COLLEGE YEAR OF 1906-7

FOREWORD

In making up this record of the past year, the aim of the editors has been to catch, as nearly as possible, the spirit of progress which is growing up in the college. The events of the year have abundantly demonstrated this spirit and, at the same time, increased it. They speak best for themselves, in the memories of the students, and the following pages are an attempt to recall these memories as fully as possible. We are glad that our readers have not the dream with which we started, to compare with this modified outcome of it and must ask for an indulgence of the imperfections and inadequacies which abound. We wish to thank those friends who have given freely of their time and resources to assist in the production of the book.

GENERAL OTIS

General Otis was born in Maryland. Before he was old enough to remember, his father had moved to Rochester and located on the Lyell road. In those days, all of the district about what is now Otis station, was a part of the Otis farm. The homestead is still standing; but the farm lands have mostly been absorbed by the growing city. When Otis attended college, the classes were held in that building on West Main Street of which only the oldest Alumni tell. He was a member of the class of 1858, one of the first few the college turned out. Anderson was then president; and it must have been more than a coincidence that the subsequent life of the student so faithfully carried out the precepts of the venerable teacher. Otis was a live man in college and his name is connected with one or two practical jokes that are not yet out of date. He graduated high in his class and a year afterward was admitted to the bar. Then he entered Harvard Law School and received his degree in 1861.

In 1862, Otis was off to the war as captain of a company of volunteers under Colonel O'Rorke. O'Rorke died at Gettysburg, and the hard fighting which followed carried away the officers in large numbers and finally left Otis in command. Throughout all the severe fighting of Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and Spottsylvania, it had seemed as if Otis were invulnerable. Finally his turn came at Chapelhouse. He was so severely wounded in the head that the doctors considered his injury fatal. In 1866, however, he was sufficiently recovered to accept an appointment as Lieutenant Colonel in the regular army.

From 1866 to 1898 Colonel Otis served upon the Western plains. His life was an active and varied one. The most important active service which he saw during this period was during the Indian troubles at the time of the Custer massacre. While not fighting the Indians he founded the Fort Leavenworth military academy and had charge of it for a considerable time. As a result of his legal training he was much in demand as a judge in military trials, and is said to have sat on more courts-martial than any other army officer. The year 1893 saw Colonel Otis' promotion to the rank of Brigadier General over the heads of men of longer service.

At the beginning of Spanish War troubles, General Otis was sitting upon a very important courtmartial, from which he could not well be spared. When it was over, he was detailed to the command of the Philippine detachment. His heaviest work came in putting down the native insurrection after the war. In a comparatively short campaign he broke the force of organized opposition and reduced the contest to guerilla warfare. After this there was nothing more to do but the unpleasant task of killing off the irreconcilable. Considering that his main work was done, he asked to be relieved from command in order to attend to long neglected private business. General

Commander in Philippines

Otis' return home was the occasion of a big celebration by the people of the city; which most of us remember well.

In 1900 he was appointed Major-General in the regular service, which commission he held at the time of his retirement.

Recent Additions to Sibley Hall Library

FORBES, GEORGE MATHER, Football in 2876. The Baptist Tract Association. Ten cents the hundred.

By a series of complex calculations which would baffle the skill of a Lamson or a Gale, Professor Forbes reckons that in the year 2876 the method of playing football will materially be altered. The pamphlet embraces three sections. The first is a poetic lament that present football is not sufficiently pregnated with the principles of psychology. Part two deals solely with the calculations. As yet no one has been able to explain the last section. It is rumored, however, that the Professor is now engaged in composing an explanation in three volumes. One scientific gentleman read the first portion of the pamphlet and yesterday he was removed to the Rochester State Hospital.

FAIRCHILD, HERMAN LE ROY, The Personality of Minerals. 12 mo. The Mg₃Si₂O₇ Publishing Co.; 23 cents net. (A specimen of "Fool's Gold" and a bulletin of "The Geological Society of America" free with every copy.)

This elaborate treatise is a distinct contribution to the scientific literature of the world. The author deals in a masterly manner with this momentous question. Mr. Fairchild introduces his subject with the statement that no person is able to grapple with the problems of life or succeed in the commercial or professional world without an intimate knowledge of our common bricks and minerals. "I believe with all the sincerity of my soul that St. Peter would admit no one into the Pearly City who did not know the distinction between Labradorite and Cinnabar," continues the author. Using this powerful argument as a basis, the Professor proceeds to show the destination of those miserable creatures unfamiliar with Mineralogy. The significant volume ends with the statement that minerals make character.

GALE—LAMSON, ARTHUR SULLIVAN and FRED LEONARD, Trigonometric Jingles. A Text Book for Honor Divisions. The Mother Goose Press. Price $.98 net (Reduced from $1).

Prof. Gale maintains that the average Trigonometric text book is too verbose for college Freshmen to comprehend. Moreover, he conceived the idea that such a book rhymed in Mother Goose jingle would meet the demand. Every trigonometric law, such as that of sines and tangents, is written in orthorhombic radians. The volume is dedicated to all "trig flunks." The poem may be sung to the tune of "Jingle Bells." We would here append some selections from the book did not a state law prohibit the printing of indecent literature. Mr. Lamson's part in placing the book before the public was to secure a printer. He succeeded after long months of hardship. Finally, some disreputable establishment in Chicago undertook the task. The State Industrial School and the Elmira Reformatory have already adopted the new text book.

STROUD, CHARLES E., Athletics and Morals. The Spaulding Press. Price $.10.

Dr. Stroud deplors the low moral tone of present day athletics, in his recent book. After thirty chapters of rambling discussion, the writer suggests a remedy. "The qualifications of a contestant should be his ability to pass an examination in Ethics, and his vocabulary should be carefully examined for 'slips.' Before every athletic game, the players should be compelled to attend a religious service. A suitable first prize in a track meet would be a year's subscription to the Sunday School Times or a bottle of Moxie. Then, and only then, would the degrading condition of college athletics be relieved." This is known as the would (Wood) remedy. The Doctor suggests the substitution of "Tom tom, pull-a-way" for football, and "Pussy-in-the-corner" for basketball. The frontispiece of the book is a full page picture of the Columbia basketball team.

These notices were sent in to the Interpres by an enthusiastic Freshman after an interview with Mr. Phinney. They are certainly important, if true.

RETROSPECTS

Retrospection is a very pleasant occupation—or is not, varying with the point of view of the individual indulging in it. To the class of Nought-Seven the past is gladsome, roseate, golden, suffused with the glamour and enchantment of success. Its days have been days of triumph, its history is one of victories gained and good works wrought. In everything designed to advance the good old yellow banner of the college or to promote a spirit of true comradeship among the members of the class, Nought-Seven has been pre-eminent.

A man's real character, we are told by those philosophically inclined, may be judged by his power of initiative. Estimated in accordance with this standard, Nought-Seven surely deserves the palm and laurel wreath. Didn't we give the first minstrel show that ever delighted an audience in Alumni Gym? Didn't "Rog" Wellington and a number of associate geniuses evolve Junior Whist? Didn't we have the first Senior Club? Didn't the Boys Evening Home originate in the philanthropic think-tank of that ardent follower in the footsteps of J. G. Phelps-Stokes and Jane Addams—"Dorey" Miller? Didn't we introduce caps and gowns at Junior Prom? Yes, we did all this—and then some.

And, say, talk about banquets? Ours, in "Walky's" classical parlance, were the "creme de mint." No Pultneyville or Rush Reservoir for us. Nit, not, no. The best that Buffalo could offer was none too good for our sophomoric excellencies. And while we were giving a correct imitation of captains of industry dining at the Waldorf, the poor, benighted "frosh" were wandering, disconsolate and dismal, in Bergen swamp. Then there was our joyous jaunt to Geneseo, where but a few short hours before, the famous brick-bat had winged its way to collegiate immortality. Remember Hurd's prophecy, with nice little green airships in it and Carl Palmer a minister—or was it a lawyer?

The historian of Nought-Seven's proud prowess does not need to dwell on such little affairs as scraps. Of course we won them all. Neither does he intend to make the absurd mistake that some previous scribes have made of acknowledging that his class was "green" when they entered. Rather does he maintain that Nought-Seven was full-fledged, sophisticated, and thoroughly "wise", when they put themselves under Prexy's sheltering wing.

The class has contributed more captains and members of varsity teams than any class in recent years, but that fact has not interfered with our stunts in the intellectual line. Didn't most of us get a passing mark with Moore? What more convincing proof of our phenomenal brilliance and penetration could be adduced?

JUNIORS

About the fall of 1904 the denizens of the campus were treated to an unusual sight—a class of Freshmen entirely devoid of verdancy; whose muscles were stirred with righteous courage which led them to beard the untamed Sophomore in his lair.

It was only a short year later, as Sophomores, that we earned an enviable reputation for modesty on all occasions. In fact, our retiring disposition was the wonder of our inferiors, as well as the pride of our superiors (supposing they existed). We went quietly about our duties, pausing only now and then to administer a quietus to some presumptuous younger brothers; and, you may suppose, that we set down the leaden heel with an iron hand wherever necessary. A proof of our unobtrusive qualities is the quiet manner in which we slipped out of town to hold our Sophomore banquet, abhorring, as we did, all ostentation and vulgar display. To us belongs the credit of elevating the "Soph Joll" from the low plane of the minstrel show to the level of the drama. We might mention scores of deeds in which we have shone; but that would be mere boasting, foreign to a sense of propriety that still lingers.

We are now but Juniors, holding our "Prom," and meeting at our Whist Club as other Juniors have done before us. Our friends of 1907 may sneer that we are servilely following in their footsteps. Perhaps we are. The task is not so difficult, considering the fact that our Senior friends possess a most remarkable pedal characteristic common to all little winged inhabitants of the Upper World.

Juniors though we be, ignorant of the glories of Senior life, we are already becoming cognizant of a feeling of maturity and responsibility; we are experiencing a sense of fixed proprietorship—a vast increase of affection for our Alma Mater, who seems to us more and more like an old familiar friend as we return to begin each term.

Harold Edward Akerly,

13 Amherst Street, Rochester.

Pre-technical. A. Δ. Φ. Honor Roll (1); Canoe Club (1-2); Chess Club (2); Assistant Business Manager "Campus" (2); Business Manager "Campus" (3); Junior Prom. Committee; Sophomore Exhibition; Dramatic Club (3).

"And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
That one small head should carry all he knew."

"Ak" is mamma's own son, and came to college because she wanted him to. This action was really unnecessary, for this rosy cheeked youth was evidently thrice blessed at the feet of wisdom ere we knew him. Harold is not naturally a bad boy, but he and the Devil have a corner on the slang market which it is really distressing to relate. He is a Hot-tentot by faith and a Socialist in his political thoughts. "Ak" has a "dandy job" awaiting him if he stays to graduate, and will be heard of in the social world some day. As we go to press, Harold's beard has put in an appearance, and the Junior Class will fittingly celebrate the event.

Arthur Howe Allen,

394 West Avenue. Honeoye Falls.

Scientific. Honor Roll (1); Science Club (1-2-3); Junior Whist Club Committee; '08 Debating Club; Assistant in Chemical Laboratory (2-3); Librarian Science Club (2).

This blot on the page is Professor Allen's "fussing face." Arthur is an earnest exponent of the terpsichorean art and always chooses partners that exceed him in altitude. "One of the many," once exclaimed, "Arthur darling! I don't know what I'd do if all men were like you," and then distintegrated his bliss by muttering something about "hesitation between a knife and poison." So you see he is something of a lady-killer after all.

Roy David Anthony,

358 West Avenue, Rochester.

Pre-technical. $\Psi. \Upsilon.$ Chairman Freshman Reading Club; Class Banquet Committee (2); Machine Shop Assistant (2); Class Track Team (2); Sophomore Exhibition Committee; Class Basketball Team (3); City Scholarship (1-2-3).

If the house of Antony had not made its Mark in Roman days, there would be some hope for "Daddy." As it is, he attends college merely to support the cause of women's rights. Despite his looks, Roy is a good boy, indulging in nothing worse than hard cider, cigarettes, and the "Bijou Dream." He is an ardent fusser, a rare grind, and a good mixer. He expects to be a professional hustler, as his gait would plainly predict; but whether his calling is for the race track or the legislature is doubtful.

Ernest Franklin Barker,

56½ Hamilton Street, Rochester.

Scientific. $\Theta. \Delta. X.$ Entered as Sophomore from the University of Wisconsin; Class Prophet (3); President Sophomore Reading Club; Science Club Council (2); First Vice-President Science Club (3); Assistant Physical Laboratory (2-3).

"Bark" is a physicist, heart and soul. There are a few opportunities to gain knowledge in Anderson Hall, but they are infinitesimal when compared to the extraordinary advantages of the Eastman Building. A year at the University of Wisconsin was "Bark's" stepping stone from the north woods to Rochester, but three years must elapse here ere he can take another step. Although Ernest is no athlete, he occasionally takes a turn around the gym track.

"Oh shucks, the girls are all right but the sparks from a Holtz machine suit me just as well."

Harold DeBlois Barss,

70 Meigs Street, Rochester.

Classical. A. Δ. Φ. Glee Club (2-3); Honor Roll (1-2); Secretary '08 Reading Club (2); Delegate to Student Volunteer Convention at Nashville, Tenn. (2); Sophomore Exhibition; Soph Joll.

"He had a face like a benediction."

This specimen was born somewhere and apparently not long ago but such details matter little and probably will never be known. Harold is one of the strange curiosities which any well balanced class must possess and is really an interesting relic for close study. His indoor exercise consists of ping-pong and his outdoor sports in walking and talking. Cupid has not yet discovered Harold's whereabouts, possibly never will, but the boy's religious tastes are well developed. He is a member of the infants' class in the Park Avenue Baptist Church and hopes to become a pillow of the church. His cannibalistic instincts are developing rapidly and when he becomes a man he may become a missionary. We hope so and may Heaven protect him.

Percy Alvin Benedict,

Pultneyville, N. Y.

Special. Δ. Y. Class Prophet (1); Class Basketball (1-2-3); Captain Class Basketball Team (2-3); Tennis Association (1-2-3); College Orchestra (2-3); College Mandolin Club (3); Class Baseball (2); Banquet Committee (1-2); Soph Joll; Junior Prom. Committee.

"The gods are just."

Keep your shirt on, Benny; that's not saying you are one, or at all resemble one. In fact, far from it. The trouble is, my little man, we can't see how such a lazy, good-for-nothing mortal was ever allowed to exist on this terrestrial globe. But the gods have so decreed. Be good to yourself, Benny; don't work hard; your health, you know, is first. Don't worry; don't think, for land's sakes. It might upset you completely. Now be careful, laddie, be careful.

Stephen Leon Bidwell,

73 Kenwood Avenue, Rochester.

Classical. Δ. K. E. Class Track Team (1-2-3); Captain Class Track Team (1); Varsity Track Team (1-2-3); Captain Varsity Track Team (3); Varsity Indoor Record in 22, 100, and 200 yard dashes.

"Biddie" is the "Arthur Duffy" of the Rochester. He can cover more ground in a shorter space of time than any of his colleagues. Believing that modesty is the truest virtue, he won't talk about the races he has won, and so "bids well" to being a model college man. "Biddie's" chief avocations are studying mathematics and officiating at track meets in the gym. The responsibility of keeping a younger brother in the straight and narrow path explains the wearied look of late on "Biddie's" face.

Harry Bloom,

79 Chatham Street, Rochester.

Philosophical. Debating Society (1-2); Executive Committee Debating Society (2); Librarian Historical Department (3); Assistant in Library (1-2-3).

That color on the lady's cheek
Is Bloom;
The freshness of that blossom weak
'Tis Bloom.
He figured out: "How old is Ann?"
He killed Cock-Robin, wicked man!
He shared the lion's den with Dan,
Did Bloom.

He's always out to make the dough.
That Bloom;
With manner humble, accent low
Of Bloom.
Who's always Johnny-on-the-spot?
Who fades old Dooley to a dot?
Who talks when "Uncle Bill" cannot?
Why—Bloom.

Edwin Hinchman Brooks,
52 Rowley Street, Rochester.

Pre-technical. Ψ . Υ . Entered in Winter term, Sophomore from the University of Pennsylvania; Sophomore Baseball Team; Secretary of Hockey Club (3); Hockey Club (3); Business Manager of "Interpres."

Having exhausted the possibilities of the marking system, Ed has turned his attention in other directions, and now exists on the knowledge accumulated in days of yore, plus an inexhaustible supply of pure bluff. He is a proved knight of the paddle and quite a "dipper," both on soft and hard water. Given a few choice spirits and a little spare time, there is no end of the mischief he can stir up. But if there be a grouch on, beware! Sometimes Ed's ideas do not exactly agree with those of the faculty, but that worries him little.

John Edwin Burr,
80 Flint Street, Rochester.

Classical. Ψ . Υ . Class Football (1-2); Captain Class Football Team (1); Class Baseball Team (1); Mandolin Club (2-3); Leader Mandolin Club (3); Soph Joll; Soph Joll Committee; Speaker Class Banquet (2); Assistant Manager Football (3); Boys Club Committee (3).

In these days even an alderman should be a college graduate. It was this sentiment that stirred the manly breast of "Johnny" to indulge in the pleasures and torments of college. Whether he will attain to alderman or not is open to question. At present he is sufficiently occupied with Greek and football—a strange mixture indeed! When the music starts, Johnny is always on the spot.

Delwin D. Chapin,

65 Prince Street. Harrison Valley, Pa.

Philosophical. A. Δ. Φ. Class Baseball Team (1-2); Varsity Baseball (1); Class Track Team (1-2); Campus Board (1-2); Junior Whist Club Committee.

Intends studying law.

"Chape" is not half as fierce as he looks. On the contrary, his general bon ami is proverbial throughout the college. He utilizes this ferocious outward appearance as a keep-off-the-grass sign for designing females and a general beware-of-the-dog warning for intruders into the sacred portals of the campus sanctum. Speaking of the fair sex "Chape" is "some punkins" in that direction—indeed, he seems to make a "hit" everywhere, baseball excepted.

Wallace Gilbert Collyer,

14 Atlantic Avenue, Rochester.

Philosophical. Entered in 1905 from McMinnville College. Graduates in 1907.

Be not angry, Brother Collyer; it is no malicious spirit that moves us to asseverate that you once found fault with the practice of eating because it destroyed your appetite. We are actuated by no unworthy impulse, when we allege that you were heard to wish that life were one long sweet Junior Banquet; we are merely the owner of an earnest desire to put the public in close touch with the facts of the case. It is with that worthy end in view that we now remind you how you boasted in public that if muscle were manhood, there was more real manhood in one of your hind legs than in the whole Junior Class.

Leland Marsland Conly,

41 Prince Street. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philosophical. Ψ . Υ . Soph Joll; Alling Prize Debate (2); Junior Historical Society (2); Dramatic Club (3); Stage Manager Dramatic Club (3).

This man is the representative of the bookstore trust. Notice the wild and hunted look upon his face. More people seek his life than could be numbered in a day. But with the superior poise of an immortal he disdains them all and proceeds to raise the price of books. The impudence of the man is astounding. He attends thirteen classes a day, makes all his recitations in blank verse, tends store, and teaches on the side for amusement. Worst of all, he escapes us this year. A reward to the man who will stop him.

Raymond Bruce Eddy,

77 Meigs Street. Ontario Center, N. Y.
Philosophical. Φ . E.

This is one of the most curious specimens in the whole show. He is the only known survivor of the seven sleepers and gives performances daily at 10:30, occasionally at 1:30. A remarkable thing about him is a propensity for flirting. He is said to have a new girl for every day in the week; and there could be no more edifying sight than to see him somnambulating with his sidewheel walk, a fair lady in tow who seems at a loss to understand the meaning of that massive smile.

John Denison Fowler,
19 Thayer Street, Rochester.

Classical. Class Football (1-2); Class Basketball (1-2-3); Varsity Second Football Team (1-2-3); Varsity Second Basketball Team (1-2).

"Oh, to be a turtle!
A slow, lethargic turtle!
With nothing in the world to do,
But crawl about the whole day through;
And sun myself upon a log,
Or gossip idly with a frog;
And know, no matter what befell,
I need but crawl into my shell
And let the whole world go to hell."

Arthur Samuel Hamilton, Jr.,
71 S. Washington Street, Rochester.

Scientific. Ψ . Υ . Soph Joll; Junior Prom. Committee; College Orchestra (1-2-3); Mandolin Club (3); Acting Manager Musical Clubs (3); Science Club (3).

"Tart" has been a junior so long that we must forgive his kittenish ways. He is a seedling of the Mayflower, having sprouted at the foot of Kimball's Hill near the canal. He is a lineal descendant of the god Pan and the Queen of Hearts, hence his addiction to the pipe and his coquettish wiles. In the summer he reverts to the sylvan life of his paternal ancestor, while in winter he follows the merry dance with amorous energy. In managing the musical clubs his noisy genius finds full expression. Though hilarious to the last inch, he hopes Mr. Lamson will some day call him a senior. His will provides for playing by the Mandolin Quartette at his funeral.

Curtis Dannals Hart,

14 Sumner Park, Rochester.

Philosophical. A. Δ. Φ. Class Vice-President (1); Class Football Team (1-2); Class Banquet Committee (1); Speaker Class Banquet (1); Class Baseball Team (1-2); Chairman Class Banquet Committee (2); Soph Joll Committee; Soph Joll; Trophy Room Committee (3); Varsity Baseball Team (1-2); Statistical Editor "Interpres" (resigned).

"Would one think 'twere possible for love to make such ravages in a noble soul?"

"Curt" is a good boy and how often has Sheddy said: "He is a boy after my own heart." Some day the Flower City may be proud that he was born within the city limits; but at present, indications are becoming fewer. "Curt" is a Sunday School teacher by trade and spends much of his time chasing the young cows on the barren wastes of Irondequoit. In politics, he is a Baptist, and after graduation he will probably do something.

Addison Leroy Hill,

192 North Avenue. Fairport, N. Y.

Scientific. Φ. E. Entered in Junior year from Colgate University.

Addison began his collegiate career at Colgate, but soon saw the error of his ways and turned toward Rochester. Naturally, his road has been a weary one. When we get the enemy thus into our midst, it is not likely that his bliss could be unalloyed. He is slowly being converted, however, and we hope to develop in him a star fullback to send down against Colgate next fall.

Philosophical.

Despite the fact that Roy hails from Belfast, the birthplace of the peerless John L., he has few characteristics in common with that celebrity. (Yet what raging torrent may that meek exterior not hide from view?) Besides being a human pianola, he is our chief source of information and inquisition in history. His style of gymnastics is unique, consisting of one aerial flop around the bar, assisted by three men, and a precipitate descent to terra firma.

It took "Runt" several months to make up his mind about coming to college, so he did not enter until January, 1905. The class of 1908 welcomed him with open arms, because of his bewitching smile and his ability to cover twenty feet in a single jump. When you come to think of it, that is a great many inches for one small man to cover; but then, to him, we concede the "Lyons" share. Thanks to his investigations in chemistry, the world at large is now the proud possessor of the knowledge that HO may only be eaten, while H₂O has frequently been drunk with impunity.

Behold the editor! He is to blame for everything between these covers. If you don't find enough humor in this volume, make this man's life a burden; cause him to roll and tumble o' nights, nigh unto dizziness. If we have distorted facts, don't hesitate to compare him unfavorably with Ananias, or wreck the wild natural beauty of his lineaments; in fact, violence is especially welcome. Remember that frightful notebook, fellows? We shan't tell whose it was, but his last name begins with "L-a-u."

When I beheld this I sighed and said within myself, surely mortal man is a broomstick.

"Dri" came to college originally because there happened to be no college at that time in Spencerport. Since then he has discovered that he is indispensable to co-ed life in the University. What a change three short years have made in "Dri." Innocent, modest, and green, he entered '08, but now the traits of a famous American are cropping out in him. He anticipates taking up teaching, law, and politics as fast as he can get to them, but at present the boy is busy with the intricacies of gracefully handling a pipe and cigarette.

When Hearst is elected President of the United States, Martin will edit the New York Journal. He isn't quite satisfied with the character of the sheet, and thinks it might be improved by catering more to the lower instincts of humanity. When Hearst spoke in Colonial Hall, Martin hired a box and Dossenbach's orchestra to keep things moving, with the result that Wm. Randolph offered "Greg" the job of assistant window cleaner in his New York mansion. But "Greg" intends looking for Jerome's job, where he can make easy money by divying up with the Sunday Sandwich men. He never chews tobacco, but often chews the rag.

Hush! 'Tis the Sphinx. No one has yet quite solved its mystery. Softly it comes and goes—now it is here, now there. Sometimes it tinkles on the strings of a mandolin, sometimes it pursues the flying tennis ball; but always the same mysterious Sphinx. When it comes to scholarship, we all make way; but who can compete in wisdom with a Sphinx. And yet withal it has some goodly share of the art of mixing truth and fiction, so indispensable to a good bluff.

Rescuer of baffled professors and bewildered classes, dear old "Sporg" remains the fount of deliberate and self composed wisdom—and he never told a lie. It is not generally known that this sporangium of latent wit is on Mr. Lamson's payroll, but until his downy whiskers grow more fiercely, Prexy thinks it looks better to have him instruct from the floor. Mathematics is his pastime; while playing tennis he delights in the curves therein illustrated. A choice of profession worries George not at all, however. He is now considering mushroom farming on a small scale.

Owing to the advent of a large and enthusiastic class of freshmen, the duties of gymnasium instructor became so arduous this year that "Doc" was obliged to look up an assistant whose natural physical development would suffice to overawe the laddies and hence prevent them from marking up the walls and tracking in mud. "Curly" made good immediately, and now as member of the faculty, holds the official title, "Custodian of the Baths." "Art" likes basketball and baseball. Sometimes he even delves into the frivolity of dancing. A genial smile invariably portrays his state of mind. In fact, he is never known to become grouchy except when an Irondequoit car brings him to college about thirty minutes after class has started.

The vine clad walls, the stretches of yellow dandelions, and the waving pines have lured more than one dreamer to our Alma Mater. Thus "Cupid" came, and suddenly finding he was math shark, remained. Bob fairly dreams in terms of calculus. One need not say that he is a fusser, his countenance betrays him. His smile is irresistible, especially when he wants to collect subscriptions or solicit patronage for the college play. Athletics are too rough for "Cupid"; then, too, being insured heavily in his father's company his injuries might cause grief at home. Bob intends taking a course in domestic science at the Mechanics Institute.

He may be little, but he has a man's ideas. Sammy's folks sent him to college because he is too small to stay at home and fight away the wolf. Strange to say, Sammy's father's name is Porter also, so we call the second edition a "re-porter," (Joke: which is about the "Sam" thing.) If Sammy makes 2,000 revolutions a minute in avoiding the caresses of an ardent man-cow, how long before he will receive a sensation in the end-organs and what will be the force in dynes?

"Carl" is a combination basketball player and track artist. He dotes on running against time. Give him five minutes, twenty seconds, he will turn you off—oh, anywhere from twenty to thirty laps. The above incidents occur in the gym. Walk over to Anderson Hall with "Carl" and see him eat up knowledge. Math and physics get frightened when he approaches, and marks of 95 and 100 he gathers in like blackberries. "Parma" was born in the town which bears his name but soon came to Rochester because his brother wanted to come. He is descended directly from Adam, and poor Adam has much to account for. Just why this blushing specimen of a youth entered college is not known, and what he will do when he leaves college is a greater mystery. "Parma" is a strong Prohibitionist in politics and his Baptist principles are so well grounded that they are undoubtedly buried.

We don't know Charles very well, yet. He hasn't been with us long enough; but we take it for granted that since he is a minister he is a real sport. We should like very much to hear him instructing his "charge." He tells funny stories, too, and it is said that his greatest ambition is to stand in the center of the stage and throw chestnuts at his audience. The man was born to elocutionize.

Rugg once had the reputation of being a bashful youth, but one morning he came to college with a long blond hair dangling from his coat collar. After that you couldn't hold him. He even went so far as to flirt with the models in Sibley's windows. How he ever got on the "Interp" board is a mystery, for he has a constitutional inaptitude for work in all forms. He used to study till he heard somebody refer to it as work. He flunked a Latin "exam" once because he couldn't remember what "opus" meant.

On rising to recite with lowered head and thoughtful mien, his ideas would seem to be engaged in the following disjunction: "To flunk or not to flunk. Whether my general welfare best behooves that I should bluff my dear professor out of countenance, or flop in ignominious speechlessness my lowly bench upon, exuding cuss-words midst the heartless ha-ha of the common herd."

So if you must address me, and I suppose you must, call me Seward Dwight, please. That sounds "tony" and does not smack of the plebeian. A boy, normally, unobtrusive in the class room; yet, even wizardly in charm of address when it comes to the bluff. "Him" is the only real musician in the class. He floated down from Canada with the warblers one fall just in time to behold '08 in the process of breaking in. That the motley throng stood much in need of the chorister, naturalist, and football player, was only too painfully evident. After much entreaty, and not without protest, he consented to remain. Domiciled on the edge of the campus, it was at first his consolation, and finally has become his chief delight, to wander over the green, late of a moonlight night, making sure that Phinney locked all the doors after him and nobody left any lights in the gym.

This innocent youth is said to be descended directly from our old friend Rip Van Winkle. There are no other specimens like "Sy" in the world and here's hoping the good work will continue. He is not musically inclined but does sing for his own amazement. "Sy's" peculiar likings for the library are well known and he may be found there seeking real social diversion at almost any hour.

Some people come to college for the love of study, but Taylor comes for the study of love. He changes the object of his affections at least once a term, in order, as he expresses it, to get the most experience. The ladies don't seem to mind having him around, and characterize him as a sort of harmless imbecile—though if they could see him when he gets roaring drunk, they would probably think otherwise. There's not a saloon in town the inside of which he isn't familiar with, and sad to relate, he chews tobacco like a trooper. He may have imbibed this habit from the politicians he consorts with, as also that confidential air of his. He is exceedingly fond of the gymnasium and visits it as often as once in three years. His next athletic stunt will be a distance run with some fair lady.

A TEST

Some time ago, a junior debater let loose this bombshell into our midst: "Is the faculty up-to-date?" It landed on our consciousness with a dull, heavy thud, and permeated our lives with a veil of misty, dreadful suspense. With the view, therefore, of vindicating the honor of our instructors or dooming them to hopeless mediaevalism, the riddle, "When is a door not a door?" was propounded to each one, his manner of reception of the witticism to serve as a criterion of his antiquity. We announce with pleasure that nobody "flunked." Below are some of the best answers.

Prexy—"Inasmuch as that conundrum is hopelessly out-of-date, I therefore hope you realize the supreme necessity of keeping it severely to yourself under the painful, yet just, penalty of social ostracism."

Gilly—"Give it about five."

Latty—"It makes me shed $H_2O + NaCl$."

Bill—"It has no historical significance. Rule it out."

Fairy—"A relic of the tertiary period."

Dodge—"It excites a profuse discharge from my lachrymal glands."

Forbes—"It racks my organism with conflicting emotions."

Kendrick—"Shades of classic Greece! Take it away."

Moore—"It is en de bomme."

Hoeing—"Of course it is manifestly absurd."

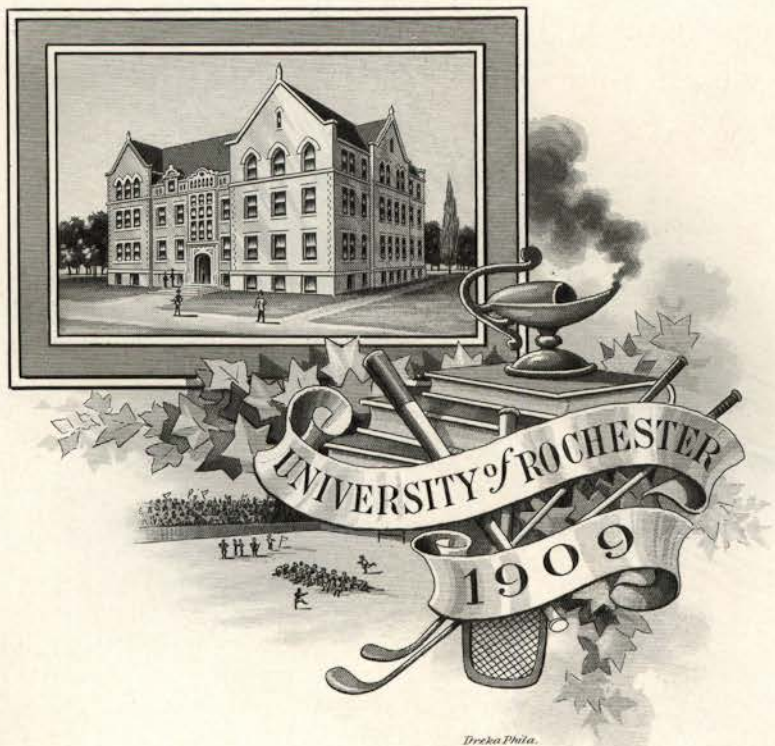

Doc. Stroud—"I could beat that a mile."

Lampson—"I made that up myself."

Sheddy—"Oh slush!"

REAL LIFE

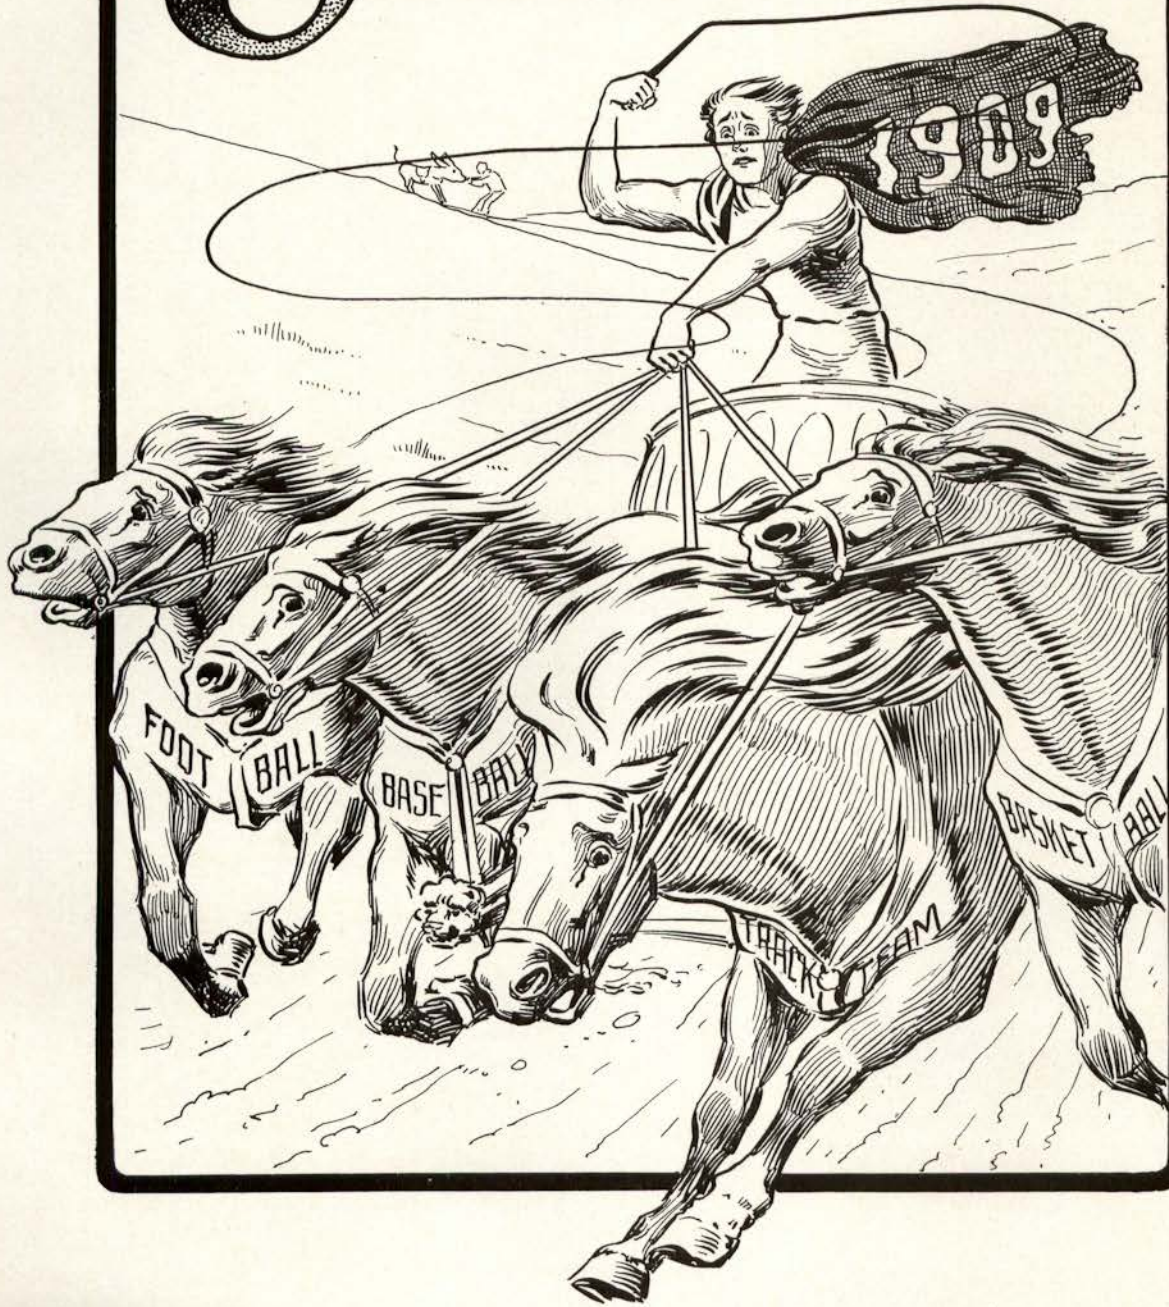

No children, this is not a free-for-all fight; it is a class meeting. The young gentlemen engaged in the congenial occupation of tossing each other over benches and making violent exchanges of hymn-books are college juniors—old enough to know better. Be thankful, children, that you were not all born college juniors. Isadore Mahoney, keep your dirty hands away. Shortly a semblance of quiet will ensue. Then one set of young gentlemen will try to "get the bulge" on another set of young gentlemen and everybody will be elected u-nan-i-mous-ly. This is called a slate. But not the kind of slate you write upon, children. The class in elementary orthography will please come forward.

A CLASS IN ETHICS

Scene: Frat house.

Principles: One Sophomore; one Freshman.

"Hello, Frosh!"

"Y-yes, sir?"

"Come here! Right there! (setting him hard in chair)—Yes, there! Now, look here, my boy, what do you mean by a remark to the effect that the illustrious class of 1909 is the worst class in mathematics that ever entered college. Now, talk up, or I'll take you out beside still water!"

"W-well, sir, I didn't really mean it; but that's what Gale said, sir!"

"PROFESSOR Gale, my lad, PROFESSOR Gale; always speak respectfully of your superiors. Well, now, what business did Gale have to say that, huh?"

"I don't know, sir. And Gilly said—"

"PROFESSOR Gilmore, Frosh! How many times have I got to tell you that?"

"Professor Gilmore said, sir, that you were all nice fellows but awfully lazy, and—"

"And so Gilly said that, eh? Well, we'll have to speak to him about that. Anything more?"

"N-no, sir. I don't think so."

"Well, now, my little man, I haven't any hard feelings against you personally, but just take a word of advice from your elder. Every time you speak of the illustrious class of 1909 you speak in a low whisper like a darky telling a ghost-story, and mighty respectfully, too, or you'll hear of it! On?"

"Yes, sir."

"All right; glad of it. Now, remember this: the illustrious class of 1909 has a record back of 'em already that you fellows won't make in four years. Why, we've been—we've been—"

"Well, what have you been, sir?"

"No back talk, frosh! I'll tell you what we've been. Just gim' me time. When the illustrious class of 1909 matriculated—get that, frosh?—matriculated—they proceeded to clean up everything except—"

"I hear you didn't win the football game, sir?"

"We didn't eh? Well, no, we didn't, that's right. One for you."

"And they tell me you didn't win the track meet, sir, and—"

"Huh? What's that? Well, maybe we didn't, but—"

"And you didn't best us this year in football, sir, if you'll remember."

"Say, look here, boy, do you want to get murdered?"

"W-well, sir, I didn't mean to hurt your feelin's, sir."

"All right, but be careful. I'll tell you, my lad, you ought' a been up to Geneseo when we busted up the Soph feed and—"

"Wasn't Prexy a bit put out, sir?"

"Greatest advertisement the college ever had, my boy!"

"And say, sir, how about your banquet?"

"FEED, my boy, feed! Don't use such elegant terms. Great! Swell-est ever. Lobster salad, sweet potatoes, spring chicken, tomato en surprise, potatoes parisienne,—how about it?"

"Candy goods, sir!"

"Fine, my child, you're improving in rhetoric." (Ominous pause. Soph is growing impatient and weary. Song from "Lion and the Mouse" heard in the distance. Then suddenly:)

"Say, frosh, what do you mean by forcibly abducting two gentlemen of the illustrious class of 1909 at your—your"

"Feed, sir?"

"No, fodder! Catch that?—fodder! Why you—you, what do you mean by it, eh?"

"Music while we ate, sir!"

"Music while you ate, you scoundrel! Goodness, gracious, mercy! The child is actually getting forward. All right, we'll give you some more music. Come on! (Grabs his ear, which he twists spirally, so to speak, the while he vigorously and not infrequently pulls the same.) How does that sound, eh? Sound good, my little verdant one? (Assists him with several stop-overs to the door-way.) Well, come again, frosh, but say, the next time you open that cavity of yours about the illustrious class of 1909, you remember what I said. Talk mighty circumspectly, which is "spiciens" seeing, and "circum," around. Catch? Ask Burtie about it! Well, good-day, frosh! Don't hurry! (As he heaves him into the air on his toe. When the Freshman has grown a mere speck in the distant sky, a small still voice is heard floating back to earth: "Well, I guess we didn't tie the can on you in track, eh? Well, I guess!")

"By Jove, but frosh are getting impudent! (Drops into chair, lights pipe.) So you tied the can on us in track, eh, my boy? Well, I guess you did. Wonder what the illustrious class of 1909 is good for anyway? (Long pause; begins to nod; pipe drops on floor, smashes). Just landed? How is it up there, frosh? * * * Lazy, are we? Nit! (Begins to snore; winsome mouth slightly ajar.) I should say not!"

FRESHMAN PRIMER

LESSON I.

See the Fresh-man class. It is a nice class. There are many boys in the class. Some are big boys. Some are small boys. Their mam-mas sent them to col-lege. The naughty Soph-o-mores want-ed to fight with the nice Fresh-men. The big boys had a dread-ful fight on the stairs. It made the Soph-o-mores mad. The Seniors said that it was not nice to fight and so the Fresh-men stop-ped.

One time the Fresh-men caught a bad Soph-o-more. They took ven-geance on him. They gave him a ride in one of their go-carts. What a nice time he had!

LESSON II.

Here is a foot-ball. The Fresh-men have the foot-ball. The Soph-o-mores are try-ing hard to get the ball. They can not get the ball. The little Fresh-men yell loudly be-cause the Soph-o-mores can not get the ball. See them run. The Fresh-men make a touch-down. They kick a goal. A man with a pen-cil puts down a 6 and a 0. What a nice man he is!

Prexy lets the Fresh-men and the Soph-o-mores out of school to play. They are going to have a snow-ball fight. At first, the Soph-o-mores are afraid. Then they come out-side. They find that it is snow-ing very hard, and soon they run back to Prexy.

LESSON III.

See the nice round bas-ket-ball. The whole col-lege plays with the bas-ket-ball. The Fresh-men and the Juniors play with the ball. They have a nice time. The Juniors dis-ap-pear. Only the Fresh-men are left. Then the Seniors dis-ap-pear, but the Soph-o-mores ap-pear. They ap-pear by a small mar-gin, how-ever.

Note for the teacher.—As this lesson is a difficult one, the following may be substituted:

The Fresh-men have a party. What a nice par-ty it is! They have cake and ice-cream and other good things. They in-vite the Soph-o-mores to come to their party but the Soph-o-mores are bash-ful. The mam-mas of the Soph-o-mores will not let their lit-tle boys go to such late par-ties. Naughty mammas. See, two of the Soph-o-mores have dis-o-beyed their mammas and have come to the par-ty. What a good time they are having! They are so hap-py. They play nice mus-ic and speak lit-tle pieces. Some of the Fresh-men also speak their little pieces. The Fresh-men go home very, very late. Bad, naugh-ty Fresh-men!

PRAYER OF A SMALL COLLEGE

Give me a million of dough, mammon,
 Give me a million of dough,
 To keep the little life I have—
 You'll never miss it, you know.

My best professors leave me,
 They're out for coin, and so,
 If bigger wages offer,
 Quite naturally they go.
 Then give me a million of dough, mammon,
 Only a million of dough.

I can't afford a football coach,
 I make a sorry show—
 A stickful on the sporting page,—
 Oh, do not say me no,
 But give me a million of dough, mammon,
 Only a million of dough.

Envoyez

A draft, a check, or cash will do—
 Mais l'envoyez, et P. D. Q.

“DOC” REVIEWS THE SEASON

Another year has passed swiftly by, and although no championships have come to Rochester we feel that the University has maintained a high standard and has possibly laid the foundation of more successful seasons to follow.

Although we were disappointed in not taking the baseball championship from Colgate, our team played good ball after it had gained experience on its eastern trip. The “Horrible Hoodoo of Hamilton Hill” was our undoing in the second league game, and we lost by a score of 10-2, to a team which was most easily defeated here, 10-1, a month later. A win from Colgate on our own grounds put us again in the running for the pennant, and this was not out of reach until the defeat at Colgate on a slushy diamond, from which the water had only just been practically shovelled.

Captain Sullivan was again the life of the team, and Harrington’s work in the box was gilt edged. The team fielded well but was, on the whole, weak at the bat. Munger’s loss will be keenly felt, as he was strong both at bat and in the field.

Perhaps it needed a succession of disappointing defeats in football to arouse the students to the fact that only by the most loyal service and unflagging zeal of all, can Rochester, with its natural handicaps, hope to compete successfully year after year in football. The necessity of building up almost a new team again in a year, when not only the old style football and the fundamentals had to be learned, but also the new game, with its many innovations and wider possibilities, was one great cause of the limited success we had. Another was the woeful lack of material of suitable size and number and adequate time in which to develop it. The Hobart game should have been handily won, and why it was not would be difficult to explain; yet Hobart played snappily, and we will not be “sore losers.” Our scores with Colgate and Hamilton were closer than on the year previous, but the eleven did not round out into the smoothness and power of the 1905 team at the close of the season. Pryor, Slater and Reynolds were greatly missed. Captain “Bucko” Steere worked unfalteringly, and it was through no fault of his nor of Manager Palmer that misfortunes combined as they did. Jordan and Keiber were the mainstays of the line, the latter being the find of the year for Rochester. He will most likely win four R's in this, his freshman year.

The record of the season would not be complete without mention of the altogether splendid manifestation of college spirit and good sportsmanship during the last days of the season which culminated in the Tufts game. It is safe to say that with such spirit behind the men all season, things would surely hum. Let us all pull together next fall to make the men feel that not eleven are playing the game, but every man in the University centered in the eleven. It means work and sacrifice but the reward in college spirit and in the consciousness of duty done will be great; and,—success will not be denied.

It was early evident from the abundance of material that the basketball team would play a much stronger game this year than last year. The schedule was a hard one, and it was indeed fortunate that alternates were in reserve. In view of our hard schedules, it would seem wiser next season to start Varsity practice earlier in the year, establish the style of play and team work, so that practice during the strenuous run of college games might be omitted twice a week. Our only defeats on the home floor (a particularly good court for visiting teams) were by Yale, Columbia, and Pennsylvania, which teams finished in the order given at the head of the Intercollegiate Association. We had hope for victories on the home courts of Hamilton and Union, but the habit of winning away from home is left as something to gain in the striving next year.

The stubborn defense against Yale's regulars, the whirlwind finish in the home Hamilton game, the set-back to the veteran Y. M. C. A. five, and the totally unexpected swamping of Colgate here, were the features of the season. Captain Van Buskirk made a good leader. His heart was in the work, and his guard play was first-class. "Scotty" Reid played brilliantly throughout. These two will be greatly missed next season even if such good men as George Ramaker, Park Harman, Cassidy, Keiber, and Ben Ramaker remain. The season was a success financially, reflecting much credit on Manager Harmon.

A strong second team, styled Grant's "Minions," terrorized the suburbs until several of his men were drafted to the Varsity. The inter-class series was again stubbornly contested, and under the lead of Park Harman, 1909 pulled an all but lost game from 1910 in the last minute of play.

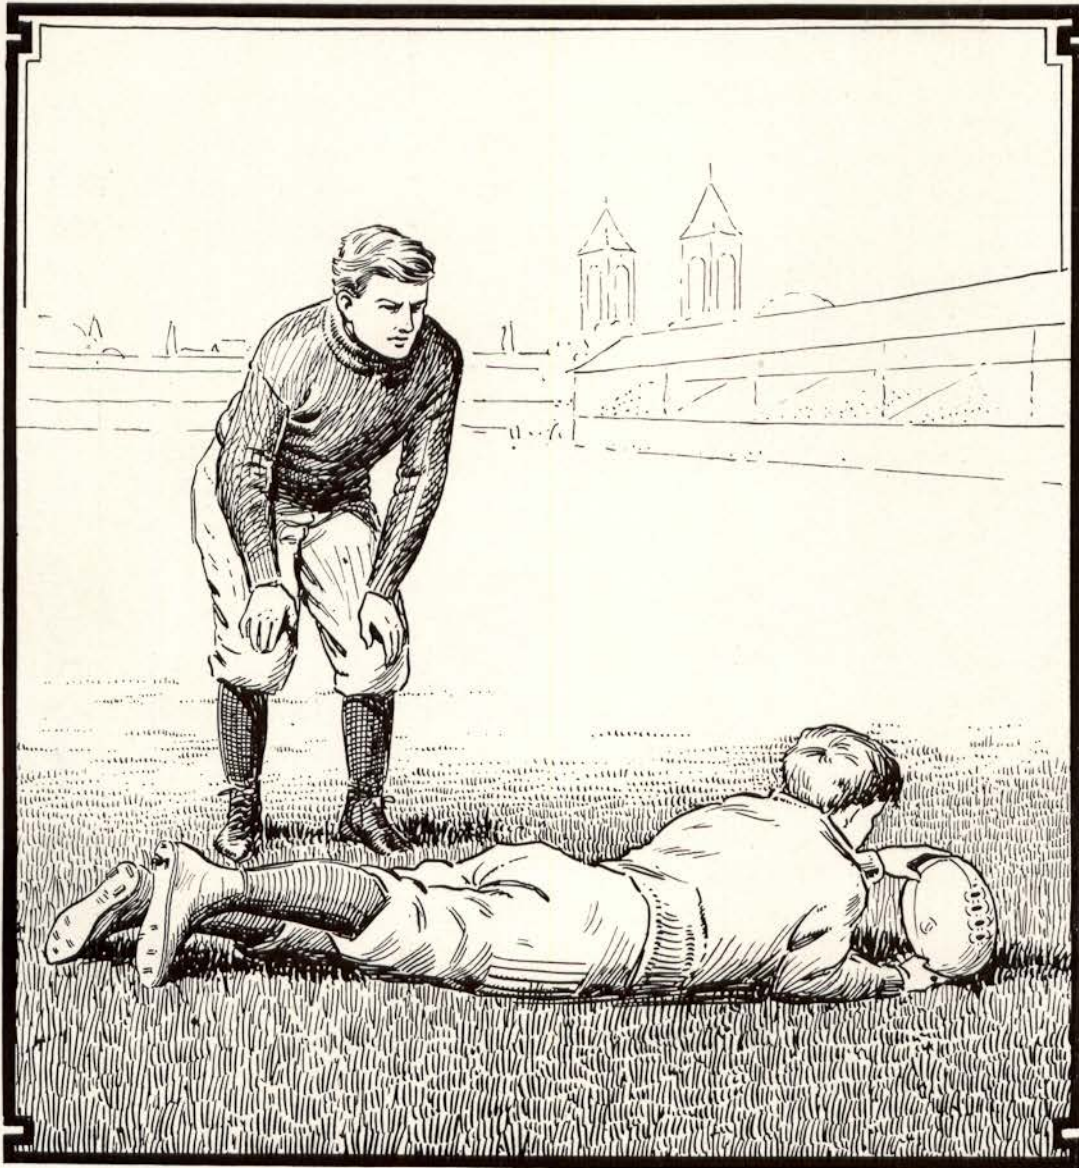

In reviewing the track season of last spring this fact is most assertive, Rochester cannot hope to rise from a third rate place in the League until there shall be a suitable and convenient track on which to train regularly. For two years in succession, we have been forced into last place in the state meet. The lack of a track on which to train discouraged many from practice, and although Union was defeated in a dual meet and the Varsity easily defeated Y. M. C. A. in a practice meet, our team was not well enough balanced to force the fighting at the Intercollegiate. We showed up fairly strong in the field events but did not figure heavily on the track. To the conscientious devotion to duty and to the initiative of Manager Searle and Captain Goldstein was due the holding together of the team and its certainly fair success. Wood and Bidwell of '08 and Fowle '09 were the scoring strength of the team.

This past winter, track interest has been maintained by dual meets between the lower classes and nearby "prep" schools, by a dual meet with Y. M. C. A., and by a very successful interclass meet, which aroused far more than usual attention. That 1910 defeated East High, which quite handily won the Interscholastic, shows good material in the entering class. It is encouraging to note that an interest has been awakened in distance running, and we can offer certain success to those men who will persevere in this line of work throughout their college course. College athletic meets are not all to the naturally "swift" and "strong" but to the workers, the plodders, who, by persevering day after day, gain in strength, endurance, and morale for the day of contest. The Campus is already surveyed for a new circular track which, when completed, will of itself be a great stimulus to successful track work.

We have yet to speak of this season's baseball team. Prospects are very bright. Material, though far from abundant, is very good. With two experienced catchers, first-class pitchers, a fair fielding team, and good hitters, nothing is lacking but the pennant. Yet it is well to add that it will not come for the asking, and complete success against Colgate, Hamilton, and Hobart will result only from faithful practice and a serious aggressiveness. The schedule is a hard one, but it offers an opportunity for Rochester to win a recognized high position in baseball among the colleges of the state. Are we willing to strive for it?

For a general word, we believe there is a healthy tone to the athletics of Rochester, that our students are making good athletes and are not mere athletes vainly trying to become students. C. C. STROUD.

THE GENEVA TRIP

When it was learned that the Fates had ordained that the annual football game between Hobart and Rochester should be played at Geneva, and not on our own gridiron, preparations were made to take a large bunch of rooters with the team. For several days—even weeks—Anderson Hall had presented the appearance of a huge billboard. Every available space was covered with large placards reading something like this:

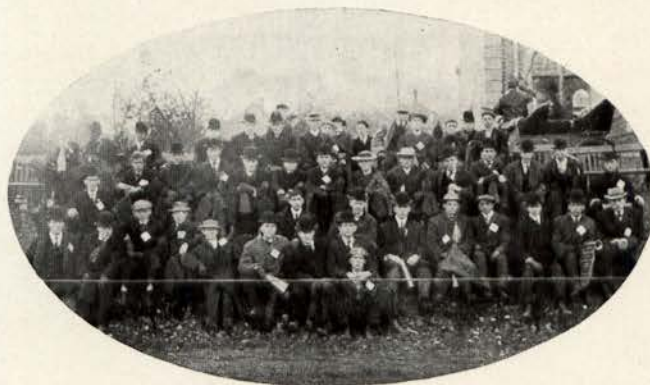

1904
Hobart 15, Rochester 0
Don't
let them do it in 1906

These heroic efforts of Manager Palmer succeeded in finding nearly 70 fellows who had sufficient college spirit to accompany the team on this trip.

About noon on Saturday, November 2nd, the bunch collected about the Rochester & Eastern depot, to start its tour of conquest. After a refreshing ride of two hours we arrived at Geneva, and at once proclaimed our arrival by a lusty Waxy Co. Under the guidance of one of Hobart's men, the fellows started for the football field.

The Hobart and Rochester supporters took their places on opposite sides of the field and at once began the cheering contest in which the supporters of the dandelion, though outnumbered 2 to 1, easily took the lead and drowned out the best efforts of their opponents.

After a few practice plays were run off, the whistle blew and the game was on. Time and again Hobart tried to cross the line and her efforts were unavailing. But when the ball came to Rochester, strange to say, despite their best efforts, our fellows could not secure a touchdown before the whistle told that the end of the first half had come. During the intermission the Rochester bunch paraded the grounds and shouted their war cries into the deafened ears of the Hobart rooters.

It seems that Hobart had been working weeks for the game, and during the play her captain would constantly cry, "Remember, fellows, this is Rochester." This determination to win, coupled with some unaccountable weakness in Rochester's playing, allowed Hobart to make her best efforts count in securing two touchdowns. Our fellows made a game fight but they were unmistakably hoodooed and, work as hard as they could, things wouldn't come right.

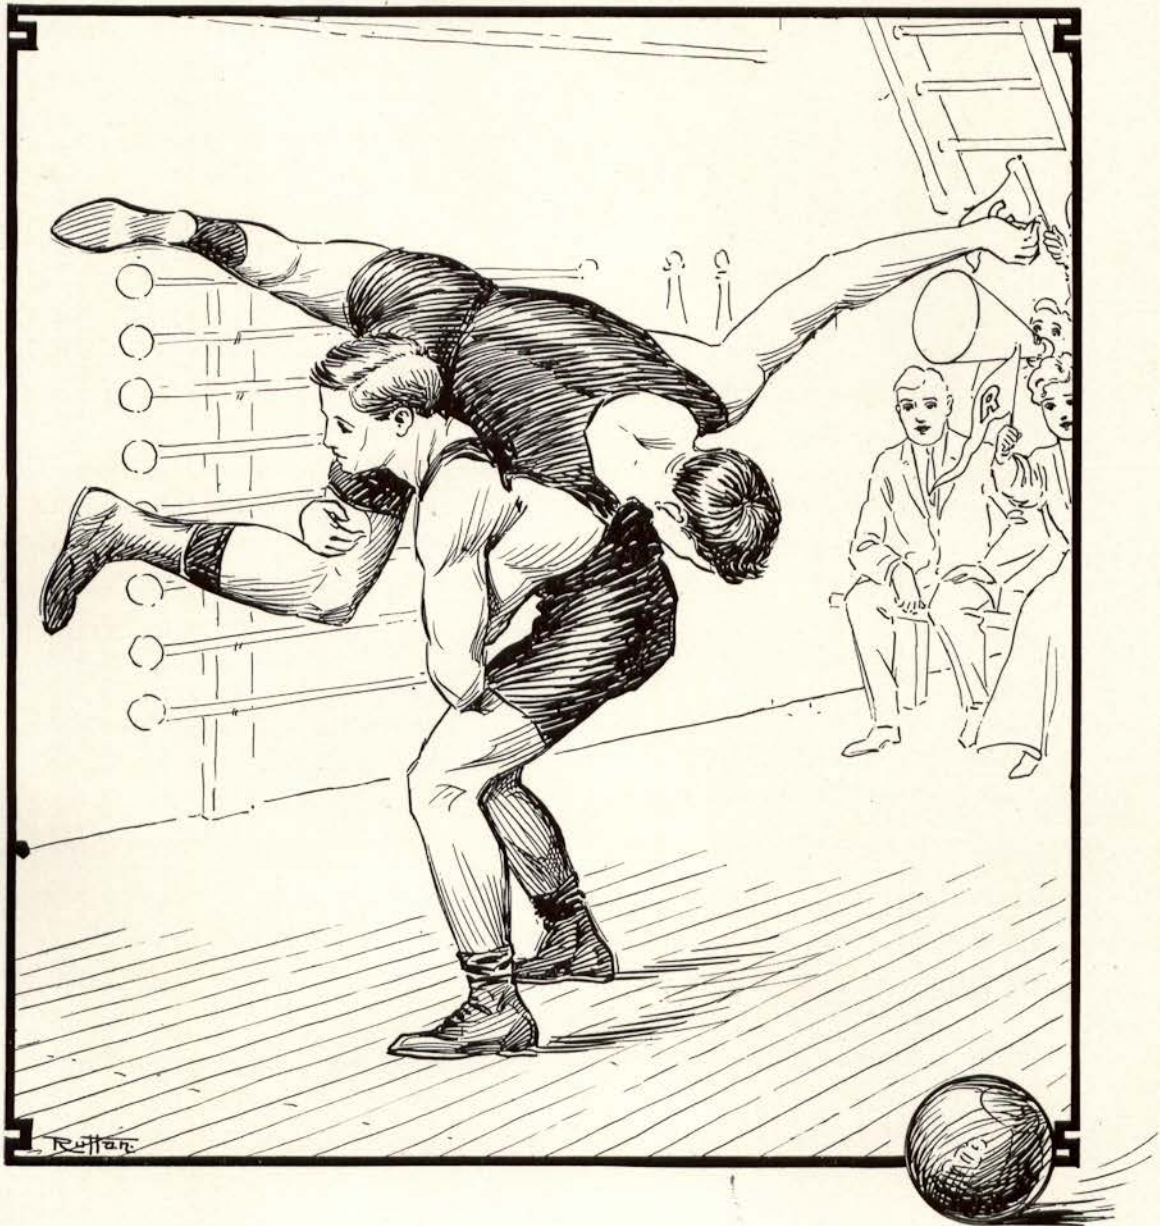

It was after the game that the real college spirit was shown,—a spirit which, had it been shown more in the beginning of the season, would surely have encouraged the fellows on the team, and more games would have been won. Despite the fact that the game was lost, the bunch followed the team to the gymnasium, where every one was cheered to the echo. Then all united in singing the "Genesee."

It was now dark. A hunt for supper began. It is not necessary to mention that the search was a success. Finally, we straggled back to the cars and, disappointed, but not ashamed, set out for home.

1907 SQUAD

“BIG LEAGUE” BASEBALL SENIOR -- FACULTY GAME

The golden sun had but just passed the middle point of its daily trip. The twittering birds were busily engaged in conversation and formal calls from tree to tree. Beneath the spreading branches on the campus green not a soul stirred. All was quiet and serene. At the top of the massive stone steps of a large building there appears a man slightly tinged with gray and wearing that intellectual poise which tells us with no further evidence that a professor stands before us. Lightly, yet confidently, he descends the massive steps and briskly wends his way toward another building on the square. Instinctively we follow and see him enter the small, flat building with the name engraved above the portal. The inscription reads, “Alumni Gymnasium.”

Surely some important affair is in progress, else why should this learned man seek to enter this hall which shelters only rough sports and wherein only the animal nature of man is developed. Dr. Shroud comes forward from his den, grasps our hero by the right hand and welcomes him into his sanctum. The door is closed and profound silence again reigns.

Meanwhile students and townspeople begin to assemble upon the bleachers at the side of the low, flat building. We gather from the animated chatterings of the young lady students that a baseball game is about to be perpetrated, the senior class being pitted against the whole roster of the teaching staff. At one corner of the bleachers there assembles a small knot of youths in unseemly garb consisting of striped stockings, knee trousers, short sleeve waists with the collar loosened, and long brimmed caps. They crowd close to one another, evidently intent upon some pamphlet held by one of the group. The booklet is entitled “K. G. Scalding’s Baseball Guide for 1906.” The approaching game is now but twenty minutes off and as is customary with this group who appear to be students, it is time for them to transplant the subject matter from the pages to their brains. A student called Surl, content with his gleanings, strolls away from the group and snugly ensconces himself in the center of the group of female students, to remain there until the game commences.

The aforementioned Dr. Shroud suddenly trots out upon the field, followed by his colleagues, who are to defend the diamond interests of the faculty, Farrill, Hendrick, Shredd, Samson, Raking, Jale, Pinchin, Skadoo. The Alumni are also represented on the faculty by Succumbor, who waits at second base for further instructions. Both teams enjoy themselves by precipitating the ball from one to another and hitting it hard with a club. Then the referee blows his whistle, the timekeepers set their watches and the game begins. The senior boys have their "innings," as they call it, and Martin Fearnone, their captain, firmly approaches the home plate and stands looking off toward Ireland in a reminiscent attitude. Three successive throws from Shroud to Shredd are sufficient. The referee blows his whistle and two others follow in Martin's footsteps. This means that they are out, put out by the decision of the official. The faculty change places with the seniors, who spread themselves around the field expectantly. Martin does not combine gusto with his throw and Samson hits it. In fact, others follow Samson, and when the teams change places again, Rheese's team has one run. Something seems to be wrong with the Seniors for they cannot keep pace with the faculty although they keep putting in fresh players like Max Line and Chols Roliver. Once in a while Raking steals a base and Ferdinand Slaker tries to run, which so amuses the audience that they have hysterics and raise their voices in laughter. The Seniors finally make three points and the faculty is incensed and vent their spite on the poor ball which Martin throws for them. Everybody has a chance, but two men get stuck on the bases and can't get off. It's Hendrick's turn to face Martin and, swinging his club like a golf stick, he sends the ball on a long journey, causing Arris and Krajie of the Seniors to follow as soon as possible. After Hendrick has run around the field and gloriously won the game, the students each select a member of the faculty and carry him on their shoulders for a souvenir. Pinchin still feels the need of exercise so he induces the Students Association for Men to play tag with him. He runs three times around the "gym" before being caught.

The Seniors reassemble, get out Scalding's Guide once more and try to find out why they lost the game.

Dr. Shroud grasps our hero by the hand, leads him into his den and behind locked doors they congratulate each other again and again. Many years later the details of the plot are published in the "Campus" and the secret hatched up by our hero, Willum Farril, and Dr. Shroud found out; Shredd, the catcher, had given all his signals in German.

GREETING

For the first time in its history the University has had a hockey team. In November a number of fellows interested in this sport, met and organized a Varsity Hockey Club, the main purpose of which was to support a hockey team. Mr. Brewer, owner of the University skating rink, gave financial support, and a number of games were scheduled, with other college teams and with city teams. Unfortunately, on account of the open winter, many of these had to be cancelled, among them two with Niagara University and a return game with Cornell. It is sincerely hoped that hereafter the Varsity will be represented on the ice by teams enjoying ever increasing success and that a hockey team backed by the Council will be a permanent part of our athletic life.

REVERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

When "Cass" came home one night quite late,
His tracks looked thus before the gate:

It's very simple—you must confess;
There is no ignorance here to bless.
When a man don't know—why a man can guess,
O gee—how a man can guess.

As "Pam" did o'er his Livy pour,
Some leaflets fell upon the floor.
It's very simple—you must confess,
Not half as hard as playing chess.
When a man don't know—why a man can guess.
My stars—how a man can guess.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

No, P. D. Q., it is not necessary to wear full dress in the chemical laboratory; nor is it considered good form to drink out of the nitric acid bottle. In response to your latter question, do not hold it over the flame too long, and never point it at your right eye.

U. of R.: By all means serve beans at your freshman banquet, if you can afford them.

JUST LIKE "BOB."

Prof. Lawrence—"What meter did you use?"

Paviour—"Oh that $85 meter."

THE SOCRATIC METHOD

Miss Abbott swings her hand on high
To catch the great professor's eye.
He looks around, he sees it flutter,
And twixt his teeth doth sadly mutter:
"Oh wait a while, there's time enough
For you to shoot your little bluff."
Again he speaks, resumes discourse;
Again it waves without remorse;
Until, at last, he gases, gases,
Throwing out unwieldy masses
Of hot air, air, air,
From his philosophic chair,
In reply to all the nagging
Of her sad, mentalic lagging.
Yet, alas, she's none the wiser,
Is this toddling undersizer,
Everlasting questionizer.
At least it seemeth so to me,
(And I sit where I can see)
For her eyes are always puzzled,
(Would to Heaven her lips were muzzled)
Like a rock from catapult,
Flies her hand toward heaven's vault;
As it fans ethereal ether,
Turn our thoughts to deadly lethe;
But the bell saves us.

THE CLASS OF 1907

The girls of Nought-Seven were the first to break the bands of conservatism woven by their demure predecessors. Soon after their entrance into the precincts of Anderson Hall these dignified Seniors of to-day took time by the forelock and made such arrangements for their banquet early in the first term of the Freshman year, that when it did occur a while after Easter, it was a thing of the past before their unsuspecting foes had thought anything about it.

As Sophomores, Nought-Seven was forced to take her stand against a class three times as great in numbers, but not in courage. They gave the Freshies a glorious time "upon that night when fairies light," but they regretted to learn that their kindness was forgotten by spring, when deep plans for the capture of the Nought-Seven President were laid, but all in vain. The conspiracy was discovered, and Nought-Seven scored another victory.

With such records it is not surprising that in their last year the mantle of leadership has been donned so becomingly. Unique their methods and generous their motives, for what class but Nought-Seven would have thought of giving a variety shower to beautify the girls' rooms? Happy memories have been earned for,

Bright has been the story of the past,
Brighter is the year that is our last,
Bright our thoughts when college days are o'er,
Thoughts of happy hours and days of yore.

CLASS OF 1908

The girls of the class of 1908 entered college amidst the silent admiration of the registrar and of those few grim professors visible on entrance days. In chapel, all heads were turned towards the left, where in two long demure rows they, as Freshman girls, sat.

By their Sophomore year all the world was ready to acknowledge that any class capable of capturing the stony hearts of the faculty and of their fellow students; of holding glorious spreads and banquets unmolested by inferiors; of having an unparalleled actress in Greek plays, etc., etc., was a marvel and an A No. 1.

But now they are Juniors; brilliant, attractive, studious Juniors. They have learned the note-book system to perfection, they have learned that no matter if one does remember syntax the Latin department are sure to keep on telling succeeding classes that no class ever had; in fact, these girls of 1908 have sipped the cup of knowledge and have become wise. Such a successful career has been theirs in the past, that with hopeful and serene countenances they face the future year, which shall send them forth from the walls of their Alma Mater, to which they are, and ever will be, a permanent glory.

ONE OF "SHEDDIE'S" EXAMINATIONS

Professor Shedd (giving an examination to the Lessing class) to Mr. S—— (who, note carefully, is one of his favorite students.)

"Oh! Hello, Mr. S——. Glad to see you this fine day. Hope you are feeling bright and sunny. Well, how have you liked the course in Lessing this term? First rate? Well! I am glad of that. I thought you would. It's a nice course, you know. Have you got your note-book up to date? Yes, that is all right. Tells a story or two. What are you going to do this summer, Mr. S——? Oh! You are? Well! That will be fine, and give you good experience. And now I guess that is all the examination I need to give you; you have done pretty good work this term and I am satisfied with it. Goodby."

And the dreadful ordeal of "Sheddie's" exam. is over.

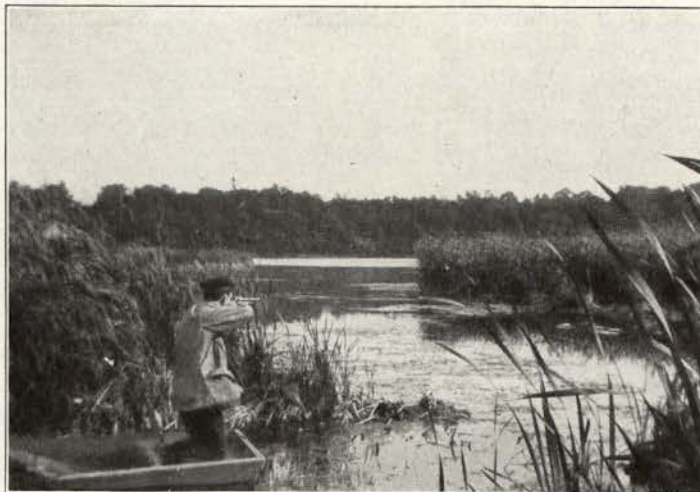

Now comes Mr. T——, who has flunked a good deal during the term and taken a good many cuts.

"Mr. T——! You may write the story of Lessing's life, give a criticism of three of the plays, and translate the second act of "Minna von Barnhelm."

Four hours later Mr. T—— hands in his paper. "Sheddie" looks at it a moment and says, "That will do. You are flunked."

20,000 TO THE SQUARE INCH.

Student—"Bacteria may be called the source of all life." After reading Doc. Goler's milk report one might think so.

MEMBERS OF 1908

Clara Bell Abbott,

104 Post Street, Rochester.

Classical. Honor Roll (1); Class Secretary (1); Secretary Students' Association for Women (2).

"What spare time she hath from conversation she spendeth in putting seasonable questions."

Although by taking thought she cannot add to her stature one cubit, Clara can add considerable to the interest of the classroom by her diligent search after truth. Gifted with a bright mind of rare analytical qualities, she allows no detail to escape her careful scrutiny. Wary, indeed, the professor who succeeds in hiding the flaws of his lecture from Clara's watchful eye! Happy he who succeeds in gratifying her "'satiabile curiosity"! "Cur me querellis examinas tuis?"

Margaret Tyson Applegarth,

216 Culver Road, Rochester.

Classical. @. H. Honor Roll (1); Class Vice-President (1); Editor-in-Chief "Interpres" Women's Board (3).

"Calm as the night."

"Can the leopard change his spots, or the Ethiopian his skin?" No, but Margaret can change her demeanor in the twinkling of an eye. Despite her mild and gentle manner and quiet ways, this Puritan maiden is sometimes given to madcap starts and bursts of revel. Sufficeth it to say that after hearing and seeing Margaret in her hilarious rendition of "O Dry Those Tears" one's belief in the Law of Identity is severely shaken.

Alma Harriet Austin,

10 Arlington Street, Rochester.

Special. A. S. Speaker Class Banquet (1);
Grind Editor "Interpres" Women's Board (3);
Glee Club.

"Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear."

"Let's do something," says ever-restless Alma who, when not studying, demands amusement. This fair representative of the British colonies venit, vidit, vicit by the very wit and charm of her babbling. Naturally sharp, Alma finds cutting second nature. A happy child, who exists on the theory of a long life and a merry one.

"The best of all ways
To lengthen our days,
Is to steal a few hours from the night."

Ethel Josephine Bills,

206 Scio Street, Rochester.

Classical. O. H. Honor Roll (1); Class
President (1); Toast-Mistress Class Banquet
(1); Vice-President Students' Association for Women (3); Treasurer Y. W. C. A. (2); Vice-President Y. W. C. A. (3); Delegate Y. W.
C. A. Student Conference, Silver Bay, 1906.

"She seemed mild and pliable but at bottom was decisive and firm in her convictions."

Ethel's stage career was brief but glorious. In Greek tragedy she excelled, but as demure Priscilla
she certainly made a name for herself. Having sufficiently elevated the stage, Ethel now turns her attention to Y. W. C. A. and other important matters.

"By nature a persevering child."

Katharine Blackford,
404 Alexander Street, Rochester.

Special. Glee Club (1-2); Junior Historical Society (1).

"Allus sociable, perlite and 'greeable you'll find Providin' that you strike her right."

By special request, we shall not brand Miss Blackford a "grind." Suffice it to call her an exceedingly conscientious student. Her translations in "Goethee" and the following extract from her notes in English II. serve to illustrate this characteristic admirably. "Now class hem give it thought Shakespeare open that window please Shakespeare emphasized the a little higher thank you the supremacy of moral law."

Ollie Antoinette Braggins,
42 N. Goodman Street, Rochester.

Classical. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Class Banquet (2); Glee Club.

"Her words are theorems, her thoughts a problem."

What key is Ollie working for? Phi Beta Kappa? You would think so if you saw her curled up in the window seat with her nose buried in circles and triangles and things. Ollie is our math shark and her achievements along that line—words cannot describe them, so let X. Ollie expects to take a special course in math after graduation.

"She has no time to galavant,
She has no time to play."

Edith May Briggs,

Fairport, N. Y.

Special. ©. H. Entered Junior year from Mt. Holyoke College, '08; Y. W. C. A.; Glee Club.

"A dogrose blushin' to a brook aint modester or sweeter."

To be a Rochester student has for many years been the summit of Edith's lofty ambition. Bitter indeed, her disappointment on being sent to Mt. Holyoke instead! At last the far-spread fame of '08 brought this fair maid of Fairport to us. "Slumber-boat" and "Silver Heels" are Edith's specialties when we pull up the rug in the girl's room.

Emily Gertrude Crump,

Pittsford, N. Y.

Philosophical. ©. H. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Class Banquet (1); Second Basketball Team (1); Treasurer Glee Club (2); Y. W. C. A.

"A creature nor too bright or good
For human nature's daily food."

A cheerful soul is Emily—cheerful and good-natured; an industrious worker (just before exams) but, as a rule, "most 'scruciating idle." Anxious to make a good impression Emily posed again and again for her "Interpres" picture, having no less than twenty-two sittings in all. That she paused before the twenty-third is significant.

"'Tis the greatest of folly
Not to be jolly,
That's what I think."

Dorothy Dennis,

15 Upton Park, Rochester.

Classical. ©. T. ©. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Class Banquet (1); Class Secretary (3); Y. W. C. A.

"How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour."

Dorothy suffereth long and is kind; Dorothy envieth not; Dorothy vaunteth not herself, is not puffed up.

Doth not behave herself unseemly; seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil.

"Be good and you'll be happy
But you'll miss a lot of fun."

Carolyn Lillian Emerson,

5 Rowley Street, Rochester.

Philosophical. ©. H. Class President (2); Toastmistress Class Banquet (1); Athletic Association.

"If you're waking, call me early,
Call me early, mother dear."

Prexy (in chapel)—"We should endeavor to rise by our own efforts."

Carolyn (soliloquizing)—"Yes, indeed, there's no telling when something will go wrong with the alarm."

"Many are called, but few get up."

Grace Elizabeth Fowler,
19 Thayer Street, Rochester.

Classical. ©. T. ©. Honor Roll (1); Y. W. C. A.

"My speech is deliberate,
My movements slow,
And thus always leisurely
Through life I go."

Nothing disturbs her calm serenity. Firm in the conviction that she has all the time there is, Grace smilingly pursues her even way.

When confronted with the dilemma, "To cut or not to cut," Grace settles the matter for you with her ever-ready optimism: "I'm sure he'll dictate a new topic."

"Wisely and slow,—they Stumble that run fast."

Beulah Elizabeth Fuller,
83 Adams Street, Rochester.

Special. A. Σ. Second Basketball Team (1, 2); President Y. W. C. A. (3); Vice-President Athletic Association (3); Mandolin Club; Delegate Y. W. C. A. Student Conference, Silver Bay, 1905 and 1906.

"A good companion and as firm a friend."

Beulah never allows study to interfere with the regular work of college and is consequently able to devote her time and attention to athletics, house-parties, Y. W. C. A., musical clubs and the Lyceum. How she manages to avoid flunks and stand in so well with the professors is a mystery explained only by the theory that ever and anon she takes a day off to grind, and then uses the cold-storage system. An all 'round girl—with a weakness for Whittle's. (Further explanation on application.)

Ruth Edith Galloway,

45 Vick Park B, Rochester.

Classical. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Class Banquet (2); Assistant Business Manager "Interpres" Women's Board (3); Business Manager Glee Club (3); Y. W. C. A.

"She knows the great uncles of Moses,
The dates of the Wars of the Roses,
The reasons for things,
Why 'Injuns' wear rings
In their big aboriginal noses."

Ruth has at last attained that happy state of bliss indicated by what may be termed "the class-room smile." Sitting on the ragged edge of uncertainty through some unfortunate recitation, how comforting it is to glance at Ruth, blandly smiling in silent contentment.

Strangers might assign this bliss to ignorance, but experience has taught us that Ruth's knowledge is as expansive as her smile.

Harriet May Hadley,

9 Vine Street, Rochester.

Classical. Athletic Association; Y. W. C. A.; Delegate to Y. W. C. A. Student Conference, Silver Bay, 1906.

"Nature formed but one such man and broke the die."

Despite that unfortunate little affair of her Freshman year, which occasioned so many congratulations but which was so cruelly nipped in the bud, "Arriet" cheerfully pursues the straight and narrow path which she hopes will lead to Africa for "She hath the missionary bee in her bonnet."

Grace Lawrence Hall,

442 Hayward Avenue. Walworth, N. Y.
Philosophical. Glee Club; Athletic Association; Y. W. C. A.

"Not a word spoke he more than was need."

Grace comes from "out to Walworth," where the beautiful scenery and melodious neighing of the cows tend to create a romantic disposition. Much curiosity has been aroused by the weekly visits of a mysterious knight who charges up the campus in a top buggy behind a fiery steed. Grace expects to be a school-ma'am unless—oh Fate!—she weds!

Carolyn Myrtle Heffer,

Irondequoit, N. Y.

Classical. ©. H. Speaker Class Banquet (1);
Class Vice-President (2); Glee Club (2); Athletic Association; Y. W. C. A.

"Her lively looks a sprightly mind disclosed."

Like sunshine on a dancing rill, this pert miss drives away all gloom. Myrtle's a clever child (Professor Gilmore gave her 98) and even-tempered, though apt to be annoyed when the bell has rung and someone has mislaid the hand-glass.

"How shall we your true love know from your other ones?"

Francoise Helen Klein,

726 Jay Street, Rochester.

Philosophical. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Class Banquet (1); Second Basketball Team (2); Class Vice-President (3); Athletic Association.

"Look at me and be sensible."

This subject calls for serious treatment. Far be it from us to deal lightly with it. The saying, "When in doubt go to 'Franswaz'," has become proverbial. Her knowledge along any line, be it mathematics, biology or short-hand, is intensive, extensive and distributed. When a Freshman, observing Francoise's habit of crystallizing her concepts by self-communication, made bold to inquire the reason Francoise explained: "I always like to talk to a sensible girl and I always like to hear a sensible girl talk."

Alicia May Morey,

Fairport, N. Y.

Classical. Class Treasurer (3); Leader Glee Club (3); Mandolin Club; Y. W. C. A.; Student Volunteer Band; Delegate Y. W. C. A. Student Conference, Silver Bay, 1906.

"Continual comfort in her looks,
The lineaments of gospel books."

Every Thursday at four-thirty Alicia may be found in the Girls' Room, baton in hand, leading the Glee Club with great "veal and zigor." "One, two, three, four—one—well, when are you going to begin?" Alicia takes all the high notes herself with great ease and evident satisfaction; and much of the club's success is due to her tireless energy and angelic patience. Verily she is

"Scarce of earth nor all divine."

Florence Eloine Mosher,

325 West Avenue, Rochester.

Philosophical. Glee Club; Secretary Athletic Association (3).

"I chatter, chatter, all day long,
My words flow like a river;
Some people stop once in a while,
But I go on forever."

Strange as it may seem this child's verbal activities cease abruptly at the door of the class room. When the name "Mosher" is called Florence usually gives herself the benefit of the doubt—not because she doesn't know the lesson—Oh my, no! Tut! Tut!

Marion Dix Mosher,

325 West Avenue, Rochester.

Philosophical. Honor Roll (1); Y. W. C. A.

"I sit at my ease
And do as I please."

The preserver of the class is "Mosher, M. D." This degree was doubtless conferred because of her capacity for warding off draughts in History Class. What sticketh closer than a brother? Marion can tell you. M. D.+F. E.=the Mosher girls, alias the Siamese Twins.

"Two minds with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one."

Jessie Naomi Owler,

18 Evergreen Street, Rochester.

Philosophical. ©. T. ©. Treasurer Athletic Association (2); Athletic Association (1-2-3); Basketball Team (1-2-3); Assistant Manager Basketball Team (2); Manager Basketball Team (3); Business Manager "Interpres" Women's Board (3); Y. "She heads a business venture
Which shall every want supply."

There is a saying, "If you want anything done well, do it yourself," but when '08 wants anything well, it is handed over to Jessie. Her enthusiasm in following up "ads" for the "Interpres" is, no doubt, derived from her enthusiasm in chasing the basketball, for Jessie has the distinction of being the only Junior on the team, and the best all 'round athlete in college.

"How high can Jessie jump?" quoth he,
Echo answers 'a+b'."

Helen Marguerite Persons,

79 S. Goodman St., Rochester.

Philosophical. ©. H. Class Secretary (2); Glee Club (2); Vice-President '08 Reading Club (2); Glee Club (2); Athletic Association.

"How far the little candle throws its beams."

In early childhood "Miss Parsons" was often severely admonished thus: "Children should be seen and not heard." So well was this admonition heeded that even to this day Helen seldom emerges from her Sphinx-like silence.

"Miss Parsons" is by no means a firm believer in the law of cause and effect, having often known herself to take several cuts a day for no reason whatsoever.

Verna Frances Robinson,
173 Maryland Street, Rochester.
Special. Mandolin Club.

"In action faithful and in honor clear
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gained no title but who lost no friend."

This sounds like an epitaph but it isn't. Some people don't have to wait till they're dead to have nice things said about them. Verna's sterling worth and quiet humor go far to make her what she is—the best liked girl in college.

"Bobbie's" little foibles, such as insisting that "ancient astronomers were right when they said the sun goes 'round the earth," are looked upon by her friends with good-natured tolerance.

Marian Salisbury,
49 Vick Park A, Rochester.

Classical. Honor Roll (1); Speaker Association Banquet (2); Class President (3); Statistical Editor "Interpres" Women's Board (3); City Scholarship (1-2-3).

"Wearing all that weight of learning lightly like a flower."

Anticipating our intention to call her "a very nice girl," Marian intimated that such a grind would be exceedingly disagreeable to her. A dilemma confronts us! To say she isn't a nice girl would be "unjust." To say she is, would obviously be "inexpedient." We have referred the matter to learned logicians.

"It made her weep and sob and sigh
A speck or two of dust to spy."

Lillian Stoneburg,

437 Frost Avenue, Rochester.

Classical. A. S. City Scholarship (1-2); Glee Club; Leader Mandolin Club; Musical Council (3); Y. W. C. A.; Student Volunteer Band. Entered Sophomore year from Class of '09.

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow;
They toil not, neither do they spin."

Airy, fairy Lillian came to us heralded as East High's math shark, and during the early part of her course bade fair to become famous. Owing to circumstances (of which, for obvious reasons, we shall say nothing) she began to philosophize thus: "How hollow a thing is fame!" Ceasing to grind, she now prefers to accumulate knowledge by the absorption method. Lillian persists in evading all questions as to her solitaire.

"Lassie, you're but young yet, wait a bit."

Ruth Tappan,

56 Chestnut Street. Sherman, N. Y.

Philosophical. O. H. Honor Roll (1); Class Treasurer (1); City Scholarship (1-2-3).

"Few things are harder to put up with than the annoyance of a good example."

Although normal in other respects, Ruth has never taken a cut since coming to college. In spite of this fact she has always found time to devote to the subtle art of fussing, upon which she is an authority.

With special privileges from Mrs. Rich, Ruth conducts her classes in the English alcove every afternoon, and is always ready to diagnose and classify any rare specimen that comes to her attention. Slow to make up her mind but

"Thims my noätions Sammy, Whereby I meäns to stick."

Special. ©. H. Speaker Association Banquet (1); Speaker Class Banquet (2).

"For I must love some one, really,
And it might as well be you."

When called upon to recite, Sue smiles graciously upon the professor, just to show she bears him no ill will for being called upon. This at once puts him at his ease and is calculated to result in better standings.

Sue is a maiden of crushes—the seismograph of her heart registering serious disturbances every few days and slight vibrations at all times.

Harrye Justine Tiffany,

165 Gibbs Street, Rochester.

Philosophical. Entered Sophomore year from class of '07; Toastmistress Class Banquet (1); Speaker Class Banquet (2); Toastmistress Association Banquet (3); Basketball Team (1); Glee Club; Art Editor "Interpres" Women's Board (3).

"For it has always been my way
Never to do till to-morrow
What was assigned for to-day."

Among the many great advantages afforded physical research in the new Eastman Building it is understood that sufficient delicate apparatus has been installed to enable scientific investigators to solve the baffling problem: "If the ordinary tuning-fork produces 256 vibrations per second, how fast can Miss Tiffany produce sound if unrestricted."

"Peggy" quotes Milton as follows:

Behold our Chauncey Depew! Under ordinary conditions extremely adverse to fluency of speech,
Ethel responds readily to intense stimulus in the nature of food and is consequently in great demand
at all banquets where she takes a most active part.
As Disraeli would put it: "We become intoxicated
with the exuberance of her verbosity."

THE SOPHOMORES

Almost two years of our college life have passed—two years full of golden memories which Time may dim but never extinguish. For there are wondrous things written of the memories of '09 girls, deeds so illustrious and famous that it hardly needs us to recount their glory.

In our infancy we were accounted bold and much too wary for "greensters." Yet even while we were reprimanded by our well-meaning sisters, we were silently admired and envied by our accusers. It is always wise to stand by and for one's convictions and in so doing lies our great success.

Would that the walls of Anderson Hall could speak and save us the embarrassment of recounting our own deeds! Would they not tell how we started for and finally arrived at the Hallowe'en Party where our enemies, the Sophomores, expected to tame us?

Could they not also tell of nectar-smelling "spreads," when our '09 banners were stolen and how the Sophs attended the class football game bareheaded and coatless? Coats were better than banners that day! But perhaps the most famous of our deeds is our Freshmen banquet where we broke the tradition of giving an "afternoon tea" and gave a regal banquet in right royal banqueting hours. Most pleasantly did the banquet proceed, graced by the presence of a captive, one of the cannibal '08. As for athletics! We are leaders, for this year we have four on the basketball team and the captaincy.

While blue and white wave o'er us
 For honor we will strive
 We're loyal to our colors,
 This class of naughty-nine.

THE FRESHMEN

In the year of 1492 Columbus discovered America. In the year 1906, forty-three girls entered the Freshmen class of the University of Rochester. Old Christopher certainly felt no prouder when he stepped upon terra firma, than those girls when they first went beneath the portals of old Anderson Hall.

The Heavens had chosen unto themselves that day to replenish the land with water, and so it was that the college had a very dismal atmosphere. It was under these distressing circumstances that a few sighed, wiped away some tears and almost decided to go back that very night to Batavia, Medina, Penn Yan, respectively. Then, amid all the sorrow, the friend of the Freshmen loomed up—"Sheddy." At his forced (?) smile all thoughts of "home and mother" vanished. Since that time, the Freshmen have found that some of the best times of the year are to be spent at "240."

In everything—even exams—the Freshmen have enjoyed themselves and unanimously agree that next to being a post graduate, to be a Freshman is the ideal existence.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

Dear Susie:—

It indeed grieves me to think that I could not find time to write you before this late date. At any rate, I know that you will be glad to hear about some of my college experiences. When I first arrived in the city, last fall, I boarded the wrong car, and the conductor let me off at the state buildings. I thought at first that I had reached the University but inquiry proved that one of these structures was the penitentiary, another the insane asylum and the third the poorhouse. Now, I think that some college men will finish their education in these places. I left three cents in my overcoat pocket and someone deliberately stole it. Three cents would buy a pair of shoe strings and an all-day sucker. Evidently all the people in the college do not have their mental equilibrium. When the freshmen get excited they yell something about bing banging Ben and ring ranging Rochester. And when a certain professor is aroused he talks about "Mrs. Wiggs" and "Sunny Jim." O dear me! I think that I shall be in the poorhouse before long. They charged me five dollars for a little, red ticket which admits me to athletic contests. Don't you remember how, in Weedsport, we could go to the circus and see the clowns and baby elephants for twenty-five cents. Then they only wanted ten cents extra for all the lemonade two persons could drink in five minutes.

The other day, some young fellow asked me to come around to a "smoker." So I went to a senior and said, "What is a smoker?"

"A smoker," said he, "is one who smokes."

"Well," said I, "how do I get there?"

"The quickest way is to go out and play football," answered the Senior. Now, Susie, what do you suppose he meant? Don't you think that he was only joking?

They talk a lot about fraternity rushes. I've heard of "bargain rushes" and "rushing the milk can," but what this had to do with college was impossible for me to understand. So I went to my "Webster's authentic unabridged revised and enlarged" to look up the word. This is what I found: Rush—"To recite a lesson or pass an examination without an error." Well, I suppose these college boys gather together in their fraternity houses before the examinations and study hard so as to pass them without making any errors. I think this is a nice way to do.

There is a professor in the college the boys call "Sheddie." Maybe its because he never sheds his hair. Some senior told me on the quiet that "Sheddie" had just enough jokes to last four years and only those who take post graduate courses hear them over again. Now, I've only been here seven months, but to tell the honest truth I think that I've already heard some of these jokes twice. Another person told me that these witticisms were 1848 vintage and that, being the eldest son, he inherited them from his grandfather before the war. Any way its hereditary and he can't help it.

Susie, dear, perhaps you will be glad to know that I'm going out for the baseball team this spring. The manager told me that if I worked hard he would give me a good position. It seems that there is great competition between the students to determine who shall put the advertising posters in the down town stores. It's an honor to do such work and I am practically assured of the job. Moreover, the manager said that if I showed capability perhaps I could be team mascot in a few years.

Now, don't be jealous. I got lonesome the other night so I took a girl to a basketball game. She washes dishes in the two cent lunch room and she said that she would like to help clean up Columbia. My, but it was a rough contest. One player slapped another on the wrist. I didn't dance after the game because I sprained my finger in the gymnasium the day before while exercising with a dumb-bell.

The boys say that I'm doing well and will get there if I keep on. I hope that you are in good health and all the other farm animals. As I must study my Elocution lesson I think I will close the letter with love to all.

Your lingering love,

E. P.

TIMOTHY.

STUDENT'S ASSOCIATION FOR WOMEN

OFFICERS FOR 1906-1907

President, Marion Melville, '07

Vice-President, Ethel Josephine Bills, '08

Secretary, Isla Slocum, '09

Treasurer, Claribel Ruth Jennings, '09

The Students' Association for Women was organized in 1900 to include all women students of the University. It has for its object the promotion of all interests which may further the welfare of the student body. Business meetings are held on the first Wednesday of the month, and officers for the following year are elected at the May meeting. The annual banquet of the Association is held in the winter term, and in the spring term the Association entertains the faculty and friends at a reception.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

OFFICERS FOR 1906-1907

President, Beulah E. Fuller, '08

Vice-President, Ethel J. Bills, '08

Secretary, Ethel A. Turner, '08

Treasurer, Edna L. Parker, '09

The Young Women's Christian Association of the University of Rochester was organized January 20, 1905. It has now a membership of fifty-one, and forms an active, influential factor in the lives of the students. Its purpose is to develop the religious side of character and to train the women for active Christian work in the world.

Devotional meetings are held every Tuesday noon for twenty minutes, led by the members of the Association or by outside speakers. A Bible Study Class has been conducted during the Fall and Winter terms under the charge of Miss Grace Ehrhardt of the City Y. W. C. A., the subject being "The Harmony of the Gospels."

The Y. W. C. A. in the past year became affiliated with the Young Women's Christian Association of the United States of America. It is in close relation with the City Association, college membership admitting to membership in the City Association, with all its privileges. Mrs. Caroline Atwater Mason, as chairman of the Student Department, represents the college Y. W. C. A. on the Board of Managers of the City Association. At the summer conference at Silver Bay, Lake George, the Rochester Y. W. C. A. was represented in 1906 by eleven delegates.

THE BOYS CLUB

In November, 1906, the University took up a new line of work in the shape of a Boys' Club. This is located at 38 Exchange Street, in the heart of the city, and draws the boys from the toughest section of Rochester. The total registration of boys for the five months of active operations, November to April, was 675. About forty of the college students came with fair regularity to help during the winter. The well-equipped gymnasium was largely used; some industrial classes were conducted, as in basket-weaving and scrap-book making; and the game room provided warmth and amusement for a great many boys. Altogether, the work seems to have entirely justified itself; and the outlook for its even more successful continuance next year seems bright. The financial affairs of the club are under the management of a board of directors, consisting of alumni of Rochester and business men of the city; while the active operations of it is in the hands of the students themselves, under the supervision of the following committee:

Theodore A. Miller, Chairman

STUDENT VOLUNTEER BAND

of the University of Rochester

Inaugurated April, 1906

This is a local branch of the International Band of Students who have made the definite resolve to become foreign missionaries and who are fitting themselves in their college course toward that end. Band meetings are held weekly. All who may be interested in missionary endeavor are earnestly asked to talk with any member of the band, and these members also will try to seek such persons.

The Senior Historical Club is an organization of members of the Senior Class for the purpose of studying the Constitutional History of the United States along lines similar to those followed by the Junior Historical Society. The members all make a general study of Political and Constitutional History, while each member makes a special and more or less exhaustive study of a single administration, referring back to the original sources whenever possible. The meetings of the club are conducted after the order of the German Seminary, and are held every Saturday. Following is a list of the members and the topics they presented in 1907:

CHESS CLUB

OFFICERS

President, A. N. Jones

Vice-President, Carlton F. Bown

Secretary and Treasurer, R. J. Fowler

The interest in chess has taken a fresh start. This is in no small measure due to the completion of the lounging room where the chess tables have been set up. At present the interest of the members is centered upon the correspondence match with the Cornell University Chess Club.

THE FRESHMAN DEBATING CLUB

Early in the second term a meeting of the Freshmen class was called to form a debating club. Eldredge was elected president, and Hayes secretary of the club, which was to be open to all Freshmen. Two debates were held by the club at the Alumni Gymnasium, one taking place January 25th and the other March 1st. Communication was then opened with Alfred University with regard to an intercollegiate debate. At about this time, however, Eldredge left college, leaving the club without a president. As yet one has not been appointed. However, a debate was arranged with Alfred for May 11th, the Freshmen being chosen by selecting the best from two trial debates, each consisting of six men, three on a side. Those chosen were: R. A. Kenyon, A. Lowenthal, I. Schoenberg, and H. Lee alternate. The question was: Resolved, That government ownership of railroads is a practicable solution of the railroad problem in the United States. The decision was in favor of Rochester.

HIS FIRST CONDITIONS

Boo—
 Hoo—
 Can it be true?
 A paper blue—
 Conditions two.
 I'll cut my throat,
 Or I'm a goat.
 Oh, to be a dog,
     Or frog,
     Or log!
 What!—Ho!—a pirate on the main
 I'll be, and swim in gore,
     And rave through Spain.
     No more
     I'll bore
     My brain.
 Wine, woman, and song,
     All day long.
     I'll pray
 Like thunder, and go to chapel thrice a day!
     Whee!—
     Gee!—
 It might have been conditions three.
     Well—the blow has fallen,
     Ain't no use bawlin',
         Or squallin',
         Or yawlin'.
     I tell you
     What I'll do,
         (Hang the muss)
 I'll loaf over to Sibley and cuss,
     And fuss!
     And fuss!!
     And fuss!!

THE CAMDEN-OAKLEY TRACK MEET

The warm breath of early summer was on the hill and in hollow; the sun from his high seat in the azure sky glared brilliantly into an atmosphere rendered stifling by the perfumes of myriads of blossoms. Griff Chambers ceased his perspiring efforts and fell heavily upon the sheltered green to enjoy the luxurious repose that only the possessor of a pair of long, tired legs is heir to.

Griff's critical eye followed his companions of the Camden Track Team around the dusty quarter-mile oval—a retreating galaxy of pounding spikes, colored suits, and lithe limbs.

A lark pursued its darting flight across the collegian's path. He turned to follow it with his eye, and found himself staring straight upward into—the face of a young lady.

A tall, slender girl she was, graceful and blue-eyed—an heiress whose only claims to wealth were her glorious golden hair and smile, disastrous to the hearts of the callow youth. Her ripple of laughter, over's Griff's manifest astonishment at her unexpected appearance, burst like music upon his ear.

“Well, Miss Cavendish,” he exclaimed, as an expression of counterfeit dismay, not untouched by pleasure, distorted his face, “Why don't you scare a fellow to death and be done with it! Where on earth have you dropped from?”

“O, nowhere in particular,” she answered, carelessly, eyeing the runners from afar, as she sat down by Griff's side.

“Doing well, aren't they?” he ventured after a moment of silence.

“Very—but I know a young man who does better.”

This mischievously, and not a little to Griff's embarrassment, made evident by uneasy wiggles of the body and deprecatory hand movements.

“You're a flatterer,” muttered the champion, smiling.

“Not at all,” she asserted, frankly. “It's your fleetness of foot that makes me—well, you know—that I like.”

Griff did know, and, on the strength of it, proceeded to “fuss” away the next half hour with admirable assiduity,—a most heinous crime, when we consider that his Alma Mater was, at that very time, holding a most closely-contested track meet with Oakley College at the far side of the Camden Oval.

“Well, goodbye,” sighed Griff. “I must be going. It's almost time for the mile.”

“Goodbye, Griff.” Then an after-thought. “Say, Griff, look out for that new man Eschomes. The Rowley boys were telling me yesterday that he's a wonder. See that he doesn't beat you," she said in a voice that had grown strangely hard.

"He shan't do it, if I know it," boasted Griff. "Goodbye, Sue."

"Jiminy!" he cried, watching narrowly her disappearing figure, "she'd do it—she'd do it for two cents! It's up to me."

However, confident in his faithful training, he bounded back to the scene of action, where the air was filled with shouts, and barking yells, and pistol shots, and desperate scrapings of cinders, and manifestations of enjoyment born of a clear, still day, a smooth track, and clean sport; back to the amphitheatre flanked by rival grandstands, jammed with folks in "Sunday close;" where the awful alternate, regular, rise and fall of Camden green and Oakley orange was like the rhythmic dash of breakers on a shore.

At this juncture, the meet was concluded with the exception of the momentous mile run,—momentous both to Griff and to the rival colleges, for, as predicted by the knowing ones, all the most zealous efforts of mind and limb up to this point had resulted in a tie with forty points to the credit of either side. Little Pixley had romped in, an easy winner in the hurdles, to the ecstasies of Camden; and "Pig" Parks of Oakley had captured the shot-put with ridiculous ease; but all had been a "foregone conclusion." The result of the mile run was as yet "something to speculate over."

It was to be a match race between Griff and the Oakley "marvel," Dan Eschomes. Everybody had his breath well bated. Already the lean, muscular Griff, clad in his trim suit with its "C" on the breast was "champing at his bit" on the starting line. He espied a breach in the crowd near at hand.

Out of the gap, strode three men. On the left was Harrison, the Oakley trainer; on the right was Professor Dimiter, also of Oakley, a tall, stalwart, mysterious, gray-bearded man and a keen-eyed, clear-brained child of science.

Griff, prompted by the buzz that had sprung up on every side, deigned their companion a perfunctory glance, caught a glimpse of something small and black, started foolishly in spite of himself, and then steadied his blurred vision. Out of the mist danced—the much heralded Eschomes. There was no mistaking that length of limb, that breadth and hugeness of shoulder, which but illy matched a short, scrawney trunk, that shriveled, insignificant head and its Ethiopian profile surmounting all.

Professor Dimiter, with face defying scrutiny, was giving his charge some crisp advice; Eschomes was nodding and grinning vacantly.

Griff tried to banish whatever vague misgivings he may have felt at the presence in this capacity of Professor Dimiter, an open enemy of athletics, tried to dissipate all thoughts of ulterior motives, and succeeded with the help of Sue's smile in the crowd.

"On your mark!"

The pair toed the mark.

"Get set!"

Two bodies crouched and stiffened.

"Bang!"

Cheers and college yells. Away they bounded.

Griff took the lead at once with a beautiful, swinging stride, toes turned in, knees up in front, arms straight at sides, everything like clock-work. Eschomes fell in behind with a short, swift, muscular step. It appeared to the confident Griff as an old story—another easy victory.

The first quarter he with difficulty restrained himself from tearing off at top speed; so powerful was the reserve force quivering in his every fibre. It was glorious to leap over the firm turf and drink in great gulps of fresh air. He looked over his shoulder. Eschomes was falling farther behind but still pegging away.

At the half, some feelings of fatigue, and Eschomes holding his own in admirable style.

Another dizzy, pounding, agonizing round, and Griff's breathing shortened to gasps; his heart began to pound furiously. As from a long distance he heard the injunction: "One more lap, fellows," almost drowned by cheers.

He glanced back and saw that black countenance drawing nearer and nearer; he looked ahead and saw a white, anxious face in the buzzing crowd. In spite of a desire to lie right down, he strained every nerve for the heart-breaking finish. To lose—he dared not do it.

Then the indefatigable, leering, little Eschomes forged ahead in a superhuman sprint. Griff spurted madly with distorted face. Everything was green; his throat was liquid fire; his legs persisted in striding out sideways, instead of in front. In spite of all he could do, the white shirt that he saw through the mist grew dimmer and dimmer.

The end was right ahead. Eschomes turned his head and Griff saw a score of grinning faces dancing before his brain. He shut his eyes and lurched instinctively across the finish line amidst the wildest sort of demonstration of which he was totally unconscious. After that, he staggered and fell into the arms of a few faithful ones. He had lost the race—lost the meet for his college—lost everything.

"Four-seventeen! A record! Hurrah!"

GREEK PHILOSOPHY

Professor Kendrick (in Greek 7 on Plato's Phaedo) after a long discussion on various philosophical themes:

"And now we come to the question, "What is the soul?" This is one of the profoundest of all questions, in fact THE profoundest of all questions, and naturally one of the hardest to answer. Various modern philosophers have tried their hands at it and have thought that they had found a satisfactory solution, only to find that some flaw in their reasoning had invalidated their whole discussion. In such a difficulty we turn naturally to the Greek philosophers; they, if any, can answer this question. Plato discusses it at length in his Phaedo and other works, and with his aid I think the question can be answered. What, then, is the soul? We can best define the soul by telling what it is not. In the first place, the soul is not located in one's foot, We will all admit that. Moreover, it is not a Bartlett pear or a stick of candy in a baby's mouth. Having now settled this perplexing question as to the nature of the soul, we will in the remaining five minutes of the division take up to-day's lesson."

A NEW VERSION

In spite of words of sage or preacher,
In spite of all the threats of teacher,
In spite of every living creature,
It's my belief, firm as macadam,
A lemon Eve first handed Adam,
And made the poor man think he had 'em.

IN QUANTITY

Miss Klein (reading history notes in class)—"Goodness, I've any amount of this stuff,—pages and pages. You don't want any more of it, do you?"

AND AFTERWARDS?

There is a professor named Moore
Who is never a bit of a bore;
While he teaches us French
We lean back on our bench,
And our minds out the window do soar!

OUR NEW BUILDING

Probably no event of the college year has been of greater significance to the University than the opening of the new Eastman Building. Long and patiently had the students waited for the time when the new structure should be completed, but untoward circumstances delayed the hoped for hour and it was not until the beginning of the Autumn term that the first classes began work in the nearly finished laboratories. About a month later, when the steamfitters had screwed in the last check-valve and the shavings had been swept out of all the corners, the formal opening was held.

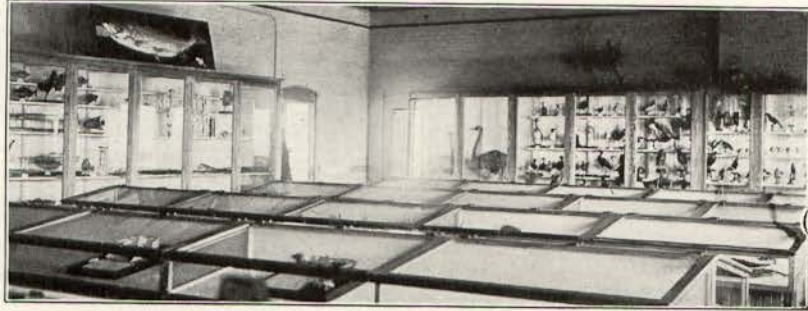

On the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth of October the doors were thrown open to the public, and the occasion was honored by the presence of two notable guests of the college, Professor Edward L. Nichols of Cornell University and Professor William T. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On the first day, Professor Nichols delivered a lecture in the new physical lecture room, his subject being "The Larger Functions of a College Laboratory. The topic was discussed in an interesting and most instructing way before an appreciative audience. On the following day, the biological lecture room was filled by an equally enthusiastic audience, as Professor Sedgwick spoke upon "Biology in the Service of Man," touching especially upon Rochester's problem of sewage disposal. Mayor Cutler and other prominent men of the city were among the listeners at these lectures. On the evening of the last day the Eastman Building was the scene of an opening reception given by the President of the University and others to those interested in this, the latest addition to the group of buildings which adorn our campus. The laboratories, museums, and classrooms were thrown open to the inspection of the visitors, and many a word of appreciation was heard of the magnificent equipment for scientific study, which was the result of long and careful planning on the part of architect and faculty.

It is a question whether another college of the size of ours possesses a laboratory building so admirably fitted for scientific study and research along the lines of physics and biology. Many expensive machines and a large amount of new apparatus have been provided in both departments. A splendid set of electrical motors and dynamos is found upon the basement floor and adjoining this is a thoroughly equipped machine shop. The Rear-Admiral Harkness bequest has added to the physical department many rare and valuable instruments also. In the upper two floors we find an increase in the facilities for both elementary and advanced biological study. The lecture room is provided with a Zeiss epidiascope which projects upon a screen objects in their natural colors, illustrations from text-books, or rare prints and photographs. Beside this is a combination stereopticon and projection microscope. This department has also a new micro-photographic apparatus besides many instruments of precision for fine experimental work.

The students of the college have not failed to realize the opportunity which has been thus placed before them. Never before have so many students taken courses in these branches as have attended classes in the new building during the past year. There is every evidence of increasing interest being awakened among the undergraduates in scientific subjects which points to a time in the very near future when the present building will be inadequate to the demands made upon it.

As a result of the expansion in the departments of physics and biology a larger number of students have been impressed as assistants than previously. In the lower regions, Howard F. Roberts, Morris Wilder and E. F. Barker have set up a triumvirate, while McNamara attempts to keep the new linoleum looking just as good as new. Beneath the roof, Norman L. Stewart, "Dick" Hunt, and Howard P. Barss have kept the polly wogs alive, while S. D. Smith and R. B. Eddy have acted as alternates in cleaning out the smell of pickled cats.

This, then, is the history of the opening of these new laboratories; here is given a slight insight into the admirably complete equipment; and here is given, also, just and due recognition of the services of those students who are aiding in keeping the building in the most serviceable order.

NOT ALWAYS

Prof.—“Miss Tiffany, is a triangle sweet or not sweet?”

Miss Tiffany—“That depends upon what it is made of, Professor.

“I shall wed whom I please,”

Said the belle to the beau,

Though she sat on his knees;

“I shall wed whom I please!”

“Good!” he cried, with a squeeze—

“Good! You please me, you know!”

“I shall—wed—whom—I please,”

Said the belle to the beau.

RECOLLECTIONS

In the dust-hidden street,
Through sweltering heat,
'Midst the trample of feet,
    Mem'ry calls,
When the day's war is won,
As the loitering sun
'Thwart the pasture doth run,
    Fancied halls,
    By a falls,
    Ivied walls,
    Deeds redone.

By the blaze 'neath the trees,
'Cross the breadth of the seas,
On the moist ev'ning breeze,
    Visions hold,
On the mountain's green crest,
With the darkening west,
In the soldier's stern breast
    Hearts of gold,
    In their fold,
    Friendships old,
    Souls at rest.

WORD FROM UNCLE BILL

So many queries have been heard this spring concerning "Uncle Bill's" health, and a desire to hear about him, that I wrote to him and asked him to send something of interest to the students which might be published in this issue of the "Interpres." Professor Morey very kindly sent the following message in response to this request.

H. deB. BARSS.

Coldwater, Mich., April 30, 1907

Mr. H. deB. Barss, Rochester, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Barss—I have received your kind letter containing your welcome words of sympathy and also expressing the desire that I write something for the students, to be published in the "Interpres." The first part of your message I appreciate very much; but whether in my present circumstances I can say anything that would be of interest to the students is a matter which in my own mind is open to doubt. But however uninteresting may be the subject-matter of what I say, I hope it will at least show that I am not insensible to the warm expressions of regard and regret which my unavoidable absence from college has prompted you to make.

I can assure you that my absence from college during the present term has occasioned me quite as much regret and disappointment as could possibly have been felt by the members of my classes. No hours of my life have been more enjoyable than those which I have spent in the class-room; and to be deprived of this pleasure, even for a single term, is like breaking a link in the chain of one's existence. I have often thought that the life of a college instructor is growing more and more enviable as the years pass by. I have no doubt that this is due to the gradual transformation of college life that has taken place within a comparatively recent period, and also to the new zest which has become infused into the student body. I can remember when in the olden days the tie which connected the student's bench and the professor's chair was not always regarded in the highest degree as a sympathetic bond,—when the professor seemed to take delight in exposing the limited knowledge possessed by the embarrassed student; and the student on his part seemed to take an equal, if not a more malicious, delight in disturbing the equanimity of his official superior. But, happily, all this is changed—at least in Rochester. The student has come more and more to possess the spirit of an earnest scholar, and the instructor to feel that his function is that of a sympathetic guide and helper. I can assure you that it is a delight to live in these latter days of university life.

You have shown your personal interest in me by inquiring after my health and asking me to give an account of myself. This is very kind of you. But you must know that a vacation is, or should be, largely a period of recuperation. My career is, therefore, much like the "nation which has no history"—pleasant but uninteresting. I am breathing the pure air of the country, and, I trust, gathering fresh strength for the new educational campaign which is to begin next year. I am exceedingly sorry that I shall not again meet the present Senior class as a body of students; but I expect that the present Juniors will prove to be men of metal and women of worth like their predecessors.

Owing to the lack of that inspiration which comes from the presence of wide-awake students, I must confess that my thoughts have been very "few and far between"; and I fear that their value is even less noteworthy than their number. But in the brief intervals of intelligence which have occasionally dawned upon my vacuous hours, I have been reflecting upon the proper place of physical culture in a young man's education. This may have been suggested to me by my own consciousness of waning strength. If I were permitted to state my educational creed in this desultory talk I should say that I believe that the field of a liberal education should include alike the body, the mind, and the conscience. But lest you may think that I am about to enter upon a pedagogical disquisition, I shall set your mind at rest by simply saying that I am not. I shall, however, take the liberty of making a statement, and then of asking a pointed question of those students who show their loyalty to the college by purchasing a copy of the present "Interpres."

The statement I wish to make is contained in two propositions: (1) that the present methods adopted for the cultivation of a sound and vigorous mind have never been surpassed in the history of education; and (2) that the cultivation of an enlightened conscience is largely ignored in our present system, or at least is entirely inadequate to meet the severe demands of modern life. The question I wish to ask is distinct from these two points, but yet is somewhat related to both. My query is this: Whether our present system of athletics—with its intercollegiate contests and all that—is best suited to develop that sound and symmetrical body which was the aim of the Greek gymnastics, and the training of which should be made subservient to high intellectual culture, and also closely connected with the development of an enlightened conscience. This may, of course, be an open question. Be that as it may, it seems to be a fact, whether fortunate or unfortunate, that the prevailing system of athletics depends for its character more upon the public opinion and intelligence of the student body than upon any influence which the college authorities are able to exercise. It therefore behooves every student to make up his own mind as to the extent and limits which should be assigned to physical training in the development of a complete manhood. The body may properly be said to be the physical basis of manhood. It should, therefore, be guarded from every cause of disease and depletion, and maintained in such a degree of health and vigor as shall make it an effective instrument of intelligence, and also kept under moral control. How far the present system of athletics is adapted to the accomplishment of these ends, it is for you to decide.

I think that no other college can show a better organized system of athletics or one better adjusted to the requirements of a sound education than that which exists at Rochester; and every student should see to it that it is not perverted to other aims than those which it seeks legitimately to accomplish. So far as athletics hold their proper and proportionate place among the means adopted for manly growth, they are a blessing. But so far as they tend to encroach upon the intellectual work of the college or are conducted upon methods inconsistent with the strictest morality, they are, of course, to be condemned. How far, therefore, they are a blessing and how far they are the proper subject for condemnation, it is possible for every high-minded and conscientious student to judge for himself. I know that there are young men who can say that the physical training they have received in college has given them a new hold upon life, a new vigor, a new ambition, a new zeal for study, and a greater power of self-control. I also know of young men of bright and active minds who have told me that their failure in college was due to the disproportionate amount of time spent upon the athletic field; so that athletics had become something else than a means of physical culture, and had become really an obstruction to their legitimate college work. But more than this, I know of young men who confess that their first promptings to trickery, to foul play, and to brutality came to them on the athletic field, in their passion to win regardless of methods. All this is simply to illustrate the force of my creed; namely, that the training of the body should be subservient to the training of the mind, and that the training of both body and mind should be subordinate to the training of the conscience. There was, perhaps, never a time when the world was in greater need of well-trained men—men of strong bodies and of vigorous health, men of keen minds and of sound judgment, and also men of high moral ideals with an enlightened sense of duty to themselves and to others, in short, with what has been aptly termed an "enthusiasm for humanity."

I am afraid that the tone of this letter may not be entirely in harmony with the general spirit of the "Interpres," but I trust that it will be at least an evidence that I am still interested in all the efforts that the students are making to prepare themselves seriously for the activities and duties that await them in the future.

Yours very sincerely,

WILLIAM C. MOREY.

BRILLIANT SAYINGS FROM "UNCLE BILL'S" CLASSROOMS

One of "Uncle Bill's" maxims—"Most people come from somewhere."

Burr in history class—"All France is divided into duchesses."

Wooden to "Bill"—"My thoughts are too deep for utterance."

Prof. Morey—"Mr. Bancroft, what about the Rivers and Harbors Bill?" Bancroft—"What's that, Bill?"

One of Liz Wilder's plurals—"Justice of the Peaces."

OUR ALMA MATER

Beside the river Genesee,
Where crystal waters fall and flow,
And where the mills sing merrily,
And fairest trees and flowers grow,
'Tis here our Alma Mater lies,
Endear'd to us by many ties;
Endear'd to us by many ties,
Our dear old Alma Mater.

She boasts no ancient corner-stone,
Nor founder of illustrious name,
But by her modest worth alone
She rivals those of greater fame;
And oft in laurels of a son
Her meed of patient toil is won,
Her meed of patient toil is won,
Our dear old Alma Mater.

We love her campus, broad and green,
Where monumental arbors stand
Beneath whose spreading shade is seen
The marble print of memory's hand;
And like the vines that clothe her walls
Affection lingers round her halls,
Affection lingers round her halls,
Our dear old Alma Mater.

And when our college life is past,
And we have gone our several ways,
A backward glance we'll often cast
Upon these dear departed days,
And with our classmates oft will be
In fancy by the Genesee,
In fancy by the Genesee;
And our dear Alma Mater.

The Rochester Business Institute

is a high grade commercial school, with a national reputation for efficiency.

¶ The facilities of this school for thorough and adequate preparation for the responsible duties of accountants, office managers, salesmen, amanuenses, secretaries, etc., are unexcelled.

¶ College graduates are more and more coming to realize the splendid openings which amanuensis work affords. The private secretary to the men of this country who are prominent in education and politics must of necessity be college bred; and the only supplementary training required is the mechanical ability to write shorthand and operate the typewriter. Such positions, for which young men and women are daily being sought, present so many advantages that it would be difficult to enumerate them, but the chief ones are: 1. The congeniality of the employment. 2. The opportunity for advancement, through association with influential people. 3. The highly remunerative character of these positions.

¶ For many years the Rochester Business Institute has made a specialty of preparing commercial teachers, in which field it has been so successful that calls for graduates from its Teachers' Training Department, to take responsible and remunerative positions in high schools and business schools, come from all parts of the United States.

¶ During the year 1906 the number of these calls was more than three times the number of the candidates the school was able to recommend. The initial salaries offered ranged from $800.00 to $1,500.00 per year, college graduates being either preferred or required for the higher grade positions.

¶ A special ten weeks' summer course for teachers and college men and women will begin June 17. Candidates for this course, unable to enter on the opening date, may be registered June 24 or July 1, though the earlier date is recommended.

¶ Tuition for the ten weeks, if paid on entering, $35.00. If paid monthly, at the rate of $15.00 per month of four weeks.

¶ Correspondence solicited. Visitors always welcome. Prospectus and catalogue promptly mailed.

One at a Time

We are offering Everybody's Library, which, we venture to say, is the best and most comprehensive uniform edition of standard books ever offered at so moderate a price.

The volumes are of compact and convenient size; printed on an opaque paper of excellent quality, and bound in cloth or leather as desired. Fifty new volumes have recently been added, bringing the number now available, to two hundred; eventually it will cover the whole expanse of literature complete in one thousand volumes.

We are offering the volumes at a special price at the rate of 38c per volume in cloth, and 70c per volume in leather, postage 6c extra per copy. Among some of the new sets are Grote's History of Greece in twelve volumes; Macaulay's History of England in three volumes; Motley's Dutch Republic in three volumes, and Thierry's Norman Conquest in two volumes.

Call and see the books or write us for a descriptive circular.

Our athletic and sporting goods department is fully equipped with everything for the athlete or sportsman. Imported Wares, Kodaks, Stationery and Toys.

Toroids

are the new lenses designed to meet every demand and correct all weaknesses of the eye. It is reasonable that their peculiarly curved surface will not only correct errors of refraction, but give the greatest field of vision.

They are truer to nature, as they are curved like the cornea of the eye, and there are none of the disagreeable reflections experienced with the ordinary (flat) lens.

Write Your Records in Our Loose Leaf Books

Whether you are a professor or a student, you have some kind of records to keep—Cash Account, Expense Account, Ledger, Library Indexing, Record of Class Work—and there is no method of doing this so convenient, so simple, so easy to keep up, so inexpensive, as our Loose Leaf Record Books. They are suitable for keeping the records of the college, itself.

Our 50c Record Outfit, described here, is more especially designed for pocket use, while the Dollar Outfit, also described, is for desk use. Select the Outfit you prefer, and send us the amount in Cash, Money Order, Draft, Check or Postage Stamps. After trying the Outfit for 10 days, you may return it to us in good condition, if you find it does not enable you to keep your records better than your present system, or any other Card Index or Loose Leaf System on the market, and we will return your money.

Check below the assortment of printed record forms, (we carry them all in stock in two sizes, 8 in. x 5 in., and 3 in. x 6 1/4 in.) you wish included in your Outfit.
