Considerations

- Before you apply for access to limited databases, be sure that you do not already have access via your employer, school, state library, or local public library.
- Before you apply for access to a database, draft the response to the required questions carefully. Clearly state why you need access to the resources, and how granting you access to them will help forward the goals of Wikipedia projects.
- Applications for limited access databases take time for approval and may not necessarily be approved. If your application is not approved, reword your application and try again later.
- Once approved, limited databases will show up in My Library on the “My Collections” tab.
- Databases marked as “Waitlisted” are unavailable for application for access at this time but can be revisited later.
- If you do not make the required number of edits in a month, your access may be temporarily restricted until you complete additional edits.
