"Good as the Wheat"

In the State of Tennessee there is a certain village boasting of a tavern, three stores and four groceries, where from morning till night, and from night till dawn, a person entering the town may find in the tavern, stores and groceries aforesaid, one or more groups of persons playing cards. Gambling there is reduced to a science—the history of the four kings is thoroughly studied, and from the school boy to the gray-headed veteran, from the miss in her teens to the mother of large family, they are initiated into the mysteries of high, low, jack, game, right and left bowers—the honors of the odd trick. One of the best players in the village was Major Smith, the tavern keeper: or, as he expressed it, the proprietor of the hotel; widower, who, like

Juptha, judge in Israel,
Had a daughter passing fair.

Fanny, the daughter, was one of the prettiest girls in Tennessee, and therefore one of the prettiest in the world, for we here digress to lay down as ipse dixit, that Tennessee woman in point of beauty are matchless. The sweet-hear of Fanny was a young farmer, residing in the neighborhood, whom we shall designate by the name of Bob.

It happened one day before harvest, the young man was detained in the village, and found himself as usual at this hotel, seated between the Major and his daughter. After a desultory conversation between the two gentlemen, on the state of the weather, the prospects of the approaching harvest, and such important staples of conversation, the Major asked Robert how his wheat crop promised to yield. In reply, he was told that the young farmer expected to make at least one hundred bushels. The Major appeared to study for a moment, then abruptly proposed a game of old sledge, "seven up," the stakes to be his daughter Fanny against the wheat. This of course, the young man indignantly refused, he could not bear the idea that the hand of her he loved should be made the subject of a bet, or that he should win a wife by gambling for her; and perhaps because he knew the old man was hard to beat and there was a strong probability of his losing both wheat wife.

It was not until the Major, with his usual obstinacy, had sworn unless he won her, he should never have her, that the young man was forced reluctantly to consent to play.

The table was placed, the candles lit, the cards produced, and the players took their seats, with Miss Fanny between them, to watch the progress of the game. The cards regularly shuffled and cut, and it fell to the Major's lot to deal. The first hand played, and Robert made gift to his opponent's high, low, game. Robert then delt, the Major again made three to his opponent's one.

"Six to two," said Miss Fanny with a sigh.
"The Major, as he dealt the cards, winked knowingly and said.
"I am good for the wheat, Master Bob."

The old man turned up a trump—it was a spade. Fanny glanced at her father's hand—her heart sank, he held the three, eight spot and king. She then looked at Robert's hand, and lo! he had the ace, queen, duce, and jack or knave. She whispered to Robert to beg—he did so.

"Take it said the Major.
Robert led the duce, which the Major took with his three spot, and followed by playing the king. Robert put his queen upon it. The Major supposing it was the young man's last trump, leaned over the table, and tapping the last trick with his finger, said:

"That's good as the wheat."
"It is?" asked Robert, as he displayed to the astonished Major the ace and jack yet in his hands.
"High, low, jack, gift and the game," shouted Robert.

"Out!" shouted Fanny.
"Good as wheat," added Robert, as he flung his arms around her, and kissed her.

In due time they were married, and ever after that, when anything occurred of a pleasing nature to the happy couple they would express their emphatic approbation of it by the phrase, "good as the wheat."

A FAST MAN AND THE ECCENTRIC PREACHER.—A fast man undertook the task of teasing an eccentric preacher.
"Do you believe," he said, "in the story of the prodigal son and the fattened calf?"
"Yes," said the preacher.
"Well, then, was it a male or a female calf that was killed?"
"A female," promptly replied the divine.

"How do you know that?"
"Because," looking the man steadily in the face, "I see that the male is alive now."

Romance in Real Life—Married, Divorced and Remarried.

[From the Boston Traveler.]

A few years ago a young and beautiful lady, living not a thousand miles from Boston, had two suitors, one poor and the other rich, the latter having less the favor in the eyes of his mistress than his rival. And is also usually the case in such instances, the young lady's preference conflicted with that of her friends. So decided were they in their opposition to a match with the poor mechanic, and so loud in their praises of the other that the young lady finally consented to become the rich man's wife. They lived happily together. But in the progress of years reverse came; the best calculations cannot always put off misfortunes, and her husband announced one day that his failure had swept away his property. But he did not blow his brains out or take poison, nor did she go back to her mother, or regret the day that she had ever married him. No. Both were too sensible to act so foolishly. He spent a few days with his creditors in arranging matters, and then the couple moved away very quietly. In a week every body knew that Mr.—had failed, and a week later the gossips added to their statements the facts (for a wonder) that he had gone to California to try and repair his fortunes, leaving his wife, with two young children, with means enough for many years to come.

A year passed, and Mrs.—heard from her husband but once, and then only a few lines, which accompanied a small remittance—and announced that his stay might be longer than he anticipated.

Another year passed by, and only one more letter, this time full of business, and stating the period of his return still more indefinitely.

Then came a blank of several years, with no letter, no money, no news of any kind from her husband.

The tongue of scandal was not silent during this period of doubt, but every circumstance reflecting on the fidelity of the husband to the wife, was magnified, till she was led to believe herself deserted, without means, she had to depend on her friends for her subsistence.

Thrown occasionally into the society of her former rejected suitor, and believing that he had remained single for her sake, and having nothing to hope for from her missing husband, she finally applied for and obtained a divorce, on the ground of desertion.

One can imagine what her feelings were when she learned that her former lover had never, since his rejection by her, and her marriage to another cherished other feelings for her than those of friendship.

Her disappointment was sharpened with anguish when, a few days after, she received a letter from her husband, stating that he at last accumulated a fortune beyond his most sanguine expectations, and was then on his way home, with a closing request that she would meet him at New York. She gathered from the letter that some money had been sent her often during those years, but which she had never received. She knew her husband, if affectionate, was also proud, and feared that he would never forgive the slight involved in the act of obtaining a divorce. But she finally resolved on a full confession, and on the day of the arrival of the steamer, she was the first to greet her late husband, who, after hearing all the particulars of her conduct during his absence, was at first inclined to refuse his forgiveness, but finally decided to overlook the past, with its mistakes and errors, and accompanied to the altar the object of his early affections.

THE PLANTER'S LOFTY PASSION.—The New Orleans Delta says that a well known planter living in Louisiana, and possessing wealth, recently went to the city in search of amusement, and directly visited the museum of Signor Vannuchi. A Giantess, Miss Sarah Morehouse, was exhibiting herself at that establishment, and to her the planter raised his eyes—indeed, he was obliged to raise them, for she was seven and a half feet high, and his feet were only five. The planter at once loved the giantess, and spent money in purchasing tickets to the museum. The treasury rejoiced, but the giantess did not reciprocate the affection. On the contrary she declined his offer of marriage three times. This coyness, the unsuccessful man attributed to the influence of Signor Vannuchi, and he accordingly determined to remove her from the sphere of the showman's influence. Stratagem was necessary, and was unhesitatingly used. The giantess was induced by some pretense to enter a carriage, which was then driven away. After going some distance, the planter sprang in, and the vehicle whirled on its way again. The giantess listened a few moments to her victim's tale of love, then she quietly opened the door, dropped him in the street, whence he was taken with a dislocated shoulder to the hospital, while she returned to the museum.

INTERESTING INCIDENT AT A WEDDING.

—A curious scene occurred recently at St. Peter's Church, Liverpool. Early in the morning, a hackney carriage drove up to the gates of the church, and out jumped a pleasant looking fellow, who was immediately followed by a buxom lass. They proceeded towards the church door, but just as the bridegroom was entering the porch, a lady's hand came in contact with his head, and a regular "mill" followed. His antagonist was another young woman, and judging from the manner in which she used her arms, she must have been "taking lessons" for some time previous to the encounter. The unfortunate bridegroom was doubled up in no time; and, in order to escape greater punishment, he slipped away, and ran into the center of the church. The row was now at its climax—shouts, yells, expressions of rejected love, mingled with a slight sprinkling of parliamentary terms, echoed through the vaulted aisle. After venting all her rage upon the unfortunate bridegroom the "rejected" turned around and gave the bride a blow between the eyes, which had the effect of creating a blush such as modesty never wore. An ineffectual attempt on the part of the latter to retaliate closed the proceedings. The Amazon retired, and the happy (!) couple, after sharing each other's sorrows, mingled into one.

DOLLIE DUTTON.—The Philadelphia "Inquirer" thus describes a little girl nine years of age, now on exhibition at the Assembly Buildings in that city:

Dollie Dutton is the smallest of all small ladies. Her littleness is especially observable when she is placed beside a girl of the ordinary size of her own age. She is smaller than most infants of a year's growth, and is yet equal in mental development to other children of her age. In appearance she is beautifully diminutive. Her head and limbs are developed in exact accordance with her body, and her movements are singularly graceful. One follows her about the room, her little pate with its flaxen curls bent bashfully downward, and her sweet, blue eyes—such eyes in child or woman are seldom met—roving timidly and thoughtfully over scores of admiring visitors. She sings some well known tunes, and through the large hall her shrill, small tones penetrate, every word distinct and musical. She dances in quaint measured steps, and in the arms of a girl of her own age, nestles like a babe.

It is amusing to see the eagerness with which mothers follow this tender child. We are told that some females have been constant attendants upon Dolly's Levees, since their initial night, and kisses from her delicate lips are coveted as blessings. One considers her with gentleness akin to holiness, and the skeptic in woman's truth with this sweet child in mind, learns to believe that if there be no innocence, there is at least its angelic similitude.

THE MAYOR WANTS TO SEE THEE.—A young man, a nephew, had been to sea; and on his return he was relating to his uncle an adventure which he met on board a ship.
"I was one day leaning over the taff-rail, looking down into the mighty ocean," said the nephew, whom we shall call William, "when my gold watch fell from my fob and immediately sunk out of sight. The vessel was going at ten knots an hour, but nothing daunted, I sprang over the rail, down, down, and after a long search, found it, came up close under the stern, and climbed back to the deck without any one knowing I had been absent.

"William," said his uncle, slightly elevating his broad brow and opening his eyes to their widest capacity, "how fast did thee say the vessel was going.
"Ten knots, uncle."
"And thee dove down into the sea, and came up with the watch, and climbed up the rudder chains?"
"Yes, uncle."
"And thee expects me to believe the story?"

"Of course! You wouldn't dream of calling me a liar, would you, uncle?"
"William," replied his uncle, gravely, "thee knows that I never call any body names; but William, if the Mayor of the city were to come to me, and say, 'Josiah, I want thee to see the biggest liar in all Philadelphia.' I would come straight to thee, and put my hand thy shoulder, and say to thee, 'William, the Mayor wants to see thee!'"

How small a portion of our lives is that we truly enjoy! In youth we are looking forward for things that are to come; in old age we look backward to things that are past.

AIM at perfection in everything, though in most things it is unattainable; however, they who aim at it, and persevere, will come much nearer to it than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as unobtainable.

Shocking Casualty in Sacramento.

We have seldom been more pained than we were on learning, that on the 4th instant, while the wife of Mr. Alex. Hayden was engaged in cooking oysters upon a Camphene Lamp, the same exploded, scattering the burning fluid up, and setting her dress on fire, which owing to the combustible texture thereof and the unyielding nature of her crinoline was soon in an unquenchable flame. Her clothes were entirely burnt off her and even the flesh to the bone. She only lived a few hours. Her husband and child were both burnt, the former in the hands and the latter badly, but is recovering.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT on the 4th, while Mr. Phillip Kendall was handling a sky rocket, the same accidentally caught fire, from his cigar and exploded in his hands—tearing the left hand completely open. We are indebted for the above information to W. M. Hoag, Esq.

We call attention this week to the advertisement of the Knight's Landing STEAM FLOURING MILLS.—This deservedly popular manufacturing establishment will commence operations on the 16th instant. The farmers begin to appreciate the advantages of having their own Wheat manufactured into Flour it costs less to transport the flour to market than it does the wheat, and they have the bran and shorts left for their stock.

THE FOURTH OF JULY BALL at this place was decidedly the most complete success, that we ever witness in any place. Ample provisions had been made by Messrs. Koon & McClintock in preparing a large and commodious room at the new Hall, which was neatly furnished and illuminated for the occasion. The music was fine—every person present appeared to vie in trying to be the most sociable, polite and good humored. Everything went off in the finest and best manner. And last, but not least, a finer, more charming, beautiful, tastily dressed and more intelligent crowd of Ladies it never before has been our happy lot to witness:—the affair concluded with a very splendid and grand Supper at the Yolo House, given by Mrs. A. M. Updegraff.

OUR BAND OF MUSIC.—Not to say anything concerning the neat appearance of our Band of Martial Music on the 4th, would be injustice to ourselves as a faithful recorder of events. The entire Band was dressed in a beautiful and tasty military style. The music was most excellent and their deportment throughout the whole day was of the most polite and commendable character.

THE COURT of Sessions met last Monday and adjourned until the 16th instant. Judge Davis and associates McCarty and Pickett, presiding.

The Fourth.

The Citizens of Knight's Landing and vicinity had one of the most extensive gatherings at their celebration on the 4th instant, that was ever convened in Yolo County on any similar occasion. At half-past eleven o'clock, a.m., the procession formed in front of the Yolo House, under the command of Wm. G. Brown, Esq., the marshal of the day, assisted by Dr. J. J. Rackerby and James McClintock, Esq. aids, and marched in the following order.

1st. The band of Martial Music under the supervision of J. Koon, Esq., Master of Music. 2nd. The Master of Ceremonies and Orator and other dignitaries of the day. 3rd—Ladies on foot. 4th—Gentlemen on foot. 5th, Buggies and other vehicles. 6th, Ladies and Gentlemen on horseback, down Front street, via Galland & Caro's store, thence east about one quarter of a mile to an Arbor erected in a pleasant and beautiful grove where seats and tables had been provided for the ample accommodations of all.

The audience was called to order by Judge I. Davis, President of the meeting. The Rev. Mr. Headly, the Chaplain of the day, opened the exercises with a very neat and well timed prayer.

The Declaration of Independence was read by L. R. Hopkins, Esq., which was followed by a very sensible and appropriate oration by Gen. Winn. After which Mr. H. A. Pierce, the poet of the day, edified the audience for 15 minutes with a poem got up for the occasion. After which the multitude partook of a sumptuous repast. Then the audience was entertained for some considerable time by a variety of toasts, given by the Master of Ceremonies, Dr. D. L. Pickett and others.

Harmony and good feeling prevailed. There were about 900 persons present. Of the order and decorum of the entire congregation we cannot speak in too high terms—it was unexceptionable. It concluded with a grand Ball in the evening, at which seventy couple whirled away the whole night in the fantastic ring. Taken altogether it was the most splendid affair ever got up in "little old" Yolo.

VOYAGE OF THE CLIPPER CHAMPION.—The Alta describes the mishaps of this clipper, which has been on her voyage from New York to San Francisco one year and two months:

The clipper ship Champion, of Boston, now discharging her cargo at North Point Dock, arrived last week from New York, which port she left in April, 1859, and was consequently off Cape Horn a year ago (in July,) which is the Winter time in those inhospitable latitudes. It will be remembered that the Cherubim, Golden Eagle, and many other vessels which arrived last fall reported the most terrible weather off the Cape, and several were beating and hanging about there so long a time that they were obliged to put into Talcahuana and other ports for water and provision. The Golden Eagle, if we remember right, was about ninety days from 50 deg in the Atlantic to 50 deg in the Pacific. Ice, snow, hurricanes, head gales, loss of men, crews frozen, Aurora Australia, ice-bergs, and all sorts of marine phenomena were the sum total of the numerous reports, and perhaps the California bound fleet in that locality are catching it quite as heavy this year, though last season was represented as an unusually boisterous one.

The Champion was one of last year's fleet, and was off the Cape with them, but unfortunately did not fare so well. While they strained spars, lost suits of sails, and had their decks filled with water, the Champion was entirely dismantled after having passed the Cape. Her lowermasts went and the bowsprit was so damaged as to make it necessary to replace it on arriving where succor could be obtained. The nearest port, at the time of the disaster, was Valparaiso; but that place could not be reached, as the crew was nearly disabled, six having been washed overboard from the jibboom, two of whom were lost, the other four being washed on board by the return sea. The cold was so intense that all hands were frost bitten, and a hog froze to death in a pig sty. In this condition, the only thing was to up helm, make a fair wind and double the Cape again before it.

Jurymasts were rigged, and with the utmost difficulty, Captain Simpson got his ship into Rio in about thirty days after the disaster. She was a sad looking wreck, and a silent testimonial of the vicissitudes of Cape Horn. In Rio she was discharged and put on the ways—her keel having been injured; and after some months of detention, she reloaded and started again for California. Her cargo, of course, is somewhat rusty after the trials to which it has submitted; but the ship, with her new top-hammer and fresh paint, looks as fine as a fiddle. This, we believe, is the longest passage ever made to San Francisco from New York.

No one can love what is not lovely. A sense of duty may prompt impartial justice, but affection will be the reward of desert alone.

California Seed Growing.

It is reasonable to estimate that, of all the seeds annually imported and sold, not one-half of them ever germinate, no matter how much care is taken in planting them out. This is owing, to some extent, to the practice of unscrupulous seedsmen in the Atlantic states, who send off their old stock to this coast, arguing that anything will do for the California market. We do not wish it understood that all seedsmen East do this, because we are satisfied there are some establishments, whose integrity places them above this suspicion; yet we have reasons to know that it is done by many, and the damage it has been to our cultivators can hardly be estimated. There are two main causes why imported seeds fail to grow: the first, because they are old; and the second and main reason, they are hurt in the artificial process sometimes adopted in curing, during the rainy season, at the East, and are badly packed for the voyage by sea, through the tropics to this state. It often happens that a sailing vessel or steamer sweats badly, and the cargo becomes heated. This, in our opinion, is why so many of the seeds, apparently newly grown, fail to germinate.

This outlay for garden, nursery and field seeds is far greater than our people are aware; and the business for raising seeds for home supply, as well as the growing demand for the great territories between the Pacific coast and the Rocky mountains, affords a large and growing field for this branch of pleasant and lucrative industry. Then there is the entire coast, from Sitka almost to Cape Horn, where our commerce is now being permanently established, creating a demand for supplies of great vegetables which can be raised everywhere. Also innumerable islands geming our great ocean, and still beyond the continents of Asia and Africa, gladly seeking an exchange of commodities, among which none are more sought for than our improved varieties of seeds.

It has often been said that California excels the world in the production of cereals, vegetables and fruits, nor should her seeds be barred as an exception. If any doubters exist as to our ability to produce garden seeds, of superior character and at a highly remunerative profit, let them pay a visit to the establishment of Daniel S. Perkins, of Alameda. Mr. Perkins is graduate of the Shaker establishments in the New England states, and arranges his grounds in the same systematic manner observed by those methodistic people. Although we have a dry climate during the time of ripening seeds, so that they could be dried in the open air, Mr. Perkins has erected a building exclusively for curing under the shade. This building is well ventilated, so that neither sunshine nor humidity can effect the vital vegetating principle of his seeds. We found Daniel very communicative, and he seemed to take pleasure in explaining the minute details of his method of management, in cultivation, curing and packing of seeds, and he promised to give us further information about this branch of business.

We have seen it stated that seeds deteriorate when propagated through a number of generations in this climate. Such, we are satisfied, is not the case, when the product is from suitable parentage. In order to secure the growth of perfect germs, great care should be exercised in selecting healthy, well developed stocks to grow the seeds from; nor should it be forgotten that, if you would keep the varieties of a species distinct, the seed rows must be removed to such a distance that the wind will not carry the pollen of one kind so as to impregnate the blossoms of another.—Cal. Cultivist.

THE NEWS FROM AUSTRALIA.—By way of Panama, from Melbourne to April 13th, he following is a summary of the news;

The Victoria mines were yielding largely.

The government of the colony of South Australia have published the official returns of imports and exports for the year 1859. The total value of the imports $2,507,494 15s., and that of the exports £1,502,165. Of the imports, £30,872 represents bullion and coin. The entire amount of customs revenue was £142,358 5s. 4d., of which $58,281 19s. 5d., was derived from spirits only. In the list of exports the principal items are copper, flour and wool; the value of which was £391,586, £407,144, and £499,997, respectively.

It is stated to be an established fact, "beyond all doubt or cavil," that the Snowy River Diggings (N. South Wales) is an extensive gold field, and that, with the exception of the palmy days of Ballarat, and Bendigo, there never has been in Australia any diggings where the precious metal is so easily extracted from the earth. In many places one had to only spit off the turf, and all below, for a depth of from two to five feet, was payable. Numerous "rushes" had taken place in the region; and at many places gold was found in paying and large quantities.

Riots had taken place at Maitland, N. S. W., in consequence of a clergyman named McIntyre using expressions in a public lecture abusive of the Roman Catholic Church. He had talked for instance of "the heathenism of Popery." His own church was attacked by the Catholics, and the lecturer and his brother were somewhat roughly handled by the excited assailants.

HOW UMPIRE LOST THE DERBY RACE.

—We have in the United States, or rather we had a month ago, a trainer whose reputation for preparing horses for a race, stands above all others of the same profession, and I have no hesitation in saying that this is a distinction which he has meritoriously earned. For three years it has been the constant endeavor of Mr. Ten Broeck, and others associated with him, to obtain this trainer (Benjamin Pryor) to aid him in his experiment of the campaign in England. Mr. Pryor, however, being well enough to do at home, and being, moreover, timidly apprehensive of the sea, persistently refused all these offers till the present Spring. The prospect, however, which was presented of Umpire winning the Derby, and the temptation of being present and contributing towards it, was too much for him, and he reached England about ten days before the race. Mr. Ten Broeck for once forgot his judgement; the patient, pains-taking, and really sensible trainer, who had watched almost every breath drawn by Umpire for the last six months, was virtually superseded, and the great man set about mixing his genius with the horse. Ignorant of the climate and the ground, and never having had the opportunity to study the effects of breezing a horse for a long distance over the turf in a straight line, he took the horse out and spun him over the entire Derby Course on the Saturday previous to the race, and on the very day before it send him round at speed again. The result was that the horse, which was thus made actually to run the Derby twice within three days, was galloped to death, and used up when called upon the start for the actual event. As a proof that he was beaten and exhausted, the race was not a fast race, being run as it was in two minutes and fifty seconds, a time which Umpire could easily reduce by five seconds, if he were right. And this is my philosophy of the American defeat.—Correspondence of Geo. Wilkes.

"Who's afraid?" said a young man to himself, in order to screw up his courage to the sticking point.

"Why, you are," said the object of his affections. "or you would have taken courage six months ago."

A high rent—a hole in the crown of your hat.

AN INJURED HUSBAND TAKES THE LAW INTO HIS OWN HANDS.--We mentioned yesterday, that Joseph Williams, charged with the killing of G. S. Howe, the night clerk of the Fourth District station house, had been discharged by Recorder Summers.

I have suspected George Howe, for more than a year, of having designs upon my wife, and I have been convinced for four months past that he was carrying on a criminal intercourse with her.

I acted altogether in self-defense against a man who had first seduced my wife, and then came to my domicile to seek a quarrel and murder me before that wife and my innocent children.

SOME day it will be found that to bring up a man with a genial nature, a good temper, and a happy frame of mind, is a greater effort than to perfect him in many accomplishments.

HARMLESS mirth is the best cordial against the consumption of the spirits; whereof jesting is not unlawful if it trespasseth not in quantity, quality or season.

"HUSBAND, I hope you have no objections to my being weighed?" "Certainly not, my dear; but why do you ask the question?"

WOMEN love to find in men a difficult combination—a gentleness which invariably yield, with a force which will invariably protect.

THE KNIGHT'S LANDING NEWS.

HOW A MAN FEELS WHEN HE IS HUNG.—One would naturally suppose that a man who had suffered all the horrors of hanging, just short of actual death, would never risk the gallows again; but such, in one case at least, was not the result. A house-breaker named Smith was hanged at Tyburn, Dec. 24, 1705, and when he had hung nearly fifteen minutes, the people shouted "A reprieve!" He was cut down, bled, and recovered!

RATHER LAZY.—A popular preacher tells a good story, as a hit at that kind of Christians who are too indolent to pursue the duties required of them by their faith. He says that one pious gentleman in offering a very fervent prayer to the Almighty wrote it out legibly, and affixed the manuscript to his bed post—Then, on cold nights he merely pointed to the "document," and with the words—"O, Lord, those are my sentiments!" blew out the light and nestled among the blankets.
