By N. D. 3 vols. small 8vo. splendidly bound, blue morocco, richly gilt Lond. 1603-4

☞ From the excessive rarity of the above three volumes, we have been induc'd to transcribe the entire title of each, as copies are seldom found complete. ANALYSIS OF THE WORK. "FIRST TOME. The first tome sheweth three Conversions of our Countrey from Paganisme to Christian faith. The first vnder the Apostles, in the first age after Christ. The second vnder Pope Eleutherius, in the second age. The third vnder Pope Gregory the First, in the sixth age. And that the same religion was truly catholike and Romaine, and hath endured vnto our tyme. And that the Protestant Religion had neuer any beginning or progresse in England before these our Dayes."

"SECOND TOME. The second tome examineth the new Calendar-Saints sett downe by Fox in his Acts and Monuments for the first six Monethes of the yeare; and hath annexed ynto yt in the end by way of appendix, 'a Defence of a certaine relation,' sent into England, concerning a Triall made in the yeare 1600, betweene the Bishop of Eureux and Monsieur Plessis, in the presence of the King of France that now is, and his nobility, touchinge divers falsitys obiected to the said Plessis."

"THIRD TOME. The third tome discusseth the said calendar of Foxian Saints for the second six Monethes of the yeare. And hath for its adioinder in the end, 'a review of ten public disputations,' held in England vnder K. Edward and Q. Mary, about divers principall points of Religion."

This celebrated English Jesuit, ROBERT PARSONS or PERSONS, alias COOBUCK or COWBUCK, was the son of a blacksmith at Nether Stowey, near Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, where he was born in 1546, and died 1610. He published many works, as well as the "Three Conversions," under the assumed name of NICHOLAS DOLEMAN. He was a man of considerable talents, and beyond comparison the best writer of his party; his style is among the best of the Elizabethan Period. Wood relates that these volumes were all printed at St. Omer's in Flanders; which college Mr. Butler says that he founded. The reason why Parsons made use of Nicholas Doleman's name, appears from Bishop Barlow to be, because he had some dislike of him. "Doleman, he says, "was an honest seular priest, who hated such traitorous doctrines, and Father Parsons hated him, and (to make him odious) did use his name as if Doleman had been the author, when Parsons indeed made the book.—BUTLER'S Hist. of Catholics, 2 vols. 8vo.—WOOD'S Athenæ.

5— 292 BLONDELLUS (David) de Joanna Papissa Anacrisis, in 12mo. Amstel. 1657

☞ This book was first done in French by Blondell, in 1647, 8vo.—Linglet Dufresnoy's passage upon the protestant account of this she pope, is too curious to be passed over. Histoire de la Papesse Jeanne, par Jacques Lenfant, in 12mo. La Haye, 1736, 2 vols.—“The protestants, especially the English, have written more upon this subject than upon a question of real importance. But what consequence can be drawn in favour of their opinion from a fact of that nature? Of what inconvenience could it be, if by chance we have mistaken a woman for a man, and made a pope of her? Have not the English themselves had an Elizabeth and an Ann for the head of their religion? and have we reproached them with it? Mr. Jurieu thought more sensibly than usual, in considering this dispute as an affair of little importance.” For further information respecting this remarkable book, see Clement, Bib. Cur. in which there is a description, occupying nearly six pages.

¶ In this curious and rare tract, published in the early part of the Lutheran Reformation, the author, in the spirit of Christian love for their souls, advises the redoubtable Martin, and his il-legitimate wife Catherine a Bhor, that in imitation of the Prodigal Son they should repent, & that they should return to the penance and sanctity of the cloister; or that Luther should at least restore the nun to Christ her spouse, and to Mother Church.

- 529 Bulla Apostolica contra errores Martini Lutheri et eius Sequacium ib. 1520

☞ Two Bulls were published by Pope Leo against Martin Luther—the former dated 17 Kal. Julij, 1520, “qua xli. sententiae eius damnabantur, scripta eius rogo addicebantur, ipse denique, nisi exturbari ecclesia vellet, intra sexaginta dies admissa delicta confiteri, clementiamque pontificis implorare iuebatur.” But any hopes of an accommodation which might have remained, were soon dissipated by the Reformer, who declared the Pope to be Antichrist, publicly burnt the Bull and volumes of canon law, became more violent in his invectives, and rejected the idea of repentance and reconciliation. This induced the Bull of Excommunication, which was issued on the 4th of January, 1521.—MOSHEIM. Inst. Hist. Eccl. Saec. xvi. Robertson appears to confound these two, as if he had not consulted the original documents, which have been reprinted in the Bullaria.

☞ This orthodox father flourished, A. D. 374: his Works consist of Commentaries, Homilies, and Epistles; his commentaries are allegorical; his homilies or sermons, as specimens of morality, are most excellent; his epistles are monuments of great prudence and piety, and may pass for master pieces in their kind, particularly those written to the emperors. He is said, from his great eloquence, to have made a convert of St. Augustine.

☞ No Polemic, no Ecclesiastical Student, whether Protestant or Catholic, can well be without the Disputations of Cardinal Bellarmine, as on this work hinge all the controversies which have divided the Protestant and Romish Churches. The Cardinal is esteemed the best Controversial Writer of his age. No Jesuit was more reputed in his order than Cardinal Bellarmine, and no author ever defended better the cause of the Church and the Pope. Of this the Protestants were so sensible, that there is no divine of any reputation among them, who has not chosen Bellarmine's books for the subjects of his controversies.

His work contains a collection of the most remarkable transactions in the Church, from the death of Christ to his own time, with an history of the heresies and controversies touching the doctrine and discipline of the Church; and as he gives long relations of events, which he almost every where cites from the most ancient writers, after the manner of those who write annals or memoirs; and as those writers were more antient than Eusebius, and most of them have long been lost, these HISTORIANS ARE PECULIARLY VALUABLE.

☞ ST. IRENEUS, A. D. 178. One of the first Christian writers after the Apostles. He was the Disciple of St. Polycarp. This orthodox father turned his pen against the internal and domestic enemies of Christianity, by attacking the monstrous errors that had been adopted by the primitive Christians, as appears by his "*V. against Heresies," which are yet extant in a Latin translation, the Greek being all lost except the first book. These books were written against Valentine, and two of that Heresiarch's followers, named Florinus and Blastus, and are considered as one of the most precious monuments of ancient erudition, in which are many particulars concerning the life of Christ, which this father doubtlessly had learnt from his conversation with the Apostolic Father, St. Polycarp, and from other contemporaries with the Apostles. Irenæus's style is succinct, clear, and strong, but not sublime; his works contain so much learning, that Tertullian says of him "IRENÆUS OMNIUM DOCTRINARUM CURIOSISSIMUS EXPLORATOR."

 4.6 1126 VALERII MAXIMI FACTORUM ET DOCTORUM MEMORABILIVM LIBRI IX. Argent. typis Mentellianis, circa 1469

“ Edition infiniment rare, regardée, non sans fondement, comme la première de Valere Maxime : elle est imprimée a longues lignes, au nombre de 34 sur les pages qui sont entieres, et sans chiffres, signatures, et reclames. Les caracteres sont ceux qui ont servi a l'impression du Virgile du duc de la Valliere, ainsi qu'aux epitres de St. Jerome, imprimées avant l'an 1469. La place des lettres initiales est restée en blanc, pour y etre peintes. Cette edition ne referme que le texte pur de Valere Maxime ; le première livre n'est divisé qu'en six chapitres ; de maniere qu'on n'y trouve pas, comme dans celle de Petr. Schoyfler, (Mogunt. 1471.) le traite de

Hospitiis et de Simulata religione, ce qui prouve, a mon avis, sa priorité. On peut voir dans Freytag, Annal. litt. un grand nombre de variantes tres-reinarquables, extraites de cette precieuse edition, dont on peut voir la description dans Braun, tom. 1, page 12; Scemiller, tom. 1, p. 122, et dans le catalogue du cardinal de Brienne, par Laire, part. 1, page 54, no. 55, ou l'exemplaire fut vendu 870 livres" (or, thirty-eight pounds sterling.)

SANTANDER.

☞ The present copy of this scarce and valuable edition unfortunately wants the ten last leaves, and is much interlined by the hand of an ancient contributor to the Editiones cum Notis Variorum. It is however complete in other respects, and exhibits an expanse of margin worthy of the Didots and Bodonis of these later days.

dhan, cum prefatione, Arabice et Latine, old calf Oxon. 1671

☞ A work highly amusing to the Arabic student. "Tophail's Arabic Tale is written with such elegance of language, and vigour of imagination, that notwithstanding the improbability of the story it has been universally admired."—BRUCKER.

4:3 1844 De Dieu Grammatica Ling. Orient. Hebræorum, Chaldæorum, et Syrorum Lug. Bat. 1628

☞ A work of acknowledged character. De Dieu was profoundly skilled in the Syriac, Persic, Arabic, and Ethiopian languages: perhaps no man ever possessed a more consummate knowledge of those languages, or ever employed his knowledge to more useful purposes. He is deservedly ranked by Walch, "inter præstantissimos literarum sacrarum interpretes."

continui ex una duntaxat membrana, duobus axibus ligneis tornatis circumvolutus.

☞ An extremely fine Manuscript in the best preservation. The text is written in a fair character, resembling that of the Italian Jews, without points or accents, and appears to have been transcribed from a copy of great accuracy and antiquity. In the eighth verse of the fourth chap. of Genesis, (corresponding to part of the sixth portion of the first Parashah) after the clause, vajomer kain el hebcl achiju a vacant space occurs, which is also found in the best and earliest manuscripts, as well as in many printed editions. KENNICOTT describes eight, and DE ROSSI (Var. Lect. Vet. Testamenti) five MSS. presenting this peculiarity. The Samaritan, LXX. & Vulgate supply the chasm by the words Let us go into the field, which appears necessary to the sense. In making their copies of THE LAW, the Jews have adopted every precaution that can ensure the most exact and rigid correctness. Even the material on which it is to be written, the dimensions of the volume, the number of lines & columns, the nature of the ink, &c. are determined by strict rules from which no deviation is allowed. Conf. Mass. Sopherim apud Schickardi Jus Regium Hebr. cap. ij. No word whatever is to be written without looking at the prototype; hence a Talmudical writer (c. 2, Massech. Megilla) relates that R. Chananael who had a wonderful memory, being observed writing a copy of the law from mere recollection, was immediately reproved by another Rabbi.—Schickard, ubi supra. Every word must be distinctly pronounced before it is written. The name of GOD demands from the transcriber particular care and attention: before writing it the pen is to be washed, and having been again dipped in the ink, is to be first applied to completing the word preceding the name, lest if there happened to be too much ink taken up, the sacred name might be blotted; the writer then proceeds with the greatest veneration, and is not allowed to pause till he has proceeded three or four words beyond the name; inasmuch that even if a prince or king were to address him while thus engaged, he dare not answer or otherwise notice the interruption, till he had finished. The correction and revision of the copy should be made within thirty days after its completion, nor should the number of errors exceed a certain standard. See more on this sub-

The preceding collection of Bibliographical Works and Priced Catalogues is especially deserving of the attention of the Collector and the Bibliopolist. The variety and extent of the information on this interesting and curious branch of Literature, contained in the volumes now before the public, can be justly appreciated by those only who have experienced the practical value of such guides in the formation of a Library, as well as the great difficulty of meeting such books at public sales.

The first part of the book is devoted to the early history of the United States, from the discovery of the continent by Christopher Columbus in 1492 to the end of the American Revolution in 1783. This section covers the exploration of the continent, the establishment of the first colonies, and the struggle for independence from British rule.

The second part of the book deals with the period from 1783 to 1865, known as the Antebellum period. This section focuses on the development of the young nation, the growth of industry and commerce, and the deepening divide between the North and the South over the issue of slavery.

The final part of the book covers the Reconstruction era from 1865 to 1877, the period of Reconstruction from 1877 to 1900, and the Progressive Era from 1900 to 1917. These sections explore the challenges of rebuilding the South, the rise of industrial power, and the social reforms of the Progressive movement.

☞ This magnificent volume, which from the manner in which it is illustrated, may justly be designated unique, presents a picture of the Papal Court during the most interesting part of the last century. The dissensions and controversies which at that time agitated the Catholic Church, required uncommon ability and talents in the Pontiffs; accordingly even Protestants confess the superior wisdom, piety, and learning of Clement XI. Innocent XIII. Benedict XIII. Clement XII. and Benedict XIV. who successively occupied the throne of St. Peter. To reform such abuses as through lapse of time had occurred in the discipline of the Church, Benedict XIII. convened a Council in the Lateran Palace, A. D. 1725, the year after his election. The present work contains a well-written memoir of this Pope and all his Cardinals, above seventy in number; each memoir is illustrated with a finely engraved portrait in the line manner, besides which there have been inserted in this copy, a great number of original letters written with their own hand by the Cardinals of whom portraits and memoirs are given.—If, as Physiognomists assert, it be possible to form a judgment of the character and dispositions of men, from the style of their handwriting, this volume would present the finest field for such observations, the memoir, the portrait, and the autograph, would elucidate each other, and their coincidence would perhaps lay the foundation of a system. Among the Cardinals are Laurentio Corsinj, afterwards Pope Clement XII. De Noailles archbishop of Paris, and many others who rendered themselves illustrious by their works and the share they took in the great events of their times.

Such is the Manuscript Title of this Unique Collection of Broad-sides, Pamphlets poetical, historical, biographical, and laudatory, connected with the raising of the Siege of Vienna, in the year 1683, by the Poles, headed by their chivalrous king John Sobieski. It is illustrated by a number of portraits of the most distinguished Poles, Austrians and Turks who took part in that spirit-stirring event, and also by a number of autograph Manuscript Poems in honor of Sobieski. Many curious plans of the military evolutions of the siege will be examined with interest, as well as some caricatures in derision of the routed Mussulmans.
