CALENDARS.

Instructions to Editors.

The Master of the Rolls desires to call the attention of the Editors of Calendars to the following considerations, with a view to secure uniformity of plan in the important works on which they are engaged :—

He is anxious to extend, as far as is consistent with proper economy and despatch, the utility of the Calendars of State Papers now publishing under his control: 1st. As the most efficient means of making the national archives accessible to all who are interested in historical inquiries; 2nd. As the best justification of the liberality and munificence of the Government in throwing open these papers to the public, and providing proper catalogues of their contents at the national expense.

The greater number of the readers who will consult and value these works can have little or no opportunity of visiting the Public Record Office, in which these papers are deposited. The means for consulting the originals must necessarily be limited when readers live at a distance from the metropolis; still more if they are residents of Scotland, Ireland, distant colonies, or foreign states. Even when such an opportunity does exist, the difficulty of mastering the original hands in which these papers are written will deter many readers from consulting them. Above all, their great variety and number must present formidable obstacles to literary inquirers, however able, sanguine, and energetic, when the information contained in them is not made accessible by satisfactory Calendars.

The Master of the Rolls considers that, without superseding the necessity of consulting the originals, every Editor ought to frame his Calendar in such a manner that it shall present, in as condensed a form as possible, a correct index of the contents of the papers described in it. He considers that the entries should be so minute as to enable the reader to discover not only the general contents of the originals, but also what they do not contain. If the information be not sufficiently precise, if facts and names be omitted or concealed under a vague and general description, the reader will be often misled, he will assume that where the abstracts are silent as to information to be found in the documents, such information does not exist; or, he will have to examine every original in detail, and thus one great purpose will have been lost for which these Calendars have been compiled.

As the documents are various, the Master of the Rolls considers that they will demand a corresponding mode of treatment. The following rules are to be observed:—

1st. All formal and official documents, such as letters of credence, warrants, grants, and the like, should be described as briefly as possible.

2nd. Letters and documents referring to one subject only should be catalogued as briefly as is consistent with correctness. But when they contain miscellaneous news, such a description should be given as will enable a reader to form an adequate notion of the variety of their contents.

3rd. Wherever a letter or paper is especially difficult to decipher, or the allusions more than ordinarily obscure, it will be advisable for the Editor to adhere, as closely as is consistent with brevity, to the text of the document. He is to do the same when it contains secret or very rare information.

4th. Where the Editor has deciphered letters in cipher, the decipher may be printed at full length. But when a contemporary or authorised decipher exists it will be sufficient to treat the cipher as an ordinary document.

5th. Striking peculiarities of expression, proverbs, manners, &c. are to be noticed.

6th. Original dates are to be given at the close of each entry, that the reader may know the exact evidence by which the marginal dates are determined.

7th. Where letters are endorsed by the receivers and the date of their delivery specified, these endorsements are to be recorded.

8th. The number of written pages of each document is to be specified, as a security for its integrity, and that readers may know what proportion the abstract bears to the original.

9th. The language of every document is to be specified. If, however, the greater part of the collection be in English, it will be sufficient to denote those only which are in a different tongue.

10th. Where documents have been printed, a reference should be given to the publication.

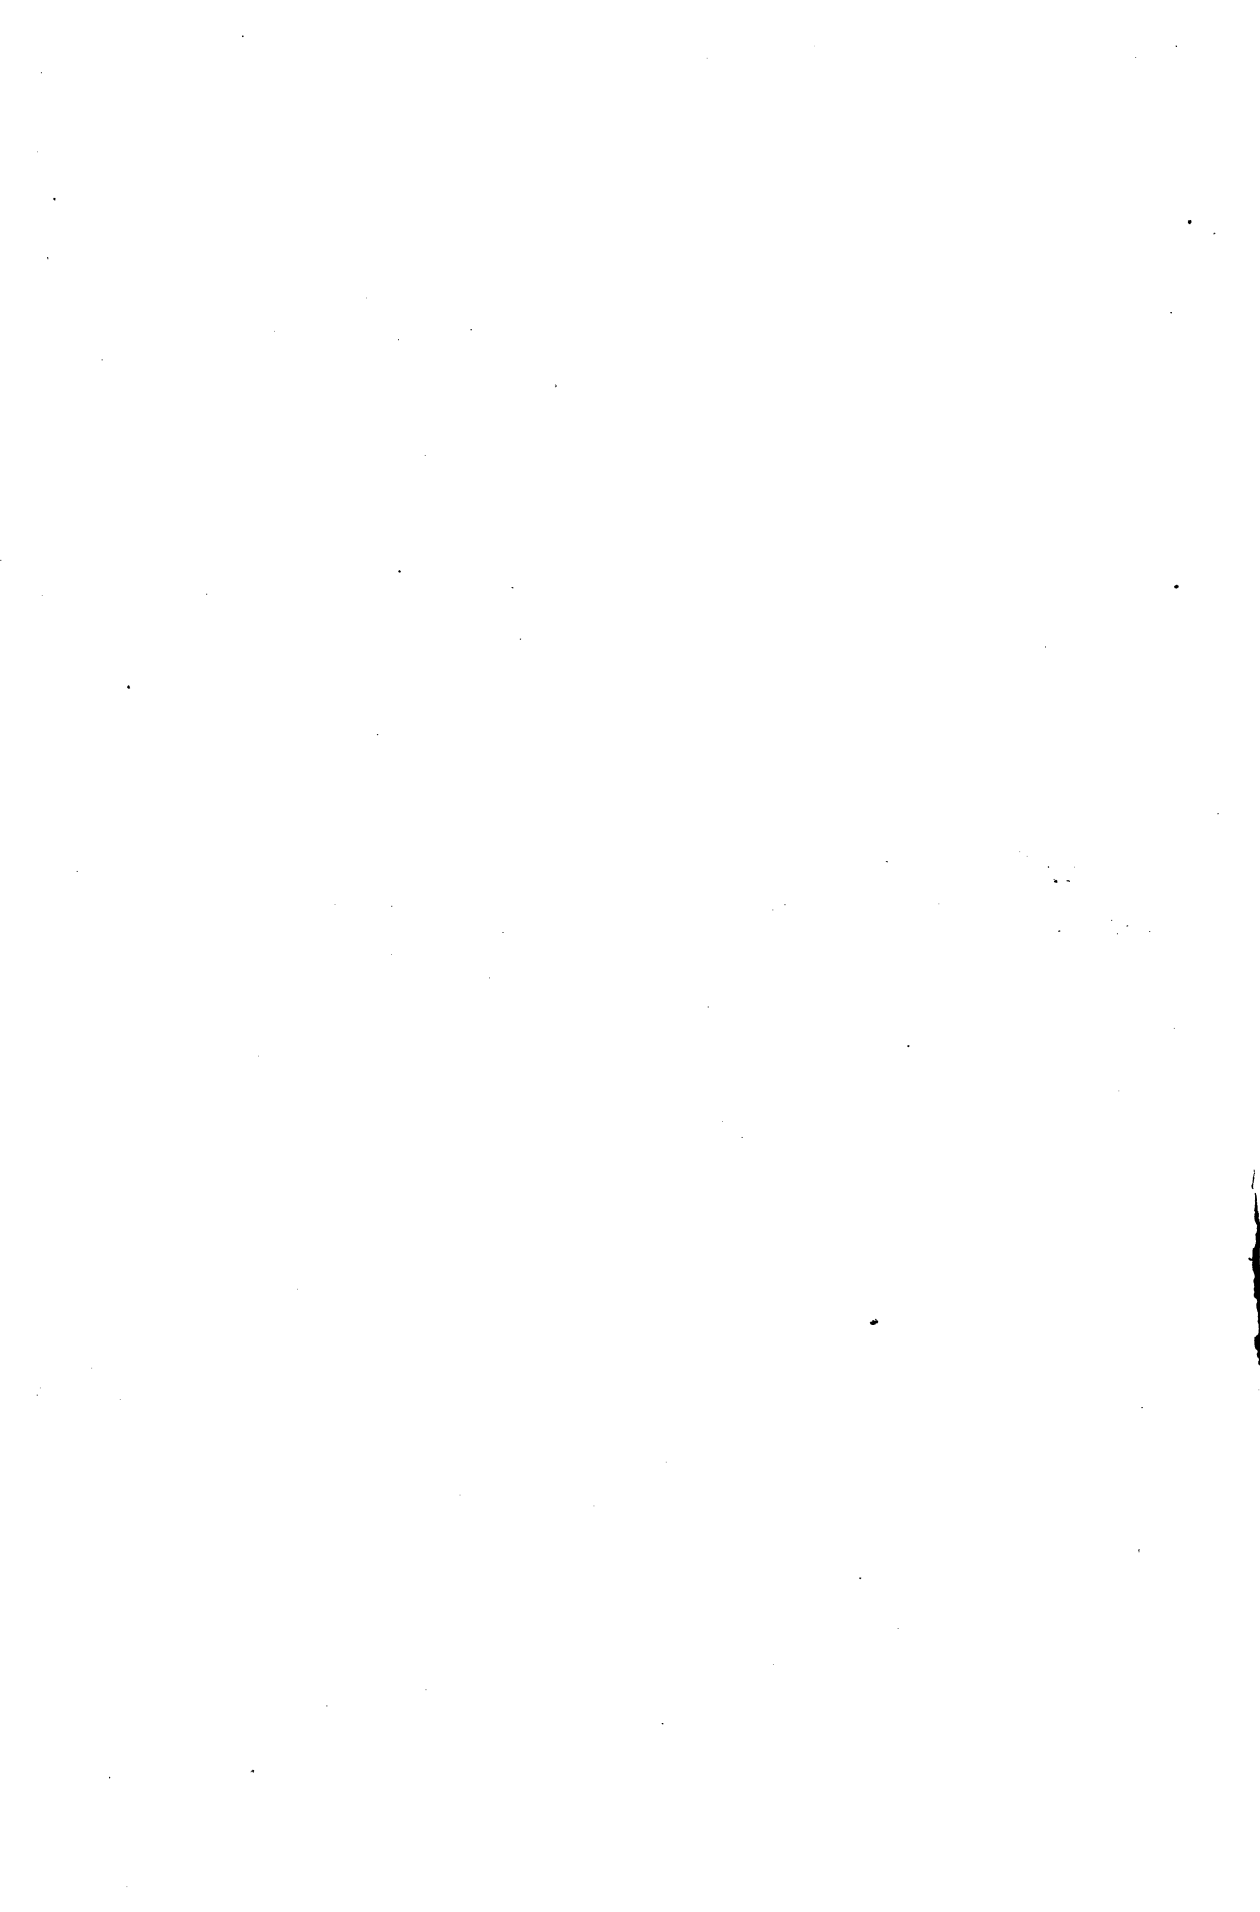

11th. Each series is to be chronological.

12th. The Prefaces of Editors, in explanation of documents in the volume, are not to exceed fifty pages, unless the written permission of the Master of the Rolls to the contrary be obtained.

* * Editors employed in foreign archives are to transcribe at full length important and secret papers.

P R E F A C E.

THE present volume of Calendar of State Papers contains the documents for ten months, from January to October 1651, being the closing portion of the year of the second Council of State, which ended on February 15th, 1651, and almost the whole of the third Council, which only sat from the 17th of February to the end of November 1651. The constituents of this latter Council differed considerably from those of the two first, Parliament having ordered that fifteen of the members should be fresh men.

We miss from the third Council the Earl of Salisbury, Lords Denbigh, Fairfax, Howard, and Lisle, Colonels Hutchinson, Edmund Ludlow, Henry Martin, and Herbert Morley; Alderman Pennington, Alex. Popham, Walter Strickland, and several less prominent members. On the other hand, we have for the first time Major-Generals Harrison and Skippon, Sir Wm. Brereton, Bart., Sir John Bouchier, Sir John Trevor, Rob. Goodwin, Sir Thos. Widderington, serjeant-at-law, and Alderman Fras. Allein, and Nich. Love, both eminent financiers. The last four of these were frequently present. The tables of the attendances of Council for the time of their appointment, from February to November 1651, will be found at the end of this preface.

The Council met 249 times, and the average attendance was 19·18, being a slight advance on the 18·3 of the second Council. The average attendance at Parliament during the same period was only 50·4, and almost all the 41 members of Council were also members of Parliament.

The preceding volume of this Calendar recorded the acceptance of Charles II. by his Scottish subjects, and the uneasiness occasioned to the English Government by his proximity, and by the movements in Scotland, which found sympathy in so many quarters in England.

This uneasiness continued and increased. On Jan. 13th, 1651, the Committee for Examinations, whose duties were very onerous, reports many designs on foot for embroiling the commonwealth in a bloody war, carried on by desperate persons in several counties, who correspond with enemies both in England and Scotland, and advises that the estates of such persons should be confiscated without mercy, and part thereof given to the discoverers.

Persons released on recognizances were ordered to be re-secured if considered dangerous, and the Act for confinement of Papists and delinquents was prolonged (pp. 12, 24). All public meetings on pretence of recreation, as horse racing, hunting, hawking, cock-fighting, foot ball playing, &c., were prohibited, lest they should afford an opportunity for the gatherings of conspirators, the ripening of their counsels, and the breaking out of rebellion; and if needful, the militia were to be called out to suppress them (pp. 12, 82, 114, 121, 172, 286, 294, 304). An Act was also suggested for continuance of the county militia for some time longer (p. 24).

Steps were taken to secure arms wherever they were supposed to be accumulated, lest they should fall into royalist hands (pp. 25, 87), and individual delinquents of consequence, who were considered dangerous, were sent into confinement, e.g., the Earl of Antrim, Mr. Lutterrel of Somersetshire, Capt. Hen. Stone, Col. Phil. Jackson, &c. (pp. 109, 114).

All pictures, statues, and arms of the late royal family, were sternly ordered to be removed from ships, streets, &c., and the statues broken to pieces (p. 25). The dispersers of treasonable papers were sent to Newgate (p. 65). A soldier, who found a seal bearing the impression of the King of Scotland's arms, and brought it to the Council of State, received a reward of 10s. (p. 73); and Parliament was requested to authorise the sequestration of estates of Englishmen living abroad, if they were known to repair to, or correspond with the "King of Scots" (p. 69).

The governors of all forts and garrisons were sent to their respective charges, and were not to remove without special permission, and Council requested an order of Parliament to remove to a distance from all forts and places of strength those who disowned the present government (p. 78).

As soldiers were frequently found deserting their colours, and those in Scotland returning home, vigorous proceedings were taken against them (pp. 82, 84). Those who could give good security to return at once to their regiments were discharged, but the remainder were kept in custody and subjected to martial law, and their horses and arms forfeited (pp. 98, 99).

The safety of London and Westminster, involving that of the Parliament and Council, was also carefully provided for. All dangerous persons were removed 20 miles from town (p. 44). The Militia Commissioners of London, Westminster, and Southwark were requested to continue in pay the horse which they had raised for defence of Parliament and city, on the ground that the enemies are carrying on their designs with diligence and secrecy, and have only been prevented hitherto by a watchful eye upon them, and by having forces always in readiness (pp. 70, 131). The commissioners were also required to report the state of their troops, both horse and foot (p. 92).

As the danger threatened was from the north, by invasion from Scotland, bodies of horse and dragoons under Major-Gen. Harrison were drawn northwards as early as Feb. 4; power was given to their commander to call out the militia forces when requisite, and the Militia Commissioners were ordered to give him all assistance (pp. 34, 97, 98).

In the absence of Major-Gen. Harrison, who usually commanded the troops about town, Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood supplied his place (p. 103), and Parliament was requested to give an order for 5,000*l.* for strengthening the guard at Westminster with well affected men, on the removal of the forces northward; the money to be raised on the estates of Lord Craven and other delinquents (p. 14).

The companies from the midland counties were concentrated upon Lancashire, and a party of horse and foot was quartered in Lancaster, to secure the castle, and to be on guard against the numerous disaffected persons in that county (p. 87).

About this time intelligence was forwarded from Scotland by Lord General Cromwell, of a perilous plot carried on by gentlemen in Cheshire, Lancashire, and North Wales (p. 83). At first, pains were taken to suppress as much as possible any widespread information of the conspiracy (p. 86); but the preparations needful to keep the movement in check rendered such caution nugatory. Letters were sent in all directions, to sundry Militia Commissioners, and to Cromwell, Lambert, and Desborow, to take steps necessary for the prevention of the designs of the "restless enemies." Vessels were also sent to the Isle of Man, then under the sway of the Earl of Derby, to prevent the landing of troops from that island, in Lancashire (pp. 87-89), and General Blake was appointed, with a squadron of good force, to guard the north-eastern coast (p. 108). Col. Rich was also sent, with 1,500 horse and dragoons, to see to the safety of the eastern and midland counties (p. 102).

The conspiracy was thus for the time put down, and many prisoners taken, and sent to Lancaster Castle and Liverpool (p. 103); but still apprehensions were entertained of the Earl of Derby's marching forces into Lancashire. The Militia Commissioners wrote to beg that their own troop of horse might not be removed from the county, and were answered that a brigade would be sent to strengthen their troops, should any enemy appear, but that their chief care must be to disarm the disaffected and dangerous inhabitants, and send the arms to Liverpool (p. 108).

It was considered that there should be a strong standing force in England, ready to march rapidly on command to any threatened point; Council therefore obtained from Parliament an order to raise 3,000 horse and 1,000 dragoons, out of the militia forces of the counties which had not contributed horse and dragoons to the army in Scotland, to be kept in pay for six months, at an estimated cost of 120,000*l*. This was done on 7th April (pp. 133, 134). A few days later, Major-Gen. Harrison was formally appointed Commander-in-Chief in the North, and his forces were strengthened by some of these horse and dragoons, and by such troops as could with safety be withdrawn from the northern garrisons. Sir Arthur Hesilrigge had charge of Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, where he had long exercised almost plenary power in the settlement of delinquents' compositions (pp. 156, 157).

Strict instructions were also issued to all the Militia Commissioners of England and Wales,—who were anew required to swear fealty to the present Government,—for preserving peace and preventing insurrection (pp. 159–161), and well-affected persons were encouraged to provide volunteer horses, and mount them with trustworthy men, to be ready on occasion (p. 284).

These precautions seemed effective, and there was a temporary lull in military preparation, until on August 7th, the Council of State received the startling intelligence that the Scottish army, with Charles Stuart at its head, was marching upon England (p. 306). Cromwell's army was at once recalled from Fife, and ordered to march as quickly as possible on the rear of the Scots' army (p. 306); Hesilrigge was to raise the forces of the four northern counties, and Col. Harrison, with 4,000 horse and dragoons at Berwick, was to be ready for its van (p. 307).

The Council of State wrote to the Militia Commissioners of the midland counties that the Scots, having given up all hope of doing anything in Scotland, have deserted their country, and have marched into England as their last resource (p. 307), but that they are supposed to have only 11,000 troops (p. 317), and to rely on the conflux of traitors here.

The governors of garrisons were to be specially watchful, as the royalist party would not fail to do their utmost to gain over places of strength, and especial care was to be had about Liverpool and other places in Lancashire (pp. 308, 310), and also about Hull, of which Lord Fairfax was governor (p. 324.)

A committee of the Council of State was appointed to wait on the Common Council of London, inform them of the invasion, and move them to do what became them at such a time for the common safety, wherein their own is included; suggesting that they should raise some considerable forces, to be available in case of the dreaded contingency of the Scottish army slipping by the English forces, and making its way to London. They were also exhorted to do their best for the safety and quiet of the city, and for prevention of any correspondence with the King of Scots (p. 315). A proclamation prohibiting such correspondence was published with trumpet and drum in London and Westminster, and posted up in the chief places of the city (pp. 325, 327).

Meanwhile the Scottish army steadily advanced. Cromwell, finding it difficult to bring on the body of his army as quickly as was wished, despatched Major-General Lambert, with 3,000 horse and dragoons, to march night and day until they came up with the enemy, whilst he followed with as much speed as he could (p. 317).

The Council of State wrote to the Militia Commissioners of the south-eastern and midland counties, to get ready at once all the horse and foot soldiers at their command, to join Major-General Harrison. They also suggested to Parliament the passing of orders that all who in any way stirred up insurrection, by dispersing the papers or proclamation of the Scottish King, should be tried by a council of war, and put to death for treason; whilst any who discovered such offenders should have a grant of one third of their estates (pp. 321, 323).

Precautions were also taken about the disposal or wearing of arms; householders ordered to give an account of their lodgers, and made responsible for the conduct of their children and servants; and all horses in London, Westminster, Southwark, &c., except cart horses, were seized for the service, tickets being given to the proprietors to ensure payment, in case they should be lost or spoiled; on these horses Col. Gibbons' regiment was mounted, and sent to join the army (pp. 321, 324, 331). Horses for the dragoons were seized, but these were ordered to be purchased, at a cost not exceeding 6*l.* each (p. 330).

A body of 8,000 foot and 2,000 horse was hastily gathered together from Kent and Essex, for the protection of Parliament, and it mustered in good force at Barnet (pp. 325-328). Council reports to Cromwell, on August 15th, that the city is in a very good and complying temper, ready to do all as directed for the public and their own safety, and that the party of the Scotch King will be afraid to show themselves (p. 328).

On August 15th, orders were sent to the Militia Commissioners of Staffordshire, Cheshire, and Lancashire, to break down bridges, stop passes, and do anything in their power to hinder the progress of the Scotch army (p. 330). The Council of State received news that on the 12th, the Scots were at Warrington, and on the 18th they were supposed to be between Preston and Wigan. Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison had by this time joined forces, and their united strength was about 12,000; but it was feared they would be attacked before Cromwell could join them, as on the 12th he only crossed the Tyne at Newborn, four miles from Newcastle, on the 14th reached Branspeth, and Carrick Bridge on the 16th.

Troops from the south were therefore hurried forward. A rendezvous was appointed at Daventry on the 23rd, for the militia of counties Leicester, Rutland, Northampton, Warwick, Oxford, Lincoln, Bedford, Huntingdon, Worcester, and Buckingham (p. 340). But when further news was received of the Scots' progress southward, the place of the rendezvous was changed from Daventry to Northampton (p. 344). Another rendezvous was appointed at St. Alban's on the 26th, for the troops furnished by the eastern counties, Berks, Surrey, Sussex, Hants, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Cambridge, and Kent, but afterwards changed for Dunstable. Another also at Gloucester for the militia of South Wales, Monmouth, Hereford, and Wilts (p. 346).

The King wrote from Stoke on August 17th, asking aid from Sir Thos. Middleton, and on August 18th sent an order to Nantwich for the town to raise 3,000*l.* before 5 o'clock the next day, for providing his army with shoes and other necessaries.

In the numerous letters sent out almost daily by Council, there is an amusing discrepancy between their expressions of contempt for the enemy, and of confidence in a speedy and easy victory, and their intense anxiety to strain every nerve to meet the emergency, and especially to prevent the Scotch army's reaching London: between their assurances of the utter want of sympathy in almost every quarter with the royalist movement, and their strong repressive measures against all persons suspected of disaffection.

About this time, rumours were afloat that the Scotch army thought of retreating to Scotland. This was not at all desired by an enemy whose forces, if they could have time to unite, were numerically so superior, and orders were sent to General Lambert and Major-General Harrison to be on the look-out to prevent by all means any northward movement (p. 347).

On August 19th, the Scotch army reached Stone, the following day arrived at Lichfield, and on the 21st were in Worcestershire, slipping to the westward of the advancing troops; and though Cromwell, by vigorous forced marches, had already reached Manchester, that was many miles distant. The crisis became more and more anxious. The remoter counties, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall, were ordered to have troops in readiness to send northwards should the enemy succeed in getting on much further (p. 351). Orders were sent at the same time to counties Derby, Nottingham, and Leicester, to do all in their power to advance Cromwell's pursuing army, and to mount the foot, if needful, with horses. The militia of the midland and eastern counties were to be in readiness to march to a rendezvous which would be appointed by Lambert, who had reached Coventry, or by Fleetwood, who was at Oxford.

Meanwhile Council ordered two of its own members, Scott and Salwey, to hasten to the commanders, with instructions to communicate the views of Council, confer with them as to the best employment of the forces, and return speedily. Council wrote on August 23rd, in a tone of reproach and distress, to Lambert and Harrison, who either could not come up with the enemy, or were reluctant to do so and risk an engagement, until backed by Cromwell. Council reminds them that the enemy grow in reputation by the distance of our forces from him; that the country is open to his spoil, and that towns and passes will be in danger of surprise. That he marches as fast as he pleases, and draws toward the places of his greatest hopes; and the further he marches, the further our foot may be behind (p. 361).

One of these places of greatest hope was the city of Worcester, whose attachment to the royal cause had long been suspected (pp. 96, 157). Accordingly no sooner did the King's troops show themselves before it than the gates were thrown open, and the army cordially received.

As soon as this news reached London, orders were at once sent out for strengthening all the important towns westward, upon which it was thought Charles would be likely to advance. Amongst these was Bristol, which was not well fortified. Orders were sent to the Militia Commissioners of Somersetshire immediately to send supplies of arms, money, horses, and ammunition, together with as many troops as they could muster, to Bristol, and to seize any disaffected persons there. Ten companies of foot from the West were marched through Exeter to Bristol; assistance was called in from Wiltshire, Gloucestershire, and South Wales; 500*l.* was ordered the Governor for incidental charges, and any volunteers that would enlist were to be welcomed, and formed into companies (pp. 364–366). Similar orders were also sent to Gloucester, where the Mayor and aldermen were commended for their good affection, and 200*l.* was sent to them for volunteers and incidental charges (p. 368).

At length the much desired junction took place between the forces of Cromwell—after a protracted and weary march, in which they had been obliged to drop their weaker or sickly brethren on the road (pp. 370–373) and had worn out most of their draught horses—and those of Major-Generals Harrison and Lambert; and now the one object was to come up with the enemy.

On August 27th, the Council of State sent a letter to all the Militia Commissioners. The Council evidently feared that the rapid approach of the Scots would cause alarm, and would impress the inhabitants of the neighbouring counties with exaggerated ideas of their numbers. This letter was to assure the Commissioners of the strength of the English forces, and to point out that little disaffection to the commonwealth had been shown in any quarter; and that the Scots, having met with no support, were now betaking themselves to lies and false news as their last resource. It concludes with an order to take into custody all persons spreading false reports of the advance or advantage of the Scotch army, or corresponding with Charles Stuart or any of his partisans (p. 377).

The tidings sent to France,—where the anxious royal family at the Louvre were only too ready to grasp at anything hopeful,—were that the King was possessed of Manchester and Winchester; and that parties were declaring for him in Suffolk and other counties. The young Duke of York leaped for joy at the news; Lord Gerard and other royalists began to prepare to go over. The French Court, poor as it was, spoke of sending munitions and money, and serious fears were entertained of the landing of foreign troops on the coasts of Kent and Sussex, which might partially divert the forces from the more serious task of encountering the royal army (pp. 362, 377). Ships were therefore ordered hastily to the Downs, and ketches sent across to France and Flanders, to bring tidings of what was doing in those parts (p. 378).

Having taken all the precautions deemed possible and necessary, on August 28th, Council writes to Cromwell (p. 381) that they have used their utmost diligence to bring together what forces they could, as holding it their duty to serve Providence in the use of means, and not to tempt it. Having done that, they rest not upon an arm of flesh, but upon Him to whom it is equal to save by many as by few, even upon their God, who being engaged in this great cause, the contrivement of His infinite wisdom, He will bring it to that good end He has appointed in His own good time, for He will work, and who shall let it? and use such instruments as He pleases, for so much of his work, and for so long as seems good to His wisdom, to the designs whereof they desire to be subservient in all things, without respect to themselves or to their concernments, as their duty to their God and their country binds them.

The first decisive action was the defeat in Lancashire of a body of Charles's adherents, who were growing daily more considerable, under the Earl of Derby, (p. 395), for which, on August 29th, Parliament orders thanksgivings in all churches the following Sunday (p. 383). To strike terror into the royalists, a commission of martial law was sent to try the prisoners taken in Lancashire, and any royalists from Worcester who might fall into the hands of the commonwealth (p. 384).

On Sunday August 30th, Cromwell reached Warwick at the head of the united forces. Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood had advanced to Banbury with his body of supplementary troops, and an encounter was considered very near. By the 1st of September, they arrived before Worcester, then occupied by Charles. Cromwell's army was before the town on the east, and Fleetwood's on the west side of the river (p. 398). A bridge of boats was begun, just above the confluence of the Teme and the Severn, that the two Parliamentary armies might communicate (p. 407). Guards were set on all the passes, and preparations made for investing the town.

On September 3rd the battle of Worcester was fought. The account given by the Council of State was, that the fight began at 2 p.m., raged on both sides of the town, and continued until dusk. The slain were reported at 4,000, out of which only 100 were of the Parliament army. Some of the royalist cavalry fled, and were chased by the Parliament horse, the great fort was taken, and the Scots were utterly routed (p. 409).

An account of the battle by a royalist states that the King's army numbered 12,000 men when it arrived at Worcester, but that the neighbouring counties rising in arms for the commonwealth instead of for the King, as he had expected, the Parliament forces rose to 40,000, or at least 36,000 men. That the city was neither fortified nor victualled, but that the King considered he could not in honour leave those who had so willingly received him, to be plundered by the enemy. That he often sent out strong parties to surprise the enemy, but always failed because they were so watchful. In the battle the King behaved very gallantly. With his own regiment and the Duke of Hamilton's, he charged in person, and broke a foot regiment, and drove back a part of the horse, but was at last overpowered, and his cavalry fled, notwithstanding his efforts to make them stand. The King was closely pursued, and had to abandon his horse, but he climbed the half-raised mount, and so encouraged the foot that the enemy retired with loss; perceiving however that his troops were worsted, he drew them within the walls, and then took a fresh horse, and rode out with the intention of rallying the cavalry, to drive the enemy's foot from the walls; but in vain, for nearly all the officers were dismounted or slain, and no persuasions would induce the remnant of the horse to charge. "What became of His Majesty afterwards I know not, but God preserve him, for certainly a more gallant prince was never born," says the anonymous writer of this account, dated from Chester Castle, where he was lying prisoner on September 17th (pp. 436, 437).

These papers give no details of the hairbreadth escapes of the fugitive King, but many of the vigorous attempts to capture him (pp. 419, 440). The officers of all the ports were specially cautioned to diligence in searching for him, and reminded of the reward of 1,000*l.* offered for his apprehension. He was described as a tall man, above two yards high, his hair a deep brown, near to black, but it has been cut off, as is said, since the battle, and he is to be expected under disguise (pp. 474-477).

All these efforts however failed, and to the joy of his mother, the fugitive reappeared at the Louvre, "but very " sad and sombre for the most part, that cheerfulness, " which against his nature he strove to show at his first “ coming, having lasted but a few days, and he is very “ silent always.”

Thus writes a royalist after Charles II. had reached Paris, and told his own tale; he laid the whole blame of the failure upon the Scotch Presbyterians, who heaped indignities upon him, made him act against his own liking, giving him no powers till almost the very end of all; and though he highly lauded the loyalty and affection of his own party in England, complained that he was not allowed to correspond with them, to concert measures for a general rising. Still he was led to expect that 7,000 armed men would join him when he reached Lancashire, and that his army would increase as he went on; otherwise he would never have thought of entering England.

He considered that the Scots were to blame during the battle itself; that out of 12,000, only 5,000 fought as they should; that the Duke of Hamilton behaved with fidelity and gallantry, but Leslie and Middleton he accused of want of courage and conduct, if not of treachery. On that account he dared not trust himself with them, and the large body of horse remaining with them, after the battle, lest they should betray him, if attacked by pursuing parties.*

His sense of the indignities put upon him by the Scots was so strong that when the Duke of Orleans told him it was rumoured that he had gone back to Scotland, he said aside, “ I had rather have been hanged.” †

But though the King and some of his chief adherents slipped away, others were less fortunate, and were taken prisoners at or after the battle, and against these the vengeance of Parliament was steady and stringent.

* The letter alluded to, dated November 1, 1652, will be found not in the present volume, but on p. 2 of its successor.

† Letter of Nov. 1, alluded to before.

It was supposed that a number of the enemy would try to escape to London, and bands of horse were ordered to keep a look out upon the highways to stop them. The prisoners were brought to trial. Parliament ordered the Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Lauderdale, Derby, and Cleveland, Col. Massey, Capt. Bradshaw, Sir Timothy Featherstonehaugh, and the Mayor and Sheriff of Worcester to be made examples of (p. 423).

Death from wounds received in the battle delivered Hamilton out of their hands, but a request for leave to remove his body to Scotland was refused, and he was ordered to be buried at Worcester and nowhere else (p. 455). Derby, after an attempt to escape, was retaken and executed (p. 473). The proceedings against the remainder were less rapid, and are therefore not within the scope of the present volume.

Of the common prisoners, those who were English were decimated, and the tenth man shot, and it was proposed to inflict summary vengeance on some of the Scots, for cruelties said to have been exercised upon the English taken by them, but there is no proof that this was carried out. A number were disposed of to the adventurers for draining the Lincolnshire fens, but on penalty of death to any who ventured five miles from the place where they were set to work (p. 471), and on security in 5*l.* per man, that not more than 10 per cent. of them should return to Scotland within a year (p. 472). Some were sent off to the English plantations in America; some to be used with caution for service in Ireland; some were handed over to masters who would give security for their peaceable conduct; and the remainder, after lingering some time on a starvation allowance of 2½*d.* a day,* at York, or at Tothill Fields and Chelsea College, were dismissed, on their own or each other's security, not to act against the commonwealth of England (pp. 431, 438, 441, 443, 447, 458, 463, 471, 475, 480).

A few brief notices must suffice to indicate other notabilia in the present volume.

The literary notices are but scanty. The books and MSS. at St. James's Palace, which had been left in such neglect as to be a prey to rain and dust, and also to rats and mice, were ordered to be transferred to Whitehall, to the keeping of Council, and were placed under the charge of Commissioner Whitelock (pp. 468, 469).

On the death of Thomas May, the Parliamentary historian, a committee was appointed to consider of some person fit to succeed him. This was in January 1651, but the stirring events which soon intervened prevented further proceedings—history was being acted, not written—and nothing more transpired until October 1651, when Cromwell, Whitelock and Lisle, the two Commissioners of the Great Seal, Major-General Harrison, and Sir Gilbert Pickering, were formed into a committee “to consider “ of some fit person to write the history of these times,
“ and to take the care and oversight thereof; and to consider likewise of a fit encouragement for the person “ or persons so employed, and how it may be raised and “ paid.”

The articles of the surrender of the Scilly Isles, on March 23rd, 1651, by Sir John Grenville, who held them for the King, to Admiral Blake and Col. Clarke, are given in full (pp. 214–217). The isle of St. Mary, which held out the longest, surrendered early in June (p. 239).

There are several important papers relating to coinage, resulting from a proposition made by Pierre Blondeau, a Frenchman, to undertake the coining even of the smaller moneys with inscriptions round the edge, which the English moneyers of the Mint in vain endeavoured to rival; and this gave rise to much discussion on the subject (pp. 174, 175, 184, 231-233, 313, 461, 487-489).

In concluding these remarks, I must acknowledge the zealous and valuable services of G. J. Morris, Esq., B.A., Clerk of the Record Office, and Mr. G. W. Thompson, transcriber, in the preparation of the present volume.

Macdonnell. e.g., The incompatibility of acknowledging the King as King, and the present power as republic; the evil precedent to other powers of abandoning the King, who is the undoubted proprietor of the crown, though not in possession.

If it were a sin in a king to take away a subject's vineyard, what is it for rebel subjects to take away the inheritance of a king? a proceeding the report of which caused some to die suddenly, some to fall into apoplexy, and others into deep melancholy.

On 16 Jan. 1649, 104 godly and honest ministers in and about London issued declarations against them, that, being private persons, they should learn to be content, and not do violence to King and Parliament, and showing their utter detestation of such parties.

Such an acknowledgment would establish their arbitrary power, and retard the King's restoration, and the relief of so many thousand oppressed nobility, clergy, gentry, and commoners, who wait deliverance from the heavy yoke of their new taskmasters, "whose little finger is thicker than the King's loins."

The importance to these lands of preserving to the King of Scotland his just right over the fishings, as the pretended republic claims the power at sea, demands satisfaction for damages sustained at Amboyna, and claims the same prerogatives for public ministers as in the times of Queen Elizabeth and King James.

Answers to objections that the acknowledgment of the republic is needful for the sake of trade with English seaports.

That the King of Spain has acknowledged it.

That our Saviour's words imply that the party in possession is to be acknowledged. [7 pp. Endorsed by Sec. Nicholas.]

Council of State to the Generals of the Fleet at Sea, and to all other captains and commanders of ships in the service of the commonwealth. Anthony Tierens, merchant, on behalf of his correspondents at Hamburg, Holland, and Zealand that trade for the Caribbee Islands in the West Indies, has petitioned us for license to send the Salamander of Flushing, Capt. Mich. De Buiters, commander, and also the ship of Vander Schure of Amsterdam, and the ship of William Gryston and company of Hamburg, with the fleet to Barbadoes, to trade there, in case it shall be reduced by them. We have thought fit to permit the said ships to sail to Barbadoes, in company of the fleet of this commonwealth, now ready to depart thither, and to trade with or at any islands or plantations in obedience to this commonwealth, he giving security in the Admiralty Court that they will not trade with any islands or places in disaffection to this commonwealth, and that the ships and masters thereof shall follow the orders of the commander-in-chief of the fleet. Council of State to the Sheriff of Oxfordshire. For the better security of the City of Oxford, and to avoid the charge of a greater garrison, Council gave order for erecting a Citadel, where the country gaol has been usually kept. We are informed that the prisoners under your charge are still there, which we do not conceive can stand with the safe keeping of that place. We therefore desire you to prepare some fit place for their keeping, and forthwith remove them, that the citadel may be in a safe posture. [I. 96, p. 3.]

Council of State to the Navy Committee. We desire that the victuals for 300 seamen to manage the flat boats for Scotland, may be supplied from the victuallers of the navy, and if the proportion for these 300 men will not fall within the provision for the 11,000 men in the service, we hereby undertake that the treasurers of the navy shall be enabled with money to pay for the victuals and wages of such 300 men, for the time they shall be employed. You are therefore to direct the Navy Commissioners to apportion four months' victuals for such men, to be sent as follows. Two months' victuals for 200 men to be immediately put on board the Peregrin, designed for Scotland. Three months' victuals for 120 men, to be put into a vessel of 90 or 100 tons, for which the Navy Commissioners are to contract for three months, to carry the same to Newcastle to victual the boats there, and to attend them to Scotland, give out victuals weekly, and observe the orders of Admiral Deane. A Check master is to be sent with her, to see to the distribution of the victuals, and to keep an account thereof. The remainder of the four months' victuals is to be put on board the Satisfaction, which is also to go to Scotland, and what she cannot be carry is to be sent by other ships going for Scotland.

The Mary fly-boat is to be ready a month hence, to take two months' victuals more for the 300 men; if they shall not have occasion to use it, it may supply the shipping upon that coast; much depends upon the quick dispatch of the first victuals; hasten them away, and be mindful to prepare succeeding supplies in time; let the beer be sent in barrels or hogsheads. 16. Petition of John Browne, gunfounder, to the Council of State, for consideration of an annexed remonstrance, and payment of the arrears due for goods delivered; and then whatsoever they shall command, petitioner will perform to the utmost of art and industry.

Two months since he presented a copy of this remonstrance to the Ordnance Committee, which was a business of such great concernment for the public safety that, had not the alteration of the Council prevented, he made no question but to have received the speedy direction of that committee. That he may not [utterly be disabled to do that] service which, for speed and serviceableness, cannot be performed by any other artist within these dominions, but by petitioner and his sons and their agents; and also that the Council of State may be fully satisfied of his desires to do his utmost to secure the commonwealth, he has annexed the remonstrance—

1. Because, by order of Parliament of the 21st inst., the stores and magazines of all military provisions, both for sea and land service, are to be provided and disposed of by the Council of State.

2. Because the time for buying wood will be past after a month or six weeks, and then he cannot, upon any emergencies, though never so urgent, make such good work and so speedily as the necessities of affairs may require. [1 page.] Annexing,

16. I. Remonstrance of John Browne to the Ordnance Committee.

Within these few months, the committee have made two contracts with Robert Cheek (my menial servant and clerk, until his ungodly conversation cast him out) for divers pieces, for no other reason but a conscientious discharge of their trust to Parliament, by bringing down the price of those commodities; but the committee has not been informed what manner of person Cheek is, nor so seriously weighed the mischiefs that may befall, if this manufacture be laid down by me or be divided.

Cheek has neither the skill, stock, nor credit to carry on the whole work, and especially if he be limited to as short a time as has been allotted to me, to cast three great mortar pieces and 300 grenadoes, all which I delivered in six weeks; but he, by his contract, has time enough, for no time is expressed, which enables him in a great measure to sell below me, if he performs at all; but these incapacities in Cheek are not so proper for me to urge. I shall therefore represent the mischief in these particulars—

1. That the cheapness of the commodity is not of so much concernment as the certain, full, expeditious supply, with good and serviceable commodities, which Cheek cannot do.

2. If the price should be lessened, the business must fall and be laid down by me, and that young undertaker, and then it cannot be recovered again in less than two or three years, if at all.

3. Many of the workmen are outlandish men, and will have good rates for their work, or else they will return to their own country, and will not be suddenly brought over again.

4. If there should be more than one man employed, they will be undermining one another, and raising the price of all commodities and workmen's wages, and so either the State must give a greater rate, or those employed will not be able to subsist; besides the workmen will not be at any certain command under either, but will make use of and serve their own turn on both.

5. *Whether the State, at such a time as this, when they have such pressing occasions of all sorts of commodities of this nature, will hazard such a business for a little abatement of price, which cannot be afforded by the maker without disabling him to serve them so well as now, my stock amounting to 30,000*l., for which I pay interest.

6. What Cheek does or shall do is not by any skill he has, but by two or three workmen he has got from me; and if he be suffered so to entice away my men, I shall not be able to serve the State, be their occasions ever so urgent.

7. Having thus fully stated the business, and the evil consequences that will follow if I have not the whole employment, as no other man has ever done the like for goodness, greatness, and expedition in any nation, I hope I shall be excused, having given timely notice thereof, if any disasters shall ensue; to that purpose I desire that an entry hereof may be made.

8. *As I have already represented that it is just and honourable for this committee to be good husbands for the commonwealth, so I am confident it is not your intention that I should be undone by the service of the State; therefore I request that the debt which the late King owed me may be immediately stated, and times set for payment; and then, my debts being first paid, I will engage to lay it all out for the service, at such rates as may just enable me to live; if this be denied, then, unless I have sufficient employment according to my stock, and for discharge of the great expense I am constrained to undergo, viz.,—4,000*l.* a year for rent, repairs, wages, and use of money,—I must give over this chargeable employment, and change my course in my old age, which may be very advantageous to me in the best things, but dangerous enough, if I understand anything, to the commonwealth.*

Yet if this committee shall hold it better service to Parliament to give long time for their commodities, so that they may have them cheaper, upon taking away my stock, and lessening the number of workmen, I will sell as cheap as any man. [2 pages.]

[18. Reasons why the Stationers' Company bought their printing house in Scotland. The Company have for several years been much prejudiced by the late King's printer for Scotland, who had a patent to print all manner of English books there, and to import them into England, by means whereof the best and most vendible copies of the company and their particular members were reprinted there and imported hither, to their great damage.

Thereupon the Company, for prevention of this mischief, four years since, upon an overture from the King's printer there to sell the Company his patent and printing house, made an agreement with him which cost them a great sum, since which, what with the troubles there and here, the Company have extremely suffered; and having sent over some workmen, they were constrained, for keeping them in work, to print an impression of the Bible in 8vo., which has been two years in printing, and was finished some months since. Part thereof was sent over a year since, and the remainder was to

The Company are now withdrawing their stock and materials from thence, in regard of the late Act, and full provision is now made against importation from that kingdom and all other parts beyond seas, the want of which was the true reason of their keeping their said printing house there. 9. Order upon perusal of the depositions touching Lord Craven, presented to Council from the Commissioners for Sequestrations sitting at Haberdashers' Hall, and of their certificate,—wherein they mention that they had given orders for seizing and securing his estate, but doubt whether Parliament has made it matter of sequestration for any person living beyond sea to hold correspondence with or to repair to the king of Scots, when he was beyond seas, and desire Parliament to make a rule which may enable them to proceed to sequestration in this and other cases of like nature,—that the Attorney-General report this matter to Parliament, as the retarding of sequestrations, where persons may be esteemed justly sequestrable, tends to the prejudice of the State, and to desire Parliament to give directions for expediting of justice in such cases.

Council of State to the Navy Victuallers. For the more effectual carrying on of the service by the ships of the navy, we think fit that as the ships shall repair for victuals to any port where a victualler is placed, they should be forthwith furnished and despatched, they bringing a letter from the generals of the fleet, or any commander-in-chief of any squadron in the service to that purpose. Signify this to your deputies in the respective ports. Such letters produced by you shall be as sufficient warrant for your acting as any order from the Navy Commissioners. [I. 96, p. 19.]

Council of State to the Militia Committee of London. We have intelligence that the designs of the enemies of the commonwealth are carried on among them with great diligence and secrecy, although they have been unable hitherto to effect anything, by reason of the watchful eye that has been upon them, and the forces which they have seen on foot, in readiness to oppose them. Being informed that you are about to disband the horse raised by you for defence of the Parliament and city, we conceive it very dangerous, as it would open a way to the said enemies to bring their designs into effect; we therefore desire you to continue such horse until further notice. Council of State to Col. Benson, Col. Brookes, and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for county Northampton. For prevention of any attempts of the enemy in Scotland upon the northern parts, we have thought fit that a competent number of horse should be drawn together from several parts, and march to the borders; towards the making up of which we think you should cause one troop of 100 horse of the militia of your county to be drawn forth, 50 out of the east division and 50 out of the west, to be ready at Northampton to march as they receive orders. Parliament will take care that during the time they are employed, they shall be paid according to the establishment, their time to begin from 27 Feb. last. Give Council an account of this important business. [I. 96, p. 21.]

Council of State to the Mayor and Aldermen of Hull. You intimate a mistake in the order of Parliament nominating certain persons to be chosen aldermen of Hull, but it is only in the case of Mr. Wood, who was formerly nominated as William instead of Richard, and this is no ground for your not proceeding to the election of the other we nominated. We have procured an amendment of the order, and enclose it, and desire you to proceed to the election of the several persons therein named as aldermen, and return an account of what you do. 25. Geo. Payler, Jno. Falkner, and J. White, ordnance officers, to the Ordnance Committee. Having received your order of the 3rd inst. for taking a general survey of the stores under our charge, we desire that if you employ the auditors and their clerks as formerly in that service, an allowance may be made for hiring some clerks and labourers to carry on that work, which will be great, the daily occasions of the State being such that the whole time of those already allowed is taken up. Also that as a survey is taken, you will give order that all unserviceable provisions may be sold off to the best advantage, the store house being pestered with unserviceable provisions that we have not room to sort. - March 7. Council of State to Luke Robinson, Geo. Eure, Lieut.-Col. Peregrine Whitehall. Lassells, and Jno. Newton. Mulgrave Castle in your county (Yorkshire) is so far tenable that, upon the surprise of it by the enemy, it would be a great prejudice to the public, and especially to your county; we therefore desire you to consider how to make it untenable, that no use may be made of it to the disturbance of the public peace. We have written to the Militia Commissioners of that county to give order to call in the country [people] for making it untenable, and desire you to direct their employment. [I. 96, pp. 26-27.]

15. The Committee for Examinations to consider of the prisoners brought to town by Col. Rich, and which of them are fit to be discharged, bailed, and brought to justice.

16. Blank commissions for the officers of the county troops whose names are not yet known to be delivered to Col. Rich.

17. To write the Militia Commissioners of Herefordshire to send a troop of dragoons, and of Cheshire and Lancashire each a troop of horse, to Manchester, and receive orders there from Col. Rich.

21. The committee that meets with the army officers to consider what directions shall be given to Col. Rich, in relation to the garrisons in Lancashire and parts adjacent.

22. The Army Committee to grant a warrant to Col. Rich for 60*l.* for incident charges, and pay a month's advance to Major Mercer's three troops of dragoons, and Col. Rich and Col. Sanders' troops of horse. [I. 65, pp. 75-80.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners, county York. We have given direction to some of your number who, by reason of their nearness to the place and knowledge of it, may best direct, to see Mulgrave Castle made untenable; that it may be effectually done, we desire you to issue orders to call in people of the county (at such adjacent distance as you shall judge fit) to make it untenable. March 8. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Bucks, Northampton, Notts, Leicester, and Derby. It is thought fit that one troop of the horse militia of your county should be employed in the service, and Parliament has given order that they be taken upon the establishment. You are therefore to give order for your said troop forthwith to march to Derby, whither several others are appointed to come, and there follow the orders of Col Rich, and use all expedition, that the rest of the troops may not wait there unprofitably for them, nor the service be disappointed by their not seasonably appearing. We have recommended to the Army Committee that 14 days' pay be assigned to your troop on account, that they may march forthwith. With note of like letters to county Hereford for a troop of dragoons, and to cos. Chester and Lancaster for a troop of horse each, to march to Manchester. [I. 96, p. 28.]
- March 8. Council of State to the Treasurers-at-War. There is some money remaining in your hands [the remainder of 5,000*l.*] lent you at several times by Council; as there is a present occasion for it, we desire you will forthwith pay the same to Mr. Frost, to be disposed of as Council shall direct. [I. 96, p. 29; 65, p. 71.]
- March 8. Council of State to the Army Committee. It has been found necessary for the public service that a brigade of horse and dragoons should be sent to Lancashire, consisting partly of the army and partly of the militia troops of the several counties. Parliament has taken them into public pay. The service requires their expeditious march, and we have written them to make all speed to their several rendezvous; for effecting which we desire you to assign a fortnight's pay on account to those troops of horse and dragoons which you find taken on, that they may march without delay; the officers of the Buckinghamshire troop to be paid as officers of horse. While they continue in those parts, make assignations for them upon some northern counties, that the pay may the more conveniently come to their hands.
- As there will be occasion of money for contingencies and incident charges, give a warrant for 60*l.* to be paid to Col. Rich. in Lancashire for that service; and for the better expediting of this affair, let warrants be issued for a month's pay in advance to Major Mercer's three troops of dragoons, and Col. Rich and Col. Sanders' troops of horse; Major Christopher Mercer is to receive pay as a major of dragoons. [I. 96, pp. 29-30.]
- March 8. Council of State to the Lord General. We have ordered Col. Rich to march to Lancashire, with a brigade of horse and dragoons. We recommend it to you to send such power of martial law as you judge necessary, whereby they may be kept in good order, to Col. Rich, to be put in execution while that brigade continues under his command. [I. 96, p. 30.]
- March 8. 28. Geo. Payler and three other ordnance officers to the Ordnance Office, Committee. We have treated with several persons for supplying the 500 baskets, but they are not to be had under 6*d.* a-piece ready money. [$\frac{2}{3}$ page.]

14. Capt. Lane and Capt. Wheeler to be continued in the service of the fleet, and to command such ships as they shall be appointed to by the generals.

16. Mr. Frost to prepare a letter to the Militia Commissioners throughout the nation, to take care that all public meetings for horse races, cock-fighting, &c., be prevented.
17. To report to Parliament Council's opinion that,—to the end Edinburgh Castle and the town of Leith may be securely kept, and the greater number of forces go to the field in Scotland,—Col. Fenwick's regiment should be made up to 1,600 by the addition of two new companies, and by making the Major's company 160, and adding 20 men to each of the private companies; and that Parliament should give order to the Army Committee to take them on the establishment, and pay them accordingly.
18. Sir Arthur Hesilrige to report to Parliament that,—in pursuance of their order referring it to Council to consider what proportion of ammunition will be necessary, and where money is to be assigned for it,—they will give an account in a short time, but meantime there is very great necessity of speedily getting out the present fleet, which cannot be done with the requisite speed unless provision of ammunition may be carried on by the Navy Committee, and therefore they desire Parliament to give order to the Navy Committee to make this provision.
19. Sir Hen. Mildmay, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Love to be a committee to consider the papers given in by Mr. Surveyor, containing an account of certain statues fit for the garden of Whitehall, and of other pieces remaining which are fit for other places in the house, and to give order for fitting up such as shall be thought fit to be placed in the garden, and such other places of the house as may be deemed proper.

20. All governors and commanders of forts and garrisons to repair forthwith to their several charges, and not remove without special leave of the Parliament, Council of State, Lord General, or the respective major-generals instructed with the command of the forces in those parts; Major-Gen. Harrison to give notice, and take care of the execution of this order.

20*a*. The papers given in by Capt. Gotherstone against Jno. Bentley referred to the Attorney-General, who is to inform against Bentley in the Court of Exchequer, and take care that the business be effectually prosecuted on behalf of the commonwealth, and that the proceedings against him are certified to Council.

22. Sir Hen. Mildmay to report to Parliament that,—upon several informations of emergent dangers by invasion from abroad, in hopes of compliance and assistance from persons residing in places of strength within this commonwealth, as well malignants as others who disown the Government,—Council wishes for an order for removing from all forts and garrisons, to such distance and for such time as they please to limit, those who, upon further tender, shall refuse to acknowledge the present Government by taking or subscribing the engagement appointed to be taken by authority of the present Parliament. [I. 65, pp. 81–85.]

March 10 ? 29. Petition of Edw. Whitehall. There is a fortnight's pay due to the militia troop of the county, for the interval between the month's pay they received of the county, and the time they were taken on to the establishment. As the troop was kept up during the interval, respect should be had to their charges; we therefore desire you to discharge what is owing for their quarters, and charge during that time, out of the moneys levied by you upon the Militia Act; in case it cannot be paid thereout, we will satisfy the balance. Send up an account of the money levied upon the said Act, that it may be seen how much can be paid thereout. [I. 96, p. 31.]

heard of the same before, and that the enemies of the commonwealth have expectation of forces in those parts. We therefore recommend it to your special vigilance to observe all the motions of the disaffected party, that they may not be able to bring their designs to any maturity there, and from thence give a beginning to new troubles. As Exeter is a town of very great consequence, and the people much disaffected, we desire you to have a care to prevent any mischief from thence, and in order thereto, to secure all persons in or about the town likely to prove dangerous to the peace. Levant Company to Sir Thos. Bendish, Ambassador at Constantinople. We send you a copy of our last letter, and also some orders of Court resolved upon at several meetings, as tending to the advantage of our trade, and desire the same may be put in execution, as they are of general concern, and relate to others as well as yourself. We have communicated their contents to the Consul at Smyrna, and to both factories, from whom we expect an exact observance, particularly in what concerns the business of our treasurers; we had appointed Jonathan Dawes there, but we have, upon second thoughts, designed Fras. Hill and Wm. Alvey to perform that charge at Smyrna, not only for setting that business in a better posture at the first, but because their principals here have engaged for their due performance of that trust; and after the expiration of their year, we expect our former order to be put in practice, for their own choice of two others to succeed them.

Mr. Gough's accounts are no accounts at all, but only a transcript of the ledger, and not audited; let new auditors, whereof the present treasurer is to be one, be chosen at a court of that factory, for a perusal of those accounts, and so much of Gough's estate be detained as may answer our debt; and let the accounts be audited, and a list of all the bills he drew upon the company be sent to us, and the same course constantly observed in future. The list of our exceptions to the Constantinople accounts is no other than those formerly sent you.

There has been a complaint long depending here of your sentence against Giles Davies, one of that factory, and on his petition, we have taken a view of that business, and conceive it to be hard measure for you to give Nath. Barnardiston the goods of other men, when his own remained in the hands of Davies. Consider the matter again, and cause Barnardiston to be satisfied with his own goods, if they are still in being; and if sold, then with their price; and let the owners of those 68 cloths seized in Mr. Davies' hands have satisfaction for the full value with damages.

This comes by your servant, Anth. Isaacson, who has been detained sometime here after the departure of the general ships, upon account of Hen. Hyde's business, wherein, as in all other things, he has demeaned himself with all respect, meriting your approbation, and we have given him 50%. he will acquaint you with the period of that business, and with our fears of some evil design intended by Rupert and Maurice, who with others are now preparing three strong ships at Toulon, besides another called the Jeremy, lately sold to them, with which we suspect they intend a surprisal, as well of our ships now lading at Smyrna and Scanderoon, as of any other ships belonging to this nation, wherein we—being not only liable to the loss of our ships and estates but to any avania that may be raised through their designs,—intreat your uttermost care for prevention, both by your intimation thereof to the Vizier, and disavowing of any action attempted by these pirates, being out of the protection of this state, though under English colours. Levant Company to Spencer Bretton, consul at Smyrna. We enclose some orders of Court, which you are to see effected. We hear from Toulon and Marseilles of the intention of Princes Rupert and Maurice to set out from thence within 30 days, with three or four great ships, well manned and fitted for piracy within the Straits. Use all possible means to prevent the hazard of any avania, by intimating to the cady your disallowance of their designs, as persons excluded from the protection of this State; and use courses conducive to the preservation of our estates. Levant Company to the Treasurers and Factors at Constantinople. We commend to your observance the enclosed orders, which we communicate to you not with intent you should make the least use thereof, to contemn the authority under which you are, but that by this freedom, you may be incited with joint endeavours to promote the common interest, and comply together in an amicable way, without those animosities by which you and we have suffered so much, which, together with excessive levations, has put us upon this course of withdrawing the trade from thence, as expressed in the paper. Meantime we desire the former accounts of that place to be carefully reviewed and sent to us, which we have desired his Lordship to see done, that we may be at once enabled to be out of debt there. Levant Company to the Treasurers and Factory at Smyrna. We confirm our last, and particularly that branch concerning the annual choice of two from amongst yourselves for the charge of treasurers; only for this first year we appoint Francis Hill and Wm. Alvey, whom we have pitched upon because we have their principals' engagement for their faithful performance of the trust, whom we desire, immediately after the arrival of the Sampson, to take the employment for one year, and then others to be elected each year.

For other matters, we refer you to the enclosed orders, but you are to make no other use of this our free communication thereof to you than to join your united endeavours for the public ends, without proceeding in any further ways of division and animosity, whereby we have hitherto suffered more than we shall hereafter do, upon occasion of the like intemperate exorbitances; we hope your own interest will be a sufficient motive to you in this behalf. March 11. Order in Parliament that the Council of State be authorised to remove out of all forts and garrisons, and to such distance and for such time as they shall think fit, all such persons as upon tender shall refuse to acknowledge the present government, by taking the engagement appointed to be taken by authority of this present Parliament. March 11. COUNCIL OF STATE. Day's Proceedings.

1. The petition of [John] Browne, with the annexed remonstrance, referred to the Ordnance Committee, except that part of it which refers to a debt owing to him from the late King.

3. Six weeks' provisions to be made up for victualling Carisbrook Castle, Isle of Wight.

4. 60*l.* to be allowed the Governor of the Isle of Wight, for making a cistern or pond in Carisbrook Castle, for keeping water for the use of the garrison, in case of necessity, and to write the Revenue Committee to pay it.

5. To write the Governor of the Isle of Wight to call the people to work at repairing the breaches in the fortifications.

6. To desire the Revenue Committee to certify by whom Carisbrook Castle has been usually repaired, and out of what treasury.

7. The desire of the Governor of the Isle of Wight, for new carriages for some of the guns, referred to the Ordnance Committee. [Also Vol. XV., No. 30.]

8. Any three of the Council being together before the sitting of the Council shall be authorised, as a committee, to peruse petitions, and report thereon to Council.

9. Lord Commissioner Lisle to draw up some Act explanatory, concerning the raising of the militia in the Isle of Wight.

10. Order that as there are some designs upon Windsor Castle, the prisoners now there be removed to other places, viz.:

Major-Gen. Browne to Ludlow Castle,

Sir Wm. Lewes to Nottingham Castle.

Sir Wm. Waller to Warwick Castle.

Major-Gen. Harrison to take care for removing the said prisoners.

11. Capt. Shepherd to be captain of the Northamptonshire troop, which is to march to Scotland. [I. 65, pp. 89-91.]

March 11. Council of State to the Governor of Bristol. There are some ships at Bristol bound for Lisbon, viz., the David, and a Hollander, that Whitehall. John Parker came here in, and is returning to Lisbon in; they have both victuals and ammunition in great quantities, which, as the present state of affairs stand between this commonwealth and Portugal, may be of very great prejudice. Take care that those ships, or any other bound for Portugal, may be stayed, until you have certified what they are, and what goods are shipped upon them. [I. 96, p. 33.]

 March 11. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for the several Whitehall. Counties. We have many informations that the enemies of this commonwealth are still driving on their designs to raise new troubles amongst us, and hold many dangerous meetings and conferences in many places, for contriving and disposing their plots, under colour and pretence of cock fighting, horse racing, hunting, and other meetings for recreation; which, if there be not care had to prevent or disperse, may much conduce to the ripening of their counsels, and give a beginning to the breaking out of insurrections and rebellions.
 Enquire after all these or the like meetings; appoint some of your militia force to attend the times and places, and either prevent their meetings or disperse them, and take care that the public peace may not be endangered by them. Observe and secure the chief promoters of those meetings, and such as shall affront or oppose you in the execution of this order, and signify the same to Council, who will give further direction therein.
 We again recommend a perusal of the instructions formerly given you; see them put in execution, which will be a good means to preserve the public peace. Many soldiers in pay desert their colours, and retire into the country; make diligent inquiry after them, and secure them, and certify us, that you may receive order for further proceedings against them. [I. 96, pp. 34–35, 118.]
- March 11. Council of State to Col. John Carter, Governor of Conway Castle.
 Whitehall. We have seen your letter to the high constables of those parts, stating that the excise officers have sent a warrant for levying of more money upon those parts; that when they had accounted with the State for what they had already received, the country were willing to pay them more; and that meantime you desired them to forbear troubling the country further. By this, very great disservice is done to the commonwealth, which may be of very ill example to others; you are not appointed auditor of any accounts of the excise, nor to appoint the country when they shall pay excise, or when they shall forbear; if you know of any defect in their accounts, you should inform the Excise Commissioners, but meantime you are to give all the assistance you can for bringing in the moneys of the excise, and you are hereby enjoined to write to all those whom you formerly addressed, retracting your letter, and requiring them to use their best diligence to promote the collection of the said excise. [I. 96, pp. 35–6.]
- March 11. Council of State to Mr. Cawley. Upon consideration of the Whitehall. letter from Chichester directed to you, we have thought fit you should confer with the Militia Commissioners [for Sussex], and examine and secure Mr. Pearce and his confederates, also all such others as you find dangerous, and complying with Pearce's designs,

mouth on the 18th, where I stayed until the ships within came out to me, and the same day set sail for Cadiz. In my way I took a Flemish vessel called the Golden Waggon, laden with English goods consigned to Barnstaple, which a little before was surprised by two Irish frigates, and which I have ordered to come for England with the Lion. I anchored in Cadiz Bay on 28 Feb., and on the same day, Capt. Penn with his squadron came and anchored with me. When I came in, I found five sail, which seemed to be Flemings, riding about two leagues out of the command of any of the Spanish castles, and suspecting one of them to be of those whom my instructions direct me to deal with, I and Capt. Penn sent out some frigates, who found her to be a Flemish ship, but having French goods, as linen, &c., as also 3,300 pieces of eight, which being taken out and delivered to Capt. Penn, for supply of the present wants of his squadron, the vessel, with the rest of her lading, as also some Frenchmen's goods taken out of one of the other ships and put on board of her, was ordered to come for England with the Lion.

There is not a man-of-war in this port but yours, and some Flemish ships lately come from Scilly, where they have concluded a peace, and our fleet meeting here so soon after the departure of the other fleet is of no less admiration to other foreign kingdoms (into which reports fly of them daily) than to Spain, who much admires your quickness in such strengthful supplies; so as I believe in a short time the Spaniard, between fear and love, will grow respectful to us; though hitherto we have had little other sign of it than compliments (only free access to the shore, where we are in no way molested in our business), which we fail not to equalize them in. Since my coming in here, the weather has been so foul that a boat could hardly pass from ship to ship, nor could we ride but with yards and topmasts down; but it is now grown fair, and opportunity of wind presenting, I am just setting sail with my squadron and convoy for the Straits, in pursuance of my instructions. Had I more time, I would have made up the whole sum, but will send it next week. I have also sent the things you wrote to Lady Vere for by the carrier, with the book Sir John Co[nyers] sent you out of Holland, and the pot of preserved walnuts Mrs. Wright sent you out of Warwickshire, and will send the apparel by the next, with Mr. Savage's answer about your leather drawers.

I found Mr. Williams very well satisfied, and shall by the next have Mr. Atkins' answer. Lady Rivers died on Sunday morning last, after lying sick three or four days. I have got a letter of attorney as you ordered, assigning the year's rent to me, and empowering me to recover it, and you must seal and deliver it to my use, before two witnesses, and also fill up the blank space. I have sent John Bowyer's lease for you to seal. Danbie has been very importunate for an answer to his letter to you, being in great need, as he had nothing from me on your last being in town, but 2s. or 3s. for links. [1 page.]

4. The Committee for taking an account of the treasuries to make their report at the same time.

5. Order that Council leaves it to the judgment of their members to speak in general of the conspiracy discovered, for the satisfaction of such persons as shall enquire, and quickening the care of others in their duty to the public, provided they do not descend to particulars, and the names of certain persons engaged in that business.

6. To inform Col. Boswell,—in answer to his motion, as also to the rest that desire that the prisoners at Windsor be not removed—that until there be petitions before Council signed by the prisoners, Council cannot consider the matter.

7. To write the Lord General to give him an account of the provision of money made for the forces with Major Robinson, and also the numbers with Col. Rich, and to desire him to give intelligence of anything which may arise relating to the public peace, and Council will do the like to him. [See also letter of this date, p. 88.]

Council of State to the Treasurers-at-war. For a special service of great importance, there have been some forces sent out of Scotland to the north-west of England, viz., Col. Grosvenor's regiment of horse, part of which are with Major Robinson about Kendal, and 80 horse, with Capt. Wigan and other officers, into Lancashire. That those horse may not be any burden to the country by free quarter, we desire that you furnish them with a month's pay upon account, with all expedition, either by bills of exchange or letters of credit. Council of State to Col. Fras. Lassells. We have written the Militia Commissioners of your county [York] to raise a regiment of foot to be under you, and have named officers recommended to us. But if any of these cannot attend the charge, we have ordered the Commissioners to put in others, and shall send down blank commissions. It is of very great concern that this regiment be speedily raised. Use your greatest diligence to perfect the work, and give us, by every post, an account how it proceeds. We have ordered the Commissioners to furnish the men with a month's pay, after which they shall be provided for as the rest of the forces. [I. 96, p. 38.]

Council of State to Col. Birch. Notwithstanding the order given, Lancaster Castle is not yet made untenable, but use may be made of it by the enemy, if they should seize upon it. We therefore desire that a party of horse and foot be quartered in Lancaster, and put into the castle, both for securing the place, and also the persons who, by our former instructions to you, we conceive will be secured there. As there may be many very disaffected in that county, besides those whose names we lately sent, who may have arms and ammunition, you are to seize and secure them, and all such as you judge dangerous. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners, co. York. Although it has pleased God to disappoint all the enemies' designs, and break all their attempts to re-establish tyranny, and embroil the nation in new wars, yet such is their restlessness that they cease not to pursue designs of the same nature, which, by special providence, we have lately discovered, and doubt not we may prevent their effect ; yet as their practices have been general in many parts of the nation, it is very necessary that forces should be in readiness in every place, under faithful commanders, to prevent mischief; therefore, as your county is very naked of forces, we desire you to raise with all expedition one regiment of foot, under Col. Fras. Lassells; Lieut.-Col. Geo. Byard and Major Geo. Coles are commended to us as officers, and Hen. Mitchell, Jno. Reyner, Jno. Pierson, and Matthew Pierson, as captains, to whom you are to add three more. We will send a commission to the Colonel, and blanks for all the rest, that if any of those named cannot attend, you may put in such other as you know to be fittest, and signify to us who they are. For their more speedy raising, we desire you to provide them a month's pay, after which they shall be taken care for as the rest of the forces. Use all expedition in raising these forces for preservation of the peace of your county. [I. 96, pp. 40, 41.]

Council of State to the Lord General. The gracious providence of God is every day so multiplied that we can never be too sensible or thankful; the malice of the enemies of peace put them on to design and attempt with all their might and diligence, but hitherto God has helped us, and given us new assurance and earnest that he will do so still by this double mercy, viz., your recovery and the hopes of the speedy perfecting of it; and that seasonable and very particular discovery of the counsels and workings of the enemy, of which we have made the best advantage, for obviating their designs.

We have sent orders to Lancashire, Cheshire, and North Wales, to seize and secure the particular persons discovered, with their arms and ammunition, and those of other disaffected persons, and we doubt not it will be effectually done. We have also sent into those parts 12 troops of horse and four of dragoons, to consist of 100 each, and desired the Treasurers-at-war to take care for sending down a month's pay to Col. Grosvenor's regiment, about Kendal, and to the 80 horse sent to Lancashire, that they may not be a burden to the county while you continue them there.

We have also written the committee of Yorkshire to raise a regiment of foot under Col. Fras. Lassells. We have appointed a squadron of twelve sail of ships for the Isle of Man, which may also look to the eastern coast of Ireland, and have designed Col. Blake to take the command. We approve of your sending hither in a ship of war the prisoner Birkenhead, by whom this discovery has been made, that we may have a more particular examination of him, and make further use of him. Send us any further intelligence you can of this design. [I. 96, pp. 42, 43.]

Council of State to Major-General Lambert. We have received yours of the 7th inst., and seen that to Sir Hen. Vane of the 8th, and made the best improvement of the discovery that we have been able in the short time, and will go on with what remains. What we have done we have reported to the Lord General, and shall therefore not repeat it; you will receive a more particular relation from Sir Hen. Vane, to which we refer you. Take special care that Birkenhead may be sent hither in a man-of-war, to be further examined. [I. 96, p. 43.]

Council of State to Justice Mackworth at Poole, co. Montgomery. Upon certain informations from Scotland and other parts, we find a design carried on in several ways in favour of the enemies, and particularly that they have great hopes, by parties and accomplices in North Wales, of surprising those counties, upon landing of some forces from the Isle of Man, with whom they expect a conjunction of old and new malignants in those parts. For prevention of mischief, we have already issued orders to several parts, and in reference to those where you are, and the places adjacent, we have given some directions; and for the present, hold it fit that, during your stay in the several counties, you should send for and confer with such of the Militia Commissioners as you think fit, and with the governors and chief commanders of the Parliament forces there, and know in what posture their forces are, and what of them may be spared upon emergent occasions; also require of them a strict survey of officers and soldiers, that none but such as are well affected be continued in arms and trust; and that the arms and ammunition of suspected persons be seized, and put into some safe magazine, and that those whom they look upon as dangerous be forthwith secured, and particularly that they hold correspondence with the Governor of Angelsey, and have an eye to those parts, so as convenient forces may be that way applied and sent as occasion shall require, the designs from the Isle of Man being in some measure directed that way.

These things you are to communicate from us to those gentlemen, and let them know that the present condition of affairs requires the best of their care and diligence, for prevention of the wicked purposes of the restless enemies, and preservation of the peace, in all which we hope their careful discharge of their duties, whereof an account must be given, as also of your proceedings upon these instructions. [I. 96, pp. 44, 45.]

Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow and the Militia Commissioner for co. Hants. We find a general design for risings in several parts of this nation at once, upon correspondence held with traitors and other enemies from without, by divers of your home malignants, whom we hold fit to be searched out and brought to justice. Meantime such as, in respect of former malignancy or present discontents, may be liable to suspicion as complotters or favourers of the intended disturbances should be narrowly observed, and the most dangerous of them apprehended and secured, for prevention of mischiefs. And because a main part of the design is upon the West, and the plot of an invasion of some parts thereof long designed, and now near maturity, such persons of the Western counties as were formerly ordered by us to be secured, and others in your parts of the quality before described, should be forthwith apprehended and kept in safe custody; also the horse, arms, and ammunition of all suspected persons. To this end give such orders as you think fit, making use of any of the Militia Commissioners in the counties under your charge, and of any governors, Council of State to Sir Thomas Honeywood. The enemies of the peace are still endeavouring to raise new troubles, and are now contriving how to raise and unite their party in several places, and seize upon places of strength, and among others, they have a design upon Colchester; there had been no cause to fear if the orders formerly given for dismantling it had been put in execution; but this not being done, it must be secured by a garrison, for which purpose we desire you forthwith to draw out of your militia regiment, or other militia forces of that county, 300 men, to be paid as by the Militia Act is directed; and with them, or more if necessary, to keep the town of Colchester from the surprise of the enemy. [I. 96, p. 47.]

Council of State to the Lord General. We find, by letters received this post from Scotland, that the recovery of your health is not so speedy as we formerly hoped, of which we are very sorry, both for what you undergo in it, and what the public affairs may suffer thereby; and although we trust that your strength will grow upon you daily, yet we thought necessary to send Mr. Lloyd expressly from hence, both to signify our great sense of your present indisposition, as also to receive fuller information than we can have by letters at this distance; by him we also desire to know if you can suggest anything by which we may contribute to your more speedy recovery; we shall not be wanting in anything in our power. Council of State to the Marquis of Hertford. Last November, Council gave you permission to continue with your family at Netley until 1 April; the time being nearly expired, we conceive it will not tend to the peace of the commonwealth, and the security of those parts, if you continue there any longer, and therefore remind you of the expiration of the time, and desire you to remove your family to your house [at Ambresbury] in Wiltshire on the 1st of April [and give security to do nothing prejudicial to the State]. As we are informed that many dangerous and disaffected persons resort to your house, and that several of your servants are such, we desire that such resort may be discontinued, and that such of your servants as are within the Act for confinement of Delinquents keep themselves within its limits. - March 17. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for London, Whitehall. Westminster, Southwark, and Tower Hamlets. Although it has pleased God to disappoint the contrivances and break the designs of the enemies, so that nothing they have yet undertaken has prospered, yet they have not so seen his hand therein as to be convinced of his displeasure against them, and submit to his will; but still, with the greatest diligence, pursue the like designs of mischief, debauching many from their duty, and making them instrumental to the putting on their own yoke; and while they carry on their work in silence, make others believe there is no danger, because they see none. It has not [now?] pleased God, who watches over our safety, to give us a very particular discovery of a general design of mischief now in agitation, and as for preventing thereof, we shall not be wanting, and it is the duty of all to look to their own safety, and that of the public, that you may not be surprised, but be in a posture to defend yourselves, and prevent the mischief contrived, we desire you to certify on Friday next the present state of your militia, both horse and foot, and their readiness for action, as until we know this, we cannot be satisfied how far you may be safe against the effects of those contrivances that are now with great diligence in agitation. With note of an addition in the letter to the London

 Council. [I. 96, pp. 50-51.]

Council of State to the Commissioners for Compositions, Haberdashers' Hall. Enclosed are several evidences and other writings belonging to Thos. Cooke, who was accused of treason and has fled, which were found in his chamber. Let them be perused by the counsel assisting you on behalf of the State, that the rights of all parties concerned therein may be preserved, and let all papers and letters of intelligence of concernment be sent to Council for their perusal and disposal. Send a special messenger to Mr. Cooke's house at Milburne, Derby, to seize, inventory, and secure the personal estate there, lest it be embezzled to the State's loss. [I. 96, p. 55.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Stafford, Chester, Lancaster, Derby, Notts, and York. The enemies, notwithstanding all the manifestation of the hand of God against their undertakings hitherto, continue their conspiracies to begin new troubles and raise another war, which God has been pleased to discover to us by a special hand of his providence, and for preventing the effect thereof, we have sent Major-General Harrison into those parts, with some forces. The better to enable him to perform that service, we have directed him to give order to such horse, [foot], and dragoons of the militia of your county as he shall find necessary, and you are to give him such assistance as he shall direct, and certify Council of your proceedings. Council of State to Sir Arthur Hesilrigge. By reason of your presence at Council, you are fully acquainted with the late designs of the enemy so happily discovered, and for what purpose Major-General Harrison is sent to Lancashire and Cheshire, and those parts. For better preventing the effects of these designs, we desire you also, with the forces under your command in the four northern counties, whether of the army, garrisons, or militia, to keep up a correspondence with Harrison, and give him all the assistance necessary, we having also directed him to do the same with you. Council of State to the Commissioners for Sequestrations, Haberdashers' Hall. Upon several informations which Council received against Thos. Cooke, they caused him to be apprehended and brought before them, and being charged with high treason, he was committed to the custody of the serjeant-at-arms' deputy, in order to his removal to the Tower. He made his escape, and has fled, but Parliament being resolved to proceed against him, we desire you forthwith to give order that all his estate, as well real as personal, be forthwith seized and secured, and to proceed further therein, according to the direction of the Acts of Parliament, using all diligence to prevent his receiving his rents this quarter, or embezzling any part of his personal estate. You are also to cause all his printed books at Gray's Inn to be inventoried, and the inventory brought to Council, as also all papers and writings, and an iron chest found there; and you are to send your officers immediately, as there is a guard there, which we desire to be speedily discharged. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of the several counties. By the enclosed, which is a transcript of what we have received from [the army in Scotland, you will see how many have deserted and remain from their colours, to the great prejudice of the service, which not only suffers by the absence of those, but it gives encouragement to others to do the like; this if not speedily prevented, may cause a very considerable diminution of the army, and much endanger the public affairs. We therefore recommend it to your special care to make diligent and strict enquiry after those men mentioned in the enclosed list, and cause them to be apprehended, discharging such as will give good security, by bond with sufficient sureties, to render themselves at their colours in Scotland within such a time as shall be sufficient for them to repair thither, but those who shall not give such security you are to commit to safe custody, secure their horses and arms for the use of the commonwealth, and certify Council thereof, that order may be taken to proceed against them according to the rules of martial law, in order that, by example made upon them, others may be deterred from deserting. I have been recommended a young man who is a very good barber, and who is much like Mr. Denham in person, and am certainly informed that for his good behaviour and parts, he may wait on any nobleman in the kingdom. I have sent your apparel by the carrier. The reason the letters did not come by the Petworth carrier was my staying for Mr. Conway's letters. Mr. Glasscock had your cross-bow; I will get your books stitched, and give Darbie what is fit. [1 page.]

the public, lately permitted your son John to put in bail, and that before yourself, notwithstanding our then informations and strong apprehensions of his guilt, we could not imagine he should still have resolved to precipitate himself into further destructive courses, as we now find he has done, whereof you will hear more particulars ere long.
Touching the seizure of your arms and ammunition, no direction has gone from hence, but we suppose that some command is given from Scotland,—in respect of a dangerous conspiracy touching your parts lately happily discovered, wherein your son John has had too great a share,—to secure your warlike provisions, lest ill use should be made thereof by your son and his party, so as we well approve of Col. Duckenfield's care in that behalf. Yet to show our confidence in you, and willingness to comply with your desires so far as may consist with safety, we have given him order touching your arms, as you will perceive by the enclosed. Our only aim as to you is to prevent that surprise of those provisions which was and is designed by the enemies, and not to give you the least disturbance upon any other than the public account; with this declaration we conceive you will remain well satisfied. [I. 96, pp. 61-62.]

Council of State to Col. Birch. Council of State to the Lord General. Upon consideration of this late discovery, and that the conspiracy and combination is general, we have held it our duty to be watchful against the same in all parts, and to apply forces according to the dangers threatened; whereupon we have resolved to send Major-Gen. Harrison into Lancashire and the northern parts, as a man more known there, and capable to embody a greater number of men upon occasion than Col. Rich, whereby a considerable strength may be ready in those parts, as well to prevent any irruptions from Scotland, as to correspond with you, if there should be cause. We have appointed Col. Rich to attend to the safety of the Eastern association and midland parts, with 1,500 horse and dragoons. In pursuance of the order of Parliament referring it to us to present some fit person to take care of the safety of Parliament and these parts, upon occasion of Major-Gen. Harrison's taking the field, we have nominated Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood to remain here; this Parliament has approved, and we hope to find it agreeable to you. We rejoice in hopes of your recovery. [I. 96, p. 64.]

March 22. Council of State to Col. Purefoy and the rest of the Militia Commissioners, co. Warwick. Upon informations of the designs of the enemy and particularly in some counties of those parts, we find it necessary that some forces be kept up for prevention thereof, and therefore desire you to continue those 100 horse now on foot in your county for 14 days more. [I. 96, p. 65.]

March 22. Council of State to Sir Geo. Aiscue. [I. 96, p. 65; I. 65, p. 149.]

March 22. Council of State to Lieut.-Col. West, Major Robinson, and Capt. Wigan. By yours from Preston of the 18th inst., with the papers enclosed, we find with what prudence, diligence, and good success you have pursued the instructions given you in Scotland, and how great an improvement you have made thereby of that discovery which it has pleased Providence to make, of the wicked and malicious plots of the enemies, who think by digging deep to hide their counsels, and to bring forth disturbance to that peace to the settling whereof his hand has happily laid the foundation, and we doubt not will finish his good work. We take this seasonable discovery as an earnest of future mercy, and desire to return all praise for it, and well approve of your care in the management of your high trust.

We doubt not but by this time you have seen our instructions to Col. Birch, similar to those sent to you and Col. Duckenfield, for management of the present business, and you may have heard what they have done therein. For the prisoners you have taken, we conceive Lancaster Castle and Liverpool fit places to secure them in, distributing such and so many to each as Col. Birch and you shall think fit; good guard should be set upon them. The arms and ammunition taken from any of them should be secured in Liverpool, and the serviceable horses you are to dispose into fit places, to be kept until it shall appear whether they are forfeited to the State; if so, the State is to hear the charge of keeping; if not, then the same is to be borne by those to whom they are to be redelivered.

Col. Grosvenor's regiment must march back into Scotland, when so many of Col. Rich's troop have come hither as shall be sufficient to keep those parts in peace. In order that the regiment may suffer no inconvenience, nor be a burden to the country, we ordered them a month's pay to satisfy their quarters; of this you will have had notice from the treasurers, and also where you will receive it.

As for the arms and ammunition in the hands of the disaffected tenants of the men restrained, or of any others whom you have cause to suspect, let them be seized and secured, that no ill use may be made of them, and to this purpose you will also find somewhat in the instructions to Col. Birch. Thomas Cooke has been apprehended here, but made his escape, whereupon Parliament passed the Act enclosed. Col. Oughtred Shuttleworth has also been apprehended and committed to the Tower. 38. Report of Drs. William Clarke, Jno. Exton, and Wm. Stephens, Admiralty Judges, to the Council of State. We have considered the petition of the owners and masters of the nine ships bound to Brazil from Lisbon, and stayed by Col. Blake for the service, with the certificate of Col. Popham and other generals at sea, and find that the ships were so stayed by Blake for strengthening himself against the French, who were then reported to be speedily coming to Lisbon, to join with Prince Rupert against him; and that upon Col. Popham's arrival there, with power to seize all ships and goods of the King of Portugal, or any of his subjects, the goods on board the said ships were so seized, and the commanders, officers, and mariners were all, except the pursers and such as they had good cause to confide in, removed out of their own ships, and other commanders, &c. put into them, and they put into other ships of the fleet. This at first made us doubtful of their fidelity to the Parliament, and therefore we put them to proof of their good affection and of their service at that time. By these proofs, upon the testimony of captains and commanders of ships, &c., they have shown their affections to Parliament, and their readiness to do their best service in the said fleet. Col. Blake also certifies that the said masters were not removed from command on any charge, but upon general and prudent grounds.

The only question therefore is what allowance is to be made them; we conceive that they ought to have such pay and allowance as other ships ready victualled, with consideration for victuals taken out of theirs to furnish other ships, and freight from the time of their being dismissed from the fleet with the Portuguese goods, until the time of their unloading them at this port, according to the rate they were to have had from the Portuguese.

By law, if the ship of a foreigner who is in amity with this commonwealth be taken laden with goods of an enemy, the same freight is to be allowed to the owners of the ship, out of the goods of the enemy seized, as the enemy should have paid, and that because, succedit victor in locum victi, et possessor quilibet tenetur hypothecaria; and all the goods are pawned for the freight. Some consideration ought to be had of the freight from the time of their lading until the time of their stay; though if they had not been laden, or laden with goods not seizable, and so dismissed after the time of their service to proceed on their voyage, they ought to have had pay only for the time of their service.

As for their demand of their share in the prizes taken from the French in their coming to port, no share in prizes is allowed to any but the captains and commanders of ships of the Parliament fleet and their mariners, and to such as have commissions for private men-of-war and their mariners. March 25. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Essex. We Whitehall. formerly gave order for dismantling Colchester, and making it untenable, that it might not be surprised by the enemy, to the ruin of what was formerly left, and to the trouble of the public peace, and an insupportable burden to the county. The sense of what they formerly suffered must needs be yet fresh upon them, and as we hear there are again designs upon it, and it is not dismantled according to our order, we wrote Sir Thomas Honeywood to put some force into it, to prevent the execution of those designs. We have now received your letter, and can only say that we leave the manner of doing it to yourselves, who may better attend to it, we having no leisure for such particulars; but the sooner it is made untenable, the sooner the garrison may be dismissed. Though it may be some charge to the county, and bring some inconvenience to the town, yet much less to both than they must needs suffer, if it should be again in the hands of the enemy, of which we know your former experience will not suffer you to doubt, nor to neglect this work any longer, it being so necessary to your safety. [I. 96, p. 70.]

March 25. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners, co. Lancaster. In Whitehall. yours of the 21st inst. from Preston, you ask whether Council will order your troop of horse forth of the county in its troubled condition; but we have had so much care of the safety of your county and those parts, and to preserve them from the effects of the malignant designs on foot amongst you and against you, that we have appointed a brigade to be ready, sufficient to suppress those enemies if they should yet be able to bring their mischief to the birth. We have also taken special care of the sea coasts, having appointed a squadron of good force, under General Blake, to be upon those coasts, to prevent any danger from the Isle of Man. If any considerable enemy shall appear, that troop must be joined to the rest, the better to oppose them; for if any blow should be given to the body of our forces, it is not your single troop that would be able to secure you. That the enemies of the peace may have as little encouragement as may be, we desire you to effectually and thoroughly disarm all those whom you know to be disaffected and dangerous, and to have their arms sent to Liverpool, and secured there for the service. [I. 96, p. 71.]

- March 25. Council of State to Capt. John Wigan. We received yours from Manchester, and have ordered the mistake about the direction of the money to you to be rectified. We have already given sufficient power to the Militia Commissioners as to disarming malignants, and authorise you and Major Robinson, with assistance of the party of horse that came with you into those parts, to seize the arms and ammunition of all such as are like to prove dangerous, and cause them to be secured in the garrison of Liverpool, for the use of the State. [I. 96, p. 72.]
- March 25. Council of State to the Navy Commissioners. On consideration of the necessity for some small vessel to be employed upon the coast of Guernsey, and on information from Col. Willoughby that the Galliot Hoy, of 12 guns, now at Portsmouth, is fit for that service, we desire you to give order that she be appointed with all expedition. [I. 96, p. 73.]
- March 25. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of co. Somerset. Although there does not appear at present any stirring of the enemy, yet we have information that they have designs on foot of great danger, and particularly in those parts; such places as are not yet made untenable should have some strength put into them, to prevent the enemies' surprise. Dunster Castle, belonging to Mr. Lutterell, is yet in that condition that, if seized by the enemy, it might prove dangerous; appoint some militia forces to prevent its surprise, until it is made untenable. [I. 96, pp. 73, 74.]
- March 25. Council of State to Col. Venables. We have considered yours as to the danger of those parts by the Earl of Antrim residing there, and for prevention, Council has made the enclosed order, which you are to deliver to him, and see that he complies with it. As to the detention of the money at Chester by Mr. Walley or the seamen, it could be of no advantage to either of them to have a charge of money chested up remaining in their custody, and we are confident that it was transported by the first opportunity of wind and weather that their leisure from other commands enabled them to make use of; if there has been any default, upon notice thereof we will further consider the matter. [I. 96, p. 74.]
- March 25. Council of State to the Revenue Committee. There being great quantities of biscuit to be furnished for the army in Scotland, and likewise for the Navy, Council desires you to give order to the keeper of Greenwich House to allow the contractors for it, at their request, to make use of certain houses and rooms at Greenwich, with the ovens and utensils therein, and also the wharf, crane, and back yard now unused, for carrying on so necessary a service, as it will be no prejudice to the place. [I. 96, p. 76.]

Council of State to the Army Committee. By an order of Parliament of 18 July last, it was referred to this Council to consider what number of men are fit to attend the Provost-Marshal-General for the service of Parliament, and how the allowances to each of them for a day may be paid, and to give order accordingly. Council finding it necessary that some of the marshal's men should attend Major-Gen. Harrison in this expedition, have thought fit that six men more than have been hitherto allowed be now appointed for the said marshal, for three months to come, and that they be allowed 2s. a day each, which you are to order to be paid accordingly. Council of State to the governors of the several garrisons.* For furnishing necessary recruits to the several regiments in Ireland, for the effectual carrying on and speedy finishing the reducing of that place, we have caused a certain number to be taken out of several regiments and garrisons, and to be sent with all speed, that our forces may march with greater strength to the field, and carry on the work with greater effect. We desire you, upon the muster of yesterday, to draw out of your regiment in South Wales 300 men, and as many more as with safety may be taken, and cause them to march with their arms, under 1 captain, 2 lieutenants, 3 ensigns, and 6 serjeants, to Milford Haven, in order to their shipping for Ireland. You are also to certify us the name and quality of the officers who shall conduct them, who are to receive a fortnight's pay from the treasurer's deputy at Milford Haven, on certificate of the delivery of the men in Ireland, which is to be over and above their growing pay in England.

We have appointed the Treasurers-at-war to pay you six weeks' pay for those men, of which you are to give to each soldier, at his marching away, one week's pay, and deliver the other five weeks' pay to the officer that conducts them, to issue weekly, while they march or stay for shipping, so as to enable them to pay their quarters, that they may not oppress the country. What shall remain at their shipping they are to deliver to each soldier in equal proportions. You are to cause two lists to be made of the men so drawn and transmit one to the Irish Committee, and the other to the Army Committee, and give order to the officers that conduct them to make the like lists when they are to be shipped, and transmit them to the same committees. therein expressed as recruits for the army in Ireland, we shall appoint that, from and after 13 April next, they begin to recruit themselves again to their present numbers allowed by the establishment. For better enabling them to carry on the said service, we desire you to assign them six weeks' pay on account, according to the muster of the 24th inst., out of which we have directed six weeks' pay to be issued by them to the conducting officers, to be by them paid to the recruits, to enable them to pay their quarters to the water side. We shall also order them to pay such soldiers as they shall entertain in their rooms.

We desire you therefore to direct the several muster masters, in the next musters of the said garrisons, which will be on 4 May next, to allow such soldiers as the respective governors shall attest to have been by them so entertained from 13 April next, and to allow the governors pay for them from the day of their entertainment until the said next muster day, which the Treasurers-at-war are to pay out of the 20,000*l.* appointed by order of Parliament of 8 Jan. last for the recruits of Ireland, on the receipts at Goldsmiths' and Haberdashers' Halls. Also that they certify what provisions mentioned in Commissary Phipps' estimate as required for Scotland are in the stores, and what those wanting will amount to, and whether the pack-saddles, tarpaulins, crooks, and hand baskets for Scotland are ready; and if they are, that they be sent away with the present convoy. 40. That the Council of State order the Ordnance officers to deliver 10 barrels of powder, with match and lead proportionable, to Col. Wauton, for the garrison at Yarmouth.

6. Col. Thomson to move Parliament to consider the draft of an Act for mending the Highways about London, to further the service of the navy.

7. Mr. Frost to prepare a report to Parliament of the whole business of the treaty with the envoy of Portugal and offer it to the Committee who were to consider the same.

8. The former order of Council for detention of two French ships of war at Rye taken off, and the captain of the garrison at Rye to discharge them, if he sees cause.

9. Rich. Nutt to be committed prisoner to the Gatehouse, for suffering Thos. Cooke, committed to his custody for high treason, to escape, and to be there kept for further proceedings against him.

10. The propositions brought in by Major-Gen. Harrison, concerning the forces raised about the city of London, referred to the Committee for Examinations, who are to consider where money may be had to satisfy those proposals to-morrow, in order to have it reported to Parliament.

14. To report to Parliament that the time of the power of the Judges of the Admiralty expires 13th April next, and that it should be settled for the future before the term expires; as there are many causes depending in that Court, the discontinuance of authority would delay justice, and create great prejudice to the parties concerned, and to the commonwealth, as concerned in several of the causes.

15. Mr. Goodwin to report to Parliament that the Ordinance of 2nd Oct. 1648, for settling the salary of the Admiralty Judges, also expires on 13 April, and that upon resettling the powers of that Court, the House should also settle such salaries. [I. 65, pp. 166-169.]

But as it is their practice to retain as prisoners merchants, who are partially taken, being upon their merchandizing voyages, you are to let them know that as it is a practice against the common course of war; so if they proceed in those ways, we shall use some other means to find exchanges for them than hitherto we have done; and if he shall not discharge those merchants and others who are not proper prisoners of war, you are to certify us of it, that some other order may be taken for their discharge. 6. The Admiralty Committee to take care that a ship is appointed to such station as may be most proper for searching ships that go in and out of the Thames.

7. Order to be given to Col. Crompton, Governor of Gravesend, to be careful in searching the ships passing, for intercepting intelligence between malignants, and for stopping the passage of such persons as are coming in and going out of England, to the prejudice of the peace.

8. The letter from Major-Gen. Lambert to Sir Hen. Vane referred to the Irish and Scotch Committee.

March 28. 41. ACT for laying an imposition on Coals, towards building and maintaining ships for guarding the Seas.

Parliament, considering the losses arising from the pirates, &c., infesting the coasts, enacts that for building and maintaining ships, there shall be payable, on and after 1 April 1651, on all coals transported from any port of this nation, or imported from Scotland, over and above the duties payable by any law now in force, the following rates:—

For all coals sold by the chalder, 36 bushels Winchester measure, 2s. per chalder.

For all sold by the stack, ruck, fathom, or other denomination, 12*d.* per ton of 20 cwt.

For every ton of Scotch coal containing 20 cwt., 2s. 6*d.* per tun.

Which rates are to be paid to the Commissioners for Customs at the custom houses of the respective ports, by the master of the ship, before unloading.

The Commissioners for Customs are to receive the same on account, and issue it to the Treasurer of the Navy, as by order, signed by five of the Committee of Parliament for the Navy and Customs, they shall be directed.

Any coals unshipped without having paid the aforesaid impositions, shall be forfeit, the one moiety to those who seize or sue for the same, the other moiety or its value, or the fine or composition for the same, to the Commissioners of Customs, for the use of the navy.

Every master of a coal ship shall, on arrival at any port, report in writing to the collectors and check for that port, upon oath if required, the number of chalders or tuns of coal in his vessel, and pay the impost thereof before breaking bulk, or discharging any part of his cargo.

Any master who refuses to declare as aforesaid, or unloads before paying duty, or leaves the port before he has received from the customs' officers a full clearing of his vessel, shall forfeit 10*l.*, half to be paid to the Commissioners of Customs for the navy, the other half to those who prosecute the same, in the Exchequer or any other court of record.

In ports where there are sworn meters, the mayors, bailiffs, or other chief officers to whom the said meters are accountable, shall make a written report to the collectors of customs of the number of chalders and tuns of coals unladen out of each ship. Where there are no sworn meters, or where those employed are unfaithful, the Commissioners of Customs are to appoint one or more fit and able persons, on oath or without, either to weigh and take account of the coals imported, or to inspect the actions, and make report to the Commissioners of Customs of the behaviour of the said sworn meters, who, on being found unfaithful, are for ever disabled from acting as meters again, or from exercising any other office of trust.

Further, the Committee for the Navy and Customs is authorized to make rules for the management of the service and improvement of the revenue, and to approve of such fit and able persons, with their salaries, as shall be presented to them by the Commissioners of Customs, as additional officers, who are hereby enabled to enter all ships importing coals, to gage and admeasure the same, and on discovery of any coals which have not paid duty, to make seizure thereof. In cases of fraud, misbehaviour, or obstruction of officers, the Committee of Parliament for the Excise and the Commissioners of Customs are to proceed against the offenders, according to the ordinances of Parliament of 6 June 1645 and 16 Dec. 1647.

Proviso that all moneys collected for the impositions on coals imported between 12 October and 1 April in each year be paid by the Commissioners of Customs to persons appointed by Parliament, or the Committee of the Navy, to be distributed for relief of the poor of such places as shall be ordered by Parliament or the said committee; also that the Commissioners and Collectors of Customs may allow every master of a coal ship one chalder or tun in 20, free of impost, where ingrain is allowed, and 5 per cent. more on all English coal. was very acceptable to us, especially in regard of the good news he brought of your recovery; we doubt not but God will still continue you an instrument in his hand for settling the peace of this nation, and of his displeasure against those who will not see when his hand is lifted up.

We are informed that a good number of ships have arrived with provisions, and there shall not be wanting here any care or diligence to dispatch away successive supplies, so that they may come seasonably to your necessities, and opportunely to enable you to carry on that work, which we hope the Lord will shorten and finish speedily in your hand. We received two letters from Holland yesterday, being the first we have had from the ambassadors since they went, and enclose you copies, and of their speech there at the first solemn audience; also some other papers, by which you will see as much of the affairs of those parts as have come to our knowledge. 12. To write Major Robinson that care is taken for his month's pay, and that his finding so few arms was no doubt occasioned by the little time he has had to attend to that business; that if his stay were longer, he would find a greater proportion; if he goes speedily from thence, he should speak with some who stay there to take care that a thorough search may be made.

19. Order upon the petition of John Cope and others, for leave to buy their ship, the Matthew and John of London,—which, in her voyage from the Canaries to London, was taken by two Jersey men of war, and is now at Jersey,—and on report of the Admiralty Committee thereon that the selling of her to the French ought to be prevented, as use may be made of her to the prejudice of the commonwealth, that leave be granted to the petitioners to send to Jersey to buy her, and that no advantage will be taken of the person going thither upon that business.

Council of State to John James. Council being informed of your fitness to command the horse and dragoons raised in that county [Worcester] or to be raised upon the Act for the Militia, and also how much it would promote and give expedition to the work, we have issued a commission for that purpose, which we enclose, and desire you, in pursuance thereof, to give your best furtherance and assistance in raising of them, that they may be ready on all occasions for preservation of the peace. Council of State to Col. Crompton, Governor of Tilbury Fort. There was one Monsr. Jentilliot here lately, addressing several persons about public affairs, and being only a private person, it was thought fit to command him to depart within a certain number of days, both from London and also out of the limits of the commonwealth; notwithstanding we are informed he is still at Gravesend, which we conceive is not for any good to this state. We therefore desire you, joining with the Mayor of Gravesend, to examine him as to why he has not obeyed our order, and if he shall pretend sickness, and you find it real, and so great as may be a just impediment, you are to certify us, or otherwise command him to depart forthwith. With note of a letter to the Mayor of Gravesend to like effect. [I. 96, p. 91.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners, county Bucks. We have received yours of the meeting of several persons under pretence of recreation, which we conceive may prove dangerous, and therefore formerly issued orders to forbid such meetings. We approve of your care to prevent any ill effects from those meetings, and desire that the men who have thus offended may be apprehended, and sent up to Council, to answer their contempt of such order, and that their horses and arms be seized for the public service; and if any shall meet hereafter in that manner, you are to call together such of the militia forces as may be necessary, and not only disperse but disarm them, and seize their horses for the service. We have written to the commanders of the horse of Northamptonshire, who will be ready to do the like in that county. [I. 69, p. 92.]

Order in Parliament that the Council of State proceed with the examinations of Thos. Cooke, and give an account to the House concerning him on Friday next, as also consider the business concerning him.

Order that the Council of State give instructions to the Ambassadors now in Holland to demand of the States General of the United Provinces, in the name of Parliament, upon what grounds the fleet under Van Tromp is set forth in reference to the Isle of Scilly, part of the territories of this commonwealth; and if they find those grounds tending to the prejudice of this commonwealth in honour or interest, that then they demand satisfaction for the same, and a revocation of his commission in reference to that island.

That the Council take effectual care, as well by giving orders to the fleet abroad as by making use of any other ships in the service, and by any other way they think fit, to prevent any prejudice to this commonwealth by the fleet under Van Tromp. [I. 89, pp. 21-22.]

The order of Parliament concerning the Isle of Scilly referred to the Committee which treats with the agent of Portugal, who are to prepare such instructions for the Ambassadors now in Holland as they shall think fit, as also an instruction to them to demand satisfaction for the affront offered to them by Prince Palatine Edward; the Committee to meet to-morrow at 8 a.m. in the Horse Chamber, and advise with Dr. Walker upon the business referred to them.

5. To send to Dr. Walker to attend the above Committee.

Council of State to Col. Desborow. On consideration of yours concerning Van Tromp, we have ordered General Blake, with such ships of his squadron as are with him, to sail to Scilly, and there prosecute such instructions as we have given him, and we have written Sir Geo. Ayscue to receive order from Col. Blake. Although by the long delays of the ships with provisions, the thing comes to be further noticed than we could wish, as it may come to the knowledge of those in the island, yet we hope the same will take good effect; we give you this notice that you may prosecute the same with the greater care. Council of State to Sir Geo. Ayscue. Upon information that a fleet of ships under the command of Van Tromp is sailed towards Scilly, and not knowing what he may attempt there, we have thought fit that General Blake, with what ships of his squadron are with him, and the rest appointed to attend that place, sail thither, and put in execution some instructions. We have sent to him to continue there until that affair be done for which you are instructed, and with which he was acquainted before he went hence, whose order you are to follow in that service that is to be done at Scilly, according to your instructions; when you find your business there grow towards a conclusion, signify the same to Council, that you may receive their order before you go off from the coast. Ayscue, to put in execution the instructions herewith sent. While you stay there, you are to send some ship towards the Isle of Man, and those parts, to attend affairs there until you can be at leisure for that service, and you are to have a special care to send away Wiltshire with a convoy for Ireland, he having a great cargo on board for the summer's service there, and that convoy may afterwards attend the coast of Ireland and Isle of Man. Instructions to Col. Blake. 1. To the same effect as above.

2. You are to demand of Van Tromp for what purpose he has come to Scilly, and what his intentions are; and if he has any intentions to do anything prejudicial to the honour or interest of the commonwealth, you are to require him to desist, and if he persists, to use the best ways and means you can to enforce him, and in all things to preserve the honour and interest of this nation. And that nothing may be done in our parts that may interrupt the good correspondence between the commonwealth and the United Provinces, you are to signify to Van Tromp, that, by requiring him to desist, it is not the intention of this commonwealth to protect those who are now in possession of Scilly, in the wrongs they have done the Dutch, or to hinder them from righting themselves upon them, so that they act nothing to the prejudice of the commonwealth; but shall be ready to give them all assistance therein, and expect the like from them, in what you are there to execute. Council of State to the Lord General. We suppose you may have heard of the disaster that befel our forces at the storming of Guernsey Castle, which we have some ground to impute in a great measure to the perfidy of some people in the island combining with the enemy, who excited our party to storm on purpose that they might be cut off, and thereby the island become a receptacle for the mischievous designs of the enemy. Upon consideration of all which we have sent thither a further force, and assigned Col. Bingham to the Harrison, who now commands there in chief, may be drawn from thence, and sent to some other command; and understanding that, by the late dismissal of Col. Cox, there is a field officer's place in that regiment vacant, we suggest to you that Capt. Harrison, being the eldest captain of that regiment, should have a field officer's place and a company reserved there for him in Scotland, which would in several respects fitly answer the present occasion, if you see meet. As for the inspection into the city and university of Oxford, Council will consider of it when they are certified who were entrusted with the first tender of it there, and whether you were any of the Commissioners for that purpose. Upon consideration of what has been propounded to Council by Sir Arthur Hesilrigge and Mr. Scott, upon their return from you, and in several letters since from the Major-General and Commissary-General Walley, concerning the making good to troops their horses lost in service, Council conceive that, as billet money and additional pay are continued to them, and it was undertaken thereupon in behalf of the soldiery that they should find themselves with horse and arms, it may be of evil consequence if this should be brought into general precedent; yet for so much as you stand engaged by any promise to make good, they judge the best way to answer the same may be by your immediate directions for so much as you shall find necessary to be done in that kind, out of the contingent monies under your disposal, and care shall be taken that the next proportion of money to be sent to the army shall be enlarged to answer that emergency, and the treasurers observe your warrants therein. 49. Simon Smith to [Sec. Nicholas.] I am pleased to find that you approve my reasons against the Duke of York's present coming to France; when I wrote you, the Earl of Norwich was the fittest person to serve the King and Duke in these parts, but that you may see the instability of all things here, the Coadjutor has retired discontented, Beaufort lost with the people and taken part with the Court, Madam Chevereux disgraced and withdrawn, with her daughter, the so near Princess of Conti. Chateaufort has lost the seals, which are given to the Premier President, the old Chancellor Seguier, and Chavigné recalled to Council, and in fine all things run the Prince of Conde's way, who sits and says very little and fait le bon mine, to the Duke of Orleans. The most intelligent here are posed, and if last week I thought some judgement might be given concerning the settlement of affairs, I now think it may require some months to discover the intentions of the P[rince] of Conde. Sure I am, he is not in love with the Louvre, and I find the King and Duke of York lose ground with him upon that score; indeed so little encouragement is given to honest men, that I scarcely wonder to see his Majesty so ill served. Your Louvre friends do not yet think that Mr. Fanshaw shall make a saving voyage, unless it be by accepting to be Secretary to the Duke of Buckingham, which your friend Sir John Berkley says he had commission from the Duke to offer him: and your friend Lord Jermyn is so confident he shall not only be Secretary but first Minister of State, that he has already bespoke your beloved friend Walsingham to be one of three Secretaries, and fancies that number will be too small for him. I agree with you that Lord Jermyn and his adorers [have a ?] design in their invitation of themselves to Lord Hatt[on]'s; but the difficulty rests to discover what it should be; Lord Digby reports that Lord Hatt[on]'s reservedness defeated Lord Jermyn's design, and something Lord Digby had likewise to say, which is forborne until another time.

As for the book in the press, I find it is either a frivolous report or the opportunity lost by Sir — —, in receiving it. All people of understanding here are of opinion that — intends either for Scotland, Jersey, or Holland, and they are the more induced to that belief because he and his creatures so force the discourse of it upon all occasions.

We hear that Denzil Hollis had lately sent to him 40 or 50 of the King's blank Commissions, which he filled up with Presbyterian names, and sent them to England with so much policy that they miscarried by the way, and so the parties are discovered, which will make the second part of the Earl of Derby's plot discovered, as is written out of England by your friend Birkenhead, the particulars whereof I believe we shall very shortly have in print.

I wonder the D[uke] of Wurtemberg should burn D. Seifrid's book by the hands of the hangman, and let him escape for such doctrine, and that the Rebels' Ambassadors should only receive bafflings and derision from boys and women there, and not some such just reward as Doristlaus or Ascham did, considering so many English are in Holland. I also wonder to hear that Lord Inchiquin enquires after the fitness of Capt. Meade to be his son's tutor, considering he is neither yet arrived in Holland, nor I believe would undertake such a charge, considering his late ill fortune that way. I am confident the Marquis of O[rmond ?] will never be either of the Presbyterian or the Louvre's opinion, and yet I cannot but think they receive much countenance from him, and it is wholly impossible for any honest loyal heart to carry himself either safely to himself or serviceable to [his master in the Louvre here.

Mr. Attorney's long stay is certainly more prejudicial to prince Rupert than it can be there serviceable. To let you see what great services are to be done about the Duke of York, it is here said that Mr. Attorney lately drew a letter for the Duke to write to somebody, when the Duke instantly revealed it to some of his Louvre scouts, and prevailed upon them to send the copy hither, which they say has been received with triumph and glory. God be merciful to the family, for I fear irresolution and unsteadiness will be their ruin. To let you see our mutability, since I wrote my letter, the seals are taken from the Premier President, and given to the old Chancellor Seguier, [for] 100,000 Crowns, and it is said that Count Tillier and Monsieur Servient shall hold their places by the same tenure, notwithstanding they have been the [greatest] enemies the Prince of [Conde] had, and if money will buy out his revenge, I should think he did not yet, * * * for avarice of this kind will not get him more money than it will lose him friends. We have lately sent order for the drawing of some men out of your garrisons, and sending them to the waterside, for Ireland, under conduct of your recruiting officers, and those to be drawn out of your garrison are particularly assigned for Col. Venables' regiment in Ulster, since which time Col. Venables has sent over Capt. W. Lowe to take care of their transportation, so that the charge of the month's pay for the officers that were to conduct them to Ireland may be spared. Order the officers appointed for their conduct to see them shipped and under sail, and then to deliver them over to Capt. Lowe. [I. 96, p. 101.]

George Edwards alias T. Coke to Rich. Smith alias Col. Thornhill, Rotterdam. Though I have had a hard task to act here in our trade, in respect of the dangers of the times, yet I still hold my head above water. The time for quick markets draws now on towards the spring; notwithstanding daily interruptions of our letters and commodities, I make shift to hold up our credit upon the exchange. I know you do not desire to have your country wares last vented. I before wrote you that D. R. refused to join stock with us upon any terms, and thereupon other factors have been nominated, and now is a time I could serve you aptly, if I had but a note of such persons as you would employ or trust in your traffic. When at the Hague and at Rotterdam, you and your brother John gave me a list of all such persons in this country as you were resolved to make use of or trade with, either for person, purses, or reputation. If I had that by me now, I could make seasonable applications for your service. It is of so much concern in this juncture that without it I can make no progress in our business; but with that light, I have now opportunities to speedily bring that business to some head. To that purpose I have sent this express, whom you may trust, and deliver him a speedy answer, and fail not to send the note, and what light you can else about your countrymen.

Our northern markets look very gloriously, and it is a shame your's should be the last. Send me but that list or model by the bearer, and I shall be able to give directions how you shall dispose of yourself by the next return. Though the bearer be trusty, yet he knows nothing of any business, so dispatch him speedily and without questions.

Remember me to your brother John and his brother, also to Jervais and Sir Richard. Direct your letters to Peter Molin, at the Angel, Lombard Street. I am loth to have the name of Edwards seen on the back side of a letter. [Copy. 1½ pages. Vol. IX. No. 102.]

Council of State to the Militia Committee of London. We have frequent notice of the designs of the enemy for stirring up insurrections and troubling the peace, and particularly within the city of London and some neighbouring counties. For timely obviating mischiefs and preservation of these parts in peace—the disturbance whereof we know to be mainly aimed at by those who have the chief management of those wicked designs—the horse raised by you in the city and liberties must be kept up for two months longer, to the number they were first raised to, that they may be ready for service, unless we in the meantime shall give other order, which we shall willingly do, and abate this charge and trouble, as soon as our care of the common safety will permit; but meantime we find it requisite to give you this order, and doubt not of your ready compliance. Mr. Bond to report to Parliament that, upon considering the state of Guernsey, and the designs of the enemy upon it, Council thinks that, besides the five companies already there, two companies of 100 each, besides officers, should be sent thither, one to be commanded by Col. Bingham, and the other by Major [Barrett] Lacy; and that for the provision for them, two of Col. Heane's company should be transferred to Col. Bennet's regiment, which is not yet full, and two new companies raised to be of Col. Heane's regiment, and paid upon the establishment thereof, but sent into Guernsey. Also as Council finds it necessary that two field officers should be upon the place, and the charge of these two companies are by this means saved, he is to request Parliament that Col. Bingham and Major Lacy may be established in pay until further order, and that Col. Bingham may be allowed 20s. a day, as Colonel and Governor, besides the pay which he is to receive as captain out of Col. April 10. Proceedings in Parliament upon the report from the Council of State, touching their transactions with the public minister from the King of Portugal.

The first article of the demands made by the Council of State was read, viz., That all the English who are in prison or in any restraint, under bail or otherwise, in any part of the dominions of the King of Portugal, be forthwith set at liberty. Explanation by Council. As to the first article, our meaning is that all the English who have been put under any kind of restraint since Rupert first arrived in the river of Lisbon be set at liberty, and their bail and caution discharged, except such as are under bail or caution or in prison upon any civil action for debts, or for matters criminal, which have not relation to any acts of hostility between the two nations, since the first arrival of Rupert. Order that Parliament approves of this demand, and that it be insisted on in the treaty with the public minister of the King of Portugal.

The second demand, viz., That all ships, money, and goods belonging to any of the English, that have been seized in any of the dominions of the King of Portugal, be forthwith freely restored, and reparation made for damages to the proprietors. Explanation of Council, that debts also are to be comprised, and restitution is to be in specie, of the same value and goodness as at the time of the seizure; or if not in specie, or that they be impaired by occasion of the seizure, then satisfaction to be made to the true value when they were seized; as to reparation for damages, we are content to explain, and shall not insist upon the greatest extent thereof, but only as consonant with equity and reason, and testifying our propension to peace. Like order of approval.

The third demand, viz., That justice be done upon those that murdered our men in Portugal, being on shore, and upon those that attempted the burning of the Admiralty ship in the river. Explanation of Council, If you assent to the matter of it, we offer as a means of execution that such of the English nation as were actors or accessories to the murder of our men on shore, and are or

April 10., shall be hereafter found within any of the dominions of the King of Portugal, be delivered to us to be proceeded against here; and such as are guilty as aforesaid, being subjects to Portugal, be proceeded against there; and that all guilty persons now withdrawn, who shall be hereafter nominated by Parliament, be proceeded against to proscription, and be executed whenever they return into the dominions of the said King. Approved.

The fourth demand read, with estimates of the charge of fitting, setting forth to sea, and maintaining several fleets upon the coast of Portugal in 1649, 1650, and part of 1651, total 214,640, viz., That reparation be given to this commonwealth, and repayment made of all their charges in setting out the fleets sent to Portugal for reducing the revolted ships that were protected by the King of Portugal, or for doing right to the people of this nation, for losses sustained from that king or people, according to the estimate delivered. Explanation by Council: This satisfaction desired is to be towards reimbursement of the great charge of the commonwealth, in default of right and justice from the king, toward the payment of which we are content the goods seized here and the reprisals taken by us shall go on account. Approved, but the demand to be only 180,000*l.*, and the neat value of the ships, sugars, &c., taken from the Portuguese to go upon account thereof, and that in such sum is comprehended the sixth part of the mariners' share, which is not to be put upon the account of the Portuguese.

Fifth demand, That restitution or reparation be made of or for all goods belonging to the English taken by Rupert or Maurice, or by any ships under their command, and brought into Portugal and disposed of, or now remaining there. Explanation by Council. As to this article, which you say is so abstruse and difficult, we conceive the demand exceedingly plain and clean. This restitution ought to be made by the King of Portugal because, although demand was made, no civil process could be obtained against Rupert, nor would the king suffer our ships there to do justice themselves.

Sixth demand, That the Convertine and all other ships belonging to the commonwealth, or any other ship belonging to people of this nation, brought into Portugal by Rupert or any of his fleet, which are or have been in the hands of the King of Portugal or of any of his subjects, and have been disposed of by them, be redelivered, with all their apparel, guns, and equipage, and all due satisfaction given for their unjust detention. Explanation: our meaning is clear, and for the reason before given, we demand restitution and satisfaction as therein expressed, whether the ships were disposed of by the King of Portugal or any of his subjects, or whether sold by his consent or not.

The answer of the Council of State to the three preliminary demands of the public minister of Portugal, contained in the two last paragraphs of the 15th paper, was also read, viz., To the end there may be nothing remaining with us which may longer detain you from giving a full answer to the 4th demand, whereby Parliament may know what satisfaction they may expect, we further declare that the demands preliminary to the treaty will be comprehended in the six articles in our first paper ; nor is it our intention to make or insist upon any new preliminary demands, unless, upon report of our proceedings to Parliament, we receive their express order, or unless further evidence than is yet before us of injuries done to this nation by Portugal occasion the same, before the preliminary articles on both parts be signed. And for answer to your three preliminary articles we say, that by the narrative of the fact formerly delivered to you by our committee, it appears that Parliament, for righting themselves and the people of this nation for the injuries done them by the Portuguese, have not proceeded otherwise than in the way of justice, according to the law of nations, and with care not to give any just occasion of interruption of the former amity ; whereas the seizure, and other acts of force and denial of justice by the Portuguese, have been contrary to common right, and the articles of alliance between the two nations, and therefore it ought not to be expected that there should be any cessation of arms or renewal of commerce, until the satisfaction demanded be given to this commonwealth that has sustained the wrong ; yet, to show our continued propension to peace, we make this particular reply to your three preliminary desires.

That from the time that the King of Portugal shall actually set at liberty the persons and goods of all the English restrained or seized, and absolutely discharge them and their bail or sureties, and give security for the performance of the other four demands, they are content there shall be a cessation of arms, and a continuance of mutual and free trade, and no further seizures, upon any pretence whatsoever, either of persons or goods, for three months ; and they limit the ending of the time as aforesaid, that within that time, the treaty of a full peace may proceed, in the managing whereof consideration may be had of the former articles of peace, and of such other articles as shall be thought fit ; and that upon the making thereof, the freedom of trade and commerce and all other fruits may take effect, not upon any cessation temporary, but upon a plenary league and amity.

Order that the answers given in by the public minister of Portugal to the demands made by the Council of State, with their explanations, are not satisfactory.

That the said minister give in his positive answer to the above, and the other proposals of the Council of State, as approved by Parliament, within six days after they are delivered to him. [I. 89, pp. 24-29.]

51. Col. Thos. Ogle to [Secretary Nicholas]. Since my coming to the Hague, I have been informed that Prince Rupert really intends to question the business of Aylesbury, when it shall please God to put His Majesty in a fit condition; and I also find, much to my grief, that I am much misunderstood concerning that action. Partly therefore for my own vindication, but principally that the truth may appear when His Highness shall have occasion to question it, I have left this paper, containing a brief account, which I am ready to deliver upon oath, and entreat you to certify His Majesty hereof with speed.

It pleased His late Majesty, that blessed martyr, to give me express orders, when a prisoner in Winchester House upon his interest, to proceed with Messrs. Nye, Goodwin, Homstead, Grafton, Moseley, Devenish, and others of the Independent faction, according to my letter to the Earl of Bristol intimating their desires to His Majesty, on their own and all the rest's behalf, in order to their plenary satisfaction and freedom from pressure of conscience in point of worship, which they judged might more easily and safely be obtained, and by them more honestly and honourably accepted from the King than the Covenant, then in its triumphant career in London, they having failed of their expectation from the address they made to His Majesty by Sir Basil Brooke. Upon receipt of this warrant from His Majesty, I concluded upon certain articles or rather propositions, in order to a treaty upon their coming to Oxford, and for this purpose I received a safe conduct from His Majesty, with a blank for such names as I thought fit to insert, as also 100*l.* out of his bounty towards my necessities.

The general upon which all particulars were founded was that if His Majesty gave them assurance of liberty of conscience, upon their submission to the temporal authority, they should employ their whole interest in opposition to the Scotch Covenant, serve His Majesty against the two Houses, and submit to a moderate episcopacy, which they judged to be far more tolerable than the other, and indeed the only way to settle the nation; and from this general, one particular was that they would deliver the garrisons of Aylesbury and Windsor to the King, as pledges for performance of their future assistance, upon His Majesty's command, after their coming to Oxford and receiving satisfaction.

Upon those considerations I was suffered to escape from prison, and conveyed to Oxford, where I gave His Majesty an account of all particulars, and delivered the papers under their own hands, wherein was expressed their speedy coming to Oxford, upon the safe conduct; but instead of their coming according to expectation, they sent a messenger to know the certainty of my arrival, and their entertainment, by whom they received an account of both, which, by two second letters to the Earl of Bristol and me, they acknowledged to be satisfactory, and so magnified His Majesty's grace and favour, and so bewailed their sorrow for the mischief they had been instrumental in doing, that they proposed the delivery of Aylesbury to His Majesty before their coming to Oxford.

Upon receipt of these letters, the Earl of Bristol, by His Majesty's command, did seriously and in private debate with me what was to be done, and I positively delivered my sense that the motion was not to be accepted of at that time; first, as it might hinder a further progress in the general proposition, by confirming that vulgar assertion at London that always, when His Majesty pretended fairest for religion and law, he had some particular design in his chiefest aim. Secondly, if the King thought fit to have that town as an assurance of their fidelity, it was most certain to be obtained when they were come to Oxford; for then they would be faithful in performance, in regard of their own particular safety and preservation. This advice His Majesty approved of when I spoke with him, and so commanded me to return answer for their speedy coming to Oxford.

While they were expected, Lord Digby, without my privity or his father's consent, sent to Lieut.-Col. Moseley at Aylesbury, and demanded the delivery of that town, according to their undertakings, who answered that he daily expected the rest of his correspondents, and that upon their coming, they would advise about it, and deliver that town to His Majesty, before their coming to Oxford. The second day after, Moseley sent letters to the Earl of Bristol and to me, that they were all at Aylesbury, and resolved to stand there until the delivery of the town, and desired me to meet him at Ethrop, to conclude the manner thereof. Lord Digby thereupon sent for me, and pressed me to meet and manage this business, but I refused; and he afterwards got the King to command me to undertake it. I obeyed, upon His Majesty's word that whatever was the event, I should not be blamed, but should only receive my directions in writing from Lord Digby, and return the answers; and to encourage me, I had a commission for the government of Aylesbury, if it succeeded.

VOL. XV.

April $\frac{13}{28}$.

I obeyed, and in a week or ten days concluded upon the time and manner of the delivery thereof, and had it under Moseley's hand and seal, confirmed by his voluntary oath upon the Bible, for performance of the particulars agreed upon by him, which I reported to His Majesty, and delivered afterwards to Lord Digby, adding that I had engaged Moseley to send out his brother-in-law and another captain, as hostages for his true performance, though this was no part of my instructions, for which His Majesty thanked me.

At the time appointed I went to Ethrop, and an hour or two before, Prince Rupert came up with the party, and the hostages not coming, I secured the man that was sent to me by Moseley in excuse thereof, until Lord Gerard's coming, to whom I delivered him, and with him rode to the Prince, and showed him Moseley's letter, and advised him to make a retreat, which His Highness did to Thame, and I came voluntarily to Oxford, where, upon the Prince's return, I was committed to Capt. Smith, provost marshal, by Lord Digby's warrant, and was not discharged from his house for two or three hours, and then upon His Majesty's special command, and afterwards confined to my own quarter until further order.

While I was there, I petitioned His Majesty and Prince Rupert several times, and earnestly pressed, both by myself and friends, divers persons, and in particular, Lord Gerard, and used what means I could to be brought to a council of war, but could not obtain it; I understood that the reason thereof, and of my suffering, was a particular enmity between Prince Rupert and Lord Digby, who, to clear himself of the Prince's charge, had committed me; during this time I received several messages from the Earl of Bristol, by Mr. Broome, to be patient, and that the conclusion should be both for my honour and advantage, and that meantime I should want nothing.

After the Prince had marched into the North, and Lord Gerard into Wales, I was discharged, and requested His Majesty either for a public vindication, in case of my innocency, or punishment in case of guilt, or else a pass. Public vindication was denied me, but a private I received from both His Majesty, the Earl of Bristol, and Lord Digby, who told me they were all satisfied of my innocence, whereupon I desired my pass, and had it, with a safe conduct, 200*l.*, and six horses, and I then departed from Oxford, beseeching His Majesty to judge of my fidelity by the experience of my former sufferings and service, and also by my future carriage, and not by reports or informations.

I arrived in Weymouth, with my wife and children, in May, and thence got into France, with much difficulty, but lost both my horses and the bills of exchange appointed to me at Weymouth, upon the flight of the governor and many others into Portland, and amongst them those from whom I was to receive the 200*l.*, and the bills were not answered, in regard of the loss of the town and their flight.

I continued in France until Gravelines was over, and thence came to Sas leguer. At Flushing I fell desperately sick, which forced my return to England, and so into Northumberland, to my own house, whence, after my recovery and the King's coming to Newcastle, I was sent prisoner to London, and so continued at the Black Rod and Newgate, until His Majesty was seized upon by the army.

At Stoke was the first time I had the happiness to have any discourse with His Majesty since my departure from Oxford; he showed me particular respect, and stated, in presence of Sir Thomas Windbank, Capt. Marsh, and others, that he believed I was extremely wronged about the Aylesbury business, and that he had heard of my great sufferings, for which he was very sorry, and would remember them hereafter. At Hampton Court His Majesty commanded me to give him the whole proceedings about Aylesbury in writing, which I did, and earnestly desired liberty to print it, which he promised; but finding, upon perusal of it, that the original papers were in the Earl of Bristol's hands, he thought it necessary to peruse them before publication, and stated that he had sent for them, and upon their return, I should have license to print it, and he would also tell me the cause why he desired it, and give me further order; but meantime His Majesty was suddenly carried away to the Isle of Wight, and I never saw him afterwards, nor knew what became of the writings which, by his command, I had prepared and delivered to him.

Now consider :

1st. That Aylesbury was attempted against my advice.

2nd. That I was commanded by the King to undertake the managing of it.

3rd. That I did nothing in it save by order in writing from Lord Digby, and returned Moseley's papers in answer to his Lordship.

4th. That after I was committed, I pressed my utmost to be brought to a Council of War.

5th. That I was vindicated by His Majesty, the Earl of Bristol, and Lord Digby, the particulars whereof I acquainted Sir Wm. Boswell with, after my coming to Sas, wherewith he was fully satisfied, as appears by sundry letters under his own hand.

6th. That I have never since, directly or indirectly, made any application to the enemy, but suffered with constancy and patience loss of liberty for five months, at the Black Rod, and 22 weeks at

And lastly, I have been above seven months a prisoner with the serjeant-at-arms at Whitehall, and elsewhere, under colour of being at Breda, and holding correspondence with his now Majesty, being a dangerous person, and an enemy to the commonwealth; where with patience, through God's blessing, as a ship in a tempestuous sea, I ride out the storm at anchor. Council considering the charge for keeping in repair the houses reserved for the use of the commonwealth, and what has been expended more than has been paid to the surveyor of works for that purpose, find that for the work already done, the payment whereof is in arrear since January last, and what has to be done by September next, 2,000*l.* should be paid to Mr. Carter, surveyor-general of works, 1,000*l.* for the arrears, and the other 1,000*l.* by 200*l.* at a time [on the 5th of each month] for carrying on the work. Instructions by the Council of State for Major-Gen. Thos. Harrison. Council,—finding several pernicious designs carried on by the enemies for disturbing the peace, particularly in North Wales and some northern counties, and that not only by discontented parties there, but also by forces designed from Scotland and the Isle of Man,—appoint you as commander-in-chief with a competent force, to endeavour to prevent the mischief designed. To that end, you are to repair with all speed to the body of horse now in or near Lancashire, under Col. Rich, and upon your arrival, you are to continue with you three troops of your own regiment of horse, and send back Col. Rich with his three troops to the Eastern Association, for further orders.

You are also to receive into your charge the rest of the forces at present under Col. Rich, as also such other forces as Council shall send out of the 4,000 horse and dragoons to be raised out of the militia forces, so as to make up those under your command to 2,500, and with them, and such other of the forces in the garrisons in North Wales and cos. Chester, Stafford, Lancaster, Derby, Notts, and York, as you find necessary,—having regard to the safety of the garrisons,—you are to take care of those parts, and prevent all disturbance of the peace, by suppressing all insurrections, and opposing any attempt of the enemy from the Isle of Man, Scotland, or any other place.

You are also by all good ways and means to encourage such as you find well affected to Parliament, and proceed to the disarming of all disaffected persons, and endeavour to discover and secure all that hold correspondence with the enemy.

You are to correspond with Sir Arth. Hesilrigge, who has received directions from Council not only to have assistance from you if needed, but also to afford you such assistance, with the forces under his command in the four northern counties, as shall be found necessary, and as the emergency of the service may require.

You are also to give an account from time to time, to Council and the Lord General in Scotland, of all your proceedings, and observe such further orders as you may receive from Parliament, Council, or the Lord General. [I. 65, pp. 289-291.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of Surrey. By your letter to Council on behalf of Wm. Arthur, and by his petition, we understand he has expended a certain sum some years since, in buying arms and ammunition for the militia for your county, and has suffered much by the long forbearance of his money, which, being disbursed for the public service of your county, he should be satisfied with some part of it for the present, out of the money in your hands lately raised for the militia. You are therefore to order the treasurer of such money to pay 100*l.* to Arthur on account. [I. 96, p. 132.]

Council of State to Sir Wm. Constable. We have considered yours of the 15th and the enclosed papers, and a letter sent to us from the Lord Chief Baron referring to those matters, and thank you for your care. We doubt not but the prisoners, now they are in the net, can make smooth pretences to procure leave to come out; but we think fit before they are parted with, that they be dealt with in the terms and according to the directions in the enclosed paper. When Lord Windsor and Col. Sandys are brought before us, we shall shew them cause for this proceeding, and let Lord Windsor know the like cause of his peremptoriness with you. We like your caution in disallowing the pretences of Tracie Talbot, and such others as would be walking out of their tether, as not holding it fit they should have countenance of such authority for it.

The business touching Worcester is under consideration, and we know you will have a watchful eye upon it, and all the parts about you, for prevention of any intended disturbances. Our order is already sent you touching Humphrey Leigh. We have met with Lord Chandos at his home near Uxbridge; before our attaching him, he had conveyed away his horses, oxen, and other things, to prevent their seizure, which to us argues his small confidence in his innocence. He is now lodged by us in the Tower. For your further dealing with any dangerous persons within your reach, we refer you to former instructions, and know you will not be wanting in anything which may tend to prevent the dangers threatened. Inform yourself concerning Matchfield House, belonging to Col. Lyggin in Worcestershire, formerly a garrison for the King, and whether it has been made untenable, and give a speedy account thereof. Council of State to the Lord Deputy of Ireland. There is a party in the Highlands up in arms against Argyle and the King of Scots, and the Scots labour all they can to heal those divisions, and to settle those insurrections. Meantime, before they can compose those differences, if a party could be spared to be sent thither, to gain a safe landing place in those parts, in order to a further force to be sent when it can be spared, it would cause a considerable diversion of the main army of the enemy in Scotland. You best know the state of affairs in Ireland, and how what is above propounded may agree with what you have to prosecute there; correspond herein with the Lord General, and if he and you think fit, prosecute that design in such manner as you shall agree upon between yourselves. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for the several counties. Parliament has thought fit, for the better carrying on of the Irish service, which is in a good measure advanced, to pass an Act, of which a copy is enclosed, for pressing 10,000 men for recruits to the regiments already there; and in pursuance thereof, we have thought fit that — men, as part of those 10,000, should be raised and impressed in your county, and conducted to — and there delivered to such officers as shall be there to receive and transport them to Ireland. And that your county may be at no charge for such men, we have ordered that 2*d.* a mile be allowed, from the place of impressing to the place where they are to be delivered, out of which the soldier is to be paid 8*d.* a day, so that they may pay their quarters, which you are to command the conductors to take care is observed; and you are to make choice of such conductors as will be likely to give a good account thereof, and to see that the order of Parliament against quartering in private houses is observed; the rest of the money is for the conductors, and all other charges. We have taken order with the Treasurers-at-War, that the necessary money shall be paid you.

That no advantage may be taken by constables or any disaffected persons to impress or send away persons, either upon particular ill will, or for their good affection to the commonwealth, and for any special forwardness to appear in their service, you are to appoint persons that are honest and well affected to take up such number of men in the several divisions as you shall appoint, and order the constables to assist them in bringing the men before you to be impressed. In the impressing, besides the qualifications of exception expressed in the Act, you are to take care that such be sent as may best be spared, and that such as have heretofore freely listed or manifested their good affection may not be sent.

In case the proportion of money appointed to you shall not be sufficient to answer the full allowance of 2*d.* a mile for so many recruits, on account of what shall be further due, the particulars being certified to Council under your hands, order shall be taken to have the same paid to you by the Treasurers-at-War. That you may the better make your election of the fittest persons, you are, in the distribution of the numbers charged upon the several divisions in each of your counties, to appoint such an extra number to be brought before you that you may make a proper election out of them. Hugh Norris also alleges that you will not make good what is owing him. These actions reflect upon us; though we have ordered your employment as a public person there, we cannot ratify our resolutions if you make so bad use thereof. 11. The petition of Thomas Carpenter referred to the Irish and Scotch Committee.

12. The business of Captain Robt. Joseph, formerly referred to Sir Thos. Walsingham and Col. Jno. Twisleton, referred to Col. Blount, Captains Bowles and Foach, and Sir Michael Livesey.

13. The persons and officers who attend Council, and were established in the pay and service of Council last year, to be continued in their employments for this year at the same allowances, which Mr. Frost is to pay them as they grow due, and warrants are to be brought in by him to Council to be signed for these purposes. Council of State to Colonel Dixwell, or Cols. Twisleton, Gibbons, and the rest of the Commissioners. We have considered how the arms of the militia in the several counties might be safely kept, so that no use may be made of them to the prejudice of the commonwealth, and will speedily send you instructions. Meantime you are to take away the arms and seize the horses of all Malignants and disaffected men, and secure the persons of such as you conceive to be dangerous, and certify what you do. The instructions formerly sent should be kept private, if you have not already communicated them to the rest of the gentlemen; if so, then say that that they have been respited. Send up Bartholomew and his accomplices in safe custody; also Sir Jacob Ashley, Sir Thos. Peyton, and Sir Jno. Boys, and take care that the prisoners lately apprehended are secured in one of your garrisons, farthest from their houses and the places where they have any influence. Col. Gibbons must add such of his men to the several garrisons where they are confined as you judge convenient. [I. 96, p. 148.]

62. Propositions by Peter Blondeau to the Mint Committee. I undertake the coining of money at 1s. 4d. the lb. troy of silver and 7s. of gold, receiving the metal in plate of the proper thickness, and the stamps, dyes, and instruments once for all, the maintenance and repair of them being at my own charge.

Also 1½d. for silver and 10d. for gold for melting and casting the plate.

Also 1d. for silver and 2d. for gold for engraving the stamps and dies.

Thus the profits of the State will be 7s. per lb. on gold and 5½d. on silver; so that if 30,000*l.* sterling, that is 10,000 lbs. troy, be coined weekly, as formerly, the profit will be 12,000*l.* yearly, and 91,000*l.* yearly if 5,000 lbs. of gold be coined weekly, and only 4 or 5 officers to be paid.

The instruments will cost 1,000*l.* and the buildings 400*l.*

I undertake to provide instruments for a trial, and to employ no men but those approved by the Mint Committee.

I will use the new way, known only to myself, of marking the coins on the edge, the old way spoiling many stamps and engines, and being impracticable on thin money. The cost hitherto of coining by the hammer has been greater than that now propounded.

With order by the Mint Committee that, having examined the case fully, with the objections of the master, officers, and workmen [of the Mint, and others, they voted in favour of Blondeau's way of coining. [1 page printed.]

63. Order in the Mint Committee that the coin offered by the Frenchman, with letters upon the edges, is a better fashion of money than the present fashion of the money of England, and is for the honour and advantage of the Commonwealth, provided the said coin be made at a moderate charge.

That the moneymen of the Mint in the Tower do this day week bring in the lowest proposition for making the gold and silver coin after this fashion, both as to preparing and repairing the engines, and other charges, as also what quantity they will undertake to make by the week. out of such concealed estates as petitioner may discover to the committee at Haberdashers' hall, and 100 loads of timber, with the lops and tops, for repair of the fortifications of the garrison, and of the platforms at the mouth of the harbour. The works and fortifications of the garrison and castle are so ruined and defective, both towards the land and sea, that if some speedy course be not taken, the platform that commands the harbour's mouth, and the tower where the stores are kept, will fall into the sea, and the whole garrison become liable to the mercy thereof, or else to the rage of the enemy, who will be ready to take hold of any opportunity to possess or ruin a place of so great concernment. There are scarcely 10 guns out of 100, with their carriages, that will endure above two or three shots, by reason of the deficiency of the platforms, and there are many other defects; the reparation of the whole will amount to between 4,000*l.* and 5,000*l.* as has been already certified by Col. White. [1 page.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners co. Lincoln. We have received your letter concerning the horse, and heard Mr. Disney as to the obstructions you name, and referred it to a committee how money may be had for the arrears of quarters due to the horse, and appointed Disney to attend, and state what he has represented of the difficulty among the soldiers to follow those officers appointed to take charge of them. If they refuse to ride under their command, we have other men ready to mount; certify us thereof, and have your horses and arms ready for such men as we shall order to receive them. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Lincoln. There has been some disorder among the [soldiers of Capt. Council of State to Col. Popham. Upon intelligence of some more than ordinary numbers of forces lately drawn to Dunkirk, which it is supposed may be in order to their transportation to some parts of England, the Admiralty Committee wrote you to pass over to Dunkirk, with what shipping you could get together, and ride there, so as to prevent the coming out of such forces; conceiving it to be a necessary service, we desire you to prosecute it with expedition. Council of State to the Sheriff of co. Herts. Parliament has appointed a number of men to be impressed in your county for Ireland, and as some men may be ready to raise mutinies and commit other disorders, you, to whom by law the peace of the county is committed, are to take special care that, according to directions from the Militia Commissioners of that county, you have such forces ready where they shall appoint as may be able to preserve the peace against the attempts of those who would endeavour to disturb it. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of London, Westminster, the Hamlets, and Southwark. We doubt not but you are very sensible of the ease that is given to the City and parts adjacent by reducing the number of horse to be raised to so small a proportion, and this has been done out of a desire that no charge might be made upon you more than is necessary for your safety, which, when it comes in competition, can bear no proportion to a greater imposition. But this place, by reason of its greatness, may give means and opportunity to sudden attempts by ill-disposed and disaffected persons, which may neither be foreseen for timely prevention, nor are there always forces ready and unengaged to suppress them; and as we doubt not but within your jurisdiction, there are many well affected persons who are both able and willing to have their horses ready with well-affected riders, for the prevention or resisting of any such mischief, we recommend the same to you, to give encouragement to such men to have their horses ready, and to put them into a posture fit for the ends aforesaid, upon all occasions. Proceedings in Parliament. The House resumed the debate upon the answer of the Portuguese minister to the last paper sent to him from the Council of State, and the question being put that it was satisfactory, passed in the negative. The question being put that there be a proceeding in a treaty for peace, before the performance of the two first preliminary articles, and security given for performance of the four other articles, it also passed in the negative.

The clause in the final demands sent by Council to him, touching the cessation of acts of hostility, was read, and it was resolved that the House adhere to and insist upon this clause; also that this addition be made, that from and after such time as it shall be certified to the House that the two first preliminary articles are performed, and security given for performance of the other four, a treaty shall begin for settling a firm peace between England and Portugal, upon such articles of peace as shall be just and honourable, and for the good of both nations in order to trade and commerce, and other fruits of peace.

Also that the Council of State communicate these resolutions to him, and demand a positive answer within three days; with power to Council, if he come up fully and clearly, to settle the manner and time of performance; but if he do not, then to report to the House, that further order may be taken. 69. The Provost and Company of Moneyers of the Mint in the Tower to the Mint Committee. We will make a trial by the mill of the several gold and silver coins mentioned in your order with all expedition, but several mills and horses will be required and houses to be erected, the present ones being much decayed, having been built in Briott's time, 1633, and costing 1,700*l.*, before any trial could be made by him. If the State will advance 1,000*l.*, we think all the materials necessary for coining money in the new way may be set up.

We cannot possibly present to you the certain rate of coining the money by the mill, until we have made a trial, and then we shall desire but a livelihood: we desire, if you will have a trial, that some money may be advanced for preparing our materials, both for the engines, and in respect of other charges for perfecting the said coin with letters about the edges, you appointing the motto; and upon this trial, we shall be enabled to give you a just and true account as to what we can afford to make the said coins by the pound weight for, and make no question of doing it as fair, beautiful, and cheap as any Frenchman in the world. Council of State to Dr. King and Mr. Puller, Justices of Peace, co. Herts. There have lately been some tumultuous meetings at Hitcham, tending to the breach of peace, and although it came to your knowledge, yet nothing has been done therein. We therefore desire you, according to the trust reposed in you, to secure the actors and abettors, and send up such examinations as you shall take thereon. [I. 96, p. 158.]

Council of State to Sir Thomas Honeywood. Had the town of Colchester been made untenable when the first orders of Council were issued, it might have been incapable of being possessed and kept by the enemy, and there would have been no need of any forces to be kept there at the charge of the county; but that force must be continued, to prevent a greater charge which the surprisal thereof may occasion. When Council shall be certified that it is rendered sufficiently untenable, they will give order for withdrawing the force, whereby the charge of the county may be lessened, of which they are sensible, and desire to take it off so soon as the condition of the place will bear it. And that you may be released of the charge, we desire you to communicate to the rest of the Militia Commissioners what has been formerly written from Council, and require them to put the same into execution [I. 96, p. 159.]

May 8.

Council of State to James Powell, of Bristol. We have appointed 4,000 of the impressed recruits now raised to be shipped from the port of Bristol, and landed at Munster, and you are therefore to make the necessary provision for their transportation. With a note of a similar intimation to Jno. Tucker and five others, to ship 1,500 from Bideford, 800 from Minehead, and 900 from Milford Haven, for Munster; 800 from Chester, and 400 from Beaumaris for Leinster, and 1,600 from Liverpool for Ulster and Connaught. Whitehall.

Council of State to Major-General Harrison. Parliament has appointed 10,000 men to be impressed for Ireland, and Council has distributed them upon particular places, and written letters for raising and sending them to the several ports for transportation; 300 are appointed to go to Liverpool from co. Derby, and 800 from co. Lancaster; 100 to be shipped at Chester, and 400 out of the six counties of North Wales to Beaumaris. That these men may not run away, or do any mischief in their march, or while they wait for transportation, you are to give order to such forces as you shall judge necessary to bring them to their port, and guard them there, until shipped off.

With note of like letters to Sir Wm. Constable, for 400 from Gloucestershire and the city to be shipped at Bristol; to Major-General Desborow for 1,000 from Cornwall, and 500 from Devon, to be shipped from Bideford, and 800 from Somersetshire at Minehead. [I. 96, p. 160.]

Council of State to the Commissary-General of Musters in England, or to Mr. Gerrard, his chief deputy. There are several of the 10,000 recruits now to be impressed for Ireland to be shipped from the ports of Bristol, Bideford, Chester, Liverpool, and Beaumaris, for the more regularly giving an account of which, one should attend at each port to muster those brought thither to be shipped, and to re-muster them every third day, under officers appointed over them by Col. George Cook, and deliver certificates of such musters under their hands to the paymaster appointed there, who is thereupon to pay them. For putting of all this in execution, we desire you to appoint a deputy commissary to attend at each of the said ports, with directions for their mustering; for their extraordinary pains in this service, consideration shall be had of them upon their finishing of it. [I. 96, p. 161.]

Council of State to Sir Charles Coote. We have appointed 1,600 of the 10,000 men to be impressed for recruiting the army in Ireland for the regiments in Connaught and Ulster, out of which Col. Hercules Huncks is to have 300 for recruiting his regiment; you are therefore to give order that 300 of the said men be delivered to him. [I. 96, p. 162.]

May 8.
Whitehall.

Council of State to the Lord Deputy of Ireland. We had intelligence long since of the designs the Duke of Lorraine has had upon Ireland, and have had confirmation of the same from you, and doubt not but others of the Popish party are in the design, and that it will receive furtherance from more than will appear in it; having also information that great numbers of men are carried over from Ireland to Flanders, where the Duke now is, we conceive those men may serve to recruit and fill his regiments, and thereby give him means to draw out greater numbers of his old and experienced soldiers to transport into Ireland, while those new ones are exercised and trained in his standing troops; or they may be put into garrisons more remote from a present attack, while the old troops are drawn out. Use your best means to prevent the carrying over of those men, and consequently the use that may be made of them in promoting that design, to the prejudice of the service in Ireland. The Duke's being now in Flanders, and there being so great intimacy between the Arch-duke Leopold and him, and it being evident that he cannot pursue his design nor ship his men but by the use of the Flemish ports, gives us ground to believe there is more in that business than appears, and we therefore desire you to do what you can to prevent it. [I. 96, p. 337.]

Council of State to Col. Blake. We have been informed, both by you and others, what progress has been made in the affairs of Scilly, and thank you for your care and diligence. We shall report the whole to Parliament, but as there yet remains something considerable to be done for finishing that work, we are not satisfied that the fleet of Sir George Aiscue is returned from thence. We have written him to return and pursue former instructions, until the whole affair is complete, and we have also written Major General Desborow to prepare boats, and such other necessaries as Col. Clarke has sent him a particular of, for carrying on that affair. You are to make use of that reputation which the good success from the hand of God has given you, to complete what remains, lest a more cool prosecution of what has been obtained with some good resolutions and success, may both give such encouragement to the enemy as may render your next attempts more difficult, and give an opportunity, by delay of prosecution, to their friends and our enemies to give them supplies and relief. We therefore desire you, with all the force which was appointed for the work, to pursue it so effectually that those islands may be reduced to obedience, and not to dismiss your fleet with Sir George Aiscue until the Scillies be reduced, or until you have further order from Parliament or Council. [I. 96, p. 163.]

Council of State to Col. Clarke, at the Scilly Isles. By your other letters we are informed of the present state of the isles, and of your progress for their reduction, but are not satisfied that the ships are retired thence before the whole be completed. We have written Major-Gen. Desborow to supply you according to the particulars you sent him, and to Sir Geo. Aiscue to return with those ships which are of the squadron; also to Col. Blake to improve all for the perfecting of what is so well begun; continue your best diligence for speedily finishing that service, so that, being completed, the naval forces now there may attend such other service as we shall find necessary for the safety and advantage of the Commonwealth. [I. 96, p. 169.]

May 10.

Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow. Col. Clarke has sent you particulars of a want of boats for carrying on of that work. See them speedily and carefully supplied, and employ a sum not exceeding 500*l.*, which you may charge upon Council, by bill at ten days, or more if you can get it, and we will give credit to it. As to the offer about victuals, you will receive directions from the Committee to whom the management of that affair was formerly committed.

The affairs of Scilly are not in so good a condition as we could have desired; let all diligence be used for necessary supplies, that the work may be carried on and finished, which by delay may give encouragement to the enemies, and endanger the whole design. Deliver the enclosed letter from us to Sir Geo. Aiscue, and require him forthwith to repair again to those islands, and pursue former orders, until those islands be wholly reduced, or until further orders from Parliament or us. Council of State to Sir George Aiscue. By several letters, and by the relation of Mr. Bayes, we understand what progress has been made in the affairs of the Scillies, and are glad that so much is done with so little loss; but much remains to do, and the withdrawing the ships before the business be completed may give encouragement to the enemies, and opportunity of relief from abroad. We are therefore sorry that you have come back with your ships before your work is finished, and desire you to return thither with all expedition, and pursue your former instructions. When we know the place is perfectly reduced, we shall give you further orders. We have written Col. Desborow, through whom this will come to you, to furnish boats and other things necessary, and with these you are not to wait for supplies, which will be sent after you, but to return to Scilly, and give your best assistance towards finishing that business. Council of State to Col. Ingoldsby. Council have thought fit that your regiment should march down to Major-Gen. Harrison, and as you have had conference with a Committee appointed to consider of what might obstruct its march, and by them and you those difficulties have been avoided, and as Council has also written to the Army Committee for recruiting and mustering your regiment, they conceive there remains nothing on their part to facilitate this work; we therefore desire you to put your regiment to such a posture as that you may be ready to march, according to directions from Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. [I. 96, p. 165.]

Council of State to the Army Committee. We have appointed Col. Ingoldsby's regiment to march to Major-Gen. Council of State to the Governor of Hull. For increasing the number and strength of the forces under Major-Gen. Harrison, we have thought fit that, among other forces, the 200 now in Scarborough, and one company of 100 of your regiment, and 200 from Nottingham should march to him, under Col. Bethel, Governor of Scarborough; and that for the defence of Scarborough Castle, until it is made untenable, one other company should be taken out of your regiment. We therefore desire you to draw out one company to go there, and another to march with the Governor and the rest of the forces under his command with all expedition, in order that the forces with Major-Gen. Harrison may be made up to the number appointed without delay, so that they may be fit for any attempt by the enemies. [I. 96, p. 166.]

Council of State to the Governor of Nottingham Castle. To similar effect. The Governor of Scarborough, when he comes up to Major-Gen.  May 10. Council of State to the Governor of Scarborough. We have Whitehall. appointed the forces of your garrison to march to Major-Gen.
 Harrison, and a company of the garrison of Hull to take care of that place; we therefore desire you to put your forces in a posture to march to the Major-General, when the said company shall come up to you, and then to march with those forces. We have appointed you to command those forces, as also those which shall go from Notting-

 Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. [I. 96, p. 167.]
- May 10. Council of State to Major-Gen. Harrison. As several of the besides officers, we desire you to write to the counties from whence they came, to have them supplied to that number, and also to certify how many each of them wanted to Council, who will also write to the said counties to send up those which are wanting; what shall be afterwards deficient are to be made up of volunteers. [I. 96,

- May 10. Council of State to Col. Twisleton and the rest of the Militia Whitehall. [Commissioners] of Kent. By a petition presented to us, we are informed of the miscarriages of Capt. Robert Joseph, whereby much discontent has been raised in your county; we therefore desire you, recalling all former orders, to take the examinations of the parties for and against him, and transmit them to us. [I. 96, p. 170.]
- May 10. Council of State to Charles Walley, at Chester. We have Whitehall. appointed Humphry Mackworth, Thomas Fell, Col. Duckenfield, Col. Birch, Thos. Mainwaring, and Thos. Marbury to examine the persons lately secured at Chester, and given directions that you discharge their accounts; and upon bills drawn upon Council, you shall be paid what you shall disburse. [I. 96, p. 169; 19, p. 119.]

 Whitehall. Duckenfield, Thos. Mainwaring, and Thos. Marbury. Several persons suspected to have been privy to the enemies' designs of invading the northern parts, and by way of a traitorous correspondency, of assisting him with domestic forces and risings in your parts, are now in close custody, on whose behalf petitions and requests have been made for their bailment or enlargement; we have, in order thereto, or to their trial, found it requisite that such persons so detained be severally examined, and the examinations returned to us, so that upon due consideration, just order may be taken on their behalf. For better expediting this business, we enclose some directions and papers, by the help whereof you may know how to ask fit questions of the respective parties, whose answers under their own hand you are to return to us. Some of the persons in the enclosed list are imprisoned at Chester, Liverpool, and other places, but as the examinations should be taken in one place, so that there may be a confronting of the persons examined if there be cause, we authorise you to send for the persons so imprisoned, and after their examination, to cause them to be safely returned to the place of Council of State to Col. Duckenfield. For expediting what concerns the persons now in custody with you and elsewhere, touching the late Northern design, either in reference to discharge, bailment, or trial, we have held it fit that yourself and others should be commissioned to examine those persons at Chester. The Reason, Downs.

76. Michael Farmer to Mr. Turner, of the Navy Office and of Bayley's Place, Tower Hill. The Reason having arrived in the Downs last Friday, on her way to London, her six months' service having almost expired, our captain went aboard the admiral, Colonel Popham, who certified that we must continue out three months more, and go with him either upon the coast of Flanders or Ireland. Our ship is in as good condition as she was at Woolwich, except victuals, but whether she is to carry 50 men again I have not heard, as our captain has gone ashore.

I will deliver the General a book when I can get aboard of him, and enclose a sea book for musters for you, framed according to the plan adopted by Mr. Maplesden.

The reason so many of our men were discharged at Cadiz was that five of them were put on board the prizes taken at the Rock in the Lisbon Road, and convoyed home by the Lion and the Hopeful Luke, with the rest of the prizes taken by the State's frigates, some of which we were in chase of, and at the taking; and although they were swift of sail, I boarded them first, and think a part of them should fall to our share, being taken in our sight. We fetched up divers Flemings in our coming home, and made them come on board our ship, but could not make prize of any of them.

We were commanded by Capt. Penn to put in at Vigo, and convoy home a French prize of 24 guns, partly laden with wheat for Lisbon, and were going to take in the rest in the Western Seas when she was taken, and was sent to Vigo, with orders to stay there until we came from Cadiz, where we unladed our provision; but when we arrived there, she had been gone six days for Cadiz.

The prizes taken before we came to the fleet were:—

A Frenchman with corn.

A Flemish hoy with corn.

A Dutchman from Lisbon, bound for Barbary.

A Jersey ship with poor John and stockings, whose men left her and ran ashore.

A Dutchman, with corn for Lisbon.

A Sattée, with figs and pilchards for Lisbon.

A Fleming with corn and coal for Lisbon.

A Frenchman taken at Cadiz, laden with linen and pepper, and a good store of pieces of eight in plate.

Another Fleming taken at Cadiz with the Frenchman, but discharged.

My service to Major Thompson. [1 page.] Enclosing

84. Capt. Hen. Appleton to the [Navy Commisrs]. This is a copy of the two letters I sent you, one from Zante, left with Capt. Badiley there, the other by the Spy head for Bristol, from Messina, where I anchored with the Mary Rose, and Agreement. I left the Bonadventure to convoy the Agreement to Zante, and then to go with the Mary Rose for Cyprus. I took the Constant Warwick with me to convoy the Smyrna ships, the Mary and Levant merchant, which I saw safe in Serigo, and sent some of our men with them, to provide provisions for our three ships against our coming to Smyrna.

We went with the Richard and William for Cyprus, and before we left, the Mary Rose arrived ; I then ordered the Constant Warwick to convoy her and the Richard and William for Scanderoon, and to meet me again at Smyrna. When I arrived, I found the Bonadventure there, but not any victuals provided for us, and no leave could be granted but from the Imperial Court, which order came to the Bashaw on 6 April, when we had leave for some provisions, but not to serve our voyage.

On 10 April, we sailed from Smyrna to Jackamoy point, and that night our counsellor Britain sent me a letter that there was a chouse come from the Grand Seignior at Constantinople, to procure our ships to convoy their fleet for Candia. I gave them a friendly denial, and departed with our three men of war, the Sampson, Phoenix, Mary, and Levant merchant, all richly laden, for England and Leghorn. Near Serigo I met with the Elizabeth frigate, Capt. Reaves, convoy for the William and Thomas, bound for Smyrna.

On 29 April we arrived at Zante, and found three English ships lading, and as they would be ready in six days, I left the Warwick to bring them to Messina after me. Since we left Messina, we have taken two small French sattes, one of which I have made sale of in the Arches near Rhodes, as she was much trouble to bring from Cyprus; the other I have with me here, and in her 40 sacks of cotton wool.

I sailed from Messina 20 May, with the Bonadventure, Sampson, Mary, Levant merchant, and Phoenix; having received a letter from the merchants of Naples, that a great quantity of rich goods lay ready there for England, I thought it best to go for Naples with the Constant Warwick, Sampson, Levant merchant, and the Pilgrim which came from Venice, and sent the Bonadventure, with the Mary, for Leghorn, so that they might be ready at my arrival there. We have taken in some beverage wine and fish for our voyage home, and the merchant ships have taken in all the goods that are ready here for England.

At our departure from Messina, the Constant Warwick, which I left at Zante to convoy the Defence, Ann Pearcie, and Eagle, arrived, and the next day, the three Zante ships, with the Phoenix from Smyrna, very richly laden, parted our convoy near Stromboli for England, without giving me any notice; I could have fitted one of our men of war in six hours to go with them. I wish the Phoenix with the rest safely home, as they run a great risk. I have had notice of five French men of war being abroad. We shall set sail from Leghorn this evening, wind and weather permitting. [$1\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow. On the enclosed petition of Lieut.-Col. 85. Thomas Violet to the Committee of the Council of State for removing the obstructions in the Mint.

According to your directions, I represent several ways how the service of the Mint may be done better than now, and save many hundred pounds a year paid to officers, besides employing able men who have skill in holding correspondence with foreign mints and merchants, and by that means will be vigilant to take all advantages for bringing treasure into the nation.

1. The inexperience of the present officers,—as the masterworker, warden, and comptrollers,—who have not been brought up in those ways, is one of the principal occasions of the obstructions of the Mint, for great quantities of foreign gold and silver are imported and exported, and never brought into the Mint; and by these means the merchants drive a trade inwards and outwards, and never pay excise, or customs, as they bring in gold and silver 'customs' free openly; but when they transport it without license, it is sent away privately.

2. The place of masterworker of the Mint was formerly in possession of some goldsmith, and the reason was apparent, for he was to melt the silver and gold, and deliver it to the provost of moneyers, and the masterworker was to be skilled both in melting and making money, and so must be an artist and fit for that place.

But in King James and the late King's time, courtiers and gentlemen got the office of masterworker, as Sir Edw. Villiers, Sir Randall Cranfield, Sir Robert Harlow, Sir Thos. Ailesbury, Sir Ralph Freeman, and others, who, not being artists, were forced to get a goldsmith for their melter, and that was Sir John Wollaston, who is originally by that place under the masterworker, and the latter ought to appoint whom he pleases to melt the silver and gold for money, to make the best and cheapest contract he can for the State. The mischiefs thereby accruing are—

3. The master workers, Sir Thos. Ailesbury and Sir Ralph Freeman, were reduced for the profits of their office, only to take 500*l.* a year, and to account with the late King for all surplusage. Sir Edward Villiers, Sir Randall Cranfield, and others formerly had the same office, when almost all the profits of the Mint were annexed, and some years it was worth 5,000*l.* or 6,000*l.*, but the late King hearing thereof, reduced it, and only allowed the masterworker 500*l.* a year, to be paid out of the profits of the Mint only; at this time Alderman Wollaston's place was only looked upon as an inferior one of 20*l.* or 30*l.* a year, and neither the King nor the Council ever knew the value, or you may be sure they would never have let the servant have a place worth above 1,500*l.* a year, and the masterworker be tied up to 500*l.* a year fee. The place of melter was also so inconsiderable, in the eye of the State, that there was never a grant made of it under the Great Seal, and he was always held as an inferior clerk under the masterworker; but such blind bargains have been and are daily made, when the State puts ignorant officers into places they do not understand, upon the recommendations of friends.

4. From 1630 to 1646, 900,000*l.* a year was coined in silver, and Mr. now Sir John Wollaston had allowed for waste of melting 16 grains a lb. troy, which is 2*d.* on every three lbs. by tale; in 16 years, 14 millions of silver were coined in the Tower, and Sir John received 50,000*l.* for his waste in melting silver in the Mint; if the bargain had been contracted with him by knowing men, he would have done it for half the money, and thus much the State has lost, through the ignorance or knavery of the officers of the Mint, who would make such a contract with an inferior man, for then his fortunes were very weak; and by these means Sir John has raised himself to be an alderman, and to this day enjoys the same rate.

5. I offer to bear all the waste in melting silver in the Mint for the allowance of 10 grains the lb., almost $\frac{1}{2}$ of the price Sir John has.

June 2.

I will resume the place of melter and master worker in one, for they are but one place; and for that service I shall demand but 120*l.* a year, and the master worker has 400*l.* a year allowed, so that the State will save by my discovery nearly 2,000*l.* a year, as they have paid the melter and master worker from 1630 to 1646. And if by my industry the Mint flourishes again, I ask but 120*l.* a year fee, as the master worker, which is not much above half the allowance you give Sir John for waste of melting the silver, and I will undertake to do it for 10 grains' waste, while he has 16 on every lb.

6. It is no marvel, when the public contracts are managed in this manner, that the common stock is wasted, and private persons grow so rich. By reading the transactions in Queen Elizabeth's time, I find she would quickly apprehend these advantages, and employ those of experience in such places, and made strict inquiry to know the secrets of all places and their profit, so that she did not give them blindfold, and rewarded highly all such as could serve her in these secrets. One instance, amongst many others, is remarkable; that she made one Carmarthen, an inferior clerk in the Custom House, comptroller of her farmers and customers, upon discovering that her farmers and great officers were making juggling bargains, to cozen her in her customs; and by Carmarthen's discovery, she made customer Smith double the rent he had formerly paid her, and ever esteemed Carmarthen, and protected him in his place of comptroller, to her dying day, though much against her treasurer Burleigh's will. The same countenance the State ought to give now to those that serve them in this kind, or they will have no service done.

7. The moneyers of the Mint,—finding a Frenchman coming in to work by a new way, seeing the Mint daily decay for want of work, and many of the coiners brought to great poverty for want thereof, and observing many obstructions arising for want of skilful officers to act in their behalf, whereby they are left destitute as sheep without a shepherd; and being informed almost every week that great quantities of gold and silver are imported, but never brought into the Mint, and the moneyers having had their working houses in the Mint, some plucked down and burned up by soldiers and others, and others so defaced and ruined that they will not be repaired for many hundred pounds, and every day the Mint is coming to more ruin and no care taken to prevent it; also seeing that the warden, master worker, and comptroller are not skilled in holding intelligence from foreign parts concerning the bringing in of money, nor in their places—have divers times desired me to assist them in setting right all these things, as by my former actions among them, they found no man in London but myself that could understand every part of their business, to set them to rights, and show the way for regulating their fellowship of moneyers. Many of them have freely offered, if I would undertake the care of their business, and hold intelligence to bring them in gold and silver to be coined, they would allow me one halfpenny the lb. weight out of their wages for all gold and silver they shall coin, either by the mill, after David Ramage's way, or otherwise. My suit therefore to you is that you will confirm and approve the same, and then I will be at the charge to keep the intelligence to cause money to be brought to the Mint.

8. If you approve of my making weights to weigh gold and foreign coin, I will expose them all to sale in the Mint, and make them, and only expect $\frac{1}{6}$ th of the clear profit for my pains, attendance, and keeping servants to expose them to sale within the Tower, and I conceive the clear profit of this will, for many years, make above 1,000*l.* a year to the State. This will make in all 3,000*l.* a year, and I make no question of setting the Mint going, if you pass the Act against transporting gold and silver. If I find you do anything upon these propositions, I shall then lay open things of greater advantage and profit, and make a discovery how the State may manage the business to save many score of thousands of pounds in the year, by their customs and excise. Every 100,000 lbs. of silver costs the subject 3333*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* coinage, and the State pays 2,400*l.* for workmen, coals, tools, and officers' fees; so in every 100,000*l.* coinage, the State now gets about 930*l.*, clear of all charges. Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow. We have received your letter and information that Scilly is in possession of this commonwealth. That place has been several times very costly, both in reducing it and the mischief done by it, while it was in the power of the enemy, and it very much concerns the State to have it in safe hands and a good posture. Council of State to Major-Gen. Lambert. We enclose copy of a letter from the Ambassadors in Holland, containing (besides other occurrences of the posture of our affairs there), some of great concernment in order to the safety of the person of the Lord General. The Commonwealth is highly concerned in it; therefore take special care that the troops may be reviewed, and a strict observation taken of all that have put themselves into the service, who have come from beyond seas, or are not well-known; for we conceive you may have sufficient numbers of honest known men to fill up your troops, without taking in men unknown or doubtful. We believe this care has not been wanting in you, yet we would not be so far wanting in our duty as not to recommend it to you in a most especial manner. Take notice that the isles of Scilly are now all in our power, the isle of St. Mary with the castle in it, after the taking of Tresco and Bryar, being yielded upon articles. This we had by an express from that place, which arrived yesterday. It was to be delivered on Monday, the 2nd inst., hostages being given for performance when the messenger came away. 86. Resolutions of the Clothiers, Staplers, and Fellmongers, according to an Order of the Council of Trade of 14 May 1651. At their meeting on the 15th, they chose four men out of each company, and appointed to meet again the 29th, to consider of expedients for regulating buying, and selling wool, and agreed,—

1. That it should be desired that the export of wool, sheep and lambs' skins, fullers' earth, and clay, be felony in the merchant or owner, confiscation of the ship to the mariners, and forfeiture of the value of the goods to any who have knowledge and fail to inform.

2. That none use the trade of buying and selling of wool but such as have served seven years' apprenticeship thereto.

3. That fellmongers be allowed to buy and sell fell wool of all sorts, as belonging to their trade.

4. That all deceit and abuses in the winding and making-up of wool, either in the winder or grower, shall be punishable.

It was further resolved by the fellmongers that for the encouragement of clothiers, some strict penalty should be inflicted, to prevent any but clothiers and such as convert it into other manufactures,

Vol. XV.

June 11. buying fleece wool of the same year's growth before 1 Aug., and fell wool before 30 Sept.

That none should buy and sell fleece wool but such as should alter the property of the same, but this was objected to by the staplers.

That which the fellmongers desired, and was excepted against by the clothiers and staplers was concerning the buying and selling of fleece wool, with the proviso to alter the property, and to be limited in the time as above stated, and to make it fit for several manufactures.

Another meeting was held on 10 June, but only the staplers and fellmongers attended; and this gives occasion to the fellmongers to desire the Council of State to seriously consider their former proposals, and their undoubted right of buying and selling fleece wool as well as fell wool,—with reference to the second and third article in the Act by which the Council of State are empowered to sit,—together with the petitions of the several growers. [1 page.]

June 11. 87. Certificate of Andrew Cater, Edw. Taylor, and Geo. Rookes, wool staplers to the Council for Trade. According to your order of 14 May last, we met with the clothiers and fellmongers to consider the matter referred to us, but the wool growers wholly declined meeting with us; and as the clothiers and fellmongers do not fully concur with us and the rest of the society of staplers, we certify as follows:—

1. That for advance of the clothing trade, the transportation of wools and fullers' earth should be prohibited under severe penalties.

2. That whereas there are a great number of jobbers and broggers in this nation,—who are neither clothiers, staplers, nor fellmongers, but of other professions, as drapers, innkeepers, tailors, joiners, tanners, &c., who buy great quantities of fleece and fell wool, by reason whereof much is engrossed by them, and the clothiers and the clothing trade much prejudiced,—it should be provided that no person, not being either a clothier or manufacturer of wool, stapler, or fellmonger (excepting the wool grower who may have liberty to sell the wool of his own growth) shall directly or indirectly buy or sell any fleece or fell wool, of the growth of this commonwealth, under a fit penalty.

3. That it is properly the trade of a fellmonger only to buy wool fells and sheep skins, and to pull the wool off the skins and sell the fell wool, as also to make the sheep skins into leather; and it does not belong to the trade of a fellmonger to buy any fleece wool, yet many fellmongers buy and sell great quantities thereof, and it is therefore left to your Committee as to how far they shall be limited therein.

4. It is the proper and ancient right of staplers to buy and sell the wool of the growth of this commonwealth, they being a necessary party in relation both to the wool growers, clothiers, and manufacturers of wool both of the old and new drapery, the staplers being an ancient corporation, and having constantly used their trade of buying and selling wool, and having no other means of livelihood.

VOL. XV.

5. As divers clothiers and manufacturers of wool have wholly left off their own trade, and become buyers and sellers of wool, although not manufacturing any part thereof, no clothier or manufacturer who shall not actually continue or keep his trade of clothing or manufacturing should buy any wool whatsoever, under a fit penalty.

6. As there is great abuse and much deceit used in the winding and making-up of fleeces of wool with lambs' wool, refuse wool, cott, tar, tail locks, hinder shanks, clay, dung, cumber, and other trash, as also by branding and marking sheep with pitch, and frequently in places where the wool is finest, whereby the fleece becomes more weighty, to the deceit and loss of the buyer, it should be provided that no person should wind or make up any fleece wool before the same is sufficiently washed, or wind up any fleece wool wherein any lambs' wool, refuse wool, &c. are put, as also that all growers of wool shall, at or before the shearing, cut off all the brands or pitch marks from the wool, under a fit penalty. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Kent, Oxon, Salop, and Chester. Sometime since, we gave direction for the speedy impressing and marching a number of men from your country to the water side for Ireland, yet none have arrived at the appointed port. It will be a great disadvantage if that service, which has been thus far carried on with many difficulties, and at great charge, should now, when this summer's vigorous prosecution might promise a good account, suffer by any neglect. The many garrisons already taken, and those which we hope will be reduced this summer, will much lessen the number of the marching forces, and without a supply of men, will necessarily be a great impediment to their action. Take care speedily to execute the directions sent, and let those impressed not be maimed, or by age unfit for service, but able men and well clad. In order to the guarding of them to their port, give timely notice to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, at Somerset House, where and when you desire the convoys, that they may be appointed; also give notice to the Commander-in-Chief, or the State's agent at the port from whence they are to be shipped, of the time they will probably be there, that provision may be made for their transportation.

P.S. for Kent only.—Do not defer this business in expectation of other directions than already given as to the conductors, for as all other counties and places have sent their men with their own conductors, we expect you should do the like, having guards of horse assigned for assistance therein. [I. 96, p. 241.]

Council of State to the Army Committee. Upon complaint against Lieut. Col. Read, then Governor of Poole, it was recommended to the Lord General to give a commission to Major Scutt to be Governor; but upon occasion of some recrimination against him, Council thought neither of them should be governor until the business should be determined, and Major-Gen. Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow. We formerly wrote you to put a third person into the place of governor of Poole, until the business of Lieut.-Col. Hunkins to be put into the roll, and paid as governor until further order. As the cause has been some time depending, by reason of your employment in the West, order some of your officers, if you cannot attend the business yourself, to give a speedy hearing and dispatch to it, that where innocence is, it may be cleared, and the garrison settled. 93. Report of the Committee for Trade appointed by the Common Council of the City of London, to the Council of Trade appointed by Parliament. Upon considering the petition of the freemen of the City trading in wool, for redress of abuses practised by the Society of Staplers, we inquired into the foundation and nature of the staple, and the privileges pretended to by that Society, and heard certain of the principal staplers, and perused the Acts and records produced in defence of the same; and we are of opinion that, though the staplers formerly had a legal being, it is now expired, at least as to the commodity of wool, inasmuch as the transportation thereof is now forbidden, for which only or chiefly they were constituted a society, and we do not now conceive them at all necessary, but in many respects disadvantageous, as being the principal cause—

(1.) Of the dearness of wool, and consequently of cloth, for they, brogging and buying between the grower and clothier, and engrossing the greatest part of the wool, do not sell it to the clothier but at their own rates, or for a quicker and better market, transport it into foreign parts;

(2.) Of the badness of the cloth, for the staplers buying wool of several countries and sorts, as Northern and Western, pasture and fallow, sell the same mingled and compounded to the clothier, who, not discovering nor able to single or separate again the different wools, makes up a bad and ill-conditioned cloth, that mixed wool not working alike in regard of its different qualities, as is affirmed by persons of skill and experience therein;

(3.) Of discouragement and destruction to clothing and the woollen trade, for by the staplers' engrossing and dear selling, the clothier is rendered unable to buy; by his transportation, cloth is made in Holland and other parts of English wool, and is become cheaper there than can be made here, and transported thither, (they being furnished with all hands necessary to the finishing thereof), and by the insufficient cloth, made of mixed wools, the manufacture of England is much disparaged beyond seas. Hence multitudes of people who, by making of cloth and the woollen trade, would be maintained, are left without means of livelihood; our workmen are enticed or enforced beyond seas to become teachers or servants to strangers in the art of clothing (which until lately has excelled in England only) and foreign commodities, which were the exchange for cloth, are now procured with much more disadvantage to us. Many other like evils were obvious to us, but the above are sufficient reasons for showing that the staplers are unnecessary and disadvantageous. [2 pages.]

June 26.

94. Note of the substance of a dispatch delivered by Lord Taaffe, and collected out of letters and papers sent by the Marquis of Clanricade.

First, the state of the kingdom represented by the marquis was such that, notwithstanding the assistance of money, arms, and ammunition already received by means of the Duke of Lorraine, amounting in value to 20,000*l.* English,—deducting the charge of those who negociated for it, and the loss in exchange,—yet without further speedy and considerable supply, his lordship absolutely despairs of being able to defend what yet remains unconquered by the rebels, unless, by the success of his Majesty's arms in Great Britain, the rebels be compelled to withdraw such part of their forces out of Ireland as will disable them to prosecute their conquest.

Secondly, the treaty with the Duke of Lorraine's Minister (in the conduct whereof his lordship has given eminent proof of his unalterable loyalty, of a high and affectionate sense of His Majesty's honour and interest, and of his great judgment, whereby that treaty is brought to this pass). His lordship has already received the aforesaid sum, or is secured of it to his satisfaction. For the Duke of Lorraine's security for what he has or shall further lay out, he is to have as caution the City of Limerick, the town of Galloway, the Castle of Athlone, and the port of Sligo, now under his Majesty's obedience, and Waterford and Duncannon port, now in the hands of the rebels, when they are recovered. For the conditions of further supplies, the marquis has authorized Lord Taaffe, Sir Nich. Plunket, and Geoffrey Browne to treat with the Duke of Lorraine, yet directed by instructions to proceed no further therein, nor make any conclusion but such as they shall be directed to in writing, under the hands of the Queen, his Royal Highness, and the Marquis of Ormond, or under the hand of some one fully authorized by the King in that behalf.

In the agreement already made, care is taken for preservation of his Majesty's sovereignty and the subjects' property in the places engaged, and for the full restitution of them, on repayment of what shall be laid out.

Both the dispatch from the Marquis of Clanricade, and the letter from Sir Nich. Plunket and Mr. Browne to his Majesty and the Marquis of Ormond, express the necessity of a speedy supply to be endeavoured, by the immediate prosecution of the treaty with the Duke of Lorraine, unless some more effectual way shall be directed by his Majesty and His Royal Highness; and if any such shall be, the repayment to the Duke of Lorraine for what he is already out will be a necessary beginning. 95. Petition of Edw. Daniel, and 11 other well-affected Eastland merchants residing at Dantzic, to the Council of State. We acknowledge with all thankfulness your care in watching over the safety of our commonwealth, and rejoice in that impartial act of justice, in visiting the iniquity of blood, oppression, and tyranny upon the heads of the greatest contrivers of our miseries, and freeing us from bondage, together with your constant endeavours in asserting the liberties of the commonwealth, which caused us to address you in July 1650, declaring our grievances by the town exacting pre-empted customs from us, and threatening our expulsion, which we are not able to repel or avoid, unless there be some regulation amongst us. We understand that we lie under a cloud in your apprehension, by reason of some public ministers sent here by the Scottish King, as Cochrane, Culpeper, and now Crafts, with whom divers of the Scottish nation, who are great traders for London, as also some of our own body, have been and are overmuch conversant, to our no small prejudice, who have stood by the cause of God in your hands in the worst of times, with the hazard of our lives and fortunes, adhering to that act of justice which has caused us to suffer in our estates and persons, having hitherto never had the opportunity to publicly demonstrate ourselves until the arrival of Mr. Benson, who knows how ready we are to test our fidelity to our present State. [2 pages.]

We acknowledge your late letter to the Dantzic government on our behalf "in regard of the constitution in Poland by Crafts obtained," with a mandate for the one-tenth of our estates, but by this letter we hope to be protected from violence.

We beg that the engagement may be tendered to our body, so that the commonwealth may be enabled to discover their real from their pretended friends; that you will debar all Scots, malignants and foreigners trading from England to Dantzic; will consider the great obstructions of trade to that place, and take care that no East-

96. "Memoir of what is passed in Capt. Peter Giesling's affairs, in service of His Majesty of Great Britain." Capt. Peter Giesling, of the St. Peter of Jersey, sailed from Dunkirk last May, and came to Ostend with a Denmark prize, laden with deals and baulks, coming from Norway and bound for England, which he sent to Ostend, and kept the master and one other who was bound for Dover, and another master for 110*l.* sterling,—the price of his ship which he sold him,—until the money was paid. While Capt. Giesling was upon the road, a Parliament ship arrived, who pursued him so close that he was almost forced on shore, and the governor, seeing him in such a strait, sent to desire him to enter the haven with his man-of-war. The next day he was examined, and though nothing was laid to his charge, they took away his commission, and committed him to prison, put soldiers on board the man-of-war, set the men to be ransomed at liberty, and put all the company on shore, and thereafter made sale of the victuals on board. We made known our unjust detainment to the Admiralty, and desired, since they had nothing to lay to our charge, to have our man-of-war and prize released, and our men to be ransomed restored, which was referred to the Fiscal, who pretended that, since our man-of-war was rigged out from Dunkirk, and the captain and most of his company were inhabitants there, we ought to be looked upon, without any regard to the commission, as enemies, and therefore desired that the man-of-war should be confiscated for the use of the King. We replied to this that although Dunkirk was an enemy's port to those here, it was a neutral port to us, and that since it was the pleasure of the King of France to permit us to make use of his havens, it did not belong to them to question from where we were set forth, since they could say nothing against the commission, and that the owners were known to be subjects of his Majesty [Charles II.] and not inhabitants of Dunkirk as alleged by them, though if they were, the times being changed, and they reduced to the subjection of the King of France, it would be more to their honour to serve a neutral prince, than to serve against their own; and though they were French, the commission annuls all acts of hostility, as long as they are in His Majesty's service; but to this no answer has been returned.

With the names of five captains detained by the Admiralty at Ostend, upon pretence that they were no subjects of the King of England. Endorsed "Memorie van Mr. Gordans." [$2\frac{1}{4}$ pages.]

Also to request Parliament, for prevention of such evils, and punishment of the offenders, to give like power to some fit persons in the respective counties of England and Wales as is given to the Committee for Plundered Ministers, to receive informations concerning the miscarriages of ministers in this kind, and to take the parties' answers, and examine the matter upon oath, and proceed touching the removal or ejection of such persons, according to justice and their demerits, and to place other orthodox and fit persons in their room. Sir Barnaby Scudamore, Mr. Glascock, and Dr. Donne were apprehended by a warrant from the Council of State, and I, passing by them towards your lodgings, and saluting them, was charged by the messenger to assist him in the execution, which I did, though you may conceive with some reluctance; and when I was at the prison, I was put in amongst the rest, although not comprehended in their warrant, nor anything objected against me. 9. Certificate by Geo. Payler, John Falkener, J. White, and Wm. Billers to the Ordnance Committee, that they have surveyed the brass piece at Whitehall, and find her to be a bastard bore, between a three-lb. bullet and a minion of $3\frac{1}{4}$ inch bore, exceedingly foul, and altogether unserviceable, and that she will not admit boring to a minion. Council of State to the Navy Commissioners. As 36 pieces of brass ordnance, demi-cannon, and culverin, are needed for the four new frigates now building, and warrant has been given to the ordnance officers to deliver to you all the brass, and unserviceable brass ordnance in their custody, towards casting them, you are to contract with some person to receive the same, and proceed with expedition in the casting, that the frigates may not be retarded for want of the guns. Whitehall. Council of State to Major-Gen. Skippon. Parliament having thought fit to lay down the militia in the several counties, and the forces upon the establishment being drawn northward, to be ready against all events, it would be necessary for the public safety, and a very acceptable service to us, if well-affected persons would voluntarily enlist their horses, and mount them with men who may be confided in, whereby they might be ready for defence of the Parliament and these parts, against any design tending to the interruption of the public peace.
- We have therefore written to the several militias of London, Westminster, the Hamlets, and Southwark, to propound the same to such as they think fit, and to receive their voluntary subscriptions. You have already made some beginning in this kind, and knowing your interest to be great, both in the militia and among people most likely to promote the work, we recommend it to you to put forward the service. Voluntarily listing will be the more useful by how much expedition shall be used in the several militias; certify us of what is done, that order may be taken for the command thereof. [I. 96, p. 280.]
- July 9.
Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for London, Westminster, Southwark, and the Tower Hamlets. To the same effect as the preceding. Also Council's meaning herein is not to impose this service upon any, but leave it to every man's freedom, not doubting but the well-affected and able will be willing to put themselves into such a posture, by this voluntary listing, which will be of little or no charge to them, as may enable them both to serve the public and preserve themselves against any designs of the enemy. Signify this to such within your limits as you judge fit, and receive their voluntary subscriptions, and certify their number to us, whereupon further order will be taken for the command; and use all expedition. [I. 96, p. 281.]
- July 9. 10. Order of the Mint Committee that the moneys have six weeks to give in their answer, according to a former order of the 3rd inst., as to how much they will make the English money for by the pound.
- That they also give in their answer how they will undertake the other charges by the pound, for the gold and silver mentioned in the second proposal of the Frenchman. [Copy, ¼ page.]

Order in Parliament that 10,000*l.* be charged upon the receipt of Haberdashers' Hall, next in course after the 10,000*l.* charged for supply of the stores, for repairing such garrisons as shall be thought fit to be continued, and that the said sum be paid to such person as the Council of State shall appoint. Council of State to the Navy Committee. When the fleet under Capt. Council of State to the Revenue Committee. A petition has been presented to us from Mr. Augier, late agent in France, with an order of Parliament of 5 February 1648-9, for payment of his arrears, both ordinary and extraordinary. The honour of the commonwealth must needs suffer, if he miscarries for want of the money which the Parliament so long since expressly ordered; we recommend the case to you specially, and desire you to order the money to be speedily paid, the same having been long since expressly charged upon the revenue. Council of State to the Sheriff of Lincoln. There have been several riotous and tumultuous gatherings of persons about the commons at Epworth, under some pretence, which meetings ought not to be suffered, but proceeded against as the law directs, that by the punishment of some, others may be deterred from like attempts. Especially in such times as these, a more diligent care ought to be taken to prevent such meetings of the multitude, that may make use of other pretences to begin insurrections, and carry on designs to the interruption of the public peace. Keep a watchful eye upon the confluence of people on any pretences, and use the power of the law that has been placed in your hands, to preserve the peace. If you find that not sufficient, desire the assistance of the forces nearest to you, who are hereby ordered to give you such assistance that dangerous consequences may be prevented, and delinquents brought to condign punishment; the people nevertheless, for such wrongs as they may have cause to complain of, being left to prosecute their pretences in a peaceable manner, and in a due course of law, where they may have right without making themselves judges in their own cases, by such exorbitant and irregular courses. try them here by the Admiralty judges than to send commissioners

We marvel that, to those large sums expended by Paul Haggat in his journey to Smyrna and the Castles, an addition of 600 dollars should be made by that factory; you should have opposed this extravagancy, or any other tending to the Company's charge, else it is vain for us to expect a freedom from engagements, if they assume a liberty to vote away our moneys at their own pleasure, which is a course we cannot admit. To prevent their presumption in future, let our late orders of 10 March, providing against this exorbitance in disbursing the company's money, be strictly observed; also such former acts as concern the due collection of our duties there, mentioned in our letters of 10 Dec. and 6 Feb. Do not permit those named by you or any others to evade payment, especially upon such cloths as have not paid us here, upon which, if they belong to freemen, not only the present duties, but what the proprietor owes upon the balance of his account is to be made good; and if they belong to interlopers, the factor receiving them is to pay double consulage and double impositions. If fair means will not move them to comply, they must be compelled.

Sir Hen. Hyde, and those factors who abetted him, may in time be sensible of their miscarriage. We commend your forwardness in endeavouring to compose differences there, being sorry that, by the insolent demeanour of some of the factors, you have still cause of complaints, which we hope will, by your further care, vanish away. As to petitions to you, it may have been a necessary custom in matters wherein appeals to England or other formalities of law are requisite, in which cases there has never been any exception thereto, only in that point of the factors' employment of the Company's Janizaries, to assist them if needed.

Touching factors omitting to send their principals' returns, we shall not prescribe any other remedy than we have already done, for your prohibition of them to vote in courts there.

The difference between Barnardiston and Davies we named in our last, which may direct you a way for raising money upon extraordinary occasions there, wherein we have been little beholden to Mr. Abney, our late treasurer, who has shown much perverseness, and especially in his demeanor on board the William and Thomas, where he needed not have urged our order, which was given him only as a motive of frugality against the extravagant expenditure of powder, and not to restrain the nation from expressing their civil respect to a person of that quality, upon so extraordinary an occasion. What you write touching the renewal of the capitulations may be of good use, and we should be very glad it lay in our power to help our ships from serving the Venetians, a thing expected there. We have done our uttermost, both with the State here and by other means, to withdraw them from that employment, whereof many are come away already, and those few that remain are engaged by force. Urge these arguments to the Turks; we would be as willing as they, if we knew how, to debar our ships from that service.

The intention of the Dutch to settle a factory at Smyrna is occasioned by our disturbances, which have given them encouragement; we hope they will not beat us off from the trade, especially if it please God to give us a settlement here at home. Touching your sequestration of 242 dollars due from us to Robt. Frampton, and 1,278 to Giles Davies, for money lent us towards the expense caused by them, we find that their principals here, viz., Wm. Vincent, Geo. Smith, and others, claim an interest in those moneys, and therefore let the same no longer be sequestered as the estate of those two factors, but restored for their said principals' use.

You will have heard from Aleppo that the Flower de Luce, on her return from thence to England, was surprised by four Turkish men-of-war of Tripoli, and set out by the Basha, and subjects to the Grand Seignior; complain thereof to them, as violating the capitulations and course of commerce, and use all possible means for reparation. Levant Company to Spencer Bretton, Consul at Smyrna. Thanks for your industry in freeing yourself from the troubles attempted by Mr. Hyde, and composing the differences which occasion these disturbances, in promoting of which so many of that factory had so great a hand, and thereby put us to a chance for our trade, and forced a vast expense; they have but little reason either to justify themselves, or to expect favour from us in regard of their fines, nor have we any reason to remit them. We approve the motives you have used for getting in our dues, and what you have done in reference to the silk, and for clearing our debts; expedite the payment of our bills of exchange, for want whereof many of our society are exceedingly injured. We have received Mr. Barnardiston's account; you understood by our last what provision is made for supply of his office in future.

Stand out in case of avanias, or suffering ships to be forced into the Turkish service, which are matters of that nature that we cannot give any positive rule, but must refer them to your prudence, with consent of the factory. We may receive disadvantage by the Flemings' incroachment upon that trade, but hope to be able to maintain against them, if we get a settlement here; meantime we know not how to remedy it.

Touching the factors' plea of exemption from payment of levations, we do not know of any such custom, or of any reason for it; nor why, if the trade requires an extraordinary charge, they should be freed, we paying all ordinary duties besides, as well as they; therefore they must not be dispensed with, the condition of our trade not permitting it, and our engagements and debts calling for all the assistance possible. We are indebted at Aleppo, as well as at other places, but Aleppo having its own charge, we cannot burden it further; but for this point, as also your proposition for appointing a limited sum to be yearly paid there towards the charges at Constantinople, we have made a good provision in our orders already sent.

We have not thoroughly perused the Constantinople accounts; meantime, if you find any books of account of Sir H. Hyde remaining there, you are to send them hither, his brother having frequently demanded them of us. We are sorry for the said accident to Wm. Bailey, and for the occasion of it, and for the ill carriage of some of that factory; but the list you desire of all the apprentices and servants at that place, and by whom they are employed, we are not well able to give, and should rather desire the like from you of all the English there, and by whom employed, with a note against such as unworthily demean themselves, by which means we shall be able to deal with their principals here, either for their better behaviour, or removal from thence. Levant Company to Thos. Harby, marine factor. We received yours with the cargazone of the Employment, which safely arrived long since. Your charges out of England were ordered to be made good to you by the Council and treasurer there, and we believe ere this 160 dollars have been paid you in full of that account.

Touching the pretence of masters of ships and their company of being exempt from the payment of our duties, we know of no such privilege, nor any reason for it, nor do we understand the intent of such as refuse to enter their goods in your books, unless to evade payment of our dues; do not give way in any of these particulars, either by omitting to take a perfect register of goods, or by conniving at the loss of any of our dues. You are to have necessary repairs done to our houses. [Levant Papers, Vol. IV., pp. 178, 179.]

Levant Company to Henry Riley, Consul at Aleppo. We have received your letters, as also the accounts of Mr. Pennington, the late Treasurer; see them registered in Cancellaria, where they may remain upon record. As for the manner of auditing them (which we formerly prescribed to be by the Consul and four of the ancient factors) it may be hereafter done by the Consul and two, three, or four of the ancient factors.

We are glad that we continue free of those exactions formerly taken upon money and silk, and we hope the trade will not be any more burdened with them, but a more exact observance had of the Hattecheriff and capitulations; we doubt not your care in what concerns the support of our trade, now that it is surrounded with so many difficulties, both by sea and land.

Touching an interest claimed by those of Constantinople in the said Hattecheriff, we refer you to our last; we have written the Ambassador at Constantinople to the same effect, and after we have had some consultation thereon with Mr. Barnard, now here, you shall hear further; meantime, as the charge of your minister's diet is defrayed out of your purse, we order you a gratuity of 300 dollars for the first year. Take special care that the said fort be totally demolished, and the guns removed to the garrison of Poole. We recommend this to you as a service of concern; return an account of what you do. - July 22. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Leicester.
Whitehall. We approve your account of what you have done in pursuance of the instructions sent you, as also concerning two of your county that were present at a shooting match between some of the counties of Northampton and Notts; such meetings in these times give cause of suspicion, and may be made use of to begin insurrections. It will be a means to prevent any such attempts when they find you upon the watch, and ready to suppress their first appearance, which we recommend to your care for the future, whereby you will serve the public, and provide for your own safety. [I. 96, p. 300.]
- July 22. Council of State to Major-Gen. Desborow. As Lionel Copley, Whitehall. now prisoner at the Mount, is to be removed to Exeter Castle, you are to give order that he be brought there in safe custody, and safely kept until further order from Parliament or Council. [I. 96, p. 301.]
- July 22. Council of State to the Treasurers-at-war. Capt. Jas. Jennings, Whitehall. of Commissary-General Reynolds' regiment, in coming to England under a license from the Lord Deputy, to fetch his wife and family to live with him in Ireland, was taken prisoner at sea, carried to Scilly, and there kept prisoner three months, and as he had 200*l.* in value taken from him, he is not now able to take his family over, and desires a supply out of his pay. Furnish him with 40*l.* on account, to be taken out of the first money to be sent to Ireland for pay of the army there, so that he may be enabled to return to his charge, and carry over his family. [I. 96, p. 301.]
- July 22. Council of State to the Deputy-Governor of Berwick. We ap-
Whitehall. prove your good service in breaking a knot of moss troopers, who had committed many murders upon our people, and commend your diligence, and doubt not but, having found what good service may be done against these barbarous thieves and murderers, you will inform yourself of their haunts, and take all opportunities to root out and destroy them, that the highways may be cleared of them, and be more safe for continuing the intercourse between that garrison and the army. Council of State to the Lord General. We are informed of the great inconveniences and mischiefs upon this commonwealth by the freedom of trade driven into Scotland by the Dutch, who not only bring unhealthful brandy, wines, and other strong waters, but also soap, French wines, and all sorts of grocery and other commodities, for which they pay little or no customs, and as they also pay little customs at home, and sail cheaper, in regard they have now no enemy at sea, they get the main trade into their own hands, and beat out the English; and there being not much commodity of the growth and production of that place to return from thence, money is transported to a very great amount. As all these commodities may as well be furnished by the people of this nation from hence, where the commonwealth has received custom from them, and the money received would be returned hither, and kept within the commonwealth, we judge it would be of great advantage to forbid the importation of any goods into Scotland by the Dutch, whereby also, besides the inconveniences above mentioned, all colour will be taken away from them of giving supplies to the enemy of any provisions of war, which they now lade aboard their ships, with bills of lading for Leith, to show if they be examined at sea, but if they do not meet any of our ships, they easily put into the enemy's ports; whereas if they had not that pretence to Leith, all their ships taken would be prize, by reason of their goods being contraband.

We communicate this to you, before such a prohibition is made, that we might not do that which you should judge prejudicial to the army; for all necessary provision being made here, and seasonably sent thither for the subsistence of the soldiers, we conceive they will not be much concerned in that of trade, that rather concerning the Scots, who are the buyers and retailers, and whose malignancy is such, notwithstanding all the favours they have received from you, and the protection under which they live, that they will buy nothing of the English if they can have it of the Dutch.

Whatever may seem to be wanting by prohibiting them will be furnished by our own merchants, of better commodity and at cheaper rates, when they shall have an assured market by the exclusion of the Dutch, whose constant practise in their trade is, by underselling for a time, to beat out competitors in trade, and then repair their losses by what proportion they please, when they have the market alone. We give you notice hereof as a mischief to the commonwealth, to which a remedy should be applied, which we conceive will be done without the least inconvenience to the army. [I. 96, p. 317.]

I have sent you by the carrier 25*l.*, with a note of the disbursement of the other 5*l.* I sent your letter which Jack had to Mr. Frederick, but he cannot meet with the man who was to have it. Your tinder-box is done; what shall I give Wilkinson for it? I sent you three letters by Jack, one from my Lady, and two from the young ladies, whom I left in good health, and they would be glad to hear from you. I desire to know your pleasure concerning the goods, as I must remove them next week. I went to Sion to speak to Mr. Hunt, but he was out; I am sure there is room enough for them; excuse my going without your leave, the Colonel assures me he will give you satisfaction for taking me with him. I have also sent you a small pot of pills from Mr. Joanes [Damaged, 1 page.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Norfolk, Suffolk, Isle of Ely, Salop, Chester, and Lancaster. That there might be forces ready against all emergencies, we have given order to Col. Wauton to raise a proportion out of the late militia of your county, to be taken into pay for three months; they should be armed with the arms belonging to the said militia, which were to be secured by our late instructions sent to you. Council of State to Col. Wauton. Upon considering the present state of affairs, we have thought fit there should be a moving body of 7,000 foot loosened from other services, and ready to attend such as they shall receive commands for from Council; for effecting thereof, you are authorised to raise 10 new companies of 100 men each besides officers, out of the late militia forces of cos. Norfolk, Suffolk, and the Isle of Ely, to be taken into pay for three months.

Take order that five of your old companies, to be taken out of such garrisons as you think fit, presently take the field under Major Blake, and in their place, put five of the new companies, and join the other five to the old, and march these 10 companies to the northern parts, according to orders from Lieut.-Col. Fleetwood. These newly levied men should be armed out of the arms in those counties formerly belonging to the militia, for which end we have written the Commissioners there; such arms to be restored after the three months' service.

As this business requires expedition, we recommend it to your best diligence, and desire to hear of your proceedings. Also send up the names of those you judge fit for commanding the newly-raised forces, that, being approved, commissions may be issued to them. [I. 96, p. 319.]

Council of State to the Lord General. We have had often iterated intelligence of the designs of the Duke of Lorraine against Ireland; he has already sent considerable sums, and is still in treaty with the Popish Bishop of Ferns, Taaffe, Browne, and Plunket, sent from the Irish, about sending more forces to their assistance; the thing has long been in agitation in Rome, and that design for the Catholic cause will receive furtherance from others who will not appear in it. As many men are transported thence into Flanders, and other parts, and you are solicited for license for such transportation,—considering the thing not to be without danger, those men being like to recruit the regiments of the Duke of Lorraine, or perhaps to be put into garrisons, whence old and experienced soldiers may be drawn forth to transport into Ireland,—we give you intimation, and leave it to your care to prevent the transportation of the men. We have given intimation of this affair to the Lord Deputy of Ireland. [I. 96, p. 323.]

Council of State to Quartermaster Gen. Hugh Courtney, Governor of Beaumaris. Council of State to Sir George Ayscue. We gave leave to the freighters of the Virgin frigate to sail along with the fleet bound for Barbadoes to trade there, according as you should direct, upon which the vessel was laden and prepared to attend the fleet; but by reason of the long diversion of the said voyage, the commodities with which she is laden are perished. We therefore desire you to dismiss the ship, that she may be unladen, and we have given them liberty to lade her again for their intended voyage, if they think fit. [I. 96, p. 327.]

20. Geo. Fisher to the Council of State. I intimated in my last of 12 July that I should depart the next day, which I did for Malaga, as the place where I was assured to have the soonest and safest conveyance; but on arrival, I heard that in Cadiz Bay there were certain of the Parliament frigates bound home with two prizes, whereupon I dispatched an express to Cadiz, that Capt. Hall might stay for me, and started for Cadiz to embark on him; but he sailed the day before I arrived at Malaga, so that had I come to Cadiz directly, I could not possibly have reached him. They expect the rest of Capt. Hall's squadron here from the Straits daily, on whom I intend to embark, and meantime I am in the house of Gabriel Hill, in Cadiz, who does our general business, and is well affected. The governor gives me four soldiers' officers to attend me for my security. I have no promise of the chastising the men in prison for Mr. Ascham's death, and unless fear makes them, they will never do it. [1 page.]

Council of State to the Governor of Bristol. You have received orders from Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood for marching two companies under your command to a rendezvous by him appointed. We hear from Scotland that the enemy's army is marched southward, with intention for England, and though we doubt not but the Lord General from our army in Fife, which is in very good condition, will have forces on their rear, yet we desire you to hasten the march of these companies to the rendezvous, that they may be ready to execute such orders as the exigency of affairs requires; and that no prejudice may come to the commonwealth in the absence of those forces, take into their place those of the late militia to be depended on, and let those be drawn forth with all expedition, and certify their march to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, that he may give further orders.

Council of State to Sir Arthur Hesilrige. We hear from Scotland that the Scots are marched southward, with intention to come to England whilst our army is on the other side of the water; and though we doubt not but our army in Fife, being in good condition will be with what expedition they can in their rear, and that you will raise what forces those four counties afford to give all impediment you can to their advances, if they should enter England, yet we desire you to use all diligence, that you may have the better ground to require the country to rise for this service.

We have written to the Militia Committees of cos. York, Lancaster, Chester, Derby, Notts, and Salop, to draw to a rendezvous for orders to be sent from Parliament or Council, Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, or Major-Gen. Harrison. We have also ordered Col. Gibbons' regiment, and 1,000 of Col. Berkstead's under Lieut.-Col. Cobbett, and 800 horse, to march with expedition to Newark; there is also a regiment to march from Col. Wauton to Stamford, and one from Col. Duckenfield to . . . all which will be speedily ready to join the forces with Major-Gen. Harrison, and check the Scots, till some Council of State to Col. Wauton. The Scots' army is taking the opportunity of ours being in Fife, and marching southward. Major-Gen. Harrison is about Berwick, with 4,000 horse and dragoons. We have written to the militia northward to draw what horse and foot they have to a rendezvous in their several counties, ready for orders, and wish you to order the regiment we wrote about to march with speed to Stamford, the rendezvous formerly appointed, to be there in readiness for further orders from Parliament, Council, Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, or Major-Gen. Harrison.

The army now in Fife will soon be on their rear, yet we thought it fit to have what force we can ready to join Harrison, and give impediment to their advance; use your best diligence. We hope their march southward will tend much to shorten this work, and would use all means in this conjuncture to promote it; we again recommend this particular to your utmost care. Harrison's forces already there, and such as we have appointed to march to him, and to execute orders from Parliament and Council, Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood and Major-Gen. Harrison. this march of theirs southwards will tend very much to shorten this work, and that you will put forth your utmost endeavours in this conjuncture. Have special care to seize, disarm, and secure dangerous and disaffected persons, and to suppress every the least motion tending to disturb public peace, wherein you are to consult and pursue your former instructions, and present exigencies of affairs, so as nothing on your part may be wanting tending to the prevention of such mischiefs as the enemies of the nation's peace have plotted or shall practise against it. As their party here will not fail to do their utmost in this conjuncture to execute any designs against garrisons, the better to countenance and give advantage to their cause, we recommend you to have a more especial watchful eye over your garrison, and all the people in it, as well guards as others, and to observe all applications made from any, and to whom and for what, that you may prevent the execution of any designs the enemies may have upon it. Council of State to Col. Thomas Birch. We hear from Scotland that the enemy's army is marching southward. We doubt not that if they can make their impression so far, they have an eye upon that county [Lancashire], as conceiving themselves to have a great party there. Take special care of the garrison of Liverpool, whence there are some to be drawn out, by order of this Council, to make up a regiment, for which we gave orders to Col. Duckenfield. Draw into the garrison so many of the late militia forces, such as you can confide in, as may keep the garrison in safety, and for the better security of the place, and other service upon those coasts, you are hereby authorized to give such orders and directions to any commanders of ships in the service of the State, now in the harbour or that shall come thither, as you shall judge may be most for the service of the public, and they are thereby required to give obedience to your said orders.

21. Col. Edward Popham to the Navy Commissioners. Having received information from you that there were several vessels laden with provisions at Portsmouth, that were only staying for a convoy to conduct them hither, I sent the Dragon frigate on that service, but when she arrived, there were not any victuals shipped, nor any vessels to take it in, so that the Dragon was forced to take it on board, and brought it here, where it yet remains. I stayed the convoy for the Straits here, expecting the ships which are hired to carry the provisions for Capt. Penn's squadron, until a special order came from the Navy Committee for their sailing, which they did last Tuesday. The contractors for victualling the navy wrote me to ship 27,520 lbs. of bread from Dover, in whatever vessel I should think fit, the shipping provided at London not being able to take it in, but the ships were gone before their letter came to hand, and therefore it must be shipped in some vessel that comes from London, or be left behind, unless the Admiralty Committee sends a convoy with it, and then the convoy may take in that proportion of bread. I know of no ships belonging to the State fit for this service, unless it be the Garland, which is now at Hull. Let the enclosed be conveyed to the contractors. [1 page.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of the several counties on the way to Stafford. We hear from Scotland that the Scots' arms could by no means be provoked to fight in Scotland, and upon our army's marching into Fife, where they now are in good condition, they marched southward with the intention of coming to England, upon the borders whereof there is a good party with Major-General Harrison, and others appointed to rendezvous to join with him, to give them impediment in their van, and we doubt not but a sufficient party of the main army will be speedily upon their rear. We also hear that the Scots have no great opinion of this their design, but prosecute it because they have no other game to play; and yet to make the best they can of it, they have sent their agents into several parts of England, to stir up their party, with commissions to their confidants to give them command. You are therefore to have frequent meetings, and have a watchful eye upon any that comes into your county to make application to any of the disaffected party, and such as you have just cause to suspect, you are to disarm and secure. Also be careful to suppress the first tendency towards insurrection, and to that end you are hereby empowered to raise and call together any part of your forces of the late militia, being such as you can confide in, the officers and soldiers whereof are hereby required to receive and obey your orders; and you are to certify to us the names of such as you find refractory, as also what you do for the safety of your county. The news of the Parliament's forces overthrowing the King's army in Fife has much surprised the Louvre, they having heard much of the hopeful position of the King and his forces. The Queen [Henrietta Maria] is unusually troubled by it, she taking the affairs of Scotland the more to heart, because she was the principal actor of the King's going thither, and the contrary faction of royalists impute the ill success to her. Yet they are not out of heart, for they say the King's forces, being well able to deal with the Parliament army remaining in Lothian, will overcome them, and march into England "where, if they could but once set their foot, all would go "well afterwards." Aug. 10. 23. Reasons submitted by Thomas Violet to the Mint Committee to prove the necessity of making farthing tokens, and half farthings either of copper or tin, at such a full value that they should not be counterfeited abroad or at home, there being no advantage to be made of them but for payment of workmanship.

1. Money is the public means to set a price upon all things between man and man, and experience has sufficiently proved in all ages that small money is so needful to the poorer sort, that all nations have endeavoured to have it. Such small money was formerly commixed by some nations with silver to answer its true value, but it was subsequently determined by some of them to make it merely of copper, for the following reasons: viz., that a grain or two of silver, being commixed with copper, was waste of silver, as the refining of it out of the copper cost as much as the silver commixed therewith, and the colour of the copper being red, the commixture was not known upon sight.

2. There is therefore a reason in my first proposition for making farthings either of fine rose copper or of tin, without silver, for the accommodation of all sorts of people who buy or sell small wares; for that change being divided and subdivided, gives occasion that victuals and all sorts of small ware are divided, and accordingly proportioned, whereby the buyer receives a great commodity to have something for the least piece of coin, and the seller finds that light gains often make a heavy purse.

3. A plentiful supply of small pieces ministers means of frugality, where poor men can have a farthing or half farthing's worth, and are not constrained to buy more of anything than they stand in need of, their feeding being from hand to mouth.

Aug. 10.

4. Many aged and impotent poor and others that would work and cannot get employment are deprived of many alms for want of farthings and half farthings, for many would give a farthing or half farthing who are not disposed to give a penny or twopence, or to lose time in staying to change money, "whereby they may contract a noisome smell or the disease of the poor."

5. Copper monies have been used in all ages, as may be seen to this day in the Roman antiquities, both before and since Christ's time, in the commonwealth of Athens, and that famous copper at Corinth held in such esteem now amongst antiquaries. When I was a goldsmith, I used to have great quantities of antiquities, which for the most part had been ploughed up in men's grounds, and had lain here in England ever since the time of the Romans. At this day copper money goes in France, Flanders, Holland, Rome, Venice, Geneva, Milan, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and all Germany, and they make their copper money of such full value that many merchants have brought thousands of pounds of it out of Sweden, to sell to our braziers to make kettles in England, and have made a better return than the bringing of silver, gold, or other commodities of the country. Farthings may be made of tin at so full a value that the pewterer cannot sell you new pewter cheaper than the farthings of tin can be made, but to avoid adulteration with lead, or counterfeiting or clipping farthings, there must be an Act making it treason or felony at the least.

6. If you make farthings of tin, and have them justly assayed, and give them a full value, to be issued out at 15*d.* or 16*d.* to the lb. avoirdupois, then you make use of your own native commodity, and it will give employment to many of our own miners and tanners, will be a merchandise to be carried out at that value, and you will keep in the stock of the nation, which will be in some proportion expended in buying copper in Sweden, if you make farthings of copper.

7. A surveyor will be necessary to keep an account for the State, to see the metal assayed, and that the farthings are justly assized, and for that place I desire the fee of 1*d.* the lb. for all farthings that shall be made for the commonwealth and Ireland, or such a salary as you think fit; and every three months I will give an account to the Council of State of the quantity of farthings and half farthings made, the goodness of the metal, both copper and tin, the remains of what are not changed, and the names of those that took them, so that the State may know the quantities made.

8. If objectors would have pence, halfpence, farthings, and half farthings made with silver, I know by experience that almost all such are lost, as being of so little bulk, and being put with other coin, they slip between, and the silver generally comes to nothing; the inconveniency of putting silver in copper is shown in my first proposition.

9. My proposition for regulating the manufacture of farthings is to make the standard 84 pieces, with a liberty of sheer of two pieces, but not to exceed 86 pieces nor under 84 pieces in copper, which shall weigh 16 oz. avoirdupois, and which pieces, containing the weight and number aforesaid, shall be delivered out for 21*d.* the lb.

Aug. 10. to all that shall require them, at the Tower, half-farthings to be 200 to 204 pieces to the lb., and sold for 2s. 1*d.* the lb.

10. If the State make the farthings of tin, that can be done at 15*d.* the lb., and be cut into 60 to 62 pieces, and half-farthings 144 to 146 pieces, to be delivered out at 1s. 6*d.* the lb. A pound of copper farthings can be made for 4*d.* and the half-farthings for 8*d.*, the State finding the copper; the tin farthings for 4*d.* the lb. and the half farthings for 6*d.*, the State not being at any charge for tools, either for making or keeping them in repair. There will be 1*d.* charge per lb. weight for keeping a surveyor and assay master to keep an account of the whole business, and I desire that employment. The workman could not afford to make the copper farthings under 1s. 8*d.* the pound and 2s. per pound for the half-farthings; 1s. 3*d.* per lb. for the tin farthings, and 1s. 6*d.* for the half lb., and the 1*d.* for charge upon every pound weight; for as the State gets nothing, the thing should bear its own charge, and by this way we may have small change, which will be a great relief to all sorts of people that trade in small wares.

10. Some restrictions may be appointed for passing farthings, such as that they are not to go in payment upon bills of exchange, bonds, public accounts to the State, nor for rents; that no man should be compelled to take them in payment above 6*d.*, nor any labouring man or chapman above that sum in farthings for payment of labour; and that it should be left free to all, according to their necessity for change, to come and fetch their farthings at the Tower, or other appointed place, and an Act of Parliament should be passed, making it a felony to clip or counterfeit any of such coin. Council of State to the Lord Mayor. Aug. 11.

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, Essex, Herts, Bucks, Northampton, Warwick, Leicester, Worcester, and Rutland. The Scotch army have given up their own country for lost, which they had not the courage to defend, but looked on while they saw one part after the other taken by our army, and took their opportunity (while our army was gone to St. John's, the principal town of Scotland, which we took after lying before it only one day) to march into England, with what was left of their forces that had not been destroyed by us, or run away, being about 11,000 horse and foot, and have left in Scotland neither face of authority nor visible force; they had no other course left them, and this course has not been taken without division in their counsels, and with despondency, their only hope being that they shall grow strong in England, with the conflux to them of their party here, of such traitors to the commonwealth as they have wrought off from their duty, and of others upon the old score of malignity.

The Lord General uses all possible diligence to march after them, with the body of his army, and has despatched Major-Gen. Lambert with 3,000 horse and dragoons to follow upon their rear, being resolved to march day and night until he comes up with them; and Major-Gen. Harrison, with 4,000 horse and dragoons, and such other forces as can be got together in the northern parts on the sudden to join with him, is to be upon their van, so that we hope their march will be impeded, and the conjunction of their party in a good measure hindered, until the army may come up to them.

Nevertheless to prevent all resort to them, and to be ready against all events, in case they should have outmarched our forces, we desire you to raise all the horse and foot of the late militia of your county forthwith, and bring them to some rendezvous in your county, where they are to continue in readiness to suppress any insurrections in the county, or to join with the forces of Major-Gen. Harrison, or to put in execution any commands they shall receive from Parliament, Council, or Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. This service you are to promote with all imaginable industry, and without dispute and delay, for these endeavours of the enemy being broken, the greatest difficulty of the war in this island is at an end; but in case of negligence here, if the enemy should grow great in numbers by the access of his own party, and should put any affront upon any of our party, for want of a timely junction with them of other forces, it might be of dangerous consequence to the public safety. You are to daily certify us of the number you raise, and their place of rendezvous, that we may give you further orders with more certainty and expedition. [I. 96, p. 343.]

Council of State to Major-Gen. Harrison. We received yours from Newcastle with the enclosures; by ours you will see that we have written to all the counties you had written to, except those of North Wales, to be in readiness with what force they possibly could to receive your commands, and have now written to all the other militias in the way towards you, to be also ready. We have also caused Col. Gibbons' regiment, and five companies of Col. Berkstead's under Lieut.-Col. Cobbett, being a full thousand, to march to Northampton, to receive further orders, and have directed Col. Berkstead to make up his regiment to 2,000 again. Meantime some of the volunteer foot of London will help to supply the guard. We have appointed the three regiments of volunteers to rendezvous this week with Col. Berkstead's regiment, and the horse of the guard and some volunteer horse will make a considerable party. We have also sent for Major-Gen. Skippon to take care of the city, whom we intend this day to excite to a speedy and effectual levy for their own defence.

We have written Major-Gen. Desborow to march with three troops of his regiment to Reading, whither we have also appointed Col. Heane to come, with 2,000 foot, which will be convenient for Gloucestershire if there be occasion. The West is left to the care of Col. Blake, whom we have ordered to send two ships to the Isle of Man, to prevent any supplies or juncture of forces from thence with the Scotch king. Col. Popham has also orders to send ships to lie before Ostend and Dunkirk, to prevent the coming out of any forces from the Duke of Lorraine to make a diversion; as also some to Yarmouth, to prevent any landing there.

This is our posture, and what for the present we have been able to do ; we shall continue to add what we can, being unwilling to be wanting in due care and providence, and leave all to the disposing of God who has hitherto helped us, and who, we doubt not, will appear to destroy those His enemies whose counsels He has darkened, and upon whom He has sent a spirit of confusion and giddiness. We approve your motion for mounting 400 or 500 men, and will use our endeavours to Parliament that provision may be made for them ; meantime you may encourage and make use of them. Council of State to Col. Thomas Birch. Thanks for your diligence and care upon this sudden exigence, in putting your forces in readiness to serve against this invasion of the Scotch king ; we doubt not that before this you have received further directions from Major-General Harrison, and hope that, upon the juncture of the forces of those parts with those with him, you will be able at least to stop their further march, until the army comes up. Order in Parliament,—on report of Mr. Stephens from the Committee appointed to withdraw an Act empowering several persons nominated by the Council of State to be of the militia for the several counties, to execute the powers granted by any Act, order, or ordinance of Parliament, for raising horse or foot for the service,—that the Council of State consider how the officers and others employed in the service may be paid, and present an Act for that purpose to the House.

That the Council of State issue such sums as they think fit for encouraging and paying such honest and faithful persons as voluntarily enlist in the three regiments of volunteers in and about London, under Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, Major-Gen. Harrison, and Col. Tichbourne, for the service and safety of the commonwealth, in such manner as they shall think fit, as well respecting their former services as their present charges.

That the Council of State take care that the Act passed this day, and ordered to be printed and published, prohibiting correspondence with Charles Stuart and his party, is sent into the several counties, and there published.

1. Col. Fortescue to be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms.

2. The proclamation prepared to be reported to the House by Lord Commissioner Whitelock, that something to that purpose may be passed, if they think fit.

3. Lord Commissioner Whitelock to report to the House the effect of his negotiation yesterday with the common Council of London.

5. The 1,000 backs and breasts, 1,500 potts, 1,000 long pikes, 1,000 snaphance and 500 matchlock muskets, shipped on the Thomas of London, to be returned to the Tower.

6. Opinion of Council—the Scots with an army having entered England, designing the ruin and conquest thereof, and bending their forces towards the southern parts, of which their chief aim is to make a prey,—that the former commissions grounded upon the late Militia Act, and which were in force before the expiration of the said Act, and which have been since granted by Parliament or Council of State, be renewed and continued in force until Parliament give further order. Also that the Militia Commissioners nominated by the Council of State throughout England or Wales be authorized forthwith to summon before them all the militia forces lately listed or raised in their several counties, whether horse or foot, with all their officers, to be drawn in one body to some rendezvous in each respective county, and that each person who finds horsemen or footmen furnish them immediately with a month's pay, the same to be reimbursed by appointment of Parliament, or by assessment, or otherwise.

All commissioners, commanders, officers, and soldiers to be required to do their duties herein, with all faithfulness and diligence, on pain of being censured enemies to their country, and such penalties as in that behalf shall be thought fit to be inflicted upon them by Parliament.

7. Lord Commissioner Whitelock to report to Parliament that the Council of State think the marching of the Scottish Army into England is not upon confidence, for when it was whole and unbroken, they could not be provoked to give battle to our army, or come out of their strengths to save their own country, which they saw taken in one part after another; and despairing of it, they have deserted it as lost. They are marched into England with this last hope, that from their own party of the traitors, there will be a great conflux unto them for their recruits and assistance, in which, if they should be disappointed, they will soon come to nothing, though they should have but weak opposition. And although Council find also, that, by the great diligence and care of the Lord General and his officers, the forces of this nation are disposed so as they cannot advance far before our force will be with them, and that there will be (through God's goodness) a speedy and thorough end of the great diligence and cheerfulness, and order their affairs prudently and with good judgment.

That Council has good hopes from those letters that a considerable body of foot will be got together, to join with the horse with Major-Gen. Harrison, to impede the march of the Scots' army, until the body of our army comes up.

That by computation of the time of Major-Gen. Lambert's march, Council conceive he is now come up to the rear of the enemy.

That as Parliament was not sitting, Council held it necessary to send a Committee from themselves to the Common Council of the City of London, to inform them of the state of affairs, and to stir them up to do as became them in this exigency, of which message and return Parliament will be informed by the Committee employed.

Use your best diligence that none may pretend ignorance thereof, and take an account from the sheriffs of this service, and certify us. Take care that some parties of horse be upon the road between the post stages, to secure the public packets, and examine such as shall ride post without warrant, as also to free the road from dangerous persons, by apprehending and bringing them before the magistrates.

We have also sent you an Act passed this day, giving you power to act in the militia, which you are to do daily and with vigour, as the exigency of affairs requires. Take care there be always at each post stage, two or three stout, discreet, and faithful horsemen, who may examine such as ride post without warrant, and assist such as ride upon the State's service, to see them furnished with horses without delay. engaged in this desperate course by necessity, and their only hope is the recruit of their number and other assistance from their party here ; that being prevented, the work against them cannot be either difficult or long. We are very well assured that you have not been wanting, out of the zeal and affection you bear to your country, to improve your interest in those parts, for the seasonable raising what horse and foot can possibly be got together, to assist against this army, which, being all that is left them, if it be destroyed, the difficulty of this war is over.

As they could never have undertaken such a desperate course as this is, but upon confidence to effect something of consequence by their correspondence and intelligence with their party, by getting some considerable garrisons into their hands, or otherwise, we desire you to have a special care of Hull, of which you are governor, now that Col. Overton, who is now Governor of St. John's town in Scotland, is absent. We give you this intimation in regard of the consequence of the place, not doubting but you have that and all things else in your thoughts necessary in this juncture for the common safety, and have by your influence contributed much to the preserving thereof. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for London, Westminster, Southwark, and the Tower Hamlets. You have been informed of the march of the Scottish army into England ; their only hope here is the access to them of their party from hence, which we doubt not will be prevented by the forces both in the van and rear of them, who will intercept such as endeavour a junction ; yet for the better prevention of the increase of their number, which are like to be most from about the city, we desire you to take order this night that all the horses, geldings, and mares, except those known as market carriers' waggon, dray, and cart-horses, that are within the limits wherein by the late Act you exercised the power of a Militia Committee, be seized, and either brought into some fit place within your limits, or sufficient security taken of those in whose custody they are, that they be not removed but by license from such persons as Council shall authorize. For the better effecting hereof, communicate with the rest of the militias within the late lines, and agree as to the time and manner of its execution. As it is a service of great concern to the preservation of peace in this conjuncture of affairs, we cannot doubt of your zeal and readiness herein, and for what you shall do in it, this shall be your sufficient warrant. 16. Whereas there was an order made yesterday for giving Lord Grey six blank horse commissions for raising volunteers, Council now declare that the officers and soldiers of the said troops are to be enlisted by Lord Grey, with the approbation of the Militia Commissioners for the county in which any of the said troops shall be raised.

17. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider to-morrow how money may be speedily dispatched to the army with the Lord General, and report.

18. Lord Commissioner Whitelock and Col. Thomson to go forth and peruse the papers brought by Capt. Stevens from Stirling, and compare them with the articles of Scilly, and if they find he has done anything contrary to them, to report, that further order may be given.

19. Four blank commissions for foot companies to be delivered to the Militia Commissioners of Sussex.

20. Also to the Militia Commissioners of Surrey.

21. Also to the Militia Commissioners of Herts for volunteers.

22. Lord Commissioner Whitelock to write the Militia Commissioners for Oxford that Council finds no cause why Capt. Stevens should be detained here, and to desire them to have an eye upon him in his future carriage, and to take care of Oxford.

23. To write the Governor of Crowland to take care of that place, there being designs to surprise it by the enemy.

Council of State to Major-Gen. Harrison. We received yours from Ripon, and thank you for your diligence in your march, and hope you have received the van of the enemy, and that they will march but slowly, so that our army will seasonably come up to them; yet lest they might have been before you, and come with large marches this way, we thought fit to stay those foot that were appointed to Newmarket,—it not being possible to have them seasonably with you,—and with them and others, to make up a body in these parts, and have appointed a rendezvous next Tuesday at Barnet, where we have also appointed above 2,000 horse, besides other volunteers. Council sent a committee to the Common council [of London], to stir them up in this conjuncture to do what becomes them for their own and the public safety, and they are at present in a very good and complying temper, and ready to do anything they shall be directed to. We hope there will be a good appearance of their forces. There was an order given to all ships that should be upon those seas to receive orders from (you) for the public service, so that there was no want of direction in that particular. Care will be taken for encouragement of Col. Cradock and Col. Powell's troop, and consideration had of other particulars in your letters. [I. 96, p. 351.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Essex, Kent, Herts, Beds, and Bucks. The Scotch army, leaving their own country for lost, are marched into England, taking advantage of our army being as far north as St. John's Town in Scotland. They give out they are for London, and though all diligence be used to impede their march, until our army, who are marching with all speed after them, can overtake them, yet lest they should get past our horse, who attend them both in the van and rear, we think it necessary to have a force here about London, ready for all occasions. We therefore desire you to send two troops of your militia horse, and a regiment of your foot, consisting of 1,000 men, to a rendezvous at Barnet, which we have appointed for Tuesday the 19th instant; and furnish them with a month's pay, which you will have means to reimburse, Parliament having passed an Act to revive your former powers, which is herewith sent. In this emergency of affairs, act with all diligence and vigour, and put in execution the instructions formerly given for preserving the peace of the country. With note that the letters to Essex and Herts are only to be for a regiment of foot, and that to Middlesex for a foot regiment 1,000 strong. [I. 96, p. 352.]

Council of State to Lord General Cromwell. We have seen yours to Sir Hen. Vane, as also to Council, from near Whittingham, and are confident you will lose no time to overtake the enemy. In what posture to the enemy the forces with Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison are, you will best hear from themselves. We have used our utmost diligence to put all things here into the best posture, and we enclose a copy of the report thereof made to Parliament yesterday.

Although we do not doubt but Harrison has got into their van, and Lambert has been already a day or two upon their rear, whereby they will be necessitated to make slow marches, until you shall overtake them, and that there will be a speedy and full end of that army, and thereby no great difficulty to finish what remains, we have yet,—for the greater security of these parts, and to discourage any of their party to make diversion or give disturbance to the public peace,—appointed a rendezvous at Barnet on Tuesday next, of 2,000 horse and 8,000 foot, besides what we may expect from the City of London and parts adjacent, and besides volunteers, which we did not reckon in the former account. We find the city in a very good and complying temper, and ready to act anything they shall be directed for the public and their own safety, and we conceive the party of the Scotch king will be afraid to show themselves. As to the money, care will be taken to send it to such place as you appoint, on return of the bearer; as we conceive you will have marched too far from Hull to receive it thence, we know of no strong place on the way where to lodge it until it may come to you. Aug. 15. Council of State to Col. Danvers, Governor of Stafford, and the Whitehall. Militias of Cheshire. We have received yours, and though we have no order to give you, we let you know our satisfaction with your diligence in getting so speedily and seasonably so great a number together, and of your forward march with them, as also of the good affection in your county, in so generally appearing for the common defence and their own, against this invasion. We doubt not but, by this your readiness, your forces will have a share in the merit of this service, and this general manifestation of affection will be a discouragement to any further attempts against the peace of the commonwealth, when they find they will have so little contribution to their designs among ourselves. We hope that a few days will put an end to this business, and that we shall not have any great difficulty to finish what remains for settling of peace; but as the danger is somewhat near you, we desire you to send what force you can get ready, to join with your neighbours in Cheshire, and receive orders from Major-Generals Lambert or Harrison. We believe, however, that those which shall come from thence will partake of the ruin of such as they come to assist, and that the work will have a good and speedy issue. We desire you by every opportunity to inform us of the state of affairs there, both as to the enemy and our own army. [I. 96, p. 357.]

We have been informed by Mr. Lechmore, one of your number, of the good posture of that county in this conjuncture, and of your great diligence to provide for the common safety and your own. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for London, Westminster, Southwark, and the Hamlets. We have thought fit, in this present conjuncture of affairs, that 1,000 foot be forthwith mounted, that with greater expedition they might be able to execute commands; and for furnishing horses, we desire you, out of those lately seized by our direction or otherwise, to have in readiness at St. James's to-morrow at 3 p.m. — horses, fit for dragoons, with bridles and saddles, to be delivered to Col. Gibbons.

And that in this exigency, all prejudice to particular persons may, as far as possible, be avoided, you are to appoint two persons of experience to value all such horses, and keep a list of their value, and the names of the proprietors, and give them a ticket for such horses, that they may receive pay for them within 20 days. Require the persons you so appoint to deal indifferently between the State and the proprietors, and to list none at above the rate of 6*l.* per horse and bridle, Council conceiving that horses of that price and under will be sufficiently serviceable for dragoons. Notwithstanding the invasion made by the Scotch army, and the danger drawing towards yourselves, there has not been that diligence and readiness to raise forces for defence that the exigency required of you, being neither stirred by your own danger, nor by the exemplary forwardness of your neighbours. In such a case as this of foreign invasion, you should not stay until you receive commands to preserve yourselves; use all diligence to redeem this slackness, and forthwith raise all the horse and foot you possibly can, and follow orders from Major-Generals Harrison or Lambert, and certify us who they are amongst the Commissioners that have not or that shall not diligently meet and attend this service, and who obstruct it, that Parliament may retribute them according to their merits, and be able to judge to whom they may for the future commit those affairs of the public which they wish carried on with effect and diligence. 26. Col. Robert Blake to the Navy Commissioners. The Council of State have written me that, for easing as much as possible of the present charge in keeping several fleets at sea, some of the greater ships might be sent in; and although the squadron westward is very small,—a good part of them being several ways, as the Guinea, Tresco, Bryer, and Swan at Portsmouth, and the President and Nicodemus gone for the Isle of Man,—yet I have ordered the Vanguard to repair forthwith to Chatham, and have given directions to her commander to give you notice on his arrival in the Downs, that money may be ready to pay her off.

I have now only the Victory, Elizabeth, and Phoenix, and the latter is now at Portsmouth, where the Bryer is setting a new mast, and ordered to attend about Scilly; as she is but weak to lie in those parts, the season of the year considered, order such work as can to be done upon her there, whereby she may be better enabled to continue abroad. Council has also directed me to send the Agnes pinnace to attend about Scilly, but she is not fit for that employment, being a poor small vessel, carrying one gun; I wish some other vessel might be thought of. We gave you directions for drawing forth some horse out of the militia horse of your county, in pursuance of an order of Parliament of 8 April last, for raising 3,000 horse and 1,000 dragoons, and signified that the residue drawn forth were to be disposed of as we should afterwards direct, since which we gave order for delivering the remainder of the horse to Commissary Phipps, for draught horses for the train, and notwithstanding this, there are some yet undelivered. Having at present an occasion for making use of train horses sooner than they can be had from the cities and counties where any remain undisposed of, we have taken care of their speedy buying here, and ordered that 9*l.* should be raised for each horse of those remaining, towards part of the charge of those bought here instead of them. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Kent. Having thought fit, for prevention of insurrections or tumults in these parts, upon the entering of the Scotch army, to order a rendezvous of forces on Tuesday next at Barnet, of which there was to be sent in from your county two troops of horse, we doubt not but you have already received orders from Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, and have them ready to march. That there may be no defect in those forces, let timely orders be given them to march in their full numbers to the rendezvous at Barnet; then proceed to raising the regiments of foot, that they may be ready to secure the peace, and execute such other services as they shall receive orders for. Council of State to Lord Grey. Yours with the enclosed from Col. Danvers, informing us of the state of our army near the enemy, is the latest we have received from thence. We see your progress in the place where you are; though it does not answer the proportion of other places, we are satisfied you have not been wanting in diligence, and thank you for it, and for all your care of the public.

We find the usual affection in Leicestershire, and though we hope a speedy end now, this forward appearance will discourage any attempts by the enemy, in hope of the assistance of a party here.

The Lord General passed Tyne at Newborn, four miles from Newcastle, the 12th inst. and refreshed there the next day. He has eight regiments of foot, and two of horse with him, and had a store of provisions sent from Newcastle, which were bestowed upon him by the town. The soldiers march in such good order that there is no discontent in the county against them. On the 14th the Lord General quartered at Branspeth, and on the 12th they wrote from Stirling that the mortar pieces and guns were planted. We killed 30 of their men out of the great church steeple, and there is great hope of taking that place speedily.

On Thursday last Mr. Cradock had a rendezvous near Chepstow, where 6,000 horse and foot appeared. They have secured many of the gentlemen, and seized most of their horses in co. Monmouth.

We heard from Major-Gen. Harrison, on the 12th inst., that the enemy was drawing from Warrington, and probably would attempt upon them before the Lord General's coming up. It will be good for you and us to be in readiness for the enemy's entertainment, if he should be able to press on. [I. 96, p. 367.]

Council of State to the several Militias. That you might not, at a distance from hence and from our army, be in the dark of the state of affairs, we give you this brief account of what is yet come to our knowledge. On Wednesday, Major-Gen. Lambert and Major-Gen. Harrison joined in Lancashire, on this side the river Ribble; on Thursday night they were at Bolton, and came on Friday to Warrington, where they viewed the 3,000 country foot who were come in to them, and who received them with all expressions of joy and resolution. The forces are above 12,000 horse, foot, and dragoons; their resolution was not to fight until the Lord General comes up to them.

The enemy lie between Preston and Wigan, and have no considerable accession from the country, and many of their own have left them. We could never hear that they were above 12,000 horse and foot, and we do not conceive there are so many, and they are under much discouragement. The country flies from before them, and carries and drives away all they can from them.

The country rise everywhere very cheerfully, and those near our army come in continually to them. The Lord General passed the Tyne at Newborn, four miles from Newcastle, on Tuesday, and when he had passed, he stayed a day to refresh his forces, after their long marches, and had a store of provisions from Newcastle. On the night of the 14th, he quartered at Branspeth, and will hasten to them with great marches. We hope there will be a speedy issue of this business, but still desire you to use all possible diligence in pursuance of directions from Parliament or Council, of which, though there should be no use as to the exigency of this affair, yet it may prevent the like for the future, by giving this discouraging experience to the enemy,—that if they will again attempt to disturb the peace, they cannot expect much assistance from any of their party among us. Council of State to several Militia Commissioners. The Scotch army having entered England, and pressing forward southward, and not knowing whether they may not overmarch our army, the body of our foot being some days' march behind them, it is very unnecessary for the public safety to have such a body of horse and foot together as may resist the invaders, or at least give them some check until our army shall come up. We therefore desire that all the forces of horse, foot, or dragoons you can by any means get ready may in no wise fail to be at the rendezvous at ——— on ———, where we have appointed the forces of several other counties to be at the same time.

The safety of your county is best provided for in the safety of the whole, by the conjunction of forces to make a considerable army, and you are by no means to fail to have all your forces there at the time and place appointed, where you are to expect further order from Parliament, Council, or Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. If you need commissions for any new officers, grant them, and we will approve on notice thereof at the rendezvous. Take care that the men you send be such as have not been engaged against Parliament; procure a month's pay for every officer and soldier, and let every soldier have a week's pay in hand, and the other three weeks' paid to the field officers of the regiments, or captains of the troops or companies, to be paid out at the rendezvous. With note that troops from cos. Leicester, Rutland, Northampton, Warwick, Oxford, Lincoln, Bedford, Hunts, Worcester, and Bucks are to rendezvous at Daventry on the 23rd; and those from cos. Berks, Surrey, Sussex, Hants, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Cambridge, and Kent to rendezvous at St. Albans on the 26th. [I. 96, p. 369.] marched into England, and found in you a great readiness to put yourselves into a posture for defence; the better to enable you thereto, Parliament has revived and passed several powers necessary to be put in execution by the Militia Commissioners of your city, and has this day passed an Act of which we enclose a copy.

As the Scots have passed the bridge at Warrington, and are pressing on southward,—although well attended with a good number of horse under Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison, who will take all opportunities against them,—we have appointed the forces of several counties to rendezvous in fit places, ready for a juncture with the major-generals. Notwithstanding this however, there should be a force in readiness for a reserve upon any exigency; we therefore recommend you to use all diligence to raise, by Friday next, as many foot regiments as you can, of trusty persons; we doubt not of finding in you a ready affection and a right judgment of what concerns your true interest and safety. We have not been wanting here to do our best, in the condition that things were in this conjuncture, there being then no militia power standing; what directions we have now given, you will see by the enclosed copy of our letter to Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison, and by the account of the rendezvous, which force is beside what we expect from the city, which will be 1,000 horse and some foot, besides 3,000 or 4,000 volunteers already formed, and some of them on duty. We hope the forces with the Major-Generals will impede their march, so that you may come up, or that with this Council of State to Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison. By yours from Knotsford Heath, we perceive the enemy's march on this side of Warrington, and find that Lambert, in his letter to the Lord General, enclosed to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, speaks of marching to Sheffield, if the enemy should march after you, which we suppose no ways probable, for his interest and aim must be to speed hither, whither, if he could march without any impediment, besides the reputation of it, he must needs gain recruits, and further accession of strength; but you being upon the place, we may not, as to those with you, alter your directions, nothing doubting but you will have a care of the main, and be at Northampton, where we hope to have a good body of horse and foot with Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood on Friday, so as upon conjunction with those whom you bring, this proud enemy may be put to a stand. We doubt not but he marches on to his own confusion, nor will his rage be to any purpose, whilst the goodness of God endureth daily.

We have altered the rendezvous of the county forces, shortening the time, our purpose being to hasten the forces to Northampton as they come in, and there we shall have money in readiness for them.

We doubt the Lord [Lieut. ?] General, without much time and pressure upon the country, cannot horse 2,000 foot, so you and we must rely upon what we can bring together at Northampton, which may take order with the enemy until the General come to join. We have sent an express to the Lord General, and a copy hereof. [I. 96, p. 381.]

Northampton before the time of the rendezvous, except those from Warwickshire. We question not but you consider that the enemy, being left at large, may thereby march the faster, while they have no impediment, and will also have a greater opportunity to waste the country at their pleasure, and increase their number by the access of those of their party, and grow in reputation by the distance of our forces from them; all which should be prevented as much as may be.

We have written to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood to hold constant correspondence with you, and ordered him to send such forces to you as he shall have with him, by way of conjunction with you upon any emergency, as he shall receive intimation from you. We can say nothing more, not having seen your letter to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, but conceive that you,—who are upon the place, and hold correspondence with the Lord General, and best understand the condition of your own and the enemies' forces,—will be able to direct your marches and proceedings to the best advantage. Gibbons and Cobbett's regiments, and by corresponding with him, such use may be made of those regiments, and the rest of the forces appointed to rendezvous there, as you judge best. We were glad to find your apprehension of the enemy stealing back to Scotland, it being a thing we very much feared before; but now we find you of that opinion, we are well satisfied, as nothing doubting but you will have a vigilant eye upon that and all other of his motions, and if he shall endeavour to put in execution such a resolution, you will so attend him as he shall not be able to bring it to effect. We are very sensible of the cordial affection of the gentlemen and forces of Cheshire, and shall speedily signify it to themselves and Major-Gen. Harrison. [I. 96, p. 385.]

We leave it to you who are on the place, upon correspondence with one another, to order the forces for a conjunction at such places as you shall judge to be most advantageous. We intended to request you to have a care as to the enemy retreating back to Scotland, and

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for South Wales, Hereford, Wilts, Monmouth. We sent you the Act reviving the former powers of the militia; we doubt not but you have heard of the Scots' march into England. They are well attended with a great body of horse under Major-Gen. Lambert, and there will speedily be a sufficient number of foot to join with them, whereby we hope there will be a speedy and good end of that business; yet to prevent any danger in those parts, we desire you to give order forthwith that all the horse, foot, and dragoons you have raised, or can raise within your county, may be at a rendezvous at Gloucester on Monday the 25th, where they are to continue until they receive orders from the Lord General, Major-Gen. Lambert, Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, or Sir Wm. Constable. Use your utmost diligence herein, as being that which will very much conduce to the public peace and safety; cause every officer and soldier to be furnished with a month's pay, to enable them to continue out for the service. Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. Hearing from Major-Gen. Harrison of your withdrawing the Cheshire forces to Leek, by an order of Major-Gen. Lambert, we desire to see a copy of it, as we are much at a stand to know the right grounds of this distance of our army from that of the enemy, and are not a little troubled at the mischief which we fear the Parliament's friends must needs thereby suffer, besides the enemies' march not being impeded, and the danger of his accession of strength. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Essex. Fleetwood, and the rest of your horse and dragoons, which are not yet marched out of your county, you are to reserve there, for preservation of the peace; but the foot are to march with all expedition, we standing in most need of foot. 8. To signify to Col. Berkstead that Council has received his letter, but having already signified to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood the sending of those men, they cannot go from their order, and doubt not but he may make a supply by taking in others in their place.

9. The packet brought in this day from the Northern parts to be searched before the letters be delivered out.

10. To write the several counties through which the army is to march, to furnish them with all necessary provisions.

11. Lord Commissioner Whitelock, Mr. Carew, and Mr. Say to be a committee to draw a proclamation for proclaiming Charles Stuart a traitor, according to the debates had this day, and to bring it in to Council to-morrow, that it may be perused and reported to the House, if Council approve it.

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. Understanding by the enclosed that the enemy quartered the 19th inst. at Stone, and intended to be yesterday night at Lichfield, and that our own forces were on the 19th at Uttoxeter, and the Lord General at Manchester, we wrote to Major-Gen. for the service, and for giving the enemy a check before he comes too near this place.

We have sent to Col. Twisleton of Kent, and to the two remaining regiments of Essex, to hasten after you. Those of Middlesex say they have two troops of 60 in a troop, and 500 foot, which they promise shall be at St. Alban's on Saturday. We have quickened them, as also all the rest, and given order to the Commissioners of co. Bucks to speed the raising of a regiment of foot. Mr. Holland has gone down, and will correspond with you. Mr. Scott says that one of the Buckinghamshire troops was completed to 100, and directed to Barnet, so that those you will hear of; the other troop is in good forwardness, and intends to be at Northampton to-morrow. The Essex Commissioners hope to have their forces at the rendezvous at Dunstable, and the train will be upon their march to-day.

The 300*l.* formerly ordered for contingencies we have made up to 500*l.*, which you shall receive by bills of exchange at Northampton, or so much in cash by the treasurers' wagons, which set out to-day. Care shall be taken for providing and sending some surgeons' chests, and we have sent to Heane to hasten with his six companies of foot to you, which may be near Abingdon to-night. Lieut.-Col. Clerk, with 12 companies more, is two days' march short of them, but of this Major-Gen. Desborow can inform you. We will endeavour to send you 500 of Col Berkstead's regiment with the train, and have directed Lord Grey to hasten to you with all speed. [L. 96, p. 389.]

Council of State to Major-Gen. Lambert. You will see by the enclosed that the enemy is coming on apace, lying upon Stone on Tuesday night, and expected at Lichfield yesterday night, and that the Lord General was at Manchester, many miles short of them; but whether this is so or not is better known by you than us. You will think it requisite, if the enemy be so forward, to give him a check before he reaches too near London, knowing also how the rendezvous of our forces under Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood are appointed, and the messenger from him will inform you what force he has or expects. We leave it to you upon the place to take such counsels as you shall judge best. [L. 96, p. 390.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for York. We find that your forces are not in that readiness, nor in such numbers as the exigency of the affairs requires, and as we expected they would have been, in regard of your own danger, being so near the enemies' march. What can yet be done we desire you to do with all expedition, and recommend to your best diligence that one regiment of 1,000 foot, besides officers, be forthwith raised, by virtue of the late Militia Act, which is now revived, and be put under Col. John Bright, to whom we have sent a commission, and under officers nominated by him and approved by the Lord General, for all of whom we have sent blank commissions. Advance one month's pay to all the officers and men, as other counties do to the forces they raise; for provision of trophies, advance 400*l.* on account to Col. John Bright, out of the money remaining upon the account of the last militia, if there be any, or else out of money to be raised on the present militia, and take order that nothing may hinder the most speedy raising of this regiment. If any difficulty arise, it may be adjusted afterwards, as shall be found most convenient. We again recommend the expediting of this regiment to your greatest diligence. [I. 96, p. 391.]

You are to raise 1,000 horse, besides the volunteers, and let no time be lost in getting them ready. As to the further disposal of the money brought in, no part thereof is to be laid out for any other purpose but as directed by the Act, and as you have already done, in providing horse and arms and the month's pay. Council of State to the Militia Commissioner for cos. Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall. The Scotch army, making great marches, has come as far as Worcester, and though our forces, now near a conjunction, will, we doubt not, put a good and speedy issue to this business, yet in this exigency, the forces of your county should be brought forthwith to a rendezvous, so as to be ready to suppress any insurrection, or appearance of any of the enemies' party for their assistance, accession to them, or making a diversion. The army of the enemy make great marches, and that our forces may be the better enabled to prosecute them, if the Lord General or Major Generals, or any other of the Commanders-in-Chief stand in need of horses to mount the foot, give your best assistance in furnishing them with horses, or what else they need for the prosecution of this work, which will stand much to your own safety, and be a very acceptable service. 3. Instructions for Thos. Scott and Richard Salwey, sent by Council to the Commanders-in-Chief of the forces employed against the Scots' army now in England;—

(1.) You are to repair with all speed to Coventry, or wherever you understand the commanders-in-chief to be, and upon your arrival, to make your addresses to the Lord General, if he be then with the forces under Major-Gen. that Council, on consideration had of the present state of affairs, condition of the enemy, and posture of the forces, have sent you, for mutual communication and better understanding of the progress of affairs.

(2.) Tell them what course Council has taken in raising and ordering forces, and what debates had upon intelligence received from them and others, and confer with them at the Council of war or otherwise, how the forces may be best employed against the enemy; and when you have fully understood the state of affairs with them, and their thoughts and advice, make your speedy return to the Council.

(3.) It is of great importance to Council that, whatever is done by them in order to a general organization of the forces, a considerable party of horse dragoons be near, attending the motions of the enemy, as Council have this day written them; you are by conference and debate to press the same.

Additional instructions for Scott and Salwey:—

(4.) You are hereby authorised to open all letters you meet with directed to the Council of State, or any member thereof, if you think fit, and having read them, to reseal and dispatch them to Council.

(5.) You are also, if you meet with any of the Cheshire gentry, or any of the commanders of their forces, to let them know how great a sense Council has of their cheerful readiness to appear in such great numbers for defence of the public liberty, and to thank them for it in the name of Council, and also to intimate to them that you doubt not but Parliament, so soon as their affairs give leave, will take particular notice of such good service.

4. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider how the two troops of dragoons now commissioned may be dispatched to present service, and report this afternoon how money may be had for them.

5. The letters of the Governor of Guernsey referred to the Admiralty Committee.

6. The 10 companies now on their march eastward from Exeter, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Clarke, to be ordered to march to Bristol, and remain there until further orders.

7. 40 more men to be added to Major Sanders' company at Exeter, for defence of the castle, and this to be reported to the House, that they may be added to the establishment.

10. Capt. Bray to be removed from Windsor Castle to Wallingford.

11. To report to the House that Council,—being informed by the Governor of Windsor Castle that Capt. Bray, prisoner there, committed from Parliament, is a person very dangerous to the peace and safety of that garrison, and more especially at this time, is very active to beget disturbances amongst the soldiers,—have thought fit to remove him to Wallingford.

15. To write the Militia Commissioners for the four northern counties to have their militia forces ready, and to apply them so that they may be assistant to the Governors of Berwick and Carlisle, for prevention of any correspondence between Scotland and the Scottish army in England.

16. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider how Col. Bright, of Yorkshire, may raise a regiment of foot, and how they may be maintained when raised, and to report, that notice may be given him.

17. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. York as to the present state of affairs, and to quicken them in their care for the safety of their county, and in the raising of forces proportionable to other counties.

18. Mr. Frost to pay 200*l.* to Mr. Rushworth and Capt. Bishop, to enable them to carry on the business of intelligence.

21. 22. Lord Commissioner Whitelock and Mr. Love to inform Mr. Solicitor that as he is going into Hampshire, and the forces of that county are not in that forwardness that the present state of affairs requires, he is to stir up the rest of the commissioners to hasten that work.

23. Col. Twisleton to march with his regiment to Lieut.-General Fleetwood, and observe his orders.

30. Lord Commissioner Whitelock and Sir Hen. Vane to go to Mrs. Popham from Council, and condole with her on the loss of her husband, and to let her know what a memory they have of his services, and that they will upon all occasions be ready to show respect to his relations.

and Gloucester, and that your forces are about Lichfield, which is a great distance from them; though we conceive your applying yourself so much this way is in order to your conjunction with other forces, yet we are of opinion that you, having so great a body of horse and dragoons with you, might be able to appoint a good party of them to march near the enemy, and lie as close to them as they may, to amuse them of your intentions, cause them to march close and slow, prevent their increase of forces by accession of any of their party, preserve our reputation and friends, protect the country, prevent their seizing the passes upon the Severn, and get the better intelligence from the enemy, both for your own direction, and to communicate to us, that we may take such resolution as shall be requisite. Yet this is not to hinder the conjunction of your main body with such forces as are marching to you; and that there may be the more full and clear communication of counsels between us and you, we have sent Mr. Scott and Major Salway to communicate the thoughts of Council to you. Council of State to the Lord General. You being now nearer the Major Generals than we, will receive from them full information of the condition of our own forces, and where they are, and of the posture, motion, and condition of the enemy. Finding them bending towards Worcester and Gloucester, and our forces at some distance from them, we have written Lambert, and dispatched to him Mr. Scott and Major Salway, who have orders to communicate with you what they shall do there, you being now so near them. We desire you, by frequent intercourse with them, to direct the whole affair as you judge best.

We have received your letter and enclosures, and referred it to the Irish and Scotch Committee to order provisions and send men, in all which no care will be wanting.

The Commissions for Col. Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. Col. Twisleton's regiment being appointed to march to a rendezvous, and understanding that they were not as yet advanced, we sent for the Colonel, and find that,—through the sickness of his Lieut.-Colonel, and the suspension of Capt. Joseph, upon an information depending against him,—the orders have not been executed as to those two companies; and for want of trophies and other accommodations to enable him to march, there has been some discouragement in his regiment. For the latter, we have written the Militia Commissioners of Kent to furnish him, and he has gone down to hasten away his regiment, which we hope will be speedily upon their march. Order him as to his march towards you; and for the better enabling this regiment to perform service, take care, upon their coming up to you, to appoint an experienced Lieut.-Colonel, and a Captain for Capt. Council of State to Lord Chief Baron Wylde, and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for Worcester. We have received yours of the 20th, and think you should detain you own forces, notwithstanding the former appointment made when the enemy was conceived to be bending his course this way. We have recommended Major-Gen. Lambert, who has a good body of horse and foot near Coventry, to have a special eye to the enemy's motions, and to the safety of your city, and hope that, by such as shall be appointed to retard the enemy's march, and the army which is designed to pursue and fight them, there will be a seasonable prevention of any intentions against you or other places. We approve your endeavours in your own defence, but not being upon the place, must leave it to you to discern what is fittest to be done in order to your safety, and to make such preparations as you shall judge requisite. Council of State to Lieut.-Col. Clarke. As it has pleased God to take General Popham out of this life, Gen. Blake must presently go to sea to take care of his charge, and we have written to Major-Gen. We desire you, leaving the companies with you to march to Bristol, according to our last order, under such officers as are with you, to return in person back to Plymouth, and there expect orders from Major-Gen. Council of State to Col. Blake. General Popham having lately died, you must forthwith go to sea in person, to keep those affairs in good order, and prevent any impressions that may be made on the seamen by misrepresentation of affairs. We have written to Major-General Desborow to appoint some fit person to take care of the West which we lately committed to you, and to Lieut.-Col. Clarke forthwith to return to Plymouth. You are therefore to put yourself on board, and take care of your charge, and give necessary orders to the rest of the fleet, taking care to prevent any supplies being sent from foreign parts to the King of Scotland. He is come to England with an army, because he could not longer subsist in Scotland, and by reason our army was far north in Scotland, and has marched as far as Salop, yet we have now such forces near that army as we hope will put a speedy end to the business. It will be convenient, for your better managing that affair, to come into the Downs as soon as you can settle matters upon those coasts. [I. 96, p. 403.]

We have written Lieut.-Col. Lords Commissioners Whitelock and Lisle, Mr. Attorney and Mr. Say to be a committee to consider the draft proclamation for proclaiming Charles Stuart a traitor, and the declaration of the said Charles Stuart upon entering into England with a Scotch army, and his letter to the city of London, and to draw up a proclamation to be offered to Parliament on Monday.

15. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider the state of the forces here for guard of the Parliament, and how they are commanded.

16. Capt. Foach to quarter in or near the Mews, and receive orders from Major Winthrop, until further orders from Council.

18. The Irish and Scotch Committee to order Col. Kendrick to bring up his two troops of horse for the guard of Parliament, and continue them here until further order.

19. Also to confer with Majors Winthrop and Briscoe, and give orders to-morrow to the forces about this town for preserving the peace of London and Westminster.

20. Col. Kendrick, lodging near Somerset House, to attend the Irish and Scotch Committee to-morrow by 7 a.m.

21. To write Capt. Charles Brooks to march with 30 horse, or send so many under a careful officer to Arundel Castle, and take Sir John Clotworthy, prisoner there, to Dover Castle, and deliver him to Col. Kelsey, the governor, to be kept until further order.

22. A like letter to be sent to Capt. Rich. Boughton of Sussex, to march with 30 horse to Windsor Castle, receive Sir Wm. Lewis, and convey him safely to Arundel Castle, and deliver him to Capt. Morley, the governor.

23. 45*l.* each to be allowed to the two captains that were to raise two troops of dragoons, one of them having raised 120 and the other 140 men, for charges in raising them, with which the said captains undertake to satisfy their officers and soldiers, and forthwith discharge them, to be enlisted in Col. Berkstead's regiment. [I. 21, pp. 66-70.]

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. By intelligence from the Major-Generals, we find that the Scots' army bend their march towards Worcester and Gloucester; and as it would be inconvenient for the forces of Sussex, Surrey, Hants, and Berks to march to Dunstable, we have given them order to march to Oxford with all speed, and there to expect your orders. As we would have no time lost by the forces of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Cambridge, who were also appointed to Dunstable, we think fit they should march to Buckingham; and as their coming to the rendezvous first appointed is very little out of their way to Buckingham, we have directed them, as they come to Dunstable, to march to Buckingham for your orders, unless they receive them before, in which case they are to follow them, without regard to ours. We have also written Col. Heane to expect your orders for his forces at Oxford.

Note of the orders given for Col. Clarke and his 10 companies. All the alterations of forces made upon the intelligence of the enemy's march have been to the best of our judgments, to put them into the fittest posture to receive your commands, to which we have left them free.

Our messenger from hence found the regiment from Col. Wauton a little on this side of Newmarket on Thursday morning, and they showed great cheerfulness and alacrity to march against the enemy, and had resolved to be at Royston that night, and so to march on with all expedition. We enclose a copy of what we have received from Oxford. [I. 96, p. 407.]

Council of State to Sir Arthur Hesilrigge. The Lord General desires 2,000 men to be sent him for carrying on and finishing the business of Scotland, and recruiting the forces there, while so many of the army are now in England. We cannot get them in these parts, while we are forced to raise all we can for prevention of mischief here, therefore desire you to raise 1,200 men in the four northern counties, whence no forces have marched against this invading enemy, and from which parts they are also now far removed, and to ship them from Newcastle with all expedition to Col. Monk. We know your power in those counties, and the trust conferred upon you; and desire you in this exigency to put it forth to the utmost, for the expeditious sending away of these recruits, of which there is very great need; we cannot make the supply desired without your sending this proportion; for the rest, we will do what we may to dispatch them from other parts. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for the Western Counties. By reason of the uncertainty of the march of the Scottish army, we have not yet any such assurance of their intention, and the end propounded by them, but that they may perhaps endeavour to come towards the West; and though they are well attended with our forces, now near a conjunction, and will not be able to stay long anywhere but our forces will be with them, yet, lest they should anywhere slip by them, we desire you to have ready what forces you can in your county at a rendezvous, to receive orders for opposing the enemy, preserving the peace of your county, and preventing any risings of Charles Stuart's party, or any accession of numbers to him. The better to preserve peace, you are to secure such as you know or have cause to suspect to be dangerous persons, and such as have been formerly secured and are now at liberty upon bail, in this present state of affairs, and until there be an end of this business, which we conceive will speedily come to a good issue. such as are the weakest you are to reduce, and to recruit the others to their full number, so that we may have the service of full regiments and troops, and not be at greater charge than is necessary; for 'tis not the numbers of empty regiments and troops, but the full numbers of men that will effectually answer the end of raising forces for this exigency. Thanks for your seizing John Cresswell, and John and Thos. Willoughby, who pretended to be on their way to Northampton, and securing them as dangerous and disaffected persons; that you may not be further troubled with them, finding they belong to co. Council of State to Major-Generals Lambert and Harrison. By all our intelligence of the condition or motion of the enemy, or of the state and posture of our own, we find nothing to make us change our opinion. The enemy grows in reputation by the distance of our forces from him, and the country lies open to his spoil, and towns and passes will be in danger of his surprise. He marches as fast as he pleases, and draws toward the places of his greatest hopes, and the further he thus marches, the further our foot may be behind. We therefore again recommend what we have formerly written, having now nothing else to trouble you with. The posture of the forces of these parts you will learn from Lieut.-Gen. Council of State to Col. John Pyne and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for co. Somerset. On Thursday last, the enemy marched from Wetton Green in Cheshire, to Tong in Worcestershire, by which he seems to tend to Worcester and those parts; perhaps before he will stand to an engagement, he may visit the West, to try his interest in those counties, for which end he has employed several agents thither, as he had done in other parts, and where we doubt not but he will receive the same success. Bestir yourselves for the safety of your county, not only in drawing together all honest men into a military posture, but in securing dangerous and ill-affected persons that may endeavour the breach of the peace, or promote a concurrence with the enemy; apprehend and keep in safe custody all such persons in your county as were formerly in custody, and are now out upon bail, and whom you apprehend to be dangerous and fit to be secured, until you receive further order from Council. N. N. to ———. At the Louvre, they are very joyous and confident about the King of Scotland being entered into England. A great deal of improbable news passes current with them, as that the King is already possessed of Manchester and Winchester; that parties declare for him in Suffolk and other counties; that Col. Blayne is in the field with 3,000 men. A letter to Col. Rooksby says Lancashire and the neighbourhood are sending in abundance of men, money, and provisions. At reading this letter, the Duke of York leapt for joy. The Louvre fills with such news the French Court, which is the more disposed to believe, from their enmity to the commonwealth. They are appointing an ambassador to go to the King, believing him in so hopeful a posture that he will soon be master of several seaports. Lord Gerard and other English prepare to go over, believing the war will be concluded by an easy and universal victory. Poor as the French Court is, they will strive hard to send the King munitions and money, unless he be suddenly suppressed. They are made to believe false news of Ireland; Lord Muskerry's defeat is transformed into a notable victory, followed by the raising the siege of Limerick. There is no news of Prince Rupert. 8. The information against Lieut.-Col. Johnson referred to the Committee for Examinations.

9. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider as to sending supplies to the train of artillery, as they understand their necessities, and the Ordnance officers to attend the Committee to-morrow by 7 a.m.

10. Lord Commissioner Whitelock, Col. Purefoy, and Mr. Love to be a committee to consider as so putting Windsor and Wallingford Castles into a tenable posture.

11. The Admiralty Committee to consider what is fit to be done for solemnizing the funeral of Col. Popham, and report.

12. The Admiralty Committee to give order for applying the State's ships in such manner as may best prevent the landing of forces from France, Flanders, or other foreign parts.

13. Council being informed that there were marching with the regiments of Col. Council of State to Col. Pyne and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for Somerset. Through the treachery of the townsmen, the Scots are possessed of Worcester, and bend their course westward. We hope, before this comes to you, that our forces will be united, and the Lord General at the head of them, and that they will omit no opportunities in their pursuit of the enemy, to attack and fight him, trusting through God's goodness they will call him to a good account. Meantime, for prevention of what may happen by the hasty march of the adversaries, who probably aim at Bristol, which is in no good condition of defence, we desire you forthwith, for the safety of your county, and conjunction with other forces for that purpose, to draw out all your horse and foot upon the military account, or such volunteers as you think fit to entertain, over whom you are to appoint captains and officers, and commissionate them as you see cause, and send to the Governor of Bristol such parties as you shall be informed, or he shall desire of you, for defence of that place, being, as you know, of so extraordinary consequence. We have had a very good account of your former care and diligence, and doubt not of its continuance in so needful a season. It will be very requisite for you to take notice of your former power touching securing malignants and suspected persons, and seizing horses, arms, and ammunition belonging to them.

With note of a letter to the Militia Commissioners for co. Wilts to the same effect. Also, Bristol being so near to your parts, it would be much to your prejudice if it came into the hands of the enemy. [I. 96, p. 417.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Bristol. We have received yours of the 23rd; use your best endeavours for the safety of Bristol. We, being sensible of the consequence of that city, have appointed ten companies of foot that were marching out of the West, and that came from Exeter on Wednesday last, to come to Bristol, and hope they are with you. We have also written to your Governor to call in assistance from the militia of Wilts and Somerset, and have written those Commissioners to send him such forces as he shall request. We have also written to the Major-Generals to have a care of that place, and to the Governor to take in such volunteers as are willing to serve in this exigency, and put them among his old companies; or if they shall be too many, to form them into new companies, and you are hereby authorised to give them commissions. We doubt not but you will be careful that there may be no want of money, or anything else necessary for your safety, there being now no time to make difficulties, when danger is towards the whole. Whitehall. Council of State to the Commanders-in-Chief of the forces of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Cambridge. We ordered you to march from Dunstable to Buckingham, but as the enemy is as far as Worcester, you must march with all speed to Oxford, and there attend orders. We suppose by this time the Lord General has come up to the army; therefore observe orders from him, Lambert, or Fleetwood. [I. 96, p. 419.]

Whitehall. Council of State to Major Foach. Having thought fit that the troop of horse under your command, formerly ordered to rendezvous with Fleetwood, should march up to this town, to be an addition to the guards of the Parliament and City, we have acquainted Fleetwood herewith, that he may not further expect you, and desire you to march up to town, and receive orders from Major Winthrop, who is appointed commander of the Parliament guards under Major-Gen. Skippon. [I. 96, p. 419.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the Lord General. We understand that you intended to be at Leicester last night, and were hastening up with great marches to the forces with the Major Generals. We are very sensible of these indefatigable pains, the greater in regard of your late indisposition. The Scotch army has also made very great marches, and is far advanced, but we hope, our forces being now nearly united, there will be a good end put to the business. We enclose a copy of a letter from Charles Stuart to the Lord Mayor, which came in one to Alderman Estwick, signed Thomas Day. The Lord Mayor sent it to us by the Sheriff of London, for us to acquaint the House therewith to-morrow. We have written of the condition of our affairs to the Major-Generals, who will give you an account thereof. [I. 96, p. 420.] quick marches of the enemy, and the advantages which he has met with, we look upon as adding reputation to him, and putting sufferings upon our friends where they come, and this obliges us all to our quickest resolutions and endeavours, for prevention of what further harm we may.

Our orders are gone for hastening the train towards you, and we suppose the messenger can inform you where it now is. You being all now met, and having the whole state of the business before you, we leave all to your appointment. We think the forces appointed to rendezvous at Dunstable, and so to Buckingham, should go to Oxford, as most convenient for them to receive your orders in. You will have cause to consider Major-Gen. Desborow, in relation to the West, now without a head to command the forces in those parts; we cannot but think the enemy has in his eye, for the speediest pursuit he can make, to attack both Bristol and Oxford, if he can reach them, which we hope he never will. We have written to the West, to stir them up for prevention of the enemy, and conjunction with our own forces which may draw that way. The grounds of your proceeding have given us good satisfaction, and we return you our hearty thanks for your unwearied care and pains in this great and weighty affair. [I. 96, p. 421.]

Council of State to Sir Wm. Constable, Governor of Gloucester. We have seen your letter, giving notice of the enemy having entered into Worcester; the few well affected there are likely to suffer by it. As for those who were so ready to invite and receive such guests, they will find enough of them by the time that they have done with them, and that the State has reckoned with them for it. We hope the forces that are retreated thence, and, as we hear, are now come to Gloucester, will be a good assistance to you. We wrote the Militia Commissioners of South Wales, Monmouth, Hereford, and Wilts, to rendezvous at Gloucester as to-morrow, by which time we expect that some of them will have come to you. However, with what force you have, we doubt not but you will do your utmost to keep that place, and hope you will be able to effect it. We have recommended the care thereof to the Major-Generals, who will be so close upon the enemy as that there will be a speedy and good issue to that business. The Lord General will by this time have come up to the forces with the Major-Generals, and will have a special eye to your preservation. [I. 96, p. 422.]

Council of State to Col. Scroope, Governor of Bristol. We received yours of the 23rd, but having previously had notice of the enemy bending his course that way, we gave order to Lieut.-Col. Clarke who was marching with 10 companies out of the West, to come with them to Bristol; and though we have sent Col. Clarke back to Plymouth, we ordered the 10 companies to Bristol; command them for the defence of the town, unless the Lord General, who we conceive is this night very near the Major-Generals, shall give them other orders. For further defence, call in any forces out of cos. Somerset and Wilts for your assistance; we have written them for that purpose.

The army being now near a conjunction, the Lord General being this night with the Major-Generals, there will be such a prosecution of the enemy as we hope they will not be able to endanger your city. We have written the Major-Generals to have a care of you; the ships in the Bristol river should fall down to King's Road, and ride there, out of danger of surprisal by the enemy, if they should march thither.

Although we conceive the city of Bristol will, in such an emergency, supply all money necessary for their own safety, yet that you might not be wholly unfurnished for incident charges, we authorise you to take up 500*l.*, which shall be paid at 10 or 12 days' sight. Receive any volunteers that shall be willing to come, and either add them to your own companies, as recruits or increase of your numbers, or if it be fit, form them into companies. Council of State to Timothy Middleton, Dionysius Wakering, and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for Essex. There are some ordnance and ammunition in the hands of private persons in your county, and in possession of the Earl of Warwick, which, if the enemy or any of his party should seize, might be made use of against the commonwealth, as has formerly been done. Take order that such guns and ammunition as shall be found towards the north side of the county be sent to Mersey Island, and kept there by the governor, and such as are in the parts near London be brought to the Tower, and kept until further order. Use expedition herein, lest the adversary should possess them before you can secure them. Sit daily, to be ready to look to the safety of the county, and more effectually to discharge your great trust; and take account, and supply the defects of others who do not perform theirs at such a time as this. 7. 8. To write the commander of the Charles at Bristol to stay in King's Road, to give his assistance for the safety of the shipping in those parts, until he receives further order.

9. To write the Governor of Carlisle to give an account whether the troops of that garrison, being 80, were beaten by 10 of the Scots' army, under the walls of that town.

10. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. Oxford, taking notice of their neglect that none except Mr. Jenkenson were present at the rendezvous when the enemy appeared, and to desire them to take care that the county may be speedily put into a posture of defence.

11. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. Wilts to take notice that, whereas there were formerly six troops of horse raised in that county, there are now but two, each of 60 horse; and that they had two regiments of foot to be raised, and now the enemy is in the nation, there is only one regiment; and to desire they will proceed with all expedition to raise the forces, both for their own defence and the assistance of their neighbours.

13. To write the officers of Col. Dove's regiment, thanking them for their forwardness to the service.

14. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. Somerset, taking notice of their readiness in the service, and approving of what has been done by them, and to desire them to have their forces ready for the defence of their county, and assistance of their neighbours.

15. To write the Militia Commissioners of Exeter that Council cannot dispense with the levying the money, but they must raise a fortnight's pay for the present, and expedite the raising of their forces.

17. Order to be given to the several militias of London, &c., to discharge the horses taken up for dragoons.

Council of State to the Lord Mayor of London. There is an intention to make a solemn funeral for Christopher Love, lately executed for high treason; James Winstanley his brother-in-law, is a principal person in it; he is to be carried from Merchant Tailors' Hall, one of the most public places of the city. We do not judge it fit that he who was such a notorious traitor while he lived, and died an ignominious death for the same, should have so solemn a burial. Command that Merchant Tailors' Hall be kept shut up, and send for Winstanley, and any others concerned therein, and command them to desist from any such enterprise, as they will answer the contrary at their peril; and give them charge that the body be privately buried, as one in his condition deserves. Council of State to Sir Wm. Constable. By a letter from the mayor, aldermen, &c. of that town (Gloucester), we have a good account of the unanimous resolutions of the people there to assist for defence of the place, and of its good condition, and doubt not you will make the best use of their affection and of their numbers, for its defence. Many who have willingly enlisted are poor men, and not able to bear their own charge; take up 200*l.*, and charge it upon us at 20 days' sight, and we will satisfy the bills, and with this money, pay those who cannot bear their own charge, and send us an account.

If the enemy march off from you, as we believe he will—for he cannot stay long there or anywhere else, our army following him as fast as they possibly can,—we desire you, with such horse and dragoons as you find most fit, and under such commanders as you judge best, to follow close upon their rear, and take the best opportunity of doing service against them, we finding them not difficult to be dealt with, by such as can come up to them. Council of State to the Mayor and Aldermen of Gloucester. Thanks for your good affection, and unanimous resolution to defend that place against the enemy, which we nothing doubt will be done, you being in so good a posture, both as to your numbers, fortifications, and resolutions; we conceive they will hardly attempt where they are like to meet with any resistance, they making this progress not out of their power, but for that our forces were cast far behind. We have sent the commissions desired, and as to the charge you have been at for the drawbridges, you may draw bills upon us for 200*l.*, payable at 20 days, sending up the account, and we will see

Whitehall.

Council of State to Lord Grey. We understand by yours from Spratton that you have marched up to the rendezvous with Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, with the troops of cos. Northampton, Leicester, and Rutland, and that they are 1,100 horse, which will be a considerable addition to the army. We are very sensible of your great pains, and look upon it as a very acceptable service. As for the pistols desired for some of your men, we have referred it to a committee of this Council to consider what may be done; all other things relating to them shall be considered with the rest of the forces which are drawn together upon this occasion. We doubt not but you will make bold with any arms or military provisions you find in the hands of any suspicious or disaffected persons, to furnish your recruits. [I. 96, p. 429.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Dorset. Thanks for putting our orders into execution. We doubt not you will still go on doing what is necessary for the service and preservation of the peace of the county. We enclose a new paper of instructions, wherein John Whiteway, of Dorchester, is added a commissioner, according to your desires.

P.S.—We desire you to have the whole of your forces ready for your own defence, and observe orders from the Lord General, in case the enemy, since possessing Worcester, shall bend his course towards your parts. [I. 96, p. 430.]

Aug. 25.

Council of State to Col. Heane. We ordered you to march to Oxford, and continue there with your forces, until you received orders from Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. As the enemy press that way, you are to stay in Oxford, and command those forces with you, or any other that shall come thither out of the country by our order, for the defence of that place, which it is probable the enemy have an eye upon, if they march this way. If you be called thence by the Lord General, Lambert, or Fleetwood, inform him of the state of the place, that it may be left in some posture of security. That you may be the better able to get intelligence, &c., take up 100*l.* there, and draw a bill of exchange upon us, payable at 10 days, and we will see it satisfied. We have written Capt. Draper of the command we have given you in that place for the present. [I. 96, p. 431.]

Council of State to Col. Heane. We now desire you, as the enemy seems to draw near those parts, to use your best means to gain intelligence of their motions and designs, and give us advice thereof daily, and oftener if need be, wherein you are to use your best care. [I. 96, p. 432.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of cos. Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durham, York, Notts, Derby, and Leicester. The Lord General being so far north in Scotland when the [Scotch] army began their march for England, and thereby cast far behind them, he has been forced to make extraordinary hard marches after them, that he might be able to come to a conjunction with the horse that he had dispatched before him with all diligence, and so put a good end to this business; by this means several, both of the horse and foot, are tired, and remain yet behind, by reason of sickness, or weakness, or some other wants, of which we ought to have a special and tender regard, in respect of the great service they have done, many of them during all this war, and all of them having suffered much inconvenience by the last winter's war in Scotland. We therefore specially recommended it to your care that such of the soldiers as shall be in your county, and have not been able, by reason of sickness, weakness, &c., to march on with the rest, may be taken notice of, and have all fit refreshment and accommodation for their recovery, and to enable them to march up to their several regiments; which being a thing both becoming all men towards any in distress, and also a special service to the commonwealth to preserve so many well-deserving soldiers, and to dispatch them to their employment, we doubt not but you will be very careful to put these directions in effectual execution. [I. 96, p. 433.]

Aug. 25.
Whitehall.

Council of State to Col. John Dove. We have received yours, and the remonstrance of your officers, and are well satisfied with your care and diligence, and the good affection manifested by you and your officers, and desire you to proceed to the raising of your regiment, and pursuing our former orders. We are sorry to see such negligence in your Commissioners, and do not understand why there should be such a miscarriage in them, but we have written them to consider our former letters, and to act as the present state of affairs requires. [I. 96, p. 434.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Bristol. If you think it necessary to require the Charles, which is entertained in the service of the State, and now in King's Road, to continue there some few days, for defence of the rest of the ships there, if the enemy shall come that way, she can do so. If there shall be any use of commissions for any forces raised or to be raised for your defence, we authorise the Governor of the place to give them to such persons as he shall judge fit. [I. 96, p. 434.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Cambridge. We see, by your letters of the 21st and 22nd inst., that your forces are not in that readiness that our orders and the exigency of the times require, and expect that you will forthwith raise a regiment of 1,000 foot, and a troop of 100 horse, which you may well raise in that county, according to the proportion appointed by the Act. You cannot impute the not raising them hitherto to want of power, Parliament having revived the former powers of the militia, which have been sent you; and if you will consult the Act, you need not expect further directions from us. As to the money in Col. Lowrey's hands, the Militia Commissioners have power to require an account from him, and to approve or disallow thereof. Call upon and receive from him all his balance. We refer you to the Acts of Parliament, and to our former orders, and desire you to use all expedition in putting them in execution, and certify us by September. [I. 96, p. 435.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Wilts. We doubt not of your having heard of the Scots having entered England, and of their being about Worcester; having written you to draw all your forces together to a rendezvous, to be ready to receive orders, we expected that you would have kept your forces together, but are informed that they are gone home, which we cannot conceive the reason for, now that the enemy is so near those parts. We again desire you that the utmost diligence may be used to bring your forces together, and dispose of them according to our former orders. They ought not to have been sent home without direction from hence. We hear that Malmsbury is easily defensible, and that 100 more than are in it already will be sufficient to keep it against any enemy; you are therefore to put so many into it as may keep it safe. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of London, Westminster, Southwark, and the Hamlets. There will be no present need for the horses taken up for dragoons. Restore them to the proprietors, and certify the charge, that order may be taken for payment. [I. 96, p. 436.]

Council of State to the Master of St. Cross' Hospital, near Winchester. We commend George Hawkins, who has lost his eyes in the service in Ireland, for the next brother's place that shall fall void, which being a work of so great charity, we doubt not of your readiness. [I. 96, p. 437.]

Aug. 25.

Council of State to the Governor of Bristol. We know not yet which way the enemy will march with his army; if he should come towards Bristol, and there should be need of any more forces for its defence, give commissions to such as you think fit to raise forces. For the safety of your county, keep two volunteer troops there, to prevent insurrections or disturbance, under Capt. Stone and Capt. Thorpe, and use all expedition in raising your foot regiment.

Since writing this, we have received letters from the Lord General, desiring that your forces should be hastened away. Cause them to march with all speed to Northampton, and certify us when they will be there, that they may receive further orders. If they receive directions meantime from the Lord General or Fleetwood, they are to follow them, notwithstanding these or any other from Council. [I. 96, p. 438.]

3. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. Oxford, thanking such as have been active in the public service, and taking notice of the backwardness of those who have not appeared.

4. To write the Militia Commissioners for co. Lincoln, that for the safety of the county, two volunteer troops of horse are to stay behind, and two troops of horse, and one of dragoons to march up to the army; and to quicken them in raising of their regiment of foot.

6. To write Lieut.-Gen. Monk to be very careful to prevent the making of any levies in Scotland.

7. Alderman Allein to report to the House Council's opinion that the records of Scotland, now taken in Stirling Castle, ought to be removed to the Tower, and there kept, as also to report the intelligence he has received.

8. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider how money may be speedily provided, for the pay of the army upon the establishment.

9. The Lord General to give a standing commission of martial law to such officers in cos. Lancaster, Chester, Salop, and North Wales as he shall think fit, to try such offenders as are appointed to be tried by martial law, by virtue of a late Act of Parliament. [I. 21, pp. 78-80.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Surrey. We find,—notwithstanding the present exigency of affairs, and the several letters we have written you, to have your forces ready at a rendezvous,—that they are not in that readiness they ought to be. If you consult the power you have by the Act, you will find there is no power wanting to enforce men to find men and arms, and those who have been so backward may be compelled to their duty. We desire that the regiment may be completed by Saturday next, and be at the rendezvous according to former order, unless you receive other order, and take care that such as are listed for this service may be such as have taken the engagement. Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. York. We approve your proceedings in raising your forces of horse and foot, and desire you to perfect the proportions with all expedition, and certify us when 'they shall be ready. As to their pay, when the month has expired for which pay is furnished by the county, care will be taken by Parliament to have them paid as others are, if they be continued. We enclose copies of a proclamation which you are to cause to be proclaimed. The Scotch army is about Worcester, or between that and Gloucester. Our army is near a conjunction, and also near the enemy, and we hope to have a speedy and good end of this business. [I. 96, p. 440.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Northampton. The Lord General, having made very good marches to come up to a junction with the rest of the forces, has thereby much worn out his draught horses, and needs a supply. Take up 100 good draught horses of which that country is well stored, and appoint two well affected men to price them, with a just indifference between the commonwealth and the proprietors, and give them a ticket of the price, and keep a list of the horses, and send up a duplicate thereof to us, and care shall be taken to pay for them; dispatch such horses to the Lord General with all possible expedition, this being a special service, which by no means bears delay. [I. 96, p. 441.]
- Aug. 27. Order in Parliament that the Council of State take care that intelligence be given from time to time to the militias in the respective counties, both touching the Parliament forces and the forces of the enemy, for preventing all false and malicious rumours, to the prejudice of the State.
That the Council of State make provision for Col. Mackworth, governor of Shrewsbury, for making up the works there according to his desire.
That a chain of gold, with a medal of the Parliament, value 100*l.*, be sent to Col. Mackworth, as a mark of the Parliament's favour and good acceptance of his fidelity, the Council of State to take care for providing and sending the same.
That all the records, with the regalia and insignia taken at Stirling Castle, Scotland, be brought to England, and placed in the Tower.
That the Council of State consider and give order for the safe bringing over of the said records, regalia, and insignia to the Tower, to be there placed in such fit place as the Master of the Rolls shall direct.

Council of State to Col. John Twisleton. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Kent. The Scotch having now entered England, there is no doubt their party will be very active everywhere to promote their cause; and by the confession of the prisoners, they have some hopes from your county. We therefore desire you, for better prevention of what assistance they may have from thence, to sit daily, and use all diligence that any of their emissaries going up and down to contrive their affairs, or any other of their party may be apprehended and secured, and be very diligent to prevent the effects of their designs, and take care to put in execution our former orders, tending so much to secure the peace. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for cos. Warwick, Salop, Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford. We do not doubt of your good affection, which you have constantly manifested, and your own right judgment of your present interest will put you on to your utmost contribution of your best assistance for the destruction of the enemy now amongst you,—desperate of all other ways to subsist longer in his own country, and come hither because he had nowhere else to be,—and therefore you will be ready to supply whatever wants our army may be in, which now, by the extraordinary marches and great diligence of the Lord General, is come into those parts, and may need more than ordinary supplies. Let all necessary provisions for his army be sent in to him, as you receive directions from him. We shall take all care that money may be sent them, that they may be enabled to pay for what they have, but if that should any way be hindered, let it be no hindrance of anything that might promote and finish the work. Sit daily, and keep a constant correspondence with the Lord General, so that you may the better receive his directions, and give your assistance.

With note that in the letter to co. Worcester, was added this clause, "And thereby show how little you approve of what your revolting city hath done." Also in that to Hereford, a clause approving what they have done touching their own forces. [I. 96, p. 445.]

Aug. 27.

Council of State to all the Militia Commissioners. The Scotch army, finding themselves not able to continue in their own country, which they were no longer able to defend, were forced by necessity to come to England, to try if they could find a party here to uphold them, as they could not stand by their own strength; and though they have advanced far into England, while our army was marched northwards in Scotland, yet they find themselves deceived in that one only ground that gave them hope their enterprise might possibly be successful, viz., the coming in of a party here into them, which the people of this nation, out of the respect both of their duty and interest, have forborne to do; so that after all this long march, they have met with very few that come in, except such whose other crimes seek shelter there, by the addition of that one more.

And as, by the extraordinary diligence of the Lord General and the rest of the officers of that army from which they fled, that army has again overtaken them, and the countries, instead of assisting them everywhere with great alacrity and cheerfulness, flow together against them, they have recourse to their last strength, which is to make lies their refuge, and by their emissaries and party abroad, to boast great things of their numbers, and the assistance and successes they have met with, that thereby they might gain those through fear who are otherwise convinced of their duty, and discourage endeavours which may seem successful. For prevention of which,—although we doubt not a few days will put an end to that business, the enemy being yet in Worcester, and not able to prosecute any design, and our army being now come to a conjunction, and able to divide and attack the enemy on both sides of the Severn,—we recommend you to use special diligence that all spreaders of false news and rumours of the advance and advantages of the Scotch army, or those who divulge or receive and keep any letters, declarations, or papers from that army, or from Charles Stuart, the Commander-in-Chief thereof, or from any of their partisans, may be apprehended and secured, in order to punishment; and that you certify us of all such as you shall apprehend, with the examinations taken, that you may receive further orders. improve the opportunity of the Scotch army being in England, by landing a foreign force upon the coasts of Kent and Sussex, to create troubles in these parts, and divert our army from a close pursuit of the enemy; for prevention of which, such troops or forces as are appointed for preservation of the peace of those counties should be applied. We hold it necessary that Col. Blundell should be returned hither, to be made use of in those parts, and that his own troop should march up with him, and we desire you to give orders accordingly.

We have again ordered the two troops under Col. Kendrick to advance towards you, having had occasion to stay him in this town for some days, and he will be speedily with you. Send us word what number of forces are come up to you, and from what places, and whether horse, foot, or dragoons, and what you hear are upon the way, and where they are. [I. 96, p. 441.]

Council of State to Capt. Badiley. The Scotch army having now come into England, all endeavours will be used to give them assistance from foreign parts, and that we may have timely notice of it, send some ketches to the coast of Flanders and France, to observe what store of shipping is in any of those parts, that may serve for transportation of forces, if any be prepared there for that purpose. Use all diligence both in sending them out, and informing us of the discovery they make.

We have appointed several ships to come into the Downs, and receive orders from you, in the absence of General Blake. When these ships come to you, make the best use of them for preventing the landing of any forces, if there be any such design. You will speedily receive further orders from us. [I. 96, p. 449.]

Council of State to General Blake. Council of State to Major Foach. We ordered you to march up to London, with your troop for strengthening the guards of the Parliament and city, since which, upon information received, we think you should remain in the quarters in which you were before our last order to you, in [Kent], and have a special care to prevent any trouble or insurrection in those parts by enemies to the peace, by hindering their meetings, and passing up and down the country, and stopping all persons who are suspicious, and cannot give a good account of their occasions. Council of State to the Lord General. We have received your letters, and had, before the receipt of the last desiring 2,000 men to be sent to Scotland, written Sir Arthur Hesilrigge to send 1,200 men out of the four northern counties, and also sent commissions for a regiment for Col. Bright; and we are certified from the commissioners there that that regiment, and another under Col. Lassells, are raised; what other proceedings there have been in that county the enclosed account will show. We have given direction for a magazine to be furnished at Wallingford, in order to your supplies; the particulars now there, and what else is appointed to be sent thither, you shall have by our next. We have also written to the counties in those parts to furnish provisions as you desire.

Great disservice is done in this conjuncture, in strengthening the hands of the enemies' party, and weakening the well affected, by the usual stratagem of that party, who have made lies their refuge,—and which we doubt not but the just vengeance of the God of truth will speedily sweep away,—by raising and spreading false reports of their progress and advance, and of their numbers and power, and great accessions of force. We have written to all the counties to take care for the apprehension and securing of all such emissaries, or any deluded by them, in order to their further punishment, or at least prevention of any effect by that practice.

We send copies of an Act of Parliament passed the 12th instant, and recommend it to you to proceed thereupon against Capt. Young of Worcestershire, for an example and terror to others, and also against such others as you shall find cause; the punishment of a few in this manner, who have justly deserved it, will, in the terror of it, reach to many, and restrain their actions at least, whatever their good will may be.

We also desire you to grant a standing commission of martial law to such officers of Lancashire, Cheshire, Salop, and North Wales as you think fit, that they may try such offenders as are by that Act subject to such trial, which will very much conduce to the safety and quiet of those parts; and if you hold it convenient, let the place for such trial be Chester. We have written the Commissioners of co. Northampton to prepare 100 draught horses forthwith, and dispatch them to you. We send you copies of Col. Mackworth's letter and papers; Simkys mentioned in them we hold fit to lead the way, and be the first tried by your commission at Chester. We also send you a parcel of proclamations lately passed, which we know you will cause to be used according to the direction of them. [I. 96, pp. 451-2.]

[Aug. 27.] 32. Petition of Rich. Cox, commander, Wm. Mickleborough, master, Rich. Prosser, gunner, and Jno. Blake, boatswain of the Martin Prize, to the Admiralty Committee, for a hearing of their business, being too long for a petition, and upon clearing the matter, for restoration to their several employments, with their clothes, wages, &c. Petitioners formerly belonged to the Tiger frigate, commanded by Capt. Peacock, but on the capture of the Martin by the Tiger, they were transferred to her, and commanded to deliver out the best part of her cargo, being 23 bales of silk, into the Tiger, and other parts of her lading into the Triumph. In receiving the silk from the Tiger, on board the Rear-Admiral Capt. Hall, five bales were missing, whereupon Capt. Peacock most wrongfully charged petitioners with the same, dismissed them, and sent them as prisoners on board the Rear-Admiral, from which they could not be discharged without a trial by a Council of War, which, by reason of the separation of the fleet, could not be obtained at sea. Having now returned, they doubt not of obtaining relief, and that speedily, if upon examination their innocence be established. [1 page.]

2. The Ordnance Committee to take care that 400 barrels of powder may be immediately sent to Wallingford Castle.

3. To write the justices of peace of those counties where neglects have been in furnishing teams to the train of artillery.

4. The Ordnance Committee to provide 5,000 shovels, spades, pickaxes, and 30 tons of match, to be sent to Gloucester by way of Wallingford Castle, according to the desire of the Lord General.

5. The letter of Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood to be reported to the House.

6. To write the Governor of Oxford that Council have thought fit, for the safety of Oxford, to appoint Col. Heane with his forces to take care of that place, and have appointed other forces to come up to him; but since that, he being marched to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood, the forces appointed to come to him are to follow him, which the governor is desired to signify to them, as they come to that place.

8. To report to the House that many of the militia forces are now marched forth for the service; that the Militia Act seems to give power for only one month's pay; that those forces may be necessitated to continue out for a larger time, and much of that time is already spent; that some course should therefore be presently taken for a further supply for them, that they be not necessitated to free quarter, or suffer inconvenience for want thereof.

9. The Lord General to supply officers to such of the forces of the militia or volunteers as he shall find, upon their coming up to service, shall want officers, and notice hereof to be given to the Lord General and Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood.

11. Order on the petition of Mr. Carter, surveyor, offered to Council by the Committee of Whitehall, that 600*l.* be charged upon the Revenue Committee for the work mentioned in the said petition.

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Sussex. For the better safety of your county, in the absence of those forces that are to be drawn out, and for preventing any insurrection or other designs of the enemy there, Capt. Stapeley's troop should be made up to 100, and be employed in the east part, and the regiment of foot be made up to 1,000, and march according to former order. We have sent a commission to Major Young to be major of that regiment. [I. 96, p. 452.]

Council of State to the Lord General. As many places of command among the militia forces may fall void, that there may be no want of commanders, or necessity for sending to us for commissions, we desire you to give commissions to such as you judge fit.

We have used our utmost diligence to bring together what forces we could, as holding it our duty to serve Providence in the use of means, and not tempt it. Having done that, we rest not upon an arm of flesh, as you well advise, but upon Him to whom it is equal to save by many or by few, even upon our God, who being engaged in this great cause, the contrivement of His infinite wisdom, He will bring it to that good end He has appointed in His own good time, for He will work, and who shall let it? and use such instruments as He pleases, for so much of His work and for so long as seems good to His wisdom. To the designs whereof we desire to be subservient in all things, without respect to ourselves or our own concernments, as our duty to God and our country binds us. [I. 96, p. 453.]

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. We have used all diligence that the train may come up to you in time, and doubt not it will be with you before this. As to the forces ordered to Oxford, we only ordered those counties that did not go out of their way by going thither, and they are also wholly left to your orders, notwithstanding any from us; you may rest assured that no orders will be given here but shall be subject to yours. We have left it to the Lord General to put in such persons as he shall think fit, to any void places of command. [I. 96, p. 454.]

We have recommended the forces that are at Gloucester, and are upon and for those of the militia, care shall be taken of them in the same manner as others in the service. [I. 96, p. 454.]

is past of the levies there for Charles Stuart, yet conceiving the enemy,—finding our army conjoined, and deceived in his hopes of the accession of numbers to his party,—will use his utmost endeavours to slip back again to Scotland, if he is able to avoid engaging with the Lord General, we desire you to hasten all the forces you have ready to Lancashire, to join with the rest there, and to be disposed of as the Lord General shall direct, to intercept any slip back, and to endeavour the utter extirpation of this invading army. Council of State to Sir Arthur Hesilrigge. We have not heard how far the raising 1,200 foot in the four northern counties for Lieut.-Gen. Monk is advanced. We are again desired by the Lord General to hasten it, as a thing exceedingly necessary, and therefore desire you to lose no time, and to signify by the next how far you are advanced.

As there is reason to apprehend that the Scotch army,—finding a conjunction of our forces, and being deceived of his hope of the accession of any considerable party,—will endeavour to avoid an engagement, and to slip back to Scotland, we desire you, with all the forces those northern counties can afford, to be ready in the fittest places of Westmoreland or Cumberland, to fall upon them or any part of them at their coming back, and utterly extirpate and destroy them; which we hope will, by your and other hands, be so effectually done as we shall not hereafter be much troubled with like swarms of locusts; meantime hasten the dispatch of the 1,200 men. Council of State to the Mayor, Governor, Aldermen and Common Council, and Militia Commissioners of Bristol. We hear, both by your letters and those of others, of the readiness in you, the people, and forces of your city, to be active in this exigency for preservation of your city against the enemy. Considering the importance of the place, we had given orders for such forces as could to march towards you, and your appearance in great readiness to defend yourselves no doubt discouraged the enemy to press any further that way to attempt you. He would hardly have undertaken this desperate action, had not his hopes of a party here been greater than his confidence in the forces he brought with him, which hopes he now finds deceived, God having been pleased to give the people generally everywhere a right judgment both of their interest and duty, they flying from the enemy, and cheerfully obeying the commands of Parliament for their own preservation. We are very much satisfied with the good affection there shown. Signify to all our sense of it; we shall remember it for your advantage on occasion. [I. 96, p. 462.]

Let the two regiments of foot of your county be made ready and march to the same rendezvous, or to such other as the Lord General shall appoint. They coming seasonably thither may be of great use to join with other forces, to meet any part of the Scotch army that may perhaps endeavour rather to get back to Scotland than come to an engagement with the enemy, if they can avoid it; use all diligence to get the foot in readiness. Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. On occasion of the marching out of the artillery train designed to the army under your command, we appointed 500 of Col. Those 500 men may be very useful for recruiting some of the companies of the Lord General's foot, and we leave it to his lordship to dispose of them for that purpose as he shall think fit. As Col. Berkstead is to complete his regiment to their former number, he will stand in need of the officers who commanded those 500 men; let them be forthwith dismissed, and ordered to return to London. Council of State to Col. Geo. Joyce. As for the money for the soldiers of Poole, who are in danger to be in some disorder for want thereof, the warrants have been ready at the Army Committee a long while, and may be had if called for. As to the victuals, although we do not much fear the enemy coming that way, or any one now rising in his favour, yet if there be cause to victual the garrisons, pay being constantly issued, it will not be difficult for the governors and officers of garrisons to provide their own victuals, nor will there need any order from us. We approve your securing the persons you mention, and care will be taken to seek after the rest of them here. Council of State to Major Salway and Mr. Scott. Thanks for your care in the business committed to you, and as to your staying or returning, act according to former instructions. We have written several letters this week to Sir Arth. Parliament have ordered 500*l.* to Col. Lilburne, and 200*l.* land a year of inheritance, out of the new delinquents' estates of Lancashire, (upon which 1,000*l.* formerly ordered to him by Parliament is to be deducted,) in consideration of his faithful services, and 100*l.* to the lieutenant, his messenger. They have appointed that to-morrow public thanks be given in all churches and chapels within the late lines, for that signal mercy of defeating the Earl of Derby and his accomplices in Lancashire, and for the rendition of Stirling Castle, and breaking the Scotch levies,—mercies which we desire may be had in ever thankful remembrance. The Lord General is now with his united body near the enemy, and endeavouring to engage him; not knowing which way the enemy may fly, and where the Lord General shall have occasion to use forces, you are to keep your forces in readiness to execute his orders; for although the enemy, being now on the west of the Severn, is not likely to come near your parts, yet there may be occasion to make use of your forces for securing passes or otherwise, while he shall march with his army to engage them. We hope this may prove the last endeavour of the enemy, and therefore doubt not but you will put forth your utmost to bring it to a good issue.

Your militia forces being directed to be at a rendezvous, your county will be in good quietness, and no great danger of insurrection; yet as Plymouth is a very considerable place, and of much concernment, some special care should be had thereof; and in respect of your nearness to that place, and your power in those parts, while you continue there, have an eye towards it, and if you find any danger, prevent it by the militia forces of the county or otherwise, and signify the same to us. Council of State to General Monk. We hear out of Scotland that since their King's flight into England, there are endeavours to make new levies, which they pretend to be against their King, and his malignants and Popish party. We have had sufficient experience of their pretences, and of what this commonwealth can expect from the best of them, and therefore recommend it to your special care, with the force that is with you, to prevent and break their levies; whatsoever they pretend, or whosever they are that make those pretences, you may be sure to feel their force, if they can get up so many as they dare attempt you. As for raising them against their King, we trust, through the mercy of God, we shall render that needless. They are indeed come far into the country, by reason the Lord General was so far north with the main of his army; yet now that the Lord General has come up with his foot and train to the horse,—he coming to Warwick on Sunday night last, and intending to march this day against the enemy,—we hope there will be a speedy end of that business, and then we shall not be long in finishing that of Scotland.

Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood has his quarters at Banbury, where he is to have an army of the country forces, with some old regiments which will all be with him within a day or two. Yesterday the forces of London, Westminster, Southwark, and the Hamlets drew out into Finsbury Fields; they were 12 regiments of foot, and 1,500 horse; the foot were thought to be 14,000, and all showed great alacrity for the service. Council of State to the Lord General. Cotterell, an arch traitor and offender, who brought over the Earl of Derby, now in Lancashire, is taken, and several other prisoners with him, and sent to York Castle. We desire you to grant a standing commission for martial law to such officers in Yorkshire as you judge fit, that they may proceed to trial of those prisoners, and such others as, by the Act of the 12th instant, are subjected to trial by court-martial or council of war. If you have not a more convenient way to despatch it thither, if you send it to Council, we will take care to send it, and give them directions to proceed thereupon. [I. 96, p. 472.]

- Crofts, the King of Scotland's orator, pursues our nation here with all the machination and violence he can. The King of Poland's fiscal in Prussia has shown me a citation from the King, and by his insinuation, our whole nation residing in these parts are cited to appear before the King's judiciary 14 days thereafter; I enclose copies thereof, to be presented to the Council of State. We have made these proceedings known to the senate of this city, who have renewed their promise of protection, with the addition that they will order their commissioners who are going to meet the King at Marienburg, if it be possible to take off the business; but if it does not take effect, I do not see what will do it, unless the Council of State publish a point blank declaration to the King of Poland's late bloody and unjust decree, against all the subjects under his dominion; if this will not help, then a small remotion of trade and residence out of the Polish territories must be our last refuge, which being done and seconded by our State, although at the first difficult to us, and without any notable advantage, yet will be utterly damnable to Poland and this city; and if there were but a motion of this remotion, I doubt not but it would strike a sad impression into their minds, and happily work in better thoughts. When the engagement is effected, you will hear more at large from the Committee. [$1\frac{1}{2}$ page.] Enclosing Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. We find by yours that Council is mistaken in writing for Col. Blundell's return hither, and concerning the intelligence from France. We did not imagine the enemy should now be able to come up to London, the army being in the numbers and posture they are; but upon the intelligence we received of the preparations abroad to bring in forces to those parts, we thought it fit to give you intimation of it; and as we had none here so fit, in case of such invasion, to command the forces here, we desired Col. Blundell back.

We suppose the men under Col. Clarke are now with you. There is no need of further order from us for the two days' victuals spent by Col. Cobbett's regiment while on board, when they were to have been sent to sea, and we are content that it shall not be defalked upon their pay, though we could have wished you had not engaged for it, that it may not be brought into precedent. Gualter Frost to Col. Fitch, Governor of Carlisle. The Council of State find, by yours from Carlisle, that you had not heard of what had been done by Col. Okey and others, in suppressing the levies in the west of Scotland, which they are informed from him was thoroughly done, so they trust those you speak of were in the number, for they were persons sent back from their King. They will signify to Lieut.-Gen. Monk what you write, though they conceive you have done it already.

I suppose you have received the good news of the defeat of the Earl of Derby, in a most seasonable hour, when he was beginning to grow great, and would in a short time have grown to a great number in that county [Lancashire]. He hardly escaped, being wounded, and many of the principal men were slain, or taken prisoners. The enemy is now in Worcester, and the Lord General with his army before it; and besides the forces of the standing army, there are great numbers marched from the several counties, both of horse and foot, with the greatest alacrity imaginable. All places showed great readiness to oppose him, and none rose for him but those in Lancashire, before the defeat of Derby, and those of the town of Worcester, who are like to pay dear for their treason. I hope to hear a speedy account of that business. London had a rendezvous last week, where were 14,000 horse and foot in the field, at a very short warning. This day they have another rendezvous at their own desire, and it is thought there will be many more. Sir Arthur Hesilrigge has been requested to raise what forces he can in the four

Also 2,382 bags of coarse saltpetre, each bag containing $1\frac{1}{4}$ cwt. of different sorts, and one not worth anything, but how many are in a like condition cannot be discovered until all are open, which will require many days' labour; the rest may be made serviceable with one-third less for waste. Before the receipt of your letter, we had written to the Lord General to send you a standing commission for a court-martial, whereby you may proceed against those prisoners and other traitors, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament of the 12th inst. There should be exemplary proceedings against them, that when the punishment reaches to some, the terror may reach to many, to deter them from the like treasons. These proceedings should reach to all officers, and to every tenth soldier. Those private soldiers not so proceeded against should be sent to the Lord Deputy in Ireland, and there distributed among the several regiments. We have referred the manner of sending them away to the Irish and Scotch Committee, with whom you are to correspond. Make strict examination of Mr. Herle, of Winwick, Mr. Harper, of Bolton, Mr. Johnson, of Halshall, Mr. Gee, of Eccleston, and Mr. Latham, of Standish, or any other ministers or persons against whom you have received information of their being assistant to or corresponding with the enemy, and return their examinations, or any others taken concerning them to us, that you may receive further direction. Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Monk. Deliver to the said commander all the brass guns in Stirling Castle, if you can spare them; if not, furnish yourself with the iron guns lately taken from Fife and other towns; and if they shall not be sufficient, certify us, that others may be sent from hence, and the said brass pieces returned in their stead. [Gualter Frost] to Major Bourne, Commander of the Speaker. Parliament have resolved that all records, with the regalia and insignia taken in Stirling Castle upon the rendition thereof to Lieut.-Gen. The Council of State have written him to cause them all to be put on board the Speaker under your command, or such other ship or frigate as the commander-in-chief on the coast of Scotland shall appoint. They desire you, if your victuals are nearly expended, or your ship not in a condition to stay long upon that coast, to receive the said records, regalia, and insignia, which shall be delivered you by Lieut.-Gen. Within a few days he will be necessitated to fight or fly; if his horse should break away, and any part thereof come to the Isle of Ely, they might stir and join with such disaffected persons as are now there, at their draining work, and bring trouble thereby to those parts. Look well to the entrance into that isle. There is one Hemond, a Kentish man, now in the Isle, who was a principal and active man in the last Kentish rebellion, and a dangerous person; seize and secure him until further order. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. York. We wrote you to raise your forces with all diligence, and we have a fair account of your progress. We directed you to march into Lancashire, to join with the forces of Col. Lilburne. That county is now in reasonable good condition; the seasonable mercy of God, in destroying those beginnings under the Earl of Derby, has partly opened their eyes to see their proper concernments, and taken away the fear that was upon them from that party. The force there already will, we hope, secure that place from further trouble within itself.

The main work we have now in hand is to destroy their army about Worcester, which our army waits to do; a few days will put them to a necessity either to fight or fly, and the latter is the most likely. The army will use all possible care to prevent it, and therefore have ordered forces with the greatest advantage they can; yet because none know which way the Scots will take, when they have entered upon that course, there will be need of many forces in several places. If this work be thoroughly and effectually done, it will very much contribute to a firm and settled peace for the future, and all that rightly consider it will do their utmost to promote it, as probably this work will not be drawn out into length, but will come to a speedy issue. We desire you, with all expedition, to cause your two regiments of foot to march, and what horse and dragoons you have, to Col. Lilburne, whom the Lord General has ordered to the parts about Shrewsbury; and upon your first march, signify the same to the Lord General, that you may receive his orders. Use all possible expedition herein, as desired by the Lord General's letters. [I. 96, p. 485.]

Council of State to Sir Arthur Hesilrigge. In all letters from the Lord General, we are put in mind of expediting recruits to Lieut.-Gen. Monk, and again desire you to use all possible diligence in sending away those 1,200 men. In respect of their nearness it cannot be long before they may be there; and for the same reason, if they be employed on this side the Frith, some among them may endeavour to return home again. Let a very perfect and strict account be kept of their names, and the places from which they go, and cause enquiries to be made if any return without leave, that they may be proceeded against according to law; let this be intimated to them when they are upon their march, that they may not run into danger through ignorance.

Col. Fitch has notice of levies being made in the west of Scotland by the enemy, and the forces with him are not sufficient to hinder their coming in. Let what forces may be raised and spared out of the garrisons with safety be employed to break these levies. We conceive they will hardly press on to their King, being in the condition he now is, and therefore the greatest mischief of them is like to fall on those northern parts, the safety whereof is in an especial manner recommended to your care; keep up a correspondence with Lieut.-Gen. Monk, for better carrying on of this work. [I. 96, p. 486.]

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Monk. Thanks for your great diligence and activity in carrying on that work committed to you by the Lord General, when he marched out of Scotland, and for the good success God has been pleased to give you, and the forces under your command, both in the reducing of Stirling Castle, and dissipating the levies begun in the west, and your other progress towards the north; we doubt not but you are carefully vigilant that they do not attempt it again. We hear by Col. Fitch, Governor of Carlisle, of some numbers levied and ready about Dumfries, but we know you will do your best to suppress them; they are said to be to follow their King, to whom we conceive they will hardly come, but will meet with the same entertainment the forces under the Earl of Derby did, which were wholly broken by Col. Lilburne's regiment, and three foot companies with him.

The Scottish King's army, with their King, is now in Worcester. The Lord General with his army on this side of the river, and Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood with another army on the other side of the river, ready to march from Upton (which bridge we have) towards the enemy. The counties in general have come in with very great cheerfulness and alacrity, and in great numbers, so that the affairs of the commonwealth here are in good condition, both as to the the number of men, and their readiness and affection to the work in hand, and we hope to have a very good issue of it speedily. We conceive two or three days will put them upon some desperate attempt, either to fight or fly, we rather think the latter, and therefore all the care that may be is used to lay forces upon all passages to intercept them. We give you this intimation, that you may be in the best readiness you can to entertain any of their stragglers that may perhaps reach home. We have written twice to Sir Arthur Hesilrigge to hasten your 1,200 recruits, which will perhaps be best bestowed in your garrisons beyond the Frith, to prevent their return home; we wrote him again this day to hasten it.

Being informed that they intend to hold a general assembly, and that they now exercise Kirk jurisdiction, we recommend it to your care to inhibit them, and hinder the keeping of that assembly, or the exercise of any jurisdiction whatever, either civil or ecclesiastical, on this side the Friths of Edinburgh, or Dumbarton, or any other place in your quarters, or in your power, by pretence or colour of any authority whatsoever that is not derived from the commonwealth of England, as being that which we conceive will be very prejudicial to the work thus far carried on, and derogatory to the commonwealth's interest there. Those meetings, whatever specious pretences soever they put upon them, will be but opportunities to form their cabals, and ripen their conspiracies against this commonwealth.

Many there, when they see their affairs wholly desperate as to force, will fall into their old way of fawning and dissembling, professing friendship and good affection, and declaring again against their King and his malignant party. You know them so well that we need not to caution you against such addresses; to prevent it, seize any of their grandees and active men who come into your quarters, or any way into your power, and secure them until further order, and if they come in any hostile way, treat them accordingly. Their ministers you may suffer to preach, so long as they keep within the bounds of their proper function, in preaching the Gospel of Christ; but if they meddle with matters of State, or the power of their jurisdiction, command them out of all places within your power, and if they do not obey, secure them. Whitehall. Council of State to Major Robt. Pelham, of Dorsetshire. Lady Banister has appeared before Council, according to her bond, and upon examination, we have dismissed her on bond; her three servants now under restraint are also to be bailed, taking the engagement, and entering into recognizance, themselves in 200*l.* each, with two sureties in 100*l.* each, that for six months to come, they shall appear at Council when summoned, and act nothing prejudicial to the government; this being done, set them at liberty, and certify the recognizances to Council. Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of North Wales. Col. Twisleton has raised nearly a troop of horse to be ready upon all occasions; give him encouragement for completing his troop, by such power as you have under the Militia Acts, so that they may be ready to serve as they receive orders; and when they have public employment, care shall be taken of them, as of other forces so employed. [I. 96, p. 489.]
- Sept. 2.
Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of Norfolk and Suffolk. While the Scotch army are yet in England, we doubt not but all means will be used by the enemies of the commonwealth to increase disturbances, by making diversions. They have always had an eye upon Lovingland, as a place that would much promote their designs if they should get it into possession; and we hear from abroad that there are designs to land some there; for prevention thereof, a regiment of foot from Norfolk and Suffolk should be put into Lovingland for 14 days, or as they shall have further order, and these forces be proportioned between the said counties, as agreed upon between Col. Wauton and Col. Jermy, to whom we have written for that purpose, and to appoint some fit person to command them while there. With note of like letter to Col. Jermy. Also of a clause in the Suffolk letter, to send a troop of horse to Lovingland, and have an eye to Landguard Fort, as a place of great concern. [I. 96, p. 490.]
- Sept. 3. COUNCIL OF STATE. Day's Proceedings.
1. Mary Cornelius to make good what is suggested in her petition concerning Rich. Downes upon oath, and a warrant to be then issued to bring Downes before Council, to answer the matter complained of.
 2. Order on the petition of Mr. Herrick, that he sign the same, and it be then referred to the Committee of Examinations.
 3. The committee appointed to inquire into false coin and clipped money to consider of some remedy for abuses in that matter, and propound them to Council.
 4. Lord Commissioner Whitelock to report to the House the letters of intelligence sent to Council.
 5. The letter of Capt. Lionel Lane, from the Victory in the Downs, referred to the Admiralty Committee.
 6. The Committee of Examinations to report to Council the cases of Cavenaugh, Frodsham, and Laurence Low.

7. Mr. Frost to give Lady Banister a certificate of her appearance at Council, according to her recognizances taken in co. Dorset by Major Robert Pelham.

8. Thomas Lord Windsor to have liberty to remain in this town for one month, to follow some occasions of his own.

9. Thanks to be returned to the sick and maimed soldiers living about town, for their free offer to be a guard to Parliament, and that, through the goodness of God, the state of affairs is such that they have no need of any other guards than what are already appointed.

10. The petition of Andreas Hoyer of Tunderne, in the dominions of the Duke of Holstein, left to the Admiralty Judges, to proceed according to justice, any order or declaration of Council in that case notwithstanding.

11. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider instructions to be sent to the several counties, in pursuance of the late Act for enabling the Commissioners in the several counties to raise money.

12. Also to consider specially the case of Cheshire, when they prepare their instructions to the several counties for raising their proportion of the 90,000*l.*

13. The Council have read and considered the paper of Commissioner Schaeph, and return for answer that Parliament did him such respects, at his first coming, as were suitable to the affection they bear the States of Holland, and the esteem they have of his person, and that his residence here been to their contentment. Now that he signifies his return, they wish him a good journey and safe arrival, and have sent him a passport.

As for the action laid upon the captain and ship, that concerns a private man, and Council cannot take off that action, for it is a common right to all Englishmen; but to show their respect to him, they will write the Admiralty Judges who are to consider of the business, if the ship be not liable to arrest by Marston, immediately to release her; but if they find her liable to such arrest, Council, to manifest their respect to the Commissioner, will appoint a ship of the Parliament to transport him to Holland, if he thinks fit.

Concerning the business of the merchants of the Intercourse, Council is of opinion that it concerns the United provinces in general, and the Commissioner being addressed to Parliament only from the provinces of Holland, Parliament have not empowered Council to treat with him about any business but such as concerns the provincial states of Holland, and not such as concerns the provinces in general.

14. The Admiralty Committee to consider of the ships mentioned in Col. Harvey's letter, and report.

15. The Admiralty judges to consider of the arrest laid upon the ship sent from Holland for carrying Commissioner Schaeph over thither, and if they find that an arrest cannot lie upon the said ship in the case wherein it is now laid, they are to discharge her with speed.

18. Sir Edw. Sydenham to be discharged from further attendance upon Council.

19. The petition of John Ingledeu, sen. and jun., referred to the Militia Commissioners for co. York, and if the matter of the petition be as is suggested, they are to take bail of them; or if their offence was to have gone beyond the limits of the Act for confinement, their imprisonment seems a sufficient punishment.

20. The Irish and Scotch Committee to consider to what place the two companies of foot lately taken out of Oxford citadel may be disposed, and report.

21. The arms taken from Sir Edw. Sydenham, upon the search lately made in his house, as also his sword, to be restored to him, and the officer who was appointed to this work to take notice of this order, and to see it performed.

22. The petition of Geo. Price, merchant, referred to the Admiralty Committee.

23. Council to consider as to the security of Hull to-morrow.

27. Mr. Attorney, Sir Hen. Mildmay, Col. Purefoy, and Col. Fielder to consider where the 600*l.* may be had for the Surveyor General, for carrying on the works of the public houses.

28. Mr. Whitcombe to have liberty to transport 500 quarters of wheat to the Canaries.

29. Rich. Bradbury to be dismissed from his attendance on Council, he being bound in 400*l.* with two sureties, each in 200*l.*, upon the usual conditions. [I. 22, pp. 15-21.]

Council of State to Mr. Scott and Mr. Salwey. We have received your good account of affairs there; while you remain, continue it, but we leave it to you to return hither, to give us fuller information, unless you find it necessary for the service to remain some time longer. If you meet with this before you leave the army, cause an estimate to be made of the number of men that have come up from the several counties, that we may give directions for their pay, and desire the Lord General to order a muster of them as speedily as possible.

There was another rendezvous yesterday of the city forces, when 12,000 foot and 1,200 horse appeared, at which time the declaration of Charles Stuart was burnt by the common hangman, in the name of the enclosed order, which we send you, with the late Act touching the militia. [I. 96, p. 491.]

Heane to march thither; and, having appointed several other forces to rendezvous there, in regard of his good experience, we gave him command of all those forces, for better defence of that place, if the enemy should have attempted it; but that danger being over, and Col. Heane called thence, we desire you to take upon yourself the government of that place until further order.

As there has been great readiness in the University to appear for the service of the commonwealth, and many scholars have listed and gone upon duty in the service, represent to them that Council has been very sensible of their good affections, and return them thanks in our names. Council of State to the Admiralty Judges. We are informed, by a paper from Lord Commissioner Schaeph, that there is an arrest laid upon the Waterhound of Amsterdam, by John Marston, merchant, which ship Schaeph alleged belonged to the Admiralty of Amsterdam, and in it he was to take his passage thither, and has therefore desired that the said ship might be released. Now because the arrest is laid upon the ship at the suit of a particular person, we desire you forthwith to consider that business, and do speedy justice. Council of State to Lieut.-Col. Salmon. The Lord General having issued a commission to you of martial law, for trial of such as have offended against the Act of the 12th ult., we enclose copies of such Act, as also the commission. There was one Cotterel and his fellows taken in Lancashire (being the seamen that transported the Earl of Derby) and sent to York, where they are now in prison; we have written to the Militia Commissioners of Yorkshire to take order that they be sent in safe custody to Hull, and to those of Lancashire to send you such witnesses as can testify to the fact. Upon the coming of those witnesses, proceed to the trial of those men.

As we know that the Scotch army in England has a special eye upon Hull, and has long had designs upon it, we desire, in the absence of Col. Overton, that you will have a more special care and vigilance over that place, and follow orders from the Parliament, Council of State, or the Lord General. [I. 96, p. 494; I. 22, p. 21.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners of co. Lancaster. The Lord General having issued a commission to Lieut.-Gen. Salmon, deputy governor of Hull, for trial of offenders according to martial law, we have written the Militia Commissioners for co. Send thither the original examinations, and such witnesses as can testify to the matter of fact, that the court-martial may proceed with all expedition, and that speedy justice upon them may be a terror to others, and prevent the like attempts against the peace.

service against the Earl of Derby and his party were wounded, and remain in your county, unable to go up to the army,—being sensible of the very great service wherein God was pleased to make them instruments,—we recommend them to your special care, to see that they may have all necessary accommodation for their subsistence and recovery, they deserving all encouragement for their resolute and valiant deportment against that enemy, in the seasonable breaking of the forces there raised.

We conceive now that our forces have come up to Worcester, that we shall speedily compel the enemy either to fight or fly, and most probably the latter, and that he will endeavour, if possible, to return to Scotland, the prevention whereof will be endeavoured by the army; yet for its better effecting, have your forces ready, and spoil all the fords, and stop the passes, to retard their flight until our forces shall come up to them, as they may steal away and get some few hours before them. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for Kent. Seeing you are satisfied with Col. Dixwell's foot regiment, we are as well content that Rochester be guarded by the company as by a commanded party, and are also satisfied with the disposal of your forces, as expressed in your letter. As to the 20 horse you mention, you may employ your horse, or any part thereof, as you judge will most promote the public service. As for the persons under bail whom you hold to be dangerous, send up their names, and on consideration thereof, we will give you further directions; as for all other dangerous persons, you have power by former Acts and instructions to secure them, which we leave to your care and diligence. Whitehall. Council of State to the Governor of Oxford. Take informations against John Alley and Howel Jones, prisoners there for spreading false news, and their own examinations, and send them up to Council. If they give security in 200*l.* each, with two sureties in 100*l.* each, to appear at Council in eight days, and answer objections, and not depart without leave, set them at liberty to appear. If they cannot find security, send up the informations and examinations. [I. 96, p. 498.]

Whitehall. Council of State to Col. Rob. Blake, General of the fleet at Sea. We have yours of the 3rd on board the Victory, giving an account of your arrival in the Downs, and of the ships with you, and their employment, which we approve. Consider the enclosed from the Admiralty Committee, and prevent the attempt from coming to effect. Hearing of an intention of landing men about Lovingland, we have ordered land forces thither, and desire you to prevent any such attempt.
The Scots' army is in or about Worcester, most of them in the town every night. The Lord General is before the town, east of the Severn, and Fleetwood west. There is a bridge of boats preparing, above the confluence of the Teame and Severn; when ready, there will be line of communication between the two armies, and we shall speedily force them to fight, or starve, or run if they can break through. The latter will be most likely. There are forces on all the passes, if they slip away before we have fully invested the town. The countries have risen readily against them, and few come to them, and those generally the scum of the people. They are in great want, especially of ammunition. We expect a speedy end, but you shall know all that happens. [I. 96, p. 499.]
- Sept. 4.
Whitehall. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. York. There were lately some prisoners sent out of Lancashire to York Castle, and amongst others Cotterell and his fellows, taken in Lancashire, having transported the Earl of Derby and his party into that county. As the Lord General has sent a commission to Lieut.-Col. Salmon at Hull to try them, send them to Hull in safe custody, and deliver them to Salmon to be proceeded against. [I. 96, p. 500.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the Navy Committee. Parliament having this day passed an order referring it to us to give gratuities to the officers of the fleet, not exceeding the rates in a list then passed, and as by the same order you are to give order for payment thereof, we enclose the list, and desire you to order the Navy Commissioners to pay the several officers, unless cause be found, upon offence or miscarriage committed by any of them, to justify the suspension thereof. up the declarations of Charles Stuart, and likewise to send for any other persons whom they think fit to employ in that business, and to promise rewards to those who discover any of those persons.

2. The Irish and Scotch Committee to hasten away all the tents they have ready for the army, by the carriers of Evesham and Pershore this week, and to provide some more.

6. Lord Commissioner Lisle to report to the House that there are several papers published to withdraw the people from their duty, and to request that the House will consider of some order to prevent mischief thereby.

11. The Irish and Scotch Committee to draw a warrant for payment of 3,000*l.* to Mr. Frost, for the exigencies of Council, out of money set apart for the design of Jersey.

12. To write the Governor of Oxford to send up an account of his disbursements towards the fortifications of New College, and to forbear proceeding any further in that business until he has sent it.

14. To write Col. Dixwell and Lieut.-Col. Kelsey, enclosing the charge against John Whetstone, postmaster of Dover, and to desire them to send for the parties, and examine them; and in case they find the particulars in the first article proved, whereby he may be made guilty of delinquency, they are to represent the whole business to the county Sequestration Commissioners, who are to proceed against him, except he has already made his composition. They are also to examine him and the witnesses against him, as to his breach of trust in his place of postmaster, and certify.

15. Sir Gregory Norton added to the Militia Commissioners for Surrey.

16. The letter of Rich. Smith from Hull referred to the Admiralty Committee.

17. To write the Lord General enclosing a copy of Sir Arthur Hesilrigge's letter, and the good intelligence received from Scotland.

18. 30*l.* to be given to a servant to Lord Chief Baron Wylde that brought the first tidings of the defeat of the enemy at Worcester.

20. A bonfire to be made at Whitehall Gate, in token of joy for the good news of the routing of the enemy near Worcester; Col. Berkstead is to take care of it.

21. Col. Berkstead to shoot the guns of his regiment, and cause the bonfire to be made. [I. 22, pp. 21-26.]

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood. We have given order for sending away the tents in store, and are sorry there are not so many ready as might accommodate all, but have given direction for providing more with all speed, although we fear they will not be ready soon enough to serve the present exigency. We enclose copies of an Act of Parliament, whereby you will see that care has been taken for pay of the forces with you. We have sent copies thereof to the several counties, with directions to take care that another month's pay is sent to the forces by the time the former month expires; we shall quicken them all we can, and hope the forces will be supplied.

P.S.—Since writing the above, we have news of the routing of the Scotch army, so that now we shall respite the execution of the fore-mentioned part of this letter, and shall think of another way of satisfying those honest soldiers. [I. 96, p. 501.]

Council of State to the Lord General. We have seen your letter to the Speaker, and by that and others, have been informed of the great success given to the forces under your command, not doubting but God will in much mercy finish what remains, and crown all by giving us humble and thankful hearts for these and all the rest of His mercies, and a thorough conformity to His will, who continually goes out in such overflowings of goodness towards us, an unworthy people, and be ready further to serve His providence as He shall please to lead us out to it.

We have also received the enclosed news from Scotland, written from Leith the 30th ult., the action taking place the 28th, eight miles from Dundee. There is money ready for the forces of the establishment, which shall be sent to where you shall appoint. We sent several despatches to the northern parts, for intercepting the flying enemy. The news from Scotland was written from Leith by Commissioner Desborow. [I. 96, p. 502.]

Council of State to Lieut.-Gen. Monk, Cols. Fitch, Fenwick, and Salmon, Sir Arthur Hesilrigge, the Lord Mayor, and Militia Commissioners of London, and the Militia Commissioners of Westminster, the Hamlets, Southwark, York, Derby, Notts, Leicester, and Herts. It has pleased God to give us a great victory against the Scotch army at Worcester yesterday. The fight was on both sides of the town; it began about 2 p.m. and continued until they could see no longer to prosecute it. The slain are estimated at 4,000, but there are not 100 of ours. The enemy were wholly routed on both sides of the town, and some of their horse fled, which our horse are pursuing. Their great fort is taken; such as are left of them are yet in the town, into a part of which some of our forces entered yesterday night. It is probable that such as can scatter homewards will endeavour to do so; use your best endeavours to gather them up. With note of addition to Major-Gen. Skippon and the Commissioners of the three London militias. As it is probable many of the enemy may endeavour to come to London, endeavour to gather them up, by parties of horse which you will send out upon all the avenues of the city. [I. 96, p. 503.]

Council of State to the Lord General. By yours from Evesham, and the report of the members of this Council who were sent to you, we are fully informed of the great victory against this wicked generation of men, whereby we trust a happy foundation is laid for settling peace and tranquility for the future. These mercies are so exceedingly great to so great unworthiness, that God alone is able to frame our hearts to any measure of suitableness, which we desire He will do, and that we may keep a perpetual living memory of these great obligations, and return all praise and thanks to Him who is the author and maker of a due improvement of them.

We also thank you for your great and unwearied pains and travail in this great action, wherein God has been pleased to make you so far instrumental to the peace of this commonwealth; Parliament has appointed letters of thanks to be written to you, and some members of Parliament are also appointed to salute you from them, and wait upon you at Aylesbury, by whom you will receive their letters. As to the prisoners you intimate as coming this way, we desire their march may not be too speedy, so that we may be the better prepared to dispose of them. We desire you to be specially careful of your health, after this very great travail and action. Order is taken with the Treasurers at-War that the money for your army shall be prepared, and sent to you at Aylesbury. [I. 96, p. 505.]

Whitehall. Council of State to the several Militias. It having pleased God to give so great and full a victory, there is no further need to keep up the militia forces; and being very unwilling that any unnecessary charge should be continued upon the people, we desire you forthwith to dismiss all your horse and foot to go to their own homes; and let the horses and arms be delivered to the proprietors, except the arms of such as you do not hold fit to trust with them. Take care that such arms as are in dangerous hands be secured, according to former instructions.

Having found such diligence in you, and such alacrity in the soldiers to act in this exigency for the security of the commonwealth, we return you thanks, and desire you to give thanks, in our name, to the forces of your county whom you shall dismiss. As the hopes the enemies had of a better success has drawn many from beyond the sea to join with them, who are lurking in England, and may be in your county, as also many stragglers from the rout and slaughter of the army may endeavour to hide themselves there, be very diligent to apprehend all such, and keep them in safe custody, in order to proceedings being taken against them. Council of State to the Governor of Oxford. The enemy being totally routed at Worcester, there will now be no occasion for continuing any forces or fortifications in Oxford. As you lately quitted the citadel, conceiving it not tenable, and possessed yourself of New College, and proceeded to make some fortifications there, let those works now be wholly slighted, and the college delivered up to the master, to be used as formerly. Take care that the works of the citadel be also slighted, and do not remain to give occasion to any disaffected spirits to beget new troubles. As to the two foot companies appointed you for defence of the citadel, give them order to march to Windsor Castle, and remain there for defence of that garrison. We have given notice thereof to the governor, who will expect their coming. As to the voluntary troop of scholars mounted by the University, let them be discharged, and the horses and arms restored to the proprietors, and thanks returned to them for voluntary and free expressions of their good affections to the service. When certified what regiments they are that you have so disposed of, we shall take such order about them as their condition requires. Signify it to us by the first opportunity. [I. 96, p. 509.]

39. Ra. Parker to ——. I have received an account of the payment of the moneys for Capt. Brett's use. The Zealanders desire to compound, and have proffered me here 36,000 guilders, but my Lord of Derry wrote me yesterday from Antwerp that the English merchants there are very forward in desiring an end, and he hopes to draw them to give the half, by taking the goods out of the ship and valuing them.

Travellers from London report that Shrewsbury, Chester, Bristol, and Lichfield have declared for the King, and that he was within 30 miles of London, with 15,000 horse; that they are full of fear, and have disarmed many of the citizens of London, which I wish we may find confirmed by the post. The Spaniards have taken Vencur, a garrison between Nieuport and Dunkirk, from the French. I still value our prizes at not less than 50,000*l.* [1¼ pages.]

Council of State to Sir Geo. Ayscue. It having pleased God to give very great success to our forces both in Scotland and England, we send this express to give you notice, and enclose a brief narrative of the whole, to which you may give credit. We leave it to you to make such use of it as you judge fit, for promoting the work you have in charge. What is not in your papers concerning this action in England you may take notice of, that though the enemy promised himself much assistance from his party here,—which was the ground of his running into England, when he durst not fight in Scotland, giving all up for lost there,—yet there was not any insurrection in any one county in his favour, but only in Lancashire some few came in to the Earl of Derby, after Charles Stuart was marched out of it, who were happily broken by Col. Lilburne's regiment of horse, and three companies of foot of the garrisons of Liverpool and Chester; nor did any considerable number come into him, and those that did were the trash of the people; but there was such a general alacrity and cheerfulness everywhere for the service of Parliament, that great numbers, upon directions given them, marched from several counties to the army; some whereof came up to Worcester, and did very good service in the action there; others were on their way, but did not come up; and in all other places, they put themselves into a posture to receive the commands that should be sent them for the safety of the commonwealth, so as there was everywhere a perfect quietness as to any disturbance in their favour, or upon their account.

The enemy has not now any visible force or authority in Scotland, nor any place of strength on this side of Dundee. There are four regiments of foot besides horse going into Scotland from the army here, to join with Lieut.-General Monk, to finish what remains there. [I. 96, p. 510.]

Council of State to the Lord General. There has been money ready for your army for some days past, which could not hitherto have been sent with safety, in regard of the motion of the army, and its dispersing into several quarters, for their ease and the ease of the soldiers; and to the end, now that they are dispersed, that they may not be necessitated to take free quarter, to the burden and discontent of the people, for want of their pay, we have appointed the Treasurers-at-war to attend you, to receive your directions for the most speedy and safe sending of the money. We know you are very sensible and tender of the evil of free quarter, and therefore we shall not need to say anything further.

Council of State to Capt. Robert Moulton, Navy Commissioner at Portsmouth. On consideration of the estimate of the charge which might be incurred by the vessels that had been taken up about Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight, as the allowance calculated by Major Purling, amounting to 400*l.*, was extraordinarily much, and as you, whose duty obliged you to be as frugal as possible, might have drawn down the charge to less, we wrote committing the principal trust of that affair to you; but we find that you bring the whole charges to near half as much more, viz., 600*l.* We are not satisfied, but expect, if it be yet remediable, that you retrench the charge; meantime the payment of the bill for 132*l.*, which you have charged payable to Major Purling, is suspended, until we have further account from you, or other resolution shall be taken therein. Sept. 11. Council of State to the Justices of Peace for co. Northampton. Thomas and John Willoughby, and John Cresswell were licensed by four justices of peace of your county to come to London about their occasions, and were returning with Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood's pass, when they were seized at Aylesbury by the Militia Commissioners, and their horses taken from them, and they have since been committed to the sheriff by the warrant of this Council. We have now thought fit, the danger being over, to let them out on bail, and therefore desire you to take their recognizance in 400*l.* each, with two sureties in 200*l.*, to appear at Council when summoned, and to act nothing prejudicial to the Government; they are then to be set at liberty, and their horses and other things, if any were then seized, restored, if they be under restraint for no other cause than by the aforesaid warrant. [I. 96, p. 517.]

We have received your letter, with that of Massey, and his examination; see that he is kept in safe custody, and certify whether he is in a condition to be brought to the Tower, he being appointed to be imprisoned there, in order to his trial; meantime examine him further in such things as you think fit, and send the examinations to us. [I. 96, p. 518.]
- Sept. 11. Council of State to Major-Gen. Skippon. We hear that the guards upon the Avenue, under colour of examining and searching suspicious persons, very much molest and trouble all passengers, as well those who are going out of town as those who are coming in, and that they demand money to let people go, which is a most intolerable abuse. Give order that this practice be forborne, and that all things be in the condition they were in before the late invasion by the Scotch army. [I. 96, p. 519.]
- Sept. 11. Council of State to the Navy Committee. Capts. Penn and Blake write from Leghorn giving advice of a bill of exchange drawn by Capt. Penn. Council of State to Col. Duckenfield. We have desired the Lord General to order some fit party of horse to receive the Earl of Lauderdale and Lord Douglas from you, and bring them to Council; deliver those prisoners to such as he shall appoint. As to the prisoners there, they should be allowed 1 lb. of bread, and $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of cheese, and we have written to Mr. Walley to provide it. Take strict examination of those prisoners who confessed that the Scotch King had great sums of money sent him from many in this nation, and send us up their examinations. As for those countrymen that took the Scotch prisoners, and with them several prizes, which you say are taken from them, Council has declared their opinion that those who adventure themselves to take prisoners should have the prizes they take with them; see that right be done them, for their encouragement in so good a service, done with the hazard of their lives. Council of State to Major-Gen. Harrison. In order to ease charge, Parliament has resolved that the 4,000 horse and dragoons taken into pay in lieu of the militia shall be disbanded, and have referred it to us to see it done. On advice with the Lord General and his officers, it is found expedient that all in these parts, or with you of the said 4,000 be forthwith disbanded; we have appointed 14 days' pay over and above the last assignation, ending the 22nd inst., to be provided for those with you, which is to be paid in the respective counties where they were raised, and where they are to be sent back to be disbanded. Order all those troops, part of the said 4,000 that are marched with you northward in the pursuit, to return to their counties, and send to us and Lieut.-Gen. Fleetwood a list of the captains, and the respective counties to which they are to be sent to disband, that warrants may be granted upon the receiver of assessments of the said counties, for the said 14 days' pay, and care shall be taken that it be ready for them. For the more due and orderly disposal of the horses and arms, you are to order the respective captains to repair to the Militia Commissioners, and observe their directions. Return our hearty thanks to the officers and soldiers, for their faithful services and their forwardness therein. [I. 96, p. 521.]

Council of State to Col. Duckenfield. Many prisoners of the Scotch party have been taken and brought into your garrison, whereof some are of quality; let special care be had to keep them safely, and you will speedily receive order for their disposal. Among them, we specially recommend that Lieut.-Generals David Leslie and Middleton be very strictly kept, as being persons who had the greatest command among them. The Lord General has renewed the commission for a court martial, which we enclose, as also the orders of Parliament concerning some to begin with, to be made examples of justice, among which are the Earl of Derby, Capt. Bendbow, and Sir Timothy Fetherstonehaugh, who are to be tried at Chester by the said commission. Call the commissioners together, and speedily proceed to their trial. Also take an exact survey of your

Examine all the prisoners in your custody, as it may be of use at their trial. With note of a letter to Col. Birch, to the same effect as the first and last clause of the above. [I. 96, p. 522.]

Council of State to Sir Geo. Booth. We understand by yours the great readiness of your neighbours to rise for the apprehension of the enemies who fled from the battle at Worcester, as also the continuance of your own good affections to the common cause. We are sorry to hear that the forwardness of many to manifest their good affection to their country occasioned the loss of their lives, in their endeavours of a just revenge upon those who endeavoured the reduction of all under a worse slavery than what has caused so much blood and treasure to be redeemed from, and we are exceedingly satisfied of your generous resolution that, though you cannot restore life to those slain, you will bestow gratis a life in their estates to those interested who survive—a practice we wish might be exemplary to all,—and hope it may be a copy which others will be enforced to write after. We hope this will be the last attempt that will carry difficulty; perhaps they will not give over, but every endeavour that fails makes the next less able to produce its effect. Thanks for your constant demonstrations of faithfulness and readiness against the enemy, whereof yourself may reap the comfort. We doubt not but Parliament will be duly sensible for your just advantage. [I. 96, p. 523.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Berks. them, and apply themselves to peace and service—desires you to release those formerly at liberty upon bail, on the same bail as before, and the others that formerly or lately have been secured, and are now in custody, on proportionable security, if you have nothing to suggest why they should be continued in custody, and send up their bonds, recognizances, and examinations to Council. Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. York. Thanks for your diligence and care in apprehension of those who escaped from Worcester. We know this is not without charge and trouble to you, but we hope this business being effectually settled will prevent all like attempts for the future. As to your dismissing the forces, we have already given directions to all the counties; order is sent to Hull for trial of Cotterell and his fellows, and they will be speedily proceeded against. We know these troubles have brought great charge to the country, which cannot be borne upon any account but their own, because all have in several kinds their proportion. Council of State to Capt. Lawrence. The Lord having been pleased to bless our forces at Worcester in a total routing of the enemies, the Council of State, by order of Parliament, considering the great burden the commonwealth is at, intend to disband the 4,000 horse and dragoons; yours being part of that number, we order the present disbanding of your troop, with a week's pay, which you shall receive from the receiver of the county. For disposal of the arms and horses in your troop, observe directions from the militia of the county where your troop was raised. Heartly thanks for the faithful services of yourself, officers, and soldiers, and for your and their forwardness therein. With note of like letters to Capts. As to the horses and other prize taken by them, you may let the people know how acceptable that service is, that they thus appear against the enemies, and for maintenance of their just liberty, which has cost so much blood and treasure, and which God has been pleased, by many acts of His providence, and very signally by this last, to lay a sure foundation. Council of State to Chas. Walley. There are a number of Scotch prisoners and others that were in the Scotch army, now at Chester, the disposal of whom we have under consideration. Meantime take care that victuals be provided and distributed for them, at 2*d.* a day each man. As provision has hitherto been made for them by Col. Duckenfield, reimburse him what he has laid out, and put the whole to your account, and we will order money for you. Musters are to be taken of the prisoners twice a week, both for ascertaining the charge, and that we may know who die or make their escape, if any do. [I. 96, p. 533.]

Chester.

40. ——— to ———. I believe you have too soon heard of our misfortunes at Worcester, and it is possible there are some amongst you who blame our proceedings rather than pity us ; but if they knew the state of our master's affairs when he was in Scotland and here, they would say otherwise. Cromwell would not fight us in our own country, but with great advantage to himself, he knowing that our army lying idle would moulder to nothing, as indeed it had, if His Majesty had not brought them away. It consisted of 12,000 fighting men, absolutely under his command, who being marched into the heart of the kingdom, and possessed of the city of Worcester, might in all probability have proved a notable step towards the resettling of this kingdom, had not God determined it otherwise.

The King omitted nothing that might encourage the country to rise with him, or at least to be neuter ; but on the contrary, they rose (which had they not done, without doubt we had beaten Cromwell's forces, they being inconsiderable) violently against us, to such numbers as made the enemy near 40,000, and the least any of their officers' report them was 36,000. With this number they came before us at Worcester. The city was neither fortified nor victualled, but His Majesty thought he could not in honour leave them who had so willingly received him, to be plundered by the enemy.

During the enemy's lying there, the King was very active, and often sent out strong parties, but the enemy was so watchful, and lay so strong that, though our men behaved courageously, they could get no advantage of them.

The day and manner of the fight you may gather from their letters. His Majesty behaved himself very gallantly ; with his own regiment of horse, and D[uke] Hamilton's, he broke a regiment of foot, and forced back a considerable body of their horse

Sept. 17. but at last was overpowered, and our horse ran, though the King strove to make them stand. The King being closely pursued, and our men stopping the passage, was forced to quit his horse, and climb up our half raised mount, and there so encouraged our foot that the enemy retired with loss. The King perceiving the enemy too numerous, and our men worsted, drew them within the walls, where it was long disputed, and then taking a fresh horse, he road to the cavalry, with the intention of rallying them, and scouring the foot from the walls; but it was in vain, for Middleton was wounded, and the chief of the horse officers either dismounted or slain, or I know not where. David Leslie rode up and down as one amazed, or seeking to fly, for they were so confused that neither threats nor entreaty could persuade them to charge with His Majesty. What became of His Majesty afterwards I know not, but God preserve him, for certainly a more gallant prince was never born.

Towards the evening all things appeared very horrid, alarms being in every part of the city, and a report that the enemy had entered one end of the town, and we of the horse trampling one upon another, much readier to cut each other's throat than to defend ourselves against the enemy. In this confusion we at last got out of the town, and fled as fast as we could, our two Lieut.-Generals being, as appeared the next morning, at our head. We had no guide, so we often lost our way, but yet reached Newport, 30 miles this side of Worcester, the next morning, and there thought to have refreshed ourselves, and marched quietly for Scotland; but our enemies' posts flew faster then we, and there wanted not considerable forces in every place to front us, and we were so closely pursued, in the day by the army and garrison forces, and in the night by the country, that from the time we came out of Worcester, until the Friday evening that I was taken prisoner seven miles from Preston, neither I nor my horse ever rested. Our body consisted of 3,000; in the day we often faced the enemy, and beat their little parties, but still those of us whose horses tired or were shot were lost, unless they could run as fast as we rode. In the night we kept close together, yet some fell asleep on their horses, and if their horses tarried behind, we might hear by their cries what the bloody country people were doing with them. On Thursday night Lieut.-Generals Middleton and Leslie left us, or willingly lost us, but with all the haste they made, both of them, with Sir Wm. Fleming, are here prisoners.

I left D. Hamilton a prisoner at my coming out of Worcester, having been shot in the leg, and he has since died through the cutting of it off, and few or none of the King's servants have escaped. The Earls of Derby and Lauderdale, Sir David Cunningham and Mr. Lane are prisoners here in the castle, and there are many other prisoners in private houses, the church and castle being full. They are so high that they have condemned from household servants to noblemen, so that what will become of us I know not. Endorsed by [Sec. Nicholas]: "Relation of the defeat of the King's army at Worcester, $\frac{3}{13}$ September, 1651. [Copy, $3\frac{1}{2}$ pages.]

Council of State to the Militia Commissioners for co. Bucks. We wrote you that we had given order to set at liberty Mr. Creswell, and Thomas, and John Willoughby, whom you had first restrained, and who were afterwards imprisoned at Northampton, and desired you to restore their horses, and what also was taken from them; but the order has had no effect, being taken only to be a desire, although it be the term whereby the Council uses to express their most positive orders, which you will easily find by comparing this with others sent you; but that the gentlemen against whom we had no particular crime may have the effect of the order, we hereby require you to restore their horses, and what else was taken from them. Council of State to the Army Committee. The troop of horse of Major Beard, being part of the 3,000 horse raised out of the militia horse of the counties, and particularly out of those of Essex, are now, according to the order of Parliament, to be disbanded. Let one week's pay be given to them, and let them be disbanded. We have intimated this to the Major, that he may attend you for your order therein, and observe the directions of Parliament. 42. Report of the Council for Trade—upon several petitions complaining of abuses and deceits, viz., the heavy and corrupt dyeing of silk, thereby adding a third or fourth part thereof to the weight; the mixing copper with gold and silver thread; the selling gold and silver lace and thread by an uncertain weight, and not by that which all bullion and plate is usually bought and sold by; the mixing silk with thread in ribbands, points, &c., with like frauds in upholstery wares, in the dressing, dyeing, weaving, and making up of cloth, bayes, and most other manufactures and trades:—That some have occurred for want of incorporation; others for want of sufficient power in their corporations to search for and punish offenders; or assess their members or commodities to defray the charge of search; others through taking in men of several trades under one company; through undue choice of officers; through the want of restraining ill and bad wares appertaining to their several arts brought from beyond sea;

As all these in former times had redress at the late King's Council, or were referred to the Lord Keeper, Lord Treasurer, Lord Privy Seal, the President of the Council, Attorney General, the Chief Justices or the Justices of the Peace; and as many thousands of this nation are concerned in cases of this nature, and the differences and complaints have been already very numerous, this Council suggests that it will be very advantageous to trade for there to be some way for viewing, confirming, or rectifying the bye-laws and ordinances now in use by the societies of merchants and manufacturers, and for the hearing, examining and determining of all of the above cases, in the several handicraft trades and others, and for the dispatch thereof to be settled by Parliament. Levant Company to Spencer Bretton, consul at Smyrna. We have received yours, acquainting us with your journey to Constantinople, for procuring justice against the Cady, which we are glad you have obtained, upon him and the Armenian who occasioned that disturbance, and the rather in regard of the quiet and good effects you thereupon enjoy, by the better inclinations of the present Cady who succeeds him, and your freedom from the like pretences of the Armenians and others. As the Avania was made upon Mr. Barnardiston, who by your pains and industry is now eased thereof, he must bear the charge of his own business.

We are glad of your recovery, and of the abatement of the pestilence, and unloading of the ships, but cannot take it well that our orders so positively pressed upon that factory receive no deeper an impression in what concerns the leviation, which we ordered should not exceed the rate of 4 dollars per cloth upon the goods of the Sampson and Phoenix, and yet 6 dollars are imposed, which the persons interested judge too heavy a burden for them to undergo, and which is a charge different from that to be paid by adventurers hereafter. Let 2 dollars per cloth be returned, and upon all ships hereafter arriving, let a leviation of 4 dollars per cloth and no more be made, for satisfaction of our bills of exchange, which being done, the leviation is to continue until the 2 dollars per cloth extraordinary on those ships be restored; for though we would gladly clear ourselves of all our engagements, yet all the members of our company should in a proportionable manner contribute thereto.

We are unsatisfied at the factors' scrupling the payment of leviations upon their own goods, for exemption wherein it is impossible they should give the least reason. It is irrational that we, who have the sole privilege of trading, should be obliged to bear the charge of their trading who for the most part have no title thereto, not being free; therefore we expressly second our former order for their satisfaction of the 2,800 dollars in arrear, and of future leviations equally with us, which we esteem a favour to them, who have much less reason to be eased herein than we. For what you shall do by our orders, we shall save you harmless; it is a misinformation that your predecessor suffered for any particular acted by him upon order from us.

VOL. XVI.

We admire the obstinacy of that factory, in refusing so small a service as the Treasurer's place for so short a time, but we shall let it rest in the way you have settled it, and if there be any inconvenience in employing the company's janizary about collecting the strangers' consulage, and assisting the Treasurers, we shall leave it to themselves to use another, without charge to the company.

Since you find discommodity from want of the registering of bargains, press the performance thereof; continue your resolution of disowning the business and intrigues happening by default therein.

We approve of what you have done concerning the goods of Mr. Laurence, only you have taken impositions of him as of an unfree-man, which may be rectified in his next consulage. We shall deal with interlopers as you advise, by denying them credit for their levitations here, until they have given satisfaction for their other duties.

We approve your procuring an order from Constantinople for a large proportion of provisions for the ships. We are sorry for Thos. Lancelot's condition, but so far from owing anything to his brother, as is pretended, he remains a debtor to us, and we have besides his bond for 1,000*l.* You will find, by the account of Mr. Barnardiston, the late treasurer, that the balance of Lancelot's account was fully paid him, and he has little reason therefore to make any demand upon us. I enclose the receipt of the water with ox galls and myrrh, but Lady Westmoreland has no other receipt of it but what she had of me. I was lately in Norfolk with Sir John Tracey, who drank your health not only in good wine, but in excellent ale. The way of making it is thus: for a hogshead, eight bushels of malt; the water to boil by itself for three hours, then poured scalding hot upon the malt, and continue together until the water has taken the strength of the malt. When fully cold, turn it up, and put yeast to it to make it work. It is not good drink until it is a month old. My father and brother present their services. [1½ pages.]

48. Report of Drs. William Clerk and Th. Exton, Admiralty Judges, to the Council of State, upon the petition of certain Armenians, claiming goods shipped by them in the St. Martin at Smyrna for Leghorn, which were taken by Rear-Admiral Edw. Hall and Capt. Peacock of the Tiger, near Corsica.

Find that she is a French ship belonging to the port of Shootack, between Marseilles and Toulon, and that her master, Michael Andrick, and most of her company were Frenchmen.

That by the articles of reprisal, three of the ship's company at least ought to have been brought home to be examined on cross-interrogatories, but it was alleged that the captain and most of his company were sick and could not be brought with safety; that Cogia Sarakan, of Constantinople, and the rest of the petitioners are subjects of the King of Persia, and traded with the English, and having bills of lading for their goods, they sailed from Smyrna to Leghorn, and that they were taken by Capt. Hall, and set on shore in the island of Harvinia, in Sicily, whence they came to London to look for their goods on board the said ship. Think the goods ought under the circumstances to be restored to them, unless the Council of State see any reason to the contrary. [1½ pages.]

Oct. 1. 51. Propositions of Thos. Violet to the Committee for removing obstructions in the Mint, to save the State 800*l.* a year, according to a medium from 1630 to 1645.

1. Two years since, the Committee solicited my advice for settling the Mint, removing obstructions, and making a book of rates of foreign coins, and afterwards I received orders for sending the placarts and orders for regulating the Mint beyond seas, and for foreign coins to make a just assay of them, and give a just valuation what they made in the Mint, which I have done.

2. The Council of State, finding a great obstruction in the Mint

Oct. 1. by the indirect dealing of some merchants and others, gave order for a draft of an Act against transporters of gold and silver, and such as culled out the heaviest money, which Act was read and committed by the House, and an order made that the Committee should sit daily until it was finished.

3. I now desire that the Act be passed, and offer to save the State in the master worker's place 1,800*l.* a year, upon the above medium of 15 years, as I shall demonstrate.

4. It appears by the Mint books that from 1630 to 1645, 13 millions of money was coined in the Mint, and that the master worker was and is allowed 2*d.* in the lb. troy, for melting of all silver to be delivered to the Moneyers; for he has the allowance of 16 grains of silver on the lb. troy, which upon the above medium is 3,600*l.* a year, and reckoning the sisell. The master worker had formerly 500*l.* a year, his fee, and to hold the office on account of the State for the best improvement, and Dr. Gourdon, the present master worker, has 400*l.* a year fee, and 2*d.* the lb. for melting the silver.

5. Now I shall propound whether it was ever intended that the State should make the 2*d.* worth to the master worker, or to whom he appoints to be melter, 1,500*l.* a year, besides the fee of 500*l.* and now 400*l.* to Dr. Gourdon; so that from 1630 to 1645, the master worker has received, upon his allowance after the rate of 16 grains or 2*d.* the pound weight, 50,000*l.*, besides the 500*l.* a year; this silver might have been melted under 30,000*l.* and the melter made a saving bargain.

6. I will execute the place for 120*l.* a year fee, and melt all the silver for 5 farthings the lb. troy, and bear all waste for an allowance of 10 grains the lb., and put in security for just performance, whereby the State will save 1,800*l.* a year of what Dr. Gourdon receives.

7. Though the Mint in the Tower does not now work, the principal cause is the ignorance and unfitness of the officers, and the not passing the Act against transporters of gold and silver, cullers and weighers, clippers and counterfeiters, whose abuses are grown to that height that they clip and counterfeit money, and send it all over the nation; as much money is counterfeited in England as is coined in the Tower, and much of it sent to Ireland, and the mischief thereby is so great that it does more hurt there than the enemy. In England the abuses in light and clipped money are so great that, in some countries, in receiving 500*l.* you will not get 300*l.*

Remedy proposed. Advantages and disadvantages of the mode of coining by press and mill. Objections against the mill. The Moneyers should make a better coin, and have 10*d.* instead of 9*d.* the lb. for silver, and 3*s.* instead of 2*s.* 5*d.* for gold. The tools for the press or mill will cost 1,000*l.*, and setting the Mint in repair another 1,000*l.* I offer to melt the silver at 10 grains the lb. which will be 1,000*l.* a year saved of what it will cost by the mill, though Gourdon has 16 grains; and to execute the place of master worker, for 120*l.* a year, for which he has 400*l.* [3 pages.]

56. John Dury, Library Keeper at St. James's, to the Council of State. The books and manuscripts will be utterly spoiled if not immediately looked after, as they lie upon the floor in confused heaps, so that not only the rain and dust, but the rats, mice, and other vermin can easily get at them, and none of these inconveniences can be prevented, unless you order the trustees for sale of the late King's goods to deliver me the keys.

The trustees long since made a catalogue of the books, and an inventory of the medals, so that there is nothing more left for them to do, and they might therefore be also desired to deliver up such catalogues and inventory; if there should be anything to complete, I am willing to assist them therein, so that the work may not linger, and the library be utterly spoiled, and remain useless to the public. It appears that you have since returned it to him. If I can procure it from him only for a minute, I will do so ; if not, we must have patience till the book has crossed the sea.

Very often, in the matter of books "parturiunt montes, nascitur ridiculus mus." Writing is a great disease with which most people, especially in Germany, are smitten, and what is more "scribimus indocti doctique poemata passim." I have seen the prescription you sent me for curing fat people ; it is not bad, and can be taken without danger ; rather than salt, some cummin and vinegar. But I shall never use it, having long recognized that a wicked soul never or rarely dwells in a fat body. It is nothing new to me to see sulphur internally taken as a cure for a red face and eruptions all over the body. I use it every day with success.

You will oblige me by sending me L'escole de Salerne, a Council of State to the Customs' Officers of all the ports of England. Council has informations inducing probabilities that Charles Stuart is still in England, as also the Duke of Buckingham, obscured and under disguise, expecting a fit time to pass into foreign parts. We need not put you in mind that Parliament has appointed 1,000*l.* to be given to him or them that shall apprehend the leader of the late invading army. For your better discovery of him, take notice of him to be a tall man, above two yards high, his hair a deep brown, near to black, and has been, as we hear, cut off since the destruction of his army at Worcester, so that it is not very long; expect him under disguise, and do not let any pass without a due and particular search, and look particularly to the bye creeks and places of embarkation in or belonging to your port. Council of State to Fras. Pierpoint and Col. Hutchinson. The guns and their equipage, with the round shot, bullet, and other necessaries of war in Nottingham Castle, are still in Nottingham, and not carried to Hull, for want of money as is alleged. As those things should be carried thither with all expedition, cause such sums of money to be imprested to Mr. Collin, late master gunner, on account, as you think fit for that service, of which you are to take account at his return, and for which you are to draw a bill of exchange upon Council, at six days' sight. We also send you two warrants to be issued by Mr. Collin, one to the storekeeper at Hull to receive the said goods, and the other to be left with the storekeeper, to use as he shall have occasion. Council of State to the Deputy Governor of Carlisle. On sending provisions to your garrison, to be laid up for the brigade of Major-Gen. Harrison, we appointed Geo. weeks' pay for the horse, issue them for a week's pay on account of the officers and soldiers which are not to be disbanded of the said regiments and troops, to the end that the free quarter taken by them all may be the better discharged; this week's pay is in part of their arrears due from 20 May last to 20 October. [I. 96,

- Oct. 18. Council of State to the Lord Deputy of Ireland. Complaint Whitehall. has been made to Parliament of the want of shipping upon the coast of Ireland, and that by means thereof, many piracies are committed there, and much mischief done to ships. We have inquired what ships are appointed to that coast, and enclose you the list of them, which we conceive fully proportionable to that service, compared to the whole number of ships in the service. We give you this particular that you may the better require an account of the commanders of them, if any have neglected their duty. [I. 96,
p. 587.]
- Oct. 18. 62. Report of Drs. William Clerk and John Exton, Admiralty Judges, to the Council of State, upon the case of John Southwood, merchant. In 1643, Southwood put 18 bales and trunks of goods, value 1,500*l.*, on board the Ann, bound for Flushing; on her passage she was surprised by a French man-of-war, carried into Boulogne, and there made prize. Southwood and his son also depose that in 1646, they put 18 tons of French wines on board the Joseph of London, for Ostend, which was likewise seized by a French man-of-war, carried to Calais, and there made prize, to his damage in 1,000*l.*, and in both cases he used all means to obtain restitution, without effect. As there has been a continual denial or delay of justice in France in these cases, although applied for by the supreme authority here, and by Monsr. Augier, agent there, letters of reprisal ought to be granted against the French to Mr. Southwood, so as to enable him to regain his said loss, and also the charges to which he has been put. [1 page.]
- Oct. 19. 63. Capt. Hen. Appleton to the Navy Commissioners. I advised
The Leopard, you of our proceedings in my last, left with Alex. Bence, merchant, Genoa Road. in Alicant. On the 3rd instant we set sail with four Levant ships, and the Backelew Man, from Newfoundland, bound for Genoa, but wind and weather have been contrary, and on the 14th instant, being 30 leagues east of Minorca, we had a very violent storm for 12 hours, which separated our fleet; the next day only the four Levant ships and the Constant Warwick were in sight astern of us, but we came up with the Backelew Man on the 16th, and he reported that the Bonadventure lay by in the storm.
On the morning of the 17th, we espied a sail between Savona and Genoa, which endeavoured to get the wind of our fleet, whereupon we gave chase, but there being a hard gale of wind, he tacked to the eastward, and hoisted the French colours. We pressed our ship with much sail to cut him off at Cape Noli, but he had the wind of us. We came near, and fired 30 pieces of ordnance, some of which lodged in his hull, but being a proper French ship, and an extraordinary sailer, he got from us, without firing one piece at us.

In the evening, being near Genoa Road, the English merchants from the shore advised me of a French frigate lying on the coast with 36 pieces of ordnance, and nearly 400 men. The Constant Warwick was near us, Capt. Cox not having yet recovered from his broken leg, otherwise I suppose they had given chase with us, and then no doubt we had taken the French frigate. I understand there are eight ships from Toulon, and seven more getting ready. By the first fair wind we shall expect to see the Bonadventure. [1 page.]

64. Report of Dr. William Clerk and John Exton, Admiralty Judges, to the Council of State, upon the arrest of the Waterhound of Amsterdam, appointed to transport Lord Commissioner Schaeph from England, by John Marston, merchant.

Peter Vansaling, the captain, pleads that the ship, being in the service of the United Provinces, was not liable to arrest. Marston pleads that in 1639, two vessels of his, freighted with Spaniards, were boarded and seized in Margate road by a ship-of-war of the States General, sailing under English colours, which conduct Van Trump approved, and reparation had been vainly solicited from Joachimi when in England.

In 1645, Parliament remonstrated against this proceeding, but it was justified by the States General. On debate it was proved that the arrest of the ship took place before it was engaged for Lord Ambassador Schaeph, and therefore that argument was waived; but the arrest was not legal, because a person suffering loss from ships subject to another prince or state, should first complain and seek

Having spent what time you may there, reserving only victuals to bring you to the English coast, set sail for England, and in pursuance of your former instructions, take such ships and goods of the enemy as you meet with at sea. 68. Propositions of Simon Corbitt the provost, and the company of Moneyers in the Tower, concerning coining gold and silver moneys with letters about the edges, or grainings, or otherwise plain by way of the mill; presented to the Mint Committee:

(1.) The coining of 1,000*l.* a week in 5*s.* 2*s.* 6*d.* 1*s.* 6*d.* 2*d.* and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. pieces will cost 1,000*l.* besides 1,000*l.* for buildings, mills, and horses, which, when provided, the moneyers will keep in repair.

(2.) The company will receive the silver in standard from the office, be at all charges for melting and workmanship, and deliver it in at 20*d.* the pound.

(3.) They will work gold money, that is 20*s.* 10*s.* and 5*s.* pieces, at 8*s.* the pound weight, except the stamps, which must be provided at the charge of the State. [$\frac{2}{3}$ page.]

[Oct. 21. ?]

69. Propositions of the Moneyers company, similar to the above, but offering to coin silver at 12*d.* the pound weight, and gold at 5*s.*, with the same encouragement to the Mint Corporation as requested by the Frenchman in his last proposition, if Parliament be pleased to have monies coined by way of mill. If coined by hammer, they will do it at 11*d.* for silver, and 3*s.* gold. As to the charge of melting and other fees incident to the Mint, which is different from their company, they refer themselves to the Commissioners. They request repayment of 40*l.* disbursed about the late trial with the Frenchman. Signed by Corbitt and 10 others. [1 page.]

[Oct. 21. ?] 70. Propositions of the Moneyers' Company in the Tower to the Mint Committee, to receive the gold from the office in standard, be at all expenses, and coin it by the hammer at 4*s.* the lb. weight, and silver at 1*s.* 2*d.*, as fair as in the days of Queen Elizabeth, finding all tools except coining irons. Signed by Corbitt. [$\frac{2}{3}$ page.]

[Oct. 21. ?] 71. Notes and queries by John Stone, on the Moneyers' propositions to make mill money at 12*d.* in the lb., troy "as faire as any monies in Christendome, and as exactly as any Frenchman in the world." [1 $\frac{2}{3}$ pages.]

[Oct. 21. ?] 72. Propositions of the Moneyers' of the Mint company to the Mint Committee to coin the gold by hammer at 2*s.* 5*d.*, and the silver at 9*d.*, for 6 months,—with better allowance afterwards, if desired. Beg recommendation of their charter and privileges to Parliament. Also payment of the 40*l.* disbursed at the late trial with the Frenchman. Signed by Simon Corbitt. [$\frac{2}{3}$ page.]

Oct. 21. 73. Propositions of Peter Blondeau to the Mint Committee. I offer to coin the money of the commonwealth, according to the patterns I lately made here by your order, and which can be neither moulded nor clipped, viz., both the gold and silver marked on both the flat sides and upon the thickness of the brim, to a sixpenny piece inclusive, for 16*d.* the lb. troy of silver, and for 7*s.* the lb. gold, the State finding the gold and silver, clean and ready to work, as also the stamps and dies, graved and polished, and fit for the press. As for the other engines and instruments, the State to bear the first charge, and I all subsequent, as also wood and coals, and whatever is necessary for coining.

The melting, casting, and supplying materials in the first instance will cost the State 10*d.* the lb. troy for gold, and 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for silver, for which price I agree to undertake it, and employ and pay persons necessary.

The procuring of stamps, dies, &c. will cost 2*d.* the lb. troy for gold, and 1*d.* for silver, and if the graver will not take it at that rate, I offer to do so.

All charges being thus paid, there will remain clear to the State 7*s.* for every lb. troy of gold, and 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for every lb. of silver, so that if 30,000*l.*, which is 10,000 lb. troy, be coined in silver weekly, as the workmen say was formerly done, there will be 12,000*l.* yearly clear to the State; and if 5,000 lbs. be coined in gold weekly, the State will yearly have 91,000*l.*, out of which only four or five officers will have to be paid.

VOL. XVI.

For 1,000*l.* the State may have as many engines and instruments made as will coin 10,000*l.* weekly in silver, and I will undertake them for that price, and for 400*l.* more, will make the houses belonging to the Mint fit for my work.

I do not desire to have the gold and silver or bullion in my custody, but merely to have the charge to work it, and to employ such men as the Mint Committee may appoint, whom I will teach to work after my way, and pay them a reasonable price; and I shall not have power to employ any one without the consent of the said Committee.

There are two different ways to make the pieces marked on the brim, one ancient and known to several, as being made by David Ramage, but it is very tedious, spoils stamps and engines, and cannot be done upon the current money which is thin; that is the reason why they pay in France a crown an ounce for gold, and half a crown an ounce for silver, for making these pieces; but the new way as invented by me is more expeditious, and can be used upon the thin current money.

If the State employ me, I desire that none but myself or those I shall appoint be permitted to use my new invention for 21 years, and that an Act be passed concerning the price and terms which shall be agreed upon; my reward I leave to the justice of Parliament.

If the Committee would see an account of what the money coined with the hammer will cost, they will find it will amount to very little less than what I propound, 1,000 or 1,200 stamps having been sometimes broken and spoiled in coining only 10,000*l.* or 12,000*l.* [3 pages.]

[Oct. 21.] 74. Further proposition of Blondeau. That the State may not be at any charge before it appears for certain that I can do what I propose, I further offer that, with the engines in the Tower and in the graver's house, and those I will make, I shall, at my own charge for a trial, coin all such gold and silver as the merchants shall bring in to be coined. Not that the said engines might always continue that work, being neither so fit nor expeditious as those to be made by my direction, and therefore I could not get my living by them; but whilst mine are making, I may make use of others, and so begin to coin the money after my way, within a fortnight after Parliament has passed the Act in my behalf. With order of the Mint Committee, 31st October, endorsed on the former paper, that Sir J. Harrington report the above propositions, as also those from the Moneyers, to the Council of State. Pett has returned an abstract of the charges disbursed for wages to shipwrights, caulkers, and others, amounting to 3,800*l.*, and the clerks have returned an account of provisions issued by direction of Mr. Bright, master shipwright, but have not valued them, so that this Committee has not a perfect estimate of the charge; order that the Navy Commissioners cause the value of the particulars in that account to be set down and returned by this day week, that a report of the whole charge for repairing such ship may be presented to the Council of State. - Oct. 22. 78. Report of Drs. Wm. Clark and Jno. Exton, two of the Admiralty Judges, to the Council of State. By your order of 8 Oct. 1651, our representations containing depositions concerning the nine English ships coming from Lisbon, and going to Brazil, was referred back to us for our opinions whether there was not just cause of seizure, and whether the ships were not to be brought up to the Admiralty Court to be tried, without payment of freight. We now find that the ships were taken to freight by the [King of?] Portugal to go to Brazil, and had taken in most of their lading before the Parliament fleet came before Lisbon, and before any of the abuses offered by Prince Rupert to the Parliament fleet in that port or to their men on shore; and that after the said fleet came into the port, the ships could not have come out from Lisbon to join with them without danger, as they were under the command of divers forts and castles. The witnesses never heard any report that the King of Portugal or his ministers had any intent to employ any English ships which were freighted to go to Brazil, or upon any other merchandising affairs, to assist Prince Rupert and the revolted fleet against the Parliament fleet, and believe the ships came from Lisbon, in company of some others bound for Brazil, with intention to sail thither and deliver their lading for the use of the Portuguese that had freighted them; but upon their coming forth, they were seized by General Blake, and other commanders and mariners out of his fleet were put upon them. General Blake alleges that it was done for strengthening the fleet against Prince Rupert or the French, or any other power that might oppose him, and that the masters of the ships were dismissed from command, or continuing on board, not upon any particular charge, but upon prudent grounds, he not thinking it convenient for the service of the commonwealth or themselves that they should remain on board their own vessels. This we conceive was a just cause of seizure or stay of the said vessels.

After this stay, order was brought to the fleet to surprise all Portuguese goods as prize, whereupon the lading of the said ships, being for the most part Portuguese, was seized, and then the ships likewise, to transport their loadings to the port of London to be proceeded against as lawful prize, which was accordingly done, and the goods condemned; this seizure was also lawful. Notwithstanding these just causes of seizure, we conceive,—and the advocate for the commonwealth agrees thereto in his report made to the Council of State,—that the law allows hire to the owners of ships so impressed or employed as well as if a particular contract had been made with the owners before. We find that, after stay of the ships and seizure of the goods, and not before, the King of Portugal and his ministers caused divers Englishmen well affected to Parliament to be imprisoned, and their goods to be seized. The nine ships were ships of more force than the ordinary Portuguese ships are; and it was believed that, if they had joined with the King of Portugal's ships, it would have been prejudicial to the Parliament fleet, and that so it would have been in case the said ships had proceeded to Brazil, and had, after delivery of their lading, been seized on by the Portuguese. This would have been a just cause of their seizure and stay, though there had been no order for seizure of their lading, yet this cause of seizure or stay does not bar them of their hire or freight.

If the nine ships had been employed by the masters and commanders against the Parliament fleet, or had been seized upon suspicion for so doing, and sent to the Admiralty Court to answer such charge, they could not have expected any freight or hire; or if any charge can be made against their commanders for disservice done to the commonwealth, there may be just cause to debar them of their freight. 80. Peter Pett to Robert Coytmor, Secretary to the Admiralty Committee. Although I much blame my treacherous memory that, when the committee were here, I did not move them about shooting some ordnance on board the ships on Thanksgiving Day, yet I could not omit the ceremony upon so solemn an occasion as that was, for which we spent three barrels of powder amongst all the ships; had I but the least thought the committee would have objected to it, I should willingly have borne the charge.

I have almost perfected the moulds for the new frigate, having been hard at work ever since you were here, and intend to bring up the plan of her next week, for the view of the committee.

Wm. Bostock, master joiner here, has some relationship to me by marriage, yet his miscarriages have been such in drinking, that I intend to request that one who has been a foreman to him and his father for many years may have that employment. If there is likely to be any removal of subordinate officers here, pray endeavour to put a stop to the placing of any until I come up, not for any private ends of my own, but for the advancement of the service.

82. Sir Theod. de Mayerne to Lord Conway, Petworth. It is easy for those who are well to give to the sick precepts that they would not practise themselves. You want grey hairs to rejoice, but Barzillai would not accept the pleasures which David offered him in his court. Bread is useless when you have no teeth, and music when you cannot hear. The old have to seek their joys in memory, which is often full of repentance.

Thanks for the burlesque poems you sent me; but they do not approach Lalli, who first parodied Virgil. It is easy to swell out books when half is the work of others, witness Merlin, Cocaje, and Bellay's macaronic verses. Rhyme is easy to all sprightly spirits like the Provençals. I send you some miserable burlesque verses to make you laugh, for the disease is contagious. If you return me Lalli's Franceide, send me also his Vespasian and Octavian. As I have lived four lustres at the court of princes, I can witness that Lalli speaks the truth.

We still have these killers of flies, and banterers. You will receive Fabri's nine volumes; I find as much shell as kernel. Be

Council of State to Thomas Marbury and the rest of the Militia Commissioners for Cheshire. Capt. Griffith's troop still continues together, notwithstanding orders for their disbanding, to the great oppression of the county, for which disobedience no pretence can be given, there being no service to which they are appointed. Send your orders to them for disbanding, and require them, all excuses set aside, to give obedience thereto; the restoring of the horses of the troop to the proprietors who raised them Council leaves to your judgment, not doubting but you will have respect to such of the soldiers as have deserved well for courage and good affection to the service.

Council leaves it likewise to you to examine the oppressions acted upon the country by this troop, and to order satisfaction to be made by the troop to such of the country as have suffered from them.

For the affronts offered to you in discharge of your trust, the authority by which you act has empowered you to do yourselves right, and we hope that neither this nor the murmurings of any malignant spirits against you, for your forwardness and zeal expressed to the service—by sending such considerable forces, so much beyond your proportion, against the enemy in the late invasion—will discourage you from acting still with the same cheerfulness, but will rather excite you to a continuance, especially when you consider how the blessing of God went along with your endeavours, to the finishing of a most happy work in the destruction of the enemy, maugre the devices of malignant and discontented spirits. The great faithfulness of your country is generally taken notice of to your honour, and Parliament and Council will, on all fitting occasions, be sensible thereof for your just encouragement. [I. 96, p. 595.]

CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the want of proper Calendars and Indexes."

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

Mr. Bergenroth also visited Madrid, and examined the Papers there, bearing on the reign of Henry VIII. The first volume contains the Spanish Papers of the reign of Henry VII.; the second volume, those of the first portion of the reign of Henry VIII. The Supplement contains new information relating to the private life of Queen Katharine of England; and to the projected marriage of Henry VII. with Queen Juana, widow of King Philip of Castile, and mother of the Emperor Charles V.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[ROYAL 8vo., half-bound. · Price 10s. each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional knowledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. THE CHRONICLE OF ENGLAND, by JOHN CAPGRAVE. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. CHRONICON MONASTERII DE ABINGDON. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. LIVES OF EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. I.—La Estoire de Seint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Æduardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. MONUMENTA FRANCISCANA; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. FASCICULI ZIZANIORUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS WYCLIF CUM TRITICO. Ascribed to THOMAS NETTER, of WALDEN, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. THE BUIK OF THE CRONICLIS OF SCOTLAND ; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece ; by WILLIAM STEWART. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this ; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true ; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. JOHANNIS CAPGRAVE LIBER DE ILLUSTRIBUS HENRICIS. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. HISTORIA MONASTERII S. AUGUSTINI CANTUARIENSIS, by THOMAS OF ELMHAM, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. EULOGIUM (HISTORIARUM SIVE TEMPORIS) : Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366 ; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. HAYDON, Esq., B.A. 1858-1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andreae Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of this volume are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLE, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I. Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859-1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A COLLECTION OF POLITICAL POEMS AND SONGS RELATING TO ENGLISH HISTORY, FROM THE ACCESSION OF EDWARD III. TO THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1859-1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "OPUS TERTIUM," "OPUS MINUS," &c., of ROGER BACON. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologiae."

16. BARTHOLOMÆI DE COTTON, MONACHI NORWICENSIS, HISTORIA ANGLICANA; 449-1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. BRUT Y TYWYSOGION; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Caedwala at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A COLLECTION OF ROYAL AND HISTORICAL LETTERS DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY IV. 1399-1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. THE REPRESSOR OF OVER MUCH BLAMING OF THE CLERGY. By REGINALD PECOCK, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporary history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecock, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. ANNALES CAMBRIÆ. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout, though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861-1873.

These volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185-6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188 and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Kambriæ et Descriptio Kambriæ.

22. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE WARS OF THE ENGLISH IN FRANCE DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE SIXTH, KING OF ENGLAND. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861-1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impériale, and the Dépôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, ACCORDING TO THE SEVERAL ORIGINAL AUTHORITIES. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGNS OF RICHARD III. AND HENRY VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1861-1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. LETTERS OF BISHOP GROSSETESTE, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066-1200. Vol. III.; 1200-1327. By Sir THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862-1871.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. ROYAL AND OTHER HISTORICAL LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGN OF HENRY III. Vol. I., 1216-1235. Vol. II., 1236-1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862-1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

YPODIGMA NEUSTRLE, A THOMA WALSINGHAM, QUONDAM MONACHO MONASTERII S. ALBANI, CONSCRIPTUM. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Cambridge and Oxford; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1876.

In the first two volumes is a History of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of St. Albans, from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, attributed to William Rishanger, who lived in the reign of Edward I., from the Cotton. MS. Faustina B. IX. in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219-231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cotton MS. Claudius E. III., fols. 306-331: an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol, 1291-1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., also attributed to William Rishanger, but on no sufficient ground: a short Chronicle of English History, 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: a short Chronicle, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi, Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: and fragments of three Chronicles of English History, 1285 to 1307.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, 1259 to 1296, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans, and a continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henry de Blaneфорde, both from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: a full Chronicle of English History, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and an account of the Benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum: with a Continuation, from the closing pages of Parker MS. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The eighth and ninth volumes, in continuation of the Annals, contain a Chronicle, probably by John Amundesham, a monk of St. Albans.

The tenth and eleventh volumes relate especially to the acts and proceedings of Abbots Whethamstede, Albon, and Wallingford, and may be considered as a memorial of the chief historical and domestic events during those periods.

The twelfth volume contains a compendious History of England to the reign of Henry V., and of Normandy in early times, also by Thomas Walsingham, and dedicated to Henry V. The compiler has often substituted other authorities in place of those consulted in the preparation of his larger work.

29. CHRONICON ABBATIE EVESHAMENSIS, AUCTORIBUS DOMINICO PRIORE EVESHAMLE ET THOMA DE MARLEBERGE ABBATE, A FUNDATIONE AD ANNUM 1213, UNA CUM CONTINUATIONE AD ANNUM 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. MACRAY, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. RICARDI DE CIRENCESTRIA SPECULUM HISTORIALE DE GESTIS REGUM ANGLIÆ. Vol. I., 447-871. Vol. II., 872-1066. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863-1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355-1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Britannia, in 1747.

31. YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 20-21, 21-22, 30-31, and 32-33. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1873.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. NARRATIVES OF THE EXPULSION OF THE ENGLISH FROM NORMANDY, 1449-1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normanniæ: Le Recouvrement de Normandie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conférences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durlham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. HISTORIA ET CARTULARIUM MONASTERII S. PETRI GLOUCESTRÆ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. HART, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863-1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. ALEXANDRI NECKAM DE NATURIS RERUM LIBRI DUO; with NECKAM'S POEM, DE LAUDIBUS DIVINÆ SAPIENTIÆ. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. LEECHDOMS, WORTCUNNING, AND STARCRAFT OF EARLY ENGLAND; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864-1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. ANNALES MONASTICI. Vol. I.:—Annales de Margan, 1066–1232; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066–1263; Annales de Burton, 1004–1263. Vol. II.:—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519–1277; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1–1291. Vol. III.:—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1–1297; Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042–1432. Vol. IV.:—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066–1289; Annales Prioratus de Wigornia, 1–1377. Vol. V.:—Index and Glossary. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registry of the University, Cambridge. 1864–1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. MAGNA VITA S. HUGONIS EPISCOPI LINCOLNIENSIS. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186; he died on the 16th of November 1200; and was canonized in 1220.

38. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF RICHARD THE FIRST. Vol. I.:—ITINERARIUM PEREGRINORUM ET GESTA REGIS RICARDI. Vol. II.:—EPISTOLÆ CANTUARIENSES; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury; 1187 to 1199. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864–1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. RECUEIL DES CRONIQUES ET ANCHIENNES ISTORIES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNE A PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN. Vol. I.

Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399-1422. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864-1868.

40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WAVRIN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Vols. III., IV., V., and VI. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH RAWSON LUMBY, B.D., Vicar of St. Edward's, Cambridge, Fellow of St. Catharine's College, and late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1865-1876.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVRE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVRE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livre de Reis de Engleterre." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA, AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866-1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. MATTHÆI PARISIENSIS HISTORIA ANGLORUM, SIVE, UT VULGO DICITUR, HISTORIA MINOR. Vols. I, II., and III. 1067-1253. Edited by Sir FREDERIC MADDEN, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866-1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the "Historia Major." The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. LIBER MONASTERII DE HYDA: A CHRONICLE AND CHARTULARY OF HYDE ABBEY, WINCHESTER, 455-1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by EDWARD EDWARDS, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements, which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. CHRONICON SCOTORUM: A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO 1135; WITH A SUPPLEMENT, CONTAINING THE EVENTS FROM 1141 TO 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befel the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are, the invasions of foreigners, and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. THE CHRONICLE OF PIERRE DE LANGTOFT, IN FRENCH VERSE, FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF EDWARD I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1866-1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III., and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. THE WAR OF THE GAEDHIL WITH THE GAILL, OR, THE INVASIONS OF IRELAND BY THE DANES AND OTHER NORSEMEN. Edited, with a Translation, by JAMES HENTHORN TODD D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. GESTA REGIS HENRICI SECUNDI BENEDICTI ABBATIS. THE CHRONICLE OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY II. AND RICHARD I., 1169-1192; known under the name of BENEDICT OF PETERBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. MUNIMENTA ACADEMICA, OR, DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ACADEMICAL LIFE AND STUDIES AT OXFORD (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. HENRY ANSTAY, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOVEDENE. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868-1871.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree; showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work: it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. WILLELMI MALMESBIRIENSIS MONACHI DE GESTIS PONTIFICUM ANGLORUM LIBRI QVINQUE. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. HAMILTON, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. HISTORIC AND MUNICIPAL DOCUMENTS OF IRELAND, FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN, &c. 1172-1320. Edited by JOHN T. GILBERT, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland,—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls of names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

54. THE ANNALS OF LOCH CÉ. A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, FROM 1014 to 1590. Vols. I. and II. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1871.

The original of this chronicle has passed under various names. The title of "Annals of Loch Cé" was given to it by Professor O'Curry, on the ground that it was transcribed for Brian Mac Dermot, an Irish chieftain, who resided on an island in Loch Cé, in the county of Roscommon. It adds much to the materials for the civil and ecclesiastical history of Ireland; and contains many curious references to English and foreign affairs, not noticed in any other chronicle.

55. MONUMENTA JURIDICA. THE BLACK BOOK OF THE ADMIRALTY, WITH APPENDICES. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by SIR TRAVERS TWISS, Q.C., D.C.L. 1871-1876.

This book contains the ancient ordinances and laws relating to the navy, and was probably compiled for the use of the Lord High Admiral of England. Selden calls it the "jewel of the Admiralty Records." Prynne ascribes to the Black Book the same authority in the Admiralty as the Black and Red Books have in the Court of Exchequer, and most English writers on maritime law recognize its importance.

56. MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VI.:—OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THOMAS BEKYNTON, SECRETARY TO HENRY VI., AND BISHOP OF BATH AND WELLS. Edited, from a MS. in the Archbishopal Library at Lambeth, with an Appendix of Illustrative Documents, by the Rev. GEORGE WILLIAMS, B.D., Vicar of Ringwood, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Vols. I. and II. 1872.

These curious volumes are of a very miscellaneous character, and were probably compiled under the immediate direction of Bekynton before he had attained to the Episcopate. They contain many of the Bishop's own letters, and several written by him in the King's name; as well as letters sent to himself while he was the Royal Secretary, and others addressed to the King. This work elucidates some obscure points in the history of the nation during the first half of the fifteenth century.

57. MATTHEI PARISIENSIS, MONACHI SANCTI ALBANI, CHRONICA MAJORA. Vol. I. The Creation to A.D. 1066. Vol. II. A.D. 1067 to A.D. 1216. Vol. III. A.D. 1216 to A.D. 1239. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, B.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Registry of the University, and Vicar of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge. 1872-1876.

This work contains the "Chronica Majora" of Matthew Paris, one of the most valuable and frequently consulted of the ancient English Chronicles. It is published from its commencement, for the first time. The editions by Archbishop Parker, and William Wats, severally begin at the Norman Conquest.

58. MEMORIALE FRATRIS WALTERI DE COVENTRIA.—THE HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS OF WALTER OF COVENTRY. Vols. I. and II. Edited, from the MS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1872-1873.

This work, now printed in full for the first time, has long been a desideratum by Historical Scholars. The first portion, however, is not of much importance, being only a compilation from earlier writers. The part relating to the first quarter of the thirteenth century is the most valuable and interesting.

59. THE ANGLO-LATIN SATIRICAL POETS AND EPIGRAMMATISTS OF THE TWELFTH CENTURY. Vols. I. and II. Now first collected and edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., Corresponding Member of the National Institute of France (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres). 1872.

The Poems contained in these volumes have long been known and appreciated as the best satires of the age in which their authors flourished, and were deservedly popular during the 13th and 14th centuries.

60. MATERIALS FOR A HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VII., FROM ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS PRESERVED IN THE PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., Director. 35 Parts, imperial quarto and demy quarto (1861-1863) boards. Price 4s. 6d. to 17. 1s. each Part, according to size; or, bound in 2 Vols., 18l.

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Cnut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor; the present possessor; how many hides were in the manor; how many ploughs were in demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cottars; how many serving men; how many free tenants; how many tenants in soccage; how much wood, meadow, and pasture; the number of mills and fish-ponds; what had been added or taken away from the place; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor; the present value; and how much each free man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward; who then held it; its value in the time of the late king; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly he caused it to be traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendance of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton. The fac-simile was completed in 1863.

FAC-SIMILES OF NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey. Price, each Part, with translations and notes, double foolscap folio, 16s.

Part I. (William the Conqueror to Henry VII.). 1865.

Part II. (Henry VIII. and Edward VI.). 1866.

Part III. (Mary and Elizabeth). 1867.

Part IV. (James I. to Anne). 1868.

The first Part extends from William the Conqueror to Henry VII., and contains autographs of the kings of England, as well as of many other illustrious personages famous in history, and some interesting charters, letters patent, and state papers. The second Part, for the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., consists principally of holograph letters and autographs of kings, princes, statesmen, and other persons of great historical interest, who lived during those reigns. The third Part contains similar documents for the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth, including a signed bill of Lady Jane Grey. The fourth Part concludes the series, and comprises a number of documents taken from the originals belonging to the Constable of the Tower of London; also several records illustrative of the Gunpowder Plot, and a woodcut containing portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and James VI., circulated by their adherents in England, 1580-3.
