Was Well-Known Musician.

Lewis E. Tilden Succumbs to Pneumonia.

LEWIS E. TILDEN.

After an illness of several weeks with pneumonia, Lewis E. Tilden, one of the most widely known musicians in this section, passed away at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Tilden of Front street last Friday morning.

The funeral services were held from his late home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends of the deceased and the display of floral tributes was one of unusual elegance.

The services were conducted by Rev. Harry W. Kimball of the Union church, South Weymouth, and Rev. Melvin S. Nash of the First Universalist church of Weymouth. Music was furnished by the Schubert Male quartette of Boston. The remains were placed in the receiving tomb in the Village cemetery.

day was at above the freezing point. On ten days the minimum fell below zero, while on eight days did the maximum rise above freezing. The mean for the month was more than nine degrees below the normal.

Prof. Harman of Berlin declares that Mount Sinai was a volcano, basing his argument on various incidents related in the Old Testament. Thus, Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by a rain of fire and ashes. Again, in Exodus we are told that a black cloud hung over the mountain; thunder and lightning accompanied, and the old mountain stirred.

Abbe Moraux, director of the Bourges observatory in France is authority for the statement that we shall probably have rainy weather up to the year 1912, having his forecast on the recent magnetic disturbances that paralyzed the telegraph, and caused the telephone to be tongue-tied, and even held up the trolley cars along Lake Lemans.

That formula may be used for the preparation of milk without disadvantage to the consumer, is shown by the recently published researches of Behring. He has established that formula will keep milk from souring, even in the small proportion of 1 to 4000, and that the most sensitive animals take it without apparently detecting the addition of the drug, and persons are unable to tell the milk thus treated from the pure milk.

Rev. A. H. Todd of Birmingham, N. Y., has decided to get after those persons whose excuse for not attending church is that they are obliged to stay at home and take care of the children. He recently inserted advertisements in the local papers especially inviting these people to his church, and requesting that above all, they bring their children with them.

In its monthly summary, Bulletin No. 16 of the Meteorological Observatory of the Hatch experiment station, the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst says: January will be long remembered on account of the unusual low temperature that prevailed. On the 4th the maximum was one degree below zero, and on the 5th the maximum fell to 26.5 degrees below zero, while the mean hourly record for the day was 12.7 degrees below zero. On five days the mean hourly temperature was below zero, and on but one

CHIT-CHAT.

During the past few weeks some of the metropolitan newspapers have shown a somewhat humane spirit by calling attention to the fact that on going to snow and ice having been on the ground in this district for weeks, the birds have been unable to procure food enough to keep them from dying of starvation.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Weymouth Council Observes Its First Anniversary.

Reception, Banquet and Dance in Odd Fellows Opera House—One Hundred Couples on the Grand March.

The members of Weymouth Council, No. 729, K. of C., observed the first anniversary of the institution of their council in the Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth, Monday evening.

A reception, banquet, entertainment and dance figured in the celebration, and the affair was participated in by more than 200 members, their ladies and invited guests. The reception was held from 8 until 9 o'clock, and during that time a pleasing concert program was rendered by Des Lauriers' orchestra of six pieces.

The grand march started at nine o'clock and was led by Flour Marshal, Peter E. Hughes and wife. Dancing was then the order until 1:30 o'clock. The floor being in charge of John A. Reardon, assisted by Henry E. Kiley and W. J. Fitzsimmons.

The affair was an unqualified success in every way, and much praise is due the committee of arrangements which was composed of Peter E. Hughes, Henry C. Martell, Frank McCarthy, Thomas J. White, Edward C. McCreary, and W. J. Fitzsimmons.

CONCERT AND BALL.

Second Annual of Norfolk Club of South Weymouth an Enjoyable Affair.

Members of Popular Organization do Themselves Proud.—Acted as Hosts to About Three Hundred.

One of the most brilliant social events held in Weymouth thus far this season was the second annual concert and ball of the Norfolk Club which was held in Foggy's opera house, South Weymouth, Wednesday evening. The hall was very prettily decorated for the occasion with blue and white crepe paper and potted plants.

The evening festivities commenced at 8 o'clock and the hour following was devoted to the following concert program: Two-step, "Uncle Sammy"; Mace Gay's Orchestra; Selection from Verdi's Opera; Cornet solo, "Honey-suckle"; Mr. Mace Gay; Intermezzo, "Cupidita"; Orchestra.

The grand march started at nine o'clock and was led by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Thayer who were followed by nearly one hundred and fifty couples. Dancing followed until two o'clock, the music being furnished by Mace Gay's orchestra. Louis K. Jones acted as floor director and was assisted in his duties by Elmer Thayer and a corps of aids selected from the membership of the club.

The committee of arrangements was composed of Louis K. Jones, Ernest Stetson, Edward B. Nevin, Walter R. Field, Robert M. Vining, Frank H. Wood and Ralph E. Barker.

BREAD, BUTTER and A FRIEND

By HENRY C. GUEST

Copyright, 1920, by C. N. Laris

HERE, Hackett, we have a clever to a sensational story. The people's names are Hackett and there are to be an exposure and a scandal that will shake up the town, the city editor of the Globe said.

"And incidentally ruin two or three people's reputations, so be careful of the facts," the managing editor said.

Henry Hackett was receiving instructions to cover the chief news story of the day, Hackett, tall, ruddy, full of courage to cope with almost any physical problem, was always making expositions in the philosophy of human life. He was a fairly well-tried man on the staff of the Globe and had the reputation of never having failed to secure a story to which he was assigned.

"Hold up your reputation and make two columns of the affair, give us a breezy account of Richmond's manipulation of the tunnel stock as well. You have just time to find him at his home before our last edition goes to press," said the city editor as Hackett took up his coat and hat.

He hurried out and took a cab. The address given him was in the wealthiest part of the city, three-quarters of an hour's rapid drive, and he felt this was an occasion where a five-cent fare was insignificant with the importance of the story. He knew the "Richmonds" were rated as semimillionaires. He had but the briefest information of the subject of his errand; scarcely more than the people's names. But he knew that Richmond himself was a shrewd and cunning man who would probably detect the full drift of the most carefully worded question at its first utterance, and as the cab rolled him from one street to another he formed in his head a plausible tale of rumor which might lead Richmond to talk of the tunnel stock deal.

The cab rolled up to a large building. "Well," Hackett, looking at the driver to wait, hurried up the steps and gave his card to a polite servant, upon whom the effect of the cab standing at the door had not been lost. He waited a few moments in the library, when some one entering the room behind him said: "Is this Mr. Hackett?"

"The voice was surprisingly familiar," Hackett turned and saw Ridley Haverly, a well-dressed, slender young man of his own age, faultlessly dressed, a bunch of violets in his coat. Haverly took his hand without a spoken word. It had profoundly touched him, and Hackett thought that perhaps he, too, owned Haverly something in return for that incident of silent sympathy, and he was momentarily tempted to abandon the effort to secure the tunnel stock story. Then he remembered that business is in a firm master and that he had a position to maintain on the Globe staff, and he almost felt, in a physical sense, a quiver behind his lip. "Ferguson" stands for when applied to bread, cake, pie, etc.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"You're the last man I expected to meet here," returned Hackett, taking Haverly's hand in both of his and almost crushing it in delight.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"I cannot help you," he said earnestly and slowly shaking his head, his anger vanishing, a struggle between his pride and Hackett's hands touched his shoulders more firmly, more affectionately.

"I am to marry one of Richmond's daughters, but I don't like her," the story does not concern me directly, but you cannot print it. It would cost Richmond more than you or I can figure out in money. And this is the only way to get the story out of Richmond's hands. He would not let me go until I had secured the tunnel stock story. Then he remembered that business is in a firm master and that he had a position to maintain on the Globe staff, and he almost felt, in a physical sense, a quiver behind his lip. "Ferguson" stands for when applied to bread, cake, pie, etc.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"You're the last man I expected to meet here," returned Hackett, taking Haverly's hand in both of his and almost crushing it in delight.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"I do not mean a libel suit. But be careful what you say. You will begin our acquaintance exactly where it left off," said Haverly.

"Certainly," said Hackett. "I have tried to find you; heard you were in Europe, but two letters came back to me unopened."

"Yes, I went to the Mediterranean on a long cruise on the Duke of Westminster's yacht, then to Egypt, Italy and the continent, and an home just a week," said Haverly.

"And I found a place on a daily newspaper and have taken trips all over the city every day or two for news that ranges from a prize fight to a society wedding, make a fair salary and have some hope of climbing up near the top of that ladder we hear so much about," returned Hackett.

"You still believe in that ladder?"

"You used to have a lot of theories in college, I remember, and you used to experiment with them on me," replied his friend. "Do you really believe there is such a ladder or that, on the contrary, people will never leave the plane they are born?"

"I do believe in the theory of the ladder just as firmly as I used to believe in my theory of gratitude," returned Hackett.

"You believe in that, too, yet? I might have thought you would have seen it completely disproved by this time—two years in a newspaper office," said Haverly.

"No, I believe even yet that people, few at least, will remember a favor, a bit of self sacrifice, with gratitude and on a good turn a usually."

"Well, maybe they do. Light a cigar and tell me how you came to stumble upon me here," said Haverly, pulling the armchair close to a table and offering his cigar case.

"It was pure accident. I came here to see Richmond. Is he at home?" inquired Hackett.

"Yes, he is busy with a lawyer just now. Can I take a message for you? I am in a kind of privileged character here," Haverly said, smiling.

Hackett puffed at his cigar a moment and studied the face of his friend. It was the same face, with its innocent, affectionate outlines that had first attracted his attention when he met Haverly as a boy, a trifle weak then perhaps, but strengthened since by diligent contact with people of the world. Hackett knew from his training the inadvisability of telling the wrong man of the news story he had been assigned and contact with Haverly had never led him in his past life, and he told him the purpose of his errand. Haverly's face clouded.

"I judge you are being here to see Richmond. I am here visiting these two

Hackett puffed at his cigar a moment and studied the face of his friend. It was the same face, with its innocent, affectionate outlines that had first attracted his attention when he met Haverly as a boy, a trifle weak then perhaps, but strengthened since by diligent contact with people of the world. Hackett knew from his training the inadvisability of telling the wrong man of the news story he had been assigned and contact with Haverly had never led him in his past life, and he told him the purpose of his errand. One Minute Cough Cure
For Coughs, Colds and Croup.

F. W. Browne, Cobasset.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

ple. I received your card by mistake. I can help you in this—Haverly paused—"but I will not," he continued. "You cannot see it without."

Hackett looked up, a trifle surprised. He had not people who had talked like this before, and then the faintest smile traced itself across his face. He had heard Haverly's words as he had heard his own. "In times gone by I have begged you," said Haverly.

"I know you have," returned Haverly. "I might not have taken my degree if you had not. But you do not know what you are asking me to do. We did not know the affair had reached one of the papers," said Hackett, with an other hint of a smile.

Haverly instantly saw his mistake and there are to be an exposure and a scandal that will shake up the town, the city editor of the Globe said.

"And incidentally ruin two or three people's reputations, so be careful of the facts," the managing editor said.

Henry Hackett was receiving instructions to cover the chief news story of the day, Hackett, tall, ruddy, full of courage to cope with almost any physical problem, was always making expositions in the philosophy of human life. He was a fairly well-tried man on the staff of the Globe and had the reputation of never having failed to secure a story to which he was assigned.

"Hold up your reputation and make two columns of the affair, give us a breezy account of Richmond's manipulation of the tunnel stock as well. You have just time to find him at his home before our last edition goes to press," said the city editor as Hackett took up his coat and hat.

He hurried out and took a cab. The address given him was in the wealthiest part of the city, three-quarters of an hour's rapid drive, and he felt this was an occasion where a five-cent fare was insignificant with the importance of the story. He knew the "Richmonds" were rated as semimillionaires. He had but the briefest information of the subject of his errand; scarcely more than the people's names. But he knew that Richmond himself was a shrewd and cunning man who would probably detect the full drift of the most carefully worded question at its first utterance, and as the cab rolled him from one street to another he formed in his head a plausible tale of rumor which might lead Richmond to talk of the tunnel stock deal.

The cab rolled up to a large building. "Well," Hackett, looking at the driver to wait, hurried up the steps and gave his card to a polite servant, upon whom the effect of the cab standing at the door had not been lost. He waited a few moments in the library, when some one entering the room behind him said: "Is this Mr. Hackett?"

"The voice was surprisingly familiar," Hackett turned and saw Ridley Haverly, a well-dressed, slender young man of his own age, faultlessly dressed, a bunch of violets in his coat. Haverly took his hand without a spoken word. It had profoundly touched him, and Hackett thought that perhaps he, too, owned Haverly something in return for that incident of silent sympathy, and he was momentarily tempted to abandon the effort to secure the tunnel stock story. Then he remembered that business is in a firm master and that he had a position to maintain on the Globe staff, and he almost felt, in a physical sense, a quiver behind his lip. "Ferguson" stands for when applied to bread, cake, pie, etc.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"You're the last man I expected to meet here," returned Hackett, taking Haverly's hand in both of his and almost crushing it in delight.

"You cannot think I hold you in very low esteem, as I have good reason to do, to have lost track of you two years ago."

"I do not mean a libel suit. But be careful what you say. You will begin our acquaintance exactly where it left off," said Haverly.

"Certainly," said Hackett. "I have tried to find you; heard you were in Europe, but two letters came back to me unopened."

"Yes, I went to the Mediterranean on a long cruise on the Duke of Westminster's yacht, then to Egypt, Italy and the continent, and an home just a week," said Haverly.

"And I found a place on a daily newspaper and have taken trips all over the city every day or two for news that ranges from a prize fight to a society wedding, make a fair salary and have some hope of climbing up near the top of that ladder we hear so much about," returned Hackett.

"You still believe in that ladder?"

"You used to have a lot of theories in college, I remember, and you used to experiment with them on me," replied his friend. "Do you really believe there is such a ladder or that, on the contrary, people will never leave the plane they are born?"

"I do believe in the theory of the ladder just as firmly as I used to believe in my theory of gratitude," returned Hackett.

"You believe in that, too, yet? I might have thought you would have seen it completely disproved by this time—two years in a newspaper office," said Haverly.

"No, I believe even yet that people, few at least, will remember a favor, a bit of self sacrifice, with gratitude and on a good turn a usually."

"Well, maybe they do. Light a cigar and tell me how you came to stumble upon me here," said Haverly, pulling the armchair close to a table and offering his cigar case.

"It was pure accident. I came here to see Richmond. Is he at home?" inquired Hackett.

"Yes, he is busy with a lawyer just now. Can I take a message for you? I am in a kind of privileged character here," Haverly said, smiling.

Hackett puffed at his cigar a moment and studied the face of his friend. Prevalent Opinion.

Government, the business man who has a divided patronage; the great majority of the voters are glad to take shelter on public duty behind the folds of the white flag, which they may wish, without coercion, without fear of consequences.

But if ballots continue to be stolen and forged and "switched" and mutilated and "stuffed," even those who strongly favor a secret ballot will find it difficult to value them if they cannot depend on its being fairly counted. When ballot boxes do not truly report the ballots which are dropped into them, or when returning officers do not faithfully drop in the ballots and not others which are marked for them, it is useless to vote, whether secretly or otherwise.

It is now said that the ballots were tampered with in the late municipal election in Toronto—an election in which very little was at stake. We are hardly in favor of an election now in which there are not serious charges of ballot manipulation. Popular faith in the secret vote is becoming honeycombed. People are apprehensive that an election may be stolen from them at any time.

From this it is not stopped—will come a clamor for the "open vote," as surely a day follows night. And with the "open vote" will come the disappearance of all protection for the man who has reason to fear coercion on polling day.

This no one is so much interested as the workingman in the detection and punishment of ballot-box crimes.

No Canadian Reciprocity.

(From the Des Moines Register and Leader.)

The Register and Leader has said as much perhaps as any newspaper in the state in support of a policy of liberal trade relations with Canada. But this paper has never deceived itself in its readers into the belief that Canadian reciprocity is other than a purely academic question at this time. All that Mr. John Charlton, who spoke with Gov. Cummins at Detroit a year ago and again at Boston a few weeks ago, has ever proposed is a free exchange of natural products, which this country has rejected repeatedly and will continue to reject, and even in this proposal he is repudiated by the influential press of Canada, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has been accepted friendly to closer trade relations, declines to endorse Mr. Charlton or to again call together the Joint High Commission.

Canada has not thought of admitting manufacturers from the United States at lower rates of duty than it has of seeking admission to the union, no matter what concessions we propose. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has made it very plain that not only will not admit American manufacturers free, but Canada will not give American manufacturers as favorable rates as are given to British manufacturers, and it is the intention to maintain a tariff exclusion of British goods sufficient to give the Canadian manufacturer the preference in the home market.

The fact is, if Iowa Republicans are bound to have an internal quarrel over some remote feature of the tariff situation, there is much better reason for dividing on this than on Canadian reciprocity, which is a matter of no real importance to either side.

year on the same staircase and of their living together the next term.

Then he thought of the coldness in real intercourse and a feeling of cordial regard since the days of mathematics and Greek. He weighed Haverly's position against his own, on one hand owned in money, and on the other, a pension to the publication of a stain upon the family of the woman who was to be his wife and yet to remove a suspicion of her name from the family record, on the other hand, a remorseless search for a sensation, read in a minute and not forgotten in a lifetime, and yet one step upon the ladder of the pocketbook and self.

"Back so soon? Get the story?" inquired the city editor in one breath as Hackett entered the office. Hackett hesitated a moment, looked boldly at the man and burst out:

"No."

The editor raised his eyebrows in cold surprise and displeasure, as if to ask an explanation. Hackett went to a vacant desk, scribbled a few lines and handed the slip to the editor, saying: "There is no explanation."

In the paper Hackett resigned from the Globe's staff.

Again the city editor raised his eyebrows, but Hackett promptly left the office. All the street knew of his resignation within an hour, and the Globe said all the time that the press with out the Richmond exposure.

The other staff men met Hackett the next day, and one of them wanted to know why he had not been at the press of the press of the story and his resignation.

"The managing editor expresses opinions contrary to those of the administration is liable to the extreme penalty—death in no merciful gauge. Several months ago a member of the staff was brought to death with bamboo rods. Later the editors of the publication called upon were charged with sedition. Their sedition consisted in advancing more modern methods in the administration of the government. This was not done upon them the anger of the dowager empress, who ordered their instant apprehension. It appears, however, that the editors had realized the enormity of their offense, for they sought refuge in the foreign reservation, where they came under the protection of the consulate. The question whether the daring newspaper men should be surrendered to the native authorities was referred to the legations. It was certain that if this should be done cruel and barbarous punishments would follow. The British consuls strongly opposed giving the fugitives up, but for some reason or other the United States Minister Conroy sided with the Russian representative, who wished to accede to the Chinese demand. An agreement was finally reached to detain the newspaper men for trial by a mixed tribunal. The trial has not yet taken place. On nothing more has been heard from the men who have been kept in prison, all ball having been refused. And now the government announces that a special deputy will be appointed to hear the case, so that this duty will be incumbent on the legation to the benefit should the defendants be found guilty. Evidently the penalty has already been decided upon and the trial will be a mere form. All of which goes to show that the life of the Chinese who incur the penalty of death under the law is the most unenviable of culprits.

The Editors of China.

(From the Indianapolis Journal.)

In Germany the position of a newspaper editor is a precarious one. He must be very careful not to criticize the emperor or otherwise to incur the wrath of the press censor or he will be thrown into prison and his paper will be suspended. But in China it is even worse. The offending editor who expresses opinions contrary to those of the administration is liable to the extreme penalty—death in no merciful gauge. Several months ago a member of the staff was brought to death with bamboo rods. Later the editors of the publication called upon were charged with sedition. Their sedition consisted in advancing more modern methods in the administration of the government. Whistler Exhibition.

An announcement has been sent out by the Copley Society of Boston to the effect that the memorial exhibition of the works of James McNeill Whistler will open at Copley Hall, Clarendon street, on Feb. 23. Mr. Whistler was a native of Massachusetts, so that it is quite appropriate that the most important art show ever gathered of his pictures, etchings, lithographs and other works—an exhibition that London or New York would have been glad to have—should be held in Boston. The Copley Society has been officially recognized by the estate of Mr. Whistler which has turned over to it pictures from the studio of the deceased artist which have never yet been seen by the public. Practically all the American owners of Mr. Whistler's pictures, including Mr. Charles L. Freer of Detroit, who is perhaps the best known collector on this side of the water—have contributed generously to make the affair successful. It is highly improbable that any such gathering of the works of this artist will ever again be brought together.

Duty of Learning to Shoot—As it is Regarded in Military Circles.

(From the Army and Navy Register.)

One of the most important events in the administration of Secretary Root has been the organization of the board for the promotion of rifle practice, which has recently been in session in this city. The results of the recent deliberations are embodied in certain recommendations for the conditions of the national match open to teams of 12 men from the army, navy and marine corps, and the national guard or national militia. The latest event in this series is a national prize match, the two latter events to be organized to the army, navy, marine corps, organized militia and members of the National Rifle Association and affiliated clubs, military or civilian.

The importance of this program, the place and date of the events, yet to be determined, is largely derived from the opportunity it affords for rifle practice among a class of people who have hitherto ignored this useful work. The value of such practice is being demonstrated by the training of the young men in the country in the art of shooting straight, an element which is bound to contribute materially to the efficiency of our volunteer army in the future. Secretary Root said in his annual report that it is of small if any use to pay, equip, subside and transport a soldier to a battle field unless he can hit the enemy when he shoots at him. "Without that accuracy in marksmanship an army might as well be, and there seems no better way of securing this proficiency than that which is provided by the plans of the board for the promotion of rifle practice. Time was when it was a part of every boy's training that he should be able to shoot a rifle or a shotgun and the whole to hit the object at which he aimed. Now, it is safe to say, most of the young men, especially those in the settled communities, have never fired a gun, and would be of little use in an army equipped with anything but handguns.

This deterioration of skill has reached such dimensions as to constitute a menace in this country and it is likely to prove disastrous to the best-laid plans of strategy when it becomes necessary to employ a volunteer force, called suddenly into service. Under the present situation we would find its members willing enough in their patriotism, which leads them to offer their services for the firing line, but they would be of small value in the carrying out of the first duty, as Mr. Root says, it is to be able to shoot straight. The board for the promotion of rifle practice has an important task, therefore, and judging from the results of its recent session, it is proving itself equal to its far-reaching responsibilities.

Local Pastors and People.

(From the Westfield Echo.)

This is the winter of discontent among the clergymen of small towns hereabouts, judging from the number who have found their way to the cities in search of a better contrast and the frequent changes of ministers that take place in some places with the long terms that prevail in others. In the large towns and cities long pastorate are the rule rather than the exception, and exactly the reverse is true of the country, though there is an occasional noteworthy deviation from the policy of short incumbencies in rural communities. In many cases also the rate of change is not a matter of mere money elsewhere, but because the clergyman feels that he has passed his usefulness in the community where he is located. In a good many places there is a class of people who have the faculty of making it so uncomfortable for a minister that he soon tires of the conflict, and looks for a new field. While in most cases this is the work of a very slight minority, they are so persistent that their numbers seem a host, while people who do not approve of such a course still maintain a neutral position and allow the nagging to go on. From the nature of the rural scene of Soudley Hall, a well known divine on the main thoroughfare of the lower East Side. Here the heroine comes in search of her villainous husband and discovers her riper rider, who has been separated from her through false letters. The villain is the Canadian minister, who has been discovered endeavoring to put both the hero and his own wife out of the way. His dastardly scheme is overheard by the Bowers boy, Terry McGovern, who with the aid of his sweetheart, Nell, portrayed by G. H. Perkins, manages to overthrow the villain and end all happily for the boy soldier and his sweetheart.

The play culminates in a roped ring fight between Terry and Danny Dogberry, the villain's unknown, who is finally vanquished. An exact report of the famous athletic club is presented in the last act.

A feature of the organization, is the first appearance on the stage of Mrs. Terry McGovern, who makes her debut with this unusually strong and competent company. The usual matinee at this theatre will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The Output
The output is the key-note to profit in the declining price at which to sell a manufacturer, no matter what article he has to offer, considers how many he is likely to sell, and how many he can sell. It is quite reasonable, too. If a tailor sells only two suits of clothes each week, his income must come from the profit of these two suits. If he can, however, double or triple his output without materially increasing his working expenses, he can naturally afford to make the profit on each suit much less. Again, this output decides the buying power. It is only necessary to state that there have been manufactured and sold over

COLONEL MONROE

He Compares the Immigrants Who Are Swarming Into the United States Today With Those of a Generation or More Ago

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS
Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

WHAT did you think of the preacher's sermon last Sunday? asked Judge Sawyer of Colonel Monroe. "The certainly was very eloquent in attracting attention to this country," he replied. "It is well known that it is a refuge for all nations and in his eloquent allusion to the immigration of those who would restrict immigration."

"I had occasion to call on the preacher last night," answered the colonel, "and after a talk on a purely business matter he brought up the topic of his sermon. He said that God had created man in his own image and placed him on this earth and that he was free to live in any part of it regardless of the likes and dislikes of those who happened to be in the majority in any particular section. He said that all wise Providence had planted the instinct of freedom in the hearts of men, and that we should share our heritage of liberty with all who approached our shores. I asked him if he thought God created mosquitoes. He seemed a bit shocked, but answered that he knew that God created mosquitoes and that for some good reason not apparent to our finite minds. Possibly and even probably the mosquito was created to test our patience and our faith in the wisdom of the Creator of all things. The person waxed quite earnest in his defense of the mosquito, though I had not said a word against the poor insect."

Tremont Theatre.
Low Dockstar and his great minstrel company have made a most emphatic hit at the Tremont theatre, which is filled to the doors every performance by a laughing crowd. Inspired by his wonderful artistry, Dockstar delivers a monologue on aerial and space navigation; he introduces his 50-multer-pole lobstermobile, M. Pelee, from which he delivers some instructions on automobile and automobiles, and sings in his own inimitable style "The May Get Over It, but He'll Never Look the Same." The company is very strong vocally. Carroll Johnson sings "Never do Nothing" and "Montana Jane." Neil O'Brien, "I Wish I Had My Money Back" and "Lucky Lee"; Ora F. Waller, "Conrage"; and Manuel Roman, "When the Sunset Turns the Ocean's Blue to Gold." Matt Keeffe, Emma's "Lullaby" and "The Cooing Song"; William H. McDonald, late of the Bostonians, "Ashey in the Deep." Besides these many old-time darkey melodies are sung for the first time in Boston. The second part of the performance is a big spectacular transformation scene showing four beautiful pictures of the South. Dockstar's engagement ends on February 20.

READY TO FLY.

I see that is the way you feel, says the Romoc man to the nervous, tired woman, hardly able to contain herself. Anyone certainly has my sympathy who suffers from nervousness. You are not only doing yourself harm by letting your nerves remain in this terrible depressed state, but you expect to be a mother, you are doing an injury to a future human being. No woman with such shattered nerves can bring into this world, sound, healthy children. What can you do? You have tried everything—that's just it—stop trying everything. It is not drugs you want—it is not medicines, the greater part of which are alcohol—that only excites your nerves more.

cannot be completely stopped inside of thirty feet. Motor cars going at the same rate can be stopped in ten feet. At a speed rate of 10 miles an hour, a motor car stopped at 13.2 feet. At a speed of 12 1/2 miles per hour, the distance required to come to a full stop was 43.3 feet for the horse vehicle, and 16.34 feet for the automobile.

A Belgian by the name of Salamoun has come to America to demonstrate to the people of this country that it is possible to live four hundred years. Reports say that he is a vegetable, that he wears his hair long, wears plain robes and sandals, sleeps on the ground, drinks nothing but even water, and uses no medicine. He has written a book describing the art of living four hundred years, and feels confident that by following out his own directions he can easily do it.

A Bavarian clock-maker has just completed a wonderful clock which represents thirteen years of labor. This remarkable time-piece tells the seconds, minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, years and the Christian festivals. It also gives the course of the sun, moon and planets, and shows the eclipses. It has been regulated to perform all these duties until 2899. The clock consists of 2200 parts, has 142 wheels and is worth $6750.

A feature of the exhibits at the St. Louis fair which will be of special interest to editors and printers will be a printing office built of honey. H. E. Stapel, editor of the Rock Fort Mail, is the architect and his bees are the builders. Some two or three years ago, Mr. Stapel erected a handsome new office building, and last summer, he conceived the idea of reproducing in the miniature, his building in honey. He made a live in exact imitation of his new block, left the rest of the bees, and in a short time, every nook and corner was covered with a thick coating of honey.

The old-time geography stories to the effect that "the foot of the Chinese coast principally of rice and fish," receives a severe setback from a concessionaire from the interior of the Chinese empire, who says: "It is all fodder and flaxseed." says a concessionaire from the interior of the great empire. "The streams were fished out ages ago, and you seldom and fish to the interior. On the coast—yes. Much fish is eaten. But the main food of the Chinese is pork and chickens. Mutton and beef are rare. Less rice is eaten than you would imagine, but there is an abundance of potatoes, vegetables, and you would find no difficulty in making out a good dinner."

Carefully compiled statistics show that in New England there is one insane person for every 339 of the population. In New York and Pennsylvania, the ratio is one to every 424; in Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan it is one to 610. It is one to 750 in the middle west; one to 935 in the southern states and one to 1263 in the Rocky mountain division. The density of population is greatest in the New England states, and there insanity is most common. In the states of the Pacific coast, California, Oregon and Washington, however, it, the insanity rate is nearly as great as that of New England.

The French committee for automobile traffic has made a series of experiments for the purpose of comparing the quick stop with which vehicles drawn by horses and horseless vehicles can be stopped. The experiments showed that at a speed of 7 1/2 miles an hour, the horse vehicle

DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

Two Anniversaries Observed by Members of Delphi Lodge No. 15, K. of P.

The members of Delphi Lodge No. 15, Knights of Pythias, observed the thirty-fourth anniversary of the organization of the lodge and the fortieth of the founding of their order at their castle hall in Washington square Wednesday evening. The festivities attending the celebration included a supper, entertainment and dance. The special guest of the evening was Rev. Ralph J. Hantington, brigadier chaplain of the uniform rank of Massachusetts. Contrary to the custom of previous years, the banquet was held in the early part of the evening and shortly after 7 o'clock Charles G. Jordan, chancellor of the lodge, called the assembly together, and after a brief address of welcome, invited the company to gather around the banquet tables.

The supper was followed by an entertainment furnished by Miss Frelva W. Towers of Boston, tender, Mr. George B. Cutler of Somerville, humorist, and an orchestra directed by Charles Leavitt. Dancing followed until one o'clock, the band being under the direction of H. A. Davis, C. W. Baker, A. D. Wilson, E. R. Bond, A. G. Long, L. D. Bryson, J. A. Pray, F. A. Sullivan and L. W. Spaulding.

The committee of arrangements was composed of Charles G. Jordan, chancellor; Theophilus G. Hyland, vice-chancellor; Francis M. Brown, K. R. S.; E. W. Hunt, J. F. Shepley, E. P. Stearns, C. T. Bailey, W. F. Wolfe, J. O. Hollis, A. G. Long, W. E. Fay, J. H. Pierce and R. F. Johnson.

A. E. Roberts, who succeeds J. R. Boardman as state secretary on county week, will speak at the 3.30 o'clock meeting next Sunday afternoon.

The members of the Phi Alpha Pi, a junior-intermediate organization, are to give a supper next Friday evening, 20th inst. H. W. Gibson, state secretary of both Phi Alpha Pi, will speak. Each member may invite a friend.

An entertainment for members and their lady friends will be given in the hall at 8 o'clock next Monday evening. There will probably be basket ball games, etc., in the afternoon.

Last Saturday night's basket ball games resulted in a victory for Looney over Mundy, 17, Porter, 6; and Foley, 20, Hobbins, 14; and Hobbins, 14, Porter, 6.

Wednesday afternoon the intermediate basket ball team met defeat at the hands of the Newton intermediates by the score of 12 to 8. The lineup: Newton—12, Lewis and Graham; r.f., Kelly; f., Mundy; c.f., Porter; c.f., Nolan; c., Tirrell; l.f., Lincoln; r.f., Jordan and Raymond; G. from the field—Porter 3, Earle 1, Monroe 1, Lincoln 3, and Tirrell 1. Goals from fouls—Porter 3, Reference 1, DeWitt 1, Winters 1, Basson, Liseman—Tyler. Timmer—Tyler.

Next week's lecture in the Current Problem club will be given by George Fred Williams of Dedham. These lectures are open to all men who are interested in the work of this club, and they are turning out in good numbers.

George E. Backoff, Roy Bruce, George Adams, Louis Carter and Walter Elder of the intermediate department went to Somerville this afternoon for the purpose of attending the fourteenth annual conference of the boys' departments. The members of the local association will remain until Sunday night, attending the various services that occur during their stay. A number of the speakers are on the program, among those familiar in Weymouth being L. A. Crockett of North Abington and C. A. Jenry of Brockton.

Although unable to have Charles H. Taylor of the Boston Globe, as had been expected, on account of his being unexpectedly called to Washington, the Current Problem club last evening proved itself to be up-to-date by providing a lecture on the Russo-Japanese war. This was given by Mr. Toyosaki, a Japanese student at Harvard, who gave a clear and comprehensive account of the causes, significance and probable results of the war.

On account of lack of time last night, only one game of basket ball was played, in which Bates' team defeated Tilden's by a score of 18 to 4.

FOUR SCORE AND SIX Years Have Passed Over Head of Rev. Jonathan Tilton.

Fifty-Nine of Them Have Been Passed in the Ministry.

Rev. Jonathan Tilton, for 59 years a Baptist preacher, and still in active service, observed the eighty-sixth anniversary of his birth Tuesday, at the residence of Frank H. Graves of 49 Bridge street, North Weymouth, where he has made his home for the past five years.

Mr. Tilton, who is a native of Vermont, was born in Randolph February 16, 1818, and was one of the family of nine children of Josiah and Rhoda (Barr) Tilton. His early education was received in the schools of his native town, graduated when quite young from the Randolph academy, and at the age of seventeen, commenced to teach school. After teaching in his home town for a short time he secured a position as teacher in the schools of Randolph, Mass., being afterwards transferred to Milton, where he taught until 1844. While teaching school, he prepared himself for college, and in 1844 entered the Connecticut college at Washington, D. C., graduating from that institution with honors in 1848. During his college course in Washington, he supplied various pulpits in the city and once preached before President Buchanan in the Presbyterian church which the president attended.

After leaving Washington, Mr. Tilton studied for some time under private instructors. He afterwards entered the Newton Theological school, graduating from there in the class of 1851. In November of that year he was called to the First Baptist church of Hingham, Mass., where he remained for a number of years. In the Hingham and the adjoining towns, he was often referred to as Fr. Tilton. During his pastorate in Hingham, he was at one time he had in his orchard, twenty-five varieties of pear trees, which received his personal attention.

From Hingham, Mr. Tilton travelled about the state for two years as a missionary and then accepted a call to Northboro, where he remained three years. After completing his pastorate in Northboro, he spent three years in supplying pulpits in different parts of the state. He then went to Europe, as companion to Mr. Deal of the firm of Harmon, Beal & Hackett of Boston. They travelled in Ireland and England and visited Rome travelling in all, about 10,000 miles.

Immediately after his return, he accepted a parish in Bowley, Mass., where he remained for many years. He was called to the church of Hingham, Mass., and there he remained for a number of years. He was called to the church of Hingham, Mass., and there he remained for a number of years.

Mr. Tilton was married Dec. 23, 1851 to Martha D. Anderson of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Tilton died in 1898. They had two children, both of whom died in infancy.

Mr. Tilton preached two sermons without reference to manuscript and without being obliged to use glasses in his sermons.

Tuesday's celebration, although an enjoyable one, was none the less unprofitable, and many friends and former parishioners called to congratulate Mr. Tilton, and in many cases to take tokens of esteem.

Repulsive Preliminaries. The preliminary Republican caucuses were held in the several wards in town on Tuesday evening. The attendance at the caucus was not large, and the enthusiasm manifested was not more than usual, except in the case of the one in Ward 3 where there were contests for several of the offices. The candidates nominated for the various offices were the present incumbents in most cases. The exceptions were M. E. Hayes, who was nominated for the office of Ward 2 and W. H. Pratt, who was the choice for water commissioner from the ward. Wendell B. Clapp was the choice of the Ward 3 caucus for water commissioner.

Some people will wear anything if it is in style.

One warm day does not mean that spring is here or coming; neither does a cold day mean that winter has made a turn and gone back to the starting post, although we perhaps sometimes think it has.

Podagrees are handed down, and so many, but not a man's actions. A satisfied man is never really satisfied. If he was, he would be without ambition. Some people who are devoid of feeling or of energy may be satisfied, but they form an individual class.

"I go by the book." That is quite a popular remark and a good thing perhaps, if the book is a book of wisdom. A man and success does not always come to the man who adheres to conventionalism. It would rather pay to be original, for as we have said before, originality begets originality.

"You just wait." It is the trouble, we do not want to wait. T. M. says that ways says "just wait" is always just a little bit late and very seldom reaches a goal but what he finds that someone who did not wait has just got there.

Patience. Some people have none. You would not believe that a patient man who is waited on by a servant in a store who is waited until it became frozen and death of our wife and mother. Also for the best of tries.

Perfect Confidence. Where there used to be a feeling of uneasiness and worry in the household when a child showed symptoms of croup, there is now perfect confidence. This is owing to the new form of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the treatment of this disease. Mrs. M. I. Bayford, of Poolsville, Md., in speaking of her experience in the use of that remedy says: "I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for my child, and I am subject to severe attacks of croup and it always gets my prompt relief." CHIT-CHAT.

At the Cohancho club last Saturday evening it pleased me to note that the refreshments were in charge of several Weymouth ladies. The dainty spread that they provided was far ahead of anything that I have seen there this season. Mrs. Virginia was in direct charge and her results deserve the praise so openly expressed on all sides. The coffee possessed just the right tincture of the blending of the various aromas that go to make coffee perfect, and the sweeter of the cakes, was most delicious.

In spite of the storm of Monday, Weymouth sent a large delegation down to the Cohancho club, Braintree, to witness the bowling match between the Gilt Club, B. A. team and a picked team from the Cohancho club. Miller was the high man for Cohancho and in spite of the fact that the home team won but one game out of three, the total pin fall of the winners aggregated but thirty more than Cohancho and the B. A. team did not favor their competitors at all, but appeared to be out for blood.

Talking about bowling, I note that Fred T. Hunt of Weymouth presented a handsome leather covered golf traveling club for the highest total pin fall during the bowling season at the Cohancho club. The winner of course by C. O. Miller. Not a bad sign to see an East Braintree man win the prize offered by a Weymouth man.

Hollis Street Theatre.
Miss Marie Tempest, who was so great a favorite in Boston in the days when she shone as a prima donna of light opera, will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street theatre on Feb. 25, in the brilliant and sparkling comedy "The Marriage of Kitty." Since Miss Tempest has last been here, she has won a series of splendid successes in London as well as in "The Marriage of Kitty," which ran for some 350 performances in the British metropolis, and has recently been most enthusiastically received during a seven weeks' stay at the Hudson theatre, New York. In the course of the season Miss Tempest sings a French lullaby, which will serve to recall many pleasant memories.

COLONEL MONROE
The Three Wise Men of Lincolnville In Search of a Statesman, but Fail to Find One
By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS
Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

WHY is the greatest statesman in the world...
"The greatest statesman" repeated the judge, wrinkling his brow in thought. "The greatest statesman" Healy, Friend Jenkins, I have not the slightest idea of who he is."
"Jenkins turned again to Colonel Monroe. "You might as well ask me to tell you where to find the largest living mastodon," replied Colonel Monroe. "The mastodon is extinct. So is the statesman."
"Tom Reed defined a statesman as a dead politician," observed the judge. "His saying so did not make it so," declared the other with some warmth. "The modern politician is the elected or retained representative of some commercial or financial interest, and his life or death is a matter which most directly concerns his family or personal friends and those who profit by his employment. A dead politician is a dead politician."
"What is a statesman?" asked Postmaster Jenkins.

Grand Opera House.
Frank McKee's original $45,000 production of "The Ninety and Nine" was purchased some time ago by O. J. Ashman, who immediately engaged a strong cast and sent this sterling melodrama on a tour of the largest cities. This melodrama, spoken of as the greatest scenic spectacle ever produced, is next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House. In the great locomotive scene of the third act ingenious mechanical and electric devices are used to give the appearance of a forest of raging flames. So realistic are the results that the management announces in advance that not one spark of real fire is used in this scene. A full size locomotive, an exact reproduction of those which draw express trains on our railroads, is shown going at full speed through this tower of flame. It is said to be the most awe-inspiring spectacle ever produced in the entire history of the stage.

IT IS YOUR KIDNEYS
says the Romoc man, to a fellow traveller, in a parlor car, and that means your blood is out of order. Those kidneys of yours cannot pass every ounce of the blood that is in your body through their delicate tissues many times a day without becoming contaminated and diseased, if that same blood is surcharged with poisonous secretions. Make your blood pure; tone up your stomach; help all the vital organs of your body to dispel the false secretions in a manner that Nature intended should be followed out, and you cease to know pain.

"Too many babies spoil the flat" is the latest adage of the landladies of New York apartment houses.

The averages of thirty Febuaries compiled by the weather bureau, show that the warmest month was that of ten years ago, when the average was 53 degrees.

A theory that is rapidly gaining ground is that electricity is indissolubly connected with the component parts of an atom of matter, or, that atoms are composed of electricity, or are disturbances of ether corresponding to minute electric charges.

The Wall Street Journal considers that the financial outlook for the year is good, and that opposition to President Roosevelt has collapsed. It says: "The fear that has prevailed to a large extent among business men that the presidential election of this year will bring some blow to confidence and create a scare that would affect the money and stock markets, appears to be passing."

For the year ending October 31 last, there were in Massachusetts 187 savings banks and institutions for savings, with assets of $4,437,622.22 and 42 trust companies whose assets aggregated $217,872,065.52. The deposits show an increase for the year of $21,475,325.29. The total amount of deposits, $698,415,409.25, is made up of 1,723,015 open accounts, being an average of $353.11.

The first monument to trade unionism was recently erected in Melbourne, Australia. It is called the "Eight Hour Monument," as it is in commemoration of the eight-hour system, which has been its commencement. The monument is a tall marble pillar surmounted by an oblong block supporting a globe and torch. The word "Prosperity" is written on the globe and three large figure eights are engraved on the block.

Because of the recent great conflagration at Baltimore, the statistical statement of the fire insurance business for the year 1903, compiled by the Spectator, an insurance publication, is especially interesting. The figures show a gross income for the year of $200,000,000 on a capitalization of something over $65,000,000. The total assets of the companies at the end of the year were $366,000,000, an increase of $25,000,000 during the twelve months. The surplus was $122,000,000, an increase of $11,000,000; the losses paid were slightly in excess of $27,000,000, and the dividends something over $7,000,000, more than eleven per cent. of the capital.

When the above figures, it would seem that the country's insurance business as a whole, was in a sound and prosperous condition.

At the annual meeting of the Weymouth Savings Bank Corporation, held Feb. 16, 1904, the following officers were elected, and have taken the oath of office: President, Charles P. Hunt; vice-presidents, Andrew J. Bates, A. Granville Bowditch, Charles A. Hayward and Francis H. Cowley; trustees, Charles E. Flint, George B. Bicknell, A. Granville Bowditch, Francis H. Cowley, James H. Flint, George H. Pratt, Charles A. Hayward, J. Parker Hayward, Wendell B. Clapp, Henry A. Nash, Jr., Edward E. Flint, and Edward W. Hunt; clerk, Charles T. Crane. At the quarterly meeting of the trustees, held after the above corporation meeting, the following gentlemen were elected on the board of investment: Charles P. Hunt, Andrew J. Bates, George B. Bicknell, Francis H. Cowley and Charles A. Hayward.

Democrats Organize.
The Democratic Town Committee met last Saturday evening and organized for the year with the election of John F. Beardon, of Ward 4, as chairman, and Isaac McLean, of Ward 1, as secretary.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than at any other disease. It is the only disease which is not cured by medicine. For a great many years I have tried all the various remedies, but none of them have given me any relief. I was cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I have since used them in my family, and they have cured all the various ailments which have troubled us. I am now strong and healthy, and I can truly say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this disease. Address: F. J. Chesley & Co., Toledo, O.

You should bake at home; you get purer and better food. But look well to your baking powder! It is a most important ingredient in your baking, and one very apt to be adulterated. Be sure it is made of pure cream of tartar.

The best way to be absolutely certain is to buy Cleveland's, well known to be a pure, cream of tartar baking powder, and the strongest and most wholesome made.

becoming prematurely old men? Never mind what people say. If, of course, you are a man of a few years, do not let your own vanity lead you to pull out of the hole if possible, but when untoward circumstances are the cause, do not be afraid, but quit and rest and take a new start. The other day I short briefs from the lives of some of our great merchants, and I was surprised to note the number that had failed, made settlements, and then started anew. Men who today are acknowledged merchant kings.

CHIT-CHAT.

Thawing.
Thawing, such as we had the first part of this week, are good things, provided that they do not fill our streets with water. For instance, a young friend of mine, just married, who has built a nice new house on the side of a hill, was telling me of his trials and tribulations last Tuesday morning when going into the city via the long line (via Weymouth, Braintree and Milton branch). It appears that when he built his house he made special stress in the specifications that the walls should be watertight. They were watertight in so far as keeping water in the cellar was concerned. Any way, to cut a long story short, Monday morning, when he went down cellar to look at his heater, he found about two inches of water on the cellar floor and the heater acting "cranky." He stirred up his heater and put on more coal and let "her" whoop for a few minutes, but when he went back he was surprised to see that the water had increased in depth, and was now high enough to put out his fire. He has been looking for the man who built his house to see if he could obtain any satisfaction, but inasmuch as he paid cash when the house was built, I fall to see where he can win. This is one of the times that it pays to drag your bills along. However, the street railway people just simply blessed the thaw when it arrived Sunday, although they did not care for the rain, but I am told that for the first time in months they can see the stonework between the tracks.

ELECTRIC TRAVEL.
The recent burn outs in the power stations of the street railway company have caused many bunches of inconvenience. I am thinking more especially of this time when a good many who start from their homes for North Weymouth at 7 P. M. He arrived at his destination just two hours late, and the young lady must have gone to bed, for the lights, so I am told, were all out. Perhaps she was watching the new moon go down with someone else. There is no telling what these girls will do.

CHILDREN'S DAY.
The Cochato Club people always devote one day in the year to the children. That day is Washington's Birthday. There is always a good crowd there, for it is about the only time when you can see the young youngsters of both sexes mix up in public. Last Monday afternoon there was the usual program, an entertainment consisting of a conjurer, and music and dancing. The little mites watched with great intenceness all of the seemingly wonderful tricks of the conjurer, and the girls were so quick, and when the people that he took out of Bobbie's car could possibly come from. To me there was more pleasure in watching the faces of the little ones than in the entertainment itself. But the dancing, it was a perfect baby's delight. Little tots just about three years old dancing. Yes, and doing a better stand than lots of older people five and ten times their age. Ah, me, but those babyhood days are over for most of us, and we have to bend our backs to the flat, hard grind of everyday life.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.
As a day, Washington's Birthday was a failure. A great big grand dizzle. There is only one class of people that could enjoy it, and that was the theatre owners. Before going down to the club at Braintree in the afternoon, I went into the city. My business took me past many of the theatres just about the time for them to open, and the sign, "standing room only," was in evidence. There was only high in hopes, only to have them dashed down with the reply, "nothing but admissions." They would go from one theatre to another, and then finally conclude themselves with a "well, there is really nothing else to see any way."

BIKE RACING.
Years ago, the great opening day of the bicycle season used to be Washington's Birthday. All of the various agencies kept open house. Free cigars and drinks and literature were dispensed with liberal hands. But those days have gone by. One or two houses, it is true, kept open house, but the majority of them were almost lifeless. What with the weather and the backwardness of the season, the life of a bicycle age seemed to me to be anything but prosperous. But then, perhaps I was mistaken.

GOING BACKWARD.
An old saying is, "be sure you are right, then they know they are wrong." It is necessary to go ahead in the wrong way. They think that it is foolish to turn back. They are afraid that their friends will call them chicken-hearted. Do not realize that the best thing for them to do would be to own up that they were wrong and make a new start.

STARTING ANEW.
Take fully 75 per cent. of all the late failures, and after a settlement has been effected these firms will come right about. It was not much better for the heads of those firms to acknowledge that they were in the hole and could not get out, and for them to wind up affairs generally, then to keep picking their way along, burdening themselves with worry and anxiety, and

THE CHITTEER.
The Republican town caucus was held in English hall, East Weymouth, last Friday evening. The caucus was called to order and the call read by Chairman Gordon Willis of the Town Committee. Mr. Willis was afterwards elected chairman, and William N. Wallace, secretary. The reports of all secretaries of its several caucuses were read and accepted, and the ticket to be voted at the town election, March 7, was made up in accordance with the action of the ward caucuses as follows: Town clerk, John A. Raymond; town treasurer, John H. Stetson; selectmen and overseers of the poor, George L. Newton, Martin E. Hawes, Bradford Lawson, Edward W. Hunt and Walter I. Bates; assessors, George L. Newton, John W. Bates, Francis H. Cowley, William B. Lord and George L. Torrey; tax collector, Willard J. Dunbar; school committee, three years, George L. Newton and H. Franklin Perry; park commissioner, Frank H. Torrey; ward warden, George L. Newton; auditors, G. E. Reed and John P. Hunt; water commissioners, for three years, William H. Pratt; for one year, Wendell G. Bates, Charles F. Hunt and Clarence P. Whitte; constables, Isaac H. Walker, B. F. Richards, Asa B. Pratt, N. B. Pearce, Thomas Fitzgerald, John D. Walsh, George B. Bailey, Michael Allen, George W. Conant and W. F. French.

EDITOR OF THE WEYMOUTH GAZETTE.
DEAR SIR:
As a citizen of Weymouth, one of the town's most deeply interested in the manufacture of fire-crackers, and therefore also deeply concerned in the bill before the Legislature, to provide for a new method of celebrating Fourth July, I was pleased with the remarks which Representative Barnes of this town made before the Committee on Mercantile Affairs on Thursday of last week. Thinking that other citizens of the town would also be interested to know how Mr. Barnes stood in regard to the matter,

Y. M. C. A. Notes.
The evening of Washington's Birthday was a most enjoyable one at the association building, as was evidenced by the large number who attended, and the re-ferency with which they departed. A basketball game claimed the attention during the early evening, and then there was an entertainment consisting of readings by Miss Bowker of the Emerson School of Oratory, vocal solos by Annie Deane, violin solos by Dr. E. W. Hill of North Weymouth, and xylophone solos by Joseph Murphy.

The work of the association has grown so rapidly during the last few months that it has become impracticable for Mr. Colman to attend to all the gymnasium classes, the committee work and the social side at the same time. Consequently, at a special meeting of the directors held last Monday, it was voted to employ Mr. John A. McDonald, now principal director of the Newburyport association, as physical director of this association. Mr. McDonald will probably begin the duties of his new position about April 1st. The athletic field in the rear of the building, and everything connected with it will be under the special care of Mr. McDonald, and great results are anticipated.

Perfect Confidence.
Where there used to be a feeling of un-pleasantness and worry in the household when a child showed symptoms of croup, there is now perfect confidence. This is owing to the uniform success of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the treatment of that disease. Mrs. J. B. Butler, of Foxfield, N. H., writes: "My child has had croup for several years. My child is subject to severe attacks of croup, and it always gives him prompt relief." For sale at Wm. B. Webster's drug store, East Weymouth.

Selkirk's Deal In Rubber

By GEORGE ETHELBERT WALSH

Copyright, 1907, by George E. Walsh

SELKIRK had been sent south to look after the American rubber company's interests in the interior of Honduras, and after two months of the most exasperating exploration through the swamps and woods of the lowlands ten miles back from the coast he was free to confess that he was not in love with life there. Besides the risk to one's life from fever and ruthless cutthroats, the pay was hardly commensurate with his ideas of his usefulness. It seemed to him that he was not in love with life there. Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs.

Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

The opposite direction from that taken by the Englishman and his escort, the four of roasting alive seemed to have escaped his mind entirely. Once or twice he laughed softly to himself. Two weeks later, when Selkirk appeared at the American consul's dingy office at Amapala, he was greeted cordially by that sun-dried individual. After a few words of welcome he asked:

Working Government.—In No Aid to the World's Fair.—There No End to It?

It is a legitimate law there would be no need of spending money on a lobby to get it passed by Congress. President Francis and other private bankers would have completed for it and would have provided that it be a national character, and which has just passed a $3,000,000 appropriation for a Lewis-Clark fair in order to advertise the city of Portland, Or.—an exhibition which cannot offer the shabby pretext of the Louisiana Purchase show that it is of a national character, and which is no sense a world's fair. No wonder other cities, remembering how handsomely Uncle Sam financed the Chicago fair, how he reimbursed the Buffalo fair, how he helped the Charleston and other ventures, are seeing how the Government subsidizes the Lewis and Portland extravaganzas, are busy with schemes hunting up dates for "world's fairs" which can be used as excuses for municipal raids on the national pocketbook.

Prevalent Opinion.

The Worst to Come.

Deculiarly characteristic of America is such a much-used expression as "Cheer up! The worst is yet to come." It may be doubted whether in other countries it would be either understood as philosophy or appreciated as humor. Indeed, of the pillars of the "best of times" motto would easily exist apart from the other. We have seen the phrase defended on the ground of common sense, as indicating that what we have to endure at present is not by any means so bad as it might be, but such an argument, if taken seriously, would hardly take this form. In our early boyhood, undergoing a somewhat painful operation, and being grief-stricken by the surgeon that the patient might shortly be expected to die, in spite of indignation at the heartlessness of it, forced into laughter at the familiar species of native humor. American humor is not very delicate. It is fantastic, exaggerated, and often seems to foreigners cruel and grim. The clever New England critic Chesterton has several times attacked it for its lack of sympathy, preferring, on this ground, Bret Harte to what he deems the more characteristic American humor of Mark Twain, because he thinks that Bret Harte is more just and appreciative of the persons at whom he laughs, and more likely to laugh with than at them. Reference is another quality which Chesterton attributes to the humor of Mark Twain. They Arnold and Roskin missed bitterly in all American thought. It is related to fatalism, a jocosely fatalism often, the recognition of relentless fate, not with awe, humility or fear, but with an amused sense of the helplessness and futility of the hands of fate has usually been taken as a tragedy. The intractability of fate has even been the essential ground of tragic feeling, until we came along, and instead of the fatalistic fatalism of the past, we have the inevitable, met with reckless laughter and a jocosely fatalism often, the recognition of relentless fate, not with awe, humility or fear, but with an amused sense of the helplessness and futility of the hands of fate has usually been taken as a tragedy. Our Sympathy With Japan—Russia's Unpopularity Here Naturally Excites Her People.

The public opinion of the United States has pronounced itself with remarkable unanimity in favor of Japan and against the pretensions of Russia. With but few exceptions leading newspapers of the country are anti-Russian; and the side which has the sympathies of our government is that of Japan. That the permitted interferences of the Russian press should have been so generally and so cordially received by the American people is not a matter of surprise. The legend that American friendship could be steadily counted on as a return for the attitude of Russia during our Civil War has been almost conditionally nullified by the attitude of Russia during the present war. The growing perception of the highly unsubstantial nature of the services rendered by Russia to the cause of the Union has had something to do with qualifying the feeling of gratitude, but the effective cause of the almost total extinction of pro-Russian feeling here must be sought in the reasons which have combined to make Russia despised and distrusted throughout the civilized world. Working Government.—In No Aid to the World's Fair.—There No End to It?

It is a legitimate law there would be no need of spending money on a lobby to get it passed by Congress. President Francis and other private bankers would have completed for it and would have provided that it be a national character, and which has just passed a $3,000,000 appropriation for a Lewis-Clark fair in order to advertise the city of Portland, Or.—an exhibition which cannot offer the shabby pretext of the Louisiana Purchase show that it is of a national character, and which is no sense a world's fair. No wonder other cities, remembering how handsomely Uncle Sam financed the Chicago fair, how he reimbursed the Buffalo fair, how he helped the Charleston and other ventures, are seeing how the Government subsidizes the Lewis and Portland extravaganzas, are busy with schemes hunting up dates for "world's fairs" which can be used as excuses for municipal raids on the national pocketbook.

Sick

Headaches and Dizzy Spells, Weak, Nervous, Wretched, Tired, Until Dr. Miles' Nervine Cured Me.

Are you in a "poor condition"? Are you almost ready to give up from exhaustion, nervousness, headaches, backaches, dizzy spells? No need to mention the tails of a run down or "poor condition" if you are suffering. Letter to Dr. Miles' Nervine, the remedy sold on a guarantee to help you, and restore your poor health to its former strength and health.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine has done me a great deal for me. In the fall of 1903, my health was in a very poor condition. I was nervous, dizzy, tired, and my appetite was poor. I had been under the care of my local physician, but he could not help me. I had been under the care of my local physician, but he could not help me. I had been under the care of my local physician, but he could not help me.

The Output

THE output is the key-note to profit. In deciding upon a price at which to sell, a manufacturer, no matter what article he is likely to sell, and base his price upon the output. It is only reasonable, for if a tailor sells only two suits of clothes each week, he will naturally expect a higher price for each suit than if he sells a hundred suits each week. The same principle applies to all other lines of business.
