S. G. S.)
