The principal objection which we have heard urge rgainst the abolition of the gambling laws, is about it will b found rather difficult to compensate the state for the loss revenue consequent on the withfirawal of incenses.

This is an argument in favor of our democratic friend passess determination and shilanthropy. There is a bill before the house, to levy an annual tax of a dollar on all cutzens who have attained the age of 21 years. Such a tax could with propriety and advantage be raised; and would furnish an adequate substitute for the revenue raised on gambling houses.

Thus our pointed friends could achieve a double triumph -bne in redeeming the state and society from the obloquy and adjum of legally licensing gambling houses; and a se cond, in extending and equalizing the right of suffrage to all. Will they forego the opportunity so fortunately offered of obtaining a triumph for moral feeling, and political prin-∘ciµles ?

By dates from Mexico, to the 2d instant, we have receive advices of the resignation of Santa Anna of the chief magi-tracy of the Mexican republic. The congress having nominally accepted his resignation, they ordered the election of psecident for a subsequent day; and elected General Migne Barragan, president during the interval-through the influence of Santa Anna. By a third decree of the congress the office of vice-president was declared null; so that Go mez Perias was obliged to resign; and commotion appeared the order at the day, secretly agitated by Santa Anna, that the necessity of his more permanently resuming his en-1. orny might be rendered osiensible.

it is not unlikely that at the election for president as de reed, Santa Anna will be elected perpetual chief magic trate, or dictator of the fallen republic. There does no appear to be sufficient intelligence in Mexico to warrant republican form of government. Liberty never existed where knowletige fiid not prevail. A people to be free mus be intelligent and epirated.

creased, as their numbers are increased. When there are few to perform the duties of trustees, their energies are concentrated; and they become more willing and assiduous; bu when there are many, there is a negligent dependence on each other; and a want of attendance and attention which embarrance the affairs of an institution. He thinks 7 krushees 'q ite sufficient for the hospital: for the attention is general'y in proportion to the responsibility, and responsibility is lessened by multiplicity. The quorum proposed by the bill will transact all the lusiness; the same quorum now the bill will transact all the lusiness; the same quorum now at decompany, and the soldiers of a decompany, each in his own and private name. trustees? At present, he hears that a meeting of the id ininistrature does not occur oftener sometimes, than once :

Mr Hox admits the propriety of the general principle of the member from Concordia; but thinks it inapplicable to the present case-where the services of the administrators are given gratuitously. There are many philanthropic gentlemen anxious to become trustees, and the bill is merely insended to encourage their zeal and laudable generosity .-That there is now not often a meeting of the trustees true; but that arises from their having appointed a sub-board more immediately to manage the affairs of the hespital .-But the reports and suggestions of this sub-board are always acted on at the mesetings of the trustees. Consider. ing that the state makes an annual donation of $50,000 t the hospital, it appears accessary to increase the number of those to whose responsibility the expenditure of se large a sum is entrusted: and he thinks 12 is not too many. The benefits of an institution so highly honorable to the state. should be diffused as extensively as possible; and he believes that its advantages would be more extended, if the number of trustees is increased. Mr TERREY moved that the bill for the present be laid on the table; and that meantime the joint committee ap_ pointed to visit and examine the charity hospital, be instructed to inquire into the expediency of sucreasing the number of trustees. The resolution was unanimously
