ACTIVE BAND OF LADIES FINDS LIBERAL RESPONSE TO RELIEF WORK

Early this morning the bevy of ladies who had undertaken to sell tags for the Jewish Relief cause were out on the streets and hard at work. Mrs. E. W. Kinney, chairman of the ladies, was active everywhere and the work of selling the tags was carried on briskly wherever she went. Others were just as active and every one in her own sphere managed to sell to a coterie of friends before the actual hard work of the day had begun. One worker had sold more than 120 tags by 11 a. m. Others had had success up to 100 and so on.

The following ladies are at work selling tags: Mrs. E. W. Kinney, Mrs. P. A. Kranz, Miss A. Frank, Mrs. M. Barnett, Mrs. Nanno Woods, Miss Watts, Mrs. A. Baum, Miss Eva Daniels, Miss Virginia Graham, Miss Hilda Blatt, Miss Klein, Mrs. A. L. Cohn, Mrs. Flynn.

Mr. Frank Stadler, Milton Kranz, Ralph Miles and Frank Troy are also selling tags.

The Glendale High School, which intended to give a matinee of its Variety Show today postponed the affair in view of the fact that the Tag day parade and street shows are to take place. The Glendale High School band will take part in the parade.

Subscriptions have been coming in slowly since the big Sunday meeting and it is hoped that when these and the proceeds of today's work are added to Sunday's subscriptions there will be a highly creditable sum to send from this city. Subscription lists will be kept open for some days and any person desiring to subscribe can give the money to Mr. Ed Lee at the First National bank.

The parade starts from the High School today at 3 p. m. Moving pictures will be taken by the Hearst Film service for Pictorial News service of that company. Following are the names of those who subscribed at the Sunday meeting and the amounts donated:

INTEREST IN BOOKS

WORKS ON CHILD CULTURE IN DEMAND — INDUSTRIAL CHEMISTRY ATTRACTS

According to Mrs. Danford, the librarian of the public library of Glendale, a gradual development of interest has been noted in works on child culture. This interest has followed usually the meetings of the Parent-Teacher associations, where the subject of child welfare has been discussed. The librarian has decided to issue a bulletin giving a list of the works bearing on this subject. This bulletin will be sent to the presidents of the various Parent-Teacher associations who will be glad to give information on the books pertaining to this most important subject.

Those who do not attend the Parent-Teacher associations may know that these books have been recently added to the library out of a list that has received the approval of the government. They treat on all the varied phases of the subject and contain much valuable knowledge regarding the feeding of infants and the development of the child's physical and mental system.

There have also been added to the books on temperance a number of volumes that treat on that subject in a rational and moderate manner, handling the subject scientifically and affording much information that is interesting as well as data that are reliable. These books were recommended to the library by a committee that had given the subject much thought and study.

One of the most marked features of the use that is being made of the library is that many people have suddenly developed an interest in industrial chemistry. This is doubtless the outcome of the war in Europe. It is well known that the failure of this country to get dyes from its own resources is working a hardship in many of the industries of the country. Many practical men and women are working hard on the problem of supplying those dyes that are so much needed for the production of all manner of cloth fabrics and fancy paper stock.

It is evident from the class of books taken out that many people are turning their minds to the subject of discovering processes of producing the brilliant coal tar dyes, which up to this time have been supplied by Germany alone. They are also taking a profound interest in other chemical productions, the supply of which the war has suddenly cut off.

The library, according to the librarian, has endeavored to collect books that deal with all such subjects and that will be helpful to those who desire to prosecute these researches.

There is also a gradual development of the musical department in the library. Up till now the musical section has been rather slim, but it is growing and the librarian is trying to add such works on the theory of music as will prove advantageous to those who are taking up this study. Works on harmony, counterpoint and thorough bass will be added. Suggestions as to what books would be valuable will be welcomed by the librarian. It is hoped that it will be possible to add from time to time not only more books on the theory of music, but also more of the actual works of the masters.

MRS. LYONS HOSTESS

The home of Mrs. John Lyons, 1520 Vine street, was the scene of a very pretty affair Wednesday afternoon, February 16, when she entertained the members of her sewing class. Roses and violets were used for decoration and lent their beauty and fragrance to add to the happiness of the guests. The hostess had provided abundant entertainment to keep her guests amused during the afternoon and many clever games were enjoyed. A dainty luncheon was served to Mesdames David Bennett, Earl Bryant, George Lyons, Marie Bishop, Eva Daniels and the hostess.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Mr. and Mrs. John Daun of 109 South Louise street entertained Wednesday evening with a birthday surprise party, having as honoree Mrs. Oliver O. Clark. The attractive Daun home was abloom with a veritable bower of sweet spring blossoms and a most delightful evening was spent at games. Punch was served throughout the hours of entertainment, and at 11 o'clock the guests partook of the well appointed buffet supper, after which Mrs. Clark cut and served each with a slice of the delicious birthday cake.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE ERZEROU GARRISON

FIFTY THOUSAND TURKS AND ONE THOUSAND CANNON TAKEN WITH GREAT FORTRESS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Russian dispatches from Petrograd today report that the taking of the great Erzeroum forts, which was thought to be an impossibility, was accomplished with comparative ease after the taking of Kop mountain had been effected. From that point the Russian guns dominated the forts and speedily reduced nine of the eighteen forts that constituted the defenses of Erzeroum. More than 50,000 Turkish troops are reported to have been captured. A thousand cannon were also taken, with vast quantities of munitions and a large number of machine guns. Deep snow blocked all the passes and made it impossible for the garrison to save itself by flight. It is thought that the effect on the campaign will be considerable and that the Turks will be compelled to relieve the pressure on Gen. Townsend's force at Kut-el-Amara.

CONSTANTINOPLE ADVICES STATE THAT 5000 MUSCOVITES FELL BEFORE ERZEROU FORTS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 17.—In the five days of fighting that were occupied in the storming of the remaining nine forts at Erzeroum, the Russians lost no fewer than 500 killed, besides an enormous number of wounded. The Turkish garrison did not yield until fully one-half of their number was either killed or wounded. The roads and passes were completely blocked with snow. Provisions were scarce and ammunition was running low. The Russians were kept well supplied.

"BLONDE BOSS" OF CHICAGO ON TRIAL

FORMER SENATOR LORRIMER OF ILLINOIS CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO LOOT BANKS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—Former Senator William Lorrimer of Chicago, commonly known as the "blonde boss," who, it will be remembered, was deprived of his seat in the United States senate on charges of election corruption, is on trial here today, charged with conspiracy to loot Illinois banks. The case looks bad for Lorrimer, but he has good attorneys and a strong fight is being made in his behalf. The attorneys succeeded in having the three separate indictments against Lorrimer consolidated. Lorrimer refused to predict his own acquittal.

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17.—Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, today informed Secretary Lansing that Great Britain must pledge that her liners will not fire on submarines before Germany will instruct the commanders of her undersea boats not to attack armed merchantmen without warning.

LAKE TULARE BURSTS ITS BOUNDS

MUCH DAMAGE DONE TO GRAIN LAND IN FLOODED REGION NEAR HANFORD

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

HANFORD, Cal., Feb. 17.—Lake Tulare, which for some seasons has been shrinking, today is a vast inland sea. The waters of the flooded lake broke through the west level this morning and flooded twenty sections of grain land. The waters are still pouring into the lake, which will soon be as large as it has ever been in many years past. The loss of property and crops will be very considerable. In recent years grain cultivation had been carried on even in the lake bed. The whole region was excellent grain soil.

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—The police raided the South side today and rounded up a great many of the German anarchistic element, finally discovering among them Fritz Schoenfeld, the man suspected of being an accomplice of Jean Crones, the chef believed to have poisoned the soup at the governor's banquet some days ago.

TALE OF THE TRENCHES

REV. JOHN TROY GIVES INTERESTING STORY OF FIGHTING IN FRANCE

"I recently received a letter from my relatives in England," said the Rev. John Troy of the First Baptist church, to a representative of The Glendale Evening News. "My relatives, that is to say, my uncle and cousins, live at Turnbridge Wells, the famous old English 'watering place,' as they used to call it. That was the city whither the court in Charles II's time used to go for the benefit of its health, just as the court of George IV. used to go to Brighton."

"It is an interesting city and very active just at present on account of the war. The Troys are an old Huguenot family and the fighting blood of the French Protestants is in their veins. They went over to England like so many others at the time of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. There they have remained. When the war broke out my uncle's son, John Henry Troy, my cousin, called after myself, was a youth of eighteen."

"John Henry Troy like all young Englishmen of his age read with grief stiffening into resolve of the devastation of Belgium and the murders of innocent women and children. The first dark days of the war were brooding over the countries of Europe; the French and British were sternly retreating, disputing every inch of the ground against the Germans who outnumbered them five to one. The Royal Sussex, a line regiment that had entered the war 1000 strong, had in that stern and bloody retreat lost every man in its ranks except sixteen. The story of the gallant manner in which they had held on to the enemy even while in retreat stirred every heart and my cousin determined to join the army."

"He never told his parents anything about his resolve, but allowed them to imagine that he was merely going to volunteer for home defense. When he got to the recruiting station, however, he joined the regular army among the first of Kitchener's recruits, and was sent out to the trenches. His parents were astonished. His father is a man of considerable wealth and of some social importance in the county of Sussex. He might have waited and gone out with an officer's commission, but his French-English blood could not wait. He went through the last days of the retreat and then joined in the victorious aggressive that swept the Germans back out of the Marne and Aisne valleys and threw them into the lines they now occupy."

"Through all that fighting my cousin was fortunate enough not to be wounded. Since the two armies have dug themselves in and have confined themselves to artillery duels varied by occasional rushes to capture a few hundred yards of trenches, John Henry Troy has taken part in all that has been going on. He has been under fire night and day for 11 months and has escaped any serious hurt."

"The other day he came home on furlough, clad in his khaki regimentals, with rifle, trench-axe, water bottle, cartridge belts and all the other equipment a soldier has to carry about with him even on leave. His clothing was in a pitiable condition with holes and mud. It was all burned and he was outfitted anew by his people."

"He went away a boy and came back a man. He had grown almost two inches and had gained 28 pounds weight; like all the British soldiers who have come back on furlough he would say nothing concerning what was going on as the orders are not to speak. But he was cheerful and confident. All the men who like him come back tell the same tale. They are confident that the enemy will be beaten. They don't doubt it. They are content to do what they are told."

"Theirs not to reason why, Theirs but to do and die." "My cousin talks French and German and is often employed on that account to creep out of the trenches at night and get close to the German lines where he can hear what the soldiers are saying. In this way much useful information is obtained. The work, however, is dangerous, but he likes it. He seems to bear a charmed life. One time, he told his people, when on this work he fell into one of the immense craters scooped out by a huge German shell. The clash of his fall aroused the Germans and immediately the searchlight flashed on the crater. My cousin lay perfectly still while the machine guns poured a perfect hail of bullets around him. Finally they gave it up and John Henry Troy coolly resumed

PERMITS TO DATE

BUILDING DURING FIRST HALF OF FEBRUARY IS COMPARATIVELY SMALL

The looked for increase in building throughout the city has not as yet shown signs of having arrived. While there have been indications that buildings are contemplated, there has been no move to begin and it remains for the latter half of the month to compensate for the slackness of the opening two weeks.

At the same time the permits for February during the first half of the month show an increase over last year. The amount up to Feb. 17 was $9,865. This looks well beside the amount for the same period last year of $5,828. However, the increase is due almost entirely to one item of $7,000, which represents a brick store building that is being erected by J. E. Peters of 323 S. Brand boulevard.

Building permits numbered eleven; plumbing permits numbered 16 with a total value of $1160; electric permits numbered 14.

Permits were as follows: Spencer Robinson is erecting an office building at 406 S. Glendale avenue at a cost of $500.

Charles Brant is building a store at 218 E. Broadway; cost $100.

George F. Dair is building a garage at 332 W. Colorado street at a cost of $60.

A. B. Gillies is building a garage at 443 E. Third street, at a cost of $50.

J. E. Peters is building a substantial brick store building at 323 S. Brand boulevard at a cost of $7000. Harry Stock is making a change at 524 S. Jackson at a cost of $75.

J. W. Fairchild is making a change at 1100 W. Broadway at a cost of $50.

H. C. Reid is building a garage at 380 Orange at a cost of $500.

The Bookery is remodeling its premises at 114 Broadway at a cost of $500.

S. B. Jones is having a garage built by E. D. Yard, at 1543 West Seventh street, at a cost of $30.

C. Lamar is having a dwelling built at 711 Lomita, at a cost of $1500. The contractor is J. H. Walter.

TAX COLLECTION CHANGES

By an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance of the City of Glendale Providing for the Assessment and Collection of City Taxes," changes have been made in the time of payment that, it is hoped, will suit the convenience of the taxpayers better than the old arrangement. The new ordinance provides that the taxes on real estate may be paid in two installments. Payment may be made as early as the second Monday in September following the first publication of notice of assessment, of the first half of the taxes on real estate and the entire tax in the case of personal property. The first payment of the real estate taxes thus does not come about Christmas time as it used to do, to the great inconvenience of many people. The first half of the real estate taxes and the taxes on personal property will become delinquent on the second Monday in December, and the second half of the real estate taxes will become delinquent on the last Monday in April. These are the chief changes that intimately concern taxpayers.

FLOOD IN ELSINORE

Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Lauer, 1427 Burchett street, returned from Elsinore, where they have been spending some days with Dr. Lauer's parents. They report very serious conditions in that section where the rains have flooded the country and destroyed a great deal of property. The waters from the hills gathered in the lake at Elsinore and gradually increased its level till it now stands about 16 feet higher than it usually does. The waters have invaded the promising walnut groves and nothing but the tops of the trees are to be seen. There will be considerable loss throughout the district. The beautiful modern clubhouse recently erected by the side of the lake is so far under water that nothing but the roof is visible.

Rev. F. W. Tarr will give an address on Sunday school work at the Baptist church tonight. This is preliminary to the Glendale-Tropico Sunday school convention tomorrow night.

his crawl toward the German lines, learned what he could and crept back unhurt. When told that this was heroism, he said that there were thousands of such heroes in all the armies who will never have any record made of their heroism. It has become commonplace."

GOLD OUTPUT IN CALIFORNIA

Notwithstanding the lure of Alaska and the many wonderful tales that have been told of the richness of gold deposits in that wonderful country, California continues to stand at the head of the gold-producing states of America. It is true that there have been some wonderfully valuable placer deposits in Alaska, like the beach at Topok and the front beach at Nome, where a claim consisted of as much ground as could be inclosed by drawing a circle around one at full length of the arm, with a No. 2 shovel. Out of such patches of ground some men took as much as $100,000 and some even more.

These exceedingly rich spots, however, are few and far between, and most of the gold that is obtained in Alaska as elsewhere is earned by the hardest of hard work. There have been rich placer mines on the third beach at Nome, lying inland about three and a half miles out of which, like Little creek, as much as $2,000,000 was taken in a season, or the Bessie bench, which yielded $1,500,000. These have been equaled in California in the old days and when it comes to rich quartz mines California can show in the Grass Valley and other northern state mines some of the richest quartz deposits in the world. The great Treadwell mine in Douglas Island, Alaska, though it boasts of being the biggest stamp mill in the world, works on low grade ore like the Yellow Aster mine in Kern County, California, and makes large profits on ores that run about $2 to $2.50 a ton.

California leads the gold production of the United States in 1915 with an output of nearly $23,000,000. It was followed by Colorado with more than $22,000,000. Alaska with $17,000,000 was a fair third; Nevada had $12,000,000; South Dakota more than $7,000,000; Montana nearly $5,000,000; Arizona more than $4,000,000; Utah $3,500,000; Oregon nearly $2,500,000; New Mexico, almost $1,500,000; Idaho and the Philippines about $1,200,000 each.

California's gold output of 1915 was the largest in 32 years and with the exception of one other year the largest in more than fifty years. Deep mining and dredging for gold have been active. In Colorado, Cripple Creek alone increased its output by more than $1,500,000 and that camp was more prosperous than for years.

One of the chief reasons for this increased output both in Colorado and in California was that the processes by which the content of gold ores is recovered is daily becoming more perfect. It is now possible to save 95 per cent of the gold values. Formerly, before processes of cyanidation and treatment of slimes was perfected, no attempt was made to save anything but the richest of the ores. Now it is possible to save almost the whole content of any kind of ore. Smelting processes have also been perfected and refractory ores can now be handled that formerly had to be abandoned in despair.

All this has increased the output of gold and will continue to increase it. Men both in Alaska and in California have found fortunes in working over by modern methods old dumps that had been left untreated for want of means of handling them. There has been a slightly decreased gold output from the placers of Alaska; while the quartz propositions in that country are increasing their output. As time goes on, however, other rich placers will be discovered in Alaska and that country will come to the front. It has also enormous rich quartz propositions that cannot be worked because there are no railways close to them.

Out of all this comes the lesson that if you want to get gold you have to work for it as diligently and as toilsomely as for anything else in this world. At the same time the money thus earned is about as clean from a moral point of view as any money that can be obtained, and that is something.

ASPECTS OF MODERN COMPETITION

Not long ago a federal commission was in session seeking to find out what constitutes unfair competition. The commission after its months of inquiry is about where it was to begin with on the question. The commission seems unable to give any definition of what constitutes unfair competition, but is able to point to individual cases where the competition seemed to be unfair. As far as the inquiry has gone it has simply been able to bring out the fact that wherever a man has been beaten by his rival he has concluded that he has lost through unfair competition.

Those who have succeeded seem to maintain that in this game, which they hold to be a mere survival of the fittest, any method is to be considered fair that is successful. Complaint was made against some of the new "cafeteria" stores where, according to evidence, a party may go in, help himself to what articles soever he desires and be checked out at the door. That makes it possible to sell a 15-cent article for 13 cents. The grocers naturally brand such competition as unfair.

In the case, again, of the chain-stores, of which there are many all over the land, it is possible to buy in large quantities at cut prices even on standard articles. These stores are a sore subject with many of the ordinary dealers. They tell about the big concerns that sell 20-cent articles for 15 cents in one town and 25 cents in another, to crowd out a competitor in the 15-cent district. The stores assert that they are entitled to take advantage of their bigness to crush out the little man.

Again, the commission finds that it is a common practice for unscrupulous dealers to imitate first-class goods and to sell slightly under their price. The man who makes standard articles and cannot keep some retailers from knocking a cent or two off its price to attract other trade has a grievance also.

There have been approximately 100 types of complaints filed; as for the complaints themselves their name is legion. They range in merit from what the commission considers merely a case of more efficient business conduct to a number of cases in which the casual competitor has resorted to methods manifestly unfair and even in some cases almost criminal in his desire to get advantage of his neighbor.

MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

In view of the interest that is being taken throughout the country in the question of uniform military training in the public schools, the Glendale Federation of Parent-Teacher associations has appointed a committee to secure speakers to discuss both sides of the question at an evening meeting, that all may have an opportunity to inform themselves upon this matter of vital importance.

The committee is highly pleased to announce that Lieut. Col. S. M. Saltmarsh, 7th Infantry, N. G. C., will take the platform in defense of the measure, and Mrs. Seward Simons, President of the Friday Morning club of Los Angeles, will take the opposing side. It is desired that these speakers, who donate their services to us in this generous manner, be greeted by a full house. Hear them at the Glendale High School auditorium, Thursday, 8 p. m., February 24. MRS. CHAS. H. TOLL, MRS. ALBERT S. CHASE, MRS. JOHN ROBERT WHITE, Committee.

CANDIDATE FOR CITY TREASURER

G. B. Hoffman, present incumbent, announces that he will be a candidate for the office of city treasurer at the next election, April 10. In view of his record of the past five years in the same position he confidently hopes to be re-elected.

The men who want to take advantage of their neighbors are by no means few in number. They seem to make a practice of studying up the different state laws and to make profit out of the fact that what is not fair in one state is all right in another.

"Competition is the soul of business" was the old business maxim. According to a great deal of the evidence before the commission modern merchants think they have altogether too much competition. "That," says the so-called up-to-date business man, "is exactly what we are trying to eliminate by our combinations of stores, our chains of stores, our buying in wholesale quantities. If the ordinary merchant cannot stand up against these methods let him get into such a combination or let him get out of the business. He will have to do so anyway. The sooner the better for himself." The other man says that is not fair and so the puzzled commission asks a solution of the question, which apparently it is not able to answer itself.

POSSIBILITIES OF HOME GARDENS TO BE SHOWN AT PALACE-GRAND THEATER

One of the greatest and most generous treats ever offered this community is the monster free picture show to be given at the Palace Grand Saturday morning, Feb. 19, at 10 o'clock sharp. The Glendale Garden society has already done much for Glendale and vicinity in stimulating thought and arousing interest along the lines of civic beauty. In arranging this monster picture entertainment, and inviting not only all Glendale, but also the schools and organizations of Tropic, La Canada, La Crescenta, Montrose, Burbank and Littlelanders, it is manifesting a spirit of enterprise and of get-togetherness which cannot fail to command the respect and backing of all open-minded persons.

That leading business men recognize the worth to the individual and to the city of this educational and inspiring movement is proved by the fact that Mr. Jensen, manager of the Palace Grand, has donated the free use of his beautiful theater for this entertainment. The Garden Society herewith tenders him their heartfelt thanks. Without this magnificent offer the entertainment would not have been possible.

It is expected that every school child and teacher in the entire valley will avail themselves of this invitation. Mothers are especially asked to be present that they may see and understand for themselves the ideas and practical efforts fostered by the Garden Society and by the school teachers along the lines of home horticulture and agriculture. "Other People's Back Yards," barren or fruitful, ugly or ornamental, tin cans or flowers, civic pride or lack of good citizenship, hundreds of pictures to interest and amuse and inspire.

Plan your social engagements and your home duties that every member of every family may attend this monster, free picture show on Saturday morning, 10 o'clock sharp, at the Palace Grand.

MRS. NANNO WOODS, Pres.

NINETEENTH ANNIVERSARY

Glendale Federation of the Parent-Teacher association will hold a regular meeting Monday, February 21st, at 2 p. m. in the Intermediate school. Richey, president of the First District, who will speak upon the national work. A program of vocal and instrumental music will be given and a birthday box for silver offering to further the national work will be in a conspicuous place. The cutting of the birthday cake and pleasant social hour will close the happy day. All members of the Parent-Teacher association are invited to attend this birthday party.

AT LUNCHEON

Beautiful pink roses used in profusion beautified the table upon which fourteen covers were laid for the well appointed luncheon given by Mrs. Geo. Mitchell at her Kenneth road home, Wednesday, in courtesy to members of the Woman's Guild of Saint Mark's church, who held an interesting all-day meeting in the Mitchell home.

The morning hours were spent in sewing. Following luncheon a business meeting was held, during which plans were arranged for a Cafeteria Supper to be given in the near future. Accepting the gracious hospitality of Mrs. Mitchell were Mrs. John T. Crampton, Mrs. Geo. Bannock, Mrs. I. J. Phillips, Mrs. S. O. Delgado, Mrs. A. M. Parker, Mrs. Richard H. Wells, Mrs. Albert C. Read, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, Mrs. Helen I. Campbell, Mrs. George Montgomery, Mrs. E. J. Dodge and Mrs. D. W. Hunt.

HONORING MISS McCAN

Miss Maysie McCAN, fiancee of Mr. W. S. Stauffacher, was the honoree of a beautifully appointed 500 party on the 16th instant, given by the Misses Athena and Olga Purt, in their attractive bungalow at 809 W. Sixth street. Bright red carnations, hearts and feathery fern were used extensively in decorating, the chandeliers wreathed in fern ropes were studded with carnations and hearts fell in cascades.

Scores were kept on cunning Kewpie cards decorated with red hearts and marked the highest score for Miss McCAN, who won first prize and honored guest prize, the latter a beautiful cut crystal case. Miss Elizabeth Porter was awarded consolation prize.

Accepting the gracious hospitality of these young hostesses, beside the bride-elect, were the Misses Cecelia Wilson, Elizabeth Porter, Gertrude Champlain, Birdie Shropshire, Ethel Read, Ina Whitaker, Grace Champ, Amy Bowerfind, Pauline Scholz, Agnes Frostick, Clara Read, Lillian Shropshire, Alice Frank, Charlotte Read, Lillian Mills, Ethel Land, Bess Provolt, Mattie Belle Provolt and Mrs. Arline Hallahan and Mrs. Frae Morse Wells.

Upon these occasions each guest is given a pencil and sheet of paper upon which is written the name, address, telephone number, birthplace and last resident place before coming to Glendale, of each person present. PATRIOTISM

(By Samuel Parker)

Patriotism—What is it? "Patriotism is love of the land in which we dwell." (Dictionary.) This is too indefinite, boil it down. Why should "land" (soil), "country," mere "expanse" of mountain plain, forest, verdure, snow, with all they can present in combined variety create the thrill we call "love" in the human breast? Believe me, my friends, if we rule man out of all this arduous creation of "country" and the "rocks and woods and templed hills" of Smith's grand song sinks into an insignificance of value. Alexander Selkirk had for his own the whole island of Juan Fernandez in a wealth of "country" (land) wilderness, every acre of which he would gladly have given for the sight of a friendly face or the grasp of a friendly hand, clearly demonstrating that mere possession of a country great and vast has nothing in it to inspire love of country, but on the contrary, Selkirk was a most miserable man and would gladly have become a "man without a country" could he have got away.

A "country," then, to create and inspire the growth of patriotism must have its base in mankind rather than soil, in mind rather than mountains, but as neither element can do business separate from the other in combination are results obtained, and a "country" is carved out in this way worthy the love of man. Just in degree as man has conquered the crudities of rugged nature about him, supplanting these by more congenial surroundings showing uplift and safety, and enthroning "law" as grand arbiter for preserving equal rights and justice among men. In a country only where this principle is recognized and constant effort made to make it more efficient and effective can we hope to get into the hearts of our people that real love of country they so sweetly sing about. But while Selkirk was dying from loneliness and uttering wallings never before uttered about being "out of humanity's reach," and desiring to be told by some subtle process whether he yet had a friend that cast a thought after him, though that friend he would "never more see," a legend (no where else than here recorded) states that "Alec" raised his eyes to meet the gaze of another prisoner like himself who had been shipwrecked on the other side of the island and had been bemoaning his sad and lonesome fate, as loud and long as had "Alec." Meeting under these strange conditions, of course they fell on one another in a long embrace and when this ended what happened. Did they each proceed in great earnestness to give the desolate island to one another? Not any. Each insisted that he struck the island first and that the bulk of it belonged to him. The controversy is yet unsettled. It underlaid all the wars of the past, is beneath the conflict in Europe today. It crops out whenever selfishness and greed obtain in human affairs and its cruel demands strike down women and children at every point where the dollar is held above the man.

Is a country where such things obtain a good school for educating patriots? Can we make good our boast of freedom where tyranny dominates with the voices of our forefathers ringing in our ears. "Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God." With monopolistic greed gobbling all the natural resources of the country, forests, water power, gas land, and every year the opportunities for getting a living becoming harder and harder for the poor man, are not good conditions for the growth of patriotism with the common people, but give them a chance and they will put into the service of their country the best that is in them of intelligent citizenship. They will be quick to see the favors that come to them from a government zealous for their welfare, and every fiber of their being will respond in desire to sustain the government that so nobly "gives them a chance" and the life of good citizens, or their death, if need be, will attest their loyalty.

Are affairs in this country tending along these healthful lines. Are the "inalienable rights" of Jefferson being wrought out in securing these rights by the formation of governments by and with the consent of the governed? Is there not today dangerous symptoms of a tendency to ignore the people in creating an office holding "table round" which even now is loudly declaring "you are unfit for these things, this is our business." At this particular time when the attention of the people is called to the celebration of three patriots whose birthdays are near and whose lives were sacredly devoted to the people, Washington, Lincoln and McKinley, it were well to canonize in our hearts anew sentiments held by each, "Avoid entangling alliances with other nations." "Keep close to the people." "Let the people rule."

THE DOUGHNUT

Oh, Katie's doughnuts are the best That ever you did see! She says she could not cook at all Without the aid of me. She mixes dough so smooth and sweet, Then she will roll and roll; But it is not a doughnut yet, Until I make the hole.

And if I make the hole, I say They're wholly mine, you see! But Katie cannot take a joke. And never will agree. So when they lie all brown and hot And tempting in the bowl, She says to me, "You may have one, But do not eat the whole."

EARLY COAL MINING IN OREGON.

Coal was first noted in the Coos Bay region, Oregon, about 60 years ago, Prof. J. S. Newberry having reported in 1855 that the coal deposits of Coos Bay had begun to attract attention.

The first cargo was shipped from the Empire Basin, but the discovery of coal near the head of Coos Bay soon transferred the point of production to Newport, which remained the principal mine until within the last decade, since the Beaver Hill mine has been more successfully managed and become the chief producer. The first record of coal production is contained in the census report of 1880, when 43,205 short tons were mined.

ORANGE COVE

ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL GARDEN SPOTS OF THE SAN FERNANDO VALLEY

With this issue of The Evening News Orange Cove and Hansen Heights take a place in this paper with their sister foothill communities. The News presents two articles below which will introduce the stranger to the territory and people represented.

GROWING

By Mrs. Myrtle D. Rowley

It is evident to one who has been here a few years that Orange Cove is growing. The charm and wildness of the isolated or forgotten little cove, hidden up among the foothills, with the big mountains looking over their shoulders to see that all is well, is rapidly disappearing.

Going are the patches of wild currants with their leathery, yellow blossomed branches scenting all the air around in springtime and later in the summer laden with rich ripe fruit, furnishing feast after feast for the birds. Going, too, are the sprangly elder bushes, some having acquired the dignity and bearing of trees, with fragrant clusters of creamy blossoms and eventually the juicy fruit. The birds were always first at the elder bushes, although the currants did sometimes yield their fruit to eager hands and was transformed into the most delicious jellies.

The hill slopes and valleys are being cleared of brush and at night when debris is being burned the dancing flames draw weird and fantastic shadows and the men and boys piling on the brush look like spirits gathered for a carnival.

Everywhere by day we see men and teams plowing, scraping and doing all the magical things that turn a modest, unassuming ease-loving little canon into a busy, energetic place of "affairs" and "business of importance." No more may we stroll out some bright spring morning, after a shower during the night, and follow any trail our fancy dictates to wander into places so charmingly picturesque and beautiful that one's senses fairly ache from the rapture of it all.

Strolling along watching the startled little animals of the lonely places peer out from under cover of a fallen tree or thick undergrowth and listening to the delightful music of the birds when looking up with the feeling that eyes are watching us we meet the soft tranquil gaze of a doe. She stands and returns our gaze, not understanding of course the unintelligible things we are saying just for pure joy and then she turns and nimbly trots a few yards upwards, over boulders and around brush, then stops again, questioning with her wonderful, almost human eyes our right to be in her domain.

Going on up the narrowing channel of some rushing torrent of winters gone by, we climb over rocks, then stoop and crawl under brush that is shaking hands with its neighbor across this deserted water aisle. Surely no human being has been in this idyllic spot before. Lo, what is this—a water pipe. Vanish all our fancies of having explored and found something new.

Following the pipeline we find a spring developed and which evidently has been used for domestic purposes. We remember now the pile of boulders at the mouth of the canon looked as though they had been gathered together for some purpose and then we fancy the habitation that must have been there.

Well—the exploring has been delightful, even though some one else had been there before; perhaps lived and died there and experienced the tragedies of everyday life with its cares and burdens, joys and rewards for all things attempted and double portions for all things accomplished.

Gone we say is the privilege of wandering when and where one will, but in its place we have the building of homes, the beginning of a novel and lucrative business and—neighbors.

The little spring is nobly supplying the homes with its pure water and where the brush and undergrowth grew is sending down an abundance of water for the trees, gardens and flowers that are growing there.

On the hillside where the startled doe looked down at us we find other four-footed animals that have not, perhaps, the charm of the wild creatures, but are very interesting. These are the pedigreed goats that have found a home here, and, as the location seems ideal, the raising of these animals will no doubt be a financial success.

Coming out of the little by-canon into the larger canon or Orange Cove as it is now called, but was formerly known as Tuna canon (and sorry we are that the name has been changed) we find that a great many trees are finding their way here. The citrus has first place because of the practically frostless conditions here, but the beautiful avocado is also finding a welcome and making a place for itself, we feel sure it will hold against all comers.

We are blessed with pioneers here and although it is usually the ones who follow that reap the benefits of pioneering we hope it will not be so in this case. A number of the people of the Cove are experimenting with sub-tropical fruits that are not widely known, but are proving worth while wherever they have been given a chance. Among these are the feijoa, cherimoya, etc.

With the natural beauty of the hills to begin with, it is no wonder the people owning these places are trying to enhance them. Mr. Ratner is having the hills near his house terraced and is planting avocados on the terraces. Mr. Willing, a landscape architect of the vicinity, is superintending the work.

Mr. MacDonald, whose beautiful little bungalow nestles among the olive trees, is having his grounds graded and intends planting orange trees. Mr. Anderson is putting out a large number of Calimyrna figs, purchased of Mr. Lowe of Hansen Heights.

Verily it does seem that "Every clod feels a stir of might,

An instinct within it that reaches and towers

And groping blindly above it for light

Climbs to a soul in the grass and flowers."

ORANGE COVE

By Emil Firth

The famous San Fernando Valley, which gained much publicity recently because of the agitation caused by such a large area being brought into the confines of the city of Los Angeles, is more or less familiar to residents in Southern California. Nevertheless, this very fertile, extensive territory has many features of beauty and advantage which the popular mind is not familiar with, and one could survey this marvelous basin and find wonders yet undreamed of.

For instance, take a mental journey starting at Glendale, out San Fernando boulevard past Burbank, and proceed halfway to San Fernando city, at Roscoe, we will then turn off the boulevard to the right and penetrate into a cove nestling between low hills on either side and gradually narrow to the winding roadway which separates the mountains beyond. At this point you will find a little nook, named "Orange Cove." On either side of the main road are beautiful 5-acre orchards ranging from 11 months to 3 years of age, comprised of nearly every semi-tropical fruit grown in Southern California, including the delicate avocado pear.

On these 5-acre plots are modern bungalows ranging from 4 to 6 rooms, depicting a sturdy, substantial, enterprising people, unique and indeed rare in such a newly developed territory.

The fertility of the decomposed granite soil in Orange Cove has encouraged most skeptical horticulturists, and the result is that nurserymen, fancy poultry raisers and men of the ultra-conservative type are increasing their investments and intensifying the culture of their properties.

Orange Cove is free from destructive hot or cold winds, frosts and washouts caused by heavy rains. This, coupled with the splendid water conditions available through the Orange Cove Irrigation company, soil of an exceptional fertility, plus the protection of the low laying hills on three sides makes this one spot not only picturesquely beautiful, but impresses one at a glance with the safe assurance that all the statements made by boosters in the territory will come true.

New Rural Route Will Be Established

Mr. Thompson, postmaster at Burbank, is of the opinion that rural mail service will begin soon on the new route, which includes Orange Cove, Hansen Heights, Tejuanga and other outlying territory. As planned the route covers fifty miles.

The civil service examinations were held for a carrier last August and there were one hundred twenty applicants. It would seem that the residents should not lack for some one to serve them.

In addition to the convenience of having the mail delivered at the door the commercial possibilities of the parcel post are many and no doubt the people will avail themselves of the opportunities to be offered.

Mr. Russell Johnson of Orange Cove is on a business trip to Honduras and it is expected that he will be gone for some time.

Mr. J. H. Wood, Sr., of Hansen Heights, is at his beautiful home again, after spending a month in Los Angeles with his daughter. Mr. Wood was seriously ill in the winter, but is apparently enjoying his usual health at present.

Mr. Roy Du Graurut, who has been in Fresno for a couple of months, returned to his home in Orange Cove Sunday evening. He made the trip by motorcycle and reports the roads to be in fairly good condition.

At the meeting of the Thursday club last week, quite a humorous time was had in the reading of original valentines. After the program was given, as announced in last week's paper, a lovely lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. James Penfield.

Max Green Tells of Jury Service

Max Green, of the firm of Anderson & Green, proprietors of the La Canada garage, has just completed two and one-half months' service as a jurymen in Judge Craig's department. During this period he sat on twenty different cases, including those of Policeman Shanno and Maybelle E. Smith, both of whom were tried on charges of murder and acquitted. Tuesday evening of this week the jurors banqueted the judge, district attorney and other court officials at the Hollenbeck hotel, Second and Spring streets, Los Angeles.

Mr. Green states that his period of jury service was most interesting and educational and that the jurors were treated most royally.

MAKING IT PLAIN

The government had installed a telegraph line from Prejedor to Bihatch (Bosnia).

"What is the meaning of this wire?" asked the astonished inhabitants of a village through which the line happened to pass.

"It is a telegraph," said the head man of the village, who had been in consultation with the officials. "One can send a message along this wire, straight from here to Stamboul."

The villagers were incredulous. "That is impossible! How can a message run along a wire?"

The head man thought a while; then he hit upon the proper explanation. "Imagine," he said, "a dog that is terribly long, and whose tail is stretched, like the wire on these poles; imagine that his tail is so long that he reaches from here to Stamboul. Now, suppose we pinched his tail here. Wouldn't he howl in Stamboul?"

The villagers understood.—The American Boy.

THERE'S SOMETHING IN THE AIR

There's something in the air
A whir as if of wings.
That's new and sweet and rare—
A scent of summer things,
There's something, too, that's new
In the color of the blue
That's in the morning sky.
Before the sun is high.

And all this changing tint,
This whispering stir and hint
Of bud and bloom and wing,
Is the coming of the spring.

And the next thing in the woods,
The catkins in their hoods
Of fur and silk will stand,
A sturdy little band.

So, silently but swift,
Above the wintry drift,
The long days of gain and gain,
Until on hill and plain—
Once more, and yet once more,
Returning as before,
We see the bloom of birth
Make young again the earth.

THE SAUCY SEA HORSE

A Sea Horse and a Saw Horse
Saw a see-saw one day;
Said the Sea Horse to the Saw Horse,
"See here, Saw Horse, say,
Can you see-saw with a Sea Horse?"
"Saucy Sea Horse," said the Saw Horse,
"To see-saw with a Sea Horse
For me is only play."

Then the Sea Horse and the Saw Horse
Climbed the see-saw with pride,
Both the sea Horse and the Saw Horse
Were determined to ride.

So the Sea Horse saw the Saw Horse.
And see-sawed Saw and Sea Horse,
One perched upon each side.

So the Sea Horse and the Saw Horse
First "seed" and then "sawed"
Both Sea Horse and Saw Horse

Till the Saw Horse said, "Sea Horse
A see-sawing Saw Horse
And a saucier Sea Horse
Have never see-sawed!"
—Robert Seaver, in Youths
Companion.

THE OLD MINIATURE

From its tarnished oval rim
Set with pearls long since grown dim,
Smiles a rose-flushed, dimpled face,
Winsome in its girlish grace.
In her flowered, silken gown,
With its soft folds sweeping down,
Sweeter maids were none, I trow,
Than this maid of long ago.

Tell me—in those long-gone days
Did you blush at some one's praise?
Did love blossom, fair and sweet,
As Love knelt low at your feet?
Were you happy? Did you wed,
Did Love bide, rose-garlanded?
Did your girlish dreams come true,
Or did roses turn to rue.
