Historical Saint Louis

By Miss Idress Head

HISTORICAL DATA.

Saint Louis was founded in the spring of 1764, by Pierre Laclède Liguest, a Frenchman, to whom and his associates the Spanish Government had given a monopoly of the trade with the Indians and his stepson, Auguste Chouteau. He chose this point because of its advantageous position—naming it Saint Louis in honor of Louis XV. of France, and his patron saint. Laclède landed at the foot of what is now Walnut Street.

For many years Saint Louis was called "Pain court," a nickname applied to it in derision, because of the scarcity of bread, due to the disinclination to farming among the French. In 1804 when Louisiana was ceded to the United States, there were only two American families in the town. There were only three streets at this time, La Rue Royale (Main), La Rue de l'Église (Church Street), now Second, and La Rue des Granges (Barn Street), now Third, and most of the 180 houses comprising the town were built along the first two.

Saint Louis was incorporated as a town in November, 1809, with a population of about 1,800, and as a city in December, 1822, with a population of 4,800, and covering an area of 335 acres. Now it embraces 40,000 acres, with a frontage on the Mississippi River of 20 miles, and a population of over 250,000.

For many years after the cession, the nearest post-office was Cahokia, Ill., where the mail arrived once a month, but in 1808, a post-office was established at Saint Louis, with Rufus Easton as postmaster.

The first record of unusually high water at Saint Louis was in 1756, the next 1785—called "L'Année des Grand Eaux" (the year of great waters)—equalled only by that of 1844, 1851, 1858, and possibly 1902, the last being in 1905.

The first steamboat, "The General Pike," arrived in Saint Louis in 1817, and landed near the foot of Market Street, commanded by Captain Jacob Reed.

The first paving with stone on edge was done by William Deckers in 1818, on Market between Main and the levee.

OLD SHOT TOWER.

In 1844, Ferdinand Kennett began the erection of a shot tower on Elm, between Main and Second Streets. At an elevation of 170 feet it fell, destroying several buildings. The material was then collected and a new site selected on Lewis, between Bates and Smith Streets, and the tower completed in 1847 at a height of 176 feet.

For many years this was a most profitable business, but later was entirely abandoned.

OLD COURT HOUSE.

Built in 1839 on Chestnut and Market, between fourth and Fifth Streets. The site was presented by Judge J. B. C. Lucas and Colonel Auguste Chouteau. The building is in the form of a Greek cross and of Doric order of architecture. From the summit of its imposing dome a magnificent view of the busy section of the city is obtained. The atrium is well repaid for the necessary labor of climbing the long winding stairway, by this bird's-eye view. The magnificent frescoes in lunette of the dome were by Carl Wimar in 1862, a Saint Louis artist of note, and restored in 1904 by Edmund H. Wuerpel.

This building is also made historic by the slave sales that took place on its steps during the Civil War.

And, too, on this site was located the whipping post of Saint Louis in early times.

CITY HALL.

Located on Washington Square, the City Hall Park, between Twelfth, Thirteenth, Market and Clark Avenue. Competitive designs were submitted for this building in 1892 by many architects, and the award made to George R. Mann, of St. Joseph, Missouri. Several years were spent in completing it. The exterior resembles in mass French Hotels de Ville, with pilasters, dormers, etc., executed with very fine and delicate silhouette. However, it is quite imposing. The interior, finished by A. B. Groves, have the walls of the Mayor's suite and other important rooms decorated by a St. Louis painter, F. L. Stoddard. In the Mayor's suite are mural decorations significant of the early history of St. Louis and Missouri. In the great central court of the building he has painted a series portraying Indian subjects.

Directly west of the City Hall is located the new Municipal Courts Building, acknowledged as being the foremost for its purposes in the country.

THE BIG MOUND.

At one time this mound at the northeast corner of Mound and Broadway was one of the most striking and remarkable features of the landscape of Saint Louis, and of the most remarkable archaeological remains in America, and with other surrounding smaller mounds, gave the town the title of "Mound City." This mound was about 30 feet in height and 150 feet in length. It was cut down in 1869 and many human remains were found at different depths below the surface. The French called it "La Grange de Terre" (earth barn), and a number of them had homes built on it, it covering at that time several blocks. An attempt was made at one time to use it as a public garden, with a pavilion on the elevated ground in the center, but because of the refusal of one man to do his part, the scheme fell through, and one of the city's most interesting monuments was destroyed.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

One of the memorable incidents in St. Louis history was the visit of the great Indian chief of the Ottawas, Pontiac, in 1763. He came to visit his friend, St. Ange de Bellelve, then governor, and was received with great honor. During his stay he went to Cahokia and was there murdered by an Indian, whom an Englishman bribed to kill him. His body was brought to Saint Louis and buried here, but in after years the location of his grave was unknown. In 1900 the St. Louis chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution erected a handsome memorial tablet to his memory in the great hallway of the Southern Hotel, at Fourth and Walnut Streets, near the location of his grave.

In September, 1906, the one hundredth anniversary of the return of the Lewis and Clark expedition up the Missouri through the West, the west, and in many respects, the greatest of all explorations undertaken by our government, a bronze tablet, to the memory of William Clark, was unveiled on the National Bank of Commerce Building, at the corner of Olive and Broadway.

This bank is located on the site of Governor William Clark's residence. The designing and erection of the tablet was done under the direction of the Civic League of Saint Louis, and the gift of the National Bank. The safe-keeping of the tablet is committed to the Missouri Historical Society.

Another tablet, marking the birthplace of the much-loved poet, Eugene Field, was unveiled

June 6, 1902, at 624 South Broadway, by "Mark Twain," one of America's greatest and Missouri's most famous authors. The ceremony was very simple, but witnessed by distinguished persons, among the guests being Count and Countess Rochembeau, the Count de Lafayette, the French envoys, and the officials of the World's Fair. This tablet, of bronze, which should have been erected at 28 Collins Street, Field's true birthplace, was the gift of about eighty members of the Authors Club, the design and execution being the gift of E. G. Gardin.

In 1895, the Current Topics Section of the Wednesday Club erected on the west side of Main Street, on the site of the Chouteau Mansion, a bronze tablet to the memory of Captain Louis St. Ange de Bellelve, who first established civil government in Saint Louis, January 21, 1766. On this same site, another tablet in marble was erected in 1903, by the Jefferson Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, commemorating an expedition from Saint Louis against Fort Joseph, Michigan, the nearest point flying the British flag, January 2, 1781.

Four tablets have been placed in the Missouri Historical Society, to the memory of Henry Shaw, founder of Shaw's Garden; Ralph Sellev, originator of the evening schools in St. Louis; Gerard B. Allen, prominent in business circles in Saint Louis, and founder of the Fulton Iron Works; and Major Henry S. Turner, a distinguished soldier, member of the legislature in 1858 and Assistant Treasurer of the United States in Saint Louis. On the site of the old High School, at Fifteenth and Olive, a tablet has been erected, by the former pupils.

SHAW'S GARDEN AND THE PARKS.

The most beautiful place in Saint Louis is Shaw's Garden, at Flora and Tower Grove Avenues, including about one hundred acres, enclosed by a stone wall, formerly the home of Henry Shaw, and by him dedicated to this laudable purpose. Here every variety of flower and shrub is developed to its highest perfection. The nothings and greenhouses are all arranged with scientific accuracy, filled with the finest specimens of rare and curious vegetation. Shaw's Garden is known the world over as one of rare beauty.

Adjoining this is Tower Grove Park, also established by Henry Shaw, who ornamented it with marble busts and the heroic bronze statues of Columbus, Humboldt and Shakespeare, the latter three by Von Mueller, and among the real art pieces of the city.

Saint Louis has 2,240 acres in parks, the largest being Forest Park, containing 1,371 acres, on the west of the city. It is traversed by fine driveways, through grounds made beautiful with forest trees, laken, flowers, shrubbery and landscape gardening. Directly in front of the Art Museum in the park is a colossal equestrian statue, "Saint Louis," by Charles E. Nuhous. There is also a statue of General Franz Siegel, by Robert Cauer, and near the main, and most attractive entrance, at Kingshighway, is a bronze and stone fountain by Romanelli.

Lafayette Park is the oldest park in the city, and the one devastated by the cyclone of May, 1896. Despite this, it is again a beautiful park. Here is a statue of Washington, and in the exact center one of Thomas H. Benton, the first senator from Missouri, flanked by three cannons, trophies of the War of 1776.

Lyon Park, named in honor of General Lyon of Civil War fame, is a small park of 10.92 acres, located on Broadway and Arsenal Streets, O'Fallon Park, overlooking the Mississippi River, gives a commanding view of the surrounding country. The main entrance is on Florissant Avenue.

Carondelet Park, of 180 acres, has been left practically in its natural state, contains a large lake and deer paddock and many rustic foot bridges, located on Alaska Avenue and Kansas Street.

THE MISSOURI HISTORICAL SOCIETY

now occupies a section of the Jefferson Memorial Building in Forest Park, being removed from the former home of Thomas Larkin, at 1600 Locust Street, once the fashionable residence section of the city. This building was the gift of James H. Lucas to the Society, and who was its first president in 1867. This Society has a large collection of interesting original manuscripts of French and Spanish days in Missouri, as original petitions of early residents of Missouri, original petitions for the incorporation of Missouri, original letters of the incorporation of the emigrants, suits, contracts, etc., in the French and Spanish. Also a large collection of Missouri relics of interest to visitors, among them the first church bell used in Saint Louis in 1770—the first printing press used west of Saint Louis, and the second west of the Mississippi, being the one used at Franklin, Mo., on which the "Missouri Intelligencer" was printed in 1819—the small cartons carried on the boats on the American Fur Company, up the Missouri River, organized in 1808, many oil paintings of prominent men, etc., etc. A new collection of much interest is that of Mr. M. V. Pabor, who has spent more than forty years in the collecting of Missouri relics.

Almost all the old historic residences have been destroyed, which is to be regretted, but the visitor will possibly find as much of interest in the modern homes as in the old ones, and which Saint Louis still is probably best shown, and in the magnificent public buildings. There are few, if any, cities that can boast of more beautiful residences. "Places," the oldest being Vandevanter Place, bordered on Grand Avenue, "Westmoreland," "Portland" and "Washington Terrace," being among the most beautiful. These have handsome entrance gates and landscape gardening. Possibly the most beautiful private residence in the city is that of Mr. W. K. Bixby, on Kingshighway and Lindell Boulevard. Mr. Bixby has a large collection of valuable original manuscript, for which he has an especial gallery. Mr. Charles P. Tetius also has a connecting gallery with fine collection of his residence in Westmoreland Place. Another beautiful residence is that of ex-Governor D. R. Francis, on Maryland Avenue.

HISTORIC RESIDENCES AND BUILDINGS.

The home of Laclède Liguest, the founder of Saint Louis, was built on Main Street, between Walnut and Market. After Laclède's death, it was purchased by Auguste Chouteau, who remodelled it, and it became known as the Chouteau Mansion. A corner room in this building was afterwards used as the first bank in Saint Louis, with Pierre Chouteau as president. The house was of stone and surrounded by a stone wall. In excavating for the cellar of this building, the soil was carried away by the Indians in their baskets. This is said to have been the home of St. Ange de Bellevue, when in Saint Louis at the home of General Lafayette. He also entertained in 1825, on his visit to Saint Louis. It is interesting to note that at this time the city officials had great difficulty in arranging for the entertainment of General Lafayette financially. At a meeting it was decided if the necessary funds could not be provided from the city treasury, some of the moneyed citizens would furnish the funds. Through the generosity of Major Pierre Chouteau, in furnishing his home, and Major Thomas Bidde and Judge James H. Peck, who furnished their harouches and hrraes, the elaborate entertainment of the General amounted to just $37. Now thousands are often spent on the entertainment of a distinguished guest.

The home of the first Governor of the Territory, General John Wilkinson, was in Saint Louis. He had taken a very active part in the affairs of the country before his appointment, being a man of strong personality and pleasing address, but after his appointment as governor became unpopular and was eventually accused of treason, and in the minds of many convicted. It was during his administration in 1805 that Aaron Burr visited him in Saint Louis.

The Grant residence, at Eighth and Chouteau Avenues, a stately building, bordering on three streets, was used in 1861 as the headquarters of the Western Department, and occupied by General Fremont in that year. Here General Grant was given his first command, and the death of Donatien Dix, General Grant and others had an additional historic interest.

The house known as the McNair house, at one time the home of Alexander McNair, the first Governor of the State of Missouri, and long one of the landmarks of the town, was located on the southwest corner of Third and Spruce Streets, a two-story frame dwelling.

William Carr Lane, the first Mayor of Saint Louis, owned a two-story frame dwelling on South Main Street, and resided there at the time he was Mayor.

Dr. William C. Carr, who built the first two-story frame house in Saint Louis, owned a number of houses; one of these, on Second Street, is still standing, as are a few others of these earlier homes before it became a city.

The first legislature was held in St. Louis in the Missouri Hotel, and here the first constitution was framed.

"Cracker Castle," on St. Ange and Chouteau Avenues, was for many years a place of interest, because of having been built with money made by the owner in selling crackers (hard tack) to the soldiers during the Civil War. Built about 1869, and was at that time a magnificent residence.

EADS BRIDGE.

Extending from the foot of Washington Avenue to East Saint Louis, was completed in 1874, having taken ten years for its construction, at a cost of 10,000,000. The entire length is 6,220 feet, including the tunnel under the city, 11,000 feet in length. Its width is 54 feet, and it stands 55 feet above high water. The center span is 520 feet, the two end ones 502 feet. The railway passages run beneath the carriages and are each 15 feet in the clear, and 18 feet high. The bridge is always illuminated at night, and is an imposing sight. Other bridges crossing the Mississippi at St. Louis are the Merchants, the McKinley, and the new Municipal Free Bridge, which is under construction.

THE ART MUSEUM.

An attractive building, located in Forest Park, was built during the World's Fair as a permanent building—Cass Gilbert, architect. Lovers of art will enjoy viewing the comprehensive collection of the works of American sculptors in the form of casts, bronzes and marbles, perhaps the best in existence; the fine collection of paintings, among them the work of the American artists LaFarge, William M. Hunt, Benjamin West, Parhrell Dewing, et al.; a large collection of pottery and carving. On the Museum building itself are two bronze griffins, by A. Phimister Proctor, and five symbolic statues, by Elwel, Linder, Jaegers, Gellert, and Heber, and three high reliefs, by Herman MacNeil, were placed in 1908 over the front entrance, representing "Music," "Architecture," and "Literature."

LIBRARIES.

The Central Library, erected at a cost of $1,650,000, covering the entire block between Thirtieth, Fourteenth, Olive and Locust Streets, and fronting on Olive, a sunken garden being one of the attractive features. It is constructed of gray granite—Cass Gilbert, of New York, architect. The style of architecture is of the early period of Italian Renaissance, a type of architecture which is peculiarly simple in its form, and relies upon its proportions and upon the refinement of its details for its beauty. The building consists of a basement, main story and an upper story. The design of the main story is that of a great simple arcade which is carried consistently around the three principal fronts of the building. Inscription tablets are located in the lower third of these arches where on the names of those most eminent in literature can be placed. The main entrance is in the center of the Olive Street front, and consists of three large arches with bronze gates. This entrance is reached by a very broad flight of granite steps and is adorned by sculpture. Inside of this main entrance is a vaulted hallway leading to the delivery room, while at the right and left of this hallway are located the periodical room and the art history room. The delivery room is the great feature of the interior of the building. It is about fifty feet wide, about one hundred and nineteen feet long and thirty-six feet high.

There are other branch libraries located in various parts of the city, such as the Barr Branch, Cabanne Branch, Carondelet Branch, Crunden Branch, Divoll Branch, Soulard Branch and the Municipal Reference Branch.

THE MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.

This building, costing $2,000,000, is one of the handsomest for this purpose in the world, fronting on Olive Street, and extending from Pine and Chestnut streets. It is built in modern Italian style, of Warrensburg (Missouri) limestone, Doric portico, emblematic figures sculptured in relief—the grand doorways and grand hall, one hundred feet wide, two hundred and twenty-six in length, and seventy-nine feet high. The ceiling is freacedo and adorned with panels, within which are graceful figures symbolical of the nations of America, and is supported by iron brackets encircle the Great Hall, to which visitors are admitted.

MCDOWELL COLLEGE.

Afterwards called "The Old Gratiot Street Prison," located on Eighth and Gratiot Streets, was built by Dr. J. N. McDowell, for the accommodation of the faculty and students of the Missouri Medical College. It was seized during the Civil War by the military authorities and converted into a prison for political offenders and military prisoners, and from 1862 to 1865 many thousand men and women were imprisoned within its walls, not only confederate prisoners, but guerrillas, bushwhackers, bridge burners, rebel mail carriers, spies, federal deserters, robbers, murderers and criminals of every kind, as well as men of high official position, including senators, legislators and army officers. (Destroyed.)

STOCKADE AND FORT.

In 1773, during the Revolution, because of a report that the commandant at Mackinac was planning an attack on Saint Louis, a stockade was built to defend the town, made of upright posts set in two rows and filled in with earth. This defense completely surrounded the town, although extending only to Fourth Street, which was the western limit. It had a strong access, to the "commons" and "Common Field," and at either extremity was a fort commanded by cannon. In the following year, 1780, occurred the attack by the British and Indians, known as L'Annee du Grand Coup (year of the great blow).

This attack led to the erection of new fortifications. Beginning at Second Street, was a stone tower, and westwardly of it where Broadway and Cherry Street intersect a stockade, between which was another stone fort; to these were added a half-dozen square or cir-lar stones fortresses 40 feet in diameter and 20 feet high, connected with a high and stout stockade of cedar posts. These were kept supplied with ammunitions of war and well manned. One of them, the Old Tower, the Spanish fort, and the oldest fortification in the place, at about Walnut and Fourth Streets, afterwards served as court house and jail. (Destroyed.)

COLISEUM.

The corner-stone of the new Coliseum, at Washington and Jefferson Avenues, was laid August 22, 1908, by Mr. August Schlafly, president of the Saint Louis Coliseum Company.

This building, costing $300,000, has a seating capacity of fourteen thousand, and can readily care for twenty thousand if necessary. It is two hundred and eight by two hundred and ninety-one feet, and three stories in height, with fifty thousand square feet of floor space in the arena, and an additional ten thousand square feet in the basement. It is built of mottled granite brick, with terra cotta and stone trimmings—Renaissance in design. The interior galleries and balconies are constructed of reinforced concrete, possibly the first interior work of the kind in the country, making the building entirely fireproof, except the roof, which is lined with wood for the acoustic properties. The interior decoration consists principally of decorative lights, to which especial attention was given. The main entrance is on Washington Avenue, and two others on Jefferson Avenue.

The approaches and steps are of granite, the main entrance being treated in terra cotta, the ornamental parts in rather elaborate design, opening into a lobby walled with Italian marble, and decorated with ornamental plaster—the floor also of imported marbles. From this lobby, on either side, broad stairways lead to the upper balconies. These balconies are equipped with folding opera seats of mahogany with steel frames set in concrete. All the exposed surfaces of the interior are of face brick, mortar joints pointed. The arena has a sectional removable floor of hard maple.

The Coliseum is centrally located, and is designed for such gatherings as horse shows, trade exhibits, agricultural expositions, indoor circuses, balls, carnivals and musical and dramatic entertainments upon the larger scales.

The site is historic, covering the famous Uhrig's caves. These caves, thirty-five feet below the surface, in solid rock, were used by Mr. Uhrig for the storage of beer, hence the name. Afterwards, on this spot, the first summer garden of modern type was established in Saint Louis, in the sixties, by Chris Nunce, a German, and the name Uhrig's Cave was still retained. The place was conducted upon popular lines, and soon became a popular resort. A stage was erected and concerts given twice a week. In 1876 "Pat Short," the veteran manager of the Olympic Theater, took charge of Uhrig's Cave, and was the first to introduce high-class concerts and opera to an open air audience in Saint Louis. Possibly few know that Saint Louis is the original home of the summer gardens in America. The first open-air resort, opened by private enterprise, was the Vauxhall gardens, on the west side of Fourth Street, between Plum and Poplar Streets, and surrounded one of the oldest brick residences in the city, owned by Thomas C. Hildick. As early as 1823 this was a great place the Coliseum—thus reviving the first use of this spot for that purpose.

UNION STATION.

The largest in the world, covers 11 acres, extending from Eighteenth to Twentieth Streets, fronting on Market and extending back to Clark. All trains into and out of Saint Louis arrive and depart at Union Station. The grand central hall has a floor area of 8,800 square feet, the Midway is 606 feet by 50 feet, the train shed 630 feet by 606 feet. The power house covers an area of twenty acres. The building is Romanesque, by Theo. C. Link, the decorations by Louis V. Millet.

The new Post-Office is built near Union Station, at Seventeenth and Eighteenth and Walnut to Elm, covering three-fourths of a block. One million, four hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars were appropriated for this purpose. It is acknowledged as being the foremost and best equipped post-office in the United States.

UNIVERSITIES.

Saint Louis University, founded in 1823, makes it the oldest university in the city. In 1829 it was located on the west side of Ninth Street, between Washington and Lucas Avenue, but about 1887, with St. Francis Xavier's Church, was changed to Grand Avenue. The Saint Louis University, with its parochial residence, house of studies for its scholastics, and the beautiful church of St. Francis Xavier (the college church), one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in America, form a group of buildings rarely equalled in any city of any country.

Washington University, standing on an imposing elevation west of Forest Park, consisting of eleven buildings, constructed of the best red Missouri granite, in Collegiate Tudor Gothic style (Cape St. Edwards architects) covering 113 acres, Buedeker has well said, "Certainly the most successful and appropriate group of collegiate buildings in the New World."

SCENIC POINTS NEAR ST. LOUIS.

Creve Coeur Lake, about 13½ miles from Delmar Garden, was formerly the bed of the Missouri River. This magnificent lake, several miles in length, lies at the foot of a high cliff of surpassing artistic beauty. Through picturesque woodlands, interspersed with rustic seats and bridges, a scenic railway winds around the top of this cliff, and into the ravines, giving one an entrancing view. Boat riding is also provided for, where one may spend a delightful evening.

Meramec Highlands, about 20 miles from the city, attracts many who wish to get away from the noise and closeness of the city, and spend an enjoyable evening in the country air. Here one may dine at the Meramec Highlands Inn, and later enjoy the famed scenery along the Meramec River.

Jefferson Barracks, named in honor of Thomas Jefferson, whose death occurred just previous to the first occupation of the site by General Stephen W. Kearney, to whom belongs the honor of being the first immediate commander of troops, occupying this military post near Saint Louis in 1826, is located about ten miles below Saint Louis on the Iron Mountain Railroad. A tablet will soon be placed here as a monument to the Revolutionary soldiers buried in Missouri. This monument is in memory of Miss Louise Dalton who located these graves.

CHURCHES.

The Old Cathedral (Catholic) is one of the historic structures of the city, and a monument to the pioneer Catholic settlers. It is on Walnut and Second Streets, and marks the spot where was built the first church of logs in Saint Louis. Father Gibaunt celebrated the first mass. Through Bishop Rosati, who was a classmate of Gregory XVI, this church obtained favors which no other church has in the world, except the Basilicas in Rome. One of the most noteworthy favors granted by the Pope was an indulgence which is only granted to pilgrims visiting the seven Roman Basilicas. By special indulgences this indulgence may be gained by visiting the three altars in the Saint Louis Cathedral, though no other cathedral or church is so privileged.

Christ's Church Cathedral (Episcopal) at the corner of Thirtieth and Locust claims a certain interest as the mother church and cathedral of the Diocese of Missouri, and is the first parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church founded west of the Mississippi. The old articles of association, yellow with age, still hang in the Chapter room. Among the signers of this paper was Governor Clark, explorer of the great West; Riddick, member of the Territorial Council; Governor McNair, and William H. Ashley, Lieutenant-Governor of Missouri; Thomas Henton, and other prominent men. In this church, one of the finest parish churches of the continent, are a number of memorial windows, among them one to George Rogers Clark. The great organ is a memorial to Silas Bent, rector in 1863, and whose father signed the first town charter.

Rock Church (St. Alphonsus) on Grand Avenue, is another of the church buildings of note in the city.

A group of buildings on Kingshighway, including several churches, are well worth visiting. Among these, the Second Baptist Church, of brick, and First Church of Christ (Scientist), of granite, are noteworthy. St. John's (M. E. Church S.), developed in classic simplicity neither pure Greek nor pure Roman, but belonging to the Italian Renaissance of the fifteenth century, a style used by some of the finest churches in the world, is ideal.

The ornamentation chosen for the columns in the great northern and eastern facades are of the chaste Ionic type. The corner-stone was laid in 1901. Temple Israel, a magnificent building of stone, has recently been completed. The Tuscan Lodge (Masonic), by Albert Groves, representing Greek Doric style, and the Raquet Club, are also in this group of artistic buildings.

On Union, near Delmar, is another group—the Pilgrim Congregational Church, New High School, and William Clark School, Library and Artistic Guild. Near here, on Delmar and Clara, is the Central Presbyterian Church, by Mariner & of public resort, being used on the Fourth of July and other similar occasions.

It is thought these natural caves under the Coliseum may be utilized as a rathskeller, if proper ventilation can be provided for.

St. Louis' Basic Rock Is St. Louis' Business

Written by Roy B. Simpson.

Nearly every city has something about which to boast. Some boast about their beautiful parks. Others set themselves up as ideal home cities. Others talk of their institutions of learning, their points of historical interest, their manufactures.

St. Louis has all these things in abundance—parks, drives, and boulevards as beautiful as any other city in America.

We can point with pride to our 140 great educational institutions, including our wonderful public school system.

We can claim, in all truth and sincerity, that St. Louis leads the world in many different lines of manufacture and that she is the greatest distributing point for many other lines.

We like to talk about these things. We ought to talk about them in our homes, schools, churches, on the street, on the railway trains, and elsewhere. It is the best way for the true St. Louis spirit to express itself.

But the biggest thing in St. Louis—the rock on which this city is founded—IS ST. LOUIS BUSINESS.

St. Louis business methods are different from those of any other large city. Nowhere on earth has the true spirit of democracy been developed and applied to business as it has in our great manufacturing and wholesale establishments.

An example is Washington Avenue, the greatest wholesale street in the world. The big houses of this thoroughfare are visited several times a year by tens of thousands of retail merchants from all parts of the United States.

Whether the merchant's purchases amount to $100 or $10,000, he feels a part ownership in the concern that enjoys his patronage.

There are few private offices on Washington Avenue, no lackeys in uniform to receive your card and make you wait. You are received and served by men who are real human beings, and if they happen to be millionaires you would never know it.

With this great army of retail merchants come the wives and daughters to St. Louis to do their shopping in our big department stores where this same spirit of commercial democracy prevails.

The buyer for a retail store who visits St. Louis for the first time is amazed and delighted at his treatment. He meets enthusiastic men. They give him a square deal.

The visitor then understands why St. Louis business has been the biggest factor in building this city. He knows the reason why St. Louis wins and holds the trade of merchants everywhere.

Our parks, our wonderful system of education, our public buildings and beautiful homes are all very necessary adjuncts to a great city, yet they are but the fruits of business.

St. Louis is a solid, substantial city. It has fewer failures in proportion to the number of institutions than any other large city. This is a big thing to say—it is something worth talking about.

St. Louis is a great market place as well as an ideal place in which to live.

St. Louis is Superior As a Convention City

By Justin A. Runyan, Secty.-Mgr. St. Louis Conventions Bureau.

To our Friends and Delegates who attend Conventions:

The Conventions Bureau of St. Louis cordially invites you to hold your next convention in St. Louis—St. Louis, the Central Convention City, "Where Men Do Things" and Hospitality is our slogan.

This word brings to you a hint of Southern Hospitality—simply a foretaste of the cordiality with which you will be received if you decide to hold your next convention in St. Louis. Because of geographical location and because railroads center here, St. Louis Conventions produce the maximum attendance with the minimum average cost to delegates. This means successful meetings. Almost all trains run to St. Louis, and no trains run through St. Louis. When ready to leave St. Louis your train is always there—no waiting.

Fifty million persons can leave home in the evening and land in St. Louis the next morning. If you will look at the map you will see that St. Louis is between the center of population and the geographical center of the United States. St. Louis has twenty-four trunk line railroads radiating in every direction. Anyone located on a trunk line can reach St. Louis without changing cars or change of trains.

RECEPTION AND HOSPITALITY.

St. Louis entertained the greatest exposition the world has ever seen—the World's Fair in 1904.

May 27th, to June 1, 1914, inclusive will remain memorable days in the history of St. Louis, for during these days "The Pageant and Masque," the greatly conceived and most gorgeous Panorama Exposition, was given in Forest Park under the sunshine and the rain, with the moon and her sister twinkling stars vying with the arts of man and electricity in making it one of the most magnificent spectacles ever produced. This is simply a sample of what St. Louis is in position to do. We can accommodate conventions large in number, or small in number, and the smaller ones are just as welcome and will be given the same attention as the larger. The St. Louis Conventions Bureau is for the purpose of arranging for the comfort of our visitors, and every energy is extended to the end that those who visit St. Louis will carry away with them pleasant recollections of the hospitality we have accorded them.

HOTEL RATES NEVER RAISED.

St. Louis can provide adequate headquarters to accommodate 10,000 as easily as gatherings with a smaller number of delegates.

The new fire-proof Coliseum will seat 10,000 persons comfortably and with standing room can accommodate 15,000. It is a magnificent building of concrete, steel and glass construction and has remarkable acoustic properties for large assemblages. It is located conveniently to hotels and Union Station. The First Regiment Armory and the Odeon both offer excellent accommodations for conventions of several thousand delegates, and are within short rides of the downtown district. The auditoriums of theatres are also available and hotels have assembly rooms which can accommodate from 50 to 2,000 delegates. Besides, there are a large number of smaller audi-rooms, conveniently located, which can be used if the occasion demands.

St. Louis hotels never raise their rates, which are governed by location and service rendered. St. Louis hotels have facilities to accommodate comfortably and at reasonable rates over 100,000 people.

"Places to Eat" range from magnificent hotel cafes and restaurants de luxe to modest dairy lunch rooms, which offer a variety of cuisine equal to that to be found in any city. One may obtain the daintiest viands and the rarest wines and perfect service at moderate prices.

TO SUM UP.

St. Louis the Fourth City, a Beautiful City, a Cordial City, an Instructive City, an Important City, one you ought to see and know, and we will be glad to "Show You." The Keys of the City are yours.

Shopping in St. Louis; A Great Retail Center

By K. F. Niemoeller, Mgr. Associated Retailers.

St. Louis, the "Fourth City," is unrivaled in the size of its retail section and the opportunities it affords for purchasing at retail.

St. Louis maintains five great department stores, one of which is housed in the largest building devoted to store purposes in the world.

It has fifteen specialty stores devoted exclusively to women's ready-to-wear.

It has twelve devoted exclusively to men's clothing and furnishings and many other specialty furnishing goods stores.

It has twenty large furniture stores and piano houses.

It has five great jewelry stores, one of which particularly has a world-wide reputation.

It has more than a score of specialty shoe houses for both men and women.

It has many "Shops,"—millinery, corset, glove, etc.,—devoted exclusively to the sale of the finest goods, many of which are world-noted trademarked lines.

It has three large markets for the distribution of food-stuffs and three great chains of grocery and market stores covering the entire city in advantageous locations.

It is not a "one street" city in its retail activities, but boasts four great main thoroughfares—with connecting streets, its entire retail section proper embraces the vast area of eighty city blocks.

A great number of these many stores maintain offices in the eastern manufacturing and importing centers and some even have offices in foreign countries. Merchandise is assembled from every part of the world.

Not alone the City of St. Louis benefits by these many stores and their aggressive methods. The citizens of bordering states and especially those to the south even to Oklahoma, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky look upon St. Louis as their natural buying center, thousands yearly making trips solely to shop in St. Louis.

St. Louis Public Schools: Wherein They Excel

By Ben S. Blewett, Supt. of Instruction.

The St. Louis Public Schools are organized and conducted upon the principle that every citizen is entitled to that kind of training which will make his life most useful to the community and happiest to himself. Upon this basis it has been necessary to establish many kinds of schools and courses of instruction so that every person, whether youth or adult, may secure those opportunities which he desires and should have.

Kindergartens are maintained in all elementary schools, and children are admitted to them at five years of age.

The course of eight grades above the kindergarten aims primarily to give all boys and girls of the city the most essential training for lives as useful citizens which can be imparted before their fourteenth year. The chief emphasis of all of the activities of the grade schools is placed on the inculcation of right habits, the development of moral character, and the implanting of high ideals.

The High Schools of the city offer a wide selection of courses to suit the needs of many classes of students. Young men and young women may secure full preparation for college and profession schools or they may secure training for industrial pursuits or other vocations. For those who cannot afford a four years' course, one and two year courses are offered in shop and commercial work.

For young people who must work during the day but who are ambitious for further training, nineteen Evening Schools were conducted during the current year; four of these were High Schools for white students, two were schools for colored students (one of them offering high school courses), and the other were schools of grammar grades. The total cost of these Evening Schools for the year was over $80,000.00.

In the training of her teachers, St. Louis occupies a position unexcelled in this country. Since 1904 the Harris Teachers' College has been maintained to provide efficient teachers for the white grade schools, and the results in improved teaching fully justify the expense of the institution.

The Board of Education has invested in grounds and buildings over sixteen and a half million dollars. The expenditures for the current year will run over four and a quarter million dollars, two and a half millions of which will have been expended for the salaries of teachers. The average cost for instructing each pupil in the grades for the previous year was $38.49 and in the high schools $103.42.

To carry on this large work of the schools required the services of 2,200 teachers during the day, about 250 in the evening, and for the summer session over 400 teachers. The enrollment in the day schools for the current year will doubtless be very nearly 100,000 by the end of the term, while there were 18,242 students enrolled in the Evening Schools during the term just closed, and in the summer session there were 12,940 pupils.

The proper care of the health of the school children has, for some years, been recognized by the Board of Education as one of its proper duties. In addition to looking after the health of pupils and the the hygiene and sanitation of the school room conditions, this department endeavors, through the advice of the inspectors and personal visits of the nurses, to get parents to provide needed medical attention for their children.

ST. LOUIS—THE CENTER OF CENTERS

The geographical center of the United States may be on the prairie grounds of Fort Riley, Kiss, and the population center of the nation in the barn lot of Indianapolis. This is graphically shown by a map prepared by Justin A. Kumpson, manager of the Conventions Bureau of St. Louis. No other great city of the United States is located so near to the center of the nation's productive activities.

The agricultural center of the nation, the center of farm production, rests in the Missouri Ozarks to the northwest of St. Louis. In 1914 the value of these products was $1,000,000,000.00, or $10,000,000,000.00. The center of the nation's population is in St. Louis territory.

The hog center is in Northern Indiana near the cattle center in Northern Missouri. The horse and mule center lies a few miles to the southwest of St. Louis. This does not mean that all the agricultural products of the Middle West and of the nation seek a market in St. Louis, but it does signify that St. Louis occupies a splendidly commanding position to dominate those markets that enter to the west of Missouri. The lead and zinc center is found in Southwestern Missouri and the coal fields of Southern and Central Illinois the just across the river and a great coal mining area is rapidly being developed in the Southwest.

Mr. Kumpson's map was prepared to show the advantages of St. Louis as a convention city. It does that and far more.
