GENTIANA PORPHYRIO

One of our most beautiful native plants and probably the handsomest gentian is our cover design this year. The flowers are more than an inch across and are the true "gentian blue" with markings of yellow and green in the throat. They grow from eight to twelve inches tall, blooming from September to November. If given a sandy, well drained, acid soil the large, fleshy roots will soon become established and a permanent perennial will result. A mulch of pine needles is beneficial:
