RIT, Gannett Will Sponsor Course By Newspaper

Rochester Institute of Technology and the Gannett Rochester Newspapers will offer the first Course by Newspaper, beginning on January 13, 1974 and continuing for twenty weeks.

The course will be printed weekly in the Sunday Democrat & Chronicle and will consist of twenty (1400 - word) lectures each written by one of the nation's distinguished scholars and each dealing with some aspect of the topic, "America and the Future of Man." RIT will offer 3 - quarter hours of undergraduate credit for successful completion of the course at its regular tuition rate.

The Course by Newspaper, was originally scheduled to be published in the Democrat & Chronicle during the RIT fall quarter. Due to the newsprint shortage, it has been rescheduled for the winter quarter.

"America and the Future of Man" will examine such topics as the impact of change on society and on value systems, biological and ethical trends of advances in medicine and genetics, and the future of technology and its effects on the quality of life. The course was planned by an Academic Advisory Committee of UCSD faculty members.

Among the distinguished persons contributing material to the course are faculty members at Harvard University, Stanford University, California Institute of Technology, University of Michigan, University of Colorado, University of Chicago, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, SUNY Stony Brook, St. John's College (Annapolis) and faculty of the University of California.

Although the course is being presented nationally, it will be localized by each participating college or university to meet its specific credit requirements. RIT will offer the course for credit by requiring that each student participate

"Metro Police: Current Trends in Law Enforcement," a day - long symposium designed to explore alternative police systems, will be sponsored by RIT's School of Criminal Justice and the New York State Police Chiefs Association Friday, February 8.

The symposium will be held at the Inn on the Campus, 175 Jefferson Road, beginning at 9 a.m. It is funded by a grant from the Davenport - Hatch Foundation.

The symposium is the second in a series to be held by RIT.

The luncheon keynote speech will be given by Patrick Murphy, president of the Police Foundation and former commissioner of the New York City Police Department.

Other speakers are: Joseph Dominelli, president of the New York State Association of Police Chiefs; Bernard Simmons, deputy chief of police in Toronto, Canada; James F. Ahern, director of the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute in Westport, Conn.; Eugene Shaw, chief of police of the town of Brighton; Mark Touhey, director of Industrial Safety for Eastman Kodak Co; and William Lombard, sheriff, Monroe County.

Included in the symposium will be an exploration of the metropolitan police system recently put into effect in Toronto.

"The conference is not designed to develop an advocacy position," said John Ballard, acting director of the School of Criminal Justice, "but to explore alternative systems."

Registration and other information is available from the School of Criminal Justice at RIT, 464-2432.

American Quilts To Be Exhibited In Upcoming Bevier Gallery Show

An exhibit of American quilts and coverlets will open in the Bevier Gallery at RIT Friday evening, January 18 and continue through February 4.

The gallery, located in the James E. Booth Memorial building on the Henrietta campus, is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The exhibit, "Art Americana; Quilts and Coverlets," was organized with the intention of showing a wide variety of visually stunning quilts and coverlets from the Rochester community," Dr. Robert H. Johnston, dean of RIT's College of Fine and Applied Arts, said.

"Emphasis is on graphic patterns. Some pairs were chosen to show variations on a theme. References to contemporary abstract art in the quilts, and op art in the coverlets, reoccur throughout the exhibit," he said.

The sixty pieces in the show date from 1830 to 1920, Johnston said, and come from private collections in the area as well as the Rochester Museum and Science Center.

The show's opening reception is Friday evening, January 18 from 7 to 10 p.m. and will begin with a lecture on quilt designs by mid - west quilt authority Marsha Spark. The lecture will be in Booth Auditorium.

in two seminars, take two examinations and write a paper. Each person who enrolls in the course will have an advisor from the RIT College of Continuing Education faculty, and will have to purchase the $10 kit of materials which contains books and other supplies developed by UCSD to complement the newspaper's printed lectures. There are no prerequisites for the course, and all important information regarding registration, tuition and schedules for the course will be printed by Gannett.

Peter Fellows, manager of Community Services for Gannett Rochester Newspapers, is coordinating the course for the newspaper, and Frederick Gardner, director of General Education in RIT's College of Continuing Education, is coordinating the course for RIT.

According to Gardner, "This will be a great opportunity to expose the newspaper readership to the thinking of 20 of America's leading scholars, and those who choose to do so, will have the chance to receive college credit. We at RIT feel that it might provide the handicapped, workers with unusual hours, women and numerous other groups the chance to get their 'feet wet' in college."

SAC Graduate Publishes Guide To Living Well, Economically

Krakowski

Would you live above a bar if you worked at night?

Could you wait a few weeks after a film's been released before seeing it?

If you saw a coat you liked in someone's garbage can, would you be embarrassed about taking it and wearing it?

Lili Krakowski, SC '53, says your answers to those questions might well determine whether you have enough money to survive - - - and to do those things you really want to do.

Ms. Krakowski has written a book, "Starting Out: A guide I wish I had when I left home" (Stein and Day, Publishers), which is aimed at young people on their own for the first time. Its words of wisdom can help people of all ages to live economically.

"If you can get along with very little, you're one up on everyone else," she insists. "You have far more choices if you can get along with less. People think they need a lot as a minimum and that's not true."

Ms. Krakowski has observed that "many children from middle class homes have not been educated to live off the income they can garner from their first jobs. An endless number of young people with perfectly respectable first jobs can't live off them. It's a form of cultural deprivation. If they were parachuted into a strange environment, I'd put my money on the slum kid rather than the child from the split-level home."

Many books have preached economy to those who have just left the nest, but many, says Ms. Krakowski, have advocated "dishonest measures of economy" such as how to cheat your landlord.

Lounge To Be Reassigned

The mezzanine lounge in the College - Alumni Union, reserved during the past six months for faculty/staff use during lunch hours, will be reassigned to other groups that request its use during that time, Personnel Director Everett C. Merritt said.

Merritt said faculty-staff use of the lounge was "very infrequent."

He said any group can now reserve use of the lounge by calling the College Union reservation desk, 464-2308.

Media Resource Room Opens In RIT Library

Audio - Visual Services has opened a Media Resources Room in the first floor of the library, adjacent to the Computer Center. This room is available to students and faculty during regular library hours.

The room is staffed by student assistants and contains a wide variety of media hardware including 16mm rear-screen motion picture projectors, 8mm and super 8mm loop projectors, sound - slide units, sound - filmstrip units, cassette recorders, and record turntables.

Faculty may place instructional materials of nearly any format "on reserve" in this area for individual or small group student use. In addition all of the resources of A - V Services materials collection are available for student use in this room. This includes the film library, slide collection, library record and cassette collections and a variety of sound - filmstrip and slide - tape programs, and 8mm loop cartridges.

For further information contact Reno Antonietti, 464-2556.

Developments In Typography On Film

"Typography Today", a new presentation covering recent developments in the techniques and equipment of the typographic industry, has been produced by the International Typographic Composition Association.

The 30 - minute program, available as a 35mm color filmstrip with cassette sound, traces the evolution of typography - from pre - historic symbolism to the technology of the '70's. Along the way it touches on methods used by man in his continuing effort "to transfer thoughts and ideas from one mind to another quickly and efficiently".

"Typography Today" places in perspective all of the various tools and techniques currently available in the graphic arts industry, pointing out that "a typographer is more than a mechanic. He's also part artist . . . with a combination of knowledge, training, taste and sensitivity" needed to help in the design of graphics that meet the ever - increasing demands for high speed, quality productions of the late 20th century.

"Typography Today" is available without charge. For scheduling, contact ITCA, 2233 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007.

Starting Out

"You'll find none of that in 'Starting Out,' " she says.

"It's realistic. When one is a grown - up, one should behave like a grown - up. "

Although she says she's not encouraging life as a scavenger, she obviously enjoys citing the examples of her friends who have furnished whole apartments "by going through the streets at night and seeing what's available."

She bemoans the tendency to throw away rather than repair, and won't buy the argument that mending and darning waste valuable time.

"Should I work five hours to earn the money to buy a new so - and - so, or one hour to mend the old so - and - so?," she questions.

The biggest mistake she finds young people making, she says, is moving into a new town and finding a place to live in a hurry.

"Give yourself time to find a place to live," she recommends. "Stay with friends, at the Y.M.C.A., in a rooming house in the meantime. Decide what you're willing to sacrifice to cut down rent costs. If you're willing to give up a nice neighborhood, consider living above a bar if you work at night, or above a shop if you work during the day."

What Ms. Krakowskis' book comes down to is changing one's ideas about what one needs. The alternative, she fears, is "to become addicted to a paying job and never do the things you want to do."

She advises young people "to take a lower paying job you'll like over a higher paying job you'll like less." You can manage financially if you plan, she says.

Take your earnings, she counsels, and deduct your fixed expenses. The rest is disposable income. PLAN how you'll spend it.

Ms. Krakowski bases the book on her own experiences since she left her family of Belgian immigrants in New York in 1949 at the age of 19.

"I've lived all my adult life in the integrated working class environment of which I speak and which I highly recommend," she says.

A potter, she was in the first School for American Craftsmen class to attend RIT all four years. After her graduation, she went to England for a year, then returned to New York and taught pottery two years before deciding she wasn't a teacher.

She married and lived in Brazil for four years, and returned in 1960 to enter the publishing business. For 10 years she worked in the advertising end of publishing or the publishing end of advertising.

She quit publishing two years ago and has been writing and potting since. She and her husband, an international lawyer, live on a farm in Constableville, 40 miles north of Utica.

Ms. Krakowski is working on her next book, which will go more deeply into the problems of the alternative lifestyle, a term she says she doesn't like.

"Starting Out" is available in the RIT bookstore.

Social Security Changes

Will Hit Paychecks

If your first 1974 paycheck seems shrivelled compared to your last 1973 check, the reason is probably due to Social Security changes, Personnel Director Everett Merritt said last week.

In 1974, the employee and the employer are both required to pay a 5.85% social security tax for all 1974 earnings up to $13,200. This is an increase over the 1973 tax which applied up to $10,800 of earnings.

"We have to pay now so that we can be paid more later," Merritt said.

Students' Energy Ideas

Could Merit Cash

Students have until Jan. 21 to submit workable ideas about conserving energy and other resources on campus in a contest sponsored by the Institute Task Force on Environmental Concerns.

Cash prizes of $150, $100 and $50 will be awarded for the best ideas covering a broad range of subjects, from conservation of energy to recycling efforts.

Entries should be submitted to Robert Desmond, College of Engineering room 2203. Further questions can be directed to Desmond.

Business Prof: Finding Partner Is An Art

If you're single, separated, widowed, divorced, even legally married, but "un-attached," Dr. Andrew J. DuBrin has a prescription to help you find a partner for sex, love, companionship and fun.

His book, "The Singles Game," has been published for the first time in paperback by Books For Better Living.

Says DuBrin, "Finding a partner is an art, skill or game. My book offers some approximate guidelines or rules for increasing the odds of winning such a game."

DuBrin

DuBrin is a psychologist and a professor in the College of Business at RIT.

Although himself divorced and re-married, DuBrin says, "My book is not a thinly veiled autobiographical sketch of the first hand experiences of a lecherous male psychologist, author and professor."

However, he says he has made the effort to participate directly in most of the approaches to meeting people discussed in the book, often using a pseudonym in the process.

DuBrin and his associates - many of whom are RIT students - sifted through hundreds of interviews with and questionnaires from college students, working people, the widowed and divorced, through experiments with computer and mail order dating, investigations into singles bars, apartment houses, resorts and cruises to devise approximately 100 people - meeting strategies, tactics and approaches.

And, he believes they are needed! DuBrin speculates that "perhaps the majority of adults are at any one point looking for a new romantic involvement."

Married people should not overlook the book, he says: Many people remain attached to their present spouses or lovers simply because they fear the prospects of not being able to find a suitable replacement... "The Singles Game" is written for people seeking new relationships now or who may be doing so in the future. Very few relationships are forever."

DuBrin considers people - meeting a life process that doesn't necessarily end

con't p. 5

Partner

with marriage, although he says his book "is primarily directed to finding a relationship of some enduring nature." It's aimed, he says, at the age 25 and over crowd.

DuBrin's third book, "The Singles Game" follows "Women in Transition," an advice annual for the woman who's discontent with her role as a homemaker but doesn't want to leave her family.

DuBrin is a 1956 graduate of the former Hunter College, now the Herbert H. Lehman College of the City University of New York in the Bronx.

He received a master's degree from Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., in 1957 and a Ph.D. from Michigan State University in East Lansing in 1960.

President Miller Authors Continuing Ed Booklet

Dr. Miller has authored a new booklet entitled, "The Cooperative Extension Service: Paradoxical Servant - The Rural Precedent in Continuing Education."

The booklet is the second in the A.A. Liveright Memorial Series on Landmarks and New Horizons in Continuing Education and is published by Syracuse University's Publications in Continuing Education.

The booklet deals with cooperative extension as a landmark in education to rural areas of America.

A large segment of the booklet is given to colleges and the technology of agriculture, as well as the growth of rural technology, the impact of urban industrial society, aids to rural reform, levels of government in administration and factors in success of the cooperative extension movement.

Profs Report On Individual Instruction

Professor Frederick Gardner and Dr. David Hooten of the College of Continuing Education are co-authors of an article recently published in the International Congress of University Adult Education Journal. Entitled, "Guided Individual Study: A Viable Educational Alternative for Adults," the paper is a report of research conducted at RIT testing individualized instruction in CCE against the three criteria of acceptance by adults, perceptions by students of the student/teacher relationship, and the need for library services.
