

The Alamo City All-Stars are a professional basketball team based in San Antonio, Texas. They are a member of the American Basketball Association (ABA), one of the largest and most diversified professional sports leagues in the United States. The team was founded in 2017 and plays in the South Central Division of the ABA. It has since a competitive force within the ABA.

Contents:

1. American Basketball Association (ABA)
2. Team History
3. Head Coach Johnny Moore
4. References
5. American Basketball Association (ABA)

The American Basketball Association (ABA) was established in 1967 as a rival league to the National Basketball Association (NBA). The ABA introduced several innovative features to the game, including the three-point line and the red, white, and blue basketball. The league merged with the NBA in 1976, with four of its teams joining the NBA. In 1999, the ABA was revived as a semi-professional league, offering opportunities for talented players who may not have been able to find a spot in the NBA or other professional leagues. The league's trademark is the red, white, and blue basketball used during games.

2. Team History

The Alamo City All-Stars were founded in 2017 and have since become a competitive force in the ABA. The team has been dedicated to providing a high-quality basketball experience for its fans and players alike. Throughout its history, the Alamo City All-Stars have focused on developing local talent, made a commitment to giving back to the community, participating in various charitable events and partnering with local schools and organizations while promoting the sport of basketball in San Antonio and the surrounding area.

The Alamo City All-Stars have enjoyed several successful seasons and have established a reputation for their tenacious defense, fast-paced offense, and commitment to teamwork. The team has won multiple division titles and has consistently reached the ABA playoffs. The team also won the NBA San Antonio Pro-Am in 2019.

3. Head Coach Johnny Moore

Johnny Moore serves as the Head Coach of the Alamo City All-Stars. Born on March 25, 1958, in Altoona, Pennsylvania, Moore is a former professional basketball player and an experienced coach. He enjoyed a successful career as a point guard in the NBA, spending the majority of his time with the San Antonio Spurs. Moore was known for his excellent passing ability and defensive prowess, leading the league in assists per game during the 1981-1982 season and ranking among the NBA's all-time leaders in steals.

After retiring from professional basketball, Moore turned his attention to coaching. He gained experience at various levels, including high school, college, and professional basketball. His coaching philosophy emphasizes fundamentals, teamwork, and a strong work ethic.

Under Coach Moore's guidance, the Alamo City All-Stars have experienced significant success on the court, winning division titles and consistently reaching the playoffs. The leadership and dedication shown by Coach Moore and his assistant coaches to player development have been instrumental in shaping the team's culture and performance.

4. References

This article incorporates information from the official Alamo City All-Stars website (www.alamocityallstarsteam.com), the ABA website, realabaleague.com and the biographical information about Johnny Moore from his playing and coaching career.