Edu. No. 2170
27th, Aug., 1945.

Subject: The Direction on the Education in the Schools for Juvemile Labourers of Factories after the War.

To: The Head of Every Provincial Government Office in Osaka Prefecture

The Mayor of Every City in Osaka Prefecture
The Schoolmaster of Every School for Juhile Labourers of Factory in Every City in Osaka Prefecture

1. In accordance with the directions stated below, you should go on your educational activity.

1.) Foundamental Principle: Every schoolmaster should take the spirit of the Imperial Rescript, recently given, as the foundamental principle of education, and teachers themselves should first master the true meaning of it, and teach it to their pupils on every occasion that can be availed and on every chance that they can catch repeating again and again till pupils master it as soon as possible, and teachers should think it the principle directions of education that they ought to make the pupils practise it as well as to make them comprehend it.

2.) The schools for Juvenile labourers of factories and all the public schools should take up an adequate schooling together with the excecution of productive labour now engaging in. The kinds of the work of the former kind of schools may differ owing to the circumstances of their local situation, andin the latter kind of schools, the kinds of their work may vary such as foodproduction, salt production, fuel production, or any work in factories. In case the private schools for juvenile labourers of factories can not keep on schooling by reason of the various circumstances of the factories to which they are belong, they can stop their school for a while until the firms or factories resume their normal conditions. In other schools, they should teach some reasonable lessons together with the labour exertion hitherto they are taking part.

3.) Schools for young women (Through year course of ordinary System)

Students, in principle, should stay at home, and be mainly engage in house keeping and gardening for the time being.

But when it is located in the country and circumstances permit, give them lessons appropriately.

DECLASSIFIED E.O. 12065 SECTION 3-402/NNDG NO. 77504

4.) As for the details of teaching and training, you should lay stress on the practise of the spirit of the Imperial Rescript, as I showed in the foundamental principle, and schoolmasters should take the leadership of spiritual training, professional lessons, domestic science, basic lessons and physical trainings. Military training, however, should abolished at once, and gymnastic exercise should be adopted in its place.

5.) Teachers dispatched to factories should be recalled to their schools after consultation with the factories, but if there is a need of continuing their help in factory, it must be decided after inquiring to the prefectural authorities.

6.) When pupils are oblized to move owing to the changes of the firms or factories, you must take due formalties of their remove.

Persuasion of Attendance to Young Men's Schools

It is a matter of vital importance to upheave moral standard of the young working classes through thorough-going teaching and training and thus have them contribute for the postwar construction works. It is very regrettable to see, However, from the standpoint of promoting this kind of education that attendance rate of the students is kept low as an undesirable effect during the war when they were driven to factories for increased production of munitions setting aside these indoor educations.

This point in view, you are requested to exert utmost efforts in persuading them to immediately return and attend schools through effective and appropriate measures particularly adapted to respective districts.

(I) Students registered in young men'sschools and those coming under conditions of attending the same living in respective schooling districts have to be investigated thoroughly and encouraged to attend them.

(2) Teachers of each young men's school are requested, in oreder to persuade them, to undertake house-to-house visits as well as take other appropriate measures dividing their respective schooling are-as into severdl parts responsible for each of them.

(3) Special care has to be exerted, utilizing night-time and holidays, to prevent youth fall in deliquency by sponsoring such educational functions as all-night disciplines (training after supper or with one meal carried and other easy methods preferred), investigation meetingsrural affairs conferences, experience exhibition, book-reading and debating assemblies thus encouraging their attendance to schools.

(4) For those students coming from farming communities, accommodation of land for ~~practising~~ practising household matters is advised, while for those residing in urban districts frequent visits by teachers to their working plants will be very effective in promoting and encouraging ~~their~~ their attendance ~~rate~~.

(5) The encouragement has to be enforced in close ~~contact~~ contact with school affairs committee-men and supporting associations.

(6) Select several men of firm purpose from among the students or graduates in order to effect mutual discipline.

(7) Infarming villages, especially on rainy days and holidays, try to give thim extra-lessons individually gathering those who can afford to and not sticking to forms taking into account their respective desires.

(8) At private young men's schools, prompt resumption of teaching and discipline is urged for remaining students. In case of schools where education is suspended on account of war damages or other reasons, their students have to be trusted to official young men''s schools in the residing areas of the students.
