Among the numerous beneates confested on cities by railroad communications, norther beart important to the cheapening of many articles, either of necessity or luxivity, amplyed in demestic life. To some little extentities advantage has stready been expertished to New Orleans. The Opciousa and Lack Non railways pegatrate into the beart of foundams, and bring to our markets a daily supply of eggs and pountry. The quantities received keep down prices at reasonable rates. Every- housekeeper knows that, withing the last year or so, while four and augar, and other agricultural prefacts, for which the value is not materially affected by proximity to the place of consumption, have been held at very high rates, game, eggs and poutry, the prices of which are smantamalier is the country than the city, have been considerably lowefed by the facilities of immediate transportation storded to the farmer. For instance, at Lafourche, or in the been held at very high rates, game, eggs and positry, the prices of which are ment amalier in the country than the city, have been considerably lowefed by the facilities of immediate transportation afforded to the farmer. For matance, at Lafourche, or in the pluey woods of Livingston, the products of the farmyard can be received in New Orleans in three or four hours. The freight is exceedingly small, and the producer contents bimself with small profits and swift returns. This safe and sound principle is, however, met extended as it should be. Why is it that Xew Orleans is andly deficient in fruit—that it. in good fruit, at prices which will squable the poor man to indulge in it? There is no reason under heaven why, during the summer season, passbes should be worth forty of fifty centa per dozen, strawberries one dollar a quart, figs a sime a dozen, and necessaries delicious fruits is admirably adapted to the climate of Louisiana, may be suitivated with perfect ease, produced in great abundance, and vended at understap prices. Now we are fully persuaded that if fifty or one hundred individuals possessed of some knowledge of gardening, would each invest a very small amount of capital in the purchase of lands along the ince or in the vicinity of our rankways, and rear frait for city consumption, every cine of them would in the wicers aways, and rear frait for city consumption, every cine of them would in the wicers and says, and rear frait for city consumption, every cine of them would in the wicers away a boat, and the make and there are fully persuaded that if fifty or one hundred undividuals possessed of some knowledge of gardening, would each invest a very small amount of capital in the purchase of lands along the ince or in the vicinity of our rankways, and rear frait for city consumption, every cine of them would in the wicers aways a boat, and the make and three many if not quate as low as those asked in Few lands and the contract of the ship was the host to surface and the would be kept regalarly supplied, special want is a rural laboring population. Manters and large farmers we have to any extent, but we are deplorably deficient in small cultivators, gardeners, men who will plant half a dozen acres for the express purpose (familiary the products of the add to ose of sending the products of the soil to few Orleans. This experiment bask\been ried by at least one enterprising individual, and though conducted under adverse cir-cumstances, its radults are franchismarked encouragement. The last Get. Fr. Six Herror planted an immense number of peach troes in lands owned by him chiefly in he parish of East Feliciana, and although its orchards were a hundred and fifty miles stant from New Orleans, and their pro-lucts were conveyed by steamboats, and paid a heavy freight, yet he could afford to sell line peaches at from eight to ten cents a dozen. Unhappily he stood alone. One dis-astrous year destrôyed his crop. Id health. the necessity of travel, and other untoward events, induced him to abandon his scheme of cheapening fruit in New Orleans, and no ne has endeavored to supply his place. We not an earthly doubt that what Gen. flavors and an extension countries what what we flavors from the account of countries of the preximity of lands adapted to the purpose, and the rapidity with which agricultural products can now be brought to the ath the method of culture from making for- the tunes by devoting themselves to resiring this exquisite fruit. There are miles of suburban soil around New Orleans, every yard of which could be converted into a bountiful strawberry patch. With the well known operality of our citizens, their habits of it dulgence and fondness for delicacies, it may be wanted as absolutely certain that if strawbergies could be sold here at a dime or the energous. And we learn, too, that the he enormous. And we learn, doe, that the soil of Leatistans is exceedingly well adapted for this doe fruit. We have varieties here which put to shame the noblest specimens of the hour body and the shame the noblest specimens of John R. Thomson, of New Persey. Crescent seedling, the prince of strawberries in size and never, bears during six months in in size and flavor, bears during air months in the year in New Orleans, and that many bearing pointer appears of the blait repay ordinary entiture by geeat exuberance of fruit.

There is no class of our population better suited by hibits of told, steaduless of character and perseverance, for small outtrators, than the terminant. For a suite of the contracter and perseverance, for small outtrators, than the terminant point make comfortable his mass by turning their attention to the minds in the neighborhood of New Orleans, and rearing fruit for our market. People are not repaired to their own benefit, and hence, somer or later, we shall expect to see Logismann as Chestinut's Chestinut's contractions.
