GUEST CARDS TO BE CANCELLED BY CLUB CONGESTION

The board of directors of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, of which Mrs. Daniel Campbell is president, have requested of the members that no more guest cards will be used until after the club is established in its new home at Lexington Drive and Central avenue. This ruling has been necessary on account of the limited space of the Masonic Temple, which is not large enough to take care of the club membership.

GRAND OLD MAN OF GLENDALIE DIES AT 90

H. W. Myers, Beloved by Neighbors, Follows His Wife to Beyond

Another of Glendale's pioneers passed to the great beyond last Saturday, January 20, when death claimed H. W. Myers, who on September 16, last, celebrated his 90th birthday. His hold on life had been loosening since the death of his wife in April of last year. Since the new year began he has been failing but did not take to his bed until last Monday. When death came it was a quiet release from sleep to a new life. Two daughters mourn his passing, Misses Ida and Hattie Myers. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn, with Rev. O. P. Rider, his former pastor, officiating.

From among his many friends pallbearers have been chosen: John A. Logan, E. J. Morgan, H. R. Owen, Robert Danner, H. L. Moody and W. R. Alexander.

Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts will sing "Trusting Jesus, That is All" and "Savior, More than Life to Me."

For years Mr. Myers has made it his business to grow flowers and fruits, especially Roman hyacinths, and his casket will be blanketed with flowers he had raised.

He was born in Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania, but moved with his parents to Crawford County, Ohio, in 1834, the homestead at that place being still held by a member of the family.

In his early manhood he taught school to earn the money for a college course and was graduated from Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio, with a degree of B. A., later receiving the additional degree of M. A.

The illness and death of his father threw upon him, as eldest son, the support of the family during the Civil war in which his three brothers next younger enlisted and gave their lives.

June 7, 1864, he married Sarah Jane Duncan, who, like himself, was a teacher, and their union was singularly happy. He was superintendent of schools in Osceola, Iowa, Creston, Iowa, and Hastings, Nebraska, purchasing a farm at Hastings, on which he spent a number of years. In 1904 he and his family came to Southern California to visit and liked it so much that Mr. Myers purchased property at 1203 South Central where he has continued to live.

He was greatly beloved by his neighbors and friends and will be much missed in the circle in which he was best known.

K. C. TEAM WINS FROM ANAHEIM OUTFIT

Makes the Fifth Game Locals Capture Out of Six Played

The Knights of Columbus baseball team, which tops the K. of C. League of Southern California, added another victory to its string, Sunday, by defeating the Anaheim team at Anaheim by a score of 16 to 3. This makes 5 games won and 1 lost for the Glendale boys.

The feature of the game was the pitching of Tommy Morgan, who allowed but 5 hits, no walks and struck out ten men. Joe Pessen cut off two runs in the fifth inning by a shoe-string catch after a long run. The heavy hitting and teamwork of the local boys is responsible largely for the lopsided score. The next game in which the Glendale boys will participate will be with Los Angeles. It will be played in Glendale if a suitable diamond can be secured.

The Glendale K. of C. lineup for yesterday's game was as follows:

E. Doll, 2nd base; M. Doll, 1st base; Coyte, short; J. Pessen, right field; Wolfan, third base; R. Doll, leftfield; Stewart, centerfield; Morrison, catcher; Morgan, pitcher.

Clifton of Monterey, and W. F. Barnum of Santa Monica. It was a quite informal gathering at which the guests compared notes on matters of mutual professional interest, such as what policy the different schools are following with regard to the sick leave of teachers, the demands made by the state committee of fifteen appointed for research work connected with high school problems and the questionnaires the committee is sending out, midyear graduations, student body government, the relative size of schools, good things the P. T. A.'s are doing, part time work and how to make it effective for the boy or girl who has stopped school and has no interest in continuing. Each principal had brought his problems to this clearing house of experience and it proved a most interesting session.

AIRPORT IS BOOMED BY L.A. AIRMAN

W. B. Kinner of L. A. Makes Deposit for Rent of Space

ALL BOOSTERS MEET
Other Aviators Who Plan to Come to Glendale Field As Tenants

W. B. Kinner of Los Angeles is the first aviator to sign up for space in the Glendale aviation field. He handed his check for $75 to City Manager Reeves this morning, and intends to begin moving his plant to Glendale on Wednesday of this week. Two buildings and equipment that he said he would place here will cost about $25,000.

Mr. Kinner was one of the aviators present at the booster meeting held at the chamber of commerce Saturday morning. Another airplane company represented was Catron & Fish of Venice, which firm it was said, expects to start its building operations here in about a month. This company is said to have finished the construction of a passenger ship which will ply between Glendale and San Francisco. Between the two cities a running time of five hours would be maintained, it was said.

The Ace Publishing company, which is the only airplane magazine published in Southern California will soon move its offices to Glendale, it was said at this meeting.

It was announced at the meeting that a Mr. Hardy, who is now operating an air line between Pasadena and Imperial valley, will change his landing place to Glendale within a short time.

The joy ride to Lebec made Saturday night by members of the Exchange club was such a success that other trips of like nature will probably be made. There were 26 in the party, headed by President D. Ripley Jackson, and they reached their destination about 5:30. On the way Vice President Whitaker had the misfortune to lose a wheel on a detour at the foot of the ridge and he was therefore compelled to remain until help could be sent to Lebec from Glendale.

At Lebec, where they sat down to a delicious turkey dinner, they found a company of 175 to 200 guests and spent a very pleasant evening dancing, with some other entertainment interspersed, the Glendale party including Harry James and Mrs. Porter Custer, pianist. The return trip was made Sunday, the party stopping at Sanborns' for dinner, and reaching Glendale about 6 p. m.

EXTRA CLASS AT HI REQUIRED BY ENROLLMENT

School officials at Glendale high school have been working on the program for the next semester, state that the influx of new students from the elementary schools and new residents in town will call for a number of extra classes and it will be necessary to employ another science teacher for full time and a general teacher for both instruction and study hall work. More teachers are really needed but since not enough class-rooms are available the problem will have to be met by enlarging the classes.

TEACHERS' BOARD TO MEET TUESDAY

COLLEGE WOMEN ORGANIZE CLUB OF 64 MEMBERS

Meeting at Home of Mrs. Warren Roberts; Committees Are Named

The Glendale College Women's club made a brilliant beginning when it organized Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Warren Roberts on East Elk avenue with 64 charter members.

The committee which had been appointed to prepare by-laws submitted its report, which was accepted, and then officers were elected, Mrs. A. L. Ferguson being made president; Mrs. Charles Barker, vice president; Mrs. Helen S. Moir, secretary; Mrs. Max Green, treasurer.

A very nice talk was made by Miss Anne Mumford of the Los Angeles University Women's club on what is being done by other college women's clubs in and around Los Angeles.

Following the talk, tea was served by Mrs. Roberts, assisted by Mrs. Julian Hayward, Mrs. Paul E. Webb, Miss Aileen Renison, Mrs. E. W. Hayward.

The club decided to meet the second Saturday of each month, the time and place of the next meeting to be left to the executive committee, which will be composed of the officers named and the heads of standing committees to be appointed by the president.

There was some division of sentiment as to whether the club should serve a luncheon or a tea, and the matter was left to the choice of the hostesses, with the probability that luncheons and teas will alternate.

EXCHANGE CLUB ENJOYS VISIT TO LEBEC

Twenty-six Are in Party to Take the Ride to the Skyline

On the way Vice President Whitaker had the misfortune to lose a wheel on a detour at the foot of the ridge and he was therefore compelled to remain until help could be sent to Lebec from Glendale.

MULTIPLE LISTERS PLEASED

Report $81,000 in Sales on Multiple Contracts Since Start

OVER ONE DAILY
Declare Requests Coming From Other Communities for Contracts

With many requests coming in from neighboring communities to have properties listed under the Multiple Listing System, the members of the Glendale Realty Board, who are working under this system feel much pleased with the results being accomplished. Although not yet placed on an exclusive multiple listing basis, the sales of properties listed on multiple contracts have aggregated over $81,000.00 during the last seventeen days, and have averaged over one sale a day, Sundays and holidays included, since the first of the year.

The object of the Glendale Realty Board is to secure for its members and their clients, protection from dishonest and unprincipled men. In cities where this system has been tried out, it is stated that the curbstone brokers soon lose their identity, and are put out of business. The California State Convention of Realtors at Santa Ana, and the National Association, now being held at Jacksonville, Fla., have both heartily endorsed the system, and work for the benefit and interests of both the owners of property and the real estate agent.

BOY! PAGE MR. NEWCOMER AND FAMILY!

Glendale Press Opens Department for Those Seeking Friends

In this cosmopolitan Southern California of ours, we have often thought that perhaps an old friend may live just around the corner, or in the next block, but the change in name, address, and sometimes in appearance prevents our finding that we were friends ten, thirty, or fifty years ago. A man who has changed his business or employment and with the passing years, his face has changed some, too, might meet a boyhood friend on the street, and neither would recognize the other. A lady's matron name often obscures her from those with whom she was associated many years before her marriage, or a second marriage may have taken place.

The purpose in creating this column is to help those people to find each other. Compliance with a few simple requirements will make it easy to assist. Here are two models, one for women and one for men, which should be followed in giving information. Write the names and addresses that you wish to have published and mail them to our Intimating Editor, Mrs. Mary C. Beauchamp, 1214 South Glendale avenue, Glendale, or phone Glendale 1287-J, between 10 o'clock a. m. and noon on Monday, Tuesday or Thursday.

DOCTOR FAREED IS SPEAKER AT THE TEMPLE

Dr. Frank L. Riley of Hollywood, author of "Biblical Allegorism," and a writer of note on religio-philosophical subjects has started on a world tour for purposes of study and comparison in his line of work. The platform at the Masonic temple, from which he has been addressing a good-sized and very interested audience every Sunday morning, was occupied Sunday, Jan. 21 by Dr. Ameen U. Fareed, who talked on the oneness of the human race. He showed that oneness must be recognized, and all ideas of separatism be eliminated if the most horrible calamity that has ever befallen the race is to be arrested before it is too late. Scientific discoveries since the World war have made it possible for one man to operate with poison in such a way as to destroy a whole city's population while they sleep, or to chemically destroy the productivity of great sections of land for a long term of years. He said that the peace loving people of all nations, sects, beliefs and religions must wake up without further delay and unite their efforts in a great constructive program of thinking peace, talking peace, and working for peace, if we are to avert a disaster in comparison with which the recent war was child's play. Dr. Fareed is a cultured and traveled Persian scholar, and whether you agree or not with what he says, you will enjoy an intellectual feast if you go to hear him. He speaks every Sunday morning at eleven o'clock at the Masonic temple.

DR. WINNARD TELLS OF "TOMORROW" FROM EX. 8:10

At the Tropic Presbyterian church last night Dr. Winnard took for his text Ex. 8:15—"And he said 'tomorrow'."
This text is not the word of the Lord, but of Pharaoh. The emphasis of the Lord is always on "today." "Tomorrow" is the refuge of the idle and the insincere. There is in it more of possibility than of probability. Its use to put off to the future an action that is demanded at once is but a subtler form of the devil's plan for today. "Tomorrow" never comes. A common parliamentary practice to defeat a proposed measure is to vote to "lay it on the table" and if the devil can get us to postpone action on the claims of Jesus Christ he knows he has gained at least a temporary victory.

But why postpone these matters of great importance until tomorrow. You can do nothing except in today. If you do not intend to do a thing which Pharaoh-like says "tomorrow" why not be honest enough to come right out and say you will not do it.
Today with its difficulties is better than tomorrow with all its uncertainties. Putting off until tomorrow is no less a sin than gambling for it is taking a chance on that over which we have absolutely no control. Souls are at stake and the chances are against you and Hell is the penalty of your defeat. Pharaoh said "tomorrow"—and tomorrow brought the frogs, the lice, the locusts, the hail, the darkness, the curse of blood and at eventide the death of the first born, and the morrow dawned the overthrow of his armies and the

GLENDALE'S NEW BASEBALL TEAM BEGINS WELL

Defeats Universal Cubs by a Score of 7-0 in a Well-played game

The initial game of the Glendale "Indians" this season proved to be a successful beginning, the boys performing very creditably, with Walter Heidler, the crack pitcher of the Glendale club last year, performing in wonderful style.

The Indians expect to play every Sunday hereafter, and the way the fans turned out to cheer the home boys was very indicative of what might happen when the club grows stronger.

BIBLE IS THE GUIDE TO CORRECT LIVING SAYS REV. BARR

Many appreciations were passed around by Rev. Barr's congregation in approval of his message, Sunday afternoon at the Broadway M. E. church, South.

"Isaiah, Amos, Moses and other of the prophets were inspired men and got their inspiration and calling from God; yea, they spoke as God gave them utterance."

"The Bible warns man of sin, of eternity; teaches him of righteousness, of truth and holiness of life, that he may be able to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, and that this salvation is by grace through faith in Jesus Christ."

"The Bible is the foundation for the Christian religion, mind you, and not salvation for us simply because we believe it, and therefore are willing to take it for merely its statement of fact that we are saved."

DR. FUNK TALKS ON VITAL TOPIC AT LUTHERAN

Speaking on the subject of "The Old Man—What Shall We Do With Him?" Dr. Funk said: "In reading Cicero's De Senectute I was very much impressed with his splendid refutation of the idea that old age is to be dreaded. On the contrary, it should contain less of resistance, and more satisfaction, than any other period in life."

ARGENTINE IS MASHER'S IDEA OF PARADISE

BY MORGAN EASTERLING (United Press Staff Correspondent)

BUENOS AIRES (By mail to United Press).—A girl who can walk a city square alone in Buenos Aires without being spoken to by from one to a dozen men, either so hopelessly ugly that she offers no attraction whatsoever to the opposite sex, or else is able to inspire by a belligerent attitude the belief that she is a veteran prize-fighter.

WE WOMEN

By BETTY BRAINER

BEAUTY SPOTS AND BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS My colleague, H. Addington Bruce, offers a prescription by which women may become beautiful. It is not exactly a new prescription, but it seems to be a good one and is somewhat in keeping with the new forms of philosophy which have lately had a vogue in the book shops.

The cornerstone of one of these creeds is laid on the psychological belief that to which one aspires one really is. Thus, if you persuade yourself to believe you are becoming better looking every day and say so over and over again you do, in fact, become better looking.

Mr. Bruce quotes from Emerson and says: "Beauty without grace is the hook without bait. Beauty without expression tires." This, of course, is true. As Mr. Bruce says, "Few things are more pathetic than the sight of a beautiful woman whose face is absolutely doll-like in its absence of expression."

Genuine beauty, according to Mr. Bruce, is not always endowed at birth. It cannot be obtained by artificial means, but it can be acquired in the process of maturity. It is the reflection of honest, unselfish, and gracious feeling and thinking. And yet this is a fact which some of us mistakenly try to circumvent in beauty shops and parlors. Perhaps we should browse about an art gallery or library or settlement house instead of having our hair marcelled or our faces massaged.

There is much food for thought in what Mr. Bruce says. We should devour it. His theory is not based on idle speculation. I might say—and, as a matter of fact, do say—that Mr. Bruce knows a beautiful woman when he sees one.

Trend of Fashion

By HELEN MERRILL EMERY

As yet there seems to be no end to the possibilities of printed fabrics used alone or combined with other materials in solid colors. Each week brings forth new and interesting models, and while many are intended for wear at the resorts in the south, an equal number are admirably adapted for immediate wear.

The course is free to all users of the Lorain heat regulator which is in use on a number of stoves. So important is temperature considered that editors and writers on cookery how make a point of naming the temperature in connection with the recipe, the units of temperature corresponding with the ingredients. After the proper heat for one cake has been determined, 1000 cakes of like character can be baked as easily as one.

The class will hold its second meeting next Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 when it is probable that other students will be added to the original enrollment. At that time the baking of sponge cake and of Parker House rolls will be the theme.

Arnold W. Brunner, the New York architect, who recently declined a $20,000 salary from the governor of Pennsylvania on the grounds that he was already sufficiently well paid, says with reference to the people who cannot understand his action: "Some people are puzzled by it. Well, such people, when it comes to government jobs, don't know the meaning of the word 'honesty'."

Admirers of Mr. Arliss in his different character portrayals found nothing lacking in this new role. Mr. Arliss presented a character that was so real as to seem a living personality. Others in the cast who give surpassing performances are Ann Forrest, in the leading feminine role, Etta Shannon and little Miriam Battista and "Mickey" Bennett, the latter being child stars who come in as proteges of "The Man Who Played God."

same way keeps the spectator breathing fast almost from the first moment. The fast mail train itself appears in the picture only as an incident, but the photoplay travels with enough speed to make one feel one is on a through express all the way.

FROM SLAUGHTER HOUSE TO PRESIDENCY

F. Edson White

When F. Edson White left public school at Peoria, Ill., he needed a job desperately bad—and he got it as a slaughterer in a Peoria packing house. Then he transferred to the same kind of job with Armour & Co. in Chicago. Today, at less than 50, he is president of Armour & Co., one of the largest packing industries in the world, at a salary said to be in excess of $100,000 a year. The business of the interests he directs amounts to more than $1,000,000,000 yearly. If the proposed purchase of Morris & Co. is completed, White will head the greatest packing industry ever created.

RUSSIAN ESTATES GONE, CZAR'S GENERAL AND ROYAL WIFE NOW WORKING ON FARM IN U. S.

General Alexander Brigsaloff, head of the department of agriculture, under the old Russian regime, and his wife, a member of the first royal family of Russia, are now feeding chickens and doing other farm labor on a poultry farm near Seattle, Wash. Once holders of vast estates, their dwelling place now is a built-over shed which does not have even the ordinary conveniences of lighting.

ROYAL PRINCESS RECOVERS $250,000 JEWELS IN AMERICA

When Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds motored to Montclair, N. J. to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Green, Mrs. Leeds left $250,000 worth of jewels in a taxicab, where they were later found by detectives. Mr. Leeds is the son of Princess Anastasia of Greece, widow of the American "Tin Plate King." Mrs. Leeds was Princess Xenia of Russia, daughter of Grand Duchess Marie, herself a sister of ex-King Constantine of Greece. Grand Duchess Marie recently relinquished her rank and married, at Wiesbaden, Germany, Captain Ioannides of the Greek navy.

PROHIBITION IS HERE TO STAY SAYS COLE

"Shall We Be Educated?" That was the subject of Rev. C. A. Cole's sermon at Central Christian Church Sunday morning. Some of the strong points made were as follows:
The life of the church demands colleges, Christian colleges. What do we not owe, as a people, to Bethany, Transylvania, Butler, Hiram, Eureka and others of our many colleges?

poisons and crimes resulting from liquor drinking; there is not as much bootleg and moonshine liquor sold as before prohibition went into effect. When the year 1919 dawned there were 68 Neale institutes for the cure of inebriates. Now there is not one. They died for lack of patronage. There were 50 Keeley institutes for the same purpose. Now there are 12 and all so poorly attended that they too, will soon disappear. In the great wicked city of Chicago there were 661 cases of wife and child abandonment by drunken husbands and fathers in 1917. In 1921 there were only 1.

"It is charged that the sale of narcotics has largely increased because men and women were denied liquor, yet a very large per cent of the drug addicts today are young people who never formed the drink habit. And sudden England, facing a two billion-dollar drink bill last year, is confronted with a higher rate per thousand population of drug addicts than prohibition America.

"Is our crime wave due to prohibition? There why is England, still wedded to the liquor habit, facing a far greater excess of crime than our country?
"Prohibition should be done away with because it does not wholly prohibit? Then must we also repeal the laws against murder, stealing and all other crimes?"

"Rest securely, my friends, for never will proud America take a backward step in this great reform, in which she leads the world. Two generations hence our grandchildren will look back in wonder to our day when liquor drinking was tolerated!"

A story dating back to the war is of the little store with a large service flag decorated by thirty-eight stars. Passers-by occasionally inquired, "Surely you haven't lost thirty-eight members of your family?"

"No," was the serene retort. "Worse than that. Customers."

Statistics show that there are 600,000 fewer arrests for drunkenness a year in the nation than before 1919; several hundred per cent fewer deaths from alcoholic

REV. KEITH BROOKS CONTINUES HIS LESSONS

Continuing the lessons in First Thessalonians at the Men's Class meeting in the City Hall Sunday morning, Keith L. Brooks, the teacher, said: "The Apostle Paul spoke of his Thessalonian converts as 'ensamples.' The word means 'an instrument for making an impression,' and the original word is that from which we get our word 'type.' Children are sometimes said to be types of their parents. These converts were clearly stamped as children of God. Their firm and joyful bearing under persecution made its impression. The 'Christianness' of believers when they are under ridicule and persecution is itself a proclamation of the Gospel.

"From them Paul says, 'sounded out' the word of the Lord throughout the whole land. This word means, 'a ringing note as of a trumpet.' The gospel echoed and re-echoed through their lives and testimonies. Let the Christian today think of himself as God's trumpet. God's only means of making His voice heard through all the unwar of the world. The Gospel has to be passed through human lips, but especially human lips before it can reach the dull ears of the natural man. Is your life a challenge or a complicity?"

"The closing words of the first chapter bring out the three tenses of the Christian life. The past tense is 'They turned to God from idols.' The present tense is: 'To serve God.' The future tense is: 'And to wait for His Son from heaven whom He raised from the dead.' Some are apt to forget that the second coming of Christ is an important part of the Gospel. This epistle was written to new converts. The doctrine of the second coming is therefore elementary. It was a good teaching to give new converts as a safeguard against backsliding and as a means of growth in grace. This disposes of the objection that this truth is too deep for ordinary apprehension, and therefore not of practical value. The Christian life is 'serving and waiting.' Here we have the practical and the ideal aspects of the life, and he waits best who serves best."

"What is Paul's warrant for this hope in the future coming of Christ? 'God raised him from the dead.' He said he would be raised again after three days and He was. He said He would come again at the close of this dispensation. His resurrection is the seal of the whole apostolic message.

"In a village in North India a missionary was preaching when a Mohammedan interrupted: 'One thing we have that you don't have—when we go to Mecca we find a dead coffin, but when you go to Jerusalem you find nothing but an empty grave.' That is exactly the difference, Mohammed is dead and in a coffin, but Jesus arose from the dead and ascended with the promise that He would come again in like manner as He went away. The hope of His coming will keep the Christian looking up. If there is a lack of steadfastness in the Christian's life, let him ask himself if he knows by experience the three tenses of Christian living as here stated."

DRY GOODS STORE AT MONTROSE IS OPENED

MONTROSE, Jan. 22.—The first dry goods store in Montrose was opened Saturday by the Fraser Dry Goods company in the building on Honolulu and Montrose avenues. Besides drygoods and notions, they will carry a complete line of gent's furnishing goods.

Did you ever hear the word "jitney" that was common a few years ago? So fond familiar, doesn't it? Remember when we had "jitneys" autos that took you most anywhere in the city for a nickel? And many theaters charged only 5 cents for admission then, too. But the "jitney" no longer pays for himself and the theater admission or, on street cars in Glendale, for a ride of one block, even.

Auto congestion on the public highways, especially on Sundays and holidays, has become alarming and what will it be when the more machines are purchased in the coming months? People are delayed for hours in these jams and many cars are damaged. We cannot well have more highways, unless they are either elevated or underground, so the problem is a real one.

I notice that ear rings are strictly in style again. When I was a boy, a half century or more ago, I well remember how girls bore with Spartan fortitude the pain of having the lobes of their ears pierced, or that was necessary then before the "ear bobs," as they were called, could be worn. A piece of straw or thread was run through the hole made by the piercing needle and this had to be drawn back and forth occasionally, until the soreness healed, to disengage the orifice from closing. It took from 10 days to 2 weeks for the soreness to disappear and it was a period of constant pain. But when the sore places healed and the threads or straws could be drawn freely through the holes the throes without pain to the girl, then (twas a happy time. The ear bobs were worn in and Madame's circles had herself. Many a girl's eastern parents forbade them to display sneaked away the means for the operation. Something was forgiven and allowed to wear the coveted ornaments and she who was ordered to let the sore grow closed. Nowadays a surgeon is not necessary, and a painless hold the ear rings in

OBSERVATIONS BY A GLENDALE OLD TIMER

If any of you motorists are "operating automobiles under the influence of liquor," you'd better look out, according to publicity sent out by the Automobile Club of Southern California. It seems from this that some get "stanked up" as well as some of the drivers. Any frisky who would beguile a poor old automobile and ply it with booze until it becomes under the influence of liquor, should be shot at sundown.

In the ancient city of Rome there was a temple named in honor of the god Janus, which was singular in that it had two faces. This temple had great doors at either end and when the nation was at war these doors were both wide open. History tells us that once upon a time the doors of the temple of Janus were closed for the first time in 509 years, when, for a very brief period, the nation was at peace with all the world. It is from the god Janus that Julius Caesar took the name for the first month in the year when he framed the first calendar of months. So January it is, because the month faces both ways—backward to the old year and forward to the new.

I am frank to say I do not understand all this about the papers about France's occupation of a man territory to compel the government to observe the treaty by meeting the reparations payments as they come due. After the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71 German troops occupied portions of France more from unwarranted depredations by the Germans than all the other allied countries combined. France paid her indemnity debt to Germany in 5 years. At the present rate of progress Germany would not have paid hers to France for 10 years. Here we have the approval shown by our government with France's recent procedure, I firmly believe that a large majority of American citizens sympathize heartily with France in her determination and hope she will be victorious in her mission. Not one of those who hate Germany and wish to see her dismembered as a nation. I believe that many Germans did not sympathize with the war policy of the ruling powers and did not approve of the war. That is exactly the difference, Mohammed is dead and in a coffin, but Jesus arose from the dead and ascended with the promise that He would come again in like manner as He went away. The hope of His coming will keep the Christian looking up. If there is a lack of steadfastness in the Christian's life, let him ask himself if he knows by experience the three tenses of Christian living as here stated."

Did you ever stop to think God for work? That's mind illness is about the most miserable state of existence that could be imagined. Men engaged in good honest toil have no time for plotting and meanness. If all the "wobblies" and "shameless" were all right, and we were just as happy with our meager equipment as the modern young people are, with all their contrivances.

Where, O where are the dozens of adobe houses that were prophesied for Glendale three years ago? At that time the blocks were being made at Elliott Place and also along San Fernando road near Park and this new construction was lauded as cheaper, more expeditious, warmer, cooler and better in every way than any other. Two or three handsome homes were constructed of adobe, covered inside and outside with plaster, then the industry was heard of no more.

EX-NEWSBOYS HEAD $208,000 COMBINE

The consolidation of five large railroad systems into one of the largest systems east of the Mississippi river has brought into the public eye the two brothers heading the combine—Oris P. and Mantis J. Van Swearingen of Cleveland, O., two practically unheard-of financiers. They obtained a common school education in Geneva, O., where later they entered newspapers for a living. Going to Cleveland 20 years ago, they entered the real estate business in a small way, and it was not until they interested capitalists in the purchase of a large tract of land near Cleveland that they began to attract attention. Now their interests operate and control the New York, Chicago & St. Louis, the Toledo, St. Louis & Southwestern, the Lake Erie & Western, the Port Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville and the Chicago & State Line railroads, all of which they have consolidated into one system.

IDENTITY IN THE RESURRECTION IS DISCUSSED

James Cullen Watt, evangelist of the International Bible Students' Association, spoke upon "Identity in the Resurrection," at the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday. The speaker said in part: "There is more or less confusion of thought as to what follows after death. The mind of man has ever been inquisitive as to what takes place beyond the grave. If a man dies shall he live again has been the riddle of the ages. The common thought of Christendom is that death does not mean cessation of being, but is the door to life on a more complete scale; this, however, is not the teaching of the Bible but is the theory of philosophers. "Death, in the Bible, means the exact opposite of life; complete cessation of being; hence we read 'the wages of sin is death,' 'the dead know not anything,' and as further evidence that there is no progression in death we are again informed 'as the tree falleth so shall it be,' 'he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish'. "The hope for the dead is in a resurrection, hence Paul tells us 'we have hope toward God that there shall be a resurrection of the dead both of the just and the unjust. And again he says, 'think it not an incredible thing that God should raise the dead.' The Apostle in the 15th chapter of I. Corinthians makes it clear that in the resurrection the body that went into the grave will not be the resurrection body and adds 'God giveth it a body as it pleaseth Him.' What is it then that receives a body, and what is it that is common to the original body and the resurrection body in order that the complete identity of the individual will be retained and the experiences of the past life be not lost? Personality, individually, character or ego is represented by the mind, the brain, 'with memory.' "The mind is the measure of the man, 'as a man thinketh—so is he.' A man is, what he is habitually in his mind. The body is the servant of the will and it is this that God will place in a new body and the identity of each individual will be complete. 'God giveth it (the mind, the being) a body as it pleaseth Him.' "Mind as memory may be well illustrated by the record of a photograph. The voice spoken into the instrument, making impressions on the disk, represents thoughts, words and actions impressing the mind. And as the impression on the disk may be reproduced, so memory reproduces former impressions made on the mind. The reproduction of these impressions causes us to form habits and habits crystallized form character, in individuality. Each one, every day is making a record. Let each see that the record made is such that we will not be ashamed of its reproduction in public. Viewing the matter from this angle we see the force of the saying, 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.' In the resurrection which to the world will be one thousand years long, each will be required to re-write the record of his mind in harmony with the Divine will, setting aside former thoughts, words and actions which were evil, and storing the memory with thoughts of love, purity and justice. These will be the body similar to the human body formerly possessed, this is what the Apostle calls a 'terrestrial body'—an earthly body. Another class, however, receive a 'celestial' or 'spiritual' body, this is for the church—the Bride of Christ, who during this trial period have 'set their affections upon things above,' have been 'transformed by the renewing of their minds.' Thus we inherit a body similar to the human body formerly possessed, this is what the Apostle calls a 'terrestrial body'—an earthly body. # THE MASQUERADER

CHAPTER I

TWO incidents, widely different in character yet bound together by results, marked the night of January the twenty-third. On that night the blackest fog within a four years' memory fell upon certain portions of London, and also on that night came the first announcement of the border risings against the Persian government in the province of Khorasan—the announcement that, speculated upon, even smiled at, at the time, assumed such significance in the light of after events.

At eight o'clock the news spread through the House of Commons; but at nine men in the inner lobbies were gossiping, not so much how far Russia, while ostensibly upholding the Shah, had pulled the strings by which the insurgents danced, as upon the manner in which the St. George's Gazette, the Tory evening newspaper, had seized upon the incident and shaken it in the faces of the government.

More than once before, Lakely—the owner and editor of the St. George's—had stepped outside the devious circle of tradition and taken a plunge into modern journalism, but to-night he essayed deeper waters than before, and under an almost sensational heading declared that in this apparently innocent border rising he had less an outcome of mere racial antagonism than a first faint index of a long-cherished Russian scheme, growing to a gradual maturity under the "drift" policy of the present British government.

The effect produced by this pronouncement, if strong, was varied. Members of the Opposition saw, or thought they saw, a reflection of it in the smiling unconcern on the Ministerial benches; and the government had an uneasy sense that behind the newly kindled interest on the other side of the House lay some mysterious scenting of battle from afar off. But though these impressions ran like electricity through the atmosphere, nothing tangible marked their passage, and the ordinary business of the House proceeded until half-past eleven, when an adjournment was moved.

The first man to hurry from his place was John Chilcote, member for East Wark. He passed out of the House quickly, with the half-furtive quickness that marks a self-absorbed man; and as he passed the policeman standing stolidly under the arched doorway of the big courtyard he averted a little, as if startled out of his thoughts. He realized his swerve almost before it was accomplished, and pulled himself together with nervous irritability.

"Foggy night, constable!" he said, with elaborate carelessness. "Foggy night, sir, and thickening up west!" responded the man. "Ah, indeed!" Chilcote's answer was absent. The constable's cheery voice jarred on him, and for the second time he was conscious of senseless irritation. Without a further glance at the man, he slipped out into the courtyard and turned towards the main gate.

At the gate-way two cab lamps showed through the mist of shifting fog like the eyes of a great cat, and the familiar "Hansom, sir?" came to him indistinctly.

He paused by force of custom; and, stepping forward, had almost touched the open door when a new impulse caused him to draw back. "No," he said, hurriedly. "No, I'll walk."

The cabman muttered, lashed his horse, and with a clatter of hoofs and harness wheeled away; while Chilcote, still with uncertain hesitancy, crossed the road in the direction of Whitehall.

About the Abbey the fog had partially lifted, and in the railed garden that faces the Houses of Parliament the statues were visible in a spectral way. But Chilcote's glance was unstable and indifferent; he skirted the railings heedlessly, and, crossing the road with the speed of long familiarity, gained Whitehall on the left-hand side.

There the fog had dropped, and, looking upward towards Trafalgar Square, it seemed that the chain of lamps extended little farther than the Horse Guards, and that beyond lay nothing.

Unconscious of this capricious alternation between darkness and light, Chilcote continued his course. To a close observer the manner of his going had both interest and suggestion; for though he walked on, apparently self-engrossed, yet at every dozen steps he started at some sound or some touch, like a man whose nervous system is painfully overstrung.

Maintaining his haste, he went deliberately forward, oblivious of the fact that at each step the curtain of darkness about him became closer, damper, more tangible; that at each second the passers-by jostled each other with greater frequency. Then, abruptly, with a sudden realization of what had happened, he stood quite still. Without anticipation or preparation he had walked full into the thickness of the fog—a thickness so dense that, as by an enchantment wand, the figures of a moment before melted, the street lamps were sucked up into the night.

His first feeling was a sense of panic at the sudden isolation, his second a thrill of nervous apprehension at the oblivion that had allowed him to be so entrapped. The second feeling outweighed the first. He moved forward, then paused again, uncertain of himself. Finally, with the consciousness that inaction was unbearable, he moved on once more, his eyes wide open, one hand thrust out as a protection and guide.

The fog had closed in behind him as heavily as in front, shutting off all possibility of retreat; all about him in the darkness was a confusion of voices—cheerful, dubious, alarmed, or angry; now and then a sleeve brushed his or a hand touched him tentatively. It was a strange moment.

Scissances, but this conversation with an unseen companion was more like a soliloquy than a dialogue. He was almost surprised into an exclamation when the other caught up his words. "Ah! The sugar speech!" he said. "Odd that I should have been looking it up only yesterday. What a magnificent dressing-up of a dry subject was! What a career Lexington promised in 'See days'!"

Chilcote changed his position. "You are interested in the muddle down at Westminster?" he asked, sarcastically. "I—" It was the turn of the struggle while the vice that had been slave gradually became master? He stopped to take breath, and in the cold pause that followed it seemed to him that the other made a murmur of incredulity. "Perhaps you think of morphia as a pleasure?" he added. "Think of it, instead, as a tyrant—that torments the mind if held to, and the body it cast off." Urged by the darkness and the silence of his companion, the rein of his speech had loosened. In that moment he was not Chilcote, the member for East Wark, whose moods and silences were proverbial, but Chilcote the man whose mind craved the relief of speech.

"You talk as the world talks—out of ignorance and self-righteousness," he went on. "Before you condemn Lexington you should put yourself in his place—" "As you do?" the other laughed. "Unsuspecting and inoffensive as the laugh was, it startled Chilcote. With a sudden alarm he pulled himself up.

"I—" He tried to echo the laugh, but the attempt fell flat. "Oh, I merely speak from De Quincy. But I believe this fog is shifting—I really believe it is shifting. Can you oblige me with a light? I had almost forgotten that a man may still smoke though he has been deprived of sight." He spoke fast and disjointedly. He was overwhelmed by the idea that he had let himself go, and possessed by the wish to obliterate the consequences. As he talked he fumbled for his cigarette-case.

His head was bent as he searched for it nervously. Without looking up, he was conscious that the cloud of fog that held him prisoner was lifting, rolling away, closing back again, preparatory to final disappearance. Having found the case, he put a cigarette between his lips and raised his hand at the moment that the stranger drew a match across his box.

For a second each stared blankly at the other's face, suddenly made visible by the lifting of the fog. The match in the stranger's hand burned down till it scorched his fingers, and, feeling the pain, he laughed and let it drop.

"Of all odd things!" he said. Then he broke off. The circumstance was too novel for ordinary remark.

By one of those rare occurrences, those chances that seem too wild for real life and yet belong to no other sphere, the two faces so strangely hidden and strangely revealed were identical, feature for feature. It seemed to each man that he looked not at the face of another, but at his own face reflected in a flawless looking-glass.

Of the two, the stranger was the first to regain self-possession. Seeing Chilcote's bewilderment, he came to his rescue with brusque tactfulness.

"The position is decidedly odd," he said. "But, after all, why should we be so surprised? Nature can't be eternally original; she must dry up sometimes, and when she gets a good model why shouldn't she use it twice?" He drew back, surveying Chilcote whimsically. "But, pardon me, you are still waiting for that light!"

Chilcote still held the cigarette between his lips. The paper had become dry, and he moistened it as he leaned towards his companion.

"Don't mind me," he said. "I'm rather—rather unstrung to-night, and this thing gave me a jar. To be candid, my imagination took head in the fog, and I got to fancy I was talking to myself—"

"And pulled up to find the fancy in some way real?" "Yes, something like that."

Both were silent for a moment. Chilcote pulled hard at his cigarette, then, remembering his obligations, he turned quickly to the other.

"Won't you smoke?" he asked. The stranger accepted a cigarette from the case held out to him; and as he did so the extraordinary likeness to himself struck Chilcote with added force. Involuntarily he put out his hand and touched the other's arm.

"It's my nerves!" he said, in explanation. "They make me want to feel that you are substantial. Nerves play such beastly tricks!" He laughed awkwardly.

The other glanced up. His expression on the moment was slightly surprised, slightly contemptuous, but he changed it instantly to conventional interest. "I am afraid I am not an authority on nerves," he said. But Chilcote was preoccupied. His thoughts had turned into another channel.

"How old are you?" he asked, suddenly. The other did not answer immediately. "My age?" he said at last, slowly. "Oh, I believe I shall be thirty-six to-morrow—to be quite accurate."

Chilcote lifted his head quickly. "Why do you use that tone?" he asked. "I am six months older than you, and I only wish it was six years. Six years nearer oblivion—" Again a slight incredulous contempt crossed the other's eyes. "Oblivion?" he said. "Where are your ambitions?"

"They don't exist." "Don't exist? Yet you voice your country? I concluded that much in the fog."

"Can't you picture the man's Chilcote laughed sarcastically. "When one has voted one's country for six years one gets hoarse—it's a natural consequence."

The other smiled. "Ah, discontent!" he said. "The modern canker. But we must both be getting under way. Good-night! Shall we shake hands—to prove that we are genuinely material?"

Chilcote had been standing unusually still, following the stranger's words—caught by his self-reliance and impressed by his personality. Now, as he ceased to speak, he moved quickly forward, impelled by a nervous curiosity.

"Why should we just halt each other and pass—like the proverbial ships?" he said, impulsively. "If Nature was careless enough to let the reproduction meet the original, she must abide the consequences."

The other laughed, but his laugh was short. "Oh, I don't know. Our roads lie differently. You would get nothing out of me, and I—" He stopped and again laughed shortly. "No," he said. "I'd be content to pass, if I were you. The unsuccessful man is seldom a profitable study. Shall we say good-night?"

He took Chilcote's hand for an instant; then, crossing the foot-path, he passed into the roadway towards the Strand.

It was done in a moment; but with his going a sense of loss fell upon Chilcote. He stood for a space, newly conscious of unfamiliar faces and unfamiliar voices in the stream of passers-by; then, suddenly mastered by an impulse, he wheeled rapidly and darted after the tall, lean figure so ridiculously like his own.

Half-way across Trafalgar Square he overtook the stranger. He had paused on one of the small stone islands that break the current of traffic, and was waiting for an opportunity to cross the street. In the glare of light from the lamp above his head, Chilcote saw for the first time that, under a remarkable nearness of appearance, his clothes were well worn—almost shabby. The discovery struck him with something stronger than surprise. The idea of poverty seemed incongruous in connection with the reliance, the reserve, the personality of the man. With a certain embarrassed haste he stepped forward and touched his arm.

"Look here," he said, as the other turned quietly. "I have followed you to exchange cards. It can't injure either of us, and I—I have a wish to know my other self." He laughed nervously as he drew out his card-case.

The stranger watched him in silent contempt, but also there was a reluctant interest in his glance, as it passed from the fingers fumbling with the case to the pale face with the square jaw, straight mouth, and level eyebrows drawn low over the gray eyes. When at last the card was held out to him he took it without remark and slipped it into his pocket.

Chilcote looked at him eagerly. "Now the exchange?" he said.

For a second the stranger did not respond. Then, almost unexpectedly, he smiled.

"After all, if it amuses you—" he

CHAPTER II

ON the morning following the night of fog Chilcote woke at nine. He woke at the moment that his man Allsopp tiptoed across the room and laid the salver with his early cup of tea on the table beside the bed.

For several seconds he lay with his eyes shut; the effort of opening them on a fresh day—the intimate certainty of what he would see on opening them—seemed to weigh his lids. The heavy, half-closed curtains, the blinds severely drawn; the great room with its splendid furniture, its sober coloring, its scent of damp London winter; above all, Allsopp, silent, respectful, and respectable—were things to dread.

A full minute passed while he still feigned sleep. He heard Allsopp stir discreetly then the inevitable stammer broke the silence: "Nine o'clock, sir!"

He opened his eyes, murmured something, and closed them again. The man moved to the window, quietly pulled back the curtains and half drew the blind.

"Better night, sir, I hope?" he ventured, softly.

Chilcote had drawn the bedclothes over his face to screen himself from the daylight, murky though it was.

"Yes," he responded. "Those beautiful nightmares didn't trouble me, for once." He shivered a little as at some recollection. "But don't talk—don't remind me of originality. I hate a man who has no originality." He spoke sharply. At times he showed an almost childish irritation over trivial things.

Allsopp took the remark in silence. Crossing the wide room, he began to lay out his master's clothes. The action affected Chilcote to fresh annoyance.

"Confound it!" he said. "I'm sick of that routine! I can see you laying out my winding-sheet the day of my burial. Leave those things. Come back in half an hour."

Allsopp allowed himself one glance at his master's figure huddled in the great bed; then, laying aside the coat he was holding, he moved to the door. With his fingers on the handle he paused.

"Will you breakfast in your own room, sir—or down-stairs?" Chilcote drew the clothes more tightly round his shoulders. "Oh, anywhere—nowhere!" he said. "I don't care."

Allsopp softly withdrew. Left to himself, Chilcote sat up in bed and lifted the salver to his knees. The sudden movement jarred him physically; he drew a handkerchief from under the pillow and wiped his forehead; then he held his hand to the light and studied it. The hand looked sallow and unsteady. With a nervous gesture he thrust the salver back upon the table and slid out of bed.

Moving hastily across the room, he stopped before one of the tall wardrobes and swung the door open; then after a furtive glance around the room he thrust his hand into the recesses of a shelf and fumbled there. The thing he sought was evidently not hard to find, for almost at once he withdrew his hand and moved from the wardrobe to a table beside the fireplace, carrying a small glass tube filled with tablets.

"Confound it," he exclaimed, "am I never to be left in peace!" [Mr. Post with Edward M. Kimball in a scene from the pictured story.]

said; and, searching in his waistcoat pocket, he drew out the required card.

"It will leave you quite unlightened," he added. "The name of a failure never spells anything." With another smile, partly amused, partly ironical, he stepped from the little island and disappeared into the throng of traffic.

Chilcote stood for an instant gazing at the point where he had vanished; then turning to the lamp, he lifted the card and read the name it bore: "Mr. John Lodes, 33 Clifford's Inn."

When Allsopp returned he was sitting up, a cigarette between his lips, the teacup standing empty on the salver. The nervous irritability had gone from his manner. He no longer moved jerkily, his eyes looked brighter, his pale skin more healthy.

"Ah, Allsopp," he said, "there are some moments in life after all. It isn't all blank wall."

"I ordered breakfast in the small morning-room, sir," said Allsopp, without a change of expression.

Chilcote breakfasted at ten. His appetite, always fickle, was particularly uncertain in the early hours. He helped himself to some fish, but sent away his plate untouched; then, having drunk two cups of tea, he pushed back his chair, lighted a fresh cigarette, and shook out the morning's newspaper.

Twice he shook it out and twice turned it, but the reluctance to fix his mind upon it made him dizzy. The effect of the morphia tablets was still apparent in the greater steadiness of his hand and eye, the regained quiet of his susceptibilities, but the respite was temporary and lethargic. The early days—the days of six years ago, when these tablets meant an even sweep of thought, lucidity of brain, a balance of judgment in thought and effort—were days of the past. As he had said of Lexington and his vice, the slave had become master.

As he folded the paper in a last attempt at interest, the door opened and his secretary came a step or two into the room.

"Good-morning, sir!" he said. "Forgive me for being so untimely."

He was a fresh-mannered, bright-eyed boy of twenty-three. His breezy alertness, his deference, as to a man who had attained what he aspired to, amused and depressed Chilcote by turns.

"Good-morning, Blessington. What is it now?" He sighed through his abut, and putting up his hand, warred off a ray of sun that had forced itself through the misty atmosphere as it by mistake.

The boy smiled. "It's that business of the Wark timber contract, sir," he said. "You promised you'd look into it to-day; you know you've shelled it for a week already, and Craig, Burnage are rather clamoring for an answer." He moved forward and laid the papers he was carrying on the table beside Chilcote. "I'm sorry to be such a nuisance," he added. "I hope your nerves aren't worrying you today?"

Chilcote was toying with the papers. At the word nerves he glanced up suspiciously. But Blessington's ingenuous face satisfied him.

"No," he said. "I settled my nerves last night with—a bromide. I knew that fog would upset me unless I took precautions."

"I'm glad of that, sir—though I'd avoid bromides. Bad habit to set up. But this Wark business—I'd like to get it under way, if you have no objection."

Chilcote passed his fingers over the papers. "Were you out in that fog last night, Blessington?"

"No, sir. I supped with some people at the Savoy, and we just missed it. It was very partial, I believe."

"So I believe."

Blessington put his hand to his neat tie and pulled it. He was extremely polite, but he had an inordinate sense of duty.

"Forgive me, sir," he said, "but about that contract—I know I'm a frightful bore."

"Oh, the contract!" Chilcote looked about him absently. "By-the-way, did you see anything of my wife yesterday? What did she do last night?" "Mrs. Chilcote gave me tea yesterday afternoon. She told me she was dining at Lady Sabinet's, and looking in at one or two places later." He eyed his papers in Chilcote's listless hand.

Chilcote smiled satirically. "Eve is very true to society," he said. "I couldn't dine at the Sabinet's if it was to make me premier. They have a butler who is an institution—a sort of hereditary in the family. He is fat, and breathes audibly. Last time I lunched there he haunted me for a whole night."

Blessington laughed gayly. "Mrs. Chilcote doesn't see ghosts, sir," he said; "but if I may suggest—"

Chilcote tapped his fingers on the table.

"No. Eve doesn't see ghosts. We rather miss sympathy there."

Blessington governed his impatience. He stood still for some seconds, then glanced down at his pointed boot.

"If you will be lenient to my persistence, sir, I would like to remind you—"

Chilcote lifted his head with a flash of irritability.

"Confound it, Blessington!" he exclaimed. "Am I never to be left in peace? Am I never to sit down to a meal without having work thrust upon me? Work—work—perpetual work? I have heard no other word in the last six years. I declare there are times—there are times when I feel that for sixpence I'd chuck it all—the whole beastly round—"

Startled by his vehemence, Blessington wheeled towards him.

Truths in Epigram

No good man ever grew rich all at once.—Publius Syrus.

Whoever has even once become notorious by base fraud, even if he speaks the truth, gains no belief.—Phaedrus.

The gratitude of place-expectants is a lively sense of future favors.—Sir Robert Walpole.

INCOME TAX

The statement is published that out of the $500,000 bonus recently paid to a child film actor $260,720 must go to the government as income tax.

It is quite customary for the citizen of moderate income to grumble as he pays his trifling tax. He grumbles less at the tax itself, than at his belief that large incomes are not treated with similar rigor. The fact is that, according to law, the large income is slashed into on a scale much severer relatively. Doubt still remains, however, as to the integrity of the reports made upon the magnitude of some such large incomes. The little fellow, working probably for a salary, could not conceal the truth if he would. The big fellow, a staff of lawyers at command, may conceal the truth, and often there has been expression of the suspicion that he does it. If the Rockefeller income, for example, were taxed on the scale that so impaired the financial total of little Jackie Coogan, the public could not reasonably complain of the price of gasoline. Every boost in the price would indicate an augmented tax, the increase tending to relieve the burden of the general public.

The Coogan half million was out in plain sight, with a bevy of publicity folk pointing at it. It couldn't be camouflaged, and it couldn't be transformed into non-taxable stock. It was real money, and the owner had to take the consequences. There is no call for sympathy. Jackie has more left than any child needs, or than any but a unique set of circumstances could permit the most talented child in the world to earn. The episode, however, starts an interesting speculation as to what proportion of large incomes are subjected to cuts correspondingly drastic.

AMERICA LEADS

America is far ahead of any other country in construction and use of the radio. The Pacific coast leads the United States. Los Angeles leads the Pacific coast. Messages are broadcasted daily from that city and San Francisco, to be picked up thousands of miles away. They are heard aboard ships remote on the seas, and residents of far islands listen in. Not long ago Mayor Rolph of San Francisco made an address that was broadcasted in the now common fashion. Anxious to know how many had heard the mayor's words, he telegraphed a bill mounted quickly to thousands of dollars. In no other way could the general prevalence of the radio habit have been demonstrated so quickly.

Out of the possibilities indicated, of instant communication with the other side of the world, it is easy to believe that great good must come. Easy and ready communication may be imagined as ultimately bringing the nations into familiarity of intercourse not afforded even by the cable. The technical part of the operation will give at least a small start towards a universal language. When statesmen with an ocean between them may converse as easily as when talking across a table, the day for creation of closer ties and the breaking down of national barriers may be predicted.

NO ANALOGY HERE

One of the pro-German papers of this country remarks that Germany owes a debt forced upon her by defeat, which she can't, or at least, doesn't pay. France marches in, with an army, to collect. But the editor adds that England and France owe the United States thousands of millions. Then he advances the opinion that the world "would cry out" were the United States to undertake collection by the methods adopted by France. Certainly the world "would cry out." It would cry very loudly unless rendered breathless by the spectacle of an outrage so gross.

The only point worth consideration is the absurd conviction of the editor that there is something analogous in the positions of France and the United States as creditor nations. There is no shadow of analogy. Were the editor less blinded by prejudice, an instant reflection would render clear to him the embarrassing fact that he has made himself ridiculous.

Had France made a wanton and ferocious invasion of the United States, harried its cities, destroyed its fields and orchards, burned or looted its mines and factories, and then been driven back, leaving the graves of millions of slaughtered Americans, it is probable that whatever reparation had been arranged for France to pay, would have been exacted, at the point of the bayonet if necessary.

France is acting on the impulse that must inspire any people subjected to similar conditions. When Germany, virtually unscarred of war, its vital resources in no manner depleted, its activities functioning, declines to pay its acknowledged debt; when individual Germans are piling up stupendous fortunes, France simply is unable to believe that Germany is acting in good faith. France hardly could see wisdom in the policy of permitting its sworn enemy to thrive, with the prospect of becoming so mighty as to be invincible, when the capital which is the basis of the German prosperity, is in part justly forfeit to the French, as recompense, and the fulfillment of a solemn pledge.

SIZING UP BOLSHEVISM

The United Mine Workers have gone on record as opposed to bolshevism utterly. To quote the decision of their executive board:

"The red internationale not only sanctions, but in fact, urges the workers to resort to street uprisings, mob demonstrations and violence. Its only objective lies in dissension, disruption and destruction. No unit of the miners' union could affiliate with it, and at the same time comply with the constitutional principles of their own organization."

If the insidious plotters of Moscow had any chance to win approval from labor in this country, the ordinary judgment would have been that the chance was with the miners. Among the miners is a strong alien element. Activities of this union during strikes have been ominously violent. Yet the miners reject in toto the overtures of the Russian communists. The condemnation comes from a source making it peculiarly significant.

Los Angeles police have been raiding the gangs that gather nightly in the downtown districts to advocate the overthrow of government, and to suggest methods. It is not that the soap-box oratory does any harm, but that the unwashed block the streets to traffic.

One by one pedestrians are learning that it is dangerous to carry large sums when they walk in lonely places. They learn this by losing the sums in question. If such as have escaped being robbed only could learn by the experience of the other fellow, the bandit would be hampered.

Probably the reason so little is said concerning bombing, executions and other unpleasantnesses in Dublin is that the rest of the world is kicking up such a fuss that the episodes now being injected into Irish history are comparative trifles.

CUBANA

By DR. FRANK CRANE

From a recent sojourn of a week or so in Cuba, I make the following notes:

Cuba is an immensely fertile island, but is practically confined to two crops—sugar and tobacco.

The sugar crop is worth about five times as much as the tobacco crop. Cuba raises about one-fourth of the world's supply of sugar.

It produces the finest tobacco in the world.

The tobacco territory is mostly confined to the west end of the island or the Pinar del Rio district.

Here is produced tobacco of a quality and flavor that is known all over the world. It cannot be raised anywhere else. Chemists have been unable to tell why.

The most characteristic object on the landscape in Cuba is the royal palm. This tree shoots up some forty or fifty feet high, bearing a cluster of leaves at the top. In many respects it is the most beautiful tree in the world.

The royal palm produces a kind of nut which is fed to pigs. They say one palm will keep one pig.

The favorite meat in Cuba is young pig. It is usually roasted whole and has a very delicate flavor.

The hams, bacon and other meats are brought in from the States.

Little is produced by the farmer except sugar and tobacco. Most of his grain and other food-stuff is imported from the United States.

There seems to be no color line in Cuba. Whites and blacks work side by side in the cigar factories. The two races intermarry frequently.

Many of the Cuban negro men and women are splendid physical specimens.

As a rule the floors are tile and have no rugs or few.

The climate of Cuba in winter is perfect. It is not too hot and there is always a good breeze.

Cuba is only three days from New York and is one of the best resorts for those who seek a summer spot in winter. The air is invigorating and not oppressive.

The matches used are mostly little wax tapers. Although the Cubans make so many good cigars, most of them smoke cigarettes which are wrapped in paper of a very poor quality. They like it.

All tobacco is a matter of taste.

The feeling of Cuba is gambling. Everybody bets on everything all the time. There are three public lotteries a month and one every ten days and at each of these $600,000 worth of tickets are sold. They are always all sold. Every bootblack and grocery boy and hired girl buys a lottery ticket.

The national game in Cuba is, Jai Halat, pronounced "jigh a lie." This is a sort of handball which is played by experts, who are practically all Basques. That is, they are from the region in the Pyrenees on the border of Spain in France.

The game requires an extraordinary amount of skill and physical strength and is very exciting. The spectators bet on every point and the game is accompanied by the exciting roar of the audience, so that it sounds like a riot.

Havana is a very beautiful city. It has many wonderful drives, including a road along the sea front which was constructed by General Wood when he was in charge there.

The city contains many attractive shops where things are sold at New York prices.

Living is not cheap in Havana.

The feeling towards the United States among Cubans is very friendly and the personal representative of this government there, General Crowder, is popular.

Dr. Frank Crane

The difference between water and time is that wasted water can in a measure be retrieved and put to good use.

But wasted time is gone forever and with it all the things that might have been achieved in it.

Which is a prelude to saying that nobody suffers so much from the waster of excellently potential hours as the newspaper person.

Somebody with a fat imagination and a meagerly stocked mind is always mooning round my desk to ask me why something or other can't be done, not knowing that it has been done long ago.

The ignoramus is not always to blame for his ignorance, because the records of progress are suppressed as far as possible by those whose profits will be disturbed by new inventions and new discoveries.

Apropos of this subject I

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

You have heard of the Sphinx.
Noted for its size.
And for its silence.
So we have come to use the expression
Sphinx-like.
To denote silence.
Silence does not necessarily denote wisdom.
Except that it sometimes conceals the lack of it.
For by speech is unwisdom often proven.
Just as the quality of the spring is denoted by the water that flows out of it.
So the quality of the mind is to a great extent indicated by the words that flow out of it.
The empty mind revels in meaningless and extraordinary words.
The mental light weight often delights in polysyllables.

Eight monosyllables to one word of two syllables.
Which is a pretty good proportion of short and simple words.
"Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden!"
A goodly proportion of short and simple words there.
Yet what a wealth of sympathy and understanding they compass.
"Do unto others, as ye would that they should do unto you!"
No mystifying polysyllables there.
No lack of clearness.
Perfectly plain and entirely understandable.
The expression of the Perfect Teacher.

The wisest men of time have expressed themselves most simply and understandably.
The greatest teachers have taught in monosyllables where the monosyllable was sufficient to express meaning.
The greatest command in the world was "let there be light."
Four monosyllables.
No other words were necessary.
"Go and sin no more!"
There is another monosyllabic utterance.
Which has to a great extent changed the thinking of the world.
"No man can fix on me what is ugly!"
There is another gem of thinking.

So it is not necessary to be silent as the Sphinx to prove you are wise.
You may be silent because you have no knowledge of what to say.
And it is necessary to be endlessly speaking to prove you have wisdom.
Profuse speech means nothing but easily working vocal chords.
Unless the thought justifies the speech.
It is the quality of expression that counts.
The nature of the thought.
The truth and simplicity and clearness.
The sincerity and earnestness.
No thing in the world of life is greater than the truth spoken sincerely in simple and understandable words.

Songs of the Poets

A Ballad of Dreamland—By Algernon Charles Swinburne (1837-1909)

The green land's name that a charm encloses,
It never was writ in the traveler's chart,
And sweet on its trees as the fruit that grows in,
It never was sold in the merchant's mart.
The swallows of dreams through its dim fields dart,
And sleep's are the tunes in its tree-tops heard;
No hound's note wakens the wildwood heart,
Only the song of a secret bird.

ENVOI

In the world of dreams I have chosen my part,
To sleep for a season and hear no word
Of true love's truth or of light love's art,
Only the song of a secret bird.

WANTED—ACCURATE INFORMATION

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Have just finished reading an article in a great daily, and the burden of its song was "Why can't somebody arrange a mechanical check on the speed of automobiles, something that will make speeding impossible?"

The fact is that such a device has been completed and for some years its inventor has tried by hook—I won't say by crook—to get the city council to adopt an ordinance compelling auto owners to install it on their machines. It is quite simple and can be so set that the car automatically locks when the indicated speed has been reached and it can proceed no further until the owner has dismounted and released the lock.

Now why has this device not come into general use? For the same reason that humanity is cheated out of the benefit of many other useful devices. Officials are either afraid to embrace the new, or somebody, somewhere wants a hand out before passing the blessing on to those who need it.

I do not pretend to insinuate which of these reasons has deprived us of this splendid device. I only know that such a device is available, that it is practical and that it is needed. If there is a good reason why it is not in use—what is it?

In justice to our local solons I may add that it is possible that skepticism has resided in their souls so long that they are unable to believe that such a device has actually been completed and have turned deaf ears to the inventor when he called and sat humbly on the steps of the city hall.

All I am doing is making a fact known. We can control speeding whenever we are good and ready.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

A SECOND NAVY

[Pittsburgh Gazette Times]

It there were no other reason for a merchant marine than as an adjunct of the navy in time of war it would be worth all it would cost under the proposed subsidy. A navy is helpless unless it has supply and scout ships. When we entered into war with Spain we had to scurry around and buy ships. When we entered into the world war we built them but at a wasteful expenditure of time and money. Is it prudent, is it the part of common sense to lay ourselves open to peril again when by forethought and business judgment we can guard against it so easily? In another conflict we might not be situated so that we would have time to build. We might not have the protection which was ours against Germany.

Are we incapable of appreciating the lesson of events? It would be libel to say we are so stupid. Yet, there is opposition to the shipping aid bill which may encompass its defeat unless the people realize what such a result means. To predict that war will not again threaten is silly. If it comes, with a merchant fleet we would be prepared to support our naval fighting force. In peace we would have the ships to carry our commerce. This we would be equipped for prosperity in time of peace and for defence in time of war. The question is not a sectional one, nor confined to the interests of those who live on the seaboard. It is national, as national as the flag. It is a patriotic duty to provide ourselves with transport equipment.

The nation is faced with the proposition whether we shall lose around $3,000,000,000 or save part of it by paying a subsidy to secure operation of the ships we have and encourage the building of others. In that course we would but pursue the policy of other nations, we would be but meeting competitors on their own terms. Without aid offered we lose all. It is so plain a proposition that it is amazing that there should be those who cannot see that for national safety as well as for commercial reasons the subsidy policy is imperative.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The evils of drug addiction are difficult to combat, largely because the profits of the traffic are so immense. Occasionally some wretched creature who hawks the deadly stuff is caught, and sent to jail for a brief period. More often a victim of the habit is taken, stupid or frantic with the favored poison, placed under restraint and perhaps reformed. As a rule, however, there seems to be no desire for reform. Many of the drugs begin by slaying the moral side of the user.

As to a short term imprisonment for the seller of dope, it should be abolished. Often this seller also deliberately lures novices to their initial indulgence. As most of the crimes now being committed are due to drugs, the seller is accessory to all of them. He deserves a life sentence. A sentence of ten years would be too mild. The usual sentence of sixty days or so, he regards as a joke.

The manufacturers of drugs that are known to be in large part for an illegal trade, are as guilty as the furtive purveyors at retail. The manufacturers and large dealers make it possible for every addict in life land, who has the price, to get all he desires. It doubtless is true that large shipments are made into Mexico with full knowledge on the part of the shipper that every consignment is to be smuggled back across the line.

HENRY JAMES

When there is a crime now, whether it be some spectacular holdup or the stealthy slaying of a thoughtless girl, the first impulse of the police is to hunt for a drug addict. Why not stifle the business at its source, which is the respectable factory in which the drugs are fabricated?

In one department of the superior court recently there were three jury trials in one day, and in each a verdict of guilty. Nobody questioned the justice of the verdicts.

Reports that Russia is ready to help Germany continue to circulate. Probably this is a case in which the spirit would be willing enough, but the flesh weak.

A nation that has not the energy, character and desire to keep its own people from starving to death, has considerable nerve in planning military aid for outsiders.

Russia, making a continuous plea to be let alone, declines to let anybody else alone. In the end this everlasting meddling may finish the soviets.

Suppose that Germany were to supply the Russian army with officers, and thus get a foothold on Russian soil? In a short time the official Russia of today would cease to be the slavering jaws of the Russian bear, and mighty lucky to be permitted to remain the animal's tail.

A woman recently got a divorce on the ground that her husband had indulged in a three years' spree. There were brief intervals of sobriety in which he played golf.

The old bachelor who has introduced a bill to almost inhibit divorce, doubtless will consider the relieved woman's plea as without merit.

On the streets of Los Angeles and nearby cities may be observed big buses gay with alluring signs. The general tone of the information conveyed by these signs is that a fortune awaits anybody who desires a free ride, free dinner, free lecture and the opportunity to buy oil stock.

It seems that the authorities are overlooking something. Were these promises, so blithely heralded, true, by this time the land would be embarrassed by a multiplicity of millionaires. As a matter of fact the making of a fortune by investment through this system of salesmanship has yet to be recorded. Doubtless the man who sells shares, or units, or whatever they are, is considerably ahead of the game.

There has been something novel introduced into the robbery business at last. Bandits holding up a Los Angeles restaurant and all its patrons, when the police arrived and took them to jail. Who says there is nothing new under the sun, now?

It is natural enough that Germany should be appealing to England, for it is in desperate case. The indications are that the utmost England could do, even if inclined, would take the form of moral suasion; not in the circumstances likely to be effective.

The death of Wallace Reid saddens millions of people who knew him only as a figure on the screen. The characters portrayed by him always were of a sort to endear the actor to patrons of the "silent drama." Blithe, youthful, and brave he appeared, the embodiment of the joy of living.

Doubly sad is it that he should have fallen victim to drug addiction. Against the chains of the habit he fought bravely. He is believed to have won, but winning, he died.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Let me give a little personal experience about Dr. Emile Coue's idea. The "every day in every way I'm getting better and better" man, you know. The French chemist who is trying to make our submerged and subconscious selves jack our conscious selves up to a higher physical plane.

Well, I began that "every day in every way" stuff without believing in it at all.

The reason why was that my liver had gone on a strike and my digestion had laid down on me and the decrepit intellect had crawled under a fence somewhere and died, and I was older than I was at twenty, when for the last time I deliberately provoked a fight over a brunette. Blondes are different, if you get me. Fights may start over blondes when the fighters are actually caving in the edge of the grave.

And I used to think of these things at night, after I had wounded the clock and opened the windows and tracked down, caught, subdued and ejected the cat and fed the furnace and done the other little bedtime chores that well married men always do. The moment my head hit the pillow I would begin to worry over the future. I will not say that the idea of suicide ever came into it, because I am not gaited that way. But many the lone hour I've spent wondering how Mrs. Pilgrim would like to take in washing to support the old man.

"This is folly," I would tell myself with heat. "I must stop this."

Then I would go on as before and lose too much sleep in persuading the submerged Pilgrim that the one in sight was totally shut to pieces and that his future wasn't worth a pretzel in a dry town. Until I hit on repeating the "every day in every way" litany. Mind you, I did not do it for the reason Coue gives. I repeated it because by repeating it I kept my mind off unpleasant thoughts and by and by I would go to sleep.

I'm still doing it, merely to soothe myself and coax the sandman into the bedroom a little earlier. I do not know that my Coue rosary has done me any good. But I go to sleep within three minutes after I begin "every day in every way." That's worth doing.

IF DREAMS TORMENT

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

To many a sleeper nightly beset by distressing dreams there is a hint of practical value in a little story recently told by General Nelson A. Miles to a group of friends in Battle Creek, Mich. As since retold by one of those friends, in the magazine Good Health:

"For many months at a time the general, in his Indian campaigns, lived almost wholly in the open, camping wherever nightfall might find him with his command. While enjoying most vigorous health, he noticed that at night his sleep was troubled with horrible and most depressing dreams.

"On investigation he noticed that the tent in which he slept was made practically air-tight, so careful were the soldiers in fastening the bottom of the tent curtains to the ground to exclude the ingress of dust, wind, rain, or snow, all of which were frequently conspicuously in evidence. It occurred to the general that possibly the breathing of re-breathed air might be the cause of his unpleasant dreams; and he accordingly moved his bed out under the open sky.

"At once the character of his dreams became as constantly agreeable as they had formerly been unpleasant. He accordingly from that time forward practiced sleeping in the open, without the protection of his tent."

Not everybody, to be sure, can become an outdoor sleeper. But everybody—or almost everybody—can so arrange matters as to insure ample fresh air in the bedroom. And there can be no doubt that often there is a direct connection of cause and effect between under-ventilation and the dreaming of unpleasant dreams.

It is a connection of which I have had personal experience. When, because of storm or for any other reason, I have been obliged to lessen unduly the ventilation of my bedroom, not only have I usually awakened with a slight headache, but my sleep has often been broken by bad dreams. The coincidence is too frequent to be attributed to mere chance.

Though, of course, under-ventilation is only one cause of dreams that torment. Still commoner is over-eating or the eating of foods difficult to digest. And sometimes bad dreams come as signs of a lowered physical condition due to fatigue, infection by disease germs, self-poisoning from dental abscesses, etc.

Also they may have dominantly psychical causes, as in the nightmares which afflict the chronically perturbed, anxious and worried. But again and again tormenting dreams may be attributed to readily remediable conditions of posture in bed, weight of the bed coverings, insufficiency of coverings, or, as in General Miles' case, insufficiency of fresh air.

Facts which, if borne in mind and given application, would do much to reduce the notoriously prevalent occurrence of such dreams. There is a hygiene of the sleeping life just as there is a hygiene of the life of wakefulness, though myriads of people seem quite unaware of this.

Our treatments are the same as used by the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium of Battle Creek, Michigan, and consist of diet, exercise, massage, electric light baths, salt glows, hot applications, hot and cold sprays, galvanic and sinusoidal electricity. The efficient methods of treating the sick, combined with a scientific knowledge of the preparations and combinations of foods used in a vegetarian, or so-called non-flesh dietary, gives the patient a well-balanced course of treatment.

"SECOND BLESSING" IS SUBJECT OF REV. FORD

"The Second Blessing" was the subject of the discourse delivered by Rev. E. E. Ford, pastor of the First Baptist church of Glendale, Sunday morning.

He said in part:

"Many folks seek what they term 'the second blessing.' A few claim to find it; many others do not. I sympathize with the views of anyone who is seeking for the richer blessings of God, but I do not always agree with him. If I can say anything to help you this morning I will feel that my talk has not been in vain.

Twenty years ago;
Thought I used t' hear 'em playin'
Right around my door;
Have y' seen 'em—Riley's children?
Don't they play no more?

Say, but them was really children;
An' I used to read
About Annie—Orfant Annie—
An' I often seed
One of 'em, I thought, a-singin'
Right around my door;
But I haven't seen 'em lately—
Don't they sing no more?

Wy, I've set an' read about 'em
An' it almos' seemed
They was youn or mine, a-mebbe,
But I mus' a'dreamed.
An' I thought I see one standin'
With her dress all tore,
An' her golden hair all tangled—
Don't they play no more?

Wy o' course—I wasn't thinkin'—
They're all grown up now,
It was years ago I knowed 'em,
But it seems, somehow,
Them 'ud allus be but children;
Might a-knowed afore
That them children—Riley's children—
Won't come back no more!

Smart Handkerchiefs

Handkerchiefs are quite an important part of one's costume, and many are the ways in which they are used. The bracelet handkerchief from Paris is one of the many ways. A tiny leather bracelet is fitted with a small strap, through which is drawn a gay batik handkerchief. Bracelet and handkerchief are inexpensive.

We repent the Holy Spirit enters. When we surrender our lives entirely to God then we receive the deeper blessing.

"I do believe in a second blessing. I also believe in the hundredth blessing and as many blessings as we permit God to give us."

It takes more than hot air to kill the germ of suspicion.

The Lord's Supper was observed Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church. The service was deeply interesting and impressive, and the congregation was so large as to fill not only all possible seating but also standing room. A large number of new members were received.

In the evening, according to custom for that day, a service of praise was given. The music, under direction of Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts, included besides the work of the quartet choir, a cornet solo by Mr. Eidon E. Benge, violin solo by Miss Hazel Linkogel, and a soprano solo by Miss Flora Phyllis Kilpatrick. The sermon, by Rev. Louis Tinning, assistant pastor, was upon the subject, "Broken Moorings."
