CONTEST AT AN END

THE WINNERS

Miss Lizzie Connell, Weymouth	208,550
Miss Helen Lewis, East Weymouth	402,825
Miss Mary Dunn, North Weymouth	192,700
Miss Jeanette Shaw, South Weymouth	133,325

The WEYMOUTH GAZETTE contest came to a close at ten o'clock Thursday night and the avalanche of votes that were dumped into the hopper for the final count proved the earlier assertion that the reserve vote would play a prominent part in the winning.

Thousands of these counters were reported during the final hours, and the totals of many of the earnest workers will be seen greatly increased as a result. While the management regrets exceedingly that all could not win one of the delightful trips, sufficient balm to soothe the feelings of those who came in a good second will be tendered so that all who worked to the finish will have little cause for regret for their effort during the contest period. A graceful loser is often admired as much as the winner, all could not win, so there must be losers. It

The Chaperone

The honor of choosing the chaperone, who will accompany the Gazette Travel Club on the trip that has been promised to the winning candidate, goes to Miss Helen Lewis in District 2, who cast the largest vote of all the candidates in the entire contest. We are informed by phone this morning by Miss Lewis that she has selected Mrs. J. H. Libby, who will act in that capacity. The itinerary and other details of the trip will be announced in next week's issue.

surely was a grand finish, and while the votes that were cast during the final hours made winners of some and losers of others it will be most gratifying to the losers to note the large number of supporters and friends that were so loyal to them during the "battle of ballots." In most of the districts the winners were in doubt until the last moment.

Much concern was at all times manifested and many eyes were directed toward the various districts, and the vote totals show how earnestly the workers were after the votes at all times.

It is difficult for the GAZETTE to express its gratification over such a satisfactory finish of the Travel Club contest. Large final returns were anticipated, but not as large as came. A regular avalanche of votes descended on the ballot box and the heretofore large totals were swelled to double, in many cases. It was a spectacular finish and the winners have good cause for rejoicing, and those who came in second fought a good fight.

BOY SCOUT NOTES.

Monday the Scouts assisted the G. A. R. in decorating the graves of departed comrades. In the afternoon many attended the exercises at East Weymouth.

Bonney's Camp, Pembroke, has been decided on as the site for a summer camp for Weymouth scouts. The rate will be five dollars a week and each troop furnish their own tents. It is desired that all who wish to go to notify their own scoutmaster at once. Camp will probably be from July 17 to August 14.

Troop 1, Weymouth.

Monday morning the troop assembled in Lincoln square at 7:30 and marched with the detail of G. A. R. and school children to Village cemetery. Potted plants were placed at the side of each departed veteran's grave and all details arranged awaiting the arrival of the main body. At 9:15 the comrades arrived, marched through the cemetery and a veteran or a S. V. and a scout or sea scout at each grave, drums were rolled, tapers sounded and all marched out. After marching to Lincoln square Arthur Jordan "Fred" the faces of the troop and the sea scouts.

The newspaper with the biggest list of subscribers gives most to its advertisers, and the number of new readers added by reason of the thorough canvass made by the contestants will make the GAZETTE all the more valuable as an advertising medium.

The features of the contest were so thoroughly noted during the progress of the contest that it is not necessary to go into that part of the details at this time except to state that the votes cast by the friends of the candidates during the final hour of the balloting furnished developments as surprising to the management as to the candidates themselves.

Everywhere the question was asked, "Who will win?" and each time the answer was the same, "No one can tell."

Excellent work was done by winners and losers, and the editor and manager wish to extend their grateful appreciation of the excellent work accomplished, and to thank those who contributed in any way to make the contest the huge success that it was.

While the Gazette has profited by the many new readers added to its already large list it will not consider its portion of the undertaking complete until each winner of a trip has enjoyed the tour to the fullest degree and is safely home again.

CARD OF THANKS

Post 58, G. A. R., wishes to extend its most sincere thanks to the owners of the auto, and their most courteous chauffeurs, who did so much to make all the old veterans so comfortable and easy in the exercises of Memorial Day, and will always be remembered with gratitude by those who participated in it. Weymouth has always been good to the old soldiers, and adds one more link to the long chain which will never be forgotten by them.

The Post also extends its thanks to the D. of V. for the beautiful buttonholes which were pinned on the comrades, and to the Boy Scouts for their services, and also the school children for their services, and last but not least to the W. R. C. for the excellent dinner which was served.

I also wish to thank my patriotic instructor, J. M. Whitcomb, and his committee for the very efficient and successful manner in which the program was carried out.

VINAL—HEALD.

Prominent South Weymouth Belle June Bride of Albert Vinal of Newton Center. Largest Wedding in Weymouth Ever Held.

A fashionable wedding of considerable interest was solemnized at the Union church in South Weymouth on Wednesday evening of this week, the contracting parties being Miss Margaret Heald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Heald, and Albert Vinal of Newton Center, son of Mrs. Charles A. Vinal. The church was well filled for the ceremony, friends of the couple being present from Boston, Providence, Newton, Brookline, Quincy, Cohasset, New York, Maryland, Minnesota and the Weymouths.

The pulpit front was banked with white bridal wreath and greenery, and there was a profuse display of palms, ferns and cut flowers. The guests' pews were tied with pink and lavender rhododendrons.

To the strains of the "Bridal Chorus," from "Lohengrin," played on the organ by Burgess Tower, with violin accompaniment by Donald Gammons of Cohasset, the bridal party passed down the center aisle. The procession was led by the ushers, Stanley and Charles Heald, brothers of the bride; Halsey Ellwell of South Weymouth, Siefert Smith of Newton, George Smith of White River Junction, Vt.; Fred Pillsbury of Springfield, Robert Bray of Newton Center, Fred Co. burn of Brookline and Stanley Merrill of Newton Center. They were followed by the flower girl, Miss Ellen Stowers, the page, Master Barnal Coburn, nephew of the groom, the matron of honor, Mrs. Fred Coburn, sister of the groom, and the maid of honor, Miss Dartha Heald, sister of the bride. Next came the bridesmaids, the Misses Mildred M. Green of Cohasset, N. Y., a classmate of the bride at Dana Hall; Belle O'Hara of Arlington; Margaret H. Coe of Waterbury, Conn.; Lucille H. Couch of Nyack, N. Y.; Clarice Tirrell of Brockton and Marjorie McBride of South Weymouth. The bride was escorted by her father. They were followed by the bridesmaids, Misses Mildred M. Green of Cohasset, N. Y., a classmate of the bride at Dana Hall; Belle O'Hara of Arlington; Margaret H. Coe of Waterbury, Conn.; Lucille H. Couch of Nyack, N. Y.; Clarice Tirrell of Brockton and Marjorie McBride of South Weymouth. The bride was escorted by her father.

The groom and the best man, Charles A. Vinal of Newton Center, brother of the groom, with the officiating clergymen, Rev. F. E. Butler of the Central church, Providence, a former pastor of the Union church, and Rev. Charles C. Earle, a former pastor of the Ruggles Street church, Boston, were awaiting the party. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Earle, the Episcopal double ring service being used. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with duchess and rose point lace. Her tulle veil was fastened with orange blossoms and a pearl band, and she carried white lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore pink taffeta silk net and carried pink roses. The matron of honor was attired in orchid color taffeta and carried pink orchids. The bridesmaids wore lavender and pink and carried sweet peas. The flower girl was in white.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 530 Main street. The rooms were decorated with palms, ferns and pink ramblers. Mr. and Mrs. Vinal were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Vinal's parents and the bridesmaids. The guests were entertained with orchestral selections and luncheon. The couple received many gifts in gold, silver and bric-a-brac. After a wedding trip they will occupy their new home at 146 Columbian street.

Mr. Vinal is a graduate of Williams College, class of 1914. He was prominent in college athletics, being captain of the football team in his senior year. He has a position with the Stetson Shoe Co. of this town. Mrs. Vinal is a graduate of Dana Hall, Wellesley College, class of 1912, and prominent socially. She is a member of the Union Congregational church of this place.

Weymouth High School Alumni.

The Weymouth High School Alumni Association will hold its annual reunion in the High School building Wednesday evening, June 30. A committee is making an effort to obtain the addresses of graduates of the Weymouth High School and of the North and South High schools. Members and friends of the association will greatly aid the committee in its work by sending the names, addresses, and year of graduation of classmates and friends to Miss Mary L. Sheehy, 401 Broad street, East Weymouth. Louise E. Humphrey, pres.

THE DEAD ARE NOT FORGOTTEN

Once More Weymouth Pays Tribute to Its Heroic Dead.

There are recurring events which as years come and go lose somewhat of their significance and the real spirit which in them is lost sight of and they pass by almost unheeded, but not so with Memorial Day, if we may judge by its observance for the current year.

Each year has seen changes in methods as they have been made necessary by changed conditions and facilities. Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., seeing the need of a change in the manner of observing the day chose a committee to formulate new plans and that committee with J. Murray Whitcomb as chairman, made radical changes which were well carried out and proved most satisfactory.

The weather bureau could not have done better in weather conditions. In fact it was an ideal day for the execution of the following schedule:

As usual the place of meeting on Monday morning was Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth but in lieu of the long marches which are usually mapped out there was little or no marching in store for the men.

Comrade J. M. Whitcomb was in general charge with P. C. Bradford Hayes acting adjutant and the veteran Officer of the Day David Dunbar, performing his well known duties.

Col. James L. Bates Camp S. of V., Carleton White, captain, had the escort position and Commander Andrew Culley of Post 58 G. A. R. had 70 of the 82 members of the P. R. in line. The usual company and battalion line has become a thing of the past on account of depleted rank but Old Glory and the Union Jack still waved in the air with Charles E. Bicknell carrying the former and for the 80th consecutive year P. H. Slattery the latter, but it was a beautiful new well mounted Union Jack recently presented to him by the ladies of the Relief Corps, which by the way was well represented in the line as were also Dorothea Dix Tent D. of V., who presented each veteran with a flag button hole bouquet.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans was represented and autos in which were the Board of Selectmen and other invited guests, were in line and when we say in line we would not forget the Boy Scouts which in many respects were a decidedly important feature.

Head Scout Master, John McFawn, was in charge and his force was so arranged that the Weymouth Boy Scouts of America became the leading and most important factor in the decorating work.

Carter's band as usual had been engaged for the day and proved itself no less efficient than it was many years ago.

As we have said marching is no longer the order on Memorial Day and there is a good and sufficient reason for it, as in the main, the marching days of the men are over but by the generosity of many citizens autos were provided for all and the Old North cemetery was the first visited, from which the line proceeded to Washington square, Weymouth, via North Church and Commercial streets where a brief halt was made and the band played two selections and then proceeded to the Village cemetery, which contains the remains of more soldiers than any other cemetery in town.

The St. Francis Xavier cemetery was next and then in order came the Highland, the Lake View at Pond Plain, the Elmwood on Union street and next Mt. Hope, stopping enroute at Columbian square where two selections were given by the band.

Having completed the work at Mt. Hope, autos were taken for Fairmount cemetery, East Weymouth, where the last ceremony of the day, as to decoration, was to take place. The line halted at the Pleasant street entrance and marched to the cemetery stationing the band at the grave of Col. B. S. Lovell where a dirge was played, decoration of the several graves completed and taps sounded.

When the last "Low Green Tent" had received its floral tributes there were 520 as to 185 twenty-eight years ago.

Grand Army hall was the next objective point and so well had the plans been carried out that the column was but ten minutes behind time and that had been used up at the innovation at Washington and Columbian squares.

The long ride had given the men a good appetite for the dinner which was awaiting them by the Women's Relief Corps, Mrs. Junie B. Morrill, chairman of the committee. It is only necessary to say dinner by the Women's Relief Corps to know that every guest, who sits at the table, will be fed and well fed. Provisions in abundance had been prepared and every member of the Corps was on the alert to see that every person received the needed or desired attention.

A brief open air concert by the band and then it was Oddfellows opera house for the afternoon program which was as follows:

Selection by the band.
Greeting and thanks by Commander Culley.
School Chorus directed by Joseph Crowell of the James Humphrey school.

TOWN BUSINESS.

The regular weekly meeting of the Selectmen was held at the town office on Tuesday and, in the absence of the chairman, George L. Newton presided.

It was voted to build a concrete sidewalk on the west side of North street beginning at Thomas Corner and extending to Bridge street.

Alfred S. Flowers and Herman S. Pratt were appointed special police and two additional victual licenses were granted.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. report an investigation of the situation at the East Weymouth station, and needed improvements will be made by which the platform will be extended and a better approach from the easterly part of the village.

A communication from South Weymouth asked the Selectmen to consider the organization of a military company in Weymouth and it was voted so to do, and a movement in that direction will be made at an early date.

It was voted to instruct the police not to allow peddlers and hawkers to stand on the streets and squares. They must be kept moving.

The chief of police was authorized to procure metal badges for the caps of officers.

The Selectmen viewed Randall avenue as per survey of Engineer Whitney, and in its construction will follow the plans made.

Owing to the change of time of meeting made necessary by Memorial Day the Tuesday meeting at the Town Home was postponed to Tuesday, the 8th.

AT OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Patriotic exercises were held at all of the schools on Friday, and all the teachers had well arranged and interesting programs of recitation and music, but like other features of the Memorial season the reduced ranks of the men of the G. A. R. and infirmities of age prevented many of the schools from listening to the story of camp and field as told by the soldiers of the civil war, as many of the veterans to whom they have listened have told the story for the last time.

Even though the story as told by the soldiers must soon be eliminated, exercises such as were held last Friday can not fail to impress upon the rising generation lessons of good citizenship.

The thirteenth anniversary of the dedication of Pond Home will be observed as Donation Day, on Saturday, June 5, 1915.

It is earnestly hoped that there will be a large attendance of friends of the Home whether King's Daughters or not. We need the stimulus of your presence more than ever.

Gifts of money and articles for use at the Home will be greatly appreciated. Fancy and useful articles will be for sale. Luncheon will be served in the house, to all who wish, and sandwiches, ice cream and coffee may be had on the grounds.

Marie Grosse, Queen of the hurdy gurdy will add to the pleasure of the day with her fascinating music.

Trains for Pondville leave South Station Boston, at 11:30 A. M. Returning, leave Pondville at 5:35 P. M.

W. R. C. Notes.

PRESENTS RECORD TO COMBINATION 5.

Benjamin Burbank of Pond Street, South Weymouth, Has Left Complete Record of All Alarms, With Exception of Still Alarms, on System Now in Force. Was a Fireman for 30 Years. Remembers Many Bad Conflagrations.

Benjamin Burbank of Pond street, South Weymouth, has just presented Combination 5 with a complete record of every fire alarm that has been pulled in on the system since it was installed in the fall of 1892.

Mr. Burbank was a fireman for thirty-eight years in ward 5 and resigned from the department a few years ago. When he resigned from Hose 5 he was presented with a gold badge by the members of that company.

Since the system was installed there has been 1119 alarms, 71 of which were false. One of the false alarms was due to a young lady trying to mail a letter in a fire alarm box, when the system was first installed. The average cost to the town under the horse drawn system was about $10 an alarm and at that rate it has cost the town $710 for false alarms alone in the past 23 years.

The most alarms in one year was 76, that being last year and this year to date there have been 48, which bids fair to out number all past years.

The first box to be pulled in on the system was Box 51, Oct. 30, 1892, calling Hose 5 and H. & L. 5 to the Weymouth fair grounds for a fire in the stables near the race track.

Mr. Burbank's records brings back to his memory many of the big fires of Weymouth among the most noted being as follows: Mar. 23, 1895, box 23 was pulled in calling the department to Z. L. Bicknell's store, then followed a second and finally a general alarm. Another was box 27 on April 27, 1902 when the skating rink or Music hall at East Weymouth was destroyed.

On Feb. 8, 1903, box 23 was rung in when the White Church was burned at East Weymouth Box 57, Sept. 12, 1900, a big woods fire at South Weymouth in the section known as the Old City when in two hours it burned out onto Union street and destroyed two houses. The Bradley fires are also to be remembered, first box 18 on Nov. 25, 1901 when the chemical works were destroyed at a loss of $100,000 and then box 13 on July 3, 1913 when the store house was destroyed.

Jan. 15, 1912, box 25, the Masonic building at East Weymouth.

Jan. 12, 1912, box 16, a number of cottages and boats at North Weymouth.

And the not to be forgotten fire of a year ago on May 28, 1914, when the Town hall, Bicknell's garage and the Leatherette factory was burned, the cause of which brought auto fire trucks and permanent men into the department and making it one of the most efficient in any town of its size in the state, in the way of fire protection. Combination 5 intends to keep up the excellent precedent of keeping a complete record, that Mr. Burbank has established. He also has a complete record of every fireman's muster since the general one held at Bath, Me., July 4th, 1849. The number of alarms each year since the installation of the present system, follows:

1892, 4; 1893, 20; 1894, 30; 1895, 39; 1896, 21; 1897, 30; 1898, 26; 1899, 59; 1900, 69; 1901, 69; 1902, 48; 1903, 41; 1904, 41; 1905, 45; 1906, 36; 1907, 43; 1908, 48; 1909, 52; 1910, 75; 1911, 68; 1912, 70; 1913, 61; 1914, 76; 1915, 48 to present date making a total of 1119 alarms.

D. A. R.

The 15th annual meeting of Susanna Tufts Chapter, D. A. R., of Weymouth, was held on Monday, the 24th inst., at the home of Mrs. Alice Pierce Jewell at Keuberma, Hull. The day was ideal for soft effects of light on sea and sky. There was a good attendance, twenty-five members being present. Each brought a dollar for the society's work, and several bright accounts were given of the means by which it was obtained. The usual business of an annual meeting was transacted and the same board of officers as last year was elected. These officers are as follows:

Regent, Mrs. Charles T. Crane; 1st Vice-Regent, Mrs. Harriet E. Voorhees; 2nd Vice-Regent, Mrs. Walter F. Thompson; Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. E. Guttersson; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. John W. Aldridge; Treasurer, Miss Lucy M. Crane; Registrar, Miss Mary F. Loud; Historian, Miss Annah E. Hayward; Auditor, Mrs. Harriet E. Bachelder; Directors, Mrs. A. P. Jewell, Mrs. Annie K. Newman and Mrs. Louis F. Bates.

A social hour followed the meeting which was much enjoyed, and tempting refreshments were served.

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

It is a good plan to mulch currants and other fruit-bearing shrubs.

All early garden truck will be a little late, the cold weather having retarded the growth.

Once a week give the drinking dishes a scrubbing and scald with hot water in which a small quantity of common baking soda has been dissolved.

An hour's work with a sharp wire at the foot of your peach trees killing borers, may mean an extra bushel of fine peaches.

If there is a life after this and men will be obliged to give an account of the deeds done in the flesh, then perhaps the horses will come forward as witnesses and accusers of man's inhumanity to animals.

Animals in sickness are like the rest of us. Some are patient, responsive, uncomplaining, apparently grateful. Others fretful, cross, difficult to manage. For the same service rendered one will lick your hand and another bite it. They are almost human.

It should be scarcely necessary to comment upon the loss which annually occurs through the agency of weeds on the farm, but that that it is great we can well believe. Last year saw approximately sixty thousand tons of weed seeds cleaned out of our grain at the head of the Great Lakes. How much more was cleaned out at local mills and elevators, or left on the farms to renew next year's weed crop, could scarcely be estimated.

Red clover should be cut for hay when just past full bloom. At this stage the maximum protein and dry matter are present, the leaves are still intact and the stems green. The hay should be so handled that it will reach the barn or stack with the least possible exposure to the weather and loss of leaves. It should not be allowed to become too dry in the windrow and should be cured in the shock.

After a winter on the stone pavements and marble floors the animal Man has the desire to walk on the naked ground and feel the cool earth, to take out his spade and rake and fiddle and fuss in his garden. Generations of houses, clothes and books have subsided, but not smothered the ancestral fires. There is something more than mere satisfaction in digging, planting and fingering in the dirt.

A day or so off is as necessary for working animals as it is for people. To a hard-worked horse rest is almost as necessary as food. Not only should he have a free run of the pasture for several hours every evening after he has worked hard, but his stall should be made comfortable for him by being wide enough for him to lie down and get up easily, but it should be well bedded with clean straw, for, unless he lies down regularly his rest is never complete.

Extensive tomato growers train their earliest plants to single stems, leaving the rows not less than 3 feet apart, and the plants 1 foot apart in the row. All side branches are pinched off as fast as they appear, and the single stem is supported by stakes or wire trellis, the stock being tied at intervals with coarse twine. When the plant is about 4 feet high the top is nipped and all the growth directed to the clusters of fruit. This method produces not only early fruit, but that which is large, smooth and fine.

There are three reasons why the farmer should keep fowls. Let us look at the figures where all the feed has to be bought. The fowl of the average size will consume 75 pounds of grain food per year, worth now about $1.60 per hundred, or $1.20. To be conservative, place the cost at $1.50 per year. A conservative hen will lay 125 eggs per year, on an average for a large flock. Many obtain averages as high as 150 to 175.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY SEVEN YEARS AGO.
 The frame of John Carroll's new factory was raised last Wednesday, and the work will be carried forward with the utmost dispatch.

The well which has been dug in the Village Cemetery will be a great accommodation to owners of lots, as they have been obliged to cart water in dry times to preserve the grasses, shrubs and flowers.

The seats in the M. E. church at East Weymouth needing to be recushioned, the ladies of the Society have concerted measures to meet the expense of the improvement, and last Wednesday evening a strawberry and ice cream festival was held in the vestry.

Last Saturday was the opening day of the black bass fishing in Great Pond, and a large number of fishers were in readiness, with hook and line, but the fish appeared to be so well fed that they would not bite, and only eight fish were caught during the day.

The choirs of the Cong'l churches and M. E. church, at North and East Weymouth, met at the Unitarian church, Hingham, last Monday evening, for vocal practice. The church was filled with singers and spectators. Mrs. Andrew C. Cushing, formerly Miss Sarah Loud, of East Weymouth, one of our most noted local artists, gave a solo, which was warmly applauded.

TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.
 The graves of one hundred and eighty-five soldiers were decorated, the outlying cemeteries being visited by the appointed squads early in the morning.

John Moran, who died last Saturday, was said to be the first person of Irish nationality to settle in Weymouth. He moved to North Weymouth in 1832, and was buried Tuesday from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

The sixth anniversary of the South Weymouth Improvement association assumed the character of a strawberry festival on a grand scale at Music Hall, Wednesday evening, and in spite of the rain two hundred ladies and gentlemen were present.

The following parties have been connected with Great Pond water this week: Ward 2, Miss Ellen G. Parrott, Rely Bros., two houses of J. R. Tutman on Lake street, Catherine Morgan, Mrs. Ellen Fraher, Wm. Heffernan, Robert Cruise, Christopher Skellay; Ward 4, F. D. Pratt, Thomas Morgan; Ward 5, Mt. Hope cemetery.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.
 Upwards of 1000 tickets were sold at the station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. road, East Weymouth, Monday for Nantasket via the third rail electric.

N. D. Canterbury and John A. Raymond are not anxious to ride three in a tuggy, especially when the horse is one of the three and gets in over the dasher hind end first.

The South Weymouth Fish and Gun club will hold its first shoot of the summer season tomorrow afternoon, and twice every month after this week.

The electric railway over Quincy avenue is nearly completed. The trolley wire is being put in position. We should judge that cars will be running by the tenth of June.

The Weymouth & Braintree Street Railway had an eight wheel electric come up from Taunton, Wednesday for the purpose of trying the roadbed in order ascertain whether or not cars of such a size would be practical of use on their line.

Hundreds of small villages, away from main-travelled roads, are readily accessible to salesmen who know how inexpensive and how easy it is to telephone these places from convenient junction points.

Sometimes it's impossible to "make" all these places each trip, or personally to visit each customer oftener than once a year.

A telephone call is the best known substitute for a personal visit. It keeps one's personality alive. It gratifies the customer. And frequently it pays for itself a hundred-fold by the casual re-orders it induces.

There will be no toll charge on a Particular Party Call if you are not connected with the person whose name you have given to the Toll Operator.

June is the month of roses, brides and grooms, sweet girl and aspiring boy graduates. Up to this morning there has been little or nothing in the air which suggested roses, but the month is young yet and no doubt most of the anticipated joys will materialize before the 30th.

A week ago we spoke of the probability of the Legislature closing up its work for the season on that day but the continued confinement of the Governor to his home by his recent accident and the lack of harmony between His Excellency, the Governor and the house and senate has prolonged the session.

The Governor however made a suggestion which has many things in its favor i. e. biennial elections and curtailed legislature

Weymouth Board of Trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade will be held in the Clapp Memorial building next Wednesday evening, June 9th. In addition to regular business a supper complimentary to the guest of the Board of Trade on its visit to Beverly last week will be served.

Baseball Notes.

Nice work Weymouth High.
Callahan certainly pitched a great game. The Shoemakers were out classed.
Some crowd out, the best so far this year. Keep it up "Fandom" of Weymouth.

Johnson was the only visitor who seemed to be able to fathom Callahan's benders. He hit safely twice.
Eddie Condrick the kid catcher of Weymouth played rings around Bogiglan the Brockton backstop. Eddie stopped everything, threw well and used his head all the way.

Weymouth, won 5, lost 0; Brockton won 3, lost 1. Looks good boys.

Ryan's work with the indicator wasn't up to the classy exhibition given in the recent Weymouth High vs Rockland High game by Ganzl of Quincy. This lad looks like the best in the league at this angle. Ryan lost a couple last Saturday and doesn't keep them hustling like Ganzl does. However Ryan may be better than he has shown in Weymouth, we have only seen him twice.

The Weymouth outfield looked better last Saturday than it has before this year. The boys went after everything and when they got their hands on the pellet they held on like glue.

Still unbeaten in the league. Keep up the glorious work Weymouth High.

Bleachers are to be erected on the hill at the C. M. A. right away. This should help swell the attendance considerable this summer.

"Foby" Fraher sat on the bench all the game and was as nervous as a witch because he couldn't get into the contest against Coach Staff's boys. If there is anything that Leo would rather do than assist in beating Brockton we haven't discovered what it is yet. League rules kept Leo on the bench however.

Berquist, the Brockton twirler seems to be a fine mound artist, but his support was of a decidedly poor caliber last Saturday. If he has to stand for that kind of backing up every game he must have to pitch his head off to win a contest.

Connie Condrick was a mark for the Shoe City south-paw, the East Weymouth boy fanning three times and on his other trip to the bat Berquist very kindly passed him. Never mind Connie wait until you get at them at the Center street grounds in Brockton to-morrow.

Don't Forget: Weymouth High vs Brockton on the Center Street Grounds to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon at three o'clock. Battery for Weymouth, Callahan and Condrick; for the Shoe City school, Berquist or LaRoque and Bogiglan. Every body make a special effort to make the trip and cheer the local boys on to a second victory over Weymouth's rivals.

PURITY

The ingredients of the food you eat and give your children should be pure and healthful beyond any question.

Various food officials and pure food experts have frequently endorsed Royal Baking Powder as being superior to all other similar preparations, and many of the great chemists of the world, including most of those of official position, have given like testimony.

No other article of food has ever received such emphatic commendation for purity, strength and wholesomeness, from the most eminent authorities, as Royal Baking Powder.

Because Royal Baking Powder adds only healthful qualities to the food is one of the reasons why it is always preferred by teachers of cookery and the medical profession.

High School Notes.

At the Memorial day exercises held last Friday in the hall, Miss Bertha Hanson, Miss Theodora Kelth and Miss Flora McDonald contributed individual selections, the school orchestra played and members of the local posts addressed the students.

Work on the Year Book has been finished and the members of different classes are awaiting its publication.

The class motto for graduation is: "Nothing without divine guidance." The nomination committee (Miss Avis Loud, Martin and Talbot Ch.) will have charge of the election of class ushers.

Wallace Whittle 17, was chosen by the basketball squad, to lead next year's team. He has not yet decided on his manager.

When the foreman of the jury pronounced "Conny" Condrick guilty at his trial before the Senior class, Friday evening, Judge Dean sentenced him to three years under the teachers (Miss Curtis, Miss Sheehy, Miss Dwyer). After a plea for clemency the judge softened and granted Conny life imprisonment. Several important questions have arisen out of the trial to wit: Who is Miss Curtis "going with"? Why didn't Miss Sheehy stay 'bought'? Did Miss Frazer eat her soup with a fork?

DEAR MADAME:

If your friend, Mrs. Blank, who lives in a house the same size as yours and whose family consists of a like number of persons, has more time for shopping, recreation and mental improvement than you have, why not pay her a visit and find out how she manages to do it?

It's ten chances to one that the home of Mrs. Blank is equipped with such economical time and labor-saving devices as the gas range, gas fired water heater, gas laundry stove.

The aquirement of these things does not call for an investment beyond the capacity of people of modest means, therefore, instead of envying Mrs. Blank you should follow her example.

Why not look into the matter now?

LIKES WEYMOUTH TEAM.

Former Big Leaguer Comments On Brockton and Weymouth Nines After Witnessing Game Last Saturday.
Having been asked to try my hand at newspaper writing and give my frank opinion as to the merits of the two baseball teams, Weymouth High school and Brockton High, I motored over to the Clapp Memorial field last Saturday afternoon to carry out the few instructions given me as to what my duties were in a new field of endeavor.
I am frank to confess that I never witnessed a better high school baseball game from several points and from some others it was the worst. The contest was a pitcher's battle from the start, between L. Callahan for Weymouth and Berquist for the visiting nine. Callahan had a shade the better of the argument being better in the pinches than the Brockton twirler.
The Weymouth Boys played a fine game of ball behind Callahan, while at times the Brockton team played wretched ball, with Bogigian being the main offender.
To me the Weymouth High team looks about as good as any in the state, or at least among those I have seen in eastern Massachusetts. However the Weymouth lads must be able to stick better if they are to clean up the rest of their schedule. The Brockton is fast and a very good team, but seem to lack a spirit of hustling all the time which is necessary to a winning combination. However, if Weymouth had had their batting eyes with them last Saturday, Brockton would have never had a look in.
I was told at the game, several stories about the instructions given the batters by the Weymouth coach before they went to bat. Whether they are one half correct I do not know nor care, but I think some criticism is due the idea of someone, let me be the coach, I do not know, of letting the boys go up to the plate and let two go by in carrying out the idea of "waiting him out", when Berquist was "grooving the first ball on practically every man.
Criticism a coach or his methods is only wasting one's breath and Carl Loud's baseball knowledge is very keen on all points of the game, but I fail to see how the boys gain much in waiting out a pitcher for nine whole innings.
On the strength of last Saturday's exhibition Weymouth has a fast infield and a dandy "kid" backstop to take the place of Fraher when the latter is unable to play. Of Callahan, this boy has the necessary requisites to make a fine pitcher if he can gain a bit in weight, as he is a trifle slender at present.
The game at Brockton to-morrow should be a fast contest but I pick the local team to carry off the honors inside of the regulation nine innings.

IN OUR TOWN.

By Observer.
At last I am glad to see that the tarvia has been put on Middle and Broad streets near Central square. These streets in this section are fully as much traveled as any other streets in the town and the dust has been something terrible this Spring I am told.
May twenty-fifth was the day designated by Uncle Sam for the letter carriers to put on their summer outfits. I guess the summer suits weren't over warm on Wednesday however. Evidently the weather man isn't being held to a "strict accountability" for his acts.

My attention is called on the average of three and four times a day to the fact that so few of our townspeople attend the High School baseball games in East Weymouth. The showing thus far this year has been decidedly unworthy of a "live" town like Weymouth. Our High School team has one of the best combinations ever held at Weymouth's highest institute of learning and the boys deserve the townspeople's support, especially on Saturday afternoons, when very few business houses work.

I wandered down on the State road at North Weymouth last Sunday to see how great the auto traffic was to and from the south shore. Don't anybody think for one minute that being a police officer on the State highway is any cinch. It sure is not. I got the greatest surprise of my life while down at that section, at the numberless details of work the officers are called upon to meet at any moment. I wonder what the auto riding will be five years from now at the rate it is increasing at present.

I hear compliment after compliment on the way that our new Police Chief A. H. Pratt is conducting the affairs of his department. I am told that the new chief is tending to all the details that makes his force more efficient and the results are clearly shown in the increased activity of our police department.

Speaking of the police, the deed of Officer Elbert Ford of South Weymouth on Memorial Day has been called to my attention and is most decidedly worthy of special notice. As the G. A. R. did not ask for any special police assistance on Decoration Day enroute about town, no officers were assigned to take care of the traffic at the several cemeteries when the forty odd autos arrived for services. However, in Ward 5, Patrolman Ford asked permission, which was granted, to don his uniform and to be allowed to assist the veterans as much as possible on their arrival in his section of the town. It was certainly a grand ovation on Mr. Ford's part. He met the delegation early and looked after the placing of the autos for a clear start at each cemetery and made himself so generally useful to the old soldiers and the chauffeurs that more than one onlooker, as well as the G. A. R. "Vets," spoke of Mr. Ford's thoughtfulness.

Woman Suffrage is booming in town I am informed. A grand hustle is being made about our villages by exponents of "rights for women," and it is said that the fair ones have secured the support of several of our prominent members of the male sex to assist them when the constitutional amendment comes before the voters in town next fall.

I am asked to say a word about the candidacy of I. R. Nightingale in the Boston pader trip contest. While, personally I am now in favor of such contests, Mr. Nightingale has worked hard and deserves the undivided support of every reader in the town, and if every reader does support the East Weymouth candidate, who is, as far as I know, the only candidate in Weymouth, he would go to the big exposition with points to spare.

From the expression of opinions that I have heard the past week, I don't think the majority of the local Board of Trade who journeyed to Beverly last week, Wednesday, were hilariously pleased with the results of the trip. I can't agree with the editor of this paper (which, by the way, I am not required to do) that we should keep still rather than knock abt. Paying $1.25 for a dinner and then getting what was served and the style it was served in, similar to that at Beverly, gives a man, to my way of thinking, a clear cause to kick. However, we might not do any better in this town if we attempted to entertain the State Board of Trade, but I'll wager a perfectly good cigar that we would come pretty near making a better showing than was shown in the U. S. M. Co.'s town.

A praise worthy act was the giving by some forty auto owners in town of their time and cars for the use of the G. A. R. on the holiday. The veterans are fast passing on, and those that are left are beginning to feel the infirmities of advancing age. The "boys" all appreciated the autos to a great extent.

I don't hear much about any Fourth of July celebrations in town this year. Are we to have a sleepy and quiet Independence Day this year? It looks that way.

CHAPTER X.

Anonymous Letters.

Deborah re-entered the Judge's house a stricken woman. She reached her room door and was about to enter, when at a sudden thought she paused and let her eyes wander down the hall till they settled on another door, the one she had closed behind her the night before, with the deep resolve never to open it again except under compulsion. A few minutes later she was standing in one of the dim corners of Oliver's study, reopening a book which she had taken down from the shelves on her former visit. She remembered it from its torn back and the fact that it was an algebra. Turning to the fly leaf, she looked again at the names and schoolboy phrases she had seen scribbled all over its surface, for the one which she remembered as, "I hate algebra."

It had not been a very clearly written "algebra," and she would never have given this interpretation to the scrawl, had she been in a better mood. Now another thought had come to her, and she wanted to see the word again. Was she glad or sorry to have yielded to this impulse, when by a closer inspection she perceived that the word was not "algebra" at all, but "Algernon, I hate A. Etheridge—I hate A. E.—I hate Algernon E.," all over the page, and here and there on other pages, sometimes in characters so rubbed and faint as to be almost unreadable and again so pressed into the paper by a vicious pencil point as to have broken their way through to the leaf underneath.

The work of an ill-conditioned schoolboy! but—this hate dated back many years. Paler than ever, and with hands trembling almost to the point of incapacity, she put the book back and flew to her own room, the prey of thoughts bitter almost to madness.

It was the second time in her life that she had been called upon to go through this precise torture. Then, only her own happiness and honor were involved; now it was Reuther's; and the fortune which sustained her through the ignominy of her own trouble faltered her at the prospect of Reuther's. And again, the two cases were not equal. Her husband had had traits which, in a manner, had prepared her for the ready suspicion of people. But Oliver was a man of reputation and kindly heart; and yet, in the course of time this had come, and the question once agitating her as to whether Reuther was a fit mate for him and now evolved itself into this: Was he a fit mate for her?

She had rather have died, nay, have had Reuther die, than to find herself forced to weigh and decide so momentous a question.

For, however she might feel about it, not a single illusion remained as to whose hand had made use of John Scoville's stick to strike down Algernon Etheridge. How could she have when she came to piece the whole story together, and weigh the facts she had accumulated against Oliver with those which had proved so fatal to her husband?

Deborah shuddered. Aye, the mystery had cleared, but only to enshroud her spirits anew and make her long with all her bursting heart and shuddering soul that death had been her portion before ever she had essayed to lift the veil held down so tightly by these two remorseful men.

But was her fault irremediable? The only unanswerable connection between this old crime and Oliver lay in the evidence she had herself collected. As she had every intention of suppressing this evidence, and as she had small dread of any one else digging out the facts to which she only possessed a clue, might she not hope that any suspicions raised by her inquiries would fall like a house of cards when she withdrew her hand from the toppling structure?

She would make her first effort and see. Mr. Black had heard her complaint; he should be the first to learn that the encouragement she had received was so small that she had decided to accept her present good luck without further query, and not hark back to a past which most people had buried.

"You began it, as women begin most things, without thought and a due weighing of consequences. And now you propose to drop it in the same freakish manner. Isn't that it?"

Deborah Scoville lifted her eyes in manifest distress and fixed them deprecatingly upon her interrogator.

Mr. Black smiled. The woman delighted him. The admiration which he had hitherto felt for her person and for the character which could so develop through misery and reproach as to make her in twelve short years the exponent of all that was most at-

The Word Was Not Algebra at All, but Algernon.

"Horrible!" murmured Deborah, drawing back in terror of her own emotion. "It's the work of some implacable enemy taking advantage of the situation I have created. Mr. Black, this man must be found and made to see that no one will believe, not even Scoville's widow."

"There! you needn't go any further with that," admonished the lawyer. "Have you any idea who this person is?"

"Not the least in the world."

"I ask because of this," he explained, picking out another letter and smilingly holding it out toward her. She read it with flushed cheeks.

Listen to the lady. You can't listen to any one nicer. What she wants she can get. There's a witness you never saw or heard of.

A witness they had never heard of! What witness? Scarcely could she lift up her eyes from the paper. Yet there was a possibility, of course, that this statement was a lie.

"Stuff, isn't it?" muttered the lawyer. "Never mind, we'll soon have hold of the writer." His face had taken on a much more serious aspect, and she could no longer complain of his indifference or even of his sarcasm.

"You will give me another opportunity of talking with you on this matter," pursued he. "If you do not come here you may expect to see me at Judge Ostrander's. I do not quite like the position into which you have attractive and bewitching in woman seemed likely to extend to her mind.

"I am reconciled simply from necessity," was her gentle response. "Nothing is more precious to me than Reuther's happiness. I should but endanger it further by raising false hopes. That is why I have come to cry halt."

"Madam, I commend your decision. But why should you characterize your hopes as false, just when there seems to be some justification for them?"

Her eyes widened, and she regarded him with a simulation of surprise, which interested without imposing upon him.

"I do not understand you," said she. "Have you come upon some clue? Have you heard something which I have not?"

Mr. Black took two or three crushed and folded papers from a drawer beside him and, holding them, none too plainly in sight, remarked very quietly, but with legal firmness:

"Do not let us play about the bush any longer. You have announced your intention of making no further attempt to discover the man who in your eyes merited the doom accorded to John Scoville. Your only reason for this—if you are the woman I think you lies in your fear of giving further opportunity to the misguided rancor of an irresponsible writer of anonymous epistles. Am I not right, madam?"

Beaten, beaten by a direct assault, because she possessed the weaknesses, as well as the pluck, of a woman. She could control the language of her lips, but not their quivering; she could meet his eye with steady assurance, but she could not keep the pallor from her cheeks or subdue the evidences of her heart's turmoil. Her pitiful glance acknowledged her defeat, which she already saw mirrored in his eyes.

Taking it for an answer, he said gently enough:

"That we may understand each other at once, I will mention the person who has been made the subject of these attacks. He—"

"Don't speak the name," she prayed, leaning forward and laying her gloved hand upon his sleeve. "It is not necessary. The whole thing is an outrage."

His admiration was quite evident. It did not prevent him, however, from saying quite abruptly:

"Men who indulge themselves in writing anonymous accusations seldom limit themselves to one effusion. I will stake my word that the judge has found more than one on his lawn."

She could not have responded if she would; her mouth was dry, her tongue half paralyzed. What was coming? The glint in the lawyer's eye forewarned her that something scarcely in consonance with her hopes and wishes might be expected.

"The judge has seen and read these barefaced insinuations against his son and has not turned this whole town topsy-turvy! A lion does not stop to meditate; he springs. And Archibald Ostrander has the nature of a lion. Mrs. Scoville, this is a very serious matter. I do not wonder that you are a trifle overwhelmed by the results of your ill-considered investigations."

"Does the town know? Has the thing become a scandal—a byword? Miss Weeks gave no proof of ever having heard one word of this dreadful business."

"That is good news. You relieve me. Perhaps it is not a general topic as yet." Then shortly and with lawyerlike directness:

"Look over these. Do they look at all familiar?"

She glanced down at the crumpled sheets and half-sheets he had spread out before her. They were similar in appearance to the one she had picked up on the Judge's grounds, but the language was more forcible, as witness these:

When a man is trusted to defend another on trial for his life, he's supposed to know his business. How came John Scoville to hang, without a thought being given to the man who hated A. Etheridge like poison? I could name a certain chap who more than once in the old days boasted that he'd like to kill the fellow. And it wasn't Scoville or any one of his low-down stamp either.

A high and mighty name shouldn't shield a man who sent a poor, unfriended wretch to his death in order to save his own bacon.

Heaven forbid that he should be thrown by these absurd insinuations. It may even lead to your losing the home which has been so fortunately opened for you. If this occurs you may count on my friendship, Mrs. Scoville. I may have failed you once, but I will not fail you twice."

Surprised, almost touched, she held out her hand, with a cordial "Thank you," in which emotion struggled with her desire to preserve an appearance of complete confidence in Judge Ostrander, and incidentally in his son. Then she turned to go.

The lawyer appeared to acquiesce in the movement of departure. But when he saw her about to vanish through the door some impulse of compunction, as real as it was surprising, led him to call her back and seat her once more in the chair she had so lately left.

"I cannot let you go," said he, "until you understand that these insinuations from a self-called witness would not be worth our attention if there were not a few facts to give color to his wild claims. Oliver Ostrander was in that ravine connecting with Dark Hollow, very near the time of the onslaught on Mr. Etheridge; and he certainly hated the man and wanted him out of the way. The whole town knows that, with one exception. You know that exception?"

"I think so," she acceded, taking a fresh grip upon her emotions.

"That this was anything more than a coincidence has never been questioned. He was not even summoned as a witness. With the judge's high reputation in mind I do not think a single person could have been found in those days to suggest any possible connection between this boy and a crime so obviously premeditated. But people's minds change with time and events, and Oliver Ostrander's name uttered in this connection today would not occasion the same shock to the community as it would have done then. You understand me, Mrs. Scoville?"

"You allude to the unexpected separation between himself and father, and not to any failure on his part to sustain the reputation of his family?"

"Oh, he has made a good position for himself, and earned universal consideration. But that doesn't weigh against the prejudices of people, roused by such eccentricities as have distinguished the conduct of these two men."

"Alas!" she murmured, frightened to the soul for the first time, both by his manner and his words.

"You know and I know," he went on with a grimace possibly suggested by his subject, "that no mere whim lies back of such a preposterous conclusion as that of Judge Ostrander behind his double fence. been thrown by these absurd insinuations. It may even lead to your losing the home which has been so fortunately opened for you. If this occurs you may count on my friendship, Mrs. Scoville. I may have failed you once, but I will not fail you twice."

Surprised, almost touched, she held out her hand, with a cordial "Thank you," in which emotion struggled with her desire to preserve an appearance of complete confidence in Judge Ostrander, and incidentally in his son. Then she turned to go.

The lawyer appeared to acquiesce in the movement of departure. But when he saw her about to vanish through the door some impulse of compunction, as real as it was surprising, led him to call her back and seat her once more in the chair she had so lately left.

"I cannot let you go," said he, "until you understand that these insinuations from a self-called witness would not be worth our attention if there were not a few facts to give color to his wild claims. Oliver Ostrander was in that ravine connecting with Dark Hollow, very near the time of the onslaught on Mr. Etheridge; and he certainly hated the man and wanted him out of the way. The whole town knows that, with one exception. You know that exception?"

"I think so," she acceded, taking a fresh grip upon her emotions.

"That this was anything more than a coincidence has never been questioned. He was not even summoned as a witness. With the judge's high reputation in mind I do not think a single person could have been found in those days to suggest any possible connection between this boy and a crime so obviously premeditated. But people's minds change with time and events, and Oliver Ostrander's name uttered in this connection today would not occasion the same shock to the community as it would have done then. You understand me, Mrs. Scoville?"

THE BEST PROOF.

Given by a Weymouth Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit.

The story was told to Weymouth residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is home testimony—The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Weymouth residents.

Mrs. O. W. Binney, 17 Norfolk street, Weymouth, says: "I was troubled by weak kidneys and the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular in passage. My back ached and I was nervous. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at the Weymouth Pharmacy. They made me well."

CONFIRMED PROOF.

On July 17, 1914, Mrs. Binney said: "Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble some years ago, I have felt like a different person. I cannot speak too highly of this remedy and willingly confirm my former endorsement of it."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Binney had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

poor foundation for any light refutation of this scandal, should it reach the public mind. Judge Ostrander knows this, and you know that he knows this; hence your distress. Have I not read your mind, madam?"

"No one can read my mind any more than they can read Judge Ostrander's," she avowed in a last desperate attempt to preserve her secret. "You may think you have done so, but what assurance can you have of the fact?"

"You are strong in their defense," said he, "and you will need to be if the matter ever comes up. The shadows from Dark Hollow reach far, and engulf all they fall upon."

Regulations relative to the production and sale of Milk, adopted by the Board of Health of Weymouth, to become effective July 1, 1915.

CHAPTER 744. ACTS OF 1914.

AN ACT RELATIVE TO THE PRODUCTION AND SALE OF MILK.

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any producer of milk or dealer in milk to sell or deliver for sale in any city or town in the commonwealth any milk produced or dealt in by him without first obtaining from the board of health of such city or town a permit authorizing such sale or delivery. Said boards of health are hereby authorized to issue such permits after an inspection, satisfactory to them, of the place in which and of the circumstances under which such milk is produced, has been made by them or by their authorized agent. Any permit so granted may contain such reasonable conditions as said board may think suitable for protecting the public health and may be revoked for failure to comply with any of such conditions. No charge shall be made to the producer for the permit or for the inspection of the dairy where the milk is produced.

SECTION 2. In case any permit so granted is revoked, the board revoking the permit shall immediately send notice of the revocation to the state board of health, and the state board of health shall at once inform the boards of health of other cities and towns in the commonwealth where, in its judgment, milk produced by the dairy to which the permit relates would be likely to be sold or delivered for sale, and the state board of health shall also give notice of such revocation to any dealer in milk who, in the judgment of the board, would be likely to purchase milk from such dairy; and upon receipt of such notice it shall be unlawful for any dealer so notified to sell or offer for sale in this commonwealth milk from the said dairy.

SECTION 3. After a permit has been revoked, it may be renewed in the same way in which the original permit was issued, in which case the same form of notification shall follow as is required in the issuance of the original permit.

SECTION 4. Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for each offence.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the state board of health to enforce the provisions of section two of this act.

SECTION 6. It shall be the duty of the inspectors of milk appointed by the boards of health of cities and towns to enforce the provisions of section one, so far as relates to the milk supply of their respective cities and towns.

The following is the scale of points adopted by the State Board of Health and indorsed by the Official Dairy Instructors' Association; and by which, the stock, methods and all equipment of all producers of, and dealers in milk in Weymouth shall be judged and marked, WEYMOUTH BEATS BROCKTON.

Shoe City Boys Fail to Show Expected Form Against Local Stars In South Shore League Contest.

In the South Shore league last Saturday the Weymouth High nine defeated its nearest rivals and runner-up in the league by the score of 2 to 1. Loose playing on Brockton's part and fast work on the local aggregation's part, sent the Brockton team down to defeat. The game play by play: 1st. Inning:- Brockton, LaRoque, captain of the Shoemakers, was the first man to face Lonie Callahan, and after letting two go by, sent a fast grounder to E. Callahan, who threw him out at first. Johnson and Carrell fanned, Callahan showing himself to be in great shape for the big battle of the day. Weymouth:- Gorman looked two over and then singled sharply to left field. He stole second, Bogigian's throwing being very bad at this stage of the game. Conrick struck out. Glover walked and went to second when Bogigian let the ball get away from him. Gorman took third on the error. Vender filed to short and then "Vic" scored when Bogigian had another passed ball. Talbot struck at three and sat down. One run. 2d. Berquist the visiting twirler filed to left. McGrath grounded to Tender and Gorman took care of Hickey's pop fly. Weymouth:- Bates got a life when Lagerstadt dropped his fly to left. E. Callahan lined to right and Bates was doubled off of first on a fine throw by LaRoque. Ed. Condrick fanned. No runs. 3d. Kelliher fouled to Vender, the latter making a fine catch. Bogigian fanned and Lagerstadt grounded to L. Callahan. W. H. S.:- L. Callahan struck out. Gorman reached first when Bogigian lost the third strike. The Weymouth captain stole second in easy fashion. C. Condrick walked. Gorman called out stealing third. Glover grounded to short. No runs. 4th. LaRoque filed to E. Callahan. The latter made a grand stand catch on this fly, going deep into the field to make the great play. Johnson singled through short but was caught off of first base a moment later by Callahan. He was out by a two foot margin. Carroll filed to Talbot. Weymouth:- 5th. B. H. S., Berquist filed to E. Callahan, McGrath to deep left and Bates made a swell catch; Hickey also filed to Bates. W. H. S., E. Callahan filed to center; E. Condrick popped to short. After taking two last swings at the pill. L. Callahan stepped into a fast one and doubled to deep center, much to the crowd's surprise and his own. Gorman singled to right, Callahan going to third, Gorman stole. C. Condrick fanned. 6th. Kelliher and Bogigian fanned; Lagerstadt filed to Vender. W. H. S., Berquist drew a hand when he fanned Glover, Vender and Talbot in this session. Some pitching. 7th. LaRoque fanned. Johnson singled and stole second. Carroll out. E. Callahan made a bad throw on Berquist's roller and Johnson tied up the score at one all. McGrath out, L. Callahan to Vender W. H. S., Bates singled. E. Callahan reached when Berquist played his punt to second in a futile attempt to catch Bates. E. Condrick bunted and was out at first on a perfect sacrifice. Bogigian had a large juicy pass ball and Bates scored the winning run easily. L. Callahan and Gorman out. 8th. Hickey out, E. Callahan to Vender. Gorman took care of Kelliher's roller. Bogigian fanned. W. H. S., Condrick fanned. Glover did likewise. Vender walked and stole second. Talbot out on strikes. 9th. Lagerstadt filed to right. LaRoque fanned. Johnson fouled to Glover and Weymouth was still undefeated in the South Shore league. Final score: Weymouth 2; Brockton 1.

of the most delightful ever held by the society. There were forty-two ladies present. The morning was spent in making work bags for gifts for one of the schools in which the society is interested in the South. At the noon hour a choice lunch was served in charge of Mrs. Louis Denbroeder and Mrs. Joseph Sampson, ably assisted by many willing hands. At two o'clock the annual business meeting was held when the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. T. H. Emerson; vice-presidents, Mrs. Edward T. Ford, Mrs. W. M. Tirrell, Mrs. Henry B. Hawkes; secretary, Miss S. E. Haven; treasurer, Mrs. Louis Denbroeder. A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring treasurer, Miss Janet Harlow, for her efficient services in the past. An interesting report was read by the secretary, Miss Haven. Mrs. W. M. Tirrell gave a report of the receipts and expenditures of the past year. Mrs. Ford brought felicitous greetings from the pastor, Rev. Dr. Ford. Many interesting reports were given of charitable work done by the organization. At the close of the business meeting a short dialogue was given, entitled "Leaven on Noisy Creek." The prologue, entitled "First Aid to the Imagination," was read by Mrs. E. T. Ford; other parts by Mrs. E. E. Orr and Mrs. Joseph Sampson. This proved very interesting as showing the great benefit derived by the "mountain whites" from the schools which have been established by the missionaries. A rising vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Emerson for her hospitality in entertaining the society. Singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds" brought to a close a happy day.

TOWN BUSINESS.

One Big Problem to be Solved.

The Selectmen had quite a busy time of it at the meeting on Monday and also at the Town Home on Tuesday, postponed from last week.

At the Monday meeting a contract was signed with Henry D. Arrington of Brighton for the construction of 8000 feet or more, of concrete side walk.

An application was received from the Boston Socialist club for permit to hold a picnic at New Downer Landing on June 17th, which request was refused.

The Board was in receipt of a remonstrance from several property owners in the vicinity of Downers Landing against granting permits for picnics at that place as no sufficient police has ever been found who can protect private property from a crowd of several hundred people, who seem to think that this is a free country.

Walter L. Bates in behalf of the South Weymouth Improvement Association asked for assistance from the Park or some other fund in improving the plot of ground at the conjunction of Main and Front streets and 840 was granted for that purpose, the same to be expended under the management of the association which Mr. Bates represented.

The subject matter of a fence between the land of Daniel Reidy and the Police station was discussed and referred to the Chief of Police and Mr. Reidy for investigation and a report to the board at some future meeting.

The several small plots of ground in different parts of the town which have been sold for taxes at various times and reverted to the town will shortly be offered at public sale by Collector W. M. Tirrell by vote of the selectmen.

Edward T. Jordan appeared before the Board with a new schedule of insurance rates for Weymouth as arranged by the Board of Fire Underwriters and asked for an investigation of the same. Matter referred to Messrs. Hunt and Hanley for investigation.

The Bay State St. R. R. Co. will be asked to all its road bed between tracks. Joshua H. Shaw was appointed fence viewer.

Voted to all Pleasant street between Park street and Park avenue.

The largest problem which came before the board and the most important one which now confronts the town, was, and is, the conversion of nearly three miles of Washington street into a State road. The board had a preliminary hearing on it Monday and the Planning board was represented by Geo. M. Keene, Wallace H. Bicknell, Fred Humphrey and Burton B. Wright. The town at its annual meeting approved the act and made appropriation for the same and the problem now is how and by whom shall it be done.

Shall the State Highway Commissioners do it by contract? Shall the town do it and let out the contract or shall the town do it under its present highway management?

At the meeting on Tuesday Walter L. Bates was appointed a member of the Planning board to fill the vacancy by the death of Geo. C. Torrey and the following town physicians were appointed: Dr. W. A. Drake, Ward 1 and Town Home; Dr. J. C. Fraser, Ward 2; Dr. L. A. Pease, Ward 3; Dr. Karl H. Granger, Ward 4 and Dr. E. L. Maybury, Ward 5.

W. R. C. Notes.

June 8th, at the regular meeting of W. R. C. 102, a very impressive service was rendered in the draping of the Charter in memory of the oldest member, Mrs. Mary Sewell.

The Chairman of the Executive Board leaves no stone unturned to replenish the general fund of Corps 102, as a Harvest Bazaar is started to be held in October.

Notice of a meeting of the School of Instruction was given to be held in Lynn, which all members are earnestly requested to attend. Meet in South Station, Norfolk Co. slip, at 10.30 to 10.45 A. M., June 15.

Norfolk County Association will hold the quarterly session June 16, at 10 A. M., in the Universalist Church, Washington Street, Quincy, Mass.

A successful lunch was served by Patriotic Instructor, Mrs. Estelle W. Richards and her committee, the evening of June 8, proceeds to be applied to patriotic work, followed by a very interesting and instructive entertainment celebrating Flag Day, placing Corps 102 in the front rank.

An invitation is given to Corps 102 by the Daughters of Veterans to attend patriotic exercises in G. A. R. Hall, Thursday evening, June 17, at 8 o'clock.

TRAVEL CLUB NOTICE.

Itinerary and Date of Start to be Announced in Next Friday's Issue. Illness of One of the Winners Prevents Announcement Today.

On account of the illness of Miss Jeannette Shaw of South Weymouth, the start and itinerary of the Travel Club trip is not definitely decided upon, but will positively be published next Friday. After the announcement, the winners will be given time enough to arrange their vacations with their employers and make such other preparation as is necessary.

POOR SPORTSMANSHIP.

Former Ball Player Comments on Condrick Being Kept in Game Last Saturday at Brockton. Says More Life Needed in Weymouth Team.

I motored to Brockton last Saturday afternoon to witness the second contest between the Weymouth High school nine and the Brockton team. The game was full of thrills from a Brockton standpoint and devoid of the same from a Weymouth point of view.

Both teams seemed to have what is constantly happening in baseball, a complete reversal of form showed in previous contests. Brockton with Berquist going at top speed played like world beaters, while Weymouth played a very poor game of ball. True the Weymouth team was in a bad way on account of the injury of Condrick their catcher, but the team as a whole lacked the fight and "pep" they have shown in some previous games.

Lou Callahan's pitching was a bright spot in Weymouth's game but outside of this fact and one or two fast fielding stunts, the Weymouth bunch were never in the running.

Berquist the Brockton pitcher looks to be a hard competitor for premier pitching honors in High School ball. After Saturday's exhibition he looks to be the class in the South Shore league, although we don't know what kind of an exhibition Callahan would have given with Fraher behind the plate or if Condrick had not been so badly injured. In speaking of injuries, it was certainly a great handicap to the local team to have to play with a catcher with two broken bones in his throwing hand. This "kid" is there with the grit though as he stuck the game out without flinching.

In the game last Saturday the Weymouth nine showed clearly that at the bat they are not in the game for a minute. They can hold their own in the fielding end, but in my opinion they will never beat Berquist and the Shoe City team unless they can get a run or two when they have three men on and no one out, as they did last Saturday.

After seeing Condrick's hand last Saturday I confess I don't think much of the sportsmanship of the Brockton coach or whoever refused to let Fraher finish out the game behind the bat after the doctor had strapped the Weymouth catcher's hand up as best he could. However as the person or persons who refused to let Fraher finish the game out, probably feel that they have done Brockton a never-to-be-forgotten service by such inhuman feeling I guess Weymouth can stand it somehow. Brockton wants that pennant but so does Weymouth and a rubber battle should be a fast one with both teams in shape.

WEYMOUTH BOARD OF TRADE

Meeting Largely Attended and Matters of Interest Discussed.

The Weymouth Board of Trade held its last meeting of the season at the Clapp Memorial building on Wednesday evening and it now stands as one of the best attended and most interesting meetings of the season.

The meeting was a double featured event and both features were of more than ordinary interest. The management planned a complimentary reception and banquet to its recent guests at the Beverly outing and it was early in evidence that the guests and members were all to the occasion.

At 8 o'clock the gathering was invited to the audience room, now a banquet room, and there the scene which greeted them put every one in a happy mood. The tables were arranged in diamond form covering the entire hall and with a center table all loaded with "cats" and beautifully decorated with the most choice flowers of the season. President Downing took his position at the head of the center table called the meeting to order, Divine blessing was invoked and the banquet was on; nor was it a repetition of the Beverly affair. Bates & Humphrey were equal to the occasion and although the number of people was large the viands were still more numerous.

We have often heard that "bread is the staff of life," but long ago we learned that business is the staff of bread and the meeting now "got down to business," the first of which was reading the records of the last meeting by the secretary, J. Edward Mulligan. The records of the meeting were approved and reports of committees followed.

The committee on membership reported five new names which were balloted for and elected.

A couple of amendments to the By-Laws as suggested at the last meeting in regard to summer vacations and membership dues and payment were enacted.

Fred S. Sampson, a member of the street and sidewalk committee and also of the Town Planning board, made a very elaborate report in regard to the present condition of streets and sidewalks with suggestions that in many instances the sidewalks in particular were calling for improvements. The report also took up the matter of reconstructing Washington street and making of it a State road. Joint meetings with the Planning board of the town had been held and also hearings before the Board of Selectmen.

There was no difference of opinion as to the advisability of reconstruction, but by whom, was the question. It was shown by experience, of the selectmen and others that it would cost from four to six thousand dollars more for the town to do it under the present pay of men and teams and by the present order of things, than it would to contract with the state for the same work and notwithstanding the difference, in cost. The discussion ended in a vote to lay the report as submitted by Mr. Sampson on the table until the October meeting and leave the special Washington street proposition in the hands of the selectmen.

At the very successful Fourth of July celebration in 1913 there was a balance of about $75 in the hands of the committee which was turned in to the Board of Trade by the treasurer and after some discussion it was voted to return it to the source from whence it came that it might be used for the coming Fourth of July.

In response to a call from the president, E. W. Hunt made a few minutes talk for a concert of action in increasing the membership and efficiency of the Board of Trade.

E. B. Abercrombie of Braintree, a guest of the Board of Trade at its Beverly outing was called upon and made a brief review of the Beverly affair spoke of the work of the Board of Trade and its possible efficiency and cut loose on the Bryan-Wilson affair in which he extolled Mr. Bryan as a model man with noble principles and criticized Mr. Wilson for his present methods of dealing with the German question.

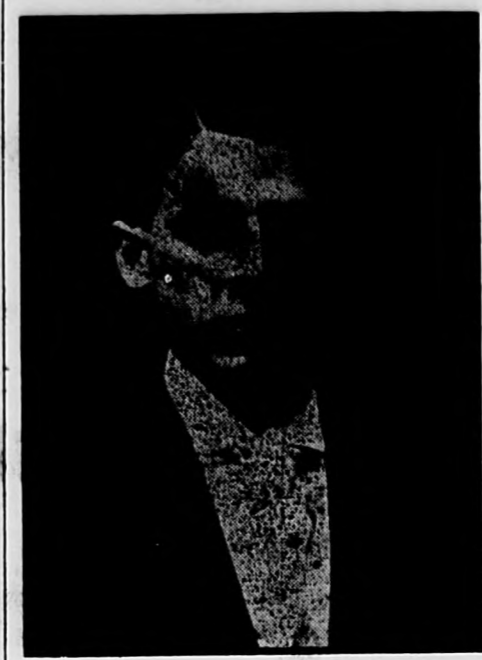

The session was a long one and barring this last feature was and will be a help to the town, the Board of Trade and especially so to those who were there.

Pratt—Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Graham of Wellington announce the marriage of their daughter, Mildred, to Mr. Charles Eckert Pratt, son of Mrs. J. F. Loud of East Weymouth, in the Rectory of the Grace Episcopal Church, Medford, Mass., by the Rev. F. I. Paradise, Wednesday, June 9th. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt will reside in East Weymouth.

NEW PASTOR WELCOMED.

Rev. Ora A. Price Preaches First Sermon at Union Congregational Church, South Weymouth, Last Sunday.

REV. ORA A. PRICE

Rev. Ora A. Price, the new pastor of the Union Congregational church in South Weymouth, preached his first sermon before a large congregation on Sunday last. He was well received by his new congregation.

The new pastor was born in Logan, Ohio, and is twenty-eight years of age. He is a graduate of Marietta College, graduating with the highest honors of any member of his class.

The following year he taught at the college. He is a member of several college fraternities and is an interested Y. M. C. A. man. In the musical world he was a valuable member of the Glee Club of the college he attended.

On coming east he attended Andover Theological school and later graduated from the Harvard School of Divinity. Shortly after leaving his college duties, Rev. Mr. Price was married and accepted a pastorate in West Gloucester. He preached in this place for about sixteen months when he received a call to South Weymouth, which he has accepted and, without doubt, will prove to be a most welcome addition to the clergy of the town.

Important Rebekah Meetings.

Mrs. Mary C. Granger, recently elected Vice-President of the Rebekah Assembly of Massachusetts, has been in the western part of the state during the past week. Her duties have required her attendance at the Past Noble Grand's meeting in Worcester, at the Odd Fellows' Home, and at a school of instruction for the deputies of the Order held in Springfield. The officers of the Assembly were in attendance for this event, and deputies were present from all over the state, many attending from the region of North Adams and the Hoosac Valley.

Later a school will be held for use in south-eastern Massachusetts for those deputies nearer Boston.

Very soon the Board of Officers, with their President and Marshal, expects to go to Provincetown and visit the lodges in Barnstable County.

Fire Insurance Rates.

Mr. Edward W. Hunt, Chairman of the Selectmen; Mr. Fred O. Stevens, Superintendent of Water Works; Mr. Walter W. Pratt, Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, with Mr. Edward T. Jordan, Secretary of the Weymouth and Braintree Board of Fire Underwriters, visited the Secretary of the New England Insurance Exchange, in Boston, in relation to fire insurance rates in this town, on Thursday.

The Chief Engineer and Inspector of the Exchange will make an early visit to Weymouth and examine our water works system and the fire department.

Mrs. Rachel A. Bass Dead.

Mrs. Rachel A. Bass, 72, passed away at her home on Pleasant Street, South Weymouth, last Friday. She had been in poor health for the past year, but her death was due to a stroke of paralysis received over two weeks ago.

Mrs. Bass was a native of Neponset, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarendon Bowles, but has made her home here for the past 30 years. She leaves a son, Herbert, of Concord, Mass., and a daughter, Miss Helen Bass, of this town.

The funeral services were held from her late home last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Ora A. Price of the Union Congregational, of which the deceased was an active member for many years, conducted the services. There were many beautiful floral offerings, and the burial was at the Highland Cemetery. The bearers were Joseph H. Burrell, Ellis J. Pitcher, Gordon Willis and Charles H. Curtis.

BROCKTON WINS.

Weymouth High Unable to Hit in Pinches and Lose 4 to 0 at Brockton Last Saturday. Weymouth High and Brockton Now Tie for League Honors.

In a fast game last Saturday on the Center street grounds in Brockton, the Weymouth High school nine met defeat, at the hands of the Shoe City team 4 to 0.

The Weymouths were unable to hit Berquist, Brockton's star twirler in the pinches, and this, together with the fact that Coach Staff forced Weymouth to play Eddie Condrick with a badly split hand, allowed the Shoe City lads to romp home a winner.

The games was full of thrills from the start, the Brockton boys pulling some classy stunts and Weymouth also contributed some fine fielding. Berquist and Callahan both were at top form and with a catcher with whole digits on his throwing hand would have made the game considerably closer. Everybody who saw Condrick's hand admired the grit of this lad in sticking behind the plate under such a handicap.

The game by innings:

1st. W. H. S.: Gorman drew a cheer from the Weymouth rooters when he doubled to right on the second ball pitched C. Condrick bunted and beat the throw, Gorman going to third. Gloster bunted also reached first when the bunt dropped Berquist's head, when he ran in to field the bunt. Gorman held third, thinking the hit would be caught. With three men on, Weymouth lost all right and title to victory when Vender, Talbot and Bates struck out. B. H. S.: LaRoque fouled to Gloster, the latter racing to the fence and making a "4nd" Smith catch. Johnson got hit in the ribs. He stole second.

Carroll singled and Johnson scored. Carroll went to second on the throw in. Berquist singled and Carroll scored. Berquist stole. McGrath flied to Gorman. Hickey fanned, but Condrick lost the third strike and Hickey reached first. Webster fanned. 2 runs.

2d. W. H. S.: Condrick grounded to third. L. Callahan skied to Johnson and E. Callahan, who had drawn a pass, was out stealing. B. H. S.: Callahan turned on the steam and fanned Bogigian, Kellher and LaRoque.

3d. W. H. S.: Gorman out, Kellher making a great pickup at third and a fine throw. C. Condrick fanned. Johnson took care of Gloster's fly. B. H. S. Johnson singled, stole and went to third when E. Condrick threw badly to second. Carroll rolled to Gorman, the Weymouth captain making a great stop. Berquist flied to center and Johnson scored. MacGrath out, fly to left. 1 run.

4th. W. H. S.: Vender flied to Hickey, Talbot grounded to first and Bates fanned. B. H. S.: Hickey out, Gorman to Vender. Webster fouled to Vender and Gloster threw Boglee out at first.

5th. W. H. S.: E. Condrick out, MacGrath to Carroll. E. Callahan out the same route. L. Callahan whiffed. B. H. S.: Kellher fanned. LaRoque singled. Johnson fanned. Carroll singled, LaRoque scoring. Berquist struck out. 1 run. Score now, Brockton 4, Weymouth 0.

6th. Gorman rolled to second. C. Condrick fanned. Gloster singled through short. Tander went out on strikes. B. H. S.: Kellher fanned. Hickey flied to E. Callahan. MacGrath stole. Webster singled. Bogigian fanned and Kellher fouled to Gloster.

7th. Talbot bunted. Berquist threw wild to first and Talbot raced to second and then to the dismay of the Weymouth contingent kept on to third. He was thrown out by LaRoque by a block and Weymouth's last chance was gone for scoring. Bates struck out, but Eddie Condrick singled to right. E. Callahan hit to short and MacGrath tossed to Hickey forcing Condrick. B. H. S.: Rielly now playing centerfield for Weymouth in place of Talbot. The new man took care of LaRoque's fly. Johnson also popped to Rielly. Carroll grounded to Gloster.

8th. L. Callahan fanned. Gorman skied to short and C. Condrick struck out. Berquist hit for one base. MacGrath fanned. Hickey sacrificed, L. Callahan and Vender making the play. Webster flied to center.

9th. Gloster grounded out. Vender fanned. Dwyer, batting for Rielly ended the game and a Brockton victory by fanning in short order. Final score, Brockton 4, Weymouth 0.

Oats for the brood sows will produce better muscle for the pigs.

The man who is late with his planting this year isn't so far behind the other fellows, after all.

Pork production appeals strongly to a man of limited means who desires quick returns.
Some people think that the dry cow needs no care, but those that make the best records have the best care during their period of rest.

By the time the pigs are eight weeks old they will be ready to wean without any check to their growth.
Do not expect satisfaction from bordeaux mixture that has stood for as much twenty-four hours. It deteriorates quickly.

In mowing land for the first time in the season it is recommended that the mowing machine should not be set so as to cut too close. If cut too close the weeds are liable to get the start of the grass.

Whole corn is the best ration for sitting hens. Give them all they will eat of it once a day. Don't feed the sitters with the rest of the flock. They should have some grass, also clean, fresh water to drink, some grit and charcoal.

Until recently the Mammoth Bronze turkey was in a class by itself, and was known as the king of domestic birds, but by scientific breeding the White Holland variety has become a close rival of the old favorite and promises to gain in popularity over the Bronze within a very few years.

Of the new breeds which are likely to make good, the Rhode Island White has many qualities which should attract the breeder who is looking for a fowl which will lay and pay. The Rhode Island White has been bred now for more than ten years. The bird is the same size and type as the Rhode Island Red, the only difference being the color.

With the world facing a period of food need such as never before has existed, and with this country on the threshold of a greatly enlarged career as the central source of supply to meet this need, it must be evident to even the casual observer that a certain sense of duty attaches to the matter of making every idle acre produce its full quota.

The old farmer who yields to the im-portunities of his son or daughter to quit work and move to town makes a great mistake. He finds himself out of his natural element and his enforced idleness irksome in the extreme. He will become crabbed, reactionary, stingy, opposed to all improvements and soon begin to hate everything and everybody—even himself.

In trimming the colt's hoof, all that needs be done be done with a rasp. Never cut it, for to do so will do far more harm than good. The hoof wall should be rasped off on the bottom surface until the relation of the heel, side and toe is approximately one, two and three in length, and the work should be done in such a manner as to cause the foot to rest squarely on the ground.

Keep the cultivators running this month.
Fruit is a large percentage water and cultivating is a great means of conserving the water. Cultivation has aptly been called "horse-leg irrigation." The constant cultivation during June and July puts the ground in good shape for the cover crop in the last part of August. If the orchard is allowed to get hard and dry during the summer months a plowing will be required to get in the cover crop this fall.

Manure that is allowed to remain in the barnyard does not give as good results as that taken from the stalls, which fact has been shown by using both kinds of manure on growing crops. That is not to say that manure should be kept in stalls; on the contrary, it should be removed about every day for the comfort and health of the animals; but it points to the fact that it should be carefully stored under cover to prevent leaching by rains.

Troop 1, Weymouth.

Last Friday 12 scouts under Scout Master Clark, went on all-night hike. Supper and breakfast was cooked over an open fire in true camp style. Some of the scouts used cooking utensils and others used forked sticks. Most of us slept on pine needles, one or two carrying hammocks. Everybody had a good time and is waiting anxiously for the next one.

Regular indoor meeting Friday night. Candidates will be examined for admission.

There will also be examinations for 2nd class scouts.

In line with our new policy, delinquent scouts will be barred from this meeting.

Weather permitting, we will go on an overnight hike Friday or Saturday of next week.

Troop 2, East Weymouth.

As the Scout Master was obliged to be away last Thursday evening, the meeting was in charge of the two Assistant Scout Masters N. Dizer and Emerson Dizer.

The Scout Master has appointed Scout Ned Rand Senior Patrol Leader and President of the troop, he thereby ranking next to the Assistant Scout Master in authority. President Rand has just received a red service stripe signifying three years membership in the troop.

Scouts Blackwell, Batchelder and E. Belcher have each received one green stripe for one years service in the troop.

Plans for a garden party to be given Friday evening, June 25th, are now under way. A part of the committee appointed, with the Scout Master, in search of new ideas, attended the society circus given at Wollaston on Tuesday evening. This was to raise money for a club house for the scouts there. Troop 2 will hold their party for the benefit of their camp fund.

Tomorrow afternoon the scout base ball team will play the Braintree team at Hollis School grounds, Braintree. Game called at 2:30 o'clock.

Troop 5, South Weymouth.

The regular indoor meeting will be held Thursday instead of Wednesday evening next week. Preparation will be made for registering the troop at national headquarters July 1st, 1915.

Contest Craze.

The following verses were sent to this office last week just previous to the close of the Travel Club contest. As we were limited for space last week and as the poem was written by a Weymouth woman we are pleased to publish the same this week

Oh the house is full of coupons They stare at us from the shelves 'Till they take on forms and figures Like so many roguish elves.

With the Boston papers booming Trips to any heart ensue We are easily believing That the brave deserve the "Fair."

So we save our coupons gladly For the friend who's trying hard And we hope the final counting Will her figures not discard.

The Gazette, with tempting offers, Rivals big trips to the fair And the days are filled with striving Hilda had our promise there.

'Round our daily bread we find them Coupons greet us everywhere As we pile them up we're hoping Maund will prove a winner fair.

Let the good work still continue Send them with each bale of hay. Let them come with every purchase And we'll save them day by day.

Only thought of those defeated Cause us now and then to sigh But is life not one big contest? Are we not put here to try.

A. D. P.

Get a Hobby.

Horace Greeley once said: "Young man, go West." I give advice as valuable and more easily followed: I say, young man, get a hobby; preferably get two, one for indoors and one for out; get a pair of hobby horses that can safely be ridden in opposite directions.—A. Edward Newton, in the Atlantic.

Will You Read This Twice?

A very important question to-day which every housekeeper must decide for herself is whether she prefers pure, cream of tartar, baking powder like Royal or whether she is willing to use baking powder made of inferior substitutes which do not add healthful qualities to the food.

One kind is easily distinguished from the other, since the laws of various States require the ingredients to be printed upon the label. If anyone is in doubt which kind is most healthful, it is worth while to ask the family doctor. Then decide.

And when once a decision is reached let no advertisement or dealer's argument or canvasser's solicitation change the decision. It is not a question of a few cents or of pleasing a salesman. It is a question of health.

If this appeals to you as reasonable and sensible advice, it is worth reading twice. And it is worth remembering.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO. New York

IN OUR TOWN.

By Observer.

Some difference between the supper served on Wednesday evening by the local Board of Trade and that put out at Beverly.

I see that the Bay State is fixing the ties and replacing the old ones on the road between the end of the new rail near Winter street and Na-h's Corner. This is a much needed duty of the road and it wouldn't hurt the feelings of the passengers who ride every day to Braintree or Weymouth to have new rails further up Front street.

I am sorry to learn that my good friend "Doc" Fabian is to leave town in a couple of weeks. "Doc" is a man of sterling worth to any club or community and East Weymouth can sorely afford to let the genial "J. E." go. The host of friends in this section wish you all success in your new position, Friend Fabian, and you will be remembered with a kindly feeling by all your acquaintances about town.

I note that George A. Walker, the veteran conductor on the Rockland and Braintree line is sporting four stripes now, making twenty years of continuous duty with the local street car company. Next to Harry Tabor, who was on the East Weymouth and Quincy line previous to the organization of the other divisions in this place, Mr. Walker is the oldest in point of service of any of the rear end men. Mr. Walker with Charles Loring ran the first car over the East Weymouth and Braintree line twenty years ago the nineteenth of April, this year.

"But we must not despair; the game is yet in our hands; to play it well is all we have to do; and I trust the experience of error will enable us to act better in the future." Remember this "Dick" Talbot.

Now that the tarvia has been put on in Central square and vicinity why not send a man around, Mr Maynard, to rake up or pick up a few at least of the many stones laying all over the square. When a moving auto strikes one of these stones at a certain angle the stones are hurled through the air at a terrific rate and it is only a miracle that a window hasn't been broken or some one hurt.

Guess business wasn't very brisk with the jitney bus as it doesn't seem to be doing duty anymore. This may account for Walter Howleys' smile which vanished for some reason while the "jitney" was on the job.

Cupid is a busy boy this month in town. Many weddings have already taken place this month, several are carded for next week and the following week and then Dan will fall back into a more even mood again.

Best Paint

What is it? Devoe. How Devoe? It's 160 years old; but that isn't how. It has long been the best; but that isn't how.

It has been developed by use and study, by study and use; that is how; and approved by experience, many years; that's how.

It commends itself by long lasting and small paint-cost; not cheap by the gallon, but cheap by the job and cheap by the year and ten years, cheap by the lifetime.

That's how. DEVOE. Everett Loud, East Weymouth; M. R. Loud & Co., South Weymouth, and A. J. Sidelinger, North Weymouth sell it. Adv't.

Uncle Eben.

"Dey say dat you can't git sumptin' foh nuffin'" said Uncle Eben. "But de gemman dat done collects de taxes wifout makin' no improvements shows me dat it kin be done."

—Miss Lulu Tisdale was given a surprise party at her home, Monday evening, by about thirty of her young friends. The occasion was her 15th birthday. As spokesman of the gathering Robert Martin presented her with an umbrella.

On the Matrimonial Sea.

It is said of Nathaniel Bowditch, the distinguished mathematician and navigator, that he made it a rule of his life never to allow his wife to come into his presence without his expressing in some way his pleasure in her being there. And that, as another has said, was a very good rule of navigation.—Delinicator.

Play a Bigger Part.

So many people drift into disappointment and dreariness because they are dissatisfied with the materials of life, and would like to play a bigger part than they are entitled to play. It is all a deep mistake, the worst mistake a man can make. It is not the impression a man makes on life that matters; it is the impression which he makes upon himself.—North American Review.

Baseball Notes.

Brockton High can sure come back. Berquist and Callahan pitched a fine game of ball.

Brockton, especially Coach Staff, is certainly afraid of Leo Fraher. Even when Condrick's hand was keeping him in agony from the severe usage, Staff refused to relent the least bit. Some sportsmanship.

Better have a rubber game with Brockton, Weymouth High, and show the fans that you can beat Coach Staff's boys if they let you use a catcher that isn't smashed to pieces.

Those who saw Condrick's hand last Saturday wondered how he ever got into the game at all. While this lad's work was somewhat affected by the split hand, his gameness was working overtime all right.

Kellher made a great stop of Gorman's grass cutter in the third, scooping the ball out of the dirt with one hand.

Coach Staff certainly has a fine team under his wing, and they showed ten times the hustle during the game last Saturday than they did at Weymouth the week before.

Jack Murray of Boston, who did the umpiring, was certainly O. K. in all respects. We would like to see more of this man's work. He kept them hustling all the time, and was right on hand for all the close plays.

Manager Dan Howley of the Montreal Royals has benched Purtell, and our local star Ken Nash is now covorting about short stop in all his old time form. Our representative is a big help to Howley's infield, and Ken will surely fight hard to land the Royals on top in the international league this season. Then friend Nash is coming home to make another hard fight to represent this town in the legislature another year. Good luck, "Ken," in both of the fights.

CHAPTER XI.

Changes.

"Reuther, sit up here close by mother and let me talk to you for a little while."

"Yes, mother; oh, yes, mother." Deborah felt the beloved head pressed close to her shoulder and two soft arms fall about her neck.

"Are you very unhappy? Is my little one pining too much for the old days?"

A closer pressure of the head, a more vehement clasp of the encircling arms, but no words.

They were sitting in the dark, with just the light of the stars shining through the upper panes of the one unshaded window. Deborah, therefore, had little to fear from her daughter's eye, only from the sensitiveness of her touch and the quickness of her ear. Alas, in this delicately organized girl these were both attuned to the nicest discrimination, and before the mother could speak Reuther had started up, crying:

"Oh, how your heart beats! Something has happened, darling mother; something which—"

"Hush, Reuther; it is only this: When I came to Shelby it was with a hope that I might some day smooth the way to your happiness. But it was only a wild dream, Reuther; and the hour has come for me to tell you so. What joys are left us must come in other ways; love unblest must be put aside resolutely and forever." She felt the shudder pass through the slender form which had thrown itself again at her side; but when the young girl spoke it was with unexpected bravery and calm.

"I have long ago done that, mamma. I've had no hopes from the first. The look with which Oliver accepted my refusal to go on with the ceremony was one of gratitude, mother. I can never forget that. Relief struggled with grief. Would you have me cherish any further illusion after that?"

"Then you will not think me unkind or even unloving if I say that every loving thought you give now to Oliver is hurtful both to yourself and to me. Don't indulge in them, my darling. Put your heart into work or into music, and your mother will bless you. Won't it help you to know this, Reuther? Your mother, who has had griefs, will bless you."

"Mother, mother!" The next morning found Deborah pale—almost as pale as Reuther. Knowing its cause herself, she did not invite the judge's inquiries; and another day passed. With the following morning she felt strong enough to open the conversation which had now become necessary for her peace of mind.

She waited till the moment when, her work all done, she was about to leave his presence. Pausing till she caught his eye, which seemed a little loath, she thought, to look her way, she observed, with perhaps unnecessary distinctness:

"I hope everything is to your mind, Judge Ostrander. I should be very sorry not to make you as comfortable as is possible under the circumstances."

Roused a little suddenly, perhaps, from thoughts quite disconnected with those of material comfort, he nodded with the abstraction of one who recognizes that some sort of acknowledgment is expected from him; then, seeing her still waiting, added politely: "I am very well looked after, if that is what you mean, Mrs. Scoville. Bela could not do any better—if he ever did as well."

"I am glad," she replied, thinking with what humor this would have struck her once. "I—I ask because, having nothing on my mind but house-keeping, I desire to remedy anything which is not in accordance with your exact wishes."

His attention was caught and by the very phrase she desired.

"Nothing on your mind but house-keeping?" he repeated. "I thought you had something else of a very particular nature with which to occupy yourself."

"I had; but I have been advised against pursuing it. The folly was too great."

"Who advised you?"

The words came short and sharp, just as they must have come in those old days when he confronted his antagonists at the bar.

"Mr. Black. He was my husband's counsel, you remember. He says that I should only have my trouble for my pains, and I have come to agree with him. Reuther must content herself with the happiness of living under this roof; and I, with hope of contributing to your comfort."

"Madam, we have said our say on this subject. If you have come to see the matter as I see it, I can but congratulate you upon your good sense, and express the hope that it will continue to prevail. Reuther is worthy of the best—" he stopped abruptly. "Reuther is a girl after my own heart," he gently supplemented, with a glance toward his papers lying in a bundle at his elbow, "and she shall not suffer because of this disappointment to her girlish hopes. Tell her so with my love."

It was a plain dismissal. Mrs. Scoville took it as such, and quietly left the room. As she did so she was approached by Reuther, who handed her a letter which had just been delivered. It was from Mr. Black, and read thus:

"We have found the rogue and have succeeded in inducing him to leave town. He's a man in the bill-sticking business and he owns to a grievance against the person we know."

Deborah's sleep that night was without dreams.

About this time the restless pacing of the judge in his study at nights became more frequent and lasted longer. In vain Reuther played her most cheerful airs and sang her sweetest songs, the monotonous tramp kept up with a regularity nothing could break.

"He's worried by the big case now being tried before him," Deborah would say, when Reuther's eyes grew wide and misty in her sympathetic trouble. And there was no improbability in the plea, for it was a case of much moment, and of great local interest. A man was on trial for his life and the circumstances of the case were such that the feeling called forth was unusually bitter; so much so, indeed, that every word uttered by the counsel and every decision made by the judge were discussed from one end of the county to the other, and in Shelby, if nowhere else, took precedence of all other topics, though it was a presidential year and party sympathies ran high.

The more thoughtful spirits were inclined to believe in the innocence of the prisoner; but the lower elements of the town, moved by class prejudice, were bitterly antagonistic to his cause and loud for his conviction.

The time of Judge Ostrander's office was nearly up, and his future continuance on the bench might very easily depend upon his attitude at the present hearing. Yet he, without apparent recognition of this fact, showed without any hesitancy or possibly without self-consciousness, the sympathy he felt for the man at the bar, and ruled accordingly almost without variation.

A week passed, and the community was all agog, in anticipation of the judge's charge in the case just mentioned. It was to be given at noon, and Mrs. Scoville, conscious that he had not slept an hour the night before (having crept down more than once to listen if his step had ceased), approached him as he prepared to leave for the courtroom and anxiously asked if he were quite well.

"Oh, yes, I'm well," he responded sharply, looking about for Reuther.

The young girl was standing a little behind him, with his gloves in her hand—a custom she had fallen into in her desire to have his last look and fond good morning.

"Come here, child," said he, in a way to make her heart beat; and, as he took the gloves from her hand, he stooped and kissed her on the forehead—something he had never done before. "Let me see you smile," said he. "It's a memory I like to take with me into the courtroom."

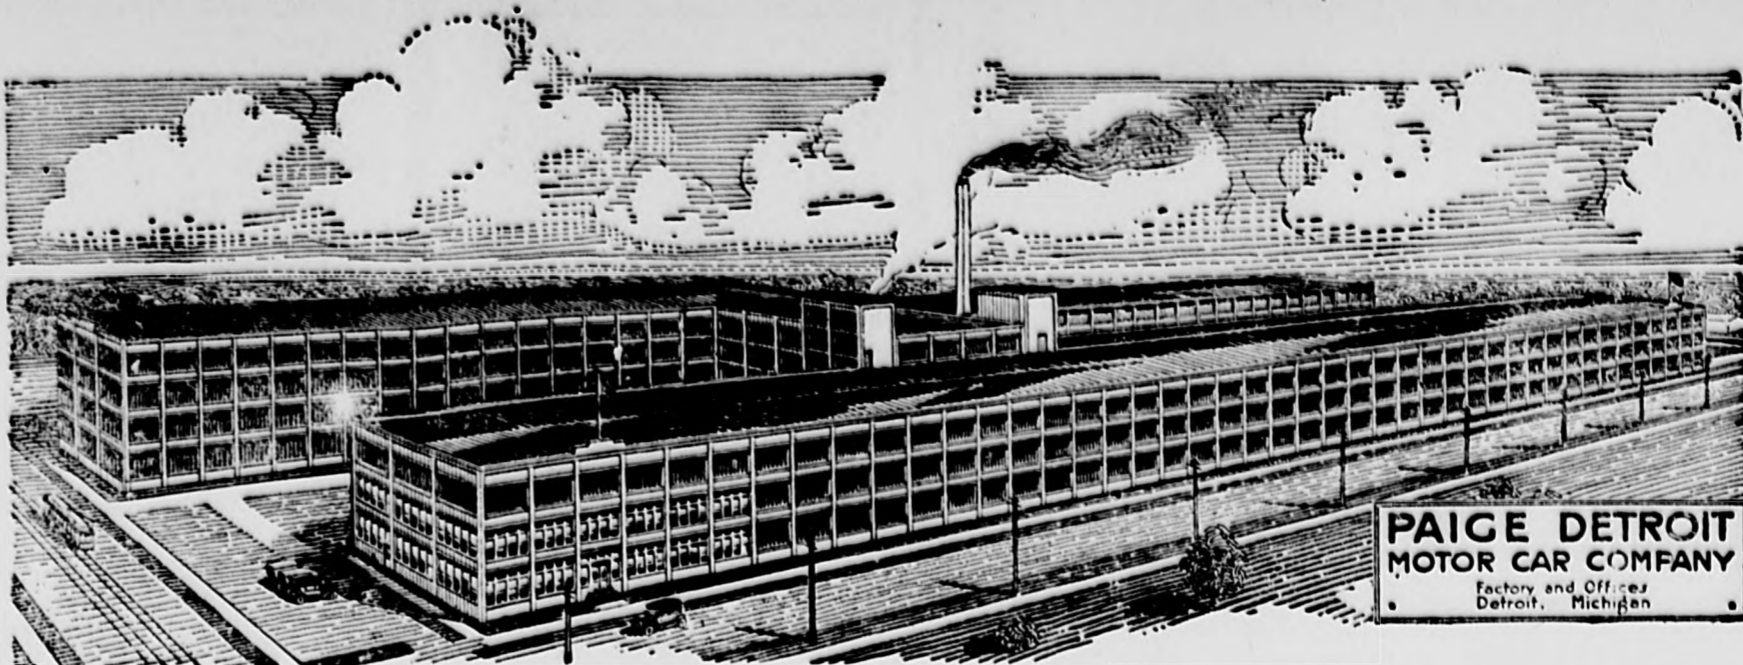

But when in her pure delight at his caress and the fatherly feeling which gave a tremor to his simple request, she lifted her face with that angelic look of hers which was far sweeter and far more moving than any smile, he turned away abruptly, as though he had been more hurt than comforted, and strode out of the house without another word.

Morning passed and the noon came, bringing Deborah an increased uneasiness. When lunch was over and Reuther sat down to her piano, the feeling had grown into an obsession, which had soon resolved itself into a definite fear. She found herself so restless that she decided upon going out. Donning her quietest gown and veil, she slipped out of the front door, hardly knowing whether her feet would carry her.

They did not carry her far—not at this moment, at least. On the walk outside she met Miss Weeks hurrying toward her from the corner, stumbling in her excitement. At sight of Deborah's figure she paused and threw up her hands.

"Oh, Mrs. Scoville, such a dreadful thing!" she cried. "Look here!" And, opening one of her hands, she showed a few torn scraps of paper whose familiarity made Deborah's blood run cold.

"On the bridge," gasped the little lady, leaning against the fence for support. "Pasted on the railing of the bridge. I should never have seen it, nor looked at it, if it hadn't been that I—"

"Don't tell me here," urged Deborah. "Let's go over to your house. See, there are people coming."

Once in the house, Deborah allowed her full apprehension to show itself.

"What were the words? What was on the paper? Anything about—"

The little woman's look of horror stopped her.

"It's a lie, an awful, abominable lie. But think of such a lie being pasted up on that dreadful bridge for anyone to see. After twelve years, Mrs. Scoville! After—"

"Miss Weeks—" Ah, the oil of that golden speech on troubled waters! What was its charm? "Let me see those lines or what there is left of them so that I may share your feelings. They must be dreadful—"

"They are more than dreadful. They are for the kitchen fire. Wait a moment and then we will talk."

But Deborah had no mind to let these pieces escape her eye. Nor did she fail. At the end of fifteen minutes she had the torn bits of paper arranged in their proper position and was reading these words:

The scene of Oliver's crime.

"The beginning of the end!" was Deborah's thought. "If, after Mr. Black's efforts, a charge like this is found posted up in the public ways, the ruin of the Ostranders is determined upon, and nothing we can do can stop it."

In five minutes more she had said good-by to Miss Weeks and was on her way to the courthouse. As she approached it she was still further alarmed by finding this square full of people, standing in groups or walking impatiently up and down with their eyes fixed on the courthouse doors. Within, there was the uneasy hum, the anxious look, the subdued movement which marks an universal suspense. Announcement had been made that the jury had reached their verdict, and counsel were resuming their places and the judge his seat.

Those who had eyes only for the latter—and these were many—noticed a change in him. He looked older by years than when he delivered his charge. Not the prisoner himself gave greater evidence of the effect which this hour of waiting had had upon a heart whose covered griefs were, consciously or unconsciously, revealing themselves to the public eye. He did not wish this man sentenced. This was shown by his charge—the most one-sided one he had given in all his career.

Silence, that awful precursor of doom, lay in all its weight upon every ear and heart, as the clerk, advancing with the cry, "Order in the court," put his momentous question:

"Gentlemen of the jury, are you ready with your verdict?"

A hush!—then, the clear voice of the foreman:

"We are."

"How do you find? Guilty or not guilty?"

Another hesitation. Did the foreman feel the threat lurking in the air about him? If so, he failed to show it in his tones as he uttered the words which released the prisoner:

"Not guilty."

A growl from the crowd, almost like that of a beast stirring in its lair, then a quick cessation of all hubbub as every one turned to the judge to whose one-sided charge they attributed this release.

Deborah experienced in her quiet corner no alleviation of the fear which had brought her into this forbidding spot and held her breathless through these formalities.

For the end was not yet. Through all the turmoil of noisy departure and the drifting out into the square of a vast, dissatisfied throng, she had caught the flash of a bit of paper (how introduced into this moving mass of people no one ever knew) passing from hand to hand, toward the solitary figure of the judge, its delay as it reached the open space between the last row of seats and the judge's bench and its final delivery by some officious hand, who thrust it upon his notice just as he was rising to leave.

Deborah saw his finger tear its way through the envelope and his eyes fall frowningly on the paper he drew out.

Then the people's counsel and the counsel, for the defense and such clerks and hangers-on as still lingered in the upper room experienced a decided sensation.

The judge, who a moment before had towered above them all in melancholy but impressive dignity, shrunk with one gasp into feebleness and sank back stricken, if not unconscious, into his chair.

It happened suddenly and showed her the same figure she had seen once before—a man with faculties suspended, but not impaired, facing them all with open gaze but absolutely dead for the moment to his own condition and to the world about.

But, horrible as this was, what she saw going on behind him was infinitely worse. A man had caught up the bit of paper Judge Ostrander had let fall from his hand and was opening his lips to read it to the curious people surrounding him.

She tried to stop him. She forced a cry to her lips which should have rung through the room, but which died away on the air unheard. The terror which had paralyzed her limbs had choked her voice.

But her ears remained true. Low as he spoke, no trumpet-call could have made its meaning clearer to Deborah Scoville than did these words:

We know why you favor criminals. Twelve years is a long time, but not long enough to make wise men forget.

A NEW LIGHT SIX $1095 Every Inch a PAIGE

HERE you see illustrated the new Paige Six '36'. Here you see the latest addition to a distinguished line of cars—a true Paige every inch of it—a car built to realize an ideal—a car that must not and cannot be judged from the standpoint of its astounding price alone.

It has been the purpose and policy of the Paige Company to achieve a Standard of Quality and Value—not merely a standard of Price.

If you happen to know an owner of our larger, seven-passenger SIX '46', you know precisely what we mean when we speak of Value and Quality.

All of the careful manufacturing, all of the painstaking attention to detail, all of the sturdy, reliable qualities which characterize the larger Six will be found in this newer and smaller five-passenger PAIGE SIX '36'.

The Car You Have Waited For

Realize that there are a vast number of people who do not require a large seven-passenger car. At all of these people want a "Six", for they know that this is the "Six" in quality cars. Furthermore, they want a "roomy" car—a luxurious car—a "smart" car—an economical car. In a word, there is an enormous demand for just such a car as the new Paige Six '36'.

When you raise the hood of this car, you will see an accessible, powerful six cylinder motor—3 in. x 5 in.—which is a crowning achievement in motor construction. We might attempt to tell you about the performance of this remarkable power plant, but we much prefer to have you ride in the car and establish the facts for yourself. Then, you will realize what true six-cylinder Flexibility and Power really mean. For the first time, perhaps, you will experience the indescribable sensation of riding in a car that is practically throttle controlled—a car that travels smoothly at a slow walking pace or the speed of the winds without change from high gear.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

Forty-two years ago. The dry weather which prevails through this part of the country is seriously damaging the crop of grass and bids fair to bring strawberries to a high figure in the market.

Shoe business is at the extreme point of stagnation at the present time and the number of workmen idle is large. It is hoped that there will be a change, in a few weeks, for the benefit of all concerned.

The crop of caterpillars this season is unusually large and some of our people are taking especial pains to increase the number of these pests by allowing them the largest liberty in roaming from their own trees to those of their neighbors. A few hours work would clear an orchard of these despoilers of the leaves, but from present appearances we should judge that some of our citizens look upon them as ornamental appendages to the foliage.

Thirty-seven years ago. We learn that the heavy frost of last Thursday night did considerable damage to the garden stuff in this vicinity. Water in a dish on the premises of Mr. Morallus Lane, on High street, was frozen over.

Those having tubs out during the shower yesterday were somewhat surprised after it was over to find a scum on top of the water resembling and tasting like brimstone. Specimens can be seen at the residences of B. J. Loring, Jr., and Alden Bowditch.

A dozen or more cargoes of Eastern lumber have recently been piled upon the wharfs of Loud & Pratt and J. B. Rhines, adding about one and a half million feet to the supply at this place. Prices are a little lower than last year, labor is cheap, and now is the time to build.

Seventeen of the Committee chosen at the annual town meeting to consider and report on the subject of division of the town, held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the Town Hall, and a vote was taken on the subject, the result of the vote being ten in favor of division and seven against. After considerable discussion, N. D. Canterbury moved that the committee report to the town that it is inexpedient to divide at present, and the motion was carried by a vote of 11 to 4.

Twenty-eight years ago. The apothecaries of this town, in obedience to law, closed their stores last Sunday, and will continue to do so each Sunday, so that prescriptions must be compounded elsewhere, if that necessary service should be required here on the Sabbath. Will the barbers follow suit on the same trump.

The annual exhibition of the South High school will take place in the Union church the first Friday evening in July and an unusual degree of interest is being taken by teachers and scholars in the various features which are to form a part of this always interesting occasion. Nine members make up the graduating class, three of whom are boys, a better showing for the latter than in years past.

The teachers' meeting held at the North High school May 26, under the direction of Supt. Fisher, was one of the most profitable meetings of this year. An exercise in reading by a class from the Hunt school, composed of Mark Garrity, Isabel Godin, Alice Griffin, Annie Harris, Adelle Hilton, Arthur Hunt, Emma Leach, Bessie Leonard, Maria Moran, Lillie Nash, Reine Poe, Wilbur Thurston, Annie Tracy and Olive Trainer, average age about eight years, was conducted by Mrs. Spinney of the Athens school.

Regulations relative to the production and sale of Milk, adopted by the Board of Health of Weymouth, to become effective July 1, 1915.

CHAPTER 744. ACTS OF 1914.

AN ACT RELATIVE TO THE PRODUCTION AND SALE OF MILK.

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any producer of milk or dealer in milk to sell or deliver for sale in any city or town in the commonwealth any milk produced or dealt in by him without first obtaining from the board of health of such city or town a permit authorizing such sale or delivery. Said boards of health are hereby authorized to issue such permits after an inspection, satisfactory to them, of the place in which and of the circumstances under which such milk is produced, has been made by them or by their authorized agent. Any permit so granted may contain such reasonable conditions as said board may think suitable for protecting the public health and may be revoked for failure to comply with any of such conditions. No charge shall be made to the producer for the permit or for the inspection of the dairy where the milk is produced.

SECTION 2. In case any permit so granted is revoked, the board revoking the permit shall immediately send notice of the revocation to the state board of health, and the state board of health shall at once inform the boards of health of other cities and towns in the commonwealth where, in its judgment, milk produced by the dairy to which the permit relates would be likely to be sold or delivered for sale, and the state board of health shall also give notice of such revocation to any dealer in milk who, in the judgment of the board, would be likely to purchase milk from such dairy; and upon receipt of such notice it shall be unlawful for any dealer so notified to sell or offer for sale in this commonwealth milk from the said dairy.

SECTION 3. After a permit has been revoked, it may be renewed in the same way in which the original permit was issued, in which case the same form of notification shall follow as is required in the issuance of the original permit.

SECTION 4. Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for each offence.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the state board of health to enforce the provisions of section two of this act.

SECTION 6. It shall be the duty of the inspectors of milk appointed by the boards of health of cities and towns to enforce the provisions of section one, so far as relates to the milk supply of their respective cities and towns.

The following is the scale of points adopted by the State Board of Health and endorsed by the Official Dairy Inspectors' Association; and by which, the stock, methods and all equipment of all producers of, and dealers in milk in Weymouth shall be judged and marked.

Table with columns for EQUIPMENT and METHODS, each with sub-columns for Perfect and Allowed scores. Includes categories like COWS, STABLES, MILK ROOM OR MILK HOUSE, and UTENSILS AND MILKING.

Equipment + Methods = Final Score. NOTE 1.—If any exceptionally filthy condition is found, particularly dirty utensils, the total score may be further limited. NOTE 2.—If the water is exposed to dangerous contamination, or there is evidence of the presence of a dangerous disease in animals or attendants, the score shall be 0.

CARE OF MILK. All milk shall be cooled to a temperature of 50° Fahr. in an aeriator (in warm weather containing ice) within one hour of milking. All milk must be bottled on the premises immediately after cooling except when sold at wholesale. All milk sold at retail must be delivered in bottles. CARE OF BOTTLES. All bottles must be thoroughly washed and sterilized by heat before filling. Bottles must be filled within 24 hours of the time they have been washed. If a longer time elapses they must be re-washed. All implements used in cleaning bottles must be sterilized before used. In warm weather all milk must be kept at a temperature not higher than 50° Fahr. during delivery. All milk rooms must be properly ventilated, screened and free from flies. All milk dealers and producers must have a licence. These regulations become effective July 1, 1915.

George H. Dunham.

Born in Putney, Vermont, November 10, 1871; married, father of ten children, seven living and three dead. Resides at junction of Grant and Hancock streets, Wollaston. First started to work as tow boy on horse cars on State street, Springfield, Mass., in 1889. Next went to work as conductor on horse cars in Holyoke, Mass. Later went to Boston and became conductor on the Boston Consolidated Street Railway. Returned to Holyoke as conductor; then went back to Springfield as a horse car driver. From Springfield he went to work for the West End Street Railway Co. He then went to work on the East Middlesex Road, Malden, and from there came to Quincy in August, 1888. There were four horse cars running in Quincy at that time. He has followed along with the car business from the small five-seat horse car to the large double truck air brake cars, which he is running at the present time. This man has been very fortunate and has never had any accidents which amounted to anything for twenty-seven (27) years. He is rated as the oldest conductor in service in Quincy division and is one of the most careful and efficient conductors. This man has got up some patents in registers for cars and also signals to operate; owing to his limited capital he was unable to push them forward; they were used by other companies and they got the patents on them.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Rev. Harry Woods Kimball of Newton Highlands, a former pastor of the Union Congregational church of this town, performed the ceremony.

Miss Theresa Lowell, a sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor and Winthrop Ford of Kingston was best man, while Doris Poole of Providence was flower girl and Delmar Lowell, a relative of the bride, acted as ring bearer. The double ring service was used.

As the bride came down the stairs she was showered with rose petals by the ushers, who were, Misses Marlon Reed, Verna Richardson, Belle Griffin, Hazel Robinson, Lora Sweet, Celia Baker, Lora Loud and Lucia Nash, members of the G. R. C. of which the bride was a member. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns and daisies.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine and shadow lace. Her veil was caught up with lillies of the valley and she carried a bouquet of brides' roses. The bridesmaid wore light blue crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The couple were assisted in receiving by the maid-of-honor, best man and parents of the bride.

At 10:30 the couple left for an extended trip after which they will take up their residence at 26 Billings road, Norfolk Downs. Guests were present from Providence, Roxbury, Dedham, Dorchester and surrounding towns. The bride received many beautiful gifts of cut glass and silver.

FIREMEN HONOR THEIR DEAD.

The Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association Pay Tribute and Attend Services.

The Firemen's Relief Association of Weymouth continued its well established custom of a memorial to its departed members last Sunday by visiting their resting places, decorating them with floral tributes and attending a memorial service which took place at the Congregational church in East Weymouth.

The morning hours were spent in visiting the graves of departed members in other cemeteries than that at East Weymouth and depositing the floral offering of members and also many rare offerings from other friends.

The above was done by detail and at 9 o'clock all assembled at the Engine House in Ward 2 where a line was formed in the following order:

Chief Marshall, Wallace H. Bicknell, president of the association.

Platoon of Weymouth police, Chief A. H. Pratt in command.

Fire Chief Walter W. Pratt, Ward 4; District Chiefs: Hiram Nadell, Ward 1; John Q. Hunt, Ward 2; Matthew O'Dowd, Ward 5

Weymouth Firemen's Relief Association, Ex-Firemen and guests.

Thus organized the line marched to Fairmount cemetery where graves were decorated, making in all for the day 124 who had been remembered by floral offerings, after which the line was again formed and marched to the Congregational church where the following was the order of service:

Organ voluntary, "Adoration," Miss Ethel F. Raymond, organist and choir director; Doxology, choir and congregation; invocation and Lord's Prayer, pastor and congregation; "Gloria," chorus choir; Scripture lesson, "Many Gifts the Same Spirit," pastor; anthem, "O, For Wings Like a Dove," chorus choir; prayer, pastor; response, "Hear Our Prayer," chorus choir; hymn, "O, Worship the King," choir and congregation; solo, "Eye Hath Not Seen," Mrs. Franklin P. Whitten; sermon, theme, "In the Service of the Public," Rev. Dr. Edward Torrey Ford, pastor; offertory, Miss Raymond; hymn, "Awake, My Soul," choir and congregation.

That Would Be Something Else. "The secretary of agriculture says that the skunk is one of man's best friends." "We can stand that as long as the skunk doesn't aspire to being one of our closest friends."

TAG DAY.

Weymouth District Nurse Association a Year Old But Big in Results.

On the evening of June 5th, 1914, there met in the Methodist church, East Weymouth, a party of ladies for the purpose of discussing the matter of a District Nurse association in Weymouth. Enthusiasm was created and in a week's time over 400 names were enrolled in the cause.

On June 15th of the same year a meeting was held in the Clapp Memorial building at which time the Weymouth District Nurse association became a full fledged beneficiary organization with the following board of officers: Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees, president; Mrs. William E. Thayer, Mrs. W. A. Wagner, Mrs. Edwin R. Sampson, vice presidents; Mrs. Fred L. Doucette and Mrs. Edward P. Hunt, secretaries; Mrs. W. E. Ames, treasurer; Mrs. William A. Wheaton, assistant treasurer; Miss Lillian Curtis, Miss Mary A. Fogg, Mrs. Frederick Harris, Mrs. Nellie T. Carroll, Mrs. Arthur Cunningham, directors for three years; Mrs. E. E. Leonard, Mrs. Christopher Smetton, Mrs. William Wall, Mrs. Joseph Chase, Jr., Mrs. W. B. Clapp, directors for two years; Mrs. J. Herbert Libby, Mrs. George D. Bullock, Mrs. Harriet Ripley, directors for one year.

Thus organized it started on its mission and the year's work has carried to many homes a helping hand and material aid where emergencies had come without the material at hand to meet the difficulty.

A work of this kind calls for cash and several hundred dollars have been spent but the call being constant the infow must also be constant hence a Tag Day of which the public was made aware last Saturday.

"Tag Day" in order to be a success must have a good General to plan an efficient staff and brave live officers and above all soldiers who are not afraid of the "Firing Line."

Our summary of the day's battels, that so pleasing was the attack on the public that individually and collective they yielded to the appeals of the solicitors and the setting sun of Saturday, June 12th, saw an addition of $720.18 to the treasury of the Weymouth District Nurse Association.

At a meeting of the association held in G. A. R. hall Monday, much interest was taken in the future work and a vote of thanks to Walter Howley of the Bay State Street Railway, the young ladies, who were so efficient in tag selling and to the Gazette and Times for their aid.

TOWN BUSINESS.

The Selectmen at their meeting on Monday received a request from the residents at Westwood Grove for a better police service on Sundays and holidays.

On petition of the Citizens' association of the Landing a permit was granted to give a band concert at Webb park next Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Benjamin F. Smith, who has held a continuous position on the Board of Registrars since the law creating that Board became operative, was appointed on Monday for another term.

The Bay State S. R. Co. acknowledged the receipt of communication in regard to oiling track between rails and will investigate.

R. H. Lock and others petition for oiling of Summer street and the superintendent of street was authorized to order another can of dustolene.

A petition Frank H. Pray and others asked that in the reconstruction of Washington street State road town help should be employed.

The Stetson Shoe band ask the privilege of erecting a band stand at Columbian square and the same was granted to be located by Selectman Burrell.

The typewriter now in use at the Town office being a borrowed one and nearly out of commission the Town Accountant was authorized to purchase a new one.

The Boston Socialist club renewed the application, turned down last week, for permit to hold a picnic at Downers Landing on the 17th. It was voted to grant the same provided a satisfactory bond be filed to pay all necessary police force and any or all damage to personal property.

The further construction of concrete sidewalk was arranged by locating work on Summer street as far as the Capt. Lyon estate, Sea street from Beals park to Bicknell square, Pearl street from Sea to Crescent, Washington street from Lincoln square to Vine, Broad street from R. S. Hoffman to Weymouth Center square, Pond street from Hollis street to estate B. R. Bearie, Pleasant street from Ward 4 line to present concrete.

Forest Fire Warden E. S. Wright asked for additional money as that placed at his disposal was exhausted. There being no funds which has been voted for this purpose, it is necessary to bring the matter before an appropriation committee and if such a committee will so vote the selectmen may be able to take enough from the reserve fund to help Mr. Wright out in case of an emergency.

Inventory Your Baggage. The travel season is now on for the summer and if you are going out of the state it is well that you study the Cummings amendment to the Interstate commerce law which became operative June 1st and take an inventory when you pack your trunk for the trip.

If the value declared is over $100 for each full ticket, or $50 if checked on a child's ticket, a charge of ten cents for every $100 over the above amounts, will be collected. The act makes it a misdemeanor to misrepresent the value of baggage or any interstate shipment. The provision does not apply between points in the same state. Travelers should know the value of baggage they wish checked and be able to make the declaration themselves or authorize some one else to do it for them in order to save delay in checking. The new law makes extra work for baggage masters and requires the getting of baggage to the depot a little earlier than formerly. Your baggage cannot be checked out of the state without the prescribed declaration.

CARD OF THANKS.

We take this opportunity to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness and words of sympathy in our loss, for the beautiful floral tributes of love and esteem. We thank those who ministered to us in our sorrow and taught us more of the great lesson of human sympathy. ROBERT BARLOW.

Ungava's Timber.

Black spruce is the most abundant tree in Ungava, and constitutes over ninety per cent of the forest. Balsam fir is found nearly to the edge of the forest belt. Larch is probably the hardest tree of the subarctic forest. It is next in abundance to black spruce.

ON THE FARM

something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Apple trees that are heavily loaded with green, young fruit should have the fruit thinned about this time.

All that is required to make money with poultry is to just give your hens a chance and they will produce.

Keep the fruit of strawberries cool until the time to use or market them. Never pick berries for market when they are wet.

Owners of little farms who are developing a program of diversified crops can double their profits by canning fruits and vegetables.

Most of the trouble with poultry on the average farm is above the ears of the owner. In other words, the owner is following the wrong scheme or plan in the care he gives them and the management they receive.

Cultivate rhubarb, bush, fruits and other perennials all through the summer to keep down weeds and to preserve a mud for holding moisture. Full growth through the summer means larger crops the following year.

Those who grow strawberries in close beds where the plants are thick together should look well to the thinning out of surplus plants at this season. This ought to be attended to as the plants are growing, but is very seldom done and they are generally left to crowd each other, and each to get a living as best it can.

Peas and radishes for successive crops should not be overlooked. Do not be content with only one crop in a garden. As soon as any crop is fully harvested prepare the ground and plant something else.
A garden can be kept in full service until frost appears.

Although strawberry plants will not thrive where the soil is permanently wet, they do require an abundant supply of moisture, both during the growing and fruiting seasons. The non-observance of this requirement is the occasion of heavy losses.

Clover cut after seed has formed, even if but just begun, is not of much value for dairy cows and growing animals. So we should harvest the crop before it goes out of bloom or any portion of it does so.

The building of poultry houses requires considerable study to meet the requirements. It is quite possible to have fresh eggs all winter in the coldest farming sections, but all the requisites necessary to keep the poultry comfortable and to furnish all the different kinds of feeds must be carefully worked out to fit the climate and other local conditions.

In grooming horses, main reliance should be placed upon the brush. The comb should be used to clean the brush, and is sometimes serviceable for direct application, though it ought to be rubbed in the direction the hair lies. Some men will ruffle the whole coat with the comb in order to loosen up the dirt and remove traces of scurf among the hair. The hard teeth of the comb injure the skin and thus produce more scurf than they remove.

The object of every farmer should be to put up his hay in a fresh, dry and sweet condition. Spoiled, overripe or musty hay is not very serviceable as feed and is often very harmful to the stock that eat it. Horses are liable to heave and cough that must live on such hay and cattle do not thrive well when eating it.
A milk cow should never be given poor hay if you wish her to keep up her flow of milk.

May and June the inhabitants of the feathered world build their nests and bring forth their young. The domesticated fowl has descended from the jungle and there is a seeming possibility that inherent predisposition asserts itself in our fowls of today, thus making the warmer months the natural time of high fertility. There can hardly be any way to bring about a change by which the same fertility may be had in winter as in summer, other than to make for the fowls the same conditions that the warmer months afford.

Really Hard Luck.

"Pap is gettin' kinder discouraged," remarked Hiram Wayback. "How so?"
asked the neighbor. "Wa-a-l, he's pasted nigh onto ten thousand medical recipes into a book endurin' the last forty years, an' he ain't had a sick day yet."—Livingston Lance.

Every Man a Debtor.

I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor, by way of amends, to be a help and ornament thereunto.—
Bacon.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

FORTY-TWO YEARS AGO.
It is said that 500 new teams have been added to the horse resources of Weymouth this season, many persons who have never before aspired to horse ownership have invested in this line.

Two young men were transferred from the sidewalk in Washington square, Weymouth Landing, to the lockup last Tuesday evening by State Officer Hammond, who at the request of residents annoyed by the corner loungers has made it his special business to "clear the track" and put an end to sidewalk deliberation.

A petition has been drawn up and signed by numerous citizens of the Landing praying the County Commissioner to widen and straighten Commercial street to the house of Joseph Loud. The improvement would remedy the danger which constantly threatens carriage drivers at the corner of Washington street, the turn at that point being a source of frequent accidents.

THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO.
The employees at the factory of Edwin Clapp will only work eight hours a day during the remainder of the season as business is not quite as brisk as usual.

The cottagers are coming in thick and fast at Fort Point and Rose Cliff and by next week these resorts will have attained that lifelike and social aspect which lasts throughout each season.

One of our citizens has complained to the road supervisors because the men em-
seven minutes of five, one night recently.
The citizen thinks the town should receive a day's work for a day's pay.

The Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society are erecting new stables on the Fair grounds to replace those burned last year. They will be 208 feet long and will contain twenty-four single stalls, with every convenience for the trotters and their tenders.

Arrivals at J. B. Rhines & Co.'s: Schooner Flash from St. Johns, N. B. with 100,000 feet of lumber; schooner Sea Flower from Bangor, with 90,000 of lumber. Arrived at A. J. Richards & Sons, schooner Alfred W. Fisk, from Philadelphia, with 570 tons of coal and schooner William Cobb from New York with 600 tons.

TWENTY-SIX YEARS AGO.
Strawberry festivals are all the rage just at present, two or three being held each week.

The hole back of the old schoolhouse on Middle street has been levelled off and is now ready to commence the foundation wall of the new schoolhouse.

Work has been commenced on the Odd Fellows lot; the old barn is being torn down and the building movers are at work making ready to move the house.

Canoists were plenty at the mouth of Weymouth river Saturday and Sunday, camping in tents on Peddock island and cruising around Back river shore, Downer Landing, etc., during Sunday, and engaging in athletic sports, winding up the day with a bonfire and music.

At the meeting of the board of Water Commissioners, held Tuesday, it was voted to build an extension of the water main on Union street, South Weymouth, to the Rockland line, a distance of about one mile, the cost of the work to be about $5000. Wessagusset and Big Sandy will then be near neighbors.

Flour to Extinguish Fire.
If should be a matter of common knowledge, since flour is always within convenient reach, that wheat flour is the best extinguisher to throw over a fire caused by the spilling and igniting of kerosene.

Makes a Good Soldier.
It is said that next to bravery the Ghoorka's most characteristic quality is his vanity—really the pride of achievement, because once he has won a position against the foe it is well nigh impossible to dislodge him. He simply must fight until he is knocked over or killed.

Spanish Jews Slaughtered.
When the Jews lost the upper hand in Spain there were 1,500,000 of them living in that country. They were given three days in which to leave Spain or suffer death. Out of the 1,500,000 only about 200,000 were able to flee within the 72 hours, and all the others were slaughtered.

What Really Hurt.
"No," said the man who was shot in the head by his friend while they were out shooting, lost the greater part of an ear and was scratched considerably. "I don't mind the wounds so much, but it breaks my heart to have my head mistaken, by my most intimate friend, for a rabbit."

Wouldn't Buy a Veil.
I knew an old lady who was a tightwad. She was so stiny that when her husband died she didn't want to buy a black veil. So while the minister was preaching she went out of the back door and took the crease off of the front door and fixed it on her hat. When the undertaker went to get the crease he couldn't find it.—Chicago Tribune.

Habits.
"Force of character is cumulative," says Emerson "All the foregone days of virtue work their health into this."
All the foregone days of doubt, inertia and unworthiness work their weakness into this also, and that is the great lesson of all habit-forming: We weight our future with our present, and the things of today shall help or hinder tomorrow.

"Travel?" retorted a clever business man. "Not I. I can sit right here and do business by telephone at less expense than the cost of hotels and car fares, and at the same time keep track of affairs in my office."
"My telephone is a part of my office force. With it I can reach every actual or prospective customer in this territory. Every toll call I make is productive in actual orders or in good-will."
"If the person I want is not at hand to answer my toll call, I don't have to wait—I simply leave word to have him call me at my expense."
"If I don't get him at all, I am not charged for the call, so that my toll calls are not an expense but an investment."

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

The management of a Fourth of July celebration to be held at Springfield, has cancelled an engagement made with Ex-Secretary of State, Wm. J. Bryan, to deliver the oration on that occasion. This would seem to leave Mr. Bryan open for an new engagement and possibly his great exponent at Braintree might get him to speak in that town.

The Boston Herald says: "Every sixth family in Kansas owns a motor car, and most of the members of all the other families have learned to dodge." We learn from the same paper that however expert Massachusetts people may have become as "dodgers," the killing or maiming goes on at the rate of about eight per day and with no remedy in sight.

Consistency is said to be a jewel and so highly read and educated man as Pres. Elliott should bear that in mind when he talks. In one part of a recent speech he argued against an old age pension on account of the tax burden on the people; later on he suggests that college professors when retiring by reason of age or other causes should be provided for at the public expense. Why pension a man who has been getting his $5,000 or $10,000 a year and leave out the old man who has been struggling along on $1.50 or $2 a day?

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge spoke to 25,000 people at Lynn on "Flag Day" and the echo of that address will cheer the heart of every American citizen. The Echo:

"We cannot afford, as a nation, to allow the humblest citizen among us to suffer in any way, by wrong or by injustice. Wherever any American citizen goes lawfully and legally there the flag goes with him and there it ever must go, for if the flag does not protect the citizen, the citizen is in time to come will not protect the flag. We must protect the flag and in so doing protect each one of us."

ANNUAL REUNION.

High School Alumni Association Annual Gathering Carded for June 30 at High School. Attractive Program Listed.

At the annual reunion of the Weymouth High School Alumni association, which is to be held on Wednesday, June 30, in the High school, East Weymouth, the following will be the order of exercises:

7 to 8 o'clock. Informal reception with special reunions of the classes 1910, 1905, 1900, 1895, 1890, etc.

8 to 9:30. Entertainment and refreshments.

9:30 to 11:30. Dancing.

An attempt will be made to send notices to graduates, but as the lists are very incomplete, many will necessarily fail to receive them. Graduates of the High schools of Weymouth and all who have at any time attended these schools will be heartily welcome at the reunion.

Tickets can be obtained from Edwin R. Sampson, North Weymouth; Miss Mary L. Sheehy, East Weymouth; Mrs. Elmer M. Alexander, Weymouth; Miss Helen Rockwood, South Weymouth and also at the following stores: W. J. Sladen's Weymouth Heights; W. M. Tirrell's, East Weymouth; C. D. Harlow's, Weymouth and Elbridge Nash's, South Weymouth.

Cheap Paint.

There are 1000 "cheap" paints and a dozen really cheap ones.

That double word "cheap" is the cause of wasting more money than good paint costs, two or three times over.

Cheap paint is good paint; there is no other; no other is cheap.

The two words sound alike but their meanings are opposite. "Cheap" costs double. Cheap is Devoe.

W. J. Sladen, East Weymouth; M. R. Loue & Co., South Weymouth, and A. J. Sidinger, North Weymouth sell it. Advt.

Do You Read Labels?

Domestic science teachers and food authorities are urging the housewife to carefully read the labels on all food articles.

The laws of most States compel food manufacturers to print the ingredients of their products on the label, and this enables consumers to distinguish healthful foods from those which may be deleterious.

High-grade baking powders are made of pure cream of tartar, derived from grapes. Royal Baking Powder is a type of the highest grade. It is healthful beyond a doubt and the safest and best to use.

The low-grade baking powders are made from alum, a mineral acid salt, or phosphate of lime.

Consumers can learn the character of the baking powder by referring to the label, which must state whether the contents include cream of tartar, alum or phosphate.

BOY SCOUT NOTES.*Troop 2, East Weymouth.

On Friday June 25th at 8 o'clock the troop will hold their fourth annual lawn party on the grounds of the M. E. Church Broad street East Weymouth. The usual good things will be for sale: ice cream, home made candy, punch, American frankforts, pop corn and peanuts. There will be an entertainment in the vestry for which a small sum will be charged but according to all accounts it will be well worth the price of admission. There will also be a headquarters tent where scouts will be on duty to render assistance or impart necessary information. An orchestra will be in evidence and there will be an electrical illumination. Now is your opportunity to help the Scouts by buying a ticket as the proceeds of the party are to help pay the expense of a camping trip for the troop.—Adv.

At the last meeting the troop had as a guest Asst. S. M. Emery of Troop 39, Roxbury. He was accompanied by First Class Scout Lincoln Bowditch.

Emil Millett and Channing Libby received the tenderfoot degree and were enrolled.

Owing to the large number of boys who wish to enter the troop the Scout Master is considering the advisability of applying to New York for permission to enlarge the troop to 40 members.

An invitation was received from the Daughters of Veterans to attend their patriotic exercises on Thursday evening June 17th and it was voted to accept the invitation and attend in a body.

Enrollment cards have been received for Channing Libby and Emil Millett.

Resigns Pastorate

The resignation of the Rev. William Wallace Rose, pastor of the Second Universalist church of this town has been received by the prudential committee of the church. The resignation will take effect July 1st.

Mr. Rose has accepted a pastorate in the church of the Redeemer at Bridgeport, Conn. one of the largest Universalist denominations in Connecticut.

He is a native of Philadelphia and graduated from Tufts College in the class of 1912. In February 1912, he came to this town as an assistant to the Rev. L. W. Atwood, and upon the latter's resignation accepted the pastorate of this church, which has been a most successful one.

The first pulpit occupied by Mr. Rose was that of the Universalist church of Assinippi in December 1913. He was married to a former schoolmate, Miss Mary Bird of Philadelphia.

Financial Genius.

Mr. Foghorn—Take out your debt in singing lessons! You're crazy! What kind of a voice do you think I have? Professor Squeale—Like a steam whistle, only worse. But when you've taken one lesson in your home the neighbors will raise the money and pay the debt.

A BABEL OF TONGUES.

The World's Languages Now and What May Be in the Future.

How many men, if asked how many languages there are in the world, could give anything like an accurate answer? The average man's knowledge or ability to speak languages rarely exceeds two besides his native tongue. It may appear strange, but it is nevertheless true, that there are over 4,000 languages spoken by mankind, while the number of dialects exceeds this. There are more than sixty vocabularies in Brazil, and in Mexico the Nahua is broken up into some 700 dialects. There are hundreds in Borneo, and in Australia there is no classifying the complexities. Let us assume that fifty dialects, on an average, belong to each language and we have the colossal total of 200,000 linguistic entities.

A century hence the probability is that there will only be four languages of importance in the world. Central Europe may produce a newer and more straightforward German language. Imperial English may reign alone over the North American continent, while a more businesslike Spanish will be used in South American states. Then Russia may take on some more rich Slavonic dialect, which will blend the races of eastern Europe and central Asia into a harmonious federation. So that in future these four languages will enter into what may be a never ending competition.—Exchange.

Her Convert to the Cause

He Was an Apt Pupil in Two Ways.

By AGNES G. BROGAN

"I am glad you are interested, my dear," said Mrs. Sturtevant. "Young and charming women are needed to keep up enthusiasm in the cause."

Bettle glanced admiringly into the elder woman's face. "It was all so lovely," she murmured. "The shaded lights and you, with your silvery hair and velvet gown, making that wonderful speech!" indeed, I was quite thrilled.

"Good," laughed the speaker of the afternoon, "and prettily said, Miss Bettle. Won't you come to our open meeting tonight and inspire others? The fathers, brothers and sweethearts are invited, for between you and me, my dear, notwithstanding our boasted independence, it is the men's assistances which we need and must have."

So Bettle gladly agreed, bursting in upon her assembled family a short time later in a state of jubilant excitement.

"I am a suffragette," she explained, somewhat incoherently, "and it's the finest thing in the world. Hereafter I shall have a voice in matters which concern me, and then shall not entirely manage my affairs. I am going to another meeting tonight, Dickie," she went on, "and you will have to take me."

Her brother rusted knife and fork to look at her. "I have an engagement," he began tentatively.

"What time?" his sister asked.

Dickie considered. Lectures and things of that sort usually opened at 8 o'clock "Seven-thirty," he answered briskly.

Bettle seated herself at the table. "Then you need be only half an hour late for your engagement," she remarked pleasantly.

"But how will you get home?" Dickie grumbled. Bettle smiled in the direction of her father.

"Oh, dad will attend to that," she said. Father shook his head.

"I'm afraid I can't make it, Bettle," he said apologetically. "The directors meeting is called for 9:30, and we seldom finish business until a late hour."

"You can be excused," this tyrannized young woman assured him, and so it was settled. Mrs. Sturtevant met her new recruit at the door.

"So good of you to come," was her greeting. "We are going to have a large, representative crowd and many brilliant speakers. Let me introduce you quickly; then, when you have found a disinterested person, endeavor to enthrone him in the cause. Those bright eyes of yours could convince a man of anything you choose," she added teasingly.

Bettle had forgotten half the murmured names before the round of introductions was accomplished, but she found herself presently, seated at the rear of the spacious hall, with a good looking young man as companion. He was boyishly frank—this young man—and ingenuous.

"Mrs. Sturtevant mentioned you as a friend of many years," he said. "That also applies to me. I used to make sand pies in her garden."

"Perhaps I may have helped you," Bettle suggested with a sideways glance, but the young man shook his head. "I should have remembered if you had," he answered meaningly, and both laughed.

"I think I never saw so many beautiful women gathered together as those here tonight," the young man continued.

Bettle leaned forward, eager for a discussion. "That," she explained, "is because they are interested and enthusiastic. All suffragettes are beautiful."

Her companion shook his head decidedly. "I have attended other meetings," he replied.

"You are prejudiced," Bettle accused. "Not a bit of it," her companion retorted. "Why, my own sister is an ardent worker for the cause."

"And she has not convinced you?" Bettle incredulously exclaimed.

The young man laughed. "Eleanor couldn't convince me in a thousand years," he said; "she's too illogical."

Bettle bestowed a contemptuous glance upon him. "There is no one so blind as those who will not see," she quoted.

The provoking young man wheeled about to regard her amusedly. "I am open to conviction upon every subject," he answered. Bettle studied the frank, good natured face reflectively. Here could be a convert worthy of the cause—manly, forceful, with a magnetism of personality that drew one against one's protesting will to look again and still again into the mocking dark eyes. At home in the corner of her desk was tucked an instructive book which Mrs. Sturtevant had urged her to study. She might look it over before tomorrow evening and then—

"Sometimes," said Bettle, "one is not in sympathy with a certain movement because one does not fully understand its purpose. Now, if I could prove to you the benefit of suffrage, could explain its many?"

"You could," the young man interrupted with surprising readiness; "I'm sure you could. May I call some evening and learn your views on the subject? Being mutual friends of Mrs. Sturtevant and all that?"

"Tomorrow?" Bettle suggested, and her companion agreed with alacrity. She leaned back with a sigh of relief. Mrs. Sturtevant would be pleased with this conquest. But that lady had ascended the platform steps. Bettle leaned forward, listening in a glow of pride to that perfectly modulated voice. "Clever speech," she remarked to the young man at her side, but he quizzically raised his eyebrows.

"Her statistics are wrong," he replied.

"They are not"—Bettle's cheeks were flaming with indignation—"they could not be wrong."

"Then perhaps you will explain tomorrow evening," this exasperating young man went, "how it would be possible for 70,000 people?"

Bettle's red lips closed determinedly. For the benefit of this scoffer she would straighten out those tangled figures if she were obliged to sit up all night, book in hand, in order to do it. As Mrs. Sturtevant's voice droned on and on the young man apparently became less interested. Drawing a paper at last from his pocket, he indulged in desultory scribbling, erasing as he wrote. When Bettle could no longer endure this open inattention she arose to leave the proximity of so annoying a companion.

"If the remarks bore you," she said severely, "you might at least pay the speaker the courtesy of attention." But as Mrs. Sturtevant, graciously smiling, descended the platform the leader's clear voice came to them.

"I now take great pleasure," she announced, "in introducing to you the speaker of the evening, whose generous support of our cause has helped materially to increase its power, whose eloquence has won for us many followers—Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Spencer Brown."

And before Bettle's bewildered eyes her companion arose, with a mischievous smile, and sauntered carelessly toward the raised dais.

"I am still with you," he called, while the cultured audience cheered wildly. As the instructive speech progressed anger and wounded pride burned in the heart of Bettle. Here he had sat, this deceitful young man, drawing her out in his guileless way, to secretly laugh her to scorn. Wrathfully she clenched her opera glasses and moved toward the door. Dad was there awaiting her coming.

"Let us stay for Brown's speech," he whispered. "It's sure to be worth while. He is the young man of the hour in Tuxbury, bound to be mayor some day and later more than that, mark my words." But Bettle bounced on down the stairs. So breathless was her fight that she did not miss her opera clock until some one stood holding it out to her from an upper rest of the stairs.

"If you were not interested in the remarks," reproached a tantalizing voice, "you might at least have given the speaker the courtesy of attention." Bettle gazed in wide eyed astonishment at the tall figure above.

"May I ask you to wait while I restore your property?" the speaker continued. "My pride and dignity have suffered sufficiently in this sudden, hasty exit from the hall without being further obliged to descend headlong down the stairs."

A smile trembled at the corners of Bettle's lips; then she dimpled merrily. "You are not obliged," said Bettle.

"I am," positively declared Mr. Brown. When he had carefully wrapped the cloak about her shoulders he still lingered. "I have a message from Mrs. Sturtevant," he told her. "You are elected delegate to the convention at Bronxhurst tomorrow, while I have been chosen speaker; therefore we shall have to postpone that instructive meeting at your home—unless you would be so kind as to enlighten me during the journey."

There was no reply.

"I have been called a delightful travelling companion," modestly suggested Mr. Brown. He bent to look earnestly into the girl's averted face. "You will go?" he begged.

"But I do not understand the duties of a delegate," she objected.

"A delegate's chief duty," Mr. Brown informed her, "is to see that the speaker is well entertained."

"Indeed?" questioned Bettle.

"Yes," answered the speaker. For a moment their eyes met in mingling challenge; then the girl's lowered before something softly shining in his own.

"I will go," she said.

And long after the door had closed upon her slender figure the young man stood lost in reverie.

"And Bronxhurst just begins the journey," he murmured happily.

The convention at Bronxhurst was eminently successful. The convention hall was crowded and the enthusiasm was at fever heat. Mr. Brown took a prominent part in some of the discussions and gave sound advice. Bettle's attention was fixed upon him with ever increasing admiration.

All things must have an end, and so had the convention. Bettle remembered that the next evening she was to convert Mr. Brown to the cause and wondered if he would appear for the purpose of being converted. As the hour appropriate for an evening call approached, dressed in her most becoming costume, she awaited the coming of the man to whom she was to explain the doctrines of equal suffrage. When the doorbell rang she was quick in a flutter.

"Mr. Brown," she said, "I think it was very mean of you to deceive me as you did."

"Had I disabused your mind of your error I should not have enjoyed this call."

When Mr. Brown left Bettle that evening at a late hour she had converted him, but not to the cause of woman suffrage. He had become convinced that he wanted her for his wife.

CHAPTER XII.

"The Misfortunes of My House."

Schooled as most of them were to face with minds secure and tempers quite unmoved the countless surprises of a courtroom, the persons within hearing paled at the intimation conveyed in these two sentences, and with scarcely the interchange of a glance or word, drew aside in a silence which no man seemed inclined to break.

As for the people still huddled in the doorway, they rushed away helter-skelter into the street, there to proclaim the judge's condition and its probable cause—an event which to many quite eclipsed in interest the more ordinary one which had just released to freedom a man seemingly doomed.

Few persons were now left in the great room, and Deborah, embarrassed to find that she was the only woman present, was on the point of escaping from her corner when she perceived a movement take place in the rigid form from which she had not yet withdrawn her eyes, and, regarding Judge Ostrander more attentively, she caught the gleam of his suspicious eyes as he glanced this way and that to see if his lapse of consciousness had been noticed by those about him.

Whenever the judge looked he saw abstracted faces and busy hands, and, taking heart at not finding himself watched, he started to rise. Then memory came—blasting, overwhelming memory of the letter he had been reading; and, rousing with a start, he looked down at his hand, then at the floor before him, and, seeing the letter lying there, picked it up with a secret, sidelong glance to right and left, which sank deep into the heart of the still watchful Deborah.

If those about him saw, they made no motion. Not an eye looked round and not a head turned as he straightened himself and proceeded to leave the room. Only Deborah noted how his steps faltered and how little he was to be trusted to find his way unguided to the door. It lay to the right and he was going left. Now he stumbles—isn't there any one to—yes, she is not the sole one on watch. The same man who had read aloud the note and then dropped it within reach, had stepped after him, and kindly, if artfully, turned him towards the proper place of exit. As the two disappear, Deborah wakes from her trance, and, finding herself alone among the seats, hurries to quit her corner and leave the building.

The glare—the noise of the square, as she dashes down into it seems for the moment unendurable. The pushing, panting mass of men and women of which she has now become a part, closes about her, and for the moment she can see nothing but faces—faces with working mouths and blazing eyes. Thick as the crowd was in front, it was even thicker here, and far more tumultuous. Word had gone about that the father of Oliver Ostrander had been given his lesson at last, and the curiosity of the populace had risen to fever-heat in their anxiety to see how the proud Ostrander would bear himself in his precipitate downfall. They had crowded there to see and they would see.

He was evidently not prepared to see his path quite so heavily marked out for him by the gaping throng; but after one look, he assumed some show of his old commanding presence and advanced bravely down the steps, awing some and silencing all, until he had reached his carriage step and the protection of the officers on guard.

Then a hoot rose from some far-off quarter of the square, and he turned short about and the people saw his face. Despair had seized it, and it was any one there desired vengeance, he had it. The knell of active life had been rung for this man. He would never remount the courthouse steps, or face again a respectful jury.

As for Deborah, she had shrunk out of sight at his approach, but as soon as he had ridden off she looked eagerly for a taxicab to carry her in his wake. She could not let him ride that noble alone. She was still fearful for him, though the mass of people about her was rapidly dissolving away, and the streets growing clear.

She can see his carriage now. Held up for a moment by the crowd, it has broken through, and is rolling quickly towards Ostrander lane. But the mob is following, and she is yet far behind.

Shouting to the chauffeur to hasten, the insistent honk! hank! of the cab adds its raucous note to the turmoil! They have dashed through one group—they are dashing through another—naught can withstand an on-rushing automobile. She catches glimpses of raised arms threatening retaliation; of eager, stolid, uncertain and furious faces—and her breath held back during that one instant of wild passage rushes pantingly forth again. Ostrander lane is within sight. If only they can reach it—if only they can cross it! But they cannot without sowing death in their track. No scattered groups here, the mob fills the corner. It is packed close as a wall. Brought up against it, the motor necessarily comes to a standstill.

She will have to wait until the crowd sways apart, allowing her to—Ah, there, some heads are moving now! She catches one glimpse ahead of her, and sees—What does she see? The noble but shrunk figure of the judge drawn up before his gate. His lips are moving, but no sound issues from them; a change passes like a stroke of lightning over the surging mass. Some one shouts out "Coward!" another, "Traitor!" and the lifted head falls, the moving lips cease from their efforts and in place of the great personality which filled their eyes a moment before, they see a man entrapped, waking to the horror of a sudden death in life for which no visions of the day, no dreams of the night, had been able to prepare him.

It was a sight to waken pity, not derision. But these people had gathered here in a bitter mood and their rancor had but scented the prey. Calls of "Oliver!" and such threats as "You saved him at a poor man's expense, but we'll have him yet, we'll have him yet!" began to rise about him; followed by endless repetitions of the name from near and far: "Oliver! Oliver!"

Oliver! His own lips seemed to re-echo the word. Then like a lion bated beyond his patience the judge lifted his head and faced them all with a mob seeking for an object upon which to expend their spleen.

Deborah was glad to sit silent under this open rebuke and listen to Reuther's ingenious declarations, though she knew that they brought no conviction and distilled no real comfort either to his mind or hers.

"Yes, mother, darling," the young girl was saying. "These people have not seen Oliver in years, but we have, and nothing they can say, nothing that any one can say but himself, could ever shake my belief in him as a man incapable of a really wicked act. He might be capable of striking a sudden blow—most men are under great provocation—but to conceal such a fact—to live for years enjoying the respect of all who knew him, with the knowledge festering in his heart of another having suffered for his crime—that, that would be impossible to Oliver Ostrander."

Some words ring in the heart long after their echo has left the ear. Impossible! Deborah stole a look at the judge. But he was gazing at Reuther, where he well might gaze, if his sinking heart craved support or his abashed mind sought to lose itself in the enthusiasm of its pure soul, with its loving, uncalculating instincts.

"Tell the judge who is as confident of Oliver as I am myself that you are confident, too. That you could no more believe him capable of this abominable act than you could believe it of my father."

"I will—tell—the judge," stammered the unhappy mother. "Judge," she briefly declared, as she rose with the help of her daughter's arm, "my mind is something back of all this; something you have not imparted. What is that something? Tell—tell—"

"Oliver was a mere boy in those days and a very passionate one. He hated Etheridge—the obtrusive mentor who came between him and yourself."

"Hated?"

"Yes, there is proof." He did not ask where. Possibly he knew. And because he did not ask she did not tell him, holding on to her secret in a vague hope that so much at least might never see light.

"I knew the boy shrank sometimes from Algernon's company," the judge admitted, after another glance at her face; "but that means nothing in a boy full of his own affairs. What else have you against him? Speak up! I can bear it all."

"He handled the stick that—that—" "Never! Now you have gone mad, madam."

"I would be willing to end my days in an asylum if that would disprove this fact."

"But, madam, what proof—what reason can you have for an assertion so monstrous?"

"You remember the shadow I saw which was not that of John Scoville? The person who made that shadow was whittling a stick; that was a trick of Oliver's. I have heard that he even whittled furniture."

"Good God! The judge's panoply was pierced at last.

"They tried to prove, as you will remember, that it was John who thus disgraced the bludgeon he always carried with pride. But the argument was a sorry one and in itself would have broken down the prosecution had he been a man of better repute. Now, those few chips taken from the handle of this weapon will carry a different significance. For in my folly I asked to see this stick, which still exists at police headquarters, and there in the wood I detected and pointed out a trifle of steel which never came from the unbroken blades of the knife taken from John's pocket."

Fallen was the proud head now and fallen the great man's aspect. If he spoke it was to utter a low "Oliver! Oliver!"

The pathos of it—the heart-rending wender in the tone brought the tears to Deborah's eyes and made her last words very difficult.

"But the one great thing which gives to these facts their really dangerous point is the mystery you have made of your life and of this so-called hermitage. If you can clear up that, you can afford to ignore the rest."

"The misfortunes of my house!" was his sole response. "The misfortunes of my house!"

He Assumed Some Show of His Old Commanding Presence.

Deborah Made No Answer. She Could Not Yet Trust Her Voice.

fiery intensity which for the moment made him a terrible figure to contemplate.

"Let no one utter that name to me here!" shot from his lips in tones of unspeakable menace and power. "Spare me that name, or the curse of my ruined life be upon you. I can bear no more today."

The cry arose again: "Oliver! Oliver! The sons of the rich go free, but ours have to hang!"

At which he gave them one stare and fell back against the door. It yielded and a woman's arms received him. The gentle Reuther in that hour of dire extremity, showed herself stronger than her mother who had fallen in a faint amid the crowd.

To one who swoons but seldom, the moment of returning consciousness is often fraught with great pain and sometimes with unimagineable horror. It was such to Deborah; the pain and horror holding her till her eyes, accustomed to realities again, saw in the angel face which floated before her vision amid a swarm of demon masks, the sweet and solicitous countenance of Reuther.

Reuther, taking her mother's hand in hers, said softly:

"I knew you were not seriously ill, only frightened by the crowd and their senseless shoutings. Don't think of it any more, dear mother. The people are dispersing now, and you will soon be quite restored and ready to smile with us at an attack so groundless it is little short of absurd."

Astonished at such tranquillity where she had expected anguish if not stark unreason, doubting her eyes, her ears—for this was no longer her delicate, suffering Reuther to be shielded from all unhappy knowledge, but a woman as strong if not as wise to the situation as herself—she scrutinized the child closely, then turned her gaze slowly about the room, and started in painful surprise, as she perceived standing in the space behind her the tall figure of Judge Ostrander.

"Pardon," she entreated, forgetting Reuther's presence in her consciousness of the misery she had brought upon her benefactor. "I never meant—I never dreamed—"

"Oh, no apologies!" Was this the judge speaking? The tone was an admonitory, not a suffering one. It was not even that of a man humiliated or distressed. "You have had an unfortunate experience, but that is over now and so must your distress be."

Then, as in her astonishment she dropped her hands and looked up, he added very quietly, "Your daughter has been much disturbed about you, but not at all about Oliver or his good name. She knows my son too well, and so do you and I, to be long affected by the virulent outcries of a agrees with yours in this matter. What you think, I think." And that was all she could say.

As she fell again into her seat, the judge turned to Reuther:

"Leave your mother for a little while," he urged, with that rare gentleness he always showed her. "Let her rest here a few minutes longer, alone with me."

"Yes, Reuther," murmured Deborah, seeing no way of avoiding this inevitable interview. "I am feeling better every minute. I will come soon."

The young girl's eye faltered from one to the other, then settled, with a strange and imploring look upon her mother. Had her clear intelligence pierced at last to the core of that mother's misery? Had she seen what Deborah would have spared her at the cost of her own life? It would seem so, for when the mother, with great effort, began some conciliatory speech, the young girl smiled with a certain ad-patience, and, turning toward Judge Ostrander, said as she softly withdrew:

"You have been very kind to allow me to mention a name and discuss a subject you have expressly forbidden. I want to show my gratitude, Judge Ostrander, by never referring to it again without your permission. That you know my mind—here her head rose with a sort of lofty pride which lent a dazzling quality to her usually quiet beauty—"and that I know yours, is quite enough for me."

"A noble girl! a mate for the best!" fell from the judge's lips after a silence disturbed only by the faint, far-off murmur of a slowly dispersing throng.

Deborah made no answer. She could not yet trust her courage or her voice.

The judge, who was standing near, concentrated his look upon her features. "Madam!"—he was searching her eyes, searching her very soul, as men seldom search the mind of another. "You believe in the truth of these columns that have just been shouted in our ears. You believe what they say of Oliver. You, with every prejudice in his favor; with every desire to recognize his worth! You, who have shown yourself ready to drop your husband's cause though you consider it an honest one, when you saw what havoc it would entail on your boy's repute. You believe—and on what evidence?" he broke in. "Because of the picture and the coincidence of his presence in the ravine?"

"Yes."

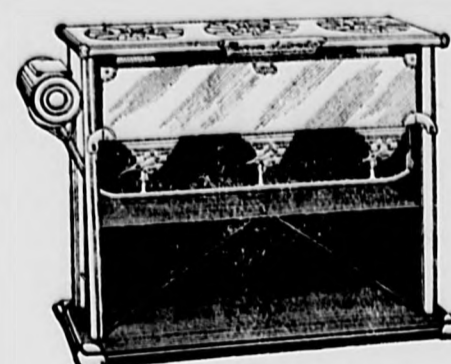

"But these are puerile reasons." He was speaking peremptorily now and with all the weight of a master mind. "And you are not the woman to be satisfied with anything puerile. There

THOUGHTLESS FRIENDS.

They Mean Well Enough, but They Will Do Such Queer Things.

"Most of the annoyances of life are caused by friends," writes James Montgomery Flagg in the American Magazine. "It doesn't annoy you when your enemy tries to get you in bad. You don't expect anything else from him. It's his regular business. You'd feel that he was a pretty mean sort of enemy if he didn't try to puncture one of your tires! Then you can think and speak about him as a leprosy horned toad. But you can't think or speak about a friend that way when he gets under your skin. He's your friend! That's all there is to it—he did it, and he's a feeble minded ant eater, but he's still your friend!

"Only a dear friend would greet you when you're feeling peculiarly gay and fit with, 'Sa-a-y!' What's the trouble? You look positively green, old horse! Don't you feel well? You ought to take a long rest, that's right; I don't like that hollow eyed look of yours, perhaps it's your heart."

"Or come up behind you when you are looking calmly at some old prints in a window on the avenue and forgetting there are such things in the world as idiotic friends, and let his enormous flat nose hand down on you between your shoulders so that you think for the moment that a prehistoric mule with hoofs on him the size of the rubbish receptacles on the corners has planted them in the interior of your lungs! Only a friend could inspire such diabolical and streaming hatred that rises up in the wreck of your breast, when you manage to turn and see what hit you!

"Or if you happen to ask certain friends to go motoring several times and have them to dinner quite often, and you let two or three Sundays go by without asking them, it is only dear friends who would, on meeting you next time, greet you with a Hudson Bay expression and a bucket of sarcasm!

"Or, speaking of the sex that is responsible for all the posts, who but a true and tried friend would put over to her friend, 'Oh, Camille, you were such a pretty girl as a young girl, and you did have the loveliest clothes!'"

MEDICINE HAT.

The Indian of From Whom the Name of it Was Named.

Not many persons know what was the origin of the strange name borne by the Canadian city that Mr. Rudyard Kipling once called "the city born lucky."

The word "medicine" means more to an Indian than to us. We think of it as meaning something nasty that is good for us, but the Indian distinguishes as "good medicine" and "bad medicine" anything that he fancies will change his fortunes for better or for worse. Imagine that Lo is hunting antelope and meeting with no success. Presently he finds an empty cartridge shell or the top of a tomato tin, and shortly afterward he gets a shot at his game. Can he doubt that the piece of tin or the shell gave the luck? Not he. He wears that fragment of tomato tin or empty shell about his neck with his other jewelry, and it is "good medicine."

Several years ago there was a Black-foot chief who lived in the vicinity of Seven Persons River, where now stands the city of Medicine Hat. He and his tribe were fond of hunting and of making war on their enemies, the Cree. This chief always wore a head-dress of feathers that he called his "medicine hat," for he thought that it brought him good fortune.

It was a dark day for the chief when he last met the Cree at the place where now stands the growing city. He and his men fell upon the enemy with great bravery and even put them to ignominious flight. But just then a gust of wind whirled out of the west, caught the magic hat and tossed it into the swift running Saskatchewan river. Instantly the poor chief lost all confidence in himself and his cause, and with victory in his hand he forbore to grasp it, but fled over the plains toward the Rockies, followed by his tribe.—Youth's Companion.

Voltaire's Quick Wit.

When Voltaire was living in London a crowd gathered to mob him as he passed along the street. For what reason? Because he was a Frenchman. Boldly confronting the mob, he mounted a stone and addressed them. "Brave Englishmen," he cried, "am I not sufficiently unhappy in not having been born among you?" This speech was so effective that the crowd carried him on their shoulders to his lodgings.

His Comparison.

"When you eat be careful to leave off hungry," is advice that is very often given to children at the dinner table, but seldom received in an obedient spirit.

The caution was repeated not long since to a youngster of vigorous appetite.

"Pshaw!" he said. "You might as well tell me to wash my face and be careful to leave off dirty."

A Feminine Failing.

"Sometimes my little girl says she is eight; at other times she says she is six. I don't understand it; there must be something wrong with her."

"I wouldn't worry. I know plenty of older females who can do no better."—Kansas City Journal.

Disappointed.

Regulations relative to the production and sale of Milk, adopted by the Board of Health of Weymouth, to become effective July 1, 1915.

CHAPTER 744. ACTS OF 1914.

AN ACT RELATIVE TO THE PRODUCTION AND SALE OF MILK.

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any producer of milk or dealer in milk to sell or deliver for sale in any city or town in the commonwealth any milk produced or dealt in by him without first obtaining from the board of health of such city or town a permit authorizing such sale or delivery. Said boards of health are hereby authorized to issue such permits after an inspection, satisfactory to them, of the place in which and of the circumstances under which such milk is produced, has been made by them or by their authorized agent. Any permit so granted may contain such reasonable conditions as said board may think suitable for protecting the public health and may be revoked for failure to comply with any of such conditions. No charge shall be made to the producer for the permit or for the inspection of the dairy where the milk is produced.

SECTION 2. In case any permit so granted is revoked, the board revoking the permit shall immediately send notice of the revocation to the state board of health, and the state board of health shall at once inform the boards of health of other cities and towns in the commonwealth where, in its judgment, milk produced by the dairy to which the permit relates would be likely to be sold or delivered for sale, and the state board of health shall also give notice of such revocation to any dealer in milk who, in the judgment of the board, would be likely to purchase milk from such dairy; and upon receipt of such notice it shall be unlawful for any dealer so notified to sell or offer for sale in this commonwealth milk from the said dairy.

SECTION 3. After a permit has been revoked, it may be renewed in the same way in which the original permit was issued, in which case the same form of notification shall follow as is required in the issuance of the original permit.

SECTION 4. Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for each offence.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the state board of health to enforce the provisions of section two of this act.

SECTION 6. It shall be the duty of the inspectors of milk appointed by the boards of health of cities and towns to enforce the provisions of section one, so far as relates to the milk supply of their respective cities and towns.

The following is the scale of points adopted by the State Board of Health and endorsed by the Official Dairy Instructors' Association; and by which, the stock, methods and all equipment of all producers of, and dealers in milk in Weymouth shall be judged and marked.

FOUR WYOMOUTH BOYS PICKED

Brockton Times South Shore League All Star Nine Includes Gorman, C. Condrick, Gloster and Bates of This Town.

In its issue of Tuesday, June 15th, the Brockton Times picks the following all-star nine from the players of the South Shore league:

Player: School: Ford c Rockland; Berquist p Carroll 15; Gloster 3b Brockton; Gorman 2b Brockton; Weymouth; Weymouth; Quincey; Larkin ss Weymouth; Bates lf Weymouth; Johnson cf Brockton; C. Condrick rf Weymouth.

In commenting on the selections, the Times writer has the following to say concerning the Weymouth selections:

"Capt. Gorman of Weymouth has no competition for second base. He is in a class by himself as a second baseman in the South Shore league. He is a clean and heady fielder and a wicked man in a pinch. He is also an ideal leader, and is selected as captain.

"Gloster of Weymouth is the choice for third, although that position seemed to be minus players of A1 high school caliber. Gloster is a worker, and is fast on the bases. He also covers bunts well and is an average stickler.

"Bates and Con Condrick of Weymouth and Johnson of Brockton are the outfield selections. All three are hard hitters, although Condrick appeared woefully weak against Berquist. Against the Brockton pitcher only, however, and this was due to the fact he is a left-handed hitter. Johnson is a timely hitter and fast on the bags, while Bates hits them hard and long. All three are good gardeners."

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE.

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Weymouth Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorser who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twice-told and confirmed, with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It's from a Weymouth resident.

Peter Fowler, 17 Norfolk street, Weymouth, says "I suffered severely from a lame back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back strong and regulated the kidney action. I recommend them to anyone suffering from the trouble I had." (Statement given May 5th, 1913.)

On May 21st, 1915, Mr. Fowler said: "I have to do heavy lifting in my work, but am free from any sign of weak kidneys I use Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, however, and they keep my back strong and the action of my kidneys as it ought to be."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fowler had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Breakfast Table Revelations. To girls about to marry one would tender the advice that they study their intended victim at breakfast. If he is one feeding like forty, reject him as the direct descendant of Circe's herd of swine. If he is melancholy, beware of the abrupt curves of his temperament. If he is boisterous and facetious, remember that an empty drum gives the greatest reverberation and a chatterbox at 8 a. m. is as tiresome as chattering at 3 in the morning. By their breakfasts, my sisters, ye shall know them.—London Saturday Review.

Missing Marks. "I saw a stage Englishman in a play last night who didn't use the adjective 'bally.'" "Is that so?" "Yes. And he didn't say 'My word' either."

"Strange. At least he wore a monocle?" "No."

"Then how in the deuce did you know he was a stage Englishman?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cause and Effect. "I wonder why it is so damp and foggy in London?" "It is the fault of their government."

"How do you make that out?" "They have such long reigns there."—Baltimore American.

The School of Experience. The average man never fully realizes the truth of the adage about a fool and his money until after he has bumped up against some other man's game.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Mean Question. "I have been to consult a beauty doctor about my complexion." "Does he hold out any hope?"—Kansas City Journal.

Also Some Leveler. Love is not the only thing that can level ranks. For instance, there is leaving a duke out of father-in-law's will.—New York World.

The motor cyclist failed to slow down to any extent when the car stopped, and evidently didn't see Officer Goughin until the latter was nearly directly in his path. The officer detained the motorist until he ascertained whether the speeder had a license, which the man did not have with him. He was taken to the Central police station and booked as driving without his license. He speedily secured bail and appeared in the Quincy court last Monday morning.

IN MEMORIAM Whereas, Almighty God in His divine wisdom has deemed it opportune to remove from our ranks our beloved friend, GEORGE C. TORREY, Therefore, be it resolved, that we, his late associates on the Planning Board, while expressing submissively to the will of God, express our deep regret at the demise of a member whose influence was great in every move which pertained to good citizenship and whose works were such that every cause which he undertook was benefited by his connection with it.

Resolved, That, while mourning his loss, we extend to his family and friends our heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow, and we unite our prayers with theirs for the happy repose of his soul.

Resolved, That, as a mark of respect to the memory of our late brother, a copy of these resolutions, suitably engrossed, be presented to his family.

WEYMOUTH BEATS PORTLAND.

Weymouth Wins a Fast Game From Portland. Callahan's Pitching Being the Main Feature.

Weymouth High defeated Portland, Me., High at Clapp's field, Saturday afternoon, 1 to 0, in a well-played game. The game was a pitcher's battle between Morgan of Portland and Callahan of Weymouth.

In the fourth inning, Portland looked like scoring, but Fraher's throw to Gloster nipped the man at third. In the sixth, with two on, Callahan fanned the next two batters and stopped all chance of scoring.

In the sixth, Weymouth scored the only run of the game. Talbot hit to Waldron who muffed his fly and Talbot reached first. He then stole second and went to third on Hamilton's poor throw and scored on Fraher's hit.

The features of the game were the pitching of Callahan, Fraher's throw and Bates's fielding for Weymouth. Morgan, the Portland pitcher, was the bright star of the visitors.

The summary:
Innings 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Weymouth H. S. 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 —1

Cape Visitations by Assembly Officers I. O. O. F.

Mrs. Mary C. Grainger, Vice-President of the Rebekah Assembly has recently been visiting several Cape Lodges in company with the President and her Marshal.

The Lodges gave their Grand officers welcomes with exemplification of the degree Hyannis, Harwich, Orleans, and Provincetown were in turn visited and at the last place the party visited the Pilgrim Monument, the corner stone of which was laid by Theodore Roosevelt and dedicated two years later by Ex. Pres. Taft. A description by one of the ladies says "that every shaft in the Union is represented in the state and many cities and towns, Weymouth included, have memorial tablets set in the interior wall of the shaft."

MARRIED IN 1865.

Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Buckley.

Surrounded by their children and grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Buckley celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday, June 20th. They received many presents, mostly gold, while relatives, friends and neighbors sent flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckley were married in the Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston, June 20, 1865, by Rev. Father James Blenkinsopp, and lived in South Boston until 14 years ago, since which time they have made their home in North Weymouth.

Mr. Buckley was born on Fort Hill in Boston in 1834, and moved to South Boston at an early age. He was engaged in the plumbing business in that district until his retirement in 1901. Mrs. Buckley was Ellen A. Gleason, of a family well known in the drug trade in Boston years ago. She was born in Cambridge, but her family moved to South Boston when she was a child.

They have three children living, William L. and Joseph E. Buckley and Mrs. John B. Killeen, all of North Weymouth.

Farewell Party.

Tuesday evening of this week, Joshua E. (Doc) Fabyan, the popular physical director at the Clapp Memorial Association, was tendered a reception by about 100 of his friends at the C. M. A. building, East Weymouth.

Dancing, games and orchestral music made up the evening's program, and ice cream and cake was served by those in charge.

During the course of the evening's entertainment, Fred V. Nolan, on behalf of many friends, presented "Doc" with $50 in gold.

"Doc" leaves us July 1st, and while we all shall miss him, we wish him all the prosperity possible in whatever line his future life may lead him.

Does Your Spine Shiver?

"A shivering spine," said a psychologist, "is the one infallible proof of an artistic temperament. Does a shiver run up and down your spine when you listen to beautiful music or read a lovely poem or look at a superb painting? If not the gates of art are closed to you forever. All great artists and all good critics experience this shivering sensation of the backbone before a worthy work of art. Some of these men use the shiver as a measure. The work that does not evoke it they pronounce a failure. My own spine shivers best to music. The violin solo that precedes the last act of Massenet's 'Thais' sets up in me a tremolo movement that wrinkles the back of my coat."—Exchange.

Napoleon as an Editor.

The Almanach de Gotha was already of sufficient importance over a century ago to prompt a dispatch from Napoleon. On Oct. 20, 1807, he wrote to Champany, his foreign minister, complaining that "the latest edition of the Almanach de Gotha is full of errors, no account having been taken of the changes wrought by me in Germany. Tell the minister from Gotha to call on you and inform him that this must be set right in the forthcoming edition. Insist on seeing the section devoted to Germany before the edition is published."

One of Many.

"What kind of work could you possibly do around an office?"
"I'm a kind of all around handy man, mister. I kin hold a door open, light a match for ye, look out an' see if it's rained, call a taxi, drop letters down the chute an' tell folks yer out when ye ain't."—Life.

Speaking of Sponges.

"I see in the paper here that the largest sponge ever found is three feet across and ten feet in circumference."
"That's just about Uncle Squeezly's size, isn't it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Couldn't Expect Him To.

Lady—'I'm afraid you don't like work, my good man. Tramp—How kin I, mum? Work's wot killed my poor wife."—Boston Transcript.

Ominous.

First Small Boy—We'd better be good. Second Small Boy—Why? First Small Boy—'I heard the doctor tell mother to take plenty of exercise."—Los Angeles Examiner.

Word of Caution.

"May I say just a word before you impose sentence?" asked the street railway magnate. "Well, what is it?" snapped the court. "Please remember, your honor, that you are imposing sentence and not granting me a franchise," he cautioned, fearing for the worst.—Buffalo Express.

With the stroke of twelve last night, the final event of another scholastic year was brought to a close. For, at that time, the graduation exercises of the class of 1915 were completed, and the curtain went down on one of the most successful years in the history of our schools. It is reported, unofficially, that nearly twenty two hundred pupils advanced to higher grades in their course of education.

The most interesting affair of the day occurred at the High school, where thirty two students were graduated, and a reception was given by them to their friends last evening. The weather was sufficiently good to insure a large and enthusiastic audience at the exercises of the day.

Long before two-thirty, those who were not favored with reserved seats began to fill in the long rows at the rear of the assembly hall. From one fifteen until the time of opening the exercises, the great flow of relatives and friends of the graduates was attended to by the corps of ushers, who succeeded in handling the crowd in an admirable way.

When the opening chord of the recessional was struck, at two-thirty-two, the whole of the available seating and standing place of the great hall had been taken, while many were seated in the two side rooms and others were standing in the corridors and entrance ways.

The recently adopted idea of having the undergraduates come in from both sides of the hall was carried out again this year and consequently the two hundred and fifty odd members of the three lower classes were soon easily and conveniently seated.

With the class marshal, Almon Deane at their head, the class of 1915 first came into the hall, and then came the sophomores and juniors. After the undergraduates had been satisfactorily seated, the class of 1915, escorted by the class marshal, came to the stage, where they received a grand ovation from the large audience gathered there to witness their last hours in Weymouth High school.

The thirty-two members of the class made a pretty picture indeed, as they were grouped on the stage, with the young ladies charmingly gowned in white, on one side, and the young men in their dark suits and light scarfs on the other. The artistic decorations of potted plants and cut flowers, the class insignia and motto "Nil sine Numine" on the walls, made the scene much more beautiful.

After the graduates and the audience had quieted down, the following program was carried through, much to the credit of the school and to the interest of those attending:

Valedictory Address
Miss Olive Sylvester

Presentation of Diplomas Class Ode Benediction

There was no outside-speaker this year, the program being carried out entirely by the students, and the change seemed highly satisfactory to all.

Miss Avis Loud of South Weymouth gave a most brilliant and able salutatory address on the subject: "World wide Peace." Her essay showed careful and hard study and her delivery was enhanced by the charm of personality. No more pleasing address than that of Miss Loud's was ever given by any graduate.

The valedictory address by Miss Olive Sylvester of East Weymouth was both interesting and well delivered, and like Miss Loud, she received a great burst of applause at the close of her essay. The subject of the valedictory was, "The Panama Pacific Exposition."

A class oration was made by Ralph Talbot of South Weymouth. His theme was "Ideals."

In this composition the author showed himself as a young man of lofty ideals and no doubt has the ability to work up to his ideals. In the delivery he also captured the audience by clear articulation and magnetic power of commanding attention.

If the class of 1916 has a young man of his calibre they need not go out of town for a graduating oration.

The chorus work of the whole school was a decided feature of the graduation and each selection was highly applauded. Also the school orchestra came in for its share of the applause, its rendering of "The Frolics of Cupid" being especially delightful. This orchestra was formed several years ago under the guiding hand of James W. Calderwood, supervisor of music in Weymouth public schools. At present the orchestra consists of Miss Marjorie Keith, Miss May Hanley, Miss Jeanette Shaw, Percival Ames, Fred Granger, Frank Rand, Norman Dizer, Roger Burgoyne, Edward Bates, Frank Vender and Charles Gibson. The entire musical part of the program was in charge of Mr. Calderwood.

At the conclusion of the valedictory address, the presentation of diplomas took place, and there was little in the affair to let the ordinary observer know that each one who received a certificate, did so only after four long years of work, covering two hundred days in a year. The lot of presenting the documents fell to Mrs. Sarah S. Howe this year, and after a

TOWN BUSINESS.

The town business, which at present is the most interesting one, is the new school house in Ward 3. There was a congested condition which needed relief. A few hundred dollars in repairs at the Tufts building and an addition of two rooms to the Hunt school building would have afforded the immediate necessary relief but it would have been only a temporary matter.

People looking for the future thought it advisable and economy to build for the future as well as for the present and urged an up-to-date 14 room building which would fill the want of many years.

The town meeting of March last after discussing the matter a long time voted $43,000 for what was neither one thing or the other i. e., an 8 room building and made the school committee the executors of that vote. That committee has got as far as plans and specifications but are "up against it."

It will need more money or a modification of the work mapped out. Result—Lack of harmony in the board and request from the Citizens' association of Ward 3 not to sign the contract until an investigation has been had and Friday night, the 25th, (tonight) a hearing will be had at the Town office.

There was but little of public interest at the Monday meeting of the selectmen. Engineer Whiting submitted his prepared plans for the rebuilding of Washington street and the selectmen are considering methods for constructing the same.

Edward A. Stone and Geo. H. Gross were appointed as special police.

Complaints were filed against the dogs of H. P. Tilden and A. W. Poulin as being vicious as in both instances people have been bitten by them. In the former case it is ordered that the dog be restrained and in the latter, officers are ordered to take legal action, as the dog was being kept without a license.

Nash—Dorey.

The marriage of Miss Maud E. Dorey daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Dorey, of South Weymouth and Arthur B. Nash son of Mrs. Alice A. Nash, also of this town, was solemnized at the groom's home at 833 Front street, on the evening of June 24th at 8 p. m.

Rev. Ora A. Pike pastor of the Union Congregational church performed the ceremony.

Owing to a recent bereavement in the groom's family only the immediate families of the couple were present, later however a reception will be held at their new home.

After the wedding the couple took a trip to Atlantic City N. J., after which they will reside at 238 Hemenway street, Boston.

Monday Club.

Mrs. Edwin R. Sampson, Mrs. James Jones, Mrs. Albert Humphrey, Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees, Mrs. Abbie E. Beals and Miss Lillian Curtis motored to Marion on Thursday to attend the Federation of Women's Clubs at that place.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE.

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Weymouth Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorser who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twice-told and confirmed, with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It's from a Weymouth resident:

Peter Fowler, 17 Norfolk street, Weymouth, says "I suffered severely from a lame back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back strong and regulated the kidney action. I recommend them to anyone suffering from the trouble I had." (Statement given May 5th, 1913.)

On May 21st, 1915, Mr. Fowler said: "I have to do heavy lifting in my work, but am free from any sign of weak kidneys. I use Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, however, and they keep my back strong and the action of my kidneys as it ought to be."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fowler had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Most green things are just jumping now but it is a good time to look over the garden and see if there are any bare spots if so just put in a few cucumber seeds or possibly a few hills of corn it is not too late to get results.

When you buy a cow remember that a large udder is better than a long pedigree and much milk than the bluest blood.

Soak celery or tomato plants thoroughly for several hours before transplanting. This will enable you to carry more dirt with the plant.

The primitive hen laid about two dozen eggs a year. Five years ago a few hens were laying between 150 and 200 eggs a year. Last year whole flocks were laying an average of close to 200 eggs and one hen had 303 eggs to her credit.

Remove the harness and heavy collars from the horses during the noon hour. You will note the difference in their work in the afternoon.

Watch closely the melons already planted. Cover them with cheese-cloth covered boxes until they are tough enough to withstand the striped beetle. It is not too late to plant melon seeds, in the northern states.

Only too often do farmers compel themselves to struggle through life with poor tools, poor buildings and worse household equipments in order that they may save up money with which to buy more land, when the facts are they do not want and can not use more land.

A farmer can keep a good table at less cost than any one else. He can keep an orchard with all kinds of fruit, a garden with all kinds of vegetables; in fact, anything that can be grown he may have it fresh at his own door and at the actual cost of production.

Just at this time of the year the farmer has plenty of work on hand and work that needs prompt attention but the work needed in the garden is that which he can least neglect. His living depends on it, or, at least, he ought to think so, and act on the belief.

One of the qualities of the soy bean that commends it to the stock feeder is its protein richness. The Virginia experiment station has found that the seeds when ground into meal may be substituted for equal amounts of linseed meal in feeding dairy cows.

While corn and soy bean silage constitute a balanced ration, it is not to be inferred that grain is entirely unnecessary where the silage is fed to dairy cows. But it has been found possible to reduce the grain ration considerably under these conditions and still maintain the milk flow.

In removing plants from beds it is well to thoroughly wet the surface a half hour before and lift the roots and all soil that may adhere by sticking down the trowel and pressing upward as with a lever. It is not advisable to put plants in water, as it washes the soil from the roots and causes the leaves to wilt more easily.

Swatting flies helps some, but not much. The best way to remove these carriers of typhoid and other diseases is to clean up their breeding places—piles of refuse about horse stables. Do it now and enjoy a flyless summer.

The "Swat the Rooster" campaigns which have been carried on in Missouri have resulted in much good. May 15 was designated as "Swat the Rooster" day, following which one produce firm in a Missouri town shipped a henless carload of poultry to an Eastern market. Three thousand five hundred old boys were crowded into one car and sent on their way to the soup-house.

Thinning is one of the most profitable orchard operations. Practical orchardists have given thinning a thorough trial, and have found it pays—decidedly. The annual pruning helps to thin the fruit. Many growers prefer to delay the hand thinning until after the "so-called" June-drop.

Inbreeding is nature's way of building up and maintaining pure races. It has been practiced to produce every breed in the standard and no bird that ever won a prize at a poultry show was ever produced without inbreeding to some extent. If inbreeding is necessary to produce outward conformation and feather, why is it not necessary to produce or intensify internal qualities? It is just as certain to do this as the sun is rise. There is but one way to intensify any character, be it form, feather or egg production and that is by inbreeding.

Picked Up at Sea
 By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

We were sailing on the Australian coast when a boat was espied by the lookout. She was an ordinary ship's lifeboat, open, and was dancing merrily on the waves in the bright sunlight. When she came nearer we counted nine men in her. She was heading for us, and the captain gave an order to slow down. As soon as she came alongside a man in the bow hailed us and asked us to take them aboard.

The captain questioned them, and they told him that they were members of the crew of a ship that had collided with another in a fog and had gone to the bottom. He asked how long ago that was and they said a week. Then he asked what had become of the officers and the rest of the crew and was told that they had gone down with the ship. There was only time to get out the one boat before she sank.

The story didn't appeal to the captain as being likely, but he could not refuse to take the men aboard and did so. As soon as they came aboard we saw that their faces were by no means attractive. They asked our captain for what port he was bound and when he said Melbourne I noticed that on the faces of some of them was a scared look, while others seemed to be saying to themselves, "Not if we can prevent it."

I made up my mind that the men were mutineers and had either been put off a ship or sunk a ship or something of the kind, but when they were put to work they showed such ignorance of everything nautical that I changed my opinion. That they were not what they purported to be was evident, but what they were we had no means of knowing.

Our ship was a small steamer, not needing a numerous crew. We usually carried eighteen men, including captain and mate, I being mate, but now we were reduced to twelve.

One evening one of our regular crew came to me and told me that the strangers had taken weapons from the ship's armory and hidden them in the hold. The captain was asleep in his cabin at the time, and I preferred to act on the information rather than wake him up. He was a headstrong man and was liable to give our enemies the advantage by some rash act.

I sent for the man who had been spokesman when we met them and asked him whether he and his men preferred to make some other port than Melbourne. He admitted that they would, but when I asked him where they would like to put in he said that they preferred not to stop at an Australian port at all. I told him to consult with his mates as to what they wanted and let me know.

I did this to put the strangers off their guard and gain time. It was evident, from their not wishing to go ashore in Australian territory, that they were criminals. After consulting with the others the leader came back and told me that they would like to be put out in a large boat we carried which was rigged with a sail and in part decked over. Of course they would need to be provisioned.

This was a dead giveaway on their part and showed that they were desperate, for they had no knowledge of navigation and would be at the mercy of the winds and waters. I pretended to accede to their request and directed that they come on deck and get the boat ready to be lowered. As soon as they went to work I sent men to collect the weapons they had stolen.

When this was done I stationed men in different parts of the vessel, all armed. Then I began to send the strangers in different directions for different articles they would need on their voyage. Some were sent for provisions, some for water, some for blankets, some for fuel.

I first ordered their spokesman, who was leader as well, to take two men with him and go down to the hold for some salt pork. He obeyed and three out of the nine men went below not to reappear again, for as soon as they got into the dark hold hands were clapped on their mouths and they were removed to the brig. As soon as it was reported to me that they had been captured I sent two more men to the sail room for canvas. They, too, were secured, and within twenty minutes from the time they had started to get the boat ready I had them all under lock and key.

When the captain appeared on deck the next morning and I told him that the strangers had stolen arms he looked serious. Then when I told him that I had the men secured he was astonished, not being able to understand how he could have slept through a mutiny. Finally when I gave him my plan and the manner of its accomplishment he reprimanded me for acting without his orders.

A few days later we reached port. I went to the municipal office and stated the case, to be told that nine persons serving terms at a prison near the coast had escaped. A boat was missing, and it was supposed they had taken it and put to sea. Government officers were looking for them, but thus far had seen nothing of them.

The men were taken in charge by the police and returned to the prison. Their leader told me before leaving that they had planned to take the ship the very night I executed the plan that resulted in their capture.

The arbitrators on the request of employees of the Bay State Street Railway for increase of wages have made their report and recommend an advance, the minimum of which is said to be 4 cent an hour and the maximum 1 1/2 cents an hour. Up to date we have seen no broad smile on the face of motormen or conductors on account of decision.

The office of the Secretary of State has been a busy place since Monday at which time the secretary announced that nomination papers for the primary ballot of Sept. 21st would be ready.

From the head of the ticket to the end papers were immediate called for from all parts of the state and candidates and their friends got busy. There is until August 15th open for the filing of the papers but at the end of the first week some are ready to go to the State House.

December 31st is down in the calendar as the end of the year, but of the 364 days which go before it every one of them is the end of the year to somebody or something. We would not call the schools of Weymouth a "thing," but, nevertheless, yesterday was in many respects the end of a school year, and it may now be summed up. As school years go to an outsider, who takes but little note of schools and school years, perhaps 1915 was not materially different from all other years, but to the 2,200 and more scholars, their parents and friends, and to the town it means much.

In the graded schools there have been exercises which were interesting and showed efficient work, especially so in the upper grade, which has been barred out of the "Old Time" pleasing graduating day feature, but, nevertheless, they made a good showing, and the next opening of the High school will have a response of a large number who heard the call to go higher.

Of the High school we might say much, but the story is well told in our report of the day's doing. We will only say this for the year just closed, the town got as much for its money as it ever did, and there is encouragement for the town to continue its liberal school appropriation.

WONDERFUL VACUUM.

Science Can Produce It Almost to the Point of Perfection.

Scientists have succeeded in getting what is practically a perfect vacuum—have succeeded in taking all the air out of a space except the one hundred and fifty millionth of it. As long as they had to deal with the old time so called suction pump very low vacuums were impossible on account of leakage. The mercury pump was relied on to give the better vacuums, but that took a long time indeed. Then the Gaede pump and before that the Geryck pump improved matters somewhat. The device now used is as ingenious as it is swift and reliable. Suppose that we have a sealed tube containing air. If we place this in liquid hydrogen the air in a few minutes becomes a solid in the bottom of the tube. If all the air were frozen we should have a perfect vacuum left, but air contains what the chemist calls "traces" of several inert and hard to freeze gases, two of which are helium and neon. The tiny amount of these rare gases found in the air is, of course, left in the space, and so a perfect vacuum does not appear. But helium has been liquefied also. As liquefied helium is the coldest thing obtainable, it will not freeze any more of itself.

To make the vacuum more complete, however, it was decided to put some charcoal in the tube. It had long been known that hot charcoal had the power to absorb or "occlude" gases, but little was known about its power when as cold as liquid air. A great surprise was in store for the first man to try it, however, for it was found that it absorbed a great deal more when very cold than when warm, in some cases seven or eight times as much. So the charcoal placed in the space absorbed a good part of the gases remaining, and the wonderful vacuum of .0000058 of a millimeter, the normal pressure of the air being 760 millimeters, was obtained.—Chicago Herald.

Two Different Effects

The quality of food is very largely determined by the ingredients in the baking powder with which it is made. Cream of tartar baking powders, such as Royal, add only healthful qualities to the food.

The cream of tartar of Royal Baking Powder as used in food has the same wholesome effect on the digestive system as the cream of tartar in grapes, from which it is derived.

On the other hand, it is in evidence that objectionable mineral residues exist in food made with alum or phosphate baking powders.

There is a clause on baking powder labels which names all the ingredients. Read it and let it guide you.

The class ode, which was sung after the presentation of diplomas, was unlike preceding odes in that the music as well as the words was written by a member of the class of 1915. Frank L. Vender, who has already published several pieces of music, was the composer of the ode. This young man has great talent along the musical line and intends to enter the New England Conservatory of Music in the fall. The words, written by Ralph Talbot, follow:

Father, Thine hours pass away—
The hours when we, Thy children part;
And all our dreams of yesterday
Are fading from each changing heart.

Almighty God, beneath Thy hand
Regretting former will and pride
And all preceding faults, we stand;
And parting, call on thee to guide.

Tomorrow dreams will rise again,
Greater from the days now past;
Fulfillment shall not be vain
When, Lord, in Thee we place our trust.

Guide and guard us through every task;
Hold us in reverence to Thy Word;
For all our future life, we ask Thy blessing on Thy children, Lord.

The exercises were closed by the benediction of Mr. Clark and the audience hastened to their homes to partake of hasty meals, and then the trip back to the High school for the evening's reception was begun.

The class of 1915 was one of the smallest classes to graduate in the annals of the school; yet its quantity in no way determined its quality, since its senior year was perhaps more successful than that of any other class.

The members were: Mary Louise Allen, Reginald Winthrop Bates, Rufus Edward Bates, Roger Merton Burgoyne, Everett Ellsmer Callahan, Lawrence Henry Caulfield, Cornelius Francis Condrick, Catherine Helen Cuniff, Almon Eugene Deane, Norman Elbert Dizer, Catherine Ursula Galvin, Vincent L. Ambrose Gorman, Ralph Nelson Griffin, Alice Loretta Gross, Marjorie White Keith, Avis Richmond Loud, Elsie Louise Maertins, Alfred Kenneth Martin, Margaret Dorothy McCarthy, Teresa Frances Nolan, Clarke Stuart Page, Althea Eleanor Parker, Julian Stuart Rea, Leonard Joseph Kelly, Olive Dyer Sylvester, Ralph Talbot, Evelyn Mabel Tibbetts, Alice Elizabeth Tony, Frank Leo Vender. Honor list, Olive Dyer Sylvester. Special certificates, Lillian Loretta Horan, Mary Margaret Mahoney, Willis Ludwig Rand.

The executive board of this year's class was one that kept hustling to "boom" the class in every way. The officers were: president, Reginald W. Bates; vice president, Almon E. Dean; treasurer, Avis R. Loud and secretary, Norman E. Dizer.

Promptly at five o'clock, after the students had rested somewhat from the excitement of the afternoon, a departure to the gymnasium was made, where Bates & Humphrey, the popular East Weymouth caterers, had prepared the banquet. The menu consisted of:

Roast Turkey
Chicken Salad
Lobster Salad Strawberries
Coffee
Ice Cream Punch
Sultana Roll

After the most important detail of the afternoon had been seen to, the president of the class, Reginald W. Bates of East Weymouth, called his class together and after a few appropriate remarks introduced the class historian, Julian Rea. Mr. Rea had quite a paper to read on the hours early last week at the St. Francis Xavier church.

Sally Vining is visiting her parents at their home on Central street.

Russel Shaw has gone to the Massachusetts General hospital for an operation.

Daniel Hart, the well known blacksmith, has purchased the 3-year-old colt Cochato which he intends to start at Old Colony driving club matinees.

There were eighteen children christened at the Universalist church last Sunday.

Miss Kitty Manger has gone to Northfield for the summer.

Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Rose will be at home next Monday afternoon and evening and will welcome their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hill of Detroit, Mich, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Emerson.

Henry Kohler and Miss Inez Allen will be married Saturday evening at the home of the bride on Main street.

past history of the class, and then he gave way to the prophets, Miss Teresa Nolan and R. Edward Bates, under whom the assembly succumbed. It is safe to say that if everything that was prophesied, happens to the members of the class of 1915 in the future, only a few remnants of the class will ever be able to attend their annual reunions.

The entire burden of preparing for and attending to the banquet rested on the following committee: chairman, Roger Burgoyne, Mary Mahoney, Catherine Galvin, Frank Vender and Leonard Kelly.

Immediately succeeding the banquet, the members of the class who were slated for the class play were corralled behind the scenes to make up for their one great presentation, while the other members of the class strolled around the building awaiting with keen anticipation the final round of the evening's festivities.

The great gathering which witnessed the afternoon's ceremonies began to gather again soon after seven o'clock in order to gain favorable seats for the evening's performance, and the corps of ushers, consisting of Frank Loud and Harold Burgoyne of the freshman class; Charles Palmer and George Curtin for the sophomores and Warren Clark and Philip Haviland of the junior class; had their hands full in escorting the many score of people to their seats.

A reception was held by the class from seven-forty-five to eight. A few minutes after eight Class Marshal Dean again escorted the graduates to the special section reserved for their use. The curtain went up on the first scene of the play as soon as the class had become seated. The play was a comedy in two acts, "Sally Lunn" and was presented by the following cast:

Kenneth Martin
Clark Page
Morton Glynn (a Yale Junior) Reginald Bates
Evelyn Tibbetts Mary Allen
Elsie Maertins
Vivian Winslow (a society girl)
Dorothy McCarthy

Clark Page, as Leo, carried his part extremely well and Mary Allen, who was Mrs. John Randolph (Sally) fulfilled the expectations of the audience. Elsie Maertins made an ideal aunt, while Evelyn Tibbetts and Dorothy McCarthy drew storms of applause for their clever acting. The parts of John Randolph and Morton Glynn, Yale men, were well taken by Kenneth Martin and Reginald Bates.

When the curtain went down at the close of the performance, the junior boys busied themselves clearing the floor for the annual dance of the graduating class. The committee in charge of the dance was chairman, Kenneth Martin; Alice Tony, Helen Cuniff, Marjorie Keith and Cornelius Condrick.

About two hundred couples, with President Reginald Bates and Miss Avis Loud in the lead, joined in the grand march. At the end of the march the dancing began and a well arranged order was carried through until midnight.

Maxim's orchestra furnished music for the dancing and the program of selections which the musicians gave was very pleasing to the dancers.

During intermission, Mr. Bean and a corps of assistants served refreshments in room nine.

Finally, at midnight, when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" floated out through the building, the gathering broke up, farewells were said and the happy throng left for home in special cars, autos and on foot.

The class of 1915 is no longer a senior class at Weymouth High; it has gone out into the world to experience the ways of the world. And whether or not the class finds life a time of trouble and sorrow, or merely a continuance of their joyous graduation season, we wish every member success in the coming years.

CHAPTER XIII.

One Secret Less.

Suddenly he faced Deborah again. The crisis of feeling had passed, and he looked almost cold.

"You have had advisers," said he. "Who are they?"

"I have talked with Mr. Black."

The judge's brows met.

"Well, you were wise," said he. Then, shortly, "What is his attitude?"

"Feeling that her position was fast becoming intolerable, she falteringly replied, 'Friendly to you and Oliver, but, even without all the reasons which move me, sharing my convictions.'"

"He has told you so?"

"Not directly; but there was no misjudging his opinion of the necessity you were under to explain the mysteries of your life. And it was yesterday we talked; not today."

Like words thrown into a void, these slow, lingering, half-uttered phrases seemed to awaken an echo which rung not only in his inmost being, but in hers. Not till in both natures silence had settled again (the silence of despair, not peace), did he speak. When he did it was simply to breathe her name.

"Deborah?"

Startled, for it had always before been "madam," she looked up to find him standing very near her and with his hand held out.

"I am going through deep waters," said he. "Am I to have your support?"

"Oh, Judge Ostrander, how can you doubt it?" she cried, dropping her hand into his, and her eyes swimming with tears. "But what can I do? If I remain here I will be questioned. If I fly—but, possibly, that is what you want—for me to go—to disappear—to take Reuther and slip out of all men's sight forever. If this is your wish, I am ready to do it. Gladly will we be gone—now—at once—this very night."

His disclaimer was peremptory.

"No; not that. I ask no such sacrifice. Neither would it avail. There is but one thing which can reinstate Oliver and myself in the confidence and regard of these people. Cannot you guess it, madam? I mean your own restored conviction that the sen-was stirring in its soil. This suggestion of the transference of the stick from hand to hand was not impossible. Only Scoville had sworn to her, and that, too, upon their child's head, that he had not struck this blow. And she had believed him after finding the cap; and she believed him now. Yes, against her will, she believed him now. Why? and again, why?

Once within the room, he became his courteous self once more. "Be seated," he begged, indicating a chair in the half gloom. As she took it, the room sprang into sudden light. He had pulled the string which regulated the curtains over the glazed panes in the ceiling. Then as quickly all was gloom again; he had let the string escape from his hand.

"Half light is better," he muttered in vague apology.

It was a weird beginning to an interview whose object was as yet incomprehensible to her. One minute a blinding glimpse of the room whose details were so varied that many of them still remained unknown to her—the next, everything swept again into shadow through which the tall form of the genius of the place loomed with melancholy suggestion!

She was relieved when he spoke. "Mrs. Scoville (not Deborah now) have you any confidence in Oliver's word? Has there ever been anything in his conversation as you knew it in Detroit to make you hesitate to reply?" the judge persisted, as she continued speechless.

"No; nothing I have every confidence in his assertions. I should have yet, if it were not for this horror."

"Forget it for a moment. Recall his effect upon you as a man, a prospective son-in-law—for you meant him to marry Reuther."

"I trusted him. I would trust him in many ways yet."

"Would you trust him enough to believe that he would tell you the truth if you asked him point-blank whether his hands were clean of crime?"

"Yes." The word came in a whisper; but there was no wavering in it. She had felt the conviction dart like an arrow through her mind that Oliver might slay a man in his hate—might even conceal his guilt for years—but that he could not lie about it when brought face to face with an accuser like herself.

"Then I will let you read something he wrote at my request these many years ago: An experience—the trial of one awful night, the horrors of which, locked within his mind and mine, have never been revealed to a third person. That you should share our secret now, is not only necessary, but fitting. It becomes the widow of John Scoville to know what sort of a man she persists in regarding innocent. Wait for me."

With a quick step he wound his way among the various encumbering pieces of furniture to his bedroom. Here he lingered so long that, without any conscious volition of her own she found herself on her feet, but she had not had time to reset herself when she beheld him approaching with the bundle of loose sheets clutched in his hand.

"I want you sit here and read," said he, laying the manuscript down on a small table near the wall under a gas jet which he immediately lighted. "I am going back to my own desk. If you want to speak, you may; I shall not be working." And she heard his footsteps retreating again in and out among the furniture till he reached his own chair and sat before his own table.

This ended all sound in the room excepting the beating of her own heart, which had become tumultuous.

Thank God! the manuscript was legible. Oliver's handwriting possessed the clearness of print. She had begun to read before she knew it, and having begun, she never paused till she reached the end.

I was fifteen. It was my birthday and I had my own ideas of how I wanted to spend it. My hobby was modeling. My father had no sympathy with this hobby. To him it was a waste of time better spent in study or such sports as would fit me for study. When on the day I mention I had a few hours of freedom, I decided to begin the remodeling in clay of an exquisite statue which had greatly aroused my admiration.

This statue stood in a forbidden place. It was one of the art treasures of the great house on the bluff commonly called Spencer's Folly. I had seen this marble once, when dining there with father, and was so impressed by its beauty that it haunted me night and day. The boy of fifteen would attempt the impossible. I procured my clay and then awaited my opportunity. It came, as I have said, on my birthday.

There was no one living in the house at this time. Mr. Spencer had gone West for the winter. The servants had been dismissed, and the place closed.

What to every other person in town would have seemed an insuperable obstacle to this undertaking, was no obstacle to me. I knew how to get in. One day in my restless wanderings about a place which had something of the nature of a shrine to me, I had noticed that one of the windows (a swinging one) overlooking the ravine moved as the wind took it. Either the lock had given way or it had not been properly fastened. If I could only bring myself to disregard the narrowness of the ledge separating the house from the precipice beneath I felt that I could reach this window and sever the vines sufficiently for my body to press in; and this I did that night. I let myself go—I had to—and immediately found myself standing upright in a space so narrow I could touch the walls on either side. It was a closet I had entered, opening into the huge dining hall, where I had once sat beside my father at the one formal meal of my life.

I remembered that room; it had made a great impression upon me, and some light finding its way through the panes of uncurtained glass which topped each of the three windows overlooking the ravine, I soon was able to find the door leading into the drawing room.

I had brought a small lantern in the bag slung to my shoulders, but I had not hitherto dared to use it on account of the transparency of the panes I have mentioned; but once in the perfectly dark recesses of the room beyond, I drew it out, and without the least fear of detection boldly turned it upon the small alcove where stood the object of my adoration. I knelt before the glimmering marble and unrolled my bundle of wet clay.

I began my work, then I began to realize a little the nature of the task I had undertaken and to ask myself whether if I stayed all night I could finish it to my mind. It was during one of these moments of hesitation that I heard the first growl of distant thunder.

But the thunder growled again and my head rose, this time in real alarm. A man—two men were entering by the great front door. I heard a loud laugh, and the tipsy exclamation of a voice I knew:

"There! shut the door, can't you, before it's blown from its hinges? You'll find everything jolly here. Wine, lights, solitude in which to finish our game and a roaring good opportunity to sleep afterwards."

The answer I failed to catch. I was simply paralyzed by terror. As the door of the room opened to admit them, I succeeded in shutting that of the closet into which I had flung myself—or almost so. I did not dare to latch it, for they were already in the room and might hear me.

"This is the spot for us," came in Spencer's most jovial tones. "Big table, whisky handy, cards right here in my pocket. Wait, till I strike a light!"

A gas jet shot up, then two, then all that the room contained. "How's that? What's a flash more or less now!"

I heard no answer, only the slap of the cards as they were fung onto the table; then the clatter of a key as it turned in some distant lock.

The bottles were brought forward and they sat down one on each side of the dusty mahogany table. The man facing me was Spencer, the other sat with his back my way.

"We'll play till the hands point to three," announced Spencer, taking out his watch and laying it down where both could see it. "Do you agree to that?—unless I win and your funds go a-begging before that hour."

"I agree." The tone was harsh; it was almost smothered. The man was staring at the watch; there was a strange set look to his figure; a pausing as of thought—of sinister thought, I should now say; then I never stopped to characterize it; it was followed too quickly by a loud laugh and a sudden grab at the cards.

"You'll win! I feel it in my bones," came in encouraging tones from the rich man. "If you do"—here the storm lulled and his voice sank to an encouraging whisper—"you can buy the old tavern up the road. It's going for a song; and then we'll be neighbors and can play—play—"

The bills had all gone one way. They fell within Spencer's grasp. Suddenly hard upon a rattling peal which seemed to unite heaven and earth. I heard shouted out:

"Half-past two! The game stops at three."

"Damn your greedy eyes!" came back in a growl. Then all was still, fearfully still, both in the atmosphere outside and in that within, during which I caught sight of the stranger's hand moving slowly around to his back and returning as slowly forward, all under cover of the table-top and a stack of half-empty bottles.

"I can buy the Claymore tavern, can I? Well, I'm going to," rang out into the air as the speaker leaped to his feet. "Take that, you cheat! And that! And that!" And the shots rang out—one, two, three!

Spencer was dead in his Folly. I had seen him rise, throw up his hands and then fall in a heap among the cards and glasses.

Then the man who stood there alone turned slightly and I saw his face. I have seen it many times since; I have seen it at Claymore tavern. He put the weapon back in his pocket and began gathering up the money. When every bill was in his pockets he reached out his hand for the watch. Then I saw him smile. He smiled as he shut the case, he smiled as he plunged it in after the bills.

Next moment I woke to a realization of myself and all the danger of my own position. I had the instinct to make a leap for the window over my head and clutch at its narrow sill in a wild attempt at escape.

But the effort ended precipitately. He was coming toward me—a straining, panting figure—half carrying, half dragging, the dead man who flopped aside from his arms. My senses blurred and I knew nothing till on a sudden they cleared again, and I woke to the blessed realization that the door had been pushed against my slender figure, hiding it completely from his sight, and that this door was now closed again and this time tightly, and I was safe—safe!

The relief sent the perspiration in a reek from every pore; but the icy revulsion came quickly. As I drew up knees to get a better purchase on the sill, heaven's torch was suddenly lit up, the closet became a pit of dazzling whiteness amid which I saw the blot of that dead body, with head propped against the wall and eyes—

Remember, I was but fifteen. The legs were hunched up and almost touched mine. The door—the door—there was my way—the only way which would rid me instantly of any proximity to this hideous object. I flung myself at it—found the knob—turned it and yelled aloud—my foot had brushed against him. I knew the difference and it sent me palpitating over the threshold; but no farther. Love of life had returned with my escape from that awful prison house, and I halted in the semidarkness into which I had plunged, thanking heaven for the thunder peal which had drowned my loud cry.

For I was not yet safe. He was still there. He had turned out all lights but one. He had not seen me and was going. I could hear the sound of his feet as he went stumbling in his zigzag course towards the door. Then every sound both on his part and on mine was lost in a swoop of down-falling rain and I remember nothing more till out of the blackness before me, he started again into view, within the open doorway where in the glare of what he called heaven's candles he stood, poisoning himself to meet the gale which seemed ready to catch him up and whirl him with other in-consequent things into the void of nothingness. Then darkness settled again and I was left alone with Murder—all the innocence of my youth gone, and my soul a very charnel house.

I had to re-enter that closet; had to take the only means of escape proffered. But I went through it as we go through the horrors of nightmare.

I simply did it and escaped all—lightning flash and falling limb, and the lasso of swirling winds—to find myself at last lying my full length along the bridge amid a shock of elements such as nature seldom sports with. Here I clung, for I was breathless, waiting with head buried in my arm for the rain to abate before I attempted a further escape from the place which held such horror for me!

But no abatement came, and feeling the bridge shaking under me almost to cracking, I began to crawl, inch by inch, along its gaping boards till I reached its middle.

There God stopped me.

For, with a clangor as of rending worlds, a bolt hot from the zenith, sped down upon the bluff behind me, throwing me down again upon my face and engulfing sense and understanding for one wild moment. Then I sprang upright and with a yell of terror sped across the rocking boards beneath me to the road, no longer battling with my desire to look back; no longer asking myself when and how that dead man would be found; no longer even asking my own duty in the case; for Spencer's Folly was on fire and the crime I had just seen perpetrated there would soon be a crime stricken from the sight of men forever.

In the flare of its tremendous burning I found my way up through the forest road to my home and into my father's presence. He like everybody else was up that night, and already alarmed at my continued absence.

"Spencer's Folly is on fire," I cried, as he cast dismayed eyes at my pallid and dripping figure. "If you go to the door, you can see it!"

But I told him nothing more. Perhaps other boys of my age can understand my silence.

Claymore tavern did change owners. When I heard that a man by the name of Scoville had bought it, I went over to see Scoville. He was the man. Then I began to ask myself what I ought to do with my knowledge, and the more I asked myself this question and the more I brooded over the matter the less did I feel like taking, not the public, but my father, into my confidence.

I had never doubted his love for me, but I had always stood in great awe of his reproof, and I did not know where I was to find courage to tell him all the details of this adventure.

There is one thing I did do, however I made certain inquiries here and there, and soon satisfied myself as to how Scoville had been able to come into town, commit this horrid deed and escape without any one but myself being the wiser. Spencer and he had come from the West en route to New York without any intention of stopping off in Shelby. But once involved in play they had got so interested that when within a few miles of the town, Spencer proposed that they should leave the train and finish the game in his own house. Whether circumstances aided them, or Spencer took some extraordinary precautions against being recognized, will never be known. But certain it is that he escaped all observation at the station and even upon the road. When Scoville returned alone, the storm had

Give the toll operator some clue to the supposed whereabouts of the salesman, touring automobile party, possible customer or client you want to talk to, and she will try to connect you.

The toll operator does some extraordinarily clever work in following up these clues. Tell her the name of the person you want, where he is likely to be or where normally he ought to be and there's more than an even chance she will put you in communication with him—and quickly, too.

There will be no charge for a particular party toll call if you are not connected to the person whose name you have given to the toll operator.

"Convince me; I am willing to have you, Judge Ostrander. But how can you do so? A shadow stands between my wishes and the belief you mention. The shadow cast by Oliver as he made his way towards the bridge, with my husband's bludgeon in his hand."

"Did you see him strike the blow? Were there any opportune shadows to betray what happened between the instant of—let us say Oliver's approach and the fall of my friend? Much can happen in a minute, and this matter is one of minutes. Scoville had a heart open to crime, Oliver not. This I knew when I sat upon the bench at his trial; and now you shall know it, too. Come! I have something to show you."

reached such a height that the roads were deserted, and he, being an entire stranger here at that time, naturally attracted no attention, and so was able to slip away on the next train with just the drawback of buying a new ticket. I, a boy of fifteen, trespassing where I did not belong, was the only living witness of what had happened on this night of dreadful storm, in the house which was now a ruin.

I realized the unpleasantness of the position in which this put me, but not its responsibility. If I were going to do anything I should have done it at first—so I reasoned, and let the matter slide. I became interested in school and study, and the years passed and I had almost forgotten the occurrence, when suddenly the full remembrance came back upon me with a rush. A man—my father's friend—was found murdered in sight of this spot of old-time horror, and Scoville was accused of the act.

I was older now and saw my fault in all its enormity. I was guilty of that crime—or so I felt in the first heat of my sorrow and despair. I may even have said so—in dreams or in some of my self-absorbed broodings. Though I certainly had not lifted the stick against Mr. Etheridge, I had left the hand free which did, and this was a sufficient occasion for remorse—or so I truly felt.

I was so affected by the thought that even my father, with his own weight of troubles, noticed my careworn face and asked me for an explanation. But I held him off until the verdict was reached, and then I told him I had not liked his looks for some time; they seemed to convey some doubt of the justice of this man's sentence, and I felt that if he had such doubts, they might be eased by this certainty of Scoville's murderous tendencies and unquestionable greed.

And they were; but as Scoville was already doomed, we decided that it was unnecessary to make public his past offenses. However, with an eye upon future contingencies, my father exacted from me in writing this full account of my adventure, which with all the solemnity of an oath I here declare to be the true story of what befell me in the house called Spencer's Folly, on the night of awful storm, September 11, 1895.

Long Drawn Out.
 Uncle Jeff, an aged negro driver of Augusta, was piloting several northern visitors around just after the first golf links had been put in there. Uncle Jeff was a little short in his knowledge according to St. Andrew, but long on local pride.
 "How many holes have they?" inquired a visitor, "eighteen?"
 Uncle Jeff pulled up to make his answer more impressive.
 "More'n dat, suh," he said. "Dey's got a passel er land, and de holes ain't bigger'n a tin can. I reckon dey's got a thousand holes already, suh."—New York Post.

First Sumptuary Laws.
 Laws regulating eating, drinking and dressing are almost as old as history itself. Nothing like exactness can be reached in the matter, but it is safe to say that it was in Egypt far back as 3000 B. C. that the first practical sumptuary statutes were passed. Among the Romans they first appeared in the celebrated "twelve tables." In modern times Charlemagne was the pioneer in sumptuary legislation.

A Bird That Bestows a Curse.
 The stonechat, a "soft billed" bird, is so called from the similarity of its alarm note and the striking together of two pebbles. In some parts of Scotland it is supposed to contain a drop of the devil's blood, and its nest is never taken because of the curse it is always promising.—Country Life.

Leisurely Tasmania.
 Leisure is regarded as so notable a characteristic of Tasmania that it bears the nickname of "the land of lots of time," or "the land of sleep a lot," while its inhabitants are called "tassies" and "jam eaters," the latter being an allusion to the island's great fruit farms.

Congregational Church Notes.

Last Sunday was observed as Children's Day at the Congregational church. The usual Sunday morning service gave way to the special program arranged. Rev. Dr. Edward T. Ford gave a sermon on the theme of "Nurture and Discipline," and baptized five children. The church chorus sang with Miss Ethel F. Raymond as organist. The Sunday school, under the direction of W. M. Reamy and a corps of teachers, gave a special program beginning with a processional by all the department followed by the chorus entitled "A Sunbeam," sung by the primary department of 60 voices. A surprised girls' choir of 14 voices sang "Skies of Summer," "Happy Days," "Scatter Sweet Flowers," and led the congregational hymns. The junior department of 40 members gave a class exercise in concert. Recitations were given by a large number of the scholars in different departments. The floral decorations of the church were especially fine and each scholar of the primary department was presented with a potted plant.

The usual Sunday evening services of the church will be omitted until further notice.
