THE LAW TIMES:

THE

JOURNAL AND RECORD

OF

THE LAW AND THE LAWYERS.

FROM OVEMBER 1873 TO APRIL 1874.

VOLUME LVI.

LONDON:
PUBLISHED T THE OFFICE OF THE LAW TIMES,
ELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

1874.

LONDON:
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY HORACE COX, AT THE "LAW TIMES" OFFICE, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND.

GENERAL INDEX

TO VOL. LVI.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Act of bankruptcy—Assignment, 292.

Adjudication—Creditor's debt, 366.

Agreement to transfer property—Bills of Sale Act—Registration necessary, 131.

Appeal from Registrar—Refusal to register resolutions, 78.

Application to restrain creditor from voting—Proof, 350.

Appointment of a creditor's solicitor, 240.

Bankers—Stakeholders—Costs as, 240.

Bill of Sale—
- Assignment by single partner of partnership property, 467.
- By one partner of partnership property to secure possible risk, 77.
- Consideration—Money advance and promissory note, 40.
- Stock in trade purchased since the bill—Liquidation, 39.

Chancery suit—Injunction—Examination of plaintiff in suit, 275.

Compositions—
- Abortive proceedings—Costs of proceedings—Adjudication—Bankruptcy Act 1869, s. 126, sub-sect, 11, 131.
- Default in payment—Action for orignal debt, 24.
- Non-payment—Valuation of security—Injunction. 60.
- When are the proceedings pending, 328.

Creditor and surety—Resolution to accept composition to which creditor assents—Absolute release of surety, 313.

Debt incurred by fraud—Action—Discretion of Court to restrain, 366.

Debtor's summons — Application to dismiss—Claim arising out of partnership dispute—Staying proceedings on summons without security 222.

Discharge—Examination not passed, but good dividend paid, 202.

Execution creditor for a sum under 50*l.*—Previous seizure for over 50*l.*—Injunction dissolved as to former, 274.

Execution creditor—Part payment by debtor to sheriff when in possession—Right of trustee to securities handed to sheriff, 293.

Execution creditor—Seizure by—Power of court over sheriff—Fraudulent conveyance, 241.

Execution creditor under 50*l.*—Reduction of proof and dissolution of injunction, 403.

"Family" assignments—Advance—Fraud—Costs, 76.

Fraudulent Bankrupt—Payment of creditor and costs of prosecution out of the estate, 367.

Fraudulent preference, 131.

Fresh evidence—Re-hearing—Surprise, 329.

Friendly Society—Right to payment out of assets of insolvent officer in his hands by virtue of his office, 386.

Garnishee order (absolute)—A "charge" on debt attached, 466.

Guarantee of payment of bills—Bank having the guarantee parting with the bills—No right to prove against estate of bankrupt guarantor, 150.

Infants—Liability to be made bankrupts, 294.

Liquidation—
- Appointment of receivers—Interim injunction—Refusal of high sheriff to withdraw—Motion to commit for contempt, 274.
- Arrangement by debtor to re-purchase estate from trustee—Rights of trustees against third parties—Directions of Court, 9.
- Creditor present, but not voting, 92.
- Leave to proceed de novo on petition—Discrepancy between debtor's statement and proofs, 313.
- Stock-in-trade acquired by debtor after filing petition, the property of the trustee, 222.

Liquidator—His right to prove and vote—Production of bills of exchange on proof, 150, 466.

Meeting of creditors—Notice necessary to be given—Sect. 28 B. A. 1869, 132.

Mortgage obtained by fraud—Claim to follow money in hands of mortgagor, and to preserve lien on mortgaged estate, 168.

Order and disposition—Goods not in reputed ownership of vendor where it is custom of the trade to leave them with him, 293.

Order and disposition—Goods in possession of neutral third parties—Transfer but no notice of change of ownership, 328.

Order and disposition—Reputed ownership of hired furniture, 367.

Partnership—
- Admission of proof of partner of debtor, 466.
- Death of partners—Distribution of property—Bankruptcy Act 1869, 349.
- Decease of partner—Property of old firm and of surviving partners, 366.
- Proof of debt by a partner against the estate of his late partner, 132.
- Sale of property of bankrupt partner—Alleged fraudulent scheme of other partners to obtain the property at an undervalue—Jurisdiction, 149.

Receiver—Payment by to particular creditor—Creditor ordered to refund to trustee, 168.

Receiver's costs—Subsequent bankruptcy—Liability of trustee, 203.

Rejection of proof, 328.

Resolutions, registration of—Meetings of creditors—Ejecting proxy, 293.

Sale by trader debtor for value—No transfer—Secret reservation—Subsequent creditors, 113.

Secured Creditor—
- Production of securities, 328.
- Proof, 385.
- Sum paid into Court to abide event of action—Does not create the plaintiff a secured creditor, 76.

Sheriff—Seizing under execution—Not entitled to deduct creditor's costs on handing proceeds to trustee, 467.

Solicitor of bankrupt—His right to recover on security given for his costs before filing of petition against third parties, 202.

Solicitor's costs—Right to prove for, 257.

Stoppage in transitu—Delivery of goods at railway terminus—Delivery of bills of exchange, 77.

Stoppage in transitu—Remittance on general account, 40.

Surety of bankrupt debtor—Right on payment of debt to benefit of creditor's proof, 220.

Wife's allowance under separation deed—Proof, 443.

Written orders to debtor—"Charges" under ss. 12 and 16, 466.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

Administration of Oaths, The, 445.
Arbitration Clauses in Legal Documents and the Profession, 388.
Articled Clerks, 152, 445.
Articled Clerk's Notices, 115.
Articles of Clerkship, 152.
Assizes, the—Judges and Solicitors, 444.
Attorneys and Solicitors, 170, 242.
Attorneys' and Solicitors' Bill, The, 468.
Bankruptcy Rules, 445.
Beall v. Smith, 134, 152, 223.
Bills of Sale Act 1874, 443.
Charges of the Incorporated Law Society, The, 134.
Christmas Appeal, A, 152, 223.
City of London Court, The, 295.
Clerks of the Peace at Petty Sessions, 424.
Clerks to Attorneys, 468.
Commissions for Oaths in Common Law, 78.
Copyright in Photographs, 388.
County Court Committals, 468.
County Court Justice, 206.
County Courts, 351.
Distinction at the Final Examination, 445.
Hats off! 206.
Hilary Final Examination, 333.
Infant Bankrupts, 333.
Interests of the Profession, The, 8, 42.
Justices' Clerks, 444.
Land Transfer Bill, The, 445.
Law Agents, 42.
Law Amendment and Law Publications, 8.
Leases of the London Corporations, 369.
Legal Education—Gray's Inn—Calls to the bar, 242.
Legal Practitioners' Act 1874, The, 387.
Legal Practitioners' Society, 61, 223, 369, 404, 445.
Legal Practitioners' Society—Unqualified Practitioners, 367.
Literary Quotations, 170.
Lodgers' Goods Protection Act, The, 424.
Occleston, Re, 333.
Officials under the Land Transfer Bill, 444.
Our Invaders, 94, 206, 351, 404.
Our Invaders—Bankruptcy Accountants, 224.
Practice in the Colonies, 42.
Profession, The, 186.
Prosecution of Bankrupts, The, 388.
Reading for the Final Examination, 468.
Red Tape in the Chancery Pay office, 152.
Rejected Ballot Papers, 333.
Repeal of Attorneys' Certificate Duty, 296, 315.
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices, 61.
Security for Costs, 296.
Statutory Legislation, 468.
Succession Duty Act, 60.
Tax on Solicitors, The, 404.
Town Clerks as Political Agents, 468.
Unqualified Persons, 405.
Voting for Guardians of the Poor, 275.
Working of the Ballot, The, 295, 315.
Working of Tribunals of Commerce, The, 444.

COUNTY COURT DECISIONS AND PROCEEDINGS.

Accountants' charges, 441.
Action—Defence of Liquidation—Informal resolution—Application to restrain, 166.
Administrators, Transactions with, 38.
ADMIRALTY—
Barge—Jurisdiction—Costs, 76.
Necessaries, 239.
Necessaries—Pilotage, 348.
Agreement—Stamp—Sufficiency, 239.
Bank cheque—Action to recover the value of, 128.
Blackburn, Mr. Justice, and the Judge of the Cambridge County Court, 465.
CARRIAGE OF GOODS—
Goods sent at Owner's risk, 383.
Horse—Consignee not ready to receive—Right of Carriers, 255.
Liability, 384.
Non-delivery of goods, 167.
Owner's risk—Delay, 441.
CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS—
Luggage—Delay—Damages—Loss off booking company's line, 292
Passenger's luggage—Hamper of provisions, 292.
Passenger's luggage—Lost at station—Liability, 167.
Personal luggage, 89.
Personal luggage—Samples or patterns, 291.
Punctuality, 23, 147, 148, 220, 421, 442, 465.
Railway Companies agents for one another—Goods—Loss—Liability, 442.
Charter-party—Demurrage—Civil commotion in foreign state, 112.
Chattel—Ownership—Regaining possession, 91.
Consequential damages—Too remote, 383.
County Courts and Courts of Record, 384.
Damages to furnished house—Valuation, 383.
EJECTMENT—
Estoppel, 221.
Possession—Evidence, 59.
Suspicious deed—New trial—Costs, 129.
EQUITY—
Administration suit—Restraining creditor's action, 255.
Equitable mortgage, 327.
In County Courts, 255.
Specific performance—Agreement to purchase cottages, 129.
FRIENDLY SOCIETY—
Death of indebted treasurer—Liability of executors and sureties, 421.
Foresters' Court ordering a sale of mortgaged property, 23.
Husband and wife living apart—Revocation of wife's authority, 239.
Husband and wife—Wife's agency, 128.
INTERPLEADER—
Costs in, 39.
County Court Act 1867, s. 31, 385.
Married Women's Property Act, 1870, 58.
Judicature Commission and the County Courts, The 90.
Lease—Construction—Reservation, or grant of sporting to lessor, 312.
MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACT—
Liability of married woman to be sued, 188.
Wife's separate property, 167.
Measure of damages—Lord Campbell's Act, 422.
Minor, Liability of, 238.
New trial, Application for—One of the jury a friend of a party—Costs, 129.
New Trial, Application for—Railway Company—Negligence, 76.
Piecework—Materials—Liability of employer, 347.
Railway Company—Liability to maintain fences, 201.
Railway—Obstructing a level crossing, 312.
Russell, Q.C., Transfer of Mr., 382.
Sale of goods—Statute of Frauds, 239.
Setting aside judgment obtained by default under County Court Act 1867, s. 2, 274.
Sheriff's fees—Action against attorney for, 128.
Solicitor and client, agreement between—Set-off, 148
Surety of separate creditor discharged by substitution of joint liability—Agreement for substitution—Evidence, 311.
Tithes—Covenant running with the land—Right of assignee, 349.
Trade fixtures—Purchase—Removal, 58.
Turnpike road—Negligence of trustees—Liability, 130.
Will—Construction—Vesting of legacy, 40.
Witness—Liability of attorney for expenses of, 39.

LAW LIBRARY.

Abdy and Walker's Gaius, and Rules of Ulpian, 377.
Andrews's Manual of the Laws and Courts of the United States, 143.
Arnould's Memoir of Lord Denman, 142.
Cabinet Lawyer, 249.
Carson's Shelford's Real Property Statutes, 231.
Chambers's Digest of the Laws relating to Public Health, 394.
City Press City of London Directory, The, 285.
Crockford's Clerical Directory, 395.
Crump's Theory of Stock Exchange Speculation, 359.
Currie's Indian Law Examination Manual, 160.
Dowell's Income Tax Laws, 196.
Finch's Pursuit of Truth, 34.
Gibbons's and Nathan's County Court Equity, 305.
Hadley's Introduction to Roman Law, 143.
Hardcastle's Bushby's Manual of the Practice of Elections, 249.
Hardcastle's Election Petitions, 305.
Jordan's Joint Stock Company's Handy Book, 5.
Kenyon, Life of Lord, 142.
Knight's Government Directory, 213.
Law Magazine, 177.

Lawyer's Companion and Diary, 84.
Letts's Diaries, 160.
May's Law of Insurance, 304.
Michael, Corfield, and Wanlyn's Public Health Manual, 196.
Notcutt's Factory and Workshop Acts, 395.
Owen's Elementary Education Act, 305.
Paterson's Treatise on Fishery Laws, 5.
Preston's Supreme Court of Judicature Act of 1873, 84.
Rattigan's Roman Law of Persons, 143.
Rawlinson on Instructions for Wills, 432.
Revised Statutes, 87.
Spilbury's Book of Lincoln's Inn, 177.
Stephen's New Commentaries on the Laws of England, 231.
Washburn's Treatise on Easements and Servitudes, 395.
Winslow's Manual of Lunacy, 143.
Yeatman's History of the Common Law of Great Britain and Gaul, 377.

LEADING ARTICLES.

Acceptances against Consignments, 30.
Adjournment of Criminal Trials, 49.
Adjustments between Tenants for Life, and Remaindermen, 247.
Admiralty Jurisdiction—Damage to Cargo, 229.
American Criticism on the English Bar, 413.
American Opinion upon the Operation of the Judicature Act, 248.
Arbitrary Powers of Public Bodies, The, 375.
Assignments of Choses in Action before and after Insolvency, 229.
Bankruptcy Jurisdiction, 412.
Bankruptcy, The Work in the Courts of, 2.
Baron Martin, 173.
Bench and Bar in Ireland, The, 177.
Board of Trade Inquiries, 303.
Capture of the Virginius, The, 69.
Charity Commissioners' Report and the Charity Trustees' Incorporation Act 1872, The, 452.
Companies and their Shareholders, 452.
Contracts by Corporations and their Agents, 174.
Contracts by Married Women affecting Real Estate, 87.
Conversion—Essential Elements, 359.
Debenture Bonds and Promissory Notes, 16.
Decisions under the Licensing Acts, 38.
Duties Payable by Reason of Death, 105, 139, 157, 193, 212.
Election Petitions, The coming, 266.
English and Amerian Law, as relating to Stipulations by Carriers, 159.
Estates of Partners in Bankruptcy, The, 85, 103, 123.
False Representation by Agents, 432.
Felony by Carriers' Servants, 394.
Functions of the Railway Commissioners, The, 393.
Future of Legal Education, The, 121.
Gifts to Illegitimate Children, 230.
Gifts to Illegitimate or Reputed Children, 264.
Husband and Wife as Contracting Parties, 158.
Illegal consideration: The Position of a Particeps Criminis, 50.
Imprisonment for Debt in County Courts, 430.
Indorsement of Sales, &c., upon Deeds, 283.
Inferior Courts and the Profession, 450.
Judicial Statistics for 1872, The, 19, 51.
Knowledge by a Purchaser of Tenancies or Charges, as Affecting his Right to Compensation, 358.
Land Title and Transfer Bill, 431, 451.
Law of Alluvion in England and in India, The, 285, 323.
Legal Aspect of the Railway Passenger, The, 340.
Legal Aspects of the Tichborne Case, 357.
Liabilities of Husbands for Debts contracted by their Wives, The, 194.
Liabilities of Insurance Agents, The, 392.
Liabilities of Solicitors for Improper Suits, The, 141.
Liability of an Execution Creditor to Refund, The, 321.
Liability of Infants to Bankruptcy, The, 340.
Liability of Railway Companies for Unpunctuality, The, 68.
Liability under the Mines Regulation Act 1872, 283.
Libels in Newspapers, 85.
Licence and the Punishment of Counsel, The, 320.
Limited Rights of Way, 121.
Lord Chancellor and the County Courts, The New, 302.
Lord Justice Christian on Irish Appeals, 330.
Married Women—Their General Engagements and Separate Estate, 4.
Means of Knowledge and Representations as Affecting Contracts, 210.
Non-Registration of Mortgages including Fixtures, The, 246.
On the Valuation of Annuities and Future and Contingent Debts and Liabilities in Bankruptcy, 211.
Our Jury System, 410.
Parol Evidence of Collateral Agreements, 49.
Prospects of Solicitors, The, 453.
The Recent Bankruptcy Decisions, 303.
Relevancy of Evidence in Criminal Cases, 189, 176.
Rescission of Contracts of Sale of Goods, The, 248.
Sales by Trustees, 192.
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices, 3, 18, 32, 50, 284, 322, 341, 375.
Separation Deeds and Divorce, 175.
Some Bankruptcy Decisions, 66.
Suggestions for Amending the Practice Relating to Stop Orders, 18.
Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, The, 2, 17, 31, 67, 122.
Third Report of the Judicature Commission, The, 411.
Title to and Transfer of Land, 86.
Transfer of Company Shares to paupers, The, 68.
Trustees and the Commutation of East India Stock, 193.
What is a Valid Voluntary Settlement of a Chose in Action? 104.
When are Judgments Charges on Land? 376.
Working of the Ballot, The, 265.
Year 1873, The, 156.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

Alexander, A. M., 298
Anderton, H. L., 171
Armstrong, B. J., 225
Ayrton, E. N., 134
Bamforth, J., 243
Bartley, H. J., 96
Bell, H. G., 225
Berkeley, R. J., 135
Blencowe, R. W., 259
Bodkin, Sir W. H., 406
Bovill, Sir W., 27
Branson, T., 97
Browne, T. B., 406
Chandos-Pole, E. S., 134
Colonsay, Lord, 259
Eales, C. T., 335
Eden, Sir W., Bart., 11
Fearon, John, P., 97
Gardner, H., 298
Grocott, J. C., 335
Haddan, T. H., 44
Haly, W. T., 243
Hargreaves, J., 207
Harrison, Richard, 171
Hollist, H., 298
Hutchison, G., 353
Jenkins, W., 298
Johnstone, Hon. J. W., 225
Langdon, A., 371
Leadbitter, Thomas, 260
Lingen, H., 243
Lloyd, H., 406
Macafee, D. L., 353
Macandrew, J., 406
Maclean, D., 406
Marshall, W. O., 44
Merivale, H., 317
Mills, W., 80
Monk, J., 260
O'Grady, William De Courcy, 170
Oke, G. C., 207, 225
Pigot, Chief Baron, 171
Poynder, Thomas Henry Allen, 96
Raines, W., 259
Raw, J., 260
Rees, W., 406
Richards, R. M., 44
Rickards, R. H., 207
Rose, The Hon. Sir G., 115
Sandes, F. C., 446
Sandys, W., 335
Schalch, A., 298
Scott, W. C., 353
Sharp, J. A., 116
Smith, J. C., 371
Southee, H. R., 135
Stone, S., 279, 298
Sumner, C., 389
Thornton, W. T., 446
Traill, J., 10
Veitch, J., 171.
Walford, A. C., 27
Waller, E., 116
Weall, W., 389
Whitaker, A. H., 80
Wickens, Vice-Chancellor, 11
Wilde, W. A., 298
Winterbotham, Henry Selfe Page, 135
Woodthorpe, F., 171
Wordsworth, C., 335

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

Action against Mr. Plimsoll, 398
Attorney and Solicitors' Bill, 397, 433
Ballot Act, The, 398
Benefit Building Societies, 397
Bills of Sale Act Amendment Bill, 398
Committal of Mr. Whalley, The, 398, 399
Conjugal Rights (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill, 455
County Constables (Scotland), 398
Gas Companies, 397
Hypothec, &c. (Scotland), 378
Illegal Practices in the Church, 397
Imprisonment for Debt Bill, 433, 454
Infanticide Bill, 433
Innkeepers' liabilities, 398
Irish Grand Jury System, The, 454
Judicature Act, The, 454
Juries Bill, 454
Land Titles and Transfer Bill, 415, 433, 455
Married Women's Property Act (1870) Amendment Bill, 433
Middlesex Sessions Bill, 398
New Courts of Justice, 398
Offences against the Person Bill, 433
Public Prosecutors, 454
Real Property Limitation Bill, 414
Registration of Voters (Ireland), 433
Returning Officers' charges, 433
Sale and transfer of land, 378
Transfer and title of land, 395
Tribunals of commerce, 454
Weights and measures, 398

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

Accused persons in Coroners' Courts, 35, 235
Alehouse licences, 215
Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1873, The, 236
Bonâ fide travellers—Licensing Act, 235
Bodkin, Death of Sir William, 402
Chief Clerk to the Lord Mayor, 309
Discretionary power of fixing punishment in criminal cases, 273
Extradition—Evidence, 56
Gaming in a licensed house—Licensing Act, 1872, 74
Inclosure — Evidence — Certificates as to making road, 199
Judges at the Middlesex Sessions, 365
Licensing Act, 1872, sect. 12, The, 108
Licensing Act 1872, The—Criminal Responsibility of Licensed Persons for Offences Committed in their Absence by Servants, Agents, &c., 272
Licensing Laws, The, 109
London Gas Act, 1868, The City of—Revision of price—Operation of award of commissioners, 37
Magistrates' clerk's fees, 180
Masters and Servants Act—Shoemakers, 327
Masters and Servants Act, The, 146
Practice under the Licensing Act, 1872, 56
Rape—Complaint by prosecutrix admissible in evidence, 127
Stealing as a bailee, 365

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Acknowledgment—Married women, 61
Admission of attorneys, 405
Admission to Final Examination, 134
Agents and debt collectors, 8
Agreement for weekly tenancy—Stamps, 78
Allotment of stock, 134
Alteration of signature by holder—Right of action—Promissory note, 334
Apparent possession, 257
Articled clerk—Books, &c., 334
Articles, 42
Assignment of leaseholds (1000 years)—Intestacy, 334
Assignment of term, 369
Ballot Act—Personation, 316
Bankruptcy—Practice in County Courts, 351
Bankruptcy Act 1869, the, 223
Bill of costs—Partner, 78
Books, &c.—Articled clerk, 334
Case in bankruptcy wanted, 170
Case wanted, 43
Cheque—Indorsement, 78
Cheque—Supposed swindle, 61
Club, 405
Commissioner, 61
Contract—Debt—Running accounts, &c., 8
Conveyance, 61
Conveyance—Liquidating debtor, 369
Conveyance—Stamp, 115
Conveyance—Tenants in common—Marriage, 405
Conveyancing, 42
Conveyancing—Habendum, 334
Copyhold practice, 206
Coroner's Law, 352
County Court—Equity—Fees, 43
County Court—Lists, 242
County Court practice, 316
County Court—Remitted action, 134
Covenant for production of deeds and indemnity of vendor against liability under former covenant—Practice, 134
Creditor—Proof—Liquidation, 61
Custody of infant, 79
Debt—Running accounts, &c.—Contract, 8
Devise—Words of revocation, 61
Dog trespassing, 468
Duty—Legatee, 134
Easement, 134
Education Act 1871, and Amendment Acts, 61
Ejectment, 25
Ejectment by mortgagee, 334
Election petitions, 388
Equity—Fees—County Court, 43
Execution by devisee—Trusts, 242
Expenses for keep of dogs, 468
Fee for search, 134
Fees—County Court—Equity, 43
Final Examination, 94
Gas Works Clauses Act, Local Authority under the, 8
Goods, sale of—Statute of Frauds, 42
Habendum—Conveyancing, 334
Indorsement—Cheque, 78
Infant, custody of, 79
Innkeeper—Loss of property—Negligence, 43
Interest in land, 25
Intestacy—Assignment of leasehold (1000 years), 334
Investment—Trustees, 79
Joint tenancy, 79
Jurisdiction—Lord Mayor's Court, 79
Justices, qualification of, 316
Landlord and tenant, 334
Landlord and tenant—Rent, 186
Law of banking, 468
Legacy duty, 42
Legacy duty—Release of debt by will, 8
Legatee—Duty, 134
Lessors under marriage settlement, 43
Liquidating debtor—Conveyance, 369
Liquidation—Creditor—Proof, 61
Lists—County Courts, 242
Local authority under the Gasworks Clauses Act, 8
Lord Mayor's Court—Jurisdiction, 79
Loss of property—Negligence—Innkeeper, 43
Magistrates' clerk, partner of, 334
Marriage—Conveyance—Tenants in common, 405
Marriage settlement, lessors under, 43
Married woman—Acknowledgment, 61
Married Women's Property Act, 170
Mortgagee, ejectment by, 334
Mortgagee suing mortgagor's tenant for rent, 207
Mortgage—Stamp, 61
Negligence, 353
Negligence—Innkeeper—Loss of property, 43
Notice to quit, 8
Not proven, 42
Partner—Bill of costs, 78
Partner of magistrates' clerk, 334
Partnership, 170
Personation—Ballot Act, 316
Poor Law, 42
Power, 42
Powers of administratrix, 296
Practice—Covenant for production of deeds and indemnity of vendor against liability under former covenant, 134
Practice in County Courts—Bankruptcy, 351
Practice in the colonies, 8
Preliminary examination and dispensing order, 257
Probate duty, 351
Procedure, 170
Promissory note—Alteration of signature by holder—Right of action, 334

Proof—Liquidation—Creditor, 61
Qualification of justices, 316
Railway—Trespass, 61
Release or debt by will—Legacy duty, 8
Remitted action—County Court, 134
Rent—Landlord and tenant, 186
Repudiation of bet, 43
Right of action, 170
Right of action—Promissory note—Alteration of signature by holder, 334
Running accounts, &c.—Contract—Debt, 8
Sale of goods—Statute of frauds, 42
Satisfied mortgage term, 334
School Board accounts, 333
Seal, 296
Settlement of furniture, 351
Shop window, 445
Solicitor's accounts, 352
Stamp, 42, 388
Stamp—Conveyance, 115
Stamp—Mortgage, 61
Stamps—Agreement for weekly tenancy, 78
Succession Duty Act, 8
Supposed swindle—Cheque, 61
Tenants in common—Marriage—Conveyance, 405
Ten years' clerk, 269
The Tippling Act, 43
Tithe rentcharge, 352
Trespass, 269
Trespass—Railway, 61
Trustee and cestuis que trust, 352
Trustees—Investment, 79
Will and codicil, 61
Winding-up, 445
Words of revocation—Devise, 61

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

NAMES OF CASES.

Adams v. North British Railway Company, 20
Imperial Land Company of Marseilles, The, v. Masterman, 20
Matlock Old Bath Hydropathic Company, re The (Case of The Manchester Finance Corporation), 20

SUBJECTS OF CASES.

Company—Winding-up—Contributory—Allotment of shares in satisfaction of debt, 20
Practice—Affidavit of documents, 20
Patent—Agency—Royalty—Injunction, 20

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Ackrell, H. W., 279
Allen, W., 171
Barne, G. H., 371
Brook, W. B., 171
Burridge, W., 153
Carr, A., 353
Collins, H. W., 298
Cooke, F. D., 317
Duffield, W. W., 353
Ford, C., 243
Ford, D. M., 116
Ford, T. T., 371
Gilbertson, W., 225
Gould, W., 171
Greenfield, B. E., 188
Hooper, P., 279
Jackaman, S. B., 153
Janman, T., 469
Jaquet, W., 116
Jehn, R., 335
King, T., 135
Leckie, P., 116
Leigh, R., 243
Litchfield, R. W., 188
Morgan, F., 469
Phillips, G., 116, 371
Pickett, H., 353
Potts, E. B., 298
Reed, H., 298
Robins, H. E., 335
Smale, J., 371
Snowden, F., 116, 371
Stokes, C. W. R., 426
Tapley, R. L., 426
Tromp, B. H., 98

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

Accountants preparing deeds, &c., 125
Action against an attorney—Award—Moving to set aside—Practice, 252
Affidavits, 72
Agencies, 72
Americanism in England, 270
Applications against attorneys, 54
Apportionment Act, The—Construction of will made before, 214
Articled clerk—Employment as vestry clerk, 70
Articled clerk, re An, 198
Articled clerks and the Judicature Act, 125
Articled clerks holding office, 107
Articles, 125
Attachments in the Lord Mayor's Court, 363
Attorneys' and Solicitors' Bill, 401
Attorneys' certificates, 290
Attorneys' Protection Bill, 439
Beall v. Smith, 233
Bills of Sale Act (1854) Amendment Bill, 419
Branches, The two, 199
Clerks as advocates, 199
Commissions to administer oaths, 22
Contempt of court—Fictitious document, 162
Contract of sale—Memorandum—Name of vendor omitted—Statute of frauds, 325
County Court equity jurisprudence—Value of property exceeding 500*l.*, 233
Debtors' Act, Practice under, 438
Debtors' Act (Ireland) 1872—Decree mis-stating date when debt incurred—Alteration of decree without sanction of chairman—Habeas Corpus—Jurisdiction—Discharge of debtor from custody, 251
Debtors' Act (Ireland) 1872—Non-payment of money due by a solicitor to client, 401
Decisions affecting service under articles, 70
Demurrer—Suit for injunction—Breach of contract, 35
Examination of witnesses abroad—Commission to foreign court, 124
Final examination, 72
Funeral of the late Mr. J. C. Grocott, 325
Incorporated Law Society, 6
Irish affidavits, 162
Judicature Commission—Third report of the Commissioners, 418
Leases of the London corporations, 363
Legal Practitioners' Bill, 1874—Attorneys and Solicitors' Bill, 1874, 419
Legal Practitioners' Society, 199
Legal Profession, The, 460
Managing clerks as advocates, 439
Mansion House Police Court, 460
Marrried Women's Property Act, 289, 307
Mortgage—Redemption—Statute of limitations, 54
Old parchment, 290
Organisation among solicitors, 71
Our invaders, 107, 179
Power of appointment—Doctrine of cy près applicable, 36
Power of appointment of stock—Valid appointment, 35
Practice—Security for costs—Jurisdiction—Judgment Extension Act, 1868, 401
Privilege—Bill of costs, 251
Procedure in foreign courts—Commissions and letters rogatory, 198
Qualification of special jurors, The, 307
Reform of the legal profession, The, 419
Rights of judgment creditors, 362
Rules of practice and procedure to be framed under the Judicature Act, 1873, 269
Rules of practice and procedure under the Judicature Act, 287
Sale of practices, 214
Security for costs—Jurisdiction—Judgment Extension Act, 460
Solicitor and client—Writ of fi. fa. issued against good faith—Process, 53
Solicitors and the Judicature Act, 162
Specific appropriation, 363
Spurious County Court notices, 125
Supreme Court of Judicature Act sections 64, 65, 198
Two model actions at law, 89
Unqualified practitioners, 55, 214, 419, 439
Will—Construction—Illegitimate children, 145

THE LAW TIMES,

THE JOURNAL OF THE LAW AND THE LAWYERS.

FROM NOVEMBER 1873 TO APRIL 1874.

VOLUME LVI.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.

All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.

Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.

Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.

Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

PEARSON v. THE COMMERCIAL UNION ASSURANCE COMPANY—
Policy of insurance against fire—Construction—Vessel lying in docks, with liberty to go into dry dock..... 279

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

LACY v. HILL; LENEY v. HILL (SCRIMGEOUR'S CLAIM)—
Stock Exchange—Closing account on insolvency of principal—Principal and agent..... 281

MORLEY v. WHITE—
Plea that defendant is not executor—Administration suit..... 282

HUNTER v. CHESHIRE—
Will—Construction—Legatee—Substitutionary gift to children..... 283

CHADWICK v. CHADWICK—
Practice—Revivor—Bill dismissed—Petition of appeal..... 284

SHERRATT v. MOUNTFORD—
Will—Custom—Gift to testator's nephews and nieces..... 284

V.C MALINS' COURT.

DAVIES v. FOWLER—
Will—Construction—Specific legacy..... 285

Re KING'S LEASEHOLD ESTATES—
Landlord and tenant—Leasehold interest—Yearly tenancy..... 286

WHITEHEAD v. WHITEHEAD—
Specific agency—Dividend—Apportionment Act 1870..... 289

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

THOMAS v. SYLVESTER AND OTHERS—
Rentcharge in fee—Debt—Real action..... 290

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

WAIT v. STALLIBRASS—
Vendor and Purchaser—Conditions of sale—Delivery of abstract..... 293

GRAY (Executors, &c.) v. FOWLER—
Vendor and purchaser—Contract for sale of real property—Conditions of sale..... 297

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

THE CITY OF BRUSSELS—
Taxation of Costs—Outport charges—Agent not attorney or proctor..... 312

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE ARBITRATION.

DOMAN'S CASE; SULIVAN'S CASE—
Company—Winding-up—Contributory—Amalgamation of companies..... 133

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS 1

LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week..... 1
The Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873... 2
The Work in the Courts of Bankruptcy... 2
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices..... 3
Married Women—Their General Engagements and Separate Estate..... 4

LAW LIBRARY..... 5

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions..... 6
Topics of the Week..... 6
Incorporated Law Society..... 6
List of Gentlemen Applying to be Admitted..... 6
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England..... 7
Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts..... 7
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35..... 7

LEGAL NEWS:—
Imprisonment for Debt..... 8

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION..... 8

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE..... 8

LAW SOCIETIES:—
Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association..... 9
Solicitors' Benevolent Association..... 10
Articled Clerks' Society..... 10
Bristol Articled Clerks' Debating Society 10

LEGAL OBITUARY..... 10

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Sittings and Cause List for Michaelmas Term 1873..... 11

THE GAZETTES..... 13

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS..... 14

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Acts seem to have worked well, and to have conduced to the settlement of proceedings outside the legal tribunal. In 1872, 354 suits were entered, and 141 vessels arrested, but only 111 final decrees made. In forty-six cases the Judge was assisted by nautical assessors, and the total amount claimed was £35,536. The amount of attorneys' costs allowed was £1448. The amount of fees paid to the court fund was £588; to the registrar, £563; and to the high bailiff, £308. There were fifty-six suits pending at the beginning of the year, but it is believed that a large number of these have been settled. There have been ten appeals, two warrants of execution have been issued, £176 have been realised, and £24 incurred as costs of sale.

WE give elsewhere an obituary notice of Sir JOHN WICKENS, who died last Thursday week. He had been a Vice-Chancellor for a comparatively short time, but during that time he gained a reputation for capacity which his career at the Bar led the Profession to expect. We learn from practitioners in his court that as a Judge he was very strong, and by his great courtesy made himself popular, not only with the Bar, but with all who had to transact business with him in chambers.

THE following are, as we are informed, the circumstances attending the recent petition for the winding-up of the Law Property Assurance Society. Having its policies largely cross assured in the European and Albert Offices, their failure necessarily involved the society in very serious losses, and determined the directors to take no more new business, and merely to work out the existing policies. Upon this a petition was presented on the ground that the society had ceased to carry on business. As a winding-up would be attended with ruinous loss and delay to their policyholders, the directors felt it to be their duty to resist the application, and the petition was ultimately dismissed on condition that the directors should, with all diligence, endeavour to retrieve the disastrous condition into which the society had been plunged by circumstances they could not control. This they are now doing, with what success remains to be seen.

FROM inquiries we have made we believe it to be the intention of Government to leave vacant the Vice-Chancellorship recently filled by Sir JOHN WICKENS. The work of the court, it is reported, is to be transacted by the LORD CHANCELLOR until the sitting of Parliament, when his Lordship will be wanted in the House of Lords. We need hardly say that by the adoption of this course the reasonable expectations of the Bar are disappointed, and our highest judicial functionary is placed in an anomalous position. The rage for economy is too strong to allow us to entertain the hope that the report of this arrangement is unfounded. Lord SELBORNE'S eminent capacity for the work of a Judge of first instance is beyond question, but the combination of two offices in a single individual is generally inconvenient. Perhaps, however, with a Prime Minister who is also Chancellor of the Exchequer, and a Lord Chancellor who is also a Vice-Chancellor, we shall be able to devote sufficient funds for the proper conduct of prosecutions at the assizes. An economy in one direction ought certainly to produce some corresponding improvement in the same department.

A COMPLAINT against a railway company refusing to forward coal from the pit's mouth for a private consumer is what might be looked for in the existing state of things on the coal market; but that the public are powerless as against the companies is sufficiently plain. The company, however, concerning which a correspondent writes to the Times, has based its refusal on a very unpopular ground, namely, that to carry for private persons would give offence to the colliery owners. Had they simply declined to carry coals for a private individual they would have been perfectly safe in giving no reasons. It has been twice held that neither at common law nor under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act is a railway company bound to carry coal even for coal merchants, and that it is quite open to such company to carry only for colliery owners. Of course if a company professes to carry coal generally they will not be able to select the individuals for whom they will carry. They may elect to carry for a particular class, and to carry only a particular kind of goods, and, having done so, are not compellable to go beyond their undertaking. This, perhaps, is one more very forcible argument in favour of the purchase of railways by the State.

THE Judicial Statistics for 1782 give us the following results of the equity business transacted in the County Courts: Total number of equitable suits or proceedings, 683; suits for the administration of estates, 225; for the execution of trusts, 27; for foreclosure or redemption, or for enforcing any charge or lien, 96; for specific performance, 89; for delivery up or cancelling any agreement for sale or purchase, 5: for the dissolution or winding-up of a partnership, 55. The number of notices or petitions filed, were as follows: For the appointment or removal of trustees, 24; for any other purpose under Trustee Acts, 54; for the maintenance or advancement of infants, 6; for partition, 21; for injunctions, 30.

Trustees availed themselves of sect. 24 of the Act of 1867 in 51 instances. The total amount involved in these proceedings was £108,491; and the amount of attorneys' costs allowed was £5199. The amount of the fees paid to the Consolidated Fund was £1066; to the registrars, £1817; and to the high bailiff, £628. There were 244 suits pending on the 31st Dec. 1872. There were 6 appeals and 2 committals for contempt; and six warrants of execution or possession were issued.

A MATTER was recently before the Judge of the Keighley County Court which has excited public indignation, and which, if anything can, ought to arouse the legal Profession to action in the assertion of their rights to be the only agents of the law and the only persons concerned in its administration. Encouraged by the impunity which attends their proceedings, "law agents" located in London, who advertise that they will transact all the business of a solicitor for reduced remuneration, are now engaged in carrying out a system of plunder by means of threats couched in technical terms and remitted to poor debtors. This is the usual form of the threat: "It having become evident from your silence that extreme measures will be required to recover the debt against you at these offices, we have to intimate that on the expiry of three days from your receipt of this notice the necessary steps will be taken towards obtaining a warrant of execution against your goods and chattels, failing which a warrant of imprisonment for contempt of court will be applied for, the expense of all which will fall on you to pay. No further notice of any kind can be sent." Doubtless, in the majority of instances, this threat has its designed effect, and whether he have any defence or not, the debtor will probably be induced to pay. In this instance the Judge said that this debt-collecting firm had themselves committed a contempt of court. But what of that? A recent case has decided that the County Court has no power to cite persons before it and punish them. The only remedy is to be found in energetic action on the part of the Profession to induce Parliament to stamp out these unqualified practitioners. Trade co-operation for collecting debts is unobjectionable, respectable solicitors being usually employed to take legal proceedings, but the practice of these agents who by threats and abuse of process extort from defendants and debtors the costs which their scale of pay does not enable them to obtain from their employers, will cause the County Courts to become a nuisance. It is the duty of the Profession to protect the public as well as themselves.

LORD ROMILLY, Lord WESTBURY'S successor in the European Assurance Arbitration, commenced his first public sittings on Monday. During the first few days his Lordship was engaged in hearing cases in which the official liquidators impeached transfers of shares made shortly before the winding-up of the society, on the ground that the transferees were improper persons to be placed on the register. Judgment was reserved in all these cases except one (Joshua Murgatroyd's case), in which Lord WESTBURY had required the transferor to show that the transferee was a proper person to be placed on the register, and it was now held that this requisition had not been complied with. One remark that has fallen from Lord ROMILLY, is to be especially noticed. He has stated that the principles which have already been established will still be applied in all matters of the arbitration. With regard to the alleged improper transfers, it is well known that Lord WESTBURY laid down most stringent rules as to the liability of the transferor, especially in Walton Williams's case (LAW TIMES, European Reports, p. 125). Lord ROMILLY has intimated his opinion that the judgment in this case covers Phillips's case, where a medical officer of the society in August 1870 directed his solicitors to dispose of his 590 shares. They went to a share dealer, who gave them the name of GILBERT mentioned in Williams's cases (sup.) This name was sent in to the society and approved, and the transfer was executed in Nov. 1870, and registered. The petition to wind-up the society was not presented until June 1871, and the order to wind-up was not made until Jan. 1872; in the winding-up, the official liquidators placed the name of the transferor on the list of contributories. Judgment has been reserved in these transfer cases until the next sittings, when no doubt the principles applicable to them will be still further elucidated.

THE City of London Court transacted a large amount of business last year, and is credited in the Judicial Statistics with one-fourth of the admiralty suits of the County Courts. There were 151 suits entered, thirty-nine vessels were arrested, final decrees were given in fifty-six cases, in thirteen cases the Judge was assisted by nautical assessors, and the amount claimed was £12,150, and the amount of attorneys' costs allowed £1513. It is remarked in the official returns that in many instances the attorneys agreed upon the costs, and settled the cases out of court, and these are not included in the return. The sum allowed in all the other County Courts for attorneys' costs in respect of 203 more cases than were entered at the City of London Court was £65 less than the above amount, which is a curious circumstance, and more curious still when taken in connection with the statement that the attorneys agreed upon the costs in many cases in the City Court which are not included in the return. There were only nine equity suits in this court for an amount of £1465, the amount of attorneys' costs allowed being £79.

THE WORK IN THE COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY.

OUR readers will be interested to know what has been the work transacted in the various courts of bankruptcy throughout the country, and the Judicial Statistics for 1872 furnish this information, with some instructive comments on the working of the Act of 1869. In 1870 there were 1351 bankruptcies, 2035 liquidations by arrangement, and 1616 compositions, making a total of 5002. In 1871 there were 1238 bankruptcies, 2872 liquidations, and 2170 compositions, giving a total of 6280. Last year there were 933 bankruptcies, 3694 liquidations, and 2208 compositions, giving a total of 6835. It will thus be seen that the bankruptcy business has steadily increased, bankruptcies declining, and liquidations and compositions rising in public favour.

The proportion of costs incurred in realising the estates of insolvents has been about 30 per centum, made up thus; 16 per cent. for law costs, including stamps for duty and court fees; 6·50 trustees' remuneration, 5·25 incidental expenses; that is for 1871 giving total costs, 27·75 per cent.; but in 1872 the law costs were 18·50 per cent., and the total expenses of realisation 30·75. It is remarked that where creditors have availed themselves of the powers and facilities given them by the Act, the results have been highly satisfactory. As an illustration, one case is mentioned as occuring in 1872, where assets amounting to £11,167 14s. 2d. were realised at a total cost of £356 13s. 4d., of which the solicitor received £129 13s. 11d. and the trustee £155 0s. 10d.

The compositions made by debtors with their creditors have unfortunately decreased in amount. In 1870, '71, and '72 respectively there were 94, 172, and 262 respectively at 1s.; 255, 428, and 490 exceeding 1s., and not exceeding 2s. 6d.; 606, 647, and 586 exceeding 2s. 6d., and not exceeding 5s.; 345, 298, and 292 exceeding 5s., and not exceeding 7s. 6d.; 482, 288, and 242 exceeding 7s. 6d., and not exceeding 10s.; 144, 107, and 83 exceeding 10s., and not exceeding 15s.; 14, 10, and 7 exceeding 15s., and under 20s.; and 57, 50, and 38 at 20s. in the pound. The proportion of compositions over 7s. 6d. in the pound to compositions at or under 2s. 6d. in the pound in 1870 was as two to one, and in 1872 as one to two.

To show the operation of the provisions relating to debtor's summonses, which, we conceive, largely accounts for the decrease in common law business, we may cite some figures. In 1872 1626 debtor's summonses were issued in the London Court, and 1448 in the County Courts—total, 3074. In 1871 1456 were issued in the London court, and 1529 in the County Courts—total, 2985.

It has been recently contended by correspondents that the provisions of the Act relating to the close of a bankruptcy apply equally to liquidation by arrangement. We have disposed of the notion, and it is remarked in the statistics: "The provisions with respect to the close of the bankruptcy, the discharge of a bankrupt, the release of the trustee, and the audit of accounts by the comptroller, do not apply; but the close of the liquidation may be fixed, and the discharge of the debtor and the release of the trustee may be granted by a resolution of the creditors in general meeting, and the accounts may be audited in pursuance of such resolution, at such time, in such manner, and upon such terms and conditions as the creditors think fit. In 1872, in the London court, 1393 petitions for liquidation were filed, 492 resolutions registered, and 157 resolutions for discharge. The gross amount of debts was £3,810,395; gross value of estate £933,001; and gross amount of stamp duty £4337. In the County Courts for the same year, and the same purposes, the figures were 5354, 3202, 1068; £4,617,379; £1,723,252, and £14,684. In the London courts in the same year 512 resolutions for composition were registered, the gross amount of debts being £1,175,635; the gross value of the estate £341,679, and the gross amount of stamp duty £2661. In the County Courts the figures were respectively 1696, £2,034,363; £694,519; and £5754.

The appellate business has been as follows:—In 1872, 68 appeals were presented to the Court of Appeal in Chancery; in 39 the decision of the court below was affirmed, in 12 reversed, and in 2 varied; whilst 17 were withdrawn or arranged. To the Chief Judge 74 appeals were presented; in 30 the judgments were affirmed, in 24 reversed; and 2 were varied, 1 remitted. 2 arranged, 14 withdrawn. These figures exclude pending appeals.

The number of bills taxed in 1872 was 11,814; the gross amount being £306,135 19s. The amount struck off on taxation was £51,440 0s. 6d.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT.

(Continued from page 447.)

PART IV.—TRIAL AND PROCEDURE.

THE most important part of the Act, in so far as it affects the greatest number of our readers, is that which relates to trial and procedure. This is the part of the Act, under the authority of which the rules of practice of the new courts are to be framed, and by virtue of which a system of pleading new to most pleaders of the present day is introduced. Moreover, this part provides for the establishment of district registries, by means of which all causes may be carried on down to trial in the country, without the necessity of the proceedings being brought up to London, except in such cases as require the direction of the court before trial. The mode of trial of certain causes is also regulated.

It has long been a subject of complaint that the system of arbitration has grown into an abuse, and when the expense of this mode of settling disputed questions is considered, it will be well understood that some change would be made in an Act whose object is to facilitate the course and lessen the expense of litigation. Even the powers given to the Judges to refer causes to the arbitration of the masters has always been looked upon as a great boon, and it has only been regretted that the multifarious duties of those officers have not enabled them to devote more time to this part of their duty. Many schemes have been proposed to meet this difficulty, but the one that has been adopted in the Act was the one which received the greatest approval. It is now provided that there shall be attached to the Supreme Court permanent officers, to be called official referees, for the trial of such questions as shall under the provisions of the Act be directed to be tried before such referees: (Part V., sect. 83.) The number and qualifications of the persons to be so appointed from time to time, and the tenure of their offices, is to be determined by the Lord Chancellor, with the concurrence of the presidents of the divisions of the High Court of Justice or a majority of them (of which majority the Lord Chief Justice of England shall be one), and with the sanction of the Treasury. These official referees will perform the duties entrusted to them in such places—whether in London or in the country—as may from time to time be directed by any order of the High Court or of the Court of Appeal, and all proper and reasonable travelling expenses incurred by them in the discharge of their duties are to be paid by the Treasury out of moneys to be provided by Parliament. Subject to any rules of court, and to such right as may now exist, to have particular cases submitted to the verdict of a jury, any question arising in any cause or matter (other than a criminal proceeding by the Crown) before the High Court or the Court of Appeal, may be referred by the court, or by any divisional court or Judge before whom it may be pending, for inquiry and report to any official or special referee, and the report of any such referee may be adopted wholly or partially by the court, and may (if so adopted) be enforced as a judgment by the Court (sect. 56). This section gives only a limited power to the court to refer any questions subject to the right of trial by jury; this power is, however, increased by the following section (sect. 57), in reference to certain matters. After giving power to refer any question of fact or of account by consent of the parties, it is enacted that in any cause requiring any prolonged examination of documents or accounts, or any scientific or local investigation, which cannot in the opinion of the court or a judge conveniently be made before a jury, or conducted by the court through its other ordinary officers, the court or Judge may, at any time and without the consent of the parties, order any question or issue of fact to be tried either before an official referee, to be appointed as before mentioned, or before a special referee to be agreed on between the parties, and any such special referee so agreed on shall have the same powers and duties and proceed in the same manner as an official referee. All trials before referees are to be conducted in the mode prescribed by rules of court and, subject thereto, as the court or Judge ordering the same may direct. The mode of trial is to some extent provided for by the rules (34 and 35) in the schedule attached to the Act, one of the most important provisions of which is that the referees shall proceed with the trial in open court, de die in diem, in a similar manner as in actions tried by a jury. These are most important provisions, both by giving the courts the power, long wanted, to enforce references in causes which can only be satisfactorily settled in that way, and in instituting arbitration courts, which shall sit without the expensive and harassing adjournments which now take place, for the convenience, not of the parties, or as a rule of their attorneys, but of the arbitrator and counsel concerned. It will be noticed that the power of reference given to the courts by the two sections (sects. 56 and 57), relates to distinct matters. The former section gives power to the court to refer a cause for the purpose of inquiry and report by the referee, but not for final decision; for instance, if in the course of any cause a question arises as to the condition of any place or thing, the court may refer the question to a referee, whose report will guide the court in its decision; a ship may be damaged in collision, and it may be important to ascertain in what direction the blow was struck, by an inspection of the ship itself; this would be a proper question to be decided by the report of an official referee. Again, the issue of fact having been decided, a plaintiff may become entitled to damages, the amount of which can be better ascertained by a referee than by a jury. The latter section (sect. 57), on the other hand, provides for cases where the whole question would best be decided by arbitration, and gives power to refer for trial causes in which the sole question at issue between the parties is one of amount, or a technical point relating to the construction of machinery, or relates to land boundaries or similar matters. The two sections together give complete power to deal with all these matters, and may be looked upon as a satisfactory solution of a difficulty that has long presented itself to the Profession. In cases of reference to or trial by referees, the referees will be officers of the court, and will have such authority as may be prescribed by rules, or by the order of reference or trial; the rules will probably give all the powers of a Judge for the purpose of each reference. The report of a referee upon any question of fact on any trial, such report being made on a reference of either the whole or a portion of the cause, will be equivalent, unless set aside by the court, to the verdict of a jury (sect. 58). This again is an important provision. Hitherto, on a cause being referred by order of court, it was referred to the final arbitrament and award of the person selected, and his award was binding and could not be set aside if in regular form. The court could only enforce it. Now, however, the report of the referee will be subject to revision by the court, and if any palpable mistakes have arisen, they may be corrected. In connection with this matter, it may be well to call the attention of our readers to the fact that this system of reference has long been in existence in the High Court of Admiralty. In that court, whenever any question of amount has to be ascertained, it is not found by the court itself, but it is referred to the registrar of the court assisted by merchants to ascertain. When this has been done, the registrar reports to the court the amount, and, if no dispute as to the accuracy of the report arises, the court makes a decree in accordance therewith. If, however, the amount is disputed, an appeal lies to the court by way of objection to the registrar's report, and the matter is gone into before the court. It frequently happens that in assessing damages important questions of law arise as to the principles on which damages are to be given, and it is not too much to say that the tribunal formed by the registrar and merchants has been found to work most satisfactorily. It is not uncommon, also, for questions relating to the priority to which several claimants against a fund in the registry are entitled are referred to the registrar with an equally satisfactory result. The power of review has a natural tendency to make these officers more careful in their decisions.

In addition to the powers given to the court by the Act with respect to proceedings before referees and to their reports, the court will have all such powers as are given to any court whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court with respect to references to arbitration and proceedings before arbitrators, and their awards by the Common Law Procedure Act 1854. Thus the Act, whilst instituting the new tribunal of reference, does not take away the power of referring any cause to the final arbitration of any person selected by the parties, and further protects the rights of parties so referring matters in difference out of court. There is nothing in the Act which will any more than before hinder awards being made rules of court and being enforced. The main objection to the existing state of things has always been that if a cause was referred, the decision of the arbitrator was in all cases final, or at least there was no power in the courts to go into his reasons so as to upset the award if he had proceeded on an erroneous ground. This is now remedied by the system of official referees, who will be obliged when reporting to the court to show their reasons for their decisions, and at the same time any person desiring to have his cause finally settled by an arbitrator may do so by referring it so that the arbitrator's award shall be final, and not capable of review by the court.

The establishment of district registries is next treated of by the Act, but this must be reserved for our next issue.

SEARCHES, INQUIRIES, AND NOTICES.

(Continued from p. 446.)

The Yorkshire and Kingston-upon-Hull Registries.

The Acts relating to the different Ridings are as follows:—2 & 6 Anne, c. 4; 5 Anne, c. 18; and 6 Anne, c. 35, relating to the West Riding, the registry office being at Wakefield; 6 Anne, c. 35, relating to the East Riding and Kingston-upon Hull, the registry office being at Beverley; and 8 Geo. 2, c. 6, relating to the North Riding, the registry office being at Northallerton.

The provisions of the 2 & 3 Anne, c. 4, are somewhat similar to those of the Middlesex Registry Act (7 Anne, c. 20), to which we have recently referred. The section (1) avoiding unregistered deeds, conveyances, and wills, is in nearly the same language, and those (7, 8, and 17) relating to the memorial and its contents, are similar, with the exception that it is to be directed to the registrar of the office and proved before him or his deputy, and the heirs, executors, or administrators, of the grantor, grantee, or devisee, are not empowered to sign it. A memorial of deeds, conveyances, and wills, made and executed or published in London, or in any other place not within forty miles of the West Riding, are to be registered, if proved before a Judge at Westminster or a Chancery commissioner (sect. 18). Memorials of wills are to be registered within six months of the death of a testator dying within the kingdom of England, dominion of Wales and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and within three years of the death of a testator dying upon or in any parts beyond the seas (sect. 20), and in case of the will being contested, or other inevitable difficulty, without the wilful neglect or default of the devisee or other interested person, it is to be sufficient if the memorial be registered within six months of his attainment of the will or the probate thereof, or removal of the impediment (sect. 21). No time is, however, fixed after which a purchaser would be safe, as is limited by the Middlesex Registry Act.

The 5 Anne, cap. 18, declared that it should be sufficient that bargains and sales be enrolled in the Registry Office, and provided (sect. 10) for the entry of satisfaction in cases where mortgages had been registered, and subsequently paid off.

The provisions of the 6 Anne, cap. 35, relating to the East Riding and Kingston-upon-Hull Registry, are also similar to those of the Middlesex Registry Act, and provision is made for the proof of the memorials in London, or at places forty miles distant from the East Riding, similar to that made by the West Riding Act. The provisions for registering memorials of wills are similar to those of the Middlesex Registry Act, with the exception that nothing is said about the concealment or suppression of a will; the times for registering a memorial of a contest or other impediment are limited to six months after his death, where the testator dies in Great Britain, and three years where the testator dies elsewhere; and there is no protection given to purchasers by effluxion of time. The Act also provides for the enrolment of deeds of bargain and sale in the Registry Office, and that in all such deeds so enrolled, the words grant, bargain, and sell shall be construed in all Courts of Judicature to be the usual covenants for title.

The same Act, after reciting the 2 & 3 Anne, c. 4, and 5 Anne, c. 18, enacts, that after the 29th Sept. 1708, all and every the provisions, clauses, articles, matters, and things in that present Act contained, concerning the East Riding, and the town and county of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull, and not provided for or contained in the recited Acts, or either of them, should extend unto and affect all honors, manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments situate, lying, and being within the West Riding (the mortgage or purchase whereof should exceed the sum of 50*l.*), as effectually as if the same and every of them were respectively inserted and contained in the recited Acts (sect. 34).

The provisions of the 8 Geo. 2, c. 6, are very similar to those of the Middlesex Registry Act; there is, however, an omission, in the section (11), which declares the mode in which a memorial is to be attested, of the words "one whereof to be one of the witnesses;" as the section stands, it would, at first sight, appear that the memorial is to be attested "by two witnesses to the execution of such deed or conveyance," but as the Act goes on to say "which witness shall upon his oath" prove the execution, the intention, and omission appear palpable. In lieu of the proof by a witness, the persons signing and sealing the memorial, or one of them, can, before the registrar or his deputy, acknowledge the signing and sealing of the memorial, and the execution of the deed or conveyance therein mentioned. Provision is made for proving memorials of deeds, conveyances, and wills made at any place not within forty miles of the North Riding similar to that made for the other Ridings. Memorials of wills are to be registered in the same times as they are in Middlesex, and in case of a contest or other inevitable difficulty, a memorial of such contest or difficulty is to be entered within six months or three years, according to the place of the death of the testator being in Great Britain or elsewhere. In case of any concealment or suppression of any will or devise, no purchaser for valuable consideration is to be defeated or disturbed in his purchase by any title made or devised by such will unless the will be actually registered within three years after the death of the devisor or testatrix (sect. 17). The Act provides for the enrolment of deeds of bargain and sale in the Registry Office, and gives similar effect to the words "grant, bargain, and sell" in such deeds as is given by the East Riding Act, and it further provides for the enrolment at full length of any deed, writing, will, or conveyance upon proof of its due execution before the registrar or his deputy, or before a judge at Westminster, or a Chancery commissioner, where the execution did not take place within forty miles of the office. Such enrolment is to be in lieu of the registration of a memorial and office copies of the document enrolled are made evidence in all courts of record.

None of the Acts extend to any copyhold estates or to any leases at a rack rent, or to any lease not exceeding twenty-one years, where the actual possession and occupation goeth along with the lease.

Middlesex and Yorkshire Registries

Equitable charges and assignments and agreements to charge require registration in the same manner as legal charges, and so do memoranda of deposits of deeds: (Moore v. Culverhouse, 29 L. J. Rep. N. S. 419, Ch.; Neve v. Pennell, 2 H. & M. 170; Re Wight's Mortgage Trust, L. Rep. 16 Eq. 41.) If, however, the charge be created by a deposit of deeds, without writing of any kind, it would appear that no registration is necessary, there being nothing to register: (Sumpter v. Cooper, 2 B. & Ad. 223; 9 L. J. Rep. 226, K. B.) Registration, however, is not notice, so that a purchaser or mortgagee obtaining the legal estate without notice of a previous duly registered equitable charge will have priority: (Morecock v Dickens, Amb. 678) and in the old case of Bedford v. Backhouse (2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 615) it was decided that registration gave no greater efficacy to deeds that are registered than they had before, and therefore that a first legal mortgagee who, without notice of a second duly registered mortgage, had advanced a further sum to the mortgagor upon the same lands was entitled to priority over the second mortgagee. It does not, however, from the report of the case, appear whether such further sum was secured by any writing or not, but if it were secured by writing as it probably was, the decision would seem to have been overruled by that in the subsequent case of Moore v. Culverhouse, by which a second duly registered mortgage was declared to have priority over a prior unregistered further charge given to the first mortgagee, but of which the second mortgagee had no notice. In the case of Ex parte Langston (17 Ves. 227) Lord Eldon decided that where the first charge was created by a mere deposit of deeds, a further advance would also be secured even if no charge were given in writing, provided that positive evidence were furnished that the further advance was made upon the security of the deposited deeds; and in a subsequent case (Ex parte Hooper, re Hewitt (1 Mer. 7) where the first charge was created by a legal mortgage, he expressed his dissatisfaction with the principle upon which he had acted in the previous case, and considered that it should not be further enlarged, and decided that as the legal estate had been assigned by way of mortgage, the mortgagee was not entitled to say that he held the conveyance as a deposit, and that a subsequent advance upon a parol engagement that the amount should be tacked to the original mortgage debt created nothing more than a debt by simple contract. A purchaser or mortgagee obtaining the legal estate with notice of a prior registered equitable charge, or a prior unregistered conveyance or mortgage, will be postponed in equity to the owner of the other charge, conveyance, or mortgage (Rolland v. Hart L. Rep. 6 Ch. Ap. 678), but not so at law (Doe d. Robinson v. Allsop, 5 B. & A. 142). As registration is not notice, a duly registered document will have priority over one previously but improperly registered. The memorial may be lithographed (Reg. v. Registrar of Middlesex, 7 Q. B. 156). A memorial of impediment to registering a will must be registered within the time limited by the Acts. In Chadwick v. Turner (L. Rep. 1 Ch. Ap. 310), no memorial of impediment to registering a will was registered, but the will was found previously to the mortgage by the heir-at-law to the plaintiff, of the property which was situate in the East Riding of Yorkshire and equitable only, the mortgage was registered, and the will was also subsequently registered, the court decided that the plaintiff had obtained a proper charge and that there was no sufficient notice of the will to the heir-at-law, and, consequently, not to the plaintiff, and Lord Justice Turner added that he was by no means satisfied that notice to the heir would bind the plaintiff. The memorial of a deed poll which requires execution by and was actually executed by a grantee must be attested by one of the witnesses to the execution of the deed by a grantor: (Reg. v. Registrar of Middlesex, 28 L. J. N. S., 77, Q. B.)

(To be continued.)

MARRIED WOMEN—THEIR GENERAL ENGAGEMENTS AND SEPARATE ESTATE.

In a short note we recently drew attention to the very interesting decision of the Privy Council in the case of The Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lemprière (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 186), with reference to the powers and liabilities of a married woman with respect to her separate estate. The growing disposition of the courts and of the Legislature to make a married woman, as far as she can be made consistently with the principles which have hitherto guided the courts of equity, capable of contracting and making her separate estate liable, adds importance to the general question, and we propose, therefore, to look at the course which has been followed in the decisions which have culminated in the case of the Australian Bank v. Lemprière.

We have examined all the authorities with some care, and it will be seen we think that in this branch of law there is less inconsistency in the decisions than usually prevails. In Gratley v. Noble, (3 Madd.), the elementary question was argued whether a feme covert's separate estate can be made to answer for "general demands" upon her. The argument in support of the affirmative was this: It is admitted that she may dispose of her separate property by a specific charge on her separate estate; such estate, therefore, is liable to her debts. Norton v. Turville (2 P. Wms. 144) was cited to establish this. There a feme covert having a separate estate gave a bond, and it was held to be a charge on her separate estate though the separate estate had not been specifically charged. Grigby v. Cox (2 Ves. Sen. 517), Allen v. Papworth (1 Ves. Sen. 163), Hulme v. Tennant (1 Bro. C. C. 20), Sockett v. Wray (4 Bro. C. C. 485), Heatley v. Thomas (15 Ves. 596), and Bulpin v. Clarke (17 Ves. 365), were also cited as fully establishing the proposition that a feme covert with a separate estate contracting a debt, her separate property is liable, though she has not specifically charged such property with payment of the debt. Then Stamford v. Marshall is quoted as an older case (2 Atk. 69) decided on the broad ground of the liability of separate property to the general engagements of a feme covert, the only exception being where an annuity is granted out of the separate estate of a feme covert, and the annuity is set aside for a defect in the memorial; the grantee in that case cannot recover out of the separate estate of the feme covert the consideration he has paid for the annuity. With the exception of this particular case, it was argued, in Gratly v. Noble (sup.) that the general rule is that a feme covert with a separate estate is considered as a feme sole, and her separate estate is liable to answer such obligations as she would be compellable to discharge if she were a feme sole. On the other side it was said that, in Hulme v. Tenant, Lord Thurlow, by saying that the court will bind a feme covert as to making her separate estate "liable to her own engagements," meant some contract in writing. It was not found necessary in Gratley v. Noble to decide the general question.

In Stuart v. Kirkwell (3 Madd. 387) it was decided that a married woman living apart from her husband, and having a separate maintenance, renders the same liable by accepting a bill of exchange. The Vice-Chancellor there said, "As incident to the power of enjoyment of separate property, she has a power to appoint it," and the court would "consider a security executed by her as an appointment, pro tanto, of her separate estate." The liability of a married woman's separate estate to debts, and how such debts may be contracted, is fully discussed in Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, (2 Drewry), and there it was said (at p. 182), "The inconsistency of drawing a distinction between the different engagements of a married woman having a separate estate, with reference to the different forms in which they are contracted, together with the unsatisfactory character of the reasons assigned to justify such distinction, has forced itself more and more on the attention of successive Judges, and a growing tendency has been manifested to adopt a more consistent view by holding, first, that to the same extent to which a married woman is, by courts of equity, constituted a feme sole, with respect to the capacity of enjoying and the capacity of disposing of property, she ought also to be regarded as a feme sole with respect to the capacity for contracting debts or engagements in the nature of debts." Some observations of Lord Cottenham are then quoted, in which he makes no distinction between verbal promises or engagements and contracts in writing, when writing is not essential to the validity of the engagement. The judgment in Vaughan v. Vanderstegen says, later on (p. 188), "It has not yet indeed been made the subject of positive decision that the principle embraces her verbal engagements or cases of common assumpsit. . . . . Considering, however, the decisions I have referred to, and the reason of the thing, I think it very probable that when that question arises for decision it will be decided in the affirmative."

This view seems to have been adopted by the Privy Council in Lemprière's case, for, after referring to the cases quoted above and some others, the Lord Chancellor, delivering judgment, said: "I think, too, that the principle on which all the cases proceed, that a married woman in respect of her separate estate is to be considered as a feme sole, is in favour of her liability on her general engagements; upon the whole, therefore," said his Lordship, "I have come to the conclusion that not only the bonds, bills, and promissory notes of married women, but also their general engagements, may affect their separate estates, except as the Statute of Frauds may interfere where the separate property is real estate."

The nature of the general engagements which will bind the separate estate of the wife is indicated by Ayett v. Ashton (1 My. & Cr. 105), where a married woman, with the concurrence and in the presence of her husband, signed an agreement in writing to grant a lease. That case turned upon the representations as to the amount of the wife's separate estate at the time of the execution of the agreement, and only a personal decree was sought against the wife for specific performance. The court would not recognise the personal liability of the wife on the contract, but it did recognise her power to pledge and make answerable her separate estate for her engagements—adopting the doctrine laid down by Sir Thomas Plumer in Francis v. Wigzell (1 Madd. 258).

Then, as to the process for enforcing claims upon the separate property. If a feme covert makes a general engagement, and in pursuance of such engagement puts her personal estate within the control of the person with whom she contracts, can it not be made available? In Francis v. Wigzell the observations of Lord Thurlow in Hulme v. Tennant were quoted with approval, and that learned Judge said that the general engagements of the wife shall operate upon her personal property. If that property is in the control of trustees, and can only be got at by a suit in equity, the trustees will be decreed to apply the property in satisfaction of the liability contracted by the cestui que use. In Nantes v. Carrock (9 Ves. 189), Lord Eldon said: "One of the greatest difficulties that has occurred in this court, is how to give any execution against the property of a married woman. In this case the property is only stock, and there is no instance of this court giving execution against stock eo nomine, upon which there is no lien." And in Jones v. Harris (9 Ves. 497), the same Judge was of opinion that upon a mere contract of a man with a married woman, "the court will not consider him, in all events, as contracting with her as a married woman merely, but as a married woman having separate estate." Upon this doctrine, therefore, there would appear to be a right on the part of a married woman having separate property to contract in any way she likes to the extent of such separate property, and if in pursuance of such contract she gives a lien or charge upon the property, which can be enforced without invoking the powers of a court of equity, it will be liable. But in respect of her general engagements, expressly made with a view to charge her separate estate, otherwise she cannot be made liable personally, obviously not at law, and as appears by decided cases, not in equity.

A few remarks may be necessary to complete the treatment of this subject, with reference, namely, to the nature of the engagements which will bind a married woman's separate estate. There is one plain principle: If credit be given to a married woman, primâ facie the separate estate is liable. And the engagement must be something more than a mere contract. Indeed the circumstances of each particular case must guide the decision. If there are facts attending the making of the engagement which show that the woman is the person looked to to discharge the liability contracted, and if she acts in pursuance of her contract as a feme sole, and in any way deals with her separate property so as to create a charge or lien upon it, that property will be liable. As Lord Selborne stated in the Privy Council, the question is one of great difficulty, and in every case which could arise a court would probably have to put its construction upon the circumstances.

The position of married women at present is decidedly anomalous. We have a common law doctrine that they cannot contract; we have this modified by equitable doctrines, and these doctrines affect separate estate by contracts which at common law she is unable to execute so as to charge herself personally; and the courts of equity have gone the length of saying that if the case ever arose, it would probably be decided that separate estate might be made liable for a common assumpsit. Those engaged in administering and applying the law, therefore, should not too hastily run away with the notion that because a feme covert cannot at law contract to bind herself personally, therefore, a feme covert with separate estate stands upon the same footing, and does not affect that estate by her contracts. She may contract, and the court will have to say, under all the circumstances, whether the contract binds the separate estate. If the estate is stocks and such like, a suit in equity against the trustees is now necessary in order to reach it; if it is movable property, in such a position as to be liable to a lien, it would clearly appear to be affected by the contract in the hands of the person entitled to the lien.

LAW LIBRARY.

Joint Stock Company's Handybook. By RICHARD JORDAN. Third Edition.

THIS little work is published with a view to supplying practical instructions for the formation and management of Joint Stock Companies, and its value is proved by the fact that it has reached a third edition. Mr. Jordan's directions are concise and thoroughly intelligible. We may notice particularly the subject "memorandum of association," the essentials of which are so fully indicated that it would be difficult to err in framing the document. "Fully paid-up, or vendors' shares," and "share warrants" receive careful attention, and having looked through the book we may state briefly that it sums up clearly and well the practical effect of the Joint Stock Companies Acts.

A Treatise on the Fishery Laws of the United Kingdom. Second Edition. By JAMES PATERSON, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, late Chairman of the Special Commissioners for English Fisheries. London: Shaw and Sons, Fetter-lane.

MR. PATERSON has divided his work into three parts, dealing respectively with England, Scotland, and Ireland, whilst the residue is devoted to the statutes, which are given in extenso, with notes to the sections. The fishery laws certainly give us some curious illustrations of our mode of passing enactments. Our author tells us that the Salmon Fishery Act of 1861, which was very wide in its scope, and repealed all the former Acts, was soon found to be very imperfect. The Act of 1865 was then passed, and "that Act, in its turn, was found defective," and the Act of 1873 was passed, the main object of which was to confer on Boards of Conservators the power to make byelaws so as to vary the close season which the Act of 1861 had made uniform.

We recently noticed a new work on this subject by Professor Bund, and objected to his method of interpolating sections of Acts and lengthy extracts from judgments in the body of the work: Mr. Paterson, we are glad to observe, avoids this. His narrative of the law is straightforward, and if he makes use of judicial dicta and decision, he does not do so slavishly, but applies them as one having a thorough knowledge of his subject. That he has such knowledge the work clearly proves; and we would refer more particularly to his treatment of the question, What is a several fishery? and also the nature of right of fishery. The book is one in which the majority of our readers will probably take little interest, and we shall not quote Mr. Paterson to show that our commendation is deserved. His work is certainly one of the clearest and most scientific publications on a special subject which we have met with.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

THE letter of our correspondent, "A Solicitor of Ten Years' Standing," published in our last issue, together with a letter from "A. B.," published in our present issue, deserve consideration. Our correspondent first referred to is disposed to console himself for the shortsightedness of solicitors as regards their own interests, by the fact that he discovers that we are conscious of the necessity of of combination to protect such interests. We would remind him, however, that the only good which can come of the consciousness in question is of a most indirect kind, in the sense that all we can hope for is to arouse the Profession to the necessity for some great effort to improve their position. But at present there is no evidence or sign of such effort. The tendency of legislation has been to reduce solicitors' remuneration and to render the means of recovering costs more difficult, whilst the monopoly of the Bar increases rather than diminishes; seven years' standing being considered a qualification for almost every legal appointment. On the other hand, all solicitors, whatever their standing, seem to be disqualified for almost legal offices of distinction and dignity, not to say those to which are attached the higher remuneration. Further, accountants and law and other agents are, we are told, conducting a large portion of County Court practice, and business in connection with the proving of wills and in bankruptcy. The privilege of paying Government the annual certificate duty the solicitor yet enjoys. The Incorporated Law Society holds occasional meetings, and the record of the business transacted thereat is printed and circulated amongst the members months afterwards. Consequently its proceedings are considered by a not inconsiderable portion of the Profession to be valueless. Other law societies in London and the provinces are more or less helpless, being without charters of incorporation. As to some of these, amalgamation is talked about, but practically nothing is done. The existence of serious grievances is admitted, men of energy and foresight meet, as they have lately met at Birmingham, but, what with the unconscious state of the society supposed to represent solicitors, and the apathy of solicitors as a body, the proceedings end in ineffective resolutions. It is remarkable that the present relations between the two branches of the Profession should be allowed to continue, and the indifference of solicitors in this respect is certainly extraordinary. Solicitors require important reforms affecting the Bar which must come, and that at no distant period. Barristers must be liable in an action for negligence, and solicitors must have much greater facilities for being called to the Bar. But the necessity for reform may apparently invite without inciting to action, and our correspondents must not rely on the ends being attained by means of journalism only.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL — ERASURE — SUBSTITUTION — DEPENDENT RELATIVE REVOCATION.—Where a testator attempts to substitute the name of one legatee for that of another by erasing the name of one and writing the name of the other in its place, if the alteration is not attested in accordance with the Wills Act, the court may receive evidence as to the original form of the will, and pronounce for it in that form. A will contained a bequest to my "sister Louisa," written over an erasure. There was no evidence as to when the erasure was made, but the court being of opinion, from extrinsic evidence, that the words erased were "my niece Edith," and also that the alteration had been made in the mistaken belief that the bequest would be valid, granted probate, with the words "niece Edith" restored: (In the goods of E. J. Maccabe, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 250. Prob.)

SUIT BY WIFE FOR JUDICIAL SEPARATION—CRUELTY—PRIOR DEED OF SEPARATION—WIFE UNSUCCESSFUL—WIFE'S COSTS.—After the execution of a deed of separation the wife filed a petition for judicial separation on the ground of cruelty. She failed to establish cruelty and her petition was dismissed, but the court, being satisfied that her attorney had acted in the belief that she had a substantial case, allowed the wife's costs up to the amount for which security had been given in the registry: (Flower v. Flower, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 253. Div.).

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

THE following is the scale of commission, together with a specimen table, promised to our readers in our last issue:

AS TO FREEHOLDS AND COPYHOLDS.

Loans.

	Mortgagor's Solicitor	Mortgagee's Solicitor
For every £100 up to £200.	A sum equal to ⅓ths of the Mortgagee's Solicitor's allowance	£2 per cent.
And in addition After the first £2000. for every £100 up to £15,000	Ditto ditto	£1 per cent.
And in addition After the first £15,000	Ditto ditto	½ per cent.
Loans under the Drainage Acts—on County & Borough Rates—Dock Dues—and for other purposes under Statutory powers, and Securities of a like nature.	The Council is not prepared to suggest a scale for the remuneration of the Mortgagor's Solicitor on this class of securities	At the rate of ½ the allowance of the Mortgagor's Solicitor.

Sales and Purchases.

	Vendor's Solicitor.	Purchaser's Solicitor.
For every £100 up to £1000	A sum equal to ⅓ths of the Purchaser's Solicitor's allowance	£3 per cent.
And in addition And the first £1000, for every £100 up to £5000	Ditto ditto	£2 per cent.
And in addition After the first £5000, for every £100 up to 50,000	Ditto ditto	£1 per cent.
And in addition After the first £50,000, for every £100	Ditto ditto	½ per cent.

The Commission on Sale of Leaseholds for terms not exceeding originally 100 years, shall be ⅓th less than the scale on Sale of Freeholds and Copyholds.

Fractional parts of £100 to be reckoned as £100.

[SPECIMEN TABLE.]

	Loans.		Sales.
	Mortgagor's Solicitor.	Mortgagee's Solicitor.	Vendor's Solicitor.	Purchaser's Solicitor.
£	£ s.	£	£ s.	£
100	1 10	2	2 5	3
200	3 0	4	4 10	6
300	4 10	6	6 15	9
400	6 0	8	9 0	12
500	7 10	10	11 5	15
1,000	15 0	20	22 10	30
2,000	30 0	40	37 10	50
3,000	37 10	50	52 10	70
4,000	45 0	60	67 10	90
5,000	52 10	70	82 10	110
6,000	60 0	80	90 0	120
7,000	67 10	90	97 10	130
8,000	75 0	100	105 0	140
9,000	82 10	110	112 10	150
10,000	90 0	120	120 0	160
15,000	127 10	170	157 10	210
20,000	146 5	195	195 0	3·0
30,000	183 15	245	270 0	360
40,000	221 5	295	345 0	460
50,000	258 15	345	420 0	560

LIST OF GENTLEMEN APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED.

Notices of admission for Michaelmas Term, 1873.

Alford, William, 10, St. Swithin's-lane; articled to E. K. Blyth, 10, St. Swithin's-lane.
Allan, Charles George, 62, Moorgate-street—J. T. Simpson, 62, Moorgate-street.
Allen, Samuel, Sheffield—W. B. Fennell, Sheffield.
Bantoft, W. the younger, Ipswich; and 43, Bedford-row—S. A. Notcutt, Ipswich.
Barnard, Edward Ernest, 11, Southampton-Buildings, Chancery-lane; Keynsham, near Bristol; and 50, Upper Bedford-place—H. Livett, Bristol.
Barrett, Joseph, 163 and 137, Fenchurch-street—T. W. Buckler, 137, Fenchurch-street.
Batten, Thomas, Bradford, Wilts—G. Spackman, Bradford, Wilts.
Bean, Wm. Henry Rodbard, 16 Beauford-terrace; 170, Ladbrook Grove-road; and Cheltenham—P. J. W. Cooke, Gloucester; H. W. Perkis, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Booth, John Edward, Leeds—H. Appleton, Leeds.
Bowers, William Henry Bowyer, Birmingham—J. Jelf, Birmingham.
Bowling, Arthur Masterson Law, East Lodge, The Mall, Hammersmith—H. P. Bowling, 26, Essex-street, Strand.
Bowman, John Frederick, 5, Clifford-street, Bond-street—W. D. Freshfield, 5, Bank-buildings.
Boyce, Herbert Edward, 46, Parliament-street, Westminster; and Gwydr House, Westminster—S. Bircham, 46, Parliament-street.
Bray, Henry Malthus, 99, Great Russell-street—R. Bray and F. R. Warren, 99, Great Russell-street.
Brewis, John, Sunderland; and 35, John-street, Bedford row—G. S. Ranson, Sunderland.
Broadbent, Spencer, Liverpool—F. Broadbent, Bolton; J. P. Robinson, Liverpool
Brockman, Alfred Drake, Folkestone—R. T. Brockman, Folkestone.
Brooke, Horace George, 2, Euston-square; Great Berkhampstead; and 14, Feathe stone-buildings—R. F. Dalrymple, 44, Parliament-street.
Brown, Maurice, Peterborough; and 10, Serle-street, Lincoln's-inn fields—F. Brown, Peterborough.
Browne, Edward Utten, Norwich; and 14, Albion-street, Hyde-park—E. Field, Norwich; J. P. Hill, 6, John-street, Bedford-row.
Budd, Samuel, Exeter—W. J. Battishill, Exeter
Bulleid, John Howard, Glastonbury; and 36, Gloucester-street, Queen-square—J. G. L. Bulleid, Glastonbury.
Bullford, Charles Edward, 29, Tavistock place, Tavistock-square; and Malmesbury—W. S. Jones, Malmesbury.
Burnby, William, Bradford—H. B. Harle, Bradford.
Cheale, Sidney Alexander, Uckfield—F. W. Stone, Tunbridge Wells; W. Sprott, Mayfield, Sussex.
Churton, John Weaver, Chester; and 43, Chancery-lane—W. H. Churton, Chester.
Clark, Jonathan, the younger, 85, Guildford-street, Russell-square—J. A. Redhead, 13, Southampton-street
Collins, Charles, Firs, Rainhill, near Liverpool—T. Martin, Liverpool; H. W. Collins, Liverpool.
Court, James Phillips, Maghull, Lancaster: Wallington, Surrey; and 115, Chancery lane—F. North, Liverpool; W. W. Wynne, 115, Chancery-lane
Cruttenden, William, Battle—J. Martin, Battle; E. Martin, Battle.
Cumming, Alexander, 98, Warwick-street; and Ipswich—W. S. Yarrington, Ipswich.
Cunliffe, Walter, Warrington; and 33, Lincoln's-inn-fields—J. F. Marsh, Warrington; J. R. Buckton, Warrington.
Curling, Percy Bunce, 9, Durham-terrace, Westbourne-park—C. B. Lever, 49, Bedford-row.
Davis, Charles Henry, 21, Great George-street, Westminster—J. M Clabon, 21, Great George-street.
Deck, Henry Ragland, B. A., Hampsthwaite Vicarage, Ripley, York—D. and A. H. Russell, Lendal.
De Soyres, Philip, Exeter; and 15, Lincolns'-inn-fields—R. T. Campion, Exeter.
Dew, Griffith Davies, 10, King's-bench-walk—R. M. Shipman, Manchester; J. W. Randal, 10, King's-bench-walk.
Dickson, George Herbert, Preston; and 43, Bedford-row—J. B. Dickson, Preston.
Dodd, Charles Walters, 6, Furnival's-inn—J. D. Finney, 6, Furnival's-inn.
Dow, Edward Augustus, 30, Bedford-row—D. T. Miller, Sherborne-lane; W. H. Stephens, 30, Bedford-row.
Du Moulin, Chas. Nicholas, Leamington; and 36, Lincoln's-inn-fields—A. S. Field, Leamington.
Durnford, Francis Mount, 4, South-square, Gray's-inn; and 26, Lincoln's-inn-fields—C. E. V. Longbourne, 26, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Edwards, John James, 84, Newgate-street—O. C. T. Eagleton, 84, Newgate-street.
Edwards, Stanley, Lynn; and 2, Cursitor-street—F. R. Partridge, Lynn.
Elliott, Albert Augustine, 17A, Whitehall-place—J. Hopgood, 17A, Whitehall-place.
Ferguson, Daniel Lawrence, Alford, Lincoln—F. J. Rhodes Alford.
Fernell, Henry Geo. Tudor, Sheffield; and 9, Bedford-row—W. Smith, Sheffield.
Ferbank, William, Newport—C. B. Fox, Newport.
Flint, Charles Albert, Canterbury; and 17, Lincoln's-inn-fields—H. T Sankey, Canterbury.
Foster, Edward Walker Webb, Ulster Villa, Leytonstone—E. Browning, Redditch; E. C. Browning, Redditch; C. N. Cole, 30, Essex street.
Freeman, John Tilleard, 17A, Whitehall-place—J. Hopgood, 17A, Whitehall-place.
Geare, Henry Cecil, 6, Raymond-buildings—C. P. Wood, 6, Raymond-buildings.
Ghest, John, the younger, Manchester; and 2, Ellington-street, Islington—J. A. Foyster, Manchester; F. Weatherall, 7, King's Bench-walk.
Grey, Hubert Allen, 100, Cambridge-street, Warwick-square—W. H. Duignan, 15, Bedford row; J. R. Fenwick, 12, Fenchurch-street; C. G. G. Rushworth, 15, Bedford-row.
Haines, George William, 10, Storey's-gate, Westminster—P. J. W. Cooke, Gloucester; J. Andrews, 12, Bedford-row.
Hamer, Henry, Liverpool—J. Rayner, Liverpool.
Hamshaw, John Lovell, Faraham, Surrey—H. Potter, Faraham.
Harman, Orlando George, 7, Gray's-inn-square—A. H. Crowther, 7, Gray's-inn square.
Harvey, Richard, 5, Barge-yard, Bucklersbury—C. Gammon, 5, Barge-yard.
Harvey, Henry Fairfax, Royston; and 9, Bedford-road—H. Thurnall, Royston.
Hastings, Alfred Gardiner, 23, John-street, Bedford-row—E. Futvoye, 23, John-street.
Heath, Alfred Samuel, 10, Basinghall-street—S. Heath, Basinghall-street.
Hedger, Philip F. Prashard, 2, Ladbrooke-terrace, Notting-hill—J. Sharp, Southampton; E. Harrison, Southampton.
Hime, George, Liverpool—H. W. Collins, Liverpool; T. Martin, Liverpool.
Hinton, Edmund, 3, Lilford-road, Camberwell; J. Blenkinsop, Euston Station; R. F. Roberts, Euston Station.
Hooper, F. Montgomery B., Exeter, and 55, Chancery-lane—H. W. Hooper, Exeter.
Hopkins, John Leifchild, 1, Lincoln's-inn-fields—R. G. K. Brookes, Stow-on-the-Wold; R. J. Brookes, Stow-on-the-Wold; W. Perry, 1, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Hudson, Thomas, Manchester—W. H. Talbot, Manchester.
Jackson, Ernest Gratian, Belper—J. G. Jackson, Belper.
James, Edward, 10, Royal-crescent, Notting-hill—J. S. Torr, 38, Bedford-row.
Jeans, John Locke, Alford, Lincoln; F. J. Rhodes, Alford.
Jennings, Frederick William, Portsea, and 34, Lime-street, City—W. Jennings, 34, Lime-street; H. Ford, Portsea.
Kennedy, Arthur, 26, Chancery-lane; T. Kennedy, 26, Chancery-lane.
King, Edward, 1, Bedford-row, and Wirksworth—J. F. Kingdon, Wirksworth.

Langworthy, Frederick, Modbury, Devon—R. Andrews, Modbury.
Ledgard, John Armitage, Heaton Chapel, near Stockport, and Manchester—J. Richardson, Manchester.
Lee, Edward, 14, Percy-terrace, Ladbrooke-grove-road—E. V. Lewis, 61, Cheapside.
Leeds, Charles Edward, Bury St. Edmunds, and 12, Hunter-street, Brunswick-square—J. Sparke, Bury St. Edmunds.
Lindsell, Frederick R. Barber, Lyme Regis—R. Hillman, Lyme Regis; R. W. Hillman, Lyme Regis.
Ling, Frederick Gaskell, Halesworth—F. Cross, Halesworth.
Lucas Ernest F. Bourne, Louth—T. F. Allison, Louth.
Makin, Robert Henry, Liverpool—W. Blackmore, Liverpool; and 3, Founder's-court, Lothbury.
Martin, Thomas Frederick, 155, Cannon-street, City—T. Martin, 155, Cannon-street; L. W. Gregory, 155, Cannon-street.
Meres, Frederick Augustus, 58, Millman-street; and 11, Serjeant's-inn—T. Slamey, 11, Serjeant's-inn.
Middlebrook, William, Barton-on-Humber—J. H. Priestley, Barton on-Humber.
Mills, Frederick William, 1, Brunswick-villas, Hill-road, Abbey-road—H. R. Lempriere, 56, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Minshall, Philip Henry, 106, St. Paul's-road, Camden-town; and Oswestry—W. Shaen, 8, Bedford-row; C. Minshall, Oswestry.
Mould, John Clarke, Melton Mowbray—Messrs. Latham and Paddison, Melton Mowbray.
Marcott, Edwin, Offchurch, near Leamington—G. C. Greenway, Warwick.
Nash, William, 142, Rye-lane, Peckham-rye; and 45, Threadneedle-street—J. H. Cotterill, 45, Threadneedle-street.
Northgraves, Charles, Kingston-upon-Hull—R. H. Dawson, Kingston-upon-Hull.
O'Brien, Lucius Melville, Southampton—T. Harrison Stanton, Southampton.
Owen, Morris, Carnarvon—R. D. Williams, Carnarvon.
Parton, George Adolphus, Collamore, Wandsworth—W. Clark, 66, Gresham House.
Parton, John, Berwick-upon-Tweed; and 105, Gloucester-road, Regent's-park—R. Douglas, Berwick-upon-Tweed.
Pearce, James Collins, Ealing; and 45, Essex-street—T. Kipping, 45, Essex-street.
Peddar, Sydney Hampden, 41, Finsbury-circus; and 7, Beresford-road, Highbury—T. P. Cobb, 41, Finsbury-circus.
Pinsent, Richard Alfred, Church-road, Essex-road, Islington; and 9, Bedford-row—T. S. James, Birmingham.
Pomeroy, Edward Boyce, Wymondham—E. P. Clarke, Wymondham; J. White, Wymondham.
Porter, Thomas Simpson, Bedford—L. Jessopp, Bedford.
Preston, Donald William, 19, Norfolk-street, Strand; Norwich; and 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields—A. Preston, Norwich
Prichard, Iltyd Moline, 57, Granville-park, Blackheath; and 43, Chancery-lane—R. Cunliffe, 43, Chancery-lane.
Pritchard, Wm. Benning, Beaumont-road, Wimbledon-park—A. J. Pritchard, 7, Knight Rider-street; H. J. Francis, 36, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Quelch, Francis, Everton, Liverpool—S. D. Worship, Liverpool.
Quilter, Charles, 140, Tufnel-park-road—J. Beaumont, 53, Coleman-street.
Rawlinson, Francis, Dalton-in-Furness—J. Poole, Ulverstone.
Reeves, Edmund Whitelock, Heathfield, Wimbledon-common—H. W. Reeves, 44, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Rickards, Arthur Torriano, Putney; and 39, Old Broad-street—H. Heald, 23, Throgmorton-street; R. H. Hill, 39, Old Broad-street.
Robinson, John, Sunderland—W. S. Robinson, Sunderland.
Randle, Richard Albert, Plymouth; and 3, Mylne street, Myddleton-square—E. E. Moore, Plymouth.
Sayer, William, Todmorden; and Richmond-hill—J. Stansfield, Todmorden.
Sanders, Cliff George, 33, King-street, Cheapside—B. Norton, 2, Gresham-buildings; G. T. Powell, 33, King-street, Cheapside.
Saxby, Joseph, Heaton Moor, near Stockport; and Fallowfield, near Manchester—J. Peacock, Manchester.
Scott, John Sefton, Blackburn; and Manchester—J. Bolton, Blackburn
Sheppard, Hobart M'Lean, P., 7, Clifton-grove, Dalston—T. Horwood, 7, New Broad-street
Shipton, Thos., the younger, Chesterfield—T. Shipton, Chesterfield.
Smith, Alfred Oxnard, Durham—J. Watson, Durham.
Spender, Frank Richard, Bradford-on-Avon—J. Sparks, Bradford-on-Avon.
Stevens, Samuel George, 26, Northumberland-place, Bayswater—T. L. Wilson, 3, Westminster Chambers.
Stow, Montague Haslam, 13, Buckland-crescent, Belsize-park—T. S. Preston, 85, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Sullivan, John Mortimer, 5, Bond-street, Claremont-square—C. K. Sharp, 31 and 32, Lombard-street.
Sumner, John Bird, Cheetham, Manchester—J. W. Addlesham, Manchester.
Sykes, Alfred, Crosland Moor, near Huddersfield—T. H. Ramsden, Huddersfield.
Talbot, John Edward, Higher Broughton, near Manchester—W. H. Talbot, Manchester.
Tanner, Arthur, 144, Ebury-street; and Bristol—R. H. Otter, Bristol.
Tanner, William, Chelmsford—W. J. Bruty, Chelmsford.
Terry, William Curtis, Fulham—O. Richards, 16, Warwick-street, Regent-street.
Theobald, John Theophilus, The Limes, Lower Tooting—J. P. Theobald, 8, Furnival's-inn.
Thomas, George, Carnarvon—E. G. Powell, Carnarvon; J. H. Roberts, Carnarvon.
Thomas, Matthew Watson, jun., Walthamstow; and 26, Martin's-lane, Cannon street—H. W. Nelson, 26, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street.
Thompson, Henry, Fairfield; and Liverpool—G. Haigh, Liverpool.
Tippets, William J. Berriman, 16, Highbury-grove—J. B. Tippetts, 5, Great St. Thomas Apostle; J. B. Tippetts, jun., 5, Great St. Thomas Apostle.
Toller, Ernest Edward, East Heath, Hampstead—Messrs. Upton and Co., 20, Austinfriars.
Treacher, John, 9, Gerrard-street, Soho—W. A. Brown, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Tudor, John, Brecon—J. R. Cobb, Brecon.
Walker-Jones, Francis A., Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, Launceston, Hobart Town, Australia; and 1, Vinery-villas, St. John's-wood—C. Meredith, 8, New-square.
Walker, Hugh Mewburn, Lee—T. Walker, 12, Furnival's-inn.
Waller, Arthur, 19, Highbury-terrace—G. Waller, 75, Coleman-street.
Wallingford, Alfred Bishop, 38, Stockwell Park-road—E. A. Wallingford, St. Ives.
Walters, Frank, Wanstead—L. Walters, 3, Finsbury-circus.
Ward, Charles Bernard, 32, Bernard-street, Russell-square—H. E. Hunt, Nottingham.
Warne, Harry Duke, 15, Furnival's-inn; and Rochester—J. T. Prau, Rochester.
Waugh, Edward Lamb, Cockermouth—E. Waugh, Cockermouth.
White, Henry Arthur, 12, Great Marlborough-street—A. W. White, 12, Great Marlborough-street.
Wilkes, John James, 8, Granville-square, Pentonville; and Darlington—T. Clayhills, Darlington.
Williams, Robert Jones, Putney; and Mold—T. T. Kelly, Mold.
Williamson, James, the younger, Surbiton—J. Williamson, 6, John-street, Bedford-row.
Wise, William, Ashbourne, Derby; and 70, Upper Gloucester-place, Dorset-square—J. J. Wise, Ashbourne.
Woodfords, Randolph, 18, Everett-street, Russell-square; and Bath—J. Stone, Bath.
Woodhouse, James Thomas, Bridge House, Sydenham; and Kingston-upon-Hull—W. J. Reed, Kingston-upon-Hull.
Worsley, James Edwardson, Warrington; and 36, Essex-street—W. Beaumont, Warrington; W. H. Brook, Warrington.
Wright, William, Rutland-park, Perry-hill, Lower Sydenham—J. Wright, 8, New-inn, Strand.
Young, Adrian, Dorking; and 6, Serjeants'-inn—H. Young, 6, Serjeants'-inn.
Young, John Arnold, Bury; and 4, North-road, Clapham-park—Alfred Grundy, Bury.

Pursuant to Judges' Orders.

Andrews, Henry, 25, Austinfriars—S. B. Merriman, 25, Austinfriars.
Calcott, George L. Berkeley, Leighton Buzzard, and 27, Grosvenor-road, Highbury New Park—J. Newton, Leighton Buzzard; F. M. B. Calcott, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Godfrey, Joseph Wallace, 10, Gloucester-terrace, Regent's-park—J. W. Budd, 20, Austinfriars.
Greatheed, William, 19, Lincoln's-inn-fields—W. Ledsam, 17, Lincoln's-inn-fields; H. Chaplin, 19, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Hankinson, George Henry, Woodlands-park, near Altrincham—R. K. Cooper, Manchester.
Overell, Albert Edward, Leamington Priors—W. Overell, Leamington Priors.
Pope, John Noble Coleman, Stoke Lodge, near Bristol—W. Leonard, Bristol.
Smith, Francis Peters, Norris-hill, near Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and 71, Cambridge-street, Pimlico—E. B. Jennings, Burton-upon-Trent.
Stanway, Edward Fancutt, 36, Bartholomew-road, Kentish Town—P. C. F. Tatham, 13, Knightrider-street.
Taylor, Henry Alfred, 15, South-street, Finsbury-square—G. E. Jaquet, 15, South-street.
Tyrer, Alfred, Liverpool—W. K. Tyrer, Liverpool.

Notices of Application to take out and renew Attorneys Certificates.

Baker, George, 25, Larkhall-lane, and 37, Great Percy-street, Pentonville. June 14.
Brabant, William Frederick, 2, College-crescent, Belsize Park. May 27.
Bryan, William, 59, Farrington-square. June 14.
Bruce, Thomas Dundas, 10, Albert-street, Regent's Park. June 25.
Johnson, H. Skingley, 38, Walbrook, and 78, Wells-street, Oxford-street. June 14.
Lindop, Thomas Crump, Torquay. June 2.
May, Alfred Henry, Bristol, and Kings' Kerwell, Devon. June 2.
Moorsom, William Frederic, Ewell. June 14.
Ransom, Arthur, Newport, Monmouth, and 137, Barnsbury-road. June 14.
Smith, Francis John, 6, Gray's-inn-square, and Mansfield. June 20.
Stockwood, Alfred, Pontypridd. June 14.
Underwood, Edward Morgan, Hereford. June 14.
Wall, William Henry, Pembury, Kent, and 8, Token-house-yard. June 14.
Watson, James, Croydon. May 17.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

Martindale (Edmund), Moka, Mauritius, Esq., £200 New Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Vesey Weston Holt, administrator to Edmund Martindale, deceased.
Stevens (Dr. Wm.), M.D. Upper Wick House, near Worcester. Three dividends on the sum of £2500 New Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, Richard Reader Harris and Wm. Wilkes Cawley, executors of Wm. Stevens, deceased.
Witts (Rev. Edward Francis), Upper Slaughter, Gloucestershire; Lea (Geo. Edward), Upper Slaughter farmer; and Witts (Francis Edward Broome), Upper Slaughter, Esq. £166 13s. 4d. Reduced Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, said Rev. Edward Francis Witts, Geo. Edward Lea, and Francis Edward Broome Witts.

APPOINTMENT UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

Wire Tramway Company (Limited). Petition for winding-up to be heard Nov. 7, before V.C. M.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

Adams (John), Hollyland, Pembroke, Esq. Dec. 6; A. Scott, solicitor, 39, Lombard-street, London.
Bassett (Hon. Emily H.), formerly of Tehidy Park, Cornwall, late of Abbey Hotel, Great Malvern widow. Nov. 30; G. Rooper, solicitor, 17, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.
Brennan (Jas.), 248, Church-street, Walker, Northumberland, grocer. Dec. 29; J. A. Philipson, solicitor, 65, Pilgrim-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
Burton (Henry J.), 53, Pentonville-road, and 7, Philpot-lane, London, grocer. Nov. 29; Tamplin and Co., solicitors, 159, Fenchurch-street London.
Clay (Elizabeth), Rastrick, Halifax, York, widow. Dec. 31; Ford and Co., solicitors, 70, Albion-street, Leeds.
Cockayne (Betty), Clarkson-street, Sheffield, York, widow. Dec. 6; A. Smith and Son, solicitors, 26, Castle-street, Sheffield.
Cridland (Henry Wm.), formerly of Dockhead, late of 222, Old Kent-road, Surrey, cheesemonger. Jan. 6; H. H. Hogan, solicitor, 23, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street, London.
Docker (Joseph), Brook-cottage, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, near Manchester, gentleman. Dec. 15; Sale and Co., solicitors, 29, Booth-street, Manchester.
Doe (Thomas), Mount Bures, Essex, miller. Dec. 16; Smythies and Co., solicitors, North Hill, Colchester.
Earle (Henry E.), 28, Inverness-terrace, Bayswater, and 82, Grosvenor-street, Bond-street, London, wine merchant. Dec. 16; Chas. Earle, 9, Duke-street, Portland-place, London.
Edwards (Richard W.), 40, Harrington street, Hampstead-road, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 2; Whitakers and Woolbert, solicitors, 12, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.
Elliott (Samuel), H. M.'s Court of Probate, Doctor's Commons, London, and 42, Harleyford-road, Kennington, Surrey, gentleman. Nov. 30; Brooks and Co. solicitors, 7, Godliman-street, Doctor's Commons, London.
Elsden (Wm.), formerly of 57, Regent-street, Lambeth-walk, and 21, Lambeth-walk, Surrey, late of 69, Loughborough-road, North Brixton, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 5; Whitakers and Woolbert, solicitors, 12, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.
Faulder (Elizabeth), formerly of 15, Fitzroy-square, Middlesex, late of Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, spinster. Nov. 17; Hill and Son, solicitors, 39, Old Broad-street, London.
Fitz-Gibbon (Lady Isabella, M. A.), 35, Lowndes-square, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 1; Walker and Martineau, solicitors, 13, King's-road, Gray's-inn, Middlesex.
Fuller (Louisa M. B. K.), late of Brussels, formerly of West Court, near Finchampstead, Berks, and Comeroy, near Honiton, Devon, widow. Dec. 1; Leman and Co., solicitors, 51, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.
Graham (Alfred), Mossley Vale House, Mossley Vale, near Liverpool, gentleman. Dec 31; G. Webster, solicitor, 6, York-buildings, Dale-street, Liverpool.
Guise (Wm. J.), formerly of Borough Market, Southwark, and late of 9, Sussex Cottages, Alpha-road, New Cross, Kent, fruit salesman. Jan. 1; H. Simpson, solicitor, 26, Borough High-street, London.
Gunnell (David), Chesterton, Cambridge, gentleman. Dec. 31; Eaden, Harris and Knowles, solicitors, 15, Sidney-street, Cambridge.
Henderson (Elizabeth Martha), commonly called Lady James Townshend, Yarrow House, Bintry, Norfolk, widow. Jan. 1; F. Leach, solicitor, 10, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.
Herley (Jane), late of Torquay, formerly of Weston-super-Mare, widow. Dec. 1; D. W. J. Thomas, solicitor, Brecon.
Hicks (Anne P.), Brooklands, near Ross, Hereford, spinster. Nov. 30; E. J. Austen, solicitor, 79, Denbigh-street, Belgrave-road, London.
Hone (Jas.), 40, Great College-street, Camden Town, Middlesex, and 38, Charles-street, Middlesex Hospital, Middlesex, fringe manufacturer. Dec 31; Shaw and Fraser, solicitors, 8, Furnival's Inn, London.
Jackson (Elizabeth), Wigan, widow. Dec. 10; Leigh and Ellis, solicitors, The Arcade, King street, Wigan.
James (Mary E.), St. Owen-street, Hereford, spinster. Jan. 1; W. J. Humphreys, solicitor, Hereford.
Johns (Samuel), Garibaldi-villa, Warwick, gentleman. Dec. 1; Wm. Moon, solicitor, 15, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex.
Kebe (Jos.), Godney, Meare, Somerset, cattle dealer. Nov. 30; S. Hobbs, jun., solicitor, Wells, Somerset
Kennedy (Jos.), Brown-street, Manchester, and The Poplars, Edge lane, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Lancaster, letter-press printer. Dec. 25; J. Peacock, solicitor, 86, Cross-street, Manchester.
Knight, (Samuel), Pontefract, York, corn merchant. Dec. 26; Coleman and Sangster, solicitors, Pontefract.
Marshall (Charlotte), Brunswick-villas, near Kew-bridge, Old Brentford, Middlesex, widow. Nov. 1; Ruston and Co., solicitors, Brentford, Middlesex.
McPherson (Isabella), High-street, Maidenhead, Berks, widow. Nov. 25; H. C. Draper, solicitor, 54, Vincent-square, Westminster.
Moon (Wm.), formerly of Liverpool, late of Woolton Hill-house, within Woolton, Lancashire, Esq. Dec. 1; Pears and Co., solicitors, 3, Harrington-street, Liverpool.
Moorton (Walter), 129, Pakington-street, Essex-road, Islington, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Nov. 20; Nash and Co., solicitors, 2, Suffolk-lane, Cannon-street, London.
Napier (Major Gen. Geo. T. C. C. B.), Morpeth-terrace, Westminster. Nov. 21; G. Rooper, solicitor, 17, Lincoln's inn-fields, Middlesex.
Owen (John B.), formerly of Stamford-hill, Middlesex, late of 17, Upper Hornsey-rise, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 18; Rixon and Co., solicitors, 52, Gracechurch-street, London.
Pearson (Charles), Tempsford Hall, Tempsford, Bedford, Esq. Dec. 1; Burne and Parker, solicitors, 37, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex.
Pettet (Elizabeth T.), Orchard-hill, Greenwich, Kent, spinster. Dec. 1; Sandom and Kersey, solicitors, 52, Gracechurch-street, London.
Prior (Wm.), formerly of Kemerton, Gloucester, late of Weymouth, gentleman. Nov. 25; L. Jessopp, solicitor, Bedford.
Radford (Ellen), Southwell, Nottingham, widow. Dec. 1; S. R. P. Shilton, solicitor, St. Peter's Churchside, Nottingham.
Radford (Jos.) formerly of Alfreton, Derby late of Southwell, Notts, farmer. Dec. 1; S. R. P. Shilton, solicitor, St. Peter's Church-side, Nottingham.
Rimmer (Ralph), Wigan, coal proprietor. Dec. 10; Leigh and Ellis, solicitors, The Arcade, King-street, Wigan.
Sutton (Sir John), Bart., Norwood-park, Nottingham, and Bruges, Belgium. Dec. 4; Ward and Co., solicitors, 1, Gray's-inn square, London.
Taylor (Geo.), 9, John-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex, and Waverley-villa, Ventnor, Isle of Wight, printer. Dec 15; R. H. Nettleship, solicitor, 37, John-street, Bedford-row, London.
Wheeler (Henry), Bolingbroke House, Wandsworth-common, Surrey, Esq. Dec. 1; Lawrance and Co., solicitors, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London.
Williams (Mary A.), Walthamstow, Essex, widow. Dec. 1; W. Houghton, solicitor, 15a, St. Helen's-place, London.

With a view of depriving naval courts-martial of the right to adjudicate upon offences punishable by civil law, a petition to the House of Commons and memorials to the Lords of the Admiralty and Privy Council have been prepared and are influentially supported.

LEGAL NEWS.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

THE following letter was lately addressed to the Times, but did not secure insertion:

"I have no desire to trespass unduly upon your columns, but as you have (to use a lawyer's phrase) repleaded upon the question raised in the letter of Mr. Pitt Taylor and myself, as to the power of imprisonment on fraudulent debtors, extending to all debtors alike, whether over or under £50, and you now insist that this equality, though it exists, is merely theoretical, and is reduced to a practical inequality, through the unequal operation of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, upon the two classes of debtors, you have raised a new and distinct issue which justifies rejoinder. You state, or at least I think your readers would understand you to state that, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, a debtor owing more than £50 can, by surrendering his property to his creditors, if it yields 10s. in the pound or more, obtain, as of right, a full discharge from all his debts, and thus free himself from all risk of imprisonment; whereas a poor man, whose debts are less than £50, cannot avail himself of this mode of escape, but must pay the uttermost farthing under the oppression of County Court summonses and commitments, aggravated by accumulated costs. Now this is a misapprehension of the true effect of the Act. The limit of £50, as an amount of indebtedness, and the limit of 10s. as an amount of dividend, have reference only to bankruptcy proper; and no debtor, trader, or non-trader, can, by any act of his own, make himself a bankrupt, and thereby acquire the right to a discharge by payment of a dividend of 10s. in the pound. The adjudication in bankruptcy must be the act of a creditor, or creditors, whose debts amount singly, or in the aggregate, to £50. But any person, trader, or non-trader, peer or peasant, merchant or mechanic, who finds himself insolvent, may, under the 125th section of the Act, by filing a petition, admitting his insolvency, procure a meeting of his creditors to be summoned, and leave it to them to determine whether they will accept a surrender of his property for equal division among them. In this proceeding there is no limit as to the amount of indebtedness. The £50 limit has no reference to it. An insolvent who owes £5 only may avail himself of it as well as an insolvent who owes a million; nor has the limit of 10s. for dividend. There is no limit at all. If the property were to yield 19s. 11d. in the pound, that would not give him a right to a discharge. Whatever dividend the estate may yield, the debtor must depend for his discharge upon the voluntary act of a certain majority of his creditors. This state of the law is accurately stated by Mr. Davis (the stipendiary magistrate for Sheffield) in his examination before the select committee. The real difficulty in the poorer class of debtors availing themselves of these provisions lies, as Mr. Davis points out, in the amount of the fees payable to Government. This, however, might, if thought desirable, be met by a greatly reduced and graduated scale of fees; and such a plan, as it strikes me, would be better than the scheme recommended by the committee, of forming a fund by payments to be made by the debtor, which could only come out of his future earnings, thus perpetuating the very class distinction which the committee so strongly reprehend. But allow me to point out that the operation of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 is introduced as a divertion, and has really nothing to do with the question, because, if the existing jurisdiction is properly exercised, it would never be put in force against a man who is shown to be insolvent. In its proper exercise it would be confined to the dishonest debtor who has the means of paying, but obstinately refuses to apply them. And the question then resolves itself into this, whether, admitting that the redress for breach of a civil contract should be limited to a civil remedy, is not the imposition of a temporary restraint upon a man's liberty intended to coerce him into doing that which he ought to do and can do, and a restraint therefore which it is in his power at any time to get rid of, really a civil remedy, and not to be confounded with punishment for a crime? Undoubtedly the number of debtors imprisoned is appallingly great. It is, however, satisfactory to see from Mr. Norwood's returns that the number has been reduced from 7978 in 1871 to 6910 in 1872. I hope a still further reduction will be shown for the present year; but I feel strongly that the number is still excessive, and that if Parliament and the public can be induced to look at the question practically, and not theoretically or scientifically, the remedy for the evil that now exists in the number of imprisonments would be found not in abolishing the jurisdiction, but in regulating the manner of its exercise." "A COUNTY COURT JUDGE."

THE magistrates at Marlborough-street have announced their intention not to hear articled or managing clerks of attorneys.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

THE INTERESTS OF THE PROFESSION.—I quite agree with your correspondent's remarks in your last impression that "no educated men are so inadequately paid" as solicitors. And why? Simply because they quietly submit to the injustice with the utmost complacency. It would be impossible to find outside the profession a body of men so utterly apathetic and indifferent, and so completely devoid of energy when their own interests are affected, as "our noble selves." I feel that in saying this I am only repeating what has been over and over again asserted. The older practitioners, whom we naturally expect to take the initiative, are, to a certain extent, responsible for this inertness. Wedded to the stereotyped procedure and traditions of the past, they look aghast when the slightest innovation is suggested. To some extent this is natural enough, and there has been quite enough of "innovation" of a certain kind already. Law is rapidly losing much of its cumbrous machinery and antiquated forms, and its reformers—with the best intentions, probably—have so far popularised it by establishing County Courts, Building Societies, and similar institutions. The result is, that by virtue of special legislation, the once needful offices of an attorney are frequently all but superseded. The registrar prepares the plaint for the "suitor;" the solicitor to the building club, at a ridiculously small fee, fills up and completes the printed conveyance or mortgage for the "member;" and thus the ball rolls, the independent practitioner, when one is employed on the other side, coming in for his full share of abuse because his charges are necessarily made out on a different scale. Now, it is the fear of incurring the bad graces of the client under these and similar circumstances that has brought about another grievance. Our charges are, as is well known, based upon a fixed scale, or, in some cases, upon a certain scale of commission. The public think both too high, and the Profession foolishly confirm that opinion by occasionally giving way. I should like to know who in the country would dare to uniformly enforce the taxing scale, much less that of the Law Society. The fact is that country attorneys are anything but true to themselves in the matter of remuneration. Underselling, I am afraid, is more frequently the rule than the exception. The Profession should condescend to take a lesson from the labouring classes, and stick together and "strike" now and again. No doubt this reprehensible "competition" is partially, though not by any means wholly, owing to the fact that agents compete (most improperly) for certain kinds of business which should rightly fall to our lot exclusively. These interlopers are readily supported in their nefarious traffic by the public, who fall an easy prey—though they don't think so—to their exactions; and although the attention of the attorneys must be repeatedly drawn to this empiric phlebotomy, yet no attempt in the interests of the Profession is made to suppress it! The best solution of the problem is to have, where practicable, an enforced scale of remuneration by commission in substitution of the "bill of costs." This time-honoured document does incalculable mischief to the Profession, when it gets into the hands of the laity. The scale of commission, however, should not be too high. In this respect the Law Society's scale is, I think, open to objection. Again solicitors should combine, and by acting in concert uphold their privileges and secure their full emoluments. Depend upon it, until the Profession makes its voice to be felt—not merely heard—it is quite hopeless to expect the abolition of "certificate duty" or any of the other innumerable grievances and restrictions to which we are so unjustly subjected. We are unfortunately attacked from within and without. Untrue to one another, we find ourselves weakest when we need to be strongest. A. B.

LAW AMENDMENT AND LAW PUBLICATIONS.—I willingly accept Mr. Lumley's assurance that all the sections of the amending statutes referred to are to be found in the New Sanitary Laws, although in a state of dislocation. I trust, however, that it is not presumptuous on my part to adhere to the opinion that every statute in such a work should be set out in full in order that the reader may have each in a complete form under his eye, and so be able to impress on his mind a knowledge of the contents. An excellent illustration of what a manual ought to be may be found in Mr. Taylor's Local Government Act 1858, comprising other statutes. Here the amended and the amending statutes are presented with equal distinctness. All amended sections are notified and a few words added describing the purport of the amendment. Reference is then given to the proper section of the amending statute, where the reader may find the amendment in full. In such a work any ordinary reader can "find his way about" without difficulty. There is no reason why larger compilations should not afford the same facilities. But it is not to be doubted that the feverish competition of publishers to be first in the field cramps and embarrasses men even of the highest professional distinction, and to some extent places them in a false position. In the case of Glen's Public Health Law, the grievance is, however, of a different complexion, and the responsibility belongs solely and exclusively to the publishers.

A CHAIRMAN OF A LOCAL BOARD.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

1. RELEASE OF DEBT BY WILL—LEGACY DUTY.—A. owes Testator £100. Testator by his will releases the debt. Is such debt liable to legacy duty?—Q.

2. PRACTICE IN THE COLONIES.—1. Can a clerk, having served his articles to a solicitor in this country and passed the necessary examination, commence practice in any of the colonies—e.g., Queensland, Australia? 2. If so, are there any, and what steps to be taken to enable him to do so? 3. Is it necessary that he should state the fact to the Incorporated Law Society before signing articles.—AN ENQUIRER.

3. NOTICE TO QUIT.—Jones let a farm to Smith, Brown, and Robinson, as joint tenants from year to year with a proviso against underletting; Smith has ceased to occupy the farm, and a notice to quit was given to Robinson, which was addressed to Brown and Robinson only. Query, whether such a notice was a good notice against Smith, and can Jones eject Smith, Brown, and Robinson, and if so, against whom should the action of ejectment be brought? Please refer to cases. B.

4. AGENTS AND DEBT COLLECTORS.—Will any of the readers of the LAW TIMES inform me of the best course to pursue in proceeding against so-called "agents" and "debt collectors," who appear as advocates, and conduct cases in the County Court, and refer me to authorities on the subject? I presume that such "agents," who in the absence of the plaintiff undertake a cause, may be treated as violating the rights of an attorney (although they may appear as witnesses to testify as to the defendant's means), and be proceeded against accordingly. BURTON-ON-TRENT.

5. SUCCESSION DUTY ACT.—A., in 1840, purchases real estate, the consideration being partly cash and partly a life annuity to the vendor, duly charged and secured on the estate by deed of even date. A. dies in 1861, having by his will empowered trustees to sell the estate, which they do in 1871, subject to the annuity. In 1873 the annuity ceases by reason of the death of the annuitant. Is succession duty now payable in respect of the cesser of the annuity? And if so, on what principle should it be calculated, and by whom must it be borne? The purchaser of 1871, and present owner, is a stranger in blood to both A. and his vendor (the annuitant), who were strangers in blood to each other. INQUIRER.

6. LOCAL AUTHORITY UNDER THE GAS WORKS CLAUSES ACT.—By the Gas Works Clauses Act 1871, s. 35, gas companies are required to forward to the "local authority" certain annual statements of accounts. The provisions of this Act apply to every Gas Company who has obtained Parliamentary powers or any provisional order (under the authority of the Gas and Water Works Facilities Act 1870), since July 1871. There must, therefore, be many towns in England in which there are gas companies to which this section applies. Will any of your readers inform me who is the recognised "local authority" in the case of a market town not being a municipal corporation? A. F. W.

7. CONTRACT—DEBT—RUNNING ACCOUNTS, &c.—A. employs B. on a contract to thresh the corn A. then has, and B., by threshing on five occasions, finishes the contract. A. pays for occasions 1, 3, 4, and refuses to pay for 2 and 5 on account of imperfect work. B. puts A. into the County Court for 5 only, and succeeds by A.'s paying the sum into court. Can B. now County court A. for money due for occasion No. 2?—X.

Answers.

(Q. 66.) EJECTMENT.—Looking through some back numbers of the LAW TIMES, I notice this query, and the replies of "Jus." and "X. Y." It appears to me that the latter are not put as strongly in favour of the mortgagee as the cases cited and others fairly warrant. If the principal sum remain unpaid on the day named, the mortgagee can maintain ejectment against the mortgagor, although he remain in possession without giving him notice to quit or demanding possession. Where the mortgagee suffers the mortgagor to remain in possession, the latter is not tenant at will to the former, but at the most tenant by sufferance only, and may be treated as tenant or trespasser at the election of the mortgagee. (See the cases cited by "Jus." and Partridge v. Bird, 5 B & Ald. 604; s. c.; 1 D. R. 272.) The mortgagor is not entitled to possession in respect of his equitable estate, unless there is some agreement to the contrary; but he holds it solely at the will of the mortgagee, who may, at any time, without giving any prior notice, recover the same by ejectment against him, unless he is ready to pay principal, interest, and costs: (St. 1017, 2 Sp. 641, 643.). In ejectment by mortgagee the mere fact of his having received interest on the mortgage loan to a time later than the day of the demise in the declaration, does not amount to a recognition by him, that the mortgagor or his tenant was in lawful possession of the premises till the time when such interest was paid, and consequently is no defence to the ejectment: (Doe d. Rogers v. Cadwallader, 2 B. & Ad. 473.) A. F. W.

(Q. 80.) MEMORANDUM OF DEED.—"Consuetudo" is unquestionably correct in the view which he takes. The right of one part owner to place a memorandum on deeds which relate to the common title cannot be admitted, but the permission to make such a memorandum may in many cases be properly asked and properly conceded. Take as a reductio ad absurdum of W.'s contention, the case of a conveyance by the same deed of Whiteacre to A. and of Blackacre to B. B. thinks fit to cut up Blackacre into ten or a thousand, or a million, lots, each of which he conveys to a different purchaser. According to W., each purchaser would be entitled to have an abstract of his conveyance indorsed on the original deed, the effect of course being to prejudice A.'s right by turning the original deed into a register of the title to Blackacre, in which A. has no interest. It is the clear right of a part-owner to insist that deeds relating to the common title shall not in any way be tampered with. As to indorsements of notice of charges, &c., see 2 Davidson Conv. part 2, 801-805, 3rd edit. Z. Y.

(Q. 86.) LOSS OF GOODS.—B. as A.'s agent, had presumably an implied authority to send back in the ordinary course, such goods as he did not approve. A. the owner, is the proper party to sue: (Dutton v. Solomons, 3 Bos. & Pul. 584; Dawes v. Peck, 8 Term Rep. 330.) Z. Y.

— An action against a carrier for loss of goods intrusted to him for conveyance should, in the absence of an express contract for the carriage of them, be by the owner of the goods as the party damnified. Where the goods have been delivered to the carrier to be conveyed to a person named by the consignor, the consignee is prima facie the owner of the goods: (Addison on Torts, 504, 4th edit.) Where the goods were sent merely for approval, the owner sued: (Swain v. Shepherd, 1 Moo. & Rob. 224). A. is the proper party to sue the Railway Company for the loss of the goods. A. A. R.

— The property in the goods remains in A., and he therefore is the proper party to sue: (Swain v. Shepherd, 1 Moo. & Rob. 224). H. G.

(Q. 87.) REMEDIES FOR DEBT—ACTION AND BANKRUPTCY—COSTS.—B. cannot compel payment of the costs of a debtor's summons in bankruptcy, where the debtor pays the debt before a petition is filed in bankruptcy thereon; many of the County Court judges have held this to be so. A. A. R.

— I think that B., having elected to accept the debt and costs in the action instead of petitioning for an adjudication, the court would not now entertain a new application for payment of costs of the summons. See the decisions of Goulburn, Commissioner, under the somewhat analogous sections of the Act of 1849: (Ex parte Cornick, 31 L. T. Rep. O. S. 346; Anonymous 5 L. T. Rep. N. S. 239). It may be doubted, notwithstanding the discretion as to costs given to the court by the Bankruptcy Rules of 1870 (186—189), whether in any case the costs of the debtor's summons can or ought properly to be charged against the debtor, where the debtor pays within the prescribed period, or where the proceedings do not culminate in an adjudication. Z. Y.

(Q. 88.) PROBATE DUTY WHEN EFFECTS DO NOT EXCEED £100.—The exemption has not been repealed. Z. Y.

— In the new edition of Prideaux, the mention of probate duty being chargeable where the effects are sworn under £100 is an error. The duty payable previously to 27 & 28 Vict. c. 56, was 10s. on the value of effects above £20 and under £100. Probate or letters of administration under £100 are now exempt: (sect. 5.) A. A. R.

(Q. 89.) FEMALE MORTGAGEE.—If the freehold is to pass the deed must be acknowledged. Z. Y.

— A female mortgagee having married should acknowledge the reconveyance upon the mortgage money being paid off. It is a disposition, release, and extinguishment of an estate which she and her husband have in her right in land: (sect. 77 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74.) An estate extends to any interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance in, upon, or affecting lands either at law or in equity: (see definitions same Act; see also Mr. Williams's observations at page 410, in his treatise on Personal Property, 8th edit. A. A. R.

— In this case (being a debt of the nature of an interest in land), it will be requisite for the female mortgagee to perfect the assurance by acknowledgment: (Williams v. Cooke, 4 Giff. 343; see also Rees v. Keith, 11 Sim. 388.) T. E. H.

— The reconveyance must be acknowledged. (Read sect. 77 of the Fines and Recoveries Act in connection with sect. 1, which defines "estate.") H. G.

Replication.

(Q. 56.) RIGHT OF WAY WITH DOGS THROUGH CHURCHYARD.—I do not see the inconsistency which "X" alleges to be contained in my reply. If, as "X" says, there is a public footway through the churchyard, such footway would, in my opinion, primâ facie extend to permit foot passengers to take dogs with them, or to wheel a hand-barrow, &c.—in short, to use the path as foot passengers do ordinarily use a path. If, however, there were no such highway, it would be absurd to suppose that there could be any custom established against the vicar which would compel him to admit dogs into the churchyard, whether accompanied by their masters or not. The due and proper use of a churchyard as such, surely does not require that the parishioners' dogs, much less those of the general public, should have access to it. Z. Y.

(Q. 84). RECONVEYANCE—COSTS.—A. A. R.'s answer of last week must, I think, be founded on a misconception. Scrace v. Whittington is inapplicable, surely. That was a case where one attorney did the work of another at the latter's request, and therefore differs widely from the case in question. H. G.

LAW SOCIETIES.

METROPOLITAN AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSOCIATION.

SECOND DAY.

The proceedings were resumed at eleven o'clock, the president, Mr. Charles Pidcock, in the chair.

LAND TITLE AND TRANSFER BILL.

Mr. G. J. Johnson (Birmingham) read a paper on the Land Title and Transfer Bill. After premising that he should confine himself chiefly to the principles as distinguished from the details of the Bill, the writer proceeded to state that, in considering this or any other question of legal reform, the first thing to be done was to ascertain accurately what are the evils which it is supposed that the alteration will remove. These, he said, ranged themselves under the two chief heads of title and transfer, and, after describing the present state of the law as to both, continued: "To explain the cause of this state of things is foreign to the purpose of this paper, and would require a volume to do it properly. Suffice it to say that it is not, as is generally supposed, the fault of the lawyers. It is the result of a succession of contrivances extending through centuries to evade the restrictions of feudalism, and to enable Englishmen to gratify one of their strongest instincts, viz., to deal with their land as they please, and without anybody but the persons concerned knowing anything about it. As for a long time this had to be done indirectly, and by means of all sorts of subtle contrivances, it is not to be wondered at, although it may be regretted, that our law of real property is as complicated as it is. But, whatever be the cause of this complication, it appears to me clear that the complexity is an evil, and if it be possible to simplify it it ought to be simplified; and if it be not possible it must be because the lawyers of the present generation are not as astute as their predecessors, who invented the contrivances of fines and recoveries, the doctrine of uses, lease and release, and other means of escape from a system which had become unsuitable to the growing wants of the community in which they lived. At the outset we are met with the initial difficulty of all alterations in any established system, especially one which has been slowly built up during six centuries, and that is how we are to effect the transition from the old system to the new. The popular notion is that you have only to pass a short statute to that effect, that from and after the commencement of this Act all lands and interests in lands shall be transferable in like manner as stock in the books of the governor and company of the Bank of England, and the thing is done. All lawyers know that, at present, this is impossible, for these among other reasons:—

"1. In the case of stock only one kind of interest is recognised, namely, the absolute ownership, whereas for centuries past all kinds of interests in possession, reversion, remainder, and expectancy, to say nothing of other partial interests, such as mortgages and leases, have been freely created out of and are clothed with the legal ownership; and in addition to these there is the still greater mass of beneficial and equitable interests.

"2. The stockholder cannot encroach upon the boundaries of any other stockholder, or be encroached upon by him; nor is he entitled to, nor can he be made subject to, any of the rights over other people's property which lawyers call easements. In the case of land the determination of my boundaries and rights is in reality the determination of the boundaries and rights of every adjoining owner.

"3. In the case of stock there is the starting point of registered absolute ownership, which is the desideratum in landed property.

"Now, unless we are prepared to register every tenant in possession of land as the absolute owner thereof, which is seen to be absurd as soon as stated, this starting point can only be got in one of two ways:—

"1. By investigating the title of the present owner, and if such title be found to be good, placing him on the register, and certifying his ownership.

"2. By putting any person on the register who shows an apparently good title, leaving it to the operation of the Statutes of Limitation to perfect such title.

"The first of these modes has the merit of securing a clear starting point, and was the foundation of Lord Westbury's Act of 1862, and of Lord Cranworth's Declaration of Title Act of the same session. It has been tried, and has failed in the sense that only a comparatively small number of applications to place lands on the register have been made, and the number of such applications is decreasing.

"The reasons for this failure are clearly shown in the report of the Royal Commission of 1869 to be, not the opposition of one branch of the Profession, but the danger, delay, and cost of having, in all cases, to prove a sixty years' marketable title, and to settle the boundaries as against adjoining owners.

"To put the matter plainly, the landowners of England think the advantages of registration too dear at the price required to obtain it. The Land Transfer Bill of last session, therefore, proposes to adopt the second mode—to make registration easier, at the sacrifice of some of the advantages of the Acts of 1862. The settlement of boundaries is, in all cases, to be optional with the applicant (Section 35) and he has a choice of three modes of registration:

"1. With absolute certified title; if, after investigation, a twenty years' good holding title is shown.

"2. With limited certified title, i.e., limited to a date selected by the applicant.

"3. Simple registration, in which the date of registration is the starting point.

"It is obvious that in the two latter cases the attainment of the chief benefit of registration, viz., indefeasibility of title, superseding any further investigation, is postponed until by the operation of the Statutes of Limitation the documents placed on the register as the root of the title is secured from impeachment. Until that time arrives, the previous title must be shown and investigated as at present. So also, unless the boundaries are settled as against adjoining owners, and such boundaries must be verified by evidence independent of the register. In these points the scheme is inferior to Lord Westbury's; but, as it is quite clear that the landowners of England will not have the greater benefits of Lord Westbury's scheme on the onerous conditions on which alone it is possible, there is no way to get a starting point other than that proposed by the Bill of last session, viz., beginning with the best provisional one which can be conveniently got, and trusting to time to cure all its original imperfections. To accelerate the ripening of registered titles not certified as absolute at the time of registration, Lord Selborne proposes, by the Real Property Limitation Bill, to shorten by one-half the present statutory periods of limitation."

Then, after describing the technical processes of registration and transfer as proposed by Lord Selborne's Bill, and the question of the necessary publicity of the register, the paper summed up the question thus:—

"As to registered dispositions by registered owners (i.e., absolute sales, mortgages, or, as the Acts call them, charges), certainty of title will be ultimately secured, and, if reasonable facilities are given for searching the register, facility of transfer will be promoted. As to all other dispositions (i.e., all unregistered dispositions by legal owners, and all dispositions by equitable owners), the measure will not affect the present modes of alienation, but will simply add the cost of investigating the registered title to the present. Of the two parts of the Bill, therefore, the provisions as to title seem to be clear and certain in their operation; but the provisions as to transfers appear to be incomplete in theory and uncertain in practice, and to require some years' experience before it can be ascertained whether they are workable or not. In order to place before the meeting certain definite points for discussion, I submit the following as tentative, and not dogmatical propositions:

"1. That so much of the Bill as concerns the registration of title is good, and should be supported by the Profession, as solving the difficulty of ultimately clearing all titles placed on the register without the costs of a previous judicial investigation, and avoiding the other difficulties which have been found so inimical to the general adoption of the Act of 1862.

"2. That the provisions as to transfer require, in order to the rapid and safe transaction of business, an open register.

"3. That the proposed machinery of caveats is susceptible of improvement.

"4. That provisions as to mortgages, or, as they are in future to be called, charges, appear to need very careful revision.

"5. As before observed, the establishment of District Registries appears absolutely essential to the proper working of the scheme, and I submit that the basis of the index of registration should be the parcels identified by a map, and not by the names of the parties, as the best mode of ensuring facility and accuracy of search. On this point I would direct attention to the very clear pamphlet of Mr. George Whitcombe, of Gloucester.

"6. The provisions in the Bill, as to solicitors, are some of them satisfactory, and some very much the reverse. Section 164, enabling the Board of Registry to make rules for our remuneration, based on the principle of a percentage sum of an ad valorem scale, is a step in the right direction.

The expression, 'or other agents,' which occurs in Sections 12, 36, 46, 160, and 164, should be either omitted altogether or defined to mean agents of solicitors only. The confidence now necessarily reposed in solicitors in transactions in real property will be quite as necessary under the new procedure as it is now; and it is not too much to require that no person should be permitted to engage in these transactions as agent for any other person except he be thoroughly competent, and be under the control which solicitors now are.

"Lastly. I contend that, even with the most perfect system that can be devised a priori, much alteration will be found to be necessary in its practical working, and that, until a satisfactory system has been established and verified by experience, it is highly inexpedient to make registration compulsory after two years, as it is proposed to do by sect. 18. I venture on this head to repeat in substance what I stated in a paper read on this subject at the last meeting at Bristol—that the history both of attempted and actual legislation on this matter is a warning against making provisions compulsory until they have been fairly tried and found to be workable. From the year 1830 to the year 1853 the proper remedy for the admitted evils of real property law was supposed to be a registry of deeds. It was recommended by the Real Property Commissioners in 1830, and embodied in numerous Bills introduced from that time until the year 1850, and in the latter year the Registration and Conveyancing Commission formally reported that this salutary improvement was continually frustrated by the persistent opposition of attorneys and solicitors. In the year 1853 another attempt was made to establish a register of deeds, and the select committee to whom the Bill was referred investigated the whole question, and reported that we had all along been right and the public and the theorists were wrong, and that registration of deeds would do more harm than good. From that time registration of deeds (which for a quarter of a century had been the favourite panacea for all the evils of real property law) was discarded in favour of a scheme of registration of title. This latter scheme was embodied in the legislation of 1862, which in its turn has failed in its original shape, and it is about to be improved by Lord Selborne's Bill. The provisions in the measure now before us are new and untried, and, great as is their apparent superiority to the provisions of 1862, we can never be sure that any measure is good until it has been decided by experience; and, having regard to the fact that all dealings with real property (unlike making fresh rules of practice in the courts) are permanent in their character, I maintain it is most unadvisable to make this measure compulsory, unless and until it has been fairly tried, and that, therefore, sect. 18 ought to be struck out of the Bill."

Mr. J. Murray (London) read a paper on "Registration of Assurances."

The President said the admirable paper of Mr. Johnson was so exhaustive that very little more was to be said on the subject. It must strike everyone that the Bill was a most important one; and should it pass in its present state it would seriously affect not only the interests of the Profession, but their clients at large. Most of the legal reforms had increased the expense of conveyancing instead of diminishing them; and the question was whether they would be increased should this measure pass. He did not doubt that they would. It appeared to him that should the Bill pass in its present shape real property would be transferred in the same way as railway stock and other personal property. Whether that would be beneficial to the community or not was another question.

After some discussion, in which Mr. Burton, (London) Mr. Miller (Bristol), and Mr. Southall (Worcester), took part.

Mr. Shaen (London) proposed: "This meeting, whilst approving generally of the principle on which Lord Selborne's Bill is founded as to the registration of titles, is of opinion that until the provisions as to transfer are tested by experience it is highly inexpedient to make registration compulsory."

Mr. Dees (Newcastle-upon-Tyne) seconded the motion.

Mr. Torre (London) thought the society should not commit itself to any opinion on the subject until it felt itself fully qualified to do so. Mr. Johnson's paper had thrown all the light possible on the subject, which he thought should be brought under the notice of the Lord Chancellor and Lord Cairns; and he suggested, with Mr. Johnson's permission, that a copy of his paper should be sent to each of their Lordships.

Mr. Sutherland proposed an amendment, that the principle of registration of titles merely should be approved; which was seconded by Mr. Winterbotham, but negatived; the original motion being carried.

Mr. A. Ryland (Birmingham) proposed that Mr. Johnson's paper be printed, and circulated among the law societies and others, with a request for an expression of their views upon the points therein raised.

Mr. C. E. Mathews seconded the motion, and it was carried.

[We reserve a portion of the report of the proceedings until next week, owing to pressure on our space.]

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

THE thirty-first half-yearly general meeting of the members of this association took place on Wednesday, the 22nd Oct., at the Masonic Rooms, New-street, Birmingham, Mr. William Simmons Allen, of Birmingham, in the chair.

The report of the directors, as follows, was taken as read:

The directors, in compliance with the 16th rule of the association, present the thirty-first half-yearly report of its progress and operations.

Since April last sixty-six additional members have been elected, making, with those elected during the previous half-year, 146 new members gained during the year; a rate of increase so far satisfactory that it is in excess of that of the previous year.

The association has now 2262 members enrolled, of whom 791 are life and 1491 annual subscribers. Twenty-two of the life members are also annual subscribers.

In consequence of the absence of the auditors from London in the Autumn of the year, it has frequently been a matter of difficulty to present an audited balance-sheet of the accounts made up to the month preceding that in which the autumnal meeting is held. The directors have, on this occasion, had the half-yearly account completed to the 31st Aug. and, with the sanction of the meeting, they propose, in future, to close the half-yearly balance-sheets with the close of the months of February and August.

From the balance-sheet for the five months ending 31st Aug which the directors now present, it will be seen that the receipts during that time have amounted to £4716 2s. 9d., which, with those of the previous half-year make a total of £6382 4s. 4d. received during the eleven months.

The directors have much pleasure in reporting a munificent legacy (duty free) of £3000 under the will of the late Miss Hannah Brackenbury, of Brighton; and a legacy of £10 4s. 8d. under the will of the late Miss Margaret Collin, of Bishopwearmouth; a further donation of £100 from Mr. John Clayton, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, the present chairman of the board; and a further donation of £47, from the executors of the late Mrs. Frances Sarah Clowes, of London.

During the five months included in the account the directors have expended in grants to the necessitous families of eight deceased members of the association the sum of £255, and during the same period £210 to the necessitous families of twenty-five deceased non-members. These amounts, with those of the previous half-year, give a total of £655 paid within the eleven months to the necessitous families of nineteen deceased members, and of £405 to the necessitous families of forty-six deceased non-members, making in the whole £1060 expended in general relief during the past eleven months.

The anniversary festival of the association took place in June last, by permission of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, in their new lecture hall, and was presided over by the Hon. Mr. Justice Denman. His Lordship was supported by his brother, Lord Denman, his son, G. L. Denman, Esq., and by many members of both branches of the Profession. The festival was well attended, and a net addition of £620 to the funds of the association was the result.

Since the last report the directors have invested a further sum of £3800 in the purchase of Indian Four per Cents, the total funded capital of the association being now £28,032 8s. 3d. stock—consisting of £6'83 3s. 3d. Three per Cent. Consols; £7803 17s. 8d. Indian Five per Cents; £9425 17s. 4d. Indian Four per Cents; £3907 London and North-Western Railway Four per Cent. Perpetual Debenture Stock; £250 London and St. Katharine Docks Four per Cent. Debenture Stock; and £62 10s. Three per Cent Reduced Annuities, producing together annual dividends amounting to £1117.

A balance of £251 9s. 5d. remains to the credit of the Association with the Union Bank of London, and a sum of £15 is in the secretary's hands.

The decease of their respected colleagues, Mr. James Sharp, of Southampton, recorded in their last report, and Mr. Charles Edward Ward, of Bristol, which has since taken place, with the retirement of Mr. William Carter, of London, having created three vacancies at the board, Mr. William Eastlake, of Plymouth, Mr. Leiws Fry, of Bristol, and Mr. Harry Smith Styan, of London, have been elected to fill them. The directors deeply regret to have also to record the recent death of Mr. Thomas Kennedy, of London, who had been a member of the board since the foundation of the Association, and whose place they have not yet filled up.

The directors and auditors will complete, at this ensuing general meeting, the term of office for which they were elected; but are eligible and willing to continue their services if re-appointed.

It is proposed to elect a third auditor, in pursuance of the power now given by the 17th Rule, and the name of Mr. John Henry Kays, solicitor, New Inn, London, a life member of the association is, with his concurrence, submitted for your approval.

The directors have had great pleasure in appointing the present general meeting to take place at Birmingham, where the Association met last in 1862, and they sincerely hope that one result of this renewal of the society's visit will be a large increase in the number of its supporters in that important town.

(Signed, on behalf of the board,)

JOHN CLAYTON, Chairman.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, observed that, although Birmingham had not contributed so much to the association as it might have done, looking at the strength of their body in that town, it was satisfactory to see that there was a steady increase in the number of members of the association, and he was glad to be able to announce that several members of the Profession in Birmingham had forwarded additional donations to the society's funds. He had been very much struck with the prudence and liberality which characterised the operations of the board in the relief which it distributed. Applications had been made from Birmingham, and had been referred to him, as the local director there, for inquiry, and in every case there had been a careful desire on the part of the directors in London to know what the real merits of the case were. When the applicant was deserving, and the assistance given was usefully applied, aid had been repeatedly granted. He had pleasure in calling attention to an item in the receipts—namely, a bequest of £3000 (legacy duty free) under the will of the late Miss Hannah Brackenbury, of Brighton. He hoped that the admirable example of Miss Brackenbury, in helping their association would be borne in mind by the members of the Profession throughout the kingdom as one worthy of their own adoption. He had great pleasure in moving that the report and statement of accounts now presented be received, adopted, and printed for circulation in the usual way.

Mr. R. A. Payne (of Liverpool) seconded the resolution, which was unanimously agreed to, and he took occasion at the same time to hand in a long list of new subscribers at Liverpool which he had succeeded in obtaining prior to his leaving home.

On the motion of Mr. C. Pidcock (of Worcester), seconded by Mr. W. H. Guest (of Manchester), a vote of thanks was passed to the directors and auditors for their services during the year.

On the motion of Mr. G. J. Johnson (of Birmingham), seconded by Mr. J. Rider (of Leeds), the directors and auditors were re-appointed for the ensuing year.

Mr. E. W. Williamson (of London), secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, was added to the list of directors, in the room of Mr. Thomas Kennedy, of London, deceased; Mr. John Henry Kays, of New Inn, London, was appointed an additional auditor; and a vote of thanks having been passed to the chairman for presiding, the meeting, which was fairly attended, terminated.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

THE annual meeting of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, on Wednesday last. Mr. Hanhart in the chair.

The committee and officers presented the annual reports, which were very satisfactory in every respect.

New officers and committee were elected, and the society commenced its new session under very favourable auspices.

BRISTOL ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at the Law Library, Small-street, on Monday evening, the 20th inst., J. Inskip, Esq., solicitor, in the chair. Mr. Baylis opened in the affirmative on the subject, "Was the case of Coddington v. Paleologo (15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 581; 15 W. R. 961), rightly decided?" Mr. A. C. Castle opposed, and the question was ultimately carried on the side of Mr. Baylis by a small majority.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

J. TRAILL, ESQ.

THE late James Traill, Esq., of Hobbister, in the Isle of Orkney, and of Rattar, Caithness-shire, formerly police magistrate in London, Greenwich, and Woolwich, who died on the 17th ult., at Worthing, Sussex, in the seventy-ninth year of his age, was the second but eldest surviving son of the late James Traill, Esq., of Rattar, some time sheriff of the county of Caithness; his mother was Lady Janet, second daughter of William, tenth Earl of Caithness, and he was born in the year 1794. He was educated at Glasgow and at Balliol College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple in Michaelmas Term 1820. Mr. Traill for many years discharged the duties of magistrate at Greenwich, and also previously at the then Union Hall Police-court in London. The deceased's position as a magistrate extended from the year 1838 down to Jan. 1868, when he retired. Mr. Traill married, in 1824, Caroline, youngest daughter of the late William Whateley, Esq., of Handsworth, Staffordshire, and by her, who died in 1858, he has left issue.

VICE-CHANCELLOR WICKENS.

THE late Vice-Chancellor Sir John Wickens, who died on the 23rd ult., at his residence, Chilgrove, near Chichester, in the fifty-ninth year of his age, was the second son of the late James Stephen Wickens, Esq., solicitor, of Chandos-street, Cavendish-square, London, by Anne Goodenough, daughter of John Hayter, Esq., of Winterbourne Stoke, Wilts, and sister of the Right Hon. Sir William Goodenough Hayter, of Southill Park, Berks. He was born in the year 1815, and was educated under Dr. Keate at Eton, where he obtained the Newcastle Scholarship, and soon afterwards he was elected to an open scholarship at Balliol College, Oxford, then in the height of its first successes under the late Dr. Jenkins, afterwards Dean of Wells. At Oxford he closed his undergraduate career, during which he obtained, among other distinctions, the Newdigate Prize for English Verse, by taking his Bachelor's degree in Michaelmas Term 1836, as a "double first class." He did not, however, obtain the much coveted honour of a Balliol Fellowship, as his facetious propensities had shown themselves in several practical jokes against the master and tutors of his college, which appeared to them to render it extremely doubtful whether he would ever settle down into a staid, sober, and demure "Don," such as they who congregated in the Balliol Common Room. He afterwards settled in London to study for the Bar, and in Easter Term 1840, he was called by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's-inn, and in a short time obtained a considerable practice. His reputation as an equity draftsman while at the Bar was very great, and he was believed to possess a most accurrate acquaintance with the science of Chancery pleading, which, as most of our readers know, is a branch of knowledge not now much cultivated. In 1868 he was appointed to succeed the present Lord Justice James, who was then made a Vice-Chancellor of England, as Vice-Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a position which has often proved a stepping stone to the bench of the High Court of Chancery. Mr. Wickens held at the same time another office which is now looked upon as giving its occupant a still greater claim to a judgeship. He acted for some time as what is called the Attorney-General's "Devil" in Equity. In April, 1871, the deceased judge succeeded Sir John Stuart, on his resignation, as one of the Vice-Chancellors of England. The career of Sir John Wickens on the judicial bench, though so short, was sufficient to show that he possessed the very highest qualities which can be looked for in an equity judge. Indeed, he had showed himself to be abundantly endowed with these even when practising at the Bar. There was always something fair and judicial in his arguments as an advocate. In his judicial capacity Sir John Wickens was called upon to deal with a number of difficult cases, including, in particular, many which involved the constructions of wills, and very few of his decisions were called in question with success. His name is perhaps best known to the public as the judge who decided the case of Aylesford v. Morris, which at the time was very much canvassed in all quarters. Vice-Chancellor Wickens, it will be remembered, relieved the Earl of Aylesford from a bargain by which he had agreed to pay within six months of his attaining his majority interest at the rate of sixty per cent. for a loan of money, and the Vice-Chancellor's decision was in March last upheld on appeal by the Lord Chancellor and the Lords Justices. He was a stuff gownsman down to his elevation to the Bench, an appointment which he held for many years as Equity Junior to the Attorney-General being incompatible with his taking silk, and he never aspired to a seat in Parliament. "Sir John Wickens," says a contemporary, "was one of those men whose elevation did not place a distance between himself and his contemporaries at the Bar. He was always easy and unaffected in his manners, both in and out of court, and even since his elevation to the Bench the Vice-Chancellor walking away from his court with his cigar in his lips was not an unfamiliar figure in the precincts of Lincoln's Inn." The late Vice-Chancellor Wickens married, in 1845, Harriet Frances, daughter of William Davey, Esq., of Cowley House, Gloucestershire, by whom he leaves a family to lament his loss.

SIR W. EDEN, BART.

THE late Sir William Eden, Bart., of Windlestone Hall, in the county of Durham, late Custos Brevium of the Court of Common Pleas, who died on the 21st ult., in the seventieth year of his age, was the eldest surviving son of the late Sir Frederick Morton Eden, Bart., of Maryland, U.S. (who died in 1809), by Anne, daughter of James Paul Smith, Esq., of New Bond-street, and was born in the year 1803. He succeeded to his father's title, on the death of his brother, in 1814, and to that of his cousin, the late Sir Robert Johnson-Eden, Bart., of West Auckland, in 1844. Sir William was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Durham, and served as high sheriff of that county in 1848. He was also for many years Custos Brevium of the Court of Common Pleas until the abolition of that office, when he retired with a pension, and he was likewise formerly Major of the Durham Militia. According to Sir Bernard Burke, the family of the late baronet is descended from Robert de Eden, who died in 1413; and they have received two peerages, in the persons of Lord Henley and Lord Auckland. The baronetcy of West Auckland was conferred, in 1672, upon Robert Eden, Esq., of that place, M.P. for Durham, and that of Maryland in 1776, on the governor of the province of Maryland, who was the second son of the third baronet of the older creation. The issue of the eldest son having become extinct in 1844, the representation of the family and of the two baronetcies devolved on Sir William Eden, the baronet now deceased. The late baronet married in 1844 Elfrida, youngest daughter of Colonel Iremonger, of Wherwell Priory, Hampshire, by whom he had a family of four sons and five daughters. His eldest surviving son, William, who now succeeds to the title and estates, was born in 1849.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

SITTINGS AND CAUSE LIST FOR MICHAELMAS TERM 1873.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.

(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR.)

At Westminster.

Monday	Nov.	3	Appeal motions

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Nov.	4	Appeals
Wednesday		5	Ditto
Thursday		6	Ditto
Friday		7	Petitions and appeals
Monday		10	Appeals
Tuesday		11	Ditto
Wednesday		12	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		13	Appeals
Friday		14	Ditto
Monday		17	Ditto
Tuesday		18	Ditto
Wednesday		19	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		20	Appeals
Friday		21	Petitions and appeals
Monday		24	Appeals
Tuesday		25	Appeal motions and appeals

The Lord Chancellor will (except on Saturdays) during Term usually sit in full Court with the Lords Justices of the Court of Appeal.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES.)

At Westminster.

Monday	Nov.	3	Appeal motions

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Nov.	4	Appeals
Wednesday		5	Ditto
Thursday		6	Ditto
Friday		7	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		8	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions
Monday		10	Appeals
Tuesday		11	Appeals from the County Palatine of Lancaster, appeals from the Stannaries Court, and appeals
Wednesday		12	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		13	Appeals
Friday		14	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		15	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions
Monday		17	Appeals
Tuesday		18	Ditto
Wednesday		19	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		20	Appeals
Friday		21	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		22	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions
Monday		24	Appeals
Tuesday		25	Appeal motions and appeals

Such days (if any) as the Lords Justices shall be sitting with the Lord Chancellor or the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are excepted.

Appeal Motions.

Re Middleton Cotton Spinning and Manufacturing Company (Limited), and Company's Acts; ex parte Drousfield
Re same Company; ex parte Clegg
Re Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan (Limited), and Company's Acts (Campbell's case)
Re same Bank (Hippesley's case)
Re same Bank (Alison's case)
Carter v. Stevens
Re Metropolitan Carriage and Repository Company (Limited), and Company's Acts; ex parte Official Liquidator
Elmslie v. Beresford
Imperial Land Company of Marseilles v. Masterman
Re Matlock Old Bath Hydropathic Company (Limited), and Company's Acts (case of Manchester Finance Company)
Re same Company (Maynard's case)

Appeals.

Cavander v. Bulteel
Dallas v. Wells
Bromilow v. Pilkington
Elmer v. Creasy
Selby v. Nettlefold
City of London Brewery Company (Limited) v. Tennant
Conn v. Garland

Rolls Court.

At Westminster.

Monday	Nov.	3	Motions

At Chancery-lane.

Tuesday	Nov.	4	General paper
Wednesday		5	Ditto
Thursday		6	Ditto
Friday		7	Ditto
Saturday		8	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		10	General paper
Tuesday		11	Ditto
Wednesday		12	Ditto
Thursday		13	Motions and general paper
Friday		14	General paper
Saturday		15	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		17	General paper
Tuesday		18	Ditto
Wednesday		19	Ditto
Thursday		20	Motions and general paper
Friday		21	General paper
Saturday		22	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		24	General paper
Tuesday		25	Motions and general paper

At the Rolls, unopposed petitions must be presented, and copies left with the secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard.

Causes set down previous to Transfer.

Benson v. Winkworth
Hay v. Bates
Clowes v. Hogg
Wood v. Wood
King v. Dixon
Pritchard v. Collette
Collette v. Pritchard
Patrick v. Gye
Ridgway v. Ridgway
Ridgway v. Ridgway

Remaining Causes transferred from the Books of the Vice Chancellors Sir R. MALINS and Sir J. WICKENS, by Order dated 2nd May 1873.

Hards v. King
Fortune v. Thompson
Innes v. Mathias
Boatwright v. Boatwright
Marler v. Tommas
Chambers v. Saffery
Scott v. Laver
Lewis v. Musgrove
Neal v. Pearce
Power v. Williams
Trethewy v. Helyar
Hadwen v. Kenworthy
Thomas v. Thomas
Chambers v. Chambers
Retallick v. Huxham
Cameron v. Leyland
Salmon v. Brooks
Wood v. Wood
Rowlandson v. Mercer
Murrell v. Ferryman
Wagstaff v. Kemp
Wilkinson v. Wilkinson
The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris v. The Consolidated Bank (Limited)
Sidney v. Sidney
Gibson v. Woodruff
Enfield v. Roscoe
Clarke v. Allison
Dent v. Hoye
Hill v. Hill
Burton v. Maw
Mapleson v. Bentham
Clarke v. Clarke
Somes v. Renton
Hill v. Fry
Hayne v. Hayne
Rowe v. Rowe
Graesser v. Crowther
White v. Matthews
White v. Latters
Kenworthy v. Coffin
Faulkner v. Kershaw
Mair v. Mair
Cleary v. Kennington
The Blake Sole Sewing Machine Company (Limited) v. Hart
Wynne v. The North Staffordshire Railway Company
Bolton v. White
Overend, Gurney, and Co. (Limited) v. Brett
Stokes v. King
Fletcher v. Fletcher
Holland v. Gutch
Hodges v. Wieland
Martin v. Kent Coast Railway Company
Maxfield v. Burton
Outin v. Heathcote
Larkins v. Phipps
The Ystalyfera Iron Co. v. The Neath and Brecon Railway Co.
Budd v. The Neath and Brecon Railway Co.
Cruickshank v. Bland
Bartlett v. Weeks
Rice v. Castle
Steers v. Eveleigh
Rowsell v. Morris
Watson v. Boss
Jeffrey v. Hopkins
Smith v. Keysell
Pearson v. Hall
Nicholson v. Welch
Jackson v. Paul
Brayshay v. Robinson
Kellaway, pauper, v. Douglas
The Ramsgate District Local Board v. Daniel
Dickson v. Dickson
Averill v. Beeston
Holden v. Holden
Smith v. Smith

Causes set down since the Transfer.

Matthews v. Roberts
Fulford v. Hilliard
St. John's College Cambridge v. Earl of Effingham
Newcomen v. Wharton
Sackville v. Smyth
Birks v. Wells
Glegg v. Rees
Holroyd v. Ackroyd
Frankish v. Morris
The Thames Iron Works, Ship Building, Engineering, and Dry Dock Company (Limited) v. Nisbet
Radcliffe v. Banks
Wright v. Johnston
Graham v. Drewe
Daniel v. Lloyd
Sanders v. Pooley
Jarvis v. Bergheim
Ward v. Lawson
Meek v. Corfield
Oliver v. Oliver
Blaxhall v. Allan
Haselfoot v. Boyd
Few v. Berry
Johnson v. Rawlinson
Dugdale v. Hays
Reid v. Dunnan
Harrison v. Bagnall
Webb v. Tulk
Greaves v. Lund
Basnett v. Moxon
Adie v. Clark
Myers v. Smith
Fuller v. South African Silver and Copper Mining Company (Limited)
Reason v. Mills
May v. Potter
O'Donoghue v. Lamb
Watson v. Watson
Ibbetson v May
Smith v. Holroyd
Mitchelson v. Thompson
Waring v. Currey
Jones v. Church
Bond v. Surman
Homes v. Postlethwaite
Grant v. Provest
Raiuford v. Moreton
Newell v. Keene
Meyrick v. Mathias
Reid v. Johnston
Miller v. Crockett
Harris v. Andrews
Jolly v. Ford
Evans v. Evans
Blackburn v. Lamb
Meek, Knt. v. Webster
Mulcaster v. Bell
Joseph v. Emanuel
Berry v. Gibbons
Gibbons v. Gibbons
Smith v. Hart
Line v. Hall
Coulson v. York—York v. Coulson
The Patent Marine Inventions Co. (Limited) v. Chadburn
Icke v. Underhill
Robinson v. Evans
Lord Abinger v. Ashton
Minet v. Morgan
Owen v. Symonds
Nicholson v. Knott
Lea v. Lea
Taylor v. Rule
Lacy v. Waite
Pratt v. Carnsew
Miller v. Crockett
Atherton v. Merriman
Still v. Elliott
Price v. Baines

V.C. Malins' Court.

At Westminster.

Monday ..... Nov. 3 Motions

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday ..... Nov. 4 General paper
Wednesday ..... 5 Ditto
Thursday ..... 6 Ditto
Friday ..... 7 Petitions and general paper
Saturday ..... 8 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Monday ..... 10 General paper
Tuesday ..... 11 Ditto
Wednesday ..... 12 Ditto
Thursday ..... 13 Motions and general paper
Friday ..... 14 Petitions and general paper
Saturday ..... 15 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Monday ..... 17 County Court appeals and general paper

Tuesday ..... 18 General paper
Wednesday ..... 19 Ditto
Thursday ..... 20 Motions and general paper
Friday ..... 21 Petitions and general paper
Saturday ..... 22 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Monday ..... 24 General paper
Tuesday ..... 25 Motions and general paper

Causes.

The Cassel Colliery Co. (Lim) v. The Anglo-German Mining and Compressed Fuel and Fire Clay Co.
Smith v. Government Stock Investment Co.
Smith v. Government Stock Investment Co.
Coulthurst v. Smith
Hatton v. Haywood
Trowell v. Spreckley
Denny v. Morris
Armstrong v. Holmes
Bide v. Harrison
Maxwell v. Maxwell
United Lands Co. (Lim.) v. Great Eastern Ry. Co.
Davies v. Howells
Prescott v. Barker
Maynard v. Eaton
Raggett v. Findlater
Pidsley v. Pidsley
Hawks v. Longridge
Hanson v. Leighton
Harvey v. Horry
Digby v. Ward
Candy v. Candy
The Nowgong Tea Co. of Assam (Lim.) (by Official Liquidator) v. Barry
Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co. v. Swindon Water Works Co. (Lim.)
Burgess v. Bennett
Mayor, &c., of Hastings v. Ivall
Emson v. Saffron Walden Ry. Co.
Blakey v. Rushworth
De Witte v. Denne
Hall v. Harland
Jones v. Habershon
Bain v. Percy
Smith v. Grant
Whitely v. Kemp
Brock v. Cridland
Newman v. Hendy
Kent v. Kent
Nind v. Church
Schollick v. Edye
Pickering v. Ager
Wilson v. Thornbury
Taylor v. East London Ry. Co.
Taylor v. East London Ry. Co.
Pudge v. Pudge
Randell v. Samels
Kelsey v. Kelsey
Bryan v. Moss
Parks v. Briscoe
Street v. Bonsor
Canter v. Wodehouse
Pizzey v. Wilkinson
Barrett v. Beck
Flood v. Hampden
Kettle v. Drayner
Barnes v. Barnes
Goodwin v. Gray
Reece v. Reece
Lloyd v. Finlay
Walker v. Dobson
De Bay v. Griffin
Plumer v. Gregory
Reunick v. Kino
Darcy v. Batt
Blackmore v. Tuck
Bradshaw v. Congreve
Bright, Knt. v. Marcoartu
Webster v. Malcolm
Jupp v. Callaway
Maunsell v. Payne
Ffrench v. The British Commercial Insurance Company (Limited)
Gruning v. Smethurst
Torrens v. Hilliard
Whitaker v. Whitaker
Belcher v. Green
Allen v. Lewis
Stewart v. Lupton
Gould v. Clavey
Barnston v. Barnston
Laurie v. Hemsworth
Carey v. Lloyd
Mortimer v. Ring
Caballero v. Henty
Cleaver v. Jones
Rotch v. Marshall
Murrell v. Elkins
Pollard v. Wright
Johnson v. Bailey
Camm v. Read
Hockin v. Hockin
Bailey v. Hartley
Gibson v. Taylor
MacLellan v. Buchanan
Wilson v. Compton
Johnson v. Johnson
Devereux v. Dickson
Delaney v. Hodgson
Topken v. Parrott
Hancock v. Heaton
Parker v. McKenna
Gatecliff v. Ward
Colson v. Norris
Pemberton v. Barnes
Burnand v. Taylor
Whelpdale v. Crosse
Lloyd v. Evans
White v. Witt
Brown v. Beet
Kitchin v. Ibbetson
Souch v. East London Railway Company
Peel v. Smith
Ex parte Brain and others
Humphrey v. Lawson
Moody v. Martin
Lane v. Salt
Thynne v. Day
Okey v. Hogg
Cayless v. Sills
Leach v. Smith
Koelbel v. Gardner
Prince v. Dear
Harding v. Spiller
Thomas v. Howell
Palmer v. Akers
Smith v. Smith
Moses v. James
Maddin v. Driscoll
Fisher v. Harrison
May v. May
Armstrong v. Armstrong
Day v. Steward
Lucas v. Siggers
Higgs v. Ritherdon
Stephenson v. Stephenson
Perring v. Trail
Nalborough v. Jackaman
Sedlmaier v. Lawrie
Hooper v. Hooper
Trebilcock v. Thomas
Collins v. Thorn
Blayney v. Lawrence
Pearce v. London Tramways Company (Limited)
Vickers v. Dicks
Shelton v. Kidman
Ball v. Connett
Wier v. Gisborne
Ward v. Ramsden
Angell v. Angell
Sykes v. Wilde
Dutton v. Hockenhull
Smith v. Smith
Rodgers & Sons (Limited) v. Rodgers
Stafford v. Heaton
Parr v. Nunn
Blacque v. Rowlinson
Howell v. Lloyd
Whittet v. Hooper
Moate v. Moate
Oakes v. Oakes
Collins v. Slade

V.C. Bacon's Court.

At Westminster.

Monday ..... Nov. 3 Motions

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday ..... Nov. 4 General paper
Wednesday ..... 5 Ditto
Thursday ..... 6 Ditto
Friday ..... Nov. 7 General paper
Saturday ..... 8 Petitions, short causes, and general paper

Monday ..... 10 In Bankruptcy
Tuesday ..... 11 General paper
Wednesday ..... 12 Ditto
Thursday ..... 13 Motions and adjourned summonses

Friday ..... 14 General paper
Saturday ..... 15 Petitions, short causes, and general paper

Monday ..... 17 In Bankruptcy
Tuesday ..... 18 General paper
Wednesday ..... 19 Ditto
Thursday ..... 20 Motions and adjourned summonses

Friday ..... 21 General paper
Saturday ..... 22 Petitions, short causes, and general paper

Monday ..... 24 In Bankruptcy
Tuesday ..... 25 Motions and adjourned summonses

Causes set down previous to Transfer.

The Isle of Wight Oyster Fishery Co. (Lim.) v. The Corporation of Newport (I. of W.)
Heath v. Crealock
Moon v. The Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. (Lim.)
Batchelor v. Bladon
Howes v. Phillips
Great Western Insurance Co. v. Cunliffe
Treacher & Co. (Limited) v. Treacher
Burke v. Keith
Churchill v. Portsea Island Gas Light Co.
Youde v. Cloud
London and Provincial Marine Insurance Co. v. Seymour
Taylor v. Fisher
King v. Sherrott
Whittaker v. Whittaker
Bousfield v. Bousfield
Pinchard v. Fellows
Harbesing v. Laing
Laing v. Zeden
Bailey v. Schweitzer
Giffard v. Phillips
Baxter v. Chapman
Smith v. Keene
De Brito v. Hillel
Tucker v. Dimsdale
Middleton v. Barker
Wilson v. The Furness Ry. Co.

Remaining Causes transferred from the Books of the Vice-Chancellors Sir R. MALINS and Sir J. WICKENS, by Order dated 9th June 1873.

Avis v. Avis
Yardley v. Holland
Baker v. Wilbraham
Heron v. Davey
Brown v. Towell
Gallagher v. Fleming
Towell v. Brown
Wylam v. Watts
Rudge v. Bennett
Ramm v. Taylor
James v. James
Healey v. Borough of Batley
Latham v. Chartered Bank of India, China, and Australia
Lewis v. Lewis
Pickering v. Chadwick
Colquhoun, Knt. v. Courtenay
Carter v. Henstridge
Horn v. King
Countess de Palatiano v. Hartley
Bell v. London and South-Western Bank (Lim.)
Gott v. Gott
Swain v. Swain
Schank v. Scott, Bart.
Fox v. Heinke
Blakeley v. Crawshaw
Dixon v. Fisken
Singer v. Audsley
Wickham v. Fitz-Worlock
Dick v. Montague
Hoe v. Thorpe
Greg v. Sagar
Barton v. Hobson
Ive v. Smith
Gwynne v. Great Eastern Railway Co.
Greaves v. Smith
Smith v. Butler
Moore v. Ross
Bumpus v. Bumpus
Woodford v. Brooking
Coghlan v. Kempe
Mackrell v. Notley
Shaw v. Longbottom
Driver v. Driver
Porter v. Bell
Dubois v. Charsley
Cooper v. Green
Mutlow v. S. H. Bigg
Cole v. Scott
Green v. Cooper
Rumboll v. Taylor
Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Junction Railway Company
Snelling v. Thomas
Paine v. Jones
Fisher v. Russell
Robins v. Rose
Parker v. Trigg
Parnell v. Stevens
Tomlinson v. Lowe
Bulley v. Bulley
Baron Greville v. Greville
Berry v. Harris
Dean v. Butt—Stephenson v. Butt
Evans v. Verrall
Bird v. Bird's Patent Deodorising and Utilising Sewage Co. (Limited)
Worthington v. Curtis
Earl Waldegrave v. Bastard
Lancaster v. Walker
Moon v. Veale
Bates v. Eley
Eley v. Bates
Hooper v. Abell

Causes set down since the Transfer.

Edmundson v. Hargreaves
Mackett v. Bayliss
Attorney-General v. The Furness Railway Co.
Fothergill v. Rickards
Forbes v. Black
Williams v. Evans
Hyde v. Large
Wood v. Harrogate Improvement Commissioners
Levy v. Creighton
Hoggarth v. Simpson
Vaughan v. Halliday
Adkins v. The Common Council of City of London
Walker v. Hellawell
Norris v. Barber
Clark v. Adie
Maule v. Davis
Sykes v. Smith
Lownds v. Williams
Earle v. Appleyard
Attorney-General v. Metropolitan Board of Works
Gibbon v. Fox
Stenhouse v. Davidson

V.C. Wickens' Court.

At Westminster.

Monday ..... Nov. 3 Motions

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday ..... Nov. 4 General paper
Wednesday ..... 5 Ditto
Thursday ..... 6 Ditto
Friday ..... 7 Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday ..... 8 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Monday ..... 10 General paper
Tuesday ..... 11 Ditto
Wednesday ..... 12 Ditto
Thursday ..... 13 Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Friday ..... 14 Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday ..... 15 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Monday ..... 17 General paper
Tuesday ..... Nov. 18 General paper
Wednesday ..... 19 Ditto
Thursday ..... 20 Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Friday ..... 21 Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper

Saturday ..... 22 Short causes, adjourned summonses and general paper

Monday ..... 24 General paper
Tuesday ..... 25 Motions and general paper

Causes.

Lyall v. Fluker
Stanford v. Fane
Adams v. North British Railway Co.
Magdalen College, Oxford v. Bateman.
Perham v. Legge
Perham v. Legge
Wordsworth v. Crawshaw
Bullocke v. Bullocke
Griffiths v. Bedborough
Rowed v. Saunders
Sheffield v. Gray
Arnold v. Jervis
Watts v. Watts
Attorney-General v. The Mayor, &c. of Barnsley
Littledale v. Bickersteth
Wilkinson v. Elster
Turner v. Turner
Williams v. Lucas
Newbald v. Hale
Blackstock v. Blackstock—Ashman v. Blackstock
Davies v. Eggar
Lewthwaite v. Lowthwaite
Wilson v. Coffin
Sugg v. Foster
Waring v. Scamp
Groom v. Savery
Marshall v. Redford
Murton v. Bigham
Braffield v. Scriven
Pritchard v. Roberts
Leese v. Martin
Fennings v. Fain
Sampill v. The Queensland Sheep Investment Company (Limited)
Radloff v. Le Lievre
Clipperton v. Cartwright
Bell v. Bell
Re John Evans' Estate—Evans v. Evans
Wright v. Wright
De la Rue v. Marshall
The Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co. (Limited) v. The Taff Vale Railway Co.
Boydell v. Thornewell
Wright v. Larkin
Darley v. Entwisle
Pickard v. Pickard
Gardner v. Burbury
Spraggett v. Spraggett
Gael v. Fenwick
Binns v. Fisher
Iver v. Armstrong
Oddy v. Green
Marshall v. Marshall
Christie v. Ovington
Cator v. Drew
Curnick v. Tucker
Oldham v. Oldham
Gill v. Downing
Robins v. Gillam
Lake v. Baylay
Tyssen v. Stacey
Bolton v. Adams
Lovibond v. Perryn
Angell v. Wilkinson
Augell v. Ronald
Hare v. Topham
Gwynne v. Coulthurst
Viant v. Hart
M'Callan v. Goodle
Attorney-General v. Ray
Burbury v. Burbury
Blackstock v. Ashman
Chamberlain v. Chamberlain
Howlett v. Cole
Turner v. London & South Western Railway Company
Tosswill v. Gillman
Ashman v. Blackstock.
Horwood v. Penny
Carnegie v. Carnegie
Horton v. Hall
Wilkes v. Wilkes
Beckett v. Buckley
Haynes v. Earl
Wagstaff v. Colvin
Hodges v. Patrick
Browne v. White
Dickinson v. Parr
Wilson v. Wilson
Payne v. Wright
Gray v. Denton
Cook v. Needham
Hayes v. Wright
Dimsdale v. Frith
Silverthorne v. Spokes
Campbell v. Francis
De Lisle v. Hodges
Hastie v. Pilcher
Alleyne v. Alleyne
Harrisson v. Laver
Richardson v. Mallcott
Cook v. Gingall
Benson v. Tyson
De Tourville v. Barton
Truman v. Manners-Sutton
Peters v. Haine
Waldy v. Bradshaw
Master v. Richards
Saull v. Saull
Stansfield v. Peverall
Hopkin v. Ollard
Groom v. Groom
Crawshay v. Crawshay
Boutmy v. Boutmy
Boutmy v. Burdett
Rhodes v. Rhodes
Atkinson v. Jones
Cope v. Evans
Brown v. Rye
Walker v. Lawton
Hunter v. Wortley
Grimley v. Arnold
Hervey v. Hervey
Darke v. Clough
Darke v. Starr
Miller v. Miller
Lauza v. Lewin
Baron Howard of Glossop v. Earl of Shrewsbury
Lane v. Sewell
Whitehouse v. Horton
Slack v. Stott
Adams v. Norris
Littlefield v. Plomer
Wilson v. Wilson
Wakefield v. Mattock
Coulson v. Tyrrell
Humphrys v. Bull
Tetley v. Dunwell
Gillespie v. Howard
Price v. Ray
Bruce v. Le Cerf
Brown v. Moore
Milliken v. Lowe
Goolson v. Richardson
Perry v. Bacon
Hargreaves v. Bold
Marsh v. Marsh
Kidd v. Tallentine
De Tourville v. Beswick
Boynton v. Boynton
Broadhurst v. Mellor
Fischer v. Edbrooke
Adcock v. Robinson
Havelock v. Priestly
Laidler v. Laidler
West v. Binns
Thomas v. Davies
Gray v. Bateman
Haines v. Ricketts
Cann v. Cann

Any causes intended to be heard as short causes before the Master of the Rolls or either of the Vice-Chancellors must be so marked at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

N.B.—In Vice-Chancellor Wickens' Court no cause, motion for decree or further consideration, can, except by order of the court, be marked to stand over, if it be within twelve of the last cause or matter in the printed paper of the day for hearing.

Common Law Courts.

Court of Probate.

Wednesday ..... Nov. 5
Thursday 6
Friday 7
Saturday 8
Wednesday ..... Nov. 12
Thursday 13
Friday 14
Saturday 15

CAUSES.

Court itself.

Beale v. Beale (otherwise Jones) and others
Caulton and Caulton v. Wrench
Slater v. Scattergood and others
Murray v. Murray
Presland v. Longueville
Harris and Pittam v. Simons and others
Wood v. Wood
Gibbons v. Lowe
Hawke v. Hawke
Jackson v. Jackson
Harvey v. Peck and Johnson

Jury Causes.

Tichborne v. Tichborne
Durant v. Durant and Blackett and others cited
Bird and others v. Bird
Spencer and Simpson v. Pepperdine.
Tatham v. Tatham and Tatham and others cited
Lemm v. Hawkins and others. Smith cited
Boyes v. Wall and Barrett
Emanuel and Salomon v. Braham
Earwaker v. Stedman and Stedman
Heaword v. Hardon and Hardon
Marsh and Cookson v. Anderton
Copeman and Prest v. Wrout
Baylis & Shirley v. Smith
John and John v. Ellis and others
Ruston v. Evans & Evans. Wade & Rogers intervening
Carter v. Johnson & Johnson
Bulley v. Daubeny
Hangaton and Griffith v. Elliott
Adams v. Edgley
Turner v. Broadwood
Burrage v. Burrage
Gayler & Gayler v. M'Cleish
Blackett v. Blackett
Hough and Hough v. Brandreth and Brandreth
White and others v. Halford and others
Chantrell v. Chantrell and Lamb
Brackpool v. Patterson
Robins and Finglass v. Brain and Brain
Gregory v. Davison
Carter v. Timmings
Shaw v. Still and others

Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes.

Full Court ..... Wednesday, Nov. 12

TRIALS BY JURY.

Wednesday	Nov. 19	Friday	5
Thursday	20	Saturday	6
Friday	21	Wednesday	10
Saturday	22	Thursday	11
Wednesday	26	Friday	12
Thursday	27	Saturday	13
Friday	28	Wednesday	17
Saturday	29	Thursday	18
Wednesday	Dec. 3	Friday	19
Thursday	4	Saturday	20

Full Court—Appeals.

Chaldecott v. Chaldecott and Cartwright
Powell v. Powell and Jones
Eyre v. Eyre
Erskine v. Erskine

Before the Court itself—Undefended.

Duval v. Marks, falsely called Duval
Bailey v. Bailey
Van Neirop v. Van Neirop
Knowles v. Knowles and Joyce
Grant Dalton v. Fooks, otherwise Millemau, falsely called Grant Dalton
Butcher v. Butcher
Moody v. Moody
Knight v. Knight & Phipps
Relf v. Relf, Pressley, and Wild
Gwinneth v. Gwinneth
Chapman v. Chapman and Ruddock
Hughes v. Hughes
Greenwood v. Greenwood
Richmond v. Richmond
Royston v. Royston
Stevenson v. Stevenson
Hall v. Hall
Baker v. Baker & Williams
Somerset v. Somerset
Smith v. Smith
Monck v. Monck
Forier, falsely called Wheeler v. Wheeler
O'Brien v. O'Brien
Cowne v. Cowne
Tombs v. Tombs
West v. West, Bailey, and Blessed
McNicol v. McNicol and Bedo
Rousby v. Rousby
Sissons v. Sissons
Wilkinson v. Wilkinson
Hopper v. Hopper
Millward v. Millward and Sheard
Scott v. Scott and Burnett
Kirk v. Kirk and Burgess
Hawkins v. Hawkins
Warren v. Warren, Oliver, and Granville
Babbage v. Babbage
Olliver v. Olliver
Brewer v. Brewer and Dark
Bartholomew v. Bartholomew and Gorman
Howden v. Howden
Stotherd v. Stotherd, Montgomery and Moore
Edmonds v. Edmonds
Martin v. Martin & Beaver
Parfait v. Parfait and Perry
Bumford v. Bumford and Burdett
Thompson v. Thompson, Evans, and Brothers
Norman v. Norman
Hare v. Hare
Needham v. Needham
Myers v. Myers
Tullock v. Tullock and Waylen
Thomas v. Thomas
Smith v. Smith
Broadhead v. Broadhead
Cuthbertson v. Cuthbertson
Whitchurch v. Whitchurch and Butler
Birsby v. Birkby
Anthony v. Anthony
Gill v. Gill and Slater
Atkins v. Atkins
Allan v. Allan and Somerville
Casson v. Casson & Morton
Richardson v. Richardson and Pringle
Carroll v. Carroll and Maxwell
Cook v. Cook
Nettleton v. Nettleton and Stevens
Tittensor v. Tittensor and Darby
Price v. Price
Porter v. Porter
Toyne v. Toyne
McWean v. McWean, Orr, and Goldsworthy
Eldred v. Eldred
Harrison v. Harrison
Loveday v. Loveday and Cornwell
Fagg v. Fagg
Schottlander v. Schottlander
Baker v. Baker
Saward, falsely called Atwell v. Atwell (in camera)
Maginn v. Maginn & Hayes
Waller v. Waller & Roberts

Before the Court itself—Defended.

Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald
Costerton v. Costerton
Hampden v. Hampden and Thomas
Collett v. Collett & Bruckshaw
Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Firebrace v. Firebrace
Noah v. Noah
Smithies v. Smithies
Sykes v. Sykes and Adolpho
Sadler v. Sadler
Pilsbury v. Pilsbury
Follit v. Follit
Plaw v. Plaw and Lemon
Nurse v. Nurse and Tomlin
Giacometti v. Giacometti
Watkins v. Watkins
Sisterson v. Sisterson
Eagleton v. Eagleton
Steel v. Steel
Pratt v. Pratt and Spry
Schleier v. Schleier
Fraser v. Fraser
Johnstone v. Johnstone H.M.Att-Gen. & Hawkins
Smith v. Smith
Hope v. Hope and Erdody
Morris v. Morris & Taylor
Walker v. Walker & Dickson and De Gil, otherwise D'Oliverey
Roberts v. Roberts & Clarke
Lawrence v. Lawrence and Mills
Morris v. Morris and Jones
Patchett v. Patchett
Essell v. Essell & Harding
Jackson v. Jackson
Bingley v. Bingley
Campbell v. Campbell, Totten and Doggett
Palmer v. Palmer & Moon
Wild v. Wild & Perkinton
Pearen v. Pearen & Pearen, otherwise Pearce
Staplee v. Staplee
Tregidgo v. Tregidgo
Fairmaner v. Fairmaner
Wilks v. Wilks and Paolini
Harper v. Harper & Lyttle (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Tanner v. Tanner
Noverre falsely called Bridgman v. Bridgman (in camera)
Singleton v. Singleton

Special Jury Causes.

Benn v. Benn, Okeden and Whitson—Benn v. Benn
Houson v. Houson and Trueman
Cooper v. Cooper, and Queen's Proctor intervening
Long v. Long and Richardson
Smith v. Smith
Rubery v. Rubery and Wakefield
Wood v. Wood
Shapland v. Shapland; Shapland v. Shapland
Bridges v. Bridges and Macaulay, (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Rhodes v. Rhodes and Curtis
Edwards v. Edwards and Barker
Morris v. Morris
Kingsley v. Kingsley
Archdall v. Archdall and La Touche
Bright v. Bright (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Hughes v. Hughes and Muirhead
Daggers v. Daggers and Robinson
Stanford v. Stanford
Wentworth v. Wentworth and Buscarlet
Logan v. Logan and Rat—Logan v. Logan
Trueman v. Trueman and Shaw
Hunt v. Hunt, Wicks, Collins and Leonard
Powell v. Powell and Jones
Fraser v. Fraser
Tilbrook v. Tilbrook
Hill v. Hill and Abell (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Suddick v. Suddick and Glendenning (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Palmer v. Palmer
Fisher v. Fisher and Jones (Queen's Proctor intervening)
Cleland v. Cleland and Fluke—Cleland v. Cleland
Miller v. Miller
Boughton v. Boughton
Coupland v. Coupland and Coupland
Milward v. Milward—Milward v. Milward

Common Jury Causes.

Gregg v. Gregg, Ward and Padmore
Parker v. Parker
Gething v. Gething and Baxendale — Gething v. Gething
Amery v. Amery
Frame v. Frame
Batcheler v. Batcheler
Gilbert v. Gilbert, Spencer and Gade
Newton v. Newton, Allen and Sills
Dorn v. Dorn, Welham and Towtell
Brown v. Brown and Crellin
Thompson v. Thompson and Baxter
Lang v. Lang and Prior
Greenwood v. Greenwood and Greenwood
Newton v. Newton and Hamlen
Brand v. Brand
Clarson v. Clarson and Newton
Clark v. Clark
Glover v. Glover
Child v. Child
Townsend v. Townsend and Snowdon

CAUSES standing over by consent or otherwise; to be replaced in the List of Causes for Hearing on the Petitioner giving ten days' notice in writing to the other parties for whom an appearance has been entered, and filing a copy of such notice in the Registry.

Harker v. Harker
Senior v. Senior
Tolson v. Tolson
Williamson v. Williamson and Hudson
Tatlock v. Dufaur de Loubooy, falsely called Tatlock
Colburn v. Colburn
Barlow v. Barlow
Robinson v. Robinson
Strong v. Strong
Hayes v. Hayes, Kiddy, and Bakewell
Scott v. Scott and Jones
Gabb v. Gabb and Marshall
Whitcombe v. Whitcombe
Fernando v. Shaw, falsely called Fernando
Klashen, falsely called Hughes, v. Hughes (in camera).

The judge will sit in chambers to hear summonses at half-past ten o'clock, and in court to hear motions at twelve o'clock, on Tuesday, Nov. 4, and on each succeeding Tuesday until Tuesday, Dec. 16, inclusive.

All papers for motions on Tuesday, Nov. 4, must be left with the clerk of the papers in the Registry of the Court of Probate at Doctors' Commons, or with the chief clerk of the Registry of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes at Doctors' Commons, before two o'clock on the preceding Wednesday, and for motions on subsequent Tuesdays before two o'clock on the preceding Thursdays.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Oct. 17.

GREGSON and SON, attorneys and solicitors, Rochford and Southend. Oct. 4. (William Gregson and William Gregson, jun.) Debts by Gregson, jun.

PAYNE and NELSON, solicitors in Chancery and attorneys, King's-rd, Bedford-row. Oct. 14. (Thomas William Payne and Joseph Dunn Nelson)

Gazette, Oct. 21.

JENKINS and PRICE, attorneys and solicitors, Tavistock-st Covent-gdn, and Guildford st, Chertsey. June 24. (Thomas Moses Jenkins and Arthur Rolls Price)

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Oct. 24.

To surrender in the Country.

ADDISON, GEORGE, gentleman, Bath. Pet. Oct. 22. Reg. Smith. Sur. Nov. 5
GARDNER, JOSEPH, butcher, Ware. Pet. Oct. 18. Dep-Reg. Hawks. Sur. Nov. 6
HOLYOAKE, LYTTLETON, esq., Ombersley. Pet. Oct. 20. Sur. Nov. 7
POOLE, CHARLES, attorney, Pudsey. Pet. Oct. 21. Reg. Robinson. Sur. Nov. 7
SWIFT, HENRY, no occupation, Stoke-on-Trent. Pet. Oct. 22. Dep-Reg. Marshall. Sur. Nov. 8
TAYLOR, THOMAS, and WILDES, HENRY, joiners, Hyde, near Stockport. Pet. Oct. 20. Reg. Hall. Sur. Nov. 13

Gazette, Oct. 28.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

BUDGETT, JOHN SHARON BURGESS, surgeon, King's-pl, Commercial-rd. Pet. Oct. 23. Reg. Roche. Sur. Nov. 11
DENNYS, EDWARD LASCELLES, retired Major-General of Her Majesty's Indian army, Ledbury-rd, Bayswater. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Brougham. Sur. Nov. 11
PARK, JAMES ALLAN, Cadogan-ter, Sloane-st. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Brougham. Sur. Nov. 19

To surrender in the Country.

AMBLER, JOHN, ale dealer, Sale. Pet. Oct. 23. Reg. Kay. Sur. Nov. 13
BYAM, EDWARD G., captain in H. M.'s army, Woolston, near Southampton. Pet. Oct. 23. Reg. Thorndike. Sur. Nov. 11
HUTTON, ALEXANDER, silk agent, Nottingham. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Patchitt. Sur. Nov. 10
SIMPSON, CHARLES, builder, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Phillips. Sur. Nov. 8
SPICER, WILLIAM, baker, Wareham. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Dickinson. Sur. Nov. 7

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Oct. 21.

ABRAHAMS, ABRAHAM, boot warehouseman, Bath. June 3, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Oct. 24.

ABEL, GEORGE, schoolmaster, Brighton. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sols. Black, Freeman, and Gell, Brighton
ADAMS, SARAH, widow, of no occupation, Longton. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley
AVIS, EDWARD HORWOOD, transfer printer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at twelve, at office of Sols. Jaif and Goule, Birmingham
BATTY, JOHN, wholesale druggist, Hull. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Stead and Sibree, Hull
BELCHER, NAPOLEON, and STAGG, WILLIAM, brewers, Hassard-st, Hackney-rd. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 13, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Duffield and Bruty, Tokenhouse-yd
BISHOP, WILLIAM ROBERT, butcher, Broadway, Ealing. Pet. Oct. 14. Nov. 4, at three, at the New-inn, Ealing. Sol. Philp, Hayes
BLAKE, FRANCIS THOMAS, shipbuilder, Hope Shipbuilding-yard, Northfleet. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 20, at three, at Barnard, Clark, M'Lean, and Co., Lothbury. Sols. Messrs. Beard, Basinghall-st
BOND, WILLIAM, innkeeper, Callington. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 8, at eleven, at office of Sol. Peter, Callington
BOWERS, JAMES, miller, Windermere-rd, Upper Holloway. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 6, at two, at 13, Southampton-bldgs, Chancery-la. Sol. Lydall
BROOKE, WILLIAM, hotel keeper, Essex-st, Strand. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 13, at three, at office of Sols. Grout and Stephenson, Suffolk-la, Cannon-st
BROOKS, FREDERICK, out of business, Malden-rd, Kentish-town. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 11, at twelve, at office of Sols. Smith and Vickers, Southampton-bldgs, Holborn
BROWN, DAVID, tailor, Bolton. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at three, at office of Sol. Gooden, Manchester
CARTER, ROBERT, gold chain maker, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at eleven, at office of Sol. Davies, Birmingham
CHESTER, WILLIAM HENRY, commission merchant, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sols. Barrell and Rodway, Liverpool
CHRISTIE, JAMES COKE, wine merchant, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 13, at three, at office of Sols. Barrell and Rodway, Liverpool
COLLINGE, JAMES, provision dealer, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Murray, Manchester
CREESE, THOMAS, farmer, Powick and Maddersfield. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at three, at the Reindeer inn, Worcester. Sol. Parry, Birmingham
DAVIDSON, RICHARD, tailor, St. Helen's. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 5, at three, at office of Sol. Ritson, Liverpool
DEAN, WILLIAM, grocer, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 5, at two, at Crowther and Co., accountants, Manchester. Sol. Salt, Tunstall
FELTON, JAMES, bootmaker, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 4, at ten, at office of Sol. Rhodes, Bradford
FITZMAURICE, THOMAS, wholesale provision dealer, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 11, at three, at the Waterloo hotel, Manchester. Sol. Bent, Manchester
FORRESTER, JARVIS, in lodgings, Longton. Pet Oct. 16. Nov. 6, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Welch, Longton
FRANKLYN, BENJAMIN, tailor, King's-rd, Chelsea. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 20, at eleven, at Slater and Panell, Guildhall-chbs. Sols. Messrs. Beard, Basinghall-st
GARDINER, GEORGE, bricklayer, Huddersfield. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 11, at eleven, at office of Sol. Sykes, Huddersfield
GIBSON, GEORGE, tailor, Knaresborough. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 8, at twelve, at office of Sols. Messrs. Kirby, Knaresborough
GREEN, JOSEPH, innkeeper, Milford. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 5, at half-past one, at the Townhall, Carmarthen. Sol. Lloyd, Haverfordwest
GROVES, ANNA, baker, Webber-st, Blackfriars-rd. Pet. Oct. 14. Oct. 31, at three, at the Claremont Arms, Upper Grange-road, Bermondsey. Sol. Porter, Leadenhall-st
HARRIS, CHARLES BUTLER, clerk in holy orders, Dunstable. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at eleven, at Lovelock and Whiffen, Coleman-st. Sol. Robinson, Old Broad st
HARRISON, ROBERT, tailor, Barnsley. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 11, at twelve, at the Royal hotel, Barnsley
HARVEY, JAMES, grocer, Newport. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at eleven, at Nicholls and Leatherdale, Old Jewry-chmbs. Sol. Joyce, Newport
HARWOOD, THOMAS, plumber, Bolton. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 7, at three, at office of Sol. Dawson, Bolton
HEALD, BENJAMIN, fruiterer, Stockton. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 7, at two, at the Station hotel, Stockton. Sol. Robinson, Darlington
HENNER, CORD, tailor, High Holborn. Pet. Oct. 17. Nov. 4, at three, at office of Sol. Swaine, Cheapside
HOWARD, HENRY ROBERT, stonemason, Watford. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 12, at three, at Sols. Jones, Tindale, and Grove
JOHNSON, ELIZABETH, out of business, Harborne. Pet. Oct. 10. Nov. 4, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Davies, Birmingham
JONAS, JOHN, jun., furniture broker, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at three, at the Royal hotel, Crew. Sol. Salt, Tunstall
JONES, ROBERT WILLIAM, apothecary, St. Thomas's Hospital, Lambeth. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 19, at four, at office of Sol. Robinson, Temple-chmbs, Fleet-st
KOHN, ADOLPH, importer of Bohemian glass ware, Gerrard-st, Soho. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 8, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall st
LAMBARD, GEORGE, smith, Mare-st, Hackney. Pet. Oct. 2. Oct. 31, at twelve, at office of Mr. Hudgell, 37, Gresham-st
LANGFIELD, EDWIN, no occupation, Maidenhead. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 6, at eleven, at office of Sols. Fletcher, St. Paul, Lynch, and Smith, Staple-inn, Holborn
LAWRENCE, RICHARD, farmer, Swinfen-farm, near Lichfield. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 7, at twelve, at office of Sols. Barnes and Russell, Lichfield
LEONARD, EDWARD, jun., stationer, High-st, Cheltenham. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at eleven, at office of Sol. Marshall, Cheltenham
LEWIS, THOMAS, builder, Twerton. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Wilton, Bath
MILTON, WILLIAM, grocer, Tower-st, Waterloo-rd. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 4, at three, at 41, Gutter-la, Cheapside
MOTTERAM, GEORGE HENRY, paper dealer, Grand Junction-st, gardener, Coleshill-la, Fulham-rd. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at twelve, at office of Sols. Smith and Vickers, Southampton-bldgs, Holborn
PEEDHAM, WILLIAM, journeyman joiner, Nottingham. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at eleven, at C. Rogers, Willoughby-house, Pavement, Nottingham. Sol. Black
NICHOLSON, GEORGE, grocer, Horsforth, near Leeds. Pet. Oct 18. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sol. Granger, Leeds
PARRATT, GEORGE FREDERICK, no occupation, Marylebone-rd. Pet. Oct. 15. Nov. 6, at two, at Lovelock and Whiffin, accountants, 14, Coleman-st. Sol. Starkey, Angel-ct, Throgmorton-street
PARTRIDGE, FREDERICK, machinist, Stoke. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 4, at one, at the Lamb Hotel, Nantwich. Sol. Lisle, Nantwich, and Crewe
PEACEY, ARTHUR THOMAS, out of business, St. Paul's rd, Cannonbury. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st
PERMAN, WILLIAM, yeoman, Mottisfont. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 11, at twelve, at office of Sols. Stead, Tylee and Potter, Romsey
POUPART, ANN, and POUPART, JAMES, market gardeners, Walham-green, Fulham. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 12, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Chinery and Aldridge, Essex-st, Strand
RAWCLIFFE, JOHN, cloth manufacturer, Leeds. Pet. Oct. 17. Nov. 4, at one, at office of Sol. Hardwick, Leeds
RICHARDSON, GEORGE THOMAS, coach builder, Barbican. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Howell, 112, Cheapside
SAMUEL, ABRAHAM, job draper, Great Alice-st, Goodman's-fields. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 3, at two, at office of Sol. Barnett, New Broad-st
SANDS, OSBORN ROBERT, tea dealer, Lower Sloane-st, Chelsea. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 4, at two, at Isard and Betts, accountants, 46, Eastcheap. Sols. Reed and Lovell, Basinghall-st

SAVORY, JOHN, shoemaker, Northrepps. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 13, at twelve, at the Dog inn, Aylsham. Sols. Winter and Francis, Norwich

SEED, SAMUEL, builder, Rochdale. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at three at office of Sol. Ashworth, Rochdale

SELL, EDWARD MARK, victualler, Rotherhithe-st. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at twelve, at office of Sols. Taylor and Ward, Great James-st, Bedford-row

SHEIL, LAWRENCE, ironmonger, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 10, at two, at office of Sol. Hughes, Liverpool

SPRING, HENRY ALFRED, saddler, Gloucester. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 3, at one, at 1, College-bldgs, Gloucester

STACEY, CATHERINE JANE, teacher of millinery, Clarence-st, Upper Brook-st. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 6, at three, at office of Sols. Smith and Boyer, Manchester

STONE, JAMES, tailor, Exmouth. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 12, at twelve, at the Bute Haven hotel, Exeter. Sol. Sobey

SYMONS, ROBERT, photographer, Tenby. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 10, at twelve, at the Townhall, Carmarthen. Sol. Stokes, Tenby

TASKER WILLIAM, joiner, Hessle. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 3, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Rollit, Hull

THOMAS, WILLIAM LOUIS, grocer, Brushfield-st, Bishopsgate-without, and Market-row, Crossland-rd, South Hackney. Nov. 3, at three, at office of Sols. Hicklin and Washington, Trinity-sq, Southwark

TOMLIN, JAMES, painter, Barnsley. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at ten, at office of Sols. Dibb and Raley, Barnsley

TUBBY, ROBERT JOHN, stationer, Broad-st, Teddington. Pet. Oct. 20. Oct. 28, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st, in lieu of the place originally named

TURNER, HENRY WILLIAM, grocer, Hulme. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 7, at three, at office of Sols. Eltoft and Hampson, Manchester

WALKER, THOMAS, joiner, Huddersfield. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at half-past two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Sykes, Huddersfield

WALKER, WILLIAM, gentleman, Bournemouth. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 6, at eleven, at office of Sols. Guilliaume, Fleet-st

WARE, FREDERICK, and LAVERACK, GEORGE EDWARD, engineers, City-bridge, and Marshgate-la, High-st, Stratford. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 12, at two, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Swaine, Cheapside

WHITE, WILLIAM, grocer, Burnley. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sols. Southern and Nowell, Burnley

WILLIAMS, JOHN, grocer, Hereford. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at one, at office of Sol. Farmer, Hereford

WILLIAMS, JOHN, wheelwright, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sols. Farrar and Hall, Manchester

WRIGHT, Rev. RICHARD, clerk, Gisburn, West Riding. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 13, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Maule and Burton, Huntingdon

Gazette, Oct. 28.

ADCOCK, WILLIAM, brickmaker, Sileby. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at twelve, at office of Sols. Deane and Lickorish, Loughborough, and Walbrook, London

ADUTT, LEON MARCO, and FINZI, HENRY WARBURG, commission agents, Mark-la. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 21, at twelve, at offices of Nicholson, 7 and 8, Railway-approach, London-bridge. Sol. Montagu, Bucklersbury

ASHMAN, JOSEPH, general dealer, Emma-pl, Kensington. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at three, at 15, Oldham's-gardens, Farringdon-road

AUSTIN, THOMAS HENRY, ironmonger, Crewkerne. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hodgson, Birmingham

BACKHOUSE, THOMAS, gentleman, Bromley-rd, par. Beckenham. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 17, at twelve, at offices of Quilter, Ball, and Co., Moorgate-st. Sols. Kimber and Ellis, Lombard-st

BAKER, HENRY JONES, and BAKER WALTER WALTON, saddlers, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at twelve, at offices of Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co., Bristol. Sols. Fussell, Prichard, and Swann, Liverpool

BAKER, WALTER WALTON, saddler, Didmarton. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at two, at offices of Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co., Bristol. Sols. Fussell, Prichard and Swann, Bristol

BARRATT, WILLIAM, bootmaker, Edgware-rd. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 10, at three, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Clarke, St. Mary's-sq, Paddington

BASTIN, THOMAS FRANCIS, grocer, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 17, at eleven, at office of Sol. Ward, Bristol

BATCHELOR, MARK, oilman, Maidstone. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at one, at the Bridge House hotel, London Bridge, Southwark. Sol. Goodwin, Maidstone

BIBBY, SAMUEL JORDAN, jeweller, Carnarvon. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 7, at two, at the Queen's hotel, Chester. Sols. Picton, Jones, and Roberts, Carnarvon

BISHTON, WILLIAM, timber merchant, Wolverhampton. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 8, at twelve at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton

BLYTH, CHESLYN ABNEY, captain in Her Majesty's 2nd regiment of foot, Cathedral hotel, St. Paul's Churchyard. Pet. Sept. 1. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sols. Raven and Ellis, Queen Victoria-st

BONNEY, EDWARD CORNELIUS, grocer, Southampton. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 11, at twelve, at office of Nicholls and Leatherdale, accountants, Old Jewry-chmbs, London. Sol. Swayne, Southampton

BOTT, JOHN MALING, and BOTT, JOHN, wire workers, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hodgson, Birmingham

BRAY, RICHARD, bootmaker, Upper Berkeley-st-west, Hyde-pk. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 11, at two, at offices of Messrs. Broad, Walbrook. Sol. Ellerton, Queen-st, Cheapside

BROOKS, CHARLES CHRISTOPHER, commercial traveller, Elgin-ter, Catford Bridge. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 6, at two, at the Sambrook hotel, Sambrook-ct, Basinghall-st. Sol. Gowing, Basinghall-street

BROWN, JOHN, and BROWN, CALEB, draper, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 12, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Buller, Birmingham

CAWDRON, JOSEPH, no occupation, Heighington. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at eleven, at office of Sol. Page, jun., Lincoln

CLARKE, HENRY, builder, Shifnal. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at eleven, at office of Sol. Osborne, Shifnal

COKER, JOHN, jun., contractor, Ryde. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at half-past twelve, at the Crown hotel, Ryde. Sol. Joyce, Newport

COBB, JOHN, gardener, Grove-rd, Richmond. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Haynes, Grecian-chmbs, Devereux-ct, Temple

COLLINS, JAMES, butcher, Walworth-rd, Lambeth. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Cooke, Devereux-court, Temple

COOKE, JOHN MEASURES, auctioneer, Leamington Priors. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 10, at three, at the Bath hotel, Leamington Priors. Sols. Sanderson and Hassall, Leamington

COOK, JOSEPH, greengrocer, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Neill, Bradford

COOK, THOMAS HARRISON, outfitter, South Shields. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sol. Duncan, South Shields

CORDINGLEY, JOSEPH BINKS, b erhouse keeper, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester

CORFE, JOHN, coal business, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 6. Nov. 6, at ten, at offices of Sol. East, Birmingham

COX, LEWIS, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham

CRAIG, ROBERT, draper, Portsea. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at four, at offices of Sol. King, Portsea

EDISS, THOMAS WYATT, builder, Southsea. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 8, at eleven, at office of Paice, Landport. Sol. Walker, Landport

EDMONDSON, EDWARD, seamen's outfitter, North Shields. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 14, at three, at office of Sol. Duncan, South Shields

FARRAH, FREDERICK, out of business, West End-grove, Mortlake. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 15, at one, at office of Sol. Warrand, Ludgate-hill

FRENCH, GEORGE, bootmaker, High-st, Marylebone. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sol. Chalk, Moorgate-st

GERRISH, WILLIAM HALL, corn merchant, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 13, at two, at office of Barnard, Thomas, Clarke, and Co., Cardiff. Sol. Ensor, Cardiff

GIBSON, JOHN CHARLES, surgeon, Droitwich. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 8, at three, at the Hop Market hotel, Worcester. Sol. Corbet

GOOLD, GIDEON, factor, Handsworth. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Hodgson, Birmingham

GROVES, JOHN JAMES, corn merchant, Surbiton. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 21, at four, at office of Sol. Wetherfield, Gresham-bldgs, Guildhall, London

HOLLIS, THOMAS ROBERT, contractor's assistant, Yalding-rd, Blue Anchor-rd, Bermondsey. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sols. May and Sykes, Adelaide-pl

HOSDEN, WILLIAM JOHN, bootmaker, High-st, Lower Norwood. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at twelve, at the Greyhound hotel, Croydon. Sol. Parry

JIBSON, RICHARD PRINCE, shopkeeper, York. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 6, at eleven, at office of Sol. Crumbie, York

JOHNSON, JOSEPH, and WADDINGTON, EDWIN ARTHUR, oakum manufacturers, Burdett-rd, Limehouse. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 13, at three, at office of Sols. Raven and Curtis, Queen Victoria-st

LEVASTON, LEWIS EDWARD, professor of music, Wimborne. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 17, at twelve, at office of Sol. Whitehead, Bournemouth

LITTLE, ROBERT, bricklayer, Edgware-rd, Hendon. Pet. Oct, 13. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sol. May, Golden-sq

LONG, GEORGE, printer, Cinderford. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 8, at one, at offices of Sol. Jackson, Stroud

MACVEIGH, JAMES, jun., draper, Maxwell-rd, Fulham. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 7, at twelve, at the Chamber of Commerce, Cheapside. Sols. Peacock and Goddard, South-sq, Gray's-inn

MARTIN, JOHN, warehouseman, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 7, at three, at the Star hotel, Manchester

MERIGOT, JEAN LOUIS, wine merchant, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at twelve, at office of Ivey, accountant, Liverpool. Sol. Hughes, Liverpool

MERRIN, HENRY, crinoline skirt manufacturer, Wood-st, City, and draper, Stoke Newington-rd. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at two, at offices of Gamble and Harvey, 1, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sols. Miller and Miller, Sherborne-la

MITCHELL, HENRY, licensed victualler, Tiverton. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 18, at two-five, at office of Sol. Toby, Exeter

MITCHELL, JOHN, fish dealer, Halifax. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at four, at offices of Sol. Storey, Halifax

MYERS, MORRIS, wire worker, Euston-rd. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at four, at offices of Dubois, accountant, Gresham-bldgs. Sol. Sydney, Leadenhall-st

NUTTALL, SAMUEL, wood turner, Bury. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 12, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Grundy and Co., Bury

OLIVER, THOMAS, quarryman, Llanddeiniolen. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 8, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Jones, Conway

PITCHER, WILLIAM, builder, Ascot, par. Sunninghill. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 14, at three, at offices of Sol. Long, Windsor

RESTELL, JAMES HENRY, wine merchant, Jewry-st, and Lee-rd, Blackheath. Pet. Oct. 25, Nov. 11, at two, at office of Sols. Fallows and Whitehead, Lancaster-pl, Strand

RICHARDSON, JOSEPH HAYTON POLLARD, licensed victualler, Bootle, near Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Vine, 30, Cable-st, Liverpool. Sol. Worship, Liverpool

ROBERTS, GEORGE, jeweller, Kingston-upon-Hull, and Cottingham. Pet. Oct 20. Nov. 10, at twelve, at office of Sol. Spink, Kingston-upon-Hull

RULE, CHARLES, mining agent, Gracechurch st. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 13, at two, at office of Lass, accountant, Cornhill. Sols. Wilkins, Blyth, and Marsland, St. Swithin's-la

RUSSELL, WILLIAM, stationer, Walsall. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sols. Duignan, Lewis, and Lewis, Walsall

SEBRIGHT, GEORGE, artist, Linslade. Pet. Oct. 15. Nov. 4, at three, at the Clarendon hotel, Linslade. Sol. Parkes, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand

SEWELL, GEORGE ROBINS, licensed victualler, Tooley-st. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 14, at twelve, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Clark

SIMCOE, JOHN, farmer, Nantwich. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 13, at three, at office of Sol. Martin, Nantwich

STANLEY, JOSEPH BIRD, builder, Leamington Priors. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at twelve, at the Bath hotel, Leamington Priors. Sol. Clinch

STARK, JOHN, tobacconist, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 12, at twelve, at office of Sols. Keenlyside and Forster, Newcastle-upon-Tyne

STEVENS, MATTHEW, baker, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 7, at twelve, at office of Sol. Wal'dron, Cardiff

THOMPSON, JOSEPH, and THOMPSON, JEREMIAH, and THOMPSON, BENJAMIN, miners, Quarry Bank, near Brierley Hill. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 7, at eleven at office of Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury

THOMPSON, ROBERT, butcher, Essex-rd. Pet. Oct. 17. Nov. 4, at eleven, at the Claremont Arms, Upper Grange-rd, Bermondsey. Sol. Porter, Leadenhall-st

THOMAS, WILLIAM, jun., potato salesman, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 17, at three, at office of Sols. Rowlands, Bagnall, and Rowlands, Birmingham

TODD, WILLIAM, gardener, Manthorpe-cum-Little Gonnerby. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at twelve, at the Angel hotel, Grantham. Sol. Belk, Nottingham

TRIGG, CHARLES, tailor, Leicester. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Owston, Leicester

TURNER, ROBERT JOHN, bookseller, Ridgway-rd, Wimbledon. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Flux and Leadbitter, Leadenhall-st

VUILLIAMY, HENRY, surveyor, Gracechurch-st, and Fairview, Macaulay-rd, Clapham common. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 20, at two, at office of the Mercantile Association, 33, Gutter-la. Sol. Vanderpump, South-sq, Gray's-inn

WALKER, JOHN, farmer, Halifax. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 10, at three, at offices of Sol. Rhodes, Halifax

WHITE, EDWARD, bootmaker, Priors Hardwick. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 13, at four, at the Buck and Bell inn, Banbury. Sol. Wood, Southam

WHITE, GEORGE, poulterer, Exeter. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Friend, Exeter

WHITWELL, JAMES RAMSEY, grocer, South Shields. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at three, at offices of Sol. Duncan, South Shields

WRIGHTSON, MARIA, widow, milliner, Coburg-cottages, Albert-rd, Richmond. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 11, at three, at office of Sols. Wood and Hare, Basinghall-st, also at Croydon and Reigate

Dividends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Bloomfield, G. C. grocer, second and final, 7d. At Sol. Coaks, Norwich.—Culshaw, G. joiner, final, 3d. At Trust. J. Platt, 36, London-st, Southport.—Gribble, F. J. builder, first and final, 5s. At Trust. R. E. James, 52, Moorgate-st.—Houchen, J. draper, first and final, 1s. At Barnard, Clarke, McLean, and Co., 3, Lothbury.—Kinsey, B. C. wine merchant, first, 2s. 6d. At Trust. J. Slater, 1, Guildhall-chmbs, Basinghall-st.—Lassigue, T. R. draper, second and final, 7s. 5d. At Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co. Albion-chmbs, Bristol.—Litbetter, W. farmer, first and final, 4½d. At Sol. Glover, Walsall.—McAra, D. S. outfitter, first and final, 5s. 9d. At Honey, Humphrys, Baggs, and Co., accountants, 28, King-st, Cheapside.—Watson, H. stationer, first, 2s. 4d. At Trust. S. Smith, Harvey, and Co., 65, Basinghall-st.—Wike, G. and J. M. merchants, second, 8d. At Trust. A. Murray, 102, King-st, Manchester.

Michael, W. shopkeeper, second, 2d. Shepard, Tredegar

Bower, L. stone merchant, first and final, 20s. At Trust. J. S. Jennings, 7, Charles-s, Bradford.—Brust, J. ironfounder, first and final, 3s. At Trust. W. G. Dixon, 46, Queen-st, Wolverhampton.—Cumes, W. butcher, second and final, 1s. 6d. At Trust. E. Snelgrove, Queen-st, Exeter.—Ennis, P. farmer, first, 1s. At Trust. W. G. Smith, Shannon-ct, Corn-st, Bristol.—Hill, G. auctioneer, first and final, 2s. 10d. At Trust. D. Shaw, Pierpoint-st, Worcester.—Illingworth, H. joiner, second and final, 1s. 7d. At Trust. G. Chambers, Darley-st, Bradford.—Jepson, H. hat manufacturer, first and final, 8s. 3d. At Trust. H. Vaughan, 61, Princess-st, Manchester.—Jones, H. O. provision merchant, first, 8d. At Trust. H. Bolland, 10, South John-st, Liverpool.—Juby, W. F. draper, first and final, 8½d. At Trust. J. D. Viney, 99, Cheapside.—Page, F. tobacconist, first 2s. At Trust. E. C. Chatterley, 25, Old Jewry.—Pearson, T. coal dealer, third, 8d. At Trust. W. Heaton, Old Townhall-chmbs.—Salmon, F. W. manufacturer of incubators, final, 3s. 1½d. By Trust. H. W. Newton, at office of J. C. Warden, 11, Guild-st, Stratford-on-Avon.—Smith, W. C. coprolite merchant, final, 1s. 1½d. At Trust. C. Wisbey, 26, Trinity-st, Cambridge.—Webb, C. J. retired paymaster from navy, 1s. 3d. At office of J. Howard, registrar of Portsmouth County Court.

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTH.

CARLESS.—On the 17th ult., at Hereford, the wife of Joseph Carless, Town Clerk of Hereford, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

SHEE—INNES.—On the 14th ult. at Thomas-town, county Kilkenny, George Shee, of 11, King's Bench-walk, Temple, barrister-at-law, to Jane, eldest daughter of H. Innes, Esq., of Thomas-town.

DEATHS.

PEEL.—On the 15th ult., aged 46 years, Arthur Peel, H.M.'s Chief Justice for the Island of Antigua.

TALBOT.—On the 23rd ult., aged 70 years, Henry Talbot, Esq., of Oakland, near Kidderminster, Justice of the Peace, and Deputy-Lieutenant for the county of Worcester.

WICKENS.—On the 23rd ult., at Chilgrove, Chichester, aged 86 years, Vice-Chancellor Sir John Wickens.

To Readers and Correspondents.

A number of communications from correspondents are unavoidably held over.
Edwardo.—We do not insert questions of the nature you send.
Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the Law Times, and of the Law Times Reports, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the Law Times, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. Law Times Reports, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The Law Times goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.
When payment is made in postage stamps, not more than 5s. may be remitted at one time.
All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.
The Eugenie (Nos. 6491 and 6534)—Bottomry—Master's wages, and disbursements 314

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Mansfield (falsely called Cuno) v. Cuno—Suit for nullity of marriage—Impotence—Delay—Burthen of proof 316

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
Stevens v. The Mid Hants Railway Company; The London Financial Association v. Stevens—Railway company—Railway Companies Act 1867 318
Simmons v. Pitt—Real estate—Conversion—Failure of purpose for which conversion was directed 320
Cooper v. Cooper—Portions—Advancement—Gift of share of residue by will 321

V.C. BACON'S COURT.
Re The Matlock Old Bath Hydropathic Company (Limited) (Wheatcroft's Case—Company—Winding-up—Conditional contract to take shares 324

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
Best v. Pembroke (Curties Garnishee)—Garnishee—Interpleader—Judgment creditor 327

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
Burns v. Poulson—Negligence—Master and servant—Acting within the scope of his employment 329

COURT OF EXCHEQUER AND EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.
Allgood and others v. Blake; Roach v. The Same; Clennell v. The Same; Reed v. The Same; Allgood and others v. F. Blake—Will—Limitations of estates tail—Ultimate limitation "for default of such issue to all and every other the issue of my body" 331

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

To Readers and Correspondents 15
Leading Articles:—
Topics of the Week 15
Debenture Bonds and Promissory Notes 16
The Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 17
Suggestions for Amending the Practice Relating to Stop Orders 18
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices 18
The Judicial Statistics for 1872 19
Notes of the Week:—
Court of Appeal in Chancery 20
V.C. Wickens' Court 20
Patent Law—Complete Specification 20
Solicitors' Journal:—
Topics of the Week 21
Notes of New Decisions 21
Correspondence 22
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 22
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 23
Reports of Sales 22
Real Property and Conveyancing:—
Notes of New Decisions 23
County Courts:—
Norwich County Court 23
Bankruptcy Law:—
Westminster County Court 24
Legal News 24
Notes and Queries on Points of Practice 25
Law Societies:—
Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association 25
University College 26
Articled Clerks' Society 26
The Union Society of London 26
Solicitors' Benevolent Association 26
Law Students' Debating Society 26
Law Association 26
Huddersfield Law Students' Debating Society 26
Legal Obituary 27
The Gazettes 27
Births, Marriages, and Deaths 28

The Law and the Lawyers.

So great is the dissatisfaction felt amongst the Profession in most of what we may call Government seaport towns, upon the subject of naval courts martial, and the mode of conducting them, that a movement is on foot with a view of bringing the matter under the consideration of the House of Commons; indeed, we are informed that at Plymouth a petition addressed to the House has been prepared and submitted to the members of the Law Society there. It is reported that the Lords of the Admiralty and the Privy Council will also be memorialised upon the subject. We know that at Portsmouth great complaint is made by local professional men of the tedious mode of procedure and of the whole system of trial by naval courts martial. Reform is absolutely necessary, and we wish the petitioners success. The Judge Advocate should be a member of the Bar, one of standing trained in the practical work of his profession; and solicitors in naval arsenals should be appointed Deputy Judge Advocates.

Although the appointment of the Attorney-General to the Chief Justiceship of the Common Pleas has not been made at the time we write, there is no doubt that the position will be offered to him, and we have reason to know that it will be accepted. Therefore we may treat Sir John Coleridge as the new Lord Chief Justice. He is the eldest son of the Right Hon. Sir John Taylor Coleridge, was born in 1821, and educated at Eton; he was scholar of Balliol College, and afterwards Fellow of Exeter College Oxford. He was called to the Bar of the Middle Temple in 1847, was made Recorder of Portsmouth in 1855, and received a silk gown in 1861. He contested Exeter in the Liberal interest in July 1864, and though defeated on that occasion, was returned for that city at the general election in 1865. He was appointed Solicitor-General in Dec. 1868, on which occasion he received the honour of knighthood. In Nov. 1871 he succeeded Sir R. P. Collier as Attorney-General. He has been called the "West of England lawyer," and his career on the Western Circuit in a measure entitles him to be so designated, but we do not think that he would put foremost his claim to be a lawyer. In an address delivered to the Articled Clerks' Society he too modestly, no doubt, expressed his surprise at his own success at the Bar. That success, however, is easily to be accounted for. Elegant and polished speakers are not numerous at the Bar—their occupation, indeed, is almost gone. Consequently Sir John Coleridge was able to take a position which, if not of the highest kind recognised by practical lawyers, was certainly unique. But with this fine faculty of speech he unites a singular capacity for apprehending rapidly the legal bearings of a case and applying legal principles. For this reason we anticipate that he will make an admirable Judge.

Among the publications made under the authority of the Master of the Rolls, there appeared three years back an interesting work entitled, "The Black Book of the Admiralty," and edited by Sir Travers Twiss. In the preface to the work the learned editor regrets the loss of the original Black Book, which was a sort of record of the ancient statutes or laws governing the admiralty jurisdiction, and was supposed to have been written, in part at least, as far back as the reign of Edward III. or Richard II., before the prohibitions restraining the court from exercising jurisdion over foreign contracts commenced. Its loss seems to have been discovered by a Mr. Luders on 2nd June, 1808, when he applied at the office at Doctors' Commons and was informed "by the proper officer" that they had never seen such a book, and knew nothing of it. The value of the book as a legal authority may not be very great, but as a literary curiosity, and perhaps as evidence of the jurisdiction claimed, if not exercised, by the Court of Admiralty in early days, it is most interesting. Hence we are glad to be able to announce that the missing volume has been discovered by the Assistant Registrar of the Court of Admiralty, Mr. Bathurst, among some private papers belonging to a former Registrar of that court. Its identity can scarcely be doubted, because it answers so accurately all the descriptions given of it, and moreover, among the same papers was found a document, dated in the year 1808, and signed with the initials of Sir Christopher Robinson, afterwards Judge of the Admiralty Court (as well as those of other persons), purporting to be a report to the College of Advocates, as to the Black Book in the Admiralty registry. This report, which is in print, so accurately describes the volume which has been found that its authenticity cannot be doubted. The Black Book is written on vellum, and some of its pages are illuminated. It was originally bound in black—hence its name; but now the colour has much worn away. At the same time some other old manuscripts of considerable interest were discovered.

We are happy to say that the anticipations concerning the vacancy in Vice-Chancellor Wickens' Court, which we expressed last week, have been disappointed. The Lord Chancellor recommended Mr. Charles Hall for the appointment, and he has accordingly been raised to the Bench. It was expected, we believe, that a member of the Common Law Bar would be selected to succeed Vice-Chancellor Wickens, so as to prepare for the coming into operation of the Judicature Act. The maintenance of the divisions of the courts would seem to render such a step unnecessary, and it is difficult to point out a common lawyer, who could have filled the post, who would have accepted it. Under all the circumstances, therefore, we may congratulate the Government on having made a perfectly satisfactory appointment. The new Vice-Chancellor is the fourth and eldest surviving son of the late John Hall, Esq., of Manchester. He was a pupil of Mr. Lewis Duval, the most eminent Conveyancer of his day, and subsequently of the late James Russell then an equity draftsman in very large practice. He was called to the Bar by the Society of the Middle Temple in November 1838, and was soon engaged in a large and increasing practice. Amongst the more celebrated cases in which he acted as counsel were the Bridgwater case, in which he was engaged with the late Lord WESTBURY and the present LORD CHIEF BARON, and the Shrewsbury case, and very recently the case of Allgood v. Blake, in which he argued alone, both in the Court of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, on behalf of the successful parties, many of the most eminent counsel of the day, including the present LORD CHANCELLOR and the present MASTER of the ROLLS, being counsel against him. Although never raised to the dignity of a Queen's Counsel, he was offered a silk gown by the late Lord WESTBURY, then LORD CHANCELLOR, which he declined, and in the year 1864 he was appointed by the same learned lord one of the conveyancing counsel to the Court of Chancery. He was elected a Bencher of the Middle Temple in January last year. Since the elevation of the late Vice-Chancellor WICKENS to the Bench, he has been the acknowledged head of the junior Equity Bar, and his business has been, it is believed, more extensive than that of any other stuff gownsman. It will be a source of satisfaction to the Profession and to suitors in Chancery to know that his elevation to the Bench is due to his professional eminence alone, and not to any political considerations.

WE understand that many firms in the city are complaining of the practice that now prevails at Judges' Chambers in reference to judgment summonses. Under the old régime the dishonest debtor was soon brought to book by means of the writ of capias ad satisfaciendum, but now, although no doubt where the debt exceeds 50*l.*, a debtor's summons, after the necessary demand, with a view to bankruptcy, is often resorted to as a means of enforcing payment, yet in cases under that amount the judgment summons is the only machine left for the use of the creditor against a dishonest debtor who seeks to protect his goods by a bill of sale. And here we may observe: If a judgment creditor instructs his attorney to issue a writ of fi. fa., he incurs considerable risk. We may mention that it is becoming the habit of sheriffs' officers (whose emoluments are no doubt in great part swept away by recent legislation), in case they are instructed to withdraw, in the face of an adverse claim, to charge not only possession money for the one or two days during which the instructions of the execution creditor are being taken, and the necessary search for the usual bill of sale is made, but actually the levy fee of one guinea; and in some cases a charge is made for auctioneer's valuation. Indeed, a case was lately brought to our notice in which such a charge was made, although there was a claim for rent exceeding the amount of the valuation. No doubt in the majority of cases these claims are very properly left unpaid. It seems now the rule at Judges' Chambers to dispose of a judgment summons by ordering payment of the debt either in one sum or by instalments, according to the debtor's means as disclosed by the affidavit of the judgment creditor, or other person on his behalf. We think we can safely say that, as a rule, the debtor disregards this order, either entirely or in part; but no commitment attaches to this order. A second summons is necessary, and only in the event of non-compliance with this (and not always then), does commitment follow. We are glad to learn that some of the Judges sitting in chambers so highly disapprove of judgment debtors leaving their judgment creditors to get the best information they can as to the capability of the former to pay, and of their disregard of the process of the court, evidenced by non-attendance at chambers on the summons, to be cross-examined as to means of payment, that instead of making an order on the first summons they direct a summons to issue, calling on the debtor personally to attend, in order to be examined as to his pecuniary position. It would be well if this plan was more generally adopted, though it would be far better if in the first summons the debtor was warned that by non-attendance in person he would be guilty of contempt of court, and liable to commitment. It is certain that the course at present adopted is unsatisfactory, expensive, and dilatory, and it will not surprise us to find the judgment summons abandoned by the Profession as a means of enforcing payment.

DEBENTURE BONDS AND PROMISSORY NOTES.

'IT certainly is very desirable," said Mr. Justice Blackburn, in delivering the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in Crouch v. The Credit Foncier of England (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259), "that it should not be left doubtful on the face of an instrument whether it is a covenant or a promise." This desirability is owing to the circumstance that covenants to fulfil a promise to pay do not constitute a negotiable instrument, whereas an absolute promise to pay does, if not under seal. The assignment of an instrument containing a bare covenant confers no right to sue upon the transferee. In the case above quoted an incorporated company promised under seal to pay to the bearer a specified sum at a fixed date, "or upon any earlier day upon which this bond shall be entitled to be paid off or redeemed," according to certain conditions. The bond in question was stolen from the person to whom it was issued, and transferred for value and without notice by the thief. The transferee applied for payment, and on refusal brought an action against the company. The first question was whether the bond was a promissory note. The court said, "It is under seal, and therefore is primâ facie a covenant, not a promise, and it is quite clear that a covenant to pay money is not negotiable by the custom of merchants."

The elementary principle which prevails in this branch of the law was stated by Lord Cranworth in the case of Dixon v. Bovill (3 Macq. 1), namely, that independently of the law merchant and of positive statute, the law does not enable any man by a written engagement to give a floating right of action at the suit of anyone into whose hands the writing may come, and who may thus acquire a right of action better than the right of him under whom he derives title. The Act of Anne gave negotiability to promissory notes, and upon that Act questions have arisen as to the liability of corporations upon their bonds in the hands of transferees. These bonds or debentures always contain an undertaking to pay a sum of money at a date certain, and this fact militates against the view that the instrument is a deed. In the case of the General Estates Company, ex parte City Bank (L. Rep. 3 Ch. at p. 762), Lord Justice Page Wood said: "The instrument is called, on the face of it, a debenture, which, so far as it goes, is in favour of its being a deed, and not a promissory note; but when we look at its contents we find that the company thereby undertake to pay to the order of Hodges on the 1st July, 1867, the sum of £1000, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, which, apart from the material substitution of 'undertake' for 'promise,' is the simple and ordinary form of a promissory note." Then the Lord Justice added, "The better opinion seems to me to be that this is a promissory note; but if it be not so, the authorities go to this, that where there is a distinct promise held out by a company informing all the world that they will pay to the order of the person named, it is not competent for that company afterwards to set up equities of their own and say that because the person who makes the order is indebted to them they will not pay." This decision of the Lords Justices overruled that of Lord Romilly in the court below (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 457), who had relied upon the absence of any previous contract of the parties that the money in question should be paid by negotiable instruments, which distinguished the case from the Natal Investment Company's case (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 171). "Here," said the Master of the Rolls, "there is no previous contract on the subject, and the form of debenture is not so favourable as that in the Natal Investment Company, for there it was said they would pay the holder; here they only say that they will pay Mr. Hodges or order." And he held that the holder was bound by the equities existing between Mr. Hodges and the company. In the case of The Blakely Ordnance Company (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 132) there had been a previous arrangement that the debentures to be issued should be taken as money, and, being made payable to bearer, the company was held to have contracted itself out of the equities subsisting between them and the original creditor.

These cases having turned so much upon particular circumstances, little principle is to be extracted from them, but in the Natal Investment Company's case Lord Justice Cairns tells us what construction he places upon the words "or to the holder for the time being of this debenture," namely, that in order to avoid the difficulty and expense of creating an assign by deed, they provided, through the medium of the contract with Coqui, that the company would recognise any person who held the debenture from Coqui to be in as good a position as if he had become the assign of the debenture by deed; that if some one came forward and produced to them a debenture of which he was the holder, they would not insist upon his proving his title, by a formal and actual assignment from Coqui; but it appeared to him that there was nothing whatever in the words intended to put the holder for the time being in a better position than an assign by deed, and the holders were held bound by the equities between Coqui and the company.

The operation of the seal in depriving a note of its negotiable character is not yet decided. It is laid down in Byles on Bills, that at common law bills of exchange and promissory notes, being simple contracts, cannot be under seal, at least so as to retain their negotiable qualities. Unfortunately it was not found necessary in Crouch's case to decide whether an instrument under the seal of a corporation can be a promissory note. In all the cases in which the nature of instruments under seal of corporations has been considered, some special provision has been made for the issuing of negotiable instruments, and following the course which is usual with our courts, all points not essential to the decision of the particular issue were carefully avoided, and the general question of the power of a corporation to issue negotiable instruments under seal at common law remains unsettled. In Crouch's case, the Queen's Bench followed this convenient practice, and, important as the matter is, they leave it still at large.

Among some American leading cases which have recently reached a second edition, we see that there are decisions which have raised the point, and we find it laid down that an instrument under seal, though in the form of a promissory note, is not negotiable (Foster v. Floyd, 4 McCord 159); the endorser of such instrument is not liable on his indorsement (for which a number of authorities are cited); nor can the assignee of such an instrument sue the obligor in his own name (Clark v. Farmer's Manufacturing Co., 15 Wend. 256; Sayre v. Lucas, 2 Stewart 259); and he takes it subject to the equities between the original parties (Hopkins v. The Railroad Company, 3 Watts & Sergeant 410). By statutes in some of the States, we are told, this rule is altered. In North Carolina, bonds, bills and notes, with or without seal, have from an early period been negotiable. In Georgia, under a statute, all sealed and unsealed instruments for a definite sum of money payable to order, assigns or bearer, are negotiable by indorsement. In Ohio sealed instruments payable to one, or order or bearer, and in Alabama such as are payable to one or bearer are negotiable by indorsement, but not without indorsement, even though payable to bearer. Further, it appears that a very admirable system has been adopted for ensuring the negotiability of bonds issued by the United States railway corporations, namely, of "registering," as it is called, the bonds at the holder's option, and of creating or destroying negotiability in the hands of different honest holders, or even in the hands of the same honest holder, at pleasure. In the bonds of the Camden and Amboy Railroad the following direction and notice is contained," The holders of this bond may transfer the same at pleasure, either in person or by attorney, either to a specfied person or to bearer, and by bearer to any specified person, said transfer to be made only on the books of the companies, such transfer to be entered thereon by an officer or agent of the said company, by them designated for that purpose." If we took the same precautions in issuing debenture bonds in this country, we should avoid the difficulties which have arisen in the cases which we have referred to.

To show the confusion which has been created with reference to the negotiability of debentures, and the equities between the original parties by the various decisions, we have only to quote a passage from the judgment of Vice-Chancellor Malins in the case of the Imperial Company of Marseilles (L. Rep. 11 Eq. at p. 493): "With regard," his Honour said, "to Re Natal Investment Company, it was said that all these three cases, Ex parte City Bank, Re Natal Investment Company, and Ex parte New Zealand Banking Corporation, could stand together. It is not necessary for me to go into that question, because it is clear that the Lords Justices, in Ex parte City Bank, did not consider that they were overruling Re Natal Investment Company. I have already observed that I am unable to see how Re Natal Investment Company can be reconciled with Ex parte New Zealand Banking Corporation and Ex parte City Bank. In Re Natal Investment Company the bonds were made payable 'to the holder, his executors, administrators, or transferees, or to the holder for the time being of the debenture bond.' I am unable to see any distinction between 'payable to bearer' and 'to the holder for the time being,' because the bearer is the holder for the time being. But if the cases are inconsistent I am bound by the latter case, in which the former one was fully considered; and with every respect for Lord Cairns I cannot help coming to the conclusion that he might with great propriety have decided Re Natal Investment Company the other way."

Undoubtedly the courts ought, whenever possible, to construe debentures payable to bearer as negotiable, and companies and their creditors ought to take precautions that the instruments are properly framed, if they are intended to be transferable. Lastly, the Legislature ought to follow the American example, and make instruments containing covenants to pay specific sums of money in the nature of bonds payable to bearer negotiable, though under seal.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT 1873.

(Continued from page 3.)

PART IV.—TRIAL AND PROCEDURE.

THE part of the Act which most affects our readers is that which provides for the establishment of district registries. This provision will have the effect of putting in the hands of both attorneys and suitors the power of commencing and continuing proceedings in a centre not far from their own places of residence, and to a great extent will free them from the system of agency business which is now necessitated by all preliminary matters being carried on in London. The Act itself (sect. 60) recites that it is expedient to facilitate the prosecution in country districts of such proceedings as may be more speedily, cheaply, and conveniently carried on therein, and with that object empowers Her Majesty by order in council to appoint district registrars for districts to be defined by the order. From these registries writs of summons are to be issued, and various proceedings in an action are to take place, which will be more fully noticed. It is clearly the intention of the Act that the district registrars are to be ultimately the same persons as the registrars of County Courts in the chief local centres, for power is given to appoint any registrar of any County Court; but power is also given to appoint as district registrars, the registrars or prothonotaries of the Common Pleas at Lancaster and the Pleas at Durham, and of the various local courts from which an appeal lies to the Supreme Court and the district registrars of the Courts of Probate and Admiralty. The existing offices of prothonotary and district registrars will probably be allowed to die out with the present holders, and as the Act gets into full working order it is probable that it will be found more convenient to carry on the work of the Supreme Court, whether Common Law, Chancery, Probate, or Admiralty, in one office. Hence it may be fairly predicted that when the existing district registrars have ceased to hold office, their business will be united in each district into one central office. This section operates from the passing of the Act, but nothing has as yet been done under it. Every district registry will have a seal with which every writ and document issued out of the registry is to be impressed, and all writs and documents, or copies of them, so sealed will be received in evidence without further proof (sect. 61). It is impossible to define the duties or powers of district registrars, as they are to be regulated by rules of court (sect. 62), but it is more than probable that they will have the powers now possessed by masters at common law, and some of, if not all, the powers of chief clerks in Chancery. This is the necessary conclusion to be drawn from the section regulating the proceedings to be taken in district registries (sect. 64), for it is there provided that, subject to rules of court, writs of summons for the commencement of actions in the High Court are to be issued by the district registrars; and unless any order to the contrary be made by the High Court, or a Judge thereof, all further proceedings, including proceedings for the arrest or detention of a ship, her cargo and freight, in an action down to and including entry for trial, or if a plaintiff is entitled to sign final judgment by reason of non-appearance of the defendant, down to and including final judgment, or an order for an account, may be taken before the district registrar, as prescribed by rules of court. This section, however, enables the Judges to enlarge the power of the district registrars by providing that all other proceedings as may be prescribed by rules of court may be taken, and if necessary recorded in the district registries. This will have the effect of throwing upon the district registrars all the work which may now be done by a master or chief clerk, if the Judges shall think fit to do so. Indeed, without such power being put into the hands of a district registrar, the purpose of the Act would be greatly hindered, as constant recourse to the Judges in Chambers would become necessary, and this would involve the removal of proceedings to London. To provide, however, for cases which can be more advantageously carried on in London, power is reserved to any party to an action to apply to the High Court, or a Judge in Chambers, to remove the proceedings from a district registry to the proper office of the High Court in London; and if the court grant the application, all the documents in the cause are to be sent up to the proper office of the High Court, and the action is to proceed as if it had commenced in London (sect. 65). To facilitate the investigation of matters of account and inquiries into question of fact, power is given to the Judges in any pending action to refer such questions to the district registrars, and to order the production at the registry of books and documents, accounts, and other evidence for that purpose; and the registrar will make his report to the court in writing, and it will be acted upon as the court shall see fit. Fees in the district registries are to be taken by means of stamps.

Throughout this notice it will have been plainly visible that many gaps still remain to be filled up by the rules to be published under the Act, before it can be put into working order. The power to make these rules is conferred (sect. 68) upon her Majesty acting under the advice of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, and the other Judges. The rules are to be made before the commencement of the Act, and will regulate (1) the sittings of the High Court and the Court of Appeal, and of the Division Courts and Judges in Chambers; (2) the circuits, including the time and places at which they are to be holden, and the business to be transacted thereat; (3) all matters consistent with or not expressly determined by the rules contained in the schedule attached to the Act, and which require to be regulated by further rules; (4) and generally the practice and procedure of the courts, the duties of their officers, costs, and the conduct of civil and criminal business for which provision is not expressly made by the Act. Rules made under this section are to be laid before Parliament, and may be annulled on the address of either House within forty days after their being laid on the table, but will be binding until or if not so objected to. The general practice and procedure of the High Court and Court of Appeal are, however, regulated by the schedule to the Act, which is made part of the Act (sect. 69), and is to come into operation immediately on the commencement of the Act. Although the rules in the schedule are to form the first guide to the practice of the new courts, they will not necessarily be permanent, because it is expressly provided that after the commencement of the Act these rules, and all rules made under the former section, may be annulled and altered by the Judges; in fact full power is given to the Judges of the Supreme Court (sects. 68, 69, 74), to make and alter rules as they shall see fit, provided only that the rules in the schedule are to form the first rules of practice, and cannot be altered until the Act has commenced. It is obvious, however, that there are certain courts whose jurisdiction is transferred, having forms and proceedings so peculiar to themselves, that any general rules applicable to the Supreme Court could not be carried out in those divisions of it. Hence it is provided (sect. 70), that the rules now in force in the Court of Probate, the Divorce Court, the Court of Admiralty, and the Court of Bankruptcy, are to remain in force, except in so far as they are expressly varied by the Act, and are to apply to the High Court and Court of Appeal, that is to say, to the respective divisions exercising those jurisdictions, until they are expressly varied by rules made after the commencement of the Act. One effect of this enactment will be that practitioners in those divisions will, on the transfer of jurisdiction, have nothing new to learn, and will find everything standing as if the Act had not passed. The practice and procedure in criminal matters is also to continue the same, but may be altered by rules of court (sect. 71); this includes the practice as to Crown Cases Reserved. It is not intended by the Act, or by any rules made under it, to affect the mode of giving evidence by oral examination of witnesses in trials by jury, except as to the power of the court to allow affidavits or depositions to be read (rule 36), or the rules of evidence, or the law relating to jurymen or juries (sect 72). Moreover, it is expressly provided (sect. 73), that existing forms of procedure in the courts, whose jurisdiction is transferred, may be continued to be used for the same purpose as they have hitherto been used, provided that they are not inconsistent with the Act or the schedule, or are not abolished by rules made under the Act. As the rules in the schedule are of considerable length, it would be impossible to notice them now, although they come more properly under this head, but they will be treated of separately. As they effect great changes in the practice of the courts, they are worthy of careful attention and separate notice.

With a view of securing to the public a thorough reform in the administration of justice, of which the present Act is only an instalment, it is provided (sect. 75) there is to be a council of Judges meeting at least once a year for the purpose of considering the operation of the Act, of the rules of court in force, and also the working of the offices, the duty of the officers of the courts, and of examining the defects in the system of procedure and administration of the law in the Supreme Court or in any inferior court, whence the appeal lies to the Supreme Court. They will report to the Secretary of State the amendments and alterations they may think necessary, and what other provisions, which cannot be carried into effect without the authority of Parliament, it would be expedient to make for the better administration of justice. If necessary an extraordinary council of the Judges may be convened at any time.

All Acts of Parliament relating to the Courts and Judges whose jurisdiction is transferred, are to be read as applying to the courts and Judges constituted by the Act, and all commissions made under these Acts by which Judges are empowered to try any causes, civil or criminal, are to remain in force until revoked or altered in due course of law: (sect. 76.)

The remainder of the Act, except the schedule and the part relating to the jurisdiction of the inferior courts, is of a formal character, and will require but short notice, which we must, however, now defer.

SUGGESTIONS FOR AMENDING THE PRACTICE RELATING TO STOP ORDERS.

Now that the Supreme Court of Judicature Bill has become law, and rules will have to be made for regulating the practice under it, it seems a good time for suggestions to be made upon a subject likely to be embraced by such rules.

When a fund is standing in the name of the Paymaster-General of the Court of Chancery an assignment or a charge upon it, or of or upon any interest in it, is not complete until a stop order has been lodged in the Paymaster-General's office, and not only so, but such assignment or charge is liable to be defeated by some one else previously lodging a stop order in his favour. A stop order is now generally obtained upon summons in chambers, but in a few cases it is necessary that a petition be presented to the court. Let us assume that A. is entitled to an interest in a fund in court, which he contracts to sell to B. B. goes to the Paymaster-General's office and inquires whether any stop order has been lodged there, and is answered in the negative, upon which he completes his purchase, and on the same day he takes out a summons for a stop order, which is not returnable at the earliest until after the expiration of two clear days, and very often not until after the expiration of a week. The order is made, and the chief clerk endorses the summons, which, on the following day, is left with the registrar for the order to be drawn up. Two days probably elapse before the order is ready for settling, and assuming that no engrossment is requisite, and there is not a press of work in the office, it takes at least another day in which to pass and enter the order. Six days at least must therefore elapse between the settlement of the purchase, and what is equivalent to giving notice to the trustee of the fund, and during that time many things may happen and another stop order may be lodged, the effect of which might be to postpone B.'s rights to those of the person putting on the first order. We do not for a moment wish to suggest that the latter should not have priority in some cases, but it is just possible that he might have taken out his summons several days before the completion of his transaction with A., although such completion did not take place until a day or two after that of the sale to B. The practical object of stop orders is to prevent frauds being practised, so that we must assume that there are people ready to commit such frauds, and it should be the endeavour of a court of equity to do all in its power to prevent them doing so. In the case we have supposed, A. could sell his interest to B., and also to another person, and if he were rogue enough to attempt such a fraud he would probably be cunning enough to arrange that both purchases should be completed on the same day, or at least within a day or two, so that neither would have the remotest idea of the negotiations with the other, nor would the person who completed second be aware of the prior completion by the other purchaser. To prevent such a fraud we would venture to suggest that a system of notices should be adopted, under which a purchaser or other interested person could immediately lodge a restraint in the Paymaster-General's office. This notice might for convenience' sake be required to be given upon a printed form to be obtained at the office, and it should be available for a short time only, say for the next fourteen days during which the Chancery offices were open. This would give ample time for the interested person to obtain a stop order; if he did so it should refer to and operate from the lodging of the notice, but if he neglected to do so the notice should for every purpose be considered null and void, and should confer upon the person giving it no rights or equities of any kind whatsoever. In order to discourage any attempt rashly to lodge notices, the person signing them, who should properly be a solicitor, should be answerable for any loss or expense caused to any other person interested in the fund by the improper lodging of a notice. If a system similar to that above suggested were adopted, it would be impossible for a person interested in a fund to commit a fraud with respect to it, unless through the wilful negligence of the person first dealing with him, in which case the result of the negligence would fall upon the proper person.

Another improvement in regard to stop orders suggests itself to us. Stop orders are often obtained for temporary purposes, as, for instance, to secure the payment of an annuity for a life, and such life may drop before the fund becomes divisible. Again, upon every sale where the purchase-money is paid into court the order directing such payment provides for the execution of a conveyance by all proper parties, and that the purchase-money be not disposed of without notice to the purchaser. The effect of this order is that if it be lodged at the Paymaster-General's office no dealing can take place without the concurrence of the purchaser. We believe a purchaser is bound to remove the stop order at his expense so soon as he obtains his conveyance, but in practice this course is seldom adopted, it being the general custom for the purchaser to authorise the vendor's solicitor to consent on his behalf to any proposed dealing with the fund. The latter course is objectionable in two ways; first the purchaser might die before it was necessary to act upon the authority, in which case his representatives would have to be sought out and served, or their authority obtained, and secondly, the purchaser might make himself liable for the solicitor's improper use of the authority. As a better system we would suggest that an order be no longer deemed necessary for the discharge of a stop order, but that such stop order may, for all purposes, be considered discharged upon the filing in the Paymaster-General's office of a consent for that purpose by the person in whose favour the order was obtained, such consent in all cases to be annexed to and verified by the affidavit of such person's own solicitor.

The chief clerks in chambers should have power to make stop orders affecting funds, notwithstanding the circumstances under which they were paid into court. Some of the chief clerks consider they cannot make such orders when the fund paid in under the Trustee Relief Act exceeds £300, and such a fund is of course from its nature more liable than any other to be affected by claims by purchasers and mortgagees who would require stop orders to protect their interests.

SEARCHES, INQUIRIES, AND NOTICES.

Middlesex and Yorkshire Registries.

(Continued from p. 4.)

When the memorial is of an endorsed deed and the parcels are described by reference to those of the deed upon which it is written, the date, parties, and parcels of both deeds should be set out in the memorial (15 Q. B. 976). The registration of an assignment in which the lease is recited is not registration of the lease (Honeycomb v. Waldon, 2 Str. 1064), and the re-execution of a deed before fresh witnesses, will not do for the purposes of registration (Essex v. Baugh, 1 Y. & Coll. Ch. R. 620).

It is considered prudent, notwithstanding the exception of copyholds from the operation of the Acts, that such leases of lands of that tenure as would, if of other tenure, require registration, should be registered, and that mortgages of leases, unless of leases originally held at rack rent, should also be registered.

It would not appear necessary to register a will where the devisee is also the heir-at-law, and it seems to be the general opinion that it would not be necessary to register a will where the legatee was also the executor, but we think it would be prudent that in the latter case the will should be registered to prevent the possibility of a subsequent will being found, under which a purchaser without notice from the executor would derive a better title except in Middlesex when the testator has been dead for five years, or where having died in Great Britain he has been dead two years, or where having died abroad he has been dead four years and no memorial of impediment has been registered, and except in the North Riding of Yorkshire where the testator has been dead for three years, and except in all the Ridings of Yorkshire (with the exception, perhaps, of the West Riding where the purchase or mortgage money does not exceed £50,) and Kingston-upon-Hull where the testator has died in Great Britain upwards of six months, or abroad upwards of three years, and no memorial of impediment has been registered.

The Bedford Level.

By the 15 Car. 2, c. 17, a corporation was formed called "The Governor, Bailiffs, and Commonalty of the Company of Conservators of the Great Level of the Fens," upon whom certain benefits and powers in connection with the 95,000 acres thereby allotted were conferred, and by sect. 8 it was provided that all conveyances by indenture of the 95,000 acres or any part thereof, entered with the registrar in a book to be kept for that purpose, should be of equal force to convey the freehold and inheritance of the 95,000 acres or any part thereof as if the same conveyances by indenture were for valuable considerations of money, inrolled within six months in one of the King's courts of record at Westminster; and that no lease, grant, or conveyance of, or charge out of or upon the 95,000 acres, or any part thereof, except leases for seven years or under in possession, should be of force but from the time it should be entered with the registrar as aforesaid, the entry whereof being indorsed by the registrar upon such lease, grant, conveyance, or charge, should be as good and effectual in the law as if the original book of entries were produced at any trial at law or otherwise.

A lessee who at the expiration of his lease, wished to avail himself of the non-registration of the lease as a defence to an action brought against him upon one of the covenants, was not allowed to do so: (Hodson v. Sharpe, 10 East, 350.) Lord Ellenborough in that case (at p. 353) is reported to have said, "The Act no doubt meant for the protection of titles, that leases and conveyances within the district should be registered, that every person interested in the inquiry might know in whom the title to any such land was and therefore as against persons who had been deceived by the omission to register, or even as against those who, without being deceived, knew that the Act had not been complied with, and relied on it, the legal objection might prevail at law, but not as between the parties themselves to the lease, between whom the Act was not meant to operate." Le Blanc, J., added, "the object of that clause in the Act on which he (the defendant) relies, was to take away the priority of the party whose title was not registered, with respect to subsequent claimants whose titles were registered, but it never was intended to operate between the parties themselves so as to enable a lessee who had enjoyed under it, to dispute the lease." In the subsequent case of Willis v. Brown (10 Sim. 127), Shadwell, V.C., concurred with the decision in Hodson v. Sharpe, but not with the dicta of the Judges which we have above given, and he decided that the only effect of the want of registration was to deprive the parties of the special benefits which the Act would otherwise have conferred upon them, and added (at p. 149): "I wish it to be most distinctly understood that I am of opinion that the meaning of those words is not that conveyances of parts of the 95,000 acres shall not have any force at all, but that they shall have no force for the purposes of the Act except from the time of their being entered with the registrar." The latter view now appears to be accepted as correct, perhaps for the reason that it is the more palatable. A search should, however, always be made in the Register Office, although the fact that nothing is then discovered will not be conclusive that no prior dealing has taken place. Upon completion it will be prudent to register all deeds relating to lands in the Level other than, of course, the excepted leases.

THE JUDICIAL STATISTICS FOR 1872.

County Courts.

The proceedings in the County Courts in the year 1872 for the recovery of debt, the proceedings under the Charitable Trusts Act of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, the proceedings under the Act of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, for the protection of wives deserted by their husbands, and the proceedings against absconding debtors, are shown in the tables; also, the number of courts having bankruptcy jurisdiction, the number of debtors summonses issued, the number of declarations of inability filed by debtors, and the number of petitions for adjudication filed, under the Bankruptcy Act 1869, in each County Court circuit. The number of County Courts having jurisdiction in bankruptcy is 130. Circuits Nos. 39, 40, 41, 42, 44, and 46, which are comprised in the district of the London Bankruptcy Court, have no jurisdiction in Bankruptcy. The judges of the London Court only have jurisdiction in bankruptcy in the City of London. The Court of Passage at Liverpool has concurrent jurisdiction in bankruptcy with the County Court held there.

Returns of the proceedings of the County Courts under the jurisdiction in equity, conferred by the Act of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, have been furnished by the treasurers, as obtained by them from the registrars, for the year 1872, and will be found abstracted in the tables, in continuation of the abstract for the preceding year.

Pursuant to an Act passed in the session of 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71), Her Majesty, on the representation of the Lord Chancellor, may, by order in council, confer Admiralty jurisdiction to a certain extent, and under certain restrictions declared in the Act, on any County Court. Under this Act, 34 County Courts and the City of London Court have been appointed to have Admiralty jurisdiction, and the proceedings for the year ending 31st. Dec. 1872 are shown in the table.

The cases in which probates or administrations of wills were granted under decrees of County Courts are shown in the returns furnished by the district registrars of the Court of Probate.

Hitherto there have been 59 County Court circuits, but Nos. 10, 34, and 56 having been absorbed in the circuits adjoining to them respectively, 56 circuits only now remain. The number of places at which courts are held is now 499. The number in each circuit is shown in the table; the number of days of sitting on each circuit in 1872 is also shown.

For Circuit No. 6, in which Liverpool is comprised, there are two judges. For each of the other circuits there is one judge only.

The following are the number of plaints in the whole of the County Courts, and the totals under each heading in the returns with reference to the recovery of debts for the year 1872, in comparison with the numbers for the preceding year and for 1862:

	1872.		1871.		1862.
Plaints entered	900,755		918,588		847,169
Cases from the Superior Courts	554		610		119
		901,309		919,148		847,288
Causes determined:
With a jury	959		953		869
Without a jury	510,947		520,991		466,582
		511,906		521,944		467,451
Judgments:
For Plaintiff	305,354		307,229		250,400
For Plaintiff by consent or admission	185,896		193,606		187,646
For Plaintiff by default	3,463		3,663		1,128
Nonsuit	8,339		8,285		10,170
For Defendant	8,854		9,161		9,107
		511,906		521,944		467,451
Judgment Summonses:
Issued	124,367		123,928		122,285
Heard	64,992		66,606		61,584
Warrants of Commitment:
Issued	33,823		33,704		26,757
Debtors imprisoned	6,899		7,969		9,373
Executions against goods:
Issued	177,421		181,123		131,760
Sales made	3,877		4,435		4,849
Appeals	32		28		42
Order to stay proceedings	51		75		47
Certiorari to remove proceedings	44		48		81
Total amount for which plaints entered	£3,590,792		£2,662,132		£3,006,680
On Judgments obtained by Plaintiffs on original hearings:
Amount of Debts	£1,282,693		£1,324,156		£1,000,223
Amount of Costs	£62,360		£61,670		£40,137
Total amount of Fees on all proceedings	£349,266		£358,031		£270,684
Proceedings in cases of absconding debtors:
Warrants to arrest	2		—		54
Bail given	—		—		1
Debt and costs paid	1		—		10
Warrants suspended	—		—		4
Proceedings under the Charitable Trusts Acts:
Matters heard	1		—		1
Orders made	1		—		1
Proceedings for protection of wives deserted by their husbands:
Orders registered	747		690		532
Orders discharged	1		1		2
Bankruptcy:
Number of adjudications by County Courts	684		943		—
Debtors' summonses issued	1,448		1,529		—
Declaration of inability filed by debtors	182		337		—
Petitions for adjudications filed	866		1,162		—

In the number of plaints entered in 1872 there is a decrease of 17,763, or 1·9 per cent., as compared with the number in 1871. The number for the latter year showed an increase of 6240 as compared with the number in 1870. As compared with the number in 1862 there is an increase, in 1872, of 53,606, or 6·3 per cent.

From a Parliamentary paper recently issued, (No. 123, Sess. 1873) it appears that from the establishment of these courts in 1847 to the 31st Dec. 1872, the total number of plaints entered is 18,200,811, for an aggregate amount of £48,794,746. The amount for which judgment was obtained during the same period is £24,732,095.

The number of days of sitting for the whole of the circuits was 7973 in 1872, against 8041 in 1871, 8085 in 1870, 7909 in 1869, 7987 in 1868, and 7893 in 1867. The number for 1872 gives 64·2 causes for each day of sitting, calculating on the total number of causes determined. This average was 64·9 for 1871; for 1870, 64·7; for 1869, 68·5; for 1868, 71·7; for 1867, 68·7; for 1866, 62·1; for 1865, 57·1. The greatest number of days of sitting on any circuit in 1872 was 313, on Circuit No. 6, for which there are two judges; the greatest number for a single judge was 168, on Circuit No. 12; the lowest was 111, on Circuit No. 39; against 326 on Circuit No. 6, 161 on Circuit No. 2, and 92 on Circuit No. 8, respectively, the highest and lowest numbers in 1871. The highest average number of causes determined on each day of sitting was 142, on Circuit No. 13; the lowest 25, on Circuit No. 32. In the preceding year the highest average was 157, on Circuit No. 19; the lowest 26, Circuit No. 32.

The causes determined in court were in the proportion of 56·8 per cent. to the total number of plaints entered, leaving 43·3 per cent. as the proportion settled out of court. In 1871 these proportions were 56·7 and 43·2; in 1870, 57·3 and 42·7; in 1869, 58·6 and 41·4; in 1868, 58·5 and 41·5; in 1867, 57·5 and 42·5; in 1866, 55·9 and 44·1; in 1865, 55·4 and 44·6; in 1864, 56·4 and 43·6, respectively.

Of the judgments given in 1872, 96·7 per cent. were for the plaintiff, 1·6 per cent. were nonsuits, and 1·7 per cent. were for the defendant. In 1871 the proportions were the same. In 1870, 96·6 per cent. were for the plaintiff, 1·6 per cent. were nonsuits, and 1·8 per cent. were for the defendant. In 1869 the same. In 1868, 96·9, 1·5, and 1·6: in 1867, 96·6, 1·7, and 1·7; in 1866 and 1865, 96·2, 1·9 and 1·9; in 1864, 95·9, 2·1 and 2·0.

The number of debtors imprisoned gives one for 130·6 of the number of plaints entered, with the cases from the Superior Courts included. In 1871 the proportion was one for 115·3. In 1870, one for 138·3; in 1869, one for 95·8; in 1868, one for 101; in 1867, one for 112; in 1866, one for 115; in 1865, one for 123; in 1864, one for 113.

(To be continued.)

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Tuesday, Nov. 4.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES.)

Re THE MATLOCK OLD BATH HYDROPATHIC COMPANY. (CASE OF THE MANCHESTER FINANCE CORPORATION).

Company — Winding-up — Contributory — Allotment of shares in satisfaction of debt.

THIS was an appeal from a decision of Bacon, V. C. The Manchester Finance Corporation having advanced £500 to the Matlock Old Bath Hydropathic Company, the latter company allotted to the corporation fifty fully paid-up shares of £10 in the Matlock Company in satisfaction of the sum advanced. The £500 was, however, still treated as a debt, and it appeared that the two companies intended the shares to be merely a security for the debt. In Feb. 1868 the Matlock Company gave the corporation a debenture for £500 as a further security for the debt. The Matlock Company was subsequently ordered to be wound-up, and the Vice-Chancellor held that, as they had paid nothing upon the shares, the corporation must be treated as holders of unpaid shares, and placed upon the list of contributories. From this decision the corporation appealed.

Yate Lee (with him Amphlett, Q.C.), for the appellants, stated that they were ready to give up all right of proof on the debenture for £500, if they were removed from the list of contributories.

Ince (with him Kay, Q.C.), for the official liquidator.

Lord Justice MELLISH said that on the fifty shares being allotted to the corporation in discharge of their debt, they ceased to be creditors of the company. It appeared from subsequent transactions that both parties intended still to keep alive the debt. That could not be lawfully done. The corporation never agreed to take unpaid shares, but fully paid up shares were allotted to them in payment of their debt. They must, therefore, be removed from the list of contributors.

Lord Justice JAMES concurred.

Solicitors for the appellants, T. White and Son.

Solicitors for the respondents, Satchell and Chapple.

THE IMPERIAL LAND COMPANY OF MARSEILLES v. MASTERMAN.

Practice—Affidavit of documents — Further affidavit—Reasonable suspicion.

THIS was an appeal from an order of Malins, V.C. The defendants had, in pursuance of the common order obtained by the plaintiffs, made an affidavit of documents in the usual form, referring to a schedule of documents, and concluding with the usual denial of their having or having had in their possession any other documents. The schedules comprised a copy of a letter of the 19th Oct. 1865, from Messrs. Uptons and Co., solicitors in London, to Messrs. Maugham and Co., their agents in Paris, and copies of letters in reply of the 20th and 21st Oct. 1865, from Messrs. Maugham and Co. to Messrs. Uptons and Co., in which the former stated that they had sent therewith copies of certain documents alleged by the plaintiffs to be material to the questions at issue in the cause. The defendants, by their answer, admitted that Messrs. Uptons and Co. acted as their solicitors in Sept. 1865, in reference to the matters in question in the cause, but denied that they had so acted after the 17th Oct. 1865. The Vice-Chancellor, on the application of the plaintiffs, ordered the defendants to make affidavit of documents on the ground that the schedule afforded reasonable ground for suspecting that the defendants had in their possession other documents than those set out in the schedule, relating to the subject matter of the suit. From this order the defendants appealed.

Cotton, Q.C. and Kekewich, for the appellants.

Glasse, Q.C., Higgins, Q.C., and Wingfield for the respondent.

Lord Justice JAMES said that there was nothing in the schedule to raise a reasonable suspicion that anything had been inadvertently or otherwise omitted from the affidavits. It was perfectly clear that the letters in question had been written and received by Messrs. Uptons, not as solicitors of the defendants, but as solicitors of the company which had just been registered. The affidavit was sufficient in form, and contained an express denial of the possession of any other documents relating to the subject-matter of the suit. The Vice-Chancellor's order must therefore be discharged.

Lord Justice MELLISH was entirely of the same opinion.

Solicitor for the appellants, Freshfields.

Solicitors for the respondents, G. S. and H. Brandon.

V.C. WICKENS' COURT.

(Before Lord SELBORNE, sitting for the late Vice-Chancellor WICKENS.)

Tuesday, Nov. 4.

ADAMS v. NORTH BRITISH RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE bill in this case stated that Frederick Foster Burlock was, in 1869, constituted the general agent of Messrs. Richardson and Co., an American firm, to introduce and sell in Great Britain an invention for the improvement of safety-valves for steam-boilers. In Jan. 1870 Burlock entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, whereby, after declaring that he had the full and sole power to treat for the sale of the invention, he gave the sole agency for working the patent in this country to the plaintiff, who was to have an interest in sales and profits to the extent of £25 per cent. The railway company having adopted the invention for their locomotives, had paid a royalty for some valves supplied by the plaintiff, who however alleged that they had many more in use, for which they refused to pay any royalty. The bill then prayed for an account, for damages, and for an injunction. The defendants demurred on the ground that Burlock's authority did not extend to a right to give to Adams the privileges granted by the agreement of 1870, and in this view the late Vice-Chancellor Wickens had concurred when refusing a motion for injunction.

H. M. Jackson, Q.C., and Graham Hastings appeared for the plaintiff.

Dickinson, Q.C., and Colquhoun for the railway company.

Lord SELBORNE allowed the demurrer, with costs, without hearing a reply.

Solicitor for the plaintiff, T. Guscotte.

Solicitors for the railway company, Ashurst, Morris, and Co.

PATENT LAW.

(By C. HIGGINS, Esq., M.A., F.C.S., Barrister-at-Law.

COMPLETE SPECIFICATION.

(Continued from page 424.)

Minter v. Mower. 1837.—"Patent for an improvement in the construction, making, or manufacturing of chairs." The specification thus concludes: "What I claim as my invention is, the application of a self-adjusting leverage to the back and seat of a chair, whereby the weight on the seat acts as a counter-balance to the pressure against the back of such chair as above described." It appeared from the evidence that a chair, acting upon the same principle as that which the patentee claimed, had been constructed and sold by a person of the name of Brown, before the date of the patent; this chair had, however, been encumbered by additional machinery. Held, that the specification was bad. Denman, C. J., said: "The specification claimed more than the plaintiff had invented, and would have actually precluded Brown from continuing to make the same chair that he had made before the patentee's discovery. We are far from thinking that the patentee might not have established his title by showing that a part of Brown's chair could have effected that for which the whole was designed. But his claim is not for an improvement upon Brown's leverage, but for a leverage so described that the description comprehended Brown's." (6 A. & E. 735; 1 Web. P. C. 142.)

Galloway v. Bleaden. N. P. 1839.—Tindal, C.J., referring to the specification, said: "If there is a want of clearness, so that the public cannot afterwards avail themselves of it, much more if there is any studied ambiguity in it, so as to conceal from the public that which the patentee for a term is enjoying the exclusive benefit of, no doubt the patent itself would be completely void." (1 Web. P. C. 524.)

Bickford v. Skewes. 1839.—Patent for a miner's safety fuse. The specification directed the use of "gunpowder, or other proper combustible matter," for the manufacture of the fuse. It was objected, on behalf of the defendant, that the plaintiff had failed to show that any other material but gunpowder had ever been used in the fuse; or, if introduced, would answer the purpose desired. Denman, C.J., in delivering the judgment of the court, said: "The first part of this objection seems to us immaterial if other materials, not specified (and it is certainly not necessary to specify all), but still within the description given, will answer the purpose; no ambiguity is occasioned. Nothing that can mislead the public, or increase the difficulty hereafter of making the instrument, by the introduction of terms which import the patentee has himself used them. The latter part of the objection, if true in fact, would have been more material, because it does tend to mislead if it be stated that a whole class of substances may be used to produce a given effect, when, in fact, only one is capable of being so used successfully. . . . The specification is addressed, not to persons entirely ignorant of the subject matter, but to artists of competent skill in that branch of manufactures to which it relates." (1 Q. B. 938; 1 Web. P. C. 214.)

Elliott v. Ashton. N. P. 1840.—Coltman, J., said: "The patentee must give such a description in his specification as would enable a workman of competent skill, conversant with the trade, to carry the invention into effect." (1 Web. P. C. 222.)

Neilson v. Thompson. 1841.—Cottenham, L.C.: "The public are entitled to know for what it is that the patentee claims the invention, that they may be saved inconvenience upon the subject; therefore, the specification must tell the public for what it is that he claims protection." (1 Web. P. C. 283.)

Neilson v. Harford. 1841. (N. P.)—1. A specification is sufficient if it enables a person of ordinary skill and knowledge of the subject to construct the patented machine. Parke, B., said to the jury: "You are not to ask yourselves the question whether persons of great skill, a first-rate engineer, or a second-class engineer, as described by Mr. Farey—whether they would do it; because generally those persons are men of great science and philosophical knowledge, and they would upon a mere hint in the specification probably invent a machine which should answer the purpose extremely well; but that is not the description of persons to whom this specification may be supposed to be addressed, it is supposed to be addressed to a practical workman, who brings the ordinary degree of knowledge and the ordinary degree of capacity to the subject." In the course of the argument in the Court of Exchequer, Abinger, C.B., said: "Where the specification uses scientific terms which are not understood except by persons acquainted with the nature of the business, the specification is not bad because an ordinary man does not understand it, provided a scientific man does; but where the specification does not make use of technical terms, where it uses common language, and where it states that by which a common man may be misled, though a scientific man would not—when it does not profess to use scientific terms, and an ordinary man reading the specification is misled by it—it would not be good."

2. (Court of Ex.)—The specification should be such as, if fairly followed out by a competent workman, without invention or addition, would produce the machine for which the patent is taken out, and such machine so constructed must be one beneficial to the public. Parke, B. said, at Nisi Prius: "If experiments are necessary in order to construct a machine to produce some beneficial effect, no doubt this specification is defective. If experiments are only necessary in order to produce the greatest beneficial effect, in that case I think the patent is not void." Parke, B., delivering the judgment of the Court of Exchequer, said there was no authority to show that a specification, which could only be supported by a fresh invention and correction by a scientific person, would be good.

3. (Court of Ex.)—A specification which contains a false statement in a material circumstance, of a nature that, if literally acted upon by a competent workman, would mislead him and cause the experiment to fail, is bad. The patentee, in his specification said: "The shape of the receptacle" (a part of his machine) "is immaterial to the effect." This was held to cast upon the patentee the necessity of proving to the satisfaction of the jury that any shape which could reasonably be expected to be made by a competent workman would produce a beneficial effect and be a valuable discovery.

4. (N. P.) The omission to mention in the specification anything which may be necessary for the beneficial enjoyment of the invention is a fatal defect. Aliter if such omission go only to the degree of the benefit.

5. (N.P.)—The omission to mention in the specification anything which the patentee knows to be useful is a fatal defect.

6. (Court of Ex.)—A patent is not vitiated by a mistake in the specification, as where air is called an imponderable substance, or sulphur a mineral; nor by a mistake in a matter foreign to the invention, which cannot mislead; nor by the inaccurate use of words which are explained by the context.

7. (Court of Ex.)—The construction of the specification is for the court, the meaning of the words and surrounding circumstances having been ascertained by the jury. Parke, B. delivering the judgment of the Court of Exchequer, held it a just rule of construction to judge of the meaning of a particular phrase by taking the whole instrument together; and he construed the word "effect" in one part of the specification as meaning beneficial effect, because it was evidently used in that sense in some other parts of the specification. The intelligibility of the specification is a question for the jury. (1 Web. P.C. 295.)

Carpenter v. Smith. N. P. 1841.—Abinger, C.B., in his remarks to the jury, said: "It is required as a condition of every patent that the patentee shall set forth in his specification a true account and description of his patent or invention, and it is necessary in that specification that he should state what his invention is, what he claims to be new, and what he admits to be old; for if the specification states simply the whole machinery which he uses, and which he wishes to introduce into use, and claims the whole of that as new, and does not state that he claims either any particular part, or the combination of the whole as new, why then his patent must be taken to be a patent for the whole, and for each particular part, and his patent will be void if any particular part turns out to be old, or the combination itself not new." (1 Web. P. C. 532.)

Gibson v. Brand. 1842.—If the patentee claims as his invention improvements in machinery or a new combination of machinery, and the jury find that he has only invented an improved process, the patent is void. Tindal, C.J., said: "Looking at the specification in the case, it appears to me that this patent cannot be supported at law, because the plaintiffs have, in the course of it, claimed more than they are entitled to." His Lordship also said that the specification ought to be so clearly worded as to enable any person of sufficient understanding on the particular subject to attain the result without doubt or difficulty, it being the price paid by the inventor for keeping the public out of the enjoyment of the manufacture. Cresswell, J.: "Every party is bound to tell the public clearly, by his specification, what he claims, and what they may do or not do, without risk of an action for infringing his patent. (1 Web. P. C. 627; 4 M. & G. 179.)

Macnamara v. Hulse, N. P. 1842.—Action for the infringement of a patent for "certain improvements in paving, pitching, or covering streets, roads, and other ways." The patentee, in his specification, said: "My invention consists in an improved mode of cutting or forming stone, or other suitable material for paving or covering roads," &c. The specification directed the blocks to be used for paving to be bevelled both inwards and outwards, but said nothing as to the precise angle at which the bevels were to be made. The infringement complained of was the manufacture of wooden blocks according to the improvement of the plaintiff. Abinger, C.B., said: "If the specification leaves it to experiment to determine what is the proper angle, it is not good; but if any angle is a benefit, it will do." And, again: "I think that the words 'any other suitable material' include a wood pavement, though probably the plaintiff never contemplated it." (1 Car. & Marsh. 478; 2 Web. P. C. 129.)

Walton v. Bateman. N. P. 1842.—Tindal, C.J., held that it was a question for the jury whether the patentee has given such a description of his invention and of the manner of carrying it out as will enable a workman of competent skill in that line of business to act upon it. (1 Web. P. C. 621.) If a patentee knows a better mode than that which he states in his specification of carrying out his invention, his patent is void. (1 Web. P. C. 622.)

The Household Company v. Neilson. N. P. 1843.—It is not necessary that the apparatus described in the specification should be productive of the greatest amount of benefit; it is sufficient if an ordinary workman, acquainted with the subject, could, by following the specification, construct an apparatus productive of some benefit. Lord Justice Clerk Hope, in addressing the jury, said: "The specification is to be read as addressed to artists, or persons of competent skill in the branch of manufacture or process to which it is applicable. Hence, known machinery need not be described, when the use of them is to be made in carrying out the object of the patent .... Workmen of ordinary skill, means those competent in the ordinary business and conducting of the particular trade—to furnish and construct apparatus for the purpose required. Certainly, the pursuer does not satisfy the condition of law, if he says men of the greatest science—first-rate engineers—could understand him, and would know what to do, or what direction to give. That is not enough. The specification must be for the benefit of the trade when the patent is out; it is addressed to those engaged in particular departments of trade, and who are to be employed in order to make apparatus for the purpose, those who are competent to make similar apparatus for similar purposes. But the terms in the issue do not denote common labourers or workmen employed under those which do furnish and construct such apparatus." (1 Web. P. C. 676.)

Fickels v. Haslam. 1844.—The patent was for "improvements in the manufacture of plaited articles." The specification described but one improvement. Held, by the Court of Common Pleas that this did not render the specification bad. (8 Jur. 474.)

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

MANY of those members of the Incorporated Law Society who wish and recently endeavoured to throw open the doors for the election of the council, making it more representative, are probably unaware of the fact, that in Dublin the council of the Incorporated Law Society is annually elected by ballot.

AMONGST the many offices which might with great advantage to the public, and in view of the increasing necessity for a fairer distribution of what may be called the pickings of the Profession, justly be bestowed upon solicitors, that of clerk of assize certainly seems one of the most conspicuous. A clerk of assize should be a local solicitor, who would of course appoint his agent to do the necessary work in London in the manner adopted by under sheriffs.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us that there is an idea prevailing that the partners and articled clerks of members of the Incorporated Law Society are at liberty to use the hall or reading room of the society. This is an error to which we think it necessary to direct attention, especially as at the present time efforts are being made to increase and extend the influence of this Society, and when, too, it is said that every qualified solicitor should feel it incumbent on him to become a member of the society.

A CORRESPONDENT inquires of us whether solicitors only are competent to act as political agents for the purpose of attending before Revising Barristers. We are not aware of any enactment limiting the right so to appear to solicitors, though we are bound to say such a condition would be only right and proper; but it is hardly a matter for which provision would be made unless at the instigation of the representative body. If the matter is open, an express provision that certificated solicitors alone should be qualified for such responsible and important posts would be desirable.

A REPORT, in circulation, to the effect that the Council of the Incorporated Law Society have decided to apply to Parliament with a view to confirmation by statute of the "Scale of Commission" recently circulated amongst members of the society by the council does not, we believe, convey the actual position of the matter. The Scale has been submitted to the Lord Chancellor, and in the event of his approving it, the application above suggested will be made. As is well known, a very large number of solicitors do not belong to any of the existing Law Societies, either in town or country, and we believe—and are glad so to understand—that it is in contemplation to circulate the Scale in question among solicitors generally. The Incorporated Law Society represents, or should do so, not less those who are not members than those who are so.

WE are sorry to hear that the Hampshire and West Sussex Law Society established, we believe, in 1869, principally through the instrumentality of Mr. Cousins, the present clerk to the Justices of Portsmouth, has become practically defunct, and this, too, at a time when such societies are more than ever needed, and, indeed, are springing up in every part of the kingdom. The matter contained in the pages of our present issue, especially upon the subject of the serious encroachments upon the Profession, sufficiently illustrates the necessity for the existence of these societies, which, however, should be brought more in contact with the Incorporated Law Society, if they should not be in fact branches of it. We hope to hear that the country society referred to will be again resuscitated. We believe there are many young professional men in Hampshire with ample energy who may well in their own interests render that assistance with the view we suggest which older members of the Profession cannot be expected to bestow.

THE following law lectures and classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society. Monday, 10th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Tuesday, 11th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Wednesday, 12th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Friday, 14th, lecture, Common Law, 6 to 7 o'clock.

SEVERAL country solicitors have forwarded to us a quantity of printed matter addressed to each, and marked "Private." At the sacrifice of space we are bound to reproduce the whole of the important part of it, as follows, together with the body of a circular letter sent with the "scale of charges:"—

Law Agency Offices, London.

In returning thanks to the legal profession we now beg to submit our revised low scale of agency charges for solicitors only, which will be found on comparison to be 25 per cent. below other agents, and to assure our patrons that all business entrusted to us will be carried out with the accuracy, fidelity, and despatch afforded by an experience of twenty years.

It will be seen that our scale enables the country practitioner to secure to himself nearly the full benefit of his charges.

LAW AGENTS AND ACCOUNTANTS, JOINT STOCK COMPANIES' REGISTRATION AGENTS AND LAW STATIONERS, London, W.C.

SCALE OF CHARGES.

	s.	d.
Chancery.
Deeds enrolled	3	0
Registering Assignment of Patents	2	0
Search for Specification of Patents	2	0
Common Law.
Registering Bill of Sale	1	0
Search Bill of Sale	1	6
Do. Warrant of Attorney	1	6
Filing Certificate of Acknowledgment	1	0
Searching Registered Judgments, Crown debts, Lis pendens, and Annuities	2	6
Articled Clerks' notices for Examination and Admission given, Affidavits and Admissions prepared, and Court attended on signing the Roll	15	0
Bankruptcy.
Search for Composition Deeds or Cases in liquidation	2	0
Service of Restraining Order on Judgment Creditors, and making Affidavit of Service	3	6
Attending Meeting of Creditors, and letter reporting result, as per time engaged Probate Registry.
Valuations made for Probate in town or country. 5 per cent. commission on total value; (one-third of the commission allowed to solicitors)
Wills proved, or Letters of Administration extracted for country solicitors, in their own names	5	0
Searching Will	2	6
Court fee	1	0
Attending for any other purpose at Registry	2	0
Somerset House.
Passing Residuary Account (according to time) 3s. to	7	6
Passing Succession Account, 2s. to	5	0
Paying instalment of Succession Duty	2	0
Paying duty on Legacy	2	0
Paying increase on Probate or Letters of Administration	3	0
Obtaining return of Probate Duty	3	0
Search for Birth, Death, or Marriage	2	0
Attending Stamping Deed	1	0
Denoting Stamp to Duplicate Deed	1	0
Obtaining Adjudication Stamp on Deed	5	0
Joint Stock Companies' Registry.
Registering Company	5	0
Annual and other Returns filed	2	0
Companies' Books, Prospectuses, Share Certificates, Letters of Allotment, forms of application for Shares and Common Seal supplied at 25 per cent. less than any other Registration Agent.
General Business.
Books Audited and Accounts prepared (charge by arrangement).
Searching Records at Public Record Office. Contracted Latin translated, copied, and verified by affidavit (as per time engaged).
Obtaining execution of Deed (each name)	2	6
Payment into County Court	2	6
Notices inserted in Newspapers, &c. (each)	1	6
Passport obtained from Foreign Office	5	0
Friendly Societies enrolled	2	6
Law Stationery usual charges.
Articled Clerks prepared for examination in Solicitors' Bookkeeping and Accounts.

It is not enough to say that it is our actual duty to expose this; not enough to say that the thanks of the Profession are due to those country solicitors whose sense of professional etiquette impels them to forward such matter to us. It must also be said that we are perfectly surprised—we have written it before over and over again—that no society is formed to stamp out this touting, these depredations by unqualified persons, which is assuming in London very large and serious proportions. It is for us to give publicity to a wrongful state of things; it is for the Profession to rectify it. No doubt other business is transacted besides that suggested by "The Scale of Charges."

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SUIT FOR DISSOLUTION—PRIOR DECREE OF JUDICIAL SEPARATION—CRUELTY COMMITTED BEFORE THE DECREE—FRESH ADULTERY.—A wife who had been judicially separated from her husband on the ground of his adultery, filed a petition for dissolution, alleging fresh acts of adultery and cruelty, which were known to her before the former decree. Held, that the decree of judicial separation was no bar to her petition for a divorce: (Green v. Green, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 251. Div.)

WILL TORN BY DISAPPOINTED LEGATEE—PROBATE OF THE PIECES AND AN AFFIDAVIT.—A disappointed legatee got possession of the will after it had been read over to her, and tore it in pieces. One of the pieces was missing, and was supposed to have been carried away by her. The court allowed the contents of the missing part to be proved by affidavit, and granted probate of the pieces thus supplemented: (In the goods of G. Clift, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259. Prob.)

MATRIMONIAL SUIT—JUDICIAL SEPARATION—PERMANENT ALIMONY—ALLOWANCE FOR CHILDREN.—The joint income of the parties amounted to £563, of which the wife had £196 arising from property settled on her by her husband. There were three children of the marriage, and the court, in allotting permanent alimony to the wife, allowed £30 a year for each of these children in addition to the £196 a year of which she was already in possession: (Todd v. Todd, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 52 Div.)

MATRIMONIAL SUIT—DESERTION—HUSBAND FREQUENTLY IMPRISONED—WIFE'S REFUSAL TO RESUME COHABITATION.—The husband, who was the respondent, had been several times convicted of larceny, and sentenced to terms of imprisonment. The first separation occurred when the husband withdrew from home, with his wife's consent, for the purpose of concealment. On his release the wife refused to return to cohabitation, and ultimately sued for a divorce. Held, that there was no desertion, the original separation having been with the wife's consent, and the subsequent separation being involuntary on the husband's part, and caused by the refusal of the wife, which was not founded on any matrimonial misconduct: (Townsend v. Townsend, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 254. Div.)

Correspondence.

COMMISSION TO ADMINISTER OATHS.—Several of my professional friends and I are unable to agree as to the meaning of the first paragraph on page 449 of your number of the 25th ult. After the Judicature Act has come into operation will affidavits deposed to before common law commissioners be received in evidence in every division of the Supreme Court? In a word, will the existing distinction between common law and Chancery commissioners be abolished? H. M.

[Yes; it is as you suggest, but see our note to the letter of "An Old Practioner" on this subject.—ED. Sols. Deptmt.]

— I am obliged to you, and so must be all the commissioners, for ascertaining from the highest authority their position under the Judicature Act, and I collect from the remarks contained in the LAW TIMES of the 25th Oct., that I as a Commissioner in Chancery, and a Commissioner at Common Law for five counties, will be enabled to administer oaths relating to common law in all parts of England and Wales, and that a commissioner at law, although his commission should only extend to five counties, will be able to administer oaths relating to the Chancery and Probate divisions, and to common law matters throughout England and Wales, so that we shall all have equal powers. I am induced to trouble you with this letter because a correspondent was of opinion that commissioners would only retain similar powers to those which they now possess. It would be a very great advantage if London Commissioners could administer oaths in the country, and vice versa.

AN OLD PRACTITIONER.

[You take an incorrect view of the matter. Members of the Profession already holding commissions will be enabled to exercise them in reference to all business in the Supreme Court and Court of Appeal, but where the commission defines the limits within which it can be exercised, the terms of the commission in this respect will still hold good.—ED. Sols'. Deptmt.]

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

DAWSON (Maria), 33, Bedford-square, widow; ALCOCK (Harry), Wilton Castle, Wexford, Ireland, Esq., and DEVEREUX (John Daly), Ballyrank's House, Wexford, Esq. £22 16s. 8d. Reduced Three Per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, said Maria Dawson, widow, Harry Alcock, Esq., and John Daly Devereux, Esq.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BARNES (Jane), 9, Linden Grove, Peckham, Surrey, widow. Dec. 31; W. Edwin, solicitor, 56, Blackman-street, London.

BARNES (John H.), Bushery Grange, Watford, Herts, and the Stock Exchange, London, Esq. Dec. 31: Clayton and Sons, solicitors, 10, Lancaster-place, Strand, Middlesex.

BEALL (Samuel), Great Charlotte-street, Blackfriars, Surrey, pawnbroker. Dec. 1; J. Attenborough, solicitor, 63, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

BLACKWOOD (Sir Henry) Bart., Portsea. Dec. 1; Grueber and Cooper, solicitors, 5, Billiter-street, London.

CARRINGTON (Edmund), Beverley, veterinary surgeon. Jan. 1; Robinson and Son, solicitors, North Bar Within in Beverley.

COOKE (Geo.), formerly of Fleet-street, London, late of Kendall-place, Vassall-road, North Brixton, now known as 103, Vassall-road, Brixton, Surrey. Jan. 1; Messrs. Freshfields, solicitors, 5, Bank-buildings, London.

DRAGE (Wm.), 9, Arrow-street, Leytonstone road, Essex, gentleman. Dec. 1; Jacobs and Co., solicitors, 20, Budge-row, Cannon-street, London.

DUNDERDALE (Richard), Wheatley Brook, Thornley, Lancaster, yeoman. Dec. 27; R. W. and A. Arcroft, solicitors, 4 Cannon-street, Preston.

EAGLE (Geo. C.), 137, Upper Thames-street, London, and 13, Rutland-gate, Middlesex, and of Wargrave, Berks, wool warehouse keeper. Nov. 15; Drake and Son, solicitors, 8, Cloak-lane, Cannon-street, London.

EVE (Rev. Henry), The Rectory, Ockenden, near Romford, Essex. Dec. 1; A. E. Francis, solicitor, 9, Austin Friars, London.

GARROD (Joseph N.), Falcon-square, and Wyndham House, Carlton-hill, St. John's Wood, London, Esq. Dec. 8; Robinson and Preston, solicitors, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

HARRISON (John), Gladon, Yorks, formerly a slabber, afterwards a grocer. Dec. 1; J. Hartley, solicitor, Otley, Yorks.

HAY (Lieut-Gen. Chas. C. R.), formerly of 22, Cornwall-gardens, South Kensington, Middlesex, late of Redboat Villa, Freshwater, Isle of Wight. Dec. 15; Farrer and Co., solicitors, 66, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

HEWETT (Charlotte), late of 13, Southgate-street (formerly called Chernock-place), Winchester, spinster. Dec. 31; Barnes and Bernard, solicitors, 11, Great Winchester-street, London.

HILL (Catherine), Compton-walk, Southampton, widow. Dec. 27; Hickman and Son, solicitors, Southampton.

HOLDSWORTH (Jas.), Otley, York. Dec. 1; J. Hartley, solicitor, Otley.

HOUSTOUN (Wm.), Dhulough, Co. Mayo, Ireland, Esq. Dec. 20; G. Rooper, solicitor, 17, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

MACLACHLAN (Daniel), Ventnor, Isle of Wight, physician. Nov. 29; Lawrie, Keen, and Rogers, solicitors, 24, Knightrider-street, Doctors'-commons, London.

MAITLAND (Isabella R.), formerly of 13, Stratford-place, late of 17, Seymour-street, Marylebone, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 2; Dawes and Sons, solicitors, 9, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street, London.

MOYCE (Elizabeth M.), formerly of Mason's Hill, Bromley, Kent, late of Shipborne, Kent, widow. Dec. 15; Walker and Martineau, solicitors, 18, King's-road, Gray's-inn, Middlesex.

NIELD (Alice), Woodfield Cottage, Alderley Edge, near Manchester, spinster. Jan 22; F. Whitaker, Duchy of Lancaster office, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

PATERSON (Sarah), 48, Tufnell-park-road, Holloway, Middlesex, widow. Nov. 30; W. A. Williams, 17, Grafton-road, Holloway.

SIDWELL (Ann), 15, Eldon-square, Reading, Berks, widow. Dec. 22; Pownall and Co., solicitors, Staple-inn, London.

SMITH (Wm.), 5, Adelaide-terrace, Kingston-upon-Hull, gentleman. Feb. 1; Towney and Dawber, solicitors, 10, Parliament-street, Hull.

SOLOMON (Samuel), Pine Apple Lodge, Peckham Rye, Surrey, and Covent-garden, Middlesex, market grower of fruit. Dec. 1; W. H. Oliver, solicitor, 64, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

SOUTH (Jas.), Spittlegate, Lincoln, brickmaker. Dec. 26; R. A. White, solicitor, Grantham.

STEWART (Chas. A.), Manchester, merchant. Nov. 30; Hinde, Milne, and Ludlow, solicitors, 7, Mount-street, Manchester.

TIPPETT (Jane H.), 37, Addison-road, North, Notting-hill, Kensington, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 3; A. Norris, solicitor, 2, Bedford-row, London.

WILSON (Rev. Wm.), Southampton. Dec. 27; Hickman and Son, solicitors, Southampton.

WOOD (Richard), Duke of Wellington public house, Leeke-street (formerly South-street), Chelsea, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Nov. 20; Nash and Co., solicitors, 2, Suffolk-lane, Cannon street, London.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Friday, Oct. 24.

By Messrs. WINSTANLEY and HORWOOD, at the Mart.

Fifty Shares in the Auction Mart Company (£25 paid)—sold for £687.

Sixty shares in the Animal Charcoal Company (£6 paid)—for £285.

By Messrs. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, and Co.,

Surrey, Reigate—The Quarry-hill Estate, comprising mansion and 16a. 1r. 35p.,—freehold—sold for £12,000.

Near East Grinstead.—The Old Estate, containing 438a. 0r. 15p., freehold—sold for £16,000, including timber.

An enclosure, containing 8a. 1r. 10p.—sold for £300.

Wood-street, E.C.—Nos. 2, 3, and 4, St. Alban's-court, freehold—sold for £2200.

By Messrs. GADSDEN, ELLIS, and Co.,

City.—Nos. 18 and 19, Ironmonger-lane, freehold—sold for £6010.

Middlesex. Hanworth.—An enclosure, containing 14a. 2r. 8p.—sold for £1320.

A Cottage and plot of land—sold for £170.

A house, with shop and garden—sold for £240.

Ealing.—No. 14, Castle-hill-mews, freehold—sold for £200.

Wednesday, Nov. 5.

By Messrs. EDWIN FOX, and BOUSFIELD, at the Mart.

City of London.—No. 29, Budge-row, term 77 years—sold for £7000.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LIFE INTEREST OF A MARRIED WOMAN IN HER SEPARATE ESTATE—POWER OF APPOINTMENT.—A settlement on a marriage under which property is settled to the wife for life, with remainder as she should, notwithstanding her coverture, by deed or will appoint, with remainder to her executors and administrators without restraint on anticipation: held, to vest in equity the entire corpus in the wife for all purposes as fully as a similar gift to a man would vest it in him. The judgment of Turner, L.J., in Johnson v. Gallagher (3 De G. F. & J. 513; 4 L. T. Rep. N. S. 77) followed and approved. Shattock v. Shattock (L. Rep. 2 Eq. 182; 14 L. T. Rep. N. S. 452) dissented from. The proposition that a married woman's separate estate is not liable to her "general engagements" is accurate, if it is merely meant to say that goods sold to a married woman in the ordinary course of domestic life, and contracts made by her in respect of property not her separate estate, do not necessarily impose a liability to be satisfied out of her separate estate: (Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lempriere, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 186. Priv. Co.)

LANDS CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACT 1845—PAYMENT OUT OF COURT—TRUSTEES WITH POWER OF SALE—COSTS.—A testator devised real estate to trustees upon trust, to sell when his youngest son should attain twenty-one, and to divide the proceeds of sale as therein mentioned, and he directed that the receipts of the trustees should be good discharges. Before the youngest son attained twenty-one a portion of the real estate was purchased by a burial board under their statutory powers, and the purchase-money was paid into court under the 69th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act. On the youngest son attaining twenty-one the estate became divisible into eight shares. The trustees and the persons entitled to two of these shares presented a petition praying either that the whole fund in court might be sold and the proceeds paid to the trustees, or that two-eighths might be sold and the proceeds paid to the petitioners entitled thereto, and that the remaining six-eighths might be carried over to the separate accounts of the persons entitled thereto, and that the board might be ordered to pay the costs. The board asked that the whole fund might be paid to the trustees, in order to save the costs of further petitions. Held, that the board were not entitled to require the whole fund to be paid out at once. Quære, whether the trustees were persons "absolutely entitled" within the meaning of the 69th section of the Lands Clauses Act: (Re Lowry, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 233. Chan.).

LANDLORD AND TENANT—NOXIOUS SHRUBS—IMPLIED WARRANTY—COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF GAME.—A tenant for life of an estate with powers of leasing, granted a lease of a farm. The lessor died, and in a suit which was instituted for the administration of his estate, the lessee brought in a claim for damages sustained by the loss of some sheep and cattle which died, more than six months before the lessor's death, from eating branches of yew trees growing on the lessor's land, which projected into the lessee's field, and from eating cuttings of the yew trees which had been thrown into the lessee's field by the lessor's servants. Held (reversing the decision of the Master of the Rolls) that the claim could not be sustained, as the cause of action (if any) died with the lessor; and the executors were freed from all liability, no action having been brought within the time appointed by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. The lessee made another claim for damages sustained since the lessor's death by loss of cattle which had died from eating yew cuttings lying on lessor's land, to which the cattle had gained access through a fence which was out of repair, and which the lessor had not covenanted to keep in repair. Held, that the executors of the lessor were under no obligation to keep the fence in repair, and that the claim could not be sustained. The lease reserved the game on the farm to the lessor. Two months before the lease was executed, the lessor's steward verbally promised the lessee that the game should be killed down, and it was on the faith of that promise that the lessee entered into the lease. In spite of this promise the shooting was let to a gentleman who kept a large quantity of game. On a claim by the lessee for damages caused by the depredations of the game, Held (reversing the decision of the Master of the Rolls), that the verbal promise constituted a good collateral agreement, and was binding upon the lessor, and that the lessee was entitled to be paid the amount of the damages sustained by breach of it out of the lessor's estate: (Erskine v. Adeane, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 234. L. JJ.)

LIGHT AND AIR—EASEMENT—GRANT BY GENERAL WORDS—LESSOR AND LESSEE—SUBSEQUENT ACQUISITION OF ADJOINING HOUSE.—General words in a grant must be restricted to what the grantor had power to grant at the date of the grant. In 1864 A. granted to B. a lease for twenty-one years of a house "together with all edifices . . . lights . . . easements, advantages, and appurtenances thereto belonging, or therewith held, used, or enjoyed. At the date of the lease A. held, for the residue of a term expiring at Christmas 1868, an adjoining house, over which most of the light came to the back windows of the house leased to B. On the expiration of his lease A. purchased the fee simple of the adjoining house, and in 1872 he pulled down that house with the intention of rebuilding it to a greater height than its former height. B., whose lights were not ancient lights, filed a bill to restrain A. from raising the new house to a greater height than the old house. Held, that the lease to B. only amounted to a grant of the light coming over the adjoining house during A.'s term in it, and that on subsequently acquiring the fee simple of the adjoining house A. was not estopped either at law or in equity from dealing with the house in such a way as to interfere with B.'s lights. Bill accordingly dismissed with costs. Decision of Malins, V.C., reversed: (Booth v. Alcock, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 231. Ch.)

COUNTY COURTS.

NORWICH COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Oct. 3.

(Before W. H. COOKE, Esq., Q.C., Judge.)

KENNEY AND OTHERS v. WELLS.

Friendly society—Interference in litigation—Laws of the society—Decree of Foresters' Court ordering a sale of mortgaged property.

THE principal business here to-day had relation to this case, probably one of the most remarkable which has ever been brought before a court of justice, and possessing immense interest for those belonging to friendly societies.

Wilkin, of Lynn, appeared for the plaintiffs.

The defendant had no legal representative.

Wilkin, in his opening, said that he had to bring under the attention of the court, a matter which affected the administration of justice, his Honour's character——

His HONOUR (facetiously interposing).—"Good gracious! I hope you are not going to frighten me!" (Laughter.)

Wilkin said he was not going to do that; but he was sure his Honour would say, after hearing the facts which it would be his duty to lay before him, that any thing more extraordinary he had never listened to, affecting as it did his powers as a judge, and an attempted illegal interference with the powers of this court. The plaintiffs, James Kenney, William Coe, and Henry Hamond, are trustees of the Court Robin Hood (No. 1302) of the Ancient Order of Foresters, at Downham; and the defendant, Willis Wells, is secretary to the Ancient Order of Foresters Friendly Society, at Lynn, registered pursuant to the Act of Parliament, the former being a branch of the latter, which, from its position, claimed a control over its funds. In Aug. 1869, the Court Hobin Hood advanced to one Robert Norton, of West Dereham, the sum of £400 upon mortgage of some copyhold property. At that time a man named Philip Jackson was one of the trustees of the Robin Hood and became the custodian of the deeds of Norton's property. For reasons which amply warranted it in taking that step, the Robin Hood resolved upon calling in its money from Norton, but failing to obtain this without a resort to litigation, Jackson was asked to join his co-trustees in the bill which it had been found necessary to file on the equity side of the court against Norton, which he refused. In the notice which was served upon Jackson he was made to understand that in the event of his neglecting or refusing to join with the co-trustees in the suit, he would be made a defendant at his own risk as to costs—and defendant he was made. At the hearing of the suit, when asked to account for the non-production of the deeds, Jackson stated that his house had been burned, and gave his Honour to understand that the deeds were burned with it; but, at all events the decree prayed for was granted, and the mortgaged property ordered to be sold, there being due for debt and interest £473, the costs amounting to £63 12s. 9d., making a total of £537 12s. 9d. The sale realised but £436 1s. 2d., leaving a deficiency of £101 11s. 7d. Jackson having rendered himself liable for the costs, a distress was issued for their recovery; but as that had been done under the authority of a court of competent jurisdiction, it seemed difficult to believe that Jackson, whose frequent appearance before his Honour would justify the impression that he was as well acquainted with the effect of an order duly made by an English court of justice as most men, should have tried to defeat it by an appeal to a body of individuals who, while indulging in high-sounding titles, had no power to interfere with a process of his Honour's court.

His HONOUR said that a more outrageous violation of the law of the land in an effort to defeat the process of a legally-constituted English tribunal, or a piece of greater tyranny than had been attempted to be exercised by those whom the defendant represented, he certainly had never heard. It was he (his Honour) and not the plaintiffs, who had ordered Jackson to pay the costs in the equity suit. If he had been wrong in that, Jackson would, upon application, have had every facility for appealing against his decision to a competent authority; but, instead of that, he went to a body of men who had absolutely no power in the matter whatever. As he had said, he had never heard anything like it; but he would like to hear what answer the defendant had to make to the complaint.

Mr. Wells addressed the court, contending that the matter complained of had been done under the rules and regulations for the government of the Ancient Order of Forestry, which provided for the settlement of all disputes arising among the members. The high court was the governing body in the order; and when an application was made for the opening of a new court, it granted a dispensation for that purpose. The court had the power to make its own laws; but before it could be affiliated to the district the laws had to be certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies. The district had no power over the funds of any court belonging to it, save the funeral money, which in this case had been refused owing to the executive committee having suspended the Robin Hood for a violation of the laws. His Honour's predecessor and the judge of another County Court elsewhere had decided that the laws of the Foresters provided for the settlement of whatever disputes might arise in the order.

His HONOUR said that there could be no doubt that they had the power to settle any differences arising between them as Foresters, but not as British subjects. Here was a case in which money was lent on mortgage, which the lenders were obliged to have recourse to legal proceedings to get back. The Foresters could not issue a decree ordering a sale of the property. He (his Honour) would not like to say positively that Jackson had sworn that the deeds were burned, but that certainly was the impression left upon his mind at the time.

Mr. Wells said it was one reason why Jackson had been restored that the deeds were not burned, and he (defendant) believed that they were in Downham at this moment.

His HONOUR remarked that that made the matter all the worse, and Jackson might consider himself fortunate that he was not now undergoing penal servitude. The Foresters had no power to take evidence upon oath; yet here they seemed to have gone behind his (the judge's) back, and, hearing what Jackson had to say, preferred to accept his version of what occurred, without giving him (his Honour) an opportunity of defending himself for giving a judgment after hearing witnesses duly sworn. In the whole course of his life he had never listened to anything so astonishing on the part of the people who professed to be in their right senses. The plaintiffs were clearly entitled to a judgment treating the suspension as a nullity, and to an order requiring the defendant to pay the funeral money.

Mr. Wilkin said that he was happy at being able to state from his own knowledge that both Mr. Wells and the officers of the district he had in attendance with him were persons of the highest respectability, and he was sure that they really did not mean to do anything wrong.

His HONOUR said that he, too, was convinced of Mr. Wells' respectability; and in the circumstances he thought the best thing to be done, instead in giving an immediate judgment, would be adjourn the case for a couple of months, in the hope that a mutual arrangement would in the meanwhile be arrived at. He would be glad to see Mr. Wells on another occasion, although he hoped never again to see him in this matter. (Laughter.)

Mr. Wilkin concurring in the course suggested, an adjournment till the December sitting was ordered.

READING COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday Oct. 22.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

FORSYTH v. GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Railway company — Carriage of passengers — Punctuality

A railway company having by its time table stated that a train would arrive at a particular time, and that every attention would be paid to ensure punctuality of the train, being late half an hour,

Held, that a primâ facie breach of contract had been committed.

Forsyth Q.C., conducted his own case, W. F. Blandy, acting as his solicitor; and Gledhill appeared for the defendants.

Forsyth said, in opening the case, that he brought the action on public grounds, to endeavour to stop the system of unpunctuality on the Great Western Railway, whereby it was utterly impossible to make an engagement with confidence and safety, and, being sworn, deposed to the facts as follows: In the month of August he was travelling from the Channel Islands to Mortimer, where he resides. It happened to be rough weather at the time, and he had written to his family and said he should be home on Thursday, Aug. 28th, at six o'clock, if the weather allowed. The wind was high and the sea rough at the time. The time bills showed that the train left Weymouth at 12.30 p.m., and reached Reading at 5.35, and there was a train to leave Reading for Mortimer at six o'clock. He got into the train at Weymouth at 12.30. It was stopped at Trowbridge for some time, for some unaccountable reason, and again at Didcot, where he was transferred to another train, and placed in a siding, and off went the train in which he had taken his ticket. He was told he would catch the Mortimer train. He reached Reading at 5.57, and the train was stopped outside the station by the signal for five minutes. He saw the Mortimer train at the Lower Station, and told the guard it would go. The guard said "No." When he got into the station he told a porter and an inspector he wanted to catch the Mortimer train, but when he reached the lower platform the train started, and he was left behind. He asked the inspector why he did not stop the train, and he said he was not looking. There was no train to Mortimer for an hour and a quarter. He had ordered his carriage to meet him at Mortimer, and his family were anxiously expecting him, as he had told them the weather was rough; he therefore took a carriage to Mortimer, for which he paid 10s., and he now sued the company for that amount. He then read the following correspondence he had had with the Great Western Railway Company:

"The Firs, Mortimer, Reading,
29th Aug. 1873.

"Sir,—I am sick, as everybody else is, of complaining of the Great Western Railway Company. Yesterday I left Weymouth by the 12.30 express train, and by your time table I ought to have arrived at Reading by 5.35 p.m., my ticket being for Reading. I had arranged for my carriage to meet me at Mortimer at a quarter past six, intending, of course, to go on from Reading by the six p.m. train. We did not reach the signal post at Reading (having changed at Didcot from the express train into another) until four or five minutes before six. The signal stopped us from entering the station at Reading for five minutes, and the Mortimer train was standing at the lower platform, so that it was perfectly well known that the train from Didcot had arrived. When we got into the station at two minutes past six I hurried down to the Mortimer train, and saw it set off before my eyes, and leave me behind. I spoke to the inspector, and asked him why he allowed it to go when passengers were on their way to it. His answer was, 'Well, sir, I was not looking.' I was obliged to take a carriage to my house at Mortimer, for which I paid 10s. This sum, of course, I demand from the company. If it is not paid, I shall at once instruct my solicitor to commence an action in the County Court against the company, to recover the amount. The arrangements at the Reading station are simply disgraceful, and I wish you could hear what your own officers along the line say about them.—Your obedient servant, W. FORSYTH, Q.C.

"You can send the 10s. by P.O.O. or stamps. I had come from the Channel Islands, and my family were naturally made anxious by my non-appearance by the six p.m. train from Mortimer."

The following reply was sent:

"London, 1st Sept. 1873.

"W. Forsyth, Esq, Q.C.,
The Firs, Mortimer, Reading.

"Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 29th ult., in which you complain of the train by which you travelled on Thursday last missing the connection at Reading for Mortimer, and I have to express my regret for the inconvenience to which you were put in consequence. I will at once have inquiries made into your complaint and by an early post communicate with you again.—Yours obediently,

"J. GRIERSON, per A. BEASLEY."

Mr. Forsyth next sent the following letter:

"The Firs, Mortimer, Reading.
5th Sept. 1873.

"Sir,—You have had quite time enough to make the inquiry relative to my claim, and as I do not intend to be trifled with, I beg to inform you that unless I hear from you satisfactorily by return of post I shall on Monday next instruct my solicitor to commence an action against the G.W.R. Co.—Yours obediently. "W. FORSYTH."

"The Traffic Manager, G.W.R. Co."

The reply to that letter was this:—

"G.W. Railway, Gen. Manager's Office,
Paddington Station, 9th Sept. 1873.

"Sir,—In the absence of Mr. Grierson, who is out of town for a day or two, I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date. It shall be laid before him on his return, and a reply sent you as soon as possible.

"Yours faithfully, A. BEASLEY.

"W. Forsyth, Esq., Q.C., The Firs, Mortimer."

Forsyth said he freely admitted that as a matter of law, in case of anything beyond the control of the company occurring to delay the train, they were absolved from fulfilling their contract to convey passengers at a certain time. It was not an absolute guarantee. He then quoted the case of Denton v. Great Northern Railway, in which, according to the printed time tables a passenger train was to leave plaintiff's station in London at five o'clock, to arrive at Peterborough at 7.20 the same evening, and Hull at midnight. It turned out the train did not go as advertised. Lord Campbell and Mr. Justice Wightman held that the publication of the time table was an undertaking to convey the passenger. Mr. Forsyth was then proceeding to read a newspaper report of a case, in which Mr. Warwick Cole, the Birmingham County Court judge, had given judgment against the London and North-Western Railway Company, when Gledhill objected, on the ground that newspaper reports were not taken as evidence by judges. He apprehended that they required a proper law report.

His HONOUR observed that newspaper reports were sometimes better. [The objection was withdrawn.]

Forsyth then gave a brief outline of the case against the London and North Western Railway Company. That company failed to convey a person to Holyhead as advertised in their time bills. The train started from Birmingham and ought to have met the Belfast mail train at Stafford, but the train was three quarters of an hour late, and lost it. The company relied upon their notice on the time bills that every attention would be made to ensure punctuality. Judgment was given against the company. The next case quoted by Mr. Forsyth was Freeman v. The Great Western Railway Company, heard at Reading before his Honour, who gave judgment for the plaintiff. Another case referred to was one at Epsom, in which his Honour decided against the Brighton company for not taking three passengers to Epsom in consequence of the Derby races going on at the time, when the three persons were the only ordinary passengers to Epsom, and the train an ordinary one, and room in it. Mr. Forsyth defied the defendants to produce a case in their favour. The company did not become absolutely liable against all accidents. If the delay had been through an accident, such as the breaking of a tube or embankment, he should not have been there; but when it arose from neglect he brought the action in the interest of the public.

The time table was put in.

Cross-examined by Gledhill: I took a return ticket from Reading to the Channel Islands. I did not inquire if there was another train immediately.

His HONOUR (to Gledhill): You must show that there was a train immediately.

Gledhill: There was a train in an hour and a quarter, and he would have reached Mortimer earlier by that than by the conveyance.

Forsyth: No.

Gledhill, for the defence, said the company fought the action on principle. The cases which Mr. Forsyth had quoted were entirely different to the one then before his Honour; cases in which there had been a ticket granted at one station to another at some distance, and the delay had arisen in one train having failed to catch another. In Hurst v. The Great Western Railway Company, where a passenger who had taken a ticket from Cardiff to Newcastle, had got into a train at Bristol, to catch a Midland train at Birmingham, but from the train being half-an-hour late he could not catch the Midland train, the Court of Common Pleas, before Erle, C.J. and Willes, J., held there was no cause of action.

His HONOUR.—But they did not put the time tables in evidence. There was no contract to convey the passengers to a certain place at a certain time.

Gledhill said that Mr. Justice Willes said in his judgment the question was whether the company entered into such a contract to guarantee to take the train from Cardiff in time for the plaintiff to go on by the next train from Gloucester to Newcastle. That depended first upon the wording of the ticket, and secondly on the other facts. As to the first, it stated that the defendants would convey from Cardiff to Newcastle, but there was no statement that the train would arrive at a certain time.

His HONOUR.—Here the time table shows an express contract and a special agreement that "every attention will be paid to insure punctuality," and that is a guarantee, if a guarantee be necessary.

Gledhill.—It is for the plaintiff to show neglect.

His HONOUR.—He has shown a prima facie case.

Gledhill.—This occurred at the busiest season of the whole year at Reading, being the races. Mr. Justice Willes said (in the case he had quoted) that the only other circumstance is that the train ought to have arrived at 4.35 p.m.

His HONOUR.—But they did not put in the time bill.

Gledhill.—He says there is a doubt whether there is a guarantee.

His HONOUR.—In this case there is a guarantee.

Gledhill.—Chief Justice Erle says the whole ase rests upon the ticket.

His HONOUR.—If you have any evidence on the facts of the case I will hear it, but I have already given you my judgment on the law.

No evidence was offered for the defendants.

Judgment was given for the plaintiff with leave to appeal.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

WESTMINSTER COUNTY COURT.

Thursday Oct. 23.

(Before FRANCIS BAYLEY, Esq., Judge.)

PEARSE AND ANOTHER v. COOPER.

Composition under Bankruptcy Act 1869—Action for original debt—Must be default in payment—

If by the terms of an extraordinary resolution a composition is to be accepted, payable on demand, at a certain place, and within a certain time, such demand must be made accordingly. A demand made before the time mentioned in the resolution is insufficient. If debtor makes default, creditor may sue for original debt.

THIS was an action brought by Frederick Pearse and Ashton Lever, trading as Pearse, Lever, and Co., of 75, Fleet-street, advertisement agents, against Henry Edwin Cooper, of Bethnal-green-road, sewing machine maker, to recover the sum of £10 19s. 4d., balance of a debt due from the defendant to the plaintiffs, after deducting 14s. 8d., being the first instalment of a composition paid by the debtor.

The action was entered on the 22nd September last.

The defendant had given notice that he intended to rely on the ground of defence, that the plaintiffs' claim was barred by an extraordinary resolution of the defendant's creditors, under the 126th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, duly registered; and that he also relied on a tender of the composition due thereunder.

S. R. Glyn, solicitor, appeared for the plaintiffs.

Davies, solicitor, for the defendant.

Glyn submitted that, as it was for the defendant to prove he had complied with the terms of the resolution, it was for him to begin.

Davies, accordingly, for the defendant, said that he relied as his defence upon an extraordinary resolution passed by the statutory majority of defendant's creditors, at a meeting held on the 7th Dec. 1872, and which was in the following terms: 1. That a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound shall be accepted in satisfaction of the debts due to the creditors from the said Henry Edwin Cooper. 2. That such composition be payable by two equal instalments on demand, at 281, Bethnal-green-road aforesaid, at or after the expiration of three months and six months respectively, from the date of this meeting. He then called the defendant, who deposed that he had paid the first instalment due under the resolution, that no demand had ever been made by the plaintiffs for the second instalment of the composition, and that he had tendered the amount of it before action brought. On cross-examination however the defence of tender entirely failed. A boy was called to corroborate defendant's evidence, but on cross-examination it transpired that he could know nothing of the matter in dispute.

Glyn then called one of the plaintiffs, who stated that on the 7th June last he had sent a clerk to No. 281, Bethnal-green-road, to demand the second instalment of the composition, and a letter was read in corroboration of the fact. The clerk was then called, who swore to having made the demand at Bethnal-green-road aforesaid, and that defendant had said he had not the money, but would pay it on the clerk's calling again. He then cited in support of his case Edwards v. Coombe (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 315); Ex parte Hodge, re Hatton (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 397); Slater v. Jones, Capes v. Ball (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 57).

His HONOUR said that there was no doubt if default had been made plaintiffs would recover; but that, looking at the terms of the resolution, it appeared to him a demand must be made at the place named in the resolution at or after the time when the composition became payable, and that in this case it had just struck him the demand had been made too soon. The resolution was passed on the 7th Dec., the six months then, at which time the second instalment would become due, would not have expired till midnight on the 7th June last.

Glyn said that it was very doubtful whether in any case a demand was necessary, and read passages from the before-mentioned cases in support of his contention. He argued that as in the above cases it was ruled that it was the payment of the composition, and not the mere agreement to pay it, which satisfied the debt; it was not necessary to prove a demand of payment, it being sufficient that the composition had never been paid. He also adverted to the fact that in Slater v. Jones, and Capes v. Ball (ubi sup.), where no default had been made, it was with some considerable doubt that the judges had arrived at the decision, that a resolution for composition was pleadable in bar to an action for the original debt.

His HONOUR then said that it was necessary for the creditor to comply with the terms of the resolution, and he considered that in this case it had not been done. In the resolution it was specially stated that the composition should be payable at three months and six months from the date of the first meeting. The time for payment of the second instalment did not expire till midnight of the 7th June last, and therefore the demand made on that day was premature, not being in accordance with the resolution.

Plaintiff was therefore nonsuited.

LEGAL NEWS.

WE are sorry to notice that the practice in Dublin of solicitors advertising the removal of their offices seems to be on the increase.

THE funeral of the late Lord Chief Justice Bovill took place on Thursday at Kingston Cemetery.

AT the Surrey Sessions on Monday the chairman, in his charge to the grand jury, mentioned the sudden death of Mr. Dalby, who had been for many years a magistrate for the county.

THE office of Examiner of the Court of Chancery, rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. C. Otter, has been offered by the Master of the Rolls to, and accepted by, Mr. Anderson, Q.C.

SIR W. H. BODKIN had to leave the bench at the Middlesex Sessions on Tuesday, from indisposition, and it is understood that he will not sit in the court again this year. Mr. Serjeant Cox presided in the first, and Mr. Barrow in the second court.

MR. HENRY JAMES, the new Solicitor-General, on Monday evening dined in the hall of the Middle Temple for the first time since his accession to office, and in the absence of the treasurer of the society (Sir J. B. Karslake), read grace to the benchers and students assembled.

THE Royal Commission on the legal departments, consisting of Lord Lisgar (the chairman), Baron Bramwell, Mr. H. West, M.P., Mr. G. O. Trevelyan, M.P., Mr. Law, and Mr. Rowsell, have commenced their sittings in committee room E in the House of Lord. The proceedings are strictly private.

ELECTION JUDGES.—At the sitting of the Court of Common Pleas on Tuesday morning an order was read appointing Mr. Justice Grove to be placed on the rota for the trial of election petitions during the ensuing year. Baron Martin was also selected by the Court of Exchequer, and Mr. Justice Mellor by the Queen's Bench.

THE NEW LAW COURTS.—The Royal Institute of British Architects held their first ordinary general meeting of the winter session on Monday evening. The secretary read the opening address of Sir Gilbert Scott, in which the president congratulated the institution that the new Law Courts were about to be commenced, and emphatically condemned the disgraceful proposal to tamper with the perfection of the edifice to save a paltry percentage.

A PETITION was lodged in the Court of Common Pleas on Tuesday morning, praying that the return of Mr. Henry James (Solicitor-General) should be declared null and void, on the ground that he, both by himself, his agent or agents, and other persons in his behalf, were guilty of bribery, treating, personation, and undue influence. The petitioners are John Marshall, of Belmont, a justice of the peace; and Mr. Walter Chorley Brannan, of 10, Hammett-street, Taunton, auctioneer. The trial of the petition will, it is expected, come on for hearing in the course of three weeks, before either Baron Martin or Mr. Justice Grove. Mr. Hardinge Giffard, Q.C., has been retained with Mr. Serjeant Balantine for the sitting member.

SIR JOHN COLERIDGE.—The Western Morning News of to-day says:—The Attorney-General has not accepted the Lord Chief Justiceship, for it has not yet been offered to him, nor is it likely that it will be offered until after the funeral of the late Sir William Bovill; but Sir John Coleridge, before leaving Exeter for London, assured his private friends that it was his fixed determination to accept the offer, if, in accordance with precedents, he should receive it. His inclinations, he said, would lead him to a contrary course, but his medical attendants strongly advise some diminution of the severe and incessant toil of the past few years which of late has told perceptibly upon him. But for Mr. Gladstone's pressing request, Sir John Coleridge would have accepted the Mastership of the Rolls, but such a request is not likely under the circumstances to be repeated on the present occasion.

THE RIGHTS OF MARRIED WOMEN.—At the Croydon County Court on Monday, Mr. H. J. Stonor delivered an important judgment, which decides several points as to the rights of married women in respect to their earnings and property. The claimant, Mrs. Laporte, claimed under the Married Women's Property Act 1870, for property in which her earnings, as a lodging-house keeper, had been invested by her, and which had been seized in execution of judgments which had been obtained. Mr. Stonor held that the second section of the Act which relates to "any money or property so acquired by a married woman through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill," not merely restricts the money or property in question to such as may be acquired after the passing of the Act (either separately from or jointly with her husband), but that it is to be further restricted to money acquired by her separately from her husband. With regard to the furniture, he could see no reason why it should not be included in the term "investment" in legal construction. As to the operation of the first section with regard to such investment, he held that furniture was vested in her at law, and was not subject to her husband's debts. As regarded £20 which the claimant had received from her sisters, and laid out in furniture, the money not being earnings, or wages, it did not fall within the Act, and judgment for that amount would be in favour of the creditors, and for the balance in favour of the claimant. Mr, Stonor called attention to the extremely careless manner in which the Act was drawn, and also to the great hardship imposed upon creditors by the Act.

THE OPENING OF TERM.—THE COURT OF CHANCERY, Nov. 3.—The Lord Chancellor, attended by Lord Justice Mellish, Sir George Jessel (the new Master of the Rolls), the Vice-Chancellors, Sir R. Malins and Sir James Bacon, entered his court at Westminster shortly before 2 o'clock. Before commencing the business of the day, his lordship made the following observations, which were received with marked attention and sympathy by the Bar, who remained standing, and the numerous spectators with whom the court was densely crowded:—It is impossible for us to meet here to day without a deep sense of the great losses which the Bench and the country have sustained by the death of the two eminent judges so lately taken from us; and I feel sure I shall only be giving expression to the common feeling of all the members of the Bar who are here present, as well as to our own, if I attempt, however imperfectly, to say a few words to express our sense of those losses. The late Vice-Chancellor Wickens, whom we should have hoped to see present in this court to-day, was united to all of his colleagues upon the bench, and to many of our brethren of the Bar, by the closest ties of personal affection, while to some of us he was endeared by a friendship which dated from the days of early youth. He brought to the discharge of his high duties powers of mind, and cultivation, and accomplishments such as it falls to the lot of very few men to possess, and to those qualities he added a temper the most uniformly cordial and amiable, a judgment the most sound, learning the most extensive, and all the qualities needed to make a very great judge. The greatest expectations had justly been formed of him, and during the short time he was permitted to be upon the bench he has shown that if it had pleased God he would have fulfilled all those expectations. Of the other eminent judge whom we have lost, those practising in this court have necessarily not seen so much, but all of us know how extensive was his learning, how great his experience, and all of us, I think, must know that there was no man of more indefatigable activity in the discharge of all his duties—no man of a more kindly heart. I feel sure that in the few words I have said I have expressed the feeling entertained by all members of the Bar as well as by the whole Bench of Judges, and that such feelings will be shared in throughout the country.

THE LATE LORD CHIEF JUSTICE BOVILL.—COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, NOV. 3.—On coming into court, Mr. Justice Keating, who was much affected, said: In view of the melancholy event which has deprived the court of its chief, had we consulted our own feelings we should have been disposed to adjourn the business. But so persuaded are we that such a course would be opposed to his wishes and feelings, who would not have desired the public interest to be postponed to any other consideration, we have abandoned that intention. The court has sustained a most severe and serious loss—one to be deeply and acutely felt by every member of it. A most accomplished lawyer and distinguished judge has passed away; no man ever sat on this or any other bench of justice more ardently desirous of faithfully discharging his duties. The Solicitor-General (Mr. Henry James, Q.C.) said: In the absence of my learned friend the Attorney-General, I have been requested by my brethren of the Bar to express to your Lordships the deep and sincere regret with which we have learnt the death of Sir William Bovill. My Lords, we all knew him as Chief Justice of this court, and in him we all recognised a judge singularly earnest in his determination to do justice to every suitor who came before him, and one who conspicuously fulfilled the first duty of an English judge in seeing that right was ever done. To some of us it was given to know him more intimately. Those of us who had been his associates at the Bar ever found in him an honourable opponent or a loyal colleague; and full well we learnt to know that his vigorous intellect and his great earnestness secured to every client who intrusted his interests to his hands the truest and sincerest advocacy the English Bar could provide. Some there are, my Lords, who knew him better yet, and those will mourn him most. Such of us as, may be, like your Lordships, enjoyed his private friendship, learned how loving and gentle he was to those who were of him—how generous in his friendship to his associates, how considerate to those who were dependent on him, and how open and generous his hand to those who needed aid. If it be true that to live in the hearts of those we love is not to die, Sir William Bovill has not passed away from among us. A generation must go and come ere some of us will forget to mourn him, and ere every one of those for whom I have spoken, every member of the English Bar, ceases to mention his name with regard and respect.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

8. INTEREST IN LAND.—Is an agreement for a mortgage of a freehold estate an interest in land, within the meaning of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds? Refer to cases. S. A.

9. EJECTMENT.—Will twenty years' possession by a cestui que trust, without the intervention of any trustee, give a sufficient legal title to maintain ejectment? Last surviving trustee died seventy or more years ago, and no appointment of new trustees has ever been made or executed. S. B.

Answers.

(Q.) 1. RELEASE OF DEBT BY WILL—LEGACY DUTY.—If but for the release the debt would have been recoverable at law, duty is payable, otherwise not. S.

— Legacy duty is payable in respect of a debt which is released by will, and for the law on this point I would refer your correspondent to the 7th section of the Legacy Duty Act, 36 Geo. 3, c. 52. A case in point will be discovered in 3 Y. & J. 114. E. W. P.

— The release by the will of the testator of a debt owing to him is in the nature of a donatio mortis causa, and therefore liable to legacy duty under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 76 s. 4. A. A. R.

— The "release" or "forgiveness" of a debt due from A. to the testator is "a legacy" to A. within the meaning of the Legacy Duty Acts, and duty is payable thereon: (Attorney-General v. Holbrook, 3 V. & J. 114).— T. E. H.

(Q. 2.) PRACTICE IN THE COLONIES.—A clerk, even if admitted in England, cannot, as far as I remember, commence practice in any Antipodean colony (New South Wales excepted), without passing an examination there. Three months' notice of his intention to pass such examination is required, and the subjects given are the same as here, with the addition of colonial law. In New South Wales (Sydney), an attorney admitted in England has simply to make an application to a judge at chambers for permission to practise, and put the usual notice in the Colonial Government Gazettes. It is not necessary to state anything to the Incorporated Law Society here. These were the facts of the case in 1866, but they may be altered now. I should, from practical experience, strongly recommend "Enquirer" to remain at home. T. E. H.

(Q. 4.) AGENTS AND DEBT COLLECTORS.—The County Court judge is the proper person to stop the practice of debt collectors appearing as advocates in his court. The collector considers he has a right to appear before the court by sect. 91 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and sect. 10 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, as long as the judge allows him to do so, and he is not liable for violating the Attorneys' Act, because sect. 33 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, exonerates him so long as he has the leave of the judge. County Court rule 115, makes the provisions of sect. 10 (ante) applicable to all matters which may come before the court. "Burton-on-Trent" and his professional friends should apply to the judge for a general order disallowing "agents" or "debt collectors" appearing before him or practising in the court. A. A. R.

(Q. 5.) SUCCESSION DUTY ACT.—The exercise of the power of sale takes the case out of the Succession Duty Act (sect. 18), so that the Purchaser is not liable to any duty by reason of the death of the annuitant. Duty, however, became payable under sect. 29 upon the purchase-money, and has probably long since been paid. S.

— Succession duty is payable in respect of the cesser of an annuity (sects. 3, 5, and 20 of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, and see page 85 of Hudson on Legacy and Succession Duties). The interest of the successor will be considered to be the value of the annuity to him, such annuity to be valued according to the tables mentioned in the Act (sects. 21 and 31 same Act), and the duty thereon must be borne by the present owner as the successor, and the only person beneficially interested in the succession: (sects. 2, 3, 5, 15, 42, and 44, same Act.) A. A. R.

(Q. 6.) LOCAL AUTHORITY UNDER THE GAS WORKS CLAUSES ACT 1871.—Terms used in this Act have the same meanings respectively, as the same terms have when used in the Gas Works Clauses Act 1847, and in the Gas and Water Works Facilities Act 1870 (s. 4). The interpretation of the term "local authority," referred to in sect. 35, means the bodies of persons named in schedule A of the Gas and Water Works Facilities Act 1870 (sect. 2 of that Act). "A. F. W." will find the information he requires in that schedule. A. A. R.

(Q. 7.) CONTRACT—DEBT—RUNNING ACCOUNT, &c.—B. cannot divide his cause of action against A. for the purpose of bringing two actions in the County Court (sect. 63 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95; and sect. 18 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61). A. A. R.

LAW SOCIETIES.

METROPOLITAN AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSOCIATION.

SECOND DAY.

(Continued from page 10.)

THE PROPERTY OF MARRIED WOMEN—PROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION WITH REFERENCE THERETO.

MR. C. E. Mathews read a paper upon this subject. He commenced by pointing out the manner in which the laws in force in the year 1870 were altered by the Act of that year. The Act of 1870 was a good Act, so far as it went, but it dealt partially and incompletely with a recognised social injustice. It made but small alteration in the legal relations of husband and wife; but it did some very good things, which the paper enumerated. It was generally admitted that the Act was passed for the protection of the poorer classes, and as a matter of fact the whole rule of settlement in connection with the marriage of persons in the middle and upper clases had not been affected in any way. Speaking of the rights of a husband over the property of his wife, subject to the alterations created by the Act of 1870, Mr. Mathews quoted the words of the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, that a man without a shilling might marry a woman of great wealth, and by studying the law of cruelty to perfection might, by a course of conduct just within the law, drive his wife and children from him, seize their property, and reduce them to misery and destitution, while he fattened upon the spoils of the unhappy woman whom he had sworn to love and cherish. It was difficult to imagine any just ground for the retention of a law which would seem to be as unnecessary as it certainly was unjust. In the inevitable amendment of the law in this and other points, care would have to be taken in doing justice to the wife that injustice was not done to the husband. A woman of property should have larger powers of disposition over her freehold and copyhold estates, but at the same time she should be made directly liable for the support and maintenance of her household. A widow should have no right to dower, or to any interest in her husband's property, until his creditors were paid. A husband, in cases of divorce, ought no longer to be liable for costs to enable a guilty wife to carry on a suit—at any rate, unless the court was satisfied that she was otherwise unable to do so. Nor should any allowance for subsistence during a pending suit be allowed to a wife if the court was satisfied that she was able to maintain herself without it, and no permanent subsistence ought to be granted if a separation or divorce was the result of a wife's misconduct. They must see that wives did not obtain important and unjust rights as respected their husband's property, in addition to the exclusive guardianship of that which was their own. With regard to the objection urged that women were unfitted to have the disposal of their own property, Mr. Mathews said he ventured to think that it was within the knowledge of all lawyers that a woman properly trusted with funds knew quite as well how to administer them as men did. He was certain that in many households the annual provision which was ensured to wives by their marriage settlements caused them to be treated with additional consideration and respect.

A discussion then took place, in which Mr. England spoke against legislating for exceptional cases in such a manner as to destroy the mutual feelings of unity which ought to exist between husband and wife.

Mr. W. S. Allen (Birmingham) said there could scarcely be a difference of opinion as to the great scandal dealt with in the paper. The Act of 1870 left untouched the question so far as it affected the working classes; and there was something grievously defective in the law when a wife was left to bear the chief share of the consequences of her husband's misconduct, even when that misconduct had brought him within the reach of the criminal law.

Mr. Ellett (Cirencester) thought an amendment might be made by extending the jurisdiction of magistrates to cases which did not strictly come within the definition of desertion.

The Chairman referred to the hardship of requiring a respectable woman, who had been deserted, to go before a board of guardians before she could obtain relief, or the husband be brought before the magistrate, and said the poorer orders required further legislation in a manner, to a certain extent, pointed out by Mr. Mathews. As regarded the richer classes, it was now the almost universal practice to insert a clause in the marriage settlement providing that any property afterwards acquired by the wife should be settled upon her, and he thought it a very wholesome provision.

Mr. Mathews, replying upon the discussion, said that although magistrates were empowered to grant protection orders, securing to a wife her earnings, those orders could only be granted in the case of desertion, and it was found almost impossible to get a wife to go into a police court and make the grievances between herself and her husband known to the public. A case in point was furnished in Birmingham. A servant of his own married unhappily, and after she had borne her husband three children he deserted her, and was now living with another woman. He was earning £3 or £4 per week, but no provision could be got for the wife unless she went to the parish. The result was he (the speaker) and some of his friends had to support her and her children.

THE JUDICATURE ACT.

Mr. E. F. Burton (London) read a paper on this Act, examining the measure in detail, and pointing out the several ways in which it would affect solicitors in their everyday practice. It was a great experiment. Whether it would turn out, for the next twenty years, until a new race of men shall be at the bar or at the bench, a blessing or a curse, would, in his belief, depend upon the temper in which the common law judges interpreted and adopted it. If adopted by the common law judges (for it was in the common law division that the real change was to be worked out) in a broad and liberal spirit, it would simplify litigation, and avoid much scandal. But if received in the same sort of captious spirit in which the composition deeds were dealt with under the old Bankruptcy Act, suitors for the next twenty years would have a rough time of it. In conclusion, he adverted to the many important improvements introduced into this Act upon the suggestion of the Incorporated Law Society and other societies whose honesty of purpose had never been more completely displayed. The manner in which their suggestions were received did honour to the great mind of the present Lord Chancellor.

A few words in commendation of the paper were made by the chairman, Mr. Sharpe, and others.

As several members had to leave by an early train, thanks were voted to the Birmingham Law Society for the munificent hospitality with which they had received and entertained the gentlemen who had attended from a distance; to Mr. Horton, the hon. sec.; to the local committee, for their great and successful exertions to promote the business of the meeting; to the Royal Society of Artists, for their kindness in giving permission for the conversazione to be held in their rooms that evening; to the authors of papers read; and to the president, for his valuable address and his able conduct in the chair.

Mr. W. E. Shirley (Doncaster) afterwards read a paper "On the Education of Attorneys;" and the Hon. Sec. one by Mr. R.W. Griffith (of Cardiff), containing "Suggestions for the Revival of the Inns of Chancery."

The proceedings then terminated.

The following members of the Profession were present: Mr. Pidcock, in the chair; Messrs. E. Turner Payne, of Bath; A. Ryland, G. J. Johnson, T. Horton, C. T. Saunders, R. H. Milward, S. Balden, jun.; W. S. Allen, T. E. Spencer, J. Marigold, E. L. Tyndall, E. J. Hayes, J. H. Barclay, H. W. Tyndall, E. B. Rawlings, C. E. Mathews, C. H. Edwards, F. Sanders, Thos. Martineau, C. B. King, F. Price, L. P. Rowley, D. W. H. Pemberton, Jacob Rowlands, G. F. James, G. W. Hickman, J. R. Holliday, W. Sextus Harding, J. Chirm, V. Bower, W. Septimus Harding, J. G. Bradbury, J. S. Canning, H. D. Crompton, Geo. Page, Joseph Rowlands, E. F. Mason, C. Harding, W. Lowe, W. Evans, W. Morgan, E. T. Ratcliffe, H. L. Smith, E. M. Coleman, C. H. Owen, H. T. Edges, T. G. Lee, J. B. Clarke, B. Chesshire, W. Brown, J. Jelf, J. Stubbin, and J. L. Smith, of Birmingham; J. Miller and H. F. Lawes, of Bristol; R. Ellett, of Cirencester; J. Slater, of Darlaston; W. E. Shirley, of Doncaster; H. New, of Evesham; G. Whitcombe, of Gloucester; G. England, of Howden; T. Marshall, J. Rider, J. D. Kay and G. H. Nelson, of Leeds; J. H. E. Gill, W. Radcliffe, R. A. Payne, J. Atkinson, E. W. Bird, R. S. Cleaver and J. H. Kenion, of Liverpool; A. W. Sadgrove, J. H. Kays, J. S. Torr, E. F. Burton, F. R. Parker, W. Shaen, E. Bromley, T. Eiffe and Philip Rickman, of London; T. Jepson, M. Bateson Wood, W. H. Guest and Percy Woolley, of Manchester; R. R. Dees, G. W. Hodge, T. G. Gibson and R. S. Watson, of Newcastle; B. T. Sharpe, of Norwich; T. Hawdon, of Selby; Lindsay W. Winterbotham, of Stroud; S. Alcock, jun., of Sunderland; H. Addenbroke and T. S. Eddowes, of Sutton Coldfield; T. Southall, W. P. Hughes, and T. G. Hyde, of Worcester; T. Marlow and Lauris Winterbotham, of Walsall; J. Lewis, of Wrexham; and J. Holtby, of York.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE.

ON Thursday evening, the 23rd ultimo, Professor Sheldon Amos, M.A., delivered a lecture at the University College, Gower-street, on "The Value of Lectures in the Study of the Law," to a large audience.

In the course of his remarks, the Professor said that about forty years ago saw the foundation of University College, the chief object of which was to encourage the faculties of law and medicine. Among those who had occupied the presidential chairs at this institution were the late Mr. Austin, as well as the lecturer's father, and many other eminent men. The college had since that time been distinguished in medicine, whereas the legal faculty had unfortunately fallen off to some extent; but, throughout the whole time he was of opinion that the college was not at fault, for it had always endeavoured, as far as possible, to encourage the scientific study of the law, and had always held out its arms to young men, not exclusively to barristers, but to all young men, to come and share in its teaching.

In speaking of the condition of law at the present day, he said that the present time was a critical moment in the history of legal education. We were now contemplating a very great change in the whole judicial institutions of this country. There were two great works to be done—the reconstruction of the form of the law, and the ensuring of a complete and efficient legal education, to bring all members of both branches of the Profession in contact with the best teachers. There was no doubt but that this work would be done, as several schemes were contemplated by various bodies and associations, which schemes would, in a short time, converge, and there would be as good a system in England as in many other countries. The question of lectures would, he believed, become, very shortly, an important question; and the University College had already begun to avail itself in the use of them in the study of law. This college was the first that had offered public instruction to joint classes of men and women. But the point might arise in some minds whether there was in these days of abundant and easy access to every kind of literature anything for the lecturer to do. Notwithstanding the variety and number of books at the disposal of students, and in fact partly on that account, was it necessary for a student of law to have some one to guide him in his studies, by pointing out the course he should pursue, and also the course he should avoid; for oftentimes a student spends a great deal of time in wading through books which were of little or no use to him. It was also desirable when a particular branch of the law was to be studied that a person should be able to know the best authorities in the particular branch to which he directed himself. If a student desired to learn history, Henry Maine might be studied to advantage; or if he required to study law for practical purposes, and was endeavouring to ascertain what the law of England was at the present day, he might go to Blackstone. If for philosophical purposes, to know what was the meaning of law, and what place it held as a science, if it were a science, he would suggest the works of Austin. But in each of these methods of study the aid of the lecturer would be valuable. The law, as it concerned the relations of men to each other in society, and gave extended powers of freedom to some persons to restrain that power in others, was of great interest to all classes, although by the great controversy concerning terms it was far from being understood by them. It affected everyone directly or indirectly, by being associated with commerce, property, crime, &c., and formed part of the every-day life of all persons. But in all these relations, and in the difficult controversy respecting terms, it was the province of the lecturer to explain and suggest to his students the best books with which to become acquainted; and when a student met with vagueness or difficulty in a book, the lecturer was to do what the work would, could it but speak. And not merely by answering the questions of those whom he was teaching, but also by encouraging his class to get up short conversations, thereby inducing them when they met a small difficulty, they might to if it was a real difficulty, and then if it was they could refer it to their lecturer. In giving his advice with respect to the study of books, the lecturer said, that, speaking from experience, he could tell them what to avoid; but he should not endeavour to thrust upon them certain opinions, simply because he had pursued that particular course of study. Another valuable aid of the lecturer was to explain to the student the great changes which were continually taking place in law, which grew from generation to generation, and even from day to day. For instance, the laws of the present day had grown considerably since the times of the Romans; and the great question of to-day respecting international law, was consequent on the growth of law, great divergences of opinion existing upon this point, some persons holding that there was no such thing as international law; all these questions came within the province of the lecturer to elucidate for the benefit of his classes. Law, in its very materials, form, and conception, grew; it grew with all the changing incidents of society, and every new form of relation and commerce gave an impetus to it. It was, therefore, obvious that no books could keep pace with it, but it afforded to the lecturer an opportunity to display his usefulness by endeavouring to do what books were unable to do, and to keep his eye steadfast on the changes going on around him, to watch every moral change in society, and to say whether any real change was being introduced into the land. The lecturer then proceeded to speak of the advantages of both sexes studying together, and also of the categorical system of study—as tending to bring together a much greater divergence of opinion, and consequently an extended knowledge was obtained.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, W.C., on Wednesday, Nov. 5, Mr. F. J. Baker in the chair. Mr. T. B. Girling opened Part III. of the "Judicature Bill" for discussion. Mr. Wingfield opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz.: "That the relationship existing between this country and her Colonies should be reorganised on the basis of a Federation." The motion was lost by a majority of one.

THE UNION SOCIETY OF LONDON.

THE first meeting of this Society after the Long Vacation was held at 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, on Tuesday evening last, when the President moved "That this House would view with regret the establishment of a Monarchy in France by the present National Assembly." A majority of the House approved the motion.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

THE usual monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of this Association was held at the Law Institution, London, on Wednesday last, Nov. 5, Mr. Park Nelson in the chair; the other directors present being—Messrs. Brook, Hedger, Rickman, Roscoe, Shaen, Smith, Styan and Torr (Mr. Eiffe, secretary). A sum of 110*l.* was distributed in donations to nine necessitous families of deceased solicitors; twenty-two new members were admitted to the association, and other general business transacted.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY

THE first meeting after the long vacation took place on the 28th Oct., at the Law Institution, there being a large attendance of members. The following question was discussed: "Has a pecuniary legatee a right to call upon a residuary devisee to contribute to the payment of debts?" and was decided in the negative. At the next meeting, held on 4th Nov., the question discussed was: "Is the Judicature Act a satisfactory measure?" and was decided in the affirmative by a moderate majority.

LAW ASSOCIATION.

AT the usual monthly meeting of the directors held at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society in Chancery-lane, on Thursday, the 6th Nov. inst., the following being present, viz.: Mr. Steward (chairman), Mr. Bennett, Mr. Burges, Mr. Carpenter, Mr. Collisson, Mr. Drew, Mr. Hedger, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Nisbet, Mr. Sawtell, Mr. Sidney Smith, Mr. Styan, Mr. Williamson, and Mr. Boodle (secretary), a grant of £50 was made to the daughters of a deceased member, two grants of £10 each were made to the widows of non-members, three new members were elected, and other ordinary business was transacted.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

ON Friday evening, Oct. 24, E. Tindal Atkinson, Esq., barrister-at-law, delivered a lecture before this society on the first part of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873. On Monday, Oct. 27, the usual fortnightly debate took place. The following question was appointed for discussion: "Is there any implied condition in letting a furnished house that it shall be reasonably fit for habitation? (Smith v. Marrable, 11 M. & W. 5; Hart v. Winsor, 12 M. & W. 68; Sutton v. Temple, 12 M. & W. 52). Messrs. R. Welsh and A. Ainley conducted the affirmative, and Messrs. J. Yeoman and W. Brown the negative. The question was decided in the affirmative by a majority of three.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

SIR W. BOVILL.

THE late Right Hon. Sir William Bovill, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, who died, after a comparatively short illness, on Saturday last, the 1st inst., at Combe House, near Kingston-on-Thames, the residence of J. C. Sim, Esq., in the fifty-ninth year of his age, was the second son of the late Benjamin Bovill, Esq., of Wimbledon, Surrey, who died in 1864. He was born in the year 1814, and having been privately educated, was articled to Messrs. Willis, Watson, Bower and Willis, of Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury. Mr. Oxenford, articled with him, says:—"At an early age—for he was about two years younger than myself—he was remarkable for the zeal with which he pursued his legal studies, a virtue which, in those days at least, was by no means universal among 'articles.' It was at the instance of Mr Bower, I believe, that he quitted the office for the Bar." He was first admitted a pleader under the Bar, and was called by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, in Hilary Term, 1841. He went the Home Circuit, and his course as a junior was marked by his rapid entrance into an extensive and lucrative practice, and he soon became one of the acknowledged leaders on the circuit he had chosen. The Surrey Standard says:—"There can be no doubt that his lordship's connection with a great East-end manufacturing firm contributed to his success at the Bar. In defending their interests he gained great readiness in dealing with the technicalities of engineering, which are very puzzling to barristers; and thus we find him engaged in almost all those complicated 'patent' cases which are so constantly before the courts. We need not say, however, that Mr. Bovill never sank into this speciality. In London, he was, perhaps, best known for his connection with the celebrated Tom Provis case, and on circuit his briefs embraced cases of every description. He was fortunate, indeed, in the time at which he joined the Home Circuit. Platt, with his solid law, and unfailing resource, had gone. Mr. Serjeant Shee, Mr. Serjeant Channell, Mr. Montagu Chambers, Baron Bramwell, Mr. Justice Lush, and Mr. Peacock were, so far as we remember, the leading counsel, when Mr. Bovill began to take an active part at Nisi Prius. In a very short time the greater part of these were from one cause or other removed, and Mr. Bovill speedily found himself engaged in almost every cause of importance. His genial temperament undoubtedly conduced to his success both with judges and juries; and in the county towns—we can at least say it was so in Lewes and Guildford—he was a general favourite." In 1855 he obtained the honour of a silk gown, and was made a bencher of his Inn. In 1857 he entered Parliament in the Conservative interest, as one of the representatives of Guildford; and in 1866 he was appointed to the post of Solicitor-General, in the administration then formed by the late Earl of Derby. When Sir Fitzroy Kelly, who was Attorney-General, was removed to the Court of Exchequer as Lord Chief Baron, Sir William Bovill (then Solicitor-General) did not succeed to the post of First Law Officer of the Crown, Mr. Rolt having been appointed Attorney-General. It was understood that Sir William voluntarily offered to waive his claim to the promotion to which he was entitled, in order that the services of so distinguished a lawyer as Mr. Rolt should be available for the Government. Sir William Bovill's short term of office as Solicitor-General, gave him absolutely almost no opportunity of appearing before the House as a member of the administration. He was appointed in Nov. 1866, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. He was sworn a member of her Majesty's Privy Council in 1867; he was also for many years a magistrate for the county of Surrey, and he was likewise a Fellow of the Royal Society. In 1870 he was created an honorary D.C.L. by the University of Oxford.

The article in the Surrey Standard, from which we have quoted, is evidently written by some one who knew the deceased judge well, and speaking of his private character, the writer says that there never was a brighter, happier man than plain stuff "Mr. Bovill," and by his urbanity he captivated even political opponents.

It was as a judge, perhaps, that the deceased was least successful. He succeeded a great judge who for years had presided over a strong court. He must have felt the superiority of Willes in learning, and indeed of Mr. Justice Keating also, both of whom possessed the advantage of long judicial experience when Mr. Bovill was promoted from the Bar to be their chief. The diffidence which such a feeling produced is said to have been the cause of the irritability of manner which he displayed towards the Bar. And at Nisi Prius he very early committed the great blunder of unduly interfering with counsel, the result being that within a few weeks of his promotion he came into violent collision with his old and powerful antagonist, Mr. Edward James, the leader of the Northern Circuit. No doubt he acted as he felt conscientiously bound to act in the interests of justice, but it is now universally admitted that the best judges take as little part as possible in the conduct of a cause until the summing-up. On the whole, therefore, the honest opinion of lawyers concerning the lamented judge must be, that he was not great, or profoundly learned. But as a commercial lawyer, acute, possessing a great grasp of facts, and a capacity of expressing his views concisely and well, we recognise in him a man who would have been more useful as a puisne than as a chief.

Sir William Bovill married, in 1844, Maria, daughter of John Henry Bolton, Esq., of Lee Park, near Blackheath, Kent, by whom he has had a family of eight sons and four daughters. His eldest son, Mr. William Channell Bovill, is a barrister of the Middle Temple, and Clerk of Assize on the Western Circuit.

A. C. WALFORD, ESQ.

THE late Arthur Carr Walford, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Lyall-street, Belgrave-square, and of Newsquare, Lincoln's-inn, who died on the 24th ult., at Scarboro' Hall, Beverley, Yorkshire, in the fortieth year of his age, belonged, we believe, to the Shropshire branch of the Walfords, and he was the son of one of the Messrs. Walford, the well-known solicitors, of Bolton-street, Piccadilly, the agents for the London properties of the Marquis of Exeter and Sir John Sutton, Bart. The deceased gentleman, who was born in the year 1834, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1855. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's-inn in Easter Term, 1858, and practised as an equity draughtsman and conveyancer. Mr. A. C. Walford was a member of an ancient and respectable family, who, if we may believe Sir Bernard Burke's "Landed Gentry," were settled several centuries ago at Walford, near Ross, in Herefordshire, various branches of which have settled at different times in Shropshire, and in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex, where their descendants have remained down to the present generation.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Oct. 28.

GAMBLE and COOKE, solicitors and attorneys, Derby. March 15. (Edward Gamble and Frederick Duckering Cooke.) Debts by Cooke

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Oct. 31.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

COLLINS, MARK, hatter, Broad-st, Bloomsbury. Pet. Oct. 29. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Nov. 12. Sol. Godfrey, South-square

TAHOURDIN, EDWARD CAVENDISH, stock and share broker, Cornhill. Pet. Oct. 20. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Nov. 12. Sols. Paterson, Snow and Co., Chancery-lane

To surrender in the Country.

BAGSHAW, JOHN, furniture broker, Sheffield. Pet. Oct. 30. Reg. Wake. Sur. Nov. 12.

BRUNA, FELICE, ship broker, North Shields. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Mortimer. Sur. Nov. 11.

CROSSLEY, JOHN, jun., woolstapler, Halifax. Pet. Oct. 28. Reg. Rankin. Sur. Nov. 13.

HUSLEY, RICHARD, and DENTON, JAMES FLETCHER, woolstaplers, Halifax. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Rankin. Sur. Nov. 13.

TRAGHEIM, NICOLAI, furniture dealer, West Hartlepool. Pet. Oct. 28. Reg. Ellis. Sur. Nov. 13.

Gazette, Nov. 4.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-st.

BUNGE, HUGO, merchant, Great Tower-st, and Clapham-rd. Pet. Nov. 1. Reg. Roche. Sur. Nov. 26

To surrender in the Country.

CHOICE, JOSEPH, beerseller, Hinckley. Pet. Oct. 30. Reg. Ingram. Sur. Nov. 17

DRURY, CHARLES VINCER, licensed victualler, Rovelden. Pet. Oct. 29. Reg. Young. Sur. Nov. 15

ROCHE, PERCIVAL, Esq., Canterbury. Pet. Oct. 31. Reg. Callaway. Sur. Nov. 14

THERSBY, WILLIAM, tailor, Darlington. Pet. Oct. 31. Reg. Crosby. Sur. Nov. 14

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Oct. 31.

HESSE, DAVID HERMAN, merchant, Fenchurch-st. April 15, 1871.

KENDAL, ROBINSON, managing director of a company, Lancaster and Boetle. Oct. 1, 1873.

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Oct. 31.

ALLWOOD, CHARLES, draper, Southgate-pl, Colney-hatch. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 11, at three, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 33, Gutter-la. Sol. Salaman

ASHBY, GEORGE, grocer, High-st, Hampstead. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 22, at three, at the Masons' Hall tavern, Masons'-avenue, Basinghall-st. Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st

ASHTON, PHILIP, victualler, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 13, at three, at Vine, accountant, Liverpool. Sol. Worship, Liverpool

BARNES, DAVID, contractor, Birstal. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 14, at three, at the Royal hotel, Dewsbury. Sol. Ibberson, Dewsbury

BARNARD, BENJAMIN WILLIAM, baker, Leigh. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at eleven, at office of Sol. Pullen, Harp-la, Great Tower-street

BELCHER, BEN, cook, Reading. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at eleven, at 28, the Forbury, Reading. Sol. Rogers, Reading

BELL, SARAH MARSHALL, confectioner, Newcastle. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 12, at two, at offices of Sols. Hoyle, Shipley, and Hoyle, Newcastle

BENJAMIN, BENJAMIN, importer of foreign goods, Blackman-st, Borough, and Gresham-st. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at two, at 28, Blackman-st, Borough. Sol. Murray, Sackville-st, Piccadilly

BRIDGMAN, JOHN, NUTHALL, GEORGE, and WEST, GEORGE BENJAMIN, builders, Guildford-st, Gray's-inn-rd. Pet. Oct. 15. Nov. 10, at twelve, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sols. Wild, Barber, and Browne, Ironmonger-la

BURTON, JOHNSON, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol. Allen, Birmingham

BUSBY, WILLIAM, grocer, Leigh. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at two, at Anderton's hotel, Fleet-st. Sol. Pullen, Harp-la, Great Tower-st

COOKSON, FREDERICK chemist's assistant, Rainhill. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Tyrer, Prescot

COPAS, JAMES, merchant, Newbury. Nov. 7, at eleven, at the White Hart hotel, Newbury. Sol. Cave, Newbury

CRYER, JOSEPH, grocer, Blackfriars-rd, and Asylum-rd, Peckham. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 17, at three, at Izard and Betts, Eastcheap. Sols. Ingle, Cooper, and Holmes, Threadneedle-st

CUMING, THOMAS MORRIS, confectioner, Truro. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at eleven, at office of Sols. Carlyon and Paull, Truro

DAINTITH, JOHN, blacksmith, Woolston-with-Martinscroft. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Bretherton, Warrington

DALBY, WILLIAM, shopkeeper, York. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 14, at twelve, at office of Sols. Messrs. Mann, York

DEMPSTER, MARCUS BRUTUS, watchmaker, Richmond. Pet. Oct. Nov. 14, at one, at office of Sol. Robinson, Richmond

DUPLOCK, JOHN, auctioneer, Eastbourne. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at eleven, at the Gildridge hotel, Eastbourne. Sol. Cordwell, Serjeant's inn, Chancery-la

EVEREST, FRANK, grocer, High-st, Bow. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 24, at one, at office of Sol. Smith, Church-st, Clement's-la

FAULKNER, WILLIAM GIBSON, clerk, Navarino-gr, Dalston. Pet Oct. 13. Nov. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Jacob, Bedford-row

FOWLER, ABRAHAM, corn dealer, Tadcaster. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 24, at two, at offices of Sol. Harle, Leeds

FOX, WALTER, butcher, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 18, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Bleiloch, Cardiff

FRIGOUT, HENRY ALFRED, and ARTAUT, LOUIS, lamp manufacturers, Regent-st. Pet Oct. 28. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sol. Alsop, Marlborough-st, Regent-st

GARDNER, GEORGE, bootmaker, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at twelve, at office of Sol. Miller, Bristol

GARRETT, THOMAS HORATIO WILLIAM, grocer, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at three, at offices of Sol. Clegg, Oldham

GOODWIN, LORENZO, joiner, Leeds. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at two, at office of Sols. Simpson and Burrell, Leeds

GREAVES, FREDERIC JEREMIAH, painter, Lakenham. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 11, at twelve, at office of Sols. Emerson and Sparrow, Norwich

HALL, WILLIAM, apothecary, Brompton-rd, St. Mary Abbotts, Kensington, London, and Brighton. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 19, at two, at office of Sols. Tilley and Liggins, Finsbury-pl-south, London

HARPER, LEVI, miner, Sedgley. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Lowe, Dudley

HARVEY, GEORGE, grocer, Reading. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 13, at eleven, at office of Sol. Beale, Reading

HAYWARD, CHARLES, hairdresser, Bridgewater. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 13, at eleven, at Smith and Boyle, solicitors, Bridgewater. Sol. Chapman, Bridgewater

HIRSCHMANN, JOSEPH, wine importer, Cannon-st. Pet. Oct 28. Nov. 27, at twelve, at Broad, Broad, and Paterson, 35, Walbrook. Sol. Montagu, Bucklersbury

HODGSON, JOSEPH WILLIAM, ironmononger, Workington. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Milburn, Workington

HOWARD, ROBERT, ironfounder, Rochdale. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov 15, at eleven, at at offices of Sol. Standring, Rochdale

HUGHES, ELIAS, flour dealer, Llanbedrog. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at two, at the Castle hotel, Bangor. Sol. Allanson, Carnarvon

HUNT, WILLIAM DANIEL, butcher, Elstree. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 11, at four, at offices of Sol. Aslett, Cambridge-ter, Hyde-park

JACOBS, EDWARD, victualler, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Benson and Thomas, Bristol

JACOBS, LOUIS, jeweller, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 17, at two, at office of Sol. Sitz, Liverpool

JONES, THOMAS, grocer, Dowlais, and Pantywain, near Dowlais. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 13, at half-past ten, at 48, Glebeland-st, Merthyr Tydfil. Sol. Lewis

KINGSLAND, MARK WILLIAM, miller, Hadlow. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 13, at half-past ten, at offices of Sol. Stenning, Tunbridge

KINSEY, WILLIAM BARNS, and MERRITT, WILLIAM DOWNES, architects, Great Suffolk-st, Borough. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 20, joint creditors, at twelve; sep. creditors of Kinsey, at one; sep. creditors of Merritt, at two, at offices of Sols. Ellis and Crossfield, Mark-la

LANGAN, FRANCIS, shoemaker, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 12, at three, at offices of Sol. Duke, Birmingham

LYTHGOE, JAMES PARTINGTON, Cannon-st. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 14, at two, at Hetherington and Co. 118, Cannon-st. Sol. Smith, Old Jewry

MARTIN, WILLIAM HATCH, farmer, Clovelly. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at three, at office of Sols. Bridgman and Johnstone, Tavistock

MORRALEE, JOHN ROBERT, farmer, near Littletown. Pet. Nov. 26. Nov. 13, at two, at offices of Sol. Folkard, Durham

NEWELL, JOHN HOLLAND, brewer, near Walsall. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at eleven, at J. Slater, solicitor, Butcroft, Darlaston. Sol. Edwards, Darlaston

PARKER, WILLIAM, fruiterer, Nottingham. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Brittle, Nottingham

PAYNE, WILLIAM, boot maker, North-end and George-st, Croydon, and High-st, Epsom. Nov. 18, at twelve, at the Greyhound hotel, High-st, Croydon. Sol. Parry

POATE, RICHARD, artist, Portsmouth. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 12, at three, at the Chamber of Commerce, Cheapside. Sol. Feltham, Portsea

POLLARD, MARY, grocer, Que n's-head-la, Islington. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 17, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Bastard, Brabant-ct, Philpot-la

RHODES, THOMAS, earthenware dealer, Hull. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 7, at twelve at office of Sols. Stead and Sibree, Hull

RILEY, WALDEN EVELYN, wool extractor, Bradford, and Shipley. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 17, at three, at offices of Sol. Hutchinson Bradford

SELLEN, MICHAEL HENRY, trunk manufacturer, Buckingham-st, Strand, under firm of W. Steer and Co. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 21, at twelve, at the Guildhall coffee house, Gresham-st. Sol. Miller, King st, Cheapside

SNOWDEN, GEORGE JAMES, upholsterer, Mile-end-rd. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 11, at two, at offices of Sol. Briant, Winchester-house, Old Broad-st

SUNDERLAND, JAMES SMITH, warehouseman, Leeds. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 22, at eleven, at office of Sol. Harle, Leeds

THOMPSON, JOHN, baker, Leigh. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at four, at Anderton's hotel, Fleet-st, London. Sol. Pullen, Harp-la, Great Tower-st, London

TINSLEY, EDWARD, draper, Hull. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Chatham, Hull

TIVERS, CHARLES GEORGE, painter, Weybridge. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 18, at three, at office of Sol. Jenkins, Chertsey

TRIPP, ROBERT, painter, Weston-super-Mare. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at twelve, at the St. Helen's Glass Co. 6, Nelson-st. Bristol. Sol. Jones, Weston-super-Mare

TUCKER, JOSIAH, out of business, Sandringham-rd, Dalston. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sols. May and Sykes, Adelaide-pl, London-bridge

UNDERWOOD, WILLIAM, bootmaker, Luton. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 5, at twelve, at Good, Daniels, and Co., 7, Poultry. Sol. Snell

VINCENT, ELIZA, and VINCENT, MARY ADELAIDE, laundry proprietresses, Radcliffe-rd, and Seagrave-rd, West Brompton. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov 8, at ten, at offices of Sol. Marshal, King-st-west, Hammersmith

WAGNER, JOHN HENRY, baker, Virginia-row, Bethnal-green. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at two, at at 145, Cheapside. Sol. Arnold, Finsbury-pavement

WHITEHOUSE, HENRY WRIGHT, grocer, Phœnix-st, Somerstown. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 12, at twelve, at office of Sol. Eves, Old Corn Exchange, Mark-la

WILLIAMS, JOHN ROBERT, tailor, Exeter. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of J. O. Harris, Wreford, and Co. accountants, Exeter. Sol. Huggins, Exeter

WOOD, JAMES, grocer, Congleton. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 19, at three at the Lion and Swan hotel, Congleton. Sol. Vaudrey

WRIGHT, WILLIAM, wheelwright, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 20, at three, at office of Sol. Richardson, Manchester

Gazette, Nov. 4.

ALLEN, WILLIAM CHARLES, upholsterer, Tunstall. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Hollinshead, Tunstall
ARTHUR, ARTHUR DAVID, asphalter, Lincoln. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 18, at eleven, at offices of Jay, public accountant, Lincoln. Sol. Page, Lincoln
ASHBY, AARON DAVID, miller, Carshalton. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 18, at half-past two, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Arnold, Park-la, Croydon
ASHMORE, JOHN, joiner, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Burton, Manchester
BELL, WILLIAM, boot seller, Brecon. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 21, at two, at office of Sol. Bishop, Brecon
BENNETT, EDWIN, potato salesman, Brushfield-st, Spitalfields. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 14, at three, at office of Sol. Webster, Basinghall-st
BROADBENT, GEORGE, shoe merchant, Stockton-on-Tees. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 19, at eleven, at office of Sol. Robinson, Darlington
BROOKES, EDWIN, lapidary, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sol. Davies, Birmingham
BROWN, ABRAHAM, grocer, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at eleven, at the County Court offices, Hanley. Sol. Hollinshead, Tunstall
CAIN, JAMES, fish dealer, Bolton. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at three, at offices of Sol. Dutton, Bolton
CARDEN, RICHARD ARTHUR, doctor of medicine, Great Castle-st, Oxford-st and clerk in holy orders, Augusta-ter, Grosvenor-pk, Camberwell. Pet Oct. 29. Nov. 18, at three, at offices of Sol. Debenham, Lincoln's-inn-fields
CHUBB, JOSEPH WILLIAM HODDINOTT BUGLER, hairdresser, Brighton. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Clennell, Great James-st, Bedford-row. Sol. Goodman, Brighton
CORDEN, JONATHAN, butcher, Etruria. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley
COTTON, MARY, shopkeeper, Birstall. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at half past three, at office of Sol. Scholefield, Batley
CRUMP, ISAAC, baker, Pilley. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 21, at twelve, at office of Sol. Smith, Cheltenham
CULLEY, WILLIAM HENRY DUBINSON, baker, Cheltenham-pl, Acton. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Vernede, Craven-st, Strand
CUTTING, SAMUEL, miller, Stanton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at twelve, at the Council-chamber of the Guildhall, Bury St. Edmunds. Sol. Messrs. Salmon, Bury St. Edmunds
DENISON, JOSEPH, draper, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 29 Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sols. Watson and Dickons, Bradford
DILLON, ANDREW, licensed victualler, Bath. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 11, at eleven, at office of Sol. Bartrum, Bath
DODD, THOMAS, painter, Chester. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Churton, Chester
DORMAN, HENRY, butcher, Lower Edmonton. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at two, at the Guildhall coffee house, Gresham-st. Sols. Treherne and Wolfertan, Ironmonger-la, Cheapside
FENNER, JOHN HOLMES, farmer, Canford. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 12, at eleven, at office of Sol. Whitehead, Wimborne Minster
FENTON, RICHARD, out of business, Dewsbury. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Shaw, Dewsbury
GREEN, GEORGE, cab proprietor, Oxford. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 24, at two, at the London tavern, Oxford. Sol. Cooper, Oxford
GREEN, HENRY, and GREEN, THOMAS, stonemasons, Nottingham. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Heath, Nottingham
HAMLEY, RICHARD, butcher, East Stonehouse. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at ten, at office of Sol. Square, Plymouth
HARVEY, GEORGE EDWARD, butcher, Palace-rd, New Town, Bromley. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 18, at three, at Bowen's, 74, Basinghall-st. Sol. Gregory, Widmore rd, Bromley
HEYS, RALPH HEATLEY, wine merchant, Southport. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 18, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Fowler and Carruthers. Liverpool
HOMES, SAMUEL, hatter, Tunbridge Wells. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 17, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Arnold, Tunbridge Wells
HOPKINSON, TOM, woollen cloth manufacturer, Slaithwaite. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 19, at three, at the Ramsden's Arms inn, Huddersfield. Sol. Armitage
HOSKINS, EDWARD, baker, Eastry. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 21, at three, at offices of Sol. Minter, Folkestone
HUDSON, JAMES, ironfounder, Burnley. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Gill, accountant, 12, Hargreaves-st, Burnley. Sol. Baldwin, Burnley
HUGGINS, SIMON, warehouse clerk, Upper Saltley, near Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 17, at ten, at offices of Sol. Duke, Birmingham
JONAS, JOHN, jun., furniture broker, trading as Barber and Co., Manchester. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 14, at three, at the Royal Hotel, Crewe. Sol. Salt, Tunstall
JOYCE, HENRY JOHN, licensed victualler, North Woolwich-rd. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at at three, at offices of Sols. Wood and Hare, Basinghall-st, London, also Reigate and Croydon
KEMP, JOHN, builder, Lower Wandsworth-rd, Battersea-pk, Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 22, at twelve, at office of Sol. Easton, Clifford's-inn
KENWORTHY, ROBERT JOHNSON, brickmaker, New Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 21, at two, at offices of Sols. Green, Allin, and Greenhop, St. Peter's-alley, Cornhill
LUCAS, WILLIAM, painter, Bishop's Castle. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Morris, Shrewsbury
LYONS, CORNELIUS, builder, Queen's-ter, York-rd, Battersea. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at two, at office of Sol. Walls, Walbrook
MARTIN, JOHN, engraver, Sheffield. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Wake, Sheffield
MCVEAGH, JOHN, tailor, Ripon. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 18, at half-past eleven, at the White horse inn, Ripon. Sol. Waistell, Northallerton
MIDDLETON, CHARLES THOMAS, wire drawer, Birchfields, and MIDDLETON, GEORGE HENRY, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol. Blewitt, Birmingham
MILES, HARRISON, joiner, Burnley. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Backhouse and Whittam, Burnley
MOON, MICHAEL ALFRED, mining engineer, Chester. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sol. Jones, Manchester
OSBORNE, WILLIAM, printer, Birkenhead. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 17, at eleven, at offices of Rooke and Price, accountants, Liverpool. Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester
PEATTIE, ISAAC HARPER, haberdasher, Eversholt st, Oakley-sq, Camden-town. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at two, at offices of Coker and Keeler, public accountants, 32, Cheapside. Sol. Barrett, New-inn, Strand
PETCHELL, JOHN, sen., and PETCHELL, JOHN jun., shoe manufacturers, Northampton. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at eleven, at office of Sol. Jeffery, Northampton
PRIOR, CHARLES, grocer, Halstead. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sol. Cardinall, Halstead
REW, ROBERT MAY, chemist, Regent-st. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 26, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Davies, Campbell, Reeves, and Hooper, Warwick-st, Regent-st
RHEIN, CARL, fancy portmanteau manufacturer, Foster-la, Cheapside, and St. Paul's-rd, Islington. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 18, at two, at offices of Minton, Boyes, and Child, 2, Carey-la, General Post Office, E.C., accountants. Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall-st
RILEY, JAMES, fishmonger, Hanley. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 13, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley
SEYMOUR, FREDERICK HENRY, out of business, High-st, Nottinghill. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 18, at two, at Langbourn-chmbs, 17, Fenchurch-st. Sol. Bradford
SHIRLEY, WILLIAM OAKLEY, saddler, Brighouse. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, three, at office of Sols. Learoyd and Learoyd, Huddersfield
SILMAN, JAMES, out of business, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 14, at three, at offices of Sols. Wright and Marshall, Birmingham
SMITH, PETER, bootmaker, Blackpool. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at half-past two, at office of Sol. Edelston, Preston
SMITH, WILLIAM, carpenter, White Hart-la, Barnes. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 22, at three, at offices of Sol. Howell, Cheapside
SOLOMANS, MICHAEL, out of business, Holywell-la, par. St, Leonard, Shoreditch. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 27, at three, at office of Sol. Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields
SPIVEY, FRANK, farmer, Eastwood. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 18, at two, at office of Sol. Blyth, Chelmsford
STEVENTON, ALFRED, accountant, Burslem. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 10, at two, at the Talbot inn, Stafford. Sol. Tomkinson, Burslem
STEVENS, MATTHEW, baker, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Waldron, Cardiff
STODDART, MARTIN SMITH, printer, Sunderland. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 20, at ten, at offices of Sols. Oliver and Botterell, Sunderland
STOREY, JAMES, painter, Sale. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Sampson, Manchester
SUCH, RICHARD, chaser, Aston, near Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 14, at three, at office of Sol. Kennedy, Birmingham
TOWNLEY, CHARLES, baker, Somerton. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sols. Pain and Hawtin, Banbury
WARNER, JOHN, beerseller, Hanley. Pet. Oct. 7. Nov. 6, at eleven, at 26, Cheapside, Hanley
WEBB, WILLIAM, grocer, Sheffield. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 14, at twelve, at office of Appleby and Lawson, accountants, Queen-st, Sheffield. Sol. Roberts
WINNALL, JOHN, farmer, Berrow. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 19, at twelve, at the Crown hotel, Worcester. Sols. New, Prance, and Garrard, Evesham
WINSER, HENRY JAMES, jun., gas lamp manufacturer, Grafton-st, Soho. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 22, at eleven, at offices of Brett, Milford, Pattison, and Company, public accountants, 150, Leadenhall-st. Sol. Musgrave, Albert-bldgs, Queen Victoria-street
WYATT, PHILIP THOMAS, farmer, Shottesbrook. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Sols. Barrett and Dean, Slough
YEATES, HENRY, boot manufacturer, Monmouth. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol. Gibbs, Newport

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Oct. 28.

CLARKE, WALTER, out of business, Worcester
CROSBY, WILLIAM HARRISON, out of business, Scarborough
MORTLOCK, FREDERICK HENRY, boot maker, Jermyn-street St. James's, and Belmont-terrace, Wandsworth-road

Dividends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Hodge, A. seed crusher, first of 6s. At Carlill and Burkinshaw, 4, Parliament-st, Hull.—Lobley, R. S. tallow chandler, first of 10s. At Dean, Gordon, and Hinde, accountants, 23, Albion-st, Leeds.—Marsh, G. farmer, second of 3s. 3d. At Trust, J. R. Brown, George-st, Luton.—Schooles, A. gentleman, first and final of 1½d. At Sols. J. R. Adams, 15, Old Jewry-chambers.—Sherwin, M. H. W. music seller, second of 7d. At Trust, J. Elles, 38, Moorgate-st.—Willard, E. E. tailor, first of 2s. At Trust, W. Cooper, 7 Gresham-st.—Williams, W, contractor, first and final of 4s. 1d. At Barnard, Thomas, Cawker, and Co., 10, Temple-st, Swansea.

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Halloran, A. L., master in Royal Navy, at St. George's-hall, East Stonehouse.—Wootton, A. J., superannuated muster baker, Plymouth, at St. George's-hall, East Stonehouse.

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

BAINES.—On the 26th ult., at 9, Bevington-road, Oxford, the wife of Henry Baines, solicitor, of a son.
BELL.—On the 24th ult., at Mapperley House, Lee, the wife of Charles Bell, solicitor, of a daughter.
CHATTERTON.—On the 29th ult., at Florence Villa, Wood-green, the wife of Horace W. Chatterton, solicitor, of a son.
DYNE.—On the 2nd inst., at Coombe House, Hampstead-lane, Highgate, the wife of John Bradley Dyne, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, of a daughter,
HICKLIN.—On the 30th ult., at 163, Clapham-road, the wife of J. W. Hicklin, Esq., solicitor, of a daughter,
KING.—On the 31st ult., the wife of Thomas King, Esq., of Brighton, solicitor, of a daughter.
ROSTRON.—On the 27th ult., at Beddington, Surrey, the wife of Simpson Rostron, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a daughter.
SANDY.—On the 22nd ult., the wife of T. G. Sandy, solicitor, Burnley, of a son.

MARRIAGE.

CHALK—BEZZELL.—On the 30th ult., at St. Mary's, Lewisham, Edmund Chalk, Moorgate-street, solicitor, to Mary Ann Bezzell, Westcourt, Lewisham-hill, youngest daughter of the late Henry T. Bezzell, Deptford, Kent.

DEATHS.

BRANSON.—On the 29th ult., at Broom-grove, Sheffield, aged 80 years, Mr. Thomas Branson, solicitor.
GOODE.—On the 2nd inst., at Belle Vue, Ryde, aged 80 years, Henry Goode, Esq., barrister-at-law.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.

All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Departmentashould be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
Re MARSHALL TURNER—
Attorney—Suspension of by Superior Court 345

HOUSE OF LORDS.
THE LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY v. GIDLOW—
Railway company—Conveyance of goods—Six-mile clause 346
WATSON AND COMPANY v. SHANKLAND AND OTHERS—
Charter-party 349

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.
MCLEAN v. MCKAY—
Conveyance—Covenant for certain land to be "never sold," but left for the "common benefit" of both parties—Validity—Construction 352
THE WILLIAM LINDSAY—
Collision—Duty of master—Reasonable precautions—Mooring buoy 353

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
THE LLANELLY RAILWAY AND DOCK COMPANY v. THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Railway company—Agreement 357
BROWN v. BLACK—
Stock Exchange—Purchase of shares for several persons 362
Re THE TAVAMORE MINING COMPANY (LIMITED) (PRITCHARD'S CASE)—
Company—Winding-up—Contributory.. 363
MELHADO v. HAMILTON—
Company—Preference shares—Power to issue shares 364

ROLLS COURT.
PICKERTON v. EASTON—
Solicitor and client—Costs—Charging order 364
BRENNKILL v. CAIRD—
Will—Trust to lay out personalty in land to go along with settled property 365

V.C. MALINS' COURT.
WEBBER v. CORBETT—
Will—Construction—Christian names—No latent ambiguity 365

V.C. WICKENS' COURT.
ADAMS v. THE NORTH BRITISH RAILWAY COMPANY—
Patent—General agent—Infringement—Participation in profit 367

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
COOKE v. HORN—
Promissory note—Interest 369

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
SOWERBY v. SMITH—
Lord of manor—Reservation clause..... 370

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.
INGOLDSBY AND OTHERS v. THE PLUMSTEAD DISTRICT BOARD OF WORKS—
Metropolis Local Management Acts, 1855-1862 371

COURT OF PROBATE.
REES v. REES AND REES—
Will—Interpolated sheet—Presumption 375

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS..... 29

LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 29
Acceptances against Consignments 30
The Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 31
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices 32
Decisions under the Licensing Acts 33

LAW LIBRARY 34

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 34
Notes of New Decisions 35
Rolls Court 35
Creditors under Estates in Chancery..... 36
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 36
Reports of Sales 36

MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 36
The Production of Prisoners at Coroners' Inquests..... 36
Hammersmith Police Court 37

COMPANY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 37
Rolls Court 38

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Notes of New Decisions 38

COUNTY COURTS:—
Bradford County Court 38
Cheltenham County Court 39
Northampton County Court 39
Reading County Court 39
Swansea County Court 40

BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Court of Appeal in Chancery 40
Warrington County Court 40

LEGAL NEWS 41

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Questions for the Final Examination 41

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION..... 42

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 42

LAW SOCIETIES:—
Legal Practitioners' Society 43
Articled Clerks' Society 43
Peterborough Articled Clerks' Debating Society 43
Law Students' Debating Society..... 44
Bristol Articled Clerks' Debating Society 44
Huddersfield Law Students' Debating Society 44
The Union Society of London 44

LEGAL OBITUARY 44

THE GAZETTES..... 44

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 45

The Law and the Lawyers.

IT is somewhat surprising that the Government should do all it can to make its administration unpopular with the Legal Profession. The delay attending Vice-Chancellor HALL'S appointment as an acting Judge caused a great deal of very serious inconvenience to practitioners in the Court of Chancery, and in some cases, we are informed, causes were imperilled by difficulties attending the routine of the chambers. The same delay has occurred in filling up the vacancy in the Court of Common Pleas. The late Chief Justice died before the commencement of Term. Eleven days of the Term have elapsed, and Sir JOHN COLERIDGE has not taken his seat. Under existing conditions, the loss of a judge is calculated to operate most prejudicially upon business, and we can quite understand the hesitation in determining which Judge should try the Taunton election petition. No Judge can be spared—and, nevertheless, a vacancy is unnecessarily kept open.

WE are informed that in all probability the Taunton election petition will not be tried for some weeks to come. We have been unable to ascertain that any leading counsel have been retained to support the petition. It is not yet known what Judge will preside.

SOME curious statistics of the work done by Gray's-inn have been published. The entire number of calls from Hilary Term, 1870 inclusive, is as follows:—In 1870, Hilary 0, Easter 1, Trinity 0, Michaelmas 1; in 1871, Hilary 2, Easter 2, Trinity 1, Michaelmas 0; in 1872, Hilary 1, Easter 1, Trinity, 3, Michaelmas 1; in 1873, Hilary 0, Easter 0, Trinity 0. Total calls in 15 terms, 13. Thus, if the annual income of the society is £7000, twenty-eight thousand pounds have been expended in calling thirteen gentleman to the Bar, at a cost of upwards of £2150 each.

ON an interesting question of bankruptcy law, a correspondent writes:—"In the LAW TIMES of the 25th ult., I observe No. IV. of a series of articles you are publishing on the question of liquidation and composition by arrangement. In that article you state that the question whether a debtor who is sued by a creditor who could prove his debt under the liquidation, should plead his order of discharge as a bar, or apply for an injunction, is unsettled; but I trust you will allow me to venture an opinion that the question is settled to a certain extent in the County Courts, which have primary jurisdiction in bankruptcy. Rule 289 may be taken as the basis of the argument. This rule is supplemented by the case of Satterfield v. Fox (LAW TIMES, vol. xlix., p. 114, Liverpool Court), where an injunction was granted against action by creditor, although debtor had pleaded, and was therefore estopped from contending the debt was provable, and although the money was paid into court, and, therefore, the proceedings were not against the debtor or his property, and although by such payment plaintiffs become secured creditors. Also Ex parte Williams, re Teece (LAW TIMES, vol. l., p. 243, Liverpool Court), where an injunction was granted against execution upon after-acquired property on judgment obtained after discharge, but for debt provable under the petition. In the last case, Dr. COMINS, who appeared for the creditor, contended that the debtor ought to have pleaded his discharge, and that he was prevented from applying for an injunction, having slept over his rights. The learned Judge who presided on that occasion did not dwell upon the point raised, but granted the injunction. These cases sufficiently establish the point, that the debtor in such a case should apply for an injunction. I fully concur with you, that it is to be regretted that the judgment of the Bacup Court was not appealed against, our County Courts being inferior courts of record, and analogous to the provincial courts in France under the Code Napoleon, where the decision of one court is not binding on another. If the County Courts were superior courts of law, the judgment of one court would stand until reversed on appeal, and I consider it a pity that County Court Judges should not be bound by previous decisions."

THE law as between husband and wife is not so abundantly clear that another case on the subject will not be welcomed. Jones and Wife v. Cuthbertson (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 359; 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 673; L. Rep. 7 Q.B. 218; 8 Q.B. 504), raised a question whether under a particular state of circumstances a joint action by husband and wife could be maintained. The defendant was a solicitor, which may, or may not, give the case additional interest. A married woman had freehold and leasehold property devised to her separate use, and she being desirous of building and repairing some cottages upon part of it, and her husband wanting to pay off a debt, it was arranged under the advice of the defendant, that a loan should be raised by the mortgage of the wife's property and the deposit of two policies of the husband, each on the life of the husband and wife respectively. The mortgage was executed by husband and wife, and the husband covenanted for the repayment of the loan. The money was to be advanced by instalments, and a joint authority signed by husband and wife was given to the defendant to receive the first instalment from the mortgagees. He received it and paid the husband's debt, but he claimed to retain a debt due to him from the husband. An action was brought for the balance by the husband and wife jointly, and the Court of Queen's Bench and the Exchequer Chamber have held that the action was maintainable. Mr. Justice BRETT very pertinently asked whether the money advanced was not advanced partly on the security of the wife's separate estate, and, if so, was she not partly the meritorious cause? Bidgood v. Way (2 W. Bl. 123), was the case relied upon by the defendant, but, as pointed out by the LORD CHIEF BARON, that is a direct authority to this extent only, that an action at law for money had and received to the use of the husband and wife, simpliciter, is not maintainable. In Jones v. Cuthbertson, the declaration went on to allege what was not strictly in accordance with the facts, that the wife was entitled to receive the money for her sole and separate use. But that was held to be sufficiently supported by the fact that she was entitled to the money laid out upon her separate property. And it is to be further noticed that as against husband and wife, a chose in action cannot be taken to have been reduced into possession against the will of the husband. The defendant in Jones v. Cuthbertson was decided to be an agent for a particular purpose only. "The money," said Mr. Justice BRETT, "was received alio intuitu with no intention by the husband to reduce it into possession. There was therefore no reduction into possession by the husband, and consequently the wife might be joined in action."

THE commingling of Equity and Common Law Judges is one of the pet projects of law reformers, but from the judgments in the case of MaLean v. McKay, decided before the Long Vacation by the Privy Council, it would appear that in Nova Scotia, the result of this process is not always satisfactory. The Privy Council reversed the decision of the High Court of Judicature at Halifax. That Court reversed the decree of the Judge in Equity in favour of the appellant, who was the plaintiff in the suit below. The Judges in the Supreme Court were divided in opinion. The Court consisted of five Judges, of whom the Judge in Equity was one. The four Judges who heard the cause for the first time were divided in opinion; but the learned Judge in Equity, having changed his own view of the case, created the majority of the Court, which reversed his own decree. The Judicial Committee regretted that the Judge in Equity should have changed his mind, his original judgment being in their opinion right in its reasoning and sound in its conclusions. This must be very mortifying to the "Judge in Equity;" to assist in reversing your own decree, and then to be reversed again to your original position, is about as uncomfortable a judicial experience as we can well imagine.

THE case of Vian v. Maynard, tried last week in the Court of Exchequer before Baron CLEASBY, illustrates in a very forcible manner the anomalous condition of the English law on the subject of seduction. In that case there had been a previous trial for breach of promise of marriage brought by the daughter of the plaintiff, but as there was not sufficient evidence of a promise by the defendant the action failed. On this the father, in accordance with suggestions made at the former trial, brought an action for seduction against the defendant. Thus owing to the rule of law that no action lies against the seducer at the suit of the party immediately interested, but that the only right of action is founded on the loss of the girl's services to her father, reducing the question to a case of master and servant, all the parties in this case were put to the trouble and cost of two trials, when the whole matter might have been very well settled on the first occasion but for the rule in question. If the woman who was seduced, and to whose father the jury awarded damages in the second action, could have brought an action for seduction in her own right, the two causes might have been joined, and all further trouble have been avoided. On what grounds such an anomaly is perpetuated it would be difficult to say, except that it has become venerable by age. It has been commented on over and over again, and nothing but the aversion of the Profession from all changes in what they have become accustomed to could have kept such a rule in force. The rule amounts to this, that the party really injured has suffered no injury sufficient for the law to notice, but that her father, or master, who has lost her services, can bring an action for such secondary and inferior loss. This loss of service may be of the most trifling description. In one case, indeed, tried by Chief Justice ABBOTT, his Lordship held that the loss by a father of his daughter's services in making tea was a sufficient loss to enable him to maintain this action. But when the loss of service has once been established, then damages are heaped up on other grounds, and this practice had become so inveterate in Lord ELLENBOROUGH's time, that he said it could not be shaken. So that the damages given frequently include an appraisement by the jury of the moral delinquency of the defendant, and the injury and dishonour sustained by the real plaintiff and her family. Is it not time that a rule of law, which places a father's inconvenience in having to make his own tea above the loss of his daughter's virtue, and the dishonour they both suffer, should be abrogated, and the seduction itself be made the ground of action, if any such actions are to be allowed? There are some who think, however, that such actions should not be maintainable, the consent of the woman taking away the right of action. Whichever opinion prevails, it is very desirable that the law should be placed on a reasonable footing, and that juries should not import into their verdicts damages for injuries quite distinct from the ostensible one on which the verdict is founded.

ACCEPTANCES AGAINST CONSIGNMENTS.

AN interesting question of commercial law has been raised more than once lately, with reference to the rights and liabilities of consignees who accept bills against consignments, such bills being discounted by the drawer, and bills of lading of the goods consigned deposited as collateral security. What is the interest of the consignee in the goods? Has he an insurable interest in them, so as to entitle him to effect an insurance upon them in his own name? And if the drawer and acceptor both become insolvent, what are the bill holder's rights?

The question raised under a policy of marine insurance goes to the root of the matter, and the difficulty of dealing with it satisfactorily will appear upon a reference to the case of Ebeworth v. Alliance Marine Insurance Company (L. Rep. 8 C. P. 596.) The action was brought to recover for a total loss of goods on a policy entered into by the plaintiffs "as well in their own names as for and in the name or names of all and every person or persons to whom the same doth, may, or shall appertain in part or in all." The plaintiffs were cotton brokers and agents in London, and were in the habit of receiving consignments of cotton from correspondents abroad, for sale on behalf of such correspondents, and making advances thereon by acceptances as they were from time to time advised of the shipments. They kept open policies with the defendants, and a certain consignment was declared upon two of the policies. The plaintiffs accepted a bill for £3000, drawn by the consignors against the consignment—valued at £5000—and paid it at maturity. The goods were lost, and in opposition to the right of the plaintiffs to recover on the policies, it was contended that they had no insurable interest at all in the cotton, but a mere expectancy of profit resting on a contingency: that if they had any insurable interest at all, it could only be to the extent of their own beneficial interest therein, viz., £3000; that they could only insure in their own names and on their own behalf to the extent of that beneficial interest; and that the only persons who, without having a beneficial interest in goods equal to the whole value, can insure in their own names to the full value, and recover the whole value, holding the surplus as trustees, are those who are in law owners and in equity trustees of the goods insured, which the plaintiffs were not. For those propositions an array of authorities was cited. The argument of the plaintiffs was that they had the whole legal interest in the goods when they accepted the draft for £3000, that all their duty to the consignors from that time was to account as trustees for them for the surplus proceeds; and that, assuming that not to be so, they still had such an interest in the goods, and in every part of them, as gave them an insurable interest in the whole, so as to entitle them to insure them to their full value in their own names, holding the surplus (if any) above their own actual beneficial interest in the goods as trustees for the consignors. The acceptance of the plaintiffs was hypothecated with the bill of lading by the consignors with the National Bank of India, and the bank, on presenting the shipping documents, were entitled to be paid the amount of the acceptance. As Chief Justice Bovill put it, "The bill of exchange being drawn by the shippers and accepted by the plaintiffs against the consignment, that consignment immediately became an equitable security to the plaintiffs for the amount of their acceptance, and they would have been entitled to have the cotton appropriated for their reimbursement." And his Lordship added, "The equitable interest of the plaintiffs, after coming under acceptance against the shipment, was not in any particular portion of the cotton, but in the whole and in every part of it; and no portion of it could have been withdrawn without diminishing their security." The court was equally divided in this case, and Mr. Justice Brett did not agree with the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Denman as to the ownership of the goods "This contract and position of affairs," said Mr. Justice Brett, "did not pass the legal property to the plaintiffs, for that was still in the National Bank of India. It did not give a present right of possession of the bill of lading, or even a right of possession of the cotton on arrival. . . . Until the acceptance should be met I should apprehend that the plaintiffs could not be held to be either legal or equitable owners of the cotton."

It will be useful at this point to notice another case not having reference to marine insurance, namely, The Bank of Ireland v. Perry (L. Rep. 7 Ex. 14). There the question was whether acceptors of a bill of exchange drawn against a specific cargo were entitled to have the proceeds of the cargo in the hands of the bill holder applied to take up the acceptance. There was a double insolvency—of the drawers and acceptors of the bill—and without going into the particular facts of the case, we would refer to the judgment of Baron Cleasby who expressed his view of the construction to be put upon the case of Ex parte Waring (19 Ves. 345), and the cases which have followed that decision. He said, "I may illustrate by an example what I conceive to be the effect of these authorities. Suppose A. and B. are drawer and acceptor of a bill discounted by a bank, and by the agreement between them of which the bank at the discount time is utterly ignorant, a certain sum of money or the proceeds of a certain cargo is to be applied in discharge of the bill, then, in the event of there being a forced realisation of assets of those two estates, that sum of money or the proceeds of that cargo does not form a portion of either estate, but is subject to the equity of going in discharge of the bill. The billholder, although he may prove against both estates does not get the benefit thereby of the specific security set apart by A. and B. towards the discharge of the bill. There is no mode of giving him the fair benefit of the arrangement except by making the security available at once for the payment of the liability, and then the matter readily adjusts itself."

The position on these authorities may therefore be taken to be this:—Bills drawn and accepted as against a specific consignment, and discounted, are not, in the hands of the holder, a liability to be satisfied out of the proceeds of the consignment, the holder being a stranger to any arrangement between the parties to the bills. In the next place, if the parties to the bills become insolvent the proceeds do not form a portion of either estate, but go to meet the acceptances. Lastly, bills being drawn and accepted against consignments, and the shipping documents being hypothecated with the bills, the holder is entitled to be paid the amount of the acceptances on tendering the shipping documents. And if the acceptors become bankrupt the consignments would form part of their estate, subject to the payment of the amount of the acceptances.

Another case which illustrates the complexities of commerce and the difficulties which may arise out of them in administering plain principles of law, is Ex parte Smart, Re Richardson (L. Rep. 8 Ch. App. 220), in which the question was raised, whether the doctrine of Re Waring applies only as between the drawer or indorser of a bill and the acceptor. The person sending the remittances to meet the acceptances of the consignees, was no party to the bills drawn by the consignor. But the Court of Appeal in Chancery, affirming the Chief Judge, held that this made no difference. "I cannot follow the argument that has been urged upon us," said Lord Justice James, "that the doctrine only applies where all parties are parties to the same bills, and does not apply to a case where there are distinct contracts." Where equity cannot be worked out without the application of the rule in Waring's case, that rule will be applied."

Hypothecation of bills of lading and acceptances against consignments is usually effected with banks by means of formal documents, a specimen of which will be found in Ebsworth's case. The interest which a consignee of goods hypothecated by the consignor has in them that case shows to be doubtful—at least as regards the power to enter into a policy of insurance. The law in respect of the appropriation of specific goods against which acceptances are drawn, is tolerably clear, and we believe it is correctly stated above.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT.

Rules of Procedure.

The schedule to the Act comes into force by virtue of sect. 69, and will form the basis of procedure in the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal in the first instance. The Act is so worded that these rules must take effect on the Act coming into operation, and no alteration can be made in them until after that time.

All common law actions hitherto commenced by writ, all Chancery suits hitherto commenced by bill or information, all Admiralty or Probate suits commenced in rem, or in personam, or by citation, are henceforward to bear one name, and are to be instituted in the High Court of Justice by a proceeding called "an action." All other proceedings in or applications to the High Court will, subject to any rules to be made on the subject, be made in the same form and under the same name as they would have been made in any court in which the like proceeding or application could now be taken or made: (rule 1.)

Every action is to be commenced by a writ of summons, indorsed with the nature of the claim made, or of the relief or remedy required in the action, and specifying the name of the division to which the action is to be assigned: (rule 2.) This is an advantage to defendants, for they will know at once the demand which is made against them, whereas at present, in most instances, they are compelled to wait for the declaration to ascertain the exact nature of their alleged liability. Neither the forms of these writs, nor of the indorsements, are given, but are to be prescribed, in the ordinary causes of action, by rules of court, and the use of these forms will be enforced by costs being imposed upon plaintiffs using any more prolix or other forms, unless the court shall otherwise direct: (rule 3.) The provisions for the service of these writs are much the same as those now in force. No service is required where the defendant, by his solicitor, agrees to accept service, and enters an appearance. Where service is required it is to be effected, if practicable, as personal service is now made, but if it be made to appear to the court or a Judge that prompt personal service cannot be effected by the plaintiff, an order for substituted service, or for substitution of notice for service may be made. Provision is also made for service out of the jurisdiction, or for notice in lieu of service, in such manner and on such terms as the court or a Judge may think just: (rules 4, 5, 6.) The provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act, as to actions on bills of exchange, are extended to all actions for debt, where the claim is a liquidated demand in money, payable by the defendant under a contract express or implied, such as actions on bills of exchange or bonds, or under a statute for a fixed sum of money, or on a guarantee where the claim against the principal is also liquidated, or on a trust. The writ of summons in such cases may be specially indorsed with the particulars of demand, after giving credit for a set-off or payment; and if the defendant does not appear to such an action, final judgment may be signed for any sum not exceeding the sum indorsed on the writ, with interest and costs; but the court may set aside or vary the judgment on such terms as may seem just. As now, in actions on bills of exchange, where a defendant appears on a writ of summons so specially endorsed, the plaintiff may, on verifying the cause of action by affidavit, and swearing that in his belief there is no defence, call on the defendant to show cause why the plaintiff should not be at liberty to sign final judgment, and the court or a Judge may, unless the defendant satisfy the court or Judge that he has a good defence, or disclose such facts as the court or Judge shall think sufficient to entitle him to defend the action, make an order empowering the plaintiff to sign judgment. Permission to defend the action is to be granted on such terms as the court may think fit: (rule 7.) The object of this rule is obviously to prevent the vexatious defending of actions, and whilst it will not prevent defendants from protecting their interests in those cases where their liability can really be disputed, it will have the effect of curtailing much useless and expensive litigation, such as is now kept up by the obstinacy of the parties, often despite the advice of their legal advisers. In cases of ordinary account, where the plaintiff in the first instance desires to have an account taken, the writ of summons is to be indorsed with a claim that such an account be taken, and, in default of appearance and after appearance, unless the defendant, by affidavit or otherwise, satisfy the court or a Judge that there is some preliminary question to be tried, an order for the account claimed, with all directions now usual in the Court of Chancery in similar cases, shall be forthwith made: (rule 8.)

Rules 9 to 17 deal with parties to actions, and in effect carry out the provisions of sect. 24 of the Act by enabling the court to order any persons whose interests are involved in any case before it to come in as plaintiffs or defendants. The object of these rules is to ensure the speedy settlements of litigated questions by doing away with the necessity of several actions where one will practically settle the question at issue. It is unnecessary to notice these rules further than by saying that the non-joinder or misjoinder of parties will not defeat an action, and that the court has full power to insert plaintiffs or defendants at any stage, and generally to regulate the parties between whom any question before us is to be finally settled. In fact, the precise description of parties is made immaterial, and in future persons bringing actions will not be put to the inconvenience now arising from having in the first instance selected a wrong defendant.

The present form of pleading is abolished, and for it is substituted something halfway between the Chancery and Common Law pleading. The forms of pleading are not given in these rules, but will probably find a place in the rules to be framed under the Act. They are so far defined, however, that some notion of them may be gathered from the existing rules. They are in future to be printed, and the plaintiff is required, unless it is dispensed with by the defendant, to file and deliver to the defendant a statement of his complaint, and of the relief or remedy to which he claims to be entitled; the defendant will thereupon file and deliver to the plaintiff a printed statement of his defence, set-off, or counterclaim, and the plaintiff thereupon will file and deliver to the defendant his reply. These statements are to be as brief as the nature of the case will admit, and if too prolix, the penalty will be condemnation in the costs occasioned thereby. This description of the new pleadings corresponds very much with those now in use in the High Court of Admiralty, and a reference to the forms of that court given in Williams and Bruce's Admiralty Practice will very much assist anyone desirous of acquiring some knowledge on the subject. Demurrers are to be raised in the form and manner to be prescribed by the future rule, and full power of amendment is given to the court for the purpose of settling the issues between the parties; moreover for this latter purpose a Judge has power, if he thinks an issue is not properly raised, to direct them to be prepared, and if the parties differ to settle them himself. Cross-actions are practically rendered unnecessary by a provision enabling a defendant to set up by way of counter-claim any right or claim, whether it be a set-off or a claim for damages, and such a counter-claim will have the effect of a cross-action, and the defendant if he establishes his right, may proceed to final judgment thereon. But if the two claims cannot be tried together, power is reserved to the court to refuse leave to the defendant to set up the counter-claim. A plaintiff may unite in one action, and in the same statement, several causes of action subject to the power of the court to divide them if they cannot be conveniently tried together; and a plaintiff is not to be confined to bringing an action against several defendants merely because all are not equally interested as to the relief prayed, or as to every cause of action included in the claims, but the court has power to prevent injury to a defendant by his being included in such an action. Power is given to the court to direct any question of law which may arise in a case to be decided before the issues of fact are tried, or before a reference to an arbitrator or referee. This is in effect the power to decide demurrers, and to decide matters of law which arise on the pleadings without the necessity of first inquiring into the facts: (rules 18 to 24.)

The right to administer interrogatories is preserved much as it now exists. As the new form of pleadings involves statements of facts, and hence frequently reference to documents, it is provided that any documents referred to in any pleading or affidavit, must after due notice be produced to the opposite party who may take a copy, otherwise the party in whose custody it is will not be allowed to use it in evidence, except only where he can satisfy the court that he has good reason for declining to produce it. The court has power to order the production of documents relating to matters in question in any proceeding, and may deal with those documents as it thinks right: (rules 25 to 27.)

The rules hitherto noticed relate to the preliminary steps to be taken before trial; those that follow deal with trial and its incidents.

SEARCHES, INQUIRIES, AND NOTICES.

Disentailing Assurances.

(Continued from p. 19.)

Previously to the year 1834, tenants in tail were able to bar the entail by fines or common recoveries, by means of the former the estate of the tenant in tail was converted into a base fee, that is an estate which lasted so long as the tenant in tail or any of his issue was or were in existence, but by the latter the remainders were also barred, and the estate tail was converted into an estate in fee simple. By the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries Act 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), the mode of barring the entail was completely changed, and provision is made by which the formal amendment of fines or recoveries by the alteration or addition of the names of the parties or description of the lands where a mistake or omission is apparent from the deed declaring the uses of the fine or making the tenant to the writ of entry or other writ for suffering a common recovery, is rendered unnecessary (sects. 7 and 8), and provision is also made for the custody of the records, and for allowing a search to be made for them, and extracts and copies to be obtained: (sect. 13.) By the Act a general power of disposition for an estate in fee simple, or for any less estate, is limited to every tenant in tail (sect. 15), except he or she is by any Act of Parliament restrained from barring his or her estate tail, or he or she is a tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct: (sect. 18.) Every disposition of lands under the Act by a tenant in tail thereof is to be effected by some one of the assurances (not being a will) by which such tenant in tail could have made the disposition if his estate were an estate at law in fee simple absolute, and no disposition by a tenant in tail is to be of any force either at law or in equity under the Act unless made or evidenced by deed, and no disposition by a tenant in tail resting only on contract express or implied, or otherwise, and whether supported by a valuable or meritorious consideration or not, is to be of any force at law or in equity under the Act, notwithstanding such disposition is made or evidenced by deed. The concurrence of the husband is necessary where the disposition is made by a married female tenant in tail, and the deed must be acknowledged by her as directed by the Act (sect. 40), but not necessarily before inrolment, or within the six months allowed for inrolment. The Court of Common Pleas, however, have power to dispense with the husband's concurrence where he is lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, or in prison, or living apart from his wife, or where he is incapable of executing a deed, and no acknowledgment of the deed by the wife will then be necessary (sect. 91): (Re The London Dock Act 1853, 24 L. J., N. S., 606, Ch., and 25 L. J., N. S., 45, Ch.) Courts of equity are excluded from giving effect to any disposition whether made for valuable consideration or not, unless the disposition would be effectual in the courts of law: (sect. 47.) In the case of Peacock v. Eastland (L. Rep 10 Eq. 17), the tenant in tail granted the estate unto and to the use of two persons upon trust to sell and stand possessed of the proceeds for his benefit, the deed was duly inrolled but was not executed by the trustees, who subsequently executed a deed of disclaimer, and the court held that the entail had not been barred. No assurance by which any disposition of lands shall be effected under the Act by a tenant in tail thereof (except a lease for any term not exceeding twenty-one years to commence from the date of such lease or from any time not exceeding twelve calendar months from the date of such lease, where a rent shall be thereby reserved, which, at the time of granting such lease, shall be a rack rent, or not less than five-sixth parts of a rack rent) is to have any operation under the Act, unless it be inrolled in Chancery within six calendar months after the execution thereof: (sect. 41). Where the tenant in tail has not the first estate under the settlement then, except where the prior estate is for years only, he can only create a base fee or bar his issue, unless he obtain the consent of the protector of the settlement (sect. 34), which must be given either by the same assurance by which the disposition is effected, or by a deed distinct from the assurance, and to be executed either on or at any time before the day on which the assurance is made (sect. 42), and the distinct deed must be inrolled in Chancery either at or before the time when the assurance is inrolled: (sect. 46.) The settlor has the power to appoint any number of persons not exceeding three, to be the protectors of the settlement, but the appointment must be made by the deed of settlement itself, and the settlor can also by means of a power, also to be contained in the same deed, authorise any other person to appoint new protectors, or a new protector, in the place of those who die, or by deed relinquish their office. Every deed appointing a new protector, or by which a protector relinquishes his office, is to be void unless it be inrolled in Chancery within six calendar months after its execution. The person who would otherwise be the protector may be appointed as one of the protectors, and, unless otherwise directed by the settlor, he may act as the sole protector, if those appointed have died or relinquished office, and their places have not been filled: (sect. 32.) If the settlor neglect to nominate protectors, then the owner of the first estate (not being an estate for years) under the settlement, is, notwithstanding any charge, or even his bankruptcy, to be the protector. An estate by the curtesy in respect of an estate tail, or of any prior estate created by the same settlement, and an estate by way of resulting use or trust to or for the settlor, are to be deemed estates under the same settlement: (sect. 22.) A tenant in tail has now been decided to be the protector of all estates tail subsequent to his own: (Re Blewitt, 25 L. J., N. S., 393, Ch., reversing the decision of Lord Brougham in Re Blewitt, 3 Myl. & K. 250, and Lord Cottenham in Re Wood, 7 L. J., N. S., 144, Ch.) Where a married woman is entitled under a settlement made either before or since the commencement of the Act (Keer v. Brown 28 L. J., N. S., 477, Ch.), to the prior estate for her separate use, she alone is protector; but if she is not so entitled, her husband is joint protector with her (sect. 24), and in either case she can give her consent without acknowledging the deed (sect. 45), but if the husband be lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, and whether found so by inquisition or not, the consent of the persons intrusted with the care of lunatics is required, or if the husband be convicted of treason or felony, the consent of the Court of Chancery is required, but if from any other cause he be incapable of executing a deed, or if his residence be unknown, or he be in prison unconvicted of treason or felony, or if he be living apart from his wife by mutual consent or by sentence of divorce, the Court of Common Pleas may dispense with the husband's concurrence, and her consent is to be given as if she were feme sole: (sects. 35 and 91.) If the estate conferring the protectorship is vested in two or more persons, each of them is to be deemed sole protector to the extent of his share: (sect. 23.) A confirmed or restored estate is to be deemed a prior estate under the same settlement (sect. 25), unless it be a leasehold estate subject to a rent: (sect. 26.) No woman in respect of her dower, nor bare trustee—except where under a settlement made on or before the 31st Dec. 1833, he would have been the proper person to make the tenant to the writ of entry or other writ, for suffering a common recovery, in which case he is to be the protector (sect. 31)—heir, executor, administrator, or assign, in respect of any estate taken by him as such, is to be protector: (sect. 27.) In case the holder of the first estate is disqualified, the person (if any), who, if such estate did not exist would be the protector, is to be such protector: (sect. 28.)

If no protector be appointed, and the owner of the prior estate be an infant, no consent can be obtained. If the protector be lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, and whether found such by inquisition or not, the Lord Chancellor or the Lord Keeper, or the Lords Commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal, or other the person or persons (now the Lords Justices of Appeal in Chancery) for the time being intrusted by the Queen's sign-manual, with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, is or are to be the protector. If the protector be convicted of treason or felony, or be an infant not entitled to the prior estate, or if it be uncertain whether an appointed protector be living or dead, the Court of Chancery is to be the protector, as well as in those cases in which there is a prior estate sufficient to qualify its owner to be protector but where, by reason of the declaration of the owner or otherwise such owner is not the protector (sect. 33), in any of the above-mentioned cases the consent is given by order obtained upon the motion or petition in a summary way, of the tenant in tail, the proposed disposition being first approved of: (sect. 48 and 49; see Re Blewitt, 25 L. J., N.S., 393, Ch.). The protector is not to be considered a trustee, nor to be subject to any control as regards his consenting or refusing to consent, and an agreement by him to withhold his consent is void (sects. 36 and 37); but having once given his consent in the proper manner he cannot revoke it (sect. 44); although if he be tenant for life in possession he is not prevented from consenting to the exercise of powers of sale and exchange overriding the estate barred (Hill v. Pritchard, Kay 394), and the courts of equity are excluded from giving any effect to consents when they would be effectual in courts of law (sect. 47.)

Where an estate tail has been barred, and converted into a base fee, the latter can be enlarged into a fee-simple absolute by a disposition under the Act by the person who, if the estate tail had not been barred, would have been actual tenant in tail of the same lands (sect. 19), but the consent of the protector is necessary if the base fee is of a reversionary nature only: (sect. 35.) The base fee will not merge by being united with the ultimate reversion, or remainder in fee, but become enlarged: (sect. 39.)

A voidable estate, created by a tenant in tail in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration is to be confirmed by any subsequent disposition by the tenant in tail, other than a lease not requiring inrolment, whatever the object of the disposition be, and to the extent of the power of disposition by the tenant in tail, but such voidable estate is not to be confirmed against a purchaser for valuable consideration who had not express notice of the voidable estate: (sect. 38.)

The provisions of the Act are to relate to lands held by copy of court roll, but the mode of disposition is different, being by surrender where the estate of the tenant in tail is legal, and by surrender or deed where the estate is equitable only: (sect. 50.) The consent of a protector may be given by deed or to the person taking the surrender, and the memorandum of the surrender, if taken out of court, is to state the fact of the consent having been given and to be signed by the protector. The consent, whether deed or memorandum, is to be entered on the court rolls, and if the former, an endorsement has to be made by the steward or deputy steward that it was produced before the surrender, and has been entered on the court rolls. If the surrender be made in court it is to contain a statement that the consent was given: (sects. 51 & 52.) An equitable tenant in tail may bar the entail by deed as if his estate were freehold, but the deed and the deed of consent (if any) are to be entered on the court rolls, and a memorandum of such entry has to be endorsed by the steward or deputy steward, and it is provided that every deed by which lands held by copy of court roll are disposed of by an equitable tenant in tail thereof, are to be void against any person claiming such lands, or any of them, for valuable consideration under any subsequent assurance duly entered on the court rolls of the manor, of which the lands are parcel, unless the deed of disposition by the equitable tenant in tail be entered on the court rolls before the subsequent assurance has been entered: (sect. 53.) No inrolment otherwise than by entry on the court rolls of the disposition is required: (sect. 54.) The Court of Common Pleas, pursuant to the direction contained in sect. 76, have by their General Rules of Hilary Term 1834, fixed the amount of the stewards' fees as follows: "For taking a surrender or a protector's consent, 13s. 4d.; for entries on the court rolls, 6d.; for every folio of seventy-two words; and for every indorsement, 5s."

(To be continued.)

DECISIONS UNDER THE LICENSING ACTS.

A LEGAL year has now elapsed since the passing of the Licensing Act 1872. The prediction that this Act would give an unusual amount of work to lawyers has been fully verified; and the present state of licensing law has been visited with the strongest possible condemnation from the bench. "Anything more remarkable, more confusing, more puzzling," said Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, in one case, "I never met with in the whole course of my judicial experience, and the whole of these licensing statutes constitute a mass of chaotic legislation." "It is impossible," added Justice Blackburn, "to say that any point is clear in these Acts of Parliament." Out of the numerous cases that have been decided under the Act, we propose to select two for consideration, as being of greater legal, as well as greater general importance, than the rest: R. v. Smith (L Rep. 8 Q. B. 146; 28 L. T. Rep. N.S. 130, nom. R. v. The Justices of Southport), which called down from the Judges the remarks above quoted; and Roberts v. Humphreys (42 L. J. 147, M. C.). In R. v. Smith it was held (for the decision amounts to this) that the applicant for a beerhouse licence may, if refused, appeal to Quarter Sessions, whereas the applicant for a publichouse licence may not. In Roberts v. Humphreys it was held that the burden of proof, admitted to be upon the informer before the Act, is by the Act shifted from the informer to the publican, upon a charge of supplying liquor during closing hours to an alleged bonâ fide traveller.

In Re Smith the court refused a mandamus commanding justices to hear an application for a new licence to sell beer not to be drunk on the premises. This is one of the licences which by the Wine and Beerhouse Act 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 27), s. 8, justices have no discretion to refuse except on one of four specified grounds, and the licence in question was admitted to have been in fact illegally refused. But it was urged that the applicant had a remedy by appeal, and that, therefore, the court would not interfere by mandamus. Thus much being conceded, the whole question turned upon the point whether the appeal, undoubtedly given by the Wine and Beerhouse Act 1869, had been taken away by the Licensing Act 1872 or not. Now the appeal given by the Act of 1869 was taken by incorporation from the old Alehouse Act of 1828 (9 Geo. 4, c. 61), s. 2, the words of the Act of 1869 (s. 8) being that "all the provisions" of the Act of 1828 as to appeals from any act of any justice, shall, as far as may be, have effect with regard to grants of certificates under this Act." The appeal clauses of the Act of 1828 were (except as to renewals and transfers) repealed by the Act of 1872, which Act, however, while repealing certain other sections of the Act of 1869, not only left sect. 8 untouched, but contained the words "There shall be repealed so much of the Wine and Beerhouse Acts as makes such Acts temporary in their duration, and the said Acts shall henceforth be perpetual." For the applicant Reg. v. Stock (8 A. & E. 405), and Reg. v. Merionethshire Justices (6 Q. B. 343), were cited as authorities that the repeal of the foundation sections of the Act of 1828 could not affect the structure reared upon them in the Act of 1869. On the other side it was contended that the whole series of licensing Acts must be considered as one statute, so that a repeal of the foundation involved a repeal of the superstructure; and, further, that to give one class of applicants an appeal which was denied to another was a practical anomaly that the Legislature could never have intended. But the court (Cockburn, C.J., Blackburn, Mellor, and Quain, JJ.) was unanimous in discharging the rule for a mandamus, upon the authorities cited, fortified by that of Boden v. Smith (18 L. J. 121, C. P.), in which case the foundation Act, 55 Geo. 3, c. 51 (the County Rates Act), limited the period of bringing a particular action to three months, while Pollock's Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 97) limited the period to two years, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21 enacted that all the provisions of the County Rates Act "should be made and taken to apply" to the rates authorised by 8 & 9 Vict. c 21 "as if the same provisions were severally re-enacted" in it, and the court held that the limitation in the County Rates Act was incorporated in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21 and not repealed by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97.

It is believed that this decision, whether right in law or not, was quite contrary to the expectations of the numerous persons, whether teetotallers, brewers, or publicans, interested in its result; and it may be noticed that the contrary view was taken in the licensing text-books, one and all. The case of Reg. v. Smith being only an application to sell liquor to be drunk off the premises, the anomaly of the result is not perhaps quite so apparent as it would have been had the application been for a licence to sell for drinking on the premises; but it is plain, on reading sect. 8 of the Act of 1869 that both classes of licence stand on the same footing; and that applicants for all wine and beer licences (usually a lower class, and one which has been gradually more and more repressed by the Legislature ever since their special licences first came into existence) have a right of appeal which applicants for public house licences have not. But as was hinted at by Mr. Justice Quain in Reg. v. Smith, other and greater anomalies might be pointed out. By sects. 37 and 38 of the Licensing Act 1872, "grants of new licenses shall not be valid" unless confirmed by certain bodies of justices, varying in constitution according to the locality. It being now held that the refusal to grant may in the case of wine and beerhouse licences be appealed against, what is the position of the confirming body? Confirm they must, otherwise the grant is not valid. The result will be that where the justices below have refused, and the Quarter Sessions have allowed an appeal, there must be three hearings of the same application, a result which of itself is sufficiently absurd to show that it can never have been intended. On the other hand, suppose that the justices below have granted a licence, and that the confirming body have refused to confirm it. Does an appeal lie from the confirming body to Quarter Sessions, and if not, why not? Add to this that the Licensing Meetings are held in August and September, that the confirming body generally sits before Quarter Sessions, and is at once fewer in number and of greater licensing experience than the Court of Quarter Sessions, and the only question would seem to be whether R. v. Smith is likely to be overruled, or whether an amending Act will have to be passed.

We next come to the more generally interesting case of Roberts v. Humphreys. Before the Licensing Act 1872 a long series of decisions from Taylor v. Humphries (30 L. J. 242, M.C.; 4 L.T. Rep. N.S. 514) to Copley v. Burton (L. Rep. 5 C. P. 489; 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 88) had clearly established that in the case of an information against a publican for selling liquor during closing hours, it was for the informer to prove affirmatively not only that the buyer of the liquor was not a traveller, but that the publican knew he was not, and intended to sell to him notwithstanding. Mr. Justice Willes, in Copley v. Burton, said: "It is impossible to fail to perceive that the principles laid down by this court in several cases have not been comprehended by the magistrates. . . . It must for the future be understood that the burden of proof lies upon the informer, and that a conviction ought not to take place, unless the magistrates are satisfied that the inkeeper, when supplying refreshment within the prohibited hours, is cognizant of the fact that the parties asking for it are not travellers." And he hinted that in future the unusual course might be taken of giving costs against magistrates were such another conviction brought up and quashed. The authority then before the Act was overwhelming in favour of the publican. The decisions (all of which proceeded from the Court of Common Pleas), certainly seem to conflict somewhat with the 14th section of Jervis's Act, which enacts that if an information "shall negative any exemption, exception, proviso, or condition in the statute on which the same shall be framed, it shall not be necessary for the prosecutor . . . to prove such negative, but the defendant may prove the affirmative thereof in his defence, if he would have advantage of the same." But this difficulty was expressly presented to and got over by the court in the cases of Taylor v. Humphries (11 L. T. Rep. N. S. 370), and Davies v. Scrace (L. Rep. 4 C. P. 172; 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 788), in which latter case Mr. Justice Keating pointed out that a decision throwing the burden of proof upon the innkeeper would cast upon him "an intolerable burden, for he would then be precluded from supplying refreshments to any person whom he did not actually know." Indeed it is settled law that an innkeeper is liable, not only to action, but indictment, if he refuse to receive a traveller: (Hawkins ch. 78; R. v. Ivens, 7 C. & P. 213; Davies v. Scrace.) And to prevent an innkeeper from selling to persons whom he did not actually know would almost amount to preventing him from selling to travellers altogether, travellers being just the persons whom the innkeeper would not be likely to know.

However, the questions in the recent case of Roberts v Humphreys were two; (1) Does the Licensing Act 1872 shift the burden of proof from the informer to the publican? and (2), If the burden of proof be shifted, is honest belief on the part of the publican any ground of defence, or must he be convicted even without the mens rea? Under the old Acts the offence of selling during closing hours was one against the tenor of the licence, which provided that the holder should not sell during those hours, except to travellers. Under the present Act (sect. 24) it is enacted that "all premises shall be closed" during the closing hours, and that "any person who sells . . . or opens or keeps open any premises for the sale" of liquor during those hours shall be liable to a penalty. In the same section are the words: "None of the provisions contained in this section shall preclude a person licensed . . . from selling to bonâ fide travellers or to persons lodging in his house." And by sect. 51 the words of Jervis's Act are incorporated, with a considerable addition, which proved fatal to the appellant. The words of sect. 51 are, "any exception, exemption, proviso, excuse, or qualification, whether it does or does not accompany the description of the offence in this Act, may be proved by the defendant, but need not be specified or negatived in the information, and if so specified or negatived, no proof in relation to the matters so specified or negatived shall be required on the part of the informant or complainant." All the old cases were cited for the appellant, but the court (Blackburn, Quain, and Archibald, JJ.) was unanimous in holding that the burden of proof is shifted by the new Act. "The alteration," said Blackburn, J., "seems to have been suggested by the previous decisions." The statute, he observed, describes the offence, and states "three defences or exceptions to the general rule, which defences are to be looked upon as pleas to a count in trespass." It is hard to see, however, how the new Act alters the law except in respect of the point of pleading, that whereas under the old law, exceptions had to be negatived in the information, but were not required to be negatived in the proof, under the new law they need not be negatived in either. The question then would seem to have been whether the words of sect. 24 of the new Act made that an exception, which in the cases under the old Acts had been held not to be one, and considering the highly penal nature of the statute, the reason and authority of the old cases, the probability that sect. 24 of the new Act was arranged as it is for convenience in drafting, and that sect. 51 was intended merely to effect an alteration in pleading, and last, though not least, the general reluctance of the courts in construing statutes, to admit important alterations in the law by a sidewind, the correctness of the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench on the point would appear open to much question.

On the further point in the case, whether an honest belief would excuse the publican, Blackburn and Archibald, JJ., slightly inclined to the belief that it would not, and Quain, J., to the belief that it would. The justices had found that the appellant was negligent, but had not found whether he had an honest belief or not. The case was accordingly remitted to the justices in order that they might find as a fact whether or not the appellant acted innocently, in order to be re-argued in the event of this point being found by the justices in his favour. If the court should ultimately hold, as the majority has already inclined to hold, that this is one of the cases in which the ordinary rule "Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea" does not apply, the result will be that the publican will find himself between two fires. If he admit the apparent bona fide, he admits him at the risk of at least one pound penalty, for the Act (sect. 67) allows no mitigation below that amount, and at the further risk of a conviction which, twice repeated, may cost him his licence. If he refuse admittance, he runs the risk not only of loss of custom, but of action and indictment. It is a question of fact, too, for each bench of magistrates to decide whether a particular person be a traveller or not (Atkinson v. Sellers, 5 C. B., N. S., 442; 28 L. J. 12, M. C.); and, however discriminating your publican may be, how can he hope to hit the particular view of the magistrates of his own locality? It is believed that both magistrates and police have as yet worked the closing hours clauses with great moderation. But if the case of Roberts v. Humphreys should ultimately be decided against the appellant, it cannot be said that they have been encouraged by the Judges to continue it. As far as the public are concerned, the probable result of such a decision would be to render the saving in favour of travellers practically almost useless.

LAW LIBRARY.

The Pursuit of Truth. A discourse delivered before the Sunday Lecture Society. By A. Elley Finch, Esq.

Only a portion of this very interesting discourse is devoted to purely legal investigation, but Mr. Finch's aim is to show that the truth in theology, science, and law must be pursued upon the same principles. The species of speculation which endeavours to connect law with morality, making the one react upon the other, leading to the conclusion that "the moral and physical laws are allied by a closer analogy than is usually suspected," is very tempting, and elegant theories are very easily evolved under the teaching of the ancient philosophers. Mr. Finch, however, is not merely a speculator or a theorist; he states boldly that the "real legal reformer" aims at harmonising the rules of positive law with the principles of moral rectitude, rather than at facilitating the course of legal procedure. This sounds extremely well, and the ideal law reformer doubtless cherishes this great project; but the reformers with whom we are practically acquainted have certainly placed first in their consideration the facilitating of legal procedure. The establishment of County Courts by Lord Brougham was a greater measure of a practical kind than any which we can think of dealing with the harmonisation of the rules of positive law with the principles of moral rectitude. Again, Lord Selborne's Judicature Act is almost entirely a measure of proceedure. But Mr. Finch's argument cannot be taken bit by bit and criticised: it hangs together, and must be considered as a whole. This is shown by the passage following that which we have quoted, in which he proceeds to say that by getting rid of superstitions we must necessarily elevate the moral standard, and thus make men more "a law unto themselves," and better adapted to obey beneficient positive laws designed for their guidance: whereupon Mr. Finch foresees that the lawyer's occupation would be gone. The education of the people by "habitual observance and experience of legal sanctions" is another phrase which captivates; but we think Mr. Finch goes too far when he says they are made moral or immoral by Act of Parliament. The more highly the people are educated the less they seem inclined to accept legal sanctions, and Acts of Parliament are criticised too sharply where their operation is inconvenient, to allow us to think that they make citizens moral or immoral.

We thoroughly agree with writers, ancient and modern, from Plato to Dr. Taylor, who affirm that crime is the result of a diseased condition of the mind. The moral nature is represented by the mind, and if it is possible by education to improve the moral nature, crime would undoubtedly diminish. Here, if we were to follow out the subject, we should require to examine carefully Mr. Finch's views on religion and science, which would be foreign to the objects of legal journalism. We have already noticed in our leading columns our author's ideas on the subject of the interrogation of nature as applied to the pursuit of truth, and a contributor has shown how easily the views of Mr. Finch may be met, and almost neutralised, by arguments which, equally with his own, are at present mere matter of individual opinion. We have only, in concluding this notice, to thank the author of the lecture for much entertaining and edifying material. His notes are rich with the produce of wide reading. Whatever we may do in the way of making our laws a means of education, there can be no doubt that the administration of the law must derive great advantage from numbering among its professors cultivated thinkers such as Mr. Finch. To attain intellectual eminence, whilst engaged in work much of which is of necessity unintellectual, and at times almost mechanical, is a more common accomplishment now than in earlier times, and we are glad that the law has its brilliant members in the department of literature devoted to science and philosophy.

The Supreme Court of Judicature Act of 1873. By Thomas Preston. London: William Amer.

Mr. Preston is no doubt quite right when he says that during the next twelvemonths everyone in any way connected with the legal profession will be studying the Judicature Act, and he has produced an edition of it which will prove convenient to the student. But its value must be very fleeting. In twenty-five distinct and separate instances rules of procedure to be framed by the Judges are referred to in the body of the statute, and whilst a knowledge of the statute itself is primarily needful, the work which will form the basis of the "practice" of the future will be that which skilfully incorporates the new rules with the Act. In the mean time, however, we recognise Mr. Preston's enterprise, and he gives us an excellent index. For half a crown, therefore, the practitioner may obtain a work containing an introductory epitome, and the Act itself, with every other page blank for notes, so that when the rules come out they may be added.

The Lawyer's Companion and Diary, 28th annual issue. By J. Thompson, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. London: Stevens and Sons, Chancery-lane. This work has become, if possible, more than ever indispensable in a solicitor's office.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

Amongst the emoluments yet enjoyed by solicitors may be mentioned the office of Clerk to Local Boards, which is usually filled by members of our branch of the Profession, but a case has lately come to our knowledge which occasions us some anxiety upon the subject. "Wanted a Clerk to the Local Board of," &c., recently appeared in our advertising columns; salary £60 a year. "The clerk must be a certificated solicitor," said the advertisement in question, and the following are a few of the duties of the office:—Attend all meetings, keep minutes, conduct correspondence, make copies, prepare, &c., all deeds, contracts, agreements, or other instruments, summon all meetings, communicate all orders, &c., to all officers of the board, advise the board on all matters, prepare and keep all rate-books and estimates for rates, also composition for rates agreed upon between the board and owners of property in the district, prepare all notices to be given by the board, keep, check, and examine all accounts, books of accounts, and report thereon, prepare all orders on the Treasurer, and countersign the same, ascertain before each meeting the balance due to or from the Board in account with the treasurer, and keep accurate accounts of all penalties, proceeds of sales, &c., and all other sums applicable to district fund account, or otherwise payable to the Board; examine and check the accounts of the collector every month, to see that all moneys received are duly accounted for; obtain from surveyor and inspector of nuisances a monthly statement, and examine same, preserve all receipts and vouchers for production to auditors; keep a minute book and journal, and insert marginal notes for reference to folios of ledger; keep such books of accounts and in such form as the Board shall direct; prepare annually a summary of receipts and expenditure, to be submitted to auditor; prepare and transmit all reports and Parliamentary returns; conduct proceedings before justices; find his own office and clerks. We make no comment, but only repeat—"Salary £60 a year."

Under the heading "Law Societies," in our present issue, will be found a reprint of a circular headed "Legal Practitioners' Society," which has been largely circulated amongst the Profession both in town and country. That some of the work which it is contemplated should be done by this society ought to be undertaken by existing bodies we do not dispute, but that it is not undertaken by them is equally certain. We wish those who would establish the "Legal Practitioners' Society," as a useful institution, every success, and we shall do all we can to further the objects in view, and as to which we shall have more to say after the meeting on Thursday next.

We have received from country solicitors during the past week, several copies of the scale of charges issued by so-called law agents and accountants, and which we reproduced in extenso in our last issue. We have also received numerous newspaper cuttings containing advertisements such as that circulated by Campbell and Co., headed "Who is your Lawyer?" which we have often before exposed in these columns. We commend these matters to the consideration of the Legal Practitioners' Society.

The following law lectures and classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society: Monday, 17th, class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Tuesday, 18th, class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Wednesday, 19th, class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Friday, 21st, lecture, Conveyancing, 6 to 7 o'clock. To prevent interruption at the lectures, subscribers cannot be admitted to the hall after the lecture has commenced.

While in England solicitors seem quite undisturbed at the appointment of barristers to the office of solicitor to many public departments of the State, in Ireland it is quite otherwise, and it is not long since that Mr. Charles E. Lewis, M P., when urging solicitors to action in this and kindred matters, directed attention to the spontaneous and determined resistance opposed by solicitors in Dublin to anything like encroachments on their privileges by the Bar. It is satisfactory to know that the Crown solicitor in Ireland is actually a solicitor.

A correspondent inquires "whether an under sheriff can properly be also agent for one of the candidates at a Parliamentary election for the city for which he is under-sheriff, receiving the usual retainer from such candidate." Although we do not know of any statutory provision which says in so many words that an under-sheriff is disqualified from filling at the same time, and in the same place, the post of political agent, yet the two offices are hardly compatible, and it would be a matter for strong observation in case of an election petition where such under-sheriff (usually a solicitor) undertook the reception and scrutiny of votes.

We are sorry to notice that in a case before Mr. Partridge, at Southwark, an objection raised by a defendant to the case being conducted for the complainant by a person not a solicitor was overruled, the magistrate stating that the rule of the court was to admit articled clerks. On the other hand, we are glad to notice that at the Brighton County Court, in a case of Wright v. Chantrell, a Mr. Hawkins, who appeared for the defendant, having, in answer to a question by the judge, stated that his occupation was that of an accountant and auctioneer, was told that he could only be heard as a witness, and had no right to take the place of a professional man.

A correspondent sends us the following: The conveyancing charges advised by the Incorporated Law Society, may probably be adequate remuneration to the great offices who would not look at a conveyance or a mortgage for less than £100, except as an accommodation to a good client. But in districts where such small transactions are numerous, and fall to the lot of small practitioners, it will not answer. Either a higher fee will be insisted on, or if the solicitor be one of the cheap and needy class, he will accept the terms and scamp the work. It is certain that the remuneration will be inadequate, and the scheme would be much more likely to work if the scale began at £200. It would be for the true interest of the laity, as well as the Profession, to make that change.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Administration with Will annexed — Substituted Trustees.—Where a court of equity had made an order under the Trustee Act 1850 substituting new trustees for those named in the will, the Court of Probate granted administration with the will annexed to the substituted trustees without requiring the execution of a deed of conveyance to them by the old trustees: (In the goods of C. Woodfall, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 248. Prob.)

Lunacy—Protection of Lunatic's Estate —Application for Leave to attend Proceedings.—A stranger in blood to a lunatic, who is interested under a will made by the lunatic before the commencement of the lunacy, will not be allowed to attend the proceedings in the lunacy: (Re Scarlett, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 232. Chan.)

Practice — Rehearing — Companies Act 1862 (s. 124.)—The 124th section of the Companies Act 1862, which restricts the time within which notice of rehearings or appeals must be given, refers to rehearings by way of appeal, and not to rehearings by the Court of Appeal of orders made by itself: (Re The Blakely Ordnance Company (Limited) (Brett's case, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 255. Chan.)

Administration—General Grant to Receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery.—A. died intestate, and it was alleged that his widow, without taking out letters of administration, had got in part of his estate. The creditors filed a bill in Chancery for the administration of his estate, and a receiver was appointed. The receiver applied to this court for a grant of administration, and cited the widow and next of kin. On their non-appearance the court made a general grant to the receiver: (In the Goods of Mayer, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 247. Prob.)

Winding-up—Contributory—Past Member—Payment of Old Debts—Release.—B., who was on the B list of a company in liquidation, caused to be bought up and released to the company all the debts which were due by the company when he ceased to be a shareholder, and which remained due at the commencement of the winding-up: Held, that although the money which was raisable from the A list contributories was insufficient to pay all the debts of the company, no call could be made upon B for the payment of debts, and of the costs of the winding-up. The assets of a limited company in liquidation (including the proceds of calls made in the winding-up), are divisible pro rata among all the creditors of the company, at whatever time their debts may have been contracted, and accordingly the liability of past members in respect of debts contracted before they ceased to be members is reduced by the amount paid upon the old debts out of such assets: (Morris's case, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 256. L.C. & L.JJ.)

Negligence—Master and Servant—Acting within the scope of his Employment.—The defendant was employed to remove some iron rails from the place where they were stacked to a vessel in the Liverpool Docks. It was the duty of the consignor to bring the rails to a particular spot, from which the defendant was to ship them. The defendant's men having removed all the rails delivered, his foreman got upon a waggon which was waiting to deliver more rails, and in unloading it, threw one upon the plaintiff. In an action against the defendant to recover damages for the injury received through the negligence of the defendant's servant, the judge nonsuited the plaintiff. Held (per Grove and Denman, dissentiente Brett, J.), that the defendant's foreman was acting within the scope of his employment, and that there was therefore evidence to go to the jury. Per Brett, J.—That the act of the foreman was an act done at a period antecedent to that in which his duty in relation to the moving of the rails commenced, and that, therefore, there was no evidence on which a jury could find for the plaintiff: (Burns v. Poulson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 329. C. P.)

Garnishee — Interpleader — Judgment creditor.—1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, provides that all rules, orders, &c., made in pursuance of that Act may be entered of record; and every such rule or order so entered is to have the force and effect of a judgment. This enactment does not make a person who has obtained an order for the costs of an interpleader issue, and has entered it of record, a judgment creditor within the meaning of the garnishee clauses of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), ss. 60, 61: (Best v. Pembroke 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 327. Q. B.)

Suit for Nullity of Marriage—Impotence—Delay—Burden of Proof.—In a suit by wife for declaration of nullity of marriage on the ground of impotence of the husband, the medical evidence was inconclusive, and the evidence of the parties conflicting. The marriage was in 1863, and the parties separated in 1870. The petition was filed in 1871. Held (affirming the judgment of the Divorce Court) that the petition should be dismissed. A considerable delay in instituting proceedings in such cases is not a bar where the evidence in support of the petition is conclusive; but such delay is very material where the chief evidence consists of conflicting statements by the parties. The burthen of proof is on the party seeking the remedy, and in these cases especially should be strictly insisted on: (Mansfield v. Cuno, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 316. H. of L.)

Gift of Money—Acceptance as a Loan—Promissory Note—Consideration.—The plaintiff requiring some money to pay his election expenses, applied through a friend to W., his wife's uncle, for a loan of £1000. W. declined to lend £1000, but said that he would advance £500 as a gift, and deduct it from a legacy which he intended to leave to the plaintiff's wife and children. He accordingly drew a cheque for £500 in favour of the plaintiff, who, in acknowledging the receipt of the cheque, wrote that he would gladly repay it at an early opportunity. W. subsequently changed his will and reduced by £500 the legacy which he had given to the plaintiff's wife and children. Three months afterwards the plaintiff had a conversation with W., who, on the plaintiff expressing regret that W. should suffer loss by having given him the money in his lifetime, said that the plaintiff could allow him one per cent., being the rate of interest which his banker would have allowed him. Thereupon the plaintiff voluntarily, and without being asked to do so, signed and gave W. a promissory note for £500 and interest at one per cent., it being, according to the plaintiff's statement, clearly understood between them that the promissory note should not be enforced as to the principal, but should merely serve as a security for the interest during W.'s lifetime. On W.'s death his executors brought an action on the promissory note, and the plaintiff filed this bill to restrain the action. Held (reversing the decision of Malins, V.C.), that, although there would have been no consideration for the promissory note, if there was clear evidence that the £500 had been in the first instance given and received as a pure gift, yet that as the fact showed that the plaintiff had not assented to receive it as a gift, it amounted to a loan, and was a good consideration for the promissory note, and that the action ought not to be restrained. Held, also, that parol evidence was inadmissible to show that there was an agreement between the plaintiff and W. that the promissory note should not be enforced: (Hill v. Wilson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 238. Ch.)

ROLLS COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Fothergill v. Rowland.

Demurrer—Suit for injunction—Breach of contract.

This was a bill filed for the purpose of obtaining an injunction to restrain the defendants from selling to any persons other than the plaintiffs the coals obtained from a particular seam in a colliery belonging to the defendant, Rowland. It appeared from the statements in the bill that in December 1871, the defendant Rowland entered into an agreement in writing with the plaintiffs by which, in consideration of certain acts to be performed by the plaintiffs, he contracted to sell and deliver to them the whole of the get during three years of the No. 3 seam in his colliery at the price of 6s. per ton. The plaintiffs performed their part of the contract, but in August last the defendant Rowland contracted to sell the colliery to the other defendants, he having for some time previous ceased to supply the plaintiffs with coal. The bill prayed for an injunction restraining the defendants from supplying other persons with the coals. The defendants demurred to the bill.

Roxburgh, Q.C., and Gazdar for the defendant Rowland.

Sir R. Baggallay, Q.C., Fischer, Q.C., Freeling and Crossley for the other defendants, Fry Q.C., and A. G. Marten in support of the bill.

Sir G. Jessel was of opinion that the court could not give any relief to the plaintiffs. The contract was a contract for the sale and delivery of coal, a severed chattel having no relation to real estate, the remedy for breach of which contract was by action at law, there being nothing to distinguish the case from that of any ordinary contract for the sale and delivery of goods. He knew of no case in which, there being a contract to deliver particular goods at a particular price, an injunction had been granted where specific performance could not have been decreed. He, therefore, must allow the demurrers.

Solicitors: Sharp and Ullithorne.

Thursday, Nov. 6.

Marler v. Tommas.

Power of appointment of stock—Transfer executed by donee of power—Valid appointment.

By a postnuptial settlement dated the 8th Sept. 1865, certain shares standing in the name of a trustee for Mrs. Field for her separate use were assigned to Luke Marler, who was to stand possessed of the same upon trust for Mrs. Field for life, for her separate use, and on her death for the children of the marriage, and if there should be no children of the marriage, then upon trust for such person or persons as Mrs. Field should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment, for her next of kin. There were no children of the marriage. Mr. Field died on the 15th June 1865, and after his death the trustee in whose name the shares were standing, by the direction of Mrs. Field, transferred the shares into her name by a deed of transfer, which was executed by Mrs. Field and duly registered. Mrs. Field died in Jan. 1872, without having made any other appointment of the shares, and intestate. The plaintiff, who was the next of kin of Mrs. Field, claimed to be entitled to the shares, and one of the questions in the suit was whether the execution of the deed of transfer by Mrs. Field operated as an appointment to herself of the shares.

Sir R. Baggallay, Q.C. and Hadley for the plaintiff.

Southgate, Q.C., Alfred Smith, Fry, Q.C., and W. P. Beale for the defendants.

Sir G. JESSEL held, that the execution of the deed of transfer operated as an appointment by Mrs. Field to herself.

Solicitors: Robinson and Preston; Matthews and Matthews.

Monday, Nov. 10.

LINE v. HALL.

Power of appointment—Appointment to object of the power for life, with remainder to his son, not an object of the power, in tail—Doctrine of cy près applicable.

GEORGE KILWORTH, by his will, dated the 1st of Jan., 1805, gave and devised an estate at Napton-on-Hill, in the county of Warwick, unto his daughter Elizabeth, the wife of Esmy Edward Hall, for life, and after her decease to the said Esmy Edward Hall for his life, and on his decease he gave and devised the same to all or such one or more of the children or grandchildren of his said daughter Elizabeth who should be living at the time of her decease, in such shares and proportions as the survivor of them, the said Esmy Edward Hall and his daughter Elizabeth should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment to all and every the children of his daughter Elizabeth in equal shares. Elizabeth Hall died in the year 1820, leaving the said Esmy Edward Hall her surviving, a son Giles Kilworth Hall, and three other children, but no grandchildren. Esmy Edward Hall made his will, dated the 18th March 1844, and thereby devised the said estate unto his son, the said Giles Kilworth Hall, for life, with remainder to the first and other sons of the said Giles Kilworth Hall, severally and successively, according to their respective seniorities in tail male. The question in the suit was whether, as the children of Giles Kilworth Hall were not objects of the power, the doctrine of cy près was applicable, so as to give to Giles Kilworth Hall an estate tail.

Fry, Q.C. and Batten for the plaintiff.

Roxburgh, Q.C., and Doughty, Speed, Field, and William Barber for the defendants.

Sir G. JESSEL said this was the very case where the doctrine of cy près should apply; the donee of the power had given to a child of an object of the power an estate tail, which the law would not allow. His Honour held that Giles Kilworth Hall took an estate tail.

Solicitors: Peacock and Goddard; Taylor, Hoare and Taylor; Rickards and Walker.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BULL (Henry W.), formerly of 12, Wilton-crescent, afterwards of 25, Ely-place, and late of 24, James-street, Buckingham-gate, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 6; J. C. Deverell, of the firm of Walters, Young, and Co., solicitors, 9, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex. Dec. 26; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

CARR (Ralph), 1, Savage-gardens, London, and Walthamstow, Essex, cork merchant. Dec. 6; B. F. Trench, solicitor, 51, Crutchedfriars, London. Dec. 15; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

DEACON (Grosvenor), 155, Stanhope-street, Mornington-crescent, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 1; E. Pope, solicitor, 13, Gray's Inn-square, Middlesex. Dec. 15; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

GOMM (Mary), formerly of Goodwyns, East Cosham, Southampton, late of Granville House, Nelson-street, Ryde, Isle of Wight, widow. Dec. 8; F. Jackson, solicitor, 55, Chancery-lane, Middlesex.

HORN (John) Middleton-in-Teesdale, Durham, tailor and draper. Dec. 5; William Robinson, solicitor, Darlington. Dec. 12, M.R., at eleven o'clock.

RUSSELL (John) Terhill House, Cheltenham, Esq. Dec. 8; C. J. Collins Prichard, solicitor, Bristol. Dec. 20, M. R., at twelve o'clock.

STACKHOUSE (Thos.), Tattlands, Stainforth, Giggleswick, York, gentleman. Dec. 20; Wm. Hartley, solicitor, Settle, York. Jan. 13; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

WESTBURY (Right Hon. Richard Baron), Westbury, Wilts, late of 75, Lancaster Gate, Hyde Park, Middlesex. Jan. 7; Harrison and Co., solicitors, 19, Bedford Row, London. Jan. 21; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BAKER (Caroline), 2, Derwent-place, Birchfield-road, Aston, Warwick, spinster. Dec. 30; J. S. Canning, solicitor, 44, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.

BRISTOWE (Stephen), 21, Silver-street, Golden-square, Middlesex, cheesemonger. Dec. 20; C. R. and H. Cuff, solicitors, 82, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross, Middlesex.

BURROWES (Isabella M.), 2, Eccleston-square, Middlesex, and of Calverden Lodge, Tunbridge Wells, Kent, widow. Dec. 31; Walker and Martineau, solicitors, 13, King's-road, Gray's Inn, Middlesex.

DREVER (John), Tudor Villa, Winson-green, near Birmingham, Esq., a retired surgeon in H.M.'s Madras army. Dec. 30; E. W. Crosse, solicitor, 4, Bell-yard, Doctors' Commons, London.

FELTON (Sarah), formerly of High-park House, Albert-road, Aston-park, near Birmingham, late of 2, Derwent-place, Birchfield-road, Aston, widow. Dec. 30; Jno. S. Canning, solicitor, 44, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.

FOX (Thos.), sen., Thurlton, Norfolk, shopkeeper. Dec. 6; J. Copeman and Son, solicitors, Loddon, Norfolk.

FREER (John B.), Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwick, Esq. Dec. 13; H. O. and T. Hunt, solicitors, Stratford-upon-Avon.

GIBBS (Jos.), Ley's Farm, Lissington, Derby, farmer. Jan. 10; John Bamford, solicitor, Ashborne, Derbyshire.

HALE (Wm.), Ropley, Southampton, yeoman. Dec. 24; Blackmore and Sons, solicitors, Alresford, Hants.

HASLAM (Robert), Bolton, builder. Dec. 15; J. Gerrard, solicitor, 21, Acres-field, Bolton.

HOKER (Samuel), Waterhouses, near Ashton-under-Lyne, yeoman. Dec. 18; Rushton, Armitstead, and Co., solicitors, Mealhouse-lane, Bolton-le-Moors.

HOWE (James), Swindon, builder. Jan. 1; Kinneir and Tombs, solicitors, Swindon, Wilts.

HUTCHINSON (James), Bishop Auckland, Durham, grocer and parish clerk. Jan. 10; Bowser and Ward, solicitors, Bishop Auckland.

JONES (Hugh), Rumworth, Lancaster, brickmaker. Dec. 15; Armitstead and Co., solicitors, 1, Mealhouse-lane, Bolton-le-Moors.

KEENE (James), Godney, Meare, Somerset, cattle dealer. Nov. 30; S. Hobbs, jun., solicitor, Wells, Somerset.

LEWIS (Lieut.-Col. John), 27, Dorchester-place, Marylebone, Middlesex. Law and Co., solicitors, 10, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

NEWBERRY (Elizabeth), Poole Cottage, Bandwick, Gloucester, spinster. Jan. 1; W. J. Fraser, solicitor, 78, Dean-street, Soho, Middlesex.

ORAM (Jas.), late of Tottenham-road, Kingsland, Middlesex, gentleman, formerly a watchmaker. Jan. 1; H. Cowlard, solicitor, 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

PARSONS (Jos.) Gloucester, innkeeper. Dec. 31; J. Wm. S. Dix, solicitor, Exchange-buildings, Bristol.

PONIATOWSKI (Joseph M. X. François Jean, Prince), 28, Ebury-street, Pimlico, Middlesex, formerly a senator of the French Empire. Dec. 1; Lawrie, Keen, and Rogers, solicitors, 24, Knight Rider-street, Doctors'-commons, London.

SMITH (Rev. Edward), formerly of Ashley, Cambridge, late of 11, Queen's Parade, Bath. Jan. 1; H. Cowlard, solicitor, 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

SWYER (John), Cottage Farm, Lytchett Minster, Dorset, farmer. Dec. 31; H. W. Dickinson, solicitor, Fish-street, Poole, Dorset.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Thursday, Nov. 6.

By Messrs. NEWBON and HARDING, at the Mart.

Soho.—Nos. 12 and 13, Macclesfield-street, freehold—sold for £1080.

Bloomsbury.—No. 15, Gloucester-street, freehold—sold for £760.

Brunswick-mews.—Improved ground rents of £69 16s., term 21 years—sold for £610.

Islington. — Nos. 31, 55, and 57, Canonbury-park North, term 35 years—sold for £1660.

Friday, Nov. 7.

By Messrs. VENTOM, BULL, and COOPER, at the Mart.

Life interest of a gentleman, aged 50 years, in £342 Three per Cents, and of one-sixth part of £1500 Consols; also a policy for £700—sold for £510.

Tuesday, Nov. 11.

By Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER, at the Mart.

Yorkshire, Melbourne. — Rentcharge of £80 per annum, secured upon a freehold estate of 248 acres—sold for £1975.

Sussex, near West Grinstead.—The Woldringfold Estate, comprising mansion and 271a. 3r. 2p., freehold—sold for £12,700.

Wednesday, Nov. 12.

By Messrs. RUSHWORTH, ABBOTT, and Co., at the Mart.

Regent's-park.—No. 24, Sussex-place, with stabling, term 48 years—sold for £2600.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISONS.

HIGHWAY—NONUSER—LOCAL ACT.—A strip of land which has been declared by Act of Parliament to be a public highway will not of necessity become so until all the provisions of the Act for making and creating it have been strictly complied with. Where commissioners, by their award under a local Act, set out a public highway, but no road was ever made in pursuance of the award, and the proposed road always remained impassable to the public: Held, that the mere allotment of a piece of land by the commissioners was not sufficient to make it a public highway, and that all the regulations of the Act of Parliament must be complied with before it became such a highway as was in the contemplation of the Legislature, and before the parish could be called upon to repair it: (Cubitt v. Maxse, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 244. C. P.)

THE PRODUCTION OF PRISONERS AT CORONERS' INQUESTS.

COMMENTING on the case of Re Reardon, the Irish Law Times and Solicitors' Journal says:—Writing upon the office of coroner (7 Ir. L. T. 483), before the decision now reported was pronounced, we, as lawyers, should decline to dilate upon matters so assured as that it is the proper function of the coroner's inquisition to ascertain how and by what means the deceased came by his or her death; and that the police magistrates have no jurisdiction whatever to direct or authorise the production at an inquest of a prisoner committed to custody, under remand upon a criminal charge. And we are, therefore, not surprised to find that, in these respects, the decision of Re Reardon is confirmatory of our views. It was admitted as a matter of course that the magistrate did not possess this jurisdiction, however convenient was the practice which, so long as it was uncontroverted, assumed the existence of a power in aid of an ancient tribunal, and in furtherance of the ends of municipal and of natural justice. By what procedure the reversal of this practice was decreed, need not now be said. By what illusory and needlessly aggressive arguments the inspiration of the Crown was propagated need not be recalled from the oblivion which may happily overtake the echoes of a police-office. But, if ever it should happen to be said that coroners' findings should not be regarded because coroners' juries have acquitted prisoners who were afterwards tried and convicted, it will be remembered that human imperfection prevails beyond the precincts of the coroner's court; that, but lately, a judge of our Court of Bankruptcy has had occasion publicly to denounce that meddlesome officialism which would arrogate to itself the conduct of prosecutions that have failed, to say the least of it; and perhaps attention may be directed to certain other inquisitions of office, instituted by governmental departments, encroaching less constitutionally on the functions of the ordinary criminal administration of the land. Fortunately, in Reardon's case the effort failed to secure his committal by the magistrate before the coroner's inquisition, and equally failed the effort to prevent his being present at the inquest. But we are bound to say that, when the matter came to be discussed before the Court of Queen's Bench, the attitude then adopted on behalf of the Crown was irreproachable. It was extremely expedient that the question involved should be presented for judicial consideration; the Crown did not oppose ex-officio, but, bowing to the discretion of the court, submitted that, lest justice might possibly be frustrated, special circumstances should be shown in order to warrant the granting of the writ; at the same time intimating that, in a proper case, the Crown would apply for the writ and save the prisoner the expense of doing so. This line of interposition was conceived in a most proper spirit, and was quite what was to be expected under the skilful and sensible auspices of the learned law adviser. And we are sure that, acting in the same spirit, and acquiescing in the high authority of the decision in Re Reardon (a case which every coroner should peruse and perpend), the Crown will, in future, move for a writ of habeas corpus to have any prisoner in attendance at a coroner's inquest, and so that he may there be examined as a witness, wherever it happens that the prisoner and the coroner so desire, and that, in the opinion of the coroner and of the Crown, the presence of the prisoner would not tend to frustrate the ends of justice.

But there remains another question of much moment. Is the police regulation to continue, under which prisoners are to be brought, in the first instance, before the inferior court of the magistrate, instead of before the coroner's court which, as Fitzgerald, J., in all reason declared should have the prior conduct of the preliminary inquiry? One would suppose that the very contention, that it is the office of an inquest to ascertain merely the cause of the death in question, would suggest that that inquiry should be answered before assuming that it was caused by homicide and accusing a suspected person. But, as the coroner's function is of a nature more extensive, the propriety of bringing the suspected person before him, in the first instance, rests upon other reasons. The bringing of the suspected person face to face with the victim may lead, from demeanour, to important suggestions of guilt or innocence. And, if the person suspected can adduce substantial and satisfactory proof of innocence, or that it appear that the death was occasioned by natural or accidental causes, it is surely well that the cost of an expensive prosecution should be saved by his immediate discharge, and that the imprisonment, harrassment, and tardiness of trial and redress which he might otherwise have to endure, should be avoided; instead of having the accused person committed for trial by the magistrates, as in duty bound, upon a mere prima facie case against him, and made the victim of a subsebuent abortive prosecution. And it is of some further consequence that persons whom the law presumes to be innocent should not have increased difficulties cast upon them in the way of disproving their guilt, and that the expense, the delay, and the complications, should be avoided, which are occasioned by having to apply for the writ of habeas corpus. The writ is a novelty in these cases, and it is difficult to forsee all its possible consequences. But we can well conceive that expense, delay, and complications, may indeed arise from the provision that, when the inquest has concluded (eventuating, it may be, in acquittal), the prisoner is unconditionally to be remitted back to custody and so detained. When traditional usage is ousted and overriden by sudden reformations, without recourse to the Legislature, and some system has to be substituted forthwith as a temporary expedient, it is hardly possible to consider and provide for every contingency, and a judicial imbroglio becomes only too possible. Certainly, the conflict of concurrent jurisdictions which has been brought about is attended with extreme inconvenience, and may not improbably lead to a failure of justice, if not to positive injustice to individuals; while, it is anything but seemly and conducive to the due administration of justice that a public scandal should be created by the deliberate disregard of the coroner's authority, and the undisguised attempt to set above it that of an inferior court, and to subject it to the surveillance and half-contemptuous toleration of a police regime. What can be more grievously detrimental to the interests of justice, than the reiterated verdicts of jury after jury, denouncing this system and its unhappy results in case after case? What more lamentable, than to find a judicial personage—whose high office and functions are denoted by the fact that the Lord Chief Justice himself is our supreme coroner—flouted by a sub-constable, acting on his veritable or supposed instructions from the Castle, who refuses, as in the Marron case at Belfast, to receive the corroner's warrant to bring up the suspected person, until he obtains his superior officer's permission, and, that having been graciously accorded, perfunctorily deposits the warrant in his pocket, and[takes] it upon himself to pronounce a dead letter; while the jury append to their verdict a statement "that, owing to what they considered important evidence being deliberately kept back by the Crown authorities, they refuse to find such a verdict as otherwise might be warranted in the case." May not this state of things well recall the saying of Bentham, that it is even more important that justice should seem to be pure, than that it should be pure in reality? Were we not justified in our former paper, as it were almost by anticipation, in saying, as we now emphatically repeat: "If a function is no longer of public utility, it surely does not mend matters to permit the function still to be exercised, but to render its exercise so obnoxious, and the consequences of its exercise so invidious, that, in the course of time, it may come to be abated as a common nuisance. It may be that, as the constable permits a delinquent to proceed until he commits himself beyond yea or nay, so, the coroner is to be allowed to indulge in the discharge of his duties, under watchful police supervision, until the time comes for direct intervention in order to supersede the office of coroner altogether. But if the office is to be superseded (we trust that it will not), is this, too, only to be accomplished by waging a long conflict of authority with officers who are endeavouring to perform, to the best of their ability, an onerous, delicate, and ill-paid public service?"

HAMMERSMITH POLICE COURT.

(Before Mr. BRIDGE.)

Wednesday, Nov. 12.

THE GASLIGHT AND COKE COMPANY v. O'BRIEN.

The City of London Gas Act 1868—Revision of price—Operation of award of Commissioners.

IN this case Major O'Brien was summoned for arrears of gas rates amounting to £5 2s. 9d. made up of 2s. 6d. rent of meter, and 2s. 9d. charge for cutting off the gas, the residue being for gas supplied.

F. O. Crump (instructed by Bartholomew) appeared for the defendant and first took objection to the charge for cutting off the gas. The defendant had left his house and thereupon the company cut off the gas, for which they sought to charge.

The company's officer referred to a section of their Act giving power to the company to cut off gas fourteen days after default made in payment duly demanded.

Mr. BRIDGE held that under that section there was clearly no power to charge for disconnecting the pipes of a consumer who had ceased to occupy the house.

The charge for gas was then disputed, and the company's officers based their claim on sects. 57 and 66 of the City of London Gas Act 1868. The former section says that if in the month of Jan. 1871, or any subsequent year, application is made to the Board of Trade for a revision of the scale of illuminating power and price, commissioners shall be appointed; and by sect. 66 the commissioners so appointed shall, after hearing the applicants, fix an illuminating power and price, to take effect as on and from the 1st Jan. in the year of revision. Notices had been issued by the company early in December that the charge would be 5s. 5d. per 1000 feet, or such other price as might be fixed by the Board of Trade. Subsequently meter index cards were issued to the consumers, and among them to the defendant, on which the price was stated to be 5s. 5d. per 1000 feet. The defendant ceased to consume gas at his house in respect of which he was charged before the commissioners appointed by the Board of Trade had revised the price. In April they raised the maximum price of the gas to 6s. 3d., but beyond a printed notice to this effect on the backs of the accounts, no notification was made to the consumers.

The learned counsel contended upon this state of facts, that the defendant was not liable to pay more than 5s. 5d. per 1000ft. To hold otherwise would be to import into his contract a term unascertained until after the contract had terminated. The only contract binding upon the defendant was that contained in the index card. If the revision of the commissioners was to have a retroactive effect, the greatest hardship would be inflicted upon consumers who could make no certain contracts, and he contended that the award of the commissioners could have no effect until notified to the consumers.

Mr. BRIDGE said that he should hold that the notice issued in December relative to the possible increase in price by the Board of Trade was binding, where no other contract had been entered into. In the present case the index card had been issued subsequently to such notice, and that constituted the only contract binding on the defendant. Had such cards not been issued, or had they contained the notification which was issued previously, he should have held that the defendant was liable to pay the increased price as and from the 1st Jan. The company not being represented by counsel, he would adjourn the summons for a week, but intimated his opinion in order that the company might know how to act.

COMPANY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—CONTRACT TO DELIVER IRON—ACTION FOR BREACH OF.—On the 22nd Nov. 1871, the plaintiff wrote to the defendants, asking their lowest price for 800 tons of iron delivered at P., at the rate of 200 tons per month, March, April, May, and June, 1872; to which on the 24th Nov., the defendants replied, "We beg to offer you 800 tons at 69s. per ton delivered at P., and waiting your reply by return, remain," &c. The plaintiff did not reply by "return," but on the 27th Nov. wrote to the defendants as follows, "Your price is high; if I made the quantity 1200 tons, delivery 200 tons a month for the first six months of next year, I suppose you would make the price lower." In answer to this the defendants, on the 28th Nov., wrote as follows to the plaintiff, "In reply to yours of yesterday we are willing to make you an offer of further 400 tons, 200 tons in Jan., 200 tons in Feb., at the same price we quoted you in ours of the 24th inst., though the rate of freight will, doubtless, be higher than that of the following months. Let us have your reply by return of post as to whether you accept our offers of, together, 1200 tons." No reply was actually sent by return, but on the same day, the 28th Nov., the plaintiff wrote and posted a letter to the defendants, "You can enter me 800 tons on the terms and conditions named in your favour of the 24th inst., but I trust you will enter the other 400 tons, making in all 1200 tons referred to in my last at 68s." These two letters crossed each other in the course of post, and on the 29th Nov., the defendants replied to the plaintiff's letter of the 28th, that they could not "book his order for 1200 tons at less than 69s., and even that offer they could only leave on hand for reply by to-morrow before 12 o'clock." The plaintiff did not reply within that time, and subsequently the defendants declined on that ground to deliver any iron at all to him, whereupon he brought this action for breach of contract, contending that, at all events, there was a binding contract for 800 tons. The majority of the Court of Exchequer (Bramwell, Channell, and Pigott, BB., Kelly, C.B., dissenting), gave judgment for the defendants, on the ground that there was no contract to deliver the 800 tons, as the plaintiff did not accept the defendants' offer of the 24th Nov., his letter of the 28th Nov. being too late for that purpose; and the defendants' offer of the 1200 tons was only open until noon on the 30th, and was not accepted within that time. The defendants' letter of the 28th Nov. was one offer of 1200 tons, and not two separate offers of 800 and 400 tons. Kelly, C.B., on the contrary, gave judgment for the plaintiff, being of opinion that the offers of the 800 and 400 tons in the defendants' letter of the 28th Nov. were distinct and separate, and that the offer of the 800 tons in their letter of the 24th Nov. had been kept open, and was acepted by the plaintiff in his letter of the 28th Nov., by which the defendants were bound. Upon appeal by the plaintiff to the Exchequer Chamber, the majority of that court (Blackburn, Keating, Brett, Grove, and Archibald, JJ., dissentientibus Quain and Honyman, JJ.), affirmed the judgment of the majority of the court below, and upon the same grounds; but Quain and Honyman, JJ., were of a contrary opinion, and held, with Kelly, C.B., that there was a good contract for the 800 tons, and that, therefore, the judgment below should be reversed. Per curiam, "Reply by return of post," does not mean exclusively "reply by letter by return of post." A reply by telegram, or by verbal message, or by any means, not later than a letter sent by post, would reach its destination, would equally satisfy the requisition. Two persons each in ignorance at the time of what the other had done, write a letter to each other on the same day, the one offering to buy a certain article at a certain price, and the other offering to sell the same article at the same price. The letters cross each other in the post. The majority of the court (Blackburn, Keating, Brett, Grove, and Archibald, JJ.) expressed their strong opinion that such cross offers would not make a binding contract, and that the offers in one of such letters could not amount to an acceptance of the offer contained in the other: (Tinn v. Hoffman and Co., 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 271. Ex. Ch.)

WINDING-UP—CONTRIBUTORY—TRANSFER OF SHARES—ALLOWANCE FOR VALUE OF GOODWILL.—Application was made by the executors of a deceased shareholder, who had been settled on the list of contributories of a company, that B., who had formerly been a shareholder in the company, but had executed a transfer of his shares some time previous to the commencement of the winding-up, might be settled on the list of contributories. B. was a director when he executed the transfer, the validity of which was disputed on two grounds—first, that it was made in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme to relieve B. and some of his co-directors of their liability; and, secondly, that the provisions of the articles of association with respect to transfers had not been complied with. The deed of settlement required that upon a transfer of shares the consent of the directors should be obtained, that a certificate of consent should be given, which was to be entered in the share register, and that a deed of covenant, to be prepared under the direction of the directors, should be executed by the transferee. B. obtained the consent and certificate of the directors, but M., the transferee, did not execute any deed of covenant, the directors not having required him to do so; and no objections were made to the transfer at two subsequent general meetings of the company. By a clause in the deed of settlement, it was provided that "if ever the losses of the company shall have absorbed, not only the whole of the fund called the reserve fund, but also 80 per cent. on the gross amount of the capital subscribed for, the said company shall then be ipso facto dissolved, and the board of directors for the time being shall within twenty-one days, or as soon after such losses being incurred as the board possibly can, and they are hereby required to call a special general meeting of the shareholders in such manner as is hereinafter mentioned, and lay a statement of the affairs of the company before such meeting." By other clauses in the deed, the directors were to make up to 31st Dec. in each year a full statement and account of the debts, credits, and liabilities, and the profits, gains, and losses made or incurred by the company; and were to produce at every annual meeting a report of the receipts and disbursements for the year preceding, and of the particulars and amount of the funds or property of the company, and of the state and condition thereof. In 1858 the company was in an unsatisfactory state, and an accountant, employed to investigate the affairs, reported to the directors that the losses had absorbed 80 per cent. on the gross amount of the capital subscribed for. In the said report, the accountant made no allowance for the value of the goodwill of the company as a going concern. A special meeting was not called, but the annual general meeting occurred soon after the said report was made. At that meeting the said report was not submitted to the shareholders, and the accounts laid before them did not show the true position of the company. The shareholders were, however, informed that the increased claims upon the company had so reduced the margin of profits that the directors were unable to recommend the payment of any dividend for the past year. Held (per Lord Cairns and Lord Hatherley, affirming the judgment of Lord Chancellor Hatherley; Lord Chelmsford and Lord Colonsay dissentientibus), first, that the transfer from B. to M. was valid; and, secondly, that the accountant ought, in his report, to have made an allowance for the value of the goodwill, and that in the absence of such allowance, the proof of the occurrence of the contingency contemplated by the deed of settlement, failed. Sect. 30 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, enacts that the discovery of any defect or error in the appointment of a person acting, or who may have acted, as a director, or that such person was disqualified, shall not invalidate acts done by him either alone or jointly with other directors before such discovery. Per Lord Cairns. —That the error of the directors in being satisfied with the execution of the transfer by a person becoming a director instead of requiring the execution of a deed, was such an error as was contemplated by the above section, and that all the acts done by the directors before such discovery were consequently valid and binding on the company. The case having been decided after so much difference of opinion, and the parties having been to a great extent responsible for the irregularity and confusion that occurred, no order as to costs was made. (Murray v. Bush, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 217. H. of L.)

DEBENTURE PAYABLE TO BEARER—NEGOTIABILITY—PROMISSORY NOTE.—A debenture of a limited company, registered under the Companies Act 1862, payable to bearer on a particular day in the year 1872, with interest in the meantime, but liable to be "drawn" and paid off before that time, was sold by the company to M. in May 1869, and stolen from him in July of the same year. Plaintiff, at the end of the year 1871, purchased from one S., who had since absconded, this debenture, which had been "drawn" in Oct. 1871, and demanded payment thereof from the company; but the company, having received notice from M. of the debenture having been stolen from him, refused to pay it to the plaintiff, who brought an action against the company to recover the amount of it. It was found at the trial that the plaintiff had become the holder of the debenture for value, and without notice, and that similar instruments had been treated as negotiable: Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Even if the instrument had not been under seal it would not be a promissory note on account of its liability to be drawn and paid off before the t me mentioned; and the custom of treating such instruments as negotiable, being recent, could not alter the general rule of law: (Crouch v. The Credit Foncier of England (Limited), 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 250. Q.B.)

ROLLS COURT.

Saturday, Nov. 8.

Re LONDON AND AUSTRALIAN AGENCY CORPORATION (LIMITED); Ex parte BLAKE, COOK, AND CLAPHAM.

Company—Voluntary winding-up—Three petitions—Liquidators—Supervision order.

IN August last Mr. Blake, a holder of twenty-five shares in this corporation, presented a petition for a compulsory winding-up order. Two other petitions—one by Mr. Cook and one by Mr. Clapham—by much larger shareholders, were filed about the same time praying for a supervision order. Summonses to appoint liquidators were adjourned in order to give the company time to hold meetings. Accordingly a very numerously-attended meeting was held, when it was resolved to wind-up voluntarily, and to appoint the secretary, Mr. Latchmore, and Mr. Ford liquidators. At a subsequent meeting these resolutions were confirmed. The petitions now coming on to be heard,

Roxburgh, Q.C. and F. C. J. Millar, in support of a compulsory winding-up, contended that the appointment of liquidators was invalid, as having taken place at the first meeting, and asked that any order to be made should be made on Blake's petition as having been the first advertised, though not the first presented.

Waller, Streeten, Southgate, Q.C. (Graham Hastings with him), Fischer, Q.C. (Somers Lewis with him), Langworthy and Law for other parties.

Sir G. JESSEL made one order on the three petitions for continuing the winding-up under the supervision of the court, and gave the costs of the three petitions. The carriage of the order was given to Mr. Cook, though advertised after Mr. Blake's petition.

Solicitors: J. J. Darley; Mercer and Mercer.

Re WESTERN OF CANADA OIL, LANDS, AND WORKS COMPANY (LIMITED).

Company—Adjournment of petitions to wind-up—No steps taken—Order made.

THE two petitions in this matter now came on for hearing, having been adjourned by the Lord Chancellor on the 4th August last, as reported in our issue of the 9th August, with a view to giving the company an opportunity of inquiry or arrangement. It will be remembered that the petitions had been filed by debenture-holders in respect of interest due on their charges. It now appeared that nothing had in the mean time been done, except sending to Canada a person who has not yet made any final report.

Bagshawe, Jackson, Q.C., and Locock Webb for the petitioners.

Hon. E. Butler supported the petitions.

Sir R. Baggallay, Q.C., Whitehorne, T. A. Roberts, and Charles Walker for debenture-holders, opposing the petitions.

Davey, for the trustees of a deed securing the debentures.

Sir G. JESSEL made the usual order to wind-up the company, as no evidence was before him as to what had been done since the last adjournment, and he must therefore assume that the respondents had neglected to avail themselves of the indulgence extended to them on the former occasion.

Solicitors, H. W. Vallance; Wilkinson and Son, Lewis, Munns and Longden.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MISSING WILL—PRESUMPTION OF REVOCATION—EVIDENCE—DECLARATION OF TESTATOR. —A will, which had remained in the custody of the testator since the time of its execution, was not forthcoming at his death. A draft was propounded, and evidence of declaration was admitted to show an intention to adhere to the will. On the other side evidence was offered to show that the testator did not intend to leave his property in the manner in which it was disposed of by his will, and that he had destroyed it by burning it. Held, that such declarations were admissible, not as evidence of destruction, but of intention not to adhere to the will: (Keen v. Keen and others, 9 L. T. Rep. N. S. 247. Prob.)

SETTLED ESTATES—INTERIM INVESTMENT OF PURCHASE-MONEYS.—The purchase-money of land sold under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act is cash under the control of the court for the purposes of investment under the General Order made in pursuance of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 10. Re Thorold's Settled Estate (L. Rep. 14 Eq. 31), followed; Re Boyd's Settled Estates (L. Rep. W. N., 1873, p. 113; 55 Law Times, 100), dissented from: (Re Taddy's Devised Estates, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 243. V.C. M.)

PORTIONS—ADVANCEMENT—GIFT OF SHARE OF RESIDUE BY WILL—SATISFACTION.—A grandfather's will contained a trust term for raising portions for his son's younger children, and provided that in case the son should at any time during his life advance or pay any sum of money to or for the use of any of his younger children, then, unless the contrary should be directed by him, any sum so advanced should be in full or part satisfaction of the portion to which the younger child would have been entitled under the grandfather's will: Held (reversing the decision of the Master of the Rolls), that a gift by the son's will of a share of residue to one of his younger children was not a payment or advancement within the meaning of the proviso: (Cooper v. Cooper, 29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 321. Ch.)

COUNTY COURTS.

BRADFORD COUNTY COURT.

Sept. 26 and 30.

(Before W. T. S. DANIEL, Q.C., Judge.)

HARTLEY (Administratrix) v. THOMPSON.

Administration—Transactions with administrators.

A transaction with a person entitled to administration not validated after administration unless for the benefit of intestate's estate. After a decree in Chancery for the administration of the intestate's estate, the administratrix is not at liberty to ratify, or refuse to allow an action to be brought in her name to defeat the transaction: (see Williams on Exors. 391, and the authorities there referred to.)

Phillips, instructed by Dawson and Greaves, Bradford, for plaintiff.

Robinson (Berry and Robinson), Bradford, for defendant.

His HONOUR.—This was an action of detinue for the illegal detention by the defendant of certain stuff pieces, the damages being laid at £50. The plaintiff is the administratrix of Joseph Hartley, who died on the 13th Sept. 1872, intestate and insolvent. He was a stuff manufacturer in a small way of business, and employed weavers who wove his pieces at their own homes on commission. The defendant was one of such weavers, and at the intestate's death was a creditor for work done as a weaver, for £40, or thereabouts. Several of the other weavers in the village were creditors for work done as weavers, and had woven pieces in their possession which they claimed and were entitled to retain by way of lien as security for their debts. Shortly after the intestate's death, one Bently, who was a considerable creditor of the intestate for goods supplied, being unable to obtain payment of his debt from the plaintiff, sent round to some of the weavers who had pieces in their possession, paid them the debts for which they held the pieces as security, and they gave up the pieces to him, and these he endeavoured to sell or otherwise make available for his debt, to the prejudice of the defendant and other bonâ fide creditors of the intestate. Under these circumstances the plaintiff and the defendant, on the 2nd Oct. 1872, consulted Messrs. Dawson and Greaves, of Bradford, as to the proper course to be adopted to protect the estate for the benefit of the creditors, and the advice given was that the plaintiff should take out letters of administration with as little delay as possible, and that in the mean time money should be found by some friend to take the pieces out of the hands of the weavers on payment of the debts due to them, and thereby secure the surplus value of the pieces for the benefit of the estate, and the suggestion was made that the defendant should find the money for the purpose, but he did not then agree to do so. The solicitors then received instructions from the plaintiff and defendant to prepare the necessary documents for obtaining letters of administration. The defendant agreed to be one of the sureties in the administration bond, and a Mr. Waterhouse was named as the other. On the following day (3rd Oct.) the plaintiff, defendant, and Waterhouse, called and executed the bond and other necessary papers, and the grant of administration was afterwards duly obtained, but not until the 27th Oct., some delay having occurred in remitting the money required for payment of the stamp and official fees. On the 7th Oct. the defendant, accompanied by the plaintiff, went round to several of the weavers who held pieces, upon which they had liens, paid them the sums due to them, and took from them the pieces they then held. The sum paid by the defendant amounted to £15 2s., and the pieces taken by the defendant are the pieces for the detention of which the action is brought. Early in November 1872, an administration summons was taken out in Chancery by a creditor for the administration of the intestate's estate. This summons was served on the plaintiff. She took it to her solicitors, Messrs. Dawson and Greaves, who appeared for her upon it; and on the 11th Nov. the common decree for the administration of the intestate's personal estate was made. The usual advertisements were afterwards issued for creditors, and under them the defendant made a claim as creditor for £61 10s. 6d. (which included the £15 2s. paid by him to the weavers), and this claim was duly allowed. The defendant having the pieces in his possession, Messrs. Dawson and Greaves, as solicitors of the plaintiff, by the direction of the chief clerk, applied to the defendant to deliver the pieces to them for the purposes of the administration, offering to pay him the money he had advanced to pay off the weavers with interest and costs. The sum actually offered (and which Messrs. Dawson and Greaves were ready to pay defendant) was £18, which was more than sufficient for those purposes. The defendant refused to receive the money or to deliver the pieces. He insisted upon retaining them; his words were, "He would not have the money; he would stick to what he had got." He was then asked whether he had the pieces in his possession. He said he had sold some, not saying how many or for how much, and the rest he had, and they were worth £40 and £50. This course of proceeding by the defendant having been communicated to the chief clerk, Messrs. Dawson and Greaves, as solicitors for the plaintiff, were directed to bring this action in the name of the plaintiff. After being served with the summons the defendant communicated with the plaintiff, and prevailed upon her to endeavour to stop this action by giving a notice to the registrar of this court that the action had been brought without her authority, and he procured an attorney at Leeds to draw up a notice to that effect, and which the plaintiff signed, and this notice has been put in evidence by the defendant, with some correspondence which afterwards passed between the attorney and Messrs. Dawson and Greaves upon the subject. If the plaintiff had adhered to the notice she was thus induced to sign, she would through her ignorance have been led into committing a contempt of the Court of Chancery, for which she would have been liable to be committed, and if not actually imprisoned, would have subjected herself to the payment of what to her would have been a large sum for costs. The facts as stated by me have been proved upon the evidence of the plaintiff and Mr. Greaves, and the plaintiff, as far as she could, showed her willingness to acknowledge a right in the defendant to retain the pieces to cover his own debt. And on behalf of the defendant it was urged that, as the defendant took possession of the pieces in question with the authority of the plaintiff, although that transaction took place before the grant of administration, yet as such grant was afterwards obtained, and before the decree in the administration suit was made, the transaction which would have been good at law if it had been completed after the grant, would be validated by relation, and Williams on Executors, p. 391 (6th edit.), was relied on as an authority for that proposition; but on examination it will be seen that the cases there referred to are exceptional instances and do not support the defendant's contention. And in the same work the cases of Doe v. Glenn (1 Ad. & Ell. 49) and Morgan v. Thomas (8 Ex. 302) are cited, which show that the relation exists only in those cases in which the act done is for the benefit of the estate, or there be fraud; as where a man takes goods as executor de son tort, sells them, receives the purchase-money, then takes out administration and brings an action to recover the very goods he has sold and been paid for. Here the estate was benefited only to the extent of the money paid by the defendant to redeem the pieces from the weaver's, and that money the defendant has been offered before action brought and he refused it, insisting upon retaining the pieces for his whole debt, thus doing the very wrong which he complained of when done by Bently, and thus making his detention a wrongful act as to the whole. There being evidence that the value of the pieces he now has is between £40 and £50, and the defendant not having given any evidence as to how many pieces he sold or what he received for them, I am justified as against the defendant as a wrong-doer in treating the value of the whole of the pieces detained by him as £50, and judgment will be entered against him for that sum, with costs. Although the defendant refused the offer to pay him his advances, he may still have a claim in equity to be repaid that sum, which claim he may bring forward in the administration, but over that I have no jurisdiction or control. If, however, the plaintiff is authorised and consents to make the deduction now, and the amount can be agreed upon, the judgment may be reduced accordingly, and the judgment may be still further reduced, if the defendant will give up the pieces he now holds and their value can be agreed upon, such value being the amount of the further deduction, but unless these matters are consented to, the judgment will be entered for £50 and costs; and the defendant will take such further steps elsewhere as he may be advised. If the Judicature Act were now in operation I could give complete relief, but at present I have only the jurisdiction of a Court of Common Law.

CHELTENHAM COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Nov. 1.

(Before C. SUMNER, Esq., Judge.)

MORSE v. SOLOMON.

Costs in interpleader—Application.

F. Marshall applied for costs in this case. His Honour would remember that a short time ago he committed a young gentleman named Maule for a term for non-payment of a judgment debt. It having come to Mr. Solomon's knowledge that Mr. Maule had an interest in a horse, the animal was seized instead of executing the warrant of commitment, but Mr. Morse subsequently claimed it as his, and under circumstances that led him (Marshall) to believe it was nothing less than a conspiracy between two or three who were concerned in it to make out the horse to be his property, and not Maule's. He had had a great deal of trouble in getting up the case, and had examined fifteen witnesses, several of whom he subpœnaed, and it was only within the last three days that Mr. Gabb, Mr. Morse's attorney, had sent him a note saying he disclaimed the horse. He therefore asked his Honour to order costs as in an ordinary case.

Gabb, on behalf of Mr. Morse, submitted that it was not a case in which his Honour ought to order costs, the circumstances being somewhat peculiar.

The Registrar explained to his Honour the circumstances under which the action was brought. The horse was seized by Mr. Solomon, and Mr. Morse paid the amount into court, under protest, in order to recover possession of it, and then brought the present action, which he had since withdrawn from.

Marshall said the action was withdrawn last Tuesday, after all the work had been done.

Gabb then submitted whether his Honour had power to order costs. The money which Mr. Morse had paid to redeem the horse had been paid into court, and then they had withdrawn the case, and had given notice they had withdrawn it. It was a case in which Mr. Marshall's client ought to think himself very fortunate if he got the money at all, and if it had gone on, there was some doubt what the result would have been.

His HONOUR.—So Mr. Marshall says.

Gabb, resuming, said at all events the matter was arranged, and there was no object in bringing it into court. There were, he submitted, no rules to enable his Honour to order costs as in an ordinary action. The plaintiff had the power of withdrawing from the case, and it was not for his Honour to say whether he had thereby rendered himself liable for costs. The horse belonged to his client, and was at livery at the Royal Hotel in his name. It was not in Mr. Maule's possession, but Mr. Maule was authorised to sell it, and had an interest in it. That being so, he presumed that it was hardly necessary for Mr Marshall to see the fifteen witnesses, as no doubt he knew what his case was before he seized the horse. The horse was in another man's stables, and he submitted under all circumstances he was not entitled to costs. He further submitted that the examination of the witnesses was premature, especially seeing that he had not subpœnaed the witnesses out of the district.

Marshall submitted that it rested with an attorney to consult his own convenience in what order he saw his witnesses, especially in a case which might involve some annoyance to the witnesses themselves.

His HONOUR had no doubt he had the power to allow costs in a case of interpleader, as well as other actions. He thought for this purpose the 174th rule made summonses in interpleader cases operate exactly as summonses in ordinary cases. He therefore thought that the notice of abandonment not having been given within five days, the execution creditor was entitled to costs. With regard to the point Mr. Gabb stated that it was necessary he should ascertain what witnesses were material, it would be very inconvenient for him to do so. He thought the much more convenient course was to leave it to the Registrar, and if either party was dissatisfied the matter might then come before him by way of appeal; and if it should be considered necessary, he should be glad to confirm the ruling of the Registrar. Costs to follow, as in ordinary cases.

WILLIAMS v. CHESSHYRE.

Liability of attorney for expenses of witness.

IN this case the plaintiff is a road-maker, and the defendant a solicitor. The action was brought to recover £2 2s., the plaintiff's expenses in a case in which he alleged Mr. Chesshyre required his attendance.

Stroud, who appeared for the plaintiff, stated that the case arose out of an interesting law-suit, in which his friend was concerned for Mr. J. B. Ferryman, who was summoned before the magistrates at the instance of the town commissioners, for not paying the demand made upon him for the making of certain roads in Nauntoncrescent. His friend carried the case to a successful issue, and before the case came on at the police-court he employed the plaintiff. [Chesshyre: "Mr. Ferryman employed him."] Well, Williams's case was that Mr. Chesshyre employed him, and that he told Mr. Chesshyre he had several men at work at Prestbury, but Mr. Chesshyre said, "You go along and see this road, and I will pay you what is fair and reasonable." Upon that his friend took Williams to the locus in quo, and there he made his investigation, and afterwards attended before the magistrates, and he (Stroud) believed that Williams was one of the chief means whereby his friend obtained his triumph at the police court. For that Williams had made his charge of two guineas, and his Honour would say whether it was reasonable. The other question was whether Mr. Chesshyre was liable.

The plaintiff was sworn, and bore out this statement. He created laughter by stating that the reason Mr. Chesshyre would not pay him was because he would not swear there was only 1in. of stone on the road when there were 3in. Mr Chesshyre said, "You come, and whatever you charge I will pay you."

Chesshyre, the defendant, was sworn, and stated that he was concerned in the case referred to for Mr. Ferryman, who was a gentleman of fortune. Before the case came on he recommended Mr. Ferryman to have a road-maker to examine the roads, and accordingly Mr. Ferryman himself went to Mark Williams, and they went together to the road. He wrote to Williams and told him that Mr. Ferryman would pay him what was right, but a charge of two guineas was absurd. He said he would advise Mr. Ferryman to pay what was reasonable, but he (Chesshyre) never promised to pay him personally. Mr. Ferryman was a gentleman of fortune and able to pay his own witnesses, and was quite willing to pay any reasonable charge.

His HONOUR, with regard to the general question as to the liability of an attorney to pay a witness's expenses, said he was not liable unless he made himself so. He did not like to decide the case simply on the ground that the plaintiff was bound to make it out, and had left it in doubt. He thought he ought to take the bolder course, and say the defence was made out. He did think that Williams believed he was employed for Mr. Ferryman; but he could not see why he preferred Mr. Chesshyre's credit to the principal's in the matter.

Judgment for the defendant, with costs.

NORTHAMPTON COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Nov. 3.

Ex parte RINGROSE; Re GIBSON.

Bill of sale—Stock in trade purchased since the bill—Liquidation.

THIS case raised some important points in connection with the subject of bills of sale. It appeared from the affidavits filed in the case, that Mr. John F. Gibson, draper, of Long Buckby, in consideration of £120 advanced to him by Mr. John Ringrose, of the same place, assigned by bill of sale to the latter gentleman, in May 1872, all the stock in trade and furniture which to him were or thereafter should be on his premises, as security for the repayment of the said sum. There was a power given to Ringrose to take peaceable possession of the property after default made by Gibson in payment on demand. On the 4th August in this year Ringrose demanded payment of the £120 to be made on the 8th. Gibson did not pay, and on the 9th Ringrose went to Gibson's house, and told him he intended to realise his security. On Gibson's representations, however, Ringrose consented to wait until the 11th to see if Gibson could find a person to purchase the goods privately, so as to enable him to repay Ringrose. No purchaser being found, on the 11th Ringrose said he should at once realise his security. There was some conflict of testimony as to what passed at the latter interview; but it appeared that early on the morning of the 12th Gibson went to Northampton after sending a letter to Ringrose to inform him of the fact. Ringrose at once instructed Mr. North, an auctioneer, to take possession and sell the goods. North proceeded to Gibson's house at ten in the morning of that day, and, finding the house locked, was unable to seize the property. At two p.m. Gibson filed his petition for liquidation of his affairs; a receiver was at once appointed, and at about six p.m. the receiver took possession, and was immediately followed by North, who also put in a man on behalf of Ringrose. It appeared that nearly all the stock in trade then on the premises had been purchased since the execution of the bill of sale.

Hensman (Norfolk circuit), instructed by Leake, of Long Buckby, now asked the court for an order that the furniture and the proceeds of the stock in trade, which had been since sold, should be given up to Mr. Ringrose. He argued that although at law goods not in existence could not be assigned, yet that there was a sufficient "new act" on the part of Gibson to show his intention that the after acquired goods should pass to Ringrose, but if not, such goods, as soon as they came on to the premises, passed to him in equity. That being so, were they the goods of another person in the possession, order, and disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent of the true owner at the commencement of the bankruptcy? The bankruptcy commenced at two p.m. on the 12th August, but at ten a.m. Ringrose had done all that was lawful and reasonable in trying to take possession. He therefore did not consent to Gibson's possession.

Shoosmith, on behalf of the trustee for the creditors, opposed the application, and contended that Ringrose had not done all he could to get possession. He had allowed Gibson to remain in possession until the last moment. He ought to have seized on the 8th of August. As to the after acquired goods, Gibson had not consented to their passing to Ringrose. The property in them therefore remained with Gibson. Numerous cases were quoted during the argument.

His HONOUR said the case was one of considerable importance and difficulty, and although it had lasted a long time its nature fully justified that fact. He was of opinion, however, after carefully considering the arguments, that Ringrose was entitled to the whole of the stock in trade and furniture on the premises at the commencement of the bankruptcy, and made an order accordingly.

READING COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Oct. 23.

(Before J. H. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

WILSON v. GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Carriage of goods—Personal luggage.

THE plaintiff in this case is a horse dealer living in Reading, and the action was brought to recover £14, the value of some horse clothing belonging to the plaintiff which the defendants lost at Chester, in course of conveyance from Reading to Holyhead, on the way to Dublin.

Gledhill appeared for the plaintiff. The defendants were represented by Mr. Mason, from their Paddington office.

Gledhill stated that the plaintiff was from time to time going to Ireland to purchase horses, and in the winter time he took with him sets of horse clothing, which he put upon the horses he purchased. He had taken them as passengers' luggage. On 30th Sept. 1872 plaintiff took a third class ticket to Dublin, seeing the horse clothing put into the van at Reading and at Chester, where, in the removal from one train to another, the clothing was lost. Plaintiff looked for it in the Holyhead train and missed it. The nature of passengers' luggage was decided in the case of McCrow v. The Great Western Railway Company. The facts were not disputed. No objection was raised to the quantity, and the defendants had notice that it was horse clothing.

Mr. Mason contended that by 5 & 6 Will. 4, Great Western Railway Act, a passenger could only take with him 40lb. weight of articles of personal clothing, and the company were not answerable for merchandise or anything else. He argued that this horse-clothing was merchandise.

His HONOUR: I don't think it is creditable for the company to take such a course. It is right that it should be generally known that nothing is safe on the Great Western Railway except articles of personal clothing. If a gentleman, say a barrister, takes books, or another gentleman a gun, they are not safe on the Great Western Railway.

Gledhill: I take it that this Act must have been repealed; a first-class passenger is now allowed 112lb., a second-class passenger 70lb., and a third-class passenger 56lb.

His HONOUR.—I will adjourn the case, if you like, to look into the law.

Gledhill.—Will your Honour go into the facts of the case? It has been adjourned two courts from no fault of plaintiff's, and the facts are not disputed; so as to avoid the necessity of his coming here again.

The plaintiff was then examined by Gledhill. He said: I took a ticket on 30th Sept, 1872, to go to Dublin, with four sets of horse-clothing, rolled up in the ordinary way. I gave them to the porter, and saw them labelled to North Wall, Dublin. I had been in the habit of travelling by defendants' line to Dublin for two or three years. I always take horse-clothing in the winter time. I have not been refused to be allowed to take them as luggage, nor has the weight been complained of. I saw the luggage in the van at Reading. I asked the porter to remove the clothing at Chester into the Irish train. I found it was not removed into the Irish train, and "blew" the porter up, and told the station master, and he said he would telegragh for them, and I asked him to send them to Dyson's repository, Dublin. I went to Balinasloe fair, which lasted a week. The horse clothing was not forwarded to Dublin. When I got back to Chester the station master said it was forwarded to Dublin. Then they asked me where they should send it to, and I gave them my address. I have not seen it to this time.

His HONOUR refused to allow Mr. Mason to cross-examine the plaintiff, stating that the company ought to be represented by a professional man.

No evidence was offered to dispute the facts, and His HONOUR gave judgment for the plaintiff for the full amount with costs, subject to the question of law.

SWANSEA COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Nov. 3.

(Before T. FALCONER, Esq., Judge.)

LEWIS AND WIFE v. WILLIAMS.

Construction of will—Vesting of legacy.

Arthur Williams, of the South Wales Circuit, instructed by Brown and Collins, appeared for the plaintiffs.

Howell, Llanelly, for the defendant.

His HONOUR gave the following judgment: In this case I forced on the hearing at the last court, and the result illustrates how easily the facts of a case can be ascertained without the formality of pleadings. One David Williams, who died in 1855, in his will dated the 24th May 1863, devised and bequeathed to his wife Anne, a certain farm called Ffolsyrefel, and an annuity of £6 for the term of her natural life should she continue unmarried, and he devised the same farm to the defendant, his grandson William Williams, and his heirs after his wife's decease, on condition that the first two years' rent should be paid to the testator's daughter, Anne Morgan, widow, and subject to a sum of £14, to be paid annually to his son William, during his life, which was to commence two years after the defendant had possession of the said farm. Anne, the wife of the testator, died in 1870, but Anne Morgan, the widow and the daughter of the testator, died two years before her mother—namely, in 1868. It is alleged by the plaintiffs, who are the personal representatives of Anne Morgan, the daughter, that during two years next after the decease of Anne Morgan, the testator's widow, the said farm was let for £50 a year, and it is prayed that it may be declared that the defendant is a trustee of this amount of the rents for the two years next after the decease of Anne Morgan, the daughter of the testator, for the plaintiff, Sarah Anne Williams. There is no interest given by the will to the daughter Anne until after the death of Anne, the widow of the testator. This interest, intended for the benefit of the daughter, is not to take effect until the death of the mother. The interest is not that of a fixed sum as a principal sum of money, the payment of which was delayed, but of rents divisible at an uncertain time from the farms, and these rents were not of a certain amount. The rents were to be paid as they might accrue during the two years after the death of the mother. The claim of the plaintiff seems to be founded on the authority of the case of Wright v. Wilkin (31 L. J. Q. B.; 6 L. T. Rep. 221), where there was a bequest of numerous legacies to various persons of certain definite sums of money, giving an immediate interest to the legatees in such specified sums of money, and the testator devised to the defendant in the action certain real and copyhold estates, and the residue of her personal estate on the express condition that within twelve months he should discharge and pay the legacies, and the testatrix charged and made chargeable her real and personal estate, with the payment of the legacies. The court held that the devise was not a condition working a forfeiture on its non-performance, but a trust. But these facts materially differ from the case before me. Here no interest was intended to pass until the determination of the life estate There is no bequest of a sum certain, the payment of which was delayed. The legatee died during the existence of the life estate of the testator's wife, and it appears to me that under the authority of the case of Pawlett v. Pawlett and others, in dealing with real estate there has existed no interest transmissible to the executors of Ann Morgan, the daughter of the testator.

The plaint was therefore dismissed.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Friday, Nov. 7.

(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR (Selborne) and MELLISH, L. J.)

Ex parte COTE; Re DEVEZE.

Bankruptcy—Remittance on general account—Stoppage in transitu.

THIS was an appeal from a decision of Mr. Registrar Murray, sitting as Chief Judge in Bankruptcy. The debtor, Deveze, carried on business as a general merchant at London and at Lyons, his house at the latter place being managed by his father. The appellant Cote carried on business as a banker at Lyons. Deveze was in the habit of remitting to Cote bills drawn upon persons trading in France and Italy, in exchange for which Cote used to remit him bills drawn upon persons carrying on business in England. On the 11th Jan. 1873, Deveze wrote to Cote enclosing a bill of that date, payable at three months, drawn upon Messrs. Montagu, of Milan, for 26,732 lire 80 cents., and another bill on a French merchant. On the 14th Jan. Cote posted at Lyons a letter to Deveze, enclosing certain bills on firms in London. At half-past five in the evening of the same day, Cote received a letter from Deveze, the father, stating that he had received a telegram from the London house as follows: "Montagu refuses to accept bills. Tell Cote to hold bills of Montagu, and remit nothing." By the regulations of the French post office, the sender of a letter can reclaim it at any time before the departure of the mail. Cote accordingly on receiving Deveze's letter, sent a clerk to reclaim the letter enclosing the bills to Deveze of London, and as through some mistake he had not complied with the requirements of the post office, the letter was sent on and reached Deveze on the 16th Jan. On the 17th Jan. Deveze filed a liquidation petition, and the trustee subsequently obtained possession of the bills contained in the letter. The registrar having refused to order them to be returned to Cote, he appealed.

De Gex Q.C. and Winslow for the appellant.

Davey and Finlay Knight, for the trustee.

Their LORDSHIPS held that the appellant was entitled to have the bills returned to him, inasmuch as he with the assent of the debtor intended and attempted to reclaim the letter containing the bills, and it would be wrong to hold that a mistake as to the mode of reclaiming the letter had the effect of making the property in the bills pass contrary to the intention of both parties to the transaction. Appeal accordingly allowed.

WARRINGTON COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 11.

(Before J. W. HARDEN, Esq., Judge.)

VOISEY v. JONES.

Liquidation—Bill of sale—Consideration—Money advance and promissory note.

IN reference to this case, which was heard at the last court day, his HONOUR now gave his decision in the following terms: On the 25th July 1873 Mr. R. Wilson, a draper in Warrington, filed a petition in this court, with a view to a liquidation of his affairs by arrangement or composition. His creditors resolved to proceed by liquidation; the usual steps were taken, and Lewis Voisey was appointed trustee 20th Aug. 1873, but on proceeding to realise the property of the debtor he found one John Edwin Jones had already taken possession of the household furniture and stock-in-trade by virtue of a bill of sale purporting to have been given to him by the debtor on the 19th April to secure the sum of £355 and interest, and that he had sold or caused to be sold nearly the whole of the household and trade effects of the debtor. Whereupon a summons was taken out calling upon the said John Edwin Jones to show cause why the said bill of sale should not be declared void and ordered to be given up and cancelled, and why the said John Edwin Jones should not be called upon to account to the trustee for all the property of the debtor which had come to the hands of the said J. E. Jones or his agents under the said bill of sale or otherwise. The case came on for hearing before me on the 23rd Oct., Mr. Smyley, of Manchester, representing the trustee, and Mr. Kirby, of Liverpool, the claimant under the bill of sale. When the bill of sale was produced, it purported to have been given for an existing debt of £350 and a further advance of £5 only, and to assign everything in the shop and dwelling-house (except a trifling amount of book debts, books of account, and wearing apparel), unless the sum of £355 and interest should be paid instantly on demand in writing. Mr. Kirby admitted that such a bill of sale would no doubt amount to an act of bankruptcy under ordinary circumstances, but in this case he contended it could not be so considered, inasmuch as the bill of sale was in effect taken in exchange for a security of greater value, viz., a promissory note, signed both by Wilson and his mother, who is quite able to pay, and which Jones gave up when the bill of sale was given; and even then Mr. Kirby expressed Jones's readiness to surrender all advantages under the bill of sale provided he could get back the promissory note he had given up when the bill of sale was executed. The answer to that is that in point of fact the goods have been sacrificed by a forced sale, and in point of law that this is not a question between Jones and Wilson, but between Jones and the creditors of Wilson, who may have given him credit on the strength of the very stock in trade and furniture comprised in the bill of sale. Jones may not have intended to take an unfair advantage of anyone, but the object of the bill of sale was manifestly to enable him to sweep everything away, to the exclusion of all except himself who might have given credit to Wilson; and if a man chooses to hold out another to the world as a man of substance when in reality he is only a man of straw, he must take the consequences. A conveyance of a man's whole property to secure a past debt is fraudulent within the 2nd sub-section of the 6th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, and voidable as an act of bankruptcy, no matter what the consideration may have been: (Re Wood, L. Rep. 7 Ch. App. 302.) Mr. Kirby then contended that as Jones had taken possession on the 21st July, and the debtor did not petition until the 25th, and no trustee was appointed until nearly a month after, Jones could not be ousted, inasmuch as this is a proceeding in liquidation under sect. 125, and not a proceeding in bankruptcy under sect. 6. The 4th sub-section of sect. 125 says, "The liquidation by arrangement shall be deemed to have commenced as from the date of the appointment of the trustee," and there is no provision as in bankruptcy that the title of the trustee shall relate back to any act of bankruptcy. Citing Jones v. Harber (6 Q. B. 77), Lomax v. Buxton (L. Rep. 6 C. P. 107), Ex parte Todhunter (L. Rep. 10 Eq. 425); but in the case of Ex parte Duignan, re Bissell, decided by the judge of the County Court of Warwickshire, upheld by Bacon, C.J.) (L. Rep. 11 Eq. 604), and affirmed by Lord Hatherley and the Lords Justices (L. Rep. 6 Ch. App. 605), it was held that the title of the trustee appointed in liquidation relates back in the same manner as the title of a trustee under a bankruptcy. Mellish, L.J., in that case observed, "No doubt the words of sub-sect. 4 do create some difficulty, but they cannot control the other part of the Act, which clearly makes the property vest in the trustee as in bankruptcy," and James, L.J., said, "There was no bankruptcy here, but it seems to me clear that the liquidation by arrangement is only different in the machinery by which the same object is to be obtained; and the creditors are not to be in a worse position because they prefer dealing with the property themselves, instead of dealing with it under the Court of Bankruptcy. The intention of the Act is that the same property shall be given to the creditors in each case." I, therefore declare the bill of sale to be void as an act of bankruptcy, and order that all moneys received by the said E. J. Jones, or his agents by virtue of the said bill of sale, be accounted for by the said E. J. Jones with costs, such costs not to include the costs of the proceedings before me on the 7th Aug. last.

Bretherton applied to his Honour to make an order upon the trustee for the return of the promissory note in his possession, which was surrendered by Jones on the execution of the bill of sale by Wilson.

The application was opposed by Mr. Moore, on the ground that Mrs. Wilson, one of the guarantors to the note, was not before the court.

His Honour declined to make the order, and left it to Mr. Bretherton to consider what further course he would take in regard to the application.

LEGAL NEWS.

It is stated that Government have determined to give Mr. Vernon Harcourt the refusal of the Solicitor-Generalship.

Patents.—From the recently-issued Report on Patents it appears that the aggregate surplus income, on balance of accounts, from 1852 to last year amounts to 1,612,928*l.*

Hon. J. Bancroft Davis has presented to the Bar Association of New York a set of books—seventeen in number—containing a full report of the proceedings of the Geneva arbitration.

The New Vice-Chancellor.—Mr. Charles Hall, the new Vice-Chancellor, took his seat for the first time on Thursday morning, in his court in Lincoln's-inn, and proceeded to dispose of the business in the list for the day.

On Monday evening next, the 17th inst., the opening meeting of the session of the Social Science Association will be held at their rooms in Adam-street, Adelphi, when Mr. Thomas Webster, Q.C., F.R.S., will read a paper "On Copyright as affecting the Property of British Authors in Foreign Countries." The chair will be taken at eight o'clock.

Solicitors elected Mayors 1873-4.—Folkestone—Mr. William Wightwick (2nd time); King's Lynn—Mr. J. O. Smetham (5th time). Mr. William Nichols Marcy, solicitor, Bewdley, and clerk of the peace for the county of Worcester, who resigned the office of town clerk in May last, after forty-one years' service, was unanimously elected mayor of the borough of Bewdley on the 10th inst.

The Winter Circuits.—Up to the time of going to press the times for holding the winter circuits had not been fully fixed. So far as at present arranged they stand thus: Division 1 (Mr. Justice Keating), Stafford, Nov. 29; Worcester, Dec. 6; Hants (Winchester), Dec. 11; Somerset (Taunton), Dec. 18. Division 2 (Mr. Justice Archibald), Leeds, Nov. 29; Chester, Dec. 10; Glamorgan (Cardiff), Dec. 15; Gloucester, Dec. 19. Division 3 (Mr. Baron Pigott), Kent (Maidstone), Dec. 1; Sussex (Lewes), Dec. 4; Essex (Chelmsford), Dec. 8; Surrey (Kingston), Dec. 11; Warwick, Dec. 15. Division 5 (Mr. Justice Quain and Mr. Baron Pollock), Manchester, Nov. 29; Liverpool, Dec. 10. The number of cases in each division already given will no doubt be considerably increased before the "commission day."

The Inns of Court.—At the general examination of students of the Inns of Court, held at Lincoln's-inn-hall, on the 30th and 31st of October, and the 1st of November, 1873, the Council of Legal Education awarded an exhibition of twenty-five guineas per annum, to continue for a period of three years, to Sidney Woolf, of the Middle Temple; and certificates that they have satisfactorily passed a public examination to the Hon. William Ashburnham, Messrs. Thomas Barclay, William Houstan Boswall, of the Inner Temple; and Christopher Cavanagh, of the Middle Temple; Montagu Clementi, Walter Wilson Leroux Cosser, James Sutherland Cotton, and Edward Morton Daniel, of Lincoln's-inn; George St. Leger Daniels, of the Middle Temple; Madgwick George Davidson, of Lincoln's-inn; William Oldham Dawson, of the Inner Temple; John William Edwards, of the Middle Temple; William Evans and Reginald Gray, of the Inner Temple; William Manning Harris, of Lincoln's-inn; Jesse Herbert, Robert Johnson, and Sydney Twentyman Jones, of the Middle Temple; William Frank Jones, of Lincoln's-inn; Cecil George Kellner, of the Inner Temple; James Knighton, of the Middle Temple; John Gilbert Kotze, of the Inner Temple; William James Laidlay and John Kirkwood Leys, of the Middle Temple; William Samuel Lily, of the Inner Temple; John Page Middleton and Frank Normandy, of the Middle Temple; Alfred Nundy, of Lincoln's-inn; William Blake Odgers, of the Middle Temple; James Patten and James Biggs Porter, of the Inner Temple; Arthur Horatio Poyser, of Lincoln's inn; Meering Bloomfield Seager, of the Middle Temple; William Sheepshanks, of the Inner Temple; Samuel Stephens, of Lincoln's-inn; Edward Storr, of the Inner Temple: William John Tanner, Harold Thomas, and John Tweedie, of Lincoln's-inn; Henry Vansittart, of the Middle Temple; James Wallace and Arthur Welch of the Inner Temple; Charles Henry Wharton, of the Middle Temple; Sydney Edward Williams, of Lincoln's-inn; Robert Wilson and William Henry Charles Wilson, of the Middle Temple; and Arthur Yates, of Lincoln's-inn. At an examination of students of the Inns of Court in Hindu and Mahommedan Law, and laws in force in British India, held at Lincoln's-inn-hall, on the 27th, 28th, and 29th of October, 1873, the Council of Legal Education awarded to Messrs. George William Cline, of the Middle Temple; Thomas Von Donop Hardinge, of the Inner Temple, Charles Dalton Clifford Lloyd, of Lincoln's-inn, George McWatters and Raj Kissen Sen, of the Inner Temple, John Tweedie and Henry Charles Creighton Wood, of Lincoln's-inn, certificates that they have satisfactorily passed an examination in the subjects above mentioned.

Presentation to a Solicitor.—A new Town hall for Lewes, built by public subscription on some land belonging to the Lewes Provision Market having just been completed, the following vote of thanks, emblazoned, framed and glazed, and surmounted with the Lewes arms, was on Saturday last presented to the clerk. It bears the following: "Lewes Town and Record Room. At a meeting of the Commissioners of the Lewes Provision Market, held at the above room, on Tuesday the 7th October, 1873. It was moved by Mr. Frederick Flint, seconded by Mr. Thomas Bruce, sen., and carried unanimously, That the best thanks of the Commissioners of the Lewes Provision Market be given to Wynne E. Baxter, Esq., their Clerk, for the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties appertaining to that office, and also for the services rendered by him during the construction and completion of the New Town and Record Room, and that the High Constables of the Borough of Lewes be requested to have a copy of this resolution illuminated and presented to him—(Signed) Robert Crosskey, Chairman, Senior High Constable of the Borough of Lewes."

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

QUESTIONS FOR THE FINAL EXAMINATION.

Michaelmas Term, 1873.—First Day.

I.—Preliminary.

Questions 1 to 5 inclusive.

II.—Common and Statute Law, and Practice of the Courts.

6. State the enactment of "The Common Law Procedure Act 1854," as to actions on lost instruments.

7. Should the loss be pleaded, what course should the plaintiff's attorney take?

8. When should coverture be pleaded in abatement, and when in bar?

9. How may a judgment be obtained against a British subject residing out of the jurisdiction?

10. In what case, and how, may a party producing a witness impeach his credit?

11. State what the law is as to stoppage in transitu.

12. What is the effect of a plea denying the agreement, with respect to the evidence necessary for the plaintiff in an action on a guarantee?

13. Explain the axiom "Actio personalis moritur cum persona," stating exceptions to the rule.

14. What claims may be set-off?

15. State the periods of limitation under the statutes in respect to simple, and special contract claims.

16. In what cases is infancy a defence? In what not?

17. What is the pleading rule as to defences arising after the commencement of an action?

18. What is necessary to make an equitable defence a good defence to an action?

19. Describe a good tender, showing how a tender may be invalidated by the mode in which it is made.

20. State some of the provisions of the Carriers' Act (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68) as to carriers' liability for loss of goods exceeding the value of £10.

III. Conveyancing.

24. B. buys 1000 acres of land which are conveyed to him in fee simple. He dies intestate, leaving a grandson (issue of a deceased daughter), a great grand-daughter (issue of a deceased son), and two daughters. Who will be entitled by descent to B.'s land? Give an authority for your answer.

22. If lands are devised charged with the payment of debts alone, or charged with the payment of debts and legacies together, or charged with legacies only, can the devisee in either, and, if in either, which, of those cases make a good title to a purchaser or mortgagee without his being obliged to look to the discharge of such debts and legacies?

23. A testator being possessed of (1) fee simple lands, (2) stock in the funds, (3) mortgages of freehold interests in lands, (4) mortgages of leasehold interests in lands, (5) furniture, (6) money at his bankers, and (7) money owing to him in business, devises and bequeaths all his real and personal property to trustees, to be divided amongst charitable institutions. State if the will will take effect as to the whole property, or, if not, as to what parts it will be inoperative, and why?

24. H., by his will, gives a legacy of £500 to his wife's sister (a stranger), and directs his executor to pay it on her attaining twenty-one. She survives H., and dies under twenty-one. Who is entitled to the legacy, and why?

25. If, say, 100 acres of land be limited by deed, or devised by will, to H. for life, remainder to his right heirs, what estate does H. take? and state what governs the construction of such limitation.

26. A tenant for life, with power of leasing, mortgages his estate. Is he thereby prevented from exercising his power? May or may not stipulations be made on the mortgage for the exercise of such power, and what would in ordinary cases be proper?

27. What is meant by the merger of a term? and what are the requisites to effect it?

28. Where terms of years are created by settlements; what are the events usually expressed in the proviso for cesser of such terms?

29. What separate right has a mortgagor or mortgagee to lease premises which are in mortgage? and what would be the lessee's tenancy holding a lease from one of them without concurrence of the other?

30. Within what period must an estate vest when limited by way of future use or executory devise? From what time is such period reckoned?

31. A woman, having real property, marries without any settlement. What interest in that property does her husband acquire on the marriage? and has he any, and, if any what, powers over it?

32. A married woman is entitled to money secured by bond. Her husband dies in her lifetime before the bond is paid off. Who becomes entitled thereto? If the woman dies, leaving her husband and a child, who can recover the money?

33. What powers are usually inserted in marriage settlements where large estates are limited in strict settlement, and by whom and under what authority are they to be exercised?

34. State the difference between a jointure and a dower? How is the former constituted, and how does the latter arise?

35. In what form should a mortgage of leasehold property be taken?—and state, shortly, what provisions should be inserted in it.

Second Day.

IV.—Preliminary.

Questions 36 to 40 inclusive.

V.—Equity and Practice of the Courts.

41. Explain the meaning of the maxims, "He who seeks equity must do equity," and "Equity considers as done that which ought to be done." Give an instance of the application of each of such maxims.

42. State the different kinds of trusts recognised by our courts of equity.

43. Define an implied trust, a resulting trust, and a constructive trust. Give an example of each.

44. In the absence of a clause empowering trustees for sale to give receipts, can a purchaser from them pay his purchase-money without being bound to see to the application of it? State the authority for your answer.

45. In the absence of any direction on the subject in a will, from what time, and at what rate, is interest on pecuniary legacies payable; and what are the exceptions to the general rule?

46. If a pecuniary legacy be given to a creditor of the testator, in what cases will it be considered an extinguishment of the debt, and in what cases will it be otherwise?

47. State the distinction between a legal and an equitable debt; and give examples of each.

48. Are foreign judgments regarded in equity as specialty or simple contract debts; and to which class are Irish judgments considered to belong?

49. If real estate be charged by will with the payment of the debts of a testator, will such charge have the effect of reviving a debt which is statute-barred?

50. Is an executor, under the usual decree for the administration of an estate, entitled to retain a debt due to him (though statute-barred) in preference to other creditors of equal degree?

51. State some of the objections to an equitable mortgage as a security.

52. Within what time, after the coming in of the last answer (where there are more defendants than one), must the plaintiff in case of need, obtain an order to amend his bill, and within what time after the date of the order must the amendments be made?

53. Under what circumstances will biddings be opened; what time is allowed for the purpose; and what steps must be taken by the person desirous of opening the biddings?

54. When a bill of discovery (not seeking relief) has been filed, and an answer put in, at what time, and by what means, can the defendant obtain his costs?

55. In what cases, if any, will the court deprive a father of the custody of his children, being minors? Mention cases, if any, in which such power has been exercised, and the grounds on which the court has interfered.

VI.—Bankruptcy.

56. What is the amount of the debt or debts due to the petitioning creditor or creditors requisite to found an adjudication in bankruptcy against a debtor?

57. State some of the principal acts of bankruptcy.

58. From what time is the bankruptcy deemed to commence?

59. State, generally, what property is, and what property is not, divisible among the bankrupt's creditors.

60. What are the rights and powers of the trustee in bankruptcy with respect to unmarketable shares in companies, or land burdened with covenants?

61. What debts are entitled to priority of payment?

62. What are the rights of a landlord for arrears of rent due from the bankrupt?

63. Have the creditors any, and what, power of removing the trustee in bankruptcy, and appointing another trustee in his place?

64. What settlements by the bankrupt are void against the trustee in bankruptcy?

65. What is the mode of proceeding if a debtor desires to liquidate his affairs by arrangement?

66. What is the effect of bankruptcy on a person being a member of the House of Commons?

67. What is the effect of bankruptcy of one of several partners in a firm?

68. What are the conditions on the fulfilment of which the court is authorised to grant the bankrupt an order of discharge?

69. What are the liabilities of an undischarged bankrupt to the creditors under his bankruptcy.

70. State some of the principal cases in which a bankrupt will be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction be liable to imprisonment?

VII.—Criminal Law, and Proceedings before Magistrates.

71. What are the three great classes into which crimes are generally divided?

72. To which of these crimes does embezzlement of money by a clerk amount; and what is the punishment for it?

73. How does a conviction of felony affect the property of the prisoner?

74. How far are strikes or combinations of workmen to raise the price of labour lawful, or the reverse?

75. Is evidence by comparison of handwriting admissible in criminal cases?

76. In what case can a person indicted and discharged recover costs from the prosecutor?

77. Is housebreaking felony or misdemeanor, and what is the punishment for the offence?

78. What is the local extent of the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court?

79. If A. steal a coat in Middlesex and is found with it on him in a county beyond the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, where should he be tried for the larceny?

80. How many justices of the peace must attend to constitute a court of quarter sessions in a county beyond the Central Criminal Court?

81. Can a convicted felon give evidence, or be a juryman?

82. In what cases can husband and wife give evidence against each other?

83. How far is the evidence of an accomplice, with promise of pardon, admissible?

84. Is duelling, where death ensues, murder or manslaughter?

85. What is the general rule in criminal cases as to the admissibility in evidence of the declarations of deceased persons?

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

LAW AGENTS.—I inclose you a circular and scale of charges which were received by my firm this morning, in an envelope marked private (and well it might be), from some people calling themselves "Law Agents and Accountants, Joint Stock Companies' Registration Agents, and Law Stationers," hailing from Southampton-row. It is truly astonishing how such people are allowed to trespass on the rights of the legal Profession, but it is even more singular that they should send their circulars to solicitors themselves. You will observe that their circular offers, or is supposed to offer, very great inducements to the country practitioner, as it states that their scale enables him to secure to himself nearly the full benefit of his charges; but I am sure all respectable country practitioners would prefer transacting their business through their London agents. The Incorporated Law Society should really take notice of letters of this nature, but it seems to view all inroads upon the rights and emoluments of the Profession with perfect apathy and indifference.

BRUTUS.

PRACTICE IN THE COLONIES.—May I ask the favour of your inserting this letter in the next publication of your widely diffused and influential journal. I write, Sir, to ask the opinion of yourself (if I am not asking too much), as also to obtain the opinions of some of your readers who are best calculated to give reliable information on the subject of this letter, which is undoubtedly one which affects very closely a great many young members of the Profession, and many who, like myself, are lawyers in embryo. I have for some time past been surprised to see the very large number of applicants for admission as attorneys at each term, and I feel sure that all of them cannot be provided for, or at least as gentlemen with good education should be, out of the law business done by our branch of the Profession, unless, indeed, the public, taking our sad circumstances into consideration, with a charitable intent, should become more than usually litigious. The question of emigration suggests itself as a remedy to many minds, my own included, and it is upon this important subject I ask the favour of your opinion, and the insertion of these few lines. If a gentleman has passed through his articles here in England, and has been admitted, would it be necessary for him to serve under fresh articles in one of our colonies (Australia for example) in order to enable him to practise there as a solicitor? Would thus going to Australia, after having been articled here, necessitate an entirely new course of legal study? What would be some of the greatest difficulties and disadvantages of an English solicitor thus emigrating? I have often heard the question of the advisability of "trying the colonies" suggested by young lawyers and those about to become such. Indeed, as far as I can see and hear, the subject engages many minds, so that I feel assured that if you would answer these queries you would not only be obliging myself, but also would be conferring a great benefit on the Profession, especially its younger members. There is no prospect, so far as I can see, of the demand for legal labour increasing, and, this being so, if the labour increases, as it appears to be doing fast, it can only have one effect, namely, that the remuneration for that labour must decrease, which decrease, I am sure, the man who has paid so heavily for his legal education, admittance, and certificate to practise, as most men do, cannot possibly bear. Under these circumstances then, Sir, would it not be beneficial to the Profession at large if the emigration of some of its members took place?
tions.

AN INQUIRER.

THE INTERESTS OF THE PROFESSION.—I fully agree with the editorial remarks which appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 1st inst., and with what was written by your correspondent, "A. B.," in the same impression. When that gentleman wrote, "Solicitors should combine, and, by acting in concert, uphold their privileges and secure their full emoluments," he hit upon the true and only remedy for most of the professional ills from which we suffer. Even our bucolic fellow-subjects in Warwickshire have recently taught us the power of combination. The present and past administrations have had to yield to the effects of well-concerted joint action, although they may have regarded acknowledged grievances urged by individuals without such combination with supreme contempt. The practical question is, How are solicitors to combine? I would suggest the formation of a new Solicitors' Association with head quarters in the metropolis and a branch in every county town in England and Wales. As the object is to make it truly represent the just requirements of the Profession at large, the subscription should be small (say a guinea or half a guinea a year), so that as many as possible might be induced to enrol themselves as members. It should have a general meeting of its members once a year in London, and occasional meetings in the large provincial towns, such as Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol, Nottingham, &c., which should be the seats of the district committee meetings. At such general meetings the general and district committees should be appointed, and the requirements of the Profession thoroughly discussed and a programme agreed upon. One of the chief objects of this association must be to have the "lower" branch of the Profession properly represented in the House of Commons, and all future legislation watched by the society, and its influence brought to bear upon it. It is consoling to know that we have at least two eminent London solicitors in Parliament at the present time. One object of the society, I propose, must be to increase that number until solicitors are fairly represented in the Lower House. There are, to my knowledge, several counties in England which do not possess any local law society, and I have observed that where such is the case, the esprit de corps is much lower than in those counties where such societies exist. The society need not wait for a building, there is a magnificent quadrangle at the Inns of Court Hotel in London, which would accommodate all who would assemble at the annual meeting, and I know of public rooms in all the other towns I have named where similar accommodation could be obtained. I do not profess to give anything like a detailed scheme. I, at present, have only sketched a very rough outline, but I trust that those, who like myself, have the interests of the Profession at heart, and recognise its requirements, will join me in elaborating a scheme which shall, at some future time, deserve the acknowledgments of our branch of the Profession.

AN ATTORNEY-AT-LAW OF TEN YEARS' STANDING.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

10. ARTICLES.—I was articled in March 1872 for five years, therefore the half of my term expires during the long vacation 1874. Is Easter Term 1874 the earliest in which I can be examined for my Intermediate, or can I go up in Hilary 1874?

VETUS.

11. STAMP.—Will one of your correspondents kindly inform me whether a copy court roll admittance out of court of a mortgagee requires a stump, and what?

C. B. A.

12. POOR LAW.—A young union clerk, a solicitor, would be glad if any of his professional brethren can inform him if they know of any case in which a grandchild (being of sufficient ability so to do) has been compelled to contribute to the support of his grandfather or grandmother, and under any and what statute.

G. K.

13. LEGACY DUTY.—J. G. by deed settled his real and personal estates upon trustees in trust, first for himself during his life, and upon his decease to convert the said estates into money, and out of the same money to pay to A. T., his sister-in-law, £70, and the remainder thereof to his nephew J. T. The settlement contains no power of revocation. Is the legacy to A. T., his sister-in-law, subject to legacy duty? if so, at what rate of duty per cent?

R. H. J.

14. NOT PROVEN.—Will any of your experienced readers answer me the following question? Can a criminal be arraigned the second time in Scotland with the verdict not proven?

15. POWER.—A. has a power of appointment of freeholds "by writing under his hand and seal." Can the power be exercised by a will according to the Wills Act (1 Vict. c. 26) and not sealed? The Act provides (s. 10) that if executed as there set forth a will shall be a valid exercise of a power of appointment notwithstanding a further solemnity is required by the instrument giving the power. But see West v. Ray (K. 392). Is sealing not an "additional solemnity" within the Act? See also Prideaux (44h edit., vol. 2, p. 269).

A. B. A.

16. CONVEYANCING.—A., by arrangement with B., purchased freehold and copyhold land to be conveyed to C. (the son of A. and son-in-law of B.). The contract was in the name of A., to whom by mistake the land was afterwards conveyed, the purchase-money being paid by B. A. died, having by his will dated in 1868, after devising other lands, given all his residuary, real, and personal estate, to two trustees upon trust to convert and divide the proceeds amongst his children living at his decease. The above mistake was not discovered until the estate had been wound-up, when, upon learning the facts the testator's other children agreed to any course requisite to rectify the error. The testator left five children, including two married daughters and a daughter now a minor. One of the trustees is now of unsound mind, but it is believed he understands the position of the matter sufficiently to execute any necessary deed. What course, under the circumstances, would it be advisable to take, and would any deed which may be executed require acknowledgment by the married woman?

SUBSCRIBER.

17. SALE OF GOODS—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.—Is a cheque for the value of goods over £10, drawn by the purchaser, and delivered by the purchaser of the goods to the vendor at the time of the purchase, and accepted by him as payment for the goods sufficient to satisfy the statute as "something in earnest to bind the bargain or in part payment," no part of his goods having been received by the purchaser, nor any note or memorandum signed, &c.; and the cheque having been dishonoured before delivery of the goods? If yes, quote cases. R. G. B.

18. INNKEEPER—LOSS OF PROPERTY—NEGLIGENCE.—A. occupies an inn at D. He also occupies (under a different landlord) a booth on a racecourse, such booth being about two miles from the inn, and only used during the race week for the sale of ale and spirits. On Wednesday in the race week Y. handed his overcoat to the waiter at the booth with the sanction of A. to take care of. The coat was afterwards lost or stolen. Y. now claims damages for the loss. A. admits the facts, but says he is not liable as an innkeeper, the booth not being part of his inn, and that Y. was not a guest. Will any of your correspondents kindly give me their opinion and refer me to any cases? W. B.

19. CASE WANTED.—Where can I find a report of Waite v. Waite decided in the Divorce Court a few years ago? T.

[25 L. T. Rep. N. S. 847.—ED.]

20. COUNTY COURT—EQUITY—FEES.—A decretal order provides that property be sold with the approbation of the judge, and that conditions of sale and abstracts be prepared, subject to the approval of the registar. This necessitates the registrar (A) sitting to inquire into fitness and approve of auctioneer and time and place of sale; also to inquire into value of property and fix reserve bids, and (B) to peruse and settle conditions and abstracts, &c., for which no fees are set out in the table of fees. Can any brother registrar tell me from experience or cases if for A the fee for sitting to make inquiries may be made; or any fee may be charged for either A or B? REGISTRAR COUNTY COURT.

21. REPUDIATION OF BET.—A. bets B. that his neighbour's horse is black; B. bets A. that it is not. They each put £2 into the hands of C. as stakeholder. A. and B. go to see the horse and return satisfied that it is black. A demands the money from C.; B., although satisfied that the horse is black, and that he has fairly lost, "backs out" of the bet, and orders C. not to pay A. his (B.'s) £2 to A. C., however, pays it to A., the winner. Is he safe in so doing, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18. or is he liable to an action by B. for money had and received? I have read Varney v. Hickman (17 L. J. 102. C.P.), but there the bet was repudiated before the event was ascertained, whereas in the case before put B. did not "back out," till after the event, was clearly ascertained Answers will oblige AN ARTICLED CLERK.

22. LESSORS UNDER MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT.—A. is entitled to an individual share in copyholds (as a joint tenant) which were included in the settlement on her marriage with B., now deceased, who covenanted to procure A., on her majority, to surrender her interest therein to the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement, which has never been done. It is now desired by all who are interested in the copyholds to grant a lease thereof. Who are the proper lessors? and would it be sufficient if the beneficiaries demised and the trustees ratified and confirmed? A. B. A.

23. THE TIPPLING ACT.—Can wine to the value of 20s. when consumed on the premises be recovered in an action at law? the Tippling Act only appearing to apply to spirituous liquors, and the County Court Act to beer, cider, &c. A. B. A.

Answers.

(Q. 1.) RELEASE OF DEBT BY WILL—LEGACY DUTY.—Legacy duty must be paid: (Attorney-General v. Holbrook, 3 Yo. & Jerv. 114). Z. Y.

— The forgiveness of a debt by will is in law a legacy, and is subject to lapse by the death of the debtor in the testator's lifetime: (Elliott v. Davenport, 1 P. Wms. 83; Toplis v. Baker, 2 COX., 118; Ison v. Butler; 2 Price, 34; but see and compare Silthorpe v. Moxon, 3 Atk. 580.) The observations of the Chief Baron in the judgment in Toplis v. Baker as to the mode of preserving a legacy from lapse are worth reading. When a testator by will releases a debt, this is in legal operation a legacy, so as to carry duty: (Attorney-General v. Holbrook, 3 Y. & J., 114; 12 Price, 407.) A. F. W.

(Q. 2.) PRACTICE IN COLONIES.—Admission to practice in the Colonial Courts, independent of express regulation, is legally in the discretion of the presiding officer. In some cases there are regulating Acts (e. g., for New South Wales, 9 Geo. 4, c. 83), but I am not aware of any relating to Queensland. Attorneys and solicitors are admitted, as of course, on producing their certificates. Clark's Colonial Law may perhaps give further information, but the writer has no opportunity of referring to it. G. H.

(Q. 3.) NOTICE TO QUIT.—The notice though addressed to Brown and Robinson only would be a sufficient notice to Smith if it appeared on the face of it that the landlord intended to resume the sole possession of the entire property. As to the service of the notice it would be left to the jury to say whether the notice had not reached Smith. This they would probably presume under the circumstances: (Jones v. Marsh, 4 Term Rep. 464; Doe v. Crick, 5 Esp. Rep. 196; Doe v. Watkins, 7 East. 551.) Z. Y.

— Where two tenants hold premises in common, a notice to one of them is sufficient to determine the tenancy: (Doe and Macartney (Lord) v. Crick, 5 Esp. 196). It is evidence of a notice to the other tenant, who lived elsewhere: Doe and Bradford (Lord) v. Watkins, 7 East, 551; 3 Smith, 517.) Jones can eject Smith, Brown, and Robinson, and by the C. L. P. Act, 1852, s. 168, the writ must be directed to the persons in possession, and to all persons entitled to defend the possession of the property claimed. A. F. W.

— I think that the notice is insufficient. (See Doe d. Bruby v. Roe, 10 C. B. 663), which, though not directly in point, seems analogous. H. G.

(Q. 4.) AGENTS AND DEBT COLLECTORS.—By leave of the judge of a County Court any person may appear instead of the party "to address the court:" (15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 10.) What persons not attorneys may not do is set out in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, and the penalties for disobedience are prescribed by the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26. Z. Y.

— The judges of the Courts who allow these pests to appear are as much or more to be condemned than the "agents" themselves. Perhaps the best remedy is provided by the Stamp Act, 1870, ss. 59, 60. It is, however, a difficult question to deal with, especially when they are countenanced as they are by those before whom they appear. See also 6 & 7 Vict., c. 73, s. 2; 23 & 24 Vict., c. 127, s. 26. A person may be indicted for acting as an attorney, when not admitted or enrolled: (R. v. Buchanan, 8 Q. B. 883; 15 L. J., 2 B. 227, 13 J. 423, Q.B.) A. F. W.

— Unauthorised persons who practise as attorneys or solicitors may be either indicted or proceeded against for a contempt of Court. (See Pulling's Law of Attorneys, 3rd edit., 526.) H. G.

(Q. 5.) SUCCESSION DUTY ACT.—Succession duty, calculated in the usual way, is payable by the present owner in respect of the cesser of the annuity. When he purchased in 1871, his solicitor should have foreseen that duty would sooner or later be payable on the cesser of the annuity, and should have had it allowed for out of the purchase-money. The case was analogous to that of a purchase from tenant for life and remainderman. As to the rate of duty, by the combined effect of sects. 5 and 15 of the Succession Duty Act, the duty will be the same as would have been payable by A., that is, 10 per cent. T. E. H.

— I think that no duty is payable, since A., "the person originally entitled" (see sec. 15) was never liable to pay any. An able paper on the succession duties appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 4th Jan. last, to which I would recommend reference. H. G.

— The question involves very difficult considerations, which in all probability will require judicial authority in order to a satisfactory solution. Z. Y.

(Q. 6.) LOCAL AUTHORITY UNDER THE GAS WORKS CLAUSES ACT.—If A. F. W. had used a reasonable degree of diligence before penning his query he would have read sect. 4 of the Gas Works Clauses Act 1871; sect. 2 of the Gas and Water Works Facilities Act 1870, and these sections would have led him to schedule A. of the last mentioned Act, where he will find the desired information. Z. Y.

(Q. 7.) CONTRACT—DEBT—RUNNING ACCOUNT, &c.—The contract appears to have been one and indivisible. If B., therefore, in the first action could have recovered the further sum—but did not adduce evidence in support of his claim—he will be barred if he has elected under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 82, and County Court Common Rule, No. 74 of 1867, to accept the money paid into court in full satisfaction of his claim, otherwise by the same rule "the cause may proceed." Z. Y.

— The splitting of causes of action is not allowed; but even assuming that Nos. 2 and 5 involved separate causes of action, B. could not now sue; for if the causes of action may be joined they must (Girling v. Aldus, 2 Keble, 617.) H. G.

(Q. 8.) INTEREST IN LAND.—S. A. should have given the circumstances relative to the agreement for mortgage. An agreement for a mortgage, where the deeds are deposited, is not within the Statute of Frauds as in such a case, "the contract is not to be performed but is executed:" Russell v. Russell (1 Bro. C. C. 269). In order to constitute an equitable mortgage it is essential that there should be an actual delivery, for a mere verbal agreement to make a deposit of this kind will be insufficient: Ex parte Coombs, in Re Beavan (4 Mad. 259); Ex parte Coming (9 Ves. 117), and equity will not enforce the specific performance of a written agreement to borrow a sum of money on mortgage: (Rogers v. Challis, 27 Beav. 175.) A. A. R.

— It would appear from Jeakes v. White (21 L. J. 265, Ex.), that an agreement for a mortgage of freehold land is an interest in land within the meaning of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. In that case the agreement (which was not in writing), was not an agreement for a mortgage, but merely to pay the expenses of the investigation of the title in case the loan should go off; but the observations of the judges most strongly imply that if it had been an agreement to mortgage it would have required to be in writing, as relating to an interest in land within the Statute. "Platt, B.—Was the defendant bound to mortgage the lands?" "Possibly he was not." "Alderson B.—Then the contract merely relates to the investigation of a title, not to any interest in land, and is not within the Statute." Pollock, C.B., concurred. A writing is doubtless essential, and it may be added that unless there is one the proposed mortgagee's solicitor cannot recover his charges from the proposed mortgagor, in case the negotiation should go off: (Melbourne v. Cottrell, 29 L. T. Rep. 293, Q. B.) T. E. H.

(Q. 9.) EJECTMENT.—This question is stated too succinctly. As it stands there can be but one answer—mere lapse of time is no ground for the presumption that the cestui que trust has acquired the legal estate. If S. B. had stated what the trust was, and what the dealings of the cestui que trust with the property have been, the way would have been clear to consider whether, according to the decided cases, there is such a probability that the legal estate has been conveyed that a jury would be directed to presume a conveyance. But as it is, I see nothing to prevent an application to the court for the appointment of a new trustee. T. E. H.

Replication.

(Q. 5.) SUCCESSION DUTY.—Neither "S." nor "A. A. B.," in answering this question, take any notice of sect. 7 of the Succession Duty Act, which enacts, "Where any disposition of property, not being a bonâ fide sale, and not conferring an interest expectant on death on the person in whose favour the same shall be made, shall be accompanied by the reservation or assurance of or contract of any benefit to the grantor, or any other person, for any term of life or for any period ascertainable only by reference to death, such disposition shall be deemed to confer at the time appointed for the determination of such benefit an increase of beneficial interest in such property, as a succession equal in annual value to the yearly amount or yearly value of the benefit so reserved, assured, or contracted for, on the person in whose favour such disposition shall be made." As the question supposes a sale in consideration partly of cash and partly of an annuity, it would appear to be a transaction within the exception of "a bonâ fide sale," and therefore no succession duty would be payable. Legacy duty is clearly payable under A.'s will for the proceeds of the sale under that will, but not succession duty upon the falling in of the annuity. I shall be glad to elicit further opinion upon the point, as a somewhat similar case has occurred to me. D.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

THE following is a prospectus issued by this Society:

This society has for its object the reform of the existing state of the Legal Profession. The want of such a society has long been felt, and the demand for it has been rendered all the more imperative by the recent and the impending legislative changes in our judicial system.

Societies for promoting these changes, as well as societies for the amendment of the law itself, already exist. This society is of a less ambitious character, and will confine its operations to the reform of proved abuses in connection with the Profession only

Although its basis is thus restricted, it will have no lack of work to perform. Among the subjects which are likely to engage its attention may be mentioned the following:

1. To define the rules of etiquette of the Legal Profession, and reduce them to a written code.
2. To define the rights and liabilities of the two branches of the Legal Profession inter se, as well as in relation to the public.
3. To place the government of the Legal Profession on a sound representative basis.
4. To protect the Legal Profession against the depredations of unqualified men.

Members of the Legal Profession of every degree, whether barristers or attorneys-at-law, solicitors, special pleaders, conveyancers, proctors, articled clerks, or students of the Inns of Court, are eligible for membership. Members' annual subscription, 5s. The expenses are not likely to be great, and the subscription has been fixed at an almost nominal amount, to secure the adhesion of as many of the Legal Profession as possible. Moral influence is much more needed than material aid. Any movement for the reform of the existing state of the Legal Profession, to be permanently successful, must necessarily proceed from within, and secure the hearty co-operation and support of both branches of the Profession.

Members of Parliament, and other laymen of distinction, are eligible for the office of vice-president. The annual subscription of vice-presidents is 1 guinea. Donors of 5 guineas are eligible as life vice-presidents.

Any further information may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, Charles Ford, Esq., at the office of the LAW TIMES, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C., to whom all communications should be addressed by members of the Legal Profession desirous of joining the society. Subscriptions may be paid to the Treasurer, W. T. Charley, Esq., D.C.L., M.P., 5, Crown Office-row, Temple, London, E.C.; or to the society's bankers, Union Bank (Chancery-lane Branch).

N.B.—A preliminary meeting will be held on Thursday, the 20th inst., at 7.30 p.m., at the rooms of the Social Science Association, No. 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, W.C., on Wednesday, the 12th Nov., Mr. E. F. Stanway in the chair. Mr. Ellis J. Davis opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz.: "That a breach of contract for service ought not to be treated as a criminal offence." The motion was lost by a majority of six.

PETERBOROUGH ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at the New County Courts, Peterborough, on Thursday evening, Oct. 30, John Percival, Esq., in the chair. The subject of discussion was, "A., a spinster, engaged to be married to B., demands a return of correspondence which has passed between her and B.; Can she subsequently sue B. for breach of promise of marriage?" Mr. Bower opened the debate. The motion was negatived by a majority of five.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the usual weekly meeting, held on Tuesday evening last, at the Law Institution, there being a good attendance of members, the following question was discussed: "On the winding-up of an insurance company, is the holder of a current policy entitled to prove for such a sum as would have been required at the date of the winding-up by a similarly constituted but solvent office, for a policy of the like amount, conditions, and premium?" On being put to the meeting at the close of the debate, the question was decided in the negative.

BRISTOL ARTICLED CLERK'S DEBATING SOCIETY.

A meeting of this society was held at the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday evening, the 4th inst., G. F. Prideaux, Esq., solicitor, occupying the chair. It was the first open night of the session, and a large number of members and several strangers were present. Mr. Doggett opened in the affirmative, "That the character and general policy of Cromwell have been unreasonably assailed." Mr. Kimber opposed, and after a spirited discussion, he obtained a large majority. The debate lasted until 10.30.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

On Friday evening, the 7th Nov., E. Tindal Atkinson, Esq., barrister-at-law, delivered a lecture before this society on the second part of the Judicature Act. On Monday evening the 10th Nov. the usual fortnightly discussion took place. The question for debate—"Is an innocent principal generally responsible for the unauthorised fraud of his agent?" was conducted in the affirmative by Messrs. William Brown and B. Crook; and in the negative by Messrs. J. H. Sykes, and J. Kidney. The question was decided in the affirmative. The honorary secretary, Mr. Geo. Fredk. Johnson, announced at the close of the discussion, that the prize offered by the president Henry Barker, Esq., for the best essay on the law of principal and agent had been awarded, by E. Tindal Atkinson, Esq., to Mr. M. J. Burn.

THE UNION SOCIETY OF LONDON.

At a meeting of this society, at 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, held on Tuesday evening, the 11th inst., the following subject was submitted to discussion, and carried by a majority of one: "That women should be admitted as members of the Universities."

LEGAL OBITUARY.

Note.—This department of the Law Times, is contributed by Edward Walford, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the Law Times Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

WILLIAM ORANGE MARSHALL, ESQ.

We have to record the death of Mr. William Orange Marshall, solicitor, who died suddenly at his residence, The Elms, Grove-road, Southsea, Portsmouth, on the 3rd inst., at the age of sixty-six years. Mr. Marshall was articled to the late Mr. Alexander Poulden, of Portsea, and admitted in Easter Term, 1831. Mr. Marshall succeeded his father, as clerk to the late Portsea Commissioners, which office he held for a number of years, until the dissolution of that body upon the establishment of the Local Government Board, when he was unanimously elected as their clerk. In 1853, Mr. Marshall was elected Treasurer to the Corporation of the Borough of Portsmouth, and only resigned the office in June last, in consequence of failing health, when the counsel expressed by resolution their appreciation of the strict integrity with which he had discharged the duties, and which indeed characterised the whole of his professional career. In 1867, Mr. Marshall resigned the office of Clerk to the Local Board of Health, and joined Mr. William Pearce, of Portsea, with whom he continued in partnership until the time of his death. His rectitude and a willingness at all times to set aside his own interests in favour of those of his clients, secure for him a name of which his relatives and his professional brethren in Portsmouth may well be proud.

T. H. HADDAN, ESQ.

The late Thomas Henry Haddan, Esq., M.A., B.C.L., barrister-at-law, of Highgate, and of Lincoln's-inn, whose death at Vichy, France, on the 5th Sept., we have already announced, was the eldest son of the late Mr. Thomas Haddan, solicitor, of London, by Mary Ann, his wife, daughter of John Haddan, Esq. He was born in London in the year 1814, and received his early education at a private school at Finchley. In 1833 he became a member of Brasenose College, Oxford, and in 1838 was elected a Fellow of Exeter College. He took a double first class in classics and mathematics in Easter Term 1837; obtained the Chancellor's prize for the English essay in 1838, entitled, "The Tests of National Prosperity Considered," was elected Eldon Scholar 1840, and was elected to a Vinerian Fellowship in 1847. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in Trinity Term 1841; was the author of two publications, one on the "Limited Liability Act," the other on the "Administrative Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery." Mr. Haddan had a good and steady practice, both in equity and conveyancing, and was a sound and able lawyer, and highly proficient in classical literature and mathematical science. He was much beloved in private life and among his own friends. He was married in 1861 to Caroline Elizabeth Bradley, daughter of the late Captain James Bradley, R.N., and Caroline his wife, by whom he has left five children. His remains were interred at Vichy, France, on the 6th Sept., but are to be shortly removed to Highgate Cemetery.

R. M. RICHARDS, ESQ.

The late Richard Meredyth Richards, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Caerynwch, Merionethshire, and Cerrig Llwydion, Denbighshire, who died on the 4th inst., at his seat near Dolgelly, Merionethshire, in the fifty-second year of his age, was the only son of the late Richard Richards, Esq., of Caerynwch, who was many years M.P. for Merionethshire, and formerly Accountant-General of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Masters of the High Court of Chancery, and who died in 1860. He was grandson of the late Sir Richard Richards, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and his mother was Harriett, daughter of Jonathan Dennett, Esq. The deceased gentleman, who was born in the year 1821, was educated at Westminster School, whence he proceeded to Merton College, Oxford, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1842 and proceeded M.A. in 1846. He was called to the Bar by the honourable society of the Inner Temple in Michaelmas Term in 1846, and practised for some time as an equity draftsman and conveyancer, and went the Oxford circuit. He was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Merionethshire, and served as High Sheriff of that county in 1865, and he was also Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, and a magistrate for the county of Denbigh. Mr. Richards was formerly a Lieutenant in the Merioneth Militia. He was twice married: first, in 1845, to Elizabeth Emma, daughter of William Bennett, Esq., of Farringdon House, Berks; and secondly, in 1863, to Louisa Janette Anne, only child of the late Edward Lloyd Edwards, Esq., of Cerrig-Llwydion, by whom he has left a youthful family.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 8.

Bellhouse, Thos. T. and Bond, Jas., solicitors, Manchester. Nov. 1. Debts by either

Bankrupts.

Erratum—In Gazette of Oct 28, for John Allan Park, read James Allan Park

Gazette, Nov. 7.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

Bowers, James, out of business, Windermere-rd. Upper Holloway. Pet. Nov. 4. Reg. Hazlitt. Sols. Messrs. Berkley, and Calcott, Lincoln's-inn. Sur. Nov. 19

Conington, H. F. gentleman, Regent-st. Pet. Aug. 20. Reg. Brougham. Sol. Angel, Great Marlborough-st. Sur. Nov. 21

Freystadt, Herrmann, Freystadt, Adolph, and Peiser, George, general warehousemen, Jewin-st, London; and Denton, near Manchester, under firm of Tueski, Sons, and Co.; and also at Atherstone, under style of A. Robinson and Co.; and Wilson-st, Finsbury, under style of Thomas Charlton, and Co. Pet. Nov. 3. Reg. Pepys. Sol. Sturt, Ironmonger-lane. Sur. Nov. 25

Piesse, George Augustus, dealer in jewellery, Lyon's-inn-chmbs, Strand. Pet. Nov. 5. Reg. Pepys. Sols. Buckler, and Co. Fenchurch-st. Sur. Nov. 18

To surrender in the Country.

Banks, James, mercantile clerk, Everton, near Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 19. Reg. Hime. Sur. Nov. 19

Dunn, George, dealer in pictures, Windsor. Pet. Nov. 1. Reg. Darvill. Sur. Nov. 22

Husband, Samuel, jun., carpenter, West Looe. Pet. Nov. 5. Reg. Pearce. Sur. Nov. 20

Lent, Frederick, victualler, Halifax. Pet. Nov. 5. Reg. Rankin. Sur. Nov. 20

Murdock, John, travelling draper, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 1. Reg. Harley. Sur. Nov. 19

Tomlinson, John Thomas, grocer, Rugby. Pet. Nov. 5. Reg. Kirby. Sur. Nov. 24

Gazette, Nov. 11.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

Elmore, Frank, professional singer, Colville-sq, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Murray. Sur. Nov. 25

Filipowski, Denizen, merchant, Hewlett-terrace, Brixton. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Murray. Sur. Nov. 26

Hodges, James Clifford, no occupation, Marlborough-rd, St. John's-wood. Pet. July 23. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sur. Nov. 27

Harrison, Richard Wakefield, auctioneer, Askew-rd, Shepherd's-bush, and Archer's-st, Bayswater. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Murray. Sur. Nov. 25

Wood, Arthur, stock jobber, Addlestone, Chertsey, and Stock Exchange, London. Pet. Nov. 6. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Nov. 25

To surrender in the Country.

Bleachley, James, cloth agent, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 6. Reg. Kay. Sur. Nov. 27

Taylor, Edwin, cotton spinner, Higginshaw, near Oldham. Pet. Nov. 4. Reg. Tweedale. Sur. Nov. 24

Willcocks, Sampson, licensed victualler, Chichester. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Evershed. Sur. Nov. 26

Williams, Henry, quarryman, Llanelly. Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. Shepard. Sur. Nov. 22

Wright, William Horace, attorney Wootton-under-Edge, and Paper-bldgs, Temple, London. Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. Wilton. Sur. Nov. 22

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Nov. 4.

Craven, Francis, cotton merchant, Liverpool. June 9, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 7.

Alexander, Frederick, wholesale paper merchant, Portsea and Buckland. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at two, at Totterdell's Commercial hotel, Portsea. Sol. Reed, Portsea

Baxter, John, warehouse keeper, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Blease and Co., accountants, Commercial Chambers, Liverpool. Sols. Whitley and Maddock, Liverpool

Berry, Newton, druggist, Metheringham. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 14, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Williams, Lincoln

Chase, Sophia Ann, wife of Edward John Chase, out of business, Gosport, par. Alverstoke. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at four, at office of Sol. King, Portsea

Clark, Hector Benjamin, tallow melter, Leadenhall-market. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 25, at three, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Keighley

Clements, Henry, hairdresser, Exeter. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 19, at eleven, at office of Sol. Daw, jun., Exeter

Cohen, Simeon, jeweller, Glossop. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at three, at offices of Sol. Sampson, Manchester

Collier, William, provision dealer, Bolton. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at two, at office of Sol. Ryley, Bolton

Corles, Lavinia Helen, widow, Portsdown-rd, Maida-hill. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 27, at eleven, at the Wheatsheaf hotel, Handet, Holborn. Sol. Robertson, Bedford-row

Dell, William, jun., labourer, Westbury. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sol. Shrapnell, Bradford-on-Avon

Edwards, Benjamin James, seedsman, Bishopsgate-st-within, and Strand. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 17, at two, at offices of Sol. Bohm, New-inn, Strand

Farrow, John Wesley, of no occupation, Bulwell. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sols. Cranch, Rowe, and Stroud, Nottingham

Field, John, Wood, William Shelleys, Wood, William, and Haynes, John George, stockbrokers, Warnford-ct, Throgmorton-st. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 26, joint creditors, at twelve; Nov. 28, sep. creditors of Field, at twelve; sep. creditors of W. S. Wood, at half-past twelve; sep. creditors of W. Wood, at one, at offices of Sols. Lawrence, Plews, and Boyer, Old Jewry-chmbs

Freeman, Edward Michael, wine merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 26, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Higson, Manchester

Game, Thomas, harness maker, Tooley-st, Southwark. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 12, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Nind, St. Benet-pl, Gracechurch-st

Ginnett, William, travelling circus proprietor, Hopwood, near Heywood. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Orton, Heywood

Girvan, Hugh, out of business, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 5. Dec. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Ritson, Liverpool

Glover, William Henry, commercial traveller. Birkenhead. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Downham, Birkenhead

Gorse, Mary, poulterer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 20, at three, at Vine, accountant, the Chambers, 20, Cable-st, Liverpool. Sol. Grocott, Liverpool

Gotto, John, linen draper, St. Neots. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 25, at twelve, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside, London. Sols. Davidsons, Carr, Bannister, and Morriss, Basinghall-st, London

Greenhalgh, Samuel, confectioner, Bury. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 19, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Grundy, Bury

Guest, William, hosier, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at three, at offices of Sols. Lawrence, and Dixon, Liverpool

Hardwick, John, jun., goldsmith, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Sol. Hunter, Halford

Harris, William, jun., commission agent, Bartlett's-bldgs, Holborn, and Hillside, Friern Barnet, Colney Hatch. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 24, at one, at offices of Sols. Dolman and Colegrave, Jermyn-st

Hatch, George, plumber, Great Yarmouth. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 18, at twelve, at Blake, accountant, Great Yarmouth. Sol. Palmer, Great Yarmouth

Heppell, Jane, spinster, dealer in boots, Durham. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Marshall, Durham

Hewes, Stephen Candler, watchmaker, Ware. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 20, at eleven, at the Saracen's Head hotel, Ware. Sol. Jones, Colchester

Higginson, George, photographic artist, Southport. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at two, at the Railway hotel, Southport. Sol. Lupton, Liverpool

Hill, Henry, provision dealer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 24, three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Heath, Manchester

Hopkins, Henry, corn merchant, Britannia-ter, Chelsea. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 27, at three, at offices of Sols. Wood and Hare, Basinghall-st

Howes, John, butcher, Lower Edmonton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 25, at eleven, at the Four Swans hotel, Waltham-cross. Sols. Duffield and Bruty, Tokenhouse-yd

Irving, Robert, clog manufacturer, Carlisle Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Wannop, Carlisle

Jones, Hugh, boot dealer, Penisawarn. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 17, at two, at office of Sol. Jones, Carnarvon

Jowett, Eli, watchmaker, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 15, at eleven, at office of Sols. Dawson and Greaves, Bradford

Leach, Charles Thomas, Leach, Samuel, and Harding, Frederick, tea merchants, Southampton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 17, at twelve, at Edmonds, Davis, and Co., Poultry. Sol. Hickman

Lee, William, shoe maker, Crewe. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 25, at two, at office of Sol. Warburton, Crewe

Lloyd, Thomas, grocer, Norton Bridge. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 14, at eleven, at office of Sol. Brough, Stafford

Milner, Daniel, jun., publican, Honley. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 20, at eleven, at 1, Market-walk, Huddersfield. Sols. Messrs. Sykes

Morgan, Thomas, bootmaker, Aberystwith. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 18, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Atwood, Aberystwith

Morters, Robert John, grocer, Coxhole. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 26, at eleven, at Mawson's Station hotel, Durham. Sol. Brignall, jun., Durham

Munt, John William, jun., provision merchant, Southampton. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 24, at twelve, at office of Sols. Coxwell, Bassett, and Stanton, Southampton

Owen, Richard, farmer, Beddgelert. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 21, at eleven, at the Sportsman's hotel, Carnarvon. Sol. Williams, Carnarvon

Preston, John, plumber, Stretford. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester

Prince, James, trainer of horses, Patcham. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 19, at three, at offices of Sol. Goodman, Brighton

Prout, Thomas John, pianoforte tuner, Plymouth. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 25, at eleven, at office of Sol. Vaughan, Devonport

Purchase, Isaac Bentley, grocer, Lymington. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 18, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, Cheapside. Sols Moore and Jackman

Pyne, William, in lodgings, Taunton. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at ten, at office of Sol. Reeves, Taunton

Rice, George, clerk to a solicitor, Hereford-rd, Bayswater. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 15, at twelve, at Mr. Johnson's, 4, High-st, Marylebone. Sol. T. Johnson, 8, High-st, Marylebone

Richardson, George, leather factor, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 21 at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Harvey, Leicester

Rickwood, Charles, farmer, Purleigh. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 26, at three, at the Golden Fleece tavern, Chelmsford. Sol. Gowing, Basinghall-st

Roberts, William Henry, attorney, Golder's-green, Hendon, and Coleman-st. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 15, at half-past ten, at office of Bishop, 10, Queen-st-pl. Sol. Nethersole, New-inn, Strand

Sambrook, John, and Sambrook, Samuel, builders, Stoke-on-Trent. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 19, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Stoke-on-Trent

Saunders, George Sharp, underwriter, Cornhill, and Reigate. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at three, at the City Terminus hotel, Cannon-st. Sols. Wilson, Bristows, and Carpmael, 1, Copthall-bldgs, London

SAUNDERS, WILLIAM WILSON, underwriter, Cornhill, and Reigate, and Charlwood. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at one, at the City Terminus hotel, Cannon-st. Sols. Wilson, Bristows, and Carpmael, Copthall-bldgs

SCHOEPFF, AUGUST, artist, Regent-st. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Sols. Linklater, Hackwood, Addison, and Brown, Walbrook

SCHOFIELD, ABRAHAM, sen., SCHOFIELD ABRAHAM, son., and SCHOFIELD, JOSEPH, flannel manufacturers, Milnrow near Rochdale; Ogden, near Milnrow, Littleborough; and Goldsmith-st, London. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 18, at three, at the Albion hotel, Manchester. Sols. Sale, Shipman, and Seddon, Manchester

SEDGWICK, THOMAS WILLIAM, out of business, Commercial-rd, Peckham. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Raven and Curtis, Queen Victoria-st

SEYMOUR, JOHN, gentleman, Shaftesbury-rd, Hammersmith. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Bradford, Langbourn-chmbs, Fenchurch-st

SMITH, JOSEPH WILLIAM, greengrocer, Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 4 Nov. 19, at two, at offices of Sol. Fryer, Dewsbury

SPENCER, JOHN FRANCIS, and SPENCER, RICHARD, grocers, Birmingham. Nov. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Fitter, Birmingham

STANLEY, JOHN, boot manufacturer, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 20, at twelve, at office of Sols. Fowler, Smith, and Warwick, Leicester

STANTON, JAMES, and LONGMORE, JAMES, ironmasters, Westbromwich. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at eleven, at the Talbot hotel, Oldbury. Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury

STERRATT, ISRAEL, wood turner, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 19, three, at office of Sols. Hinde, Milne, and Sudlow, Manchester

STEVENSON, JOHN, commercial traveller, Stoke-on-Trent. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov 24, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Tamkinson Baralem

TATLEY, PHILIP, out of business, Bolton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Hall and Rutter, Bolton

VICKERS, EDWARD, builder, Bedford. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 20, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Conquest, Bedford

WALTERS, FRANK, lithographer, Museum-st, Oxford-st, and Long-acre. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Sol. Walls, Walbrook

WATSON, WILLIAM JAMES, commission merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 26, at ten, at office of Sol. Boote and Edgar, Manchester

WESTBROOK, JOHN EDWIN, baker, Deptford. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 27, at two, at office of Sol. Hathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields

WHITEHEAD, JOHN, stonemason, Vauxhall-bridge-rd. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 19, at half-past ten, at the East Arms, Kempshead-rd, Lower Kennington-la, Lambeth. Sol. Bilton, Renfrew-rd, Kennington-lane

WINDEBANK, WILLIAM, grocer, Isle of Wight. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 25, at one, at office of Sol. Hooper, Lincoln's-inn-fields

WOOLFORD, CHARLOTTE, greengrocer, Cleveland-st, Fitzroy-sq. Pet. Oct. 28. Nov. 14, at ten, at 6, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand. Sol. Lind

WYCHERLEY, THOMAS, hosier, Middlesbrough. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Bennison and Co., Middlesbrough. Sol. Dobson, Middlesbrough

Gazette, Nov. 11.

AINSLEY, THOMAS, grocer, Sunderland. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at eleven, at office of Sol. Fairclough, Sunderland

BALL, CHARLES THOMAS, leather seller, Northampton. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sol. Becke, Northampton

BAPTIST, JAMES, leather seller, Goldsmith's-row, Hackney-rd. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at twelve, at office of Messrs. Lovering, Gresham-st. Sol. Montagu, Bucklersbury

BARTLETT, CHARLES, Birmingham agent, Charles-st, Hatton-gdn. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 22, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Aird, Bastcheap

BRAND, WILLIAM HENRY, metal broker, Middlesborough. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Fawcett, Garbutt, and Fawcett, Stockton-on-Tees

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER WISE, travelling draper, Bedminster. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 24, at two, at office of Sol. Ray, Bristol

CHAPMAN, JOHN, farmer, Huntingdon. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 26, at eleven, at the George hotel, Huntingdon. Sol. Hunnybun, Huntingdon

CHATTERLEY, JOHN, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at twelve, at office of Sol. Free, Birmingham

CLAPTON, JOHN, out of business, Sidbury. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Pitt, Worcester

DOBBS, GEORGE, carriage builder, Albion-rd, Hammersmith. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 19, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Marshall, King-st-west, Hammersmith

DORRINGTON, WILLIAM HOWITT, dealer in agricultural implements, St. Alban's. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov 20, at three, at the George hotel, St. Alban's. Sol. Annesley, St. Alban's

DUNN, JOHN, grocer, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at twelve, at office of Sol. Jacobs, Kingston-upon-Hull

ELLIS, JOHN, bootmaker, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 26, at three, at offices of Gibson and Holland, public accountants, Liverpool. Sols. Harvey and Alsop, Liverpool

EMSEX, JONATHAN GILEAD, baker, Mile-end-rd. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Ager, Barnard's-inn, Holborn. Sol. Roberts, Thanet-pl, Temple-bar

FARSTONE, WILLIAM, butcher, Romsey. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at four, at office of Sol. Kilby, Southampton

FRANCE, WILLIAM, beerseller, Bedford Leigh. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Richardson and Dowling, Bolton

GOODALL, GEORGE, baker, King's-rd, Chelsea. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at four, at the New Corn Exchange tavern, Mark-la. Sol. Cutler, Bell-yd, Doctors'-commons

HANNEL, ABRAHAM, baker, Kislingbury. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Jeffery, Northampton

HENRY, MICHAEL LEON, of no occupation, Canonbury-ter, Islington. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sol. Coburn, Leadenhall-st

HODGKINSON, WILLIAM, shoe manufacturer, Chorlton-upon-Medlock. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester

HOPKINS, WILLIAM, surgeon, Handsworth. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of Sols. Wright and Marshall, Birmingham

HOWE, SAMUEL, Kettering, and BURRELL, WILLIAM ROBERT, Kettering and Lowestoft, shoe manufacturers. Pet. Nov. 7 Nov. 24, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Shoesmith, Newland

ISAACS, HENRY, carver, Leman-st, Goodman's-fields. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sol. Brighten, Bishopsgate-st-without

JOHNSON, THOMAS COATES, hotel keeper, Luton. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 25, at eleven, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Cann, Fenchurch-st

KANE, CORNELIUS, boot dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at one, at office of Nine, public accountant, Liverpool. Sol. Drewe, Liverpool

KELLY, JOSEPH, builder, Pendleton. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester

LIVERSIDGE, DAN, yarn spinner, Almondbury. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sol. Ramsden, Huddersfield

LUGAR, FRANCIS ALBERT, chemist, Derby. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 3, at two, at offices of Sol. Hextall, Derby

MALLINSON, STEPHEN, commission merchant, Bread-st. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 20, at two, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sols. Phelps and Sidgwick, Gresham-st

MANN, ROBERT, jun., builder, St. Alban's. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sols. Mills and Lockyer, Brunswick-pl, City-rd

NATABLE, WILLIAM GEORGE, box manufacturer, Twister's-alley, Bunhill-row. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Anderson, Ironmonger-la

MATTHEWS, SAMUEL, butcher, Newton Abbot. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 27, at twelve, at Magor's Commercial hotel, Newton Abbot. Sol. Watts, Newton Abbot

MILLER, JOHN GRAHAM, draper, Congleton. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 22, at eleven, at office of Sol. Cooper, Congleton

MITCHELL, HENRY, DAY, EDWARD JOSEPH, and BUTTERWORTH, JOSEPH, woollen manufacturer, Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 7, Nov. 24, at three, at the Royal hotel, Dewsbury, Sol. Ibberson. Dewsbury

MITCHESON, JOHN, grocer, South Shields. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Mabane, South Shields

MYERS, FREDERICK, professor of music, Nottingham. Pet. Nov 7. Nov. 26, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Wells and Hind, Nottingham

OLIVER, JOSEPH, plumber, Metheringham. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at eleven, at office of Jay, accountant, Lincoln. Sol. Page, jun., Lincoln

OSMOND, JOSEPH, soda water manufacturer, Swindon. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 25, at two, at the Railway hotel, Barker's, New Swindon

PALMER, RICHARD, Bloom-st, Lower Norwood. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 26, at two, at office of Sols. Halse, Trustram, and Co., Cheapside

PENMAN, SAMUEL, chair manufacturer, Sweet Apple-ct, Bishopsgate-st-without. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at one, at offices of Sol. Batteley, London-wall

PHILPOTT, FREDERICK STEPHEN, farmer, Redmarley D'Abitot. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 25, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Corbett, Worcester

POCOCK, THOMAS, grocer, Duke-st, Grosvenor-sq. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at two, at 6, Portman-st, Portman-sq. Sol. Cooper

RANDS, WALTER JAMES, stationer, Hampstead-rd. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 25, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Eyre, John-st, Bedford-row

RIBBONS, ELIJAH, pork butcher, Southampton-st, Camberwell. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at two, at offices of Birchall, London-wall. Sol. Harrison, London-wall

RIDER, RICHARD, miller, Newland. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at one, at office of Sols. Messrs. Watson, Kingston-upon-Hull

ROBINSON, JOHN, licensed victualler, Stockton-on-Tees. Pet Nov. 6. Nov. 25, at eleven, at office of Sol. Robinson, Darlington

ROBINSON, PATRICK, woollen draper, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of Sol. Milnes, Huddersfield

SAUNDERS, HENRY, builder, Rochampton Priory Park. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Ditton, Ironmonger-lane

SHAW, HUGH, bricklayer, St. Helen's. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of Sol. Messrs. Quinn, Liverpool

SHEPHERD, JAMES, woollen carder, Rochdale. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Roberts, Rochdale

SMITH, JOHN, joiner, Fenton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 27, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Adderley and Marfleet, Longton

SMITH, WILLIAM, builder, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 22, at eleven, at office of Sol. Ledbury, Birmingham

STYLES, AUGUSTUS, farmer, Stone. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 28, at eleven, at office of Sols. Haywards, Keele, and Swann, Dartford

TAYLOR, SAMUEL, carved oak furniture manufacturer, High-st, Fulham. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 20, at two, at office of Sol. Verzede, Craven-st, Strand

TAYLOR, THOMAS, chemist, Bloxwich. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at two, at office of Sol. Clark, Willenhall

THOMAS, JOHN, grocer, Talleslu, par. Llanoynfelin. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 21, at twelve, at office of Sol. Jones, Aberystwith

THOMPSON, JOHN, hatter, Derby. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 26, at two, at offices of Sol. Hextall, Derby

THURSTANS, THOMAS, licensed victualler, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Turner, Wolverhampton

VANE, GEORGE, brassfounder, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 22, at ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham

WARDEN, JAMES, commission agent, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 17, at ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham

WELLS, JAMES, corn merchant, Wynford-rd, Islington. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 29, at two, at office of Webster, Basinghall-st. Sol. Popham, Vincent-ter, Islington

WILKINSON, WILLIAM, commercial traveller, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 20, at twelve, at office of Sol. Fairburn, Sheffield

WRIGHT, BERNARD ST. JOHN, draper, Marlborough-ter, Upper Holloway-rd. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Davis, New-inn, Strand

YATES, JOHN, machine maker, Birstal. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 25, at three, at office of Sol. Ibberson, Dewsbury

ZEWYBAUM, ABRAM BEAR, builder, Beaumont-sq, Mile-end-rd. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov 27, at three, at offices of Sols. Ingle, Cooper, and Holmes, City Bank-chbs, Threadneedle-st

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Oct. 30.

BUNN, JOHN, charter master, Saltwell s Coppice, Kingswinford

CHINNOCK, GEORGE WILLIAM, builder, Tibbat's-road, Bromley

Gazette, Nov. 7.

GIBLIN, WILLIAM, baker, High Ongar

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

MARRIAGE.

ADAMSON—SYNNOT.—On the 28th Aug., at Geelong, Victoria, Travers Adamson, Esq., barrister-at-law, to Catherine, younger daughter of the late George Synnot, Esq., of Fernside, near Geelong.

DEATH.

GOODE.—On the 2nd inst., at Belle Vue, Ryde, aged 80 years, Henry Goode, Esq., barrister-at-law.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.

When payment is made in postage stamps, not more than 5s. may be remitted at one time.

All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

COURT OF PROBATE.
In the Goods of BURCHMORE—
Administration—Minors—Next of kin out of the country—Grant to first cousin 377
In the Goods of HUGHES—
Administratrix—Widow received her moiety of estate 377

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.
THE CHAUDIERE GOLD MINING COMPANY OF BOSTON v. DESBARATS AND OTHERS—
Law of Lower Canada—Capacity of trading corporations to acquire land—Pleading 377

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
CROPPY v. BELLAMY—
Will—Maintenance and education—Discretion of trustees 380
Re THE UNITED PORTS AND GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY (WYNNE'S CASE)—
Company—Winding-up—Contributory.. 381
Ex parte RUFFLE; re DUMMELOW—
Composition—Proof of debt—Untaxed costs 384

V.C. MALINS' COURT.
HATTON v. HAYWOOD—
Judgment-creditor—Interest in land not capable of actual delivery in execution 385

V.C. BACON'S COURT.
KELLY v. HODGE—
Costs—Copyright—Piracy—Inquiry as to profits 387

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
ROBERTS (app.) v. HUMPHREYS (resp.)—
Sale of intoxicating liquors within prohibited hours 387
REG. v. FAWLETT—
Quarter sessions—Appeal—Power of justices to make rules regulating practice 390
TAYLOR v. FORD—
Foreign process—Prima facie validity—Tre-pass—Malicious action 392
RICHARDSON v. SILVESTER—
County Court action—Particulars of claim 395
LEWIS v. LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER RAILWAY COMPANY—
Negligence—Railway company—Invitation to alight at a station—Evidence for jury 397

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
JONES v. JACKSON—
Innkeeper—Loss of valuables—Negligence 399
THE LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY v. GIDLOW—
Practice—Interest on judgment for costs in the cause 399
PALMER v. ROBERTS—
Summons before a master for security for costs, or to remit the cause to a County Court 403

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.
THE CHARKIEH—
Collision—Cross cause—Security 404
THE MELPOMENE—
Salvage—Attempt to render assistance—Ultimate salvage by others 405
THE CITY OF MOBILE—
Master's wages and disbursements 406

CROWN CASES RESERVED.
REG. v. RICHMOND—
Larceny—Servant—Bailee 408

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS..... 47
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 47
Adjournment of Criminal Trials 49
Parol Evidence of Collateral Agreements. 49
Searches, Inquiries, and Notices 50
Illegal Consideration: The Position of a Particeps Criminis 50
The Judicial Statistics for 1872..... 51
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 52
Notes of New Decisions..... 53
V.C. Hall's Court 53
Applications against Attorneys 54
Correspondence..... 55
To Correspondents 55
Reports of Sales 55
ELECTION LAW:—
Election Petition Costs..... 55
THE BENCH AND THE BAR:—
Calls to the Bar 55
MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Court of Common Pleas 56
Practice under the Licensing Act 1872..... 56
REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Notes of New Decisions 57
MERCANTILE LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 58
COUNTY COURTS:—
Bradford County Court..... 58
Croydon County Court 58
Guildford Police Court 59
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Court of Bankruptcy 60
LEGAL NEWS 60
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Questions asked at the Intermediate Examination..... 60
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION..... 60
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 61
LAW SOCIETIES:—
Law Amendment Society..... 62
Articled Clerks' Society 62
Legal Practitioners' Society 62
Manchester Law Students' Debating Society 62
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Bankruptcy Court..... 62
THE GAZETTES 62
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 64

The Law and the Lawyers.

IT is said to be the intention of our present Government to depart from the ancient practice of regarding the Chief-Justiceships of the common law courts as the necessary rewards of law officers. We are inclined to think that this is acting in strict accordance with the spirit of the age, which Mr. DISRAELI says is evidence of supreme wisdom, for it cannot be disputed that the modern lawyer developes very little of the peculiar talent necessary to properly qualify a law officer. A law officer must be something more than a good lawyer—perhaps more of a Parliamentary debater and a man of letters than of a lawyer. For this reason we incline to think that Mr. HARCOURT will make just such a law officer as we want at present. But it is perfectly clear that he would make an inefficient Chief-Justice of any of our common law courts; and if, by the further elevation of Mr. JAMES, Mr. HARCOURT became Attorney-General, it is certainly desirable that the next vacancy in the Chief-Justiceships should not be regarded as his as a matter of right.

THE Great Western Railway Company has been particularly unfortunate in the cases which it has contested lately, but it evidently cares little whether it wins or loses in the County Court. In an action brought by Mr. FORSYTH to recover damages for unpunctuality, a sufficiently vigorous defence was made; but in another case heard on the same day (a short report of which we have published) "Mr. MASON, from the Company's Paddington office," attended on their behalf. A question of law arose out of the plaintiff's case, which was reserved, and "Mr. MASON" was proceeding to cross-examine the plaintiff, when he was very properly stopped by the judge, Mr. STONOR, who observed that the company ought to have been represented by a professional man. The question of law raised was whether horse-clothing was personal luggage. "Mr. MASON" contended that it was not. The horse-clothing in question was wrapped up and labelled as the luggage of the person to whom it belonged, and the weight was not objected to. There could be no great difficulty in dealing with such a point as this, but it is to the interest of companies as well as individuals to be efficiently represented in Courts of law.

THE Court of Exchequer had recently to consider the important question of the jurisdiction vested in masters to remit actions to the County Court. Baron BRAMWELL said that there appeared to be an impression that masters had no power to deal with summonses for such purposes, and declared this impression to be erroneous. In the particular case a dressmaker, whose means were small, suffered damage by an accident when getting into the defendant's omnibus. She brought her action, and a summons was taken out under the County Court Act 1867, to refer the cause to a County Court. The parties went before Sir F. POLLOCK, who declined to make any order. On appeal to Mr. Justice DENMAN, he made no order, but without prejudice to an application to the court, which was accordingly made, and the court held that the master had jurisdiction: the parties had gone before him, he had made no order, and that should be final, he having declared in effect that it was an action fit to be tried in the Superior Court. We refer our readers to the report of the case in our issue of the LAW TIMES Reports of this week; it will be found instructive as to the jurisdiction and practice at judges' chambers.

AT a meeting of the King's-cross Branch of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, held last week, it was stated that Mr. Bass was framing a bill to secure compensation to railway servants injured in the performance of their duties. Of course everyone will sympathise with the wish of a hardworking, and in many cases overworked, body of men, that their death or injury by accident should not leave their families altogether without provision for the future. Whether, however, it is the duty of railway companies to make provision in such cases is open to question. It is difficult to see how any distinction can be made between the case of the servants of railway companies and servants engaged in other employments. The well-known rule on the general question is that a servant cannot recover from his master compensation for injuries caused by the neglect or misconduct of his fellow-servant. The reason for this rule is that a servant enters on his employment knowing the risks of the particular service, and agreeing to accept his fellow servants as competent to perform their duties. If he is dissatisfied with his position and the risks attached to it, he can leave, but his continuance therein must be taken as proof that he is satisfied. It may be added that if a liability of this kind were attached to masters it would be almost impossible to carry on a business of large extent, and in which many hands are employed. This being the general rule, can a distinction be drawn between servants generally and railway servants. We can see no reason for such a distinction. It will no doubt be urged that the risks attached to the working of railways are very great, that the operations are extensive and complicated, and the number of servants very large; that consequently the risks are very much increased. There is another reason which will have its effect, though it will probably not be put forward, namely, that it is always fair to make a railway company pay as much as possible because they can afford it. If this mode of reasoning were sound, it would apply to many other occcupations, as to miners and sailors, but we think it is not sound. A railway servant, a miner, or a sailor, enters on his employment subject to the risks incident to it, and his remuneration should be proportionate. Here is the point where any remedy for the hardships endured by railway servants should be applied. The railway companies may fairly be called upon to pay such wages as will enable their servants to provide against the effects of accident, either by saving or insurance, but neither railway companies nor any other employers of labour can be made to insure their servants against their fellow servants' carelessness or neglect. There are cases where accidents are caused by the overworking of signalmen or guards, or by the neglect of the directors to provide proper appliances for working the system. But in these cases the real remedy is not to alter the law, but to bring the fault home to the directors or employers, when the law, as it at present stands, would meet the case; for masters are now liable to their servants for the consequences of their own faults. If such a Bill as that alluded to is introduced into Parliament it will undoubtedly meet with strong opposition on the part of the railway companies, and their advocates will not want reasons to urge against its being passed into law.

THE County Court Judge of Surrey has decided a case on the Married Women's Property Act 1870, which gives it, we think, a more extended operation than can be safely sanctioned. It was alleged that the married woman, whose goods had been seized, had invested her separate earnings in such goods. She kept a lodging house, and her husband lived with her. It was argued by counsel for execution creditors that as the claimant's husband was living with her in the lodging house, she could not be said to have carried on the business of such lodging house separately from her husband. To this his HONOUR replied, "I think that if it had been the intention of the Legislature to limit the provision of the Act to cases where the wife lived apart from her husband, or gained her earnings or wages at some other place than where her husband resided, such intention would have been clearly and unequivocally expressed, and that it is not necessary for the separate carrying on of a business by a married woman that she should live apart from her husband, or gain her earnings or wages elsewhere than where he resides, but only that he should not carry on, or assist, or take part in carrying on such business." Any construction may be placed upon an Act so ill-framed as the Married Women's Property Act, and it would hardly be possible to say that it was wrong; but we think the Act should be so construed as to prevent frauds upon creditors, which the construction of the learned County Court Judge obviously facilitates.

MR. VERNON HARCOURT is not a Solicitor-General of the conventional type. Having been for a number of years a member of the Parliamentary Bar, he relinquished the active practice of his profession to pursue political honours. The line which he has taken in the House, however, has been of a quasi-legal character, his greatest hits having been made in connection with International law and the law of conspiracy. His success as a debater, although marred in a measure by some faults of temper, has been unquestionable, and that he possesses very considerable power is universally admitted. From a political and administrative point of view a man with these qualifications must be a most desirable law officer; but we anticipate that his want of familiarity with the practice of the ordinary tribunals will be found to be a drawback of no small magnitude. And we cannot consider him fortunate in being led by an Attorney-General who, excellent as he would have been as a subordinate, is not of the calibre to which we have been accustomed in our first law officer. This is not so much Mr. JAMES's fault as the fault of accidental circumstances. Rarely has a rise been so rapid; he had not the opportunity of learning the elementary duties of his office—which he would soon have done under such a master as Sir JOHN COLERIDGE—before the post above him became vacant. The rather singular combination of talent which we find in our law officers will therefore be entitled to every consideration if in some respects it fails of practical efficiency. Generally, no doubt, Mr. HARCOURT will give strength to the Government, and if his zeal for law reform does not abate under the influence of office we may look forward to some useful measures of a practical character.

Two important cases arising out of the liquidation of the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan were before the Court of Appeal in Chancery on Wednesday. The appeals came from Vice-Chancellor WICKENS' Court; one decision appealed from being that of the late VICE-CHANCELLOR, and the other that of Lord Justice JAMES sitting for him. The effect of those decisions was to declare the right of CAMPBELL, HIPPISLEY, and ALISON to repayment with interest of all moneys paid by them upon exchanging their shares in the Imperial Bank of India, China, and Japan, in pursuance of an arrangement entered into between the two banks under which the business and assets of the Imperial were transferred to the Hindustan, while the capital of the Hindustan was to be increased from £2,000,000 to £4,000,000 by the issue of 20,000 new shares, which were to be offered to the Imperial shareholders upon certain terms. The question involved was whether the resolutions authorising the increase of capital were good under sect. 12 of the Act of 1862, and bound the dissentient shareholders of the Imperial. That section says that any company may so far modify the conditions contained in its memorandum of association, if authorised to do so by its regulations as originally framed, or as altered by special resolution as thereinafter mentioned, as to increase its capital by the issue of new shares of such amount as it may deem expedient or to consolidate and divide its capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares. Sect. 50 gives power to the company in general meeting to pass a special resolution altering the regulations contained in the articles of association. The dry point was whether, having altered their regulations by special resolution, the bank could issue new shares. "If," said Lord SELBORNE, "the effect of the resolution was necessarily to alter the regulations of the company—that is, the articles of association as originally framed—by authorising an increase of the capital by the issue of new shares which those articles did not authorise, then I think it was sufficient to enable the company to modify, by an actual issue of new shares, pursuant to that authority, the conditions as to the amount of capital of the company contained in the memorandum of association." The LORD CHIEF BARON, when the question of the effect of the resolution and the actual issue of shares was before the Exchequer Chamber in Alison's case, came to the conclusion that the resolution was bad as attempting to combine, uno flatu, two operations, namely, the authorisation of the increase of capital by the issue of new shares, and the actual increase of such capital by the creation of such new shares—the one, in his opinion, being a condition precedent to the second. On this the LORD CHANCELLOR differed, being of opinion that it is not necessary that the second of these two operations should be performed by any resolution at all. "The authority to make the issue," his Lordship said, "was indeed required to be given by a special resolution; but the power of issue, when once given, was capable of being exercised by the board of directors." This is a principle which is of importance beyond the particular cases which were under review.

THE law of extradition has been for a long time in an uncertain condition, and the practice ill-defined. The recent discussion before the Court of Common Pleas, in the case of Emile Ferrand, a French prisoner, showed that recent legislation has taken a leap which is of very questionable expediency. The question in Ferrand's case was, whether evidence could be taken in England in relation to a prosecution pending before foreign tribunals. The objections to allowing such a course raised by Mr. Justice KEATING, were, that the application to the court must necessarily be ex parte, and the proceedings conducted in the absence of the prisoner; and, further, the Act of 1856 directed that the Lord Chancellor and two Judges should frame rules for giving effect to the provisions of the Act, and regulating procedure under it, which had not been done. To the first objection the case of Re Elise Counhaye (28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 761), is an answer. There Mr. Justice BLACKBURN said: "I believe we are all agreed that the 14th section (of the Extradition Act 1870), makes depositions admissible in evidence, provided they are duly authenticated without regard to their having been taken in the manner required by our law. Whether depositions are taken upon the investigations of the particular charge made in this country, or whether taken in the presence of the accused, are matters which we need not consider as affecting the admissibility of the documents. I believe those are points which are seldom or never considered of importance in other European countries, and the section is, I think, satisfied if the authentication is established." His Lordship added, for the guidance of magistrates, "I wish, however, to guard myself from being supposed to lay down that a magistrate should accept as indisputable all that is deposed against a person in his absence, or upon a charge against another person. Such a deposition he should take, of course, with qualification, although he cannot refuse to admit it." In Ferrand's case the application was not, as in Counhaye's case, to discharge a prisoner out of custody, but to examine witnesses in England in order to furnish the French Government with materials for the prosecution of the prisoner in France. Sect. 14 of the Act of 1870 enacts that depositions or statements on oath taken in a foreign State, and copies of such original depositions or statements, and foreign certificates of or judicial documents stating the fact of conviction may, if duly authenticated, be received in evidence under this Act. By the Amendment Act of the present year this section was made to include affirmations and copies of affirmations. Then, sect. 5 of this last Act provides that a Secretary of State may, by order under his hand and seal, require a police magistrate or a justice of the peace to take evidence for the purposes of any criminal matter pending in any court or tribunal in any foreign State; and the police magistrate or justice of the peace, upon the receipt of such order, shall take the evidence of every witness appearing before him for the purpose, in like manner as if such witness appeared on a charge against some defendant for an indictable offence. . . . . "Such evidence may be taken in the presence or absence of the person charged, if any, and the fact of such presence or absence shall be stated in such deposition." Mr. Justice BRETT remarked that had it not been for this section he should have thought it was a fundamental principle of English law that no examination should be taken in a prisoner's absence. So that we have an Act of Parliament in direct conflict with the fundamental principles of our law—and this simply to facilitate legal procedure in a foreign State. The Court of Common Pleas have not yet arrived at any decision, and it is certainly remarkable that they should hesitate to make an order so as to bring the statute of this year into full operation.

ADJOURNMENTS OF CRIMINAL TRIALS.

A VERY grave question is raised by the adjournment of the Tichborne trial for the purpose of obtaining further evidence—a grave question not only as regards that particular case, but as regards all criminal trials in general. If the adjournment was not warranted in law there can be no doubt it is an error in the law which will invalidate the trial. If it was warranted in law, then it will alter the whole of our criminal procedure, and have grave results on the administration of justice. Beyond all doubt Judges have always hitherto been under the impression, and been firmly persuaded, that there was no power of adjournment in criminal cases, any more than for the discharge of a jury except for actual physical necessity. In old times it was not unusual to discharge a jury in order to allow the prosecution to get fresh evidence, but Lord Hale and Mr. Justice Foster both reprobated the usage as an abuse, and Foster said, "Let us hope the question will never again be raised whether such a practice can be right." It is obvious that Judges resorted to the practice because they were well aware that they had no direct power of adjournment for purposes of evidence, and so they sought to attain their object by indirect means. An adjournment for purposes of evidence has never been heard of either in a civil or a criminal case. No doubt actual physical necessity would justify a discharge of a jury or an adjournment; and thus, in 1754, in the trial of Elizabeth Canning for perjury, which lasted fifteen days, the trial was adjourned de die in diem. But except on the ground of physical necessity no adjournment could take place in a criminal trial, either for felony or misdemeanor, and so said Lord Chief Baron Macdonald when alluding to Canning's case, as one of necessity. "There," he said, "physical necessity forced an adjournment." But in 1781, in the trial of Lord George Gordon, Lord Mansfield sat from eight in the morning until five the next morning, which he would not have done had he not felt bound in law to sit as long as he found it physically possible.

In the trials for high treason in 1794, which lasted several days, Lord Ellenborough and Lord Chief Baron Macdonald expressly recognised the general rule in cases of felony or misdemeanor, and put the adjournment on the ground of physical necessity, concluding thus: "except in the case of physical necessity or impossibility the rule ought to be observed." And the adjournment was also strictly limited to the necessity, and Lord Ellenborough said the court must sit from day to day as "closely and diligently as they could." The same principle was laid down by Lord Kenyon in 1796; and he expressly put the adjournment from day to day on the ground of actual physical necessity. He also carefully directed a special entry on the record of the necessity for the adjournment, obviously in order to guard against error in law which would otherwise lie; for there would be a hiatus in the proceedings otherwise unexplained and unjustified, according to the settled rule of law, and the result would be that the trial would be invalid. If it were not so then there would be an arbritary power of adjournment for any reason, and among others to enable the prosecutors to better their case, the very thing which Hale and Foster deprecated as an abuse. Therefore the reason for the adjournment must appear on the record, and be a reason valid in law. The same rule of law was laid down by the Court of King's Bench in the time of Lord Tenterden, that in a criminal case, whether misdemeanor or felony, there can be no adjournment, except for actual physical necessity. The only difference is that in cases of felony the jury cannot be allowed to separate during the necessary adjournments from day to day. The general rule was the same. There was no power of adjournment for purposes of justice, either in civil or criminal cases. Hence the most iniquitous lawsuits took place daily from the want of evidence which could often have been supplied, but no such thing as an adjournment for the purpose ever took place. Criminals were acquitted at every assize owing to the absence of evidence which could often be supplied, and no one ever dreamt of a general power of adjournment for purposes of justice. In 1853 the Common Law Commissioners reported that it was unfortunate that in civil cases there was no such power, and in the Act of 1854 an enactment was inserted which conferred it. But the law in criminal trials remained the same; and hence the greatest of our judges have held, over and over again, that there was no power of adjournment for purposes of evidence. Among those who have so held have been Gurney, Wightman, Cresswell, Willes, and Watson. The utmost that they have ever been known to do has been to wait for an hour or two; suspending the trial; not adjourning it; and keeping the prisoner meanwhile in the dock—in order to avoid even the appearance of an adjournment. In 1865 Mr. Denison's Act passed, for assimilating the practice of criminal trials to civil, but it contained no enactment on this head. And in 1866 the Court of Queen's Bench, in Winsor's case, fully adopted the doctrine of Foster and Hale that the court could not discharge a jury in order to enable the prosecution to get further evidence; and only upheld the power in cases of actual necessity. The same doctrine was upheld in the court of error, and though there are dicta in the judgments which are wider than the decision, the record showed a case of actual necessity, arising from various physical causes, and the judgment only was that it did show such a case of necessity. Several hours had elapsed; it was near midnight on Saturday, and the commission was to be opened at the next assize town, where the business was heavy, and the jury were not likely to agree. The result was a very strong case of actual necessity, and it was fully stated on the record. It was quite understood in that case, and is implied in the judgment, that if a good cause for the discharge was not shown it would have been error in law, for the case went to a court of error on that ground. The same rule of law applies to an adjournment, and the discharge of the jury was only resorted to in lieu of an adjournment, because an adjournment was known to be inadmissible. A very high degree of actual necessity was never sufficient to justify the discharge of a jury; but the judges have held for centuries that there must be an actual physical necessity to justify an adjournment. If it were otherwise the whole of our criminal system of justice would have to be altered, and the gravest inconveniences would arise. What Justice Mellor meant by saying that it has been done "hundreds of times" no one can surmise? No one engaged in the practice of criminal justice has ever heard of it, and the greatest Judges in our own times have declared that it was inadmissible. The passage cited by Mr. Justice Lush from Archbold's Criminal Pleading is utterly incorrect, as anyone will see who examines the original cases. They were not cases of adjournment at all, but only a brief suspension of the trial on account of some unavoidable accident. No one can say that in the present case there is any accident or neccessity, nor any greater expediency for purposes of justice than always appears when an unforeseen defence is made. This constantly happens at sessions and assizes; and though there may be good ground for legislation, that does not justify a change of the law by the judiciary. The defeat of justice in a particular case has often happened, but it was never considered enough to warrant the judges in altering the rules of law. The Judges are sworn, not to administer justice but to administer justice according to law. That means according to settled rules and traditions. And no one has ever yet heard of a power in the Judges to do whatever they think good for the furtherance of justice. Such a notion must be erroneous, for it would dispense with legislation, and give the Judges power to alter the law.

PAROL EVIDENCE OF COLLATERAL AGREEMENTS.

WHEREVER the hard and fast rule excluding parol evidence to control or vary a written document can be relaxed with advantage, there cannot be two opinions concerning the advisability of such relaxation. We have recently had two important illustrations of the view which courts having equitable jurisdiction will adopt in construing agreements which do not fully carry out the declared intentions of the parties. In Erskine v. Adeane (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 234), Lord Justice Mellish said, "The common law of England is distinguished from the law of almost all other countries by the fact that it does not imply contracts and agreements to anything like the same extent, but generally obliges those who make contracts to insert in those contracts all the stipulations by which they intend to be bound." "No doubt then," his Lordship added, "there are cases in which obligations may be implied, but as a general rule, the man who wishes to have a particular stipulation for his benefit, must take care to have that stipulation inserted in the contract."

Such stipulations being omitted from an agreement, the point to be considered is whether the stipulation cannot be substantiated as a collateral agreement. The case of Erskine v. Adeane and that of The Llanelly Railway and Dock Company v. London and North-Western Railway (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 357), furnish some useful information upon this subject. In the former case two questions were raised, the one relating to the keeping fences in repair, and the other to keeping down the game. It was held that a covenant by the lessor to keep up the fences could not be imported into the lease, and on the second point that there was sufficient evidence of a collateral promise by the lessor to keep down the game to entitle the lessee to compensation for damage done by game upon the land. This case is the more important because it must frequently happen that the execution of an agricultural lease is induced by a promise such as we have referred to; and indeed the same question arose in Morgan v. Griffith (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 783). There the lessee urged the insertion in the lease of a clause providing that the rabbits on the land should be destroyed. The lessor refused to insert such a covenant, but the promise of the lessor that they should be destroyed was proved by the lessee to the satisfaction of the County Court Judge and the Court of Exchequer, to which the appeal was carried. The point of law was whether the parol evidence was admissible, and it was argued that the alleged promise imposed upon the landlord an onerous obligation, and was inconsistent with the full enjoyment of the right of shooting for pleasure contained in the lease. That, it was said, distinguished the case from Lindley v. Lacey (17 C. B., N. S., 578; 11 L. T. Rep. N. S. 273), where an undertaking to stay an action against the plaintiff was part of the consideration which induced the plaintiff to sell the defendant certain fixtures and furniture. The first agreement containing this term was verbal, and the subsequent written agreement did not contain it. The action was not stayed and the plaintiff brought his action to recover damages against the defendant, and the jury found that his undertaking was a distinct collateral agreement, and the court held that it was admissible in evidence.

In the case of The Llanelly Railway and Dock Company v. The London and North-Western Railway Company, collateral matter was referred to to show the nature of the consideration for an agreement in the result held to be indeterminable. The agreement between the two companies was, as Lord Justice Mellish stated, so onerous upon one, making their line liable to carry the trains of the other, and there being no reciprocal clauses, that it would have been held to be determinable upon due notice. But on the letters which passed before the execution of the agreement being looked at, it was found that a large sum of money was advanced by the defendant company to the plaintiff company to enable them to complete their railway—a sum which the plaintiff company could not have borrowed in the market at all when it was so advanced. "You may treat it," said Lord Justice James, "as a collateral bargain which should not be revoked, just as we let in evidence the other day, in the case of a lease, of a collateral bargain by a landlord to keep down the game; and just as in the case of mutual wills, you cannot read the one will for the purpose of construing the other; but you can give evidence that there were two wills made, for the purpose of showing that there was a mutual agreement between the testators that the will should not be revoked." To this his Lordship added: "You can give evidence of anything to rebut an implication of a resulting trust, or to rebut an implication of an advancement for a child, or a person to whom the donor or the purchaser is in loco parentis."

In short, the leaning of the Courts plainly is to give effect to all evidence adding terms to agreements if those terms can be made to appear an essential part of the consideration; and the cases we have cited are very good illustrations of the class of contract which may be affected by collateral agreements. Parties, however, must be prepared with the most satisfactory proof of collateral agreements. Lord Justice Mellish said he should not be contented with evidence only of one of the immediate parties as to what took place when no one else was present.

SEARCHES, INQUIRIES, AND NOTICES.

Disentailing Assurances.

(Continued from p. 33.)

Power was given to a commissioner in bankruptcy to dispose by way of sale of the lands of which the bankrupt was actual tenant in tail for as large an estate as the bankrupt could, had he not been bankrupt, then have done; such disposition to be by deed (sect. 56), and "unless the lands were of copyhold tenure" to be enrolled in Chancery within six calendar months of its execution, and if the lands were of copyhold tenure, then to be entered on the court rolls (sect. 59). Where there was no protector, the commissioners could enlarge a base fee of a bankrupt tenant in tail (sect. 57), and the consent of the protector is to have the same effect when given to a disposition by a commissioner, as when given to the disposition of an ordinary tenant in tail (sect. 58). A disposition by a commissioner which creates a base fee has this advantage over a disposition made by an ordinary tenant in tail, that if during the continuance of the base fee, or, in other words, the existence of the bankrupt's issue, there ceases to be a protector of the settlement, the base fee immediately thereupon becomes enlarged (sect. 60), and a similar result will happen when the base fee had been created previously to the bankruptcy (sect. 61). A voidable estate created in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration by a tenant in tail becoming bankrupt, or by a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee becoming bankrupt, is to be confirmed by the disposition of the commissioner to the extent to which the commissioner could dispose of the land with the benefit of the chance of the enlargement of the base fee by reason of there ceasing to be a protector during its continuance, but no confirmation will take place by a disposition to a purchaser from the commissioner for valuable consideration without express notice of the voidable estate (sect. 62). Notwithstanding the death, during his bankruptcy, of the tenant in tail, or tenant in tail entitled to a base fee, the subsequent disposition of the commissioner was to have the same operation as if the bankrupt were living in the following cases: first, where at the bankrupt's death there was no protector of the settlement; secondly, where the bankrupt left issue inheritable, whether there was or was not a protector (sect. 65). The disposition by the commissioner of copyholds other than of an equitable estate, was to have the same effect as if the copyholds had been surrendered to the use of the person to whom the disposition was made, who might claim to be admitted upon payment of the proper fines and fees (sect. 66).

By the Bankruptcy Act 1849, sect. 208, the several clauses of the Fines and Recoveries Act to which we have above referred, and that to which we shall later on refer, and several others not material for our present purpose, were to extend and apply to proceedings in bankruptcy under a petition for adjudication as fully and effectually as if those clauses had been there re-enacted and expressly extended to such proceedings.

The Act of 1849 was repealed by an Act passed in 1869, but in lieu of the repealed enactments, the Bankruptcy Act 1869 empowered the trustee in bankruptcy to deal with any property to which the bankrupt is beneficially entitled as tenant in tail, in the same manner as the bankrupt might have dealt with the same, and the several sections above referred to of the Fines and Recoveries Act are to extend and apply to proceedings in bankruptcy under the Act of 1869, as if those sections were there re-enacted and made applicable in terms to such proceedings.

Lands to be sold, whether freehold or leasehold, or of any other tenure, where the sale moneys are subject to be invested in lands to be settled upon a tenant in tail, and money subject to be so invested, are to be treated as the lands to be purchased and be considered subject to the same estates, as the lands to be purchased, would, if purchased, have been actually subject to. Where copyholds are directed to be sold, the disposition must be entered on the court rolls. The disposition, however, of leaseholds for years or of money, is to confer upon the assignee personal estate only and be by assignment by deed, which is to have no operation under the Act, unless inrolled in Chancery within six months after its execution (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, sect. 71). In Re Brooking (6 Jur. N. S. 461), lands having been taken by a railway company who had paid the purchase-money into court, the tenant in tail included such lands with others in his disentailing assurance, but upon his application to the court for payment to him of the money, the company objected that no proper disposition had been made, a subsequent disentailing disposition of the money was made and inrolled, upon which the money was directed to be paid to the tenant in tail, and the company were directed to pay the costs of the second deed. In Re South-Eastern Railway Company (30 Beav. 215), the late Master of the Rolls considered that as the land had been actually conveyed to the company in fee simple, no disentailing assurance was necessary, and the decision in this case has been subsequently followed in the case of Notley v. Palmer (L. Rep. 1 Eq. 241).

Every deed required to be inrolled in Chancery, by which lands or money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands are disposed of under the Act is, when inrolled as required by the Act, to operate and take effect in the same manner as it would have done if the inrolment had not been required, except that every such deed is to be void against any person claiming such lands or money, or any part thereof, for valuable consideration under any subsequent deed duly inrolled, if such subsequent deed is first inrolled (sect. 74).

The Inrolment Office is in Chancery-lane, but in pursuance of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, a public record office has been built near Rolls-gardens, where all the records, with the exception of those of recent date, are kept. By the same Act sealed copies of recorded documents can be obtained and are evidence. Where any dealing takes place with a tenant in tail, or with lands which have formerly been the subject of an entail, search should be made to see that the disentailing deed was duly inrolled within the prescribed period of six months from its execution, and further to see that no prior disposition, voidable or otherwise, had been made by the tenant in tail. If the lands be of copyhold tenure, the search will not be at the Record and Inrolment Offices, but of the Court Rolls.

ILLEGAL CONSIDERATION: THE POSITION OF A PARTICEPS CRIMINIS.

Ayerst v. Jenkins (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 126).

In the above case an attempt was made by the representative of a particeps criminis to set aside a voluntary settlement made in favour of the settlor's deceased wife's sister, with whom he had cohabited. This is a state of things under which the suggestion of illegality is raised with the worst possible grace, and that it was set aside, and the settlement upheld, is creditable to our jurisprudence.

The plea of illegality or immorality, for whatever purpose advanced, is one which ought to be looked at very closely, and we shall presently indicate the peculiar position which is assumed when a particeps criminis endeavours to avail himself of it. Illegality of course embraces immorality, and the same principles of law apply whether the agreements or transactions are mala prohibita or mala in se. Transactions are mala prohibita where they are forbidden by statute, expressly or by implication; they are mala in se when immoral or plainly obnoxious to the common law. It is not difficult to deal with transactions which are mala prohibita, but it is not easy at all times, and under all circumstances, to say what agreements or acts are in themselves so bad as to justify the courts of equity in refusing to enforce contracts founded upon them, or to relieve parties from the consequences of them. And there is, in limine, a plain distinction between executory and executed contracts or transactions. In the case of Taylor v. Chester (21 L. T. Rep. N. S. 359; L. Rep. 4 Q. B. 311) Hannen, J., cited an observation of Parke, B., in Scarfe v. Morgan (4 M. & W., at p. 281), "If an illegal contract is executed, and a property, either special or general, has passed thereby, the property must remain." Upon that counsel observed, "That has never been decided; if it were law, the court would have to go into all the circumstances of the illegal contract to see if the property had passed." Upon this point Ayerst v. Jenkins throws some light, and the Lord Chancellor said that in cases presenting no circumstances obnoxious to the mind of the court, he thought it "consistent with all sound principle, and with all authority to recognise the importance of the distinction between a completed voluntary gift and irrevocable in law, and a bond or covenant for an illegal consideration, which has no effect whatever in law." His Lordship then referred to Whaley v. Norton (1 Vern. 483), in which the Master of the Rolls said, "that there would be a difference in these cases between a contract executed and executory, and that the court would extend relief as to things executory, which, if done, it may be might stand." To a similar effect was Lord Eldon's judgment in Rider v. Kidder (10 Ves. 366). And we conceive that the dicta and judgment delivered in Taylor v. Chester support this view as regards remedies at law as well as in equity. A completed gift for an immoral consideration cannot be set aside in equity, nor can the subject matter of an illegal contract, parted with by one person in pari delicto with another, be recovered back.

To discuss what is an illegal consideration opens a very wide field, and as we are dealing with Ayerst v. Jenkins, we will confine our attention to contracts tainted with immorality. In that case the Lord Chancellor referred to the collection of old authorities to be found in the note to Benyon v. Nettlefold (3 Mac. & G. 100), the result of which he thus stated: 1. Bonds or covenants founded on past co-habitation, whether adulterous, incestuous, or simply immoral, are valid in law, and not liable (unless there are other elements in the case) to be set aside in equity, 2. Such bonds or covenants, if given in consideration of future cohabitation, are void in law, and therefore of course also void in equity. 3. Relief cannot be given against any such bonds or covenants in equity if the illegal consideration appears on the face of the instrument. At law the principles are equally plain and well-established; and we pass on therefore to consider the position of a particeps criminis. The practice of the court of equity is this: If an illegal consideration does not appear on the face of the instrument, the objection of particeps criminis will not prevail against a bill of discovery in equity, in aid of the defence to an action at law. And under some circumstances (but not under all), when the consideration is unlawful, and does not appear on the face of the instrument, relief may be given to a particeps criminis in equity. In Ayerst v. Jenkins, as stated by Lord Selborne, relief was sought by the representative not merely of a particeps criminis, but of a voluntary and sole donor, on the naked ground of the illegality of his own intention and purpose; and that not against a bond or covenant or other obligation resting in fieri, but against a completed transfer of specific chattels, by which the legal estate in those chattels was absolutely vested in trustees, ten years before the bill was filed, for the sole benefit of the defendant." "I know no doctrine of public policy," said his Lordship, "which requires or authorises a court of equity to give assistance to such a plaintiff under such circumstances." The governing principle in such cases is, at law as well as in equity, "In pari delicto melior est conditio possidentis"—a maxim of law established, as Mr. Justice Mellor said in Taylor v. Chester, not for the benefit of plaintiffs or defendants, but founded on the principles of public policy, which will not assist a plaintiff who has paid over money or handed over property, in pursuance of an illegal or immoral contract, to recover it back; and as Lord Truro said, in Benyon v. Nettefold, the law, in sanctioning the defence of particeps criminis, does so on grounds of public policy, namely, that those who violate the law must not apply to the law for protection. Chancellor Kent has very well and concisely stated the condition of the law in sect. 467, vol. 2, of his Commentaries,—"A particeps criminis has been held to be entitled, in equity, on his own application, to relief against his own contract, when the contract was illegal or against the policy of the law, and relief became necessary to prevent injury to others. It was no objection that the plaintiff himself was a party to the illegal transaction:" (citing Estabrook v. Scott, 8 Ves. 446; St. John v. St. John, 11 Id. 526; and Jackman v. Mitchell, 13 Id. 581.) "But if a party, who may be entitled to resist a claim on account of its illegality, waives that privilege and fulfils the contract, he cannot be permitted to recover the money back; and the rule that potior et conditio possidentis will apply:" (Howson v. Hancock, 8 Term Rep. 575.)

We agree with Chief Justice Best, who, in Richardson v. Mellish (2 Bing. 229), expressed the opinion that the courts had gone too far in setting aside contracts on the ground that they were in contravention of the public policy, and that the objection in such cases ought to be founded on some clear and unquestionable principle and never applied to doubtful questions of policy.

THE JUDICIAL STATISTICS FOR 1872.

County Courts.

(Continued from page 19.)

The amount for which plaints were entered in 1872 is less by £71,340 than the amount for 1871. The amount in 1871 showed an increase of £17,370 over the amount for the preceding year, following an increase of £22,197 in 1870 over the amount in 1869, of £45,432 in 1869 over the amount in 1868, and an average increase of £243,341 in each of the three years preceding 1868. The average for each plaint entered in 1872 is £2 17s. 6d., against £2 17s. 10d. in 1871, £2 17s. 11d. in 1870, £2 16s. 4d. in 1869, £2 12s. 10d. in 1868, £2 6s. 7d. in 1867, £2 7s. in 1866, and £2 7s. 2d. in 1865.

The amount of debt for which judgment was obtained in 1872 on original hearings is 45·6 per cent. of the total amount for which plaints were entered. In 1871 this proportion was 49·7 per cent.; in 1870, 49·9 per cent.; in 1869, 50·5 per cent.; in 1868, 51·3 per cent.; in 1867, 52·2 per cent.; in 1866, 51·1 per cent.; in 1865, 50·2 per cent.; in 1864, 55·7 per cent.

The amount of costs in 1872 shows an increase of £690, as compared with the amount for 1871. The amount for 1871 was less than the amount for 1870 by £649. The amount for 1870 showed an increase of £2045 on the amount for 1869, following an increase of £1655 in 1869 on the amount for 1868, and an average increase of £6967 for each of the three years preceding 1868. The costs are 4·8 per cent. of the amount of debt for which judgments were obtained on original hearings in 1872, against 4·6 per cent. in 1871, 4·7 per cent. in 1870, 4·4 per cent. in 1868, and 4·1 in each of the years 1867 and 1866.

The amount of fees in 1872 was less by £8765 than the amount for 1871. The amount for 1871 exceeded the amount for 1870 by £5186, there having been a decrease of £4649 in 1870 as compared with the amount for 1869. The amount for 1869 showed an increase of £2919 as compared with the amount for 1868, following an average increase of £32,233 for each of the three years preceding 1868.

The following are the totals, under the different headings in the returns, of the proceedings in equity in the whole of the County Courts, for each of the years 1872, 1871, and 1870, with the average for the years 1867, 1868, and 1869, and the totals of the proceedings from the commencement of the operation of the Act on 1st Oct. 1865 to 31st Dec. 1866.

	1872.	1871.	1870.	Average 1867-8-9.	From 1st Oct. 1865 to 31st Dec. 1866.
Number of plaints entered:
For administration of estates	225	226	212	224	278
For the execution of trusts	27	26	24	52	63
For foreclosure or redemption, or for enforcing any charge or lien	96	135	143	112	153
For specific performance	89	107	90	102	120
For delivering up or cancelling any agreement for sale or purchase	5	4	8	9	12
For the dissolution or winding-up of a partnership	55	70	58	56	77
Number of petitions or notices filed:
For the appointment or removal of trustees	24	31	19	32	37
For any other purpose under Trustee Acts	54	50	74	42	43
For the maintenance or advancement of infants	6	15	6	12	15
For partitions	21	12	19	5	—
For injunctions	30	45	14	1 [20]	33
Number of instances of payments by trustees under section 24 o 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142	51	46	1	23	—
Total number of equitable suits or proceedings	683	767	668	685	831
Amount of subject matter in dispute or otherwise	£103,491	£116,692	£87,804	£87,834	£128,162
Amount of attorneys' costs allowed	£5,199	£4,499	£4,849	£5,364	£5,031
Amount of fees:
Payable to Consolidated Fund	£1,066	£1,189	£1,101	£1,047	£1,255
" Registrars	£1,817	£1,838	£1,815	£1,967	£2,339
" High Bailiffs	£638	£684	£654	£642	£847
Number of suits or proceedings pending on 31st December	244	239	247	256	266
Number of appeals	6	1	5	8	9
Numbers committed for contempt	2	2	5	5	4
Number of warrants of execution, possession, &c.	6	3	8	13	22

The following are the totals shown in the returns of the proceedings in Admiralty suits in the County Courts in 1872, 1871, 1870, and 1869:—

	1872	1871	1870	1869
Total number of Admiralty suits or proceedings	354	335	375	337
Arrests of vessels	141	138	144	99
Final decrees	111	89	131	123
Amount of claims	£35,536	£34,402	£28,345	£28,675
Amount of Attorneys' costs allowed	£1,488	£1,556	£1,729	£1,591
Amount of fees:
Court fund	£568	£574	£630	£528
Registrar	£563	£463	£528	£497
High Bailiff	£308	£247	£343	£263
Suits or proceedings pending	56	75	68	59
Appeals	10	—	1	3
Warrants of execution	2	8	23	10
Vessels sold:
Amount realised	£176	£656	£598	£541
Costs of sale	£24	£134	£45	£65
Cases settled	—	—	—	42
" adjourned sine die	—	—	—	4
" transferred to the High Court of Admiralty	1	2	—	6
" transferred to Cinque Ports Court of Admiralty	—	1	—	—
" transferred to County Courts	2	—	—	—
" withdrawn	1	—	—	—

It is supposed that the majority of the cases given as pending in the Hartlepool and Liverpool Courts and in City of London Court have been settled out of Court. It is stated also that in many instances the attorneys agreed upon the costs and settled the cases out of court, and that consequently they are not included in the return.

City of London Court.

Under the Act 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, which came into operation on the 1st Jan. 1868, the Sheriffs' Court of London was assimilated with the County Courts under the title of the City of London Court.

The following were the proceedings in this court for the recovery of debts in each of the years 1872 and 1871, with the average for 1870, 1869, and 1868, and the number in 1867 under the former jurisdiction of the court.

	1872.	1871.	Average 1870-69-68.	1867.
Plaints entered	14,257	13,683	14,604	11,739
Cases from the Superior Courts	44	—	59	—
Causes determined:
With a jury	35	42	45	58
Without a jury	6079	5719	6585	5574
Judgments:
For plaintiff	4576	4542	5406	4353
For plaintiff by consent or admission.	1146	885	805	797
Nonsuit	164	194	229	306
For defendant	228	190	189	176
Judgment summonses:
Issued	1179	1022	1158	1021
Heard	431	349	455	418
Warrants of commitment:
Issued	153	124	255	231
Debtors imprisoned	11	9	30	50
Executions against goods:
Issued	1905	1807	1903	1386
Sales made	23	18	28	19
Appeals	1	3	2	—
Orders to stay proceedings	—	—	—	—
Certiorari to remove proceedings	1	1	2	2
Total amount for which plaints entered	£60,751	£53,365	£64,498	£42,651
On judgments obtained by plaintiffs on original hearings:
Amount of debts	£24,725	£23,053	£27,946	£18,858
Amount of costs	£2169	£1904	£2235	£1532
Total amount of fees on all proceedings	£6882	7097	7998	5400
Number of days of sitting	171	176	172	—

The following are the totals of the equity proceedings in the City of London Court under the different headings in the table, in each of the years 1872, 1871, 1870, 1869, 1868:

	1872.	1871.	1870.	1869.	1868.
Total number of equitable suits or proceedings	2	9	9	11	14
Number of plaints entered:
For administration of estates	—	1	—	1	—
For the execution of trusts	—	—	1	1	1
For foreclosure or redemption, or enforcing any charge or lien	2	—	1	2	1
For specific performance	—	3	1	2	5
For delivering up or cancelling any agreement for sale or purchase	—	—	—	—	—
For the dissolution or winding-up of a partnership	—	2	3	3	2
Number of petitions or notices filed:
For the appointment or removal of trustees	—	—	—	—	1
For any other purpose under Trustee Acts	2	—	—	—	—
For the maintenance or advancement of infants	1	—	—	—	1
For partitions	—	—	—	—	—
For injunctions	1	—	—	—	—
Number of instances of payments by trustees under sect. 24 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142	2	3	3	2	3
Amount of subject matter in dispute or otherwise	£1465	£1313	£3906	£2589	£3563
Amount of attorneys costs allowed	£79	£22	£62	—	£134
Amount of fees:
Payable to consolidated fund	£17	£17	£22	£20	£17
" registrars	£18	£29	£46	£45	£35
" high bailiffs	£2	£3	£5	£15	£15
Number of suits or proceedings pending on 31st December	2	6	2	8	8
Number of appeals	—	—	1	—	—
Numbers committed for contempt	—	—	1	—	—
Number of warrants of execution, possession, &c.	—	—	1	—	—

The following are the totals shown in the return of the proceedings in Admiralty suits in 1872, 1871, 1870, and 1869 in the City of London Court:

	1872.	1871.	1870.	1869.
Total number of Admiralty suits or proceedings.	151	191	147	125
Arrests of vessels	39	40	43	45
Final decrees	56	64	63	40
Amount of claims	£12,150	£17,111	£12,284	£12,078
Amount of attorneys' costs allowed	£1513	£1243	£1124	£545
Amount of fees:
Court fund	£252	£286	£232	£221
Registrar	£238	£225	£213	£170
High Bailiff	£43	£47	£49	£43
Suits or proceedings pending	40	93	72	44
Appeals	1	4	3	6
Warrants of execution	8	5	6	1
Vessels sold:
Amount realised	£267	£124	£34	£146
Costs of sale	£3	£507	—	£18
Cases adjourned sine die	—	—	—	4
" transferred to High Court of Admiralty	—	1	2	6

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

We remind our readers that the annual certificate duty has been payable since the 15th inst., and must be paid before the 16th Dec. The names of solicitors taking out certificates before the 1st Jan. next will appear in next year's Law List. In the case of renewal certificates solicitors are uncertified from the 15th Nov. until the date of renewal, where such certificate is obtained after the 15th Dec.

The following law lectures and classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society. Monday, 24th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Tuesday, 25th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Wednesday, 26th, class, Conveyancing, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Friday, 28th, lecture, Common Law, 6 to 7 o'clock p.m. Members of the Incorporated Law Society are entitled to attend the lectures. Subscribers are not admitted after lectures have commenced.

Although the elevation of Mr. Hall to the Chancery Bench meets with undoubted approval, yet there is a somewhat strong feeling amongst solicitors that the claims of older and equally competent men have been overlooked. Mr. Glasse, Q.C., Mr. Amphlett, Q.C., and Mr. Southgate, Q.C., are named as such. There is a report, for which we cannot vouch, that Mr. Hall, during the vacation, was occupied, at the country seat of the Lord Chancellor, with laborious work connected with legal measures which have been or will be submitted to the Legislature.

At the annual meeting of the Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool held on the 5th inst., the report, which was taken as read, after stating that the number of members was 191, and after referring to the legislation of the session, contained the following, on the subject of the organisation of the Profession. "Your committee think it right to refer to the great advance made by the Incorporated Law Society of England towards this object." The report, after stating the alteration in the constitution of the society brought about by the new charter and bye-laws proceeds, "your committee have no doubt that henceforward the council will take a much more active lead in all matters that interest the Profession throughout the kingdom." The Vice-President on the occasion in question expressed "his gratification that the tendency of recent imperial measures had been in the direction of placing solicitors on an equality in regard to public appointments with barristers of seven years' standing." We are glad to hear it, and trust that such tendency may become more perceptible.

The delay in issuing commissions for oaths in the common law courts has always been somewhat excessive, and we are sorry to hear, that with a number of London and country applications to the judges to be so appointed, more delay than ever may be expected, owing to the greater demand than usual on the time of their Lordships. In applications made during the present week, we are told that the commissions will not be ready for a month at the least, perhaps two. This delay is the more unfortunate, as when the Supreme Court of Judicature Act comes into operation the mode of issuing commissions for oaths generally, is likely to undergo some material alterations.

The inconvenience which country solicitors experience who are in the habit of appearing in magistrates' courts is very great in connection with the practice which often obtains of an accused person being committed to custody under remand, or for trial, before the finding of the coroner's jury. A very strong illustration of this is to be found in the case of Re Reardon, referred to by us in our last issue, page 36, where the prisoner was by such committal prevented from attending the inquiry before the coroner, although it was desired by the coroner himself that the prisoner should be called as a witness, and where the prisoner's attorney swore that he was advised and believed that it was necessary that his client should be tendered as a witness. No doubt, as the law at present stands, a magistrate has no power to order the production of the prisoner before the coroner. It is, however, very hard on an accused person that to the double expense of a defence in the two courts he must add that of an application to the Superior Court for a writ of habeas corpus, and very embarrassing to his solicitor to feel that he cannot have his client before the coroner under the above circumstances except by virtue of such writ.

A complaint reaches us that the copies of affidavits now issued from the chambers of the Common Law Judges are in many cases so badly written as to be hardly legible. A country solicitor has forwarded one of these, and we certainly think the complaint is very well founded if what is before us may be taken as a specimen. The idea conveyed to our minds is that some incompetent youth is set to work to copy affidavits at so much a day or week instead of their being entrusted to law stationers or writers. Solicitors have a right to expect that they should be so copied as to facilitate the despatch of business, not to impede it.

The Master of the Rolls on a recent occasion dealt somewhat summarily with the parties to a suit which, being the last cause on the paper on the day in question, was ordered to be struck out because neither counsel nor solicitors was present. His Honour added that he should require very cogent reasons before he would consent to restore a cause to the paper struck out under such circumstances. No doubt his Honour has, since the commencement of Term, made great progress with his list, but the altered state of things in his court, as regards despatch of business, takes the Profession somewhat by surprise, and as it is probable that the parties to the cause in question have been long waiting for a hearing, and as, if not restored to the paper, it will probably be very many months before the cause is again reached, it is to be hoped that the suitors will not be thus severely dealt with owing to the neglect (if any) of their professional advisers. Solicitors will do well to watch more closely the cause list.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

RENTCHARGE IN FEE—REAL ACTION—3 & 4 WILL. 4, c. 27, s. 36.—The old remedy by real action for the recovery of a rentcharge in fee having been abolished by s. 36 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, an action of debt is now maintainable therefor: (Thomas v. Sylvester and others, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 290. Q. B.)

SPECIFIC LEGACY—DIVIDEND—APPORTIONMENT ACT 1870.—The dividend on shares in a public company, partly earned before the testator's death, but declared afterwards, belongs entirely to the specific legatee of the shares; and the Apportionment Act 1870 does not introduce any new rule in this respect: (Whitehead v. Whitehead, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 289. V.C. M.)

PRACTICE—REVIVOR—BILL DISMISSED—PETITION OF APPEAL—SUBSEQUENT DEATH OF PLAINTIFF.—In a suit to obtain a declaration that the defendant was a trustee of certain real estate for the plaintiff, the bill was dismissed. The plaintiff presented a petition of appeal, but died before the appeal was heard. On the application of a person claiming to be a devisee of the plaintiff, that the suit might stand revived against the defendant, and that the petition of appeal might, if necessary, be amended, order made: (Chadwick v. Chardwick, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 284. Chan.)

LANDLORD AND TENANT—LEASEHOLD INTEREST—YEARLY TENANCY.—Agreement entered into between A. and B., and signed by them, whereby A. "agreed to let" to B. a certain shop, "at the yearly rental of £36;" and A. further agreed "not to give B. notice to quit as long as he continued to pay the rent when due." At the time of entering into the agreement, A. was a lessee of the shop for a term of years, of which about ten years remained unexpired: Held, that under the agreement, B. was not merely a yearly tenant, but had a right to remain in possession for the unexpired residue of A.'s term, as long as he paid his rent when due: (Re King's Leasehold Estates, 29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 288. V.C. M.)

PLEA THAT DEFENDANT IS NOT EXECUTOR—ADMINISTRATION SUIT.—A testator by his will appointed A. and B. his executors. A creditor's suit was instituted against the two executors for the administration of the testator's estate, and the bill alleged, as the fact was, that one of the executors, B., had not proved the will or renounced probate. It also alleged that B. was indebted to the testator's estate, and that A. was insolvent, and did not intend to enforce the debt against B. By his answer B. disclaimed all interest, and offered to renounce. The plaintiff then amended his bill, introducing allegations with a view to interrogating B. as to his debt to the estate. To the amended bill B. put in a plea that he had by deed renounced probate before the bill was amended. Held (reversing the decision of Malins, V.C.) that the plea could not be sustained: (Morley v. White, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 289. Chan.).

TAXATION OF COSTS—OUTPORT CHARGES—AGENT NOT ATTORNEY OR PROCTOR—REVISION—SEPARATE BILLS OF COSTS.—The practice, which has hitherto obtained in the High Court of Admiralty, of presenting separate bills of costs for the London proctor's charges and for the outport or country agency charges, is now objectionable and must be discontinued for the future. Although a proctor may employ an agent, who is not an attorney or solicitor, to act as clerk pro hac vice, for the purpose of collecting evidence in a cause, &c., in the outports, and may lawfully charge for the expenses incurred in respect of such agent, as agency charges made by such an agent for doing work which is essentially the work of a proctor, attorney, or solicitor, such as "taking instructions for brief and drawing the same," &c., will not be allowed upon taxation: (The City of Brussels, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 312. Adm.)

VICE-CHANCELLOR HALL'S COURT.

Wednesday, Nov. 19.

Re THE COMMONWEALTH LAND, BUILDING, ESTATE, AND AUCTION COMPANY (LIMITED).

Solicitor and client—Writs of fi-fa issued against good faith—Process.

THIS matter came on to be heard on a motion on behalf of Mrs. Ann Hollington, and Mr. Alfred Jordan Hollington. The notice of motion asked that two writs of fieri facias, dated the 21st of April 1873, issued by the above-named company and Alfred Furness and others, shareholders in it, and directors respectively, to the Sheriffs of Middlesex and Surrey, against the goods and chattels of the applicants, might be set aside, as issued contrary to good faith, and that the company, A. Furness, and the other shareholders, or Mr. Robert King might pay the costs of the application. The notice asked, in the alternative, that, if the court should think the writs ought not to be set aside, then Mr. Robert King might be ordered to pay to the applicants the damages, costs, charges, and expenses attending the issuing of the writs, and also the costs of and occasioned by this application. The notice of motion was addressed to the company, to A. Furness, and the other shareholders in it; and to Mr. Nutt and Mr. Robert King, their respective solicitors; and to Mr. Robert King and his solicitor. The facts of the case were shortly these: In Dec. 1872, the applicants, who were two of the shareholders of the company, presented a petition to wind it up. The petition was heard on the 22nd Feb. 1873, and was dismissed with costs. The order directed payment by the petitioners to the company and the opposing shareholders, who were sixty-six in number, of their costs of the petition. The costs were taxed at 144*l.* 18s. 3*d.*, the taxing-master's certificate being dated the 4th April. On that day, Mr. King, the solicitor of the company, and the shareholders who had opposed the petition, wrote to Mr. Shearman, the solicitor of the petitioners, a letter, in which he said that unless he received the amount of the taxed costs in the course of the ensuing Monday he should proceed to enforce payment. That demand of payment was one which Mr. King was not entitled to make, the practice not enabling him to enforce payment until either the 17th April, or some later period. Mr. Shearman, upon receipt of that letter, wrote to Mr. Hollington informing him of the taxation of the costs, and requesting to have a cheque for the amount by the next morning. Mr. Hollington called upon Mr. Shearman the next morning and gave him a cheque for the amount. That was on a Saturday; and on the following Monday, the 7th April, Mr. Shearman wrote to Mr. King, whereupon the latter sent on the next day, the 8th April, a clerk to Mr. Shearman with a form of authority for his approval—that being an authority from Mr. King's clients to pay the taxed costs to him as their solicitor. It was alleged on behalf of the applicants that, on the clerk taking to Mr. Shearman on that occasion the form of authority, it was approved by him, and returned to the clerk approved, and that the clerk stated the authority would be signed in a few days. On the other hand, it was alleged that Mr. Shearman refused to approve the authority, and that it was re-delivered to the clerk, he being informed that Mr. Shearman declined to give an opinion upon it, but would require everything to be in strict form, or to that effect; and that the clerk did not say that the authority would be signed in a few days. There was no communication between Mr. Shearman and Mr. King in the interval between the 8th April and the 23rd April. On the 21st April Mr. King, as solicitor for the company, issued the two writs against the goods of the applicant—the one against Mr. Hollington, directed to the sheriff of Middlesex, and the other to the sheriff of Surrey, each for the sum of £144 18s. 3d. The writs were lodged by Mr. King with the sheriffs, and both writs were executed on the 22nd April. The officers were placed in possession of the business premises of Mr. Hollington at about half-past five of the afternoon of that day, he not having cash in hand to pay the amount, and being unable to obtain it from his bankers; the officers were also placed in possession of Mrs. Hollington's private residence. Mr. Hollington having communicated with Mr. Shearman, paid, on the following morning, under protest, £154 4s. 9d., the amount of the costs, and £9 6s. 6d., the costs of the levy, to the officers. At the time of that payment Mr. Shearman and Mr. Hollington only knew of the execution directed to the sheriff of Middlesex, and had not heard of a writ having been issued to the sheriff of Surrey; but in the afternoon of the same day Mr. Shearman was informed by Mrs. Hollington of the execution levied on her premises. Mr. Shearman thereupon informed the officers in possession of Mrs. Hollington's premises that he had paid the £154 4s. 9d., but the officers required payment of £4 0s. 6d., the expenses of the levy. Mr. Shearman was, on behalf of his client, Mrs. Hollington, obliged to pay, and accordingly did pay that sum in order to procure the withdrawal of the officers. On the same day Mr. Shearman wrote to Mr. King complaining of his conduct in issuing the writs as he had, thereby wantonly putting Mr. Shearman's clients to great and unnecessary damage, annoyance, and inconvenience, informing him of the payments which, under protest, he had made, and concluding by a request that Mr. King would let him have the promised authority and receipt signed by the shareholders, as also the master's certificate. That letter was delivered by Mr. Shearman's clerk to Mr. King, who thereupon stated that the only reply he had to make was that Mr. Shearman had better send the balance (30s.) due to him for copy affidavits on the petition. Mr. King did not send any other reply. There was no further communication between the solicitors. Mr. Shearman gave the notice of motion, which, as amended, was to the effect above stated. The motion came on to be heard on the 13th inst., and the arguments occupied the court during that and the following day. A great deal of evidence was adduced on both sides, but a brief reference to a small portion of it is all that is here necessary. A principal discussion in the case arose upon what was alleged to have passed between the clerk of Mr. King and Mr. Shearman and his clerks at the interview in his office on the 8th April 1873. Mr. Shearman's version of what occurred was in effect this: That Mr. King's clerk then handed the authority to a clerk of Mr. Shearman's for Mr. Shearman's approval; that it was taken in to him, and returned to Mr. King's clerk, with an intimation that it would be all right if signed, when the latter said the signatures to it would be obtained. Those statements were corroborated. Mr. King's clerk, however, said that, after some general conversation, the authority was taken in to Mr. Shearman, who, as Mr. King's clerk was informed, perused it, but declined to give an opinion on it, and said he would require everything to be done in strict form. Mr. King's clerk was told Mr. Shearman declined to approve the authority. The clerk then left Mr. Shearman's office, saying, "Well, then, he shall have everything in strict form." Mr. King's clerk in other respects denied the allegations of the other side, and his statements were corroborated by Mr. King and other witnesses.

Dickinson, Q.C. Finlay (of the Common Law Bar), and C. H. Turner, in support of the motion, contended that the issue of the writs was clearly wrongful and an injury to the applicants, for which they had a right to sue at law. As the applicants had a clear right of action, the court would not allow them to lose it by upholding these writs.

De Gex, Q.C. and Ingle Joyce, for King, opposed the motion, and submitted that the applicants' case rested on the assumption of the validity of a contract which could not be entered into. No solicitor could bind even his own clients not to issue execution within a given time. But here the applicants were not Mr. King's clients. Want of good faith on his part towards someone else's clients was out of the question. He had really been misled by Mr. Shearman. If the applicants were in any respect right in their views, they ought to have asked the court to exercise its summary jurisdiction over solicitors as its own officers. But the case was not one in which the court would exercise such a jurisdiction, and, on the whole of it, the motion should be refused with costs.

Lindley, Q.C. and Brooksbank were for the company.

Dickinson, Q.C. was heard in reply.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR having at the conclusion of the arguments reserved his judgment, now delivered it. He stated the facts of the case as above set forth, and, after minutely commenting on the evidence, said he thought that upon it the correct conclusion was that the authority sent by Mr. King for approval by Mr. Shearman was approved by him, that Mr. King's clerk was informed that Mr. Shearman had approved it, that such clerk did state that the signatures would be obtained and the authority furnished in a few days, and that Mr. King's clerk did not correctly inform him of what had occurred at the interview of the 8th April. If that was the correct conclusion it followed that the writs should not have been issued as they were issued, and that the applicants had established that they were issued contrary to good faith. Mr. King must be responsible, although he might not have been correctly informed by his clerk of what had occurred. The Vice-Chancellor had said that the writs should not have been issued. It was said on the arguments that what happened did not amount to an agreement not to issue execution at the time when it could, according to the practice of the court, be issued, but at most amounted only to a statement that the signatures would be procured if they could be procured, so as to allow of payment being made under the authority to Mr. King instead of to the parties; that payment to Mr. King would have been a good payment without the authority, and that Mr. King could not, as solicitor of the company, bind the company not to issue execution when execution could be issued. As to the construction thus put upon what passed at the interview, the Vice-Chancellor thought it was not correct. It was to be observed that Mr. King's clients were interested in obtaining payment before the time when a writ could be executed, and that what occurred provided for and contemplated such earlier payment—the applicants thus making a concession in favour of Mr. King's clients. Whether or not payment could without the authority have been properly and effectually made to Mr. King it was not necessary to determine, seeing that Mr. King and Mr. Shearman acted upon the view that the authority was necessary. Mr. King had not as solicitor for his clients, authority to contract with the debtor after judgment that his clients would not enforce payment of their demand until a specified time; but he had, as the Vice-Chancellor thought, authority to arrange on their behalf for acceleration of payment. In Lovegrove v. White (L. Rep. 6 C. P. 444), Mr. Justice Smith said: "The attorney has, no doubt, control over the process of execution so far as such purpose is concerned; but he has not complete control over it is shown by the decision that if the debtor has been taken on a ca. sa. he cannot consent to his discharge, though in the case of a fi. fa. he can consent to the withdrawal of it, as in Levy v. Abbott, (4 Exch. 588). If it is for the advantage of the client, he may accept payment of the debt by instalments; but he cannot, I think, enter into a binding agreement that execution shall not issue for a given period of time." Mr. King, for his clients, by his clerk presented the authority, and, as the Vice-Chancellor considered, stated by such clerk that it should be signed and forwarded in a few days. Nevertheless, misled by the statement of his clerk, Mr. King took no step whatever to get the authority signed. He made no communication to Mr. Shearman that he was not doing so; but the time for execution having arrived, he issued the writs. The Vice-Chancellor could not but regard the issuing of execution under such circumstances as contrary to good faith—in saying which he did not impute to Mr. King any wilful wrongful act, he having received from his clerk the version given to him of what occurred. Mr. Shearman was led by Mr. King, acting through his clerk, to believe that payment was to be made to Mr. King after he had obtained the due execution of the authority. Mr. Shearman, therefore, properly abstained from paying the costs, even after the time when execution could issue for nonpayment thereof. The applicants now asked that the writs might be set aside, they desiring to proceed at law against Mr. King or his clients to recover damages. It was not, however, alleged that the levying of the executions occasioned any pecuniary loss to the applicants or either of them. Annoyance there must have been, but the Vice-Chancellor did not think that justice required that the writs should be set aside. He thought that the proper order to be now made was, under all the circumstances, that Mr. King should pay to Mr. Hollington the sum of £9 6s. 6d., the amount of the costs paid by him through Mr. Shearman to the Sheriff of Middlesex, and to Mrs. Hollington the sum of £4 0s. 6d., the amount of the costs paid by her through Mr. Shearman to the Sheriff of Surrey, and also to pay the applicants their costs of this motion. As regarded the other respondents, he should not make any order upon the motion. As to Mr. King, he considered that he had jurisdiction to make him pay the costs occasioned by his having issued execution under the circumstances, as in the cases of Re Hogan (3 Atk. 812); Aubrey v. Aspinall (Jac. 441); Browne v. Davies (4 Jur. N. S. 683); Bayley v. Buckland (1 Ex. 1). The company had filed an affidavit of the liquidators of it (the company being now in the course of being wound-up under a voluntary winding-up), and that affidavit had been replied to by Mr. King. In those affidavits Mr. King and the liquidators were at variance as to whether the latter sanctioned the writs of execution. The Vice-Chancellor did not consider it necessary to say which of the two parties, Mr. King or the liquidators, was right as to that, because he thought that under the circumstances the order he had mentioned should be made against Mr. King, although he was, he thought, led to act as he did through not having been accurately informed by his clerk of what occurred at the interview on the 8th April, and because he did not consider the case one for giving costs to the company.

Wednesday, Nov. 19.

LYALL v. FLUKER.

Mortgage—Redemption—Statute of Limitations. THE plaintiff in this case filed his bill for (inter alia) an account of what was due to him for principal, interest, and costs in respect of certain judgment debts and equitable charges, or mortgages, on some land at Shorne, in the county of Kent. It appeared from the bill that on the 21st May 1841, and the 24th Dec. in the same year, William Neely gave the plaintiff two warrants of attorney, with defeasances, to secure to him, by means of the land in Kent, the repayment of two sums of £500 and £1000, with interest. In that year the plaintiff obtained judgment against William Neely for £1000 and costs, and in 1843 a judgment for £2000 and costs. Those judgments were duly registered and re-registered, and were so for the last time on the 13th Feb. 1867. In 1849 William Neely took the benefit of the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, and the defendant was appointed his assignee. On the 17th March 1849, the Insolvent Court made the usual vesting order, on the petition of William Neely. In the schedule filed and signed by him in the insolvency, and after the making of the vesting order, he admitted the debts due from him to the plaintiff. Moreover, in an affidavit sworn by him on the 4th Aug. 1852, in the insolvency, he also stated the debts due from him to the plaintiff. The defendant denied the due registration of the judgments; he also claimed to be entitled to the lands, in priority to the plaintiff, and he insisted that the debts and equitable charges were all dated more than twenty years ago, and that he was, therefore, entitled to the benefit of the Statute of Limitations. In 1868 a suit of Weldhen v. Fluker (to which the plaintiff Lyall was a party), was instituted with reference to some of the matters now in dispute between the parties to this suit, and a decree was pronounced. The decision of the questions in this suit depended on this—whether an insolvent could, after making of a vesting order, and before his discharge, by any act or acknowledgment of his—as, for example, by the signature of his schedule and the filing of his affidavit—alter the position of his creditors under the insolvency. The 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, and the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 27, and several authorities, were cited in the arguments. It will be sufficient for the purpose of this report to refer very briefly to the 40th section of the latter statute. By that section it is provided that no action or suit shall be brought to recover any sum of money secured by any mortgage, judgment, or lien, or otherwise, charged upon or payable out of any land, at law or in equity, but within twenty years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a discharge for or release of the same, unless in the meantime some part of the principal money or some interest thereon shall have been paid, or some acknowledgment of the right thereto shall have been given in writing, signed by the person by whom the same shall be payable, or his agents, to the person entitled thereto, or his agent; and in such case only within twenty years after such payment or acknowledgment, or the last of them, if more than one, was given.

Dickinson, Q.C. and Fielding Nalder were for the plaintiff in the case.

Greene, Q.C. and Methold, for the defendant, were not called on.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, after an elaborate examination of the authorities referred to in the arguments, said the principal defence which had been set up to the plaintiff's claim was the Statute of Limitations. In reply to that the plaintiff had relied on the effect of certain litigations in a suit of Weldhen v. Fluker, in which a decree had been made, and by which it was said the plaintiff here had been entitled to redeem the property. But the questions argued now were not raised in that suit. It might well be that there might have been acknowledgments available then, which would not be so now; and that, although the statute could not then have been set up, it might be so here. The proceedings in that suit had no bearing on the questions at issue in this one, which, in truth, depended on the 40th section of the statute of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. To that statute Lord St. Leonards had given a most liberal interpretation—an interpretation to which also the Vice-Chancellor acceded. But Lord St. Leonards was not dealing with a case or cases similar to this. The statute was one which shortened the time for setting up titles to real estates; and although, no doubt, it was to be construed liberally, the true policy of it must never be lost sight of. That was to quiet persons in the possession of their lands; and, though construed liberally, it must not be so read as to let in claims which the policy of it clearly, if not expressly, excluded. Then what was there in the present case to take it out of the operation of the statute? An insolvent had, on his own petition, obtained an order denuding himself of all interest in his own property, and vesting it in trustees, for the benefit of his creditors. Could it be said that he might directly after such an act on his own part, by any acknowledgment of his, take from his creditors that property which he had deliberately made theirs, and which, but for such acknowledgment on his part, was completely theirs? So to hold would be most unreasonable. The Vice-Chancellor then referred to the section as above stated, and continued: Who was the person by whom the money was—for the purposes of the Act, and of this suit—payable? The object of this suit was, it must be remembered, to try the title to land. Then, by whom, and to whom, was the money payable? By the assignee in the insolvency to the owners of the land. It was not payable by the debtor himself. He was not, therefore, the person contemplated by the statute. Whatever might have been the effect of the debtor's acknowledgments under other circumstances—if, for example, the insolvency had been at an end when it was given—was another question altogether. But as the case now stood, he must hold that the plaintiff had failed to establish his case, and that his bill in this suit must be dismissed, with costs.

APPLICATIONS AGAINST ATTORNEYS.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, Nov. 11.

(Before KEATING, BRETT, GROVE, and DENMAN, JJ.)

Re JOHN HENRY BIDDLES.

Garth, Q.C.—In this case, my Lords, a rule was obtained to strike an attorney off the rolls, and I shall ask that the rule may be made absolute.

Clarke.—My Lords, I have just been instructed to show cause, but I am in this position—that the office copies have not been taken of the affidavits that were used in support of the rule, nor has notice been given of the affidavits on which I now show cause. Under those circumstances I can only ask your Lordships to allow the matter to be enlarged until next Term.

KEATING, J.—What is the excuse for not instructing you before?

Clarke.—I have heard of none.

Garth.—The rule was moved in January last, and at the request of the Law Institution, at my instance, it has been enlarged at some intervals to the present time.

DENMAN, J.—Not January, it was in May.

Garth.—This gentleman has been already suspended from practice in this court for two years, by a rule in January, and now this is an entirely different offence which was brought before the court, for misappropriating a sum of £50 that was handed to him by a gentleman in July last year, for paying probate duty. I applied for the rule in April, and at Mr. Biddles' own request, it has been enlarged by the Law Society up to this time; and upon the last occasion there was the usual rule drawn up—that any affidavits he had to file in answer to the application should be filed a week before the Term, and this is the first intimation we have received.

Clarke.—If I were allowed to go into the facts I think there are matters upon the affidavits before me on which I should ask your Lordships to go into the question.

KEATING, J.—What was the nature of the charge?

Garth.—A gentleman in July last year entrusted him with £50 to pay probate duty. Instead of paying it, he received the money and misappropriated it. He was applied to over and over again by other solicitors, who were instructed to apply for the money, and at last representations were made to the Law Society, and Mr. Williamson wrote to him a letter, in which he told him the accusation against him, and asked what answer he had to it, and this is the answer that he makes in February 1873, the money having been paid to him the previous July. "Sir,—At the time I received the cheque from this gentleman an attachment was issued against me, compelling me to absent myself from my office for some time, and ultimately, when going there, I was taken and imprisoned for upwards of six weeks. In consequence my business became neglected, nor could I get money from many people who were indebted to me. The fact of my imprisonment became known, and I was pressed on all sides, and, although I made every effort, I could not raise the money to repay. Had I been left alone I should have done so." That is his explanation.

Clarke.—There were fees owing to Mr. Biddles.

KEATING, J.—So he says.

Clarke.—For business done by him.

KEATING, J.—At all events, this is a gentleman who thoroughly knows the practice of the court. The rule has been enlarged from the 30th May last, he does not take out copies of the affidavits, and five minutes before the case comes on he hands a brief to the learned counsel, without putting him in the situation of being heard. He does not even come here to attempt to take out copies, or to see how matters are going; in fact, he appears to me to treat the court, or at least the proceedings, with something very like contempt. We see no reason why the rule should not be made absolute to strike him off the rolls.

Re JOHN STAINER JONES.

Garth, Q.C.—In this case, my Lords, I have to move that the rule be made absolute. It was a rule calling upon the attorney to shew cause why he should not be struck off the rolls, and there is no cause shown. The rule was obtained in June last.

KEATING, J.—Is it to strike him off the rolls?

Garth.—Yes, my Lord.

KEATING, J.—What was the ground of the rule?

Garth.—There were no less than four charges against him. He has shown no cause and has filed no affidavits. There were four cases against him. One was, a writ was sent to him for service, and for service only, without any authority to receive the money. He told the person upon whom he served the writ that he had better pay the money, and the money was paid, £34, for which he never accounted. About four months afterwards another writ was served upon the debtor at the suit of the same person, and then it turned out that this man had received the money, and had not accounted for it and the money had to be paid over again. Another case was, he was employed by a schoolmistress, near Bristol, to collect a sum of money for her, £10, which he collected, but he never let her know anything about receiving the money, and appropriated it to himself. There are two other cases, one a case of probate duty, and the other was an application for one of the arbitrators for the arbitrator's fees, and the arbitrator never authorised him to apply. The arbitrator applied afterwards and the money had to be paid twice over, because this money had been misappropriated.

KEATING, J.—You had better call him.

Mr. John Stainer Jones was called three times by the officer of the court, and there was no reply.

KEATING, J.—Then let the rule be made absolute to strike him off the rolls.

Re JAMES JONATHAN THORNLEY.

Garth, Q.C.—My Lords,—In this case I am going to make an application to your Lordships that the rule should be discharged, but I think I ought to tell your Lordships what the nature of the application is, in order that you may deal with it, notwithstanding we have not been able to serve the defendant. The Court of Exchequer have suspended him from practice for two years, and the Court of Queen's Bench have done the same thing. In this court the rule is that all the materials in the other courts should be brought here, that your Lordships may deal with it as they did, or as you please. Mr. Thornley is, so far as we can ascertain, in America at the present time, and I should ask your Lordships to deal with it as the other courts have dealt with it, and suspend him for two years, or else to discharge the rule, whatever your Lordships think right. We have not been able to serve him, and there is no doubt he is abroad.

BRETT, J.—Why should it not be postponed?

Garth, Q.C.—Of course we can enlarge the rule. I do not know that that is of any advantage, except to myself and my learned friend. If he comes back another application can be made; it is merely to prevent my coming to the court every Term, or twice every Term, and asking your Lordships to enlarge the rule. If you allow the rule to be struck out that will be the best course.

KEATING, J.—Then at your request we strike it out.

Correspondence.

UNQUALIFIED PRACTITIONERS — Deeming it the duty of every solicitor to make known to the Profession every attempt he observes, by persons not solicitors to usurp the province of those who are, I beg to call attention, through your valuable medium, to the enclosed advertisement which is repeated week after week in the Rugby Gazette and Midland Times. Possibly it is not so flagrant an invasion of the rights of the Profession as many others, but I think the whole system of such invasion, for, undoubtedly, it has now become a system, ought to be crushed; and I avail myself of this opportunity of giving to the legal world this notice, in the hope that the accumulated showing up of these advertisements may induce some solicitors of ample means to take the matter up in earnest. GEORGE ASHMALL.

The following is the advertisement so properly complained of, with certain omissions, and which we commend to the notice of the Legal Practitioners Society:

COMMERCIAL INQUIRY OFFICE.

Head Office:—Cheapside.

Branches:—Manchester, Blackburn, Leicester, Edinburgh, Newcastle, Glasgow, Cork, Dublin.

In the interests of trade, and at a heavy expenditure of time and capital, these Offices have been established.

What members are entitled to for £3 3s:—Entitled to—Legal advice at any time, or any number of times, free of charge, on any commercial question. Debts applied for, subject to commission.

Our system of Debt Collecting is much approved—No spending of good money after bad; special facilities in County Courts; judgment against debtor in twelve days; attendance to prove debt unnecessary; commission 5 per cent. under £20, 2½ per cent. above. A carefully revised list of swindlers, with their latest aliases is kept at this office.

NOTICE.—In this office, a debt, after application is made, is not left to die a natural death. Prompt, efficient, and voluntary advice is given to subscribers as to best means of recovering same. If in London, a clerk waits upon him (in the country, by post) and obtains from him such instructions as will enable us to recover debt without any further trouble to subscriber, and without any attendance of subscriber being necessary.

Terms:—£3 3s., £5 5s., and £10 10s. and upwards, per annum. N.B.—Banks and their Branches contracted for.

To Correspondents.

STUDENT.—Wharton's Law Lexicon, price 2 guineas.

A COUNTRY ARTICLED CLERK.—You cannot quit the service of your principal without his sanction. It is an omission in your articles. No doubt the almost invariable practice is to allow an articled clerk to serve the last twelve months in the office of the London agent, but this gives you no right to require it.—ED.

INQUIRER.—See Order No. 5, issued by the authority of the judges, on the 31st Jan. 1863, pursuant to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, ss. 5, 8 and 9. You must present yourself for examination (intermediate) in one of the two Terms next before or after one-half of your term of service. Communicate with the Registrar of Attorneys, Law Institution, Chancery-lane. The questions and answers for the last examination can be obtained of Messrs. Evison and Bridge, law stationers, Chancery-lane.—ED. SOLS. DEPT.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Tuesday, Nov. 18.

By Mr. H. E. MURRELL, at the Mart.

Bloomsbury.—No. 39, Devonshire-street, freehold—sold for £1035.

Gray's inn-road.—No. 18, Wilson-street, term 37 years—sold for £280.

Camden-road.—Nos. 70 and 72, Brecknock-road, term 76 years—sold for £395.

Euston-road.—No. 138, Seymour-street, term 18 years—sold for £100.

No. 166, same street and term—sold for £175.

Paddington.—No. 22, Cambridge-place, term 48 years—sold for £265.

No. 19, South Wharf-road, term 49 years—sold for £235.

Wednesday, Nov. 18.

By Messrs. HARDS and VAUGHAN, at the Mart.

St. Christopher.—A sugar estate, known as Godwin's plantation, containing 694 acres, with plant and live stock—sold for £6540.

By Messrs. BONHAM and SON.

De Beauvoir Town.—The lease of the Perseverance Tavern, term 49 years—sold for £1850.

Dalston.—Nos. 9 and 10, Gayhurst-villas, term 71 years—sold for £450.

By Messrs. RUSHWORTH, ABBOTT, and Co.

Mount-street.—No. 7, Bell-yard, term 13 years—sold for £450.

Fitzroy-square.—No. 38, Fitzroy-street, term 13 years—sold for £450.

ELECTION LAW.

ELECTION PETITION COSTS.

IN view of the coming general election it may be interesting to our readers to peruse the judgments in a case heard some time since in Dublin on the above subject. It is the well-known case of Nolan v. Trench. Keogh, J., said: "The general principles upon which we should proceed in this case are clearly laid down by Bovill, C.J.: 'It is impossible to lay down with exactness any rule upon the subject, but generally it would seem that all such costs should be allowed as a solicitor would ordinarily incur in the conduct of his client's business, excluding those extraordinary costs which may have been occasioned either by the default of the client, as by his incurring a contempt, or by his express instructions as to employ an unusual number of counsel. It appears to us that the parties entitled to their costs under the orders, were entitled to an indemnity for all costs that were reasonably incurred by them in the ordinary course of matters of this nature, but not to any extraordinary or unusual expenses incurred in consequence of over-caution or over-anxiety as to any particular case, or from consideration of any special importance arising from the rank, position, wealth, or character, of either of the parties, or any special desire on his part to ensure success. We think also that such extraordinary costs as an attorney would not be justified in incurring without distinct and special instructions from his client, ought not to be allowed, nor the costs of purely collateral proceedings, upon which a party has failed, nor those which may have been occasioned by his default, negligence, or mistake:' (Southampton case, L. Rep. 5 C. P. 182.) I will first take the petitioner's notice and his objections to the taxation. The first item of importance contained in the affidavit of Mr. Concannon, the petitioner's agent, was the retainers to counsel. The petitioner retained two leading counsel, giving them each ten guineas before the petition was filed, in order to secure their services. There was much discussion on the principle of these retainers. We cannot see the principle on which the master took five guineas off one, and allowed no retainer to the other counsel. I think there is some doubt as to whether this retainer did not retain the services of the counsel for life. We were referred to the rules of the Bar which were adopted at a meeting of the Bar held on 3rd May, 1864, and by them it appeared that a fee of five guineas was sufficient to retain any member of the Bar for a particular court or circuit where he ordinarily practised, but the retaining fee to retain a counsel in every case was understood and was there laid down to be ten guineas. That is necessary to retain a counsel before a suit was instituted. This jurisdiction did not exist at all at the time these rules were passed. These inquiries are almost invariably held in a remote part of the country. We do not think that this retainer comes at all within the descriptive particulars 'court or circuit where the member of the Bar usually practised,' and, therefore, we think that the attorney for the petitioner was perfectly justified in securing the services of these counsel, whom he, in the exercise of his discretion, thought necessary for the proper conduct of his case, and he was quite entitled to give them ten guineas each. We are of opinion that this item should be allowed, and we will send it back for retaxation. The next item is the case laid before the senior counsel to advise proofs. Twenty guineas were paid for this, which was cut down by the master to fourteen guineas; we cannot see on what principle. If there ever was a case, the magnitude and importance of which justified a liberal payment to counsel, this was one. It was not a very large fee, but the master has reduced it. It is a question of principle, of great and grave importance, not only to the Bar, but to the public; it is conceded that the attorney for the petitioner was acting for the benefit of his client, and that being conceded I think it of the last importance to the public that when a solicitor thinks fit to give a proper remuneration to a counsel, his authority should not be treated with levity and set aside. I think no taxing-master, whether of this or any other court, can be as good a judge as a respectable solicitor acting bonâ fide for his client. He has means of knowing what is just to the Bar, taking into account the merit of the counsel he thinks fit to employ. We think this was a most proper fee, both in amount and in principle. As to the item of the subpœnas, which is an item of very considerable magnitude, we see no reason to doubt the statement of Mr. Concannon that it would be dangerous to serve subpœnas with more names than one. But it is stated by the master that there was an agreement that subpœnas should be allowed for each two witnesses; the matter was quite in his discretion and we decline to interfere. As to the item of fees on the briefs of counsel, I apply all I said before to this. 150 guineas were given to each of the leading counsel; but this was cut down. I will again refer to the judgment of Bovill, C.J., in the Southampton case. The first question argued there was as to the fees allowed to the leading and junior counsel. 'If these fees were allowed as being a uniform standard of allowance without reference to the particular case, we think this course would be wrong, and that the master ought to exercise his judgment in each case, but at the same time we see no objection to the master adopting such a scale as an average for ordinary cases.' This was an extraordinary case. The master allowed 100 guineas as the usual fee. He should have exercised his discretion. There should be no uniform rule in a case of such magnitude. As to the consultation fees and refreshers, we do not think they should have been reduced, but we decline to interfere with the discretion of the master as to the number of consultations. As to the shorthand writer's notes, nothing delays the case so much as taking down the evidence. The machinery for taking down the evidence, by means of shorthand writers, was provided by the Legislature. During the whole of this case there was constant reference made to the shorthand writers notes which were in the possession of counsel, and after all this are we to come to the conclusion that shorthand writers are not to be paid for by the parties? We think they should be paid for, but not as charges for brief, but specifically what was paid for them should be allowed, and the attorney's expenses incident to procuring them. It was said that three counsel were allowed, and that they should take down the notes. I think when a counsel is in a case he should act as counsel and not as a mere note-taker. As to the expenses of the witnesses, the registrar's certificate is not indispensable, the master should allow all witnesses, bonâ fide summoned, no matter whether they were examined or no. We think the party is not bound to examine every witness he summons. As to the objection that the registrar did not give his certificate till after the judge's term of office expired, our previous decision renders it unnecessary to decide this point; but we have doubt that the registrar could give his certificate even now. As to the application of the respondent to reduce the taxation of the master, one of the items was to disallow the fees paid to counsel for daily consultations where it did not appear that difficult points or unexpected complications had arisen during the trial. If that was so, the master would have had to have retried not only the Galway Election Petition, but also have decided what matters required consultations. As to the witnesses who were examined to prove treating, the report of the judge was generally against the respondent, and we decline to go behind that.

MORRIS and LAWSON, JJ. concurred.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

CALLS TO THE BAR.

LINCOLN'S-INN. — John Morley, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Frank Pownall, Esq., M.A., Oxford; Sebastian Evans, Esq., M.A. and LL.D., Cambridge; Arthur Griffith Poyer Lewis, Esq., B.A., Oxford; John Reeve Brooke, Esq., B.A., Oxford; George Burvill Rashleigh, Esq., B.A., Oxford; George Broke Freeman, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Robert Wood Smith, Esq., B.A. and S.C.L., Oxford; Frederick Ernest Muntz, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Thomas Herbert Robertson, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Alexander Henry Patterson, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Henry Nicholas Courtney, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; Arthur Horatio Poyser, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Edward Bellasis, Esq.; George Montagu Worthington, Esq., B.A., Cambridge;

Philip Harry Van Cortlandt, Esq.; Frederick Harvie Linklater, Esq.; Alexander Edward Pole, Esq.; Alweyne Turner, Esq.; Edward Morton Daniel, Esq.; Edward Rowdon, Esq.; John Wilkes, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Percival Beevor Lambert, Esq., B.A., Oxford; and Douglas Nugent Wyndham E. C. Grenville-Murray, Esq., B.A., Oxford.

INNER TEMPLE.—George Drinkwater Lucius Cary, Esq., M.A., Cambridge; Arthur Bovell, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Henry Studdy Theobald, Esq., B.A., Oxford; William Frederic Thompson, Esq., Oxford; William Samuel Lilly, Esq., L.L.M., Cambridge; Henry De Burgh Hollings, Esq., B.C.L., M.A., Oxon; Jacques Edouard Chenaux de Rosieres Durup de Balaine, Esq., Paris; Cecil Jalland Page Clay, Esq., M.A., Oxford; Thomas George Stacpoole Mahon, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Thomas Ryburn Buchanan, Esq., M.A., Oxon; John Frederick Leigh-Fleming, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Arnold Morley, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Henry Fielding Dickens, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William George Blane, Esq., B.A., Oxon; Cecil George Kellner, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Henry Gibb, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Charles Robert Tyser, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Walter Herries Pollock, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; John Henry Ward, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; John George McMaster, Esq.. M.A., Dublin; Henry Stevens, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Scott Goodfellow, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Holmes Carbery, Esq.; David Lewis, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; James Eyre Thompson, Esq., M.A., Oxon; Gordon Taylor Bentinck Wigan, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Henry Nash, Esq.; Arthur Heathcote Montagu Long, Esq., Oxon; Arthur Welch, Esq.; Alfred Bray Kempe, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; and James Patten, Esq., B.A., Oxon.

MIDDLE TEMPLE.—Sidney Woolf, Esq., of the University of London, holder of an Exhibition in Common Law and of Real Property, and of an Exhibition granted by the Council of Legal Education in Michaelmas Term 1873; Robert Lloyd Kenyon, Esq., of Christ Church, Oxford, M.A., and Vinerian Law Scholar; William Young, Esq., of the University of London, B.A.; John Barton Hutton, Esq., of Trinity College, Dublin, B.A.; Sydney Twentyman Jones, Esq., of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, LL.B.; Frederick Forester Goold, Esq., of London University; William Blake Odgers, Esq., of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, B.A.; James Nathaniel da'Russell Day, Esq., of Christ's College, Cambridge, B.A.; Arbuthnot Butler Stoney, Esq., of Trinity College, Dublin, B.A., LL.B.; Charles William Greenwood, Esq., of Trinity College, Cambridge, B.A.; William Rutherford, Esq., of the University of Edinburgh, M.A.; Alexander Comyns, Esq., of Trinity College, Dublin, B.A., LL.B.; Thomas Moreton, Esq.; Charles Bousfield Shaw, Esq.; David Jones Lewis, Esq.; John William Edwards, Esq.; Charles Marsh Denison, Esq.; Samuel William Casserley, Esq., of the University of London, LL.B.; Alfred Guy Whipham, Esq.; Jesse Herbert, jun., Esq.; Robert Bovill Neblett, Esq.; and Robert Wilson, Esq.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

(Sittings in Banco, before KEATING, BRETT, GROVE, and DENMAN, JJ.)

Re EMILE FERRAND, A FRENCH PRISONER.

Extradition—Evidence.

SIR John Karslake (with him J. H. Hodgson) moved, on the part of the French Government, for an order to examine witnesses in England, in order that their depositions might be used in a criminal trial abroad. He made his application under the Extradition Act of 1870, which extended to criminal proceedings not of a political nature an Act of 1856, enabling evidence to be taken here in relation to civil and commercial matters pending before foreign tribunals. He produced the certificate of the French ambassador that the prisoner, Emile Ferrand, was in custody on a charge of fraud, and that his offence was not of a political character. The matter had been before Mr. Justice Denman at chambers, who had referred it to the court, his difficulty being that the examination would be in the absence of the accused. As to this, the Extradition Amendment Act, passed in August of the present year, expressly enables a Secretary of State to order the examination of witnesses for the purpose of any criminal matter pending abroad, whether in the presence or absence of the person charged.

BRETT, J., said that if it had not been for the Act last cited, he should have thought it a fundamental principle of English law that no examination should be taken in a prisoner's absence.

KEATING, J., thought the charge should be definitely stated, as it was in proceedings before magistrates under extradition treaties. One of the practical inconveniences of this novel proceeding was that it must necessarily be ex parte.

Sir John Karslake said that the Legislature armed our courts with this authority as a matter of international courtesy. He did not see why the prisoner should not instruct counsel to show cause. As a matter of fact, a somewhat similar order made at chambers had been set aside by the Court of Queen's Bench, on the application of counsel for the prisoner, as informal. The prisoner could not be made to attend here, as he could not be held in custody. It seemed from a recent case in the Queen's Bench, in the matter of a prisoner named Elise Counhaye, that depositions duly authenticated, though not taken in the presence of the accused, were admissible in proceedings under the Act of 1870.

GROVE, J. remarked that this was only a semble from the case, and added that the statute of 1870 did not contain the strong words introduced in that of the present year.

Sir John Karslake said that the Act of 1870, extending that of 1856 to criminal matters, was possibly an instance of the Legislature entirely forgetting what the other Act was about. It might be a rule of English law that depositions taken in the absence of the accused could not be used against him, but the English courts might nevertheless allow such evidence to be taken. They merely perpetuate the evidence, they do not sanction its use. The order could be framed so as to issue an affidavit of notice to the prisoner and service. It was assumed by the comity of nations that foreign tribunals would act right, and in this case they were desirous of having evidence given under the sanction of an oath instead of a voluntary statement.

BRETT, J., remarked that in the recent Extradition Amendment Act the Legislature had expressly and deliberately overruled what the courts considered a fundamental principle of English law, and the courts were of course bound by their decision.

KEATING, J., said that the wording of the last Act proved that the Legislature knew what words to use to effect its deliberate purpose. Those words, however, did not appear in the Act of 1870.

Sir John Karslake said that the order might be drawn up in an imperfect form to be completed on affidavit of service. The prisoner would then have an opportunity of appearing by counsel. Civilised nations must be trusted to do their duty in criminal cases. Our own laws of evidence were not perfect, and a trial was now pending in which very strong remarks had been made on the inconvenient distinctions between civil and criminal evidence in our own courts.

GROVE, J., said he should like to have the question argued before granting an order. Why had the French Government not applied to a Secretary of State, under the recent Act?

Sir John Karslake said this had been done, but the Secretary of State had sent them to the court.

KEATING, J., said there was a provision in the Act of 1856 that the Lord Chancellor and two judges should frame rules for giving effect to the provisions of the Act, and regulating procedure under it. This had never been done, and he looked upon it as a formidable objection to the motion.

Butt, Q.C., in answer to a question of the court, stated that he had urged the objection alluded to by Mr. Justice Keating in a recent motion before the Court of Queen's Bench, but that the court had refused to entertain it.

KEATING, J., said that quieted him, though he should have great doubt had the matter been res integra. He should, however, like to have the nature of the charge before the court.

It was arranged that the matter should be again mentioned to the court next week, with fresh materials for a decision.

PRACTICE UNDER THE LICENSING ACT 1872.

THE following case has been submitted to counsel by the justices' clerk of Newark:—

THE LICENSING ACT 1872.

Counsel's attention is particularly called to the copy of correspondence between the Secretary of State for the Home Department and the Justices of the Peace for the Borough of Newark, and to the copy memorial incorporated therewith, which accompanies this case. It will be seen therefrom that differences have arisen between the licensed victuallers of Newark and the said justices and their clerk upon the construction of the Licensing Act 1872, and as to the duties of the justices and their clerk thereunder.

At the General Annual Licensing Meetings for the borough for the years 1872 and 1873, the chairman was the present ex-Mayor of the borough, and who is a solicitor in practice. At such licensing meetings the justices required each applicant for a licence or a renewal of licence to state on oath the name and residence of the owner of his premises, for the reasons stated in their clerk's letter of the 2nd Oct. to the Secretary of State, considering it of great importance to have on the register (by sect. 36 of the Licensing Act 1872, directed to be kept) the correct names and addresses of owners to whom certain notices of disqualification and convictions have to be given. Sect. 36 of the Act states that "every person applying for a new licence or the renewal of a licence shall state the name of the owner of the premises in respect of which such licence is granted or renewed, and such name shall be endorsed on the licence." Sect. 42, sub-sect. 3, enacts, "The justices shall not receive any evidence with respect to the renewal of such licence which is not given on oath," and such sect. 42 concludes, "Subject as aforesaid, licences shall be renewed and the powers and discretion of justices relative to such renewal shall be exercised as heretofore."

The justices and their chairman and clerk considered that the justices had power to require the statement of each person applying for a new licence or the renewal of a licence to be given on oath.

For administering such oath the clerk charged an additional fee of 1s., according to the scale of fees referred to in his said letter of the 2nd October. It will be seen by the Secretary of State's letter of the 6th October that he considers "the requirement of an oath on the statement as to the ownership of premises to be unauthorised by the Licensing Act 1872, and quite unnecessary," and that "the charge of a fee for such oath is therefore irregular." Section 36 of the Act enacts that in every licensing district there shall be kept by the clerk a register of licences "containing the particulars of all licences granted in the district, the premises in respect of which they were granted, the names of the owners of such premises, and the names of the holders for the time being of such licences. There shall also be entered on the register all forfeitures of licences, disqualification of premises, record of convictions, and other matters relating to the licences on the register." The latter part of the section enacts "and there shall be paid by each licensed person to the clerk in respect of such registration the sum or fee of 1s. for every licence granted or renewed."

The justices' licences are in force for one year, expiring on the 10th Oct. in each year, and therefore at the Annual Licensing Meetings, a renewal licence is granted to each applicant who previously held a licence. Since the passing of the Licensing Act 1872, such licence by way of renewal granted at each licensing meeting has been entered on the register by the clerk, who has each year charged each licensed person a fee of 1s. for every licence "renewed."

It will be seen by the Secretary of State's letter of the 6th Oct. that "with regard also to the registration of licences on renewal, Mr. Lowe thinks that re-registration in every case, where is no change of ownership, is unnecessary and oppressive."

Although the former part of sect. 36 enacts that the register is to contain particulars of "all licences granted," yet as the latter part enacts the payment to the clerk of a fee of 1s. for every licence granted or renewed, the clerk considers he is entitled to register every licence renewed, and to charge each licensed person such fee on "every licence granted or renewed," that is, "yearly," irrespective of change of ownership.

Sect. 29 of the Act of 1872 empowers the local authority to grant to any licensed victualler or keeper of a refreshment house in which intoxicating liquors are sold, "an occasional licence exempting him from the provisions of the Act relating to the closing of premises during certain hours, and on the special occasion or occasions to be specified in the licence."

The Newark Licensed Victuallers' Association have, by their secretary, on more than one occasion applied to the justices for a general order, exempting, on certain days, the licensed victuallers as a body from the provisions of the Act relating to closing of premises. The justices have declined to make such general order, as being contrary to the intention of the Act, and have only granted the occasional exemptions by "an occasional licence" to each licensed victualler requiring or applying for the exemption. And the justices have declined to recognize the association, contending such association has no locus standi before them, and that they must have applications from individual licensed victuallers, so as to be able to enforce the penalties imposed by the Act for infringement of any of its provisions by such persons. For each occasional licence so granted the clerk has charged a fee of 2s. 6d., considering that in the absence of any fee being named in the Act of 1872 for such occasional licence, he is legally entitled to charge the full fee of 5s. for every such licence as for an original licence, but being satisfied to charge for such occasional licence the same fee as is given by 5 & 6 Vict., c. 44, sec. 3, for endorsement of a temporary licence.

Counsel is requested to advise on behalf of the justices and their clerk.

1. Whether under the Licensing Acts or otherwise the justices have the power or discretion to require each applicant applying to them each year for a new licence, or for the renewal of licence, to state on oath the name and address of himself and the owner of the premises in respect of which such licence is granted or renewed? And, if so, whether the clerk can legally charge a fee for administering such oath in addition to the fees payable for the licence?

2. Is the opinion of the Secretary of State, as expressed in his letter of the 6th Oct., in conformity with the requirements of the Act as to the registration of licences? If so, are not licences granted yearly by way of renewal to the same person to be entered on the register either as to date or otherwise? And if so, how is the register to show "particulars of all licences granted, and the names of the holders for the time being of such licences?"

3. Can the clerk legally charge at each Annual Licensing Meeting, or otherwise, whenever a licence is transferred at a special sessions for transfer of licences, the fee of 1s. for registration of every licence granted or renewed? If not, when and under what circumstances may he charge such fee?

4. Are the justices right in their contention as to "granting occasional licences" only to individual licensed victuallers; or have they the power, and ought they to make such grant, by one general order for the whole of the licensed victuallers within their jurisdiction? And are the justices justified in refusing to grant the Licensed Victuallers' Association, as an association, any locus standi before them?

5. Can the clerk legally charge the fee of 2s. 6d. for each "occasional licence?" If not, what fee ought he to charge for the same?

And generally to advise the justices and their clerk on the case.

COPY OPINION.

I am of opinion that upon an ordinary renewal the justices should not require a statement on oath or otherwise of the ownership, because sect. 42, part 2 provides that they shall not take any evidence with respect to the renewal, &c., unless after notice of opposition. Upon application for a new licence the justices are bound to take evidence of the ownership. It is said that the applicants shall state the name of the owner, but I rather infer that it is not to be on oath.

2 and 3. I am of opinion that the Secretary of State is wrong as to the registration. By sect. 36 the register is to contain the names of the holders for the time being. How can this be if the original licence expire on the 11th Oct., and the renewal is not registered? It seems to me clearly necessary to register the renewal—not the particulars afresh—but the fact of renewal, and in case of a transfer, the name and address of the present holder. If so, it follows that the clerk is entitled to the fee of 1s., and both propositions are completely established by the concluding sentence of sect. 36, "and there shall be paid by each licensed person to the clerk in respect of such registration the sum or fee of 1s. for every licence granted or renewed."

4. I am also of opinion that the justices are clearly right in not recognising the Association, and in granting occasional licences to individuals only. Nor have they the power under sect. 29 to make any such general order as is proposed. Under that section the licence must be granted to the individual, and must specify the special occasion or occasions, and the hours. It is also in my opinion an original licence, and may be so treated in charging a fee.

I should, therefore, suggest to the justices that they answer the letter of the secretary to the effect that, in accordance with his letter, they propose to abandon the evidence of ownership upon renewals, and the oath in respect of it, on the original application, but that upon the question of registration they are advised that it is a matter over which they have no control, inasmuch as sect. 36 peremptorily directs not them, but the clerk, to register the renewal, and that otherwise the register could not show the present state of the premises, whether licensed or not. They might add, also, that they are advised that the clerk, in omitting to register such renewals, would render himself liable to an indictment for disobeying the statute, as in my opinion he would be. By sect. 58 the register is to be evidence of all the matters required to be be entered.

WILLIAM J. METCALFE.

Temple, Oct. 17.

THE LATEST PROMOTION.—A Brussels correspondent writes:—"The English residents here were greatly amused at reading, in one of the Brussels papers, that 'General' Vernon Harcourt had been appointed Solicitor-General—'Le Général Vernon Harcourt a été nominé Solicitor-Général.'"

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—SPECIFIC LEGACY.—A testatrix gave to her trustees a certain sum of £3 per Cent. Annuities, "or the stocks or funds which may at the time of my death represent such annuities," upon trust to pay or transfer thereout "£100 of such trust funds" to A.: Held, that the expression "of such trust funds" must be construed to mean "part of such trust funds," and that therefore the legacy to A. was specific. Distinction between specific and general legacies: (Davies v. Fowler, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 285. V.C. M.)

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—LEGATEE—SUBSTITUTIONARY GIFT TO CHILDREN—DEATH OF PARENT BEFORE DATE OF WILL.—A testatrix by her will gave a sum of money to the children of her late cousin, and declared that if any "legatee" should die in her lifetime leaving a child or children him or her surviving, such legacy should not lapse but be paid to such child or children: Held (affirming the decision of Malins, V.C.), that the children of those of the cousin's children who died before the date of the will did not take by substitution, their parents not being "legatees" under the will: (Hunter v. Cheshire, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 283. Ch.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF REAL PROPERTY — ABSTRACT OF TITLE — DELIVERY, WITHOUT FRAUD, OF IMPERFECT ABSTRACT—DEFECT IN TITLE ARISING ALIUNDE—DEEDS BONA FIDE OMITTED FROM ABSTRACT.—The plaintiff's testator was the purchaser, at an auction, of real estate belonging to the defendant, which was sold subject to the conditions that "an abstract of the title" should be delivered within seven days from the sale, and that the purchaser "should, within twenty-one days from such delivery, make his objections and requisitions in respect of the title;" and that all objections and requisitions not made within that time should be taken to be waived; and that, in case the purchasers should make any "objection to or requisition on the title," which the vendor should be "unwilling or unable" to answer or comply with, the vendor reserved to himself the option (notwithstanding he might have attempted to answer or comply with "such objections or requisitions," or might have partly done so) "at any time" to rescind the contract, on repaying the deposit, &c. An abstract was delivered within the seven days, and within the twenty-one days the purchaser sent in (together with valid objections) a frivolous and unfounded objection to the title therein disclosed; and, as he persisted in such objection and declined to complete, the vendor filed a bill in equity against him for specific performance. In his answer to the bill, put in on the 23rd Sept. 1868, the purchaser repeated and insisted on all his old objections, and he also for the first time raised a new objection to the title, on the ground that the abstract was defective because of the omission therefrom of certain deeds which materially affected the title, and of the existence of which deeds he had only recently, and long subsequently to the delivery of his original objections, become aware. On the 2nd Dec. 1868, and while the suit was pending, the purchaser died. On the 26th Jan. 1869, the vendor's solicitors applied by letter to the late purchaser's solicitors for the name of his executor, "in order" (they added), "to revive the suit, which we shall do at once." On the 11th Feb. 1869 this information was furnished to them, and on the following day, the 12th, they informed the purchaser's solicitors that "they should rescind the contract and present petition to dismiss the bill." Eventually, on the 12th April 1869, the bill was dismissed, without costs, on the purchaser's motion. An action having been brought by the plaintiff, as executor of the purchaser, against the vendor for breach of contract in not deducing a good title, and for damages for loss of bargain, &c., it was found, as facts, by the arbitrator to whom it was referred, to state a case for the opinion of the court, first, that the omission of the deeds from the abstract was made intentionally, but bonâ fide and under the advice of counsel, as it was supposed that they did not affect the title; secondly, that in an abstract delivered by the vendor under a previous contract in 1867 to sell the property to another purchaser, these deeds were included, and that on an objection being taken in respect of these deeds, the contract was abandoned by the vendor; thirdly, that a good title was not deduced in the present case, but that there was no fraud or fraudulent misrepresentation; and fourthly, that the rescission of the contract by the vendor was not from unwillingness or inability on his part to answer or comply with objections to or requisitions on the title. Held, by the Court of Exchequer, Kelly, C.B., and Martin and Cleasby, BB. (Bramwell, B. dissenting as to the first, and doubting as to the second), first, that the defendant had power to and did rescind the contract within the meaning of the condition of sale; secondly, that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages for loss of bargain; or, thirdly, to recover the costs of defending the suit in Chancery. Per Bramwell, B. (contra), first the finding of the arbitrator that the rescission was not from the vendor's unwillingness or inability to answer or comply with objections or requisitions, concluded the case against the defendant; but, secondly, even if that were not so, the vendor had no power to rescind at the time he did; nor any right under the conditions to rescind at all, except in respect of objections made to the title disclosed in the abstract, or of those that arose therefrom. Upon error being brought by the plaintiff, upon that decision, to the Court of Exchequer Chamber, it was held by Blackburn, Keating, Brett, Archibald, and Honyman, JJ., that the judgment of the majority of the court below was right, and should be affirmed. Sed contra, per Grove, J., agreeing with Bramwell, B., on the first ground, that the judgment was wrong, and should be reversed: (Gray v. Fowler, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 297. Ex. & Ex. Ch.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—CONDITIONS OF SALE — DELIVERY OF ABSTRACT — WANT OF TITLE IN VENDOR—TIME FOR MAKING OBJECTIONS.—The plaintiff was the purchaser, at a sale by auction, of an estate put up for sale by the defendant (together with A., since deceased) subject to conditions of sale. By the third condition the vendors were to deliver an abstract of title within seven days, and "all objections and requisitions not stated in writing and delivered to the vendors' solicitors within fourteen days from the delivery of the abstract, were to be considered as waived," and, in that respect, "time was to be of the essence of the contract." The twelfth condition stipulated that "the vendor being trustees should not be required to obtain the concurrence of anyone interested in the proceeds of the sale," and the fourteenth condition stated that "if the purchaser should fail to comply with these conditions his deposit should be thereupon actually forfeited to the vendors," who were to be at liberty to resell and recover the deficiency, if any, and the costs of resale from the defaulting purchaser. The plaintiff signed the usual agreement to complete the purchase according to the conditions, and paid a deposit of £300. An abstract of title was delivered within seven days, which showed that the property had been devised to the defendant and his co-trustee A. (since deceased) upon trust to pay the income to F. S., the testator's son-in-law, for life, and after his decease to sell the estate and stand possessed of the proceeds" "upon the trusts for the children of the said F. S. as therein mentioned." It was stated in the abstract that F. S. would join in conveying the property; but the abstract was silent as to whether or not F. S. had any children. An objection, though not until after the expiration of the stipulated fourteen days, was made by the purchaser to the title, on the ground that F. S. being still alive, the power of sale had not arisen, and the vendors could make no title, to which the vendors replied, first, that the objection was made too late; and secondly that it was not a valid one. It subsequently appeared that the trusts in favour of the children of F. S. were for the benefit of such of his children by H. S., the testator's daughter, as should be living at testator's death, to be paid to them if sons at twenty-one, or if daughters at that age or marriage, with limitations over for the benefit of survivors on the death of any child under twenty-one and being a daughter unmarried. F. S. and H. S. had eight children living at the testator's death, all of whom at the date of the sale had attained twenty-one, and three of whom being daughters had married and settled their shares of the trust fund. An action having been brought by the plaintiff, the purchaser, to recover his deposit, it was Held, by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C.B. and Martin and Pollock, BB.), that he was entitled to recover it back, although the objection to the sale was not made within the stipulated fourteen days, the vendors having in fact no title at all to sell the property, and no power to make one. By Kelly, C.B., that the abstract was not a complete or sufficient one, and therefore the time limited for delivering objections had not commenced to run. By Martin and Pollock, BB., that the condition as to waiver and forfeiture applied only to objections and requisitions in the case of a simply defective title which could be made good on the defects being supplied, and not to a title wholly bad, and incapable of being made valid. Semble (also by Martin and Pollock, BB.), that the abstract, if a true abstract of such title as the vendor had at the time, was good, although the title shown by it was bad, and not such as the purchaser was bound to accept, and that the reference to the trusts of the will, in favour of the children, sufficiently called the vendee's attention to the trust, to call on him to make a requisition or objection on the subject: (Want v. Stallibrass, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 293. Ex.)

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

CHARTER-PARTY--ADVANCES AGAINST FREIGHT —STIPULATION FOR INSURANCE UPON ADVANCES BEING EFFECTED BY CHARTERERS.—By a charter-party made at Bombay, a ship of the respondents, merchants at Greenock, was to proceed from Bombay to Calcutta, and there load a cargo to be conveyed to the United Kingdom. A clause in the charter-party was as follows:—"Sufficient cash for ship's ordinary disbursements to be advanced the master against freight; subject to interest, assurance, and 2½ per cent. commission; and the master to indorse the amount so advanced upon his bills of lading." Of this charter-party the appellants were indorsees. While the ship was at Calcutta preparing for the voyage, various advances for the ship's ordinary disbursements were made by the appellants, and the master gave them, on account of such advances, a bill drawn on the respondents. The respondents refused to accept the bill, on the ground that the master had no power to give it, and that under the charter-party the appellants should have effected an insurance on freight to the amount of their advances. No such insurance was, however, effected, though the appellants had time to insure after notice of the respondents' refusal to accept the bill. The ship having been lost on the voyage to the United Kingdom, the appellants brought an action to recover the amount of their advances. Held (affirming an interlocutor of the first division of the Court of Session), that under the charter-party the respondents had a right to rely on an insurance upon the advances being made by the appellants, who had stipulated for and received the right to charge the premium; and that the appellants, having chosen not to insure, must bear the loss. Held further that a clause in the interlocutor appealed from, affirming in law that advances against freight for a ship's ordinary disbursements can be recovered in the event of the loss of cargo, should be omitted, because unnecessary, and, assuming the question to be governed by English and not Scotch law, incorrect: (Watson and Company v. Shankland and others, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 349. H. of L.)

COUNTY COURTS.

BRADFORD COUNTY COURT.

(Before W. T. S. DANIEL, Q.C., Judge.)

Oct. 24 and 28.

TURNER v. TOMLINSON.

Trade fixtures—Purchase—Removal.

A purchaser from a tenant of trade fixtures is bound to remove them during the term, at the peril of their becoming the property of the landlord, and if he has paid the tenant for the fixtures, but omits to remove them, contrary to the conditions under which he bought it is his loss, and not a breach of contract for which the tenant can recover even nominal damages. If disputes afterwards arise between the tenant and his landlord, which the tenant compromises by payment of a sum of money, he cannot recover against the purchaser the sum so paid, or his costs of defence as damages; they are too remote.

W. Shaw, instructed by Rawson, George, and Wade, for plaintiff.

Berry (Berry and Robinson) for defendant.

His HONOUR.—This action is brought to recover the sum of £31 18s. 7d. as damages for breach of contract. The facts were as follows. The plaintiff was tenant from year to year of a mill, called the Woodlands Mill, of Low Moor, near Bradford, under an agreement which entitled him to determine the tenancy on three calendar months' notice, at any time, to be served or sent through the post. The rent, £175 per annum, was payable quarterly in advance. He had occupied the mill for trade purposes, and had placed in it machinery, which was affixed to the freehold, but removeable as trade fixtures. On the 30th Dec. 1871, he sent his landlord a notice through the post of his intention to determine the tenancy as from the 1st April 1872, and deliver up possession on that day. The machinery was advertised for sale by auction on the 12th March 1872. The sale was duly held and the defendant attended and was declared the purchaser of various lots comprising sixteen looms. By the fourth condition of sale, all the goods sold were to be at the risk of the purchaser from the fall of the hammer, and to be removed at his expense within seven days from the day of sale. By the fifth condition, if the purchaser did not remove the goods within seven days his deposit was to be forfeited to the vendor, who was to be at liberty to re-sell, and if any loss arose on such re-sale the purchaser in default was to pay such loss with the costs of the re-sale. In this case the defendant, immediately after the sale, paid to the auctioneer, as the agent of the plaintiff, the full amount of his purchase-money for all the looms, and he had the full power of removing them all at once or as soon as he pleased. He did remove nine of the looms, but left seven, and on the 29th inst. the plaintiff gave the defendant formal notice to remove those seven forthwith. The defendant having paid the whole amount of the purchase money, the fifth condition ceased to be operative, as its object had been fully answered by payment to the plaintiff of the purchase-money, and the removal of the loom previously to the 1st April thenceforth became a matter which concerned the defendant only. The plaintiff having performed his part of the contract by giving the defendant the right and opportunity of removal, and thus, as it seems to me, the contract between these two parties was fully performed, and neither could complain of any breach of the other. What happened afterwards, and which has furnished the occasion for the present action, was this: On the 1st April the defendant's seven looms, together with a number of others which had been sold by the plaintiff and not removed by the purchaser, had not been removed from the Mill, but the plaintiff duly tendered to the landlord the possession of the mill by offering him the key, which the landlord refused to accept, insisting that the notice of the 30th Dec. was not a proper notice, and that he was entitled to a six months' notice, and consequently the tenancy was not determined, and he should hold the plaintiff liable to the accruing rent, which was payable in advance, and treat the continuance of the looms in the mill as a continued occupation by the plaintiff. Assuming the notice of Dec. 1st to be a good notice, as being one authorised by the contract of tenancy, the landlord's contention was unfounded, and really against his interest, for the looms that had been left by the defendant and the other purchaser being affixed to the freehold, and not removed during the term, became the property of the landlord, as part of the freehold, and they had ceased to be chattels removable according to the usage of trade by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him. The law upon this subject is perfectly clear, and the authorities are collected in Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, p. 482, 7th edit. Poole's case (1 Salk. 368, by C. J. Holt); Ex parte Quincey (1 Atk. 477, by Lord Hardwicke), and other authorities down to Lyde v. Russell (1 B. & Adol. 394), and Minshall v. Lloyd (2 M. & W. 450), and the recent case of Holland v. Hodgson (L. Rep. 7 C. P. 328. Ex. Ch.) have established beyond all question that looms of the description of those in this case are fixtures and not chattels, so far as the right of the freeholder is concerned. The law upon this point is so clear, and has been so long settled and well understood, that I should not have thought it necessary to do more than state it but that I find that brokers in this district, who, like the defendant, buy property of this description, are in the frequent habit of leaving the machines upon the premises, in the hope of being able to sell them upon better terms if left standing than if removed. And it is well for them to know that in order to secure this advantage to themselves, if they buy from a tenant and do not remove during his term, they must treat with the landlord for permission to continue the looms upon the premises, as the looms become his property, and may be sold and disposed of for his benefit without reference to them. The dispute between the plaintiff and his landlord afterwards took this singular course. The plaintiff insisting that his tenancy had been duly determined and his liability as tenant at an end, the landlord brought an action against him in this court for use and occupation subsequent to the 1st April, and claimed £50. To sustain his defence it became necessary for the plaintiff to put in the agreement of tenancy, and to show that the notice of the 30th Dec. was a good notice, and properly sent through the post. Upon being produced the landlord objected to its reception in evidence for want of a proper stamp. The registrar, on looking at the document as the officer of the court charged with that duty, decided that it was not properly stamped. It was stamped with a 6d. agreement stamp only, whereas it ought to have been stamped with an ad valorem stamp upon the amount of rent reserved, and upon appeal to me I held the decision of the registrar to be right. The proper stamp according to the scale in the schedule to the Stamp Act (33 & 34 Vict. c. 97) s. 96, being £1. This defect could have been remedied by the plaintiff paying to the registrar the penalty and the stamp, and the cost of proving the document to be stamped; but he preferred entering into a compromise with the landlord, and paid him £15 in satisfaction of his claim, and the costs of the action. And he paid his own attorney the sum of £16 3s. 7d. for the costs of his defence. These sums, together with 15s. for certain broken squares of glass, as to which there was no evidence, make up the amount of the damages sought to be recovered from the defendant in this action. A simple statement of these facts will suffice to show that these sums are in no sense damages which the plaintiff has sustained through the defendant's breach of contract. They are sums which the plaintiff has voluntarily paid under a view which he thought proper to adopt of the course which it was for his interest to take in a litigation with a third party, who was neither party nor privy to the contract between him and the defendant; and in which litigation the plaintiff would have succeeded according to the evidence before us upon this trial if he had thought proper upon that occasion to have made the proper evidence of his defence receivable according to law. Upon the trial of the present action I have allowed the agreement to be put in evidence though not properly stamped, being tendered for a collateral purpose. Mr. Berry for the defendant, objected to its reception, and, if this case is carried further, the benefit of that objection is reserved to the defendant. The plaintiff asked for a judgment in his favour, at least for nominal damages, contending that by not removing within the seven days the defendant had broken his contract. As the defendant paid at once the whole purchase money to the plaintiff, he thereby acquired the full benefit of his contract, and the non-removal did not injure him, but operated only to the defendant's prejudice.

Judgment therefore will be entered for the defendant, with costs.

CROYDON COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Nov. 4.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

COSTICK v. LAPORTE; NASH v. SAME; WELLS v. SAME (MARTHA C. LAPORTE, Claimant).

Interpleader — Married Women's Property Act 1870.

Under sect. 1 a married woman is entitled to earnings of business, though carried on where her husband resides, if he does not assist or interfere therein. Under sects. 1 and 11 such earnings, and the investments of the same are vested in a married woman at law as well as in equity. Under sect. 1, furniture purchased with such earnings, held to be an "investment." Presents to a married woman laid out with such earnings in furniture not within the Act.

IN the above actions and interpleader summons, heard at the last court,

His HONOUR this day delivered judgment as follows: In these three actions the plaintiffs recovered judgments for £33 17s. 6d., £15 18s. 6d., and £17 13s. respectively, and levied executions on goods in the house where the defendant resides. His wife now claims these goods as her property in which her earnings in the employment of a lodging-house keeper have been invested by her, and to which she is entitled for her separate use under the Married Women's Property Act 1870, sect. 1. The amount of the judgments has been paid into court by the claimant or her friends. The circumstances of the case are as follows: In August 1872, the claimant was living with her husband (who was an invalid) in a house at Brighton, taken in her name, and in which she carried on the business of a lodging-house keeper, also in her name, and by her alone, although her husband on a few occasions wrote letters in his own name to tradesmen and others, chiefly as to repairs of the house (three of which were produced). These letters he wrote at the request of the claimant, and otherwise he had nothing to do with the management of the house. In the month of August 1873, most of the furniture in the house was seized in execution and sold, and after payment of the debt there was a trifling balance, which was paid to the claimant. A small quantity of furniture remained unsold, and additional furniture was purchased by the claimant, and the whole of such remaining and additional furniture, the claimant deposes, was purchased by her since the passing of the Married Women's Property Act, 9th Aug. 1870, with her earnings, and with presents amounting to £20, given to her by her sisters for her separate use; and the claimant produced bills and receipts made out in her own name, showing the dates of the purchases and prices of such goods, with some trifling exceptions. All these goods have been seized in execution. The first point is whether the earnings of this lady fall within the terms of the first section of the Married Women's Property Act 1870. The second point is whether the furniture purchased by her with such earnings was an "investment" within the meaning of that section. The third point is, the operation of the section with regard to such furniture supposing it to be such an investment. The words of the section are: "The wages and earnings of any married woman acquired or gained by her after the passing of this Act, in any employment, occupation, or trade in which she is engaged, or which she carries on separately from her husband, also any money or property so acquired by her through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, and all investments of such wages, earnings, moneys, and property shall be deemed and taken to be property held and settled to her separate use, independent of any husband to whom she may be married, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for such wages, earnings, and property." It was argued by the counsel for the execution creditors that as the claimant's husband was living with her in this lodging-house she cannot be said to have carried on the business of such lodging-house separately from her husband; but I think that if it had been the intention of the Legislature to limit this provision to cases where the wife lived apart from her husband, or gained her earnings or wages at some other place than where her husband resided, such intention would have been clearly and unequivocally expressed, and that it is not necessary for the separate carrying on of a business by a married woman that she should live apart from her husband, or gain her earnings or wages elsewhere than where he resides, but only that he should not carry on, or assist, or take part in carrying on such business. If the income of money be settled on a woman separately from her husband, it does not imply that they are living apart, and there is nothing in what may be termed the settlement by the Legislature of her earnings and wages for her separate use which to my mind involves or implies her living apart from him, or gaining them elsewhere than at her residence. It will be observed that the second clause of the section relates to "any money or property so acquired by a married woman through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill." The effect of the word "so" in this clause appears to me to be very doubtful, whether it merely restricts the money or property in question to such as may be acquired after the passing of the Act (either separately from or jointly with her husband), or whether it is to be further restricted to money acquired by her separately from her husband. The first is certainly the strict grammatical construction of the clause, but, on the whole, I incline to the later construction as being more rational in itself, and also more consonant with what I conceive to have been the intention of the Legislature; but in neither case, do I think, does the second clause affect the construction of the first clause. With regard to the furniture, I can see no reason why it should not be included in the term "investment," in legal construction, however it may be in common parlance. The third point is attended with much difficulty. The section says that such investments by a married woman "shall be deemed and taken to be held and settled to her separate use." Now, if property be "held and settled to the separate use of a married woman," it is clear that (independently of this Act) it must be vested in some other person for that purpose, either in a trustee, or, if no trustee be named, in her husband, and if it remain in her husband, it must still remain at common law subject to his debts, and in such case her remedy against her husband's creditors would only be by a bill in equity, and, as will presently appear, it is extremely doubtful whether such relief could be obtained in this court, or only the superior court. It, however, seems to me convenient and equitable to hold that the effect of the 1st section, taken in conjunction with the 11th section, which gives the wife a right of an action at law in respect of the property held or settled to her separate use, is to vest such property in her and devest it from her husband at law, and that it is much to be regretted that the 1st clause did not contain a clear express provision of the kind. As the Act now stands, a married woman's earnings and the investments of it are "to be deemed and taken to be held and settled to her separate use;" whilst deposits in savings banks and property in funds, joint-stock companies, and industrial societies, are, by the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th sections, to be deemed "to be the separate property of such woman as if she were unmarried." And personal property coming to her as next of kin not exceeding £200, and the rents and profits of real property are declared by the 7th and 8th sections "to belong to the woman for her separate use." The 11th section, however, provides "that a married woman may maintain an action in her own name for the recovery of any money earnings, wages, and property by the Act declared "to be her separate property, as if such wages, earnings, moneys, chattels, and property belonged to her as an unmarried woman, and in any indictment or other proceeding it shall be sufficient to allege such wages, earnings, and property, &c., to be her property." And I think that, according to a liberal and equitable construction of the Act, I ought to hold that, as the Act gives the married woman the same absolute and exclusive right to bring actions and institute criminal prosecutions in respect of earnings and investments of the same as it does with regard to the funds and other property especially named in the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th sections, it must have been the intention of the Legislature to vest such earnings and investments in her as well as the funds and property last mentioned at law, to enable her to bring such actions and commence such proceedings. I therefore think that if the claimant was entitled to the furniture purchased with her earnings for her separate use under the 1st section of the Act (as I have held), the same was vested in her at law, and not in her husband, and was, therefore, not subject to his debts, and she has taken her proper remedy in this court, and is entitled to a verdict as to the proceeds of such furniture. A difficulty remains as to the £20 which the claimant admits to have received from her sisters and laid out in furniture, and as this money is clearly neither wages nor earnings, it certainly does not fall within the Act, and is simply the case of a woman receiving with her husband's consent a sum of money probably for her separate use, and which she lays out with his sanction in the purchase of furniture used by her in her separate occupation, and the question at present is whether at common law this furniture can be seized by the sheriff, and I feel no doubt that such is the case and that, therefore, the judgment creditors, according to the priorities of their executions, are entitled at law to recover the amount from the money paid into court. It is, however, possible that the claimant may be able to make out a case in equity by showing that her husband did, in the words of Lord Hardwicke in Maclean v. Langlands (5 Vesey, 78), "by some clear and distinct act devest himself of his property, and engaged to hold it as a trustee for the separate use of his wife," and if so she would be entitled to an injunction from the Court of Chancery staying further proceedings (according to the case of Newlands v. Paynter, 4 Myl. & Cr. 408), and likewise to the payment to her now of the remaining £20 of the fund in court. But if she be entitled to such relief in equity, I think it very doubtful whether this court could afford it to her under the limited jurisdiction which it possesses in equity. Of course the subject-matter is within the amount of such jurisdiction (£500), but it is difficult to say that it falls under the second head of such jurisdiction, viz., "the execution of trusts" (County Courts Act 1865, s. 1), notwithstanding that constructive trusts have been held to fall under that head (Clayton v. Renton, L. Rep. 4 Eq. 58); and it certainly does not fall under any other head of such jurisdiction. The claimant has also admitted that she is in receipt of certain rents settled to her separate use, but there is no evidence that such moneys were applied by her in the purchase of any of the goods which have been seized, and therefore it is immaterial. On the whole, I thing that there must be judgment in favour of the creditors according to the priorities of their execution to the amount of £20, and judgment for the claimant as to the balance. I cannot conclude without drawing attention to the extremely careless manner in which this Act is drawn throughout, and also to the great hardship on creditors, who are given by it no action at law against married women for debts incurred by them probably on the credit of the earnings and separate property vested in them by the Act (and which they cannot recover at law), but are left to the expensive, hazardous, and tardy remedy of a Chancery suit in the Superior Courts in every case, however small the amount may be. Verdict for the execution creditors according to their priorities for £20, and for the claimant as to the rest of the moneys in court. The whole of the money to remain in court one month, with liberty to all parties to appeal during that time, and no order as to costs.

GUILDFORD COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 13.

ALLWYN v. LUFF.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

Ejectment—Possession for twenty years—Evidence.

THIS was an action to eject defendant from a cottage at Shepherds-hill, Haslemere.

Folkard, barrister, instructed by Alberry and Lucas, Midhurst, was for the plaintiff.

F. A. Lascelles, barrister, instructed by G. H. Hull, Godalming, was for the defennant.

Folkard, in opening the case, said it was an action brought to recover possession of a house and garden, situate at Haslemere. Plaintiff is a chemist, and occupies the post-office at Haslemere, and defendant occupies the property which is the subject of action. He should be able to trace the ownership of the property since the year 1834. In 1834 one Baker conveyed it to Peter Older in fee. This property Peter Older afterwards mortgaged to one Woods; afterwards both Older and Woods conveyed to Edward Hoad; Edward Hoad's executors afterwards conveyed to Caroline Woods, who also took under the will of her husband, the mortgagee, Woods. For a consideration of £30 Caroline Woods conveyed to the present plaintiff. With regard to the question which would arise out of the Statute of Limitations, he should show that rent was paid under distress in the year 1849, and also in 1851. After that, in 1862, the mortgagee and mortgagor joined in conveyance. This proceeding in 1862 brought them within the required term of twenty years. That would be his case. He would now proceed to put in the several documents. The first deed was on the 6th and 7th Jan. 1834, being a lease and release, and a conveyance in fee from George Baker to Peter Older of all that messuage or tenement, with garden and appurtenances therein, in the occupation of Charles Hampshire. The next document was dated the 8th Jan. 1834, in which Peter Older mortgaged it to the said Baker for the term of 1000 years for £60, with provisions for redemption, on payment of principal and interest, with power of sale in default. Then, on the back of that was a receipt indorsed for £60, as a receipt for principal and interest, due on the mortgage dated 8th Sept. 1835. On the 7th and 8th Dec. 1835 Peter Older mortgaged to Charles John Woods for £90, continning the power of sale in default. On the 10th Nov. 1862, the indenture between Peter Older on the first part, Charles John Woods on the second part, and Edward Hoad on the third part, was drawn, being a conveyance to Edward Hoad, for a consideration of £50. On the 15th March, there was a reconveyance, endorsed on the back of the deed by Edward Hoad's executors to Caroline Woods, Charles John Woods having died in the meantime. He put in an authorised copy of the will of Woods, whereby he willed his property absolutely to his wife Caroline. Now he came to the plaintiff. On the 25th of April 1871, Caroline Woods conveyed, both under the will of her late husband and under the re-conveyance, the property in question, in fee, to Peter Allwyn, the plaintiff, for a consideration of £30. That was the end of the documentary evidence. He proposed to make out a prima facie case, and then, when Mr. Lascelles had brought his case forward, to call, if necessary, further evidence.

Lascelles said he should object to that, but on an intimation from his HONOUR he withdrew the objection.

Folkard then called Mrs. Clark, one of the tenants of the house, who proved being distrained on for rent in 1849.

W. H. Biddlecombe was the next witness, and he said that he was bailiff at Godalming County Court, and remembered distraining.

Francis Hillier said that in 1851 his father was the tenant of the cottage, and a distress was put in for rent.

In answer to Lascelles, Hillier said that his father refused to pay any rent after that, and he never did pay any.

This was Folkard's case.

Lascelles thought that as the plaintiff had failed to make out the receipt of any rent, or to show occupation or possession since 1851, a period of more than twenty years, there was an end to his case. There was also an unsatisfied term of 1000 years.

His HONOUR said that was eased by the Satisfied Terms Act.

Lascelles handed up the case of Owen v. Owen (3 H. & C. 88) but

His HONOUR, after looking into it, said he was quite clear it did not apply to the present case.

Lascelles contended that plaintiff's only evidence was that of a documentary character. He again alluded to the mortgage as a term of 1000 years, and said that that interest still existed.

His HONOUR repeated that that was eased by the Act of 1845. The question was whether, upon the Statute of Limitations they had shown the occupation of possession, or enjoyment within twenty years.

Folkard said that in 1862 there was payment upon the mortgage.

His HONOUR.—That action between the third parties cannot affect the defendant. Defendant, as far as it appeared, was in possession, and might have been, for any evidence to the contrary, in possession for twenty years. There was no evidence that plaintiff had exercised any of the rights of ownership for twenty years.

Folkard.—We claim through the mortgagee and the mortgagor.

His HONOUR.—That does not affect the case. The question is whether you have proved that you have been in receipt of the rents, or in possession of the property, within twenty years.

Folkard said that the Act of Will. 4 was passed expressly to protect the title of mortgagees. Till that deed was executed—the deed of 1862—there had been rent received within twenty years—to wit, within eleven years, and therefore Peter Older was at perfect liberty to convey. Payment of interest and principal of the mortgage was made in 1862.

His HONOUR.—That cannot affect the defendant, except under same Act of Parliament. Show me the Act.

While a copy of the Act (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28) was being procured, Folkard again urged that by the payment of the interest and principal in 1862 the Statute of Limitations could only be brought to bear upon them from that date.

As his HONOUR was about to refer to the Act,

Lascelles rose and said he should be sorry to occupy the time of the court unnecessarily. He had looked into the matter while they had been waiting, and he was bound to admit that what his learned friend said was right.

Folkard said that he was glad to hear his friend say so. The first statute of Will. 4 did not protect mortgagees, and, in consequence of the inconvenience thus occasioned, the Act to which he had referred was expressly passed to remedy it. The statute preserved to the mortgagee and those claiming under him the same right of entry as if the previous Act had not been passed. He (Folkard) proceeded to quote two cases in point from the 17 Q. B. Rep., and said that on these cases and the Act he based his case.

His HONOUR said, that under the statute and the two cases quoted, the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, and he found for the plaintiff.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Tuesday, Nov. 18.

(Before Mr. Register ROCHE, sitting as Chief Judge.)

Re TAYLOR.

Composition—Nonpayment—Valuation of security—Injunction.

THIS was an application on behalf of G. A. Taylor, a liquidating debtor, for an order restraining Michael Waterer from proceeding with an action against the applicant.

In July 1872, Taylor, who had carried on business in Change Alley as a tailor, presented a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and at the first meeting the creditors passed a resolution to accept a composition of 2s. 6d, in the pound, payable by instalments of 1s. 3d. each on the 1st Oct. and the 1st Nov. then next, in satisfaction of their debts, and a trustee was appointed for the purpose of making the payments to the creditors. At the second meeting of creditors the resolution was confirmed, and it was afterwards duly registered. Mr. Waterer was a creditor of Taylor for £200 and upwards, holding as security a policy of assurance upon the debtor's life, and the name of Mr. Waterer appeared in the list. The composition had been paid to all the creditors except Mr. Waterer, and the trustee stated that, although he had the necessary funds in hand, he was unable to pay him, not knowing the amount at which he valued his security. Mr. Waterer had been requested to prove his debt, but he had not done so. The question was whether the creditor could now proceed at law for the recovery of his original debt.

Winslow appeared for the appellant, and Doria for the debtor.

His HONOUR, in giving judgment, said the question in this case was of a very simple kind. The authorities showed that if default was made in payment of a composition the debts of the creditors would revive, but in the present case application had been made to the creditor to value his security, so that the composition might be paid upon the balance of the debt, and he had not done so. He that sought equity must do equity. If the creditor had said the policy was of no value, or had estimated the value of it, the trustees would have been bound to pay the composition upon the balance, but as the facts stood there was no pretence for bringing the action, and an injunction must be granted, the trustee tendering to the creditor the composition on the debt actually due to him.

LEGAL NEWS.

AN American, in replying to his antagonist in court, said he had "a keen rapier with which to pierce all fools and knaves," whereupon his opponent "moved the court" that the rapier be taken from him lest he should commit suicide.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—The Judges on the rota for the next session of the Central Criminal Court, appointed to commence on Monday next, are Chief Baron Kelly, Mr. Justice Brett, and Mr. Justice Quain.

SIR THOMAS ERSKINE MAY, Clerk of the House of Commons, and Sir Henry Sumner Maine, have been unanimously elected Benchers of the Middle Temple.

As many as 14,053 attorneys and solicitors, writers to the signet, proctors, and notaries took out the annual certificate authorising them to practise, in the financial year 1872-73. The number is 229 more than in the preceding year.

CHANCERY CHAMBERS.—The chambers now occupied by the chief clerks of Vice-Chancellor Hall are about to be pulled down, to complete improvements in Lincoln's-inn. The old chambers of the Rolls' Court are being prepared for the officials. The removal will be made next month.

ATTORNEYS' CERTIFICATE.—The duty on attorneys' certificates is now payable, and must be paid by the 16th proximo.

THE TEMPLE GARDENS.—The chrysanthemums at the Temple Gardens are now in bloom. Mr. Newton, the head gardener of the Inner Temple, has reared a fine show, including a white Venus.

THE NEW LAW OFFICERS.—With regard to the dignities to be conferred upon the new Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, the Daily Telegraph states that both will be knighted, and that in the case of the Attorney-General a Privy Councillorship will also be bestowed—a precedent which it is intended to follow in future cases. It is also generally understood that after the Judicature Bill comes into operation the law officers of the Crown will not, so far as concerns the action of Liberal Governments—continue to have any particular claim to such vacancies as may arise in the chief seats of Common Law Courts, though every special instance will, of course, be considered on its merits.

THE case of Reg. v. Fox and others, arising out of a boxing-match at Portsmouth, and which has attracted so much attention in the public press, has terminated, after many adjournments, in the committal for trial at the next assizes, on 11th Dec., of all the prisoners, one of whom is a captain in her Majesty's 100th Regiment, and who acted as referee between the parties. Mr. Ford, for the defence, in an exhaustive argument, quoted the case of Reg. v. Young, and from East's Pleas of the Crown, Foster's Crown Cases, Russell on Crimes, and other authorities, contending that boxing was not prohibited, and that it was not accompanied in the present case with more than ordinary violence, that the match was similar to that which took place at public entertainments, and that the deceased showed no symptoms of distress. The Bench deliberated for one hour and a half, and were not unanimous in their decision.

A MAGISTRATE ON THE POLICE.—At the Clerkenwell police court Mr. Barker, in the course of hearing several cases in which the police had preferred charges of drunkenness against the defendants, and had signed the charge-sheets to that effect, complained that the police never in their evidence said anything about the charge of drunkenness, and therefore he discharged the defendants. He further remarked that when the defendants were charged with disorderly conduct and not with drunkenness, the police invariably gave evidence to the effect that the defendants were drunk. He thought it very strange that constables were not instructed to give their evidence in a straightforward and proper manner. When charges of drunkenness were preferred by the police, and the police did not think proper to give evidence to substantiate the charge, he should always discharge the defendants.

THE NEW SOLICITOR-GENERAL.—Mr. William George Vernon Harcourt, Q.C., who has just succeeded Mr. Henry James in the office of Solicitor-General, is the second son of the late Rev. William Vernon Harcourt, and grandson of the late Most Rev. Dr. Edward Vernon Harcourt, many years Archbishop of York. He was born on the 14th Oct. 1827, and was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1851, and obtained the honours of a senior optime and a first-class man in the Classical Tripos. He was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in Easter Term 1854, when he chose the Home Circuit; in 1856 he was made a Queen's Counsel. He has been a commissioner for the Amendment of the Naturalisation Laws, and also of the Neutrality Laws. Mr. Vernon Harcourt holds the Professorship of International Law in the University of Cambridge. He has sat as the colleague of Mr. Cardwell, in the representation of the city of Oxford, since the last general Election. He is married to a daughter of the late Mr. Thomas H. Lister, and step-daughter of Sir George C. Lewis.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

QUESTIONS ASKED AT THE INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.

MICHAELMAS TERM, 1873.

I.—Preliminary.

Questions 1 to 5 inclusive.

II.—From Chitty on Contracts.

6. What constitutes a valid simple contract?

7. What are the principal distinctions between a simple and a special contract?

8. What agreements are required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing?

9. Is it essential that the consideration should be expressed in agreements, required by that Statute, to be in writing?

10. How is the law under the Statute of Frauds altered as to guarantees by the 19 & 20 Vict., c. 97, s. 3 (The Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856)?

11. What is the effect of the consideration in a contract being executory with respect to bringing an action on such contract?

12. What is the effect of marriage upon the contract of a feme sole?

III.—From Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property.

13. What is the proper form of a conveyance in order to vest a freehold estate in one person as trustee for another?

14. What are the rights of a husband in respect of the real estate of his wife; and has any, and what, alteration lately taken place in the law regarding them?

15. A man dies, having contracted for the purchase of an estate; by whom is the contract to be performed, and to whom will the estate belong?

16. In what cases may trustees of a will, or executors, sell or mortgage their testator's real estate for the payment of debts or legacies?

17. Define an executory interest, and distinguish it from a contingent remainder?

18. What limit does the law impose on the creation of executory interests?

19. For what period can a testator direct the income of his estate to be accumulated after his decease? and by what title is the Statute controlling it commonly known?

IV.—From J. W. Smith's Manual of Equity Jurisprudence.

20. If a sale or mortgage is proposed to be made by trustees (without the concurrence of the party in receipt of the rents), under a power for raising money, which has for a great number of years not been exercised, what, if any, obligation is imposed on the purchaser or mortgagee?

21. In what cases will a court of equity enforce a specific performance of a parol contract within the Statute of Frauds? Give three instances.

22. If a mortgage is cancelled by a mortgagee, and is so found in his possession on his death, what is the effect as regards the mortgage debt; what becomes of the legal estate in the mortgaged premises, and what is the right of the mortgagor in relation to it?

23. State some of the instances in which persons having limited or ulterior interests in land have a right to have the title-deeds secured, or brought into court for preservation.

24. Where both parties to a suit, in a foreign country, are residing in this country, have our courts of equity any, and if any what, authority to act on the parties in regard to such suits, and by what means; and how can our courts act without appearing to limit or control the foreign court?

25. In cases of private nuisance, what circumstances are necessary to justify the interposition of a court of equity by injunction?

26. If a person of unsound mind is domiciled abroad, may a Commission of Lunacy issue in this country in any, and if in any, in what case?

V.—Book-keeping.

27. Describe the use of a day-book.

28. Explain the meaning of the terms, "debit" and "credit."

29. What is meant by posting the ledger?

30. On which side of a ledger ought goods sold to be entered—debtor or creditor?

31. If you receive £5000 from A. B., with instructions to pay £2000 to C. D., and retain £3000 for credit of E. F., how should you enter the sums in your ledger?

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT.—A question under this heading was asked in the LAW TIMES of the 1st inst., in reply to which several diametrically opposite opinions have been expressed. As one of your correspondents has referred with approval to the paper upon this subject which appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 4th Jan. last, perhaps he and your other correspondents may like to have my opinion. It appears clear, I think, that sect. 12 would have exempted A. from any charge for duty had he survived the annuitant. This section appears to have been overlooked by "D.," "A. A. R.," and "T. E. H." Section 7, to which the former refers, has, as he rightly supposes, no bearing upon the matter. Assuming, therefore, that A. was never liable to any presumptive duty, sect. 15 does not apply, as "H. G." seems to think, that section being only applicable to those cases in which the vendors were, or, but for the sale, would have been, liable to some presumptive duty. "S." seems to have come to a correct conclusion; the latter part of his answer is, however, inconsistent with the former, although the section of the Act (29th) to which he refers, has some bearing upon the point. The question does not state whether the power of sale given to the trustees was imperative or discretionary, nor does it state what beneficial disposition was made of the estate or of the moneys to arise from its sale. If the power were imperative, and the moneys were directed to be distributed as personal estate, the case would fall within the provisions of the Legacy Duty Act (55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 3) (Attorney-General v. Holford, 1 Pri. 426), and, by force of sect. 18 of the Succession Duty Act, would be altogether exempt from the operation of the last-mentioned Act: (See remarks of Lord Westbury in Attorney-General v. Littledale, L. Rep. 5 H. of L. 299). If the purchase-moneys were directed to be reinvested in land, to be settled, the case would not fall within the provisions of the Legacy Duty Act (Mulcs v. Jennings, 8 Ex. 830), but would come within the 29th section of the Succession Duty Act. If the power of sale were purely discretionary, as, for instance, if A. settled the estate and gave his trustees a power to sell it if they thought proper, succession duty would appear to attach upon the estate itself until the sale actually took place; but immediately upon the happening of that event the estate would be free from any claim for presumptive duty. In either of the cases a purchaser under the power would not be liable to any duty consequent upon the testator's death, nor to any duty to which the testator was not himself liable. I am further of the opinion, expressed in the paper above referred to, and for the reasons there stated, that the purchaser is not even liable to that duty to which the testator, if he had lived, would, on another's death, have been liable. I am, however, bound to admit that my opinion is somewhat opposed to the recent decision in the case of The Solicitor-General v. The Law Reversionary Interest Society (L. Rep. 8 Ex. 233). In the case before us the purchaser is clearly not liable to pay any duty in consequence of the death of the annuitant. The principal difficulty in the case as regards duty arises from the postponement of the sale for ten years from A.'s death. If the disposition in the will brought the case within the operation of the Legacy Duty Acts, legacy duty became payable upon A.'s death upon the value of A.'s interest in the estate—viz., its value less the value of the annuity. If, on the other hand, the case falls within sect. 29 of the Succession Duty Act, then, whether the power was imperative or discretionary, succession duty was probably paid upon A.'s death upon the basis of the beneficiary's life estate in the balance of the annual rents after deducting the amount of the annuity: (Sects. 20 and 21.) Upon the sale taking place, if it were made in pursuance of a discretionary power, and the beneficiary were absolutely entitled to the proceeds, succession duty would be payable upon the capital of such proceeds, but credit would, of course, be given for the amount already paid. If, however, the beneficiary were only entitled to a limited estate or interest, the further succession duty payable upon the sale would only be in respect of his life interest in the increase of his income arising from what was practically the sale of the reversion to the rents eaten up by the annuity. In any case, if under the peculiar circumstances of the case the proper duty has not been paid, it must fall upon the investment of the proceeds of the sale, and the persons encitled to it, and not upon the estate or the purchaser.

THE WRITER OF THE PAPER OF THE 4TH JAN. LAST.

SEARCHES, INQUIRIES, AND NOTICES.—I should be glad if you would direct the attention of the writer of the article on Searches, Inquiries, and Notices in the LAW TIMES of the 8th inst., to the Bedford (North) Level Act 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 109), s. 45, which removes all necessity for the entry of any lease, grant, conveyance, bill, or other document on the register as to lands in the North Level District, and to the Middle Level Act 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 188), s. 10, which has a similar provision as to lands within the district of the Middle Level proper. Whether a similar enactment is contained in any Act affecting lands in the South Level I have been unable to ascertain, but careful search should be made. S.

[The writer is much obliged to "S." for pointing out the above Acts, which had been overlooked in consequence of their being Local Acts. The writer will thankfully receive further suggestions and corrections. They should be addressed to him at the LAW TIMES Office.—ED.]

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.—It would really seem as if at last some few amongst the large number of practising solicitors in England were awakening to the fact that "something must be done," and that unless we are willing to be quietly extinguished by unnecessarily prejudicial legislation, and the various forms of encroachment from which we have already suffered so much, that "something" must be done soon. The formation of the Legal Practitioners' Society (whose prospectus you printed in your last issue) is a practical step in the right direction, and the fact that it is of "a less ambitious character" than some of the existing societies will probably strongly recommend it to those who remember what the more ambitious societies have done for us. After the experience we have had of them, it is plain that, for some reason or other, they have failed to accomplish the more urgent and practical objects for which they were established, and so have ceased to enlist the support of an enormous majority of the members of the Profession. If the new society will only "confine its operations to the reform of proved abuses in connection with the Profession," and take care that those operations are well-timed and sufficiently energetic, it will soon have a larger member-roll and do more real good than all the older bodies put together. I hope that at the preliminary meetings to be held the promoters will consider the advisability of having branch societies or district committees in all considerable towns throughout the country, and of holding at least two general meetings every year, one in London and the other in some provincial town to be selected from time to time. This would tend to foster and increase amongst individual practitioners, especially in the country, a feeling of interest in the general wellbeing of the Profession. The prospectus mentions "some of the subjects which are likely to engage the attention" of the society; but I hope it will not fail to deal also, as incidental to its main objects, with matters such as (a) the direct representation of solicitors in Parliament; (b) the consideration and, as far as may be the guidance, of proposed legislation affecting the interests of the Profession; (c) the facilitating of changes from either branch of the Profession to the other. I may, perhaps, be allowed to suggest the expediency of sending copies of the prospectus to all the known law students' societies. In connection with most of them there are many young solicitors, and both they and their pupils would be valuable accessions. The societies, as such, would also no doubt be induced to affiliate or unite themselves with the Practitioners' Society, for the purpose of concerted action. Before concluding I should like to say one word on the impudent encroachments of county court "agents." In some districts the judges properly keep a tight rein on these gentry, but in others they permit them to have "the ear of the court," as well as to give evidence and issue proceedings. One of your correspondents has I think suggested the only effective remedy. Let the attorneys in every district make an application to the judge of each court for a general order prohibiting the appearance of these agents, and let the application be supported by a memorial signed not only by the attorneys regularly practising in the court, but, if possible, by all residing in the town and neighbourhood. J. H. D.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

24. WILL AND CODICIL.—Is there a case in which a will has been held to speak from the date of a codicil subsequently made confirming the will? S.

25. CHEQUE—SUPPOSED SWINDLE.—A., a Londoner, drew a cheque on a London bank for £5, payable to B. (also a Londoner) or order. B. spent some days at an hotel in Devonshire, and paid his bill of £4 with the cheque, which he endorsed, receiving £1 in change. The cheque was dishonoured, and B., although applied to, cannot or will not pay the money, and the holder (the hotelkeeper) thinks he has been swindled. I presume any action against A. must be brought in a metropolitan county court. If so, can the holder recover his expenses to London, and is there any mode of compelling the attendance, as a witness, of B.? Please suggest a mode by which the hotelkeeper can punish B., if he cannot recover his money. S.

26. DEVISE—WORDS OF REVOCATION.—A. by his will, dated in 1839, devised certain estates (held on a lease for lives renewable for ever) in Ireland to C. in fee. A. afterwards, by a codicil to his will, revoked the devise and declared "that the said C. shall not at any time have or be entitled to the said estates or any share thereof." A. then devised said estate to D., "for the term of his natural life, with remainder to his first and other sons successively in tail male." All D.'s sons are dead, and left no issue. D. is now dying. To whom will the estate go on his death? C. being the heir-at-law of A., and there being no ulterior devise of the property, and the entail having failed. Do the words revoking the devise to C. debar him from claiming as A.'s heir-at-law? PERSEVERANDO.

27. CONVEYANCE.—A testator devises and bequeaths all his real and personal estate unto and to the use of his trustees upon trust to sell and convert into money, and thereout pay his debts and a legacy given to the wife of one of the trustees (B.), and divide the rest of the proceeds of such sale and conversion between the trustees themselves. One of the trustees (B.) buys a portion of the real estate at a sale. Who are the necessary parties to the conveyance? C. T.

28. MORTGAGE—STAMP.—A. mortgaged a farm to B for £1000; no covenant for payment of interest was inserted in the mortgage, as it was not intended that any should be paid. A. afterwards borrowed the further sum of £300 of B., and gave him a further charge on the farm for the £300 and interest, and also covenanted for payment of interest on the original principal sum of £1000 from the date of the further charge. Is the further charge liable to additional stamp duty in respect of this latter covenant? If so, would it be sufficient to stamp the deed as a security collateral to the original mortgage in addition to stamping it with ad valorem duty in respect of the further charge, or is ad valorem duty on the £1000 (as on mortgage) required? Reference to authority desired. CLERK.

29. RAILWAY—TRESPASS.—A. is convicted for trespassing on a line of railway and fined 10s. and costs. The railway company in a few days afterwards placed on their stations printed notices of the offence as a caution to others, giving A.'s name and address. Can they legally do so? Cases and authorities will oblige. A CONSTANT READER.

30. MARRIED WOMAN—ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—J. P., who died in 1869, by his will made in 1868, devised to trustees (his widow and two sons), freehold property upon trust for sale, the widow to receive interest of proceeds for life, then divisible amongst his children. The sons (trustees) died in 1870. The will contains usual clause for appointment of new trustees, and the widow by deed appointed another son and a daughter. The daughter shortly afterwards married, and the property has since been sold. Does the purchaser's conveyance require acknowledgment, the married daughter being simply a bare trustee, with a beneficial interest after her mother's death? G. M. W.

31. LIQUIDATION—CREDITOR—PROOF.—A. applies to B. for a loan of £100. B. not having the cash hands to A. certificates of shares in a building society, worth considerably more than that amount, which certificates A. deposits with C. as security for a loan of £100. A. files his petition for liquidation, and in his statement includes only B. in respect of this transaction. C. being secured, of course will not prove, and it is argued, as to B., that until he pays the £100 he is not a creditor, and has no claim proveable under the liquidation. He is therefore advised not to pay or attempt to prove; but, on the other hand, it is said that if he has not sustained a present loss to the extent of the value of the shares, he is at least £100 the worse, because he must pay that amount before he can recover his property, and should therefore prove for that amount. What is B.'s position? SUBSCRIBER.

32. EDUCATION ACT 1871, AND AMENDING ACTS.—Can you, or any correspondent of the LAW TIMES, oblige "Clerk" by giving him the title, publisher, and price, of any good and complete treatise on the Education Acts, up to the present time, for the use of School Board clerks. CLERK.

33. COMMISSIONER.—Can a commissioner for taking affidavits who is the managing clerk to a firm of solicitors, take affidavits in business matters in which his firm are concerned. ENQUIRER.

Answers.

(Q. 1.) LEGACY DUTY, &c.—In Izon v. Butler (2 Price 34) and Attorney-General v. Holbrook (3 Younge & Jerv. 114; s.c. 12 Price, 407), legacy duty was declared payable on two bond debts, bequeathed to the obligees. (See Williams on Executors, 7th edit., vol. 2, p. 1303, and Roper on Legacies, vol. 2, p. 61. 3rd edit.) C. C.

(Q. 8.) INTEREST IN LAND.—As the mortgagor agrees to grant an "actual interest" in land, a written agreement is required under 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4: (Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 Ea. 602; Carrington v. Roots, 2 Mee. & Wel. 248; Jones v. Flint, 10 Ad. & El. 753, cited in Sugden's Vendors, 14 edit., Ch. 4, sect. 2.) It appears that the writing would be necessary even if the mortgage should be executed one day subsequently: (Bracebridge v. Heald, 1 Bar. & Al. 722.) A mortgage may be assigned by parol: (Richards v. Syms, Barnard 90; Martin v. Mowlin, 2 Burr. 979; 1 Bligh, N.S., 541; see Bythewood's Conv., vol. 1, pp. 278, where the subject is discussed.) C. C.

(Q. 9.) EJECTMENT.—Twenty years' possession confers a prima facie title, which it might be difficult to uproot effectually, although the legal estate is outstanding. If possible, it should be got in, for safety, and to prevent the necessity of joining several plaintiffs. See 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, ss. 180-201; Doe d. Hanson v. Parke (4 A. & E. 816), cited in Cole on Ejectment, pp. 74-5, where it is stated that the names of the trustees should be joined with that of the cestui que trust: (Doe d. Harding v. Cooke, 5 Moo. & Pay 181; Doe d. Wilkins v. Cleveland, 4 Man. & Ry. 666, cited in Bythewood's Conv., vol. 1 (1842), and Doe d. Hurst v. Clifton, 4 A & E. 809; Orchard v. Coulstrong, 6 Man. & Gr. 75; Doe d. Prosser v. King, 2 Dowl. 280; Doe d. Vine v. Figgins, 3 Taunt. 440; Doe d. Shepherd v. Roe, 2 Chit. R. 171; Doe d. Hammick v. Fellis, id. 170, may be referred to.) C. C.

(Q. 10.) ARTICLES.—"Vetus" cannot present himself for intermediate examination earlier than Easter Term, 1874: (see Reg. Gen. Trinity Term, 1861, sect. 2, subsect. 1.) Should he not present himself in that or the ensuing term, his examination as to time will be subject to any rule which may be made relating thereto, should the judges in the exercise of their power and discretion as a lawful authority, think fit so to do: (see Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, part 3, s. 26.) H. L.

(Q. 11.) STAMP.—By the Stamp Act 1870, the stamp duty on a memorandum of a surrender, if made out of court, is the same as on a sale or mortgage of a freehold estate. The admittance generally forms part of the surrender, and which may be arranged under the following clauses: Consideration, Surrender, Parcels, Estate, Admittance, Habendum, Fine, Signature of Steward. The admittance of a mortgagee is analogous to that of a purchaser, the stamp du y being payable only on the principal deed, viz., the surrender, and under sect. 84, cl. 2, the steward can refuse to admit any person tenant under, or by virtue of any surrender, &c., which is not duly stamped. The stamp duty of 2s. 6d. on copyhold admittances (13 & 14 Vict. c. 97) has been repealed. COPYHOLD.

(Q. 12.) POOR LAW.—"G. K." is referred to 43 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 6 and 7, which treats of relief by relations who must be natural relations by blood, and to the last edition of Archbold's "Poor Law." In the index to the latter he will find under the head of "Grandfather," liability to maintain grandchildren, and to be maintained by them. PAUPER.

— A grandson is not liable to keep a grandfather or grandmother: (see Justice of the Peace 31, p. 755.) F. W. F.

(Q. 13.) LEGACY DUTY.—Assuming that J. G. did not marry a relative, A. T., his sister-in-law, would have to pay succession, not legacy duty, at the rate of ten per cent. upon the £70, to which she succeeds upon his death. J. T. would also be liable to succession duty upon the remainder of the settled property, at a rate to be settled by his relationship to J. G. (sect. 10). S.

(Q. 15.) POWER.—Sealing is not an additional solemnity within the Wills Act (vide Taylor v. Meade, 34 L. J., Ch. 203; in addition to the case quoted, West v. Ray, Kay 392). The following occurs in Prideaux, 6th edit., p. 298: "Where a power of appointment is to be exercised under hand and seal of the donee, it cannot be exercised by a will of the donee executed according to the formalities of the Wills Act if it is not also sealed." SIG.

(Q. 17.) SALE of GOODS—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.—Would not the vendor's best course be to sue the purchaser on his dishonoured cheque, leaving the latter to prove the want (if any) of consideration? S.

(Q 18.) INNKEEPER.—See case precisely in point answered in Justice of the Peace for 15th Nov. 1873, p. 733. F. W. F.

(Q. 20.) COUNTY COURT—EQUITY—FEES.—For (A) Registrar of County Court can charge as he takes accounts in every sense of the word; for (B) he is not entitled. His duties are purely ministerial, and although the decretal order directs that the conditions of sale and abstract should be approved of by the registrar, nothing is generally done in respect of them by way of investigation. The responsibility rests with the solicitor who has the conduct of the sale. In a sale under the Partition Act 1868, in which I was interested, Registrar of the County Court of the district charged for (A) but not for (B). QUID.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW AMENDMENT SOCIETY.

LAST Monday evening the first meeting of the Law Amendment Society took place at its rooms, Adam-street, Adelphi, when a paper was read by Mr. Thomas Webster, Q.C., on "The Copyright as affecting British Authors in the Colonies, United States, and Foreign Countries."

The chair was taken by Mr. Henry Reeve, C.B., who, in introducing Mr. Webster, dwelt upon the importance of the subject about to be introduced of International Copyright. Besides the interest which the subject had for authors, he said, and those who were financially connected with copyright, it had a legal bearing, as it raised questions of law, both in this country and in the colonies, which had not been as fully considered as perhaps they should be. The object the society had in view was to call attention to the questions of this kind, and to afford information on various points which presented themselves to the members; and he had no doubt that the paper about to be read would contribute to that result.

In the course of Mr. Webster's remarks, he said that property in intellectual labour, as embodied in a "book" or "dramatic piece," the subject of Talfourd's Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45 (the Imperial Copyright Act 1842), was recognised by most civilized nations, and maintained and protected by them in some way. The laws of such property, as regarded subject matter and ownership, might be regarded as substantially the same in all countries, but the practice and procedure were widely different. The assimilation of the law practice and procedure, affecting or relating to such property, was a subject well deserving the attention of this society. It had been touched upon on various occasions. The late Mr. Robertson Blaine brought the subject of international copyright before the jurisprudence section at the Bradford Congress of the Social Science Association in 1862. A number of gentlemen, interested as authors and publishers, had brought the subject from time to time before the Foreign Office, the Colonial Office, and the Board of Trade; communications had also taken place with Canada and the United States. Draft Bills had been prepared and schemes proposed with the common object of securing some more satisfactory arrangement as regarded the colonies and the United States of America. The Vienna Patent Congress on this subject was attended by a large body of American masters, and an accredited representative from the Government of the United States. In the course of the discussion, some of the American speakers who were insisting on the rights of inventors, were met with the question, what do you say as to the rights of authors? If you ask Europe to give an international patent law, surely the United States should give a copyright law, upon which there was an unanimous expression of opinion in favour of such a law, with a promise to follow up the subject. It had been found convenient to distinguish between the two senses which might attach to the word "copyright" with reference to rights existing before and after publication. Copyright before publication was the common-law right to property founded on labour and occupancy; property existed in ideas embodied in words, lines, or symbols, by being committed to paper. That embodiment was in the sole possession and sole control of the author: he could retain in secret or disclose its subject in a limited or partial manner, or publish it by printing or sale in the usual manner. Copyright after or on publication was the creation of the municipal law, regulated by the ordinances and statutes of each country. To property in the product of intellectual labour before publication, the term claim or right might be applied with equal propriety; but to property in such product after publication the term claim should be applied, inasmuch as the "right" was that which the law of each individual country afforded. The right after publication consisted in the right of the sole and exclusive liberty of multiplying copies of the work so published, the conditions of which it might be expedient to vary according to the circumstances and exigency of each country. The word "author" used in the statute is employed without limitation or restriction; it must, therefore, include every person who shall be an author, unless from the rest of the statute sufficient grounds could be found for giving the term a limited signification. The preamble of the Imperial Copyright Act 1842, was quite inconsistent with the conclusion that the protection given by the statute was intended to be confined to the works of British authors. On the contrary, it seemed to contain an invitation to men of learning in every country to make the United Kingdom the place of first publication of their works; and an extended term of copyright throughout the whole of the British dominion was the reward of their so doing. So interpreted and applied, the Act was auxiliary to the advancement of learning in this country. The real condition of obtaining its advantages was the first publication by the author of his work in the United Kingdom. After many representations from the colonies, it was suggested, by authority of the Board of Trade, that each colony should take its own steps to protect the British author, and an Act was passed (10 & 11 Vict. c. 95, 1847), by which provision was made for supending the prohibition of the importation of foreign reprints of English books into a colony, in cases where the colony might make the provision for protecting the rights of the author, such provisions having the approval of Her Majesty in Council. Then the Government became empowered to suspend the operation in the colony of the Imperial Copyright Act. The different Acts afterwards made with regard to the subject were said to have been a complete failure. Under them the colonists collected next to nothing for the British author, and were supplied with United States reprints, smuggled across the border without paying duty. The inefficiency of the Act rendered it necessary that some arrangements with both Canada and the United States should be made.

In the discussion that followed the reading of the paper—

Mr. Frederick Hill said that the proceedings at the Vienna Congress augured well for the success of the measure which contemplated allowing authors, wherever they might issue their works, the right over the proceeds of the labour. It seemed that we were on the point of inducing the Americans to agree to some satisfactory arrangement. Under the present circumstances the reward of intellectual labour was diminished, the motive for exertion was reduced, the character of literature was to a certain extent marred, and the true interest of all was in the protection of the very best works of literature. He then moved that the paper be referred to the Jurisprudence section of the association for their consideration, with a view to action.

Mr. White was of opinion that the difficulty and unfairness which existed under the Copyright Act was in the power of Parliament to remedy.

Mr. Thomas Longman thought that if copyright was property it should be protected and guarded in the most careful manner. Lord Macaulay, speaking in the House of Commons on the subject, said that there was no doubt that copyright was a monopoly; but was of the very best kind, and was created for the best object, and with the best result. Authors, who formerly were paid by patronage, were now rewarded according to their labours, the value of which were fully recognised, and there did not appear to be a better regulation than this possible.

The meeting terminated in the usual manner.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, W.C., on Wednesday, the 19th Nov., Mr. E. F. Stanway in the chair. Mr. H. Saunders opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz., "That a republican Government is best suited to the Spanish people." The motion was lost by a majority of three. The Judicature Act is also now under discussion by the members of this society, a portion of the Act being considered and discussed at each meeting.

LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

A PRELIMINARY meeting of members of both branches of the Profession took place on Thursday last, at the rooms of the Social Science Association, 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, to consider the desirability of establishing the above society, the prospectus of which we published last week, and which has already received much support. The chair was taken by W. T. Charley, Esq., M.P., D.C.L., and it having been resolved to establish the society, after much discussion, the meeting was adjourned to the 7th Jan. next. Pressure on our space prevents our publishing a full report, which, however, we hope to do in our next issue. We understand that a large number of letters were received from members of both branches of the Profession, as well in country as in town, expressing regret at being prevented attending the meeting.

MANCHESTER LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the members of this society took place on the 18th inst., Mr. Jeffson, solicitor, president of the Manchester Incorporated Law Association in the chair. Dr. Pankhurst, barrister-at-law, delivered a lecture on the "Historic and Philosophic Methods in relation to the Study of the Law."

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.

THE following notice has been issued:—"The Chief Judge will not sit on Monday next, the 24th, but will sit on Wednesday, the 26th, and following days."

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 7.

HOWARD and GILLESPIE, attorneys and solicitors, Old Broad-st. Oct. 18. (Alfred Howard and Alexander Gillespie.)

Gazette, Nov. 11.

CLEMENT and SON, attorneys and solicitors, Alton. (James White Clement and James White Clement, jun.) As regards Clement, jun. Nov. 8. Debts by J. W. Clement

MARTIN, GREGORY, and BOWERMAN, attorneys and solicitors, Cannon-st. July 31. (Lewis William Gregory and Richard John Bowerman.)

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Nov. 14.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall street.

DOBSON, JOHN THOMAS, financial agent, West Kensington-gdns, Pet. Nov. 12. Reg. Pepys. Scls. Messrs. Chapdell, Golden-sq. Sur. Dec. 2

EATON, AMBROSE, merchant, Great St. Helen's, and Devonshire cottage, Devonshire-rd, South Lambeth. Pet. Nov. 12. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sol. Dowling, Basinghall-st. Sur. Nov. 27

HANDLEY, JAMES, victualler, Wych-st, Strand, and St. Leonards, Mortlake Pet. Nov. 11. Reg. Pepys. Sols. Roscoe and Co High-st, Finsbury. Sur. Nov. 25

To surrender in the Country.

DEAN, JOHN AUGUSTUS, grocer, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 10. Reg. Patchitt. Sur. Dec. 1

DEVON, Dowager Countess of, Welshpool. Pet. Nov. 11. Reg. Talbot. Sur. Nov. 25

JOHNSON, RICHARD, and JOHNSON, WILLIAM HENRY, watchmakers, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 10. Reg. Wake. Sur. Nov. 26

JOYNSON, PETER, cotton broker, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 11. Reg. Hime. Sur. Nov. 26

PRICE, HERBERT, and WESTALL, JOHN, painters, Salford. Pet. Nov. 11. Reg. Hulton. Sur. Nov. 26

ROBINS, JOHN, carpenter, Stamford. Pet. Nov. 10. Reg. Gaches. Sur. Nov. 26

TILLEY, HENRY ARTHUR, schoolmaster, Hanwell. Pet. Nov. 1. Reg. Ruston. Sur. Nov. 29

WARD, JAMES, lessee of tolls, Tiverton. Pet. Nov. 11. Dep-Reg. Daw. Sur. Nov. 25

WORRAD, CHARLES, fruiterer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 29. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Nov. 26

Gazette, Nov. 18.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

HARDIN, ALFRED, draper, Mile End-rd. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Dec. 2

KOHLER, WILLIAM, match manufacturer, Southwark-bridge-rd. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Dec. 3

PHILLIPS, T. J. gentleman, Elgin-villas, Clapham. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Dec. 2

STEADMAN, FRANCIS ROBERT, dining room keeper, Fowlis-terrace, South Kensington. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Pepys. Sur Dec. 2

STRANGE, FREDERICK, proprietor of the Royal Surrey Gardens, Penton-pl, Kennington-pk-rd. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Roche. Sur. Dec. 4

WEIGALL, JOHN CHARLES EDWARDS, solicitor, Union-ct, Old Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Murray. Sur. Dec. 2

To surrender in the Country.

BROWN, THOMAS, milk seller, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 12. Reg. Marshall Sur. Dec. 3

COHEN, FORTUNI, merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 4
COLLINS, CHARLES, coal merchant, Addlestone. Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. Bell. Sur. Dec. 2
GLOVER, WALTER JOHN, merchant tailor, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Mortimer. Sur. Dec. 2
HILL, GEORGE, wool dealer, Halifax. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Rankin. Sur. Dec. 4
HURDLE, HENRY JOHN, cheesefactor, Hillfield. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Symonds. Sur. Dec. 1
KEARSLEY, EDWARD, gentleman, Woolton. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 2
KINGSLAND, MARK WILLIAM, miller, Hadlow. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Cripps Sur. Nov. 29
MCGLESTON, THOMAS BARROW, innkeeper, Brasted. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Cripps. Sur. Nov. 29
SMITH, GEORGE, car proprietor, Llandudno. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Jones. Sur. Nov. 29
STERRATT, ISRAEL, wood turner, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 5
WILKES, EDWARD, nut and bolt manufacturer, Darlaston. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Clarke. Sur. Nov. 29

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Nov. 11.

LEWER, CHARLES, brewer, Winchester. Sept. 17, 1873
PARRATT, JOHN, jun., commission merchant, Liverpool. Aug. 3, 1870

Gazette, Nov. 14.

HODGES, WILLIAM HENRY, gentleman, Streatham-pl, Brixton-hill. Sept. 3, 1873
ROGERS, FREDERICK W., gentleman, Marlborough-hill, St. John's wood. July 12, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 14.

BAILEY, HERBERT, of no occupation, Cresswell. Pet. Nov. 5 Nov. 21, at two at offices of Sol. Stevenson, Stoke-on-Trent
BARNECUTT, HENRY, china dealer, Plymouth. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at twelve, at office of Sol. Edmonds, Plymouth
BARNES, EDWARD, brewer, Winchester. Pet. Nov. 9. Nov. 24, at four, at the Eagle hotel, Winchester. Sols. Godwin and Shenton, Winchester
BARON, JOSEPH, reed manufacturer, Old Accrington. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 2, at eleven, at the Crown hotel, Old Accrington. Sol. Barlow, New Accrington.
BAXTER, JOSEPH, buyer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 28, at ten, at office of Sol. Hutchinson, Bradford
BESCOBY, EDWARD, out of business, Ashchurch-ter, New-rd, Hammersmith. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 27, at one, at office of Sol. Warrand, Ludgate-hill
BETTAM, RICHARD, boot dealer, Cheltenham. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Cheshyre, Cheltenham
BEVANT, WILLIAM, bootmaker, Princes-rd, Notting-hill, and Caledonian-rd, King's-cross. Pet. Pet. 7. Nov. 27, at three, at the Mason's Hall tavern, Mason's-avenue, Basinghall-st. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st
BUTLER, WILLIAM HENRY, bridle cutter, Walsall. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 25., at eleven, at office of Sol. Glover, Walsall
BUTTERWORTH, JOHN, sen., BUTTERWORTH, JOHN, jun., and BUTTERWORTH, JOSEPH, flannel finishers, Saddleworth. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at twelve, at the Railway hotel, Saddleworth. Sol. Buckley, Stalybridge
CHADWICK, WILLIAM HENRY, beerhouse keeper, Chorlton-on-Medlock. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 1, at four, at office of Sols. Learoyd and Learoyd, Huddersfield
CHAPMAN, WILLIAM, and HALL, CHARLES, bootmakers, Horncastle. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 3, at twelve, at the Corn Exchange, Horncastle. Sol. Tweed, Horncastle
CLEGG, SQUIRE, grocer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 26, at three, at offices of Sols. Evans and Lockett, Liverpool
COSHAM FRANCIS ALGERNON, judge's clerk, Southwick-cres, Hyde-pk, and Judges'-chmbs, Rolls-gdn, Chancery-la. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sols. Turner, Lempriere, and Turner, Lincoln's-inn-fields
COLEMAN, JOHN, contractor, Scarborough. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 1, at two, at the Bull hotel, Scarborough. Sol. Watts, Scarborough
COLLIN, CAMPBELL, flock bed manufacturer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 8, at two, at Theobalds, Ockleston, and Co., accountants, Liverpool. Sol. Cotton, Liverpool
COLLISON, WILLIAM HALL, carman, Lower Thames-st. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at two, at office of Sol. Trass, Lincoln's-inn-fields
COLQUHOUN, PETER, commission merchant, Manchester, and Glasgow. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 2, at three, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester
DAVIES, DANIEL, grocer, Tredegar. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at eleven, at office of Sol. Dixon, Newport
DAVIS, SAMUEL, baker, Weston-super-Mare. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 29, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Chapman, Weston-super-Mare
DAVISON, GEORGE, tailor, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 22, at twelve, at offices of Sol Tattershall, Sheffield
DAVIES, JOSIAH, manufacturing confectioner, Roman-rd, St. Mary, Stratford, Bow. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 11, at three, at Holloway, accountant, 173, Ball's Pond-rd, Islington. Sol. Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields
DAWES, JAMES, wheelwright, Dudley. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at eleven, at office of Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury
DAWSON, GEORGE LODOWICK, trainer of race horses, Middleham. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at twelve, at office of Sol. Robinson, Darlington
ELLWOOD, CHARLES, cheesemonger, Moore-pk-ter, King's-rd, Fulham. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at four, at office of Sol. Aird, Eastcheap
FAUNT, JOHN, grocer, Friston, near Boston. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at eleven, at office of Sol. York, Boston
FLETCHER, JOHN, charter master, Dudley. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury
FROWD, JOHN, ale merchant, Great Berkhampsted. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 26, at eleven, at office of Sol. Bullock, Great Berkhampsted
GAGE, THOMAS HASTINGS, tobacconist, Great Yarmouth. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 26, at three, at offices of Sols. Jay and Pilgrim, Norwich
GIBBS, JAMES, artist in glass, Gloucester-rd, Regent's-pk. Pet. Oct. 29. Nov. 24, at eleven, at office of Sol. Davis, Bedford-row, Holborn
GOMER, CHARLES, boot dealer, Brighton. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 1' at three, at Edmonds, Davis, and Clark, 32, Poultry, London. Sols. Black, Freeman, and Gell, Brighton
GOODERSON, WILLIAM, flour factor, Dean-st. Commercial-rd. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 25, at three, at offices of Sol. Shearman, Little Tower-st
GRANT, RICHARD, house decorator, Crawford-st, St. Marylebone, Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 27, at three, at the Goldhawk tavern, Hammersmith
GREGORY, JOHN, victualler, Northumberland-pk, Tottenham. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 2, at twelve, at W. F. Copland, accountant, Queen-st, Cheapside. Sols Peckham, Maitland, and Peckham, Knightrider-st, Doctors-commons
GREGORY, THOMAS, salesman, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at three, at office of Sol. Mann, Manchester
HARDING, RICHARD, cabinet maker, Ilfracombe. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at twelve, at the King's Arms hotel, Barnstaple. Sol. Fox
HARDWICK, THOMAS, grocer's assistant, Allington-st. Pimlico. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at two, at office of Sol. Walls, Walbrook
HATHAWAY, JAMES, out of business, Aldridge. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at eleven, at office of Sols. Wilkinson and Gillespie, Walsall
HERRING, EDWARD, and DOBIE, THOMAS MELDRUM, edge tool manufacturer, St. George's-s. East. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 26, at two, at Mosley and Co., Chapel-pl, Poultry. Sol. Rae, Mincing-lane
HETLEY, WILLIAM, farmer, Peterborough. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at eleven, at office of Sol. Gaches, Peterborough
HIDE, CHARLES, grocer, Luton. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at three, at J. Bath and Co. 40A, King William-st, London
HOLROYD, JOSEPH, grocer, Bingley. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Robinson, Keighley
HUNTABLE, EDWIN BEEDLE, out of business, Cheltenham. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 29, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Marshall, Cheltenham
JAMES, CHARLES, mercantile clerk, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 25, at three, at office of Sol. Jaques, Birmingham
JONES, EDWARD WHITE, glass dealer, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 11 Dec. 1, at twelve, at office of Sol. Maples, Nottingham
JONES, THOMAS, out of business, Kingswinford. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 21, at half-past eleven, at office of Sols. Homfray and Holberton, Brierley-hill
KELSEY, WILLIAM, trimming manufacturer, Chilton-st, Bethnal-green-rd. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 26, at twelve, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 33, Gutter-la. Sol. Plunkett, Gutter-la
KING, THOMAS, out of business, Ryde. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 25, at three at office of Sol. Killby, Southampton
KNUTSSON, JOHAN OLAF, clerk, West Hartlepool. Pet. Nov. 5. Nov. 25, at three, at the Raglan hotel, West Hartlepool
LARNEY, GEORGE ROBERT, greengrocer, Green-st, Bethnal-grn. Pet. 12. Nov. 28, at three, at offices of Sol. Brown, Finsbury-place
MANLEY, HERBERT, oil merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at three, at office of Sols. Sale, Shipman, Seddon, and Sale, Manchester
MEANLEY, WILLIAM HENRY, farmer, Rushall. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stanley, Walsall
MURRAY, GEORGE HARGREAVES, china dealer, Manchester, and Bolton. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 3, at three, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester
NICOLL, DONALD, wholesale clothier, Paternoster-row. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at two, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sols. Morley and Shirreff, Mark-la
PARK, WILLIAM, beerhouse keeper, Trowbridge. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 29, at one, at office of Sol. Shrapnell, Trowbridge
PARKER, JOSEPH, boot manufacturer, High-st, Chatham. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at four, at E. Cogswell, 72, Gracechurch-st. Sol. Hicks, Gracechurch-st
PARSON, HENRY, commercial traveller, Ipswich. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 2, at twelve, at office of Sol. Jennings, Ipswich
POTTER, GEORGE, builder, Knighton. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov 28, at twelve, at the Norton Arms hotel, Knighton. Sol. Peters, Knighton
PRICE, JAMES PALMER, broker, Handsworth. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 21, at two, at offices of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham
PRICE, RICHARD, baker, Worthing. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of Sol. Luckett, Worthing
RICHARDSON, EDWARD SAMUEL, bootmaker, Derby. Nov. 29, at twelve, at the Bell hotel, Derby. Sols. Watson and Dickons, Bradford
RODMAN, GEORGE, cabinet maker, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 26, at twelve, at G. Adams, accountants, 21, Baldwin-st, Bristol Sol. Sherrard, Bristol
SANT, JOHN, veterinary surgeon, Lincoln. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 29, at eleven, at office of Sols. Tovnbee and Larken, Lincoln
SEDDON, EDMUND, chemist, Fleetwood. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at two, at the White Horse inn, Preston. Sol. Edelston, Preston
SEDGWICK, ELIZABETH, widow, Sedbergh. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 4, at twelve, at the Black Bull hotel, Sedbergh. Sols. Messrs. Moser, Kendal
SMITH, JOHN, and HEWITT, JOHN, engineers, Old-st, St. Luke's. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sols. Harcourt and Macarthur, Moorgate st
SPINK, EDWARD, grocer's assistant, Hull. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 27, at twelve, at office of Sol. Bell, Hull
STAPLEY, EDWARD MAITLAND, and STAPLEY, GEORGE, commission merchants, Old Jewry-chbs. Pet. Nov. 6. Dec. 2, at twelve, at the City Terminus hotel, Cannon-st. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, Walbrook
STEPHENS, HENRY EDWARD, tailor, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 24, at seven, at office of Sol. Essery, Bristol
STEWART, ROBERT, and LORD, WILLIAM, cotton spinners, Bacup. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov 28, at three, at the Wheat Sheaf hotel, Manchester. Sol. Standring, Rochdale
STIMPSON, EDWARD, engine turner, Lincoln. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 29, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Harrison, Lincoln
TAINTON, ALFRED, ironmonger, Stamford. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 1, at three, at office of Sol. King, Birmingham
TAYLOR, JOHN BRAIN, printer, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at two, at G. Phillips, Bristol
TOWNSEND, WILLIAM butcher, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 28, at two, at office of Sol. Brown, Birmingham
VARLEY, SAMUEL ALFRED, telegraph engineer, Roman-road, Barnsbury. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 1, at three, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st
WALKER, EBENEZER, and WALKER, JAMES, chemists, Malmesbury. Pet Nov. 12. Nov 29, at two, at the Queen's hotel, Swindon Sols Jones and Forester, Malmesbury
WALKER, JOHN, tea merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 1, at three, at offices of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester
WARD, WILLIAM JOSIAH, carpenter, Litchfield-st, Soho. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 22, at three, at Grayson, solicitor, Hunter-street, Brunswick-sq. Sol. Cooper, Charing-cross
WATSON, HENRY, spring knife manufacturer, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 24, at four, at office of Sols. Messrs. Binney, Sheffield
WATSON, JOHN, whitesmith, Wakefield. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 27, at three, at the Manor-house inn, Wakefield. Sols. Stocks and Nettleton
WEBBER, SIMON, clothier, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 25, at ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham
WELBURN, JOHN, provision dealer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at three, at office of Sol. Atkinson, Bradford
WESTON, WILLIAM, shoe manufacturer, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 11, Nov. 27, at twelve, at office of Sols. Fowler, Smith, and Warwick. Leicester
WESTON, WILLIAM EDWARD, clothier, Birmingham, and Stourbridge. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sols. Wright and Marshall, Birmingham
WHEELER, GEORGE SAMUEL, animal preserver, Bristol. Pet Nov 11. Nov. 29, at eleven, at Miles and Read, accountants, Bristol. Sol. Price, Bristol
WHITAKER, JEREMIAH RIDGE, tailor, Shipley. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at eleven, at office of Sols. Terry and Robinson, Bradford
WICKHAM, EDWARD, farmer, Snaith. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 2, at three, at the Green Dragon hotel, Pontefract. Sol. Brown
WILSON, BENJAMIN, grocer, Boston. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at twelve, at Blake's Private hotel, Manchester-st, Manchester-sq. Sol. Goren, South Moulton-st, Oxford-st
WOOD, WILLIAM, painter, Darlaston. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 29, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Sheldon, Wednesbury
WOODALL, JAMES, oil merchant, Preston. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at two, at the White Horse inn, Preston. Sol., Edelston, Preston
WOODS, JOSIAH, mineral water manufacturer, Birkenhead. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at two, at office of Sol. Downham, Birkenhead
BIRKENMANN, JOSEPH (trading as Oldham and Co.), wine importer, Cannon-st. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 27, at 145, Cheapside, in lieu of the place originally named

Gazette, Nov. 18.

ANDREWS, BENJAMIN, bank clerk, Cambridge-gdns, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 27, at two, at offices of Dubois, accountant, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sol. Maynard
BARNES, THOMAS, butcher, Medmenham. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at two, at office of Sol. Spicer, Great Marlow
BARNETT, WILLIAM JAMES, hat manufacturer, Exeter. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 4, at half-past ten, at Hazell's Exeter hotel, Strand, London. Sol. White, Exeter
BLECH, HENRY FERDINAND, accountant, Middlesborough. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at twelve at office of Sol. Bolk, Middlesborough
BUCKETT, WILLIAM, builder, Ningwood, Isle of Wight. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 2, at twelve, at office of Sols. Messrs. Eldridge, Newport, Isle of Wight
BUFFEN, FREDERICK FORSTER, accountant, Moorgate-st, and Tollington-pl, Hornsey-rise. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at two, at office of Sol. Blagden, Great Winchester-st
BURDEN, JOHN WALTON, out of business, Belgrave. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Fowler, Smith, and Warwick, Leicester
CANHAM, JAMES, job master, Anerley. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 26, at ten, at the Southampton Arms, Southampton-bldgs, Chancery-la. Sol. Bolton, Renfrew-rd, Kennington-la
CHARLESWORTH, JOHN, and WATSON, JOSEPH, joiners, Batley. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29 at two, at office of Sol. Wooler, Batley
CLARK, THOMAS WALTER, draper, Luton. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Shepherd, 29, Park-st West, Luton. Sol. Neve, Luton
COLLINS, SAMUEL, bookseller. High-st, Bromley. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 1, at three, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sols. Messrs. Piesse, Old Jewry-chbs
COPSEY, GEORGE, and COPSEY, JAMES, woollen drapers, King's Lynn. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at twelve, at the Court House, Downham Market. Sol. Reed, Downham Market
CROMBLEHOLME, JOSEPH, provision dealer, Preston. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 1, at two, at the White Horse inn, Preston. Sol. Edelston, Preston
DEVERILL, JOHN, and TITTERTON, ARTHUR, East India merchants, Crosby-sq, Bishopsgate-st. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 29, at two, at the Masons Hall tavern, Masons-avenue, Basinghall-st. Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st
EBISON, HENRY, road manager, Horsforth. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Hardwick, Leeds
EDMONDS, THOMAS, innkeeper, Barnwood. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 29, at two, at office of Sol. Jackson, Stroud
ELLIOTT, ISABELLA, furniture dealer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 28, at three, at office of Sol. Fitter, Birmingham
EVANS, DANIEL, builder, Llanllechid. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 29, at two, at the Railway hotel, Bangor. Sol. Jones, Menai-bridge
EYRE, JOHN, and EYRE, THOMAS, shoe manufacturer, Long Buckby. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Shoosmith, Newland
FILMER, THOMAS, jun., miller, Newnham. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 26, at twelve, at office of Sol. Johnson, Faversham
FLEMING, GEORGE ALEXANDER, reporter, St. Mary's-sq, Kennington-rd, London, and Hastings. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 4, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Peckham, Maitland, and Peckham, Knight Rider-st, Doctors'-commons
FORD, WILLIAM, builder, Watford. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 28, at four, at the Wellington Arms, Watford. Sol. Godfrey
GOOD, JAMES WILLIAM, tea dealer, Harp-la. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 29 at eleven, at office of Sol. Aird, Eastcheap
GREAVES, WILLIAM HENRY, milk dealer, Middlesborough. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 29, at one, at office of Sol. Gray, Leeds
HARBOUR, DAVID, carpenter, Hawley-rd, Kentish-town. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at twelve, at office of Sol. King, Walbrook
HALE, WILLIAM SAMUEL, of no occupation, Palmerston-ter, Lordship-la, East Dulwich. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 1, at eleven, at office of Sol. Hodgson, Salisbury-st, Strand
HAWKES, JOSEPH, baker, Luton. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at three, at offices of Sol. Jeffery, Northampton, and Luton
HEUSER, PHILIPP, cabinet maker, Lockton-st, Bramley-rd, Notting-hill, and Talbot-mews, Talbot-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 1, at two, at office of Sol. Nutt, Brabant-ct, Philpot-la
HOLDER, HENRY, gas fitter, Elsham-pl, Kent-st, Borough. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at a quarter-past ten, at the Southampton tavern, Southampton-bldgs, Chancery-la. Sol. Hilton
HUGHES, RICHARD, wine merchant, Aberystwith. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 27, at one, at office of Sol. Jones, Aberystwith
KEMP, ISABELLA, oil warehouseman, Great Windmill-st, Haymarket. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 26, at twelve, at Stevens' hotel, Old Bailey. Sol. Cotton, Old Bailey
LYONS, LEWIS HENRY, umbrella manufacturer, Redcross-st. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at two, at offices of Ladbury, Collison, and Viney, 99, Cheapside. Sols. Lewis and Lewis, Ely-place, Holborn
LAGERWALL, RICHARD EMIL MAGNUS, commission agent, Graham rd, Dalston. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 27, at three, at office of Sol. Mott, St. Paul's-chmbs, Paternoster-row
LEE, JOSEPH, builder, Brunswick-ter, Lower-rd, Rotherhithe. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 2, at one, at offices of Sols. Merriman, Powell, and Co., Queen-st
LEVER, GILES, tripe dresser, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 10, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Goodman, Liverpool
LUCAS, HENRY, hair pin manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov, 14. Nov. 29, at three at office of Sol. Walter, Birmingham
MACQUEEN, WILLIAM JOHN, tailor, High Holborn. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 1, at one, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Briggs Lincoln's inn-fields
MATHER, JOHN JOSEPH, dealer in velveteens, Manchester. Pet, Nov. 15. Dec. 3, at three, at office of Sols. Farrar and Hall, Manchester
MOORE, JOHN, printer, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 28, at eleven, at office of Lomax, Jermyn-st, St. James's. Sol. Morris
MOTTRAM, GEORGE, potato dealer Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 3, at three, at offices of Sol Patteson, Sheffield
MURRAY, WILLIAM, ship joiner, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Stead and Sibree, Kingston-upon-Hull
NICHOLS, JAMES, agent, Hurst-st, Dulwich rd, Lambeth. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 6, at two, at office of Sol. Downing, Basinghall-street
PACKMAN, WILLIAM GOLDUP, veterinary surgeon, Wenningston-rd, Old Ford, London, and St. Neots. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 2, at ten, at the Victoria tavern, Morpeth-rd, Bethnal-green. Sol. Lowe, Gladstone-ter, Grove-rd, Victoria-pk
PARRY, JOHN, and MACKINTOSH, BENJAMIN, joiners, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 28, at twelve, at office of Sols. Fowler and Carruthers, Liverpool
PATTISON, THOMAS, painter, Malton. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 1, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Jackson, Malton
PHILLITS, DAVID, grocer, Aberystwith. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at two, at offices of Barnard, Thomas, and Co. public accountants, Bristol. Sols. Cox, Davies and Browne, Brynmawr
ROBERTS, OWEN, painter, Upper Bangor. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 21, at two, at the Railway hotel, Bangor. Sol. Jones, Menai-bridge
ROBINSON, SIMEON, tailor, Bacup. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 2, at three at the Thatched House, Manchester. Sol. Tattersall, Manchester
RODDIS, JOHN, baker, Moulton. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at eleven at office of Sol. Jeffery, Northampton
ROGERS, GEORGE, draper, Pewsey. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 3, at one at office of Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co. public accountants, Bristol. Sols. Brittan, Press, and Inskip, Bristol
RUST, THOMAS, coal merchant, Bedford. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 9, at twelve, at office of Sol. Jeffery, Luton, and Northampton
SALISBURY, ROBERT BELL, jun., miller, Valentine-pl, Blackfriars-rd. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 1, at two, at office of Sol. Hilbery, Crutched-friars
SCHOTT, JOHN BERNARD, tavern keeper, Upper Marsh, Lambeth. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 2, at three, at offices of Sols. Lumley and Lumley, Conduit-st, Bond-st
SEAGRAVE, GEORGE, SEAGRAVE, FREDERICK, and SEAGRAVE, CHARLES, commission agents, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 9, at two, at office of Hime, Liverpool. Sol. Pierson, Liverpool
SHEA, DANIEL, out of employment, Florence-rd, New-cross. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Carter, Old Jewry-chambers
SMITH, WILLIAM, out of business, Weston-under-Penyard, near Ross, and York-chmbs, Adelphi. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 27, at one, at the Bell hotel, Gloucester. Sol. Goatly
STEVENSON, WILLIAM, hosier, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 11. at twelve, at office of Sol. Smith, Nottingham
STOVELL, STEPHEN, grocer, Park-ter, Sutton. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 1, at the Chamber of Commerce, Cheapside. Sol. Tickle, Great Winchester. Thomas Apostle, Queen-st, Cheapside
SUTTON, WILLIAM, carpet warehouseman, West Hartlepool. Pet Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at one, at offices of Sol. Gray, Leeds
SWANSTON, JOHN, glass manufacturer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 3, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Ingledew and Daggett, Newcastle-on-Tyne
TAYLOR, THOMAS GIDEON, draper, Marlborough. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 29, at eleven, at the Crown hotel, Devizes. Sol. Cave Newbury
TIER, FREDERICK FIGG, innkeeper, Birdham. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 3, at three, at the Dolphin hotel, Chichester. Sol. Janman, East Pallant
TOUT, EDWARD, baker, Aberystruth. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 4, at two, at offices of Sols. Cox. Davies and Browne, Brynmawr
TRUMAN, CHARLES, saddler, Pontypool. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 2, at two, at Messrs. Hancock, Triggs, and Co. accountants, Bristol. Sol. Lloyd, Pontypool
TUCKETT, EDWARD PARKIN, innkeeper, St. Thomas the Apostle. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at eleven, at the London and South-Western hotel, Exeter. Sol. Rogers
VANNER, JOHN, woolsorter, Blandford Forum. Pet. Nov 12, Dec. 1, at twelve, at the Railway hotel, Blandford. Sol. Moore Wimborne Minster
WALLACE, WILLIAM THOMAS, hotel keeper, Dorking. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 3, at three, at the Guildhall coffee house, Gresham-st. Sol. Baker, Old Jewry-chbs
WATSON, JOHN, carpet warehouseman, Church-passage, Gresham-st, and manufacturer, Watling-st. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at two, at offices of Sols. Phelps and Sidgwick, Gresham-street
WATSON, WILLIAM, chemist, Old Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 26, at three, at offices of Sols. Reep, Cane, and Co., Bush-la, Cannon-st
WATT, HODGSON, and PEARSON, ARRAN, colonial brokers, Mincing-la. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at two, at office of Turquand, Youngs, and Company, public accountants, Tokenhouse-yd. Sols. Ellis and Crossfield, Mark-la
WHITING, SAMUEL, journeyman gas fitter, Lowestoft. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Archer, Lowestoft
WICKS, JOHN HENRY, printer, Rolls-bldgs. Fetter-la. Pet. Nov 13. Dec. 1, at twelve, at office of Sol. Morris, Leicester-sq

WILLIAMS, DAVID OWEN, linen draper, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at twelve, at office of Sol. Stockwood, jun., Bridgend
WILLOUGHBY, ROBERT SAUNDERS, out of employment, Lockwood-rd, Drummond rd, Bermondsey. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Porter, Leadenhall-st
WILSON, HARRIETT, stationer, Winsford. Pet. Nov. 1. Nov. 22, at one, at offices or Sols. Messrs Cooper, Tunstall
WOOD, SAMUEL, shoe manufacturer, Northampton. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 5, at three, at office of Sol. Shoosmith, Newland
WRIGHT, JOHN, stonemason, Barrowby, Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 5, half-past two, at the Three Tuns inn, Thirsk. Sol. Waistell, Northallerton
WYNNE, RICHARD HAWKINS, tobacconist, Portobello-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at ten, at office of Sol. Digby, Lincoln's-inn-fields

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Nov. 11.

HART, HENRY, coal merchant, Ramsgate.

Gazette, Nov. 14.

CHEESEBROUGH, JOHN EDWARD, woolstapler, Bradford
HANCE, JAMES BUSWICK, woolbroker, Liverpool
KELLER, JOHN ANTON, japanner, Joseph-st, Bow Common-la

Dividends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Bancks, J. non-trader, first, 1 29-32d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Chambers, W. M. wine merchant, second, 1s. 2¾d. (and 3s. 2¾d. to new proofs). Paget, Basinghall-st.—Colombine, D. E. money scrivener, first, 8½d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Harrison and Sherratt, St. Helen's, fourth, 1d. Stone, Liverpool.—Isaif, S. plumber, first, 4d. Stone, Liverpool.—Yeo, R. W. order clerk, fifth, 1s. 11½d. Paget, Basinghall-st
Bennett, S. orthopœdic practioner, first, 4d. At Trust. J. C. G. Bennett, 30, Friday-st.—Bowman, W. agent, first, 5s. 8d. At Trust. E. Buck, 56, Fawcett-st, Sunderland.—Caves, N. draper, second, 6d. At Trust. A. McDowall, 21a, Watling-st.—Cooper, A. boot manufacturer, first, 1s. At Trust. B. Nicholson, 7 and 8, Londonbridge Railway approach.—Dickinson, J. bootmaker, second, 1s. 3d. At Trust. H. Bolland, 10, South John-st, Liverpool.—Edwards, J. timber dealer, third and final, 8d. At Trust. H. G. Nicholson, 7, Norfolk-st, Manchester.—Fiser, W. baker, first, 10s. 6d. At Trust. T. W. Read, 30, Castle-st, Liverpool.—Hinde, A. W. out of business, 20s. At Trust. P. Vine, 20, Cable-st, Liverpool.—Hully, M. butcher, 9s. At Trust. I. P. Heap, Highgate, Kendal.—McDowall, T. draper, first and final, 4s. 2d. At Trust. G. Pye, 3, Bank-bldgs, Colchester.—McIntyre, D. draper, second, 2s. 8d. At Trust. W. H. Richards, 54 and 55, Causeway-head, Pensance.—Thomas, B. wine merchant, first, 1s. At Trust. H. A. Murgatroyd, Windmill, par. Calverley.—Whittaker, G. bleacher, first and final, 1s. 2¼d At Trust. C. Wolfenden, 10, Acresfield, Bolton.
Beale, E. cattle dealer, 5s. At Trust. J. Moore, High-st, Andover —Brooke, I. woollen manufacturer, first and final, 7d. At Trust. J. D. Good Market-pl, Dewsbury.—Copping, W. T. miller, final, 1s. 6d. At Trust. E. J. Craske, Head-st, Colchester.—Davies, J. estate agent, first and final, 8s. At Trust. F. W. Read, 30, Castle-st, Liverpool.—Fisher, E. butcher, 9½d. At Trust. T. H. Palmer, Redwell-st, Norwich.—Galland, T, S. gentlemen, final, 23s.—Love, A. widow, first, 6s. 8d. At Sols. Simmonds and Clark, Bath.—Mason, R. and J. builders, second and final, 9d. At Trust. T. Y. Strachan, Central-bldgs, Grainger-st west, Newcastle.—Sheldrake, F. farmer, first and final, 7s. 6d. At G. Pye's, 3, Bank-bldgs, Colchester.—Webb, B. P. cheesemonger, first and final, 6d. At Sol. Mosscop, Cannon-st.—Whinnerah, H. contractor, first and final, 4s. 3d. At Trust. T. Grundy, 9, Lawson-st, Barrow-in-Furness.—Wright, H. lead merchant, first and final, 6s. At Sussex-rd, Southampton. Sols. Stocken and Jupp, Leadenhall-st

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Apply at Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-st, Lincoln's-inn, between 11 and 2 on Tuesdays.

Halloran, A. L. master in the navy, third, 3s. 1½d. Pearce, East Stonehouse —Wotton, A. J. superannuated master baker, third, 2s. 7½d. (and ¼d.). Pearce, East Stonehouse

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

BATTISHILL.—On the 13th inst., at Mont-le-grand, Heavitree, Exeter, the wife of Wm. J. Battishill, Esq., solicitor, of a son.
LEE.—On the 16th inst., at 35, Connaught-square, the wife of L. Yate Lee, of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

PALMER—STEMSON.—On the 15th inst., at St. George's, Thomas Hitchin Palmer, Esq., solicitor, Norwich, to Elizabeth Carter Stemson, widow of the late George Stemson, Esq., of Exeter

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.

All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

CROWN CASES RESERVED.
REG. v. ROBERT BARRATT—
Rape—Consent—Idiot girl..... 409

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.
LECLERE AND OTHERS v. BEAUDRY—
Canada—Deed of gift—Power of sale ... 410

ROLLS COURT.
FOTHERGILL v. ROWLAND—
Contract for sale of chattels—Breach—Suit for injunction..... 414
WILKINSON v. WILKINSON—
Will—Illiterate person—Indefinite estate..... 416
Re LOSDON AND AUSTRALIAN AGENCY CORPORATION (LIMITED)—
Company—Voluntary winding-up..... 417
PAULL v. MORTIMER—
Executors—Omission to provide for legacy 418

V.C. BACON'S COURT.
BEATTIE v. LORD EBURY—
Practice—Taxation of costs—Separate answers filed by same solicitor 419

V.C. HALL'S COURT.
PATCH v. HOLLAND—
Bill of revivor—Time for enrolment elapsed—Negligence of plaintiff..... 419

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
Ex parte MOSES—
Articled clerk—Service under articles—Absent abroad for one year on account of illness 420
REDWAY v. MACANDREW AND ANOTHER—
Malicious prosecution of action—Action for—De-laration 421
Ex parte HAYWARD—
Articled clerk—Stamp within six months—Mistake of law—Reckoning of service..... 423
GLENISTER v. GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Liability of railway company—Reduced rate of carriage—Wilful misconduct.. 423
ST. OLAVE'S UNION (appts.) v. ST. GEORGE'S UNION (respts.)—
Order of removal—Irremovability—Proviso—Unemancipated child 426
HAMILTON (appt.) v. ST. GEORGE, HANOVER SQUARE (respts.)—
Roof of cellar—Pavement of footway—Expense of repair 428

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
LORD BOLINGBROKE v. TOWNSEND (Clerk to the Local Board of Health of Swindon)—
Practice—Substitution of defendants—Misdescription 430

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.
Ex parte CATLING; Re CHADWICK—
Vendor and purchaser—Liquidation ... 431
Ex parte JEFFERY; Re HAWES—
The Bankruptcy Rules 1870, r. 292—Liquidation 433

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
SPEAK (app.) v. POWALL AND CLARKE (respts.)—
Excise licence for a carriage—A carriage used solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry..... 434
WRIGHT v. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY—
Railway company—Negligence of as carriers of passengers 436

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS..... 65
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 65
Some Bankruptcy Decisions 66
The Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 67
The Transfer of Company Shares to Paupers 68
The Liability of Railway Companies for Unpunctuality 68
The Capture of the Virginius 69
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 70
Decisions affecting Service under Articles 70
Court of Common Pleas..... 70
Organisation among Solicitors 71
Notes of New Decisions..... 72
Correspondence..... 72
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 72
Heirs-at-Law and Next of Kin 73
Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts 73
Creditors under Estates in Chancery..... 73
Creditors under 23 & 23 Vict. c. 35 73
Reports of Sales 73
MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 74
Chester City Police Court..... 74
Hammersmith Police Court 74
MARITIME LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 75
COMPANY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 75
European Assurance Arbitration..... 75
COUNTY COURTS:—
Court of Queen's Bench..... 76
Reading County Court 76
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Court of Bankruptcy 76
Liverpool Bankruptcy Court 76
LEGAL NEWS 78
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION..... 78
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 78
LAW SOCIETIES:—
The Legal Practitioners' Society 79
Huddersfield Law Students' Debating Society 80
Articled Clerks' Society 80
Bristol Articled Clerks' Debating Society 80
Peterborough Articled Clerks' Debating Society 80
LEGAL OBITUARY 80
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Sittings after Michaelmas Term, 1873 80
Winter Circuits 81
THE GAZETTES..... 81
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 82

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR has ordered that the offices of the County Courts may be closed on the 26th and 27th days of December next.

THE courts of common law are evidently disposed to recognise the validity of a consideration for a promise acted upon by a contracting party, although there may be a suggestion that the contract is against public policy. Bartering votes for charities is about as unwholesome a traffic as can well be imagined, but on strict principles of law, if A. gives his votes for the candidates of B. at one institution, in consideration that B. will give him votes for his candidates at another institution, A. having given his votes is entitled to have B.'s promise fulfilled. So the Court of Queen's Bench has decided.

AN instance of the responsibility which a husband may incur by letting his wife have money to dispose of as she pleases, occurred in Dr' Ouseley's case before Lord ROMILLY this week. The wife had a legacy of £1000 left her by her aunt; and the husband consented to her receiving the money and employing it as she thought fit. Thereupon she invested a portion of it in the purchase of 800 shares in the European Assurance Society. She received all the dividends, and the husband never dealt with the shares at all. A few years after the society is wound-up, and the husband is held to be liable to contribute in respect of the shares. Lord ROMILLY considered the case a very hard one, but held that the husband allowing his wife to invest the money did not prevent is being liable in the same manner as if any other agent had invested it for him.

THE Licensing Act has many terrors for licensed victuallers and one, perhaps, somewhat unfamiliar, has been unearthed at the Chester City Police Court. By the 17th section of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, if any licensed person suffers any gaming or any unlawful game to be carried on on his premises, he is liable to a penalty of £10. And any conviction for an offence under this section shall, unless the convicting magistrates shall otherwise order, be recorded on the licence of the person convicted. The unlawful game which it was alleged was going on at the Chester publican's bore the pleasant title of "sudden death," which consists of shaking coins in a hat and turning them out on to a table—a species of pitch and toss. The solicitor for the defence submitted that this was not unlawful gaming, what occurred being no more than pitching and tossing in a private room. His point seems to have been that stakes must be played for to make pitch and toss in a licensed house illegal. We think the magistrates were right in convicting. Any other decision would open a wide door to evasion of the plain provision of the Act.

A LESSON has been read to returning officers at School Board elections by Mr. HAWKES, a Birmingham solicitor, which may prove of service generally. The deputy returning officer, who was an alderman of the city, published an analysis of the voting, showing the number of Catholic, denominational, and unsectarian votes given in the respective districts. Mr. HAWKES points out that this publication is a direct infraction of the Ballot Act, the 34th rule being in the following words:—"34. Before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the agents of the candidates, open each ballot box, and, taking out the papers therein, shall count and record the numbers thereof, and then mix together the whole of the ballot papers contained in the ballot boxes." The object of the Legislature he points out was to conceal the local complexion of the votes, and, he adds, no one having electioneering experience in counties, or in boroughs like Tamworth, can fail to appreciate the great protection to voters which such an arrangement secures. The justice and accuracy of this remark is quite obvious, and returning officers at School Board elections will make a great mistake if they are less diligent than such officers at municipal and Parliamentary elections in carrying out the ballot system.

THE remedy of a judgment creditor against the land of his debtor has been further considered in a case which we reported last week (Hatton v. Haywood, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385). There the creditor had issued a writ of elegit, and obtained a return from the sheriff. The debtor, however, had become bankrupt, and the land had been handed over to his trustee before it had been actually delivered over to the plaintiff under his writ of elegit. This raised a discussion as to the meaning of "actually delivered in execution," the words of the Law of Judgments Amendment Act (27 & 28 Vict. c. 112). The first section says that no judgment, statute, or recognizance to be entered up after the passing of the Act, shall affect any land (of whatever tenure), until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution by virtue of a writ of elegit, or other lawful authority, in pursuance of such judgment, statute or recognizance. In the Earl of Cork v. Russell (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 230), it was decided that a judgment creditor who had not issued execution had no interest in the land so as to entitle him to be a party to a suit for foreclosure. This was a decision of Vice-Chancellor MALINS, and the same learned Judge decided Hatton v. Haywood in accordance with it. Vice-Chancellor PAGE WOOD took a different view in Re Cowbridge Railway Company (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 102), and expressed the opinion that it could not have been intended by the Legislature that a judgment creditor should have no interest in the land until he had obtained actual possession of it, for the very sufficient reason that incorporeal hereditaments which are expressly made land within the meaning of the Act, could not be the subject of actual delivery. "The intention must have been," said Vice-Chancellor WOOD, "simply that all those remedies which a judgment creditor can effect by means of a writ of elegit must be exercised by him before he can come in under the Act." Consequently, in the case before him, where there was a prior elegit, he held that the subsequent judgment creditor could not present a petition for sale of the land until he had got rid of such prior elegit. In Guest v. Cowbridge Railway Company (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 871), Vice-Chancellor GIFFARD seems to have been of opinion that actual delivery under the writ was necessary. Referring to the first section of the statute he said, "That is plain enough, I think, and it must mean that no judgment creditor can have any right of any kind until he has put the writ into the hands of the sheriff. But it goes further, I think, because although possibly putting the writ into the hands of the sheriff may give him a right to file a bill to remove a legal impediment, I do not think he has any right in the shape of a lien on the land until he has got a return from the sheriff." Notwithstanding the very considerable difficulty raised by Vice-Chancellor WOOD to the strict and literal construction of the Act, the weight of authority is in favour of holding that a judgment creditor obtains no interest in the hands of his debtor until it has been given into his possession by the sheriff. There is a further question as to priority—where, for example, a subsequent judgment creditor is the first to put his writ into the hands of the sheriff. Vice-Chancellor GIFFARD in Guest's case was clearly of opinion that under the Act where things are properly done, the priorities must be determined according to the dates at which the writs are put into the hands of the sheriff.

A PRACTICAL question of some moment on the subject of costs was discussed in the case of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company v. Gidlow (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 399), namely, whether if judgment in the courts below with costs be affirmed by the courts of appeal, interest runs on the costs as well as on the judgment. The judgment of the Exchequer in favour of the defendant—which of course was judgment for his costs only—was affirmed by the Exchequer Chamber. An appeal under the Common Law Procedure Act was carried to the House of Lords, and there the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber was affirmed. And it was ordered that the appellants should pay to the respondents the costs incurred in respect of the appeal. It was contended that as a judgment debt carries interest by statute, here the judgment being for costs, the respondent was entitled to interest upon the costs of appeal from the Exchequer Chamber. By sect. 30 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, if any person shall sue out any writ of error upon any judgment whatever given in any court in any action personal, and the court of error shall give judgment for the defendant thereon, then interest shall be allowed by the court of error for such time as execution has been delayed by such writ of error for the delaying thereof. The case under notice decides that the House of Lords may give costs, and the taxing-master may in his discretion tax them so as to allow interest on the judgment appealed to that House. But if this be not done, interest on costs cannot be obtained beyond the time of the delay caused by appealing to the Exchequer Chamber. Such questions as this will lose much of their interest after next year.

SOME BANKRUPTCY DECISIONS.

WE report some interesting decisions from the Liverpool Bankruptcy Court, which we may usefully summarise. In Re Keyworth it was held that a sum paid into court by a defendant to abide the event of an action does not constitute the plaintiff a secured creditor in the event of the defendant becoming bankrupt before the action is determined. There have been two cases decided in the Superior Courts bearing upon this point, namely, Murray v. Arnold (7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385) and Culverhouse v. Wickens (17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 478). The former turned upon the effect of the payment of a sum of money into court on the eve of a trial, in order to obtain a commission to examine witnesses in India, and the question was whether, under the 184th section of the Consolidation Act of 1849, the assignee was entitled to the amount, and the creditor bound to come in as a creditor holding security. It was held that the payment into court did not constitute the plaintiff a secured creditor, and was not in any sense a payment to secure a debt. The amount was therefore held to belong to the plaintiff absolutely. Chief Justice Cockburn there remarked that the case was distinguishable from that of a garnishee, there being in the latter case an ascertained debt. Culverhouse v. Wickens was such a case. There it was held that payment into court by a garnishee under a judge's order is a payment within the meaning of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854, s. 65, and discharges the garnishee; and the subsequent execution of a composition deed by the debtor will not prevent the creditor being entitled to the money so paid into court. In the Liverpool case proceedings in connection with the action were restrained, the result of which was, as the learned judge remarked, that the end and object of the payment into court ceased, and there was no longer any claim which the creditor could make out. This, we think, shows the enormous hardship which may be inflicted upon a plaintiff who, by his diligence, has obtained a perfectly fair advantage over the other creditors of a debtor. This, however, is a consideration constantly disregarded by County Court Judges, the prevailing and overriding notion being under almost all circumstances to put all creditors, diligent and idle, upon one footing.

An interesting question arose out of a bill of sale in Rahn's case, although not novel—namely, whether a bill of sale purporting to assign partnership property, but executed by one partner only, was valid. Another question in the same case was whether the transfer of certain delivery orders amounted to a fraudulent preference in favour of the transferee, who was security only for a debt due by the debtor. The first point is, we think, sufficiently clear. On the authority of Harrison v. Jackson (7 L. T. Rep. 207), and Steilitz v. Eggington (Holt, 141), the learned Judge of the County Court held that he was bound to come to the conclusion that the bill of sale was void. The judgment of Lord Kenyon in Harrison v. Jackson quite supports Mr. Collier's view, and is undoubted law. "The law of merchants," said Lord Kenyon, "is part of the law of the land; and in mercantile transactions, in drawing and accepting bills of exchange, it never was doubted but that one partner might bind the rest. But the power of binding each other by deed is now for the first time insisted on except in the Nisi Prius case cited"—Mears v. Serocold, sittings in Easter Term 1785, at Guildhall, cor., Lord Mansfield, C. J.—"the facts of which are not sufficiently disclosed to enable me to judge of its propriety. Then, it was said that, if this partnership were constituted by writing under seal, that gave authority to each to bind the others by deed; but I deny that consequence, for a general partnership agreement, though under seal, does not authorise the partners to execute deeds for each other, unless a particular power be given for the purpose." In the above-mentioned case of Mears v. Serocold, Lord Mansfield is said to have ruled that for a partnership debt one partner had authority to execute a bond for another. The editors of a leading American case on the law of partnership (Livingston v. Roosvelt) thus state the law as established by numerous decisions: "The rule that one partner cannot, by his implied authority, bind the firm by a sealed instrument, applies only where the firm is sought to be charged, and not where the object is to discharge a debt due to it. . . And it has been decided in case of sales and assignments, where the property may be transferred by delivery, that such a transfer so consummated by delivery, is not annulled by being attested, or having the trusts on which it is made described by a deed, and this applies to a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, to a mortgage of chattels, and to an assignment of a chose in action by one partner under seal." In Rahn's case it was endeavoured to show that there had been delivery by symbol, but this failed. The above citation shows that had such attempt succeeded it would altogether have altered the complexion of the case. As to the transfers which did take place, and the objection raised that they amounted to a fraudulent preference, the learned Judge relied upon an obiter dictum of Lord Justice Page Wood, in Ex parte Foxley, re Nurse (18 L. T. Rep. N.S. 862), as supporting the proposition that a request by a surety to the principal debtor is sufficient to make a payment in pursuance of it good against the trustee in bankruptcy. Under the particular circumstances of that case, the assignment was held to be fraudulent, and the obiter dictum is not of a very satisfactory character. The assignee had indorsed a bill of exchange nine months previously, and a bill of sale had been executed in his favour. In consideration of that, and further advances, the debtor made an absolute assignment. All that Lord Justice Page Wood said was that he was not prepared to say that the risk of indorsing the bill was not in itself an equivalent which would have supported a bill of sale; but the assignment was held fraudulent, and no decision upon this particular point was given. The case of Strachan v. Barton (11 Ex. 647), was also mentioned as showing that such a consideration would prevent a transfer being fraudulent. It was contended there that there must be a debt actually due, and that if there were not, a payment, though made under pressure, would be fraudulent. It was determined that the question whether the debtor had a right to insist on payment of a debt was immaterial, as if, for example, the debtor was applied to to take up a bill on Saturday which was due on Monday, and did so, that would not be a fraudulent preference. There, however, the person applying was a bill holder for value, in which case a debt exists, and the right of action only is suspended. We, however, are decidedly inclined to agree that if the precise point arose it would be held that suretyship is sufficient consideration to support a bill of sale, and to save a payment from being a fraudulent preference, the debtor being pressed to make the payment.

The case of Re T. S. Trumble raised the question of appeal from the decisions of registrars. It was attempted to go to the court on appeal from the registrar on a question of proof of debt. It was objected that the only appeal from the registrar to the court lay with reference to the registration of resolutions, and as the claimant had elected to take the decision of the registrar as to the proof, he could not apply to the court. The learned Judge held that this was so.

Having expressed a strong opinion concerning the appointment of Mr. Collier to the Liverpool County Court, we may take this opportunity of saying that he has made a very good Judge, and gives great satisfaction.

TRANSFER OF COMPANY SHARES TO PAUPERS.

It is undoubtedly a question of much importance to shareholders in limited companies to know under what circumstances they are safe in tranferring their shares. The decisions in the European arbitration by Lord Westbury, and by his successor Lord Romilly, have gone the length of establishing that if, when a company is a going concern, a shareholder, relying upon the ignorance of the directors, introduces into the partnership an improper person, whom he knows to be such, the transferor remains liable to the company. This doctrine, it has been said, is scarcely in accord with the popular views on the subject. We think we may add that Lord Westbury was the first to sanction it as a legal principle. It is observable, however, that there has been some tendency in this direction. For example, in the case of Re the Mexican and South American Company, ex parte Hyams (29 L. J., N. S., 242, Ch.), Lord Campbell said, "According to the decision of this court, to which I respectfully bow, if it had been proved that they (the transferors) had parted with all interest in their shares, although for the express purpose of getting rid of their liability, and although they knew they were of no value, and that the transferee was a man of straw, they would have been absolved from liability, and ought to be removed from the list of contributories. I confess I should have hesitated before I concurred in these decisions, because I think there might have been a considerable difference drawn between the analogy of an assignee of a lease assigning the lease to a man of straw and a shareholder who has become a partner with others, and who has incurred a joint liability at a time when the property had ceased to be of any value, and his sole object being to throw the liability entirely on his co-partners." And it is noticeable that Lord Justice Mellish, in King's Case, Re Great Wheal Busy Mining Company (L. Rep. 6 Ch. App. 196; 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 599), said, "I can quite conceive, that a court of equity may say that a transfer by a shareholder to a mere pauper, for the sole purpose of avoiding liability, is a fraudulent and improper transfer, and ought to be set aside."

The other side of this question was strongly presented by Vice-Chancellor Page Wood, in the case of Re The Phœnix Life Assurance Company, Ex parte Hatton (31 L. J. 340, Ch.), the point there being as in preceding cases as to the bona fides of the transfer. Referring to the decision in Pass's case (28 L. J., N. S., 769, Ch.), the Vice-Chancellor said: "From my recollection of that case, the principle upon which it was decided was that it was the very life of these companies to make their shares easily transferable; and that any doubt or difficulty raised by companies as to whether their shares were or were not transferable, as the transferees were supposed to be solvent or insolvent, would be destructive of the object they had in view, namely, the attracting of capital to societies of this description, with facilities at all times to shareholders for relieving themselves of liability." The doctrine of Pass's case was also approved by Lord Justice Rolt in Re National and Provincial Marine Insurance Company, Ex parte Parker (L. Rep. 2 Ch. App. 685). In the course of the argument the Lord Justice said: "I see nothing unreasonable in the doctrine of Pass's case, that if a shareholder of a company is minded to get rid of his shares he may do so." And counsel urged that the very time when a person having the right to transfer his shares is most likely to wish to exercise it, is when a liability is impending. Lord Justice Rolt commenced his judgment with the observation, "I am still inclined to think that the transfer of shares expressly to escape the liability of a shareholder, does not necessarily vitiate the transfer, and I should not dispose of this case adversely to the appellant upon any such ground."

Lord Westbury seems to have put on one side the essential importance to public companies that no doubt should exist as to the transferable nature of their shares, which has been so much considered by other Judges, and to have given rein to his indignation, undoubtedly just from a moral point of view, against persons forsaking a partnership, and throwing their liability upon their co-partners who sought no escape. There is, however, an obvious distinction between a private partnership and a joint stock company. Persons take shares in a company knowing that those with whom they associate themselves may at any time cease to be partners by transferring their shares. It is otherwise in a private partnership; there can only be dissolution by expiration of the period for which it was contracted, by death, by consent, or by order of the Court of Chancery. In his work on Partnership Mr. Lindley necessarily places companies upon a distinct and separate footing, and he names the only grounds upon which, in his opinion, a transfer can be avoided. He says (2nd edit. p. 1352, quoted with approbation by Lord Justice James, in King's case, in Re Great Wheal Busy Mining Company (L. Rep. 6 Ch. 196; 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 599), "Notwithstanding there is a complete transfer the transferor will be held a contributory if the evidence shows not only that the transfer was made to get rid of a liability, but that the transfer was not a real transaction and was not intended to divest the interest of the transferor, and to render the transferee the bona fide owner of the shares, but that the transferee held them subject to the orders of the transferor." And the inference would seem to be that if the transfer were made simply to avoid liability it would be good.

From the dicta which we have cited, it would appear that decided opinions have been entertained by eminent judges that a wilful transfer to a pauper to escape liability does not relieve the transferor. There are, however, express decisions from Pass's case downwards, that such a transfer, unaccompanied by any other consideration or condition, is good, and relieves the transferor. It was consequently reserved for Lord Westbury to decide positively that such a transfer was void. And his decision in Walton Williams's case (Law Times European Reports, p. 125) is certainly as strong as it could be made. He said (p. 126): "I do not care a rush whether the directors inquired or not, or whether there was misrepresentation or not; but if I find the man who desires to dispose of his shares in favour of A. B., knows very well in his mind at the time that A. B. was an insolvent man, or a dishonest man, and most improper man, for some reason or other, to be introduced into the partnership, I shall hold that that personal knowledge on the part of the individual disposing of his shares forbade him to do what he desired to do, and that his persisting in doing it, relying upon the ignorance of the directors, and concealing what he knew was a fraud upon the directors." Had there been an appeal, we do not think that such a doctrine could have been sustained. Neither do we think that it will be accepted as law by the ordinary tribunals.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT 1873.

Rules of Procedure.

(Continued from page 32.)

The last notice of this Act shortly reviewed those rules which related to proceedings before trial; most of the remaining rules relate to the place and mode of trial, and to appeals.

In a former issue attention was called to the rules as to the place of trial under those sections of the Act by which the sittings of the court for the trial of issues of fact are provided for. It is unnecessary to say more here than that all local venues are abolished, and primâ facie every action is to be tried in Middlesex, unless the plaintiff, in his statement of claim, name the place where he proposes to try. The venue, however, may be changed by order of a Judge. The lists for trial at the sittings in London and Middlesex are to be prepared, and the actions allotted for trial in accordance with future rules, but without reference to the division of the High Court to which such actions may be attached; that is to say, subject to the rules to be made, all causes in whatever division commenced, are to be tried as to issues of fact before any Judge appointed to sit for that purpose. In fact, the sittings in London and Middlesex will be held more as the assizes are now held; the assize Judge trying issues from any Court: (rules 28 and 29.)

The mode of trial is next provided for: (rules 30-35). The judges of the Common Law Courts have frequently pointed out the urgent need there has always existed for the appointment of official assessors to assist the judges in trying technical questions. This need is now supplied. Actions are to be tried before a judge or judges, or before a judge sitting with assessors, or before a judge and jury, or before an official or special referee, with or without assessors. This will be a great assistance to judges and to referees, and will probably have a good effect in shortening the length to which causes, depending rather upon questions of practical or technical experience, now extend. The plaintiff has the choice of the mode of trial, in the first instance, on giving notice of trial; but the defendant may, by giving due notice within such time as may be fixed by the future rules, require the issues of fact to be tried before a jury, or he may apply to the court for an order to have the action tried in any other of the said ways, and in the latter case the court has power to order the mode of trial. It frequently happens that in one action there are different questions of facts which would be best tried in different ways, and to meet such a case it is provided that the court may order different questions arising in the same action to be tried by different modes of trial; and as one issue of fact may depend upon the result of others, the court may order that one to be tried first before the others, and may appoint the place for such trial. Where an issue of fact is to be tried by a jury, the trial is to be held before a single judge, unless the trial is specially ordered to be held before two or more judges. This last provision leaves everything as it now stands in respect to jury trials, and would still preserve the right of trial at bar in exceptional cases. Trials before referees are to take place wherever the referee shall consider most convenient and may be adjourned from place to place as he thinks fit, subject only to the order of the court. A referee may have an inspection or view, either by himself or with his assessors (if any) as he may deem expedient for the better disposal of the controversy before him. The continuous and vexatious adjournments of arbitrations are also provided against by a direction contained in the rules that, unless otherwise directed by the court or a judge, the referee shall proceed with the trial in open court, de die in diem, in a similar manner as in actions tried by a jury. As questions of law may arise in a reference which require the decision of the court, power is given to the referee before the trial is concluded, or by his report under the reference to him, to submit any question arising therein for the decision of the court, or to state any facts specially, with power to the court to draw inferences therefrom. Wherever such a submission or statement is made the court will enter such order thereon as it may think fit, and the court will have power to require any explanation or reasons from the referee, or to remit the action or any part thereof for re-trial or re-consideration to the same, or any other referee.

Evidence of witnesses, in the absence of any agreement between the parties, and subject to any rules of court as to certain classes of cases, is to be taken vivâ voce and in open court, at the trial of any cause or at any assessment of damages. The court or a Judge will, however, have power to order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that any affidavit may be read at a trial on such conditions as are reasonable, or that any witness whose evidence in court ought to be dispensed with, may be examined by interrogatories or otherwise, before a commissioner or examiner; provided that the court may order a witness to be produced for cross-examination. Upon interlocutory applications evidence may be given by affidavit, subject to the power of the court to order the production of the party making the affidavit for cross-examination. Affidavits must be confined to facts within a deponent's own knowledge, except on interlocutory motions, when statements as to the belief, with the grounds thereof, may be admitted, and this is enforced by the penalty of costs for unnecessary matter. Admissions may be made by notice, given either in the statement of the case or otherwise, so as to admit the truth of the whole or any part of the case stated or referred to in the statement of claim, defence, or reply. Either party may call upon the other party to admit any document subject to such exceptions, and, if the admission is refused, the cost of proving it will have to be borne by the party so refusing, whatever the result of the action: (rules 36-39).

The next succeeding rules deal with interlocutory orders and directions. Power is given to a Judge to make any order at any stage of the proceedings to which the party may upon the admissions of fact in the pleadings be entitled. This would probably entitle a plaintiff to final judgment if the admission should be such as to show the defendant's liability in law. Power is given to the Lord Chancellor to transfer any question from one Judge to another, and to the court to order any enquiries to be made, or accounts to be taken, at any stage of the proceedings. For the preservation of lands, goods, or other things, the subjects-matter of actions, full power is given to the court to make orders for their entry, safe custody, examination, or for any other purpose for the benefit of the parties, or the better obtaining of full evidence and information. Power is also given to order the examination of witnesses before an officer of the court or other person, and to order the deposition made to be filed in court, and to give leave, any party to give such deposition in evidence. Before the receipt of the defendant's statement of defence, or after the receipt and before taking any other proceeding in the action, a plaintiff will be at full liberty to discontinue his action, or part thereof, on payment of the defendant's taxed costs relating to so much as is withdrawn. Such a discontinuance will not be a defence to a subsequent action. After the above time, however, a plaintiff may not discontinue without leave of the court or a judge. Similarly, a defendant cannot withdraw his defence without leave. A nonsuit, unless the court otherwise directs, is to have the same effect as a judgment on the merits for the defendant, but in case of surprise or accident, a nonsuit may be set aside on such terms as to payment of costs as the court may think fit: (rules 40-46.)

A very important change is introduced by the rule providing for costs. All costs of and incident to the proceedings of the High Court are to be in the discretion of the court. At the same time the right of a trustee, mortgagee, or other person to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be now entitled in courts of equity is continued: (rule 47.)

New trials are not to be granted on the ground of misdirection, or of the improper admission or rejection of evidence, unless it should appear to the court that substantial wrong has been thereby occasioned at the trial; and if the wrong should affect only part of the matter in controversy, the court may direct a new trial as to that part only. Bills of exceptions and proceedings in error are abolished, and all appeals are to be by way of rehearing brought on by way of motion without any formal proceeding. By notice of motion an appellant may appeal from the whole or any part of any judgment or order on condition that he so states in the notice. The notice is to be served only on persons affected by the appeal, subject to the power of the court of appeal to order the notice to be served on any other persons and to make an order as if the parties so served had originally been parties. The powers of the court of appeal will embrace all the powers of the court of first instance, including discretionary power to hear further evidence vivâ voce or otherwise. Such evidence may be given without special leave upon interlocutory applications or in any case where matters have arisen since the decisions appealed against, but upon appeals from a decree or judgment on the merits, special leave must be obtained to produce further evidence at the hearing of the appeal. The Court of Appeal has full power to vary or reverse any order, and to make such further orders as may be required, and this may be done so as to benefit parties who have not appealed from, or complained of, the decisions, and the court also has full power over the costs of the appeal. A respondent need not give notice of motion to institute a cross-appeal; but the respondent, if desirous of varying an order, must give notice of his intention, but the admission to do so will not vitiate his right to proceed; that will only be ground for an adjournment. The mode in which evidence taken in the court below is to be brought before the Court of Appeal, will be regulated by rules of court or special order, and such evidence is to guide the Court of Appeal as to the proceedings below. No interlocutory order not appealed against will debar the court from making such order as it may think just. Appeals from interlocutory orders are to be brought within twenty-one days, and other appeals within one year, and this time can only be extended by special leave of the court. Security for costs of an appeal must be given. An appeal will not operate as a stay of proceedings or execution, except the court so order, and no intermediate proceeding will be thereby invalidated: (rules 48-58.)

This completes the rules in the schedule to the Act. It will be manifest to anyone, perusing our short notice of them, that many blanks remain to be filled up by the future rules. Hence it is impossible to discuss them fully. Our next notice will treat of the remaining parts of the Act dealing with officers, inferior courts, and certain miscellaneous matters.

THE LIABILITY OF RAILWAY COMPANIES FOR UNPUNCTUALITY.

It has been thought that the law laid down by Mr. Stonor, in the case of Forsyth v. Great-Western Railway Company, was novel. We find, however, in the Liverpool Mercury, of 9th Dec., 1869, the following, which shows that in the County Courts, at any rate, the question has arisen and been decided before:—

A case of considerable importance to railway companies and travellers was decided at the Liverpool County Court on Wednesday. On the 11th Sept. a gentleman took three tourist return tickets, for himself, wife, and child, at the station of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, in Liverpool, for Perth. The Lancashire and Yorkshire line ends at Preston, and at that place passengers for Scotland have to change to carriages of the London and North-Western Company. Owing to delays on the journey, the train was twenty minutes beyond the appointed time before it reached Preston. The Scotch train had set off, and there being no train until Monday, the plaintiff, his wife, and child, had to stay at an hotel during Sunday, until there was an available train; and for the expense so incurred he now sued the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company. The company, in defence, relied upon a notice in the time tables and bills that they do not guarantee the arrival and departure of their trains at the times named. The Judge (Mr. Serjeant Wheeler) held, however, that the delays on the journey from Liverpool to Preston were avoidable; that the company did not use the care and diligence which it was their duty to use, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict.

SANDERSON v. LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY.

The learned Judge said:—This action was brought to recover expenses incurred by the plaintiff in consequence of the failure of the company to take him and his wife and child from Liverpool to Perth, on Saturday, the 11th Sept. last, as they had contracted to do. Mr. John Forshaw appeared for the plaintiff, Mr. Bellringer for the defendants. It was agreed that no question should be raised as to the plaintiff's right to sue in the form adopted with respect to the three passengers. The facts are these:—On the day in question the plaintiff took three tourist return tickets at the station in Liverpool, for Perth. According to the company's time tables the train was timed to leave Liverpool at a quarter past two, was due at Preston at 3.35, was to leave Preston at 3.43, and to arrive at Perth at twenty minutes past eleven. The line of the defendants ends at Preston, and at that place passengers for Scotland have to cross from the arrival to the departure side of the station, and to change to the carriages of the London and North-Western Company. The train was seven minutes late in leaving Liverpool, was delayed at Ormskirk five minutes, was again delayed three minutes before reaching the Preston station, and was further delayed five minutes between the entrance to the station and the alighting platform. On reaching the platform, it was twenty minutes beyond its appointed time, and thirteen minutes beyond the time of departure thence of the Scotch train. That train had been sent off, and there was no other train that day to Perth, or any train on the following day, because in Scotland there is no railway travelling on Sunday, and the earliest available train for Perth left Preston on Monday morning. Under these circumstances the plaintiff and his wife and child repaired to an hotel at Preston, and there remained until the Monday. For the expenses thus incurred this action is brought, no claim beyond actual outlay being made by the plaintiff. Since the decision in 1856 of the case of Denton v. Great Northern Railway Company (reported in 5 E. & B. 861), in which the court held, that the representations in their time tables amount to a contract on the part of the company with those who should come to the station to forward them as stated, the companies have protected themselves by inserting a notice in the tables that they do not guarantee the arrival or departure of the trains at the times named. In this instance the company rely upon such a notice as an answer to the action. The notice, it seems, is published monthly in their time bills, and appears upon their large posting bills; and, further, as they say, upon all their tickets. Upon this last point, however, their witness was mistaken, for on reference to one of the tourist tickets, it turned out that there was no such notice upon it. The plaintiff, moreover, stated that he had never read or seen the notice in the time tables or posting bills, and that he had no knowledge, and therefore it was contended that he was not bound by it; but the plaintiff is in this difficulty as to this part of the case, that the ticket alone does not amount to a contract on the part of the company, nor is any duty thereby imposed upon them to have a train ready to start at the time at which the passenger was led to expect it. (See the case of Hurst v. Great Western Railway Comyany, 19 C. B. 310.) By the mere issuing of the ticket in question the contract, as there decided, would be a contract to carry the passenger from Liverpool to Perth within a reasonable time. To make out the contract to convey by a particular train, or series of trains, leaving and arriving at specified times, the issue of the ticket must be connected with the representations in the company's time tables, and, therefore, the production of those tables is necessary to the plaintiff's case. That being so, he is, I conceive, bound by their contents, and, consequently, by any notices or conditions by which the company can lawfully limit their responsibility. The notice on which the company rely, looking at its terms, and taking them in their widest sense, amounts to a claim of entire immunity for the consequences of delays, however caused, and whether occurring upon their own line or upon the lines of other companies connected with them for which they issue tickets. This claim, if pushed to its limits, could not, I think, be sustained, because, although a company may by a proper notice make special contracts, the conditions they attach in order to be binding upon the public must be reasonable. Upon referring, however, to a later page of the company's time tables, it will be seen that they do not in fact claim the extensive immunity which the notice already referred to implies, for amongst their general regulations I find this further provision: "Every attention will be paid to insure punctuality so far as practicable, but the directors give notice that they not undertake that the trains shall start or arrive at the time specified in the bills, nor will they be accountable for any loss, inconvenience, or injury which may arise from delay or detention." Taking these notices together, and giving effect to their plain terms and import, they really come to this, that the company will use all reasonable care and diligence to insure punctuality, and that if notwithstanding this care and caution delays occur, they will not be responsible for that delay. This I take to be the contract which the law itself would imply, without any special notice by the company, and the contract, and its co-relative obligation apply to the whole journey for which the ticket is issued, though the company's own line extends only part of the way. Now the question in issue is whether there has been a breach by the company of their contract duty to the plaintiff. The time tables must be regarded as the basis of the contract, or as was said by Lord Chief Justice Erle, in a case before him, "they must be taken to be in the mind of the carrier when he receives a passenger for conveyance." Acting upon these arrangements in the present case, it was the duty of the company to use every attention (adopting their own phrase), first, to start punctually, and, secondly, to avoid delays on the way to Preston, so as to reach that place in time to enable passengers for the North to cross from one side of the station to the other, and to take their seats in the North-Western on train. What happened? There was the series of delays already mentioned between Liverpool and Preston, four in number, resulting in the loss of twenty minutes in time, and of the onward train to Scotland. Delay No. 1 was not explained, but perhaps these facts may account for it: The guard of the train had only arrived at the station by an in-train at 2.19, four minutes after the out-train should have left; but whether that was the proper time for the in-train, or if it were late, why it was so, the court was not informed. The guard, however, as soon as he had disposed of the parcels in his charge with the in-train, which, he says, he did in three minutes, made the best of his way to the out-train which was then in motion, with another man in his place. Upon the accustomed guard reaching the train, his intended deputy left it, and the train proceeded. The company, therefore, in their substitution of another for the accustomed guard, did that at last which one would have expected them to have done at first, so as to prevent delay at the outset of the journey. Delay No. 2, at Ormskirk, was due to affixing a horse-box to a passenger train. Delay No. 3 was not explained. Delay No. 4 was due to the occupation of the rails between the entrance to the Preston station and the platform by intervening trains, but there was no evidence to show how that obstruction happened, or that the course was not quite clear for the train in question to pass into the station if it had been in time. It seems to me that all these were avoidable delays, but in truth the two at Liverpool and Ormskirk (which were clearly so) were more than enough to account for the loss of the onward train, and to render necessary the stay at Preston of the plaintiff and his family from Saturday to Monday. Under all these circumstances, and for these reasons, I am of opinion that the company did not use the care and diligence which it was their duty to use to enable the plaintiff to reach his destination that night, and that, therefore, he is entitled to a verdict for the amount claimed.

THE CAPTURE OF THE VIRGINIUS.

[COMMUNICATED.]

IT is hardly creditable to this country that there should be any doubt as to the true character of the capture and execution of the crew of the Virginius. And it is still less creditable to find it actually asserted and maintained that persons going out to aid insurgents struggling for political independence are liable to be captured on the high seas and summarily executed as pirates! Such a notion could only be entertained from utter ignorance of the first principles of international law, and by such as have taken their ideas of it from the loose language of debates instead of from its recognised authorities. The facts are these: A vessel bearing the American flag, but destined, no doubt, to aid the insurgents in Cuba, is captured on the high seas in time of peace, by a Spanish cruiser, but so far as has yet appeared, without any authority from the Spanish Government, the vessel is carried into a Cuban port, and there many of those on board, mostly English and American subjects, are summarily executed without trial—for a trial by court martial in such a case is, of course, no trial at all; as a court martial can only take cognisance of offences against the laws of war committed within the territory. Now it does not admit of the smallest doubt that the capture was unlawful; and that whether it was lawful or not the executions of foreigners were simply acts of murder.

Those who have attempted to defend the conduct of the Cubans have treated the subject as if it were merely a question as to the legality of the capture, and they have almost entirely blinked the question as to the executions. But in reality the question as to the capture is comparatively of small importance so far as the foreigners on board are concerned; and whether it was lawful or unlawful makes not the slightest difference as regards the character of the executions. For it is forgotten that if the capture was lawful, the crew were entitled to be tried for the offence supposed to have justified the capture. But for that supposed offence they were not tried at all. That of itself shows that the pretence of piracy was false; and the only question as to the capture is, whether it was not itself unlawful, and was not authorised by the Spanish Government. But whether it was so or not, the capture was clearly unlawful, for this reason:—The capture of a vessel on the high seas, bearing the flag of another nation, can only be justified (where it is not in self-defence) on one of two grounds: piracy or belligerency. Now, as to the latter, it may at once be dismissed, for the Cubans themselves protest that there was no war. They deny that the rebels can be considered as belligerents, and insist that they are rebels and nothing more. And, be it borne in mind, that rebellion is an offence only against municipal law; an offence essentially territorial, and which could only be committed, as in this case, by foreigners on Spanish territory, or at all events in Spanish waters. And as the intention to commit an offence can scarcely be worse than the offence itself, all that the crew of the Virginius could possibly have been guilty of was complicity in an intended act of rebellion, that is, an intended offence against municipal law. But it is a first principle of international law that no nation can enforce its criminal law in the territory of another, or on the vessels of another on the high seas. Neither has one nation, intending peace, any power of capture over vessels bearing the flags of other nations, excluding cases of piracy.

It is another first principle of international law that the flag (apart from cases of piracy) covers the vessel—except as against the vessels of the State whose flag is carried. Even a state of war or recognised belligerency does not militate against this principle, as we saw in the case of the Trent, which occurred after the recognition of belligerency. It might be a question, perhaps, whether if there had been Confederate soldiers on board the Trent, and the vessel was conveying them to the United States instead of taking them away, an American war vessel might not have captured them; but then if it could have been done, it could only have been done in right of war, and then, by the same right principle, the persons taken would have been entitled to be treated as prisoners of war. This, however, would not be the case here, as there was no belligerency. The flag, therefore, covered the vessel, and the flag was American. The capture, therefore, was unlawful, unless the vessel was piratical, and piratical in an international sense. But piracy in that sense involves an intention to commit general depredations on the high seas, and here there was no idea of committing depredations on the high seas at all. On the contrary, the case of the Cubans is that the crew were going to Cuba, and were to engage in hostilities there, and hostilities only, against Cuba. It was, therefore, the reverse of a case of piracy, and the imputation of piracy is a mere pretext. Pirates, in the sense of international law, are those who intend to capture and plunder vessels of any nation they may meet with on the seas. That is the only species of piracy which justifies capture on the seas by the vessels of any nation, for the very reason that pirates are, in that sense, the enemies of all nations. But in the present case the crew were only the enemies of the Cubans, and were bound for Cuban territory, and had no idea of any depredations on the high seas, still less of general depredations. Therefore they were not pirates, and the capture of the vessel on the high seas was unlawful. Nor is this all: for it is avowed that the character of the vessel was known, and it was, therefore, well known that it was not piratical.

But, on the other hand, even assuming that the capture was lawful, and taking the worst possible view of the vessel captured, and the destruction of its crew, this will not render the execution of the foreigners on board one whit less unlawful and criminal. For, as regards foreigners, even assuming that there was any colour for the charge of piracy, they were entitled to a legal trial before a regular court of justice. They were not tried for piracy, because it would have required a regular trial, and before any regular tribunal they must have been acquitted. This was well known, and it was also known that if any delay were allowed the Government would not permit the execution to proceed. Again, we say that there can be no question that the capture was unlawful, nor that the executions of the foreigners were acts of murder. They were authorised by no court of justice, nor by the local government, still less by the Government of Spain. There is no precedent for any such an atrocity, and no civilised Government would have sanctioned it.

Our seizure of the Caroline during the Canadian Rebellion, as it is the nearest case in point, illustrates by contrast the illegality of these acts of the Cubans. We cut out and burnt the Caroline, it is true; but not on the high seas. She was within the waters of the colony, and engaged in actual hostilities against it. Yet, as she lay on the American side of the river, her captors were careful not to touch anyone on board, and they only seized and destroyed the ship. The Americans raised an outcry, and were only satisfied when they found that the ship was actually molesting our subjects, being within a few hundred yards of our shore. Under those circumstances the ship was seized and burnt, though not until every person on her had been taken out. No one dreamt of pretending that we were entitled to treat the crew as pirates; and if we had done so, assuredly we should have been involved in war. When the President issued a proclamation against the American sympathisers—although their head quarters were on British territory—he warned them that they would "render themselves liable to arrest and punishment by the laws of the United States," and not a word was said admitting any right in us to punish them as pirates. Nor did we ever set up such a right. It is true that when afterwards some of the American sympathisers actually invaded Canada, and many of them were taken in arms, they were tried by court martial, and one or two of them were executed. But they had actually been taken in arms on British territory, and their lives were forfeited by the laws of war. And if the unfortunate crew of the Virginius had landed, or had even been captured when landing—in arms—on the Cuban shore, they would have incurred the same fate. Then there would have been no doubt as to their acts, and though their execution in cold blood would have been barbarous, it would have been justified. Those only would have been seized who were actually engaged in insurrection on Cuban territory. But the crew of a ship captured on the high seas and not actually engaged in piracy, were entitled to a trial in a regular court of justice, in order that their guilt might be proved and their degree of guilt judicially ascertained. Taken on the high seas, where they were only in transitu, and had no idea of committing depredations, they had committed no offence beyond the misdemeanor cognisable by the municipal laws of their own countries. And their summary execution, under the pretence of a crime for which they were not tried—and without the sanction of the Spanish Government—was, whether the capture was lawful or not, neither more nor less than murder.

LAW LIBRARY.—In our notice of "The Pursuit of Truth," by Mr. Finch, we omitted to give the name of the publishers—Messrs. Longmans, of Paternoster-row.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

We hear so much—and with reason—of the necessity for organising the Profession, that we willingly give publicity to the suggestion of a solicitor that solicitors should dine in hall in London occasionally. The building of the Incorporated Law Society in Chancery-lane offers ample accommodation. Much advantage is likely to arise from such an institution, and the circuit mess and the dining in hall of the other branch of the Profession affords ample proof of the utility of so assembling. All solicitors, conveyancers, proctors, and articled clerks should be admitted. We incline to the opinion that, if properly worked, it would be largely attended and very beneficial.

Here and there, no doubt, there are solicitors to whom the annual certificate duty is of such small moment that they care not whether it be £9 or £6 or £90 or £60; but to the many it is quite otherwise, and certainly the complaint of a recently-admitted solicitor, that it is rather hard on him to pay £4 10s. for a certificate when admitted in Trinity Term last, and a similar amount before the 16th Dec. next, is well founded. It is a matter which demands that attention at the hands of the Incorporated Law Society which it would astonish us to find that it receives.

Elsewhere appears a letter from "A County Attorney of ten years standing" upon the subject of the delay—serious delay—in issuing commissions for oaths in common law. In the country this delay is far more serious than if it occurs in in connection with town applications. It often happens that in consequence of this delay clients—who cannot be sworn before their own solicitor, if a commissioner—are obliged to travel many miles in order to get the necessary oath administered. No doubt the common law judges have this matter under their serious consideration; but if not, we venture to commend it to their immediate attention. Applications of a similar kind to the Lord Chancellor are dealt with, with little or no delay.

We understand that the judges have recently appointed a committee from among themselves to frame the rules of procedure to be used in working the Supreme Court of Judicature Act. We venture to express a hope that a ready use will be made of the practical knowledge and experience which solicitors and their clerks can certainly bring to bear on the deliberations of the committee. The knowledge of members of the Bar for such purposes when compared with that enjoyed by the other branch is as a theoretical compared with a practical knowledge, and we feel confident that it will not fall short of a misfortune if the committee of judges leave the work in question to so-called draftsmen. The necessity for adopting our suggestion seems so apparent that we cannot think it will be overlooked. Seeing that the council of the Incorporated Law Society is only at present partially representative, it would be wiser at least that a draft of the proposed rules should be submitted to, say a dozen solicitors to be named by the judges, each having especial qualifications for the general work. The easy and inexpensive working of the rules is not one iota less important to the Profession than to the public, who must be first considered.

The practice of giving articles to clerks is on the increase with solicitors to an extent which we cannot approve. It is a wise provision which permits a clerk under certain circumstances to obtain admission to the Profession, and it would be equally wise if greater facilities were offered by which solicitors could be called to the Bar. There is, however, a practice obtaining by which some solicitors give articles to those in their employ, the quid pro quo being a reduced salary, and sufficient consideration is not given under these circumstances to the fitness of the clerk to become a member of the Profession. If the solicitor overlooks this, there is yet the Incorporated Law Society, who have the power practically of excluding those who by education are not qualified to enter the Profession. Their office in this respect is one of considerable responsibility.

A Solicitor writes to us urging the necessity for all members of his branch of the profession carefully studying the valuable paper recently read by Mr. Marshall, of Leeds, on the organization of the Profession. We think solicitors will do well to do so, and we hope to hear that it is to be published in the shape of a pamphlet, for it is a document deserving deep consideration. The thanks of the Profession are pre-eminently due to Mr. Marshall for his labour in connection with his exhaustive paper, a portion of which we now reproduce, and which we hope to complete on a future occasion. A short report appeared in our issue of the 25th Oct. last.

Apropos of the suggestions, upon the subject of the power of the Judges of the Superior Courts to strike attorneys off the Rolls, contained in Mr. Marshall's valuable paper read at the recent meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association at Birmingham, the question is asked of us why barristers should not be disbarred by the same authority. We confess we cannot distinguish between the two cases unless it is to find that there is practically more reason for vesting such a power in the Judges as regards the Bar than as regards solicitors. One advantage arising from the Judicature Act in this respect is—we presume—that one application, instead of, as at present, four, will be sufficient to remove the name of an attorney and solicitor from the rolls. This will effect a great saving to the Incorporated Law Society.

A solicitor at Faversham sends us the old advertisement to which appears the name of "Carpenter, Craven-street," and as to which he makes some very reasonable deductions, which, however, it is really no use our producing, for we have times out of mind given ample exposure to this advertisement and every other of the kind, to no purpose whatever. We presume that the council of the Incorporated Law Society consider that they are powerless in these matters; if so, the sooner they so inform the Profession the better, for there is a general impression among solicitors that they can and ought to deal with the subject of depredations by unqualified persons, at whose hands the poorer public suffer so much.

The following Law Lectures and Classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society:—Monday, 1st Dec., class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock. Tuesday, 2nd., class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock. Wednesday, 3rd., class, Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock. Friday, 5th, lecture, Conveyancing, 6 to 7 o'clock.

A solicitor at Landport, in Hampshire, sends us the following advertisement, which has just appeared in a local paper. It speaks for itself, and needs no comment. We omit names, &c.:

SOUTHSEA.—Accountant and General Business Agent; for sixteen years Managing Clerk to a Solicitor.—Mortgages Negotiated, Wills, Agreements, Leases, &c., prepared. House property bought and sold by private treaty. Debts collected.

DECISIONS AFFECTING SERVICE UNDER ARTICLES.

Saturday, Nov. 22.

Re Brimacombe.

An application was made to the Full Court by Philbrick on behalf of R. C. Brimacombe for a rule directing that service under articles of clerkship and an assignment should count from their respective dates, notwithstanding the non-enrolment of the articles within six months after date and the non-production to the Registrar of Attorneys and Solicitors of the assignment for entry within three months after enrolment.

Granted.

Re A. B., an Articled Clerk.

An application was made to a master at Judges' Chambers for leave to enter notice in the judges' books of intention to apply to be admitted in the then Michaelmas Term 1873, the same having been omitted to be entered through ignorance of the rules of Hilary Term 1853. Granted.

Tuesday, Nov. 25.

Re C. D., an Articled Clerk.

An application was made to a master at Judges' Chambers for leave to give nunc pro tunc examination and admission notices for Hilary Term 1874, on the ground that the applicant had concluded, though erroneously, that but a month's notice before that time only was required, as in the case of an intermediate examination.

Refused.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Tuesday, Nov. 25.

Ex parte Greville.

Articled clerk—Employment as vestry clerk.

The Attorney-General (H. James, Q.C.) moved for a rule calling on the examiners of the Law Society to grant the applicant a certificate of having passed the preliminary examination for admission as an attorney.

Garth Q.C., and Murray, appeared to show cause in the first instance.

The applicant was articled to a solicitor in February 1871, being at that time dependent on his father, who was clerk to the vestry of Wandsworth. His father died in 1872, leaving his mother and younger brother dependent on his exertions. He was offered by the board the office vacant by his father's death, and accepted it. When examined at the Law Society he satisfied the examiners of his proficiency, but they refused to grant him his certificate, being of opinion that he held an office and exercised an employment other than that of articled clerk, contrary to the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10. It was stated on behalf of the Law Society that they were willing to grant a certificate if it could be done consistently with the statute.

Affidavits of the applicant and the attorney to whom he was articled stated that he gave all the time required to the service of his articles, and discharged his duties as vestry clerk either by deputy or in the evenings.

The Lord Chief Justice Coleridge said:—I think, Mr. Garth, we need not trouble you. I am of opinion that we cannot grant this application, with regret in this case, because it is stated by the Attorney-General, and not controverted by Mr. Garth in any way, that this young gentleman is a very meritorious person, and there is no desire to prevent his admission as an attorney, if within the rules of the court, and the provisions of the Act of Parliament, he can be admitted. Now I confess, for my own part, it seems to me impossible to get over the direct enacting words of the 10th section of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127. I am clearly of opinion, that enacts a condition precedent, that before a person can be admitted an attorney, he must comply with the words of the statute, and not hold any office, or engage in any employment whatsoever, other than the employment of a clerk to an attorney or solicitor, with certain savings which do not affect the present case; and that he must by affidavit show and prove that he has fulfilled that condition which is enacted in the earlier part of the section, that is, as to not holding any office, or engaging in any employment. Now I think in this case this gentleman has both held an office, and been engaged in an employment, and it would be trifling with the words of the statute, and would certainly be an example of the truth of the saying that hard cases make bad decisions, if we were to come to any other conclusion in this case than that, however much we may regret it, this gentleman has not fulfilled the conditions enacted by the 10th section. The case of Re Peppercorn, decided in this Court was a case of a very peculiar sort. It was a case in which, if it were an "office," it came to the man as part of a family arrangement. The whole matter was a matter of family property, and the stewardship of the manor devolved upon him. In the language used by the Chief Justice in delivering the judgment of the Court—devolved upon him as a matter of arrangement between himself an his brothers and sisters, and was held by him for the purpose of looking after, with more advantage, their common property. It was a very peculiar case. It was a case in which, apparently, the judgment of the Court must have been, that under the circumstances, these words were complied with, and no "office" was held, because, although the word "office" is used by the Chief Justice in delivering the judgment, it appears by the report of the case that the judges of this court had satisfied the judges of the Queen's Bench, and had pronounced their judgment with the assent of the judges of the Queen's Bench, who had decided the case upon the words of the statute, and must thereiore have been satisfied not merely that the spirit of the statute was unbroken, which, as I gather, they thought all along, but must have been satisfied by the reasoning of the judges of this Court, that the letter of the statute also, upon which alone that had proceeded, had not been broken in that particular case. Without saying more about it, it may be enough to say that that was a very peculiar case, and it stood on its own ground. We are asked to extend that case by a very much wider and broader decision. Certainly I am of opinion, and I believe the court are unanimously of opinion, it is not prepared in this case, with whatever regret, to extend the construction of the statute in the manner asked for by the Attorney-General.

ORGANISATION AMONG SOLICITORS.

A PAPER read at the meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, at Birmingham, by Mr. Marshall, M.A., solicitor, Registrar of the Leeds County Court, and hon. sec. of the Leeds Incorporated Law Society, containing the following observations:—

Organisation of the Profession.

I use these words to describe the manner in which the forces at the disposal of our branch of the Profession are applied to secure the ends which we desire. In order to determine whether this organisation is good or bad it is necessary to estimate, first, the amount of the force at disposal, and, secondly, the result produced by that force. If the result be considerable in proportion to the forces involved, we shall conclude the organisation to be good; if inconsiderable, we shall conclude it to be bad. Now the force at disposal, and which a theoretically perfect organisation would render effective, is the influence, direct or indirect, of some 10,000 attorneys (the real numbers are 10,350, of whom 3600 practise in London, 6750 in the country), spread like a net over the face of the country; collected in large numbers in the centres of population and business, more sparsely distributed in thinly-peopled districts, arranged, in fact, in a kind of rough proportion to the importance of the particular district. And the course of business is such that the attorneys of a given town or district are necessarily thrown together and know each other; they are acquainted more or less with the leading practitioners in the neighbourhood, and they are certainly associated with an agent in London of their own profession.

Influence of Solicitors.

While the nature of their business tends to throw them together, it also tends to give them considerable influence, especially in public and quasi-public affairs. These affairs have almost invariably their legal side, on which the opinion and assistance of a lawyer is desired, and he thus has an opportunity of causing his opinion to be felt without appearing to obtrude it on matters outside the professional sphere. It will be conceded that the force at the disposal of our profession is not only considerable in itself, but exercised under conditions which enable it to be used with great effect. To what effect and purpose has it been used? The answer to this question is really very curious. Our position as regards the State is this. The State says to us, "It is of importance to the community that you gentlemen should be properly qualified for your duties, and, therefore, we will take unusual precautions in your case. We will examine you before you enter upon your professional studies; we will examine you while you are engaged in them, and when you have finished them. You must be articled to some member of your own calling, and you must pay a considerable stamp duty for the privilege. You will, of course, have to pay an annual tax for the liberty to practice. But we must take care that you do not abuse the liberty. We will, therefore, frame a scale to regulate your charges, and we will be slow to alter that scale. You are officers of our courts, and, therefore, our judges have the fullest and most arbitrary powers over you. You are at liberty to make as much money as you can under these conditions, but the prizes of your own Profession are not for you." Such is our position as regards the State, and it is not so good but that it might easily be improved. The two branches of the Profession, the certificate duty and the reservation of all important appointments for the Bar, are matters which would bear a little alteration. It might not be an unwholesome change if we were permitted to exercise in all the Superior Courts the right of speech which is at present limited to the Court of Bankruptcy. I am not aware that any subversion of the relations between ourselves and the Bar has followed from that particular concession. What has happened is exactly what might have been expected. In important matters the most experienced barristers are engaged — points of practice and cases which will not bear expense are argued by the solicitor, in whose hands the business lies, and with entirely satisfactory results.

Remuneration.

Then the scale of costs requires revision, assuming that we are to have a scale of costs. Physicians, barristers, engineers, land surveyors, and accountants ask what they think they can get, and the best of them get pretty nearly what they choose to ask. The profits of mercantile men are only limited by the effect of competition. The wage-earing population have succeeded by combination in obtaining an advance which goes far to meet the increased cost of the necessaries of life. But our tariff is the same, and unless we take steps to raise it nobody else will. If it be objected that we get a monopoly as a set-off to this fixed charge, I reply that the monopoly is of the most limited kind. Any human being may advertise himself as a law agent; he may advise, prepare all kinds of documents, and if he take the precaution to get paid beforehand and to keep clear of proceedings in court, he may do an attorney's business on his own terms. He is liable to an action for negligence, but so are we. It is plain that we do not get, in the shape of state protection, an equivalent for the stamp duties we pay and the regulated charges we submit to.

Solicitors Officers of the Court.

But we are officers of the courts. And why are we officers of the courts? Because in the old time the appointment of an attorney was a branch of the royal prerogative. The king granted a monopoly to practise law as he granted a monopoly to sell wine or salt. It is for the members of a liberal profession to consider whether it is consistent with their dignity and interest that they should be subordinates of the courts, and as such, liable to dismissal at the discretion of the judges, or whether it would not be better that they should follow their calling with the same responsibilities and under the same obligations to the general law and to public opinion as other members of the community. I say nothing of minor matters, such as our exclusion from the Inns of Court, and the like; but, looking at our position broadly, and considering how much the State exacts and how little it gives in return, I maintain that there is urgent need of some change; that a body of men having the very great power, which I assume attorneys to possess, should allow things to remain as they are, can only be explained by supposing that our power is not available, and is known not to be available, for concerted action.

This is the conclusion at which I think everyone must arrive who contrasts the means we have with the result obtained by those means. Given, the present circumstances and professional status of attorneys, and their opportunities of improving those circumstances, it follows, from a comparison of one and the other, that our organisation must be bad.

Machinery of the Profession.

The same conclusion will be drawn from an examination of the machinery actually at work. It is not well adapted to secure its ends. Let us consider what that machinery is. It consists of three parts—the Incorporated Law Society, the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Society, and thirty-four local law societies.

The Incorporated Law Society is a corporation consisting of about 2500 members, of whom more than one-third are country practitioners, and it has been in existence nearly half a century. (The members of the Incorporated Law Society were, on the 29th July, 1873, London members, 1806; country members, 689—total, 2495.) It is in many respects the official and accredited representative of our branch of the profession, and it is invested by the various Acts of Parliament with important duties relating to the examination, admission, and registration of attorneys and solicitors. It is, in a sense, the guardian of the profession, and the censor of its morals. All law bills, and especially bills directly affecting us, are watched by its Council, who frequently interfere with good effect during their progress through Parliament. But it is only in a limited sense the representative of the profession at large, considerably more than two-thirds of whom do not belong to it. A large number both of its members and of those who are not members complain of its policy, as too acquiescent—with what justice it is immaterial here to consider. One thing is clear; were the Incorporated Law Society disposed to be ever so active, the effective force which it could wield would be in no sense commensurate either with the needs or with the aggregate power of those on whose behalf it would assume to act. Suppose, for example, that some Chancellor of the Exchequer were to propose to increase the solicitors' certificate duty. What would the Incorporated Law Society do? It would no doubt prepare an able and conclusive statement on the question. Its council would address the Government, and would be listened to with the polite attention which people who have made up their minds bestow on adverse critics. Representation in the House of Commons. Some members of Parliament who are directly accessible to the council would be induced to support them. The pressure of public opinion could not be brought to bear; if it came into the scale it would probably be on the wrong side. A contest of this kind is fought in the lobbies. Now, what would be the answer of the gentlemen who advises the Government on such matters where he asked the probable result of a division depending on the efforts of the Incorporated Law Society? It is not necessary to answer that question. I have put a case affecting our interests only, and uncomplicated with other considerations; still one on which the Incorporated Law Society would be bound to exert its whole strength, and I maintain that if we had to fight out such a battle with no other resources, and no other machinery than such as the Incorporated Law Society could furnish, we should be hopelessly beaten. The society is not furnished with arms for this warfare. It has no means of getting at the 600 and odd members of the House of Commons. It has no means of getting at those who can influence those members.

Incorporated Law Society as representing Solicitors.

In Manchester, out of 295 practising solicitors, thirteen only belong to the Incorporated Law Society. In Liverpool, out of 283 solicitors, it counts sixteen members only. In Birmingham, with 193 solicitors, it numbers twenty-four. In Bristol with 189 solicitors, there are ten who belong to it; and in Leeds, with 104 solicitors, five only are of that society.

The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association occupies somewhat different ground. It has 614 members, 194 of whom are London solicitors, and 420 country solicitors; while in the Incorporated Law Society the country members form about one-third of the whole body, in the Metropolitan and Provincial Association they form more than two-thirds. I need not describe the constitution of a society to which we all belong, nor need I say much as to the work it does. By its autumn meetings it has rendered us an invaluable service; it has brought representatives of the whole Profession together; it has made us acquainted with each other; it has rendered co-operation on a large scale possible. In this and in its provincial connection it contributes precisely that element of strength which is wanting to the Incorporated Law Society. But I am doing it no injustice in saying that in every other respect it is less powerful and less complete in its administrative machinery than the sister association. The actual work of this association is conducted in London—necessarily and inevitably the London members on the spot conduct it, just as the London members of the Incorporated Law Society, being on the spot, conduct its business. And I am not aware that there are any sufficient means of directing from this London office the power which is undoubtedly given by the wide-spread local connection of the association. I do not forget the Northern Union, but from some reason or another that experiment has not worked well. With its own members the association communicates of course, but those members scarcely constitute more than a twentieth of the Profession. Sending circulars to individuals is not a hopeful way of inducing energetic action. We know the fate which awaits circulars. Granted that that which I believe has never yet been attempted were done, and committees formed in all the towns in which the Metropolitan and Provincial Association possesses sufficient members to form a working body, what would that amount to? At most to this—that active influences might be set up in some twenty or thirty different centres. That falls far short of our requirements. Considering then, that the ground in London is already occupied by the Incorporated Law Society, and that the ground in the country is, for purposes of conjoint action, scarcely occupied at all, I am led to conclude that this society is not an effective machine for the organisation of the profession, and that, neither independently of the Incorporated Law Society nor in union with it, does it furnish adequate means for bringing to a focus the considerable, but diffused, force at our disposal.

Local Law Societies.

I now come to this, the third and only remaining part of our existing machinery.

There are 6750 country solicitors in England and Wales, carrying on business in 1319 towns and villages. There are just thirty-five local law societies, some of which are probably rather in existence than in active operation. Let us consider the distribution of these thirty-five societies.

The county of Northumberland possesses one, at Newcastle. The county of Cumberland possesses one, at Carlisle. Westmoreland has one at Kendal, and Durham one at Sunderland. Lancashire owns five; Manchester, Liverpool, Preston, Lancaster, and Bolton-le-Moors. Yorkshire has three, namely, Leeds, Hull, and the Yorkshire Society at York. The county of Lincoln is represented by the society of Lincoln; the county of Stafford counts the societies of Wolverhamptom and Bilston, and Leicestershire the society of Leicester. Worcestershire has one representative at Worcester, and Warwickshire one in the active society of this town. There are law societies in Northampton, and Cambridge for those counties. Suffolk gives us Bury St. Edmunds; and there is one at Buckingham. Gloucestershire has two, one at Gloucester and one at Bristol; and Devonshire has two at Exeter and Plymouth respectively. The county of Somerset has two, one at Bath and a county society whose head quarters are at Taunton; and the county of Dorset one at Dorchester. Hampshire, Kent, Surrey, and Sussex are each represented by one county law society, while in Wales, Denbighshire and Flintshire have a joint society, and Anglesea and Carnarvon a joint society likewise. Of the forty English counties sixteen are unrepresented by any law society. Those counties are Nottingham, Derby, Chester, Salop, Rutland, Norfolk, Hereford, Huntingdon, Bedford, Hertford, Essex, Oxford, Berks, Wilts, Monmouth, Cornwall. In Wales it suffices to say that none of the twelve counties are represented, except the four which form the northern boundary of the principality. Considering, then, the geographical distribution of our thirty-five law societies, we find that twelve belong to the six counties north of the Humber; twelve belong to the twenty-three counties of the Midland District, including in that division those which lie on the north of a line connecting Gloucester with Ipswich and south of the six northern counties; and nine to the ten counties south of that line. In Wales the two law societies are confined to the four northern counties. The northern and southern counties are therefore relatively the best represented; the northern counties having an average of two law societies each, and the southern counties something less than one each, while the Midland counties possess as nearly as possible an average of one law society for every two counties.

(To be continued.)

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL — INTERPOLATED SHEET — PRESUMPTION.—Testator's will was engrossed on fifteen sheets of paper by a law stationer. They were numbered consecutively, and on a sheet numbered sixteen, testator had written a codicil, and on another sheet, numbered eighteen, a schedule of plate, pictures, &c., referred to in his will. At testator's death the will was found with the original page four taken out, and a page substituted in the testator's handwriting, the numbering of which had been altered from seventeen to four. The several sheets were tied up with red tape, and the original page four was found loose in the testator's davenport. Held, that in the absence of any direct evidence, the presumption was, that when the will was executed the pages were bound together, and were in the same state as when it was found after the testator's death: (Rees v. Rees and Rees, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 374. Prob.).

SOLICITOR AND CLIENT—COSTS — CHARGING ORDER—PROPERTY RECOVERED OR PRESERVED —23 & 24 VICT. C. 127, S. 28.—A solicitor is not entitled to a charging order under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28, in respect of costs incurred by him whilst acting for the plaintiffs in a suit in which a decree has been made for the administration of a testator's estate, and for the appointment of a new trustee where proceedings in the suit have been stopped by the plaintiff after the decree has been carried into chambers and accounts brought in by the defendant, and no certificate has been made by the chief clerk, and no new trustee appointed: (Pinkerton v. Easton, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 364. M. R.)

WILL—TRUST TO LAY OUT PERSONALTY IN LAND TO GO ALONG WITH SETTLED PROPERTY—OUTLAYS IN REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS ON SETTLED PROPERTY.—A testator by his will directed his trustees to lay out his residuary personalty in the purchase of lands, to go along with certain settled property. Held, that the court had no power to direct part of the residuary personalty to be laid out upon repairs and improvements on the settled estate: Re Lord Hotham's Trusts (L. Rep. 12 Eq. 76), not followed: Brunskill v. Caird, 39 L. T. Rep. N. S. 365. M. R.)

PROMISSORY NOTE—INTEREST—INSTALMENT OF A CERTAIN SUM OR MORE—INDEFINITE TIME FOR FINAL PAYMENT.—Defendant, on the 25th April 1872, promised in writing to pay to the plaintiff £170, with interest at 5 per cent. as follows: The first payment, to wit, £40 or more, to be paid on the 1st Feb. 1873, and £5 on the first day of each month following, until the note and interest should be fully satisfied. Upon default in payment of any of the said instalments, the full amount then remaining due was to be forthwith payable. Held, that this was a valid promissory note: (Cooke v. Horn, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 369. Q.B.)

PATENT — GENERAL AGENT—INFRINGEMENT —PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS—RIGHT TO SUE—DEMURRER. — To a bill stating an agreement made between a general agent of the patentees of an American invention to introduce and sell the invention in Great Britain, and the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff was to have the sole agency and control of the working of the patent in England, upon certain terms, including a share of royalties and profits, praying for an account for damages, and an injunction to restrain future infringement, the defendants, who were alleged to be using the invention, demurred. Held, that the plaintiff was a mere agent for the sale of the invention, and was in no such position as gave him the right to file such a bill, which was in the form of a patentee's bill for infringement: (Adams v. The North British Railway Company, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 367. V.C. W.)

COSTS—COPYRIGHT—PIRACY—INQUIRY AS TO PROFITS.—Where in a suit for the infringement of copyright the chief clerk's certificate, made in pursuance of the decree, was, on the application of the plaintiff, referred back to the chief clerk and subsequently confirmed, the court refused to make any order as to the costs of the summons and subsequent reference: (Kelly v. Hodge, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 387. V.C. B.).

INNKEEPER — LOSS OF VALUABLES — NEGLIGENCE.—Where a guest at an inn has an opportunity given him of securing valuables in his possession, by giving them over to the custody of the innkeeper or otherwise, and neglects such opportunity: Held, by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C.B., and Martin, Bramwell, and Pigott, BB.), that his conduct amounts to such negligence as to deprive him of his rignt to recover against the innkeeper, in case of such valuables being lost or stolen: (Jones v. Jackson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 399. Ex.)

ATTORNEY — SUSPENSION OF BY SUPERIOR COURTS—DIFFERENCE IN PRACTICE.—When an attorney and solicitor has, for misconduct, been suspended by order of one of the courts of equity from practising in the Court of Chancery for ten years, the Court of Exchequer, upon proof and verification being laid before it, by affidavits, of, first, copies of the petition and order of the court of equity and the affidavit used there on the hearing of the petition; secondly, a transcript of a shorthand writer's notes of the judgment of suspension in Chancery; and thirdly, the identity of the attorney—will grant a rule nisi for suspension for a like period from practising in that court, and such rule will make itself absolute, without being further moved, in default of cause being shown within the time therein limited. In the Court of Queen's Bench, in such a case, the rule is granted absolute in the first instance, whilst the practice of the Court of Common Pleas in a similar case is to grant a rule to show cause: Re C. Wright (1 Ex. 658; 17 L. J. 128), and Re Brutton (26 L. T. Rep. N.S. 33; 41 L. J. 58, C. P) cited Re Marshall Turner (29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 345. Ex.).

CONVEYANCE—COVENANT FOR CERTAIN LAND TO BE "NEVER SOLD," BUT LEFT FOR THE "COMMON BENEFIT" OF BOTH PARTIES—VALIDITY — CONSTRUCTION. — A deed of conveyance contained an agreement that certain land, described in the deed, should "never be hereafter sold, but should be left for the common benefit of both parties and their successors." In a suit brought to compel the removal of a house alleged to have been built on the said land in contravention of the said agreement. Held (reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of Judicature, Halifax, Nova Scotia), that the agreement was one the performance of which might be enforced in equity, because (1) on the true construction of its terms it amounted, not to a perpetual restriction of sale, but to an agreement on the part of the grantor to leave the land in the state in which it was at the time of the conveyance; and (2) the agreement contemplated, not an uncertain and indefinite use of the land by the parties, but that the land should be left open for the advantage of the parties as adjoining proprietors: (McKlean v. McKay, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 353. Priv. Con.)

SUMMONS BEFORE A MASTER FOR SECURITY FOR COSTS, OR TO REMIT THE CAUSE TO A COUNTY COURT.—By the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 68, s. 1, the superior judges are directed to make general rules empowering the masters of the courts to do any such thing and to transact any such business, and to exercise any such authority and jurisdiction in respect of the same, as by virtue of any statute or custom, or by the rules and practice of the said courts are now done, transacted, or exercised by a judge of the said courts sitting at chambers. And by the General Rules of Michaelmas Term 1867, the judges ordered that the masters should transact all such business, except certain matters therein excepted. By a subsequent Act (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142) it is enacted by sect. 10 that it shall be lawful for anyone against whom any action of tort may be brought in a Superior Court, to make an affidavit that the plaintiff has no visible means of paying the costs of the defendant, should a verdict not be found for the plaintiff, and thereupon a judge of the court shall have power to make an order that unless the plaintiff shall, within a time to be therein mentioned, give full security for the defendant's costs, to the satisfaction of one of the masters, or satisfy the judge that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted to the Superior Court, all proceedings in the action shall be stayed, or in the event of the plaintiff being unable or unwilling to give such security, or failing to satisfy the judge as aforesaid, that the cause be remitted for trial before a County Court to be therein named: Held, that the master has jurisdiction, under the before-mentioned rules, to hear such an application: Held also, that the master having refused to make an order, the court will not review his decision: (Parker v. Roberts, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 402. Ex.)

Correspondence.

FINAL EXAMINATION.—Can any of your readers inform me where some practical hints as to the books to be read for this examination and where the method of reading them can be found?—EPSILON BETA—[Apply to the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, for particulars of the lectures and classes; this will give you some clue, and inquire of someone lately passed. —ED. Sols.' Dept.]

— When a clerk's articles expire in the long vacation, the first time he can offer himself for examination is in Trinity Term. If however he does not do this until Michaelmas, is it the practice of the examiners in such a case to take into consideration the extra time the candidate will have had to prepare himself and thus require more perfect answers than they would have done had he presented himself in Trinity Term.—OMEGA.—[The examiners not being remunerated cannot be expected to and do not deal so precisely with applicants as is suggested by the question The object should be to win honours, not merely to pass.—ED. Sols.' Dept.]

AFFIDAVITS.—Referring to your last week's impression, and to the complaint of the illegible handwriting of copies supplied from the offices of the Masters of the Common Law Courts, there is the additional element of complaint in the fact that 6d. per folio is charged, or 50 per cent. more than what is allowed for copies made by legal practitioners. Can anyone explain this anomaly, which ought to be put an end to?

G. S. AND H. B.

AGENCIES.—The enclosed is so remarkably unique that I beg to send it to your journal. The circular in question was placed under the door of my private house on Saturday night last by the billsticker's man. SUBSCRIBER.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

FARRANT (Sarah), Chertsey, Surrey, spinster, £150 Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Sarah Farrant.

LANDER (John Drought), Moyclare, King's Co., Esq., HEALY (Rev. Robert), Tyrrel's Pass, Westmeath, and FRAZER (Robert Enraght), Ferbane, King's Co., Esq., £299 3s. Three per Cent Annuities. Claimants, said John Drought Lander, Rev. Robert Healy, and Robert Enraght Frazer.

MIREHOUSE (Agnes), Upper Seymour-street, Portman-square, spinster, £74 6s. Three per Cent Annuities. Claimant, Agnes Fisher, wife of the Rev. Cecil Edward Fisher, formerly Agnes Mirehouse, spinster.

MORSE (Arthur), Swanham, Norfold, brewer, and MORSE (Rev. Herbert), Emsworth, Hants, clerk, £104 12s. 11d. New Three per Cent Annuities. Claimants, Frances Denning, widow, sole executrix of Rev. Stephen Poynts Denning, deceased, who was sole executor of Rev. Herbert Morse, deceased.

SMITH (Chas.), 21, Norfolk-st, Lower-road, Islington, Middlesex, gentleman, £215 12s. 8d. New Three per Cent Annuities. Claimant, said Charles Smith.

WARNER (Rev. Geo. Brydges Lee); DANE (John), Canterbury; and EDGELL (Alexander), Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, Middlesex, gentleman; £3088 16s. Reduced Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Rev. Geo. Brydges Lee Warner, the survivor.

WELLER (Elizabeth Jane), West Wycombe, Bucks, spinster. £33 1s. 3d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Elizabeth Jane Weller.

HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

MORLEY (Geo.), Guisborough, York, landed proprietor. Next of kin to come in by Dec. 20, at the chambers of V. C. M. Jan 8, at the said chambers, at 12 o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

APPOINTMENT UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

CO-OPERATIVE OMNIBUS ASSOCIATION (Limited.)—Creditors to send in by Dec. 1 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to J. Cooper, 3, Coleman-street-buildings, London, the official liquidator of the said association. Dec. 15, at the chambers of the M. R., at 11 o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

ESSEX BREWERY COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 12 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors, if any, to A. Thomas, 2, Adelaide-place, London-bridge, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Dec. 19, at the chambers of the M.R., at eleven o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

LA GAULOISE COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 13, before the M.R.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY ASSOCIATION (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 1, their names and addresses and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors, if any, to James Boyes, 2, Carey-lane, London, the official liquidator of the said association. Dec. 20, at the chambers of the M. R. at eleven o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

MALAGA LEAD COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 6, before the M. R.

SATURN SILVER MINING COMPANY OF UTAH (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 5, before V. C. M.

SKAGER-HOLM ESTATE CO. (Limited).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 30 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors, if any, to L. Tiden, 34, Clement's-lane, London, the liquidator of the said company. Jan. 14, at the chambers of the M.R., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BILLINGTON (Wm.), Nelson-street, Greenwich, Kent, undertaker. Dec. 15; Wm. Bristow, solicitor, Greenwich. Dec. 22, at twelve o'clock.

BULL (Henry W.), formerly of 12, Wilton-crescent, afterwards of 25, Ely-place, and late of 24, James-street, Buckingham-gate, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 6; J. C. Deverell, solicitor, 9, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex. Dec. 22; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

CARR (Ralph), 1, Savage-gardens, London, and Walthamstow, Essex, cork merchant. Dec. 6; B. F. French, solicitor, 51, Crutchedfriars, London. Dec. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

CLEMENTS (Geo.), Ryde, Isle of Wight, Hampshire, brewer. Dec. 14; Chas. Cole, solicitor, Portsea. Jan. 8; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

COMBS (Joanna), 14, Belitha-villas, Barnsbury, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 12; J. Combs, solicitor, 25, Bucklersbury, London. Dec. 22; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

DEACON (Grosvenor), 155, Stanhope-street, Mornington-crescent, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 1; E. Pope, solicitor, 12, Gray's-inn-square, Middlesex. Dec. 15; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

GOMOS (Mary) formerly of Goodwyns East Cosham, Southampton, late of Granville House, Nelson-street, Ryde, Isle of Wight, widow. Dec. 8; F. Jackson, solicitor, 55, Chancery-lane, Middlesex. Dec. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

GRAHAM (Chas. J.), Brighton, Sussex. Dec. 1; Crawley and Arnold, solicitors, 20, Whitehall-place, Middlesex. Dec. 5; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

HIGTON (Ellen S.), Southport, Lancaster. Jan. 5; Blagg and Son, solicitors, Cheadle, Stafford. Jan. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

HODGSON (Jos.), formerly of 12, Church-row, Limehouse, Middlesex, and late of 4, Tyndale place, Islington, Middlesex, iron merchant. Dec. 22; H. F. Pullen, solicitor, 2, Gresham-buildings, Guildhall, London. Jan. 14; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

HOLBROW (Ethelbert), 18, Ledbury-street, Peckham, Surrey, elastic gusset manufacturer. Dec. 8; F. C. Adams, solicitor, 61, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Dec. 20; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

HOLT (Robert), Bury, Lancashire, timber merchant. Dec. 6; Thomas Dodds, solicitor, Bury. Dec. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

HORN (John), Middleton-in-Teesdale, Durham, tailor and draper. Dec. 5; Wm. Robinson, solicitor, Darlington. Dec. 15; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

HOYLE (Henry), Little Harwood, near Blackburn, Lancaster, gentleman. Dec. 15; H. J. Robinson, solicitor, Blackburn. Jan. 9; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

HUGHES (Jenny), Netley Cottage, Fawley, Southampton, widow. Dec. 4; J. Thomson, solicitor, 23, Great Winchester-street, London. Dec. 18; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

IRVING (Wm.), Workington, Cumberland, colliery proprietor. Dec. 13; A. Helder, solicitor, Whitehaven. Dec. 22; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

PANNELL (Jos.), Liverpool, bookseller and stationer. Dec. 3; Thos. H. Sampson, solicitor, Liverpool. Dec. 23; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

PHILLIPS (John A. P.), 3, Alexander Villas, King Edward-road, Hackney, Middlesex, warehouseman. Dec. 1; Geo. Webb, solicitor, 3, Crosby-square, London. Dec. 12; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

RENTALL (Henrietta), 101, Marylebone road, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 15; Thos. S. Lewis, solicitor, 7, Wilmington-square, Middlesex. Jan. 7; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

RUSSELL (John), Terhill House, Cheltenham, Esq. Dec. 8; Chas. J. C. Prichard, solicitor, Bristol. Dec. 20; M. R. at twelve o'clock.

SAUSSE (Sir Matthew R.), formerly Chief Justice of Bombay, late of 5, Hume-street, Dublin, Ireland. Feb. 14; A. Norris, solicitor, 2, Bedford-row, Middlesex. March 6; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

STACKHOUSE (Thos.), Taitlands, Stainforth, Giggleswick, York, gentleman. Dec. 20; Wm. Hartley, solicitor, Settle. Jan. 13; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

TIZARD (John), Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, Dorset, solicitor, and late a partner in the firm of Eldridge, Pope, and Co., Dorchester, brewers. Dec. 17; H. T. George, solicitor, Weymouth. Jan. 12; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

TURNER (Mary), Derwent-hill, Crosthwaite, Cumberland, widow. Jan. 12; V.C. H. at one o'clock.

WESTBURY (Right Hon. Richard, Baron), Westbury, Wilts, and 73, Lancaster-gate, Hyde-park, Middlesex. Jan. 7; Harrison and Co., solicitors, 19, Bedford-row, Holborn, Middlesex, Jan. 21, M. R., at eleven o'clock.

WILDING (John), New Accrington, Lancaster, innkeeper. Dec. 16; H. Bannister, solicitor, Accrington, Dec. 22, V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ADAMS (Thos.), Nottingham and Lenton Firs, Lenton, Nottingham, Esq. Dec. 31; Watson and Wadsworth, solicitors, 13, Weekday Cross, Nottingham.

ANDREW (Geo.), Ludworth, Derby, of Compstall, Chester, of Manchester and of Leamington, cotton manufacturer, calico printer, collier, and merchant. Jan. 6; Stevenson Lyceett and Co., solicitors, Chancery-place, Manchester.

ASHTON (Jas.), Mimwood, Herts, Esq. Jan. 12; Cunliffe and Leaf, solicitors, 56, Brown-street, Manchester.

ATTON (Wm.), 1, St. Ethelbert-street, Hereford, solicitor. Dec. 23; S. Farmer, solicitor, Hereford.

BAINBRIDGE (John H.), Bishop Auckland, Durham, brewer. Jan. 1; J. Proud, solicitor, 16, Market-place, Bishop Auckland.

BELLMAN (Rayner), Earl Soham, Suffolk, surgeon. Dec. 1; Kerrison and Preston, solicitors, Bank-street, Norwich.

BENSON (Amelia St. George B.), formerly of Gloucester-place, Portman-square, and 34, York-street, Portman-square, and late of 13, Wyndham-place, Bryanstone-square, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 15; Meredithe, Roberts, and Mills, solicitors, 8, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

BIDWELL (John), formerly of the Foreign Office, then of 91, Onslow-square, Middlesex, late of Danygarth House, Crickhowell, Brecon, Esq. Jan. 1; Newman and Lyon, solicitors, 7, King's Bench-walk, Temple, London.

BINDLEY (Geo.), Coventry, haberdasher. Jan. 14; Twist and Sons, solicitors, 16, Hertford-street, Coventry.

BLISS (Henry), Q.C., 5, Paper-buildings, Temple, and 26, Eccleston-square, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 24; Young and Co., solicitors, 6, Fredericks-place, Old Jewry, London.

BROWN (Wm. H.), 40, Chrisp-street, Poplar, Middlesex, draper. Dec. 31; Wm. Sturt, solicitor, 14, Ironmonger-lane, London.

BUTLER (Martha), 1, Merton-terrace, Iffley-road, Oxford, spinster. Dec. 18; W. H. Walsh, solicitor, Oxford.

CHRISTIE (Robert M.), late of Bankside, Surrey, civil engineer, but afterwards at the time of his decease of Blanc Pignon, near Boulogne-sur-Mer, France. Dec. 15; Lewis and Watson, solicitors, 89, Gracechurch-street, London.

COWELL (Richard), Cardiff, Glamorgan, merchant. Feb. 1; Ingledew, Ince, and Vachell, solicitors, 124, Bute-street, Cardiff.

CROOK (John), North-street, Bedminster, Bristol, brewer. Jan. 1; Fry, Otter, and Brown, solicitors, Shannon-court, Bristol.

DANIELS (Lydia), Bocking, Essex, widow. Jan. 1; Edward E. Clark, solicitor, Snaith, near Selby, York.

DETTMAR (Harriott), 33, Lansdown-place, Brighton, Sussex, widow. Dec. 8; Humphreys and Morgan, solicitors, Gilt-spur-chambers, Holborn Viaduct, London.

EDGELL (Caroline), 21, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, Middlesex, widow. Nov. 30; J. Edgell, solicitor, 17, Clifford's Inn, Fleet-street, London.

EDWARDS (Richard W.), 40, Harnington-street, Hampstead-road, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 2; Whittakers and Woolbert, solicitors, 12, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex.

ELIN (John), 4, Great Winchester-street-buildings, London, and 7, Kent-terrace, Regent's-park, Middlesex, merchant. Jan. 1; Bischoff and Co., solicitors, 4, Great Winchester-street-buildings, London.

ELLERTON (Richard), Ellerton Lodge, Downholme, York, gentleman. Jan. 1; John Wm. Teale, solicitor, Leyburn.

ELSDEN (Wm.), formerly of 57, Regent-street, Lambeth-walk, and 21, Lambeth-walk, Surrey, late of 60, or 69, Loughborough-road, North Brixton, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 5; Whitakers and Woolbert, solicitors, 12, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

ELSMERE (Peter), Birmingham, secretary to the Society of Artists. Dec. 15; Webb and Spencer, solicitors, 56, New-street, Birmingham.

FFINCH (Rev. Benjamin S.), The Rectory House, St. Paul, Deptford, Kent, clerk. Dec. 7; Park and W. B. Nelson, solicitors, 11, Essex-street, Strand, London.

FLEWKER (John), formerly of Derby, late of Dawlish, Devon, gentleman. Dec. 6; Pearson and Whidhorne, solicitors, Dawlish, Devon.

FORD (Walter), 159, Gray's-inn-road, Middlesex and Guildford Lodge, Margate, Kent, gas meter manufacturer. Dec. 12; Sharp and Ullithorne, solicitors, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn, Middlesex.

FOSKETT (Maria M. G.), Ashley House, Southlands-grove, Bickley, Kent, widow. Dec. 31; Shepheard and Sons, solicitors, 32, Finsbury-circus, London.

FOWLES (Ralph), Malpas, Chester, yeoman. Dec. 22; Eyton P. Jones, solicitor, Whitchurch, Salop.

GARDNER (John P.), Kendal, brazier. Dec. 15; C. Gardner Thomson, solicitor, Finkle-street, Kendal, Westmoreland.

GARNIER (The Very Rev. Thos.), D.C.L., The Close, Winchester, clerk, formerly Dean of the Cathedral Church. Dec. 20; F. Bowker, solicitor, 23, St. Peter's-street, Winchester.

GERARD (Josiah), African trader, late of Lagos, Africa, and formerly a lieutenant in H.M. 2nd West Indian Regiment, and police magistrate. April 15, 1874; H. Quinn, solicitor, 2, South John-street, Liverpool, England.

HALE (Wm.), Ropley, Southampton, yeoman. Dec. 24; Blackmore and Son, solicitors, Alresford, Hants.

HANBURY (Sarah), formerly of Merfield, Yorkshire, late of 88, Piccadilly, Westminster. Dec. 31; Woollscott and Leonard, solicitors, 61, Gracechurch-street, London.

HARRISON (Wm.), Leicester, gentleman. Jan. 31; Miles and Co. solicitors, Bank-street, Leicester.

HOGG (Charles), Lansdfield, Cheltenham, Esq. Dec. 17; Ticehurst and Sons, solicitors, Essex-place, Cheltenham.

HOKER (Samuel), Waterhouses, near Ashton-under-Lyne, yeoman. Dec. 18; Rushton and Co., solicitors, 7, Mealhouse-lane, Bolton-le-Moors.

HOLT (Jas.), formerly of Sydney, New South Wales, and late of Lawn House, Upper Tooting, Surrey, Esq. Dec. 8; T. W. Denby, solicitor, 8, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London.

HORNE (Margaret) Kendal, Westmoreland, widow. Dec. 15; E. Gardner Thompson, solicitor, Finkle-street, Kendal.

HOYLE (Eliza K.), formerly of 1, Camden-cottages, Denmark-road, Camberwell, Surrey, late of 272, Camberwell-road, Surrey, widow, Jan. 14; C. Mott, solicitor, 15, Paternoster-row, London.

IZARD (William), Brigton, Sussex, gentleman. Dec. 31; W. A. Stuckey, solicitor, 4, Prince's-place, North-street, Brighton.

JOHNSON (William S.), North Shields, gentleman. Jan. 30; Leitch and Dodd, solicitors, Howard-street, North Shields.

JOHNSTON (Alexander), Shanghai, China, Esq. Dec. 20; Nelson and Son, solicitors, 6, Godliman-street, Doctor's Commons, London.

JONES (Hugh), Rumworth, Lancaster, brickmaker. Dec. 18; Rushton, Armitstead and Co., solicitors, 1, Mealhouse-lany, Bolton-le-Moors.

KIRK (John), late of Richmond Lodge, Devon, linen merchant, and lately trading at Belfast, Co. Antrim, and at Keady, Armagh, and in New York, U.S., under the style and firm of William Kirk and Son. March 1; William Miller Kirk, 12, Bedford-street, Belfast.

KISS (William D.), 2, Fen-court, Fenchurch-street, London, and 32, Deacon-street, Walworth, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 30; J. W. Marsh, solicitor, 2, Fen-court, Fenchurch-street, E.C.

LACY (Bernard G.), late of 32, Hampden-road, Brighton, and formerly of Poole, Dorset. Dec. 23; Thomas C. A. Brine, solicitor, Market-street, Poole, Dorset.

LANDS (Christopher), Running Horses, 1, Austin-road, Battersea, Surrey, carpenter and beershop keeper. Dec. 13; R. Wastell, solicitor, 24, Cecil-street, Strand, Middlesex.

LEESON (Henry), Ship and Rising Sun, High-street, Shadwell, and the Fishmongers' Arms, Holles-street, Clare-market, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Dec. 10; Young, Jones, and Co., solicitors, 2, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry, London.

LEWIS (Lieut.-Col. John), 27, Dorchester-place, Marylebone, Middlesex. Dec. 12; Law, Massey, and Halbert, solicitors, 10, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

LLOYD (Ann), 67, Brecknock-road, London, spinster. Jan. 1; Henry Rowton, solicitor, 13, Bedford-row, London.

LONG (Wm. H.), Brackley-park, Great Lever, near Bolton, commercial traveller. Dec. 18; Rushton, Armitstead, and Co., solicitors, 1, Mealhouse-lane, Bolton-le-Moors.

MAITLAND (Lady Sarah), The Palace, Hampton Court, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 31; Parkin and Pagden, solicitors, 5, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

MALLET (Henry), Nottingham and Sherwood Rise, Nottingham, lace manufacturer. Dec. 31; Watson and Wadsworth, solicitors, 13, Weekday Cross, Nottingham.

MEES (Simeon L.), 4, Upper Montague-street, Russell-square, Middlesex (carrying on business at 45, Houndsditch), wholesale clothier. Jan. 1; H. Harris, solicitor, 34A, Moorgate-street, London.

MOON (William), formerly of Liverpool, late of Woolton Hill-house, within Woolton, Lancaster, Esq. Dec. 1; Pears and Co., solicitors, 3, Harrington-street, Liverpool.

MOSES (Samuel), 19, York-terrace, Regent's-park, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 23; — Montagu, solicitor, 3, Bucklersbury, London, E.C.

NIXON (Jas. C.), Nottingham and Sherwood Rise, Nottingham, ironmonger, Dec. 31; Watson and Wadsworth, solicitors, 13, Weekday Cross, Nottingham.

ORGAN (Richard), Brockworth, Gloucester, timber merchant, innkeeper, and farmer. Dec. 29; Mullings, Ellett, and Co., solicitors, Cirencester.

PARROTT (John), 2, City-terrace, Peterborough, Northampton, city missionary. Dec. 14; J. H. Lydall, solicitor, 12, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London.

PENNELL (Dr. Richard L.) M.D., Venbridge, Cheriton Bishop, Devon. Dec. 30; Geare and Co., solicitors, Queen-street, Exeter.

PEPPERCORN (Francis), late of Wood-green, Middlesex, gentleman, formerly of West-street, Hereford. Dec. 6; Burdekin and Co., solicitors, Sheffield.

RANSON (John), Manor Farm, Monkskeigh, Suffolk, farmer. Dec. 31; G. C. Sherard, solicitor, 11, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

RAVES (Mary A.), 33, Amwell-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 1; J. L. Dale, solicitor, 8, Furnival's-inn, Holborn, Middlesex.

SALE (Rev. Canon), Sheffield, clerk, doctor of divinity, and vicar of Sheffield. Dec. 13; Rodgers and Thomas, solicitors, Bank-street, Sheffield.

SALE (Edward), Honington, Warwickshire, gentleman. Dec. 18; E. V. Nicoll, solicitor, Shipston-on-Stour.

SEMPER (Harriet), 14, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 18; Norris and Sons, solicitors, 2, Bedford-row, Middlesex.

SMITH (John B.), formerly of Honiton and Comberaleigh, late of Awliscombe, Devon, solicitor. Jan. 1; Stamp and Son, solicitors, Honiton, Devon.

SOLOMON (Samuel), Pineapple-lodge, Peckham Rye, Surrey, and of Covent-garden, Middlesex, grower of fruit. Dec. 1; W. H. Oliver, solicitor, 64, Lincoln's-inn, London.

SOWERBY (Wm.), Massingham, Lincoln, farmer. Dec. 16; Oldman and Iveson, solicitors, Gainsborough.

SULIVAN (Emily A. F.), 4, Grange-terrace, Brompton, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 1; J. V. Franklin, solicitor, 2, Tanfield-court, Inner Temple, London.

TOOTAL (Edward), The Weaste, in Pendleton, Lancaster, Esq. Dec. 31; Slater, Heelis, and Co., solicitors, 74, Princes-street, Manchester.

TRAVIS (Dr. Nathaniel A.), M.D., Nice. Feb. 1; E. S. Wilson, solicitor, 6, Whitefriargate, Hull, England.

VICARS (Jas.), 2, Scotland-place, Liverpool, wine and spirit merchant. Dec. 30; Taylor and Son, solicitors, 1, Mawdsley-street, Bolton.

WADE (John), late of 8, Beech Grove-terrace (formerly of 22, Moorland-road), Leeds, gentleman (formerly wool merchant). Dec. 23; Burdekin and Co., solicitors, 41, Norfolk-street, Sheffield.

WARNER (Stephen), North Petherton, Somerset, tailor. Dec. 20; Ruddock and Auber, solicitors, Bridgewater, Somerset.

WHITE (Henry), 53, Great Marlborough-street, Regent-street, Middlesex, tailor. Jan. 1; Crouch and Spencer, solicitors, 8, Gray's-inn-square, London.

WHITNEY (Susan), formerly of Cork, late of 7, Drayton-grove, Old Brompton (now known as 77, Thistle-grove, West Brompton), Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 1; H. Tyrrell, solicitor, 14, Gray's-inn-square, London.

WHITTAKER (John), Strand-lane, Radcliffe, Lancaster, ironmonger. Feb. 1; Greenhalgh and Finney, solicitors, 8, Acres-field, Bolton.

WHITTLE (Geo. S.), lately residing at 31, Brixton-road, Brixton, Surrey, and carrying on business as a wine and spirit merchant, at 20, Miles-lane, London. Dec. 31; G. B. Welsford, solicitor, Weymouth.

WILLIAMS (John), Park-terrace, Regent's-park, Middlesex, fishmonger. Dec. 1; Walker and Co., solicitors, Founders'-hall, St. Swithin's-lane, London.

WINNINGTON (Henry J.), 18, Peterham-terrace, Kensington, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 1; B. Gardner, solicitor, Bewdley.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Thursday, Nov. 20.

By Messrs. WILKINSON and HORNE.

City of London.—Nos. 1, and 2, Poultry, partly freehold and partly leasehold, was knocked down at the sum of £25,500 to a person in the room who had no means of paying the deposit; the property will in consequence be again offered to public competition at the Mart, on Wednesday, the 3rd of December, at two o'clock.

By Messrs. WINSTANLEY and HORWOOD, at the Mart.

Pimlico.—No. 4, Vauxhall-bridge-rd. term 58 years—sold for £610.

Nos. 6 and 8, same road, term 54 years—sold for £1050.

Bloomsbury.—No. 41, Devonshire-street, freehold—sold for £845.

West Croydon.—St. James's-road, a plot of land—sold for £390.

Shadwell.—No. 93, Anthony-street, and No. 1, Cornwall-street, term 19 years—sold for £205.

No. 93, Anthony-street, and Nos. 3 and 5, Cornwall-street—sold for £150.

Thirty-three houses in Cornwall-street, term 19 years—sold for 1195.

Nos. 205 and 207, Cable-street, same term—sold for £205.

By Messrs. NEWBON and HARDING.

Islington.—Nos. 65, 67, 69, Canonbury-road, and an improved ground rent of £20 per annum, term 45 years—sold for £1130.

Nos. 36, 38, and 40, Spencer-road, same term—sold for £890.

South Hackney.—Nos. 48 and 49, Hedger's-grove, term 80 years—sold for £195.

By Messrs. Toplis and Harding.

City.—No. 22, Paternoster-square, term 35 years—sold for £680.

Friday, Nov. 25.

By Messrs. Norton, Trist, Watney, and Co., at the Mart.

Lower Tooting.—Church-street, freehold residence, known as the "Rookery," and 1a. 3r. 37p.—sold for £1520.

Brentford.—High-street, three plots of building land—sold for £100.

Tuesday, Nov. 22.

By Messrs. Broad, Pritchard, and Wiltshire, at the Mart.

Soho.—No. 27 and 28, St. Ann's-court, freehold—sold for £1210.

By Messrs. Debenham, Tewson, and Farmer.

Whitechapel-road.—Nos. 124 and 125, freehold—sold for £3490.

City.—No. 81, Aldersgate-street freehold—sold for £1020.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Innkeeper—Licensing Act 1872—Bona Fide Traveller—Onus of Proof.—If a person licensed to sell intoxicating liquors on his premises supplies persons within the hours prohibited by the Licensing Act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 24, the onus lies upon him of showing that the persons so supplied are bonâ fide travellers. Quære, whether the existence of an honest, though mistaken belief on his part that the persons so supplied are bonâ fide travellers, is sufficient to exempt him from liability under the Act.

Quarter Sessions—Appeal—Power of Justices to make Rules of Practice—Reasonableness of Rule.—A court of quarter sessions has no power to refuse to allow the entry of an appeal against the refusal of justices to grant a certificate for a licence, on the ground of non-compliance with a rule of the sessions requiring that appeals must be entered and the grounds of appeal given to the clerk of the peace three clear days before the first day of sessions, when all the requirements of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, have been complied with. A court of quarter sessions having refused solely on such a ground to allow an appeal to be entered on the first day of sessions, made an order under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 65, s. 6 for the payment of costs by the appellant to the respondents, as on an appeal which had not been entered or prosecuted. Held, that the order for the payment of costs must be quashed: (Reg. v. Pawlett, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 390. Q.B.)

Larceny—Servant—Bailee.—A traveller was entrusted with pieces of silk (about 95yds. each) to carry about with him for sale to such customers as he might procure. It was his duty to send by the next post after sale the names and addresses of the customers to whom any might have been sold, and the numbers, quantities, and prices of the silk sold. All goods not so accounted for remained in his hands, and were counted by his employers as stock. At the end of each half-year it was his duty to send in an account for the entire six months, and to return the unsold silk. Within six months after four pieces of silk had been delivered to him, the traveller rendered an account of the same, and entered them as sold to two persons, with instructions to his employers to send invoices to the alleged customers. It turned out that this was false, and that he had appropriated the silk to his own use. Held, that he could be properly convicted of larceny as a bailee: (Reg. v. Richmond, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 408. Cr. Cas Res.)

CHESTER CITY POLICE COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 18.

Gaming in a licensed house—Licensing Act, 1872, sect. 17.

Mr. David Foster, the manager of the Grosvenor Hotel, was charged upon an information, laid by Mr. J. L. Fenwick, the chief constable, with having permitted gaming, contrary to the provisions of the 17th section of the Licensing Act.

Cartwright appeared for the defendant.

P.C. 15 (Holland) said—At half-past two on Tuesday morning last I was on duty in Eastgate-street. I was passing the Grosvenor Hotel, when I saw a light in the commercial room, and I heard people talking inside. I looked through the window—the blind was down, but there was a distance of two or three inches between that and the window frame—and I saw Mr. Foster and two other gentlemen, one on each side of him.

Mr. Salisbury.—Were they standing or sitting?

Witness.—Sitting down. Mr. Foster had a hat in his hand, and was shaking it. Presently he turned it upside down upon the table, and there came out of it what I thought to be a halfpenny, a penny, and a two-shilling piece or a half-crown.

The Chairman.—Were they pushed towards the winner?

Witness.—Yes, they were. I stood there a quarter of an hour, during which time the shaking of the hat was continued, and money passed each time, except when they all came heads or tails.

The Magistrates' Clerk.—Could you distinguish between heads and tails?

Witness.—No, but I heard them say it. I saw them look at them, and heard them say, "They are all tails," and then put them into the hat again. There was no money passed then. At twenty-five minutes to three the gentleman on Mr. Foster's right hand pulled a bag out of his right hand trousers pocket, and took out of the bag what I thought was a sovereign, and put it on the table, at the same time saying, "I have another sovereign to lose." A minute or two afterwards one of them said, "What are we going to have to drink?"

This evidence was not shaken.

Cartwright, in addressing the bench on behalf of the defendant, said that it appeared that upon the night in question, Mr. Foster was compelled to be up, awaiting the coming in of the Irish mail, which, as their worships knew, arrived a little after half-past two in the morning. While so waiting, he was no doubt in the commercial room with two customers who had come in rather late. But his explanation of what took place was this. Upon that night, as well as upon the night preceding, Herr Dobler had been giving a performance, and something was said about his trick of taking money from a hat; and so it could be only inferred that what did take place received an interpretation by the witnesses unfavourable to the defendant, resulting in this serious charge, when there really was no gaming whatever. What was done was done in a "larkish" mood, and not for the purposes of gaming. He (Cartwright) had not had his attention directed to the section under which the information had been laid, but he assumed it was under a section of the last Licensing Act. [The Magistrates' Clerk: Yes, the 17th section.] Then of course it would be an important consideration for their worships whether the evidence, if they decided to place that construction upon it given by the witnesses, established the fact that there was gaming. The witnesses were outside the house, and he was prepared with evidence to show that, taking it for granted that everything took place which they said they saw, they could not possibly have heard what was said. They were nineteen feet from the party, and separated from them by a thick wall, by the window, curtains, gauze blind, and the rest of the appurtenances, so that it was next to an absolute impossibility to hear the conversation. It necessarily followed, therefore, in describing what took place, that the witnesses rather allowed their minds to come to the conclusion that gaming was going on. In point of fact, this was more like a prosecution instituted upon a theory or basis arrived at by persons who were simply spectators. But in case their worships should consider that the facts were as the witnesses had stated, then he would call their attention to the law. The words in the Act were, if any licensed person "suffers any gaming or any unlawful game to be carried on." Now what was an unlawful game? There was no law which he was aware of, except the Vagrant Act, which dealt with the subject of coins at all. There was an Act which dealt with pitching and tossing, the 31 & 32 Vict., which was an amendment of the 5 & 6 Geo. 4. It was difficult to understand how the former could be made to apply to that case. What did the Act mean by the word gaming? Did it mean all sorts of offences which came under the term gaming in that particular section, or what did it mean? Because they knew full well that there were games which were lawful; they also knew that games might be played, so long as they were not played for money or money's worth. It was no offence for men to play at cards, so long as they did not play for money, or to play at dominoes or backgammon, so long as it was not for money. The learned gentleman then quoted the words of the Vagrant Amendment Act 1868, which made pitching and tossing in a public place an offence, and having cited a case as to what was meant by a public place, and also the late Lord Campbell's definition of gaming, which included the staking of money, he said it was clear from that it was necessary to show that money was staked.

Mr. Salisbury.—So far as I am concerned, and I am sure my friends will go with me, I don't want to stop you in any argument, but don't you think you should confine yourself to this 17th section?

Cartwright.—I have been trying to make out that there is no gaming according to law.

Mr. Salisbury.—But the offence is against this Act, that he has permitted an unlawful game or gaming.

Cartwright said he had been arguing upon the assumption that there had been no gaming; and there was no law, so far as he could make out, which declared what took place to be gaming, as the only Act of Parliament he could find which bore upon the user of coin was the 31 & 32 Vict., and he asked how far that was recognized by the last Licensing Act? He argued that what took place was analogous to pitching and tossing in a private room, which, if there were no stakes, was no offence whatever, and said he did not see how the case could be proved when the 17th section mentioned the word gaming, and they had to go back to other statutes to explain that word. As to the facts, he believed he should be able to dispose entirely of the idea that there was any gambling, to show that it was impossible for any one outside to distinguish between different coins, or to hear what was said.

Evidence was then called.

The Magistrates retired, but were only absent two minutes. On their return, the Chairman (Major French) said—We are very sorry to think that the conductor of so respectable an hotel should have forgotten himself and lent himself to an indiscretion which I don't think he would have done if he had considered the thing. He has been exceedingly well defended, but the preponderance of evidence is against him, so strongly, that there cannot be a doubt in our minds that gambling was going on in that room contrary to the Act that governs licensed houses, and therefore we sentence the defendant to pay a fine of £10, and in default of payment of the penalty and costs, there will be imprisonment, which there is no occasion to dwell upon, but, for the sake of form, we will say one month. We are not inclined to say anything further, because we think the defendant committed an act of indiscretion contrary to the wishes of the directors of that hotel, whose servant he is.

Mr. Salisbury.—You will understand from what the Chairman says that we do not intend to endorse the license, because that would be unjust to the proprietors, who have suffered quite enough from what he has done.

HAMMERSMITH POLICE COURT.

Friday, Nov. 21.

(Before Mr. Bridge.)

The Gas Light and Coke Company v. O'Brien.

Gas rates—City of London Gas Act 1868—Rise in price—Notice to consumer—Award of commissioners.

In this case, a report of the first hearing of which appeared in the Law Times of Nov. 15,

Besley (instructed by Curtis and Bedford, solicitors to the Gas Light and Coke Company) appeared and said that he was prepared to prove that a contract had been entered into by the defendant with the Western Gas Light Company, which company was amalgamated after the date of the contract with the complainant company, who thereupon became entitled to enforce all contracts entered into with the Western. The contract of the defendant was to pay 5s. per 1000, or other gas rate for the time being. The rates were varied from time to time, and on the 7th April 1873, the defendant ceased to consume the gas at the house in respect of which this charge was made. On the 17th the commissioners appointed to revise the price appointed by the Board of Trade, made an award fixing the maximum price at 6s. 3d. By a notice served on all consumers, on Dec. 16, 1872, notice was given that the price would be 5s. 5d., or such other price as might be fixed by the Board of Trade. In March 1873 a meter index card was left with the defendant on which the gas rate was stated to be 5s. 6d. per 1000. By the City of London Gas Act 1868 the award of the commissioners fixing the price is to take effect as on and from the 1st Jan. of the year of revision (s. 66). He submitted that the facts being proved the gas rate for the time being, which the defendant was liable to pay pursuant to his contract, was that which was fixed by the commissioners, namely, 6s. 3d.

Mr. Bridge remarked that what the commissioners had power to fix was the maximum price. It did not follow that that would be the charge to consumers.

F. O. Crump (instructed by Bartholomew) said that was his point, and the defendant's contract having terminated on the 7th April he could not be affected by an award of the commissioners made on the 17th. The commissioners having power only to fix the maximum price it was necessary that the company should prove that by some resolution it authorised the charge of 6s. 3d. upon the consumer. No evidence of any resolution had been adduced. If this were an action for calls it could not be sustained without proof of the resolution authorising the call.

Mr. Bridge said he should adjourn again to give the company an opportunity of supplying this evidence. It was clearly necessary.

The point, however, was waived for the time being, in order to test the merits, and

Crump proceeded to argue that the notice of the 16th Dec. was insufficient. The intention of the Legislature that public notice should be given of a rise or reduction by advertisement in a local newspaper or the Gazette was plain from sect. 40 of the Metropolis Gas Act of 1860, and sect. 55 of the City of London Gas Act of 1868, the former providing for notice by advertisement on a rise of price, and the latter for notice in the Gazette in the case of reduction by consent. The proper course for the company to pursue was to give notice in January that they would charge from that date the maximum price which should be fixed by the commissioners. The meter card fixed the rate at 5s. 6d. and the defendant could not be affected by an ex post facto award.

Mr. BRIDGE said that the notice of Dec. 16 had been left at the defendant's house, as it had been left at others, and he should hold it to be a good notice. He thought the meaning of the Act of Parliament was, that although the commissioners did not make their award until long after January, the power of the company under the award was to take effect as from the 1st January in each year. If there were no application for revision the price was fixed at that at which it stood in 1870 (s. 57). The commissioners are to fix the maximum. The company in this case gave notice that they would charge 5s. 5d., or such other price as might be fixed by the Board of Trade. This notice was not precisely accurate, but he did not think notices of this nature should be required to be as precise as in other cases. The question was, whether they gave sufficient notice to the consumer. Mr. Crump's argument might be very good to show that the legislation ought to be amended, but, being as it was, he thought he ought to order payment of the amount.

Crump applied for a case, which was at once granted.

MARITIME LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

PRACTICE—COLLISION—CROSS CAUSE—SECURITY—FOREIGN PARTIES.—Where a cause of damage is instituted in the High Court of Admiralty against a ship, in respect of a collision in which the ship of the plaintiffs is totally lost, and the defendants institute a cross cause in personam against the plaintiffs in respect of the same collision, both parties being foreigners resident abroad, and the plaintiffs decline to give security to answer judgment in the cross cause, or to enter an appearance, the court will apply the provisions of the Admiralty Court Act 1861 (24 Vict. c. 10, s. 34), and will order proceedings to be stayed in the principal cause until security is given in the cross cause: (The Charkieh, 29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 404. Adm.)

SALVAGE—ATTEMPT TO ASSIST IN REMOVING SALVAGE BY OTHERS—RIGHT TO REWARD.—Where a vessel makes a signal of distress, and another goes out with the bona fide intention of assisting that distress, and as far as she can does so, but some accident occurs which prevents her services being as effectual as she intended them to be, and no blame attaches to her, the Court of Admiralty will not allow her to go entirely unrewarded, but for the interests of commerce and navigation, and as an encouragement to perform salvage services will give some reward. Semble, if the property is salved by other means: (The Melpomene, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 405. Adm.)

MASTER'S WAGES AND DISBURSEMENTS—MASTER ALSO CO-OWNER—RIGHT OF CO-OWNERS TO SET-OFF SHIP'S EXPENSES.—In a suit for wages and disbursements by a master, who is also co-owner, the other co-owners may, under the Merchant Shipping Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), s. 191, set up a counter claim or set-off in respect of outstanding co-ownership accounts, and claim that the balance (if any) be paid to them. To a petition claiming master's wages and disbursements, and praying a reference of any accounts arising in respect thereto to the registrar and merchants, an answer alleging the master to be also co-owner, and that accounts are outstanding between the plaintiff and the defendants, as co-owners, showing a balance on all accounts in favour of the defendants, and praying a reference to the registrar and merchants of all master's and co-ownership accounts, will be allowed by the High Court of Admiralty: (The City of Mobile, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 406. Adm.).

COMPANY LAW

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

CAPACITY OF TRADING CORPORATION TO ACQUIRE LAND.—In an action on a warranty of title brought by the appellants, as vendees of mining property in Lower Canada, against the respondents as the representatives of the vendor of the appellants' vendor: Held (affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, Lower Canada), that the appellants, as a trading corporation, were incapable by the law of the colony of acquiring lands without the licence of the Crown, which it was not alleged that the appellants had obtained; and therefore that the sale having been invalid, the right to sue on the warranty did not arise. Held, further, that it was for the appellants to allege the licence of the Crown, and that such licence was not, on demurrer to the declaration, to be assumed until the contrary was averred by plea: (Chaudière Gold Mining Company v. Desbarats, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 377. Priv. Co.)

NEGLIGENCE — RAILWAY — INVITATION TO ALIGHT AT A STATION—EVIDENCE FOR JURY.—Plaintiff was travelling on defendants' line; at the station to which she was going, and which she knew well, the train went beyond the platform; the plaintiff saw that this was so, but having heard the name of the station called by the porters, and her compartment being close to the end of the platform, she put her foot on the step in order to get out; at that moment the train was backed, plaintiff was jerked on to the ground, and received injury. The door had been opened by another passenger, and plaintiff heard no warning that the train was about to move back. Held that these facts did not amount to evidence of negligence on the defendants' part to go to a jury: (Lewis v. London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 397. Q.B.)

WINDING-UP — CONTRIBUTORY — AMALGAMATION—ALLOTMENT—DELAY IN REPUDIATION—ACQUIESCENCE.—By the terms of an agreement for amalgamation entered into between the P. Company, which was a limited company, and the U. Company, which was an unlimited company, the P. Company was to be wound-up voluntarily, and its members were to be entitled for every fully paid-up £5 share held by them in the P. Company to five shares of £1 each, fully paid up, in the U. Company. W., who had been a director of the P. Company, and a holder of twenty fully paid-up shares in it, applied, in July, for 100 fully paid-up shares in the U. Company "in accordance with the terms of the agreement for amalgamation," but an order having been made to wind-up the P. Company compulsorily before his application reached the U. Company, W. requested the chairman of a committee of shareholders of the P. Company, to whom he had sent his application not to forward it to the U. Company until the compulsory winding-up had been stayed and all impediments in the way of the amalgamation removed. The compulsory order having been stayed and the winding-up continued under supervision, W's application was sent into the U. Company, and on the 7th Aug. a letter was sent to him stating that the 100 shares had been allotted to him and his name entered on the register, and that the amount to be credited on the shares would be "the proportionate amount of the net assets of the P. Company." W., being absent from home on a yachting cruise, did not receive this letter till the end of August. On his return to London, early in October, he repudiated the shares, and was told by the chairman of the U. Company that his name was not on the register. In the following month an order was made to wind-up the U. Company, and W.'s name was found to be on the register in respect of the 100 shares. The deed carrying out the agreement for amalgamation was engrossed in duplicate, and one part was executed by each company. The part executed by the U. Company differed materially from that executed by the P. Company: Held, that there was no binding agreement for amalgamation between the two companies, and that W.'s delay in repudiating the shares allotted to him not in accordance with the terms of his application, did not amount to acquiescence, and that his name must be removed from the list of contributories of the U. Company. Decision of Bacon, V.C., reversed: (Wynne's Case, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 381. L.JJ.)

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE ARBITRATION.

Wednesday, Nov. 26.

(Before Lord ROMILLY.)

MUSHET'S CASE.

Company solvent—Transfer—Subsequent winding-up—Misrepresentation—Contributory.

THE facts of the case were these. In Sept. 1869, a petition was presented to the Court of Chancery to wind-up the European Assurance Society, but it was unsuccessful. Mr. Mushet, who held 1400 shares in the society, thought it advisable to make inquiries into the real condition of the society, and he was ultimately advised by Mr. Bell, a stockbroker of Edinburgh, to part with his shares, and even to pay a small sum in order to be relieved of them. He accordingly authorised Mr. Bell to dispose of the shares. Mr. Bell then went to Mr. Robert Stewart, another Edinburgh stockbroker, who undertook to find a purchaser on condition of 6d. per share, or £35, being paid to the purchaser. Mr. Steward supplied the name of the purchaser as "George Taylor, engineer, Coltbridge, Edinburgh." A transfer to him was executed and sent to the society on the 1st Nov. 1869. Objections to this transfer were raised by the directors on the ground that proper notice had not been given according to the regulations of the society, and that a call which was due had not been paid. The call was subsequently paid, and on the 21st of March, 1870, a formal notice of the wish to transfer the shares to "George Taylor, engineer," was sent to the society. On the 7th April, 1870, a transfer was executed, whereby Mr. Mushet transferred the shares to Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Taylor accepted them in consideration of £35 paid to him by the transferor. After some delay and objections the transfer was registered and Taylor's name placed on the register of shareholders. It appears that Taylor was the son of the laundress of Mr. Stewart's business chambers, and, instead of being an engineer, was a stoker on a railway with wages of 27s. a week, and was wholly unable to meet the liability on the shares. Taylor was never paid the sum of £35.; he was merely promised £1 by Stewart, but he never received it. In the winding-up of the society the official liquidators impeached the validity of the transfer, and applied to have Mr. Mushet's name placed on the list of contributories.

Napier Higgins, Q.C. (with him Montague Cookson), in the argument for the official liquidators, relied on the decision of Lord Westbury in Walton Williams case (L. T. European Rep., p. 125), and contended that full information as to the proposed transferee had not been given to the society by the transferor, and that the misrepresentations made to the society were sufficient to invalidate the transfer.

Cotton, Q.C. (with him Kekewich), for Mr. Mushet contended that the shares had been disposed of the ordinary way on the Stock Exchange, and that if there had been any misrepresentation, it had been made by Mr. Stewart, who was not Mr. Mushet's agent.

Lord ROMILLY, after stating the facts of the case, proceeded.—Without meaning to assert that, when a company is failing, one of the shareholders may not get rid of his shares by disposing of them to a pauper, and thereby throw his portion of the debts upon the other shareholders (though I consider that this proposition was not laid down by the Lords Justices in any case, and it was strongly dissented from by Lord Campbell), still I am of opinion that if such a transfer of shares can ever be supported, it is incumbent on the transferor to supply the company with all the materials and means in his power to enable them to form a just and accurate conclusion as to the fitness of the transferee to be supplied in the place of the transferrer. Unless this is done, it appears to me that the transferor is conniving at a fraud against the society, and cannot gain any advantage from the transaction in which he is so implicated. These conditions, which I consider necessary, do not seem to have been fulfilled by Mr. Mushet. He knew that Mr. Stewart was a person regularly employed for getting rid of unsafe shares. Without saying that Stewart was technically the agent of Mr. Mushet, there are many circumstances which show that he was much more cognisant of Mr. Stewart's proceedings and of the situation of George Taylor (all of which he ought to have communicated to the society) than he thought fit to make known to them. The conduct of Stewart is open to the gravest suspicion; he acts as no broker would have acted on any Stock Exchange who regarded his own character; he agrees to take the shares for £35, to be paid to his client; he seeks for a client in the son of his housekeeper, to whom nothing appears to be said about the £35—at all events, who never gets that sum, which is disposed of by Mr. Stewart's direction—leaving the directors to suppose that it was a transaction bonâ fide with the person who wanted to speculate on the probable rise of the shares. If they had been acquainted with the whole transaction it would have been a clear breach of duty on the part of the directors, of which no person cognisant could have allowed any one to have taken advantage without gross misconduct to the shareholders, for whom they were trustees. I doubt whether Mr. Mushet himself considered the transaction a bonâ fide one—nay, it appears that Mr. Mushet himself, in February, 1870, was trying to sell the same shares to a fresh transferee. I am confirmed in the view I take of this case by observing what Lord Westbury did respecting it in June last, and nothing that has since been done appears to me to affect the then position of the parties. It appears to me that Mr. Stewart, for £35, got George Taylor to accept the shares, giving him nothing; that he was a mere catspaw to enable Stewart to carry on the transaction for his own benefit, intending George Taylor to take nothing; and I think that Mr. Mushet, both by his agents and by himself, was aware of the nature of the transaction, or was so bound by the inquiry that he was bound to make that the transfer of shares made by Mushet to George Taylor does not exonerate Mr. Mushet or relieve him from the liability that he incurred by taking the shares. I am of opinion, therefore, that Mr. Mushet must be restored to the list of shareholders.

D'OUSELEY'S CASE.

Husband and wife—Purchase of shares by wife—Liability of husband—Concurrence of husband.

THIS case raised the question of a husband's liability on shares purchased by his wife.

In 1867 Mrs. d'Ouseley became entitled, under the will of an aunt, to a legacy of £1000. Her husband consented to her receiving the money and employing it as she thought fit. She accordingly invested some of it (£326 5s.) in the purchase of 800 shares in the European Assurance Society. The shares were procured for her by a local agent of the society, who was well aware that she was a married woman. The dividends were paid to her, and her husband never dealt with the shares at all. In the winding up of the society he was placed on the list of contributories in respect of the shares, and his application was to have his name removed.

Everitt, for Mr. d'Ouseley, contended that the shares were treated as the wife's separate estate, and that Mr. d'Ouseley was under no liability in respect of them.

Lord ROMILLY grieved to say that in his opinion there was no doubt as to Mr. d'Ouseley's liability. The legacy of £1000 was in law his property; he could give a discharge for it, and his allowing his wife to invest the money did not prevent his being liable in the same manner as if any other agent had invested it for him. His Lordship thought the case a very hard one, and, in consequence of its being so he had delayed it, hoping he might find some mode of rescuing Mr. d'Ouseley from a difficulty into which his wife's dealing with the money by his consent, and with his concurrence, had placed him. However, that could not be done, and Mr. d'Ouseley must remain on the list of contributories; but the case was so hard that no order would be made against him for costs.

Napper Higgins, Q.C., and Montague Cookson were for the official liquidators.

The sitting was then adjourned to Wednesday next.

COUNTY COURTS.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Tuesday, Nov. 25.

(Before LUSH and ARCHIBALD, JJ.)

FLOWER v. PURKISS.

Admiralty jurisdiction—Barge—Costs.

THE point was raised in this case as to how far the Admiralty jurisdiction of the County Courts extends. It arose upon a question of costs, a rule nisi having been obtained by the defendant calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why he should not be deprived of his costs, which had been allowed him on taxation, on the ground that the action in which they were incurred had been improperly brought in the Court of Queen's Bench, within the meaning of the Statute 31 & 32 Vict. c. 7, s. 9, which provides that "where a plaintiff brings an action in the superior court, which might have been brought in the County Court, he shall not recover his costs."

The action was brought to recover the cost of damage done to the plaintiff's ship by a barge of the defendant's in the river Thames, the collision occurring within the body of a county.

Phillimore, in showing cause against the rule, argued that the County Court had no jurisdiction over a barge, because it was not a ship over which the Court of Admiralty had jurisdiction within the meaning of the Act, which, therefore, could not be conferred upon the County Courts.

R. E. Webster, in support of the rule, contended that the Court of Admiralty had jurisdiction over the barge, and cited cases in support of this proposition, which jurisdiction was, he said, conferred upon the County Courts by the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 10, which gives these courts, in certain cases, some of the powers of the Court of Admiralty. Mr. Webster went on to show from this that it was clear that the action might have been brought in the County Court, and that the plaintiff was wrong in having brought it in the Court of Queen's Bench, and submitted that in consequence the rule ought to be made absolute.

THE COURT (Lush and Archibald, JJ.), gave judgment, confirming Mr. Webster's view of the effect of the cases and statutes, and made the rule absolute.

READING COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Nov. 19.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

FORSYTH v. THE GREAT-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Application for new trial.

THIS case was decided against the company at the last court. The plaintiff is a Queen's counsel, living at Mortimer. It will be remembered that on the 28th Aug. the plaintiff was travelling from Weymouth to Mortimer. He had a return ticket to Reading. The train started at 12.30, and was timed to reach Reading at 5.35, and the train starting for Mortimer left at six o'clock. There were delays at Trowbridge and Didcot, and the consequence was that the train did not reach Reading till 5.57, and it was kept outside the station for five minutes. Plaintiff told the servants of the company he wanted to catch the Mortimer train, yet it was allowed to start before he could reach it. There was no other train for an hour and a quarter, and he took a conveyance and sued the company for the cost of it—10s. The defendants offered no evidence, and there was a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty to defendants to appeal. Application for a new trial was now made. The grounds of such application were as follows: First, the wrongful reception of verbal evidence to contradict, or in opposition to, the written terms of the contract between the parties; secondly, no evidence was adduced by plaintiff at the trial in support of the real cause of action as set out in the summons; thirdly, that the verdict was against the weight of evidence adduced by the plaintiff.

Digby, barrister (instructed by Gledhill) now appeared on behalf of the company in support of the application for a new trial. Forsyth appeared in person to oppose the application. Blandy again acted as solicitor in the matter for Mr. Forsyth.

Forsyth took the preliminary objection that the company had no locus standi, as there was an appeal pending at the present time, and an appeal supposed that a certain effect is not to be given to a subsisting judgment. The existence of a judgment or verdict could not be affirmed, and at the same time a new trial be applied for. That had been decided several times. He would refer to one or two cases.

His HONOUR said he would not trouble Mr. Forsyth further. The grounds on which a new trial was asked were all grounds of appeal not grounds for a new trial, and the defendants had had leave to appeal.

Digby said the company had served their notice of appeal.

His HONOUR observed that the case ought to be then in court ready for signing or settling by him.

Digby said that under some misapprehension the solicitors to the company had not delivered the grounds of appeal, thinking that Mr. Blandy the solicitor for the plaintiff, would accept the grounds of appeal afterwards. That was frequently done, and might have been done in that case. He was willing to go on with the appeal if Mr. Forsyth would accept the grounds of appeal now.

Forsyth.—Certainly not. I intend taking objections if the appeal goes on.

His HONOUR.—I cannot disturb the verdict. The Great Western Railway Company were very wrong in not defending the case upon its merits, and afterwards they should have given notice of the grounds of the appeal in due time and presented their case at this court.

Digby said there could be no appeal now, as the grounds of appeal were not given in due time, and, therefore, he moved for a new trial.

His HONOUR said that if the plaintiff consented he would enlarge the time for appeal, but he would not give a new trial even if the plaintiff consented, as the defendants ought to have defended the case on its merits at the hearing.

Forsyth would not consent to an enlargement of time for appeal, and the application for a new trial was dismissed with costs, the effect of which is that the verdict for the plaintiff will stand.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Wednesday, Nov. 26.

(Before Mr. Registrar MURRAY, sitting as Chief Judge.)

Re COOK AND COOK.

"Family" assignments—Advance—Fraud—Costs.

THIS was a motion by the trustee in this liquidation against one Aaron Cook, the father, and Robert Cook, the brother of the debtors, seeking to invalidate a deed of assignment executed by the debtors a short time previously to their liquidation as being fraudulent and void.

Finlay Knight appeared for the trustee.

Colt for the respondents.

The debtors, William and John Cook, trading at Reading under the style of W. and J. Cook, as wholesale and retail tea dealers and provision merchants, filed their petition for liquidation on the 10th May 1873. The deed which the trustee sought to impeach was dated the 15th April 1873, and was made between the debtors of the one part, and Aaron Cook and Robert Cook of the other part, and was, in fact, an assignment by the debtors of the whole of their property with the exception of a small amount of furniture, which was afterwards sold for £30. The property comprised in the deed included the lease, goodwill, fixtures, stock, and book debts of the debtors, amounting in the whole to £683 10s., the consideration money being made up partly of a sum of £500 and interest then due from the debtors to A. and R. Cook amounting to £560, and partly of a sum of £123 paid by them in cash to the debtors at the time of the execution of the assignment. The grounds upon which the trustee rested his case were that the execution of the deed was an act of bankruptcy as a fraudulent transfer, and that it was void as a fraudulent preference.

His HONOUR, in giving judgment, reviewed the facts of the case, and said there was direct evidence that the sum of £500 was advanced on the faith of a bona fide contract made between the parties to execute the deed, and no extrinsic circumstances were disclosed tending to show fraud in fact as against the general creditors, and no ground existed for avoiding the transfer as an act of bankruptcy.

Upon the question of costs,

Mr. Registrar MURRAY said this court should be very slow to encourage what he might term pocket agreements. Creditors—members of the family in this case—chose to advance money on the promise, be it in writing or be it not, that a bill of sale should be given, and they kept that agreement in their pocket which they might easily register, and on the eve of insolvency they gave a notice which resulted in a conveyance by the debtor of all his property to those particular creditors. He declined to allow costs against the trustee.

LIVERPOOL BANKRUPTCY COURT.

Saturday, Nov. 21.

(Before J. F. COLLIER, Esq., Judge.)

Re J. KEYWORTH.

Bankruptcy Act 1869, sect. 12—What constitutes a secured creditor?

Held, that a sum paid into court by defendant to abide event of action does not constitute plaintiff a secured creditor in case the defendant becomes bankrupt before action determined.

Murray v. Arnold (7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385; and Culverhouse v. Wickens (L. Rep. 3 C. P. 295; 17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 468), distinguished.

THIS was a motion on behalf of Mr. Banner, the trustee of the property of the liquidating debtor, an agricultural implement maker in Liverpool, for an order that a sum of £880 be declared part of the estate divisible amongst the creditors. The circumstances of the case were these:—In July last an action was brought against Keyworth on a bill of exchange for £1200 drawn by one Lacy, whose affairs are now in liquidation, upon and accepted by Keyworth, and by the drawer, endorsed to Messrs. Griffiths, Tate, and Co., the plaintiffs in the action. On the 22nd July order was made giving leave to Keyworth to appear on payment into court of £880 to abide the event of the action. That sum was paid in accordance with the terms of the order, and on the 29th July further order was made for a compulsory reference. On the 2nd Sept. Keyworth filed his petition for liquidation, and shortly afterwards Mr. Banner was chosen trustee. The present motion was two-fold, viz., to restrain the action and to obtain possession of the £880.

Martin appeared for Mr. Banner, and

Potter, instructed by Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, for the plaintiffs in the action.

Martin argued that under the present Bankruptcy Act the Court of Bankruptcy had exclusive jurisdiction to decide all questions arising in any bankruptcy. Here the question pending was whether the plaintiff in the action was a creditor or not. The functions of the trustee now were far more extensive than those possessed by the former assignees in bankruptcy. It was his duty now to receive and decide upon all proofs of debt, and for such purpose to administer oaths, and from his decision there was an appeal to the court. In the present case all that the plaintiff in the action need do was to substantiate his claim before the trustee, and that being so there could be no object in further prosecuting the action, as even if the plaintiff obtained a verdict the trustee was not bound to admit the claim. By rule 289 every creditor in respect of a proveable debt shall, in the event of a liquidation by arrangement being resolved upon, be absolutely restrained from commencing or prosecuting any action against the debtor or his property, and he submitted here as this debt was proveable he was entitled to a restraining order. Assuming the restraining order were granted, the money paid into court to abide the event of the action became returnable, as the "event" or "result" of the action was that it had been stayed by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Potter, in reply, relied upon the case of Murray v. Arnold (sup.) and several others since decided under the 184th section of the Act of 1849, where it was held that money deposited as security to abide the eventual determination of the action created a lien in favour of the plaintiff, and his rights were not affected by the subsequent bankruptcy of the defendant. By the proviso in the 12th section of the present Act, a creditor holding security, as he submitted his clients held, were expressly authorised to deal with their security as though there had not been any bankruptcy.

His HONOUR gave judgment as follows:—I think this case is distinguishable from Murray v. Arnold (3 B. & S. 287; 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385) and Culverhouse v. Wickens (17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 468; L. Rep. 3 C. P. 295). The judgment in both those cases are based upon the hypothesis that the payment into court is payment to the plaintiff, and in the judgment of Willes, J., in the latter case, it is recognised that if the creditor could not make out his claim, the payments could only be treated as conditional. In the present case the payment into court cannot, I think, be regarded as payment to the plaintiff; it is, in reality, only of the nature of security to the plaintiff that his rights, whatever they may turn out to be, shall not be prejudiced. But, however that may be, I think it my duty to restrain further proceedings in this arbitration. It is discretionary whether I should do so or not, no doubt, but it appears to me that it is an essential part of the policy of the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 that all the creditors should be placed upon an equal footing; but, by so doing, I shall introduce an entirely new element into the case. Directly the proceedings have been restrained the end and object of the payment into court ceases, there is no claim that the creditor can make out, and, according to the judgment of Willes, J., in Culverhouse v. Wickens, under such circumstances the payment into court would be, as he expresses it, "discharged." If that is so it can be the property of no other person than the defendant in the suit, and under his liquidation passes to the trustee. I shall therefore order the fund in court to be paid to the trustee. The costs of this application to be paid out of the fund.

Notice of appeal was given and £20 named as the amount of deposit.

Ex parte BOLLAND; re RAHN AND CO.

Bankruptcy Act 1869—Sect. 6.

Bill of sale executed by one partner in a firm of all partnership assets held to be invalid. Is a bill of sale given to secure a possible risk valid? Held on the authority of Ex parte Foxley (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 862) to be a sufficient equivalent.

THIS was a motion on behalf of Mr. Bolland, the trustee of the property of the liquidating debtors, who were commission and cigar merchants, having five retail cigar shops in different parts of Liverpool, for an order of the court to declare that a bill of sale executed immediately prior to the liquidation by one of the debtors (Rahn) of all the partnership assets in favour of Mr. Whitfield, as security for a past debt, was void, and an act of bankruptcy. The further question was as to the validity of a transfer of wine and matches which were alleged to be a fraudulent preference.

Walton, instructed by Miller, Peel, and Hughes, appeared for the trustee in the liquidation, and Etty for Mr. Whitfield.

The facts stated shortly were these:—In the month of March last, Rahn, who was a partner in the firm of Rahn and Eaton, was requested by Mr. E. C. Whitfield to give him security, in accordance with an alleged previous promise, for the payment of a sum of £400 borrowed by Rahn through Mr. Whitfield, and for the repayment of which the latter was security. Rahn accordingly executed a bill of sale over all his effects to Mr. Whitfield, who immediately afterwards took possession of the property. The firm thereby being divested of everything, filed their petition for liquidation, and a motion was made by their trustee to set aside the bill of sale.

His HONOUR, in giving judgment, said: With respect to the facts of this case, I may premise that I regard Mr. Whitfield's version as substantially the true one. It is difficult to imagine anything more misleading than the affidavit of the debtor. It is also evident that he concealed from Whitfield the fact that Eaton was his partner, and there is such strong intrinsic evidence of untruthfulness about his testimony that I do not think him worthy of credit. It is admitted that at the time of the execution of the bill of sale by Rahn alone there was a partnership between Rahn and Eaton, and that the property assigned was partnership property. On the authority of the cases of Harrison v. Jackson (7 T. R. 207) and Steiglitz v. Egginton (Holt, 141) I am compelled to come to the conclusion that the bill of sale was void, as being a deed purporting to assign the partnership property, but executed by one partner only. Rahn had no implied authority so to bind his co-partner; he could only have been authorised so to do either by deed or by signing the partnership name in the presence of the co-partner. It was argued that there being a symbolical delivery of a chair in the name of the whole property at the time of the execution, that amounted to a delivery, and that such delivery was good, independent, and apart from the deed, and bound the partnership. But the symbolical delivery is provided for in the deed, and I do not think it can be considered as a delivery separate or apart from the deed. Where there is a deed, everything that is done must be considered as done under it, and the fact that the bill of sale was afterwards registered is some evidence that it, and not the delivery, was relied on. The property comprised in the bill of sale or its equivalent, will, therefore, have to be restored, and will pass to the trustee. With respect to the delivery orders for the matches and wine, the same rule would not apply. Rahn had implied power to pledge the personal property of the firm for advances. It remains to be considered whether the transfer was or was not a fraudulent one within the policy of the bankruptcy laws. I do not think that it was a voluntary transfer; indeed the only reasonable explanation of the transaction is that it was done on pressure of a severe kind from Whitfield, for I disregard the promised advance of £300. I do not think it was done with any intent to delay or defraud the other creditors, or from any preference for Whitfield; all the facts negative such a supposition. On the subject of the proportion which the matches and wine bore to the remainder of the debtor's property, I have no trustworthy evidence. I may observe that this point of the case was scarcely touched upon in the argument; and I may conclude that it was not considered of any great importance. The inference I draw from all the circumstances of the case is, that this property did not bear any such relative proportion to the stock in trade, fixtures, and furniture of the six shops as to make its transfer an assignment of all the debtor's property with an unimportant exception, or even an assignment of the greater part of the debtor's property; nor did the transfer affect their insolvency, which was complete before. It was argued that Whitfield's claim being a mere undertaking of suretyship, the debtors had received no equivalent for the transfer, but in the case of Ex parte Foxley (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 862; L. Rep. 3 Ch. App. 515) it seems to be distinctly admitted by Sir W. P. Wood, L.J., that a suretyship was a sufficient equivalent to support a bill of sale, and there is no difference in principle between a bill of sale and a transfer such as the present. His words, which are at p. 520, are these: "The debtor gave a security to cover the risk of Lewis in indorsing the bill. I am not prepared to say that that was not in itself an equivalent which would have supported a bill of sale." In Strachan v. Barton (11 Ex. 647) it was held that the payment by a bankrupt of a debt not due was not necessarily a fraudulent preference, and in Edwards v. Glyn (2 Ell. & Ell. 29) a request from a surety was held sufficient to negative a fraudulent preference. Upon these authorities I am prepared to hold, if necessary, that the liability of Whitfield on the promissory note was a sufficient equivalent for the transfer of the wine and matches. For the foregoing reasons I think the principal ingredients necessary to making this transfer void, or an act of bankruptcy, are wanting; and I refuse so much of the motion as relates to the wine and matches. The costs will come out of the estate.

Re DANIEL CHADWICK.

Bankruptcy Act 1869—Stoppage in transitu.

Held, on the authority of Wilmshurst v. Bowker, and Maddock v. Granger, that the arrival of the goods at the railway terminus, and the subsequent delivery to the purchaser of the usual advice note, rendered the transit complete. Also that a bill of exchange, although alleged to be sent for a specific purpose, and in the hands of the debtors on their failure, is not returnable, where, by proof of debt and other circumstances, there is evidence sufficient to satisfy the court that at the time of forwarding the bill, there was nothing definite either expressed or implied in the mind of the sender.

THIS was a motion argued a few weeks ago in which judgment was reserved.

James, instructed by Woodburn, Pemberton, and Sampson, appeared to support the application.

Martin, on behalf of Mr. Bolland, opposed.

His HONOUR now said: In this case I am asked to order Mr. Bolland, the trustee in liquidation of the property of Daniel Chadwick, to repay to Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., the sum of £300 in respect of a bill of exchange drawn by the said Daniel Chadwick and accepted by Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., and dated 10th Feb. 1873; and to deliver up an advice note relating to fifty-one bundles of wire consigned by Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., to the said Daniel Chadwick. The facts of the case, so far as they relate to the first branch of the application, viz., that with reference to the bill of exchange, are these. A bill of exchange for £553, drawn by Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., upon Mr. Chadwick, the debtor, and accepted by him, was due on the 13th Feb. in the present year. On the 11th Feb. Mr. Chadwick wrote a letter to Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., enclosing a bill for £300 drawn upon them, and asking their acceptance of it as a partial renewal of the bill for £553. In the same letter Mr. Chadwick enclosed an unsigned bill, with the acceptance of his firm written across it, for the like amount. The bill was afterwards signed by Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., and retained by them. On the 12th Feb. Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co., returned their acceptance to Mr. Chadwick in a letter which may be presumed to have reached him on the 13th. On the 12th Feb. Mr. Chadwick swears that he became first aware that his bankers would not retire the £553 bill, as he had expected they would, and on the day it was due, viz., the 13th, it was dishonoured. Mr. Chadwick did not pay Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co.'s acceptance to his bankers to meet part of this £553 bill, but retained it in his own hands till the 25th, when he handed it to the trustee in liquidation. Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co. have since provided for both the £300 bills, viz., their acceptance of Chadwick's bill and Chadwick's acceptance of their bill, both of which became due on the 13th June, and also for the £553 bill. To cover the latter bill and expenses they drew a bill for £557 odd on Chadwick. Both these latter bills appear on the proof. On the 19th Feb. Mr. Chadwick filed his petition for liquidation. On the 21st May Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co. filed the usual affidavit of proof of debt against the estate of Mr. Chadwick, and claimed to prove among other items for the £300 bill accepted by Mr. Chadwick, and they have since claimed a dividend on the full amount set forth in the affidavit. Upon examining the sum set out in the proof it was found that £300 more was claimed than was due, and this Mr. Whitehead admits to be the fact. It was argued before me that there had been a specific appropriation of Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co.'s acceptance, and that it was in Mr. Chadwick's hands, clothed with a trust to devote it only to the object to which it had been specifically appropriated—viz., to a part payment of the bill for £553; but I think that Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co.'s dealings with respect to that acceptance (i.e., the £300) negative the idea that any such intention was in their minds, or at any rate lead to the conclusion that they have waived any right to take advantage of it. In their letter of the 14th Feb., in which they return the bill, no such specific appropriation is alluded to. The bill came into Mr. Chadwick's hands on the 15th Feb., and remained in his hands until the 25th. On the 15th Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co. became aware, by a letter of Mr. Chadwick's, dated the 14th, that the bill for £553 would not be met. Not a word do they say during that period about the bill being specifically appropriated to the payment of the £553 bill, nor do they make any request that it shall be returned to them. It is true that on the day of the first meeting of creditors Mr. Whitehead says, and it is not denied, that he claimed the return of the bill from the trustee, and he endeavours to explain his want of diligence in insisting upon its return by some hope being held out by the trustee that if he met both bills he could be entitled to have the value of his own acceptances returned to him. But what does he do? On the 21st May he includes this very sum in his proof; in fact, on the 21st May he elects, he deliberately elects, for his attorney drew up his affidavit of proof on his own instructions, and as he says with all the bills and facts before him, to treat this £300 as a loan from his firm to Mr. Chadwick, and when the time comes for a dividend he claims a dividend upon it. From the beginning to the end of the transaction until the present proceeding is instituted, not a word do we hear from Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co. about the specific appropriation of the bill to the payment of the £553 bill. I therefore think that Messrs. Stuart, Whitehead, and Co. are not entitled to have the bill given up or to receive its equivalent. My judgment in the matter of the wire stood over by arrangement until the decision of the appeal from this court in the case of Ex parte Catlin and Waller, re Chadwick (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 431), the principle involved in the two cases being precisely similar. In that case the decision of this court that the transitus was at an end when the goods came into the warehouse of the railway company at Liverpool having been confirmed, I give judgment to the same effect with reference to the wire. The application will therefore be dismissed with costs.

Sampson said he was unaware whether it was the intention of his clients to appeal, but, assuming they were so advised, he should be glad if the court would now fix the amount of deposit.

His HONOUR said the ordinary sum, £20, would be sufficient.

Re T. S. TRUMBLE.

Bankruptcy Act 1869—Registration of resolutions—Practice.

Held that the court could only entertain an appeal from the registrar on the question of registration. The registrar's duties were merely ministerial, and if a proof was questioned which affected the registration, it ought to be submitted to the court.

THIS liquidating debtor was a paperhanger in Liverpool. He presented his petition in November of last year, with liabilities of £1525 and assets £976. In the same month the creditors passed resolutions to liquidate by arrangement, and appointed Mr. Williams trustee. A proof of debt was tendered at the meeting by Mr. George Trumble, a brother of the bankrupt, for £1563, and objected to by the chairman. On the resolutions being presented for registration, the objection to the proof was considered by the registrar, and finally, after much discussion and delay, he rejected it, and registered the resolutions. Etty applied for an appointment to appeal from the registrar's decision as to the proof. The registrar said the proper course was to appeal against the registration, and in support of such application to revive the question of the validity of Mr. George Trumble's debt, for if it was established the registration fell to the ground, as the resolution of creditors would be insufficiently signed. Etty said he did not object to the registration, and all that he wanted was his client's debt admitted, and his dividend paid thereon. The registrar intimated if that were so the parties should go before the trustee, and in case he rejected the proof there could be an appeal to the court. Etty preferred adopting his own course; and finally, after some discussion, an appointment was given for the court to consider the validity of the debt. On the 22nd inst. the appeal came on for hearing.

Myburgh, instructed by Duke and Goffey, excepted to the jurisdiction of the court. The only appeal which was provided for by the Act was against the registration of the resolutions. Here, on the question of proof, the registrar had given his decision, and had registered the proceedings. Had the parties desired, they could have adjourned the question of the proof for the opinion of the court; but as they had elected to take the registrar's decision, it was too late to revive the matter, except by appeal to the Chief Judge or from the trustee, in case he rejected the proof.

HIS HONOUR held the objection to be good, as he saw no provision in the Act or rules sanctioning an appeal from the registrar's decision, except as to the registration of the resolutions.

Myburgh then, after some discussion, said that, as he did not wish the claimant to be damnified by a technical objection, he would consent to the court considering the proof as an appeal from the trustee, who, under his advice, would at once reject the same.

Etty consented to that course, and after evidence was adduced and arguments urged on both sides, the court reserved its judgment.

LEGAL NEWS.

THE Glasgow News hears that the Government has resolved to set up in Scotland, and in Ireland also, a court of final appeal.

A DINNER was given at Willis's Rooms on Saturday evening by the past and present members of the Oxford circuit to Mr. Henry James, Q.C., on his appointment as Attorney-General. Mr. Huddleston, Q.C., presided; and amongst those present were Lord Romilly, Mr. Justice Keating, Mr. Baron Pigott, Mr. Amphlett, M.P., and Mr. Kenyon, Q.C.

SOLICITORS ELECTED TO THE OFFICE OF MAYOR 1873-74.—In addition to those already published by us, the following solicitors have been elected to the office of Mayor for the ensuing year: Mr. C. J. Follett, B.C.L., Exeter (second time); Mr. Arthur Leech, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire; Mr. Charles Newman, Barnsley (second time); Mr. Charles Denton Leech, Bury St. Edmunds; Mr. W. H. Bailes, Boston.

RULES OF PROCEDURE IN THE LAW COURTS.—The Times understands that progress is being made in the framing by the judges of the rules of procedure which they were to make under the Judicature Act. The judges have met, and a committee has been selected from among them. Under the direction of this committee three draftsmen are at work, one of whom has been selected for his acquaintance with procedure in common law, one for his knowledge of the practice in the equity courts, and the third on account of experience in the Admiralty, Probate, and Divorce courts. A draft of the rules is expected to be ready before the end of the year, and it will then be carefully considered, with the object of placing the definitive rules in the hands of the Profession some time before the Long Vacation.

SIR JAMES MARTIN has been appointed Chief Justice of New South Wales, to succeed Sir Alfred Stephen, C.B., who has resigned the office.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.—It is announced officially that the Houses of Parliament will meet on the 5th of February, 1874, for the dispatch of business.

SIR JOHN B. KARSLAKE has announced his intention of coming forward as a candidate in the Conservative interest for the representation of Huntingdon. He says in his address that the opinions he entertained when he was successively Solicitor-General and Attorney-General are well known, and he has not seen any reason to change them.

THE Licensed Victuallers' Protection Society have directed their solicitors to prepare a Bill to amend the Licensing Act of 1872; and a conference will be held at the London Tavern on the 10th Dec. to consider the clauses of the Bill, with the view of taking prompt and vigorous action in the forthcoming session. Inquiries are being made to test the feeling of the trade upon a uniform closing hour throughout the metropolitan police district.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—A writer in the Globe, with reference to testamentary documents, observes, "that the nature of some men reveals itself only in their last wills and testaments. In these the vanity or caprice, or the irony, or the spite of an individual, restrained by circumstances during life, often find fresh vent. Sure of being beyond the reach of retaliation, when the shaft he levelled is fired, he feels no compunction for the wound he is about to create, but rather regrets that he is able to exert his individuality from beyond the grave. The manner even in which their funeral obsequies are to be performed give many immense concern. Some insist on being buried in the most private and unostentatious manner; while others, of whom the late Duke of Brunswick seems to have been a conspicuous example, live in a perpetual dread lest they should be interred without the pompous circumstances they regard as suitable to their station. The caprices of the will-maker have no limit." Reference is made to the singular case of Messer Ludovico Cortorio, A.D. 1418, who desired that his friends and relatives should not weep at his funeral, and his instructions were observed with strictness, for jolity prevailed upon this occasion instead of sorrow.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS.—On Wednesday the criminal statistics of Ireland for last year appeared in a Parliamentary volume. Compared with 1871, the decrease is 111, or 17·6 in malicious offences against property. Malicious offences against property stood at a minimum of 526 in 1867, rose to a maximum of 764 in 1870, but in 1872 fell to 520, or below the minimum reached in 1867, showing a subsidence of this very grave class of offence, in which the Irish statistics are usually more unfavourable than those of England and Wales. There was an increase of 105 in riots and breach of the peace last year, compared with the preceding, which arose from the party riots at Belfast. A table shows that the outburst of agrarian crime which occurred in 1869 and 1870 has undergone a remarkable diminution. It is stated that notwithstanding the unfavourable character of the harvest last year, producing pressure on the poor, and withdrawal of savings, there were in the eleven months ended the 31st July last, only 2147 offences and outrages specially reported, as compared with 2422 in the eleven months ended the 31st of July 1872—the pressure had, in other words, been attended with a diminution of crime. In reference to crime in counties and districts, it is stated by the compilers in this document that the great problem indicated by the Irish statistics in 1872 is how to deal with town crime to guard against such dangerous developments as were exhibited at the recent fire in Dublin. The population of Ireland in 1871 was 5,402,759; the offences disposed of summarily last year 211,470, being a proportion of 391·4 in each 10,000 of the population. The excess of town crime is a feature in the present tables. There were two persons sentenced to death in Ireland last year, neither of whom were executed. Comparisons are drawn in the document between England and Ireland. Of 29,121 of both sexes in prison last year in Ireland 12,700 could neither read nor write. Last year in Ireland the total cost of repression of crime was £1,336,388, of which £929,705 was for police, £334,246, for persons in confinement, and £72,437*l.* for prosecutions.

THE NEW CHIEF JUSTICE.—On Tuesday evening Sir John Duke Coleridge, the recently-appointed Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, took formal leave of the Society of the Middle Temple, with which Inn of Court he has been connected as a student, barrister, reader, and bencher for the last 30 years. In the ordinary course of things he would this Term have succeeded to the Treasurership of the Inn on the completion of Sir John Karslake's term of office, but his prior appointment to the Bench, and his consequent removal to Serjeants'-inn, caused him to be ineligible for that position. By an old custom in the Middle Temple any member of the Inn who receives during Term the rank of serjeant is formally "tolled out" of hall, but it is a somewhat curious circumstance that, although many distinguished members of the society have been raised to the Bench and to the minor dignity of the coif during the last seventeen years, only three received their promotion in Term time and went through the ceremony of last evening—namely, Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, Mr. Justice Honyman, and Lord Chief Justice Coleridge. Nearly 200 members of the Inn, both barristers and students, dined in hall on the occasion, and among the Benchers who supported the new Chief Justice were Mr. J. R. Kenyon, Q.C., the treasurer; the Right Hon. Sir Lawrence Peel, Vice Chancellor Hall, Sir John Karslake, Sir Henry Sumner Maine, the Right Hon. Peter Erle; Mr. Hawkins, Q.C., Mr. Powell, Q.C., Mr. George Loch, Q.C., Mr. Milward, Q.C., Mr. Johnson, Q.C., Mr. Gray, Q.C., Mr. Prentice, Q.C., Mr. Little, Q.C., Mr. H. T. Cole, Q.C., Mr. Fox Bristowe, Q.C., Mr. Charles Clark, and Mr. Charles Shaw, the under treasurer. Lord Chief Justice Coleridge read grace both before and after dinner, and gave from the chair, without comment, the toast of the Queen, which was received with the heartiest enthusiasm. No speeches were delivered. At the close of the dinner Sir John Coleridge, who was loudly cheered by the members, was escorted to the principal door of the hall by the Benchers and the under treasurer, and by the head Porter (Mr. Bye) bearing his staff of office. As the Judge passed out the doors were closed upon him, and the bell in the hall tower was solemnly tolled for some minutes. In this way the Lord Chief Justice formally terminated his intimate connection with the Inn. He subsequently re-entered the Parliamentary chamber as a guest of the Benchers. On the new Judicature Act—by which it will not be necessary for a Judge to become first of all a serjeant-at-law and thus to change his Inn—coming into operation this ancient ceremony will fall into desuetude.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it

COMMISSIONS FOR OATHS IN COMMON LAW.—It is stated in the Solicitors' Department of the Law Times for last week, that cases have occurred where Common Law Commissions to take affidavits which were bespoken a month ago, will not be ready for another month—perhaps two. Allow me to say that I applied last February, nine months ago, through my agents, and was then informed that no more commissions would be granted until July. In July the application was renewed, when I was told the commissions could not be signed until November. Again I reminded my agents of the matter the first week in November, and received a reply that they hoped to write me satisfactorily by the middle of Michaelmas Term. As yet, however, I have received no further communication from them on the subject. The inconvenience and delay, therefore, in my case, far exceeds that mentioned by you, and is quite inexplicable.

A COUNTRY ATTORNEY OF TEN YEARS STANDING.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

34. STAMPS—AGREEMENT FOR WEEKLY TENANCY.—What stamp does a lease from week to week or an agreement for a weekly tenancy require? If a penny receipt stamp, must it be obliterated in the usual way?

EX OFFICIO.

35. BILL OF COSTS — PARTNER. — A solicitor retained to institute suit. During its progress he took a partner. Should costs against client be in two parts—i.e., in name of solicitor to time of partnership commencing, and afterwards in name of firm, or the whole in name of solicitor first instructed.

INQUIRER FOR CASE.

36. CHEQUE—INDORSEMENT. — A cheque drawn on a country branch of the London and County Bank, and payable to the order of "the executors of Mrs. G.," is handed unindorsed by R. W. (who is her executor) to J. P. for a particular purpose. J. P. indorses the cheque, "J. P., executor of Mrs. Giblin," and obtains cash for the cheque at another bank, which takes it to the chief office of the London and County Bank, where it is honoured, and in due course it is returned to the branch on which it is drawn. First, Is the indorsement by "J. P." a forgery? second, Who loses the money, (a) the executor of Mrs. G., (b) the drawer, or (c) the bank? E. B. P.

37. TRUSTEES—INVESTMENT.—Can trustees under the following clause invest upon East Indian Railway Stock? Please give a reason, and, if possible, an authority: "And the said trustees shall lay out or invest such moneys in their or his own names or name in the Parliamentary or Public Stocks or Funds of Great Britain, or at interest on Government or real securities in England or Wales, or on the bond or bonds of some corporate body constituted by Act of Parliament, or in the capital stock of some incorporated company constituted by Act of Parliament and paying a dividend."

38. JOINT TENANCY.—If any of your readers will enlighten me on the following query I shall feel greatly obliged:—If one of three joint tenants aliens his share, do the two remaining tenants still hold their parts by joint tenancy and survivorship? Thus, suppose A., B., and C. are joint tenants in fee, and A. conveys to D. his share in the lands, and then B. dies, in what shares are the lands then held? I am aware that the share which is disposed of becomes a subject of a tenancy in common with the remaining two. INTERMEDIATE.

39. CUSTODY OF INFANT.—A. B., who is resident in the United States of America, is desirous of removing his infant child from the custody of his wife and her relations, who reside in this country, into the custody of his parents, who also reside in this country. What is the proper course for him to adopt for this purpose, and form of authority for him to execute, and need it be under seal or bear a stamp, and how should it be executed and attested, and what would be about the cost of applying to the Court of Queen's Bench, for a writ of habeas corpus? LEX.

40. LORD MAYOR'S COURT—JURISDICTION.—Will any of your readers inform me how jurisdiction has been conferred upon the Lord Mayor's Court in respect of debts contracted in the country? I have now before me a summons from the above court in respect of a debt for provisions contracted 200 miles from London, secured by a bill of exchange sent to the defendant by a firm of accountants in town for acceptance. I was under the impression that "transitory" actions were qualified as regards inferior courts of record, and only triable where the defendant resides, and the place where the debt was contracted. It is so in the County Courts. HARDSHIP.

[The jurisdiction of the court is limited to the city, except in Foreign Attachment. But the difficulty of objecting to jurisdiction is so great that it is generally yielded to.—ED.]

Answers.

(Q. 12.) POOR LAW—LIABILITY TO MAINTAIN GRANDPARENT.—"Pauper," in your last number, in answer to "G. K.," states that in the index to the last edition of Archbold's Poor Law, under the head "Grandfather," will be found "liability to maintain grandchildren, and to be maintained by them." The index, it is true, contains such a reference, but I am unable to find any authority for the latter proposition in the body of the book; on the contrary, I am convinced that the law as laid down 31 J. P., p. 755, referred to by "F. W. F." in your last issue is correct. X. X. X.

(Q. 13.) LEGACY DUTY.—From the initials given in the case it may be guessed that A. T. was the sister of J. G.'s wife—not the wife or widow of J. G.'s brother. If A. T. were such sister, the reply given by "S." is correct. In the other event; 3 per cent. only would be payable, under sect. 11. Z. Y.

(Q. 14.) NOT PROVEN.—In answer to the question as to the Scotch verdict of Not Proven in your issue of the 15th, I may inform your correspondent that a person who has been acquitted by such a verdict cannot again be indicted on the same charge. It operates in exactly the same way as a verdict of Not Guilty. It has been found to work well; but this is not the place to enter on the question of its merits and demerits. ADVOCATE.

(Q. 16.) CONVEYANCING.—The concurrence of the cestuis que trust under H.'s will does not appear to be absolutely necessary; but, if it be necessary, it will be inoperative against the married women, unless they acknowledge the deed. A new trustee should be appointed in the place of the one said to be of unsound mind. Z. Y.

(Q. 21.) REPUDIATION OF BET.—I think C. was safe in paying over, notwithstanding B.'s protest. See Martin v. Hewson (10 Ex. 737.) Z. Y.

(Q. 24.) WILL AND CODICIL.—See Wills Act of 1837, s. 34; Winter v. Winter (5 Ha. 306); Gordon v. Atkinson (1 De G. & S. 478); Brooks v. Kent (3 Moo. P. C. 334, 1 No. Cas. 93). But the rule that a codicil confirming a will makes the will for many purposes bear the date of the codicil is subject to the limitation that the testator's intention be not thereby defeated (Doe v. Hole, 15 Jur. 13). OWL.

(Q. 25.) CHEQUE—SUPPOSED SWINDLE.—The plaint must be in a Metropolitan Court. The judge has power, however, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 22, to change the venue. The judge will direct what number of witnesses are to be allowed, on taxation of costs, and what allowances are to be made for attendance. See 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 86; County Court C. L. Rules 130, 132. B. can be summoned as a witness under the above section. (See Shortt and Jones, County Court Acts. pp. 69, 70.) B. is not criminally responsible unless it be proved that he knew, or had reasonable ground to suspect, that the cheque would be dishonoured. Z. Y.

(Q. 26.) DEVISE—WORDS OF REVOCATION.—The reversion was in C. on A.'s death, and on failure of the estate tail C. cannot be prevented from taking the whole estate. The revocation was good without the words quoted, which only embody the testator's personal feeling, and are inoperative to defeat the rights of C. as heir. See 1 Reeves' Hist. Eng. Law, 105; Co. Litt., 191a, n. (1) vi. 3. OWL.

— The heir-at-law is entitled, since he can only be disinherited by an effectual gift to some one else. Z. Y.

(Q. 27.) CONVEYANCE.—B.'s co-trustee or co-trustees will release to him. OWL.

— Subject to any question as to the payment for her separate use or otherwise of the legacy to B.'s wife—B.'s co-trustees, by virtue of their legal and beneficial interests, can make a title. I doubt, however, whether it would be good as against unpaid creditors of the testator, who might very properly insist that a bona fide sale should have been made to a stranger. Z. Y.

(Q. 29.) RAILWAY—TRESPASS.—The placards being true, would not render the company or its officers liable to an action for libel. The persons concerned in the placarding are, however, prima facie, liable to indictment. In order to escape conviction they would have to show not only the truth of the libel, but to persuade a jury that it was for the public benefit that the offender should not only be fined but held up as a scarecrow, for the warning of others. I think that placarding offenders is in general a proceeding which railway companies or their officials have no right to adopt. As a rule the public press sufficiently exposes offenders. Z. Y.

(Q. 30.) MARRIED WOMAN.—The deed must be acknowledged. Z. Y.

(Q. 31.) LIQUIDATION.—B. lends A. shares, which A. does not return when requested, having, with B.'s consent pledged them to C. for £100. There can be no doubt that B. would recover against A. damages on A.'s implied contract to redeem the shares for B.'s benefit, and that the amount of damages would be the amount required to redeem the shares. This should be proved for under sect. 31 of the Act of 1869. Z. Y.

(Q. 33.) COMMISSIONER.—In the third edition of Day's Common Law Procedure Acts, p. 24, see as to affidavits sworn before attorneys, their agents, and clerks. R. G. H. T. 1853, rr. 142-3 post, and Horsefall v. Mathewman (3 M. & S. 154). R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 142, no affidavit of service of process shall be deemed sufficient if sworn before the plaintiff's own attorney or his clerk: (See Foster v. Harvey 11 W. R. 899, July 1863. V.C. W.) R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 143, where an agent in town or an attorney in the country is the attorney on the record, an affidavit sworn before the attorney in the country shall not be received, and an affidavit sworn before an attorney's clerk shall not be received in cases where it would not be receivable if sworn before the attorney himself; but this rule shall not extend to an affidavit to hold to bail. G. S.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

THE meeting of barristers and solicitors, to which reference was made last week, was held at the rooms of the Social Science Association, Adelphi, under the presidency of Mr. W. T. Charley, D.C.L. M.P., on Thursday, the 20th inst., to consider the necessity for founding a Legal Practitioners' Society, for "the reform of the existing unsatisfactory state of the legal profession." The proposal was that the society should restrict itself "to the reform of proved abuses in connection with the Profession only," and among its objects the following were mentioned: To define the rules of etiquette of the legal profession, and reduce them to a written code; to define the rights and liabilities of the two branches of the legal profession inter se, as well as in relation to the public; to place the government of the legal profession on a sound representative basis; and to protect the legal profession against the depredations of unqualified men.

The Chairman, in his opening speech, stated that letters had been received from members of both branches of the Profession favourable to the objects for which the meeting had been called, and it was felt that there was no existing society to which could be confided the onerous task of reforming the abuses in the legal profession. The question of that night would be whether there should or should not be a society founded. The law had been amended, and the judicial system reconstructed, but no effort had been made to redress the grievances of which both branches of the Profession complained, and the Profession stood in nearly the same position that it stood a century ago. There were many persons, no doubt, who would improve the legal profession off the face of the earth (a laugh), and abate it as a nuisance; and there were not wanting members in the House of Commons with that desire; but he most emphatically stated that the public could not get on without lawyers. (Hear.) A man might be his own priest or his own doctor with more or less success, but he failed altogether when he tried to be his own lawyer. He instanced the necessity of legal assistance by recounting the discrimination required in searching out from a mass of evidence what could and what could not be laid before a jury, and he also spoke as to the necessity of legal knowledge in drawing a will. He then proceeded to speak of the grievances of which the legal profession complained. He put on one side the question of legal education, as that had been taken up by the Legal Education Association. He was not there, he said, to express an opinion upon that Association; but he was entitled to refer to the existence of that Association as an evidence that it was possible for the two branches of the Profession to combine together for a common object, for they had found it possible to sit on the council of that Association together. (Hear, hear.) The artificial barrier raised between the two branches was a grievance of which both sides complained. A flourishing junior at the Bar recently told him that the Bar and attorneys were natural foes. There were persons who thought that the internecine war between the two branches was hardly consistent with 19th century civilization. An eminent Queen's Counsel had said that "attorneys exercised a malignant influence over the Bar;" and lately an eminent solicitor declared that it was "time the reign of barristerdom should cease." Now was this state of things to be allowed to go on without an attempt being made to humanise, not to say to Christianise, the relations between the two branches before another race of lawyers grew up? The fact of a barrister dying in a common lodging house of starvation, opened the eyes of the public to the hollowness of the existing state of things. Many barristers were keeping up the position of members of the aristocracy upon the income of paupers. Successful solicitors, on whom wealth had descended in golden showers, were sitting in splendid homes without a chance of obtaining dignity or honour. There were persons who thought that the existing state of things exercised a demoralising influence upon the Profession. (Hear.) It was asked whether it would be possible if a higher tone prevailed for attorneys to gamble for counsel and counsel to jilt their clients? Would it be possible for accountants, law stationers, money lenders, debt collectors, and advertising quacks to usurp the functions of the legal Profession? (Cheers.) Would there be an Inn of Court, calling gentlemen to the Bar at a cost of £2150 each? If the rules of etiquette were defined, would unscrupulous men violate them with impunity? There would be no satisfactory solution of existing difficulties until there was joint action between the two branches of the legal Profession. They had been too long kept apart, and it was time they met in a spirit of compromise. Each should be prepared to sacrifice something for the general good. The public interest should be paramount. It might be hoped that the noble Profession to which they belonged would then be as unsullied as the ermine of the judges who adorn our judgment seat. (Cheers.)

Mr. Gresham, the high bailiff of Southwark, corroborated the chairman's statement of the unpleasant state of feeling between the two branches, and he expressed his regret that it did exist. He did not think there should be any disagreement between members of the Bar and attorneys. He then alluded to the state of things in Gray's-inn, in which he was personally interested, his son having been excluded from the inn because he was articled to his father as an attorney. He alluded to the dissatisfaction caused by barristers taking briefs without the possibility of attending to them, and this too, without any responsibility; while attorneys would be held directly responsible for any neglect. As to Gray's-inn, he said that though an attorney, he maintained the right of membership in his Inn, and he went on to complain of the usurpation of the duties and privileges of the Profession by accountants and others in bankruptcy, county, and police courts. He thought a society such as this proposed to be would be a most useful one for the Profession.

Mr. Gresham, jun., urged the necessity of a society such as this proposed to be, to protect the Profession against the depredations of unqualified persons.

Mr. Coryton, late a judge at Rangoon, thought that an amalgamation of the Profession would lead to partnerships between the two branches. In India the feeling was something like that which the chairman had described as the feeling of some in this country, that lawyers were a nuisance. The Government in India looked upon litigation as a nuisance, and tried to keep it within bounds. After some explanations with the Chairman on one or two remarks made by the latter, he went on to say that simplifying the law in India opened up plenty of fair business. He explained the system prevailing in India, and stated that the judge had to discover, by having the parties to a litigation before him, the points at issue, and then to confine the parties to those points. He thought there was room for improvement in the system in this country.

Mr. Crump said that he had come to the meeting to hear, and with no intention of speaking, but in response to a suggestion that he should make some observations, he would say that he did not think the rules of the Profession required any codification. As a barrister, he could not say that he had known of any heart burnings or jealousy as between the members of the two branches of the Profession. He had seen no trace of "a malignant influence on the Bar" by attorneys, who, in his intercourse with them he had generally found to be educated gentlemen, and he could not understand how business could be carried on as it is if that feeling existed. The fact that an enormous amount of work was conducted in and out of court to the satisfaction of the public, showed that the two branches did work in accord, and he believed that they would continue to work in accord. He was emphatically opposed to any proposition for amalgamation. But, if attorneys could not live because of the depredations upon their profession by unqualified men, let those enactments which existed for the protection of the Profession be strictly enforced in the tribunals of the country. Let it not however be supposed by the public that the two branches were engaged in internecine warfare. He believed that if a poll were taken of the Profession there would be no differences of opinion except as to the means of facilitating business. Speaking as a barrister, he desired to point out that in the matter of briefs being taken which could not be attended to, the barrister, in this matter, was often in the hands of his clerk, who would take in business in the bonâ fide expectation that it would receive proper attention, and who could not always foresee the engagements of his employer. The remedy for the grievance of a barrister not attending to briefs was in the hands of the attorneys; for if they found a man so overwhelmed with business that he could not attend to all his work, it was their fault in retaining him. For his part he did not see that there was any grievance in there not being an amalgamation. He did not want to become an attorney, but he had no objection to any solicitor becoming a barrister per saltum. He did not think, if there were an amalgamation, that the Profession would hold the position it now did before the country; for there was something now about the Bar—perhaps it was owing to their not being brought into direct contact with the public—which gave it a peculiar position. If that were broken down, and the barristers were liable to be pressed by their clients to take strong views of particular cases as attorneys were, the influence of the Profession would be diminished in the country, and they would be deprived of the means they had now of doing a vast amount of good to the public. The one object of the society should be to ensure that steps were taken to protect the Profession, and the Profession should do their best to suppress unqualified persons. There could be no doubt that in County Courts and other tribunals, the Profession was robbed by accountants and agents of all kinds, and he was surprised to see so large and powerful a body as the attorneys sitting quietly by, while the legitimate profits of their profession were taken by persons who, he believed, fostered the worst class of litigation in this country.

Mr. Leslie, as a solicitor, was entirely opposed to amalgamation, and he felt that the subject of depredations on the Profession was one requiring serious attention. He did not complain of the junior Bar, but thought it would be very desirable if leaders confined themselves in the common law courts to particular courts as they do in Chancery.

Mr. Lowe spoke at some length with reference to the conduct of unqualified persons in County Courts and police courts, as well in London as the country.

Mr. Charles Ford then rose to move the only resolution, which he said was intended to submit to the meeting, namely, "That it is expedient to establish a society to be called, 'The Legal Practitioners' Society,' for the purpose of reforming abuses in relation to the legal profession." He said he felt much pleasure in undertaking the office of honorary secretary, not only because such a society might certainly be made of use to the Profession, but also because he felt sure its operation would be of advantage to the public. This being a preliminary meeting it was not his intention to address them at any length; he would only refer, therefore, to one or two points. The depredations of unqualified persons upon the Profession was beyond question serious. The practical exclusion of solicitors from passing to the Bar was a great injustice, and he had received letters from the Lord Chancellor, the late Attorney-General (Sir J. D. Coleridge), and the present Master of the Rolls, and others, admitting that the rules of the Inns of Court in this respect required modification. He (Mr. Ford) felt strongly on this subject, it was discreditable to the Bar and an injustice to solicitors. Upon the subject of the liability of counsel for negligence, he quite agreed with the views entertained by Mr. Charles E. Lewis, M.P., so often expressed by him upon that subject. He was entirely opposed to amalgamation. He begged to move the resolution he had read.

Mr. Gresham seconded the resolution, which was carried nem. con.

On the motion of Mr. Ford, seconded by Mr. Lowe, it was resolved that the meeting be adjourned to the 7th Jan. next at the same place at 8 o'clock.

An unanimous vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held on Monday, the 24th inst., Mr. G. L. Batley occupied the chair. The following question was appointed for discussion: "Was the case of Revell v. Blake (L. Rep. 7 C. P. 300), rightly decided?" Mr. B. Crook conducted the affirmative, and Messrs. G. W. Morrison and E. F. Brook the negative. The question was decided in the negative.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, W.C., on Wednesday, the 26th November, Mr. George Castle in the chair. Mr. Baker opened for discussion, "The Judicature Act," Part VI. Mr. G. E. Browne opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz.: "That the Profession does not sufficiently guard and advance its own interests." The motion was carried.

BRISTOL ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., E. J. Swann, Esq., solicitor, occupied the chair. The following subject was discussed: "Was the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of Roberts v. Humphreys (21 W. R. 885) well founded in view of previous decisions?" Mr. Foster opened in the affirmative, and was opposed by Mr. Dymond. The question was decided in the affirmative by a majority of one.

PETERBOROUGH ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at the County Court, New-road, Peterborough, G. F. D. Gaches, Esq., solicitor, in the chair. Mr. M. P. Grissell, opened in the affirmative: "An owner of lands in fee simple, whose rents are payable half-yearly at Michaelmas and Lady-day, dies in the month of August 1872, having made his will dated 1869, whereby he devised his estates in Peterborough to A., and the residue of his real estate to B. Are the executors entitled under the Apportionment Act (33 & 34 Vict. 35) to receive from both or either of the devisees at Michaelmas 1872, the amount of the rent which shall have accrued due in respect of the estates devised to them respectively from Lady-day 1872 to the day of the testator's death, as part of the personal estate of the testator?" Mr. J. W. Smart replied in the negative, and after a good discussion the affirmative was carried by a majority of four.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

A. H. WHITAKER, ESQ.

THE late Alfred Hanbury Whitaker, Esq., barrister-at-law, who died on the 10th inst. at Abbot's-walk, Reading, was the youngest son of the late Edward Whitaker, Esq., of the Manor House, Bampton, Oxon, and was born about the year 1816. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple in Hilary Term 1844, and practised for some years as a conveyancer at his chambers in Field-court, Gray's-inn.

W. MILLS, ESQ.

THE late William Mills, Esq., barrister-at-law, who died on the 23rd ult., at his residence in Sackville-street, in the thirty-first year of his age, was the eldest son of John Robert Mills, Esq., of York, and was born in the year 1843. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple in Hilary Term 1868, and practised with considerable success as a special pleader on the Midland Circuit. He also attended the North Riding of Yorkshire Sessions, and also the York City and Leeds Borough Sessions.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

SITTINGS AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM 1873.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.

(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR.)

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Dec.	2	First Seal. Appeals
Wednesday		3	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		4	Appeals
Friday		5	Bankrupt appeals, petitions, and appeals
Monday		8	Appeals
Tuesday		9	Ditto
Wednesday		10	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		11	Second Seal. Appeals
Friday		12	Bankrupt appeals, petitions, and appeals
Monday		15	Appeals
Tuesday		16	Ditto
Wednesday		17	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		18	Third Seal. Appeals
Friday		19	Bankrupt appeals, petitions, and appeals

During Term (except on Saturdays) the Lord Chancellor will usually sit in full Court with the Lords Justices of the Court of Appeal.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES.)

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Dec.	2	First Seal. Appeals.
Wednesday		3	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		4	Appeals
Friday		5	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		6	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions
Monday		8	Appeals
Tuesday		9	Ditto
Wednesday		10	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		11	Second Seal. Appeals
Friday		12	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		13	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions
Monday		15	Appeals
Tuesday		16	Ditto
Wednesday		17	Appeal motions and appeals
Thursday		18	Third Seal. Appeals
Friday		19	Bankrupt appeals and appeals
Saturday		20	Petitions in lunacy and appeal petitions

The days (if any) on which the Lords Justices shall be engaged in the Full Court or at the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are excepted.

Rolls Court.

At Chancery-lane.

Tuesday	Dec.	2	First Seal. Motions and general paper
Wednesday		3	General paper
Thursday		4	Ditto
Friday		5	Ditto
Saturday		6	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		8	Further considerations and general paper
Tuesday		9	General paper
Wednesday		10	Ditto
Thursday		11	Second Seal. Motions and general paper
Friday		12	General paper
Saturday		13	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		15	Further considerations and general paper
Tuesday		16	General paper
Wednesday		17	Ditto
Thursday		18	Third Seal. Motions and general paper
Friday		19	General paper
Saturday		20	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

At the Rolls, unopposed petitions must be presented, and copies left with the secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard.

V.C. Malins' Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Dec.	2	First Seal. Motions and general paper
Wednesday		3	General paper
Thursday		4	Ditto
Friday		5	Petitions and general paper
Saturday		6	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		8	General paper
Tuesday		9	Ditto
Wednesday		10	Ditto
Thursday		11	Second Seal. Motions and general paper
Friday		12	Petitions and general paper
Saturday		13	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday		15	County Court appeals and general paper
Tuesday		16	General paper
Wednesday		17	Ditto
Thursday		18	Third Seal. Motions and general paper
Friday		19	Petitions and general paper
Saturday		20	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper

V.C. Bacon's Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Dec.	2	First Seal. Motions and adjourned summonses
Wednesday		3	General paper

Thursday	Dec. 4	General paper
Friday	5	Ditto
Saturday	6	Petitions, short causes, and general paper
Monday	8	In Bankruptcy
Tuesday	9	General paper
Wednesday	10	Ditto
Thursday	11	Second Seal. Motions and adjourned summonses
Friday	12	General paper
Saturday	13	Petitions, short causes, and general paper
Monday	15	In Bankruptcy
Tuesday	16	General paper
Wednesday	17	Ditto
Thursday	18	Third Seal. Motions and adjourned summonses.
Friday	19	General paper
Saturday	20	Petitions, short causes, and general paper

V.C. Hall's Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Tuesday	Dec. 2	First Seal. Motions and general paper
Wednesday	3	General paper
Thursday	4	Ditto
Friday	5	Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	6	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	8	General paper
Tuesday	9	Ditto
Wednesday	10	Ditto
Thursday	11	Second Seal. Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	12	Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	13	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	15	General paper
Tuesday	16	Ditto
Wednesday	17	Ditto
Thursday	18	Third Seal. Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	19	Petitions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	20	Short causes, adjourned summonses and general paper

Any causes intended to be heard as short causes before the Master of the Rolls or either of the Vice-Chancellors must be so marked at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

N.B.—In Vice-Chancellor Hall's Court no cause, motion for decree or further consideration, can, except by order of the court, be marked to stand over, if it be within twelve of the last cause or matter in the printed paper of the day for hearing.

WINTER CIRCUITS.

The following is the complete list of the Circuits of the Judges :

(Before Mr. Justice KEATING.)

Stafford, Nov. 29	Winchester, Dec. 11
Worcester, Dec. 6	Taunton, Dec. 18

(Before Mr. Baron PIGOTT.)

Maidstone, Dec. 1	Kingston, Dec. 11
Lewes, Dec. 4	Warwick, Dec. 15
Chelmsford, Dec. 8

(Before Mr. Justice QUAIN, and Mr. Baron POLLOCK.)

Manchester, Nov. 29	Liverpool, Dec. 10

(Before Mr. Justice ARCHIBALD.)

Leeds, Nov. 29	Cardiff, Dec. 15
Chester, Dec. 10	Gloucester, Dec. 19

(Before Mr. Justice HONYMAN.)

Newcastle, Nov. 29	Aylesbury, Dec. 20
Durham, Dec. 3

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 18.

WORSHIP and CROZIER, attorneys and solicitors, Liverpool. Oct. 28. (Starling Day Worship and Philip Augustus Crozier.)

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Nov. 21.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

DYER, LEON, King Henry's-rd. Primrose-hill. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Pepys. Sols. Rooks and Co. King-st, Cheapside. Sur. Dec. 2

LAWSEN, WILLIAM, stock broker, Tokenhouse-yd, and Holmwood, near Dorking. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Hazlitt. Sol. Dollman, Cornhill. Sur. Dec. 3

To surrender in the Country.

BROADHEAD, WILLIAM HENRY, joiner, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 19. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 3

MCLEOD, WILLIAM, travelling draper, Llanelly. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Lloyd Sur. Dec. 3.

ROSENTHAL, DAVID, paper hangings dealer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 4

WELSBY, JOHNSON GORE, general broker, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 3

WILLIAMS, HUBERT BEYMER, clerk in holy orders, Fordington. Pet. Nov. 19. Reg. Symonds. Sur. Dec. 3

Gazette, Nov. 25.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

LEAH, HENRY JAMES, auctioneer, Alma-villas, Dalston-la, and Union-ct, Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Dec. 9

MEALLIN, GEORGE, wine merchant, New Kent-rd. Pet. Nov. 19. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Dec. 10

PETTIT, EDWARD, jeweller, Fulham-rd. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Dec. 9

WELCH, WILLIAM JAMES, cheesemonger, High-st, Stoke Newington. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Murray. Sur. Dec. 9

To surrender in the Country.

BARRON, REUBEN, woollen manufacturer, Morley. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Nelson. Sur. Dec. 10

BEDBOROUGH, ELEANOR, widow, Slough. Pet. Nov. 22. Reg. Darvill. Sur. Dec. 13

BRIGGS, CHARLES, draper, Rotherham. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Rodgers. Sur. Dec. 10

BUDGE, CHARLES JAMES, commission agent, Hotwells. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Harley. Sur. Dec. 8

SIDEBOTHAM, NATHAN, and MARSH, JAMES, machinists, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Hall. Sur. Dec. 11

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Nov. 18.

JEWELL, THOMAS, architect, Leadenhall-st. Feb. 2, 1872

Gazette, Nov. 21.

GOLDSWORTHY, ROBERT, delivery clerk, Arlington-st, Camden-town. April 16, 1872

WOOD, SAMUEL HOYLE, yeast importer, Leeds. March 13, 1872

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 21.

APPS, GEORGE, umbrella maker, Mansell-st, Whitechapel. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 3, at ten, at office of Sol. Dobson, Southampton-bldgs, Chancery-la

BAXTER, ROBERT COWLEY, stationer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 10, at three, at offices of Sols. Farrar and Hall, Manchester

BLACKBURN, JOSHUA, contractor, Heckmondwike. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at half-past three, at office of Sol. Scholefield, Batley

BRODZIAC, LEWIS, general merchant, Coleman-st, and Alexandra-rd, St. John's-wood. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 12, at two, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Emanuel, Walbrook

BROWN, CHARLES, confectioner, Upper Wortley, near Leeds. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 29, at two, at office of Sol. Hardwick, Leeds

BULL, GRENVILLE BALLAD, farmer, Aston Clinton. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 11, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Parrott, Aylesbury

CALDWELL, WILLIAM, jun., joiner, Latchford. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 5, at three, at Brooks, Commercial-chmbs, Horsemarket-st, Warrington. Sols. Davies and Brook, Warrington

CARLING, JOSHUA, wine merchant, Leamington. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at eleven, at office of Sol. Hodgson, Birmingham

CHADWICK, WILLIAM HENRY, beerhouse keeper, Choriton-on-Medlock. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 1, at four, at offices of Sols. Learoyd and Learoyd, Huddersfield

CLARK, GEORGE, saddler, Batley. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at ten, at office of Sol. Wooler, Batley

CLEAVE, ROBERT, ironmonger, Wolsey-ter, Clarence-rd, Teddington, also Meard's-ct, Wardour-st, Soho. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 5, at two, at offices of Sol Seale, Lincoln's-inn-fields

CLEGG, JAMES, grocer, Lowmoor, par. Bradford. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 6, at ten, at offices of Sols. Berry and Robinson, Bradford

CLEMENT, JAMES WHITE, attorney, Alton. Pet Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at three, at the Swan hotel, Alton. Sols. Messrs. Parker, Bedford-row

CONDON, JOHN, coal merchant, Perseverance-wharf, Millwall-dock, and Kingsbridge-pl, Westferry-rd, Millwall. Pet Nov. 18. Dec. 5, at three, at the Ironmonger's Arms, Westferry-rd, Millwall. Sol. Fenton, Worship-st

COOKE, WILLIAM, cordwainer, Metheringham. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at eleven, at office of Sol. Tweed, Saltergate

CRABB, RICHARD, bootmaker, James-st, Oxford-st, Paddington-st, and Harrow-rd, Marylebone. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 1, at eleven, at Coles, Wilson, and Co., 63, Bishopsgate-st-within. Sol. Dobson, Southampton bldgs

CROOKALL, ROBERT, and CROOKALL, JOHN, tea dealers, Bolton. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, sep. creditors of R. Crookall and J Crookall, at ten, at offices of Sols. Richardson and Dowling, Bolton

CROWTHER, TOM, farmer, Whistone's-farm, Thurstonland, par Kirkburton. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 4, at 2, at office of Sol. Booth, Holmfirth

CURTIS, FREDERICK, tailor, Warren-st, Fitzroy-sq. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at eleven, at office of Sol. Willis, St. Martin's-ct, Leicester-sq

DANCE, WILLIAM, brickburner, Shaw-cum-Donnington. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at ten, at office of Sol. Cave, Newbury

DAWSON, DAVID, bootmaker, Maidstone. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 6, at eleven, at the Cathedral hotel, St. Paul's-churchyard. Sol. Stephenson, Maidstone

DENTZ, JAMES, late tobacconist, Hull. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 3, at three, at office of Sol. Chambers, Hull

DEWINTER, ELIAZER, grocer, Sun-st, Finsbury. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 9, at three, at office of Sol. May, Princes-st Spitalfields

DILKE, FRED, plumber, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Hobbs, Bristol

DRAKE, JAMES, cellarman, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 18. Nov. 29, at eleven, at Clark, 1, Bristol-chmbs, Nicholas-st, Bristol. Sol. Stevens, Bristol

DYKE, GEORGE, Italian warehouseman, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sols. Masters and Fletcher, Liverpool

EMERY, JOHN WILLIAM HENRY, grocer, Langley, near Oldbury. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 5, at three, at office of Sol. Sheldon, Wednesbury

EYES, JOHN, joiner, Northwich. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 9, at eleven, at office of Sol. Cheshire, Northwich

FARNHILL, FRANCIS, out of business, York. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 9, at three, at offices of Sol. Granger, Leeds

FAULKNER, WILLIAM, dealer in wines, Newark-on-Trent. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at twelve, at the Ram hotel, Newark-on-Trent. Sol. Belk, Nottingham

FORD, PETER, rope manufacturer, Stroud. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 6, at one, at office of Sol. Jackson, Gloucester

FORDHAM, HENRY ABRAHAM, fancy box manufacturer, Shaftesbury-st, New North-rd. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at two, at office of Sol. Perry, Guildhall-chmbs

FRESHNEY, PARKINSON, draper, Beverley, and Hull. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 3, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Stead and Sibree, Hull

GASKELL, JOHN, plumber, Southport. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 6, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barker, Southport

GEORGE, AUGUSTUS, milliner, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 5, at eleven, at office of Sol. Duke, Birmingham

GILL, WILLIAM BELL, grocer, Otley. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov 29, at ten, at Fawcett and Malcolm, solicitors, Leeds. Sols. Berry and Robinson

GREEN, HARVEY ROBERT, farmer, Great Horkesley. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 8, at three, at the Fleece hotel, Colchester. Sol. White, Colchester

GREEN, RICHARD ANGELL, goldsmith, Strand. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 29, at eleven, at office of Sol. Roberts, Coleman-st

HALL, JAMES, joiner, Reigate. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at twelve at office of Sol. Morris, Cannon-st, London

HARDACRE, ROBERT, and EDMONDSON, THOMAS, drapers, Blackburn. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 5, at two, at the White Bear hotel, Manchester. Sols. Hall and Holland, Blackburn

HARDMAN, EDMUND, woolstapler, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Sols. Terry and Robinson, Bradford

HEBB, GRAINGER, builder, North-gr-west, Mildmay-pk. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sol. Pearpoint, Leicester-square

HOLLANDS, HENRY, butcher, Lydd. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 9, at three, at the White Hart hotel, Hythe. Sol. Minter, Folkestone

JACKSON, FABIAN, diamond merchant, Moorgate-st. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at two, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Murray, Sackville-st, Piccadilly

JACKSON, WILLIAM, grocer, Coatham. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 2, at three, at Graham, Ramsgate. Sol. Trotter

KING, CHARLES, wool dealer, Halifax. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 5, at eleven, at office of Sol. Boocock, Halifax

KRIEGSFELD, LOUIS, waterproofer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Orton, Manchester

LEAVERS, HENRY, lace manufacturer, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at twelve, at the Assembly Rooms, Nottingham. Sol. A-twell, Nottingham

LEE, JOSEPH, tin plate worder, Warrington. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 22, at twelve at office of Sol. Moore, Warrington

LEIGH, THOMAS, farmer, Ashton-upon-Mersey. Pet. Nov. 17 Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sols. Gardner and Horner, Manchester

LEONARD, WILLIAM, waterman, Milford Haven. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at two, at the Guildhall, Carmarthen. Sol. Perry, Pembroke Dock

LIGHT, CHARLES LLEWELLYN, civil engineer, Stockwell-park-rd. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barker, St. Michael's-house, Cornhill

MAIN, JOHN HENRY, boot manufacturer, Princes-st, Spitalfields. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at two, at office of Sol. Barnard, White Lion-st, Norton Folgate

MAYNARD, JOHN, grocer, Cheltenham. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at eleven, at office of Sol Marshall Cheltenham

NATHAN, SAMUEL LEWIS, jeweller, Hatton-gdn. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 9, at two, at Ridler's hotel, Holborn. Sols. Messrs. Lewis, Ely-pl, Holborn

OSBORNE, HENRY ERNEST, optician, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 19. Nov. 28, at half-past eleven, at office of Sols. Broomhead, Wightman, and Moore, Sheffield

PRESBURY, JOHN, farmer, Boylestone. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 6, at three, at the White Hart hotel, Uttoxeter. Sol. Wilson, Burton-on-Trent

PRICE, JAMES, fishmonger, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 20. Nov. 29, at eleven, at office of Sol. Essery, Bristol

REED, GEORGE SOMMERS, builder, Ilfracombe. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 2, at two, at the Queen's hotel, Ilfracombe. Sol. Bencraft, Barnstaple

RIGBY, JOHN, watchmaker, Blackburn. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 3, at twelve, at office of Sols. Messrs. Ainsworth, Blackburn

ROBINSON, THOMAS, innkeeper, Middleham. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 4, at one, at office of Sols. Messrs. Teale, Bedale

SKERRITT, CHARLES, plumber, Ruddington. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 5, at twelve, at office of Sol. Belk, Nottingham

SMITH, BENJAMIN, hay dealer, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Walker, Leeds

SMITH, BENJAMIN, coal dealer, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 5, at ten, at the Ship Inn, Barrow-in-Furness. Sol. Bradshaw, Barrow-in-Furness

SMITH, ENOS, shoemaker, Chilmark. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at three, at offices of Sol. Hill, Salisbury

SMITH, FRANK, grocer Middlesbrough. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 3, at eleven, at Mrs. Barker's Temperance hotel, Middlesbrough. Sol. Bainbridge, Middlesbrough

SOMERS, JOHN BARNES, farmer, Pinner. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 15, at two, at offices of Sol. Venderpump, South-square, Gray's-inn

STACEY, ALFRED, general dealer, Petersfield. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at four, at the Dolphin hotel, Petersfield. Sol. King, Portsea

STANTON, JAMES, and LONGMORE, JAMES, ironmasters, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 19. Nov. 21, at twelve, at the Talbot hotel, Oldbury. Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury

STEED, WILLIAM, builder, Bookham-st, and New North-road, Hoxton. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 10, at one, at office of Sol. Hooper, City-rd, Finsbury-sq

STEVENSON, WILLIAM, cotton manufacturer, Marsden. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 5, at three, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester

STICKELLS, GEORGE THOMAS, Ventnor. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 2, at one, at R. Jones and Co, Lancaster-pl, Strand. Sol. Durrant

WALLACE, WILLIAM THOMAS, hotel keeper, Dorking. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 3, at three, at the Guildhall coffee house, Gresham-st. Sol. Baker, Old Jewry-chmbs

WEBSTER, GEORGE, general shop keeper, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 2, at eleven at office of Sol. Williams, Bristol

WELLS, HENRY ROBERT, stationer, Kingsland High-st, and Devonshire-ter, Kingsland. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 15, at two, at L. Lass, accountant, 60, Cornhill. Sols. Wilkins, Blyth, and Marsland, St. Swithin's-la

WHITE, ROBERT, victualler, Harrold. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Stimson, Bedford

WILKINSON, JAMES, soda water manufacturer, Warrington. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 24, at twelve, at office of Sol. Moore, Warrington

WILLIAMS, SAMUEL JOHN, bootmaker, Mount-st, Grosvenor-sq. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at twelve, at 90, Lower Thames-st. Sol. Farnfield

WILLMOTT, WILLIAM BALLARD, blacksmith, Queen's-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at eleven, at the Brewery tavern, Goldhawk-rd, Shepherd's-bush

WOODCOCK, WILLIAM, confectioner, Bridlington-quay. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 5, at three, at the Black Lion hotel, Bridlington. Sol. Harland, Bridlington

WORTHY, JAMES, dealer, Templecombe. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at three, at the Greyhound hotel, Wincanton. Sol. Davies, Sherborne

WRIGHT, WILLIAM, draper, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Quinn, Liverpool

Gazette, Nov. 25.

AINSWORTH, ALFRED BROOKS, merchant's clerk, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at office of Sol. Cotton, Liverpool

ARMSDEN, EDWARD, quarryman, Llanberis. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 6, at two, at office of Sols. Picton, Jones, and Roberts, Carnarvon

BARBER, EDWIN, hairdresser, Glossop. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at two, at offices of Sols. Pinnell and Butterworth, Manchester

BEARDSWORTH, HENRY, scale cutter, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Tattershall, Sheffield

BELCHER, GEORGE GRESHAM, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at three at office of Sol. Leigh, Manchester

BENNETT, ROBERT CHRISTIE, architect, Melcombe Regis. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at twelve, at the Auction Mart, Melcombe Regis. Sol. Howard, Melcomb Regis

BENT, EDWARD STANLEY, attorney at law, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at three, at the Waterloo hotel, Manchester. Sols. Messrs. Heath, Manchester

BERRY, VICTORIA HELENA, refreshment-room keeper, Southport Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Culshaw, Liverpool

BISSICKS, JOSEPH JAMES, oilman, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 9, at two, at office of Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co. accountants, Bristol. Sol. Thick, Bristol

BLEST, DAVID, shoemaker, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 6, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Stratton, Wolverhampton

BOULD, ENOCH, greengrocer, Hanley. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley.

BRAYFORD, JAMES, butcher, Hanley. Pet. Nov. 12. Nov. 27, at two, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley

BRIDGWOOD, WILLIAM, cab proprietor, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 4. Dec. 3, at two, at the Clarendon hotel, Birmingham. Sol. Gem, Aston

CADIOT, EMANUEL HORACE, and JOHNSTON, JOHN, commercial agents, Queen Victoria-st. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 4, at twelve, at offices of Kemp, Ford, and Co., public accountants, Walbrook. Sol. Wickens, Palmerston-bldgs, Old Broad-st

CARTER, THOMAS, cattle salesman, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 4, at twelve, at office of Sol. Free, Birmingham

CHAPMAN, JOHN EDWARD, farmer, Southgate. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sols. Lewis, Munns, and Longden, Old Jewry

CHEAL, JOHN, accountant, Reigate. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at eleven, at the Market hall, Redhill. Sol. Greece, Redhill

COLLINSON, CHARLES, earthenware manufacturer, Burslem. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 3, at twelve, at office of Heaton, solicitor, Burslem

COLLINS, JAMES, builder, Weedington-rd, Kentish-town. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 18, at twelve, at 21, Wellington-st, Strand

CORDER, MICAH, granary keeper, Corders Sufferance Wharf; Shad Thames, Horselydown; and Burnt Ash-hill, Lee. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Kearsey, Old Jewry

CROSSLEY, JOHN THOMAS, commercial traveller, Plymouth. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 10, at ten, at office of Sol. Square, Plymouth

CROWTHER, WILLIAM, monetary agent, Southsea. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 6, at two, at Totterdell's Commercial hotel. Sol. King, Portsea

CUMMINGS, JOHN, ironfounder, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at two, at office of Sol. Sewell, Newcastle-upon-Tyne

DAVIES, DAVID, tobacco merchant, Laird-rd, Drummonds-road, Bermondsey. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 10, at one, at offices of Sol. Barron, Queen-st, Cannon-st

DELAHOY, SAMUEL, tailor, Wisbeach. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at one, at office of Sol. Ollard, Wisbeach

DUDD, GEORGE EDWIN, grocer, Weston-super Mare. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at one, at the Railway hotel, Weston-super-Mare. Sols. Reed and Cook, Bridgwater

JACKSON, ROBERT BURRA, upholsterer, Lyall-pl, Pimlico. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sols. Philp and Behrend, Pancras-la, Queen-st

FITZROY, ELIZABETH, widow, Halton, near Leeds. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 3, at three, at office of Sols. Fawcett and Malcolm, Leeds

FOSTER, HENRY BENTON, coal merchant, Althorpe-rd, Wandsworth-common. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 5, at twelve, at office of Sols. Miller and Smith, Salters'-hall-ct, Cannon-st

GEORGE, JOHN DANIEL, grocer, Cheddar. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sol. Hobbs, Wells

GROOM, JAMES, licensed victualler, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 9, at three, at office of Sol. Dallow, Wolverhampton

HAMMOND, HORACE, builder, Tunbridge Wells. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 10, at ten, at the Camden hotel, Tunbridge Wells. Sol. Palmer, Tunbridge

HANDLEY, PHILIP, potato salesman, Pump-row, Spitalfields-market, and Bethnal-green-rd. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 3, at a quarter-past ten, at the Victoria tavern, Morpeth-rd, Bethnal-green. Sol. Long, Lansdown-ter, Grove-rd, Victoria-pk

HODGSON, JOHN OSWALD, licensed victualler, Long-acre. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 18, at three, at the Enterprise, Long-acre. Sol. Armstrong, Old Jewry

HUBBARD, JOHN MICHAEL, ship's steward, Lynton-rd, Bermondsey. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at three, at office of Sol. Webster, Basinghall-st

HUGHES, WILLIAM, draper, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Rylance. Manchester

ISAACS, ISAAC, tailor. Westminster-bridge-rd. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sol. Moss, Gracechurch-st

JONES, ABRAHAM, boot manufacturer, Oldbury, and Tipton. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 9, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Shakespeare, Oldbury

JONES, EVAN, builder, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 6, at one, at office of Sols. Simons and Plews, Merthyr Tydfil

JONES, FREDERICK, hatter, Oxford-st. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Geoghegan, Lincoln's-inn-fields

JONES, WILLIAM FRANCIS, draper, Llandudno. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 6, at twelve, at the Queen hotel, Chester. Sol. Louis, Ruthin

KIRKMAN, JAMES, draper, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at three, at offices of Sol. Walker, Leeds

LEE, ANN, refreshment-house keeper, Wigan. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Ashton, Wigan

LEVI, JOSEPH, clothier, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at eleven, at office of Sol. Cottrell, Birmingham

LYONS, LEWIS HENRY, umbrella manufacturer, Red Cross-st. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Ladbury, Collison, and Viney, Cheapside. Sols. Messrs. Lewis, Ely-pl, Holborn

MASSINGHAM, GEORGE PLOWRIGHT, watchmaker, Boston. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sol. York, Boston

MILLS, GEORGE, bootmaker, Sunderland, and South Shields. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 5, at three, at the Commercial hotel, Leeds. Sol. Bell, Sunderland

MITCHELL, THOMAS, saddler, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 8, at four, offices of Sols. Messrs. Binney, Sheffield

MORRY, JOSEPH, and LACHLAN, THOMAS TENNANT, picture dealers, Cornhill. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 15, at four, at the Freemasons' tavern, Great Queen-st, Holborn. Sol. May

NADIN, ALFRED, brush dealer, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sols. Fawcett and Malcolm, Leeds

PAGE, JAMES, Salford, and Heaton Norris. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester.

PARKER, JOHN CHARLES, builder, Hastings, and Rye. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at four, at office of Mr. Cogswell, 72, Gracechurch-st. Sol. Rashleigh, Old Kent-rd, London

PERTWEE, JAMES FREDERICK, farmer, Layer-de-la-Hay. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 13. at eleven, at the Saracen's Head hotel, Chelmsford. Sol. Arthy, Chelmsford

POTTS, RICHARD, builder, Sunderland. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 9, at three, at offices of Sol. Steel, Sunderland

PUGH, FREDERICK CHURCHILL, dress maker. Liverpool. Pet. Nov 20. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Ivey, public accountant, Liverpool. Sol. Hughes, Liverpool

RADFORD, CHARLES, wholesale provision merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 4, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Bond, Manchester

RIGBY, GEORGE, hat manufacturer, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 12, at eleven, at the Pitt and Nelson hotel, Ashton-under-Lyne. Sol. Lord, Ashton-under-Lyne

RILEY, RICHARD CHARLESWORTH, manufacturing chemist, Birstal. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Ibberson, Heckmondwike

ROBERTS, JOHN, grocer, Warrington. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at three, at the Spread Eagle hotel, Manchester. Sols. Grundy and Kershaw, Manchester

SCOTT, FALLOWS, tailor, Cockermouth. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Wicks, Cockermouth

SEAGRAVE, GEORGE, SEAGRAVE, FREDERICK, and SEAGRAVE, CHARLES, commission agents, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 10, at two, at offices of Hime, Liverpool. Sol. Pearson, Liverpool

SENIOR, AMOS, yarn spinner, Kirkburton. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sols. Robinson and Johnson, Huddersfield

SKIPWORTH, SARAH, widow, farmer, Billericay. Pet. Nov. 20 Dec. 9, at two, at the Saracen's Head hotel, Chelmsford. Sol Dubois, King-st, Cheapside

SLATER, CHARLES JOSEPH, merchant, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Wake, Sheffield

SPIERS, WILLIAM, chemist, High-st, Leyton. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Lind, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand

STORR, JOHN EDWARD, jeweller's agent, Faunce-st, Kennington-pk. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 4, at two, at office of Sol. Barnett, New Broad-st

STONIER, JOHN BENSON, writing clerk, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 5. Dec. 5, at ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham

STRINGER, WILLIAM, beerhouse keeper, Huddersfield. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 11, at eleven, at office of Sol. Sykes, Huddersfield

TARRY, HARRIS, baker, Grosvenor-pk, Camberwell. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 4, at three, at office of Sols. Stocken and Jupp, Leadenhall-st

TAYLOR, HENRY, custom house agent, Leadenhall-st. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 2, at three, at the Bell inn, Edmonton. Sol. Philp, Pancras-la, Queen-st

TODD, ELLEN, boot manufacturer, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 4, at three, at office of Sols. Fawcett and Malcolm, Leeds

TRUMAN, WILLIAM SAMUEL, wine merchant, Botolph-la, Eastcheap. Pet. Nov. 12. Dec. 1, at twelve, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Smith, Leadenhall-st

USHAW, WILLIAM, watchmaker, Kingston-on-Hull. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of Pickering, accountant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sols. Stead and Sibree, Hull

WARE, EDWIN, wine merchant, Portsea. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 10, at two, at office of Brett, Milford, Pattinson, and Co. 150, Leadenhall-st, London. Sols. Cousins and Burbidge, Portsmouth

WHITEHURST, WILLIAM, and WHITEHURST, HUGH, elastic web manufacturers, Derby. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of Sol. Leech, Derby

WIGG, SAMUEL LEGGETT, builder, Kessingland. Pet. Nov. 21 Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of Sol. Seager, Lowestoft

WILKINSON, SAMUEL, licensed victualler, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 6, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton

WILLIAMS, FRANCIS, builder, Kingston-on-Thames. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Buckland, Kingston-on-Thames

WILSON, BENJAMIN COULTMAN, house agent, Belgrave-sq. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sols. Linklater, Hackwood, Addison, and Brown, Walbrook

WINTERS, GEORGE, tailor, Hitchin. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 8, at eleven, at Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Shillitoe, Hitchin

WOOD, JAMES, builder, Hampton-st, Walworth-rd. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at one, at office of Sol. Rose and Thomas, Salisbury-st, Strand

WOOTTON, GEORGE, draper, Clophill. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Conquest, Bedford

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Nov. 18.

FRANCIS, HENRY, beershop keeper, Sands-end, Fulham

PRICE, RICHARD PURCELL, wine merchant, Shrewsbury

Gazette, Nov. 21.

HULLOCK, JOHN CHARLES, grocer, Hull

Dividends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Stevens, A. auctioneer, final, 7s. 4d. Harle, Bristol

Almond, R. D. Charles-st, Wigan, first, 2s. 6d. At Trust. W. Wood, King-st, Wigan.—Jackson, T. grocer, first, 1s. At Sol. Green, Bradford.—Evans, T. grocer, first and final, 3s. 4d. At Roose and Price, 26, North John-st, Liverpool.—Ford, E. and T. Oporto merchants, second, 1s. At Cooper Brothers and Co. 14, George-st, Mansion house.—Griffin, E. tailor, second and final, 2s. 6d. At Trust. C. Payne, 27, John William-st, Huddersfield.—Hick, G. C. corn dealer, first, 6s. 7d. At Dean, Gordon, and Binde, accountants, 23, Albion-st, Leeds. Trust. J. Gordon.—Hudson, E. bookkeeper, first and final, 1s. 6½d. At Trust. T. W. Read, 20, Castle-st, Liverpool.—Jones, T. potato merchant, first and final, 2s. At Trust. J. Routh, Royal Insurance-bldgs, Parkrow, Leeds.—Macartney, D. Paddington, 7½d. At Sols. Minet Smith and Harvie, 6, New Broad-st. Trust. T. Allen.—Naylor, H. T. merchant, first, 0½d. At Trust. A. W. Chalmers, 5, Fenwick-st, Liverpool.—Palmer, A. Hadlow, final, 2s. 3d. At Trust. J. Winser, Hadlow, Tunbridge.—Shaw, T. joiner, first and final, 5s. At Trust. J. Simpson, Bank-chmbs, Nottingham.—Young, G. watchmaker, first and final, 6d. At Messrs. Haigh and Atkinson, Wide-st, Selby

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Apply at Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-st, Lincoln's-inn, between 11 and 2 on Tuesdays.

Cooper, J. W. clerk in the commissariat department, late Parkrd, Notting hill

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

HUNT.—On the 23rd inst., the wife of Joseph Hunt, Esq., solicitor, Ware, Herts, of a son.

MERRICK.—On the 23rd inst., at 2, Rayner's-road, Lime-grove-park, Putney, S.W., the wife of William Merrick, solicitor, of a daughter.

DEATH.

JOHNSTONE.—On the 21st inst., at 33, Montpellier-terrace, Cheltenham, aged 82 years, the Hon. J. W. Johnstone, Judge in Equity of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.
All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
Re THE MATLOCK OLD BATH HYDROPATHIC COMPANY (CASE OF THE MANCHESTER FINANCE CORPORATION)—Company—Allotment of fully paid-up shares in satisfaction of debt 441
Ex parte MORLEY; Re WHITE—Bankruptcy — Partnership — Business carried on by surviving partner..... 442
Re HEATHCOTE'S TRUSTS—Will—Construction—Gift over 444

ROLLS COURT.
ROWSELL v. MORRIS—Practice—Administration suit—Want of parties 446
ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE v. EARL OF EFFINGHAM—Charity—Trust to present living 447

V.C. MALINS' COURT.
RAGGETT v. FINDLATER—Trade mark—Injunction..... 448
HAWES v. LONGRIDGE—Will—Intention to exclude from residuary devise 449
KITCHIN v. IBBETSON—Bill of sale—Bankruptcy of administratrix—Assumption of absolute ownership 450
BIDE v. HARRISON—Will—Construction—"Sums of money due to me" 451
BARON PENEDO v. JOHNSON—Foreign state — Proper plaintiff — Demurrer 452

V.C. HALL'S COURT.
PEARSE v. PEARSE; PEARSE v. PEARSE—Pleadings—Exceptions—Scandal 453

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
MERSEY DOCKS AND HARBOUR BOARD (appts.) v. OVERSEERS OF LIVERPOOL (respts.)—Poor rate—Dock rates—Tenant's profits 454
BOARD v. BOARD—Statute of Limitations—Possession under invalid will..... 459

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
KNOWLMAN v. BLUETT—Statute of Frauds (27 Car. 2, c. 3), sect. 4 462

COURT FOR DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES.
GODERICH v. GODERICH—Matrimonial suit—Judicial separation—Custody of children given to the wife..... 465
POWELL v. POWELL AND JONES—Matrimonial suit—Alimony pendente lite—Allowance under deed of separation 466

CROWN CASES RESERVED.
REG. v. ADEY—Larceny—Bailee 467
REG. v. DAYNES AND WARNER—Larceny—Bailee — Offence punishable summarily 468
REG. v. COGGINS—Larceny — Receiving — Accessory in second degree 469

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY v. WITHAM—Tender by public contract—Good consideration—Unilateral contract 471
HUNT v. GOODLAKE—Libel—Declaration — Unsupported innuendos 472
WHITE AND ANOTHER v. BENEKENDORFF—Broker—Material alteration—Whether broker may treat himself as principal 475
BRIDGE v. DAINE—Court of Passage—New trial—Motion in Superior Court for—Judge's notes..... 477
PEYTON v. HARTING—Practice—Interrogatories—Insufficient answers 478
EPSWORTH AND OTHERS v. THE ALLIANCE MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY—Marine insurance—Insurable interest... 479

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS..... 83
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week..... 83
Libels in Newspapers 85
The Estates of Partners in Bankruptcy... 85
Title to and Transfer of Land 86
Contracts by Married Women affecting Real Estate 87
LAW LIBRARY 87
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 88
Notes of New Decisions 88
Two Model Actions at Law..... 89
Court of Common Pleas 89
Heirs-at-Law and Next of Kin..... 89
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 89
Creditors under Estates in Chancery 89
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 89
Reports of Sales 89
To Correspondents 90
MARITIME LAW:—
Specimens of a Code of Marine Insurance Law..... 90
REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Notes of New Decisions 90
COUNTY COURTS:—
The Judicature Commission and the County Courts 90
Bradford County Court 91
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Court of Bankruptcy..... 92
Bradford County Court 92
LEGAL NEWS 94
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ... 94
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 94
LAW SOCIETIES:—
Organisation among Solicitors 95
Manchester Law Students' Society 96
Articled Clerks' Society 96
Law Association 96
Law Students' Debating Society 96
Union Society of London 96
Solicitors' Benevolent Association 96
Peterborough Articled Clerks' Debating Society 96
LEGAL OBITUARY..... 96
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Cause List 97
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS 98
THE GAZETTES 98
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 99

The Law and the Lawyers.

A DEPUTY County Court Judge has decided that a pig is an investment within the first section of the Married Women's Property Act 1870. The married woman in question was "separated" from her husband by the operation of the poor law, he being in the workhouse. She managed to earn some money while he was there, which she invested in a pig. She, however, sold the pig to a creditor of her husband, who, instead of paying for the pig, claimed a set-off. The Deputy-Judge held that the pig was the plaintiff's separate property, and gave her judgment. We think, however, that the Deputy-Judge should have drawn the plaintiff's attention to sect. 13 of the same Act, which makes a married woman liable to the parish for the maintenance of her husband. The pig or its proceeds ought certainly to have been claimed by the guardians—and we might thus have had a very neat decision on this eccentric Act of Parliament.

THE position taken by Dr. KENEALY in summing up the evidence for the defence in the Tichborne trial, namely, charging conspiracy upon the part of Romish ecclesiastics for the purpose of obtaining the control of the revenues of the TICHBORNE estates, reminds us that the Tichborne case is but an incident of the warfare which that learned gentleman is professedly waging against the Church of Rome. He was counsel for the defendant in Darby v. Ouseley in 1856, which was a very singular action. It was brought by a tide-waiter at Liverpool for a libel imputing to him that he was a rebel and a traitor by reason of his being a Roman Catholic, and a member of a certain Roman Catholic Society for the Conversion of England "by prayers and other means" to the Roman Catholic faith. The defendant's counsel, at the close of the plaintiff's case, did not intimate that he proposed to call witnesses and (having elicited on cross-examination of the plaintiff that he was a Roman Catholic, and considered himself bound by the canons of councils, and believed in the authority of the Pope) in his speech proposed to refer to the notes of the Rheimish Testament, and to describe to the jury the nature of the Austrian Concordat with the Church of Rome, and to read certain canons of the Councils of Lateran and Sens, Trent and Thurles, with a view of showing that the principles and opinions entertained by eminent members of the Roman Catholic Church were inimical to loyalty. The judge ruled that these matters were irrelevant and the defendant's counsel having in his speech repeated the charge against the plaintiff, the learned judge commented upon this in his summing up as evidence of malice, expressed his opinion on the libel in strong terms, and having left the question to the jury as one merely of amount of damages, they found for the plaintiff. This verdict the full court declined to disturb.

SIR GEORGE JESSEL would appear to be setting an admirable example in more ways than one. His judgments which we have already reported, are remarkably pithy and concise, a good specimen being that afforded by Paull v. Mortimer (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 418.): "Three executors allow an investment of 500*l.* to remain upon a security which is at the time quite insufficient. They then proceed to distribute the residue. One of them dies, and the legatee claims to be paid her legacy. The surviving executors, under a misapprehension of their duty, resist. The administration of the estate is thrown upon the court, and in the course of it they stop the suit by payment of the legacy. They then ask the executors of the deceased executor for the difference of the amount realised and the 500*l.*, which is paid. Now they claim the costs of their abortive resistance. I am at a loss to understand upon what principle such a claim can be supported. If a legacy is paid by mistake, executors cannot claim it back from the residuary legatees. If the omission to set apart a sum to meet this legacy were a breach of trust, of course the liability might be established. But it is not a breach of trust, and I hold that the representative of the executor is not liable for the costs of a resistance to the demand of the legatee, which was undertaken without notice to him. The summons must be dismissed with costs." The question in this bare form, it was stated, had not occurred before. In another case (Fothergill v. Rowland, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 414) Sir GEORGE JESSEL said he did not approve when at the Bar, and does not now that he is on the Bench, of the practice of not deciding a substantial question when it is fairly raised between the parties and argued, simply because it is raised by demurrer. He thought demurring ought to be encouraged, and questions thus speedily and cheaply determined.

LAW reform is attracting attention in the Australian colonies, and a somewhat remarkable article on the subject appears in the South Australian Advertiser for the 30th of last September, the object being to advocate the extension of the jurisdiction of the local courts. A very extraordinary illustration of elaborate pleading is given as evidence of the desirability of encouraging the simple procedure of the local courts. The pleading in question was a declaration in the case of the North Australian Company v. Blackmore, commenced three years ago, and still unsettled. The declaration is thus described by our contemporary: "It consisted of more than 650 pages of brief paper, equal to over 1300 pages of foolscap, containing about 5000 common law folios of seventy-two words each. The cost of a single copy of this immense monument of legal art, at the ordinary rate of 3d. per folio, would amount to the trifling sum of £62 10s., and it would take fifty days to write out such a copy." "The court," we are told, "when the simple and concise statement of the plaintiff's cause of action was produced, consisted of three learned and experienced Judges. Even they were incredulous at first. They refused to believe that the art of man, or the skill of a pleader, could manufacture such a simple and concise declaration as was presented to them. It was only the serious assurance of counsel that this formidable mass of paper was really the declaration in the action that at length convinced the court of the correctness of the assertion as to this 'question of fact.' On the trial of the cause all parties were happily spared the pending infliction of having these simple and concise pleadings read. This was dispensed with by general consent. Consequently, the trial was had without the plaintiff's own statement of his cause of action being read." Pleaders who indulge in this monstrous and antiquated form of declaring are the worst enemies of their own calling, and when the Judicature Act comes into operation it is to be hoped that conciseness and verbal accuracy will be carefully cultivated.

To the production of what documents a party is entitled at the hands of his adversary is a question of much practical importance, and there is a general principle that letters passing between co-defendants are not privileged from production though written after the dispute has arisen, and in contemplation of litigation, or even after the institution of a suit, and with a view to defence in the suit—except as to such parts thereof as contain the opinions of legal advisers consulted by the defendants: (Kerr on Discovery, 146.) A further exception was made by the case of Hamilton v. Nott (L. Rep. 16 Eq. 112), where one defendant was a solicitor, and acted as agent for the solicitor on the record to collect evidence in the suit. The letters which passed between him and his co-defendant were held privileged from production. The principle has been further illustrated by the case of Carr v. New Qrelrada Company, before Vice-Chancellor Malins on the 22nd ult., where it was sought to obtain production of correspondence which had passed between the company and their agent. The documents in question were rough notes kept, made and prepared by the agent, from which a statement was compiled for the use of an arbitrator appointed by the company on the occasion of an arbitration on the subject-matter of the suit. On the ground that the notes were compiled by an agent of the company they refused to produce them, and their refusal was held justifiable.

When our police are discovering such extraordinary capacity for false swearing and arresting harmless and unoffending people, it is some small satisfaction to find that the weakness is not confined to this country. A case recently reported from the Supreme Court of Illinois reveals a state of things in that State which we hope is not universal. Christopher Rafferty was found guilty of the murder of Patrick O'Meara, a policeman. In giving judgment in error, Judge McAllister said: "The record contains evidence tending to show that the homicide was committed by the prisoner in resisting the deceased, who was a policeman of the city of Chicago, whilst engaged, in connection with another policeman, whom he was aiding in the act of committing an illegal and wholly unjustifiable invasion of prisoner's liberty, by attempting to seize his person and take him off to prison without any authority to do so." The circumstances of the arrest strangely resemble those to which we are rapidly becoming accustomed. The prisoner, to use the Judge's own words, "was sitting quietly and peaceably by a table in a saloon, when O'Meara, the deceased, and another policeman of the name of Scanlan, came in. O'Meara immediately pointed the prisoner out to Scanlan. The prisoner, upon seeing O'Meara, addressed him in a friendly manner, asking him to take something to drink, or a cigar, which was declined." He was then told that the police had a warrant for his arrest; the deceased stood at the door to prevent his escape, and then the fatal shot was fired. There was not the slightest pretence that the prisoner had been accused or suspected of having committed any felony, or that at the time he was in the act of committing a misdemeanor or even any violation of a city ordinance. The warrant held by the police was one of several which had been signed by a magistrate in blank, to be filled up by the inspector as "emergency" required. At the trial this warrant was excluded from the attention of the jury, and upon that ground the prisoner's counsel excepted. The Court of Appeal has held that evidence of the illegal nature of the warrant was admissible, the law being clear that in resisting an illegal arrest, if death result, the crime is manslaughter—not murder.

The question of the payment of the costs of liquidation proceedings where bankruptcy supervenes is one which should be understood by practitioners, and we therefore direct their attention to Ex parte Jeffery; re Hawes (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 433). There a debtor being unable to attend to his business, some bill of sale holders, with his consent, took possession of his estate, and called a meeting in order to make some arrangement with his creditors generally. Being, subsequently, apprehensive that his estate was being sold at an undervalue, he instructed his solicitor to file a petition for liquidation. A receiver was forthwith appointed, and took possession of the estate. At the first meeting, however, the proposition to liquidate was negatived by a large majority, and the next day a petition in bankruptcy was presented against the debtor, and he was adjudicated bankrupt. Thereupon the question arose as to how the costs of the liquidation proceedings should be paid. An application was made by the debtor to a County Court Judge for an order for payment of them out of the estate, but it was dismissed with costs: hence the appeal. The 292nd of the Bankruptcy Rules 1870 says "that where bankruptcy occurs pending proceedings for or towards liquidation by arrangement, the proper costs incurred in relation to such proceedings shall be paid by the trustee out of the debtor's estate, unless the court shall otherwise order." The Chief Judge states clearly the only circumstances under which the court should otherwise order. He said that he was of opinion that unless a corrupt and fraudulent motive could be proved against the bankrupt, the costs of the liquidation proceedings ought to be paid, and, in the particular case, the only possible motive of the debtor in filing his petition was to preserve the property for the general body of creditors. A contention was raised that liquidation by arrangement being negatived before the filing of the bankruptcy petition, the bankruptcy did not take place while the liquidation proceedings were pending. His Lordship, however, does not appear to have given any attention to this point, and the debtor got his costs of the liquidation and of the application in the court below.

The question whether not only the Croydon Court, but all County Courts within a radius of twenty miles of London should not be abolished, and their jurisdiction vested in the metropolitan courts is one of great importance, and the only objection that can be raised to it must necessarily come from those locally interested, and the meeting held at Croydon on the 25th ult. gives expression to the local feeling temperately and properly. But the public, we conceive, frequently suffer by being obliged to go into districts, carrying with them London counsel and attorneys, in cases which might with much greater convenience be tried in the City, or at Westminster or Marylebone. We suppose, however, that the argument which has been advanced in favour of maintaining the Home Circuit applies equally to the maintenance of the local courts round London. The Judicature Commission, however, has advised their removal, and, this being so, a very strong case must, we anticipate, be made out to save them from extinction. The tendency of recent legislation lies decidedly in that direction. The question of imprisonment for debt was also discussed at the Croydon meeting. On this question we think that the resolutions which were passed at the meeting, and which we publish elsewhere, call for observation. We quite agree that the power to commit to prison those who can and will not pay their debts vested in both the Judges of the Supreme and County Courts, ought to be continued, but we can see no reason for excepting from it any debtor, however much his debt or his earnings, always provided he comes within the clear and simple category of "being able, and not willing to pay;" and indeed, this is one stronger reason for enforcing payment on the humbler classes according to their ability, because to them credit is absolutely necessary at certain times of want of work, or ability to work, and it is only by the guarantee afforded by the imprisonment of the dishonest that the honest can get credit. We know of no alteration that is required in the law which now wisely rejects all questions of fraud in contracting the debts, which are left to the criminal tribunal, but resolves all cases into the simple question—is the debtor able and not willing to pay his just debts? We hope, notwithstanding, the report of the committee of last session as to the law of imprisonment for debt, that we shall not have another added to the many recent changes for change sake.

If we may form an opinion upon some observations which appear in the last number of the Irish Law Times, we need have little scruple in reforming the courts of law in Ireland, and abolishing the intermediate Court of Appeal. We have rarely seen so graphic a description of utter confusion as we find in the columns of our contemporary, and in order that we may not understate the case, we will give his own words: "As the courts are at present constituted," we are told, "they do not satisfy the public or themselves, either in the manner they discharge their own business, or review each other's decisions. The courts of first instance, or those which hear and decide cases of pleading and practice on the common law side of the Hall of the Four Courts, and control the trial and decision of questions of law and fact after their disposal at Nisi Prius, are jealous of their respective regulations, differ in their views, clash in the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and when reviewing each other's decisions in the Court of Error, as at present constituted, "pay each other off," without much consideration or respect. When the Common Pleas and Exchequer fancy they catch the Queen's Bench at fault, they trip them up unmercifully, and when the Queen's Bench come round in their turn to take either of their former critics to task, they feel disposed to return the compliment with interest. We sometimes find great questions decided on appeal to the Court of Error, by a minority of judges overruling the decision of the majority, and the public are obliged to be content with the law thus laid down, although the reasoning, as well as the number, of the dissentients is more to be relied on. As to the courts of the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellor, on the equity side, we are constrained to say they have each their respective views, and although in the main they have earned the respect and confidence of the public, yet their practice and procedure are not what the Profession and the public desire, especially in the subordinate offices attached to each." This we venture to think is a lively Irish sketch, and one in which implicit trust ought not to be placed. It is hardly credible that a number of educated gentlemen entrusted with the highest functions in the State, should administer the law according to the bias of their personal feelings. The Court of Appeal our contemporary is rather shy of, simply observing that matters there have become too exciting to be pleasant. Anything that the Legislature may do with these courts cannot assuredly make them worse than they are—if we believe the Irish Law Times.

THERE seems to be as much inconsistency in the decisions arrived at by the Masters sitting for the Judges at Chambers in matters relating to articled clerks' notices, as there is want of uniformity in the notices themselves. Previous to a Preliminary Examination it is necessary to give one calendar month's notice prior to the day of examination. For an Intermediate one calendar month's notice, prior to the first day of the term in which the candidate proposes to present himself for examination, is requisite. In the case of a Final Examination a clear term's notice must be given. Our last week's number contained a report of two cases determined by Masters sitting at Chambers. In the first application was made, on the 22nd ult., for leave to enter copies of an admission notice, given for Michaelmas Term last, in the Judges' books one day previous to the day appointed for admission, the rules of Hilary Term 1853 prescribing the period when such entries should be made, prior to the Term preceding that in which admission as an attorney is sought. The application seems to have been grounded on an affidavit of the applicant's ignorance of the rules, and an order was made in the terms of the application. In the second case, as reported by us, an order was solicited on the 24th ult. for leave to give to the Masters of the Queen's Bench, and to enter in the same Judges' books, a similar admission notice for the ensuing Hilary Term, and the application was refused. The anomaly is apparent. In the first case the publication for one Term of the applicant's name in the usual list must have been taken as being all that was considered necessary, and the entry in the Judges' books a matter of no consequence. In the latter, the same publication for one term in the same list, coupled with the fact of the entries standing in the Judges' books for a period of nearly two months prior to admission, does not suffice, notwithstanding the statement on oath of the applicant that he had been led into the error of not giving his notice in due time, by supposing that a similar notice to that required in the case of an Intermediate Examination was all that was necessary. We commend these cases to the consideration of the various Articled Clerks' Societies in London and the provinces.

LIBELS IN NEWSPAPERS.

THE case of Gilbert v. Enoch, recently tried before Mr. Justice Brett, seems to have attracted a somewhat undue amount of attention, as if some novel principle had been established, or the old principles applied in some new manner. The alleged libel was contained in a criticism on a comedy, the criticism amounting to this: That the play was coarse, vulgar, and indecent. What did Mr. Justice Brett tell the jury? First, that however hostile in spirit and wrong as a criticism—rather a loose expression, we think—if it does not travel away from the work to slander the author, it is no libel. If the criticism goes beyond the work, and attributes to the composer some conduct or motive which, if truly imputed, would in the eyes of reasonable persons of right sentiment, cause a feeling of hatred, ridicule, and contempt for him, it is a libel. Bona fides and honest belief in its truth are then immaterial. What is there in this which was not already established law? Was it not said, in effect, by Lord Ellenborough, when he directed the jury, in Tabart v. Tipper (1 Camp. 351), thus: "That publication I shall not consider as a libel which has for its object, not to injure the reputation of any individual, but to . . . expose a vicious taste in literature, or to censure what is hostile to morality?" And further on, "Reflection upon personal character is another thing. Show me an attack on the moral character of the plaintiff, or any attack upon his character unconnected with his authorship, and I shall be as ready as any Judge who ever sat here to protect him." Or what did Mr. Justice Brett say which was not in effect said by Lord Tenterden in Macleod v. Wakley (3 C. & P. 313)? "Whatever is fair and can be reasonably said of the authors of works, or of themselves as connected with their works, is not actionable unless it appear that, under the pretext of criticising the works, the defendant takes an opportunity of attacking the character of the author; and then it will be a libel." We do not, however, wish to detract from the admirable clearness and conciseness of Mr. Justice Brett's direction, which gives us the law applicable to the case under consideration in terms not to be misunderstood.

There is a feature in the case apart from the direction which is of some interest and deserves discussion. In the action of Mr. Dixon against the Pall Mall Gazette, if we remember rightly, references to other criticisms which has reviewed his book favourably were held inadmissible. In the action of Mr. Gilbert against the same newspaper the line pursued in criticising his previous plays was adverted to to support the suggestion that the critic had been actuated by malice, and this was allowed. The principles upon which matter other than that constituting the libel is admitted has been more than once discussed, and it is clear that such matter should be accepted with great caution. Chief Baron Pollock, in Darby v. Ouseley (25 L. J., Ex., at p. 229) says: "The rule is that other paragraphs or passages of a document put in by the plaintiff are to be read as part of his evidence, if they are connected with, or construe, or control, modify, qualify, or explain the passages which have been read by the plaintiff; but that was not the case in the present instance. Not only was the article an entirely distinct one, but it did not at all interpret, modify, or explain the passages put in by the plaintiff, and it was entirely irrelevant to it; except that it related to the plaintiff, it was upon a different subject." From this it would seem that in order to entitle a plaintiff to put in anything besides the article complained of, to give colour to it, it must not only refer to him but be relevant to the subject matter; and if it is sought to prove malice by such other publication it must directly affect the alleged libel. "The subsequent article put in by the plaintiff," said the Chief Baron in Darby v. Ouseley, "was only admissible as evidence of malice, and the passage proposed to be read for the defendants could not be deemed part of that evidence, because it did not at all affect it." In that case the plaintiff's counsel, in order to show actual malice, put in a number of the defendant's paper subsequent to that containing the libel. The defendant's counsel proposed to read as part of the plaintiff's evidence a paragraph in the same paper referring to the action which had then been commenced by plaintiff, but Mr. Justice Willes, not considering that such paragraph was one in any degree mitigating, modifying, or explaining the article put in as evidence of actual malice, ruled that it was not to be read as part of the plaintiff's evidence.

We think it may be contended, therefore, that, in strictness, the fact that in previous articles a newspaper has pursued a course apparently inimical to an author, ought not, unless actually affecting the subject-matter complained of, be admitted as evidence of malice. But publications subsequent to the article complained of may be taken together with it so as to prove malice. Malice, in strictness, is a question of law upon the libel itself, and the libel must be taken in connection only with anything subsequent which controls, explains, or aggravates it.

The course which has been pursued in connection with the case of Gilbert v. Enoch is somewhat extraordinary, and one which we think ought not to be encouraged. Although the jury found both parties innocent of any offence, Mr. Gilbert has resorted to the newspapers to reiterate his charge against the Pall Mall Gazette, and the Pall Mall Gazette has printed its justification, saying in effect that the jury were not warranted in adding anything to their verdict, and that what they did add—namely, that the play was innocent and inoffensive—was untrue. The press generally seemed highly pleased with the verdict and the expression of the jury, and we think both parties might well have rested content. As it is, neither party is satisfied; even the Pall Mall, which has the verdict, quibbling concerning the observations of the jury. Obviously juries would do well to remember the privilege which Mr. Justice Brett reminded a jury a few days since that they enjoy, of giving no reasons for their verdict. The Pall Mall is now seeking to prove that the jury were wrong in saying that the play is innocent, and certainly it would seem that if the play is innocent, the criticism was a libel. Trial by jury will be worth very little if the litigation is to be prolonged in the columns of the press. And, as a rule, comments by a litigant upon his own case are dangerous. (Strauss v. Francis, second action.)

THE ESTATES OF PARTNERS IN BANKRUPTCY.—I.

NUMEROUS cases with reference to the administration of the estates of partners in bankruptcy, show clearly enough that the subject is not without difficulty, and it is desirable that the established principles of the bankruptcy law with reference to it should be well understood. We will first consider what is joint estate.

A good illustration of the questions which may arise as to what is joint and what separate estate, is furnished by Re Rowland and Crankshaw (L. Rep. 1 Ch. App. 421). The arrangement there was this. Crankshaw was to employ Rowland as his traveller and superintendent for fifteen months; Rowland to purchase goods for Crankshaw without commission, and to receive a salary of £150 a year, and 10 per cent. on the profits remaining after deducting the salary; the business to be carried on under the firm of Rowland and Co.; and that at the end of the fifteen months a partnership should be formed between them on certain terms. In the March previous to the July at which the partnership was to be entered into, Rowland was adjudged bankrupt, and on the day following Crankshaw was also adjudged bankrupt on a separate petition. The question arising on the appeal was whether there was any partnership—whether the estate was not all the separate estate of Crankshaw. Lord Chancellor CRANWORTH said, "When two partners are bankrupts, all the property must go in payment of all the creditors. In the administration of bankruptcy it has been the object from the earliest times to apportion the estate as fairly as possible between the joint and the separate creditors. There is often much difficulty in doing this satisfactorily, but some rules have been clearly laid down, for instance, that the joint property pays the joint creditors and the separate property pays the separate creditors." His Lordship then held that as Crankshaw suffered Rowland to trade in the name of the firm, any persons trading with him were entitled to say that Rowland and Crankshaw were the persons with whom they dealt, and that the goods were joint goods.

In the next place, assume that there is a partnership but no joint estate. The law is clear that the joint creditors rank as separate creditors against the separate estates of the respective partners; but the existence of any joint estate, however small—and though it appear that after payment of costs there will be nothing to distribute—prevents the joint creditors from proving against the separate estate. Yet, if the joint estate is so situated that it cannot be made available for the payment of the creditors, it will be regarded as though it did not exist.

There being a partnership clearly established, the next important consideration arises where one partner only becomes bankrupt. As regards the separate estate of the bankrupt partner, the rule is that until separate creditors are satisfied, joint creditors cannot prove against it. They may, however, prove under a separate adjudication, and may vote at any meeting of creditors. There are some exceptions to the general rule which are thus stated by Mr. Robson: If a joint creditor obtains a separate adjudication against one partner, he will be allowed to prove in competition with separate creditors, on the ground that as the adjudication is for their benefit, and he is precluded by petitioning from suing for his own debt, it would be inequitable not to let him come in with the separate creditors. And this privilege will be allowed to the petitioning creditor although the bankrupt may be separately indebted to him in an amount sufficient to sustain the adjudication. It will also be allowed, although as to part of the dividends received, the petitioning creditor may be a trustee for a joint creditor who, according to the general rule, could only prove as a joint creditor.

The operation of the rule prohibiting joint creditors from proving against the separate estate, was discussed by the Lords Justices in Lacey v. Hill; re Bailey's Claim (28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 86), in which Lord Justice James recognised the "number of nice and complicated questions arising from the rules in bankruptcy as respects joint and separate estates." His Lordship observed that "the rules which have been laid down are rough rules of justice, because some rule must be laid down for the purpose of keeping joint and separate estates distinct, and for paying the joint and separate creditors out of the one and the other." Before noticing the point in that case, it is necessary to look at Ex parte Topping (12 L. T. Rep. N. S. 3) which dealt with the right of a co-partner to prove against the estate of his insolvent partner. That is an important question, as affecting the rights of creditors, and Lord Westbury said that the established rule that a co-partner cannot be admitted to prove against the estate of his partner until the joint debts are satisfied, was intended for the benefit of joint creditors: and in cases where that intention fails, and the joint creditors are not benefited by the operation of the rule, the rule itself will cease. And he held that where the estate of a co-partner could not by possibility yield a surplus, the partner was entitled to prove—as he would not be thereby paying himself out of money which might be due to the joint creditors. Lacey v. Hill is the converse of the above, in which it was sought to take from the separate estate of an insolvent partner to pay the joint debts of the firm. A. was a partner in a banking firm, and on his becoming treasurer of a board of guardians, his partner B., and C. who was not a partner, became his sureties. The bank stopped payment, and A. died three days afterwards, and a suit was instituted in Chancery to administer his estate. The other partners in the firm were adjudicated bankrupts. A.'s joint and separate estates were both insolvent, but B.'s separate estate was solvent. When the bank stopped payment over £5000 was standing to the credit of the guardians. C. paid this amount in full, and was repaid a moiety of it out of B.'s separate estate, having previously been admitted to prove in the Chancery suit for the whole £5000. He also proved against the joint estate of the firm for the second moiety of the £5000. The trustee in B.'s separate bankruptcy sought to prove against A.'s separate estate for the moiety of the £5000 repaid to C. out of B.'s separate estate, but the Lord Justices refused the application on the ground that in reality the partnership received the money and owed it to the guardians. Lord Justice Mellish said that there was "a sort of joint and several liability." And here we get at the third class of partnership bankruptcies. First, we have a partnership bankrupt with and also without joint estate; secondly, one partner only bankrupt; and thirdly, the partnership bankrupt and a contest between separate estates of different partners over what is a "joint and several liability." As to this third head Lord Justice Mellish said: "It would be a violation of every principle of equity that the joint estate, whose default was the origin of the whole difficulty, should get from the private estate of one of the partners that which would be to the prejudice of the separate creditors of that partner, and thus to enlarge the funds of the joint estate which has already received the whole of the guardians' balance."

TITLE TO AND TRANSFER OF LAND.

ALL attempts to render the transfer of land inexpensive and the title to it more secure, have hitherto signally failed. Several of our most learned lawyers have tried to unravel the difficulty, but with different degrees of non-success, and the existing system of land registry is a farce played at a cost of ten times the fees received.

Why have there been so many failures? Do the present body of landowners hope to keep their number select by allowing the cost of obtaining the article to be far heavier than there would seem any occasion, and by keeping up the wholesome dread that a person who has bought and paid, probably dearly, for land has to run the risk of some one turning up with a better title to it than he has obtained? We think no cost nor dread of the kind will prevent people buying land when they can get it, although it is in most cases one of the worst pecuniary investments to be obtained, the return upon the outlay being in most cases less than it would have been had the money been invested in Consols.

There are two matters to be solved—one, the title of the holder is to be made quite secure; and, two, the mode of transfer is to be simplified. Everyone who has had experience in conveyancing knows that in every large property a great number of persons, born and unborn, are interested, and that it sometimes happens that a person whose name has been inserted in the settlement as a remote beneficiary, comes into possession. In all large settlements, the husband, the lord of the soil, has a life estate, his wife a jointure secured by a term of years given to trustees; then the eldest son has an estate given to him which he is capable of converting into absolute ownership, but which, if he allows matters to remain, will devolve on his eldest son, and so on ad infinitum. Younger sons and daughters are provided for by means of the term of years, under which the trustees can raise portions by a sale or mortgage. The property, in case there happens to be no children, is then generally settled upon the brothers and the other remoter relations of the lord and their children, estates for life only being given to persons in existence, to whom are also given powers of jointuring wives and portioning children.

To make the title to landed property quite secure, one of two steps must be taken; either all limited estates, and the power to create new ones, must be swept away; or else, which appears more rational, there should be two kinds of estates as at present, viz., legal and equitable estates; the former should always be absolute, with full powers of selling, letting, and otherwise dealing with the land, without the slightest reference to the interest of any person beneficially entitled. The equitable estate should, subject to dealings therewith by the person in whom the legal estate is vested, entitle the beneficiaries to the enjoyment of the property and the rents and profits; but as regards the land itself, the beneficiaries should have no estate or claim, except whilst it is held by the trustee. In the event of any dealing with the property of which the beneficiaries disapproved, they should, except in the case of actual fraud, have a remedy only against the trustee personally.

To simplify the transfer of land, registration is absolutely necessary. A registration of dealings, as at present in force in Middlesex and Yorkshire, is totally useless for the purpose, the sole object there being to prevent fraudulent dealings, and the effect being to increase the expense of each transfer. What is wanted is a system by which it can be shown at once who is the person legally entitled to sell and to confer an indefeasible title, and this can only be done by a compulsory system of registration, under which all land will appear, together with the name of the person authorised to sell.

Such a system, although expensive, would not be impossible. In cases where land is settled, the trustees should be entered as the owners; and where there are no trustees, the person or persons to be so entered should be the nominee or nominees of the tenant for life and remainderman.

To prevent expense there should be two registers, one provisional, the other absolute. To get placed upon the latter, an applicant should prove that he, or the person or persons for whom he is a trustee, had or have a saleable title, or that he has been upon the former register for five years, and no steps have been taken to remove his name. To get placed upon the former register, an applicant should prove that he or his beneficiary has a primâ facie holding title.

Registration appears to us to be principally a question of expense. Should the public bear it or should the landowners? The object of registration is to make titles more secure and easier of transfer, and the practical effect will be to increase the value of land by at least the amounts now paid by the seller and purchaser, for the expenses of the transfer, less a certain per centage, which will be payable upon future transfers.

What matters it to the large majority of landowners that they may get short and absolute titles to their properties, under which they can easily deal with them, when their present titles are matters of public notoriety. Their ancestors have held the lands for ages, and their fondest wish is to keep them in the family. Instead of making lands more saleable, they would prefer a law of perpetual entail, and in the absence of such a law they do all in their power to prevent a sale, by prevailing upon their eldest sons, at the earliest convenient opportunity, to resettle the land. And, again, other persons have bought land with a desire to found families, and they do not wish to have it sold or made easily saleable.

To whom, then, would a system of registration be acceptable? Not to the public who hold no land, for the selling value of land would be proportionately increased; nor to the ordinary holder of land, because of the expense of registration. The only persons who would derive advantage are the owners of building estates and land jobbers. Why should the public be taxed for the benefit of these individuals, or why should all landowners be put to a heavy expense in registering because the system will be beneficial to a few of their number?

If the public are not to be benefited by registration, it seems only fair that they should not have to bear the expense of it, and it seems hard to throw the expense upon the landowners, who can have no delight in the results of the scheme. If, however, it be considered that the public will be benefited, they have clearly a right to demand that the system shall be compulsory, and, therefore, more likely to be self-supporting.

The question appears to be one for the landowners to settle amongst themselves. If they want to feel more secure in their titles, than they do at present, or to feel that they can transfer their property more quickly and inexpensively than they are at present able to do, they have only to speak out, and, doubtless, a satisfactory system will be soon brought forward; but in coming to any determination, they must bear in mind that the preliminary expenses of any system of registration will necessarily be heavy, and will fall upon themselves.

CONTRACTS BY MARRIED WOMEN AFFECTING REAL ESTATE.

[COMMUNICATED BY A SOLICITOR.]

IT is laid down in the last edition of Chitty on Contracts (1871, p. 179) that where an estate is devised to a woman in trust for sale, and she afterwards marries, she cannot, during the coverture, bind herself by contract to convey the estate so devised to her in trust. This doctrine is founded upon a case decided by Vice-Chancellor Giffard in 1868 (Avery v. Griffin, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 849; L. Rep. 6 Eq. 606), and it will be necessary to note the leading points therein in order to correctly interpret this doctrine of disability. There were three trustees with power to sell real estate, and one of them at the date of the will was a spinster. Before the exercise of the power the spinster married. The two other trustees and the married trustee, with her husband, gave to a solicitor ordinary verbal instructions to sell the trust estate by auction; and he accordingly entered into an agreement with the purchaser, as agent of the vendors, in the usual form, though the married trustee and her husband had not conferred upon him express authority to sign the agreement on their behalf. The vendors discovering that the estate had been sold at an under value, repudiated the agreement for sale on the ground that one of the trustees had become since her appointment a married woman, and therefore incompetent to act; and alleging that there was consequently no contract of sale with the purchaser. The purchaser filed a bill to enforce his contract, but the Vice-Chancellor held that he could not obtain specific performance of it upon the ground that "a feme covert could not bind himself by contract to convey an estate devised to her in trust for sale." This important judgment, couched in such general language, is somewhat ambiguous, and at first sight one is inclined to suppose that the Vice-Chancellor had regard to the facts of the particular case upon which he was adjudicating, and more particularly as neither the married woman nor her husband were express parties to the contract. The LAW TIMES reporter seems to have adopted this view, for in the Notes of New Decisions on Conveyancing (22nd Aug. 1868), referring to this case, he says: "It was objected that the contract was void because the husband of the married trustee had not assented to it, and so it was held." The Law Journal reporter, in his note of the case, says: "Bill for specific performance against trustees one of whom was a married woman, dismissed, as the feme covert could not bind herself by contract to convey."

In this state of uncertainty as to the effect of the Vice-Chancellor's judgment in Avery v. Griffin, it becomes necessary to refer to other cases. Nickoll v. Jones (15 L. T. Rep. W. S. 383), before Vice-Chancellor Wood, bears upon the question. There a compromise was entered into between the plaintiff and defendant in a probate suit, and an agreement signed by plaintiff and by one of the defendants, the husband, "for himself and wife," and by A. B. "as attorney for the wife." Interest in land of the wife was affected by the agreement, and though it had been made a rule of court, the Vice-Chancellor said the agreement could not be enforced because it was not acknowledged by the wife. The reporter's note is as follows: "No contract entered into by a married woman with a person who knows her to be married otherwise than by deed acknowledged, or by some act in court in which she is put at arm's length from her husband, can bind her real estate, even though she has for a long time led the other party to believe that she will abide by such contract, and he has on the faith of such belief irrevocably abandoned valuable rights." In the course of his judgment the Vice-Chancellor said, "The law had pointed out one way, and one way only, in which a married woman could bind her rights in real estate." This case disposes completely of the supposition that the element wanting in Avery v. Griffin was the consent of the husband. But there is the case of Wilkinson v. Castle (18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 100), decided by Vice-Chancellor Stuart, whose decision was affirmed by the Lords Justices on appeal, which seems to set at rest any ambiguity as to the effect of Avery v. Griffin. During coverture the wife became devisee in fee of certain property. The husband and wife entered into an agreement between themselves of the one part, and the purchaser of the other part, for the sale of the property. The agreement was signed by the husband and wife, and by the purchaser. There was some delay in preparing the conveyance deed, though the purchaser got into possession of the property, and the husband and wife sold through another solicitor to a third person and conveyed by deed acknowledged. The second purchaser filed a bill against the first purchaser in possession, praying for a declaration, that he was entitled to the property in question; the defendant set up his agreement claiming a prior equity; but it was held by the Vice-Chancellor, and also on appeal, that as he knew he was contracting to purchase the wife's estate, he took nothing under the agreement, and could not even compel the husband to convey his interest and receive an abated price. The defendant's counsel admitted that he could not ask for the performance of the contract so far as it affected the wife's fee simple, but only to the extent of the husband's estate by the curtesy. And in the judgment the Vice-Chancellor remarked "that the defendant claimed by an agreement of which it is impossible that he could obtain a decree for specific performance."

It would seem, therefore, that the ground of the decision in Avery v. Griffin, is based not upon the non-compliance with the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, nor upon the fact of the husband not being an express party, but upon the doctrine that when a feme covert and her husband enter into a contract to convey her real estate, such an interest in land passes to the contractee, as to contravene the provisions of the Statute for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries.

This appears to be a subject which has not received at the hands of the Profession the attention which it deserves. It is a matter of constant occurrence that the solicitor of a feme covert vendor goes to a sale and signs the contract as her agent in the ordinary form, and the purchaser's solicitor is content therewith. Where a husband and wife entitled in her right, or trustees, one of whom is a feme covert, seek to sell real estate, it is seemingly advisable to have executed when practicable, a conveyance upon trust to sell duly acknowledged by the married woman, but it is not quite clear what course should be taken in the case of those instruments where it has been held that there is no power to delegate a trust for sale.

LAW LIBRARY.

The Statutes Revised. Vol. IV., from 41 Geo. 3, to 51 Geo. 3, 1801-1811. London: EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE.

THIS volume covers only ten years, but the chronological table preceding the text shows how vast an amount of cumbrous matter has been got rid of by the revision. The work is printed in the same admirable manner which has characterised the publication.

NOTE.—A continuation of the Specimens of Codification of the law of Marine Insurance will be found under "MARITIME LAW."

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

THE Legal Practitioners' Society, whose advertisement appears in our issue of to-day, seems to have somewhat altered its tactics. The "defining the rules of etiquette of the Profession, and reducing them to a written code," viewed from a practical point of view, we certainly considered a reform (if the proposal can be so designated) not likely to be accomplished, and if accomplished hardly likely to produce very much good. Insofar as we can gather from the advertisement, this seems, at all events for the present, abandoned as one of the objects of the society. Then again, the "placing the government of the Profession on a sound representative basis;" this seems to have disappeared as an object of the society. As to this, no doubt in both branches there is much room for improvement, especially as regards the Bar; but the society would most assuredly find its work "love's labour lost," if it attempted such a reform without the hearty co-operation of both governing bodies, and both branches of the Profession. The society is one which in our opinion solicitors will do well to support, the main objects now being to bring about a fairer adjustment of the relations of the two branches of the Profession and to protect the Profession against the depredations of unqualified men. While such are the aims of the society it deserves, indeed commands, the support of the entire Profession. It may be that the society will resolve itself into two branches, one to represent the Bar and the other solicitors, each having separate committees, and acting to a certain extent independently the one of the other, but conferring together when mutual interests are concerned. This may be desirable, but we do not think there is at present in the two branches that feeling and disposition which will secure such a condition of things as one of the results of the present movement. No doubt solicitors have far the greater interests at stake; they have to work the amalgamation of the two principal societies—the Incorporated Law Society, and the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association—and they have to secure the further representation of the interests of solicitors by the establishment of properly organised local law societies working in conjunction with the chief society. The Legal Practitioners' Society should make the accomplishment of this one of its objects, for by this means it would probably relieve the society from further labour in putting a stop to the depredations of unqualified persons, which all the established societies ought to do their utmost to suppress.

THE complaint of a London firm of solicitors, which we published in our last issue, upon the subject of the charge of 6d. per folio for copies of affidavits issued from the chambers of the common law judges, will not, we hope, pass unnoticed. We have searched in vain to find when, and under what circumstances, the charge was increased from 4d. to 6d., and at what time the taxing masters recognised such payments as correct in bills of costs. There is no reason why the charge per folio for these copies should be greater than that allowed to the Profession for the same work. Moreover, the charge for such work in the Court of Chancery is to this day only 4d. per folio. Where an affidavit is long—and there are many of them—this charge operates as a wholly unnecessary tax upon suitors.

MANY of our readers are probably unaware that ever since the system of examinations, by the members of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, for admission on the roll of attorneys, was instituted, it has been usual for the council to dine together after each examination. The usual dinner recently took place in the hall of the Society in Chancery-lane, Mr. G. H. Janson, the president, in the chair. Among the visitors present on the occasion were Vice-Chancellor Hall, the Attorney-General, Mr. J. G. Talbot, M.P.; the Town Clerk of the City of London, the City Remembrancer, and numerous members of the Society, including those who filled the office of scrutineers at the recent election to fill vacancies on the council.

THERE seems to have been some considerable doubt until very recently as to whether a summons for leave to plead several matters was necessary, in the case of one of several pleas being that of payment into court. We understand that the masters have lately met and deliberated upon the question, and it is said that they have decided that the summons is unnecessary in cases where the doubt only arose in consequence of the plea of payment into court.

WE have received numerous letters from solicitors upon the subject of the statements made by more than one speaker, at the recent meeting of members of the Profession, to establish "The Legal Practitioners Society" in reference to the amalgamation of the two branches, we are authorised and requested to say that this is not, and never has been, for a moment in contemplation by the promoters of the society in question, who are entirely opposed to it.

WE express no opinion on the alleged misconduct of Mr. Pollard, of the Treasury, as reported in last Monday's papers, re The Tichborne trial, but we may observe that that gentleman, though in many of the daily papers described as one of the assistant solicitors to the Treasury, or words to that effect, is in fact not a certificated solicitor at all. As our readers well know, the so-called solicitor to the Treasury is a Queen's Counsel, and many of his subordinates are barristers, but we are not aware that Mr. Pollard is otherwise than simply one of the clerks of the department.

WE think it high time that the form of subpœna should undergo some alteration. The necessity for inserting at least two names as witnesses is not justified by modern requirements. It seems almost absurd that, in order to comply with this, solicitors should be obliged and permitted to insert a fictitious name where the subpœna is, in fact, only required for one witness.

A SOLICITOR writes to us to say that he knows of a case in which a City House Agent in a very large way of business is in the habit of preparing leases in such numbers that it is a source of income to the extent of hundreds of pounds a year, and that on a lessee's informing him what his, the lessee's solicitors would charge for preparing a lease, the land agent invariably replies that he will get it done for so many guineas less. The same solicitor assures us that, having lately instituted proceedings to enforce specific performance of a contract, being an agreement for lease prepared by the land agent in question, he was, owing to the imperfect way in which the document was prepared, compelled, under the advice of counsel, to abandon the proceedings and pay costs. We hope that our correspondent will feel it his duty to bring the case under the notice of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, for it is so serious and flagrant an offence against sects. 59 to 64 of the last Stamp Act and other earlier enactments, that we feel convinced the council will see the necessity of taking steps to enforce payment of the penalty or penalties. We certainly think that the term "instrument" used in some or one of these sections ought to, though it does not, include the preparing of wills, agreements under hand only, and powers of attorney. In all probability a not inconsiderable portion of leases in connection with property in London are prepared directly or indirectly by the large firms of land agents. We commend this matter to the consideration of the "Legal Practitioners' Society."

A FIRM of solicitors send us the following letter and the subjoined notice: "A poor widow in this town is being pestered with printed papers (similar to the one mentioned in the LAW TIMES of 1st Nov., p. 2), as to payment of a debt due to some person whose name is not disclosed, neither the amount of debt due, and intimating that if the debt be not paid within three days from the receipt of the paper, steps will be taken to obtain a warrant of execution against her goods, or a warrant of imprisonment for contempt of court. As no notice has been taken of the former papers, the inclosed form has now been sent to her. The woman is not aware that she has ever paid instalments towards the liquidation of any debt. If you, as the Editor of the Solicitors' Department, think fit in the interest of the Profession to give publicity to this paper, you can do so":

THE UNITED KINGDOM MERCANTILE OFFICES, LONDON.
Arrear Notice.

Sir,—The instalments towards payment of the debt due by you, as per payment paper in your possession, being in arrear, it is necessary to intimate that payment of all instalments due must be sent here by Tuesday next, otherwise steps for immediate recovery of the entire claim and expenses will proceed on the following day. We are, your obedient servants,

A. B. and Co. (Accountants).

Sevenpence added to the amount due, being the expense of this notice.

THE following law lectures and classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society: Monday, 8th, Class Conveyancing, 4.30 to six o'clock; Tuesday, 9th, ditto; Wednesday, 10th, ditto; Friday, 12th, Lecture, Common Law, six to seven o'clock. Students are not admitted after lectures have commenced.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

ADMINISTRATION — MINORS — NEXT OF KIN OUT OF THE COUNTRY—GRANT TO FIRST COUSIN.—The sole next of kin of the minor children of a deceased intestate were two uncles, both of whom had been absent from the country, and had not been heard of for many years. The minors elected a first cousin as their guardian, and the court, under the circumstances, made the grant to him, without citing the next of kin: (In the Goods of Burchmore, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 377. Prob.).

ADMINISTRATRIX — WIDOW RECEIVED HER MOIETY OF ESTATE—20 & 21 VICT. c. 77, s. 73.—An intestate dying in India, the government, in whose service he was, paid a moiety of his estate to his widow, and transmitted the other moiety to this country, to be distributed among his next of kin here. The court granted administration under the 73rd section to the representatives of the next of kin, limited to this particular sum of money: (In the Goods of Hughes, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 377. Prob.).

PRACTICE — INTEREST ON JUDGMENT FOR COSTS IN THE CAUSE—HOUSE OF LORDS—INTEREST UPON COSTS IN.—Where the judgment of a Superior Court is affirmed, with costs, in the Exchequer Chamber, and such decision of the Exchequer Chamber is subsequently affirmed, on appeal, by the House of Lords, who order the costs incurred by the successful party, in respect of the appeal, to be paid to him "the amount thereof to be certified by the Clerk of Parliament," the Superior Court has power to allow interest only on the sum for which judgment was originally signed in such Superior Court, for such time as execution has been delayed by the proceedings in the appeals to the Exchequer Chamber and the House of Lords, that is for the period between the date of the original judgment and its final affirmance by the House of Lords; but it has no jurisdiction or power to give interest on the costs incurred in such appeal. So held by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C.B., and Martin and Pigott, BB.): (Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company v. Gidlow, 29 L. L. Rep. N. S. 399. Ex.)

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—CHRISTIAN NAMES—NO LATENT AMBIGUITY—PAROL EVIDENCE NOT ADMISSIBLE.—A testatrix gave "to her niece Laura, the second daughter of her brother John Webber," certain chattels. In a subsequent part of her will she gave to "each of her neices, Laura Webber" and others, £50: and almost immediately afterwards "to each of her nieces, the said Laura Webber" and others £100: and divided her residuary estate equally between "the said Laura Webber" and three others. Testatrix had two nieces, one named Laura, the second daughter of her brother John, and the other named Laura Frances Tonkin, the daughter of her brother William. Held, that the testatrix having once clearly and accurately described her niece Laura, as Laura "the second daughter of her brother John," whenever she mentioned "her niece Laura" afterwards, she must be presumed to have meant the same person: there was consequently no latent ambiguity, and parol evidence was therefore not admissible to show which of the two nieces was meant: (Webber v. Corbett, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 365, V.C. M.).

FOREIGN PROCESS—PRIMA FACIE VALIDITY — TRESPASS — MALICIOUS ACTION.—Defendant entered into a charter-party with plaintiffs' agent for the voyage of plaintiffs' ship to Philadelphia, and advanced money in London to the agent upon his personal liability. Being unable to obtain payment he applied to and was refused by the plaintiffs, and he then directed an attorney at Philadelphia to proceed against the freight there upon the ship's arrival. Accordingly a writ of attachment, purporting to have issued from the District Court of Philadelphia in an action by the defendant against the plaintiffs, was served upon the captain, and the ship was seized. The captain paid the money under protest, but no steps had been taken in the action nor in resisting the attachment by the present plaintiffs. They now sued for trespass and conversion of the ship, for malicious process against the ship for a false claim, and for money received by defendant to plaintiffs' use. No evidence was adduced concerning the validity of the writ of attachment according to American law. Held, that by the comity of nations the process of foreign courts should prima facie be assumed to be valid; and that therefore the plaintiffs, not having obtained a favourable termination of the proceedings at Philadelphia, could not recover from the defendant: (Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 392. Q. B.)

TWO MODEL ACTIONS AT LAW.

THE two cases which we cut from the Times and print below, are perhaps unfortunate specimens of the business of the common law courts. In one of them a bad case seems to have been made infinitely worse by the conduct of the counsel engaged for the defence, on which we add no comments to those of the learned judge:—

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

MONDAY, DEC. 1.

(Before BRETT, J. and a Common Jury.)

GOFF v. LOVEGROVE.

Higgins was for the plaintiff; Huddleston, Q.C., Willis, and Fullarton were for the defendant.

This was an action brought to recover from the defendant certain chairs, which the plaintiff said were his. There was a count for slander, the words said to have been uttered accusing the plaintiff of theft and other acts of misconduct.

It appears that, the plaintiff having bought some chairs, the defendant came to his place of business with a van and an officer, said they were Government chairs, used the language complained of, and took them away. A man named Collins, from whom the plaintiff had bought these chairs, was arrested; an investigation was made at Slough, and he was committed for trial at Aylesbury. Eventually Collins, who was the defendant's servant, was convicted of stealing chairs, and sentenced to twelve months imprisonment. The chairs were marked "Lovegrove, Slough," and some of these marks had been obliterated.

The defence was that they were chairs made for Government, that Collins had stolen them, and that the plaintiff, well knowing that they were stolen, had bought them from him. The plaintiff, who admitted that he had been, in 1871, sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment for receiving stolen goods, was cross-examined at great length by Mr. Huddleston, but in the midst of his cross-examination,

The learned JUDGE suggested that Mr. Huddleston should wait and see what Mr. Higgins would ask the plaintiff, and what further proof he would give.

That learned gentleman called the plaintiff's wife, and closed his case.

BRETT, J., addressing the jury, said—Gentlemen, can you trust these witnesses?

After some consideration, the Foreman said—No, we cannot.

Higgins then elected to be nonsuited.

BRETT, J.—Such being the case, I must express my opinion, which is, that a more impudent action never was brought. The man is just out of prison, and he brings an action simply because Collins was not actually tried on the indictment for stealing chairs sold to him, the plaintiff having been found guilty previously on a charge of stealing property sold to some one else. It was not necessary to proceed on another charge. Not only is there no ground for this action, but it is a most impudent proceeding altogether.

The plaintiff was then called.

The defendant at once rose and said he was ready to take any further proceedings against the plaintiff which his Lordship might advise.

BRETT, J. replied that it was no part of his duty to give advice. In the course of the trial it was proved that the plaintiff had bought the chairs at a very low price from a cart or van having the defendant's name on it, and he and his wife both said it was a common custom in the trade to buy chairs from a van, and that they had often done so before. The plaintiff also said that he should give no more for picked out or selected chairs than for chairs rejected by the Government.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

(Before HONYMAN, J., and a Common Jury.)

TURNER v. HAZELL.

Shaw and Holl were for the plaintiff; and Frith for the defendant.

This was a case partly heard yesterday. It was an action to recover a sum alleged to be due from the defendant to a surgeon for fees, medicine, attendances, and consultations. It was said that the defendant had been injured in a railway accident, and that the plaintiff had agreed to charge him nothing, and to look to the Company for his remuneration. The now defendant, however, was nonsuited in his action against the Company, but he said that the now plaintiff had urged him to go on, and not to settle, as he should charge him nothing. His attorney also had, according to the defendant's statement, agreed to conduct the action gratuitously, but he had since "put in an execution and swept away all his property." The plaintiff of course denied that he had ever entered into any such agreement as the defendant set up.

On cross-examination, the defendant said that he did not believe that the jury in the action against the railway company said that he was not in the accident at all, or that he told the late Chief Justice Bovill that he was a returned convict. He admitted that he was asked some questions, but he did not know whether a warder from the hulks and two gaolers were shown to him. There were four gentlemen who stood up, and he was asked if he knew them, but he said that he did not. He thought it would be the counsel to the company who asked him if he was a returned convict. After several more questions from Mr. Shaw, the defendant said, "You have got a dirty client, and you are asking dirty questions, and I will not answer them."

On this the jury said they were quite satisfied, and after some discussion found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

Shaw applied for immediate execution, on which Frith said, "They are welcome, if they think they can get anything."

In the course of the present trial the learned Judge repeatedly remonstrated with the defendant's counsel for his mode of conducting the case, and on reference being made by him to passages in his own speech for the defence, his Lordship said he should not forget that speech to his dying day.

Verdict for the plaintiff, with immediate execution.

HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

MORLEY (Geo.), Gainsborough, York, landed proprietor. Next of kin to send in by Dec. 20, at the chamber of V.C. M. Jan. 8, at the said chambers, at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

CHARMAN (Hannah), widow, and CHARMAN (Thos.), gentleman, both of East Grinstead, Sussex. £122 1s. 9d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Thomas Charman, the survivor

EDEN (Geo. Morton), 73, Onslow-square, Brompton, Middlesex, Lieut.-General, two dividends on the sum of £966 13s. 4d., Reduced Three Per Cent. Annuities. Claimant Louisa Anne Eden, widow, administratrix, with will annexed, to Geo. Morton Eden, deceased.

HILL (Henry Finch), Green-hill, Harrow, Middlesex, farmer. £200 Three Per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Henry Finch Hill, acting executor of Henry Finch Hill, deceased.

LACY (Elizabeth Mary), Camden-street, Islington, Middlesex, spinster. £212 12s. New Three per Cent. (formerly New £3 10s. per Cent.) Annuities. Claimant, Richard Hall, administrator to Elizabeth Mary Lacy, deceased.

LEWELLIN (Very Rev. Llewellin), D.C.L., Dean of St. David's, Cardigan; LAWRANCE (Edward Billopp), Baker-street, Portman-square, Esq.; and SMITH (Col. John Thos.), Twellat House, Lee, Kent. One dividend on the sum of £1741 6s. 1d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Very Rev. Lewellin and Col. John Thomas Smith.

PULLEY (Emily Newell), Kidderminster, spinster. £200 Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Emily Newell Pulley, spinster.

SHAW (Charles), the Stock Exchange, gentleman. One dividend on the sum of £1039 17s. 11d. Three per Cent. Annuities; two dividends on £1912 17s. 6d.; two on £4990 8s. 10d; three on £4437 3s. 10d.; and four on £3937 3s. 10d., New Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Wm. Shaw, administrator to Chas. Shaw, deceased.

TELFER (Somerville), Philpot-street, Commercial-road, pawnbroker. £300 New Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Maria Telfer, widow, and John Ashbridge Telfer, executors of Somerville Telfer, deceased.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

COOPER (Jeremiah), Green-street, Piccadilly, Middlesex, Lieut.-Col. in H.M.'s 18th Regiment of Infantry, and Companion of the Bath. Dec. 6; T. H. and C. B. Hodgson, solicitors, The Courts, Carlisle. Dec. 15; V. C. M., at twelve o'clock.

GOODE (Henry S.), 44, Howland-street, Fitzroy-square, Middlesex, solicitor. Jan. 6; H. W. H. Lea, solicitor, 7, Furnival's-inn, Holborn, Middlesex. Feb. 6; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

GORDON (Ann), 47, Richmond-road, Islington, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 12; Clapham and Fitch, solicitors, 181, Bishopsgate Without, London. Jan. 26; V. C. H., at twelve o'clock.

HALLWORTH (Chas.), Maulden, Bedford, miller. Jan. 1; John Wright, solicitor, Ampthill, Bedford. Jan. 13; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

IHLER (John), 31, Ashburnham-road, Greenwich, Kent, gentleman. Dec. 24; J. Dingwall, solicitor, 8, Token-house-yard, Lothbury, London. Jan. 13; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

KENNEDY (Henry), Marine-terrace, Brighton, Sussex, Esq. Jan. 1; R. Grimshaw, solicitor, Prince Albert-street, Brighton. Jan. 16; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

LANE (Thos.), formerly of Grove End House, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, late of 18, Boscobel-gardens, Alpha-road, London, merchant. June 12, 1874; Jas. J. Stokes, solicitor, 101, Borough High-street, Southwark, London. June 24; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

MAPPIN (Wm.), Sheffield, provision dealer. Jan. 6; Wm. Wilson, solicitor, Sheffield, Jan. 20, M. R., at twelve o'clock.

MARSDEN (Jos. D.), 59, Friday-street, London, and Edmonton, Middlesex, solicitor. Jan. 2; Thos. F. Robinson, solicitor, 9, Tokenhouse-yard, London, Feb. 2, M. R., at twelve o'clock.

MOTT (Chas. F.), Hastings, Sussex. Dec. 20; Walter Cheesman, solicitor, Hastings. Jan. 8; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

RIGTON (Ellen S.), Southport, Lancashire. Jan. 5; Blagg and Sons, solicitors, Cheadle, Stafford, Jan. 15; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

SHEAT (Wm. H.), late of 35, Finborough-road, South Kensington, Middlesex, and formerly of Upton Manor, Essex, and some time since resided at Slashee's Hotel, Austin, Neveda, U.S. A. Feb. 14; Chas. Grundy, solicitor, 26, Bridge-row, Cannon-street, London. March 2; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

SIMMONS (Edwd.), 1, Elizabeth-place, Liepsic-road, Camberwell-road, Surrey. Jan. 1; J. G. Shearman, solicitor, 10, Gresham-street, London. Jan. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

TURNER (Mary), Derwent hill, Crosthwaite, Cumberland, widow. Dec. 24; Geo. Ansell, solicitor, Keswick. Jan. 12; V.C. H., at one o'clock.

WALKER (John), 5, Carrington-street, Nottingham. Jan 5; Samuel Brittle, solicitor, St. Peter's-chambers, Nottingham. Jan. 16; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

WEEKES (Thos.), Halling-wharf, Stratford, Essex, and Battersea, Surrey, limeburner. Dec. 31; R. Prall, solicitor, Rochester. Jan 11; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BELLINGHAM (John), Upper Clapton, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 1; J. & Brunskill, solicitor, 13, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex.

BIGMORE (Wm.), 24, Brook-street, Ratcliffe, Middlesex, labourer. Dec. 15; H. Ramsden, solicitor, 150, Leadenhall-street, London.

BORROW (Major John), 20, Pall-mall, London. Jan. 1; C. J. Borrow, Gillingham, Dorset.

BOULNOIS (John), 30, Sloane-street, Chelsea, Middlesex, upholsterer. Jan. 12; O. Richards, solicitor, 16, Warwick-street, Regent-street, Middlesex.

BOX (William), Woodland Mount, Cumberworth Half, Emley and Nortonthorpe Mills, near Huddersfield, fancy cloth manufacturer. Feb. 1; Hesp, Fenton, and Owen, solicitors, Station-street, Huddersfield.

BRYSON (John), late of Dorchester House, Beverley-road, Kingston-upon-Hull, formerly a timber merchant, and afterwards a shipowner and gentleman. Jan. 10; J. J. Thorney, solicitor, 10, Parliament-street, Kingston-upon-Hull CHEEK, Thos. F., St. Germain's Tavern, Forest-hill, Kent, and the White Lion, High-street, St. Giles's, Middlesex. Dec. 31; Hunter and Co., solicitors, 9, New-square, Lincoln's Inn, Middlesex.

CLEMOW, Wm. R., Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, London, Hotel-keepeer. Jan. 1; J. Price, solicitor, 12, Serjeants' Inn, Fleet-street, London.

DANGAR (Francis R.), late of Sydney, New South Wales, but temporarily residing at the time of his death at the Albany, Piccadilly, England, Esq. Feb. 24; C. J. Mander, solicitor, 9, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

DENNYSON (Ann), Bellerby, Spennithorne, York, widow. Jan. 1; Teale and Son, solicitors, Leyburn.

DOWSE (Samuel), Marsden, Almondbury, York, cotton spinner. Jan. 15; A. H. Owen, solicitor, Station-street, Huddersfield.

DYER (John), Great Cornard, Suffolk, gentleman. Jan. 1; Ransom and Son, solicitors, Sudbury, Suffolk.

FAULKNER (Geo.), Shanghai, China, merchant. March 30, Edmands and Mayhew, solicitors, 33, Poultry, London.

FRY (Chas.), Donnall's-row, High-road, Lewisham, Kent, corn and coal merchant. Dec. 16; Parker and Son, solicitors, Lewisham.

GARNE (Thos.), Broadmoor Farm, Sherborne, Gloucester, farmer. Jan. 10; Kendall and Son, solicitors, Bourton-on-the-Water.

GROVES (John), Lark-hill, St. Martin, near Manchester, retired glove manufacturer. Jan. 6; T. B. Huxley, solicitor, Worcester.

GUNNELL (Richard P.), Woodford, Northampton, Esq. Jan. 6; Archbould and Hawkins, solicitors, Thrapston.

HARINGTON (Martha), Surbiton, Surrey, widow. Feb. 2 Loughborough and Sons, solicitors, 23, Austin-friars, London.

HARRIS (Edward), Froome Farm, near Dorchester, yeoman. Jan. 1; G. Symonds, solicitor, Dorchester.

HARRIS (Louisa), 60, Oxford-terrace, Hyde-park, Middlesex, widow. Jan. 1; H. Harris, 34A, Moorgate-street, London.

HEDGES, Thos. P., Bristol, accountant. Jan. 17; J. and H. Livett, solicitors, Albion Chambers, Small-street, Bristol.

HENLY, Alexander, 330, Fulham-road, Middlesex, and 31, Cannon-street, London, merchant. Dec. 31; Horace W. C. Chatterton, solicitor, 4, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

HOGG (Charles), Lanesfield, Cheltenham, Esq. Dec. 17; Ticehurst and Sons, solicitors, Essex-place Cheltenham.

HUTCHINSON (James), Bishop Auckland, Durham, grocer and parish clerk. Jan. 10; Bowser and Ward, solicitors, Bishop Auckland.

LINES (Wm.), 56, Clissold-road, formerly known as 27, Park-road, St. Mary, Stoke Newington, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 10; R. and W. B. Smith, solicitors, 7, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

LUKE (Wm.), Charlestown, St. Austell, Cornwall, merchant. Dec. 31; Shilson, Coode, and Co., solicitors, St. Austell.

LYON (Chas. J.) late of 51, Park-walk, Chelsea, Middlesex, and formerly of 12, Coleshill-street, Eaton-square, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 1; Nicholson and Herbert, solicitors, 23, Spring-gardens, Charing Cross, Middlesex.

MAKIN (Jos.) Monks Eleigh, Suffolk, farmer. Jan. 6; Robinson and Co., solicitors, Hadleigh, Suffolk.

MALTBY (Thos. K.), New Hinksey, Berks, gentleman. Dec. 29; Wm. H. Walsh, solicitor, Oxford.

MARQUES (Elizabeth C.), Twyford, near Reading, Berks, widow. Jan. 28; J. C. Wootton, solicitor, 2, Finsbury-circus, London.

MARTYN (William), 17, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 24; G. E. Thomas, solicitor, 8, Regent-street, Middlesex.

OLIVER (James), Lambourne Cottage, Bow-road, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 15; W. H. Oliver, solicitor, 64, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

PINCHBECK (Lucy), 97, Queen's-road, Peckham, Surrey, spinster. Dec. 31; B. W. Jones, solicitor, 3, Walbrook-buildings, Walbrook, London.

PORCHER (Sarah), Park-corner, Winchfield, Southampton, widow. Dec. 31; White and Co., solicitors, 19, Great Marlborough-street, London.

REYNOLDS (William J.), 32, St. James's-street, and 31, Claverton-street, Pimlico, Middlesex, print seller and publisher. Jan. 14; C. H. Hodgson, solicitor, 10, Salisbury-street, Strand, Middlesex.

RIDER (Mary A. E.), Ramsgate, Isle of Thanet, Kent, widow. April 6; M. and O. Daniel, solicitors, Effingham-street, Ramsgate.

ROBERTSON (Robert), Morpeth, Northumberland. Dec. 20; B. Woodman, solicitor, Newgate-street, Morpeth.

SMITH (Chas.), 14, Green-street, Wellington-street, Blackfriars-road, and 18, Grove Hill-terrace, Grove-lane, Camberwell, Surrey, sugar refiner and vinegar maker, Dec. 31; W. J. Myatt, solicitor, 2, Abchurch-yard, Cannon-street, London.

STACEY (Benjamin), Cliff Cottage, Corton, Suffolk, Esq. Jan. 1; Thos. Day, Saxmundham, Suffolk, and Charles Webb, 45, Cranbourne-street, London.

SWATTON (William), formerly of Gloucester Villa, Croydon-grove, West Croydon, late of Sydney-road, Stockwell, Surrey, gentleman. Jan. 8; J. L. Dale, solicitor, 8, Furnival's-inn, Holborn, London.

THORPE (Mary A.), Bank-street, Sheffield, widow. Dec. 1; Rodgers and Thomas, solicitors, Bank-street, Sheffield.

TOMLINSON (Wm.), 194, Essex-road, Islington, Middlesex, draper. Jan. 14; Phelps and Sidgwick, solicitors, 3, Gresham-street, London.

TORRIANO (Chas. J.), late a lieut. in the 2nd Native Veteran Battalion in the Hon. East India Company's service, who died at Vizagapatam, East Indies. April 4, 1874; Hensman and Nicholson, solicitors, 25, College-hill, London, E.C.

WALKER (Francis), Bellerley, Spennithorne, York, gentleman. Jan. 1; J. Teale and Son, solicitors, Leyburn.

WALLIS, Jas., Kingston-upon-Hull, merchant. Jan. 15; Stamp and Co., solicitors, Quay-street Chambers, Hull.

WHATELEY, Geo., 41, Waterloo street, Birmingham, and of the Cedars, Ampton-road, Edgbaston, near Birmingham, solicitor. Feb. 1; H. P. Bowling, East Lodge, The Mall, Hammersmith.

WHITE (John), late of the Oriental Club, Hanover-square, Middlesex, and 23, Hanover-square, Esq., formerly surgeon in the Service of the East India Company, on the Madras Establishment. Jan. 13; Lee, Pemberton, and Reeves, solicitors, 44, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

WISEMAN (Jas.), Heathfield-terrace, Halifax, York, gentleman. Jan. 15; Wavell and Co., solicitors, 20, George-street, Halifax.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Wednesday, Nov. 26.

By Messrs. EDWIN FOX, and BOUSFIELD, at the Mart.

Stockwell-park-road.—The Stockwell Grammar School, term 39 years—sold for £140.

City.—No. 38, Bartholomew-close, freehold—sold for £410.

Thursday, Nov. 27.

By Messrs. HARDS and VAUGHAN, at the Mart.

Rotherhithe.—No. 18, Princes-street, freehold—sold for £270.

By Messrs. NEWSON and HARDING, at the Mart.

Canonbury.—No. 3, Douglas-road, term 73 years—sold for £400.

Barnsbury.—No. 163, Hemingford-road, term 69 years—sold for £510.

Upper Holloway.—Nos. 25 and 29, Alexandra-road, term 85 years—sold for £555.

Nos. 1 to 6, Stanley-terrace, term 85 years—sold for £1530.

Kennington-lane.—Nos. 73 to 76, Devonshire-street, term 5 years—sold for £180.

By Messrs. GADSDEN, ELLIS, and Co., at the Mart.

Tower-hill.—No. 2, Postern-row, freehold—sold for £1080.

Shoreditch.—No. 194, High-street, The Eagle Beer-house, freehold—sold for £1310.

No. 195, adjoining—sold for £1190.
No. 70, Holywell-lane—sold for £800.
Whitechapel-road.—No. 138, The Lord Rodney's Head, freehold—sole for £2000.
Nos. 9 and 10, Hope-place—sold for £235.
Aldgate.—No. 34, Mitre-street, term 10 years—sold for £80.
Bethnal-green.—Freehold ground-rent of £10 per annum—sold for £220.

To Correspondents.

James A. Tucker.—You are entitled to present yourself for Intermediate Examination in Easter Term 1874, by giving the necessary month's notice. We do not think that the post of paid organist would be regarded as a contravention of the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10, so long as it does not interfere with service under articles; but it is wise in such a case as that which you put that the consent of the principal should be obtained. Read the case of Ex parte Greville, reported in our last week's issue, page 70, and the case of Re Peppercorn, therein referred to. —Ed. Sols. Dept.

MARITIME LAW.

SPECIMENS OF A CODE OF MARINE INSURANCE LAW.

By F. O. Crump, Barrister-at-Law.

(Continued from page 435, vol. lv.)

PARTICULAR AVERAGE—LOSS.

Definition.

Loss arising from damage accidentally and proximately caused by the perils insured against or from extraordinary expenditures voluntarily incurred for the sole benefit of some particular interest:

Arnould, 1st edit., 253; Boulay-Paty, Cours de Droit Commercial, vol. 4, p. 481; Code de Com., art. 403; Benecke Pr. of Ind., p. 165, 166; Phillips, sect. 1422.

Note.—Expenses incurred which fall on the insurer by virtue of the sue and labour clause must be distinguished from particular average. The French law, however, includes such expenses under the term particular average. Code de Com., art. 403; 4 Boulay-Paty, Droit. Mar. 481.

Ship.

Loss.

The following losses are allowed as particular average: Sails split or blown away by the extraordinary force of the wind; cables parted or washed from the deck if properly kept there; masts sprung; spars carried away; planks started; damage by the vessel being so strained that its shape is distorted and its value materially diminished; loss of boats; tearing off the sheathing; breaking of the upper works, or timbers, or any part of the ship; damage by accidental straining; or by lightning; or by fire; or by collision; or in a justifiable engagement; and loss by plunder and force and while the ship is in possession of captors or pirates:

Phillips, sect. 1424.

Wages and provisions of crew engaged in repairing damage for which underwriters are liable, but not otherwise:

2 Phillips, sect. 1429, p. 175; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. Mass. 472; Arn. (4th edit.) 784; Boulay-Paty on Emerigon, vol. 1, p. 619.

French Law.—This expenditure is particular average during delay to repair, and also during quarantine: (Code de Com. a 403, pars 4 and 5.)

Adjustment.

Ship.

Under valued policies the basis of adjustment is the value in the policy, unless manifestly fraudulent:

Barker v. Janson, L. Rep. 3, C. P. 308; Shawe v. Felton, 2 East, 109; Haigh v. De la Cour, 3 Camp. 319.

Under open policies it is the value of the ship at the commencement of the risk:

Stevens on Average, 190; Beneke Pr. of Ind. 133.

Note (a).—In open policies, therefore, the underwriter pays the same aliquot part of the sum he has agreed to insure as the damage or expense of repairing it, is of the ship's value at the commencement of the risk. In valued policies he pays the same proportion of the valuation in the policy.

Note (b).—A ship being valued at different sums in different policies the sum recoverable is liable to be diminished by the sum already recovered under other policies on the same risk for the same loss.

Bruce v. Seals, 1 H. & C. 769; 32 L. J. Ex. 132; Bousfield v. Barnes, 4 Camp. 227; North of England Iron Steamship Company v. Armstrong, L. Rep. 5 Q. B. 244; Arn. 4th edit., 292, et seq.

If a ship is repaired at a port of distress and totally lost before arriving at her destination, the cost of the repairs is recoverable in addition to the total loss:

Livie v. Janson, 12 East, 655 (per Lord Ellenborough); See Le Cheminant v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 367; Stewart v. Steele, 5 Scott's N. R. 927.

If not repaired when lost the repairs form no ground of claim. But if the ship is sold unrepaired the average loss is recoverable:

Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649, 668 per Lord Campbell.

Practice.

When the damage has been repaired one-third new material for old is deducted(a):—unless the ship be on her first voyage(b), or she fail to come again to owners' hands without his default(c):

(a) Da Costa v. Newnham, 2 T. Rep. 407; Poingdestre v. Royal Exchange Assurance Company, Ry. & Moo. 378.

(b) Fenwick v. Robinson, 3 C. & P. 323; Piric v. Steele, 2 Mood & Rob. 49; 8 C. & P. 200.

(c) Arn. Mar. Ins. 4th edit. 1839; contra, Humphrey v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Mason's Rep. 429.

American Law.—The deduction is made though the ship be new:

Nickels v. Maine Fire and Mar. Ins. Co., 11 Mass. Rep. 253; Dunham v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns Rep. 215; Phillips 1431.

The value of the old materials is deducted from the nett expense of the repairs, after deducting the one-third.

Arn., 4th edit., 840.

American Rule.—The value of the old materials is applied towards the payment of the new. The third is then deducted from the balance.

2 Phillips, p. 181.

Repairs at a port of distress are paid for by underwriters at the rate prevailing at that port.

Benecke Pr. of Ind., 459—61; Center v. American Ins. Co., 7 Cow. N. Y. 564.

Goods sold to pay for repairs at a port of distress, are paid for according to their clear value at the port of destination, or if sold for more, the larger sum may be recovered.

Arnould, 841 (n. 3).

Freight.

[See this title, sub-title "Partial Loss."]

Under valued policies the underwriter pays only such proportion of the value stated as the freight lost bears to the full intended cargo.

Under open policies the loss is adjusted upon the gross proceeds of the freight at the port of destination, and the underwriters pay the actual amount of freight loss:

Arnould (4 edit.), 843.

Cargo.

Under valued policies the basis of adjustment is the value of the cargo stated in the policy.

Under open policies it is the prime cost on board.

The underwriter pays the aliquot part of the original value estimated by the proportion of loss. This loss is ascertained by comparing the gross produce of the sound with the gross produce of the damaged sales:

Johnson v. Sheddon, 2 East. 581; St. on Av. 92.

A portion of cargo shipped in separate packages being lost, and another portion damaged, it is usual to adjust the loss separately.

Where several articles are insured together, and each suffers a particular average loss, the loss must be adjusted separately on each:

Arn. 4th edit. 830.

Note.—There being a sale of damaged goods with a view of comparing sound and damaged values, the charges of such sales are added to the amount of the loss after its quantum has been ascertained and the whole is then apportioned on the underwriters in the usual way.

Stevens on Average, 148—150; Benecke Pr. of Indem. 436, 437.

The loss is generally adjusted at the port of destination on the gross proceeds or market value there.

Arn. 4 edit. 831; Phillips, sect. 1434.

Goods being unloaded at a port of distress, found damaged, and sold to prevent further deterioration, the claim is adjusted as a salvage loss.

Arn. 4 edit. 832.

If the assured, for reasons of his own, puts an end to the risk at a port short of the destination, loss by sea-damage should be adjusted upon the same principles as at the port of destination.

Arn. 4 edit. 832; 2 Phillips, sect. 1467.

Particular average on memorandum articles is recoverable if it amounts to 5 per cent. on the gross proceeds of the sound sales:

Arn. 4th edit. 832.

There being only part of a full intended cargo on board, the loss under a valued policy is adjusted upon the proportion which the damage bears to the whole intended cargo.

On a continuing policy attaching to different parcels of goods successively and indiscriminately, the loss is adjusted on the proportion which the sum insured bears to the value of the goods at risk on board at the time of the loss:

Crowley v. Cohen, 3 B. & Ad. 478; Arn. 4th edit. 833; Phillips, s. 1471.

Where no particular mode of proving damage to goods is stipulated for, the assured is not subject by usage to any condition, as to a survey of the damaged goods:

Rankin v. American Ins. Co., 1 Hall N. Y. 619.

Profits, &c.

If the profits are valued, and a part of the goods are lost or damaged, the assured must prove what proportion of the profits that would have accrued on the goods having arrived sound he has lost by reason of their being damaged or a part of them lost, according to the state of the market, and he will be entitled to recover a corresponding proportion of the amount at which the profits are valued.

Under an open policy upon profits the assured must prove what amount of profit would have accrued on the goods had they arrived sound:

Phillips, sect. 1473.

Where the loss on goods is by expenditure and not by damage to them, it is not a loss on profits, unless specifically so agreed in the policy:

Phillips, sect. 1475.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Judgment Creditor—Interest in Land not capable of actual Delivery in Execution—27 & 28 Vict. c. 112.—By the Law of Judgments Amendment Act (27 & 28 Vict. c. 112) a judgment creditor has no charge on the land of his debtor, although he has issued a writ of elegit and obtained a return from the sheriff, where the interest of the debtor in the land is not capable of being actually delivered in execution: (Hatton v. Haywood, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385. V.C. M.)

Will—Maintenance and Education—Discretion of Trustees—Effect of Administration Suit.—Where a testator by his will gives his trustees a discretionary power of advancement for the maintenance and education of children presumptively entitled under the will, the court will not control the trustees in the exercise of their discretion, because a decree has been made in a suit for the administration of testator's estate: (Brophy v. Bellamy, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 380. Chan.)

COUNTY COURTS.

THE JUDICATURE COMMISSION AND THE COUNTY COURTS.

A large and important meeting was held at the Croydon Town-hall, on the 25th ult., under the presidency of Dr. A. Carpenter, J.P., for the purpose of protesting against the evidence given before the Judicature Commission, to the effect that it would be for the public convenience that the Croydon County Court should be abolished.

The chairman in introducing the business of the meeting, expressed an opinion that it would be not only unwise but unjust to remove the business of the County Court of Croydon to London. Having commented upon the hardship that would be inflicted upon tradesmen and the community generally by compelling them to go to London to recover a small debt, the chairman said a resolution on this subject would be submitted to the meeting, and respecting a proposal which had been made to abolish the system of imprisonment for debt. On this subject there might be a difference of opinion, but he must say that it would be unwise to take from County Court judges the power they possessed of sending persons to prison who could pay and would not. This was, he believed, the class of persons who would be the most affected by the abolition of imprisonment, and it was the very class against whom tradesmen and other creditors should be protected. It would, however, be suggested that no imprisonment should take place when the amount was less than 40s., and where the debtor was a working man in receipt of weekly wages, who was willing to pay his just debts. Dr. Carpenter having expatiated on the benefits of the County Court to the community at large, and the justice of the decisions of the learned judge, who presided therein, called upon Mr. Henry Moore, to move the first resolution.

1st.—"That this meeting is surprised to hear that it has been proposed before the Judicature Commission to abolish the Croydon County Court, and attach the same to a London court, and desires to enter its protest against such a proceeding, destroying as it would do the great convenience which the Croydon court affords to the district."

2nd.—"That the meeting regrets to find that a Committee of the House of Commons has reported in favour of the abolition of Imprisonment for Debt in the County Court in all cases; it being the opinion of this meeting that the fear of such imprisonment is the only security which a tradesman now has to recover from those who, having the means to pay, are not sufficiently honest to be just without being compelled by law to be so. But this meeting is quite of opinion that such imprisonment should not be enforced for debts of less than 40s., and where the debtor is ordinarily earning a weekly wage less than 20s. per week."

3rd.—"That the present mode of requiring a plaintiff to show that the defendant has the means to satisfy his debt, before the judge has power to commit him, is unreasonable and unjust, and throws upon the plaintiff an onus which properly belongs to the defendant, who could, when true, easily prove the contrary, and from which he ought not to be relieved."

Mr. W. Grantham moved the following resolution:

4th.—"That a petition to the House of Commons, embodying these resolutions, and praying that the County Court of Croydon may not be removed or interfered with; and that no alteration may be made in the law of imprisonment for debt in the County Courts as it now stands, except as regards small sums and working men in receipt of low wages, be signed by the chairman on behalf of the meeting, and be sent at once to the Lord Chancellor, and also to the senior county member for presentation · and that a copy of the same be forwarded to all the representatives of the county of Surrey in Parliament, with a request that they will support its prayer."

BRADFORD COUNTY COURT.

Nov. 8 and 25.

(Before W. T. S. DANIEL, Q.C., Judge.)

HUTCHINSON v. AUDSLEY.

Chattel—Ownership—Regaining possession.

A person claiming to be owner of a chattel, finding it in the possession of another, who claims to have bought it bonâ fide from a person whom he believed to be the owner, is not justified in regaining possession by trespass and threat of violence, but should pursue his remedy by action. Addison on Torts (3*rd edit.*), 347; Blades v. Higgs (30 L. J., N. S., 347, C.P.), explained Where a trespass is committed under circumstances of unjustifiable violence exemplary damages may be given. Bell v. Midland Railway Company (30 L. J., N. S., 273, C. P.), Emblem v. Myers (Ib., 71, Ex.). Possession of a chattel is sufficient evidence of property against a wrongdoer (Add. 355).

Watson for plaintiff.

Bilbrough (Rawson, George, and Wade), for defendant.

His HONOUR.—This action is brought to recover the sum of £10 1s. as damages, first, for the wrongful taking and conversion by the defendant to his own use of a sewing machine, the property of the plaintiff; secondly, for that the defendant, on the 20th Oct. 1873, broke and forcibly entered the dwelling house of the plaintiff, stayed and made a noise therein, and removed and took and carried away the plaintiff's sewing machine, and disposed of the same to his own use. The facts of the case are these: The plaintiff is a tailor in a small way of business, having a shop in Bradford. In Aug. 1872 Benjamin Murgatroyd, who was in the same way of trading in Bradford, was then giving it up, having purchased a greengrocer's business, and he applied to the plaintiff and asked him if he would buy a sewing machine, which Murgatroyd had had in use in his own business upwards of twelve months, and represented to be his own; in reply the plaintiff said he would if he could try it, and on trial found it suited him. Murgatroyd thereupon sent the machine to the plaintiff's shop, and he tried it; and though it was a little out of repair through use, he considered it would suit him, and he and Murgatroyd ultimately bargained for it, Murgatroyd asked £4 10s., the plaintiff offered £4 5s., which sum Murgatroyd agreed to accept, and on the 13th Aug. 1872, the plaintiff paid Murgatroyd £4 5s., and took his receipt for that sum, as the purchase-money for the sewing machine. The plaintiff had the machine repaired and put in order for use, and he used it in his business, in his shop in Bradford, from Aug. 1872 down to the 20th Oct. in the present year. And, as far as the plaintiff is concerned, I am satisfied that he honestly bought and paid for the machine, believing it to be Murgatroyd's property. On the 20th Oct. last a man, who was a stranger to the plaintiff, came into his shop, where he and his son were at work on their board, and asked if he had a sewing machine in his possession. The plaintiff said yes, and showed it the man. Having looked at it the man asked the plaintiff whom he got it from. He told the man he had bought it of Benjamin Murgatroyd more than twelve months ago, and the circumstances under which he bought it. The man said Murgatroyd had no right to sell the machine, it was not his to sell, and he should go and get a warrant against Murgatroyd, and went away. About three hours afterwards the same man, accompanied by another man, again entered the plaintiff's shop, where he and his lad were at work, and in a loud tone and violent manner (intended to intimidate the plaintiff) read the following document: "8, Exchange-buildings, Bradford, 17th July, 1871. Memorandum, No. 107. —I, Benjamin Murgatroyd, of No. 5, Pratt-street, Leeds-road, Bradford, have this 17th day of July, 1871, hired of F. J. Audsley and Co., of 8, Exchange-buildings, a manufacturing machine, Singer principle, and its appendages, as stated in the inventory at the end of this agreement, at the rent of £1 per month, and having paid £1 this day, the next payment to be made on the 17th Aug., and so on from month to month till the sum of £8 is paid, subject to the following conditions, viz.: In the event of my not paying any one of the said payments on the day they are due, I agree and do hereby give full permission to the said Audsley and Co. to enter upon any premises wheresoever the said machine and its appendages may be, either peaceably or otherwise, and remove the same therefrom for his own use. I also agree to pay the said hire when due, and give up the said machine and its appendages as above stated, and also agree to give to the said Audsley and Co. immediate notice in case of removal of the said machine and its appendages, with the full address.—Witness my hand, + BENJAMIN MURGATROYD. Witness, John Capestick. July 17, 1871." Having read this document the two men took the machine out of plaintiff's shop by force, and against his will, and with such violence that, in removing the bobbins of thread, which was on the machine, they threw them against the window and broke it. The plaintiff remonstrated, but in vain. He told the men he had bought the machine from Murgatroyd, and offered to fetch the receipt to show them; but the man who had read the paper said Murgatroyd had no right to sell, and he had power under that paper to break open any door, take out any window, and pull down any wall, if necessary, to get possession of the machine. By means of this violence and these threats the two men got possession of the machine and took it away. And it is admitted that these men were sent by the defendant, and that he authorised and held himself responsible for their acts. Upon the hearing before me it was contended by the defendant's advocate that all that was done was justifiable by law, and that the plaintiff had sustained no injury which was a cause of action. The agreement was proved by the attesting witness, and that Murgatroyd's name was signed by him—Murgatroyd putting his cross. There was no inventory to the agreement, but it was not disputed that the machine the plaintiff had, and which was taken from him, was the machine to which the agreement related; and it was proved that Murgatroyd had not paid all the monthly payments—only four or five. It was said on behalf of the defendant that the agreement showed that Murgatroyd was only a bailee for hire of the machine, and had no property in it, and could not therefore transfer any property in it to the plaintiff—the purchase by him not having been made in market overt. And it was then insisted that the property of the defendant being found in the possession of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff upon demand refusing to give it up, the defendant was justified in using as much force as was necessary to re-possess himself of his own property. And a passage in Addison on Torts, p. 347, 3rd edit., was relied upon as stating the law upon the subject. The passage is this: "Reception of goods wrongfully seized or stolen. If A. has actual possession of a chattel and B. takes it from him against his will, A. may use as much force as is necessary to defend his right and enable him to retake the chattel; and if a chattel has been seized and carried away by a person who has no colour of title to it, and the owner comes and demands it, and the trespasser refuses to give it up, the owner may use force sufficient to enable him to retake his property." And for this proposition the case of Blade v. Higgs (10 C. B., N. S., 713, and 30 L. J., N. S., 347, C. P.), is cited. But I am unable to see the application of that case to the present. The plaintiff was not a person who had taken the chattel from the defendant when it was in his actual possession and against his will, nor was the plaintiff a person who had seized and carried away the chattel having no colour of title to it. He had bonâ fide bought and paid for the chattel from a person who represented himself to be, and whom the plaintiff believed to be, the true owner, and whose possession of the chattel was and is in law prima facie evidence of property in it, though the purchase not having been made in market overt, it is open to the true owner, by a proper course of proceeding, to allege and prove his ownership, and procure the restitution of the chattel, or recover damages for its unlawful detention or conversion, as the case may be. But neither the passage in Addison nor the case of Blades v. Higgs is any authority for the course pursued by the defendant in this case. The case of Blades v. Higgs, as is well known, ran its course through Westminster Hall, and was ultimately decided by the House of Lords (31 L. J., N. S., 151, C. P, and 34 L. J., N. S., 286), and confirmed the law as laid down by Lord Holt in Sutton v. Moody (1 Lord Raym. 250), and recognised and acted on by the Court of Exchequer and the Exchequer Chamber in Lonsdale v. Rigg (26 L. J., N. S., 196, Ex.), that game killed by a trespasser becomes the property of the owner of the land where it was killed, and that the trespasser had no property in it, and could not transfer any title or colour of title to it, to a person who was cognizant of the unlawful means by which it had been obtained. The plaintiff in Blades v. Higgs was a licensed dealer in game, who had bought in the morning two sacks full of dead rabbits from poachers, who had unlawfully taken them in the night from the preserves of the Marquis of Exeter, and the rabbits were taken from him by the Marquis's servants, using no more force than was necessary for the purpose. And upon demurrer to a plea in an action brought by Blades against the Marquis's servants for assault and battery, and unlawfully taking his goods, the Court of Common Pleas — the demurrer admitting the allegations of the plea to be true, which alleged the unlawfulness of the plaintiff's possession, the goods were the property of the Marquis, by whose orders the defendant had acted, and that upon demand of restitution and refusal by the plaintiff no more force was used than was necessary to gain possession—held that the plea was an answer to the action, and overruled the demurrer; and the case is, therefore, properly an authority on the proposition of law laid down by Mr. Addison, but not an authority for the defendant's contention here. The defendant's men, when they entered the plaintiff's house under pretence of the authority contained in the memorandum of the 17th July, 1871, and with the intention of removing the sewing machine by violence if resisted, committed a trespass, and the defendant admits himself to be liable for their acts, as having been done by his authority. Now the agreement gave the defendant no authority which would sanction such an act, and the defendant's advocate did not attempt to justify the entry under the agreement, but he insisted that at most nominal damages only could be given; and in support of that contention he cited Pritchard v. Long (11 L. J., N. S., 306, Ex.), where, in trespass for entering the plaintiff's dwelling house and taking certain goods, not alleging them to be the goods of the plaintiff, upon a plea of not guilty the plaintiff recovered nominal damages only, the court refused to increase the damages by the value of the goods; Parke, B. stating "the plaintiff is not entitled to a rule to increase the damages, for he cannot maintain an action for taking the goods in question, unless they are his property; but here there is no allegation that they belonged to him, nor any admission to that effect in any special plea." In the present case the machine is alleged to be the property of the plaintiff, and, thereupon, Pritchard v. Long (which, it may be observed, was decided in 1842, and long before the Common Law Procedure Act was passed, which gave the judge at Nisi Prius power of amendment so as to prevent a failure of justice through mere technicality, a power which this court possesses, and it is for the judge to exercise whenever applied to) can have no possible application to the present case. But apart from any question of increasing the damages by the value of the goods seized, when alleged and proved to be the property of the plaintiff, I don't think that the plaintiff is limited to nominal damages when the trespass is an act of lawless violence and insult, and attended with actual damage to the plaintiff's property, though that damage may be small. Here there was lawless violence, and some evidence of damage to the plaintiff's property, by breaking the window in throwing off the bobbins from the machine. The defendant, assuming that he had a right, chose to exercise it with a high hand, and in a manner which was intended to intimidate the plaintiff, and by threat of violence to his property terrify him into submission, and he succeeded. In such a case a jury would be justified in giving exemplary damages (Bell v. Midland Railway Company, 30 L. J., N. S. 273, C. P., and Emblem v. Myers, Ib. 71, Ex.); and, sitting as a jury, I am justified, and consider it my duty in order to protect a peaceable man, and one who was innocent of any intentional wrong towards the defendant, as the plaintiff was, and to prevent the recurrence of such high handed lawlessness, to give exemplary damages. The defendant's advocate maintained, with much earnestness, that upon the construction of the agreement of the 17th July 1871, Murgatroyd was a bailee for hire, that he had no property in the machine during the bailment, and that when he sold the machine to the plaintiff he determined the bailment, and passed no property in it to the plaintiff, having none to pass; and he cited two cases, Cooper v. Willomatt (14 L. J., N. S., 219, C. P.), and Marner v. Banks (17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 147), to show that when a bailee for hire sells the article bailed to a bona fide purchaser for value, who buys in ignorance of the bailee's want of title, whether such sale be by private contract, as in Cooper v. Willomatt, or by public auction, as in Marner v. Banks, if the sale be not in market overt, the bailor (the real owner), may in an action of trover, if there be conversion, or of detinue if there be not, recover the property or its value from the purchaser. These cases are useful for the purpose of showing that if the construction of the agreement be as contended for by the defendant, there was neither necessity nor excuse for the defendant resorting to the lawless violence resorted to in this case. Having found the machine in the plaintiff's possession, and having demanded it from him, and he having refused to deliver it up, the law gave the defendant an ample remedy for the recovery of his property or its value, if it were his, as against the plaintiff; but in any proceeding for such recovery the plaintiff would have had the opportunity of questioning the defendant's title, and having the right properly considered and decided by lawful authority. The advocate for the plaintiff did not argue the question of the proper construction of the agreement, but relied upon the tort committed by the defendant, and the plaintiff's right to substantial damages, and in the view I take of this case, it is not necessary for me to decide the question of construction. The agreement is drawn by the defendant himself, and is unskilfully prepared, and it is by no means clear that although the words hired and hire and rent are used, that the transaction was a hiring in the true sense of the term, or that the monthly payments were rent reserved as a hiring. In the two cases cited there were undoubted hirings. The transaction in the present case looks more like a sale and purchase, the purchase money being payable by instalments, the property passing by the contract, but the vendor reserving to himself the right to reclaim possession from the purchaser, so as to restore to himself the lien of an unpaid vendor for such portion of the purchase money as might remain unpaid—a right which would be good and enforceable as between the parties, but would not be enforceable against a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the agreement. I make these remarks that it may not be supposed that I assent to the construction of the agreement as insisted upon by the advocate for the defendant. The proper construction would require careful consideration, and if the agreement were fairly open to two constructions, as it was prepared by the defendant and imposed by him upon an ignorant man who could neither read nor write, that construction might be adopted which was most favourable to Murgatroyd, and more especially if, as urged by the defendant's advocate, a construction in the defendant's favour would render Murgatroyd liable to a charge of felony under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 193. As against the defendant as a wrongdoer, the plaintiff's possession, honestly acquired, is sufficient to sustain the allegation of property in this action, and I see no reason why I should assess the damages at less than the sum claimed. The judgment will therefore be entered for the plaintiff for £10 and costs, and as this court is accessible at all times at little cost, and its decision can be obtained with little delay, there is no reason why parties who consider the rights of property infringed upon, should take the law into their own hands with violence, instead of seeking redress here, when the case is within the limit of the jurisdiction of this court.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Monday, Nov. 24.

(Before Mr. Registrar Brougham.)

Re George Odger.

Liquidation—Creditor present, but not voting.

This was an application for the confirmation of certain resolutions passed at a meeting held in July last, providing for the acceptance of a composition of 1s. in the pound in satisfaction of the claims of creditors and the annulment of the bankruptcy. The bankrupt was described as of High-street, Bloomsbury, boot-maker. He had sued the Figaro for an alleged libel, and being unsuccessful in the action, was adjudicated on the petition of the proprietor of that publication.

J. Vernon Musgrave, who appeared in support of the application, stated that the papers had been placed before Mr. Paget, the official assignee, and a point now arose upon his report with regard to the position of one of the creditors who attended the meeting, but took no part in the proceedings.

His Honour observed that according to a decision of the Lords Justices in Ex parte Orde, re Horsely, a creditor who attended a meeting without voting in any way must be considered, in reference to the resolutions come to at such meeting, as a dissenting creditor.

Robinson, as representing the creditor in question, intimated that his instructions still were to take no part in the proceedings.

Mr. Registrar Brougham said the creditor neither assented nor dissented, but threw the responsibility upon the Court. In the face of the decision referred to, he was unable to confirm the resolutions, but the application might be renewed if the assent of all the creditors to the confirmation of the resolutions could be obtained.

BRADFORD COUNTY COURT.

Oct. 18 and 21; Nov. 18.

(Before W. T. S. Daniel, Q.C., Judge.)

Ex parte Buckley; Re Bartrum.

Arrangement by liquidating debtor to repurchase estate from trustee—Rights of trustee against third parties—Application of Ex parte Waring —Directions of court—Litigation by trustee—B. A. 1869, ss. 20 and 28.

Where a debtor under liquidation proceedings makes an arrangement with his creditors to repurchase his estate from the trustee (which is approved by the court under the 28th section Bankruptcy Act 1869) upon certain conditions, before performance the trustee may, on behalf of the debtor, take proceedings in his own name to protect the estate against an adverse claim by a third party. Where a trustee applies to the court for directions under sect. 20 Bankruptcy Act 1869, and directions are given, parties against whom the trustee, in pursuance of such directions, raises an adverse litigation, are not prejudiced, nor is the trustee protected as against them by such directions if the litigation fails.

The rule in Ex parte Waring (19 Ves. 345) is not applicable where there is not a double insolvency. And bill holders, if it be in their power to compel a second insolvency, and thus bring the rule into operation, are not bound to do so if it be to their prejudice and they decline: (See also Powles v. Hargreaves, 3 D. M. & G. 430; 25 L. J., N. S., 1, Ch.; Hickie's case, L. Rep. 4 Eq. Ca., 226; Ex parte Alliance Bank L. Rep. 4 Ch App. 424; City Bank v. Luckie, L. Rep. 5 Ch., App. 773; Bank of England v. Perry, L. Rep. 7 Ex. 14; Ex parte Smart, L. Rep. 8 Ch., App. 220.)

Ambrose, instructed by Wood and Killick, Bradford, for motion.

Shaw, instructed by Busfield and Atkinson, Bradford; Gordon, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London; Watson (Watson and Dickson, Bradford); and B. C. Pullan, Leeds, appeared for the different respondents.

His Honour.—This motion is made on behalf of Charles Joseph Buckley, the trustee of the property of the debtor, Arthur Charles Bartrum, for an order directing that George Millar shall forthwith deliver up and transfer to the said Charles Joseph Buckley all stuff pieces and manufactured goods belonging to the estate of the said debtor, or forwarded to the said George Millar by the said debtor, and which are now in his possession or under his control, and directing that he shall account for and pay over to the said Charles Joseph Buckley the proceeds of such goods so belonging or forwarded as shall have been sold and disposed of by him since the 25th July last, and for an order directing that the said George Millar shall transfer and deliver to the said Charles Joseph Buckley a certain acceptance for £700 drawn by the said debtor by his firm of A. C. Bartrum and Co., upon and accepted by Messrs. E. MacMorland and Co., now in the possession of him the said George Millar; or that it may be declared that such goods and proceeds, and the said acceptance or some part or parts thereof respectively, are securities for indemnifying the said George Millar against the payment of certain bills of exchange, amounting altogether to £3524 8s., drawn by the said debtor in the name of his said firm upon and accepted by the said George Millar, and which were current on the said 25th July 1873, and that the holders of such bills are entitled to the benefit of such security, and to have the same applied in payment of the said bills, and are entitled to participate in the same rateably in proportion to the amounts of their respective bills without prejudice to their rights to rank on the estate of the said debtor, and to claim against the said George Millar for the balance or residue, if any, of the said bills which may remain due to them after realising the said securities, and applying the proceeds thereof towards satisfaction of the amounts due to them in respect of their respective bills, and for an order that in case any of such bill holders shall have proved against the estate of the said debtor, the amounts of their respective proof are to be reduced by the amounts they may receive in respect of their proportion of the proceeds to arise from the said securities, and in case they have received any dividends or composition from the said debtor or his estate in respect of their said debts, for an order that they may repay and account for the same to the estate of the said debtor, and for an order directing for the purposes aforesaid all necessary inquiries and accounts to be made and taken, and that all necessary orders and directions may be given for the realisation and application of the said securities; and that, if necessary, a receiver may be appointed for the purpose of effecting such realisation and application, and generally for the purpose of settling the rights and equities between the undermentioned parties and estate of the debtor respectively, and the rights of proof of the said bill holders upon the said estate, and for an order providing for the taxation and payment of the costs of and incidental to this application by such person or persons or otherwise as the court should think fit, and generally for such other order as to the said court should seem meet. The respondents are Mr. George Millar, of 56, Bow-lane, Cheapside, London, commission agent; the Bradford Old Bank (Limited), Bradford; Messrs. Richardson and Co., 28, Clement's-lane, London, bill brokers; the Exchange and Discount Bank (Limited), Leeds; Messrs. Benjamin Wright and Son, stuff manufacturers, Wibsey, near Bradford; and Messrs. Wilkinson and Airey, silk spinners, Brighouse, near Huddersfield. The respondents (other than Millar) are the holders of the several bills amounting to £3524 8s. mentioned in the notice of motion. In opening this motion the following questions were raised for decision: First, whether on the 25th July 1873 (the day when the petition for liquidation was presented, and to which day the title of the trustee related) the respondent George Millar had any and what lien on the goods referred to in the notice of motion; secondly, if he had, whether, according to the rule established in Ex parte Waring, the goods ought not to be sold for the benefit of the debtor's estate, and the proceeds divided pro rata among the other respondents (the bill holders), and their proofs against the debtor's estate reduced proportionably; thirdly, whether, assuming the lien as to the goods to be established, the acceptance for £700 mentioned in the notice of motion would, under the circumstances under which that acceptance was received by Millar, be covered by the lien; and, if not, whether the court would order Millar to deliver it to the trustees as forming part of the debtor's estate. There was also a subsidiary question raised upon a separate notice of motion, to which Millar and Messrs. Balfour and Co. (but not the bill holders) were respondents, whether part of the goods of which Millar was in possession at the date of the notice of motion (8th Oct.) had not been wrongfully obtained by him from Messrs. Balfour and Co. since the 25th July 1873; but this motion, after being partly heard, has, on the submission of the trustee, been since dismissed with costs. And the order in the present motion will therefore apply to all the goods and proceeds of goods in the possession of Millar on and since the 25th July last, as well as the £700 acceptance. As part of the trustee's case, it appeared on reference to the file of proceedings that the said general meeting of creditors under the petition was held on the 13th Aug. 1872, and at such meeting resolutions were duly passed, first, that the affairs of the debtor should be liquidated by arangement, and not in bankruptcy; and, secondly, that Buckley should be appointed trustee. And on the 15th Aug. these resolutions, with others, were duly registered and the trustee's appointment duly certified. It also appeared that on the 10th Sept. 1873, a meeting of the creditors of the debtor was duly held for the purpose of considering any offer made to the trustee by the debtor on the 26th Aug. 1873, to pay the costs of the proceedings, and to pay in full such of his creditors as were entitled to be paid in full, and to pay to his other creditors a composition of 7s. in the pound, by three equal instalments at the respective periods of three, six, and nine calendar months, from the date of the acceptance by the trustee of such offer; all such instalments to be secured by bills of exchange, payable at the above periods respectively, to be drawn by the creditors upon and accepted by the debtor; and the payment of the bills for the last instalment to be secured as after-mentioned; and that the property of the debtor vested in the said trustee should be retransferred to him on the acceptance of such composition by the creditors as a scheme of management of his affairs (except certain spinning and weaving plant at Newland Mills, which the trustee should retain as a security for the payment of the bills for the last instalment of the said composition as mentioned in the said offer), and such meeting was held for the purpose of considering the propriety of sanctioning the acceptance by the trustee of the said offer or any modification thereof as a scheme of settlement of the affairs of the said debtor. And at such meeting it was resolved that the sanction of the creditors of the debtor be, and the same was thereby, given to the acceptance by the trustee of the offer of the debtor, subject to the following modifications, namely: That the composition be paid by three equal instalments at the respective periods of two, six, and nine calendar months from that date (10th Sept.); and that the last clause of the offer giving the debtor a right to take the weaving plant at a valuation be withdrawn; and that the trustee be authorised and empowered to accept such offer so modified accordingly; and to re-transfer to the debtor the property late of the debtor then vested in the trustee (except the spinning and weaving plant at Newland Mills referred to in the said offer) immediately after the debtor shall have paid to the trustee the costs of the proceedings and the amount due to the trustee and to the creditors of the debtor who are entitled to be paid in full; and shall have deposited with the trustee the bills of exchange required by the terms of the offer so modified to be given for securing to the other creditors of the debtor the composition of 7s. in the pound mentioned in the said offer, and that the trustee be authorised and empowered to retransfer their spinning and weaving plant, or such part thereof as shall then be unsold, to the debtor immediately after the whole of the bills for the last instalment of the said composition shall have been paid; and, lastly, that the terms above specified be assented to by the creditors as a scheme of settlement of the affairs of the debtor. There does not appear to be any evidence on the file of proceedings that the debtor actually or personally assented to the modifications of his offer, as resolved upon by the creditors; but such assent must, for the purposes of this motion, be assumed to have been given, because it appears that by an order of this court, dated the 30th Sept. last, made on the application of the trustee and supported by the affidavit of himself and his clerk, it was ordered that the approval of the court be, and it is thereby given to the said resolution and to the arrangement thereby authorised as a scheme of settlement of the affairs of the debtor; and on the hearing before me it was admitted by the trustee, on behalf of the debtor, that such assent had been given. Upon this order and these resolutions appearing, it was objected by Mr. Pullan, on behalf of the respondents, the Exchange and Discount Bank, Leeds (who are the holders of seven of the bills in question, amounting to £1333 11s.), that the trustee had no right, title, or interest in him which would justify his raising this litigation with the bill holders for the purpose of reducing their right of proof upon the bills; that, as trustee, his duty was to protect the interests of the creditors, and not take part with the debtor for whose benefit this motion, so far as it affected the bill holders, was intended to operate. This objection was not concurred in by all those who represented the other respondents. Mr. Watson, on behalf of the respondents, Messrs. Wright and Son, and Messrs. Wilkinson and Airey, desired that the court should make a declaration as to the rights of his clients. To remove the objection Mr. Ambrose, for the trustee, offered to amend the notice of motion by adding "on behalf of the debtor," and, if required, to add also the name of the debtor as a party moving. This was objected to on behalf of Millar and some of the other respondents, on the ground that the amendment would, as they conceived, materially affect their interests in the merits of the motion as it now stands. I proposed to allow the motion to be amended as the trustee might be advised on the payment of costs, but this was not assented to by Mr. Ambrose, and I thereupon allowed the motion to proceed, reserving to Mr. Pullan the full benefit of his objection, but I intimated that I should treat the motion, so far as it was adverse to the interests of any of the respondents, as a motion made by the trustee in the interest and on behalf of the debtor as the purchaser of the property under the scheme of arrangement. The debtor not having yet complied with the conditions precedent mentioned in the scheme, is not now entitled to a transfer of any of the property vested in the trustee, and, consequently, the trustee still remains the legal owner of such property. But, nevertheless, the debtor is, in my opinion, entitled to ask the trustee to take all such proceedings as may be necessary or proper for the protecting the property against any claims set up by third parties which would have the effect, if enforced, of preventing the debtor's possession when and if he shall become entitled to it. The debtor may, therefore, in my opinion, try the question between him and Millar, using the name of the trustee for that purpose. The question, however, must be tried between the trustee and Millar exactly as the question would have had to be tried if the property had never been vested in the trustee by means of the liquidation. Under the liquidation the trustee acquired such property and rights only as the debtor then had the liquidation which is the voluntary act of the debtor could not deprive Millar of any rights he then possessed, nor prejudice him in the enjoyment or enforcement of those rights, and therefore the first question raised by this notice of motion, namely, whether Millar had any property by way of lien in the goods in question may, I think, in this way be properly tried upon this notice of motion as it stands, but of course the parties objecting have the benefit of their objection reserved. [His Honour examined the evidence in detail, and proceeded.] I come to the conclusion that the lien claimed by Millar is established, and that the first part of the notice of motion, which asks that Millar shall forthwith deliver up to the trustee the goods in his possession, as belonging to the debtor's estate, must be dismissed, and this will extend to the goods in Millar's possession received from Messrs. Balfour. The next part of the motion asks for the delivering up to the trustee of the acceptance for £700. On this point his Honour said:—If it were necessary to come to a decision upon this point I should be strongly disposed to consider the £700 acceptance was sought to be obtained by the debtor unfairly to the prejudice of Millar, but it is not necessary to come to such a decision, because it was admitted upon the argument before me that the £2208 11s. 9d., mentioned in the debtor's balance-sheet as the estimated value of goods in the hands of Millar, applicable to meet his acceptances for £3524 8s., included this acceptance for £700; and that admission, coupled with the evidence, is sufficient to entitle Millar to retain that acceptance as part of his lien, and to receive the £700 from Mr. Morland when it becomes due, and give a valid discharge for it; and, as a consequence, that the trustee and the debtor are not only bound not to interfere with or prevent such receipt by Millar, but are bound to do all acts necessary or proper for enabling Millar to obtain such receipt. The second question, namely, whether the rule established in Ex parte Waring ought to be applied in this case, has now to be considered. The contention on the part of the debtor is that the bill holders are bound to apply to Millar and compel him to realise the goods which he holds, and apply the proceeds (including the £700 acceptance when received) in payment of the acceptances amounting to £3524 8s. pro rata among them, and then that they should be admitted to prove against the estate of the debtor and receive the composition of 7s. in the pound upon the amount of their bills, less the sum they shall have received from Millar. In other words, that the debtor is entitled to have the goods in Millar's hands applied for his benefit, discharged of his liability, and indemnify Millar. As the debtor has obtained a resolution of his creditors (which is binding upon all his creditors, including the bill holders) to accept a composition of 7s. in the pound, the creditors (other than the bill holders) have no interest in the question of the amount for which the bill holders are to prove, and on which they are to receive the 7s. in the pound. That is purely a question between the debtor on the one hand and the bill holders on the other. Now I take it to be quite clear that the bill holders are entitled to receive from the debtor as drawer, and Millar as acceptor, either together or separately, 20s. in the pound upon the amount of the bills, and that as they are now limited to 7s. in the pound from the debtor, as drawer, they are entitled to recover at least the difference, 13s. in the pound, from Millar, and to recover it in the best way they can from Millar. They are not bound to have regard to the fact that Millar is an accommodation acceptor. They are entitled to treat him as primarily liable, and deal with him accordingly. As between the debtor and Millar, the debtor is primarily liable to pay the acceptances in full and to indemnify Millar from all liability in respect of them. But the contention on the debtor's part is, that because he has become insolvent he has relieved himself from his liability to Millar, as acceptor, and can demand to have the goods and moneys which are in Millar's hands as an indemnity against his liability as accommodation acceptor, and which are insufficient for that purpose, withdrawn from Millar, and applied to relieve the debtor of his liability as drawer. This is shown by the letters written by Messrs. Wood and Killick, on the 30th Sept. to the bill holders. The demand thus made would involve a plain and manifest injustice both to Millar and the bill holders; to Millar because it would withdraw from him property which, being insufficient for his indemnity, he is entitled to dispose of to the best advantage for his own protection, and to the bill holders, by compelling them to accept a dividend of 7s. in the pound upon a reduced amount of proof, which must leave them less than 20s. in the pound. On the 26th Sept. last, and before the resolutions of the 10th Sept. had been confirmed by this court as a scheme of arrangement under the 28th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, the trustee applied to this court for its directions upon a statement now upon the file which represented the facts of the case, as the debtor afterwards stated them on his application, and which, upon the whole evidence I have come to the conclusion was erroneous. On that application coming before me, and assuming the facts to be correctly stated, I directed that the trustee should give such notice of motion as he might be advised for the purpose of bringing Millar and the bill holders before the court, in order that the rights and equities of all parties might be ascertained and declared. And the present notice of motion has been given in consequence of that direction; but neither Millar nor the bill holders ought to be prejudiced by that direction, nor are they in any way bound by the trustee's statement as to any of the facts alleged by him; and I notice this particularly, because it must not be supposed that a trustee derives any advantage over an adverse party, or secures any benefit or immunity to himself by any order the court may make upon his ex parte statement, beyond this, that as the court has sanctioned his proceedings, he may expect to be indemnified out of the estate for any costs he may properly incur himself, or be ordered to pay to those with whom he raises the litigation, if it should ultimately fail. The trustee's case, now that the facts are fully before the court, depends entirely upon the applicability of the rule established in Ex parte Waring to the present case. In my opinion that rule is not applicable. The foundation of that rule rests upon the necessity for applying it in order to adjust conflicting rights and equities between two sets of creditors, claiming under the forced administration of two insolvent estates. The existence of the double insolvency is necessary to the application of the rule; it does not rest upon any original right in the bill holders; though, when the application of the rule has been rendered necessary by reason of the double insolvency, the bill holders may obtain the benefit of it by independent proceedings of their own; but no authority has been cited, nor am I aware that any exists showing that they are compellable to do so to their own prejudice. The authorities upon the subject, which were cited, are Ex parte Waring (19 Ves. 345; 2 Rose Bank. Cas. 182); Powles v. Hargreaves (3 D. M. & G. 430; 25 L. J., N. S., 1, Ch.); Hickie's Case (L. Rep. 4 Eq. Cas. 226); Ex parte Alliance Bank (L. Rep. 4 Ch. App. 424); City Bank v. Luckie (L. Rep. 5 Ch. App. 663), Bank of Ireland v. Perry (L. Rep. 7 Ex. 14), Ex parte Smart (L. Rep. 8 Ch. App. 220.) A short statement of the case of Ex parte Waring, which established the rule in question, and the principles of Lord Eldon's judgment will show its inapplicability to the present case. In Ex parte Waring the facts were these—Bracken and Co., manufacturers, in Lancashire, drew upon Brickwood and Co., bankers, in London, who accepted their drafts, Bracken and Co. remitting to them cash and bills to cover their liability, and Bracken and Co. had also deposited with Brickwood and Co. the deeds relating to certain real estate as a further security. On the 7th July 1810, Brickwood and Co., the acceptors, became bankrupt, being at that time under liability upon acceptances for Bracken and Co. to the amount of £24,000, but having in their hands belonging to Bracken and Co. as security for their indemnity—cash balance £6760 7s. 6d., also short bills £21,645 10s., and deeds relating to real estate which realised £2961; these, amounting together (exclusive of the cash balance) to more than the acceptances, so that Brickwood and Co., the accommodation acceptors, were fully covered by the securities in their hands. Now if on the day after their bankruptcy it had been ascertained what was the demand Brickwood and Co. had against Bracken and Co., it is impossible to deny (Lord Eldon says) that if Bracken and Co. had relieved Brickwood and Co. of the acceptances for £2400, the short bills and the deeds must have been restored to Bracken and Co. On the other hand, it was equally clear that Bracken and Co. could not have re-demanded the short bills or the deeds without bringing in under the estate of Brickwood and Co. funds equal to the claim that Brickwood and Co. had in respect of the short bills and the mortgage, for they were first applicable to the discharge of those acceptances, not for the security of the persons in whose hands those acceptances were, but for that of Brickwood and Co., who had become liable for them. The liability of Brickwood and Co. must be exonerated before any restitution could be claimed by Bracken and Co. In consequence, however, of Brickwood and Co.'s bankruptcy, Bracken and Co. also became bankrupt; this happened on the 2nd Aug. 1810, and it then became impossible for the rights between the two estates to be properly adjusted. Bracken and Co.'s estate was no longer able to make the restitution necessary to entitle it to redemand the securities from Brickwood's estate, and Brickwood's estate was left in possession of property of Bracken's estate, which did not belong to it. The full amount of the bills were proved against both estates, and neither estate could have the benefit of the specific appropriation; thus a wrong was done to Bracken's general creditors by a proof being made against that estate for this £24,000, which ought to have been paid by the securities in Brickwood's hands, and Brickwood's creditors had the undue advantage of having applied for their benefit property of Bracken held by Brickwood for a specific purpose, which was no longer enforceable. Lord Eldon cut the knot by holding that the property held by Brickwood as security should be applied in payment of the acceptances to the persons holding them, not as in the nature of a direct demand or right in those persons, but as the true way of arranging the equities between the two estates. And in that particular case the result was that the bill holders were paid in full out of the proceeds of the securities, and both estates relieved of the proofs, and thus complete justice was done to the other creditors of each estate. Now apply the principles of that case to the present. Brickwood answers to Millar, Bracken to the debtor Bartrum; Brickwood, the accommodation acceptor, becomes bankrupt, having assets of Bracken in his hands more than sufficient to cover all his liability. Millar is not bankrupt—is still liable for the whole amount of his accommodation acceptances, having assets of the debtor in his hands not sufficient to cover his liability. The debtor, the accommodated drawer primarily liable to indemnify Millar, and not having done so, voluntarily makes himself bankrupt, or what is equivalent to it, and then buys back his estate from his trustee for a sum equal to 7s. in the pound on his debts, of which his liability as accommodation drawer forms a part, and then seeks to withdraw from Millar assets which are insufficient for his indemnity, and which in Millar's hands are primarily applicable to that purpose, and have those assets applied to relieve him from his primary liability as the accommodated drawer, and having done that wrong to Millar, he further seeks to compel the bill holders to reduce their proof upon the bills by the amount of which by these means he shall have wrongly deprived Millar. It appears to me that this contention of the debtor put forward through the trustee fails altogether, being an attempt to apply the rule so as to cause, not prevent, a wrong. I have not omitted to observe that the trustee, through his solicitors, has endeavoured to induce some of the bill holders to force Millar into bankruptcy, but he has not succeeded. The bill holders appear to have confidence in Millar, and are willing to leave him to deal with his estate and manage his affairs without any hostile interference on their part, and with that confidence, I am of opinion the debtor, or the trustee on his behalf, has no right to call on this court to interfere. The order, therefore, will be as follows: Dismissing the motion so far as it seeks the delivery up by Millar or his accounting for and paying to the trustee the proceeds of any of the goods in his possession or the acceptance for £700 mentioned in the notice, and declare that the said goods, including the goods received from Messrs. Balfour and Co., and proceeds, and the acceptance or securities in the hands of Millar for indemnifying him against the payment of the several bills amounting to £3524 8s., drawn by the debtor upon, and accepted by, Millar mentioned in that notice. And it appearing that the value of the said goods and acceptances are insufficient for the purpose of such indemnity, declare that the said George Millar is entitled to sell and dispose of the said goods, and to receive the proceeds thereof, and also the sum of £700 due upon the said acceptance, and to give a valid discharge for the same to the acceptors thereof, and it is ordered that the trustee do concur with the said George Millar in doing all such acts as may be necessary or proper for enabling the said George Millar to receive and give a discharge for the said sum of £700. And that the said George Millar do apply the proceeds of the said goods, and the said acceptance for the benefit of the said bill holders, in such manner as he and they shall agree upon, so that none of the said bill holders, after giving credit for the composition of 7s. in the pound, mentioned in the scheme of arrangement for settlement of the debtor's affairs — approved by this court on the 30th Sept. 1873 —or so much of such composition as the said bill holders respectively shall receive, do receive more than 20s. in the pound on the amount of the bills respectively held by them; and declare that the said bill holders are entitled to prove against the estate of the said debtor for the full amount of the bills held by them, with the usual rebate as to any that had not matured on the 25th July last, and to receive the said composition of 7s. in the pound thereon, in the manner provided for by their scheme of arrangement. Order the said Charles James Buckley to pay to the several respondents who have been served with and have appeared upon this motion their costs to be taxed by the registrar; and let the said Charles James Buckley be at liberty to add the said costs and also his own costs of this application to the costs which he is entitled to be paid under the said scheme of arrangement, but so as not to prejudice the right of the creditors of the said debtor to the said composition of 7s. in the pound, on the security provided for the last instalment thereof. Liberty is reserved to the trustee to apply to this court in respect of the disposition and application by the said George Miller of the said goods and moneys, the subject of the said indemnity, and otherwise under this order as he may be advised.

LEGAL NEWS.

International Law in Japan.—The Japanese Embassy have appointed Mr. W. E. Grigsby, B.A., of Balliol College, Oxford, Professor of International Law at Yeddo. We understand that a handsome salary has been guaranteed. Mr. Grigsby took a first-class in the final classical school in Michaelmas Term 1872; he afterwards gained the Vinerian Law Scholarship, and last summer took a first class in the Law School. He is also a graduate of the University of Glasgow, where he gained the Luke Fellowship, and is a member of the University of London. There have been five Japanese students studying law at Oxford this Term, among whom are the son of the Prime Minister, and Nabishima, one of the chief Daimios. These students manifest great zeal and aptitude for the study of English law. They take the lectures of their tutor in English, which they translate into their own language, and submit the retransiations to his approval.

Criminal Prosecutions.—The cost of criminal prosecutions in Ireland in the year 1871-72 was £64,935 5s. 5d., against £75,244 0s. 2d. in the preceding year.

Mr. Williams, late Attorney-General of the United States, has been appointed Chief Justice or the Supreme Court. He is succeeded by Mr. Bristow, late Solicitor-General.

Solicitors Elected to the Office of Mayor for the Ensuing Year.—Mr. Alfred Rooker, Plymouth; Mr. G. M. Watson, Stockton-on-Tees; Mr. H. E. Silvester, Beverly; Mr. Alexander Beale, Reading.

European Assurance Arbitration.—On Wednesday last Lord Romily sat in the European Assurance Arbitration. Some cases stood over, and in the case that was heard judgment was deferred. The next sitting will, probably, be held some time at the commencement of the new year, when it is expected that a large number of cases will be ready for hearing.

Crime in Ireland.—It is shown by the judicial statistics for Ireland of last year that the treasonable offences, which in 1867 exceeded 500, were reduced in 1870 to thirty-seven, had fallen to seven in 1871, and had entirely disappeared in 1872. Last year there were 211,470 offences dealt with summarily in Ireland against 220,179 in the previous year. The number convicted in 1872 was 177,526.

The Privilege of Jury.—In the recent Nisi Prius case of Wolf v. Clayton, where the defendant was sued for an assault, and a verdict was given in his favour, it being in the opinion of the jury "a mere horse-dealing squabble," the presiding judge—Mr. Justice Brett—remarked, "Don't give any reason for your verdict, gentlemen. It is a great privilege that you have never to give a reason."

The Election Petition against the Attorney-General.—Notice has just been given that Mr. Justice Grove will hear the election petition against the Attorney-General (Mr. H. James), and his Lordship has appointed Monday, the 12th Jan. to commence the proceedings. W. C. Russell, Q.C., and Mr. W. G. Harrison will appear for the petitioners; Mr. Serjt. Ballantine, Mr. H. Giffard, Q.C., and Mr. J. O. Griffits, for the Attorney-General. The allegations against the sitting member are—that he has been guilty by his agents, of bribery, treating, undue influence, and persuasion.

Lawyers—as well those in embryo as those full fledged—seem particularly liable to that condition of things usually described by the daily papers by "Mysterious disappearance." Not long since a solicitor in the Isle of Wight was lost for weeks, and during the present week it seems that a Mr. John Jumblin, sent up to town by his father to pass the intermediate examination at the Law Institution, has shared a similar fate. No doubt, in proper time, the gentleman in question will be restored alive and well to his anxious father, who applied to Mr. Flowers, at Bow-street, upon the subject.

The Virginius.—A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette comes to the following conclusions: "On the whole, the nearest approach that can be formed to a legal opinion on the whole matter is that, according to legal analogies, the Spaniards had a right to seize the ship, that they had no right (unless they entered Cuban waters) to try the men whom they found in it, but only a right to detain them and deliver them over to the Americans for trial, with a possible exception in regard to subjects of their own who had already committed crimes against Spanish laws. Lastly, it appears to me that unless they entered Spanish waters they could not be regarded as rebels, and that, whatever else they were, they were not pirates. This, however, is so qualified and intricate a view of the subject that no human creature not being a lawyer could be expected to act upon it, and the general result appears to be that international law, as it is called, is in a vague unsatisfactory state, and leaves out of account many matters which it ought to provide for."

Private Bill Legislation. — The total number of sets of plans deposited in the Private Bill Office of the Board of Trade, is 241 for this year. Of these 121 refer to railways, 5 to tramways, 68 to gas, road, water, harbour, pier, and schemes of a miscellaneous nature. In 47 cases the promoters have elected to proceed by way of provisional orders. On or before the 15th inst., notice is to be given to owners, lessees, and occupiers of land intended to be taken by any private bill in Parliament, also notice as to applications for tramways, &c. Plans and books of reference were deposited by the 30th ult., and it is understood that the number was 241, of which 121 relate to railways. By the 21st inst. all petitions for private bills are to be deposited at the Private Bill Office with the particulars specified in the Standing Orders; and on or before the 31st inst. all estimates, declarations, and lists of owners and occupiers as required by the orders of the House. The money deposits in the Court of Chancery to be made before the 15th Jan.

Polling Districts.—A return has been issued of the divisions of counties into the polling districts of England and Wales, under the Ballot Act 1872. In Middlesex, including the City of London, there are seventeen polling districts, and the several places are specified.

Crown Debts.—For the year ending June 1873, 150 persons—68 in England, 1 in Scotland, and 81 in Ireland—were imprisoned at the suit of the Exchequer—the Board of Inland Revenue —for periods of from 1 day to 12 months. As to the Customs 114 persons were imprisoned, and 1223 persons were fined. In one case a fine of £2000 was inflicted; the offender was convicted in November 1871. The imprisonment of this person continued on the 2nd August 1873.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

Note.—This Department of the Law Times being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it

Our Invaders.—This is a question in which all solicitors are interested, and in some places the evil is so great that deeds are drawn and charged for by persons wholly unconnected with the Profession. This being so, I would suggest (as it is useless to expect solicitors to take the initiative and to prosecute, and as there is no society to protect them) that they should bring their influence to bear and get the annual certificate duty discontinued. Without more practical protection than they at present have, it is unfair that they as a body should be taxed in the way they are.

A Country Solicitor.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Notice.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

41. Final Examination. — A clerk's articles expire two days before the end of term. Can he procure admittance in that term? Would he be debarred from obtaining honours by not offering himself for examination until the following term? A. C.

[Yes, he can certainly be admitted in that term. Age over twenty-six years is the only thing that disqualifies for honours.—Ed. Sols. Dept.]

Answers.

(Q. 26) Devise—Words of Revocation.—In Taylor v. Taylor (22 L. J., N. S., 743 Ch.) Lord Cranworth says:—"As to the real estate, the law gives it to the heir, and the law would do the same if the testator said that his real estate should not go to his heir, but omitted to make a valid devise of it." S.

(Q. 34). Stamps—Agreement.—By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, a penny stamp must be attached to any tack or lease for any definite term less than a year, of any dwelling-house or tenement, or part thereof, at a rental of less than £10 annually. Under sect. 24, the stamp should be cancelled, subject to a £10 penalty; and by sect. 36, by the person whose signature is first made. According to Tilsley on Stamps (3rd edit., p. 476), an agreement for a lease is on a similar footing. See p. 505, 506, as to other leases. C. C.

(Q. 35). Bill of Costs—Partner.—Unless the client expressly consented to accept the firm as his creditor the bill should be in the single name of the solicitor first instructed; for the right to enforce payment of the bill, being a chose in action, cannot be transferred to a third party (and here the firm is a third party) without the consent of all the parties to the original contract. But if the client consented to become debtor to the firm the whole bill should be presented in the name of the firm: (See Moor v. Hill, 2 Peake, 10; and Wilsford v. Wood, 1 Esp. 183.) Owl.

— In this case I would make out two distinct bills: No. 1, in my own name solely; and No. 2, in the joint names of myself and partner. Such appears the correct plan. C. C.

Q. 37). Trustees — Investment. — If the stock and dividends are guaranteed by the Indian government, I would not object as trustee to invest therein, even without a special power for the purpose; and which, in this case does not seem to be conferred, as "India" is not named. See Davidson's Conv. 7th edit. vol. 2, p. 191, 192, where the power is conferred. It is possible that the settlor or testator intended to include Indian securities in this case. C. C.

— As East Indian Railway Stock, not being an authorised security, is not expressly mentioned in the investment clause, I think this case falls under Harris v. Harris (29 Be. 107), where it was decided that a power to invest "upon the security of the funds of any company incorporated by Act of Parliament," did not warrant an investment in railway preference shares. I think, therefore, that the clause is not sufficient authority to the trustees to invest upon the stock in question. Owl.

(Q. 39.) CUSTODY OF INFANT.—A. B. should execute a power of attorney (which is an instrument under seal attested by one witness) to some one in the country, sending at the same time an affidavit as to the age of the infant, the nature and amount of its fortune, what relations it has, and why A. B. desires to remove it from its mother's custody. Such person should then apply to the Court of Chancery. The application should be at chambers, by original summons, entitled, "In the matter of C. B., an infant, by his next friend." If the infant has no property a small sum, such as £100, should be vested in a trustee for his benefit previously to the application. OWL.

LAW SOCIETIES.

ORGANISATION AMONG SOLICITORS.

(Continued from page 72.)

The Work done by Local Law Societies.

Such being the geographical position, what is the nature of these law societies; what do they set themselves to do, and how do they do it? In some cases I have reason to know, from correspondence with their secretaries, that but little actual work is attempted; that the committees are rarely summoned, and that there is much difficulty in securing an attendance even when important business is before them. The societies of which this is true exist mainly for the purpose of social intercourse, of promoting good feeling and facilitating the settlement among themselves of disputed points of practice or etiquette. These are important objects, and I do not underrate them. The really active societies, however, do this and something more. They watch legislation and judicial decisions affecting their interests and the interests of their clients. Law Bills in Parliament are regularly sent to them, considered by their committees, and reported on when necessary to general meetings of the society. The strongest of them have recognised positions in their towns as public bodies, and as such enter into official communication with municipal corporations, chambers of commerce, and members of Parliament. The most powerful body in the locality which knew that it had to encounter the determined opposition of one of these societies would take that fact (I suspect) into consideration. With every respect to Sir George Jessel, they are neither obscure nor uninfluential, but on the contrary, perfectly well known and highly respected; wielding large powers, and wielding them for the public good. A really active local law society is, within its own range of influence, most effective. For all purposes of local action, for the purpose of bringing to bear on public questions, and on public men the concentrated force of a particular district; for the purpose of establishing friendly relations between the members of a profession who do business under somewhat exasperating conditions; for the purpose of compelling the attention of its members to questions not only interesting as problems in jurisprudence and political science, but of direct moment to themselves; for the purpose of creating and preserving a high standard of professional honour, such a society is efficient and powerful.

Concerted action of Local Law Societies.

But for the purpose of concerted action, as a means of bringing the united strength of our Profession to bear on given questions, local law societies, as at present constituted, are not adapted and are not effective. I say this with some knowledge of what may be done, and of what has actually been accomplished, by the spontaneous association of certain law societies. When the Judicature Bill was before Parliament there were certain parts of that Bill—the district registry clauses and the clauses relating to the appointment of referees—to which a large number of country solicitors attached much importance. This part of the Bill having been pointedly threatened, some societies who occasionally act together, the Law Society of this town, the societies of Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, and Leeds, took the matter up, had a meeting and formed a committee, sent some of their members to London, prepared a circular which was issued to every law society in the kingdom, procured the assent of about fourteen societies to that circular, distributed it to all members of Parliament, and in other ways actively intervened to secure the object in view. But the difficulties of working were very great, and the labour was very great, and those difficulties and that labour cannot, under existing conditions, be faced often or except on occasions of very unusual importance.

Our position as regards organisation is therefore this. We have two societies established in London occupying the same ground and doing what may be regarded as practically the same work—watching the interests of the Profession generally, directly and actually representing the London branch of it, but without any adequate or recognised means either of ascertaining the opinions of the mass of country solicitors, or of giving effect to those opinions if they knew them. And we have thirty-five local law societies, some of them very active and powerful in their own districts, and capable on an emergency of bringing considerable force to bear; others little more than social clubs, but each existing and acting in the main independently and without any acknowledged means of combination. These societies are, moreover, so few and so situated in place that while no county or considerable district in the kingdom is sufficiently represented, sixteen English and eight Welsh counties, to say nothing of many most important districts and towns, are not represented at all.

Parliamentary Influence.

With these facts before us we need not wonder that men in official position can afford to sneer at our Parliamentary influence, and that legislation should be conducted without reference to our opinions, and in a sense frequently adverse to our legitimate demands. Now I think that an educated and powerful body of men should not consent to this contemptuous indifference. We should not be satisfied to be held of so much smaller account than the Licensed Victuallers' Association or the Council of Trades Unions. And the question is, how to make ourselves felt. There is but one means, and that is by a more perfect organisation. I proceed to offer some suggestions on this head.

Suggestions for Organisation.

Suppose we had at this moment no organisation or administrative machinery of any kind, and that the question before us were, how best to arrange our force and make it effective for the purpose in hand. What would be assumed as necessary by men who had to consider this question for the first time? Given the circumstances of our Profession, on what lines would persons acquainted with those circumstances propose to build. I think it would occur to every one that, in order to make the most of the influence of a body so widely separated as solicitors, no single centre of administration would suffice. I say "to make the most of the influence"—for it is not the payment of an annual subscription, but personal attention, that is needed. But in order to interest men in a subject to the degree necessary to induce them to give their active attention to it, it must be brought near to them, and they must have something to do with it beyond merely subscribing to further it. To get at the solicitors of Cornwall and Northumberland, for instance, we must find something to do in Cornwall and in Northumberland; something to engage their attention and make them feel that they are directly responsible for a part of the common work. And a second postulate would be, that an exceedingly strong administration must be established in London. We should, in effect, say to ourselves,—"Go to—let us have a London office and branch offices all over the country. Let us give to our London office a strength and position that will enable it worthily to represent us at the centre of affairs, but let us take care that it does represent us, and to this end let it be connected with its affiliated members by an efficient system of representation and by constant and active communication." A strong central administration, connected with local administration sufficiently numerous to utilise our diffused strength, would be, I suspect, the guiding idea if we had to construct our organisation de novo.

The system at present in operation does not, I need scarcely say, fulfil these requirements. It is both redundant and defective. As regards the metropolitan administration, it gives us too much, and as regards the provincial administration too little. We have in London two societies, each to a great extent managed by the same men, each representing the same general interests, doing, or aiming at doing, the same work; active together, inactive together, but with distinct offices, a separate staff and a different name. And we have in the country a wholly and absurdly insufficient number of law societies, unconnected with each other, and unrelated to the central offices in London.

Remedies.

The remedy for this unsatisfactory state of things is not far to seek. As regards London, it would appear on every ground desirable to unite the Incorporated with the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association. So far as the interests of the London Profession alone are concerned, the dual representation and management is nothing but a loss of prestige and a waste of working power. So far as the interests of the country Profession are involved, the co-existence of the two societies only serves to perplex and embarrass. On those occasions, happily not very frequent hitherto, when there has been a division of opinion between the solicitors of London and the country, the Metropolitan and Provincial Association is neutral, and therefore useless. So far as this association was designed to furnish the provincial branch of our Profession with a means of enforcing their views on points on which the metropolitan branch was supine or hostile, it has failed. And it may be predicted with tolerable confidence that it will always fail in this respect. For it is not in human nature to expect a body, the working strength of which is formed by London men, to be zealous in doing that to which as London men they totally object. So far as it was designed to enable London and the country to co-operate on points on which they are agreed, that object will be better promoted by the country solicitors joining the older and more powerful body, and thus making one very strong society instead of two comparatively weak ones—a matter of so much importance that it would be worth while making some sacrifice to make it, even if sacrifices were implied (which I think they are not) in the step.

But as regards the country there is much to do. There are in England at least eighty towns which should have their law societies as a matter of absolute and immediate necessity. In what state must we consider an organization to be in which there is no ready way of moving the Profession in towns like Chester, with fifty-one practising solicitors, Derby, with forty-six solicitors, Durham with thirty-four, Oxford with thirty-four, Huddersfield with forty-four, Sheffield with eighty-eight, Bradford with sixty, Norwich with eighty, and Nottingham with eighty-one solicitors—all these towns, moreover, the centres of important districts?

I cannot help thinking that if this matter were seriously taken up, and an appeal made to the heads of the Profession in the towns I have named, and in others mentioned in a list annexed to this paper, many, at least, would be induced to act.

Modus operandi.

I should suggest a circular pointing out the necessity of the step, together with some hints as to the manner in which law societies may be formed and worked. That information on this subject is useful is shown by the applications occasionally made to the secretaries of the established societies for a copy of their rules. In towns in which there is no law library the formation of one might be made with advantage a part of the scheme.

But the law societies formed and to be formed require two distinct lines of connection. First, they should be connected with what I call for shortness "The London Society"—that is, the society formed by the merger of the Metropolitan and Provincial with the Incorporated Law Society. I do not think it at all necessary that provision should be made for enabling law societies, as such, to become members of the London body.

The working of Law Societies.

The mere fact of the establishment of a local law society should entitle it to correspond with and obtain such information and assistance as the London Society can bestow. There should be a secretary in the London office, charged with the special duty of corresponding with the local societies. Bills in Parliament and other papers should be circulated among them, and their attention called to matters which men immersed in their own business, and far from the centre of affairs, are apt to overlook. Secondly, the law societies should have facilities for co-operating as among themselves. It frequently happens that particular districts are specially affected by legislative and other proposals. There is a Railway Bill, or a Rivers Commission, or a Mines Regulation Bill, or some matter of that kind, in which the solicitors of a wide district may be interested. It may even happen that on some more general question a very considerable number of country solicitors may wish to act together and independently of others. Such was the case with regard to the district registry clauses of the Judicature Bill—such may be the case when the second report of the Judicature Commissioners is embodied in a bill. Such joint action is, under present circumstances, extremely embarrassing. It will be difficult under any circumstances, but not so difficult. Assume for the moment that we had a hundred local law societies in the United Kingdom. They would probably be distributed somewhat in this way—thirty in the six northern counties, forty in the twenty-two southern and western counties, and thirty in the twenty-three midland and eastern counties. It would be quite practicable for the law societies of these three groups to form themselves into unions—say the Northern, Midland, Southern, Eastern, and Western Union, or, if necessary, still more—with joint committees, and the power of summoning members whenever and wherever desirable, and of acting on behalf of the constituent bodies.

That is all that need be done at first in the way of framework. It would give regularity and formal sanction to their acts, and additional regulations would grow out of this. The main difficulty is, of course, in getting members at a distance to attend, and in inducing them to work when they do attend. That is a difficulty which cannot be surmounted by any administrative facilities, but the preliminary one can. But you will note that it is an obstacle which is serious in proportion to the fewness of the societies; as these increase it will almost certainly diminish.

Summary.

The proposals I have laid before you are therefore shortly these:—1. The amalgamation of the Incorporated Law Society and the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Associations. 2. The formation of an adequate number of local law societies, and the establishment of a connection between the London society and the local law societies on the one hand, and the local law societies between themselves on the other. I have purposely avoided entering into detail as to the manner in which these changes are to be worked out, both because I am anxious not to distract your attention from what has to be done by a premature discussion on how to do it, and because I conceive the difficulties to be, not in carrying out, but in initiating the scheme. When the men of our Profession awake to the fact that with all their great power they are comparatively powerless; when they draw the inference that this arises from an imperfect organisation, and, when realising this, they make up their minds to act, that first step will involve the rest. I do not say that I attach no importance to the form which our organisation is to take; on the contrary, I consider it most important; but I think the form of infinitely less moment than the substance. This plan may be better than that; but this or that plan is nothing compared with the determination to have an organisation of some kind at any price and without delay.

LIST OF TOWNS IN WHICH NO LAW SOCIETIES AT PRESENT EXIST.

The number of Attorneys is given in parentheses.

Barrow-in-Furness (14)
Bedford (14)
Beverley (14)
Blackburn (28)
Boston, Lincoln (17)
Bradford (60)
Bridgwater (19)
Burton-on-Trent (14)
Bury, Lancashire (16)
Canterbury (18)
Cardiff (36)
Carmarthen (17)
Chatham (14)
Cheltenham (41)
Chester (51)
Chichester (10)
Chippenham (10)
Chorley (10)
Cirencester (11)
Colchester (21)
Coventry (22)
Croydon (30)
Darlington (20)
Deal (10)
Derby (46)
Devonport (19)
Dewsbury (22)
Dolgelly (10)
Doncaster (24)
Dover (14)
Dudley (18)
Durham (34)
Falmouth (10)
Greenwich (20)
Halifax (36)
Hanley, Stafford (15)
Harrogate (11)
Hartlepool (11)
Hastings (18)
Haverfordwest, Pembroke (16)
Hereford (26)
Huddersfield (44)
Ipswich (38)
Leamington (22)
Lewes (17)
Lichfield (17)
Middlesborough (15)
Newark (17)
Newport, Monmouth (33)
Norwich (80)
Nottingham (81)
Oldham (20)
Oswestry (22)
Oxford (36)
Pembroke and Dock (18)
Penzance (14)
Peterborough (16)
Portsea (26)
Portsmouth (18)
Reading (21)
Rochdale (26)
Rochester (18)
Salisbury (19)
Scarborough (25)
Sheffield (88)
South Shields (16)
Shrewsbury (37)
Southsea (19)
Stockport (15)
Stockton (23)
Stourbridge (19)
Stroud (21)
Swansea (26)
Truro (17)
Wakefield (28)
Walsall (25)
Warrington (17)
Warwick (18)
Whitehaven (22)
Wigan (27)
Yarmouth (29)

MANCHESTER LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

THE annual meeting of this society was held on Tuesday evening, the 18th ult., at the Law Library, Cross-street Chambers, Manchester.

Thomas Jepson, Esq., solicitor, President of the Manchester Incorporated Law Association, occupied the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been duly confirmed, the honorary secretary, Mr. C. T. Bateman, read the committee's report, which was, on his motion, unanimously adopted, of the proceedings and position of the society during the preceding session; and proposed, as new members, Messrs. J. H. Clayton, L. R. Entwisle, Charles Lord, Thomas Marshall, — Nicholson, and William Pratt. The election of officers, appointed to take place on that evening, was by special resolution postponed to the following meeting.

R. M. Pankhurst, Esq., LL.D., barrister-at-law, delivered a lecture on "The historic and philosophic methods in relation to the study of the law." He believed the present was a moment of supreme importance with respect to the study of the law in England, for he believed they were on the point of entering upon a much higher estimate of the relation which the legal Profession bore to the political and social system. They all knew that soon after any great political reform in which society has made some substantial advance, the law, which was solid and inflexible, had to be amended, so as to bring it into harmony with the altered state of society. Some years ago there was a settlement of the constitutional system to a very considerable extent, and that was now being reflected upon the legal system by a substantial scheme of law reform, so that a kind of new career was opening up for the law student. Adverting to the origin and progress of law, he said our personal law was derived entirely from the old conception of the patriarchal family. That was the unit of ancient society, and from that unit was derived the law of personal status such as we have it at present. The law of property was derived from an aggregate of family groups constituted into a village community. From the relations of this village community holding land in common, cultivating it in common, and enjoying the fruits of it in common they obtained the roots of the real property law as it existed in England. In connection with this part of the subject he described the law relating to married women's property in England and in France, contending that in the latter country it was much more in accordance with justice than in England. He afterwards dwelt at great length on the analytic and philosophic study of the law. When they viewed the law in its various phases by a firm and clear use of the analytic process, they were not only giving themselves a mental discipline which constituted a high education, but they were laying the foundation of that solid appreciation of the principles and deductions from principles which, supplemented by a fair degree of practical work in after life, was calculated to make them not only sound lawyers, but efficient public servants.

Mr. J. F. Milne, solicitor, in moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, expressed his dissent from some of the views propounded on the subject of married woman's property. He believed that what Dr. Pankhurst and his friends meant by the freedom of married women was the slavery of married men—which he should resist to the utmost.

Mr. Cooper, solicitor, seconded the motion, which was passed with acclamation.

Dr. Pankhurst, in the course of his reply, after referring to the Married Women's Property Act 1870, which he characterised as a very faulty measure, expressed a hope that the time was not far distant when acts of Parliament, before becoming law, would be reduced to plain, intelligible terms, so that they might not have the judges saying, "this is a muddle of words called an Act of Parliament, and we have to give an intelligible meaning to it, but we cannot do so, and must do as well as we can." It was the function of Parliament to say that they wanted certain things doing, but they should leave to competent legal draftsmen to say how it should be done. What was wanted was a body of legal advisers to take up the ideas which Parliament submitted, and reduce them to a technical but intelligible form before they received the royal sanction.

Thanks were then respectively accorded to the "retiring officers," to the members of the Manchester Law Library and Manchester Incorporated Law Societies, and, finally, to the chairman of the evening. After these votes had been severally responded to, and the secretary had made the usual announcements, the meeting terminated.

The second meeting of the present session of the above Society was held, at the same place, on Tuesday evening the 25th inst., when W. A. B. Hamilton, Esq., barrister-at-law, presided. The following officers were elected: Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. C. T. Bateman; auditor, Mr. R. G. Lawson; and members of committee, Messrs. H. N. Bryan, L. Broadbent, C. J. Cooper, Doyle, A. W. Grundy, R. G. Lawson, A. B. Platt, H. J. Sharp, Jos. Whitaker, and W. A. Whitehead.

Messrs. C. J. Cooper, Jonas Craven, and G. H. Medlicott, were proposed, and Messrs. Clayton, Entwistle, Lord, Marshall, Nicholson, and Pratt, elected members of the society.

The Chairman then called upon Mr. Grundy to move, "That no breach of a contract for service ought to be treated as a criminal offence," which motion was seconded by Mr. Whittaker. Messrs. Lawson and Bateman opposed the resolution, which, after a reply from Mr. Grundy and a summing by the chairman, was rejected by a majority of four votes. The proceedings concluded with a cordial vote of thanks to Mr. Hamilton.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at 1, Milford-lane, Strand, W.C., on Wednesday, the 3rd Dec. Mr. H. Lewis Arnold in the chair. Mr. T. J. Baker opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz.: "That it is desirable to appoint a Public Prosecutor." The motion was carried by a majority of 4.

LAW ASSOCIATION.

AT the usual monthly meeting of the directors, held at the hall of the Incorporated Law Society, in Chancery-lane, on Thursday, the 4th inst., the following being present, viz., Mr. Desborough (chairman), Mr. Steward, Mr. Burges, Mr. Gresham, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Masterman, Mr. Sidney Smith, and Mr. Boodle (secretary), the sum of £50 was granted to the widow of a member, a grant of £10 was made to the widow of a non-member, and two new members were elected.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

AT the usual weekly meeting of the society, held at the Law Institution on Tuesday evening last, the following question was discussed, No. 526, legal: "Bequest to A. for life, and after her decease equally to testator's brothers, but if any died (leaving issue) during A.'s lifetime, their shares to be divided equally amongst their children. Are children of a brother who died before the date of the will, and of whose death testator must have had knowledge, entitled to share?" The question was decided in the negative.

UNION SOCIETY OF LONDON.

AT a meeting of this society, held at the rooms of the Social Science Association, No. 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, on Tuesday evening last, the following subject was opened for discussion by Mr. Charles Ford, "That the Happiness of Mankind is not Increased by Civilisation."

After an animated debate, in which members of both branches of the legal Profession took part (the attendance of members being unusually large), the motion was lost by a majority of 1.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

THE usual monthly meeting of the board of directors of this association was held on Wednesday last, the 3rd Dec., at the Law Institution, London, Mr. Park Nelson in the chair, the other directors present being, Messrs. Brook, Hedger, Lake, Rickman, Roscoe, Shaen, Smith, Veley (of Chelmsford), and Williamson; Mr. Eiffe, secretary. A sum of £115 was granted in donations of relief to eight necessitous families of deceased solicitors, three new members were admitted to the association, and other general business transacted.

PETERBOROUGH ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

ON Thursday evening, the 27th Nov., a meeting of this society was held at the County Court, New-road, W. Wilkins, Esq., solicitor, in the chair.

It being an open night there was a large gathering of the members and their friends.

The subject for debate was "The Advisability of Admitting any of the So-called Woman's Rights." Mr. Morgan opened in the affirmative, and Mr. C. V. Thorneycroft opposed. On being put to the meeting the question was decided in the negative by a large majority.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

H. J. BARTLEY, ESQ.

THE late Henry John Bartley, Esq., of No. 30, Somerset-street, Portman-square, W., solicitor, who died on the 22nd ult., at his residence in Abbey-place, St. John's-wood, at the age of forty-seven, was the eldest surviving son of the late Charles Pitt Bartley, Esq., solicitor. The deceased gentleman, together with his father, had carried on business in Somerset-street for nearly half a century, and by their upright and sterling qualities had achieved a considerable reputation. He was highly esteemed and appreciated by a large circle of friends. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred in Kensal-green Cemetery.

T. H. A. POYNDER, ESQ.

THE late Thomas Henry Allen Poynder, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Hartham-park and Hillmarton, Wiltshire, who died on the 26th ult. at Bath, in the sixtieth year of his age, was the eldest son of the late Thomas Poynder, Esq., of Hartham-park and Hillmarton, by Sarah Marianne, daughter of Allen Cooper, Esq., of the Hon. East India Company's Service. He was born in the year 1814, and was educated at the Charterhouse and at Brasenose College, Oxford, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1836, and proceeded M.A. in 1838. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's-inn in Trinity Term 1839, and practised for some time at chambers in New-square, Lincoln's-inn, but retired some years ago from the active duties of his profession. Like many members of his family, Mr. Poynder took an active part in organising various movements of a charitable nature in Wiltshire and in the metropolis, and his name will consequently long be remembered by those who have participated in his liberality. Mr. Poynder was a commissioner of lieutenancy for the city of London, and a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Middlesex and Wiltshire, and served as high sheriff of the latter county in 1865. He married in 1842, Mary Anne, daughter of Robert Edmeades, Esq., and became a widower about two years ago.

T. BRANSON, ESQ.

THE late Thomson Branson, Esq., solicitor, of Sheffield, who died at his residence, Broom Grove, in that town, on the 29th Oct., in the eighty-first year of his age, was the eldest son of the late Mr. Anthony Branson, of Ketton, in the county of Rutland, and was born at Matlock, Derbyshire, in the year 1793. He was admitted a solicitor in Hilary Term 1815, and at the time of his death he was the senior member of the Profession at Sheffield. Mr. Branson acted for many years as consular agent of the United States of America at Sheffield, and he was one of the founders of Wesley College, in that town, of which successful institution he continued to be a trustee and the secretary from its opening to the time of his decease, a period of upwards of thirty years. The deceased gentleman was married, and has left issue a son, Mr. Charles Anthony Branson, who was admitted into the Profession in 1853, and was in partnership with his father. His remains were interred at the Sheffield Cemetery.

JOHN P. FEARON, ESQ.

WE regret to announce the death of Mr. John P. Fearon, the head of the well-known firm of Fearon, Clabon, and Fearon, solicitors and parliamentary agents, in Great George-street, Westminster. Mr. Fearon, from failing health, had lately resided at his house, near Cuckfield, Sussex, his native place, where he died on the 17th ult., in his seventieth year. Mr. Fearon was the son of the Rev. Joseph Francis Fearon, for many years vicar of Cuckfield. He was educated at the formerly well-known school of Dr. Gurney, at Greenwich. He was admitted in the year 1825, and it was not long before he attained eminence both as a solicitor and parliamentary agent. We take the following from the Sussex Express: "One of those farsighted men, who, in the infancy of the railway system, perceived the importance of its extension through the country, he was, with a few others, the originator of the South-Eastern Railway; and it was he who suggested, and at a critical moment, accomplished, the purchase of the Folkestone Harbour, the control of which he saw to be essential to the foreign traffic of that line. Subsequently Mr. Fearon was appointed solicitor to the Attorney-General in ex officio charity suits; and we are assured that his reports on the cases which were thus brought before him, would form a very instructive volume on the true principles of charity law. The dutles of this office obliged him to deal much with educational schemes in connection with endowed schools, and it may be interesting to many, at the present time, to learn that he was always opposed to mere secular teaching, which he held to be simply impossible. It was mainly owing to his suggestions that the Act was passed constituting the present Charity Commission. But though a man of acute intellect and extensive knowledge, he will be remembered in his native place chiefly from the unvarying kindness, sweetness of temper, and cheerfulness which endeared him alike to rich and poor." We may add that Mr. Fearon's abilities and high principle, coupled with his geniality and gentleness of manner, won him the respect and kindly regard of all his professional brethren. His death will be generally regretted.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

CAUSE LIST AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM 1873.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.

(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR and LORDS JUSTICES.)

Appeals.

Cavander v. Bulteel
City of London Brewery Company (Limited) v. Tennant
Michael v. Fripp
Occleston v. Fullalove
Attorney-Gen. v. Mayor, &c., of the Borough of Sunderland
Colthurst v. Smith
Nelson v. Nelson
Croaker v. Standing
Chadwick v. Chadwick
Fothergill v. Rowland
Fothergill v. Rowland
Fothergill v. Rowland
Synge v. Synge

Rolls Court.

Causes set down previous to Transfer.

Hay v. Bates
Clowes v. Hogg
Edwards v. Loftus
Ridgway v. Ridgway
Ridgway v. Ridgway

Remaining Causes, transferred from the Books of the Vice-Chancellors Sir R. MALINS and the late Sir J. WICKENS, by Order dated 2nd May 1873.

Cameron v. Leyland
Salmon v. Brooks
Wilkinson v. Wilkinson
The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris v. The Consolidated Bank (Limited)
Gibson v. Woodruff
Kenworthy v. Coffin
Faulkner v. Kershaw
Hodges v. Wieland
Cruickshank v. Bland
Steers v. Eveleigh
Smith v. Keysell
Jackson v. Paul
Kellaway (pauper) v. Douglas
Smith v. Smith.

Causes set down since the Transfer.

Hawes v. Essex Brewery Company
Matthews v. Roberts
Newcomen v. Wharton
Sackville v. Smyth
Birks v. Wells
The Thames Iron Works Ship Building, Engineering, and Dry Dock Company (Limited), v. Nisbet
Graham v. Drewe
Sanders v. Pooley
Jarvis v. Bergheim
Ward v. Lawson
Meke, Knt., v. Corfield
Oliver v. Oliver
Blaxall v. Allan
Haselfoot v. Boyd
Few v. Berry
Johnson v. Rawlinson
Dugdale v. Hays
Reid v. Dunnan
Webb v. Tulk
Basnett v. Moxon
Myers v. Smyth
Fuller v. South African Silver and Copper Mining Company (Limited)
Reason v. Mills
O'Donoghue v. Lamb
Watson v. Watson
Waring v. Currey
Jones v. Church
Bond v. Surman
Homes v. Postlethwaite
Newell v. Keene
Meyrick v. Mathias
Miller v. Crockett
Jolly v. Ford
Evans v. Evans
Blackburn v. Lamb
Meek, Knt. v. Webster
Joseph v. Emanuel
Berry v. Gibbons
Gibbons v. Gibbons
Smith v. Hart
Icke v. Underhill
Robinson v. Evans
Lord Abinger v. Ashton
Minet v. Morgan
Taylor v. Rule
Miller v. Crockett
Atherton v. Merriman
Still v. Elliott
Price v. Baines
Fleming v. Manger
Taylor v. Taylor
Attorney-General v. Local Board of Aylesbury
Martin v. Cunningham
Re Hayward's Estate—Hayward v. Cook
Gale v. Fladgate
Collier v. Walters
Caffin v. Caffin
Hine v. Jackson
Quekett v. White
Wright v. Phillips
Higgatt v. Higgatt
Attorney-General v. Terry
Chadwick v. Parrett
Hay v. Bellamy
Fleming v. Banks
Gatty v. Pawson
Tomkins v. Lydall
The Protector Endowment Loan and Annuity Company v. Fitzroy
Garle v. Westall
Cooper v. Lyons
Averill v. Beeston
Dixon v. Green
Photogenic Gas Company (Limited) v. Mongruel
Illiff v. Ward—Nicholson v. Ward
Buchanan v. Currie
Haigh v. Kaye

V.C. Malins' Court.

Causes.

Digby v. Ward
Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co. v. Swindon Waterworks Co. (Limited)
Dorin v. Dorin
Smith v. Government Stock Investment Co.
Smith v. Government Stock Investment Co.
Armstrong v. Holmes
Prescott v. Barker
Maynard v. Eaton
Harvey v. Horry
Burgess v. Bennett
Blakey v. Rushworth
De Witte v. Dennie
Hall v. Harland
Bain v. Percy
Smith v. Grant
Whiteley v. Kemp
Brock v. Cridland
Newman v. Hendy
Kent v. Kent
Nind v. Church
Schollick v. Edye
Pickering v. Agar
Wilson v. Thornbury
Taylor v. East London Railway Co.
Taylor v. East London Railway Co.
Pudge v. Pudge
Randell v. Samels
Kelsey v. Kelsey
Bryan v. Moss
Parks v. Briscoe
Street v. Bonsor
Canter v. Wodehouse
Barrett v. Beck
Flood v. Hampden
Kettle v. Drayner
Barnes v. Barnes
Goodwin v. Gray
Reece v. Reece
Lloyd v. Finlay
Walker v. Dobson
Da Bay v. Griffin
Plumer v. Gregory
Rennick v. Kino
Darcy v. Batt
Blackmore v. Tuck
Bradshaw v. Congreve
Bright, Knt. v. Marcoartu
Webster v. Malcolm
Jupp v. Callaway
Maunsell v. Payne
Ffrench v. The British Commercial Ins. Co. (Lim.)
Gruning v. Smethurst
Torrens v. Hilliard
Whitaker v. Whitaker
Belcher v. Green
Allen v. Lewis
Stewart v. Lupton
Brown v. Beet
Souch v. East London Railway Company
Peel v. Smith
Ex parte E. Brain & others
Humphrey v. Lawson
Moody v. Martin
Thynne v. Day
Okey v. Hogg
Cayless v. Sills
Leach v. Smith
Koelbel v. Gardner
Prince v. Dear
Harding v. Spiller
Thomas v. Howell
Palmer v. Akers
Smith v. Smith
Moses v. James
Maddin v. Driscoll
Fisher v. Harrison
May v. May
Armstrong v. Armstrong
Day v. Stoward
Lucas v. Siggers
Higgs v. Ritherdon
Perring v. Trail
Nalborough v. Jackaman
Hooper v. Hooper
Trebilcock v. Thomas
Collins v. Thorn
Blayney v. Lawrence
Pearce v. London Tramways Co. (Limited)
Vickers v. Dicks
Shelton v. Kidman
Ball v. Connett
Wier v. Gisborne
Ward v. Ramsden
Angell v. Angell
Sykes v. Wilde
Dutton v. Hockenhull
Smith v. Smith
Rodgers and Sons (Lim.) v. Rodgers
Parr v. Nunn
Blacque v. Rowlinson
Howell v. Lloyd
Whittet v. Hooper
Moate v. Moate
Oakes v. Oakes
Collins v. Slade
Davison v. Barber
Bintley v. Wright
Hodson v. Spring
Taylor v. Poncia
Baxendale v. Wilkinson
Narraway v. Beattie
Davis v. Cox
Halfpenny v. Davies
Lascelles v. Mills
Elmes v. Jull
De Stacpoole v. De Stacpoole
Spear v. Whitworth
Todd v. Tidy
Gould v. Clavey
Barnston v. Barnston
Laurie v. Hemsworth
Mortimer v. Ring
Caballero v. Henty
Cleaver v. Jones
Rotch v. Marshall
Murrell v. Elkins
Pollard v. Wright
Johnson v. Bailey
Camm v. Read
Hockin v. Hockin
Bailey v. Hartley
Gibson v. Taylor
MacLellan v. Buchanan
Wilson v. Compton
Johnson v. Johnson
Devereux v. Dickson
Topken v. Parrott
Hancock v. Heaton
Parker v. McKenna
Gatecliff v. Ward
Colson v. Norris
Pemberton v. Barnes
Burnand v. Taylor
Whelpdale v. Crosse
Lloyd v. Evans
White v. Witt
Smith v. Howard
Whitworth v. Sellars
Polini v. Gray
Levick v. Sherman
Harris v. Mozley
Mozley v. Harris
Thomas v. Davies
Hewitt v. Batt
Stacpoole v. Dunn
Mayhew v. Calder
Hands v. Gullick
Sale v. Wilson
Simon v. Lloyd
Murray v. Light
Collyer v. Collyer-Bristow
Geilgud v. Camus
Nixon v. Garnett
Williams v. Gilding
Roper v. Roper
Peacey v. Colman
National Society v. School Board for London
Attorney-Gen. v. English
May v. Robertson
Jones v. Margetson
Pring v. Gimblett
Scaffold v. Hampton
Martell v. Dear
Tolfree v. Hunt

V.C. Bacon's Court.

Causes set down previous to Transfer.

Stevenson v. Masson
Batchelor v. Bladon
Adlington v. Mence
Howes v. Phillips
Great Western Insurance Company v. Cunliffe
Treacher & Co. (limited) v. Treacher
Burke v. Keith
Youde v. Cloud
London and Provincial Marine Insurance Company v. Seymour
Taylor v. Fisher
King v. Sherrott
Whittaker v. Whittaker
Bousfield v. Bousfield
Pinchard v. Fellows
Hathesing v. Laing
Laing v. Zeden
Bailey v. Schweitzer
Giffard v. Phillips
Baxter v. Chapman
Smith v. Keane
Tucker v. Dimsdale
Middleton v. Barker
Wilson v. The Furness Railway Company.

Remaining Causes, transferred from the books of the Vice-Chancellors Sir R. MALINS and the late Sir J. WICKENS, by Order dated 9th June 1873.

Avis v. Avis
Yardley v. Holland
Heron v. Davey
Brown v. Towell
Gallagher v. Fleming
Towell v. Brown
Wylam v. Watts
Rudge v. Bennett
Ramm v. Taylor
Healey v. Borough of Batley
Latham v. Chartered Bank of India, China, and Australia
Lewis v. Lewis
Pickering v. Chadwick
Colquhoun v. Courtenay
Horn v. King
Countess de Palatiano v. Hartley
Bell v. London and South-Western Bank (Limited)
Gott v. Gott
Swain v. Swain
Schanck v. Scott
Fox v. Heinke
Blakeley v. Crawshaw
Dixon v. Fisken
Singer v. Audsley
Wickham v. Fitz-Worlock
Dick v. Montague
Hoe v. Thorpe
Greg v. Sagar
Barton v. Hobson
Ive v. Smith
Gwynne v. Great Eastern Railway Company
Greaves v. Smith
Smith v. Butler
Moore v. Ross
Bumpus v. Bumpus
Woodford v. Brooking
Coghlan v. Kempe
Mackrell v. Notley
Shaw v. Longbottom
Driver v. Driver
Porter v. Bell
Dubois v. Charsley
Cooper v. Green
Mutlow v. Bigg
Cole v. Scott
Green v. Cooper
Rumboll v. Taylor
Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Junction Railway Company
Snelling v. Thomas
Paine v. Jones
Fisher v. Russell
Robins v. Rose
Parker v. Trigg
Parnell v. Stevens
Tomlinson v. Lowe
Bulley v. Bulley
Greville v. Greville
Berry v. Harris
Dean v. Butt—Stephenson v. Butt
Evans v. Verrall
Bird v. Bird's Patent Deodorising and Utilising Sewage Company (Limited)
Worthington v. Curtis
Waldegrave v. Bastard
Lancaster v. Walker
Moon v. Veale
Bates v. Eley
Eley v. Bates
Hooper v. Abell

Causes set down since the Transfer.

Edmundson v. Hargreaves
Mackett v. Bayliss
Attorney-Gen. v. The Furness Railway Company
Fothergill v. Rickards
Forbes v. Black
Willams v. Evans
Hyde v. Large
Wood v. Harrogate Improvement Commissioners
Levy v. Creighton
Hoggarth v. Simpson
Adkins v. The Common Council of City of London
Vaughan v. Halliday
Walker v. Hellawell
Norris v. Barber
Adie v. Clark
Clark v. Adie
Maule v. Davis
Sykes v. Smith
Lownds v. Williams
Earle v. Appleyard
Attorney-Gen. v. Metropolitan Board of Works
Gibbon v. Fox
Stenhouse v. Davidson
Donaldson v. Donaldson
Mawhood v. Morley
Horley v. Richards
Love v. Hall
Packman v. Wells
Finch v. Prescott
Re John Tompkins, dec.
Gardner v. Peach
Shand v. Du Buisson
Dearden v. Lees
Schwartz v. Hamshaw
Coulthard v. Dewhurst
Drew v. Drew
Nicholson v. Carline
Atherton v. De Castro
Cates v. Garside
Allan v. Gott

V.C. Hall's Court.

Causes.

Howard v. Jervis
Camps v. Marshall
Bullocke v. Bullocke
Attorney-General v. The Mayor, &c., of Barnsley
Newbald v. Hale
Wilson v. Coffin
Leese v. Martin
Stansfield v. Peverall
Hopkin v. Ollard
Boutmy v. Boutmy
Boutmy v. Burdett
Rhodes v. Rhodes
Atkinson v. Jones
Cope v. Evans
Brown v. Rye

Fennings v. Pain
Darsie v. Mozley
Radloff v. De Lievre
Clipperton v. Cartwright
Bell v. Bell
Re John Evans's Estate—Evans v. Evans
De la Rue v. Marshall
The Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Company (Limited) v. The Taff Vale Railway Company
Boydell v. Thornewell
Darley v. Entwisle
Pickard v. Pickard
Gardner v. Burbury
Spraggett v. Spraggett
Gael v. Fenwick
Binns v. Fisher
Iver v. Armstrong
Oddy v. Green
Marshall v. Marshall
Christie v. Ovington
Cator v. Drew
Curnick v. Tucker
Oldham v. Oldham
Gill v. Downing
Lake v. Baylay
Tyssen v. Stacey
Bolton v. Adams
Lovibond v. Perrrn
Angell v. Wilkinson
Angell v. Ronald
Hare v. Topham
Gwynne v. Coulthurst
Viant v. Hart
Attorney-General v. Ray
Burbury v. Burbury
Chamberlain v. Chamberlain
Howlett v. Cole
Turner v. London and South-western Railway Company
Toswill v. Gillman
Ashman v. Blackstock
Horwood v. Penny
Carnegie v. Carnegie
Horton v. Hall
Wilkes v. Wilkes
Beckett v. Buckley
Haynes v. Earl
Wagstaff v. Colvin
Hodges v. Patrick
Browne v. White
Dickinson v. Parr
Wilson v. Wilson
Payne v. Wright
Gray v. Denton
Cook v. Needham
Hayes v. Wright
Dimsdale v. Frith
Silverthorne v. Spokes
Campbell v. Francis
De Lisle v. Hodges
Hastie v. Pilcher
Alleyne v. Alleyne
Harrisson v. Laver
Cook v. Giggall
Benson v. Tyson
Truman v. Manners-Sutton
Peters v. Haine
Waldy v. Bradshaw
Master v. Richards
Saull v. Saull
Walker v. Lawton
Hunter v. Wortley
Grimley v. Arnold
Hervey v. Hervey
Darke v. Clough
Darke v. Starr
Baron Howard of Glossop v. Earl of Shrewsbury
Lane v. Sewell
Whitehouse v. Horton
Slack v. Stott
Batteson v. Hobson
Adams v. Norris
Littlefield v. Plomer
Wakefield v. Mattock
Tetley v. Dunwell
Gillespie v. Howard
Price v. Wray
Bruce v. Le Cerf
Brown v. Moore
Millikin v. Lowe
Goodson v. Richardson
Perry v. Bacon
Marsh v. Marsh
Kidd v. Tallentire
Du Tourville v. Beswick
Boynton v. Boynton
Adcock v. Robinson
Havelock v. Priestly
Laidler v. Laidler
West v. Binns
Thomas v. Davies
Gray v. Bateman
Haines v. Ricketts
Cann v. Cann
Watkins v. Evans
Schofield v. Brown
Macneill v. Popplewell
Seymour v. The Iceland Sulphur Co. (limited)
Hill v. Hill
Drew v. Maslem
Knowles v. The Midland Railway Company.
Routledge v. Richardson
James v. Castle
Keys v. Keys
Coppin v. Coppin
Gill v. Gill
Osborn v. Osborn
Haslam v. Eastwood
Rawnsley v. Collingwood
Heline v. Wootton
Mutlow v. L. M. Rigg
Kitching v. Jones
Houlgrave v. Edwards
Peele v. Sandford
Cottrell v. Finney
Agar v. Clement
Bingley v. Benton
Heilbron v. Heilbron
Field v. Clark
Kinghorn v. Williams
Evezard v. Burke
Morison v. London Steam Ship Co. (Limited)
Hill v. South Staffordshire Railway Co.
Elliot v. Trimleston
Taylor v. Strange
Hyde v Holland
Sawtell v. Sawtell
Brooke v. Ingham
Raven v. Francis

Common Law Courts.

Court of Exchequer.

Customs.

The Attorney-General v. Carter

Remanets.

Ward v. South Eastern Railway Company
Morris v. Frankish and another
The Cambrian Railways Co. v. The Manchester and Milford Railway Co.
Copin v. Kressman
Bevan v. The Marbella Iron Ore Company (Limited)
Nicklin v. Great Western Railway Company
Thorp v. Craig
Pearse v. Ponsford
The Midland Wagon Company v. The Brecon and Merthyr Tydfil Junction Railway Company
Brocheton v. Moffatt and another
Treloar a. Bigge
Lomas and Wife v. The Great Western Railway and the Metropolitan Railway Company
Dear v Edwards
Russell v. Webster
Cohen v. Taylor
Rose v. Denton
Brewer v. Same
Galbraith v. The Garstang and Knot End Railway Company
Schofield v. Hernulewicz
Hernulewicz v. Schofield
Sydney v. Michael
Gidney v. Gorringe
Stewart v. Pigou
Nottage v. London General Omnibus Company
Pooley v. Burnup
Gorringe v. Gidney
Godfrey v. Marcus
Johnson v. Bruff
Young v. Ward
Thorne and Wife v. Great Northern Railway Co.
Callcott v. Crozier
March v. Graham
Slade and another v. Millbank
Pickering v. Great Western Railway Company
Johnson v. Brown
Levitt v. Hilton
Lickorish v. Jervis

New Causes.

Brown v. Holt
Cox v. Overall
Whinneray and others v. De Oleaga
Gay and another v. Taylor
The Patent Telegraph Post Riband Company v. Ellis
Nicholson and another v. Sherwood
Snook v. Barclay
Roberts (Bart.) v. Cohu
Barron v. Gurney and others
Smith v. De Pothonier
Oldfield v. Wingrave
Miller v. Hicks
Selig v. Schumann
Simmons v. Reade
Richardson v. Jacobs
Edwards v. Simmons
Garner v. Pocock
Pretty v. Miller
Corbett v. Downs
The Munster Bank v. Hurley
England v. Higgins
Herbert v. Rymill
Morgans v. Penney
Irvine v. Pearce
Turner v. Harper
Hobbs v. Taylor
Foxwell v. Wright
Reece and others v. Atterbury
Smith v. Forrester and others
Martinson v. Waltham
Willshire v. Fiske
Montfort v. Barr
Woodley v. Metropolitan District Railway Company.
Barton v. Great Eastern Railway Company
Coleman v. Doulton
Spence v. London Tramways Company
Strickland v. Dickenson
Tasker v. Brownill
Fowler v. Heucher
Polak v. Coburn
McChlery v. Mills
Regan v. Chidley
Godfrey v Moss
Hotten v. Milbank
Ball v. Bridges
Clark v. Ohlson
Leveaux v. Ashworth
Hart v. Metropolitan Railway Company
Collins v. Ullmann
Newmegan v. Samuel
Johnstone v. Fitzgerald
Leslie v. Biddlecomb and another
The Montrotier Asphalte and Cement, &c., Company v. Duncan
Same v. McMillan
Same v. Drayson
Welton v. Great Northern Railway Company

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

N.B.—Announcements of promotions being in the nature of advertisements, are charged 2s. 6d. each for which postage stamps should be inclosed.

The Right Honourable the Lord Chief Baron Sir Fitzroy Kelly has appointed Mr. B. H. Tromp, of 16, Essex-street, Strand, and 21, Inverness-terterrace, Hyde-park, a London Commissioner to Administer Oaths in Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer of Pleas.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 21.

FINCHAM and BELLYSE, attorneys and solicitors, Blandford Forum. Sept. 29. (William Cole Fincham and Joseph Hayward Bellyse)

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Nov. 28.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

SARGENT, FREDERICK DANIEL, clerk in Great Eastern Railway Co. Stratford. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sol. Angell. Gresham-st. Sur. Dec. 11

SOLOMANS, MICHAEL, clothier, Holywell-la, Shoreditch. Pet. Nov. 25. Reg. Roche. Sol. Solomon, Finsbury-pl. Sur. Dec. 18

To surrender in the Country.

BLATCHLEY, CHARLES, baker, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 27. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 10

BURTON, WILLIAM, chemist, Sutton. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Rowland. Sur. Dec. 9

HANKINSON, WILLIAM HENRY, brickmaker, Hornchurch. Pet. Nov. 25. Reg. Gepp. Sur. Dec. 12

PLATT, JOSEPH, painter, Saddleworth. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Tweedale. Sur. Dec. 10

PRICE, JOHN ALFRED, builder, Hanwell. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Ruston. Sur. Dec. 13

SCRAGG, JOSEPH, cotton spinner, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet. Nov. 24. Reg. Hyde. Sur. Dec. 12

SMITH, JABEZ, ironmonger, Keighley. Pet. Nov. 25. Reg. Robinson. Sur. Dec. 9

WATSON, WILLIAM JAMES, commission merchant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 16

Gazette, Dec. 2.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

ASHBY, GEORGE, grocer, High-st, Hampstead. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Dec. 17

DEVESON, CHARLES, cowkeeper, Neville-ter, Hornsey-rd, Pet. Nov. 28. Reg. Murray. Sur. Dec. 18

RICKET, EDWARD, cook, South Lambeth-rd. Pet. Nov. 27. Reg. Pepys. Sur. Dec. 16

To surrender in the Country.

BUSBY, WILLIAM, grocer, Leigh. Pet. Nov. 28. Reg. Gepp. Sur. Dec. 16

DAWSON, ALICE, beer retailer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 27. Reg. Kay, Sur. Dec. 18

DURHAM, FREDERICK, land surveyor, Thorne. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Wake. Sur. Dec. 12

DYKE, GEORGE, grocer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 27. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 15

JOHNSON, ELIZABETH, widow, Harborne. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Dec. 15

SHEPHARD, SAMUEL, bootmaker, Redruth. Pet. Nov. 28. Reg. Chilcott. Sur. Dec. 15

WILSON, JOHN, oil refiner, West Gorton. Pet. Nov. 28. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 18

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Nov. 25.

CASEY, EDWIN, outfitter, Wilson-ter, Tredegar-rd, North Bow. Aug. 30, 1873

SOLTAU, EDWARD PENNINGTON, gentleman, Redhill. March 23, 1873

Gazette, Nov. 28.

TAYLOR, EDWIN, cotton spinner, Higginshaw, near Oldham. Nov. 4, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 28.

ASHWORTH, JOHN, and ASHWORTH, JAMES, cotton spinners, Accrington. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at three, at the Wheatsheaf hotel, Manchester. Sol. Standring, Rochdale

ATKIN, DICK, butcher, Hitchin. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 8, at eleven, at Messrs. Wade, Hitchin. Sol. Harper, Shefford

ATKIN, HERCULES, cabinet maker. Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Nordon, Liverpool

BAKER, JAMES FREDERICK, builder, Salisbury-ter, Kilburn. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 6, at one, at office of Sol. Johnson, High-st, Marylebone

BANKS, ELIZABETH, grocer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Dommer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne

BASSETT, CHARLES, attorney, Tichborne-st, Regent-circus. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 4, at four, at 21, Tichborne-st, Regent-circus. Sol.

BASTER, ELIZABETH, berlin wool dealer, Brittox. Pet. Nov. 24, Dec. 12, at two, at the Royal Hotel, Bath. Sols. Henderson, Salmon, and Henderson, Bristol

BELCHER, BEN, cook, Reading. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 2, at eleven, at 28, The Forbury, Reading. Sol. Rogers, Reading

BINNS, ABRAHAM, jun., cardmaker, Batley. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at half-past three, at the George hotel, Heckmondwike. Sols. Scholefield and Taylor, Batley

BISHOP, ROBERT, commission agent, Hackney-ter, Hackney. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 11, at eleven, at Thwaites, Basinghall-street. Sol. Scott, Basinghall-st

BROMLEY, WILLIAM, printer, Redditch. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 9, at three, at office of Sol. Simmons, Birmingham

BROOKS, HENRY, blacksmith, Bolton. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 18, at two, at office of Sol. Ryley, Bolton

CHELL, JOSEPH, commission agent, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton

CLARK, FREDERICK, victualler, Tottenham. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Chidley, Old Jewry

CLEMENTS, ANDREW, builder, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester

COOK, REUBEN CHRISTMAS, furniture broker, Lowestoft. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 15, at twelve, at office of Sol. Seago, Lowestoft

COULTER, ROBERT, commission agent, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 19, at two, at Gibson and Bolland, accountants, Liverpool. Sol. Morris, Liverpool

COWELL, JOHN, merchant's clerk, Camden villas, Tottenham. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 13, at three, at offices of Sol. Bassett, Tichborne-st, Regent-circus

CREW JOHN, cowkeeper, Latimer-ter, Notting-hill. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Tilley and Liggins, Finsbury-pl-south

CURTIS, EDMUND, hotel manager, Shanklin. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Durant, Guildhall-chmbs, Basinghall-street

DAVIES, SIMON, jeweller, Cheetham. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Sampson, Manchester

DEAN, JOHN HUGH, bootmaker, King's Norton. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 9, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Hawkes, Birmingham

DINSDALE, JOHN, draper, Askrigg. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 19, at quarter-past ten, at the Green Tree inn, Leyburn. Sol. Waistell, Northallerton

EMERY, SAMUEL ANDERSON, comedian, Alfred-pl, Bedford-sq. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Johnson, Bedford-row

EYNON, JAMES, ironmonger, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 15, at eleven, at Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co., Bristol. Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea

FARWELL, JOHN ALBERT, baker, Melcombe Regis. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 15, at eleven, at the Auction Mart, Melcombe Regis. Sol. Howard, Melcombe Regis

FIELD, THOMAS, dealer, Withington. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Potter, Cheltenham

FINKELL, ALFRED, innkeeper, Whitby. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 11, at three, at offices of Sol. Draper, Stockton

FORSTER, THOMAS, afrmer, Old Cassop. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 9, at three, at office of Sols. Marshall and Folkard, Durham

FOSTER, CHARLES, plumber, Harrogate. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at eleven, at office of Sol. Harle, Leeds

FRAZER, JOSEPH, upholsterer, Westbourne gr. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 19, at three, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sols. Hillyer, Fenwick, and Stibbard, Fenchurch-st

FREEMAN, HENRY, butcher, Nettlebed. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 9, at one, at 151, Friar st, Reading. Sols. Tidy, Herbert, and Tidy, Sackville-st, Piccadilly

GALE, MARIA AMELIA SUSAN, widow. Hackney. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 11, at twelve at office of Sol. O'Brien, Dane's inn, Strand

GREATREX, QUINTIN DICK, butcher, Maldon. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at eleven, at office of Sols. Crick and Freeman, Maldon

GREAVES, WILLIAM HUNSLEY, stuff merchant, Pudsey, and Bradford. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 12, at eleven at office of Sols. Wood and Tilick, Bradford

GREENHALGH, JOSEPH, cloth finisher, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 10, at three, at Burrell and Pickard, accountants, Leeds. Sol. Myers

GREENWOOD, JOHN, glass dealer, Kendal. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Watson, Kendal

HARRIS, BESSIE, lodginghouse keeper, Maida-hill. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 17, at two at office of Sol. Hilbery, Crutched-friars

HARRIS, EMANUEL, hatter, Angel-la, Stratford. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Wills, Charles-sq, Hoxton

HARRISON, HENRY, butcher, Sabden, near Whalley. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 12, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Eastham, Clitheroe

HARROW, WILLIAM, grocer, Nep'ter-st, Deptford. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 12, at twelve, at office of Sol. Moss, Gracechurch-st

HEATON, THOMAS WADDINGTON, grocer, Wigan, and Blindley. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 11, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Ashton, Wigan

HENNELLY, BERNARD, draper, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 11, at three, at offices of Sols. Sale, Shipman, Seddon, and Sale. Manchester

HIRST, JAMES, woolstapler, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Harris, Bradford

HIRST, WALTER mill owner, Morley. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Ibbetson, Dewsbury

HOLLAND, WILLIAM, plumber, Duffield. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 20, at ten, at offices of Sol, Leech, Derby

HOLT, CHARLES, tailor, Chequer-st, St. Albans. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 10, at three, at Honey, Humphrys, Baggs, and Co. King-st, Cheapside. Sol. salaman

HOLWILL, JAMES, tailor, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 11, at twelve, at Barnard, Thomas, Cawker, and Co. Temple-st. Swansea. Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea

HONEYSETT, JOHN, coal merchant, Great Scotland-yd. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol. Bedford-row

HOPKINS, JAMES, button manufacturer, White Post-la, Hackney. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 15, at eleven, at Mr. Thwaites, 42, Basinghall-st. Sol. Scott, Basinghall-st

HOWSON, THOMAS, builder, Spennymoor. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 10, at three, at office of Sols. Marshall and Folkard, Durham

JACOBS, LEWIS, hawker, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Green, Birmingham

JOHNSON, MARY, boot dealer, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 10, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Heath, Manchester

JONES, FRANCIS WILLIAM, brushmaker, Regents-pk-rd. Pet. Nov. 19 Dec. 16, at three, at office of Sol. Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields

JONES, RHYS, victualler, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 10, at twelve, at office of Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea

LAWS, CHARLES, architect, Strand, and Fellows-rd, Haverstock-hill, and Margate. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 17, at two, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 33, Gutter-la. Sol. Vanderpump South-sq, Gray's-inn

LEE, THOMAS, tobacconist, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 11, at three, at offices of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester

LEGGETT, GEORGE, builder, Little George-st, Portman-sq. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 17, at two, at office of Sols. Tilley and Liggins, Finsbury-pl South

LEWIS, JOHN, hosier, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 9, at three, at office of Sol. Turner, Leeds

MCCORMIC, JOHN, boot dealer, Rochdale. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 16, at three, at the Hare and Hounds inn, Rochdale. Sol. Lomax, jun., Rochdale

MAAS, KATZMANN ISRAEL, iron merchant, Esther-pl, Bridge-at, Greenwich. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 15, at two, at office of Sol. Messrs. Spyer, Old Broad-st

MARSDEN, WILLIAM, pawnbroker, Blackburn. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 11, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Darley, Blackburn

MARTIN, BENJAMIN, late corn dealer, St Thomas's-rd, Burdett-rd, Bow. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 6, at ten, at offices of Sol. Dobson, Southampton-bldgs

MATTHEWS, WILLIAM, schoolmaster, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 22 Dec. 9, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham

MILLER, JOSEPH, plasterer, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sols. Fawcett and Malcolm, Leeds

MORGAN, WINDSOR, pattern maker, Stockton. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at two, at office of Sol. Draper, Stockton

MORRIS, MOSES, beerhouse keeper, Newcastle. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Hollinshead, Tunstall

MORTLEMAN, THOMAS, beerhouse keeper, Nunhead, Peckham. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Sherwood, King William-st

MURRELL, EDWARD, innkeeper, Stamford. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 15, at twelve, at office of Sol. Stapleton, Stamford

MUSK, ROBERT, blacksmith, Ilketshall. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 11, at two, at office of Sols. Overbury and Gilbert, Norwich

NAYLOR, JAMES SADLER, esq., Jermyn-st. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sols. Ford and Lloyd, Bloomsbury-sq

NICHOLLS, ROBERT, beerhouse keeper, Mongotsfield. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Beckingham, Bristol

OLLEY, WILLIAM, and MILLER, WILLIAM HENRY, engineer, Enfield Wash. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 18, at one, at office of Dubois, accountant, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sol. Dubois, King-st, Cheapside

PAVELEY, CHARLES, victualler, New-st, Covent-gdn. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 22, at three, Adelphi house, 75a, Strand. Sols. Hicks and Arnold, Salisbury-st, Strand

PEARSON, SAMUEL, victualler, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 9, at twelve, at J. S. Pitt, Albion-chmbs-east, Bristol. Sol. Esserry, Bristol

PIPE, WALTER, baker, George-st, Portland-pl, Marylebone. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sols. Button and Co, Henrietta-st, Covent-gdn

POUNTNEY, WILLIAM, gunmaker, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 5, at four, offices of Sol. Parry, Birmingham

BIECHTER GEORGE, tailor, Hadleigh. Pet Nov 24. Dec. 12, at two, at offices of Sol. Pollard, Ipswich
SAMPSON, JAMES, picture dealer, Cornhill, and Champion-grove, Camberwell. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 19, at three at office of Sol. Davies, Furnival's-inn, Holborn
SEDGWICK, THOMAS WILLIAM, out of business, Commercial-rd, Peckham. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 10, at eleven, at office of Sols. Raven and Curtis, Queen Victoria-st
SMITH, WAVERLEY, and SMITH, ROGER, power loom makers, Hopwood, near Heywood. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 13, at three, at office of Sol. Orton, Heywood
STAPLETON, GEORGE, butcher, Richmond-rd, Bayswater. Pet. Nov 20. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Winkworth, Oxford-st
Regent-circus
TAYLOR, JOSEPH, yeast dealer, Bursiem. Pet. Nov. 10. Dec. 5, at three, at office of Sol. Lees, Bursiem
TAYLOR, THOMAS, dutch yeast importer. Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Ibberson, Dewsbury
THOROGOOD, GEORGE, and THOROGOOD, ARTHUR, builders, Romford. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sol Preston, Mark-la, London
TUBBY, GEORGE, fish salesman, Lowestoft. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 12, at twelve, at the Star hotel, Great Yarmouth. Sol. Wiltshire, Great Yarmouth
WALKER, HENRY, victualler, Sunbury. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 11, at two, at office of Sol. Poole, Bartholomew-close
WATTS, HENRY, hot water engineer, St. John-st, West Smithfield. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Eyre, Rolls-chmbs, Chancery-la
WETTON, HENRY, coach builder, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 12, at two, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester
WILLIAMS, GEORGE, grocer, Cambridge-rd, Kilburn-pk. Pet Nov. 26. Dec. 18, at twelve, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sols. Chorley and Crawford. Moorgate-st
WILLIAMS, RICHARD HUGHES, bootmaker, Aberystwith. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 6, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Hughes, Aberystwith
WOOD, DAN, hatter, Bredbury. Pet. Nov. 19. Dec. 8, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Vaughan, Heaton Norris
WOODHEAD, WILSON, cloth merchant, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 16, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. North, Leeds
WRIGHT, JOHN, bookkeeper, New Ferry. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 17, at two, at the Clarendon rooms, South John-st, Liverpool
WRIGHT, ROBERT ARTHUR, alkali manufacturer, St. Helens. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 10, at three, at the Fleece hotel, Church-st, St. Helens. Sols. Sale, Shipman, Seddon, and Sale, Manchester
WRIGHT, WILLIAM, waste dealer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 12, at eleven, at office of Sol. Rennolls, Bradford

Gazette, Dec. 2.

ABBOTT, THOMAS JAMES, out of business, Princes-st, Rotherhithe. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 10, at ten, at Messrs. Lewis's offices, 123, Chancery-la. Sol. Long
ABRAHAMS, ISAAC, furniture dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 27 Dec. 18, at three, at office of Smart, Snell, and Co. Cheapside, London. Sol. Nordon, Liverpool
ALDOUS, WILLIAM, builder, Armagh-rd, North Bow. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 16, at two, at offices of Sols. Hudson, Matthews, and Co., Buckler's-alley
APPLEBY, LANCELOT, cabinet maker, Middlesborough, and Coatham. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 18, at twelve, at the Corporation hotel, Middlesborough. Sol. Dale, York
ACLD, JOHN, late accountant, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 17, at three, at the Swan hotel, Manchester. Sol. Gould, Manchester
BANDY, WILLIAM HENRY, beerhouse keeper, Redford. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 16, at twelve, at office of Mr. Smith, 220, Old-st, St. Lukes, London. Sol. Stimson, Bedford
BENT, JANE, milliner, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 19, at three, at office of Sols. Hulme. Foyster, and Foyster, Manchester
BLAKE, JOHN, bank manager, Melksham. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 13, at one at the Royal hotel, Bath. Sol. Noider
BLEEZE, HENRY RALPH, solicitor's clerk, Luton. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Neve, Luton
BRYAN, WILLIAM, grocer, Dudley. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 13, at eleven, at office of Sol. Lowe, Dudley
BOINTON, JOHN, general draper, Stockton-on-Tees. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Hopper, Newcastle-upon-Tyne
BOULD, THOMAS, and BOULD, ALFRED, grocers, Longton. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at eleven at office of Sol. Welch, Longton
BOYNTON, JOHN, commission agent, Middlesborough. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Addenbrooke, Middlesborough
CAINE, JOHN, coal dealer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol Allen, Birmingham
CHESHAM, CHARLES TAYLOR, fruiterer, Hove. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sol. Mills, Brighton
CLARKSON, MARY, confectioner, Wavertree, near Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 12, at three, at offices of Sols. Teesay and Lynch, Liverpool
COOK, RICHARD, commission agent, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 13, at one, at office of Sol. Tattershall, Sheffield
COOPER, JOSIAH, plasterer, Longton. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 18, at eleven, at office of Sol. Welch, Longton
DORMAY, PETER, silk throwster, Macclesfield. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 13, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hand, Macclesfield
EDMONDS, PHILIP, and BENNETT, THOMAS, stonemasons, Charlotte-st, Blackfriars-rd. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 12, at two, at offices of Dubois, 2, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st, public accountant. Sol. Maynard, Clifford's-inn
EVANS, JOHN, plumber, Slough. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 16, at eleven, at the Crown hot l, Slough. Sol. Charlesley, Slough
EVANS, THOMAS, accountant, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of Sols. Smith and Hinde, Sheffield
FAIRBAW, WILLIAM, grower of fruit, Orchard-gdns, Turnham-green. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 15, at one, at office of Sol. Barron, Queen-st, Cannon-st
FIELDING, ABRAHAM, drysalter, Halifax. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 15, at two, at the Griffin inn, Halifax. Sol. Jubb, Halifax
FINLAY, HUNTER, doctor of medicine, Grove-terrace, Lewisham. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 12, at twelve, at office of Sol. Haynes, Warwick-ct, Gray's-inn
FOSTER, WILLIAM, beer retailer, Darlaston. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 13, at two, at offices of Sol. Corbett, Darlaston
GAUNT, JOSEPH, jun., wood cutter, Sheffield. Pet. Nov 25. Dec. 12, at twelve, at office of Messrs. Tasker, accountants, Sheffield. Sols. Messrs. Webster, Sheffield
GIBBS, GEORGE WILLIAM, baker, Kingston-on-Thames. Pet. Nov 29. Dec. 15, at two, at office of Sols. Wilkinson and Howlett, Sedford-st Covent-gdn
GLOVER, JOSEPH, jun., licensed victualler, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 18, at two, at the Wellington hotel, Leicester. Sols. Fowler, Smith, and Warwick, Leicester
GREEN, JOHN, commercial clerk, Jubilee-st, Mile End-rd. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at twelve, at office of Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall-st
GREEN, JAMES TURTON, plumber, Stourbridge. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 13, at eleven, at the Commissioners' Room, Stourbridge. Sol. Wall, Stourbridge
GREEN, JAMES HAMMOND, joiner, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 13, at two, at the Star and Garter hotel, Leeds
HAINSWORTH, JOHN EDWARD, engineer, Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 17, at half-past ten, at office of Sols. Messrs. Scholes, Dewsbury
HARDY, MARTHA, miller, Rochdale. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Standring, Rochdale
HARRISON, JOHN, tailor, Barnet-st, Hackney-rd, and Green-st, Bethnal-green. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 22, at three, at office of Sol. Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn fields
HAWKYARD, THOMAS, sen, and HAWKYARD, THOMAS, jun., and HAWKYARD, JAMES, wool dealers, Rochdale. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 16, at three, at the Wheat Sheaf hotel, Manchester. Sol. Standring, Rochdale
HENDERSON, ROBERT WILLIAM CUTHBERT, house decorator, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 22, at twelve, at office of Sol. Story, Newcastle-upon-Tyne
HICKS, JOHN, coffee-house keeper, Mile End-rd. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 16, at two, at offices of Sol. Robinson, Gresham-house, Old Broad-st
JOHNSON, SAMUEL, cloth manufacturer, Farsley. Pet. Nov. 27 Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Ferns, Leeds
JONES, EDWARD, Fulham-rd, Brompton. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 17, at three, at offices of J. F. Lovering and Co., accountants, 38, Gresham-st. Sols. Messrs. Please, Old Jewry-chmbrs
JONES, JOHN, saddler, Llangollen. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 16, at two, at the Lion hotel, Wrexham. Sol. Hughes, Corwen
KENWARD, GEORGE, bootmaker, St. Leonards-on-Sea. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 13, at twelve, at Mr. Nicholson, London-bridge Railway-approach, London. Sol. Jones, Hastings
KETTLEWELL, HARRY MASON, horticultural auctioneer, Kingst, Covent-garden, and Rosherville, High Beech. Pet Nov. 27. Dec. 16, at three, at office of Sols. Plews and Irvine, Mark-la
LAYCOCK, FRANCIS, tea dealer, Manchester. Pet. Nov 27. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester
LIGHT, ALBERT JOSEPH, builder, St. Margaret's-pl, Southwark. Pet Nov. 29 Dec. 18, at two, at office of Sols. Kynaston and Gasquet, Queen-st, Cheapside
LUMLEY, WILLIAM, cabinet maker, Morpeth. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at eleven, at office of Sol. Sewell, solicitor, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sol. Nicholson, Morpeth
MACDONALD, EMMICK, widow, Whitehaven. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 15, at three, at Whitehaven. Sol. Pattson
MACVENGH, JAMES, jun., draper, Maxwell-rd. Moore-pk, Fulham. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 16, at twelve, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sols. Peacock and Goddard, South-square, Gray's-inn
MESSENGER, JAMES HENRY, artists' colourman, High-st, Hampstead, and Stanhope-st, Euston-rd. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 13, at two, at the Mason's Ba'l Tavern, Mason's-avenue, Basinghall-st. Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st
MYATT, GEORGE ALBAN, saddler, Rugeley. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 17, at three, at the Three Tuns inn, Stafford. Sol. Palmer, Rugeley
NAYLOR, SARAH, and BARKER, JOHN, dyers, Birstall. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 15, at eleven, at the Black Bull hotel, Mirfield. Sol. Ibberson
NEWALL, JOSHUA, grocer, Smethwick. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at three, at offices of Sol. Wood, Birmingham
PEARCE, WILLIAM, miller, St. Stephens by Saltash. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Gilbard, Devonport
PIERCE, WILLIAM, Goldsmid-rd, Ealing, and GORDON, SAMUEL, Grove-pl, Ealing, builders, Eastcn-rise, Ealing. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 17, at two, at offices of Sols. Harris and Finch, Thayer-st, Manchester-sq
POWELL, FREDERICK, builder, Tunbridge. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 13, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Gorham and Warner, Tunbridge
PRESDEE, EDWARD, bootmaker, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 15, at ten, at office of Sol. Duke, Birmingham
PRITCHARD, WILLIAM ELLSMORE, baker, Monmouth. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 13, at eleven, at office of Sol. Gibbs, Newport
RAVEN, THOMAS, innkeeper, Penrith. Pet Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at two, at the Fish inn, Penrith. Sol. Broatch
ROADKNIGHT, WILLIAM, farmer, Hillingden. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 20, at three, at the Chequers hotel, Uxbridge. Sol. Heron, Ely-pl, Holborn
ROSE, WILLIAM HENRY, marine store dealer, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Essery, Bristol
ROSE, JOHN, timber merchant, New Church-rd, Camberwell, and Union-rd, Rotherhithe. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at three, at offices of Sol. Silvester, Great Dover-st, Newington
ROSS, JOHN, carpenter, Hanesale-st, Goldhawk-rd, Shepherd's-bush and Railway-arches, Shepherd's-bush. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 11, at one, at office of Sol. Deere, King's Arms-yd, Moorgate-st
SHERIFF, JAMES, Canonbury-pk South, London, and LINDSAY, JAMES HENRY COX, Lincard, East India merchants, Great Winche-ter-st-bldgs, London, Liverpool, and Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Lewis, Munns, and Longden, Old Jewry, London
SHIELD, HENRY WILLIAM, barrister's clerk, Tiewsley. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 15, at two, at office of Sol. Mirams, New-inn, Strand
SPILLER, JOHN, upholsterer, Swindon. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 13, at twelve, at office of Sols Kinneir and Tombs, Swindon
SLACK, JOHN, jun., bootmaker, Carlisle. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 13, at two, at office of Sol. Wright, Carlisle
SMITH, SARAH, hat manufacturer, Bury. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Grundy, Bury
SMITH, WILLIAM FRANCIS, cheesemonger, Hackney-rd. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec 17, at eleven, at offices of Kent, Flaxman, Haydon, and Co., accountants, 55, Basinghall-st. Sol. Warrand, Ludgate-hill
SOUTH, SIDNEY SMITH, grocer, Sheerness. Pet. Nov 29. Dec. 15, at twelve, at the Law Institution, Chancery-la. Sol. Copland, Sheerness
TAYLOR, DAN, saddler, Halifax. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at four, at office of Sol. Storey, Halifax
TAYLOR, SAMUEL COCKSHOTT, joiner, Morecambe. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec 13, at ten, at office of Sol. Rhodes, Bradford
TOWNS, THOMAS CHARLES, coach body maker, Ramsgate. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec 16, at one, at the Eagle, Ramsgate. Sol. Dela-aux, Canterbury
TREGASKIS, WILLIAM, printer, Falmouth. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Jenkins, Falmouth
TUCKER, WILLIAM, hatter, Fenchurch-st. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at two, at office of Sol. Hubbard, Long-la, West Smithfield
TURNER, ARTHUR JOHN, out of business Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Boraston, Birmingham
VALLER, JAMES, bootmaker, Walton-st, Chelsea. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 15, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Murray, Sackville-st, Piccadilly
WELLS, AUGUSTUS, licensed victualler, Ivy-la, Newgate-st. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 24, at ten, at office of Sol. Brighten, Bishopsgate-st Without WHITTAKER, JOHN, farmer, Monks Coppenhall. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 15, at three, at the Royal hotel, Crewe. Sol. Nordon, Chester and Liverpool
WIGGINS, FREDERICK ALPHINGTON, auctioneer, Rochford. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 11, at three, at Mullens' hotel, Ironmonger-lane. Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st
WOODRUFF, THOMAS FREDERICK, grocer, Deal. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at three, at the Royal hotel, Deal. Sol. Mercer, Deal
WOOD, DAVID EDWIN, outfitter, Slough. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 13, at two, at office of Sol. Durant, Guildhall-chmbs
WOOD, WILLIAM, grocer, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 16, at twelve at office of Sol. Singleton, Sheffield
YORK, WILLIAMS, boot manufacturer, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at twelve, at the Queen's hotel, Birmingham. Sols. Messrs. Underhill and Green, Wolverhampton

Dibidends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Gibbins, T. farmer, first, 1s. 8d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Gilbert, H. timber merchant, first, 9d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Mew, A. C. fy. brewer, first, 1s. 7 1-10d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Wells, J. carpenter, first, 2½d. Paget, Basinghall-st
Beal, D. shopkeeper, 19d. At Sol. Crumble, York.—Bilsborough and Fogden, boot merchants, second, 2s. 6d. At Trust, A. Hines, 3, Victoria-st, Manchester.—Clayton, J. victualler, second and final, 1s. 7½d. At Trust. H. Bolland, 10, South John-st, Liverpool.
Cottam, W. reed maker, first, 4s. 6d. At Trust. W. Gilyard, 25, Market-st, Bradford.—Cull, K. widow, 6s. 6d. At J. B. Blake, 3, Lothbury. Trust. E. G. Modridge.—Eden, J. H. hotel keeper, first and final, 1s. At Sols. Stone and Simpson, Tunbridge Wells.—Fairweather, D. draper, third and final, 1s. 9d. At Trust. W. Affleck, 30, Friday-st.—Gunn, Jamieson, and Co., merchants, final, 11d. At Chatteris, Nichols, and Chatteris, 1, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st.—Kerrison, R. A. and R. Ralph, 6d. At Trust. E. C. Bailey, Crown-bank, Norwich.—Lane, E. P. cornfactor, final, 2s. 6d. At Greenway, Smith, and Greenways, Bank, Leamington Priors. Trust. W. Humphriss.—Laurie, H. A. linen draper, first, 2s. 6d.; second, 2s. 6d.; and third and final, 2s. 7d. At Trust. T. McConnell, 15, Queen-st, Wigan.—Partington and Bradbury, cotton spinners, first, 9s. At Trust. P. Kevan, 12, Acresfield, Bolton.—Sfezzo, A. D. share dealer, first, 2s. At Trust. J. Waddell, Mansion House-chmbs 12, Queen Victoria-st.—Whitworth, G. W. hop merchant, first, 2s. 6d. At Few and Cole, 29, Borough High-st, Southwark. Trust. P. S. Punnett.—Willis, J. W. draper, second and final, 2½d. At Trust. J. Willoughby, King's Arms-la, Carlisle.

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

BAWTREE.—On the 26th ult., at Witham, Essex, the wife of Frank Postle Bawtree, solicitor, of a son.
BOOME.—On the 25th ult., at Barnwell Lodge Stoke Newington, the wife of J. H. Boome, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, of a son.
CHUBB.—On the 27th ult., at the Chestnuts, Elmer's End Beckenham, the wife of E. M. Chubb, solicitor of a daughter.
FREEMAN.—On the 2nd inst., at 37, Thornhill-square, N., the wife of George D. Freeman, Esq., solicitor, of a son.
GRIFFITH.—On the 30th ult., at 31, Hyde-pk-sq, the wife of Charles Marshall Griffith, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

MACCLYMONT—KERR.—On the 25th ult., at Stranraer, C. R. MacClymont, Esq., B.A., barrister-at-law, of the Inner Temple, to Charlotte Cumming, daughter of the late William, Kerr, Esq.
TREMLETT—DE COSTAIN.—On the 26th ult., at St. Pancras, Thomas Daniel Tremlett, barrister, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, to Laura, younger daughter, of the late Count Gustave De Costain

DEATHS.

AYRTON.—On the 28th ult., at Bexhill, aged 57, Edward Nugent Ayrton, Esq., barrister, of Lincoln's-inn.
HUGHES.—On the 22th ult., at 35, Hawley-square, Margate, aged 72, William Hughes, Esq., solicitor
ROSE.—On the 3rd inst., at Brighton, aged 91, the Hon. Sir George Rose, F.R.S., late Judge of the Court of Review.

Legal Notices.

Sales by Auction.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.

All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.

Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.

Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.

Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.

When payment is made in postage stamps, not more than 5s. may be remitted at one time.

All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

ROLLS COURT.
Re BURNHAM NATIONAL SCHOOLS; Ex parte BATES—
Charity—School trustees—6 & 7 Will 4, c. 70, s. 3 495

V.C. MALINS' COURT.
THE UNITED LAND COMPANY (LIMITED) v. THE GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Right of way—Grant—Level crossings—Change in mode of occupation of land 498

V.C. HALL'S COURT.
Re THE COMMONWEALTH LAND, BUILDING, ESTATE AND AUCTION COMPANY (LIMITED); Ex parte HOLLINGTON—
Solicitor and client—Writs of fi. fa. issued against good faith—Process ... 502

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
BOLTON v. MADDEN—
Consideration for contract—Charity election—Exchange of votes..... 505

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
STOCKEN AND ANOTHER v. PATTRICK—
Attorney and client—Proceedings by wife against her husband—Liability of husband for attorneys' costs 507

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.
RANSDEN v. LUPTON—
Bill of sale—Agreement not to register—Renewal 510

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.
THE PHILOTAXE—
Salvage—Termination of service—Place of safety—Right to reward..... 515
THE NELLIE—
Salvage—Engagement to render assistance—Signals of distress—Uncompleted service—Right to reward..... 516

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS 101
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week..... 101
The Estates of Partners in Bankruptcy... 103
What is a Valid Voluntary Settlement of a Chose in Action? 104
Duties Payable by Reason of Death..... 105
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 106
Notes of New Decisions 106
Correspondence 107
To Correspondents 108
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 108
Creditors under Estates in Chancery 108
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 108
Reports of Sales 108
MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 108
The Licensing Act 1872, sect. 12 108
The Licensing Laws 109
Borough Quarter Sessions 109
MARITIME LAW:—
Specimens of a Code of Marine Insurance Law 109
Cardiff County Court..... 110
MERCANTILE LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 110
REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Notes of New Decisions 111
COMPANY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 111
COUNTY COURTS:—
Swansea County Court..... 112
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 112
Bradford County Court 113
LEGAL NEWS 114
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ... 115
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 115
LAW SOCIETIES:—
Huddersfield Law Students' Debating Society 115
Articled Clerks' Society 115
Bristol Articled Clerks' Debating Society 115
Legal Education Association 115
Dublin Law Students' Debating Society... 115
LEGAL OBITUARY 115
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS 116
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Cause List after Michaelmas Term 1873 ... 116
THE GAZETTES 116
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS..... 118

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE Albert Assurance Arbitration is approaching its termination. A third and final dividend of 5½*d.* in the pound has been now directed by Lord CAIRNS to be paid to the creditors of the Albert Company, making, with the previous dividends of 2*s.* and 1*s.* 6*d.*, a total dividend of 3*s.* 11½*d.* It is more than four years ago that the company was ordered to be wound-up, the order having been made on the 17th Sept. 1869. The liquidation proceeded in Chancery for a year and a half, and the arbitration has lasted more than two years and a half. It is worthy of notice that almost within a year of the commencement of the arbitration the first dividend of 2*s.* was ordered to be paid, and the creditors of the other companies were paid in full. The European Assurance Arbitration Act was passed seventeen months ago, and it does not appear that there are any signs of a dividend being paid.

IT was for a considerable time a vexed question what damages ought to be given for convertion of stock. The following case has recently occurred in America: The plaintiff and defendants, who were stockbrokers, entered into an agreement whereby the plaintiff was to deposit with the defendants such collateral security or margin as they should from time to time require, and they were to purchase certain stocks, and to hold and carry the same, subject to the plaintiff's direction as to the sale and disposition thereof, as long as he should desire, and should not sell or dispose of the same unless plaintiff's margin should be exhausted or insufficient and not then unless they should demand of him increased security, or require him to take and pay for the stocks. In an action to recover damages for a wrongful sale by defendants of the stocks, the Judge instructed the jury that the plaintiff, if entitled to recover, was entitled to the difference between the amount for which the stock was sold by the defendants, and the highest market value which it reached at any time after such sale down to the day of trial. On appeal this direction was upset. There seems, however, still to be an opinion in the United States that circumstances may occur which would justify such a direction. Since Owen v. Routh (14 C. B. 327) our own rule has been inflexible, fixing the damages by the price the day before the trial.

As a general rule interrogatories at common law are answered, if not with absolute bona fides, at least with such regard to the object sought to be attained, as to cause applications for oral examination to be very rare. Nevertheless, Peyton v. Harting (29 L. T. Rep., N. S., 478), should not be overlooked. There a defendant had answered interrogatories in "a voluminous manner," introducing many additional and irrelevant topics. Application was made to a Judge under the 53rd section of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854, by which, in case of omission without just cause, to answer sufficiently written interrogatories, the Court or a Judge may, at discretion, direct an oral examination of the interrogated party as to such points as they or he may direct, before a Judge or master. In Peyton v. Harting, Baron MARTIN had made an order that the interrogated party should attend before a master and make oral answer "as to such points as he has refused to answer in his affivadit." This, it was contended, was not sufficiently specific, and it was also urged that the fact that irrelevant topics had been introduced, was no ground for exercising the power. The Court overruled both objections to the order, expressing the opinion that it was open to the Judge to leave all necessary questions to be asked by the master. Mr. Justice DENMAN remarked, as to interrogatories generally, "without saying it is always a duty a give a categorical answer, it is often the case that excess may make an answer insufficient and wholly impertinent."

THE formalities necessary to obtain payment of dividends and other moneys from the Court of Chancery, especially by solicitors and others holding powers of attorney, are still very troublesome and it might fairly have been expected that when the duties of the ACCOUNTANT GENERAL were undertaken by the PAYMASTER GENERAL a less cumbersome practice would have been adopted. It is generally known, that any person entitled to receive dividends or other moneys from the Court of Chancery by virtue of powers of attorney, instead of being able to obtain payment with the same facilities attending the payment of money in most of the commercial transactions of life (for even the Bank of England is in the habit of sending through the post dividend warrants to the persons entitled to receive them), is obliged when first receiving such dividends to attend in person at the PAYMASTER-GENERAL'S office, and be there identified by a solicitor known to the officials. We believe that shortly before the long vacation, in consequence of certain representations made on behalf of the Mercantile Law Amendment Society, the formalities of which we complain were relaxed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury in favour of bankers when receiving Chancery dividends under powers of attorney. The convenience of the legal Profession is not less important, and when to this inconvenience of attending as required, from all parts of London, we add the fact that solicitors are not allowed to charge for such attendances in party and party costs, we certainly think that a good case is made out for further considerable alteration. We fail to see why crossed cheques payable to order should not be handed to the clerks of solicitors on such clerks producing a request to that effect signed by those named in powers of attorney. We think that the facilities we suggest might be extended to many cases other than those in which Chancery dividends or other moneys are received by solicitors under powers of attorney, for instance, for the receipt of dividends by creditors in creditors' suits so that personal attendance in such cases may also be dispensed with. That of which we complain is frequently aggravated by the necessity for all the persons to whom a cheque may be payable, to attend and receive the same, where it is desired to avoid the expense of a power of attorney. Again, there are few firms of solicitors in extensive practice who have not in their offices Chancery suits in connection with which small sums are payable, but which, practically, can never be received, simply because of the expense of taking the parties to the office to receive the same or the expense of and incidental to receiving it under power of attorney. As an illustration of the objectionable working of the present rules, we may mention that while a solicitor can receive a cheque for costs, without being identified by another solicitor known to the officials, where he is himself known to them by previous identification, yet, if the solicitor receiving such cheque for costs were the next day to present himself at the same office to receive a cheque as a creditor in a suit, he could not obtain payment until he was identified.

A SOMEWHAT startling claim to a lien was before Vice-Chancellor HALL on the 8th inst. The defendants were bankers, and the bill was filed by a person of unsound mind found lunatic by inquisition for a declaration that the defendants were not entitled to a lien on certain boxes and deeds, securities, and documents of title contained in them. The lunatic had, when a stockbroker, employed the defendants as his bankers, and they made advances to him from time to time upon securities. At the time of the inquisition certain boxes were in the defendants' possession, containing securities of customers of the lunatic. The keys of the boxes were kept by him, and he had access to them when and as he desired for the purpose of depositing or removing securities. The advances were not made on the contents of the boxes, but on securities specially lodged for the purpose. In consequence of several customers of the lunatic having applied for their securities, the boxes were examined in the presence of the plaintiff's solicitor, and the securities which belonged to customers handed over, until all claims were satisfied. It had been contended that the committee of the lunatic were the only persons entitled to the boxes and deeds of the customers; but the customers being satisfied, the bankers then set up their lien on all that remained, relying upon a custom of themselves and other bankers in London as a part of their ordinary business to receive securities on deposit generally, and they rested their present claim to a lien upon that general custom. It is difficult to understand how the bankers could believe that they were entitled to such a lien. The VICE-CHANCELLOR remarked that "No cases were cited in the arguments which sufficiently upheld the defendants' contention. They relied on the general law as to a banker's lien on his customer's property in their hands, and on that alone, and said the boxes came into their hands in their ordinary business, as bankers, because they allowed their customers to make such deposits with them. But that fell short of a proof that such a practice was the general practice of bankers towards their customers. The defendants' answer did not state such facts as would warrant the conclusion that the lien on which they relied existed or could be implied. The general law of lien was part of the law of merchants, and having regard to the authorities on the subject, he must hold that the lien which the defendants had set up failed." The true principle as regards a banker's lien is clearly laid down at p. 301 of Grant's Law of Bankers (last edit.) "The banker has a general lien upon all securities in hand belonging to any customer which have been lodged with him as security, and the lien extends to any general balance that may be due, unless the security was received under special circumstances that take it out of the general rule: (Re Williams, 3 Ir. R. Eq. 346)." It is difficult to imagine more special circumstances than those revealed in the case which we have noticed.

THE question so much discussed recently of the right of a broker to deal as principal was again raised in White and another v. Benekendorff (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 475). The broad general principle sought to be established in the motion in that case was that by the custom of markets a broker is personally responsible, and may sue his employer for goods sold and delivered. Mr. Justice KEATING observed that it was a startling proposition that both buyer and seller look to the broker only, and Mr. Justice BRETT added that it was one that cannot be maintained. Undoubtedly the proposition is startling, and it would seem only necessary to examine the nature of a broker's employment to see that it is unfounded. The accepted definition of a broker is that he is an agent employed among merchants and others to make contracts between them in matters of trade, commerce, or navigation, for a commission, commonly called brokerage. And Domat, b. 1, tit. 17, s. 1, describes him as being a person empowered, not to treat, but to explain the intentions of both parties. Now in White v. Benekendorff the plaintiff brokers were agents for HEILBUT and Co. in selling to BENEKENDORFF certain indiarubber at 2s. 11½d. per lb. Without giving any reason, BENEKENDORFF threw up the contract, and instructed the brokers to sell at 3s. They did sell at 2s. 10d., and sought to recover the difference between 2s. 10d. and 2s, 11½d. from BENEKENDORFF. The court held that there was no contract between the plaintiffs, the brokers, and the defendant, but between HEILBUT and the defendant. A feature in the case was a prior contract by the brokers to buy of SCHLUTER and Co., but that contract was cancelled by mutual consent. Mr. Justice BRETT considered that the brokers exhausted the authority which they had received from the defendant by entering into that contract, and that the defendant was not bound to pay HEILBUT. Consequently, when the broker paid HEILBUT, he paid him what there was no obligation on the defendant to pay, and consequently which the defendant was not liable to recoup. The only refuge for the broker was to claim against the defendant for goods bargained and sold, and there he is met by the fatal objection that he cannot constitute himself a principal. Then it was argued that by custom the broker makes two contracts, one for his seller and one for himself. But obviously the only contract intended was with HEILBUT. "Were there evidence of such a custom," said Mr. Justice BRETT, "I cannot say how far it would be reasonable, but we have no evidence of it, and I cannot agree to any such general proposition as that a broker may treat himself as principal." The position seems to have been clearly laid down by Chief Baron KELLY in Fairlie v. Fenton (22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 373; L. Rep. 5 Ex. 169). Speaking of the broker he said "he, no doubt, may frame a contract in such a way as to make himself a party to it and entitled to sue, but when he contracts in the ordinary form, describing and signing himself a as broker, and naming his principal, no action is maintainable by him. Though innumerable contracts of this nature daily take place, yet no instance has occurred within my own recollection, nor has any instatce been cited to us, where an action has been brought by a broker, describing himself as such in the contract, and not using words which expressly, or by necessary implication, make him a contracting party." And there are observations in the judgments in Mollett v. Robinson (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 187) to the same effect. There ought, therefore, on this one point connected with contracts through brokers to be no misunderstanding as to the law.

OUR readers will probably have perused with attention, and some feelings of alarm, the judgment of the LORDS JUSTICES delivered on the 6th inst., in the case of Beall v. Smith. The application was made to the court by the committee of a lunatic, praying that certain proceedings and orders in a suit instituted in the name of the lunatic by a next friend might be declared to be improper and unauthorised, and that his solicitors by whom they had been conducted and obtained might indemnify the lunatic's estate from the loss occasioned thereby. It is very difficult to go into the merits of the question in the face of the careful and elaborate judgment of Lord Justice JAMES, and it would be improper to express any opinion, considering that Messrs. MERRIMAN and Co., the solicitors affected, have declared their determination to appeal to the House of Lords. We propose now simply to summarise the propositions of law established by this decision. Primarily it is laid down that as between a person non compos mentis and a solicitor proposing to act in his interest and on his behalf, the latter is not protected even by the orders of the court which he may obtain. "Those orders are, as between them, really the solicitor's own orders." Secondly, it is essential to a suit by a person of unsound mind suing by his next friend that he should not have been found so by inquisition. Having been found so by inquisition, or becoming of sound mind, the suit is completely paralysed thereby. "If he becomes of unsound mind," says the court, "the next friend can have no pretext for continuing his intervention; if he is found lunatic by inquisition so as to be under the control and protection of the Crown and of the Court in Lunacy, there is equally no pretext for continuing the officious protection of a self-constituted guardian or committee, when there is a legitimate protection in the proper tribunal." The finding of the inquisition stops the suit; it cannot even go on until the appointment of a committee. A receiver in Beall v. Smith was appointed by the Court of Chancery; the lunatic was found so by inquisition. The Court of Appeal declared that under the circumstances all proceedings taken after the appointment of a receiver were unauthorised and improper, and that all the proceedings after the finding on the inquisition, were irregular and void. The solicitors were held responsible for these proceedings, and were ordered to make good the loss to the lunatic's estate, the order made being to direct that they should pay into court in the lunacy the sums paid for costs to themselves, to the defendant's solicitor, and to the accountant, deducting the costs of the suit up to the appointment of the receiver. They were further ordered to pay all the costs of the suit, and of the appeal, as between solicitor and client. This is a very severe decree, more particularly as Lord Justice JAMES did not find that Messrs. MERRIMAN had acted malâ fide. He found simply that the proceedings taken by them were not taken in the interest of the lunatic, but for their own purposes. We simply state the effect of the judgment of the Court of Appeal, forbearing to examine the facts upon which the conclusions were arrived at. The lesson taught by it must be carefully regarded. The solicitors acted bonâ fide; they were not aware that they were taking irregular or improper proceedings. But because these proceedings were not absolutely necessary in the interest of the lunatic, they are visited with a heavy penalty. The courts, as a rule, are disinclined to punish solicitors personally for proceedings taken bonâ fide, and we shall be glad if the House of Lords can discharge or modify the declaration of the Lord Justices. Vice-Chancellor WICKENS was of opinion that there had been only an error of judgment to which the court was in a measure a party.

WE have recently heard much of the licence of counsel in the cross-examination of witnesses. We have also for many weeks past seen a counsel wearing a silk gown verging upon open conflict with three learned Judges. It is marvellous that an explosion has not occurred before. It has come at last in a form which must be preserved as a warning to future generations of lawyers. Here is the newspaper report:—

Dr. Kenealy.—My object is to show that all these witnesses have, one after another, been talked to by various persons, and have been influenced in that way.

The Lord Chief Justice.—Hitherto you have signally failed to show that.

Dr. Kenealy.—That is a matter for the jury and not for your Lordship. Your Lordship is perpetually insulting me from the bench.

The Lord Chief Justice.—What did you say, sir?

Dr. Kenealy repeated his words.

The Lord Chief Justice.—Sir, don't use such language to me, because I won't bear it.

Dr. Kenealy.—I consider that your Lordship has insulted me by what you have said in open court, taking into account the number of times it has been repeated.

The Lord Chief Justice.—You have no business to use such language, sir.

Mr. Justice Lush.—I think it is quite time to put an end to this kind of cross-examination.

A Juror.—It has no effect on the jury whatever.

Dr. Kenealy.—I am very sorry to hear your Lordship say this. I mean to ask the jury to suspend their judgment, and to say whether a number of persons, having talked to these witnesses, may not have influenced them in what they were going to say.

Mr. Justice Lush.—When you hear that a witness has formed his opinion before he spoke to anyone, what reason can there be for such an insinuation?

Dr. Kenealy.—I have no doubt it is the witness's conscientious opinion, but that is surely not to preclude me from questioning him.

Mr. Justice Lush.—But I think something is due to the opinion of the Bench, and as I understand of the jury, that a great deal of time is being wasted.

Mr. Justice Mellor.—I very much regretted, Dr. Kenealy, to hear you say what you did to the Chief Justice. It is the first time that I ever heard it said that a judge was not at liberty to interpose an observation of that sort when he considered that a question was not regular. I don't mean to impute to you anything wrong on account of the question which you put, but I am bound to say that the judge has a duty to perform in reference to the examination of witnesses.

The Lord Chief Justice.—A great many witnesses have been called—I really forget how many—with regard to this particular matter. The same kind of questions have been put to all of them, and nothing has been elicited from any one of them to shake confidence in the opinion which they had formed, whether rightly or wrongly, that he is the man. The witnesses make their statement, and it is reduced to writing in the ordinary way. I have not heard a single answer from a single witness which would lead one to suppose for a moment that the witness had formed his judgment from what had been said to him by one of the solicitors for the prosecution or by any one else. I cannot therefore help interposing and saying that time has been wasted. It is the duty of a judge to interpose when he sees that the public time is being wasted; and I cannot help saying that it is not consistent with decency for a counsel to say that the judge has insulted him when he makes such an observation. (Applause.)

Dr. Kenealy.—I must exercise my discretion, although I may be indiscreet in doing so.

The Lord Chief Justice.—It is not discreet or decent for a counsel to address a judge as you have done.

Dr. Kenealy.—Your Lordship has repeated that so often that——

The Lord Chief Justice (with emphasis, and tapping the desk before him as he spoke).—For seventeen years have I sat on this bench, and I never had an unpleasant word with counsel before I had the misfortune to preside over this trial.

Mr. Serjeant Parry.—That is so.

Dr. Kenealy.—I have done all I could to avoid it. (Exclamations of "Oh!" from members of the Bar.)

Mr. Justice Lush.—When I first heard what I have heard from you, I must say that I did so with astonishment that any gentleman of the Bar should have so misconducted himself, and I think the offence is much aggravated by the fact that the gentleman using such language holds the office of her Majesty's counsel, who owe a special allegiance to her Majesty's Court.

Dr. Kenealy.—This is not the first time you have reminded me of this, and I have borne more in this court than I ever did before.

Mr. Justice Mellor.—If this were to occur in any other trial, the administration of justice would be very much impeded. I remember what that distinguished advocate whom you have so frequently mentioned, M. Berryer, said with regard to the relations between the Bar and the Bench conducing to the despatch of business. Those relations cannot exist if such things as these are to continue.

Dr. Kenealy.—I have been treated as no other counsel was ever before treated in any of the courts of Westminster.

The Lord Chief Justice (energetically).—You have brought it down upon yourself. Counsel cannot expect to violate all the ordinary rules and system of conducting justice, and to outrage all the rules of propriety, and not bring down upon himself the censure of the Bench. The judges would be wanting in their duty if they did not observe upon such conduct. (Suppressed cheers.)

Dr. Kenealy.—I am quite anxious to pay due attention to the censure of the Bench, provided it is conveyed to me in different terms from what have been customary with your Lordship. Your Lordship has frequently addressed me in the most bitterly offensive terms which could be selected. (Indications of dissent.) I am sorry to have to say so, but that is my opinion, and I cannot alter it, whatever may be the opinion of others.

The Lord Chief Justice.—Well, let us go on.

An eminent person once said that the power of a Judge is too great. He has the power to punish for contempt, but in too many cases he cannot exercise it. The conduct of the defence in the Tichborne case furnishes us with a striking illustration of this. We desire to say, and we are sure that we speak the sentiments of the entire legal Profession, that Lord Chief Justice COCKBURN is universally admired, esteemed, and respected, and that any advocate who, taking advantage of his position, offers an insult or an indignity to this distinguished head of the Common Law Bench, commits an offence which is absolutely unpardonable. Whether it is one which can hereafter be taken cognizance of by the governing bodies of the Profession is a matter for the most serious consideration.

THE ESTATES OF PARTNERS IN BANKRUPTCY.—II.

WE propose in this paper to discuss the questions raised in the recent cases of Ex parte Honey (L. Rep. 7, Ch. 178; 25 L. T. Rep. N. S. 728); Ex parte Stone (L. Rep. 8 Ch. 914); and Ex parte Hammond (L. Rep. 16 Eq. 615; 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 72), as to the joint and several liabilities of partners.

In the case of Ex parte Honey, a joint and several promissory note was signed by two members of a firm, by the firm, and by several other persons. The firm having become bankrupt, the holder of the note carried in proofs against the joint estate of the firm, and against the separate estates of the two partners who had signed the note. This raised the question of the construction of the 37th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, which says that "if any bankrupt is at the date of the order of adjudication liable in respect of distinct contracts, as member of two or more distinct firms, or as a sole contractor, and also as member of a firm, the circumstance that such firms are in whole or in part composed of the same individuals, or that the sole contractor is also one of the joint contractors, shall not prevent proof in respect of such contracts against the properties respectively liable upon such contracts." The proper construction to be put upon this section is a matter of some doubt. Lord Justice Mellish discussed the meaning of the words "firm" and "sole contractor," and said "the section speaks of a person liable as a "sole contractor, and also a member of a firm." It is true it speaks of the joint liability as being the liability of "the firm," the reason of which, I apprehend is, that unless there is a firm there can be no joint estate. I should apprehend that the word "firm" would apply to every case where there was a joint estate. If persons who did not carry on business in partnership at all, either generally or in respect of a particular business, made a joint and several note, although they would be jointly and severally liable, there would be nothing but their separate estates to administer—there would be no joint estate. The words relating to a firm are not, as it appears to me, to prevent the words "sole contractor" and "joint contractor," according to the plain and ordinary meaning of words, from being applied to every joint and several promissory note. A joint and several promissory note being entered into, there are "joint contractors" and "sole contractors." His Lordship subsequently added, "It appears to me that a joint and several promissory note, though it is one instrument, contains both a joint contract and distinct separate contracts by the several makers. It seems to me, therefore, to be within the plain meaning of the words of this section; and the only conclusion I can draw is that it was the intention of the Legislature that wherever there was a joint and separate contract and joint and separate estates being administered in bankruptcy, the creditor should be entitled to prove against both the joint and separate estates," Upon this view of the section it was accordingly held that the holder of the promissory note was entitled to prove against and receive dividends from both the joint estate of the firm and the separate estate of the two partners who had signed the note. A question, we should have said, was raised as to the creditor's right to receive a dividend in each case. Lord Justice James was clear that the right to prove carried the right to receive a dividend. "The whole Act," he said, "is framed on the plan of simply declaring the right of proof in each case, and then by a single clause, it says, once for all, that a proof carries with it a right to dividend." Lord Justice Mellish went through all the sections relating to proofs, and came to the same conclusion.

In Ex parte Stone, we have a case where there is no evidence on the face of the instrument that the parties were contracting as partners, and it was there held that parol evidence is admissible to show that the debt for which the liability was incurred was a partnership debt, and the money which it represented used for partnership purposes. Such evidence being satisfactory, proof was admitted against the joint and several estates of the bankrupt partners. John and Thomas Welch were in partnership, and they borrowed a large sum of money from their father, Henry Welch. In the agreement entered into covenanting for the repayment, the partners signed in the name of the firm, and this was the only fact which distinguished the case from that of Ex parte Honey

(ubi sup.) "It was there decided," said Lord Justice Mellish, "that the separate contractor need not be carrying on business separately. Here the question is whether it is necessary that the joint contract should be formally entered into in the name of the firm." He concluded, "from the very nature of a covenant the covenantors must covenant in their own names; a firm as such cannot enter into a covenant. I think it is quite unnecessary that the firm should be specially mentioned, if the contract is made for partnership purposes."

We cannot add anything which would make these decisions plainer or more intelligible than they are; and we will proceed to refer shortly to the case of Ex parte Hammond, which relates to the release of partners. A partner received his discharge under his separate liquidation, and the question was whether this released him from the joint debts so as to exempt him from further bankruptcy proceedings in respect of them. The appeal came up to the Chief Judge from the decision of the County Court Judge for Greenwich, who started this difficulty, that if two partners were separately discharged under liquidations in respect of their separate estate, and thereby released from liability to bankruptcy proceedings in respect of the partnership debts, the joint creditors would have no means of realising the partnership property. The Chief Judge pointed out, however, that in such a state of things the joint debtors were entitled to have every farthing of the joint estate administered. "The effect of the liquidation," he said, "is to take out of the debtor every particle of his property, while at the same time he gets discharged from all his debts. By the express terms of the Act joint debts are proveable under a separate liquidation. In what way are the joint creditors prejudiced in the present case? The County Court being asked to adjudicate these debtors jointly bankrupt, one of them answers, 'The debt alleged to be due from me is not due; I am already discharged from it, and there is no reason why I should be adjudicated a bankrupt, for by means of sect. 102 the creditor has an ample remedy under the existing proceedings.' If an adjudication is made against one partner alone, the joint creditors are entitled to have every farthing of the joint estate administered. It is useless to spell out the old Acts of Parliament or the new rules, none of which can countervail the plain provisions of this Act. You cannot make a man a bankrupt who does not owe a debt, and the appellant is entitled to say, 'I do not owe any debt; I am discharged from all my debts.' Nor is there any such danger as the County Court Judge thought would arise. The joint estate remains as much liable to the joint debts as it ever was."

We shall follow up this branch of the subject in another paper.

WHAT IS A VALID VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT OF A CHOSE IN ACTION?

A recent decision of Vice-Chancellor Bacon (Warriner v. Rogers, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 863; L. Rep. 16 Eq. 340), threatens to throw the law on this subject—which we had hoped had been tolerably settled by such cases as Richardson v. Richardson (L. Rep. 3 Eq. 686,) and Morgan v. Malleson (L. Rep. 10 Eq. 475,)—again into confusion: and we are compelled to ask, Is there no escape from this absurd and monstrous state of things, that at this time of day, with the nineteenth century on its wane, there is no certain rule as to what by the law of England does or does not constitute a valid donation? Nor will sect. 22, sub-sect. 6, of the Judicature Act cure this, unless "declarations of trust" are "assignments" within it, which it can hardly be contended they are. (See Law Times, June 28, 1873.) Now we are not disposed, unless compelled, to disturb the law as laid down by so great a master of equity jurisprudence as the Judge, himself afterwards a Lord Chancellor, who decided Richardson v. Richardson. Still less are we inclined to accept in the place of it any rule of law laid down, though more recently, by another Vice-Chancellor, who is at best only a co-ordinate authority. Nevertheless, the decisions are in conflict; so it will not be disrespectful to Vice-Chancellor Bacon if we scan a little closely the grounds of his judgment. A donor about six months before her death, delivered to the donee a box, but retained the key, saying, "Take this box into your possession, it will be of some service to you some day, but you must not open it until after my death." In the box was a paper writing signed by the donor, and stating that the "contents of this box is a deed of gift to the said John Warriner," inter alia, "of all the furniture, silver, glass, china, and the things in the house at Stramongate, my mother's portrait, watches and chains and trinkets, in care of J. Haston, also £100 each for all of Warriner's children; if anything happened among them, the other to be divided among the rest." No deed of gift was in the box, or ever executed. The Vice-Chancellor held there was no valid declaration of trust. In Richardson v. Richardson, G., by voluntary deed, assigned all her personal estate to B. absolutely, and gave B. a power of attorney to sue, &c., for the assigned premises. This was held to pass promissory notes belonging to G., found in B.'s possession after G.'s death, though unindorsed, and not proved to have been ever delivered to B. In Morgan v. Malleson a paper writing, signed by J. S., "giving and making over to M. an Indian bond (which was transferable by delivery), as token for all his kind attention to me during illness," was held to pass the bond, though no consideration was given for the gift, and the bond was not delivered to M. With regard to the last-named case, Vice-Chancellor Bacon doubted the accuracy of the report, which, however, he himself did not accurately represent, for he says that the memorandum or letter was retained by the donor, whereas the report says that it was not, though the Indian bond was. It is true that that case is very shortly (for the importance of it too shortly) reported, and the judgment of the Master of the Rolls occupies only seven lines, but we have yet to learn that that detracts from its authority. The Vice-Chancellor is equally incorrect in saying of Richardson v. Richardson that the "assignor ceased upon the execution of the deed to be the owner of the things which he assigned," for the main argument against the donee's title there proceeded on the fact of the non-delivery of the notes, and therefore of the donor still continuing their owner. But Vice-Chancellor Bacon grounds his decision on the judgment of Lord Justice Turner in Milroy v. Lord (4 D. F. & J. 264), which he pronounces to contain a clear and distinct exposition of the law upon the subject. There T. M., by a voluntary deed, assigned some bank shares, which were transferable by entry in the bank books, to L. in trust for the plaintiff. No transfer was made; but L. held a general power of attorney to transfer T. M.'s shares, and a power to receive dividends on the bank shares, which dividends he for three years after the execution of the deed received and paid to the plaintiff, sometimes directly, and sometimes through T. M. The Lords Justices, reversing Vice-Chancellor Stuart, held that T. M. had neither declared himself nor L. a trustee for the plaintiff, though on the latter point Lord Justice Turner had "great doubt," and admitted the "intention was that the trust should be vested in L." whilst both Judges felt the hardship of the decree they made, and struggled against making it. The clear and distinct exposition of the law referred to by Vice-Chancellor Bacon was this:—

"I take the law of the court to be well settled, that in order to render a settlement valid and effectual, the settlor must have done everything which, according to the nature of the property, was necessary to be done, in order to transfer the property." (This seems irreconcileable with Richardson v. Richardson, where the "nature of the property," the notes, required indorsement and delivery, and yet the assignment was held good)—

"And render the settlement binding upon him."

(This is not telling us much; for everyone admits that everything "necessary" must be done. The question is—What is necessary?) The Lord Justice then proceeded to lay down three rules, to one or other of which a donor must resort to make the settlement valid. He must either (1) actually transfer the property to the donee or (2) to a trustee for him, or (3), declare that he (semble or the trustee) "holds it in trust for the purposes of the settlement. This may be all very true, but here again the pinch of the question is—What is such a declaration of Trust? and this the Lord Justice leaves undefined. And again—

"The cases, I think, go further to this extent, that if the settlement is intended to be effectuated by one of these modes, the court will not give effect to it by applying another of them. If it is intended to take effect by transfer, the court will not hold the intended transfer to operate as a declaration of trust, for then every imperfect instrument would be made effectual by being converted into a perfect trust."

But Vice-Chancellor Wood, in Richardson v. Richardson, five years later than Milroy v. Lord, thought that the circumstance, whether "the assignor has done all he can, is not the sound doctrine on which to rest these cases," and that if there be "an out and out assignment" affecting to pass everything by the instrument "such a declaration of trust is as good a form as any that can be desired."

The importance of Warriner v. Rogers, in our opinion, is not so much the decision in that particular case, which was one relating to choses in possession (and is therefore strictly no authority for cases of choses in action), and was really decided on the grounds that the character of the paper writing was testamentary, as for the way in which the Vice-Chancellor resorted to the learning on the latter class of cases, and set up again the refined and over nice distinction between assignments and declarations of trust which was formerly said (18 Beav. 282) to pervade all the cases, but which Kekewich v. Manning (1 De. G. M. & G. 176), Donaldson v. Donaldson (Kay, 711), Miller v. Harrison (5 Ir. Eq. Rep. 324), supported and followed by Richardson v. Richardson and Morgan v. Malleson, had contributed to break through, establishing in its stead some sensible and tangible test by which to try every case. These had decided (1) that there is no magic in the words employed, and that neither the word "trust," nor "confidence," nor "any language creating a trust," is necessary; (2) That the true tests of the validity of the transfer are not whether anything more is possible or capable of being done by the donor, but whether he "intended something more, when called on to do it, distinctly expressed in the assignment to be future," and "whether the donee can take advantage of what has been done, without requiring anything more to be done by the assignor, and without requiring the assistance of the court as against him."

And Mr. Tudor has observed (2 L. C. 4th edit. 263) that, notwithstanding the remarks of Lord Justice Turner, in Milroy v. Lord, the tendency of the court is to hold that to be a declaration of trust, which, according to strict construction, would amount only to an imperfect assignment, and he cites a string of cases in support of this position.

How, therefore, amidst this state of "confusion worst confounded" of the authorities, Vice-Chancellor Bacon could see his way so easily, or pronounce "the law upon the subject to be clear and distinct," and as "needing no other exposition or reference than Milroy v. Lord," we are at a loss to understand.

DUTIES PAYABLE BY REASON OF DEATH.

THE case of Attorney-General v. Lemas, recently decided in the Court of Exchequer has convinced us that the laws relating to these duties are greatly in need of amendment.

We propose to consider the several recent cases of DeLancey's Succession (L. Rep. 4 Ex. 345, and L. Rep. 5 Ex. 102); Attorney-General v. Cecil (L. Rep. 5 Ex. 263); Forbes v. Steven (L. Rep. 10 Eq. 178); Solicitor-General v. Law Reversionary Interest Society (L. Rep. 8 Ex. 233); The Executors of Perry v. The Queen (L. Rep. 14 Ex. 27): and the above-mentioned case of Attorney-General v. Lemas, and we shall attempt to point out the manner in which the Acts appear to us to operate unfairly, and to suggest alterations.

The first case to which we shall refer, viz., that of De Lancey's succession, relates to the Legacy Duty Acts, and the facts of which as reported were as follows: Under a will dated in 1799, a testator who died in 1800, leaving two sons, H. and B., and a daughter C., bequeathed a large sum of money to trustees upon trust for investment in land, to be conveyed to the uses following in addition to the ordinary uses to support contingent uses, viz., to the use of his son A. for life with remainder to the first and other sons of A. in tail male with remainder to the use of the testator's son B. for life, with remainder to his sons in similar manner, with remainder to the use of the testator's right heirs. The money was never invested in land, but A. received the income until his death in 1840, when he died a bachelor and intestate. B. then received the income until 1857, when he also died a bachelor and intestate. C. declined to receive the income, and died in 1866 a spinster and intestate. Upon C.'s death the fund was paid into the Court of Chancery, and, with the exception of the income which accrued during C.'s life which belonged to her personal representative was paid out to D., who was the heir at law of C. The commissioners of Inland Revenue, treating the money as equitably converted into land, claimed from D. succession duty upon it at the rate of five per cent., according to his relationship to C., but D. insisted that he was liable only to pay legacy duty under the will of the testator. The court was equally divided in opinion, Chief Baron Kelly and Baron Channell considering that legacy duty was payable, and Barons Bramwell and Cleasby being of opinion that succession duty was payable; but they all agreed that D.'s interest must be considered to be derived from C., and that the duty must therefore be at five per cent. Baron Cleasby being the junior baron, withdrew his opinion, and the court declared that legacy duty was payable. The case was argued principally upon the construction of the proviso at the end of the 19th section of the Legacy Duty Act (36 Geo. 3 c. 52); and we are inclined to agree with Mr. Baron Cleasby that that section relates solely to the duty payable by reason of the interests actually created by the will, and that so soon as the property becomes vested in a person absolutely, and he has paid the legacy duty imposed upon him by it, it ceases to have any operation; but we also agree with Chief Baron Kelly when he stated "that he was by no means prepared to say that if the 19th section had been omitted altogether in the Act, the duty would not have been payable, by virtue of its general provisions, upon any money to be laid out in land, until actually so laid out," and he added, "The doctrine that money to be laid out in land is to be treated as land, though long established in courts of equity is, in truth, a mere fiction, and no more; and founded upon what Lord Thurlow, in Pulteney v. Earl of Darlington (1 Bro. C. C. 223, 237), called 'the cant expression,' that in equity 'what is to be done, is considered as done.' This fiction is, indeed, reasonable and just when applied to the succession of persons entitled under the limitations of a will or settlement, because it is necessary, in order to give effect to the intentions of the testator or settlor, that the property should pass in the same line of succession as if it were land; and, therefore, in case of intestacy, as to the heir, and not to the next of kin. But here the necessity for the fiction ends. And why should it be extended where no such necessity or reason exists? Why should the Crown be precluded from claiming in respect of any money whatever, while it is de facto money, duties imposed upon all personal estate by Act of Parliament, merely because its deceased owner may have directed it to have been laid out in land? When it is remembered that, as this very case shows, property clothed with this trust may pass, not only through a long succession of persons entitled to limited interests, but from generation to generation, to a succession of heirs entitled to an absolute interest in the whole property, it cannot be supposed that the Legislature intended to confer a power upon anyone who might think fit to create such a trust, to exempt his personal estate from duties to which it is liable by law for an indefinite period of time. I am of opinion, therefore, that the principle, or equitable fiction, upon which courts of equity have so long held that money to be laid out in land is, for certain purposes, to be treated as land, is inapplicable to the interpretation of the statutes imposing duties upon personal estates; that these statutes must be read according to the plain and ordinary meaning of the language which the Legislature has used; and consequently that this money not having been actually laid out in land, is liable to duty in personal estate under the Legacy Duty Acts." We quite agree with every word which the Chief Baron has used, and as it appears to us quite clear that upon the death of the testator A. took the absolute reversion in fee expectant upon the death without issue of himself and B., and that C. never took any interest under the will, we consider that by force of the Legacy Duty Acts, the following duties became payable, viz., legacy duty at 3 per cent. under A.'s intestacy upon the absolute reversion to the money, expectant upon the death without issue of B., which passed by such intestacy to B.; further legacy duty at 3 per cent. upon the death of B. upon the capital of the fund which thus passed to C., and upon the latter's death legacy duty at 5 per cent., as ordered to be paid, but whether the above duties were all actually claimed and paid, we have no knowledge.

Chief Baron Kelly, concurred with Mr. Baron Cleasby, that if succession duty were payable it would be by reason of the devolution from C. to D., and not by reason of the disposition made by the will of the testator, and that C., not the testator, would be the predecessor within the meaning of sect. 2 of the Succession Duty Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51).

Upon appeal (L. Rep. 5 Ex. 102), the decision of the Court of Exchequer was affirmed, Chief Justice Bovill stating that "the argument on the part of the Crown has proceeded on the ground that, by reason of the will, and of the trusts still continuing, the money is to be treated as land for all purposes, including liability to duty, and that, therefore, succession duty attaches upon it as land. But that argument has pressed the equitable doctrine on which it proceeds beyonds its legitimate limit. When it is said according to that doctrine a fund to be laid out in land is treated as land for all purposes, and that in the phraseology of the courts it, in fact, is land, the language so employed is figurative and metaphorical;" and his Lordship proceeds to state, with approval, the decision of Lord Langdale in Matson v. Swift (8 Beav. 368), and more particularly the questions which Lord Langdale suggested—"Whether after a conveyance of land in trust to sell, or after valid contracts for the sale of land and the death of the legal owner, the Crown can be entitled, for its own purposes only, to enforce the equities between the parties? If the parties should release each other, could the Crown, for purposes merely fiscal, not in the contemplation of any party, and not required to fulfil the intention of any party, be entitled to the benefit of trusts, which are declared or acted upon only for the purpose of giving effect to the intentions of the parties?"

We cannot say whether probate duty was claimed in respect of the fund upon A., B., and C.'s intestacies; but we have no hesitation in saying that, as legacy duty was payable because the property was actually personalty, probate duty must, for the same reason, have become payable.

(To be continued.)

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

In our last issue we felt it our duty to call attention not only to the want of uniformity in the notices required to be given by articled clerks in reference to the respective examinations which have to be undergone prior to admission on the rolls, but also to the conflicting decisions arrived at by the masters at Judges' Chambers in matters relating to such notices. A question of probably greater importance is that of the right of articled clerks to hold offices, or be engaged in other employment of any kind during articles, which was lately considered by the newly-appointed Lord Chief Justice in the case of Ex parte Greville, reported in our issue of the 29th ultimo, page 70. It certainly does seem a great hardship that articled clerks should practically be debarred during the continuance of their articles of clerkship from filling offices which, while they in no way interfere with their duties under articles, would often be a source to them of profit, not only in a pecuniary but also in an educational sense. We believe the rule of the examiners to be not to object to articled clerks holding offices which are honorary in their nature, and the duties of which are performed after office hours. Whilst we do not pretend to quarrel with the decisions lately arrived at by the Court of Common Pleas at the instigation of the Incorporated Law Society upon the construction of sect. 10 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, yet we are decidedly of opinion that the statutory provision in question should be relaxed, for we are confident that at times, and that not unfrequently, it works with actual detriment to the best interests of those who will in future represent the Profession.

It may not be generally known that the office of Queen's coroner and attorney, formerly held by a barrister-at-law, and which properly should be held by a solicitor, is now filled by a non-professional gentleman. The office of coroner of the Queen's household and of the Verge, is now, and has been for many years, held by a solicitor.

We are glad to find that there are some solicitors who appreciate the labours of the Incorporated Law Society. We have received a letter from a solicitor at Leeds, taking exception to our criticisms upon that body, in which he says:—"It is quite true that the Incorporated Law Society is not a very active law reformer, but it does good work, and the value of that work should be fairly recognized." We are quite prepared to adopt the expression of opinion of our correspondent. That the work undertaken by the council is good and beneficial, as far as it goes, we do not for one moment dispute; on the contrary, we are as prepared as anyone can be to recognise to the utmost the gratuitous labour of the council in the interests of the solicitor branch of the Profession. Having said so much in order to remove any misunderstanding that may possibly exist, it is but just to add that the majority of solicitors feel that there is important work undone, the charge of which might well be committed to the care of committees of the council, each appointed for special purposes. The abuse of the privileges of the Profession by unqualified persons, the unsatisfactory relations of the two branches of the Profession as well inter se, as in connection with the public, the organization of the Profession, the amalgamation of the society with the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, the formation of local law societies as branches of the society, indeed, the adoption, in this respect, of Mr. Marshall's scheme for organisation, the establishing a system by which periodical meetings of the members of the society, if not of solicitors generally, could be held in London and the provinces for the consideration of all questions of interest to or concerning the welfare of solicitors,—all these matters require attention, and to those who would urge that the Incorporated Law Society, by its council, does all that can fairly be expected, must be reminded of the existence of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, and 36 local law societies, all without any connection with the chief society, and of an effort now being made to establish the "Legal Practitioners' Society," which we believe is receiving much support throughout the country. This state of things speaks for itself, and requires no further comment from us. We hope to hear that the Council have determined upon calling a meeting of the members of the Society, to consider the question of the amalgamation of the two principa societies; if not, we hope that those members who feel the importance of the question will take the necessary steps prescribed by the new bye-laws to bring the matter before the society at an early date. It would be very beneficial if some arrangement could be made with the Government by which the payment of the annual certificate duty should qualify for membership of the society.

The delay in publishing the names of gentlemen who passed the final examination last term is occasioned by the fact that the list has not yet been issued by the Incorporated Law Society, which we believe is owing to the great pressure put on the entire staff in the office of the society in consequence of the issuing of the annual certificates, the duplicate declarations necessary to obtain which are unfortunately only carried into the office by the great majority of solicitors just in time to pay the duty at Somerset House before the 16th inst. We hope, however, to be able to publish the list in our next issue.

A solicitor at Uxbridge writes us as follows:—"I often think that the Law Times would be doing a good practical work by publishing in its columns the various appointments connected with the law for which attorneys and solicitors are eligible, in whose gifts are these several offices, and as near as may be the stipend in each case." We can only say that if we can satisfy ourselves that it would be of interest to the Profession we will gladly undertake to execute the suggestion of our correspondent; at present, however, we are in some doubt as to its utility.

We are very glad to notice that the Legal Education Association, a deputation of the members of which have waited on the Lord Chancellor are not to be lulled into inaction, either by the loss of much valuable support, or by the recent measure of the Inns of Court; on the contrary, we learn from the Honorary Secretary of the association (Mr. J. V. Longbourne), that they will continue their labours with the same energy which has characterised their work in the past. Our wish for their continued success is we are confident, shared in by the great bulk of the Profession.

We have lately had forwarded to us certain spurious notices which purport to be issued from County Courts, from which we find that these are not only issued by debt collectors and all kinds of agents, but even by ordinary tradesmen, for the purpose of obtaining payment of their debts, and we are sorry to say that we believe they owe their origin as a rule to law stationers, some of them in Chancery-lane, of whom a great variety can be purchased. This is a question, perhaps, of greater importance to the administration of justice in the country than to the Profession, for although in many cases they are merely reproductions of statutory provisions long since repealed, yet they occasion much alarm to certain classes of the community who are unable to distinguish between these spurious documents and the actual process of the County Courts, the judges of which ought to have power in certain of such cases to inflict a fine as for contempt of court.

So far as we are aware the council of the Incorporated Law Society have not, at present, in any way availed themselves, in the interests of the society, of the power given them by the new bye-law, by virtue of which they may elect, as extraordinary members of the council, any member of the society (not exceeding ten), who, at the time of their election, shall hold the office of president of any other law society established in any place in the United Kingdom, except the metropolis, for like or kindred purposes. We believe that the power and influence both of the council and the society would be augmented by proceeding to these elections; and members of local law societies will do well to bear in mind, in electing their presidents, that they are (we hope) likely to be elected to the office of extraordinary members of the council. We wait, with interest, for the determination of the council upon this subject, and we hope that action has been already taken in the matter.

During the present sittings in the Rolls Court, the Master of the Rolls, addressing the counsel present, said that when a judgment was given against one of the parties in a suit referring to a small matter of property, &c., that side generally petitioned to be "allowed costs." Now, whilst admitting that, in some exceptional instances, costs should be allowed to the losing side, he says that ought not to be made the rule, but rather the exception. It was contrary to all principle and notions of justice that the party who had received the benefit of the judgment should not be allowed his costs rather than the "losing" one. Various applications to allow costs to the defeated side had frequently been made to him; but whatever the practice obtaining in other courts he, for his part, would take care that, as a rule, he would cause the side which lost the suit to pay its own costs. We quite concur in Sir George Jessel's opinion and hope that when the Judicature Act is in full operation the position of parties to a suit as regards costs will be more clearly defined, especially for the better guidance of solicitors.

The following solicitors have been elected to the office of mayor for the ensuing year: Mr. G. T. Picton Jones, Pwllheli, Carnarvonshire, fifth time; Mr. J. Parry Jones, Denbigh, N. Wales, third time. This makes in all fifteen solicitors elected to the above office for 1873-4, so far as we have been able to ascertain at present.

We are pleased to notice that in the case of The Corporation of Dover against the South-Eastern and The London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Companies, before the lately appointed railway commissioners, the town clerk of Dover was represented by his London agent. We hope solicitors will see the necessity of availing themselves of the audience before this tribunal to which they are entitled.

The following law lectures and classes are appointed for the ensuing week in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society:—Monday, class Common Law, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m; Tuesday, ditto, 4.30 to 6 p.m.; Wednesday, ditto, 4.30 to 6 p.m.; Friday, lecture, Conveyancing, 6 to 7 o'clock. This concludes the lectures and classes for Common Law for the present year. Those in equity do not commence until the 10th April in next year. Students are not admitted after lectures have commenced.

We are sorry to notice from correspondence which has lately appeared in one of the daily papers that a considerable doubt has been thrown upon what we believe to be the right of solicitors, or counsel instructed by them, to appear on behalf of seamen, or ship's passengers and their relatives, and shippers and underwriters, before Courts of Inquiry held by direction of the Board of Trade, under Part 8 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1854. From the correspondence in question we gather that these courts are not unfrequently in the habit of deciding that upon these inquiries the crew of a ship, and others interested (with the exception of the owners) have no locus standi before them. We know of no sufficient reason for the adoption of this course, and we are confirmed in our opinion by the terms of a letter written by direction of the Board of Trade upon the subject, and which forms part of the correspondence to which we refer, in which the following observation appears: "The inclination of the Board of Trade is to give seamen and ships' passengers, and others, the same privileges as are given to the shipowners." A rule to the contrary would be wholly unjust, and we hope that we shall not in future hear the right of solicitors so to appear questioned by any of the courts in question.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Malicious prosecution of Action—Action for—Declaration—Necessity of alleging determination of Proceedings in Plaintiff's favour.—A declaration for maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause procuring the arrest and detention of a vessel in a County Court suit for necessaries, "until the proceedings in the said court in the matter of the said arrest and detention were determined, and the said ship released," is good, without an express averment that the proceedings were determined in favour of the plaintiff. Per Blackburn and Archibald, JJ., dissentiente Quain, J.: (Redway v. MacAndrew and another, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 421. Q. B.)

Will — Illiterate Person — Indefinite Estate — Charge of gross Sum—Fee—Old Law.—A testator, who died in 1806, by his will gave two freehold houses to one of his sons without any words of limitation, subject to legacies and annuities, with a gift over, in case of alienation or death without issue, to his brothers and sisters, nominatim also subject to the legacies and annuities, and with a direction also to pay sums of £4 to each of certain grandchildren as they attain the age of twenty-three: Held, that on James's death without issue, and without barring any estate tail he might have had, the brothers and sisters took as joint tenants, and as the gift was coupled with a direction to pay several gross sums, their estates would in a case coming under the old law, be enlarged to a fee simple: (Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 416. M.R.)

ARTICLED CLERK—SERVICE UNDER ARTICLES—ABSENT ABROAD FOR ONE YEAR ON ACCOUNT OF ILLNESS—6 & 7 VICT. c. 23 ss. 12, 14.—An articled clerk having been absent from work during eleven months of his articles on account of ill-health, and with the consent of his employer, the court refused to admit him as an attorney: (Ex parte Moses, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 420. Q. B.)

PRACTICE—TAXATION OF COSTS—SEPARATE ANSWERS FILED BY SAME SOLICITOR—DISCRETION OF TAXING MASTER—ORDER 40, R. 12.—Whether the costs of separate answers filed by the same solicitors should be allowed on taxation or not is a matter entirely in the discretion of the taxing master: (Beattie v. Lord Ebury, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 419. V.C. B.)

PRACTICE—SUBSTITUTION OF DEFENDANTS—MISDESCRIPTION — COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT 1852—SECT. 222 (15 & 16 VICT. c. 76.)—Where an action had been brought in error against the clerk of a local board of health, the court allowed the name of the local board of health to be substituted in all proceedings for that of the clerk: (Lord Bolingbroke v. Townsend, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 430. C. P.)

CONTRACT FOR SALE OF CHATTELS—BREACH—SUIT FOR INJUNCTION—DEMURRER.—A court of equity will not grant an injunction to restrain the breach of a contract for the sale of chattels where specific performance of the contract would not be enforced. A. entered into a contract with B. by which B. agreed to sell to him the whole of the get of coal of a specified seam in a colliery belonging to B. during a period of five years at a certain price. On a bill by A. to restrain B. from selling the coal to other parties: Held that A. was not entitled to any relief in equity: (Fothergill v. Rowland, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 414. M.R.)

EXECUTORS — OMISSION TO PROVIDE FOR LEGACY — RESISTANCE TO LEGATEE'S CLAIM—LIABILITY OF REPRESENTATIVES OF DECEASED EXECUTOR—COSTS.—Three executors allowed an investment of £500 to remain (under a power in the will) upon an insufficient security. One died. The legatee claimed the legacy. The surviving executors opposed her claim on an administration summons. They gave no notice to the executor of the deceased executor of the proceedings: Held, that the estate of the deceased executor was not liable to pay the costs of such proceedings: (Paull v. Mortimer, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 418. M. R.)

ARTICLED CLERK—STAMP WITHIN SIX MONTHS—MISTAKE OF LAW—RECKONING OF SERVICE—6 & 7 VICT. c. 73, ss. 819.—An attorney's articled clerk applied to stamp his articles within six months of their execution, being misled by the words of the Stamp Act 1870, s. 43, but the Inland Revenue refused to affix the stamp except upon payment of a penalty. The clerk subsequently paid the penalty, together with the duty, but in consequence of his mistake in the law, he was prevented from enrolling his articles within the time required. The court allowed his service to be reckoned from the date of the articles, instead of from the day of filing the affidavit required with the enrolment, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 23, ss. 8 and 9: (Ex parte Hayward, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422. Q. B.)

BILL OF REVIVOR—TIME FOR ENROLMENT ELAPSED — NEGLIGENCE OF PLAINTIFF — DEMURRER—15 & 16 VICT. c. 86, s. 52—CONS. ORD. 23, R. 28.—A bill was dismissed on appeal in Dec. 1867. No steps were taken until Nov. 1872, when an order nisi for enrolment was granted, notwithstanding the time for enrolment had expired. One of the defendants died in Dec. 1872. On the 16th Jan. 1873 the court ordered an enrolment, subject to the plaintiff presenting his petition to the House of Lords within a given time. It was then ascertained that by the death of another defendant in 1870, the suit had become abated, and the Registrar refused to draw up the order. The common order to revive having been refused, the plaintiff filed a bill of revivor, to which the executors of one of the deceased defendants demurred. Held, that the court had a discretion to grant a decree for revivor after the time for enrolment had expired, and would exercise it, except under special and extraordinary circumstances of neglect or delay: (Patch v. Holland, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S., 419. V.C. H.)

PRACTICE—INTERROGATORIES—INSUFFICIENT ANSWER—ORAL EXAMINATION BEFORE MASTER.—The 53rd section of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125) directs that in case of omission, without just cause, to answer sufficiently written interrogatories, the judge may direct an oral examination of the interrogated party as to such points as he may direct before the master. A defendant having answered the interrogatories in a voluminous manner, introducing many additional and irrelevant topics to those contained in the interrogatories, the judge made an order directing the defendant to appear and answer orally before the master. Held, that where the answers contained such an amount of irrelevant matter as to amount to an impertinent excess, the section was applicable. Held also, that the judge need not specifically direct as to what points the master is to examine the defendant, but that a general direction is sufficient: (Peyton v. Harting, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 478. C. P.)

JUDICIAL SEPARATION—CUSTODY OF CHILDREN GIVEN TO THE WIFE.—Where the parties had been judicially separated at the suit of the wife and the custody of the children had been given to her, the court allowed a third party (the paternal grandfather) to intervene to show cause why the custody of the children should no longer be committed to her: (Goderich v. Goderich, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 465. Div.)

COURT OF PASSAGE—NEW TRIAL—MOTION IN SUPERIOR COURT FOR—JUDGE'S NOTES.—A copy of the notes taken by the judge at the trial of a cause in the Passage Court of Liverpool is not needed in order to support a motion in a Superior Court for a new trial; and such motion may, according to the established practice, be made by counsel who did not appear in the court below: (Bridge v. Daine, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 477. C. P.)

TRADE-MARK.—INJUNCTION.—An English adjective, merely describing the quality of a manufactured article, will not be protected by the court as a trade-mark. Therefore, when the plaintiff, who dealt in malt liquors in London, sold stout which was subjected by him to a particular treatment, under the name of Nourishing London Stout: Held, that he was not entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from selling stout under the name of Nourishing Stout: (Raggett v. Findlater, 29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 448. V. C. M.)

PRACTICE—ADMINISTRATION SUIT—WANT OF PARTIES—DEMURRER ORE TENUS—COSTS.—An objection to a bill for the administration of the real estate only of a testator, and without the joinder of his legal personal representative, is valid, though not raised by the answer, and may be taken by way of demurrer ore tenus at the hearing. Where such an objection is plain on the face of the bill, it is not the duty of the defendant to give notice to the plaintiff that he will avail himself of it, and he will be entitled to the costs of the day: (Rowsell v. Morris, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 446. M. R.)

MATRIMONIAL SUIT — ALIMONY PENDENTE LITE.—The parties in a matrimonal suit had been living separate under a deed by which the wife received an allowance of £40 a year, when the husband instituted a suit for divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery. The wife petitioned for alimony pendente lite. The court, however, though it was shown that the husband's faculties had increased since the deed of separation, refused to make any order for alimony. Held, on appeal to the Full Court, that the Judge Ordinary was right in making no order, as no change had been shown in the status of the wife: (Powell v. Powell and Jones, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 466. Div.)

PLEADINGS—EXCEPTIONS—SCANDAL—COSTS.—In cross suits between husband and wife, with reference to certain leaseholds the separate property of the wife, the husband set up an agreement made on the marriage, that in consideration of advances by him to pay the debts of his wife's first husband, she would concur with him in selling the leaseholds to recoup him; and in answer to interrogatories by the wife, the husband preferred against her a charge of adultery. On exceptions to such answer for scandal: Held, on the authority of Christie v. Christie (28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 807; L. Rep. 8 Ch. 42), that the exceptions must be allowed, and everything with reference to the adultery struck out, with costs: (Pearse v. Pearse; Pearse v. Perase, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 453. V.C. H.).

TENDER BY PUBLIC CONTRACT—GOOD CONSIDERATION—UNILATERAL CONTRACT.—The defendant tendered to supply the plaintiffs with certain goods at a fixed price, or with any of them that the plaintiffs should order. After the plaintiffs had given some orders, the price of the goods rose, and the defendant refused to supply them, on the ground that the contract was unilateral, there being no consideration for the defendant's promise to supply the goods, and there was no obligation on the plaintiffs to give the order: Held, that the tender of the defendant to supply what goods were ordered, coupled with the plaintiffs' order, was a sufficient consideration to bind the defendant: (Great Northern Railway Company v. Witham, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 471. C.P.)

STATUTE OF FRAUDS (27 CAR. 2, c. 3), SECT. 4—PAROL AGREEMENT TO PAY FOR MAINTENANCE OF BASTARD CHILDREN—AMENDMENT OF CLAIM FOR DAMAGES IN DECLARATION AT TRIAL.—The plaintiff, a feme sole, being the mother of five children by the defendant, ranging from five up to fourteen years of age at the time of the promise after mentioned, the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff would, at his request, take and continue to take the sole charge and support of the said children, and provide for their maintenance and education, promised the plaintiff, by parol, that he would pay her an annuity or sum of £300 per annum, by quarterly payments of £75 each, so long as she should continue to do so. Not being satisfied with the way in which the children were being brought up by the plaintiff, the defendant discontinued the payment of the annuity, whereupon the plaintiff brought this action against him to recover the arrears of the annuity due to her. The declaration claimed only £600 for two years' instalments, but it was proved at the trial that arrears were due for two years and a half, and, thereupon, the learned judge amended the claim in the declaration by increasing it to £750, for which sum the plaintiff had a verdict. Held, by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C.B., and Bramwell and Pigott, BB.)—First, on the authority of Wells v. Horton (4 Bing. 41; 5 L. J. 41, C. P.) and Souch v. Strawbridge (2 C. B. 808; 15 L. J., N. S., 170, C. P.), that this agreement was not one which was "not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof," and, therefore, that it need not be in writing under sect. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, and the plaintiff's action was maintainable thereon. Bramwell and Pigott, BB., were of opinion (Kelly, C.B., forbearing to express an opinion on the point) that the agreement was determinable at any time, at the will of either party, upon reasonable notice. Secondly, that under sect. 222 of the C. L. P. Act 1852, the learned judge at the trial had full power to amend the claim for damages in the declaration, the understatement of them being a "defect" within the words and meaning of that section. (Knowlman v. Bluett, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 462. Ex.)

LIBEL—DECLARATION—UNSUPPORTED INNUENDOS.—Declaration in libel, first count on the following words: "We are requested to state that the Honorary Secretary of the T. Defence Fund is not and never was a captain in the Royal Artillery, as he has been erroneously described." Innuendo, that the plaintiff was an impostor, and had falsely and fraudulently represented himself to be a captain in the Royal Artillery. Second count: "the gentleman in question was a paymaster in the Royal Artillery, and as such received in due course the honorary rank of captain in the army, which is so stated in his commission. His name appears under the head of paymasters on half pay in this month's Army List. He is certainly not entitled to hold a command as an artillery officer." Innuendo, that the plaintiff was an impostor, and had falsely and maliciously represented himself to be a captain in the artillery. At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff had been a paymaster in the Royal Artillery, that he held a commission as honorary captain in the army, and was addressed and generally known as captain. He became honorary secretary to a fund, and in respect of his connection therewith, and his name being attached with the addition "Captain," R.A., to certain advertisements, the alleged libels were published in the defendants' newspapers. On these facts the plaintiff was nonsuited. Held, that the nonsuit was right; as the words alleged to be libellous did not prima facie support the innuendos, there was no evidence to go to the jury of circumstances rendering the statements charged capable of bearing the meaning imputed to them: (Hunt v. Goodlake, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 472. C.P.)

Correspondence.

OUR INVADERS.—We have received the following letter from a solicitor upon the subject of the notices issued by "The United Kingdom Mercantile Offices, Legal Department," and which we have often printed in these columns:—"My impression is that the document, a specimen of which I enclose you, has already been exposed in your paper; but having within a short space of time had two of them brought to my office, I think it right to call your attention again to it, as the audacity of the authors seems rather to increase with publicity than otherwise, and it should be as widely and generally cautioned against as possible. In one case a poor woman with a sick husband and a large family came to me in the greatest fear and distress, and it was some time before I could satisfy myself and her that there was no actual process whatever in force against her. The 'client' of the office was a small tradesman, whose experience told him that a very small order would be obtained through the County Court, and who had no doubt found that the awe-inspiring threats of the 'United Kingdom Mercantile Offices' were, in many cases, more efficacious. EDMUND H. CHEESE."

ARTICLED CLERKS HOLDING OFFICE.—I see by an answer in an issue of to-day to a correspondent, "James A. Tucker," that you express it to be your opinion that an articled clerk may hold an appointment as a salaried organist, provided it does not interfere with his service under articles or with his duties in office hours, without contravening section 10 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127. The case having occurred to me, I wrote last week to the secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, asking his opinion, and received the following answer:

2nd Dec., 1873.

Dear Sir,—I do not think you could hold the appointment referred to in your letter of the 29th ult., and receive a salary for so doing, without vitiating your service. The examiners have no objection to a clerk holding an honorary office the duties of which are performed after office hours.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, E. W. Williamson, Secretary.

You should, however, refer to the case of Re Greville.

I may add that the appointment referred to in Mr. Williamson's letter necessitates my attendance on Sunday and Wednesday evenings only, so that whether I receive a salary or not, the service is the same, and the two cases ought, at any rate, to bear precisely similar relation to me as an—

Articled Clerk.

[Re Greville was reported in our issue of the 29th ult., page 70.—Ed. Sols.' Dept.]

To Correspondents.

An Occasional Reader.—If the half of a term expires in Hilary Term next, he can present himself for examination up to and including the following Trinity Term, after which he could only do so by special leave (2) and if A. goes up for intermediate examination, and is unsuccessful, he is entitled, in the absence of any direction to the contrary, to present himself for examination in the following term, subject to the necessary notice. We cannot fully answer the query without the exact date of the articles.—[Ed. Sol.'s Dept.]

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

Clark (Geo. Thos.) and Bruce (Henry Austin), both of 13, King's Arms-yard, Moorgate-street, Esqs. £225 Red Sea and India Telegraph Annuity, claimant said Geo. Thos. Clark.

White (Thos.) and Price (Geo. Wm.), 57, Mark-lane, merchants. £18 per annum Red Sea and India Telegraph annuity, claimant said Thos. White, the survivor.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

Last Day of Proof.

Allen (Wm.), Sutton, Chester, farmer. Dec. 31; Wm. H. Linaker, solicitor, Runcorn. Jan. 7; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

Andrews (John), Modbury, Devon, Esq. Jan. 10; J. H. Square, solicitor, Kingsbridge, Devon. Jan. 24; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

Baker (Edward), 3, Cross-street, Chapel-street, Stockwell, Surrey, carpenter. Dec. 20; Gresham and Son, solicitors, 24, Basinghall-street, London. Jan. 9; V.C. H., at one o'clock.

Bew (John), Warwick, grocer. Dec. 22; Wm. B. Sanderson, solicitor, Warwick. Jan. 7; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

Bradford (Martha), 183, Beresford-street, and 13, Floodterrace, Walworth, Surrey. Dec. 24; Wm. Lewis, solicitor, 7, Wilmington-square, Middlesex. Jan. 14; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

Brewitt (Thos.), Rayleigh, Essex, Esq. Jan. 16; E. P. De Gex, solicitor, 4, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, Middlesex. Feb. 6; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

Bull (Benjamin) Harlow, Essex, farmer. Jan. 1; John W. Windas, solicitor, Epping. Jan. 15; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

Clarke (Jos.), Ramsey, Essex, farmer. Jan. 1; H. S. Goody, solicitor, North-hill, Colchester. Jan. 15; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

Cooper (Ann E.), formerly of Holbridge-place, near Woking, Surrey, late of 6, Warrior-square-terrace, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, widow. Dec. 31; J. Burgin, solicitor, 8, John-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex, Jan. 19, V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

Davis (Stephen T.), Kingston-upon-Hull, manure manufacturer. Jan. 3; Roberts and Leak, solicitors, Kingston-upon-Hull, Jan. 9, V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

Fischer (Peter J.), White Swan, Upper Norwood, Surrey, innkeeper. Jan. 1; G. Crafter, solicitor, 81, Blackfriars-road, Surrey. Jan. 12; V.C. H., at one o'clock.

Goodrich (Ermingarde), 10, Royal crescent, Brighton, Sussex, widow. Dec. 31; Jos. Burgin, solicitor, 8, John-street, Bedford-row, London. Jan. 19; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

Hooper (Geo. H.), Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex, and Regency-square, Brighton, Sussex, Esq. Feb. 2; C. B. Rivington, solicitor, 1, Fenchurch-buildings, Fenchurch-street, London. Feb. 9; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

Mappin (Wm.), Sheffield, provision dealer. Jan. 6; C. F. W. Wilson, solicitor, Sheffield. Jan. 20; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

McCabe (Esther J.), formerly of 14, Southwick-crescent, Hyde-park, Middlesex, late of Ticehurst, Sussex, spinster. Jan. 12; S. Potter, solicitor, 36, King-street, Cheapside, London. Jan. 20; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

Robinson (Margaret), Priory-street, Micklegate, York, widow. Dec. 31; G. M. Watson, solicitor, Stockton-upon-Tees. Jan. 8; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

Ross (William B.), 1, Howick-place, Westminster, Middlesex, barrister-at-law. Dec. 31; J. Brewer, solicitor, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster. Jan. 10; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

Spry (Richard), 97, Curtain-road, Shoreditch, Middlesex, easy chair and couch manufacturer. Dec. 15; Pritchard and Englefield, solicitors, Painter's Hall, Little Trinity-lane, London. Dec. 22; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

Tizard (John), Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, Dorset, solicitor, and late a partner in the firm of Eldridge, Pope, and Co., brewers, Dorchester. Dec. 17; H. T. George, solicitor, Weymouth, Jan. 12; M. R., at 11 o'clock.

Ward (William), Elim Cottage, Hathe-ley-road, Cheltenham, house agent. Jan. 10; Robert Wheeler, solicitor, Cheltenham, Jan. 22; V. C. M., at 12 o'clock.

Willis (Harriet), Cheltenham, spinster. Jan. 10; Henry Kinneir, solicitor, Swindon, Jan. 22, V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35.

Adams (Jos.), 25, Stainsby-road, Poplar, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 22; J. C. St. Aubyn Angove, solicitor, 129, Aldersgate-street, London.

Adsett (Bazill W.), Black Bull and Star, New Gravel-lane, Shadwell, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Dec. 23; J. Pendergast, 37, Colet-place, Commercial-road, Middlesex.

Blackford (Mary), Bewdley, Worcester, spinster. Jan. 1; W. N. Marcey, solicitor, Bewdley.

Brown (Wm. H.), 40, Chrisp-street, Poplar, Middlesex, draper. Dec. 31; William Sturt, solicitor, 14, Ironmonger-lane, London.

Bull (Jas.), formerly of Kingsdown, Bristol, late of St Clair Villa, Lower Redland-road, Clifton, first clerk in H. M.'s Customs at the port of Bristol. Jan. 15; O'Donoghue and Co., solicitors, 1, St. Stephen's-street, Bristol.

Davis, otherwise Cartwright (Mary A.), 25, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 21; Chauntrell and Pollock, solicitors, 63, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex.

Ellice (Russell), Lombard-street, London and Brickendonbury, Herts, banker. Jan. 31; R. Dixon, solicitor, 5, Finsbury-square, London.

Haddan (Thos. H.), New-square, Lincoln's-inn, and Northgrove, Highgate, Middlesex, barrister-at-law. Jan. 15; Western and Sons, solicitors, 7, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex.

Kirk (John), late of Richmond Lodge, co. Down, linen merchant, lately trading at Belfast, co. Antrim and Keady, co. Armagh, and in New York, U. S. A. March 1; Wm. M. Kirk, 12, Bedford-street, Belfast.

Kirtley (Matthew), Derby, engineer. Jan. 24; Beale and Co., solicitors, 28, Great George-street, Westminster.

Lock (Hannah), Easton, Southampton, widow. Dec. 31; F. Bowker, solicitor, 23, St. Peter's-street, Winchester.

Lodwick (General Peter), 63A, Westbourne-terrace, Middlesex, and general in her Majesty's Indian Army. Jan. 15; Western and Sons, solicitors, 7, Great James-street, Bedford-row, London.

Meara (Charlotte C.), 9, Royal-crescent, Cheltenham, spinster. Jan. 20; Ticehurst and Sons, solicitors, Essex-place, Cheltenham.

Mills (William), Ivy Cottage, 347, Albany-road, Camberwell, Surrey, gentleman. Jan. 14; H. F. and E. Chester, solicitors, 86, Newington Butts, London, S.E.

Nedham (Susannah S.), Leicester, spinster. March 2; Dalton and Salasbury, solicitors, Leicester.

Rowbottom (Wm.), late of 7, Elizabeth-mews, England-lane, Haverstock-hill, Middlesex, formerly of 21, and 4, Westmoreland-street, Marylebone, Middlesex, coachman. Jan. 22; S. J. Robinson, solicitor, 53, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street, London.

Wallis (Frances, otherwise Fanny), formerly of 4, Brunswick-villas, New-road, Hammersmith, Middlesex, late of Hill Villa, Melton-road, Woodbridge, Suffolk, widow. Dec. 13; O. Richards, solicitor, 16, Warwick-street, Regent-street, Middlesex.

Wates (Edward), 15, Harmer-street, Milton-next-Gravesend, Kent, solicitor. Jan. 31; Hooke and Street, solicitors, 27, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

West (John M.), Duke of Sussex, 18, Pierrepoint-row, Islington, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Dec. 31; Nash and Co., solicitors, 2, Suffolk-lane, Cannon-street, London.

Whiting (Rev. Jas.), Vicar of Royston, Herts. Jan. 17; A. M. White, solicitor, Colchester.

Wiseman (Jas.), Heathfield-terrace, Halifax, York, gentleman. Jan. 15; Wavell and Co., solicitors, 26, George-street, Halifax.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Tuesday, Dec. 9.

By Messrs. Debenham, Tewson, and Farmer, at the Mart.

City of London.—No. 22, Peter's-hill, freehold—sold for £1000.

London Docks.—No. 9, Dock-street, a profit rental of £50 per annum, term 11 years—sold for £250.

By Messrs. Winstanley and Horwood.

Lincoln's-inn-fields.—Nos. 21, 22, and 23, Little Queen-street, freehold—sold for £2750.

Hackney. Nos. 1 to 5, Grove-street, copyhold—sold for £915.

Nos. 6 and 7, Grove-street, and a plot of land—sold for £1500.

Nos. 8 and 9 Morpeth-road—sold for £340.

Old Ford.—No. 149, St Stephen's-road, freehold—sold for £480.

West Ham.—No. 9, South-street, freehold—sold for £35.

By Messrs. D. Cronin and Sons, at the London Tavern.

Oakley-square.—The lease and goodwill of the Prince Alfred, term 69 years—sold for £6310.

Norwood Junction.—The lease of the Alliance Tavern, term 16 years—sold for £690.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Rape—Consent—Idiot.—Upon the trial of an indictment for rape upon an idiot girl, the proper direction to the jury is that if they are satisfied that the girl was in such a state of idiotcy as to be incapable of expressing either consent or dissent, and that the prisoner had connection with her without her consent, it is their duty to find him guilty. The two cases of Reg. v. Fletcher are not adverse to one another. The principle is properly laid down in the first case, and the second case was only a decision to the effect that there was not that requisite testimony of want of assent to justify leaving the case to a jury: (Reg. Barratt, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 409. C. Cas. R.)

Poor Law—Order of Removal—Irremovability—Unemancipated Child.—The amended proviso in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 111, s. 1, to the Irremovability Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 66, s. 1, applies to all children who have not become emancipated, whether living with or apart from their parents. A girl of nineteen, who had been two years in domestic service, and dependent on herself, in the respondents' union, became chargeable; she had no settlement but that of her widowed mother, which was in the appellants' union. The mother had for years lived in and been chargeable to her place of settlement. Held, that the order of removal of this girl to her mother's place of settlement was good: (St. Olave's Union v. St. George's Union, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 426. Q. B.)

Metropolis Local Management—Repair of Roof of Cellar—Pavement of Footway.—The appellant was summoned under the Metropolitan Management Act 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 226, to pay for the repair of his cellar which the respondents had done under sect. 102 of that Act. The magistrate found in fact that in front of the appellant's house and the other houses situated on the north side of Eaton-square were cellars covered by flagstones resting on the walls of the cellars. Those cellars were so formed when the square was built in 1830, and the flagstones were then 5in. thick. The footway on this side of the square was formed by the flagstones and curbstones over the cellars of the houses. The flagstones having been worn down by the traffic over them to the thickness of only 2½in. became dangerous and required repair. The magistrate determined that it would not be just that the respondents should be at the expense of supplying a roof to the appellant's cellar, nor that the appellant should be at the expense of paving the footway in front of his house; he therefore directed that each should pay half the expense of repair. Held, upon a case stated, that under the circumstances the respondents were liable for the whole expense: (Hamilton v. St. George, Hanover-square. 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 428. Q.B.)

Larceny by Bailee (p. 467).—The prisoner was employed by the prosecutor to fetch coals from C. Before each journey the prosecutor made up to the prisoner £24, out of which he was to pay for the coals, keep 23s. for himself, and if the price of the coal, with the 23s., did not amount to £24, to keep the balance in hand to the credit of the next journey. It was the prisoner's duty to pay for the coal as he obtained it with the money received from the prosecutor; and the prosecutor did not know but that he did so, but provided he was supplied with the coal, and not required to pay more than the proper price for it, it was immaterial to the prosecutor in what manner the prisoner paid for it. On the 20th March the prisoner had a balance of £3 in hand, and the prosecutor gave him £21 to make up £24 for the next journey. The prisoner did not buy any coal, but fraudulently appropriated it: Held, that a conviction of the prisoner for larceny of the £21 as a bailee was right: (Reg. v. Aden, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 467. C. Cas. R.)

Larceny—Receiving—Accessory in second degree.—An indictment charged S. with stealing 18s. 6d., and C. with receiving the same. The facts were: S. was a barman at a refreshment bar, and C. went up to the bar, called for refreshments, and put down a florin. S. served C., took up the florin, and took from his employer's till some money, and gave C. as his change 18s. 6d., which C. put in his pocket and went away with. On leaving the place he took some silver from his pocket, and was counting it when he was arrested. On entering the bar signs of recognition took place between S. and C., and C. was present when S. took the money from the till. The jury convicted S. of stealing and C. of receiving. Held, that this was evidence which the judge ought to have left to the jury as reasonable evidence upon which C. might have been convicted as a principal in the second degree; and that therefore the conviction for receiving could not be sustained: (Reg. v. Coggins, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 469. C. Cas. R.)

Excise—Carriage used solely for conveyance of Goods in Trade or Husbandry.—By the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 14, s. 18, a duty is imposed upon carriages having a certain number of wheels and being of a certain weight; and by sect. 19, sub-section (6), it is enacted that the term "carriage" means and includes any vehicle drawn by a horse or mule "except a waggon, cart, or other vehicle used solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry." The defendants were the proprietors of a travelling equestrian circus, and it was their course of business to give a daily parade through the towns which they visit. On the day laid in the information there was the usual parade in Bishop Auckland, and amongst other carriages in the procession there were three drawn by horses; one conveyed the band, consisting of eight performers; two others conveyed four persons each, and the persons in one of these were dressed in a gaudy attire and carried flags. These three carriages were used also for carrying portions of the luggage and property of the circus from place to place, and at the time before mentioned there were clothes belonging to the circus in the back locker of the band carriage, and also the music and musical instruments of the circus, and also in the other carriages there were some loose deal boxes and brackets: Held, that these three carriages were not within the exemption specified in the 6th sub-section of sect. 19 as carriages "used solely for the conveyance of any goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry," and that they required to be licensed: (Speak v. Powell, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 434. Ex.)

THE LICENSING ACT 1872, SECTION 12.

At the Stamford Borough Petty Sessions, on the 29th November last, the following case came before the Bench:—

In Saint George's-square, in the borough of Stamford, is a building owned by the Marquis of Exeter, and known as the Assembly-rooms. This building, in consideration of a rent, is let by his lordship to a Mr. Langley, who, for certain payments, lets it from time to time to persons applying to use it for balls, lectures, operas, concerts, meetings, and similar purposes.

On the 26th November 1873, these Assembly-rooms were let to certain persons connected with a temperance society known as the "Good Templars." A meeting at these Assembly-rooms was called by handbill, and to this meeting the public were admitted free of charge. A person named Thomas Pollard attended the meeting, and there, whilst drunk, was guilty of riotous conduct. Pollard was summoned before the justices under the second part of section 12 of the Licensing Act 1872, and at the hearing the question arose as to whether or not the Assembly-rooms were, during the time such meeting was held, a public place.

In support of the contention that the rooms were a public place when such meeting was held, Sewell v. Taylor (29 L. J., 50, M. C.), and Reg. v. Holmes (22 L. J., N. S., 122, M. C.; 1 Dear. C. C. 207), were cited, and particular stress laid upon the judgment of Lord Campbell in the last case.

Against such contention it was suggested by the clerk to the justices that "public place," as used in the 12th section, might possibly have to be taken ejusdem generis, with "highway;" and that although the Assembly-room might, when the meeting was held, be "a place of public resort," it was not clear to him that it was then a public place. The notes to Paterson's Intoxicating Liquor (Licensing) Act 1872, p. 12, Oke's Synopsis, 11 edit., vol. 1, p. 727 and 729, notes 442 and 444, Oke's Licensing Act, and Ex parte Freestone (25 L. J. 121, M. C.), (where Reg. v. Holmes is mentioned and commented upon); Hirst v. Molesbury (40 L. J. 76, M. C.), and the Vagrant Act Amendment Act 1868, were mentioned. The Bench adjourned the case to the next petty session, directing the clerk to take counsel's opinion in the meantime.

The following opinion of Mr. C. G. Merewether upon the above facts was received at the adjourned meeting:—

"I am of opinion that the Assembly-rooms were not during the time of the meeting a public place within the Licensing Act, sect. 12, and agree with the distinction pointed out by the clerk to the justices. Looking at the words employed by the Legislature, and the juxtaposition of highway, it appears to me that the place contemplated is one to which the public have a right to go, and where they have a right to be, such as an open or enclosed market, a church, or arcade, in a highway. That the courts still put a strict construction on similar words is shown by Tinson's case, reported in 39 L. J. 129, M. C. The words in the Vagrant Act, upon which the decisions relied upon were given, are different—viz., "any place of public resort;" and the amending Act of 1868 contains words which fortify me in the view taken here. Sect. 3 enacts that any person playing in (a) any open or public place, or (b) in any place to which the public have, or are permitted to have, access, is liable to certain penalties. It is perfectly clear that the framers of that clause did not suppose that the phrase (a) included such a case as the present. CHARLES G. MEREWETHER.

"11, King's Bench-walk, Dec. 2, 1873."

The justices, acting upon such opinion, dismissed the case.

THE LICENSING LAWS.

ON Wednesday a conference of licensed victuallers, convened by their Protection Society, was held at the London Tavern, to consider, in accordance with the course pursued by them on previous occasions, matters affecting the interests of their trade which are about to be brought before the Legislature. The immediate object of the meeting was to consider a Bill which they have had prepared by a Queen's Counsel, for amending the Licensing Act of 1872. In anticipation of the meeting, the trade, in their several societies, had been invited to consider whether they were favourable to an uniform system of opening and closing public houses all over the country from 5 a.m. to 12 p.m. on week days, and on Sundays to open at 12.30, close at 3, re-open at 5 or 6, and close at 11 p.m. They had also been asked, among other questions, to consider if they were favourable to grocers being placed in all respects upon the same footing as licensed victuallers in reference to police supervision, hours, and magisterial control. It was stated that 75 licensed victuallers' associations in various parts of the country were represented at the meeting—a larger number of societies, it was said, than were ever represented at any previous conference of the kind. Mr. H. G. Lake, chairman of the Licensed Victuallers' Protection Association, presided over the conference, which was fairly well attended, some of the members, he said, having come from distant parts of the country. The simple object, he said, was to discuss amendments of the Act of 1872. Mr. John James Homer, the treasurer, explained the objects of the Bill in question, which, he said, were few and simple, the cardinal point being the question of hours. He thought the late Home Secretary made a mistake in ignoring an uniform system and substituting an elastic principle. That had created, he said, ill-feeling and heart-burning throughout the trade. He explained that they proposed by the Bill about to be brought before Parliament to repeal the 24th, 26th, and 36th sections of the Licensing Act. All the provincial societies had been asked to send delegates to the meeting. To the question Were their societies favourable to an uniform system of closing? seventy-seven of the large provincial cities and towns replied in the affirmative, including, among others, Scarborough, Dewsbury, Maidstone, Burton-upon-Trent, Hull, Stockport, Lincoln, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sunderland, North and South Shields, Dublin, Belfast, and many more. The result was that seventy-seven in all answered favourably as to the question of hours. In London alone, he said, of the answers (3329 in number) received, 2874 were in favour of twelve o'clock and 455 in favour of 12 30, being a majority in favour of closing at twelve o'clock of 2419. Mr. Childs, solicitor to the Licensed Victuallers' Protection Association, stated how the Bill sought to amend the Licensing Act of 1872. The proposed alterations had reference chiefly to the times of closing, and those were left blank in the Bill. Mr. Sharman, the secretary, read an explanatory letter as to how the Bill proposed to deal with existing grievances, from the Queen's counsel by whom it had been drawn, adding that he was a member of Parliament as well as a Queen's counsel, but that he did not at present wish his name to be mentioned. A principal part of the proposed alterations of the existing Act was the manner of dealing with "the bona fide traveller." Mr. Winterbotham, a leading member of the trade, who contended that uniformity as to hours was the mainspring of all their action, moved that in the opinion of that conference the hours of opening within the City of London and its liberties, and within the Metropolitan Police district, should be from five a.m. to twelve p.m. on week days, and on Sundays from one to three and from six to eleven o'clock. He commented on what the called the gross injustice to the trade of granting exceptional licences, and said, speaking on behalf of the whole trade, that they hated a drunken man as much as any other member of the community. The motion was seconded by Mr. Wetenhall, who dwelt on the disposition which had existed during the last twenty years to shorten the hours of labour, and, that being so, he submitted the licensed victuallers should not array themselves against public opinion on that subject. He also contended, amid cheers, that twelve o'clock should be the hour of closing both in town and country, and that if they went for that hour in the Metropolis the country people would also ask for an uniformity of hours. Mr. Edwards, secretary of the National League, objected to the introduction of a Bill by the trade itself. Mr. Graystone, of York, supporting the motion, thought they were much indebted to the London trade for only asking for twelve o'clock, and he was of opinion that all the large town should be on the same footing with the metropolis as to closing at twelve o'clock. Mr. Winterbotham explained that there was not the slightest objection on the part of the London trade to include the country as to the hour of closing. Mr. Cleaver also advocated one hour for closing for the whole country, and he deprecated on this occasion the provincial towns being "left out in the cold." It was denied by several members of the conference that there was any such intention. The motion of Mr. Winterbotham was supported by Mr. Thurston, who stated that they had received 3329 adhesions from the trade in the metropolis in favour of one uniform hour of closing—namely, twelve o'clock. After some further discussion, in which some of the provincial delegates took part, it was moved as an amendment by Mr. Knowles that half-past twelve at night be the uniform hour of closing on week days. In the result the motion of Mr. Winterbotham was carried by a large majority, and it was afterwards agreed to appoint a committee to consider the clauses of the proposed Bill.

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Birmingham	Monday, Dec. 29	A. R. Adams, Esq., Q.C....		T. R. T. Hodgson.
Deal	Friday, Jan. 2	R. J. Biron, Esq.	2 days	E. Drew.
Dover	Monday, Dec. 29	Sir W. H. Bodkin, Knt....	2 days	G. W. Ledger.
Leeds	Thursday, Jan. 1	J. B. Maule, Esq., Q.C. ...	10 days	C. Bulmer.
Margate	Wednesday, Dec. 31 ...	F. J. Smith, Esq.		H. T. Sankey.
Sandwich	Thursday, Jan. 1	R. J. Biron, Esq.		T. L. Surrage.

MARITIME LAW.

SPECIMENS OF A CODE OF MARINE INSURANCE LAW.

By F. O. CRUMP, Barrister-at-Law.

(Continued from page 90.)

DEVIATION AND CHANGE OF VOYAGE.

Definitions.

Deviation—Voluntary departure without necessity—or a departure, through gross ignorance, on the part of the captain(a)—from the usual course of the voyage insured; or delay in commencing and prosecuting the voyage for purposes alien to the objects of the adventure.

(a) Phynn v. Royal Exchange Company, 7 T. Rep 505.

Change of Voyage—Where either before or after sailing the assured abandons the thought of proceeding to the port of destination originally prescribed by the policy, and sails for another.

Woolridge v. Boydell, Dougl. 16 (a).

Intention to Deviate.

A mere intention to deviate does not discharge the insurer.

Kewly v. Ryan, 2 H. Bl. 363; Thelusson v. Fergusson 1 Dougl. 361.

Test of Deviation.

If the risk be altered there is a deviation.

If the risk be enhanced there is a deviation.

And if the risk be altered without being enhanced there is a deviation.

Arn. 1st edit. 342; Phillips, sect. 983; Company of African Merchants v. British and Foreign Marine Insurance Company, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 233.

The Loss.

The loss need not have been in any way whatever connected with the deviation.

Effect of Deviation.

Deviation determines the liability of the underwriter from the time of leaving the track of the specified voyage:

Marshall Ins. 139; Hare v. Travis, 7 B. & C. p. 14.

Effect of Change of Voyage.

If the determination to change the voyage be formed before the risk attaches, the policy is void ab initio. If not formed until after sailing the underwriter is discharged from all losses which may occur subsequently to its being formed:

Way v. Modigliani, 2 T. Rep. 30.

WHAT CIRCUMSTANCES JUSTIFY DEVIATION.

Deviation may be justified—

1. By usage.
2. By licence in the policy.
3. When made to save life [not property].
4. When forced upon the assured by vis major.
5. When the control of the ship is taken out of the hands of the assured.
6. In extraordinary emergencies to repair.
7. When necessary to avoid disaster.
8. In repelling hostile attacks.

1. Usage must be precise, clear, and well-established:

Arn. 4th edit. 427; Cormack v. Gladstone, 11 East, 347; Salisbury v. Townson, Millar Ins. 418.

2. The licence given by the policy must be observed with the most scrupulous and literal exactness:

Elliott v. Wilson, 7 Brown's P. C. 459.

Liberty to "touch and stay" is construed according to the character of the voyage and the object which the parties had in view:

Arn. 4th edit. 435.

There being a liberty to touch and stay, it is no deviation to trade unless by so doing the risk is materially varied:

Arn. 4th edit. 446.

A general liberty to touch at a port or at ports without specifying them will justify touching only for the purposes of the voyage:

3 Kent, Comm. 3rd edit. 315; Ph. s. 1007.

3. Deviation to save life is obviously justifiable on principles of humanity: (Ph. s. 1027.) Deviation to save property only is fatal: (Ibid.)

4. A forced interposition of an intermediate voyage does not discharge the underwriter if the specified terminus ad quem is still kept in view:

Driscol v. Passmore, 1 Bos. & Pull. 200; Bottomley v. Bovill, 5 B. & C. 210; Vallejo v. Wheeler, Cowp 143.

NOTE.—The force may be physical or moral, or exist in a state of circumstances leaving the captain no alternative: (Arn. 4th edit. 466.)

6. When in consequence of disaster the vessel cannot safely pursue the voyage, the master is not only justified in quitting the course and seeking the most convenient and suitable port for repairs and supplies, or on account of other exigencies of the voyage, but it is his duty to seek such port:

Ph. s. 1018, et seq.; Mottews v. Lond. Ass. Co. 1 Atk. Ch. 545; Petty v. Royal Ex. Ass. Co. 1 Burr. 341.

But if the ship was inadequately fitted out in the first instance, departing from the voyage to repair the deficiency is a deviation:

Forshaw v. Chabert, 3 B. & B. 158; Raine v. Bell, 9 East, 195; Thomas v. Royal Ex. Ass. Co 1 Price, 195.

7. The ship may go out of its course, or delay to avoid disaster, to join convoy, or to gain intelligence, ex. gr., as to a rumoured blockade of the port of destination. And deviation which would be justifiable under a policy against the perils of the sea generally, is not a deviation under a policy against one or some only of such perils:

Phillips, sect. 1025.

Note.—There has been some doubt whether deviation to avoid an excepted peril is justifiable (see the cases of O'Reilly v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 4 Campb. 236, and O'Reilly v. Gonne, Ib. 247), but Phillips (s. 1025) is of opinion that it is. Arnould was of a different opinion (1st edit. 407), but his view has not been adopted by his editor.

But if the voyage is given up and another entirely distinct one undertaken on account of a peril not insured against, the risk thereupon ceases.

8. The deviation must be strictly confined to the purposes of self-defence. The engagament begun in self-defence may, however, be prosecuted to capture, but if a desire be evinced to profit by the capture of prizes, and the direct course of the voyage be thus departed from, there will be a deviation:

Jelly v. Walker, 2 Park Ins. 630. See other cases Arn. 4th edit. 459. Haven v. Holland, 2 Mason's Rep. 230.

The Voyage.

The voyage, a deviation from which discharges the underwriter, is the sailing from one port to another with all practicable safe and convenient expedition:

Phillips, sect. 981.

The language describing the course of the voyage must be taken in its mercantile acceptation:

Phillips, sect. 979.

Any usage as to the course or mode of pursuing a voyage, or any variation from the usual manner of pursuing and conducting it, rendered necessary and authorised under the policy by the circumstances, thereupon becomes a part of the voyage to the same effect as if expressly provided for:

Phillips, sect. 981.

A voyage is commonly characterised in part by its implied or expressed object and particular limits:

Phillips, sect. 986.

The mere specification of the voyage includes the usual place and mode of putting on board and landing the cargo:

Phillips. sect. 997.

"At and from" and "to and from."

The insurance being "at and from," and "to or from" port or ports, the question of deviation is one of construction upon the particular policy.

Arn, 4th edit., 432, 433, citing Bragg v. Anderson, 4 Taunt. 229; Lambert v. Liddiard, 5 Taunt. 480; 1 Marsh Rep. 149; Ashley v. Pratt, 16 M. & W. 471; 1 Ex. Ch. 257; 17 L. J. 135. Ex.; Harrower v. Hutchinson, L. Rep. 4 Q. B. 523; 5 Q. B. 584, 589; Brown v. Taylor, 4 A. & E. 241.

A vessel or other interest being insured "at and from" a port, the assured may, by manifesting an intention while in port to adopt another destination, avoid the policy.

And if she sails from the port for another destination, the result is the same, even though the course of the voyage for some distance is similar in both cases.

Phillips, sect. 992; Tasker v. Cunningham, 1 Bligh, p. 100.

Illustrations.

Convoy—Sailing with.

It is no deviation for a ship which has once sailed with convoy, and is driven back, to sail again without convoy, whether warranted to sail with convoy or not.

Laing v. Glover, 5 Taunt. 49.

But convoy being lost by delay, there is a deviation.

Williams v. Shee, 3 Camp, 469.

CARDIFF COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 20.

(Before J. M. Herbert, Esq., Judge.)

Wilson v. The Dowlais Iron Company.

Admiralty—Demurrage—Lay hours—Stipulations in charter-party.

His Honour delivered the following judgment: This is a suit in Admiralty under the County Courts Admiralty Amendment Act, upon a claim arising out of an agreement made in relation to the hire of a ship, being, in fact, a claim for demurrage in loading the plaintiff's ship Campanil on two several occasions. By a charter-party of the 12th May 1871, the defendant chartered the plaintiff's vessel, and it was agreed that the ship should proceed (after completion at Greenock, and having liberty to take cargoes on the way there) to Bilbao, not higher than Oliviaga, or so near thereto as she might safely get, and there load in the customary manner from the agents of the freighter a full and complete cargo of iron ore; and being so loaded should therewith proceed to Cardiff, &c. There was the following clause: "seventy-two running hours, Sundays excepted, are to be allowed the said merchants, if the ship is not sooner despatched, for loading, and to be discharged as fast as the vessel can deliver, time to commence from the time the vessel is ready to load and unload, and all hours on demurrage over and above the said lay-days, at the rate of 20s. per hour, except in case of hands striking work, or frosts, or floods, or any other unavoidable accidents preventing the loading and unloading." There was also this clause: "This charter to be in force for as many voyages as the vessel can make in two years, to commence from the date of the first cargo being unloaded." It was proved by the captain that there were several usual loading places in the Bilbao River between its mouth and the town of Bilbao, of which three are San Nicholas, Zoroso, and Oliviaga, the last being the highest up the river. The ship arrived at the port on the 1st Feb., and on the 7th the captain received orders from the merchant's agents, Messrs. Ybarra, to go to San Nicholas to take in cargo. The captain took his vessel to San Nicholas on Sunday, the 9th, and on the 10th, at 6 a.m., he was ready to take in his cargo, but he was prevented by the harbour-master from putting his vessel alongside Messrs. Ybarra's wharf, which forms part of a large quay or set of wharves by the river side where he had been accustomed to receive his cargo, but he could have taken the cargo where the vessel then was lying. The loading of the vessel was finished at 3 p.m. on the 15th, so that there was a delay of fifty-seven hours beyond the stipulated lay-hours, if the time be computed from the time when the vessel was at San Nicholas ready to load, but a delay of twenty-four hours only if the time be computed from the time when the vessel was allowed to go into berth. Upon the second occasion the vessel went light to Bilbao on the 2nd March, and on the 3rd the captain gave notice, at 11 a.m., that his vessel was ready, but that time was to count from 2 p.m. The ship was then at St. Nicholas, and the captain received orders at 1 p.m. (when he was at the town of Bilbao) to go to Zoroso. Bilbao is about three and a half miles from San Nicholas, and as the tide had begun to flow when he received his orders, and as it would take three hours for the ship to get her steam up, the captain stated that he was unable to get to Zoroso until the following tide. He therefore claimed the lay hours to commence from 2 p.m. on the 3rd, whilst the defendants contended that the time did not begin to run till he had got to Zoroso, seventeen hours later. The defendants admitted their liability for four hours on the second occasion, and for twenty-four hours on the first, and they paid £30 into court for the demurrage. Mr. Ingledew appeared for the owners, and Mr. Ensor for the merchants. The only points in dispute were—from what time, under the circumstances, was the time to run? In Brereton v. Chapman (7 Bing. 559), it was held that the lay-days allowed by a charter party for a ship's discharge are to be reckoned from the time of her arrival at the usual place of discharge, and not at the port merely, though she should for the purposes of navigation discharge some of her cargo at the entrance of the port before arriving at the usual place of discharge. But Parker v. Winlow (7 E. & B. 942) appears to me to lay down the law involved in the consideration of this case. That was an action for delay in unloading. By the charter the vessel, when loaded, was to proceed to Plymouth, not higher than Tor Point or New Passage, or so near thereto as she might safely get, and deliver the same, &c. The ship arrived in the port of Plymouth, and anchored in the Tamar on the 21st June, and the merchant ordered the ship to the Brunswick Wharf to discharge. The port of Plymouth includes the tidal estuary of the Tamar, in which, besides the harbour of Plymouth and Devonport, there are several usual landing-places, one of which is the Brunswick Wharf, below Tor Point and New Passage. In order to reach Brunswick Wharf it is necessary to cross a mud-bank in the Tamar. At the time when the order to discharge was given the tides were neap, and the vessel drew too much water to be able to pass the bank even at high water during those tides. The captain requested the merchant to send lighters to take part of the cargo out, so as to enable him to cross the bank, but they did not do so. The vessel proceeded towards the Brunswick Wharf, and grounded on the mud-bank, where she lay till the high tides, when she got to the Brunswick Wharf, and notice was given that she was there ready to discharge on the 2nd July. The plaintiff's counsel contended that the lay-days commenced on notice of the arrival of the ship in the Tamar on the 22nd June, in which case there were nine days' demurrage. The court decided against the claim. Crompton, J., in his judgment, says: "I think that the lay-days commenced just as they would have done if the charter-party had expressed from the first that the vessel was to proceed to Brunswick Wharf, or so near thereto as she could safely get. The ship is to go to Plymouth, a tidal harbour. For the security of the shipowners two points are named, and the vessel is not to be required to go higher than those; but below those points she is to go to some discharging place. I take it that place is to be selected by those who are to discharge her, with this restriction in their choice—that it is to be one of the regular usual discharging places in the port. I do not think that the freighters could require the ship to go to some discharging place not in the regular course of navigation, and only accessible at rare intervals. Then it appears that Brunswick Wharf is a regular place, and is selected, and the ship is to go there. It is a tidal harbour, and in all tidal harbours a ship is liable to be delayed by the state of the tide. If such a misfortune happens it is in the regular course of navigation. The ship here, when she lay on the mud-bank, was not as near to Brunswick Wharf as she could safely get, and that the event shows; for in the ordinary and regular course of navigation she might and did safely get to Brunswick Wharf, and then discharge her cargo." Now the charter-party in the above case is on all fours with the charter-party before me. The ship was therefore bound to go to San Nicholas on the first voyage, and to Zoroso on the second voyage, and the lay-hours would not commence until the ship had arrived at those places respectively, and was ready to receive cargo. Now, I think it clear that she had performed her duty on the first occasion when she had arrived at San Nicholas, though she was prevented by the harbour master from coming into the loading berth of Messrs. Ybarra. In Brown v. Johnson (10 M. & W. 331) the ship was ordered to Hull, and the usual place of discharge was the dock; and it was held that the lay-days commenced from the time of the vessel's coming into dock, though she could not get to a place of unloading until two days after, owing to the full state of the docks. This case has been followed by other cases, and the last reported case which I can find (and which is the more closely applicable, as it is for demurrage in loading) is Tapscott v. Balfour (L. Rep. 8, C. P. 46). In that case it was stipulated that the ship should proceed to any Liverpool or Birkenhead dock as ordered by the freighter, and there load in the customary manner a cargo of coals. The ship was ordered into the Wellington Dock, where coals are most usually loaded from tips, of which there are only two, and by the dock regulations no coal agent is permitted to have more than three vessels in the dock at a time. The plaintiff's ship was ready to go int the dock on the 3rd July, but was not allowed to enter, because the coal agents employed by the defendants had three ships already in the dock, and two others in turn to get in. She got into dock on the 11th July, but could not get under the tips for some time owing to the number of vessels in turn to go under before her. It was held that the lay-days did not commenee when the ship was ready to enter the dock, as contended by the plaintiffs, nor at the time when she got under the tips, as contended by the defendents, but at the time when she got into dock. From this case I think it follows that the plaintiff's ship was ready, under the terms of this charter, when she was at San Nicholas, the appointed loading place, and that the merchant was answerable for, or rather not excused by, the refusal of the harbour master to allow the ship to go to the particular wharf or part of the wharf where the Messrs. Ybarra usually load their cargoes. With respect to the second voyage, the case of Parker v. Winlow appears to me to show conclusively that the shipowner must answer for his inability to go up to Zoroso sooner, by reason of the state of the tide. I consider that he received his orders to go there in a reasonable time after the freighter knew that his ship was ready. I will therefore give the plaintiffs a decree for £61, that is, for fifty-seven hours on the first voyage, and for four hours on the second.

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Marine Insurance—Insurable Interest—Open Policy—Right of Consignees to insure.—The plaintiffs, who are cotton brokers and agents in London, were, in the course of their business, in the habit of receiving consignments of cotton from Bell and Co., of Bombay, and other correspondents abroad, the plaintiffs making advances by acceptances against the consignments. The bills of exchange were usually negotiated in India, and sent to the plaintiffs with the bills of lading attached, who accepted the same against delivery of the shipping documents. The plaintiffs usually insured the cotton thus consigned to them from Bombay with the defendants, by means of an open floating policy for £5000 on cotton, lost or not lost, from Bombay to London, in ship or ships, and the insurances were expressed to be made "as well in their own names as for and in the name or names of all and every person and persons to whom the same doth, may, and shall appertain in part or in all." Bell and Co., having advised the plaintiffs of a shipment of cotton, drew upon the plaintiffs for £3000, at six month's sight, at the same time requesting the plaintiffs to insure the cotton. The bill of exchange was negotiated by a bank in India, and the plaintiffs accepted it on its arrival in London against the delivery of the shipping documents. The plaintiffs having two open policies then running with the defendants, declared the cotton against them, and at the same time wrote the London branch of the bank offering "to hold the amount insured at their disposal until payment of the acceptance for £3000." The vessel in which the cotton was shipped having been lost at sea, the plaintiffs paid the bill of exchange for £23090, obtained possession of the bill of lading, and demanded the policy moneys from the defendants. Payment being refused, the plaintiffs brought an action on the policies, averring that the plaintiffs, or some or one of them, were or was interested in the goods to the full amount claimed, and that the insurances were made for the use and benefit and on account of the person or persons so interested. Held (per Bovill, C.J., and Denman, J.), that the plaintiffs had an equitable interest in every part of the cotton, they being liable upon their acceptance, and that the plaintiffs had such an interest in selling and managing the consignment as in law entitled them to insure; and also that as the plaintiffs intended to cover the interests of all parties interested in the cotton, they might recover the full amount under a declaration averring interest in themselves, applying the proceeds to the extent of their claims, and holding the remainder as trustees for the other persons beneficially interested. Held (per Keating and Brett, JJ.), that the plaintiffs having made advances on goods in transitu, had only a contract right in the cotton to have the bill of lading endorsed to them on payment of their acceptance, and that they, as consignees, though they were interested in every part, were not the legal owners, nor the trustees for the persons beneficially interested, and could not therefore, recover more than their own beneficial interest: (Ebsworth and others v. The Alliance Marine Insurance Company, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 479. C. P.).

BROKER—MATERIAL ALTERATION—WHETHER BROKER MAY TREAT HIMSELF AS PRINCIPAL—MOLLETT v. ROBINSON.—In the absence of evidence of custom otherwise, a broker may not treat himself as principal, and sue his employer as for goods bargained and sold. The plaintiffs as brokers, bought for the defendant upon the 6th Jan. five tons of india-rubber, at 2s. 11½d. per lb., and sent them a bought-note in which the india-rubber was set out as deliverable "during the month of January." A corresponding sold note was sent to the sellers, at whose instance the plaintiffs struck out "during the month of January," and wrote "forthwith," but did not communicate the alteration to the defendant. On the 7th Jan., the defendant decided to throw up the contract, and sent an order to the plaintiffs to sell at 3s. The plaintiffs could only sell at 2s. 10d., and having paid the sellers at the rate of 2s. 11½d., sued the defendant for the difference. The plaintiffs having been nonsuited, Held that the alteration was material: that the plaintiffs could not treat themselves as principals, and recover for goods bargained and sold; and that the alteration being material the plaintiffs had paid to the sellers what the defendant was not bound to pay, and consequently could not recover for money paid to the defendant's use. A prior contract (at the same price) having been made by the plaintiffs with other sellers, and cancelled at the instance of such sellers, Held, per Brett, J., that in making such prior contract, the plaintiffs had exhausted their authority, and had no power to make another: (White and another v. Benekendorff, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 475. C. P.).

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

CHARITY—TRUST TO PRESENT TO LIVING—SPRINGING USE—FAILURE TO PRESENT—OLD DECREE—COMMON RECOVERY.—In 1723 five advowsons were settled by deed, giving them to certain persons successively in tail male, upon the "express condition or limitation" that upon a vacancy the person entitled to present should nominate and present a Fellow of St. John's, and on failure so to nominate and present, that the advowsons and right of presentation should be to the use, benefit, and behoof of the Master and Senior Fellows of the college. In 1754 Lord Hardwicke made a decree by which, treating the settlement as a "trust or benefaction," he held that the presentation of a certain class of Fellows called Platt Fellows, instead of Incorporated Fellows, or Fellows on the ancient foundation, was void. In 1802 the then patron suffered a recovery. Fellows of St. John's continued to be presented till 1871 to one of the livings, but then Lord E., the then patron, failed to present, and the bishop presented by reason of lapse. Held, that the settlement created a charitable trust; that the recovery could not operate so as to destroy the conditions upon which presentations were to be made, but simply as a change of trustees; That Lord Hardwicke's decree was binding on the court; that upon failure of Lord E. to present, the college could say that they had lost the right to present one of their fellows, and that the gift over took effect so as to vest the living in the college: (St. John's College, Cambridge, v. Earl of Eppingham, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 447. M. R.)

FOREIGN STATE—PROPER PLAINTIFF—DEMURRER.—The minister of a foreign state does not represent his sovereign for the purpose of suing in this country in his own name in respect of his sovereign's property: (Baron Penedo v. Johnson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 452. V.C. M.)

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—"SUMS OF MONEY DUE TO ME"—UNLIQUIDATED DAMAGES.—Bequest by a testator of "all sums of money due to him at the time of his decease." At the death of the testator, A. was under an unascertained liability to him for breach of a covenant in a lease. Held, that the damages recovered in an action brought by the executor against A. for the breach passed under the above bequest, as the action merely ascertained the amount of what was due to the testator at his death: (Bide v. Harrison, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 451. V.C. M.)

WILL—INTENTION TO EXCLUDE FROM RESIDUARY DEVISE.—The wife of A., being entitled in fee, devised to him the B. property. A., under a wrong impression that his wife had no power of testamentary disposition, made his will containing this clause: "And I am wishful here to observe that my son R., as heir-at-law of his mother, will inherit the B. property, and is therefore further provided for." A. then devised his residuary estate to other persons. Held, following Circuitt v. Perry (23 Beav. 277; 28 L. T. Rep. O. S. 115), that A. had died intestate as to the B. property, notwithstanding the residuary devise: (Hawks v. Longridge, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 449. V.C. M.)

WILL—ILLITERATE PERSON—INDEFINITE ESTATE—CHARGE OF GROSS SUM.—A testator who died in 1806, by his will gave two freehold houses to one of his sons without any words of limitation, subject to legacies and annuities, with a gift over, in case of alienation or death without issue, to his brothers and sisters, nomination also subject to the legacies and annuities, and with a direction to pay sums of 4*l.* to each of certain grandchildren as they attained twenty-three. Held, that on James's death without issue, and without barring any estate tail he might have had, the brothers and sisters took as joint tenants, and as the gift was coupled with a direction to pay several gross sums, their estates would in a case coming under the old law, be enlarged to a fee simple: (Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 416. M.R.).

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS—POSSESSION UNDER INVALID WILL—RIGHT AGAINST OTHER DEVISEES—ESTOPPEL.—The Statute of Limitations cannot give a person who has entered into a life estate under an invalid will, a right against other divisees of the will. A testator devised lands, of which he was seised only as tenant by courtesy, to his daughter for life, remainder to her son, subject to legacies to the testator's heir and others. The daughter entered under the will, paid the legacies, and continued in possession for more than twenty years. She afterwards conveyed the premises in fee to the defendant. Plaintiff, who had acquired the interest of the remainderman under the will, brought ejectment. Held, that the defendant was estopped from disputing the plaintiff's claim under the will: (Board v. Board, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 459. Q. B.)

DEED OF GIFT—POWER OF SALE—ALTERATION OF USUFRUCT BEFORE SALE.—By a deed of gift in May 1827, a widow gave to her son C., to take effect as an immediate gift, the enjoyment and usufruct of lands in Montreal, for his life, and after his death to his legitimate children; in case of his death without children, to his brothers and sisters, or any of them, during their lives; and if at C.'s death his brothers and sisters should be dead, the property should belong to their legitimate children per stirpes (par souches). Power was given to the donee to sell the property for a rentcharge, if it should be judged by experts to be advantageous to the succession. C. died childless in 1861, having survived all his brothers and sisters. Two brothers, J. and B., left children. B. died before the deed of gift of 1827. In 1844, C. desiring to exercise his power of sale, filed a petition in the court of Queen's Bench, Canada, stating his desire, and praying the court to nominate a council of the family to appoint a tutor to represent the substitutes, and to act with C. in nominating experts to certify as to the advantage of sale. The tutor appointed having refused to nominate an expert, C. brought a suit against him to compel him to do so. The court compelled the nomination of experts, who reported to the court in favour of a sale; and the court ultimately declared C.'s right to exercise the power of sale "en observant les formalités requises." This judgment was affirmed on appeal, after a long delay, in 1857. It was then thought that a sale in lots would be an advantage, and C., on the tutor's opposition to such sale, petitioned the court to appoint an expert for the tutor to value the property for such sale. The experts duly reported their valuation to the court, but no further proceeding, prior to the sale, was taken in the suit. Pending these proceedings, in April 1857, C. sold his life interest in the usufruct to L., who was subrogated in all C.'s rights, under the deed of gift and the judgment of the courts. In Sept. 1857, C. sold the corpus of the property. Held (reversing judgments of the Court of Queen's Bench, Lower Canada); First, that the execution of the power of sale by C. was not, in the absence of fraud, invalidated by C.'s previous alienation of the usufruct and the subrogation of his rights in another. Secondly, that judicial sanction was not necessary to the exercise of the power of sale; and that the clause "en observant les formalités requises," was directory only of the formalities imposed by the deed, and did not make necessary the formalities required on judicial sales. Thirdly, that the tutor's participation in the sale was not essential to its validity. Fourthly, that on the terms of the deed of gift, all the grandchildren of the donor, including the children of B., were entitled to share per stirpes: (Sutere v. Beaudry, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 410. Priv. Co.).

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—GIFT OVER—PERIOD OF VESTING—PRIOR LIFE INTEREST.—A testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees, upon trust to pay the income to his wife for life; and after her decease upon trust (in the events which happened) to pay the income to his daughter (naming her) for life; with a gift over in the event of her death without issue to his two sons (naming them); with a gift over in the event of both his sons dying without issue to Mary H.; with an ultimate gift over in case Mary H. should die without leaving any issue living at the time of her decease. The testator's widow died in 1823. His two sons survived her, and died without issue in the lifetime of his daughter, who died without issue in 1866. Mary H. survived the daughter, and died without issue in 1872: Held (reversing the decision of Malins, V.C.), that the representatives of Mary H. were entitled to the fund, as she did not die without issue in the lifetime of the tenant for life: Edwards v. Edwards (15 Beav. 357), approved and followed. (Re Heathcote's Trusts, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 445. Chan.)

COMPANY LAW

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

VOLUNTARY WINDING-UP—PRACTICE.—Three petitions having been presented, summonses to appoint provisional liquidators were adjourned in order to give time to the company to hold a meeting, at which it was resolved to wind-up voluntarily, and two liquidators were appointed. At a subsequent meeting these resolutions were confirmed. Held that the appointment was valid. One order was made on the three petitions, the first of which was for a compulsory winding-up, and the others for an order, directing the winding-up to be continued under supervision, and the carriage of the order was given to a petitioner, whose petition had been presented before, though advertised after one of the other two. Semble, that the secretary of a company is a proper person to act as liquidator: (Re London and Australian Agency Corporation, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 417. M. R.)

RAILWAY—LIABILITY—REDUCED RATE OF CARRIAGE—WILFUL MISCONDUCT.—Plaintiff consigned goods by the defendants' railway at a reduced rate, below the ordinary rate, upon an undertaking to relieve the defendants from all liability in case of damage or delay, except upon proof that such loss, detention, or injury, arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the defendants' servants. It was proved that the goods were placed in a truck to be attached to a train passing the station late at night. That train brought some cattle to the station, and the defendants' servants, in order to prevent the cattle from being kept in their trucks till the next day, drove them into a yard, from which they strayed upon the railway, and upset the train, thereby injuring the plaintiff's goods. Held, in an action for this injury, that the contract was reasonable; and that the facts proved did not constitute evidence for a jury of defendants' liability: (Glenister v. The Great Western Railway Company, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 423. Q. B.)

RAILWAY—LIABILITY FOR ACCIDENT TO A PASSENGER ON LINE OVER WHICH IT HAS RUNNING POWERS.—Under the statutory powers of an Act of Parliament the L. and N. W. Railway Company ran passenger trains over a certain portion of the defendants' line of railway, paying to the defendants therefor a certain fixed mileage rate. The times of the passing of these trains over the defendants' line were regulated by the defendants, and the signals, at the point of junction between the two lines of railway, were under their control and management. In consequence of the driver of a L. and N. W. train negligently disobeying the signal duly given to him by the defendants' servants, such train, whilst running under the above-mentioned powers, and without any negligence on the part of any of the defendants' servants, came into collision, on the above-mentioned portion of the defendants' line, with a train of the defendants, in which the plaintiff was travelling as a passenger under a contract with the defendants, and caused the injury to him for which this action was brought; and it was held by the court (Bramwell, Cleasby, and Pollock, BB.) that the action was not maintainable against the defendants, inasmuch as the L. and N. W. R. Company's servants, through whose negligence alone the collision occurred, were not concerned in the carrying of the plaintiff, and were not either in the employment or under the control of the defendants, who consequently were not liable for the injuries resulting from such collision. The Great Western Railway Company v. Blake (in error) (7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 94; 7 H. & N. 987; 31 L. J. 346, Ex.); and Thomas v. The Rhymney Railway Company (L. Rep. 5 Q. B. 226; 39 L. J. 741, Q. B.; 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 297); s.c. in error (L. Rep. 6 Q. B. 296: 40 L. J. 89, Q. B.; 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 145) discussed and distinguished: (Wright v. The Midland Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 436. Ex.)

COUNTY COURTS.

SWANSEA COUNTY COURT.

REES v. THOMAS.

Charter-party—Demurrage—Civil commotion in foreign State.

His Honour (Judge FALCONER) said—In this case a charter-party was made between David Rees, the owner of The Village Belle, of 320 tons, and W. H. Thomas, an agent for merchants. The vessel was to proceed to Bilboa, and to load in customary manner from the agent of the freighter a complete cargo of iron ore, in bulk, to be brought alongside, at merchants' expense; and, being loaded to proceed to Llanelly, with an option of one out of three voyages to Swansea. There were to be eight working days allowed to load at Bilbao, and to be discharged in regular turn and in the customary manner, with all such despatch as the usage of the port will permit. "All accidents or causes occurring beyond the control of the shippers or affreighters which might prevent or delay her loading or discharging, including civil commotions, strikes of any pitmen or workmen, riots, frosts, floods, stoppage of trains, accidents to machinery, &c., always excepted. Demurrage, 4d. per register ton per day." The charter being concluded on the behalf of others, it was agreed that all liability of agents signing in every respect, and as to all matters and things as well before as after, the shipping of the said cargo, shall cease so soon as the cargo is shipped. The charter was to remain in force for three consecutive voyages. Mr. David Rees, the plaintiff, and shipowner of The Village Belle, produced the charter-party. He claims the stipulated demurrage of 4d. per ton on 199 tons, for thirty-nine days, which amounts to £129 7s. After reciting the evidence, his Honour continued: Mr. Strick stated that his client (the defendant) could not have chartered the vessel unless he had protected himself from the probable effect of civil commotions in Spain. Of the necessity of such a course there can be no doubt. In countries where educated men have influenced the multitude, and society is protected by legal equality—the only equality which in this world can be perpetuated or even exist—there is necessarily continued security. Contracts can be made and entered into in such contries without any reference to any expectation of the disturbance of the ordinary business of life. In Spain, however, revolution succeeds revolution, general after general, ecclesiastic after ecclesiastic, stimulate to frequent civil strife, the desperate passions of an ignorant population. Against the effects of such events even private contracts require the protection of exceptional conditions. But in the expression of the terms of such exceptional conditions, such as "civil commotions," charter-parties are defective in not expressing what shall be received as sufficient evidence of the facts connected with such conditions. What, for example, shall be sufficient evidence of a "civil commotion?" A claim for demurrage may relate to £50 or £100, and the claim, if contested, though perfectly just, may involve the expenditure of a very large sum of money to sustain it, and an equally large expenditure to oppose it if it be unjust. A "civil commotion" means much more than a civil riot. It means attacks by force on the authority of the Government through measures which disturb the ordinary trade or business of a locality. The occurrence of such an event, from its publicity and importance, it may have been assumed, would not be disputed. But suppose it is disputed, see what expense may be incurred! Witnesses must be brought from a great distance, and as the knowledge of each witness can extend only over a limited space of ground, many witnesses must be summoned. At one end of a disturbed district all may appear to be peace; at another place there may appear the activity of business, and yet they may be only hasty efforts to preserve what may be threatened with destruction; and in another locality the beasts of burden which may usually be employed to supply a port or city with its common articles of trade may be driven off. The bolt of war may fall on one place, and the noise of its explosion may shake the whole district. One witness might relate little, and even several might appear to contradict each other when no just ground of disagreement existed. In the case of The San Ransom (28 L. J. 381 (1873), P. C.), where a ship had been delayed by its captain at Valparaiso, under the apprehension of being captured, the evidence seems to have included reports respecting the movements of a vessel of war, and newspaper reports, which might have been correct or incorrect, and the advice of a consul not to sail. The evidence of the most justly apprehended danger must be imperfect. But surely there would be no difficulty to provide in charter-parties that those who are the parties to them shall be bound by local official statements of fact relating to causes of delay, matters of regular turn in loading, or such other facts as are connected with what are usually called "exceptional clauses." This could be especially done when the evidence relates to events of a public character. Commissions to examine witnesses abroad are the source of a great money outlay, and the testimony of witnesses brought from abroad is frequently enormously expensive. It is thus that the great difficulty in this case arises. What is sufficient evidence of "civil commotions" disturbing the trade of a port? The plaintiff, through his agents, may know what occurred. He should, as a just man, disclose it. He may be ignorant, and it is the duty of the defendant to excuse the non-performance of his contract. The seamen on board the Village Belle can tell us little. Their knowledge is limited to the business of their own vessel, and to what they can imperfectly observe from its deck. Neither the master, mate, nor seamen could relate what is passing on the not distant mountains which may interfere with the trade they are engaged in. John Jones, the mate of the Village Belle, says: "There were 400 to 500 vessels there; there were lots arrived after us." "Did they get away before you?"—"Yes, one; she loaded before us." Surely such an accumulation of ships at the end of February and in March, and down to near the end of April is strong evidence of great disturbance of the trade, caused by these political events mentioned by the witnesses. The ship Daniel was at Bilbao in February, but the master was not able to get away till April, though it was early in April. The payment to him of demurrage is of no importance, as his delay might not have been excused by any exception contained in the charter-party. The ship Campanile was a steamer, and it is admitted that a preference is given to the loading of steamers; perhaps, even "regular turn" might permit such a preference. The evidence of Mr. Warburton and of Vice-Consul Tutor proves a state of commotion and disturbance, extending from February to April—that is, to the time of the departure of the Village Belle. How, in such a state of affairs, could there be order or regularity in the transaction of business? Some merchants of San Nicholas, or persons having private wharves, or who were placed in favourable positions on the river, from the first loading-place on the river Nervon to Bilbao, may have loaded vessels. "All accidents and causes occurring beyond the control of the affreighters, preventing or delaying loading," are specified in the exceptional clause as well as "civil commotions." Is there not sufficient evidence of general commotion and disturbance of the trade delaying the loading of vessels? The case of Tendvilsden v. Hardcastle, heard by me at Cardiff so far back as the year 1857 has been cited. That case, in principle, has been sustained by several decisions of the superior courts: (Adams v. R. Mail, S. P. Com., 32 L. J. 92.) The charter-party in that case provided that the freighters should not be held to be liable for any delay in loading caused by frosts, floods, strikes of workmen, or accidents. I held that a strike at a particular colliery was no defence to the action, the general market for the purchase of coal not being affected by the strike. The strike at a particular pit did not prevent the obtaining of coal in the ordinary course of the coal trade, and it is now usual to meet such a case by a special provision in charter-parties referring to the particular pit or pits from which it is intended to procure coal. If, however, vessels are laden in a port during the general disturbance of trade from some general cause, or during civil commotions of lading, such cases are exceptional. The excusing cause is to be a general disturbance in the business of the port. The inference I draw is that there was a prevalent general cause of delay, arising from circumstances named in the exceptional clause existing up to the time the ship was laden, as well as at the time of her arrival. There were clearly disturbances in those districts from which the customary supply of ore at the port of Bilbao came, and the disturbance was not a mere local riot, which could be suppressed by the ordinary civil power of the town, and this also was shown by the preparations made for the defence of Bilbao—the breaking up of the railway, &c. Verdict for defendant.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

THE BANKRUPTCY RULES 1870, R. 292—LIQUIDATION — NO RESOLUTION — BANKRUPTCY — COSTS OF LIQUIDATION—PRACTICE.—A debtor filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement, but no resolution was come to by the creditors. The debtor was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt. Held, upon appeal, that the costs of the liquidation proceedings must, in the absence of proof that the debtor had acted from corrupt or improper motives, be paid out of the estate, pursuant to the 292nd Bankruptcy Rules 1870: (Ex parte Jeffery; re Hawes, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 433. Bank.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER — LIQUIDATION — STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU—RIGHT OF VENDOR TO.—A., a merchant in Liverpool, bought certain winches of yarn of B., in London, of C., who acted as broker for both parties, "to be taken immediately from the wharf in London and paid for by the buyers' acceptance at four months." B. sent an invoice of the goods to A., inclosing a bill of exchange for his acceptance, and on the same day C., acting as agent for A., directed the goods to be forwarded by rail to Liverpool. Upon their arrival there the railway company sent A. the usual advice note that the goods "remained there to his order and were then held by the company, not as carriers, but as warehousemen." A. did not accept the bill of exchange, but filed a petition for liquidation. B. having claimed the right of stoppage in transitu as against the trustee under A.'s liquidation: (Ex parte Catling; re Chadwick, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 431. Bank.)

BILL OF SALE—BANKRUPTCY OF ADMINISTRATRIX—ASSUMPTION OF ABSOLUTE OWNERSHIP.—A., a trader, died in Oct. 1870, intestate, being indebted to the plaintiffs, to whom he had given a bill of sale, which was not registered. Administration was granted to his widow on the 14th Nov. 1870, who continued the business, remaining in possession of the chattels assigned by the bill of sale, and became bankrupt on the 13th Jan. 1872. On the 30th Jan. 1872, the plaintiffs filed a plaint in the County Court for the administration of A.'s personal estate. Held, that the title of the plaintiffs to the chattels could not prevail against that of the trustee in bankruptcy (1), because they had not taken possession under their unregistered bill of sale; (2), because (independently of that) they had allowed the administratrix to continue in possession for more than twelve months, during which time she had dismissed the character of administratrix, and assumed that of absolute owner of the chattels: (Kitchen v. Ibbetson, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 450. V.C. M.)

PARTNERSHIP—BUSINESS CARRIED ON BY SURVIVING PARTNER — SUBSEQUENT BANKRUPTCY.—A deed of partnership between a father and his son provided that in the event of the death of the father (to whom all the capital belonged, the son having only a share in the profits), the partnership should be dissolved, and the son's share in the profits should thenceforth belong to the father's personal representatives, or to such person as he should by his will appoint. By his will the father authorised the trustees to delay for two years the sale and conversion of such part of his estate as might at his death be employed in the partnership business, and in the meantime to make arrangements with the son for carrying on the business, and he appointed the son one of his executors. The son alone proved the will, and took possession of the estate, and continued to carry on the business for over a year after his father's death, and he then filed a petition for liquidation. The trustee in the liquidation sold the stock in trade, which consisted partly of goods which existed at the death of the father, and partly of goods since purchased by the son: Held, that the moneys arising from the sale of those parts of the stock in trade which existed at the death of the father were divisible amongst the joint creditors of the father and son, and that the moneys arising from the sale of those parts of the stock in trade which were purchased by the son since the death of the father were divisible amongst the separate creditors of the son; (Ex parte Morley; re White, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 442. Chan.)

BRADFORD COUNTY COURT.

Oct. 10, 29, and Nov. 25.

(Before W. T. S. DANIEL, Q.C., Judge.)

Ex parte DICKIN; Re JOWETT.

Sale by trader debtor for value—No transfer—Secret reservation—Subsequent creditors.

The purchase of the goods of a trader not indebted though for value, is void against subsequent creditors, if it be kept secret, and the trader be allowed to remain in possession without visible change in the actual ownership, and there be a secret trust for the benefit of the trader, to take effect in the event of his insolvency.

Notoriety is essential to perfect a purchase for value when the possession is not changed. (See Latimer v. Batson, 4 B.& C. 652; Kidd v. Rawlinson, 1 B. & P. 59.)

Watson (Watson and Dickson), Bradford, for the motion.

Killick (Wood and Killick, Bradford), for the respondent.

HIS HONOUR.—This is a motion by Henry Dickin, the trustee under the bankruptcy of Joseph Jowett, that John Johnson Broadbent, of Bradford, worsted spinner, may be ordered to deliver to the trustee certain household furniture and effects, referred to in the notice of motion, or pay to the trustee the sum of £480, the value of the said household furniture and effects of the bankrupt, and in his order and disposition. And that Broadbent may pay the costs of the application, or that such order may be made as to the court shall seem reasonable in the premises. The facts as established by the evidence are these: For some time previously, and up to the 27th Aug. 1867, the bankrupt carried on business in Bradford as a worsted top maker, at a mill called Osborne Mill, and he resided with his wife and children at Thorpe House, Idle, in the parish of Calverley, which he occupied, with some land attached, as tenant to Mr. Edmondson. In the month of Aug. 1867, the bankrupt found himself unable to pay his debts in full, and resolved to execute a creditors' deed under the Bankruptcy Act 1861. In contemplation of his insolvency, he, on the 12th Aug. 1867, procured an inventory and valuation to be made of his household furniture and effects (including the live and dead stock in the land and premises at Thorpe House) by Messrs. Hardwick, Best and Young, of Bradford, who valued the same at £516 13s. Messrs. Wood and Killick acted as the bankrupt's solicitors in the arrangements with his creditors, and on the 27th Aug. 1867, an assignment (in the usual form) of the bankrupt's estate and effects was executed by the bankrupt to two of his creditors, James Rhodes and Benjamin Read, as trustees for themselves and the rest of the bankrupt's creditors. And at the same time the bankrupt signed a memorandum in the following terms, indorsed on the inventory and valuation: "I acknowledge that I have this day handed over possession of the within mentioned articles to Messrs. James Rhodes and Benjamin Read, and I hold possession thereof on their behalf, and at their disposal, 27th Aug. 1867, Joseph Jowett." This memorandum was signed by the bankrupt in order to satisfy the requirements of sub-sect. 7, of sect. 192 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861. No other possession was given to or taken by the trustees. On the 29th Aug. 1867, the following memorandum of agreement was indorsed on the same inventory and valuation, namely, "Memorandum.—That Messrs. James Rhodes and Benjamin Read, the assignees of Mr. Joseph Jowett, agree to sell to Mr. John Johnson Broadbent, who agrees to purchase of them all the articles included in this valuation, and all other property and effects at Idle belonging to Mr. Jowett, including the interest and benefit of the farm at Idle, held under Mr. Edmondson for £480, to be paid as soon as the assignees require it after the registration of the deed, dated 29th Aug. 1867. Signed James Rhodes, Benjamin Read, Jno. J. Broadbent." Best and Co.'s valuation was £516 13s., and did not include the interest in this farm; why the sale was for less does not appear. Subsequently, but previously to the 13th Sept. 1867, the deed was executed by the requisite majorities in number and value of the bankrupt's creditors, such execution being attested by Mr. Killick or his clerk, and therefore, I presume, procured by them on behalf of the bankrupt and his trustees, for whom they also acted. On the 18th Sept. the deed was duly registered in the London Court of Bankruptcy, and it must be presumed that the bankrupt's estate and effects have been duly administered and the proceeds distributed among those who were his creditors at the date of the deed, and their claims duly satisfied. The £480 was handed by Mr. Broadbent to Mr. Killick on 29th Oct., and on 1st Nov. 1867 was paid by him to Mr. James Rhodes, one of the assignees, and a receipt given in the following form: "Jowett's assignment.—Received from Messrs. Wood and Killick £480, paid them by Mr. J. J. Broadbent. Signed, James Rhodes, assignee." It appears that the £480 was not the money of Broadbent, but was the money of Mr. Joseph Craven, who was the brother of the bankrupt's wife. Mr. Craven has recently died, but has not been examined under this proceeding nor made any affidavit in the matter. Broadbent, in his examination before the registrar on the 13th Dec. 1872, states that he has no interest in the £480, or the furniture and effects, and that his name has been used simply to give effect to Mr. Craven's arrangements. By payment of the £480 on the 1st Nov., it would appear that Craven had through Broadbent as his trustee, became the purchaser for value from the trustees of the property mentioned in the memorandum of the 29th Aug. 1867, and as between him and the bankrupt, the legal right to the property was in Broadbent, and the equitable ownership was in Craven. The effect of the arrangement necessarily was, and I presume was intended to be, that as regarded the bankrupt's position at Idle, and the property and effects at Thorpe House, and the farm, there was, and should be, no visible change whatever. He had been the real owner up to the execution of the deed of the 27th Sept. 1867, and by means of the arrangements made by Broadbent and Craven with the trustees, remaining a secret as they did, he was enabled to continue, and did continue to appear to all his friends and neighbours, and those who had dealings with him, and even those who might know of his insolvency, as the real owner still. And if any person with whom the bankrupt might continue to have dealings in the way of business had been informed that his furniture and effects and property at Idle had been bought by Mr. Craven from the trustees, such person being informed also or knowing that Mr. Craven was his wife's brother, might reasonably have concluded from the fact that there was no outward change in the bankrupt's position, that the purchase had been made under some family arrangement for the bankrupt's benefit, and that he continued the real, as he was permitted to be the apparent, owner. It appears, however, that this was not Mr. Craven's real intention. He intended, as I infer from what took place, that in the event of a subsequent insolvency of the bankrupt, whenever that might happen, he (Craven) should, through the instrumentality of Broadbent as his trustee, be enabled at any moment to assert and give effect to his real ownership, and have it in his power to place the property beyond the reach of the bankrupt's creditors, and apply it according to his discretion for the benefit of the bankrupt in providing, or helping to provide, a home for his wife and children. What was done to secure Craven's interest was this: At first it appears to have been suggested, at least I so infer from the evidence, that the £480 should be treated as a loan by Craven to the bankrupt, and the purchase as really made for him, and that he should give a bill of sale of the property as a security for the loan, and pay interest at five per cent.; but this suggestion was not adopted, under the advice of Mr. Killick, who advised Mr. Broadbent that, as the ownership of the property was already vested in Mr. Craven, all that was required would be a document defining the interest which the bankrupt was intended to have in it. Such a document was accordingly prepared by Mr. Killick, his firm acting in the matter on behalf of all parties, Craven, Broadbent, and the bankrupt, and such document is indorsed on the valuation and inventory, and is as follows: "Memorandum, that Mr. John Johnson Broadbent, being the absolute owner of the articles and things mentioned in this inventory and valuation, it is hereby agreed between him and Mr. Joseph Jowett, as follows—Mr. Jowett shall be at liberty to keep, use, and enjoy, but not to sell or dispose of, the said articles and things, subject to the stipulations of this memorandum, for so long as Mr. Broadbent thinks fit, except as regards the live stock and consumable stores, which Mr. Jowett may sell and dispose of. Mr. Jowett shall keep and maintain the articles and things in good and sufficient repair, order, and condition, and insured from loss by fire, in Mr. Broadbent's name, for £480 at least. Mr. Jowett shall pay Mr. Broadbent a rent of £24 yearly, by half-yearly payments, beginning the first day of May next, for the use of these articles and things. Mr. Broadbent shall be at liberty at any time, upon giving to Mr. Jowett, or leaving at his residence, a weekly notice of his intention so to do, to enter upon any place where the said articles and things, or any of them, may be, and to take possession thereof, and may also take possession, in manner aforesaid, without any such notice, if Mr. Jowett fail to punctually pay the said rent when due, become bankrupt or insolvent, or make an assignment or composition with his creditors, and for the purpose of taking possession Mr. Broadbent may employ any person or persons as assistants, and break open any doors, external or internal, or take any other steps that he may think necessary. Witness their hands, the twenty-seventh day of December, 1867, Signed, Joseph Jowett." It is not signed by Broadbent. From the affidavit of Mr. Killick, before referred to, it appears that this document had been prepared on the 16th Nov., and was signed by the bankrupt on the 27th Dec., in consequence of a letter written to him on the 26th, by Mr. Killick's firm, to this effect: "Mr. Broadbent seems annoyed at your not calling to sign the memorandum. Please do so at once." I have already observed that I inferred that the real transaction, as intended by the parties themselves, was a loan by Craven to the bankrupt of £480, to enable the purchase to be made for his benefit, and for which he was to pay Craven interest at 5 per cent., and give a bill of sale as security; and I look upon the agreement as prepared by Mr. Killick as an effort of skill and ingenuity to protect the property more effectually against the bankrupt's creditors than could be done by a bill of sale, which would require registration and re-registration, and would be no protection against creditors if mere formal possession were taken, whereas the agreement would leave the bankrupt in the undisturbed possession of the property, and enable him to keep up the appearance of real ownership until the critical moment of insolvency should arrive, and then possession could be taken by virtue of the legal ownership in Broadbent, and this might be done quietly and secretly, and still be effectual if taken in fact. Now, what is the agreement? It begins by representing Broadbent as the absolute owner, which is true only in the most technical sense. According to Broadbent's evidence, there was a secret trust that for paying 5 per cent. on the £480 the bankrupt was to have the use of the property for the benefit of himself and family. Proceeding upon the false assumption of absolute ownership in Broadbent, he grants the bankrupt, as though he were an independent hirer or bailee of the furniture, the liberty to use and enjoy it independently of his wife and children, at a rent of £24, payable half yearly, the first payment to be made on the 1st May, and he is to insure against fire in the name of Broadbent. It was admitted on the hearing before me that he never did insure. And why is what is called rent fixed at £24? It is plainly the interest at 5 per cent. on the £480. And why is the first half-yearly payment of this rent to be paid on the 1st May 1868? Plainly because the £480 had been paid on the 1st Nov., though Broadbent's title had accrued on the 29th Aug., and the bankrupt had had the use and enjoyment of the furniture all along. Was this rent ever paid? Broadbent says it was not. He calls it interest. The proviso enabled Broadbent to enter and take possession of the property if the rent was not paid punctually as it became due. It was not paid. The proviso was not acted upon. Why not, if the agreement was intended to carry into effect a real arrangement. [His Honour fully examined the evidence of the proceedings and continued.] And thus by providing a means for helping to make a home for his wife and children, the bankrupt has had the benefit of the purchase made by Mr. Craven, and which I infer from all the circumstances of the case, was the original intention to be carried into effect in the event of the bankrupt's insolvency. The question raised by the notice of motion is whether this mode of dealing with the property is effectual as against the creditors of the bankrupt. It appears that the bankrupt's debts amount to £2322 18s. 10d. and his assets (exclusive of the property in question) to £178 6s., so far as the trustee in the absence of the bankrupt has been able to ascertain. Mr. Watson, for the trustee, contended, first, that the furniture and effects must be treated as the property of the bankrupt, and that the assignment to Broadbent was void for want of registration under the Bills of Sale Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36); but that contention must fail. Broadbent's title is derived from the trustee under the creditor's deed of the 27th Sept. 1861, and that was duly registered and completed as a valid assignment against the bankrupt under the Bankruptcy Act 1861. The next contention was that the assent given by the bankrupt to Broadbent taking possession immediately, and waiving the week's notice to which the bankrupt was entitled under the agreement of the 27th Dec. 1867 was a fraudulent preference, but the answer given by Mr. Killick appears to me conclusive as to that ground; Broadbent was not a creditor—he was the legal owner of the goods, and the assent merely anticipated his right to resume possession of his own property. A third ground taken by Mr. Watson was that the whole arrangement was a scheme and device to deceive creditors, void both at common law and under the Statute of Elizabeth, as tending to defeat and delay them. Upon this ground I think the question must be decided. Mr. Killick met it thus: That the purchase by Broadbent from the trustees, though with the money and really on behalf of Craven, was a purchase for full value and bonâ fide. As between Broadbent, Craven, and the bankrupt, I have no doubt it was so, and that the bankrupt was not intended, as between them, to have any other interest in or power over the goods than was given him by the agreement of the 27th

Dec. 1872; and that being so, Mr. Killick contended that the mode in which possession was taken and held by Harrison, though it might be formal or apparent only, was immaterial if as against the bankrupt it was real, and intended to be real, and he relied strongly upon Vicarino v. Holdsworth (20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 362); and he further insisted that as the possession was in fact taken before any act of bankruptcy had been committed, which was available for adjudication, the question of order and disposition with the consent of the true owner (which was one of the questions also raised by Mr. Watson), was sufficiently answered. I am of opinion, however, that this contention, though good as far as it goes, does not go far enough; it does not answer the objection as to creditors being deceived. I collect from what was done that the intention was that no persons, not parties or privies to the transaction of purchase by Craven, should be aware that such a transaction had ever taken place, but that all persons not parties or privies should be induced to believe that the bankrupt still continued the real owner of the property at Idle, and were permitted to trust him upon the faith of that belief. There is evidence on the file of proceedings that one creditor, at least, was so deceived. Charles Turner, a creditor for £198, and described as of Idle, worsted spinner, by his affidavit, filed the 12th Aug. 1873, states that "for three years prior to the filing of the petition in this matter I was in the habit of visiting the debtor at his house at Idle very frequently. During all that time the household furniture, the subject of this motion, was in the debtor's house at Idle, which was well and comfortably furnished; and the said debtor and his family used the same in the usual way, and the same appeared to be treated as the property of the debtor. I understood and believed the same to be his property until the same were claimed by Mr. Broadbent upon the debtor's failure. Being under that impression and belief I lent money to the said debtor, and I am a creditor in this estate in respect thereof for the sum of £198." Although, in considering whether a transaction is void, as being intended to deceive creditors, it is not necessary to show that any creditor has been actually deceived, yet when it appears that a creditor has been deceived by the false appearance necessarily created by the transaction, that fact is strong to show its inherent viciousness—as being a transaction intended, because from its nature calculated, to deceive. Secresy and want of possession combined, producing, as they have produced in this case, a deception upon one creditor at least, have the effect, in my opinion, of vitiating the title of Craven and Broadbent, as his trustee, as against the creditors under the bankruptcy, and estop each of them from saying that the ownership which the bankrupt once really and notoriously had of this property, and which they permitted him, after the secret change of ownership, ostensibly to continue, was not the real ownership; and that these goods ought therefore to be treated as the goods of the bankrupt at the commencement of the bankruptcy. I am not aware of any case in which the combination of secrecy and want of possession, followed by an actual deception of a creditor, has been made the subject of decision; but I think the principle applicable to such a case may be collected from the authorities to which I will refer. Latimer v. Batson (4 B. & C. 652), was an action against the sheriff for seizing goods of the plaintiff under an execution against the Duke of Marlborough at the suit of a creditor. At the trial it appeared that in 1823, one Richardson, who had obtained a judgment against the Duke, issued a fi. fa., under which property of various descriptions was seized at Blenheim. An officer remained in possession until the end of 1823; then Richardson took a bill of sale from the sheriff, but the Duke prevailed upon Richardson to postpone the sale still further. In May 1824, the plaintiff (Latimer) took from Richardson a bill of sale of the goods, and paid him for them the sum of £700, and put a man in possession. On the 14th March 1825, a warrant was given by the sheriff to his bailiff to levy on the goods of the Duke for another judgment creditor. The plaintiff's man was still in possession, but the officer seized and carried the goods away. Up to that time the Duke had continued to reside at Blenheim, and to use the goods as if no execution had been put in, but the execution by Richardson was well known at Woodstock, and generally in the neighbourhood of Blenheim. The only question left to the jury was whether the sale by Richardson was bona fide or merely colourable. The jury found it was bona fide, and a verdict for the plaintiff was entered. A new trial was moved for on the ground that the judge should have directed the jury to find for the defendant if they thought that the sale was colourable, or that the Duke remained in possession. The rule was refused. Lord Tenterden said it must be taken to have been proved that the transaction between Richardson and Latimer was bona fide; that Richardson was paid for the goods with the money of Latimer; and that it was generally known in the neighbourhood of Blenheim that an execution had been put into the house. Bayley, J., said, the goods in question were seized under a fi. fa.; the creditor took a bill of sale of them from the sheriff, and afterwards, for a valuable consideration, sold his interest to the plaintiff, and the circumstances attending the execution were well known in the neighbourhood. And, referring to Leonard v. Baker (1 M. & S. 251), Watkins v. Birch (4 Taunt. 823), and Jozeph v. Ingram (8 Taunt. 838), his Lordship says, "If goods seized under an execution are bona fide sold, and the buyer suffers the debtor to continue in possession of the goods, still they are protected against subsequent executions if the circumstances under which he has the possession are known in the neighbourhood." And the law is laid down to the same effect in Kidd v. Rawlinson (1 B. & P. 59). These authorities establish that where the transaction is bona fide and for value, the continuance in possession is no objection, provided the transaction is notorious. In every one of these cases, the validity of the transaction, being in itself bona fide, has been upheld upon the ground of its notoriety. But where there is no notoriety, no change of possession, or secret arrangement for the benefit of the party indebted, and a creditor actually deceived (which is the present case), I am of opinion that the transaction is void as against creditors under a bankruptcy. The question, however, is not covered by any distinct authority, and it is a satisfaction to know that my judgment may be set right on appeal if it be wrong. There was another point made by Mr. Watson, which I have not yet noticed, but have considered with some anxiety which was this, that the paper signed by the bankrupt on the 16th Sept. 1872, waiving the seven days' notice to which he was entitled under the agreement of the 27th Dec. 1867 (and which had been prepared for him by Mr. Killick to be signed on his return from seeing Broadbent) might be treated as in itself an act of bankruptcy under sect. 6, sub-s. 2 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 as being a fraudulent gift of part of his property, namely, his right to retain possession of the goods in question for seven days after service of the notice, and as having been given to Broadbent for the fraudulent purpose of enabling him to take possession at once, so that he (the bankrupt) might be able immediately after possession was taken, and within the seven days, to file his petition for liquidation, and then abscond, as he did on the 19th Sept., believing that the goods would be applied for the benefit of his wife and children, as they in fact were. If there were any direct evidence to show that the waiver was made with that fraudulent intent in the mind of the bankrupt, the question would deserve serious consideration. But there is no such direct evidence, and I should hesitate to infer such an intention without the assistance of a jury. In answer to this objection of Mr. Watson's, it was pointed out by Mr. Killick that as the rent had not been punctually paid, Mr. Broadbent had, under the agreement, the right to enter at any time, and the waiver of the seven days' notice was therefore not required to authorise Broadbent taking possession. This, however, would not be an answer if the bankrupt believed he was entitled to the seven days' notice, and for the fraudulent motive and purpose suggested, waived it. I consider, however, that I cannot decide the case on this ground, though I recognise its importance. The order will be that the furniture mentioned in the inventory and valuation of Hardwick and Co., and effects which were taken possession of by Harrison on the 18th Sept. 1872, under the authority of Wood and Killick's letter of that date, be delivered by the said J. J. Broadbent to Mr. H. Dickin, in as good a state and condition as the same were when so taken possession thereof. Or in case the same cannot now be delivered in specie, then that the particulars and value thereof be ascertained and certified by the registrar, and the amount of such value so certified be paid by the said J. J. Broadbent to the said H. Dickin within seven days after the date of such certificate. And that the said J. J. Broadbent do pay to the said H. Dickin the costs of and incidental to this motion, but the costs of the proceedings before the registrar and of his certificate are reserved, with liberty to either party to apply with reference thereto, and by whom and to whom such costs should be paid.

LEGAL NEWS.

A Just Law.—The Times states that, for the first time, at the Woolwich Police court, an order was issued on the 3rd inst., against a soldier for support of his illegitimate child. By the new clause in the Mutiny Act, non-commissioned officers and privates are liable to deductions in their pay for the support of illegitimate children, and of their wives and families, to the extent of 6d. for a non-commissioned officer, and 3d. for a private soldier.—Pall Mall Gazette, Dec. 5.

Albert Assurance Arbitration.—Lord Cairns has directed that a third and final dividend of 5½d. in the pound be paid to the creditors of the Albert Assurance Company. The previous dividends were 2s. and 1s. 6d. The total amount, therefore, which the creditors will have received will be 3s. 11½d. in the pound.

Commitments in Ireland.—The total number of commitments in Ireland during last year, as stated in the recently printed judicial statistics, was 30,427, against 31,348 in the preceding year: the males were nearly the same, being 19,264 in 1871, and 19,243 in 1872.

Criminal Statistics.—The whole criminal Irish population on one day was calculated recently to be 30 in every 10,000, against 89 in 10,000 persons in England and Wales; and out of 217,333 persons proceeded against in Ireland in 1872, 2267 were "known thieves."—Times, Dec. 4.

Municipal Boroughs.—The annual returns relative to municipal boroughs presented to Parliament and printed show that the receipts were £3,267,294 last year, and the expenditure £3,432,666. The amount of loans effected on the rates and outstanding on the 14th Aug. last was £6,830,874.

Legal Expenditure.—The Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the expenditure of the legal departments have agreed upon the first report. The attention of the commission up till now has mainly been directed to the preparation and consideration of a scheme for the re-employment or retirement of the holders of offices which may be abolished. The annual charges for compensation paid on account already amount to a very large sum. It is not anticipated, however, that the commission will make a final report for several months to come.

The Criminal Courts.—According to an article in the Globe, "a very offensive mode of cross-examination has recently come into fashion in the criminal courts. A witness already on his oath, gives certain evidence; he is immediately asked whether he swears that, and answers that he does. But this by no means satisfies the cross-examining barrister. 'You really mean to swear that?' &c. 'Remember you are on your oath;' and similar suggestions that the witness is perjuring himself, are reiterated to induce the jury to believe his evidence untrustworthy This is hardly fair to one who may be endeavouring to speak the truth, while a hard swearer will be by no means checked by such unauthoritative additions to the oath previously administered to him. This custom is singularly offensive to those who have proper regard for an oath's sanctity, but ridiculously inoperative in the case of those who are not so influenced."

The Legal Offices Commission has for some time been sitting three days a week, and examining witnesses on the subject of the Chancery offices, but without much avail. With their minds an utter blank on the matters committed to them, they have had to receive instruction from those who have come before them, and to learn step by step what they require to know. This process has proved to be too slow and too inefficient for the purpose, and it appears the commissioners become more confused, and, to their own thinking, further than ever from their object the more they advance in their inquiry. No witnesses can be found to state that a radical fault exists in the organisation of the offices under review. Suggestions of all sorts, relating to idleness, incompetency, and even to corruption in the officials of the court, have failed to produce the desired evidence. In this dilemma the commissioners have resorted to one of the most reasonable methods of action; they have asked the Lord Chancellor to appoint a committee of officers of his court who shall report as to the best mode of reorganising and amalgamating offices with a view to the provisions of the Judicature Act and the contemplated "fusion" of law and equity. This is an acknowledgment of weakness, but we congratulate the commissioners on having arrived at a full knowledge of their ignorance—the first step towards the success of their labours.—Globe.

What is Legal Insanity?—The Master of the Rolls had before him on Monday, in the cross petitions of Joy v. Joy, some curious evidence as to the mental condition of one of the petitioners. This gentleman, who is more than forty years of age, appeared to have excited the commiseration of his mother on account of his habits of life and a certain tendency to follow bad example, which made him a likely dupe of vicious and unscrupulous companions. She accordingly petitioned that an arrangement might be made by order of the court by which the income of the money to which he is entitled under a decree in Chancery might be so paid as to find its way direct into the hands of her son, without passing through the hands of persons who, in his mother's opinion, were not suitable companions for her son. A mass of affidavits had been filed with a view of showing that the gentleman was of weak mind, and it was said that he had got into the keeping of a family at Antwerp of doubtful reputation; that he possessed and read with avidity a mass of immoral literature; and that he was incapable of understanding anything that was not of the simplest character. His Honour said that the mother had, in her maternal anxiety concluded that, because her son was not very virtuous, therefore he was not sane. But the law knew no degrees of insanity. Either he was or he was not compos mentis. Vicious habits alone were no indication of weak mind in the legal sense; as for the devotion to immoral literature, a very distinguished literary man not only possessed but gloried in the possession of a large library of erotic literature, and yet no one doubted his sanity; and, lastly, the incapacity to understand what was not simple was one in which this gentleman by no means stood alone. Ultimately an arrangement was made with the sanction of the court.

DAMAGES FOR RAILWAY UNPUNCTUALITY.—The question of whether railway companies are bound to keep the time set down in their time-tables was raised before Mr. Whigham, in the County Court at Aylesbury on Wednesday. The plaintiff was Mr. Wm. Adams, cattle dealer, and the defendants were the London and North-Western Railway Company, as the proprietors of the branch line between Aylesbury and Cheddington. It was shown that on the 20th Oct. the plaintiff took a ticket at Aylesbury for Luton, where he ought to have arrived at 9.28 a.m., in time for Luton market, at which he was to dispose of some beasts. The train by which he was travelling from Aylesbury to the main line was delayed nearly an hour, owing to the engine being short of steam. The consequence was he missed the train at Cheddington, and did not arrive at Luton till 11.30 a.m., by which time the market was over. He now claimed 10s. damages per head of his beasts—30 in number—which he did not get sold for nine days. The want of steam, it appeared, arose from the fire-box of the engine having been choked, the fireman having Welsh coal that day—a variety to which he was not accustomed. It was pleaded for the defence that the company were exonerated from liability by the statement on their time-tables that they would not be responsible for delay. His Honour held, however, that the choking of the fire-box was not a circumstance over which the company's servants had no control, and he therefore gave a decree for the plaintiff for 40s. in respect of the loss of his time, through having found no market for his cattle at Luton. The Tribunal de Première Instance of Brussels has recently pronounced a decision which will be interesting to railway travellers in England. The railways in Belgium are the property of the State, and it was against the State that a traveller sought damages for delay in the performance of a journey. On the 1st of February the complainant took a ticket at Brussels for Marchiennes. The train started at the time fixed, but was detained for three-quarters of an hour near Charleroi in consequence of the line being blocked by goods trains. The traveller sought 300f. damages for the delay to which he had been exposed. The counsel for the State resisted the demand, contending that the delay to which the plaintiff had been subjected was the result of inevitable accident, and further, that, according to the terms of the contract upon which a railway ticket was granted, no compensation greater than the amount of the fare paid could be demanded. The court overruled that objection, and decided that the blocking up of the line by an accumulation of trains "constitutes a fault on the part of the administration, since it is not to be contested that it is bound to assure a free passage and the punctual arrival of the trains which are under its control." The court made an order against the State to pay to the plaintiff the sum of 150f. as damages.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it

ARTICLED CLERKS' NOTICES.—I read with much satisfaction your remarks in last Saturday's LAW TIMES on the inconsistent decisions given by the masters sitting for the judges at chambers. On the 4th inst. I myself applied for an order to be at liberty to give an admission notice for Hilary Term next, on the ground that I had never heard of such a notice being requisite, and that I believed my admission would follow my examination as a matter of course; but my application met with a negative response. As I had entered into negotiations with the gentleman to whom I was articled for a partnership with him when admitted, the result became a grievance to me, and I was advised to apply to a judge, which I did, on the 6th inst., and obtained an order.

AN ARTICLED.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

42. CONVEYANCE—STAMP.—Perhaps one of your readers will be good enough to solve the following case for me: "A. executes a lease to B. of a certain freehold property for a term of twenty-one years, reserving a yearly rent of £21; at the end of ten years B. wishes to purchase the entire freehold of the property in question, and so A. executes a conveyance to him of the reversion for £300. As by the conveyance of the reversion to himself, B. is released from the covenants contained in the indenture of lease." Will any extra stamp be needed beyond the ordinary £1 10s. X. Y.

Answers.

(Q. 34.) STAMPS—AGREEMENT FOR WEEKLY TENANCY.—The stamp duty depends on the rent reserved. If the rent reserved on letting an unfurnished house exceeds the rate of £10 per annum, the same duty must be paid as on a lease for a year as the rent reserved for a definite term. Thus an agreement for a week's holding, at the rate of £11 per annum, would require a 6d. stamp; if not exceeding £10 per annum, a 1d. stamp. Adhesive stamps may be used to be obliterated by the person who first executes. (See the Stamp Act, 1870, head "Lease;" also sect. 99.)

Z. Y.

(Q. 35.) BILL OF COSTS—PARTNER.—The firm cannot sue for any part of the costs, unless there be some evidence, by acquiescence or otherwise, that the client adopted the firm as his solicitors. Z. Y.

(Q. 36.) CHEQUE—INDORSEMENT.—Under the circumstances, J. P. might consider that he had an implied authority to obtain payment of the cheque; unless it be clear that he could not reasonably have thought himself entitled to do everything necessary to obtain payment, and that in fact he had a fraudulent intent in signing as executor, there was no forgery. The bank is relieved from liability by the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 19. As between the drawer and the executor of Mrs. G., if there be no forgery, the executor of Mrs. G. must, of course, bear the loss; if there be forgery, the drawer must bear the loss, unless, as seems probable, the executor of Mrs. G. has so dealt with the cheque as to absolve the drawer. The fraud, if fraud there be, was rendered possible through the voluntary act of the executor. Z. Y.

— Unless J. P. is one of the executors, his obtaining of the money appears to be rather a misdemeanour under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 88, than a "forgery;" and if so, J. P. is liable to five years' penal servitude for the fraud by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, or two years' imprisonment. It is not a case of larceny. B.'s conduct seems rash in parting with the cheque so as to make him responsible for the loss in the first instance. As he treated J. P. as his agent, the latter might be liable in an action for damages, if solvent: (See Dunn's Case, 2 East, P. C. c. 19, s. 49, p. 962, as to forgery.)

(Q. 37.) TRUSTEES—INVESTMENT.—The East Indian Company, being incorporated or constituted by Act of Parliament (12 & 13 Vict. c. 93), I think its capital stock is within the power in question. Z. Y.

— The cases of Hancorn v. Allen (7 Dick. 498:) Clough v. Bond (3 M. & Cr. 496), showed that an unauthorised investment in India Stock would be made upon the responsibility of trustees prior to 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 32 (13th Aug. 1859), and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 12, when this investment was legalized. The Act only applies to old India Stock, not that created by 22 & 23 Vict. c. 39. See Lewin on Trusts, ch. xiv. s. 4 p. 252. It is silent as to mortgages or bonds. In these cases the trustees should be furnished with an indemnity deed, in case of detriment.—C. C.

(Q. 38.) JOINT TENANCY.—The joint tenancy continues between the owners of the shares not aliened: (Littleton, sect. 304). Z. Y.

— The remaining tenants held their shares in joint tenancy, and subject, as between them, to the jus accrescendi: (Vide Watkins's Conveyancing, 8th edit., p. 160). TRIO.

— Unity of interest, title, time, and possession, are necessary: (See Cruise's Digest, vol. 2, p. 366.) If A., B., C., are joint tenants, and A. sells to D., the unity of title is destroyed: (See Cruise, vol. 2, p. 379; Lit. S. 292.) Unity of possession is also at an end (Cruise, vol. 2, p. 380), and it is a tenancy in common, which merely requires unity of possession (p. 399, Lit. S. 292-99, and there is no survivorship. Hence, B.'s share descends to his heir; or, if a term of years, it is his personalty. C. C.

(Q. 12.) POOR LAW—LIABILITY TO MAINTAIN GRAND PARENT.—The following note occurs (1 Bolt. Poor Laws, 374): "In this case (Waltham v. Sparkes, Skinner 568) it is said by Holt, C.J. that the word children in the statute of 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 7, extends to grandchildren, because there is the same natural affection; but no case has occurred in which the same has been judicially determined. And perhaps, says Dr. Burn, there may be some doubt as to this point; natural affection descends more strongly than it ascends; and it is observable that whereas the 39 Eliz. c. 3 did only enact that parents and children should mutually maintain each other, this statute 43 Eliz., enlarging this branch, extends it to grandfathers and grandmothers, but doth not specify grandchildren," &c. Z. Y.

LAW SOCIETIES.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

THE usual fortnightly meeting of this society was held on Monday, the 8th inst., Mr. Guy Morrison in the chair. The subject for discussion was—"Should defendants in criminal cases be competent and compellable to give evidence, as in civil cases?" Messrs. R. Welsh and E. H. Armitage conducted the affirmative, and Mr. G. F. Johnson the negative. The question was decided in the affirmative.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at Clement's Inn Hall, Strand, on Wednesday the 10th Dec., Mr. E. F. Stanway in the chair. Mr. Baker opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz., "That the acceptance by the Prime Minister, without additional remuneration, of the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, vacates his seat in Parliament." The motion was lost by a majority of one.

BRISTOL ARTICLED CLERKS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held in the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst. F. N. Budd, Esq., Barrister, occupied the chair. Mr. Crewdson opened the following subject in the affirmative, "Was the case of Hammersmith Railway Company v. Brand (L. Rep. 4 H. L. Cas. 171, 18 W. R. 12) rightly decided?" Mr. Doggett opposed; and, after a considerable discussion, the affirmative was carried by a large majority.

LEGAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.

AT a meeting of the executive committee of the association, held on Friday, Dec. 5, R. Paul Amplett, Esq., Q.C., M.P., in the chair. After a reference by the chairman to the great loss the association had sustained by the death of Vice-Chancellor Sir John Wickens, who was an active member of the executive committee, it was resolved that a deputation should wait upon the Lord Chancellor to ascertain what steps the Government was prepared to take in order to give effect to the objects of the association.

Since the meeting of the executive committee, it was ascertained that the Lord Chancellor would receive the deputation in Lincoln's-inn at four o'clock on Friday, Dec. 12, which he received as arranged.

Several leading members of both branches of the Profession having consented to act on the deputation, were present on the occasion.

DUBLIN LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

AT a meeting of this society held on Monday last, at King's Inns, Dublin, the following subject was debated: "That the present agitation of labour against capital is to be deprecated."

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

THE HON. SIR G. ROSE, F.R.S.

THE late Hon. Sir George Rose, formerly a Master in Chancery and a judge of the Court of Review, who died at Brighton on the 3rd inst., in the ninety-second year of his age, was born in London in or about the year 1782. He was educated at Westminster School, where he became one of the most able and accomplished classical scholars of the day; and it is stated that he frequently aided in the preparation of the Prologue and Epilogue of the "Westminster Play," at which from year to year he was a constant attendant. Sir George Rose was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple in 1809, and he was for many years the Senior Bencher of that body He was made a King's Counsel in 1827, and in 1831 he took his seat upon the Bench as judge of the Bankruptcy Court, or, as it was then called, the "Court of Review," at the same time having granted to him the rank and precedence as one of the judges in the Courts of Westminster Hall, and receiving the customary honour of knighthood. In 1840, during the Chancellorship of Lord Cottenham, he was made a Master in Chancery, the duties of which office he performed for many years. Sir George Rose, who was a Fellow of the Royal Society and of the Royal Geographical Society, married in 1821 Mary, daughter of the late Capt. Robert Pouncey, of the Hon. East India Company's Service. Lady Rose died in 1855.

E. WALLER, ESQ.

The late Edward Waller, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Finnoe House, county Tipperary, and Lisdcrry, near Aughnacloy, county Tyrone, whose death has been recently announced at the age of seventy, was the eldest son of the late Thomas Maunsell Waller, Esq., of Finnoe House. His mother was Margaret, only daughter of John Vereker, Esq.—a relative of Lord Gort—and he was born in the year 1803. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1826, and he was called to the Bar at Dublin in 1830. Mr. Waller, who was a magistrate for the counties of Tipperary and Tyrone, married, in 1829, Mary, only daughter of the late Henry Crosslé, Esq., of Annahoe, in the county of Tyrone.

J. A. SHARP, ESQ.

The late John Andrew Sharp, Esq., solicitor, of Gray's Inn, who died very suddenly, from heart disease, at 62, Thornhill-square, on the 29th Oct., in the 51st year of his age, was the eldest son of the late Mr. William Henry Sharp, silversmith, of London. He was born in London in the year 1823, and having been educated at a good private school, he was, at about the age of 16, articled in a solicitor's office in the city, and by his own perseverance and study, joined to very great integrity of character, he was at length placed in the position he was destined to attain, having no assistance or influence whatever. He was admitted into the profession in Hilary Term 1862, and was for some time partner with Mr. Ullithorne, at his chambers in Field-court, Gray's Inn. The deceased gentleman was highly respected by all who knew him, and his death is greatly deplored by a large circle of friends. He married, in 1864, Helen Elizabeth Mary, daughter of Thomas Turner Pearson, Esq., solicitor, of Crowle, Lincolnshire, by whom, who died in June 1866, he had issue one daughter, Grace, who died in infancy. His remains were interred at Whitchurch, Little Stainmore, Middlesex.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

N.B.—Announcements of promotions being in the nature of advertisements, are charged 2s. 6d. each for which postage stamps should be inclosed.

Mr. Douglas Morey Ford, solicitor, of Portsmouth, and Gosport, has been appointed, by the Lord Chief Baron, a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Court of Exchequer of Pleas at Westminster, for Hampshire and the adjoining Counties.

Mr. William Jaquet, of No. 4, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street, solicitor, has been appointed a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in Her Majesty's Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, and also a Commissioner for taking Acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Peter Leckie, Esq., to be a Member of the Legislative Council of the Colony of British Honduras.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Francis Snowden, Esq., to be senior Puisne Judge, and George Phillipo, Esq., to be junior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS

CAUSE LIST AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM, 1873

Common Law Courts.

Queen's Bench.

Remanets.

Hughes v. Learoyd
Schon and others v. Bilbe and another
Hayward v. Newton and others
Engstrom and another v. Wallis and another
Paton v. Gedalia
Walsh and another v. Lidgett
Coombe v. Thompson
White v. Schmierer
Hughes v. The Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Company
Yglesias and another v. Meiklereid and another
Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China v. Just Klem and others v. Falk
Keyser and another v. Oxley
Mathews v. Ansted and another
Overbeck and another v. Ripley and another
Martin v. Patton
Dobbing v. Wolverton and others
North Australian Company (Limited) v. King
Hawkesley and wife v. London General Omnibus Co (Limited)
Sly and another v. Fillingham
Murdoch v. Honychurch
Gabriel and others v. Neame and another
Consolidated Bank (Lim.) v. Guedalla and others
Guano Consignment Co. to Great Britain v. Kellock and another
Ionian Bank v. Ansted and another
Green and another v. Budgett and another
Gray and another v. Blake
Lloyd and others v. Linford and another
Northmore and another v. Kemble
Quick v. Dunn and others
Curtis v. Lawson and others
Joyce and others v. Curling
Ranken v. Mortimer
Elkin and another v. Clarke and others
Muller v. Shaw
Land Securities Co. (Lim.) v. Rankin and another
Reg. v. Calvo
Bergheim v. Clay and others
Richards and another v. Hudson
Wallis v. Walker
Nevill v. Foster
Patton and another v. Cheeswright
Simpson v. Metropolitan Railway Company
Austin and another v. Von Milde
Miller v. Watkins and another
Thompson v. Grove and another
Holderness and another v. Sheridan
Elmslie and others v. Barlow
Verdure v. Mitchell
Hancock v. Henderson
Willis and another v. Saunders
Smith v. Gellatley
Leonino v. Wilson and others
Cox v. Marquis of Londonderry
Comley v. Westminster Brewery Co. (Lim.)
Elliott v. Lloyd
Ball v. Brown
Potter, an infant, v. North Metropolitan Tram. Co.
Breslauer v. Hudson
Same v. Same
Lyall v. Freeman
Sotiriades v. Green
Despard v. Hong Kong and Shanghai Bankg. Corpn.
Adler and another v. Morice
Zarifi v. Wilkes and another
Smith v. Kirby and another
Durese v. Hartley
Papelier v. Ochsenbein
Janssen v. Harris
Catling and another v. London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Co.
Van den Eyndt v. Port of London Wharfing and Warehousing Co. (Lim.)
Marzetti v. Magniac and others
Brown v. Ball
Archer and another v. Birkenhead Imp. Coms.
Schacht v. Head
Little v. Wakefield
Featherstone v. Pallett
Same v. Elsdon
Same v. Lacey
Same v. Brown
Schutze v. Arnhold
Grenville v. Nurse
Joyce v. Holland and another
Morison v. De Croy
Pilkington v. Forrest
Cawtaron v. Keable
Henwood v Curwen
Hewitt v. Birmingham and Lichfield Junction Railway Company
Weston and others v. Agelasto
Aston v. Underwood
Eckhaus v. Westcott and others
Alexander and others v. Smyth
Harnett and another v. Redhead and another
Sotiriades v. Green and others
Hindley v. Hewett and others
Sassoon and others v. Mendel
Sassoon and others v. Harris
Klein v. Moore
Metropolitan Board of Works v. Pigot
Spartali v. Ellis
Doyle v. Ford
Burnham v. Phillimore
Geen and others v. Adam
Solomon v. Milns
Champney v. Young
Johnson v. Lewis
Williams v. Plater and another
Wedgwood Coal and Iron Co. (Limited) v. Crump
Lewis v. Mutual Tontine Westminster Chamber Association (Limited)
Wilkinson v. Harris
Hartmont v. Masey
Lamprell v. Gilbert
Elmslie and others v. Barlow
Phillips and another v. Bayston
Boyce v. Baroneski
Leuty v. Greenhill
White and anr. v. Mansfield
Levy v. Jones
Whitmore v. Birkett
Deslandes v. Ireland and another
Austin and anr. v. Justice
Symington v. Bates and another
Abitbol v. Moss
Levi and anr. v. Hugon
Potter v. Jones
Kruger v. The Oceanic Steam Navigation Co. (Limited)
King v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Co.
Sheppard v. Ommanney
Cosstick v. Ward
Bacon and another v. Duke of Devonshire
Newman v. Davies

Causes.

Hewitt and others v. Hindley
Carter and anothr v. Styles
Manuelle v. Beevers
Shepherd v. Elliott
Ridgway v. Dudley and another
Brown v. Harton
Portlock v. Taylor
Searby v. Sprunt
Hartshorn v. Fisher
Winter and another v. Farebrother and another
Baker v. Lewis
Holland v. Joslin
Russ and others v. Tune
Bennett v. Dowel and another
Duns v. Michael
Morrison and another v. Watson
Salisbury v. Lyall
Lawrence and another v. The Burham Brick, &c., Company (Limited)
Wilkinson v. Gueret
Nicholson and another v. Palmer's Shipbuilding and Iron Compy (Limtd)
Hurst and another v. Harrison
McLaren and another v. Lesiter
Barlow v. Public Works Construction Co. (Lim.)
Russell and ors. v. Downes
Cooper, Trstee, &c. v. London and St. Katherine Docks Co.
General Iron Screw Collier Co. (Lim.) v. Richards
Union Steamship Company (Lim.) v. Stephen
Barker v. Ballantine
Hemptenmacher v. Parker
Meyerstein v. Zeechin and another
Browne v. Parker
Pugh v. South-Eastern Railway Co.
Norton v. Beaconhill Firebrick and Clay Company (Limited)
Bloomfield v. Great Eastern Railway Co.
Van Nieuwenhove Dieraert v. Symonds
Meadon v. Thomson
Smyth v. Coombe and anr.
Dixon v. Denton
Clarke v. Dancer and anr.
Marcus v. General Steam Navigation Co.
Ladbury v. Acres
Dixon v. London Smallarms Co. (Limited)
Smith v. Manetti
Buckingham v. Wilson and another
Courtney v. Hawgood
Sewill v. De Horne
Doxford v. Doxford
The Agricultural Hotel Company (Limited) v. Baulger
Stanton v. Nourse
Thomas and another v. Stevens and others
Martin v. Noad
Broughton and others v. Mignon
Cohen and another v. Hargrove and others
Fitch and another v. Clark
Bruninghaus v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Company
Tritton v. Browning
Rotheroe and another v. Hamel
Sondermann v. Bedford
Moggie and another v. Bryant the younger
Palgrave and another v. The Ocean Marine Insurance Company
Rudd and others v. Grant and others
Sturge and others v. Butters and another
Gripper and another v. Snellgrove and another
Currie and another v. The Thetis Marine Insurance Company
The Yorkshire Engine Company (Limited) v. Crawley
Bergheim v. Blaenavon Iron and Steel Company (Limited)
Aspinwall v. Merchant Shipping Compy. (Ltd.)
Rogers and another v. King and another
Page v. Sharp and anr.
Macintosh v. Birley
Woollett v. Wilkins
Boyce v. Rymill
Newell v. Thomson
Chapman v. Nicholson
Slatter v. The London Street Tramways Co.
Taylor v. Cresswell
Bowles v. Edwards
Hodges v. Sillerey
Lawes v. Miceli
The Wood-street Warehouse Co. v. Pavy and another
Pries and another v. Landmesser
Alvarado v. Oppenheim

Court of Common Pleas.

Remanets.

Maxwell v. Brogden
Hamilton v. Shaw
Richardson and others v. Waydelin
Meyer and others v. Ralli and another
National Bank of Scotland v. A. G. Pooley
Hooper v. Blake
Montis & another v. Harris
Jebsen v. East and West India Dock Company
Hudson and others v. Hill and others
Brown and others v. Badart
Badart v. Brown & others
Brice v. London and North-Western Railway Co.
Brett v. Pettingill
Meadows v. De Mattos and another
Collins v. Davis
Jackson v. Metropolitan Railway Company
Martin and another v. The Ransome Patent Stone Company
Gray, P. O., &c. v. Hope
Same v. Graham
Paget v. Ede
Tiden and another v. The Bessemer Steel and Ordnance Company (Lim.)
Godson v. Hewett
Silvester v. Hyder
Cazenave & another v. Box
McLachlan and another v. Bain
Hintz and another v. Overbeck
Pinkerton v. Powell
Schroder and others v. Cleugh and others

New Causes.

Jackson and another v. Gellatly and others
Brown and others v. The Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Company
Russell v. Gale and another
Boldero, Trustee, &c. v. Badcock
Forward and another v. Barnett and another
Justice and another v. Mersey Steel and Iron Company (Limited)
Vittery & others v. Griffiths and another
Goodwin v. Hunter and others
Barnet and another v. Forwood and another
Jennings v. Alexander and others
The Tharsis Sulphur and Copper Co. (Limited) v. Edwards and others
Prytz & another v. Anglo-Swedish Steam Cutting Mills Co. (Limited)
Lowe v. Dalley
Cuesta v. Moses, Levy, and others
Ford v. Smith
Republic of Peru v. Wageulin and others
Smith v. Price's Patent Candle Co. (Limited)
Chapple v. Clark
West v. Morton
Beall, Trustees, &c. v. Lewis, Secretary, &c.
Ellis v. Smith
Brown & another v. Ransson
Bergheim v. Roberts
Haynes v. Russell
Same v. Same
Green & another v. Heatley
Drake v. Burgess
Arfwedson v. Gaskell and another
Wood and another v. Commercial Union Assurance Company
Bruerton v. Browne
Pickford and another v. Michael
Thompson v. Friend
Hodgman v. Payne
Hodgman v. Terry
Terry v. Hodgman
Clark v. Abitbol
Moss and another v. Symons
Harris v. Perry
Saul v. Dowell and another
Silvester v. Godly
Clifton v. Clifton
Ramage, Secretary, &c. v. Harvey
Ekman v. Hill and another
Metzler and another v. Gounod
Mellier and another De Worms
Straker & others v. Pooley
Michell v. Thomas
Borries and others v. The Imperial Ottoman Bank
Privett v. Newsom and another
Brown v. Van Brink
Garrett v. Stewart, executors, &c
Styer v. Whalley
Tanner v. George & another
Gamble v. Jervis
Bank of London v. McHenry
Pawle v. Hamilton
Girard & another v. Taylor
Nichols v. Moore
Ray v. Howard
Dunnage & others v. Hirst
Veyiers v. Lavington and another
Poole v. Fearnley and another
Belliers v. West
Turner v. Elliott
Yglesias and another v. Thomas
Leuty the younger v. Vingoe and another
Dawson and another v. Barnes
Black & others v. Thorley
Fisher et Ux v. Great Eastern Railway Co.
Bunyer v. Hodge
Holdon v. Lloyd
Smith v. Brunt
Barnett v. Sheridan
The Protector Endowment Loan and Annuity Company v. Kipping
Boyle v. Jarvis
Wheatley v Gearns
Buchanan v. Burden
Fuller v. National Safe Deposit Co. (Limited)
Willis et Ux v. Payne
Davis et Ux v. Same
Hill v. Brabazon
Wick v. Lorsont
Jacobs v. Durye
Talley v. Ellison
Knight v. Miller
Hall v. Hatch
Carr v. Hartmont
Everett v. Cooper
Smith v. Ford

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Dec. 2.

Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co. attorneys and Solicitors, Victoria-st, Westminster. Nov. 1. (Robert Baxter, Phillip Frederick Rose, Henry Eiland Norton, Robert Dudley Baxter, Markham Spofforth, and John Brewer.) Debts by R. Baxter, Rose, and Norton

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Dec. 6.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

Solomon, George, Mount-pl, Whitechapel. Pet. Dec. 1. Reg. Brougham. Sol. Solomon, Finsbury-pl. Sur. Dec. 19

To surrender in the Country.

Cox, Thomas George, gentleman, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 1. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Dec. 23

Cropp, John, beerseller, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 3. Reg. Hulton. Sur. Dec. 17.

Huxtable, Edwin Beedle, out of business, Cheltenham. Pet. Dec. 3. Reg. Gale. Sur. Dec. 20

JOHNSON, EDWIN, attorney, Leek. Pet. Dec. 3. Dep-Reg. Mair. Sur. Dec. 19

MAY, WILLIAM, boot manufacturer, Truro. Pet. Dec. 2. Reg. Chilcott. Sur. Dec. 17

MONTGOMERY, THOMAS HENRY, tailor, Ealing. Pet. Nov. 29. Reg. Ruston. Sur. Dec. 20

MURPHY, BERNARD, provision dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 1. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 17

PEARSON, HENRY, provision dealer, Carnarvon. Pet. Nov. 27. Reg. Jones. Sur. Dec. 16

RICHARDSON, HARRY, scrivener, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 1. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Dec. 17

SODEN, THOMAS MANNATT, silk thrower, Coventry. Pet. Dec. 2. Reg. Kirby. Sur. Dec. 18

Gazette, Dec. 9.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

LAZARUS, JOSEPH, rag merchant, Whitechapel-rd. Pet. Dec. 5. Reg. Hazlitt. Sur. Dec. 19

To surrender in the Country.

AINSWORTH, JAMES, publisher, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 5. Reg. Kay. Sur. Dec. 23

CRICKMORE, JAMES, coal dealer, Bungay. Pet. Dec. 5. Reg. Walker. Sur. Dec. 22

HODSON, SAMUEL, farmer, Ramsey. Pet. Nov. 29. Reg. Gaches. Sur. Dec. 20

JORDAN, JOHN, dairyman. Green-la, Stoke Newington. Pet. Dec. 6. Reg. Pulley. Sur. Dec. 23

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Dec. 2.

BICKLEY, CHARLES CONDAMINE, Old Broad-st. July 10, 1873

MARSHALL, BENJAMIN JOHN, gentleman, Brunswick-sq, Hatton-gdn. July 25, 1873

Gazette, Dec. 5.

GRAY, JOHN, flagger, Preston. Aug. 5, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Dec. 5.

ADAMS, ALFRED WILLIAM, merchant, Mostyn-rd, Brixton. Pet Dec. 1. Dec. 16, at twelve, at the City Terminus hotel, South Eastern Railway Station, Cannon-st. Sols. Campbell and Beaumont, Cannon-st

AVERY, EDWIN, and GRIFFIN, JOHN THOMAS, silk merchants, Bishopsgate-st, also Coventry and Macclesfield. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at two, at office of Sol. Bailey, Tokenhouse-yd

BARBER, JOSHUA, woollen cloth manufacturer, Cartworth, near Holmfirth. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Armitage, Huddersfield

BARRY, CELIA, and DAVIS, ALICE, boot seller, Landport. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 16, at three, at J. Wainscot, accountant, 9, Union-st, Portsea. Sol. Walker, Landport

BASS, JOHN, builder, Ipswich. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at ten, at office of Sol. Vulliamy, Ipswich

BAYLEY, JOHN, chemist, Warrington. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at three, at J. Davies and Co. Bewsey-at, Warrington. Sols. Davies and Brook, Warrington

BETTLE, WILLIAM, victualler, Ramsgate. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 16, at three, at the Crystal Palace Vaults, 7, High-st, Ramsgate. Sols. Sankey and Co, Margate

BETTLEY, THOMAS, fish dealer, Runcorn. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 19, at half-past three, at the Bee hotel, Liverpool. Sol. Day, Runcorn

BRAKE, EMILY RACHEL, no occupation, Marquess-rd, Cannonbury. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at twelve, at office of Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall-st

BREND, JOHN, shoemaker, Abbotsham. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 22, at two, at office of Sol. Thorne, Barnstaple

BROOKS, GEORGE, out of business, Ashton-st, Salmon-la, Limehouse. Pet Nov. 21. Dec. 15, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Barton and Drew, Fore-st

BROWN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, and BROWN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, jun., tailors, Aldersgate-st. Dec. 18, at three, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 33, Gutter-la. Sol. Cattlin, Basinghall-st

BUTTERILL, JOHN, bootmaker, Ferrybridge, near Pontefract. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 20, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Carter, Pontefract

BUTON, JOSEPH HOLMES, surgeon, Compton-ter, Islington. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at two, at the Guildhall coffee house, Gresham-st. Sols. Hillearys and Tunstall, Fenchurch-bldgs

CHAPLEN, HENRY, joiner, Portsea. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at four, at office of Sol. King, Portsea

COCKERTON, ROBERT BLACKBURN, fellmonger, Warrington. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 22, at two, at office of Sols. Tyrer, Smith, and Kenion, Liverpool

COLE, GEORGE, rag merchant, Hunter-st, Dover-rd, Southwark. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at three, at offices of Sols. Hicklin and Washington, Trinity-sq, Southwark

DAVIES, WILLIAMS, bootmaker, Church-st, Croydon. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 29, at three, at the Greyhound hotel, Croydon. Sol. Young, Gray's-inn-sq, and Croydon

EDWARDS, THOMAS, cinder dealer, Tipton. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at three, at office of Sol. Travis, Tipton

ELLIOTT, JAMES, greengrocer, King-st, Hammersmith. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 19, at three, at the West Kensington Station hotel, Russell-rd, Kensington. Sol. Haynes, Wellesley-rd, Croydon

FORBERT, FRANCIS, butcher, Plumstead. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 15, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Elworthy, Brewer-st, Woolwich

GALE, JAMES, printer, High-st, Brompton. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 29, at one, at W. A. Willoughby, 4, Lancaster-pl, Strand. Sol. Bassett, Rochester, and Garden-st, Brompton

GILBERT, ALFRED, baker, Caterham Junction. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at two, at the Greyhound hotel, Croydon. Sol. Hogan, Martin's-la, Cannon-st, and Park-st, Croydon

GLENISTER, ALFRED, blacksmith, Abbott's Langley. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 24, at three, at F. Holloway, accountant, 173, Ball's Pond-rd, Islington

GLOVER, JOHN, farmer, Cossington, near Ratcliff on the Wreake. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sol. Owston, Leicester

GODDARD ALFRED COURTENAY, russia broker, Old Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 24. Dec. 16, at twelve, at offices of Sols. McLeod and Watney, London-st, Fenchurch-st

GREGG, PETER WILLIAM, confectioner, Mile End-rd. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 19, at one, at offices of Sols. Barton and Drew, Fore-street

GUERNSEY, JOSEPH, farmer, Tonyrefail, par. Llantrissant. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at twelve, at office of Sol. Morgan, Pontypridd

HARBOUR, THOMAS ALFRED, assistant boot manufacturer, Colchester. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 13, at twelve, at the Essex Arms inn, Colchester. Sols. Bartlett and Forbes, Bedford-st, Coventgarden

HARDING, WILLIAM, saddler, Landport. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 20, at three, at office of Sol. King, Portsea

HEAVEN, WILLIAM, dealer, Avening, near Nailsworth. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 22, at twelve, at office of Sol. Potter, Cheltenham

HEMMING, CLEMENT JOHN, painter, Handsworth. Pet. Dec. 2 Dec. 19, at three, at offices of Sols. Maher and Poncia, Birmingham

HITCHCOCK, EDWARD, wine merchant, Bishopsgate-st-within. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 18, at three, at Waddell and Co., Mansion House-chmbs, 12, Queen Victoria-st. Sol. Stocken and Jupp, Leadenhall-st

HOPKINS, JOSEPH, builder, Pontrhydfendigaid, par. Caronuwch-clawdd. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 18, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Jones, Aberystwith

INMAN, CHARLES, furnishing undertaker, Central-st, St. Luke's, and City-rd. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 19, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Taylor and Jaques, Finsbury-sq

JENNER, HORACE, bootmaker, St. Leonard's-on-Sea. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 8, at twelve, at the Incorporated Law Society's Rooms, Chancery-la, London. Sol. Jones, Hastings

JOSLIN, DAVID, mason, Kimbely rd, Nunhead. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 17, at eleven, at the Guildhall tavern, London. Sols. Keene and Marsland, Lower Thames-st

KAULL, HENRY, baker, City-rd. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 13, at three, at the Finsbury hotel, 14, Finsbury-sq. Sol. Hicks, Annis-rd, South Hackney

KENT, RUBERT HENRY, ironmonger, Marchmont-st, Brunswick-sq. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 12, at eleven, at office of Sol. Willis, St. Martin's-st, Leicester-sq

KNIGHT, CHARLES HENRY, journalist, Bognor. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 20, at two, at office of Sol. Luckett, Worthing

LAURENCE, THOMAS, Wollaston, par. Oldswinford. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Addison, Brierley-hill

MCSHANE, PETER, grocer, Gateshead, and Sandgate. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Sewell, Newcastle

MANN, GEORGE, confectioner, Bedford. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 18, at twelve, at Fox, 65, Chancery-la, London. Sol. Conquest, Bedford

MELDRUM, JAMES STENHOUSE, and WYDLER, ALBERT, calico, printers, Manchester, and Belfield, near Rochdale, and Boarshaw, near Middleton. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 19, joint creditors, at three; sep. creditors of Meldrum, at four, at office of Sol. Wood, Manchester

MILLARD, WILLIAM FRANCIS, printer, Lawrie-pl, Kirkdale, Sydenham. Pet. Nov. 26. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Ody, Trinity-sq, Southwark

NEWBERRY, GEORGE, baker, Landport. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 18, at four, at office of Sol. King, Portsea

ORAM, CHARLES, commercial clerk, Acacia-cottages, Acacia-rd, Wood-green. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 19, at three, at offices of Sol. Knight, Newgate-st

OWENS, JOHN, farmer, Pant-glas, par. Llanasa. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at twelve, at the Mostyn hotel, Mostyn. Sol. Jones, Conway

POCOCK, LEWIS, picture dealer, Pall Mall. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 22, at two, at offices of Sols. Linklater and Co., Walbrook

PRICE, THOMAS, wine merchant, Wrexham. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at two, at offices of Sols. Bridgman, Weaver, and Jones, Westminster-bldgs, Newgate-st

PRUNIERES, BERTRAND, and PRUNIERES, FREDERICK, cabinet makers, Eden-st, Hampstead-rd. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, joint creditors, at three, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st; Dec. 16, sep. creditors of B. Prunières, at two; sep. creditors of F. Prunières, at three, at office of Sols. Philip and Behrend, Pancras-la, Queen-st

REED, GEORGE, general dealer, Inverness-rd, Bayswater. Pet. Nov. 25. Dec. 13, at two, at office of Sol. Allen, Brunswick-square

ROSSITER, WILLIAM, wheelwright, Shearstone, par. North Petherton. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 18, at twelve, at office of Sols. Reed and Cook, Bridgewater

ROWLAND, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, professor of music, Southampton. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 17, at one, at offices of Sols. Bradby and Robins, Southampton

SADLER, HARVEY HENRY, beerseller, Heybridge. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 23, at eleven, at the King's Head inn, Maldon. Sols. Messrs. Digby, Maldon

SAUNDERS, HENRY JAMES, butcher, Tyler-st, Regent-st. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hewlett, Serle-st, Lincoln's-inn-fields

SHARMAN, SAMUEL, hairdresser, Allington-st, Pimlico. Pet. Nov 21. Dec. 11, at three, at offices of Sol. Bassett, Titchborne-st, Regent-circus

SHAW, HENRY, brickmaker, Timperly. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sols. Nicholls, Hinde, and Co., Altrincham

SHERRIN, CHRISTIANA, artificial florist, Motcombe-st, Belgrave-sq. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 15, at two, at office of Sol. Hutchinson, Vauxhall-bridge-rd

SHEWBROOKS, SAMUEL, builder, Taunton. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 31, at eleven, at office of Sol. Kite, Taunton

SHIERS, MICHAEL, confectioner, Brixton-rd. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 23, at eleven at office of Sols. Messrs. Paddison, Lincoln's-inn-fields

SKINNER, WILLIAM BARRETT, upholsterer, Witney. Pet. Nov 21. Dec. 17, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Mallam, Oxford

SMITH, RICHARD HENRY, farmer, Beauchamp Roothing. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 22, at eleven, at Blyth, solicitor, Chelmsford. Sol. Smith, High Ongar

SPERRING, JOHN JOSEPH, veterinary surgeon, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 16, at two, at offices of Sol. Lane, Bristol

STEWART, WILLIAM, tailor, Newcastle. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, at four, at the Turk's Head hotel, Newcastle. Sol. Milnes, Huddersfield

STILL, FRANK, general warehouseman, Salisbury. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Hodding, Salisbury

SYMONS, ROBERT, photographer, Tenby. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 15, at twelve, at the Townhall, Carmarthen. Sol. Stokes, Tenby

TUCKER, WILLIAM, hatter, Fenchurch-st. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 15, Messrs. Lindo, 13, King's Arms-yd, Moorgate-st, in lieu of the place originally named

THOUTT, GEORGE, auctioneer, Twerton. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 20, at twelve, at 26, Carey-st, Lincoln's-inn. Sol. Barnum, Bath

TUDOR, ROBERT, cotton doubler, Bollington. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 22, at one, at the Turner's Arms inn, Bollington. Sols. Parrott, May, and Sons

VINCENT, HARRIET COLSTON, widow, innkeeper, Blaenavon. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Lloyd, Pontypool

WAKELIN, JOHN, victualler, Ironmonger-row, St. Luke's. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 17, at three, at office of Sol. Chidley, Old Jewry

WATSON, JAMES, painter, Bacup. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 30, at three, at the Dog and Partridge hotel, Manchester. Sol. Sykes, Bacup

WATSON, WILLIAM, chemist, Old Broad-st. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 18, two, at office of Sols. Rees, Lane, and Co., Bush-la, Cannon-st

WAYLAND, JAMES RICHARD, baker, Camden-pk-rd. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Poole, Bartholomew-close

WEVILL, ELIZABETH, widow, out of business Sampford Brett. Dec. 22, at twelve, at office of Sol. Ward, Bristol

WILDERSPIN, ROBERT, greengrocer, Bethnal-green-rd. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sol. Lewis, Hatton-gdn, Holborn

WILSON, RICHARD, grocer, Northwich. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 9, at eleven, at the Wheat Sheaf inn, Over

WOODWARD, BENJAMIN, carpet manufacturer, Kidderminster. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 17, at three, at the Lion hotel, Kidderminster Sol. Morton, Kidderminster

ZERLENDI, NICHOLAS MICHEL, merchant, Great Winchester-st. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 24, at two, at Kemp, Ford, and Co., Walbrook. Sols. Hillyer, Fenwick, and Stibbard, Fenchurch-st

Gazette, Dec. 9.

ASTON, JOSEPH, ironmonger, Kentish-town-rd. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Jones, Walbrook-bldgs

BARKER, JOHN THEODORE, architect, Furnival's-inn, and Rose Cottage, Wellesley-rd, Croydon. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 22, at two, at office of Sol. Fryer, Gray's-inn-pl, Gray's-inn

BILLINGTON, JOHN, garket gardener, Southfield-rd, Turnham-green, Acton. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at one, at office of Sols. Brown and Waters, Lincoln's-inn-fields

BIRD, LEONARD STANLEY, shoemaker, Stroud. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 20, at three, at office of Sol. Jackson, Stroud

BOWSTEAD, JOHN FRANCIS, merchant, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 18, at three, at office of Sol. Fitter, Birmingham

BRYAN, THOMAS, grocer, Longton. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 22, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Tomkinson, Burslem

BURGHALL, EDGAR, bookkeeper, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 29, at two, at the Stork hotel, Liverpool. Sols. Bridgeman, Weaver, and Jones, Chester

BURN, WILLIAM, builder, Blyth. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at twelve at office of Sol. Garbut, Newcastle-upon-Tyne

BUSHBY, ROBERT WILLIAM, farmer, Bognor. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 24, at eleven, at the Dolphin hotel, Chichester. Sol. Arnold, Chichester

CALVERT, JOHN, draper, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Sol. Carr, Leeds

CAREY, FREDERICK WILLIAM, cook-shop keeper, Old Castle-st, Bethnal-green. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 24, at two, at office of Sol. Nind, St. Benet's-pl, Gracechurch-st

CASTELL, GEORGE, packing case manufacturer, Tenter-st, Little Moorfields. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at eleven, at 22, Tenter-st, Little Moorfields. Sol. Hicks, Annis-rd, South Hackney

DANN, JAMES, boot manufacturer, Leicester. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Harvey, Leicester

DAVIS, SOLOMON, legging manufacturer, Widegate-st, Bishopsgate-st-without. Pet. Dec 3. Dec. 19, at twelve, at office of Sol. Levirton, Bishopsgate-st-within

DOWNING, EDWARD JAMES, clerk, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Beckingham, Bristol

EVANS, EVAN HARRIS, barman Aberoare. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 20, at one, at office of Sols. Simons and Plews, Merthyr Tydfil

FAIRLIE, CHARLES SHAKESHAFT, sun blind manufacturer, Princes-st, Rotherhithe. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at one, at office of Sol. Nind, St Benet-pl, Gracechurch-st

FARROW, JOHN WESTLEY, of no occupation, Bulwell. Pet. Dec. Dec. 27, at three, at office of Sols. Cranch, Rowe, and Stroud, Nottingham

FARROW, JOSEPH, out of business, Colchester. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 22, at twelve, at office of Sol. Prior, Colchester

FOY, MICHAEL JOSEPH, bootmaker, Leomin.ster. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at twelve, at the Royal Oak hotel, Leominster. Sol. Gregg, Leominster

FRASER, JAMES, and PRUDHOE, GEORGE, contractors, Sunderland. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at one, at office of Sol. Hall, Sunderland

FRYETT, WALTER FREDERICK, oilman, Goswell-rd, Clerkenwell. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 17, at eleven, at offices of Coles, Wilson, and Co., Bishopsgate-st-within. Sol. Dobson, Southampton-bldgs

FYNMORE, ELIZA, (also known as Foster, Eliza), lodging-house keeper, Great Cumbridge st, Hackney-rd, and Clapham-rd, London, and Southend. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 17, at two, at Sanderson's hotel, Bevois-st, 28A, Basinghall-st.

GAWTHORP, MARY, innkeeper, Carlisle. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. McAlpin, Carlisle

GILMAN, JOSEPH COPELAND, commission merchant, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 5 Dec. 19, at three, at office of Sols. Sutton and Elliott, Manchester

HARTLEY, RICHARD, fuller, Halifax. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at eleven, at office of Sol. Longbottom, Halifax

HAWKES, WALTER, butcher, Cambridge. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Ellison and Burrows, Cambridge

HOLLAND, HENRY RICHARD, out of business, Walsall. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Adams, Walsall

IMPEY, THOMAS, auctioneer, Ironmonger-la. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at twelve, at offices of Nicholson, 7 and 8, London-bridge Railway-approach, Southwark. Sol. Turner, London-bridge Railway-approach

JACOB, PHILIP, glass dealer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 17, at ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham

JOUBERT, HENRI CHARLES RENE, and JOUBERT, JULES, upholsterers, Percy-st, Bedford-sq, and King-st, Hammersmith. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Barker, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill

KING, GEORGE BRIGGS, commission agent, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Griffin, Birmingham

KNOWLES, JOSEPH, and PARKER, JAMES, cotton waste dealers, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec 23, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Heath, Manchester

LANGLEY, WILLIAM, out of business, Wensbeck-rd, Victoria-pk. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 22, at eleven, at office of Sol. Swaine, Cheapside

LEE, HENRY MICHAEL, patentee, Carburton-st, Great Portland-st. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 19, at eleven, at office of Sol. Lind, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand

MANNING, GEORGE, student of theology, Hoylake. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 30, at two, at office of Gibson and Holland, accountants, 10, South John st, Liverpool. Sols. Anderson, Collins, and Robinson, Liverpool

MERRIMAN, WILLIAM, mercer, Monkwearmouth. Pet. Dec. 1 Dec. 24, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Skinner, Sunderland

MILLS, FRANCIS, beer-house keeper, Tonbridge-st, Euston-rd. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at eleven, at offices of Lovering, 35, Gresham-st. Sol. Harston, Gresham-st

MITTONETTE, FREDERICK, metal broker, Sedgley. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 20, at twelve, at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton

MOLINEUX, WILLIAM, jun., painter, Stockton-on-Tees. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 22, at three, at office of Sol. Addenbrooke, Middlesborough

OGDEN, WILLIAM, tin plate worker, Bolton. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 24, at ten, at offices of Sols. Richardson and Dowling, Bolton

OUNSWORTH, WILLIAM HENRY, boot manufacturer, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at eleven, at Wharton's hotel, Leeds. Sol. Harle

OWEN, THOMAS, wine merchant, Llandudno. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 20, at two, at the Blossoms hotel, Chester. Sol. Dallow, Wolverhampton

PAYNE, WALTER, bootmaker, Slough. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 20, at two, at at office of Sol. Stopher, Coleman-st, London

PERKS, WILLIAM, and WOOD, RICHARD JOSEPH, wholesale tea dealers, Mark-la. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 31, at half-past three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Bastard, Brabant-ct

PERKS, WILLIAM, and WOOD, RICHARD JOSEPH, wholesale tea dealers, Mark-la. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 31, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Bastard, Brabant-ct

PETTY WILLIAM HENRY, merchant, South-st, Finsbury. Pet. Dec. 5. Jan. 2, at eleven, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sols. Ingle, Cooper, and Holmes, Threadneedle-street

PHILLIPS, BENJAMIN, draper, Bridgend. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 18, at eleven, at office of Barnard, Thomas, Tribe, and Co. Bristol. Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea

PODMORE, HENRY, wheelwright, Bewley. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Blewitt, Birmingham

PRIEST, JOHN, out of business, Tettenhall. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton

RICHARDS, EDWARD, builder, Hereford. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 20, at half-past three, at office of Sol. Corner, Hereford

READ, SARAH, linen draper, Scarborough. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at one, at office of Sols. Rooke and Midgley, Leeds

REDNALL, WILLIAM RUSH, druggist, Cullompton. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Mr. Andrew, 12, Bedford-circus, Exeter

SAVAGE, STEPHEN, licensed victualler, Bangor. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at two, at the Friars Vaults, Bangor. Sol. Foulkes, Bangor

SIMPSON, JOSEPH, engineer, Budge row, Cannon-st. Pet. Dec. 4. Jan. 2, at two, at office of Sol. Brown, Basinghall-st

SPENCE, THOMAS WILLIAM, retailer of beer, Darlington. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at two, at offices of Sol. Robinson, Darlington

STAIGHT, THOMAS, out of business, Overbury. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 24, at eleven, at the Swan hotel, Tewkesbury. Sol. Martin Pershore

YANDELL, SAMUEL, carpenter, Taunton. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at one, at office of Sols. Reed and Cook, Bridgwater

TAYLDER, WILLIAM POTTER, draper, Penryn. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 24, at twelve, at office of Sols. Carlyon and Paull, Truro

TRAYNOR, CHRISTOPHER, hair dresser, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Gee, Sheffield

TUGMAN, SAMUEL, and BRADSHAW, SYLVESTER CHRISTOPHER, merchants, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 29, at one, at the Law Association Rooms, Liverpool. Sols. Thornley and Diamore, Liverpool

VAUGHAN, WILLIAM, innkeeper, Welshpool. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 20, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Harrison, Welshpool

WATTS, EDWARD, grocer, Ashoott. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 18, at twelve, at the Railway hotel, Bridgwater. Sol. Hobbs, jun., Wells

WHALLEY, RICHARD, grocer, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at three, at offices of Sols. Addlesshaw and Warburton, Manchester

WHITEHEAD, JAMES, agent, Coborn-row, Bow. Pet. Dec. 6 Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Swaine, Cheapside

WHITESMITH JOHN THOMAS, boot manufacturer, Kidderminster. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 22, at three, at office of Sol. Corbet, Kidderminster

WILKINS, MATTHEW, varnish merchant, Aston, near Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at twelve, at office of Sol. Free, Birmingham

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 19, at ten at office of Sol. Beaton, Birmingham

WILSON, PETER, baker, Stilton. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 20, at eleven, at the Wentworth hotel, Peterborough. Sol. Graves, Whittlesey

WOODHEAD, HENRY, beerhouse keeper, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Fernell, Sheffield

WOODMAN, THOMAS, hosier, Tipton. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 22, at three, at office of Sol. Travis, Tipton

WOOD, REUBEN, tripe dresser, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at twelve, at offices of Messrs. Homer, Manchester. Sol. Law, Manchester

ZUCKER, CHARLES, watchmaker, Kensington-pk-rd, Nottinghill. Pet. Nov. 28. Dec. 18, at two, at office of Sol. Marshall, Lincoln's-inn-fields

Dibidends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Williams, T. grocer, second, 3d. Stone, Liverpool

Chapman, E. merchant, final, 5s. 5½d. At W. J. White and Co. accountants, 33, King-st, Cheapside.—Edwards, J. timber dealer, third and final, 7s. At Trust. H. G. Nicholson, Norfolk-st, Manchester.—Laing, J. fish merchant, second and final, 1s. 6¾d. At Trust. M. Ingerson, Flottergate, Grimsby.—Hall, J. jun., hosier, first, 4s. At Trust. C. J. Buckley, 43, Market-st, Bradford.—Hughes, E. tailor, first, 2s. At Trust. C. H. Rees, 5, Castle-st, Carnarvon.—Lees, H. A. cotton merchant, first, 6s. 8d. At Trust. H. Bolland, 10, South John-st, Live.pool.—Palmer, H. D. clerk in the civil service, first, 4s. At Messrs. Learoyd, 11, South-st, Finsbury.—Scorah, G. timber merchant, further, second and final, 2s. 6d. At Trust. J. U. Wing, Rideaux-chmbs, Change alley, Sheffield.—Walker, W. and J. Cramers, first and final, 1s. 8d. At Trust. A. McDowall, 31A, Watling-st

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Apply at Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-st, Lincoln's inn, between 11 and 2 on Tuesdays.

Dickinson, R. C. general merchant, first, 3s. 4d.—Peart, T. out of business, first, 6s. 9d.—Wilder, D. H. master in navy, fourth, 2s. 6d.

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Nov. 25.

DOW, THOMAS, baker, Hackney

Gazette, Nov. 28.

BLYTHE, THOMAS MARTIN, and MOORE, ARTHUR, Liverpool

Gazette, Dec. 2.

RANKIN, ALFRED, commission agent, Philip-ter, Philip-la, Tottenham

Gazette, Dec. 5.

COLEMAN, WILLIAM WARMAN, surgeon, Plumstead-rd, Woolwich

MANNING, HENRY, jeweller, York

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

JELF.—On the 3rd inst., at 3, Burston-road, Putney, the wife of Arthur Richard Jelf, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a son.

KNOCKER.—On the 4th inst., at The Hazels, Great Dunmow, Essex, the wife (of William Wheatley Knocker, solicitor, of a son.

WRIGHT.—On the 7th inst., at Spencer-road, Putney, the wife of H. Wildey Wright, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a son.

YOUNG.—On the 3rd inst., at 14, Onslow-square, the wife of Francis Young, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

BELLINGHAM — CLAYDEN.—On the 2nd inst., at Oakley, near Bishop's Stortford, Edward Nugent Bellingham, of Swansea, solicitor, to Caroline, second daughter of the late John Clayden, Esq., of Littlebury.

KING—LESSON.—On the 6th inst., at Chiswick, William King, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., barrister-at-law, to Eleanor Constance, only daughter of the late John Seymour Lesson, Esq.,

THIMBLEBY — RICHARDSON.—On the 4th inst., at St. John's Church, Wheatone, Finchley, by the Rev. Joseph Spence, Rector of East Keal, Lincolnshire, Uncle of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Alfred Kaye, Incumbent of Whetstone, Thomas William Thimbleby, only son of Thomas Thimbleby, Esq., Avenue House, Spilsby, to Mary Elizabeth, only child of the late Frank Richardson, Esq., of Hameringham, Lincolnshire. No cards.

DEATHS.

ROSE.—On the 3rd inst., at Brighton, aged 91, the Hon. Sir George Rose, F.R. S., late Judge of Court of Review.

TWOPENY.—On the 5th inst., in Upper Grosvenor-street, aged 76, William Twopeny, formerly of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law

THE COUNTRY: A JOURNAL OF RURAL PURSUITS.

CONTENTS FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 11:

Training Dogs: Pointers and Setters.
Fascination.
The Planting of Fruit Trees.
Forcing Lily of the Valley.
Garden Calendar: Vegetables—December.
Agricultural Exhibitions: Smithfield Club Cattle Show, Plymouth Agricultural Exhibition, Birmingham, Highland and Agricultural Society, Stirling, York, Berwick.
Horticultural Exhibitions: Royal Horticultural Society.
Game at the Crystal Palace.
The Hamburghs at Birmingham.
Poultry and Rabbit Exhibitions: Stenhousemuir, Birmingham: Pigeons, Maidstone, Montrose, Oakham (Rutland), Reigate, Plymouth, Cambridge.
Aviary and Apiary Exhibitions: Montrose, Stenhousemuir.
Hare and Hounds.
Association Challenge Cup.
Fishing, Shooting, Natural Science, Geographical, Farm, Garden, Athletic, Aquatic, Football, Golf, Quoits, Bicycling, Racquets, and Billiards News of the Week.

Office: 32, Wellington-street, Strand, London.

To Readers and Correspondents.

JUSTITIA.—We cannot give opinions on questions of law.
W. D. BALLANTYNE.—Consult a solicitor; or, if you are a solicitor, consult counsel.
SEVERAL important communications unavoidably stand over.
Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.

All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

THE RIO LIMA—
Taxation of costs—Ship under arrest of High Court and County Court 517

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Re THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA, AND JAPAN (CAMPBELL'S CASE AND HIPPESLEY'S CASE)—
Company—Amalgamation—Increase of capital 519

Re THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA, AND JAPAN (ALISON'S CASE)—
Company—Winding-up—Void amalgamation 524

Ex parte BOLLAND; Re CLINT—
Bankruptcy — Partnership — Separate estate 525

V.C. BACON'S COURT.

Ex parte THE REV. JOHN EDWARDS—
Prohibition — Commission under the Church Discipline Act—Discretion of bishops 529

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

THE RIVER WEAR COMMISSIONERS v. ADAMSON AND OTHERS—
Damage to sea wall by vessel—Damage the result of stress of weather 530

HESKETH (app.) v. THE LOCAL BOARD OF ATHERTON (respa.)—
Public Health Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 69—Local Government Act 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 68 530

HODSOLL v. TAYLOR—
Action for seduction—Interrogatories—Interrogatories as to defendant's means 534

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

DENT v. NICKALLS—
Custom of Stock Exchange—Sale of shares—Liability of jobber 536

DICKINSON v. FLETCHER—
Regulations in mines—Owner of mine not responsible for negligence of servants—Penal enactments 540

Ex parte GREVILLE—
Articled clerk—Employment as vestry clerk—23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10 542

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Ex parte BOLLAND; Re CLINT—
Antenuptial settlement by a trader—Covenant to settle all after acquired property of husband—Bankruptcy 543

CROWN CASES RESERVED.

REG. v. WEAVER—
Evidence—Register of births—Certified copy—14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 544

REG. v. TWIST—
Larceny—Indictment—Corpus delicti 546

COURT OF PROBATE.

In the Goods of O'REILLY—
Will—Misdescription of executor—Extrinsic evidence—Probate 546

COURT FOR DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES.

JOHNSTONE v. JOHNSTONE, THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL, AND HAWKINS—
Legitimacy declaration—Petitioner out of jurisdiction—Declaration of nullity of marriage 547

CHILCOTT v. CHILCOTT AND SMITH—
Matrimonial suit—Service of citation—Filing in the registry—Rule 14 548

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS 119

LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 119
Limited Rights of Way 121
The Future of Legal Education 121
The Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 122
The Estates of Partners in Bankruptcy ... 123

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 124
Notes of New Decisions 124
V.C. Malins' Court 124
Correspondence 125
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 125
Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts 125
Creditors under Estates in Chancery 125
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 125
Reports of Sales 125

ELECTION LAW:—
Manchester County Court 126

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Notes of New Decisions 126

COMPANY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 126

MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Borough Quarter Sessions 127
Northern Circuit—Liverpool 127
Notes of New Decisions 127

MARITIME LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 127
Specimens of a Code of Marine Insurance Law 127

COUNTY COURTS:—
Birmingham County Court 128
Bridport County Court 128
Brighton County Court 128
Cheltenham County Court 129
Chorley County Court 129
Haslemere County Court 129
Uttoxeter County Court 130

BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Birmingham County Court 131
Bristol County Court 131
Liverpool County Court 131

LEGAL NEWS:—
A General School of Law 132

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ... 134

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 134

LAW SOCIETIES:—
The Union Society of London 134
Articled Clerks' Society 134
Law Students' Debating Society 134

LEGAL OBITUARY 134

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
European Assurance Society's Arbitration 135
Court of Chancery—Notice 135

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS 135

THE GAZETTES 135

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 136

NOTICE.—CHRISTMAS DAY AND BANK HOLIDAY.

Correspondents and Advertisers must send their letters by Tuesday evening's post for insertion in next week's issue of this paper.

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE office of Associate on the Northern Circuit is one of some importance, as also is that of Prothonotary for the County of Lancaster. Both these offices have for twenty-seven years been filled by Mr. EDMUND ROBERT HARRIS. That gentleman has now retired owing to ill-health, to the general regret of the Profession. We understand that Mr. THOMAS SHUTTLEWORTH, solicitor, son of the clerk of arraigns, has been appointed Mr. HARRIS's successor as Judges' Associate, but that, owing to the increase of business on the Northern Circuit, the duties of prothonotary will be divided, Mr. SHUTTLEWORTH being Prothonotary for Lancaster, Mr. WORTHINGTON for Manchester, and Mr. T. E. PAGET for Liverpool. Mr. SHUTTLEWORTH's appointment as Judges' Associate has, we believe, given great satisfaction to the Bar.

THE Supreme Court of the United States, in a most elaborate judgment, reviewing all the authorities, has decided that a common carrier cannot lawfully stipulate for exemption from responsibility when such exemption is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law; further, that it is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law for a common carrier to stipulate for exemption from responsibility for the negligence of himself or his servants; and that these rules apply both to common carriers of goods and common carriers of passengers, and with special force to the latter.

A REMARK which we have met with in the "Memoir of Lord DENMAN," just published, recalls attention to the patronage still remaining in the hands of the Judges to be conferred upon the Bar. Every year the Judges who go circuit are besieged by applicants for revising barristerships, and in very rare instances is the appointment given to the most deserving aspirant. In a letter to COLERIDGE from the Midland Circuit in 1847 Lord DENMAN wrote: "I cannot help fancying that the Bar is becoming more a stage of transition than a status—an apprenticeship exacted by custom for obtaining some office, such as that of revising barrister, County Court Judge, or commissioner of some sort. I heartily wish the Judges were deprived of all patronage of this kind. Towards the end of the assizes the looks of expectation and disappointment are harrowing." The exercise of such patronage is a source of annoyance to the Bench and humiliation to the Bar.

A DEFECT, if such it is to be called, in the Ballot Act has been pointed out in a case which came before the Manchester County Court on the 8th and 13th inst. By the 42nd rule of the first schedule, the marked register is to be open to inspection. All the documents used at the municipal election are sent to the town clerk; and by the 29th rule of the same schedule the presiding officer is directed at the close of the poll to make up in a separate packet, sealed with his own seal and the seal of the candidates or their agents, the marked copies of the register of the voters and the counterfoils of the ballot papers. Consequently by this Act inspection is given of what by the Act is ordered to be sealed up. The difficulty was got over by application to the County Court Judge, who first heard the application in his private room and granted a rule nisi for inspection of the register, which by consent of the Town Clerk, was subsequently made absolute. A report of the case will appear under "Election Law" in due course.

A DECISION of the Chief Judge in Bankruptcy upon the effect of a settlement which purported to convey to trustees for the benefit of the intended wife, not alone all the settlor then possessed, but all he might acquire during coverture (Ex parte Bolland; re Clint, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 543), well deserves consideration. It appeared that the recitals of the deed described the property intended to be conveyed, namely, all and singular the real and personal estate which the settlor should at any time during coverture possess, and the covenants in the deed included even more words to carry out the same intention. There were trusts declared of the property he absolutely possessed at the time, but none of those comprised in the recital or the covenant. The settlor became bankrupt, and his trustee claimed the after-acquired property as part of his assets. The Chief Judge very properly, as we conceive, pronounced against the settlement, and held, first, that as there were no trusts expressed with reference to future property, it must be taken that the husband intended that such property should first be applied to his own use. Secondly, that such a settlement was clearly void as against creditors. He said, "If deeds of this description were to be acted upon it would be impossible for anyone to carry on business. Nothing was more opposed to justice and the policy of the law than that a man should be at liberty to execute such a deed whereby his property, even to his boots, became subject to the trusts of the settlement. Creditors had a right to make the debtor's property applicable to the payment of their demands, and the trustee in the bankruptcy was entitled to the shares"—which had been bought during coverture.

AN application of some practical importance was made to Vice-Chancellor MALINS on the 13th inst., resulting, it is believed, in a departure for the first time from the ordinary practice of the Court of Chancery of appointing a special examiner to take the evidence of witnesses resident abroad. The witnesses proposed to be examined reside in France, and were admittedly unwilling witnesses. They would not voluntarily attend before any examiner or tribunal, and the order sought was to be directed to the President and Judges of the Tribunal Civil de Première Instance of the Department of the Seine sitting at Paris, requesting them to accept a commission from the Court of Chancery to delegate one or more Judges of the Tribunal who should be charged to proceed to an inquiry in the form of French civil procedure, and to summon the witnesses resident in their jurisdiction to be examined upon certain allegations contained in the summons. The objection urged to the adoption of the course was that the French tribunal would not take the evidence by examination and cross-examination in our manner, nor permit counsel to conduct the examination, but would, according to its usual practice, examine the witnesses itself. The opinion of an eminent avoué was read to the effect that the French court in such a case would adopt the English procedure. The Vice-Chancellor thought that our Court of Chancery always had the power of directing commissions to issue for the examination of witnesses abroad, which was given to the Courts of Common Law by 1 Will. 4, c. 22. In pursuance of that power the Common Law Courts had issued commissions to Judges of foreign courts ex. gr. Lumley v. Gye (23 L. J. 112, Q. B.), and sitting in the Court of Chancery he considered that he had power to issue such a commission which he thought the best possible course to be adopted under the circumstances. Whilst not doubting the existence of the power thus exercised by the Vice-Chancellor we consider the necessity for its exercise an argument in favour of the assimilation of the laws, and if possible of the procedure, of the great trading countries.

THE County Court Judge of Dorsetshire, sitting at Bridport, has decided that a husband who gives his wife, privately, instructions not to run into debt with the baker, is not liable for bread supplied to his household on credit. His HONOUR said that this principle had been established by a case in the Court of Common Pleas. This is to us a novel and startling doctrine. A wife is primâ facie the agent of the husband in procuring household necessaries suited to his position in life. The defendant in the case before the County Court Judge was in receipt of 14*s.* weekly wages, the whole of which, he said, he gave to his wife, and told her to pay for what was required. She failed to pay the baker, who had no notice of the instructions to the wife. It was positively held that he could not recover against the husband. The most recent case decided in the Common Pleas is Phillipson v. Hayter (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 556), where Lord Chief Justice BOVILL said, "The domestic arrangements of the family being usually left to the control of the wife, her authority extends to all those matters which fall within her department, as, for instance, the supply of provisions for the house, clothing for herself and children, and things of that sort. . . . Even that limited authority must, however, be subject to this condition, that the goods be suitable to the position which the husband allows his wife to assume." In the old case of Etherington v. Parrott (Salk. 118) a warning was given to the plaintiff's servant, by the husband, not to trust the wife any more. That was held to rebut the presumption of the wife's power to pledge her husband's credit. That a private prohibition to the wife should have the same effect would be an extraordinary extension of the law.

WE have recently discussed in these columns the right of a creditor of a bankrupt who has agreed to accept a composition, to sue for his original debt when there is a failure to pay the composition. On the 15th inst. the CHIEF JUDGE had before him this question in a somewhat peculiar form (Ex parte The Radcliffe Investment Company, re Glover). A composition having been accepted by creditors, payable by three instalments, on a basis which excluded a large creditor, this creditor was subsequently admitted to prove, and the debts upon which the composition was payable thereby becoming so much larger the debtors were unable to pay, and almost all the creditors agreed to accept a smaller sum in the pound as the third instalment, the creditor last admitted agreeing to reduce his debt. The appellant, however, refused to be bound by the resolution, and brought his action. The Deputy-Judge of the Manchester County Court restrained the action, and from that decision the creditor appealed. Lord Justice JAMES, in Hatton's case (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 396; L. Rep. 7 Ch. 723) said: "There may be cases in which, by accident and not by default of the debtor, the composition is not duly paid, and then no doubt the court would relieve the debtor from the effect of any accident and remove any injustice" And the CHIEF JUDGE pointed out that the possibility of such an accident was contemplated by the Act, and creditors were, by the 126th section, 6th paragraph, entitled to "add to or vary the provisions of any composition previously accepted by them without prejudice to any persons taking interests under such provisions who do not assent to such addition or variation." His Lordship proceeded to remark that it was upon that clause that the case of the appellant rested, and in construing it he had to consider what was the general policy of the law, and not to attach a too literal construction to words which were apparently opposed to such policy. The word "persons" might no doubt, he said, include "creditors," but they would be bound by the first resolution; and creditors being the persons to be bound, it would be wrong to read the word as meaning "creditors," unless it was impossible to ascribe any other meaning to it. By the terms of the 7th clause the provisions of a composition accepted by an extraordinary resolution were binding on all the creditors whose names appeared in the statement of the debtor produced to the meetings at which the resolution was passed, but did not affect or prejudice the rights of any other creditors. The meaning of the clause was perfectly obvious. The creditors in this case being satisfied, from what had occurred, that the assets would not pay 11*s.* in the pound, unanimously agreed to accept less; and, if they could not do so, the Act of Parliament had passed in vain. We quite agree with the learned Judge in his conclusion, "that great mischief and injustice would be done to the other creditors if the Court suffered the appellant, by reason of the accident, to continue the action, for the company was as much bound by the terms of the second resolution as it was by the terms of the first, to which it was a party." The appeal was consequently dismissed.

IN our issue of the 6th inst., we made what we considered to be some very fair remarks upon an article appearing in the Irish Law Times, concerning the relations existing between the Judges of the common law side of the Four Courts. We ventured to describe our contemporary's article as "a lively Irish sketch," and we questioned whether it was true to life. We doubted whether the Irish Judges would act as we thought our contemporary suggested, and our construction of what he did say is disputed. In our own justification, and for the benefit of the Irish Judges, we give our comments and our critic's reply in parallel columns:

Law Times.

IF we may form an opinion upon some observations which appear in the last number of the Irish Law Times, we need have little scruple in reforming the courts of law in Ireland, and abolishing the intermediate Court of Appeal. We have rarely seen so graphic a description of utter confusion as we find in the columns of our contemporary, and in order that we may not understate the case we will give his own words: "As the courts are at present constituted," we are told, "they do not satisfy the public or themselves, either in the manner they discharge their own business, or review each other's decisions. The courts of first instance, or those which hear and decide cases of pleading and practice on the common law side of the Hall of the Four Courts, and control the trial and decision of questions of law and fact after their disposal at Nisi Prius, are jealous of their respective regulations, differ in their views, clash in the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and when reviewing each other's decisions in the Court of Error, as at present constituted, 'pay each other off,' without much consideration or respect. When the Common Pleas and Exchequer fancy they catch the Queen's Bench at fault, they trip them up unmercifully, and when the Queen's Bench come round in their turn to take either of their former critics to task, they feel disposed to return the compliment with interest. We sometimes find great questions decided on appeal to the Court of Error, by a minority of judges overruling the decision of the majority, and the public are obliged to be content with the law thus laid down, although the reasoning, as well as the number, of the dissentients is more to be relied on. As to the courts of the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellor, on the Equity side, we are constrained to say they have each their respective views, and although in the main they have earned the respect and confidence of the public, yet their practice and procedure are not what the Profession and the public desire, especially in the subordinate offices attached to each." This we venture to think is a lively Irish sketch, and one in which implicit trust ought not to be placed. It is hardly credible that a number of educated gentlemen, entrusted with the highest functions in the State, should administer the law according to the bias of their personal feelings. The Court of Appeal our contemporary is rather shy of, simply observing that matters there have become too exciting to be pleasant. Anything that the Legislature may do with these courts cannot assuredly make them worse than they are—if we believe the Irish Law Times.

Irish Law Times.

OUR contemporary has thought proper to question the truth of the description contained in our second last issue of the unsatisfactory manner in which our Court of Exchequer Chamber is constituted in this country, and the way in which the several Courts of Common Law review each other's decisions when considering them in appeal. We do not question the right of the Law Times to criticise our views or impugn our veracity when they catch us tripping, but we protest against violent presumptions on the part of our respected contemporary, especially when they are put forward without any knowledge of the subject, and when the meaning and intent of our observations are distorted and misconstrued. After quoting the portion of our article to which we refer, the writer in the Law Times thus proceeds:—"This, we venture to think, is a lively Irish sketch, and one in which implicit trust ought not to be placed." "It is hardly credible that a number of gentlemen entrusted with the highest functions in the State should administer the law according to the bias of their personal feelings." The sneer at our national vivacity contained in the first sentence may be attributable to either contempt or jealousy. If the former we can outlive it, in the hope that, when the Law Times "ventures to think" again, it will confine itself to that harmless operation of the mind, and hesitate ere it publishes its ruminations. If the latter, we are not surprised when we read the laboured articles in its columns, and especially the succeeding one to that we complain of, and which endeavours to give an account of the very want of uniformity in the practice and procedure of the English courts which we complain of as existing in the Irish. As to the latter imputation, we emphatically deny that we ever insinuated that any member of the Irish Bench could be capable of "administering the law according to the bias of his personal feelings." It is notorious that our Irish Judges entertain for each other the warmest feelings of personal friendship, and fully appreciate each other's worth. "The bias of personal feelings," is unknown amongst our Common Law Judges, and that fact tends to reflect greater credit on the impartiality with which the different courts review each other's decisions, and do no hesitate to reverse them according to the honest dictates of their impartial judgment. We have not found fault with "the educated gentlemen entrusted with the highest functions in the State," but we did find fault with the system which, in England, as well as here, make courts of first instance entertain in succession appeals from each other's decisions, and thus leads to the absurdity of the few overruling the many, and the conflict of authority which has been the subject of well-grounded complaint in Westminster Hall as well as in the Dublin Four Courts.

LIMITED RIGHTS OF WAY.

IT being now so much the practice of Parliament to grant to public undertakings large powers of taking lands, it is obviously of importance, in the first place, to see that proper reservations of the rights of owners and occupiers of adjacent lands and property are inserted in the particular Acts of Parliament; and, secondly, that the rights so reserved are not curtailed or annihilated. The dangers which attend the user of land so taken are pointed out by the case of the United Land Company v. The Great Eastern Railway Company (29 L. L. Rep. N. S. 498). The railway company, requiring certain Crown lands for the purposes of a railway, entered into an agreement with the Royal Commissioners to make two level crossings upon the railway for the more convenient enjoyment of the adjacent lands of her Majesty. The plaintiff company became the purchasers of some of these lands, and it was in respect of a right claimed by them to have a way over the level crossings to the buildings erected on such lands that the bill was filed.

The contention on the part of the defendant company was, that inasmuch as at the time the level crossings were made, the adjoining land was only mud and marsh land, the level crossings could only be used for the purpose to which land in that state was applicable. On the other side, it was said that building being a purpose to which the land might be properly applied, convenient communications for the residents in buildings so erected were necessarily reserved. The railway company urged the great inconvenience which would be entailed by all the residents having a right to cross the railway. It will be seen that this raises very neatly a question of law of much practical importance.

Let us consider, first, the elementary proposition with regard to rights of way. It is perfectly clear that there may be grants of limited rights of way; and limited rights of way may be acquired by user. For example, a way may be granted for agricultural purposes only (Reynolds v. Edwardes, Willes, 282), or for the carriage of coals only (Iveson v. Moore, 3 Ld. Raym. 291). And evidence of an user of a road with horses, carts, and carriages, for certain purposes, does not necessarily prove a right of road for all purposes, but the extent of the right is a question for the jury under all the circumstances. If the way is confined to a particular purpose, the jury ought not to extend it; but if it is proved to have been used for a variety of purposes, the jury may be warranted in finding a way for all. Among other authorities for these propositions are Hawkins v. Carbines (27 L. J. 44, Ex.), and Allan v. Gomme (11 Ad. & Ell. 759.) There is a recent case which follows out the principles of these decisions. In Williams v. James (16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 664; L. Rep. 2 C. P. 577), a right of way for carting hay was disputed, on the ground of excess in using it for carting hay which had not been grown on the dominant tenement. Mr. Justice Willes there said: "In the case of proving a right by prescription, the user of the right is the only evidence. In the case of a grant the language of the instrument can be referred to, and it is of course for the court to construe that language; and in the absence of any clear indication of the intention of the parties, the maxim that a grant must be construed most strongly against the grantor must be applied. . . . The land in this case was a field in the country, and apparently only used for rustic purposes. . . . I quite agree with the argument that the right of way can only be used for the field in its ordinary use as a field. . . . The use must be the reasonable use for the purposes of the land in the condition in which it was while the user took place." And his Lordship took occasion to remark as to the extent of the right, that it could not be used for a manufactory built upon the field.

Now it is clear that the right claimed in the United Land Company v. Great Eastern Railway Company was a right in respect of a use of the land not existing at the time of the reservation. The land was marsh land; but because it was marsh, was all convenience of access to be cut off by the railway if the land was utilised? The Vice-Chancellor (Malins) said: "The use and enjoyment of land means the use and enjoyment of it in any manner that subsequent events may render expedient." This strikes us as a very wide doctrine, and taken generally as applied to rights acquired by prescription, it would undoubtedly be too wide; but in this case the defendant company's Act of Parliament bound them to make and construct such convenient communications across, over, or under their railway, as might be necessary "for the convenient enjoyment and occupation of the lands." And it was with reference to this that the Vice-Chancellor added to the above remarks: "Nothing can, in my opinion, be more narrow than the attempt to put upon the language of this Act of Parliament the construction that, because the land was used in a particular manner at that time (1847), it must necessarily be used in the same manner for all future time, or actually be blocked out from all communication with the outer world."

The "use and enjoyment of land" is a large expression. There is no restriction here, and on the authority of Henning v. Burnett (8 Ex. 197), and Williams v. James (sup.), it would seem clear that where the nature of the use and enjoyment of land is not specified, it cannot be implied that the land shall not be used for any purpose but that for which it is adapted when the right is acquired. Suppose, for example, coal or clay were discovered under the surface, could they not be worked in exercise of the "enjoyment" of the land? The circumstance in the case under notice of the land being taken by a railway company, furnishes a strong argument in favour of an affirmative answer to this question, for although a certain amount of private inconvenience is looked upon as allowable to secure a public benefit, it is also clear that more inconvenience and loss must not be inflicted upon the landowner than is absolutely necessary. To use the language of the Vice-Chancellor: "He is to have as much enjoyment, and as free use of his land after the railway is constructed as he had before, so far as the exercise of those rights does not interfere with the rights of the railway company and the rights of the public in running over those lands upon the railway."

This is no doubt an exceptional case, for the Vice-Chancellor declined to regard the railway as a servient tenement; but it, nevertheless, serves usefully to illustrate the general principles of our law.

THE FUTURE OF LEGAL EDUCATION.

IT must be a source of gratification to everyone interested in the study and practice of the law, that there are among the eminent members of the Profession a number of men who, feeling the utter inefficiency of the present system of legal education, are determined to do their utmost to carry a wise measure of reform. When the Legal Education Association was established under the presidency of Sir ROUNDELL PALMER, it became apparent that the subject of legal education was one which could no longer be trifled with; but unhappily, owing to the opposition of the present MASTER of the ROLLS, and the want of knowledge on the part of lay members, the resolutions brought forward in the House of Commons by Sir ROUNDELL PALMER were not carried. The elevation of the President of the Association to the woolsack raised another impediment to the progress of the movement, and the larger reform contained in the provisions of the Judicature Bill presented a still more formidable obstacle to the attainment of the objects of the Association. Fortunately, however, the LORD CHANCELLOR was good enough, whilst resigning the presidency of the association, to express his unabated interest in its aims, but his Lordship at the same time added to the burden of the Judicature Bill by bringing forward the Land Transfer Bill, and his hands thus became so full as to allow little hope to be entertained that he could find time to embody the resolutions which he introduced into the House of Commons in a Bill. By great good luck the Judicature Bill was carried; the Land Transfer Bill alone remains as a rival to the Bill for the Reform of Legal Education yet to be framed. Under these circumstances it became highly desirable that the Legal Education Association should ascertain what are the present views of the LORD CHANCELLOR, and what the prospect of carrying a Bill through Parliament. Hence the deputation which waited upon Lord SELBORNE on Friday in last week.

The result of that deputation may be very shortly stated. In the first place, it was said very plainly that what the Inns of Court have done in improving the education of barristers is not satisfactory. It is not in itself efficient, it is confined to the four Inns of Court, and at any time any one of the Inns may retire from the scheme and may call students in any way that it thinks proper. We have over and over again expressed the opinion that the divided and frequently conflicting interests of the Inns of Court unfit them to form an efficient governing body of a great profession. If they govern at all they do not govern well, and it was too much to expect that when abruptly aroused from the lethargy which is traditionary, the Inns should fashion a wise and liberal scheme of legal education. And as a fact it was found impossible to secure combined action; each Inn appointed their respective tutors and professors, and in a fit of zealous enthusiasm, Gray's Inn, at a moment when its very existence was threatened, owing to a slow but sure process of exhaustion, founded tempting scholarships. But the emptiness and absurdity of these spasmodic efforts was in the mind of every member of the Legal Education Association, and the impression was conveyed by Mr. AMPHLETT to the LORD CHANCELLOR. What did he propose in substitution? He proposed that which has been the scheme of the Association from its commencement—the establishment of a General School of Law, to which members of the Inns of Court, articled clerks, and the public should be admitted to study law. There is obviously no possible reason why a high order of education should be reserved for barristers. It is in every way desirable that a knowledge of law should be widely diffused—not a knowledge of practice and procedure, but a knowledge of broad general principles. It is now universally admitted that the study of law is as good a mental discipline as the study of mathematics, and there is certainly no reason why in the university or school articled clerks should not share to any extent they please in the advantages offered to students for the Bar. The Americans appear to entertain a somewhat exaggerated estimate of the importance of legal study, but it is an error on the right side. A correspondent of an American contemporary considers the study of the law inferior only to the highest—theology. He writes: "The subject of comparative scientific jurisprudence is, in itself, not merely the pursuit of themes of the most transcendent interest and importance, but in many aspects furnish the key to the inner secrets of history, while enlarging our respect for the world in general, with the knowledge of the moral unity of mankind. It gives significance to facts in the history of other lands, without which all is mysterious and oftentimes unaccountable. It increases our reverence for the triumphs of human thought, as it makes known the fact that the great and good of all ages have contributed some ray to the noonday glory of our enlightened age. It enlarges the cosmopolitan spirit, for we soon discern that to foreign jurists and civilians we owe most of the scientific statement of jurisprudence. And again, it increases our respect for heroism and moral dignity; for it is true that most of the grandest principles have been born of mighty struggles, and the champions of great principles have often been the scorned and persecuted of their own day. Giants of moral power contemplating the truths of God are contemplated, rearing the science of liberty and just and equal law, often amidst the gloom of tyranny, superstition, and persecution. Indeed, there is but one theme higher than this, it is theology, and the science of religion."

To recur, however, to the practical question—What said the LORD CHANCELLOR? He reminded the deputation that he still had the Land Transfer Bill to carry through Parliament; but, nevertheless, he expressed a hope of being able at an early date to introduce a measure to the notice of his colleagues. Whether they will approve and adopt it, or any similar measure, of course his Lordship was unable to say. But, as an individual, he declared his sympathy with the association, and promised to draft a scheme which he proposed to submit to the Inns of Court, the Incorporated Law Society, and the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association. In this measure he will not confine himself to the subject of legal education, but will deal also with the constitution of the Inns of Court. This we hail as a wise extension of the original scheme. There is no argument in favour of retaining the Inns of Court in their antiquated and practically useless form. A great profession needs no traditionary respectability of its so-called governing body to secure to it vitality and honour, and if the vast revenues of the Inns of Court were applied to education and to scholarships—which might give a few students annually the opportunities of earning a means of support during their first year or two at the Bar—instead of dinners and beadles, the Profession would feel the benefit of the change. The Inns of Court have done some good work; they still are useful in a limited degree. Their Benchers ought gladly to welcome a reform which makes them thoroughly efficient for all practical purposes of the Profession, or blots them out for ever.

THE SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT 1873.

(Continued from p. 68.)

PART V. OFFICERS AND OFFICES—PART VI. JURISDICTION OF INFERIOR COURTS—PART VII. MISCELLANEOUS.

THE remaining parts of the Act require but cursory notice, as they are mostly general provisions for carrying into effect the enactments of the earlier sections.

The officers of all courts whose jurisdiction is by the Act transferred to the High Court or the Court of Appeal are to be attached to the High Court, and to continue to discharge the same or similar duties as they have hitherto discharged. The officers of Courts of Common Pleas, at Lancaster, and the Pleas, at Durham, are to continue to perform the same duties as heretofore, and their duties and fees will be regulated by rules of court. The personal officers of the Judges are to remain the same as they now are so far as regards the Judges of the High Court; the ordinary Judges of the Court of Appeal will be entitled to one clerk. The clerks' salaries, however, are reduced by the Act. Compensation to any officer of any court whose jurisdiction is abolished or transferred is provided for by the Act. The status of officers if in doubt is to be determined by rules of court provided that such rules do not alter the office, rank, salary, or pension of the officer, or require him to perform duties not analogous to those he has hitherto performed. Any person now empowered to administer oaths in any court whose jurisdiction is transferred will be a commissioner to administer oaths in the High Court or the Court of Appeal. The appointment of official referees is provided for: (sect. 83.) Their qualifications and the tenure of their offices is to be determined by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the presidents of divisions, and with the sanction of the Treasury. Future offices are to be regulated by the same authority, and such officers as are required to perform special duties with respect either to the Supreme Court generally or with respect to the High Court or the Court of Appeal, or one of the divisions, or any particular judge or judges, may by the same authority be attached as required. The appointment of officers assigned to perform duties with respect to the Supreme Court generally, or attached to the High Court of Appeal, and of all commissioners to take oaths, will rest with the Lord Chancellor. This would include all masters, official referees, clerks, and other persons not attached to any particular division. All divisional officers are to be appointed by the respective presidents of the divisions, except in the case of the Chancery division, where it is provided that the Master of the Rolls shall appoint all officers attached to the Chancery division who have hitherto been appointed by him. Officers attached to any Judge are to be appointed by that Judge. Officers of the Supreme Court, except those attached to the person of a Judge and removable by him at pleasure, may be removed by the person appointing, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor. Salaries are to be settled by the Treasury with the concurrence of the Chancellor. No officer attached to the person of a Judge will be entitled to a pension unless entitled otherwise than by the Act, but other officers appointed under the Act, and whose whole time is devoted to the duties of their office, are to be considered as in the permanent Civil Service, and as entitled to Civil Service pensions. Patronage not provided for in the Act, if incident to the office of any existing Judge, shall continue to be exercised on him during the continuance of his office, and will be exercised on his death or resignation as may be directed under Her Majesty's sign manual. Attorneys, solicitors, and proctors practising in the courts which by the Act become part of the Supreme Court will be, on the Act coming into operation, called solicitors of the Supreme Court, and will, so far as possible, have the same rights and be subject to the same obligations as they now are. Persons who now are entitled to be admitted to practise in any of the above capacities will, under the Act, be entitled to be admitted as solicitors of the Supreme Court, and will be so admitted by the Master of the Rolls, and will have the same rights and be subject to the same obligations as if the Act had not passed. Solicitors, attorneys, and proctors are to be deemed officers of the Supreme Court, and both branches of that court will exercise over them the same jurisdiction as any of the Superior Courts now exercise: (sect. 87.)

With respect to the jurisdiction of inferior courts, it is provided that Her Majesty may, by order in council, confer on any inferior court of civil jurisdiction the same jurisdiction in equity and admiralty as any County Court now has or may hereafter have. This provision is rather contrary to the spirit of the recommendations of the Judicature Commission, which suggested the union of all jurisdictions in the County Court in the first instance. The Act further gives power to every inferior court to have jurisdiction in equity or in law, and in equity or in admiralty, to give the same relief both as to claims and counter claims in any matter within its jurisdiction as the Supreme Court is empowered to do. Where, however, a counter claim involves matter beyond the jurisdiction of an inferior court, that court may dispose of the whole matter in controversy so far as relates to the claim and defence thereto, but can give no relief exceeding its jurisdiction to a defendant upon such a counter claim; but in such a case the High Court may order a transfer of the whole proceedings to the High Court. This, again, has not the appearance of materially enlarging the County Court jurisdiction, but rather shows that there is little or no intention of throwing all the work into the hands of the County Courts. It is further enacted that all the rules of law declared by the Act shall be in force and receive effect in all English courts so far as the matters are cognizable by such courts. This provision was essential to secure uniformity throughout the country in rules of law.

The miscellaneous provisions of the Act deal mainly with the transfer of court documents to the Supreme Court, with the saving of the right to make circuits and issue commissions therefor, and the rights of the officers of the various circuits, with saving of the rights of the Lord Chancellor and of the Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaster. The Chancellor of the Exchequer ceases to be a judge of the Court of Exchequer, but his other rights are untouched. The sheriffs are still to be appointed as they now are, in the Exchequer. The Counties Palatine of Lancaster and Durham will cease to be counties palatine so far as respects the issue of commissions of assize, but not otherwise; all such commissions will in the future be issued as they are in other counties. The remainder of the Act consists of the interpretation of terms.

This completes our notice of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873, but before leaving the Act finally, it may be as well to point out what are the results of our cursory glances over this important piece of legislation. In the first place, our readers cannot have failed to notice that, although changes are made by the Act, those changes are rather in name than in reality. When the Act comes into operation it will be found that things go on very much in their old grooves. The same courts will sit under a new name, and the same causes be tried under a new title. It must be obvious that if any great change is intended in our judicial system the Act now under discussion is but a stepping-stone to that change. The Act itself, by uniting all courts into one, will enable future reformers to deal more easily with the internal arrangements and jurisdiction of our Supreme Court. There will be no conflict of jurisdiction to overcome. Beyond this, however, little of vital importance has been achieved. The district registries will no doubt be a great boon to persons not resident in London, but they are incomplete without local tribunals. That local tribunals, as courts of first instance, must some day be established is obvious. For the present, however, country solicitors must be content with the assizes. No doubt if it should appear to the Judges to be necessary, there will be three assizes a year instead of two, and this is a matter which is left in the discretion of the Judges themselves. Again, nobody can read the rules of procedure given in the schedule to the Act, which are to be the basis of the future practice, without feeling that they have been drawn by some person who is not familiar with the practice of all branches alike. This will have to be remedied by the rules to be published under the Act. Indeed, the Legislature has purposely left large gaps in the Act, which are to be filled up by the future rules. These rules, we understand, are now being drawn by competent members of the Bar, and when drawn will be, we have no doubt, submitted to members of the other branch of the Profession, whose experience will enable them to give much practical aid. It is of the utmost importance that these rules should be carefully drawn, as it is upon them that the successful working of the Act depends, and without them the Act is a mere skeleton. If the rules are well-drawn there will be reason on their account alone to hail the Act as one of the most important pieces of legislation of our day; and a portion of the Act which will be recognised as a great boon is that which enables persons injured to recover without running the risk of having commenced their suits in a wrong court, and assimilates the law in all courts alike.

THE ESTATES OF PARTNERS IN BANKRUPTCY.—III.

IT will have been seen, as of course might have been expected, that the first question arising when members of an alleged partnership fail, must be one of evidence, what is partnership and what is separate property. Apart from the common law doctrine that a partnership may be created by parties holding themselves out to the world as such, Re Rowland and Crankshaw (L. Rep. 1 Ch. App. 421) referred to in our first article, shows that where it is proved that no partnership in effect existed, the property which was the subject of joint dealing will be considered by the Court of Bankruptcy as joint assets. And the partnership may possibly be proved to have extended to particular dealings, and not to have been a general partnership, and the complicated question may arise, to meet which sect. 37 of the last Bankruptcy Act was enacted.

Having discussed the general principles regulating the liability respectively of joint and separate estates, and the right of proof of joint and several creditors respectively, we will here shortly notice the procedure provided by the statute for dealing with insolvent partners and partnerships. By sect. 108 of the Act, any creditor whose debt is sufficient to entitle him to present a bankruptcy petition against all the partners of a firm, may present such petition against any one or more partners of such firm, without including the others. This is a useful alteration of the old law, it formerly being essential to the validity of a joint adjudication that it should include all the members of a firm, and if for any reason a commission could not be maintained against one partner, a joint commission against the other could not be supported. It was, therefore, necessary to take out separate commissions against each partner. A further reform is provided by sect. 101, by which power is given to dismiss a petition against some respondents only. Mr. Robson says (p. 574) that it would seem doubtful whether the above provisions authorise a petition against some only of the members of a partnership, founded on a debt jointly due from them.

This is a point of some interest, and we are inclined to consider it clear that a joint creditor might present a petition against a single partner. The law, as we have already stated it, is, that where there is no joint estate the joint creditors prove with the separate creditors against the separate estates of the partners. Suppose, therefore, that notoriously there is no joint estate of a partnership, but one of the partners has considerable separate property. It surely is open to the joint creditor to select that partner and present a bankruptcy petition against him, so as to procure the administration of his separate estate. When we consider the practice established by decided cases as to separate adjudications, there ought, it appears to us, to be no doubt on the point. Mr. Robson himself tells us (p. 575) that "although a joint adjudication cannot be founded on a separate debt, still a joint debt will support a separate adjudication against any member of the firm. For this purpose, an adjudication of bankruptcy is regarded as in the nature of an execution, which, in respect of a joint debt, may be levied on the separate estate of each partner, although an action for recovery of the debt must be brought against all the partners." Further, upon the separate adjudication of a partner, his share of the partnership property, after payment of partnership debts and the claims of his co-partner, vest in his trustee. If there were no analogous case, we should be decidedly of opinion that one partner might be made bankrupt on a joint debt; but in Ex parte Chambers (2 M. & A. 440), a case decided on the 97th section of the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act of 1849, where the whole of the partnership property belonged to two of the partners, and the third had little or no property, an adjudication against the two, founded on a debt due from them jointly, was held a valid adjudication.

But although we think that, on a joint debt, a creditor might obtain a separate adjudication, any voluntary action upon the part of the partners to divert partnership property to secure separate debts, is contrary to the policy of the law. This point arose in Ex parte Snowball; Re Douglas (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 295, 894; L. Rep. 7 Ch. 534.) There one partner gave a power of attorney, authorising the sale of a particular ship, which was partnership property. In pursuance of this power, a deed was executed, to which the other partner was a party, mortgaging the ship, to secure a private debt of such partner. The Chief Judge held that the power of attorney was rendered invalid by an act of bankruptcy committed by the partner who gave it in going abroad, and that therefore the mortgage was never executed by such partner. But the point in the case in which we are now interested is that decided by the Lords Justices, that the execution of a deed professing to pledge partnership property for the present and future separate debts of the partners, made the execution of the deed by the partner who remained in England an act of bankruptcy. Lord Justice Mellish, delivering the judgment of the court, said: "We are of opinion that it is a fraud upon the creditors of a partnership for a partner who knows that his firm is insolvent to transfer partnership assets to a creditor of his own, or to give a security over the partnership assets for his own private debt. Such a transfer necessarily tends to defeat the creditors of the partnership, and to prevent the proper distribution of the assets under the bankrupt law. It was admitted in the argument before us that the deed would not give Mr. Snowball a valid security on the partnership property for private debts owing to him by Martin Douglas; but it was contended that the deed might notwithstanding be valid, so far as it gave a security for partnership debts. We do not see how, upon the question whether the execution of a particular deed is an act of bankruptcy, one part of the deed can be separated from the rest. If by any part of a deed authority is given to apply partnership property, transferred by the deed, to purposes which are a fraud upon the creditors of the partnership, we think the execution of the deed makes a fraudulent transfer of property, and is, therefore, an act of bankruptcy." The Lord Justice further remarked that, if the partner giving the power of attorney had executed the deed, the partnership property would plainly have been transferred as a security for the several debts of the partners, unless they were held to have committed acts of bankruptcy; and the case of Bowker v. Burdekin (11 M. & W. 128) is a direct authority that, where a deed to which all the partners in a firm are made parties, would operate, if executed by all, as a fraudulent transfer of partnership property, each party commits an act of bankruptcy at the time he executes the deed, unless he executes it as an escrow.

(To be continued.)

LAW LIBRARY.

The Law and Practice of Bankruptcy. By A. A. DORIA, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. London: Law Times Office.

WE must regret that in bringing out this edition of his work on bankruptcy Mr. Doria has been unable to incorporate with his text the decisions reported up to the end of the last legal year. So far from accomplishing this most desirable object, we find that he has reserved for his introduction cases reported in 1872. He may have thought it desirable to give, in a compact form, all the case law upon the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 distinct from the old law; but inasmuch as he has necessarily recast his book, basing it upon the new law, it is difficult to understand why the cases should not have been introduced into the body of the work, and thus brought down to the latest practicable period.

We do not deny, however, that the arrangement adopted has its advantages. It is useful to be able to master the recent case law without wading through an entire treatise, and for chamber use Mr. Doria's digest will be very acceptable. And it is decidedly preferable to have a complete digest than elaborate "addenda." If at the page in the volume indicated in the digest of new cases a back reference is made, the practitioner will find that he possesses a treatise brought down to last term.

The scheme of the book is undoubtedly the best of any that has been published. The Act and rules are not placed in an appendix, but they are set out in effect or in hæc verba when referred to in the body of the work. This is a great advantage, as it relieves the person consulting it from the necessity of turning backwards and forwards. The arrangement is this: the section or part of the section applicable to the subject matter under consideration is first stated, then the rules relating to the particular question, afterwards the law and authorities bearing upon the point, and lastly the forms by reference to the numbers they bear in the schedules to the rules.

Mr. Doria is an author of established reputation in this branch of the law, having, in conjunction with Mr. Macrae, brought out a work some years ago which was thoroughly appreciated by the Profession. We have looked through his present work, and we may say that it is well and carefully executed. In form it is less bulky than its rivals, and is excellently adapted to the exigencies of County Court practice.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Shelford's Real Property Statutes, 8th edit., by Carson. Sweet; Maxwell.
Manual of the Laws and Courts of the United States. Stevens and Haynes.
Rattigan's Roman Law of Persons. Wildy and Sons.
Winslow's Manual of Lunacy. Smith, Elder, and Co.
Currie's Indian Law Examination Manual. John Flack and Co.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

Complaints reach us that an extensive system of touting still prevails at the Westminster County Courts, where, on the opening of the court, men in numbers are found who not only interrogate the suitors, but are willing to furnish every conceivable information, and to "get the case attended to" for some preposterously small fee. We fear that this applies, in a greater or less degree, to all the metropolitan County Courts, and it is an evil which needs redress.

The office of Commissioner Extraordinary of the Court of Chancery, Ireland, for the London district, is at present held by two solicitors only in the city of London, and one only for the London district outside the city, and the same soliciters, and no others, for the like districts are Commissioners for the Superior Courts of Common Law in Ireland. Applications are not unfrequently made by other London Solicitors to be appointed to these offices, and we are sorry to say that, being in almost all cases opposed, they are as often refused. We certainly are of opinion that it is expecting too much to ask solicitors or their clients having affidavits to swear before these Commissioners, to travel from the outlying districts to, say Chancery-lane, near which is the office of the only Commissioner outside the city. Greater facilities ought to be rendered to London solicitors in this respect for the dispatch of business. The Act empowering the issue of these commissions was, we believe, framed by the solicitor who was first appointed to these offices, and a relative of whom still holds the commissions for the London district outside the city.

The Town Council of Sheffield and the borough justices have been seemingly at variance on the subject of the payment of a salary to the clerk to the said justices in lieu of fees. The former having resolved to pay the clerk about to be appointed by salary, in pursuance of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, the justices were unanimous in negativing the resolution of the council, at the same time agreeing upon a statement of the reasons which led them to such a conclusion. The council seem to have gone in for economy and the justices for efficiency, and we must certainly congratulate the latter on the view they took of the entire question. Indeed, it seems from a report in a local paper that the town council somewhat mistook their powers upon this subject. Mr. Henry Vickers, solicitor, has been appointed to the vacant office.

Monday was the last day on which notices could be given to owners, lessees, and occupiers of lands intended to be taken by any private Bill in Parliament; and it was also the last day for giving certain notices required by the Tramway Act 1872. By far the greater number of applications to Parliament in the ensuing session will relate to the railways. Other standing orders of both Houses have to be complied with before the 21st and 31st instant respectively. We understand that in consequence of the facilities rendered for obtaining provisional orders from the Board of Trade, parliamentary agents will not be as busy as usual this session, many provisional orders being obtained by country solicitors through their London agents without the intervention of parliamentary agents.

Last week the judges of the Court of Common Pleas (in the absence of the Lord Chief Justice of the court) took occasion to remark upon the inconvenience which arose—more particularly affecting the court itself—in consequence of the practice (which, by the way, has obtained for many years past) having grown up of solicitors agreeing to strike out causes in the list, making them remanets. On Saturday last the Lord Chief Justice himself called attention to the matter, and intimated that he would disregard orders so made unless he or his representative directed that a case might stand over. We presume that when it is desired to have a cause taken from its place in the list, it is in the interests of the parties concerned that it is so desired. Sometimes, no doubt, the removal of causes in the way complained of, occasions inconvenience to the parties concerned in cases following close on them in the list, yet we must say that every facility should be rendered to suitors and their solicitors to withdraw causes from the list, either finally or temporarily, and to make it necessary to obtain an order from the chief of the court, or the judge appointed by him for that purpose, seems hardly likely to conduce to such facilities.

Probably there is no profession individual members of which are more liable to suffer at the hands of fanatics than that which solicitors represent. Some ordinary process is served by direction of a client, the consequences being imprisonment or the sale of goods and chattels, and the unfortunate prisoner or debtor is apt to attribute all his trouble to the hard-heartedness of the solicitor. In a morbid state of mind the afflicted and unfortunate being determines to avenge the supposed injuries so unsparingly heaped upon him. The latest victim to this state of things is Mr. William Walter, solicitor, of Newgate-street and Thames Ditton, who was fired upon by a man into whose house, in 1869, he had put a distress for rent on behalf of his client the man's landlord. Fortunately, Mr. Walter has escaped without injury, except disfigurement of his face by the gunpowder. The attempted intimidation of solicitors is of too frequent occurrence, and certainly every protection should be rendered to them against such conduct as we describe while they are merely endeavouring faithfully to discharge their duty to their clients.

The Conservatives of Preston have just lost in the person of Mr. Alderman Myres, solicitor, deceased, a most valued and active local representative, whose labours were not confined to that town, but were also associated with the Conservative party in the county. He was registrar of the County Court at Preston, and coroner of that borough for many years.

The feeling among the Profession is so general in favour of securing greater facilities for the despatch of business, both in Westminster Hall and the Guildhall, the more so by reason of the fact that the new Law Courts are still visionary, that we believe it is in contemplation to bring the matter under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury through the agency of both branches of the profession, who, with the public share equally the almost immeasurable inconvenience occasioned by the present wretched accommodation afforded to all attending the sittings of our Superior Courts. We are glad to notice the following incident which took place on Thursday. In consequence of the small, ill-ventilated, and incommodious "halls of justice" provided by the Corporation of the City of London for the judges who have to dispose of the business of the after-term sitting at Guildhall, the Hon. Justice Denman, who was to preside in the Second Court of Queen's Bench this morning, said he should not expose either his own health or that of other persons who had business in the court by holding a sitting in the miserable little hole set apart for their use on that occasion. The room was miserably small, and more miserably ventilated. His Lordship wished to know if there were no better court than that provided by the City authorities for himself and the jury to sit in. The court-keeper said it was the only room provided by the Corporation. The learned judge then sent him to see if there were not another room available for the purposes of a court. If not, he was determined not to sit there. One of the jurors said he quite endorsed the learned judge's remarks. When the learned judge ascertained there was no other court available he said there would be no Second Court of Queen's Bench that day,

The following classes in Conveyancing will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society during the ensuing week: Monday, 4.30 to 6 o'clock; Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; after which the Christmas Vacation will intervene and the lectures and classes in Conveyancing will be resumed on the 16th proximo. Those in Common Law will commence on the 9th proximo. Students will not have the benefit of either classes or lectures in Equity until the month of April next.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Consideration for Contract — Charity Election—Exchange of Votes.—Plaintiff and defendant were subscribers to a charity, the objects of which are elected by votes proportioned in number to the amount of subscriptions. They expressly agreed that if the plaintiff would give his votes for an object of the charity whom the defendant favoured at one election, defendant would give the same number of votes for the plaintiff's candidate at the next election. Plaintiff performed his promise, but defendant made default; plaintiff thereupon subscribed to the charity the sum of money necessary to secure the number of votes promised by the defendant, and sued defendant for the amount. Held, that a nonsuit, entered by the judge at the trial on the ground that these facts constituted only an imperfect obligation and did not amount to a legally binding contract, must be set aside, and a verdict for the sum paid by the plaintiff, which were the damages assessed by the jury, be entered for the plaintiff instead, in pursuance of leave reserved: (Bolton v. Madden, 29 L. T. Rep., N.S., 505. Q. B.)

Attorney and Client—Proceedings by Wife against her Husband—Liability of Husband for Attorney's Costs.—The costs of a suit justifiably instituted by a married woman against her husband for a divorce or a judicial separation, are "necessaries" for which she may pledge her husband's credit. A., a married woman, living apart from her husband, consulted the plaintiffs respecting the ill usage she had received from her husband, consisting of his adultery and cruelty. They therefore made inquiries, and having satisfied themselves that there were good grounds for legal proceedings, they commenced a suit in the Divorce Court on A.'s behalf. Before such suit was brought to a hearing, A. and her husband came to an arrangement whereby he executed a deed securing to her an annual allowance. The attorneys having sued the husband for their bill of costs, the jury in reply to questions left to them by the judge, found that there was legal cruelty; that the plaintiffs made full inquiries to satisfy themselves and to justify them in acting as A.'s solicitors; but that it was not necessary in order to obtain the deed of separation to carry on the proceedings by filing the petition in the Divorce Court. Upon a verdict of this finding being entered for the plaintiffs, held, that the action was maintainable, and that the costs incurred by the plaintiffs in the proceedings at the suit of A. were (subject to taxation) properly chargeable against her husband: (Stocken and another v. Pattrick, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 507, Ex.)

Solicitor and Client—Writs of fi. fa. issued against good faith—Process—Liability of Solicitor.—S., as solicitor for a shareholder, presented a petition for the winding-up of a company, which was dismissed with costs. K., the solicitor of the company, made a demand for these costs upon S., who had received a cheque for the amount, but through some misunderstanding between the solicitors, as to the authority to receive the costs, payment was not made until after a writ of fieri facias had been issued and executed for the amount. On a motion by S.'s client to set aside the writ, as issued contrary to good faith; or in the alternative that K. might be ordered to pay the costs of the execution and of the motion: The court refused to set the writ aside, but, considering that it ought not to have been issued, ordered K. to pay the costs of the execution and motion: (Re The Commonwealth Land, Building Estate and Auction Company (Limited); Ex parte Hollington, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 502. V.C. H.)

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

Friday, Dec. 13.

The Imperial Land Company of Marseilles v. Masterman and others.

Examination of witnesses abroad—Commission to foreign court.

This suit was instituted in February 1870, by the liquidator of the company, with the view of fixing Messrs. Masterman, Fruhling, and Goschen, and others, with a liability to contribute towards the repayment of the losses sustained by the company in connection with their purchase of the Joliette estate, near Marseilles, and the plaintiffs now took out a summons to obtain an order of the court requesting the president and judges of the Tribunal Civil de Première Instance de Departement de la Seine, sitting at Paris, to accept a commission from the Court of Chancery to delegate one or more judges of the tribunal who should be charged to proceed to an inquiry in the form of French civil procedure in the cause, and in consequence to summon and hear all witnesses residing in the department of the Seine, who might be required on the part either of the plaintiffs or defendants, upon certain allegations stated in the summons having reference to the matters in issue in the suit. The summons further asked that if the president and judges would accept the commission it should issue; that neither the commissioners thereunder nor any person employed by them in taking the depositions should be required to take an oath, and that the examinations so taken should, when reduced into writing and authenticated, be transmitted to the Court of Chancery and read at the hearing of the cause. The application was one of a novel and important nature, and the case is, we believe, the first one in which the Court of Chancery has departed from its ordinary practice of appointing a special examiner to take the evidence when the witnesses to be examined are resident abroad. It will be seen that the ground of the decision in this case was, there were unwilling witnesses to be examined, and that a special examiner would have no power to compel the attendance and take the evidence of an unwilling witness.

Glasse, Q.C., Higgins, Q.C., and Wingfield, appeared in support of the summons; Cotton, Q.C. and Kekewich opposed it.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that the cause in in which this application was made was one of great importance to the parties concerned, being instituted to establish a liability of large amount upon an eminent firm of merchants, and involving questions of character. It was also one in which both sides agreed that certain evidence must be taken in France. Now, it had been urged by the plaintiffs that there were many witnesses whose evidence would be required and who would not voluntarily attend before any examiner or tribunal, and evidence to that effect had been produced before him, which not having been met by any evidence in contradiction, he must take to be true. The defendants, while admitting that there must be a commission to take evidence in France, contended that it ought to be done by the appointment of a special examiner for the purpose in the usual way. The question was, which was the best way? The defendants urged that the practice of the Court of Chancery required the appointment of a special examiner, and undoubtedly it was the usual practice of the court when evidence had to be taken in our Colonies or abroad to make such an appointment, and a very proper practice it was when the witnesses were willing to give evidence; but when, as here, there were witnesses to be examined who would not voluntarily give their testimony, what a vain thing it would be for the court to appoint and send over some one to call for witnesses who would not come, and whose attendance he had no means of compelling. To do so would be to cause the occurrence of two evils—first, a delay of justice; secondly, a waste of time and expense. If, therefore, it was possible to find a tribunal with the power to compel the attendance of witnesses and to take their evidence, it would appear the most proper and beneficial course to take advantage of that tribunal. His Honour had here the evidence of an eminent French avoué that the tribunals in France would take charge of the commission, and showing that it is as much to the interest of the defendants as the plaintiffs that nugatory proceedings should not be taken. The objection urged was that the French tribunal would not take the evidence by examination and cross-examination in our manner, nor permit counsel to conduct the examination, but would, as was its usual practice, examine the witnesses itself. Now, his Honour was by no means satisfied that in a case like this, where complicated and important questions occurring in an English suit were involved, the French court would insist on adopting this course, and he thought it highly probable that the questions to be asked could be agreed upon; and if this mode were adopted it would be very convenient. Cases had been cited to him where, under the statute 1 Will. 4, c. 22, the courts of common law had directed a commission to issue to the judges of a foreign court to examine witnesses there. Such a one was Lumley v. Gye (23 L. J., N. S., 112, Q. B.; 2 Ell. & Bl. 216.) It was said that those cases were especially upon that statute, but on referring to that statute it appeared only to give the common law courts the power which the Court of Chancery possessed long before, i.e., the power of examining witnesses abroad. The Court of Chancery had then, in his opinion, the power to do what the courts of law had done in those cases, and having evidence that the French courts would accept the commission, he thought the course proposed by the plaintiffs was the best possible course, and he should direct the commission to issue. He would not, however, now decide upon the precise form the commission was to take, nor its details; those would have of course to be considered before the commission went. The costs must be costs in the cause.

Correspondence.

SPURIOUS COUNTY COURT NOTICES.—In your issue of Saturday last you comment on the above, and express your sorrow at having to say that you believe they owe their origin, as a rule, to law stationers, some of them in Chancery-lane, of whom a great variety can be purchased. Permit me, through the medium of your columns, to state to the Profession that I have never hitherto solely, nor does my firm of Edward Cox and Sons, now issue, deal in, or supply any forms at all akin to those above designated. We vend only such as are recognised in the several Chancery and common law offices, and adopted by certificated practitioners. EDWARD COX.

ARTICLED CLERKS AND THE JUDICATURE ACT.—How will the Judicature Act affect the position of articled clerks in reference to the time, manner, and subjects of their intermediate and final examinations, or will clerks at present articled be unaffected by the Act? CURIA.

[Not at all. See sect. 87. If you have not got the Act, get it by all means.—ED. Sols'. Dept.]

ACCOUNTANTS PREPARING DEEDS, &c.—Will any of your readers be good enough to inform me whether an auctioneer or accountant can prepare legal documents, under seal or otherwise, such as making wills and passing residuary accounts, &c., and charge for same by so doing, do they become amenable to the law, and what is the penalty? Will the Incorporated Law Society entertain a complaint made by a solicitor against such persoon? A SUBSCRIBER.

[Our Correspondent should communicate with the Secretary of the Legal Practitioners' Society, at the office of this Journal.—ED.]

ARTICLES.—We have noticed in your issue of the 13th inst., a reference to the case of Ex parte Hayward (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422, Q.B.), being an application made to allow a clerk's service to be reckoned from the date of his articles, instead of from the day of filing the affidavit required with the emolument, the clerk having been misled by the Stamp Act 1870, sect. 43, under which the Board of Inland Revenue refused to stamp the articles within six months after execution, except upon payment of the penalty of £10. It is with regard to this latter decision that we—and we venture to think, the Profession generally—will be chiefly interested. The section 43 above referred to is as follows: "Save as hereinbefore provided, articles of clerkship are not to be stamped at any time after the expiration of six months from the date thereof, except upon payment of penalties as follows, &c." Nothing in the Act previous to this section in any way has reference to articles of clerkhip, therefore there can be no exception to its operation. Mr. McKellar, who appeared for the applicant in the case of Ex parte Hayward, stated in reply to Mr. Justice Blackburn, that he presumed it was upon the authority of the 34 Geo. 3 c. 14, s. 10, which enacts: "That all vellum, parchment, and paper liable to the duties hereby charged, shall before the same shall be engrossed, printed or written upon, be brought to the head office for stamping." That the Board of Inland Revenue refused to stamp the articles without the penalty. Mr. Justice Blackburn then asked, "Has not that section been repealed?" the reply was, "I should think by inference the Stamp Act of 1870 must be taken to have repealed it," to which Mr. Justice Blackburn adds: "The words are not strong enough for that, but the Legislature could not in 1870 have been aware of the existence of the old provision, and the applicant seems to have been most excusably misled by the Stamp Act." Notwithstanding this, we think there is no doubt that the statute of 34 Geo. 3, c. 14, has been wholly repealed by the Inland Revenue Repeal Act 1870, sect. 2 of which runs thus: "The enactments described in the schedule to this Act, are hereby repealed, subject to the exceptions in the said schedule mentioned," &c. The Act of 34 Geo. 3, c. 14, being placed in the schedule in this wise:

Session and chapter.	Title or Abreviated Title.	Extent of Repeal.
* * *	* * *	* * *
34 Geo. 3, c. 14	An Act for granting to His Majesty certain stamp duties, &c.	The whole Act.

If then, this Act has been repealed, upon what authority can the Board of Inland Revenue refuse to stamp articles of clerkship within six months of their execution without a penalty? Surely the intention of the Legislature, as expressed in the 43rd section of the Stamp Act, is that they should. And irrespective of the intention of the Legislature when passing the Act, the words of the section we consider are in themselves conclusive. We can only regret that the case of Ex parte Hayward came before the court upon a different point, as there are numbers in the Profession who have been led into a similar error—if error it be. We trust that very soon the point may be argued before, and settled by, a more satisfactory tribunal than, the Board of Inland Revenue.

HARVEY AND ADDISON.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

GRAHAM (Lucy), Kensington, Rock Ferry, Chester, spinster, £132 12s. 1d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Lucy Wilson, wife of Wm. Wilson, formerly Lucy Graham, spinster.

PENNEY (Wm. Page), Westbourne-villa, New North-road, St. John's-wood, Middlesex, gentleman, one dividend on the sum of £500 Reduced Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, Charlotte Annie Penney, acting executrix of Wm. Page Penney, deceased.

TOTTIE (Thos. Wm.), Leeds, solicitor. £200 Three per Cent. Annuities; claimants, John Wm. Tottie, and Margaret Tottie, spinster, executors of Thos. Wm. Tottie, deceased.

YORKE (Juliana Frances Anne), Thrapston, Northampton, widow. One dividend on the sum of £4310 4s. 2d., Three per Cent. Annuities; claimant, said Juliana F. Anne Yorke.

APPOINTMENT UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

ST. PETER'S COLLEGE, Eaton-square.—Creditors to send in by Jan. 3 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to Wm. Edwards, 18, King-street, Cheapside, London, Jan. 12, at the Chambers of V.C. B., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

CONGDON (Robert), Fowey, Cornwall, gentleman. Jan. 5; John Barnard, solicitor, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, Middlesex. Jan. 19. M. R., at eleven o'clock.

MASON (Geo.), Highgate House, Clayton Heights, York, spinner and manufacturer. Dec. 22; R. H. Davies, solicitor, 3, Furnival's-inn, London. Jan 13; M. R. at twelve o'clock.

MATER (Robert), formerly of Great Winchester-street, London, merchant, late residing in the Isle of Man. Jan. 9; M. M. Johnson, solicitor, 20, Austinfriars, London. Jan. 16; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ORMEROD (Geo.), Higher Rose-grove, Habergham Eaves, Whalley, Lancaster, gentleman. Dec. 31; Hall and Baldwin, solicitors, Clitheroe. Jan. 10; V. C. H., at eleven o'clock.

WALKER (David), Rise-end, Middleton, Wartsworth, Derby, victualler. Jan. 13; B. L. Barrow, solicitor, Matlock Bath, Derby. Jan. 19; V. C. M., at twelve o'clock.

WELD (Jane Charlotte Baroness), formerly of East Woodhay, Southampton, afterwards of 75, Victoria-street, Westminster, and late of Ostend, Belgium, widow. Jan. 5; Jas. V. Harting, solicitor, 24, Lincoln's-inn-velds, London. Jan. 19; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

AMYS (John D.), lately residing at Epping, Essex, and carrying on business there and at Harlow, as an attorney and solicitor. Feb. 7; Wm. Pearson, Esq., Redgrove, Epping, Essex.

BARNETT (Francis L.), 5, Roebuck-terrace, Great Dover-street, Southwark, Surrey, pawnbroker. Jan. 23; W. W. Comins, solicitor, 34, Great Portland-street, Middlesex.

BESENNERS (Wm.), late of Humffray, Ballarat East, Colony of Victoria, journalist. Jan. 31; E. Flax and Leadbetter, solicitors, 158, Leadenhall-street, London.

BROWN (Sarah G.), Woodbridge, Suffolk, widow. Jan. 15; W. W. Welton, solicitor, Woodbridge.

BULLIMAN (Richard), Newnham, Northampton, retired servant. Jan. 1; C. B. Roche, solicitor, Daventry.

CHAPMAN (Martha), formerly of 2, Portland-place, Brighton, Sussex, late of 13, Cambridge-square, Hyde-park, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 15; Fladgate, Clarke, and Smith, solicitors, 40, Craven-street, Strand, Middlesex.

CHEVALIER (Rev. Temple), formerly of Durham, and of Esh, Durham, clerk, professor of mathematics in the University of Durham, but late of the city of Durham, clerk, canon of Durham Cathedral. Feb. 2; T. Maddison, jun., solicitor, 43, Sadler-street, Durham.

CLEMENT (Richard), 20, Wilton-crescent, Knightsbridge, Middlesex. Jan. 15; Hampden Clement, 20, Wilton-crescent, Knightsbridge.

EDMISTON (Chas. S.), 5, Charing-cross, Middlesex and Beckenham, Kent, waterproofer. Jan. 31; Wm. Groves, solicitor, 28, Great George-street, Westminster.

ENGLAND (William) 25, St. Ann's-road, Brixton-road, Surrey, gentleman. Feb. 1; Withall and Compton, solicitors, 19, Great George-street, Westminster.

GOWER (Jabez S.), formerly of the Royal Horse Repository, Barbican, London, and Leigham Holme St. Leatham, Surrey, late of Leicester Lodge, West Brighton, Sussex, Esq. Jan. 24; Walker and Co., solicitors, 5, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOE (Richard), 5, St. James's-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, packing case maker. Jan. 30; Carter and Bell, solicitors, 106, Leadenhall-street, London.

HUNTER (Edwin), Sheffield, scissor manufacturer. Jan. 14; Burbeary and Smith, solicitors, 16, Campo-lane, Sheffield.

JENKINSON (Rev. Geo.), Belford, Northumberland. Jan. 15; S. Sanderson, solicitor, Berwick-upon-Tweed.

LOVE (Henry). 46, St. Peter-st, Mile End, Middlesex, builder, and proprietor of the Two Beehives, Park-street, Bromley, Middlesex. Jan. 6; M. K. Braund, solicitors, 3, Furnival's-inn, London.

MORRIS (Nathaniel), Bolton-le-Moors, Lancaster, shopkeeper. Jan. 9; Greenhalgh and Finney, solicitors, 8, Acre-field, Bolton-le-Moors.

PARISH (Mary A.), formerly of Oldbury, Worcester, late of 1, Gravelly-hill, near Birmingham, widow. March 1; Sanders and Smith, solicitors, High-street, Dudley, Worcestershire.

POOLE (Jas.), Wick House, Westbury-upon-Trym, near Bristol, Esq. Jan. 21; Fussell and Co., solicitors, Liverpool-chmbs, Corn-street, Bristol.

TUDGE (Chas.), Llanvair Hall, Salop, farmer. Dec. 13; Thomas Weyman, solicitor, Ludlow, Salop.

WEBB (Col. Edwd. A. B.), formerly of 9, St. James's-street, Middlesex, late of 40, Gay-street, Bath. Feb. 8; Thos. W. Gibbs, solicitor, 4, Northumberland-buildings, Bath.

WILLIAMS (James), St. Weonards, Hereford, farmer. Feb. 1; Rev. Chas. J. Westropp, Wormbridge, Hereford.

WILLOUGHBY (Henry), Dartmouth-grove, Blackheath, Kent, Esq. Jan. 16; W. A. Willoughby, solicitor, 4, Lancaster place, Strand, Middlesex.

WINMILL (Thomas), Park House, Clyths-square, Newport, Mons., gentleman. Feb. 1; W. J. Lloyd, solicitor, Bank-chambers, Newport.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Tuesday, Dec. 16.

By Messrs. VENTON, BULL, and COOPER, at the Mart.

Lancashire,—A contingent life interest in landed estates, yielding £38,000 per annum, life aged 34 years—sold for £3150.

Reversionary interest in one-ninth and one-third of one-ninth of a sum of £32,000; also one-ninth and one-third of one-ninth of £2,116 8s. Bank Annuities divisible in 1902—sold for £2315.

Wednesday, Dec. 17.

By Messrs. FAREBROTHER, LYE, and Co., at the Mart.

Notting-hill.—No. 15, Carlton-road, term 91 years—sold for £340.

South Penge,—No. 4, Derwent-road, term 91 years—sold for £490.

By Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD, at the Mart.

Bayswater.—No. 11, Pembridge-terrace, freehold—sold for £700.

Brixton.—A freehold ground-rent of £26 5s. per annum—sold sor £330.

ELECTION LAW.

MANCHESTER COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Dec. 8, 1873.

(Before J. A. RUSSELL, Esq., Q.C.)

Re THE EXCHANGE WARD ELECTION v. BATTY.

Municipal election—Application under the Ballot Act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33) for inspection of marked register of voters and voting papers and counterfoils, a petition having been filed in the Court of Common Pleas against the return of a Councillor—Rule nisi granted.

THIS was an application in the matter of the petition which has been filed in the Common Pleas by Mr. J. Nield against the return of Mr. Batty for exchange Ward.

Ambrose appeared for the petitioner.

The application was heard in the Judge's private room.

Ambrose said the petition had been presented against Mr. Batty on the ground, among others, that he had not been elected by a majority of votes, the votes having been miscounted. That was one of the grounds upon which, by the provisions of the Corrupt Practices at Elections Act, a petition might be presented. There were other and additional grounds in this case.

His HONOUR.—The first question is what the number of votes really was.

Ambrose.—Yes. The petition also alleges that the votes were not fairly and accurately counted.

His HONOUR read the petition and an affidavit which had been filed by the petitioner. After reciting the facts alleged in the petition, Mr. Nield went on to say that he had reason to believe that many of the votes given for Mr. Batty were duplicate votes of persons who had previously voted at one or other of the wards on the 1st Nov. He had therefore instructed his solicitor to apply to the town clerk for an inspection of the documents in his custody "other than ballot papers or counterfoils," but the request had been refused. Letters were also read which had been passed between the town clerk and Mr. C. J. Hall, the petitioner's solicitor. The latter pointed out that by rule 42 of the first schedule of the Ballot Act it is enacted that all documents forwarded by a returning officer in pursuance of the Act to the clerk of the Crown in Chancery, other than ballot papers or counterfoils, "shall be open to public inspection" at such times and places as the clerk may direct. In the second schedule, by rule 64, sub-section B, it is enacted that all ballot papers and other documents which in the case of a parliamentary election are forwarded to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, shall in the case of a municipal election be delivered to the town clerk, and the provisions of part 1 in respect to the inspection, production, and destruction of such ballot papers and documents, and to copies of them, shall apply respectively to the ballot papers and documents in the custody of the town clerk. Mr. Hall held it to be clear from these enactments that all documents (other than ballot papers and counterfoils) in the custody of the town clerk relating to an election were open to public inspection. He desired to inspect the register of voters, and also the marked list, used by the returning officers at each ward in the city. Sir Joseph Heron wrote, in reply, that there was no doubt some difficulty in determining what might be the meaning of the clauses which referred to the powers and duties of the town clerk in relation to the production of documents in his custody, but it was not necessary to go into that question. By the 29th rule of the first schedule of the Ballot Act the presiding officer was directed, at the close of the poll, to make up in a separate packet, sealed with his own seal and the seal of the candidates or their agents, "the marked copies of the register of voters and the counterfoils of the ballot papers." The 37th rule provided that he should not open that packet; and the 41st rule said that "no person shall, except by order of the House of Commons or any tribunal having cognisance of petitions, open the sealed packet of counterfoils after it has been once sealed up." He (the Town Clerk) must, therefore, necessarily decline to give the inspection which Mr. Hall asked for; and he added that, in his own opinion, no inspection of the marked register in any case could be had unless under an order of the County Court.

Ambrose, after the reading of the correspondence, said he thought the Town Clerk was to a certain extent right in the objection which he had taken. Although by the 42nd rule it was clear the Legislature intended that the public should be entitled to inspect the marked register of voters at any time, as a public document, yet, by what must have been a mistake, a previous section enacted that the marked register and the counterfoils of the ballot papers should be put into one packet and sealed up. The Legislature, in fact, gave the public permission to inspect that which could not be seen.

His HONOUR.—They gave the public the right to inspect the outside.

Ambrose said he thought there would be no difficulty about it after he had got an order from the court. His application was, first, for an order to inspect the counted and rejected papers, and the counterfoils. Then if he satisfied the court that he ought to have that order the seals would be broken, the marked register would be open, and the town clerk would have no difficulty in complying with his demand, or rather right, founded on the 42nd rule, to see the marked register. He asked for an order to that effect.

His HONOUR said it should be done most undoubtedly; but suggested that the learned counsel should take a rule nisi.

Ambrose said that would accomplish his object exactly.

Dec. 13.—To-day the rule was made absolute by consent that the Town Clerk should produce to the petitioner and respondent respectively, and to their respective attorneys and agents, at the Town Hall, on the 22nd inst., and on such following days (Sundays excepted) as the parties might require, the following books, papers, and documents—namely, 1, the rejected ballot papers relating to the said election for Exchange Ward: 2, the counterfoils of the ballot papers relating to the same election; 3, the counted ballot papers; 4, the ballot paper account; 5, the unused and spoiled ballot papers; 6, the tendered ballot papers; 7, the tendered votes list and list of votes marked by the presiding officer, and statement of the number of voters whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer, under the heads "physical incapacity," "Jews," "unable to read," and the declaration of inability to read; 8, the marked copy of the register of voters for the election for the office of councillor, which was holden on the said first day of November in each of the following wards of the city of Manchester, namely—Exchange, St. Clement's, New Cross, All Saints', St. George's, Medlock-street, Ardwick, and Cheetham Wards; and the burgess roll for the said city of Manchester. The order proceeded: "That Sir Joseph Heron do at or upon the said production and inspection, in the presence of the parties authorised to attend the inspection, unseal all and every the packets and parcels wherein the before-named books, papers, documents, and other articles are inclosed or contained, and that he the said Sir Joseph Heron do by himself, or by some person or persons to be by him appointed for the purpose, attend on such production and inspection during the whole time thereof: and, further, that the said Sir Joseph Heron and such other persons shall take and use all such proper measures and precautions as he shall deem necessary, in order that the mode in which any particular elector has voted shall not be discovered, and in order that all such books, papers, and documents as are to be produced and inspected shall be safely kept from loss, damage, or other matter or thing whereby the same or any of them shall be injured, prejudiced, or altered in any wise."

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

CHARITY—SCHOOL TRUSTEES—TRANSFER TO SCHOOL BOARD—CHARITY COMMISSIONERS—APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL TRUSTEES—TRUSEEE ACT 1850, s. 32—APPEAL.—By two deeds, made in 1838 and 1849, the two joint rectors of a parish were appointed trustees of a Church of England School. In 1871, it having become necessary to appoint a new master, the then rectors could not concur in any appointment, and the school was closed. A school board having been elected in the district, it was then proposed that the school should be transferred to the board, under sect. 23 of the Education Act of 1870, which requires a majority of two-thirds of the trustees to effect such a transfer. With this view a memorial was presented to the Charity Commissioners, asking them to appoint three additional trustees, so that the requisite majority might be obtained. This course was opposed by one and supported by the other of the two joint rectors. The commissioners, however, made an order appointing three additional trustees, all of whom were churchmen, one of them being chairman of the school board. On a petition by the opposing rector, by way of appeal from the order, under sect. 8 of the Charitable Trusts Act 1853, praying for the discharge of the order: Held, on dismissing the petition with costs, that it is no objection to such an order, notwithstanding sect. 5 of the Charitable Trusts Act 1860, that the commissioners have made it on an application of a contentious character. Observations on Lord Romilly's judgment in Re Hackney Charities (36 L. J., N. S., 169, Ch.; 4 De G. J. & S. 588). The 28th and 32nd sections of the Charitable Trusts Act 1853, give the jurisdiction to appoint trustees to the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellors in cases in which it was previously necessary to file an information, bill, or petition, and by the Act of 1860 this jurisdiction is transferred to the Charity Commission: Held, that the power to appoint additional trustees is clear under the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery; that sect. 32 of the Trustee Act 1850, gives a statutory power for that purpose, and therefore that such a power is vested in the commissioners. The majority of two-thirds of the school trustees required by the Education Act anticipates any objection to the transfer of a school whose trustees are required to be churchmen. The court will not, upon appeal, interfere with the exercise of discretion by the commissioners, except in a very strong case of miscarriage of justice, and such discretion is properly exercised in a case where in consequence of differences between the existing trustees, the school is closed, and education denied to the children of the district: Semble that neither the Court of Chancery nor the Charity Commissioners have power to remove ex-officio trustees: (Re Burnham National Schools; ex parte Bates, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S., 495. M. R.)

BILL OF SALE—AGREEMENT NOT TO REGISTER—RENEWAL—17 & 18 VICT. c. 36.—At the beginning of March 1872, it was agreed by the plaintiff and a person who owed him money that the latter should grant a bill of sale upon his furniture as security for a debt which ought then to have been paid to the plaintiff, that the bill of sale was to be kept renewed for twelve months, and that neither it nor the renewals should be registered during that period, unless the grantor should get into difficulties in the meantime. In pursuance of this agreement a bill of sale was executed on the 8th March, and a fresh bill of sale on the 27th March, but the first bill of sale remained in posession of the plaintiff unregistered and uncancelled. On the 15th April the plaintiff, having learnt that the said grantor was in difficulties, duly filed the second bill of sale dated the 27th March, and on the 20th April took possession of the furniture under it: on the 24th April, the sheriff seized the said furniture under a fi. fa. obtained by the defendant in an action against the grantor of the bill of sale. Held, in an interpleader issue, that the second bill of sale was valid against the execution creditor. Smale v. Burr, L. Rep. 8 C. P. 64; 27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 555, affirmed: (Ramsden v. Lupton, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 510. Ex. Ch.)

RIGHT OF WAY—GRANT—LEVEL CROSSINGS.—By the construction of a railway, some land belonging to the Crown was taken, and other adjoining Crown land was severed from the rest. The railway company were required by their Act to make such convenient communications across the railway, where it should be carried through or across Crown lands, as should be necessary for the convenient enjoyment and occupation of the Crown lands. The company accordingly made two level crossings. The severed land was, at the time these crossings were made, marsh or mud land, but it had since been reclaimed, and several houses built upon it. Held, that the owners and occupiers of these houses had a right to use the level crossings, as the right of way was not restricted to the "convenient occupation" of the land, for the purpose for which it was used at the time the crossings were made, but extended to the "convenient occupation" of the land, for any purpose to which it might subsequently be applied: (United Land Company v. The Great Eastern Railway Company, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 498. V.C. M.)

COMPANY LAW

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

CONTRIBUTORY—SHARES ALLOTTED IN PAYMENT OF A DEBT.—Shares in a company were allotted to a creditor in satisfaction of a debt due by the company. Subsequently the company gave the creditor a debenture for the amount of the debt, which was treated as subsisting, but the creditor retained the shares which had been allotted to him, and agreed to surrender them on payment of the debenture. Held, that, by the allotment of the shares in satisfaction of the debt, the debt ceased to exist, and that the creditor having taken the shares in satisfaction of his debt, could not be placed on the list of contributories in respect of the shares. Decision of Bacon, V.C. reversed: (Re The Matlock, &c., Company, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 441. L.JJ.)

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Bath	Monday, Jan. 5	T. W. Saunders, Esq.	14 days	J. Taylor.
Bedford	Monday, Jan. 5	J. T. Abdy, Esq., LL.D.	14 days	M. Whyley.
Berwick-on-Tweed	Friday, Jan. 2	W. T. Greenhow, Esq.	5 days	S. Sanderson.
Birmingham	Monday, Dec. 29	A. R. Adams, Esq., Q.C.		T. R. T. Hodgson.
Bolton	Tuesday, Jan. 6	S. Pope, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	J. Gordon.
Bridgnorth	Friday, Dec. 26	W. Cope, Esq.	14 days	W. D. Batte.
Canterbury	Wednesday, Jan. 8	G. Francis, Esq.	Statutory	H. T. Sankey.
Carmarthen	Monday, Jan. 5	B. T. Williams, Esq.	10 days	J. H. Barker.
Chester	Friday, Jan. 2	H. Lloyd, Esq.	14 days	J. Walker.
Chichester	Tuesday, Jan. 6	J. J. Johnson, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	E. Titchener.
Colchester	Thursday, Jan. 1	F. A. Philbrick, Esq.	8 days	J. S. Barnes.
Deal	Friday, Jan. 2	R. J. Biron, Esq.	2 days	E. Drew.
Derby	Tuesday, Jan. 6	G. Boden, Esq., Q.C.		J. Gadsby.
Devonport	Thursday, Jan. 8	H. T. Cole, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	G. H. E. Rundle.
Doncaster	Friday, Jan. 2	E. J. Meynell, Esq.	10 days	E. Nicholson.
Dover	Monday, Dec. 29	Sir W. H. Bodkin, Knt.	2 days	G. W. Ledger.
Faversham	Monday, Jan. 5	G. E. Dering, Esq.		F. F. Giraud.
Gloucester	Tuesday, Jan. 13	C. S. Whitmore, Esq., Q.C	7 days	F. W. Jones.
Great Yarmouth	Monday, Jan. 5	Simms Reeve, Esq.	10 days	I. Preston, jun.
Hastings	Friday, Jan. 16	R. H. Hurst, Esq., M.P.	14 days	G. Meadows.
Hythe	Saturday, Jan. 3	R. J. Biron, Esq.	8 days	W. S. Smith.
King's Lynn	Thursday, Jan. 15	D. Brown, Esq., Q.C.		T. G. Archer.
Kingston-on-Hull	Thursday, Jan. 8	S. Warren, Esq., Q.C.	Statutory	R. Champney.
Leeds	Thursday, Jan. 1	J. B. Maule, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	C. Bulmer.
Margate	Wednesday, Dec. 31	F. J. Smith, Esq.		H. T. Sankey.
New Windsor	Monday, Jan. 12	A. M. Skinner, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	H. Darvill.
Portsmouth	Friday, Jan. 9	Mr. Serjeant Cox	10 days	J. Howard.
Rochester	Friday, Jan. 2	F. Barrow, Esq.	8 days	W. W. Hayward.
Sandwich	Thursday, Jan. 1	R. J. Biron, Esq.		T. L. Surrage.
Scarborough	Monday, Jan. 2	A. W. Simpson, Esq.	10 days	J. J. P. Moody.
Shrewsbury	Monday, Jan. 5	W. F. F. Boughey, Esq.	14 days	R. Clarke.
Tewkesbury	Friday, Jan. 2	J. Fallon, Esq.	Statutory	F. J. Brown.
Walsall	Wednesday, Dec. 31	W. J. Neale, Esq.	10 days	S. Wilkinson.
Wenlock	Saturday, Jan. 3	T. S. Pritchard, Esq.	14 days	E. B. Potts.
Worcester	Thursday, Jan. 8	F. T. Streeten, Esq.	10 days	R. T. Rea.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—LIVERPOOL.

Monday, Dec. 15.

(Before QUAIN, J., and a Common Jury.)

REG. v. LANGFIELD.

Rape—Complaint made by prosecutrix admissible in evidence.

Prisoner was indicted for rape committed on a girl between 10 and 11 years of age.

Held by Quain, J., that what the girl said to her aunt when making complaint as to prisoner's conduct was receivable in evidence.

W. HENRY LANGFIELD was indicted for having at West Derby, on the 17th Sept. 1873, feloniously assaulted and ravished one Margaret Fisher Langfield, who was the daughter of the prisoner, and between 10 and 11 years of age. In the course of the case for the prosecution the aunt of the girl was called as a witness. The girl had complained to her of the prisoner's conduct, and it was proposed to ask the aunt what the girl said when she made the complaint to her.

On behalf of the prisoner it was objected that although the fact that a complaint had been made might be given in evidence, yet that the terms of that complaint could not be received in evidence against the prisoner.

QUAIN, J.—What the girl said on the occasion of her making the complaint is most material, and of the very essence of the inquiry. He entertained a very decided opinion on the point, and thought the evidence clearly admissible.

Prisoner was found guilty of the attempt; and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment.

Addison for the prosecution.

Potter for the prisoner.

NOTE.—The late Mr. Justice Willes, when at Liverpool on Circuit, has more than once laid down in similar cases that the proper form of question was, "Did you complain to ——— of what the prisoner had done?"

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

POOR RATE—DOCK RATE—TENANT'S PROFITS—INTEREST ON DEBT — DEDUCTIONS. — The Mersey docks are vested in the appellants, who are authorised to collect certain duties and rates under various Acts of Parliament; but the duties leviable must be reduced if more than sufficient to pay off the mortgages, and the charges of management, of collection of rates, and of improving, repairing, and maintaining the docks and works. There are no shareholders, and no member derives advantage from his execution of the trusts. The docks were erected and purchased with borrowed money, and the interest is paid out of the income. No provision of the Acts of Parliament is to affect the liability of the docks to local or parochial rates. Under an Act of 1857 the appellants purchased certain town dues from the corporation of Liverpool, the surplus of which, after payment of interest upon the sum fixed as consideration for the purchase goes into their general revenue account. Held, that in assessing the appellants to the poor's rate no deduction should be allowed for tenant's profits, nor for interest upon their debt: that the value of the town dues ought not to be added to the assessment; that the appellants were entitled to a deduction for average deterioration, as well as for the actual repairs of each year; and that the expenses of collecting the rates, which should be deducted from the amount, might be fairly computed by dividing the whole expenses of collecting the appellants' revenue rateably according to the respective amounts of dock rates and town dues: (Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Overseers of Liverpool, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 454. Q.B.)

LARCENY BY BAILEE—SUMMARY CONVICTION. —The prosecutors (boot and shoe manufacturers) gave out to their workmen leather and materials to be worked up, which were entered in the men's books and charged to their debit. The men might either take them to their own homes to work up, or work them up upon the prosecutors' premises; but in the latter case they paid for the seats provided for them. When the work was done, they received a receipt for the delivery of the leather and materials and payment of the work. If the leather and materials were not redelivered, they were required to be paid for. The prisoner Daynes was in the prosecutors' employ, and received materials for twelve pairs of boots; he did some work upon them, but instead of returning them, sold them to the prisoner Warner. These materials were entered in the prosecutors' book to Danes' debit, but omitted by mistake to be entered in Daynes' book. Held, that Daynes could not be convicted of larceny as a bailee under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3, as the offence of which he had been guilty was punishable summarily under 13 Geo. 2, c. 8. Quære, whether the transaction, as between the prosecutor and his men, did not amount to a sale of the leather and materials? (Reg. v. Daynes, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 468. C. Cas. R.)

MARITIME LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SALVAGE—TERMINATION OF SERVICE—PLACE OF SAFETY.—Where a steam tug is engaged to render assistance to a ship aground in the night time, and succeeds in getting her off, and takes her to a safe anchorage for the night, and lies alongside of her till morning, the salvage service does not end on the ship being anchored, but the steam tug is entitled to reward for the time she lies alongside the ship ready to render further assistance if required: (The Philotaxe, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 516. Adm.)

SALVAGE—ENGAGEMENT TO RENDER ASSISTANCE—SIGNALS OF DISTRESS—UNCOMPLETED SERVICE.—Where a steamship has been engaged to render assistance to another in distress by towing her to her port of destination, and after several hours' towing, the ships are parted by no fault of the salvor, and the conduct of the ship in distress leads the salvor to the honest belief that his services are no longer required, and thereupon the latter proceeds to her own destination, he is not thereby deprived of his right to salvage reward, but upon the other vessel arriving safe in port by her own exertions, may proceed against her in respect of the services actually rendered: (The Nellie, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 516. Adm.)

SPECIMENS OF A CODE OF MARINE INSURANCE LAW.

By F. O. CRUMP, Barrister-at-Law.

(Continued from page 110.)

DEVIATION AND CHANGE OF VOYAGE.

Delay.

Unusual and extraordinary delay in the prosecution of a voyage and prolongation of its period, without necessity or just cause, after the risk has begun, is a deviation.

Arn. 4 edit. 451.

There being liberty to stay, and additional delay being caused by trading, there is a deviation.

Arn. 4 edit. 448,

Inglis v. Vaux, 3 Camp, 436.

Goods being insured until landed, any unusual and unreasonable delay in landing them has the effect of a deviation:

Phillips, sect. 998.

If, owing to some unreasonable and unexcused delay in the course of performing her outward voyage, the ship is prevented from" arriving at the port "at and from which she is insured for her homeward voyage until an unreasonably long time after the subscription of the policy, such delay is a deviation although the outward voyage is totally foreign to the underwriter on the homeward policy:

Mount v. Larkins, 8 Bing. 108; Freeman v. Taylor, Ibid. 124.

Ports—Geographical order.

A ship being insured on a voyage to ports of discharge which are not specifically named in the policy, she must visit such ports in the geographical order of their distance from the port of departure. If she fails to do so it is a deviation:

Clason v. Simmonds, 6 T. Rep. 533; Andrews v. Mellish, 5 Hunt. 496, 502.

Ports—Order specified in Policy.

The ports being named in a particular order in the policy, that order must be observed although the sequence is not geographical:

Beatson v. Haworth, 6 T. Rep. 531; Marsden v. Reid, 3 East. 571.

The ship, however, may visit ports within the scope of the policy that lie wide of, or even, in special cases, that lie diametrically opposite to, the direct course of the voyage, provided this be done for purposes connected with the main object of the adventure.

Bragg v. Anderson, 4 Taunt. 229.

Arn. 1 edit. 367.

Ports—Re-visiting.

To re-visit a port already touched at or to sail backwards and forwards from one port to the other, unless liberty be given expressly or by implication, is a deviation.

Arn. 4 edit. 431; 1 Phillips, sect. 1014.

Leave to sail backwards and forwards "or to touch one or more times," authorizes intermediate passages.

Bise v. Fletcher, 1 Dougl. 271.

Thorndike v. Bordman.

Two Tracks.

When there are two tracks to a terminus ad quem, one of which is specified in the policy, it is a deviation to take the other; and if it was the settled determination of the assured at the time of the execution of the policy to adopt the latter, the underwriter is discharged:

Millwood v. Blakes, 7 T. Rep. 162

Letters of Marque.

Clauses empowering the ship to cruise and carry letters of marque are strictly construed.

Leave to chase, capture, and man prizes, does not extend to convoying the prize afterwards:

Lawrence v. Sydebotham, 6 East, 45, 52.

American Law.—This is no deviation unless involving delay or departure from the direct course of the voyage:

1 Phillips, sect. 1030.

WAIVER.

The forfeiture of a claim under a policy incurred by deviation may be waived in writing, but not by a merely verbal consent to waive it after it has occurred.

Phillips, s. 1040.

A prior deviation is not impliedly waived, although known to the underwriter at the time he accepts the risk, in case the policy in the usual way describes the voyage so that the deviation in question is a breach of the condition implied in such description.

Redman v. Lowdon, 3 Camp. 503; 5 Taunt 462; Arn. 4th edit. 418.

American Law.—The forfeiture is cancelled by the fact of the previous deviation being known to the underwriter.

Ph. sect. 1041; Coles v. Marine Insurance Company 3 Wash. C. C. 159.

SCOTCH LAW.—The Jedburgh Magistrates have determined to enforce the law against persons who may be convicted of swearing in the public streets.

COUNTY COURTS.

BIRMINGHAM COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 27.

(Before H. W. Cole, Q.C., Judge.)

Worcester City and County Banking Company v. Mountford.

Action to recover the value of a bank cheque.

This action was brought to recover £15 4s. 1d., being the value of a cheque upon the plaintiffs' bank, obtained by Joseph Shirt, and endorsed by the defendant.

Young (instructed by Messrs. Barlow and Smith) appeared for the plaintiffs, and Nathan (instructed by Edwards) for the defendant.

The opening statement of the plaintiffs' counsel was to the effect that the plaintiffs had their central offices in Worcester and branch establishments in other parts of the country, one of which was at Evesham, and another at Birmingham. Some time ago a person named John Shirt drew a cheque on the Evesham branch in favour of the defendant for £14 18s. The defendant went to the Birmingham branch for the purpose of getting the cheque cashed, when the cashier refused payment. At an interview between the defendant and Mr. Martin Abel, a managing director of the banking company, the defendant explained that he did not wish to pass the cheque through his own bankers, because they had certain bills belonging to Shirt, which he had got them to discount, and in the event of the cheque being dishonoured there might be a difficulty in getting the bills renewed. Upon that Mr. Abel consented to cash the cheque upon the responsibility of the defendant himself. The cheque was subsequently dishonoured by the Evesham branch, and in consequence thereof the present action was brought against the defendant as the indorser of the bill.

Young referred to the case of Woodland v. Fear (7 E. & B., 819), in which it was held that banking companies having various branches at which separate accounts were kept, and from which cheque books upon the particular branches were issued were, in the estimation of the law, separate banking companies; and that, therefore, where a cheque drawn upon one branch had been cashed by another, and subsequently dishonoured, the parties were in the same position as though the banks were perfectly distinct.

The case on behalf of the defendant was that the cheque was not endorsed to the plaintiffs at Birmingham by the defendant with the intention of passing the property and the cheque to them, but only in order that they might get the money from the branch bank. It was further contended that an arrangement had been made between the defendant and the banking manager at Evesham that that bank should continue to honour the cheques of Shirt; but it was explained on behalf of the plaintiffs that at the time the conversation took place, Shirt had an overdraft of £370, and the bank at Evesham consented not to press him for the overdraw, but expressly said that they should not honour any of his cheques beyond that amount unless they had funds in hand for the purpose. Evidence was given on the part of the plaintiffs to show that at the time the cheque was drawn the bank had no funds in hand belonging to Shirt. The defendant was called, and in examination in chief said that he had endorsed the cheque because he knew he could not get the money without it.

Young asked the judge whether it was necessary, under such circumstances, to cross-examine the defendant at all, inasmuch as he submitted that it was really an undefended action?

His Honour took that view, but allowed Nathan to reiterate his legal objections.

In giving his decision his Honour reviewed the facts of the case and the arguments adduced on both sides. He said that he considered the result of the evidence was that the cheque was cashed under circumstances which made it rather giving change for a cheque than giving cash for it in the ordinary way. According to the ruling of the court in the case of Kean v. Beard, the defendant might be sued as the endorser of the cheque, and the only defence that could be raised was that which had been attempted, namely, that the defendant in endorsing the cheque had no intention of making himself liable upon it; that it was like a person writing his name on a bank note merely for the purpose of identifying it. He considered, however, that the evidence established the fact that the defendant had endorsed the cheque with the intention of making himself liable upon it, and that it was cashed on the credit of the defendant, and as a cheque bearing his endorsement. It must be conclusive that the defendant had endorsed the cheque, and negotiated it, with the view of getting the money in the way he had, and of being liable for the money received. He had, therefore, come to the conclusion that there was a right on the part of the plaintiffs to maintain this action in the form it had been brought, and accordingly there must be a verdict for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

BRIDPORT COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Nov. 21.

(Before T. E. P. Lefroy, Esq., Judge.)

Spiller v. Bugler.

Husband and wife—Wife's agency.

The fact of a husband supplying his wife from time to time with money necessary to provide for his family negatives her implied agency to pledge his credit.

The plaintiff is a baker, of Barrack-street, and the defendant is a fireman at the Pymore Mills. The parties had appeared before the court on two former occasions, with a view to settle their differences, but each time an adjournment was necessary, and the plaintiff's accounts, which his Honour wished to be satisfactorily put before him, were referred to Mr. Read, clerk to the registrar, and the attorneys in the case, in order that a plain statement of how matters stood might be arrived at. The point at issue was this. Defendant had dealt with the plaintiff for bread for nearly twenty years. Mr. Spiller, in the course of his periodical deliveries, had left bread at Bugler's house for seventeen years, when the latter's wife died. At that time, now three years ago, plaintiff alleged that defendant was £11 15s. 11d. in his debt. On the other hand, Bugler repudiated the claim in toto. His defence was that he had given his wife the whole of his wages—14s. a week—to find household necessaries, and he had no reason to think that she was not paying for the bread weekly. He also asserted that just as his wife was on the eve of death, he, in a conversation with the plaintiff, elicited from him that "she (his wife) was standing all right with him." This admission the plaintiff denied ever having made.

F. W. Gundry again appeared for the plaintiff.

J. A. Day for the defendant.

Mr. Read laid the result of the examination of plaintiff's accounts before his Honour, who read the items as follows:—Due to plaintiff at death of defendant's wife, 5th Sept. 1870, £11 15s. 11d.; bread delivered since, £23 2s. 4d.; money paid by defendant to plaintiff since his wife's death, £19 9s. 5d.: total balance owing, £15 8s. 10d.; deduct the £11 15s. 11d. due at defendant's wife death, balance remaining, £3 12s. 11d. The case was then gone into on its legal merits.

Gundry maintained that the article supplied to the defendant's wife being bread, it was a necessary one; also that there seemed to be the same mode of dealing after defendant's wife's death as before, as shown by the fact that the debt had grown larger since; and he held that it was very discreditable for a man to try to make his dead wife a scapegoat as the defendant was trying to do.

His Honour said he could not exactly adhere to Gundry's proposition that the defendant had been very irregular in his payments since his wife's death, because in three years, out of £23 2s. 4d. he had paid £19 9s. 5d., letting back only £3 12s. 11d. He thought that rather corroborated the fact that the man was a tolerably fair paymaster.

Gundry.—In three years he got £3 12s. 11d. in debt, and in seventeen years, before his wife's death, £11 15s. 11d.; the latter being less taking the average of three years.

Day.—Defendant for the past three years has been paying for a specific purpose—that of satisfying the plaintiff for bread he was then supplying from week to week, and not towards the old debt.

Gundry.—It is one and the same account, and payments could only go to the earliest items.

His Honour.—If a man gives his wife money for household expenses he is not further liable.

Gundry.—But surely it is not the business of a tradesman to ascertain what understanding there is between husband and wife.

His Honour.—He ought to apprise the husband of the fact that his wife was getting in his debt.

Day.—My friend, Mr. Gundry, begs the question altogether. Plaintiff told my client that at his wife's death there was nothing owing.

Gundry was about to quote what he deemed a parallel point settled in his favour.

His Honour interposed by saying that in the Common Pleas it had been decided that where a husband had forbidden a wife privately to buy goods on credit he was no longer liable.

Gundry.—Here the goods were delivered at the defendant's own house.

Day.—To the wife.

Gundry.—At the house. It would break up all the credit in the country if such a debt as that were disallowed; and he then cited the case he had before referred to, which he contended made the husband's authority to the wife binding upon him. This was not like one of those cases where a "tallyman" went and induced a wife to buy finery and jewellery, but the plaintiff had delivered bread which it was absolutely necessary a wife and family should have.

His Honour said he should hold that it was the plaintiff's bounden duty to give the defendant notice of his wife's indebtedness. I am of opinion that the fact of defendant supplying his wife with money to provide for his family from time to time negatives her implied agency at law, and I have less hesitation in this case because I am quite sure substantial justice is done. This ought to be a warning to the plaintiff and all tradesmen to give notice to the husband of the wife's debt. There would be a verdict for £3 12s. 11d. only, the debt incurred by defendant since his wife's death.

[We should like to be referred to the decision which has gone this length. Phillipson v. Hayter was the last decision in the Common Pleas, and that certainly does not support the learned judge. —Ed. L. T.]

BRIGHTON COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Dec. 11.

(Before F. H. Lascelles, Esq., Deputy Judge.)

Smith v. Angove.

Sheriff's fees—Action against attorney for.

This was an action by the officer of the sheriff of Sussex to recover £6 12s., his costs and charges on a levy made under the following circumstances:—

On the 10th June, defendant, who is a London attorney, caused a writ of fi. fa. to be issued and lodged with the town agent of the sheriff, to recover the amount of a judgment debt and costs in an action, in which the defendant resided at Brighton. The following day, the 11th June, the defendant (Angove) received a telegram from the officer in the following words: "Johnson and others v. Graham. Notice served on me. Graham filed his petition for liquidation yesterday. Under these circumstances telegraph reply whether I am to seize or not." The reply to this telegram was: "Seize by all means." The officer having been served with restraining orders, wrote to Mr. Angove on the 17th June, requiring to know whether he should keep his bailiff in until the restraint expired on the 2nd July, or whether he should at once withdraw, and to this Mr. Angove replied on the 21st June, stating that "the sheriff must exercise his own discretion regarding the writ." The officer, did not, however, go out until the 2nd July, on which day Graham's creditors passed a resolution to wind-up his affairs in liquidation, and of which due notice was given. Application was then made to Mr. Angove, by the officer for the payment of his costs and charges, the items of which were—levy fee, £1 1s.; telegram, 1s.; possession money, twenty-two days, at 5s. per day, £5 10s.; total £6 12s. Mr. Angove repudiated all liability, and this action was the result. It should be mentioned that the return to the writ was nulla bona.

Lamb for plaintiff, having opened the case as above, proceeded to read and comment on the case of Newman v. Merriman, reported in 26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 397, which he believed would be relied on by defendant, and with great discrimination to distinguish the present case from it, alleging special employment arising out of defendant's reply to plaintiff's telegram of the 11th June, as the ground of such distinction. In Newman v. Merriman no such employment could be alleged, but in this case he contended his client had a right of action on a quantum meruit, for services rendered. Also, benefit to the execution creditors might have resulted from the acts of the officer, as in the case of a composition being agreed upon, or the proceedings wholly falling through.

Angove, defendant in person, raised and argued the following points, viz., First, that the levy was abortive; secondly, that the officer must be taken as acting throughout on the original instructions derived under the writ; and thirdly, that no express employment was proved. In support of the first point the file of proceedings in Graham's liquidation and the sheriff's return were put in, and Newman v. Merriman cited; and it was submitted that that case must govern the present one, should his Honour be of opinion that no express employment was proved. In support of the second and third points, it was contended that the admission that the writ was duly lodged was sufficient to connect the officer with the sheriff as his servant throughout (per Abinger—Shepherd v. Wheeler, 8 Car. & P. 332; Ramsay v. Eaton, 10 M. & W. 22). Before the passing of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, the law as to the liability incurred by an attorney suing out execution was very unsettled, but in the absence of express employment or interference no general principle whereby the attorney was held liable had been established, Lord Ellenborough laying it down in Bilks v. Havelock (3 Camp. 374), that the writ according to the general rule must be considered as the king's writ, executed by persons appointed by the Crown. The 123rd section of the Act alluded to, however, pointed out how these persons were to be paid, and provided that they might levy the costs and expenses of executing the writ "over and above" the judgment debt and costs (Marquis Salisbury v. The Queen, 29 L. T. Rep. 225). The telegram of the 11th June, sent off by one of the defendant's clerks, was a mere expression of opinion as to the best course to be adopted, and no instructions had been given by defendant ex mero motu. Seizure being made after petition filed, no benefit could arise from it (vide cases in point collected in last edit. Roche and Hazlitt on Bankruptcy) and sheriff should have exercised a proper discretion.

His HONOUR delivered judgment in these words: I have given a great deal of attention to this case, which has been very ably argued. I need not recapitulate the facts, as they are so fresh. I must, however, refer for a moment to these dates and these telegrams. The first telegram to which I need refer is that dated 11th June from Mr. Smith to Mr. Angove, and the reply of the same date, of which the only pertinent words are, "Seize by all means." After that the sheriff's officer wrote on the 13th June that he did not see any object to be gained by his continuing in possession, but no reply is received to this. The next documents that come before me are a letter and also a telegram of the 17th June from the sheriff's officer, "Shall I withdraw my bailiff or not?" Then comes the letter of the 21st June from the defendant, "The sheriff must exercise his discretion regarding the writ of fi. fa." I do not think it necessary for me to take it further or to refer to any other document. Now, there is no doubt that it is an axiom of law that an attorney is not liable to a sheriff's officer unless labour has been performed beneficial to him; but the defendant has admitted here that if any express contract is made an attorney is liable. The question for me to consider is whether or not any express contract was implied in that telegram, and I am distinctly of opinion that there is an express contract. The words are, "Seize by all means." As early as the 13th June Mr. Smith wrote to Mr. Angove, "I do not see any object to be gained by keeping me in possession;" and at last, but not until the 21st June, some further correspondence takes place, when Mr. Angove, wishing to wash his hands of the whole thing, writes and says that the "sheriff must exercise his own discretion regarding the writ of fi. fa." I shall find for the plaintiff for possession up to the 21st June, but no longer.

CHELTENHAM COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Nov. 28.

(Before C. SUMNER, Esq., Judge.)

JOHNSON v. TURNBULL.

Application for new trial—One of the jury a friend of a party—Costs.

Potter said he had to ask his Honour to restrain execution till next court day, when Mr. Boodle would make an application for a new trial on the ground that one of the jury was a friend of the defendant

His HONOUR said Mr. Boodle stated all that at the last hearing.

Potter said he had not gone into the case fully, but he had just been asked to make the application by Mr. Boodle's clerk.

His HONOUR said Mr. Boodle's clerk had asked Mr. Potter to make a hopeless motion.

Stroud said he must ask for the costs of that motion being granted. When his Honour made an order for costs on Saturday last, Mr. Boodle intimated to him that he intended to bring another action, and asked him (Mr. Stroud) where he should like to have that action brought. He replied that it was perfectly immaterial to him where he brought his action, because he was perfectly certain of being successful wherever it was, and as far as that went he left Mr. Boodle to take his own course. That understanding was come to on the day of the court, and on the 26th inst. Mr. Boodle wrote to him inquiring if he intended to apply for a writ of certiorari, as if he did not, he (Mr. Boodle) would bring his action in the County Court. To that he (Mr. Stroud) replied that as then advised he had not the slightest intention of applying for a certiorari; but that he should apply to his Honour to stay further proceedings until the costs in the former abortive action were paid, pursuant to his Honour's order. Yesterday afternoon he received from Mr. Boodle a notice to the effect that he intended to apply to his Honour for a rescindment of the order for costs, on the ground of the misconduct of one of the jury in not intimating to the court the fact that he was intimately acquainted with the defendant; and that if the judge refused to rescind the order for costs, then he should apply for a new trial. He further stated that he should apply for a taxation of costs, and also that the judge might make such other order as he might think fit. He meant to say that Mr. Boodle put so many strings to his bow that he (Mr. Stroud) really did not know which he was going to play upon, and he was, therefore, obliged to come there and bring Dr. Turnbull to defend the very serious attacks which had been made upon his reputation, and which he could not for a single moment allow to go uncontradicted. He did not think his Honour would refuse his order for costs. It was a very serious thing for a medical man to get in an action of that kind, and he believed the taxing master would admit that no undue allowance was made, and in fact if there was any cause of complaint it was on the part of Dr. Turnbull. His Honour would see that a case of that kind involved the very life and livelihood of a professional man, and he was therefore obliged to spare no expense to defend his reputation, and in point of fact instructed him to prepare brief for counsel, which he did, but was obliged to abandon the idea of having counsel there on account of the great expense. All these costs were therefore abortive, and for these Dr. Turnbull would have to pay out of his own pocket. More than that, he would desire to call his Honour's attention to the extreme suddenness of Mr. Boodle's withdrawal. He allowed the case to proceed all the first day, and then when he saw that his client must lose, he decided to withdraw from it, and he (Mr. Stroud) had no intimation of such intention until he came into court on Saturday, and the consequence was he had his witnesses there at a great expense from Gloucester and elsewhere. He submitted that this was an exceedingly vexatious proceeding, and he did think, having regard to all the circumstances, that it was a case in which the defendant ought to have the costs of attending there that day.

Potter pointed out that in any case it was not necessary to have Dr. Turnbull present, and that his expenses therefore ought not to be allowed.

His HONOUR said that it was by no means a matter of course that when an application of that sort was refused the successful party got his costs. When a motion was made and costs were asked for, if notice was given of the motion, as a matter of course costs followed against the unsuccessful party, but where a motion was made without asking for costs, it was not a necessity that costs were given. There was some doubt in the matter, but he believed the defendant had been put to a good deal of unnecessary expense. It was perfectly easy, as Mr. Boodle had made up his mind to withdraw from the case, for him to inform Mr. Stroud of the fact, and thus avoid the expense of his bringing all his witnesses. He thought this was a very vexatious expense, which probably the defendant would never be repaid. Under these circumstances, he thought in refusing the application he ought also to give costs against the plaintiff. At the same time, although perhaps it was right and desirable that Mr. Turnbull should attend there, his presence was not actually required, and he should not allow his costs.

CHORLEY COUNTY COURT.

(Before W. A. HULTON, Esq., Judge.)

Friday, Dec. 12.

HALL v. PENDLEBURY.

Agreement to purchase cottages—Specific performance.

Mutuality need not be expressed on face of agreement, if it can be fairly inferred from the terms used. Certainty as to terms and time not necessarily of the essence of the contract.

The fact of the bargain being a bad one for one of the parties not sufficient reason for setting it aside.

Watson (barrister) for plaintiff.

Edge (barrister) for defendant.

The chief facts of the case are that on the 2nd of May last plaintiff met the defendant in a public house at Chorley, and the latter began to talk about having purchased some property at an auction sale. The plaintiff thereupon said he had some cottages to sell. Pendlebury said he would give him £500 for them, and after the offer had been repeated two or three time plaintiff accepted it, and an agreement was drawn up and signed by each party in presence of witnesses, and the defendant deposited £5. Subsequently, however, defendant repudiated the contract on the ground that he was intoxicated at the time it was entered into. Several witnesses for the plaintiff swore that defendant was sober, while witnesses for the defendant said he had been drinking for a week, and was drunk at the time. This part of the case was decided by a jury, who found a verdict for the plaintiff. Counsel then argued the legal points,

Edge, for the defendant, argued that there was no mutuality in the contract, and that the court could not decree its specific performance, as there was no agreement for the defendant to purchase.

His HONOUR was of opinion that there was no necessity that such an agreement should be expressly stated on the face of the contract. It is sufficient if it can be fairly collected from the terms used.

Another objection was that there was a want of certainty in the terms of the agreement, it being argued that no time was fixed for the payment of the purchase money, or for the purchaser to be let into possession.

His HONOUR thought the omissions were not of the essence of the contract, and that the law would supply them. It was further argued that it would be unfair for the defendant to carry the contract into effect (as the cottages were not worth what they were represented to be), and on this point His Honour said defendant had made a bad bargain. His Honour was further of opinion that defendant at the time the contract was made was sober. After considering all the circumstances of the action, his Honour decreed for a specific performance of the contract, according to the prayer of the plaint.

HASLEMERE COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Dec. 11.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

ALEWYN v. LUFF.

Ejectment—Suspicious deed—New trial—Costs.

A VERDICT in this case was given at the previous trial for the plaintiff.

Hull, solicitor, of Godalming, now made application for a new trial on the ground of surprise in a certain deed which went to show that consideration money was paid in 1862, and also on the ground that such consideration money was never paid. In support of the application Mr. Hull said that he received no notice that the deed of 1862 was in existence, and consequently at the last trial he was taken by surprise, and had no opportunity of disputing it. In support of the latter ground of the application, viz., that the consideration money supposed by the deed of 1862 to have been then paid, and which put the case out of the Statute of Limitations, he would put in three affidavits to show that such consideration money never had been paid. If this money had not been so paid then the action would be barred by the Statute of Limitations, as the plaintiff had no other proof of possession within the period of twenty years. Mr. Hull then put in and read the affidavits of James Teesdale.

Folkard, barrister, instructed by Albery and Lucas, of Midhurst, who opposed the application, objected to the admission of the affidavit on the ground that it was of a hearsay character.

His HONOUR ruled that such affidavit could be read in support of an application for a new trial.

Folkard said that the contents of the affidavit were only evidence in a new form. If it was not evidence, it was a tender of evidence. The affidavit of Teesdale was to the effect that in 1862 or thereabout he drove Hoad (whom the deed put in by Mr. Folkard at the trial showed to have paid the consideration-money) to Godalming to see his lawyer, whose name was Woods. Woods was not satisfied that the property was clear, and he (Teesdale) did not believe Hoad paid any money. The next affidavit was that of John Hoad Tidy, nephew of the Hoad in question (who is dead), stating that he was one of Hoad's executors. He did not believe Hoad paid any money. If he had done so he should have seen an entry of it in Hoad's books, and no such entry existed.

Stephen Pannell, another executor of the estate of the deceased Edward Hoad, made affidavit that he never considered the property in question as belonging to Hoad.

Hull argued that a new trial should be granted, in order to give him an opportunity to call these witnesses. He thought then that their twenty-two years' possession would run against the documentary title on the other side.

His HONOUR said the case of the plaintiff was that the property was conveyed to him both by the mortgagee and mortgagor.

Folkard—We claim under both.

Hull—But they prove that we had twenty-two years' possession, and if we prove that in 1862 no consideration was paid at all, it would affect the groundwork of the whole thing.

Folkard said that the present application was one of the most extraordinary that he had ever heard made, and it was made in the most extraordinary manner. It was attempted to be supported by evidence of the merest hearsay character—evidence that would never be admitted in a trial, even if a new trial were granted. It was hearsay evidence of interested parties given in denial of a deed executed in solemn form, under sign and seal. He challenged his friend to produce a single authority to show that such statements and such affidavits had been received by any court in contradiction of a deed executed under hand and seal, and duly witnessed. He (Mr. Folkard) could not imagine what kind of grounds his friend was going to base his application for a new trial upon. On the ground of surprise he should contend that there was no ground for the application whatever.

His HONOUR intimated that he was of Mr. Folkard's opinion on the ground of surprise.

Hull said that if deeds came by surprise that should be sufficient ground for a new trial.

Folkard said that there was no suggestion that the deed was forged.

His HONOUR.—No doubt the suggestion is that the deed was concocted.

Folkard proceeded to deny the insinuation with some indignation. Was it, he said, to be insinuated that Mr. Marshall, who drew the deed, and who had been, as he (the speaker) was informed, one of the most highly respectable solicitors in the county, would lend his hand to such a transaction as that?

His Honour pointed out that there was no evidence that Mr. Marshall prepared the deed.

Hull.—We have not heard of Mr. Marshall; we believe that the deed was prepared by Mr. Woods himself.

In the course of some further discussion, it transpired that the mortgagee, the mortgagor, and Mr. Marshall were all dead.

Folkard thereupon said that if after a lapse of twelve years such a deed as he had put in was not sufficient evidence, no landed property would be safe; if such a evidence as that proposed to be given to upset the deed was to be admitted, no gentleman's landed estates would be safe. If the matter in point had involved the name of some man who had been prosecuted for perjury, then he would grant that there would be some ground for granting a new trial, but in this case he would contend that there was no ground whatever. Mr. Folkard then went through the affidavits, and argued strongly that they were of a hearsay character. One affidavit, he said, was hearsay upon hearsay.

His Honour.—I shall give a new trial to enable them to test the validity of this deed.

Folkard said he earnestly hoped his Honour would not depart from all precedent and grant a new trial on hearsay evidence. He argued that a new trial should not be granted on another ground, viz., that the other side had shown no evidence that they themselves had a good title. There had not been a single affidavit put in by the other side to show that they had an atom of title. The proper course, Mr. Folkard contended, would be for the other side to bring an action of ejectment against his client. Again, why did they not raise this objection when the deed was produced at the last trial. He would strongly urge that it would be a bad precedent, and, he could not help saying it, a dangerous precedent, to grant a new trial on mere hearsay evidence that the consideration money had not been paid. The parties who could throw most light on the matter were dead, and the deed was executed twelve years ago, and, if a new trial is granted, the first thing he should do would be to object to the introduction of this hearsay evidence at all. He contended that such evidence was not to be received. If this were so, he could not imagine of what use a new trial would be to the other side.

His Honour said it was quite clear that the deed was of a suspicious character and required a good deal of examination. It was very possible that in cross-examination on that deed facts might be elicited which would throw considerable light on the minds of the jury in deciding whether that deed was executed in good faith and the consideration money paid.

Folkard said the deed spoke for itself.

Hull replied that they were no parties to the deed, and knew nothing of it.

Folkard asked that if his Honour granted the new trial, he would allow all costs as between the attorney and client. The objection ought to have been taken at the trial. Such applications were never granted without payment of all costs to put the parties in the same position as they were before.

His Honour said he did not think the costs between attorney and client should be granted. The usual costs would, in his opinion, be sufficient.

After some further conversation,

Folkard said: May I ask your Honour to give me leave to appeal from this your judgment to a Superior Court. I am convinced that the granting of the application is totally without precedent, and I must really ask your pardon to take the opinion of a Superior Court.

His Honour.—I am certain it is for the interests of justice to give a new trial, and it is not for the interests of justice to give leave for an appeal. His Honour ultimately, on the question of costs, said the costs of the last trial were to be paid. The costs of the application would be taxed by the registrar within a week, to be paid within a fortnight, failing which an execution to issue.

UTTOXETER COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Dec. 15.

(Before W. Spooner, Esq., Judge.)

Chawner v. Sale.

Turnpike road—Negligence of trustees—Liability. The plaintiff, Mr. R. J. Chawner, solicitor, Uttoxeter, sued the defendant, Mr. Wm. Henry Sale, solicitor, Derby, as clerk to the trustees of the Derby and Uttoxeter turnpike road. The following were the particulars of claim: "For the injury done to plaintiff's horse on the 8th March 1873, caused by putting his foot in a hole left on defendant's road in the parish of Doveridge through the negligent and unskilful repair of the said road.

A. J. Flint, solicitor, Derby, appeared for the plaintiff.

Hextall, solicitor, Derby, for the defendant.

Flint opened the plaintiff's case, stating that defendant, who resides at Doveridge, but practices at Uttoxeter, and rides backwards and forwards. On the day in question was returning home, riding his horse at the side of the road, where there had formerly been turf, but where a track or pad had been worn by persons walking and riding. His horse suddenly stumbled and put its foot in a hole close by the side of the road. Plaintiff was thrown off but not hurt. The horse was injured to the extent of £15. The damages had been admitted on behalf of the defendant, and the only question in dipute was that of liability. Mr. Flint quoted several passages from Addison on Torts, in support of his case.

The plaintiff was called and deposed to the above facts.

Cross-examined by Hextall.—I find no fault with the hard road or its condition; there is a width of over 20ft. of made road at the point where the accident happened, exclusive of a 5ft. footpath on the opposite side of the road to where I was riding. I frequently rode along the grass and along the pad at the side of this road; I did it to ease my horse, in fact nearly always; I had seen no sign of a hole there before. I think my horse did not make it by the ground giving way at the moment, it must have been there before. I never had any cause of complaint against the trustees before my horse fell on to the hard road and hurt its knees—it struggled from the hole on to the road. The hole was about as large as a horse's hoof, it was close to the road, there was not a foot of turf between it and the road. There were formerly posts and rails along that side of the road; they were close to the hard road with no turf between; they were taken away many years ago. I do not recollect remonstrating with a man employed by the road surveyor for cleaning up the turf; I may have done so, if I did it was because his so doing narrowed the grass at the sides of the road along which I used to ride.

Mr. Hawthorne, surgeon, Uttoxeter, was on the spot a minute after the accident—plaintiff's horse had got up—remembered the posts and rails being at the side of the road—the hole was an old post hole—it was two feet deep at least—it was partly on the pad, but the greater part on the turf between the pad and the road.

Cross-examined.—There are a few inches of turf between the pad and the road. The road is always in very good condition—the posts and rails were close up to the road—they were removed ten years ago—when they stood there, there was no grass between them and the hard road. Since that time the sweepings of the road have been left at the side, and a little grass has grown over them, but there is not more than two or three inches between the hole and the road.

Charles Crofts, builder, Uttoxeter, was sent by plaintiff to view the spot; a plan was made; the hole was only a few inches from the hard road; the posts and rails were close up to the road.

Cross-examined.—I have no distinct recollection about the posts and rails, they have been removed many years; I do a good deal with such work as post and rails; a good oak post will last ten or twenty years or more when fixed in the ground.

Mr. Woolliscroft, of Somershall, said he knew the scene of the accident; people always walked and rode along the side of the road. He corroborated the other witnesses as to the posts and rails coming close up to the road.

Cross-examined.—I never rode along the side of the road myself; I am very cautious; I have been thrown off my horse on the hard road; it was no fault of the road.

It was admitted that the trustee's surveyor had ordered the hole to be filled up after the accident.

His Honour.—Of course it would be filled up. The surveyor would not let it remain after his attention had been called to it.

Hextall.—Your Honour will not let that prejudice the defendant as to his liability.

His Honour.—Certainly not.

Hextall submitted in the course of a lengthy argument, that the defendant was not liable. He would show that no action would lie against trustees of a turnpike road for its non-repair, and consequently their clerk was not liable. The case of Gibson v. Mayor &c., of Preston (22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 293), was greatly in point. Hannen, J. in delivering judgment, pointed out that at common law no action lay for the non-repair of a highway, and that a plaintiff must show that a right to sue was given him by statutory enactment. There was no case of successful action against turnpike trustees for non-repair; Whitehouse v. Fellowes (4 L. T. Rep. N. S. 177) was not in point; the injury there was damage to a neighbouring proprietor through negligence during the process of repairs. There was no doubt the parish of Doveridge had been at all times liable to repair the road, and this liability was expressly continued to them by the General Acts (4 Geo. 4, c. 95 s. 80, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 24 s. 17,) as well as by the Derby and Uttoxeter-road Act, passed in 6 Geo. 4. The trustees could not be indicted for non-repair, but the proper course was to indict the parish: Rex v. Netherthong (2 B. & A. 179), Rex v. Oxfordshire (4 B. & C. 194). This was expressly recognised by Statute, the 5 & 6 Will. 4 (c. 50 s. 94), gave power to justices to order repairs summarily; and the 3 Geo. 4 (c. 126 s. 110), provided that where a parish was indicted for not repairing a turnpike road, the fine inflicted was to be apportioned between the inhabitants of the parish and the trustees of the road, thus preventing circuity of action, and obviating the necessity of proceedings by the parish against the road trustees. For the defendant it was also relied on Young v. Davis (6 L. T. Rep. N. S. 363, in the Exchequer Chamber 9 L. T. Rep. N. S. 145). This was an authority in his favour. In that case every authority was cited, even as far back as the year books, and it was held that a surveyor of highways could not be sued for non-repair. In the same case (on appeal) Willes, J., asked if plaintiff's counsel could point out any case against turnpike trustees for non-repair, and was answered in the negative. If such an authority was to be found, it would have been produced. There were other cases, but he (Mr. Hextall) would not quote them. He relied on those he had referred to. It was clear that at common law no action lay for non-repair, and it was for the plaintiff to show that in this case a power to sue had been given by Statute. Under the Turnpike Acts the parish still remained liable, and should be indicted if the road was in a bad state of repair.

His Honour.—I must call on Mr. Flint to show me a case in which trustees have been held liable.

Flint referred to Hartnall v. Ryde Commissioners (8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 574), and to 3 Geo. 4, (c. 126, s. 74), enacting that trustees may sue or be sued in the name of their clerk.

Hextall argued that the case quoted was not in point. There the defendants had been made liable by a special clause in a Special Act. The section of the Turnpike Act only prescribed the manner of suing and did not give a cause of action where none previously existed.

His Honour.—You say that as a corporation the trustees cannot be sued without a special provision to that effect, and that in the present case there is no such provision.

Hextall.—Precisely so.

His Honour.—I do not think I can give judgment for the plaintiff in the face of the cases and argument for the defendant, but if necessary I will reserve the point, and give leave to either party to set me right, if I am wrong, by an appeal.

Hextall then addressed the Judge on the facts, and commented on the failure of the plaintiff and his witnesses to remember the exact positions of the old posts and rails. He would prove that when they stood there was a space of over 2ft. of turf between them and the road; that when the accident occurred there were 3ft. of grass between the hard road and where plaintiff was riding, and should contend that there was no negligence on the part of the defendant; and that, even if there were, the plaintiff was guilty of such contributory negligence in riding at the side, instead of on the hard road, as would disentitle him to recover damages.

Thomas Dearville said he had been surveyor of the turnpike road for over twenty years; always kept it in the best state he could; remembered the posts and rails being taken away eleven years ago. He was surveyor at the time, and superintended their removal. Lord Waterpark took great interest in their removal, and the levelling of the ground on which they stood. At the same time a brook course, which ran between them and the hedge, was filled up, and a culvert put in. The posts were carefully removed. No complaints had ever been made before. He measured the distance from the hole made by plaintiff's horse to the hard road, two days after this accident. It was 3ft. In September last the turf was "dressed," and that has narrowed the space by some inches.

Cross-examined by Flint.—The posts were oak. They were not sawn off.

Mr. John Harpur, late surveyor of the Litchurch Local Board, Derby, and now surveyor of the Derby and Mansfield Turnpike Road, said he had had twice examined and measured the locus in quo in May last, and again this day; found 3ft. of grass between the site of the hole and the hard road. The road itself was a particularly good road; full width, and a good footpath on the opposite side; had had thirty years experience of road-making.

His Honour.—I am satisfied that due care and diligence was shown in the removal of the posts and rails, and that there was no negligence on the part of the trustees. The surveyor does not guarantee his road. He is only required to use ordinary diligence, and this he has done. I give judgment for the defendant. Costs allowed.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

BIRMINGHAM COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Dec. 11.

(Before H. W. COLE, Q.C. Judge.)

Re MORRELL AND GAITES, Ex parte SHARP.

Bankruptcy—Fraudulent preference.

THIS was an application by Mr. Luke J. Sharp, the trustee in the bankruptcy for an order to compel Mr. William Bedford, of Vyse-street, Birmingham, jeweller, to deliver up to them certain jewellery goods and diamonds, deposited with him a few days before the bankruptcy, and for payment of costs.

Robert Duke, solicitor, Birmingham, appeared for the trustee, and James Motteram (of the Oxford Circuit), instructed by J. C. Fowke, solicitor, Birmingham, opposed the motion on behalf of Mr. Bedford.

The application was heard on the 28th Nov. last, and the court reserved judgment.

His HONOUR, in delivering judgment, said it appeared that on the 30th July last, Bedford sold and delivered some 9½-carats brilliants for £95 to the bankrupts, Morrell and Gaites, who were jewellers, carrying on business in Birmingham, and took their acceptance for the price bearing date 30th July, and payable about six months after date. On the same day the bankrupts sent back the brilliants to Bedford to be mounted, and he mounted them in thirteen rings, for which work the further sum of £11 14s. became due to him. On the 16th Aug. he sent the rings to the bankrupts' place of business too late for them to receive them, and they were brought back. But on the 18th Aug. he again sent the rings, when they were duly received and a receipt given for them. Under these circumstances all lien on the part of Bedford in the rings was of course gone at that time. It appeared, however, that later on the same day, Morrell, one of the bankrupts, sent back the rings to Bedford, and shortly afterwards called upon him and asked him to hold them for a few days, as he (Morrell) and his partner were then quarrelling. This Bedford promised to do, and he had since retained possession of the rings, which were part of the goods in question. Besides the £95 and £11 14s., there was in August a further debt of £76 6s. 5d. owing from the bankrupts to Bedford for sundry goods sold. On the 18th Aug. the bankrupts were served, at the instance of a French creditor named Grillot, with a trader debtor summons, dated the 16th Aug., and therefore Morrell went to Bedford and informed him of the facts, and expressed a desire that Bedford should co-operate with him in taking such steps as might be necessary in the interest of the English creditors. Bedford then went with Morrell to the office of Mr. Duke, his solicitor, and under the advice of Mr. Duke, who appeared to have considered the interests of the general body of English creditors rather than the interests of Bedford personally, signed a trader debtor summons on the bankrupts for the debt due to him, and it was served on them. Thus far Bedford had had no advice except that of Morrell's solicitor, Mr. Duke, who appeared never to have been consulted, except to protect the interests of the whole body of English creditors. On the 22nd Aug. Bedford consulted his own private solicitor, Mr. Fowke, and in consequence of the advice which that gentleman gave him, he sought an interview with Morrell, and asked him for some security for his debt. A request from Bedford at that critical time was nearly equivalent to a command, and Morrell did not attempt to resist it, but at once agreed to send Bedford some goods as security for the debt of the firm owing to Bedford, and another debt owing to another creditor, named Cohen, who had since repudiated all claim to the security; and if anything was left after paying them, Morrell stated that he wished it to be held for the English creditors generally. In consequence of what had been agreed to at that interview, Morrell, on the evening of the same 22nd Aug. sent on behalf of the firm, two boxes of jewellery to Bedford. Later in the evening, Morrell and Mr. Robeson, the traveller of the firm, called on Bedford, and represented to him that the jewellery was more than enough to pay off Bedford's debt and Cohen's also; and, as that was the fact, Bedford allowed them to take away part of the stock deposited, leaving one box and a parcel, together worth £700. Bedford's debt being now satisfactorily secured, he determined not to go on with the trader-debtor summons, which he had taken out through Mr. Duke, and he communicated that intention to Morrell on the 25th Aug. On the 25th Aug. Grillot, the French creditor, presented his petition in bankruptcy, returnable on the 10th Sept., on which day Morrell and Gaites were adjudicated bankrupts. Bedford had since given up to the trustees a further portion of jewellery stock, not necessary to answer his claim, but he still held the remainder, which was said to be in a locked-up box, the key of which had never been in Bedford's possession. His Honour said he did not regard that fact as one of any importance, as the box and its contents were unquestionably sent to Bedford by way of security for his debt, and not merely for safe custody. The question was whether the remaining jewellery stock now in the possession of Bedford could be retained by him as against the claim of the trustee in the bankruptcy. His opinion was that the deposit of that jewellery with Bedford was not the voluntary or spontaneous act of the bankrupts, or either of them, but the result of pressure, which, under the advice of Mr. Fowke, was put on Morrell by Bedford on the 22nd Aug. Under such circumstances, although Bedford knew that the bankrupts were then in a state of bankruptcy, his Honour considered it to be well established by the case of Ex parte Topham, Re Walker (L. Rep. 8 Ch. App. 614), that this was not a fraudulent preference, and that Bedford was entitled to retain the jewellery stock now in his possession until the whole debt due to him was satisfied, including the £95 for which the acceptance was given by the bankrupts. He, therefore, declared that Bedford was entitled to a valid lien upon such of the jewellery stock deposited with him on the 22nd Aug. as still remained in his possession for the £183 6s. 5d., which was due or owing to him from the bankrupts at the time of the bankruptcy, and that such deposit was not a fraudulent preference; but he declared that Bedford had no lien upon the thirteen rings, except for the sum of £11 14s. (part of the £183 6s. 5d.) due to him for work and labour thereon. He ordered that, on payment by the trustee to Bedford of such £11 14s., Bedford should deliver up the rings to the trustee; and he ordered the assessed jewellery stock now in the possession of Bedford to be sold by him, and that he should retain thereout the balance of the said £183 6s. 5d., together with his costs of or relating to the present application; the surplus, if any, to be paid over to the trustee.

BRISTOL COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Nov. 21.

(Before E. J. LLOYD, Q.C., Judge.)

Re CHARLES JAMES BUDGE.

Composition — Adjudication — Bankruptcy Act 1869, s. 126, sub-s. 11.

Beckingham, who appeared for a creditor, said in that matter he had to make application to have a debtor adjudged a bankrupt, in accordance with the provisions of the 11th sub-section of the 126th section of the Bankruptcy Act. The debtor for some time previous to the filing of his petition on the 21st Dec. 1871, carried on business at St. Vincent's-terrace, Hotwells, as commission agent and dealer in cigars. At the first meeting of creditors held under his petition a resolution was passed accepting a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound, 1s. 3d. to be paid in two months, and 1s. 3d. in four months, and the debtor asked Mr. Philip Owen to secure that composition to the creditors, and he agreed to do so. The resolution was confirmed at a subsequent meeting, and the estate was directed to be vested in Mr. Owen for the purpose of securing him against the liability which he had undertaken on becoming surety. Shortly after the second meeting some disagreement took place between Mr. Budge and Mr. Owen, the latter alleging that the debtor had not given up to him the whole of his estate, and Mr. Owen having paid some of the composition declined to pay the others until the whole of the estate was given up. That occasioned some delay, in the interim the debtor's wife died, and it then transpired that there was a policy of assurance on her life in the Westminster and General Assurance Office for £200, which policy existed at the time he filed his petition, but which he never disclosed in his statement of affairs. As soon as that fact came to the knowledge of Mr. Owen he sent to the Assurance Company not to pay the money over without his concurrence. Subsequent to the meetings at which the composition was arranged upon, and prior to the death of the debtor's wife, the debtor assigned or charged the policy to Mr. Morris, a wine merchant in this city, who claimed upon that policy a sum of £120, and he consequently gave notice that no money should be paid over by the assurance office without his concurrence. It might be that Mr. Morris and the creditors could have arranged matters between themselves, so that the application which he (the learned counsel) was then making would have been rendered unnecessary; but for some reason or other Mr. Budge also gave notice that he objected to either Mr. Morris or Mr. Owen receiving the money, and claimed it for himself. Under those circumstances it was manifest that the composition could not proceed, nor could the proceedings go any further until that matter was settled and the money paid over. He (Beckingham) was instructed by a creditor for £40 to apply to his Honour that the debtor might be adjudged a bankrupt. By that means, all claims on the part of the debtor would be entirely got rid of, and also all claims on the part of Mr. Owen, and it would simply be a matter to be dealt with by the assignee under the bankruptcy on the one hand, and Mr. Morris on the other. If they should be unable to come to a proper understanding about it, the assignee would have his remedy in bringing the matter before the court, and taking his Honour's direction, giving Mr. Morris notice of the intended application.

His HONOUR inquired what amount of the estate had been got in.

Beckingham replied that he was unable to state. Mr. Owen received portions of the estate, but not half what the composition amounted to at 2s. 6d. in the pound.

His HONOUR—What is the amount of the debts?

Beckingham—The total amount of liabilities was £602 16s. 9d.

His HONOUR observed that it seemed to him to be a very proper application, but he would hear the other side.

Essery (who appeared for the debtor) said he had no opposition to offer to the application.

His HONOUR thereupon adjudged the debtor a bankrupt.

LIVERPOOL COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Dec. 5.

(Before PERRONET THOMPSON, Esq., Judge.)

Ex parte HEWETSON; Re MALLEY.

Bills of Sale Act—Registration.

A., in consideration of B. giving him his acceptance for £300, agreed to hand B. railway advice notes for rope lying at the railway station of the value of £300. The agreement further provided that A. might sell the ropes on account of B. handing him over the cash as received, and guaranteeing him a profit of £1 per ton, or in the event of A. being in a position to redeem the goods before the sale, he was to have the option on paying B. £1 per ton profit. Before anything was done under the agreement, except the delivery of the advice notes to B., the estate of A. went into liquidation, and his trustee finding the ropes standing in the name of A. in the railway company's books, sold them on behalf of creditors. B. moved the court for an order upon the trustee for the value of the goods, when objection was taken to the validity of the agreement on the ground that it required registration under the Bills of Sale Act.

Held, subject to any further evidence to be adduced, that the agreement was a bill of sale, and invalid without registration.

THIS was a case which by consent was left to a jury under the provisions of the 72nd section of the Bankruptcy Act. It was the second instance at Liverpool, in bankruptcy matters, where the assistance of a jury had been invoked. The facts of the case were shortly these: In September last year Mr. Christopher Malley, a rag and rope merchant, made application to Mr. Robert Hewitson, also in the same trade, with whom he had previously transacted business, for his acceptance of two bills for £150 each. Hewitson assented conditionally upon being secured, and accordingly Malley gave him railway advice notes for certain flax tow ropes lying at the railway station of the value of about £300. The terms of the arrangement were reduced to writing, and were as follows:

30th Sept. 1872.

C. Malley, Liverpool.

To R. Hewitson & Co., Liverpool.

Gentlemen,—In consideration of your accepting bills for the sum of £300, I hereby hand you warrants for 30 tons tow ropes, and I draw on account at £7 per ton. I also agree to sell them for your account at the best terms and price I can get, and hand you over cash for them as sold, guaranteeing you a profit of £1 per ton; should I at any time prior to the goods being sold, hand you over the cash for the amount of the bills, you will hand me warrants, and I will give you £1 per ton profit, and all over the above price to be equally divided, less expenses. CHRISTOPHER MALLEY.

In December last, Malley's affairs went into liquidation, and Mr. Bolland was chosen trustee. He at once put a stop upon all goods lying at the different railway stations in the name of Malley, and amongst other goods those now in question, for which Hewitson held advice notes. The trustee subsequently obtained delivery of these goods and caused the same to be sold by auction. Hewitson thereupon commenced an action against the trustee for the value of the rope, but the court restrained the proceedings, and directed the issue between the parties to be tried by a jury in the County Court.

Kennedy (instructed by Masters and Fletcher), appeared for Hewitson; and Timpron Martin, solicitor, for the trustee.

Kennedy, after briefly detailing the facts of the case, called Mr. Hewitson, who produced the agreement between the parties.

Martin objected to its reception on account of its being unstamped, and the court sustained the objection, and thereupon the stamp duty, and a penalty of £10, was deposited with the registrar.

The witness then produced the railway advice notes, and

Martin took exception to their being received without being stamped. He submitted that, like a dock warrant, they required a penny stamp, that is, assuming that they were of any value.

His Honour, after referring to the authorities, decided that they did not require to be stamped.

Mr. Hewitson then deposed to the facts already stated, and added that he had given the trustee formal notice not to sell the property. On cross-examination he admitted that in March last he effected a composition with his creditors of 1s. 6d. in the pound. He could not state the amount of his liabilities, but thought they were under £2000; the amount that the composition came to he could not tell. The acceptances which he gave to Malley formed part of his liabilities, and although he had paid only a composition upon them he claimed the full value of the goods from Mr. Bolland. He had not, when arranging with his creditors, disclosed the ropes in question as part of his assets, as he was advised by his solicitor that it was not necessary.

Mr. Malley corroborated the last witness as to the nature of the transaction; and on cross-examination stated that his liabilities were, at the date of his liquidation, £15,000.

Several witnesses were then called, who deposed that it had been their custom to regard railway advice notes as symbols of ownership, and that in both buying and selling goods they regarded the possession of the advice notes as equivalent to possession of the goods.

This evidence concluded the plaintiff's case; and

Martin, after a lengthy discussion as to the particular issue to be left to the jury, said he should ask for a nonsuit on the ground that the agreement between the parties amounted to a bill of sale, and required registration to be of any validity. He had no wish to impugn the bona fides of the transaction between the parties, but he submitted that as the agreement amounted to an authority or licence to take possession of the ropes, it came within the 7th section of the Act, and was a bill of sale. He cited Re Steele and Keeling, and also the case of Sheridan v. Macartney, in the Irish Court of Queen's Bench (5 L. T. Rep. N. S. 27).

Kennedy cited Ex parte North-Western Bank, re Slee (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 461), and maintained that the agreement was no more than a letter of hypothecation and a transfer of goods in the ordinary course of business, and did not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act.

His Honour said he should be prepared to charge the jury that the agreement amounted to a bill of sale, and therefore, without registration, was null and void. It was a point, however, which he should like to consider further, and, as there was no dispute as to the facts of the case, but the whole question was one of law, he would suggest that the jury be discharged and the matter left for the decision of the court. The parties ultimately agreed to that course, on the understanding that the right to adduce further evidence was reserved. The jury were then discharged.

Re John Cross.

Bankruptcy Act 1869—Sect. 28—Practice.

Held that meeting of creditors must be convened by a ten days' notice in Gazette and local newspaper.

This was a case which had been before the court for several months. The bankrupt, who was formerly a colliery proprietor at St. Helens, in the first instance presented a petition for liquidation, and, after several futile attempts to effect a composition with his creditors, he was declared bankrupt, and Mr. Bewley chosen trustee. The liabilities were about £8000, and assets £50. A meeting of creditors was afterwards called under the 28th section, and an offer of 6d. in the pound accepted, but, owing to some informality, it was not approved by the court. Another meeting was then called at which 4d. in the pound was accepted, but again the court refused to approve thereof. On appeal to the Chief Judge, he at first directed the court to confirm the resolutions, but afterwards changed his mind, and affirmed the decision of the court below. Another meeting has since been held, at which the creditors again resolved to accept 4d. in the pound, and,

Gill (solicitor) now applied for the approval of the court to the resolution.

Cotton (solicitor) on behalf of the Roughdale Fire Clay Company, dissentient creditors, objected to the court taking the resolution into consideration, seeing that it had been passed at a meeting which had not been duly convened. According to the practice of the court it was necessary that notice of the meeting should be given in the Gazette and one local newspaper ten days prior to its being held; but in the present case the notice in the Gazette appeared only four days before the meeting.

Gill, in reply, said the practice was not imperative as to the length of notice in the Gazette, as already in this very matter the court had considered resolutions passed at a meeting which had only been advertised seven days. The main question for the court was, had all the creditors been apprised of the meeting? He submitted that they had, and the best proof of that was the fact that every creditor of the bankrupt, except one for a very small amount, was present or represented at the meeting. The only meeting which the rules required to be advertised ten days was that called by the registrar, namely, the first meeting of creditors; but all other meetings, even those called by the court, under sect. 20, were to be summoned as the court might direct, and, without such direction, by notice being sent to each creditor, as had been done here, stating the object of the meeting.

His Honour said it appeared to him clear, on reference to the prescribed form of advertisement under sect. 28, that notice of the meeting must be advertised in the London Gazette and a local newspaper, and he understood the Chief Judge had so laid down the practice. The meeting, therefore, having to be advertised in the Gazette, the only question was as to the length of notice to be given, and as other meetings called by advertisement in the Gazette required ten days, he thought it would be a salutary practice to adopt here. If there was not some such rule, meetings might be called on the same day on which the advertisement appeared, and thereby the notice would be nugatory. With respect to the court having on a former occasion considered resolutions passed at a meeting called by a seven days' notice, it was only done on Mr. Cotton waiving his objection to the notice. In the present case he did not consider the resolutions had been passed at a meeting duly convened, and therefore he should decline to entertain them.

(Before J. F. Collier, Esq., Judge.)

Friday, Dec. 5.

Re Trumble.

Proof of debt by a partner against the estate of his late partner.

Held, that until the partnership debts were discharged there was no right of proof.

The question in dispute in this case was as to the admission of a proof of debt for over £1000, which had been tendered by Mr. George Trumble against the estate of the debtor, and rejected by the trustee. It appeared that for some time prior to 1866 the debtor was a partner of George Trumble, and that they then made an assignment of their estate for the benefit of their creditors. At the date of the assignment the partners stood indebted to the Adelphi Bank in a considerable sum on open account, and also on promissory notes to the extent of £1650. George Trumble has since paid in settlement of the bank's claim £950, and is now the holder of the promissory notes, and in respect thereof sought to rank upon the estate of his late co-partner, the present liquidating debtor. The claim, it was stated, had been the subject of previous litigation, and although it involved a nice legal question as to the right of a solicitor to bind his client to a compromise, yet its solution was not necessary for the disposal of the issue before the court.

His Honour (after hearing Goffey and Etty, solicitors for the parties concerned) said that nothing was clearer than that one partner could not prove against the separate estate of his co-partner, unless he had paid the co-partnership debts in full, or in some other way satisfied those debts. Here Mr. George Trumble expressly stated that he had paid none of the joint creditors except the Adelphi Bank, nor was there any evidence that the debts had been in any other way satisfied. On that ground he thought the proof of debt property rejected, and should dismiss the appeal with costs.

Notice of appeal was given.

LEGAL NEWS.

A GENERAL SCHOOL OF LAW.

A deputation from the Legal Education Association waited upon the Lord Chancellor at his private room in Lincoln's-inn, on Friday afternoon, the 12th inst., for the purpose of ascertaining what steps the Government are prepared to take in order to give effect to the object of the Association. It will be remembered that in the Session of 1872 Lord Selborne (then Sir Roundell Palmer, and President of the Association) submitted to the House of Commons the following resolutions:—

"1. That it is desirable that a general school of law should be established in the metropolis by public authority for the instruction of students intending to practise in any branch of the legal Profession, and of all other subjects of her Majesty who may desire to resort thereto. 2. That it is desirable, in the establishment of such school, to provide for examinations, to be held by examiners impartially chosen, and to require certificates of the passing of such examinations as may respectively be deemed proper for the several branches of the legal Profession as necessary qualifications (after a time to be limited) for admission to practise in those branches respectively."

In support of these resolutions a petition was presented, which was signed by about 900 members of the Bar, including 18 Queen's counsel, and by 6000 out of about 10,000 solicitors practising in England and Wales. Though the Government opposed the resolution chiefly on the ground that there was not likely to be time for dealing with the question by Bill, the resolutions were only defeated by a majority of 13 in a House of 219 members. Since then the four Inns of Court have adopted a new scheme for teaching and examining students for the Bar. The committee of the Legal Association, however, say that what is wanted is a school of law not confined to one branch, but open to students in both branches of the legal profession, as well as to such of the public as wish to study law as a science, and that this school should be administered by a public and responsible governing body, not by self-electing bodies which claim to be irresponsible, and which may at any moment modify or abandon the schemes they have set in operation.

The deputation appointed to wait on the Lord Chancellor (who ceased to be the president of the association when he was appointed to the Woolsack) were: Mr. Amphlett, Q.C, M.P., Professor Sheldon Amos, Mr. Bryce, Mr. Fry, Q.C., Mr. Kay, Q.C., Mr. Lindley, Q.C., Mr. J. C. Mathew, Mr. Osborne Morgan, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Pearson, Q.C., Mr. Westlake, Mr. Arthur Williams, and Mr. Alfred Wills, Q.C. (representing the Bar); with the following solicitors: Mr. Janson, president, and Mr. F. J. Bircham, vice-president of the Incorporated Law Society; Mr. Clabon, Mr. Cookson, Mr. Hollams, Mr. Jevons (of Liverpool), Mr. B. G. Lake, Mr. Marshall (of Leeds), and Mr. Ryland, of Birmingham, members of the council of the Incorporated Law Society; Mr. W. J. Farrer, Mr. H. B. Freshfield, and Mr. J. V. Longbourne.

Mr. Amphlett, Q.C., M.P., in introducing the deputation, thought they might fairly claim to be a representative body. He reminded the Lord Chancellor that in March 1872 his Lordship, in the House of Commons, proposed two resolutions embodying the principal object of the association, that object being to establish a general school of law where the students of both branches of the Profession might receive instruction, and also to insure compulsory examination before any student is allowed to practise either branch. These resolutions, though opposed by the Government, were only defeated by a majority of thirteen. This result was very encouraging, and still more encouraging were the speeches made by the eminent persons who opposed the resolutions, especially by the Attorney-General and the Prime Minister. What they then said amounted to approval of the principle advocated by the association, though they thought that the time was inopportune, and that the House was not called upon to pronounce upon an abstract resolution. Mr. Gladstone said the House could hardly be expected to give a decided opinion unless the question was before them in a practical shape, and he added that no man could be more competent than his Lordship was to prepare a Bill on the subject. Since then the Inns of Court had established a new scheme of education and examination for their own students, and, although there might be defects in this scheme, he believed it was an honest attempt on the part of the Inns of Court to meet the requirements of enlightened opinion on the subject. Still, it did not cover the whole ground. There was no security in it for permanence, because any one of the four societies which now concurred in supporting it might at any moment retire from the scheme, and, owing to the constitution of the governing bodies of the Inns of Court, it was difficult to procure from time to time in such a scheme any changes which the circumstances of the case might require. Under these circumstances, the association had criticised, though not in any offensive spirit, the details of the scheme as far as concerned the instruction proposed for members of the Bar. "The essential point," they said, "in which this scheme is, in the opinion of the committee, wholly inadequate to supply an efficient school of law is that it seeks to establish an organisation for teaching law confined to students for one branch of the legal Profession only." And they added:

"The committee feel that, under these circumstances, it is the duty of the association to persevere not less earnestly than hitherto in its endeavours to accomplish the objects for which it was formed. The committee venture to think that the time has arrived when, in the words of the Solicitor-General, it is practicable and desirable for the Government to take action in the matter. They believe that, to repeat his own words, that 'opinion has been so far formed and decided that a definite course can be marked out by so much general assent as shows that another system is earnestly desired and wished for,' and they feel assured that when the proper time comes for considering the details of a scheme embodying the views of the association, it will receive the favourable consideration of 'those who are most able to decide what is most likely to accomplish the greatest good that can be done by education.'"

It might be asked why had they taken no steps to bring the subject before Parliament during the last session? It would be no breach of confidence to say that his Lordship was so occupied with the details of the Judicature Bill that it was thought better to let the matter rest for another year. The Association, however, were of opinion that the object they had in view would suffer prejudice if another session were allowed to pass without calling the attention of Parliament to it. Their principal object to-day, therefore was to ascertain whether individually, or, what would be much better, because it would open up a better prospect of success, as a member of the Government, his Lordship would be able to bring forward a Bill on the subject the next session of Parliament.

The Lord Chancellor said it gave him much pleasure to see so many of his old friends and co-operators in this work, and he was glad to assure them of his continued and unabated interest in the object for which this association had been formed. His opinions respecting it had already been publicly expressed, and they were in all respects entirely unchanged. He should not, therefore, omit to use any opportunities which might occur in promoting the objects of the association. Last session his hands were too full of other things, and it would not have been prudent for him then to take charge of this additonal measure. He reminded those that were present that one only of the important measures of Law reform then introduced by him had become law; and the other measure, which he hoped to re-introduce in an improved and amended form, would occupy considerable time and require great attention in the approaching session. He was not, therefore, now able, on the part of the Government, to enter into any engagement with regard to the Bill which the association desired to pass. When the time came for the Government to decide upon that question they would take into account the whole of the measure which they desired to promote, and they would, doubtless, consider, among other things, whether the last session of the present Parliament was, with regard to this particular measure, a desirable time for pressing it forward. The Government would no doubt consider this question with a disposition to forward the objects which the association and he also had in view; and if he could persuade his colleagues to adopt his view, they would then also, no doubt, be disposed to support, either in the next session or some other session—supposing they were in office—such a measure on the subject as he might recommend to them. For his own part, however, speaking now as an individual, he did not intend to allow more time to pass without reducing into proper form a measure which should be fit to be submitted to the Government for their consideration, provided that he could obtain such information as he desired, and in taking this course his present intention was not to confin. himself to the scheme for a general school of law This would form an important part of his measure, which would so far proceed in the lines and upon the principles laid down by the association. But he thought it would be expedient also to deal with the constitution and government of the Inns of Court, and he proposed to do so in accordance with the principles put forward in the report of the Royal Commission which some time ago sat upon that subject. When he should have succeeded in formulating a proper measure for this purpose his intention was—and he had some reason to believe that Mr. Amphlett agreed that this would be the proper course—to communicate the draught Bill, not only to the Inns of Court, but to the Incorporated Law Society and the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Society. He should then have the advantage of considering their observations upon the draught Bill before he finally invited the Government to consider it. This was the course he proposed to take. He thought he should thereby be furthering the ultimate success of the object they had in view, and he need not say that if, without prejudice to other business which would occupy the Government, it were in his power to propose the Bill next Session, he should be most happy to do so—the earlier the better. On the other hand, if the Government took the view he had already indicated—that to promote such a Bill in the last Session of Parliament would be to invite a party conflict upon it—he should then reserve to himself the right of adopting the course which seemed at the time most expedient. But whatever course might be taken by the Government or by himself, and whether the Bill were introduced as a Government measure or privately, those who were present might be assured that, as far as he was concerned, he should act with a view to promote, as far as was possible the cause in which they all took an interest, and to secure its ultimate success.

Mr. Pearson, Q.C., said he had heard with great satisfaction his Lordship's intention to enlarge the scope of the Bill. At the same time, he did not think the new scheme of the Inns of Court quite so narrow as it had been represented. His own Inn now admitted to the law lectures all persons, whether they were students for the Bar or not. Such admission, however, came too late, and the result was that they had not made the start which they ought to have made, and would have made had there been a larger measure dealing with the position both of barristers and solicitors.

Mr. Amphlett, as chairman of the Association, thanked his Lordship, for the reception he had given to the deputation.

Mr. Farrer, on the part of the solicitors, also thanked his Lordship, congratulating the Association on the wise and bold measure which the Lord Chancellor was ready to introduce.

The deputation then withdrew.

PROPER RETALIATION.—At Warwick Assizes Baron Pigott, in charging the grand jury, drew attention to the large increase which had occurred in cases of violence in the county, and said his experience was that no punishment was so efficacious as that of flogging. He had noticed that the most hardened and dangerous criminals, who evinced no emotion when penal servitude was mentioned, showed signs of concern and apprehension at the slightest reference to a flogging. As cases of violence had gone up from two to thirteen, he intended to avail himself of Adderley's Act in all proper cases.

ON Friday, 12th Dec., Sir John Duke Coleridge, Knight, was by Her Majesty's command, sworn of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and took his place at the Board accordingly. On the same day the honour of Knighthood was conferred on Henry James, Esq., Q.C. M.P., Her Majesty's Attorney-General; on William George Granville Venables Vernon Harcourt, Esq., Q.C., M.P., Her Majesty's Solicitor-General; on Charles Hall, Esq., a Vice-Chancellor; on Archibald Paull Burt, Esq., Chief Justice of the Colony of Western Australia; and on William Henry Doyle, Esq., Chief Justice of the Bahama Islands.

STRONG expressions in courts of justice, according to present views, must be repressed; and the fastidiousness of people's ears is not to be allowed to form their rule of conduct. It is curious to notice the change which a few years has produced in this respect. Mr. Hayward, Q.C., in his "Biographical and Critical Essays" says (p. 140), "During the first quarter of the century the best bred people swore. . . . Mr. Justice Best (the first Lord Wynford) during the trial of Carlisle for blasphemy, audibly exclaimed to a brother judge, 'I'll be d—d to h—l if I sit here to hear the Christian religion abused.' Lord Eldon was in the habit of revising drafts of bills during prayers in the House of Lords. He had just risen from his knees when, in reply to an ironical comment of Lord Grey, he said, 'D—n it, my lord, you'd do the same if you were as hard worked as I am.'" Swift's line is adopted by us in its integrity:—"We never mention Hell to ears polite."

THE DUC D'AMAULE ON THE DUTY OF A JUDGE.—It is known (says Galignani) that the president of a court-martial must be the last to reply to the questions put by the prosecution. Nevertheless, he is allowed to address some words to his colleagues before the opening of the deliberations properly so called. That is what the Duke of Amaule should have done, and what he did. We are in a position to give, if not the text, at least the exact sense of his address:—"Gentlemen," said he, after having pointed out that he was speaking before the opening of the deliberations, "you must have remarked the attitude which I have taken up in the course of these debates. Contrary to what is done by many presidents of courts-martial, I have neither taken part with the defence nor at all with the accusation. I have treated all the witnesses in the same manner, whatever their rank, and in whatever sense they might come to depose. I contracted that habit in England, during my long exile, in attending the judicial pleadings of that country, and I think in that I have had your approbation. I take the liberty of expressing here the desire that, henceforward, military justice in France may inspire itself with that rule. There is another custom of English Judges and law courts which I would equally recommend to your attention. We are not here only as Judges charged to call for the application of the penalty, we are also jurymen, and in that quality we have to pronounce on the guilt or innocence of the accused. Well, you know that on this question the English law requires that the jury should decide unanimously. Let us therefore try, gentlemen, to be in accord, and to be so seems the more easy that the military law excludes, in such circumstances, all extenuating circumstances." After that address the Judges voted thanks to the President for the manner in which he had exercised his functions. They were each in turn then consulted for their verdict, commencing with General de Malroy, the youngest of them. The law forbids the publication of the opinions expressed by the members of the court.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A DEPUTATION of employers recently waited on the Home Secretary, in reference to the questions involved in the proposed repeal of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, the amendment of the law of master and servant, and the alteration of the law of conspiracy. The deputation included more than one solicitor, who explained the actual operation of the Acts in question, as well from the employers' point of view as from that of the employed.

JUVENILE THIEVES.—A boy, aged eleven, has been convicted at Birmingham, for stealing three sovereigns from his mother. Mr. Kynnersley, the stipendiary magistrate, observed: "Here is another boy who ought to be sent to an industrial school, but the School Board has just taken that power out of our hands. Very likely the boy will turn out a professional thief; and if so, the Borough may thank the School Board for it. The boy will be discharged." It deserves notice whether a dozen strokes with a birch rod would not be salutary in cases of juvenile theft.

A JUDICIAL MUDDLE.—The makeshift arrangement by which Lord Selborne sat for some time as Master of the Rolls has produced a curious conflict of authority. We will mention two cases. The first involves rather a nice point of equity, but perhaps may be made intelligible out of Lincoln's-inn. A portion of certain land devised to a tenant in tail is taken by a railway company by virtue of its compulsory powers. The purchase-money is paid into the Court of Chancery under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act. Ought the court to allow this fund, representing land, to be paid to the tenant in tail without requiring the execution of a disentailing deed? The late Master of the Rolls held that under like circumstances no such deed was necessary. So also did Vice-Chancellor Malins, and the practice was generally regarded as settled. Lord Selborne, however, declined to follow the cases upholding this doctrine, and made the order for payment conditional upon the production to the registrar of a properly executed disentailing deed. A case involving the same question came before Vice-Chancellor Malins last Friday, and he adhered to his own decisions. "I consider," said his honour, "that I am bound to regard the Lord Chancellor when sitting for the Master of the Rolls simply as if he were the Master of the Rolls, and only therefore as a judge of the first instance"—that is to say, of no higher authority than the Vice-Chancellor himself. His Honour had previously held the same language in another class of cases, where the two courts upon the same facts unhappily also came to diametrically opposite conclusions. Lord Selborne, at the Rolls, decided, in opposition to recorded cases, that the purchase-money of land sold under the Settled Estates Act is not to be regarded as "cash under the control of the court," the result of which decision is that, for the purposes of interim investment, the money can only be laid out in the purchase of Exchequer Bills or in the Three per Cents. Sir Richard Malins, on the other hand, treats such purchase-money as cash which is under the control of the court, the result of his decision being considerably to enlarge the power of investment. "It appears from the reported cases," said the Vice-Chancellor—referring no doubt to successive decisions at the Rolls by Lord Romilly and Lord Selborne—"that the Master of the Rolls has first held that such purchase-money is cash under the control of the court, and has subsequently decided the opposite way. I have always treated it as cash under the control of the court, and I adhere to my previous decisions. I should be very sorry to see any disposition to narrow the construction of the Act under which the power of investment has been extended." Technically, of course, Lord Selborne, while sitting for the Master of the Rolls, may for the time have divested himself of his authority as Lord Chancellor. But as it is more than probable that his opinions in the Lord Chancellor's Court would be the same as those he held at the Rolls, it is clear that the unsuccessful litigants in the two cases we have mentioned would appeal against Sir Richard Malins' decisions with a certainty that they would be reversed. Perhaps the respective suitors, having in view the costs of appeal, will hardly be comforted by this knowledge. Meanwhile it seems that, for judicial purposes, a Lord Chancellor is not always a Lord Chancellor, but in a lower court may lose his dignity of a judge of appeal, and be regarded, both in theory and practice, as somebody else.—Pall Mall Gazette.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it

THE CHARGES OF THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.—There can be but one opinion as to the new scale of ad valorem charges promulgated by the Incorporated Law Society, namely, that in small cases the fees allowed are inadequate. It occurs to me that a satisfactory scale might perhaps be framed by a combination of an ad valorem fee, and special fees for particular parts of the work, somewhat on the principle of the scale for probates and administrations. Sufficient fees ought to be allowed for investigating the title, or else the client ought not to expect the practitioner to be responsible.

EDWIN HYDE CLARKE.

BEALL v. SMITH.—The order against Messrs. Merriman and Co., the solicitors for the plaintiff in the case of Beall v. Smith is, as you will observe, calculated to create "some alarm in the mind of the profession;" and it is of the greatest importance that the facts of that case should be correctly and fully stated, in order that we may know as nearly as possible under what circumstances we may venture to rely upon the orders of a chief clerk and the decrees of a Vice-Chancellor's Court, and be sure that these decisions, hitherto thought to embody an indemnity to the solicitors, do not in fact carry latent and tenable responsibilities to them. Will you permit me to say that I think it is incumbent upon Messrs. Merriman and Co., in the interest of the Profession as well as for their own sakes, to let us know what are the facts on which they rest their appeal? If they can show complete bona fides, or, as Vice-Chancellor Wickens puts it, if nothing more has occurred on their part than "an error of judgment," they are entitled to the sympathy of the Profession now, and their gratitude hereafter, if they can reverse the decision of the Lords Justices, and if they satisfy the Profession at once upon that point we ought in reality to make their cause our own. There would appear to me no good reason why Messrs. Merriman and Co. should hesitate to lay that statement before the readers of the LAW TIMES, as the case has already been twice before the courts, and the evidence has now become (like the judgment itself) public property. The test of bona fides I take to be this: Was anything material, or was indeed any fact known to Messrs. Merriman and Co., concealed from the court? If the Vice-Chancellor and his chief clerk were made acquainted with all the facts of the case, it would appear to be a cruel decision which visits the solicitors with punishment for an error of judgment in which the court (as the Vice-Chancellor says), must in that case have participated, and so made its own. If on the other hand, Messrs. Merriman and Co. have not acted with perfect frankness towards the court, and if they have withheld any facts from its knowledge, then the Profession can have no sympathy with them, and the decision will moreover, when rightly understood, carry no alarm into the ranks of the Profession.

A SOLICITOR

[We have received elaborate affidavits from Messrs. Merriman, who inform us that they think of applying to the full court for a re-hearing.—ED. L. T.]

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

NOTICE.—We must remind our correspondents that this column is not open to questions involving points of law such as a solicitor should be consulted upon. Queries will be excluded which go beyond our limits.

N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

43. ADMISSION TO FINAL EXAMINATION.—I wish to pass my final examination in Easter Term 1874, and to be then admitted, but my articles do not expire until the 12th May, and the day for admission will be the 13th May. Can I accomplish my object without much trouble and expense, if not, when can I be admitted? as 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127 s. 12 indicates that even in vacation one can be admitted on an affidavit verifying the expiration of one's articles. W. D.

44. LEGATEE—DUTY.—A. B. by his will bequeathed £100 to C. D. the illegitimate son of his brother H. D., but A. B. after the execution of his will gave C. D. £100 which was intended in lieu of the legacy given by the will. A. B. is dead, and C. D. does not claim the legacy of £100 from the executors of A. B., and is prepared to execute a disclaimer of the legacy of £100. The residuary legatee of the will of A. B. (who, in consequence of C. D. disclaiming the legacy of £100, is entitled thereto) is a brother of the testator. What legacy duty is payable upon the £100? The original legatee who disclaims is liable to pay £10 per cent., but the brother, who actually receives the money in consequence of A. B. disclaiming, is liable at the rate of £3 per cent. JUSTITIA.

45. FEE FOR SEARCH.—In obtaining a marriage certificate, is the fee of 1s. for a search payable where the exact day of the month and year are given? A. C. C.

46. ALLOTMENT OF STOCK.—Will any of your readers say what is the practice with reference to allotments of new shares in respect of ordinary stock held under settlement? The Great Western Railway and Midland Railway have lately issued new shares to the holders of ordinary stock which command a premium from the date of allotment. Supposing £1000 ordinary stock in either of the above lines held by trustees under marriage settlement in trust, say for the lady for life; an allotment of new stock is made; the trustees have refused to take it up. Would the trustees in this case be justified in handing over the premium which may be obtained on selling the new stock to the lady, treating it as division or bonus, or are they bound to treat it as capital. The question must have arisen continually of late, but we are not aware of any decision on the point, and we should be glad to know what is the practice. B. AND W.

47. EASEMENT.—A. purchased a house and garden some three years ago. The garden is bounded on one side by the gable end of a house belonging to B. (acquired about sixteen years ago), to which gable end are nailed fruit trees belonging to A., which have been there, or trees in their stead, for upwards of twenty years. B. a short time ago placed (without permission) a spout along this gable end over the land of A., and upon being requested to sign an agreement that such spout remained only by sufferance, and was to be taken away at A.'s request, he refused, unless A. likewise gave an agreement in similar terms as to the trees nailed on his house end. As A. and his ancestors in title have enjoyed the easement of nailing the trees to the house now belonging to B. for upwards of twenty years without any agreement, has he not acquired the right to do so. Please say what are A.'s rights, and refer me to cases: and, should A. have no right, please say what B. can compel A. to do.. S.

48. PRACTICE—COVENANT FOR PRODUCTION OF DEEDS AND INDEMNITY OF VENDOR AGAINST LIABILITY UNDER FORMER COVENANT.—A., who is seised in fee simple of an estate, sometime since sold a portion of it to B. in fee simple, and on such sale A., for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, entered into an unqualified covenant to produce the deeds, &c., to B., his heirs and assigns. Of course, every tyro in conveyancing knows such a covenant runs with the land. A. has recently contracted to sell the estate to C. Is A., on conveying the estate, and handing over the deeds, &c., to C., entitled to require a covenant from C. to himself to produce the deeds, &c., and to indemnify him against liability under the former covenant. In an old edition of Dart and of Sugden on Vendors and Purchasers it is stated that A. would be so entitled. Will any of your correspondents kindly communicate their views on the point, and say whether there has been any recent decision either relaxing or abrogating the rule. A SUBSCRIBER.

49. COUNTY COURT—REMITTED ACTION.—The defendant in an action commenced in Exchequer for £25 (on contract) gets it referred to a County Court under the Act of 1867. The plaintiff's attorney unreasonably delays to lodge the writ, &c., at the County Court office. What steps should defendant's attorney take to compel the plaintiff to obey the order, lodge the writ, &c? Should defendant's attorney give plaintiff's attorney the original judge's order to lodge with the writ or only the usual copy order. An early reply will much oblige. GEORGIUS.

Answers.

(Q. 42.) CONVEYANCE—STAMP.—The ordinary stamp duty of £1 10s. is sufficient, the case being analogous to that of a conveyance of a reversion expectant on a lease to the lessee who purchases under an option of purchase given to him by the lease. T. E. H.

(Q. 35.) BILL OF COSTS, &c.—In the case of an amicable client, it appears that my plan holds good, admitting Owl to be correct otherwise. The legal business done by A. is distinct from that done by A. and B., and the partnership deed should regulate the profits, between the parties, showing the different shares and the periods of distribution? C. C.

(Q. 12.) POOR LAW.—The insertion of the following correspondence with the Local Government Board on the above subject will oblige.—"Sir,—Will you kindly favour me with a reply whether a grandson is liable to support his grandfather? I am referred by some to 43 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 6 and 7, and the last edition of Archbold's Poor Law, in the index of which I find, under 'grandfather,' liability to maintain grandchildren and to be maintained by them. I cannot, however, discover anything in the page referred to in the index bearing on the subject, but the cases cited may contain some observations of the judges who tried them and considered as law. I am told by others that this was the existing state of the law until overruled by a case reported in the Justice of the Peace, vol. 31, p. 755. I have not been able to obtain a copy of this, being rather an old number. The favour of your replying to the simple question of liability or non-liability will greatly oblige.—I beg to remain, &c. The Secretary, Local Government Board."——"Sir,—I am directed by the Local Government Board to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and in reply to inform you that a grandson is under ordinary circumstances liable by the general law to contribute towards the support of his grandfather.—I am Sir, &c., DANBY P. FRY, Assistant Secretary." PAUPER.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE UNION SOCIETY OF LONDON.

AT a meeting of the Union Society of London, at 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, held on Tuesday evening, the 16th inst., the following subject was submitted to discussion and carried, "That in the opinion of this house the system of representation should be by personal instead of local constituencies."

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at Clement's Inn Hall, on Wednesday, the 17th Dec., Mr. T. B. Girling, in the chair. Mr. Wingfield opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz., "That it is desirable to make military service compulsory on all." The motion was lost by a majority of two.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

AT the weekly meeting held at the Law Institution on Tuesday evening last, Mr. Hargreaves in the chair, the question for discussion was, No. 223 Jurisprudential: "Ought some purely civil form of marriage to be made compulsory in the United Kingdom?" After an animated debate the question was decided in the negative. The next meeting will be held on Jan. 6.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

E. N. AYRTON, ESQ.

THE late Edward Nugent Ayrton, Esq., who died very suddenly on the 28th ult., from an attack of serous apoplexy, at his residence at Bexhill, Sussex, in the fifty-eighth year of his age, was the second son of the late Frederick Ayrton, Esq., an advocate in the Supreme Court of Bombay, by Julia, daughter of the late Lieut.-Col. Nugent, and he was brother of the Right Hon. A. S. Ayrton, M.P., the present Judge Advocate-General. Mr. Ayrton was born at Richmond, Surrey, in the year 1815, and was educated at Ealing, of which then large and well-known school he was "captain" at the early age of thirteen. He subsequently went to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in honours in 1836. After taking his degree he spent some years in foreign travel, and was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn in Michaelmas Term 1845. Mr. Ayrton practised at the Equity Bar, and as a conveyancer, and though not widely known to the public, he was appreciated highly by those who knew him for his deep and scientific knowledge of the principles of equity and real property law, and for his varied learning and cultivation; he contributed leading articles to various newspapers of advanced Liberal politics; he also wrote frequently in the LAW TIMES. Mr. Ayrton published one or two pamphlets on the subject of a decimal coinage (which he maintained should be established without disturbing the existing copper currency), and on improvements in the law of real property. On the passing of Lord Westbury's Transfer of Land Act, he was also the author of an exhaustive work upon the same subject. Outside his profession also he was a man of high and varied accomplishments, and his friends regarded him as an excellent scholar. Mr. Ayrton's health failed in the summer of 1871, and from that time he ceased to practise at the bar. His loss will be severely felt by many to whom he had endeared himself.

E. S. CHANDOS-POLE, ESQ.

THE late Edward Sacheverell Chandos-Pole, Esq., of Radburne Hall, Derbyshire, barrister-at-law who died on the 30th ult., in the forty-eighth year of his age, was the eldest son of the late Edward Sacheverell Chandos-Pole, Esq., of Radburne, a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant, and formerly High Sheriff of Derbyshire, who died in 1863; his mother was Anna Maria, daughter of the Rev. Edward Sacheverell Wilmot, and he was born in the year 1826. Mr. Chandos-Pole was educated at Eton and at Oriel College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple in Hilary Term 1867. He was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Derbyshire, and served as High Sheriff of that county in 1867. According to Sir Bernard Burke, there is scarcely an existing family which can deduce so ancient a pedigree, combined with historic importance, as that of the gentleman whose death we here record. Representing the great house of Chandos, of Radburne, and a younger branch of the Ferrars, Earls of Derby, the Poles derive an uninterrupted descent from the time of William the Conqueror, and have ever maintained a leading position in the counties in which they have been seated. In 1807 Sacheverell Pole, Esq., of Radburne, grandfather of the gentleman now deceased, assumed, by sign manual, as representative of the great Sir John Chandos, K.G., the additional surname and arms of Chandos. The late Mr. Chandos-Pole married, in 1850, Lady Anna Carolina, elder daughter of Leicester, fifth Earl of Harrington, by whom he has left a family to lament his loss.

H. R. SOUTHEE, ESQ.

THE late Horace Robert Southee, Esq., solicitor, of Ely-place, London, who died at his residence in Guilford-street, Russell-square, on the 12th inst., in the forty-fourth year of his age, was the eldest son of Robert Southee, Esq., solicitor, of Ely-place, and of the Rue d'Amsterdam, Paris. He was born in the year 1830, and was admitted a solicitor of Trinity Term, 1861, and was in partnership with his father in Ely-place. He was also a commissioner to administer oaths in the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer.

R. J. BERKELEY, ESQ., Q.C.

THE late Robert James Berkeley, Esq., Q.C., of Upper Mount-street, Dublin, who died recently at Monkstown, near Dublin, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1826, and proceeded M.A. 1832. He was called to the Bar at Dublin in Hilary Term, 1830, and was appointed a Queen's Counsel in 1832. Mr. Berkeley married, in 1837, Clara Maria, youngest daughter of the late Hon. Major Edward De-Moleyns, and granddaughter of Thomas, first Lord Ventry in the Peerage of Ireland.

H. S. P. WINTERBOTHAM, ESQ.

THE death is announced of Henry Selfe Page Winterbotham, Esq., M.P., barrister-at-law, and Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department. The deceased gentleman had gone to Italy with the view of benefiting his health, which had been somewhat impaired by excessive application to his official duties, and the change of scene and relaxation had, it was thought, produced the desired effect; he was, however, suddenly seized with illness at Rome on Saturday last, and died in a few hours. Mr. Winterbotham was the second son of the late Lindsey Winterbotham, Esq., a banker, of Stroud, in Gloucestershire, who died in 1871, and his mother was Sarah Ann Selfe, daughter of the Rev. Henry Page. He was born in March 1837, so that he was now in the prime of life, being only in the thirty-seventh year of his age. Born of Nonconformist parents, Mr. Winterbotham was educated at Amersham School, Bucks, whence he proceeded to University College, London, where he graduated with honours, taking his B.A. degree in 1856, and LL.B. in 1859. He was Hume Scholar in Jurisprudence in 1858, Hume Scholar in Political Economy in 1859, and University Law Scholar in the same year. In 1860 he was elected Fellow of his college. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's-inn in Michaelmas Term 1860, and practised at the Chancery Bar, and as a conveyancer, till he was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in March 1871. He had represented Stroud, in the Liberal interest, in the House of Commons, since August 1867, when, upon the retirement of Mr. Poulett-Scrope, and again at the general election of 1868, he was elected by a considerable majority over Mr. Dorrington, the Conservative candidate. Mr. Winterbotham was one of the most rising new members in the ranks of the Liberal party, and his promotion to a higher office in due time was confidently expected by his friends, when he was thus suddenly cut off by the stroke of death.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY ARBITRATION.

GENERAL RULES.

Arbitration Office, 3, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, S.W., 5th Dec. 1873.

1. Applications to the arbitrator and cases to be argued before him are to be made or initiated by summons, stating concisely the nature of the application and being in the form in Schedule A to these rules.

2. The solicitors acting in the arbitration for the joint official liquidator by the appointment of the arbitrator are Messrs. Mercer and Mercer, Copthall-court, Throgmorton-street, and summonses addressed to the joint official liquidator are to be served on Messrs. Mercer and Mercer, and all communications respecting applications to and cases to be argued before the arbitrator are to be made to them.

3. All summonses and interlocutory applications will be heard in the first instance by the assessor.

4. In cases to be argued before the arbitrator the facts and submissions are to be agreed (if possible). Where the party taking out the summons thinks it reasonably possible that the facts and submissions may be agreed, he is to deliver a draft case to the opposite party or his solicitor (if any) within fourteen days from the return day of the summons. The draft case is to be returned within fourteen days from its receipt either agreed or not. If it is not agreed the separate case of the other party is to be delivered within fourteen days thereafter.

5. If the case is agreed it is to be headed as an agreed case. If the case is not agreed the case of each party is to be headed as a separate case.

6. Where either party considers it necessary that there should be separate cases, the party taking out the summons is to deliver his separate case to the opposite party or his solicitor (if any) within fourteen days from the date of service of the summons. Within fourteen days from the delivery thereof the respondent is to deliver in return his separate case.

7. A case is not to set forth extracts from the deeds of settlement or other deeds or documents printed in the arbitration, but is only to refer thereto specifying the clauses.

8. Three copies of the agreed case, or of each separate case, are to be lodged at least three clear days before the day appointed for hearing.

9. Six copies of a separate case are to be delivered to the opposite party or his solicitor at least three clear days before the day appointed for the hearing.

10. A separate case must be proved by affidavit or deposition, or by examination of witnesses before the arbitrator at the hearing of the case.

11. Evidence is to be adduced in the same manner as in the Court of Chancery, and examinations and cross-examinations are to be taken before the assessor, unless the parties or either of them desire that they be taken before the arbitrator at the hearing of the case.

12. Every affidavit is to be brought in for filing as soon as possible after it is sworn. There is to be a note thereon, stating by whom and on whose behalf the affidavit is filed, and notice of the filing is to be forthwith given by the party filing to the opposite party or his solicitor.

13. A written copy on Chancery affidavit paper of each exhibit to an affidavit (other than arbitration printed deeds or documents, or documents set forth in the case or an appendix thereto), is to be lodged at least three clear days before the day appointed for the hearing of the case by the solicitors to the party on whose behalf the affidavit is filed, and the solicitors to the joint official liquidator are within the same time to lodge a like copy of all admissions entered into.

14. Notice will be given by the secretary to the solicitors in each case of the day when it will be in the paper for hearing.

15. The arbitrator will hear one counsel or solicitor only on each side.

16. The party in whose favour an order is made is to bring in a draft order in the form in schedule B to these rules, and to obtain from the secretary an appointment to settle the order with the assessor. Notice of the appointment, with a copy of the draft order, is to be delivered to the opposite party or his solicitor.

17. Cases, affidavits, and other documents required to be filed or lodged, are to be filed or lodged with the secretary at this office.

18. Solicitors are to enter appearances with the secretary at this office.

19. Bills of costs are to be brought in to the secretary at this office. Requests for taxation are to be obtained from him, and taxing master's certificates are to be lodged with him.

20. Summonses, cases, and other documents required to be printed, are to be printed on Chancery Bill paper.

21. All communications respecting calls and other pecuniary matters in the arbitration are to be made to Messrs. Samuel Lowell Price, and John Young, the joint official liquidator, at this office.

22. All communications respecting the general business of the arbitration are to be addressed to the secretary at this office.

By order of the Arbitrator,
THOMAS PRESTON,
Secretary.

 Printed copies of the deeds of settlement and amalgamation of minutes of proceedings before the arbitrator can be bought at this office.

SCHEDULE (A).

Form of Summons and Indorsement.

In the Matter of The European Assurance Society Arbitration Acts 1872 and 1873
and
In the Matter of The

Let all parties concerned attend before me, the Right Honourable John Baron Romilly, the Arbitrator appointed under the above-mentioned Acts, at the Office of the Arbitration, No. 3, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, in the County of Middlesex, on day, the day of 187 , at of the clock in the noon, on the hearing of an application on the part of

Dated this day of 187

ROMILLY.

THOMAS PRESTON, Secretary.

To

 This summons was taken out by Solicitors for SCHEDULE (B).

Form of Order.

day the day of 187 .

In the Matter of The European Assurance Society Arbitration Acts 1872 and 1873
and
In the Matter of

On the application of [the Joint Official Liquidator of the above-named] by summons dated 187 addressed to and on reading the Agreed Case [or the Separate Cases] of the Applicants and of the Respondent to the Summons and on reading the Affidavit of , No. sworn the day of 187 and filed the day of 187 and on hearing counsel for the several parties, I the Right Honourable John Baron Romilly, the Arbitrator appointed under the above-mentioned Acts, order as follows:

1. * * * * * *

2. The Costs of the Applicants [or of the Respondent] of and relating to the said summons and case shall be taxed, and shall be paid to them [or him] by the Respondent [or by the Applicants out of the assets of the said].

COURT OF CHANCERY, 1873.

NOTICE.

During the Christmas Vacation:—All applications which are of an urgent nature, are to be made to the Master of the Rolls.

The Master of the Rolls will, if required, sit at the Rolls House, on Wednesday, the 31st Dec., 1873, and Wednesday, the 7th Jan. 1874. Any person desirous of making any application on either of those days, must give notice at the Rolls House before 4 o'clock on the previous Monday.

In cases of great emergency, applications to the Master of the Rolls may be sent by book-post, accompanied with the brief of counsel, indorsed with the terms of the order applied for, and a copy of such indorsement on foolscap paper with an envelope addressed to the solicitor making the application, and an envelope addressed to the Vacation Registrar, and such other papers as may be thought necessary.

On applications for injunctions or writs of Ne exeat Regno, there must be sent in addition to the above, a copy of the bill, a certificate of bill filed, and office copies of the affidavits in support of the application.

The counsel's brief sent to the Master of the Rolls, will, when any order is made thereon, be returned direct to the registrar, and a copy of the indorsement on counsel's brief of the order made will be sent by post to the solicitor making the application.

The address of the Master of the Rolls can be obtained at the Rolls House.

The chambers of the Master of the Rolls will be open on Wednesday, the 24th, and Tuesday and Wednesday, the 30th and 31st Dec. 1873; and Thursday, Friday, and Tuesday, the 1st, 2nd, and 6th Jan. 1874, from 11 to 1 o'clock.

The Equity Judges' Chambers (other than those of the Master of the Rolls) will be closed on Tuesday, the 23rd Dec. 1873, at 4 p.m., and be re-opened on Wednesday, the 7th Jan. 1874, at 10 o'clock a.m.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

N.B.—Announcements of promotions being in the nature of advertisements, are charged 2s. 6d. each for which postage stamps should be inclosed.

MR. THOMAS KING, of Brighton, solicitor, has been appointed a Commissioner for taking Affidavits in Her Majesty's Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, for Sussex and the adjoining Counties.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Dec. 12.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

EVANS, GRIFFITH E. builder, the Crescent, Stamford-hill. Pet. Dec. 9. Reg. Haslitt. Sols. Messrs. Miller, Sherborne-la. Sur. Dec. 23

HAZARD, GEORGE, draper, Albany-pl, Commercial-rd. Pet. Dec. 10. Reg. Pepys. Sols. Bannister and Co. Basinghall-st. Sur. Jan. 13

HOWSE, H. W. chemist, Staple-inn, Holborn. Pet. Dec. 10. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sols. Messrs. Piesse, Old Jewry-chmbs. Sur. Jan. 8

TRUMAN, WILLIAM SAMUEL, wine merchant, Botolph-la, Eastcheap. Pet. Dec. 10. Reg. Roche. Sols. Messrs. Lindo, King's Arms-yd. Sur. Jan. 15

To surrender in the Country.

CARTER, THOMAS, cattle salesman, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 4. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Jan. 6

ELAM, EDWARD, builder, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 10. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 30

GAZE, ROBERT, sailmaker, Runham. Pet. Dec. 8. Reg. Walker. Sur. Jan. 3

GUY, HENRY, commission agent, Clifton. Pet. Dec. 8. Reg. Perkins. Sur. Dec. 23

MAY, WILLIAM, shipping agent, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Dec. 6. Reg. Postlethwaite. Sur. Jan. 2
PLANCK, JOSEPH WILLIAM, builder, Trowbridge. Pet. Dec. 9. Reg. Smith. Sur. Dec. 24

Gazette, Dec. 16.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

JACKSON, HENRY, fruit salesman, Borough Market. Pet. Dec. 13. Reg. Roche. Sur. Jan. 23
VULLIMY, HENRY, surveyor, Gracechurch-st, and Fairview, Macaulay-rd, Clapham-common. Pet. Dec. 13. Reg. Roche. Sur. Jan. 15
WATTS, HENRY, hot water engineer, St. John-st, West Smithfield. Pet. Dec. 12. Reg. Murray. Sur. Jan. 9

To surrender in the Country.

HUDSON, HERON, provision merchant, Birmingham. Pet. July 15. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Dec. 30
JOHNSON, ELIZABETH, widow, Harborne. Pet. Nov. 26. Reg. Chauntler. Sur. Dec. 30
WILLIAMS, THOMAS SEYMOUR, dealer in Sheffield goods. Wyrley. Pet. Dec. 11. Reg. Clarke. Sur. Jan. 6
PUGH, MARY, spinster, Levenshulme, near Manchester. Pet. Dec. 11. Reg. Kay. Sur. Jan. 7

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, Dec. 12.

DAVENPORT, EDMUND SHARRINGTON, landagent, Bucknill. Oct. 3, 1866
FITZSIMONS, JOHN, out of business, Liverpool. Sept. 2, 1873
MCCOY, GEORGE, general hardware merchant, Liverpool. Aug. 7, 1873

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Dec. 12.

AKROYD, SAMUEL, butcher, Halifax. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 23, at four at office of Sol. Storey, Halifax
ATKINSON, JOSEPH FREEMAN, retired lieutenant, Southsea. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 31, at three, at office of Sols. Cousins and Burbidge, Portsmouth
BECK, CHARLES, grocer. St. John-st-rd, Clerkenwell. Pet. Nov. 27. Dec. 16, at twelve, at Mr. Hudgett's offices, 37, Gresham-st. Sol. Gray, Gresham-st
BISSELL, WILLIAM, axle manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec 23, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Collis, Birmingham
BLICK, JAMES, gentleman, Regent's-pk-rd. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 26, at two, at office of Sol. Vernede, Craven-st, Strand
BOWYER, GEORGE JOSEPH, gentleman, Brecknock-ter, Camden-rd. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 22, at eleven, at the London tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Sol. Crowther, Queen-st, Cheapside
BONBERNARD, LOUIS, commission agent, Cheapside. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 6, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Dutton, Strand
CLIFFE, JOHN GEORGE, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Barling, Manchester
CROUCHER, JAMES, baker, Southampton. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 24, at twelve, at office of Sol. Robins, Southampton
DALBS, GEORGE, builder, Parchmore-rd, Thornton-heath. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 2, at twelve, at Mullen's hotel, Ironmonger-la. Sol. Pullen, Harp-la, Great Tower-st
DILLON, FOSTER CREWE, clock maker, Tunstall. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at eleven, at the County Court Offices, Hanley. Sol Hollinshead, Tunstall
DIXON, DAVID, innkeeper, Garston. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 3, at two, at offices of Sol. Lowe, Liverpool
DYER, JOHN, baker, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 22, at three, at office of Sol. Parry, Birmingham
EVANS, WILLIAM, commission agent, Caebricks. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea
FULLWOOD, EDWARD, civil engineer, Queen's-sq, St. James's-pk. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at twelve, at the London tavern, Bishopsgate-st-within. Sols. Keene and Marsland, Lower Thames-st
GAME, THOMAS, harness maker, Tooley-st, Southwark. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Nind, St. Benet-pl, Gracechurch-st
GASS, FREDERICK, manufacturer, Bartholomew-close. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 30, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside Sol. Chidley, Old Jewry
GEORGE, JOHN OVERLAND, draper, Gooderstone. Pet. Dec. 3. Dec. 22, at twelve, at the County Court House, Downham Market. Sol. Reed, Downham Market
GILES, WILLIAM, of no occupation, Redruth. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 30, at three, at Paull's hotel, Chacewater. Sol. Trevena, Redruth
GILL, THOMAS, whitesmith, Taunton. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at one, at offices of Sols. Reed and Cook, Taunton
GOODALL, EDWARD PHILIP, commercial traveller, Berkeley-st, Hanley. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 24, at eleven, at T. H. and F. W. Tomkinson, Burslem. Sol. Tomkinson, Burslem
GRAY, JOHN, furniture dealer, Alfreton. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 31, at twelve, at the Black Boy hotel, Nottingham
HAMILTON, WILLIAM HENRY, corn merchant, Cardiff. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at eleven, at Barnard, Thomas, Clarke, and Co., accountants, Cardiff. Sol. Griffith, Cardiff
HEATLEY, JOHN, fruiterer, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 24, at two, at Gibson and Bolland, accountants, Liverpool. Sol. Williams, Liverpool
HORTON, GEORGE, pearl button manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 24, at twelve, at office of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham.
HOWORTH, THOMAS, and HOWORTH, JAMES, cotton manufacturers, Stacksteads. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 30, at three, at office of Sols. Sale, Shipman, Seddon, and Sale, Manchester
HUTCHINSON, JAMES, beer dealer, Chorlton-on-Medlock. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 26, at three, at the Falstaff hotel, Manchester
ISAACS, LEWIS, boarding-house keeper, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 24, at ten, at office of Sol. Burton, Birmingham
JAVAL, EDWARD CREMIEU, of no occupation, Lewes. Pet. Dec 8. Dec. 29, at two, at office of Sol. Smith, Gresham House, Old Broad-st, London
JEWELL, JOHN, boot manufacturer, Plymouth, and Tavistock. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 27, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Edmonds, Plymouth
JONES, JAMES MAURICE, grocer, Luton. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 22, at one, at office of Sol. Scargill, Serjeant's-inn, Chancery-la, London
KEATLEY, GEORGE, farmer, Sutton Coldfield. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 19, at twelve, at office of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham
KELLER, JOHN ANTON, japanner, Bloomfield-rd, Burdett-rd, Bow, and Railway-arches, Bow Common-la. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 31, at eleven, at office of Sol. Brighten, Bishopsgate-street-without.
KITCHENER, THOMAS, doctor of medicine, Chippenham. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 24, at ten, at the residence of the petitioner, St. Mary's-st, Chippenham. Sol. Bartrum, Bath
KNIGHT, GEORGE, law stationer, Gray's-inn-rd. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sol. Parker, Lombard-st
LAWRENCE, THOMAS, shopkeeper, Wollaston. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 19, at three, at office of Sol. Addison, High-st, Brierley-hill
LAWSON, EDWIN GEORGE, and LAWSON, HENRY, tobacconists, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham
LEONARD, EDWARD, out of business, Aston-juxta-Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 19, at twelve, at office of Sol. Kennedy, Birmingham
LUCKMAN, CHARLES JAMES, commission agent, Silver-st. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at two, at Ladbury, Collison, and Viney, 99, Cheapside. Sols. Davidson, Carr, Bannister, and Morriss, Basinghall-st
MACDONALD, DUNCAN GEORGE FORBES, gentleman, Eastbourne. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at ten, at the Crown hotel, Lewes. Sol. Barrow, Leadenhall-st
MCLEAN, JOHN, joiner, Lower Broughton. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, at three, at the Union-chmbs, 18, Dickinson-st, Manchester Sols. Messrs. Bond, Manchester
MEARS, ISAAC, gasfitter, Hammersmith. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, at four, at office of Sol. Parker, Cambridge-rd, Hammersmith
MITCHELL, ALFRED, hosier, Gloucester. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at twelve, at the Bell hotel, Gloucester. Sols. Burrup, and Coren, Gloucester
MITCHELL, WALTER, and SOUTH, HENRY, bedroom furniture manufacturers, Mosley-st, Curtain-rd, and City-rd. Pet. Dec. 9. Jan. 8, at one; sep. creditors of Mitchell, at two; sep. creditors of South, at three, at 10, City-rd. Sols. Roscoe, Hincks, and Sheppard, King-st, Finsbury-sq
MOLONY, JOHN, stationer, Brick-la, Spitalfields. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at two, at office of Sol. Copp, Essex-st, Strand
MOORE, JOHN, printer, Beaufort-bldgs, Strand. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at eleven, at Lomax, 3, Jermyn-st, St. James's. Sol. Morris, Leicester-sq
MURPHY, NEIL, fishmonger, Wolverhampton. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Stratton, Wolverhampton
O'REILLY, GEORGE FRANCIS, draper's assistant, Mansfield. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Hogg, Mansfield
PARISH, ALEXANDER, builder, Southampton-rd, Kentish-town. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 29, at two, at offices of Sol. Rodwell, Chancery-la
PIKE, JOHN, gentleman, Brixton-rd. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at three, at offices of Sols. Manning, Great George-st, Westminster
PLOWMAN, WILLIAM, and TAYLOR, WILLIAM, grocers, Wandsworth-rd. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, joint creditors at two; sep. creditors of Taylor, at three, at office of Sols. Harper, Broad, and Battock, Hood-la
RIPPIN, AMOS, and RIPPIN, JOSEPH, curriers, Geddington. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 29, at twelve; sep. creditors of J. Rippon, at half-past twelve, at office of Sol. Rawlins, Market Harborough
RODMAN, GEORGE, cabinet maker, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Essery, Bristol
ROSE, WILLIAM, stocktaker, Middlesborough. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 22, at eleven, at Bennison and Co., accountants, Middlesborough. Sol. Dobson
ROSSINGTON, JOSEPH WILLIAM, builder, Boston. Pet. Dec. 9, Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Dyer, Boston
ROXBURGH, WILLIAM, draper, Kingston-on-Thames. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 24, at twelve, at office of Sol. Bennet, Friday-st
SALVIDGE, JAMES, victualler, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 20, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Essery, Bristol
SAMBROOK, JOHN, and SAMBROOK, SAMUEL, builders, Stoke-on-Trent. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Stoke-on-Trent
SEPHTON, WILLIAM, marble mason, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Pemberton, Liverpool
SMITH, CHARLES, commission agent, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at eleven, at J. Downing, All Saints-la, Exchange, Bristol.
STACEY, SAMUEL, and STACEY, BENJAMIN, wholesale stationers, High-st, Shoreditch, and New-inn-yard. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, joint creditors, at two; sep. creditors of S. Stacey, at half-past three; sep. creditors of B. Stacey, at four, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Angell
STEPHENS, SAMPSON, wine merchant, Penryn and Truro. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 27, at twelve, at the Inns of Court hotel, Holborn. Sol. Jenkins, Penryn
STEPHENSON, CHARLES, cabinet maker, Huddersfield. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, at eleven, at office of Sol. Berry, Huddersfield
STONE, FRANCIS, builder, Oxford. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at eleven, at St. Michael's-chmbs, Ship-st, Oxford. Sols. Hurford and Taylor
SWINDELLS, JOHN, innkeeper, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at ten, at office of Sol. Marlow, Manchester
TAYLOR, JAMES, publican, Crewe. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23. at eleven, at the Royal hotel, Crewe. Sol. Pointon
THIRKILL, JOHN, joiner, Bradford. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 31. at eleven, at offices of Sols. Lancaster and Wright, Bradford
THOMPSON, JOHN, draper, Birkenhead. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 26, at three, at office of Sol. Moore, Birkenhead
UTTLEY, SAMUEL FIELDEN, warp sizer, Walsden. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Shippey, Manchester
VICKERS, CHARLES, manufacturer of chains, Birstal. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at ten, at office of Sol. Wooler, Batley
WAGGETT, ALFRED, tailor, Green-st, Grosvenor-sq. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Sol. Richards, Warwick-st, Regent-st
WEST, HENRY, carpenter, Oxford. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec, 31, at one, at office of Sol. Thompson, Oxford
WILLIAMS, JOHN, out of business, Shrewsbury. Pet. Dec. 6 Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Morris, Shrewsbury

Gazette Dec. 16.

ACRES, WILLIAM, farmer, Standon. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at two, at office of Sol. Digby, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London
ARCHLIN, EDWARD, glass shade manufacturer, St. John's-st, Clerkenwell, Lea-bridge, Hackney, and Crickfield-rd, Clapton. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 5. at twelve, at office of Sol. Smith, Great James-st, Bedford-row
ASHWORTH, JOHN, and HALSTEAD, RICHARD, builders, Spotland. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at two, at the Wheatsheaf inn, Manchester. Sols. Hall and Baldwin, Clitheroe
BAKER, WILLIAM, baker, Southwick. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 27, at twelve at office of Bertie, 17, Great James-st, Bedford-row, London. Sol. Coombs, Brighton
BLACK, WILLIAM, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at three, at the Clarence hotel, Manchester. Sol. Woolley, Manchester
BRADLEY, FRANCIS, publican, Rochdale. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 29, at three, at the Hare and Hounds inn, Rochdale. Sol, Lomax, jun., Rochdale
BROWN, SAUL, jeweller, Sunderland. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Hope, Sunderland
BURLEY, HENRY RAWSON, fruiterer, High-st, Wandsworth. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 5, at three, at 10, Trinity-st, Southwark. Sol. Ody
CARNEY, CATHERINE, manager for a poultry dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 6, at three, at office of Vine, Liverpool. Sol. Ritson, Liverpool
DALE, HENRY AUGUSTUS, private hotel keeper, Bedford. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at eleven, at office of Sol. Tebbs, Bedford
DARBYSHIRE, WILLIAM, plumber, Southport. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at eleven, at office of Sol. Walton, Southport
DEAN, WILLIAM, painter, Saltburn-by-the-Sea. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 29, at eleven, at Mrs. Barker's Temperance hotel, Middlesborough. Sol. Bainbridge, Middlesborough
EAST, EDWARD, gunmaker, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 30, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Rooke, Birmingham
EDWARDS, JOHN, and WESTPHAL, ERNST HENRICH, commission merchants, Great Tower-st. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at twelve, at offices of Sols. M'Leod and Watney, London-st, Fenchurch-st
ELLIOTT, WILLIAM RICHARD, millwright, Plymouth. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 23, at once, at office of Willes, public accountant, 24, George-st, Plymouth. Sol. Chilcott, Tavistock
ESCHLE, FRIDOLIN, watchmaker, Swansea. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 29, at eleven, at office of Sols. Davies and Hartland, Swansea
GRAHAM, ROBERT, draper, Dudley. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at half-past ten at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton
GRAVELY, CHARLES EWART, provision merchant, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at three, at office of Sol. Lamb, Brighton
GREEN, FREDERICK, cheesemonger, Lower Wandsworth-rd. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 30, at eleven, at Peele's Coffee-house, Fetter-la. Sol. Marshall, King-st West Hammersmith
GREGOLINI, STEPHEN, brick manufacturer, Upper Bralles. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 3, at three, at office of Sol. Crosby, Banbury
GRIFFIN, JOHN, and RUDD, WILLIAM HENRY, glass manufacturers, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 29, at half-past eleven, at offices of Sol. Duke, Birmingham
GRIFFIN, WILLIAM, surgeon, Ledbury. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 29, at twelve, at the Feathers hotel, Ledbury. Sols. Messrs. Corbett, Worcester
HALES, JOHN, fruiterer, Wolverhampton. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 5 at eleven at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton
HANBERG, HENRY WILLIAM, tin merchant. Dock-st, Limehouse. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at two, at offices of Sols. Learoyd and Learoyd, South-st, Finsbury-sq
HASKINS, HESTER, widow, out of business, Wick and Abson. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 24, at three, at office of Sol. Peterson, Bristol
HAWORTH, JAMES, HAWORTH, THOMAS, and HAWORTH, ROBERT, cotton spinners, Bacup. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 29, at three, at the Derby Arms hotel, Bury. Sols. Handsley and Artindale, Burnley
HERRMANN, ALEXANDER, prestidigitateur, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 29, at three, at offices of Clennell, Great James-street, Bedford-row, London. Sol. Brandreth, Brighton
HILL, GEORGE HENRY, out of business, Wednesbury. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Sheldon, Wednesbury
HOCKENHULL, ROBERT, nursery gardener, Sale. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 7, at eleven, at office of Sol. Simpson, Manchester
HODGES, JAMES, grocer, Deal. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 7, at eleven, at 98, Middle-st, Deal. Sol. Drew
HOLLOWAY, THOMAS, chain maker, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 23, at eleven, at the Ship hotel, Barrow-in-Furness. Sol. Jackson, Ulverston
HUGHES, RICHARD, millstone manufacturer, Bunbury Heath, near Tarporley, and Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at two, at office of Sol. Bellringer, Liverpool
HOWSE, CHARLES, auctioneer, Chippenham. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at eleven, at the White Lion hotel, Chippenham. Sol. Dyer, Bath
IRELAND, THOMAS ROBERT, baker, Theobalds-rd, Holborn. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 8. at two, at office of Sol. Brown, Basinghall-street
JACKSON, MILES, coal merchant, Chester. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 31, at twelve, at office of Sol. Churton, Chester
JOHNSON, WILLIAM HENRY, surgeon, Lydd and Lenham. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 29, at half-past ten, at offices of Sol. Smith, Old Broad-st, London
JONES, ILES, grocer, Rhosymedre. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at two, at offices of Sols. Evans and Lockett, Liverpool
LANGE, DANIEL LARSEN, tailor, Trinity-sq, Tower-hill. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 30, at three, at offices of Sols. Ellis and Crossfield, Mark-la
LAWTON, JOSEPH, dealer in millinery, Middlesborough. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 2, at three, at office of Sol. Addenbrook, Middlesborough
LEAROYD, JANE, private lodginghouse keeper, Huddersfield. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 31, at three, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Learoyd, Huddersfield
LONG, JOHN CRAVEN, blacksmith, Eccleshill. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 31, at three, at offices of Sols. Fawcett and Malcolm, Leeds
LYNDEN, EDWIN, smack owner, Lowestoft. Pet. Dec. 9. Jan. 5, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Archer, Lowestoft
MARVIN, ELIZABETH, milliner, Regent-st. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at twelve, at 298, Regent-st. Sol. Alcock
MATTHEWS, WILLIAM JAMES, leather dressing case manufacturer, Newman-st, Oxford-st. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 8, at two, at 14, Southampton-st, Bloomsbury. Sols. South and Stacey
MAXWELL, JOHN, cotton waste bleacher, Bolton. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sols. Hall and Rutter, Bolton
MILLARD, ANNIE, general shop keeper, Bridge-st, Kilburn. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 31, at four, at office of Sol. Cambridge-ter, Hyde-pk
MORRIS, HENRY, joiner, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 5, at three, at office of Sol. Harper, Liverpool
NICHOLSON, WILLIAM, gentleman, Grayshot-rd, Wandsworth. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Reed and Lovell, Guildhall-chmbs, Basinghall-st
OLIVER, WALTER, tailor, Normanby. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 29, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Hunton and Bolsover, Stockton-on-Tees
PALETHORPE, THOMAS, agent, Nottingham. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 31, at twelve, at office of Sol. Shelton, Nottingham
PARRY, SAMUEL, cattle dealer, Wombourn. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 29, at eleven, at office of Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton
PHILLIPS, THOMAS EDWARD, packing case maker, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at twelve, at office of Sol. Griffin, Birmingham
PRICE, REES, commission agent, Llandewibrefi. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 27, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Griffiths, Carmarthen
RANDS, THOMAS, licensed victualler, Ealing-common. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 5, at two, at office of Sol. Pittmann, Guildhall-chmbs, Basinghall-st
RILEY, HENRY, and CLEGG, JOHN, builders, Accrington. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 30, at two, at office of Bannister, solicitor, Accrington. Sol. Nowell, Burnley
ROTHWELL, JOHN, and CLARKE, JAMES WILLIAM, builders, Kirchen-st, Ealing. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 24, at eleven, at offices of Kent, Fiaxman, Haydon, and Co., accountants, 55, Basinghall-st. Sol. Warrand, Ludgate-hill
SAINSBURY, WILLIAM WARSDEN, out of business, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 29, at two, at office of Gibson and Bolland, accountants, Liverpool. Sol. Ritson, Liverpool
SIMS, REUBEN, wine merchant, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 29, at two, at the Victoria hotel, Preston. Sol. Gilbertson, Preston
SMURTHWAITE, THOMAS, mantle manufacturer, Almorah-rd, Islington. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 31, at twelve, at office of Sol. Child, South-sq, Gray's-inn
SPODE, MARTIN, furniture broker, Chester. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sol. Nordon, Chester
SPURWAY, JAMES, publican, Colyford. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 6, at twelve, at the Dolphin inn, Colyton. Sol. Wilton, Colyton
STOREY, WILLIAM HOLLINGWORTH, cordwainer, Navenby. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 3, at eleven, at office of Jay, public accountant, Lincoln. Sols. Toynbee and Larken, Lincoln
SUGDEN, WILLIAM, grocer, Kildwick. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 24. at eleven, at office of Rawson, George, and Wade, solicitors, Bradford. Sols. Wright and Waterworth, Keighley
SWAINSON, WILLIAM, wood turner, Durham. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 29, at twelve, at offices of Sols, Hunton and Bolsover, Stockton-on-Tees
TAYLOR, WILLIAM, blacksmith, Gayton. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 30, at twelve, at office of Sols. Glasier and Mason, King's Lynn
TESSEYMAN, JOHN MARTIN, fishing smack owner, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. Dec. 16. Dec. 19, at two, at office of Sol. Laverack, Kingston-upon-Hull
THOMPSON, EDMUND, hat dealer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 2, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Clavering, Newcastle-upon-Tyne
WATMOUGH, WILLIAM, plumber, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 12, Dec. 29, at three, at office of Sols. Sale, Shipman, Seddon, and Sale, Manchester
WELLS, WILLIAM, out of business, Maidenhead. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 6, at half-past two, at the White Horse, High-st, Maidenhead. Sol. Burr, St. Mary's-sq, Paddington, London
WHALLEY, JOHN WILLIAM, bookkeeper, Blackburn. Pet. Dec. 10. Jan. 2, at three, at office of Sols. Hall and Holland, Blackburn
WILCOX, JAMES JOSEPH, baker, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 10. Dec. 30, at eleven, at office of Sol. Mills, Brighton
YOUNG, SAMUEL, brushmaker, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 10, Dec. 29, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Duke, Birmingham
ZEWYBAUM, ABRAM BEAR, (commonly known as Barnett, Abram Bear), builder, Beaumont-sq, Mile End-rd. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 6, at three, at offices of Sols. Ingle, Cooper, and Holmes, City Bank-chmbs, Threadneedle-st

Dividends.

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Anderson, J. C. clerk, 12s. At Sol. Jaques, Birmingham.—Bailey, J. bootmaker, 2s. At Sol. Sherratt, Wrexham.—Collins, H. W. of Woodbridge, first, 4s. At Trust. W. J. Andrews, Church-st, Woodbridge.—Garrett, J. chemical manufacturer, first, 1s. 6d.; final, 1s. 3d. At Trust. P. B. McQuie, Albert-bdgs, Preston's-row, Liverpool.—Head, W. B. hotel keeper, second and final, 3½d. At Trust. J. A. Josolyne, 28, King-st, Cheapside.—Moore, A. first and final, 10s. At Trust. H. W. Banner, 24, North John-st, Liverpool.—Moore, J. first and final, 10s. At Trust. H. W. Banner, 24, North John-st, Liverpool.—Pollexfen, E. chemist, first 2s. 6d. At Trust. A. C. R. Adcock, 20, South-st, Horncastle.—Sharp, M. D. commission merchant, second, 2s. 6d. At Trust. H. Bolland, 10, South John-st, Liverpool.—Smith, Rev. P. clerk in holy orders, 1s. Trust. C. Other, jun.—Whitworth, G. W. hop merchant, first, 2s. and not 2s. 3d. as advertised in Gazette Nov. 28

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Dec. 9.

GEDDES, WILLIAM BODDEN, miller, Warrington

BIRTHS MARRIAGES AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

BRANSON.—On the 8th inst., the wife of Reginald Branson, barrister-at-law, Bombay, of a son.
DRUMMOND.—On the 11th inst., at 3, Lyndhurst-road, Peckham, the wife of Patrick William Drummond, solicitor, formerly of Croydon, of a daughter.
KNOWLES.—On the 13th inst., at Surbiton, the wife of George Knowles, barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

DEATHS.

MYRES.—On the 14th inst., at Ribbleside House, Preston, aged 65 years, Alderman Miles Myres, for twenty-one years Coroner for the Hundred of Amounderness, and thrice Mayor of Preston.
OXENHAM.—On the 12th inst., at 17, Earl's-terrace, Kensington, aged 74 years, George Nutcombe Oxenham, Esq., barrister-at-law, Western Circuit, formerly Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford.
SCOTT.—On the 7th inst., at an advanced age, David Scott, Esq., Conveyancer, of 10a, Penrose-street, Walworth, and Middle Temple.
SOUTHEE.—On the 13th inst., at 97, Guilford-street, Russell-square, aged 48 years, Horace Robert Southee, solicitor.
STUBBS.—On the 18th inst., at St. Paul's Close, Wansall, aged 31 years, George Bradnock Stubbs, Esq., solicitor.

To Readers and Correspondents.

T. D.—Not for six months.
Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.
Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d., by post 5d. extra. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d., by post 3d. extra.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The LAW TIMES goes to press on Thursday evening, that it may be received in the remotest parts of the country on Saturday morning. Communications and Advertisements must be transmitted accordingly. None can appear that do not reach the office by Thursday afternoon's post.
When payment is made in postage stamps, not more than 5s. may be remitted at one time.
All communications intended for the Editor of the Solicitors' Department should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

AMERICAN REPORTS.
THE BARK IRMA—
Bottomry — Priority — Non-liability of master 549

HOUSE OF LORDS.
DUDMAN v. VIGAR—
Tithes—Modus—Conversion into tillage —Orchard 552

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.
BLACKMORE (nominal defendant appointed by the Governor of the Colony of South Australia) v. THE NORTH AUSTRALIAN COMPANY (LIMITED)—
Laws of South Australia—Northern Territory Act (No. 23 of 1863)—Northern Territory Amendment Act (No. 3 of 1868)—Construction 553

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
THE IMPERIAL LAND COMPANY OF MARSEILLES v. MASTERMAN—
Practice—Affidavit of documents—Sufficiency 559
Ex parte PIERCY; Re PIERCY—
Inspectorship deed—After acquired property—Money arising from moral claim 559
Re THE METROPOLITAN CARRIAGE AND REPOSITORY CO. (BROWN'S CASE)—
Company—Contributory—Qualification of director bound to hold shares 562
COPE v. EARL DE LA WARR—
Settlement — Construction — Shifting clause 565

ROLLS COURT.
LIVE v. HALL—
Power of appointment—Execution 568
SIDNEY v. SIDNEY—
Will—Codicil — Republication—Specific or general bequest 569
MAXFIELD v. BURTON—
Equitable mortgage—Agreement to execute legal mortgage 571

V.C. MALINS' COURT.
Re EXMOUTH DOCKS COMPANY—
Winding up—The Companies Act 1862, s. 199 573
SCAFFOLD v. HAMPTON—
Practice—Creditor's bill for administration 575

V.C. HALL'S COURT.
POWELL DUFFRYN STEAM COAL COMPANY (LIMITED) v. THE TAFF VALE RAILWAY COMPANY—
Railway Clauses Acts 1845, ss. 92, 115; 1863, s. 12—Use of railway by other persons 575

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
PRETTY v. BOSCAWEN AND ANOTHER—
Short notice of trial—"If necessary"—Meaning of 579

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
CROWTHER v. APPLEBY; Re SHARPLEY—
Attachment for disobedience of order to produce documents 580

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS 137
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 137
Relevancy of Evidence in Criminal Cases 139
Duties Payable by Reason of Death 139
The Liabilities of Solicitors for Improper Suits 141
LAW LIBRARY 142
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Topics of the Week 144
Notes of New Decisions 145
V.C. Malins' Court 145
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 145
Creditors under Estates in Chancery 145
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 145
COMPANY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 146
MAGISTRATES' LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 146
The Masters and Servants Act 146
Borough Quarter Sessions 146
REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING:—
Land Transfer 147
COUNTY COURTS:—
Aylesbury County Court 147
Norwich County Court 147
Reading County Court 148
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions 149
Court of Appeal in Chancery 149
Liverpool County Court 150
LEGAL NEWS 150
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Examinations at the Incorporated Law Society 151
Gentlemen who Passed the Final Examination 152
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ... 152
LAW SOCIETIES:—
The Incorporated Law Society of Ireland 152
Legal Education Association 153
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS 153
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Sittings in and after Hilary Term, 1874 ... 153
THE GAZETTES 153
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 154

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE Bankruptcy Court is evidently prepared to go any length in exercising jurisdiction under the 72nd section of the Act of 1869. We recently noticed that it was attempted to compel an equitable mortgagee of a fund who sought to recover the fund in the Court of Chancery to go into bankruptcy, because he was a creditor of the bankrupt mortgagor. In another case, heard on the 16th inst., the Chief Judge had considered that the Court of Bankruptcy had power to carry out a decree of the Court of Chancery in the matter of a partnership. Lord SELBORNE said that he did not concur in the view of the CHIEF JUDGE that it was competent for the Court of Bankruptcy to carry out the decree under the 72nd section. That section, he observed, gave very large powers to the Court of Bankruptcy to decide all questions necessary for the administration of a bankrupt's estate; but it did not enable it to draw within its jurisdiction the owners of property which was not vested in the assignees, or to work out a decree for dissolution of a partnership which had been previously made by the Court of Chancery.

AN interesting judgment on the subject of testamentary gifts to illegitimate children was delivered by Vice-Chancellor MALINS, on the 20th inst. The testator married twice. By his first wife he had two children, both of whom died in his lifetime, one only leaving issue. By his second wife he had two children, both born before the marriage. By his will he gave to his wife power to dispose of his property among "our children," and in the event of her making no will the property was to be equally divided between his "children by her." It was argued that by allowing the illegitimate children to come in under the will, the legitimate children would be excluded. The Vice-Chancellor said, however, that there is no rule to prevent legitimate and illegitimate children taking together as a class where it is intended they should do so.

THE Taunton election petition has evidently created an amount of excitement which seems likely to result in the introduction of some novel features into the trial. The first of which we hear is the framing of an affidavit on the part of the respondent, making extraordinary allegations against the petitioners as a ground for obtaining particulars of the alleged acts of bribery, &c. Before the application for particulars was made to the Judge, this affidavit had been published in a local newspaper. This would have been a sufficiently improper proceeding had the contents of such affidavit been true; being contradicted by four affidavits on the other side, it should certainly have been confined to the attention of the Judge. Proceedings, however, are to be at once commenced for the purpose of punishing this contempt of court, and to obtain redress for the libel. If election trials are to be conducted with this asperity, Parliamentary electioneering will become more hazardous than it has been hitherto.

THE particulars furnished to us concerning the changes on the Northern Circuit appear to have been in some respects incorrect. The appointments in the offices connected with the Court of Common Pleas, at Lancaster, consequent upon the resignation of Mr. HARRIS, have had the effect of making Liverpool the principal centre, instead of, as hitherto, one of the districts of the county subordinate to Preston. Mr. T. E. PAGET, who has for the last four years occupied the office of district prothonotary, at Liverpool, now becomes the prothonotary and associate for the whole county. Mr. HARRIS's successor at Preston, Mr. SHUTTLEWORTH, is to be district prothonotary for Preston, and deputy-associate for Lancaster; and Mr. E. WORTHINGTON, at Manchester, will act as deputy-associate for Manchester, in addition to his previous appointment of district prothonotary for that city. The registers of judgments and executions to bind land will be transferred from Preston to Liverpool. Mr. PAGET will not have to go either to Lancaster or Manchester Assizes, the district prothonotary for Manchester acting as deputy-associate there, and the district prothonotary for Preston acting as deputy-associate at the Lancaster Assizes. The new arrangements extend to Lancashire only, and do not affect the other counties on the circuit.

THE astonishment expressed by the LORD CHIEF BARON at the revelations made in the case of Edmonds v. Jeynes will probably be shared by all who perused the report. The plaintiff was a solicitor who had lived and practised at Newent for more than thirty years. Owing to the unfortunate circumstance that he had been personally concerned in litigation with some influential persons in the town he had become an object of dislike to persons who seem to have taken advantage of every opportunity to crush him. Some considerable period after the death of his wife he was charged with having murdered her. The coroner who held the inquest—when Mr. EDMONDS was committed on a charge of manslaughter—was a solicitor, who had been personally engaged in litigation with Mr. EDMONDS and had been defeated. Mr. EDMONDS was then taken before the magistrates, and the chairman on the occasion was Mr. ONSLOW, also an unsuccessful litigant in opposition to Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. EDMONDS was committed to the assizes to take his trial for murder. The grand jury ignored the bill, but he was tried for manslaughter and acquitted. To fill the cup of persecution Mr. EDMONDS was the subject of a special sermon from the parish pulpit by a clergyman who also had differences with the plaintiff, and was his bitter enemy; and lastly, the object of a malignant attack in a local paper—the Gloucester Mercury. For this libel he brought his action, and, we are glad to say, that he has recovered 350*l.* damages. The LORD CHIEF BARON said, in addressing the jury, "That we should have had an individual filling the important post of coroner who had himself been the plaintiff in a Chancery suit against the plaintiff, and the bill in which had been dismissed with costs, and who may therefore very well have been suspected of having entertained angry feelings against him —that he should have been the coroner presiding upon the inquiry —an inquiry neither more nor less than whether he was guilty or not guilty of the grave crime of murder—that we should have had an individual in this country filling and executing the functions of that public office under circumstances like these—that we should have had a magistrate, who had been unsuccessful in several actions between himself and the plaintiff, presiding as chief magistrate on the occasion upon an inquiry as to whether it would be his duty to commit the plaintiff for trial on the charge of murder —that all the proceedings should have occurred in this country, in which the law of England prevails, and by Englishmen—and, as they would call themselves, English gentlemen—is altogether to me something so improbable and so extraordinary that I should deem it incredible, but that it is proved beyond any kind of doubt before you." A magistrate and a coroner who can exercise their offices when a personal enemy's character and life are subject to their jurisdiction must be utterly unfit for their positions.

A remarkable feature of Nisi Prius trials, which has forcibly struck us during the sittings in Middlesex and London, is the frequency of the applications for a stay of execution. It would seem indeed that there is rarely any case of importance determined by a jury in which counsel for the unsuccessful party omits to apply either for leave to move or a stay of execution. The Judicature Act will do something towards limiting the grounds upon which new trials may be obtained, but we should be very glad to see the Judges withholding facilities for upsetting verdicts, whilst affording every opportunity to parties of raising matters of law by going to the full court. Juries are the constitutional tribunals for the trial of questions of fact, and it seems unreasonable that where there has been an unanimous determination of twelve men the court on some possibly immaterial misdirection, or admission or rejection of evidence, should send the case after protracted delay to other twelve men with equal chances of miscarriage. We can imagine nothing more calculated to disgust suitors with the law than the want of finality in the verdicts of juries. The expenses of new trial motions, and of new trials themselves, are frequently ruinous, whilst rules nisi are often kept hanging over from term to term until the grievance involved becomes stale. Staying execution is simply keeping succesful litigants out of the proceeds of a fair victory, and should be resorted to only in cases of surprise or palpable miscarriage. Of course, a Judge knows that when he is asked to stay execution it may be intended to impugn his direction to the jury, and he feels a delicacy in refusing to facilitate a review of his law. A little less sensitiveness on this head, we think, would be desirable in the best interests of the law, for uncertainty and delay are the two elements which now deter so many from seeking the regular and most satisfactory means of obtaining the redress of their wrongs.

An attempt has been made to get over the rule that a shipowner has no lien for freight when no freight has been earned. A charter-party provided that a ship should be loaded for Lagos with a general cargo, and bring back a cargo from Lagos, at 77s. 6d. per ton for freight and hire, £250 to be advanced on signing bills of lading and clearing out, £5 a day demurrage. After the vessel was loaded, but before she sailed, the charterers failed. Under the bankruptcy, the shipowner claimed a lien for freight. It was disallowed by the County Court Judge, but the shipowner appealed to the Chief Judge, and from the Chief Judge to the full Court of Appeal. The point is one of some importance. It was contended first, on the principle of cases as to concurrent acts, that the £250 became payable as a sum certain under the contract as soon as the captain was ready and willing to sign the bills of lading, and that that, therefore, constituted a sum certain immediately and still recoverable as such, notwithstanding that the whole contract was determined and the voyage put an end to. The Lord Chancellor said that if it were necessary to decide that point, there would be very great difficulty in applying the principle of the cases referred to to the case of the payment in advance, or at a particular stage, of an instalment of one entire consideration for one complete voyage or other service, where the complete voyage or other service had never been performed, and was on the non-payment entirely given up. But, assuming even that it were so, how, his Lordship asked, does it become freight for which the nautical lien arises? "It was admitted that it would not be ordinarily so; but it was contended that the lien was created by the express clause of lien. The express clause is, however, for freight, dead freight, demurrage, and other charges. It is not dead freight nor demurrage nor other charge, and it is not freight in the ordinary sense of the word. But the contention was that the word 'freight' here was not to be read in the ordinary sense, but that the clause was to be read in connection with the previous clause as to the payment of freight. The £250, it is said, is there expressly stated to be payable as part of the freight, and the freight is to be paid as follows: £250 in advance. Therefore, it was contended that the clause of lien was to be read thus—'for freight, which word is to include the £250 hereinbefore made payable in advance, and hereinbefore spoken of as a part payment of freight.' There is some ingenuity, but, in our judgment, no substance, in this contention. It would be an unwarranted thing to lay hold of a particular form of expression in one part of a charter-party or other instrument, in order to give to plain unequivocal language in another part of the instrument a meaning different from its ordinary meaning. The ship never earned freight, and never began to earn freight. That it was prevented from doing so by the default of the other party entitles the owner to full compensation for all the loss sustained thereby, but the compensation is not freight, and the nautical lien for freight does not extend to such compensation."

We report two County Court cases on the subject of delays on railways, in both of which the company was mulcted in damages. One of these was heard in the Norwich County Court, the plaintiff being the son and deputy of the registrar. A preliminary objection was taken under sect. 20 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, but there being no regular appointment of this gentleman as deputy registrar, the objection was overruled. The substantial question involved was whether the company was liable for delay arising from an accident. At the station from which the train was advertised to start there was only one engine; a tube in the boiler broke, and the engine was useless. The day following the plaintiff attempted to start from another station of the company, and was unable to get on owing to some luggage trucks having got off the rails. As to the first occasion, the Judge held that there was nothing to exempt a railway company from the responsibility which attached to coach owners in the old coaching days, namely, to be in a position to supply the place of a horse which broke down. He was disposed to think that there was gross negligence in having only one engine at a place like Wells (in Norfolk), the terminal station for two lines of railway. But if this doctrine of negligence apply at all it must assuredly apply to all stations, and it strikes us as straining the law to hold that a railway company is liable to its passengers for delay owing to an accident over which the company had no control, His Honour, however, has reserved his formal judgment. In the second case, which was heard at the Aylesbury County Court, a cattle dealer going to a fair was delayed so long that he did not arrive until the fair was over. The delay in this instance was owing to the stoker allowing the firebox to be choked, and the Judge held the company liable for the negligence of their servants, and awarded the plaintiff 40s. damages. These cases show a determination on the part of the Judges to keep the companies to the contract entered into with the public by means of the time bills, and if the public make a practice of insisting on their rights the general want of punctuality which now prevails may soon disappear.

A correspondent writes: "In the 'Topics of the Week' in your issue of the 20th inst. you refer to a decision reported in your County Court news contained in the same paper. The Judge is reported to have held that a husband is not liable to pay for goods supplied for family use by a tradesman with whom he had forbidden his wife to deal; and in your remarks you throw a doubt upon the ruling of the Judge and the authority of the case in the Common Pleas quoted by him in support of his view. I presume the case in question is Jolly v. Rees (10 L. T. Rep. N. S. 298), where it was held by Erle, C.J. and Williams and Willes, JJ. that 'it was not competent for the wife to make a contract binding upon her husband for necessaries suitable to her estate and degree, against his will, and contrary to his order to her, though without notice of such order to the tradesman.' It is right to say that Byles, J. dissented, saying: 'No private reservation of authority, or private agreement between husband and wife, not communicated to a tradesman honestly dealing with the wife by supplying necessaries for the family in the ordinary course of domestic affairs, can affect the tradesman's right to rely on the apparent authority of the wife.' Mr. Justice Byles's view is the same as that laid down by the Court of Exchequer in Johnson v. Sumner (3 H. & N. 261). The case in question (Jolly v. Rees) does not appear to have been cited in Phillipson v. Hayter, where the question was as to certain articles being necessaries, the implied authority of the wife to bind the husband not being otherwise rebutted. I think Jolly v. Rees may fairly rank with those cases where it has been held that a surety is not discharged by a binding agreement to give time to the principal, though made without his concurrence, if it is at the same time agreed that the surety shall not be discharged. In Smith's Manual of Common Law it is suggested that this last is contrary to principle. I may mention that I some time back moved for a new trial in a County Court (the defendant having previously conducted his own case and lost), on the authority of Jolly v. Rees, and under analogous circumstances, but the Judge declined to rehear the case." Our correspondent is doubtless correct in his conjecture; but so much doubt has been thrown upon Jolly v. Rees that we should not have thought it could be used to support the doctrine laid down by the learned County Court Judge. The utmost extent to which Jolly v. Rees can be carried, as it appears to us, is that a husband may by private prohibition to the wife prevent her from pledging his credit for necessaries in which he is no participator. In that case the necessaries were clothes for the wife and the children. The object of the majority of the court in that case was to give the husband absolute discretion as to his expenditure, and not to leave to juries to estimate what may be suitable to his station. But obviously no such question can arise where the necessaries are the necessaries of life consumed in part by the husband himself. Jolly v. Rees is doubted on principle by most text writers, and the judgment of Mr. Justice BYLES is inexorable logic, and we repeat that to apply the case as proposed would be an extraordinary extension of the law.

RELEVANCY OF EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES.

CONSIDERABLE difficulty is frequently found in applying the rule of evidence, which excludes proof of facts collateral to the point in issue. In the recent case of Reg. v. Cotton, an important question as to the admissibility of certain evidence of this character was raised by the counsel for the prisoner. The facts of this case will be fresh in the minds of our readers. The prisoner was indicted for the murder of a child by poison. It was proved that arsenic was found in the child's stomach, whereupon the prisoner's counsel endeavoured to show that the child might have eaten the arsenic of his own accord, or that, though administered by the prisoner, it was done accidentally. To rebut the presumption that the poisoning was accidental, the counsel for the Crown proposed to give in evidence the death from arsenic of other persons while in the prisoner's charge, or under her control.

This evidence was objected to on the ground of irrelevancy, but was eventually admitted. With a view to facilitate the future application of the rule which excludes proof of collateral facts in similar cases, we think that a consideration of some analogous decisions may be useful. It may be assumed as an axiom that evidence of collateral facts which are incapable of affording any reasonable presumption as to the principal matters in dispute will not be admitted, because it tends needlessly to consume the public time; to draw away the minds of the jurors from the real points in issue; to excite prejudice, and to mislead; while at the same time the adverse party, having had no notice of such evidence, cannot be prepared to rebut it. Though we confine our remarks to criminal proceedings, the same rule prevails in civil causes—the only difference being that probably in the former the exclusion of irrelevant evidence would be more rigidly enforced.

Such being the rule, let us proceed to consider the qualification suggested by it, viz., that where there is a reasonable connection between the principal and evidentiary facts, proof of such facts is admissible. Thus it is laid down in Taylor on Evidence (vol. 1 p. 334, 4th edit.), that when felonies are so connected together as to form part of one transaction, evidence of one may be given to show the character of the other. It might be inferred from this that evidence of collateral facts could not be relevant unless they were contemporaneous with the specific charges under consideration, but though a dictum of Justice Bayley in Reg. v. Ellis (6 B. & C. 147), would appear to support such a supposition, it is submitted that this is not now the law, and that proof of collateral facts is receivable in certain cases, though not occurring at the same time as the act charged in the indictment.

The first case to which we shall refer is one the facts of which bear a strong resemblance to that of Reg. v. Cotton. In Reg. v. Geering (18 L. J. 215, M. C.) the prisoner was indicted for the murder of her husband by arsenic in Sept. 1848. Evidence was tendered on behalf of the prosecution of arsenic having been taken by the prisoner's two sons, one of whom died in December and the other in March subsequently, and also of a third son who took arsenic in the following April, but did not die. Proof was given of a similarity of symptoms in the four cases. Evidence was also tendered that the prisoner lived in the same house with her husband and sons, and that she prepared their meals. This was objected to on the ground that the facts in question took place subsequently to the death of the husband, and that the effect of such evidence would be to show that the three cases of poisoning were felonious. It was conceded that the evidence would have been admissible had the facts taken place previous to the death of the husband.

Pollock, C.B., however, held the evidence receivable, as showing that the death of the sons proceeded from the same cause, viz., arsenic. "The tendency," he says, "of such evidence, is to prove and to confirm the proof already given, that the death of the husband, whether felonious or not, was occasioned by arsenic. In this view of the case I think it wholly immaterial whether the deaths of the sons took place before or after the death of the husband. The domestic history of the family during the period that the four deaths occurred is also receivable in evidence to show that during that time arsenic had been taken by four members of it, with a view to enable the jury to determine whether such taking was accidental or not." Alderson, B., and Talfourd, J. concurred with his Lordship in the opinion that the point ought not to be reserved. The above reasoning seems strongly to favour the view taken above, that collateral facts, though prior or subsequent to the crime for which the prisoner is on his trial, if sufficiently connected with the principal facts, are admissible in evidence.

In the still more recent case of R. v. Garner et ux. (4 F. & F. 346) the prisoners were charged with murdering, by means of arsenic, the mother of the male prisoner. Willes, J. here admitted evidence that Garner's first wife had been poisoned with arsenic nine months previously; that an attendant who occasionally tasted her food also showed symptoms of having taken poison; that the food was always prepared by the female prisoner, and that the two prisoners, the only other persons in the house, were not affected with any symptoms of poison. This evidence, as in the former case, was tendered and admitted for the purpose of rebutting the inference of an accidental administration of the arsenic. The same learned judge, in R. v. Harris (4 F. & F. 342) stated the true principle to be that facts should be received in evidence if the jury can fairly draw from them the conclusion that by the act of the prisoner an event similar to that charged in the indictment had previously occurred. The prisoner in that case was indicted for arson, and the evidence of his identity being weak, it was proposed to show that at a fire, which occurred a few days previously to another of the prosecutor's buildings, the prisoner was seen standing by, with a demeanour which showed indifference or gratification. This evidence was rejected, but it will be observed that it was tendered for a purpose different from that for which collateral evidence was admitted in either of the previous cases; it was here sought to eke out doubtful evidence of identity by ambiguous testimony of the prisoner's demeanour on former occasions, or, in other words, to establish by means thereof, the substantive charge, whereas in R. v. Geering, and R. v. Garner, the fact of the death being proved, and evidence having in each case been given connecting the prisoner with it, the evidence of other poisonings was admitted merely for the purpose of rebutting the hypothesis of accident.

In the very recent case of R. v. Balls (24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 760; 40 L. J., 150, M. C.), the prisoner was indicted for embezzling three sums of money from a coal society of which he was an agent. It was his duty to pay into a bank every Tuesday to the credit of the society the gross amount received by him in the course of the week, and he was charged in three separate counts with having embezzled the sums which should have been paid in on three successive Tuesdays. It was proposed to show that the prisoner had, during the three weeks, received thirty-one small sums amounting, in the aggregate, to the sums stated in the indictment. To this it was objected, that it would be admitting evidence of thirty-one different acts of embezzlement on one indictment. The evidence was received and the prisoner convicted. Cockburn, C.J., in giving judgment on a case reserved said, "We think this conviction is right. Where a man has to account separately for each individual sum which he receives, more than three sums or items cannot be put in one indictment, but that is not this case. Even in that case, however, if the purpose is not to prove the acts but to explain the intention and show that the omission to account was not an accident, evidence may be given of other instances than those charged for that purpose."

(To be continued.)

DUTIES PAYABLE BY REASON OF DEATH.

(Continued from page 105.)

THE second case to which we shall refer, viz., Attorney-General v. Cecil (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 20), has reference to the Succession Duty Act, the facts as reported being as follows: The Marquis of S. was, under his marriage settlement, tenant for life of certain estates, of which his son, Lord C., was tenant in tail. The Marquis and Lord C. in 1855 barred the entail, and resettled the estates to such uses as they should jointly appoint, and subject thereto to the uses of the old settlement. By two deeds dated in 1857 and 1860, the Marquis and Lord C. appointed certain of the settled estates to a trustee for a term of years upon trust to raise, upon the death of the Marquis, a large sum of money for the defendant. Lord C. died in 1866 a bachelor, and the Marquis died in 1868. The Crown claimed duty at the rate of 3 per cent. from the defendant as upon a succession created by Lord C.; but the defendant contended that under sect. 15 he was liable to pay duty at the rate of 1 per cent. only, which was the same rate of duty as his brother, Lord C., would have paid. The court considered that the defendant's interest was a new succession, of which Lord C. was the settlor, so that the case was excepted from the operation of the 15th section. We are inclined to think that the defendant was not liable to any duty at all. We admit that if by the disentailing deed the reversion in fee had been limited to Lord C., he should be treated as predecessor of all persons who took by reason of his death; but the 12th section of the Act provided that, so far as he was concerned, he was to be treated as if the disentailing deed had not been executed, so that had he survived his father, he would have been liable to pay duty at 1 per cent. upon the value of his succession, or, in other words, his estate tail. The fact of the time for raising the charge having been postponed until the death of the Marquis, was sufficient to make the charge come altogether out of Lord C's estate, and not out of that of the Marquis, and we think that the case fell within the 15th section. The word

"succession" means "any property chargeable with duty under the Act," and it cannot be necessary that the whole of such property should pass under the alienation, for sect. 43 empowers the commissioners "at the request of any successor or any person claiming in his right" to make separate assessments of the duty payable in respect of the interest of the successor in any separate properties, or in defined portions of the same property, and it would not therefore appear necessary that the whole estate or interest therein should pass by the alienation. A grant of a sum to be raised out of a reversionary estate is surely an alienation of so much of that estate as is necessary to meet such sum. If, therefore, a portion of a reversionary estate or a sum to be raised thereout is capable of alienation, we cannot see how a new succession arose in the case before us. There was already a succession, part of which was transferred, and that part was to fall into possession at exactly the same period as it would had no alienation taken place. Where was the new succession? If a simple transfer of a reversion, without consideration, creates a new succession through being a disposition within sect. 2, a similar transfer for valuable consideration would also fall within that section. We take it that the contention of the defendant's counsel that to create a new succession a new life must be introduced, upon the expiration of which some new interest is made expectant, is the true meaning of the clause, and, that being so, the defendant was only liable to contribute his share of the duty upon the whole of the property, or, in other words, Lord C.'s reversion, at the same rate and time as such duty would have been paid upon such property had no alienation taken place. No duty would ever have been payable in respect of such succession, for by the death of Lord C. the term for payment, which is fixed by sect. 21, never arrived, for he was the only "successor," and his life was the only basis upon which the calculation of duty could have been made. If Lord C. had survived the Marquis, duty at 1 per cent. would have been payable upon the basis of his life estate in the whole of the property, and it seems preposterous to say that he should have been so liable, and that the defendant should have been also liable to pay further duty upon the same property by the reason of the happening of the same event, and that Lord C. would unquestionably have been so liable is clear from sections 42 and 44. If Lord C. was not so liable, duty could be easily evaded, as, for instance, he might have limited the whole of the property or the greater portion to the use of his wife.

The third case to which we shall refer, viz., Forbes v. Steven has reference to the Legacy Duty Acts, the facts as reported being as follows: Sir C. with D. and E. carrying on business as partners under the style of C. and C., in Bombay, purchased the premises in which the business was carried on, and had the conveyance made to the three, their heirs and assigns. The partnership was a yearly one only, and in 1849 the partners were Sir C. and F., their shares being respectively three-fourths and one-fourth. Sir C. by his will gave the residue of his personal property to his grandchildren, and appointed English executors, and also appointed the several partners of the firm of C. and C. who might be living at Bombay at his death, executors of his will for the purpose of realizing his personal estate, including his dwelling-house and premises, and remitting the same to his English executors.

The premises in Bombay having been conveyed by D., who had survived E., to the executors of Sir C., were sold under an order of the Court of Chancery, and the purchase-money was paid into court, and an arrangement was come to for settling its distribution between the representatives of the several partners. The Crown claimed legacy duty upon the whole amount (F. having also died) upon the ground (amongst others) that partnership real estate is considered in the Court of Chancery to be converted into money, and is therefore liable to legacy duty wherever such real estate may be. James, V.C., decided that legacy duty was payable, and basing his decision to a great extent upon the decision of the House of Lords in Attorney-General v. Brunning (8 H. of L. C. 243), which declared that probate duty was payable upon the purchase-money of some real estate which the testator had contracted to sell in his lifetime. The Vice-Chancellor quoted with approval and adopted the words of Lord Chelmsford that "it certainly seems extraordinary that property which is recoverable by the executor virtute officii which belongs to the next of kin and not to the heir at law, and which has the character of personalty thus impressed upon it in every other respect, should lose that character solely in relation to fiscal liabilities. It is difficult to understand upon what principle the conversion into personalty is to stop short of this point," and the Vice-Chancellor added that he was asked "to hold that the House of Lords in Attorney-General v. Brunning, left this as the singular state of the English law, that whereas a conditional and contingent conversion, effected by means of a contract for sale, enures, when completed, for the benefit of the Crown, as well as for everybody else, an unconditional, immediate, and absolute conversion, effected by means of the contract of partnership, enures for the benefit of everybody else, but not for the benefit of the Crown. I am able to say that no such absurdity is chargeable against that tribunal, or against the English law." The Vice-Chancellor further stated "I have therefore, no doubt, that the produce of the warehouses, being the produce of a partnership asset, of which Sir C.'s estate has in fact obtained the lion's share, because it was purely and simply a partnership asset, is personal estate—personal estate to all intents and purposes—and that the residuary legatees, who are entitled to it only because it falls within the gift of 'the residue of his personal estate and property' must take it subject to the legacy duty which the law imposes on residuary legatees. It would take a good deal more than I have yet heard to satisfy me that a man can with the same breath say effectually in this court 'Give me the money because it is residuary personal estate,' and declare that it is not taxable because it is not residuary personal estate."

It appears to us that the conversion effected by means of a binding contract for sale entered into by the testator and afterwards carried out, and the conversion effected by reason of the property belonging to a partnership, are totally different. In the former the testator has by his express act done all in his power to change the property for another of a different character, and at his death the real property does not in fact belong to him, and if, for instance, it be of a reversionary nature, the death of the tenant for life between the date of the contract and the testator's death, will not in any manner affect his estate. It is true the legal estate is still vested in the testator, but that is all; he has, in effect, only a lien upon the real estate to secure the unpaid purchase money. In the latter case, however, the real estate does remain the property of the testator, and his estate will be affected by every fluctuation in its value. The object of equitable conversion as applicable to partnership property is solely to prevent the operation of a legal rule under which the survivors would become entitled to the whole of the property, which rule would clearly have an effect contrary to the intention of the several partners. To carry out this object the Court of Chancery has made a rule that partnership property shall be considered personalty let its nature be what it may. In the present case the law has vested the whole of the partnership realty in D., from whom it was necessary to obtain a conveyance before the court could carry out a sale.

We quite concur, for the reasons we have stated, in the decision of the House of Lords but at that point, for the purpose of fiscal liabilities, the principle of conversion must stop. So far as regards the public at large it matters not whether the real estate be partnership property or not, as it has to contribute to all impositions to which other real estate is subject, and that being so, why should the public be relieved of a portion of taxation, for that is the proper way of looking at the question, because, owing to the particular circumstances of the testator the property goes to his A relative instead of to his B relative. The question of conversion applies no further than to give the partnership real property, sold or unsold, to the persons who are the testator's legatees, instead of to the persons who are his devisees. Whoever takes takes in the first instance at least an interest in realty, with a power of obtaining the legal estate without a legal conversion, and why, therefore, should he pay duty in respect of the property which he gets which in its relation to the general public is realty, when other people who hold exactly the same class of property have not to pay such duty.

It will be noticed that the reasoning of the Vice-Chancellor would have been equally applicable in the case of a claim for probate, but in the present case, however, no claim for probate duty could arise as the property was out of Great Britain at the testator's death.

The Vice-Chancellor referred fully to the cases of Matson v. Swift (14 L. J., N. S., 354, Eq.); decided by Lord Langdale, and Custance v. Bradshaw (14 L. J., N. S., 358, Eq.) decided by Wigram, V. C,, and explained away both decisions upon the ground that the circumstances were different, as we admit they were. In both cases was the Crown unsuccessful in its attempts to obtain probate duty. In the former case the testator had by deed conveyed the real estate to a trustee, upon trust for sale, and after payment of certain charges for the testator "his executors, administrators, and assigns, and that without any claim or equity therein, by, or in favour of the heirs as real representatives of the testator, notwithstanding that the trust estate or any part thereof should or might remain unconverted at the time of his death." In the latter case real property used for the purposes of the partnership had been conveyed to the testator and his co-partners as Tenants in Common. In the case of Matson v. Swift, Lord Langdale stated: "In the present case an actual conversion was required, and has accordingly been made since the testator's death, and the produce of the sale has been by this court treated as the personal estate of the deceased. But I am of opinion that the Crown is not entitled to any benefit from that conversion so made, and that the interest of the deceased in the property was not subject to probate duty because, in fact, the interest of the deceased existed in the form of an equitable interest in land of inheritance, and not in the form of personal estate, in which form alone the administration of it could be granted by probate." And he was "of opinion that the money to arise, and which afterwards did arise, from the sale of the estate comprised in the deed, was not personal estate in respect of which probate was to be granted, and therefore probate duty is not payable upon it." In the case of Custance v. Bradshaw, Wigram, V.C., stated: "The case for the Crown was rested on this proposition that such property was in equity, though not in fact, personal property for all purposes. Phillips v. Phillips (1 L. J. N. S. 214, Ch.) was referred to as having carried out that rule and determined that real estate in such circumstances is personal estate for all intents and purposes. A decision against the Crown in this case would not conflict with that decision, or with the other cases upon the same subject, and consequently I am not called upon to express any opinion upon Phillips v. Phillips. All that is necessarily involved in the cases referred to, including that of Phillips v. Phillips, may be referred to this, that those whom property directed to be converted, is vested in or bequeathed to, are trustees for the owners of the personal estate, and the rule is fully satisfied by that interpretation." Again: "Those who claim under him are bound to take the property with the character which the testator has impressed upon it, but that does not alter the real nature of the property at the time of his death:" (Bourne v. Bourne, 11 L. J., N. S., 416, Ch.). Again: "The right to discharge the property from the trusts for sale on the part of the testator, or those who claim under him, is part of the original equity which, in the first instance, treats the real estate directed to be converted as personal estate." And the Vice-Chancellor concluded: "The argument, which at the moment had some effect on my mind, was that the interest of a deceased partner in the estate is an interest in the balance to be recovered in respect of the partnership accounts, but that, in my opinion, makes no difference. That is true as between the partners themselves, but it does not alter the nature of the property. The state of the accounts may render a sale unnecessary, and so may the acts of the parties themselves, so that no difference is made by that view of the case."

In the case of Darby v. Darby (25 L. J., N. S., 371, Ch.) two brothers had purchased land for the purpose of selling it again in lots, and the purchase money was paid out of moneys standing to their joint credit with their bankers, and the land was conveyed to them as tenants in common. After selling some parts of the land one of the brothers died, and Kindersley, V.C., held that the share of the deceased brother in the real estate "ought, as between the real and personal representatives, to be regarded as personalty." It is therefore fair to assume that the Vice-Chancellor did not consider such real estate should be considered personalty except as between the real and personal representatives.

We shall later on have occasion to refer to two or three other cases in Chancery in which a direction for sale has been held not to be a conversion out and out—or, in other words, for all purposes; and if there be but one state of affairs under which a direction would be held not to be a conversion, it seems to us but reasonable to hold that so far as regards taxation such out and out conversion should not be relied upon.

(To be continued.)

THE LIABILITIES OF SOLICITORS FOR IMPROPER SUITS.

In making some comments last week upon the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Chancery in the case of Beall v. Smith, we expressed our reluctance to commit ourselves to any opinion upon the merits, the matter being still sub judice—that is to say, there being the remedy of an appeal to the House of Lords. On reconsideration, however, we conceive that the question involved is one so intimately affecting the fortunes and characters of solicitors, that the facts of the case ought to be clearly understood, and if Messrs. Merriman, Powell, and Co. have been guilty of any misfeasance, that professional opinion should plainly express itself to that effect; but, on the contrary, if they have been made responsible for an error in law and in judgment to which the Court of Chancery was a party, they should be fully exonerated, and receive the sympathy of their professional brethren.

The facts of the case are very few and very simple. Beall was a warehouseman carrying on business in the City. In Nov. 1870, he first became a client of Messrs. Merriman and Co., he having previously, it would seem, been a client of a Mr. Heather. Messrs. Merriman received Beall as a client, but declined to undertake some complicated matters on which Mr. Heather was then engaged. Differences existing in Beall's family, his wife consulted Mr. Heather, whilst he himself was advised by Messrs. Merriman. To the credit of the solicitors for husband and wife, they appear to have made every effort to bring about a reconciliation, and this we mention at the outset, because Messrs. Merriman have been accused of mala fides. It is obvious that had such reconciliation been brought about, no stranger would have been introduced into the subsequent proceedings, and the suggestion that the solicitors wished to act independently of the family loses its weight.

The first step in connection with the lunacy of Beall was taken in the Greenwich Police Court. Messrs. Merriman appeared for him there, and urged the magistrate not to send him to a lunatic asylum; but on a medical report as to his mental condition, the magistrate made the order. According to the affidavit of Mr. Merriman, Mr. Heather agreed with him that it was undesirable to commence proceedings to have Beall declared a lunatic. The next step in the matter was taken by the family, who applied to Mr. Smith, Beall's manager, for an account of receipts and payments and the stock on the premises. Smith (according to Mr. Merriman's affidavit) consulted Mr. Alfred Turner (of the firm of Messrs. Sole, Turner and Turner), who, in consequence called upon Messrs. Merriman. We here arrive at a point when Messrs. Merriman are entitled to give their own version of the proceedings to prove their bona fides.

"At such interview," Mr. Merriman says in his affidavit, "he (Mr. Turner) stated that the defendant who was the plaintiff's confidential manager and agent had called upon him for advice as to how he should act and the said Mr. Turner explained the embarrassing position in which his client was placed and that he felt himself unable or unauthorised to carry on the business during Mr. Beall's absence if that was likely to be of other than a temporary nature because to carry on the business would involve the making of large purchases of goods the negotiation of consignments of other goods on commission and the entering into of engagements involving responsibilities which the plaintiff himself had always been accustomed to do and which the defendant had never interfered in. It also appeared that there was great danger of heavy loss arising to the plaintiff's estate through goods which were held on commission not being disposed of nor returned to the consignors and there were a number of debts and claims for payment of which pressing applications were being made and in respect of which hostile proceedings were likely to be taken had they not been prevented the loss and damage would have been incalculable for an execution or distress must not only have been levied upon the plaintiff's own property but also upon goods which were held on commission as aforesaid. There were also salaries wages rent and incidental expenses which it was desirable to curtail and stop. That I was not able to give Mr. Turner an assurrance that Mr. Beall would speedily recover although I informed him of my belief that a few months of seclusion and curative treatment would I thought restore his mental health. Mr. Turner said he could not let the matter remain open so indefinitely as the position was one of much anxiety to his client who desired to be relieved from the embarrassment and responsibilities of his position and that I as Mr. Beall's solicitor must do something because Mr. Heather representing some of the members of Mr. Beall's family had given the defendant notice that he would not recognise any of his transactions and that he (the defendant) would be held responsible for all the property in the business which was of very considerable value. That I discussed with Mr. Turner the expediency and desirability of closing Mr. Beall's warehouse and winding-up the business and depositing the proceeds upon security pending his recovery or being found a lunatic and the appointment of a committee of his estate but to this Mr. Turner pointed out that such a course would certainly be beyond his client's power and authority as Mr. Beall's manager and agent and that as Mr. Beall believed he had started a lucrative business the defendant might in the event of the plaintiff recovering (as I hoped he would recover) be liable to have proceedings taken against him for destroying the business. That I saw Mr. Turner on two or three occasions after this and we addressed ourselves to the difficulties of the case and I was greatly assisted by his experience and counsel as he had himself acted for Mr. Beall and like myself I believe he felt as he professed to do great sympathy for Mr. Beall's unfortunate position and a desire to aid and assist in doing the best that could be done for his interests and ultimately at Mr. Turner's suggestion we both agreed to take counsel's opinion in the interests of our respective clients with the view of arriving at the best mode of protecting the estate of Mr. Beall who was then in confinement legally incompetent to act for himself and at the same time to secure to Mr. Turner's client (the defendant) what he required namely a proper discharge and indemnity."

Messrs. Merriman thereupon filed a short bill, Beall (by his next friend) being the plaintiff, and Smith the defendant, the sixth paragraph of which alleged that "under the circumstances above stated, great difficulties have arisen with regard to the plaintiff's said business, and great loss will be sustained by the plaintiff if steps are not immediately taken to protect the plaintiff's property by means of the intervention of this hon. court, and in particular to wind-up or otherwise deal with the said business and the affairs thereof."

The next step was the appointment of a receiver—Mr. W. J. White, an accountant. He proceeded to realize the property, and by his affidavit he states that Mr. Heather, the family solicitor, approved of his proceedings. He says:

I have on several occasions during the proceedings in this suit communicated with Mr. Heather and consulted with him respecting the same, and particularly on the occasion of the said sale I caused a circular to be sent to him announcing the said sale, and Mr. Heather's son and partner attended the said sale by tender, and soon after such sale I saw Mr. Heather personally, and informed him of the result thereof, when he expressed his full approval of the sale and his great satisfaction at the result thereof, and throughout the proceedings in the suit Mr. Heather always expressed his satisfaction at my appointment as receiver and manager, and of my conduct in the matter.

And he adds that from his practical experience he could say that he believed the proceedings in the cause saved the plaintiff's estate from great waste and loss.

There appears to be some conflict of testimony as to what the proceedings were in the chambers of the Vice-Chancellor on the appointment of the receiver, but the Lord Justice accepted Mr. Heather's statement that, after objecting that the suit was unnecessary, he agreed to the appointment, but stipulated that no proceedings should be taken without notice being given to him. Vice-Chancellor Wickens in his judgment declared that he did not find this established. That the family thought they had a promise to this effect the Vice-Chancellor thought reasonably clear; and also that they ought to have had notice of everything done in the suit, both as a matter of courtesy and as a matter of right; "but," his Honour added, "as a matter of fact, I believe that Messrs. Merriman and Powell did not consider any such promise to have been made." In continuation of his judgment, his Honour said, "However, of the next step the family had notice. On the 14th December, 1871, it was proposed to sell the stock-in-trade. The chief clerk, as I gather, thought that this was beyond the functions of a receiver before decree, and probably suggested an immediate hearing, for the purpose of getting over that difficulty. The cause was therefore heard without notice to the family; but I am inclined to believe on the assumption of the petitioner's solicitors that when the family assented to the sale they assented also to the chief clerk's view upon this point." About the necessity for the decree, the Vice-Chancellor entertained doubt. The Lords Justices had no doubt: they concluded that it was altogether unjustifiable to spend a principal's money in giving relief and a release to his agent.

Up to this point, judging impartially of the facts, and remarking that although the Lords Justices were clear that nothing should have been done by the solicitors of the next friend for the purpose of obtaining a decree, the Vice-Chancellor was not clear that the decree was needless, Messrs. Merriman had proceeded in the ordinary way, with the consent of the Chief Clerk, and the Vice-Chancellor exonerated them from even the alleged breach of faith with the family in not communicating each step in the proceedings.

We now come to the lunacy petition. On the 17th Feb. 1872, while the suit was in progress, the usual petition for an inquiry was presented in lunacy. Messrs. Merriman had notice, and appeared for the lunatic, demanding a jury, and on the order for further consideration of the suit, obtained an order for the payment of their costs in the lunacy. On the 28th March 1872, Beall was found lunatic. From that time, in the opinion of Vice-Chancellor Wickens, the next friend and his solicitors ought to have considered their self-elected committeeship at an end. This they did not do, but they proceeded to pass the receiver's and Smith's accounts, and after the cause had been set down for further consideration, proceeded to partially distribute the funds without notice to the person having the conduct of the lunacy proceedings, or to the family.

Now with respect to the proceedings in lunacy, Mr. Merriman states in his affidavit:—

Immediately upon being served with the petition in this matter, I attended at the Chambers of the Master in Lunacy, and there saw Mr. Elmer, who represented the master on the occasion when I requested information as to the alleged sanction, desire, and requirements of the master, referred to in the 41st paragraph of the said petition, and particularly inquired what evidence or statement had been given by which the said petition was authorised to be presented, but I was refused any information whatever upon the subject, and although I stated to the said Mr. Elmer that I was a respondent to the said petition, and produced to him the copy petition which had been served upon me, he informed me that I had no right to the information I asked for, and I could not ascertain whether any authority had been granted or sanction given for the presentation of the said petition.

And when the order in lunacy was made, counsel's opinion was taken as to the effect which it would have upon the Chancery proceedings. The managing clerk of Messrs. Merriman in his affidavit says:—

The chief clerk having expressed a doubt as to the effect which the order in lunacy would have upon the suit, counsel's opinion was taken upon the matter, and he advised that the order did not affect the conduct of the suit, and that the same should be proceeded with in the ordinary course. This opinion of counsel was laid before the chief clerk, and he agreed that it was necessary to continue the suit until a committee was appointed, and accordingly the suit was proceeded with in the ordinary course.

He also states that the fact that a son of the lunatic had been appointed his Committee was not communicated to him by Mr. Heather or anyone else.

It was imputed by Lord Justice James to Messrs. Merriman that they were running a race with the lunacy proceedings. This is easily said, and if Messrs. Merriman had been fully advised as to all the circumstances of the institution of the proceedings in lunacy and their probable operation upon the proceedings in Chancery, the imputation might be justified. But we think it is perfectly clear that the solicitors were imperfectly informed and most unfortunately advised. Most unfortunately, also, the Court did not set them right, and itself became a party to the miscarriage.

Lastly, we arrive at the question of costs; and the Lord Justice having expressed his opinion that the solicitors were carrying on the suit for their own purposes, the question of the costs should be narrowly looked into. By order of the court in chambers, the costs of the plaintiff, as between solicitor and client, were directed to be taxed, including in the plaintiff's costs any costs properly incurred by and incident to the inquisition in lunacy. The receiver was directed to pay these sums out of the money in his hands. Those costs included amongst others the following items: 246*l.* to the accountant for investigating the books; the plaintiff's costs 207*l.*; the defendant's costs 57*l.*; and the receiver's poundage 144*l.* The Lords Justices made an order disallowing the amount paid to the receiver, and the plaintiff's and defendant's costs after the appointment of the receiver. This strikes us as a hard measure and rough justice. We have searched through all the papers very carefully and with the sincere desire to trace out any reliable evidence of a want of bona fides, and all that we can put our finger upon is the means by which an order for the taxation of the costs was obtained. Costs were included which the court were of opinion should not have been included; but the Vice-Chancellor considered that the representation upon which such order was obtained, if wrong, was not intentionally so. He remarked, however, "Independently of the peculiar circumstances of this case, it is I think the fundamental and necessary rule that a person who ex parte as this substantially was, and behind the backs of the persons entitled to object, gets from the court an order for payment of a fund which was wrong, and which he was bound to know to be wrong, although his intention may not have been otherwise than venial, cannot be warranted, on the ground of his success, to claim a right to retain what he so got. As a general rule, he must pay it back, and he must pay the costs occasioned by its having been done."

We quite agree that any costs which the solicitors brought within the order of the court, to which they were not strictly entitled, they were bound to repay, and with costs; but taking a full review of what the Vice-Chancellor well describes as the "peculiar circumstances" of this case, is there any pretence for saying that the solicitors acted otherwise than bonâ fide? They proceeded in the suit with the sanction of the Chief Clerk, and under the advice of counsel. They also acted under the special direction of the court in distributing the fund and paying the costs. From beginning to end we fail to discover either suppressio veri or suggestio falsi; and whilst the decree of the Lords Justices may be legally sound, we must consider the measure meted out to Messrs. Merriman exceedingly harsh, and we must retain the opinion which we expressed last week, that it is calculated to excite some alarm in the Profession.

LAW LIBRARY.

The Life of Lloyd, First Lord Kenyon, Lord Chief Justice of England. By the Hon. George T. Kenyon, M.A. London: Longmans and Co.

Memoir of Thomas, first Lord Denman, formerly Lord Chief Justice of England. By Sir Joseph Arnould, late Judge of the High Court of Bombay. London: Longmans and Co.

We regret that we have nothing very favourable to say of either of these works. The first probably would not have been compiled had not Lord Campbell taken so much pains to pass a severe judgment upon the character of its subject; whilst the second, expanded into two somewhat bulky volumes, might most advantageously have been compressed into one of moderate dimensions.

There were certainly events in the life of Lord Denman which justified the publication of a volume, and his character was high and noble, and such an one as it is desirable to keep before the eyes of aspiring lawyers. But we cannot help thinking that a great mistake is committed when as much care is bestowed upon the little and the domestic phases of the life of an eminent person as upon the great features of his career. The author of Lord Denman's memoir has not, however, limited himself to the minute details of the everyday life of his hero, but has indulged his readers with much weak oratory and third-rate literary productions. More than this, we are favoured in the appendix with some corporate addresses to the learned judge of the Common Pleas, Mr. Justice Denman, on travelling the circuit upon which his father won his fame. Sir Joseph Arnould has doubtless considered it incumbent upon him as a biographer to tell all he knew. A literary hack would have omitted the bulk of the mild speeches and homely letters which are set out in the pages before us, and would thus have toned down some of the Lord Chief Justice's foibles.

According to the present biographer, Lord Denman began life as a model baby, shone as a pupil of Mrs. Barbauld's, and, although he did nothing brilliant at either Eton or Cambridge, the fact is so treated as to leave room for the exercise of a lively imagination. His seven years at Eton are a blank in the biography, although we are told the relatives with whom he stayed during the vacations; and it is freely confessed that at Cambridge the mathematics were too much for him. He was a good scholar, however, notwithstanding, but, as scholars frequently do, he made, on one occasion at least, a most unhappy use of his classical attainments. His speech on the trial of Queen Caroline, not only was ill-judged in its peroration, but contained classical allusions which so much offended the King that Denman with great difficulty recovered the favour necessary to ordinary advancement in his profession.

It will be perceived from what we have said that we do not regard Lord Denman as one of our greatest judges. His legal knowledge was not profound, and he had not the brilliant qualities which we call genius, and which supports a judge's reputation in the absence of that knowledge. But he was an eminently hardworking, highminded and conscientious judge—one of a class of judges who probably do the most substantial service to the country; upright, dignified, sufficiently learned, and courageous. Lord Denman lived in stirring times, when courage was an essential qualification for persons seeking to occupy honourably high public positions.

It would be a waste of time and space to refer to Lord Denman's career up to the time that he became Solicitor-General to Queen Caroline—it was the career of a very successful advocate. He had plenty of business at sessions and on circuit, and full details of his successes are set out in his letters to his wife which are largely resorted to by his biographer. His intercourse with Brougham is interesting, but we think this portion of the biography considerably marred by dwelling upon the wretched picture of misery presented by the life of the Queen during and subsequent to her trial. It was certainly not in any way necessary to the due realization of the character and qualities of Lord Denman. All the autobiographical passages on this subject would have been judiciously omitted.

The law is principally indebted to Lord Denman in his character as a law reformer, and he himself considered this to be his great claim upon the gratitude of his country, one of the results of his labours being by his own direction recorded upon his tomb. He was among the first to draw attention to the flagrant abuses of the Court of Chancery, fostered as they were by the carelessness or indolence of Lord Eldon; and the amendment of our law of evidence which was the work of a statute bearing his name is perhaps one of the best monuments which could be erected to his memory. Everyone admits the value of the reforms which he inaugurated; we know why they were carried, and it is rather late in the day to reproduce a magazine article which expounded his views previous to the carrying of the necessary measures. But although a more enterprising biographer could have done much to improve this part of the subject it is, as it stands, of considerable interest.

Owing to the offence given to the King, as already mentioned, Denman had much difficulty in obtaining his position as King's Counsel. "King's Counsel at Last" is the heading of the 16th chapter, a chapter which, occupying several pages, might have been compressed into twenty lines. Here we have extracts from speeches at city dinners, autobiographical records of the most ordinary description respecting interviews with the Duke of Wellington and the progress of his intercession with the King; and then a series of letters of congratulation from all sorts of known and unknown people. And when we come to Lord Denman as Lord Chief Justice the glory of the event is obscured by the intrusion of incidents absolutely childish. His first "judicial circuit" seems to have excited not only veneration and esteem, but comments in the provincial press on his personal appearance. A lady unwisely preserved some of the comments, which unfortunately fell into the hands of Sir Joseph Arnould. To justify the discontent which pervades this review we will here cite one specimen of the letters with which these volumes are filled. Lord Denman writes from Lincoln to Lady Denman:—"I have been completely confined to the court all the week, till after post time yesterday; but everything was then cleared away except one case of murder. All things have gone off very well: the attendance of magistrates and grand jurors very large. We had more than forty guests at dinner, including the Lord Lieutenant (Lord Brownlow) and Lord Winchelsea, whom, to my surprise, I found to be a very agreeable man. Sir Charles [Lady Denman's maternal uncle] attended in excellent health and spirits, and with good reports of all at home and abroad. We have a brilliant day, and hope for a delightful ride to Newark. We enter Nottingham exactly at noon to-morrow." And we ought to say that more than three pages are occupied with an extract from an article in the Morning Herald published at the time of Lord Denman's appointment.

We most distinctly say that we strongly object to this process of bookmaking, which must inevitably produce the impression that there was not enough important material to make a respectable biography. This, however, is not the fact. Lord Denman was actively engaged in questions of great legal and constitutional importance, and in writing his memoir a good opportunity was afforded of skilfully placing these questions before the reader. But, whilst Sir Joseph Arnould carefully details every domestic incident and circuit joke, he shirks the difficult part of his subject. At p. 46 of his second volume, he says, referring to the question of privilege raised in Stockdale v. Hansard:—"No attempt will here be made to weigh the authorities adduced on either side in this ably and exhaustively debated question. Those specially interested in legal and constitutional studies will find ready access to the authentic materials of enquiry in the published Reports of Parliament and of the Court of Queen's Bench"—thus adroitly evading a task requiring some knowledge and the exercise of some ability. In the next sentence the biographer remarks that his work is intended for the general reader rather than for "special students of constitutional law." This is the key to the whole work. Lord Denman has been made the peg upon which to hang a mass of minute and trifling detail interesting to the general reader. As a consequence his reputation is made to suffer, his littlenesses are carefully described, and his greatness magnified by newspaper flattery so as to become almost ridiculous.

We need here only remind our readers of some of the important matters in which Lord Denman was engaged—the Nottingham Insurrection, the Queen's Trial, Stockdale v. Hansard, the questions arising out of the Suppression of the Slave Trade, the important and interesting question relating to the marriage laws arising out of the prosecution of Reg. v. Mills; O'Connell's case, and Dr. Hampden's case. We do not say that these matters do not find a place in the work of Sir Joseph Arnould, but they are padded in a way which detracts from their intrinsic merit and importance. To take only one example—Lord Denman's judgment in the O'Connell case. Who cares two straws what some hack writers in the Morning Post and Morning Chronicle thought on the subject? Yet in the middle of the second volume—a great part of the first being occupied with rapturous description of Denman's voice and appearance—the Post is quoted to this effect: "The dignified impressiveness of his Lordship's manner, and the graceful earnestness of his elocution, are such that they not only engage the attention, but almost win the assent of any feeling auditory, even before the subject matter is fully compassed by the understanding." This in itself is nonsense, and to perpetuate the flattery of the hour in a memoir intended, we presume, to be historical, seems to us to be simply absurd.

We have indicated the rock upon which our author has split. He has endeavoured to make his memoir "popular"—and popular we can quite believe it will be. Many people will enjoy looking beneath the ermine, "going with George to Cambridge"—who is never mentioned without a footnote, to the effect that "this is the Hon. Mr. Justice Denman"—following the interest of the Chief Justice in affairs at Eton, even to the circumstance of the wife of Provost Hodgson being in the garden within a fortnight of her confinement, and so on. Sir Joseph evidently has thought little of what the legal profession may think of the work. For Lord Denman's sake we should have been glad could the Profession have welcomed it as a worthy tribute to his memory as one of its ornaments. In every respect it falls short of this. We fear Sir Joseph Arnould has done the same unkind office to Lord Denman that Holliday did to Lord Mansfield.

"The Life of Lord Kenyon" has been published with the declared object of meeting and resenting the unfriendly comments of Lord Campbell. In his preface our author says: "I do not think that posterity will ratify Lord Campbell's condemnation of Lord Kenyon's character, but I have felt it a duty which, as one of his descendants, I owe to his memory, to give to the world all the facts in the possession of his family, which may enable the public to form an impartial opinion as to his merits." With lawyers Lord Kenyon's character required no vindication. We are most of us suspicious of "John Campbell," and the law which Lord Kenyon gives us is received with respect, and is quoted as high authority. In this work, as in that noticed above, there are many records of trifles, but the work is of interest, and may prove attractive to those anxious to understand the politico-legal history of the time in which Lord Kenyon lived.

Manual of Lunacy. A Handbook relating to the Legal Ca and Treatment of the Insane. By LITTLETON S. WINSLOW, M. . and M.L., &c. London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co.

THIS book has evidently been compiled with the greatest possible care, under the affectionate supervision of the author's father, Dr. Forbes Winslow. The statutory regulations as to finding pers s lunatics, the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery over lun s and their property, the provisions as to asylums, and the treatment of lunatics, are set out in lucid order, and with sufficient fullness to form a reliable guide. The undoubted increase of insanity in the country, unhappily, gives increased importance to this subject, and solicitors, as we have recently seen by very costly experience, require to exercise great caution in acting with reference to the estates of lunatics. Whilst we heartily commend the general scheme of Mr. Winslow's book, we think he has gone too far in attempting to give an epitome of our jurisprudence, and he has not turned the space he has devoted to it to the best advantage. A handbook of the medical jurisprudence of insanity might possibly be of some use, but to devote a part only of a handbook to it made it requisite that it should be strictly technical. Mr. Winslow, however, has gone in for giving literary embellishments to his work, and in this respect we think he erred. The value of his handbook is not necessarily thereby diminished, and as the statutes and forms are given in extenso, we anticipate that it will become the vade mecum of practitioners in lunacy.

Introduction to Roman Law. By JAMES HADLEY, LL.D., late Professor of Greek Literature in Yale College. London: Sampson Low, Son, and Marston.

The Roman Law of Persons. By W. H. RATTIGAN, M.A., Ph. D. London: Wildy and Son.

PROFESSOR HADLEY'S twelve Academical Lectures, which have been published as an Introduction to Roman Law, in our opinion, furnish a most attractive treatise on a difficult subject. We have read the work with great pleasure. Whilst singularly accurate in all its details, the author has so simplified the matter as to make the first insight into the study clear and satisfactory. Pedantry is studiously avoided. We notice in the first lecture a very happy description of the Digest. "It is," says Professor Hadley, "as if one should make a compend of English law, by selecting the most judicious and accurate statements from treatises like those of Blackstone and Kent, and the most pithy, pointed, luminous utterances from the decisions of Judges like Mansfield, Scott, Marshall, and Story, and placing them together in an arrangement which, if not altogether scientific, should be at least practically convenient, natural, and easily comprehended." The Professor's lectures abound in cultivated criticism and learned comparison, and we cordially commend the volume to the attention of beginners in the study of Roman law.

Mr. Rattigan has furnished to the student a dry and technically accurate treatise de jure personarum. He makes no claim to originality. "All I claim to have done is to have carefully studied the works of the old civilians; to have compared their views with those of the modern continental jurists, and to have honestly examined for myself the original writings of the Roman jurisconsults, and from all these sources to have compiled an unpretentious volume which might assist the student in the better understanding of the jus personarum of the Romans." We have looked carefully through Mr. Rattigan's labours, and we think that he has carried out his design most faithfully. All his propositions are supported by authority, and he appends an excellent index.

Messrs. STEVENS and HAYNES send us a Manual of the Laws and Courts of the United States, and of the several States and Territories, with a directory of reliable practising lawyers, edited by Mr. HORACE ANDREWS, of the New York Bar. The work, we are told in the preface, is designed for lawyers and business men. The object appears to be to give a plain statement of the law, practice, and procedure of the courts, without the citation of authority, so as to be a guide to nonprofessional persons. It must prove a most useful epitome, for it contains a great amount of varied information.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

IN our last issue we directed attention to the inconvenience arising from there being only one commissioner extraordinary in Middlesex (exclusive of the city) for taking affidavits or special bail to be used in the Court of Chancery or superior Courts of Common Law in Ireland. We now propose to call attention briefly to the rules and orders issued pursuant to the 13 Vict., cap. 18, under which Act such commissions are issued. They require that applications for such commissions shall be by motion to the court from which a commission is sought, grounded upon affidavit and numerous certificates, certified copies of which have to be left with the clerk of the court. If an application is entertained, the primary order on the motion is that the matter stand over, in the meantime a copy of such order with a reference to the document on which it has been grounded has to be delivered, within a specified time, to every commissioner for the like purposes in the same town as the applicant, and within ten miles thereof. The attorney of the applicant must attend the court in person as well on the application for the primary order as upon every subsequent application, to answer questions, &c. After the primary order has been made, notice thereof and of the day on which the final order is to be moved for, is notified by the clerk of the rolls on each day in full term, until the matter is disposed of. Before the final order is moved for an affidavit of the due service of the primary order must be made and filed. From the above our readers will learn not only that in order to obtain the above appointment there is much formality, but especially that there is much expense, so much indeed that while the present rules and orders are in force there is little chance of our enjoying greater facilities than at present exist for swearing affidavits in London in connection with business in the Irish courts.

IN our issue of the 29th ultimo, we called attention to the necessity for bringing the practical experience of solicitors to bear on the framing of the new rules to be used in working the Judicature Act, and which are now being framed by three members of the Bar. In conformity with a previously indicated intention, we now subjoin the names of solicitors who we think most qualified, by reason of the variety of work in which they are engaged, to undertake the suggested supervision: The President of the Incorporated Law Society and the Presidents of the thirty-five other Law Societies; Messrs. Baxter, Rose, Norton, and Co.; Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co.; Ashurst, Morris, and Co.; Bircham, Dalrymple, Drake, and Co.; Fearon, Clabon, and Fearon; Messrs. Ford and Lloyd; Cookson, Wainwright, and Co.; Thomas and Hollams; Lewis, Munns, and Co.; Linklaters, Hackwood, and Co.; Field, Roscoe, and Co.; Longbourne and Longbourne; Farrer, Ouvry, and Co.; Jevons and Ryley, Liverpool; Mr. Marshall, Leeds; Mr. Ryland, Birmingham; Mr. Saunders, Birmingham; Mr. Broomhead, Sheffield; Messrs. Ford, Exeter; Mr. W. L. Harle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Messrs. Ford, Portsmouth; Field and Co., Norwich; Messrs. Darlington, Bradford; Maddock and Sharp, Chester; Parsons and Bright, Nottingham; and Mr. J. M. Davenport, Oxford. Copies of the draft rules should be sent to each, and they should be empowered to appoint a committee to finally settle them on behalf of solicitors as a body.

ALTHOUGH little or no pressure has been brought to bear upon the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, with a view to the reduction of the annual certificate duty, and although, therefore, they have not perhaps been called upon to convey to the Profession their opinion upon this subject, yet it may be interesting to our readers to learn the view of the council upon it. We gather from a statement in the columns of our contemporary, the Irish Law Times, that early in the present year the Council of the Society of the Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland addressed through their secretary a letter upon this subject to the Council of the English society, requesting to know whether they thought that any and what steps could be taken, with reasonable prospects of success, to obtain the reduction of this duty, and the reply received was to the effect that the Council were of opinion that it was not desirable to take any steps, the more so as they had had an interview with Lord Chancellor Selborne on the subject of solicitors' remuneration, and had been assured that a measure would be introduced into Parliament by the Government (which our readers are aware was in due course so introduced) for the purpose of facilitating the transfer of land, and that, should the same become law, it would, of course, be most desirable that some corresponding change should be made in the mode in which solicitors were to be remunerated, and that they, therefore, considered that it would not be wise to attempt any agitation for the reduction of the certificate duty, pending the consideration of the more important matter to which they referred. Here, then, we have the opinion of the Council in Chancery-lane upon this certainly not unimportant subject. The members of the Profession know very well the fate of the Land Title and Transfer Bill of last session, and we gather that because of the introduction of that measure to the Houses of Parliament the Council of the English Society was of opinion that agitation for the reduction of the certificate duty should not be attempted. We are almost tempted to ask where is there a record of their ever having attempted any agitation, but, remembering the rebuke of our correspondent at Leeds, we will leave it unasked. But, moreover, the Council did not advise agitation on the question, because if the Land Transfer Bill became law, it would "be most desirable that some corresponding change should be made in the mode in which solicitors were to be remunerated" — in other words, even if a necessity for the reduction of the annual certificate duty existed, yet no action should be taken, because something else might become desirable on the happening of a certain event. We must confess it is difficult to follow this reasoning, because, supposing the measure for facilitating the transfer of land had become law, and supposing the desirability for corresponding change in remuneration had thereupon arisen, yet that desirability might have remained unaccomplished for session after session of Parliament. If the Council of the Incorporated Law Society are of opinion that the annual certificate duty should be reduced, we can only say we cannot find sufficient reason in their contention to justify a delay in that agitation, without which it seems they think no reduction can be accomplished; and in this we certainly entirely agree with them. Upon receipt of the communication from the English Society, "Your Council," says the report of the Irish Society, "immediately forwarded a copy of it to the Provincial Law Societies at Belfast, Cork, and Waterford, and it seemed to be considered expedient to go forward in the matter without having the assistance and co-operation of the Profession in England, for which, under the circumstances stated, your council could not hope." Here is another illustration of the unanimity of feeling existing among the Profession in Ireland, and determination to promote the interests of solicitors in the face of all opposition or supineness.

WE are asked by a firm of London solicitors to give publicity to a system of touting which is perhaps worse than any other to which of late we have had occasion to call attention. The solicitors in question having been consulted by a poor client in reference to a will proved at Doctors' Commons, they recommended him, with a view of saving expense, to go there himself, and make the necessary search, in order to ascertain the contents of the will. Having given their client the necessary directions, and he having proceeded to the Probate Office, that occurred to him which occurs almost daily to others. The man meets what he takes to be an authorised messenger, wearing a white apron, who gets into conversation with him, and having ascertained his business and other necessary particulars, takes him into Doctors' Commons, and afterwards to an "agent" of some kind, who, without the least occasion, obtains an office copy of the will; and in the end the unfortunate man, only wishing to ascertain the nature of certain provisions in the will, receives a bill of £4 odd, which he is obliged to pay, and this for work which the solicitors would have undertaken at less cost, probably. No one can attend at Doctors' Commons without seeing these touts in numbers, three or four at the least, whose costume certainly suggests that they are in some way officially connected with Doctors' Commons, and we are quite satisfied, from other information within our knowledge, make a very good living by inducing the unwary to give orders, and take steps the nature of which is not explained to, or understood by them. These men have a regular system of inquiring of all those who appear to be in search of information, as to the nature of their business.

WE understand that the Railway Commissioners have appointed the 6th proximo on which further to proceed in the matter of the Corporation of Dover v. South Eastern Railway and London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Companies.

THE Council of the Incorporated Law Society have fixed the amount of the subscription of members of the society for the year ending 31st Dec. 1874, at the same sums, both in the case of town and country certificates, as have been paid for several years past.

WE understand that the preliminary negotiations with a view to the amalgamation of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association with the Incorporated Law Society are still proceeding, and we shall hope to be able early in the ensuing year to congratulate the Profession on the accomplishment of this desirable object, which must tend largely to bring about the proper organisation of the Profession. It must not be forgotten that to realise the objects of those who are working for this union, sacrifices will have to be made by individual and hard-working members of the less important society: the members of the committee of which will have a fair claim to any vacancies that may occur on the Council.

A SUFFICIENT time has now elapsed since the publication and issue of the scale of charges by the Council of the Incorporated Law Society to enable us to ascertain the feelings and opinion of the Profession generally upon it, and in this we are aided in no small degree by the, we may say, exhaustive correspondence which has for a long time past appeared in our columns and in those of other journals. The opinion seems to be that while "The Scale" is well adapted to cases in which the money transactions are large, yet that it does not offer to solicitors a sufficient remuneration in small cases. A correspondent in our last issue suggested as a remedy for this, that in addition to the commission, special fees should be allowed for particular work, somewhat on the principle of the scale for probate, &c. The investigation of titles involving as they do so much responsibility for solicitors, we hope to hear that the council are further deliberating upon the matter, and we have no doubt that any representation of the Profession to them as well through the medium of our columns as direct, will receive due attention and consideration.

A LETTER from law stationers, in Chancery-lane, of known respectability appeared in our last issue, occasioned, we think fairly, by our complaint of the sale of spurious notices and forms of all kinds by many law stationers in Chancery-lane. No professional, or indeed non-professional, man can travel the lane without noticing the extensive display of these documents of all kinds—leases, or agreements for same, wills, bills of sale, agreements between landlord and tenant, and fifty other forms which should, and can only with safety, be prepared by members of the Profession. We feel that our reference to this subject must not pass, even for the present, without our saying that in our opinion there are few law stationers known to us who do not, or have not, trenched on the work of the Profession, not, it may be, to an extent rendering them liable to penalties, but to an extent adverse to the interests of the Profession. We refer more particularly to work which London law stationers undertake for country solicitors, which, however, very many country practitioners feel can only be safely and properly intrusted to London agents.

THE letter of a London solicitor, which we print in another column, and which would have appeared in our last issue but for pressure on our space, is one which London practitioners will do well to consider, with a view to the adoption of similar tactics in relation to the hundred and one other needless obstacles which arise daily in connection with the work done by solicitors with the officials in most of the public offices. The thanks of the Profession are certainly due to Mr. Mason for his persistence in remedying his undoubted grievance, which work he properly completes by addressing himself to the legal press upon the subject. Our readers will notice how completely the observations in our issue of the 13th instant on the subject of the antiquated and obstructive requirements which obtain in the Paymaster-General's office are confirmed by Mr. Mason's letter. The consideration of this gentleman's letter reminds us of the petty objections which are constantly raised in connection with business in Doctors' Commons. The clerks of the seats, with some few exceptions, seem to delight in returning the papers whenever there is a shadow of excuse for doing so, and in this way the completion of matters is often delayed for weeks, and London solicitors are often driven to their wits' ends to furnish to their country clients the reason and necessity for returning the papers, so difficult is it to gather the purpose of the questions raised by these officials. We hope solicitors will follow our correspondent's good example, and bring all frivolous objections raised in any of the public offices before the chiefs of departments, who will, we hope and believe, for their own credit, and the public good, deal with such matters as the Lord-Chancellor does not seem to have hesitated to do in the case complained of by Mr. Mason.

WHETHER the decision of the Judge of the Brighton County Court in Smith v. Angove (reported in our last issue, p. 128) is well founded or not, it is certain that the lesson, to be learnt by solicitors from the circumstances and decision in that case is, that, once a writ of fi. fa. is in the hands of the sheriff or his agents, it is not safe for the plaintiff's attorney to issue any instructions to the officer—hardly indeed to express an opinion, unless accompanied with a reservation (which might always be made by letter, thereby saving all question as between the attorney and the sheriff's officer) that the attorney is not to be prejudiced by any act of his, which otherwise might be construed into a liability between them. When the writ is handed to the sheriff, sheriff's officers well know, or are to be taken as knowing, that there is no pretence for alleging any privity of contract between them and the attorney issuing the process, and very strong grounds ought to be shown for fixing the attorney with such a liability. The intention to accept such should be shown by evidence of a weightier kind than would be considered sufficient in ordinary cases of alleged contract.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

DAMAGES TO SEA-WALL BY VESSEL.—The owners of a vessel, which the crew have left owing to stress of weather, are answerable, under sect. 74 of the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 27) for damage done to a sea wall, after the crew have left her: (The River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson and others, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 530. Q. B.).

WILL — MISDESCRIPTION OF EXECUTOR — EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE — PROBATE. — Testator nominated as one of his joint executors "Georgina Geraldine de Bellin." At the time of the making of the will there was no person corresponding to that description. The court admitted extrinsic evidence to explain the ambiguity, and being satisfied by it that he intended to nominate his granddaughter, Adelaide Geraldine, it granted probate to her: (In the Goods of O'Reilly, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 546. Prob.)

ARTICLED CLERK—EMPLOYMENT AS VESTRY CLERK—23 & 24 VICT. c. 127, s. 10.—An articled clerk cannot perform any office or employment whatever during the terms of service under 23 & 24 Vict, c. 127, s. 10, even when such employment is in no way inconsistent with and in no respect interferes with the service under his articles, and where the services are performed at night or by deputy. An articled clerk held the office of vestry clerk, the duties of which he discharged either in the evenings or by deputy. Held that he had violated the provisions of the statute: (Ex parte Greville, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 542. C. P.).

MATRIMONIAL SUIT—SERVICE OF CITATION—FILING IN THE REGISTRY—RULE 14—PRACTICE.—The citation was personally served on the respondent by petitioner's attorney, but the clerk who was directed to file it with certificate of service in the registry misappropriated the fee and lost the citation. Under the circumstances, the court ordered a duplicate to be filed in the registry: (Chilcot v. Chilcot and Smith, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 548. Div.)

ACTION FOR SEDUCTION—INTERROGATORIES—INTERROGATORIES AS TO THE DEFENDANT'S MEANS.—In an action for seduction, the plaintiff may interrogate the defendant as to whether he had not had connection with the plaintiff's daughter, whether he had not been informed by her that she was pregnant by him, whether he was not the father of her child, whether he had not offered to maintain the child, and whether he had not stated, in the presence of other persons, that he had no reason to believe she had had connection with any other man. Interrogatories as to the defendant's means are not allowable in an action for seduction: (Hodsoll v. Taylor, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 534 Q. B.)

LEGITIMACY DECLARATION—PETITIONER OUT OF JURISDICTION—DECLARATION OF NULLITY OF MARRIAGE.—At the hearing of a petition for a declaration of legitimacy it turned out that the petitioner was not within the jurisdiction. The petitioner's legitimacy depended on the invalidity of his mother's first marriage, but although all the parties interested in it had been cited, and though one of the paragraphs in the petition prayed that it might be declared invalid, the court refused on a petition for declaration of legitimacy to pronounce a decree of nullity of marriage: (Johnstone v. Johnstone, The Attorney-General and Hawkins, 29 L. T. Rep., N.S., 547. Div.)

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

Saturday, Dec. 20.

DORIN v. DORIN.

Will—Construction—Illegitimate children.

IN this administration suit a question of some interest and peculiarity arose under the following circumstances:—The testator, by his will, after bequeathing all his real and personal property to his wife in trust for her own use during her life, proceeds as follows:—"And I leave her at liberty to direct the disposal of the property among our children by will at her death in such manner as she shall think fit, and should she make no will I desire that the property existing at her death shall be divided, so far as it may be practicable to do so, equally between my children by her." The testator, who was possessed of freehold and leasehold property in London and elsewhere, and other property, of the value of about £23,000, was twice married. By his first marriage he had two children, both of whom died in his lifetime. One of these children died intestate and without issue, but the other left issue an only child. By his second wife, whom he married shortly before the date of his will, he had two children, both of whom were born before the marriage. The question then arose whether, under these circumstances, the two children born before the marriage could take under the words of the will, The case was argued on the 4th inst., and the Vice-Chancellor delivered judgment this morning.

Cotton, Q.C., and Kekewich appeared for the plaintiff; Glasse, Q.C., and Vaughan Hawkins for the illegitimate children; Pearson, Q.C., and F. C. J. Millar for the grandson of the testator.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said: It is clearly proved in the cause that the testator always acknowledged the two children born before his marriage as his children; he had them, in fact, baptised as such. Having, then, only these two children, the younger of whom had been born in 1861, and having married their mother the day before, he made his will in these terms. (His Honour here read the will.) Under these circumstances, what did the testator mean by the expression "our children" and "my children by her." It cannot for a moment be doubted that he must have intended the two illegitimate children he already had by the plaintiff. The intention, then, being clear, it is the duty of the court to carry that intention, which, as Sir Thomas Plumer said, is the Polar Star of construction, into effect, if it can do so without infringing any principle or settled rule of law. It was argued that since the testator had, by marrying the mother of these children, put himself in the position of possibly having legitimate children by her, his will must necessarily be construed as having such children only in contemplation; but such a construction would, in my opinion, be a violation of his language, which, to my mind, plainly points to existing and not to future children, though such children might well be included in the gift; and considering the number of years the connection with the plaintiff had continued, and that no child had been born for nearly four years, it is most improbable that he had future children in contemplation, and all but impossible that he had such children exclusively in view. The law is clearly settled that existing illegitimate children may take under the description of children whenever it can be ascertained that it is intended that they should do so. The great leading authority on this subject is Wilkinson v. Adams (1 V. & B. 422), which is the one principally referred to in the argument on both sides. His Honour then stated the facts of that case, and also referred to Beachcroft v. Beachcroft (1 Madd. 430), Lepine v. Bean (10 Eq. 160), Crook v. Hill (L. Rep. 6 Ch. App. 311), and the same case before the House of Lords (42 L. J. 702), and also mentioned a recent decision of his own in Re Brown (16 Eq. 239), and continued, These authorities clearly established that illegitimate children may take under the description of the children of a particular person when they have acquired the reputation or character of being so and the court is satisfied of the intention of the testator that they should take. Both these requisites are, in my opinion, completely fulfilled in the present case, and I am therefore of opinion that the illegitimate children of the testator by the plaintiff answers the description of "our children" and "my children by her"—that is, the plaintiff, his wife. But it was contended by Mr. Pearson that the effect of giving the property to the two children would be to exclude the legitimate children of the testator's marriage with the plaintiff, but that would not have been so, for there is no rule which prevents illegitimate and legal children taking together as a class where it is intended that they should do so. In this case the words of the will are sufficient to include the future children and they might therefore have taken if there had been any. In Owen v. Bryant (2 De G. M. & G.), Lord Cranworth says: "I regret the notion of there being a rule that illegitimate children cannot, under any circumstances, participate with legitimate children in the benefit of a gift or a bequest to children generally." And in Hill v. Crook (42 L. J. 712), Lord Chelmsford says: "I know of no objection in law to a gift to children with a clear intention that it shall apply to existing illegitimate children being so applied, although afterborn illegitimate children must be excluded and the gift be extended to future legitimate children." I consider, therefore, that I am warranted by authority, as I think I am clearly by principle, in saying, as I do, that the future children of the testator and the plaintiff, if there had been any, would have been included in this gift. There must, therefore, be a declaration that the two infant illegitimate children are the objects of the power of appointment given to the plaintiff, and that they take as the children of the said testator by her, in default of her exercising the power. A contrary construction would leave these children, who are clearly shown to have been the primary object of the testator's affection, destitute, and would also have the effect of making him intestate as to the corpus of his estate, which it is quite clear he did not intend to be. The costs of all parties would be out of the estate.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

ALEXANDER (Henry), San Francisco, California, gentleman, £100 Reduced Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Henry Alexander.

CLARKE (Katherine), Chargrove, Cheltenham, spinster, £29 6s. 6d. New Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Katherine Clarke.

COLLEDGE (Thos. Richardson), M.D., Cheltenham, one payment on the sum of £15, Red Sea and India Telegraph Annuity. Claimant, said Thos. R. Colledge.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY. LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BIRD (Wm. H.), 8, Elizabeth-place, North Brixton, Surrey, builder. Jan. 1; J. R. Church, solicitor, 9, Bedford-row, Middlesex. Jan. 8; V.C. H., at three o'clock.

BOLTON (Thomas J.), Grove Park, Kingsbury, and of Gough-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Jan. 12; J. A. Edwards, solicitor, 8, Old Jewry, London. Jan. 21; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

CLARKE (Jos.), Ramsey, Essex, farmer. Jan. 1; H. S. Goody, solicitor, North-hill, Colchester. Jan. 15; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

COX (John), Portsea, Southampton, widower, brewer, maltster, and innkeeper. Jan. 24; Chas. Cole, solicitor, Portsea. Feb. 4; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

FISCHER (Peter Jos.), White Swan, Upper Norwood, Surrey, innkeeper. Jan. 1; Geo. Crafter, solicitor, 81, Blackfriars-road, Surrey. Jan. 12; V.C. H. at one o'clock.

FRENCH (Rt. Hon. Fitz-Stephen), formerly of Lough Esitt, Roscommon, Ireland, late of 65, Warwick-square, Pimlico, Middlesex, M.P. Jan. 31; R. Petch, solicitor, 8, John-street, Bedford-row, London. Feb. 6; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

GOODRICH (Ermingarde), 10, Royal-crescent, Brighton, Sussex, widow. Dec. 31; Joseph Burgin, solicitor, 8, John-street, Bedford-row, London. Jan. 19; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

HUBBARD (Elizabeth), 40, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 13; Allen and Son, solicitors, 7, Carlisle-street, Soho-square, Middlesex. Jan. 27; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

MARSH (John R.), Alvaston Grange, near Derby, Esq. Jan. 31; Chas. Fen, solicitor, 2, Henrietta street, Covent-garden, Middlesex. Jan. 28; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

MOISER (Frederick), 6, James'-terrace, near York, land surveyor and valuer. Jan. 1; A. Watson, solicitor, York. Jan. 22; M. R., at half-past eleven o'clock.

MUTER (Robert), formerly of Great Winchester-street, London, merchant, but late residing at the Isle of Man. Jan. 9; M. M. Johnson, solicitor, 20, Austin Friars, London. Jan. 16; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

NIXON (Chas.), 6, Liston-road, Clapham, Surrey, civil engineer. Jan. 30; Radcliffe and Co., solicitors, 20, Craven-street, Strand, Middlesex. Jan. 27; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

PATTERSON (Robert), Wimbledon, Surrey, brewer, Jan. 31; Francis Robinson, solicitor, 36, Jermyn-street, St. James's, London. Feb. 7; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

POORE (John C. M.), 9, Bloomfield-road, Maida-hill, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 19; Geo. T. Woodroffe, solicitor, 1, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex. Feb. 2; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

PRICE (Jas.), 23, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex, draper. Jan. 6; Robert Taylor, solicitor, 15, Furnival's Inn, Holborn, Middlesex, Jan. 26, V.C. H., at one o'clock.

ROBINSON (Margaret), Priory-street, Micklegate, York, widow. Dec. 31; George M. Watson, solicitor, Stockton-upon-Tees, Jan. 8; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

ROSE (Wm.), 1, Howick-place, Westminster, Middlesex, barrister-at-law. Dec. 31; J. Brewer, solicitor, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster, Middlesex. Jan. 19; M. R., at half-past eleven o'clock.

SMITH (Jas. G.), 29, Fenchurch-street, London, gentleman. Jan. 31; J. R. Adams, solicitor, 15, Old Jewry, London. Feb. 7; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

WHITING (Wm.), Stourcliffe-street, Upper George-street, Bryanston-square, Middlesex, job master's foreman. Jan. 20; H. Phillips, solicitor, 3, King William-street, Strand, Middlesex. Feb. 2; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

WHITTAKER (Robert), Oldham, cotton spinner. Jan. 12; Jas. F. Tweedale, solicitor, Oldham. Jan. 21; M. R., at twelve o'clock.

WYATT (Capt. Henry B.), R.N., Ryde, Isle of Wight. Jan. 14; H. S. Redpath, solicitor, 23, Bush-lane, Cannon-street, London, Jan. 28, M. R., at half-past eleven o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BOULNOIS (John), 20, Sloane-street, Chelsea, Middlesex, upholsterer. Jan. 13; O. Richards, solicitor, 16, Warwick-street, Regent-street, Middlesex.

BOX (Wm.), Woodland Mount, Cumberworth Half, Emley, and Nortonthorpe Mills, near Huddersfield, York, fancy cloth manufacturer. Feb. 1; Heap, Fenton, and Owen, solicitors, Station-street, Huddersfield.

BRANNAN (Jas.), 23, Radnor-street, St. Lukes, Middlesex, agent to the Inspector of Prisons and Reformatories. Feb. 10; Joel M. Barnard, solicitor 19, White Lion-street, Norton Folgate, Middlesex.

Brown (Henry), Toxteth-park, and of Liverpool, ale and porter merchant. Feb. 10; L. Houghton, solicitor, 32, Lord-street, Liverpool.

Cart (Elijah), Woodbridge Suffolk, dairyman. Jan. 20; W. W. Welton, solicitor, Woodbridge.

Docwra (Wm.), Stanford Rivers, Essex, farmer. Jan. 16; J. S. Pope, solicitor, Trinity-street, Colchester.

Gardner (Jas.), 271, Oxford-street, Middlesex, naturalist. May 2; J. Gorden, solicitor, 29, South Molton-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex.

Goatley (John), St. John's Villa, Brixton-road, Surrey, gentleman. Feb. 1; Withall and Compton, solicitors, 19, Great George-street, Westminster, Middlesex.

Green (David B.), Brockham-court, Reigate, Surrey, gentleman. Jan. 1; Jas. S. Eastes, corn merchant, Ashford, Kent.

Hart (John), 167, Hoxton-street, Hoxton, Middlesex, baker. Dec. 31; H. F. Wood, solicitor, 63, St. Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

Haslam (Charles), Friday-street, Henley-on-Thames, Oxford, ironfounder, &c., agricultural implement maker. Jan. 14; E. T. Barrett, 8, Finsbury-circus, London.

Hopkinson (Ellen), Western Bank, Ashover, Derby, widow. March 2; R. T. Gratton, solicitor, 5, Knifesmith-gate, Chesterfield.

Horton (John), otherwise Morgan (William), late a gunner in the 7th Battery 23rd Brigade of H. M.'s Royal Artillery. May 2; F. W. Seaman, solicitor, Wednesbury.

Lines (Wm.), late of 56, Clissold-road, formerly known as 27, Park-road, St. Mary, Stoke Newington, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 10; R. and W. B. Smith, solicitors, 7, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex.

Makin (Joseph), Monks Eleigh, Suffolk, farmer. Jan. 6; Robinson, Safford, and Grimwade, solicitors, Hadleigh, Suffolk.

Marques (Elizabeth C.), Twyford, near Reading, widow. Jan. 28; J. C. Wootton, 2, Finsbury-circus, London.

Mera (Charlotte C.), 9, Royal-crescent, Cheltenham, spinster. Jan. 20; Ticehurst and Sons, solicitors, Essex-place, Cheltenham.

Mercer (Rev. Wm.), Sheffield. Jan. 29; Burdekin and Co., solicitors, Norfolk-street, Sheffield.

Moore (John), Pit-villa, St. John's-road, Carisbrook, Isle of Wight, gentleman. Feb. 1; J. A. Moore, Pit-villa, St. John's-road, Newport, Isle of Wight.

Property Protection Society.—Jan. 31; Paul J. Bishop, Esq., 12, Clement's-inn, Strand, Middlesex.

Rowbottom (Wm.), late of 1, Elizabeth-mews, England-lane, Haverstock-hill, and formerly of 21 and 4, Westmoreland-street, Marylebone, Middlesex, coachman. Jan. 22; S. J. Robinson, solicitor, 53, Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London.

Smiter (Elvina), otherwise known as Mrs. Bedoschi), 5, Duncan-terrace, Islington, Middlesex. Feb. 13; Davies and Williams, solicitors, Abchurch House, Sherborne-lane, London.

Steele (John), formerly of Week-green, Froxfield, afterwards of Langstone, but late of Emsworth, all in the county of Southampton, Esq. Feb. 16; Rivington and Son, solicitors, 1, Fenchurch-buildings, London, E.C.

Tomlinson (Wm.), 194, Essex-road, Islington, Middlesex, draper. Jan. 14; Phelps and Sidgwick, solicitors, 3, Gresham-street, London.

Torriano (Chas. J.), late a Lieut. in the 2nd Native Veteran Battalion in the Hon. East India Company's Service. April 4; Hensman and Nicholson, solicitors, 25, College-hill, London, E.C.

Tupper (Martin de Havilland), 13, Church-street, Stoke Newington, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 25; Wm. Blewitt, solicitor, 27, New Broad-street, London, E.C.

Waller (John and Jemima), 103, Whitechapel-road, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Jan. 15; Tanqueray, Willaume, and Hanbury, solicitors, 34, New Broad-street, London.

COMPANY LAW

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Winding-up—Void Amalgamation—Repayment of Money paid for void Shares—Interest.—A. was the holder of twenty-five shares in the L. bank, which in 1864 entered into an agreement for amalgamation with the H. bank, under which it was agreed that shares in the H. bank should be allotted at £6 premium to such shareholders of the I. bank as elected to accept them. A. did so elect, and had allotted to him twenty-five shares in the H. bank, in respect of which he was credited with £125 for his old shares, and he paid £150 in cash. Subsequently the amalgamation was attempted to be set aside as ultra vires, and the suit was compromised, but previously to that A.'s shares had been duly forfeited for non-payment of calls. Both banks were wound-up, and the liquidators of the H. bank brought an action against A. to recover payment of the calls, which resulted in a decision in A.'s favour. On a summons taken out by A. against the liquidators of the H. bank to enforce repayment to him of the above two sums, with interest. Held (affirming the decision of Lord Justice James, sitting for Wickens, V.C.), that the judgment in the action was conclusive, and that A. was entitled to be repaid the £150, with interest at £5 per cent. from the date of the summons, but that his claim to the £125 could not be sustained: (Alison's case, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 524, L. JJ.)

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Evidence — Certified Birth—Registered Copy.—An instrument purporting to be a copy of an entry in the Register Book of Births, and to be signed by the officer in whose custody the Register Book is stated therein to be, is admissible in evidence on its mere production under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14: (Reg. v. Weaver, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 544. C. Cas. R.)

Mines Regulation—Owner not responsible for negligence of Servants.—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 151, s. 10, and rule 3, provides that whenever safety lamps are required to be used in collieries or coal mines they shall be first examined and securely locked by a person or persons duly authorised for that purpose. The 22nd section provides that for neglect of the rules and general regulations the owner or agent shall be liable to a penalty of £20. Held, that the owner of a coal mine is not liable to a penalty for the negligence of his servant in omitting to look the lamps under the above sections. When the words of a statute are equally applicable to penal or to civil consequences, the court will construe the statute in favour of the latter: (Dickenson v. Fletcher, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 540. C. P.)

Public Health Act—Highway or no Highway—Notice to dispute—How far Apportionment conclusive.—Where the expenses incurred by a local board in sewering, levelling, &c., a street have been apportioned under sect. 69 of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, amongst the owners or occupiers of the premises fronting, adjoining, &c., an owner who has not given a written notice of his intention to dispute the same within three months, as required by sect. 63 of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, may, notwithstanding this, dispute his liability to pay, on the ground that the street is a highway. Sect. 63 of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98 makes the apportionment after three months binding and conclusive only as to the various amounts settled by it, but not the question of highway or no highway: (Hesketh v. The Local Board of Atherton, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 530. Q.B.)

Larceny—Indictment—Corpus Delicti.—Prosecutor bought a horse, and was entitled to the return of 10s., chap money, out of the purchase money. Prosecutor afterwards, on the same day, met the seller, the prisoner, and others, and asked the seller for the 10s., but he said he had no change, and offered the prosecutor a sovereign, who could not change it. The prosecutor asked whether any one present could give change. The prisoner said he could, but would not give it to the seller of the horse, but would give it to the prosecutor, and produced two half-sovereigns. The prosecutor then offered a sovereign with one hand to the prisoner, and held out the other hand for the change. The prisoner took the sovereign and put one half-sovereign only in the prosecutor's hand, and slipped the other into the hand of the seller, who refused to give it to the prosecutor, and ran off with it. Held, that the indictment rightly charged the prisoner with stealing a sovereign: (Reg. v. Twist, 29 L. T. Rep. N.S. 546. C. Cas. R.)

THE MASTERS AND SERVANTS ACT.

At the Guildhall Police Court on Wednesday in last week, Mr. Holmes Keall, a chemist and druggist, of Maida-vale, was summoned by Mr. James Crisp, of No. 4, Cheapside, chemist and druggist, his former employer, for breach of contract, under the Masters and Servants Act.

Poland appeared for the complainant.

H. N. Christmas for the defendant.—Mr. Keall had been an assistant to Mr. Crisp for about two years on the usual terms of a month's notice, his salary being £60 per annum with board and lodging. On the 9th Sept. the defendant asked leave to go out for a short time, and received permission from Mr. Crisp to do so. It appeared that his object in going out was to purchase a business at Maida-vale, which he succeeded in doing. When he returned he told Mr. Crisp what he had done, and asked to be allowed to leave forthwith. Mr. Crisp refused to allow him to do so, but said he would let him go as soon as he could get another assistant in his place. The defendant told him that he could not stay, as he had to take possession of the business the next night; but he offered to give up one month's salary to terminate the engagement in lieu of a month's notice. Mr. Crisp declined that offer, and threatened proceedings against him if he left without the month's notice. He did leave without that notice, and twice afterwards applied for the salary due to him from the 30th June to the 9th September, less £5 for one month's notice. The money was not paid, and on the 29th November Mr. Keall took out a summons in the county court against Mr. Crisp for the amount, and on the 10th December Mr. Crisp obtained this summons against the defendant. The county court summons would not be heard until the 22nd instant. Mr. Crisp deposed that the custom was a month's notice on either side, unless mutually arranged to waive all such rights; and Mr. Keall stated that either party could terminate the engagement at a moment's notice on giving the other side a month's wages.

Christmas took a legal objection to the summons under the third section of the Act, which said, "Nothing in this Act shall apply to any contract of service other than a contract within the meaning of the enactments described in the first schedule to this Act;" and there was nothing in that schedule which mentioned chemists' assistants. They did not come under the head of artificer or labourer, but were in the position of clerks to whom this Act did not apply.

Poland contended that although a skilled man, in the shop he was only an ordinary shopman, and as such he contended that the Act did apply to him under the head "servant," although that term did not apply to domestic servants and clerks.

Sir Thomas White said he had given the greatest consideration to the case in consequence of its importance, and he had come to the conclusion that there was no doubt the defendant did not come within the Masters and Servants Act, and he must therefore dismiss the summons; at the same time he had no doubt that the defendant had acted very improperly to his master.

Poland said he would ask that the judgment of the court might be respited for a week to give him time to consult his client as to whether he would ask for a case for the superior court, so as to obtain a definition as to who really was a servant under the Masters and Servants Act.

Sir Thomas White said it was a most important question, and he would give every facility for taking the opinion of a superior court. He would, therefore, adjourn the case for a week, and if the plaintiff decided not have a case stated the summons would be dismissed.

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Bath	Monday, Jan. 5	T. W. Saunders, Esq.	14 days	J. Taylor.
Bedford	Monday, Jan. 5	J. T. Abdy, Esq., LL.D.	14 days	M. Whyley.
Berwick-on-Tweed	Friday, Jan. 2	W. T. Greenhow, Esq.	5 days	S. Sanderson.
Birmingham	Monday, Dec. 29	A. R. Adams, Esq., Q.C.		T. R. T. Hodgson.
Bolton	Tuesday, Jan. 6	S. Pope, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	J. Gordon.
Bridgnorth	Friday, Dec. 26	W. Cope, Esq.	14 days	W. D. Batte.
Bridgwater	Tuesday, Jan. 6	P. H. Edlin, Esq., Q.C.	14 days	J. Trevor.
Brighton	Wednesday, Jan. 7	J. Locke, Esq. Q.C., M.P.	2 days	E. Evershed.
Canterbury	Wednesday, Jan. 8	G. Francis, Esq.	Statutory	H. T. Sankey.
Carmarthen	Monday, Jan. 5	B. T. Williams, Esq.	10 days	J. H. Barker.
Chester	Friday, Jan. 2	H. Lloyd, Esq.	14 days	J. Walker.
Chichester	Tuesday, Jan. 6	J. J. Johnson, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	E. Titchener.
Colchester	Thursday, Jan. 1	F. A. Philbrick, Esq.	8 days	J. S. Barnes.
Dartmouth	Wednesday, Dec. 31	A. W. Beetham, Esq.	10 days	W. Smith.
Deal	Friday, Jan. 2	R. J. Biron, Esq.	2 days	E. Drew.
Derby	Tuesday, Jan. 6	G. Boden, Esq., Q.C.		J. Gadsby.
Devonport	Thursday, Jan. 8	H. T. Cole, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	G. H. E. Rundle.
Doncaster	Friday, Jan. 2	E. J. Meynell, Esq.	10 days	E. Nicholson.
Dover	Monday, Dec. 29	Sir W. H. Bodkin, Knt.	2 days	G. W. Ledger.
Faversham	Monday, Jan. 5	G. E. Dering, Esq.		F. F. Giraud.
Gloucester	Tuesday, Jan. 13	C. S. Whitmore, Esq., Q.C	7 days	F. W. Jones.
Great Yarmouth	Monday, Jan. 5	Simms Reeve, Esq.	10 days	I. Preston, jun.
Hastings	Friday, Jan. 16	R. H. Hurst, Esq., M.P.	14 days	G. Meadows.
Hythe	Saturday, Jan. 3	R. J. Biron, Esq.	8 days	W. S. Smith.
King's Lynn	Thursday, Jan. 15	D. Brown, Esq., Q.C.		T. G. Archer.
Kingston-on-Hull	Thursday, Jan. 8	S. Warren, Esq., Q.C.	Statutory	R. Champney.
Leeds	Thursday, Jan. 1	J. B. Maule, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	C. Bulmer.
Leicester	Monday, Jan. 5	C. G. Merewether, Esq.	8 days	R. Toller.
Liverpool	Thursday, Jan. 8	J. B. Aspinall, Esq., Q.C.	Statutory	P. Wright.
Margate	Wednesday, Dec. 31	F. J. Smith, Esq.		H. T. Sankey.
New Windsor	Monday, Jan. 12	A. M. Skinner, Esq., Q.C.	10 days	H. Darvill.
Northampton	Friday, Jan. 9	J. H. Brewer, Esq.	10 days	C. Hughes.
Portsmouth	Friday, Jan. 9	Mr. Serjeant Cox	10 days	J. Howard.
Rochester	Friday, Jan. 2	F. Barrow, Esq.	8 days	W. W. Hayward.
Sandwich	Thursday, Jan. 1	R. J. Biron, Esq.		T. L. Surrage.
Scarborough	Monday, Jan. 2	A. W. Simpson, Esq.	10 days	J. J. P. Moody.
Shrewsbury	Monday, Jan. 5	W. F. F. Boughey, Esq.	14 days	E. Clarke.
Southampton	Monday, Jan. 12	T. Gunner, Esq.	14 days	E. Coxwell.
Tewkesbury	Friday, Jan. 2	J. Fallon, Esq.	Statutory	F. J. Brown.
Walsall	Wednesday, Dec. 31	W. J. Neale, Esq.	10 days	S. Wilkinson.
Wenlock	Saturday, Jan. 3	T. S. Pritchard, Esq.	14 days	E. B. Potts.
Worcester	Thursday, Jan. 8	F. T. Streeten, Esq.	10 days	R. T. Rea.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

LAND TRANSFER.

In a paper read on the 18th inst. before the Statistical Society of Dublin, Professor Donnell says: "If existing machinery can be adopted, and with slight modification, to the purposes of land transfer, one of the practical difficulties in the way of the introduction of a new system, viz., the expense, will be obviated. We have seen how important is an accurate survey as the basis of any improved system of registration, and how Lord Romilly's scheme of 1850 never got into working order because it necessitated the preparation of special maps by the Ordnance Survey at a considerable expense. The registration commissioners of 1857 say that a uniform map furnishes "the best means of identifying the property, and the clearest mode of indexing correctly the registered title to it." Well, in the General Valuation Office, we have a map ready prepared, and with references to the rate books, which would equally suit our system of local land transfer. This map is annually revised in accordance with the changes of occupation and ownership which have taken place since the last revision. The poor rate collector is bound under penalty to make out and deliver to the clerk of the union before the 15th Nov. in each year, a list of all tenements and rateable hereditaments in his district requiring revision. Any ratepayer may hand in a similar list. The reviser of valuation, an official of the valuation office, furnished with these lists by the clerk of the union, proceeds to the spot, and marks upon the maps the changes caused by alteration of farm boundaries, consequent upon consolidation or subdivision of holdings. Changes in the names of occupiers and lessors are also recorded. We shall best describe the nature of this work in the words of J. Ball Greene, Esq., the commissioner of valuation, in his evidence before the O'Connor Don's committee on the Tenement Valuation of Ireland:—'Every tenement in Ireland, from the largest farm to the most minute, is laid down on our map [the Ordnance Map] and corrected annually. Then we have a schedule corresponding with the map of owners and occupiers, the area, value of the land, and the value of the buildings. The boundaries of every tenement are laid down and numbered to correspond with the terrier. As soon as a map gets worn out we give it to the draughtsman to make another map. The old map is kept among the records to show the changes. Every change of boundary is compared by one of our officers on the ground with the map. Every new fence that forms a farm boundary is accurately measured on the map. We give tracings, copies, and certificates of valuation to any person requiring them at the actual expense:' (QQ. 508-523).

"How accurately this work is done, and how satisfactory it is, appears from some other observations of Mr. Greene before the same committee:—'If there is a dispute between landlord and tenant, one of them will write to say that the quantity is wrong, and that he cannot make it out, and will ask us to send a tracing and a copy of the valuation. We send it, and it generally settles the question:' (Q. 526).

"This revision has been in operation since the first issue of the tenement valuation in each county or city. The first county completed was Carlow, in 1853, and the last, Armagh, in 1865. The cost of this revision was, at first, paid by each county by presentment until 1860, since then the government have undertaken payment of one-half of the cost. Objections have, however, been taken on behalf of the Treasury, to this payment, as, except for income-tax rating, the revision is a matter of local, not of imperial, concern.

"Additional work would require to be done by the reviser in making tracings of maps for the purpose of the registry; and as the revision is, except for assessment of income tax, of purely local concern, the cost of the revision would fairly be payable out of local rates; and thus the Treasury would be relieved of a payment to which, even at present, the objections are, to a large extent, well founded.

"On more general grounds, the proposal to make the union the centre of local administration falls in with a growing tendency of the times. To the proper functions of the union officials—the administration of the law—have been added those of sanitation, and the preparation of lists of voters and jurors. The latter work, discharged by the clerk of the union and the rate collectors, necessarily involves a knowledge of the ownership and the owners of lands in the union; and the employment of these officials, in connexion with the land registry, would consequently form a decided check upon fraudulent transfers.

"Who should be the local registrar? This must depend on the nature of the registry, and the duties which the officer would have to discharge. If those duties are at all of a judicial or semi-judicial character, obviously a trained lawyer would be required, and we should have to create not only a new office but a new official. But if the duties are purely ministerial, as I think they can be made, then the clerk of the union, as a resident official of great intelligence, already employed in those analogous duties to which I have referred, is marked out as the proper person to have charge of the local registry. The duties would not be very serious, for some time at least, as the plan of registry I propose is voluntary. The waste of great machinery on first efforts is of all things to be deprecated. Humble instrumentality befits small beginnings. If the scheme succeeds, larger results will bring with them improved instruments; if it fails, little has been lost, and we can begin again on a more elaborate plan."

COUNTY COURTS.

AYLESBURY COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Dec. 18.

(Before J. Whigham, Esq., Judge.)

Adams v. London and North Western Railway Company.

Railway unpunctuality—Unreasonable delay—Negligence—Firebox of engine choked.

In this case Mr. W. Adams, farmer and cattle dealer, of Bushey Leys, Ellesborough, sued the London and North Western Railway Company, for £15, damages sustained by him by reason of the company having neglected to convey him from Aylesbury to Luton, on the 20th Oct. last, in accordance with the contract entered into by them with the plaintiff, in consequence of the train from Aylesbury to Luton having been delayed beyond a reasonable time, whereby the plaintiff was prevented from attending to his business, and sustained great damage and inconvenience.

Clarke, of Wycombe, appeared for the plaintiff.
Templar, of this circuit, for the defendants.

The case was as follows: On the 20th Oct. last the plaintiff took a ticket at the Aylesbury station of the London and North Western Railway, for Luton, intending to go by the train which was advertised in the company's time bill to leave Aylesbury shortly before seven o'clock in the morning, and arrive in Luton at 9.28. He did not, however, as the judge elicited, state to the booking clerk that he was going to any fair, or that he wished to get there by any particular time, but took the ticket in the ordinary way. The train went very slowly as far as Marston Gate, where it pulled up for fifty-five minutes. On arriving at Cheddington the train by which he ought to have gone on to Luton had left. The station master told the plaintiff to go to an inn and try to get a horse to drive to Leighton or Luton. And he did so, but failed to get a horse. He then asked the station master to telegraph to Luton, asking somebody to sell his cattle for him, but the station master declined to undertake any responsibility about the matter. He went on to Luton by the next train, and arrived at his destination at half-past eleven. By this time the fair, which was held on that day, was nearly over, and the plaintiff lost the sale of thirty lean beasts which he had sent by road to the fair on the previous day. He had to bring back the cattle in like manner by road to Ellesborough, at a cost of £2 10s.; and the expenses of two men, who were with them, were about £1. He had also paid 3s. 4d. for his ticket, and, moreover, he had to keep the cattle for a week to recruit, because they were footsore. The plaintiff and his solicitor wrote to the company, asking for compensation, but their reply was that the ticket was issued to the plaintiff subject to the conditions on the company's time bills, namely—that although the times of arrival and departure were stated thereon, the company did not guarantee that the trains would arrive and depart at the times stated, nor would they be responsible for any loss or inconvenience occasioned by the delay of the trains. On behalf of the plaintiff, evidence was called to show that the delay, on the part of the defendants, was unreasonable, and might have been prevented by ordinary care.

The engine-driver, on examination, said that the reason of the delay at Marston-gate was that a new kind of coal was used for the first time that morning; that they could not get sufficient draught to ensure combustion, and consequently were short of steam. Moreover, the day was foggy and dull, which lessened the draught. He had sent in his report of the delay, and had been fined 10s. The coal had been used only once since the day on which the delay occurred.

Mr. John Henry Miller, innkeeper, of Aylesbury, who had been a driver on the North-Western Company's main line for fourteen years, said that he was in the train on the morning that the delay occurred. He went to see what was the matter, and the driver said, "We have got a new kind of coal, and my man has filled the fire-box up. He has put too much on, and we cannot get a draught." Witness knew the coal well. It was Welsh coal, and was known by the company's servants as "blind coal." If the fire-box were choked, there could, in fact, be no draught, but he could not say that the fire-box was choked on this occasion. The coal was burnt regularly on the company's main line, and any quantity of steam could be got out of it, if it were burnt properly. The engines on the main line, however, generally had larger fire-boxes than those of the engines on the Aylesbury and Cheddington branch.

Templar urged that there was no cause of action. The contract was one between the plaintiff and the company, and had no reference whatever to the cattle. The company simply undertook to carry the plaintiff within a reasonable time, and they did carry him. They knew nothing of the cattle which he might have had to sell at Luton. Moreover, they relied on the notice printed on their time-bills, that they would not guarantee the arrival and departure of the trains at the times specified, nor would they be responsible for loss or inconvenience caused by delay The ticket was issued subject to those conditions

Clarke here interposed with the statement that in the company's time-bills they said that every attention should be paid, as far as was practicable, to ensure punctuality.

Templar, continuing his address, quoted the well-know case Hurst v. The Great Western Railway Company, and read the whole of the judgment given. The essence of the case he continued, was whether the delay was reasonable and unavoidable. He then cited other cases, and argued for the reduction of damages.

His Honour said he thought that the delay in this case had been unreasonable, and that it might have been avoided. He did not think that, on the evidence, the present was a case for a nonsuit; nevertheless, he considered that it would be his duty to reduce very considerably the amount claimed for damages. He believed that there had been culpable negligence on the part of the stoker, who had choked the fire-box. The excuse was that the coal was a kind to which the stoker was not accustomed; but it had been shown that the coal was so well-known on the line that there was a recognised name for it—"blind coal"—and if it had been properly used there would have been no want of steam, and consequently no delay. The negligence of the stoker, and, partly, also of the driver, in allowing the fire-box to be choked, was the cause of delay. If the coal had been unknown the fault would have lain with the company for putting into the hands of their men coal which was slow of ignition, and of the qualities of which the men were not informed or aware, but the coal was well known on the company's line, and it was the duty of the driver and the stoker to see that the fire was fed moderately, reasonably, and carefully. It might be true that on the occasion in question the day was heavy and unfavourable to a good draught, but the driver and the stoker, by their experience, ought to have anticipated and provided for that. The delay, then, was occasioned by neglect on the part of the company's officers. If the delay had been in consequence of "the act of God," or occasioned by any circumstance or accident over which the company's servants had no control, then there would have been no case for the plaintiff, and a nonsuit would have followed. But here the company were, according to the terms of their time-bill, under the conditions which operated as in the case of any public carrier. They undertook to forward the passenger with reasonable despatch, and if the neglect of their servants prevented the journey being accomplished with reasonable dispatch, the company were responsible. In this case, then, the company being responsible, the only remaining question was with regard to the amount of damages. Inasmuch as the plaintiff did not tell the booking-clerk that he wanted to get to Luton at a certain time (either thereby giving the company an opportunity of refusing to incur the risk, or of demanding an increased fare in respect of the risk if they chose to incur it), he was not entitled to the expenses of driving his beasts to Luton and back, to recover according to his estimate, for the loss of his market, his loss of sale, and possibly of profit; nevertheless he was entitled to more than merely nominal damages. He lost a journey to Luton and back; he lost a whole day; he lost the value of his fare; and was put to considerable inconvenience, and no doubt to some expense. He was, therefore, clearly entitled to, say, 40s. damages.

Templar asked for leave to appeal.

Clarke protested against it. It was very hard to appeal against a plaintiff who had got a verdict for only 40s. That sum would not cover the fees.

