2. Observations

a. In most cases enrollment figures reported to Civil Education personnel were different from those reported in April to the board of education secretariate, and both of those mentioned were found to be in error according to actual count.

b. There has been no provision for schools to report fluctuations in enrollments during the school year to the board of education.

c. Pupil accounting is so incredibily loose and inaccurate that even some principals appear not to know enrollment figures of their schools. Certainly the prefectural board of education cannot know how many children are currently under its jurisdiction.

d. Facilities Section officials stated that when allotting school lunch ingredients and other materials on a per pupil basis, if figures submitted by schools appeared high they were checked with average enrollments of past years and allottments were arbitrarily reduced accordingly. No stigma seemed to be attached to submission of erroneous or padded figures, however.

e. Discrepancies between enrollments accounted for during inspections and those reported to the secretariate ranged between twenty-eight (28) under the reported number and forty-two (42) over. Most discrepancies were too small to benefit schools which might be attempting to gain extra apportionments to any significant extent.

DECLASSIFIED E.O. 12065 SECTION 3-402/NNDG NO. 11084

f. Enrollment figures quoted to Civil Affairs personnel by principals and head teachers before head counts were made tended to be high, possibly with the hope of obtaining favorable material benefits in a distribution of goods influenced by the Occupation Forces.

3. Conclusions

a. Discrepancies discovered are due principally to loose accounting rather than deliberate padding, with the probable exception of the one upper secondary school surveyed.

b. Padding is most likely to be found in upper secondary schools according to survey results and opinions of Facilities Section and Civil Education personnel.

4. A secretariate official stated his intention to continue the investigation upon his own initiative, and that he would notify this headquarters of further results.
