REFORMATORY SHIP BURNED

Exciting Scenes During the Fire - Hundreds.ol Lads and Officers Saved by Ferry

Liverpool, July 26.—The Roman Catholic reformatory ship Clarence was destroyed by fire this morning.

It was but a few moments after the fire was discovered until the great three decker was in flames. Intense excitement prevailed until it begame known that the hundreds of lads and officers on board the Clarence had been saved by the ferry boats Mersey and Firedy, which quickly made fast to the burning vessel and began pumping water on the flames. The boys on board the Clarence worked with the utmost discipline, until forced to leave with the officers. The captagis' family, and Bishop Whiteside, who spent the night on board the Clarence, lost their personal effects.

The crew of the Mersey had a narrow escape, having barely time to regain their own craft, which had the utmost difficulty in getting clear of the burning vessel, the bulwarks of the Mersey beginning to take fire. Three hours after the fire was discovered the Clarence's back broke, and she settled slowly.

This was the second Catholic reformatory of the same name burned on the river Mersey. Her predecessor was fired by boys on board of her.

NOTHING NEW ABOUT THE BOUNDARY. (Associated Press.)

Washington, July 26.—Mr. Tower, the British charge d'affaires, had an interview this morning with Secretary Hay, presumably with reference to the Alaskan boundary. Nothing has been heard from Mr. Choate on the subject for several days.

Mr. Tower called to say good-bye to the officials, as he is leaving for Newport, which will be the seat of the British embassy during the summer.

which will be the seat of the British embassy during the summer.

It is pointed out here that there appears to be a misunderstanding in some quarters as to the history of the pending proposition relative to a free port on the Lynn canal under United States sovereignty. The Canadian government never accepted that proposition as a basis for even a temporary arrangement. They did demand the cession outright of such a port, while the United States offered to lease Canada a port for a nominal consideration, so as to retain sovereignty, an arrangement that would be temporary in character and well adapted to serve as a modus. Both propositions were considered by the Joint High Commission last winter, and both were rejected. The latter has now again been brought forward, but with what success cannot yet be forefold.

The epidemie of kisses which attended The epidemie of kisses which attended Liect. Hobson's tour after his sinking of the Merrimac was the subject of world-wide comment and not a little unkind criticism. In the August number of the Pail Mail Magazine Professor Caesar Lombroso, the eminent Italian criminologist and physchologist, comes to the rescue of the brave licutenant and his admirers in a remarkable and extremely interesting article, in which he treats the phenomenon from a pathological standpoint under five headings, as follows: 1. Anglo-Saxon Reserve: 2, Maternal Origin of the Kiss; 3/ Suggestibility of the Crowd; 4. The Kiss; an Embleu of Veneration, 5, Hobsou Worthy of Enthusiasm.

Prof. Lombroso thinks that "the Imperialistico-military ardor kindled in the United States by the infamies of Spain, so contrary to American feeling and tradition." was a subsidiary

It has been said that the kiss is the symbol of love and respect, of friendship and gratitude; that it is a token of peace and charity, that it has somewhat the nature of a pledge. We see, therefore, that above and beyond the maternal and the amorous the kiss is a symbol of respect and veneration, and we may add of fellowship. St. Paul exhorted his followers to kiss in token of fellowship: Greet ye one another with an holy kiss."

Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of Stats, for the Colonies, suggested that duties favoring the colonies should be imposed by the United Kingdom upon her imported foreign produce, provided the colonies to "better" the offer they had previously made. That in June, 1896, Mr. Chamberlain said that he had found the germs of a satisfactory proposal for such preferential trade within the Empire, in a resolution passed that year by the Toronto Board of Trade. That on June 13, 1897, in the presence of the Prime Minister of Canada, and, the Dipke of Devonshire, a former leader of the Liberal party in England, gave expression to views which were regarded in England as foreshadowing the adoption by Lord Salisbury's government of the proposal above referred to:

Britain Made No Advance

Britain Made No Advance.

It would be certainly strange if the government of Great Britain, if it had made advances to Canada, would not have embodied its views in a state document. It was not like a blushing maiden, ecquetting and filrting, but went directly to the point, inviting courtesy by courtesy, cordiality by cordiality. If it was true that the government has made advances to the colonies surely Mr. Mc. Neill could have quoted a state dispatch. There was a dispatch, but it did not sustain his views, a dispatch written by the Marquis of Milpon.

HUMAN FLESH FOR LOVE PHILITRES.

Last week, in the presence of some eight chiefs and headmen, at Harding, (writes a Natal correspondent), were hung two natives, Umanti and Sibaltweni, for a murder which sent a thrill of horror throughout the country. Umanti, and his pupil Sibaltweni, followed the repulsive calling of witch dectors, and a few months ago murdered a European farmer, Kay, for the purpose of obtaining certain, polit of his body for the manufacture of love charms. The unfortunate man was dragged from his bed by their two comrades Goma and Umbonwa, and after being stabbed several times with an assegal his throat was cut from ear to ear, and the hody left on the veldt. Part of the dead man's neck was cat away and subsequently found in the witch doctor's bag with other medicines. The flesh of a European is considered by the natives a charm powerful enough to compel the love of an unwilling malden.

Murders of this description, though by no means common, occur from time to time, and, at a recent date a little child, who mysteriously disappeared from its parents in the Barberton district, was supposed to have been stolen away by natives for the same purpose. Umtanti, the doctor, who was something of a South Africar Charles Peace, confessed to other murders which had not been brought to light, including the chief Umshweshwe's sister. His face is in keepings with his character crafty and cruel to a degree. His pupil, Sibalweni, also me, Goma and Umshawa, who received life sentences, have a pleasanter appearance.

What will be the future of a race so imbured with beathenish superstition, life sentences, have a pleasanter appearance.

What will be the future of a race so imbued with beathenish superstition, and who are living side by side with Europeans and civilization, is a problem which requires the earnest attention of every thinking colonist. South Africa has a teeming native population, and the question of race promises to become as difficult as it is in the United States at the present time.

A police trooper, who discovered Kay's body lying in the moonlight, was so unnerved by the ghastly sight it presented, with gaping wounds and chid only, in a shirt, that he was unable to sleep or eat for some time after, and at nights a nawkened his comrades with screams. The execution created a profound impression on the assembled chiefs and headman, who were summoned purposely by the government. Natives do not believe their companious are hanged and headmen, who were summoned pur posely by the government. Natives do not believe their companions are hanges for misdeeds of this sort, but merely exiled to some remote spot, where they eventually die.—London Graphic.

"One good turn deserves another." Those who have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparlla are glad to tell others about it.

Edith (showing her smart little brother to her new beau) Now, Temmy, you have counted up to 11, tell us what comes after 11?" Townsy-Pop, in his stocking feet.-

Certainly the health of our herbivorous animals suffers on this account; they lose the power of digesting the cellulose which enters so largely into their food."

This, however, would not be the worst of it, for to the microbes of the soil we owe the nitrification and other chemical processes that fertilize it and that enable plants to obtain their nutriment from it. Says Dr. Gabbett:

"If the soil were rendered 'sterile' in the bacteriological sense—that is, if all the lower fungi in it were destroyed—it would soon be sterile in another senselaso; our crops would perish, and agriculture would come utterly to an end. Neither grass, nor herb yielding seed, nor fruit-tree yielding fruit after his kind, could survive the deprivation of their finitural nourishment; and as animal life is ultimately dependent upon plant life, the fatal consequences would not be con-

Neither grass, nor herb yielding seed, nor fruit-tree yielding fruit after his kind, could survive the deprivation of, their natural nourishment; and as animal life is ultimately dependent upon plant life, the fatal cotisequences would not be confined to the vescrable kingdom.

"But, indeed, when we consider the matter from another point of view, it becomes still more evident that the activity of these lowly forms is a condition essential to the continuance of higher life on the earth. For nothing is more certain than the fact that the processes by which organic bodies, animal and vegetable, are converted after death into simpler combinations or into their utilimate elements—the processes known to us as putrefaction and decay—are absolutely

Dependent on Microscopic Oganisms, especially bacteria. But if such processes did not take place, whence would be derived the materials for the construction of successive generations of animals and plants? At a later time, between the pre-Cambrian and Cambrian periods, there was, according to Walcott.

One might shink that the carth lathese primeval times was too much disturbed and unfitted for the existence of life. But that plants and animals did exist is suggested by the occurrence of beds of graphite, which is altered coal, by deposits of iron and of marble in Algonkian rocks, themselves stratified, forming beds of sandstone, conglomerate, limestone, etc. Moreover, the Algonkian (Huronian) strata besides containing abundant carbon and also coal gas.

graphite and rocks, which will burn, have yielded fragments of sponges, shells, trilobites, etc., which shows that in pre-Cambrian times not only protogoans and sponges, but also corals, shelled worms (Lingula), true worms and trilobites, had gained a foothold in the seas of that time. In short, in the hazy, dim, remote ages before the Cambrian period the biological forces had gained the victory, and the seas and even perhaps the land masses of those times were tenanted by comparatively highly organized life forms.

Changes Throughout the Globe.

This was, from a biographical point of view, the most notable event in the history of our earth, unless we except the appearance of man. In its effects on life, whether direct or indirect, it was of vast significance; for contemporaneous with and as a consequence of this revolution was the incoming of new types of higher or terrestrial vertebrates—thosy with limbs and lungs, such as salamanders and the like, with reptiles, birds and beasts.

Since the Appalachian ranges were un-ers and the like, with reptiles, birds and beasts.

Since the Appalachian ranges were upheaved and carved by rivers into mountain peaks, at the close of what geologists call the paleoxoic age, there have been great changes of level and physical geography over our Atlantic constresion. The mountain region was worn down to almost a plain, with a broken surface, like that of New England at present. Then the region was again upheaved and tilted up, and the rivers running more rapidly cut deep channels through the platnau, and mountains were thus formed. Several successive cycles of upheaval and wearing down have taken place from the close of the paleoxoic era to the present day.

Now, all these changes in physical geography must have caused much variation in animal life. At the time when reptiles birds and beasts, or mammals, appeared, our Atlantic border presented.

appearan, our Atlantic border presented towlards, with their vast swamps, to temperate uplands, stretching up, perhaps, to Alpine summits, with possibly stations of Limited extent filling the upper parts of the mountain valleys. New Zealand at the present day has

A Sub-Tropical Belt of Tree Ferns, A Sub-Tropical Belt of Tree Ferns, while the mountains towering above have near their summits fields of ice and glaciers. In Mexico only about twenty degrees from the equator is the temperate plateau rising above the tropical belt, and further up the sub-Alpine snow-clad peaks of Popocatepetl and Orizaba. So the appalachians of the paleczole age, the cryptogamous forests and their animal life may have been confined to the coastal plains and lowlands, while on the higher, color levels may have existed a different assemblage of creatures.

Afterward these animals were wiped out of existence by subsequent changes and new assemblages better adapted to the novel climatic and geographical conditions took their place. Besides the changes in the shape and contour of the bind, the extinction of certain forms was undoubtedly aided by the struggle for existence, or competition. Thus, during the age of reptiles these creatures dominated the earth and the sea. It took a long-time for the birds and beasts, after certain lowly forms appeared, to gain a foothold. Competition drove the bird type to live in the lair, and the mammals burrowed in the earth, lived in trees or rain over plains less frequented by reptiles. At least, in a way not yet understood, the reptiles in part died out

Mistakes Have Been Made.

Dr. Sinclair, of Rossland, the hero of many a hard fought buttle for Liberalism in the province of Ontario, is in the city, and intends to spend the remainder of the week in Victoria. Dr. Sinclair, although an ardent Liberal, is opposed to the course Hon. Joseph Martin has followed in the premier.

"It is not a question of what actuated Mr. Semiin in asking for, Mr. Martin's resignation at all," he said this morning. "Mr. Semiin has the right to ask for the resignation of any member of the cabinet, and Mr. Martin should have complied at once."
