PREFACE

The volume now offered to those who were kind enough to be interested in my Romance of Names is a second offshoot of the Dictionary of English Surnames on which I have been engaged for some years. It differs in several ways from the former booklet. The Romance of Names was an attempt at a general survey of the subject, and, like all such first attempts, it contained a good many inaccuracies and dubious statements of which I have tried to purge later editions. It made no special attempt to deal with the curiosities of surname etymology, and the temptation to explore by-ways was firmly resisted.

The present volume treats much more completely, and hence more ponderously, of certain groups of surnames which I have investigated with some approach to thoroughness. It includes a very large proportion of names of etymological interest,<sup>2</sup> the majority of which have not been mentioned by earlier writers, and hardly any of which have been hitherto explained. Its relation to the Romance of Names is that of a more or less erudite treatise to a primer, matter which in the former book was dismissed in a paragraph or two being here expanded into a chapter. This involves a certain amount of repetition which I hope may be forgiven.

As the theories and etymologies proposed are to a great extent novel, I have thought it well to give some of the data on which they are based. Consequently the book will be found duller than its predecessor, and will. I fear, have little attraction for any but the surname enthusiast. The author's own inclination, successfully fought against, was to give for each name a mass of evidence, variants and early examples, which most readers would rather be spared. The method actually followed has been the rather unsatisfactory compromise of giving evidence and foreign parallels in a certain number of cases, and the author cannot hope that this has been done with much system or consistency. After the alternative plans had been considered of relegating the medieval examples to footnotes or to an appendix, it was finally decided to insert them in square brackets after the modern names to which they refer, an arrangement which will perhaps irritate the rapid reader without satiating the student. The chief sources of these early examples are enumerated on pp. xvi-xvii, but many other documents have been consulted and are indicated with more or less fullness when quoted.¹ To my colleague Mr. E. L. Guilford, Lecturer in History at University College, Nottingham, I am indebted for many medieval names drawn chiefly from unpublished Midland records. It will be noticed that a native or foreign parallel has often been preferred to direct evidence. This arises out of the comparative method which I have adopted, the only method which can lead to results of any value.

The index contains some six thousand existing surnames, including a certain proportion of French and German names and a sprinkling from other countries. In the body of the book appear probably almost an equal number of names which are presumably extinct, though, as a matter of fact, it is never safe to assume this even in the case of the most fantastic name. No student of the subject would be seriously startled at finding Longshanks and Strongbow dwelling side by side in some remote village, though he would experience something of the exultation of a naturalist encountering a dodo in Kensington Gardens.

The author's excuse for publishing this second instalment of his harmless researches is that the end of his Dictionary, like that of all similar undertakings, has a way of receding as it is approached. It seemed possible that information representing the leisure amusement of several years might be doomed to the waste-paper basket by harassed executors, in which case some students of the English language might be the losers.<sup>1</sup>

The "practical man," when his attention is accidentally directed to the starry sky, appraises that terrific spectacle with a non-committal grunt; but he would receive with a positive snort any suggestion that the history of European civilization is contained in the names of his friends and acquaintances. Still, even the practical man, if he were miraculously gifted with the power of interpreting surnames, could hardly negotiate the length of Oxford Street on a motor-bus without occasionally marvelling and frequently chuckling. As a review of my former book puts it—

&quot;We go about our dignified proceedings, solemnly addressing each other by the names of beasts and birds and kitchen implements; we are dressed like savages in fantastic feathers, and the most important list of honoured personages contains a set of nicknames graceless enough to keep us laughing for a month" (The Times, February 22, 1914).

I should like to thank by name all the friendly correspondents who have, often at real cost of time and labour, sent me information on the subject of surnames; but the list would fill several pages. So I must limit myself to saying in the words of Captain Grose that—"Several gentlemen (and ladies), too respectable to be named on so trifling an occasion, have also contributed their assistance."

SURNAMES

CHAPTER I

THE STUDY OF SURNAMES

"Nomen quum dicimus, cognomen quoque et agnomen intelligatur oportet" (CICERO).

THE study of surnames in England is chiefly associated with the names of Camden, Lower, Ferguson, and Bardsley, though many other writers have dealt with the subject, or with special aspects of it, both in books and magazine articles. Of these Camden, the first in date (Remains concerning Britain, 1605), is still in many ways the best. His brief essay, weak as it necessarily is from the philological point of view, gives by far the clearest and most sensible introduction to the subject that has yet been penned.

The first attempt at anything like a comprehensive Dictionary of Surnames is Lower's Patronymica Britannica (Lond. 1860), which contains some 12,000 names. He had previously published English Surnames (Lond. 1842, 4th ed., enlarged, 1875). Lower seems to have been a genial antiquary, with a good deal of miscellaneous information, but no serious knowledge of European languages. On the surnames of his native county, Sussex, he has often good first-hand information, but outside that he is quite untrust-worthy. He knew, however, something about the general history of surnames and had read all that had already been written in English on the subject. Some of his suggested etymologies are rather funny, and in many cases he does not seem to have taken the trouble even to open the Gazetteer. A couple of examples will suffice—

"Bickerstaff. The O. Eng. bicker means to skirmish or contend, and a 'bicker-staff,' therefore, probably signifies a weapon analogous to a quarter-staff, or single-stick. The name belongs to the same class as Longsword, Broadspear, etc."

"Rigmaiden. Two gentry families, settled respectively in Counties Lincoln and Lancaster, bore this remarkable name, which at the commencement of the present century was still extant. I can give no better etymology for the name than I have already assigned in Eng. Surn.; viz., 'a romping girl.'"

Now Bickerstaff, formerly Bickerstath (whence Bickersteth), is a Lancashire parish near Ormskirk, Rigmaden is a seat in Westmorland, and the local surnames de Bikerstaf and de Riggemaiden can be easily attested from the medieval records of the north. I have noticed. fifteen variants of Bickerstaff in the Lancashire Assize Rolls (1176-1285) and Rigmaiden is also found in several forms. Similarly, Lower explains Fifchead as from a promontory in Scotland, whereas Fifehead, formerly Five-hide, is a place in Dorset, in which county Fifchead, Fifctt is a common surname. But there is a good deal of useful antiquarian, as distinguished from etymological information to be gleaned from Lower, and his rather ponderous good-humour does not excite the irritation which is evoked by the confident imbecility of some of his successors.

Lower was followed by Ferguson, author of English Surnames and their Place in the Teutonic Family. The Teutonic Name System, and Surnames as a Science. He was by trade a cotton-spinner, by inclination an amateur philologist, and eventually a Member of Parliament. Like most people who dabble in the study of German, he was struck by its similarity to English, and jumped to the conclusion that our surname system, like our language, was chiefly of Teutonic origin.1 In other words, he became the victim of a fixed idea, a more deadly enemy in philological matters than ignorance itself. The consequence is that his Surnames as a Science 2 bears some resemblance to an elaborate lark, which begins by amusing. but soon palls. It is, of course, true that thousands of our surnames can be traced to personal names which were in use in Anglo-Saxon times, but, to establish such connection, it is just as well to supply a little in the way of evidence. For Ferguson it is quite sufficient to find a somewhat similar Anglo-Saxon name in Kemble 3 or Thorpe, 4 or, failing these sources, an Old German name in Förstemann, or, failing Förstemann, in his own imagination, to explain Tom, Dick, and Harry as coming straight from the Twilight of the Gods into the London Commercial Directory. So Thompson, whom the ignorant might connect with Thomas, is really the son of doom! That a surname is obviously taken from a trade does not disturb him. Archer, Iremonger, and Prentice. which are recorded by hundreds as "le archere," "le iremonger," "le prentice," are "Old Frankish" names, "and the resemblance to anything English is only an accident." Archer, we learn, is from OG. Erchear. Iremonger is related to Arminius the Cheruskerfürst, and Prentice comes from "an" AS. Premtsa. An unrecorded Old German name is just as useful for his purpose as one copiously attested. It is only a case of "not yet turned up," a phrase that recurs constantly in his book. Occasionally the intrusive place-name annoys him, but only for a moment. Prendergast is derived from an imaginary Pendgast, "an ancient compound, from the stem bend, with gast, hospes." A footnote admits that it may perhaps, however, be from a Welsh place-name (as of course it is), but it "illustrates the principle just the same,"

A contemporary, and to some extent a disciple, of Ferguson, Dr. Charnock, published in 1868 a small lexicon of unusual surnames under the title Ludus Patronymicus, or the Etymology of Curious Names. On Shakespeare he gives us the following remarks—of the name Shakespeare, although it would easily corrupt from Sigisbert, by contraction of the first vocable, and by dropping of the final t. I agree with another correspondent of Notes and Queries in tracing the name to Jacques Pierre. . . . The nearest names to Jacques Pierre that I have been able to find are James Peters, Jacques Henri Bernardin de Saint-Pierre, and Petrus Jacobus."

&quot;I have elsewhere (see Notes and Queries, vols, ix. and x.), stated that Shakespeare might be a corruption of Sigisbert, which would translate 'renowned for victory' (sige, victory); in answer to which Mr. Ferguson seemed to think that the name might be from Sicisper, Sigisper, or Sigiper, which he would translate 'victorious bear' (perhaps rather 'victorious man'). My suggestion would seem probable from the fact that the name Shakeshaft might be from Sigishaft, Sighaft, used by the Franks for 'victorious,' or from Sigishaved, 'head of victory,' 'victorious leader.' I am, however, disposed to think that the latter name is merely a corruption of Shakestaft; and, as I have shown elsewhere, most names compounded of staff are derived from AS, sted, a place. On further consideration I am inclined to doubt my former derivation

Perhaps, after all, it is only the gentleman's fun.

Theories every whit as crazy are constantly put forward by amateur philologists. A few years ago I read in Notes and Queries that Jennins is of Norse origin and means the "iron man," and that this family gave its name to Jenningham, now corrupted into Birmingham! This statement easily beats the famous definition of the crab both in quality and on points. More recently, in the same publication, the suggestion was made that the puzzling name Shillito or Silito was from the medieval "de Sigillo." Even if this were phonetically possible, the theorist should have supported his case with modern names corrupted from Molendinarius, Albo Monasterio, Veteri Ponte, or Sexdecim Vallibus.

In fact, the study of English surnames, being a region of knowledge which has never been scientifically explored, is a regular happy hunting-ground for the unauthorized amateur. Even men of learning, who should know how dangerous it is to stray from their own sphere of knowledge, occasionally trespass disastrously. I have recently read a most interesting and informative article on the "Place of the Woodpecker in Religion," the author of which points out quite rightly that many of our surnames go back to instincts surviving from this prehistoric cult. But when he proceeds to tell us that the name Peckover is the OF. pic vert, green woodpecker, we are reminded of those guileless etymologists who derive the Oxfordshire Shotover from château vert, while the suggestion that Woodhatch (Surrey) takes its name from the woodhack, or woodpecker, makes us wonder whether there is some similar explanation for Colney Hatch.

The documentary study of surnames began with Bardsley, who shifted the field of investigation from the migration of the Arvans to the Middle Ages. He realized that practically all our surnames came definitely into existence between the Norman Conquest and the end of the fourteenth century. His English Surnames 1 contains a wealth of material drawn from various medieval sources, and his Dictionary of English and Welsh Surnames, published (Oxford, 1901) from his notes after his death, contains a valuable, though often wrongly grouped and wrongly interpreted, collection of authentic instances. Among all who have written on the subject, he appears to be the only one who knows that there are such things as chronology and evidence, and, where he goes wrong. it is simply from ignorance of medieval languages. I have given a few examples in the preface to my Romance of Names. Similar blunders are to be found on almost every page of his Dictionary, but it would be ungracious to insist on them. Personally I have derived the greatest help from his work, and, though I have never, when possible, used one of his instances without verifying it, I have often been guided to the origin of a name by his copious provision of early examples. His Dictionary is especially valuable for the later history of names, because of the careful study of church registers by which he is often able to show the identity of surnames which have become widely divergent. This part of the subject can only be nibbled at by one individual, and a real Dictionary of Surnames cannot come into existence until every county has been thoroughly documented by competent investigators.

The study of surnames is, for historical reasons, more complicated in England than in any other European country. In all European nations there is a strong foreign element, especially in frontier regions, but our Directory is perhaps the greatest hodgepodge of all. Taking the various elements in chronological order, we have first the "Celtic fringe," names from which (Gaelic, Welsh, Irish, Manx, Cornish) are now to be found in every corner of England. In fact, it is quite possible that the real old Welsh names (Cradock, Ennion, Traherne, etc.), now replaced largely by the unimaginative Jones, Hughes, etc., are more numerous in England than in their native country. Then come the race whom we call traditionally the Anglo-Saxons, and from whom those few of us whose ancestors neither came over with the Conqueror nor escaped miraculously from the Massacre of St. Bartholomew are mostly descended. In the East and North, in Scotland, and sporadically all round the outer edge of the islands, names of Norse 1 origin are abundant; and these, from the strictly philological point of view, should be divided into East Scandinavian and West Scandinavian. With 1066 we have the Norman irruption, and, through the centuries, a constant percolation from various French provinces, culminating in the great Huguenot invasion of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. On the East coast Dutch and Danish names are not uncommon; while London, as the commercial focus of the world, has for centuries attracted immigrants from various European countries, many of whom have been fruitful and have multiplied. In quite recent times there has been a steady peaceful penetration from Germany, and London and our manufacturing towns are largely colonized by this energetic race, no doubt destined to be the ruling class of the future 3

But, difficult as is the task of classifying and deriving English surnames, it is nothing compared with that offered by American surnames. In the States the wear and tear of names, which in England extends over ten centuries, has been concentrated into one, and instead of half a dozen elements we have sources innumerable. In the early days of the Republic the problem was simpler, for the sparse population was drawn from practically four sources, British, Dutch, French, and German. In the earliest census taken, it is interesting to notice the distribution of these names.¹ We find, as we should expect, the French in the south, the Dutch in and around New York, and the Germans in Pennsylvania. But, since the time of the first census (1790), immigrants have crowded in from most countries, civilized and uncivilized, and their changed, distorted, or adapted names form a pathless etymological morass. Even in 1790 one is struck by the prevalence of crude and grotesque nicknames, often obvious perversions of foreign names, but frequently, no doubt, deliberately assumed by, or conferred on, men who had cut even the surnominal tie with Europe.

In one respect only are our English surnames easier to trace than those of continental countries. The possible variants and derivatives of any given personal name run theoretically into thousands, and in France and Germany, to take the two most important countries of which the surname system is related to our own, there has been no check on this process of differentiation. By contraction, aphesis, apocope, dialect variation, and many other phonetic factors, one favourite name often develops hundreds of forms, many of which appear to have nothing in common with the original. Thus Ger. Nölte can be traced step by step to OG. Arinwald, eagle mighty. The Old German names passed into France, underwent a new phonetic development, and were again varied ad infinitum. Thus Naudot is also from OG. Arinwald, which became Fr. Arnaud, whence, by aphesis, Naud, and, with the dim. suffix, Naudot. This dim. suffix again, which many other names share with Naudot, became, by a second aphesis, Dot, and then, with a new dim. suffix, Dottin. Many such series could be quoted among modern French surnames, e.g. Hanotaux, for Hanotot, from Hanot, from Han, from Jehan, i.e. John; or Denis, Denisard, Nisard, Sard, Sardou.

Now, in England, the parallel process was suddenly interrupted by the Norman Conquest. The Anglo-Saxon names which persisted remained in a state of arrested development and seldom formed familiar derivatives. Those which seem to form exceptions do so because the corresponding name existed in Old French and thus preserved a vitality which the Anglo-Saxon form had lost. Thus, Rawle, Rawlins, Rawkins, etc., belong to Fr. Raoul, from OG, Radwulf, counsel wolf, and our Tibbs, Tibbets, Tibbles, etc., derive from the Fr. Thibaut, OG. Theodobald, people strong, rather than from the cognate AS. Theodbeald, a rather rare name. From the Conquest the favourite names were French names of Germanic origin, e.g. William, Robert, Richard, or Biblical names, e.g. John, Thomas, Peter, of Greco-Latin or Eastern origin, and generally introduced in a French form. Nomenclature thus made a fresh start, and this start falls within historic and well-documented times. Practically all our surname groups of baptismal origin date from after the Conquest and have no direct or conscious connection with their Anglo-Saxon or Celtic cognates. Taking at hazard, from vol. ii. of the Hundred Rolls, a list of people from various counties described as sons of Adam, we find that the font-names represented are Clement, Eustace, Geoffrey, Gregory, Henry, Hugh, Humphrey, John, Nicholas, Peter, Philip, Ralph, Richard, Robert, Roger, Simon, Thomas, William, not one of which was in real English use before the Battle of Hastings.

But a close study of the cartularies of ancient manors and abbeys reveals the survival of thousands of Anglo-Saxon names among the peasantry, and most of them still exist. They do not, however, form groups of derivatives. Even when Anglo-Saxon names survived as such, they were often affected in sound by the Norman pronunciation, for it must be remembered that, during the period of formation of our surnames, French was the official language and a considerable proportion of the population was bilingual. For instance, Alphage is the Norman form of Elphick, AS. Ælfheah, and the v of Elvin (Ælfwine), Colvin (Ceolwine), is due to the same influence. Wace makes Edward into Ewart, a name which has other origins, and Leofwin into Lewin—

"Lewine e Guert furent od lui" (Roman de Rou, 7857).

The font-name is, strictly speaking, the only true name, the other classes of surnames, patronymic, occupative, or nickname, being descriptions, while the local surname is an address. Of all surnames those of local origin are of least interest, difficult though it often is to recognize the village or homestead in its archaic, distorted, or popular form (see chap. iv.). Probably at least half of our surnames are of the dull, unimaginative local kind, but their etymological explanation belongs to the student of place-names. As there is hardly a spot in England which has not given its name to a family, it follows that a complete etymological dictionary of English surnames would have to include a complete etymological dictionary of place-names, i.e. that one impossibility can only be achieved by the preliminary accomplishment of another. The study of these names would have to be carried on by counties or regions. If a circle, with say a ten-mile radius, were drawn on an ordnance map round a city such as Nottingham, it would be found that all the village-names in that circle existed in the town or county as medieval surnames. With the enlargement of the circle, these names would thin out in number and become more corrupted in form, until, except for their accidental appearance here and there in modern England, they would fade away like the last ripple produced by a stone in the water. A profound historical knowledge of the earlier forms and of the local pronunciation would of course be essential for the study of these names.

In investigating the origins of names we can work either backwards or forwards. The field is immense and the materials are available in overwhelming mass. Lower seems to have used as general sources only Domesday Book and the Hundred Rolls, the latter a kind of later Domesday Book compiled in 1273. These are perhaps the two most valuable documents we have, because they give not only the name but the locality in which it occurs. But there are many other sources of hardly less value. For pre-Conquest names we have Searle's Onomasticon Anglo-Saxonicum, a complete list of names extracted from all manner of sources, including the earlier compilations of Birch. Thorpe, Kemble, etc. After Domesday Book (1086) the most important sources are, for the twelfth century. the Pipe Rolls, beginning in 1158, and, for the thirteenth century, the four great series of the Charter Rolls and Fine Rolls, from 1199, the Patent Rolls, from 1202, and the Close Rolls, from 1205. The earlier parts of these were printed in extenso early in the nineteenth century, and they are now continued in the form of Calendars, i.e. abstracts. Then we have the Inquisitiones post Mortem, from 1216, a number of minor rolls and documents dealing with special regions, and the numerous local records published by various antiquarian societies, such as the Camden, Chetham. Surtees, and Lancashire and Cheshire Record Societies. These latter sources are especially rich for the north of England, but most counties have now their antiquarian societies, from the Transactions of which any amount of information can be acquired. An ordinary lifetime would not suffice for the investigation of a fraction of the superabundant material, and the contribution of any individual to the subject must necessarily be but a drop in the ocean.

The Rolls are nearly always written in medieval Latin, but the names which occur in them are put promiscuously in latinized form, e.g. Johannes Arcubalistarius, English, John the Arblaster, or Anglo-French, Jehan le Arbalestier. There is nothing like uniformity of spelling. Even a monosyllable like Bruce has dozens of forms, and in one north-country document I have noted fifteen spellings of so simple a name as Bradshaw. This applies, of course, equally to the spelling of other words, but while this has now been normalized by a kind of collective effort and the authority of the printer, the differentiation in the spelling <sup>1</sup> of names has gone on unchecked.

From about the middle of the fourteenth century the records become of less etymological value, because the significant prefixes, le and de, del, atte, etc., tend to disappear. But even in the earliest Rolls caution is necessary. Many accidents and misunderstandings may have occurred between the verbal communication made by the medieval peasant to the government official, who often had difficulty in understanding him, and the printed copy or abstract which we now possess. It is never safe to draw inferences from isolated entries, which may be original mistakes, errors in transcription, misreadings of medieval contractions, or modern misprints. Le is constantly confused with de, especially in the Hundred Rolls, and in the earlier issues of the other series, and de is also often found prefixed to obvious nicknames and personal names which can be certified from much earlier records.2 The entries are to a great extent artificial. The common patronymics in -s and -son rarely occur, and the fontnames are given in full instead of in the abridged form actually in use. We find Egidius f. Waltarii for Giles Watson, and Reginaldus, Dionysius, Petronilla, and Theophania for people who were certainly known to their neighbours as Reynold, Dennis, Parnell, and Tiffen.

* Some of our county histories are not blameless in this matter, and sprinkle de's in ludicrous fashion among the ancestors of the local gentry.

It may be noted here that the nomenclature of the Middle Ages is much more ornate than the superficial study of history would suggest. Female names especially have much of the penny novelette about them. I have come across Amanda, Bonajoia, Dulcibella, Glorietta, Licoricia, Orgovlosa, Orielda, and many others. These gorgeous names seem to have been especially common among the Jews, e.g. the four Jewesses mentioned in vol. xxxiii. of the Pipe Rolls are Belleases, Duzelina, Pulcella, and Regina, In a great many cases it is impossible to say whether a modern name is a patronymic or a metronymic for most of the male medieval font-names had feminine form also, e.g. Almarica, Alwina, Clementia, Eustachia, Huelina, Theobalda, etc., and, as in modern times, we sometimes find a female font-name manufactured from that of the father or ancestor, e.g. Lescelina, daughter of Matthew f. Leising (Lanc. Ing., 1205-1307), the latter gentleman's "by," or farmstead, having been the home of the Lazenby family.

Occupative names given in Latin or French form have sometimes persisted (Faber, Bullinger), but we may be sure that Ricardus Molinarius or Richard le Mouner was generally in private life Dick Miller. There are few commoner entries than Cocus and le Keu, both now represented by Cook. The same is true of nicknames. Many a modern Whitehead descends from a Blanchef or Blaunkfrunt of the Rolls, and the Caprons of to-day are far less numerous than those of the Middle Ages, most of whom were simply Hoods. The form which any name takes in the Rolls is due largely to the personality of the recorder, often doing his best with a population whose dialect was to him a meaningless jargon. Ralph Omnibon (Fine R.) looks like the official interpretation of Allgood, AS. Ælfgod, and le Petit Chose has a thirteenth-century prototype in Stephen Aliquid whom we find in Cambridgeshire in 1273 (Hund. R.), apparently an uncouth fenman whose name the official compiler gave up as a bad job.

The accidental character of modern names is illustrated by the fact that the same man is often found with more than one description. With Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus we may compare the humbler Adam Kokke in le Grene Pulter (F. of Y.), whose descendants may, along with other possibilities, now be Adams, Cox, Green, or Poulter, and Ricardus le Nouthird de Stanley Porter (ib.), who may now be represented by Richards, Nothard, Stanley, and Porter. So with Ralph Thomasman Fairfax (Pat. R.), Edmund Johanserjaunt Emmesone (ib.), Walter le Hore de Elmham called Starling (City D.), William Jonessometer Burdelays (Pat. R.), Nicholas Rogersserjaunt le Norreys (Coram Rege R. 1297), Everard Williamsman Attemersche (ib.), Richard Williamsserjaunt Pykerell (ib.), William Rogereswarener of Beauchamp of Sonday (Pat. R.). John le Cappeler, called "le prest" (City B.), appears in the same volume as John Prest, cappeler (hatter). This brings us to the fact, which may comfort some people, that trade-names were very often nicknames, e.g. Stephen le Espicer, called le Hornere (City E.), William Priour, cossun, i.e. horsedealer (ib.), John le Naper, King's huntsman (Chart. R. 1259), Elias Webster dictus Harpur (F. of Y.), Walter le Taillour, vicar of Crediton (Chanc. R.). It is pretty obvious that a man could not be Prentice by trade, nor could the Mawer or Plowman make much of a living by "mowing" or "ploughing" alone. Many names of this latter type date back to the manorial system, under which tenants had to put in a certain amount of time in mowing, ploughing, hedging, etc., for their masters.

Just as a well-established medieval name must have modern representatives, a well-established modern name must occur under some form in medieval records. By a well-established modern name, I do not mean one which is chiefly attested by the contemporary London Directory, or even in our great manufacturing centres, for these may be of Huguenot or later foreign origin, but one that has a regional existence dating back for a few centuries. This brings us to the question of modern sources. For a general dissertation on surnames the London Directory is sufficient. For the historical investigation of the subject it is useless. The method must be regional, and a great historical Dictionary of Surnames can only be compiled when the names of every county have been scientifically studied. This task is now being gradually carried out for place-names, and perhaps surnames will one day have their turn. Just as the main features in the political history of a country could be inferred from a study of its language alone, so the history of each county and region, political, ethnical, and industrial, is imbedded in its surnames.

For even now our population is largely stationary in abode. The Welsh milkman comes to London, drives his cart for twenty years, and then builds himself a snug villa on the coast of Cardigan Bay. If he remains in London, his dynasty generally dies out within a few generations. Moreover, in most families some members, at any rate, remain on the native soil, and there are now probably many people inhabiting the very spot where their ancestors dwelt when Domesday Book was compiled. It is sometimes thought that all names get to London sooner or later. They may do so, but they do not remain, and I do not believe that half of our surnames of long standing are represented in the London Directory.

The name Fillery is a good example of stationary character. The only Fillery <sup>2</sup> I ever heard of used to bowl for Sussex some thirty or forty years ago. From the Percy Cartulary I find that Henry Filleray or

Fyleray, also called Fiz le Rey, i.e. king's son, was a Sussex landholder in the thirteenth century. The casualty lists now being issued tell the same tale. In to-day's (Feb. 11, 1915) paper occurs Wyartt, the name of a private in the Suffolks, and, opening Bardsley, I find his first example is Lena Wyard, (Hund. R., Suff.). My own name, which is very uncommon, is derived from a village in Northants. It has occurred in the casualty lists as that of a private in the Northamptons. Peverall is found among the Sherwood Foresters, largely recruited from the Peak country. The famous name Paston naturally occurs in the Norfolk Regiment. Hundreds of similar cases could be quoted. It is among the rank and file also that we find the great Norman names (Marmion, Maltravers, etc.), which have almost disappeared from the peerage.

The best single source for modern names is undoubtedly the Return of Owners of Land, officially compiled in 1873 and generally called the Modern Domesday Book (MDB.). From the two volumes devoted to England and Wales we find that, contrary to the opinion of the stump orator, the land of the country is held by nearly a million people, the immense majority of whom are small holders of the peasant class. As the return is by counties, it is easy to trace the names regionally in all their forms and corruptions, and to establish the locality in which any given surname first came into existence. Very often we may find the more correct form still borne by the squire and all manner of perversions represented by the cottagers who are his distant cousins. An odd-looking name can often be solved by a comparison with its neighbours. When we find Bathos by the side of Bathurst we recognize a natural corruption. The last five names in J- in Essex are Judd, Judson, Justums, Jutson, Jutsum. Here Jud, i.e. Jordan, has given the patronymic Judson, altered to Jutson as Hudson has become Hutson. Then our love of final -m (cf. Bransom, Hansom, Sansom) has produced Jutsum, from which with a common metathesis (cf. Cripps for Crisp), we get the new patronymic Justums. When we find Phizacklea in Lancashire, we hardly need the intermediate Phizakarley, or the imitative Fitzackerley, to guide us to the original Fazakerley, the name of an ancient parish now absorbed in Liverpool. In the East Riding we find Mainprice in the same locality as the perverted Mamprize, and even Mempriss, Mimpress. Mainpidge. If a name occurs in isolation, and no rapprochement with characteristic names of the county is possible, we have to do with an immigrant whose kin must be sought elsewhere. In this way we can to some extent cover the same ground which would be explored in the impossible undertaking of examining the parish registers of the whole country.

As a matter of fact, many of the surnames which seem to defy interpretation are found copiously represented in special districts. A few hours devoted to turning over the leaves of the MDB., or even a glance at Guppy, reveals the existence of numbers of unfamiliar names which surprise by their forbidding uncouthness. The explanation is that they represent the name of some medieval homestead, swallowed up centuries ago by the growth of towns, or even some field-name; or they may spring from some dialect word which had died out before dialects became a matter of interest. Some of them might be solved by local antiquaries, but they defy the philologist. Such are Benjafield, which swarms in Dorset, Bosomworth, common in Yorkshire, Cudlipp, found all over Devon, Enticknap, common in Surrey and Sussex, and the great Cumberland name Routledge.

Altogether local distribution must be taken into account in proposing an etymology. Bardsley derives Godsall, Godsell from Godshill (Isle of Wight); but it is almost entirely a Gloucestershire and Herefordshire name [Geoffrey de Godeshale, Fine R., Glouc.]. In Norfolk and Suffolk we find Garwood existing strongly side by side with Garrood, Garrod, Garrett, This suggests that Garwood, sometimes local (garth wood), is in these counties also the representative of AS. Gærweard, with a change such as we find in Grimwood from Grimweard. The northern Yarwood is the same name. In the same region we find the similar parallelism of Legwood, Legood, Leggott, all probably from AS. Leodgeard, of which Leggett is the regular diminutive. Gaunt has two well-attested origins, the gaunt [Gilbert le Gant, Fine R.], and of Ghent [Richard de Gaunt, City F.]. But the home of the name is Lincolnshire, which is also, as a fen country, one of the great centres of bird nicknames. In that county the crested grebe is called the gannet, or gant, and hence we may conclude that most of the Lincolnshire Gaunts take their name from the bird-

"These birds frequent . . . the great east fen in Lincolnshire, where they are called gaunts" (Pennant).

The fairly common name Bray has two quite clear local origins, viz. from one of the many places in France called Bray, and from Bray in County Wicklow [Robert de Bree, provost de Develine, Doc. Ill.]. No doubt Bray in Berks must also be considered. But the great home of the Brays is Cornwall, and Benedict le Bray (Close R., Cornwall) shows it to be a nickname from a Cornish adjective meaning "fine, brave."

Finally, in dealing with nicknames, it must be remembered that, extraordinary and numerous as medieval nicknames are, many of them have gone unrecorded. As we have seen (p. 16), many individuals, in fact perhaps the majority, had four names, of the type John Wilson at Town's End Saddler. But most John Wilsons had a fifth name, such as Whitehead, Shorthose, Nightingale, or Dolittle, and this fifth name stood the poorest chance, as a rule, of getting into official records. Therefore, although no solution of a name can be accepted as final without documentary evidence, it is at least probable that no common adjective or noun that could conceivably be used as a nickname is altogether absent from our surname list.

The study of surnames may be regarded as a harmless pastime or as a branch of learning. As a pastime it is as innocent as stamp-collecting, and possibly as intellectual. As a branch of learning it is an inexhaustible, and hitherto practically unworked, mine of philological knowledge. A complete dictionary of English surnames would not only form a valuable supplement to the NED., but would in a great measure revolutionize its chronology. This may seem of little practical importance at a time when our leaders of science, a word which used to mean knowledge, are exhorting us in unattractive English to do away with

"ce vieux fatras de grec et de latin" and bend all our efforts on transforming the rising generation into a nation of super-plumbers. But among the little band of attardés who rally round the tattered flag of intellectual pursuits, there will always be some to whom the study of our glorious language will have an irresistible appeal.

Now language consists of words, and the oldest articulate words are names. It is more or less an accident that some of these, having become proper names, are excluded from the dictionaries. Others still discharge a double function and are equally the prey of the lexicographer and the name-hunter. Dictionaries draw, as a rule, on literary sources, i.e. on language which has already reached a somewhat artificial phase of evolution, but in the names and nicknames of the Middle Ages we hear the everyday speech of our ancestors, a disconnected speech perhaps, and without that thread of continuity which enables us to trace the dictionary word back through the centuries, but all the same a speech which is generally far older than literary records. Among words which occur as surnames in this volume there are few of which the examples do not ante-date by some centuries the earliest records in the NED. This applies especially to obsolete or dialect topographical words 2 (ch. iii.), and to trade-names 3 (ch. v.).

But there is hardly a noun or an epithet which can be used as a nickname, apart from the everyday Anglo-Saxon vocabulary, which is not found in the Rolls long before its first appearance in literature. The nocturnal mammal called a "bat" is usually bakke in Middle English, and this is one origin of the name Back [Henry le Bak, Coram Rege R. 1297]—

"Moldewarpis and backes, var. rere-myis" (Wyc. Is. ii. 20).

The NED. dates the form bat from c. 1575. But it is a common thirteenth-century nickname [Geoffrey le Bat, Fine R., Reginald le Bat, Hund. R.], and of course one origin of Batt.

The study of surnames also reveals the existence of a large Anglo-French vocabulary which is otherwise almost unrecorded. These words must have been colloquially current during the period when the two elements were in process of fusion. In the long run they were rejected in favour of the native equivalents and dropped out of the language, except in so far as they had become fossilized as surnames. Examples of such words will be found passim in this volume, but they are chiefly illustrated by nicknames taken from adjectives or derived from names of birds and beasts. These two great classes of surnames, which would require a volume to themselves, are not included in the present work. One, unfortunately obsolete, nickname of this type may, however, be mentioned here. Our familiar "pussy-cat," a word that we should expect to find in popular use long before it was put down in black and white, is a modernized "puss-cat"—

"Micia, a pusse-kat, a kitlin" (Florio).

The NED. first finds it in 1565. But it was a surname three centuries earlier—

"Ilyf le Messer vulneravit Robertum Pusekat juxta pontem de Corebrigge, ita quod statim obiit" (Northumb. Ass. R. 1256).

CHAPTER II

THE TEUTONIC NAME-SYSTEM

"It seemeth to have been the manner, at giving of names, to wish the children might perform and discharge their names, as when Gunthram, King of the French, named Clotharius at the font, he said, 'Crescat puer et hujus sit nominis executor'" (CAMDEN).

THE names in use among all the Germanic races, including Scandinavia and Iceland, go back to that period in the history of the world when all men seem to have been poets. When we consider the beauty of the oldest of these names, their picturesque connection with gods and heroes, war and the wilds, and with the great elementary abstract concepts which we no longer understand, and compare with them the name creations of the Romans, and still more of the Middle Ages, commonplace, prosaic, spiteful, or obscene, we feel thankful that there was once an age of poetic bandits and imaginative pirates. These Teutonic names were originally all dithemetic, i.e. each name consisted of two elements, e.g. Alfred, fairly counsel, and there can be no doubt that in the earliest times the elements were understood by those who bore the names, as were the Greek names which they so strikingly resemble in structure and spirit. This resemblance has often been pointed out, e.g. Godwin, God friend, Theophilus, Folkard, people strong, Demosthenes, Sebert, Sebright, victory bright, Nicophanes.

At the period with which our historical documents deal, these names had largely ceased to have a real meaning. The elements of which they were composed were drawn chiefly from the archaic and poetic language and these elements were often combined so as to make no sense. A very common practice in naming children was to compound the name from that of the father and mother, somewhat after the practice followed by modern racehorse owners. Or one element persisted in a family, e.g. in the six generations from Edward the Elder to Edgar Atheling practically all the kings and royal princes have names in Ead. bliss. The elements are juxtaposed without anything to show their grammatical relationship, so that in interpreting them one can only indicate the general idea which each half expressed. Still, there are many examples of these compound names which still occur in Anglo-Saxon poetry as common nouns, e.g. Gold wine, gold friend, whence our surname Goldwin, is used of a liberal patron, Heremann, army man, whence Harman, means a warrior, Maegenheard, might hard, our Maynard, is found as an adjective in the sense of strong.

Abdallah means "servant of God" (cf. AS. Godescealc), Saladin is "honour of the faith," and Nureddin, the name of the Turkish commander in Mesopotamia, means "light of the faith."

Of the names dealt with here the great majority are common to the Teutonic languages, with certain small differences according as the forms are German, Scandinavian, or English. Some belong especially to one or other of these language groups, e.g. the names which contain the elements Brand, flame, sword, Cytel, cauldron, are Scandinavian, while those in -nand, bold, e.g. Ferdinand, are continental and of rare occurrence in Anglo-Saxon. In the following paragraphs I give the names in the normalized West-Saxon spelling, from Searle's Onomasticon Anglo-Saxonicum, calling attention occasionally to the Norse or continental forms and the surnames which they have produced in English and other languages. I have already (Romance of Names, ch. vii.) mentioned a number of obvious examples. Here I have rather selected those of which the origin is not immediately apparent or which have an unusual appearance. The great variation in the modern English forms is due to many accidents of time and place, but chiefly to the fact that the same name has often reached us through different channels-English, French, and Flemish. Possibly some of them are really Celtic names which have assumed an imitative form. It is thought, for instance, that Cerdic may be for Cradock, Caractacus. If this is so, Scott was doubly unfortunate in choosing a Welsh name for a typical Anglo-Saxon and then turning it into the ghost-name Cedric.

The Teutonic name-system was carried into every corner of Europe, first by the Vikings, and later by those valiant Norman knights who were in the habit of setting out with a handful of followers to carve themselves out a kingdom. Thus Roderick, fame mighty, is found as wide apart as Wales (Prothero, Ryrie, Prytherick) and Russia (Rurik), and has named such national heroes as the Spanish Cid (Don Rodrigo), Roderick Dhu, and Rory O'More. For fuller information on the historic warriors and saints who caused certain names to be popular in special regions those interested should consult Charlotte Yonge's Christian Names, a book which contains a vast amount of learning couched in gracious form, though the etymological theories put forward are sometimes inaccurate and out of date.

Most of the elements 1 used in these names can be put indifferently first or last, e.g. Hereric, whence Herrick, Richere, whence Richer, Reacher. Some are used only initially, e.g. Mægen, as in Mægenfrith, whence Manfred, others only finally, e.g. -laf, as in Frithulaf, now Freelove, or -mund, as in Frithumund, whence Freemont. Generally the gender of the second theme corresponds with that of the person, e.g. names in the feminine nouns -thryth and -hild were given to females only. Examples are Æthelthryth, Awdrey, Gærthryth (Gertrude), Gartrude, and the two fierce queens Brunehild and Chriemhild. But this was not a fixed rule; there are, for instance, many male names ending in the feminine -mund.

The elements which enter into the composition of Teutonic names fall into various groups, such as deities and supernatural beings, animals, abstract ideas, weapons, titles and epithets, adjectives. The chief divine elements are God, Ans, Ing. 1 The great names of Odin and Freya seem to have been avoided. but Thor is very common. The element God appears to have been often felt as identical with good. Hence, perhaps, the later forms such as Goodrich, Goodwin, and also the shortened Good, which is by no means always a nickname. Here belong such apparently insignificant names as Gobb, Gobbett, Gobby, shortened from such compounds as Godbeorht (Theophanes), Godbeald (Theocrates). The latter survives in full as Godbolt and Goble, while the former is represented in French by Gobert and Joubert. Shortened forms of God names are German Goethe and Italian Giotto. It appears also as the second element in many modern English surnames, e.g. Wingood, from AS. Winegod, Osgood, Hosegood, Horsegood, from AS. Osgod.

The Aasir, as Miss Yonge calls them, the Ansen as they are named by the Germans, were the divine race inhabiting Asgard, the Norse Olympus. This very interesting prefix, which may be taken as almost equivalent to God, appears in three forms. The Norse is As, the Anglo-Saxon is Os, and the German is Ans. From Ascytel we have Ashkettle and the contracted Askell, Astell, etc., while in France a kind of compromise between the Norse and German forms produced Anquetil, introduced into England as Ankettle. So also Fr. Angot is the doublet of Osgood. In Haskell we have the common addition of the aspirate [Haschetill Werglice, Salisbury Chart.]. Several surnames preserve the Anglo-Saxon form (Osborn, Osman, Osmond, Oswald, etc.), while the German gave the famous Anselm, whence our Ansell, Hansell and the Dutch dim. Enslin. Ing, the name of a demi-god, seems to have been early confused with the Christian angel in the prefix Engel, common in German names, e.g. Engelhardt, anglicized as Engleheart. In Anglo-Saxon we find both Ing and Ingel. The modern name Ingoll represents Ingweald (Ingold), and Inglett is a dim. of similar origin. The cheerful Inglebright is from Ingelbeorht. The simple Ing has given, through Norse Ingwar, the Scottish Ivor.

The Norse Thor became AS. Thur, which in the compound Thurcytel gave Scottish Torquil (whence MacCorquodale), and our Thurkettle, Thurkell, Thurtle, Thirkettle, Thirkell, Thirkhill, Turtle, and Tuttle? as in Tuttlebee, from Thirkleby (Yorks). Thoroughkettle is found in the eighteenth century. Turketine may be formed in the same way as Anketin, Rosketin (p. 33). but Henry de Turkedene (Glouc. Cart.) suggests a local origin, from Turkdene (Glouc,) with the ending changed as in Heseltine (Hazeldean). Other compounds of Thor are Thurgisl, whence Thurgell, Thurgær, now Thurgar, and Thurfrith, the wife of Hereward (Torfrida), surviving as Turtery, Tuffery, Tollfree. The Thur names did not flourish in Germany, but the Norsemen took them to France. whence as Turbert, Turgis, Turpin, they came to England and gave Turbott, Turgoose, etc. The very common Thurstan became in France Tustain, Tustin,

Tutin, all now well-established English surnames. I fancy that this will one day be found to be the origin of the supposed Celtic Tristram, of which the oldest form appears to be Durstan. Tarbath is a curious corruption of Thurbeorht and Tarbun of Thurbeorn.

With these mythological names may be grouped those in Ealh, temple, and the legendary Hun, giant, and Elf. fairy. In connection with the first it should be noted that four of the commonest Anglo-Saxon elements. Ælf, Æthel, Eald, Ealh, very easily became confused, especially after the Conquest, and hence modern surnames in Al-, Ayl-, El- (Alwin, Aylward, Elwin) may belong to any of them. We find historic Ealhfriths who were known also as Alfrith and Alfridus, which, as surnames, would easily fall together with those derived from Ælfred and Ælfric. So Aymer, Aylmer, may represent, and does in individual cases, both Ælfmær and Æthelmær. The most famous name in Ealh is Ealhwine (Alcuin), which survives as Allchin. Alkin, and is perhaps not altogether foreign to Hawkins. Allcard is AS. Ealtheard, while Fr. Aucher corresponds to AS. Ealhhere, and may be derived directly from it, as the corresponding element is scarcely found in continental German names. Names in Ælf are very numerous and correspond to continental forms in Alb. Thus our Avery, less commonly Affery, Affray, Allfree, which stands for both Ælfred and Ælfric, is the same as Fr. Aubrey from Alberic. Alflatt, Elfleet, Elflitt is from Ælfflæd, elf purity, Alliott from Ælfgeat, Elver from Ælfhere, Elvidge, Elvish from Ælfheah, Elnough from Ælfnoth, Elston from Ælfstan, Elwall from Ælfweald, and very probably Halsey from Elfsige.

with the incorrect  $H^{-1}$  which we find in many names of this class. The tribal name of the dwarfish Huns was applied, curiously enough, in Old German to legendary giants, and is still so used in poetic style. It is not common in purely Anglo-Saxon names, though we have a few good examples, e.g. Hunfrith, whence Humphrey, and Hunbeorht which is Fr. Humbert and appears also in the Ger. Humperdinck. Hunbeald is so rare that we dare hardly invoke it to explain our Honeyball, but it is represented by Ger. Humboldt.

When we come to the names of animals which were used in the formation of human names, we naturally find a great difference between the Greeks and the Teutons. Among the former we find chief honour paid to the lion (Leonidas, Timoleon), and the horse (Philip, Hippolytus, Xanthippe). To the old Teutons the lion was unknown, though the rather late name Leonard, lion strong, formed from it, appears in most European languages. The horse was also of little account on the salt seas and in the German forests, and the legendary nicknames of the Jutish invaders, "stallion" and "mare" (Hengist and Horsa), alluded to their flag, on which the white horse was a strange exotic beast to be classed with dragons and griffins. The only common Anglo-Saxon name formed directly from "horse" is Roscytel. This is fairly common in Middle English, and still survives as Roskill [Swein f. Roskil, Pipe R.], while the derivative Rosketin

(cf. Anketin from Anscytel) has given Ruskin [Andrew Rosekin, Pat. R.]. The original Roskill has generally been swallowed up by Russell. Rosamond, Roseman contain the same element, but are of continental origin.

For the Teutons the two kings of the forest were the bear and the boar, in connection with which we observe a very curious phenomenon. Beorn, so common in Anglo-Saxon names, means warrior, while in Norse and German it means bear. Eofor, equally common, means boar in Anglo-Saxon and German, but warrior in Norse. In each case one language has personified the formidable beast into a human being. Any modern Barnard or Everett is therefore etymologically a strong bear or boar, or a strong warrior, according as his ancestry is pure Anglo-Saxon or continental. The favourite Beorn name was Beornheard, whence Burnard, Burnett, Barnard, Barnett, etc. It has also many derivatives in French and German (Behrens. Bernhardi, etc.). Other names of this group which have survived are Beornheah, now Barnish, Burnage, Burnish (cf. Alphege, Elvish, from Ælfheah), Beornher one origin of the common Fr. Bernier, and of our Berner, Beornstan, now Burnstone, Beornweald, now Barnwell, Bernal, Burnell, and Beornwulf which would give the same result, but some of the English names here enumerated have an alternative origin. The same element is final in Sigebeorn, now Siborne. Thurbeorne, now Thorburn, Wigbeorn, now Whyborn, etc. The simple Ber does not appear in Anglo-Saxon names, but Fr. Beraud, Beroalde, OG, Berwald is the chief source of our Barrett. But the most interesting of the "bear" names in Fr. Bérenger, OG. Beringar. It was very popular in England and shows the common confusion of -r-, -l-, -n-, in the modern surnames Barringer, Berringer, Ballinger, Bellinger, Benninger [John Beringer or Beniger, IpM.]. Its latest transformation is Bellhanger. Eofor is less common in Anglo-Saxon than the corresponding Eber in Germany (Ebers, Eberlin, etc.), and it is possible that the favourite Everard, Everett came to us from Eberhard, via Old French. But AS. Eoforwine, besides giving Everwin, has run riot with the vowels in Erwin, Irwin, Orwin, Urwin.

Ouite as important as the bear and the boar are the mysterious wolf and raven, the companions of Odin. AS. Wulf appears initially in a great number of names, and the modern name Wolfe, Woof, is sometimes a shortened form of these rather than a nickname. Most historical of all is the dim. Ulfilas, the name of the translator of the Gothic Bible. Among compounds of Wulf are Wulfgar (Woolgar), Wulfnoth (Woolnough), Wulfred, Wulfric (Woolfrey, Woolfries). Wulfstan, whence the local Wolstenholme and Wolstoncraft, Wulfwig (Woolley), and Wulfwine (Woolven, Woollen). In the Norse forms the initial has disappeared, e.g. Ulph, Uff, and Uffendell, the doublet of the native Wolfendale, etc. In French these names replace initial W- by G- or Gu-, e.g. Golfier (Wulfhere), one source of our Gulliver and the origin of the local Montgolfier. Almost as numerous are the names in which -wulf is final, but here the origin is generally

Our surnames come from the dialects, and the dialects do as they like with the vowels, e.g. from Lamb we have Lomb, Lumb, common Middle English forms, and also Lemm, Limb. Long is also Lang, Lung, Leng, and possibly sometimes Ling. Cf. the local Crankhorn and Crankshaw, the first element of which, meaning "crooked," also occurs as Crenk-, Crink-, Cronk-, Crunk-.

disguised, e.g. Addle from Æthelwulf, with which cf. the fine German name Adolf and its atrocious 'latinization' into Adolphus, Raddle, Rattle, from Rædwulf, Kinnell from Cynewulf, etc. In French names of similar origin the termination usually becomes -ouf, or -oul, e.g. Burnouf, Renouf correspond to AS. Brunwulf, Regenwulf, while Raoul is our Ralph, Relf, i.e. Rædwulf.

The raven appears initially in Ræfencytel, whence Rankill, Ræfenhild, which is one source of Ravenhill, and Ræfensweart, now Ravenshear, Ramshire, Ramsker, Wælræfen survives as Wallraven. The simple Raven. common also in place-names, is more often an Anglo-Saxon personal name than a later nickname from the bird. The raven names are especially Norse, and the corresponding German names, and hence Old French names also, are not numerous, but we have contractions of OG. Raban in the well-known dithemetic names Bertram and Wolfram. More numerous are the eagle names, beginning with Earn in Anglo-Saxon, By far the commonest of these is Arnold, a favourite German name, which takes in Low German the form Arend, the source of the Norfolk name Arrand. It is rare in Anglo-Saxon, so the probability is that our Arnall represents rather the much commoner Earnwulf. Two especially interesting Anglo-Saxon names are Earnthur, whence the so-called Keltic Arthur, and Earncytel, now Arkell, Arkle, Argles, Arkcoll, etc. From Arthur come the imitative Authors and Earthy. With the same group may be classed the Norse Orm, dragon, serpent (worm), whence the famous Guthorm, still existing as Guthrum, Goodrum, while Wormald from Wurmbeald shows the Anglo-Saxon form. We have also a few names in Swan-, e.g. Swanhild, now Swannell; but this is for AS. swan, a "swain" (see p. 42). The modern name Swan is more often a nickname. Many names similar to the above were used as cognomina by the Romans, e.g. Ursus, Aper, Lupus, Corvus, Aquila, but these were nicknames pure and simple.

Among common Anglo-Saxon names we find no fewer than five elements, Bead, Gund (Guth), Heath, Hild, Wig, which contain the idea of war or battle. The names of Hildebrand and his son Hadubrand are thus identical in meaning. Sometimes these elements occur in combination, e.g. Gunhild (Gunnell), Heathwig (Hadaway, Hathaway 1), Other examples are Beaduric (Badrick, Batters), Gundwine (Gunwin), Heathured (Hatred), Heathuwine (Hadwin), Hildegar (Hilger, Hillyar), Wigman (Wyman). Hilditch, Hildick looks local, but is AS. Hildheah, though the name is not in Searle [William f. Hildich, Close R.]. Wig is especially common as second element and is responsible for many names in -way which have a local appearance. e.g. Ellway (Ælfwig), Harraway (Herewig), Kennaway (Coenwig), Goodway (Godwig), Redway, Reddaway (Rædwig), Otway, Ottoway (Othwig), Bothway, Botherway (Bodwig 2), and Hadaway (v.s.). So also in the first syllable we get Way-, as in Waymark (Wigmearc), Waygood (Wigod), alternating with Why-, Wy-, as in

Whybird (Wigbeorht), Whyborn, Wyburn (Wigbeorn), etc. With this group may be classed also names in Sige, victory, e.g. Sibbald (Sigebeald), Sibary, Sibree 1 (Sigebeorht), Sinnott, Sennett (Sigenoth), Syrett, Secret (Sigered), Search, 2 Surch (Sigeric), Brixey (Beorhtsige); in Here, army, e.g. Folchere, whence Folker, Fulker, Fulcher, Futcher, etc., Heregod, now Hargood; and in Fær, danger, e.g. Faerman (Fairman, 3 Farman, Fireman). It is not impossible that our homely Farthing may sometimes derive from Færthegn.

Equally warlike are the numerous names derived from weapons. Arms of offence and defence are Æsc. spear (ash), as in Æscwine (Ashwin), Bil. sword. as in Bilheard (Billiard), Bilweald (Billiald), Brand, sword (flame), as in Colbrand (Colbrain), Ecg. edge (of the sword), as in Ecgheard (Eachard), Gar, spear, as in Gærwine (Garvin), Othgær (Odgers), Helm, helmet, as in Helmær (Helmer), Ord, spear point, as in Ordwig (Ordway), Ordgær (Orgar), shortened also to Ord [Humphrey FitzOrd, Salisbury Chart.], and Rand shield, as in Randwulf ' (Randall, Rendle, Rundle), Beorhtrand (Bertrand), to be distinguished from Beorhtram. bright raven (Bartram). But some names in Bil belong to William, for we find William "dictus Byl" in the thirteenth century. Here belongs probably the dim, Billion, Brand is much commoner alone than in compounds, and has also become Brond.

Gellibrand, Gillibrand must represent Gislbrand [John Gilibrond, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285], though the name is not in Searle. Cytel, Ketel, cauldron (of the gods), is now found as Kettle, Kittle, Chettle, Cattle, etc., as well as initially in Kettleburn [Henry Ketelbern, Chart. R.], and in many names of local origin. Chilvers is for Cytelweard, found in DB. as Chilvert. Hence also Kilvert.

Forming a transition from war to peace we have the important elements Burg, refuge, castle, and Mund, protection, as in Burgheard (Burchard, Burchett), Wilburg (Wilbur), Æthelmund (Almond), Færmund (Farrimond). Here also we might put Weard, guard. the derivatives of which easily get mixed with those of Heard, e.g. Coenweard (Kenward, Kennard). Frithu, peace, has given us many favourite font-names which have later become surnames, e.g. Domfrith (Dumphrey, Dumpress), Frithugar (Fricker), Frithmund (Fiddyment 1). To the last name, or to some other compound of Frithu, such as the once favourite Frithuswith or Friswid, patron saint of the University of Oxford, belong Fiddy, Fiddian, Phythian, Phethean. This element often becomes Free in modern surnames, e.g. Freestone from Frithustan, Freelove from Frithulaf [Frelof Pollard, Chart. R.]. It also appears in Frizzle. Froysell, which in Scotland has unaccountably become Frazer-

That was traytour and fykell" (Song, temp. Ed. I.)—

and in Fr. Froissart, represented by our Frushard, Frusher.

The importance of the tribal idea is reflected in the frequent occurrence of Folc, Leod, Theod, all meaning people, nation, e.g. Foloweard (Folkard, Vaulkhard). Leodgar (Ledger), Theodric (Terry, Derrick, Dethridge, Derry, Todrick), Theodbeald (Theobald, Tibbles, Tipple, Tidball, Tidbald, Tidboald, Tudball, Deeble, Dipple, Tebbutt, Debutt, Dyball, etc.). We have also the shortened Theed, Teed [William Thede, Hund, R.]. With this important group may be compared the numerous Greek names in demos and laus, e.g. Democritus, Laomedon, Nicodemus, Agesilaus, etc. The public meeting of the tribe is commemorated by names in Mæthel and Thing, both meaning assembly. From the first come Mauger, Major (Mæthelgær), and Maber, Malabar, and Fr. Maubert (Mæthelbeorht); from the second our Dingle, Tingle, a common personal name in Middle English [William Dingel, Hund, R.], from AS, Thingwulf or Dingolf, Similarly Greek had names such as Anaxagores, Pythagoras derived from the agora, the market-place, which was to the Greeks what the forum was to the Romans. The modern surname Lawman may be AS. Lagmann, lawyer, the name of the poet whom we call Layamon, but the latter is so rare a name that it is probably safer to refer Lawman to Lawrence (cf. Jackman, Hobman, etc.).

A very common element connected with authority is Weald (wield), rule, as in Wealdwine, now Walwin, Wallen, but occurring much more commonly as a suffix, e.g. Beorhtweald (Brettle, Brittle), Grimbeald (Grimble), Hygebeald (Hubble), Winebeald (Wimble), etc. Property and its rights are represented by Geard, enclosure, "garth," Haga, enclosure, "haw," Mearc, mark, boundary, and Stan, stone, probably also in this case a boundary mark. Examples are Frithugeard (Freeguard), Haganfrith (Henfrey), Wigmearc (Wymark, Waymark), Goldstan (Goldstone), Stanmær (Stammers), Stanbeald (Stumbles 1). To Haga belongs the famous Nibelung Hagen, while Hammond is Fr. Hamon, short for OG. Haganmund. The Middle English contraction of Hagan was Hain—

"Heyne hath a newe cote and his wyf another" (Piers Plowman)—

the origin of our Haines, Haynes, which may also be from the same word in its literal sense of hedge, enclosure. Land and sea have given us Lambert (Landbeorht), Saffrey, Savory (Sæfrith), Seagram, Seagrim (Sægrim), and especially Sagar, Sayers, Sears and many other variants (Sægær). These compounds are often not to be distinguished from those of Sige (p. 38), e.g. Seawright may represent Særic or Sigeric.

From a very large number of abstract ideas we may select the following—Amal, work, as in Amalric, whence, or from the transposed Amalric, come, chiefly through French, our Amory, Amery, Emery, Imray, Imrie, while the Italian form Amerigo ultimately named a continent; Dæg, day, as in Dægheard, Daggett, Dægmær, Damer, Dægmund, now Daymond, Dayman, Damant, etc., often altered to Diamond, and the shortened forms Dack and Day, the latter of which has other and more common origins; Ead, bless, the first element in so many Anglo-Saxon names, some of which are now a little disguised, e.g. Ager, Adger from Eadgar, Admer from Eadmær; Hyge, mind, courage, as in Hygebeorht, whence Hubert, Hubbard, Hibbert, Hobart, and the favourite ME. Hugh from which we have so many derivatives (Huggins, Howchin, Hewlings, Hullett, etc.); Laf, remnant, as in Anlaf, now Oliffe; Mægen, might, as in Mægenhild, one source of Meynell [Peter Maynild, Pat, R.]; Noth, fame, as in Nothgær, whence Ger. Notker, Fr. Nodier, and perhaps some of our Nutters; Rad, counsel, of which the most popular compound was Rædwulf, our Ralph, Relt, Raw, and, via Fr. Raoul, Raoulin, our Rawle, Rawlin; Thanc, thanks, as in Tancred or Tankard and Ger. Danckwertz. Most of these can also occur finally, e.g. Ætheldæg, Allday, Ealdræd, Aldred, Aldritt, Alldread, etc.

Besides Beorn (p. 34), Anglo-Saxon used Mann for warrior, hero. This occurs as second element in a great number of compounds of a descriptive kind, e.g. Freoman (Freeman), Northman (Norman), Heardman (Hardman), etc., many of which are of course also nicknames of later formation. For servant we have Scealc, as in Godescealc, one source of Godsell, Gutsell, but much commoner in German (Gottschalk), and Swegen or Swan, usually occurring alone, Swain, Swan. All of these elements have poetically the meaning of warrior and in prose that of servant. Cuth, acquaintance, "kith," occurs in the favourite Cuthbeald and Cuthbeorht, the former of which shares

Norse and Anglo-Saxon forms of the same word.

Cobbold with Godbeald, while the latter survives as Cobbett, Cubitt. Cuttell, Cottle may stand for either Cuthhelm or Cuthwulf. Wine, friend, is very common both as initial and final, e.g. Winebeald (Winbolt), Glædwine (Gladwin). The common Unwin, un-friend, enemy, is very rare as an Anglo-Saxon name, and must generally have been rather a nickname. Vinegar seems to be an imitative spelling of Winegær. Gisl, hostage, is the first element of Gilbert, AS, Gislbeorht, but its popularity came through French, From Gislhere comes Ger. Gessler, the villain of the Tell myth. Thurgisl is the origin of Thurgill, and also of Fr. Turgis, whence Eng. Sturgess, and Todkill is earlier Theodgild, probably for Theodgisl, Wæltheof means the thief of slaughter, with a first element which we find in Valkyrie and Valhalla, while Friththeof, the hero of an ancient saga and a modern North Pole expedition, means thief of peace. Some authorities think the ending was originally -theow, servant, slave, which appears to survive in Walthew, Waltho, Waldo, Wiht, creature, sprite, is very common as first element, e.g. Wihtric, now Whittrick, Wightgar, now Widger. Another form, Uht, appears in the popular Uhtred, whence Oughtred and the imitative Outright.

Among simple adjectives the commonest are Æthel, noble, as in Æthelweard (Aylward, Adlard, Allard); Beorht, bright, as in Beorhtman (Brightman; cf. Greek Androcles), Beorhtgifu (Brighteve), Beorhtmær (Brightmore, Brimmer), also very common finally, e.g. Gundbeorht, whence Fr. Gondibert, our Gombert, Gumpert, and Ger. Gompertz; Beald, bold, as in Bealdhere (Balder), Dægbeald (Daybell, Dabell); Cene, keen, bold, as in Cenered (Kindred), equivalent to Ger.

Conrad (Thrasybulus); Cyne, royal, as in Cynesige (Kinsey), Cynewulf (Kinnell); Deor, dear, as in Deorweald (Dorrell, Durrell); Eald, old, as in Ealdwig (Aldwy); Eorp, swarthy, as in Eorpwine (Orpen), common also in the shortened form Earp, Orpe; Free, free, as in Freobeorn (Freeborn); Grim, grim, as in Grimbeald (Grimble), whence also, by a common metathesis, Gumbrell 1; Healf, half, as in Healfdene (Haldane), the "half Dane"; Heard, hard, strong, as in Heardbearht, which has contributed to Herbert, Harbord, etc., Stanheard (Stannard) and Gifheard (Giffard). the latter rare in Anglo-Saxon, but a favourite Norman name (cf. Ger. Gebhardt); Leof, dear, as in Leofsige (Livesey, Lovesey), Leofred and Leofric (Livery, Luffery); Hlud, loud, famous, rare in Anglo-Saxon, but very common in German names, e.g. Ludwig, Luther, whence Fr. Louis, Lothair, etc.; Ric, powerful, rich, as in Ricbeald (Richbell). Ricweald (Riggall), Ricweard (Rickard, Rickwood, Record), Leofric (Leveridge, Loveridge): Snel, swift, valiant, as in Snelgær (Snelgar): Wacer, bold, as in Eadwacer (Edicker), corresponding to the continental Odoacer; Wealh, foreign, as in Walkling, Wakeling, a dim. of Old French origin, Vauquelin.

Two common elements which hardly fall into any of the classes already mentioned are Regen and Gold. The former, related to Goth. ragin, counsel, seems to have been used in Anglo-Saxon as a simple intensive. From shortened forms of the common Regenweald (Reginald, Reynold, Fr. Renaud), Regenheard (Reynard, Renyard, Fr. Renard), Regenhere (Rayner, Fr. Régnier), etc., we sometimes get Raine, Raines, while Raybould is from Fr. Reybaud, corresponding to Regenbeald. Gold occurs both as initial and final, e.g. Goldhavoc (Goldhawk), Goldwine (Goldwin, Jeudewin), Inggold (Ingold, Ingle). Goldmore represents Goldmær, though this is not in Searle [Guldemor w. of Richard Astmund, Fine R.].

The frequency with which any given Anglo-Saxon name occurs as a modern surname is not so much due to its wide use before the Conquest as to its association with some great personality. After the Conquest our baptismal system became, in the main, French, although the French names in use were largely cognate with the Anglo-Saxon names which they superseded (see p. 10). But the memory of famous saints, like Guthlac and Cuthbert, or abbots like Thurcytel and Ealhwine, was reverenced in those districts where they had lived and worked, and their names were given to children born of parents who had worshipped at their shrines.

As we have noticed here and there, the modern surname often represents only the first element of the dithemetic personal name. A notable example is Folc, which owed its popularity to the Angevindynasty. We find among its variants, Folk, Fulk, Fewkes, Foulkes, Foakes, Fooks, Fowkes, Folkes, Volks, Vokes, and, with metathesis, Flook, Fluke, Fluck, Flux, while Fogg, Fuge, Fudge, Fuke are shortened from its compound Fulcher (Folker, Fulker, Futcher, Fudger, Volker, etc.). Foggathorp (Yorks) is Fulcartorp in DB., while, in the Coram Rege R. (1207), the same man is referred to as Henry Fulcher and Henry Fouch. The famous French name Foch is of course cognate. Other shortened names of this type, not already mentioned, are Oram from the Norse Orm [Orum solus, Lib, Vit.] and Worms from the Anglo-Saxon form, as in Wurmhere, Frew, Frow, from Freowine, whence Frewin, Fruen, Gold, generally shortened from some such name as Goldwine, Main, Mayne, from Maynard or some other compound of Mægen, Wigg from one of the many Wig names, Winks, perhaps from Wincthryth (Lib. Vit.), etc. Many of these are simple, but a great many of our short names of Anglo-Saxon origin are very difficult to identify. This difficulty is increased by the fact that names of this type are seldom recorded in the Rolls. The latter give almost invariably, in whatever language they are written, the font-name in its full conventional form. Occasionally a clue helps us, as in the case of Fogg and Fudge (v.s.), but the task of extending the work of Kemble 1 by identifying the great mass of these names with their originals still awaits an enthusiast.

N.B.—To have included many medieval examples would have made the foregoing chapter quite unreadable. The author's Dictionary of Surnames, if it is ever completed, will contain evidence of the survival and alteration of these Anglo-Saxon names.

CHAPTER III

SOME LOCAL SURNAMES

"Nor indeed is he capable to beare any rule or office in town or countrey, who is utterly unacquainted with John an Okes and John a Stiles" (Howell, Forraine Travell).

APART from the innumerable names derived from towns, villages and estates, we have a very large number which originate from features of the landscape (Hill, Wood, Field), or from specific buildings or parts of buildings (Church, House, Kitchen). Many of the words from which such names come are quite obsolete or survive only in local dialect. Some of these, such as Hurst, Shaw, Thwaite, etc., survive very strongly in compounds, and are often curiously corrupted. For these, of which I have given a summary account in my Romance of Names, see ch. iv. Here I propose to deal rather with a number of obsolete or unfamiliar words which occur more often in their simple form. A few others are included because of their peculiar use as surnames. The list, though by no means exhaustive, contains a very large number of names which have never been explained, and the examples by which they are illustrated are usually some centuries older than the earliest records in any dictionary. A few others belonging to the same class will be found scattered about in other chapters of the book in which accident has led to their mention.

In many cases names of this type are now specific place-names. We find constant references to "the Devizes," as to la Burcote, la Haye, la Poole, la Rye, la Sele, la Woodrow, etc., now known as Burcote, Hayes, Poole, Rye, Seal, Woodrow, but the entries show that the corresponding surnames often belong to the general as well as to the specific use of these words. In the early Rolls these names, or rather these addresses, are always preceded by prepositions, which have now generally disappeared. The following examples are put down just as they are printed in the Rolls:

Names in which the preposition has survived are still common in English as in other languages, e.g. Fr. Doutrepont, Ger. Zumbusch, Du. Bezuidenhout, south of the wood. At survives in many obvious names such as Atwood, Attewell. The following are less simple, Athawes (haw, a hedge enclosure), Atheis (hays, hedges), Athews (ME. hiwisc, homestead, whence Huish), Athoke (hook, bend), Atkey (quay), Ato, Attoe, Hatto (hoe, a sand-spit), Athow (how, a hill), Attack, Attick, Attock (oak), Attenbarrow (barrow, a mound), Attrie (rye, see p. 72), Attrill, AS. æt thære hylle [Thomas Atterhill, Exch. R.], Attread (reed), Attride (ME. rithe, ride, a small stream), Attru (trough, see Trow; or perhaps from rew, street, row), Attwooll (Wool, Dors.), Atyeo (a Somerset surname, apparently from the river

Yeo). Atterbury is "at the bury," i.e. borough, and though there is an Attenborough in Notts, the fact that Attenborough is found along with Atterbury in many counties suggests that the two names are often of identical origin. So also Atherall, Attreall, at the heal (see p. 62). An interesting name of the same type is Athersmith, ME. at ther smethe, or level field, for which see p. 77. Athersuch probably contains Sich (q.v.), but the ending may be Such, a variant of Zouch, Fr. souche, a tree-stump. The reduction of At is seen in A'Barrow, A'Burrow, A'Hearn (corner), as in Abear (see p. 53), Avann (see p. 59), Agutter. In the latter name [Robert atte Gotere, Pat. R.] gutter means stream—

"The guter of waters" (Wyc. Hab. iii. 10).

It seems to have been equivalent to gote, a channel, whence Gott [William atte Gote or de la Gotere, of Boston, Pat. R.]. At- is also changed to Ad- and even Ed-, Et-, as in Edmead, Ethawes.

Names such as Nash, Noakcs, Nall are well known to be aphetic forms of atten ash, atten oaks, atten hall. With these go Niles, Nayland, Nyland [Thomas Attenylonde, Pat. R.], Norchard, Nendick (end dike). We also get aphetic forms in which the initial A- alone has disappeared. The stock example is Twells, at wells. Here belong Tash (at ash), Taw (Athaw, v.s.), Toe, Tocs (Atto, v.s.), Trill (Attrill, v.s.), and probably Trood [Margaret atte Rude, Plcas.). The Border name Trodden may be from northern dial roddin, a sheeptrack.

Occasionally the AF. al (a le) and a la seem to survive, e.g. Algate, Allchurch, Allpass, Allpike (Hallpike 1), Alltoft, Altree, Allabyrne (burn), but alternative explanations could be given for most of these, e.g. the prefix may be ald, old, or Allabyrne may be only an elaboration of Alabone, Allibone, which in its turn is a perversion of Alban [Hugh Alybon, Coram Rege R. 1297]. Allhusen seems to represent al and the old dat. plur. husum, houses. But del, de la, are common, the former being often altered to dal, dil, dol. Examples are Delahunte, Delahunty, Delhay, Dallicoat, Dallicott, Dallamore, Dillamore, Dollymore, Dellaway, Dilloway, Dolloway, Delbridge, Dealbridge, Dealchamber, Dillistones, Dallywaters, to which many more could be added. Dellow probably contains how, a hill [William Delhow, Hund. R.], while Dellew is for del ewe, water, also a common entry.

Names in Du-, e.g. Dupree, Duppery, Fr. Dupré, of the meadow, Duberley, i.e. du Boulay (birch grove), are generally of more recent introduction from French. The retention of de in names of French origin, Danvers (Antwerp), Darcy (Arsy, Oise), Davers (Auvers, Manche), Dorsey (Orsay, Seine-et-Oise), is common, but we seem also to have a few cases of this preposition coalescing with a purely English word. Such appears to be the explanation of Dash or Daish (ash) and Dashwood, Delderfield; cf. Nicholas Dinkepenne, i.e. of Inkpen (Chart R.).

Besides the obvious Bycroft, Byford, Bysouth, Bytheway or Bidaway, Bythesea, Bywater, we have By-in Bygrave, Bygreaves, where the second element may mean grove (ME. greve) or quarry, trench (ME. græf), Bygott, which being a Lincolnshire name goes rather with Gott (v.s.) than with the nickname Bigod (bigot), and Bying (see ing. p. 64). To these should, I think, be added Bidlake and Bidmead, Bitmead, which contain the definite article, and probably Behagg, dial. hag, liedge, enclosure. For Overy, see p. 71. Names in Under- and Up- are fairly numerous and generally simple. Undrell is for Underhill and Upfill for Upfield or Upfold. With Upward cf. Downward or Downhard, Forward, Southward, etc. Sometimes in such names -ward is substituted for -wood (cf. Homeward for "holm wood," i.e. holly wood), but they are also to be taken literally. With Bartholomew Forward (Hund. R.) cf. Robert Avant (Ramsey Cart.) or Julian a Netherward (Hund, R.), evidently one origin of Netherwood. Downton and Upton must sometimes have been applied to men who lived "down town" and "up town" respectively.

A few other prepositions occur sporadically. Inderwick, Enderwick is ME. in ther wick, i.e. homestead, village, etc. The existence of Walter Underwater (Lanc. Inq. 1205–1307) suggests that Bowater is for bove-water. Neathway is "beneath the way," and Withinshaw, if not a corruption of "withy shaw," willow wood, belongs to the same class. In Hindhaugh and Hindmarsh the prefix may have adverbial or prepositional force.

The following are examples of obsolete, dialect, or obscure place-words which have given surnames. It will be noticed that they are mostly monosyllables of Anglo-Saxon origin, but they include a few Old French words. Some are quite simple, but are mentioned because of their compounds. Others I am unable to explain. Quite a remarkable proportion are names given to small strips of land, boundary ridges, trenches, etc. They seem to reflect the proprietary tenacity of the Anglo-Saxon.

Bache, Batch, Bage. ME. bache, a river valley [Robert de la Bache, Pat. R.].

"Over baches and hulles" (Piers Plowm. C. viii. 159).

It is common in Cheshire place-names. Compounds, Greatbatch, Huntbach.

Bale, Bayles. AF. bail, an outer fortification, later replaced by bailey [Tessaunda del Bayl, Pat. R., John de la Baylle, Lond. Wills, 1258–1358]. Hence also the official Bailward.

Ball. A common field-name in Somerset [John atte Balle, Kirby's Quest, Som.]. The name has other and more usual origins. Newball is a corruption of Newbold, new building.

Barff, Bargh. Northern forms of barrow, a mound [Thomas atte Barghe, Pat. R., Yorks].

Barth. Sheltered pasture for cattle or calves—

"Warme barth give lams Good food to their dams" (Tusser).

Bay. A dam or pool. Hence the common Cambridgeshire name Bays [John atte Bey, Hund. R., Camb.]. Bay is also a colour nickname [Robert le Bay, Testa de Nev.].

Bear, Beer, Bere. West-country word for wood, AS. bearu [Morin de la Bare, Hund. R., Dev., Henry de la Bear, ib., Elias de la Byere, ib.]. Compounds Langabeer, Conybeare, Shillibeer and the deceptive Shebear. This is perhaps one origin of Byers; cf. the parallelism of Bubear, Boobyer, in Somerset, but in this group of names there has been confusion with byre.

Bent. Very numerous meanings in Middle English, ranging from bent grass to battle-field (see NED.). Also confused with Bend [Robert de la Bende, Testa de Nev.]. Compound Broadbent.

Binks. Northern form of Banks [John de Nighenbinkes, i.e. near banks, F. of Y.]. See NED. The intermediate form was "benks" [Robert Neynbenkes, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.].

Boak, Boakes. Northern form of balk, ridge, especially as a boundary [Thomas del Bouke, 1429]. Boag is probably a variant. From balk also come Belk and Bilke [Henry del Belk, IpM., Norf.].

Boam. A common Derbyshire surname [John del Bom, IpM., Notts, 1279–1321]. I suppose it to be a phonetic variant of beam (p. 184).

Boosey. A cattle-shed, byre.

Borstall, Burstall. A winding hill-path, especially on the Downs [John Atteborstalle, Hund. R., Kent]. The example is just four centuries older than the first NED. record of the word.

Bosse, Close R.].

"Bosses of water made at Belingsgate about the year 1423" (Stow).

Breach. An opening, also fallow-land [Andrew de la Breche,  $I \not p M$ .].

Breeks, Brack. A northern dialect word, cognate with above and also used of rocks [Robert del Brek, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]. It is ON. brekkr, a brink.

Brend, Brent, Brind. Brow of a hill [Simon del Brend, F. of Y., Richard del Brynd, ib.].

Brewill, Browell, Bruel. OF. breuil, wood, thicket [Simon del Bruill, Chart R.]. Part of Savernake Forest is called the "Broyl of Bedewind" in IpM., and the Broyle (Suss.) has the same origin. Cf. Fr. Dubreuil and de Broglie, the latter of which has given us Brolly.

Brush. Broom, undergrowth, heather [Adam del Bruche, Exch. R.]. Cf. Fr. Delabrousse, des Brosses, etc. Hence also Brushett (see p. 128, n. 1).

"Brusshe to make brushes on, bruyere" (Palsg.).

Budden. This surname is sometimes of baptismal origin [Ermegard Budun, Hund. R.], from Baldwin or from one of the Bod- names; cf. Fr. Bodin. But it is also local, a variant of bottom, which occurs as bodan in one of the earliest Anglo-Saxon glossaries [Stephen de la Buden, Pleas, Hants]. It is still a Hampshire name.

Buggins. ME. bugging, a variant of bigging, a building.

"Cometh the maister budel brust ase a bore, Seith he wole mi bugging bringe ful bare." (Song of the Husbandman, temp. Ed. I.)

Bumbey. A quagmire (Norf. and Suff.).

Burst. A break in the land, from AS. geberst. It is so used in the Abingdon Chronicle [Hamelet de la Burste, Exch. Cal.].

Butt. A ridge or balk in ploughed land. Also a measure of land. But the surname Butt is often for Buck, altered in the same way as bat from bakke (see p. 24) [Roger le Buc or But, Close R., Hugh le But, Pat. R., James le But, ib.].

Cage. This may go with Penn, Mewis (p. 98), etc., or may be connected with a local prison—

" Cage, catasta" (Prompt. Parv.).

In the Coventry Mysteries it is used of the "pageant" on which a king stands [John del Cages, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.].

Callow. Applied in the west to bare land [William de la Calewe, IpM., Heref.], the same word as callow, hairless, unfledged, which is the more usual origin of the surname.

Cheyne. This is simply a Middle English spelling of "chain," probably meaning the barrier by which streets were often closed at night [Richard de Catena, Close R.]; cf. Barr.

"For other wey is fro the gatis none,
Of Dardanas, there opyn is the cheyne" (Chauc. Troilus and Criseyde).

Chuck. A tree-stump, OF. chouq, apparently related to souche, a stump [Henry de Chokes, Close R., Roger de la Zuche, or de la Suche or de la Chuche, ib.]. Hence Choak, Chugg, Chucks. Also a nickname [Robert Choc, Pipe R., William Choc, Hund. R.]. Cf. Block (p. 156).

Clench, Clinch. I can find no clue to the meaning of this word, apparently the origin of Clinch in Wilts. [Richard de la Clenche, Fine R., Wilts, John de la Clenche, Hund. R., Wilts]. A stream called the Clenche is mentioned in Glouc. Cart.

Clyne. Old Welsh clun, clyn, a meadow [William ate Clyne, Exch. R.]. Also Clunn, Cock. The very common entry "atte Cok" refers not only to a shop-sign, but also to the same word commonly used of a water conduit. Cf. Boss. Hence also sometimes Acock, Adcock, Atcock [Ralph Atecock, Lond. Wills, 1282].

Cockshott, Cockshoot. "A broad way or glade in a wood, through which woodcocks, etc., might dart or shoot, so as to be caught by nets stretched across the opening" (NED.).

"Cockesshote to take woodcockes with, volee" (Palsg.).

Cradle. A place in Sussex called "le Cradele" is mentioned in the Percy Cartulary [Richard atte Cradele, Percy Cart., John de la Cradel, Pat. R.]. In Middle English, as now, the word was used of various arrangements in the way of framework or scaffolding, but its meaning here is very dubious. Perhaps the ending is the same as that of the next name.

Crundall, Crundle. More than sixty crundels are mentioned in Thorpe's Codex Diplomaticus. AS. crundel is dubiously explained by Sweet as a chalk-pit, cavity, pond. Its modern dialect meaning of a ravine with running water in it suggests rather "crooked dell," from the adjective which has given the nickname Crum, Crump.

Curtain. Dial. courtain, court-yard, straw-yard, Late Lat. cortina.

Deal, Dole. These are ultimately the same word, meaning boundary, division [Alexander de la Dele, Fine R., William de la Dole, Hund. R.]. Dale is often for Deal. The word is still in use in various forms. Here generally belong also Dowell, Dowl, Dewell, Duell, and the Kentish dowel, a marsh, is perhaps the same word. Most of the words for boundary appear also to have been applied to a piece of waste land between two cultivated patches—

"The waste called le dole" (Pat. R., Salop).

Delf, Delph, Delves. ME. delf, quarry. [Hugh del Delf, Cal. Gen.]—

"And thei gaven that monei to the crafti men and masouns, for to bie stoonys hewid out of the delves, var. quarreris" (Wyc, 2 Chron, xxxiv, 11).

Dibb. Usually bapt. for Dibble, i.e. Theobald (see p. 40), but also from dial. dib, a dip, or valley [John del Dybbe, F. of Y., 1469].

Dillicar. A dialect name, in the lake country, for a small field. No doubt a compound of the very common Carr, Kerr, a fen, of Norse origin.

Doust. ? A Middle English variant of "dust" [John del Doustes, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]. Cf. such names as Chalk, Clay, Mudd.

Drain, Drane. Obviously from the drain or channel [John atte Drene, Kirby's Quest, Som.], a word first recorded by the NED. for 1552. Cf. Simon Draneland [Hund. R., Camb.]. The examples are from the two chief fen counties.

Dron. Dial. trone, a trench, a west-country word [Geoffrey Attedrone, Glouc. Cart.].

dent, dint, meaning a hollow [William Attedunt, Hund. R., Kent].

Ealand, Eland. A dial. form surviving from AS. igland, now corruptly written island under the influence of OF. isle.

Eaves. Used in Middle English for edge, especially in the compound "wood eaves," whence Wouldhave. In Whiteaves the first element is probably with (p. 84).

Fall. It is a little doubtful what this means as a surname [Richard del Fal, Hund. R., Gilbert de la Falle, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285], at any rate in compounds. In Horsfall, -fall may be for an earlier -fald, i.e. fold, enclosure, while in Woodfall it means the place where trees have been felled [Richard del Wodefal, Lanc. Inq. 1310–33]. Still, although the NED. has no record of fall, cascade, till 1579, "the water's fall" (Spenser), the name Waterfall [Richard de Watterfall, Hund. R.] points to a much earlier use of the word.

Fann. The winnowing fan [Gervase de la Fanne, Chart R.]. The west-country Vann is commoner [Richard atte Vann, Pleas, Wilts.]. Cf. the occupative Fanner and Vanner.

Farndell. The obsolete farthingdeal, or fourth part of an acre. Cf. Halfacre.

"Farding deale, alias Farundell of land, signifieth the fourth part of an acre" (Cowel).

Hence also Fardell, Varndell. Farthing was also used in the same sense.

Flatt. A common field-name in Yorkshire, and used in Suffolk of a flat oozy shore [Thomas del Flat, mariner, F. of Y.]. Hence also the Suffolk name Flatman.

Force, Forse, Forss. This may be the northern force, a Scandinavian word for waterfall—

"The fishery del fors" (Pat. R., Westm. 1320).

But the analogy of Wilberforce, from a place formerly called Wilberfoss, suggests that Foss is more often the origin. Cf. Forsdyke for Fosdike, later corrupted to Frostick.

Fostall, Forrestal. Dial. fore-stall, a paddock or way in front of a farmhouse (Kent and Suss.). The NED. quotes it for 1661, but it is much older [Osbert de la Forstalle, Hund. R., Kent, Albreda de Forstallo, Cust. Battle Abbey, 1283–1312].

Foyle. Apparently some kind of excavation, Fr. fouille [John atte Foyle, Cust. Battle Abbey].

Fright. A Kentish form of frith, a wood, deerforest, etc., so common in the phrase "frith and fell" [Henry del Fridh, Feet of Fines].

Gallantree. I only offer the conjecture that this Yorkshire name may be for "gallows tree," earlier "gallow tree," AS. gealgtreow; cf. Godfrey de Galowes (Fine R.), Ralph de Furcis (Abingdon Chron.).

Garston. An example of a common noun, AS. gærstun, paddock, "grass town" [Henry de la Garston, Fine R.], which has become a specific place-name. Cf. Gratton, stubble field, AS. græd, grass, Barton, AS. beretun, "barley town," Leighton, AS. leactun, "leek town," kitchen garden, and the ubiquitous Burton, AS. burgtun, "borough town." From the latter we have Haliburton, the holy dwelling.

Gort. OF. gort, properly a whirlpool (Lat. gurges, gurgit-), but used in England of a kind of weir; cf. Fr. Dugort. See gorce (NED.), which is really a plural form and apparently one origin of Joyce, for Burton Joyce (Notts) takes its name from the de Jorz family.

Grape, Greep. A dial. word for trench, also found as grip [John atte Gripe, IpM.].

Ground. Used in dialect for a field or farm; hence perhaps the East-Anglian name Grounds. But Roger Grond (Hund. R., Hunts), Augustin Grund (ib.) suggest a shortened form of Grundy, AS. Gundred, as a more probable origin of the name.

Hallows. Possibly ME. halwe, shrine, sanctuary-

"Ferne halwes, kowthe in sondry londes" (Chauc. A. 14).

Hames. Northern form of "home" [Adam del Hames, of le Hames, Cumb., IpM.]. Also Haimes.

Hanger. A wood on a hillside [William del or atte Hanger, Pat. R.].

Hard. In the obsolete sense of hard or firm ground (sixteenth century, NED.), as at Portsmouth [Gilbert del Harde, Pat. R.]. Also Hards. In Harder the second element is -or, -over, a bank.

Haugh. This very puzzling word occurs in an immense number of place-names and consequently in many surnames, but nobody seems to know what it means. It has several compounds, Ridehalph, Green-

1 "Healh, corner, hiding-place; bay, gulf" (Sweet), "recess corner, hollow" (Miller). "Dr. Mutschmann is mistaken in thinking that the exact sense of OE. healh is 'very uncertain'; it means 'river meadow'" (Sedgefield). "It does not necessarily mean a riverside pasture. A hale, in Gloucestershire, may occur on high ground away from any stream" (Baddeley).

halgh, Hesmondhalgh, Featherstonehaugh. Its dative gives Heal, Hale, and most of the names ending in -all, -hall, -ell contain it, e.g. Brudenell (at the broad heal), Cleall (clay), Greenall, Greenhall, Blackall, Blackhall, Whitehall [Gilbert del Whitehalgh, 1397, Bardsley], Midgall [Migehalgh, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33], Thornell, etc. Related to it is ME. halk, a corner—

"As yonge clerkes, that been lykerous
To reden artes that been curious,
Seken in every halke and every herne Particular sciences for to lerne" (Chauc. F. 1119).

Hence Halleck; and sometimes Hawke and Hawkes. In Halkett, Hallett, it is compounded with -head (see p. 128, n.). Haugh is quite distinct from Hough (Huff), How, a hill, though it has been confused with it, e.g. in Wardhaugh, probably for "ward hough," the beacon hill, equivalent to Wardle (ward hill) and Wardlaw, Wardlow, AS. hlæw, a hill, mound. Ridehalgh has been confused with Redhough [Thomas del Redhough, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.]. From the dial. form eale, we have the names Eales, Eeles, and it is probable that Ncale is sometimes of the same origin (see p. 50).

Heald. ME. hield, a slope [Isabel de la Helde, Fine R.]. Cf. Ger. Halde, very common in place-names and surnames. Heald may be also for Heal with excrescent -d; cf. Neild for Neil.

Heath. This seems to have absorbed "hythe," a quay, harbour. The latter was once a very common

Helm. Dial. helm, a shelter [John de la Helme, Worc. Priory Reg.]. But Helm, Helms is more often short for one of the personal names in Helm- (p. 38).

Herepath, Herapath. AS. herepath, army path, main road. Cf. Ger. Herwegh. Is it too venturesome to derive the very common Cambridgeshire name Thoday from AS. theodweg, people way, highway? Both this and Tudway may be rather from the Anglo-Saxon name Theodwig. Fossey may be from Fr. fossé, a ditch, but is more probably from the historic Fosse-way.

Hoath, Hoad. An archaic word for heath 1 [John del Hoth, Hund. R.].

Honour, Honnor. "A seigniory of several manors held under one baron or lord paramount" (NED.) [Stephen Adhonour, Pat. R.].

Hook, Crook. Both used of a bend in the river [Richard de la Hoke, Feet of Fines, John del Crok, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33], the latter especially in Scotland. The first seems to have been used also of a sand-spit. But Crook is usually a nickname [Philip le Crok, Pat. R., Croc the huntsman, Chart. R.], and Hook is sometimes, like Hucks, a form of Hugh [Huka de Thorne, Pipe R.].

Hope. Another word of very vague meaning, "an enclosure in marsh land," "small enclosed valley" (NED.). But there also seems to have been a measure of land called a hope, cognate with Ger. Hube, Hufe, a unit corresponding in use, if not in dimensions, to our Hide. In a copy of White Kennett's Glossary which I possess, several examples of this use have been inserted in MS. by the learned antiquary Sir Edward Smirke. In compounds -hope becomes -ap, -ip, -op, -up, Harrap, Burnip, Alsop, Greenup. This rather common name has, however, another origin [Hugh le Hope, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285, Vital le Hope, ib., William le Hope, Archbp. Peckham's Let.] which I cannot explain. No doubt also an abstract nickname (p. 218).

Horn. As a local name this is a variant of Hearn, a nook, corner. Hence Langhorne, Hartshorn, Smallhorn, Whitehorn, etc.; see p. 62, n. 2.

Hulk. A hut or shed [Agnes atte Holk, Pat. R.]—

"Tugurium, hulc" (Voc.).

Idle. An Anglo-French form of OF. isle, also ilde [John del Idle, IpM., Christiana del Ilde, Hund. R.]—

" Ilde, lond in the se, insula" (Prompt. Parv.)

Other island surnames are Ilett, appropriately found in Somerset and Cambridgeshire, and the Celtic Inch, Ince, Ennis [William del Enese, Hund. R.]. The form Enys is very common in Cornwall.

Ing. A Middle English name for meadow, especially a swampy one, and still in dial. use. It is from ON. enge [Thomas atte Enge, Fine R., Reginald de Inga, Pipe R.]. This word is very common in composition and one source of the name England, for ing-land. Names such as Fielding, Fenning, etc., have usually been explained as "man of the field, fen, etc.," but, although this tribal suffix occurs frequently in Anglo-Saxon place-names, it is perhaps equally probable that in surnames -ing means meadow, e.g. Wilding, wood meadow, Greening, Beeching, Bowring (bower), Schooling (cf. Schofield, Schoolcraft), Ravening, Watering, etc.

Knaggs. Northern dial. knag, rock, hill-top.

Knell, Knill. Apparently a phonetic variant of knoll [William atte Knell, Cust. Battle Abbey, John atte Knyle, Kirby's Quest, Som.]. Hence also Kneel.

Knipe. Ridge, a lake-country word, surviving only in specific place-names (EDD.).

Lart. A west-country word for "loft." Hencé also perhaps Larter.

Leach. Dial. letch, a boggy stream or a bog, earlier lache [John del Lache, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4]—

"Ductum aquæ, quem vulgo Lacche vocant" (Abingdon Chron.).

It is still used as latch in northern dialect. This is one origin of the name Leach, Leech, usually the physician. Its compounds are Blackledge, Bleakledge, Blackleach—

"Between le Misies and Blake-lache unto the end of le Cawsaye" (Lanc. Inq. 1310-33)—

name, but I do not think Deutschland is found, and the French surname France, not very common, is a shortened form of the baptismal François. England is also an imitative form of the Old French font-name Enguerrand, with the common change of r to l [John Ingelond, Pat. R., Geoffrey Ingelond, Hund. R., Simon Ingelond, lb.]

Leese. Perhaps generally for "leas" (cf. Meadows); but there is a dial. lease, pasture, AS. læs—

"The years have gathered grayly Since I danced upon this leaze" (Hardy, Wessex Poems).

Lew. A sheltered spot [Alice ate Lewe, Hund. R.]. Liberty. I have already suggested (Romance of Names, p. 123) that this name comes from liberty in the sense of district outside the city walls, but subject to the city jurisdiction. I have, however, found no early example. I do not think it is an abstract nickname. The apparently parallel Licence is an imitative spelling of Lysons, of Lison (Calvados), whence also Lessons.

Ling. This very common East Anglian name comes from the plant, and also specifically from Ling (Suff.), Lyng (Norf.), and Lyng (Som.), which accounts for the three regions which are the homes of the name. But the collocation of the word, in the following extract, with sich, a trench, and put, a pit, suggests some other local meaning—

"Le Putsich, le Mucheleput, le Litleput, le Ling juxta Coppeswell, and le Longsyche versus Clayputtes" (IpM., Warw. 1268).

Link, Lynch. A ridge, sand-hill, AS. hlinc. Dial. linch is especially used of an unploughed ridge making a boundary between two fields [Roger ate Lynche, Fine R.]. Link is possibly also a variant of Ling [John atte Lynk, Pat. R., Norf.].

Lippiatt. The leap-gate, or leap-yate, "a low gate in a fence, which can be leaped by deer, while keeping sheep from straying" (NED.). Also Lippeatt, Lippett. Cf. the variants of Lidgate, swing-gate, whence Lidgett, Lydiate, Liddiatt, etc.

List. Used in Middle English in the sense of boundary [Peter de la Leste, Hund. R.]. Cf. the "lists" for a tournament.

Loakes. East Anglian loke, path, road [Gilbert Ithelockes, Fine R.].

Lone, Loane. Dial. form of lane [John in la Lone, Glouc. Cart.].

Loop. Used in Middle English of an opening in a wall, whence modern "loop-hole" [Edith de la Lupe, Malmesbury Abbey Reg.]. But this name, though not common, has an alternative origin, the wolf [Robert le Lupe, IpM.].

Lyth. A Middle English and dial. word for slope, AS. hlith [Reginald atte Lith, Fine R.]—

"Steep pastures are called the Lithe" (White's Selborne).

But Gonnilda le Lyth (Hund. R.) points to a nickname, so that the surname, though rather rare, has two well-attested origins. For similar cases see pp. 316-19. Lyde is a variant.

Maw. A variant of mow, heap, as in "barleymow." The name is very common in Lincolnshire, and medieval examples of "de la Mawe" abound on the east coast [William de la Mawe, Hund. R., Suff.]. A local surname could, however, hardly come into existence in connection with such a transient thing as a haystack or cornrick, so that we must assume that the word is here used in the wider sense of mound, hillock, or that it meant also the stackyard or barn. Maw is also a variant of Maufe, Muff (p. 246).

Meals. ON. melr, dune, sandhill, especially on the coasts of Lancashire and Norfolk [Alan del Mels, Lanc. Inq., 1310-33, Elota del Meles, ib.]. I fancy that this word, often meole in Middle English, appears in Ashmall, Ashmole, and Cattermole.

Mears. Two local origins—(1) mere, a lake, pool, whence also Marr, Marrs [Robert de la Mar, Lib. Vit.]; (2) ME. mere, mear, AS. gemære, a boundary, a very common word, also used of a green "balk" or boundary road. Hence in some cases Marston, ME. merestone, boundary stone. Mark, March, are also sometimes from ME. mearc, boundary, apparently not related to the above [Roger del March, Fine R., Robert atte Mark, City D.].

Minster. The rarity of this name is surprising, although it is represented also by the lengthened Minister. As we have Beemaster, Buckmaster, Kilmaster, Kilmister, and Kittermaster from Beaminster, Buckminster, Kilminster, and Kidderminster respectively, it seems likely that Master, Masters, Mister, may also have been sometimes corrupted in the same way from the simple Minster.

Mountjoy. Montjoie is a common French placename [Ralph de Mungai, Pipe R.]. The name has no connection with the war-cry Montjoie, the origin of which is unknown. Also Mungay, Munchay, Mingey—&quot;Mont-joye, a barrow; a little hill, or heap of stones, layed in or near a highway, for the better discerning thereof; or in remembrance of some notable act performed, or accident befallen, in that place" (Cotg.).

Mudge. A Devon and Cornwall word for mud, swamp. The surname is common in both counties.

Ness. A headland, but not necessarily on the coast. Many of the examples I have found are inland [John atte Nesse, Pat. R., Richard atte Nesse, Coram Rege R. 1297, Suss.]. The second example may refer to Dungeness. In the Abingdon Chronicle ness is used as equivalent to stert. See Sturt.

Pallant. AS. palent, palace, Lat. palantium for palatium; cf. the Palant at Chichester.

Pamment, Pament. Middle English form of pavement, street. In Nottingham are still High, Low and Middle Pavement, spelt pament in the Borough Records. Cf. Cosway, Cawsey—

"And whenne y was nygh the awter y put of my showys and knelyd on my kneys upon the pament" (Monk of Evesham).

Pett, Putt. Variants of Pitt. The first is a Kentish form; for the second cf. Hull for Hill. Compounds Lampet, Lampitt, Lamputt, loam pit, AS. lampytt, and Clampitt, cloam pit. Cloam, AS. clam, clay, is still used in dialect for earthenware. Burpitt is possibly for "bear pit"; cf. Bullpitt or Bowpitt, and Buckpit.

Pickles. The Yorkshire dial. form of pightle, an enclosure (see NED.). Hence also Pighills and Pightling, the latter compounded with ing, a meadow (p. 64).

Pill. A west-country word for a creek [Robert Attepile, Hund. R., Som., Bennett de la Pylle, Fine R., Dev.]. Hence also Pile, Pyle, Pillman, and Pillaway with the intrusive a which is characteristic of Devon names (Eastaway, Greenaway, etc.).

Place, Plaice. ME. place has a wide range of meanings, including market square, plot of land, large house, hamlet, etc. But the modern name has absorbed an Old French word related to Plessis (p. 286), and meaning an enclosure [Richard de la Plesse, Hund, R.]. It is often entered as de Plexito. Cf. the Fr. Dupleix, which has assumed in England the imitative form Duplex. Hence also Pleass.

Plank. Used in Middle English of a narrow foot-bridge [James de la Plaunche, Fine R.]—

"Planche, a planke, or thicke board; especially one thats laid over a ditch, brooke, or moate, etc., instead of a bridge" (Cotg.).

Plaskett. A swampy meadow, usually "plashet," dim. of OF. plasq. The surname represents a Norman form. Also Plasked.

Plott. The same as Platt, a flat piece of land [Henry de la Plot, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285].

Pluck. Apparently a phonetic variant of ME. plecke, a piece of ground [Nicholas de la Plock, Glouc. Cart.]. It is also found in Duplock, earlier Duplac (Norf. Court R.). But Diplock is more probably "deep lake."

Quick. Usually a nickname, but also a northern variant of wick, a village [Albert de la Quicke, Lanc. Inq. 1205–1307]. Cf. Quarton for Wharton, and Quickfall for Wigfall, the latter probably the "wick-fald," or Wickfield.

Rain. The name-group Rain, Rayne, Raines, Raynes, etc., has various origins. It may be baptismal, from the Anglo-Saxon element Regen- (p. 44), as in Rayner, Reynold, etc. [Reine Bacun, Hund. R.], while the -s forms represent Rennes [Robert de Rennes, Hund. R.] and possibly also Rheims. It is also a nickname, perhaps from dial. Fr. raine, a frog [Robert le Rane, Pat. R.]. But the home of the name is Durham, and in that county rain is a dial. word for a strip of land, boundary, etc., which is no doubt the origin of most of the northern Raynes. The word is common in field-names in north-country records.

Rees.¹ This name, usually for Welsh Rhys, is also from an obsolete word for stream, channel [Henry del Re or atte Ree, IpM., Heref.]. There are several references in IpM. to "la Ree" (Heref.), but the word seems to have been in general use. The church of St. Mary Overy was in 1502 Saint Mary "over the re." Overy and Undery are both existing surnames; with the latter cf. Walter Underwater (Lanc. Inq.). Ree may be related to ride (see p. 49) and Rye (Suss.), which was formerly la Rie [Geoffrey atte Rye, City E., Robert Atterie, IpM., Suss.]. The word is perhaps of Flemish origin; cf. the South African Delarey. The scarcity of Ree is due to absorption by Ray [Robert de la Reye, Close R.].

Rew, Rue. AF. rew, from Fr. rue, street [Robert atte Rewe, Pat. R., Dors.]; cf. Attru (p. 49). But Rew is also a nickname, a variant of rough [Walter le Rewe, Glouc. Cart.].

Rhine. A name given to the large drains or channels on the Somerset moors, AS. ryne, a channel. It was the Bussex Rhine which proved fatal to Monmouth's followers at Sedgemoor. I have, however, no evidence for a surname thus formed, so Rhine is perhaps rather for Rhind, Rind. There is a Perthshire hamlet called Rhynd, but the surname seems to be rather from a Welsh personal name [Rind Seis,¹ Chart. R.].

Riddy. ME. rithie, apparently related to ride, a stream (p. 49) [Walter Atterithie, Glouc. Cart.].

Riding. Perhaps from one of the Yorkshire ridings, but more probably a variant of Ridding, a clearing in a wood [Raven del Riding, Pat. R.].

Risk. An archaic form of rush, AS. risc; cf. Rissbrook. Hence also Rix, usually from Richard, but also from Exmoor rix, rushes [John de la Rixe, Hund. R., Som.].

Roath. Apparently ME. roth, variant of root [William atte Rothe, Lond. Wills, 1305]. Or it may be identical with Routh, ON. ruth, a clearing, whence -royd, common in north-country surnames.

Rood. A cross. Also Rude [Walter de la Rude, Fine R.]. Hence also Trood, "atte rood." Compounds Roodhouse, Roddis, Rodwell; with the latter cf. Crosswell.

Rule. La Riole, near Bordeaux, latinized as Reula and Regula, is constantly mentioned in London records. It gave its name to a London street and to the church of St. Michael Paternoster "Royal" [Henry de la Rule, City B., Alvyn de Reule, Henry de la Riole, Exch. Cal.]. In Chesh. Chamb. Accts. (1301–60) is mentioned Roger del Reulle, a shipmaster bringing wine from Bordeaux.

Sale, Seal. Related words, the first representing OF. sale (salle), the second AS. sele, hall, dwelling-house. Compounds are Greensall and Normansell. Seal has become Zeal in Somerset. These names have become confused with dial, seal, sale, a willow, whence the Yorkshire names Sayle, Sayles [Agnes del Sayles, 1379]. Cf. Sallows, Salliss from the same tree, AS. sealh.

Salterne. A salt house, also a salt marsh.

Seath, Seth. AS. seath, a pit, pond, used in dialect, generally in the form sheath, of a brine-pit. Hence also Sheath and Sheat [Humfrey de la Shethe, Testa de Nev.]. It should be noted, however, with regard to Sheath, that Fr. Fourreau, whence Eng. Furrell, seems to be a costume nickname from the sheath or scabbard.

Seed. I conjecture that this name, common in the north, may represent AS. geset, seat, dwelling, as in Somerset and the surname Honeysett. It occurs also in Adshead, Adsead (Adsett, Glouc.), and in the simple Sait. This would explain Liverseed, Loverseed, from the personal name Leofhere; cf. John de Burysede [Hund. R.] and the Lincolnshire name Whitseed.

Selden, Seldon, Seldom. The dative plural of the very common ME. selde, a booth or shop [John atte Selde, Lond. Wills., 1294].

"One fair building of stone called in record Seldom, a shed" (Stow).

Sell may sometimes represent the singular, but is usually baptismal [Nicholas Sell, Pat. R.], perhaps from Cecil.

Shear. AS. scaru, division. Hence Landseer, AS. landscaru, boundary [Anthony de la Lanscare, Pat. R., Thomas de la Landshare, Hund. R.]. One example is from Devon, the other from Somerset. Hence this is the origin of the Devon name Shears, while Sharland, also a Devon name, may contain the same elements reversed. The form Scare, Skeer is also a surname. Cheers seems to be a variant [Walter de la Chere, Glouc. Cart.] and Chare also exists. Seear may belong here or to Sayer, AS. Sægær.

Sheard, Shard. Middle English and dial. sherd, a gap in an enclosure or bank [John atte Sherde, Pat. R.]. The same word as in "potsherd." Shirt is an imitative spelling.

Shed. A section of land. The same word as in "watershed." Hence Shead, Shedd, Shade. No doubt also from the building, which is also shad, shade in dialect.

Shields, Scales. The English and Norse forms respectively for a shieling or shelter. The first is very common in Northumbrian farm-names, hence Blackshields, Greenshields. It is the same as ME. schiel [Adam del Schele, Percy Cart.], whence Shiel. From Scales we have the compounds Summerscales and Winterscale, corrupted into Summerskill, Summersgill, Wintersgill. Related to the numerous Scandinavian names in -skjöld, such as Nordenskjöld, Lilienskjöld, etc.

Shippen, Skippon. A dial. word for cow-house, AS. scipen [Richard de la Schepene, Coram Rege R. 1297]. Hence also Skippings—

"Thropes, bernes, shipnes, dayeryes" (Chauc D. 871).

By folk-etymology connected with "sheep-pen," but really cognate with "shop." But in Sheepwash, Shipwash, Shipwash, Shipsides, and most local names in Ship, the first element is "sheep."

Shire. Used in the sense of boundary [Thomas atte Shyre, Lond. Wills, 1349]. Here belong also sometimes Shear, Shears (cf. Lankshear, Hamshar); but &lt;sup>1</sup> Various explanations are given as to local names in Summer-, Winter-. In Germany the corresponding names are considered to indicate a southern and northern aspect respectively. In the examples above we no doubt have the summer and winter camp of the herdsmen. Other examples are Summerhayes, from hay, an enclosure, Winterford, Winterflood, Winterbottom. Winterburn is a burn that runs in winter only. Another name, especially in Kent, for an intermittent spring is nailbourn, later eylebourn, whence the surname Elborn and probably Eborn. On this interesting work see Skeat, Trans. Phil. Soc., 1911–14, p. 37.

Thomas Palle, called Sheres (Lond. 1376) suggests a nickname for a shearsmith or cutler. For the usual origin of Shears see p. 74. In compounds other than county names -shire is generally a corruption of -shaw; e.g. Ormeshire for Ormeshaw.

Sich. A trench, AS. sic [Robert de la Siche, IpM.], hence also Sitch and the Yorkshire Sykes [William Enlesik, Pat. R., John del Sykes, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]—

"Sich, sichettum and sichettus, a little current of water, that uses to be dry in the summer, also a water-furrow or gutter" (Cowel).

Slade. A valley, glade, strip of greensward [John o' the Slade, City D.], AS. slæd, valley, familiar in the phrase the "greenwood slade." Hence also Slate, Sleath, and the compound Greenslade. This is another example of the elusive meaning of these dialect words. White Kennett defines it as a long, flat piece of land, while Wyclif actually uses it of a, presumably flat, ridge—

"Semeye gede bi the slade, var. cop, of the hil . . . and curside" (2 Sam. xvi. 13).

The EDD, offers a very wide choice of meanings; valley, hollow; grassy plain between hills; side or slope of a hill; small, often hanging, wood; strip of greensward through a wood; green road; piece of greensward in ploughed land; strip of boggy land; stagnant water in a marsh; small running stream; sheep-walk; bare, flat place on top of a hill.

Slape. Very puzzling. There is an early Scot. slape, a gap, breach, but the examples of de la Slape are all from the west, chiefly Somerset. Slope is quite a modern word according to the NED. Perhaps related to slipe, a long narrow strip, used in several counties, including Somerset. It also means the sloping bank of a dike or river; cf. slype, a covered way from the transept of a cathedral to the chapter-house.

Slay. Slope, lane through gorse, etc. (Suss.). Also Slee [Stephen atte Sle, Close R., Kent]. Probably identical with Slade (q.v.); cf. Smee for Smeed. But the surname is usually from ME. slegh, sly, skilful.

Slipp. A long narrow slip (of land); see Slape.

Smeed, Smeeth, Smedes. ME. smethe, a level place [Simon de la Smethe, Close R., Thomas atte Smyethe, IpM.]. See Athersmith (p. 50) and cf. Smedley, Smidmore—

Hence also Smee and Smy, dialect forms. All these are also nicknames from the same word used in the sense of smooth, hairless [Philip le Smethe, Hund. R.]. So also the compounds Smeathman and Smithett (smeeth head) may be local or nicknames.

Snaith, Snead. Specific place-names (Yorks and Worc.), but from AS. snæd, a piece of land, from snithan, to cut, cf. Thwaite from thwitan, to cut. Also Snee.

Snape. A spring in arable ground, Devon (Hall.). But the word is quite undocumented, though recorded as a surname in various parts of England [Henry de la Snape, Hund. R., Suss., Adam del Snap, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]. It appears also to have been used of winter pasture. Hence also Snepp. Compounds Harsnip, Dewsnap, Dewsnip.

Snodgrass. This name contains the dial. adjective snod, smooth, trim.

Splatt. AS. splott, plot of land [William atte Splotte, Kirby's Quest, Som.]—

"Landsplot, tantillum terræ" (Abingdon Chron.).

Hence the compound Collinssplatt.

Spon, Spong, Spun. A long narrow strip of ground, also found as spang. Of doubtful origin, but probably Scandinavian [Liulf del Espaune, Feet of Fines, Linc.]. The dialect glossaries assign it to East Anglia.

Spring. A dial, word for wood, plantation [Robert ad Springe, Ramsey Cart.]. I know several "springs" in the woods of Bucks. Cf. Goldspring. Of course the name may be also from spring in its more usual sense [Adam de Fonte, Worc. Priory Reg.]; but it is rarely taken from the season. The Teutons divided the year into Summer and Winter, hence the frequency of these words as surnames. Still, cf. Fr. Printemps.

Staite. ME. stathe, a landing-place, as in Bickersteth. Hence also State, Staight. And, as Bickersteth has given Bickerstaff, this local name may be one origin of Staff. Stay is a modern dial. variant (EDD.).

Staple. A post [Roger Atestaples, City A.]. Generally Staples.

Stent. A boundary, limit; probably OF. estente, extent.

Stile. AS. stigol, a stile, also an ascent. Hence Styles [Geoffrey atte Stile, City F.], Still, Stillman, Stiggles [Richard del Stigels, Pat. R.], Steggall, Steggles, and even Steckles, Stickles [Robert Atstychele, Malmesbury Abbey Reg.]. This group of names illustrates a phenomenon of some importance, viz. that surnames, and to some extent place-names, form exceptions to phonetic laws. The rigid phoneticians will say that the -g- of AS. stigol must disappear (cf. sail from segl). The answer is that when it becomes a surname, its development may be arrested and an archaic form may persist. The home of both Styles and Stickles is Kent [Robert atte Estyghele, Hund, R., Kent], where they flourish abundantly side by side. The AS. Stigand should have become Stiant. It has done so and exists in the surnames Styants, Styance; but it also survives as Stigand, Stiggants, Stiggins, Stickings, Similarly AS. fugol became fowl, but has also given the surname Fuggle [Robert le Fugel, Pipe R.], and Tickler perhaps represents a sharpened form of "the principal rebel Walter Tighlar" (Stow). Stoyle may be for Style, as the local Royle is for Ryle, but a ship called la Stoyle (Pat. R.) is obviously OF. estoile, star, and Lestoile is a common French surname.

Stitch, Styche. Dial. stitch, a ridge, a balk of grassland in an arable field [Richard Attestyche, Pleas.]. Styche is a good example of the effect on pronunciation of an archaic spelling.

Stoop. A dial. word for boundary post. Hence also Stopes, Stopps [William del Stopp, 1379, Bardsley].

"'No stopes or rails,' was the cry at the time of the Notts enclosures of 1825" (EDD.).

Studd. A variant of Stead, place, dwelling; cf. Richard del Pleystude (Glouc. Cart.), i.e. Playsted.

Sturt. AS. steort, tail, as in the bird-name redstart, used of a tongue of land [William de la Sturte, Hund. R.]. Hence also Start. Cf. Start Point.

" Boscus qui dicitur stert" (Feet of Fines).

Swale. As this is chiefly a Yorkshire name, we must assign it to the river (see p. 161, n.). But swale has also various dial. senses, a valley, a salt-water channel (between Kent and Sheppey), a pleasant shade, to one of which probably belongs Tedric atte Suele (Pipe R.). Hence also Swell.

Swire. ME. swire, neck. The surname Swire may be a nickname (cf. Neck, p. 135), but is also a dial. variant of Squire. In ME. swire was also swere and was evidently used of a "neck" of land. A "bottom" called "le Swere," le Sweres," is mentioned in Malmesbury Abbey Reg. Hence Swears.

Tarn. A mountain lake. Hence Tarnsitt, tarn-side. Tart. Fr. tertre, a mound, hillock [Emma sur le Tertre, Leic. Bor. Rec.].

Thake, Theak. An East Anglian word for thatch. I have found the name in Suffolk. Cf. the occupative names Thacker, Theaker, Thackster.

Thay, They. An existing, though rare, surname, which is amply recorded [Philip atte Thegh, Cust. Battle Abbey, John de la The, Pat. R.]—

"In la Thegh vi acræ grossi bosci" (Cust. Battle Abbey).

It seems to be identical with Tye, Tey (q.v.), which is latinized as theia in the Pipe R.

Torr. A west-country word for a rocky hill [Henry atte Torr, Fine R., Dev., Robert de la Torre, Coram Rege R. 1297, Corn.]. Hence Hayter, Haytor, Hector, high tor, and Grinter, green tor [Hugh de Grenetorre, Chanc. R., Dev.] Pictor, a Somerset name, probably contains the same element. Torr has another origin from OF. tor, a bull [Hamo le Tor, Pat. R., Gilbert le Tor, City A.].

Trow. A Middle English and dial. form of "trough" [William atte Trowe, Hund. R.]—

"Trow, vessel, alveus, alveolus" (Prompt. Parv.).

This is also one origin of Trew [William Attetrewe de Bristow, F. of Y.]. The same word is used in the west of a small barge, in which sense it is still the sign of an inn at Jackfield (Salop). So the surname may belong to the same group as Barge, Hoy, etc. (p. 171).

Tuer. A narrow passage or alley [William de la Tuyere or de la Twyere, Archbp. Romeyn's Reg. 1286–96]. I am not sure whether Twyer still exists. Tewer, Tuer has an alternative origin, the Tawyer, or leather-dresser [Martin le Tawyer, City E.]—

Tuffill, Tuffield, Tofield. Dial. tuffold, twofold, a small shed, "lean-to," pent-house, ME. tofal, also spelt tuffall. Cf. Nicholas de Apenticio (Fine R.)—

"Tofal, schudde, appendix, appendicium" (Prompt. Parv.).

Tuffill may, however, be equally well derived from Theophilus [Simon Theofill, F. of Y.].

Twiss, Twitchen, Twitchell, Twizel. I put these together because they are no doubt related. They all contain the idea of a fork or branch. Twiss, unrecorded by the dictionaries, unless it is the dial. twitch, a bend in the road, is probably the original of which the others are derivatives [Hugh del Twys, Pat. R.]. With excrescent -t it gives Twist. Twitchen is used in dialect of a narrow passage connecting two streets [Richard de la Twitchene, Fine R.]. Hence also Twitching. Twizel, Twissell, Twitchell are AS. twisla, fork of a stream, as in Entwistle (Lanc.), whence the corrupted surname Anthistle. Birdwhistle is an imitative spelling of Birtwistle. Elys Bridestwesil or Britwesil was almoner to John of Gaunt. The first element is probably "bird."

Tye. An extensive common pasture (Hall.). Also Tey, Tee [Hugh de la Tye, Hund. R., Adam de la Teye, Coram Rege. R. 1297]. Tighe represents an archaic spelling.

Verge. Possibly in the sense of edge, boundary, but it may be OF. verge, rood, fourth part of an acre [Richard de la Verge, Close R.]. Also Varge.

Voce, Vose, Voice, Voase. Fr. Vaux, plural of val, a valley, but common also as a specific French placename [John de Vaus, Lib. Vit.]. This element appears in a few English place-names, e.g. Rievaulx, whence Revis, Rivis, and Jervaulx, one origin of Jarvis. With these cf. Clarvis, from Clairvaux [Albin de Clairvaux, Ramsey Cart.].

Vyse, Vize. Of Devizes, once commonly called "the Vyse" and latinized as Divisæ [Richard del Vise, Exch. R.].

Walne, Wawn. ME. walm, a well, spring.

Waud. Variant of weald or wold [Walter de la Waude, Pat. R.]. Hence also Weld and Weale, the final -d of the latter being lost as in Wiles [Stephen de la Wile, Pat. R.] from the related Wild—

"A franklin in the wild of Kent" (I Henry IV. ii. I).

The Weald of Sussex is also called the Wild. Hence the name Wildish 1 and the imitative Wildash.

Waylett, Waylat. AS. weg-gelætu, place where two or more roads meet [Cecily de la Weylete, Chart. R.]—

"Sche sat in the weelot, var. place of two weyes, that ledith to Tampna" (Wyc. Gen. xxxviii. 14).

Waythe, Wath, Wathes. ON. vathr, a ford, once fairly common as second element in place-names, but now usually replaced by -with, -worth, e.g. Langworth (Leic.) was Langwath in the thirteenth century. Similarly -wade, a ford, its native cognate, has interchanged with -wood, so that Braidwood may sometimes be identical in meaning with Bradford [Reginald de Braidewad, Pipe R.].

Wham, Whan. Possibly from AS. hwamm, a corner [William atte Whaune, Cust. Battle Abbey]. Cf. dial. wham, a morass.

Wish. A damp meadow, marsh, common in old Sussex field-names. Hence Whish, which may, however, be for Hewish, Huish, AS. hiwisc, a homestead—

"'Help yourself, Mr. Whish, and keep the bottle by you."

'My friend's name is Huish, not Whish, sir,' said the captain."

(Stevenson and Osbourne, The Ebbtide.)

With. ON. vithr, wood, once common in placenames, e.g. Asquith (ash). It has interchanged with wath (q.v.), and, like that element, has paid tribute to -worth, e.g. Askworth, Ashworth. Also Wythe.

Wong. A meadow, AS. wang. There are several "wongs" in old maps of Nottingham. Compound Wetwan [Thomas de Wetewange, Archbp. Peckham's Let. 1279-92]. Identical with ON. vangr, as in Stavanger—

"Wong of lond, territorium" (Prompt. Parv.).

"Strues, wudefine" (Voc.).

Wroe. ME. wra, nook, corner [John in the Wro, Pat. R.]. It has usually become Wray [Thomas del Wray, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285], and has given a number of north-country names in -wra, -wray, -ra, -ray, -ry, etc., e.g. Doowra (dove), Thackwray, Thackcray (thatch), Rothera (ME. rother, cattle), Cawthra, Cawthry, Whinray, Winnery, etc. It has also contributed to Rowe and, indirectly, to Rosc <sup>2</sup> [Simon ithe Rose, Pat. R., Yorks]. Hence the Staffordshire name Durose for del Wros, and the Lincolnshire Benrose, Bemrose, Bemroose, in which the first element in probably "bean." Here may belong the Yorkshire name Ringrow, Ringrose. Wroe may also sometimes be the second element of Morrow, as "le Murwra" (Cumb.) is mentioned in IpM., and of Woodrow, Witherow, the latter having the Norse with (p. 84) for Eng. wood. With Bithray cf. Bidlake, etc. (p. 52).

There are some local surnames which are of obvious origin, but whose rarity makes them interesting. Such are Cowmeadow, Farmmedows, Forresthill, Ozierbrook, Monument, Marthouse 1 (market-house), Groundwater, Bullwinkle, the bull's corner (cf. Bulpitt), Leapingwell, evidently from some pool associated with the old ceremony of leaping the well—

"Leaping the well, going through a deep and noisome pool on Alnwick Moor, called the Freemen's Well, a sine qua non to the freedom of the borough" (Hall.).

I do not know whether the name of the famous Whig pamphleteer Oldmixon still survives. It is a compound of the dial. mixen, a dunghill—

"Fumier, a mixen, dunghill, heape of dung" (Cotg.).

THE CORRUPTION OF LOCAL SURNAMES

"' Where d'you live?' I demanded.

THE connection of a surname with a specific placename is often obscured by considerable difference of form and sound. Sometimes the surname preserves the contracted local pronunciation familiar only to the inhabitants of the district. Such are Aram, Arum (Averham, Notts), Anster 1 (Anstruther, Fife), Littler (Littleover, Derb.), Wyndham (Wymondham, Norf.), Rowell (Rothwell, Northants), Startin (Staverton, Northants), Sneezum (Snettisham, Norf.), Bustin (Brislington, Som.), Badgery (Badgeworthy, Glouc.), Roster (Wroxeter, Salop). These examples, taken at random. can be largely added to by any reader according to the district with which he is acquainted. In the above cases the local distribution of the surnames confirms the origin indicated, e.g. I have found Roster only in Salop. So also Finbow, found in Lincolnshire as Fenbough, is now chiefly represented at Stowmarket (Suft.) within two miles of its birthplace (Finborough).

Often enough the surname has got back to the actual locality from which it was taken on the emigration of the ancestor, e.g. there are people called Freshney living at Friskney (Linc.). Sometimes such contractions are made from local names which have not become specific place-names, e.g. Timblick for Timberlake. The contracted pronunciation of local names in Saint is a familiar phenomenon. Some interesting examples of French origin are Cinnamond, or Sinnamon, from Saint-Amant, Cemery from Saint-Mary, Savigar from Saint-Vigor [Thomas de Sancto Vigore, Fine R.], and Santler from Saint-Helier [Roger de Seinteller, Testa de Nev.].

Sometimes the local pronunciation or later perversion appears to be simply eccentric, e.g. Stuckey (Stiffkey, Norf.), Escreet (Escrick, Yorks), Orlebar (Orlingbury, Northants). Occasionally the surname preserves an archaic form, e.g. Hockenhall (Hucknall, Notts), Keyhoe (Kew, Surrey), Staveley (Staley Bridge, Chesh.), or represents a correct and natural development of a place-name which has become orthographically perverted, e.g. Sapsworth (Sawbridgeworth, Herts). Tyrwhitt is the older form of Trewhitt (Northumb.), and Trask of Thirsk (Yorks). Shrosbree is evidently more phonetic than Shrewsbury, and Linkin is a fair attempt at Lincoln.

As a rule, the further a local surname wanders from its home, the more it becomes distorted. Perhaps no name of this class has a greater number of forms than Birkenshaw, birch wood, also spelt Berkenshaw, Burkenshaw, Burkinshear, Bircumshaw. With the common change of t for k it becomes Bertenshaw, Birtenshaw, Burtonshaw, and even Buttonshaw, Metathesis gives Briggenshaw (cf. Brickett for Birkett or Birkhead), Bruckshaw, and finally Brokenshire. There are probably many other variants. The substitution of -shire for -shaw is also seen in Blackshire and Kirbyshire (kirk bye shaw), while we have the opposite change in Wilshaw. Both are unoriginal in Scrimshaw, Skrimshire, the "skirmisher," or fencing master. Shire itself has many variants, which are, however, easily recognized, e.g. Lankshear, Willsher, Hamshar, etc., and Upcher, from Upshire (Ess.). A phonetic change which is rather the opposite of the usual tendency is the change of shaw to shall in Backshall, Upshall, Ringshall.

Other examples of the corruption of north-country names are Barraclough, from a spot near Clitheroe, which becomes Barrowcliff in Notts and reaches London as Berrycloth and Berecloth (cf. Faircloth for Fairclough); Carruthers, a Dumfries village, which gives Carrodus, Crothers, Cruddas, etc. in the north of England, and in the south sometimes Crowdace; Blenkarne (Cumb.), whence Blenkiron, Blenkin, Blinkhorn; Birchenough (hough, a hill), found in East Anglia as Bicheno, Beechner; and of course the -thwaite names, e.g. Branwhite (Branthwaite, Cumb.), Michaelwaite

(Micklethwaite), Posselwhite (Postlethwaite), Mussel-white, Kibblewhite, and even Whitewhite. Frequently -wood has been substituted in the south for this uncouth ending, e.g. Thistlethwaite is the original form of Thistle-wood, for the first means the clearing or open land where thistles grow and the second makes no sense. The simple Thwaite appears also as Twaite, Twite, Dwight, Thoyts.

Occasionally the perversion of a local surname is due to the imitative instinct, e.g. Strawbridge, Strowbridge for Stourbridge (Worc.), but many names which look as though they belonged to this class, e.g. Barnacle, Clown, Hartshorn, Stirrup, (Styrrup, Notts), Unthank, Winfarthing, are genuine place-names recorded in the Gazetteer. A very slight change of spelling is often rather disconcerting, e.g. Wincer (Windsor), Farnorth (Farnworth), and occasionally we

- <sup>1</sup> Cf. Crostwight (Norf.), "cross thwaite." There is, however, a dial. twite, meaning a kind of linnet.
- * Here the suffix is horn, a nook of land (p. 64); cf. Hearne, Hurn, etc. But some of the -horn names are probably also nicknames. Such are Greenhorn, Langhorn, Rouhorn (rough), Whitehorn [Mark Wythorn, Hund. R.]. In the medieval play of Cain and Abel (Towne ley Mysteries) Cain's seven horses are Greynehorne, Whitehorne, Gryme, Mall, Morell, Stott, and Lemyng, every one of which is now a surname. Leeming [William Leming, Hund. R.] is the present participle of the obsolete leam, to shine—
- "Radieux, radiant, shining, glittering, blazing, flaring, leaming, full of beames" (Cotg.).
- In the year 1280 occurs the name of Richard Stirrappe (Archbp. Wickwane's Reg.), the form of the entry, and the agreement of the spelling with the Middle English form of stirrup, suggesting a nickname. But it is merely an early instance of a wrong entry. Richard was a Notts man, and the Archbishop's clerk, unacquainted with the little Notts hamlet, took the local name for a nickname and omitted the de, a good example of the care that has to be exercised in drawing conclusions from old records.

come across alterations of the most violent kind, such as Vickerstaff, a well-established Lancashire surname, which apparently belongs to Bickerstaffe.

In fact, local surnames are, when once they stray from their habitat, most subject of all to corruption. The immigrant possessed of a baptismal or occupative name would generally find it accepted in his new surroundings without much change, and, if his nickname were unfamiliar, he would soon be provided with a new one; but the man who tried to teach his new Midland or East Anglian neighbours the name of the Northumbrian village by which he had hitherto been known, would be very much in the position of the medieval Baskerville or Blondeville, whose descendants have now become, not only Baskwell and Bloomfield, but even Pesterfield and Blunderfield, The existence of a well-known town serves in some cases to normalize the spelling of a common surname. We do not, for instance, find many variants of York or Sheffield, but a place-name which has failed to develop into a specific settlement is especially subject to variation. In Lancashire documents there are several references to Gosfordsich [Walter de Gosefordsiche, Lanc. Inq.], i.e. the "sich" (see p. 76) by the "goose ford," a name which now exists as Gorstidge, Gostige, Gossage, Gostick, Gorsuch.

The suffix portion of local names varies in bewildering fashion. We find -wood, -worth, -with (Norse for -wood), -wade, a ford, -thwaite, constantly interchanging, not only with each other, but also with the -ward of Anglo-Saxon personal names and with the adverbial -ward. Thus the common names Norwood, Southwood, Eastwood, Westwood are sometimes for names in -ward [Robert a Westward or de la West, Hund. R.]. In fact -wood in surnames is generally to be regarded with caution, e.g. Stallwood is simply a perversion of the nickname "stalworth" or "stalwart." On the other hand, Homeward is an alteration of Homewood, for Holmwood, ME. holm, a holly.

Yate, i.e. gate, is well disguised in Boyeatt (bow, an arch, town gate), Ditcheatt, Rowatt [Robert de la Rougate, Hund. R.], Windeatt (wynd, an alley), Whiddett, Widdeatt (Woodgate 1); Burnyeatt has in Scottish the special meaning of small watercourse. Gate itself, whether meaning gate or street, is not at once recognised in Norkett (north gate), Forget, Forkett (fore gate), Claggitt, Cleggett (clay gate), Foskett (foss gate), Poskitt (Postgate), Sloggett, Sluggett (slough gate). To these may be added Felgate, for field gate [Robert de Fildegate, Pat. R.] and Falgate, Folgate, for fall gate [Peter de le Falgate, Hund. R.], the latter meaning a gate across a high-road.

We have a large number of surnames in -fitt, which may represent -field, -foot, or -ford, e.g. Morfitt, Murfitt (moor field or moor foot?), Belfitt (Belfield or Belford?), Breffitt (brae foot), Brumfitt (Broomfield), Rumfitt (Romford), Welfitt (Welford). So also we find Kerfoot for Kerfield (Peebles), Playfoot for Playford (Suff.), Fifoot for Fifield (see p. 128, n. 3), Linfoot for Linford, etc.

One of the most interesting cases of suffix change is the confusion between -cock and -cote, -cott, a confusion that we find already in the Rolls. Grewcock, Growcock, Groocock, Grocott, Groucutt, Growcott all spring from an original of the same type as the nicknames Peacock, Woodcock, and represent ME. grew-cok, from Fr. grue, a crane [Henry Grucok, Cal. Gen., Gerard la Grue, Fine R.]. On the other hand, Ellicock, Elcock, possibly dims, of Ellis, may also be for Ellicott, from Elcot (Berks), formerly Ellecotte (Chart. R.). The derivation of this name is, however, complicated by the existence of Elacota la Regrateresse (City B.) and William Alicot (Pat. R.), the latter of whom may also be responsible for some of the apparently local Alcotts, Aucutts, etc. To get back to firmer ground, the Oxfordshire name Didcock is certainly from Didcot (Berks), Slocock is for "slough cote," Woolcock for Woolcott (Som.), and Bulcock for Bulcott (Notts). Even Peacock is sometimes an alteration of the common Fr. Picot [Nicholas Pikot or Pyekoc, City A.]. Chilcock is for Chilcote, and Peter de la Polecok (Testa de Nev.) should be "pool cot," while Robert Balkoc or Barkoc or Balkot (Cal. Gen.) shows how early the two endings were confused. Moorcock, which might be identical with Murcott (moor cote), is certified as a nickname by Martin Morkoc (Testa de Nev.) and by the existence of Morehen. Heathcock is also a nickname [Walter Hathecok, Hund, R.]. Among genuine compounds of -cote the most interesting is Caldecote, with a very large number of variants, such as Coldicott, Goldicott, Calcott, Cawcutt, and Corkitt! Cf. with these Adam de Caldesete (Bp. Kellawe's Rcg.); see Seed (p. 73).

Another deceptive ending is -acre, a field, as in Hardacre, Hardaker, Hardicker. Its compounds are less simple than they look, e.g. Oldacre, sometimes equivalent to Oldfield, represents more often the ME. alder car, a "car," or marshy waste, overgrown with alders. This is of frequent occurrence in Middle English, and is still used in dialect in the form owdaker.

"Aleyr keyr, alnetum" (Prompt. Parv.).
"All the londs, merys, marysses, alderkars" (Will, 1484).

With Oldacre cf. Oldershaw, the "alder shaw," and the still earlier form in Ollerhead, Ollerenshaw [John del Holerinchawe, 1332], and Lightollers, Lightowler. Whittaker, which represents not only "white acre" (cf. Whitfield); but also "wheat acre" and "wet acre," is also sometimes a -car name [Adam de Whitekar, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4]. Fouracre, Foweraker looks simple enough, but may very well come from the dialect foreacre, headland of a ploughed field, whence certainly Farraker. The well-known Lancashire name Stirzaker, Sturzaker, less commonly Steriker, is a genuine -acre name, the first element being ME, steor, a steer, bull. In Dunnaker the first element may be dun, a hill, or dun, brown. Waddicar, Waddicker are from a spot in Lancashire formerly known as Wedacre. In Waraker the first element is Domesday wara, an outlying portion of a manor. This is further corrupted into Walliker and Warwicker, the latter of which has been assimilated to Warwick by imitative spelling. Halfacre was used in Middle English for any small piece of ground; cf. Halfhide (p. 128, n. 3). Part of Brentford High Street is still called the Halfacre. Ranacre, Ranigar, Runacres seem to represent the Anglo-Saxon name Ræfengar, raven spear.

94 THE CORRUPTION OF LOCAL SURNAMES

Among names compounded from trees the oak easily takes first place. Most villages have, or at any rate had, before the devastating effects of enlightenment were really felt, an old oak, gallows oak, haunted oak, or some other oak out of the common. In compounds the word often becomes -ack, -ick, -ock, -uck, and in some of the following examples the identification is more or less conjectural. Whiteoak, Whittick, and Greenoak [Thomas de Greneayk, F. of Y.] are simple cases, also Shurrock, Shorrock, Sharrocks, [Herbert de Schirhoc, Fine R.]—

"Shire oak, an oak tree marking the boundary of a shire or a meeting-place for a shire court" (NED.).

Holyoak, Hollyoak may represent both the "holly" or "holm" oak, i.e. the evergreen oak, and the "holy oak" or "gospel oak" at the parish boundary where the procession stopped for the reading of the gospel when "beating the bounds"—

"Dearest, bury me
Under that holy oke, or gospel tree" (Herrick, To Anthea).

Coppock, Coppack may be for "copped," i.e. polled, oak, for the earliest example of the word "cop" in the NED. is "coppede ac." Bantock, Bantick is for "bent oak"; cf. Adam del Crokedaik (IpM.), Crummock, Cromack, crump, i.e. crooked, oak, and Cammack, from dial. cam, crooked. But the last three names may be dims. of crum and cam used as nicknames. In Brideoke, Briddock, the first element is probably ME. brid, bird, while Triphook, Trippick may be for "thorp oak" (v.i.). There is also the classical example of Snook, Snooks, from Sevenoaks, not necessarily always the place in Kent so called, for a spot called the "seven oaks" is mentioned in the Abingdon Chronicle. The intermediate Sinnocks also survives, and I find that John Hardyng, of Senock, Kent, was indicted for horse stealing in 1551. Snake is probably the same name. In Buckoke we have the name of some famous trysting oak of medieval hunters.

Another word that assumes very numerous variant forms when used as a suffix is -thorp, 2 e.g. Hilldrop, Guntrip, Westrope, Redrup, Gilstrap, Winthrop, etc. Whatrup, which looks as though it belonged to the same class, is an illiterate alteration of Wardrop [Thomas de la Wardrobe, Hund, R.]. Hurst, a wood, is slightly disguised in Fairest, Greenist, Everest. The last name, of reposeful appearance, belongs almost exclusively to Kent [Tenentes de Everherst, Hund. R., Kent]. The prefix is AS. eofor, a boar, common as first element in place-names. Wich, a dwelling, as in Norwich, has, as a suffix, often assumed the deceptive form -age, e.g. Swanage (Dors.) is Swanewic in the AS. Chronicle. Similarly Colledge represents Colwich (Staff.), and Stoneage, Woodage, Middleage, Winterage. which suggest epochs of civilization and of human life, also contain the ending -wich. Curiously enough, from the alternative -wick we get the equally deceptive Middleweek, while Nunweek is of course Nunwick (Northumb.).

96 THE CORRUPTION OF LOCAL SURNAMES

But hardly any suffix is so well represented as the simple word house. We have from it many quite obvious compounds, e.g. Newhouse and Whitehouse, and others whose survival is interesting, such as Alehouse, Barkhouse, i.e. tan-house, Duckhouse, Dyhouse, Porthouse (gate-house), Sainthouse, Seedhouse, Taphouse, Woolhouse, together with the somewhat disguised Felthouse (field). Childerhouse, though not in the NED., presumably means orphanage [John de la Chyldrehus, Chart. R.]; cf. Children [John Attechildren, Pat. R.] and Fr. Auxenfants (p. 280). The well-known Suffolk Aldhouse is generally an imitative form of a personal name Aldus, well recorded in the Rolls [Nicholas f. Aldus, Close R., Aldus Waveloc, Hund. R.]; it is also found as Aldus, Aldous, Aldis, Awdas, etc.

But often -house as a suffix is changed into -ows, -ers, or -as, -ess, -is, -os, -us, e.g. Bellows, Churchers, Dyas, Portess, Burdis, Stannus, Stannas, Stannis, all obvious except Burdis (Burdas, Burdus), which may be for "bird-house," or for Bordeaux. Bellows has a variant Billows, and Windows is probably for Windus, i.e. wynd-house. Meadows is sometimes for "mead house," whence also Meadus. Other examples in -ers are Duckers and Drakers, Smithers, Smeathers (see Smeeth, p. 77), Salters, Charters (charter-house), Stathers (ME. stathe, landing-place), Parkers, Jewers, Childers

(for Childerhouse, v.s.), Hillers, Boggers, Suthers. We have something similar to these forms in Janders, which actually represents the heroic Chandos [Robert de Jaundos, Lib. R.].

Examples of the other endings are Dyas, Hallas, Hollas or Wholehouse, for "hole house," Dallas (dale), Beddis, Biddis, from AS, bedhus, chapel, the origin of the common Welsh place-name Bettws and, sometimes. of the name Beddoes [John del Bettis, Nott. Bor. Rec.]. With Bullas [Simon de la Bulehouse, Fine R.] cf. Ramus and Coultas, Cowtas, Coultish. Brockis is for Brookhouse, Nunniss for Nunhouse, Roddis for "royd-house," from the northern royd, clearing, or for "rood-house." Charteris is for Charterhouse, an imitative corruption of Chartreuse. For Millhouse we have Mellers, Mellis [Richard de Mellus, Chart. R.], and even Millist, the latter with an excrescent -t as in Middlemist for Middlemiss (Michaelmas); cf. Bonus, Bonest, for "bone-house," i.e. charnel-house. I am not sure whether Porterhouse still exists, but Pendrous, Pendriss is for "pender-house," the Pender being the same as the Pinder or Pounder. Malthus. Brewis, Cottis, Loftus, Lowas, Lowis, Newis are obvious. With Boggis cf. Finnis [William del Fenhus. Hund. R., Suff., and Carus, Carass, Caress, from car, a marsh (see p. 93). Harkus is for "hawkhouse," as Harker is for Hawker. Fawcus, Falkous, suggest early shortened forms of Falconas, but are more probably variants of the personal names Fawkes (falco), as -us for -es is common in some Middle English texts. With Falconas goes Mewis, from "mew," in its original sense of a cage for hawks.

Wortos contains the archaic "wort," vegetable. In Pettus we have the Kentish Pett, for Pitt. With Crannis [Richard de Cranehous, Pat. R.] cf. Duckers, Barkis was an East Anglian name long before Dickens [Alfred de Barkhus, Pat, R., Suff.]. Barrass may be for "bar house," the house at the entrance to a town (cf. Gatus), or from the obsolete barrace, a barrier or outwork of a fortress, whence the French name Barras. Baylas is for "bail-house" (see Bale, p. 53), and the very common Bayliss must also sometimes belong here. Burrus is "bower-house" and Burrows may sometimes have the same origin. Dayus is still used in dialect for a dairy (see Day, p. 233), and Adam del Cheshus (Hund. R.) suggests that Buttress may sometimes represent "butter-house." The Lincolnshire Govis is perhaps connected with the dial. verb to gove or goave, i.e. to store corn in a barn, whence the occupative Gover. Govier. Copus [Thomas del Cophous, Fine R.] may be the house on the "cop," or hill, or the house with the pointed roof, like the "copped hall" of the City which still survives in Copthall Buildings. Names of the type here dealt with are especially common in the north and the Roll of the Freemen of York has many early examples of them. The above list is far from complete. Circus perhaps belongs to the same group. though I can suggest no origin for it. Lewtas is probably connected with AS. hleow, shelter (see Lew). Wyclif has the inverted houselewth. Dwerryhouse, formerly also Dwarryhouse, means "dwarf house"-

The compounds of -land <sup>1</sup> offer no phonetic difficulty, but include some names of antiquarian interest, and others of deceptive aspect. Olland, old land, is still used in Norfolk and Suffolk for land that has lain some time fallow. Buckland <sup>2</sup> is etymologically "book land," i.e. land held by written charter. Headland is not necessarily a cape—

"Headland, that which is ploughed overthwart at the ends of the other lands" (Worlidge, Dict. Rust. 1681).

The Scottish term is Headrigg (ridge). Frankland, AS. Francland, was used in ME, for France. Eastland was applied specifically to the Baltic countries [Eremon de Estland, Hund, R., Godeschalke de Estlaund, ib.]. and Norland, Westland, Southland may also refer to large geographical areas. Britland once meant Wales. The Devon name Yalland, Yelland, Yolland contains the adj. yald, a West Saxon form of old [John de la Yaldelonde, Hund. R., Dev.]. Markland was originally a division of land of the annual value of a mark. The surname has an alternative origin from mark, a boundary. In Trucland the adjective has the archaic sense of good, suitable. genuine. Cf. Truefitt, where the suffix is probably field (p. 91). Both Freeland and Goodland are sometimes personal names [Hugh Freeland, Hund. R., Hugh Godland, ib.]. They would be AS. Frithuland or Freoland, and Godland, names which are not given by Searle, although the elements of which they consist are copiously attested. Other -land names corrupted from personal names are Checkland, for Checklin, a variant of Jacklin [Ranulf Jaklin, Pat. R.], Joseland, for Jocelyn [Joselan de Nevill, Yorks Fines, temp. John], and Candeland [Kandelan de Slyne, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285], more usually Candlin, from Gandelyn.

100 THE CORRUPTION OF LOCAL SURNAMES

Many apparent compounds of -way are from AS. personal names in -wig (p. 37). Genuine local compounds are Birkway (birch), Buckaway (AS. boc, beech), Salway, Selway (AS. sealh, willow), Rodaway (road), Narraway, etc. Carroway is probably for Garroway, from Garway (Heref.). Faraway is from Farway (Dev.), with the -a- which is characteristic of Devon names (see Greenaway, p. 76, n.). The Dorset Samways was formerly (1517) Samwise, which seems to point clearly to AS. samwis, dull-witted, lit. half wise. Jennerway is one of the many variants of Janways, the Genoese. Jackways shows the the old dissyllabic pronunciation of Jacques—

"The melancholy Ja-ques grieves at that"
(As You Like It, ii. 1).

Spurway seems to be a phrase-name, the native equivalent of Pickavance (p. 268), and I should assign a like origin to Harkaway, though the NED. has no early record of the phrase. Cf. Rumbelow, no doubt a nick-

"Your maryners shall synge arowe

CHAPTER V

SOME OCCUPATIVE SURNAMES

"Sitôt entré, le premier moutardier salua d'un air galant et se dirigea vers le haut perron où le Pape l'attendait pour lui remettre les insignes de son grade: la cuiller de buis jaune et l'habit de safran" (ALPHONSE DAUDET).

Besides the large number of occupative surnames of obvious meaning (Draper, Fuller, Singer, etc.) and those which, though a little more difficult to trace (Cordner, Latimer, Pilcher, etc.), have a well-documented history and have not got far from dictionary forms, there are a good many names of somewhat rare occurrence or of deceptive appearance, of which I propose to give here a selection. Many of them present no difficulty, but their survival seems interesting. First it must be noted that many surnames in -er, suggesting an occupation or a habit, do not belong to this class at all. Some of them are Anglo-Saxon personal names, e.g. Asker, Asker, Asser, AS. Æschere, Fricker, AS. Frithugar, Hollier, Hullyer, AS. Holdgar [William f. Holdegar, Pipe R.]. Ringer, AS. Regengar [Richard Reynger, Chart. R.]. Diver and Ducker are no doubt nicknames, both words being used of various kinds of diving birds.

while the two surnames are found especially in the fen-country. Diver has been a Cambridge name since 1273 [Gunnilda Divere, Hund. R., Camb.], while Ducker is common in Lincolnshire. Cf. William Plungun (Nott. Bor. Rec.) and Fr. Leplongcon—

"Plongeon, the water-fowle called a ducker" (Cotg.).

Duckering, also a Lincolnshire name, is local, the "ing" frequented by "duckers"; cf. Ravening (p. 64). Dipper, which looks as if it belonged to the same class as Diver and Ducker, is local, of Ypres [John de Ipre, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285]. Diaper is a variant. The same place has given the Scotch name Wiper, Wypers, and the medieval Ypre, locally "Wipers," Tower of Rye reminds us of the connection between the Cinque Ports and Flanders. Thus history repeats itself.

Many names in -er are from specific place-names, e.g. Docker (Lanc.), Hever (Kent), Laver (Ess.), and

<sup>2</sup> A chapter could be written on war-maps and surnames. If we follow to-day (Feb. 28, 1916), as the great struggle for Verdun is proceeding, the sketch-map in the Times from Nieuport to that fortress, we see to the immediate east and west of the allied line, as we go through the country of the Flemings, Pickards, Champneys, Lorings, and Burgoynes, the original homes of the families of Bethune, Lyle, Dowey, Aris, Amyas, Cambrey (Kembery, Gambray), Noon (Noyon), Sessions (Soisons), Reames, Challen, Vardon, to note the chief places only. Armentières ought to be represented, for it is very common in the Rolls, and John Darmentiers was sheriff of London in 1300. All the above are amply attested and there are many variants. A little farther south the famous salient of Saint-Mihiel reminds us of the popular form of Michael, which has given us Mighill, Myhill, Miall, and is the chief source of Miles. With the intermediate Miggles cf. Span. Miguel.

others represent the local or vulgar pronunciation, which is very fond of substituting -er for a more distinctive ending. Such are Laidler (Laidlaw), Powner (Pownall), Pepler (Peplow), Scotter (Scottow), Crafer (Crayford), Stanner (Stanhoe), Snusher (Snowshill), Bearder (Beardall 1), Priestner (Priestnall 1), Hensher (Henshaw), Brister (Bristow, i.e. Bristol)—

"Nunk! did ever I tell thee o' my Brister trip, Ta zee Purnce Albert an' the gurt irn ship?"

(John's Account of his Trip to Bristol, 1843).

With this cf. Brisker for Briscoe. All the above place-names also exist as surnames in their more correct form.

So also Mesher is for Measure, which, in its turn, is Fr. masure, a hovel, tumble-down dwelling; cf. Fr. Desmasures. The Yorkshire name Creaser, Creazer appears to be for cress-over, where over, which regularly becomes -er in compounds, is an archaic word for bank [John de la Cressovere, Close R.]. Stopper is a variant of Stopher, for Christopher, Mailer is the Welsh name Meyler [Mayelor Seysenek, i.e. the Sassenach, Exch. Cal.], or, as a Scotch surname, means a payer of rent, and Hinder is the comparative of hind, courteous, a later form of ME. hend—

"As hinde as an hogge
And kinde as any dogge" (Skeltonica).

Cf. such names as Elder, Richer, Younger, and even Better (p. 323).

The multiplicity of occupative names is largely due to the infinite differentiation of functions in the Middle Ages. Nowhere is this more apparent than in the names derived from domestic office. We even find the name Household, with which we may compare Fr. Ménage. In a fifteenth-century Courtesy Book 1 we find precise directions as to the duties of each Sarvant, viz. the Marshall, Groom, Usher, Steward, Panter, Ewer, Sewer, Cook, Squire, Yeoman, Amner, Carver, Waiter, Gentleman, Page, Porter, Butler; and several of these genera were further subdivided into species. Other names of the same type are Chamberlain and Seneschal, the latter also corrupted to Senskell and Sensicall. The Storer, Storrar [John the Storiere, Pat. R.] was also the convent treasurer. And there were, of course, a number of assistants to each of the dignitaries mentioned above, e.g. the Cook had the help of the Sculler, Squiller, Skiller [John le Squiller, City E.] in the "squillery" or scullery, and of the Skeemer [Richard le Skymere, Cal. Gen.] and Baster in the more delicate processes of his art. A more responsible office was that of the Guster, or taster [Robert le Gustur, Fine R.]. Jester is also a surname, but the ancestor was not necessarily a buffoon—

"Of alle maner of mynstrales, And gestiours that tellen tales"

(Chaucer, House of Fame, iii. 107).

In many cases the official bore the name of his realm, e.g. Chambers appears as de la Chambre, so that corresponding to the above names we find not only the obvious Kitchen and the rather uncommon Drawbridge, but also many less simple names. The Marshalsea was originally a court which had jurisdiction over the royal household; the name is also found as Marshallsay. With the Usher, Husher, is connected Hush, Fr. huis, a door, and also Lush [Thomas de le Uisse, Hund. R.] and Lusher [Geoffrey le Ussher or Lussher, Lib. Cust. Lond.]. Witcher, Whitcher are variants of the same name [Richard le Wicher, Feet of Fines]. The Panter, now sometimes Panther, has also given the name Pantrey [John de la Paneterye, Pleas], while Lewry, Lury, from the office of Ewer, even survives as the fuller Delhuary. Cf. also Lewer and Lower [Robert Lewer or le Ewer, IpM.]. Spence, from the "dispense," or store-room, is also found as Expence [Ralph de Expensa, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.]. With Cook is connected John de la Cusyn (City F.), possibly now represented by Cushion, Cushing, which run parallel in Norfolk. With the Amner, or almoner, goes Ambery, Ambrey. This might be from the archaic and dialect aumbry, a cupboard, store-room, Fr. armoire, but it is also a corruption of "almonry"—

"The almonry (of Westminster), now corruptly called the Ambry" (Stow).

The Butler's domain was the "butlery," whence Buttery [William de la Botelrie, Yorks Knights' Fees, 1303]. Even Nursery exists as a surname.

There are many other names which come from the various offices of great households and monasteries.

"Fermory, infirmarium, infirmatorium" (Cath. Angl.).

The misericord, "an apartment in a monastery in which certain relaxations of the rule were permitted" (NED.), has given the contracted Mascord [John de la Misericorde, 14th century]. Frater, which looks like the latinization of "brother," is Middle English for the monastery refectory [Thomas del Freytour, F. of Y.]—

" ffreytowr, refectorium " (Prompt. Parv.) .-

or the name may be for ME. fraterer, the superintendent of the frater [Walter le Freytur, Glouc. Cart.]. Saxty, Sexty are for sacristy (cf. sexton for sacristan) and Vester, Vesty are both related to the vestry, or robingroom [John del Vestiarie, IpM.]. The first represents the French form vestiaire, while in the second the -r-has been lost, as in Laundy for Laundry (p. 108) and Dunphie for Dumphrey (p. 39). Herbage is OF. herberge, hostel, shelter, and a similar origin must sometimes be assigned to Harbour, Arber [William le Herberere, Lond. Wills, 1318-9]. The Herber, or Coldharbour, was at one time the mansion of Sir John Poultney, near Dowgate—

"A great old house called the Erber" (Stow).

Other names connected with the subdivision of labour are Furnace, Furness, corruptly Furnish, Varnish, Darey [Alan de la Dayerie, Pat. R.], and Landry, Laundry [Robert de la Lavendrye, Fine R.]. But the last, though not common, has an alternative origin from the French personal name Landry, OG. Landrich [William Landri or Laundry, Fine R.]. Another uncommon name with a double origin similar to that of Frater is Parlour [Ralph le Parlour, Fine R., Henry le Parlour or del Parlur, Cal. Gen.]. The parlour was originally the conversation and interview room at a monastery. Gennery, Ginnery are from the "enginery," some kind of workshop. The NED. has the word first for 1605, in the sense of the art of constructing military engines, but William del Enginnerie (Close R., temp. Hen. III.) shows that its popular form was in use more than three centuries earlier. Among the many forms of Jenner, the engineer, is Genower. Chevery is OF, chevrerie, goat-fold, and John Chivery, if the name is genuine, was of like descent. Of the same type is Bargery, from Fr. bergerie, a sheep-fold. I suppose that Gallery may be from an official whose duties lay in that part of the mansion, while Roof may have been the sentinel on the tower. Bardsley explains this name as a variant of the Norse Rolf, but Bartholomew del Rof (Pat. R.), the common Fr. Dutoit, and the Du, Vanderdecken point to an alternative origin. Still more limited is Carnell, Crennell, AF. quernel, F. créneau, a battlement [William de la Karnayle or Kernel, Ramsey Cart.]. And it is probable that Garrett owes something to OF. garite, a watch-tower, turret, which is also the oldest meaning of our garret; cf. Soller [John del Soler, Pat. R.], still used in dial. of a loft or upper room—

"Sollere, a loft, garnier" (Palsg.).
"Thei wenten up in to the soler" (Wyc. Acts. i. 13).

Postans is derived from the postern gate [John de la Posterne, Testa de Nev.].

Some of the above names may be simply due to the accident of locality rather than to occupation. This applies still more to the following, which I put here because they approach the others in character. Frary is Middle English for a brotherhood, or Friary. Chantry, Chantrey is from residence near a chantry, an endowment or endowed chapel with the function of praying for the soul of the benefactor. Chaucer's Poure Persoun of a Toun looked after his flock—

"He sette not his his benefice to hyre And leet his sheepe encombred in the myre, And ran to Londoun, unto Seint Poules, To seken hym a chaunterie for soules" (Prol. 510).

It has absorbed the domestic chandry, or chandelry, the candle-store [John of the Chandry, John of Gaunt's Reg. 1372-6]. Charnell meant both a mortuary chapel and a cemetery [Alice de Cimiterio, Malmesbury Abbey Reg.]. Mossendew is the ME. measondue, synonymous with hospital—

"Maison Dieu, an hospitall, or spittle, for the poore" (Cotg.).

Lower suggests that Domesday, Dumsday may be the same name latinized, domus dei, but, in default of evidence, it is perhaps safer to regard it as a pageant nickname (ch. x.), from some representation of the Day of Judgment. Maudling may also derive from a religious institution [Nicholas atte Maudeleyne, Pat. R.]. Monnery is OF. moinerie, a monastery, and I imagine that Mendary, found in the same county, is an altered form. Tabernacle was used in Middle English, not only in connection with the Jews, but also of a canopied structure, niche, etc., and in dial. for a woodman's hut. Monument, Monement probably record residence near some elaborate tomb, the oldest meaning of the word in English. Checker, Chequer, is official, of the exchequer [Ralph del Escheker, Fine R., Roger de la Checker, Hund. R.], and I conjecture that Tolputt may be for tolbooth, now associated only with Edinburgh, but a common word in Middle English—

"A pupplican, Levy bi name, sittynge at the tolbothe" (Wyc. Luke, v. 27).

"Brevigerulus, anglice a brevytour" (Voc.).

Every antiquarian dictionary of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries contains the mysterious word spigurnel, a sealer of writs, on the origin of which the NED. throws no light. "It is evident that the word had no real currency in English, and its appearance is due to Camden and Holland, copied by Phillips, Blount,

Harris, Bailey, etc." (NED.). It is, however, of such frequent occurrence in the Rolls [Edmund le Spigornel, Fine R., Nicholas Spigurnel, Hund. R., Henry Lespigurnel, Doc. Ill., Henry Spigornel, City C.], that it is surprising that it is not better represented as a surname. It exists as Spickernell, Spicknell, Pickernell. To the official class belong also Regester and Macer—

"Macere, or he that beryth a mace, septiger" (Prompt. Parv.).

The oldest meaning of Sizer, i.e. "assizer," is a "sworn recognitor" (NED.), and I imagine that a Vizer or Vizor [John le Visur, Hund. R.] had to do with "revising." Gawler, Gowler [Geoffrey le Gooler, Pleas], besides meaning usurer—

"Goulare, or usurare, usurarius, ffenerator" (Prompt. Parv.)—may also come from the same word, gaveller, gawler, applied to a mining official in the Forest of Dean. Alner is the name of the official more usually called "alnager," from Fr. aunc, an ell, who attested the measurement and quality of cloth.

Some rather rare occupative surnames are due to the fact that in Middle English there were generally two words, English and French, for each of the commoner callings. The native Flesher has almost disappeared, absorbed by Fletcher and superseded by the French Butcher. The native Baker has generally prevailed over both Bullinger (also found as Pullinger, Pillinger) and Pester 2 [John le Pestur, City A.]. So Peacher, Petcher [John le Pechur, Pat. R.], Paster [Henry le Pastur, Hund. R.], Scotcher, OF. escorcheur, make a very poor show against Fisher, Shepherd,

Skinner. The latter is sometimes represented by Flear, for flayer. Sotcher is the natural result of OF. and ME. soudiour, a soldier—

" Sodioure, miles, bellator" (Manip. Voc.).

Flecker, Flicker [Simon le Fleckere, Northumb. Ass. R. 1279] are variants of Fletcher, the arrow-maker, and Shermer, Shurmer, Skirmer, Skurmer, etc., represent the obsolete scrimer, fencer, sword-player [William le Schirmere, Pat. R.]—

"The scrimers of their nation, He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, If you opposed them" (Hamlet, iv. 7).

More common is the extended Scrimygeour, with a great number of variants, Scriminger, Scrimger, etc. (see also p. 88). Guyer, Gyer, Gwyer, is OF. guieor, guide [Henry le Gyur, Chart. R.]—

"Conscience, that kepere was and gyoure" (Piers Plowm, B. xx. 71).

It is also found as Wyer, Wire, from an Old French dial. form. Carker, Charker, are Anglo-French equivalents of Carrier, Charrier, formed from cark, chark, a burden (charge).

Many names of deceptive appearance can be solved by the study of old records. Bardsley guesses Punter to mean the man in charge of a punt. But Ralph le Punter, custos pontis de Stanes (Close R.), shows that he was a Bridgman <sup>1</sup> or Bridger, less commonly Brickmaster.<sup>2</sup> Rower also sayours of the water-side, but a record (City C.) of a payment made by the Corporation of London to Dionisia la Rowere for wheels makes it clear that she was of the same craft as Robert Rotarius, i.e. Wheeler (Chart. R.). The rare name Setter is wisely explained by Lower as "probably some handicraft." Later writers have assumed, I know not on what grounds, that a setter was one who put on arrow-heads. The NED, gives several meanings for the occupative setter, but the only one old enough for surname purposes is "setter of mes, prepositor" (15th century). It knows nothing about arrow-heads. In City E. I find that John Heyroun, "settere," and William le Settere were called in as experts to value an embroidered cope, hardly the work of an arrowsmith. This confirms a suspicion I had previously had that this Setter may represent OF. saieteur, a maker of sayete, a kind of silk.

Some rare surnames connected with hunting are Varder, the verderer [William le Verder, Exch. R.], Berner, OF. brenier, the keeper of the hounds [John le Berner, Close R.], and the synonymous Brackner [Gilbert le Braconer, ib.], which in modern French (braconnier) has come to mean poacher. Related to the latter is Bracher, from ME. brach, a hound, though there has no doubt been some confusion between this and the names Brazier and Bracer, the latter of which means brewer, Fr. brasseur. Juster, Jewster, is evidently the jouster [Thomas le Justur, Fine R.], and Punyer is from OF. pugneour, poignour, a champion—

"De Sarraguce Carles guarnist les turs, Mil chevalers i laissat puignëurs"

(Chanson de Roland, 3676).

In the Lib. R. we find William le Poignur or Pugnear or Punner de la Galee, apparently a formidable mariner. Ferler, Furler, is OF. fourrelier, a Sheather—

"Fourrelier, a scabberd maker" (Cotg.).

Stamer is OF. estamier [John le Stamer, Fine R.], now replaced by étameur—

" Estamier, a tynner, tynne-man; pewterer" (Cotg.).

Fulloon, from Fr. foulon, a fuller [Thomas le Fulun, Pat. R.], is an example of the small group of French occupative names in -on. The above examples, to which many more could be added, show that medieval England was bilingual to an extent which has hardly been realized.

Among occupative surnames derived from archaic or obsolete words, whether French or English, may be mentioned Biller, a maker of bills or axes [Hugh le Biller, Fine R.], Fower, a sweeper, scavenger [Roger le Fower, Hund. R.]—

"fewar, or clensar, mundator, emundator, purgator" (Prompt-Parv.)—

Kittler, kettle-maker, Alefounder, inspector of ale, still found in Suffolk, Flather, a maker of flathes, or flawns, Theaker, a northern variant of Thacker, thatcher, Crapper, similarly a variant of Cropper, which the NED. defines as "one who crops," Meader, a mower, whence Grasmeder, Bester, a herdsman [John le Bestere, Hund. R., Hunts 1], Keeler, a bargeman, still used in the north of a manager of coal-barges and colliers, Marler, a worker in a marl-pit [John le Marler, Pat. R.], Retter, a common Devon surname, perhaps from ME. retten, to rate, reckon—

"Rette not the innocent blood in the myddil of the puple Israel" (Wyc. Deut. xxi. 8)—

Counter, a keeper of accounts, treasurer—

"A shirreve hadde he been, and a countour, Was nowher such a worthy vavasour"

(Chauc. A. 359)—

Dyter, an "inditer," or scribe—

"The dyteris, var. endyters, scribis, of the kyng" (Wyc. Esther, viii. 9)—

Render, Rinder, the renderer [John le Render, Archbp. Wickwane's Reg. 1279-84], the exact meaning of which cannot be decided, Shutler, Shittler, and Spindler, makers of shuttles and spindles respectively, Styer, a horseman, rider—

"Bite the feet of an hors, that the stiere thereof falle bacward" (Wyc. Gen. xlix, 17)—

Stickler, an umpire, Heckler,<sup>2</sup> a dresser of hemp or flax, Cosier, a cobbler, Ollier, an oil merchant [Reginald le Oyler, Leic. Bor. Rec.], Sarter, an "assarter," or clearer of forest land, and many more. Some names of this class, e.g. Faggeter, Basketter, Trumpeter, Preacher, Teacher, Minstrell, Pronger, Organer, Outlaw, are interesting only by their survival. Cheeper, Chipper means buyer, or rather, haggler, cheapener—

"So many chepers
So fewe biers
And so many borowers Sawe I never"
(Skelton, Mancr of the World, 105).

In Lincolnshire occurs the compound Colcheeper, but this is perhaps Du. koolschipper, a collier, for Dutch names are not uncommon in the county.

Then we have a number of names which look very simple, but the exact meaning of which is very difficult to establish. Such are Borer [Robert le Borier, City E.], Drawer, Dresser, Gatherer, Sealer, all susceptible of various interpretations, e.g. a Sealer [William le Seeler, Pat. R.] may have made, or affixed, seals. In Acts of Parliament he is coupled with the chaff-wax (see p. 317) and also defined as identical with the "alnager," or official measurer of cloth (p. 111). The earliest sense given by the NED. for dresser is cloth-dresser (1520); but John le Dressour (Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301-60) may have been something quite different—

"Dresseur, a straightner, directer, leveller; settler; a raiser, erecter; framer, fashioner, orderer, instructer" (Cotg.).

Still, as it is a Yorkshire name, it very probably has to do with cloth. A Rayer [Ralph le Rayer, Fine R.] "arrayed," but the verb is almost as vague as "dress." So we cannot decide whether the original Drawer drew wire, water, beer, pictures, or a barrow. In the sense of tavern waiter it appears to be a Tudor word. In modern dialect a Gatherer works in the harvest fields.

Binder means book-binder [Nicolas le Bokbindere, Lond. Wills, 1305-6, William Ligator Libror', Hund. R., Oxf.]. It is still an Oxford name.

A certain number of these surnames have two or more possible origins. An obvious case is Porter, which may mean a door-keeper or a bearer. Burder may be for "birder," i.e. Fowler, but would equally well represent OF. bourdour, jester [John le Burdeur, Pat. R.]—

"Bourdeur, a mocker, jeaster; cogger, lier, foister, guller of people" (Cotg.)

(Piers Plowm. C. x. 136).

Bowler, Boaler, a maker of bowls, had also in Middle English the meaning of one who loved the bowl. In 1570 two inhabitants of the parish of St. Martin in the Fields were presented as "common bowlars"—

"For hit beth bote boyes bollers atten ale" (Piers Plowm. C. x. 194).

Disher means dish-maker [Richard le Dischere, Pat. R.]. But in Piers Plowman "Dawe the dykere" or "Dawe the delvere" is also called "Dawe the disschere." Therefore Disher may be for "ditcher." Cf. Dishman for "ditch-man." Pillar, Piller, is generally local [Thomas Attepiler, Close R.], but also occupative [Dike le Pilur, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285], perhaps a plunderer—but quite as possibly a respectable "peeler" of trees. As late as 1732 I find in the Nottingham Borough Records a payment to—

"The pillars of the bark for work done in the copies."

Salter has two origins besides the obvious one. It may mean a player on the psaltery [Pagan le Salterer, Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-79] and also a Leaper, Dancer, Hopper, Saylor, Tumber, Fr. tombeur—

"Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neatherds, three swineherds, that have made themselves all men of hair; they call themselves saltiers; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols" (Winter's Tale, iv. 3).

This suggests Skipper, which is not always a seafaring name. Cicely la Skippere (Pat. R.) was evidently so named from her agility. The word skip had in Middle English no suggestion of youthful frivolity—

"And whanne the apostlis Barnabas and Poul herden this . . . thei skipten out among the puple" (Wyc. Acts, xiv. 13).

Curtler, Kirtler may be identical and mean a maker of kirtles, or short gowns, ME. curtil, but Gilbert le Curtiler (Pat. R.) may represent OF. courtilier, a gardener, found occasionally in Middle English as curtiler. Sellar, Seller, means not only a saddler, Fr. sellier, but also what it appears to mean in plain English <sup>2</sup>

[Gilbert le Seller, City A., William le Vendur, Chanc. R.]—

"The sellers of Saba and Reema, thei thi marchauntis" (Wyc. Ezek. xxvii, 22).

A few occupative names are of somewhat deceptive appearance. Foister, Foyster, is a variant of Fewster, Fuster, the maker of the wooden frame of saddles. This is also one source of Foster [Thomas Foster or Fuster, Kirby's Quest, Yorks, 1285], which more usually represents Forster, forester—

"Forty fosters of the fe
(Ballad of Adam Bell).

Nor can we doubt that the name Foster also represents ME. foster, used both of a foster-child and foster-parent; cf. Nurse, Gossip, etc.

"The Greekes, whom wee may count the very fathers and fosters of all vices" (Holland's Pliny).

Caller means a maker of "cauls," net-work headdresses. Robert le Callere was sheriff of London in 1302—

" Call for maydens, retz de soye" (Palsg.).

Milliner is for Milner, i.e. Miller, or is a thinned form (see p. 130, n.) of the synonymous AF. Mulliner. Copper represents the once common Cupper [Roger le Cuppere, Chart. R.], now almost swallowed up by Cooper, as "buttoner," a common trade-name in the City Letter-Books, has been by Butler. Comer may be a variant of Comber, but a ME. comere [John le Comere, Pat. R.] was a newcomer, stranger—

Cf. Guest, Strange, Newcome, etc. Pardner, Partner, are from "pardoner" [Matthew le Pardonner, Close R.]. Booer is for "boar" or "boor," which have become indistinguishable as surnames [Robert le Boor or le Bore, Exch. R.]. Ripper is a variant of rippier, one who carried fish inland for sale in a rip, or basket, and is also a dialect form of reaper. Sirdar is quite a modern alteration of ME. serdere, a sworder [John le Serdere, Pat. R.]. Swindler is altered from Swingler, 1 a beater of flax. Cheater is for the official escheater, but may also, like Chaytor, come from the normal Fr. acheteur, which we have generally rejected for the Norman acatour, Cater, Cator, Tricker, a Suffolk name, is probably Du. trekker, as hard to define as our own Drawer (p. 116), but Treacher [Matilda le Tresshere, Pat. R.] is OF, trecheor (tricheur), a traitor—

"Knaves, thieves, and treachers by spherical predominance" (Lear, i. 2).

Pooler, Puller, represent OF. poulier, hen-keeper, or poulter [John le Pulier, Pleas]—

" Poulier, a poulter" (Cotg.).

Nipper and Plyer, which seem to have some affinity with each other, occur in the country of the Nappers, or Napiers, and the Players respectively. Poucher has a parallel in Purser, a maker of purses, but its habitat, Lincolnshire, suggests something more adventurous. A Powncer "pounced," i.e. pulverized, various products, e.g. woad (p. 275). Latter appears to mean a lath-maker. Wader has not to do with "wading," but with "woad" [Robert le Weyder or le Wodere, Lond. Wills, 1305]. It is common in north-country records. With Wadman, Wademan, cf. Thomas le Maderman (Lond. Wills, 1258–1358), who was not necessarily more insane than other men. Finally, the original Bircher was not an educationist but a shepherd [Alan le Bercher, Hund. R.]. Fr. berger, variants berchier, berquier, latinized as bercarius or bercator, is one of the commonest entries in cartularies and manorial rolls [Martin Bercarius, Cust. Battle Abbey, Richard Bercator, ib., Geoffrey le Berkier, Testa de Nev.]. It has usually become Barker, as in Piers Plowman—

"Thyne berkeres ben al blynde that bryngyth forth thy lambren" (C. x. 260.)

The NED, follows the late Professor Skeat in erroneously explaining these blind shepherds as "barking dogs."

The ending -ster, originally feminine, soon lost this distinction in Middle English. It has given us Bolster [Robert le Bulester, Pat. R.] for Bowler (p. 117), and possibly Bolister, though the latter may be for Ballister, Balster, the "balestier," or cross-bow man, who has generally become Bannister. Broster is for "broiderer" [Gelis Browdester, F. of Y. 1375], and Sumpster, spelt Somister in Manchester in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, is the obsolete summister, explained by Halliwell as "one who abridges."

Many names in -er are rather to be regarded as nicknames. Laker means one fond of fun, from a dialect

verb which has now become "lark" [Robert dictus Layker, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.]—

"Lakers, such is the denomination by which we distinguish those who come to see our country, intimating thereby not only that they are persons of taste who wish to view our lakes, but idle persons who love laking; the old Saxon word to 'lake,' or play, being of common use among schoolboys in these parts' (NED. 1805).

Scambler may be a maker of "scambles," or benches, but in Scottish it means a parasite, sponger—

"Scambler, a bold intruder on one's generosity or table" (Johnson's Dictionary).

Ambler, a nickname of gait, has absorbed the occupative "ameller," i.e. enameller [John le Aumayller, goldsmith, City B.]. With Copner, ME. copenere, lover [Richard le Copenere, Testa de Nev., Dors.], cf. Lover, Paramor, Woor [John le Wower, Hund. R.]. Shuter, Shooter, was once, as is shown by numerous puns, the regular pronunciation of "suitor," whence also Sueter, but the "wooer" sense is much later than that of litigant; cf. Adam le Pledur (Fine R.). It is possible that Spouncer may be a nasalized form of "espouser" [Thomas le Espouser, Hund. R.], explained by the NED. (1653) as an arranger of marriages. Spyer, whence Spire, is rather official, the watchman [William le Spiour, Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301–60]—

"The wayte, var. spiere, that stode upon the toure of Jezrael" (Wyc. 2 Kings, ix. 17).

The first Trouncer was presumably a man of his hands, though the verb was not always colloquial—

"But the Lorde trounsed Sisara and all his charettes, and all hys hoste, with the edge of y° swerde, before Barak" (Judges, iv. 15, transl. of 1551).

Boxer is probably for Boxall (Boxwell, Glouc.), though Stephen Pugil is found in the Pipe R. Yarker, Yorker, are from dialect yark, for jerk, used of the "jerky" manner of sewing of shoemakers—

"Watt Tinlinn was by profession a sutor, but by inclination and practice an archer and warrior. The captain of Bewcastle is said to have made an incursion into Scotland, in which he was defeated and forced to fly. Watt Tinlinn pursued him closely through a dangerous morass. The captain, however, gained the firm ground; and, seeing Tinlinn dismounted and floundering in the bog, used these words of insult:—'Sutor Watt, ye cannot sew your boots; the heels risp and the seams rive.'—'If I cannot sew,' retorted Tinlinn, discharging a shaft which nailed the captain's thigh to the saddle, 'if I cannot sew I can yerk''' (Scott Note to Lay of the Last Minstrel, iv. 4).

&lt;sup>1</sup> The late Professor Skeat suggests with much probability (Trans. Phil. Soc. 1911-14, p. 51) that this is the origin of the cricket "yorker."

PHYSICAL NICKNAMES

"He brought me some chops and vegetables, and took the covers off in such a bouncing manner that I was afraid I must have given him some offence. But he greatly relieved my mind by putting a chair for me at the table, and saying very affably: 'Now, six-foot! come on'" (David Copperfield).

THE most puzzling class of surnames consists of those which appear to be taken from some adjunct of the personality, whether physical, moral, or external, tacked on to the baptismal name without further qualification. I mean such names as Head, Shanks, Belt, Mantell, apparently descriptive of appearance and costume, or those which are the names of objects (Baskett, Staff), commodities (Mustard, Wheat), articles of diet (Cake, Beer), plants and flowers (Garlick, Lilly), and all manner of minute portions of creation down to Barleycorn and Hempseed. When such names occur as compounds (Broadhead, Crookshanks, Broadbelt, Longstaff, Goodbeer, Lillywhite, etc.) they may almost always be accepted as genuine sobriquets, which can easily be paralleled from the other European languages or from historic names dating back to the earliest times, such as Sweyn Forkbeard, Rolf Bluetooth, William Longsword, etc. But, when they occur without qualification, they are often rightly suspected of being merely imitative spellings of, or accidental coincidences with, names which are really of baptismal, local, or occupative origin. Thus Armes is from the personal name Orme (cf. Armshaw for Ormshaw), Eye is simply "island," and Gaiter is AF. gaitier, a watchman, guard. So also, Hamper is a maker of hanaps, or goblets [John le Hanaper, City D.], Tankard is a personal name Thancweard, whence also Tancred, Tubb is one of the innumerable derivations of Theobald, Barrell is the personal name Berald, OG. Berwald, bear mighty, Billett is a reduction of AS. Bilheard, spear strong, whence also Billiard, Pott is an aphetic form of Philpot, i.e. little Philip, etc.

Writers on surnames have usually dealt with these names in two ways. One method is simply to give a list of such names without comment or history, the other is to explain conjecturally, without evidence, any name of this class as a perversion of something else. The truth is, as usual, a compromise between the two. It can be shown, by documentary evidence and by a comparison with the surname system of France and Germany, that the majority of these names are what they appear to be, though many of the more common have been reinforced from other sources. For instance, the common name Head is sometimes undoubtedly a nickname [William de Horsham called le Heved, City

"Caboche bien tymbrée, a well-garnished head-peece, well-tackled braine-pan, a stayed, or discreet pate" (Cotg.).

But it is also local [Thomas del Heved, Hund. R.], the word being used either in the sense of top end (cf. Muirhead, Woodhead, etc.) or possibly as a shop-sign. We find also as common surnames Ger. Haupt, Kopf, and Fr. Tête, the latter being often the origin of our Tait, Tate, though this is also found as an Anglo-Saxon personal name, from ON. teitr, merry.

In dealing with these names a little common sense and familiarity with life are required. We know that the popular tendency has always been to make the unfamiliar significant. But, if we have been to school, we know that there is no limit to the possibilities of nickname manufacture; and, if we are philosophers, we know that human nature never changes. In some comic paper lately I came across the following gracious piece of dialogue—

If we go back to the thirteenth century we find that Philip ove (with) la Teste (Pat. R.) and Emeric a la Teste (ib.) owed their names to a similar play of fancy.

The great difficulty is that when such names are recorded in our Rolls in their English form the sobriquet, as a rule, is simply added to the baptismal name without any connecting particle, e.g. Richard Thumbe (Pat. R.), John Tothe (ib.), so that we can never be absolutely sure whether we have not to do with an early case of folk-etymology. In French records, and, though to a less extent, in German, the use of prepositions makes the nickname origin clear. Thus Thomas Aladent and Pierre a la Dent (Pachnio), with whom we may compare Haim as Denz (Roman de Rou) may be considered to certify our Tooth and Dent [Quidam Capellanus Willelmus Dens nomine, Royal Let. Hen. III.] as genuine nicknames, while Peyne mit der Vust (Heintze, 1366), whence Ger. Faust, would incline us to accept the nickname origin of Fist, whence also Feast, even if it were not absolutely confirmed by Johannes cum Pugno (Pipe R.) and Simon Poynge (Nott. Bor. Rec.). Cf. Poincaré (p. 288) and Robert Poinfer, i.e. poing de fer (City E.).

If we examine man from top to toe, first anatomically and then with an eye to his costume, we shall find that there is hardly a detail of either inventory which has not produced a surname, many perhaps now obsolete or corrupted beyond recognition, but the great majority still in use and easily recognised. It will be noticed that English and Anglo-French words occur indifferently in names of this class, and that among the latter are many terms which the language has since rejected. Names of the physical class also reveal the same habits of observation and gift for describing conspicuous features which are to be noticed in rustic names of birds, plants, etc. Education has changed all that, and we cannot imagine a modern peasant giving any one the nickname Larkheel (p. 142) or christening a flower the "larkspur."

Taking first the larger divisions of the human geography, we find Head, Body, and Limb, of which the first has been already dealt with. Compounds of Head are Broadhead, Cockhead or Coxhead, Fairhead [Adam Beaufront, Close R.], Greathed, Lambshead [Agnes Lambesheved, Hund. R.], Leithead (little), Redhead, Ramshead, Whitehead, Weatherhead, Wethered (sheep's head), all of them genuine nicknames. More often -head is reduced to -ett, as in Blackett, Brockett [John Brokesheved, 2 Close R.], Brownett, Bovett (AF. bof, Fr. bœuf), Bullett [William Bolesheved, Pat. R.], Cockett, Dovet [William Dowfhed, F. of Y. 1354], Duckett, Gossett [John Goosheved, Lib. Vit.], Hawkett [John Hawksheved, F. of Y.], Hogsett, Doggett [Roger Doggisheved, Yorks Fines, temp. John], Redit, Thickett, Strickett (stirk-head, Front-de-Bouf), Perrett [Robert Pereheved, Hund. R.], and possibly Brasnett, from the "brazen head" used as a sign. With Roughead, Ruffhead, Rowed [William Ruhheved, Pat. R. may be compared the Old French epic hero Guillaume Tête-d'Etoupes, tow-head, and the more modern Struwelpeter. With these go Redknap [cf. Robert Bealknappe, Glouc. Cart.], Hartnupp, and Blacktop, Silvertop. Here may be also mentioned Pelly [Hugh le Pelé, Fine R.]—

" Pelé, pild, hairlesse, bauld " (Cotg.).

The simple Body is not a nickname, but a personal name, found also in French and Flemish, and derived from the OG. Bodo, which may be short for one of the many names in Bod-, command, or even for Baldwin. In compounds, -body has rather the sense of person, as in nobody, busibody, etc. Well-established examples are Freebody, Goodbody, Handsomebody, Lightbody (probably ME. lüt, little), Prettybody, Truebody. In Peabody, Paybody, Peberdy, Pepperday, Pipperday, the first element may be the obsolete pea, pay, peacock (p. 194). The formation does not seem very natural, but cf. Reginald Pefot (Pipe R.) and Robert Levedibodi, i.e. lady body (IpM., Notts). Many obsolete compounds of -body occur in the Rolls. Jellicorse, an existing surname, may represent Gentilcorps, or perhaps Jolicorps, and Bewkers is Fr. Beaucors [Jehan Biaucors, Pachnio]. In the Pat. R. occurs the name of John Ordegorge Gentilcors, i.e. John filthy throat handsome body, perhaps a man of good presence and foul vocabulary, but the double nickname is quite unique.

Limb is for Lamb, either a nickname or short for place-names Fifehead, Fifield. There are several such places in England, all earlier known as Five-hide—

"It is an interesting and curious fact that we owe to the fivehide unit such place-names as Fivehead, Somerset; Fifehead, Dorset; Fifield, Oxon; Fifield and Fyfield, Wilts; Fyfield, Hants; and Fyfield, Essex—all of them in Domesday 'Fifhide' or 'Fifehide'—as well as Fyfield, Berks, which occurs in Domesday as 'Fivehide'" (Round, Feudal England, p. 69).

Lambert, the latter of which has sometimes become Limbert [William Lembe or Lymbe, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]. Lem records the intermediate stage. Of the same origin are Lomb, Lumb, so that this name has run through the five vowels. Joynt is an Irish Huguenot name, Fr. Lejoint, from the OF. joint, graceful, slim, etc.

Skull, Scull, is a Norse personal name [Ralph f. Scule, Close R.]. It means fox or the evil one. Face is aphetic for Boniface [Face le Ferrun, Pipe R.] and Pate is for Patrick. I have found no trace among modern surnames of Alexander Rodipat (Pat. R.) or Adam Rudipol (Fine R.). The simple Poll is for Paul, OF. Pol; cf. Pollett, Polson. From noll, used both for head and nape of the neck, we have Hartnoll, common in Devon—

"If oon hadde be hard nollid, wondur if he hadde be giltles" (Wyc. Ecclesiasticus, xvi. 11).

Forehead, Forrett is a true nickname [Roger Forheved, Close R.] and "brow" may appear in the compound Whybrow [Whitebrow the plasterer, F. of Y.]. The simple Brow is local, at the "brow" of the hill [Richard atte Bro, Pat. R.], though I find also Richard Surcil

(Fine R.). Oxbrow, in spite of the Swedish Oxenstiern, is probably from Oxborough (Norf.), Spreadbrow from Sprotborough (Yorks), Albrow from Alburgh, Albury, Aldeburgh, etc., and Blackbrow from Blakeborough (Lanc.), though it would be a very natural nickname.

Hair is imitative for the nickname Hare [Philip le Hare, Pat. R.] and Hairlock is for Harlock, a variant of Horlock (hoar), often spelt Horlick. Other compounds of -lock are Blacklock, Blakelock, Whitlock, Blaylock, Blellock, from the obsolete blae, blay, an adjective probably meaning ash coloured, Proudlock [Thomas Purdelok, Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-79], Silverlock, Gowanlock [Robert Guldelok, Pat. R.]; but the suffix in these names may sometimes be -lake, which often becomes -lock, as in Fishlock. The commonest of these compounds, Whitlock, has three well-attested origins —(1) white lock, (2) white lake [Williame atte Whytelak, Kirby's Quest, 1327, (3) the personal name Witlac, which occurs in DB. [Whitlac de Longo Vado, Fine R.]. Whitelark is an imitative spelling of one of these. We have compounds of -hair itself in Fairer. Farrar 2 [John Fayerher, Pat. R.], and in Harliss, the hairless, while Polyblank is of course Fr. poil blanc. white hair. To return to -lock, we have the puzzling Lovelock, which the NED, does not find as a common noun till 1592. This is not an insuperable objection, as I have frequently found words used as surnames three or four centuries earlier than their first dictionary record; but it would perhaps be safer to regard John Lovelok (Pleas) and Walter Loveloker (Hund. R.) as belonging to the ME. lovelich, lovely, affectionate, of which the variant lovelok occurs in Piers Plowman. In fact, the name, which is fairly common in some parts of England, may have an alternative origin from ME. lovelaik, dalliance [John Lovelayk, Fine R.]; cf. Laker (p. 122). Tress is short for Tristram. Redmayne is local, of Redmain (Lanc.), a place which is the usual origin of Redman, though this is no doubt also a nickname. Curll and Crist. Cripts both mean curly in Middle English, but Curley is also a bird nickname, the curlew [Richard Curlue,  $I \not > M$ .], found more rarely as Kirlew. Absence of hair has given the native Bald, generally reduced to Ball, and the augmentative Ballard, From Old French come Chaffe, Chave, Shave, Shafe, Shove, Shovel, Cavell, Caffyn, Coffin, and sometimes even Cave. Two examples must suffice [Bartholomew le Chauf, Pat. R., John Cauvel, Pat. R.]. With these cf. Favell, tawny [Hugh Falvel, Pipe R., Thomas Fauvel, Fine R.], and Flavell, yellow-haired. A pretty name, which may refer to the hair or the complexion, is Nutbrown [John Notebroun, Close R.], with which cf. John Perbroun, i.e. pear brown (ib.).

Nothing in one's appearance attracts the critical attention so readily as the nose, but, though there are many references in the Pipe R. to Moss cum Naso and his wife Duzelina, I do not know a single modern surname <sup>2</sup> derived from this feature, unless the legendary origin of the local Courtenay [Hugh de Courteney, Hund. R.] has a tributary source of truth [William] Curtnies, Pat. R.]. Peter le Noseless (Pat. R.), Agnes Kattesnese (Hund. R.], Adam cum Naso (Leic. Bor. Ree.), and Roger Withenese (ib.) show that this feature did not escape the notice of our ancestors. Cammish, found as le Chammus (Notts, 1272), means flat-nosed, Fr. eamus, but a number of names which appear to belong here, e.g. Cammis, Camis, Keemish, etc., may equally well be local, of Cambois (Northumb.). Beake, Bick are not nose-names, as they occur in Middle English with the definite article [William le Beke, Hund. R., Richard le Byke, Close R.], but I cannot explain them. Mariota Gosebeck (Hund, R.) is a very evident nickname. Cheek, Cheke, is possibly a nickname, but I have no evidence except a ME. Chericheke: cf., however, Fr. Bajoue, baggy cheek.

Eye in isolation is local (p. 125) and Eyett is its dim. But the compounds of the physical -eye are numerous and have not hitherto been recognized as such, e.g. Blackie [Roger Niger Oculus, Cal. Gen.], Blowey, Brightey [John Claroil, Close R.], Brownie, Calvey, Dovey, Whitey, Birdseye, Goosey, Starey (ME. star, starling), Hawkey, Harkey 1 [Geoffrey Hawkseye, Lond. Wills, 1330], Littley [cf. Andreas dictus Parvus Oculus, Pachnio, Silvery, Goldie, Goldney [Richard Geldeneye, Fine R.], Sheepy, Smalley, Wildey. Cf. with these William Sweteve (Hund, R.) and the medieval French names Brun-Eul, Blancus Oculus, Oculus Auri, quoted by Pachnio. German surnames in -auge are also numerous. An alternative origin from -ey, island, is possible for some of the above. Cf. Rowney, at the "rowan island" [Walter atte

Bouch, Buche, Budge, are Anglo-French names. "mouth" [Michael od (with) la Buche, Pat. R.]. For the form Budge cf. budge-at-court, Fr. bouche à cour, free victuals. This surname may sometimes have had an occupative origin, for William del Bouch, laybrother of Furness Abbey (Pat. R.), was evidently employed in the provisioning part of the establishment. The English Mouth is also a modern surname. and Merrymouth is not uncommon in the Rolls [Adam Mirimouth, Pat. R.]. It is interesting to find Henry Millemuth (Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-79) three centuries earlier than the first dictionary record of "mealy mouthed." Muzzle is, I think, an imitative alteration of the nickname Mustell, Mustol, from OF, musteile, mustoile, a weasel [Hugh Mustel, Close R., Custance Mustel, Hund, R.]. I doubt whether Chinn is generally a nickname, though I have known it so used by modern schoolboys. In Simon Chyne (Ramsey Cart.) we have perhaps the shortened form of Chinulf John Chinulf, Worc. Priory Reg.], AS. Coenwulf, bold wolf. Or Chinn may be from chien, a common nickname [John le Chen, Chart. R.], which would readily assume the imitative form, apart from the regular tendency of e to become i before n, as in ink, ME. enke, or the local surname Ind, for "end."

Tongue is, so far as my evidence goes, local, from a "tongue" of land [Benedict del Tunge, Pat. R.], or from one of the places specifically named Tonge, Tong. To the same source belongs Tongs. Gum is a variant of Gomme, ME. gume, a man [Geoffrey le Gom, Coram Rege R. 1297], as in bridegome, now perverted to bridegroom. Whitear and Whittear are variants of Whittier, an occupative name, "white tawer," i.e. a kind of leather-dresser [Walter le Whytetawere, Pat. R.], whence also perhaps Whitehair. Boniface is of course a font-name, Bonifacius, though its use as the landlord's name in Farquhar's Beaux' Stratagem, and its natural fitness of sound, have combined to give it a suggestion of rubicund joviality.

Gargate, Gargett, is from OF. gargate, throat, gullet [Hugh Gargate, Pipe R.], a name earned in the same way as that of the mythical Grandgousier and no doubt present to the mind of the creator of Gargantua. Neck seems to be a true nickname [Isabel Necke, Fine R.] and is found in compounds, e.g. the historical Edith Swanneck, the less-known Agnes Cousdecine, col-de-cygne (Hund, R.), and Simon Chortneke (ib.). Robert Tunekes (Leic. Bor. Rec.) perhaps had what is now called a double chin. The existence of ME. Swanswire suggests that Swire (see p. 80) may also be a physical nickname. Here also may sometimes belong Halse, from ME. halse, neck [John Langhals, Close R.] and also Haddrell, Hatherall [William Haterel, Pat. R.], from ME. hattrel, the nape of the neck (also, the crown of the head), of Old French origin, but differently explained by Cotgrave-

"Hastereau, the throat piece, or fore-part of the neck (belike from the Walloones, by whom a mans throat, or neck, is thus tearmed)." This is a common word in Middle English (see Mr. Mayhew's note in the Prompt. Parv.). It may be noted that the name, with many variants, seems to belong especially to Gloucestershire, while in the adjacent Monmouth we find Hatterell Hill, perhaps so named from its shape.

The fairly common Beard [William cum Barba or od la Barbe, City D.], also spelt Beart, is curiously short of existing compounds, though it has no doubt contributed to Whitbread [Philip Wytberd, Pleas, Peter Whitbred or Whytberd, Coram Rege R. 1297]. Blackbeard and Fairbeard exist, though rare, and in Blackbird, Silverbird, the original suffix is also probably -beard [cf. William Barbedor, Pat. R.]. Thomas Dustiberd (Pat. R.) and Ralph Jolifberd (F. of Y.) are not now represented, nor, unfortunately, Ralph Barbe de Averil or Barba Aprilis, who was chaplain to Hugh Earl of Chester in the twelfth century. We may perhaps assume that he resembled Chaucer's franklin—

"Whit was his berd as is a dayeseye" (A. 332).

The insignificance of the beard in our modern surnames is in curious contrast with the place it occupies in history. The reader will at once think of the Langobards, Bluebeard, Charlemagne "à la barbe fleurie," Sweyn Forkbeard, Barbarossa, Graf Eberhard der Rauschbart, Blackbeard the pirate, etc. The German compounds of -bart are still numerous and fantastic. A possible English example is Massingberd [Richard Massyngberd, Close R., Linc., 1329]. Lower says—

"A very old Lincolnshire family, dating from temp. Henry III. . . . the final syllable clearly having reference to the appendage of the masculine chin. The meaning of the other portion of the name is not so obvious, as no word resembling massing is found in early English or Anglo-Saxon. In some Teutonic dialects, however, that or a similar form means "brass," and hence Massingberd may signify Brazenbeard, with reference to the personal peculiarity. Inf. Rev. F. C. Massingberd, M.A."

This is quite possibly a correct guess. There is an ON. messing, brass, still used in German, and found in Anglo-Saxon as mæsling, mæslen, while Lincolnshire is of course a chief habitat of Norse words.

Whisker is merely an imitative spelling of the personal name Wiscard [Wischard Leidet, Pipe R.], represented by Fr. Guiscard and Scottish Wishart, but OF. gernon, moustache, whiskers, has given us Garnon, Garnham [Adam as Gernons, Pipe R., William Bought, called Gernon, City D., William Blancgernun, Pat. R.]. Harold's scouts took the shaven Normans for priests until the king enlightened them—

"' N'ont mie barbes ne guernons,' Co dist Heraut, 'com nos avons'" (Roman de Rou, 7133).

In Grennan we have the Old French form grenon. ON. barthr, bard, has also contributed to Barrett, and the same feature is incorporated in Skegg, though both reached England as personal names rather than nicknames. Sweyn Forkbeard is recorded in the AS. Chronicle as Svein Tjuguskegg.

The rest of the human form divine will give us less trouble, as nicknames fasten most readily on visible parts and facial characteristics. Shoulders is an existing, though uncommon, surname [Hugh Schulder, Coram Rege R. 1297]. ME. wambe, belly (cf. Scott's Wamba), a common name in the Middle Ages [Matthew a le Wambe, Leic. Bor. Rec.], still survives in Whitwam or

Whitwham 1; and Whalebelly is a well-known Norfolk surname. Cf. Walter Alipanch (Hund. R.) and Sancho Panza. Back is probably not anatomical, though Petrus ad Dorsum is found in Old French, as it has three other well-authenticated origins: (1) local [John atte Back, Bardsley, 1327], (2) baptismal [Backa solus, Lib. Vit.], an Old French name of Germanic origin, whence also Bacon; (3) ME. bakke, bat (p. 24). It is, however, strange that we find no compounds of -back, corresponding to such medieval names as Cattesbak and Longueeschine or OF. Maigredos. Thornback is no doubt from the fish.

Side exists as a surname, but is local [William del Syde, F. of Y.], the word being used either of the edge of a wood, the side of a hill, or the bank of a river, in all of which senses it is common in compound surnames, e.g. Akenside (oak), Burnside, Greensides. In Halfside the first element perhaps means half-way. Tinside is of course for Tyne-side, as Tinnett is for Tynehead [Richard del Tyndiheved, Lanc. Ing. 1310-33]. Shipsides is probably from a pasture (sheep). But undoubted nicknames are Heaviside, Ironside, and Whiteside [Robert Whytside, Fine R.], the last being also local [Richard de Whiteside, Close R.]. In my Romance of Names (p. 126) I have suggested that Handyside, Hendyside, may represent ME. hende side, gracious custom, but the variant Handasyde suggests a possible nickname of attitude, "hand at side," for a man fond of standing with arms akimbo; cf. Guillelmus Escu - à - Col

(Pachnio). The formation of Strongitharm is somewhat similar. Silverside is local, from a spot in the Lake Country [John de Sylversyd, Preston Guild R. 1397, Bardsley]. Hardrib seems to be a nickname, as also Broadribb, Brodribb, the latter no doubt sometimes corrupted, as Bardsley suggests, from Bawdrip (Som.). Rump is a common name in Norfolk, and there are plenty of early examples from East Anglia [Robert Rumpe, Ramsey Cart., Roger Rompe, Pat. R., Suff., Casse Rumpe, Hund. R., Camb.]. It is probably short for Rumbold or some other personal name in Rum-, noble. Heintze derives the corresponding German Rumpf in the same way. But Fessey seems to represent Fr. fessu, explained by Cotgrave as "great buttockt." Richard le Fessu was butler to Edward II. (Pat. R.), and the change of form is normal; cf. the vulgar pronunciation of nephew. value-

"In short, I firmly du believe
In Humbug generally,
Fer it's a thing that I perceive
To hev a solid vally" (Russell Lowell, The Pious Editor's Creed).

Hand, Hands, may be explained as rimed on Rand, Rands (Randolph), as Hob is on Robert and Hick on Richard, but nickname origin is also certain [Robert Asmains, Close R., Ralph cum Manibus, ib.]. Whitehand exists, and Balmain means fair hand [John Belemeyns, Pat. R.]. To the same origin must be sometimes ascribed Main, Mayne. Cf. Fist (p. 127). Quatermain, Quarterman, is also a nickname [Herbert Quatremains, Fine R.]; cf. William Quaterpe (Pat. R.). The arm appears only in compounds [Armstrong, Strongi-tharm], but we have, through French, Firebrace, Fairbrass, Farbrace [Stephen Ferebraz, City A.], and Bradfer [Matthew Brazdefer, Ramsey Cart.]. This last has also given Bradford, just as Pettifer has sometimes become Pettiford. Is Stallibrass [William Stalipres, Pipe R.] a hybrid imitation of these with steel as its first component? Such hybrids occur, e.g. the medieval name Maynstrang, a compromise between "hand strong" and "main forte."

The common surname Legg is both baptismal and local [Nicholas f. Legge, Fine R., Pagan de la Leg, Kirby's Quest, 1327]. In the first case it is short for Ledger, Legard [Leggard de Aula, Hund, R.], AS. Leodgær or Leodgeard; in the second it is an archaic spelling of Leigh, Lea, a meadow. Here also belong Barleggs, barley meadows, and Whitelegg [Richard de Whiteleg, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285], though Henry Whitshonk (Lanc. Court R. 1323-4) suggests an alternative origin for the second. It is possible that there may have been a later formation from the "leg" used as a hosier's sign, but for this I have found no evidence. Leg, being a Norse word, may occur in the compound Sprackling, corruptly Spratling [Gervase f. Sprakeling, Feet of Fines, which Björkman identifies with the Old Norse nickname Sprakaleggr, of the creaking legs; cf. Ger. Knackfuss. In Middle English the native shank seems to have been preferred in descriptive epithets [Walter Schanke, Pipe R.], hence Shanks, Crookshanks or Cruickshank, Sheepshanks, and the less common Ettershank, from dial, edder, etter, a thin rod used in fence making—

We also find compounds of jambe, e.g. Foljambe, Fulljames [Thomas Folejambe, Hund R.], while the still commoner Bellejambe [Adam Belejambe, Pat. R.] has been transformed into Belgian. Knee may refer to some geographical feature, like Ger. Knie, which Heintze derives from the same word used of a nook in a wood, but it may also come from Knaith (Linc.), spelt Kneye in the Fine R.; cf. Smee for Smeeth (p. 77). Kneebone, being a Cornish name, is best left alone. Shinn, Shine appears to be a personal name, occurring chiefly on the Welsh border, and hence probably Keltic. It may even be a thinned form (p. 130, n.) of Shone,1 Welsh for John. For Foot cf. Gregory cum Pede (Leic. Bor. Rec.) and Jean Aupie, Andreas ad Pedem (Pachnio). This has several compounds, Barfoot or Burfoot, Broadfoot, Lightfoot [Lyghtefote Nuncius, in the Towneley Play of Casar Augustus], Longfoot, Proudfoot, Whitefoot (cf. Blampied, Blampey), Crowfoot, Grayfoot (gray, a badger), Pauncefote, Puddifoot. The last, also found as Puddephatt, Puttifoot, etc., is well attested as a nickname in Middle English, and belongs to a dial, adjective meaning thick or stumpy. Cf. Richard Pudito (Hund. R.), John Podipol (ib.), John Podihog (Lanc. Court R. 1323-4)—

"He had club feet, and . . . his nickname Poddy came from this peculiarity of his walk" (H. Armitage, Sorrelsykes).

Puddifant, Puttifent means "chubby child" (see p. 247), unless it is merely a corruption of Buttivant (p. 256, n.). The obsolete, or apparently obsolete, compounds of -foot are very numerous (see p. 144). With Pettifer, i.e. pied de fer, cf. John Stelfot (City C.), Ralph Irenfot (Pat. R.), and with Pettigrew, pied de grue, cf.

With this cf. Cornish Chown [John Chone, Closs R., Cornwall].

Ger. Krancfuss. Heels generally belongs to AS. healh, a local term of doubtful meaning (see p. 62). But I have found Larkehele as a medieval name and also John dictus Talun (Archbp. Giffard's Reg. 1266-79). In the latter example talon may have its later meaning of claw rather than heel, but it is much older than any instance of talon, claw, in the NED. Anyhow, it is possibly the origin of Tallents. Toe, Toes, are local (p. 50), but Prictoe is apparently a nickname from some physical peculiarity.

Among internal organs we have Heart, Lung, Kidney, Giblett. The first, generally for the animal nickname Hart, may sometimes be genuine; cf. Richard Quoer (Hund. R.) and Fr. Cœur; but Lung is a variant of Long [Geoffrey le Lung, Hund. R.], Kidney is an Irish name, and Giblett is a dim. of Gilbert. With Goodhart, Goodheart we may compare Bunker [William Boncuor, Fine R., Robert Finquoyr, Hund. R.]. Hartfree has a suggestion of the Restoration dramatists. but is probably AS. Heardfrith. Bowell is a variant of Powell, Welsh ab Howel [Strael Aboel, Fine R., Glouc.], and Bowles is local, of Bouelles (Seine-Inf.) [Hugh de Boeles, Fine R.]. Brain, found chiefly on the Welsh border, is a Keltic name; cf. Macbrain. Blood is a Welsh patronymic, ab Lloyd, which became Blood, Bloyd, Blud just as the simplex gave Flood, Floyd, Flud. The compounds Wildblood, Youngblood are temperamental rather than physical. They are perhaps really compounds of blood in its figurative sense of offspring, person 1-

Cf. the more modern "young blood," "wild young blood," used of a buck or gay spark.

Bone is usually for Fr. le bon, but both Bones and Baines 1 may be taken literally [Simon Baynes, Fine R., Muriel Bones, Chart. R.]. Compounds are Longbones, Langbain, 2 Cockbain, Smallbones, Rawbone, the obsolete Sorebones, and the existing Hollebon, Hollobone, hollow bone, 3 corresponding exactly to Ger. Holbein [Arnoldus dictus Holbein, 13th century, Heintze]. Collarbone is an imitative spelling of Colbourne, Allbones is from Alban, and Rathbone is, I think, local, from Radbourne (Derb.). It is a Cheshire name. Lower gives Skin as a surname. I have not met with it, but Purple may mean "clear skin," OF. pure pel [Roger Purpel, Pat. R.]. Earskin is of course for the local Erskine. Tear is for the Gaelic MacTear, son of the carpenter.

Here are a few more, apparently obsolete, nicknames of this class. Although many of them are French in form, they all occur in England in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Probably some of them still exist: Barheved (one origin of Barrett), Brokinheved, Flaxennehed, Hevyheved, Hundesheved, Kenidheyd (kennet, a small hound), Sleghtheved, Wysheved, Todheved (tod, a fox), Visdelu (wolf's face), Visdechat, Clenebodi, Hendibodi, Oyldebuf (wil de bwuf), Grasenleol (gras en l'wil), Fatteneye, Mauregard or Maure-ward, Scutelmuth, Swetemouth, Widmuth, Dogmow, Belebuche, Quatrebuches, Treynez (three noses), Sharpberd, Stykberd, Tauntefer (dent de fer), Auburnhor, Yalowehair, Blanchpeil (poil), Rugepeil, Beaupel, Curpel (court), Blakneyk, Longecoo (cou), Longto, Irento, Clenhond, Lefthand, Blanchemains, Malemayns, Tortemayns, Mainwrench (twisted?), Beaubras, Forbraz. Bukfot. Bulfot. Coufot. Doggefot. Gildenefot. Gosefot, Harefot, Hundesfot, Kaifot (kye, cow), Playfot (splay?), Sikelfot, Sorefot, Fothot, Pedechen (pied de chien), Pedelever (lièvre), Pettegris (grice, a pig), Pe de Argent, Hautepe, Brounbayn, Crokebayn, Brunecoste (now Bronkhurst?), Querdebeof (cœur), Corndebeof, Cormaleyn (cœur malin), Curmegen (cœur méchant?), Catteskyn, Sancmedlé, Slytwombe, Richwombe (cf. Fr. Richepanse), Pesewombe, Calvestayl, Wytebrech, Smalbehynd, Fayrarmful.

CHAPTER VII

COSTUME NICKNAMES

"'Sir,' said Mr. Tupman, his face suffused with a crimson glow, this is an insult.' 'Sir,' replied Mr. Pickwick in the same tone, it is not half the insult to you that your appearance in my presence in a green velvet jacket with a two-inch tail would be to me'" (Pickwick).

HAVING examined man anatomically, we will now make a detailed exploration of his costume in peace and war. When a small boy assumes his first topper, he knows he must steel his heart against the salutation "Ullo, 'at,'' with which members of the outspoken classes will greet him, and a provincial tragedian, impersonating a picturesque brigand, has been encouraged from the gallery with "Go it, boots!" The Middle Ages were equally attentive to the conspicuous in costume and there is scarcely an article of attire 1 or an adjunct of equipment which has not given a surname, either in isolation, Hatt, Hood, or accompanied by an adjective, Curthose, Hardstaff. It need hardly be said that many names of this type have an alternative shop-sign origin [Thomas del Hat, Hund, R.]. The Tabard will occur at once to everyone, and Crowne is another obvious case. As an example of the way in which names have been taken from garments we may take the extreme case of Coverlid. It would seem incredible that anyone should be nicknamed from a counterpane or quilt, if we had not as evidence Matilda Cooptoria (Hund. R.)—

"Hoc coopertorium, a coverlyd" (Voc.).

From the head-gear we get Hatt, Capp [Alward Capp, Pipe R.], Hood, Capron (Fr. chaperon), and the obsolete Capoce [Nicholas Capoce, Pat. R.]—

"Capuchon, a capuche; a monk's cowle or hood" (Cotg.).

The Middle English compounds of Hood seem to have been absorbed by those of Head (p. 129). Cowl, Cowell, is usually a Manx name (see p. 319, n. 1), but may sometimes belong here. Toye is a dial. word for a closefitting cap [Warin Toy, Hund. R.]. It now belongs to the north and is used several times by Scott. Feather may be an alteration of Father, once much commoner as a surname than now; cf. Pennyfeather for Pennefather, a miser [Justinian Panyfader, Archbp. Peckham's Let. 1279–92]. But John Fether (Bp. Kellawe's Reg. 1334) points to literal interpretation. Bonnett is generally of French origin, a derivative of bon (see p. 289). Among the many sources of Barrett must probably be reckoned OF. barrette, a biretta, so common in the expression "parler à la barrette"—

This word, which has given a French surname, may be responsible for Walter dictus Baret (Archbp. Giffard's Reg. 1266-79), but this may be the OF. and ME. barat, guile, contention, etc., whence also Barter—

"Baratowre, pungnax (sic), rixosus" (Prompt. Parv.).

To costume also occasionally belongs Chappell, OF. chapel (chapeau). The hatter is generally "le chaplier" in the Rolls, whence Shapler. With the Sussex name Quaife, from a Norman form of coif [Andrew Coyfe, Pat. R.], cf. Lucy la Queyfer, i.e. the coif-maker (ib.). Kercher, Kurcher, Kerchey, are from kerchief in its original sense, couvre-chef—

"With this kerchere I kure thi face" (Coventry Mysteries).

Neck-wear seems to be recorded in Collar, Ruff, Scarf, and Partlett, but none of these are genuine. Collar is an imitative spelling of Collicr, a charcoal-burner. The ruff came after the surname period <sup>2</sup> and Ruff is simply a phonetic spelling of Rough; cf. Tuff for Tough [Nicholas le Toghe, Hund. R.]. Ruffell, Ruffles, I take to be local, at the "rough heal"; see p. 61, and cf. Roughley, Roughsedge. Scarf is an Old Norse word, still used in the Orkneys for the cormorant or shag, and made into a personal name in

England [Hugh Scarf, piscator, F. of Y., Henry Scharf, Hund. R., Linc.]. A kind of ruff worn in Tudor times was called a partlet, perhaps from the name of Dame Partlet the hen in the Romance of Renard, but the surname must go back to the latter.

Coate has got hopelessly mixed up with cote, cott, a dwelling, but we may assume that so common a word must have contributed to the ubiquitous Coates, while the existence of the Middle English nickname Turnecotel points to a dim, of the word as one origin of Cottle, Cuttle. Medlicott for "medley coat," i.e. motley, seems to be certified by Peter Miparty (Fine R.), Fr. mi-parti corresponding exactly to "motley"; but Bodycoat is an imitative spelling of Bodicote (Oxf.) Altogether this garment is rather disappointing, though there are probably some names in -cote, -cott, to which it has contributed. Lower gives Gaicote, a name I have not met with. Mantell is as old as the Conquest [Tustin Mantel, DB.]. Freemantle is a place in Hants where Henry II. built a great castle. It is constantly referred to in the Pipe R. as Frigidum Mantellum, though I do not know the origin of the name. But the existence of the opposite chaud-manteau [Alice Caumantel, IpM.] suggests that Freemantle, formerly Freitmantel, may also be a nickname. Pilch is etymologically a "pelisse," or fur cloak-

" Pylch, pellicium, pellicia" (Prompt. Parv.).

Tippett is a dim of the favourite Theobald (p. 40), or may come straight from Fr. Thibaut. With the historic Curtmantle cf. William Curtepy (Pat. R.), who wore a short pea-jacket—

"Ful thredbare was his overeste courtepy" (Chauc. A. 290).

OF. gonelle, a dim. of gown, is one origin of Gunnell. Geoffrey Grisegonelle was a Count of Anjou. William Sanzgunele ( $Pipe\ R$ .) belongs to an interesting type of name which, though not confined to the costume group, may be conveniently mentioned here. Existing names of this class are Bookless, Careless, corrupted to Carloss [cf. Robert Soroweles, Lond. Wills, 1319], Faultless [John Saunfaille, City D.], Hoodless, Landless, Lawless, Loveless, Peerless or Pearless, Lockless (cf. Harliss), Reckless or Reatchlous, all of which are obvious and to be taken literally. They can be authenticated from the Rolls and by foreign parallels, e.g. Fr. Sansterre (Landless or Lackland), Ger. Ohnesorg (Careless), etc. Wanless, sometimes perverted to Wanlace, Wanlass, Wandloss, is ME. wanles, hopeless, luckless. Fairless is explained by Lower as a contraction of "fatherless" [William Faderles, Rievaulx Cart.], but perhaps comes rather from ME, tere, companion, equal, commonly coupled with peer in the expression "without feer or peer." It might even be for "fearless." Artless is an alteration of Arkless (p. 215), Rugless is for Ruggles, AS. Hrocwulf, rook wolf [William Roculf, Pat. R.], Nickless may be for Nicholas, or for "neckless" [Simon Nekeles, Hund. R.], and Sharpless is for the local Sharples (Lanc.). Makeless, the matchless, does not seem to have survived [Gilbert Makeleys, Leic. Bor.

Rec.], unless it is the origin of Maclise. Thewlis, Thewless in modern dial, means sluggish, easy-going—

"He was a quiet, thewless, pleasantly conforming man" (Crockett).

Cf. the obsolete John Blodles (Hund. R.), Peter le Noselese (Pat. R.), William Tothelesse (Lanc. Court R. 1323-4), Thomas Berdless (Leic. Bor. Rec.); see also Harliss (p. 131). To the same group belong Santer [John Sansterre, Hund. R.] and possibly sometimes Sansom; cf. Fr. Sanselme, OF. sans-healme, helmetless.

To return to garments, we have Cloake [Alicia Clok, Yorks Knights' Fces, 1303], Jack, Jackett, and Doublett. Jack and Jackett are of course usually baptismal, the ultimate origin being the same in any case. With Doublett cf. Alexander Purpoynt (Stow, 1373)—

"Pourpoynt, a doublet" (Cotg.).

Jestico looks like a perversion of Fr. justaucorps, corrupted forms of which were common in Scotland—

"It's a sight fer sair een to see a gold-laced jeisticor in the Ha' garden" (Rob Roy, ch. vi.).

Wimplewas a surname as late as the eighteenthcentury, so probably still exists, and "le Wimpler" is a very common entry in the Rolls. Cape and Cope are both sometimes from garments; cf. Guillaume a la Chape (Pachnio) and Henry Scapelory, i.e. scapulary (Annal. Monast.)—

"Chappe, a churchmans cope; also a judges hood" (Cotg.)—

but I fear that Waistcoat and Weskett must be regarded as corruptions of the local Westcott. Taber is for tabard [John Tabard, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4], and of course has been confused with Tabor (p. 175). It was not necessarily a herald's dress, for it was worn by Chaucer's Plowman—

"In a tabard he rood upon a mere" (A. 541).

Similarly Surplice is derived from the name of a garment not originally limited to ecclesiastical use. We are told that Absalom the clerk wore a kirtle of light watchet—

"And therupon he hadde a gay surplys" (Chauc. A. 3323).

Slavin [Robert Sclavyn, Fine R.] is from the name of a kind of cloak often mentioned in Middle English—

"His slaveyn was of the old schappe" (Richard the Redeless, iii. 236).

It is supposed to have been a Slavonian garment and is explained by Cotgrave (s.v. esclavine) as a seaman's gown. Overall is local, the first element being ME. over, river bank, while the second may be "hall" or "heal" (p. 61). The sleeve seems to have survived only in Gildersleeve [Roger Gyldenesleve, Hund. R.]; cf. William Grenescleve (Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285) and Roger sine Manica (Feet of Fines). We do not seem to have any name derived from the glove, except the dim. Gauntlett, though Pachnio has Robert aus Ganz and others. Mitten seems to be a genuine nickname [Roger Mitayn, Pat. R.].

Belt has a compound Broadbelt [John Bradbelt, Pat. R.], chiefly found in the same county (Chesh.) as Bracegirdle. The first element of the latter is dubious, breeks or breast?—

It gave the name of a trade [William Brigerdler, City B.]. With the above names cf. Adam Whitbelt (Pat. R.) and Henry Fairgirdle (Leic. Bor. Rec.). The obsolete name Tutegurdel suggests a very full habit of body. Buckle is generally local [Alexander de Boukhill, Fine R.], and Hornbuckle is perhaps, as suggested by Bardsley, a corruption of Arbuckle, which, in its turn, is for the local Harbottle (Northumb.). In Yorkshire this is also found as Hardbattle. Hose 1 (cf. Raoul aus Heuses, Pachnio) has interchanged with House [Nicholas de la Hose, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285], and the latter has generally prevailed. Thus Shorthouse 2 is commoner than the original Shorthose [John Shorthose, Lanc, Ass. R. 1176-1285], Whitehouse has absorbed not only Whitehose [Galiot Wythose, Pat. R.], but also Whitehause, i.e. white-neck, which occurs in F, of Y... and Whitehorse, perhaps an innkeeper's name [Robert Whithors, Pat. R.]. The fairly common ME. Curthose [Robert Curthose, Hund, R.] is now almost lost in Curtis, generally from le curteis, the courteous. The intermediate form appears as Curthoys. Gaiter, found also as Gater, Gayter, Gaytor, Geator, is either OF. gaiteor, a watchman, or an archaic and dialect form of Goater [Michael le Gevtere, Hund, R.], Probably both origins are represented—

"Custodes qui vocantur Gategeters" (Nott. Bor. Rec. 1279).

Stockings is local, at the stumps or forest clearing [Edmund del Stocking, Hund. R., John atte Stocken, Cust. Battle Abbey, 1283-1312]. Boot, like Fr. Bout, is a dim. of some Teutonic name in Bod-, command, and Button, Fr. Bouton, is a derivative. In spite of Caligula, I doubt whether Boot is ever a costume name. The apparently parallel cases of Startup and Buskin can be explained differently. A startup was a rough country boot or high-low (see NED. and Nares)—

"Payre of startoppes, houssettes" (Palsg.);

but the word is formed in the same way as the surname, from "start up" [William Stirtup, Archbp. Gray's Reg. 1225-54]. We now say upstart, but cf.—

"That young startup hath all the glory of my overthrow" (Much Ado, i. 3).

Buskin is merely a metathesis of buckskin, which may have been applied to various garments [Richard de Gravde called Bokskyn, City D., Peter Buckskyn, Fine R., Walter Buskyn, ib., Martin Peildecerf, Pat. R.]. It may even have been a nickname from the quality of the human cuticle. There is, however, nothing to prevent Messrs. Startup and Buskin from having been nicknamed from their style of footgear; cf. Robert Heghscho (F. of Y.). Slipper is occupative, the swordsharpener; see NED., s.v. swordslyper. Clapshoe is a variant of the local Clapshaw, apparently the haw, or perhaps shaw, of Clapp, AS. Clapa.

<sup>1</sup> This is the origin of the common noun buskin. The NED. quotes (c. 1490), "My Lord paid to his cordwaner (shoemaker) for a payr bucskyns xviiid." The continental words suggested by the NED. for our buskin (first record, 1503) have no connection with the English word.

There is a large group of colour nicknames which may also be referred to costume. Even Black, White, Grey, Brown, may occasionally belong here, but though I have come across thousands of medieval Greens. they have all been local, "attegrene," "de la grene." Still, cf. Fr. Levert and Ger. Grün. Blankett. Blewitt or Bluett, Blunkett, Plunkett, Russett, Scarlett, are all used, in Middle English, not only of colours, but of certain materials usually made in those colours; in fact scarlet as a material is older than the same word applied to a colour. Bissell, Bissett are formed similarly from F. bis, dingy, and Violett [Violetus solus, Pipe R.] must surely belong to costume. With these names, which are abundantly exemplified in the Rolls and exist also in French, go Burrell, Borrell, homespun, and hence, figuratively, simple, uneducated, and Ray, a striped cloth often mentioned in Middle English-

"When men with honest ray could holde them self content" (Barclay, Ship of Fools, 8).

Lambswool also appears to describe costume, and Woolward, Woollard must sometimes represent ME. wulleward, clothed in wool—

"Faste, and go wolwarde, and wake, And thole hardnes for Goddes sake"

are supported as nicknames by Giles Machue (Pat. R.), a Norman form of Fr. massue, a club. With Staff cf. Tipstaff, given by Lower as a surname, from 'tipped staff,' and the more familiar compounds Blackstaff, Hardstaff [cf. Adam Toghstaf, Pat. R.], Longstaff. Baston [Thomas Bastun, Pat. R.] is of similar origin—

"Baston, a staff, club, or cowlstaff. But in our statutes it signifies one of the Warden of the Fleets servants or officers, who attends the kings Court with a red staff, for taking such to ward as are committed by the Court" (Blount).

Trounson is for truncheon [Robert Trunchun, Hund. R.], but Blackrod, Whiterod, Greenrod, Grinrod, Bushrod, are local, the second element being royd, a northern word for a clearing [Adam de Blackrod, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285], and Wand is probably an alteration of the nickname Want, meaning mole.

In the case of names of this type, we must also consider the possibility of a grotesque physical resemblance being suggested. One has heard of a tall lady being described as a "maypole." Leschallas, the vine-prop, is a common French surname, and Vinestock is found in England. Gadd comes from dial. gad, a long tapering stick, used figuratively of a lanky person [Joseph le Gad, Pat. R.]. In one of Maupassant's stories there is a bony forester called Nicholas Pichon dit L'Échasse, with whom we may compare Robert Stilt (Ramsey Cart.)—

" Eschasses, stilts, or scatches to go on " (Cotg.).

This seems to be the natural explanation of the German name Tischbein (table-leg). Clubb was used for a rustic bumpkin [Geoffrey Clubbe, Leic. Bor. Rec.]. while "bumpkin" itself is possibly from the Dutch for a tree-stump. Block, Blogg, is no doubt to be explained in the same way [Benedict Blok, Exch. R.]— "Ye are suche a calfe, suche an asse, such a blocke" (Ralph Royster-Doyster, iii. 3).

With this group of names goes Whipp, a nickname for a carter [Allan Wyppe, Hund. R., Roger Wyppe, Archbp. Romeyn's Reg. 1286-96]; cf. William Whippestele, i.e. whiphandle (Pat. R.). Purse, Pouch, Pockett, Satchell are also to be taken literally, and Bernard Pouch, collector of customs 2 at Sandwich in the early fourteenth century (Fine R.), suggests to us how such names may have been acquired; cf. William Baglite, i.e. little bag (Pat. R.). But Wallett, so far as my evidence goes, is an alteration of valet, a servant [Robert le Vallet or le Wallet, Close R.]. It is also local, for Wallhead (see p. 128). Porteous in Middle English means a breviary, but as the name (also Porteas, Portas, etc.) is essentially Scottish, it may come from the special use of the same word in Scottish law—

"Porteous . . . signifies ane catalogue, contenand the names of the persones indited to the justiceair, quhilk is given and delivered be the justice clerke to the crowner" (Skene).

Budgett, Bowgett, probably belongs to AS. Burgheard, usually Buchard in Middle English; hence also Buckett. Trussell is doubtful, although Trousseau, a pack, is a common French surname. Troussel is frequently found in the Rolls, but it may be identical with the bird nickname Throssell, Thrussell. Bundle is probably local, of Bunhill, and Pack is one of the many forms of the great Easter name Pascal [John f. Pake, Hund. R.].

Coming to purely ornamental adjuncts we have Ring [Robert Ring, Hund, R.] and Goldring [Richard] Goldring, Yorks Knights' Fees, 1303]. Ribbans, a Norfolk name, is no doubt the Flemish Rubens, which is a Frisian derivative of Rupert, Robert. Here also we may put the precious metals, Gold, Silver, Argent. Gold is usually a shortened form of one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Gold (p. 45); but it is also a nickname [John dictus Gold, Archbp. Peckham's Let. 1279-92, Thomas withe Gold, Pat. R.]. With the second example I should connect Wiegold; cf. Wyberd 2 (with the beard?). Purgold occurs in Blomefield's History of Norfolk as Puregold. Golden, Goulden, usually for the patronymic Golding, is also decorative [Henry le Guldene, Pat. R.]. Both this name and Fr. Doré were perhaps due to the colour of the hair. Silver may in some cases be reduced from the occupative "silverer" [William Sylvereour, F. of Y. 1416], but it is of quite common occurrence as an epithet, and Argent is a well-established name in both English and French. Jewell, found also as Joel, Joule, Joll, Jull, is a personal name of Old French origin [Judhel de Totenais, DB.]. It is found earlier as Judikel, and I fancy it springs from a metathesis of ON. Joketel, whence also Jekyll, Jickles, Giggle,3 and many other variants. The common surname Diamond is no doubt as a rule altered from Daymond, Dayment, AS. Dægmund, day protection, but Diamanda wife of John Coroner (Lond. Wills, 1348-9) shows that it was used as a fanciful font-name. German has of course many jewel surnames, but they are usually Jewish and of modern adoption. Our Ruby, Rubey is local, of Roubaix [Hubert de Ruby, Cal. Gen.]—

"Le marchant de Ruby ne pouvoit vendre sa marchandise audit pays de Flandres" (Deposition of Bernard de Vignolles, temp. Henry VII.).

Pearl appears to be a nickname from the gem, but I have found no example sufficiently old to be conclusive. Beryl, Berrill, occurs in the Rolls [Walter Beryl, Fine R.], but is probably an imitative form of the name Berald (p. 34), and Jasper is also baptismal, Fr. Gaspard, the name of one of the three Wise Men from the East; it has also given Gasper. Finally, Rainbow, usually an imitative spelling of OF. Reimbaud, corresponding to AS. Regenbeald, may also have been a nickname for a man who loved bright colours, for we have the parallel case of the Minnesinger Regenbogen, still a German surname.

Having considered man in his civil attire, let us now examine him when armed for battle. Armour is for the occupative "armourer," and has preserved the article in Larmor, Larmour [Manekyn Larmurer, City E.]. Harness is baptismal [Robert f. Hernis, Hund, R.], from an aspirated form of the Domesday Ernegis, Erneis, an Anglo-Saxon name in Earn-, eagle, probably Earngisl, eagle hostage. But the existence of Fr. Beauharnais and Ger. Harnisch points also to a nickname, which is confirmed by William Duble Harneys, saddler (City A.). Helm may be short for one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Helm-, such as Helmær, helmet famous, whence Helmers, and is also local (see p. 63); but Basnett is from the basin-shaped helmet which was the usual head defence of the medieval soldier—

"And a brasun basynet on his heed" (Wyc. I Sam. xvii. 5).

Cf. the German names Kesselhut and Ketelhod, the latter being the Low German form (kettle hat). William Salet (Exch. Cal.) took his name from the type of helmet which superseded the bascinet. Caplin, Chaplin, sometimes represent OF, and ME, capeline, a mailed hood [cf. James Cape de Mayle, Pat. R.]. Habershon is from "habergeon" (2 Chron. xxvi. 14), a diminutive of hauberk [Simon Hauberk, Pat. R.]. This name is further corrupted to Habberjan, Habberjam, and Habbijams. The corresponding Ger. Panzer 2 is a fairly common name. This group was once much larger, but as the names for defensive armour became obsolete, the corresponding surnames died out or became corrupted beyond detection. William Wambeis (Fine R.) and Roger Gaumbeis ( $I \phi M$ .) took their names from the gambeson, or wadded doublet, worn under the armour, perhaps the origin of Gamson. William Curbuill (Percy Cart.) wore armour of cuir-

"Hise jambeux were of quyrboilly" (Chauc. B. 2065).

This may survive in Corbally and Garbally. There are plenty of local Actons without invoking the medieval acton or auqueton (Fr. hoqueton) which was also worn under the armour, but the garment was important enough to give its name to a trade [Simon le Actoner, Pat. R.]. Both Shield [Roger Shelde, Pat. R.] and Buckler are sometimes to be included here; but the latter is, of course, generally occupative [George le Bukeler, Pat. R.]. Skew may represent OF. escu [John Escud, Pat. R.], as in Fortescue and Fr. Durescu. Cf. with these names Walter Talevaz (Salisbury Chart.)—

"Talevas, a large, massive, and old-fasioned targuet, having, in the bottome of it a pike, whereby, when need was, it was stuck into the ground" (Cotg.).

Greaves has probably no connection with armour. It has three other well-established origins, viz. grieve, a land steward, ME. græf, a quarry, excavation, and ME. greve, a grove.

Among offensive weapons we have Sword, Sard [Syrich Swerd, Pat. R., William del Espeye, ib.], Spear, Spearpoint, Dagger, Lance; the last is more usually short for Lancelot, but Longuelance, Lancelevee are common medieval names; cf. also Fr. Lalance. Rapier is a variant of Raper, the northern form of the occupative Roper, and Brand, though it means sword, is a personal name (see p. 38). Apparent compounds of -lance, such as Hulance, Roylance, Sandelance, are merely accidental spellings of Hullins, dim. of Hugh, Rylands, Sandilands, both local; cf. pence for "pennies," Simmance for Simmons, Pearce for Piers, etc. Pike may occasionally belong here, and Hallpike is perhaps for "half-pike" (but see p. 51). With Knife cf. Jehan Coutiau (Pachnio). Halbard, Halbert may be a weapon name, but the reader will remember Halbert Glendinning. As Dart is essentially a Devon name, it probably comes from the river 1 Dart. Brownbill, a common Cheshire name, is doubtful. There are no early records, and the oldest occurrence of brownbill in the NED. is 1589. Of Brownsword also I find no earlier example than John Brownswerd, 1561 (Bardsley), Randell Brownsworthe, 1583 (ib.), so that it is impossible to say whether the name is local or represents the weapon. Still, as brown, in the sense of "burnished." is a regular epithet of the sword in Middle English, I am inclined to think that the origin of the name is to be found in the "bonny brown sword" of ballad poetry; cf. Richard Whitswerd (Close R.).

Another name which may belong to this class is Glave, Gleaves, the latter very common in East Anglia. The word gleave, still used in dialect of a fish-spear, is the same as glaive, which in Middle English means both sword and spear and in Old French almost always the latter. In Middle English the word has also the special meaning of a spear set up as the goal of a race and awarded as a prize to the winner, the origin, I suppose, of the name Winspear 1—

"Glayfe wynner, braveta" (Cath. Angl.).

It seems very possible that a nickname could come from this practice, references to which are numerous in Middle English literature. Cf. Prizeman and the origin I have suggested for Popjoy (p. 201). In the same way Arrow may come from the silver arrow awarded to the successful archer [Ralph Arwe, City D.]; cf. the obsolete Sharparrow. "Mangnall's Questions" are not very suggestive of medieval romance, but Robert Mangonell (Fine R.) undoubtedly took his name from the warlike engine with which he was an expert. That Spurr was a spurrier's sign is evident from the fact that Richard le Sporiere (City B.) is also called Richard Sporon (OF. csporon, a spur); cf. Thomas Esperun or Sporun (Pat. R.), whose name now exists as Spearon, Sperring, Spurren. Cockspur was a London name as late as the eighteenth century, and no doubt still exists somewhere.

Of the same type as the names mentioned in this chapter are the following which appear to be obsolete—Whitebelt, Curtwallet, Brounsack, Pilchecurt (court), Ruggebag, Wydhos, Witheskirtes, Curtemanch, Grenehode, Irenpurs, Penipurs, Smalpurs, Halebourse, Redcal, Shortecal (see Caller, p. 119), Losgert, Blankherneis, Straytstirop, Langboue, Longespeye, Curtbrand, Descosu (Fr. décousu, ragged), Smalygurd, a list which could be added to almost indefinitely.

CHAPTER VIII

MISCELLANEOUS ADJUNCT-NAMES

"Oh! quand ce jour-là je parus dans la cour du collège pendant la récréation, quel accueil!

'Pain de sucre! pain de sucre!' s'écrièrent à la fois tous mes camarades'' (ANATOLE FRANCE).

Besides the numerous nicknames derived from a characteristic of physique or dress discussed in chapters vi. and vii., we have a large number of surnames which appear to be taken from tools and implements, household objects of all kinds, articles of food and drink, and even coins and numbers. Many of these are due to the imitative instinct, but the majority are perhaps what they appear to be, and their use as surnames is due to the object in question having got to be regarded in some way as an inseparable adjunct of some individual. In Nelson's time the carpenter was called Chips and the purser Dips, while in Jellicoe's time the torpedo-lieutenant is known as Torps. When Smollett wanted names for three sea-dogs, Trunnion, Hatchway, and Pipes presented themselves naturally. We can imagine in the same way that the names Meteyard, Meatyard, Ellwand, Elrod were conferred upon early drapers who usually had such an implement in hand, or even put it, in the case of their apprentices, to irregular but effective uses. Or the ancestor of the Ellwands may have been long and thin.

Baskett 1 is generally derived from an ancestor who regularly carried, or had charge of, a basket. We have also the surname Maund, from the archaic and dialect maund, a large basket, and it may be assumed that Gilbert del Maunde, serjeant of the almonry of St. Swithin, Winchester (Pat. R.), had charge of the alms-basket; cf. Ernolph del Bracyn (Fr. brassin, a brewing vat), mentioned among the officials of a hospital in the Chart R. Some men were no doubt named after the commodities they dealt in. Everyone remembers that Dobbin's school-name was Figs, a delicate allusion to his father's grocery, and I have known schoolboys with the sobriquets Bricks and Balsam, the reference being in each case to the source of the family opulence. Hence such a name as Hardware, with which cf. Robert Smalware (Pipe R.). The following examples have a strong trade suggestion about them-

Alexander Fresharing, fishmonger

Henry Graspeys (porpoise), fishmonger

John Tupp, carnifex

(city D.)

(F. of Y.)

Nicholas Wastal, cook

William Duble Harneys, saddler

(city A.)

Why people should be named Nail or Horsnail, Horsnell is hard to say, but the fact remains that these names exist and that they mean literally what they appear to mean [Ralph Nayl, Hund. R., William Horsnail, Close R.]. The corresponding Nagel and

Hufnagel 1 are well established in Germany, and French even has Ferdasne (fer d'âne). Equally unaccountable is Trivett, Trevitt [Ralph Trevot, Pat. R.], which is, however, guaranteed by Ger. Dreyfus and Augustine Tripoude [Archbp. Wickwane's Reg. 1279-84], for trivet and tripod are ultimately identical. No doubt some names of this type were sign-names. In the early Rolls this can be plainly seen [Hayn atte Cok, City E., Adam de la Rose, City B.], and, even at a later date, when the preposition has been dropped, the connection is often pretty obvious. Such entries as John Aguillun, i.e. goad (F. of Y.), John Whitehors, taverner (ib.), seem to point to a shop-sign as clearly as Whitebrow the plasterer (ib.) to the outward and visible sign of a calling. One has read of an American dentist who suspended a gigantic gilded tooth before his premises, and, as every tradesman had a sign in medieval England, we may suppose that the name Needle, Neild 2-

"For thee fit weapons were Thy neeld and spindle, not a sword and spear"

(Fairfax, Tasso, xx. 95)— was acquired by a tailor whose emblem was a needle of exaggerated dimensions—

"Moses, merchant tailor, at the needle" (Pasquin's Nightcap).

Ballance is clearly of sign origin, for Ralph Belancer, i.e. scale-maker, who, according to Stow, was sheriff of London in 1316, is called in the French Chronicle of

London Rauf la Balance. Crucifix is no doubt also a sign-name, and in Limmage, for l'image, the article survives. See also Spurr (p. 162). But such clear cases are not numerous, and it is impossible to say whether John Hunypot (Pat. R.) owed his name to the sign of his shop, to rotundity of person, to a mellifluous style of oratory, or was named ironically from a particularly vitriolic vocabulary. Equally mysterious is the origin of John Sadelbowe (Hund. R.), Roger Hayrape <sup>1</sup> (Pat. R.), Robert Butrekyde <sup>2</sup> (Hund. R.), and hundreds of other such names, with which we may compare such German <sup>3</sup> names as Birkenrut (birch rod), Windelband (swaddling clothes), etc.

In this chapter I give a certain number of characteristic names of this class, pointing out as far as possible those that are genuine nicknames and those which most readily admit of an alternative explanation, and leaving it to the reader to decide how such odd names were originally acquired.

Among names which are those of tools and implements we have Auger, Axe, Chisell, Coulter, File, Funnell, Gimblett, Hammer, Hatchett, Last, Lathe,

Mallet, Mattock, Plow, Rake, Shackle, Shuttle, Wimble, Windlass. There are plenty more, but these will suffice as examples. Auger, also Augur, is a personal name identical with Fr. Augier, from OG. Adalgar, and hence a doublet of Alger, Elgar. Axe may be a metathesis of Ask, an archaic form of Ask; cf. the vulgar pronunciation of the verb "ask"; but it may very well go with Dagger, Sword, etc. (p. 160); cf. Robert Axe (Hund. R.), Ebrard Bradex, i.e. broad axe (Pipe R.), and Fr. Hachette. Our Hatchett probably has two origins. It is a normal reduction of Hatchard (p. 33, n.), but its connection with the implement is supported by Robert Coignee (Chart. R.)—

"Coignée, an hatchet, or axe" (Cotg.).

With these cf. Twybell, from the name of a two-edged axe—

"Twybyl, ascia, bisacuta, biceps" (Prompt. Parv.).

"Twyble, an instrument for carpentars, bernago" (Palsg.).

Chisell is local, of Chiswell (Ess.), Coulter is occupative and equivalent to Coltard, Coulthard, etc., the coltherd. File, which occurs regularly in Kent in the company of Fill, has a bewildering number of possible origins. It may be baptismal, for Philip or Felix [Adam f. Fille, Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301–60], or come from ME. file, ellow, still in use in the Artful Dodger's time—

"At this point, the Dodger, with a show of being very particular with a view to proceedings to be had thereafter, desired the jailer to communicate 'the names of them two files as was on the bench'" (Oliver Twist, ch. xliii.).

Most probably of all it is simply Field or Fylde with the -d lost, as in Wiles from the local Wild [Robert de la Wile, Pipe R.]; cf. the Lanc. Files, for Fildes, also Upfill for Upfield, Butterfill, Morfill, etc.

Funnell, a Sussex name, is for Furnell, found in the same county, and this is the very common Fr. Fournel, a dim. of four, an oven, furnace. This somehow suggests Tunnell, which is the AS. Tunweald [Henry Tonild, Pat. R.]. Gimblett is a dim. of Guillaume with metathesis of m and l; in fact, it is a doublet of Wilmot, which shows the same metathesis in Wimlott, Wimblett, Hammer is the Scandinavian hammer of Thor, occurring very commonly in local and personal names. It is also found as Hamar. Captain Hammer commanded the Danish ship which brought to England the bodies of the murdered crew of the E 13. Last would seem to come from a shoemaker's sign, but, if this were the case, we should expect to find it generally diffused, whereas it is purely a Suffolk name. The only clue I have found is John Alast (Hund. R., Linc.), which may be for "at last." Lathe is Middle English for a barn [William de la Leythe, Archbp. Giffard's Reg. 1266-70]. Mallett is the regular reduction of Maillard, a French personal name from OG. Madalhart, but is probably also a dim. of Mal, i.e. Mary; cf. Pallett. Mattock is generally an imitative form of Welsh Madoc, but may in some cases be from the tool. With Reginald Mattock (Coram Rege R. 1297) cf. John Pykoyse (Pat. R.)—

" Picquois, a pickax" (Cotg.).

Pitchfork is a corruption of the local Pitchford (Salop).

Plow was a common inn and shop sign [Roger de la Plow, Pat. R.]—

"Master Nicke, the silkman at the Plow" (Pasquin's Nightcap).

Hence perhaps also Plews, Plues. Rake is more probably local, from a dialect word for a rough path, pasture [Geoffrey del Rakes, Lanc. Ing. 1310-33]. It is more often found as Raikes, whence also Reeks, Rex. Cf. the compound Hollindrake, Hollingrake, from dialect hollin, holly. Shackle is a personal name [Robert Schakel, Coram Rege R. 1297] which appears in some place-names, e.g. Shackleford, Schackleton; but it was perhaps originally a Norse nickname, from ON. skokull, waggon pole, etc. Shuttle is probably also a personal name [Simon Shitel, Pat. R.], from AS. Sceotweald, as in Shuttleworth (but see p. 183). Wimble is for Wimbolt, AS. Winebeald, and Windlass, Windless should probably be added to the -less names on p. 149, for it seems to represent AS. wineleas, friendless; cf. Henry Frendles (Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285). It might, of course, be a phrase-name, "win lass" (see p. 263).

The examples dealt with above mostly illustrate the fact that in names of this type we must always look out for imitative corruption, but in most of them the alternative literal meaning is not excluded. When a name is at all common it usually has more than one origin. For instance, Winch, which might have been put with the above, is derived from Winch (Norf.), from the "winch" of a well or floodgate [Richard Attewynche, Pat. R.], and also from ME. wenche, a young woman, which dropped out of the surname list as the word degenerated in meaning [Philip le Wenche, Fine R., William le Wenche, Pat. R.]. Cf. Maid, Maiden.

A small group of surnames connected with seafaring and the waterside belong rather to occupative names. Such are Barge, Bark, Boat, Catch or Ketch, Galley, Hoy, Shipp, Wherry. These are all genuine, though Shipp is also for "sheep"; and several of them are found among the Freemen of York much earlier than the corresponding entries in the NED. Catch is the earlier form of Ketch [Henry de la Keche, City E.]. Cf. such names as Cart and Wain. It is quite possible that Carratt, Carrett, Carritt, Carrott, all found in Lincolnshire, represent AF. carete [Nicholas de la Carete, Pat. R.] for Fr. charrette, charotte. At the risk of wearisome repetition, one must keep emphasizing the fact that the creation of surnames is due to unchanging human nature, and that their investigation requires common sense. There is nothing more natural than that a man should be nicknamed from the object most closely associated with his daily activity. Just as Gager, Gaiger is from the office of "gauger" [William] le Gaugeour, gauger of wines in England, Ireland and Wales, Fine R.], so Gage was a nickname for an official of the same class [Nicholas Gauge, troner 1 of wools in Lynn, Fine R.].

To consider all the cases in which people have been named from the commodities they dealt in would take up too much space, so a few illustrative examples must suffice. There can be no doubt that surnames were acquired in this way, for we even find the inclusive Chaffer [Henry Chaffar, Pat. R.]— and Marchandy, Marchandise both exist in French. I have found Clothes in Somerset, the home of the surname Clothier, in its older sense of cloth-worker. So also Cords and Ropes [Geoffrey Rope, Pat. R., Richard Cordel, ib.] are probably of trade origin, though they may have been nicknames for that busy medieval official, the hangman. Cordwent is simply "cordwain," i.e. Cordovan leather [Lambert Cordewen, Hund. R.]. With the famous Hogsflesh we can compare Robert Pigesfles (City A.) and Johannes dictus Venesun (Archbp. Romeyn's Reg. 1286–96). The latter name, of which I have found several medieval examples, is no doubt absorbed by Vinson, Vincent.

This brings us naturally to the large number of names connected with foods and drinks, most of which can be accepted as genuine, though it is a moot point how far they are due respectively to the fame of the purveyor or the predilections of the consumer. The odd and homely character of many names of this class is exemplified by Casembrood, the name of a famous Dutch admiral, which has a parallel in Geoffrey <sup>1</sup> In a somewhat ambitious book on surnames published a few years ago we find the astounding statement that "Lord Teynham, being a Roper, must have drawn his family from one who was a 'cord-wainer,' pacing hourly backwards and dealing out the hemp that was being spun and twisted, a monotonous toil from dawn to sunset, unenlightened by a glimpse of the future in which a descendant would wear the six pearls and have as crest a lion rampant bearing a ducal crown." Macaulay's schoolboy could have told the author that a cordwainer's interest in cords is only equalled by his enthusiasm for wains.

Cheseandbrede (Yorks Knights' Fees, 1303). Besides well-known existing compounds of -bread we find in Middle English such names as John Barlibred (Pipe R.), Adam Cokinbred (Leic. Bor. Rec.), Cicely Cromebred (Ramsey Cart.), John Drybred (Hund. R.), John Netpayn (Pat. R.), and William Halibred (Exch. R.), the latter still existing as Hallowbread, Hollowbread. The French compounds of Pain- are equally numerous—

"M. Painlevé, Minister of Instruction and Inventions, returned to Paris to-day from England" (Daily Telegraph, Feb. 25, 1916).

Cf. Isabella Levanbrede (Yorks, 1379). To bread belongs also Bulteel [Agnes Buletel, Hund. R.], connected with OF. buleter (bluter), to bolt, sift—

"Bultel is the refuse of the meal, after it is dressed by the baker" (Blount).

Crust is short for Christian as Trust is for Tristram, and Crumb is local, of Croom [Adam de Crumb, Chart. R.]. Cake, Langcake, Longcake are all existing surnames; Matilda Havercake, i.e. oat-cake, occurs in the Hund. R. and Robert Wytecake in Archbp. Wickwane's Reg. (1279-84); cf. John Foace, of Rouen (Pat. R.)—

" Foüasse, a bunne, or cake, hastily baked" (Cotg.).

Pancoucke, a famous French publisher of the eighteenth century, is simply the Dutch for pancake (pankoek), and our Pancutt is possibly an alteration of the same name. But Honeybun, Hunnybun are variants of the local Honeybourne. Another imitative name is Suet, for Seward, AS. Sæweard [John Suard, Fine R., John Suet, ib.].

It may be also a variant of Crump, a nickname meaning crooked.

But, leaving aside such obvious names as Pudding. Pottage, we will consider a few derived from obsolete words. Brewitt, Browett is OF, and ME, brouet, broth. pottage, the ultimate origin of the Scottish brose [John Brouet, Pat. R.]. Fermidge, Firmage, Furmidge is AF. furmage (fromage), cheese, Haggas, now limited to Scotland, was a common word in Middle English—

"Hakkis, puddyngs, tucetum" (Prompt. Parv.). "Haggas a podyng, caliette de mouton" (Palsg.).

With these cf. John Blaksalt (Pat. R.), Henry Peperwyte (City C.), John Blancbulli, i.e. white broth (Chart. R.), Walter Jussel (Glouc. Cart.)—

" Jussellum, quidam cibus factus ex ovis et lacte, anglice Jussell" (Voc.).

Sharlotte, which we now connect with apples, may be ME. charlet-

" Charlette, dyschmete, pepo" (Prompt. Parv.).

Collop seems a very odd name, but the oldest example I have found [Thomas Colhoppe, Feet of Fines] is identical with the earliest recorded form of the common noun collop. Drink names are less numerous. have Milk [William Mylk, F. of Y.], Beer (generally local, see p. 53), Goodale, Goodbeer, Coolbear, etc., and, in earlier times, William Surmelch (Pipe R.), Robert Rougevyn (Pat. R.), and a host of similar names. We even seem to have general terms for food and drink in Vivers or Veevers, Vittles, and Beveridge. The first I cannot prove—

though it seems a natural nickname for a provision dealer or innkeeper—

"Amongst others, one Mother Mampudding (as they termed her) for many years kept this house, or a great part thereof, for victualling" (Stow)—

but Beveridge is amply attested [William Beverage, IpM., Walter Beverage, Hund. R.]. We may conclude this somewhat prosaic group of surnames with those of two contrasted medieval entertainers, William Coldbord (Lanc. Ass. R. 1176–1285) and Agnes Bonetable <sup>1</sup> (Pipe R.).

Among musical instruments we find Bugle, Drum, Flute, Fidel or Fydell, Harp, Lute, Organ, Pipe, Timbrell, Tabor, and Trump. Not all of these are what they seem, though the fact that Marmaduke Clarionett was living in York in 1559 inclines us to consider their claims favourably. ME. bugle, besides being short for "bugle-horn," meant wild ox—

"Oxe and sheep, and she geet, hert, capret, bugle" (Wyc. Deut. xiv. 5).

It was also the name of a plant, often confused with the bugloss—

" Buglosa, bugle" (Voc.)-

and, as the latter has given a surname, Buglass, our Bugle may go with the plant-names (ch. ix.). There is also a hamlet called Bugle in Cornwall. In the absence of early forms it is impossible to decide. But Bugler, first recorded by the NED. for 1840, can hardly have been a Hornblower. As the name belongs exclusively to Dorset, I guess that it comes from Bugley in that county. Mandlin is an alteration of Maudlin, i.e. Magdalen; cf. Manclark (p. 234). Drum and Drummer are probably both local, the former being a common Scotch and Irish place-name, meaning "ridge," while the latter can easily have been corrupted from one of the innumerable spots beginning with the same syllable. Both drum and drummer are Tudor words in the NED., and I have found no early examples of their surname use. In Middle English the instrument was called "taber" [Richard le Taborer, Pat. R.], whence the occupative Tabrar, Taberer, Tabborah, while Taber, Tabor may be shortened from this—or be simply the name of the instrument used as a nickname for the musician [Suein Tabor, Pipe R.]. Tabrett is also found and Tambourin is a French name.

The existence as surnames of Fidler or Vidler, Flutter, Harper, Luter, Piper, Trumper, all of which are well documented, is in favour of accepting Fidel, Flute, Harp, Lute, Pipe, Trump at their face value, but some of them have an alternative origin. Fidel is sometimes Fr. fidèle, faithful, Flute is rather an imitative form of Flewitt, AS. Flodweald [Fluold solus, Lib. Vit.], and Harp is a sign-name [Florencia atte Harpe, Bardsley, 1327]. Organ is a personal name [Organ Pipard, Testa de Nev.]. It has also become Orgles, by a natural corruption which occurs also in the case of the common noun of the same form—

"Orgles, tymbres, al maner gleo" (NED., 14th cent.).

Pipe is generally local, for a pipe or water-conduit [Thomas atte Pipe, of Bristol, Pat. R.]; cf. Conduct, Cundick. Timbrell may be for Tumbrell, a name given to the official in charge of the tumbrel, an instrument of punishment, the nature and operation of which in early times is uncertain; from sixteenth century usually identified with cucking-stool (NED.). We may suppose that John Tumberel, collector of customs at Haverfordwest (Fine R.), worked this machine in his spare time. Probably Root is sometimes from the rote, the most famous of all medieval instruments [Simon Rote, Hund. R.], and William Sawtrey, the first Lollard martyr, took his name from the psaltery.

In English, as in other languages, we find a certain number of surnames derived from coins, e.g. Farthing, Halfpenny, Penny, Shilling, also Skilling (John Eskelling, Pat. R.], Twopenny, Tippenny, Besant, Ducat, Duckett, or from sums of money. Pound is local, Guinea is an imitative spelling of the Irish Guiney, and Shekell is for Shackle (p. 170). Shillingsworth is local, the "worth," or homestead, of a man named Shilling. Cf. Shillingshaw, in which the second element may be shaw, a wood, or haw, an enclosure. The following medieval examples are instructive, though they do not tell us how the names were acquired—

With the last of these cf. the well-known Dutch name Schimmelpeninck. One can only guess at the various ways in which certain sums became associated with certain individuals. We know that Uncle Pumblechook had an irritating way of alluding to Pip as "six penn'orth of ha'pence," and that David Balfour was also temporarily nicknamed by Lady Allardyce—

&quot;'O, so you're Saxpence!' she cried, with a very sneering manner. 'A braw gift, a bonny gentleman. And hae ye ony ither name and designation, or were ye bapteesed Saxpence?'"

The names in the above list seem to be nearly all extinct in England, though many of the same type are still found in France and Germany. But it seems likely that some of our number names are shortened from them. This can be seen in the case of Andrew Sixantwenti alias Vinte-sis-deners, i.e. twenty-six pence (Leic. Bor. Rec.). Thus the name Eighteen,1 well established at Reading, may be short for "eighteen pence." Another possibility is that it represented the age of an ancestor; cf. Robert Quinzanz (Chart. R.). Pachnio has many examples from medieval Paris, e.g. Raoul iiij Deniers, Guillaume ix Deniers, Symon Quatuordecim, Jehan Quatre-Cenz, etc. In the last two examples the items may have been cows, sheep, etc.; cf. Robertus Quatuor Boum, Geffroi as ij Moutons (Pachnio). And there is a medieval Latin poem on a peasant known as Unusbos, a kind of Little Claus.

Among existing names of this form are Two, Four, Six, Twelve, Twelves, Eighteen, Forty, most of which are susceptible of another explanation. Two may be short for Twoyearold (p. 250), but is more probably local, of Tew (Oxf.). Four has two clear origins, other than the numeral, viz. Fr. four, an oven [Hugh de la Four, Hund. R.], and the archaic fower, a scavenger [John le Fower, Fine R.]. Six is for Siggs, short for one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Sige-[Ædric Sigge, Pipe R.]. Twelve is perhaps short for Twelftree or Twelvetrees, and Forty, Fordy is local [William de la Fortheye, Hund. R., Oxf.], apparently the island by the ford. In the Hund. R. are several examples from Oxfordshire, which is still the home of the name. Million is probably the Fr. Emilien, from Émile, Billion belongs to Bill (p. 38). It is found in Norfolk, sometimes also as Bullion. Milliard is an artificial spelling of Millard [Robert le Milleward, Hund. R.]. Unitt or Unite seems to be a Welsh name [Unieth the cutler, Glouc. Cart.], possibly from Welsh uniaith, monoglot, of one language, a man who could not, like most of the borderers, speak both Welsh and English. Among ordinals of English origin I have only come across Third, which may be short for Thirdborough, the peace-officer of a tithing, originally the head man of a frank-pledge or frithborh, from which latter word it is probably corrupted. In fact, the more correct Freeborough exists as a surname. But in French we find Prin, Prime, Premier, Second, Thiers, Tierce, whence our own Prin, Prynne, Pring, Print, Prime, Primmer [Roger le Premier, Pat. R.], and Tyers, Terse [John Ters, Leic. Bor. Rec.]. The curious Lancashire name Twiceaday, Twisaday means "twice a day" [John Twysontheday, Pat. R., Cumb. 1410], but remains mysterious.

Essentially connected with the individual are oathnames and other characteristic phrases. Here again we have sadly degenerated, and few of this type are now among us. We have Pardoe, Pardy, etc., from pardieu, Mordue, Mordey, from mort-dieu, Dando or Daddow, for dent-Dicu<sup>3</sup> [William Dandewe, Archbp. Romayn's Reg. 1286-96], and the rather Chadbandian

It will be noticed that most of these are of French formation. Pardy, Pardoe, etc., are really distinct from Purdy, Purdue, etc., the first representing rather de par Dieu, i.e. de parte Dei, in God's name, as in modern French de par le roi, while Purdue is rather Fr. pour Dieu. Also the common Pardoe, Pardow has an alternative origin from OF. Pardou, for the personal name Pardolf. Deulaie (v.s.) may be the origin of Duly. Deugard has given Dugard. For Godsave see p. 316. Godsowele is one origin of Godsall, Goodsell, Gutsell, and Modersoule has become Mothersole, Mothersill. Parfey is now Purefoy.

Finally, we find in Middle English a number of nicknames evidently derived from the word or phrase which a man overworked. Most of us could quote similar cases within our own experience. Examples are—

These are practically all of French formation, and I cannot with certainty identify any of them with existing surnames. They are inserted here for the satisfaction of students, as an example of the fantastic manner in which surnames can be formed, and as a caution against explaining everything odd as a "corruption." In the Nottingham Borough Records occurs the name of Elias Overandover. He may have been a man fond of wearisome iteration in speech, or with a penchant for turning somersaults, or of antique conscientiousness in the performance of the common task—

"My godsire's name, I tell you,
Was In-and-In Shittle, and a weaver he was,
And it did fit his craft; for so his shittle
Went in and in still, this way and then that way" (Ben Jonson, Tale of a Tub, iv. 2).

CHAPTER IX

VEGETABLE NICKNAMES

"Bot. Your name, honest gentleman!

Peas. Peaseblossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mistress Squash, your mother, and to Master Peascod, your father" (Midsummer Night's Dream).

VEGETABLE surnames may have come into existence in various ways. Tree names are generally local, and there is probably no well-known English tree which has not contributed to the list. Most of these present no difficulty, but occasionally dialect forms have prevailed, e.g. Hamblock for hemlock. We also find the obsolete Beam 1 [Osborn Atebeame, Hund. R.] and its compound Nutbeam [John atte Notebem, ib.]. Local also are such considerable growths as Broom, Reed, Gorse, Furze, Fern, etc., with their compounds such as Thickbroom [Richard de Thickbrome, Pleas.], Fearnside [Nicholas del Fernyside, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4], Redfern [William del Redferne, ib.]. We may perhaps also suppose that two contiguous Johns whose huts were overgrown with ivy and jessamine respectively may have been distinguished by the names Ivy, Ivey, and Jessemey, Jessiman.

The above are simple cases, but there are also a great many surnames taken from the vegetable world which can only be regarded as nicknames created by the mysterious medieval folk-lore of which we unfortunately know so little. We still sometimes describe a person as a daisy, and, in our more subtle moments, even as a tulip or a peach, while the quite modern nut, or more elaborate filbert, perhaps represents a recurrence of a long-dormant instinct inherited from far-off ancestors. Among surnames of this type we find the names of plants, flowers, fruits, vegetables, and also minute products and parts of vegetation. Here, as always, French and German parallels are abundantly numerous; while in Latin we find Cicero, Fabius, Lentulus, Piso, etc.

Plant itself is generally local [John de la Plaunt, of Rouen, Pat. R.], from OF. plante, enclosure, plantation, but its occurrence in the Rolls without de [Robert Plante, Hund. R.] suggests that it was also a nickname, from ME. plant used in a variety of senses. sprig, cudgel, young offspring (see NED.). We find all the important cereals, Corn, Wheat, Barley, Oats, Rye. The first seems to be genuine, perhaps for a peasant whose corn crops were particularly successful. or for one who lived among cornfields; cf. Fr. Desbleds, OF. bled (blé). It has a compound Oldcorn, whence also Allcorn, with which cf. Johanna Goldcorn (Cal. Gen.) and Robert Oldbene (Hund. R.). Wheat is more often one of the very numerous variants of the occupative Wait, a watchman; but cf. the common Fr. Froment. Barley is a local name and also a variant of Barlow, but Desorges is a French surname.

Oates is generally the Old French nominative of Odo. Otto [Otes de Houlond, City F.], but cf. Fr. Alavoine. Rye is generally local, but the corresponding Seigle is a common French surname. In each of these, therefore, a double origin is possible, while a local derivation is also not excluded. Maize is an imitative spelling of Mayes, from May, which has various origins (p. 248). Grain is usually a nickname. OF. grain, morose 1 [Dominus Johannes dictus le Greyne, Nott. Bor. Rec.]. Drage, Dredge, Drudge are dialect names for a mixed crop, especially of rye and wheat. From its more usual name, mestlyon, comes Maslin, though this has also another origin, from a Middle English personal name Mazelin, probably, like Fr. Massillon, from Thomas Mazelin de Rissebi, Hund. R.]-

"Metail, messling, or maslin; wheat and rye mingled, sowed, and used together" (Cotg.).

Millett is a dim. of Miles or Millicent. Hardmeat might be taken for a local "hard mead," the more so because Meat, Meates are for Mead, but William Hardmete (Hund. R.) shows it to be a nickname from the obsolete hard-meat, used of corn and hay, as food for cattle, contrasted with grass. No doubt Greengrass has a similar origin. Grist is for Grice, with excrescent -t; cf. Moist for Moyes, i.e. Moses, and Twist for Twiss (p. 82). Grice itself has two origins, Fr. gris, grey, and ME. grice, a pig.

Among plants that have given surnames we notice that the odorous, pungent, and medicinal varieties predominate, probably because they lent themselves more readily to emblematic use. It is known that magical properties were ascribed to many of them. We have, among medicinal plants, Skirrett, Camamile, Tansey, Spurge, Staveacre, Bettany, Rue. The last two are doubtful. Bettany, found in Staffordshire along with Betteley, is probably from Betley in that county, and Rue, which runs parallel with Rew in Wiltshire, may be AF. rew, street, Fr. rue. Still, both these plants have a good deal of folk-lore about them. e.g. according to Burton, the Emperor Augustus regarded betony as efficacious for the expulsion of devils, while Shakespeare's allusions to rue, the herb of grace, are numerous. But, rather than attempt an explanation of each name in detail. I will refer the reader to that very charming lecturer, Perdita (Winter's Tale, IV, iv.). Staveacre is for stavesacre, which, in spite of its English appearance, is almost pure Greek. It was an emetic and a remedy against vermin. With these go also Buglass (p. 175), and probably Sidwell, Situell [Thomas Sitwele, Pat. R.], from sedwall, once regularly coupled with ginger and other spices—

"And he hymself as sweete as is the roote

(Chauc. A. 3206).

Here generally belongs Ambrose, common as a medieval surname, but rather rare as a font-name [William Ambroys, Hund. R., Richard Ambrosie, ib.]. It was used of the wild sage—

" Ambrose an herbe, ache champestre" (Palsg.).

And it is very likely that Alexander <sup>1</sup> or Saunders is often to be classed with it. This was a common name for the horse-parsley—

" Alysaundere, herbe, macedonia" (Prompt. Parv.).

For an example of saundres, coupled with brazill (p. 189), see the epigraph to ch. xii.

I observe that Herr v. Wermuth is (Nov. 1915) Burgomaster of Berlin, and Wormwood is given as a surname by Camden, though I do not know if it now exists—

"Wermuth, ein bitter kraut, wormwood" (Ludwig, Germ. Dict., 1716).

Darnell, tares [William Dernel, Glouc. Cart.], was considered to produce intoxication; cf. its French name, ivraie. With Weeds cf. Fr. Malherbe, Malesherbes, and Ger. Unkraut. Balsam is local [Robert de Balsam, Hund. R.], of Balsham (Camb.), and the Yorkshire Balm is a corruption of Balne in that county.

More associated with the kitchen are Mustard, Garlick, Ginger, Pepper, Parsley, Marjoram, Fennell, Savory, the last of which is an imitative spelling of Savary, Saffrey, etc. [Savaricus Clericus, Pipe R.,

Savari de Duntrop, Fine R.]. I have even found it spelt Savoury. Sometimes such names may have been adopted in place of cumbrous trade-names, such as Thomas le Mustarder (City B.), John Garlekemongere  $(I \not p M.)$ . So also Brazil, Brazell may be from the vegetable dye which gave its name to a South American country and a medieval trade [Robert Blund, brasiler, Leic. Bor. Rec.]; cf. Adam Saffran (Pat. R.). Pepper may also be shortened from Pepperell, the latinized form, Piperellus (DB.), of Peverel, which does not however, dissociate it from pepper, Pepperwell is a curious corruption of the above name. The OF. peyvre, peyvrier, very common in the Rolls [Paulin Peyvre, Chart. R., John le Peverer, Pat. R., are now represented by Peever, Peffer. Fennell is undoubtedly from the plant, Fr. tenouil [William Feneyl, Pat. R.], though it has other possible origins. It was an emblem of flattery-

"Woman's weeds, fennel I mean for flatterers" (Greene, Upstart Courtier).

Parsley might be a variant of Paslow (q.v.), but the corresponding Ger. Petersilje is found c. 1300.

Flower-names, such as Jasmin, Lafleur, were often given to valets in French comedy, and later on we find them among soldiers, as in the case of Fanfan la Tulipe. Much further back we find the romantic story of Flore and Blancheflour and the German Dornröschen. The reader will naturally think of Chaucer's Prioress—

"And she was cleped madame Eglentyne" (Prol. 121).

To begin with, we have Flower [Elyas Flur, Fine R.],

Bloom [William Blome, Pat. R.], Blossom [Hugh Blosme, Hund. R.]—

(Chauc, Legend of Good Women, 143).

With these cf. James Beauflour (Close R.). Flower has an alternative origin from ME. floer, arrow-smith [John le Floer, Hund. R.]. The commonest of such names, Rose, has several origins. It is baptismal [Richard f. Rose, Hund, R.], from a name which may come from the flower or from Rosamond (p. 34), a sign-name [Adam de la Rose, City B., Adam atte Rose, City D.], and is often imitative from the local Row or perhaps Wroe [William of the Rows, Northampt. Bor. Rec., Simon ithe Rose, Pat. R., Yorks.]. Lilley, Lilly is sometimes from the font-name Lilian, of doubtful origin [Geoffrey Lilion, Hund, R., Nicholas Lillie, ib., and has specific local origins. It must also be a sign-name, though I have found no early example. The name Lilvgreen, which has occurred in the casualty lists, is probably Swedish Liliengren (see p. 195). With James Popy (Hund, R.), still found as Poppy, cf. Thomas Coklico (Pat. R.)—

"Coquelicoq, the wild poppie, corne-rose, red corne-rose" (Cotg.).

Fr. Pavot and Ger. Mohn, Mohnkopf are also well-established names.

The latter, meaning "poppy head," suggests a short digression on the possibility of some names of this class having originated in a fanciful resemblance. I imagine that Mohnkopf may have been applied to a bald-headed man, just as we find, conversely, the field poppy called in German dialect Glatzen (Glatze, a bald pate). We know that pill-garlic, i.e. peeled garlic, was used in the same way in English—

Wie ein Mohnkopf lauter Schlaf, sonsten hat er nichts darinnen."

"Your pyllyd garleke hed Cowde hoccupy there no stede"

(Skelton).

So Onion, Onions, usually, as a Shropshire name, from the Welsh Anyon, Ennion, Eynon, etc. (anian, nature, genius), is also a nickname [Roger Oygnoun, Lond. Wills, 1295]. Cf. Albert Chive (Pipe R.) and William Chiboulle (Chart. R.), the latter from ME. chibol, an onion, still in dialect use—

"Ciboule, a chiboll, or hollow leek" (Cotg.).

The first Sweetapple [John Swetapple, Fine R.] may have been a cultivator of particularly choice fruit, but his name reminds me strongly of a schoolboy of my acquaintance whose unconsciously sardonic expression earned for him the name Sour Plum. Mosscrop, an archaic name for the tufted club-rush, may have been suggested by the combination of a thin body and a shock head.

To come back to flower-names, we have Daisy [Robert Dayeseye, Hund. R.], Primrose [Peter Premerole, Pat. R.], Marigold, Pimpernell, Columbine or Collingbine, while Dandelyon, still found in America, was a Kentish name up to the middle of the fifteenth century. Thomas Eglentyn and Peter Parvenk (periwinkle) occur in the Pat. R. Each of these no doubt has a tale to tell. Violet is probably a colour nickname (p. 154). Lavender, usually occupative, the Launder, or "washerman," may also occasionally be a nickname [John Lavender, taillur, Pat. R.]. Galliver, Gilliver, are from ME. gilofre [Peter Gylofre, Leic, Bor, Rec.]. now corrupted to gillyflower, a flower emblematic of frailty. I fancy that this is due to association with Oueen Guinevere, from whose name we get Juniter. Juniper. The MDB, contains the name Rosontree, but the locality (Yorks) suggests a misprint for Rowntree (rowan tree, mountain ash). The first Woodbine was perhaps named from his clinging propensities, but we can hardly accept Tulip, the first mention of the flower by a Western European being about the middle of the sixteenth century (NED.). It is evidently an imitative spelling, but of what?

Fruit-names may also in some cases be local, e.g. Plumb may be for Plumtree, Pear for Pcartree. But in Old French we often find them used with the definite article in such a way as to suggest a nickname, e.g. Raoul la Prune, Gautier la Poire (Pachnio), the latter individual perhaps having a head of the shape which earned the nickname Poire for the last legitimate king of France, and which suggested the medieval "pear head" (p. 128), now Perrett. These examples show that Pcar, Pcars is not always an imitative spelling of Fr. Pierre. So also in English we find William le Cheris (Leic. Bor. Rec.), who is perhaps the same person as William Chirecod (ib.), with whose name cf. Peascod (p. 196). But many apparent fruit-names are not genuine. Grapes may be from an inn-sign, but is more likely connected with Grepe (p. 61), Raisin is an imitative form of Rayson (p. 239), and Muscat is an imitative alteration of Muskett, a nickname from the sparrow-hawk—

"Mouchet, a musket; the tassell 2 of a sparhawke" (Cotg.).

The oldest form of damson is damascene, from Damascus. Hence the name Damson is probably the "dame's son" [Geoffrey Dammesune, Pipe R.]. Pippin is Fr. Pépin, whence also the East Anglian Pepys [Richard Pepin or Pepis, Hund. R., Camb.], and, as a Somerset name, is altered from Phippen, dim. of Philip, which is common in the same county. It may also be a fruit-name; cf. Costard (p. 194). Medlar is a nickname [William le Mesler, Hund. R.]. Filbert is simply the French name Philibert [Dominus Fylbard, Hund. R.], OG. Filuberht, very bright, whence the nut also probably takes its name. Dewberry is local, of Dewsbury, spelt Deubire in 1202, but Mulberry,

Mulbry appears to be genuine. Orange is doubtful, for, though Richard Orenge (Archbp. Peckham's Lett. 1279–92) points to a nickname, Orangia de Chercheyerd, who was hanged in 1307 (Cal. Gen.), suggests a fantastic personal name, which must apparently have been formed from that of the fruit. There is also the town of Orange (Vaucluse), but I have found no evidence to connect the name with it. The name Raspberry is found in East Anglia, and, although the NED. does not record the word till the seventeenth century, the name may be genuine, for French has both Framboise and Framboisier—

Mellon is Irish, I suppose for Malone, i.e. the tonsured servant of John. Costard is a very common Middle English nickname, perhaps for a round-headed man; hence also Coster, Custer, Custard.

A few kitchen-garden names have already been mentioned, but the group is not large. Bean is usually Scottish, Gael. ban, white, whence Bain, but this will not account for the common Norfolk name Beanes, occurring as Bene in the Hund. R. The bean seems to have been a favourite crop in East Anglia, e.g. in the Ramsey Cartulary there is mention of plots called Benecroft, Benedale, Benemede, Benehill, Benefurlange; cf. Barton-in-Fabis (Notts), Barton-in-the-Beans (Leic.). I see no reason to doubt that Eustace Sparaguz (Fine R.) took his name from the most delicate of vegetables. Pease is also genuine, but Pea, Pee is for Peacock as Poc is for Pocock. From the same bird, AS. pawa, we have Paw, Pay, Pow, Poye—

"Gold, and sylver, and yver, and apis, and poos" (Wyc. 2 Chron. ix. 21).

An apparently authentic nickname of the vegetable type is Neap, Neep [Henry le Nep, Hund. R.], which is Middle English for "turnip." It is seldom that so clear an instance is found in the Rolls. Cf. Ameline la Navete (Pachnio)—

"Navette, rapeseed; also, as naveau."

" Naveau blanc de jardin, the ordinary rape, or turnep" (Cotg.).

The most curious of the vegetable surnames are those which are formed from botanical details, and here again I can make little attempt to explain their occurrence. Similar names are common in other languages, and Swedish especially has a very large number in -gren, branch, -quist,1 twig, -blad, leaf. Twigg has parallels in Fr. Rameau and Ger. Zweig. the latter also having compounds, e.g. Mittenzweig, with the twig, and Sauberzweig, clean twig, the name of an officer mentioned (Daily Telegraph, Nov. 2, 1915) in connection with the murder of Nurse Cavell, and evidently, if there is anything in heredity, originally ironic. Both Spray and Sprigg are used in dialect of a lean, lanky person; cf. p. 155. In English we have also Branch [Benjamin Branche, Hund, R.] occurring very commonly without de, though John de la Braunche (F. of Y. 1451) suggests local origin, or perhaps a sign. Branchflower is an alteration of the nickname Blanchflower. Bough is local [John atte Bough, Pat. R.], in the sense of Bow, arch, with which it is really identical. Budd is an Anglo-Saxon personal name, short for Botolf or some such dithemetic name, and Leaf is an imitative spelling of Leif, dear [John le Lef, Pat. R.]; cf. Leveson, which, in the form Leofsunu (see Fr. Cherfils, p. 247), was already a personal name in Anglo-Saxon. With Ivyleaf cf. Ger. Kleeblatt, clover leaf, and Rosenblatt, whence, or perhaps through one of the Scandinavian languages, our Roseblade. Hoccleve is more probably a complete plant-name, AS. hoclef, mallow. Sapp is a nickname [William le Sap, Hund. R.]. In dialect it means a simpleton, cf. saphead, sapskull, but its history is unwritten.

Then we have fantastic names like Goldstraw, Peppercorn, Barleycorn, the last-named once common as grain d'orge [William Greindeorge, Hund. R.], now Grandage, Graddige. Graindorge is still a common French surname. With Peascod [Henry Pesecod, Pat. R.], Pescott, Peasegood, Peskett, Bisgood (?), cf. Benskin (bean-skin) and Maddy Benestol (Hund. R.) whose name contains dial. stale, a stalk. But Podd, also Poad, Poat, is a nickname from ME. pode, a toad [John le Pod, Hund. R.]. I doubt whether Seed (see p. 73) belongs here, but Hempseed is an uncomplimentary nickname—

though the only time I have come across it was in connection with a gallant exploit in the War. Cf. Ger. Hanfstengel, hemp-stalk. Our Hempenstall is merely one of the many variants of Heptonstall (Yorks). In Lillicrap, Lillycrop we seem to have the archaic crop, "head" of a plant, or tree, bunch of foliage, etc.; cf. Mosscrop and Ger. Mohnkopf. Gower uses it in his version of the famous scene in which Tarquin strikes off the heads of the tallest plants—

"Anon he tok in honde a yerde
And in the gardin as thei gon,
The lilie croppes on and on,
Wher that thei weren sprongen oute,
He smot of, as thei stode aboute"

(Conf. Amant. vii. 4676).

With the poetical Flowerdew, whence Flowerday, cf. Robert Honiedewe (Salisb. Chart.) and Ger. Morgenthau, morning dew. Maydew is for Matthew, and preserves the intermediate form between the original and Mayhew, Mayo, OF. Mahieu. Merridew, Merriday, Merredy are the Welsh Meredith [Mereduz de Beauveir, City D.]. They are further corrupted in Lancashire into Melladew, Mellalieu, Mellalue.

In my Romance of Words (p. 196) I have mentioned Ferguson's conjecture as to the curious name Ivimey, Ivermee, Evamy, Etemey, etc. I am afraid the pic turesque derivation there suggested will not hold water. In City A. I find Peter Yvenes or Yvemeys, a Spanish immigrant. I do not know the origin of his name, but he looks like the true ancestor of the Ivimeys.

PAGEANT NAMES

"Il y avoit lors une dame, qui, pendant les jeux, avoit joué Conscience, et qui pour cela en eut le nom tout le temps de sa vie " (BÉROALDE DE VERVILLE, Le Moyen de parvenir).

It has always been recognized by students of surname lore that our Prophets, Priests, and Kings generally owe their names to ancestors who had enacted such parts in medieval pageant <sup>1</sup>; but this source of modern surnames is much more considerable than has usually been supposed. Grown people are almost as fond of "dressing up" as children, and in recent years we have seen a revival of the type of pastime once so dear to our ancestors and still popular on the continent. Some twenty years ago the author was present at the elaborate display by which the Swiss celebrated the seventh centenary of their Republic. On that occasion it looked as though the whole able-bodied population were parading in historic garb for the edification of the physically unfit and the children of the country. In medieval England no important feast of the Church, no event in the life of the monarch, or, in the provinces, of the local magnate, no visit of a foreign dignitary, was allowed to pass without the accompaniment of something like a Lord Mayor's Show—

"One other show, in the year 1377, made by the citizens for disport of the young prince, Richard, son to the Black Prince, in the feast of Christmas, in this manner :- On the Sunday before Candlemas, in the night, one hundred and thirty citizens, disguised, and well horsed, in a mummery, with sound of trumpets, sackbuts, cornets, shalmes, and other minstrels, and innumerable torch lights of wax, rode from Newgate, through Cheape, over the bridge, through Southwarke, and so to Kennington, beside Lambhith, where the young prince remained with his mother, and the Duke of Lancaster his uncle. . . . In the first rank did ride forty-eight in the likeness and habit of esquires, two and two together, clothed in red coats and gowns of say or sandal, with comely visors on their faces; after them came riding forty-eight knights in the same livery of colour and stuff; then followed one richly arrayed like an emperor; and after him some distance, one stately attired like a pope, whom followed twenty-four cardinals, and after them eight or ten with black visors, not amiable, as if they had been legates from some foreign prince" (Stow).

There are possibly to-day people named Squire, Knight, Emperor 1 or Cayzer, Pope, Cardinall, Leggatt, whose ancestors figured in this particular procession.

Two names of this class may be specially mentioned, the first, Count [Peter le Counte, Fine R.], because of its rarity, the second, Marquis, because, though so common in the north, it seems unrecorded except as a female font-name [Marchisa f. Warner, Yorks Fines, temp. John]. It is rather odd to find the German equivalent recorded for the same county [William Margrayve, F. of Y.]. Lavicount is an example of the grammatical methods of Anglo-French.

Such a procession as that described above was a very mild affair compared with some of the more scenic pageants which were enacted on great occasions—

"At certain distances, in places appointed for the purpose, the pageants were erected, which were temporary buildings representing castles, palaces, gardens, rocks or forests, as the occasion required, where nymphs, fauns, satyrs, gods, goddesses, angels and devils appeared in company with giants, savages, dragons, saints, knights, buffoons, and dwarfs, surrounded by minstrels and choristers; the heathen mythology, the legends of chivalry and Christian divinity were ridiculously jumbled together without meaning" (Strutt).

Then we have the popular games and representations associated with church festivals, the boy "Bishop," the "Pope" of Fools, the "Lord" of Misrule, the "Abbot" of Unreason, the bull-baitings, archery contests, joustings, running at the quintain, the May games with their Robin Hood pageants, the rough horseplay of the Hockday sports, of which the chief feature, the binding of men by women and vice-versa, perhaps survives in the names Tieman and Bindlass, Bindloss. It is quite possible that Peacock, Pocock, and Popjoy, Pobjoy, Pobgee, Popejoy may have been in some cases nicknames conferred on successful athletes—

&quot;In the year of Christ 1253, the 38th of Henry III., the youthful citizens, for an exercise of their activity, set forth a game to run at the quinten; and whoever did best should have a peacock which they had prepared as a prize" (Stow).

Shooting at the popinjay, a wooden figure of a parrot set up as a mark, is often mentioned, not only by English writers, but also by Rabelais. Of course these two names may also come from signs, or they may be nicknames due to some characteristic of the original bearer <sup>1</sup>; but the following is suggestive—

"Papegay, a parrot, or popingay; also, a woodden parrot (set up on the top of a steeple, high tree, or pole) whereat there is, in many parts of France, a generall shooting once every yeare; and an exemption for all that yeare, from la taille, obtained by him that strikes downe the right wing thereof, (who is therefore tearmed Le Chevalier;) and by him that strikes downe the left wing, (who is tearmed Le Baron;) and by him that strikes down the whole popingay (who for that dexteritie or good hap hath also the title of Roy du Papegay,) all the yeare following" (Cotg.).

Most important of all, perhaps, from the surname point of view, is the medieval drama, with its long and detailed representations of the most important episodes from the Old and New Testaments and from the lives of the Saints. In these performances the number of actors was often enormous, and the spectacle was prolonged for days or even weeks—

"The miracle plays in Chaucer's days were exhibited during the season of Lent, and sometimes a sequel of scripture histories was carried on for several days. In the reign of Richard II, the parish clerks of London put forth a play at Skinner's Wells, near Smithfield, which continued three days. In the succeeding reign another play was acted at the same place and lasted eight days; this drama began with the creation of the world and contained the greater part of the Old and New Testament. . . . Beelzebub seems to have been the principal comic actor, assisted by his merry troop of underdevils. . . . When the mysteries ceased to be played, the subjects for the drama were not taken from historical facts, but consisted of moral reasonings in praise of virtue and condemnation of vice, on which account they were called moralities. The dialogue was carried on by allegorical characters such as good doctrine, charity, faith, prudence, discretion, death, and the like, and their discourses were of a serious cast; but the province of making the spectators merry descended from the devil in the mystery to the vice or iniquity of the morality, who usually personified some bad quality incident to human nature, as pride and lust" (Strutt).

Now most of us have within our experience cases of nicknames conferred in connection with private theatricals and fancy-dress balls, and it is easy to believe that, at a period when the surname was not a fixed quantity, distinction in some piece of acting or buffoonery may have often earned for the performer a sobriquet which stuck. I do not mean to say that all the names I am about to enumerate belong with certainty, or exclusively, to this class, but I think that in the case of most of them there is a strong presumption for such an origin. To go thoroughly into the question would involve a close study of the medieval drama, and a much more intimate knowledge of the history of pageantry, than can be gleaned from the popular account of Strutt. The reader who cares to look through the long lists of dramatis personæ in the Chester, Coventry, Towneley, and York plays, will see that there is hardly a name in this chapter which cannot be illustrated, or at least paralleled, from those collections.

The whole question also has a psychological aspect. The rise of allegory and the flourishing of the drama are connected with the awakening consciousness of the people as a whole. It was a somewhat dull, prosaic awakening, showing itself in a realistic, bludgeon-wielding type of satire and a homely morality, and, from the surname point of view, in a striving after a name that meant something to its bearer. We see something of this spirit in the nomenclature adopted by Jack Straw and his followers. The following proclamation is contemporary with John Ball—

"John Schepe, some time St. Mary's priest of York, and now of Colchester, greeteth well John Nameless and John the Miller and John the Carter, and biddeth them that they beware of guile in borough, and stand together in God's name, and biddeth Piers Plowman go to his work, and chastise well Hob the Robber (Robert Hales, the Treasurer) and all his fellows, and no mo, and look that ye shape you to one head and no mo."

And as late as the reign of Henry VII. rebellious peasants revived these old names which symbolized their condition in life and their aspirations—

"Taking Robyn of Riddesdale, Jack Straw, Thomolyn at Lath and Maister Mendall for their capteyns" (Letter of Henry VII.).

To the same attitude of mind belong many of the phrase-names dealt with in ch. xii., and their descent can be traced through the Elizabethans and the Restoration dramatists via Smollett and Fielding to the modern novelists. For even Dickens, sumptuous as is his collection of genuine surnames, occasionally descends to such stuff as Veneering and Verisopht—

"A curious essay might be written on the reasons why such names as Sir John Brute, Sir Tunbelly Clumsy, Sir Peter Teazle, Sir Anthony Absolute, Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Lord Foppington, Lord Rake, Colonel Bully, Lovewell, Heartfree, Gripe, Shark, and the rest were regarded as a matter of course in the 'comedy of manners,' . . . The fashion of label-names, if we may call them so, came down from the Elizabethans, who, again, borrowed it from the medieval moralities' (William Archer, Play-Making).

The surnames which may with more or less certainty be connected with medieval spectacles fall into several groups. Many Old Testament names such as Adam and Eve, Abel, David, Solomon or Salmon, Sampson, Jonas, etc., no doubt sometimes belong here. Geoffrey Golias or Gullias (Hund. R.) has a modern representative in Gullyes and Gully [William Golye, Hund. R.]. The form Golie is used by Wyclif. From ME. Goliard, a satiric poet or jester, popularly connected with Golias, we have Gullard [John Goliard, Close R., John le Golert, Derby Cart. 1353], of which Gullett is the regular reduction. I have seldom found Solomon as a medieval font-name, while William dictus Salamon (Lond. Wills, 1287) is a clear case of a nickname. Pharaoh, Pharro is explained by Bardsley as a corruption of Farrow. It is more likely that the latter is corrupted from Pharaoh, a very spectacular personage; but the Scotch surname Ptolomey evidently belongs to Bartholomew; cf. Fr. Tholomié. A particularly interesting name is Absolom, not uncommon as a modern surname and with a number of disguised variants. We know from Chaucer that this was a nickname for a man with a fine head of hair—

"Now was ther of that chirche a parissh clerk, The which that was y-cleped Absolon; Crul was his heer and as the gold it shoon, And strouted as a fanne, large and brode"

(Chauc. A. 3312).

This became, by a common metathesis, Aspelon [Adam Absolon or Apsolon or Aspelon, City B.], whence Aspenlon, Asplin. The local-looking Aspland is the same name with spurious -d [John Apspelond, City E.] and Ashplant is an imitative spelling.

A doubtful case is Pottiphar, explained by Bardsley as an imitative corruption of Pettifer (p. 141). It may be from an Old Testament play, for although Potiphar himself plays no part in history, we can hardly imagine that the medieval drama would omit to put his wife upon the scene, and for the audience she would be Mrs. Potiphar. Cf. James Dalileye (Close R.), who presumably played Delilah in another highly dramatic Biblical scene.

But many names which might appear to belong to this class are deceptive. Shadrake is an alteration of the bird nickname Sheldrake, Ogg is not the King of

Bashan, but AS. Ocga or Ogga, shortened from some such name as Ocgweald, AS. oga, terror, Leah is a form of the local Lea, and Rachell comes via Fr. Rachilde from OG. Raghild, for which see Regin and Hild in ch. ii. Some Welsh surnames, such as Jeremiah, Matthias, Mordecai, belong to the later name-creation with which the modern Welsh have replaced their Abs. Perhaps in some cases such names were substituted for Welsh names of somewhat similar sound, just as Jeremiah was adopted in Ireland for Diarmid. This would seem to be the explanation of Enock, which is spelt Egenoc in the Gloucester Cartulary. The Suffolk name Balaam is an alteration of the local Baylham, from a village in that county, but Robert Balaam (Pat. R., Cornwall) suggests also a nickname. Jermy is not from Jeremy, but from Jermyn, with which it runs parallel in Norfolk. Noah was an important character in the old drama and the popular form of the name was Noy, whence Noyes, Noyce. The Chester play of Noah's Flood ends with the lines—

"My blessinge, Noye, I geve thee heare,
To thee, Noye, my servant deare;
For vengance shall no more appeare,
And now fare well, my darlinge deare!"

Saul, Sawle, generally for Fr. Salle, Lasalle, is another possible case. This is necessarily guess-work, but it is noticeable that the Biblical names which occur commonly as surnames are invariably connected with those episodes in Old Testament history which were constantly dramatized for edification. I have seen somewhere, but failed to make a note of, a vaguely spelt ME. Nebuchadnezzar.

From the New Testament we have Herod [Seman Herodes, Pat. R.] and Pillatt <sup>1</sup> [Alan Pilate, Pleas]. The character of Herod as a stage braggart was familiar to Shakespeare—

"I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod" (Hamlet, iii. 2).

With this cf. Jordan Travagan (Lib. R.), for Tervagant, the earlier form of Termagant. The following excerpt from the sums paid in 1490 to the Coventry smiths who acted the Passion reads oddly—

"Imprimis to God, ijs; item to Cayphas, iijs iiiid; item to Heroude, iijs iiiid; item to Pilatt is wyffe, ijs; item to the devyll and to Judas, xviijd; item to Petur and Malchus, xvjd; item to Pilatte, iiijd."

Several rather uncommon names of office, e.g. Governor and Commander [William le Comandur, Hund. R.], seem to be associated especially with the Passion Play. The most interesting is Poyner, i.e. "painer," or tormentor [John le Poynur, Hund. R.], which still survives, while Turmentur, of which I have found several medieval examples, has naturally dropped out of use. Officer, still a Nottingham surname, may be rather corrupted from the maker of "orphrey," or gold embroidery [John le Orfresour, Pat. R.], though "officer," in the sense of servant,

especially of the crown, is a common word in Middle English; cf. Fitchell (p. 110). Lathron, corrupted into Leathern, Letheren, is an early form of Fr. larron, thief, penitent or otherwise. In Fr. Lelerre we have the old nominative of the same word. Cf. Adam Maufetour, i.e. malefactor (IpM.). It is curious to find Christ as an existing surname, but it is no doubt from the font-name Christian. With Virgin and the latinized Virgoe, Vergo goes Mildmay (p. 246), for "mild" was the traditional epithet of the Holy Virgin—

"Ave Maria! maiden mild" (Lady of the Lake, iii. 29).

Goad is no doubt for God, which has also become Good; cf. Goadbles (p. 181). Godson, though it obviously has other origins, is also to be taken literally [Henry FizDeu, Chart. R.]. The naïveté of the old drama is amazing. In the play of Cain and Abel, Cain, when admonished by the Almighty, addresses him scornfully as "Hob over the wall."

Among the supers are Postle or Posthill, Martyr, and

- <sup>1</sup> This is philologically interesting; cf. Dainteth (p. 223). Latheron is still in dial. use as a term of contempt. The EDD. derives it from Fr. laideron, ugly person, but this is a comparatively modern word.
- <sup>2</sup> The stage directions and, in the earliest examples, the dialogue, were in Latin. This will account for Pontifex, which may be either for Pope or for one of the high priests in the Passion play [Gilbert Pountife, Pat. R.]. Another purely Latin name is Coustos, but custos was once in general use as an English word, e.g. Berners, in the preface to his translation of Froissart, says that history has time as "her custos and kepar." Preater, Pretor, Prater may be for "prætor" or for "prater." With the latter origin may be compared such names as Whistler [Elias le Wistler, Glouc, Cart.] or the obsolete Geoffrey le Whiner (Pat. R.), Richard le Titteler, whisperer, tatler (Hund. R.), John Sternitour, sneezer (ib.).

Saint, Sant, Saunt, while Devill 1 [Osbert Diabolus, Pat. R.] has naturally survived less strongly than Angell [Edward le Angel, Fine R.]. There was more than one type of stage angel, hence the more definite Henry Angel-Dei (Hund. R.), and Fr. Bonnange. Seraphim still exists as a surname [Peter Serapin, Pat. R.]. Pilgrim, with its odd variants Peagrim, Piggrem, Paragreen,3 etc., may also belong here, also Armitt (hermit), with which we may compare not only Fr. Lermitte, but also Reclus. In all probability some of the favourite saints, such as Christopher and George, contributed to the surname list via the popular drama. The fact that the latter, a very rare medieval fontname, is so common a surname in its unaltered form, is an argument for nickname origin. Both were also favourite inn-signs.4

With George goes naturally Dragon [William le Dragon, Hund. R.]. The name is found in French and the other Romance languages, and in the Close R. we find mention of a Spaniard with the pleasing name Demon Dragon. Griffin, usually a Welsh name related to Griffith, is also sometimes a nickname [John

Griffon, Fine R.]. In the OF. Mystère de la Passion it is the nickname of a comic character whom Satan instructs in the use of dice. Although Paradise, Heaven, and Hell were realistically staged in the old drama, these surnames have another origin. Paradise is local, a pleasure-garden, especially that of a convent—

"There is (at Hampton Court) a parterre which they call Paradise" (Evelyn, Diary).

Heaven, a Bristol name, is generally for the Welsh Evan, and Hell is simply a variant of Hill [William de la Helle, Chart. R.].

Surnames derived from ecclesiastical titles are generally too obvious to require explanation. Bishop occurs as early as DB., but his superior does not seem to have survived, though arcevesque is common enough in the Rolls and Hue Archevesque was a Norman poet of the thirteenth century. Bishoprick is an abstract nickname to be compared with Office—

"His bishoprick, marg. office or charge, a let another take" (A.V. Acts, i. 20).

With the still existing Archdeacon, Arccdeckne, cf. Roger le Archprest (Pleas.), who possibly enacted Annas or Caiaphas in the Passion Play. Rarer names of this type are Novice, Novis, Reverand, Curate [Henry Curete, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4], Minchin. The latter is ME. minchen, a nun, a derivative of monk, regularly used, for instance, in the Cartulary of God-

stow Nunnery. It is supposed to be the origin of Mincing Lane—

"A third lane out of Tower Street . . . is called Mincheon Lane, so called of tenements there sometime pertaining to the Minchuns or nuns of St. Helen's in Bishopsgate Street" (Stow).

Labat, Labbett is a Huguenot name, representing Provençal abat, abbot, with the definite article. Ankrett, anchorite, still exists by the side of the simple Anker, Anchor, Annereaw—

"An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope" (Hamlet, iii. 2).

To church office belongs also Reglar, Rigler, a member of a religious house, often contrasted with "secular" [Nicholas le Secular,  $I\phi M$ .]—

"Of seculer folke he can make reguler, and agayne of reguler seculer" (NED. 1528).

"Secular" does not seem to have survived, but the synonymous Temporall, Temprall, is still a surname, while Regelous is a corruption of "religious" in its old sense of monk. Stroulger, Strowger, Strudger is perhaps a popular form of "astrologer," a nickname often applied in Middle English to the cock.

A rather fascinating group of surnames is associated with the struggle between Christianity and Mahomet as represented in medieval romance. I have not found Christian or Pagan except as personal names, but the popular form Curson—

"As I am a cursen man"

Walter le Hethen, ib.]. We cannot imagine that the latter was a professed heathen, for such views were not popular in the Middle Ages. He had no doubt played the part of a "paynim" in some dramatic performance. The same applies to John le Reneyie, the renegade (Nott. Court R. 1310). Similarly the common medieval names Hate-Christ and Shun-Christ [Hugh Hatecrist, Pipe R., William Shunecrist, Exch. R.] were probably borne by men who had enacted the rôle of an awful example in a morality. Cf. Thomas Corescros, curse-cross (Hund. R.).

The legitimate heathen are, however, well represented. The chief character on their side was naturally the Soldan of the Saracens, whence our Sowden, Soldan, Soldan. With Robert le Sowdene (Hund. R.) cf. John Saladin (ib.)—

"He that playeth the sowdayne is percase a sowter. Yet if one should . . . calle him by his owne name . . . one of his tormentors 2 might hap to breake his (one's) head" (Sir Thomas More).

Here belong also such names as Turk, Tartar, Arabin, Larby, OF. l'Arabi [Ponce Araby, City A.], Moor, Morris, and Sarson, for we cannot suppose that John Saracenus, prebendary of Bridgnorth (Pat. R.), was a real live Saracen—

"I sey, ye solem Sarson, alle blake in your ble" (Skelton, Poems against Garnesche, i. 36).

Blackmore, generally local, is also for "blackamoor" [Beatrix Blakamour, Mem. of Lond.]. Memmett, Memmott, Meymott, and probably Mammon, Mawman, represent the ME. Maumet, Maument, i.e. Mahomet [Ralph Maumet, Fine R.], whom our ancestors represented as a god or idol. He is regularly coupled with Tervagant (p. 207). Cf. also Peter Amiraill (Doc. Ill.) and Richard Babiloyne (Coram Rege R. 1297), whose names may still survive in some unrecognizable form. Admiral, an extension of emir, was originally used of a Saracen chieftain, and Lamiral is still a common French surname. The "Amiral of Babiloyne" is often mentioned in old romance.

Champion, Campion may have fought on either side, but the stock Christian protagonists were the douzepers, or twelve peers, sometimes confused with Charlemagne's Paladins. In English a new singular was formed and became a common nickname [Simon Duzeper, Close R., William Duzeper, Hund. R.], which survives as Dashper and Disper. Epithets often applied to the Saracens were OF. malfé and malfeü, representing a barbarous Latin male-fatus and male-fatutus 2 [Simon le Malfé, Pipe R., William Maufee, Pat. R.]. Hence our Morfey, Morphy, Morphew, the spelling of the latter having been influenced by the obsolete morphew, a leprous eruption. Malté was also applied specifically to the devil, which brings us to surnames derived from supernatural beings. Poke, Pook [William le Puk, Kirby's Quest], and Puckle [William le Pokel,  $I \not p M$ .] are from our old friend Puck, an imp, used in Piers Plowman of Satan—gobblin . . . and such other bugs " (Scott, Discovery of Witchcraft, 1584).

Both names have another origin, for puke, pook was a woollen cloth of a special colour (cf. Burnett, Ray, etc., p. 154), and Puckle is also local [Robert de Pukehole, Cust. Battle Abbey]. This brings us, even geographically, rather near "Pook's Hill." With Ghost 1 [Fabian le Gost, Ramsey Cart.] cf. Spirett, Spirit, the French name Lesprit and the twelfth-century chronicler Jourdain Fantosme. Warlock, Werlock, Worlock, a Middle English name for the devil, and later for a wizard, is from AS. wærloga, a traitor, more literally an early exponent of the "scrap of paper" theory. The suffix is cognate with Ger. lügen, to lie.3 An essential figure in every pageant was the wodewose, AS. wuduwasa, faun, satyr, known in later times as the Woodhouse, Wodehouse. The intermediate form was wodwysse (temp. Ed. III.). Hence the names Woodiwiss, Widdiwiss, and perhaps Whitewish—

"Wodewose, silvanus, satirus" (Prompt. Parv.).

Probably some names derive directly from the Robin Hood pageant—

"Bishop Latimer relates that, going to preach at a certain church, he found it locked, because the inhabitants were all attending Robin Hood—so he 'was faine to give place to Robin Hoode's men'" (Strutt).

On this see also Note to to Scott's Abbot. The character of Friar Tuck would account for some of our Fryers, Freres, etc., and no doubt Littlejohn sometimes belongs to this group. Merriman may have been applied to a cheerful person, but it was also the regular epithet for the followers of a knight or outlaw,1 especially in the phrase "Robin Hood and his Merry Men." It has also been altered to Merriment. In the same way we may perhaps assume that Wiseman, besides its literal meaning, may have been one of the "wise men" of the East in the Candlemas pageant. Greenleaf was, according to Lower, also a character in the Robin Hood celebrations, and he quotes, from Fabian's Chronicle, mention of "a felow wych had renued many of Robyn Hodes pagentes, which named hymselfe Grenelet" (1502). Robert of the Lefgrene (Pat. R.) has some savour of the outlaw in his name. Mylord is perhaps for may-lord, "a young man chosen to preside over the festivities of May-Day " (NED.), but Melady, which looks like may-lady, is for Melody, an Irish name.

A few great names from antiquity may have figured in the pageants. One clear example seems to be Hercules, also found as Herkless, Arculus, Arkless, who, in the character of a swaggering bully, was quite familiar to the Middle Ages. Both Chaucer and Shakespeare deprive him of the aspirate—

"My chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely" (Midsummer Night's Dream, i. 2).

Another name of somewhat similar character is Brettoner, Bruttner, a libel on the men of Brittany—

"A Brutiner, a braggere, a-bostede him also" (Piers Plowm. A. 7, 142).

Cf. William le Tirant (Fine R.), and such names as Alexander and Cæsar which may obviously be sometimes of dramatic origin. Cupitt, Cupiss, common in Derbyshire, may quite well be from Cupid [William Cupide, Leic. Bor. Rec. 1199]. But classical surnames, with a few exceptions, are not what they seem, e.g. Hector is local, "high tor" (p. 81), Cato is also local, at the "hoe" or "how" frequented by wild cats [Robert de Catho, Fine R.], and Kitto, which looks like its offspring, is a Cornish name, ultimately a dim. of the Welsh Griffith. Phoenix appears to be a nickname. The word was common in Middle English in the sense of a paragon, and Finnis may sometimes represent its popular form fenice, OF. fenis—

"Hic phenix, a phenes" (Voc.).

Finally, we come to the rather large group of surnames taken from abstract qualities. To the Puritans we owe such baptismal names, generally female, as Faith, Hope, Charity, but this fashion came too late for surname purposes. The same tendency can be observed much further back in the history of names. We have such Greek names as Sophia, wisdom, Irene, peace, and many of the Teutonic names, which represent our oldest stratum, are formed from abstract ideas, e.g. the shortened Hugh is simply AS. hyge, mind. It is equally natural that medieval Englishmen should have nicknamed people by the names of the virtues and vices which they seemed to personify, and, as the epigraph of this chapter seems to show, there can be little doubt that such names were often acquired by those who had played abstract parts in the moralities.

No doubt some of the existing surnames of this type are imitative corruptions, e.g. Choyce is for the font-name Joyce [William Choys, Pat. R.], Victory is probably an alteration of Vickery, an early form of Vicar, Honour is local, from the same word used of a special kind of fief (see p. 63). Element is for Elliman. which, in its turn, may represent the "man" of Ellis, or F. Allemand, which has generally become Allman; Emblem is an imitative spelling of Emblin (Emmeline); Memory or Membery is local for Mowbray, from Montbrai (Manche), the origin also of Momerie, Mummery; Argument is probably from Aigremont, a common French place-name; Drought and Troth are AS. thryth, might, an element in many Anglo-Saxon names; Courage is a hamlet in Berks, but still Courage is a French surname; Foresight is the local Forsyth; Zeal is a parish in Devon; Trust is short for Trustrum, i.e. Tristram, and so on. Other examples of such imitative forms will be found scattered about in other chapters, but in none of the above, and similar, cases is the literal meaning absolutely barred.

But, allowing for this incessant striving after a significant form, there remain a considerable number of abstract surnames which can be taken at their face value. Both Virtue and Vice are well-established surnames. Of the three cardinal virtues, Faith, Hope, Charity, Hope is generally local (see p. 81), and Charity has also a double origin. It is usually abstract [John Caritas, Leic. Bor. Rec., John Charité, Pat. R.], but Brother Miles of La Charité of the Priory of St. Andrew's, Northampton (Pat. R.), points to charité in its Old French sense of hospice, refuge. Verity is a true abstract, found also in the popular forms Vardy, Varty. It is a common name in the West Riding. With Pride [Richard Pride, Fine R.], naturally a favourite figure in edifying drama, we may compare Orgill, Fr. orgueil [Gerard Orgoyl, City D.]. Gentry formerly meant both high rank and good breeding. Chaucer says of the lion—

"Of his genterye

(Legend of Good Women, 394).

See also Hamlet, ii. 2. Kindness has parallels in Fr. Bonté [cf. Nicholas Bonty, Close R.] and our Goodship, but, being a Border name, it may be rather Mackinnis, with the common loss of the prefix. With Wonder cf. Marvell [Geoffrey Merveyle, Pat. R.]. Speed and Goodspeed are genuine [Stephen Sped, Fine R., Ralph Godisped, Hund. R.]. Hazard is perhaps usually baptismal, AS. Æscheard, whence also Hassard, Hassett, but the existence of Chance, Luck, Ventur is [William Aventur, Hund. R.] shows that it may also be a nickname. Bad luck was responsible for the name of John Amesas (Hund. R.), who habitually made the lowest throw in dicing—

"I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life" (All's Well, ii. 3).

Craft is generally a variant of the local Croft, but the abstract Kraft is a German surname. Forfeitt had formerly the sense of wrong-doing [cf. Thomas Trespas, Hund. R.]. Profit is of course for the nickname Prophet (p. 198). Glew, Glue is an archaic form of glee [Agnes Glewe, Hund. R.]—

"Glu, or menstralsy, musica, armonia" (Prompt. Parv.).

Vices and virtues are equally well represented. Trickery, a Devon name, has a parallel in Engayne, OF. engan, trickery, a very common name in the Rolls, starting with Richard Ingania (DB.). It seems to have become Engeham, now nearly absorbed by the local Ingham. With Greed [William Grede, Pipe R.] cf. Greedy [Helya le Gredie, Leic. Bor. Rec.]. Tredgett, or Trudgett, is ME. treget, jugglery, deceit [cf. Simon le Tregetor, Hund. R.]—

"By my treget, I gadre and threste
The gret tresour into my cheste"
(Romaunt of the Rose, 1825).

Fitton [Richard Fiton, Fine R.] is a common Middle English word for lying, deceit. Its origin is disputed, but the NED. regards derivation from fiction as inadmissible—

"Fytten, mensonge, menterie" (Palsg.).

Boast had in Middle English the sense of boasting, vainglory [Robert dictus Bost, Archbp. Peckham's Let.].

Cf. Galfridus Gloriosus <sup>1</sup> (Pipe R.) and John le Boster (Pat. R.). Bessemer, Bismire is ME. bismer, mockery [William Bessemere, Hund. R.], Ryott <sup>2</sup> [Philip Ryot, Close R.] once meant debauchery, riotous living, and I should guess that Surkett, Serkitt, Circuitt is related to OF. and ME. surquidie, arrogance—

"Presumpcioun . . . is called surquidie" (Chauc. I. 403).

More pleasant qualities are embodied in the names Worship [Thomas Worthshipp, Close R.], Thrift, corrupted to Frift, Sillence, Patience, Pennance, Prudence [Henry Prudence, Feet of Fines], Goodhead, i.e. goodness, Comfort [William Cumfort, Hund. R.], with which cf. Sollas [Ralph Solaz, Northumb. Ass. R.], Manship, Manchip, corresponding generally in Middle English to Lat. virtus, Friendship, Quaintance [John Cointance, Lib. R.], and Brotherhood—

"And ech of hem gan oother for tassure
Of bretherhede whil that hir lyf may dure" (Chauc, B. 1231).

This last name may be also local, of the same type as Monkhouse, Nunnery, etc. Holness might be a contraction of Holderness (Yorks), but it is purely a Kentish name and no doubt for "holiness." Welfare is certified by Ger. Wohlfart. Cf. Farewell, Farwell,

* Holyhead is doubtful. In Middle English it means "holiness," but I have found the name, also as Hollyhead, in the neighbourhood of the Hollin- surnames, so it may be equivalent to Hollingshead, i.e. at the "holly head."

and the parallel Ger. Lebwohl. With Service, Sarvis, and Fairservice cf. Thomas Wrangeservis (Writs of Parl.). Lawty, Lewty, Luty is "lealty," OF. leauté [Thomas Leauté, Pat. R.]. The French troops in Morocco are at present (Nov. 1915) commanded by General Lyautey, and the more anglicized form Loalday is an existing English surname—

"Thenne swar a bocher, 'By my leauté!
Shalt thou ner mor the Kyng of Fraunce se.'" (Song on the Battle of Courtrai, temp. Ed. I.).

The corresponding native name is Holdship, AS. holdscipe, loyalty. With Counsell [John Counseil, City D.] we may compare Read, Reed, among the many origins of which must be included ME. rede, counsel—

"Reed, counsell, concilium" (Prompt. Parv.).

Hence Goodread, Goodred, Goodered [Richard Goderede, F. of. Y. 1465], and Meiklereid. In Middle English we find the less complimentary Robert Smalred (Pipe R.), Philip Lytylred (John of Gaunt's Reg. 1372-6), and William Thynnewyt (Lanc. Court. R. 1325).

Instance meant in Middle English eager supplication. Peace usually belongs to this group [William Pays, Fine R., Nicholas Pax, Hund. R.], and Small-peace, Smallpeice, very common in Surrey, is its opposite. Hawisia Crist a pes (Nott. Bor. Rec.) was so named from her habitual ejaculation, which was probably not unconnected with the fact that her husband was Henry Lytilprud, i.e. "little worth," whence our Littleproud. It contains the older form of the common ME. prow, profit, use, whence also in some cases the surname Prow—

"That shul been for youre hele and for youre prow" (Chauc. B. 4140).

Nor is it likely that our name Heal is quite independent of the common ME. hele, health, salvation.

Deeming appears to mean judgment—

"Ffor drede that they had of demyng therafter" (Richard the Redeless, ii. 94).

With this cf. Sentance, Sentence, and William Jugement (Worc. Priory Reg.). Flattery is a quality that lends itself readily to dramatic impersonation. Hardiment in Chaucer means courage, daring—

"Artow in Troye, and hast non hardiment
To take a womman which that loveth thee?"

(Troilus and Criseyde, iv. 533).

Travell retains the older meaning of travail, toil; Plenty was in the thirteenth century the name of a lady [Christina Plenté, Hund. R.], and a ship called la Plentee is mentioned in the Pat. R. Skill also apparently belongs here [Walter Skil, Pat. R.]; cf.

Slight, usually for "sleight" [Johannes dictus Slegh or Slegt, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.]. Wisdom is derived by Lower from an estate in Devon, but it is always found without de [Hugh Wysdam, Hund. R.]. The oldest meaning of Purchase is pursuit, pillage [Andrew Purchaz, Fine R.], it is also one origin of Purkiss [John Purkase, Hund. R.], also Pirkiss, Porcas, Porkiss. In fact there is hardly a common abstract term which could conceivably be personified in an individual that does not exist as a modern surname; and for most of these names medieval prototypes can be quoted.<sup>2</sup>

Physick and Dainteth, Dentith are of special interest. The former has generally been explained as an imitative corruption of the local Fishwick. This may be true in some cases, but "physic" is personified by Langland—and Richard Physik (Malmesbury Abbey Reg.) certifies it as a nickname. Dainteth is an archaic form of Dainty. The latter, a Northants name, is generally local, of Daventry, or Daintry, in that county. But Dainteth [Agnes Deynteth, Nott. Bor. Rec.] is OF. deintet, Lat. dignitat-em, and shows the transition of the final dental on its way to complete disappearance. The only existing word which preserves this intermediate sound is faith, OF. feid (foi), Lat. fid-em.

"Phisik shal his furred hodes for his fode sele" (Piers Plowm. B. vi. 271)—

The two names Nation and Sumption, Sumsion may be for Incarnation and Assumption.¹ If so, they do not belong to this chapter, but to the group of names taken from church seasons, such as Christmas, Pentecost, Middlemas, etc. But they may equally well be for "damnation" and "presumption."² A very possible pageant name is Welladvise, Wellavize, Willavise,³ the "well advised"; but dial. well-avized, comely, is related to visage; cf. black-avized, swarthy. For the loss of the final -d, cf. Wellbelove, Wellbelow for Wellbeloved.

<sup>2</sup> This loss of the first syllable is normal in dialect speech. It is just as natural that the north-country name Tinnion should be for Justinian [Justinian Penyfader, Archbishop Peckham's Reg. 1279-92] as that King Constantine of Greece should be called Tino by his imperial brother-in-law.

CHAPTER XI

SOME COMPOUND NAMES

"'This infant was called John Little,' quoth he, 'Which name shall be changed anon. The words we'll transpose, and wherever he goes, His name shall be called Little-John'"

(Old Ballad).

A TYPE of surname which is very common in Middle English, and is still strongly represented in the Directory, is that of which we may take Brownsmith, Littlejohn, Goodchild, Dawbarn, as types, i.e. surnames formed by adding a qualifying word to an occupative name, a baptismal name, or a name indicating relationship. Brownsmith is the smith with the brown complexion, Littlejohn points to a small ancestor, but probably also to one who had enacted the part of Little John in some Robin Hood play or procession, Goodchild is pretty obvious, and Dawbarn means the "bairn" of Daw, i.e. David.

Compounds of this type are very much more numerous in French and German than in English (see chs. xiii, xiv), but we have a fairly large number of them, some common, some rare, and many which have never been explained. Taking first the occupative class. we notice that these compounds occur chiefly in connection with the true old English words which lack the later agential suffix -er. They are connected with the essential activities of life, and are thus distinguished from the more modern names which spring from the shopkeeper and the specialized craftsman.1 These names are Wright, Smith, Hunt, Webb, Bond, the farmer, with its compound Husband, and Grieve or Reeve, the farm steward. To these we may add Hine. later Hind, Mann, which often means simply the servant, Knight, originally also the servant, Herd, the herdsman, Day, the farm worker, Swain, knave, and Ladd. Nearly all of these are found in compounds and those of Wright and Smith are fairly numerous. though insignificant when compared with the German compounds of Schmidt and Meyer (see p. 298).

From Wright 3 we get, according to the nature of the occupation, the very obvious Boatwright or Botwright, Cartwright, Cheesewright, Plowright, Shipwright, Sivewright, Wainwright, Wheelwright, Woodwright may be the wright who lived in the wood (cf. Wildsmith, p. 228), but more probably the "mad" wright; cf. Woodmason, and see p. 308. In Arkwright we have the dialect ark, a bin, meal-chest, and Tellwright is for tile-wright. William Basketwricte (Pat. R.), Thomas le Glasenwryth (Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301–60), have given way to Basketter and Glaisher, and I have found no descendants of Matthew le Glewryte (Pat. R.), Simon le Bordwryte ( $I \phi M$ .), or Richard le Hairwright (Leic. Bor. Bec.). The personality of the Wright is expressed in Goodwright, Micklewright, Oldwright, Whitewright, and John Longus Faber (Writs of Parl.). Allwright, Woolwright, may be imitative spellings of the AS. Ealdric and Wulfric, but the first may equally well be for Oldwright, northern auld-, and the latter may mean a wool-worker. Goodwright (v.s.) may be AS. Godric, and Seawright is from AS. Særic, or perhaps from the more common Sigeric; cf. Seaward from Sæweard or Sigeweard. Aldritt may belong here or to Aldred, AS. Ealdred. Henwright is the Irish name Enright, Enraght, and Kenwright is for Kenrick, AS. Coenric. Many of the above names are sometimes spelt -right instead of -wright.

The technical compounds of Smith are curiously few. Blacksmith and Whitesmith are both said to exist by Lower, though I have not come across them, and Locksmith has generally yielded to Locker, Lockyer. With Brownsmith (p. 225) cf. Randolf Redsmith (Nott. Bor. Rec.). On the analogy of Plowright we should expect Harrismith, Harrowsmith to mean "harrow smith," but I expect they are perversions of Arrowsmith [John le Arewesmyth, Pat. R.], which, in America, has become Arsmith. Greensmith is local, the smith on the green, and Wildsmith, Wilesmith, is the smith in the wild, rather a Forest Lovers sort of figure; cf. Shawsmith, Brooksmith. Specialists have given the names Shoesmith, Shearsmith. Sixsmith may contain scythe, the earliest Anglo-Saxon form of which is sighth, or more probably sickle [John Sykelsmith, IpM.]. In Sucksmith, Shucksmith, we have Fr. soc, a plough-share, whence ME. sock, suck, still in dial use—

"Y' sucke of a plow, venter" (Manip. Voc.).

Grossmith is, I think, comparatively recent, and adapted from Ger. Grobschmied, blacksmith. Clocksmith, of which there are several examples in the Repton Register (1578–1670), appears to be extinct. Nasmyth, Naysmith, is explained by Lower as "nail smith," by Bardsley as "knife-smith." The fact that Knifesmythe was a medieval name, surviving into the sixteenth century as Knysmithe, is in favour of the second derivation. Being a Scottish name, it inevitably has a legendary origin. Some prince or noble, fleeing from his enemies, took refuge in a shoeing forge and hastily donned the garb of a journeyman smith. The pursuers, of course, came to the same smithy to get one of their horses shod, and at once noticed the clumsiness of the smith's assistant. "You're nae smith" were the words that showed he was detected. Though led away captive, we may assume that he was released and had issue. Otherwise there could be no Nasymths now! Lower also gives Spearsmith and Bucksmith, which I have not met with. The latter is perhaps for "buckle-smith"—

"Bokell smythes leches and gold beters"

(Cocke Lorelle).

Greysmith, like Brownsmith, refers to personal appearance; cf. Robert Greygroom (Fine R.).

I do not know of any modern compounds of Hunt, and only one of the later Hunter, viz. Todhunter, i.e. fox-hunter, but in the Rolls we find Foxhunt, Boarhunt, Wolfhunt. Hunt has flourished at the expense of Hunter by absorbing the nickname hund, hound [Henry le Hund, Pat. R.], and is also local, "of the hunt"; cf. the still existing Delahunte. The office of Common Hunt to the City of London was not abolished till 1807. The corresponding OF. veneur has given us Venour and Venner. Gravenor, though it has interchanged with Grosvenor, is etymologically grand veneur [Richard le Grantvenor, Fine R.]. Hunt is one of the few occupative names of which the feminine form has also given a surname. This is found as

Huntress, Huntriss [Agnes Venatrix, Hund. R.]. The only other names of this type I have found are Pewtress, Vickress, and possibly Clarges [Juliana la Clergesse, Malmesbury Abbcy Reg.]. Such names were once commoner, e.g. in the Gloucester Cartulary occur Alice la Carteres, Alice la Horsmannes, Isabella le Prestes, Matilda le Piperes.

Webb has, I think, only two compounds, Greenwebb, the weaver who lived on the green (cf. Greensmith), and Norwebb, the weaver at the north end of the town; with these cf. John le Bothwebb (Malmesbury Abbey Reg.), i.e. the weaver who occupied a booth. Pascoewebb, Pascal the weaver, is an example of a formation which is commoner in French and German (see p. 228, n. 1). Bond 2 gives Newbond, Newbound [Walter le Newebond, Hund. R.], and Blackbond, Blackband, while corresponding to Younghusband we find John Yongebonde (Chart. R.). Goodban, Goodband may belong here or to Goodbairn. Willbond may be for "wild bond" [cf. Edwin Wildegrome, Pipe R.]. Lovibond, Loveband, Levibond, seems to mean "the dear bond" [Nicholas Leveband, Hund. R.]; cf. Loveday (q.v.). Lightbound is an alteration of the local Lightborne (Lanc.).

Grieve, with the imitative spelling Grief, has a compound Fairgrief, Fairgray. Forgreive is perhaps rather to be compared with Forman, a leader. Reeve is also found as Reef. Its compounds are very numerous in Middle English, and it is strange that so few have survived. I find Oldreive [William le Oldereve, Pat. R.], which, as a modern Devon surname, is neighboured by Oldrey (cf. Fairgray), and of course Sherriff (shire reeve). Shreeve, Shrive, a name less often due, perhaps, to official position than to a successful interpretation of the Sheriff of Nottingham in a Robin Hood pageant. The Scottish form Shirra also exists as a surname. and I suspect that Shearer, Sharer, a common name in Scotland, is sometimes of the same origin. I cannot help thinking that Woodroffe, Woodruff, a plant nickname, owes something to the woodreeve, i.e. Woodward. But the apparent disappearance of the borough-reeve, dike-reeve, port-reeve, etc., is curious. Perhaps they were converted into Borrowman, Berryman, Dickman, and Portman, as the word reeve became archaic.

From Hine we have Goodhind [John Godhine, Wore. Priory Reg.], a type of name [Richard Fidelis Serviens, Ramsey Cart.] once very common. With Goodlad, Goodlud, Goodlet, cf. the common French names Bonvillain, Bonvalet, and the extinct Robert le Godegrom (Hund. R.), and Richard le Lovegrom (Malmesbury Abbey Reg.). Lightlad 2 (little) and the synonymous Petivallet exist as English names. With Goodlass cf. Sotelass (sweet). Goddard is occasionally the "good herd"; cf. Whiteheard, Whittard for "white herd." The prefix Bon- is common in the Rolls [Richard

It is generally a sheep-shearer, and, in Northumbria, a reaper.
 The only surviving compound of "boy" appears to be Littleboy.

Warboy is of course from Warboys (Camb.), and Mortiboy, Martiboy, found also as Mortiboys, evidently comes from some "dead wood."

Bonswan, Coram Rege R. 1297; cf. Bonfellow for Goodfellow. To this class belongs Goodhugh, Goodhue, Goodhew, which I have previously explained 1 as for "good Hugh," an explanation which may in some cases be right, for the name is fairly common, and Hugh, which probably ranks sixth in popularity (after John, William, Thomas, Robert, Richard) among medieval font-names, may naturally have joined the Littlejohn, Goodwillie class [John Godehugh, Pat. R.]. But the real origin, from ME. hiwe, servant, jumps to the eyes [John Godhyue, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4]. And the same word hiwe is often the origin of the usually baptismal Hugh, Hew, Hewes, etc., just as hine is of Hine, Hinds, etc. In fact, the two words, which are ultimately cognate, are used as equivalent in Middle English-

"He withalt non hewe, var. hyne, hus hyre overe even" (Piers Plowman, C. viii. 195).

Thrale represents thrall, a serf [John le Thryl, Pat. R.]. Goodchap is for Goodcheap, a nickname for a tradesman [Jordan Godchep, City A.]. Cf. Geoffrey Bonmarché (City A.), whose name survives as Bomash—

"Bon marché, good cheap, dog cheap, a low rate, a reasonable price" (Cotg.).

Goodgame, which Bardsley derives from the medieval Goodgroom, is, as the example [Walter Godgamen, Hund. R.] shows, an abstract nickname, "good sport," perhaps equivalent to Fairplay. From Ladd we have the dim. Ladkin. The apparent compound

Sommerlat, Summerlad  $^1$  is ON. Sumerlida, summer warrior, of very common occurrence in Anglo-Saxon records [Sumerlede, DB.]; cf. William Sumersweyn (Ramsey Cart.) and Winterled (DB.), the latter a Viking of sterner stuff.

The original meaning of "dey" was a "kneader." as in AS. hlafdige, loaf kneader, whence lady.<sup>2</sup> It was then used of a woman servant, especially a dairy woman, and later of a farm-worker in general. Goodday is sometimes from this word; cf. Goodhind, Goodhew, Faraday, Fereday, Ferriday has been explained as "travelling day," from ME. fere, to travel. The formation would be like that of Delveday (v.i.), but I have found no early examples. The Lincolnshire name Tolliday or Tolladay is very puzzling. It may mean "Tolley the dey," or the "dey of Tolley" [cf. Godus Tholynwyf, 1307, Bardsley]. In Leic. Bor. Rec. occurs the name of Richard Tollidenoitt (AF. toille de noit, toil by night). Was the first Tolliday the opposite of this? Or does the name represent "toil dey"? Cf. William Delveday (City C.), William Plouday 3 (Hund. R.). The fairly common Loveday, though usually of similar origin to Holiday, Hockaday, must in some cases actually represent an archaic form of lady [Margot la Levedy, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4]. It may also be simply the dear servant; cf. Richard le Lovegrom (Malmesbury Abbey Reg.).

Knave, once common in compounds [William Gode-knave, IpM., Ascelin Wyteknave, Hund. R.], has not entirely disappeared. It still survives as Kneefe, Nave, usually absorbed by Neave, ME. neve, nephew, and in the compounds Balnave, servant of Baldwin, and Beatniff, servant of Beatrice. If Pecksniff is a real name, it means the servant of Peck. It is possible that in these names, as in Attneave (Adam), the suffix is -neve, which would bring them into the group of kinship compounds (p. 245); but Stephen le Knef (Pat. R.) favours the first solution.

AS. ceorl, churl, survives as Carle, with dim, Carlin, 1 but I find no modern form of Aldceorl (Lib. Vit.). Swain, a Norse word for servant, is cognate with AS. Swan, with the same meaning. From it we have Goodswin, Goodswen, while Goldswain means the "swain" of a man named Gold. Coxon and Bocson are very suggestive of coxswain and Boatswain. I find Boeson still in Kent, where it has an ancestor [John Botsweyn, Pat. R., Canterbury, but Coxon is rather Cock's son. Another name of this type is Dreng, Dring, which, like so many of this class, ranges from the poetic meaning of warrior to the prose meaning of servant. It has also given Thring, a variant used by Layamon. The Yorkshire name Kettlestring means the dring of Kettle. We also find compounds of a few very common exotic names, e.g. Clark, whence Beauclerk, Bunclark (bon clerc), and Manclark 3 [Saegær Malclerc, Pipe R.], From Fr. Mauclerc we have Mockler, and, if Buckler were not already so well provided with ancestors, it could be similarly referred to Beauclerc. With the dim. Clarkin cf. Robert Peticlerc (City D.). Similarly from Ward we have Pettiward [Roger Petygard, Pat. R.]. Malpress is AF. mal prest, bad priest. Cf. Allpress (p. 287).

Knight has a by-form Knevit, Knivet, apparently due to Norman treatment of the -gh- sound. Compounds of Knight are Halfnight and Roadnight, Rodnight, both usually without the -k-. The former, AS. radcniht, was a tenant who held his land on condition of accompanying his lord as a mounted servitor. He was the same as a "knight-rider," a title which survives as a London street, though not as a surname. Another name for the same rank was AS. radman, whence Rodman. Midnight is simply a nickname [Henry Midnight, Pat. R.], perhaps for a man of gloomy temperament.1 The corresponding Neirnuit, latinized Nigra nox, is common in the Rolls [Richard Nevrnuyt, Pat. R.], and the contrasted Midday was a fourteenth-century nickname. Midy is found in French and Mittnacht in German. Halfnight [John le Halfknyght, Chanc. R.] seems to be unknown to the dictionaries. As ME. halfman, coward, has also survived as Halfman, Halman, I take it that a "half-knight" was a servitor of small efficiency; cf. Richard

Or he may have been a man of midnight activities, but I think the first suggestion more probable. Cf. the numerous -weathers in English and -wetters in German. We have Fairweather or Fareweather, Merryweather, Manyweathers, an uncertain person, Allweather, and even Fouweather [William Foulweder, Ramsey Chart.].

Alfthein (Pleas). Which brings us naturally to Doubleday—

"In Sunderland live, in the same house, Mr. Doubleday and Miss Halfknight" (Notes and Queries, Aug. 30, 1873).

I fancy that the Doubleday [Ranulf Dubleday, Fine R.] was not only a Goodday (p. 233), but actually as good as two. If this conjecture is right, Doubleday and Halfnight offered as strong a contrast in the thirteenth century as they apparently do in the twentieth. Doubleday may, however, be a fantastic formation of the same type as Twiceaday (p. 180), and as impossible of explanation.

Mann often means servant [Michael le Man, Hund. R., Henry le Man, City B.]. Its compounds are very numerous, and, though the -man in them does not always mean servant, it may be of interest to explain a certain number of them here. If we take the commonest, viz, Goodman, we can see that it has many possible origins—(1) the AS. Godman [William] f. Godemon, Lanc. Ing. 1310-33], or Godmund, with the common substitution of -man for -mund, (2) the good "man," i.e. servant, (3) the "man" of Good, a common personal name (see p. 30), (4) the "good man," (5) the "goodman" of the house, i.e. the master. With this cf. Goodiff, Goodey, which represents "goodwife," just as Hussey is occasionally from "housewife" [Richard Husewyf, Fine R.], When -man is added to a personal name, it usually means servant of, e.g. Addyman, Harriman, Potman (Philpot), Human (Hugh), Monkman, Gilman, Wilman, Jackaman may also represent the French dims. Guillemin, Wuillemin, Jacquemin. It is often local, generally with a suggestion of occupation, e.g. Brickman (bridge). Houseman, Kitchingman, Yeatman (gate), Parkman, Smithyman, Meatman (mead), Moorman, Sellerman (cellar). With these go Chesterman, Penkethman, the only examples I know of -man added to a specific placename, and both from the same county (Chesh.). Nyman is AS. neahmann; cf. Neighbour. Sometimes -man is attached to the name of the commodity which the bearer produced or sold, e.g. Flaxman, Wadman (woad), Honeyman [Gilbert le Honyman, Pat. R.]. In a large number of cases such names descend from personal names in -man or -mund, e.g. Ashman, Chilman, Osman, Rickman, Walkman [Æscman, Ceolmund, Osmund, Ricman, Wealhman]. Cf. the numerous Greek names in -ander, Alexander, Lysander, etc. Pure nicknames of medieval origin are Bleakman (pale), Hindman (ME, hende, courteous), Lyteman, Lillyman, Lutman (little), Proudman, Slyman or Sleeman. Juneman is a hybrid, from Fr. jeune, whence also June. Some of these compounds are deceptive, e.g. Bestman is occupative, the "beast man" (cf. Bester, p. 114); so also Coltman, Fullman (foal). Cappleman (ME. capel, a nag), Palfreyman, Chessman is for Cheeseman, and Beautyman or Bootyman, which Lower identifies with "bothie man," from Sc. bothie, a hut, is possibly a nickname, equivalent to Bonnyman, though its formation would be unusual. Cf. Booty, which is certainly in some cases from "beauty" [William Beauté, Close R.]. I fancy that Middleman 1 is for "mickle man," as Middlemas is for Michaelmas. This ending is also substituted for the local -nham, e.g. Sweatman for Swettenham (Chesh.), Tottman for Tottenham (Middlesex), Twyman for Twynam (Hants). In many of the commoner names of this type more than one origin has to be considered; see Goodman (p. 236).

The following Middle English examples show how words indicating servitude were tacked on to the names of employers—

The last of these corresponds in meaning with the AS. Godescealc, servant of God [William Godescal,

This name suggests a parallel with those Celtic names with a prefix which originally meant servant, the second element being God, Christ, Mary, etc., or a saint's name. Such are the Scottish names in Gil-, i.e. "gilly," e.g. Gillies, servant of Jesus, which, when proceded by Mac-, becomes MacLeish. Scotch names in Mal-, Milmean "tonsured servant," Gaelic maol, bald. Hence Malise or Mellis, servant of Jesus, Malcolm, servant of Columba [Malcolumb f.

Pat. R.], for Cock, which has various origins as a surname, was once the familiar appellation for a servant. The boy in Gammer Gurton's Needle is always referred to by this name—

"My Gammer is so out of course, and frantyke all at ones, That Cocke, our boy, and I poor wench, have felt it in our bones."

Some of the names ending in -cock may contain this meaning, e.g. Johncock may mean John's boy or John the boy.

It is especially from the type of occupative names dealt with in the preceding pages that we find formations in -son. Such are Smithson, Wrightson, Grayson (grieve's son), Rayson, Reason, Raisin (reeve's son), Herdson, Hindson, Manson, Dayson, Ladson, Swainson, Hewson, Clarkson. Other names of this type are Archerson, Cookson or Cuckson, Taylorson, Shepherdson, Sargisson (sergeant), etc. Sardison is no doubt a corruption of the last name, as both are equally common in Lincolnshire. Surgison, like Surgerman, may belong to Sargent or Surgeon, the latter still a surname, though almost absorbed by the former.

Waldefer, Archbp. Gray's Reg. 1225-54]. It is found also as Milin Milvain (Bean) and Macmillan, son of the bald gilly. In Ireland we have such names as Malone (John), and a great number in Mulwhile Mylecrist represents the Manx form. In Cospatrick, Gospatrick the prefix is cognate with Welsh gwas, man, whence the Fr. vassal.

<sup>2</sup> Manson is perhaps more usually for Magnusson, an Orkney and Shetland name. Magnus became a personal name in Scandinavia owing to the fame of Charlemagne, Carolus Magnus. The Vikings took it to the northern islands, where it became a surname. In Ireland it has given MacManus.

Surgenor represents an obsolete elaboration of Surgeon. Woodison may be "son of the woodward." As for Crowdson, Crewdson, I believe it is the son of the Crowder or fiddler, a kind of cousin of Tom the Piper's son. It belongs to Lancashire, which is the home of this type of name; cf. Adam le Harpersone (Lanc. Court R. 1323-4), and Rutson, the latter the son of the Rutter, or fiddler.

While on this subject, it should be noticed that many apparent -son names are really local. One may spend some time on Crowson and Strawson before discovering that they are local pronunciations of Croxton (Norf.) and Stroxton (Linc.). So also Frogson is corrupted from Frodsham, Cawson from Causton, Musson sometimes from Muston, Wesson from Weston, Esson from Easton, Foxon from Foxton, and Brobson is a perversion of Brabazon, the man from Brabant. On the other hand, the Scottish Johnston is generally an improved version of Johnson (Macbain).

Before leaving the subject of compound occupative names, there are a few deceptive or obsolete examples worth noting. Fairminer or Farminer is simply a corruption of Fairmaner, which may allude to the good manners of the original possessor, but is more likely local; cf. Fr. Beaumanoir. Longmate, like Mate, contains mead. Fairbard is probably for Fairbeard, though the simple Bard is a thirteenth-century surname [William le Bard, Coram Rege R. 1297], i.e. much earlier than its recognition as a dictionary word. Its Scottish form is Baird, and the word has risen in the world—

In Goodearl the second element may be rather the personal name Earl [Stephen f. Erl, Ramsey Cart.] than the title, but cf. John Brounbaron (Pat. R.), John Folbaroun (ib.). Littlepage, Smallpage need no explanations, and Pennycook 1 or Pennycock is for the local Penicuik (Midlothian).

Along with these may be mentioned a few compound animal nicknames such as Goodlamb, Whitelam, Wildgoose, Willgoss, Wildgust [Edric Wildegos, Feet of Fines], Graygoose, Wildrake, Hornram, Wildbore, Wilgress, dial. grice, pig [William Wildegris, I p M.], Duncalf [cf. Henry Dunfoul, Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301-60], Metcalfe 3 (mead calf?). The Oxfordshire Fortnum is from Fr. fort anon [Nicholas Fortanon, Hund, R., Oxf.]. Names of this type were once much commoner. Cf. Gilbert Blakeram (Hund. R.). Thomas Bonrouncyn (Pat. R.), Gilbert Dayfoul (ib.). With the Wild- names cf. David Wildebuf (Hund. R.). In Wildman the first element is descriptive rather than local [cf. Ædwin Wildegrome, Pipe R.], but Wilder is local, of the wilderne or wilderness [John atte Wilderne, Fine R.]. Machell, latinized as malus

catulus, and Machin, Fr. Malchien, are uncomplimentary compounds, but the latter has also other origins. Polecat [Thomas Polkat, Pat. R.] survives as Polliket. Weatherhogg, a Lincolnshire name, means in that county a male pig.

Among surnames compounded from font-names John leads easily, as do Jean in French and Johann or Hans in German. In the latter language, with its love of compounds, we find something like a hundred names which contain Johann or its pet forms. From LG. Lütjens, little John, comes our Lutyens. In English we have Brownjohn, Goodjohn, Littlejohn, Micklejohn or Meiklejohn, Prettyjohn, Properjohn. With Fosterjohn, i.e. John the Foster (see p. 119), cf. Pascoewebb (p. 230). With Upjohn, for Welsh ap John, cf. Uprichard. The fact that John was used like Jack, almost as an equivalent of man or servant, will explain Durand le Bon Johan (Hund. R.), the origin perhaps of Bowgen, Budgen. Similarly Grudgeon seems to represent Fr. Grosjean and Pridgeon Fr. Preux 1-Jean, while Spridgeon, Spurgeon may be the same name with the prefixed S- which we occasionally find in surnames. Rabjohn 2 may be Robert the servant, or perhaps Robert the son, of John, and Camplejohn may mean wry-mouthed John, from the Keltic word which has given Campbell. With Dunbobbin, Dunbabin, cf. the obsolete Brounrobyn (Lanc. Ing. 1310-33). Goodrobert survives as Goodrop. With Goodwill, Goodwillie, cf. Hervey Pruguillun, i.e. Preux-Guillaume (Feet of Fines). But Goodwill may also be an abstract nickname; cf. Fr. Bonvouloir. Gaukrodger 1 means clumsy Roger, but Gaybell is an imitative perversion of Gabriel. Other apparently obsolete names of this class are Dungenyn (Exch. R.), a hybrid from the English adj. dun and Fr. Jeannin, Jolifewille (Pleas), Dulhumphrey (Lower), Petinicol (Hund. R.), Halupetir (ib.), Dumbbardolf (ib.), Dummakin (ib.), Makin, whence Makins, Meakin. being a dim. of Matthew, and Dunpayn (Fine R.), from the very common Pain or Pagan. Walter Gobigrant (Leic. Bor. Rec.) seems to mean "big Goby," i.e. Godbold. The only modern parallel I know to this formation, with the adjective put second, is Wyattcouch, i.e. little Guy the red (Cornish), unless Elsegood is for "good Ellis, or Alice," and Drakeyoung for Drake junior. Cf. William le Loverdnewe, i.e. the new lord  $(I \phi M.)$ . Goodbrand is a personal name, Norse Gudbrand, and Littledyke, which looks so obvious, may be for "little Dick" [cf. Richard Litellikke, 1385, Bardsley].

A good many surnames are formed by compounding terms indicating relationship. Now, excepting for a few interesting survivals, we use only -son or Fitz-, and, as early as the thirteenth century, we find such an illogical description as Margery le Prestesson (Pleas). The following medieval examples show a much greater variety—

Ricardus avunculus Wilhelmi (Pleas)
John Nikbrother . . . (Derbyshire Charters)

All the names of relationship have given surnames uncompounded, but usually with the addition of -s, e.g. Fathers, Fadder, Mothers, Sones, Soanes [Walter le Sone, Pat. R.], Fitz, Fice [Antony fice Greffown,

NED. c. 1435], Darter, Brothers, Brodder, Godson (cf. Fr. Lefilleul), Frere, Uncles, Eames (ME. eme, uncle), Child, Fant, Faunt (Fr. enfant), Cousins, Cozens, and even Cozze, Nephew (rare), Neave (ME. neve, nephew), Neech, Neese, Widdows, Gaffer or Gayfer (grandfather '), of which Gaff is perhaps the shortened form, Gammer (grandmother, as in Gammer Gurton's Needle), Belcher, Bowser, Bewsher, from OF. bel-sire, sometimes in the special sense of grandfather, Beldam, grandmother. With Bewsher cf. the opposite Malsher. Also Husband, Kinsman, Parent, Gossip, Comper [Roger le Comper, John of Gaunt's Reg.]—

" Compere, a gossip" (Cotg.).

With Comper goes Marrow, from archaic marrow, a companion, mate [John le Marwe or le Marewe, Leic. Bor. Rec.]—

"Marwe or felawe yn travayle, socius, compar" (Prompt. Parv.).

In one volume of the Fine R. we find John Darcy le

Broudeour, Bp. Kellawe's Reg.].

<sup>2</sup> From OF. nies, the nom. of neveu [Walter le Neise, Hund. R.]. It is found in Middle English. See NED., s.v. niece, where, however, the origin of the masculine word is not correctly explained. Neese may also be for "nose" (see p. 133).

Cosin, John Darcy le Frere, and John Darcy le Neveu, an example which shows how purely accidental is the possession of such surnames at the present day. Odam is ME. odam, son-in-law, cognate with Ger. Eidam, which now, like odam, is practically obsolete except as a surname—

"Octiatus, Daries' odame
(King Alexander, 14th cent.).

Foad, Foat, Food, found chiefly in Kent, represent ME. fode, a child [William le Fode, Cust. Battle Abbey]. For this word, really identical with food, see NED. Grandison is local, I suppose from Granson in Switzerland [Otto de Granson or de Grandisono, Fine R.], and Outerson is the son of Ughtred. Practically all the corresponding surnames exist in French and German, and there is even a Parisian named Peretmère (Bottin, 1907).

Of the compounds formed from kinship names the most interesting are those illustrated by the five last examples in the list of medieval compounds given on pp. 243, 244. ME. maugh, really identical with May (q.v.), seems to have been used vaguely for any relative by marriage—

from Richard, and especially Watmough, Whatmaugh, Whatmore, etc., from Walter. There are probably many more names of this class which still live in disguise, as the formation was once very common.

From ME. barn, bairn, etc., we have Whiteborn, the complimentary Fairbairn, Goodbairn, Goodband, Goodbun, and the patronymics Dawbarn (David) and Giberne (Gilbert). With Dearborn cf. Fr. Cherfils. Many names in -burn, e.g. Blackburn, Fairburn, Dayburn, may in some cases belong here. Maybin is probably the bairn of May and Huband the bairn (or perhaps bond) of Hugh. For Barnfather, Bairnsfather, Banfather, see p. 244. The simple barn is also one of the many origins of Barnes. With Fairchild, Goodchild, Littlechild, cf. Fauntleroy and Fillery, both meaning King's son (p. 18). Bonifant is bon enfant [Walter Bonenfant, Hund. R.], i.e. Goodson, Goodchild, and Bullivant, Pillivant includes both this and bel enfant [Colin Belenfan, Close R.]. The opposite Maliphant [Nicholas Maleffaunt, Pat. R., Alan Evilchild. Hund. R.] also exists. Richard Beaufaunt (Pat. R.) has perhaps contributed to Bevan or Biffen. The simplex exists as Fant, Faunt, Vant. With the obsolete Folenfant cf. the surviving Sillitant, while Selibarn (F. of Y.) is perhaps still represented by Sillibourne, Silburn. The epithet silly was rather complimentary than otherwise, for it meant gentle, innocent; cf. Roger Seliday (Pat. R.), Robert Selisaule (ib.).

cokkes soule," euphemistic for " by Goddes soule " (p. 181). In the Cambridge MS, of the same poem this is replaced by " by cokkes mawe."

sire," etc. With Alderson, usually "older son," cf. the common French surname Laîné. With the simple Alder, Elder, cf. Younger, but both the former are also tree-names. For some other surnames formed from comparatives, see p. 104.

The nickname sire [William le Syre, Fine R.] survives as Syer, Syers, Surr, Sirr. Its compounds are Bonser, Bouncer, Mountsier, Moncer, Muncer John Monsyre, Fine R.], Sweetsur [William Swetesyr, Pat. R.]. Goodsir, whence also perhaps Goacher, Goucher, Dunsire, which I cannot explain, and those mentioned on p. 245. Cosher perhaps represents "coy sire" [Simon Coysire, Hund, R.J. Maiden was used in Middle English of the unmarried of both sexes [John le Mayde, Pat. R., Ralph le Mayden, ib., William Pucele, ib.], but in compounds such as Chilmaid, Denmaid, Longmaid, Maidland, maid is for mead, a meadow. On the other hand, Mead often represents maid [John le Meide, Lond. Wills, 1279]. May, a young man or maiden, has the familiar compound Mildmay [cf. Richard Dusemay, Pat. R.], and the less common Whitmee [William Wytemey, Hund. R.] and Youngmay [Martin le Yungemey, ib.]. The simple May is also local, apparently from an obsolete variant of "mead" [William Attemay, Pat. R.]: cf. Smee for Smeed (p. 77). Burkmay, for "birk mead." suggests that Peachmay is possibly for "beech mead."

A few names which also suggest age and kinship may conclude the chapter. Such are Springall, Springate, Springett, Springhall, the springald, young man

Initial P- for B- is not uncommon in surnames.</sup>

[Auger Espringaut, Pat. R., Julian Springald, Hund. R.], and Stripling, Stribling [Adam Stripling, Pat. R.]. But the first group may also belong to the warlike instrument which was called a springald; cf. Mangnall (p. 162)—

(Romaunt of the Rose, 4190).

Damsell represents OF. damoisel, a young squire, rather than the fem. form. For Milsop, i.e. "milksop," see p. 268. Nursling, or Nutshalling, is a place in Hants. But John le Norrisone occurs in Nott. Court R., and the award of an honorary C.B. to Brigadier-General Nourrisson of the French Army has just been announced (Nov. 17, 1915)—

" Nourrisson, a nursling, nurse-child, or nursing child" (Cotg.).

Suckling is a genuine nickname, but Baby is rather for Barbara, as Gaby is for Gabriel. With Twin, whence Twint, cf. Gemmel, OF. gemel, used by Wyclif of Jacob and Esau [Alan Gemellus, Pipe R., Richard Gemel, Fine R.]. The Gemmels of Scotland, the chief home of the name, perhaps have another origin. Fr. Besson, whence our Bisson, is a dialect word for twin. Mankin, Miniken, is for "manikin" [Stephen Manekin, Testa de Nev.]. Neame, usually for ME. eme, uncle [cf. Thomas Nuncle, Pat. R.], is also an Anglo-French form of Fr. nain, dwarf [John le Neym, Pat. R.]. Male, Mayle, Maskelyne are simply what they appear to be [William le Male or Masculus, Percy Cart., Henry Maskelyn, Testa de Nev.], but Manfull, a Notts name, is from Mansfield, whence also the imitative Manifold. An interesting variant of Male is Madle, OF. masle, due to the Anglo-French practice of intercalating -d-between -sl- as in meddle, OF. mesler, idle, OF. isle (see Idle). Twoyearold is still a Lancashire surname and has a medieval parallel in Adam Fivewinterald.

To the obsolete examples quoted in this chapter may be added the following—Bonsquier, Childesfader (cf. Bairnsfather), Langebachelere, Belmeistre, Belverge, Bruncarl, Malfillastre (Fr. Maufilâtre, the bad son-in-law), Hardimarchaunt, Ladychapman, Trewchapman, Calveknave, Forsterknave, Rouknave, Smartknave, Whiteknave, Bonserjant, Aldegrome, Greygrom, Litelgrom, Shepgrom, Bonswayn, Madsweyn, Litsweyn, Sikersweyn (sure), Yongswayn, Surewyne (friend), Porbarn, Petytmey, Donemay, Prodemay, Levemay, Levedame, Lefquene, Quenemay, Sotemay (sweet), Boncristien, Bonchevaler, Bonseygnur, Frankchivaler, Smalperson, Petitsire, Litilpage, Langeclerk, Schortfrend, Stalwortheman, Malvoisin, Malharpin (OF. harpin, a harper), Homedieu, Witwif, Blakshyreve, Countereve, Lithbond, Bedelking, Witebitele, Coperkyng, Whiteking, Wodeking (mad), Jolyfray (AF. jolit rey), Wodeprest, Wytknyt, Godeboy, Jolifboie, Blisswenche, Joymeyde, Joyemaiden. The last three are probably disparaging; cf. Fr. fille de joie. Animal compounds are Hogelomb, Tythinglomb, Maloysel, Maulovel (cf. Machell), Mallechat, Swethog, Wodegos, Wodemousse, Whytebull, Owytgray (gray, a badger),

Jolicok, Whytkok, Yongkok, Wytkolt, Dunnebrid. Witfis, Stocfis, Fresfis, Rotenheryng were probably trade-names for fishmongers. Wytecole may refer to Nicholas, but more likely to cabbage. More abstract compounds, which do not properly belong to this chapter, are Godestokne, Curtevalur, Tartcurteis, Petikorteis, Tutfait, Tutprest, Megersens, Moniword, Maucuvenant, Maucondut (male conductus, cf. Mawditt), Mautalent, Scortrede, Littylrede, Smalchare, Stilleprud, Seldholi, Stranfers (strong fierce), Welikeing.

CHAPTER XII

THE SHAKESPEARE TYPE OF SURNAME

"Johannes Shakespere, querens, optulit se versus Ricardum de Cotgrave, spicer, defendentem, de placito conventionis; et queritur de eo quod dictus Ricardus, die Jovis proximo post festum Sancti Bartholomæi Apostoli, anno regni regis nunc xxx<sup>mo</sup> primo, vendidit eidem Johanni unum 'stik' de 'saundres' pro 'brasill,' et manucepit quod fuit 'brasill,' et sic conventionem inter eos factam fregit, ad grave dampnum ipsius Johannis viginti solidorum, unde producit sectam'' (Nottingham Borough Records, Nov. 8, 1357).

The above is, I believe, the earliest known occurrence of the most famous of all English names. This very interesting type of surname is found plentifully not only in English, but in all the related European languages.¹ Many examples, both English and French, are quoted by Darmesteter in his treatise on compound words. Ritter gives about 150 French examples and Vilmar collected nearly 250 German instances. Some examples of such will be found in chapters xiii, and xiv. (pp. 288, 303). Among them occur names familiar to everybody, such as Fr. Boileau (Drinkwater),² Ger. Klopstock³ (knock stick), and It. Frangipani, break bread, said to be due to the benevolence of that well-known Italian family. Generally such names are compounded of a verb in the imperative followed by its object, while less often the second component is an adverb, e.g. Golightly [William Galigtly, Pat. R.], also found as Galletly, Gellatly, with which we may compare John Gofayre 1 (Pat. R.) and John Joligate (ib.). Steptoe apparently has a similar meaning, though its formation is abnormal.

Names of this type hardly appear in Domesday Book, though Taillefer, whence Telfer, Telford, Talfourd, Tolver, Tulliver, is anterior to that compilation, but they swarm in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. Of the many hundreds I have collected, only a small proportion seem to have survived, though probably many more live on in disguise. Many of the medieval examples are of quite unquotable coarseness, and point either to the great brutality or the great naïveté of our ancestors. This method of formation is one of the most convenient and expressive that we have. There are hundreds of common nouns so formed, e.g. holdfast. makeshift, stopgap, holdall, turnkey, etc. As applied to persons they are nearly always disparaging, e.g. cut-throat, ne'erdowell, swashbuckler, scapegrace, skinflint, or are contemptuous substitutions for occupative

I fancy that this type of surname owes something to the vogue of allegory and allegorical drama in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. At any rate, such compounds have been beloved by allegorists from Langland to Bunyan. The latter's Standfast was a surname four centuries before the Pilgrim's Progress [William Stanfast, Fine R., Adam Standefast, IpM.], and I have also found his Saveall both as a medieval and twentieth-century name. Langland frequently personifies Dowell, Dobet, Dobest, the first of which may be one source of our Dowell, and he has many references to Saywell, who still figures in the rustic proverb "Say well is good, but Do well is better."

This suggests a short digression on the ending-well in surnames. Many of these are of course local, well having its wider, older meaning, which includes fountain, stream, pool, etc. Some are from specific place-names, e.g. Bakewell, the name of a well-known advocate of cremation some years ago, Hopewell or Hopwell, Tidswell, etc., all Derbyshire. Others, such as Cantwell [Gilbert de Kentewelle, Hund. R.], Tuckwell, Tugwell<sup>3</sup> are from spots which I cannot identify. Callwell, Cordwell are among the many variants of

These may even be phrase-names. Tuckwell may have been a good "tucker" of cloth (cf. Tazewell, p. 256), and Tugwell may be from ME. tug, to wrestle.

Cauldwell 1 (cold). Glidewell is also local, from the gleed or glide, i.e. kite, to which we owe also Gledhill, Gleadle, Gledstanes, Gladstone. Others again are perversions. e.g. Caswell and Kidwell take us very far back in history, for they represent the Welsh names Caswallon and Cadwal, the former of which was latinized as Cassivelaunus, just as Caradoc or Cradock was made into Caractacus. Kidwell or Kiddell is the Somerset form of Cadwal, which in Gloucestershire has become Caddell, Cadle, Caldwall, found in Hereford, is no doubt the same, Rouncewell is also historic, from Roncevaux [Ralph de Runcevill, Pat. R.]. It is also found as Rounsevel, Rounswell. Perhaps the name came rather from the alien priory of the name in London than from the Pyrenean pass. This priory became the brotherhood of Rouncival, which existed till the middle of the sixteenth century (Stow). Ottewell, Otterwell<sup>2</sup> is a personal name [Otuel de Bosco, Fine R.] made famous by the medieval Romance of Otuel. It is a dim, of Odo, Otto, which, in its turn, is short for one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Oth- [Otulph le Drivere. Pat. R.], whence Ott. See also Pepperwell (p. 189).

But there still remain a few names in which -well is simply the adverb in composition with a preceding verb. Such are Eatwell [Robert Mangebien, Pipe R.], Fretwell, ME. fret, to eat, devour, Lovewell, Meanwell, Treadwell or Tretwell [Richard Tredewelle, Pat. R.]

and probably many more. Among them are a few trade descriptions, e.g. Thackwell for a good thatcher, and the Somerset Tazewell, Taswell, for a good "teaser" of cloth. With the variant Toswill cf. Tozer, for "teaser." The corresponding French names in -bien and German names in -wohl are also fairly numerous.

As has already been suggested, surnames of this class are generally disparaging. It is even likely that the historic Taillefer and the first Shakespeare, Shakeshaft. Shackshaft, and Shakelance were heroes of a somewhat obtrusive character. Examples of "frightfulness" are uncomfortably numerous. We find an extraordinary number of Middle English names beginning with break-, burn-, kill-, pill- (skin), or with the corresponding Fr. brise-, brûle-, tue-, pèle-. In fact French, or rather Anglo-French, predominates over Anglo-Saxon in names of this class. We still have Breakspear, Braksper [William Brekespere, Ramsey Cart.] and the hybrid Brisbane [Thomas Briseban, ib.]. With the latter cf. Crakebone [John Crakebon, Lanc. Court R. 1323-4], still an American name, though I have not come across it in England. Modern French has Brisemur, Brispot, and others which also occur commonly in our Rolls. Burnhouse, Burness, Burniss [William Bernhus, 13th century] may sometimes be local, at the "burn house," but Burnand, Brennand, though they may have other origins, point to a public official [Simon Brenhand, Hund. R.]. Of the same craft was

Henry Brendcheke (Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-79). Criminals were still "burnt in the hand" in the eighteenth century. Cf. Haghand, for "hack hand," and possibly also Branfoot. In one of the Towneley Mysteries the "second tormentor" is called Spyllpayn. The original Strangleman may have been official or amateur. In French we still find Brulebois and Brulefer, probably trade-names.

Among kill names we find ME. Cullebol, Cullebolloc, Cullefincke, Cullehare, Cullehog, the last perhaps surviving as Kellogg. Cf. Fr. Tubeuf, Tuvache. For the pill names, such as Pilecrowe, Pilecat, cf. the still existing Fr. Pellevillain which has a parallel in a Middle English Fleybund (flay bond). Jean Poilevilain was master of the mint to Philip VI. of France, and a medieval bearer of the name had himself depicted on his seal dragging a "villain" by the hair. Cf. Butlin, Bucklin, contracted from boute-vilain, hustle the churl [Adam Buttevilein, Fine R.], and the obsolete Butekarl (Feet of Fines). Of the same type is Fr. Écorcheville (p. 288), found also in Middle English along with Escorceberd, Escorchebuef, etc. These are only illustrative examples of a type of name which is only too common in our records. In the list of presumably extinct phrase-names which forms an appendix to this chapter will be found further examples.

ing example is the Derbyshire Copestake, applied to a woodcutter [Geoffrey Coupstak, F. of Y. 1295; cf. Geoffrey Cuttestuche, Glouc. Cart.]. This naturally becomes Copestick, and in Yorkshire Capstick. With this name cf. Hackblock and Hackwood. Boutflour. Boughtflower was a nickname for a miller, "bolt flour '' [John Bulteflour, Bp. Kellawe's Reg. 1303]. from the archaic bolt, to sift, and in Boltwood, Boughtwood the second element is "woad," an important medieval commodity; cf. Powncewayde (p. 275). Pilbeam was a barker of trees; see Pillar (p. 118) and Beam (p. 184). In Ridland, Ridwood, Redwood we have the dialect rid, to clear, as in ridding; cf. Simon Draneland [Hund, R., Camb.]. Hamahard suggests a smith, "hammer hard," and has German parallels in Klopfhammer, Schwinghammer (p. 303), but it is more likely an alteration of Haimard (DB.), apparently a Norman form of Hagenheard (see p. 41). I have found no early example of Clinkscales, but I expect the ancestor was an energetic tradesman or moneychanger. Cf. John Rattilbagge (Hund. R.). Tylecote appears to have been a tiler. In Spingarn the second element is a still existing form of "yarn." Doubtfire, for "dout fire," was perhaps in charge of a furnace, or he may have seen to the enforcing of the curfew. Cf. OF. Abat-Four and Tue-Four (Pachnio). John Adubbe-dent (Pipe R.) was an early dentist. With Cutbush cf. Tallboys, Fr. Taillebois. Tradition makes the first Fettiplace gentleman-usher to the Conqueror. The etymology of the name, AF. fete place, make room; points to some such office. The early examples

But examples of this kind are not very numerous, and the great majority of phrase-names are descriptive of character, e.g. Lovejoy, Doolittle [John Dolitel, Percy Cart., John Faypew, City D.], habit, e.g. Drinkale, Drinkall [William Drinkale, Pat. R.], Ridout, Rideout [cf. Adam Prikafeld, Pat. R., Robert Chevalchesol, i.e. ride alone, Pipe R., Geoffrey Wendut, Fine R.], or even gesture, e.g. Bendelow [cf. Arnold Stoupedoun, Pat. R.]. The famous name Penderell appears to mean "hang ear" [Richard Pendoraile, Chart. R.], the opposite aspect being represented by John Kokear (Leic. Bor. Rec.). Similarly, the existing Luckup has a pendant in the obsolete Regardebas.

The mention of Lovejoy reminds us that we have a large number of surnames of which love is the first or second element. These are not all as simple as they appear, e.g. Loveguard is for the AS. Leofgeard, while Loverock is an alteration of the dial. laverock, a lark [Richard Laveroke, Fine R.], which has also become Liverock (p. 130, n.). Loveluck is for Lovelock (p. 131). Lovelady is a genuine phrase-name [cf. Simon Baisebelle, Fine R.]; cruder are Toplady or Tiplady and Toplass, Topliss, for which see Othello, I. i. But the oldest forms of Lovelace, Loveless go to show that in this name the second element is not -lass, but -less (p. 149). Compounds in which the second element -love, in its ordinary abstract meaning, is qualified by an adjective are Dearlove, Sweetlove, Truelove, Newlove, Proudlove. Dearlove has an alternative origin from AS. Deorlaf, beloved remnant, of which Searle has several examples. Manlove, Menlove is abstract, from AS. mannlufe, philanthropy. Fullalove, Fullilove is, of course, "full of love," commoner in the Rolls in the form Pleindamour, which still exists in Dorset as Blandamore. Waddilove is a phrase-name which seems very out of place 1 in the thirteenth century [John Wadeinlove, Hund. R.].

But, just as Love is often from AF. love, a wolf [Alan le Love, Hund. R.], so many compounds in -love are phrase-names of an energetic character. Catchlove, Fr. Chasseloup, means wolf hunter [Alan Cacheleu, Pat. R.]. We also find in the Pat. R. Alan Cachehare, perhaps the same man as the above, and Walter Cachelevere, Fr. lièvre, hare. Spendlove, Spendlow, Spendlow, Spindelow is OF. espand-louve [Robert Spendelove, Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-79, Jehan Spendelouve, Pachnio], which perhaps refers to disembowelling. Pritlove, which <sup>1</sup> In fact "wade in love" is so unlike anything medieval that I am inclined to guess that the first element may belong to ME. weden, to rage, and that the name may mean rather "furious wolf." See Catchlove and cf. Walter Wodelof (Pat. R.), from the related ME. wode, mad. This seems to be now represented by Woolloff.

looks like "pretty love," is also a Kultur name [Alexander Pricklove, Exch. R.] with a common phonetic corruption. Cf. Prickman. Cutlove 1 is paralleled by ME. Cutfox and other names of the same type (p. 272). In Marklove, whence also Marklow, Martlow, Martlew, we have the verb to "mark" in its common medieval sense of striking or aiming with a weapon or missile. Truslove appears to contain ME. truss, to bind, also to pack up, as in Truscott (coat); cf. Packehare (p. 274). It is natural that the hated wolf should be selected for ill-treatment, and Roger Frangelupus (Abingdon Cart.), though bad Latin, confirms both the etymologies proposed above and the general theory that the verb in these compounds was originally an imperative. In local names, such as Lovecraft, Lovegrove, Loveland [Margery de la Lovelond, Pat. R.], it is at least possible that the first element also means wolf, and Wildlove is probably an animal nickname (see p. 241).

The name Lovegood brings us to the problem of names in -good. Some of these, e.g. Thurgood, Osgood, Wingood, are simply Anglo-Saxon personal names containing the element god (see p. 30); but others are phrase-names of the Shakespeare type and the interpretation of the second component is doubtful. Bidgood, Bedgood [Hervey Budgod, Close R.] I take to mean "pray God"; cf. Ger. Fürchtegott. Lovegood might be for "love God" [Simon Lovegod, Fine R.], the opposite of Hatecrist (p. 212), or again for "love good," equivalent to Henry Hatewrong (IpM.); but its use in Cocke Lorelle—suggests rather that good has here the sense of wealth, property, as in Gathergood and Scattergood [Robert Scatergod, Cockersand Cart.]. With the former cf. Sparegod (p. 275), and with the latter "Slyngethryfte fleshmonger" (Cocke Lorelle). Habgood, Hobgood, Hapgood, Hopgood [William Hebbegod, Fine R.] may contain the obsolete hap, to seize—

"Happer, to hap, or catch; to snatch, or grasp at" (Cotg.).

But the antiquity and variants of the name point rather to ME. hap, hop, to cover, wrap up. Getgood sounds hopeful, but is really commercial. Dogood, with its northern variant Duguid, is a complimentary phrase-name; cf. Faceben (p. 273). Whether Digweed is a southern attempt at the latter or a name for a gardener I cannot say.

Some names which appear to belong to the Shake-speare class are due to imitative spelling. Tearall is for Terrell, i.e. Tyrrell, an Anglo-French form of AS. Thurweald, Catcheside is local(Catcherside, Northumb.), Quickfall is for Wigfall (p. 70), Carvall is for Carvell, Carvill, from Cherville (Marne), Kilmaster is of course from Kilminster (Caithness), Marbrow from Marbury (Chesh.), Pillbrow from Pulborough (Suss.) or Pilsbury (Derb.). Wastall may be for Wastell (p. 165), but names in waste-were once common (p. 277) and French still has Gastebled, Gatblé, Gastebois, Gatbois and other names formed from gâter. Cf. also Waister [John le Wastour, Pat. R.]. Ticklepenny, according to Lower, is from a "place near Grimsby," but is remarkably like Ger. Küstenpfennig, kiss penny. Pinchback is of course for Pinchbeck (Linc.) and Huntback for Huntback (p. 53). Handover is for the local Andover, and Filpot, in spite of the corresponding Ger. Füllkrug, is probably for Philpot, i.e. little Philip. Stow adopts the Filpot spelling for the famous fourteenth-century Lord Mayor of London. Makeman is either the "man" of Mack or for AS. Mægenmund, and Putwain is one of the many variants of Fr. Poitevin, whence also Patvine, Potwin, Portwine, etc.

Some verbs appear with notable frequency in these compounds. From turn we have Turnbull [Robert Turnebul, Pat. R.], whence also Turnbill, Trumble, Tremble, and the less vigorous Turnpenny [Nicholas Turnepeny, Hund. R.]. With the former cf. William Turnebuk (Pat. R.), with the latter Richard Turnegold (ib.). French has several such names, including Tournemeule, probably a name for a hay-maker. From win we have Winbow, Winrose, Winspear, Winspur (p. 162), Winpenny, Wimpenny, Vimpany [William Winepeny Chesh. Chamb. Accts. 1301–60], with which we may compare Fr. Gagnedenier. If Windlass, Windless (p. 170), is "win lass," the -d- is intrusive, as also in Windram, a nickname for a successful athlete—

"Over-al, ther he cam,
At wrastlyng he wolde have awey the ram"
(Chauc A. 546).

264 THE SHAKESPEARE TYPE OF SURNAME

John Winram was sub-prior of St. Andrews in 1550. In the F, of Y, we find "Winship the mariner," which suggests a competent pirate, but the surname is perhaps from AS. winescipe, friendship (p. 220). One of the most curious of the Win-compounds is the common Norfolk name Winearls, in which the second element is the dialect "earls, arles," earnest-money. With Waghorn, Wagstaff cf. Walter Waggespere (Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285), while Waggett may sometimes be the equivalent of Ger. Schüddekopf, shake-head (see p. 128). To the Shake- names may be added Shacklock [Hamo Shakeloc, Hund, R.], with which cf. John Werpeloc (Leic. Bor. Rec.) and William Wrytheloc (Malmesbury Abbey Reg.), and Shakelady, Schacklady, with which cf. Robert Schaketrot (Lanc. Court R. 1323-4)-

"An old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head" (Shrew, i. 2),

and John Daubedame (Leic. Bor. Rec.)-

"Dauber, to beat, swindge, lamme, canvasse throughly" (Cotg.).

Of the Hack- names the most interesting is Hak-luyt. The DNB. describes the geographer as of a family long established in Herefordshire, probably of Dutch origin. The "Dutch" appears to be suggested by the second syllable. The name means "hack little," ME.  $l\ddot{u}t$ , and the founder of the family was probably a woodcutter without enthusiasm [Peter Hakelut, IpM., Heref.]. Walter Hackelute or Hakelut or Hakelutel occurs repeatedly in thirteenth-century records of Hereford and Salop.

There are also two rather large groups containing the verbs pass and pierce. From the first come Passelow, "cross water," whence also Paslow, Parslow, Pasley, Pashley, Pashler & [Edmund Passelewe or Passeleve or Passhelve, Pat. R.], Passmore [Stephen Passemer, Fine R.], Passavant [Alan Passavaunt, Lanc. Ass. R. 1176-1285], contracted to Passant. In French we find Passelaigue, Passerieu (OF. rieu, a stream), Passelac, Passepont, etc. With Passavant cf. the hybrid Startifant, Sturdevant, Sturtivant, in which the first element is ME. stert, to start. In the F. of Y. it is spelt Stirtavaunt. The Pierce- names are very curious, and it is hard to say exactly what the verb meant in these compounds. The much discussed Perceval, Percival is simply what it appears to be, viz. "pierce vale" Another hero of romance was Perceforest. One origin of Percy, Pearcey, Pursey, etc. is perce-haie, pierce hedge [William Percehaye, Hund, R.]. Passifull and Passfield, which look like compounds of pass, are in all probability corruptions of Percival, and Purcifer, a Yorkshire name, shows the same slurring as in Brammer for the local Bramhall. Finally, Pershouse, Purshouse is "pierce house." Thirlway, Thirlaway contains the obsolete "thirl," to pierce, but the whole compound may be local, meaning a gap.

Somewhat akin to this group are the French names in Tranche-, some of which, such as Trenchemer, Trenchelac are found also in Middle English. With

Tranchevent cf. Ger. Schneidewind and our Sherwin [Thomas Sherewynd, Fine R.], the latter the same type of man as William Windswift, mariner (F, of Y.). We have other compounds of shear in Sherlock, Shurlock [Simon Skyrloc, Chart R.], and in Shargold, Shergold, perhaps a coin-clipper or a worker at the mint 1; but Shearwood is local, of Sherwood, Another element which was once common is tread. We have still Tredwell, Tretwell, Treaddell, and Tredgold 2 [Walter Tredegold, Hund. R.], the last-named appearing also as Threadgold, Thridgould; cf. Threadgate, in which gate means street. In Middle English we find also Thomas Tredebalk (Chart. R.), Symon Tredhard (York's, 1379), and Richard Tradesalt (Rievaulx Cart.). Treadaway, Treadway is local [John de Treddewy, Exch. R.], from treadway, a thoroughfare, which was in use as late as the seventeenth century.

Gather occurs in Gathergood (p. 262), Gathercole, Gatherall. The last-named, of the type of Walter Prentout (Lond. Wills, 1340), still a French surname, and Godwin Givenout (Rievaulx Cart.), has also become Catherall, with which cf. Catherwood for "gather wood," and Abraham Cathermonie (Rievaulx Chart.). In the Pat. R. we find Nicholas Gadrewit whose pursuit was wisdom rather than wealth. Tirebuck <sup>1 &</sup>quot;The other (lane), corruptly called Sermon lane, for Sheremoniers' lane, for I find it by that name recorded in the fourteenth of Edward I. . . . It may, therefore, be well supposed that lane to take name of Sheremonyars, such as cut and rounded the plates to be coined or stamped into sterling pence" (Stow).

may be local, of Tarbock (Lanc.), but the first element may be the obsolete tire, to tear, rend—

"I graunte wel that thou endurest wo
As sharp as doth he, Ticius, in helle,
Whos stomak foules tiren evere mo
That highten voltoures, as bookes telle" (Troilus and Criseyde, i. 785).

This etymology is supported by William Randekide (Lcic. Bor. Rec.) and the Lancashire Tyrer [Henry le Tyrer, Bp. Kellawe's Rcg.], formerly also Tyre-hare, though this latter may perhaps refer to a blameless hairdresser.

Knatchbull may have been applied to a butcher, or perhaps to some medieval Milo of Crotona; cf. John Felox (13th century)—

"With a great clubbe (Commodus) knatched them all on the hed" (NED. 1579).

Benbow, Benbough, Bebbow are of course "bend-bow" [William Bendebowe, City F.]. Robin Hood's follower Scathelock is still found as Scadlock, Shadlock, Shatlock, Shedlock, Shotlock, Shackcloth, though the compound can hardly be said to make sense. Evidently Shacklock has contributed also to this group. There are a considerable number of medieval names in -lock; see p. 264. Rackstraw, Raickstraw, Rextrew, Rockstro, is occupative, "rake straw"; cf. Ralph Frapaile, i.e. frappc-paille (Pat. R.), a thresher, and see "bangstraw" in the EDD. Prindcville was a successful soldier, Fr. prend ville. Parlby is altered from the once common parle bicn [John Parlebien, Pat. R.] and Chantler is for the still commoner chante clair [Roger Chauntecler or Chaunteler, Pat. R.]. Cashman is for "catch man" [Mabel Cacheman, Pat. R.]. Shadbolt, Shotbolt may be for "shoot bolt" (cf. Benbow, p. 267), or the first element may be a past participle and the whole compound have been applied to one who had shot his bolt; cf. the common Middle English name Lancelevée. Hurlbatt is doubtful, for Matthew Herlebaut (Pat. R.) looks like a personal name. Still, John Hurlebadde (Pat. R.) and Thomas Draghebat 1 (ib.) tend to authenticate it as a phrase-name. Plantrose [John Plaunterose, Hund. R.] and Pluckrose [Alan Pluckrose, ib.] still exist and have plenty of medieval support; cf. Simon Schakerose (Pat. R.), Peter Porterose (ib.), Andrew Plantefene 2 (Leic. Bor. Rec.), Elvas Plantefolye (Fine R.). Pluckrose has a parallel in Culpepper 3 [Thomas Cullepeper or Colepepyr, Pat. R.], with which cf. Richard Cullebene (Hund, R.).

Among examples in which the second element is adverbial we find, besides the quaint Gotobed or Gotbed, such names as Rushout (cf. Rideout, p. 259) and Rushaway, the latter perhaps a conscientious objector, like Robert Torne-en-Fuie (Pachnio). Fulloway may be for "follow way," as Followfast is found in the fourteenth century, and Standeven, Standaloft both seem to belong here also. Pickavant, altered to Pickavance, Pickance, Pickervance is Fr. pique-avant, spur forward.

Subject and verb are inverted in Hornblow, Horniblow, Orneblow and possibly in Milsopp, Mellsop

[Roger Melkesopp, Hund. R.]. The latter may mean what is sopped in milk, but, as applied to a baby, or to a spiritless person, it may be rather one who sups milk—

"Hayll, lytyll tyn mop, rewarder of mede!
Hayll, bot oone drop of grace at my nede!
Hayll lytyl mylk sop! hayll, David sede!"
(Towneley Mysteries).

Similar inversions are found in Middle English, as in the pleasing John Coutorment (Pat. R.). The original Overthrow was perhaps a skilled wrestler; cf. Henry Overdo (Close R., Ed. IV.). John Lyngeteill, tailor (F. of Y.), may be for taille-linge, or the second element may be toile, cloth.

It excites no surprise that so many of these names have disappeared. They are, as this chapter shows, and as will be seen still more clearly from the list on pp. 270–7, nearly always contemptuous. Also they are often cumbersome, so that even so complimentary a name as that of Jehan Qui de riens ne s'esmoie (Pachnio), i.e. John Dreadnought, had a very poor chance of surviving. Occasionally such names have been absorbed by others. There can, for instance, be little doubt that some of our Penfolds 1 represent the occupative "pen-fowl" [Henry Pynfoule, Pat. R.], an official who has become more usually Catchpole (Fr. chasse-poule). Walkinshaw, Wakenshaw, has a local look, but the existence of Rangecroft suggests that it may be simply "walk in shaw," perhaps a forest ranger—

"Walkers, seeme to be those that are otherwise called foresters. Crompton in his Jurisdictions, fol. 154, hath these words in effect: There bee foresters assigned by the King, which be walkers within a certain space assigned them to looke unto" (Cowel).

Hence perhaps also Walkland. Or the name may have been applied to a forest outlaw. Cf. Jourdain Saill-du-Bois (Pachnio), Hugo Saildebroil <sup>1</sup> (ib.), found also in Middle English as Saudebroyl, both of whom probably obtained their sobriquets by their unwelcome sorties from the woods that bordered the medieval highway. Walklate is as natural a nickname as "toil by night" (see p. 233). Other names of the same type, some not easy to interpret, are Wakelam <sup>2</sup> (cf. Esveillechien, p. 273), Shearhod (hood), Stabback, Settatree, Makemead [Gregory Makemete, Pat. R.], Lockbane, Saltonstall (cf. mountebank and saltimbanque).

The obsolete names in the following list all come from the same sources as those which are quoted throughout this book. To save space I have omitted the baptismal names and references. Some of them no doubt still exist in a corrupted form and perhaps others are wrongly included here. A few, which I cannot interpret, may amuse the leisure of some of my readers. It will be noticed that Anglo-French prevails over the native element, while there are a few hybrids. Many are evidently trade descriptions, but the majority allude to some habit, or even some isolated act, on the part of the original bearer.

CHAPTER XIII

FRENCH SURNAMES

"As to bravery, foolish, inexperienced people of every nation always think that their own soldiers are braver than any others. But when one has seen as much as I have done, one understands that there is no very marked difference, and that although nations differ very much in discipline, they are all equally brave—except that the French have rather more courage than the rest" (Brigadier Gerard).

Soon after the beginning of the war I read, in a usually well-informed periodical, that General Joffre was of humble extraction, and owed his name to an immediate ancestor, who, pursuing the calling of an itinerant dealer, was wont to commence his remarks with the words J'offre! This statement, whatever may be thought of it philologically, seems at any rate to indicate some interest in the onomatology of our gallant allies. French names, like our own, have a history that can be traced, and are formed on a system which can be easily illustrated. From about the eleventh century, when the surname (i.e. super name) began to be added to the simple appellation which satisfied our remoter ancestors, down to about the middle of the fourteenth century, when names became hereditary instead of changing with the individual, surnames have been formed in four ways only. They are baptismal, from the name of the father or mother, e.g.

Lamartine, Clémenceau (little Clement); local, from place of birth or residence, e.g. Dupont (Bridge), Dupré (Mead), Lallemand (Allman); occupative, from trade or office, e.g. Boucher (Butcher), Serrurier (Lockyer), Lemaître (Master); or descriptive, from some peculiarity of appearance, character, costume, habits, etc., e.g. Legrand (Grant) Lebon (Boon), Beauharnais (fine armour) Boileau (Drinkwater). Thus, corresponding to our Messrs, Williams, Mills, Baker, Small, we find in France Messieurs Guillaume, Desmoulins, Boulanger, Lepetit. Not only so, but, as in our language is a mixture of English and French and a large proportion of our population was bilingual during the period in which our surnames took form, most common French surnames are found also in this country, so that the four mentioned above not only translate the given English equivalents, but also flourish among us as Gilham, Mullins, Bullinger, and Pettitt, with, of course, many variant spellings.

With a fair knowledge of modern French, which, judging from the published versions of the French despatches, is somewhat to seek in high places, and some tincture of the older forms of the language, it is possible to ascertain the meaning and origin of nine-tenths of the names in the Paris Directory. But the tenth name, or perhaps, in the case of a very well equipped student, the twentieth name, is often a teaser, the difficulties to be overcome being sometimes greater, sometimes less, than those encountered in the study of English surnames. Speaking generally, these difficulties are of a special nature resulting from the character and genius of the language.

The misleading aspect of a name, due to erratic spelling, is a common phenomenon in both languages, but the French practice of omitting the final consonant in pronunciation often leads to an orthographic substitution of a specially baffling character. Dumouriez suggests nothing, but if we replace the final -z by -r we get at once the dialect mourier, a bramble, and the name is then as simple as Dubuisson (Bush) or Delarbre (Tree). Montégut is obviously Montaigu, the pointed hill (Peake), Darboy is for d'Arbois, from a place in the Jura, and Duclaux is simply Duclos (Close). The well-known name Hanotaux is for Hanotot, formed from Jean by the most puzzling process in which the language indulges-thus, Jehan, Han, Hanot, Hanotot. A phonetic spelling gives Leclair for Leclerc (Clark), Lemerre for Lemaire (Mayor), Chantavoine for champ d'avoine, oat field, while Ozanne disguises the more homely Auxânes, a nickname of a type not uncommon in French and meaning either an ass-driver or a dealer in those quadrupeds. Similarly we find Ozenfant for Auxentants, corresponding to the Mr. Quiverfull of the old-fashioned comic papers. In Lailavoix is hidden OF. lez la voie (Bytheway) with the obsolete preposition lez (Lat. latus) which survives in Plessislès-Tours, and possibly in such English place-names as Chester-le-Street.

We have also, as in English, to consider dialect peculiarities. Lat. faber, a smith or wright, gives in the north Fèvre, Lefèvre, but in the south Fabre and Faure, along with other variants and intermediate forms. La Chaussée (Cawsey, Cosway) is in Provençal La Caussade, and Salcède, drawn and quartered in 1582, was a southerner who in the north would have been Saussaye, willow-grove (Lat. salicetum). Canrobert, corresponding to such an English name as Robertshaw, contains the Normand-Picard word for champ, the normal form of which is preserved in Changarnier, Warner's field. With the latter goes the heroic Chandos (Bonefield). The famous actor Lekain had a name which is a variant of Lequien, a dialect form of Lechien. Belloc is the southern form of Beaulieu, Castelnau of Châteauneuf. Corday is dialect for Cordier (Corder, Roper), Boileau is found also as Boilaive, Boilève, Boylesve, and Taine is an archaic or local pronunciation of Toine, for Antoine. So also we have archaic spellings in Langlois, as common a name in France as French and Francis are in England, Picquart, the Picard (Pickard), and Lescure, i.e. l'écuyer (Squire). In fact, while some names gradually change their sound and spelling in conformity with those of the words from which they are derived, others, and perhaps the majority, preserve archaic forms which aftect their pronunciation and disguise their origin. A tadpole is called in French têtard, while in Old French a man with a big head was nicknamed Testard, a name which is still common by the side of Tétard. Also many of the variations which occur are due to the date of adoption. A name acquired in the twelfth century will not have the same form as one that dates from the fifteenth, e.g. the nickname Rey (King) is older than Leroy, and Levesque is obviously anterior to Lévêque (Bishop, Levick). Souvestre represents the Old French form of Silvester, of which Silvestre is a modern restored spelling.

Taking in order the four classes of names, baptismal, local, occupative, descriptive, it is interesting to notice the resemblances and differences in the methods by which surnames are created and multiplied in the two languages. We have in English more than a dozen names derived from William, without taking into account those with an initial G (Gill, Gillott, Gilkes, etc.) which belong to the French form Guillaume. Williams, Williamson are English formations to which French has no exact parallel, and, although the prefix in Fitzwilliam is the French word fils, French surnames of this type are very rare. But we also shorten William to Will and create by diminutive suffixes Willy, Willett, Willing, Wilcocks, Wilkin, Wilkes, etc. French proceeds in the same way, but with much greater freedom, e.g. Guillaumet, Guillaumin, Guillaumot, Guillaumy, Guille, Guillemain, Guillemard, Guillemat, Gillemand, Guillemeau, Guillemenot, Guillemin, Guillemineau, Guillemot, Guillermin, Guillet, Guilliet, Guillon, Guillot, Guillotin, Guillon, Guilmet, Guilmin, and a few dozen more, piling one diminutive suffix on to another ad infinitum. Shortened forms such as Joffre from Joffroy (Jeffrey), Foch from Fochier, Fouché (Fulcher) are easy to recognize, and the addition of suffixes, as in Joffrin, Geoffrin, Joffron, Joffrenot, presents no difficulty.

So far things are simple. But the tendency of French, with its stress on the last syllable, is more often in the direction of the decapitation of a name, as in our Bert for Herbert. Simple examples are Colas for Nicolas, Nisard for Denisard, Bastien for Sebastien, Jamin for Benjamin, Stophe, Stofflet for Christophe. But after this decapitation there generally begins a chain of names which is very difficult to trace, e.g.

from Thomas we get Mas, Massé, Masset, Massenet, Massillon, and eventually, by a new decapitation, Sillon, which only preserves the final letter of the original name. So from Garaud (Jerrold) we have Raud, Rod, Rodin, and from Bernard come not only Bernardin, Bernadot, Bernadotte, but also Nadaud, Nadot, while these may go on to Daudet, Dottin, etc. This is a game to which there is no limit, and, as names can be dealt with both head and tail, it is often impossible to decide how a series has begun. Such a name as Bert, with its Berthon, Berthollet, Bertilleau, etc., may be from the first syllable of Bertrand, Berthélemy (Bartholomew), etc., or from the final of Albert, Hubert, etc. Similarly Nicot may belong to Nicolas or Janicot, the latter name a diminutive of Jean, and possibly the origin of our Jellicoe, Garot may represent Garaud (Jerrold) or Margarot (Margetts, Meggitt), Filon may come from Philippe or Théophile. This love of derivatives is especially characteristic of French onomatology, while in English the practice exists, though in a much more restricted degree, e.g. Philip, Philpot, Pott, Potkins. On the other hand, French has not our trick of riming names (Dick, Hick, from Richard, Dob. Hob. from Robert).

Hence the French surname groups of baptismal origin are much larger than ours. Jean and Étienne (Stephen) are said to have each more than one hundred derivatives, while Pierre has about two hundred. It will be noticed that these most popular font-names are all Biblical. So also the Easter name Pascal has a large number of derivatives, e.g. Pasquin, Pâquin, Pasquet, Pasquier, etc., and, among female names, the great saints such as Marie, Catherine, Marguerite, head the list, e.g. Mariette, Mariotte, Riotte, Marat, Marot; Catinat, Cathelineau, Linel; Margot, Margoton. Got, etc. The relative popularity in France of Biblical and Teutonic font-names has varied in the past. Before the Frankish conquest practically all the saints and martyrs 2 of Gaul have Greco-Latin names, though a few of Teutonic origin appear by the fifth century. By the eighth century the latter are in a majority, and by the twelfth the Greco-Latin names are swamped by the new-comers. In modern France these once so popular names, Béranger, Fouquier, Garnier, Gautier, Lambert, Oger, Regnard, etc., all of which have also given English surnames, have mostly fallen out of use, though very common as surnames. A few, such as Charles, Edouard, Henri, Louis, Robert, are still popular, but, speaking generally, French parents have gone back for the names of their children to the Bible and the Greco-Latin martyrology, e.g. Jean, Thomas, Philippe. Pierre; Alexandre, Eugène, Théophile, Victor, etc.

French surnames of baptismal origin are occasionally accompanied by the article, Landricux, Lasimonne, and also by the preposition de and à, Demichel, Dubertrand, Aladenise. These compounds had possessive force, just as in modern rustic French "l'enfant à la Martine" means Martine's child. Such surnames formed from female names do not as a rule point to illegitimacy, but rather to the importance of the mother in the French family. Martin's wife was called La

Martine and ruled the roost. Another peculiarity of French surnames of this class is the frequency with which they are qualified by an adjective. In English we have as a rule only compounds of John, e.g. Little-john, Meiklejohn, Prettyjohn, etc., with an occasional Goodwillie or Gawkroger (see p. 242), but in French most common font-names are thus used. On his last visit to England President Poincaré was accompanied by Captain Grandclément. Cf. Bonbernat (Bernard), Beaujean, Grandcolas (Nicolas), Petitperrin (Pierre), Maugirard (Gérard), Grosclaude. Sometimes the article is also used, e.g. Lepetitdidicr, from one of the few French names (Desiderius) which have never flourished in England. In France this name has been prolific, e.g. Didon, Didot, Diderot, etc.

French surnames of local origin may, like their English companions, range in order from a country to a plant, e.g. Despagne (Spain), Lenormand (Norman), Damiens (Amyas), Dupuis (Wells), Lacroix (Cross, Crouch), Delpierre (Stone), Lépine (Thorne), Despois (Pease), but, while our names have, except in a few cases such as Atterbury, Bythesea, Delahunte (pp. 48-52), shed both preposition and article, French more often keeps both. So we find Croix, Lacroix, Delacroix, Salle, Lasalle, Delasalle, whence sometimes our Sale, With names of towns beginning with a vowel de is commonly prefixed, e.g. Davignon, Davranche. Moreover, every French town has a corresponding adjective, a privilege accorded in this country only to the capital. So Bourgeois, besides being a descriptive name (Burgess), may mean the man from Bourges, while Boulnois, also well established in England, indicates an inhabitant of Boulogne.

More interesting than names taken from specific places are those derived from common names, the majority of which belong, like our Clough, Hay, Shaw, Croft, etc., to the archaic and provincial vocabulary. To-day (Oct. 13, 1915) we read that Admiral de Lapeyrère has been succeeded by Admiral du Fournet. The first represents perrière, a stone quarry, whence our Perrers, the second is a diminutive of four, an oven. The importance of the public oven in medieval France is attested by the frequent occurrence of the surname Dufour. In Dussault we have Old French sault, a marsh, wood, in Dumas a southern word for a "manse" or homestead, in Dumesnil (Meynell) a diminutive of the same word. Laponimeraye, equivalent to our Appleyard, has given us Pomeroy. Duplessis comes from the "pleached" enclosure which, as Scott reminds us in the first chapter of Quentin Durward, has given a name to so many French villages. In Dubailleul we have an Old French word for a fort or "bailey." and the origin of a luckless royal name (Balliol). Despréaux, of the meadows, a name assumed by Boileau, has given us Diprose, while the common Ferté, Laferté is an Old French name for a fortress, Latin firmitas. In Duquesne we have the Norman form of chêne, an oak, and Dupuy contains what was once the regular French name for a hill. This word is the origin of our "pew." In fact Dupuy has become Depew in America. Delcassé probably means " of the hut": Blois del Casset was a Knight of the Round Table. Pertuis, hole, is well established in England as Pertwee, and the well-known Maupertuis, the name of Renard's den in the old romance, has a parallel in William Foulhole (Nott. Court R. 1308).

When we come to occupative names, we are again confronted by crowds of diminutives. Corresponding to our Shepherd we find not only Berger, Leberger, Labergère, but also Bergerat, Bergeret, Bergeron, Bergerot, to quote only the most frequent variants, while Boucher gives us Boucharin, Bouchereau, Boucheron, Bouchet, etc., and of course Leboucher and Labouchère. In a recent casualty list occurred the Canadian names Dansereau and Mercereau. We have no native English parallel to such names, though Cantrell, Chantrell, derived from French Chantereau, Chanterelle is not uncommon.

Corresponding to our names like Monks, Parsons, Reeves, which meant originally the monk's servant, the parson's son, etc., we find a number of French occupative names preceded by de or à, e.g. Dufaure, Augagneur. The word gagneur, contained in the name of the late French Minister of Marine, was used in Old French for any thriving worker. With this formation we may compare Auprêtre, the origin of our Allpress, which was in 1273 spelt Alprest (Hund. R.). In 1235 Jordan le fiz Alprestre, i.e. Jordan the priest's son, was lodged in Nottingham gaol on an accusation of homicide (Pat. R.).

Many of our occupative names represent obsolete trades and callings, e.g. Fletcher, the arrow-maker, Frobisher, the furbisher of armour, Catchpole, the constable. So also we find among common French surnames Fléchier, Laumonier (almoner, Anner), Verdier (forester), Larmurier (Armour), Larbalestier (Arblaster, Alabaster). Or existing names are taken from archaic and dialect names for occupations, e.g. Meissonnier, the harvester (cf. our Mawer), Sabatier, the southern form of savetier, a cobbler, Lesueur, the shoemaker (Sutor), Molinier, the miller (Mulliner), Pellissier, the maker of fur cloaks (Pilcher), Lequeux, the cook, Ferron, the smith (Fearon), Grangier, the farmer (Granger), Lemire, the physician (Myer), Marillier, the churchwarden, Perrier, the quarryman, Teissier, the weaver, and many more.

On French nicknames, as on English, a very big book could be written. There is no name of bird or beast, no epithet, complimentary or spiteful, but usually the latter, which has not been used to form a surname. Some are of incredibly fantastic formation, others of unquotable grossness. Here I will only mention some which are connected with famous men. or which are of special interest at the present moment. To begin with, President Poincaré's name means "square fist," an honest sort of weapon, which is at an initial disadvantage against the mailed, or knuckleduster, variety. By an odd coincidence two of General Joffre's ablest lieutenants, Maud'huy and Maunoury, bear ancient nicknames of identical meaning. Maud'huy is an artificial spelling of the common name Mauduit. William Mauduit was Chamberlain to the Conqueror and founded the Mawditt family. The name is derived from Lat. male doctus, ill taught, by which it is commonly rendered in medieval documents. Maunoury is from mal-nourri, where nourri has its Old French sense of reared, educated. The opposite Biennourry also exists and corresponds to the wellknown German name Wolzogen (wohl erzogen). The name Écorcheville has also won honour in the war.

It is a mild alteration of the medieval Escorchevieille, skin old woman, a very brutal nickname, with numerous parallels in French and English (see p. 256). Cf. the existing surname Pellevillain, flay serf (p. 257). Names formed in this way from a verb are very common in both languages. Cf. French Chasseloup, hunt wolf, whence our deceptive Catchlove, Chassepot, not the pot-hunter, but the seeker after gratuitous meals, Gardebois, the "woodward," Fatout (fac-totum), or our own Shakespeare, Golightly, Doolittle, etc.

The simpler kinds of nicknames formed directly from adjectives or nouns are generally accompanied by the article, e.g. Lebas (Bass), Lebel (Bell), Lerouge (Rudge), Larousse (Rouse), Laigle (Eagle), Leveau (Veal), Lesturgeon (Sturgeon). When an adjective and noun are combined, the article is more often omitted, e.g., Bonvallet (Goodhind), Petigas (Littleboy), Blanchemain (Whitehand), though it is also found in such names, e.g. Lepetiteorps (Lightbody). Adjective nicknames also form innumerable derivatives. In English we have the name Jolly and its older form Joliffe. French has Joly, Joliot, Jolivard, Jolivaud, Iolivet, etc., while the derivations of Bon, such as Bonnard, Bonnet, Bonneau, Bonnel, Bonneteau, etc., run into dozens. This applies also to a less extent to names derived from animals. Corresponding to our Bull, Bullock, we have not only French Lebauf, but also Bouvet, Bouvot, Bouvelet, Bouvard, Bouveau, though some of these may also be formed from the occupative name Bouvier (Buller).

To sum up, French surnames are very like English, the chief points of difference being the retention of prepositions and the article, the common decapitation of baptismal names, and the extraordinary power of multiplication by means of diminutive suffixes. There is also hardly a well-established French name which is not found in England, whether it "came over with the Conqueror," was imported during the Middle Ages, at the Huguenot migration, or in quite recent times. And, generally speaking, the earlier its introduction, the greater will be its divergence from the modern French form and the difficulty of establishing their identity.

Those interested in this harmless amusement will find pastime, and perhaps some profit, in analysing any group of well-known French names. If we take, for instance, the chief writers associated with the golden age of French literature, viz. Descartes, Pascal, Malebranche, Corneille, Racine, Molière, La Fontaine, Bossuet, Bourdaloue, La Bruyère, La Rochefoucauld. and the already explained Boileau and Massillon, we shall find that they can all be assigned, though in some cases conjecturally, to one of the four groups. Pascal is a baptismal name associated with the Easter festival. and Corneille is probably from Cornelius, though it may be a nickname (Crowe). Obvious local names are La Fontaine and La Bruyère (Moore), while La Rochefoucauld is from the rock fortress of Foucauld, 1 the old Teutonic Folcwald, or ruler of the people. Descartes is probably local, from OF. quarte, a certain area in the outskirts of a town, and Bourdaloue looks like a corruption of bord de l'eau (Bywater). Racine is much commoner in France than the corresponding Root in England. Molière, the name adopted by

CHAPTER XIV

GERMAN SURNAMES

"Ça obéit magnifiquement, surtout aux ordres appuyés de coups de bottes" (Claude Farrère).

GERMAN surnames, like English and French, are of four origins. They may be baptismal, local, occupative, or nicknames. Taking as examples four names famous in literature, Goethe, like his hero Goetz, is an abbreviation of one of the numerous Old German names in God, e.g. Gottfried (Godfrey, Jeffrey), Gotthardt (Goddard), etc., Hans Sachs was of Saxon descent, the ancestors of Schopenhauer were "hewers" of "scoops," and Schiller is a Swabian form of Schieler,1 squinter. As is natural in the case of a language so closely allied to our own, many German names, in fact the great majority, not only correspond in meaning but also in form with English names. If Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg were an Englishman, he would be Mr. Bateman-Holloway. Similarly, the famous general whose name is borne by the elusive Goeben would have been in English Gubbins, both names going back by devious ways to Gottbrecht, God bright (Godber).

which is composed of baptismal names, sometimes surviving in full, but generally made almost unrecognizable by all manner of abridgement, mutilation, and dialect variation. The correspondence of these Teutonic dithemetic names with those of Greece has already been noticed (p. 27). Other examples are Dietrich, people powerful, i.e. Demosthenes, Ludwig, glorious fight, i.e. Clytomachus, Vilmar, greatly famous, i.e. Pericles, Conrad, bold counsel, i.e. Thrasybylus. process of time these musical names of heroic meaning, such as Eberhard, boar strong (Everett), Günther, battle army (Gunter), Megenhard, might strong (Maynard), Hubrecht, bright counsel(Hubbard), Römheld, fame ruling (Rumbold), etc., have often been reduced to cacophonous monosyllables distinguished by great economy of vowels. Still, unattractive as their present form may be, these names belong to the oldest period of the race. and Bugge, Bopp, Dietz, Dankl, and Kluck have as much right to look down on most of their polysyllabic neighbours as our own Bugg, Bubb, etc., on such upstarts as Napier, Pomeroy, Percy, and Somerset, for are they not the modern representatives of the heroic Burghart, castle strong, Bodebrecht, rule bright, Dietrich, people mighty, Dankwart, reward guardian, and Chlodowig, glorious victory?

Dankl, the Austrian general, and the redoubtable Kluck illustrate the two chief ways of forming diminutives of German names, the essential element of such diminutives being l in the south and k in the north. Other examples are Bebel (Badbrecht), Handel (Handolf), Hebbel (Hadubrecht), Ranke (Randolf), Tieck (Theobald), etc. Another very common ending is z, or sch, and often these elements are combined in one and the same name. This appears in the names of the two teachers of modern Germany, Nietzsche and Treitschke. I have seen it stated that both these sages were of Slavonic origin, their names being quoted in support of the statement. Without knowing anything of their genealogy, I have no hesitation in stating their names to be pure German. It is not unfitting that the crazy degenerate who loathed his own nation and succeeded in sending it mad should have a name which is the diminutive of Neid, envy, the first element in Niedhardt, envy strong, while Treitschke goes back also appropriately to Drudi or Thrudr, one of the Walkyries, or "death choosers."

The third of the illustrious trio, Bernhardi, belongs to a different group, and incidentally, the regular collocation of his name with those of a madman of genius and of a considerable scholar must surprise even himself. When the full baptismal name becomes a surname in German, it usually does so in an unaltered form. Genitives such as Peters and patronymics such as Mendelssohn (son of Immanuel), Mackensen (son of Mack), are not common, and are usually of Low German origin. Thus we generally find simply Arnold, Hildebrand, Oswald, etc. But in a large number of cases a latinized form of the genitive occurs, so that Bernhardi, which I have seen explained as Italian, is a survival of some such name as Johannes filius Bernhardi; cf. such names as Bartholdy, Henrici, Jacoby, Matthaei, Nicolai, etc.

In the case of the non-German names which came in with Christianity, as often as not the last syllable has survived instead of the first, e.g. Hans from Johannes, Klaus from Nicolaus, Möbius from Bartholomæus, Bastel from Sebastian, Grethe from Margarete, and these shortened forms lend themselves to further endless variations. Hans, like our John, is so common as to need qualification. I once lived in Switzerland in a house which contained three of the name, who for purposes of distinction were known as Johannes, Hans, and Hensli. So, corresponding to our Micklejohn, Littlejohn, etc. (p. 242), we find in German not only Aldejohann, Jungjohann, Grossjohann, Lütjens, etc., but also Langhans, Kleinhans, Guthans, Schwarzhans, and many more. But this subject is endless, and space only allows of the above brief indications.

Names of local origin may range from an empire to a tree, and may be either nouns or adjectives, e.g. Oestreich, Preuss, Schottländer, Polack, Czech, Elsässer, Hess, Flemming, Bremer (from Bremen), Kammerich (Cambrai), Backhaus (Backhouse), Fichte (fir), Beerbohm (Low German for pear-tree), Grünewald (Greenwood), Kreuz (Cross), Eck (Corner), etc. More often than in English such names are accompanied by the endings -er and -mann (cf. our Bridger, Bridgman), hence Berger (Mountain), Brunner (Fountain), Kappler (Chappell), Heinemann (Grove), Winckelmann (Corner), Hoffmann (Stead), etc.

It is probable that the majority of modern German surnames are of local origin, easily recognized by such characteristic endings as -au, originally island, now wet meadow-land, as in Gneisenau; -horst, wood (Hurst), as in Scharnhorst; -ow, a Slavonic ending often confused with -au, as in Bülow, Jagow; -itz, also Slavonic, as in Tirpitz; -brück, bridge, as in Delbrück; -stein, stone, as in Bieberstein; -hain, hedge, grove (Hayne), as in Falkenhayn; -dorf, village (Thorp), as in Bernstorff; -burg, castle (Burrough), as in Dernburg, Hindenburg; -reut, clearing (Royd), as in Kalckreut: -berg, mountain (Barrow), as in Gutenberg, and many others. But the study of these names belongs to topography. As in the corresponding English names we come across many obsolete and dialect words, such as Kamp or Kampt. an early loan from Lat. campus, whence Rennenkampf, race-course, a German name borne by a Russian general, and Kuhl, pool, so that Baron Kuhlmann, late of London, is a German Pullman. In many cases surnames of local origin are still preceded by prepositions and the article (for English examples see pp. 49-52), e.g. Anderbrugg, Vorderbrugg, Ingenohl, 1 a corruption of in dem Ohl, a dialect name for a tract of good agricultural land, Biedenweg (Bytheway), Vorbusch, Zumbusch, von der Heyde (Heath), von der Tann (Pine), LG. ter Meer (Bythesea), etc.

This brings us to the question of von, so grievously misused by writers on the war, some of whom ought to know better. This preposition simply means "of" and was originally put with nearly all local surnames. It is still so used in some parts of Switzerland, where I have had my boots mended and my shirts washed by vons dating back to the Middle Ages. It gradually dropped, like the del, de la, etc., which we find in our own medieval Rolls; but, corresponding to our own Delmar, Delafield, Delamoor, etc. (p. 51), we find a few survivals, such as von der Tann, von der

Goltz, von der Heyde, etc., in which the retention is generally due to the ennobling of these families. As von came to be recognized as the nobiliary prefix, it got added to names of all descriptions. For instance, the name of Lieutenant von Forstner, renowned for his epic onslaught on the lame cobbler of Saverne, merely means Forster (forester), and Colonel von Reuter, who commanded the regiment involved, has one of the commonest of German names, meaning a "clearer of land," related to Bairent, Wernigerode, the Rütli, etc. So we find von Schmidt, von Kleinschmitt, von Müller, von Zimmermann (Carpenter), von Kettler (Tinker), von Bernhardi, von Kluck, von Moltke, the last name being a diminutive of the same class as Kluck, possibly from Matilda; cf. our Mault, Mould.

Now, it is curious that we English, who never dream of saying von Bismarck, which would be excusable in the case of a territorial name (the bishop's mark or frontier), will insist on von Moltke, von Kluck, etc., which, in German, is a vulgarism only committed by the sort of people who in English address letters to "Mr. Smith, Esquire," or refer to a clergyman as "the Rev. Jones." Of course when the full title is given, the von is used, e.g. General von Kluck, Herr von Jagow, but otherwise it should always be omitted. The exception is a name like von der Tann, including the article, where the von is original and logical. The Germans have a cruiser called the von der Tann, but the Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, Moltke, and Blücher appear, or did when this chapter was written, without the particle.

Many corresponding Dutch names in van are well established in England, e.g. the obvious Vandam, Vandervelde, Vandersteen, while the more aristocratic Vansittart is from the Netherland town Sittard. Sometimes it combines with the article to produce the prefix Ver- as in Vereker (acre), Verschoyle (schuyl, shelter).

Occupative names are in German more numerous than in English. This is due to the national tendency to elaborateness of description and differentiation. We are generally satisfied with the simple -er, but, corresponding to our Baker, we find in German not only Becker or Beck, but also Kuchenbecker (cake), Weichbecker (soft), Pfannebecker (pan), Semmelbecker (simnel), Weissbecker (white), and many others. So also the German compounds of Schmidt far exceed in number those of Smith. We find, among others, Blechschmidt (tin), Kupferschmied (copper), Silberschmidt, Stahlschmidt, Hackenschmidt (hoe), Hutschmidt (Shoesmith), Schaarschmidt (Shearsmith), Sichelschmidt, Dorfschmidt, Rosenschmidt (at the sign of the Rose), and about twenty more. But the commonest of all such elements is Meyer, farmer, the compounds of which number some hundreds.

founder, e.g. Kannengiesser, Potgicter; in -binder, e.g. Biesenbänder (besom), Fassbender (cask), now appearing in the London Directory in the proverbial form Fastbinder, Buchbinder, Bürstenbinder (brush); in -schneider, cutter, tailor, e.g. Brettschneider (board), Riemenschneider (thong), Steinschneider; in -hauer, hewer, e.g. Steinhauer (Stanier), Fleischhauer (Flesher), Holzhauer; in -brenner, e.g. Aschenbrenner (Ashburner), Kalckbrenner; in -schläger, striker, e.g. Kesselschläger, Lautenschläger (lute); in -meister, e.g. Sutermeister (Lat. sutor), Backmeister (bake), Werckmeister (Foreman); and in -mann, e.g. Sudermann (Lat. sutor), Schumann. The obsolete worthe, wright, survives in both Schubert and Schuchardt. To these may be added a few other odd compounds, such as Biengräber, one who digs out wild bees, Gildemeister, guild master, Fürbringer, "fore-bringer," i.e. attorney, Schwerdtfeger, sword polisher (Frobisher), Seidensticker, silk embroiderer, Saltsieder, salt boiler, Mussotter, jam boiler, Weissgerber, white tawer (Whittier), Leimkühler, glue cooler. As in England, some of the commoner surnames of this class are from words now obsolete, or refer to obsolete trades, such as Schröder, Schröter, Schröcr, tailor (shredder), Kürschner, maker of pelisses (Pilcher), Krüger, innkeeper, etc.

Forming a transition from the occupative surname to the nickname, we have those names which are indicative of rank, office, etc., and which are seldom to be taken literally. We find the same series in German as in other European languages, viz. among titles, Kaiser, König, Fürst and Prinz, Herzog, with its Low German form Hartog, Graff (Markgraff, Landgraff),

Ritter, Junker. Of a more official character are Kanzler (Chancellor), Richter (Judge), Probst (Provost), Vogt (Lat. vocatus), corresponding to our Bailey, Marschall, Hauptmann, Faehndrich (ensign), Bürgermeister. Among ecclesiastical nicknames are Papst, Bischoff, Abt, Pfaff, Mönch, Köster (Sexton). Such names as Armbruster (Arblaster), Schütz (Archer), Bartenwerffer, axe-thrower, may have been of occupative origin or nicknames due to the skill of their original owners. Some interesting surnames are of domestic origin. Such is Knecht, which has gone down in the world as its English cognate, Knight, has gone up, with its compounds, Gutknecht (Goodhind) and Liebknecht. Other names of this class are the very common Koch, Schenk, butler, "skinker," Hotmeister, steward, head-servant, Schatzmann, treasurer, Wächter, watchman (Waite), with its compound Saalwächter (Hallward).

It is possible within the limits of a chapter to give only brief indications for nicknames, in many ways the most interesting of all surnames. In German we find the equivalents of all our own common surnames of this class, together with a number of examples of a grotesqueness rare in modern English. The existence of this latter class is partly due to the fact that German surnames, at least in some provinces, became hereditary at a much later date than in England, so that local wit has had less wear and tear to endure, and also to the fact that absurd names were often conferred forcibly on the Jews as late as the beginning of the nineteenth century. These latter I leave out of account. All the ordinary adjectives occur, e.g. Gross, Klein, Lang, Kurtz, Schwarz, Weiss, Roth, Grün, Hübsch (Pretty), Hesslich (ugly), Frech, bold (Freake), Frey, Kahl, bald (Callow), Kluge (Wise), Liebe (Leif), Ehrlich, honest, Fröhlich (Merry), Wunderlich, etc. The article which once accompanied these names has often survived in the Low German forms, e.g. de Witt (White), Devrient (Friend), de Beer (Bear), de Hoogh (High), etc. Most names of relationship also occur, e.g. Vater, Kind, Süsskind, Liebeskind (Leifchild), with the compound Kindesvater (Barnfather), Vetter (Cousins), Neef (Neave), Brāutigam, Ohm (Eames), Wittwer.

Compounds descriptive of appearance are Breitkopf (Broadhead), Grosskopt (Greathead), Krauskopt, Kraushaar (Crisp), Gelhaar (Fairfax), Schwartzkopf 2 (Blackett), Widderkop (Ramshead, Weatherhead), and similar compounds of the alternative Haupt, such as Breithaupt, etc., Barfuss (Barfoot), Katzfuss, Breitfuss (Broadfoot), Leichtfuss (Lightfoot), Langbein (Langbain), Krummbein (Cruikshank), Rehbein, roe leg (cf. Sheepshanks), Holbein (hollow), Gansauge, goose-eye, Dünnebacke, thin cheek, Dickhaut, thick hide, Harnack, obstinate (hard neck). Sometimes the physical feature is emphasized without an accompanying adjective, e.g. Haupt, Kopf (Head), Faust (Fist), Zahn (Tooth). From costume come Mantel, Weissmantel, Ledderhose, Leinhos, Beckenhube (Basnett), Rothermel, red sleeve, Panzer, hauberk (Habershon), and many others.

Birds, beasts, and fishes are well represented, especially birds, e.g. Adler (Eagle), Geyer, vulture, Fink, Strauss, ostrich, Storch, Pfau (Peacock), Elster (Pye),

Falcke, Habicht (whence Habsburg), Hahn (Cock), Rebhuhn (Partridge), Specht, wood-pecker (Speight), Taube, though this last, like Taubmann, may belong to taub, deaf, Wildegans (Wildgoss), etc. These, like the corresponding English surnames, were sometimes taken from the signs of houses. The same applies to animal nicknames such as Löwe, Wolff, Fuchs, LG. Voss, Hase (Hare), Eichorn (Squirrel), Hirsch (Hart), Kalb, Schaff, etc. Among fish-names may be mentioned Hecht (Pike), Kaulbars (Perch), Stockfisch, Krebs (Crabbe), but these names are, for obvious reasons, less numerous than those of birds and quadrupeds.

The two smallest classes of nicknames are those connected with coins and exclamations, represented in English by such names as Penny (p. 177) and Pardoe (p. 182). Both classes exist in German, e.g. Hundertmark (cf. Mrs. Centlivre), Pfundheller, Weisspfennig, Schilling, Fünfschilling, Fünfstück, and Gottbehüt, God forbid, Gotthelf, Gottwaltz, God rule it. With these may be mentioned a number of abstract nouns which probably became surnames at the period of the predominance of allegory (see p. 217), such are Freude (Joy), Gluck (Luck), Dienst (Service), Andacht (Worship), Wohlfart (Welfare), etc.

All the seasons are represented, viz. Frühling or Lenz, Sommer, Herbst (Harvest), and Winter, also most of the days of the week, the commonest being Sonntag and Freytag, and the feasts of the church, e.g. Ostertag, Pfingst (Pentecost), Weihnacht (Christmas). Then we have descriptive compounds such as Wolzogen, wellbred, Ansorg, Ohnesorg, Kleinsorg (Careless), Judenfeind, Jew-hater, Burenfeind, peasant-hater, Süssenguth, sweet and good (cf. Peter Richeangod, Pat. R.); some names taken from the vegetable world, e.g. Knobloch (Garlick), Wermuth (Wormwood), Rübsamen, rape-seed, Stroh (Straw), Erbsmehl, pea-meal, Gerstenkorn (Barleycorn), etc.; and quite a number dealing with articles of food, usually preceded by an adjective, e.g. Süssmilch, Sauerbrei (broth), and especially the numerous compounds of Brot and Bier, such as Weissbrodt (Whitbread), Casembrood, cheese and bread, Roggenbrod (rye), Truckenbrod (dry), etc., and Gutbier, Bösbier, Sauerbier, Zuckerbier, etc., most of which have English parallels.

Lastly, we have the large group of phrase-names, consisting of a verb followed by a noun or an adverb, such as our Shakespeare and Golightly (ch. xii). There are probably several hundreds of these in German, almost all of which can be paralleled by modern English names, or by others which, though recorded in our Rolls, are now obsolete. Some of these are warlike, e.g. Schüttespeer (Shakespeare), Haueisen (Taillefer), Hauenschild, Zuckschwerdt, draw sword, occasionally with the verb following, as in Eisenbeiss (Mangefer), Manesse, man-eater, ogre. Sporleder, spur leather, was probably a Hotspur, Rumschöttel,2 clear dish, a glutton, Irrgang a wanderer, Liesegang a Golightly, Regedanz, start dance, and Liebetanz explain themselves. Puttkamer, clean room, was a Chamberlain. Common surnames belonging to this class are Klinkhammer. Pochhammer and Schwinghammer, Schnapaieff, snap up, Schlagentweit, strike into the distance, Füllgrabe, fill ditch, Füllkrug (Filpot), Machefrang, make show, Kiesewetter, discern weather, Kerruth, turn out, Hebe-streit, start quarrel (cf. p. 254, n. 2), Habenicht, have nought, Fürchtenicht, fear nought, Findeisen, find iron, Schluckebier, swallow beer, Schmeckebier, taste beer, Trinkwasser (Drinkwater), etc. With these cf. the obsolete English examples on pp. 270-7.

In conclusion, it may be said that there is simply no limit to the eccentricity of nicknames, though their interpretation is often a matter of conjecture. The German name Alleweldt, all the world, has Middle English parallels Tutlemund and Altheworld. It is hard to see why a man should be nicknamed Lindequist, lime twig (originally Swedish), but this well-known German name is surpassed in minuteness by the French name Brindejonc. The names mentioned in this chapter all come, with the exception of a few of special interest at the present moment, from a recent German navy list and are in no way to be regarded as peculiar or exceptional.<sup>2</sup> A few other miscellaneous examples from the same source are Rohwedder (Fouweather, p. 235, n. 1), Trurnit, grieve not, Mägdefrau, maid wife. Ehrenkönig, honour the King, Vogelgesang, Morgenrot (Dawn), Kränzlin (Garland), Hufnagel (Horsnail), Buttersack (see p. 167), Luchterhand, left hand, Neunzig (see p. 179), Hochgeschurz, high kilted, Handewerk, Gutjahr (Goodyear), Hünerfürst, prince of Huns, Teutel and its compound Manteuffel, man devil, the latter an honourable name in German military history before the destruction of Louvain.

At the period of the Renaissance it was a very usual practice for men of learning to latinize or hellenize their names. The case of Melanchthon will occur to the reader. We have a few examples in English, e.g. Torrens (Brook), Pontifex (Pope), Sutor, shoemaker, etc. Such names are much commoner in German. Well-known examples are Neander (Neumann), Sarkander (Fleischmann), Treviranus (of Trier), Curtius (Kurz), Vulpius (Fuchs), Fabricius (Schmidt), Pistorius (Becker), Avenarius (Habermann), Textor (Weber), Sartorius (Schneider). There is actually a Gygas in the list from which I have compiled this chapter. Even the Brown, Iones, and Robinson of Germany, viz. Müller, Meyer, and Schultz, sometimes appear glorified as Molinari, Agricola, and Prätorius, and there is a contemporary Prussian court chaplain Dryander whose ancestors were named Eichmann.

CHAPTER XV

DIVERGENT ORIGINS OF SURNAMES

"En histoire, il faut se résoudre à beaucoup ignorer" (ANATOLE FRANCE).

An esteemed correspondent writes to the author that, owing to the many and various side-possibilities in etymology, he is inclined to think that the origins of most surnames are mere guesses, and that the whole study can only be regarded as a game or an amusement. He seems to me both right and wrong. It is perfectly easy to show, by irrefutable evidence, the derivation of the great majority of surnames, but it is at the same time impossible to say to the individual, "Your name comes from so-and-so," unless that individual has a pedigree dating back to the Middle Ages. To take a simple example, there can be no doubt as to the origin of the three names Cordery, rope-walk [John de la Corderie, Cal. Gen.], Cordurey, king's heart [Hugh Queorderey, Fine R.], Cowdery, Fr. coudraie, hazel copse [William de la Coudray, ib.]. But to anyone familiar with medieval orthography it is quite certain that these three names have been commonly confused, especially when borne by the peasant class, and there are modern variants such as Caudery, Cordaray, Cowderoy, which one would be shy of assigning definitely to either of the three etymons. Hence we may say that, in the matter of the individual name, etymological certainty is possible, while genealogical certainty is problematical. Moreover, there are many common names which have several well-attested etymologies, and others that have a subsidiary origin which would never occur to superficial observation.

What, for instance, could be simpler than Butcher, Child, Cross, Harrison, Nicholl, Stone, Wills, and Wood? Yet each of these has been reinforced from sources only known to the scientific explorer. Butcher has nearly absorbed Butchart, a common Middle English font-name, which comes to us via Old French from OG. Burghart, castle strong. This would become Butcher as inevitably as Punchard, Fr. Ponsard [Simon Ponzard, Fine R.], has given Puncher. Child is occasionally local [Margery atte Child, Pat. R., Suss., Thomas Attechild, Hund. R., Kent]. This is the Norse keld, a spring, as in Salkeld, whence Sawkill, which in the south took the form "child." Hence also Honeychild, from a spot in Ronney Marsh. Cross, usually local, is also a nickname [Robert le Cros, IpM.], an alteration of Fr. gros. Harrison has swallowed up the medieval nickname hérisson, hedge-hog [William Herizun, Testa de Nev.]. Hence also Hearson, while Harsum, Hearsom, Hersom may belong here or to the ME. hearsum, ready to hear, obedient. By an odd metathesis the Normans transformed Lincoln into Nicol of very common occurrence in medieval chronicles. hence Nicholl, Nicoll is often local [Alured de Nicol, Close R., Thomas de Nichole, Hund, R.]. Stone, usually local, is sometimes short for one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Stan-, such as Stancytel, Stangrim, Stanheard, etc. [Robert Ston, Ramsey Cart.]. This applies also of course to Stanes, Staines, Wills is sometimes a variant of Wells [John atte Wille, Pat. R.]. Hence Atwill, Honeywill, Twills (p. 50). Wood is often a nickname from the obsolete wood, mad [Peter le Wod. Pat. R., Robert le Wode, Close R. ]: cf. Robert le Madde (Lanc, Court R. 1323-4), Ralph Badintheheved (Hund. R.). This is also one origin of Woodman: cf. Alexander Wodeclerc (Close R.), i.e. the crazy priest, and Walter Wodeprest (Malmesbury Abbev Reg.). Wallis, Welch, etc., may occasionally mean French, as the early Norman settlers before the Conquest were called walisc by the English (see Romance of Words, p. 151). Even the ubiquitous and simple Smith is sometimes local, of the smeeth, or plain (see Athersmith, p. 50), and is also a nickname, the "smooth" [Philip le Smethe, Hund, R.]. Cf. Smeathman. It need hardly be said that some Thompsons come from Thompson (Norf.), an example of 's ton becoming -son (see p. 240), while others represent the baptismal dims. Thomasin, Thomasine [Bartholomew Thomasyn, City F.].

These examples show sufficiently that even the simplest and commonest surnames are sometimes less simple than they look. But in some cases the multiplicity or choice of origins is quite obvious. The common name Burnett may be (1) baptismal, for Burnard, Bernard, AS. Beornheard, (2) a nickname, dim. of brown, or from the material called burnet (see p. 154). (3) a nickname, "brown head" (see p. 128), (4) local, at the "burn head," cf. Beckett, (5) local, at the "burn gate" (see p. 91). It has also interchanged freely with Barnett, which is generally of identical origin. The rather less common Burnell may be for Beornweald [Simon Bernald, Pat. R.], Beornhild [Geoffrey Burnild, Hund. R.], Beornwulf [Geoffrey Burnolf, Fine R.], from "burn hill" [Richard de Burnhul, Pat. R.], or it may be a nickname from "brown" [Burnellus Venator, Doc. Ill., in which sense it is used indifferently with the preceding name [Alan Burnell or Burnet, Pat. R.]. Probably in the case of these two names all the origins indicated are represented by the existing surname. But, if we take the rather uncommon Burret, we find that the possible etymologies are hardly less numerous. Is it, for instance, for Burrard, from an Anglo-Saxon name in Burg-, such as Burgweard, Burgheard, Burgweald, all well attested in the Rolls, or for "boar head" [Robert Burheved, Fine R.], or for the "bower head" [Walter de la Burethe, Hund, R.]? In the case of so uncommon a name it is probable that one only of these prototypes is represented.

There are, however, many well-diffused names which, like Burnett, have several clear origins. Such is Low, generally local, at the "low," or mound [Ralph de la Lowe, Hund. R.], probably also at the "lough," and also a nickname, the wolf [William le Lou, City B.]. The existence of High and Bass shows that the entry "le lowe" is often for the English adjective, and Low is also one of the shortened forms of Lawrence; hence Lowson, Drew is from the name Drogo, of uncertain origin [Drogo f. Ponz. DB.], and is also a nickname from OF. dru, which has two meanings, viz, "lover" and "sturdy" [John le Dreu, Hund. R.]. It is occasionally an aphetic form of Andrew. Druce is the same as the above, from OF. Drues, the nom, case of the name Drogo, or for the patronymic Drews. It is also local, of Dreux (Eure-et-Loire), in which case it may represent the name of the town [Herman de Drewes, DB.] or the adjective formed from it [Hugh le Drueis, Close R.1.

Angell and Angle [Robert en le Aungle, Fine R.] have been confused, to the advantage of the former, which is both a pageant nickname (see p. 209) and a personal name [Angel Clericus, Malmesbury Abbey Reg.]. But these names also represent a contracted form of the Norse Ankettle [Henry Angetil or Angel, Pat. R.1: cf. the contractions of Thurkettle (p. 31). Wynn has three origins, Welsh gwyn, white, fair, AS. wine, friend, or the same word as an element in such personal names as Winfrey, Winward, etc. (p. 43). Hogg is a nickname [Alice le Hog, Hund, R.], a variant of Hough, i.e. hill [Richard del Hog, Writs of Parl.], a variant of Hugh or How [Hogge the neldere, Piers Plowm., variant readings, Hugh the nedelere, Houwe the neldere 1]. Ware is local for Weir, also from AS. wara, a common Domesday word used for an outlying part of a manor, 2 and is a nickname, the "ware," or wary [Adam le War, Feet of Fines]—

"A Sergeant of the Lawe, war and wys" (Chauc, A. 309).

There is also no reason why it should not come from ware, merchandise. Marchandise is a fairly common French surname and is found also in our records [Ralph Marchaundise, Northumb. Ass. R. 1256-78].

The above are simple cases which require no philological knowledge. Less obvious is the double origin of the series Gale, Gales, Gall, Gaul, Gallon. The first is from "gaol" and the second from Wales, Fr. Galles, but all are also baptismal [John Gale, Pleas, Thomas Galyen, ib.], from an OF. Gal, Galon, which is OG. Walo, short for some name such as Walter. Both the G- and W- forms are found in Old French [Galo or Walo, Bishop of Paris, Ramsey Cart.]. Thus the above series of names are sometimes identical with Wale, Wales, Wall, Waule, Wallen [Richard f. Wale or Wales, Pipe R.]. Gales has a further possible origin, of Galicia [Piers Galicien, Exch. R., John de Galiz, ib.]—

"Of tydynges in Wales
And of Sainct James in Gales" (Skelton, Elynour Rummyng, 354).

Similar cases are Gass, Gash, Gaze, Gasson 1 [Robert

The forms in -on are the Old French accusative.

Gace, Pat. R.] for Wace, Wass, Wash, Wason, They come from OG. Waso, which belongs to the adj. hwas, sharp [Walter Wasce, Feet of Fines, Richard Wason,  $I \not \sim M$ .]. Forms of this adjective are still in English dial, use, and the name Wass is consequently also a nickname [Henry le Was,  $I \not \sim M$ .]. Finally, like Wash, it is local, from ME. wase, ooze, pool, whence specifically the Wash [Richard atte Wase, Hund, R., Norf.]. So also Gate, Gates may be identical with Waite, i.e. watchman, from the OF. gaite [Adam le Gayt or de la Geyte, Exch. R.].

Less complicated are the four origins of Perry, (I) for Peter or Pierre, (2) for Peregrine, (3) for Welsh Parry, i.e. ap Harry, (4) local, at the pear-tree, ME. pirie, whence also Pirie, Pury [Alexander atte Pery, City F., Richard de la Pirie, Hund R.\— > "And thus I lete hym sitte upon the pyrie, And Januarie and May romynge myrie " (Chauc. E. 2217).

There is scarcely a common surname, except those of easily understood frequency, like Baker, Green, Field, etc., which could not be dealt with in the same way, and, at the risk of wearying the reader, I will give a few more examples. Garland is certified as a nickname by the synonymous Ger. Krantz, Kränzl. It may have been taken from the sign of an inn-

"The Garland in Little East Cheape, sometime a brewhouse" (Stow).

In the north it runs parallel with Gartland, i.e. the "garth land." It was also a personal name [Bartholomew f. Gerland, Pipe R.], perhaps originally a nickname from OF. grailler, to cry hoarsely, croak, etc., which would explain its use as a dog's name in Chaucer. Cf. also Richard James called Greylond (Lond. Wills). The commonest source of Ray is probably OF. rei, a king. It is also for Rae, the northern form of the animal nickname Roe, and we cannot doubt that it is often for the local Wray (p. 84) and Ree (p. 71), and is also a costume nickname (p. 154). Swan is a nickname [Hugh le Swon, Hund, R., Walter le Cigne, Close R.]. It also represents AS, swan, herdsman, which we have replaced by the Norse cognate swain. This word, in its poetic sense of warrior, was an element in personal names [Swan f. Robert, Fine R.]. Finally, Henry atte Swan, of St. Osith, keeper of Queenhithe and collector of murage in London (Pat. R. 1319), was perhaps the owner of the hostelry which gave its name to Old Swan Pier.

March is local, at the "march," or boundary, besides of course coming specifically from March (Camb.) or La Marche in France [Richard de la Marche, hermit of Charing, Pat. R.]. It has also been confused with Marsh, which has got the better of the exchanges [John atte Marche or Mersshe, City E.], and is a variant of the font-name Mark [March Draper, City A., Mark le Draper, City C.]. Hann, Hancock, Hankin, Hanson are rightly connected by Bardsley with Flemish forms of John. Camden, with equal correctness, says that Hann is for Rann (Randolph); cf. Hob from Robert, Hick from Richard. But Hanne or Henry of Leverpol (Lanc. Inq. 1310–33) shows a third, and perhaps chief, origin. The harassed reader will be tempted to conclude that any name can come from anything, nor will he be far wrong. I was lately asked whether Dobson was derived from the French place-name Aubusson. There is no reason why it should not be, if it can be shown that any d'Aubussons ever settled in England. But Robert is a safer etymon.

In the case of a great number of names we observe a simple double origin, without being able to regard either as predominant. Such are Agate, "atte gate" or Agatha, Rudge, Fr. rouge or dial. rudge, a ridge, Wild, "le wild" or "atte wilde," Coy, of Quy (Camb.) [John de Coye, Pat. R., Camb.] or the "coy" [Walter le Coye, Pat. R.]. Agnew comes from Agneaux (Manche) [John de Aygneaus, Chart. R.] and is a nickname, Fr. agneau [Richard Agnel, Pat. R.]; cf. the common French surnames Lagneau, Lagnel, Laignel, Laignelet, etc. Vale is local and also from Fr. veille, watch, while Veal is both OF. le viel, the old [Adam le Viel, Lib. R.] and le vel, the calf [Richard le Vel, City B.], and of course Vale and Veal are themselves now hopelessly mixed up.

The above are simple examples in which the double origin appears on the surface, but there are others less obvious. Gower is sometimes from the Glamorgan district so named [William de Goar, Pleas], but more often from a personal name Gohier [Goher de Alneto, Chart. R.], which comes through Old French from OG. Godehar; it is thus a doublet of the native Goodier, Goodair, etc., AS. Godhere. The name has a possible third derivation from a shortened form of OF. goherier, a harness maker [Ernald le Goher, Close R.]. With Gower may be mentioned Power, generally the "poor,"

but also from OF. Pohier, a Picard [Randulf Puherius, Pipe R., Roger le Poher, Fine R.]. Tyson is explained by Bardsley as a form of Dyson, from Dionysius or Diana, and, when we note the swarms of Tysons who, in Cumberland, Westmorland, and Lancashire, confront the innumerable Dysons of the West Riding, there can be no doubt that this is correct. But the first Tyson on record was Gilbert Tison (DB.), who came over with the Conqueror—

"Gysbright Tysoun fut le primer des Tysouns" (Percy Cart.).

His name was no doubt a nickname from Fr. tison, a firebrand; cf. our Carbonnel and Fr. Charbonneau.* Mould, Mold, Moule are old forms of Maude. Stow mentions Henry Fitzwarin and "Dame Molde his wife," the parents of Lady Richard Whittington. But these names also represent dialect forms of the animal nickname Mole—

"Paid the mould catcher, f2" (Nott. Bor. Rec. 1724).

Bruton is local (Som.) and also for le Breton [John le Brutun, Hund. R.]; cf. Bruttner (p. 216). Gibbons, usually from Gilbert or Gib, comes sometimes from Gobion (Gubbins), an Old French name belonging to <sup>2</sup> Our Littlecole is doubtful. It may be formed like Fr. Petinicol. The Normans inherited from their Scandinavian ancestors a love of trivial and crude nicknames, and some of the proudest names in English history are of undignified origin, e.g. Marmion, now found also as Marmon, Marment, is OF. marmion, equivalent to modern marmot, monkey, brat. There is another OF. marmion, supposed to mean "marmot," but it is of no great antiquity and would not of course be a Norman name.

316 DIVERGENT ORIGINS OF SURNAMES

OG. Godbrecht. This is found as Norman Gubiun [Richard Gubiun or Gibiun, Pleas]; cf. ribbon, ruban. Similarly Higgins belongs perhaps as much to Hugh as to Hick (Richard). Gainer, Gaynor, Ganner is occupative (see Augagneur, p. 287), and is also a variant form of Guinevere—

"And Dame Gaynour, his quene, Was somewhat wanton, I wene" (Skelton, Phyllyp Sparowe, 636).

Geary, Jeary is short for one of the Anglo-Saxon names in Gar-, or from one of the cognate Old French names. As Geri it was the name of one of the paladins. It is occasionally a nickname [John le Gery, Hund. R.], from an obsolete adjective meaning uncertain, changeable—

"Right so kan geery Venus overcaste
The hertes of hir folk; right as hir day
Is gereful, right so chaungeth she array"

(Chauc. A. 1535).

Sometimes we find that an extremely rare name has more than one legitimate claimant. The name Godsave reached the author from a regimental mess, where the bearer was known as the "national anthem." This interesting name, found also as Godsiff, represents the Middle English phrase "o' God's half," properly "on God's behalf," but generally used as a kind of exclamation. In one of the Chester Plays Noah says to his wife—

"Wiffe, come in! why standes thou their?
Thou art ever frowarde, I dare well sweare.
Come in, one Godes halfe! tyme it were,
For fear leste that we drowne."

Thomas Agodshalf, whose name is latinized as de parte

Dei, married a sister of Becket, Walter a Godeshalf lived in Sussex in the thirteenth century (Cust. Battle Abbey), de Godeshalf and Godsalve are found among the Freemen of York, Thomas Godsalve, whose portrait by Holbein can be seen at Dresden, was Registrar of the Consistory Court of Norwich in the sixteenth century, Godsawfe is found in Notts in the seventeenth century, and in fact the name is well attested in various parts of England up to comparatively recent times, and very likely still flourishes in some remote spot. Nothing would seem clearer than that this should be the origin of Godsave. But, on the other hand, it may be simply "God save"; cf. the many names of that type given on p. 181, some of which were even used as font-names [Deulesalt & f. Jacob, Pipe R.] nearly five centuries before the Puritan eccentricities. Chaucer. which still exists as Chauser, is usually said to come from OF, chauceor, a maker of leathern hose, very common in the Rolls, and Baldwin le Chaucer de Cordwanerstrete: (City B.) seems conclusive. But the modern Chauser may equally well represent the ME. chauffe-cire, heat wax, a name for a Chancery official [Ellis le Chaufesire, Pat. R.]. See NED., s.v. chaff-wax, and Ducange, calefactor ceræ-"Chauffe-cire, a chafe-wax, in the Chancerie" (Cotg.).

It could also quite well represent a "chalicer."

Anger is a personal name, Fr. Angier, OG. Ansgar (p. 30) [Ansger solus, DB.]. It is also derived from

Angers, whence also Ainger, while it can hardly be excluded from the great class of abstract nicknames (pp. 216-224); cf. Ger. Zorn. Bottle seems to be a rare name, but, in addition to ME, botel, a building, house, it has ancestors in the shape of Anglo-Saxon names in Bod- [Botild or Botil Hod, Hund, R., Robert Buthewlf,1] Chart. R.]. Bellasis is local [Robert de Beleassise, F. of Y.], from Bellasis (Northumb.) or Bellasize (Yorks), both of French formation; but there is a font-name Belle-assez, fair enough [Beleassez Iudæa, Pipe R.], which is not uncommon in Middle English and would give the same result. With this cf. Goodenough, Goodnow [William Godynogh, Pat. R.], Whitenow, Oldknow, Thomas Fairynowe (Pat. R.), Richard Langynou (Fine R.), and even Woodnough, i.e. mad enough (p. 308). Lew, already explained (p. 66) as local, is also a variant of Low, wolf (p. 310). The full Leleu is still found in Devon. Nothard may be the "neat-herd" [Nicholas le Noutehird, F. of Y.] or the AS. Notheard, valour strong. Fear has alternative origins from ME. fer, fierce, proud (Fr. fier), and fere, a companion, as in Playfair, and of course has been confused with Fair.

Stutfield is authentically derived from Étoutteville (Seine-Inf.), with the regular substitution of -field for -ville [Helewin de Estuteville, Fine R.], but it can also be for "stot-field," from ME. stot, a nag, bullock [John de Stotfold, Chart. R.]. Trist is short for Tristram and alternatively local, at the "tryst" [Peter atte Treste, Hund, R.], the earliest meaning of which is connected with hunting. Cue is the cook, ME.

le keu from Old French, but there is a Sc. McCue, for MacHugh, which would inevitably become Cue¹ in England. Suddard is a dialect form of the local Southward and a Scotch form of Fr. soudard, a soldier. Bew is usually Welsh ap Hugh (Pugh), but also a French nickname representing a later form than the more common Bell [Peter le Beus,² Leic. Bor. Rec.]. Uzzell probably represents both AS. Osweald and OF. oisel (oiseau), whence also Lazell, Layzell, Fr. Loisel. The antithetic Fairfoul might be for "fair fowl," for "fearful," or for "fair field," each derivation being legitimate and easily paralleled, but it may also have its face value, as a nickname applied to a man of contrasts; cf. Roger Fulfayr (Hund. R.), who may, however, have been "full fair."

Finally, we have the case of a name of obvious and certain origin which has an unexpected subsidiary source. Some striking examples were given at the beginning of the chapter. Hull and Pool are evidently local, the former being a variant of "hill"—

"On a May morwenyng on Malverne hulles" (Piers Plowm. C. i. 6).

But Hull was a common font-name in Lancashire [Adam f. Hul, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33, Hull f. Robert, ib.], hence Fitzhull. No doubt it is for Hulbert, an Old French name cognate with AS. Holdbeorht, gracious bright. Pool is a common Anglo-French spelling of Paul, whence also Poll, Pollett, sometimes Powell and generally Powles. Arundell, Arndell, Arrandale are obviously from Arundell (Suss.), but Osbert Arundel¹ (Rievaulx Cart. c. 1140) was named from OF. arondel, a swallow. Beaver, Beevor, etc., show the usual pronunciation of Belvoir (Leic.) and have no connection with an animal which was extinct in England long before the surname period. But John le Bevere ² (Fine R.), like Geoffrey le Buver (Close R.), was a thirsty soul, though not necessarily to be classed with William Aydrunken (Northumb. Ass. R. 1256–79). Bourne is generally local, from Fr. borne, a boundary, no doubt often confused with burn. It is also a nickname, the one-eyed ³ [Walter le Borne, Pipe R., Peter Monoculus, Exch. R.], still common in France as Leborgne.

Other examples of reinforced local names are Tower, sometimes the "tawer," leather dresser [Gilbert le Tower, Hund. R.], and Myer, OF. mire, the physician—

"Je sui malade a mort, si requier vostre aïe, Que myere ne me puet aidier par sa clergie"
(OF. poem, 14th cent.).

Buxton is occasionally a personal name [Ailric Bucstan, Pipe R.], of the same type as Wulfstan. Venn, usually for the local Fenn [Nicholas Dibbe of la Venne, IpM.,

Leborgne may be rather Strabo than Cocles.

4 Myer, Myers is generally local, at the "mire," and in modern times often stands for Ger. Meyer. OF. mire, a doctor, perhaps became a popular nickname in connection with the quack doctor of the medieval drama. It is a very common entry (mire, meir, meyre), and has evidently been confused with Mair, Mayor. In fact it is likely that many of the latter spring from mire. It is hardly necessary to say that the local Mears (p. 68) is also implicated.

Som.] is also baptismal, probably for Vincent [William f. Venne, Lanc. Inq. 1310-33]. Over is ME. overe, bank, sea-shore, whence several English place-names. In Middle English it seems to be used chiefly as a rime for Dover. The surname Over, whence also Owers, is also occupative, from OF. ovier, an egg-merchant [Thurstan le Over or Ovarius or Owarius, Leic. Bor. Rec.].

The above are examples of local surnames which have other subsidiary origins. Baptismal surnames have been similarly reinforced from other sources. Even the simple Adam is sometimes local, "atte dam"; cf. Agate, Adeane, etc. Willis has encroached on Willows [Andrew in le Wylies, Percy Cart.]. I have already suggested (p. 232) that Hugh may sometimes represent AS. hiwa, a servant. It is also, like Hogg. a variant of the local Hough [William del Hughe, F. of Y.]. In fact Hugh, Hough, How, Hogg are so mixed up that a small chapter would be required to elucidate their history. Hitch, usually for Richard, is occasionally local [Richard Attehiche, Hund. R.], probably a variant of "hatch" or "hutch." The derivative Hitchcon, from Fr. Huchon (Hutchin), dim. of Hugh, suggests that the Hitch- group, like the Hig-group, belongs to Hugh as well as Richard. Bellis. having its home in North Wales, is clearly ab Ellis, but it is also a variant of Bellhouse (see p. 96). Bryan and Bryanson are both occasionally local, from Brienne, a common French place-name [Guy de Briane, Fine R.], and Briançon [Bartholomew de Brianzun, ib.]. Neale, which represents the font-name Nigel and also the Norse Niel, i.e. Nicholas, is sometimes derived from Nesle (Somme). The merchants of Amyas (Amiens), Neal and Corby, all now in the department of Somme, are often mentioned in City records and appear to have enjoyed special privileges. It is only natural that each town should have given an English surname. Catlin, whence also Gatling, is usually from Catherine [William Cateline or Katelyn, Fine R.], and may even be a dim. of the Norse Kettle [Ketelinus le Fevre, Coram Rege R. 1297], but it also records stray Catalans, i.e. incomers from Catalonia [Arnold Catellan, Pat. R., John de Cateloyne or Catelyne, ib.]. Everett, besides representing Everard, AS. Eoforheard, almost certainly means "boar head," cf. Bullett and the other examples on p. 128.

Here it may be noted that personal names in -eit, -itt are not always to be regarded as dims. In Tamsett we have merely the French dim. ending -et (Thomas-et), but in Hewett, Howitt, Willett, and many other names the ending may be the usual reduction of -ard, so that they would be from Heward, Howard, Willard, rather than from the Hugh and Will which represent a first syllable shared by these names with other Anglo-Saxon names.

An occupative name may also conceal one of the other classes. Meller, usually the "miller" *—

(Piers Plowm. A. ii. 80)—

<sup>1</sup> Howard has several origins, but the identity, as personal names, of the shortened How and Hew suggests that its chief origin is Fr. Huard, OG. Hugihart. Searle has neither Hygeheard nor Hygeweard, but such names must have existed.

&lt;sup>2</sup> It is interesting to note that, according to the NED., miller, meller, milner, mulliner, are not found before the fourteenth century. They are all, however, common as thirteenth-century surnames. The Anglo-Saxon term was mylenweard (Millward, Millard), really the official in charge of the lord's mill. In the Pat. R. occurs William le Wyndmylneward.

is also the "better" [John le Meillur, Chart. R.]; cf. Fr. Meilleur, Ger. Besser, and our own Better [John le Bettre, Pat. R.]. Biddle, Bittle is not only for AS. bydel, the beadle, but, its home being Gloucestershire, represents Welsh ab Ithel (whence Bethell, Bithell, etc.), the simplex being found in Wiltshire as Iddols. Ryder is obviously occupative, but the home of the name is North Wales, a country singularly unsuited for cavalry. Hence it must often be from a Welsh personal name [Mereduc f. Reder, Pat. R.]. Mawer, a "mower" [Thomas le Mawere, Pat. R.], is in East Anglia a variant of the dial. mawther, a girl, in fact this is probably the usual origin of the name, which belongs chiefly to Lincolnshire.

"The old Mawther biled 'em, she did. Mrs. Gummidge biled 'em'" (David Copperfield, ch. vii.).

Very common names such as Carter, Cooper, Tucker easily swallow up uncommon names which have ceased to be understood. In Carter is almost lost Charter, which itself may have various origins, including that of Carthusian monk [Philip le Chartrar or le Carter or de Chartraas, Salisb. Cart.]. Cooper, Couper, Cowper includes not only "cupper," but also Du. kooper, a merchant, lit. buyer, which we still have in horse-coper; and the not uncommon Toutcœur, all heart [Geoffrey Tutquor, Royal Let. Hen. III. 1216–35, William Tutquere, F. of Y.] has been lost in Tucker.

Even the obvious nickname has often a secondary source. I will take three examples only. Bird is from ME. brid, properly a young bird,* and used later of the young of other animals and even of children. In the fourteenth century it is used for maiden, by confusion with ME. burde, berde, and possibly also with bride, so that these words must also be considered in tracing the pedigree of the Birds—

"Thir breeks o' mine, my only pair,
That ance were plush, o' guid blue hair,
I wad hae gien them off my hurdies
For ae blink o' the bonie burdies!"

(Tam o'Shanter).

Ruddick, found also as Rodick, Riddick, Reddick, etc., is an Anglo-Saxon dim. of the name Rudd, i.e. red, and in dialect is a name for the robin—

"The tame ruddok and the coward kyte" (Chauc. Parl. of Foules, 349).

But Robert del Rowdick (Leic. Bor. Rec.), whose name is clearly local, may have been the ancestor of some of the Ruddicks. Cox is one of our commonest surnames and represents Cocks, the simple Cock being of at least four origins, none of which will very well account for David atte Kokes (Hund. R., Norf.) and John del Cogges (Chesh. Chamb. Accts.). Apparently these names refer to the boat called a "cog" or "cock." For similar names see p. 171. The use of the plural is unusual, but cf. Hoyes, a common Lincolnshire surname, and Bates, sometimes an archaic northern form of "boat" [Adam del Bate, IpM.].

I had intended to have included in this volume a chapter on imitative name-forms, of which examples are to be found on almost every page of the book. But the subject is so vague and endless and so unsuited for methodical treatment that I will only mention a few characteristic instances. The natural tendency is to strive at giving meaning to the unintelligible and. among a number of accidental variants, to prefer that which suggests something significant, however remote this may be from the real sense of the name. But the reader whose patience has held out so far will have come to see that surnames are often of such bizarre and unexpected origin, that one must exercise great caution in arbitrarily describing the unusual as imitative. Bardsley regards Tortoiseshell as an imitative form of the local Tattershall. The habitat of the name (Staffordshire) does not favour this, and there is no reason why it should not be a nickname, probably of costume, just as we have tortoiseshell cats and butterflies. The tortoise was well known to our ancestors. and has given the existing names Tortiss, Tortise, the latter occurring in Norfolk, where the Promptorium Parvulorum was compiled—

"Tortuce, a beeste, tortuta" (Prompt. Parv.).

Beetle may be an alteration of Beadle, but we have a number of well-authenticated insect nicknames, e.g. Ampt, Emmett, Furmy, all meaning ant, Bee, Coachafer, Flay or Fly, Hornett, Wasp, etc., and Robert Scarbode (IpM.) certifies Beetle as a nickname—

" Escarbot, the blacke flie called, a beetle" (Cotg.).

There are, of course, some cases in which we may legitimately infer imitative origin even without documentary evidence. When, in the roll of a regiment largely composed of Irishmen, we find Kingseller, Flirty and Caverner, we need not hesitate to recognize the fine old Irish names Kinsella, Flaherty and Kavanagh. Coldbreath, Cowhorn and Laughland may be similarly accepted as for the Scottish Galbraith, Colquhoun and Lachlan, while Cossack is the Irish Cusack. The Welsh Rhys, Rees is very common in England as Rice and occasionally as Race. Stow tells us that in 1531 Sir Rice Grifith was beheaded on Tower Hill, and I have come across Race Alisaundre in a monastery cartulary near the Welsh Border. Another origin of "Ras, shaven, cleane shaven" (Cotg.).

Race is Fr. ras [John le Ras, Hund. R.].

Straight is perhaps merely a variant of Street [Ralph del Strate or atte Strete, Close R.].

Sometimes a name, without being imitative, suggests something quite remote from its meaning. Lugger is AS. Hlothgar, famous spear. It cannot be of the same origin as Galley, Barge, etc. (p. 171), for, according to all nautical authorities, the name of the craft dates from the eighteenth century. Pinion is one of the many names from Welsh ap Eynon; cf. Binyon, Bennion, etc. Pamphlett is a dim. of the name Pamphile [John Panfelot, Pat. R.]. Cf. the derivation of the common noun pamphlet, from Pamphilet, "a familiar name of the twelfth-century amatory poem or comedy called Pamphilus, seu de amore, a highly popular opuscule in the thirteenth century" (NED.). With the Easternlooking Durbar, Doorbar, AS. Thurbeorht, cf. Sirdar (p. 120). In Icemonger is preserved AS. isen, iron.

The locality in which an imitative name is found often furnishes a clue to its origin. Examples are Blackcow, of Blackhall (Lanc.), and Muse, a Yorkshire name, of Meaux in that county. So also Doubt, Doubting are found in Somerset with Dowd, Dowding, these probably from David. In Bucks Coughtrey is found side by side with Cowdery (p. 306), while in Lincolnshire Cushion occurs as a variant of Cushing. Names that have wandered far from their homes can often be traced back thither through a series of forms. To those mentioned on p. 88 may be added Counterpatch, a London version of Comberbach (Chesh.), of which Cumberpatch is an intermediate form, Kingrose for Kinross, and Roseworm for the much prettier Cornish Rosewarne.

Names of baptismal origin get perverted if unfamiliar. Williams does not change, but Paton, no longer recognized as a dim. of Patrick, is altered to Patten, Pattern, Patent. Any form, whatever absurdity it suggests, is preferred to the unintelligible. Thus Mahood, from Maheut, the Old French form of Matilda, sometimes becomes Mawhood, and Dawtrey, i.e. de Hauterive. is spelt Daughtery. Liptrapp is a perversion of Liptrott. an early German immigrant, Liebetraut, "Dearlove," probably a Huguenot name. Loyal and Royal are doubtful. Though quite possible nicknames, they are perhaps rather for Lyle, Ryle or Lyall, Ryall. The first two are local and the second two baptismal, though they have of course been confused. Lyall is for Lyulph, representing an Old Danish Lithwulf [Liolf f. Liolf, Fine R.], and Ryall is for Riulf [Henry f. Riolf. Lib. R.], AS. Ricwulf.

One result of imitative spelling is that we find many names suggesting adverbs, conjunctions and interjections, or even parts of verbs. These are generally pretty simple, e.g. While is for Wile (see p. 83),

Whence is at the "wence," i.e. the cross-roads. This is simply the plural of went, a way [John del Wente, Pat. R.]. Where is for Ware (p. 311) and the second element of Whereat is yate, a gate (see p. 91). In connection with these names it may be noted that initial Wh- is often artificial, e.g. Whatkins, Whisker (p. 137), Whybird, AS. Wigbeorht, etc. Heigho is for Hayhoe, at the "high hoe." Would is of course for Wood; cf. Wouldhave (p. 59). Goe, very common in Lincolnshire, where it is neighboured by Goy, is local, from one of many places in France called Gouy [Hugh de Goe or de Goy, Close R.].

Most collectors of odd surnames have been attracted by the great class of names in -ing. A curious little book 1 now before me has a list of 150 such names, and this list could easily be doubled. It is probable that hardly any of these names are really present participles. We might nickname a man "Dancing Jimmy," but, for surname purposes, he would become "Jimmy the Dancer." A great many of these -ing names are Anglo-Saxon patronymics, e.g. Billing, Golding, etc., and some may be formed from local names and mean inhabitant. In the Abingdon Cariulary are mentioned the Beorhtfeldingas, Lamburningas, Winterburningas, Cnottingas, Horningas, who inhabited the "bright field," "lang burn," etc.; but it is uncertain how far this formation survived into the surname period. Perhaps the majority of these names are due to the vulgar tendency to add final -g after -n, as in "kitching." Here belong Panting, Painting, for

Pantin, Panton, a dim. of Pantolf [William Pauntolf, Lib R., William Paunton, ib.]. Going is the French name Gouin [John Gowyn, Pat. R.], Howling is a double dim. of How or Hugh; cf. Fr. Huelin, Hulin. Wearing and Warring are for Warin, a common Old French name (Guérin) which usually gives Warren. Dusting is a form of Thurstan [William Dusteyn, IpM.] and is also found in the shortened form Dust. Fearing is for Fearon, OF. feron, a smith, and Basting is a perversion of Bastin, i.e. Sebastian. And so ad infinitum. It is possible that in a few cases the origin of an -ing name may be an abstract noun; see Deeming (p. 222); while many of them are local compounds of ing, a meadow (p. 64).

But we have a few surnames derived from French present participles used as nicknames. Such are Currant [Beatrice Corant, Ramsey Cart.], Mordaunt [Robert le Mordaunt, Hund. R.], Morant or Murrant [John le Moraunt, Coram Rege R. 1297, Amicia le Murant, Close R.]. The latter name is more likely aphetic for OF. demorant (demeurant) than for mourant. Cf. Hugh le Demurant (Pipe R.), Johanna la Manaunte (Testa de Nev.), Alexander Sujournant (Glouc. Cart.). These examples seem to show that Remnant, like the common noun remnant, represents the Old French present participle remanant. Many more names of this type occur in the Rolls, e.g. Penaunt, Poygnaunt, Saillaunt, Trenchaunt, Taylant, Erraunt, etc., and probably some of these are still in existence.

330 DIVERGENT ORIGINS OF SURNAMES

random and most pages of the London Directory would yield similar results. The reader will, I think, conclude that a real Dictionary of English Surnames would be rather a big book, and that compilations which dispense with evidence are not to be taken seriously.

INDEX

This index contains, with a very few doubtful cases, only names which were in existence as late as the nineteenth century. Foreign names are printed in italics. It will be sometimes found that more than one origin is indicated for the same name.
