AB

AA, Peter Vander, a bookseller of Leyden, who published a work in 66 vols. folio, entitled Galerie du Monde, &c. was living in 1729.

AACARD, Nicholas and Christian, brothers, born at Wiburg, in Denmark, the eldest, distinguished for the acuteness of his philosophical writings, died 1657; the other known for his poetical talents, died 1664.

AALAM, an astrologer of the ninth century, at the court of Adado Daula.

AALST, Everard, a dutch painter, whose pieces were highly valued, was born at Delft, 1602, and died in 1658.

AARON, elder brother of Moses, of the tribe of Levi, born A. M. 2434; he was the friend and the assistant of Moses, was happily gifted with the powers of eloquence, and became the first high-priest among the Hebrews. He died in his 123d year.

AARON, Raschid, a caliph of the Abassides, distinguished by his conquests and the eccentricity of his character, died A. D. 809, in the 23d year of his reign.

AARON, Schascou, a rabbi of Thessalonica, celebrated for his writings.

AARON, a British saint, put to death with his brother Julius, during Dioclesian's persecution of the Christians.

AARON, a presbyter and physician of Alexandria, in the eighth century; he wrote 30 books on medicine in the Syriac language, and is the first author who makes mention of the small pox and measles, diseases which were introduced into Egypt from Arabia, about 640.

AARON, Hariscon, a Caraiterabbi who was known as physician at Constantinople in 1294; and wrote a learned commentary on the pentateuch, Hebrew grammar, &c.

AARON, Hacharon or Posterior, another learned Rabbi, born in 1346; he wrote on the law of Moses, the customs of his nation, and a treatise entitled the Garden of Eden.

AARON, Isaac, an interpreter of languages at Constantinople under the Comeni.

AARON, Ben Chajin, the chief of the Jewish Synagogue, at Fez and Morocco, in the beginning of the 17th century; he wrote commentaries on Joshua, the Law, the Prophets, &c.

AARON, Ben-aser, a learned rabbi in the 5th century, to whom the invention of the Hebrew points and accents is attributed; he wrote a Hebrew grammar, printed 1515.

AARON, a Levite of Barcelona, wrote 613 precepts on Moses, printed at Venice, 1523; he died 1292.

AARSENS, Francis, lord of Someldyck and Spuyck, one of the greatest ministers for negotiation that the United Provinces of Holland have at any time possessed. He was the first person ever recognised as Dutch ambassador by the French court: the first of three extraordinary ambassadors sent to England in 1620; and the second in 1641, who were to treat about the marriage of prince William, son to the prince of Orange. Aarsens died at an advanced age; he left behind him very accurate and judicious memoirs of all the embassies in which he was employed.

AARSENS, or AERSENS, Peter, called by the Italians Pietro Longo, from his tallness, a celebrated painter, born at Amsterdam in 1519. He excelled very particularly in painting a kitchen; but an altarpiece of his, viz. a crucifix representing an executioner breaking with an iron bar the legs of the thieves, &c. was prodigiously admired. This noble piece was destroyed by the rabble in the time of the insurrection, 1566. He afterwards complained of this to the populace in terms of such severity, that more than once they were going to murder him. He died in 1585.

AARTGEN, or AERTGEN, a painter of merit, born at Leyden in 1498. It was a custom with this painter never to work on Mondays, but to devote that day with his disciples to the bottle. He used to stroll about the streets in the night, playing on the German flute; and in one of these frolics was drowned in 1564.

ABA, brother-in-law to Stephen, the first Christian king of Hungary; disgraced himself by his cruelties; was conquered in battle by the Emperor Henry III.; and was sacrificed to the resentment of his offended subjects. 1044.

ABAFFI, Michael, son of a magistrate of Hermandast, rose by his abilities and intrigues, to the sovereignty of Transylvania, in 1661.

ABACA, or ABAKA, a king of Tartary, conquered Persia, and proved a powerful and formidable neighbour to the Christians at Jerusalem, died 1282.

ABANO, vid. Apono.

ABARIS, a Scythian philosopher, the history of whose adventures, mentioned by Herodotus and others, appears more fabulous than authentic.

ABAS, Schah, seventh king of Persia, was brave and active; he took conjointly with the English forces, 1622, the Island of Ormus, which had been in the possession of the Portuguese 122 years; he died 1629 in the 4th year of his reign.

ABAS, Schah, the great grandson of the preceding, succeeded his father in 1642, in his 13th year; he patronised the Christians, and was distinguished for his benevolence and liberality; he died Sept. 25, 1666.

ABASSA, an officer who revolted against Mustapha I. emperor of the Turks, and afterwards was employed against the Poles, 1634, at the head of 60,000 men. The cowardice of his troops robbed him of a victory, and he was strangled by order of the Sultan.

ABASSA, a sister of Aaron Raschid, whose hand was bestowed by her brother on Giafer; her husband was sacrificed by the tyrant, and she was reduced to poverty.

ABASSON, an impostor, who, under the character of the grandson of Abas the great, obtained the patronage of the court of France and of the grand seignior, by whose order he was at last beheaded.

ABATS, Andrew, a painter of fruit and still life, born at Naples, was employed by the king of Spain, and died in 1732.

ABAUZIT, Firmin, born at Uzès, 11th Nov. 1679, fled from the persecution which attended his parents on account of their profession of protestantism, and retired to Geneva, became distinguished for his superior progress in every branch of polite learning, but particularly mathematics and natural history; was flattered by Voltaire, and complimented by Rousseau; he died March 20, 1767.

ABBADIE, James, an eminent Protestant divine, and dean of Rialoe, born at Nay, in Berne, in the year 1654 (or, according to some accounts, in 1658,) died in the parish of Mary-la-bonne, in London, 1727. The chief of this author's works was, "Traité de la Vérité de la Religion Chrétienne; Rotterdam, 1684." This has gone through several editions, and is perhaps the best book ever published on that subject.

ABAS, Halli, a physician, and one of the Persian magi, who followed the doctrines of Zoroaster; he wrote A. D. 980, a book called a royal work, which was translated into Latin by Stephen of Antioch, 1127, and is now extant.

ABBAS, the uncle of Mahomet, opposed the ambitious views of the impostor; but when defeated in the battle of Bedr, was reconciled to his nephew, embraced his religion, and thanked heaven for the prosperity and the grace he enjoyed as a mussulman. He died in the 32d year of the hegrira.

ABBASSA, vid. Abassa.

ABBATEGIO, Marian d', an ecclesiastic of the 14th century, who rose by his abilities to be governor of Aquila.

ABBATISSA, Paul, a famous Sicilian poet, born at Messina, 1570. He translated into Italian verse Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, and Ovid's Metamorphoses.

ABBIATI, Philip, a historical painter, born at Milan 1640, died 1715.

ABBON, a monk of St. Germain des Prés, who was present at the siege of Paris by the Normans, at the close of the 9th century; he wrote an account of this event in 1200 verses, in execrable Latin, which was edited by Duplessis, 1753.

ABBON, de Fleury, an ecclesiastic of Orleans, who became abbot of Fleury, supported the rights of the monastic order against the intrusions of the bishops. He was killed in a quarrel between the French and Gascons, 1004.

ABBOT, Hull, a respectable minister of Charlestown, Massachusetts, published several sermons, died 1782, aged 80.

ABBOT, George, archbishop of Canterbury, born 1562, at Guildford, in Surry. In 1604 that translation of the Bible now in use was begun by the direction of king James, and Dr. Abbot was the second of eight divines of Oxford, to whom the care of translating the whole New Testament (excepting the Epistles) was committed. On April 5, 1619, Sir Nicholas Kempe laid the first stone of the hospital at Guildford. The archbishop, who was present, afterwards endowed it with lands to the value of 300*l.* per ann. The archbishop, being in a declining state of health, used in the summer to go to Hampshire for the sake of recreation; and being invited by lord Zouch to hunt in his park at Branzill, he met there with the greatest misfortune that ever befell him; for he accidentally killed his lordship's keeper, by an arrow from a cross-bow, which he shot at a deer. This accident threw him into a deep melancholy; he ever afterwards kept a monthly fast on Tuesday, the day on which this fatal mischance happened, and settled an annuity of 20*l.* on the widow. Worn out, however, with cares and infirmities, he died at Croydon, Aug. 5, 1633.

ABBOT, Maurice, youngest brother of the archbishop, acquired consequence in commercial affairs, was employed in 1624 in establishing the settlement of Virginia, and was the first person on whom Charles I. conferred the honour of knighthood. He was elected representative for London, and in 1638 was raised to the mayoralty of the city, and died Jan. 10th, 1640.

ABBOT, Robert, D. D. eldest brother of the two preceding; he was born at Guildford, was educated at Balliol college, and elected master thereof, 1609. His eloquence as a preacher recommended him to further patronage; he was appointed chaplain to the king, and regius professor of divinity at Oxford. He was consecrated bishop of Salisbury, 1615, and died Mar. 2, 1617, in his 58th year. His writings were principally controversial.

ABBOT, Thomas, the German translator of Sallust, and the admired author of a treatise "On merit," and of another, "Of dying for one's country," was born at Ulm, and died at Buckeberg, 1766, aged 28.

ABDALCADER, a Persian who was greatly revered by the mussulmans for his learning, his piety, and the sanctity of his manners.

ABDALLAH, father of Mahomet, was a slave, and a driver of camels.

ABDALLAH, son of Zobair, was proclaimed caliph of Mecca and Medina, after the expulsion of Yesid. After enjoying the sovereignty for four years, he was besieged in Mecca, by the successor of Yesid in Syria, and sacrificed to the ambition of his rival, 733.

ABDALLAH, son of Yesid, celebrated as a mussulman lawyer in the 7th century.

ABDALLAH, son of Abbas, endeavoured to raise his family on the ruins of the Omniades; he was defeated by his rivals, who afterwards, pretending to be reconciled, perfidiously murdered him, 754.

ABDALMALEK, son of Marvan, was 5th caliph of the Omniades, and began to reign, 685. He was called Abulzebab, because his breath was so offensive that it killed the very flies that settled on his lips; he reigned 21 years, and was succeeded by Valid, the eldest of his 16 sons.

ABDALMALEK, the last of the caliphs of the race of the Samanides, was dethroned and murdered by Mahmound, 999.

ABDALRAHMAN, or ABDERAMES, vid. Abderames.

ABDAS, a bishop in Persia, who, by inconsiderately abolishing a Pagan temple of the sun, excited the public indignation against himself and his religion.

ABDEMELEK, king of Fez and Morocco, was dethroned by his nephew, Mahomet; but by the assistance of troops, sent him by the sultan Selim, defeated Sebastian, king of Portugal, who had landed in Africa to support the usurper. The two African monarchs and Sebastian fell on the field, 1578.

ABDERAMES, a caliph of the race of Omniades, was invited into Spain by the Saracens. He assumed the title of king of Corduba, and the surname of just; he died, 790, after reigning 32 years.

ABDERAMES, a Saracen general of the caliph Hescham, who, after conquering Spain penetrated into Aquitain and Poitou, and was at last defeated by Charles Martel, near Poitiers, 732.

ABEL, Frederick Gottfried, a native of Halberstadt, abandoned divinity for the pursuit of medicine; he died 1794, aged 80.

ABEL, Charles Frederic, whose great musical ability, both as composer and performer, was an honour to the age in which he lived. His instrumental performance, particularly on the Viol di Gamba, was much distinguished for its elegance and fine feeling. He died, at London, after three days' sleep, on the 20th of June, 1787.

ABELA, John Francis, a commander of the order of Malta, known by an excellent work called "Malta illustrata," in fol. 1647.

ABELARD, Peter, one of the most celebrated doctors of the 12th century, was born in the village of Palais, in Brittany. That he might enjoy all the sweets of life, he thought it necessary to have a mistress, and accordingly fixed his affections on Heloise, a niece of a canon at Paris. He boarded in this canon's house, whose name was Fulbert; where, pretending to teach the young lady the sciences, he soon made love to his scholar. Abelard now performed his public functions very coldly, and wrote nothing but amorous verses. Heloise, at length, being likely to become a mother, Abelard sent her to a sister of his in Brittany, where she was delivered of a son. To soften the canon's anger, he offered to marry Heloise privately; Fulbert, however, was better pleased with this proposal than his niece, who, from a strange singularity in her passion, chose rather to be the mistress than the wife of Abelard. At length, however, she consented to a private marriage; but, even after this, would on some occasions affirm with an oath, that she was still unmarried. Her husband thereupon sent her to the monastery of Argenteuil; where, at his desire, she put on a religious habit, but not the veil. Heloise's relations, looking upon this as a second piece of treachery in Abelard, were transported to such a degree of resentment, that they hired ruffians, who forcing into his chamber by night, deprived him of his manhood. This infamous treatment forced Abelard to a cloister, to conceal his confusion, and he put on the habit in the abbey of St. Denis. He afterwards retired to a solitude in the diocese of Troyes, and there built an oratory, which he named the Paraclete, where great numbers of pupils resorted to him. Here again his success excited that envy by which he had through life been persecuted; and having been several times in danger of his life, by poison and other artifices, he was at length received by Peter the Venerable into his abbey of Clugny, in which sanctuary Abelard was treated with the utmost humanity and tenderness. At length, having become infirm from the prevalence of the scurvy and other disorders, he was removed to the priory of St. Marcellus, on the Saon, near Chalons, where he died, April 21, 1142, in the 63d year of his age. His corpse was sent to Heloise, who deposited it in the Paraclete.

ABELL, John, an English musician in the chapel royal of Charles II. celebrated for a fine counter-tenor voice, and for his skill on the lute. He continued in the chapel till the Revolution, when he was discharged as being a Papist. Upon this he went abroad, and at Warsaw met with a very extraordinary adventure. He was sent for to court; but evading to go by some slight excuse, was commanded to attend. At the palace, he was seated in a chair in the middle of a spacious hall, and suddenly drawn up to a great height, when the king, with his attendants, appeared in a gallery opposite to him. At the same instant a number of wild bears were turned in, when the king bid him choose, whether he would sing, or be let down among the bears. Abell chose the former, and declared afterwards, that he never sung so well in his life.

ADAM, Robert, architect, was born in 1722, at Kirkcaldy, in Fifeshire, and received his education at the university of Edinburgh. After his return from a visit to Italy, Mr. Adam was appointed architect to his majesty in the year 1762, and produced a total change in the architecture of that country. His fertile genius in elegant ornament was not confined to the decoration of buildings, but has been diffused into almost every branch of manufacture. At the time of his death, March 3, 1792, the new university of Edinburgh, and other great public works, both in that city and in Glasgow, were erecting from his designs, and under his direction. His death was occasioned by the breaking of a blood-vessel in the stomach, and his remains were interred in the south side of Westminster Abbey.

ADAM, James, architect, brother to the foregoing, died Oct. 20, 1794. The Adelphi buildings and Portland-place are monuments of his taste and abilities in his profession.

ADAMSON, Patrick, Archbishop of St. Andrew's, born at Perth, 1543. In the year 1566, he set out for Paris, as tutor to a young gentleman, where he stayed some months, and then retired to Bourges. He was in this city during the massacre at Paris; and lived concealed, for seven months, at a public house, the master of which, upwards of 70 years of age, was thrown from the top thereof, and had his brains dashed out, for his charity to heretics. In 1573, he returned to Scotland. The earl of Moreton, then regent, on the death of bishop Douglas, promoted him to the archiepiscopal see of St. Andrew's. He died 1591.

ADANSON, Michael, a French naturalist of so much distinction, that he received invitations from different sovereigns of Europe to reside in their states; he died 1805.

ADDISON, Lancelot, D.D. son of a clergyman of the same name; he was born at Maulds Meadburne in Westmoreland, was preferred to the living of Milston, &c. 1683, and died April 20, 1703.

ADDISON, Joseph, born May 1, 1672, at Milston, near Ambrosbury, Wiltshire, of which place his father was rector. He received the first rudiments of his education there under the reverend Mr. Nash; but was removed to Salisbury, under the care of Mr. Taylor; and soon after to the Charter-house, where he studied under Dr. Ellis, and contracted that intimacy with sir Richard Steele, which their joint labours have so effectually recorded. In 1687 he was entered of Queen's College, Oxford, where, in 1689, the accidental patronage of some Latin verses, gained him the perusal of Dr. Lancaster, by whose recommendation he was elected into Magdalen College as Demy. Here he took the degree of M. A. Feb. 14, 1693, continued to cultivate poetry and criticism, and grew first eminent by his Latin compositions, which are entitled to particular praise. In 1695 he wrote a poem to king William, with a kind of rhyming introduction addressed to lord Somers. In 1697 he wrote his poem on the peace of Ryswick, which he dedicated to Mr. Montague, (then chancellor of the exchequer) and which was called by Smith "the best Latin poem since the Æneid." Having yet no public employment, he obtained, in 1699, a pension of 300*l.* a year, that he might be enabled to travel. While he was travelling at leisure in Italy, he was far from being idle; for he not only collected his observations on the country, but found time to write his Dialogues on Medals. Here, also, he wrote the letter to Lord Halifax, which is justly considered as the most elegant, if not the most sublime, of his poetical productions. At his return he published his Travels, with a dedication to Lord Somers. This book, though a while neglected, is said in time to have become so much the favourite of the public, that before it was reprinted it rose to five times in price. The victory at Blenheim in 1704, spread triumph and confidence over the nation; and lord Godolphin, lamenting to lord Halifax that it had not been celebrated in a manner equal to the subject, desired him to propose it to some better poet. Halifax named Addison; who, having undertaken the work, communicated it to the treasurer, while it was yet advanced no farther than the simile of the Angel, and was rewarded with the place of commissioner of appeals. In the following year he was at Hanover with lord Halifax; and the year after was made under-secretary of state. When the Marquis of Wharton was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland, Addison attended him as his secretary, and was made keeper of the records in Birmingham's Tower, with a salary of 300*l.* a year. When he was in office, he made a law to himself, as Swift has recorded, never to remit his regular fees in civility to his friends, "I may (said he) have a hundred friends, and if my fee be two guineas, I shall, by relinquishing my right, lose 200 guineas, and no friend gain more than two." He was in Ireland when Steele, without any communication of his design, began the publication of the Tattler; but he was not long concealed; by inserting a remark on Virgil, which Addison had given him, he discovered himself. Steele's first Tattler was published April 22, 1709, and Addison's contribution appeared May 26. To the Tattler, in about two months, succeeded the Spectator, a series of essays of the same kind, but written with less levity, upon a more regular plan, and published daily. The next year 1713, in which Cato came upon the stage, was the grand climacteric of Addison's reputation. The whole nation was at that time on fire with faction. The Whigs applauded every line in which liberty was mentioned, as a satire on the Tories; and the Tories echoed every clap, to show that the satire was unfeigned. While Cato was upon the stage, another daily paper, called the Guardian, was published by Steele, to which Addison gave great assistance. The papers of Addison are marked in the Spectator by one of the letters in the name of Clio, and in the Guardian by a hand. It was not known that Addison had tried a comedy for the stage, till Steele, after his death, declared him the author of "The Drummer." This play Steele carried to the theatre, and afterwards to the press, and sold the copy for fifty guineas. In the midst of these agreeable employments Mr. Addison was not an indifferent spectator of public affairs. He wrote, as different exigencies required, in 1707, "The present state of the War," &c.; "The Whig Examiner;" and the "Trial of Count Tariff;" all which tracts, being on temporary topics, expired with the subjects which gave them birth. When the house of Hanover took possession of the throne, it was reasonable to expect that the zeal of Addison would be suitably rewarded. Before the arrival of king George, he was made secretary to the regency, and was required by his office to send notice to Hanover that the queen was dead, and the throne was vacant. To do this would not have been difficult to any man but Addison, who was so overwhelmed with the greatness of the event, and so distracted by choice of expressions, that the lords, who could not wait for the niceties of criticism, called Mr. Southwell, a clerk in the house, and ordered him to despatch the message. Southwell readily told what was necessary, in the common style of business, and valued himself upon having done what was too hard for Addison. He was better qualified for the Freeholder, a paper which he published twice a week, from Dec. 23, 1715, to the middle of the next year. This was undertaken in defence of the established government, sometimes with argument, sometimes with mirth. In argument he had many equals, but his humour was singular and matchless. On the 2d of August, 1736, he married the countess Dowager of Warwick, whom he is said to have first known by becoming tutor to her son. This marriage, however, made no addition to his happiness; it neither found them nor made them equal. She always remembered her own rank, and thought herself entitled to treat with very little ceremony the tutor of her son. The year after, 1717, he rose to his highest elevation, being made secretary of state; but it is universally confessed that he was unequal to the duties of his place. In the house of commons he could not speak, and therefore was useless to the defence of the government. In the office he could not issue an order without losing his time in quest of fine expressions. What he gained in rank he lost in credit; and, finding by experience his own inability, was forced to solicit his dismissal, with a pension of 1500*l.* a year. His friends palliated this relinquishment, of which both friends and enemies knew the true reason, with an account of declining health, and the necessity of recess and quiet. He now engaged in a laudable and excellent work, viz. a defence of the Christian Religion; of which, part was published after his death. Addison had for some time been oppressed by shortness of breath, which was now aggravated by a drop-sy; and, finding his danger pressing, he prepared to die conformably to his own precepts and professions. Lord Warwick was a young man of very irregular life, and perhaps of loose opinions. Addison, for whom he did not want respect, had very diligently endeavoured to reclaim him; but his arguments and expostulations had no effect: one experiment, however, remained to be tried. When he found his life near its end, he directed the young lord to be called, and, when he desired with great tenderness to hear his last injunctions, told him, "I have sent for you to see how a Christian can die." What effect this awful scene had on the earl's behaviour is not known: he died himself in a short time. Having given directions to Mr. Tickell for the publication of his works, and dedicated them, on his death bed, to his friend Mr. Craggs, Addison died June 17, 1719, at Holland House, leaving no child but a daughter, who died at Bilton, in Warwickshire, Feb. 1797.

ADELAIDE, daughter of Rodolphus, king of Burgundy, married Lotharius II., king of Italy, and after his death the emperor Otho I.; she died 999, aged 69.

ÆGIDUIS de Colonna, professor of divinity at Paris, general of the Augustines, died 1316.

ÆGINETA, Pambus, a native of the island Ægina, whence he has his name. According to Abulfaragius, he flourished in the 7th century. His surgical works are deservedly famous, and his knowledge of surgery was very great. In short, the surgery of Paulus has been the subject matter of most of the treatises of that art down to this time. His book treats professedly of disorders incident to women.

ÆGINHARD, a German, secretary to Charlemagne, died 840.

ÆLFRED, or ALFRED, the Great, youngest son of Æthelwolf, king of the West Saxons, was born in the year 849, at Wantage, or Wanacling, which is supposed to be Wantage, in Berkshire. Ælfred succeeded to the crown on the death of his brother Æthelred, in the year 871; but had scarcely time to attend the funeral of his brother, before he was obliged to fight for the crown he had so lately received. A considerable army of Danes, having landed in Dorsetshire, marched as far as Wareham; here

Ælfred met them with all the forces he could raise; but, not finding himself strong enough to engage them, he concluded a peace, and the Danes swore never again to invade his dominions. In 877, however, having obtained new aids, they came in such numbers into Wiltshire, that the Saxons, giving themselves up to despair, would not make head against them; many fled out of the kingdom, not a few submitted, and the rest retired, every man to the place where he could be best concealed. In this distress, Ælfred, conceiving himself no longer a king, laid aside all marks of royalty, and took shelter in the house of one who kept his cattle.

He retired afterwards to the isle of Æthelney, in Somersetshire, where he built a fort for the security of himself, his family, and the few faithful servants who repaired thither to him.

When he had been about a year in this retreat, having been informed that some of his subjects had routed a great army of the Danes, killed their chiefs, and taken their magical standard, he issued his letters, giving notice were he was, and inviting his nobility to come and consult with him. Before they came to a final determination, Ælfred, putting on the habit of a harper, went into the enemy's camp; where, without suspicion, he was every where admitted, and had the honour to play before their princes. Having thus acquired an exact knowledge of their situation, he returned in great secrecy to his nobility, whom he ordered to their respective homes, there to draw together each man as great a force as he could; and upon a day appointed there was to be a general rendezvous at the great wood called Selwood, in Wiltshire. This affair was transacted so secretly and expeditiously, that in a little time the king, at the head of an army, approached the Danes before they had the least intelligence of his design.

Ælfred, taking advantage of the surprise and terror they were in, fell upon them, and totally defeated them at Æthendune, now Eddington, in Wiltshire. Ælfred enjoyed a profound peace during the last three years of his reign, which he chiefly employed in establishing and regulating his government for the security of himself and his successors, as well as for the ease and benefit of his subjects in general.

Although there remain but few laws which can be positively ascribed to Ælfred, yet to him we owe many of those advantages which render our constitution so dear and valuable; particularly the institution of the trial by jury. He is said by some to have founded the university of Oxford; thus much, however, is certain, that Ælfred restored and settled that university, endowed it with revenues, and placed there the most famous professors.

When Ælfred came to the crown, learning was at a very low ebb in this kingdom; but, by his example and encouragement, he used his utmost endeavours to excite a love for letters among his subjects. He himself was a scholar; and had he not been illustrious as a king, would have been famous as an author. When we consider the qualifications of this prince, and the many virtues he possessed, we need not wonder that he died universally lamented, after a reign of above 28 years, on the 23th of October, A. D. 900. He was buried in the cathedral of Winchester.

ÆLIAN, Claudius, born at Præneste, in Italy. He taught rhetoric at Rome, under the emperor Alexander Severus, and was surnamed Honey-mogh on account of the sweetness of his style. His most celebrated works are, his "Various History," and that "Of Animals."

ÆLIANUS, Meccius, a physician before Gallien, first used treacle against the plague.

ÆLST, a Dutch painter, vid. AALST.

ÆMILIUS, Paulus, a Roman general, celebrated for his victory over Perseus, king of Macedonia, died B. C. 164.

ÆMILIUS, Paulus, a native of Verona, who wrote (or rather began to write) a Latin history of the kings of France; but though he spent many years at it, he was not able to finish the tenth book, which was to include the beginning of the reign of Charles VIII. He died 1529, and was buried in the cathedral at Paris.

ÆNEAS, a Trojan prince, memorable for his grateful care of his aged father Anchises, whom he bore through the flames of Troy upon his shoulders at the hazard of his own life, and that of his son, a child, who was obliged to cling to his garments to escape with them. He died 1197 B. C. Virgil has immortalized his name.

ÆNEAS, Gazeus, or ÆNEAS of Gaza, a sophist by profession, was originally a Platonic philosopher, but afterwards became a Christian, and flourished about the year 437. He wrote a dialogue, entitled "Theophrastus," concerning the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body.

ÆNEAS, Sylvius, or Pius II., born 1405, at Corsigny, in Sienna, where his father lived in exile. This pope was famous for his wise and witty sayings, some of which are as follow: That common men should esteem learning as silver, noblemen prize it as gold, and princes as jewels: A citizen should look upon his family as subject to the city, the city to his country, the country to the world, and the world to God: That the chief place with kings was slippery: That the tongue of a sycophant was a king's greatest plague: That a prince who would trust nobody was good for nothing; and he who believed every body, no better: That those who went to law were the birds, the court the field, the judge the net, and the lawyers the fowls: That men ought to be presented to dignities, not dignities to men: That a covetous man never pleases any body but by his death: That it was a slavish vice to tell lies. That lust sullies and stains every age of man, but quite extinguishes old age.

ÆRIUS, a presbyter of Sebastia, who is supposed by some to be the founder of the presbyterians, flourished about 285.

ÆSCHINES, a Socratic philosopher, the son of Charius, a sausage-maker. Phrynicon, in Photius, ranks him among the best orators, and mentions his orations as the standard of the pure Attic style.

ÆSCHINES, a celebrated orator, cotemporary with Demosthenes, and but just his inferior. Being overcome by Demosthenes, he went to Rhodes, and opened a school there, and afterwards removed to Samos, where he died at the age of 75. There are only three of his orations extant; which, however, are so very beautiful, that Fabricius compares them to the three Graces.

ÆSCHYLUS, a tragic poet, born at Athens in the 63d Olympiad. He was the son of Euphorion, and brother to Cynegeirus and Aminias, who distinguished themselves in the battle of Marathon, and the scaffold of Salamin, at which engagement Æschylus was likewise present. To Aminias our poet was, upon a particular occasion, obliged for saving his life:

Ælian relates, that Æschylus, being charged by the Athenians with certain blasphemous expressions in some of his pieces, was accused of impiety, and condemned to be stoned to death; they were just going to put the sentence in execution, when Aminias, with a happy presence of mind, throwing aside his cloak, showed his arm without a hand, which he had lost at the battle of Salamin, in defence of his country. This sight made such an impression on the judges, that, touched with the remembrance of his valour, and the friendship he showed for his brother, they pardoned Æschylus. He wrote a great number of tragedies, of which there are but seven remaining; and, notwithstanding the sharp censures of some critics, he must be allowed to have been the father of the tragic art. The names of his pieces now extant are, Prometheus Bound; Seven Chiefs against Thebes; The Persians; Agamemnon; the Infernal Regions; the Furies; and the Suppliants. After having lived some years at Gela, we are told that he died of a fracture of his skull, caused by an eagle's letting fall a tortoise on his head, in the 69th year of his age.

ÆSOP, the Phrygian, lived in the time of Solon, about the 50th Olympiad, under the reign of Cræsus, the last king of Lydia. St. Jerome, speaking of him, says, he was unfortunate in his birth, condition, and death; hinting thereby at his deformity, servile state, and tragical end. His great genius, however, enabled him to support his misfortunes; and, in order to mitigate the hardships of servitude, he composed those entertaining and instructive fables which have acquired him so much reputation; and he is generally supposed to have been the inventor of that kind of writing. Having had several masters, for he was born a slave, Æsop at length came under a philosopher named Xanthus; and it was in his service that he first displayed his genius for fabling and moralizing. He was afterwards sold to Idmon, or Iadmon, the philosopher, who enfranchised him. After he had received his liberty, he soon acquired a great reputation among the Greeks; so that, according to Meziriac, the report of his wisdom having reached Cræsus, this king sent to inquire after him, and engaged him in his service. He travelled through Greece, according to the same author; but whether for his own pleasure, or upon the affairs of Cræsus, is uncertain. Passing by Athens soon after Pisistratus had usurped the sovereign power, and finding that the Athenians bore the yoke very impatiently, he told them the fable of the frogs who petitioned Jupiter for a king. Some relate, that, in order to show that the life of man is full of miseries, Æsop used to say, that when Prometheus took the clay to form man, he tempered it with tears. Æsop was put to death at Delphos. Plutarch tells us, that he came there with a great quantity of gold and silver, being ordered by Cræsus to offer a sacrifice to Apollo, and to give a considerable sum to each inhabitant; but a quarrel arising between him and the Delphians, he sent back the sacrifice and the money to Cræsus; for he thought that those for whom the prince designed it had rendered themselves unworthy of it. The inhabitants of Delphos contrived an accusation of sacrilege against him, and, pretending that they had convicted him, threw him headlong from a rock. They afterwards endeavoured to make an atonement by raising a pyramid to his honour.

ÆSOP, Clodius, a celebrated actor, who flourished about the 670th year of Rome. He and Roscius were cotemporaries, and the best performers that ever appeared upon the Roman stage; the former excelling in tragedy, the latter in comedy. Cicero put himself under their direction to perfect his action. Æsop lived in a most expensive manner; and at one entertainment is said to have had a dish which cost above £900. This dish, we are told, was filled with singing and speaking birds; some of which cost near 50*l*. Æsop's son was no less luxurious than his father, for he dissolved pearls for his guests to swallow.—Notwithstanding his expenses, however, this actor is said to have died worth above 160,000*l*.

ALDHELM, or ADELMA, (St.) an English divine and historian, and bishop of Shireburn, in the time of the Saxon heptarchy. He is said to have been the first Englishman who ever wrote in Latin, and who introduced poetry into England. William of Malnesbury tells us, that the people in Aldhelm's time were half barbarians, and little attentive to religious discourses; wherefore the holy man, placing himself upon a bridge, used often to stop them, and sing ballads of his own composition; he thereby gained the favour and attention of the populace; and insensibly mixing grave and religious things with those of a jocular kind, he by this means succeeded better than he could have done by austere gravity. Aldhelm lived in great esteem till his death, which happened May 25, 709.

ALETINO, Benedetto, professor at Naples. He undertook to refute the Cartesian philosophy, and to establish that of Aristotle. He died in 1719.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, son of Philip, king of Macedonia, was born at Pella, the first year of the 106th Olympiad, and the 365th before the birth of Christ, and at 15 years of age was delivered to the tuition of Aristotle. He discovered very early a mighty spirit, and symptoms of that vast and immoderate ambition which was afterwards to make him the scourge of mankind and the pest of the world. At 20 years of age he succeeded his father as king of Macedonia; he was also chosen, in the room of his father, generalissimo in the projected expedition against the Persians; but the Greeks, agreeably to their usual fickleness, deserted from him, taking advantage of his absence in Thrace and Illyricum, where he began his military enterprises. He hastened immediately to Greece, when the Athenians and other states returned to him at once; but, the Thebans standing out, he directed his arms against them, slew a prodigious number of them, and destroyed their city, sparing nothing but the house and the descendants of Pindar, out of respect to the memory of that poet. This happened in the second year of the 3d Olympiad. Having settled the affairs of Greece, and left Antipater as his vic-roy in Macedonia, he passed the Hellespont, in the third year of his reign, with an army of no more than 30,000 foot, and 4,500 horse; and with these forces, brave and veteran it is true, he overturned the Persian empire. His first battle was at the Granicus, a river of Phrygia, in which the Persians were routed. His second was at Issus, a city of Cilicia, where he was also victorious in an eminent degree; for the camp of Darius, with his mother, wife, and children, fell into his hands; and the humane and generous treatment which he showed them is justly reckoned the noblest and most amiable passage of his life. While he was in this country, he caught a violent fever by bathing, when hot, in the cold waters of the river Cydnus; and this fever was made more violent from his impatience at being detained by it. The army was under the utmost consternation, and no physician durst undertake the cure. At length, one Philip of Acarnania desired time to prepare a potion which he was sure would cure him; and while this potion was preparing, Alexander received a letter from his most intimate confidant, Parmenio, informing him that this Acarnanian was a traitor, and employed by Darius to poison him, at the price of one thousand talents and his sister in marriage. What a situation for a sick prince! The same greatness of soul, however, which accompanied him upon all occasions, did not forsake him here. He did not seem to his physician under any apprehensions; but after receiving the cup into his hands, delivered the letter to Philip, and, with his eyes fixed upon him drank it off. The medicine at first acted so powerfully as to deprive him of his senses, and then, without doubt, all concluded him poisoned: however, he soon came round, and, by a cure so speedy that it might almost be deemed miraculous, was restored to his army safe and sound. From Cilicia he marched forwards to Phenicia, which all surrendered to him except Tyre; and it cost him a siege of seven months to reduce that city. The vexation of Alexander, at being unseasonably detained by this obstinacy of the Tyrians, occasioned a mighty destruction and carnage; and the cruelty he exercised here is quite inexcusable. After besieging and taking Gaza, he went to Jerusalem, where he was received by the high-priest, and, making many presents to the Jews, sacrificed in their temple. He told Jaddus (for that was the priest's name,) that he had seen in Macedonia a god, in appearance exactly resembling him, who had exhorted him to this expedition against the Persians, and given him the firmest assurance of success. Afterwards entering Egypt, he went to the oracle of Jupiter Ammon; and upon his return, built the city of Alexandria. It was now that he took it into his head to assume divinity, and to pretend himself the son of the said Jupiter Ammon. Policy, however, was at the bottom of this: it was impossible that any such belief should be really rooted in his breast; but he found by experience, that this opinion inclined the barbarous nations to submit to him; and therefore he was content to pass for a god, and to admit, as he did, of divine adoration. His object now was to overtake and attack Darius in another battle; and this battle was fought at Arbela; when victory, granting every thing to Alexander, put an end to the Persian empire. Darius had offered his daughter in marriage, and part of his dominions to Alexander; and Parmenio advised him to accept the terms, saying, "I would if I were Alexander." "And so would I," replied the the conqueror,) if I were Parmenio." The same Parmenio counselling the prince to take advantage of the night in attacking Darius, "No, (said Alexander,) I would not steal a victory." Darius owed his escape from Arbela to the swiftness of his horse; and, while he was collecting forces to renew the war, was insidiously slain by Bessus, governor of the Bactrians. Alexander wept at the fate of Darius, and, afterwards procuring Bessus to be given up to him, punished the inhuman wretch according to his deserts. From Arbela, Alexander pursued his conquests eastward; and every thing fell into his hands, even to the Indies. Having ranged over all the east, he returned to Babylon, where he died in the 33d year of his age, some say by poison, others by intoxication.

ALLEYN, Edward, an actor of great reputation in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., and founder of Dulwich college in 1619, which he named "the college of God's gift." An idle tradition hath assigned the following as his motive for endowing it: that once, personating the devil, he was so terrified at seeing a real devil (as he imagined) upon the stage, that he soon after totally quitted his profession, and devoted the remainder of his life to religious exercises. He founded this college for a master and warden, who are always to be of the name of Alleyn or Allen, with 4 fellows (3 of whom are to be divines, and the fourth an organist;) and for six poor men, as many poor women, and twelve poor boys, to be educated in the college. He was born in London 1566, and died in 1626, and was buried in the chapel of the college.

ALLIOSI, N., a civil officer of emience in the service of Stanislaus, king of Poland, died 1779.

ALVARES DE LUNA, or ALVARO, a favourite of John II., king of Castile, famous for the prodigious ascendancy which he gained over that prince, and for the punishment which at length overtook him. Of the 45 years he spent at court, he enjoyed for 30 of them so absolute a power over the king, that nothing could be done without his express orders; nay, it is related by Mariana, that the king could not change an officer or servant, or even his clothes or diet, without the approbation of Alvares. At length he was seized, tried, and condemned to lose his head, on a charge of having madly invaded the rights of kingly majesty, reduced the whole court into his power, and made himself master of the state in general, &c. &c. He was executed the 4th of June, 1453.

AMBROGI, Antony Marie, professor of eloquence at Rome, published various works, and died 1788.

AMBROSE, St., bishop of Milan, an eminent father of the church, born in Gaul, 333. The birth of Ambrose is said to have been followed by a remarkable presage of his future eloquence, for we are told, that a swarm of bees came and settled upon his mouth as he lay in his cradle. He died at Milan 397, and was buried in the great church there. The most considerable of his numerous works is that "De Officiis." Ambrose carried the esteem of the virginity and celibacy so far, that he seemed to regard matrimony as an indecent thing.

AMBROSE, deacon of Alexandria, was the patron of Origen, by whose eloquence he was converted to Christianity. He died 250.

AMBROSE, born at Portico, in Romania, was distinguished by his fluency in the Greek tongue at the councils Basil, Ferrara, &c. He died 1439.

AMERBACH, Vitus, a Bavarian, professor of philosophy at Ingoldstadt, and a writer of eminence, died 1550.

AMERICUS, Vesputius, a Florentine, a discoverer in the continent called, after him, America, died 1526. See COLUMBUS.

AMES, Fisher, a distinguished statesman and eloquent orator, born in Dedham, Mass., author of a celebrated speech in Congress on the British treaty in 1776. He possessed a mind of a great and extraordinary character, and died in 1808.

AMES, William, of Norfolk, Eng., a learned divine, professor of the university of Franeker, Holland, died at Rotterdam, on his way to New-England, 1633.

AMES, Joseph, a celebrated typographical historian, and secretary to the society of Antiquaries, was originally a ship-chandler at Wapping. Late in life he took to the study of antiquities; and, besides his great work on "Typographical Antiquities," containing accounts of our earliest printers and their works, he published a list, in 8vo., of English heads, engraved and mezzotinto, and drew up the "Parentalia," from Mr. Wren's papers. He was born at Great Yarmouth, 1689, and died Oct. 7, 1759.

AMHERST, Jeffrey, lord, commander-in-chief of the British army at the conquest of Canada, 1760; born in England 1717; captured Louisburg 1758; succeeded Abercrombie in the command of the army of North America; returned to England, where he was created field marshal, and died 1798, aged 80.

AMBURST, Nicholas, born at Marden, in Kent, but in what year is uncertain. He received his grammatical education at Merchant Taylors' School, in London, and thence was removed to St. John's College, Oxford, but expelled for irregularity of conduct. Soon after Mr Amhurst quitted Oxford, he seems to have settled in London as a writer by profession. He published a volume of miscellanies; but the principal literary undertaking of Mr. Amhurst was, "The Craftsman," which was carried on for a number of years with great spirit and success, and was more read and attended to than any production of the kind that had hitherto been published in England. Ten or twelve thousand were sold in a day; and the effect which it had in raising the indignation of the people, and in controlling the power of administration, was very considerable. He died at Twickenham, April 27, 1742, of a broken heart, and was buried at the charge of his printer, Richard Franklin.

AMICONI, Giacomo, a Venitian, was a successful portrait and historical painter in England, and afterwards painter to the king of Spain. He died 1752.

AMMIANUS, Marcellinus, a Latin historian, died about 390.

AMMIRATO, or AMMIRATI, Scipio, born in Naples in 1531, wrote a history of Florence in two vols. folio, and many other works of less importance, and died at Florence, 1600.

AMMON, the son of Lot, and progenitor of the Ammonites, lived about 1900 B. C.

AMMONIUS, a peripatetic philosopher, precursor to Plutarch.

AMMONIUS, Saccus, a philosopher of the 3d century, and founder of the Eclectic sect, died 243.

AMMONIUS, a surgeon of Alexandria, who first adopted the present operation of lithotomy.

AMMONIUS, Andrew, a learned native of Tucca, who came and settled in England. He lived some time in Sir Thomas More's house, and afterwards in St. Thomas' College, for he was not in circumstances sufficient to hire a house of his own. There subsisted a strong friendship and close correspondence between him and Erasmus. The advice which Erasmus gives him, in regard to pushing his fortune, has a good deal of humour in it, and was certainly intended as a satire on the artful methods generally practised by the selfish and ambitious part of mankind. "In the first place (says he) throw off all sense of shame; trust yourself into every one's business, and elbow out whomsoever you can; neither love nor hate any one; measure every thing by your own advantage; let this be the scope and drift of all your actions. Give nothing but what is to be returned with hustury, and be complaisant to every body. Have always two strings to your bow. Feign that you are solicited by many from abroad, and get every thing ready for your departure. Show letters inviting you elsewhere, with great promises." Fortune, at length, began to smile upon Ammonius, for he was appointed secretary to Henry VIII., and honoured by Pope Leo X. with a public character at the court of that prince; and, in all appearance, he would have soon risen higher, had not death carried him off when he was but of a middle age. He died of the sweating sickness in 1517. Ammonius wrote several Latin poetical pieces.

AMMONIUS, Livinus, a Carthusian Monk, esteemed by Erasmus for his learning and piety, died 1556.

AMONTONS, William, was born in Normandy, the last day of August, 1663. He was in the 3d form of the Latin school at Paris, when, after a dangerous illness, he contracted such a deafness as obliged him to renounce almost all conversation with mankind. In this situation, he began to think of employing himself in the invention of machines. He applied, therefore, to the study of geometry; and it is said that he would not try any remedy to cure his deafness, either because he thought it incurable, or because it increased his attention. He studied with great care the nature of barometers and thermometers; and, in 1687, presented a new hygroscope to the Royal Academy of Sciences, which was very much approved. Amontons found out a method to acquaint people at a great distance, in a very little time, with whatever one pleased. This method was as follows: Let there be people placed in several stations, at such a distance from one another, that, by the help of a telescope, a man in one station may see a signal made by the next before him; he must immediately make the same signal, that it may be seen by persons in the station next after him, who are to communicate it to those in the following station, and so on. [Hence certainly originated the modern Telegraph.] When the Royal Academy was newly regulated in 1699, Amontons was admitted a member of it, and read there his "New Theory of Friction," in which he happily cleared up a very important part of mechanics. He died the 11th of October, 1705.

AMORT, Eusebius, a Bavarian ecclesiastic, and writer on theological subjects, died 1775.

AMORY, Dr. Thomas, a dissenting minister of considerable note, born at Taunton, Jan. 28, 1701, died in London, June 24, 1774. His sermons chiefly tended to illustrate the perfections and providence of God; the evidences of a future state; the truth and excellency of the Gospel; the great duties of a Christian life, &c.

AMORY, Thomas, esq., an intense student, and a writer of some merit, of Westminster, died 1789.

AMPHINOMUS and ANAPIUS, were two brothers, who heroically saved their aged parents on their shoulders during an eruption of Ætna.

AMPSINGIUS, John Assner, professor of physic, at Rostock, in the beginning of the 17th century.

AMRU EBN-AL-AS, a Mussulman, was first the enemy, and afterwards the friend of Mahomet; he died governor of Egypt, 663.

AMSDORF, Nicholas, a follower of Lutber, and bishop of Nuremburgh, died 1541.

AMURATH I., an Ottoman emperor, and a successful warrior, notorious for his cruelty, died 1389.

AMURATH II., successor to Mahomet as Ottoman emperor; he was the first Turk who used cannon in battle; he resigned his crown to his son, but afterwards resumed it, and died 1451.

AMURATH III. succeeded Selim II., and immediately murdered his five brothers; he was a valiant and successful warrior, and died 1595.

AMURATH I., successor to Mustapha, a cruel prince, who put 30,000 inhabitants of Bagdad to the sword, died 1640.

AMY, N., an advocate of the parliament of Aix, and a writer on natural science, died 1760.

AMYRUTZES, a philosopher of Trebizond, who renounced Christianity for Mahometanism, and became a favourite of Mahomet II.

AMYOT, James, bishop of Auxerre, and grand almoner of France under Henry III., and Charles IX., and a writer on several subjects; but chiefly known as the translator of "Plutarch's Lives and Morals." He was born at Melun, 1514, and died 1593.

AMYRAULT, Moses, an eminent French divine, born 1596, at Borgueil, a small town of Touraine. He was a man of such charity and compassion, that, during the last ten years of his life, he bestowed his whole salary on the poor, without distinction of Catholic or Protestant, and died 1664.

ANACHARSIS, an illustrious Scythian philosopher. He travelled to Athens in the time of Solon, with whom he contracted an intimate friendship; and Solon not only instructed him, but sought all opportunities of doing him honour. He had a quick and lively genius, a strong and masterly eloquence; and there was something so determined and resolute in his manner, that those who imitated him were said to speak in the Scythian style. He was extremely fond of poetry, and wrote upon certain laws of the Scythians and Greeks. Croesus invited him to Sardis, and offered him money; but the philosopher answered, "that he was come to Greece to learn the laws and manners of that country; that he had no occasion for gold or silver; and that it would suffice for him to return to Scythia a wiser and more intelligent man than he came from thence." After staying long in Greece, he prepared to return home; and passing through Cyzicum, he found that city celebrating very solemnly the feasts of Cybele, and vowed to do the same if he should get home in safety. Upon his arrival in Scythia, he attempted to change the ancient customs of his country, and to establish those of Greece; which proved extremely disagreeable to the Scythians, and at length destructive to himself. For entering one day a thick wood, to perform his vow to Cybele as secretly as might be, he was discovered in the midst of the solemnity, and shot dead with an arrow by the king himself. There are many beautiful apothegms of this philosopher preserved by Lartius, Plutarch, and other writers.

ANACLETUS, bishop of Rome, suffered martyrdom 92.

ANACLETUS claimed the papacy in opposition to Innocent II., but not succeeding, died in obscurity, 1138.

ANACOANA, queen of Xiragua, in the island of St. Domingo, was cruelly put to death by Ovando.

ANACREON, a Greek poet, born at Teos, a seaport of Ionia, flourished about the 62d Olympiad. This poet had a most delicate wit, but was certainly too fond of pleasure; for love and wine had the disposal of all his hours. The manner of his death, which happened at Abdera, is said to have been very extraordinary; for they tell us, he was choked with a grape-stone, which he swallowed as he was regaling on some new wine. A small part only of Anacreon's works remain; and these consist chiefly of Bacchanalian songs, and love sonnets. The odes of Anacreon," says Rapin, "are flowers, beauties, and perpetual graces."

ANAGNOSTA, John, a Byzantine historian.

ANDERSON, John, A. M. an able and popular preacher, and minister of Dumbarton, died 1720.

ANDERSON, Sir Edmund, made lord chief justice of the common pleas in 1582. He was a very strict lawyer, and governed himself entirely by statutes; for we have his express declaration, that he neither expected precedents in all cases, nor would he be bound by them where he saw that they were not founded upon justice, but would act as if there were no such precedents. Of this we have a proof from the reports in his time, published by Mr. Goldesborough: "The case of Resceit was moved again; and Shuttleworth said, that he could not be received, because he was named in the writ; and added, that he had searched all the books, and there was not one case where he who is named in the writ may be received."—"What of that?" said Judge Anderson; "shall we not give judgment because it is not adjudged in the books before? we will give judgment according to reason; and if there be no reason in the books, I will not regard them."—He held his office to the time of his death, which happened August 1, 1605.

ANDREAS, James, an eminent Lutheran divine, chancellor and rector of the university of Tubingen; his writings were numerous and much esteemed; he died 1590.

ANDREAS, John, a famous canonist of the 14th century, born at Mugello, near Florence. We are told wonderful things concerning the austerity of his life; as, that he macerated his body with prayer and fasting, and lay upon the bare ground for 20 years together, covered only with a bear skin: and this is attested by very good authors.—Andreas had a beautiful daughter, named Novella, whom he loved extremely and he is said to have instructed her so well in all parts of learning, that when he was engaged in any affair which hindered him from reading lectures to his scholars, he sent his daughter in his room : when, lest her beauty should prevent the attention of the hearers, she had a little curtain drawn before her. To perpetuate the memory of this daughter, he entitled his commentary upon the Decretals of Gregory IX. "The Novella." Andreas died of the plague at Bologna, in 1348, after he had been a professor 45 years, and was buried in the church of the Dominicans.

ANDREAS, John Valentine, a German Protestant divine, died 1654.

ANDREAS, John, was born a Mahometan, at Xativa, in the kingdom of Valencia, and succeeded his father in the dignity of alfaqui of that city. He was enlightened with the knowledge of the Christian religion by being present at a sermon in the great church of Valencia, on the day of the Assumption of the blessed Virgin, in 1417. Upon this he desired to be baptized; and in memory of the calling of St. John and St. Andrew, he took the names of John Andreas. At the desire of Martin Garcia, bishop of Barcelona, he composed his famous work of "The Confusion of the Sect of Mahomet." It contains 12 chapters, wherein he has collected the fabulous stories, impostures, forgeries, brutalities, follies, obscenities, absurdities, impossibilities, lies, and contradictions which Mahomet, in order to deceive the simple people, has dispersed in the writings of that sect, and especially in the Koran. This book, which was published at first in Spanish, has been translated into several languages; and all those who write against the Mahometans quote it very much.

ANDREWS, James Petit, a miscellaneous writer of considerable learning and talents, was born near Newbury, Berks, in 1737; and died in London, Aug. 6, 1797. His first work was one of uncommon pleasantry and humour, entitled "Anecdotes, ancient and modern, with observations," 8vo., 1789, 1790. His best work, however, was "The history of Great Britain, connected with the chronology of Europe, with notes, &c., containing anecdotes of the times, lives of the learned, and specimens of their works, from Caesar's invasion to the accession of Edward VI." 2 vols. 4to., 1794, 1795. It is much to be regretted that he did not live to complete this work. Mr. Andrews also published, in 1796, a continuation of "Henry's history of Great Britain," 1 vol. 4to. and 2 vols. 8vo. He was, in the latter part of his life, one of the magistrates of the police-office, Queen Square, Westminster.

ANDREWS, Lancelot, bishop of Winchester, in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., was born in London, in 1565. There is a pleasant story related of him while he was bishop of Winchester, in the life of Waller the poet, who, going to see the king at dinner, overheard a very extraordinary conversation between his majesty, the bishop of Winchester, and Neale, bishop of Durham. These two prelates, standing behind the king's chair, his majesty asked them; "my lords," said he, "cannot I take my subjects' money when I want it, without all this formality in parliament?" The bishop of Durham readily answered, "God forbid, sir, but you should; you are the breath of our nostrils." Whereupon the king turned, and said to the bishop of Winchester, "well, my lord, what say you?" "Sir," replied the bishop, "I have no skill to judge of parliamentary cases." The king answered, "no put-offs, my lord; answer me presently." "Then, sir," said he, "I think it lawful for you to take my brother Neale's money, for he offers it." This great prelate died at Winchester-house, in Southwark, September 27, 1626, having written many excellent religious tracts, particularly "A manual of private devotions and meditations for every day in the week;" and "A manual of directions for the visitation of the sick."

ANDREWS, Miles Peter, a dramatic writer of some consideration in his day, and member in parliament for Bewdley, died, after a few days' illness, July 18, 1814. By the death of his brother he had succeeded to a share in the celebrated manufactory of gunpowder at Dartford; and purchased the noble mansion built by Lord Grenville, facing the Green Park. His death was so unexpected, that he had sent out above 200 cards of invitation to ladies to see the memorable fireworks in the Green Park, from his windows. He left property estimated at 110,000*l*.

ANELLO, Thomas, vulgarly called Massanello, was a poor fisherman of Naples, born in 1623. Having headed the malcontents in an insurrection at Naples, caused by the viceroy's laying a new tax on fruit, fish, &c., in 1647, he occasioned the most shocking disturbances in that city, murdering a great many people, and among the rest the duke of Caraffa. He ordered many gibbets and wheels for torture to be set up, and was followed by ten or twelve hangmen to execute his orders. After this sedition had continued, with all kinds of barbarity, for ten days, it was suppressed by four gentlemen knocking the traitor on the head. His corpse was dragged about the streets with all the scorn and contempt imaginable. His head, being then cut off, was thrown into one ditch, and his body into another.

ANSON, Peter Hubert, a French writer, member of the national assembly, and farmer of the post, died 1810.

ANSON, George, lord, was the son of William Anson, Esq., of Shutborough, a very ancient and worthy family in Staffordshire, and was born in 1700. On the breaking out of the Spanish war he was appointed to command a fleet of five ships, destined to annoy the enemy in that dangerous and unfrequented sea which lies beyond America, and in that unexpected quarter to attack them with vigour. His departure being unaccountably delayed some months beyond the proper season, he sailed about the middle of September, 1740; and about the vernal equinox, in the most tempestuous weather, arrived in the latitude of Cape Horn. He doubted that dangerous cape in the month of March, 1741, after a bad passage of 40 days, in which he lost two ships, and by the scurvy, four or five men in a day. He arrived off Juan Fernandes in June, with only two ships, besides two attendants on the squadron, and 335 men. He left it in September, took some prizes, burnt Païta, and staid about the coast of America till May, 1742. He then crossed the southern ocean, proceeding with the Centurion only, the other ships having been destroyed in August. Having refreshed his crew at Tinian, he sailed in October for China; staid there till the beginning of 1743; waited for the galcon at the Philippine islands, met her on the 20th of June, and took her. Having sold the prize in China, he set sail for England, December 1743, and on the 15th of June, 1744, arrived at Spithead, having sailed in a fog through the midst of a French fleet then cruising in the channel. In 1747, being then on board the Prince George of 90 guns, in company with Admiral Warren and twelve ships more, he intercepted off Cape Finisterre a powerful fleet, bound from France to the East and West Indies; and by his valour and conduct again enriched himself and his officers, and strengthened the British navy, by taking six men of war and four East Indiamen, not one of them escaping. The French admiral, M. Jonquiere, on presenting his sword to the conqueror, said, "Monsieur, vous avez vaincu l'Invincible, et la Gloire vous suit," pointing to the two ships so named. King George II., for his signal services, rewarded him with a peerage, by the title of Lord Anson, baron of Sobarton, in Hants. He died suddenly at his seat at Moor Park, in Hertfordshire, June 6, 1762. His natural disposition was calm, cool, and steady; but it is reported, that this honest, undesigning seaman was frequently a dupe at play; and it was wittily observed of him, that he had been round the world, but never in it. See ROBINS.

ANSTEY, Christopher, a lively, but not voluminous poet, born at Trumpington, in Cambridgeshire, 1724, died at Hardenhuish, near Chippenham, Wilts, August 3, 1805, in his 81st year. Mr. Anstey was author of several short poems; but is principally known as the inventor of a new and diverting species of poetry, of which, however, he has left but one specimen of any length, which is, "The New Bath Guide," or, "Memoirs of the B[ulunderhead] family. He was educated at King's College, Cambridge, and intended for the church; but inheriting, somewhat unexpectedly, a moderate fortune, he resigned all thoughts of a clerical life, and passed the greater part of his time at Bath. A monument is erected to his memory in the Poet's corner of Westminster Abbey, by the filial affection of his son.

ANTIGONUS, Sochæus, founder of the sect of the Sadducees, about 300 B. C.

ANTIGONUS, son of Aristobulus II., king of Judea, was led in triumph by Pompey, and put to death 27 B. C.

ANTIMACHO, Mark Anthony, a native of Mantua, author of some Latin poems, died 1552.

ANTIMACHUS, a Greek poet, author of the Thebaid, or war of Thebes, 408 B. C.

ANTINE, Maur Francois d', born at Gouvilleux, in Liège; he was celebrated for his piety, and died 1746.

ANTIOCIUS I., succeeded his father Seleucus, on the throne of Antioch; he died 261 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS II., surnamed Theos, lost his dominions by the revolt of the Parthians; he died 264 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS III., or Great, he was at first successful, but was finally conquered by the Scipios, and died 187 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS IV., son of the Great, succeeded after his brother Philopater, and died 165 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS V. was slain by Deinetrius, in the second year of his reign.

ANTIOCIUS, Sidetes, obtained the crown of Syria, and was slain in battle, 130 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS, Grypus, son of Sidetes, fell by the hand of one of his subjects, 97 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS, a stoic philosopher of Askalon, 100 B. C.

ANTIOCIUS, a monk of the 7th century, and author of homilies on the Scriptures.

ANTIPATER, one of Alexander's generals, died 318 B. C.

ANTIPATER, a stoic philosopher of Sidon.

ANTIPATER, Lælius Cæli, a Latin historian.

ANTIPATER, a Jew, minister to Hyrcanus, the brother of Aristobulus.

ANTIPATER, a bishop of Bostra, in Arabia, in the 5th century.

ANTIPHILUS, a painter of eminence, and the rival of Apelles.

ANTIPHON, an Athenian orator, and the first who laid down rules for that art; he was put to death 411 B. C.

ANTISTHENES, a philosopher of Athens, founder of the sect of the Cynics.

ANTOINETTE, queen of France. vid. MARIE.

ANTONI, de Sceaux, a famous rope dancer on the French stage, died 1732.

ANTONIA, daughter of Mark Antony, married Drusus, and died in the reign of her grandson, Caligula.

ANTONIANO, Silvio, a man of great learning, who raised himself from a low condition by his merit; his parents being so far from able to support him in his studies, that they themselves stood in need of clarity. He was born at Rome, in 1540, and made a quick and most surprising progress in his studies; for when he was but 10 years old, he could make verses upon any subject proposed to him; and those so excellent, though pronounced extempore, that even a man of genius could not compose the like without a good deal of time and pains. There was a proof given thereof at the table of the cardinal of Pisa, when he gave an entertainment one day to several other cardinals. Alexander Farnese, taking a nosegay, gave it to this youth, desiring him to present it to him of the company whom he thought most likely to be pope; he presented it to the cardinal de Medicis, and made a eulogium upon him in verse. This cardinal, who was pope some years afterwards under the name of Pius IV., brought him to Rome, and made him professor of belles-lettres in the college at Rome. He was afterwards chosen rector of the college, and died 1603.

ANTONIDES, Vander Goes, John, a poet, born at Goes, in Zealand; he died 1684.

ANTONINUS, Pius, a celebrated Roman emperor, succeeded Adrian, 138, and died 161.

ANTONINUS PHILOSOPIOS, Marcus Aurelius, the Roman emperor, born at Rome, the 26th of April, in the 121st year of the Christian era, and died on an expedition against the Marcomanni, in the 19th year of his reign. The whole empire regretted his loss as a most valuable prince, and paid the greatest regard to his memory; he was ranked among the gods, and almost every person had a statue of him in his house. His book of "Meditations" has been much admired by the best judges.

ANTONINUS, a geographer, whose age is unknown.

ANTONIO, Nicolas, canon of Seville, and author of "Bibliotheca Hispanica," in four volumes folio, died 1684.

ANTONIUS, Marcus, one of the greatest orators ever known at Rome. It was owing to him, according to Cicero, that Rome might boast herself a rival even to Greece itself in the art of eloquence. He defended among many others, Marcus Aquilius; and moved the judges in so sensible a manner, by the tears he shed, and the scars he showed on the breast of his client, that he carried his cause. He was unfortunately killed, during the disturbances raised at Rome by Marius and Cinna, in the year of Rome 667.

ANTONIUS, Marcus, the triumvir, was son of Antonius Creticus, by Julia, a noble lady of such merit, that Plutarch affirms her to have been "comparable to the wisest and most virtuous ladies of that age." Mark Antony, losing his father when young, launched out at once into all the excess of riot and debauchery, and wasted his whole patrimony before he had put on the manly gown. He afterwards went abroad to learn the art of war under Gabinus, who gave him the command of his horse in Syria, where he signalized his courage in the restoration of Ptolemy, king of Egypt. From Egypt he went to Cæsar, in Gaul; and after some stay there, being furnished with money and credit by Cæsar, returned to Rome to sue for the quaestorship. In this suit he succeeded, and afterwards attained the tribunate, in which office he was amazingly active for Cæsar, who, when he had made himself master of Rome, gave Antony the government of Italy, with the command over the legions there; in which post he gained the love of the soldiery. But what was more to his honour, he assisted Cæsar so successfully on several occasions, that, twice particularly, when Cæsar's army had been put to flight, he rallied the scattered troops, and gained the victory: this raised his reputation so, that he was reckoned the next best general to Cæsar. After the defeat of Pompey, at Pharsalia, Cæsar, as an acknowledgment of Antony's great services, made him master of the horse; in which office he behaved with violence; and this behaviour, together with his dissolute life, (for he was drunken and debauched to the last degree) was the reason why Cæsar, the next year, did not admit him his colleague in the consulship: he did, however, admit him two years after.— Upon the death of Cæsar, Antony was much frightened, and hid himself during the night, under the disguise of a slave; but hearing that the conspirators had retired to the capitol, he assembled the senate as consul, to deliberate upon the present situation of the commonwealth. Here Cicero moved for a decree of a general amnesty, or act of oblivion, for all that had passed: to which they unanimously agreed. Antony dissembled well, for it was nothing but dissimulation: he seemed to be all goodness; talked of nothing but healing measures; and, as a proof of his sincerity, moved that the conspirators should be invited to take part in their deliberations, and sent his son as a hostage for their safety. Upon this they all came down from the capitol; and, to crown the joy of the day, Brutus supped with Lepidus, as Cassius did with Antony. Antony is said to have asked Cassius, during supper, "whether he still wore a dagger under his gown." "Yes," replied Cassius, "and a very large one, in case you invade the sovereign power." This was what Antony all the while aimed at; and, as the event showed, he pursued his measures with the greatest address. He artfully proposed a decree for the confirmation of Cæsar's acts; and, getting Cæsar's register into his power, he proposed as Cæsar's acts whatever suited his purpose. He procured a public funeral for Cæsar, and took that opportunity of haranguing the soldiers and populace in his favour; and he inflamed them so against the conspirators, that Brutus and Cassius were forced to leave the city. He made a tour through Italy, to solicit the veteran soldiers, having first secured Lepidus, who had the army, to his interests; he seized the public treasure, and treated Octavius with superciliousness and contempt, though the adopted son and heir of Julius Cæsar. The patriots, however, with Cicero at their head, espousing Octavius, in order to destroy Antony, the latter was forced to change his measures, and look a little abroad: he endeavoured to extort the provinces of Macedonia and Syria from Brutus and Cassius; but, not succeeding, resolved to possess himself of Cisalpine Gaul, and besiege Decimus Brutus in Mutina. This siege is one of the most memorable things of the kind in history; and, in conducting it, Antony, though defeated, gained very great reputation: the consuls Hirtius and Pansa were both slain; and nothing but superior forces could have left Octavius master of the field. Antony fled in great confusion, wanting even the necessaries of life; and this very man, who had hitherto wallowed in luxury and intemperance, was obliged to live some days upon roots and water. He fled to the Alps, and was received by Lepidus; with whom and Octavius he formed the 2d triumvirate, as it has usually been called. When these three conferred, they would easily be persuaded that the patriots wanted only to destroy them all, which could not be done so effectually as by clashing them against one another, they therefore combined, proscribed their respective enemies, and divided the empire among themselves. Cicero fell a sacrifice to the resentment of Antony, who, indeed, was charged with most of the murders then committed: but they were rather to be charged to the account of his wife Fulvia, who, being a woman of avarice, cruelty, and revenge, committed a thousand enormities, of which he husband was ignorant. Upon the defeat of Brutus and Cassius by Octavius and Antony, at Philippi, which was owing chiefly to the military skill and bravery of the latter, Antony obtained the sovereign dominion, and went into Asia, where he had the most splendid court that ever was seen. The kings and princes of Asia came to his court, and acknowledged no other sovereign in the East but him. Queens and princesses, knowing him, doubtless, to be a man of amour and gallantry, strove who should win his heart; and the famous Cleopatra of Egypt succeeded. See CLEOPATRA.

ANTONIUS, Marcus Junius, debauched Julia, the daughter of Augustus, and killed himself when his disgrace was made public.

ANTONIUS, Liberalis, a Greek author, of whom little is known.

ANTONIUS, Honoratus, bishop of Constantine, in Africa.

ANTONIUS, called Nebrissensis, or Laxibra, was for five years a professor at Salamanca, and died 1522.

ANTONY. Vid. ANTHONY.

ANVARI, called king of Khorassan, a poet, died 1200.

ANVILLE, John Baptiste Bourguignon d', a most famous French writer on geography, born at Paris, 1702, and died there 1782, as much esteemed for the gentleness and simplicity of his manners as for his extensive knowledge. He laboured at his maps 15 hours a day for fifty years.

ANYTA, a Greek poetess.

ANYTUS, a rhetorician of Athens, who caused the death of Socrates.

APELLES, one of the most celebrated painters of antiquity, was born in the isle of Cos, and flourished in the time of Alexander the Great. He was in high favour with that prince, who made a law that no other person should draw his picture but Apelles: he accordingly drew him holding a thunderbolt in his hand: the piece was finished with so much skill and dexterity, that it used to be said, there were two Alexander: one invincible, the son of Philip; the other inimitable, the production of Apelles. Alexander gave him likewise another remarkable proof of his regard; for when he employed Apelles to draw Campaspe, one of his mistresses, having found that he had conceived an affection for her, he resigned her to him; and it was from her that Apelles is said to have drawn his Venus Anadyomene. One of Apelles' chief excellencies was, the making his pictures so exactly resemble the persons represented, that the physiognomists were able to form a judgment as readily from his portraits, as if they had seen the originals.

APELLES, a heretic of Syria in the 2d century.

APELLICON, a peripatetic philosopher, who was the means of preserving the works of Aristotle, about 90 B. C.

APER, Marcus, a Roman orator, died 85.

APHTHONIUS, a rhetorician of Antioch, in the 3d century.

APICIUS. There were three ancient Romans of this name; all very eminent, not for genius, for virtue, for great or good qualities, but for gluttony: or, if we may soften the term, in compliance with the growing taste of the times we write in, for the art of refining in the science of eating. The first lived under Sylla, the second under Augustus and Tiberius, and the third under Trajan. The second, however, is the most illustrious personage of the three, and he kept a kind of school of gluttony at Rome; he spent two millions and a half in entertainments; when, finding himself very much in debt, he was forced at length to look into the state of his affairs: and seeing that he had but 250,000 livres left, he poisoned himself from an apprehension of being starved with such a sum.

This man wrote a treatise, "De Re Culinaria."

APIEN, Peter, a mathematician of Ingolstadt, died 1532.

APIEN, Philip, son of the preceding, a physician, died 1589.

APION, a famous grammarian, born at Oasis, in Egypt, was a professor at Rome in the reign of Tiberius. He was undeniably a man of learning, but a downright pedant; for he used to boast, with the greatest assurance, that he gave immortality to those to whom he dedicated his works. How would his vanity be mortified, if he knew that none of these works remain, and that his name and person would long ago have been buried in oblivion, if other writers had not made mention of them! One of his chief works was "The Antiquities of Egypt."

APOCAUCHUS, a Greek of mean origin, became the favourite of the emperor Andronicus; he died 1345.

APOLLINARIS, C. Sulpit, professor of grammar, at Rome, in the 2d century.

APOLLINARIUS, a presbyter of Alexandria, in the 4th century.

APPOLLODORUS, the Athenian, a famous grammarian, son of Asclepiades, and disciple of Aristarchus. He wrote several works which are not extant: his most famous productions are mentioned in Fabricius' "Bibliotheca Græca."

APPOLLODORUS, a famous architect under Trajan and Adrian, was born at Damascus, and had the direction of that most magnificent bridge which the former ordered to be built over the Danube, in the year 104. He, however, fell a victim to the envy of the emperor Adrian, who always valued himself highly upon his knowledge of arts and sciences, and hated every one of whose eminence in his profession he had reason to be jealous.

APPOLLODORUS, a painter of Athens, the rival of Zeuxis, 408 B. C.

APOLLONIA, St., a martyr of Alexandria, 243.

APOLLONIUS, a Greek poet and rhetorician, born at Alexandria, under the reign of Ptolemy Evergetes, king of Egypt, was a scholar of Callimachus; and wrote a poem upon the expedition of the golden fleece: the work is styled "Argonautica," and consists of four books.

APOLLONIUS of Perga, a city of Pamphylia, a famous geometrician, who also lived under the reign of Ptolemy Evergetes, and composed several valuable works; of which only, his "Conics" remain.

APOLLONIUS, a Pythagorean philosopher, born at Tyana, in Cappadocia, about the beginning of the 1st century. At 16 years of age, he became a strict observer of the rules of Pythagoras, renouncing wine, women, and all sorts of flesh; not wearing shoes, letting his hair grow, and wearing nothing but linen. He soon after set up for a reformer of mankind, and chose his habitation in the temple of Esculapius, where he is said to have performed many miraculous cures.

APPOLLONIUS, a grammarian of Alexandria, in the 2d century

APOLLONIUS, a Roman senator, who suffered martyrdom in the 2d century.

APOLLONIUS, a stoic philosopher, preceptor to the emperor Marcus Aurelius.

APOLLONIUS, a grammarian, author of a lexicon on Homer, in the age of Augustus.

APOLLONIUS COLLATIUS, Peter, a priest of Navarre, also an indifferent poet.

APOLLOS, a Jew of Alexandria; he became a convert to Christianity, and his powers of preaching were more admired than those of Paul.

APONO, Peter d', born near Padua, studied at Paris, took his degrees in medicine and philosophy, was accused of magic, but died before the prosecution was completed, 1316.

APOSTOLIUS, Michael, a learned Greek author, in the 15th century.

APPIAN, an eminent historian, who wrote the Roman history in the Greek language, and flourished under the reigns of the emperors Trajan and Adrian.

APPIAN, Peter, a mathematician. Vid. A PIEN.

APPLETON, Nathaniel, D. D., a distinguished divine and minister of Cambridge, Mass.; born at Ipswich, 1692; was fellow of the university for 60 years; received the second degree of doctor of divinity which the Cambridge university ever conferred; the first having been conferred on Increase Mather, 80 years before. His occasional sermons published were very numerous.

APPLETON, Jesse, D. D., a student of theology, under Dr. Lathrop, of Springfield, and president of Bowdoin college, Maine, died 1819.

APRIES, king of Egypt, 594 B. C.; supposed by some to be the Pharaoh Hophra of the Scriptures.

AFROSIO, Angelico, an Augustine, born at Ventimiglia, in the Genoese, which he adorned by a valuable collection of books; he died 1682.

APULEIUS, Lucius, a Platonic philosopher, lived in the 2d century, under the Antonines, and was born at Madaura, a Roman colony in Africa. He was a man of a curious and inquisitive disposition, especially in religious matters, which prompted him to take several journeys, and to enter into several societies of religion. He spent almost his whole fortune in travelling. He was indefatigable, however, in his studies, and composed several books in prose and verse; but most of them are lost. His "Golden Ass" is the best of his works now extant.

AQUAVIVA, Octavio, cardinal, legate, and archbishop of Naples; he died 1612.

AQUAVIVA, Andrew Matth. d', duke of Atri, and prince of Teramo, a Neapolitan nobleman, who patronized literature; he died 1615.

AQUAVIVA, Claude, son of Andrew, governor of the Jesuits, died 1615.

AQUILA, a mathematician of Pontus; he translated the Bible from Hebrew into Greek.

AQUILANO, Serasino, a native of Aquila, known by his sonnets and other poetical trifles; he died 1500.

AQUILANUS, Sebastian, an Italian physician, whose real name is unknown; he was professor at Padua, and died 1543.

AQUINAS, St. Thomas, a celebrated teacher of the school divinity in the universities of Italy, and commonly called the angelical doctor, was born in the castle of Aquino, in the Terra di Lavoro, in Italy, about the year 1224. In 1274 he was sent for to the second council of Lyons, by pope Gregory X., that he might read before them a book which he had written against the Greeks at the command of Urban IV.; but he fell sick on his journey, at the monastery of Fossanova, near Terracina, where he died on the 7th of March, aged 50 years. Aquinas left a vast number of works, which have been repeatedly printed in 17 volumes folio.

AQUINO, Philip, a Jew, of Carpentras, professor of Hebrew at Paris, died 1696.

ARABSCHAH, author of a history of Tamerlane, a Mohomedan historian of Damascus; he died 1450.

ARAGON, Jane d', wife of Ascanius Colona, illustrious for her virtues and fortitude; she died 1577.

ARAM, Eugene, an Englishman of mean birth, but remarkable for his extraordinary abilities, and the singular circumstances attending his unhappy fate; he was born in Yorkshire, 1704. He acquired considerable knowledge in the mathematics, the Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and Celtic languages, and many parts of polite literature, entirely by his own industry. But, while employed in those learned labours, he committed a crime not to be expected in a man of his studious turn; as the only inducement that led him to it is said to have been gain, though he afterwards assigned jealousy of his wife as the motive. In 1744 he murdered Daniel Clarke, which crime was concealed 14 years, and was then discovered by the accidental finding of a skeleton supposed to be that of Clarke. This was a mistake but it led to a discovery. He was apprehended on suspicion, tried at York, in 1759, and found guilty on sufficient evidence, corroborated by the testimony of his own wife. His defence was uncommonly curious, and at once an evidence of his taste and erudition. After conviction, he confessed the justice of his sentence, and endeavoured to destroy himself by opening an artery in his arm with a razor. He was, however, executed, and hung in chains, in Knaresborough forest.

ARANTHIUS, Julius, an Italian physician and anatomist, born at Bologna, died 1581.

ARATUS, a Greek poet and astronomer, who flourished about the 124th Olympiad.

ARATUS, a native of Sicily, the deliverer of his country and promoter of the Achæan league, died 216 B. C.

ARBOGATES, a Roman general, destroyed himself 394.

ARBRISSEL, Robert d', a native of Brittany, founded the monastery of Fontevrault, and died 1117.

ARBUCKLE, James, M. A., a native of Glasgow, who possessed some merit as a poet, died 1734.

ARBUTHNOT, Alexander, eminent for his learning and piety, died at Aberdeen, 1538.

ARBUTHNOT, Dr. John, a celebrated wit and physician in queen Anne's reign, was the son of an episcopal clergyman in Scotland, nearly allied to the noble family of that name. On his coming to London, his extensive learning and facetious and agreeable conversation introduced him by degrees into practice, and he became eminent in his profession. Being at Epsom when prince George of Denmark was suddenly taken ill, he was called in to his assistance. His advice was successful, and his highness, recovering, employed him always afterwards as his physician. In consequence of this, upon the indisposition of Dr. Hannes, he was appointed physician in ordinary to queen Anne, in 1709. His gentle manners, polite learning, and excellent talents, entitled him to an intimate correspondence and friendship with the celebrated wits of his time, Pope, Swift, Gay, and Parnell. In 1727, he published "Tables of ancient Coins, Weights, and Measures," in 4to. In 1732, his "Essay concerning the nature of Aliments," &c., was printed; which was followed the year after by the "Effects of Air on Human Bodies." His other works were humorous and satirical pieces on various subjects. He died in London, February, 1735.

ARC, Joan of. See JOAN.

ARCADIUS, succeeded his father, the great Theodosius, as emperor of the East, and died 408.

ARCADIUS, an African bishop, was put to death because he opposed the Arians, 437.

ARCERE, Anthony, a native of Marsilles, who was priest of the oratory, died 1699.

ARCERE, Lewis Etienne, known as a poet and historian, died 1781.

ARCESLAUS, a Greek philosopher, succeeded Crates in his school. He was born 316 B. C.

ARCHDALE, John, governor of Carolina in 1695; he was instrumental in quieting the tumults of the colony about that period, and introduced the first rice ever cultivated in the country. He died in England.

ARCHELAUS, son of Hierod the great, king of Judea, succeeded to half the kingdom of his father. He died A. D. 6.

ARCHELAUS, king of Macedonia after Perdiccas II., died about 398 B. C.

ARCHELAUS, a philosopher, successor to Anaxagoras, at Lampsacus.

ARCHELAUS, a bishop of Mesopotamia, 278, opposed the Manicheans.

ARCHELAUS, a geographer in the age of Alexander.

ARCHIAS, a native of Antioch. Cicero spoke in his defence.

ARCHIDAMUS, king of Sparta after Agesilaus, his father, 561 B. C.

ARCHIGENES, a Greek physician in the age of Trajan.

ARCHILOCHUS, a Greek poet, born in the isle of Paros, was the son of Telesicles; and, according to Mr. Bayle, flourished in the 26th Olympiad, or 690 years before Christ. His poetry abounded with the most poignant satire. This poet excelled chiefly in iambic verses, and was the inventor of them, as appears from a passage in Horace, Ep. xix. lib. i. verse 23, &c.

ARCHIMEDES, a celebrated geometrician, born at Syracuse, in Sicily, and related to Hiero, king of Syracuse. He was remarkable for his extraordinary application to mathematical studies, in which he used to be so much engaged, that his servants were often obliged to take him from them by force. He had such a surprising invention in mechanics, that he affirmed to Hiero, that if he had another earth whereon to plant his machines, he could move this which we inhabit. Archimedes became most famous by his curious contrivances, whereby the city of Syracuse was so long defended when besieged by Marcellus. Against the vessels which came up close to the walls he contrived a kind of crow, projected above the wall, with an iron grapple fastened to a strong chain. This was let down upon the prow of a ship, and, by means of the weight of a heavy counterpoise of lead, raised up the prow and set the vessel upright upon her poop; then dropping it all of a sudden, as if it had fallen from the walls, it sunk so far into the sea, that it fell in a great deal of water, even when it let directly on its keel. However, notwithstanding all his art, Syracuse was at length taken by Marcellus, who commanded his soldiers to have a particular regard to the safety of Archimedes; but this ingenious man was unfortunately slain by a soldier who did not know him. Archimedes is said to have been killed about 208 years before the birth of Christ. We have several of his works still extant; but the greater part of them are lost.

ARCHION, Lewis, chaplain of Lewis XIV., died 1717.

ARCHYTAS, a Pythagorean philosopher and mathematician of Tarentum, about 400 B. C.

ARCONS, Cesar de, a Gascon, advocate in the parliament of Bordeaux, died 1681.

ARCC, Philip Auguste de St. Foid, an Ingenious Parisian, known by his writings, died 1774.

ARCUDI, Alexander Thomas, a Dominican of Venice, author of some historical and biographical works, died about 1720.

ARCUDIUS, Peter, a Greek ecclesiastic of Corfu, employed in Russia by Clement VIII., died 1635.

ARCULPHUS, a French divine, who wrote an account of the Holy Land, in the 7th century.

ARCY, Patrick d', an Englishman. Vid. DARCY.

ARDEN, Edward, a native of Warwickshire. He was accused of being engaged in a conspiracy against the queen's life, and though no evidence appeared against them, both he and his son-in-law, Somerville, were condemned and executed, 1583.

ARDERN, John, an early medical writer, settled at Newark, afterwards at London, about 1370.

AREAGATHUS, a Greek physician at Rome, 269 B. C.

ARESI, Paul, bishop of Tortona, author of some theological works, died 1645.

ARETEUS, a physician of Cappadocia: but in what time he flourished authors are not agreed; some placing him under Augustus Cæsar, others under Trajan or Adrian. His works, however, are very valuable. The best edition was published by Dr. Wigan, in folio, at Oxford, 1723.

ARETAPHILA, a woman of Cyrene, who avenged the death of her husband, &c.

ARETE, daughter of Aristippus, of Cyrene; she taught philosophy.

ARETHAS, a bishop of Cappadocia, in the 10th century, author of a commentary on Revelations.

ARETIN, Guy, a Benedictine monk, who lived in the 11th century. He rendered himself famous by discovering a new method of learning music; and was said to have been the inventor of the six notes in music, "Ut, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol, La."

ARETIN, Leonard, was one of the ablest men in eloquence and science of the 15th century; and left several works, the catalogue of which may be seen in Gesner's "Bibliotheca." He died about 1443, being then 74 years of age, at Florence; where there is a marble monument erected to him in the Church of the Holy Cross, with an inscription to the following purport:—"Since the death of Leonard, history is in mourning; eloquence is become mute; the Greek and Latin muses cannot forbear shedding tears."

ARETIN, Francis, a man of great reading, and well acquainted with the Greek language. He studied at Sienna, about the year 1443; and afterwards taught law there with such a vivacity of genius, that they called him the prince of subtleties, and his wit became a proverb. He taught also in the university of Pisa, and in that of Ferrara.

ARETIN, Peter, a native of Arezzo, who lived in the 16th century. He was famous for his satirical writings, and was so bold as to carry his invectives even against sovereigns; whence he got the title of the scourge of princes. He used to boast that his lampoons did more service to the world than sermons; and it was said of him, that he had subjected more princes by his pen, than the greatest warriors had ever done by their arms. Aretin wrote also many irreligious and obscene pieces. Some say, that he afterwards changed his loose, libertine principles; but, however this may be, it is certain that he composed several pieces of devotion. He was author, likewise, of some comedies, which were esteemed pretty good of their kind, and died in the year 1556, being about 65 years old.

ARETIN, John, an able writer of Berne, in the 15th century.

ARETIN, Angelo, a learned professor of law at Bologna and Ferrara, died 1480.

ARGALL, Samuel, an adventurer to this country in 1609, who destroyed a French settlement on Mt. Desert, subdued the Dutch on Hudson's river; he was appointed deputy governor of Virginia in 1617; but his administration proving odious, he was obliged to fly the country.

ARGALL, John, an eminent scholar, rector of Halesworth, Suffolk, died 1606.

ARGELLATA, Peter, a physician of Bologna, died 1423.

ARGELLATI, Philip, an indefatigable writer, born at Bologna, died 1755.

ARGENS, Jean Baptiste de Boyer, Marquis d', a French writer, famous rather for the number than weight of his productions, was born at Aix, in Provence, 1704, and died there 1770. He was master of many languages; he painted very well, and was a considerable proficient in anatomy and chymistry. Of his works, the principal are, "Lettres Juives," "Lettres Chinoises," "Lettres Cabalistiques," "Philosophie du Bon Sens," &c. &c. There is learning, knowledge, and good sense, scattered through all these; but they are strongly tinged with libertinism, and the worst sort of free-thinking.

ARGENSOLA, Leonard, and Bartholomew, two Spanish poets of merit.

ARGENSON, Mark Bene le Voyer, Marquis d', introduced lettres de cachet during his administration of the police at Paris, died 1721.

ARGENTAL, Charles Augustus count d', a foreign minister at the French court, the friend of Le Kain, Voltaire, &c. died 1788.

ARGENTIER, John, studied medicine, was called Censor Medicorum, because he censured Galen, died 1572.

ARGENTINA, Thomas d', a learned head of the Augustines, 1345.

ARGENTRE, Bertrand d', a native of Vitre, eminent for his knowledge of history and jurisprudence, died 1590.

ARGENTRE, Charles Duplessis d', doctor of the Sorbonne, almoner to the king, and bishop of Tulles, died 1740.

ARIOBARZANES III., brother of the preceding, put to death by Antony.

ARIOSTI, Attilio, a musician, born at Bologna, published a book of cantatas, 1725.

ARIOSTO, Lodovico, or Lewis, a celebrated Italian poet, descended of a good family, and born at the castle of Reggio, in Lombardy, in 1474. He began his "Orlando Furioso" when he was about 30 years of age, and it is the most celebrated of all his works. But his attachment to poetry did not hinder him from engaging in public affairs, for he was employed in embassies and negotiations in different parts of Italy.

Ariosto was crowned with the laurel by the emperor Charles V., in 1533, and died at Ferrara the 8th of July, in the same year.

ARIOS'PI, Gabriel, brother to the poet, was himself eminent as a Latin poet; he died 1552.

ARIOVISTUS, king of Germany, assisted the Gauls against the Romans, and was defeated by Julius Cæsar.

ARISTÆNÆTES, an ancient writer, to whom are ascribed certain Greek epistles on the subject of love and gallantry, died in 358.

ARISTANDER, a soothsayer in the army of Alexander the Great.

ARISTARCHUS, a Grecian philosopher, born in Samos, is delivered down to us as the principal person, if not the first, who maintained the earth to turn upon its centre, and to describe a circle yearly round the sun; an opinion revived and established by Copernicus and Galileo, and now universally received. It is not certain when he lived; but, from the mention made of him by Archimedes, he must have flourished before his death. None of his works remain, except a treatise "Upon the Greatness and Distance of the Sun and Moon," inserted in the third volume of "Mathematical Works," printed at Oxford, 1699, in folio.

ARISTARCHUS, a celebrated grammarian, was born in Samothracia, but chose Alexandria to reside at. He applied himself particularly to criticism, and made a revival of Homer's poems with great exactness, but in a manner too magisterial, for those verses which he did not like he treated as spurious. Cicero and Horace have used his name to express a very rigid critic, and it is used to this day for the same purpose, but not without opprobrium, derived partly from himself, yet more from the manners of modern verbal critics. Growing dropical, he found no other remedy than to starve himself to death. Suidas relates that he died in Cyprus, aged 72.

ARISTARCHUS, a Jew of Thessalonica, the companion of St. Paul.

ARISTEAS, a Greek historian, 550 B. C.

ARISTEAS, one of the 70 translators of the Septuagint.

ARISTEUS, a Greek mathematician, 350 B. C.

ARISTIDES, a philosopher of Athens, 125.

ARISTIDES, Ælius, a very famous sophist of antiquity, was born at Adrian, a town of Mysia, and flourished under Adrian and the two following emperors. He spent his life in travelling and declaiming; went all over Egypt four times, and penetrated even to Ethiopia. When Smyrna was destroyed by an earthquake in the year 178, he wrote so affecting a letter to Marcus Aurelius, that the emperor ordered it to be rebuilt immediately; upon which the inhabitants erected a statue to Aristides, as to the restorer of their city. He died about the age of 60. His works were published, with a Latin version and notes, by Dr. Samuel Jebb, at Oxford, 1723, in two volumes 4to.

ARISTIDES, surnamed the Just, a celebrated Athenian general, flourished about 480 years B. C.

ARISTIDES, a painter of Thebes, 340 B. C.

ARISTIDES, a historian of Miletus, who wrote an account of Italy, &c.

ARISTIPPUS, the founder of the Cyrenaic sect of philosophy, flourished 392 B. C. He asserted pleasure to be the ultimate end in which all happiness consists; and his manner of life was agreeable to his philosophy, for he indulged himself in all the luxuries of dress, wine, and women.

ARISTO, a stoic philosopher, of Cos, 260 B. C. He maintained that virtue is the supreme good.

ARISTO, a peripatetic philosopher, 230 B. C.
ARISTO, Titus, a Roman lawyer of eminence in the age of Trajan.

ARISTOBULUS I., high-priest and king of the Jews, died 104 B. C.

ARISTOBULUS II., son of Alexander Janneus, deposed by Pompey, died 45 B. C.

ARISTOBULUS, an Alexandrian Jew, who united the peripatetic philosophy with the laws of Moses.

ARISTOBULUS, grandson of the preceding, made high-priest, was put to death by Herod, 36 B. C.

ARISTOGITON, an Athenian, who, in conjunction with Harmodius, subverted the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ, 516 B. C.

ARISTOMENES, a Messenian, whose courage caused his countrymen to avenge the oppression of the Spartans, 635 B. C.

ARISTOPHANES, a comic poet of Athens, cotemporary with Plato, Socrates, and Euripides. Most of his plays were written during the Peloponnesian war. His imagination was warm and lively, and his genius particularly turned to raillery; he had also very great spirit and resolution, and was a declared enemy to slavery, and to all those who wanted to oppress their country. He described the affairs of the Athenians in so exact a manner, that his comedies are a faithful history of that people. He wrote above 50 comedies, but there are only 11 extant, which are perfect; these are, "Plutus, The Clouds, The Frogs, Equites, The Acharnenses, The Wasps, Peace, The Birds, The Ecclesiazusæ or Female Orators, The Thesmothiazusæ or Priestess of Ceres, and Lysistrata." "The Clouds," which he wrote in ridicule of Socrates, is the most celebrated of all his comedies. Madam Dacier tells us, she was so much charmed with this performance, that, after she had translated it, and read it over 200 times, it did not become the least tedious to her. Aristophanes having conceived some aversion to the poet Euripides, satirizes him in several of his plays, particularly in his "Frogs," and his "Thesmophoriazusæ." He wrote the "Lysistrata," when all Greece was involved in war, in which comedy the women are introduced debating upon the affairs of the commonwealth, when they come to a resolution not to go to bed with their husbands till peace should be concluded. He invented a peculiar kind of verse, which was called by his name, and is mentioned by Cicero in his "Brutus;" and Suidas says, that he also was the inventor of the tetrameter and octameter verse. Aristophanes was greatly admired among the ancients especially for the true Attic elegance of his style; and there have been several editions and translations of this poet. The time of his death is unknown.

ARISTOTLE, the chief of the peripatetic philosophers, born at Stagyra, a small city in Macedon, in the 99th Olympiad, about 384 years before Christ, was the son of Nichomachus, physician to Amyntas, the grandfather of Alexander the Great. By the advice of the Delphic oracle, he went to Athens when about 18, and studied under Plato till he was 37. He followed his studies with most extraordinary diligence, so that he soon surpassed all in Plato's school. He ate little, and slept less; and that he might not oversleep himself, Diogenes Laertius tells us, that he lay always with one hand out of the bed, having a ball of brass in it, which, by its falling into a basin of the same metal, awakened him. When he had studied about 15 years under Plato, he began to form different tenets from those of his master, who became highly piqued at his behaviour. Upon the death of Plato, he quitted Athens, and retired to Atarnya, a little city of Mysia, where his old friend, Hermias, reigned. Here he married Pythias, the sister of that prince, whom he is said to have loved so passionately, that he offered sacrifice to her. Some time after, Hermias having been taken prisoner by Meranoa, the king of Persia's general, Aristotle went to Mytelene, the capital of Lesbos, where he remained till Philip, king of Macedon, having heard of his great reputation, sent for him to be tutor to his son Alexander, then about 14 years of age. Aristotle accepted the offer, and in eight years taught him rhetoric, natural philosophy, ethics, politics, and a certain sort of philosophy, according to Plutarch, which he taught nobody else. Philip erected statues in honour of Aristotle, and for his sake rebuilt Stagyræ, which had been almost ruined by the wars. Aristotle having lost the favour of Alexander by adhering to Calisthenes, his kinsman, who was accused of a conspiracy against Alexander's life, removed to Athens, where he set up his new school. The magistrates received him very kindly, and gave him the Lyceum, so famous afterwards for the concourse of his disciples, and here it was, according to some authors, that he composed his principal works. When Aristotle was accused of impiety by one Eurymedon, a priest of Ceres, he wrote a large apology for himself, addressed to the magistrates; but, knowing the Athenians to be extremely jealous about their religion, and remembering the fate of Socrates, he was so much alarmed that he retired to Chalcis, a city of Eubœa, where he ended his days. Some say he poisoned himself, to avoid falling into the hands of his enemies; others affirm, that he threw himself into the Euripus, because he could not comprehend the reason of its ebbing and flowing; and there are others who tell us that he died of a cholick, in the 63d year of his age, being the third of the 114th Olympiad, two years after Alexander. The Stagyræites carried away his body, and erected altars to his memory.

ARISTOXENUS, a Grecian philosopher of Tarentum, about 324 B. C.

ARIUS, a divine of the 4th century, and the head and founder of the Arians, a sect which denied the eternal divinity and consubstantiality of the Word. He was born in Libya, near Egypt. The Arian principles, according to Spanheim, were, that Christ was only called God by way of title; that he was less than the Father, who only was eternal and without beginning; that he was a creature, having a beginning of existence, created out of things, having no being before the beginning of all things: hence he was made God, and the son of God by adoption, not by nature; and that the word was also subject to change; that the Father created all things by him as an instrument; and that he was the most excellent of all creatures; that the essence of the Father was different from the essence of the Son; neither was he co-eternal, co-equal, nor con-substantial with the Father; that the Holy Ghost was not God, but the creature of the Son, begot and created by him, inferior in dignity to the Father and Son, and co-worker in the creation. As to his death, it is said that Arius, being pressed by a natural necessity, retired to a house of convenience where he died instantly on the spot, all his entrails bursting out, with his liver and spleen. This happened in the year 336.

ARKEL, Cornel. Van, a Dutch divine of Amsterdam, died 1724.

ARKENIOLZ, John, a native of Helsingfors, in Sweden, author of some treatises on political subjects, &c., died 1777.

ARKWRIGHT, Sir Richard, a man who, in one of the lowest stations of life, being literally a penny barber at Manchester, by uncommon genius and persevering industry, invented and perfected a system of machinery for spinning cotton, that had in vain been attempted by many of the first mechanics of the 17th and 18th centuries; and which, by giving perpetual employment to many thousand families, increased the population, and was productive of great commercial advantage to his country. The machine is called a "Spinning Jenny." Sir Richard died August 3, 1792, leaving property to the amount of nearly half a million sterling.

ARLAUD, James Antony, a native of Geneva, eminent as a painter, died 1743.

ARLOTTA, a beautiful woman of Falaise, daughter of a tanner, and mistress of Robert, duke of Normandy.

ARLOTTO, a native of Magello, in Tuscany, whose right name was Mainardi, was dean of St. Cresci, in the diocese of Fiesole; he died 1483.

ARMAGNAC, John d', of an ancient family in France, raised to the highest dignity of the national church, died about 1408.

ARMAGNAC, Bernard, count d', brother of the preceding, placed at the head of the party of Orleans, was assassinated, 1418.

ARPELLINO, Francis, a banker, made cardinal by Leo X., died 1527.

ARMENONVILLE, Joseph John Baptist Flenrion d', a French statesman, keeper of the seals from 1722 to 1727, died 1728.

ARMINIUS, a brave chief of the Catti, called the deliverer of Germany; he was assassinated A. D. 21.

ARMINIUS, James, the founder of the sect of the Arminians, or Remonstrants, was born at Oude-water, in Holland, in 1560. "The Arminians hold (says Mr. Broughton) that God creates men free, and will deal with them according to the use they make of their liberty; that, foreseeing how every one will use it, he does therefore decree all things that concern them in this life, together with their salvation or damnation in the next," &c. See more in Broughton's Religion of all Nations, p. 82. Arminius died October 19, 1619.

ARMSTRONG, Thomas, an active supporter of the royal cause, during the civil wars, for which he was honoured with knighthood; he was executed by his enemies, without a trial, 1684.

ARMSTRONG, Dr. John, born in Castleton parish, Edinburghshire, where his father and brother were ministers. He completed his education in the university of Edinburgh, where he took his degree in physic, February 4, 1732. Like Akenside, another poet and physician, he never arrived at much practice. In 1735 he published a little humorous fugitive pamphlet in 8vo. printed for J. Wilford, entitled "An Essay for abridging the Study of Physic; to which is added a Dialogue between Hygeia, Mercury, and Pluto, relating to the practice of physic, as it is managed by a certain illustrious society: as also an epistle from Usbeck the Persian to Joshua Ward, Esq." This piece contains much drollery; and in the dialogue, the author has caught the very spirit of Lucian. It was soon followed by the "Economy of Love," a poem which has much merit, but is too strongly tinged with the licentiousness of Ovid. "The Art of preserving Health," his best performance, was published in 1744, and will transmit his name to posterity as one of the first English writers. In Mr. Nichols' "Anecdotes of Mr. Bowyer," the reader will find some pleasing traits of the character of this ingenious writer.

ARMSTRONG, John, a Scotch divine and poet, was born at Leith, 1771. At Edinburgh, where he took the degree of M. A., he published a volume of "Juvenile Poems," which have considerable merit; and to this he appended "An Essay on the Means of punishing and preventing Crimes;" for which, (in 1789,) he had been honoured with a gold medal given by the Edinburgh Pantheon Society. He came to London in 1790, commenced writer for the newspapers, and for some time before his death was editor of that old and most respectable paper, "The General Evening Post." He promised also to arrive at distinction as a preacher to dissenting congregations; but was cut off by a decline, July 21, 1797, at the early age of 26.

ARMSTRONG, John, a brigadier general in the army of the American revolution, assisted in the defence of fort Moultrie, and in the battle of Germantown, with the reputation of an able officer, afterwards a delegate to congress from Pennsylvania, died 1795.

ARMYNE, Lady Mary, granddaughter of George, Earl of Shrewsbury, married Sir William Armyne, and was distinguished by her piety and benevolence; she died 1675.

ARNALD, Richard, B. D., rector of Thurcaston, in Leicestershire, published several sermons, &c.; he died 1756.

ARNALL, William, became a political writer in the pay of Sir Robert Walpole; he died 1741.

ARNAUD DE MEYRVILLE, or MEREUIL, a poet of Provence, died 1220.

ARNAUD DE VILLA NOVA, a physician, shipwrecked on the coast of Genoa, 1310 or 1313.

ARNAUD, Anthony, born at Paris, 1550, where he pursued his studies, and took his degree of Master of Arts in 1573. Some time after, he was admitted advocate of the parliament of Paris; in which capacity he acquired great reputation by his integrity and extraordinary eloquence. Henry IV. had a great esteem for Arnaud; his majesty once carried the duke of Savoy on purpose to hear him plead in parliament, and he was appointed counsellor and attorney-general to queen Catharine of Medicis. One of the most famous causes which Arnaud pleaded, was that of the university against the Jesuits, in 1594. He died at about the age of 70.

ARNAUD D'ANDILLI, Robert, eldest son of the preceding, born at Paris in 1589. Though bred in a court and in offices of state, he passed the latter part of his days in a continual application to works of piety and devotion. His works have been printed in eight volumes folio. Mr. Arnaud died at Port Royal, 1674.

ARNAUD, Anthony, doctor of the Sorbonne, and brother of the preceding, was born at Paris the 6th of February, 1612. A catalogue of his works may be seen in Moreri: they consist of grammar, geometry, logic, metaphysics, and theology. He died August 9, 1694.

ARNAUD, Henry, brother of Robert, made bishop of Toul, but his election was disputed, and he was not put in possession; he died 1692

ARNAUD, Angelique, sister of Henry, abbess of the Port Royal convent, died 1661.

ARNAUD, Anthony, son of Robert, abbot of Chaumes, author of some memoirs, died 1698.

ARNAUD, Francis, abbot of Grand Champs, distinguished by his literary labours, died 1784.

ARNAUD, Simon, marquis of Pomponne, an able negotiator and ambassador, died 1639.

ARNAUD, Henry Charles, son of Simon, distinguished as an ecclesiastic and statesman, died 1756.

ARNAUD, Francis, Thomas Marie de Baculard d', a French writer of celebrity, was born at Paris in 1716, and died in 1805.

ARNDT, John, a famous protestant divine of Germany, born at Belenstad, in the dutchy of Anhalt, 155. At first he applied himself to physic; but, falling into a dangerous sickness, he made a vow to change that for divinity, if he should be restored to health. He wrote many religious works; the most famous of which is, his, "Treatise of Free Christianity," in High Dutch. This writer died at Zell, in 1621.

ARNDT, Joshua, professor of logic at Rostock, died 1687.

ARNE, Dr. Thomas Augustine, was son of Mr. Arne, an upholsterer in Covent Garden, (whom Addison is supposed to have characterized in No. 155, and No. 160 of "The Tatler,") and brother of Mrs. Cibber the player. He was early devoted to music, and soon became eminent in his profession. July 6, 1759, he had the degree of doctor of music conferred on him at Oxford. His compositions are universally applauded, and he was particularly skilful in instructing vocal performers. He died March 5, 1778, having written the following pieces: "Artaxerxes," 1762; "The Guardian outwitted," 1764; "The Rose," 1778: all of them operas.

ARNGRIM, Jonas, a learned ecclesiastic of Ireland; he wrote a piece on the Runic letters, &c., and died 1649.

ARNISÆUS, Kenningus, a German professor of physic at Helmstadt, known for his political treatises; he died 1635.

ARNOBIUS, was professor of rhetoric at Sicca, in Numidia, toward the end of the 3d century.

ARNOBIUS, a native of Gaul, author of a commentary on the psalms, &c., in the 5th century.

ARNOLD, a famous heretic of the 12th century, born at Brescia, in Italy, whence he went to France, where he studied under the celebrated Peter Abelard. Upon his return to Italy, he put on the habit of a monk, and began to preach several new and uncommon doctrines, particularly, that the pope ought not to enjoy any temporal estate; that those ecclesiastics who had any estates of their own, or held any lands, were entirely cut off from the least hope of salvation; that the clergy ought to subsist upon the alms and voluntary contributions of Christians; and that all other revenues belonged to princes and states, in order to be disposed of among the laity as they thought proper. He was hanged at Rome in the year 1155.

ARNOLD, John, eminent for his improvements in the mechanism of time-keepers. He was the inventor of the Expansion Balance and the Detached Escapement; and was the first artist that ever applied the gold cylindrical spring to the balance of a time-piece. Died at Well-hall, near Eltham, in Kent, Aug. 25, 1799.

ARNOLD, Dr. Samuel, an excellent composer of music, whose works are too numerous to be here detailed, and so well known as not to require it. Of his various dramatic compositions, we may mention particularly "The Maid of the Mill; The Castle of Andalusia; The Agreeable Surprise; The Son-in-Law; The Spanish Barber; Inkle and Yarico; The Surrender of Calais; The Battle of Hexham; The Mountaineers; The Shipwreck; and Peeping Tom." In the higher style of composition, also, his success was great. The Oratorio (by Dr. Brown) of the Cure of Saul, composed in 1767, was considered to be the best performance since the time of Handel; and his Shunamite Woman, one of his latter pieces, possesses all the genius of his earlier compositions, with that additional science which study and experience had given him. He died Oct. 13, 1802, in his 63d year, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, between the monuments of Croft and Purcell.

ARNOLD, Nicholas, a protestant of Lesna, acquired reputation by his sermons and polemical works; he died 1680.

ARNOLD, Jeffery, author of a history of mystical theology, &c., died 1714.

ARNOLD, of Hildesheim, a historian of the 13th century.

ARNOLD, Christopher, a native of Nuremberg; he died professor at Altorf, 1685, aged 58.

ARNOLD, Benedict, a major general of the American army, and infamous for turning traitor to his country; for attempting to surrender the fortress of West Point to the British; for committing ravages in Virginia after his desertion, and a wanton butchery of the garrison at Fort Griswold, Conn. He was made a brigadier general in the British army; retired to England; received 10,000*l.* sterling as the reward of his villany, and died in London, 1801.

ARNOLD, Benedict, succeeded Roger Williams as president of the colony of Rhode-Island, and was afterwards repeatedly appointed governor under its charter; he died 1678.

ASCHAM, Roger, an eminent English writer, born at Kirkby Wiske, near Northallerton, in Yorkshire, about the year 1515. He applied himself particularly to the Greek language; in which he attained to an excellence peculiar to himself, and read it publicly in the university of Cambridge with universal applause. In order to relax his mind, after severer studies, he thought some diversion necessary; and shooting with the bow, was his favourite amusement, as appears by his "Treatise on Archery," which he dedicated to King Henry VIII., who settled a pension upon him, at the recommendation of Sir William Paget. Mr. Ascham, being remarkable for writing a fine hand, was employed to teach this art to Prince Edward, the Lady Elizabeth, and the two brothers, Henry and Charles, dukes of Suffolk. In Feb. 1548, he was sent for to court, to instruct the Lady Elizabeth in the learned languages, and had the honour of assisting this lady in her studies for two years; when he desired leave to return to Cambridge, where he resumed his office of public orator. He was afterwards Latin secretary to King Edward, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth. Being one day in company with persons of the first distinction, there happened to be high disputes about the different methods of education; this gave rise to his treatise on that subject, entitled "The Schoolmaster," which he undertook at the particular request of Sir Richard Sackville. This work was in high esteem among the best judges, and is frequently quoted by Dr. Johnson in his Dictionary. He died at London, Jan. 4, 1568, and was buried in St. Sepulchre's church.

ASCHAM, Anthony, physician and ecclesiastic, author of tracts on astrology, &c.

ASCHAM, Anthony, a friend of Cromwell, and member of the long parliament.

ASFELD, Jacques Vincent Bidal d', an ecclesiastic, died 1745.

ASGILE, John, a lawyer of eminence, known for his wit and misfortunes, died 1738.

ASGILL, Sir Charles, Bart. This gentleman was a strong instance of what may be effected even by moderate abilities, when united with strict integrity, industry, and irreproachable character. His first setting out in life was at a banking-house in Lombard-street, as out-door collecting clerk. From this inferior situation he progressively rose by his merit to the first department in the house; and soon after, marrying an amiable woman, with a fortune of 25,000*l.* immediately joined his name to the firm. In 1749 he was chosen alderman of Candlewick ward, and served in the office of lord mayor in 1758. He died Sept. 15, 1788, and is said to have left nearly 200,000*l.*

ASH, Dr. John, an English dissenting minister, grammarian, and lexicographer born 1724, ASHMOLE, or ASMOLE, Elias, a celebrated English philosopher and antiquary, and founder of the Ashmolean museum at Oxford, was born at Litchfield, in Staffordshire, the 23d of May, 1627. Besides filling several offices, civil and military, Mr. Ashmole was diligent and curious collector of manuscripts. In 1650 he published a treatise written by Dr. Arthur Dee, relating to the philosopher's stone; together with another tract on the same subject, by an unknown author. About the same time he was busied in preparing for the press a complete collection of the works of such English chymists as had till then remained in manuscript: this undertaking cost him great labour and expense; and at length the work appeared toward the close of the year 1652. The title of this work was, "Theatrum Chemicum Britannicum," &c. &c. He then applied himself to the study of antiquity and records. In 1658 he began to collect materials for his "History of the Order of the Garter," which he lived to finish, and thereby did no less honour to the order than to himself. In September following, he made a journey to Oxford; where he set about a full and particular description of the coins given to the public library by archbishop Laud. Upon the restoration of Charles II., Mr. Ashmole was introduced to his majesty, who received him very graciously, and, on the 18th of June, 1660, bestowed on him the place of Windsor herald; a few days after, he appointed him to give a description of his medals, which were delivered into his possession; and King Henry VIII.'s closet was assigned for his use. On the 8th of May, 1672, he presented his "Institution, Laws, and Ceremonies, of the most noble Order of the Garter" to the king, who received it very graciously, and, as a mark of his approbation, granted him a privy seal for 400*l.* out of the customs of paper. On the 26th of January, a fire broke out in the Middle Temple, in the next chamber to Mr. Ashmole's, by which he lost a noble library, with a collection of 9000 coins, ancient and modern, and a vast repository of seals, charters, and other antiquities and curiosities; but his manuscripts, and his most valuable gold medals, were luckily at his house, at South Lambeth. In 1683, the University of Oxford having finished a magnificent repository near the theatre, Mr. Ashmole sent thither his curious collection of rarities; and this benefaction was considerably augmented by the addition of his manuscripts and library, at his death, which happened at South Lambeth, May 18, 1692.—He was interred in the church of Great Lambeth, in Surrey, on the 26th of May, 1692.

ASHMUN ELI PEASE, a distinguished lawyer of Northampton, Mass.; he was a member of the senate of that state, and afterwards a senator in Congress, died 1819.

ASHTON, Charles, one of the most learned critics of his age, was elected master of Jesus College, Cambridge, July 5, 1701, and installed in a prebend of Ely, on the 14th of the same month. His great knowledge in ecclesiastical antiquities was excelled by none, and equalled by few: as his MS. remarks upon the Fathers, and corrections of the mistakes of translators, sufficiently show.

ASHTON, Dr. Thomas, rector of St. Botolph Bishopsgate, a popular preacher and excellent divine, born 1716, died 1775.

ASHWELL, George, his writings were on divinity, but not in high esteem; he died 1693.

ASHWOOD, Bartholomew, a minister of Axminster, in Devon, author of several tracts, &c.

ASHWORTH, Caleb, patronized by Dr. Doddridge, and successor to him in his school, was created D. D. by a Scotch university; he died 1774.

ASKEW, Anthony, a native of Westmoreland, eminent as a physician, died 1784.

ASKEW, Anne, an accomplished lady, daughter of Sir William Askew, of Kelsay, in Lincolnshire, was born in 1529. She received a learned education, and in early life showed a predilection for theological studies. By these she was led to favour the reformation; she was, in consequence, arrested, and, having confessed her religious principles, was committed to Newgate. She was first racked with brutal cruelty in the Tower, and afterwards burned alive in Smithfield, July 16, 1546; a punishment which she endured with amazing courage and firmness, adhering to the last to the principles of her faith.

ASPASIA, a native of Miletus, celebrated for her wit and learning, though her character was licentious.

ASPASIA, a Grecian lady, celebrated for her excellence in philosophy and rhetoric, was born at Miletus, but settled at Athens; where, though she excised the calling of a courtesan, her scholastic talents induced the virtuous Socrates and other of the greatest men of the age to visit her house. She was afterwards married to Pericles, one of the greatest men that ever flourished in Greece.

ASSER, of St. David's, a learned author in the reign of Alfred.

ASSHETON, Dr. William, born at Middleton, in Lancashire, 1641, was the projector of the scheme for providing a maintenance for clergymen's widows and others, by a jointure payable by the Mercers' Company. Dr. Assheton wrote several pieces against the papists and dissenters, and some practical and devotional tracts, and died at his rectory of Beckenham, in Kent, 1711.

ASSOUCI, Charles Coypeau, Sieur d', a poet, whose works contained more immorality than wit: he died 1679.

ASTELL, Mary, born at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, about the year 1688. Her uncle, a clergyman, observing marks of a promising genius, took her under his tuition, and taught her mathematics, logic, and philosophy. She left the place of her nativity when she was about 29 years of age, and spent the remaining part of her life at London and Chelsea, in writing for the advancement of learning, religion, and virtue, and in the practice of those religious duties which she so zealously and pathetically recommended to others. She was remarkably abstemious, and seemed to enjoy an uninterrupted state of health till a few days before her death; when, having one of her breasts cut off, it so much impaired her constitution, that she died in 1731, in the 63d year of her age, and was buried at Chelsea.

ASTERIUS, an Arian of Cappadocia in the 4th century.

ASTERIUS, bishop of Amasia, in Pontus, in the 4th century.

ASTERIUS, Urbanus, a bishop of the 3d century, engaged in a controversy with the Montanists of Ancyra, in Galatia.

ASTLE, Thomas, an eminent English antiquary, born at Yoxall, Staffordshire, December 22, 1735, and originally bred to the law; the early pursuit of which profession led him to give particular application to the decyphering of ancient records; in which he soon excelled all his cotemporaries, and qualified himself to be of infinite advantage to historical literature. In 1783, he was appointed keeper of the rolls and records in the tower of London; and in 1787 elected a trustee of the British museum. The principal one among his numerous works is, "On the Origin and Progress of Writing, as well Hieroglyphic as Elementary," 4to., 1784; of which work a new edition was published just before his death, which happened at Battersea, December 1, 1803.

ATHALIAH, wife of Jehoram, she obtained the sovereignty of Judah, which she held seven years.

ATHANASIUS, St., was born at Alexandria, of heathen parents. He was noticed, when very young, by Alexander, bishop of that see, who took care to have him educated in all good learning; and when he was of age, ordained him deacon. He took him in his company when he attended the council of Nice, where Athanasius greatly distinguished himself as an able and zealous opposer of the Arian heresy. Soon after the dissolution of the council, Alexander died, and Athanasius was appointed to succeed him in the government of the church of Alexandria. This was in 326, when Athanasius is supposed to have been about 28 years of age. It is controverted among learned men, whether Athanasius composed the creed commonly received under his name; though the best and latest critics, who have examined the thing most exactly, make no question but that it is to be ascribed to a Latin author, Vigilius Tapsensis, an African bishop, who lived in the latter end of the 5th century, in the time of the Vandalic Arian persecution.

ATHELING, Edgar, grandson of Edmund Ironside, king of England, made some unsuccessful attempts to obtain the crown.

ATHELSTAN, the natural son of Edmund the Elder, made king of England, 925.

ATKINS, sir Robert, lord chief baron of the exchequer, born in Gloucestershire, in the year 1621, died in the beginning of the year 1709. He was a man of much probity, as well as of great skill in his profession, and a warm friend to the constitution.

ATKINS, sir Robert, son of the foregoing, was born in 1646. He became very early a great proficient in the laws and antiquities of his country, which afterwards led him to write "The Ancient and Present State of Gloucestershire," printed in folio, 1712. This great and valuable work he lived to perfect, but died the year before it was published.

ATKINSON, Theodore, chief justice of New-Hampshire, and a delegate to the convention at Albany which formed the plan of union for the defence of the colonies, died 1779.

ATKYNS, Richard, suffered during the civil wars for his attachment to the royal cause, and died 1677.

ATLAS, king of Mauritania, a celebrated astronomer, said to have been cotemporary with Moses. From his making astronomical observations on high mountains, it became a fable that he was turned into a mountain. He is likewise represented as an old man bearing the world upon his shoulders; and general descriptions of the whole globe, in sets of maps, are to this hour called Atlases.

ATRATUS, Hugh, or Black, called the Phoenix of his age, from his great powers of mind.

ATTALUS I., king of Pergamus, a great patron of learning, died 198 B. C.

ATTERBURY, Francis, bishop of Rochester, was born March 6, 1662, at Middleton, or Milton Keynes, in Buckinghamshire. He had his education in grammar learning at Westminster school; and thence, in 1680, was elected a student of Christ-church College, Oxford, where he soon distinguished himself for the politeness of his wit and learning. In 1690 he took orders; in 1691 he was elected lecturer of St. Bride's Church in London, preached at Bridewell Chapel, and was soon afterwards appointed chaplain to King William and queen Mary. He was for some years after this engaged in a religious controversy with Dr. Bentley, Dr. Wake, and other learned divines. In 1713, the queen, at the recommendation of lord chancellor Harcourt, advanced him to the bishopric of Rochester, with the deanery of Westminster in commendam. At the beginning of the succeeding reign his tide of prosperity began to turn; and he received a sensible mortification presently after the coronation of king George I., when, upon his offering to present his majesty (with a view, no doubt, of standing better in his favour) with the chair of state and royal canopy, his own perquisites as dean of Westminster, the offer was rejected, not without some evident marks of dislike to his person. In 1722, on a suspicion of his being concerned in a plot in favour of the pretender, he was apprehended August 24, and committed prisoner to the Tower. A bill soon after passed in parliament, the tenor of which was, that he should be deprived of all his offices, dignities, benefices, &c., and suffer perpetual exile. He died at Paris, February 15, 1731-2.

ATTICUS, one of the most singular personages in ancient Rome. He understood the art of conducting himself so well, that, without departing from his neutrality, he preserved the esteem and affection of all parties. He reached the age of 77 years almost without knowing what sickness was, but at last fell sick. His illness, which was slight for three months, at length becoming painful, he sent for Agrippa, his son-in-law, and two other persons, and declared to them a resolution to put an end to his life by abstinence from food. Agrippa remonstrated with tears, but in vain. After two days abstinence the fever left him, and the disease abated; but Atticus persisted, and died three days after, in the year of Rome 721.

ATTICUS, Herodes, a celebrated orator, born at Marathon, died in 76.

ATTICUS, patriarch of Constantinople, died in 427.

AUBIGNE, Theodore Agrippa d', a very illustrious Frenchman, and grandfather of the no less illustrious Madame de Maintenon, was born about the year 1550. His parts were so uncommon, and his progress in letters so very rapid, that he is said to have translated the "Crito" of Plato from the Greek into French when no more than eight years old. His principal work is "Histoire Universelle, from 1550 to 1601, with a short Account of the Death of Henry IV.," in three volumes, folio. Aubigne died at Geneva in 1630.

AUBREY, John, an eminent English antiquary, born at Easton Piers, Wiltshire, 1626, died 1700, leaving many works behind him, particularly a "History of Surrey," 5 vols. 8vo., a volume of "Miscellanies," and several MSS., which are in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. He seems, however, to have been a credulous man, and to have been frequently imposed upon with marvellous tales and absurd hypotheses.

BACKUS, Aziel, D. D., was pastor of a church in Bethlehem, Conn., and afterwards first president of Hamilton College; he died 1816, aged 62.

BACLAY, John, son of the preceding, a writer of some celebrity, died 1621.

BACON, Robert, an English friar, professor of divinity at Oxford, and treasurer of Salisbury cathedral, died 1248.

BACON, Nathaniel, came to America, and caused an injurious rebellion in Governor Berkeley's time.

BACON, Roger, a learned monk of the Franciscan order, descended of an ancient family, born near Ichester, in Somersetshire, 1214. His discoveries were little understood by the generality of mankind; and because, by the help of mathematical knowledge, he performed things above common understanding, he was suspected of magic. He was persecuted particularly by his own fraternity; they would not receive his works into their library, and at last had interest enough with the general of their order to get him imprisoned; so that, as he confesses himself, he had reason to repent of his having taken such pains in the arts and sciences. At the particular desire of Pope Clement IV., Bacon collected together and enlarged his several pieces, and sent them to him, in 1267. This collection, which is the same that himself entitled "Opus Majus," or his Great Work, is still extant. When Bacon had been ten years in prison, Jerom d'Ascoli, general of his order, who had condemned his doctrine, was chosen pope, and assumed the name of Nicholas IV. Toward the latter end of his reign, Bacon, by the interposition of some noblemen, obtained his release, and returned to Oxford, where he spent the remainder of his days in peace, and died in the college of his order, 11th June, 1294. Dr. Freind ascribes the honour of introducing chymistry into Europe to Bacon, who, he observes, speaks in some part or other of his works, of almost every operation now used in chymistry. He was a miracle of the age that he lived in; and the greatest genius, perhaps, for mechanical knowledge, that ever appeared in the world since Archimedes.

BACON, Sir Nicholas, lord keeper of the great seal in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was descended of an ancient family in Suffolk, born in the year 1510, and died, lamented by her majesty and the nation, on the 20th of Feb., 1578-9.

BACON, Anne, wife of Sir Nicholas, a lady eminent for learning, piety, and virtue, died about the beginning of the reign of James I.

BACON, Francis, viscount of St. Albans, lord high chancellor of England, and one of the greatest and most universal geniuses that any age or country has produced, was son of Sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper of the great seal, and born at York House, in the Strand, on the 22d of January, 1561. His extraordinary parts, even when a boy, were so conspicuous, that before he was full 16, his father called him from the university to attend into France the queen's ambassador, Sir Anyas Pawlet, whose esteem and confidence he gained to such a degree, that he was soon after charged by him with a commission to the queen, which he executed with great approbation, and returned again to France, to finish his travels. During his stay in that kingdom his father died, without making that separate provision for him which he had intended: this obliging him to think of some profession for a subsistence. he applied himself, more through necessity than choice, to the study of the common law, and for that purpose seated himself in Gray's Inn. At the age of 28 he was chosen by that honourable society for their Lent reader, and afterwards their double reader. On the 23d of July, 1603, he received the honour of knighthood; and on the 25th of August, 1604, was constituted by patent one of the king's learned counsel. In 1613, he succeeded Sir Henry Hobart, advanced to the place of chief justice of the common pleas, as attorney general. June 9, 1616, he was raised to the dignity of a privy-counsellor, while he was still in the office of attorney-general: and as he had now more leisure from private causes, he was desirous to dedicate more time to public service; and therefore made an offer to the king of a new "Digest of the Laws of England." March 7, 1617, upon the chancellor's voluntary resignation of the seals, they were given to Sir Francis Bacon, with the title of lord keeper. On the 4th of January, 1618, he was constituted lord high chancellor of England, and on the 11th of July following, created baron of Verulam, in Hertfordshire. In 1620, amidst all the variety of weighty business in which his high office necessarily involved him, he published the most finished and important, though the least read, of all his philosophical tracts, the "Novum Organum Scientiarum." The next year he was accused of bribery and corruption; and the house of peers, on the 3d of May, 1621, gave judgment against him, "that he should be fined 40,000*l.*, and remain prisoner in the tower during the king's pleasure: that he should for ever be incapable of any office, place, or employment in the state or commonwealth; and that he should never sit in parliament, or come within the verge of the court." But he was soon restored to his liberty, and his fine remitted, and was summoned to the first parliament of King Charles. After this sentence, he retired from civil affairs, and for five years gave himself wholly up to writing. He died April 9, 1626, and lies buried in St. Michael's church, at St. Alban's, where a monument was erected for him by Sir Thomas Meautys, once his secretary, and afterwards clerk of the council. His works, collected into 5 vols. 4to., were beautifully and accurately printed by Mr. Bowyer and Mr. Strahan, in 1765.

BACON, Anthony, brother to the chancellor, distinguished for his acquaintance with politics, died before his brother.

BACON, Sir Nathaniel, knight of the bath, a painter of the Flemish school.

BACON, Phannuel, rector of Balden, in Oxfordshire, and vicar of Bramber, in Sussex, was a famous punster, and an ingenious poet. He published, in 1757, five dramatic pieces, called "The Taxes," "The Insignificants," "The Trial of the Time-killers," "The Moral Quack," and "The Oculist;" and died at Balden, January 2, 1783.

BACON, John, a celebrated sculptor, born in London, November 24, 1740; was apprenticed to a painter of porcelain china, at Lambeth; but, observing the models of different sculptors which were sent to a neighbouring potter's to be burnt, he conceived a strong inclination to pursue the art of sculpture, and his progress was as rapid, as the decision was sudden. He studied at the Royal Academy on its first institution, in 1768, and in a few years afterwards was elected royal academicians. Of the numerous monuments erected by him, the most distinguished are, those of Lord Chatham, in Westminster Abbey, and of Mr. Howard and Dr. Johnson, in St. Paul's Cathedral. He died August 7, 1799.

BACONTHORPE, John, a monk of Norfolk, died 1346.

BACQUE, Leo, a protestant of Gascony, converted to popery, and made bishop of Pamiers, died 1694.

BACQUERRE, Benedict de, a physician and medical author.

BACQUET, advocate to the king of France, died 1597.

BACTISUUA, George Ebn, a Christian physician of celebrity at the court of Almanson.

BADASCII, a commentator on the Arabic grammar, died 528 of the hegire.

BADCOCK, Samuel, an eminent critic and controversial writer, was born at South Moulton, in Devonshire, in the year 1747, and destined to the clerical character. We find him in very early life, at about the age of 19, at the head of a very considerable Presbyterian congregation at Barnstaple, in Devonshire. From this situation, however, he removed, and was elected minister of South Moulton, about 12 miles from his first situation; and in this retirement his active mind turned its views to the more public departments of literature. During the progress of the London Review, he occasionally corresponded with Dr. Kenrick, and contended with that acute and intelligent sceptic on different points of christianity. He occasionally, also, wrote some articles in his Review, which are yet distinguishable by their spirit and intelligence. He was, before this period, an occasional correspondent in the Westminster Magazine; and we afterwards find him more frequently corresponding with the Gentleman's Magazine, the London Magazine, the General Evening Post, and the St. James' Chronicle. But the great scene of his public warfare was in the Monthly Review. About three years before his death, which happened on the 19th of May, 1768, he conformed to the established church.

BADDELY, Robert, an excellent low comedian, many years attached to Drury-lane theatre, died November 20, 1794. By his will he left to the theatrical fund his cottage at Hampton, in trust, that they should elect to reside in it such four of the fund pensioners as might not object to living sociably under the same roof. In this house are two parlours for their joint indulgence, and four separate bedchambers. This bequest is an instance of his benevolence, and of his respect for his profession; but the manner in which it was done is even more honourable to him than the donation itself. That the decayed actors who are to be chosen by the fund committee as tenants for this house, might not appear like dependants on charity, in the eyes of the neighbourhood, he left also a certain sum to be distributed by those tenants to the poor of the vicinity. The singularity of Mr. B.'s mind is further observable, in his leaving 3 pounds annually for a twelfth-cake, to be distributed in the green-room.

BADEN, James, professor of eloquence, &c., in the university of Copenhagen, published a "German and Danish Dictionary," and a translation of "Tacitus" into the Danish language, that is said to rival the original for precision, taste, and purity of diction. He died November, 1804.

BADENS, Francis, a historical and portrait painter of Antwerp, died 1603.

BADEW, Richard de, was chancellor of Cambridge, and laid the foundation of a college, now called Clare-hall, 1636.

BADILE, Anthony, an admired Italian painter, died 1560.

BADUEL, Claude, a protestant divine and professor in Switzerland, died 1561.

BÆRSIUS, or VEKENSTIL, Henry, a mathematician and painter, of Louvain, in the 16th century.

BÆRSTRAT, a Dutch painter, died 1687.

BAFKARKAH, Abu Zohal, a commentator on Euclid.

BAGDEDIN, Mahommed, an Arabian mathematician of the 10th century.

BAGE, Robert, an English novelist of considerable merit, died 1801.

BAGFORD, John, a celebrated antiquary, and collector of old English books, prints, &c. He had been in his younger days a shoemaker, afterwards a bookseller; and lastly, for the many curiosities wherewith he enriched the library of Dr. John Moore, bishop of Ely, his lordship got him admitted into the Charter-house. He died on the 15th of May, 1716, aged 65 years.

BAGGER, John, a native of Lunden, and bishop of Copenhagen, died 1693.

BAGI, Zadeh, a commentator on the Koran, died 1013 of the hegira.

BAGLIONI, John Paul, a native of Perugia. He usurped the sovereignty of his country, and was dispossessed by Cesar Borgia, and afterwards beheaded by Leo X., at Rome, 1520.

BAGLIVI, George, professor of anatomy at Rome, died 1706.

BAGNIOLI, Julius Cæsar, an Italian poet, died about 1600.

BAGOAS, an Egyptian eunuch, put to death 356. B. C.

BAGOT, Lewis, L. L. D., canon and dean of Christ Church, Oxford, bishop of Bristol, of Norwich, and of St. Asaph; he died 1802.

BAGSHAW, William, a native of Tidswell, an eloquent and popular preacher, died 1703.

BAGSHAW, Edward, M. A., a teacher at Westminster, under Busby; he was imprisoned for nonconformity, and died in Newgate, 1671.

BAGURI, a Mahometan writer, died 679 of the hegira.

BAHA, a mussulman, surnamed the ornament of justice and religion, and regarded as a saint, died 857 of the hegira.

BAHALI, a Mahometan author, died 321 of the hegira.

BAHAR-AL-HEFAII, or the sea of memory, an author, died 255 of the hegira.

BAHIER, John, born at Chatillon, a priest, and author of Latin verses, died 1707.

BAHRAM, a general under Chosroes I. whom he deposed. He was afterwards put to death.

BAHRDT, Charles Frederick, M. A., an unprincipled and licentious deist, died 1792.

BAIAN, or BAION, a native of Goa, who embraced Christianity, and was ordained priest at Rome. He translated the Æneid into Greek.

BAIER, John William, a divine of Nuremberg, and professor of divinity, at Halle, died 1694.

BAIER, Jean Jaques, born at Lena, an eminent physician, professor of physiology and president of a college of physicians at Altorf, died 1735.

BAIF, Lazarus, abbot of Charroux, and ambassador from Francis I. to Venice, died 1545.

BAIL, Lewis, a native of Abbeville, flourished as a writer in the 17th century.

BAILEY, Nathan, the author of a well-known "Dictionary of the English Language," 2 vols. 8vo., and editor of school editions and translations of several of the ancient classic poets and historians. He resided principally at Stepney, and died June 27, 1742.

BAILLES, William, a Prussian physician of great eminence, about 1757.

BAILLET, Adrian, a French divine, theological, historical and biographical writer, born 1649. He wrote "A History of Holland from 1609 to 1679," 4 vols. 12mo. "Lives of the Saints," 3 vols. folio; "Jugemens des Savans," 9 vols. 12mo. &c. &c., and died 1706.

BAILLI, Roche Le, or Riviere, physician to Henry IV. of France, died 1605.

BAILLIE, Robert, a native of Glasgow; an eminent clergyman, distinguished for his firm and consistent opposition to episcopacy; he died 1662.

BAILLON, William de, a French physician, celebrated for his charity as well as his professional skill, died 1616.

BAILLY, James, a French writer, born at Versailles, died 1768.

BAILLY, John Sylvain, a celebrated French astronomer. He published several valuable treatises on that science; afterwards, as mayor of Paris, he incurred the displeasure of Robespierre, and lost his head by the guillotine, 1793.

BAILLY, David, a historical painter of celebrity, born at Leyden, died 1630.

BAILLY, James, a French painter, died 1679.

BAINBRIDGE, John, a physician and astronomer of Ashby de la Zouch, afterwards professor of astronomy at Oxford, where he had a high reputation; he died 1643.

BAITHOSUS, founder of a sect called sadducees, which denied a resurrection and future state.

BAIUS, DE BAY, Michael, a native of Melin; a man of talents and learning, and divinity professor of Louvain. He died 1589.

BAJARD, Andrew, an Italian poet of Parma, in the 15th century.

BAJAZET I., sultan of the Turks, a renowned warrior, but a tyrant. Being conquered by Tamerlane, and exposed by him in an iron cage (the fate that he had destined for his adversary, if he had been the victor), he dashed his head against the bars of his prison and killed himself, in 1403.

BAJAZET II. succeeded his father Mahomet II., 1481. He extended the boundaries of his kingdom, but, by the perfidy of his son, Selim, was dethroned and poisoned in 1512.

BAKER, Sir Richard, author of the "Chronicle of the kings of England," born at Sissinghurst, in Kent, about 1568. He married a daughter of Sir George Manwaring, of Ightfield, in Shropshire, knight; and having become surety for some of that family's debts, was thereby reduced to poverty, and thrown into the Fleet prison, where he died, Feb. 18, 1644-5, and was buried in St. Bride's church, Fleet-street.

BAKER, David, an English Benedictine, who was converted from Atheism to Christianity died 1641.

BAKER, Thomas, a native of Ilton, and vicar of Bishop's Nymmet, Devonshire; he died 1696.

BAKER, Thomas, a very ingenious and learned antiquary, was born at Crook, in the county of Durham, Sept. 14, 1656, and died in the office of commoner master of St. John's college Cambridge, July 2, 1749. The principal work that he printed, was "Reflections on learning, showing the insufficiency thereof in its several particulars, in order to evince the usefulness and necessity of Revelation: London, 1709-10," which went through eight editions; and Mr. Boswell, in his "Method of Study," ranks it among the English classics for purity of style.

BAKER, Henry, an ingenious and diligent naturalist, born in Fleet-street, London, either near the end of the 17th, or in the beginning of the 18th century. Being of a philosophical turn of mind, and having diligently attended to the methods which might be practicable and useful in the cure of stammering, and especially in teaching deaf and dumb persons to speak, he made this the employment of his life. In 1774, Sir Godfrey Copley's gold medal was bestowed upon him, for having, by his microscopical experiments on the crystallizations and configurations of saline particles, produced the most extraordinary discovery during that year. Having led a very useful and honourable life, he died at his apartments in the Strand, on the 25th of Nov. 1774, being then above 70 years of age. His principal publications are "The Microscope made Easy," and "Employment for the Microscope."

BAKER, William, a learned printer, in Fenchurch-street, born at Reading, 1744, was the son of an eminent schoolmaster in that town. From his youth he was greatly addicted to study, and his friends favoured his inclinations by making him a printer. His modesty was equal to his learning, and was truly Gray's "flower born to blush unseen." His diffidence prevented his appearing much before the public as a writer; and his only publications are "Peregrinations of the Mind," a series of essays in the manner of the Rambler; and "Theses Græcæ et Latinæ Selectæ." He died in London, Sept. 29, 1785, in the 44th year of his age; and an elegant Latin epitaph to his memory is placed on the tomb of his family, in the churchyard of St. Mary, Reading.

BAKER, Sir George, born 1722, was physician to king George III. and his queen, and president of the college of physicians. He wrote a number of excellent tracts and dissertations on medical subjects, and died June 15, 1809.

BAKEWELL, Robert, the most successful experimental farmer and cattle-breeder ever known in England, was born 1736, at Dishley, in Leicestershire. Having remarked, that domestic animals in general produce others possessing qualities nearly similar to their own, he conceived that he had only to select from all the most valuable breeds such as promised to return the greatest possible emolument to the breeder; and that he should then be able, by careful attention to progressive improvements, to produce a race of sheep, horses, horned cattle, or other animals, possessing a maximum of advantage. A selection on this principle from different parts of England, was the original stock from which he afterwards propagated his own. About 1760, Mr. Bakewell sold his sheep by private contract, at not more than two or three guineas each. Some time afterwards, he began to let some of his rams, and for a few seasons received only 15s. or a guinea a-piece for them; but as the fame of his breed extended itself, he advanced his prices, and by the year 1770 was enabled to let some of his rams for the season for 25 guineas. After that time, the prices and credit of his stock progressively increased; and at last, single rams were let for the season for the enormous price of 400 guineas, and upwards. It is a fact that has no other example, that one ram, called the Two Pounder, produced, in one season, the sum of 800 guineas, independent of ewes of Mr. Bakewell's own stock; which, at the same rate, would have made a total, the produce of a single ram, of 1200 guineas. The race of Dishley sheep are known by the fineness of their bone and flesh, the lightness of the wool, their disposition to quietness, and consequently to mature and fatten with less food than other sheep of equal weight and value. Mr. Bakewell improved his black horses by an attention to the form which is best adapted to their use. His stallions have been let for the season for 100 guineas, and upwards. Many anecdotes are related of his humanity toward the various orders of animals. He continually deprecated the atrocious barbarities practised by the butchers and drovers; showing, by examples on his own farm, the most pleasing instances of docility in the animals under his care. This extraordinary man, more deserving, in our opinion, of the civic wreath than the warrior or the statesman, died Oct. 1, 1795, on the spot where he first drew breath.

BAKHUIJSEN, Ludolph, a painter and engraver of Embden, who, by the force of genius, raised himself to a high rank. He died 1709.

BALAAM, son of Beor, a celebrated prophet of Pelhor, in Mesopotamia, killed with Balak, king of Moab, in battle, 1450 B. C.

BALAMIO, Ferdinand, a native of Sicily, physician to pope Leo X., about 1555; eminent for his literary acquirements.

BALASSI, Mario, a painter at Florence, died 1667.

BALATHI, Abulfedi Othman Ben Issa, author of a treatise on the characters of alphabets.

BALBI, John, or Janua, a Genoese dominican, and an author of some celebrity.

BALBINUS, Decimus Cælius, emperor of Rome, murdered by his soldiers, 237.

BALBO, Jerome, bishop of Goritz, died at Venice, 1535.

BALBOA, Vasco Nuques de, an enterprising Castilian. He was among the early American adventurers, and built a town on the coast of Darien. He was afterwards falsely accused of felony by a Spanish governor, and executed 1517.

BALDWIN, Ebenezer, a worthy minister of Danbury, Conn., who, at his death, 1770, bequeathed 300*l.* to his society. He was 31 years of age.

BALDWIN, Abraham, president of the University of Georgia, member of the convention which adopted the constitution, 1787, and senator, in all which offices he was distinguished; he died 1807.

BALE, Robert, a native of Norfolk, prior of the Carmelites of Norwich, where he died 1503.

BALE, John, bishop of Ossory, in Ireland, born at Cove, a small village in Suffolk, was bred up in the Romish religion, but became afterwards a protestant. His conversion, however, greatly exposed him to the persecution of the Romish clergy, and he must have felt their resentment, had he not been protected by lord Cromwell; but, upon the death of this nobleman, he was obliged to fly to Holland, where he remained six years, and during that time wrote several pieces in the English language. He was recalled into England by Edward VI., and presented to the living of Bishop's-stoke, in the county of Southampton. The 15th of August, 1532, he was nominated to the see of Ossory, and, upon his arrival in Ireland, used his utmost endeavours to reform the manners of his diocese, to correct the vices of the priests, to abolish the mass, and to establish the use of the new book of common prayer set forth in England; but all his schemes of this kind having proved abortive by the death of king Edward, and the accession of queen Mary, he became greatly exposed to the outrages of the papists in Ireland, and again fled to the continent. On the accession of queen Elizabeth, he returned from exile, but did not choose to go again to Ireland, being satisfied with a prebend of Cantebury, in which city he died, Nov., 1563, aged 67, and was buried in the cathedral of that place. This prelate has left a celebrated Latin work, containing the lives of the most eminent writers of great Britain. He was also one of the earliest of our dramatic writers. Twenty of his plays are recorded.

BALECHON, Nicholas, an eminent engraver, born at Arles, died 1765.

BALEN, Matthias, a native of Dordt, born 1611.

BALEN, Hendrick Van, an eminent painter of Antwerp, died 1632.

BALES, Peter, a very extraordinary person in his way, and fit to be noticed in a work of this nature. He was a most famous master in the art of penmanship, or fair writing, and one of the first inventors (for there seems to have been more than one) of short-hand writing. He was born in 1547, and is recorded for his skill in micrography, or miniature-writing, in Hollingshed's Chronicle, anno 1575. Mr. Evelyn also has celebrated his wonderful skill in this delicate operation of the hand, informing us, that in the year 1575 he wrote the Lord's prayer, the creed, decalogue, with two short prayers in Latin, his own name, motto, day of the month, year of the Lord, and reign of the queen, to whom he presented it, at Hampton Court, all within the circle of a single penny, incased in a ring and borders of gold, and covered with a crystal, so accurately written as to be very plainly legible, to the great admiration of her majesty, the whole privy-council, and several ambassadors then at court. He was farther very dexterous in imitating hand-writing, and, about 1586, was employed by secretary Walsingham in certain political manœuvres. He published in 1590 a work called the "Writing School-master, in three parts; the 1st, teaching swift writing, the 2d, true writing, the 3d, fair writing." He died about 1610.

BALESTRA, Anthony, a historical painter of Verona, died 1720.

BALEY, Walter, fellow of the New College, Oxford, and professor of physic there, afterwards physician to queen Elizabeth, died 1592.

BALGUY, John, an eminent English divine, a theological, controversial, and metaphysical writer, born at Sheffield, 1636, died at Harrowgate, 1743. He was the friend of Clarke and Hoadley, and was associated with them in maintaining the cause of rational religion and Christian liberty.

BALGUY, Thomas, D. D. son of the preceding, archdeacon of Winchester and prebendary of that cathedral, a powerful champion in the cause of morality and religion, and of the most disinterested zeal, having declined the bishopric of Gloucester, which was offered to him by the king in 1781. Dr. B. died Jan. 19, 1795.

BALI, Meula Bali, a Mussulman, who wrote on the jurisprudence of his country, died 977 of the hegra.

BALJOL, John de, founder of Baliol College, Oxford, which was begun by him in 1263, and afterwards perfected by his widow. During the contest between Henry III. and his barons he firmly adhered to the king, and died in 1269.

BALJOL, John de, king of Scotland. Being opposed in his claims to the crown by Bruce, reference was made to Edward, king of England, who decided in his favour. Afterwards, in a war with Edward, he lost the battle of Dunbar, and retired to France, where he died 1314.

BALKINI YELALEDDIN, author of a book on Mahometan jurisprudence, &c.

BALL, John, an English divine, minister and teacher of Whitmore, in Staffordshire, died 1640.

BALLENDEN, or BULLANDEN, sir John, an elegant Scottish writer of the 16th century. He translated into the Scots language Hector Bœtius's History, which was extremely well received both in Scotland and England, and died at Rome, 1550.

BALLARD, George, born at Campden, in Gloucestershire, was one of those singular geniuses that shoot forth without culture. He was brought up to the profession of a habit-maker. Upon a discovery of his abilities, lord Chedworth and some other gentlemen offered him a pension of 100*l.* per annum, but he would only accept 60*l.* He published "Memoirs of British Ladies eminent for Learning or Abilities," and died young, in 1755, supposed to be owing to too intense application.

BALLERINI, Peter and Jerome, two brothers, ecclesiastics, who devoted themselves to literary pursuits and published several valuable works, were both living, 1758.

BALLEXFERD, a native of Geneva, author of several medical works, died 1774.

BALLI, Joseph, of Palermo, canon of Bari, in the kingdom of Naples, died 1640.

BALLIANI, John Baptist, a native and Senator of Genoa, author of a work on the motion of bodies, died 1666.

BALLIN, Claude, a goldsmith of Paris, an artist of great celebrity, died 1678.

BALSAMON, Theodore, a Patriarch of Antioch, died 1214.

BALSHAM, Hugh de, bishop of Ely, died 1286.

BALTHASAR, Christopher, king's advocate at Auxerre, and author of several protestant works, about 1659.

BALTHAZARINI, surnamed Beaujoyeux, an Italian musician, who composed several ballads and pieces of music, in the reign of Henry III.

BALTUS, John Francis, a Jesuit of Metz, and librarian of Rheims, died 1743.

BALVE, John, of Poitou, bishop of Evreux and of Arras, cardinal and legate to the pope in France, died 1491.

BALZUE, Stephen, a French writer, and author of the "Lives of the Popes of Avignon," born 1631, died 1718.

BALZAC, John Lewis Guez de, historiographer of France, and counsellor of state, was born 1594, at Angouleme; acquired much esteem as a writer (especially for his Letters, which went through several editions); and died 1654.

BAMBOCUE, a nickname given to Peter de Laer, a painter, for his deformity, he died 1673.

BAMBRIDGE, Christopher, a native of Westmoreland; ambassador from Henry VIII. to pope Julius II., a cardinal and archbishop of York died 1514.

BAMPFIELD, Francis, pretendary of Exeter, and minister of Sherburne, died in Newgate. 1684.

BANCHI, Seraphin, a dominican of Florence, who saved the life of Henry IV., of France, for which he was made bishop of Angouleme, died about 1608.

BANCK, Lawrence, a Swede, professor of law at Norkoping, died 1662.

BANCROFT, Richard, chaplain to queen Elizabeth, bishop of London and Archbishop of Canterbury, died 1610.

BANCROFT, John, bishop of Oxford, died 1640.

BANDARRA, Gonzales, a Portuguese prophet and versifier, died 1556.

BANDELLO, Matthew, a celebrated Italian novelist, born at Castelnovo, in the district of Tortona, died in France, about 1561. His novels, like those of Boccace, are more remarkable for the natural simplicity with which they are related, than for the decency of their incidents. By Henry II. he was made bishop of Agen, in France, 1550, but resigned the see in 1555.

BANDINELLA, Baccio, a painter and sculptor of Florence, died 1559.

BANDINI, Angelo Maria, an Italian antiquary, eminent for his learning and his writings, died 1800, leaving his fortune to literary and charitable uses.

BANISTER, Richard, the younger, a physician of great skill, of Stamford, England. The time of his death unknown.

BANKS, Sir John, an eminent English lawyer, chief justice of the King's Bench, afterwards judge of common pleas, died 1664.

BANKS, John, from a weaver's apprentice, became an author, and wrote a review of Cromwell's life, died 1751.

BANKS, John, an English dramatic writer. His turn was entirely to tragedy, his merit in which is of a peculiar kind; for, at the same time that his language must be confessed to be extremely unpoetical, and his numbers uncouth and inharmonious, nay, even his characters very far from being strongly marked or distinguished, and his episodes extremely irregular, yet it is impossible to avoid being deeply affected at the representation, and even at the reading, of his tragic pieces, which are seven in number. The time of his birth and death are uncertain.

BANKS, Right Hon. Sir Joseph, Bart., and Knight of the Bath, a most eminent patron of literary and philosophical writers, and many years president of the Royal Society, was born December 13, 1743, and educated at Eton and Oxford. In 1765, he visited the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador, for the purpose of making researches in Natural History. In 1768, he accompanied Capt. Cook in his first voyage round the world; shortly after his return from which, Sir Joseph, in company with his friend, Dr. Solander, visited Iceland; and a rich harvest of new knowledge, and of specimens, compensated for the toils and expense of this scientific adventure. Sir Joseph died at his house, in Soho-square, in his 80th year, June 19, 1820.

BANKS, Thomas, a celebrated English sculptor, born at Lambeth, in Surrey, December 22, 1738, and bred a wood-carver, to which he served an apprenticeship of seven years. But when the Society for the Encouragement of Arts held out rewards for models and sculpture, he turned his mind to the study of that art; and having obtained several premiums from that society, and in 1770, the gold medal of the Royal Academy, he was, in 1772, sent to Rome for three years, at the Academy's expense. The several admirable works which he afterwards executed, in Russia, as well as in his own country, are too numerous to be here detailed. We shall only mention, therefore, the monument of Sir Eyre Coote, in Westminster Abbey, and the alto-relievo for the front of the Shakspeare Gallery, in Pall Mall. Mr. B. died February 2, 1805.

BANNES, Dominique, a Spanish ecclesiastic and author, died 1604.

BANNIER, John, a Swedish general under Gustavus Adolphus, died 1641.

BANQUO, or BANCHO, a Scotch general of royal birth.

BAPTIST, John Monnoyer, a native of Lisle, and a celebrated painter of flowers, died 1699.

BAPTISTIN, John Baptiste Struk, a musician of Florence, died 1740.

BARADÆUS, bishop of Edessa, founder of a sect called Jacobites, died 588.

BARANZANO, Redemptus, a monk, born in Piedmont, professor of philosophy at Anagni, and a correspondent of the great Bacon, died 1622.

BARATIER, John Philip, a prodigy of his kind, was born at Schwoback, in Anspach, January 19, 1720-21. His father, who was pastor of the Calvinistic church at Schwoback, took upon himself the care of his son's education, and taught him languages without study, and almost without his perceiving that he was learning them, by only introducing words of different languages, as it were casually, into conversation with him. By these means, when he was but four years old, he spoke every day French to his mother, Latin to his father, and High Dutch to the maid, without the least perplexity to himself, or the least confusion of one language with another. The other language, of which he was master, he learnt by a method yet more uncommon, which was, by only using the Bible in the language he then proposed to learn, accompanied with a translation. Thus he understood Greek at six, and Hebrew at eight years of age; insomuch that he could, upon the opening of the book, and without a moment's hesitation, translate the Hebrew Bible into Latin or French.

He afterwards applied himself to the study of the fathers and the councils, of philosophy, mathematics, and, above all, of astronomy. This boy, as he really was, formed schemes for finding the longitude, which he sent, in January, 1735, to the Royal Society at London; and, though these schemes had been already tried, and found insufficient, yet they exhibited such a specimen of his capacity for mathematical learning, that the Royal Society of Berlin admitted him, the same year, as one of their members. In 1735, he went with his father to Halle; at which university he was offered the degree of master of arts, or (as they call it) doctor in philosophy. Baratier drew up that night, 14 theses in philosophy and the mathematics; these he sent immediately to the press, and defended the next day so very ably, that all who heard him were delighted and amazed; he was then admitted to his degree. He died at his father's, at Halle, the 5th of October, 1740, in the 20th year of his age.

BARATIER, Bartholomew, author of a digest of feudal law, and professor of jurisprudence at Pavia, in the 15th century.

BARBA, Alvarez Alonzo, an author and curate of St. Bernard de Potosi, died after 1630.

BARBUD, a celebrated musician at the court of Persia.

BARCALI, a Mahomedan writer, died 960 of the hejira.

BARCHAM, John, a learned divine and antiquary, born at Exeter, about 1572. He assisted Speed in his History of England; and was author of a "Display of Heraldrie," folio, 1611; but having composed this in his youth, and thinking it too light a subject to acknowledge, he gave it to John Gwillim, a herald of his acquaintance, under whose name it has been repeatedly printed. He died 1642.

BARCHUSEN, or BARKHAUSEN, John Conrad, a German, eminent as a physician, and lecturer on chymistry, died 1717.

BARCLAY, or BARKLAY, Alexander, a native of Scotland, rector of a church in England, and an elegant writer of the 16th century.

BARCLAY, William, a Scotchman, professor of the university of Pontamousson, in France, died 1605.

BARCLAY, John, son of the preceding, a writer of some celebrity, died 1621.

BARCLAY, Henry, D. D. sometime missionary to the Mohawk Indians, afterwards rector of Trinity Church, New-York, died 1765.

BARCLAY, Robert, an eminent writer, of the society of Quakers, born at Edinburgh, 1648. In 1676, his famous "Apology for the Quakers" was published in Latin, at Amsterdam, 4to. He translated it, however, into English, and published it in 1678. This work is addressed to Charles II., and the manner in which he expresses himself to his majesty is very remarkable. Among many other extraordinary passages, we meet with the following: "There is no king in the world who can so experimentally testify of God's providence and goodness; neither is there any who rules so many free people, so many true Christians; which thing renders thy government more honourable, thyself more considerable, than the accession of many nations, filled with slavish and superstitious souls."

Thou hast tasted of prosperity and adversity; thou knowest what it is to be banished thy native country, to be overruled as well as to rule and sit upon the throne; and, being oppressed, thou hast reason to know how hateful the oppressor is both to God and man: if, after all these warnings and advertisements, thou dost not turn unto the Lord with all thy heart, but forget him who remembered thee in thy distress, and give up thyself to follow low lust and vanity, surely great will be thy condemnation."—He did great service to his sect over all Europe, by his writings, and died 1630.

BARCOCHÉBAS, or BARCOCHAB, an impostor among the Jews; his followers were numerous, but afterwards destroyed by Julius Severus.

BARCOS, Martin de, a controversial writer, of Bayonne, died 1678.

BARDNEY, Richard, a Benedictine, died in 1504.

BAREBONE, Praise-God, a bigoted zealot of Cromwell's parliament, of such celebrity as a demagogue, that the parliament was ludicrously called after him. His two brothers adopted as Scripture names, "Christ came into the world to save Barebone," and "if Christ had not died, thou hadst been damned, Barebone," called by the wits of the day, by the two last words.

BARENT, Dieterich, a Dutch painter, died 1592.

BARETTI, Joseph, born at Turin, about 1716. He came over to England in the year 1750, where he resided (with a short interval) the remainder of his life. Baretti had the good fortune to be introduced to Dr. Samuel Johnson, and between them a very long intimacy had place. From the time of his arrival in England, he subsisted by teaching the Italian language, and by the sale of his writings. In 1760 he made a tour to Italy, through Portugal and Spain, and returned to England after an absence of six years. In 1769, he was tried at the Old Bailey for having stabbed a man who violently assaulted him in the Haymarket. He made a most admirable defence; which, added to the bad reputation of his prosecutors, impressed the court much in his favour. He was acquitted of the murder, and of the manslaughter: the verdict was, self-defence. After this unfortunate transaction he again sat down to his studies, and in 1770 published his "Travels," for which, it is said, he received 500*l*. On the establishment of the Royal Academy, he was appointed foreign secretary, a post of more honour than profit. He died May 5, 1789, without a struggle or sigh, the moment after taking a glass of wine; preserving his faculties to the last moment.

BAREZI, a Mahomedan author, died 738 of the hegra.

BARGRAVE, Isaac, Chaplain to James I. and Charles, died 1642.

BARIDAH, a Mahomedan writer on Aristotle.

BARLOW, William, bishop of different dioceses, under Henry VIII., and Mary and Elizabeth of England, died 1568.

BARLOW, Francis, a native of Lincolnshire, a painter, died 1702.

BARLOW, Joel, L. D., author of the Columbiad, was born at Reading, Conn., 1758, and educated at Yale College; he served in the American army as a volunteer, and as a chaplain. At the close of the war, he went to France, where he became conspicuous and popular as a zealous friend of the revolution. He was appointed American consul at Algiers, and afterwards minister from the U. S. to France, and died, on his way to Wiina to meet Napoleon, 1812.

BARLOWE, Thomas, successively fellow of Oxford, keeper of the Bodleian, professor of divinity, and bishop of Lincoln, died 1691.

BARLOWE, William, remarkable for having been the first who wrote on the nature and properties of the loadstone, 20 years before Gilbert published his book on that subject. It was he likewise who found out the difference between iron and steel, and their tempers for magnetical uses. He died in 1625.

BARNABAS, St., a Levite, converted to Christianity, and a preacher of the gospel with St. Paul; he was stoned to death by the Jews.

BARNARD, John, minister, of Marblehead, Mass.; the father of the commercial enterprise of that place, and long regarded as the father of the churches in New-England. His publications are numerous and valuable; he died 1770.

BARNARD, Edward, a worthy and distinguished minister, of Haverhill, Mass. died 1774.

BARNARD, Thomas, a highly respected minister in Salem, Mass., died 1755.

BARNARD, John, prebendary of Lincoln, died in 1683.

BARNARD, Sir John, was in the year 1722 chosen one of the representatives in parliament for the city of London; a trust which he continued to enjoy during the six succeeding parliaments, and which he always discharged with equal integrity and ability. In 1727, he was chosen alderman of Dowgate Ward. On the subject of the famous excise scheme, projected by Sir Robert Walpole, in 1733, Sir John made so strenuous an opposition, that, in conjunction with other members, he obliged the ministry entirely to lay it aside. In 1737, he formed a scheme for reducing the interest on the national debt; a project which, though it did not at that time succeed, was, nevertheless, afterwards carried into execution, to the great emolument of the trading part of the nation. In 1738, he served in the high office of lord-mayor of London; and in July, 1758, resigned his gown, and retired to Clapham; where, after having attained to near the age of 80, he died August 29, 1766. A statue is erected to his memory in the Royal Exchange.

BARNAVE, Anthony Peter Joseph Marie, a deputy to the national assembly of France, who lost his popularity for some expressions in favour of the king, and was guillotined, 1793.

BARNES, Juliana, prioress of Sopewell nunnery, eminent for her accomplishments and piety, died after 1486.

BARNES, Joshua, an eminent critic, and professor of the Greek language in the university of Cambridge, was born in London, 1654. He published editions of Euripides, Anacreon, and Homer; a life of Edward III., folio, 1688; and several poems, both in Latin and English; and died in 1712.

BARNES, David Leonard, attorney of the United States, for the district of Rhode-Island, and judge of the same, died 1812.

BARNES, Robert, D. D., employed by Henry VIII.; afterwards incurring his displeasure, he was burnt at the stake, 1540.

BARNEVELDT, John d'Olden, an able statesman, of Holland, ambassador to England and France, condemned on false charges, and executed, 1619.

BARO, or BARONI, Peter, a native of France, who retired to England as a protestant, and resided with lord Burleigh; afterwards professor of divinity at Cambridge, died after 1574.

BAROCHE, Frederick, a painter, of Urbino, of great celebrity, died in 1612.

BARON, Bonaventure, a native of Ireland, and divinity professor at Rome, died 1696.

BARON, Michael, the Roscius of the French theatre, born 1632, died 1729. The father of Baron also was an actor, famous for his talent in declamation; and the manner of his death was singular: playing the part of Don Diego, in The Cid, his sword fell from his hand, as the piece requires; and kicking it from him with indignation, he unfortunately struck against the point of it, by which his little toe was pierced. It turned to a gangrene; he refused to suffer amputation, and died 1655.

BARON, Hyacinth Theodore, a learned physician of Paris, died in 1738.

BARONI, Adrienne Basile, sister to Basile the poet; greatly admired for her beauty, wit, and accomplishments.

BARRINGTON, Daines, son of the above, a celebrated English lawyer, antiquary, and writer on subjects of law, politics, natural history, geography, and criticism, born 1727, died March 14, 1800. His writings are very numerous, and many of them are in the Philosophical Transactions and the Archæologia; but those which most distinguished him as an author were, his "Observations on the Statutes, chiefly the more ancient," &c. of which, two 4to editions were published in one year, (1766.)

BARRINGTON, Samuel, son of lord B., a distinguished admiral in the British navy, died 1800.

BARROS, or DE BARROS, John, a native of Visco, preceptor to the princes of Portugal, afterwards governor of St. George, on the African coast, and treasurer of the Indies, under king Juan. He wrote a history of the Indies, and died 1570.

BARROW, Isaac, an eminent mathematician and divine, born in London, 1630. When the king advanced Dr. B. to the dignity of master of Trinity College, Cambridge, his majesty was pleased to say, "he had given it to the best scholar in England;" and he did not speak from report, but from his own knowledge. The doctor being then his chaplain, he used often to converse with him, and, in his humorous way, to call him an "unfair preacher," because he exhausted every subject, and left nothing for others to say after him. In 1675, he was chosen vice-chancellor of the university. This great and learned divine died of a fever the 4th of May, 1677, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

BARROW, Isaac, a native of Spiney Abbey, bishop of Sodor, Man, and St. Asaphs, died 1677.

BARRY, Girald, a native of Pembrokehire, a clergyman, and author of a history of the conquest of Ireland; he died after 1215.

BARRY, Spranger, an eminent English actor, cotemporary with, and a powerful rival of, Mr. Garrick, born in Dublin, 1719, died in London, Jan. 1774. His peculiar advantages were derived from a fine person, melodious voice, and pleasing address; and his performances in amatory characters were perhaps never excelled. See CRAWFORD.

BARRY, James, an eminent painter, was born at Cork, in Ireland, 1742; and having early discovered great genius for the art, he was patronized by Mr. Burke, and brought to London, where he became a pupil to Sir Joshua Reynolds. When Mr. Burke came into administration with the marquis of Rockingham, he sent Mr. Barry to Italy, at his sole expense. After visiting all the celebrated schools of the continent, in which he occupied three years, Mr. Barry returned to London; and in 1775, published "An Inquiry into the real and imaginary Obstructions to the Acquisition of the Arts in England." About two years after this, he was elected a Royal Academician, and in 1786 made professor of painting to the Royal Academy; but in 1799, on an alleged addiction to democratical principles, was removed from that office. He seems soon afterwards to have taken disgust at society, from which he retired into a wretched obscurity, living unattended, and half starved, till some friends raised about 1000*l.*, with which they purchased an annuity for him; but before the first quarter's payment of it became due he died, Mar. 22, 1806, and was interred in St. Paul's cathedral. His greatest effort of art is a series of allegorical pictures, which he painted gratuitously for the great room of the Society of Arts, in the Adelphi.

BARRY, George, D. D., an eminent Scotch divine, author of a history of the Orkneys, died 1805.

BARRY, John, first commodore in the American navy; he possessed great courage, was a patriot, and Christian, and died 1803.

BARTHELEMI, Nicholas, a Benedictine of the 15th century, and author of some devotional Latin poems.

BARTHELEMI, the Nestor of French literature, and author of the "Travels of Anacharsis in Greece," died May 3, 1795. During the domination of Robespierre, like most other men of learning, he was imprisoned; when, notwithstanding his great age (upwards of 80) and infirmities, instead of sinking under the rigour with which he was treated, he exerted himself in consoling his fellow-sufferers. Soon after the fall of Robespierre, he was released, and allowed a pension. In the "Memoirs of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres," are preserved many of his papers, illustrating Greek literature.

BARTHELEMI DES MARTYRS, a dominican, of Lisbon, archbishop of Braganza, died in 1590.

BARTHES DE MARMORIONS, Paul Joseph, a French medical writer, and professor of medicine, and chancellor of that faculty, in the university at Montpellier; he died 1806.

BARTOLOCCI, Julius, a cistercian monk, of Naples, and Hebrew professor at Rome, died 1687.

BARTOLOZZI, Francesco, a very eminent engraver, born at Florence, in 1728. In 1764 he came to England and worked for the printsellers, particularly Mr Boydell. In 1769 he was chosen a member of the Royal Academy. The new mode of stippling, or engraving in the red chalk manner, now becoming fashionable, gave Bartolozzi ample employment, and he executed in that way many hundreds of prints. The finest of all his works, perhaps, are the Marlborough Gems, and the prints for Boydell's Shakspeare. In 1802 he went to Lisbon, on an invitation from the prince regent of Portugal, who allowed him a pension; and there he died in March, 1815.

BARTON, Benjamin S., M. D., an eminent physician, of Philadelphia. He was appointed professor of natural history and botany, and afterwards of Materia Medica, in the university of Pennsylvania, and succeeded Dr. Rush, on his death, as professor of the theory and practice of medicine; he died in 1815.

BAUX, William de, prince of Orange, with the title of king of Arles and Vienna, murdered at Avignon, in 1218.

BAWDWEEN, William, vicar of Hooten Pagnell, near Doncaster, died Sept. 14, 1816. This gentleman was an excellent Saxon scholar, and translated vols. I. and II. of that valuable national record, Domesday Book, which was published by a vote of the British parliament. He proposed to print the whole in 10 vols. 4to; and the remaining 8 vols. are said to be prepared for the press. He left a widow and twelve children.

BAXTER, Richard, an eminent nonconformist divine, was born Nov. 12, 1615, at Rowton, near High Ereat, in Shropshire, and died 1691. He wrote a vast number of books; Mr. Long, of Exeter, says 80; Dr. Calamy, 120; but the author of a note in the Biographia Britannica tells us that he had seen 145 distinct treatises of Mr. Baxter's; his practical works have been published in four vols. folio. Bishop Burnet, in the history of his own times, calls him "a man of great piety; and says, "that if he had not meddled with too many things, he would have been esteemed one of the most learned men of the age; that he had a moving and pathetic way of writing; and was, his whole life long, a man of great zeal and much simplicity; but was unhappily subtle and metaphysical in every thing.

BAXTER, Andrew, a writer in metaphysics and natural philosophy, born in 1686, at Aberdeen, where he received his education at King's College. His principal employment w that of a private tutor. His celebrated work, "An Inquiry into the Nature of the Human Soul," was first published in 4to, and has been several times reprinted. Bishop Warburton calls it "the most finished book of the kind that the present times have produced." Baxter drew up for the use of his pupils, a piece entitled "Matho; sive Cosmotheoria Puerilis, Dialogus," &c. which he afterwards greatly enlarged, and published in English, 2 vols. 8vo., 1745. He died in 1750, after bearing with the greatest fortitude a complication of the most painful disorders.

BAXTER, William, an eminent critic and grammarian, nephew to the foregoing, born at Lanlughan, in Shropshire, 1650, died 1723. He published excellent editions of "Anacreon" and "Horace," was author of a "Latin Grammar," 1679, and of a Glossary of the Roman Antiquities," which, however, goes no farther than the letter A, and was printed 1726.

BAYARD, James A., a native of Delaware, was a representative, and afterwards a senator in congress from that state. BAYLE, Peter, author of the Historical and Critical Dictionary, was born, Nov. 18, 1647, at Carla, a small town in the county of Poix, and was a most laborious and indefatigable writer. In one of his letters to Des Maizeaux, he says, that since his 20th year he hardly remembers to have had any leisure. He died the 23th of December, 1706, after he had been writing the greatest part of the day. Among the productions which do honour to the age of Lewis XIV., Mr. Voltaire has not omitted the "Critical Dictionary" of our author: "It is the first work of the kind (says he) in which a man may learn to think." He was a man of brilliant parts and acute intellect; but his religious principles savour of infidelity.

BAYLE, Francis, professor of medicine at Toulouse, died in 1709.

In this voyage he steered his course along the Tigris and Euphrates, from Diabekir to the Persian Gulph, and made a collection of medals, inscriptions, and designs of the monuments of ancient Babylon, as well as Arabic manuscripts, which he presented to the Abbe Barthelemy. In 1787, he made a second voyage upon the Caspian Sea; in the course of which he observed the most important eclipse of the moon of which the history of astronomy preserves any remembrance. In 1795, he made a third voyage; and through the means of Volney, he was appointed consul at Muscate, in Arabia; at which place, however, he never arrived, being taken by the English. The peace having at length given him his liberty, he arrived sick at Nice, where he died on the 19th of November, 1801, at the moment when Buonaparte had appointed him commissary-general at Lisbon.

BEAUMONT, Sir John, a poet of some eminence, descended from an ancient family at Grace-Dieu, in Leicestershire, was born 1582. His "Bosworth Field," Mr. Heady tells us, merits a republication, for the easy flow of its numbers, and the spirit with which it is written. It was first published by his son, together with the rest of his poems, in 12mo, 1639. He was created a baronet by king Charles, in 1626, and died two years after.

BEAUMONT, Francis, brother of the foregoing, a celebrated dramatic writer, born at Grace-Dieu, in Leicestershire, about the year 1586, died in 1615, before he was 30 years of age, and was buried in the entrance of St. Benedict's chapel, within St. Peter's, Westminster. Beside the plays in which he was jointly concerned with Fletcher, he wrote a little dramatic piece, and other poems, printed together in 1653, 8vo. Beaumont was esteemed so good a judge of dramatic composition, that Ben Jonson submitted his writings to his correction, and, it is thought, was much indebted to him for the contrivance of his plots. Every thing respecting this poet, that could be collected by the most diligent research, will be found in Mr. Nichols valuable "History of Leicestershire."

BECKET, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of Henry II., was born in London, 1119, and assassinated in the cathedral church of Canterbury, on the 29th of December, 1171. The miracles said to be wrought at his tomb were so numerous, that we are told two large volumes of them were kept in that church. His shrine was visited from all parts, and enriched with the most costly gifts and offerings. Though canonized, however, he was, in truth, memorable only for his pride, insolence, and ingratitude to his sovereign, Henry II., to which he fell a sacrifice.

BECKFORD, William, a patriotic chief magistrate of the city of London, who died in that office, with which he had been for the second time invested, June 21, 1770, aged 65. He showed himself the steadfast friend of his king and country, and was the only man of his time who, with firmness, yet with humility, dared tell a king upon his throne (surrounded by his courtiers) the plain and honest truth; whereby he vindicated the loyalty, while he evinced the independent spirit of the city of London. Convinced that our liberties belong to posterity as well as to ourselves, he resolved that the share committed to his trust should not expire in his hands. As a citizen, he was eminently endowed with the virtues of humanity and affability; as a senator, (member for London,) watchful over the rights of the people; and as a magistrate, unremittingly active in seeing those rights legally executed. That his character might be ever held in the most honourable and grateful remembrance, the corporation erected his statue in their Guildhall, and recorded in the inscription the magnanimous speech which he is said to have addressed to the king in vindication of the people's right to remonstrate to the throne.

BECKINGHAM, Charles, an eminent dramatic writer; two of his pieces, Henry IV. of France, and Scipio Africanus, were highly applauded; he died in 1730.

BEDFORD, Arthur, a pious and learned clergyman of the church of England, born at Tiddensham, Gloucestershire, Sept. 1668. A favourite subject of literary labour with Mr. Bedford was the reformation of the drama and the stage. In his "Evil and danger of Stage Plays," being a serious remonstrance in behalf of the Christian religion, against the horrid blasphemies and impieties which are still used in the English play-houses, &c., he shows, that he had so completely reviewed the whole range of the English drama, as to produce "seven thousand instances, taken out of plays of the present century, and especially of the last five years, in defiance of all methods hitherto used for their reformation;" and he has also given a catalogue of "above fourteen hundred texts of Scripture, which are mentioned, either as ridiculed and exposed by the stage, or as opposite to their present practices." Mr. Bedford also published, besides many "Sermons" and other works, "Scripture Chronology, demonstrated by Astronomical Calculations, in eight books, fol. 1741," which Dr. Waterland characterizes as a very learned and elaborate work. He died chaplain to Haberdasher's Hospital, Sept. 15, 1745. See COLLIER, Jeremy.

These ingenious brothers have carried their art to a state of perfection which will not easily be surpassed. The first work that attracted the notice of the public, and at once established their reputation, was, a "History of Quadrupeds," 8vo., 1790, with figures on wood. It was eagerly sought after by the curious, and has been followed by many other proofs of their abilities, the last of which is, a "History of British Birds," 8vo., 1797; on which John was engaged in conjunction with his brother, when a consumption carried him off, December 5, 1795.

BLACK, Dr. Joseph, a very celebrated chymical writer, and professor of that science in the university of Edinburgh, was born at Bordeaux, in France, about 1727, and died at Edinburgh, Nov. 1800. His discoveries relative to magnesia and other alkaline bodies, have given birth to many important facts in the new system of chymistry. A memoir on the subject of these bodies, was read by him, in June, 1755, before the Literary Society of Edinburgh, which has been considered as a model of composition, reasoning and arrangement. Many other important discoveries have been communicated by him in his lectures, which, if he had committed them to the press, would have more materially promoted the cause and extension of science.

BLACKBURN, William, an eminent architect and surveyor, of London, died in 1790. He obtained a medal from the Royal Society, and the commendation of Sir Joshua Reynolds, for the best drawing of St. Stephens, Walbrook.

BLACKBURNE, Francis, a native of Richmond, was chaplain to the archbishop of York, prebendary of his cathedral, and archdeacon of Cleveland. His writings corresponded with his private sentiments in favour of the dissenters; he died in 1787.

BLACKHALL, Offspring, D. D., rector of St. Mary's, Loudon, chaplain to King William, and bishop of Exeter, was an able scholar, and eminent divine; he died in 1716.

BLACKLOCK, Dr. Thomas, an eminent Scottish poet and divine, whose talents, very respectable in themselves, were rendered extraordinary by the circumstance of his having totally lost his sight by the small pox at six months old. He was born at Annan, 1721, and died at Edinburgh, July, 1791.

BLACKMORE, Sir Richard, a physician, and an indefatigable writer, who has left a great number of works, theological, poetical, and physical. Dryden and Pope have treated the poetical performances of Sir Richard with great contempt. But, notwithstanding Sir Richard has been so much depreciated by these wits, he certainly had merit. His "Poem on the Creation" is his most celebrated performance, and on the recommendation of Dr. Johnson, has lately been inserted in the "Collection of the English Poets." It has appeared that spleen and resentment had been the cause of that severity with which he was treated by Dryden and Pope. Sir Richard was born at Corsham, Wilts, (in what year is uncertain,) and died October 9, 1729.

BLACKSTONE, Sir William, an illustrious English lawyer, born 1723. His father was a silkman, in Cheapside, and died before the birth of his son William, who, in 1730, was put to the Charter-house school, and, in 1735, admitted upon the foundation there. November, 1738, he was entered a commoner of Pembroke College, Oxford, and elected by the governors to one of the Charter-house exhibitions. At the age of 20, he compiled a treatise, entitled "Elements of Architecture," intended only for his own use, but much approved by those who have perused it. Quitting, however, with regret, these amusing pursuits, he engaged in the severer studies of the law, and, November, 1746, was called to the bar. In 1749, he was elected recorder of the borough of Wallingford, in Berkshire. April, 1750, he became doctor of laws, and published his "Essay on Collateral Consanguinity, relative to the exclusive claim to fellowships made by the founder's kin at All-souls." October 20, 1753, he was unanimously elected Vinerian professor of the common law, and on the 25th, read his Introductory Lecture, since prefixed to his "Commentaries." In 1762, he collected and republished several of his pieces, under the title of "Law Tracts," in 2 vols. 8vo. In 1763, he was chosen solicitor-general to the queen. November, 1764, he published the 1st volume of his lectures, under the title of "Commentaries on the Laws of England; and in the four succeeding years the other three volumes. May, 1770, he became a junior judge in the court of King's Bench; and in June was removed to the same situation in the common pleas, which office he retained till his death, which happened February 14, 1780.

BLACKSTONE, John, an apothecary and botanist, of London, died in 1753.

BLACKWALL, Anthony, a native of Derbyshire, and author of a most celebrated work, entitled "The Sacred Classics defended and illustrated; or, an Essay, humbly offered toward proving the purity, propriety, and true eloquence of the writers of the New Testament." He died at Market Bosworth, in Leicestershire, (where he was for some years head master of the free school,) April 8, 1730.

BLACKWELL, Alexander, a native of Aberdeen; not succeeding as a physician at home, he went to Sweden, where he succeeded for a time, but being suspected of a conspiracy, was tortured and beheaded in 1748.

BLACKWELL, Thomas, an eminent Scottish writer, son of a minister at Aberdeen, and born there, August 4, 1701. In 1737, was published at London, but without his name, "An Inquiry into the Life and Writings of Homer," 8vo., and not long after, "Proofs of the Inquiry into Homer's Life and Writings;" which was a translation of the Greek, Latin, Spanish, Italian, and French notes, subjoined to the original work. We agree with those who esteem this the best of our author's performances. In 1748, he published "Letters concerning Mythology," 8vo., without his name also. The same year he was made principal of the Marischal College in Aberdeen. March, 1752, he took the degree of doctor of laws; and, in the year following, came out the 1st volume of his "Memoirs of the court of Augustus," 4to. The 2d volume appeared in 1755; and the 3d, which was posthumous, and left incomplete by the author, was fitted for the press by John Mills, Esq., and published in 1764. He died March 1, 1757.

BLACKWOOD, Adam, a native of Scotland, eminent as a poet, civilian, and divine, but particularly as the warm advocate of Mary, queen of Scots; he published, in 1757, an account of her martyrdom, addressed to the princes of Europe, and died at Poitiers, in 1613.

BLADEN, Martin, a gentleman of Abrey Hatch, in Essex, formerly a lieutenant-colonel in Queen Anne's reign, but more distinguished by a translation of "Caesar's Commentaries," which he dedicated to his general, the great duke of Marlborough. He died in 1746.

BLAIR, James, M. A., a minister of the episcopal church in Scotland, was sent by the bishop of London as a missionary to Virginia, in 1685. He procured a patent for the erection of a college there, and was its first president for nearly 50 years; he was also president of the council of Virginia, and died in 1743.

BLAIR, Samuel, a learned minister in Pennsylvania, for several years at the head of an academy at Fog's manor, Chester, died about 1751.

BLAIR, John, brother and successor of Samuel Blair in the church and seminary at Fog's manor, afterwards professor of divinity in New-Jersey College.

BLAIR, John, one of the associate judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, died in 1800.

BLAIR, John, president of the council of Virginia, and a judge in that colony, died 1771.

BLAIR, Patrick, a surgeon at Dundee, who first acquired some reputation by the dissection of an elephant, and afterwards by his essays on botany; time of his death unknown.

BLAIR, Robert, an elegant poet, born about the beginning of the last century. He received his education in the university of Edinburgh, and was ordained, in 1731, minister of Athol Stanceford in East Lothian, where he resided till his death, in 1745. His poem, called "The Grave," has been extremely popular, and passed through many editions.

BLAIR Dr John an eminent divine, born in Scotland, but settled in England, where he presented the world with a very valuable publication, under the title of "The Chronology and History of the World, from the Creation to the Year of Christ 1753, illustrated in 56 tables." In 1768, he published an improved edition of his "Chronological Tables;" to which were annexed "Fourteen Maps of Ancient and Modern Geography, for illustrating the Tables of Chronology and History." He died June 24, 1782.

BLAIR, Dr. Hugh, a celebrated Scottish divine, was the son of a respectable merchant in Edinburgh, and born in that city, April 7, 1718. On the 15th of June, 1758, he was made one of the ministers of the high church of Edinburgh; and his subsequent ministerial labours and conduct in that conspicuous and difficult station, for a period of more than 40 years, amply evinced the propriety of the choice. As an author, Dr. Blair is well known by his "Lectures on Rhetoric and the Belles Lettres," delivered in his office as regius professor in the university of Edinburgh. These are eminently distinguished by laborious investigation, sound sense, refined taste, and, above all, by that lucidus ordo which always proves a writer to be master of his subject. In short, this work may justly be said to have established an unequivocal and sure standard of taste. His "Sermons," however, of which five volumes are before the public, have experienced a success unparalleled in the annals of pulpit eloquence, though justly merited by their purity of sentiment, justness of reasoning, and grace of composition. They have circulated in numerous editions, wherever the English tongue extends, and have been translated into almost all the languages of Europe. Dr. Blair died December 27, 1800.

BLAIZE, a bishop, martyred by the emperor Dioclesian; but more celebrated as the inventor of wool combing.

BLAKE, Robert, a famous English admiral, born August 15, 1599, at Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, where he was educated at the grammar school. Having served some years in the parliament army, he was, in February, 1648-9, appointed to command the fleet, in conjunction with Colonel Deane, and Colonel Popham. During nine years actual service in the navy, he performed exploits that, for the skill with which they were conducted, and the success that attended them, were never surpassed till the days of Howe, St. Vincent, Duncan, and Nelson. He died as the fleet was entering Plymouth, the 17th of August, 1657, aged 58. His body was conveyed to Westminster Abbey, and interred with great funeral pomp in Henry the VIIIth's chapel; but removed from thence, in 1661, and re-interred in St. Margaret's churchyard.

BLAKE, John Bradley, a native of London, after acquiring a profound knowledge of chemistry and mathematics, and of his favourite study, botany, went to China in the service of the India company, where he collected and sent to Europe, all the valuable seeds and plants of the country; he also began a collection of ores and fossils, but his application destroyed his health, and he died in 1773.

BLOUNT, Sir Thomas Pope, an eminent English writer, born at Upper Holloway, in Middlesex, September 12, 1649. He was a man of great learning, and well versed in the best writers; of which he gave a proof in his famous work, "Censura Celebriorum Authorum," &c. He wrote also a work on poetry, "De Re Poetica, or Remarks upon Poetry; with characters and censures of the most considerable poets, whether ancient or modern, extracted out of the best and choicest critics;" he died in 1697.

BLOW, Dr. John, an eminent musician, born at Collingham, in Nottinghamshire, about the year 1648. In 1674, he was appointed master of the children of the Royal Chapel; in 1685, composer to his majesty; in 1687, almoner and master of the choristers of St. Paul's cathedral. Upon the decease of Purcell, in 1695, he became organist of Westminster Abbey. He died October 1, 1708, and was buried in the north aisle of Westminster Abbey.

BLOWERS, Thomas, a good scholar, and minister, in Beverly, Massachusetts, died in 1729.

BLUCHER, Gebhard Lebrecht, Prince Von, a most celebrated Prussian field marshal, born at Rostock, December 16, 1742, distinguished himself by his great skill and success in military tactics. He crossed the Rhine, January 1, 1814, and entered the French territory. A decisive victory at Laon, February 9, opened the way to Paris, which was entered by the allied sovereigns, March 31. He went in the company of the monarchs to England, where the enthusiasm of the people afforded him the most brilliant triumph. The landing of Buonaparte from Elba again called him to the field; when he greatly assisted in deciding, on the 18th of June, 1815, the eventful battle of Waterloo, and the fate of Napoleon. Then, with the same rapidity as he had conquered, he followed up his victory, and the second time obtained peace in Paris. Almost all the great powers in Europe honoured him with orders of knighthood. His own sovereign named him, in memory of the first of his victories, Prince of Walisstadt, with a suitable donation, and bestowed on him, exclusively, a particular mark of honour: viz., an iron cross surrounded with golden rays; declaring, that "he knew very well that no golden rays could heighten the splendour of his services; but that it gave him pleasure to make his sense of them evident by a suitable mark of distinction." He had been 45 years in the army; and his celerity in the field obtained him the name of "Marshal Forwards." He died at Kriblowitz, almost in the presence of his king, who attended him in his last sickness, September 12, 1819.

BLUM, Joachin, Christian, a German poet, who retired from public affairs to devote himself to the muses; he died in 1790.

BLUTAEU, Dom. Raphael, an eminent preacher, born in London, of French parents, went to Lisbon, where he wrote a Portuguese and Latin dictionary; he died in 1734.

BOADICEA, queen of the Iceni, in Britain, a most intrepid heroine, who, being defeated and ill-used by the Romans, after having behaved with exemplary bravery, despatched herself by poison, A. D. 59.

BOATE, Gerard, a Dutch physician, who settled in Ireland, and wrote a natural history of the country.

BOBART, a German, first keeper of the botanical garden at Oxford, died in 1679.

BOCCACE, John, an eminent writer, born at Certaldo, in Tuscany, 1313, died 1375. He left several works, some in Latin, and some in Italian; but, of all his compositions, his "Decameron" is the most famous; it was received so favourably by foreign nations, that every one would have it in their own tongue; and it was sought after so much the more eagerly, as pains were taken to suppress it; his stories being too licentious, and satirical on the monks.

BOCCACI, or BOCCACINO, Camillo, a portrait and historical painter, of Cremona, died in 1546.

BOCCAGE, Marie Anne Lepage du, a celebrated French poetess and dramatic writer, often mentioned by Lord Chesterfield in his letters to his son, was born at Rouen, October 22, 1710, and died at Paris, August 1802.

BOCCALINI, Trajan, a satirical wit, born at Rome, about the beginning of the 17th century. His "Ragguagli di Farnasso" has been translated into English, and many other languages. Boccacini was assassinated at Venice, being beaten to death with sand bags.

BODIN, John, a native of Angers, who acquired reputation and the notice of his sovereign, by his wit and merit. He settled at Laon, where he rose to eminence as a lawyer and public speaker; he died 1596. His writings are numerous and respectable.

BODLEY, Sir Thomas, from whom the Bodleian library at Oxford takes its name, was born at Exeter, March 2, 1544. In 1565, he was made gentleman usher to Queen Elizabeth. From this time till 1597, he was honourably and successfully employed in embassies and negotiations with foreign powers; and on his final revocation, in that year, he set about the noble work of restoring the public library at Oxford, which in two years time he brought to a good degree of perfection. He furnished it with a large collection of books, purchased in foreign countries at a great expense: and this collection in a short time became so greatly enlarged, by the generous benefactions of several noblemen, bishops, and others, that neither the shelves nor the room could contain them. Whereupon, Bodley offering to make a considerable addition to the building, the notion was readily embraced, and July 19, 1610, the first stone of the new foundation was laid with great solemnity, and a speech made upon the occasion. But he did not live to see this part of his plan completed, though he left sufficient to do it, with some of his friends in trust. Sir Thomas died January 28, 1612, and was buried with great solemnity at the upper end of Merton College choir. An annual speech in his praise is still made at Oxford, November 8; at which time is the visitation of the library.

BŒCE, or BŒTHIUS, Hector, a native of Dundee. Vid. BŒTHIUS.

BĒRHAAVE, Herman, an illustrious physician and professor at Leyden, born December 31, 1668, at Voorhoot, a small village in Holland, about two miles from that city; died September 23, 1738. No professor was ever attended, in public as well as private lectures, by so great a number of students, from such distant and different parts, for so many years successively: none heard him without conceiving a veneration for his person, at the same time that they expressed their surprise at his prodigious attainments; and it may be justly affirmed, that none in so private a station ever attracted a more universal esteem. So unmoved was he by detraction, (from which the best of men are not exempt,) that he used to say, "The sparks of calumny will be presently extinct of themselves, unless you blow them."

BĒL, Peter, a Flemish painter, pupil to Corn. de Waal, at Rome, died in 1680.

BĒTHIE, Etienne de la, eminent as a scholar and translator of Plutarch and Xenophon; he died near Bordeaux, in 1563.

BĒTHIUS, or BĒTIUS, Flavius Anicius Manlius Torquatus Severinus, a prose as well as poetical writer of the 6th century, born of one of the noblest families in Rome. Having remonstrated with great spirit against the tyranny of Theodoric, he was beheaded in prison, by command of that king, in 524. Bœthius wrote many philosophical works, the greater part in the logical way: but his ethnic piece, "De Consolatione Philosophiæ," is his chief performance, and has always been justly admired both for the matter and for the style. Mr. Harris, in his Hermes, has observed, that "with Bœthius the Latin tongue, and the last remains of Roman dignity, may be said to have sunk in the western world."

BĒTHIUS, BŒCE, or BŒIS, Hector, a famous Scottish historian, born at Dundee, in the shire of Angus, about 1470. He wrote in Latin a History of Scotland, and died 1522.

BOILEAU, Sieur Despreaux, Nicholas, a celebrated French poet, born at Paris, November 1, 1636. He wrote satires, wherein he exposed the bad taste of his time, and was extremely severe against vice and the corrupt manners of the age. Boileau's satirical pieces raised him many enemies: his "Satire against the Women" in particular, was much talked of, and occasioned great clamour. So highly did he rank among French writers, that Bruyere, in a speech delivered at the French academy, said "Boileau excels Juvenal, comes up to Horace, seems to create the thoughts of another, and to make whatever he handles his own. His verses will be read even when the language is obsolete, and will be the last ruins of it." Dr. Warton, also, says, that Boileau's Art of Poetry is the best composition of that kind extant. He died March 2, 1711.

BOILEAU, John James, an ecclesiastic, of St. Honoré, at Paris, was a man of great learning, and highly esteemed by the cardinal de Noailles; he died in 1735.

BOSCAWEN, Edward, a celebrated English admiral, son of Ilugh, lord viscount Falmouth, was born about 1711. He signalized himself in many important contests with the French; in which, one circumstance of his success will appear singular; namely, that of having at three different times, in 1744, 1747, and 1755, taken M. Hoquart, a French commander, prisoner.—Mr. B.'s eminent services merited and obtained the approbation and gratitude of his country. On the 12th Dec. 1758, the thanks of the house of commons (the greatest honour that can be done to any subject) were given him in his place by the speaker; in that year also he was appointed admiral of the blue; and in Dec. 1760, general of marines, with a salary of 3000*l.* per annum, and a seat in the privy council. This rank and honour, however, he did not long enjoy, dying January 10, 1761. Some interesting stories of this great commander will be found in "Seaward's Anecdotes."

BOSCAWEN, William, a miscellaneous writer and poet, of considerable merit, son of general George Boscawen, and nephew of the admiral, was born Aug. 28, 1752. He was educated at Eton school and at Exeter college, Oxford; was called to the bar as a member of the Middle Temple, and became a commissioner of bankrupts; and in 1785 was appointed one of the commissioners of the victualing office. He was an excellent scholar, and (besides other poems) published, in two vols. 8vo, a new translation of Horace, which is, in the judgment of classical men, in many essential points of merit, very superior to that of Dr. Francis. Mr. B. was a most amiable man, and died May 6, 1811.

BOSCH, Balthazar Vanden, a painter of Antwerp, whose pieces are much admired, died in 1715.

BOSCH, Jacob, a painter of Amsterdam, died in 1675.

BOSSUET, James, bishop of Meaux, born at Dijon, 1627. His "Discours sur l'Histoire Universelle" was published in 1681, and has been considered as a valuable work, and of great authority. He died at Paris, in 1704.

BOSSUS, Martin, an ecclesiastic of Verona, who wrote several Latin works, died in 1502.

BOSTON, Thomas, M. A., a Scotchman educated at Edinburgh, known as the author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold state." Died in 1732.

BOSWELL, James, an eminent miscellaneous writer, but chiefly distinguished as the literary companion and biographer of the celebrated Dr. Johnson. He was born at Edinburgh, Oct. 29, 1740, and was the son of lord Auchinleck, one of the judges of the court of sessions in Scotland. In 1763, Mr. B. came to London, and had what he always called the singular felicity of being introduced to Dr. Johnson. Soon after this he set out on a tour; and having visited the most remarkable cities in Italy, sailed to Corsica, travelled over every part of that island, and returned to Scotland, in 1766, when he became an advocate at the Scotch bar. The celebrated Douglas cause being at that time a subject of general discussion, Mr. Boswell took a very active and successful part in it: he published a pamphlet, entitled "The Essence of the Douglas Cause," which was supposed to have procured Mr. Douglas the popularity he at that time possessed. In 1768, Mr. B. published his "Account of Corsica, with Memoirs of General Paoli." Of this printed performance, Dr Johnson thus expresses himself: "Your journal is, in a very high degree, curious and delightful. I know not whether I could name any narrative, by which curiosity is better excited, or better gratified." In 1785, he published "A Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides with Dr. Johnson," which had a success similar to his account of Corsica. This year Mr. Boswell removed to London, and was soon after called to the English bar; but his professional business was interrupted by the preparing of his most celebrated work, "The Life of Samuel Johnson, L. L. D.," in 2 vols. 4to. This was published in 1790, and was received by the world with wonderful avidity. It is a faithful history of Johnson's life, exhibits a most interesting picture of the character of that illustrious moralist, and is one of the most instructive and entertaining books in the English language. The preparation of a second edition of this work was the last literary performance of Mr. Boswell, who died May 19, 1795.

BOURGUEVILLE, Charles de, lieutenant-general of Caen, and author of a history of that town, died in 1593.

BOURIGNON, Antoinette, a famous enthusiast, of the female sex, born 1616, at Lisle, in Flanders. She came into the world so very deformed, that a consultation was held in the family some days about stifling her as a monstrous birth. But if she sunk almost beneath humanity in her exterior, her interior seems to have been raised as much above it; for, at four years of age, she not only took notice that the people of Lisle did not live up to the principles of christianity which they professed, but was thereby disturbed so much as to desire a removal into some more christian country. Her progress through life was suitable to this beginning. She died at Francher, in Holland, 1680. Her main principles of religion were nearly the same with those of the Quietists, excluding all external divine worship, and requiring a cessation of reason, wit, and understanding, that God might spread his divine light over them, or cause it to revive in them; without which, the Deity is not sufficiently known.

BOVETTE DE BLEMUR, Jaqueline, early embraced a religious life, and wrote theological works. He died at Chatillon, in 1696.

BOVEY, Catharine, married at the early age of 15, to a gentleman of opulence. To great personal charms, she united a benevolent character, and died in 1726.

BOWER, Archibald, a learned Jesuit, born near Dundee, in Scotland, in 1686, and died Sept. 2, 1766. His principal work, was "A History of the Popes," in 7 vols. 4to; concerning which, as well as his connexion with the Jesuits, he stood accused of much imposture. He also contributed to the compilation of "The Universal History;" but, as is said, not much to the advantage of the work.

BOWLE, John, rector of Idminton, near Salisbury, born in 1725, had the honour to be one of the first detectors of Lauder's forgeries. He edited a Spanish edition of "Don Quixote," and also Marston's Satires, and other old English poetry, and died in 1788. See LAUDER.

BOWYER, William, a very learned English printer, born in White Friars, London, 1699, died 1777. To his literary and professional abilities, he added an excellent moral character, the strictest probity, and the greatest liberality. He was in habits of correspondence and intimacy with the greatest men of his time; and many minute particulars of him, that do not come within our plan, may be seen in the "Anecdotes of his Life," published by his partner and successor, Mr. Nichols. To the journeymen of his profession, he left by will, some valuable bequests for the reward of merit, and the comfort of old age: the trust for ever is vested in the Stationers' Company.

BOWDOIN, James, L. L. D., governor of Mass., a philosopher and statesman; he held various distinguished offices in his native state till 1787, assisted in forming the American academy of arts and sciences, at Boston, of which he was the first president: one of the founders, and president of the Massachusetts bank.

BOWEN, Jabez, L. L. D., chancellor of Brown University, judge of the supreme court, and lieutenant governor of Rhode Island, died in 1815.

BOWIE, Robert, an officer of the revolutionary army, and for many years governor of Maryland, was highly esteemed for his integrity, liberality and patriotism; he died in 1814.

BOXHORN, Marc Zuerius, a professor at Leyden, and author of several works, died in 1655.

BOYCE, Dr. William, an eminent musician and composer, chiefly of sacred pieces, born 1709, died 1779.

BOYD, Robert, a Scotchman, educated at Saumur. James I. wished to appoint him principal of the university, but, as he favoured the puritans, he preferred to become the minister of his native parish. He died in 1629.

BOYD, Mark, Alexander, a warrior, lawyer, and Latin poet, born at Galloway, in Scotland, in 1562, died in 1601.

BOYD, Hugh, born in Ireland about 1746, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and bred to the law; but being of a dissipated turn, he never followed his profession. Having formed connexions in England, he came to London, and through the introduction of Mr. Richard Burke, became acquainted with the most celebrated literary characters. In 1752, he married a lady of considerable fortune; but his habit of extravagance continuing, obliged him to accompany lord Macartney to India, in the capacity of a second secretary; though he afterwards obtained a more lucrative appointment, which he retained till his decease, in 1794. He was author of several political writings; and the celebrated Letters of Junius have been with much confidence ascribed to him; but the evidence adduced, is by no means conclusive. In 1793, he published "The Indian observer," a periodical paper, which was the first attempt of the kind in India, and gained him great reputation. These essays were afterwards collected and printed at Calcutta, in 8vo, 1795, and reprinted in London, 1798.

BOYD, Sir Robert, governor of Gibraltar, who from a private soldier, raised himself merely by merit to the highest rank in the military profession, died in May, 1794.

BOYD, Robert, lord, a Scotchman, son of Sir Thomas Boyd, of Kilmarnock, was made a peer by James II., and one of the regents. He carried off the king, and declared himself sole regent during his minority, and afterwards, on account of his misconduct, fled to Antwerp, where he died 1774.

BOYD, William, a highly celebrated preacher, settled at Lamington, died 1808.

BOYDELL, John, a very worthy alderman of London, and most distinguished encourager of the arts of painting and engraving, was born at Dorrington, in Shropshire, Jan. 19, 1719, and intended for a land surveyor, which was the profession of his father; but chance having thrown in his way, "Buddle's Views of different Country Seats," he determined on quitting the pen for the graver; and, at above 20 years of age, put himself apprentice for seven years to Mr. Toms, whom he served six years, and bought up the seventh. He then applied closely till he had engraved 152 prints, which he published in a book at the price of five guineas. With the profits of this, he set about encouraging other professors of the art; he discovered the talents of Woollet, and employed him to engrave the two famous pictures of "Niobe" and "Phaeton." He soon commenced a great foreign trade in English prints, and realized by his spirit of industry and enterprise a considerable fortune. Having at length established what might be called an English school of engraving, he conceived the noble idea of raising also an English school of painting; and, selecting all the first artists in the kingdom, collected in the course of a few years, at vast expense, the paintings which formed the well-known "Shakspeare Gallery." The long duration of the French war, however, having almost wholly stopped his export trade, in which he had embarked large sums of money, he was, in the spring of 1804, induced to crave permission of parliament to dispose of the Shakspeare Gallery, &c. by lottery. He had the gratification of living to see every ticket sold, but died before the decision of the wheel. The worthy alderman caught his death by a too eager attention to his official duties; for, arriving on the 8th of December, 1804, at the sessions house in the Old Bailey, before the fires were lighted, and standing at a fireplace while one was kindled, the damps were drawn out from the floor; cold and inflammation of the lungs ensued, and carried him off on the 12th of the same month, in the 86th year of his age.

BOYENVAL, Peter Joseph, a worthless character, employed to denounce the victims in the Luxembourg, at last suffered on the scaffold, in 1795.

BOYER, Abel, a well-known glossographer, born at Castres, in France, 1664, died Nov. 1729. The work he is chiefly known by, is a very excellent French and English, and English and French Dictionary. He wrote also "a French Grammar" in English, which still retains a high rank in our schools.

BOYER, Claude, known as a dramatic writer, died at Paris, 1698.

BOYER, John Baptist Nicholas, a physician, distinguished for his skill and humanity displayed during the plague at Marseilles, in 1720; he died at Paris, 1738.

BOYLE, Richard, an eminent English statesman, distinguished by the title of the great earl of Cork, born in Canterbury, 1566, died 1643; having spent the last as he did the first years of his life, in support of the crown of England against Irish rebels, and in the service of his country.

BOYLE, Roger, earl of Orrery, fifth son of Richard, earl of Cork, born 1621, was created baron Broghill, in the Kingdom of Ireland, when but seven years old. He died Oct., 1679, leaving behind him the character of an able general, statesman, and writer. Of his writings, the principal are, six tragedies, two comedies, "Parthenissa," a romance, and a collection of "State Letters," published in folio, 1742.

BOYLE, Robert, a most distinguished philosopher and chymist, and an exceedingly good man, was the 7th son, and 14th child, of Richard earl of Cork, and born at Lismore, in Ireland, 1626-7. He was the inventor of the air-pump; and his numerous philosophical writings have secured him immortal fame. He died 1691.

BOYLE, Charles, earl of Orrery, 2d son of Roger, 2d earl of Orrery, was born 1676, and died 1731. He was eminent as a statesman; but better known, at the present day, for his literary controversy with Dr. Bentley on the authenticity of the epistles of Phalaris. He was also an ingenious mathematician, and inventor of the machine representing the solar system, which is still named after his title, the Orrery.

BOYLE, John, earl of Cork and Orrery, was the only son of Charles, the subject of the preceding article, and born 1706-7. He took his seat in the house of peers, Jan. 1731-2; but, though he distinguished himself by some speeches, he did not greatly cultivate the business of parliament. The delicacy of his health, his passion for private life, and the occasions he sometimes had of residing in Ireland, seem to have precluded him from any regular attendance in the English house of peers. "Whenever (says he, in a private letter to a friend) we step out of domestic life in search of felicity, we come back again disappointed, tired, and chagrined. One day passed under our own roof with our friends and our family, is worth a thousand in another place. The noise and bustle, or (as they are foolishly called) the diversions of life, are despicable and tasteless, when once we have experienced the real delight of a fire-side." His principal works are, a translation of "Pliny's Letters, with observations on each Letter, and an Essay on Pliny's Life," and "Remarks on the Life and Writings of Swift." He died in 1762.

BOYLSTON, Zabdiel, F. R. S., an eminent physician, of Boston, who is particularly known as having first introduced inoculation of the small pox into the British dominions, in 1720; he died in 1766.

BOYLSTON, Nicholas, died in Boston, 1771, aged 56; he bequeathed to Harvard College 1500*l*.

BOYLSTON, John, merchant, of Boston, died in 1795, and left a legacy to his native town.

BOYS, John, an English divine, educated at Cambridge, and dean of Canterbury, author of theological works, died in 1625.

BOYS, William, born at Deal, in Kent, 1735, was bred a surgeon, but devoted much of his time to antiquarian researches, and published, besides other works, an elaborate and valuable "History of Sandwich, with Notices of other Cinque Ports, and of Richborough," 4to, 1792. He died March 15, 1803.

BOYSE, BOYS, or BOIS, John, one of the translators of the Bible, in the reign of James I., was born at Nettlestead, in Suffolk, in 1560, and died 1643, leaving a great many manuscripts behind him, particularly a commentary on almost all the books of the New-Testament. When he was a young student at Cambridge, he received from the learned Dr. Whitaker three rules for avoiding those distempers which usually attend a sedentary life; to which he constantly adhered: the first was, to study always standing; the second, never to study in a window; the third, never to go to bed with his feet cold. Sir Henry Saville styles him ingeniosissimum et doctissimum Boisium.

BOYSE, Samuel, a very ingenious person, but as remarkable for imprudence as for ingenuity, was born in Dublin, 1708. In 1731, he published, at Edinburgh, a volume of poems, addressed to the countess of Eglinton. He wrote also an Elcgy upon the death of lady Stormont, entitled, "The Tears of the Muses;" with which lord Stormont was so much pleased, that he ordered Boyse a handsome present. These publications, and the honourable notice taken of them, were the means of recommending him to very high persons, who were desirous of serving him: but Boyse was not a man to be served. He made an improper use of these recommendations, and had often recourse to the meanest arts to procure benefactions. At some times he would raise subscriptions for poems which did not exist; at others, ordered his wife to inform people that he was just expiring, to move the compassion of his friends, who were frequently surprised to meet the man in the street to-day, who was, yesterday, said to be at the point of death. In May, 1749, however, he died, after a lingering illness, in obscure lodgings, near Shoe-lane, where he was buried at the expense of the parish. He was a melancholy instance of the wretchedness, contempt and disgrace, to which the most ingenious persons may reduce themselves, by an abuse of those powers with which nature hath endowed them. The most celebrated of his performances, was his poem, called "Deity," which is styled by Hervey, "a beautiful and instructive poem;" and is also mentioned by Fielding, as "a very noble one."

BOYSE, Joseph, a dissenting minister, born in Yorkshire. He became a popular preacher in London and Dublin, but was engaged in theological disputes, and died in 1728.

BRIENNE, Walter de, a native of Champagne, distinguished for his courage at the siege of Acre, against the Saracens; he was afterwards king of Sicily: his son and successor, of the same name, also distinguished himself against the Saracens; he was put to death in 1251.

BRIENNE, John, made king of Jerusalem, in 1210, which he resigned; he afterwards filled the throne of Constantinople.

BRIETIUS, Philip, a learned French geographer, and universal chronologist, born at Abbeville, in 1601, and died librarian of the Jesuit's College, at Paris, 1698.

BRIGGS, Henry, an eminent mathematician, born at Halifax, in Yorkshire, 1556. When Gresham College, in London, was established, he was chosen the first professor of geometry there, in 1596. He died in January, 1630.

BRIGGS, William, a native of Norwich, an eminent physician, of St. Thomas' hospital, died in 1704.

BRIGHAM, Nicholas, a native of Oxfordshire, eminent as a lawyer and poet, died in 1359.

BRIGHT, Francis, first minister of Charlestown, Massachusetts, returned to England in 1630.

BRIGHTMAN, Thomas, rector of Hawnes, Bedfordshire, wrote Latin commentaries on the canticles and apocalypse, died in 1607.

BRILL, Matthew and Paul, natives of Antwerp, and good painters; born in 1550, and 1554, and eminent for performances in history and landscape; Matthew died in 1584; Paul in 1626.

BRINDLEY, James, a most uncommon genius for mechanical inventions, and particularly excellent in planning and conducting inland navigations, was born in 1716, at Tunsted, in Derbyshire, and died at Turnhurst, in Staffordshire, September 27, 1772, having shortened his days by too intense application; for he never indulged or relaxed himself in the common diversions of life, not having the least relish for them; and though once prevailed on to see a play in London, yet he declared that he would on no account be present at another, because it so disturbed his ideas for several days after, as to render him unfit for business. When any extraordinary difficulty occurred to him in the execution of his works, he generally retired to bed; and has been known to lie there one, two, or three days, till he had surmounted it. He would then get up, and execute his design without any drawing or model; for he had a prodigious memory, and carried every thing in his head.

BRINSMEAD, William, first minister of Marlborough, Massachusetts, died in 1701. He refused baptism to infants born on the Sabbath.

BRINVILLIERS, Maria Margaret d'Aubrai, marchioness of, a French lady, known for her intrigues and crimes; she poisoned her father, two brothers, and her sister, was condemned to have her head cut off, and afterwards to be burnt; the sentence was executed in 1676.

BRIQUEMAUT, and CAVAGNES, two protestants, cruelly put to death soon after the massacre of St. Bartholomew, in France, in 1572.

BRISSONIUS, Barnaby, a lawyer of eminence, in France, was ambassador of Henry III. in England, and died in 1591.

BRISSOT, Peter, a native of Fontenay le Compte, in Poitou, eminent as a physician, died in 1522.

BRISSOT, J. P., a very eminent French writer on philosophy, politics, and legislation; but, not contenting himself with a high degree of literary fame, he took a distinguished part in the French revolutionary government, and suffered by the guillotine, November 30, 1793, at the age of 39.

BRITANNICUS, John, an Italian critic and grammarian, was born at Palazzolo, near Brescia, about the middle of the 15th century, and died in 1510.

BRITANNICUS, son of Claudius, poisoned by his mother-in-law, who wished to raise her son Nero to the throne, A. D. 55.

BRITO, Bernardo de, a monk of Almeida, in Portugal, author of a historical account of his country, died in 1617.

BRITTON, Thomas, the famous musical small-coal man, was born at, or near Higham Ferrers, in Northamptonshire, about the middle of the 17th century, and went from thence to London, where he bound himself apprentice to a small-coal man. He served seven years, and returned to Northamptonshire, his master giving him a sum of money not to set up; but after this money was spent, he returned again to London, and set up the trade of small-coal; which he continued to the end of his life. Some time after his setting up in the coal business, he applied himself to chymistry; and, by the help of a moving elaboratory, contrived by himself, performed such things in that profession, as had never been done before. But his principal object was music; in the theory of which he was very knowing: in the practice not inconsiderable. He was so much addicted to it, that he pricked with his own hand very neatly and accurately, and left behind him a collection of music, mostly pricked by himself, which was sold for near 100*l*. He left an excellent collection of printed books, both of chymistry and music: not to mention that he had, some years before his death, sold by auction a collection of books, most of them in the Rosicrucian faculty, of which he was a great admirer. But what distinguished him most of all, was a kind of musical meeting, held at his own small house, and kept up at his own charges, for many years. This society was frequented by gentry even those of the best quality, with whom he conversed familiarly, and by whom he was much esteemed; for Britton was as respectable for moral endowments, as he was curious for intellectual. The circumstances of his death are not less remarkable than those of his life. There was one Honeyman, a blacksmith, who was famous for speaking as if his voice proceeded from some distant part of the house, (a ventriloquist, or speaker from his belly, as these persons are called.) This man was secretly introduced by Robe, a Middlesex justice, who frequently played at Britton's concerts, for the sole purpose of terrifying Britton; and he succeeded in it entirely; for Honeyman, without moving his lips, or seeming to speak, announced, as from afar off, the death of poor Britton within a few hours; with an intimation, that the only way to avert his doom, was to fall on his knees immediately, and say the Lord's Prayer. The poor man did so; but it did not avert his doom; for, taking to his bed, he died in a few days, leaving Justice Robe to enjoy the fruits of his mirth. His death happened in September, 1714.

BRIZARD, or BRITARD, John Baptiste, a French actor, eminent in comedy, died in 1790.

BRIZIO, Francisco, a landscape painter, of eminence, of Bologna, died in 1623.

BROCARDUS, James, a wild visionary of Venice, embraced protestantism, and violently attacked popery.

BROCK, John, a useful minister, in Reading, Massachusetts, died in 1688.

BROCKLESBY, Dr. Richard, an eminent English physician and medical writer, died at a very advanced age, December 12, 1797, beloved and regretted by the most distinguished characters, in rank and science.

BRODEAU, John, born at Tours, in 1500, rose to great eminence as a scholar.

BRODEAU, Julian, a native of Tours, wrote a life of Charles du Moulin, and died in 1543.

BROECKHUYSE, or BROUKHUSIUS, John. Vid. BROUKHUSIUS.

BROEK, Elias Vandeen, a native of Antwerp, distinguished for the masterly manner in which he introduced reptiles, &c., into his pictures of flowers and landscapes, died in 1711.

BROGLIO, Victor Maurice, count de, marshal of France, distinguished himself in the service of Lewis XIV.

BROGNI, John de, a swine-herd, born at Brogni, in Savoy; he was raised, by Pope Clement VII., to the dignity of cardinal, and was distinguished for his learning, virtues, and piety; he died in 1426.

BROKESBY, Francis, rector of Rowley, in Yorkshire, author of "A Life of Jesus Christ," and a principal assistant to Mr. Nelson in compiling his "Feasts and Fasts of the Church of England." He was also author of "A History of the Government of the Primitive Church," &c., and died in 1718.

BROME, Adam de, a favourite of Edward II., the founder of Oriol College, Oxford, died in 1332.

BROME, Alexander de, born in 1620, and died in 1666. He was a warm cavalier, and author of innumerable odes, sonnets and little pieces, in which the round-heads are treated with great keenness and severity. These with his epistles and epigrams, were all printed in one volume 8vo. after the restoration. He published also a version of Horace, by himself and others; with a comedy, called "The Cunning Lovers," 1651; and the world is indebted to him for two volumes of the plays of BROME, Richard, who lived also in the reign of Charles I., and was cotemporary with Decker, Ford, Shirley, &c. His extraction was mean, for he was originally no better than a menial servant to Ben Johnson; he wrote himself however into high repute. His genius was entirely turned to comedy, and we have 15 of his productions in this way remaining. One of these "The Jovial Crew," has with a little alteration, been revived, and exhibited with great and repeated success. He died in 1652.

BROMFIELD, Edward, an eminent merchant, of Boston, distinguished for his piety; he died in 1756.

BROMFIELD, Edward, a young man of uncommon mechanical genius, of Boston, died in 1746.

BROMPTON, John, a monk in the reign of Edward III. The Chronicon, which passes under his name, is probably the work of some unknown author.

BRONCHORST, John Van, a painter, of Flanders, in the 17th century.

BRONCHORST, John, a painter, born at Leyden, excelled at painting animals and birds in water colours, died in 1661.

BRONCHORST, Peter, a native of Delft, eminent as a painter, died in 1661.

BRONGNIART, Augustus Lewis, an eminent chymist, died at Paris, in 1804.

BRONKHUSINS, or BROEKHUIZEN, John, a learned Dutchman, died in 1797.

BRONSSON, Claude, an elegant advocate, and warm supporter of the protestants in France in the reign of Lewis XIV.

BRONZINO, Agnolo, a painter at Florence, died in 1580.

BROOK, Ralph, York Herald, known for the errors which he discovered in Camden's Britannia, died in 1625.

BROOKE, Sir Robert, an eminent judge in the reign of Mary, born at Claverley, in Shropshire, died in 1558.

BROOKE, Sir Robert, one of the most eminent lawyers of his time, and lord chief justice of the common pleas, wrote "An Abridgment, containing an Abstract of the Year Books till the time of Queen Mary," "Cases adjudged from the 6th of Henry VIII. to the 4th of Queen Mary," and "Readings on the Statute of Limitations, made 32d of Henry VIII. c. 2." Sir Robert died in 1558.

BROOKE, Henry, who gained great reputation as a writer, by the "Farmers Letters," published in Ireland, during the rebellion, in imitation of Swift's "Drapier's Letters." He was also author of "The Fool of Quality," a novel of more than ordinary merit. His dramatic works, of which the most celebrated are, "Gustavus Vasa," and "The Earl of Essex," were collected, with his other writings, in 4 vols. 8vo. 1778. He died October 10, 1783.

BROOKE, Mrs. Frances, a lady as remarkable for her virtues, as for her great literary accomplishments. Her principal works are, "Julia Mandeville," and "Emily Montague," novels; the "Old Maid," a series of periodical papers; "Virginia," and "The Siege of Sinope," tragedies; "Rosina," and "Marian," musical dramas, and several much esteemed translations from the French. She died January 23, 1789.

BROOME, William, born in Cheshire, as is said, of very mean parents. He was educated upon the foundation at Eton, and appeared early in the world as a translator of the Iliad into prose, in conjunction with Ozell and Oldisworth. He was afterwards introduced to Mr. Pope, and gained so much of his esteem, that he was employed to make extracts from Eustachius, for the notes to the translation of the Iliad; and in the volumes of poetry published by Lintot, commonly called "Pope's Miscellanies," many of his early pieces were inserted. When the success of the Iliad gave encouragement to a version of the Odyssey, Pope, weary of the toil, called Fenton and Broome to his assistance; and taking only half the work upon himself, divided the other half between his partners, giving four books to Fenton, and eight to Broome. To the lot of Broome fell the 2d, 6th, 8th, 11th, 12th, 16th, 18th and 23d; together with the burden of writing all the notes. The price at which Pope purchased this assistance was 300*l.* paid to Fenton, and 500*l.* to Broome, with as many copies as he wanted for his friends, which amounted to 100*l.* more. Broome died at Bath, November 16, 1745.

BROOKS, John, L.L.D., governor of Mass. was distinguished as the early friend of the American revolution, as a brave, active, and judicious officer of the American army; as an able and sound statesman, and a true patriot. The friend of Washington, he enjoyed the confidence and respect of his fellow-citizens, and died, lamented by his country, in 1825.

BROOKS, Eleazer, a brigadier in the revolutionary war, and was in the battle of White Plains in 1776, &c.; he died in 1806.

BROSHI, Carlo, a celebrated Italian singer died in 1782.

BROSSARD, Sebastian de, a canon of Meux; he excelled as a musician, and died in 1730.

BROSSE, Guy de la, a physician, author of a treatise on the virtues of plants, founded a garden of medicinal plants at Paris, in 1626.

BROSSES, Charles de, president of the parliament of Burgundy, who wrote letters on the discovery of Herculeanum, &c., died in 1776.

BROSSETTE, Claude, born at Lyons, 1671, published the works of Boileau and of Regnier with historical illustrations; wrote "L'Histoire abrégée de la Ville de Lyons," with elegance and precision, and died there in 1746.

BROSSIER, Martha, a very remarkable woman, who pretended to be possessed by the devil, and had nearly occasioned great disorders in France toward the latter end of the 16th century.

BROTIER, L'Abbé, an illustrious and amiable Frenchman, and one of the most distinguished ornaments of the belles lettres in that country, born at Tanay, 1722, died 1789.

BROUE, Peter de la, a native of Toulouse, friend of Bossuet, died in 1720.

BROUGHTON, Hugh, a very learned divine, born in Oldbury, Salop, 1549, died 1612, leaving a very laborious work behind him, called "The Consent of Scriptures," which he dedicated to queen Elizabeth.

BROUGHTON, Thomas, a learned divine, author of the "Bibliotheca Historica Sacra," 2 vols. folio, 1739, and one of the original writers of the "Biographia Britannica," (in the first edition of which work his papers were marked T.) was born at London, July 5, 1704, in the parish of St. Andrew, Holborn, of which his father was minister, and died vicar of Bedminster, near Bristol, 1774.

BROUGHTON, Thomas, a counsellor and lieutenant-governor of South Carolina while a British colony, died in 1737.

BROUNCKER, William, viscount, a native of Castle Lyon, in Ireland, born 1620, died 1684, having distinguished himself chiefly as a mathematician by his "Series for the Quadrature of the Hyperbola."

BROUWER, Adrian, a celebrated Dutch painter, born at Harlem, in 1608. Frans Hals took him from begging in the streets, and instructed him in the rudiments of painting. Humour was his proper sphere; and in little pieces he used to represent his pot companions drinking, smoking tobacco, gaming, fighting, &c. He did this with a pencil so tender and free, so much of nature in his expression, such excellent drawing in all the particular parts, and good keeping in the whole together, that none of his countrymen have ever been comparable to him on that subject. He scorned, however, to work as long as he had any money in his pocket; declared for a short life, and a merry one; and, resolving to ride post to his grave, by the help of wine and brandy, he got to his journey's end, in 1638, at only 30 years of age. He died so very poor, that contributions were raised to lay him privately in the ground; from whence he was soon after taken up, and, as it is commonly said, very handsomely interred by Rubens, who was a great admirer of his happy genius for painting.

BROWN, Robert, a famous schismatic, from whom the sect of the Brownists derived its name. He died 1630. This sect equally condemned episcopacy and presbytery, as to the jurisdiction of consistories, classes, and synods; and would not join with any other reformed church, because they were not sufficiently assured of the sanctity and probity of its members, holding it an impiety to communicate with sinners. Their form of church government was deuterocretical. Such as desired to be members of their church made a confession of their faith, and signed a covenant obliging themselves to walk together in the order of the gospel.

BROWN, Thomas, of facetious memory; but whose wit, being greater than his prudence, brought him frequently within danger of starving. Toward the latter end of Brown's life, however, we are informed by Mr. Jacob, that he was in favour with the earl of Dorset, who invited him to dinner on a Christmas-day, with Dryden, and other gentlemen celebrated for ingenuity; when Brown, to his agreeable surprise, found a bank note of 50*l.* under his plate. and Dryden, at the same time, was presented with another of 100*l.* Brown was born in Shropshire, died in London, 1704, and was interred in the Cloister of Westminster Abbey, near the remains of Mrs. Behn, with whom he was intimate in his life time. His whole works were printed in 1707; consisting of "Dialogues, Essays, Declamations, Satires, Letters from the Dead to the Living, Translations, Amusements, &c." in 4 vols. Much humour, and not a little learning are scattered every where throughout them; but those who think they want delicacy, have certainly abundant reason on their side.

BROWN, John, an ingenious English writer, born at Rothbury, in Northumberland, 1715. Having taken orders, and made himself eminent by many excellent sermons, he fell under the notice of Dr. Osbaldiston, who, when raised to the see of Carlisle, made him one of his chaplains. It was probably about this time that he wrote his poem entitled "Honour," to show that true honour can only be founded in virtue; it was inscribed to lord Lonsdale. His next poetical production, though not immediately published, was his "Essay on Satire," in three parts; it was addressed to Dr. Warburton, who prefixed it to the second volume of Pope's Works by Warburton; with which it still continues to be printed: as well as in Dodsley's Collection. Brown now began to figure as a writer; and, in 1751, published his "Essays on Shaftsbury's Characteristics; a work written with elegance and spirit, and so applauded as, in a short time, to go through five editions. His next appearance in the world was as a dramatic writer; and in 1755, his tragedy of "Barbarossa," was produced upon the stage; and afterwards his "Athelstan," in 1756. Our author had taken his doctor of divinity's degree in 1755. In 1757 came out his famous work, entitled "An Estimate of the Manners and Principles of the Times," 8vo.; famous we call it, because seven editions of it were printed in little more than a year. In 1758, he published a second volume of "The Estimate." Dr. B. put an end to his life in a fit of insanity. Sept 23, 1766, in his 51st year.

BROWN, Moses, an English divine, author of "Sunday Thoughts," "Piscatory Eclogues," &c., born 1703, died 1787.

BROWN, Lancelot; sometimes professionally distinguished by the prænomens CAPABILITY; who, by the intuitive force of his own genius, invented a new horticultural system, and carried ornamental gardening to high perfection; was born at Kirkharle in the county of Northumberland, in August, 1715. At an early period of his life he came to London, and was patronised by lord viscount Cobham, the celebrated friend and patron of Pope; and it is generally understood, that scooping out the beautiful valley opposite the temple of concord, at Stowe, was the first of his undertakings; but Richmond, Blenheim, Croome, Luton, Trentham, Redgrave, Wimbleton, Nuneham, the approach to the house through the park at Caversham, &c. will for ages stand memorials of his superior taste and abilities. He possessed a cultivated mind, and his society was courted by men most considerable for their rank or genius. Respecting the term Capability, by which Mr. Brown was frequently distinguished, we have heard, that it arose from a custom he had, when he came to a spot which he thought might be improved, of saying that the place had its capabilities. This may in part be true; but in the pre-eminence of Mr. Brown's own talents may, perhaps, be found the real grounds for the complimentary title. Mr. Brown served the office of high sheriff for the counties of Huntingdon and Cambridge, in the year 1770, and died suddenly in the streets of London, on his return from a visit to the earl of Coventry, on the 6th of February, 1783. His remains are deposited in the chancel of Fenstanton church, in the county of Huntingdon.

BROWN, John, many years professor of divinity among the burgher seceders of Scotland, was born at the village of Kerpool, in Perthshire, 1722, and died at Haddington, June 19, 1788; having published several works of high repute in the religious world; particularly, a "Self-Interpreting Bible," 2 vols. 4to.; a "Dictionary of the Bible;" and a "Body of Divinity."

BROWN, John, a very eminent English landscape-engraver, and associate of the Royal Academy, born 1741, died Oct. 2, 1801. In boldness, brilliancy, and beautiful variety, Mr. Brown came very nigh to Woollet, whom, indeed, he assisted in some of his most famous pieces.

BROWN, Dr. John, distinguished himself much in Scotland by his medical writings and opinions, and was the author of a new System of Medicine, which has lately been translated into English, in 2 vols. 8vo. It is a singular performance, discovering much originality, and containing many important observations; though in some, he may be thought to carry his peculiar opinions too far. He died Oct. 7, 1783.

BROWN, William, editor of "Reports in Chancery," and "Cases of Appeals to Parliament," 5 vols. 1760; died April 26, 1794.

BROWN, Nicholas, an eminent merchant, of Providence, R. I., died in 1791, patron of the college in that place.

BROWN, Andrew, was in the battles of Lexington and Bunker-hill; he settled in Philadelphia, and established the Federal Gazette, and died in 1797.

BROWN, Moses, a brave officer in the navy of the United States, died in 1803.

BROWN Clysses, Maximilian de, an eminent general, in the imperial armies; he was mortally wounded in the battle of Prague, in 1757.

BROWN, Francis, D. D., a native of New-Hampshire, was pastor of a congregational church, in Maine, chosen professor of languages in Dartmouth college, and afterwards president of that institution; he died in 1820.

BROWN, Charles Brockden, a native of Pennsylvania, distinguished as holding a high rank, among the American novelists, died in 1810.

BROWN, Thomas, M. D., professor of moral philosophy in the university at Edinburgh, and an eminent metaphysician, died in 1830.

BROWN, Joseph, professor of natural philosophy, in Brown university, was distinguished as a man of profound mathematical and philosophical attainments. He died in 1783.

BROWN, George, archbishop of Dublin, and the first prelate who embraced the reformation in Ireland, was originally an Austin friar, of London, and afterwards became provincial of the Austin monks, in England. After reading some of Luther's writings, he began to inculcate into the people, that they ought to make their application solely to Christ, and not to the Virgin Mary, or the saints. This recommended him to Henry VIII., who promoted him, in March 1534-5, to the archbishoprick of Dublin. He was deprived of his archbishoprick in 1554, the first of queen Mary, under pretence of his being married, but, in truth, on account of his zeal in promoting the reformation, and died about the year 1556.

BROWNE, William, an English poet, born at Tavistock, in Devonshire, died 1645.—An edition of his works, which were become extremely scarce, was published in 1772, in three small volumes; the principal article in which, is "Britannia's Pastorals."

BROWNE, Sir Thomas, an eminent writer, and physician, born in Cheapside, 1605. His most celebrated piece, called "Religio Medici," the Religion of a Physician, was published in 1635. In 1646, he wrote his "Treatise on Vulgar Errors." Wood informs us, that his practice as a physician, was very extensive, and that many patients resorted to him. In 1655, he was chosen honorary fellow of the College of Physicians, as a man "virtute et literis ornatissi-mus," eminently embellished with literature and virtue. He died on his birthday, October 19, 1682.

BROWNE, Edward, an eminent physician, son of the preceding, was born about 1642, and died in August, 1708. King Charles II., whose physician he was, said of him, that "he was as learned as any of the college, (of which he died president,) and as well bred as any at court."

BROWNE, Simon, a dissenting minister, of uncommon talents, born at Shepton Mallet, in Somersetshire, in 1680. Grounded, and excelling, in grammatical learning, he early became qualified for the ministry, and actually began to preach before he was 20. But the death of his wife and only son, which happened in 1723, affected him so as to deprive him of his reason; and he became, from that time, lost to himself, to his family, and to the world: he sunk into a settled melancholy, quitted the duties of his function, and would not be persuaded to join in any act of worship, public or private. He died in 1732.

BROWNE, Peter, bishop of Cork: in the palace of which See he died, in 1735, after having distinguished himself by some writings; the best known of which is, "The Progress, Extent, and Limits of the Human Understanding."

BROWNE, Isaac Hawkins, an ingenious English poet, born at Burton-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, Jan. 21, 1705-6. His "Pipe of Tobacco," an imitation of Cibber, Androse Phillips, Thomson, Young, Pope, and Swift, who were then all living, is well known, and is reckoned one of the most pleasing and popular of his performances. In 1754, he published what has been deemed his capital work, "De Animi Immortalitate," in two books. The universal applause and popularity of this poem, produced several English translations of it, in a very short time; the best of which is that by Soame Jenyns, esq., printed in his "Miscellanies." Another translation, by the Rev. Mr. Lettice, was published in 1795. Mr. Browne died 14th Feb. 1760.

BROWNE, Sir William, a physician, (and some time president of the college,) distinguished by many lively essays, both in prose and verse, in Latin and in English, died March 10, 1774. The active part taken by Sir William Browne, in the contest with the licentiates, occasioned his being introduced by Mr. Foote in his "Devil upon Two Sticks." Upon Foote's exact representation of him with his identical wig and coat, tall figure, and glass stiffly applied to his eye, he sent him a card, complimenting Foote on having so happily represented him; but, as he had forgot his muff, he had sent him his own. This good-natured method of resenting, effectually disarmed the mimic.

BROWNE, John, a painter, of very considerable estimation in Scotland, died Sept. 12, 1787. Mr. Browne was author of "An Essay on the Music of the Opera."

BROWNE, Arthur, episcopal minister at Portsmouth, N. H., died in 1773.

BROWNE, Arthur, born in Newport, R. I., educated in Ireland, made professor of Greek in Trinity college, Dublin, 1805.

BROWNE, Sir Anthony, born in Essex, made sergeant at law, in Mary's reign, a violent papist; he favoured the succession of Mary, queen of Scots.

BROWNE, Edward, an English divine, 1690.

BROWNE, Patrick, a native of Ireland, took his degree of M. D., at Leyden; resided some years in the West Indies, and published a history of Jamaica, &c., in 1736.

BROWNWRIG, Ralph, was nominated bishop of Exeter, in 1641. He once boldly advised Cromwell to restore Charles II. to his throne.

BRUCE, Robert, a celebrated Scotch general, who was elected king, in 1306, and was considered as the deliverer of his country, at that time in subjection to Edward I., of England, and labouring under many oppressions. In 1314, Robert defeated the English army, and gained the famous battle of Bannock's Burn; the English forces, according to the Scotch historians, consisted of 200,000 men, commanded by Edward II., and Bruce had but 30,000. Of the English, 50,000 were slain, and 30,000 taken prisoners. In the reign of Edward III., he made reprisals in England; and surprised that monarch in his tent, who narrowly escaped being taken prisoner; and obliged him, in 1328, to sign a treaty of peace, in which he renounced all right and title to Scotland, for himself and his heirs. Bruce died in 1329.

BRUCE, Michael, an elegant Scotch poet, born at Kinnesswood, 1746, died 1767, leaving behind him many beautiful poems, which were published, with others, in a volume, at Edinburgh, 1770.

BRUCE, James, of Kinnaird, near Falkirk, in Scotland, a celebrated traveller into Abyssinia; who, after having encountered innumerable perils in distant regions, in search of the source of the river Nile, met an untimely death by a fall down a staircase, at his seat, at Kinnaird, April, 1794. The account of his travels, which occupied a space of near 6 years, from 1768 to 1773, was published in five vols. 4to, 1790, and abounds with events so extraordinary, and presents instances of perseverance and intrepidity, so wonderful, that were it the production of a man whose character was less disputable, it would appear to be the fabrication of a romantic brain. From the discoveries of Mr. Bruce, however, geography has received material improvements; and, that natural history has acquired new and valuable information, is attested by the celebrated French naturalist, the count de Buffon, in an advertisement prefixed to the 3d volume of his History of Birds.

BRUCIOLI, Anthony, a native of Florence, banished for opposing the house of Medici; he translated the Bible into Italian, in 1532.

BRUCKER, John James, author of Historia Critica Philosophiæ, &c.; member of the academy of sciences, at Berlin, died in 1770.

BRUERE, Charles de la, a French writer, possessed wit and genius, died in 1754.

BRUEYS, David Augustin, a French writer, of singular history and character, was born at Aix, in 1650, and trained in Calvinism and controversy; but his airy spirit not rightly accommodating itself to serious works, he quitted theology for the theatre. He died at Montpellier, in 1733, and all his dramatic pieces were collected, 1735, in three vols. 12mo.

BRUGES, John of, See VANEYCK.

BRUGIANTINO, Vincent, an Italian poet of inferior merit, in the 16th century.

BRUGUIERES, John William, a botanist and mineralogist, a native of Montpellier, died in 1799.

BRUZEN, de la Martinic, Anthony Augustine, educated at Paris, under the famous Richard Simon, his uncle, and died in 1749.

BRY, Theodore de, a painter and engraver, died at Frankfort, on the Maine, in 1598.

BRYAN, Francis, or Briant, an Englishman, accompanied lord Surrey, the English admiral, against France, in 1522, and was knighted for his bravery.

BRYAN, George, a native of Ireland, emigrated to Pennsylvania; delegate to congress in 1765; and afterwards governor of Pennsylvania; he died in 1791.

BRYANT, Jacob, a learned writer on ancient history and mythology, was born at Plymouth, 1715, and educated at Eton; whence he proceeded to King's College, Cambridge. He devoted his whole life to learned research; and the constant result of his labours was, to settle him firmly in a conviction of the truth of the Christian faith. Though belonging to the lay part of the community, his efforts in the cause of religion, were as unceasing as they were satisfactory. His studies were chiefly directed to one object, the development and establishment of universal truth; which he knew could only be effected by removing the doubts of the sceptic, and softening the heart of the infidel. To this end he bent all his learning and powers. His first avowed publication, was a quarto volume, which appeared in 1767, entitled "Observations and Inquiries relating to various parts of Ancient History, &c., with an account of Egypt, in its most early state, and of the Shepherd Kings." The next was his immortal work, in 3 vols. 4to, 1774, 1776, called "A New System, or an Analysis of Ancient Mythology; wherein an attempt is made to divest Tradition of Fable, and to reduce Truth to its original Purity." He also published "A Treatise on the Authenticity of the Scriptures, and the Truth of the Christian Religion," 8vo, 1792. One of the latest of his numerous works, was "A Dissertation concerning the War of Troy, and the expedition of the Grecians, as described by Homer; professing to show that no such expedition was ever undertaken, and that no such city in Phrygia existed," 4to, 1796. Mr. Bryant died of a mortification in his leg, occasioned by a razor against a chair, in reaching a book from a shelf, in his 89th year, at Cypenham, near Windsor, Nov. 14, 1804.

BRYPHAN, one of the Irish kings, father of one of the three holy families of Britain, died in 450.

BRYDONE, Patrick, author of a "Tour through Sicily and Malta," and of some papers in the Philosophical Transactions, died in Berwickshire, June 19, 1818.

BRYENNUS, Nicophorus, the husband of Anna Comena, refused the throne of Constantinople, and died in 1137.

BUC, George, a learned English antiquary. In the reign of James I, he was appointed master of the revels; on which art he wrote a treatise. He was the first vindicator of Richard III., and published "The Great Plantagenet," a historical poem, in 1635.

BUCER, Martin, born in 1491, at Schelstadt, a town of Alsace. He is looked upon as one of the first authors of the reformation at Strasburgh, where he taught divinity for twenty years, and was one of the ministers of the town. In 1548, Craumer, archbishop of Canterbury, gave him an invitation to come over to England, which he readily accepted. In 1549, a handsome apartment was assigned him in the university of Cambridge, and a salary to teach theology. He died in 1551, and was buried at Cambridge.

BUCHAN, Elspeth, or Elizabeth, a modern fanatic, her followers were called Buchanites; they travelled through several parts of Scotland; their doctrines were extremely fascinating to the vulgar. Mrs. Buchan died in 1791.

BUCHAN, Dr. William, an eminent physician, and medical writer, born at the village of Ankrum, in Roxburghshire, 1729, was educated at the grammar-school of Jedburgh, and afterwards matriculated at the university of Edinburgh, with a view to the clerical profession; but he preferred that of physic, which he pursued through life. In 1771, appeared his well-known work, entitled "Domestic Medicine," which has had a degree of success not equalled, perhaps, by any other book in the English language, having passed through above twenty editions, (of we believe 5000 or 6000 each,) and been translated into every European language. It drew upon him, however, the dislike and persecution of the less liberal part of the faculty; but when it is considered, that the intention of its publication was not to supersede the use of a physician, but to supply his place in situations where medical assistance could not be easily obtained, and to render the medical art more extensively beneficial to mankind, the jealousies and fears of the faculty were surely unbecoming the professors of a liberal science. Dr. Buchan published several other medical works, and died in Percy-street, Oxford-road, Feb. 25, 1805.

BUCHANAN, Claudius, D. D., of Queen's College, Cambridge, M. A., 1796. In Scriptural erudition, he had very few superiors. Deeply versed in the Oriental languages, he conceived that he should best promote the honour of God, and the happiness of mankind, by enabling "every man to read the Holy Scriptures" in his own tongue. He died at Broxbourne, Herts, Feb. 9, 1815, while employed in superintending an edition of the Scriptures for the use of the Syrian Christians.

BUCHANAN, George, an eminent poet and historian, born near Kellorne, in the shire of Lenox, in Scotland, in 1506. He was tutor to James I., of England, and employed the last 12 or 13 years of his life in writing the history of his country; in which he happily united the force and brevity of Sallust, with the perspicuity and elegance of Livy. He died at Edinburgh, Sept. 28, 1582. Sir James Melvil, who was of the opposite party to him, and therefore cannot be supposed to be partial in his favour, tells us, that Buchanan "was a stoic philosopher, who looked not far before him; a man of notable endowments for his learning and knowledge in Latin poetry; much honoured in other countries, pleasant in conversation, rehearsing at all occasions, moralities, short and instructive, whereof he had abundance, inventing where he wanted." Dr. Burnet, in his "History of the Reformation," says of him, "he is justly reckoned the greatest and best of our modern writers."

BUCHNER, Augustus, professor of poetry and eloquence, at Wittenberg, died in 1661.

BUCHOLTZER, Abraham, pastor at Friedtadt, author of a valuable work entitled "Index Chronologicus Utriusque Testamenti." He died in 1584.

BUCCQUET, John Michael Baptist, a physician, of Paris, died in 1780, a victim to excessive application.

BUDAËUS, William, a critic and commentator on Greek and Latin authors, born at Paris, 1467, died 1540. Erasmus called him "Portentum Gallie;" The Prodigy of France.

BUDAËUS, John Francis, successively professor of Coburg Halle and Jena, eminent for clearness, judgment, and taste, died in 1729.

BUDGELL, Eustace, a very ingenious and entertaining writer, born at St. Thomas, near Exeter, 1685. He was concerned with Steele and Addison in writing the Tattler. The Spectator being set on foot in 1710-11, Mr. Budgell had likewise a share with them, all the papers marked with an X. being written by him; as was indeed the whole 8th volume by Addison and himself, without the assistance of Steele. Upon the laying down of the Spectator, the Guardian was set up; and in this work our author had a hand along with Addison and Steele. In the preface, it is said, that those papers marked with an asterisk were written by Mr. Budgell. In the latter part of his life, after having served the office of under-secretary of state, and held other high situations in the government of Ireland, he returned to England, where he became involved in law-suits, which reduced him to a very unhappy situation. On the 4th of May, 1737, he took a boat at Somerset stairs, after filling his pockets with stones, and ordered the waterman to shoot London bridge; but while the boat was going under, he threw himself into the river, where he perished immediately. Upon his bureau was found a slip of paper, on which were written these words:

"What Cato did, and Addison approv'd,
"Cannot be wrong."

BUELL, Samuel, D. D., a presbyterian minister on Long Island, much distinguished for his piety, died in 1798.

of New-London, Connecticut, afterwards of Weathersfield, died in 1713, distinguished for his knowledge of chymistry and languages.

BULKLEY, John, first minister of Colchester, Connecticut, died in 1731: classed by Dr.
Chauncy among the three most eminent for strength of genius, whom New-England had produced.

BULL, John, a celebrated musician, born in Somersetshire, 1563. He was greatly admired for his fine hand upon the organ, as well as for his compositions. Upon the establishment of Gresham College, he was chosen the first professor of music there; and, not being able to speak Latin, was permitted to deliver his lectures in English. It is uncertain where or when he died; but there is a picture of him yet remaining in the music-school at Oxford.

BULL, George, bishop of St. David's, a very eminent writer and preacher, born at Wells, Somersetshire, March 25, 1634, died February 17, 1709.

in historical pieces, died in 1727. His brother Jacob was eminent in the representation of sea battles.

BUNON, Robert, an eminent dentist at Paris, died in 1748.

BUNYAN, John, author of the justly admired allegory of the "Pilgrim's Progress," was born at Elstow, near Bedford, 1623. His parents, though very mean, took care to give him that learning which was suitable to their condition, bringing him up to read and write: he quickly forgot both, abandoning himself to all manner of wickedness; but not without frequent checks of conscience. One day, being at play with his companions, (the writer of his life tells us), a voice suddenly darted from heaven into his soul, saying, "Wilt thou leave thy sins and go to heaven, or have thy sins and go to hell?" This put him into such a consternation, that he immediately left his sport, and looking to heaven, thought he saw the Lord Jesus, looking down upon him, as one highly displeased with him, and threatening him with some grievous punishment for his ungodly practices. At another time, while he was belching out oaths, he was severely reproved by a woman, who was herself a notorious sinner. This coming from a woman whom he knew to be very wicked, filled him with secret shame, and made him from that time very much refrain from it. His father brought him up to his own business, which was that of a tinker. Being a soldier in the parliament army, at the siege of Leicester, in 1645, he was drawn out to stand sentinel; but an other soldier of his company desired to take his place, to which he agreed, and thereby escaped being shot by a musket ball, which took off his comrade. About 1653 he was admitted a member of a Baptist congregation at Bedford, and soon after chosen their preacher. In 1660, being convicted at the session of holding unlawful as-semblies and conventicles, he was sentenced to perpetual banishment, and in the mean time committed to gaol, from which he was discharged, after a confinement of 12 years and a half, by the compassionate interposition of Dr.
Barlow, bishop of Lincoln. During his imprisonment he wrote many of his tracts. Afterwards, being at liberty, he travelled into several parts of England, to visit and confirm the brethren, which procured him the epithet of bishop Bunyan. When the declaration of James II. for liberty of conscience was published, he, by the contribution of his followers, built a meeting-house in Bedford, and preached constantly to a numerous audience. He died in London, of a fever, 1688.

BUOMMATEI, Benedict, an ecclesiastic of Florence, known for his work on the Tuscan language, died in 1647.

BUONACORSI, Philip, called himself Cal-limaco Esperiente, he was suspected of forming a conspiracy against Paul II., and settled in Pol-land. He wrote a life of Attila, &c. and died in 1496.

BUONAMICI, Castrucio, a native of Lucca, at first devoted himself to the clerical profession, but afterwards turned his attention to arms, which he bore in the service of the king of Naples. He published several valuable works, and died in 1761.

BUONAPARTE, Napoleon, emperor of France, was born at Ajaccio, in the island of Corsica, in 1769, and educated at the military schools of Brienne and Paris. He commenced his military career as a lieutenant of artillery, and soon afterwards so distinguished himself at the siege of Toulon, and during the civil contentions at Paris, that he was promoted to the command of the army of Italy; with which he fought a series of battles, and gained a succession of victories over the oldest and ablest generals of Europe, which astonished the world, and compelled his enemies to peace. He was for a time equally successful in Egypt, but being repulsed at the siege of Acre, by Sir Sidney Smith, he returned to France, and, in 1799, was appointed first consul of the republic. During his consulship, he commanded in the campaign of Italy, and gained the glorious battle of Marengo. In 1804, he was crowned emperor, by the Roman pontiff. From this time his usual success attended him, and almost all Europe was at his control, until 1812, when he invaded Russia with an army of 400,000 men. The destruction of Moscow, and the severity of the climate, utterly ruined his army and compelled him to retreat; he attempted boldly to retrieve his misfortunes, but losing the memorable battle of Leipzig, he was driven to France, and compelled to abdicate the throne for the sovereignty of Elba. In less than a year he returned to France, and resumed his imperial authority, without resistance, his old army joining him with acclamations. In June following, hostilities again commenced between him and the allies; he lost the battle of Waterloo, and terminated his political career. He afterwards retired on board a British ship, and was exiled to St. Helena, where he was kept a prisoner until his death, in 1821.

BUONAROTTI, see MICHAEL ANGELO.

BUONDELMONTE, a young Florentine, in the beginning of the 13th century, who promised to marry a daughter of the family of the Amidei, but espoused the more beautiful daughter of the Donati. By the intrigues of the slighted fair and her relations, he was murdered. This murder set the city in commotion, the quarrel became general among the nobility, and the animosity lasted many centuries.

BUONFIGLIO, Joseph Constaot, a Neapolitan, author of the modern history of Sicily and Venice, and the history of Messina. 1606.

BUONTALENTI, Bernardo, surnamed Girondile, distinguished for his knowledge of architecture, sculpture, &c., also, for his miniatures and historical pieces; he died in 1608.

BURIGNY, Levesque de, a native of Rheims, wrote a treatise on the authority of the popes, &c.; he died in 1785.

BURKE, Edmund, a celebrated orator and statesman, born in the county of Cork, Ireland, Jan. 1, 1730. After staying the usual time at the university of Dublin, he went over to London, and entered himself as a student of the Middle Temple. He soon, however, commenced political writing; and, so masterly were his style and arguments, that his first productions (published anonymously) were universally attributed to lord Bolingbroke. His "Philosophical Inquiry into the Origin of our Ideas on the Sublime and Beautiful" soon made him known to the literati; and he thereupon became a public man. In 1765, Mr. Burke came into parliament, and immediately joined to the character of a most elegant writer, that of a most eloquent speaker; he died July 8, 1797.

BURKITT, William, born at Hitcham, in Northamptonshire, 1650, died 1703. He was a pious and charitable man, who wrote several books, and among the rest, a "Commentary upon the New-Testament," in the same plain, practical, and affecting manner in which he preached.

BURLAMAQUI, John James, an illustrious civilian, born at Geneva, in 1691, was afterwards professor of civil law there. In his "Principles of Natural Law," written in French, he is supposed to have incorporated all the best things from Grotius, Puffendorf, and their commentator, Barbeyrac. He published, some time after, the "Principles of Political Law," which was written in the same language, and equally well received. He died in 1748.

BURMAN, Francis, of Leyden, professor of theology, at Utrecht, wrote commentaries on the Pentateuch, &c., died in 1679.

BURMAN, Francis, son of the preceding, was also professor at Utrecht, and wrote on the persecution of Dioclesian; he died in 1719.

BURMAN, Peter, professor of history and eloquence, in the university of Leyden, and editor of the Latin classics, of which, he published Virgil, Ovid, Petronius, Quintilian, Suetonius, Justin, Velleius, Phaedrus, &c., and died in 1740.

BURMAN, John, of the same family, professor of Botany and medicine at Amsterdam, published some works, about 1739.

BURN, Dr. Richard, vicar of Orton, in Westmoreland, born at Winton, in that county, died Nov. 20, 1785. He was author of two celebrated books, one on the "Office of a Justice of Peace," the other on "Ecclesiastical Law;" both of which have gone through several editions.

BURN, John, son of the preceding, edited his father's works with additions, died in 1802.

BURNABY, Andrew, D. D., an English divine, vicar of Greenwich, and arch-deacon of Leicester. He published his travels in North America, sermons, &c., and died in 1812.

BURNET, Gilbert, bishop of Salisbury, born at Edinburgh, in 1643. He was a very zealous promoter of the revolution which finally placed the present family on the English throne. As a writer, he is distinguished by his "History of the Reformation," published between 1679 and 1681, and for which he had the thanks of both houses of parliament. In 1693, he published his "Exposition of the 39 articles of the Church of England;" and after his death, which happened in March, 1714-5, his "History of his Own Times, with his Life annexed," was published by his son, Thomas Burnet, esq., afterwards Sir Thomas.

BURNET, Elizabeth, third wife of bishop Burnet, published a method of devotion, a book of merit, and died in 1709.

BURNET, William, son of the celebrated bishop Burnet, appointed governor of New York and New Jersey, in 1720; of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, in 1728, and died 1729.

BURNET, Dr. Thomas, a Scotch physician, author of Thesaurus Medicinæ Practicæ, and other medical works.

BURNETT, Dr. Thomas, a most ingenious and learned writer, born at Croft, Yorkshire, 1635. His most celebrated work, "The Sacred Theory of the Earth," was originally published in Latin, in 2 vols. 4to; the first two books, "concerning the Deluge and Paradise," in 1681; the two last, "concerning the burning of the world, and the New Heavens and New Earth," in 1689. The uncommon approbation which this work met with, and the particular encouragement of Charles II., who was exceedingly taken with it, put the author upon translating it into English.

It would be endless to transcribe all the high encomiums that have been passed on this work by various eminent authors. He died in 1715.

BURNEY, Dr. Charles, an eminent musician and general scholar, born at Shrewsbury, April 7, 1726, died at Chelsea College, of which he was organist, April 12, 1814, in his 88th year. His "General History of Music," 4 vols. 4to; his "Present State of Music in France, Italy, the Netherlands, Holland, and Germany;" and "Account of the Musical performances in commemoration of Handel," are valuable additions to British literature, from the knowledge which they impart, and the elegance with which they are written. He also wrote the "Life of Metastasio;" a work highly estimable for its candour, information, judgment, and taste.

BURNEY, Dr. Charles, son of the foregoing, was born at Lynn, Norfolk, Dec. 6, 1757, and bred at the Charter House, and Caius College, Cambridge. He greatly distinguished himself by the depth of his literary researches, and by his extraordinary skill in the Greek language. He obtained great eminence as the master of classical academies, successively at Hammer-smith and Greenwich, was D. D., L. L. D., and F. R. S., rector of St. Paul, Deptford, and of Cliffe, both in the county of Kent, and died Dec. 23, 1817.

BURNS, Robert, a native of Scotland, who, in the humble employment of a ploughman, discovered a most extraordinary genius for poetical composition. Dissatisfied with his low station, he was about to emigrate to Jamaica, to seek a better fortune; and, with a view to procure money for his passage, a coarse edition of his poems were published at Edinburgh. They were soon noticed by the gentlemen in that city; and some extracts, with an account of the author, were given in "The Lounger," a periodical paper then in the course of publication. Subscriptions were then set on foot for a new edition of his works, and Burns was made an exciseman, with an income of about 50l. a year. This pupil of nature, however, this poet of inspiration, possessed in the same degree, the powers and the failings of genius. His talents were often obscured, and his constitution was at length impaired, by excess. His manners not being capable of melioration, and his propensity to intemperance being ungovernable, the attentions paid to him were not lasting; and he sunk under poverty and distress, leaving a widow pregnant, and five infant children. He died July 21, 1796, in the prime of life.

BURRIUS, Afranius, a Roman commander, under Claudius and Nero.

BURR, Peter, a judge, and afterwards chief justice of the supreme court of the state of Connecticut, in 1711.

BURR, Jonathan, a native of England, came to America, in 1639, and was settled in the ministry at Dorchester; he died in 1641.

BURR, Aaron, pastor of the presbyterian church at Newark, N. J., in 1742; elected president of Princeton College in 1748, died in 1757. He was distinguished for his learning, &c., and published occasional discourses, &c.

BURRILL, John, speaker of the house of representatives of Mass., and member of the council, died in 1721.

BURRILL, James, a native of Providence, and a distinguished lawyer of that place, was attorney general, and judge of the supreme court of Rhode Island, and at the time of his death, in 1820, a senator in congress.

BURRINGTON, George, proprietary governor of North Carolina, was dismissed from the office for his vices, and afterwards murdered in England, about 1734.

BURROUGH, Edward, a native of Westmoreland, obtained from Charles II. the suspension of the persecution against the quakers in New-England.

BURROUGHS, Jeremiah, a nonconformist, became preacher of Stepney and Cripple-gate churches, and died in 1646.

BURROUGHS, George, a minister of Salem, Mass., one of the victims of the witchcraft delusion, in 1692.

BURROW, Sir James, master of the crown-office, and some time president of the Royal Society, published four volumes of "Reports," and a volume of "Decisions of the Court of King's Bench upon Settlement cases, from 1732 to 1772, (to which was subjoined "An Essay on Punctuation,") and died Nov. 5, 1782.

BURT, John, minister of Bristol, R. I., ordained in 1741, died 1775, a sound divine.

BURTON, Henry, an ecclesiastic, born at Birsall, in Yorkshire, made B. D. at Oxford, was clerk of the closet to prince Henry, and after his death, to Charles. His writings are all controversial, and generally full of invectives. He died in 1648.

BURTON, William, author of "A History of Leicestershire," born at Lindley, in that county, in 1575, died in 1645.

BURTON, Robert, known to the learned by the name of Democritus, junior, was brother of the preceding, and born also at Lindley, Feb. 8, 1576, died Jan. 1639-49. He was a man of general learning, a great philosopher, an exact mathematician, and (what makes up for the peculiarity of his character) a very curious calculator of nativities. He was extremely studious, and of a melancholy turn; yet an agreeable companion, and very humorous. "The Anatomy of melancholy," by Democritus, junior, as he calls himself, shows that these seemingly different qualities were mixed together in his composition. This book was printed first in 4to, 1621, afterwards many times in folio, to the great profit of the bookseller, who, as Mr. Wood tells us, got an estate by it. "Burton upon Melancholy," says archbishop Herring, (Letters, 1777, 12mo.) "is an author the pleasantest, the most learned, and the most full of sterling sense.—The wits of queen Anne's reign, and the beginning of George I., were (he adds) not a little beholden to him." Dr. Ferriar, in "Memoirs of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Manchester," published 1793, and in "Illustrations of Sterne," published 1799, has detected in this book the source of many of Sterne's most admired writings. See also an able critic on this subject, in the European Magazine, for Oct. and Nov. 1793.

BURTON, William, an excellent critic and antiquary, died in 1657.

BURTON, William, a physician, but better known as author of "A History of the county of York," 2 vols. folio. He was born at Ripon, in 1697, and died at York, in 1759.

BURTON, John, a learned divine, born at Wembworth, in Devonshire, 1696, died in 1771, leaving some ingenious writings, collected under the title of "Opuscula Miscellanea."

BURTON, Ezekias, bendary of Norwich, eminent for his learning and piety, died in 1681. His discourses were published by Tillotson.

BURY, Arthur, D. D. at the restoration. he obtained a prebend of Exeter, and in 1665, was made chaplain to the king.

BURY, Elizabeth, daughter of captain Lawrence, excelled in her knowledge of mathematics, and the learned languages; she died in 1720.

BURZUIE, a learned Persian philosopher and physician, in the reign of Chosroes, surnamed Nuschirvan the Just.

BUS, Cesar de, a native of Cavaillon, atoned for the irregularities of his youth, by a pious life, devoted to the reformation of the clergy. He died in 1607.

BUSBEQUIUS, or BUSEBEC, Auger Gislen, born at Commines, a town in Flanders, in 1522. In 1554, he was appointed ambassador at Constantinople, where he acquired a perfect knowledge of the state of the Ottoman empire, and the true means of attacking it with success; on which subject he composed a very judicious discourse, entitled, "De re militari contra Turcam institueda consilium." He died in Oct. 1592.

BUSBY, Richard, born at Lutton, in Lincolnshire, 1606. In 1640, he was appointed master of Westminster school; and, by his skill and diligence in this most laborious and important office, for the space of 55 years, bred up the greatest number of eminent men in church and state, that ever adorned at one time any age or nation. This great man, after a long and healthy life, the consequence of his chastity, sobriety, and temperance, died April 6, 1695, aged 89, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. He had composed several books for the use of his school, and had the reputation of being a very severe disciplinarian.

BUSCIETTO DA DALICCHIO, an eminent architect and mechanic of the 11th century.

BUSCHING, Dr. Anthony Frederick, an eminent German, author of "A New Treatise of Geography," which has been translated into several languages, and particularly into English, in 6 vols. 4to. He died at Berlin, in May, 1793, aged 69.

BUSCKIUS, Herman, a German scholar, wrote some Latin poems, and commentaries on classical authors, and died in 1534.

BUSHELL, Thomas, a native of Worcester-shire, a zealous royalist, and master of the royal mines in Wales, died in 1674.

BUSLEIDEN, Jerome, a statesman, in the service of Charles V., died in 1517.

BUSSIERE, John de, a learned Jesuit, author of a history of France, &c., died in 1678.

BUSSY, Roger Rabutin, count of, a Frenchman, memorable for wit and misfortunes, was born in Burgundy, April 3, 1618. He wrote many works, satirical, historical, and moral; but is chiefly known by his "Letters," which are much esteemed. He died in 1693.

BUTE, John, earl of, viscount, and baron Mountstuart, &c. This nobleman was, in 1763, appointed prime minister. The nation being nearly exhausted by a long and expensive, though successful, war with France, he concluded a peace, and then retired to enjoy a life of learned leisure. He was a lover and encourager of learning and learned men, especially when genius and respectable character were united in the same person. It was on this principle that he asked and obtained of his majesty a pension of 300*l.* a year for Dr. Johnson. Among many instances of his love to the arts, the earl of Bute printed, at his own expense, a botanical work, in 9 4to. vols., of plants appertaining only to England. Only 12 copies were printed; the expense of which amounted to 1000*l*. Copies were presented to the queen, to the late duchess of Portland, M. de Buffon, lady Susan Mackenzie, lady Banks, and lord Mountstuart. Those remaining were reserved for legacies, and the plates were destroyed. His lordship died March 10, 1792.

BUTLER, William, a physician, born at Ipswich. Some anecdotes are recorded of him, which exhibit him as a capricious madman; he died in 1618.

BUTLER, Charles, a native of Hampshire, author of a popular work on bees, called the feminine monarchy, &c., died in 1647.

BUTLER, Samuel, a poet of a very singular cast, born at Sirens-ham, in Worcestershire, 1612. He lived some time, (though it is not known in what capacity,) with Sir Samuel Luke, a gentleman of an ancient family in Bedfordshire, and a famous commander under Oliver Cromwell. While he resided in this gentleman's family, it is generally supposed that he planned, if he did not write, the celebrated "Hudibras;" under which character it is thought he intended to ridicule that knight. When this poem became known, it was necessarily admired: the king quoted, the courtiers studied, and the whole party of the royalists applauded it. Every eye watched for the golden shower which was to fall upon the author. But praise was his whole reward. It is reported, indeed, that the king once gave him 300 guineas; but of this temporary bounty we find no proof. He died September 25, 1680; and was buried at the private expense of a M. Longueville, of the Temple, in the church-yard of Covent Garden. About 60 years afterwards, Mr. Barber, a printer, mayor of London, and a friend to Butler's principles, bestowed on him a monument in Westminster Abbey. In the mist of obscurity passed the life of Butler, a man whose name can only perish with his language. The mode and place of his education are unknown; the events of his life are variously related; and all that can be told with certainty is, that he was poor.

BUTLER, James, duke of Ormond, a very celebrated statesman and warrior, in the reign of Charles II., to whose restoration he materially contributed. He was born in London, 1610, and died in 1688.

BUTLER, Joseph, bishop of Durham, a prelate of most distinguished piety, born at Wantage, Berks, 1692. His deep learning and comprehensive mind appear sufficiently in his writings, particularly in a work entitled, "The Analogy of Religion, natural and revealed, to the constitution and course of Nature." He died in 1752.

BUTLER, Thomas, earl of Ossory, son of the preceding, was confined in the tower eight months by Cromwell. After the restoration, he abashed Shaftsbury, by an exertion of his powers, in the vindication of his father. He died in 1680.

BUTLER, Alban, a Roman catholic, director of the English College of St. Omer's, died in 1782.

BUTLER, Richard, a brave officer during the war of the revolution, killed at the defeat of General St. Clair, in 1791.

BUTLER, Thomas, a brave officer in the revolutionary war. In 1797, he commanded in Tennessee, and brought the Indian war to a successful termination. He died in 1805.

BUTT, George, D. D., an English divine, acquired some distinction as a poet. He published a volume of sermons, and died in 1795.

BUTTS, Sir William, a physician to Henry VIII., one of the founders of the Royal College of Physicians.

BUXTON, Jedediah, a man of most extraordinary natural talents for calculation, born at Elneton, a village in Derbyshire, 1705. He was never taught to read or write; but could, by the force of memory, solve in a very short time the most complicated questions respecting the multiplication, division, reduction, &c., of figures; yet, beyond mere calculation, his ideas were hardly above those of infancy. He died about 1775.

BUXTORFF, John, the name of two learned professors of Hebrew at Basil, father and son, who are allowed a place among those of the first rank for rabbinical learning. The father died in 1629, the son in 1664.

BUXTORFF, John, nephew of the preceding, succeeded him in the Oriental chair of Basil, and was esteemed for his extensive erudition. He died in 1732.

BUY DE MORNAS, Claude, born at Lyons, author of a valuable atlas of geography and his- tory, died in 1783.

BUZANVAL, Nicholas Choart de, a French prelate, relinquished the profession of law for the church, and died in 1679.

BUZOT, Francis Nicholas Leonard, one of the heroes of the French revolution, born in 1760.

BYEFIELD, Nathaniel, a native of England, settled in Bristol, Rhode Island, and died in 1733.

BYFIELD, Nicholas, a native of Warwickshire, who wrote some voluminous tracts on divinity; he died in 1622.

BYLES, Mather, D. D., a poet and political writer of some note, minister in Boston, where he was born in 1706.

BYNÆUS, Anthony, a native of Utrecht, skilled in classical and historical learning, died in 1698.

BYNG, George, lord viscount Torrington, was born in 1663. His eminent abilities as a naval commander raised him successively to the high offices of rear admiral of England, treasurer of the navy, and first lord of the admiralty. He was father of the unfortunate admiral John Byng, who, after having given many proofs of courage, was, on a dubious sentence for neglect of duty, shot at Portsmouth, March 14, 1757. His lordship died in 1733.

BYNKERSHOEK, Cornelius Van, professor of law at Leyden, &c., author of Observations on the Roman Laws, &c., died in 1743.

BYRD, William, a native of Virginia, died about the middle of the last century. He collected a very large and valuable library.

BYRGE, Justus, an ingenious mathematician and instrument-maker in France, flourished at the end of the 16th century.

BYRNE, William, a very distinguished landscape engraver. His best performances are, The Antiquities of Great Britain, after Hearne; Views of the Lakes after Farrington; and Smith's Scenery of Italy. His chief excellence consisting in his aerial perspective, and the general effect of his chiaro-oscuro, he was more agreeably and more beneficially employed in finishing than in etching; and hence he generally worked in conjunction with his pupils; to whom his strong recommendation was, to study nature, Vivares, and the best examples of the French school. Among the pupils of Mr. Byrne, we know no one who has done more credit either to his instructor in the art, or to himself, than Mr. Landseer, engraver to his late majesty. Mr. Byrne died September 24, 1805, aged 62.

BYROM, John, a poetical writer, and inventor of a new system of short-hand, born at Kersal, near Manchester, 1691, died in 1763.

BYRON, Lord George Gordon, an English nobleman, distinguished as the greatest poet of the age in which he lived, author of "Childe Harold," "Don Juan," and other poems, died at Missolonghi, while assisting the Greeks in their glorious struggle for freedom, in April, 1824.

BYTHNER, Victorinus, a native of Poland, eminent for his knowledge of Hebrew, died in 1664.

BZOVIUS, Abraham, a learned Poland. The chief of his works is, "A Continuation of Baronius' Annals from 1198 to 1572." He died in 1637.

CA

CAB, Ben Zohair, an Arabian poet, the opponent, and afterwards the friend, of Mahomet; died in the first year of the hegra.

CABADES, or COBAD, a king of Persia, deposed, but afterwards recovered his authority, which he left to his son in 531.

CABANIS, Peter John George, a French physician, the associate of Mirabeau, and one of the council of 500 during the revolution, died in 1808.

CABASILAS, Nilus, archbishop of Thesalonica, wrote against the supremacy of the pope; he was succeeded by his nephew, Nicholas, in the 14th century.

CABASSOLE, Philip de, chancellor and chief minister of the queen of Sicily, and cardinal metropolitan of Constantinople; died in 1372.

CABASSUT, John, professor of the canon law at Avignon, died in 1685.

CABEL, Adrian Vander, of Riswick, eminent as a painter; he died in 1695.

CABESTAN, or CABSTAING, William de, a poet, murdered by the husband of his mistress, who eat his heart unknowingly, and died with grief.

CABOT, John, a Venetian, who first discovered the continent of America, in 1497.

CABOT, George, an eminent statesman, was a member of the United States' Senate from the state of Mass., and president of the Hartford Convention. He was distinguished as a man of great strength of mind, of sound and correct judgment, of unsullied honour, and the strictest integrity, and was the friend and associate of Washington.

CABOT, Vincent, author of "Les Politiques," in 4 vols., of the 14th century.

CABRAI, or CABRERA, Pedro Alvares, a Portuguese, sent, in 1500, by king Emanuel, with a fleet to the East Indies. He was driven upon the coast of Brazil, and gave the name to Santa Cruz.

CADALOUS, a bishop of Parma, made pope under the title of Honorius II., died in 1601.

CADAMOSTO, Lewis, a famous Venetian navigator, born in 1422, visited the Madeiras, the Canaries, &c.

CADMUS, king of Thebes, who brought 16 letters into Greece. The poets say that he left his country in quest of his sister Europa, and went into Bœotia, where one of his company was devoured by a dragon, which Cadmus slew, and sowed its teeth in a field, whence sprung up an army of men who destroyed one another.

CADMUS, a Milesian, author of a history of India.

CADOG, founder of some churches in Wales, in the 15th century.

CADOG, a bard of the 6th century, called the Wise.

CADOGAN, William Bromley, a respected minister of St. Giles', Reading, and St. Luke's; died in 1797.

CADWALADYR, last king of the Britons, in 660 he was conquered by the Saxons.

CADWALADYR, Cesail, a Welsh bard of some merit, in the 16th century.

CADWALLADER, —, an eminent physician of Philadelphia, and among the first who wrote on medical subjects; flourished about 1740.

CADWALLADER, John, a brigadier-general in the American army, during the revolution, died in 1786.

CADWALLON, prince of North Wales, defeated by Edwin of England, in 620.

CADWGAN, a prince of South Wales, was assassinated in 1110.

CÆCILIANUS, bishop of Carthage, was expelled from office by a council, in 311.

CÆCILIUS STATIUS, a comic poet in the age of Ennius.

CÆLIUS AURELIANUS, or, as some have called him, Lucius Cælius Arianus, an ancient physician of Sicca, a town of Numidia, in Africa. We are obliged to him for the knowledge of many dogmas which are not to be found but in his books "De celeribus et tardis Passionibus." He wrote, as he himself tells us, several other works; but they have all perished. This, however, which has escaped the ruins of time and barbarism, is highly valued as being the only monument of the Medicina Methodica which is extant. He is allowed by all to be admirable in the history and description of diseases. Le Clerc places him in the 5th century.

CÆSAR, Caius Julius, an illustrious Roman general and historian, born 98 B. C. By his valour and eloquence he acquired the highest reputation in the field and in the senate; beloved and respected by his fellow-citizens, he enjoyed successively every magisterial and military honour that the republic could bestow, consistent with its own free constitution; but, at length, having subdued Pompey, the great rival of his growing power, his boundless ambition effaced the glory of his former actions; for pursuing his favourite maxim, "that he would rather be the first man in a village, than the second in Rome," he procured himself to be chosen perpetual dictator; and, not content with this unconstitutional power, his faction had resolved to raise him to the imperial dignity, when the friends of the civil liberties of the republic rashly and basely assassinated him in the senate-house, where they should only have seized him, and brought him to a legal trial for usurpation. By this impolitic and treacherous measure, they defeated their own purpose, involving the city in consternation and terror, which produced general anarchy and paved the way to the revolution that they wanted to prevent; for, after his death, the republic, though for some time it preserved the forms of liberty, became an absolute monarchy, the constant fate of all governments, whatever freedom they might once have, when luxury and profligate manners have grown universal. The activity of Caesar's spirit was such, that, as he himself said, "he thought nothing done, while there was any thing left to do." However, amidst all his concerns, civil and military, he found time to be the author of many works; none of which have been preserved from the ravages of time, except seven books, "De Bello Gallico."

CÆSAR, Sir Julius, a learned civilian, born near Tottenham, in Middlesex, 1557, died in 1639.

CÆSARALPINUS, Andreas, an eminent philosopher and physician, born at Arezzo, 1559, died in 1603.

CAFFA, Melchior, a distinguished sculptor, who adorned the churches of Rome and Italy, died in 1687.

CAFFARELLI DU FALGA, N., a French officer of great courage; died in 1801.

CAFFIAUX, D. Joseph, a native of Valenciennes, a writer on history, music, &c.

CAFFIERI, Philip, an eminent sculptor, of Rome, died in 1755.

CAGLIARI, Paul, a most excellent painter, born at Verona, in 1532. He was styled by the Italians, Il pittor felice, "The happy painter." There is scarcely a church in Venice which has not some piece or other of his; and his picture of The Marriage at Cana, in the church of St. George, is to be distinguished from his other works, as being not only the triumph of Paul Veronese, but almost the triumph of painting itself. He died of a fever at Venice, in 1588, and had a tomb and a statue of brass erected in the church of St. Sebastian.

CAGLIOSTRO, count Alexander, a man so called, but whose real name was Joseph Balsamo, was born at Palermo, 1743. His whole life was a series of the most astonishing cheats, mummeries, and impostures; and his ingenuity in every species of fiction and deceit exceeds all that has been recorded in the annals of ancient or modern roguery. For some enormities in Rome he was committed to the castle of St. Angelo, in which he died toward the end of 1794.

CAGNACI, called Gaulassi from his deformity, an Italian painter of the 18th century.

CAGNATI, Marsilio, a physician of Verona, settled at Rome, professor of philosophy, in the age of Paul V.

CAHAGNES, James, professor of medicine at Caen, died in 1612.

CAHUSAC, Lewis de, a Frenchman, author of the tragedy of Pharamond, and some romances, died in 1759.

CAIAPHAS, the high-priest who condemned our Saviour, and afterwards committed suicide.

CAIET, Peter Victor Palma, a Frenchman, doctor of the Sorbonne, who from a Calvinist became a Catholic: he was author of a valuable chronology, and died in 1610.

CAIETAN, Constantine, a Benedictine, editor of the works of Peter Darien, died at Rome, in 1650.

CAIETAN, a cardinal, born in 1469, at Caieta, a town in the kingdom of Naples. His proper name was Thomas de Vio; but he took that of Caietan, from the place of his nativity. He gave a literal translation of the Old and New Testaments, from the originals; excepting Solomon's Song and the Prophets, which he had begun, but did not live to proceed far in; and the Revelations of St. John, which he designedly omitted; saying, that, to explain them, it was necessary for a man to be endued, not with parts and learning, but with the spirit of prophecy.

CAILLER, Nicholas Lewis de la, a French mathematician and astronomer, friend of Cassini; died in 1792.

CAIN, the eldest son of Adam, who slew his brother Abel.

CAIRO, Francisco, an eminent painter of religious subjects, born at Milan, in 1568.

CAIUS, or KAYES, Dr. John, a distinguished English physician, author of several learned works, died in 1573.

CAIUS, John, poet-laureat to Edward IV.

CAIUS, Thomas, a distinguished linguist in England, prebendary of Sarum, died in 1572.

CAIUS, a Roman saint, made bishop of Rome in 283.

CALABER, an ancient Greek poet, author of a supplement to Homer's Iliad.

CALABROIS, Matthias Preti, a painter, of Calabria, died at Malta, in 1699.

CALAMY, Edmund, a very eminent divine among the non-conformists; born at London, 1600, died 1666.

CALAMY, Benjamin, an eminent divine and excellent preacher, died vicar of St. Lawrence, Jewry, 1686. The pieces that he printed in his lifetime were, 7 sermons on several occasions. 13 others were published in one volume, after his death.

CALAMY, Edmund, an eminent divine among the non-conformists; made D. D. by the universities of Scotland. He wrote several controversial works, and died in 1732.

CALANDRUCCI, Giacintho, a painter, of Rome, died in 1707.

CALANUS, an Indian brahmin, who buried himself before Alexander, 325 B. C.

CALAS, John, an unfortunate merchant, of Toulouse, unjustly condemned, on the charge of murdering his own son, in 1762.

CALASIO, Marius, a Franciscan, at Rome: author of a valuable concordance of the Hebrew Bible, published in 1621.

CALCAGNINI, Celio, a native of Ferrara, and a distinguished scholar, died in 1540.

CALCAR, John de, an eminent painter, at Naples, died in 1546.

CALDERINI, Domizio, born at Toris, professor of belles lettres, and translator of Pausanias into Latin: he died in 1478.

CALDERONI DE LA BARCA, Don Pedro a celebrated Spanish officer, ecclesiastic, and dramatic writer. In the latter character, he may, perhaps, deserve the name of the Spanish Shakspeare. He flourished about 1640, and his dramatic works make 9 vols. 4to.

CALDERWOOD, David, a famous divine of the church of Scotland, and a distinguished writer in behalf of the presbyterians, in the 17th century. He wrote "The True History of Scotland."

CALDWALL, Richard, an eminent English physician, died in 1585.

CALLAVIRI, Luca, an Italian painter, who excelled in sea views, landscapes, &c.; died in 1715.

CALIGULA, the Roman emperor and tyrant, began his reign A. D. 37, with every appearance of becoming the real, not the titular, father of his people; but at the end of eight months he was seized with a fever, which, it is supposed, left a frenzy upon his mind, for his disposition totally changed, and he committed the most atrocious acts of impiety, cruelty, and folly; such as proclaiming his horse consul, feeding it at his table, introducing it to the temple in the vestments of the priests of Jupiter, and causing sacrifices to be offered to himself, his wife, and his horse. After having murdered many of his subjects with his own hands, and caused others to be put to death without any offence, he was assassinated by a tribune of the people, as he came out of the amphitheatre, A. D. 41, in the 29th year of his age.

CALLOT, James, a famous engraver, born at Nancy, in 1593. Evelyn, who was a very good judge of his merit, speaks of him as one who "gave the utmost reputation to his art of which it is capable; and attained, if ever any did, to its sublimity, and beyond which it seems not possible for human industry to reach." He died in 1636.

CALMET, Augustin, a Frenchman, born in 1672, died 1757. He was a man of vast erudition, and a wonderfully voluminous writer; as witnesseth the following list. 1. "A literal commentary upon all the Books of the Old and New Testament," 23 vols. 4to. 2. "Dissertations and Prefaces of his Commentaries," printed separately, with 19 new Dissertations, 2 vols. 4to. Perhaps there are none of his writings more useful than these. 3. "The History of the Old and New Testament," 4 vols. 4to. 4. "A Historical, Critical, and Chronological Dictionary of the Bible." 5. "Ecclesiastical and Civil History of Lorraine," 3 vols. folio. 6. "Bibliothèque of the Writers of Lorraine," folio. 7. "Universal History, sacred and profane," 15 vols. 4to, of which eight only were printed. 8. "Discretions upon Apparitions, Demons, Witches, &c." 9. CAPELLUS, Lewis, an eminent French protestant and learned divine, born at Sedan, a town in Champagne, about 1579. He was so very deeply skilled in the Hebrew, that the learned bishop Hall calls him the great oracle of all that studied Hebrew in France. His principal work is "Critica Sacra," a collection of various readings and errors, which he thought were crept into the copies of the Bible through the fault of the transcribers; it must have been, however, a work of prodigious labour, since the author acknowledges that he had been 36 years about it. Capellus died 1658.

CAPILUPUS, Camillus, an Italian writer, who published the stratagems of Charles IV. against the Hugonots.

CAPILUPUS, Lælius, brother of the preceding, author of some Latin poems, died in 1560.

CARDAN, Jerom, a physician, and one of the most ingenious men of his age, was born at Pavia, in 1501. He speaks in his writings, of his own good and bad qualities with a frankness that shows a mind of a very peculiar cast; and believes himself under the care of a particular genius. He wrote a very great number of books, and died in 1575.

CARDI, Ludovici, an admired painter, of Italy, died in 1613.

CARDONNE, Dionis Dominic de, a Frenchman, keeper of the MSS. in the royal library, Paris, died in 1783.

CAREW, George, earl of Totness, born in Devonshire, in 1557, and died 1629. He wrote a work entitled "Pacata Hibernia, or the History of the late Wars in Ireland." Besides this work, he collected several chronologies, characters, letters, monuments, and materials belonging to Ireland, in four large manuscript volumes, which are still extant in the Bodleian library at Oxford.

CAREW, Thomas, one of the most celebrated wits of king Charles' court. He was much respected by the poets of his time, particularly Ben Jonson, and Sir William Davenant, and died about 1639; leaving behind him several poems, and a masque, called "Cælium Britannicum," performed at Whitehall, on Shrove Tuesday night, Feb. 18, 1633, by the king's majesty, the duke of Lenox, the earls of Devonshire, Holland, Newport, and several other young lords, and noblemen's sons.

CAREW, Richard, author of the "Survey of Cornwall," was born in that county, in 1555. His "Survey" was published in 4to, at London, in 1602. Of this work, Camden has spoken in high terms, and acknowledges his obligations to the author. He died Nov. 6, 1620.

CAREW, Sir George, brother to the subject of the last article, was, from 1597, to 1609, employed on embassies from the British court, to those of Poland and France; on his return from which latter place, in 1609, he drew up, and addressed to James I., "A Relation of the State of France: with the characters of Henry IV., and the principal Persons of that Court."

CAREW, BAMPFYLDE MOORE, was the son of a clergyman, at Bickley, in Devonshire, and was himself intended for the church; but, at the age of fifteen, embraced the gipsy's vagrant life; and, by his ingenuity and dexterity in raising supplies for his brotherhood, by begging under various deceptions, so ingratiated himself with them, that they elected him their king. He was born in July, 1693, and is supposed to have died about 1770.

CAREW, Sir Alexander, a Cornish gentleman, governor of St. Nicholas' island and fort at Plymouth; he was beleagued in 1644, for his disloyalty.

CAREY, Harry, a man distinguished by both poetry and music; but perhaps more so by a certain facetiousness, which made him agreeable to every body. He wrote "The Contrivances," a farce; "Chrononhotonthologos," a mock tragedy; "The Honest Yorkshireman," a farce; "The Dragon of Wantley," and afterwards a sequel to it, entitled "The Dragoness;" both which were esteemed true burlesques upon the Italian opera. He was at length reduced to circumstances of distress; and, about 1744, in a fit of desperation, laid violent hands upon himself, and put a period to a life which had been led without reproach. It is to be noted, and it is somewhat singular in such a character, that in all his songs and poems on wine, love, and such kinds of subjects, which are very numerous, he seems to have manifested an inviolable regard for decency and good manners. He is said to have composed the famous English song of "God Save the King."

CAREY, George Saville, son of the preceding, was bred to the profession of a printer, and was one season, at least, on the stage, at Covent Garden. He was author of a "Lecture on Mimicry," which he delivered with good success, and of several light dramatic performances. He also published, in 1799, some entertaining sketches of the different watering places of England, and died in his 64th year, July 14, 1807. He was a posthumous child, and inherited the misfortunes of his father; but he inherited also his talents in a great degree, though they took another direction. He inherited too his moral qualities; for though he wrote a vast number of lyric compositions, they are all intended to awaken patriotic, generous, and amiable emotions.

CARLINI, Agostino, R. A., an eminent statuary, and keeper of the royal academy of London. He was a native of Genoa; went early in life to England; and was an artist of great celebrity, for the skill and grace with which he executed drapery. Died Aug. 14, 1790.

CARLOMAN, eldest son of Charles Martel, succeeded him in the kingdom of Austrasia, in 741.—Another, the son of Lewis the German, king of Italy, and emperor.—Another, brother of Lewis III., and sole king of France, in 852, died in 894.

CARLONE, John, a Genoese painter, who excelled in the art of foreshortening, died in 1630.

CARLOS, Don, son of Philip, king of Spain, deformed in his person, and violent in his temper; he was condemned to death for exciting an insurrection, in 1568.

CARLYLE, Joseph Dacre, vicar of Newcastle, and professor of Arabic, at Cambridge, distinguished himself greatly by his proficiency in Oriental literature, and died at his vicarage, April 12, 1804, aged 45.

CARMATH, an impostor, who, in 891, opposed the doctrines of Mahomet, and advanced others equally unscriptural.

CARMICHAEL, Gerrliom, a native of Glasgow, professor of moral philosophy, died in 1738.

CARMICHAEL, Frederic, son of the preceding, settled as a clergyman at Edinburgh. He published a volume of sermons which were admired, and died in 1751.

CARNEADES, a celebrated Greek philosopher. His death is placed in the fourth year of the 162d Olympiad. Plutarch has preserved the following apothegm of Carneades: "Princes learn nothing well but riding; for their masters flatter them, and those who wrestle with them, suffer themselves to be thrown; but a horse considers not whether a private man or a prince, a poor man or a rich, be on his back; and if his rider cannot rule him, he throws him."

CARO, Hannibal, a very celebrated Italian poet, and orator, born at Civita Nuova, in 1507. He translated Virgil's "Æneid" into his own language, very delicately and faithfully; in short, with such purity of style, and propriety of expression, that the best judges did not suppose him to have fallen the least short of his original. He translated also Aristotle's "Rhetoric," and "Two Orations of Gregory Nazianzen," with a "Discourse of Cyprian." He wrote a comedy likewise, which Balzac has spoken well of, and a miscellany of his original poems was printed at Venice, in 1584. His sonnets have been deservedly admired. He died in 1566.

CAROLAN, —, a most celebrated Irish bard, though blind, born in 1670, died at Alderford, Roscommon, in March, 1738. Carolan, on many occasions, proved himself a truly musical genius. In the beginning of the last century, Lord Mayo brought from Dublin a celebrated Italian performer. Carolan, who was at that time on a visit at his lordship's country-seat, found himself greatly neglected, and complained of it, one day, in the presence of Gemiani. When you play in as masterly a manner as he does," said his lordship, "you shall not be overlooked." Carolan wagered with the musician, that although he was almost a total stranger to Italian music, yet he would follow him in any piece that he played; and that he would himself afterwards play a voluntary, in which the Italian should not follow him. The proposal was acceded to, and Carolan was victorious. That Carolan was as fine a poet as he was a musician, may be seen in the Genl. Magazine, lxxiv. pt. 2. p. 30.

CAROLINE, daughter of John Frederic, margrave of Brandenburg Anspach, was crowned queen of England, in 1727. She is spoken of in high terms, as a woman, and ruler.

CAROLINE AMELIA ELIZABETH, consort of George IV., of England, died August, 1822. Having been separated from her husband soon after their marriage, her character was most unjustly traduced, by the friends of the king; but two rigid examinations of her conduct, if they did not attest her innocence, entitle her to commiseration, as the object of base and cruel persecution.

CARLOSTADT, or CARLOSTADIUS, Andrew Bodenstein, professor of divinity, and minister, at Basil. He espoused, in the fullest extent, the tenets of Luther, and died in 1541.

CAROTO, John Francis, an Italian painter, w.l.a. died in 1516.

CAROTO, John, brother and pupil to the preceding. Paul Veronese was his pupil.

CARPENTER, Nathaniel, dean of Ireland, a man of great learning, particularly in mathematics. He wrote on geography and philosophy, and died in 1635.

CARPENTER, Peter, an eminent French writer, who assisted in the edition of the Glossary of Ducange, in 6 vols. folio; he died in 1767.

CARPENTIER, N. a native of Beauvais, a great calculator and arithmetician. He wrote some treatises on his profession, and died in 1778.

CARPI, Ugo da, a painter, celebrated for the discovery of painting in chiaro-oscuro. died in 1590.

CARPI, Girolamo, an Italian painter, who imitated Correggio's manner with great success, died in 1556.

CARPONE, Julio, a Venetian painter, celebrated for his bacchanals, triumphs, and sacrifices, died in 1674.

CARPOCRATES, a heretic of Alexandria, who revived and improved the gnostic theory, about 130.

CARPZOVIVS, Benedict, an able professor of law at Wittenberg, died in 1624. He left four sons, each of them eminent as professors, divines, or writers; and one of these left a son, who was also a man of great learning.

CARR, Robert, a Scotchman, raised by James I. to the title of duke of Somerset. He murdered Sir Thomas Overbury, and died in 1638.

CARR, John, L. I. D., an usher, and afterwards master of the school at Hertford, and known as the translator of Lucian, died in 1807.

CARRA, John Lewis, a French demagogue, for a time popular with the republicans of Paris. His party was proscribed by Robespierre, and he was hurried to the guillotine in 1793. He was the author of many works CARRANZA, Bartholomew, archbishop of Toledo. He was accused of heresy, and sent to Rome, where he died in 1576. He was a learned and virtuous man.

CARRE, Lewis, an able mathematician, member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and pupil of Malebranche, died in 1711.

CARRERA, Peter, a priest of Sicily, author of a treatise on chess, in 4to., and of a history of Catania, died in 1647.

CARRIER, John Baptist, a member of the French national convention, and one of the most atrocious among them. He invented new modes of torturing the innocent inhabitants of La Vendee, and came to the guillotine in 1794.

CARRIER, Thomas, remarkable for longevity, died at Colchester, Connecticut, in 1735, aged 109.

CARRIERA, Rosa Alba, a Venetian portrait painter in crayons. She painted the royal family at Paris, and was admitted member of the academy of painting there, and died in 1761.

CARRIERES, Lewis de, a catholic priest, who published a French commentary on the Bible, in 24 vols., died in 1717.

CARRINGTON, Edward, an officer of the army during the American revolution, who, as quarter-master-general under General Greene, rendered important services to the southern army. He was afterwards a representative in congress from Virginia, and died in 1810.

CARROUAGES, an artist, of Pavia, who made a clock which would strike fire, and light a lamp.

CARSTARES, William, a Scotch divine and political writer, who has left some valuable "State Papers" illustrative of Scotch history. He was born at Cathcart, near Glasgow, in 1649, and died in 1715.

CARSUGH, Rainer, a Jesuit, in Tuscany, known as the author of an elegant poem in Latin, on the art of writing well; he died in 1709.

CARTE, Thomas, a very learned English historian, born at Clifton, Warwickshire, in 1686. His most important works were, "The History of the Life of James, duke of Ormond, from his birth, in 1610, to his death, in 1688," in 3 vols., folio; and a "History of England," in 4 large folio volumes. Notwithstanding our author's peculiar opinions and prejudices, his history is undoubtedly a work of great merit in point of information. It is written with eminent exactness and diligence, and with a perfect knowledge of original authors. Mr. Carte died in 1754.

CARTEIL, Christopher, a naval officer, sent by Queen Elizabeth, in company with Drake, to the West Indies, where he displayed great courage and intrepidity; he died in 1592.

CARTER, Francis, F. S. A., author of "A Journey from Malaga to Gibraltar," 2 vols. 8vo., died August 1, 1783.

CARTER, Elizabeth, a venerable ornament to literature, of the female sex, was daughter of the Rev. Dr. Nicholas Carter, and born at Deal, in Kent, December 17, 1717, died in London, February 19, 1806. Mrs. Carter was an admirable Greek and Latin scholar, wrote French and Italian with great fluency and elegance, and was conversant in the German, Spanish, and Portuguese. She was author of Nos. 44 and 100 of The Rambler, and published a volume of her poems about the year 1762, replete with attic wit, chaste philosophic fancy, and harmony of numbers; but the work that established her reputation as a learned lady was, a complete translation from the Greek of the works of "Epictetus," with notes.

CARTER, John, an eminent antiquarian draftsman, and critic, in ancient English architecture, was born in London, June 22, 1748, and died at Pimlico, September 8, 1817; having been many years a laborious contributor to that incomparable depository of antiquarian knowledge, the Gentleman's Magazine.

CARTERET, John, earl of Granville, employed by George I. in various important services. In 1721, he was made secretary of state, and in 1724, was sent viceroy to Ireland. He was also in favour with George II., and died in 1763, greatly beloved.

CARTERET, Philip, governor of the province of New-Jersey, died in 1682.

CARTEROMACO, Scipio, a learned professor of Greek at Venice, and a celebrated classical author, died in 1513.

CARTES, Rene des, an eminent French philosopher and mathematician, born at La Haye, in Touraine, March 31, 1596. In 1633, he wrote his "Treatise of the World," and in 1636, his "Treatise of Mechanics." He died in 1650, having extended the limits of geometry as far beyond the place where he found them, as Sir Isaac Newton did after him. He first taught the method of expressing curves by equations.

CARTIER, James, a French navigator, who made important discoveries in Canada, in 1534, and published memoirs of Canada.

CARTISMANDUA, queen of the Brigantes, in Britain, discarded her husband, Venusius, to marry his armour-bearer, Velocatus.

CARTWRIGHT, William, born at Northway, near Tewkesbury, in Gloucestershire, in 1611, died in 1643. Ben Jonson said of him, "My son Cartwright writes all like a man." There are extant, of this author's, four plays, besides other poems, which were printed together in 1651, accompanied by above 50 copies of commendatory verses. Prefixed is a portrait.

CARTWRIGHT, Christopher, an English divine, well skilled in Hebrew. He wrote several works, and died in 1652.

CARTWRIGHT, Thomas, a puritan, of great eminence and learning, born in Hertfordshire. He was a sharp and powerful controversialist, and was much persecuted, being obliged to quit the kingdom for safety. He wrote a practical commentary on the four gospels, and on the proverbs, and died in 1603, in great poverty.

CARTWRIGHT, Thomas, chaplain of King Charles, and prebendary of St. Paul's. He went with James II. in his flight to France, and afterwards to Ireland, and died in 1689. His works have been published.

CARTWRIGHT, John, commonly called Major, distinguished himself by his gallantry while young, as lieutenant of the British navy; he espoused the cause of America, in 1774, in several works of talent; in 1776, declined, on principle, a very advantageous proposition to accompany Lord Howe in his expedition against the colonies; and down to the time of his death, in 1824, was a zealous and able, though perhaps sometimes an intemperate, advocate of reform in the English government. His works are numerous, but almost wholly political.

CARVAJAL, Lawrence de, a Spaniard, who wrote the lives of Ferdinand and Isabella, in whose court he was a counsellor.

CARVALHO D'ACOSTA, Anthony, a Portuguese mathematician, geographer, and astronomer, born in 1650, died in 1715. He left a topographical history of his own country, in 3 vols. folio CARVER, John, first governor of Plymouth colony, distinguished for prudence, integrity, and firmness.

CARVER, Jonathan, a native of Connecticut, who published "Travels into the most interior parts of America," and died in 1780, in want of the necessaries of life.

CARUS, Marcus Aurelius, a Roman emperor, in 282. He was killed by lightning.

CARY, Robert, a learned chronologer, born at Cookington, Devonshire, in 1615, died in 1688. He published "Palæologia Chronica, a Chronological Account of Ancient Time, in three parts; 1. Didactical; 2. Apodeictical; 3. Canonical;" in 1677.

CARY, Lucius, eldest son of Henry I., viscount Falkland, born in Oxfordshire, in 1510. Before he was 23, he had read all the Greek and Latin fathers; was member of parliament in 1640, and soon after secretary to the king. He was killed at the battle of Newbury, bravely fighting for his king, aged 34.

CARY, Henry, earl of Monmouth, was educated with Charles I. He was a man of learning, having translated, from various authors, seven folios and two 8vos.; he died in 1661.

CARY, Felix, a learned Frenchman, who wrote the history of Marseilles, of Thrace, and of Bosphorus, by medals.

CARY, Thomas, lieutenant-governor of N. Carolina, was removed from office, and afterwards sent to England for trial, for attempting to excite a rebellion about 1709.

CARY, Thomas, minister of Newburyport, Mass., he published some sermons, and died in 1803.

CARYL, Joseph, one of Cromwell's chaplains; author of a tedious commentary on Job, in 3 vols. 4to.; died in 1673.

CARYLL, John, was secretary to queen Mary, the wife of James II., and followed the fortunes of his abdicating master, who rewarded him first with knighthood, and then with the honorary titles of earl Caryll and baron Dartford. How long he continued in that service is not known; but he was in England in the reign of queen Anne, and was author of two plays; 1. "The English Princess; or, the death of Richard III.," 1667, 4to.; 2. "Sir Salomon; or, the Cautious Coxcomb," 1671, 4to.

CASA, John de, a most polite Italian writer of the 16th century, born at Florence, who became in time, archbishop of Benevento. He died 1556. His "Galateus sen de Morum elegantia," is the most esteemed of all his works in prose. His poetry was very licentious.

CASANOVA, Mark Anthony, a Latin poet of Rome, who displayed great wit and keen satire, died in 1527.

CASAS, Bartholomi de las, a Spaniard and bishop of Chiapa, born at Seville, 1474. At 19 he attended his father who went with Columbus to the Indies, in 1493. Upon his return, he became an ecclesiastic, and a curate in the isle of Cuba; but quitted his cure and his country, in order to devote himself to the service of the Indians, who were then enslaved to the most ridiculous superstitions, as well as the most barbarous tyranny. The Spanish governors had long since made christianity detested by their unheard-of cruelties, and the Indians trembled at the very name of Christian. This humane and pious missionary resolved to cross the seas, and to lay their cries and their miseries at the feet of Charles V. The affair was discussed in council and the representations of Casas so sensibly affected the emperor, that he made ordinances as severe to the persecutors as favourable to the persecuted; but these ordinances were never executed, and the governors continued to tyrannise as usual. Casas employed above 50 years in America, labouring with incessant zeal that the Indians might be treated with mildness, equity and humanity; but instead of availing any thing, he drew upon himself endless persecutions from the Spaniards, and died in 1566.

CASATI, Paul, a Jesuit of great learning, who persuaded queen Christiana, of Sweden, to abjure her religion, and turn Catholic. He was the author of an excellent treatise on optics after he was blind. He died in 1707.

CASAUBON, Isaac, a learned critic and commentator, born at Geneva, 1539, and died 1614. He was buried in Westminster Abbey, where there is a monument erected to his memory.

CASAUBON, Meric, son of the preceding, born at Geneva, 1599, died 1671. He was skilled in various parts of literature: but his chief talent lay in critical learning; in which he was probably assisted by his father's papers. He was a divine; but is chiefly memorable for having refused considerable offers made to him by Oliver Cromwell, to write the history of the civil war; and for the refusal of a present from him, tendered without conditions, though he was in indigent circumstances.

CASCHI, an eloquent Mahometan preacher at Medina, author of commentaries on the Koran.

CASCHIRI, a Mahometan, author of the lives of Mussulman saints, died in 261 of the hegra.

CASE, Thomas, a non-conformist, during the civil wars, who wrote and preached against the royalists. He was confined six months in the tower. His works are chiefly sermons; he died in 1682.

CASE, John, an English quack and astrologer. He said to Dr. Radcliffe, "Let me have all the fools for my patients, and you may have the rest."

CASEL, John, a learned professor of philosophy at Helmstadt, died in 1613.

CASNEUVE, Peter, a native of Toulouse; he wrote the life and miracles of Edmund, king of England, and died in 1652.

CASES, Peter James, one of the first painters of the French school, died in 1745.

CASIMIR, Matthias Sarbiewski, a Jesuit, of Poland, and an excellent Latin poet, born 1597. The odes, epodes, and epigrams of this poet have not been thought inferior to some productions of the finest wits of ancient Greece and Rome; and Grofius, D. Heinsius and others have not scrupled to affirm, that he is not only equal, but sometimes superior, even to Horace himself. Casimir had a great regard for Virgil; and had actually begun to imitate him, in an epic poem, called "The Lesciades," which he had divided into 12 books; but died before he had made any great progress in the work, April 2, 1640, since which there have been many editions of his poems.

CASIMIE I., king of Poland, an excellent prince, who did much toward civilizing his subjects; he died in 1058.

CASIMIR II., king of Poland, surnamed the Just, died in 1194.

CASIMIR III., king of Poland, surnamed the Great; he was a great warrior, and conquered Russia; he died in 1370.

CASIMIR IV., king of Poland, made war successfully against the Teutonic knights. He commanded that the Latin tongue should be the vernacular language of his kingdom, which is observed to this day. He died in 1492.

CASIMIR, John, married the widow of his brother, Ladislaus, and became king of Poland; but the ingratitude of his subjects made him resign his crown, and he died in France, in 1672.

CASLON, William, eminent in an art of the greatest consequence to literature, the art of letter-founding, was born in 1692, at Halles Owen, Shropshire. Though he justly attained the character of being the Coryphæus in that employment, he was not brought up to the business; but served a regular apprenticeship to an engraver of ornaments on gun-barrels; and, after the expiration of his term, carried on this trade in Vine-street, in the Minorities. He did not, however, solely confine his ingenuity to that occupation, but employed himself likewise in making tools for the bookbinders and for the chasing of silver plate. While he was engaged in this business, the elder Mr. Bowyer accidentally saw in a bookseller's shop, the lettering of a book uncommonly neat; and inquiring who the artist was by whom the letters were made, was hence induced to seek an acquaintance with Mr. Caslon. Not long after, Mr. Bowyer took Mr. Caslon to Mr. James' foundry in Bartholomew Close. Caslon had never before that time seen any part of the business; and being asked by his friend if he thought he could undertake to cut types, he requested a single day to consider the matter, and then replied that he had no doubt but he could. Upon this answer, Mr. Bowyer, Mr. Bettenham, and Mr. Watts, lent him 500*l.* to begin the undertaking; and he applied himself to it with equal assiduity and success. In 1720, the society for promoting Christian knowledge deemed it expedient to print, for the use of the eastern churches, the New Testament and Psalter in the Arabic language. These were intended for the benefit of the poor Christians in Palestine, Syria, Mesopotamia, Arabia, and Egypt; the constitutions of which countries did not permit the exercise of the art of printing. Upon this occasion, Mr. Caslon was pitched upon to cut the fount; in his specimens of which he distinguished it by the name of English Arabic. After he had finished this fount, he cut the letters of his own name in pica Roman, and placed them at the bottom of one of the Arabic specimens. The name being seen by Mr. Palmer, the reputed author of a "History of Printing," (which was, in fact, written by Salmanazar) he advised our artist to cut the whole fount of pica. This was accordingly done; and the performance exceeded the letter of the other founders of the time. He arrived at length to such perfection, that his workmanship was frequently exported to the continent. He removed about 1735 into Chiswell-street, Moorfields, where his foundry became, in process of time, the most extensive that existed. Having acquired opulence in the course of his employment, he was put into the commission of the peace for the county of Middlesex, in which office he died, January 23, 1766.

CASNODYN, a Welsh poet, who flourished at the beginning of the 14th century.

CASSAGNES, James, abbé de, a French poet and preacher, who died mad, because he was compared with Cotin, a very poor and unpopular preacher, in 1679.

CASSAN, a christian, who renounced his religion to become king of Persia, died in 1304.

CASSANA, Nicholo, a Venetian painter, who died in 1713. His conspiracy of Cataline is greatly admired.

CASSANA, brother of the preceding, was eminent in drawing beasts and birds.

CASSANDER, king of Macedonia, died 304 B. C.

CASSANDER, George, an eminent French divine, who was long engaged in the fruitless labour of reconciling the catholics and protestants, died in 1566.

CASSANDRA, Fidele, a Venetian lady, of great learning in philosophy and the languages, died, aged 102, in 1567.

CASSENTINO, Jacobodi, an eminent painter, the founder of the Florentine academy, died in 1756.

CASSERIO, Julio, rose from a state of poverty, to be professor of anatomy and medicine at Padua. He was first taken, as a domestic, into the family of Fabricius, who instructed him; he died in 1616.

CASSIAN, a monk, of the 5th century, who wrote some works, and founded a monastery at Marseilles.

CASSIBELAN, or CASSIVELAUNUS, a king of Britain, at the time of the invasion of Julius Cæsar.

CASSINI, Johannes Dominicus, a celebrated astronomer, born in Piedmont, in 1635. At the age of 15, the senate invited him to teach mathematics at Bologna. He was made astronomer royal of France in 1669, and after enriching science with a thousand new discoveries and observations, died in 1712.

CASSINI, John James, son of the preceding, inherited the talents and fame of his father, and took his place as royal astronomer of France. His works were in high estimation, and are valuable at this day; he died in 1756.

CASSINI DE THURY, Cæsar Francis, successor of John James, born in 1714, distinguished for his early and rapid progress in science, died in 1784.

CASSIODORUS, Marcus Aurelius, a man of eminence in many respects, and called, by way of distinction, "the senator," was born in Italy, about 463. His principal writings are, "De Divinis Lectionibus," "De Orthographia," and "De Rebus Gestis Gothorum." He wrote also a commentary upon the Psalms, and several other pieces, theological and critical, and died at near 100 years of age.

CASSIUS, Caius, brother-in-law of Brutus, one of Cæsar's murderers. He caused one of his slaves to kill him, that he might not fall into the hands of his enemy, 42 B. C.

CASSIUS, Longinus Lucius, a Roman magistrate of great integrity, 115 B. C.

CASSIUS, Avidius, a Roman general, who proclaimed himself emperor, and was soon after assassinated.

CASSIUS, Parmensis, a Latin poet, put to death by Augustus.

CASSIUS, Severus Sicutus, a Roman orator, of the Augustan age, eloquent, but violent against individuals.

CASTAGNO, Andrew del, a painter, of Tuscany, who assassinated Dominico de Venise, from whom he obtained the secret of painting in oil. Castagno revealed this on his death-bed, and died in 1478.

CASTALDI, Cornelius, an eminent poet, in Latin and Italian. He founded a college at Padua, where he died in 1537.

CASTALIO, Sebastian, born at Chatillon, on the Rhone, in 1515. His works are very considerable, on account both of their quality and their number; they discover great knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages, and are chiefly on Scriptural subjects. He died in 1563.

CASTEELS, Peter, a painter, of Antwerp. He published 12 plates of birds, designed and etched by himself, and died in 1749.

CASTEL, Lewis Bertrand, a Jesuit and mathematician, of Montpellier. He published a system of mathematics, a treatise on gravity, and on optics; all highly esteemed: he died in 1757.

CASTELL, Edmund, a divine of the 17th century, and compiler of a very learned and laborious work, called "Lexicon Heptaglotton." He was also eminently assistant to Dr. Walton, in the celebrated edition of the "Polyglott Bible," and died in 1685.

CASTELLI, Bernard, a Genoese painter and engraver, of eminence, died in 1629.

CASTELLI, Valerio, son of the preceding, was particularly skilled in painting battles, and died in 1659.

CASTELLI, Benedict, a native of Brescia, who assisted Galileo in his astronomical observations, died in 1644.

CASTELNAU, Michael, ambassador in the service of Charles IX. of France. Memoirs of his embassies are published, in 2 vols. folio; he died in 1592.

CASTELNAU, Henriette Julia de, wife of count de Murat, authoress of several pleasing and elegant works, died in 1716.

CASTELVETRO, Lewis, an Italian critic, famous for his parts, but more famous for his spleen and ill-nature, was born at Modena, in 1505. He distinguished himself chiefly by his "Commentary upon Aristotle's Poetics;" where, Rapin assures us, he always made it a rule to find something to except against in the text of Aristotle. He died in 1571.

CASTI, P' abbé, an Italian poet, author of several works of merit, died in 1803.

CASTIGLIONE, Joseph, a native of Ancona distinguished as a poet and critic, died in 1616.

CASTIGLIONE, Balthazar, an eminent Italian nobleman and poet, was born at Mantua, in 1478. He applied himself to the study of painting, sculpture, and architecture, as appears from a book that he wrote in favour of those arts, and made so great a progress in them, that Raphael Urbín and Buonarotti, though incomparable artists, never thought their works perfect, unless they had the approbation of Castiglione. He died in 1529. Besides his incomparable book, "The Courtier," in which work we may perceive how intimate he was with the Greek and Latin authors, (having gleaned together the first flowers of their wit, and treasured up, as it were, in a single casket, the richest jewels of antiquity,) he composed many Latin and Tuscan poems, which, with some of his letters, are placed at the end of the English version of "The Courtier," published at London, in 1727.

CASTIGLIONE, Benedict, an eminent Italian engraver, born in 1616, died in 1670.

CASTIGLIONE, Francisco, son and pupil of the preceding, and equally respectable as a painter.

CASTILE, Alphonsus X. of, who has commonly been called "The Wise," was born in 1203, and is now more famous for having been an astronomer than a king. He understood astronomy, philosophy, and history, as if he had been only a man of letters, and composed books upon the motions of the heavens, and on the history of Spain, which are highly commended. He died in 1234.

CASTILLO, Ferdinand de, a Dominican, of Spain, who wrote an account of his order; he died in 1593.

CASTILLO-Y-SAAVEDRA, Antony del, a Spanish painter, who died of grief, because he was excelled, in 1667.

CASTRIES, N., marshal de, an able French general, who served in the seven years' war, died in 1800.

CASTRO, Alphonso de, a Spanish Franciscan friar, who went to England with Philip II. He was an able preacher, and died in 1558.

CATHARINE, a daughter of Charles VI., of France, who married Henry V. of England, and afterwards Owen Tudor, a Welchman. She died in 1438.

CATHARINE of ARRAGON, daughter of Ferdinand, V., and wife of Henry VIII. She was a woman of many virtues.

CATHARINE DE MEDICIS, only daughter of Laurentius de Medicis, born at Florence, in 1519, married, 1533, the dauphin, afterwards Henry II., of France. She was three times regent of France; and, during her administrations, made a conspicuous figure in the annals of Europe, by her political genius. She died in 1589.

CATHARINE of SIENNA, a Romish saint, who, at the age of eight, is said to have vowed perpetual celibacy; she died in 1380.

CATHARINE of PORTUGAL, daughter of John IV., and wife of Charles II., by whom she was treated unkindly; she died in 1705.

CATHARINE of BOURBON, sister to Henry IV., and wife of Henry of Lorraine, died in 1604.

CATHARINE ALEXIEVNA, a country girl of the name of Martha, born of very indigent parents, in Livonia. In 1701 she married a dragon of the Swedish garrison, at Marienburgh; but before evening of the wedding-day, the place was besieged by the Russians: the bridegroom was killed, and the victor, general Bauer, snitten with her beauty, made her his mistress. Prince Mentshicoff next beheld her, and she lived with him a short time.—In the 17th year of her age, she became the mistress of Peter the Great, who, on the 29th of May, 1711, married her privately in Poland, and the 20th of Feb., 1712, publicly solemnized the marriage, at Petersburg, and presented her with the diadem and sceptre. At his death, in 1725, she was proclaimed sovereign empress of all the Russias, and, to her death, the 17th of May, 1727, showed herself worthy of her high fortune.

CATHARINE II., empress of Russia, a woman of most extraordinary natural talents for governing a state, and civilizing a rude nation; but of insatiate lust, and unbounded ambition; to the indulgence of which latter passion, she waded through blood, flowing from the slaughter of thousands and tens of thousands. She was born May 2, 1729, and married in 1745, to the grandson of Peter the Great. Having caused her husband to be deposed (if not worse dealt with) in 1762, she was proclaimed empress. She died suddenly, in November, 1796, and was succeeded by her only son Paul Petrowitz, the father of Alexander I., the present emperor of Russia.

CATHARINUS, Ambrose, an Italian, bishop of Minor. He wrote against Luther, and died in 1553.

CATILINA, Lucius Sergius, a noble Roman, whose extravagance reduced him to narrow circumstances, and having been refused the consulship, became leader of a conspiracy to murder the consuls and senate of Rome, rifle the public treasury, and burn the city: which conspiracy was discovered by Cicero, at that time consul, 62 B. C. He was slain in battle the same year, on the plains of Tuscany.

CATINAT, Nicholas, an illustrious French general, under Louis XIV., born at Paris, 1637, died in 1712.

CATINEAU, N. a brave man, who headed the Vendees during the revolution; he fell at the siege of Nantes.

CATO, Marcus Portius, commonly called the Censor, born at Tusculum, in the year of Rome, 519; that is, about the year 232 B. C. No man was ever better qualified than he for the office of censor, nor could better discharge the duties of it. He made use of his severity, eloquence, and exemplary life, to give a check to the luxury and growing vices of the Romans; which gave occasion to say, that he was not less serviceable to the republic of Rome, by making war against immorality, than Scipio, by his victories over his enemies. He wrote several works: "A Roman History," a book "concerning the Art of War," and one on "Agriculture," and died in the year of Rome 604.

CATO, Uticensis, great grandson to the former, was educated under his uncle Livius Drusus, and very early showed valour and generosity; having, at 14 years old, desired a sword to kill the tyrant Sylla. He was a lover of philosophy, in which he rigidly followed the doctrines of the stoics; this furnished him with that bravery of soul which he manifested on all occasions. His first campaign was in 631, against Spartacus: afterwards he led 1000 foot into Asia, where, for the small number of his attendants, he was laughed at, but was never moved with it; returning, he was made quæstor, which post he filled with honour. To keep out a very bad man, he put in for the tribunate. He sided with Cicero, against Catiline, and opposed Caesar in the senate, on that occasion. His enemies sent him to recover Cyprus, which Ptolemy had forfeited, thinking to hurt his reputation by so difficult an undertaking; yet none could find fault with his conduct. He laboured to bring about an agreement between Cæsar and Pompey, but, seeing it in vain, sided with the latter. When Pompey was slain, he fled to Utica, and Cæsar pursuing him, he advised his friends to begone, and his son to trust to Cæsar's clemency; then lay down upon his bed, read Plato upon the Immortality of the Soul, twice over, and thrust a sword through his body, of which he died, 46 B. C., aged 48.

CATO, Valerius, a Latin poet, in the age of Sylla, died 30 B. C.

CATROU, Francis, a very distinguished jesuit, born at Paris, in 1659. He was the author of some very considerable works; as, 1. "A General History of the Empire of the Mogul;" 2. "A History of the Fanaticism of some Protestant Religions; of Anabaptism, of Davidism, and of Quakerism;" 3. "A Translation of Virgil, with notes critical and historical;" and 4. "A Roman History;" which has been translated into several languages, and is reckoned his capital work. He died in 1737.

CATHO, Angelo, was in the service of Lewis XI., as astrologer and physician. He pretended to foretell future events, and died in 1497.

CATULLUS, Caius Valerius, a Roman poet, born at Verona, 86 B. C. He is far unlike our modern poets, who usually complain of the coyness and insensibility of their fair ones; he speaks of his Lesbia, as a woman who asked him, how many kisses would satisfy him? To which he answered, "that he desired as many as there are grains of sand in the deserts of Libya, and stars in the heavens." Although possessing a superior genius, he was, as many others have since been, poor. He died in the flower of his age, and the height of his reputation, when he was about 30 years old.

CATZ, James, a Dutch statesman, and poet, born in Zealand, 1577, died 1660.

CAULET, Francis Stephen de, a French prelate, who opposed the king's right of disposing of ecclesiastical benefices, died in 1680.

CAULIAC, Guy de, a French anatomist, and physician to the popes Clement VI., and Urban VII.

CAVALCANTI, Bartholomew, an Italian, who served pope Paul III., in both military and political capacities, died in 1562.

CAVALIER, John, celebrated for his bravery in the wars of the protestant insurgents, against Lewis XIV. He died in 1705.

CAVALIERI, Bonaventure, an Italian, professor at Bologna, and disciple of Galileo, died in 1647.

CAVALLINI, Pietro, a painter of celebrity at Rome, died in 1364.

CAVALLO, Tiberius, F. R. S., an eminent writer on natural philosophy, born at Naples, March 30, 1749, settled in England, 1771, and died in London, Dec. 26, 1809; having published, among other valuable works, "Treatises on Electricity;" on the "Air," and Aerostation;" on "Magnetism;" and "Elements of Natural History."

CAVANILLES, Antonio Joseph, a Spanish

botanist, was educated among the Jesuits, and appointed tutor to the sons of the duke de l'Infantado. In 1801, he was intrusted with the care of the royal gardens of Madrid, where he died in 1804.

CAVE, Dr. William, a learned divine, born 1637, died 1713. He was author of some large and learned works, relating to ecclesiastical antiquity; particularly, "The History of the Lives, Acts, Deaths, and Martyrdoms, of those who were cotemporary with the Apostles, and of the principal Fathers within the first three centuries of the Church," and "Historia Literaria, &c.;" in which he gives an exact account of all who had written upon Christianity, either for or against it, from Christ to the 14th century.

CAVE, Edward, born at Newion, in Warwickshire, Feb. 29, 1691, and celebrated for having planned and brought to perfection, "The Gentleman's Magazine," which has been published upwards of 90 years, and is considered one of the most successful and lucrative periodical works that history has upon record. Mr. Cave died Jan. 10, 1754.

CAVEDONE, Giacomo, an Italian painter, died in 1660.

CAVENDISH, Thomas, a celebrated English circumnavigator, died about 1593.

CAVENDISH, Sir William, born about 1505. Cardinal Wolsey took him into his splendid family, which consisted of one earl, nine barons, and about 100 knights, gentlemen, and inferior officers. He served the cardinal as gentleman-usher, and was admitted into more intimacy with him than any other servant, and therefore would not desert him in his fall, but was one of the few, who stuck close to him when he had neither office nor salary to bestow. This singular fidelity, joined to his abilities, recommended him to his sovereign, who received him into his own family and service. He afterwards held high offices of state under Edward VI., and Mary I., and died in 1557. Sir William Cavendish wrote the life of his old master, Cardinal Wolsey, and therein gives him a very high character; affirming that, in his judgment, he never saw the kingdom in better obedience and quiet, than during the time of his authority, nor justice better administered.

CAVENDISH, William, duke of Newcastle, born in 1592, died in 1676. He rendered great services, in a military capacity to Charles I. and II.; and after the restoration, retired to indulge his natural disposition in literary pursuits. He wrote a celebrated "Treatise on Horsemanship," of which a most excellent edition was, a few years ago, printed in England; and four comedies. His second wife, Margaret, was a woman of great wit, and some learning; for, besides the life of the duke, and her own, she wrote a great number of folio volumes, and published 26 plays, in several of which there are scenes and songs written by the duke. Her grace died in 1673.

CAVENDISH, William, first duke of Devonshire, an able statesman, and friend of Lord Russell, was active in procuring king William III. to invade England, and died in 1707.

CAVENDISH, Lord John, son of the fourth duke of Devonshire, and chancellor of the exchequer; he opposed Lord North's administration, and died in 1796.

CAVENDISH, Lord Frederic, chose a military life, was a field marshal, and died in 1803

CAVENDISH, Hon. Henry, a very ingenious natural philosopher, born Oct. 10, 1731, died at Clapham, Feb. 24, 1810. Though not much head of in the common paths of life, he was well known and highly distinguished in the scientific world. He had studied and rendered himself familiarly conversant with every part of Sir Isaac Newton's philosophy; the principles of which he applied, about the year 1770, to an investigation of the laws on which the phenomena of electricity depend. Pursuing the same science, on the occasion of Mr. Walsh's experiments with the torpedo, he gave a satisfactory explanation of the remarkable powers of electrical fishes; pointing out that distinction between common and animal electricity, which has since been amply confirmed by the brilliant discoveries in galvanism. Having turned his attention very early to pneumatic chymistry, he ascertained, in 1766, the extreme levity of inflammable air, now called hydrogen gas. On this discovery, many curious experiments, and particularly that of aerial navigation have been founded. In the same path of science, he made the important discovery of the composition of water, by the union of two airs; and that laid the foundation of the modern system of chymistry, which rests principally on this fact, and that of the decomposition of water, announced soon afterwards by M. Lavoisier. As the purity of atmospherical air had been a subject of controversy, Mr. Cavendish contrived essential improvements in the method of performing experiments with a eudiometer; by means of which, he was the first who showed, that the proportion of pure air in the atmosphere is nearly the same in all open places. The other and much larger portion of our atmosphere, he sagaciously conjectured to be the basis of the acid of vitre; an opinion which he soon brought to the test, by an ingenious and laborious experiment, which completely proved its truth; whence this air has now very generally obtained the name of nitrogen. Among the labours of his latter days, is the nice and difficult experiment, by which he determined the mean density of the earth; an element of consequence in delicate calculations of astronomy, as well as in geological inquiries. Even in the last year of his life, at the advanced age of 77, he proposed and described improvements in the manner of dividing large astronomical instruments; which, though not yet executed, promise very great advantages. These pursuits, together with reading of various kinds, by which he acquired a deep insight into almost every topic of general knowledge, formed the whole occupation of his life; and were, in fact, his sole amusement. From his attachment to such occupations, and the constant resource he found in them, together with a shyness and diffidence natural to his disposition, his habits had, from early life, been secluded. He is said to have left behind him £1,290,000. Mr. Cavendish was great uncle to the duke of Devonshire.

CAVOYE, Lewis, marquis de, a French military officer, of great bravery, died in 1716.

CAUSSIN, Nicholas, a French Jesuit, and confessor to Lewis XIII., was born at Troyes, in Champagne, in 1580, and died at Paris, July, 1651. He published, among other works, "The Holy Court," a moral work, which has been often reprinted, and translated into Latin, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, German, and English; and "Sacred Tragedies."

CAWDREY, Daniel, an ejected non-conformist and a member of the Westminster assembly of divines, died in 1664.

CAWTHORNE, James, a very agreeable poet, born at Sheffield, in 1721. In 1743, he was chosen master of Tunbridge School; and this place he held till his death, which happened by a fall from his horse, in 1761. His poetical compositions were collected and published in 4to, in 1771.

CAWTON, Thomas, a non-conformist, and a good Hebrew scholar, died in 1677.

CAXTON, William, the first who introduced the art of printing with fusile types into England, was born in the Weald of Kent, about the latter end of the reign of Henry IV. Being about 15, he was put apprentice to Mr. Robert Large, a mercer, who, after having been sheriff and mayor of London, died in 1441, leaving by will 34 marks to his apprentice, William Caxton; a considerable legacy in those days, and an early testimony of Caxton's good behaviour and integrity. Caxton went abroad to settle the same year that his master died, and was intrusted by the mercer's company to be their agent or factor in Holland, Zealand, Flanders, &c. In 1464, a commission was granted to him and Richard Whitehill, Esq., by Edward IV., to continue and confirm the treaty of trade and commerce between his majesty and Philip, duke of Burgundy, or, if they found it necessary, to make a new one. They are styled in the commission, ambassadors and special deputies. A marriage was concluded, in July, 1468, between the king's sister, lady Margaret of York, and the duke's son, Charles, he being then duke of Burgundy; and when the lady arrived at the duke's court at Bruges, Caxton appears to have been of her retinue. He was now either one of her household, or held some constant post under her; because, as he says, he received of her a yearly fee or salary, besides many other good and great benefits. Being more expert than most others in penmanship and languages, it is highly probable that he was employed by the dutchess in some literary way. As soon as he had acquired the mystery of the new invention of printing, (which he did not accomplish, he says himself, without great expense,) he was employed by her in translating out of French a large volume, and afterwards in printing it. It appeared under the title of "The Recuyell of the History of Troye;" and is the first book, we now know of, that was printed in the English tongue; the date being September 19, 1471, at Colen (Cologne). By the edition of the "Game of Chess," dated in 1474, Caxton appears to have been then settled in England; and this book is allowed, by all the typographical antiquaries, to have been the first specimen of the art among us; and as such, has been so valued, that it is said, the earl of Pembroke, for a fair copy thereof, which was given him by Mr. Granger, presented him with a purse of forty guineas. The next performance of Caxton, of which the date is ascertained, is, "The Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers, translated out of French by Antone erle Ryvyres lord Seerles, emprinted by William Caxton, at Westmestre, 1477." Caxton printed several other pieces, either of his own composition, or translated by him. His last work was a translation from the French of "The Holy Lives of the Fathers Hermites living in the Deserts;" and we are informed by Wynken de Worde, that he finished his life and translation together, on the same day, in 1491.

CAYLUS, Anne Claude, Count de, a French writer, born at Paris, in 1692. His chief work is, "Recueil d'Antiquités Egyptiennes, Etrusques, Grecques, Romaines, et Gauloises," 7 tom. 4to., 1752-67. He died in 1765.

CAZES, Peter James, a French painter and an ingenious artist, died in 1754.

CAZOTTE, James, mayor of Pierry, who, for his attachment to the French king, was guillotined in 1792.

CEBA, Ansaldo, a Genoese, of reputation as a politician, orator, and poet, died in 1623.

CEBES, the author of a little beautiful Grecian remain, entitled, "A picture of Human Life." Of this author we have no account, save that he is once mentioned by Plato, and once by Xenophon.

CECCO DE ASCOLI, or FRANCIS DE GLI STABILI, of Ascoli, a professor at Bologna; was burnt by order of the inquisition, in 1327.

CECIL, William, lord Burleigh an eminent English statesman, whose loyalty to his sovereign queen Elizabeth, and his patriotism, preserved the religion and the civil polity of England from falling a prey to sovereign tyranny and popish superstitions. He was born at Bourn, in Lincolnshire, 1521, held the office of lord high treasurer of England 27 years, and died 1598. A collection of his state papers was published by Haynes, 1740; and a continuation of them by Murdin, 1760.

CECIL, Richard, an eminent divine of the church of England, died in 1810.

CECROPS, an Egyptian, founder of the Athenian monarchy, 1556 B. C.

CEDRENUŠ, George, a Grecian monk, lived in the 11th century, and wrote "Annals, or an abridged History, from the beginning of the World to the reign of Isaac Commenus, emperor of Constantinople," who succeeded Michael IV. in 1057.

CELESTI, Andrea, a Venetian painter, died in 1706.

CELESTIN I., was pope 10 years; he condemned the doctrines of Nestorius, and died in 432.

CELESTIN II., was pope 5 months, and died in 1143.

CELESTIN III., was pope 7 years, and died in 1198.

CELESTIN IV., was pope 18 days, and died in 1241.

CELESTIN V., elected pope in 1291, which office he afterwards resigned; he was imprisoned by his successor, and died in 1296.

CELLARIUS, Christopher, born in 1638, at Malcalde, in Franconia, died in 1707. He published good editions of above 20 Latin and Greek authors. His works relate chiefly to grammar, to geography, to history, and to the oriental languages. Those in geography are well known as excellent helps to the understanding of ancient authors.

CELLIER, Remi, a benedictine of Bar le duc, wrote a biographical history, and died in 1761.

CELLINI, Benevento, a celebrated sculptor and engraver, of Florence, born in 1500, died in 1570.

CELSUS, Aurelius Cornelius, a philosopher and physician, who flourished under the reigns of Augustus and Tiberius. He wrote upon several subjects, as we learn from Quintillian; upon rhetoric, for which he is often quoted and commended by this great master; upon the military art; upon agriculture; and we have still extant of his eight books "De Medicina," which are written in very fine Latin.

CELSUS, an epicurean philosopher of the 2d century, who wrote a book against the Christian religion, which was answered by Origen. The work of Celsus is lost.

CELTES, Conrad, a Latin poet, who died at Vienna, in 1308, after having obtained the laurel.

CENSORINUS, Appius Claudius, a Roman senator, raised to the throne by his soldiers, in 270.

CENSORINUS, a Roman grammarian of the 3d century.

CENTLIVRE, Susannah, a celebrated comic writer, who had so early a turn for poetry, that, as one of her biographers tells us, she composed a song before she was seven years old. She is the author of 19 dramatic pieces, and several little poems. Her talent was in comedy, particularly the contrivance of plots and incidents. She died Dec. 1, 1723.

CENTORIO, Ascanius a native of Milan, eminent as a soldier and philosopher, lived in the 16th century.

CERATINUS, James, or Teyng, a Hollander who obtained a Greek professorship by means of Erasmus, and died at Louvain, in 1530.

CERUTI, Joseph Antony Joachim, a Jesuit, and professor at Lyons, and a member of the national assembly, died in 1792.

CERVANTES. See SAAVEDRA.

CERVETTO, an Italian, of extraordinary character in the musical world. He played the bass at Drury-lane Theatre, and died January 14, 1783, in his 103d year. One evening, when Mr. Garrick was performing the character of Sir John Brute, during the drunkard's muttering and dozing till he falls asleep in the chair, (the audience being most profoundly silent and attentive to the admirable performer,) Cervetto, in the orchestra, uttered a very loud and immoderately-lengthened yawn! The moment Garrick was off the stage, he sent for the musician, and with considerable warmth reprimanded him for so ill-timed a symptom of somnolency; when the modern Naso, with great address, reconciled Garrick to him in a trice, by saying, with a shrug, "I beg ten thousand pardons! but I always do so ven I am ver musch please?" Mr. Cervetto was distinguished among his friends of the galleries by the ludicrous name of Nosey, from the promineney of his nasal feature.

CESALPINUS, a celebrated Italian writer on botany, born in 1519, died in 1603.

died in 1575, leaving behind him a work called "The right ordering of the English Republic." He also discovered the first alum mines in England.

CHALONER, Sir Thomas, educated at Oxford, was tutor to the prince of Wales, and died in 1615.

CHALONER, James, son of the preceding, educated at Oxford, was one of King Charles' judges, and died in Holland, in 1661.

CHALONER, Edward, head of Alban hall, Oxford, a good preacher and learned divine, died in 1625.

CHALOTAIS, Lewis Rene Caradeue de la, known as the author of a work on the Jesuits, died in 1715.

CHAMBAUD, Lewis, author of a French Dictionary and Grammar, and other useful school-books, died in 1776.

CHAMBERLAINE, Robert, an Englishman and author of several works, died in the 17th century.

CHAMBERLAYNE, Edward, born at Odington, in Gloucestershire, in 1616, died in 1703. He wrote many books; the best known of which is, "Anglia Notitia; or, the Present State of England."

CHAMBERLAYNE, John, son of the preceding, and continuator of that useful book, "The Present state of England," was born about 1670, and died in 1724, having published many ingenious critical, theological, and moral works.

CHAMBERS, Sir Robert, a learned judge, educated at Oxford, chief justice in Bengal, and president of the Asiatic society, died in 1801.

CHAMBERS, Ephraim, author of the celebrated Dictionary of Arts and Sciences which goes under his name, was born at Milton, in the county of Westmoreland. When he became of a proper age, he was put apprentice to Mr. Senex, the globe-maker, a business which is connected with literature, and especially with astronomy and geography. It was during Mr. Chambers' residence with this skilful mechanic, that he contracted that taste for science and learning, which accompanied him through life, and directed all his pursuits. It was even at this time that he formed the design of his grand work, the "Cyclopaedia;" and some of the first articles of it were written behind the counter. He died May 15, 1740. The first edition of the Cyclopaedia was published in 1728, in 2 vols. folio. Another edition, with considerable improvements, by Dr. Rees, was begun to be published, in weekly numbers, in 1778, and was, in 1785, completed in 4 vols. January 1, 1802, Dr. Rees commenced the publication of an edition still farther enlarged, which has been recently completed in 45 vols. 4to.; most highly adorned, and fully illustrated, by engravings, in a style of excellence well suited to the exalted merit of the work itself; which is at once an ornament to its editor, and to the country.

CHAMBERS, Sir William, an eminent architect, whose name will be transmitted to late posterity as the builder of that great national ornament, Somerset Place. This superb structure was begun in 1776, and inhabited in 1785. Sir William was by birth a Swede, but was brought over to England at two years of age. He wrote an excellent "Treatise on Civil Architecture," a "Dissertation on Oriental Gardening," published "Designs for Chinese Buildings," &c. and died March 8, 1796.

CHAMBER, Daniel, a French protestant, pro

essor of divinity at Montauban. He drew up the famous edict of Nantes, and was killed in 1621.

CHAMILLARD, Stephen, a Jesuit, of Bourges, eminent as a scholar and antiquary, died in 1730.

CHAMILLART, Michael de, an excellent billiard player, was promoted to high offices of state by Lewis XIV., and died in 1721.

CHAMOUSSET, Charles Humbert Pierron de, judge in the parliament of Paris, a man of universal benevolence, died in 1773.

CHAMPAGNE, Philip of, a celebrated painter, born at Brussels, in 1602, died in 1674.

CHAMPAGNE, John Baptiste de, born at Brussels, was professor of the academy of painting at Paris, and died in 1683.

CHAMPEAUX, or CAMPELLENSIS, William de, professor of philosophy at Paris, where Abelard was his pupil, died in 1121.

CHAMPFORT, N., a Parisian, devoted to literature, and a friend of the revolution. He destroyed himself in 1794.

CHAMPIER, Synphorien, Camperius, or Campegnis, a Frenchman, and physician to the duke of Lorraine, died in 1540.

CHAMPION, Joseph, an Englishman, eminent as a penman.

CHAMPLAIN, Samuel de, a Frenchman, sent on a voyage of discovery to America by Henry IV. An American lake bears his name. He died in 1635.

CHAMPMESLE, Mary Desmares de, a French actress of celebrity, died in 1698.

CHAPMAN, George, a schoolmaster at Dalkeith, and afterwards at Dumfries, author of several works on education, died in 1806.

CHAPPE D'AUTEROUCHE, John. Vid. AU-TEROCHE.

CHAPONE, Hester, an elegant English poet, and moral writer, born of a respectable Northamptonshire family, of the name of Mulso, Oct. 27, 1727. Her pen was always directed to moral purposes; and virtue, far from showing repulsive austerity in her representations, was distinguished by endearing graces. She will long be distinguished on the rolls of literature for her "Letters on the Improvement of the Mind, addressed to a Young Lady," 2 vols. 12mo, 1773, and "Miscellanies in Prose and Verse," 12mo, 1775. Mrs. C. died at Hadley, in Middlesex, Dec. 25, 1801.

CHAPPEL, William, a very learned and pious divine, bishop of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, in Ireland, born at Lexington, in Nottinghamshire, in 1582, died 1649. He published, the year before his death, "Methodus Concionandi;" that is, "The Method of Preaching;" which, for its usefulness, was translated into English. To this bishop, among other divines, has been ascribed the composition of that excellent book, "The Whole Duty of Man."

CHAPUZEAU, Samuel, a native of Geneva, and preceptor to William III., of England, died in 1701.

CHARAS, Moses, a physician, at Paris, well known as an author, died in 1698.

CHARDIN, Sir John, a famous voyager, was born at Paris, in 1643, but went to London upon the revocation of the edict of Nantes, in 1685. He went to Persia and the East Indies, and trafficked in jewels. Charles II., king of England, conferred upon him the honour of knighthood. He died at London, in 1713. His "Voyages" have always been much esteemed, as very curious and very true.

CHARELON, a Jesuit missionary, employed many years among the Indians in Michigan.

CHARENTON, Joseph Nicholas, a French Jesuit, and missionary to China, for 15 years; he died in 1735.

CHARES, a Grecian statuery, who immortalized himself by the Colossus of the Sun, at Rhodes, which has been reckoned one of the seven wonders of the world.

CHARETTE DE LA COINTRE, Francis Athanasius de, a French royalist, who signalized himself by an able resistance against the republican forces, in la Vendee; he was taken and shot in 1796.

CHARITON, a native of Cyprus, and an author, in the 4th century.

CHARKE, Charlotte, was youngest daughter of Colley Cibber, the actor, and afterwards poet laureat. At eight years old she was put to school, but had an education more suitable to a boy than a girl; and as she grew up, followed the same plan, being more frequently in the stable than in the bedchamber, and mistress of the currycomb, though ignorant of the needle. Her adventures during the remainder of her life, are nothing but one variegated scene of distresses, of a kind which no one can be a stranger to, who has either seen, or read accounts of those most wretched of all human beings, the members of a mere strolling company of actors. In 1755 she went to London, where she published the "Narrative of her own Life," to which death put a period, and at the same time, to one continued course of misery, the inevitable consequence of folly, imprudence, and absurdity, in 1759.

CHARLEMAGNE, or CHARLES I., king of France by succession, and emperor of the West by conquest, in 800, (which laid the foundation of the dynasty of the Western Franks, who ruled the empire 472 years, till the time of Rodolphus Auspergensis, the founder of the house of Austria.) Charlemagne was as illustrious in the cabinet as in the field; and, though he could not write his name, was the patron of men of letters, the restorer of learning, and a wise legislator; he wanted only the virtue of humanity to render him the most accomplished of men; but when we read of his beheading 4500 Saxons, solely for their loyalty to their prince, in opposing his conquests, we cannot think he merits the extravagant encomiums bestowed on him by some historians. He died in 814, in the 74th year of his age.

CHARLES II., surnamed the Bald, succeeded to the French crown in 840, was elected emperor by the pope and the Roman people, in 875, and poisoned in 877.

CHARLES III., or Simple, succeeded to the throne of France in 893. He was unequal to the government of a kingdom, and at last died in prison, in 929.

CHARLES IV., the Fair, succeeded to the French throne in 1322, and died in 1328.

CHARLES V., or Wise, succeeded to the throne of France in 1364. By his abilities and courage, the English were dispossessed of nearly all their provinces in France. He died in 1380.

CHARLES VI., succeeded to the French throne in 1380. His inexperience, and a civil war, weakened the kingdom, and the defeat at Agincourt, completed his misfortunes. He died in 1422.

CHARLES VII., surnamed the Victorious, succeeded to the throne in 1422. By his great vigour and activity, he drove the English from his kingdom, and died in 1461.

CHARLES VIII., called the Affable, ascended the throne in 1483. After having conquered Italy, and being crowned king of Naples, and emperor of Constantinople, he was driven into France, and died in 1498.

CHARLES IX., ascended the throne in 1560. During his reign, the fatal massacre of St. Bartholomew took place, which renders his name odious. He died in 1574.

CHARLES, the Fat, son of Lewis, the German, was elected king of Italy, and emperor, in 891. By the intrigues of his prime minister, he was driven from his throne, and died in 888.

CHARLES IV., grandson of the emperor Henry VII., ascended the imperial throne, in 1347. He founded the university of Prague, and died in 1378.

CHARLES V., eldest son of Philip, of Austria, ascended the Spanish throne in 1516, and was elected emperor of Germany, in 1518. He resigned his crowns in 1555, retired to a cloister and died in 1558.

CHARLES VI. was proclaimed king of Spain, in 1703, and elected emperor of Germany, in 1711. A great part of his reign was spent in war; he died in 1740.

CHARLES VII., elector of Bavaria, in 1726; he contested the imperial throne with Maria Theresa, and died in 1745.

CHARLES I., king of Spain, was Charles V., emperor of Germany.

CHARLES II., son and successor of Philip IV., of Spain, in 1665, was the last of the eldest branch of Austrian princes who reigned in Spain. He died in 1700.

CHARLES III., king of Spain, son of Philip V., was a monarch of ability and virtue; he died in 1789.

CHARLES I., king of England, ascended the throne in 1625. His reign was turbulent, and in the civil wars he was defeated. He was at last tried before a self-created court of his subjects, and condemned, and executed, in 1648.

CHARLES II., king of England, was in Holland at the time of the death of Charles I., and was restored to the throne in 1660. He wanted the virtues of his father, and was licentious and immoral; he died in 1685.

CHARLES GUSTAVUS X. ascended the throne of Sweden in 1654. He was a prudent and warlike monarch, and died in 1660.

CHARLES XI., son and successor of the preceding, was successful in war, and respected as a just prince; he died in 1697.

CHARLES XII., of Sweden, was born June 27, 1682, and set off in the style, and with the spirit of Alexander the Great. His preceptor asking him what he thought of that hero? "I think," says Charles, "that I should choose to be like him." "Aye, but," said the tutor, "he only lived 32 years." "Oh," answered the prince, "that is long enough, when a man has conquered kingdoms." Impatient to reign, he caused himself to be declared of age at 15; and, at his coronation, he snatched the crown from the archbishop of Upsal, and put it upon his head himself, with an air of grandeur that struck the people. His whole reign was one continued scene of warfare, and concluded at the siege of Frederickshall, in Norway, December, 1718; where, as he was visiting the works of his engineers by star-light, he was struck upon the head by a ball, and killed upon the spot. He might be called the Quixotte of the north, carrying all the virtues of the hero to an excess, which made them as dangerous and pernicious as the opposite vices. His firmness was obstinacy; his liberality, profusion; his courage, rashness; his severity, cruelty; he was, in his last years, less a king than a tyrant, and more a soldier than a hero. The projects of Alexander, whom he affected to imitate, were not only wise, but wisely executed: whereas Charles, knowing nothing but arms, never regulated any of his movements by policy, according to the exigencies of the conjuncture; but suffered himself to be borne along by a brutal courage, which often led him into difficulties, and at length occasioned his death. He was, in short, a singular, rather than a great man.

CHARLES I., king of Naples, and brother to the king of France, was an able and politic prince; he died in 1285.

CHARLES II., king of Naples, surnamed the Lame, employed himself in promoting peace and commerce, and the practice of religion among his people; he died in 1309.

CHARLES III., king of Naples, grandson of the preceding, obtained the kingdom in 1380, and died in 1386.

CHARLES II., king of Navarre, surnamed the Bad. Cruelty and artifice marked his conduct; he died in 1387.

CHARLES MARTEL, son of Pepin Heristal, and duke of Austrasia, conquered France, defeated and slew 375,000 of the Saracens, and died in 741.

CHARLES, duke of Burgundy, surnamed the Warrior, was generally successful, but at last slain, in 1477.

CHARLES, count of Flanders, in 1119. He was benevolent and virtuous, but was slain in 1124.

CHARLES I., duke of Lorraine, claimed the French crown, but was defeated, and died in 994.

CHARLES II., duke of Lorraine, a prudent and warlike prince, died in 1439.

CHARLES IV., duke of Lorraine, was fond of military glory, but lost his dominions, and died in 1675.

CHARLES V., of Lorraine, nephew of Charles IV., entered the service of the emperor Leopold, and acquired great military renown; he died in 1690.

CHARLES ALEXANDER, of Lorraine, grandson of Charles V., was general of the imperial armies, and a brave warrior; he died in 1780.

CHARLES EMANUEL, duke of Savoy, surnamed the Great, an ambitious prince, and brave warrior, died in 1630.

CHARLES EMANUEL II., son of Victor Amadeus I., and duke of Savoy, in 1638. He was an amiable and benevolent prince, and died in 1675.

CHARLES EMANUEL III., son of Victor Amadeus II., duke of Savoy, in 1730. He was a good prince, and died in 1773.

CHARLES EDWARD, grandson of James II., of England, known as the Pretender, landed in Scotland, in 1745, and defeated the British troops, but was afterwards defeated, and returned to France, where he died in 1788.

CARLETON, Walter, an English physician of eminence, died in 1707.

CHARLEVAL, Charles Facon de Rey, lord of, a French author of genius, who died in 1693.

CHARLEVOIX, Peter Francis Xavier de, a learned Jesuit, celebrated for his travels, died in 1761.

CHARMS, a physician at Rome, under Nero. CHARNACE, Hercules Girard, baron de, sent ambassador to Sweden by Richelieu, died in 1637.

CHARNOCK, John, born November 23, 1756, entered a gentleman-commoner of Merton College, Oxford, 1774, died in the King's Bench prison, May 16, 1807; leaving behind him, among other works, "Biographia Navalis;" 6 vols. 8vo. 1794, &c.; "A History of Marine Architecture," 3 vols. 4to., 1802; and a "Life of Lord Nelson," 1806. His father, who was a man of large fortune, totally forsook him in his distress; but buried him, with great ceremony and expense, at Lea, near Blackheath, in the same grave which, within two years after, received both his father and mother.

CHARNOCK, Stephen, an eminent divine among the presbyterians and independents, who published his works in 2 vols. folio, and died in 1680.

CHARNOIS, N. Vacheur de, the author of some popular romances, was barbarously murdered at Paris, in 1792.

CHARONDAS, a legislator, born in Sicily, flourished about 400 B. C.

CHARPENTIER, Francis, dean of the French academy, a man of learning and abilities, died in 1702.

CHARRIER, Mark Anthony, a French lawyer, and member of the states general, in 1789, who boldly denounced all innovations. He was condemned to death, in 1794.

CHARRON, Peter, born at Paris, in 1541, died in 1603. He wrote a book called "Les Trois Vérités," The Three Truths, which he published in 1594. These three truths are the following: 1. That there is a God and a true religion; 2. That of all religions the Christian is the only true one; 3. That of all the Christian communions, the Roman Catholic is the only true church. His celebrity, however, was established by his "Books of Wisdom," which have been twice translated into English.

CHARTIER, Alan, secretary to Charles VI. and VII., of France, acquired great celebrity as a writer, and died in 1419.

CHARTIER, Rene, a physician to the French king, and editor of the works of Hippocrates and Galen, in the 17th century.

CHASSENEX, Bartholomew de, president of the parliament of Provence, who boldly opposed the prosecution of the Vaudois. He was poisoned in 1511.

CHASTEL, John, the son of a woollen-drafter at Paris, who attempted to kill Henry IV., of France, December 27, 1594. This prince, having taken a journey to the borders of Artois, had returned to Paris that very day. He was in the chamber of his mistress, Gabriella d'Estree, who lived then at the hotel de Bouchage; and as he was going to embrace Montigni, he was struck in his under lip with a knife, which broke a tooth in his mouth. John Chastel, who gave him that blow, and designed to cut his throat, was then but 18 or 19 years old. He had no sooner given it, than he dropped his knife, and hid himself in the crowd. Every body stood amazed, being at a loss to know who the villain was; and he was likely to escape; but somebody happened to cast an eye upon him, and he was taken at a venture; the wildness of his look, as it is said, betraying him. He was sentenced to death by a decree of the parliament, December 29, 1594, and suffered the same day by the light of flambeaux. Being drawn on a sledge to la Place de Grève, (a place of execution like Tyburn, in England,) he there had the flesh of his arms and thighs torn off with red-hot pincers; and his right hand, in which he held the knife wherewith he endeavoured to commit the murder, cut off; afterwards his body was drawn and quartered by four horses pulling several ways, and his members and corpse thrown into the fire, and burnt to ashes, and the ashes thrown up into the air.

CHASTELAIN, Claude, a French ecclesiastic and author, died in 1712.

CHASTELLUX, Francis John, marquis de, field marshal of France, served in America, in the war of the revolution, was known as an author, and died in 1783.

CHAT DE RASTIGNAC, Raymond de, a brave French officer, killed in 1696.

CHAT DE RASTIGNAC, Lewis James de, of the same family was bishop of Tours; he died in 1750.

CHATEAUBRIAND, Frances de Foix, wife of the count of that name, and mistress of Francis I.; she died in 1537.

CHATEAU BRUN, John Baptist Vivien de, of Angoulême, eminent as a dramatic writer, died in 1775.

CHATEAURENARD, Francis Lewis Rousset, count de, an admiral of France, distinguished for his courage, died in 1716.

CHATEL, Tammequy de, a French general, was intrusted with important embassies, and died in 1449.

CHATEL, Peter du, or CASTELLANUS, educated at Dijon, was a learned Grecian scholar; he died in 1552.

CHATEL, Francis du, a Dutch painter, of the 17th century.

CHATELARD, N. du, a French gentleman, passionately fond of Mary, queen of Scots.

CHATELET, Paul du Hay, lord de, a man of integrity, and an author, died in 1636.

CHATELET, Gabrielle Emilie, marchioness de, a most illustrious French writer on philosophical subjects, in which she is said to have rivalled Leibnitz and Newton. She wrote "Institutes of Physics," a work considered as a masterpiece of eloquence and reasoning, being a commentary on Leibnitz's philosophy. This learned lady was born in Picardy, in 1703, and died in 1749.

CHATTERTON, Thomas, a most astonishing genius, born at Bristol, November 20, 1752, and educated at a charity-school on St. Augustin's Back, where nothing more was taught than reading, writing, and accounts. At 14 years of age, he was articled clerk to an attorney at Bristol, with whom he continued about three years; and, though his education was thus confined, he discovered an early turn toward poetry and English antiquities, and particularly toward heraldry. In April, 1770, he left Bristol, disgusted with his profession, and irconcilable to the line of life in which he was placed; and going to London, in hopes of advancing his fortune by his pen, he sank at once from the sublimity of his views to an absolute dependence on the patronage of book-sellers. He continued to write incessantly in various periodical publications; but all these exertions of his genius brought in so little profit, that he was soon reduced to the extremest indigence; so that, at last, oppressed with poverty and disease, in a fit of despair, he put a period to his existence, August, 1770, with a dose of poison. In 1777, were published, in one vol. 8vo., "Poems supposed to have been written at Bristol, by Thomas Rowley and others, in the 15th century; the greatest part now first published from the most authentic copies, with an engraved specimen of one of the MSS. To which are added, a preface, an introductory account of the several pieces, and a glossary." And, in 1778, were published, in one vol. 8vo., "Miscellanies in Prose and Verse, by Thomas Chatterton, the supposed author of the Poems published under the names of Rowley, &c." Concerning the authenticity of the poems under the name of Rowley, (that is, whether they were really written by a person of that name, or were only, what they are now generally supposed to be, the forgeries of Chatterton,) there long existed a mighty controversy; and the war among the critics has even now scarcely subsided. An edition of Chatterton's Poems was published by Mr. Southey, 3 vols. 8vo., 1803.

CHAUCER, Geoffrey, one of the greatest, as well as most ancient of the English poets, was born in London, in 1328. He was educated at Cambridge, where he resided in his 18th year, when he wrote "the Court of Love," and some other pieces. His distinguished accomplishments, both of body and mind, gained him the friendship of many persons of distinction, by whom he was drawn to court; and, in 1368, he was made gentleman of the king's privy chamber. In 1382, having given offence to the clergy, by adopting many of Wickliffe's tenets, he was obliged to quit the kingdom; and in Hainault, France, and Zealand, he wrote most of his books. His necessities forcing him to return to England, he was discovered, seized, and sent to prison. But, upon discovering all he knew of the late transactions in the city, he was discharged. This confession brought upon him a heavy load of calumny. To give vent to his sorrow at this time, he wrote his "Testament of Love," in imitation of "Boethius de Consolatione Philosophicæ," and not long after, his admirable "Treatise on the Astrolabe." He died October 25, 1400, and was buried at Westminster Abbey, in the great south cross aisle. His "Canterbury Tales," the most considerable of his works, have been incomparably well published by Mr. Tyrwhitt.

CHAUMETTE, Peter Gaspard: after guiding, with Hebert, the sanguinary multitude of Paris he was guillotined by Robespierre, in 1794.

CHAUMONT, Joseph, an Italian Jesuit, missionary among the Indians in North America.

CHEMINAIS, Timoleon, a celebrated preacher among the French Jesuits, died in 1690.

CHEMNITZ, Martin, a Lutheran divine, born at Britzen, in Brandenburg, in 1522. His "Examination of the council of Trent" has been considered a very masterly performance.

CHEMNITZ, Borelaus Philip, a German, counsellor of state to the queen of Sweden, and an author. He died in 1678.

CHERILUS, a Greek poet, intimate with Herodotus.

CHERON, Elizabeth Sophia, daughter of a French painter, who obtained celebrity by her pencil, and died in 1711.

CHERON, Lewis, brother of the preceding, and of the same profession, died in 1713.

CHERUBIN, Father, a capuchin friar of the 17th century, was a mathematician and philosopher.

CHESELDEN, William, an eminent English surgeon and anatomist, born at Somerby, in Leicestershire, 1688. So early as the age of 22, he read lectures in anatomy: of which the "Syllabus" was first printed in 1711, and afterwards annexed to his "Anatomy of the Human Body," printed first in 1713, 8vo. But what he more particularly attended to, was the operation of cutting for the stone. In 1722, he gained great reputation in this way; and the year after, published his "Treatise on the High Operation for the Stone." In 1728, he immortalized himself by giving sight to a lad near 14 years old, who had been totally blind from his birth, by the closure of the iris, without the least opening for light in the pupil; and drew up a particular account of the whole process, with the various observations made by the patient after he had recovered his sight. He died April 10, 1752.

CHESNE, Joseph du, a French physician and writer on chymistry, died 1609. Besides his professional works, he was author of two books in verse called "The Folly of the World," and "The Great Mirror of the World."

CHESNE, Andre du, called the father of French history, was born in Touraine, 1584, and crushed to death by a cart, as he was passing from Paris to his country house, in 1640. His principal work was, "Un Recueil des Historiens de France."

CHEW, Benjamin, a native of Maryland, was chief Judge of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, and afterwards president of the high court of appeals in that state; he died in 1810.

CHEYNE, George, a celebrated physician, born of a respectable family, in Scotland, 1671, and educated at Edinburgh, under Dr. Pitcairn. He passed his youth in close study and great abstemiousness; but coming to London when about 30, and finding the bottle companions, the younger gentry and free-livers, to be the most easy of access, and most susceptible of friendship, he changed his course with a view to force a trade, till he at length grew excessively fat, short-breathed, lethargic, and listless, and swelled to such an enormous size, that he exceeded 32 stone in weight. Having tried all the power of medicine in vain, he resolved at last to use a milk and vegetable diet, which removed his complaints. His size was reduced to almost one third; he recovered his strength, activity, and cheerfulness, with the free and perfect use of his faculties, and by a regular observance of this regimen reached a mature period; for he died at Bath, in his 72d year. He wrote among other things, "An Essay on Health and Long Life;" "An Essay on the true Nature and due Method of treating the Gout;" "A new Theory of acute and slow continued Fevers;" "Philosophical Principles of Religion, Natural and Revealed, in two parts;" "The English Malady; or a Treatise of Nervous Diseases of all kinds, in three parts."

CHEYNEL, Francis, a non-conformist physician and controversial writer; he wrote chiefly against Chillingworth: he was born at Oxford, 1608, and died 1665.

CHRISTIERN V., succeeded to the throne in 1670; he was a warlike prince, and died in 1695.

CHRISTINA, queen of Sweden, and daughter of Gustavus Adolphus the Great, born Dec. 3, 1626. She succeeded him in the government of the kingdom, in 1633, and ruled it with great wisdom and prudence, till 1654, when she resigned it in favour of her cousin, Charles Gustavus. She then changed her religion for that of the Romish church, and retired to Rome; yet upon the death of Charles Gustavus, which happened in 1660, she returned to Sweden, with an intent to resume the government. But this could not be admitted, because, by the laws and constitution of the land, Roman Catholics are excluded from the crown. She died at Rome, in 1689. She was a woman of uncommon parts, and as uncommon learning; for she understood several languages, and was a perfect mistress in the belles lettres.

CHRISTOPHERSON, John, an English prelate, and master of Trinity College, Cambridge, in queen Mary's reign.

CHRYSIPPUS, a celebrated stoic philosopher, born at Soli, a city of Cilicia, wrote a great many books, above 700, as we are told, several of which belonged to logic. He died in the 143d Olympiad; and had a monument erected to him among those of the illustrious Athenians.

CHRYSOLORAS, Eusebius, learned Greek, ambassador to England, from John Palæologus, died in 1415.

CHRYSOSTOM, John, so called from his eloquence, was born at Antioch, of a noble family, about 334, consecrated bishop of Constantinople, in 398, and died 407. The works of this father are very voluminous.

CHUBB, Thomas, born at East Harnham, near Salisbury, Wilts, 1679. He was bred a glover, but became tolerably versed in mathematics, geography, and many other branches of science. But divinity above all was his favourite study; and it is said, that a little society was formed at Salisbury, under the management and direction of Chubb, for the purpose of debating upon religious subjects. Here the Scriptures are reported to have been read under the guidance of some commentator; and every man delivered his sentiments upon all points freely, and without reserve. About this time, the controversy upon the Trinity, was carried on very warmly between Clarke and Waterland; and, falling under the cognizance of this theological assembly, Chubb, at the request of the members, drew up and arranged his sentiments about it, in a kind of dissertation; which, after it had undergone some correction, appeared to the world under the title of "The Supremacy of the Father asserted, &c.," and gained him great celebrity. He died at Salisbury, in his 68th year, leaving behind him 2 vols. of posthumous works, which he calls "A Farewell to his Reader;" from which we may fairly form this judgment of his opinions: "that he had little or no belief of revelation; indeed he plainly rejects the Jewish revelation, and consequently the Christian which is founded upon it; that he disclaims a future judgment, and is very uncertain as to any future state of existence; that a particular Providence is not deducible from the phenomena of the world, and, therefore, that prayer cannot be proved a duty," &c. &c.

CHUDLEIGH, Lady Mary, a poet and miscellaneous writer, born at Winsloder, in Devonshire, in 1656, died 1710.

CHURCH, Benjamin, distinguished by his exploits in the Indian wars, in New England. He commanded the party that killed the famous Philip, and died in 1718.

CHURCHILL, Sir Winston, known as the father of the great duke of Marlborough, died 1688.

CHURCHILL, John, duke of Marlborough, and Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, was eldest son of Sir Winston Churchill, and born at Asic, in Devonshire, on midsummer-day, in 1650. As a commander-in-chief of the British army, he stands unrivalled; but the limited nature of our work, will not allow us to relate all the military acts in which he was engaged: it is sufficient to say, that, numerous as they were, they were all successful. He died June 16, 1722, at Windsor Lodge, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

CHURCHILL, Charles, an English poet, and celebrated satirist, born in London, in 1731, and bred to the church. His first poem was "The Rosciad," which by the justness of its remarks, and particularly by the severity of its satire, greatly excited the public curiosity. His next performance was "An Apology to the Critical Reviewers;" a performance much applauded also, and equally satirical with the former. But what fame he got by these productions, which was indeed very great and deserved, he lost by his morals; and while his writings amused the town, his actions disgusted it. Drunk with success, he now quitted his wife, and, resigning his gown, with all clerical functions, commenced a man of the town, and indulged in all the gayeties, and even vices of it. His next poem was entitled "Night;" and after that, he published "The Ghost." Dr. Johnson, the author of the "Rambler," had, it seems, spoken lightly of Churchill's productions: in this poem, he has described Johnson under the character of Ponsopo, and the description is allowed to have merit. The poems, "Night," and "The Ghost," had not the rapid sale expected by the author; but, "The Prophecy of Famine," which succeeded, produced him again in all his lustre. He afterwards published his "Epistle to Hogarth," "Gotham," "Independence," "The Times," &c., and died at Boulogne, Nov. 5, 1764.

CHURCHMAN, John, a quaker of Maryland, distinguished for his philosophical researches, died in 1805.

CHURCHYARD, Thomas, an English poet, principally known by "The Worthiness of Wales," a book, in its time, greatly esteemed, and reprinted in 1776. He died about 1570.

CHYTRÆUS, David, divinity professor, at Bostock, died in 1600.

CIACONIUS, Alphonsus, of Baeca, in Andalusia, styled patriarch of Alexandria, died at Rome, in 1599.

CIACONIUS, Peter, a critic of Toledo, who died at Rome in 1581.

CIAMPELLI, Augustine, of Florence, an eminent historical painter, died in 1640.

CIAMPINI, John Justin, a learned Italian author, died in 1688.

CIBBER, Colley, poet laureat to George II., comedian, and dramatic writer, born in London, Nov. 6, 1671. "The Careless Husband," is reckoned his best play, and was acted in 1704, with great and deserved success. But of all his plays, none was of more importance to himself, than his comedy called "The Nonjuror," which was acted in 1717, and dedicated to the king; for when he presented it to him, that monarch ordered him 200*l.*; and the merit of it, as he himself confesses, made him poet laureat in 1730. The same year he quitted the stage, though he did not die till Dec. 1757. He did not succeed in writing tragedy, any more than he did in acting it; nor in his laureate capacity; his odes not partaking of that genius and spirit, which he has shown in his comedies.

CIBBER, Theophilus, a comedian, and son of the preceding, was born in 1703. After leading a life of unbounded extravagance, he was, in the winter of 1757, engaged by Mr. Sheridan to go over to Dublin, and perished by shipwreck on his passage. His name appears to "The Lives of the Poets of Great Britain and Ireland," 1753 5 vols. 8mo; the real compiler, however, was Mr. Robert Shiels, an amanuensis of Dr. Johnson's. In the dramatic way, he ~~has~~ altered for the stage, three pieces of other authors, and produced one of his own.

CIBBER, Susannah Maria, who for several years was reckoned not only the best actress in England, but supposed by many to excel the celebrated mademoiselle Clairon, of the continent, was the daughter of an eminent upholsterer in Covent Garden, and sister to Dr. Thomas Augustin Arne, celebrated for his taste in musical composition. Her first appearance on the stage was as a singer, in which light, the sweetness of her voice rendered her very conspicuous. In April, 1734, she married Theophilus Cibber; who, luxurious, prodigal, and rapacious after money to gratify a thousand calls from passion or vanity, soon resolved to make a sacrifice of what every honest man holds dear, the honour of his wife. With this view, therefore, he cemented the closest friendship with a gentleman whom he introduced to his wife, recommended to her, gave them frequent interviews, and even saw them put, as if by accident, in the same bed. All this appeared upon the trial afterwards commenced by himself for criminal correspondence, wherein he laid his damages at 5000*l.* How the jury looked upon this affair, may be seen by their verdict, which only gave the plaintiff 10*l.* damages: a sum not sufficient to reimburse him a fortieth part of his expenses. Mrs. Cibber thenceforth resided apart from her contemptible consort, till she died, January 30, 1766.

CICERO, Marcus Tullius, one of the greatest men of antiquity, whether we consider him as an orator, a statesman, or a philosopher, was born at Arpinum, a city anciently of the Samnites, but now a part of the kingdom of Naples, Jan. 3, in the 647th year of Rome, about 107 B. C. In his very active life, the most striking incident is his detection of the conspiracy of Catiline and his accomplices, for the subversion of the commonwealth, during Cicero's consulship. For his conduct in this affair, he was honoured with the glorious title of "Pater Patriæ," Father of his country. He was assassinated on the 7th of December, about ten days from the settlement of the triumvirate, after he had lived 63 years 11 months and five days. His works will ever be the standard of true eloquence, and his philosophical treatises are an invaluable treasure of good sense, virtue, and true philosophy. See FULVIA.

CICERO, Quintus Tullius, brother of the orator, was assassinated under the triumvirs.

CID, The, a Spanish hero, whose real name was Don Rodrigo Dias de Bivar, one of the greatest generals of the 11th century, was the model of warriors and knights of his time. He signalled his valour against the Moors of Spain, from whom he took Valencia, and other important places, and vanquished them in many battles. He lived in the reign of Alfonso VI, king of Leon and Castile; who, instead of rewarding him for his great services, persecuted him. He died at Valencia, in 1099. (Cid, in the Arabic, signifies lord.)

CIGALA, John Michael, an impostor, who appeared at Paris, in 1670, as an Ottoman prince.

CIGNANI, Carlo, an Italian painter, died in 1719.

CIMAROSA, Dominico, a most celebrated music composer, born at Capodi Monti, in Naples, died at Venice, Jan. 11, 1801. A persecution that he underwent at Naples for his political opinions, is supposed to have shortened his days.

CIMON, an Athenian general, famous for defeating the Persians. He died 449 B. C.

CINCINNATUS, Lucius Quintus, the Roman dictator, taken from the plough, to be advanced to the dignity of consul, in which office he restored public tranquillity, and then returned to his rural employments. Being called forth a second time, to be dictator, he conquered the enemies of Rome, and, refusing all rewards, retired again to his farm, after he had been dictator only sixteen days: the same circumstance occurred once more in the 80th year of his age. He was born 456, and died 376 B. C.

CINCIUS ALIMENTUS, Lucius, author of a history of the wars of Annibal, &c.

CINNA, Lucius Cornelius, a Roman consul, about 87 B. C.

CINNAMUS, John, a Greek author, in the service of the emperor Manuel Comnenus.

CINO DU PISTOIA, or DE SIGIBULDI, known as a lawyer and senator of Rome, died in 1336.

CINQ MARS, Henry Coissier, marquis of, was a marshal of France, and the favourite of Lewis XIII., but was ungrateful, and lost his head in 1642.

CIOPANI, Hercules, an Italian critic, and author of a commentary on the works of Ovid, in 1578.

CIPRIANI, or CYPRIANI, John Baptist, a very eminent draftsman and painter. He was an Italian by birth, but most distinguished as an artist in London, where he became a royal academian, and died Dec. 15, 1785, aged 58. He was interred in Chelsea burial-ground, where is an elegant Latin inscription to his memory.

CIRANI, Elizabeth, an Italian lady, distinguished as a painter.

CIRIGNANO, Nicolo, called Pomeraneo, whose paintings are preserved in the churches of Rome; she died in 1588.

CIRILLO, Domine, a botanist, and professor of medicine at Naples, lost his life in 1795.

CLARK, Peter, a highly respectable minister, of Danvers, Massachusetts, published several sermons, and died in 1768.

CLARK, Jonas, a minister, of Lexington, Massachusetts; at a short distance from his door was shed the first blood in the war of the revolution; he died in 1805.

CLARK, Thomas, was born near Coventry; and at the age of 22, came to London, and obtained a porter's place. By rigid economy he saved enough to take a stick shop, at the corner of Exeter Change, in the Strand. After a time, he purchased the Menagerie, and used to give his customers a ticket to see the lions, &c. He extended his business to the cutlery, turnery, &c., till his own shops occupied one half of the Change, and he himself rented the whole. His dealings were marked with the utmost integrity; and he realized a fortune estimated at 300,000*l.* by the penurious nature of his habits. His own dinner, on six days in the week, never exceeded 6*d.*, and 2*d.* for a glass of gin and water. Though addicted, however, to the accumulation of money, it was by honourable means; and what appeared to others hard self-privation, was, probably, to him, who relished no higher pleasures, an enjoyment, as it was a second nature. Mr. Clark died at Pimlico, in his 80th year, September 6, 1816.

CLARKE, John, one of the first founders of Rhode Island, to which he was obliged to retire, on account of his religious sentiments, which, (being a baptist,) were at variance with those which prevailed in Massachusetts; he died in 1676.

He subsequently held various public trusts, and, at the time of his death, was first vice-president of the American Bible Society. His name is associated with those who fought and bled for American Independence; and in private life, with the most elevated virtues.

CLAUDE, a monk of the celestine order, in the 15th century.

CLAUDE of LORRAINE, a famous landscape painter, born in 1600. He was sent to school, but proving extremely dull and heavy, he was sent thence, and bound apprentice to a pastry-cook, with whom he served out his time. Afterwards he went with some young fellows to Rome, with a view of getting a livelihood there; but being unable to speak the language, and, withal, very ill-bred, nobody cared to set him to work. Chance brought him at length to Augustino Trasso, who hired him to pound his colours, clean his pallet and pencils, look after his house, dress his meat for him, and do all his household-drudgery; for Augustino kept no other servant. This master, hoping to make him serviceable to him in some of his greatest works, taught him by degrees the rules of perspective, and the elements of design. Claude at first did not know what to make of those principles of art; but being encouraged, and not failing in application, he came at length to understand them; then his soul enlarged itself apace, and he cultivated the art with wonderful eagerness. He removed his study to the banks of the Tyber, and into the open fields, where he would continue from morning to night, taking all his lessons from Nature herself; and by many years diligent imitation of that excellent mistress, he climbed to the highest step of perfection in landscape painting. His memory was so good, that he would paint with great accuracy, when he got home, what he had seen abroad. He has been universally admired for his invention, the delicacy of his colouring, and the charming variety and tenderness of his tints: for his artful distributions of the lights and shadows, for his wonderful conduct in the disposition of his figures, and for the harmony of his compositions. Claude was employed by Pope Urban VIII., and many of the Italian princes, in adorning their palaces. He died in 1682, and was buried at Rome.

CLAUDE, John, a French protestant, distinguished as an orator, and writer in defence of the protestant church, died in 1687. His son, Isaac Claude, published his works, settled at the Hague, and died in 1695.

CLAUDIANS, Claudius, a Latin poet flourished in the fourth century, under the emperor Theodosius, and his sons Arcadius and Honorius; the two latter of whom, at the senate's request, ordered a statue to be erected for him in Trajan's forum: on which was soon after placed the following epigram, in Greek:

"Rome and the Cæsars here his statue raise,
"Who Virgil's genius joined to Homer's lays."

CLAUDIUS I., successor to the emperor Caligula, much given to vice; he was poisoned, A. D. 54.

CLAUDIUS II., successor of Gallienus, emperor of Rome, died in 271. much lamented.

CLAUDIUS, Appius, progenitor of the Appian family at Rome, 504 B. C.

CLAUDIUS, Appius, son of the preceding, was consul at Rome, and severe in his discipline.

CLEAVER, William, prebendary of Westminster, afterwards bishop of Chester, Bangor, and St. Asaph's, died in 1815.

CLEANTHES, a stoic philosopher, disciple of Zeno, flourished at Athens, 240 B. C. He maintained himself in the day by working in the night; and being once questioned by the magistrates how he subsisted, he brought a woman for whom he kneaded bread, and a gardener for whom he drew water; and refused a present offered him by his judges, having a treasure, (as he said,) in his ability to labour.

CLEVE, Joseph, a Flemish painter, whose pieces were misers counting their treasures; he died in 1536.

CLEGHORN, George, a physician and medical writer, born at Granton, near Edinburgh, in 1710, died in 1789. His chief publication was on "The Diseases of Minorca."

CLEVELAND, John, a noted loyalist and popular poet in the reign of Charles I. He has, however, had the fate of those poets who, paying their court to temporary prejudices, have been at one time too much praised, and at another too much neglected. Contemporaneous with Milton, he was, in his time, exceedingly preferred before him; and Milton's own nephew says, that he was by some esteemed the best of the English poets. But Cleveland is now sunk into oblivion, while Milton's fame is universally diffused. He was born at Loughborough, Leicestershire, in 1613, and died in 1658.

CLEMANCIS, Nicholas, a Frenchman, rector of the university, who advocated a reform of the Romish church; he died in 1440.

He was born at Brussels, Nov. 21, 1753, and commenced his political career, under the minister count de Pergen, in 1772. Two years after, he was named minister plenipotentiary extraordinary to the court of Denmark; in 1777, to that of Prussia. He was recalled at the epoch of the war of the Bavarian succession, and was destined to negotiate the peace of Teschen; but a sickness which he had, prevented him. The same year he was named minister from Austria to Petersburg. On his return to Vienna, after the signing of the preliminaries of Leoben, he concluded, in 1797, the treaty of Campo Formio; and in the month of December, in the same year, the military convention, at Radstock with Buonaparte. After the conferences of Selz, he returned to Petersburg. On the 9th February, 1801, he concluded the peace of Luneville, and filled, in the month of December following, the places of directory minister of state and conferences, and vice-chancellor of state for foreign affairs.

COCKBURN, Catharine, born in 1679, gave marks of a genius for poetry before she had passed her childhood: and in her 17th year produced a tragedy called "Agnes de Castro," which was acted in 1695. In 1698 she brought a second tragedy upon the stage, and in 1701, a third tragedy and a comedy. But poetry and dramatic writing were the least of this lady's talents: she had a great and philosophic turn of mind, and wrote a defence of Locke's "Essay on the Human Understanding," against some remarks which had been made upon it at several times, by Dr. Burnet of the Charter-house. This defence was finished as early as Dec. 1701, when she was but 22 years of age: she died in 1749.

COCKER, Edward, deservedly esteemed one of the improvers of the arts of writing and arithmetic, died 1677, having published 14 copy-books engraved by his own hand; some books on Vulgar and Decimal Arithmetics; a small Dictionary; and a book of sentences for writing, called Cocker's Morals.

COINTE, Charles le, a distinguished French historian, died in 1611.

COITER, Volcherius, celebrated as a surgeon, physician, and anatomist, born at Groningen; died about 1600.

COKE, Sir Edward, lord chief justice of England, and one of the most eminent lawyers of that kingdom, was born at Mileham, in Norfolk, in 1549, and died at Stoke Pogey's in Bucks, Sept. 3, 1634. Sir Edward had great quickness of parts, deep penetration, a faithful memory, and a solid judgment. He committed every thing to writing with an industry beyond example, published a great deal, and niet with many changes of fortune; being sometimes in power, and sometimes in disgrace. He was, however, so excellent at making the best of a disgrace, that king James used to compare him to a cat, who always fell upon her legs. "His learned and laborious works on the laws," says Fuller, [Worthies, p. 251.] "will be admired by judicious posterity, while Fame has a trumpet left her or any breath to blow therein." His principal works are, "Reports of Cases during the most happy reign of the most illustrious and renowned queen Elizabeth, the fountain of all justice and the life of the law;" "A Book of Entries;" and his "Institutes."

COKE, Thomas, LL. D., a leading minister of the Wesleyan Methodists, a very zealous and able divine, and most excellent man, was born at Brecon, in Wales, educated at Jesus college, Oxford, and entered into orders in the Established Church. For the last 28 years he discharged, with unremitting diligence the extensive duties of general superintendent of the Methodist missions; which so warmly engaged his active and incessant energies, that he many times crossed the Atlantic, visiting the West India islands, and travelling through the United States. He gave to the world, among other works, a "Life of John Wesley," a "History of the West Indies," and a "Commentary on the Bible," in 6 large vols. 4to. Dr. Coke died May 3, 1814, on his voyage to India, with six missionaries, intended for Ceylon and Java.

COLBERT, John Baptist, marquis of Segne-lai, one of the greatest statesmen that France ever had, was born at Paris 1619, and died 1683. He was a pattern for all ministers of state; and every nation may wish itself blessed with a Colbert.

COLBERT, John Baptist, marquis of Torey, ambassador to Portugal, Denmark and England, secretary of state, &c., died at Paris, in 1746.

COLDEN, Cadwallader, a respectable physician, botanist and astronomer of Scotland, who first came to America in 1703, and again in 1716, and afterwards sustained several high political offices; published several learned works.

COLE, William, born at Adderbury, in Oxfordshire, about 1626, was the most famous boonist of his time. In 1656, he published "The Art of Simpling;" and in 1657, "Adam in Eden, or Nature's Paradise;" he died in 1662.

COLE, Thomas, a dissenting minister in England, and preceptor of the great Locke, died in 1697.

COLE, Thomas, a native of Gloucestershire, distinguished for making a curious collection of herbs, &c.

COLES, Elisha, born in Northamptonshire, in 1640, became one of the ushers of Merchant-Taylor's school, and wrote several useful and necessary books for the instruction of beginners, the principal of which were "The Complete English Schoolmaster," "The newest, plainest, and shortest Shorthand," "Nolens volens; or, you shall make Latin whether you will or no, containing the plainest directions for that purpose," "An English Dictionary," and "An English-Latin, and Latin-English Dictionary."

COLET, Dr. John, a learned English divine, born in London, in 1466, was the eldest son of Sir Henry Colet, kn., twice lord-mayor, who had, besides him, 21 children. Being dean of St. Paul's, and having a very plentiful estate without any near relations, (for numerous as his brethren were, they were all dead and buried,) he resolved, in the midst of life and health, to consecrate the whole property of it to some standing and perpetual benefaction. And this he performed by founding and endowing St. Paul's school, in London, of which he appointed William Lilly first master, in 1512. He ordained that there should be in this school a high master, a submaster, and a chaplain, who should teach gratis, 153 children, divided into 8 classes; and he endowed it with lands and houses, amounting then to 122l. 4s. 7d. halfpenny per annum, of which endowment he made the company of mercers trustees. He died September 16, 1519.

COLEY, Henry, an eminent astrologer, in England, died in 1690.

COLIGNI, Gaspard de, a celebrated admiral of France, who bravely supported the cause of the French protestants against the duke of Guise and his adherents; but after several victories gained over their persecutors, was at last basely assassinated by one of the domestics of the duke of Guise, in the beginning of the horrid massacre of Paris, on the eve of St. Bartholomew's day, 1572.

COLIGNI, Henrietta, daughter of a marshal of France of the same name, celebrated for her poetical productions, died in 1673.

COLLADO, Diego, a Spaniard, superintendent of the convents of the Philippines, and author of a work on the Japanese language.

COLLANGE, Gabriel de, a Huguenot, killed at the massacre of St. Bartholomews, in 1572.

COLLET, Peter, a French ecclesiastic, of Ternay, author of several works on theology and biography died in 1770.

COLLET, Philibert, a French advocate; author of treatises on excommunications, tythes, &c., died in 1718.

COLLETET, William, a French academician, who wrote for the theatres, under Richelieu, died in 1695.

COLLETON, James, was governor of the colony of South Carolina, about 1680.

COLLIER, Jeremy, an eminent English divine, born at Stow-qui, in Cambridgeshire, in 1650, died 1726. He published "Essays upon several moral subjects," which have passed through many editions. In 1698, he made an attempt to reform the stage, by publishing his "Short View of the Immorality and Profaneness of the English Stage," and other pamphlets. This engaged him in a controversy with the wits; and Congreve and Vanbrugh, whom, with many others, he had taken to task very severely, appeared openly against him. In this controversy with the stage, Collier exerted himself to the utmost advantage; his labours were attended with success, and actually produced repentance and amendment; for it is allowed on all hands, that the decorum which has been, for the most part, observed by the later writers of dramatic poetry, is entirely owing to the animadversions of Collier. Collier also published "An Ecclesiastical History of Great Britain," 2 vols. folio, which is written with great judgment; and translated Moretti's "Historical, Geographical, Genealogical, and Poetical Dictionary," in 4 vols. folio, a work of very great labour.

COLLINGS, John, an eminent textuary and critic, born in 1623, died 1690. He wrote many books of controversial and practical divinity, the most singular of which is "The Weaver's Pocket-book; or Weaving spiritualized," 8vo; and he had a principal hand in Matthew Poole's Annotations on the Bible.

COLLINGWOOD, Cuthbert, lord, a gallant British admiral, the intimate friend of the immortal Nelson, and his successor in the command of the Mediterranean fleet, which achieved the glorious victory of Trafalgar. His lordship was born in the county of Northumberland, in 1750; was created a peer of the realm, with a handsome annuity, Nov. 20, 1805, and died March 7, 1810, on board his flag ship, the Ville de Paris, off Minorca. He was a man of great, but unobtrusive merit. He commanded a 74 in the battle of the 1st of June, under lord Howe. In the great battle of Aboukir, he also bore a distinguished part; but it was reserved for the battle of Trafalgar to raise his fame to its highest pitch. His ship, the Royal Sovereign, in which he broke through the centre of the enemy's line, appeared, as viewed from the Victory, which led the other division, a blaze of fire. "See," said the great Nelson, on viewing it, "how that noble fellow, Collingwood, carries his ship into action. On the death of the former lamented hero, he succeeded to the command in chief. Since that great and memorable day, comprising an interval of about four years and a half, his lordship had never set foot upon land; being employed in the arduous and harassing duty of watching the Toulon fleet; so that he never took his seat in the house of peers, nor revisited his family or country, after his signal merits had obtained the distinguished honours and rewards that we have stated.

COLLINS, John, a mathematician and arithmetical writer, born at Wood Eaton, near Oxford, 1624, died 1683.

COLLINS, Anthony, an eminent writer on polemical subjects, and the friend and correspondent of the great Mr. Locke, was born at Heston, near Hounslow, in Middlesex, in 1676, and died 1729. He published his celebrated "Discourse of Free-thinking," in 8vo, 1713, and his "Discourse of the Grounds and Reasons of the Christian Religion," in 1724; and wrote, besides these, a great many books, which were warmly attacked by the orthodox writers of that time.

COLLINS, Arthur, author of "The Peerage of England," was the son of William Collins, esq. (gentleman usher to queen Catharine, in the year 1669,) and born in 1682. Having received a liberal education, and being from his youth much inclined to the study of antiquities, he conceived the arduous design of digesting a compendious account of the nobility of these kingdoms, whose genealogies had, till that time, been mouldering in private cabinets. The work had great merit; the rewards of his labour were, however, by no means adequate to the time he devoted to these researches. The other works known to be published by Mr. Collins, were "Sydney State Papers," "Historical Collections of the Families of Cavendish, Holles, Vere, Harley and Ogle," "The Life of Edward the Black Prince," and "Proceedings, Precedents, and Arguments on Claims and Controversies, concerning Baronies by Writ, and other Honours." He died in 1760, and was buried in the church of Battersea, Surrey. Whatever praise is due to Biographical literature in general, certainly belongs to one who dipped even into the funeral urn to stamp his labours with authenticity; and such is the credit they have obtained, that while there remains a spark of veneration for the exploits of the ancient English peerage, the volumes which record them, and bear Arthur Collins' name, will be consulted as the authentic history of that splendid and vital part of the British constitution. A grandson of Arthur (Colonel David Collins) has lately given to the world a very valuable "Account of the English Settlement of New South Wales," from its first establishment, in January, 1788, 4to, vol. 1, 1798, vol. 2, 1802; reprinted in 1 vol. in 1804. Colonel Collins died governor of the British settlement on Van Diemen's Land, March 24, 1810.

COLLINS, Samuel, an English physician, author of the present state of Russia, 1671.

COLLINS, William, an unfortunate, but admirable poet, was born at Chichester, in 1721, and died June 12, 1759. During his residence at Magdalen College, Oxford, he applied himself to poetry, and published the "Persian," or, as they have since been entitled, "Oriental Eclogues," with regard to which, it may justly be asserted, that in simplicity of description and expression, that in delicacy and softness of numbers, and in natural and unaffected tenderness, they are not to be equalled by any thing of the pastoral kind in the English language. About 1744, he suddenly left the university, and went to London, a literary adventurer. He designed many works; but his great fault was irresolution. He published proposals for a "History of the Revival of Learning; but probably not a page of the history was ever written. His uncle, Mr. Martin, a lieutenant-colonel, left him about 2000l. But man is not born for happiness; Collins, who, while he studied to live, felt no evil but poverty, no sooner lived to study, than his life was assailed by more dreadful calamities, disease and insanity; and he died a lunatic

An elegant monument has been erected to his memory in Chichester cathedral, with some beautiful lines inscribed from the pen of Mr. Hayley.

COLLINS, John, the ingenious author of "The Evening Brush," an oral entertainment of story, song, and sentiment, which he delivered many years with great success in all the principal towns of Great Britain and Ireland; he was born in 1742, and died at Birmingham, May 2, 1808.

COLLINS, John, a member of congress, and governor of Rhode-Island, died in 1795.

COLLINS, John, governor of Delaware, died in 1822.

COLLINS, Peter, F. R. S., an ingenious botanist and natural historian, died August 11, 1768.

COLLOT, Germain, a French surgeon, famous for his skill in lithotomy, died in 1656.

COLLOT D'HERBOIS, J. M., who, becoming a member of the French convention, was deputed to punish the revolt of the city of Lyons, and completely destroyed it, because, while a player, he had been lissed there; afterwards the companion of Robespierre; he died in confinement, at Cayenne.

COLLUTHUS, a priest of Alexandria, who maintained that God was not the author of the wicked: he was condemned as a heretic in 324.

COLMAN, George, an eminent dramatic writer, son of Thomas Colman, esq., British resident at Florence, was born at Florence, in 1732, and placed at a very early age in Westminster school. In 1758 he removed to Christ Church College, Oxford, and there took the degree of M. A. During his progress at Westminster, and while at College, he formed those literary connexions with whom he remained in friendship till they severally dropped off the stage of life. Lloyd, Churchill, Bonnel, Thornton, and other celebrated wits of a former day, were among the intimate associates of Mr. Colman, and gave eclat to his name, by noticing him in several of their compositions. Mr. C. was admitted into the society of Lincoln's-Inn, and was called to the bar, where he practised a very short time. About the year 1768, Mr. Beard, being incapable of bearing any longer the fatigues of a theatrical life, and wishing to retire from the management of Covent-Garden theatre, disposed of his property in that house, to Messrs. Colman, Harris, Powell, and Rutherford. These gentlemen were, for a short time, joint managers, but Mr. Colman appearing to desire a greater authority than the others, (except Mr. Powell) which they were unwilling to yield, he was induced, after a literary warfare, which was published, to dispose of his share. Soon after, Mr. Foote, then proprietor of the Hay-market theatre, having been induced to withdraw from the stage, disposed of his theatre to Mr. Colman, for a handsome annuity, which he did not long enjoy. On Mr. Foote's death, Mr. C. obtained the license. This gentleman was one of the chief writers in "The Connoisseur," and produced a variety of miscellaneous poems and papers, which he collected in three volumes. As a scholar, he holds a very respectable rank, as may be seen in his translations of Horace's "Art of Poetry," and of the "Comedies of Terence;" and his manners were as pleasing as his talents were respectable. Mr. C. died August 14, 1794.

COLMAN, Benjamin, an eminently pious and useful minister of Brattle-street church, Boston distinguished for his eloquence; he published many occasional sermons, and died in 1747.

COLOCCI, Angelo, an Italian, bishop of Nocera, and governor of Ascoli, distinguished for making a valuable collection of books, was author of Latin poems, and died in 1549.

COLOGNE, Peter de, a native of Ghent, the friend of Calvin and Beza, and a vindicator of the protestants.

COLOMBIERE, Claude de la, a famous Jesuit, very popular as a preacher, before James II., of England, inventor of "The Solemnity of the Heart of Jesus;" he died in 1682.

COLOMBES, or COLOMESIUS, Paul, a French protestant, who travelled through Europe, was author of several works, and died in 1662.

COLONI, Adam and Adrian, two dutch historical painters; the father died in 1665, and the son in 1701.

COLONNA, Fabio, a botanist, the first who gave names to the petals and leaves of flowers; the inventor of the pentachordon, and author of works on botany, &c.

COLONNA, Francisco Maria Pompeo, a Franciscan, author of the natural history of the universe; he perished by fire, in 1726.

COLONNA, Prospero, a distinguished warrior, under Charles VIII., of France, who conquered Naples, and then reconquered it for Austria; he died in 1523.

COLONNA, Pompeo, a restless ecclesiastic; the cause of many calamities to the Romans; by his ambition and intrigues for the popedom; he died in 1532.

COLONNA, Francis, a Venetian, who, being disappointed in love, wrote a curious book called Hyperotomachia di Polyphilo; he died in 1527.

COLONNA, Victoria, an Italian, author of some elegant poems, died in 1547.

CONANT, Dr. John, an eminent English divine, born Oct. 18, 1698, at Yeatonton, in Devonshire, was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, where his uncommon parts and learning soon acquired him the favour of Dr. John Prideaux, then rector of that college, who used to say of him, Conanti nihil est difficile; an excellent pun, which, however, would be lost in translation. Having taken his degrees, he was by the parliament constituted one of the assembly of divines, though he seldom or never sat with them. In 1647, he was chosen rector of his college; shortly after, Regius professor of divinity, and in 1657, made vice-chancellor of the university. In 1676, he was made archdeacon of Norwich, by bishop Reynolds, whose daughter he married in 1651; and in 1681, a prebendary of Worcester, by king Charles II. In 1686, he lost his sight; and in 1693, died, leaving behind him a number of admired sermons, of which, six volumes are in print. Dr. C. was buried in the church of All-Saints, Northampton, of which he had been vicar many years, and possessed a considerable estate in the neighbourhood.

He was preceptor to the infant duke of Parma, and composed for the use of his illustrious pupil "A Course of Study," which was afterwards published in 1776, in 16 vols. 12mo, and is deserving of great praise.

CONDORCET, John Anthony Nicholas Caritat, marquis de, a French geometrician and philosophical writer, and perpetual secretary of the academy of sciences at Paris, born at Ribemont, in Picardy, Sept. 17, 1743, died March 29, 1794. His mathematical writings are numerous and useful; but those on philosophical subjects strike at the root of religion, both natural and revealed.

CONDREN, Charles de, known for his influence in procuring a reconciliation between the king and the duke of Orleans, died in 1641.

CONFUCIUS, the celebrated Chinese philosopher, was born in the kingdom of Lu, which is at present the province of Chan Loug, 551 years before the birth of Christ. His extensive knowledge and great wisdom made him every where known: his integrity, and the splendour of his virtues made him beloved: kings were governed by his counsels, and the people revered him as a saint. He died in the 73d year of his age.

CONGREVE, William, an English dramatic writer and poet, born at Bardsey, near Leeds, in February, 1669. Though bred to the law, he found no charms in that profession, but turned his mind to polite literature, particularly to dramatic composition, and wrote a comedy called "The Old Bachelor," of which Dryden, to whom he was recommended, said "that he never saw such a first play in his life;" and in the performance, it met with such general applause, that Congreve was thenceforward considered as the prop of the declining stage. Having written four comedies, a tragedy, an oratorio, and a masque, and enjoyed some lucrative employments under government, he died Jan. 19, 1728-9, and was buried in Westminster-abbey.

CONNOR, Dr. Bernard, a medical and historical writer, born in Kerry, Ireland, in 1666, and died 1698. In 1694, he was appointed physician to John Sobieski, king of Poland; and while there, wrote "A History of Poland." Going afterwards to England, he read lectures at Cambridge, and in 1697, published "Evangelium Medici," &c., a work which gained him much reputation by its learning and ingenuity. His History of Poland is in 2 vols. 8vo.

CONTI, Francis Lewis de Bourbon, elected king of Poland, in 1697, but supplanted by the elector of Saxony, died in 1709.

CONTO-PERTANA, Don Joseph, a Portuguese poet of great merit; he died in 1735.

CONYBEARE, Dr. John, bishop of Bristol, born at Pinhoe, near Exeter, in 1692, died at Bath, in 1755. His "Defence of Revealed Religion," published in 1732, in answer to Tindal's "Christianity as old as the Creation," is an admirable work, and rendered eminent service to the church.

COOK, James, a celebrated English circumnavigator, was born at Marton, in Yorkshire, October 27, 1728, of poor parents, and apprenticed on board a vessel in the coal-trade. In the war of 1755, between England and France, he entered as a seaman in the royal navy. His behaviour in this station soon endeared him to the officers; and, on the 15th of May, 1759, he obtained a master's warrant for the Mercury, which was soon after employed in the famous siege of Quebec. During this siege, a difficult and dangerous service was to be performed; namely, to take soundings in the channel of the river St. Lawrence, directly in front of the French fortified camp. This he performed at the imminent hazard of his life, with which indeed he very narrowly escaped; he was successively rewarded with the appointments of master of the Northumberland man of war, marine surveyor of Newfoundland and Labrador, lieutenant in the navy, and commander of the Endeavour bark, fitted out for the purpose of taking some astronomical observations, and making discoveries in the Pacific Ocean. On this expedition, he sailed from Deptford, July 30, 1768, and returned to England, July 12, 1771. He sailed again, April 2, 1772, in the Resolution accompanied by captain Furueaux, in the Adventure, to determine the existence, or non-existence of a southern continent. By this voyage, from which he returned in 1773, the illusions of a Terra Australis Incognita to any purposes of commerce, colonization, or utility, were dispelled; but as a reward for captain Cook's important improvements for preserving the health of seamen, very happily manifested in this voyage, the Royal Society bestowed on him the medal of Sir Godfrey Copley. Another grand question was, the practicability of a northern passage to the Pacific Ocean; to determine which, captain Cook sailed, in 1776, on board the Resolution, accompanied by captain Clerke, in the Discovery. This voyage served to prove that there was no practicable passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans toward the north; but, on his return, it unfortunately happened, that our navigator was killed in an affray with the natives of Owhyhee, one of the Sandwich isles, February 14, 1779. His death was universally regretted, not only in Great Britain, but throughout all Europe, where his great merits and public services were known.

COOKE, Sir Anthony, preceptor to Edward VI., born at Gidding Hall, in Essex, in 1506, died in 1576. He was a man of singular piety and goodness, and of uncommon prudence in the management of his family. Knowing that women are as capable of learning as men, he instilled that into his daughters at night, which he had taught the prince in the day. He was remarkably happy in these daughters; for they were learned above their sex in Greek and Latin, and were equally distinguished by their virtue, piety, and good fortune. Several witty and ingenious sayings of his are recorded; particularly the following: "That there were three objects before whom he could not do amiss; his prince, his conscience, and his children." This facetious story is likewise related of him: "A Sussex knight, having spent a great estate at court, and reduced himself to one park, and a fine house in it, was yet ambitious to entertain the king, (Edward VI.) For that purpose, he new painted his gates, with a coat of arms and this motto over them, in large golden letters, OIA VANITAS. Sir Anthony, offering to read it, desired to know of the gentleman what he meant by OIA; who told him it stood for omnia. "I wonder," (replied he,) that having made your omnia so little as you have, you should yet make your vanitas so large."

COOKE, Thomas, born at Braintree, in Essex, in 1702. When only 19, he gave the world a very correct edition of "Andrew Marvel's Works, with a Life of the author prefixed." He published translations of "Hesiod," "Cicero de Natura Deorum," and "Terence," and prepared a translation of "Plautus," but only published the "Amphytrion." He was also a dramatic writer, and author of five or six pieces, which, however, were not attended with any success.

COOKE, Elisha, a respectable physician, of Boston, and an agent to England to procure the restoration of the charter of Mass., in 1715.

COOKE, Elisha, distinguished in the political history of Massachusetts, was a representative in the general court, counsellor, &c., and died in 1737.

COOKE, Samuel, first minister of the 2d parish in Cambridge, Massachusetts, died in 1783. He was a man of science, and published several sermons.

COOKE, Robert, an able English divine, and proctor of the Oxford university. He reared upon the vicarage of Leeds, and died in 1614.

COOPER, Thomas, D. D., a learned English prelate, born in 1517; he was author of a work, entitled "Thesaurus Lingue Romanæ; et Britannicæ," which was highly patronised by queen Elizabeth.

COOPER, Anthony Ashley, earl of Shaftesbury, and sometime lord high chancellor, was born at Winborne St. Giles', in Dorsetshire, July 22, 1621, and died January, 1682-3. He is supposed to have been a little intemperate in his gallantries; and it is recorded, that Charles II., who would both take liberties and bear them, once said to the earl at court, in a vein of raillery and good humour, and in reference only to his amours, "I believe, Shaftesbury, thou art the wickedest fellow in my dominions." To which, with a low bow and very grave face, the earl replied, "May it please your majesty, of a subject I believe I am; at which the merry monarch laughed most heartily.

COOPER, Anthony Ashley, earl of Shaftesbury, the celebrated author of the "Characteristics," was grandson of the preceding earl, and born at Exeter-house, in London, February 26, 1670-1. Soon after his coming into parliament, as a Burgess for Poole, he had an opportunity of showing that spirit of liberty which he maintained to the end of his life, and by which he uniformly directed his conduct on all occasions: it was the bringing in and promoting "The act for granting counsel to prisoners in cases of high treason." This he looked upon as important, and had prepared a speech in its behalf: but when he stood up to speak it in the House of Commons, he was so intimidated, that he lost all memory, and was quite unable to proceed. The house, after giving him a little time to recover his confusion, called loudly for him to go on; when he proceeded to this effect: "If I, sir, (addressing himself to the speaker,) who rise only to give my opinion on the bill now pending, am so confounded that I am unable to express the least of what I proposed to say, what must the condition of that man be, who, without any assistance, is pleading for his life, and under apprehension of being deprived of it?" He died in 1712-13.

COOPER, Maurice Ashley, brother of the foregoing, translated "Xenophon's Cyropædia," which was published in 2 vols. 8vo., 1728, being a short time after his decease. A third edition was published in 1770; "not," as is said, "with the eclat of popular applause, but with the silent approbation of the studious few."

COOPER, Samuel, an eminent English painter, born in London, in 1609, and commonly styled the Vandyck in little. He died in 1672, and was buried in Pancras church.

COOPER, John Gilbert, author of a "Life of Socrates." He wrote one or two numbers of the periodical paper called "The World;" was author of "Letters on Taste;" "Ver Vert, or the Nunnery Parrot;" and published a volume of "Poems on several subjects;" 1764, 12mo. He died in April, 1769.

COOPER, Dr. Miles, a learned divine and poet, who published sermons "On the Origin of Civil government," and a volume of poems, and died at Edinburgh, in 1785.

COOPER, William, minister in Boston, of which place he was a native; he was distinguished for his faithfulness and zeal, and died in 1743; he published several discourses

COOPER, Samuel, minister in Boston, son of William, whom he succeeded in Brattle-street church; was among the first of those patriots who took part against Great Britain; he died in 1783.

COOPER, Miles, D. D., president of King's College, New-York, a native of England; he came to America in 1762, published a volume of poems, returned to England, and died in 1785.

COOTE, Sir Eyre, a celebrated commander of the East India Company's forces in India, who gained great renown by his frequent victories over Hyder Ally; in one of which, near Porto Novo, Hyder's army consisted of more than 150,000 men, and General Coote's of only 10,000. He was born in 1726, and died at Madras, April, 1783.

COOTWICH, John, of Utrecht, a civilian and traveller. The account of his "Travels into Jerusalem and Syria," was published in Latin, 4to., 1619. It is very curious, and is now become extremely scarce. The dates of his birth and death are uncertain.

COPERNICUS, Nicholas, an eminent astronomer, born at Thorn, in Prussia, in 1472. He adopted and improved the hypothesis of the Pythagoreans, which made the sun the centre of the system, and the earth to move, not only round the sun, but round its own axis also; and established that system of the world which goes by his name, and is now universally received. This he performed in a work entitled "De Revolutionibus Orbium Caelestium." Apprehensions, arising from the novelty of his opinions, had, it is said, almost brought him to drop all thoughts of publishing his book, which had lain in his escrutoir not nine years only, (which is the term Horace prescribes, but almost four times nine years. At length, however, by the importunity of his friends, he was prevailed upon to let it come out; but a copy of it was no sooner brought to him, than he was presently seized with a violent effusion of blood, which put an end to his life, May 24, 1543.

COPPA, Cavalier, a disciple and imitator of Guido, died in 1665.

COQ, Peter le, a French ecclesiastic, superior of the Eudistes, and distinguished for his piety, learning, &c., died in 1777.

COQUES, Gonzalo, a Flemish painter, who excelled in historical conversations; he died in 1684.

CORAM, Captain Thomas, born in 1668, spent the first part of his life as master of a colonial trading vessel. While he resided in that part of London which is the common residence of seafaring people, business often obliged him to come early into the city and return late: when he had frequent occasions of seeing young children exposed, through the indigence or cruelty of their parents. This excited his compassion so far, that he projected the Foundling Hospital; in which humane design he laboured 17 years, and at last, by his sole application, obtained the royal charter for it. Indeed he spent a great part of his life in serving the public: and with so total a disregard to his private interest, that, toward the latter part of it, he was himself supported by the voluntary subscription of public spirited persons. This singular and memorable man died March 29, 1751, and was interred, pursuant to his desire, in the vault under the chapel of the Foundling Hospital.

CORAS, John de, professor of law at Toulouse at the age of 18; afterwards chancellor to the queen of Navarre; he was imprisoned for favouring the protestants, and murdered in 1572.

CORAS, James de, a native of Toulouse, and an author of little merit, died in 1677.

CORBET, John, a zealous non-conformist, author of several works of merit, died in 1680.

CORBET, Dr. Richard, bishop of Norwich, and an ingenious poet, died 1635. His poems were printed in 12mo., under the title of "Poetica Stromata," 1647, and again in 1762. Mr. Gilechrist published an edition of them (with his life prefixed) in 1807. Some pleasant anecdotes are recorded of him, among which are the following; after he was doctor of divinity, he sung ballads at the Cross at Abingdon. On a market-day he and some of his comrades were at the tavern by the Cross; the ballad singer complained he had no custom, and could not put off his ballads. The jolly doctor puts off his gown, and put on the ballad-singer's leathern jacket; and being a handsome man, and a rare full voice, he presently vended a great many, and had a great audience. His conversation was extremely pleasant. Dr. Stubbins was one of his cronies; he was a jolly doctor, and a very good house-keeper. As Dr. Corbet and he were riding in Lob-lane, in wet weather, (it is an extraordinary deep dirty lane,) the coach fell, and Corbet said, that Dr. S. was up to the elbows in mud, and he was up to the elbows in Stubbins. His chaplain, Dr. Lushington, was a very learned and ingenious man; and they loved one another. The bishop would sometimes take the key of the wine cellar, and he and his chaplain would go and lock themselves in, and be merry; then, first he lays down his episcopal hood, "There lies the doctor;" then he puts off his gown, "There lies the bishop;" then it was, "Here's to thee Corbet." "Here's to thee Lushington."

CORBULO, Donirius, a Roman general, who carried his arms against the Parthians, and placed Tigranes on the throne; he destroyed himself, A. D. 67.

CORDAY D'ARMANS, Mary Anne Charlotte, a native of Normandy, who avenged the death of her lover, by stabbing Marat, the author of it, to the heart, for which she was guillotined in 1793.

CORDEMOI, Geraud de, a French academician, and a great partisan of Descartes' systems; he wrote several works, and died in 1722.

CORDIER, or CORDERIUS, Mathurin, a schoolmaster, died at Geneva, in 1564, aged 85; having continued the office of teaching till within a few days of his death. Calvin was his scholar. Among many other works, he published "Colloquia," one of the most popular of our school books.

CORDUS, Aulus Crementius, a Roman, author of a history of the civil wars of Rome, much commended by Tacitus and Seneca.

CORDUS, Ericius, a German physician and poet, intimate with Erasmus; died in 1535.

CORDUS, Valerius, son of the preceding; devoted himself particularly to botany, and traversed the mountains of Germany, &c.; he died in 1554.

CORELLI, Arcangelo, a famous musician of Italy, born at Fusignano, a town of Bologna, in 1653. His merits, as a performer on the violin, were sufficient to attract the patronage of the great, and to silence, as they did, all competition; but the remembrance of these is at this day absorbed in the contemplation of his excellencies as a musician at large, as the author of new and original harmonies, and the father of a style not less noble and grand than elegant and pathetic. He died at Rome, in 1713, and was buried in the church of the Rounda, other wise called the Pantheon; where, for many years after his decease, he was commemorated by a solemn musical performance on the anniversary of his death.

CORINNA, a Greek poetess, who gained the prize five times over Pindar.

CORIO, Bernardine, a historian of Milan: he wrote the history of his country, which is much esteemed, and died in 1500.

CORIO LANUS, C. Marcius, a famous Roman captain, who took Corioli, a town of the Volsci, whence he had his name. At last, disgusting the people, he was banished Rome by the tribune Decius. He then went to the Volsci, and, persuading them to take up arms against the Romans, they encamped within four miles of Rome. Here Coriolanus would not listen to a peace, which the Romans sued for, till he was prevailed upon by his wife Veturia, and his mother Volturnia, who were followed by all the Roman ladies in tears. He was at last put to death by the Volsci as a traitor, who had made them quit their conquest: upon which the Roman ladies went into mourning: and in the same place where his blood was shed, there was a temple consecrated to Female Fortune.

CORLET, Elijah, was master of the grammar school, in Cambridge, Mass., for 40 or 50 years, and was much esteemed; he died in 1687.

CORNARIUS, or HAGUENBOT, John, a German physician, early distinguished as a scholar. He was the translator of the works of Hippocrates, &c., and died in 1558.

CORNARO, Lewis, a noble Venetian, born 1464, wrote in Latin a celebrated treatise "On the Advantages of a Temperate Life." By following his own rules, he lived to upwards of 100 years of age, dying in 1565.

CORNARO, Helena Lucretia, of the same family with the above, a prodigy of learning; of whom it is related, that all people of quality or fashion who passed through Venice, were more solicitous to see her, than any of the curiosities of that superb city. She was born at Venice, in 1646, and educated at Padua, where she obtained the degree of doctor, and died in 1685.

CORNAZZANI, Anthony, a native of Placentia, in the 15th century; he wrote the lives of the Virgin Mary, &c.

CORNBURY, lord, governor of New-York in 1702, was universally detested for his despotism, bigotry, and injustice; he was removed in 1708.

CORNEILLE, Michael, a French painter, who gained a prize for one of his pieces, and was afterwards professor of the academy of Paris; he died in 1703.

CORNEILLE, Peter, a celebrated French poet, born at Rouen, in 1606, and died 1684. His works have been often printed, and consist of above 30 comedies and tragedies.

CORNEILLE, Thomas, a French poet also, but inferior to Peter Corneille, whose brother he was. He died 1709, aged 84.—Thomas Corneille was the author of "A Dictionary of Arts," in 2 vols. folio; and "A Universal Geographical and Historical Dictionary," in 3 vols. folio.

CORNELIA, a Roman lady, who educated her sons Tiberius and Caius Gracchus, and when they were killed, exhibited great fortitude.

CORNELISZ, Lucas, a painter, of Leyden, who became chief painter to Henry VIII. of England.

CORNELISZ, James, a Dutch painter of the 16th century, his descent from the cross is much admired.

CORNELISZ, Cornelius, of Haerlem, was eminent as a painter.

CORNELIUS, bishop of Rome, after Fabian, was banished, and soon after died, in 252.

CORNETO, Adrian, an Italian ecclesiastic, much employed by Innocent VII. and his successors, as a legate: he was an author of some distinction.

CORNUTUS, a grammarian and philosopher of merit, and tutor to the poet Persius. He was put to death by Nero, A. D. 44.

CORNWALLIS, Sir Charles, second son of Sir William Cornwallis, a man of superior abilities; was sent by James I. as ambassador to Spain; and died in 1630.

CORNWALLIS, Charles, marquis, a brave British general, born in 1738. In the American war he displayed great military talents, took possession of Philadelphia, contributed to the reduction of South Carolina, and defeated Gen. Gates with a very inferior force. But, in 1781, he was under the necessity of surrendering to the united American and French army; soon after which he returned to England. He was next sent out as governor-general of India; where in December, 1790, he took Bangalore, which was followed by the defeat of Tippoo Saib, who delivered to his lordship his two sons as hostages. Lord Cornwallis was next appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland; where he quelled an insurrection, defeated a French invading army, and succeeded in effecting a union of the two kingdoms. In 1801, he was employed as minister plenipotentiary in France, where he signed the preliminary treaty of peace at Amiens. His lordship again accepted the government of India, in 1805; but died at Ghazepoor, in the province of Beares, on the 5th of October, in the same year.

CORONEL, Paul, a native of Segovia, employed by Cardinal Ximenes in the publication of his Polyglott Bible; he died in 1524.

CORONELLI, Vincent, a Venetian geographer, made cosmographer to the French king in 1685. He published 400 geographical charts, and died in 1718.

CORRADINI, Peter Marcellinus, a learned civilian, and favourite of Pope Clement XI., he died in 1743.

CORRADUS, Sebastian, a grammarian and professor at Bologna, died in 1556.

CORREGIO, Antonio da, a most extraordinary painter, so called from Corregio, a town in the dukedom of Modena, where he was born in 1494. This artist is remarkable for having borrowed nothing from the works of other men. Corregio spent the greater part of his life at Parma; and notwithstanding the many fine pieces that he made, and the high reputation he had gained, he was extremely poor and always obliged to work hard for the maintenance of his family, which was somewhat large. He was very humble and modest in his behaviour, lived very devoutly, and died much lamented in 1534, when he was but 40 years of age. The cause of his death was a little singular. Going to receive 50 crowns for a piece that he had done, he was paid it in a sort of copper money called quadrios. This was a great weight, and he had 12 miles to carry it, though it was in the midst of summer. He was overheated and fatigued; in which condition, indiscreetly drinking cold water, he brought on a pleurisy which put an end to his life.

CORROZET, Giles, a French bookseller, author of several works of merit; died in 1568.

CORSINI, Edward, an Italian, a man of great erudition; author of some valuable works on criticism, philosophy, &c.; died in 1765.

CORTEZI, Paul, a learned Italian, a patron of literature; was bishop of Urbino, and died in 1510.

CORTI, Matthew, a native of Pavia, a physician to Clement VII., wrote on fevers, &c. and died in 1544.

CORTICELLI, Salvatore, a monk of Bologna, author of a much admired Italian grammar, died in 1770.

CORYATE, Thomas, a famous English traveller, chiefly on foot. He visited almost all parts of the world, and published relations of his voyages and travels; but the singularity of the titles, and of his manners, exposed him to much ridicule, and occasioned the character of his works to be misrepresented, as well as that of their author, who was certainly a man of great learning. His best known works are, "Crudities hastily gobbled up in Five Months' Travels in France, Savoy, Italy," &c. He was born at Odcombe, in Somersetshire, 1577, and died at Surat in the East Indies, 1637.

COSBY, William, governor of the colonies of New-York and New Jersey, died in 1736.

COSIERS, John, a painter of Antwerp, patronised by many crowned heads.

COSIMO, Andrew and Peter, Italian painters, the former excelled in the claro-obscuro, the latter in ludicrous pieces. Peter died in 1521.

COSIN, John, an English prelate, deprived of his preferments by preaching a seditious sermon; but at the restoration he was re-instated and preferred to the see of Durham. He wrote various works, and was a learned and humane man. He died in 1672.

COSME, John Basellac, eminent as a lithotomist, whose instruments were much used formerly; he was banished through the envy of his rivals; and died at Paris, in 1786.

COSMO I., son of John de Medici, who raised himself to the supreme authority of the state of Florence, and put down all conspiracies against him; he died in 1574.

COSMO II., grandson of Cosmo I., succeeded his father Ferdinand, in 1609; he was a benevolent prince, and died in 1621.

COTTINGTON, Francis, lord, chancellor of the exchequer, and first lord of the treasury, in the reign of Charles I., died in 1651.

COTTON, or COTON, Peter, a learned Jesuit, born in France, in 1564, wrote several books on controversial subjects, and died in 1626.

COTTON, Sir Robert Bruce, an eminent English antiquary, born at Denton, in Huntingdonshire, in 1570. His writings are very numerous and valuable; but it may reasonably be questioned, whether he has not done more service to learning, by securing, as he did, his valuable library for the use of posterity, than by all his writings. The Cottonian library is deposited in the British Museum.

COTTON, Charles, lived in the reigns of Charles and James II. He had something of a genus for poetry, and was particularly famous for burlesque verse. He translated one of Corneille's tragedies, called "Horace," printed in 1671. He published a volume of poems on several occasions: "The Wonders of the Peak in Derbyshire;" "Scarronides, or Virgil Travestie;" and "Lucian burlesqued, or the Scollar scoffed;" an edition of the three last mentioned, was printed in 1715, and has been frequently reprinted. But the chief of all his productions, and for which perhaps he deserves the best praise of his countrymen, is his translation of "Montaigne's Essays."

COTTON, Dr., author of "Visions in Verse, for the instruction of Younger Minds," was distinguished for his great care, humanity, and attention as a physician, at St. Albans, where he died Aug. 2, 1783.

COUSTON, William, son of the preceding, was improving himself in the arts, at Rome, where he died in 1777.

COUTHON, Georges, a native of Orsay, in Auvergne, a member of the convention in the French revolution, odious for his ferocious and vindictive conduct; he was guillotined in 1794.

COUVREUR, Adrienne le, a French actress, who played with much applause, died in 1730.

COVEL, John, an English divine, chaplain to the embassy to Constantinople, published an account of the Greek church, and died in 1722.

COVERDALE, Miles, bishop of Exeter, in the time of Edward VI., was ejected from his see by queen Mary, and thrown into prison. Being liberated by queen Elizabeth, he attached himself to the puritans, and died in 1567, at the age of 81. He assisted Tindal in the English version of the Bible, published in 1537, and afterwards revised and corrected the edition of it in a larger volume, with notes, in 1540.

COWARD, William, a medical and metaphysical writer, born at Winchester, in 1653, died between 1722 and 1725.

COWELL, Dr. John, a learned and eminent civilian, born at Ernesborough, in Devonshire, in 1554; and well known by a laborious work which he published at Cambridge, in 1607, entitled "The Interpreter." Besides this, he published, in 1605, "Institutiones Juris Anglicani," &c., that is, "Institutes of the Laws of England, in the same method as Justinian's Institutes." He died in 1611.

COWLEY, Abraham, an eminent English poet, born in London, in 1618, died 1667, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, near Chaucer and Spenser, where a monument was erected to his memory. Cowley was a staunch loyalist; and when Charles II. heard of his death, he was pleased to say, "that Mr Cowley had not left a better man behind him in England." Addison has observed, that of all authors, none ever abounded so much in wit, according to Locke's true definition of it, as Cowley.

COWLEY, Hannah, a very ingenious dramatic writer, and a poetess, indeed, in almost every branch of the art, born at Tiverton, Devon, in 1743, died March 11, 1803, at the place of her nativity, in her 66th year.

COWPER, William, bishop of Galloway, in Scotland, born in Perth, in 1564, died 1617, leaving a folio volume of works on divinity.

COWPER, William, dean of Durham, was the son of earl Cowper, born in London, in 1713, and died 1772. He wrote a learned "Treatise on Geometry," eight "Sermons," and "Advice to a Lady;" all of which are much esteemed.

COWPER, William, a physician and antiquary, at Chester, died in 1767.

COWPER, William, an excellent English poet, equally distinguished by his genius and his virtues. He was born at Berkhamstead, Herts, Nov. 1731, was the grandson, of judge Cowper, great nephew of the lord high chancellor of the same name, and died April 25, 1800. His poems are various; but the most celebrated of them is called "The Task;" and the tendency of all his writings is, to enlarge the soul to every liberal sentiment, and to improve the heart. Mr. Cowper also published a translation into blank verse, of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey; which is more remarkable for its fidelity to the original, than for its poetical elegance.

COX, Richard, bishop of Ely, born at Whaddon, in Buckinghamshire, in 1493, died 1581. He was the chief framer of the liturgy, and translator of the Bible called "The Bishop's Bible," made in the reign of Elizabeth.

COX, Sir Richard, lord chancellor of Ireland, and author of "A History" of that kingdom, was born at Bandon, in Cork, in 1650, and died 1733.

COXETER, Thomas a faithful and industrious collector of old English literature, was born at Lechlade, in Gloucestershire, in 1689. He amassed materials for a biography of the English poets, and assisted Mr. Ames in the "History of British Typography." He had a curious collection of old plays, and pointed out to Theobald, many of the black letter books which that critic used in his edition of Shakespeare. Coxeter was the first who formed the scheme, afterwards adopted by Dodsley, of publishing a collection of ancient plays. He died in 1747.

COXIS, Michael, a painter, of Mechlin, who imitated Raphael, died in 1592.

COYER, l'Abbé Gabriel Francis, a Frenchman, who wrote the life of John Sobieski, Travels in Italy, Holland, &c., and died in 1782.

COYPEL, the name of several painters, who were very eminent in France, in the 17th and 18th centuries.

COYSEVOX, Anthony, chancellor and regent of the academy of painting and sculpture, in France, died in 1720.

COYTIER, James, physician to Lewis XI., of France, and memorable for nothing particularly, but the dexterity he showed, in managing that monarch. Lewis had no principle to lay hold of, except an intense fear of dying; which most contemptible cowardice, Coytier taking the advantage of, and often threatening his master with a speedy dissolution, obtained from time to time, great and innumerable favours. Lewis, however, once recovered strength of mind enough to be ashamed of his weakness; and feeling a momentary resentment for (what he then thought) the insolence of his physician, ordered him to be privately despatched. Coytier, apprized of this by the officer, who was his intimate friend, replied, "that the only concern he felt about himself was, not that he must die, but that the king could not survive him above four days; and that he (the said Coytier) knew this by a particular science (meaning astrology, which then prevailed) and only mentioned it to him in confidence as an intimate friend." Lewis informed of this was frightened more than ever, and ordered Coytier to be at large, as usual.

COZZA, Francesco, born in Sicily, eminent in fresco and oil painting, died in 1664.

CRAIG, Habakkuk, an eminent dissenter, in England, died in 1795.

CRACHERODE, Rev. Clayton Mordaunt, one of the trustees of the British Museum, and Fellow of the Royal and Antiquarian Societies. His attainments were various and considerable: he wrote elegantly in Latin verse; as may be seen in the "Carmina Quadrigesima," for the year 1748. He employed a considerable part of a large revenue, in making collections of what was best and most curious in literature, and certain branches of the arts. His library was unrivalled in its kind; and his cabinet of prints, drawings, and medals, was considered as among the most select and valuable in a country that possesses so many of them. He was an exquisite judge of art, both ancient and modern, particularly of sculpture, painting, and music, and collected the choicest of early printed books, drawings, coins, and gems, of which a complete catalogue raisonnee would require a volume. Mr. Cracherode died April 6, 1799, and bequeathed his immense collection of books, medals, drawings, &c., &c., to the British Museum.

CRADDOCK, Luke, an ingenious English painter, chiefly of birds, died in 1717. Vertue records, that Craddock's pictures rose quickly after his death, to three or four times the price that he was paid for them when living.

CRADDOCK, Samuel, a learned divine, author of "A History of the Old and New Testament," an "Apostolical History," and "The Harmony of the Four Evangelists, died in 1700, aged 86. The latter of these works was revised by Dr. Tillotson, who preserved it from the flames in the fire of London.

CRANIUS, Luca, a painter of Bamberg, whose pieces were once admired, died in 1553.

CRANMER, Thomas, an English archbishop, memorable for having endured martyrdom in the cause of protestantism, was born at Aslacton, in Nottinghamshire, in 1489, and burnt at Oxford, March 21, 1555, by order of queen Mary. He was an open, generous, honest man; a lover of truth, and an enemy of falsehood and superstition; he was gentle and moderate in his temper, and though heartily zealous in the cause of the reformation, yet a friend to the persons of those who most strenuously opposed it; he was a great patron of learning and the universities, a very learned man himself, and author of several works.

CRANSTON, Samuel, governor of Rhode-Island, from 1698 to 1727.

CRAPONE, Adam, a native of Salon, known for the canal which bears his name, between Arles and the Danube; he was poisoned through envy, in 1598.

CRASHAW, Richard, an English poet, who was, in his lifetime, honoured with the friendship of Mr. Cowley, and after his death, by the praise of Mr. Pope, who condescended both to read his poems, and to borrow from them. He died at Loreto, in Italy, in 1650.

CRASSO, Lawrence, baron of Piamira, wrote a history of the Greek poets, commended by the Italians, but censured by the French.

CRASSUS, Lucius Licinius, a Roman orator, greatly commended by Cicero, died 92 B. C.

CRASSUS, Marcus Licinius, one of the triumvirs with Cæsar and Pompey, was defeated and killed in Syria, 53 B. C.

CRATES, a philosopher, disciple of Diogenes, the cynic, prided himself on his poverty and meanness, lived 328 B. C.

CRATES, an academic philosopher of Athens, 272 B. C.

CRATESIPOLIS, a queen of Sicily, celebrated for her valour, 314 B. C.

CRATINUS, one of the great masters of what we call the ancient comedy. He flourished in the 81st Olympiad, some 20 or 30 years before Aristophanes. He was an Athenian born, and appears to have been an excessive drinker; and the excuse he gave for that vice was, that it was absolutely necessary to warm his fancy, and to put a soul into his verse. Aristophanes, in his "Irene," has given us a pleasant account of Cratinus' death, where he says that it was caused by a fatal swoon, at the sight of a noble cask of wine split in pieces, and washing the streets. Suidas tells us that he wrote 21 plays.

CRATIPPUS, pronounced by Cicero, to be by far the greatest of all the peripatetic philosophers that he ever heard, was of Mitylene, and taught philosophy there.

CRATO, or DE CRATTHEIM, John, physician to the emperor Ferdinand I., intimate with Luther—wrote "Luther's Table Talk;" he died in 1585.

CRAVEN, Charles, colonial governor of S. Carolina, returned to England in 1716.

CRAWFORD, David, author of "Memoirs of Scotland," a "Peerage of Scotland," a "History of the royal family of Stuart," a topographical description of the "County of Renfrew," &c., was born near Glasgow, in 1665, and died 1726.

CRAWFORD, William, born at Kelso, in 1676, wrote "Dying Thoughts," and some "Sermons," published in 2 vols. 12mo, and died in 1742.

CRAWFORD, Dr. Adair, an eminent English physician and chymist, author of "Experiments and Observations on Animal Heat," and the first who found out the medical uses inherent in the Terra Ponderosa, born in 1749, died 1795.

CRAWFORD, Anne, a celebrated English actress, both in comedy and tragedy, but better remembered by her name of Barry, was born at Bath, in 1731, and died Nov. 29, 1801.

CRAYER, Gaspar de, a celebrated painter of Antwerp, greatly esteemed by Rubens and Vandyck, died in 1669.

CREBILLON, Prosper Joliot de, a French writer of tragedy, and usually ranked after Corneille and Racine, was born at Dijon, in 1674, and died 1762.

CREBILLON, Claude Prosper Joliot de, son of the foregoing, and a celebrated writer of novels, letters, and romances, was born in Paris, 1707, and died there in 1777. The ease and elegance, together with the seducing levity of his writings, have obtained for him the appellation of the Petronius of France. His works, chiefly of a voluptuous tendency, have been collected in 11 vols. 12mo, 1779.

CREDI, Lorenzo di, an Italian painter of Florence, died in 1530.

CRECH, Thomas, eminent for his translations of ancient authors, both in prose and verse, was born near Sherborne, in Dorsetshire, in 1659, and died by his own hand, in 1701. His principal works are translations of Lucretius and Horace; but he translated other things of a smaller kind, from Theocritus, Ovid, Virgil, Juvenal, Plutarch, Cornelius Nepos, &c. &c.

CRELL, Lewis Christian, a native of Neustadt, and professor at Leipsic, died in 1735.

CRELIUS, John, a Socinian, who settled in Poland, where he became professor to the unitarians. He was a man of great learning, and wrote against Grotius.

CREMONINI, Casar, an Italian philosopher, who advocated the doctrines of Aristotle, in respect to the materiality of the soul; he died in 1620.

CRENIUS, Thomas, a writer whose works were numerous. He wrote chiefly on philosophical subjects, and died at Leyden, in 1728.

CREQUI, Charles de, prince de Foix, a marshal, and peer of France, distinguished by his valour; he was killed by a cannon ball at the siege of Bremen, in 1638.

CREQUI, Francis de, great grandson of the preceding, a marshal of France, distinguished for his military enterprises and heroic courage; he died in 1687.

CRESCEMBENI, John Maria, an Italian poet, born at Maurata, in Ancona, 1683. He projected the establishment of a new academy, under the name of Arcadia, the members of which, at first, did not exceed 14, but afterwards increased much. They called themselves the shepherds of Arcadia, and each took the name of some shepherd, and some place in that ancient kingdom. The founder of this society was appointed the director of it, in 1690, and held it to the year of his death, 1728.

CRESCENS, a cynic philosopher, in the 2d century, who persecuted the Christians.

CRESCENTIUS, Peter de, a native of Boulogne, in the 14th century, who travelled 30 years as a law practitioner; he published a valuable treatise on agriculture.

CRESP, Daniel, a celebrated portrait painter, of Bologna, died in 1630.

CRESPI, Guiseppe Maria, a painter of Bologna, who, by darkening his room very much, gave greater vivacity to his subjects, died in 1747.

CRÉSSEY, Hugh Paulin, an English divine, who became a catholic, and was chaplain to queen Catharine, he was much respected, and published some valuable works, particularly an able ecclesiastical history. He died in 1674.

CRESTI, Dominico, a historical painter, of Florence, died in 1638.

CRETIN, William Du Bois, whose chief merit consisted in puns, low wit, &c. He was historian to Charles VIII., Lewis XII., &c., and died in 1525.

CREVIER, John Baptiste Lewis, a Parisian, trained under the celebrated Rollin, and afterwards professor of rhetoric. Upon the death of his master, in 1741, he took upon him to finish his "Roman History." He published other works, and was greatly serviceable to the cause of virtue and religion, as well as letters. His death happened in 1765.

CREW, Nathaniel, bishop of Durham, in the time of James II., whose cause he espoused; he died in 1721.

CRICHTON, James, a Scotch gentleman, born at Perth, in 1560, and blest with most extraordinary endowments, both of body and mind. He was murdered by his pupil, Vincenzo di Gonzaga, son of the duke of Mantua, in 1582. Though so young a man, Crichton was skilled in twelve languages, and in several universities, gave public challenges to disputations in as many. He is usually styled The Admirable Crichton.

CRILLON, Lewis de Berthon de, a French general, who distinguished himself by his valour, in the time of Henry II., III., and IV. He died in 1615.

CRILLON MAHON, N. duke de, distinguished himself in the seven years war, and afterwards in the cause of Spain. He died in 1796.

CRINESIUS, Christopher, a native of Eoheima, who published several learned works; he died in 1626.

CRINITUS, Petrus, a native of Florence, a man of great learning, but addicted to the basest sensibilities; he died in 1505.

CRISP, Tobias, a controversial writer on divinity, and the great champion of Antinomianism, died in 1642.

CRITIAS, one of the thirty tyrants of Athens, he fell in battle 400 B. C.

CRITO, one of the pupils and friends of Socrates.

CRITOBULUS, a physician, who is said to have extracted the arrow which wounded the eye of Philip of Macedon.

CRITOLAUS, a Greek historian.

CRITOLAUS, an Arcadian, who, when defeated by the Romans, poisoned himself, 146 B. C.

CROESE, Gerard, a protestant divine, of Amsterdam, author of a history of the Quakers, died in 1710.

CRESUS, the fifth and last of the Mermnadae, who reigned in Lydia; was supposed the richest of mankind. He was the first who made the Greeks of Asia tributary to the Lydians, and his court was the asylum of learning and the polite arts. After a reign of 14 years, he was defeated by Cyrus, 548 B. C.: the time and manner of his death are unknown.

CROFT, Herbert, an English prelate, who wrote in favour of the protestants about 1675; he died in 1691.

CROFT, William, a celebrated musician, who succeeded Dr. Blow as master of the children, and composer to the Chapel Royal, and also as organist in Westminster Abbey. In 1712 he published, but without his name, "Divine Harmony, or a new collection of select anthems;" to which is prefixed, "A Brief Account of Church Music." In 1715, he was created doctor in music at Oxford; and in 1724 published by subscription, a noble work of his own, entitled, "Musica Sacra, or Select Anthems in Score," in 2 vols. the first containing the funeral service which Purcell had begun, but did not live to complete. He was born at Nether-Eatington, in Warwickshire, about 1677, and died Aug. 1727.

CRORIUS, or DE CROI, a minister of Usez, who wrote several works in Latin; he died in 1659.

CROIX, Francis Petit de la, secretary and interpreter to the king of France in the Turkish and Arabic languages, died Nov. 4, 1695, in his 73d year.

CROIX, John Baptist de la, second bishop of Quebec; came to Canada in 1685; he founded three hospitals, and died in 1727.

CROIX DU MAINE, Francis Grude de la, a Frenchman of the 16th century, who published an account of all French authors.

CROKE, Sir George, many years one of the judges of the King's Bench, and an eminent law-writer, was born at Chilton, Bucks, in 1539, and died in 1641. The "Reports" of Sir George Croke, are of the highest authority with the profession. Sir Edmund Coke, recommending to the student an attention to these Reports, says, "There is no knowledge, case, or point in law, seem it of never so little account, but will stand him in stead at one time or other; and therefore in reading, nothing is to be pretermitted."

CROMPTON, William, a non-conformist divine, author of several small tracts, died 1696.

CROMWELL, Thomas, earl of Essex, an eminent statesman in the reign of Henry VIII., was the son of a blacksmith at Putney, in Surry, and born about 1490. He was for some time clerk or secretary to the English factory at Antwerp.—On his return to England he was admitted into the family of Cardinal Wolsey as his solicitor; to whom he approved himself by his fidelity and diligence in several important affairs; and after the cardinal's fall, the king employed him in his own service, and raised him in a short time to several eminent dignities. Having been instrumental in promoting the Reformation, the king granted him many noble manors and large estates, the spoils of the religious houses; advanced him to the dignity of earl of Essex; and constituted him lord high chamberlain of England. The tide of prosperity, which had hitherto flowed in upon him, began now to take a turn: a scheme that he laid to secure his greatness proved his ruin; such is the weakness of human policy! He used his utmost endeavours to procure a marriage between king Henry and Anne of Cleves. As her friends were all Lutherans, he imagined it might tend to bring down the popish party at court; and he expected great support from a queen of his own making. But the capricious monarch, being disgusted with her person, on the first night's cohabitation, took an invincible aversion to the promoter of the marriage, who was soon after arrested at the council table, attainted of high treason and heresy, and executed on Tower-hill, after six weeks imprisonment, July, 1540.

CROMWELL, Oliver, protector of the commonwealth of England, was son of Mr. Robert Cromwell, and born in the parish of St. John, Huntingdon, April 25, 1599, baptized the 29th of the same month, and was educated in grammar learning at the free-school in that town. From Huntingdon he was removed to Sydney college, in Cambridge, where he was admitted fellow commoner, April 23, 1616. He was elected a member of the third parliament of Charles I., which met Jan. 20, 1628, and from this time to 1641 was in warm opposition to all the measures of the court. At length when the king and parliament came to an open rupture, Cromwell obtained a captain's commission; and his first military exploit was, securing the town of Cambridge for the parliament. He was afterwards rapidly promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general under the earl of Manchester, in which capacity he distinguished himself at the battle of Marston Moor. He was then made lieutenant-general of horse under Sir Thomas Fairfax, had the principal share in defeating the royal party at Naseby, made himself master of Winchester and several other places, reduced Carlisle and Berwick, and entered Scotland in triumph. Having dismissed the Hamiltons (of the king's party) from all offices of public trust, he returned to England with every mark of honour and esteem on the part of the Scots. and, on his arrival in London, took his seat again in parliament, and received the thanks of the house for this signal service, which was the last he performed in his military capacity till the king's death. After that event (to which he was equally prompted by fear and ambition,) Cromwell was appointed lord governor of Ireland, to which kingdom he went in great pomp, and very soon made himself master of Drogheda, and the other places which had been held by the royalists. Having done this service, he was recalled to England, and made captain-general of all the parliament forces, marched again into Scotland, defeated the Scots at Dunbar, followed Charles II. into Worcester, and totally routed his whole force. Cromwell now found his power so uncontrollable, that he ventured on a step, bolder perhaps, than ever before had entered the head of any man in England. He abruptly dissolved the Long Parliament, and, having turned all the members out of the house, locked the doors, put the keys in his pocket, and returned home. This happened on the 20th of April, 1653. On the 10th of December, in the same year, he was invested with supreme authority, under the title of lord protector of the three nations, England, Scotland, and Ireland; in which station, having for five years administered the affairs of the kingdom with great vigour and ability, he died Sept. 3, 1658.

CROMWELL, Richard, eldest son of Oliver, and named by him as his successor, was born at Cheshunt, 1626, and died 1712.—An act was passed, for recognising him as Protector, and for restoring the house of lords; but the Commons fell into debates about settling the chief magistrate's power, and that of the upper house; and these, with other proceedings, terminated in a jealousy, between the protector and his army. At last they discarded him, and took the government into their own hands. On the restoration he went abroad, but returned in 1680, under the assumed name of Clarke, and settled at Cheshunt, where he lived privately and died beloved; but he was not by any means qualified to support the station to which the aspiring talents of his father had raised him.

CRONECK, John Frederic baron de, born at Anspach, distinguished himself as an ingenious poet; he died in 1758.

CRONSTEDT, Axel Frederic, a native of Sweden, a naturalist, and inspector of the mines; he published various works, and died in 1765.

CROOK, Sir George, an Englishman, who became chief justice; died in 1641.

CROSBY, Brass, born at Stockton-upon-Tees, in 1725, came early in life to London, where he practised several years as an attorney; became alderman of the ward of Bread-street, in 1765, and was elected lord mayor, September 24, 1770. March, 1771, in the case of the proclamation against Wheble and other printers, Mr. Alderman Oliver was committed to the Tower; and Mr. Crosby (then lord mayor) was ordered into the custody of the serjeant at arms; but, on his spiritedly observing, "that if any offence had been committed, he was the greatest offender, and that he longed to join his brother in office," an order was signed for his commitment to the Tower. The parliament was prorogued on the 23d of July, when the lord mayor was released and carried from the Tower to the mansion-house with every possible mark of the approbation of his fellow-citizens; and, after the expiration of his mayoralty, was again rewarded by the thanks of the corporation, and a cup of 100*l.* in value. He died, Feb. 14, 1793.

CROSS, Michael, an English artist, and famous copier of paintings, flourished in the reigns of Charles I. and II.

CROSS, Lewis, a painter, who retouched a picture of Mary, queen of Scots, in a masterly manner; he died in 1724.

CROSWELL, Andrew, a minister in Boston, much engaged in controversy, died in 1735.

CROUSAZ, John Peter de, a celebrated philosopher and mathematician, born at Lausanne, in Switzerland, April 13, 1663, died 1743.

CROWNE, John, an American by birth, went to England, and was patronised by Charles II., at whose command he wrote several dramatic pieces: the best known of which are, "City Politics," and "Sir Courtly Nice;" the latter of which has been several times acted of late years. His plays were 17 in number; some of which were performed with great success. He died about 1703.

CROXALL, Dr. Samuel, a writer of good repute, born at Walton upon Thames, and known as publisher of the following works, viz: "The Fair Circassian," a poem; "Fables of Æsop and others, translated into English;" "Select Novels;" "Scripture Politics;" "The Royal Manual," &c. He died 1752.

CROZE, Mathurin Veyssiere la, a native of Nantes, was distinguished for his learning and works; he died in 1739.

CRUCIGER, Gaspar, a protestant of Leipsic, author of commentaries on Scripture, died in 1548.

CRUDEN, Alexander, a corrector of the press, whose literary labours will ever entitle him to the veneration of all students of the sacred writing. His "Concordance of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament," is his chief work, and a singular instance of indefatigable labour and perseverance in the most useful employment. His private character (though naturally liberal in the extreme) was influenced by a temporary frenzy, which gave a certain colour to all his actions, and suggested to him many whimsical plans of reformation, hopes of superiority, and visionary views of ambition, which were as useless to himself as unprofitable to others. Of his singularities, however, which were many, the tendency was uniformly virtuous. He was born at Aberdeen, in 1701, and was found dead on his knees, apparently in the posture of prayer, at his lodgings in Islington, on the morning of Nov. 1, 1770.

CRUIKSHANK, William Cumberland, an eminent anatomist, born at Edinburgh, 1745, went to London 1771; where he soon got into most extensive practice as a surgeon. As a writer, he is principally distinguished by his "Anatomy of the Absorbent Vessels in the Human Body," first published in 1786; and "Experiments on the Insensible Perspiration of the Human Body," 1795.—Mr. C. died June 27, 1800.

CRUSIUS, or KRANS, Martin, of Bamberg, the first who taught Greek in Germany, died in 1697.

CRUTTWELL, Rev. Clement, a gentleman whose various literary performances, for labour extent, and utility, have rarely been equalled; and, when regarded as the productions of an unassisted valetudinarian, have perhaps never been surpassed. Mr. C. first appeared as an author in his edition of "Bishop Wilson's Bible and Works, to which he has prefixed a life; and in the splendid edition of the Bible, he has inserted collations from the various texts; an employment which first directed his thoughts to that most laborious undertaking, his "Concordance of Parallel Texts of Scripture;" a work which, according to the usual computation of time and assiduity, would be sufficient to occupy the life of an ordinary man; and when it is considered that he printed it in his own house, and corrected the press as he proceeded, some idea may be formed of his industry and perseverance. Scarcely had he recovered from a severe illness, which his incessant application had produced, and which obliged him to have recourse to the baths of St. Amand, in Flanders, when he projected the scheme of his "Universal Gazetteer;" in the execution of which he spent ten years of unwearied diligence; the sale of the first edition sufficiently proved the favourable light in which it was regarded by the public, and he had just gone through the laborious office of editing a second edition, comprising 30,000 new articles; when, on the road to his native town, Wokingham, in Berkshire, he was arrested by a sudden illness, which terminated fatally before medical assistance could be procured. He died at Froxfield, Somersetshire, in his 65th year, Sept. 5, 1808.

CRUZ, Juana Inez de la, a lady of Mexico, distinguished for her poetry, and her acquaintance with the sciences; she died in 1695.

CRYPTOPYLUS, Metrophanes, a Greek, educated at Oxford, and afterwards raised to the see of Alexandria; he died in 1641.

CTESIAS, a Greek physician in the service of Artaxerxes, king of Persia: he wrote a history of Persia.

CTESIBIUS, a mathematician of Alexandria, the inventor of the pump, water clock, &c. 125 B. C.

CTESIPHON, an Athenian, whose attempt to decree a golden crown to Demosthenes, was opposed by Æschines, and produced the two famous orations of the rival orators.

CUDWORTH, Ralph, an eminent English divine, was born at Aller, in Somersetshire, 1617, and died 1688. He was a man of very extensive learning, excellently skilled in the learned languages and antiquity, a good mathematician, a subtle philosopher, and a profound metaphysician. His great work, "The True Intellectual System of the Universe," was published in folio, 1678.

CUERENIERI, Theodore Van, a native of Amsterdam, distinguished for science; but especially for maintaining that a Christian should not enter a place of worship; he died in 1590.

CUEVA, Alfonso de la, an ambassador from Philip III. to Venice, who plotted the seizing of the city, which, however, failed; he died in 1665.

CUFF, Henry, a celebrated wit and excellent scholar, born at Hinton, St. George, in Somersetshire, about 1560. He gave early marks of genius and application; arrived in time at the Greek professorship at Oxford, and was chosen proctor of the university, in 1594. To the celebrated Robert, earl of Essex, Cuff became secretary; he was involved in all the misfortunes of that unhappy earl; and with Sir Gelly Merrick, the earl's steward, executed at Tyburn, 1601.

CUGNIERES, Peter de, an upright magistrate, who, in 1329, advocated the rights of Philip Valois against the clergy.

CUJACIUS, James, a celebrated French lawyer, born at Thoulouse, about 1520 and died at Bourges, 1590.

CULLEN, Dr. William, an eminent Scotch physician and medical writer, whose principal works are, "Synopsis Nosologia Methodica, Edinb., 1772," 2 vols. 8vo.; "Lectures on the Materia Medica, Lond., 4to.;" "First lines of the Practice of Physic, 1776," 8vo. [This is said to have produced him 3000*l*.] "Institutions of Medicine, Part I., containing Physiology," 8vo. "On the Recovery of Drowned Persons;" and "A Treatise on the Materia Medica," 2 vols. 4to., 1789. He was born in Lanarkshire, and died February 5, 1790.

CULLUM, sir John, an Englishman, who published the history and antiquities of Havsted, Suffolk; he died in 1725.

CULMER, Richard, a violent fanatic in England, who was employed by parliament to break down and deface images, &c.

CULPEPER, Nicholas, was educated at Cambridge, and bound apprentice to an apothecary; but employed all his leisure hours in the study of astrology, which fallacious science he afterwards professed. He wrote many books; but the most noted is his "Herbal," wherein he tells us under what planets the simples grow, and speaks of their good and bad qualities. He died in Spitalfields, 1654.

CULPEPER, Thomas lord, lieutenant-governor, and afterwards governor, of the colony of Virginia, died in 1719.

CUMBERLAND, Dr. Richard, a very learned English divine, and bishop of Peterborough, born in London, in 1632, died in 1718. He had studied mathematics in all branches, and the Scriptures in their original languages. His book "De Legibus Naturæ" is his capital work, and will always be read while sound reasoning shall continue to be thought the best support of religion.

CUMBERLAND, William, duke of, second son of George II., distinguished for his military successes; he died in 1765.

CUMBERLAND, Richard, an eminent poet, essayist, novelist, and dramatic writer, was a son of the bishop of Kilmore, and a grandson, by the maternal side, of the learned Dr. Richard Bentley, under whose roof, in the Master's Lodge of Trinity College, Cambridge, he was born, Feb. 19, 1732. He received his education at the school of Bury St. Edmunds, at Westminster, and at Trinity College. As a writer, the number of his works is very extraordinary. The drama, however, appears to have been his favourite pursuit; and a list of his performances in this line of literature, will be found in the "Biographia Dramatica," 8vo., 1812. He died in London, May 7, 1811, and was buried in Poet's Corner, Westminster Abbey.

CUMBERLAND, Henry Frederic, duke of, whose union with the widow of a Mr. Horton produced the marriage act; he died in 1790.

CUMING, John, an eminent physician, of Concord, Mass., and a benefactor of Harvard College; died in 1788.

CUMING, William, an eminent English physician, much respected for his learning and skill; he died in 1788.

CUMMING, Alexander, minister in Boston, colleague with Dr. Sewall; died in 1763.

CUNÆUS, Peter, a lawyer, professor at Leyden, highly commended by Vossius, Scaliger, &c., died in 1638.

CUNECONDE, wife of Henry II., (emperor) was accused of incontinence, and retired to a monastery.

CUNITIA, a lady of Silesia, in the 17th century, who greatly excelled in mathematics and astronomy; she died in 1664.

CUNNINGHAM, William, a physician of London, greatly distinguished as an astronomer, died after 1563.

CUNNINGHAM, John, an elegant and ingenious pastoral poet and a dramatic writer, born in Dublin, 1729, died in Northumberland, 1773.

CUNNINGHAM, Alexander, a native of Scotland, author of "A History of Great Britain, from the Revolution in 1688 to the Accession of George I." This work was written in Latin, and lay in manuscript till 1787; when a faithful translation of it into English was made by William Thompson, LL. D., and published in 2 vols. 4to. The work was undoubtedly well deserving of publication; as it contains the history of a very interesting period, written by one who had a considerable degree of authentic information, and comprises many curious particulars unknown to other historians. The author died 1737, at the advanced age of 83 years.

CUNY, Lewis Anthony, author of funeral orations on the dauphin of France, queen of Poland, and cardinal Rohan.

CUPANO, Francis, a Sicilian, author of a catalogue of plants of Sicily, and a valuable history of that island.

CUPERUS, Gishert, professor of history, of Davenport, published several works, and died in 1716.

CURÆUS, Joachim, a German, author of the annals of Silesia and Breslau; he died in 1573.

CURCELLÆUS, Stephen, of Geneva, author of an edition of the Greek Testament with various readings, &c.; he died in 1654.

CURIO, an orator, of Rome, who called Cæsar the man of all the women, and the woman of all the men.

CURIO, Cælius Secundus, a Piedmontese, who forsook the Romish religion for Lutheranism; he was professor of eloquence at Basil, and died in 1569.

CURIUS, Dentatus Marcus Annus, a Roman consul, distinguished in the wars against Pyrrhus, died 272 B. C.

CURL, Edmund, a bookseller, and bookmaker, rendered notorious by Mr. Pope, in his Dunciad. He was generally held to be of an immoral character, and was highly injurious to the literary world by his piracies and forgeries. He deservedly lost his ears in the pillory, by a sentence of the law, for publishing obscene performances, and died Dec. 11, 1747.

CUROPALATE, John, author of a Greek history, from 813, to 1081.

CURRADI, Francesco, an Italian painter, who excelled in historical pieces; he died in 1660.

CURRAN, Rt. Hon. John Philipot, an eminent Irish lawyer, and orator, and sometime master of the rolls in Ireland, was born in the county of Cork, and died at Brompton, near London, Oct. 14, 1817, aged nearly 70 years. His oratory was completely sui generis; always the sudden burst of strong and passionate feelings, which seemed to rise in proportion as the grand conceptions of his mind became more and more illuminated by the coruscations of his wit,—the lightning flashes of a vigorous and highly poetical imagination.

CURRIE, Dr. James, an eminent medical and political writer, born at Kirkpatrick Fleming, in Dumfriesshire, May 31, 1756, died at Sidmouth, Aug. 31, 1805. Besides medical writings, which are numerous, he furnished, in 1800, a rich treat to the lovers of elegant literature, by publishing, in 4 vols. 8vo. "The Works of Robert Burnes, with an Account of his Life, and a Criticism on his Writings: to which are prefixed, some Observations on the Character and Condition of the Scottish Peasantry."

CURSON, or CORCFONE, Robert, an Englishman, chancellor of Paris university; he was made cardinal by pope Innocent III., and died in 1218.

CURTIS, William, a very distinguished botanist, born at Alton, in Hampshire, about 1746. His great work, "The Flora Londinensis," is highly interesting, not only to the man of science, but also to the farmer and agriculturist; as it combines the knowledge of entomology with that of botany. Mr. Curtis died at Brompton, near Knightsbridge, July 7, 1799.

CURTIVS, Quintus, a Latin historian, who has written the actions of Alexander the Great, in 10 books. Where this author was born, nobody pretends to know; and even when he lived is still a dispute among the learned, and never likely to be settled.

CURTIVS, Martius, a Roman, who, to benefit his country, plunged into a gulf, which caused his death, 362 B. C.

CURTIVS, Michael Conrad, professor of logic and metaphysics, at Lunenburg, and afterwards of history and rhetoric, at Marburg, &c., died in 1802.

CUSA, Nicholas de, a cardinal and bishop, so called from Cusa, the place of his birth. His parents were mean and poor; and it was his own personal merit which raised him to the height of dignity that he afterwards attained. He was a man of extraordinary parts and learning; particularly famous for his great knowledge in law and divinity; and withal, a great natural philosopher, and geometrician. He died in 1464, aged 63 years, and left many excellent works behind him.

CUSHING, William, LL. D. a judge of the supreme court of the state of Massachusetts, and of the supreme court of the United States, died in 1810.

CUSHING, Thomas, LL. D., speaker of the house of representatives, member of congress from the state of Massachusetts, and lieutenant governor of the same, died in 1788.

CUSHING, Nathan, a judge of the supreme court of the state of Massachusetts, died in 1812.

CUSHING, Thomas, LL. D., lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, much devoted to public life, and to the public good; he died in 1746.

CUSHING, Jacob, D. D., minister of Waltham, Mass., much esteemed, died in 1809.

CUSHMAN, Robert, one of the first emigrants to America, returned soon on business to England, where he died.

CUSPINIAN, John, a German historian, born in 1473, died in 1529. He was first physician to the emperor Maximilian I., and employed by that prince in several delicate negotiations.

CUSSAY, N. governor of Angers, who told the duke of Guise, when he ordered the protestants of Anjon to be massacred, that his fellow-citizens were brave and loyal, but not assassins.

CUSTINES, Adam Philippe, count de, a Frenchman, who assisted the Americans in the revolutionary war; he perished on the scaffold, for treason, in 1793.

CUTHBERT, an English saint, of sanctity, virtue, &c., died in 686.

CUTLER, John, an eminent physician and surgeon, in Boston, died in 1761.

CUTLER, Timothy, D. D., president of Yale College, a native of Charlestown, Mass. In 1722, becoming an episcopalian, he left the college, and went to England for orders; after his return, he was settled in Boston. He died in 1765.

He was distinguished for the fidelity and ability with which he discharged his public duties, and for his attachment to the institutions of his country. He died in 1811.

DANCER, Daniel, a most singular example of penuriousness, with the means of plenty. He lived at Pinner, in Middlesex, with a sister of his, who was of a congenial disposition; and, though possessed of 3000*l.* a-year, besides great sums in specie and bank notes concealed in different parts of his house, he denied himself the common necessaries of life. He usually had his body girt with a hayband, to keep together his tattered garments; the stockings he wore had been so frequently darned and patched, that scarcely any of the original could be seen; but in dirty or cold weather, they were thickly covered with ropes of hay, which served as substitutes for boots. He rarely washed his face or hands, and never allowed his bed to be made, or his house to be cleaned. He hid bank notes among the cobwebs in his cowhouse, and guineas in the fire-place, covered with soot. A number of singular eccentricities are recorded of him, in "Biographical Curiosities," 12mo, 1797. He died in October, 1794.

DANTE, Alighieri, an eminent Italian poet, born at Florence, in 1265. He discovered an early inclination and genius for poetry; but was ambitious; and, having attained some of the most considerable posts in the commonwealth, was crushed by the ruins of the faction which he embraced. He died in exile at Ravenna, in 1331. The most considerable of his works, is his poem entitled, "The Comedy of Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise."

DANTE, John Baptiste, of the same family, probably, with the preceding, and native of Perugia, was an excellent mathematician; and is memorable for having fitted a pair of wings so exactly to his body, as to be able to fly with them. He made the experiment several times over the lake Trasimenus, and succeeded so well, that he had the courage to perform before the whole city of Perugia. He shot himself from the highest part of the city, and directed his flight over the square, to the admiration of the spectators; but, unfortunately, the iron with which he managed one of his wings, failed, and then, not being able to balance weight of his body, he fell on a church, and broke his thigh. He flourished toward the end of the 15th century, and died before he was forty years old.

He was successively attorney-general and speaker of the House of Commons of Ireland; and, going over into England, he was, in 1626, appointed lord chief justice of the King's Bench; but before his installation, died suddenly of an apoplexy. His works on legal subjects are numerous and valuable. His chief poetical work was intitled "Nosce Teipsum."

DAVIES, Dr. John, born in Denbighshire toward the latter end of the 16th century, and highly esteemed for his knowledge of the history and antiquities of his own nation, and in the Greek and Hebrew languages. He assisted in translating the Bible into Welch in that correct edition which came out in 1620.

DAVIES, Thomas, born 1710, was for many years an actor on the London Stage. This profession he at length quitted for that of a bookseller. In 1780 he wrote and published "The Life of Mr. Garrick," which acquired him much fame and some money. He afterwards published "Dramatic Miscellanies," in 3 vols. in which he discovered much learning and critical acumen, and enlivened his work with many interesting and valuable anecdotes relating to the stage and its professors. His other works are, "Some Memoirs of Mr. Henderson," "A Review of Lord Chesterfield's Characters," "A Life of Massinger," "Lives of Dr. John Eachard, Sir John Davies, and Mr. Lillo;" and fugitive pieces without number, in prose and verse, in almost all the public newspapers. Mr. Davies died in 1785.

DAWSON, John, a mathematician, and an eminent teacher of mathematics in England, died in 1820.

DAY, John, an eminent English printer, and the first who printed in Greek and Saxon characters in England, died in 1594. He printed in 1549 the folio Bible, dedicated to Edward VI.

DAY, Thomas, was born in London, 1748, bred to the law, and called to the bar; but, disgusted with the technical nicety of legal process, he soon quitted Westminster Hall, devoted his mind to literary pursuits, and became the advocate of human kind. The admirable poem of "The Dying Negro," written by himself and the late John Bicknell, esq., and his "Fragment of a Letter on Slavery," mark him among the first of those who exerted their efforts to emancipate a large portion of the human race from cruelty and tyranny. His latest work, "The History of Sandford and Merton," will long remain an instance of the successful application of genius to form the minds of youth to active and manly virtue. Plain and simple in his habits, denying himself all the luxuries, and many of the conveniences of life, no man could expend less upon himself, or bestow more upon the necessities of others; and he devoted the greater part of an ample income to acts of public and private charity. Mr. D. lost his life Sept. 1789, by a fall from his horse.

DAYTON, Elias, early engaged in the war of the revolution, and continued in it till it ended; he died at Philadelphia, in 1807: he was then a major general.

DAYTON, John, governor of the state of South Carolina, afterwards a district judge of the United States, died in 1822.

DEACON, James, an English gentleman, known for his skill in music, painting and drawing, died in 1750.

DEAGEANT, DE ST. MARCELLIN, Guichard, a French writer and statesman, in the time of Lewis XIII.

DEANE, Silas, a native of Connecticut, was chosen a member of Congress in 1774, and afterwards appointed minister of the United States, at the court of France; he died in 1789.

DEBORAH, a prophetess of Israel, who composed a beautiful ode, 1285 B. C.

DE BURE, William Francis, a bookseller at Paris, well known for his "Bibliographie Instructive," 7 vols. 8vo.; he died in 1782.

DECATUR, Stephen, a captain in the navy of the United States, distinguished for his bravery and professional skill. He rendered himself conspicuous by his services at Tripoli, in 1804, by his actions with two British frigates, during the last war, and by his success, against the Algerines in 1815; and was afterwards a member of the board of navy commissioners until his death, which happened in a duel, in 1820.

DECEBABUS, a king of Dacia, whose country was reduced to a Roman province, by Trajan, in 105.

DECEMBRIO, Peter Candido, a native of Pavia, secretary to the pope, and afterwards to the king of Arragon. He wrote several lives, and translated some of the classics; he died in 1477.

DECHALES, Claudius Francis Milliet, an excellent mathematician, mechanic, and astronomer, born at Chambery, the capital of Savoy, in 1611. His principal performances have been collected in 3 vols. in folio, under the title of "Mundus Mathematicus;" being indeed a complete course of all the mathematics. He died professor of mathematics, in the university of Turin, in 1678.

DECIO, Philip, of Milan, a celebrated lecturer on jurisprudence at Pisa; died in 1635.

DECIUS, Publius, a Roman consul and brave general, memorable for having devoted himself for his country in a battle with the Latins, 340 B. C. Decius Mus, his son, followed his father's example, as did a grandson. The custom was, that the officer who devoted himself to the gods for the service of his country, after certain ceremonies of consecration, rushed, completely armed, into the enemy's foremost ranks, when his own despair of victory. Though this was an act of superstition which proved fatal to the hero, it re-animated his party, and occasioned them to gain the battle.

DECIUS, a Roman emperor after Philip. He perished with his army in a morass, fighting against the Goths, A. D. 251.

DECKER, or DECKER, John, a pious and learned Fleinish jesuit, who wrote much on Sacred Chronology, was born 1559, and died 1619.

DECKER, Thomas, a dramatic writer of some celebrity in the reign of James I. In his "Honest Whore," and the comedy of "Old Fortunatus," there are beauties, as to character, plot, and language, especially in the former, equal to those of any dramatic writer (Shakspeare excepted) that England has produced. The precise time of this author's birth and death are not recorded; yet he could not have died young, as the first play we find of his writing was published in 1600, and the latest date we meet with to any other is "The Wonder of a Kingdom," 1636.

DECOETLOGON, Charles Edward, an eminent English divine, assistant preacher to the chapel of the Lock-hospital, and rector of Godstone, in Surrey, died in 1820. His writings are principally on theological subjects.

DEDEKIND, Frederic, a German of the 16th century, who published a curious ironical eulogium on incivility and rudeness.

DEE, John, a great mathematician, and very extraordinary person in the republic of letters, born in London, 1527. He was a man of uncommon parts, learning, and application; and might have performed great things, if he had been possessed of a solid judgment; but he was extremely credulous and superstitious. He suffered himself to be deluded into an opinion, that by certain invocations, an intercourse or communication with spirits might be obtained; from whence he promised himself an insight into the occult sciences. He found a young man, one Edward Kelly, a native of Worcestershire, who had already dipped deep into these matters, and who readily undertook to be his instrument in them, for which he was to pay him 50*l.* per annum. Dec. 2, 1581, they began their incantations; in consequence of which, Kelly was, by the inspection of a certain table consecrated for that purpose, with many superstitious ceremonies, enabled to acquaint Dee with what the spirits thought fit to show and discover. These conferences were continued for about two years and the subjects of them committed to writing, but never published, though still preserved in Ashmole's museum. He travelled much abroad in company with Kelley, who had in his possession, as was reported, a philosophical powder of projection, by which they were furnished with money very profusely. In the latter end of his life, however, he became miserably poor; and it is highly probable, that he remained under his delusions to his death; for he was actually providing for a new journey into Germany, when, worn out by age and distempers, he died in 1608, aged 80, and was buried at Mortlake. His mathematical works are numerous and valuable.

DEFESCH, William, a German, eminent for his skill on the violin, died about 1750.

DE FOE, Daniel, equally famous for politics and poetry, was bred a hosiery. In that situation he was unsuccessful; and this probably induced him to apply to his pen for subsistence. Tutchin having, in 1700, written "The Foreigners," an infamous satire on king William and the whole Dutch nation, De Foe wrote "The True-born Englishman," as an antidote to it, and thereby recommended himself to the notice of his sovereign, who failed not to reward the author. He afterwards wrote an amazing number of tracts, 30 of which have been collected in two vols. 8vo. One of these tracts, entitled, "The shortest Way with the Dissenters," contained reflections against some ecclesiastics in power, for breathing too much a spirit of persecution. Becoming obnoxious to the ministry on this account, he was obliged to explain himself, which he did very clearly, for he was a man of great firmness: and when he was sentenced afterwards to stand in the pillory for attacking some measures which he thought unconstitutional and unjust, he not only cheerfully underwent the punishment, but at the same time wrote "A Hymn to the Pillory," as a defiance of their usage of him. But, after all, De Foe is by nothing better known at present, than by his interesting "History of Robinson Crusoe;" which, though a romance, is written in so natural a manner, and with so many probable incidents, that it was judged to be a true story for some time after its publication. He was born in London, 1660, and died at Islington, 1731.

DEGHUY, an eminent French engraver, died in 1748.

DEIDIER, Anthony, a medical professor, of Montpellier, author of a dissertation, "De Veneris Morbis."

DEJAURE, N. a promising French poet, who died young, in 1800. He wrote Lodoiska, an opera, which has been received with applause.

DEJOTARUS, king of Galatea, espoused the cause of Pompey, for which he was dethroned by Cæsar.

DELAMET, Adrian Augustin de Bussy, born in Picardy, a relation of Cardinal de Retz, whom he attended in his travels. He wrote "Dictionary of Cases of Conscience," 2 vols., and died in 1691.

DELANCY, James, a judge and chief justice of the supreme court of the colony of New-York, and afterwards lieutenant governor, died in 1760.

DELANY, Dr. Patrick, a theological writer of Ireland, but perhaps better known as the intimate friend and correspondent of Dean Swift, was born in Ireland, 1686, and died at Bath, 1768.

DELANY, Mary, wife of the foregoing, celebrated for her skill in painting, and in cutting flowers and other ornaments in paper, was born at Coulton, in Wiltshire, 1700, and died 1788.

DELAUNE, Thomas, wrote in 1683, "Plea for Nonconformity," which gave so much offence, that he was cast into prison, where he died.

DELAWARE, Thomas West, lord, governor of Virginia, in 1610. He felt a deep interest in the affairs of the colony, and may be considered as one of its first founders. He died near the mouth of Delaware bay, on his return from England, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health, in 1618.

DELEYRE, Alexander, a Frenchman, author of an analysis of Lord Bacon's works, 3 vols. 12mo., died in 1797.

DELFT, Jacob, a celebrated portrait painter of Delft, who died in 1661.

DELILLE, one of the most distinguished poetical authors that France has hitherto produced, died at Paris, December, 1814. He made at an early age, a masterly translation of Virgil's "Georgics" into French verse; wrote a counterpart to the Georgics, under the title, "Les Jardins;" translated the "Æneid," and wrote many original poems. In the latter period of his career, he published a translation of Milton's "Paradise Lost." Like most other authors, however, he appears to have left his posterity nothing but his writings; which, as his eulogist, M. Campenon, says, "Death cannot destroy, nor time annihilate."

DELIUS, Christopher Traugott, a native of Walhausen, an eminent mineralogist, and surveyor of the mines of Hungary and Venice, died in 1799.

DELMONT, Deodalt, a historical painter, pupil to Reubens, who highly esteemed him; he died in 1634.

DELOBEL, a French painter, of the 17th century, whose pieces adorn the churches and cathedrals of France.

DE LOLME. See LOLME.

DELRIO, Martin Anthony, a most learned man, born at Antwerp, 1551. The progress he made in letters, while a very boy, is recorded with wonder, having surprised the public when he was only 19 years of age with some good notes upon the tragedies of Seneca in which he cited almost 1100 authors, with all the assurance of a man who had read them thoroughly, and weighed their sentiments with great judgment and exactness. He died in 1608.

DELRIO, John, dean of Antwerp, who wrote commentaries on the 119th psalm: he died in 1624.

DE LUC. See LUC.

DEMADES, an Athenian orator, put to death by Cassander 332, B. C.

DEMARATUS, a king of Sparta, who resigned his crown, and retired to Persia.

DEMESTE, John, chaplain and chief surgeon to the forces of the prince of Liege, well known as the author of some letters on chymistry, died in 1783.

DEMETRIUS POLIORCETES, king of Macedonia, was highly honoured by the Athenians; he died 286 B. C.

DEMETRIUS, SOTER, king of Syria, was for some time a hostage at Rome, and was killed in battle, 150 B. C.

DEMETRIUS II, surnamed Nicanor, king of Syria, formed an alliance with the Jews; he was killed by the governor of Tyre, 235 B. C.

DEMETRIUS, PHALEREUS, a peripatetic philosopher of Athens, who lived in the time of Alexander the Great. Three hundred and sixty statues were erected to his honour in that city; and not undeservedly, since he is said to have augmented the revenues of it, as well as to have improved and polished its buildings. Nevertheless he died in banishment by the bite of an asp, 284 B. C. His writings consisted of poetry, history, politics, rhetoric, harangues, and embassies; but none are extant.

DEMETRIUS, a cynic philosopher, in the reign of Cæsar; he was banished by Vespasian for insolence.

DEMETRIUS, czar of Russia; which country he invaded, in 1604, with a small army, and seated himself on the throne; he reigned 11 months, and was then assassinated.

DE MISSY, Cæsar, a learned divine, born at Berlin, in 1703; he published some poetical pieces, and assisted Jortin in his life of Erasmus.

DEMOCEDES, a physician of Crotona, who afterwards became the slave and physician of Darius, king of Persia.

DEMOCRITUS, one of the greatest philosophers of antiquity, was born at Abdera, a town of Thrace, about the 80th Olympiad, that is, about 460 years before Christ.—He is said to have laughed at human life in general, which, Montaigne says, it was better to do than to imitate Heraclitus, who wept eternally about it; because adds he, mankind are not so unhappy as they are vain. He was the forerunner of Epicurus, whose system differs from his no otherwise than in some improvements.

DEMOIVRE, Abraham, an illustrious mathematician, born at Vitri, in Champagne, May 1667. His abilities were so admired by the Royal Society of London, that they judged him a fit person to decide the famous contest between Newton and Leibnitz. He published some capital works, but is generally known by his "Doctrine of Chances; or, Method of calculating the Probabilities of Events at Play." He died at London, in 1754.

DEMONAX, a philosopher, of Crete, in the reign of Adrian, who had the greatest contempt for riches.

DEMOSTHENES, one of the greatest orators of antiquity, if not the greatest, was born at Athens, in the 2d year of the 101st Olympiad; that is, about 370 years before Christ. It is universally agreed, that no orator ever spoke with such force, or had the passions of others so much in his power, as Demosthenes; insomuch that he actually appeared like one inspired. He opposed Philip of Macedonia with all his might, and Alexander after him. Alexander requested of the Athenians to have Demosthenes given up to him, but this was refused; yet, when Antipater, his successor, made the same request afterwards, it was granted. But Demosthenes would not be given up, and therefore escaped into the island of Calauria; where he imbibed poison that he had kept on purpose in a quill, to prevent his being taken alive. He died in the 3d year of the 114th Olympiad. There are extant under his name 61 orations, which have frequently been published. But, though he arrived at such perfection in this art, he set out under great disadvantages: for he had an impediment in his speech, which for a long time would not suffer him to pronounce the letter r, he had a weak voice, a short breath, and a very uncouth and ungracious manner; however, by dint of resolution and infinite pains, he overcame all these defects. He would climb up steep and craggy places, to help his wind and strengthen his voice; he would declaim with pebbles in his mouth, to remedy the imperfection in his speech; he would place a looking-glass before him, to correct the awkwardness of his gesture; and he learned of the best players the proper graces of action and pronunciation, which he thought of so much consequence that he made the whole art of oratory in a manner to consist of them. He was so intent upon study, that he would often retire into a cave of the earth, and shave half his head, so that he could not with decency appear abroad till his hair was grown again. He also accustomed himself to harangue at the seashore, where the agitation of the waves turned to him an idea or the commotion in a popular assembly, and served to prepare and fortify him against them. From these several kinds of hardships, which he imposed upon himself, it is plain that he was not so much born an orator, as an instance how far parts and application may go toward the forming of a great man in any profession.

DEMOURS, Peter, a native of Marseilles, known for his dexterity as a surgeon and oculist; he was author of some professional works, and died in 1795.

DEMPSTER, William, a learned Scotchman, who refuted Raymond Lully, and wrote an ecclesiastical history; he died in 1557.

DEMPSTER, Thomas, a Scotch historian and commentator, born 1579, died 1625. He was a very learned man, but of a singular character; being so prompt to draw his sword in quarrel, as to wield his pen, at any time. He became professor of the Belles Lettres, at Pisa, Nîmes, and Bologna, and had such a prodigious memory, that he used to say he knew not what it was to forget. This gained him the appellation of "The Living Library."

DEMPSTER, George, a Scotch lawyer, and a member of Parliament, in 1762. He retired from public life, and devoted himself to the improvement of the Highlands, until his death, in 1818.

DENELLE, one of the infamous friends of Marat, who killed his wife and five children with his own hands. He suffered a merited death, on the scaffold.

DENHAM, Sir John, an eminent poet, born in Dublin, in 1615. In 1641 he published his tragedy called "The Sophy," which was extremely admired by the best judges; and in 1642 was first printed his "Cooper's Hill," "a poem (says Dryden) which, for majesty of style, is, and ever will be, the standard of good writing." Pope has celebrated this poem very highly in his "Windsor Forest;" and all men of taste have agreed in their commendations of it. He died in 1668.

DENIS, Michael, principal keeper of the imperial library at Vienna, died in 1800. His writings on various subjects were highly esteemed.

DENMAN, Thomas, M. D. an eminent physician and writer on midwifery, born at Bake-well, Derbyshire, 1733, died in London, 1815.

DENNER, Balthasar, a portrait painter, of Hamburgh, who refused in London, 500 guineas for his picture of an old woman; he died in 1747.

DENNIE, William, proprietary governor of Pennsylvania, in 1756. He was superceded in 1759, as unpopular and obnoxious to the people.

DENNIE, Joseph, a native of Massachusetts, was educated a lawyer; he however soon relinquished the profession for literary pursuits, and as editor of the "Farmer's Museum," a newspaper published in New-Hampshire, and afterwards of the "Port Folio," in Philadelphia, gave evidence of a powerful and highly cultivated mind, and of a genius of superior order; he died in 1812.

DENNIS, John, a celebrated critic, born in London, 1657. Though it is now become fashionable to speak lightly of him, he had qualities enough to recommend him to the acquaintance of some of the most eminent personages for birth, wit, and learning, of his time; but the black passions were so predominant in him, and his pride, envy, jealousy, and suspicion, hurried him into so many absurd and ridiculous measures, that his life appears to have been nothing but a mixture of folly and madness.—He began to be a writer as early, if not earlier, than 1690, and so continued to the time of his death, which happened in 1733. He had better talents for judging of the performances of others, than for producing any thing of himself; which made a smart fellow say, that "Dennis was the fittest man in the world to instruct a dramatic writer; for he laid down excellent rules for writing good plays, and showed what were bad by his own."

DENNY, Sir Anthony, a man of great learning and piety, privy counsellor of Henry VIII., he died in 1550.

DENTON, John, an English divine, and prebendary of York, an intimate friend of Tillotson. He published some sermons and religious tracts and died in 1708.

DENTRECOLLES, Francis Xavier, a jesuit, who went to China as a missionary, in 1741, and wrote several works in the Chinese language.

DENYS, James, a historical painter, born at Antwerp in 1645.

D'EON. See EON.

DEPARCEUX, Anthony, a learned French mathematician, who published several valuable works; he died in 1768.

DERBY, James Stanley, earl of, an English nobleman, celebrated for his courage during the civil wars. He was finally taken and basely beheaded in 1651.

DERCYLLIDAS, a Lacedæmonian general, who avenged his country against the Persians, 400 B. C.

DEREING, Edward, an eminent divine, preacher at St. Paul's, London, before the court. He wrote sermons, lectures, &c.; he died 1576.

DERIAM, William, a very eminent philosopher and divine, born at Stoughton, near Worcester, 1657, and died 1735, having spent his life in the most agreeable and improving study of nature, and made all his researches there in subserviency to the cause of religion and virtue.—His works are extremely numerous; of these the best known are his "Physico-Theology; or, A Demonstration of the Being and Attributes of God, from his works of Creation;" and "Astro-Theology, or, A Demonstration of the Being and Attributes of God from a Survey of the Heavens;" both which are works of considerable merit.

DERING, Sir Edward, first a republican, and afterwards a royalist; a member of parliament during the civil wars. His speeches were published in 4to.

DERMODY, Thomas, a poet of considerable talent, but so devoid of common prudence, that the best of patronage was found to be useless to him. He was born in the south of Ireland, Jan. 1775. His father, who was a schoolmaster at Ennis for some time, is said to have employed this son, when only in his ninth year, as Greek and Latin assistant at his own school; and, to increase the wonder, we are told that he had written as much genuine poetry at ten, as either Cowley, Milton, or Pope, had produced at nearly double that age. With all his talent, however, he was of so uniformly depraved a conduct, that he no sooner excited compassion, and profited by generosity, than he despised, or at least neglected, the advice of his benefactors; and at length, wasted by disease, arising from habitual intemperance, he died at an obscure hovel, near Sydenham, Kent, 1802, in his 28th year.

DERRICK, Samuel, a linen draper of Dublin; afterwards a writer of pamphlets in London, and master of ceremonies at Bath and Tunbridge, died 1769.

DERYK, or DERICK, Peter Cornelius, a landscape painter of Delft; pupil of Jacobs. He died in 1030.

DERYKE, William, a historical painter at Antwerp, died 1697.

DESAGULIERS, John Theophilus, a celebrated lecturer on experimental philosophy, who made several improvements in mechanics, was born at Rochelle, in 1683, but went to England when an infant. His most celebrated publication is, "A Course of Experimental Philosophy, 1734," 2 vols 4to. He died in 1749.

DESAULT, Peter, a French physician, who wrote on the cure of syphilis, without salivation, and on the stone; he died in 1737.

DESAULT, Peter Joseph, a French surgeon, of great abilities, who attended Lewis XVII., and died, probably by poison, for this humanity. He was author of a valuable treatise on surgery, and died in 1795.

DES BARREAUX, James de Vallec, lord, a French nobleman, counsellor of parliament, at Paris. He was an infidel and libertine, but, before he died, gave himself up to meditation and penitence; he died in 1647.

DESBILLONS, Francis Joseph, a French

Jesuit, who, after spending 15 years in the college of Lewis XIV., at Paris, retired to publish his fables, 530 in number, 2 vols. He died in 1788.

DESBOIS, Francis Alexander, a Frenchman, author of a military dictionary, a dictionary of agriculture, and one of birds; he died in 1784.

DESCARTES. See CARTES.

DESERICIUS, or DESERITZ, Joseph Innocent, a Hungarian, made a Roman cardinal, author of many works, died in 1765.

DESGODETS, Anthony, a native of Paris, an eminent architect, taken by the Algerines, and kept 16 months in slavery. He wrote largely on the subject of his profession, and died in 1728.

DESHAIS, John Baptist Henry, a French painter, of very superior merit, who obtained the prize of the academy of Paris, in 1751. He died young.

DESIDERIUS, or DIDIER, the last king of Lombardy. He succeeded Astolphus, in 756.

DESMARIS, Joseph Francis Edward de Corsembleu, a generous and benevolent French writer, of great abilities, author of a comedy, and of some elegant poetry; he died in 1751.

DES MAIZEAUX, Peter, secretary of the royal society of London, was born at Auvergne, in 1666. He retired early, probably as a refugee, into England, and died there, in 1745. He had intimate connexions with St. Evremont and Bayle; gave a very handsome edition of the works of the former, in 3 vols. 4to, with the life of the author prefixed, and drew up the life of the latter, which was printed before the edition of his "Dictionary," in 1730. He published also the "Miscellaneous Works of Bayle," in 4 vols. folio. He was the editor of other things; and whatever he published, he always accompanied with literary anecdotes.

DESMARES, Toussaint, a French priest, who distinguished himself by his sermons, and other writings; he died in 1687.

DESMARETS, Nicholas, minister of state, and comptroller, in the reign of Lewis XIV., died in 1721.

DESMOULINS, Benedict Camille, the friend of Danton, and one of the original members of the Jacobin club, at Paris. He was one of the most vile and ferocious of that bloody club, and was beheaded in 1794.

DESMONTIER, Charles Albert, a French poet and dramatic writer, born at Villers Cotterets, in 1760, died in 1801.

D'ESPANGE, John, minister of a French congregation in London. He was admired as a preacher, and died in 1660.

DESPARD, Edward Marcus, an Irish officer, long in the English service, who laid a plan to assassinate his king, which being detected, he was tried and beheaded, in 1803.

DESPAUTERE, John, a Flemish grammarian, whose books were, at one time, in great repute; he died in 1520.

DESPIERRES, John, superior of the Benedictine college, at Donay, eminent as a mathematician and as a mechanic, died in 1664.

DESPLACES, an eminent French engraver, died in 1749.

DESPORTES, Claude, a painter, of Champagne, highly favoured by Lewis XIV. and XV., died in 1743.

DESSAIX, Louis Charles Anthony, a brave and very successful French general, in the revolutionary war, was born in August, 1768. He fell at the battle of Marengo, at the moment the victory turned in favour of his countrymen, in 1800, esteemed by the French soldiers, honoured by the Austrians, and beloved by all who knew him. His body was carried to Milan, embalmed, and placed in the hospital of Mount St. Bernard, where a monument has been erected to his memory. Dessaix, united to bravery, the most unimpeachable integrity; and well deserved of his country the superb monument since erected at Paris. On this, is commemorated the share he had in the great battles of Landau, Kehl, Weissembourg, Malta, Chebreis, the pyramids, Scidman, Sainmanhout, Kene, Thebes, and Marengo.

DESTOUCHES, Andre Cardinal, a celebrated French musician, born at Paris, in 1672, died in 1749.

DESTOUCHES, Philip Nericaut, a French dramatic writer, born at Tour, in 1680, died in 1754. Destouches had not the gayety of Regnard, nor the strong warm colouring of Moliere; but he is always polite, tender, and natural.

DEVAUX, John, a native of Paris, esteemed as a surgeon, and as the author of several works, died in 1739.

DEVEREUX, Robert, earl of Essex, born in Hertfordshire, in 1567, is memorable for having been a great favourite, and an unhappy victim to the arts of his enemies, and his own ambition, in the reign of queen Elizabeth. The first great shock he received in regard to the queen's favour, arose from a warm dispute between her majesty and himself, about the choice of some fit and able person to superintend the affairs of Ireland. The queen looked upon Sir William Knolles, uncle to Essex, as the most proper person for that charge: Essex contended that Sir George Carew was a much fitter man for it. When the queen could not be persuaded to approve of his choice, he so far forgot himself and his duty, as to turn his back upon her in a contemptuous manner; which insolence, her majesty not being able to bear, she gave him a box on the ear, and bid him go and be hanged. He immediately clapped his hand on his sword; and the lord admiral stepping in between, he swore a great oath, declaring that he neither could nor would put up with an affront of that nature; that he would not have taken it at the hands of Henry VIII., and in a great passion immediately withdrew from court. He was afterwards reconciled and restored, in appearance, to the queen's favour; yet there is good reason to doubt whether he ever recovered it in reality; and his friends have been apt to date his ruin from this unlucky accident. He was executed on a charge of treason, Feb. 25, 1601.

DEVEREUX, Robert, earl of Essex, son of Elizabeth's favourite, appeared in parliament a violent opposer to the measures of government, and fought many battles at the head of the republican troops; he died in 1645.

D'EWES, Sir Symonds, an eminent English historian, and antiquary, born at Coxden, in Suffolk, 1602, died in 1650. When he was little more than 30 years of age, he had finished that large and accurate work for which he is chiefly memorable, viz. "The Journals of all the Parliaments during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, both Lords and Commons," &c.

DEWEY, Daniel, an eminent lawyer, of Massachusetts, was a member of the council of that state, a member of congress, and a judge of the supreme court of the state; he died in 1815.

DE WITT, John, the famous pensionary, was the second son of Jacob De Witt, (burgomaster of Dort, and deputy to the states of Holland;)

and born at Dort, in 1625. He was the zealous patron of the glory and liberty of his native country; the greatest genius of his time; the ablest politician in war as well as peace; the atlas of the commonwealth: but was barbarously murdered by a Dutch mob, in 1672. De Witt wrote a book containing those maxims of government upon which he acted, which will be a never fading monument to his immortal memory. It shows the true and genuine principles of policy, on which alone it is possible to erect an administration profitable at home, and which must command respect abroad. A translation of it from the original Dutch, entitled "The true Interest and political Maxims of the Republic of Holland," has been printed in London.

DE WITT, James, a painter, of Amsterdam. His best work is Moses appointing the 70 elders. He was born in 1695.

DEXTER, Samuel, LL. D., an eminent lawyer and statesman, of Massachusetts, was born in 1761. Soon after he commenced the practice of the law, he was chosen a member of congress, and afterwards of the senate of the United States, where he gained a high reputation for talents and eloquence. Under the first president Adams, he was appointed secretary of the treasury, and acting secretary of state. In 1815, he declined the office of minister to Spain, and died suddenly the following year, at Athens, in New-York.

DEYNUM, John Baptist Van, an eminent miniature painter, of Antwerp, born in 1620.

DEYSTER, Lewis, an eminent painter and engraver, of Bruges, died in 1711. His daughter Anne was equally famous as a painter.

D'HOSIER, Peter, a native of Marseilles, the first who formed genealogies into science, died in 1660.

DIACONUS, Paulus, a Lombard, who composed the history of the Lombards, in 6 books, died in 1770.

DIAGORAS, surnamed the Atheist, flourished in Athens, in the 91st Olympiad; that is, about 412 years before Christ. The history of his atheism, is thus told. He delighted in making verses, and had composed a poem which a certain poet had stolen from him. He sued the thief, who swore he was not guilty of the crime; and soon after, he gained a great reputation by publishing that work as his own. Diagoras, considering that he who had injured him had not only escaped unpunished for his theft and perjury, but also acquired glory thereby, concluded that there was no Providence, nor any gods, and wrote some books to prove it. He died by shipwreck.

DIAZ, Bartholomew, a Portuguese navigator, who discovered, in 1486, the extreme point of Africa, now called the Cape of Good Hope.

DIAZ, John, a Spaniard, who embraced the doctrines of Luther, for which, his brother, Alphonsus, a violent catholic, hired an assassin to dash out his brains, in 1546.

DIBDIN, Charles, a celebrated song-writer, and dramatist. In the former character, he had scarcely an equal, as to the number or the merit of his compositions. His songs amount to upwards of 1200; and it may truly be said, that though a great portion of them are in praise of love and festivity, not one passage can be found in the whole number, of a licentious tendency. On the contrary, they are calculated to support the interests of virtue, and to exercise the best affections of the heart, as well as to enforce the duties of loyalty and patriotism. The influence of his songs upon seamen, has long been known, and probably has strongly contributed to stimulate their heroism, and inculcate submission to the hardships of their profession, and to the will of Providence. His "Poor Jack" is a striking and popular example of this. In the earlier part of his life, he possessed considerable merit as an actor. Mr. Dibdin was born at Southampton, about 1748, and died at Camden Town, near London, July 25, 1814.

DICEARCHUS, a disciple of Aristotle, born at Messina, in Sicily, was a good philosopher, historian, and mathematician, and composed a great many books upon various subjects, and in all sciences, which were much esteemed.

DICENEUS, an Egyptian philosopher, in the age of Augustus.

DICETO, Ralph de, was dean of St. Paul's, London, and author of English history, lives of English kings, &c.; he died in 1210.

DICK, Sir Alexander, an English physician, president of the college of physicians, at Edinburgh. He introduced the culture of rhubarb in England, and died in 1785.

DICKINSON, Edmund, an eminent and learned physician and scholar, who wrote in defence of the Scriptures, as well as on medicine. He was physician to Charles II., and died in 1707.

DICKINSON, Jonathan, first president of New-Jersey college; he published several sermons, besides some miscellaneous works, and died in 1747.

DICKINSON, John, a distinguished political writer, and friend of his country, a native of Delaware, and member of the first congress; he died in 1807.

DICKINSON, Philemon, a brave officer, in the revolutionary war, particularly active in the battle of Monmouth; he died in 1809.

DICKSON, David, a Scotch divine, educated at Glasgow, and divinity professor at Edinburgh. His violence against the episcopals subjected him to persecution; he died in 1664.

DICTYUS CRETENSIS, a very ancient historian, who, serving under Idomeneus, a king of Crete, in the Trojan war, wrote the history of that expedition, in nine books; and Tzetzes tells us, that Homer formed the "Iliad" upon his plan.

DIDEROT, Dionysius, a celebrated French poet, and writer on physics, geometry, and metaphysics, ethics, and the belles lettres, was the son of a cutler, and born at Langres, in 1713. He conceived the stupendous design of a "Dictionnaire Encyclopedique," which, assisted by D'Alembert and others, he accomplished, himself compiling the descriptions of arts and trades. So ill was he paid for above 20 years labour at this book, that he was compelled to expose his library to sale, for a subsistence. The empress of Russia ordered it to be bought for her at the price of 50,000 livres, and generously left him the use of it during his life. Certain positions on government and religion, in the "Encyclopedique," have exposed Diderot to the charge of having favoured atheistical and anarchical principles, or what at the present day is termed Jacobinism. Diderot died suddenly, in July, 1784.

DIDIUS JULIANUS, M. Salvius Severus, a Roman emperor, who purchased the diadem of a corrupt soldiery. He reigned 66 days, and was put to death, A. D. 193.

DIDO, or ELISSA, queen of Carthage, fled from Tyre, to the coast of Africa, where she founded a new empire.

DIDOT, Francis Ambrose, a most eminent French printer, born at Paris, 1730, and classically educated. He introduced a number of improvements, not only in printing-presses (of which the present time is profiting) but also in mills for making fine paper. One of his sons became a celebrated type-founder. Didot died, it is supposed, from too strict an application to the correction of the press of a stereotype edition of Montagne's works (every sheet of which he read five times, and corrected carefully before it was sent to the press) July 10, 1804. His business is still successfully carried on by his sons, Peter and Firmin Didot.

DIDYMUS, of Alexandria, an eminent grammarian, in the age of Augustus, said to have written 400 books.

DIDYMUS, of Alexandria, an ecclesiastical writer of the 4th century.

DIECMAN, John, rector of the university of Stade, and author of several theological and philosophical works, died in 1720.

DIEMEN, Anthony Van, a governor-general of the Dutch East India settlements. In 1642, he sent Tasman on a voyage to the south; the consequence of which was, the discovery of that part of New Holland called Van Diemen's Land. He died in 1645.

DIEMERBROEK, Isbrand, a professor of physic and anatomy at Utrecht, born 1609, practised physic, and read public lectures with great reputation, and died 1674.

DIEPENBECK, Abraham, a painter, who studied with Reubens; first painted on glass, and afterwards in oil; he died at Antwerp, in 1675.

DIEST, Adrian Van, a landscape painter, of the Hague, who painted plants in England; he died in 1704.

DIETRIC, John Conrad, a Lutheran, born in Wetteravia, and professor of Greek in his own town. He was a classical scholar and author; he died in 1667.

DIETRICH, John William Ernest, born at Weimar, a celebrated painter, died in 1774.

DIETRY, a painter, of Dresden, who succeeded particularly in landscape views, died in 1730.

DIEU, Lewis de, an eminent divine, born at Flushing. He refused to be court minister at the Hague, and went to Leyden, where he was made divinity professor. He published many learned works, and died in 1642.

DIGBY, Everard, an English gentleman educated at Cambridge. He wrote some curious, and learned books in Latin, and died in 1592.

DIGBY, Sir Everard, born 1581, was drawn in to be privy to the gunpowder plot; and though not a principal actor in that dreadful affair, nor indeed an actor at all, yet he offered 1500*l.* toward defraying the expenses of it; entertained Guy Fawkes, who was to have executed it in his house; and was taken in open rebellion with other papists after the plot was detected and had miscarried. He was, with other conspirators, upon the 30th of January, 1605-6, hanged, drawn, and quartered, at the west end of St. Paul's church, in London.

DIGBY, Sir Kenelm, a very famous English philosopher, and eldest son of sir Everard, was born at Gotherst, in Buckinghamshire, 1603, and died on his birthday, in 1665. Having read the writings of Descartes, he resolved to go to Holland on purpose to see him. He did so, and found him at his retirement at Edmond. Des Maizeaux, in his life of St. Evremoud, tells us of a conversation between these great men, about lengthening out life to the period of the patriarchs. Descartes assured Sir Kenelm that he had long been projecting a scheme for that purpose; and a very notable one undoubtedly it would have been, if that philosopher had but lived; but he had the misfortune to die just before he could bring it to bear.

DIGBY, Lord George, an English nobleman of great parts, son of John Digby, earl of Bristol, was born at Madrid, 1612. "He was (says a late writer, somewhat severely) a singular person, whose life was one contradiction. He wrote against popery, and embraced it: he was a zealous opposer of the court, and a sacrifice for it: was conscientiously converted in the midst of his prosecution of lord Stafford, and was most unconscientiously a prosecutor of lord Clarendon. With great parts, he always hurt himself and his friends; romantically brave, he was always an unsuccessful commander. He spoke for the test-act, though a Roman Catholic; and addicted himself to astrology on the birthday of true philosophy." He died earl of Bristol, 1678.

DIGBY, John, made gentleman of the privy chamber by James I, who afterwards knighted him, and sent him ambassador to Spain. He was the author of some poems, and died, in exile, at Paris, in 1653.

DIGGES, Leonard, an English gentleman, famous for his mathematical learning, died about 1574.

DIGGES, Thomas, only son of Leonard Digges, and one of the greatest mathematicians of his age, died 1595.

DIGGES, Sir Dudley, master of the rolls to Charles I., was eldest son of Thomas Digges, just mentioned, and born 1583. He was, it is said, a great asserter of his country's liberty in the worst of times, when the sluices of prerogative were opened, and the banks of the law were almost overwhelmed by the inundations of it. He was author of several literary performances, and died 1639.

DIGGES, Thomas, brother of Sir Dudley, a learned man, who translated several works from the Latin and Spanish; he died in 1635.

DIGGES, Dudley, third son of Sir Dudley. He wrote on the unlawfulness of subjects taking up arms against their sovereign, and died in 1643.

DIGGES, Edward, governor of Virginia, in 1654. His administration was judicious, and calculated to improve the condition of the colony. He was afterwards sent to England as agent for the colony.

DILLENIUS, John James, an eminent German botanist, who was the first professor of botany at Oxford. He was the friend and correspondent of Linnaeus. His drawings and manuscripts still remain at Oxford; he died in 1747.

DILLON, Westworth, earl of Roscommon. See Roscommon.

DILWORTH, Thomas, a school-master of Wapping, England, well known by two or three useful school-books which he compiled, and which have gone through editions almost innumerable. Mr. Dilworth died in 1781.

DIMSDALE, Thomas, an eminent English physician, whose celebrity was such, that the empress Catharine requested him to visit Russia, where he inoculated herself and son with the small-pox; he died in 1800.

DINARCHUS, a Greek orator, the pupil of Theophrastus, 340 B. C.

DINGLEY, Robert, an English puritan, and author; was rector of Brixton, in the Isle of Wight; he died in 1659.

DINO, professor of jurisprudence at Bologna, and author of some valuable works, died in 1307.

DINOCRATES, a celebrated ancient architect, of Macedonia, employed by Alexander in building the city of Alexandria. Another memorable instance of Dinocrates' architectonic skill is, his restoring and building, in a more august and magnificent manner than before, the celebrated temple of Diana at Ephesus, after Eratosthratus, for the sake of immortalizing his name, had destroyed it by fire.

DINOSTRATUS, a mathematician, the pupil of Plato, and inventor of the quadratic curve.

DINOTH, Richard, a protestant writer of France, who wrote an accurate work, "De Bello civili Gallico," and died in 1680.

DINOUART, Anthony Joseph Toussaint, rendered famous by his periodical publications in Paris, which drew upon him, troubles and lawsuits; he died in 1715.

DINWIDDIE, Robert, succeeded Lee as governor of Virginia, in 1752. Braddock's expedition and defeat, occurred under his administration. He left the colony in 1757, and died in England, in 1770.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, a celebrated orator and philosopher of the 1st century, born at Prusa, a city of Bithynia, and called Chrysostom, on account of his eloquence. There are extant of his, 80 orations and dissertations upon political, moral, and philosophical subjects.

DIOCLEES, a mathematician in the 5th century inventor of the cissoid or curve line.

DIOCLESIAN, Caius Valerius, a Roman emperor, whose bloody persecution of the Christians forms a chronological era, called the Era of Dioclesian, or the Martyrs; it was for a long time in use in theological writings, and is still followed by the Coptes and Abyssinians. It commenced August 29th, A. D. 284.—Dioclesian was born 233, and died 313.

DIODATI, John, a famous minister, and professor of theology at Geneva, born at Lucca, in 1379, died at Geneva, in 1652. He is distinguished by translations of "The Bible into Italian," "The Bible into French," and of "Father Paul's History of the Council of Trent into French."

DIODORUS SICULUS, an ancient historian, born at Agrium, in Sicily, flourished in the times of Julius Caesar and Augustus. Diodorus says, in the beginning of his history, that he was no less than 30 years in writing it, in the capital of the world, viz. Rome. He calls his work not a "History," but a "Historical Library;" and had comprised in forty books, the most remarkable events which had happened in the world during the space of 1138 years; but, to the great grief of the curious, of the 40 books, only 15 are now extant.

DIODORUS, bishop of Tarsus, eminent as a divine and as an instructor of youth, in the 4th century.

DIOPENES, a philosopher of Babylon, 200 B. C. He succeeded Zeno in his school.

DIOPENES, the Cynic, was born at Sinope, a city of Pontus, 413 B. C., and expelled from thence for coining false money; as was his father also, who was a banker. He retired to Athens, and prevailed on the philosopher Antisthenes to become his master. He not only submitted to the kind of life which was peculiar to the followers of that founder of the Cynics, but added new degrees of austerity to it. He ordered somebody to provide him a cell; but, as that order was not speedily executed, he grew impatient, and lodged himself in a tub. He looked down on all the world with scorn, and magisterially censured all mankind. Alexander one day paid him a visit, and made him an offer of riches, or any thing else; but all that the philosopher requested of him was, to stand from betwixt him and the sun: as if he had said, "Do not deprive me of the benefits of nature, and I leave to you those of fortune." The conqueror was so affected by the vigour and elevation of his soul as to declare, "that if he were not Alexander he would choose to be Diogenes:" that is, if he were not in possession of all that was pompous and splendid in life, he would, like Diogenes, heroically despise it. Diogenes had a great presence of mind, as appears from his smart sayings and quick repartees; and Plato is thought to have passed no ill judgment upon him, when he called him "a mad Socrates." He died at Corinth when he was about 90 years old: but authors are not agreed either as to the time or manner of his death. Jerome says that he strangled himself.

DIOPENES, a Cretan philosopher, the successor of Anaximenes, 500 B. C.

DIOPENES LAERTIUS, an ancient Greek author, who wrote ten books of the "Lives of the Philosophers," still extant.

DIOPENES, a philosopher, preceptor to Marcus Aurelius.

DION, a Syracusan, celebrated as the friend of Plato, and the opponent of the Dionysii, tyrants of Sicily; he was murdered, 354 B. C.

DION CASSIUS, an ancient Roman historian, known also by the surnames of Coceius and Coccianus, was born at Nicæa, a city of Bithynia, and flourished in the 3d century. His history began from the building of Rome, and proceeded to the reign of Alexander Severus. What we now have of it begins with the expedition of Lucullus against Mithridates, king of Pontus, about the year of Rome 684, and ends with the death of the emperor Claudius, about the year 806.

DIONIS, Peter, a French surgeon, and the first who demonstrated anatomical dissections and chyrurgical operations, established by Lewis XIV., in the royal garden of plants. This ingenious person died in 1718.

DIONYSIUS I., tyrant of Sicily, raised himself from obscurity to the throne; he reigned 40 years, and died 366 B. C.

DIONYSIUS II., succeeded his father as tyrant of Sicily, and was expelled by Dion, 343 B. C.

DIONYSIUS, a tyrant of Heraclea, who married a niece of Darius, died 304 B. C.

DIONYSIUS, a bishop of Corinth, who suffered martyrdom in 178.

DIONYSIUS, an ancient poet and geographer, wrote a great number of pieces; but his "Periegesis," or "Survey of the World," is the only one that we have remaining; and it would be superfluous to say, that this is one of the most exact systems of ancient geography, when it has been related that Pliny himself proposed it for his pattern.

DIONYSIUS, bishop of Rome, condemned the heresy of the Sabellians in a full synod, died in 269.

DIONYSIUS HALICARNASSENSIS, a historian and critic of antiquity, born at Halicarnassus, a town in Caria; which is also memorable for having produced Herodotus before him. His history is intitled "Of the Roman Antiquities," and was comprised in 20 book of which only the first 11 are now extant. The reputation of this historian stands very high on many accounts. As to what relates to chronology, all the critics have been apt to prefer him even to Livy himself; than his style and diction, nothing can be more pure, more clear, or more elegant.—But, besides the “Roman Antiquities,” there are other writings of his extant, critical and rhetorical. His most admired piece in this way is, “De Structura Orationis.”

DIONYSIUS, a Romish monk, called “The Little,” in the 5th century; he compiled or wrote several works.

DIONYSIUS, bishop of Alexandria, born a heathen, was a diligent inquirer after truth, which he looked for in vain among the sects of philosophers; but at last found it in Christianity. He was made bishop of Alexandria, in 247, and died 267.

DIONYSIUS, the Areopagite, a learned Athenian, member of the court of Areopagus, was converted to Christianity by the preaching of St. Paul.

DIOPHANTUS, a celebrated mathematician, of Alexandria, reputed to have been the inventor of algebra. When Diophantus lived, is not known. His reputation, however, appears to have been very high among the ancients, who made no scruple to rank him with Pythagoras and Euclid, in mathematical learning.

DIOSCORIDES, Pedacius, an eminent physician, of Anaxarba, since called Casarea, in Cilicia, who flourished in the reign of Nero, and composed five books of the “Materia Medica.”

DIPPEL, John Conrad, a curious and extravagant character, who pretended to have discovered the philosopher’s stone, and yet was confined for debt. He travelled in almost all parts of Europe, and wrote several books; he died in 1734.

DIROIS, Francis, doctor of the Sorbonne, wrote several books on religious subjects; he died in 1700.

DISNEY, John, D. D., an eminent English clergyman, chaplain to bishop Law, and vicar of Swinderly, died in 1816. His biographical sketches of distinguished individuals, have added to his reputation.

DITHMAR, a monk, bishop of Mersburg, known as the author of a chronicle of the emperors Henry I., Otho II. and III., and Henry II., died in 1028.

DITHMAR, Justus Christopher, historical professor, at Frankfurt. His work on the history of Germany displays great learning; he died in 1737.

DITTON, Humphrey, a mathematical and theological writer, born at Salisbury, in 1675, died in 1715.

DIVINI, Eustachius, an Italian artist, employed in making telescopes, died in 1664.

DIXWELL, John, one of the judges who condemned the unfortunate Charles I. to the block. At the restoration, he fled to America, and resided at New-Haven until his death, in 1688.

DLUGOSS, John, a Pole, archbishop of Leopold, and author of a history of Poland, in Latin; he died in 1480.

DOBBS, Arthur, governor of North Carolina, died in 1765, after an impolitic, unpopular, and weak administration of 12 years.

DOBSON, William, an English painter, born in 1610. How much he was beholden to Vandyke, may easily be seen in all his works, no painter having ever come so near to the perfection of that excellent master as this happy imitator. He was also further indebted to the generosity of Vandyke, in presenting him to Charles I., who took him into his immediate protection. He died in 1647.

DOD, John, an English non-conformist, whose pious observations were once very popular. He was an eminent Hebrew scholar, and died in 1645.

DODART, Denys, physician to Lewis XIV., and member of the French academy of sciences, born in 1634. Among other things, he was the author of a “Statica Medicina Gallica; and died in 1707. Guy Patin called him “monstrum sine vitio,” a prodigy of wisdom and science, without any defect.

DODD, Dr. William, an ingenious divine, of unfortunate memory, was born 1729, at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, of which place his father, being a clergyman, was vicar. In 1753, he received orders; and, being settled in London, soon became a popular and celebrated preacher. He obtained several lectureships, and advanced his theological character greatly by an almost uninterrupted publication of sermons, and tracts of piety. For the same purpose also, he was very zealous in promoting and assisting at charitable institutions, and distinguished himself much in regard to the Magdalen hospital, which was opened in August, 1753: he became preacher at the chapel of this charity, for which he was allowed yearly 100l. But, notwithstanding his attention to spiritual concerns, he was by no means negligent in cultivating his temporal interests; for, besides writing constantly in the Public Ledger, he superintended and contributed largely to the “Christian’s Magazine;” for which he received from the proprietors 100l. yearly. The truth is, Dodd’s finances by no means answered his style and manner of living: they were indeed much too small for it; and this obliged him to recur to such methods of augmenting them. Happy if he had never recurred to expedients worse than these!—Still, however, he preserved theological appearances, and now meditated a design of publishing a large “Commentary on the Bible,” which he began to publish in weekly and monthly numbers, and continued to publish it regularly till it was completed, in 3 vols. folio. In 1766, he took the degree of LL. D., at Cambridge, having been made a chaplain to the king some time before. In 1772, he was presented to the living of Hockliffe, in Buckinghamshire: but what could such preferment as this avail? The habits of expense had gained a wonderful ascendancy over him: he was vain, he was pompous, which persons emerging from low situations of life are apt to be, and thus became involved and sinking under debts. To relieve himself, he was tempted to a step which ruined him for ever with the public; and this was, to procure by indirect means, the rectory of St. George’s, Hanover Square. On the preferment of Dr. Moss to the see of Bath and Wells, in 1774, that rectory fell to the disposal of the crown: upon which, Dodd caused an anonymous letter to be sent to lady Apsley, offering the sum of 3000l., if by her means he could be presented to the living. Alas! he was unfortunate in his woman: the letter was immediately communicated to the chancellor, and, after being traced to the sender, laid before the king. His name was in consequence ordered to be struck out of the list of chaplains. From this period every step led to complete his ruin. In the summer of 1776, he went to France; but returned in the beginning of winter, and proceeded to exercise his function as usual, particularly at the Magdalen Chapel, where his last sermon was preached Feb. 2, 1777. Two days after this, he signed a bond, which he had forged, as from his pupil, lord Chesterfield, for the sum of £2000., and upon the credit of it obtained a considerable sum of money; but detection instantly following, he was committed to prison; tried and convicted at the Old Bailey, Feb. 24, and executed at Tyburn, June 27.

DODDRIDGE, or DODERIDGE, Sir John, one of the judges of the king's bench, about 1630, and the author of many works on the laws of England.

DODDRIDGE, Dr Philip, an eminent dissenting minister, born in London, in 1702, died 1751. He was 21 years pastor of a meeting-house, at Northampton; director of a flourishing academy; and author of many excellent writings; in which, his pious, benevolent, and indefatigable zeal, to make men wise, good, and happy, is every where manifest. He left many works behind him; the principal of which are "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, illustrated in a course of serious and practical Addresses, suited to persons of every Character and Circumstance;" and "The Family Expositor, containing a Version and Paraphrase of the New Testament, with Critical Notes; and a Practical Improvement of each Section," in 6 vols. 4to.

DODOENS, or DODONÆUS, Rambert, physician of the emperor Maximilian II., and Rodolphus II. He was a botanist, and professor at Leyden, and died in 1555.

DODSLEY, Robert, an eminent bookseller, and ingenious writer, born at Mansfield, in Nottinghamshire, in 1703. His first setting out in life, was in a servile station, (footman to the honourable Mrs. Lowther:) from which, however, his abilities very soon raised him; for, having written "The Toyshop," and that piece being shown to Mr. Pope, the delicacy of satire which is conspicuous in it, though clothed with the greatest simplicity of design, so strongly recommended its author to the notice of that celebrated poet, that he continued from that time to the day of his death, a warm friend and zealous patron to Mr. Dodsley. His farce, called "The King and Miller of Mansfield," made its appearance the ensuing year, viz. 1736. From the success of these pieces, he entered into that business which, of all others, has the closest connexion with, and the most immediate dependence on, persons of genius and literature, viz. that of a bookseller. In this station, Mr. Pope's recommendation, and his own merit, soon obtained him not only the countenance of persons of the first abilities, but also of those of the first rank, and, in a few years, raised him to great eminence in his profession, of which he was almost, if not altogether, at the head. He wrote six dramatic pieces, which are enumerated in the "Biographia Dramatica;" and besides these, he published in his life-time, "The Muse in Livry;" "Friendly Advice to his Brethren," 1732: a little collection of his own works in one vol. 8vo, under the modest title of "Trifles," 1745; and a poem of considerable length, entitled "Public Virtue," 1754, 4to. A second volume of "Trifles," was collected after his death, consisting of, 1. "Cleone;" 2. "Melpomene, or the Regions of Terror and Pity, an Ode;" 3. "Agriculture, a Poem;" and 4. "The Economy of Human Life." Mr. Dodsley also executed two works of great service to the cause of genius, as they are the means of preserving pieces of merit, that might otherwise sink into oblivion; viz. the publication of "A Collection of Poems by different eminent Hands," in 6 vols. 8vo, and "A Collection of Plays by old Authors," in 12 vols. 12mo. He died Sept. 25, 1764.

DODSON, Michael, an English lawyer, and commissioner of bankrupts. Author of a translation of Isaiah, and several ives; he died in 1799.

DODSWORTH, Roger, born in Yorkshire, in 1585, died 1654. Mr. Gough (Topographer of Yorkshire) thus speaks of him: "One cannot approach the borders of this county without paying tribute to the memory of that indefatigable collector of its antiquities, Roger Dodsworth, who undertook and executed a work, which, to the antiquaries of the present age, would have been the stone of Tydides. 122 volumes of his own writing, besides original MSS. which he had obtained from several hands, making altogether 162 volumes folio, now lodged in that celebrated repository of ancient monuments, the Bodleian library, at Oxford, are lasting memorials of what his country owes to him; as the two volumes of the "Monasticon" (which, though published under his and Dugdale's names conjointly, were both collected and written totally by him) will immortalize that extensive industry which has laid the whole kingdom under obligation."

DODWELL, Henry, a most learned and pious man, born at Dublin, in 1641, died 1711, having written a great number of theological works.

DODWELL, Henry, eldest son of the preceding, was author of a pamphlet, "Christianity not founded on argument."

DOES, Jacob Vander, a Dutch painter, whose landscapes are very much admired, died in 1673.

DOES, Jacob Vander, son of the preceding, who displayed promising talents as a painter, but died aged 19.

DOES, Simon Vander, brother to the preceding. His landscapes, battles, &c., are in a pleasing style; he died in 1717.

DOGGET, Thomas, a comedian, formerly belonging to Drury-lane Theatre, where he became joint manager with Wilkes and Cibber; in which situation he continued till, on a dispute he took in the year 1712, at Mr. Booth's being forced on them as a sharer in the management, he threw up his part in the property of the theatre, though it was looked on to have been worth 1000l. per annum. As an actor, he had great merit; and his cotemporary, Cibber, informs us, that he was the most original, and the strictest observer of nature, of any actor of his time. He died in 1721. In his political principles, he was, in the words of Sir Richard Steele, a "whip up to the head and ears;" and so strictly was he attached to the interests of the house of Hanover, that he never let slip any occasion that presented itself of demonstrating his sentiments in that respect. One instance, among others, is well known; which is, that the year after George I. came to the throne, this performer gave a waterman's coat and a silver badge to be rowed for by six watermen, on the first day of August, being the anniversary of that king's accession to the throne; and, at his death, bequeathed a certain sum of money, the interest of which was to be appropriated annually, for ever, to the purchase of a like coat and badge, to be rowed for in honour of the day; which ceremony is every year performed on the 1st of August, the claimants setting out, at a signal given, at that time of the tide when the current is strongest against them, and rowing from the Old Swan, near London bridge, to the White Swan, at Chelsea. As a writer, Dogget left behind him only one comedy, which has not been performed in its original state for many years, entitled "The Country Wake, 1696," 4to. It has been altered, however, into a ballad-farce, which occasionally makes its appearance under the title of "Flora, or Hob in the Well."

DOISSIN, Lewis, a Jesuit, who wrote elegant Latin verses on the subject of sculpture and engraving, died in 1753.

DOLABELLA, P. Cornelius, son-in-law of Cicero, a friend of Cæsar, and governor of Syria, put an end to his life at 27 years of age.

DOLBIN, John, a man of education, major in the king's service, during the civil wars, and afterwards dean of Westminster, and bishop of Rochester; he died in 1668.

DOLCE, Lewis, a native of Venice, a poet, translator of some of the ancient authors, and author of several learned works, died in 1568.

DOLCE, Carlo, a painter, of Florence. His St. John, painted when he was only 11 years old, is much admired; he died in 1686.

DOLET, Stephen, a learned Frenchman, a painter and bookseller, at Lyons, was burnt for atheism, in 1546.

DOLLOND, John, a very eminent optician, and the inventor of the achromatic telescope, was born in Spital-fields, June 10, 1706, died Nov. 30, 1761. He was reading a new publication of M. Clairaut, on the Theory of the Moon, and on which he had been long intently engaged when he was seized with apoplexy, and died in a few hours after. The business and the abilities of the father were inherited by his two sons, Peter and John.

DOLLOND, Peter, son of the optician, known as the author of papers communicated to the royal society, on his improvement of the telescope, on his alterations of Hadley's quadrant, &c., died in 1820, aged 90.

DOLOMIEU, Deodat, an eminent French naturalist, who visited all the volcanic regions of Italy, and was afterwards sent, among other men of science, to collect and describe the antiquities and natural curiosities of Egypt. Returning from that country, he was driven into Naples, and there committed to a close and loathsome confinement; but, after suffering a long captivity, he was liberated by the humane interposition of the celebrated Sir Joseph Banks. He had scarcely reposed after his fatigues, when he went to visit Mont Simplicon, whence he returned rich in mineralogical acquisitions; when a disease, which commenced in his imprisonment, terminated his career, December, 1801.

DOMAT, John, a celebrated French lawyer, born at Clermont, in Auvergne, in 1625, died at Paris, in 1696. The confusion which he had observed in the laws, put him upon forming a design of reducing them to their natural order, which he completed, and published in four vols. 4to, under the title of "The Civil Laws in their Natural Order, 1689." It has been usual to recommend this work to young lawyers and divines, who would apply themselves to the study of morality and the civil law.

DOMENICHINO, an Italian painter, on sacred subjects and landscapes, born at Bologna, 1581. He always aptly himself to his work with much study and thoughtfulness, and never offered to touch his pencil till he found a kind of enthusiasm or inspiration upon him. His excellence lay principally in the correctness of his style, and in expressing the passions and affections of the mind. He died in 1641, not without the suspicion of being poisoned.

DOMINIC, de Guzman, a Spaniard, founder of the order of the Predicants, born in Arragon, in 1170, died at Bologna, in Italy, in 1221, and was afterwards made a saint for the prodigious services he had done the church.

DOMINICHINI, Lodovico, a native of Placentia, famous for his voluminous translations from ancient authors, died in 1574.

DOMINUS, Mark Antony de, archbishop of Spolato, in Dalmatia, in the 16th century. He wrote against the papal power; turned protestant; then again turned catholic; he was suspected, seized, and imprisoned. After his death his body was dug up and burned as a heretic in 1645.

DOMITIAN, Titus Flavius, a Roman emperor, at first mild, but afterwards licentious and cruel, was assassinated in 96.

DOMITIANUS, Domitius, general and dioclesian, was proclaimed emperor of Egypt, in 288; he died by violence.

DONALDSON, John, an eminent artist of Edinburgh, distinguished as a miniature portrait painter, and an exact imitator with his pen of the old engravers; also a poet and a chymist. he died in 1801.

DONATO, Bernardino, Greek professor at Padua, author of a Latin dialogue, on the difference between Aristotle's and Plato's philosophy, he died in 1550.

DONATO, an architect and sculptor, of Florence, of great eminence, died in 1466.

DONATO, Jerom, a Venetian nobleman, eminent for his learning, his military services, and particularly for his negotiations, died in 1511.

DONATO, Alexander, a jesuit of Sienna, who wrote a valuable description of Rome; he died in 1640.

DONATO, Marcellus, an Italian count, who wrote a learned work on the Latin writers of Roman history, 8vo., in 1607.

DONATUS, bishop of Carthage, banished in 356.

DONATUS, Ælius, a grammarian of the 4th century, preceptor of St. Jerome, and author of commentaries on Terence and Virgil.

DONATUS, a bishop of a religious sect in Africa, who began to be known about the year 329, and greatly confined his faction by his character and writings. He was a man of great parts and learning; but withal so prodigiously haughty, that he treated all mankind with contempt. The Donatists affirmed baptism in other churches to be null and of no effect; while other churches allowed it to be valid in theirs: from which they inferred, that it was the safer to join that community where baptism was acknowledged by both parties to be valid, than that where it was allowed to be so only by one.

DONCKER, Peter, a painter, of Gouda, studied at Rome, and died 1665.

DONDUS, or DE DONDIS, James, a physician, of Padua, learned also in mathematics and mechanics, died in 1350.

DONEAU, Hugh, professor of law at Bourges and Orleans. He wrote commentaries on civil law, 5 vols. folio, and other works, and died in 1591.

DONGAN, Thomas, earl of Limerick, a judicious and popular governor of New-York, resigned the office in 1629, and returned to England, in consequence of his sovereign's displeasure.

DONI, Anthony Francis, a Florentine priest, who possessed great satirical powers, and wrote many books; he died in 1574.

DONI D'ATTICHI, Lewis, a Florentine nobleman, whose modesty and learning recommended him to Richelieu, who made him bishop of Autun. He wrote many volumes, and died in 1664.

DONI, John Baptiste, professor of eloquence at Florence. His treatise on music is well known; he died in 1647.

DONNE, John, an English poet and divine, born at London, 1573, and descended, by his mother, from the family of sir Thomas More. Soon after his taking orders (which he did at the special request of king James) he was chosen preacher of Lincoln's-Inn; in 1621, he was made dean of St. Paul's, and there was something singular in the circumstances attending it. The deanery becoming vacant, the king sent for Dr. Donne, and ordered him to attend him the next day at dinner. When his majesty was set down, before he had eaten any meat, he said, "Dr. Donne, I have invited you to dinner; and though you sit not down with me, yet I will carve to you of a dish that I know you love well; for knowing you love London, I do therefore make you dean of St. Paul's; and when I have dined, then do you take your beloved dish home to your study; say grace there to yourself, and much good may it do you!" He died 1631, and was buried in the cathedral church of St. Paul, where a monument was erected over him. His poems consist of songs and sonnets, epigrams, epithalamiums, satires, letters, funeral elegies, holy sonnets, &c. published at different times. Dryden has justly given Donne the character of "the greatest wit, though not the greatest poet, of our nation;" and lord Falkland styles Donne "one of the most witty and most eloquent of modern divines."

DONNE, Benjamin, a mathematician, made master of mechanics to the king in 1796. He was a native of Devonshire, and wrote several treatises much esteemed.

DOOLITTLE, Thomas, a non conformist, many years minister of St. Alpage, London. He wrote several books on practical divinity, and died in 1707.

DOPPLE-MAIER, John Gabriel, professor of mathematics at Nuremberg. He was fellow of the Royal Society of London, &c.

DORBAY, Francis, a French architect, who furnished designs of several beautiful works at the Louvre, the Thuilleries, &c., died in 1697.

DORFLING, a Prussian, who from a tailor, became a soldier, and finally a field marshal under the elector of Brandenburg.

DORIA, Andrew, a Genoese admiral, the restorer of the independency of Genoa when under the French yoke, born 1468, died 1560.

DORIGNY, Michael, a painter and engraver, professor in the academy of painting of Paris. His works are to be seen in the castle of Vincennes; he died in 1665.

DORIGNY, Nicholas, an eminent French engraver, who was knighted by George I.; he died at Paris, in 1746. His brother Lewis, also an engraver, died at Verona, in 1742.

DORING, or DORINK, Matthias, a German Franciscan, who in his writings, inveighs against the vices of the popes and cardinals. He was the forerunner of Luther, and died in 1491.

DORISLAUS, Isaac, a Dutchman, who went from Leyden to England, and read lectures on history at Cambridge. He was alternately a republican and royalist, during the civil wars, and turned out a profligate and guilty man; he died in 1649.

DORMANS, John de, cardinal and chancellor of France under Charles V. He founded a college in Paris, and died in 1373.

DORNAVIUS, Gaspar, a physician, born in Voightland, and an author of some humorous and whimsical pieces, died in 1631.

DORSCH, Everard, a Dutch engraver of genius, of superior abilities, died in 1712. His son Christopher was equally famous in the same art, and died in 1732.

DORSEY, John Syag, M. D., professor of materia medica in the university of Pennsylvania, and afterwards of anatomy, as successor to Dr. Wistar; he died suddenly at Philadelphia, in 1818.

DOSITILEUS, the first heresiarch, a magician of Samaria, whose followers remained 24 hours in the same posture in which they were, when the Sabbath commenced. He starved himself to death.

DOUBLET, N. an eminent French surgeon, who left some valuable professional writings; he died in 1795.

DOUCIN, Lewis, a French Jesuit, who wrote a history of the Nestorians, and other works; he died 1726.

DOUFFET, Gerard, a painter, of Liege, and a pupil of Rubens, famed for the variety and accuracy of his pictures, died in 1660.

DOUGADOS, Venance, a capuchin, born near Carcassonne. The French revolution was a field fit to display his ambition and intrigue: he was dragged to the scaffold for his political opinions in 1794.

DOUGHERTY, Michael, one of the first settlers of Georgia; died in 1803, aged 135.

DOUGLAS, Gawin, bishop of Dunkeld, and eminent for his poetical talents, was born at Annandale, in Scotland, in 1471, and died of the plague in London, in 1592. Mr. Warton styles him "one of the distinguished luminaries that marked the restoration of letters in Scotland, at the commencement of the 16th century." He translated the "Æneid" of Virgil into Scottish heroics, with the additional (13th) book of Mæphus Veginus, 4to, 1553. He also wrote an original piece called "The Palace of Honour," and other poems. He was likewise a promoter of public spirited works, and finished the stone bridge over the river Tay, begun by his predecessor.

DOUGLAS, William, a Scotch nobleman, commissioned by Robert Bruce. He had made a vow to go on a crusade, but he perished on the way, in 1327.

DOUGLAS, James, an English anatomist, and distinguished practitioner in obstetrics. He was also an eminent author, and died in 1742.

DOUGLAS, admiral Sir Charles, a native of Scotland, was originally in the Dutch service; and it was not without some difficulty that he was enabled to obtain rank in the English navy. He was so excellent a linguist, that he spoke six European languages correctly. On the war with America breaking out, he had a broad pendant given him, and commanded the squadron employed in the gulf of St. Lawrence. His services there obtained him very flattering honours on his return to England; and after Breton was dismissed, for misconduct, from the Duke, of 98 guns, Sir Charles was appointed to command her. In this ship, he cultivated his mechanical propensity so much to the improvement of the guns, and the use of locks instead of matches, that the practice was universally adopted throughout the navy. During the preparations for war, in the year 1787, he was promoted to the rank of rear admiral, and died in January, 1789.

DOUGLAS, Dr. John, bishop of Salisbury, a learned divine, born at Pittenweem, in Fifeshire, in 1721, and educated chiefly at Balliol College Oxford. This venerable prelate was one of the first literary characters of the age, and the last surviving member (the bishop of Dromore excepted) of the Beef Steak Club, celebrated by Dr Goldsmith, in his poem of "Retaliation." The literary talents of bishop Douglas were first evinced, in detecting the attempt of Lauder to depreciate the merits of Milton. He vindicated the originality of that illustrious bard, and covered his opponent with confusion. His next performance possessed such merit, as highly to recommend his character, both as a literary man, and an advocate for revealed religion. It was entitled the "Criterion," in answer to Mr. Hume's Essay on Miracles. He succeeded Dr. Law in the bishopric of Carlisle, in 1783; and upon the translation of Dr. Barrington to the see of Durham, was appointed his successor. His lordship died May 18, 1807.

DOUGLAS, James, earl of Morton and Aberdeen, a man of great learning and many virtues. He was president of the London Royal Society, in 1733.

DOUGLAS, William, M. D., a native of Scotland, afterwards a physician in Boston, who first made known at Constantinople, the practice of inoculating for the small pox, but was opposed to its introduction into America; he published several works on small pox, &c., and died in 1752.

DOUSA, James, a very learned man, born at Northwick, in Holland, 1545, died in 1604. He was a great scholar, statesman, and soldier. His learning was indeed prodigious; and he had such a memory, that he could at once give an answer to any thing that was asked him relating to ancient or modern history, or, in short, to any branch of literature. He was (say Melchior, Adam, and Thuanus,) a kind of living library, the Varro of Holland, and the oracle of the university of Leyden.

DOUVRE, Thomas de, was raised by William the Conqueror to the see of York, where he rebuilt the cathedral: he died in 1100.

DOUVRE, Thomas de, nephew of the preceding, was also archbishop of York, in 1108.

DOUVRE, Isabella de, of the same family, was mistress to Robert, the natural son of Henry I.; she died in 1166.

DOVE, Nathaniel, an ingenious penman, author of "The Progress of Time." He kept an academy at Hoxton, and died in 1754.

DOW, Gerard, a celebrated Dutch painter, the pupil of Rembrandt, born at Leyden, 1613, died in 1680.

DOWAL, William Mac, a learned Scotchman, born in 1590. He held several important offices under Charles I. and II.

DOWNHAM, John, an English divine, author of a well-known pious work, called "The Christian Warfare," died in 1644.

DOWNING, Calicut, LL. D., an English divine, &c. He turned republican, and stirred up his people to take up arms against their king; he died in 1643.

DOWNMAN, Hugh, a physician and poet, born at Newton St. Cyres, Devonshire, in 1740, died at Exeter, in 1809; having published several tragedies and poems, on various subjects; of the latter, the principal one is entitled "In tancy."

DRABICIUS, Nicholas, a celebrated enthusiast, born about 1587, in Moravia, where his father was burgomaster. When he was upwards of 50 years of age he commenced prophet, and published some extraordinary political chimeras, which he called "Visions."

DRACO, a celebrated legislator of Athens, whose laws were so severe, that they were said to be written in blood. He flourished about 600 years B. C.

DRACONITES, John, a Lutheran divine, a bishop in Prussia, and the learned author of some commentaries on the Scriptures. He began a polyglott Bible, but died before its completion, in 1566.

DRAGUT, Rais, or captain RAGUT, the favourite and successor of Barbarossa, a famous pirate, in 1566.

DRAKE, Sir Francis, a distinguished naval hero, who flourished in the reign of Elizabeth, was born near Tavistock, in Devonshire, 1545. He made his name immortal by a voyage into the South Seas, through the strait of Magellan, which was what, at that time, no Englishman had ever attempted. He sailed from England, Dec. 13, 1577, and entered the harbour of Plymouth on his return, Nov. 3, 1580; performing thus a voyage round the globe in two years and about ten months. His expeditions and victories over the Spaniards, have been equalled by modern admirals, but not his generosity; for he divided the booty he took, in just proportional shares with the common sailors, even to wedges of gold given him in return for his presents to Indian chiefs. He died, after having rendered the most eminent services to his country by his bravery and skill, 1595-6, on board his own ship, in the West Indies. The town of Plymouth had very particular obligations to Drake; for, in 1587, he undertook to bring water into it; through the want of which, till then, it had been grievously distressed; and he performed it by conducting thither a stream from springs at eight miles' distance, that is to say, in a straight line: for, in the manner he brought it, the course of it runs upwards of 20 miles.

DRAKE, Samuel, published, in 1729, in folio, a splendid edition of archbishop Parker's "De Antiquitate Britannicæ ecclesiæ," &c.

DRAKE, James, a celebrated political writer and physician, born at Cambridge, in 1567, died 1706-7. He is chiefly known now by his medical works, by a "System of Anatomy," particularly, which was finished a little before his decease, and published in 1707.

DRAKE, Francis, a surgeon, at York, and an eminent antiquary, published, in 1736, "Eboracum, or, The History and Antiquities of the City of York, from its Original to the present Time," &c.

DRAKE, William, a physician, born at York, where he settled. In his old age he collected various records, and published a valuable history of his native town, in folio, he died in 1760.

DRAKE, Rodger, D. D., a physician, who became a popular preacher in Lon on. He was learned and pious, and died after the restoration.

DRAKENBERG, Christian Jacob, was born in Norway, and after living in celibacy 113 years, married a widow aged 60.

DRAKENBORCH, Arnoldus, a professor of history and eloquence at Utrecht, died in 1748. He is memorable for having given fine editions in 4to of two ancient authors, "Titus Livius," 7 vols.; and "Silius Italicus," with very learned notes. He is also the author of some small works.

DRAN, Henry Francis le, a famous surgeon, and lithotomist, author of Surgery, 2 vols., and other surgical works, died at Paris, in 1770.

DRAPER, Sir William, an English general, born at Bristol, was educated at Eton, and at King's College, Cambridge; but preferring a military life, he went to the East Indies, where he attained the rank of colonel, and in 1763, in co-operation with admiral Cornish, reduced Manilla, where they consented to accept a ransom for the fort of 4,000,000 dollars, which the Spanish government never paid. In 1769, being then a knight of the Bath, the colonel appeared in print, as the antagonist of Junius, in defence of the marquis of Granby. Sir William died at Bath, in 1787.

DRAYTON, Michael, an English poet, born in Warwickshire, 1563. When but 10 years of age he appears to have been page to some person of honour, as we collect from his own words. It appears too, that he was then anxious to know "what kind of strange creatures poets were?" and desired his tutor, of all things, that, if possible, "he would make him a poet." He took delight, and was eminent for his talent in this way, nine or ten years before the death of queen Elizabeth, if not something sooner. Drayton died in 1631, and was buried in Westminster abbey, among the poets. His works, which are numerous, and of great merit, were collected and printed, in 1748, in one volume folio.

DRAYTON, William, a political writer of considerable eminence, in South Carolina, active in forwarding the American revolution: he published a history of the war, and died in 1779.

DRAYTON, William, LL. D., a judge of the federal court for the district of South Carolina; died in 1790.

DREBEL, Cornelius, a Dutch philosopher and alchemist, of whom some curious particulars are related, with respect to his power, to cause rain, cold, &c., by the operations of his machines; he died in 1572.

DRELINCOURT, Charles, minister of the church of Paris, born at Sedan, 1595, and died 1669. His "Consolations against the Fears of Death" have, of all his works, been the most frequently reprinted; having passed through above 40 editions, and been translated into several languages. His "Charitable Visits," in 5 vols., have served for continual consolation to private persons, and for a source of materials and models to ministers. He published three volumes of Sermons;" in which, as in all the forementioned pieces, there is a wonderful vein of piety, which is very affecting to religious minds.

DRESSERUS, Matthew, a German, who became professor of rhetoric and history at Jena, and, in 1581, accepted the chair of polite learning at Leipsic. He was a man of great learning, and died in 1607.

DREUX DU RADIER, John Francis, a French advocate, who abandoned the bar for the pursuits of literature, and became the author of various works; he died in 1780.

DREVET, Peter, an eminent engraver at Paris; his son, also named Peter, was equally eminent in the same profession. They both died in 1739, the father aged 75; the son 42.

DREXELIUS, Jeremiah, a jesuit, of Augsburg, author of a curious poem on hell torments, in which he calculates how many souls can be contained in a given space; he died in 1638.

DRIEDO, John, a learned divinity professor, of Louvain, whose abilities were employed against the Lutheran Calvinists. He published 4 vols. folio, on theological subjects, and died in 1535.

DRINKER, Edward, a native of Philadelphia died in 1782, aged 103. He lived to see the 5th generation, and having survived the reigns of seven sovereigns, he at length saw the day that made America, a free and independent nation.

DROLINGER, Charles Frederick, privy counsellor to the margrave of Baden Dulach, was admired as a poet, and scholar; he died in 1742.

DROU, N., a French advocate, distinguished for his eloquence, and for his defence of the poor as well as the rich; he died in 1783.

DROUAIS, Hubert, a painter, of Normandy who, by his pencil, raised himself to fame and opulence; died in 1767.

DROUET, Stephen Francis, a laborious French writer, who died in 1779.

DRUMMOND, William, of Hawthornden, a Scottish poet and historian, born 1585, died Dec. 4, 1649. He preceded Waller in polishing English versification. His poems have a harmony and sweetness in them, unequalled by any of his time; and in his "History of the Five Jameses" his manner of telling a story, and interesting the reader in what he relates, has been highly commended. Ben Jonson so much admired our author, that he undertook a journey on foot into Scotland on purpose to visit him, and esteemed some months that he spent in his society the happiest of his life. Some of the conversation at this meeting has been preserved. Drummond's poems were first printed at Edinburgh, in 4to., 1616; afterwards in 8vo., 1656, and a complete collection of his works in folio, 1711. The poems were reprinted in 1791. His general merits have been ingeniously appreciated by Mr. Neve, Mr. Headley, Mr. Pinkerton, and Dr. Anderson, in their several biographical sketches of our earlier British poets.

DRUMMOND, Robert Hay, successively bishop of St. Asaph, of Salisbury, and of York. He published six occasional sermons, and died in 1773.

DRURY, Robert, was shipwrecked in 1762, on the island of Madagascar, where he remained 15 years. After his escape, he published an account of the natives, &c.

DRURY, Dru, a jeweller, of London, who wrote 3 vols. on insects, and collected a vast number of curiosities; he died in 1804.

DRUSILLA, Livia, disgraced herself by an incestuous commerce with her brother Caligula; she died, A. D. 38.

DRUSIUS, John, a most learned man among the Protestants, was born at Oudenard, in Flanders, in 1555, and was author of several works which show him to have been well skilled in Hebrew, and to have gained a considerable knowledge in the Jewish antiquities. He died in 1616.

DRUSUS, son of Germanicus, was put to death by Tiberius, A. D. 93.

DRUSUS, M. Livius, an ambitious Roman, murdered for his attempts to enforce the agrarian law, 190 B. C.

DRUSUS, Nero Claudius, brother of the emperor Tiberius, was honoured with a triumph for his victories in Germany; he died 91 B. C.

DRUSUS, son of Tiberius and Vispania, was banished, A. D. 23.

DRYANDER, John, a Hessian medical and mathematical writer, died 1560.

DRYDEN, John, an illustrious English poet, was son of Erasmus Dryden, of Tichmarsh, in Northamptonshire, and born at Aldwinckle, near Oundle, in that county, Aug. 9, 1631. He was educated in grammar learning at Westminster school, being king's scholar there under the famous Dr. Busby, and was from thence elected, in 1650, a scholar in Trinity College, Cambridge. His reputation as a poet, together with his attachment to the court, procured him the place of poet-laureat and historiographer to Charles II., which accordingly he took possession of, upon the death of sir William Davenant, in 1668. In 1669 his first play, a comedy, called "The Wild Gallants," was acted at the Theatre-royal, but with so little success, that if the author had not had a peculiarly strong inclination to dramatic writing, he would have been sufficiently discouraged from any farther attempts in it. He went on, however, and in the space of 25 years produced 27 plays, besides his other numerous poetical writings. He died May 1, 1701. As to Dryden's character, it has been treated in extremes, some setting it too high, others too low; for he was too deeply engaged in party to have strict justice done him either way. Congreve represents him, in regard to his moral character, in every respect not only blameless, but amiable: and "as to his writings (says he) no man hath written, in our language, so much and so various matter, and in so various manners, so well. Another thing I may say was very peculiar to him: which is, that his parts did not decline with his years, but that he was an improving writer to the last, even to near 70 years of age; improving even in fire and imagination as well as in judgment: witness his "Ode on St. Cecilia's Day," and his "Fables," his latest performances. He was equally excellent in verse and in prose. His prose had all the clearness imaginable, together with all the nobleness of expression, all the graces and ornaments proper and peculiar to it, without deviating into the language or diction of poetry. I have heard him frequently own with pleasure, that if he had any talent for English prose, it was owing to his having often read the writings of the great archbishop Tillotson. His versification and his numbers he could learn of nobody; for he first possessed those talents in perfection in our tongue. In his poems, his diction is, wherever his subject requires it, so sublimely and so truly poetical, that its essence, like that of pure gold, cannot be destroyed. What he has done in any one species or distinct kind of writing, would have been sufficient to have acquired him a great name. If he had written nothing but his prefaces, or nothing but his songs or his prologues, each of them would have entitled him to the preference and distinction of excelling in his kind."

DUANE, James, first Mayor of New-York, after its recovery from the British, and judge of the district court of New-York: he died in 1797.

DUAREN, Francis, a French civilian, who taught civil law at Bourges. He published some works, chiefly on law, and died in 1559.

DUBOCAGE, Mary Anne le Page, a French lady, who translated into her own language, Pope's Temple of Fame, and Milton's Paradise lost. She was a member of many learned societies, and famous for her poetry and composition. She died in 1802.

DUBOIS, William du, a French prelate, who supported the duke of Orleans in all his licentiousness, and schemes of ambition. He was made a cardinal, and afterwards prime minister. He was a hypocrite and an intriguer, and died in 1723.

DUBOIS, Dorothea, daughter of the earl of Anglesea, who married a musician, and was disowned by her father. She wrote Theodora, a novel, and died in 1774.

DUBOIS, Simon, a painter, of Antwerp, who went to England, and acquired great fame by his art, he died in 1708.

DUBOS Charles Francis, a Frenchman, dean of Lucon. He wrote the life of Barillon, bishop of Lucon, and died in 1724.

DUBOS, John Baptist, a French abbot, author of reflections on poetry and painting, died in 1742.

DUBOS, Jerome, a Dutch painter, whose representation of hell, struck its beholders with terror and astonishment, he died in the beginning of the 16th century.

DUBOUCHER Matthew, a native of Dax, who published some law tracts, a poem on friendship, &c. died in 1801.

DUBRAU, or DUBRAVIUS SCALA, John, bishop of Olmutz. He was sent ambassador to Silesia, and was author of a history of Bohemia in 33 books: he died in 1553.

DUC, Fronton du, Fronto Ducæus, a jesuit, of Bordeaux, a man of learning and devotion, editor of St. Chrysostom's works, 6 vols. folio; he died in 1624.

DUC, John le, a Dutch painter of eminence, born in 1636.

DUCAREL Dr. Andrew Coltee, F. R. and A. S. born at Caen, in Normandy, in 1713, died in 1785. He was one of the superintendents of the Paper-office, keeper of the library at Lambeth, and one of the most eminent antiquarians of his time.

DUCHAT, Jacob le, a Frenchman, was born at Metz, in 1658, and died, in 1735. He was regarded as a very learned person, yet he is distinguished as an editor rather than an author. He gave new editions of the "Menippean Satires," of the Works of Rabelais," of the "Apologie for Herodotus," by Henry Stephens, &c. all accompanied with remarks of his own.

DUCHATEL Gaspard, a deputy in the French convention, celebrated for his manly and able defence of the unfortunate Lewis XVI.; he was guillotined in 1793.

DUCHEATELET D'HARAUCOURT, Lewis Marie Florent duc, a colonel in the French army, imprisoned and gillotined for his attachment to his king, in 1792.

DUCHE DE VANCY, Joseph Francis, a French poet, author of three tragedies, Deborah, Jonathan, and Absalom. He was a man universally respected, and died in 1704.

DUCK, Arthur, born in Devonshire, 1530, and died 1649. He was an excellent civilian, a tolerable poet, especially in his younger days, and very well versed in history, ecclesiastical as well as civil. He left behind him "Vita Henrici Chichele," &c., and "De Usu et Autoritate Juris Civilis Romanorum in Dominiis principum Christianorum;" a very useful and entertaining work, which has been printed several times in England and elsewhere.

DUCK, Stephen, a thresher and a poet, born at Charlton, Wiltz, at which place an anniversary, called Thresher's Feast, is still held to his memory. He had originally no other teaching than what enabled him to read and write English; about his 14th year he was taken from school, and was afterwards successively engaged in the several lowest employments of a country life. He had from his infancy a predilection for poetry; sometimes turned his own thoughts into verse while he was at work, and at last began to venture those thoughts a little upon paper. At length some of his essays falling into the hands of a lady of quality, who attended on the late queen Caroline, he became known to her majesty, who took him under her protection, and settled on him a yearly pension of about 30*l*.; such a one at least as was sufficient to maintain him independently of labour. Duck was afterwards admitted into orders, and preferred to the living of Byfleet, in Surrey. Here he continued for many years to make poems and sermons, and was much followed by the people as a preacher; till falling at length into a low-spirited melancholy way, he threw himself into a trout-stream, at the back of the Black Lion Inn, near Reading, and was drowned. This unhappy accident, for he was perfectly lunatic, befell him March 30, 1756.

DUCLOS, Charles Dineau, historiographer of France, born at Dinant, in Bretagne, in 1705; he died in 1772.

DUCLOS, Mary Ann, a French actress of great merit, who for many years gained much applause; she died in 1748.

DUDLEY, John, son of the preceding, and duke of Northumberland, was born in 1502, and afterwards became one of the most powerful subjects in England. For an attempt to place the crown on the head of his daughter-in-law, lady Jane Grey, (who likewise fell a victim to his ambition), he was beheaded August 21, 1553.

DUDLEY, Ambrose, earl of Warwick, son of John, duke of Northumberland, born 1530, exhibited great wisdom and integrity as a statesman, and bravery as a general, under queen Elizabeth, and acquired the appellation of "The Good Earl of Warwick." He died in 1589.

DUDLEY, Robert, earl of Leicester, son to John, duke of Northumberland, and brother to Ambrose, earl of Warwick, before mentioned, born 1532, died 1588. On the accession of Elizabeth, he was entertained at court as a principal favourite; obtained prodigious grants, one after another, from the crown: and all things gave way to his ambition, influence, and policy. In his private life he affected a wonderful regularity, and carried his pretence to piety very high: though to gratify his passions, there were no crimes, however exorbitant, which he would not commit.

DUDLEY, sir Robert, son of Robert, earl of Leicester, born at Sheen, in Surrey, 1573, died 1639. Among the learned, he held a very high rank, as well on account of his skill in philosophy, chymistry, and physic, as his perfect acquaintance with all the branches of the mathematics, and the means of applying them for the service and benefit of mankind.

DUDLEY, Thomas, governor of Mass. and one of the founders of that colony; he died in 1653.

DUDLEY, Joseph, governor of Mass., son of the preceding; of rare endowments, and an honour to his country; he died in 1720.

DUN, David Erskine, lord. See ERSKINE.

DUNBAR, William, an eminent Scottish poet, born about 1470, died about 1530. His "Thistle and Rose" and Golden Terge" are generally and justly esteemed his most capital works. They are to be found in the Collections of Pinkerton, (1786,) and Bannatyne, (1770.)

DUNBAR, Dr. James, professor of philosophy in King's College, Aberdeen, and author of "Essays on the History of Mankind in rude and uncultivated Ages," 8vo, 1780, died May 23, 1798.

DUNCAN, Mark, a Scotch physician, professor of philosophy, and principal of the Calvinist's college at Saumur; he died in 1640.

DUNCAN, Daniel, one of the most eminent and learned physicians of his time. He was born of Scotch parents, in France, and gradually rose to the highest distinction; he was known as a practitioner, in almost every part of Europe. The king of Prussia invited him to settle at Berlin, as his physician, &c. He wrote many works, and died in London, in 1735.

DUNCAN, William, an ingenious critic and translator, born at Aberdeen, in 1717. He wrote for Dodsley's "Preceptor" the article "Logic," which was so much approved, that it was printed separately in 1752, and has in some measure superseded that of Dr. Watts. His last production was an excellent translation of "Casar's Commentaries;" previous to the publication of which, he was appointed professor of philosophy in the Marischal college, Aberdeen. He died in 1760.

DUNCAN, Adam, lord viscount, a gallant British admiral, whose name will be immortalized in the annals of his country by the victory which he gained over a Dutch fleet, between Camperdown and Egmont, within five miles of the Dutch coast, Oct. 11, 1797, for which he was deservedly rewarded with a peerage. He was born at Dundee, in North Britain, July 1, 1731, and early adopted the naval profession. It should be mentioned to his honour, that through life, admiral Duncan was a man of great and unaffected piety, and felt it an honour to be a Christian. When the victory was decided, which has fixed his renown, he ordered the crew of his ship, to be called together; and at their head, upon his bended knees, in the presence of the Dutch admiral (who was greatly affected with the scene) solemnly and pathetically offered up praise and thanksgiving to the God of Battles; strongly proving the truth of the assertion, that piety and courage should be inseparably allied, and that the latter without the former loses its principal virtue. He died Aug. 4, 1804.

DUNCOMBE, William, a dramatic author and translator of Horace, born in London, 1690, and died 1769.

DUNCOMBE, John, son of the preceding, a pious divine and ingenious poet, born in 1730, died in 1786.

DUNLOP, William, a pious, learned, and eloquent divine, born at Glasgow, 1692, died at Edinburgh, 1720.

DUNLOP, Alexander, brother to the preceding, was born in America, but went to Scotland and was elected professor of Greek at Glasgow. He was the author of a Greek grammar, still used in the university of Glasgow; he died in 1742.

DUNMORE, John Murray, earl of, governor of the colony of New-York, in 1769, afterwards, the last royal governor of Virginia; after committing many depredations upon the colonists, he returned to England, where he died in 1809.

DUNN, Samuel, an English mathematician, and author of several mathematical works, died in 1792.

DUNNING, John, lord Ashburton, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and one of the most distinguished pleaders that ever adorned the English bar. His rise was rapid, and there were very few causes tried in the court of King's Bench in which he was not employed as leading counsel, either for the plaintiff or defendant. His industry and zeal for the interest of his clients were equal to his abilities; and in cases where the fees were small, he was never known to show less ardour than when they were considerable. The causes of the poor and the oppressed he frequently pleaded without reward. He was born in Devonshire, about the year 1732, and died August 18, 1783. To Mr. Dunning, (among others) Junius' Letters have been ascribed; we do not, however, believe that the real author has yet been deterree.

DUNOD DE CHARNAGE, Francis Ignatius, a learned professor of law at Besancon, his native town; he died in 1751.

DUNOIS, John, Count of Orleans and Longueville, a famous general of France, in the time of Charles VII. who called him the restorer of his country. He was a man of many private virtues, and died in 1468.

DUNS, John, commonly called Duns Scotus, a celebrated theologian of the order of St. Francis, born in Northumberland. He distinguished himself so much by the acuteness of his parts, and especially by his manner of disputing, that he acquired the name of "The Subtile Doctor." He affected to maintain opinions contrary to those of Thomas Aquinas, which produced two parties in the schools, the Thomists and the Scotists. He died 1308.

DUNSTAN, St., archbishop of Canterbury, was a man well known for his talents and intrigues; he died in 988.

DUNSTER, Henry, first president of Harvard college, resigned on account of embracing the sentiments of the Antipedo-baptists; he died in 1659.

DUPIN, Lewis Ellis, a very learned doctor of the Sorbonne, and one of the greatest critics of his time, especially in what regarded ecclesiastical matters, born at Paris, 1657, died 1719. His chief work is, "Bibliothèque Universelle des Auteurs Ecclesiastiques." He had an uncommon talent at analyzing the works of an author, which makes his Bibliothèque so valuable, for there we have not only a history of the writers, but also the substance of what they wrote; which is a great convenience to persons who are desirous to know something of them, yet have not either time, or knowledge of languages, sufficient to read their works.

DUPLANIL, J. D., a French physician, who translated several English medical works into his own language; he died in 1802.

DUPLEIX, Scipio, historiographer of France, died in 1661. Among his works are, History of France, 6 vols. folio, and Roman History, 3 vols. folio.

DUPLEIX, Joseph, a French merchant, of great abilities, governor of Pondicherry, which he defended with bravery against the English, in 1748.

DUPORT, James, dean of Peterborough, in the 17th century, left behind him several learned works, among which is a Latin version of the Psalms.

DUPORT, Francis Mathurin, counsellor of the parliament of Paris, and a warm partisan of the duke of Orleans, which last circumstance brought him to the guillotine, in 1794.

DUPPA, Brian, bishop of Winchester, born at Lewislum, in Kent, 1588-9, appointed, in 1638, tutor to Charles, prince of Wales, and afterwards to his brother the duke of York, was a great favourite with Charles I., and is said by some to have assisted in composing the famous Eikon Basilike. This bishop is deservedly memorable for his numerous charitable institutions; among which is to be remembered an alms-house at Richmond, on the gate of which is this inscription, "I will pay my vows which I made to God in my trouble," &c. He died in 1662.

DUPRAT, Anthony, a very eminent French statesman, and president of the parliament of Paris; a man, who, to increase his fortune, or enlarge his power, did not hesitate to sacrifice, either fame or virtue; he died in 1535.

DUPRE DE GUYER, John, a hermit, said to have built in the solid rock with only the help of his servant, the hermitage at Friburg, the chimney of which rises 90 feet.

DUPRE, Mary, a learned lady of the 17th century, who studied rhetoric, poetry, the languages and philosophy. Some of her writings were read with applause.

DUPRE D'AUNAY, Lewis, a learned native of Paris, who wrote on the generation of animals, on the transfusion of the blood, &c.; he died in 1758.

DUPRE DE ST. MAUR, Nicholas Francis, a native of Paris. He translated Milton's Paradise lost, and regained, Addison's odes, &c.; he died in 1774.

DUPUIS, Claude, a French engraver of merit, who died at Paris, in 1742.

DURELL, David, a native of Jersey, made principal of Hertford College, in 1757, and in 1767, rose to the prebendary of Canterbury. He was the author of critical remarks on several parts of the Scriptures; he died in 1775.

DURER, Albert, born at Nuremberg, 1471, was one of the best engravers and painters of his age. He was the first who brought the art of engraving in wood to any perfection, and by many authors is deemed the inventor of it. Albert Durer wrote several works, which were published after his death (1528), the principal of which is his book upon the rules of painting, entitled, "De symmetria, partium in rectis formis humanorum corporum."

DURET, Lewis, a physician, who practised with great success at Paris, and was in the household of Charles IX., and Henry III. He published a Commentary on Hippocrates, and died in 1586.

D'URFEY, Thomas, a facetious English poet, born at Exeter about 1628. This author, who is more generally spoken of by the familiar name of Tom, was originally bred to the law, but soon quitted it to become a devotee of the Muses, in which he met with no small success. His dramatic pieces, which are very numerous, were in general well received; but what Mr. D'Urfey obtained his greatest reputation by, was a peculiarly happy talent he possessed in the writing of satires and irregular odes. Many of these were upon temporary occasions, and were of no little service to the party in whose cause he wrote; which, together with his natural vivacity and good humour, obtained him the favour of great numbers of persons of all ranks and conditions, monarchs themselves not excluded. The author of the Guardian, who, in No. 67, has given a very humorous account of Mr. D'Urfey, with a view to recommend him to the public notice for a benefit play, tells us, that he remembered king Charles II. leaning on Tom D'Urfey's shoulder more than once, and humming over a song with him. Yet, at last, to speak in his own words, "after having written more odes than Horace, and about four times as many comedies as Terence, he found himself reduced to great difficulties by the importunities of a set of men who of late years had furnished him with the accommodations of life, and would not, as we say, be paid with a song." Those who have a curiosity to see his ballads, sonnets, &c. may find a large number of them brought together in a collection in 6 vols. in duodecimo, entitled, "Pills to purge Melancholy," of which the Guardian, in No. 29, speaks in very favourable terms. The titles of his dramatic pieces (31 in number), may be found in the "Biographia Dramatica." On a stone tablet, at the west entrance of St. James' church, Westminster, is inscribed the following memorial: "Tom D'Urfey dyed Feb. ye 26, 1723."

DURHAM, James, a very popular and eloquent preacher, at Glasgow; died in 1658.

DURINGER, Melchior, professor of ecclesiastical history, at Berne. He passed his life in celibacy, solitude, and melancholy; he died by a fall from his house, while it was on fire, in 1723.

DUSART, a painter, of Haerlem. He was chiefly great in representing taverns, and low company, and died in 1704.

DUSSAULX, John, who after having distinguished himself in arms, devoted himself to literary pursuits. He became president of the national institute of Paris, and the author of several works; he died at Paris, in 1799.

DUTENS, Lewis, a learned writer on antiquities, born in France, 1729, obtained orders in the church of England, and died in 1812.

DUVAL, Peter, geographer royal of France, author of some geographical tracts and maps, formerly in great esteem; died at Paris, in 1683.

DUVAL, Nicholas, a Dutch painter, who studied under Cortona, and was made director of the academy at the Hague; he died in 1732.

DUVAL, Valentine Jamerai, an extraordinary character, born in Champagne. He lost his father when young; and having no friends, was obliged to obtain his subsistence, by watching poultry and sheep; but by perseverance and labour, he obtained hooks and maps, and learned geography, history, and antiquities with astonishing rapidity, so that he became one of the most learned men of his time, and enjoyed the patronage of princes, and the notice of the learned; he died in 1775.

DUVENEKE, Mare Van, an eminent historical painter, of Bruges, died in 1729.

DWIGHT, Timothy, D. D., LL. D., a grandson of the first president Edwards, was born at Northampton, Massachusetts, 1752. Early distinguished for his talents and learning, he became one of the most eminent men of his country. As a poet, philosopher, and divine, he had few equals; as president and professor of divinity in Yale college, he stood unrivalled, both for talents as an instructor, and for eloquence as a preacher: he died in 1817, universally regretted as a loss to the institution over which he presided, to the country he adorned by his learning, and to the cause of learning and truth itself. His system of theology has been frequently republished in Europe; and his travels in New England, have been much read and admired.

DYCHE, Thomas, an English divine and schoolmaster, well known by his useful "English Dictionary" and "Spelling-book;" the latter of which has gone through many editions. He died about 1750.

EDWARD, or, as some say, EDWARDS, William, architect and bridge-builder. The celebrated bridge on the river Taaff, in Wales, called Pont y tu Pridd (by the English, New-bridge), was constructed by this extraordinary man. It is the segment of a circle, whose chord at the surface of the water, is 147 feet, and is the boldest and largest arch in Europe. He was then a common mason; but his fame was soon diffused throughout the kingdom, and his assistance sought wherever difficulties occurred in constructing bridges. He died Aug. 7, 1789.

EDWARDS, Richard, born in Somersetshire, in 1523, died 1566. He is one of the first English dramatic writers, having left behind him three pieces; the earliest of which is dated in 1562. He was esteemed an excellent poet and musician, and wrote several poems, which were published after his death, together with some of other authors, in a collection, entitled "The Paradise of Dainty Devices, 1576."

EDWARDS, Thomas, an English divine, and a non-conformist, who wrote severely against the royalists; he died in 1647.

EDWARDS, Dr. Jonathan, an English divine, of the 17th century, who distinguished himself chiefly by his writings against the Socinians.

He published, between 1743 and 1764, 4 vols. 4to, of the "History of Birds," and three under the title of "Gleanings of Natural History; and thus, after a long series of years, the most intense application, and a correspondence in every quarter of the world, he concluded a work, which contains engravings and descriptions of more than 600 subjects in natural history, not before described or delineated. He died in 1773.

EDWARDS, Thomas, a poet and critic, of eminence, born in 1699, died Jan. 3, 1757. His poetry, of which specimens will be found in Dodsley's, Pcarch's, and Nichols' collections, is simple, elegant, and pathetic; his criticisms are exact, acute, and temperate. His "Canons of Criticism," first printed in 1747, under the title of "A Supplement to Dr. Warburton's Shakspeare," did him great credit both as a critic and as a scholar; but provoked the vengeance of Dr. Warburton, which he wreaked very illiberally, in a note on the Dunciad, (iv. 567,) of which Mr. Edwards was more susceptible than the circumstance required.

EDWARDS, John, a divine, of the church of England, whom Dr. Kippis called the Paul, the Augustine, the Calvin of his age; he died in 1745.

EDWARDS, Thomas, an eminent divine, of England, master of Coventry grammar school; he published several works, and died in 1785.

EDWARDS, Timothy, first minister of East Windsor, Conn., and father of the famous Jonathan Edwards; he died in 1758.

EGBERT, last king of the Saxon heptarchy, and first king of England, died in 823.

EGEDE, John, a Dane, who was missionary to Greenland, died in 1758.

EGEDE, Paul, bishop of Greenland, was born in the year 1708, and at 12 years of age was an active assistant to his father, the celebrated Hans (or John) Egede, (to whom Denmark is indebted for its colony in Greenland,) having accompanied him on his voyage thither in 1720. His zeal for the conversion of the Greenlanders to Christianity, exerted with unabated ardour through the course of a long life, both during his residence in their country, and after his quitting it, is strongly displayed in his "Account of Greenland," published shortly before his death, which happened June 3, 1789.

EGERTON, Thomas Viscount Brackley, an eminent and learned lawyer, and chancellor of England, in the reign of James I., born in Cheshire, in 1549, died in 1617.

EGERTON, John, bishop of Durham, a pious and learned prelate, who distinguished himself greatly by an exemplary discharge of his episcopal functions, by reconciling contending interests in that county and city, and by various wise regulations both in his spiritual and temporal department. He was born in London, in 1721, and died in Grosvenor-square, in 1787.

EGGELING, John Henry, a native of Bremen, secretary of the republic, died in 1713.

EGINHART, secretary to the emperor Charles the Great, was a German, and is the most ancient historian of that nation. He wrote "The Life of Charles;" "Annals of the Acts of king Pepin, Charles the Great, and Lewis, from 741 to 829;" and other works, ecclesiastical as well as historical. He died in 841.

EGINTON, Francis, justly celebrated for his ingenious discovery of painting and staining of glass, after the manner of the ancients; in which numerous works will long continue as monuments of his unrivalled ability. A good specimen of it may be seen in the window of Stationers' Hall, presented to that company by the late alderman Cadel. Mr. E's first work of any consequence was the arms of the knights of the Garter, for two Gothic windows over the stalls in St. George's chapel, at Windsor. This ingenious artist died near Birmingham, in 1805.

EGMONT, Lamoral, count of Holland, distinguished himself in the service of Charles V., in Africa, and under Philip II.; he was beheaded by the duke of Alva, in 1568.

ELICH, Lewis Philip, a native of Marburg, known in the 17th century for his inipious publications.

ELICHMAN, John, a native of Silesia, practised physic at Leyden, and was remarkable for understanding 16 languages. He was of opinion, that the German and the Persian languages were derived from the same original, and gave several reasons for it.

ELIEZER, a rabbi of the 8th century, published a work on sacred history.

ELIJAH, an illustrious prophet, of Israel, under Ahab and Ahaziah, 895 B. C.

ELIOT, John, an Englishman, came to America in 1631, became a famous missionary to the Indians, and translated the Bible into their language; he died in 1690.

ELIOT, John, son of the preceding, minister of Newton, Mass., greatly assisted his father in his missionary labours, and died in 1668.

ELIOT, Andrew, D. D., a clergyman of Boston, distinguished for his piety, learning and usefulness in the ministry; he died in 1773.

ELIOT, John, D. D., a congregational clergyman, of Boston, was the son of the preceding, and successor to his father in the ministry. He was the author of a Biographical Dictionary of the eminent men of New England; he died in 1813.

ELLIOTT, Sir John, an eminent English physician, died 1787.

ELLIOTT, George Augustus, lord Heathfield, K. B., governor of Gibraltar, and colonel of the 15th regiment of light dragoons, was born at Stobbs, in Roxburghshire, 1718. In 1735 he became a volunteer in the 23d regiment of foot, or Royal Welch Fusileers, and soon after was admitted into the engineer corps at Woolwich; from whence he purchased the adjutancy of the 2d troop of horse-grenadiers; in which he became a captain and major, as well as lieutenant-colonel; when he resigned his commission as an engineer. In 1759, he quitted the horse-guards, and was selected to raise, form, and discipline the 1st regiment of light-horse, which bore his name. Having gone through various departments in different services, with the greatest marks of bravery and military knowledge, in 1775 he was appointed commander-in-chief in Ireland; which he soon relinquished, and was appointed to the command of Gibraltar, in a fortunate hour for the safety of that important fortress: where, by a cool and temperate demeanor, he maintained his station for three years of constant investment, in which all the powers of Spain were employed. The eyes of all Europe were on this garrison; and his conduct justly exalted him to the most elevated rank in the military annals of the day. On his return to England, the gratitude of the British senate was as forward as the public voice in giving him the distinguished mark that his merit deserved; to which his majesty was pleased to add that of the peerage, by the title of lord Heathfield, baron Gibraltar, on June 4, 1787; permitting his lordship to take also the arms of the fortress he had so bravely defended, to perpetuate to futurity his noble conduct. He died at Aix-la-Chapelle, July 6, 1790, and was buried at Buckland, in Devonshire.

ELLIOTT, Richard, an English divine, who became a dissenter, and published some controversial tracts; he died in 1789.

ELISHA, a prophet among the Israelites: died 830 B. C.

ELIZABETH, Petrovna, daughter of Peter the Great, who ascended the throne of Russia, in 1741; she was much given to secret amours, and died in 1761.

ELIZABETH, queen of England, was the daughter of Henry VIII., by his second wife, Ann Boleyn, and born Sept. 7, 1533. She began to reign in 1558, being then 25 years of age, and highly accomplished both in person and mind. Her reign continued 44 years, 4 months, and 68 days. She died March 24, 1603, in her 70th year.

ELLER DE BROOKHUSEN, John Theodore, an able and learned physician to the king of Prussia; he died in 1760.

ELLERY, William, one of the signers of the declaration of independence, was a member of congress from Rhode Island, distinguished for his active and determined opposition to the encroachments of Britain, and for the judgment and ability he displayed in that body; he died in 1820, aged 92.

ELLIGER, Ottomar, a painter, who settled at Berlin, and was much admired; he flourished about 1650.

ELLIGER, Ottomar, son of the preceding, equally distinguished as his father in the use of the pencil: he died by intemperance, in 1732.

ELLIOT, Caleb, a visionary enthusiast, who starved himself near Modbury, in Devonshire, Dec. 14, 1789. It is imagined that he meant to have fasted 40 days, as he actually lived 16 without food of any kind, having refused all sorts of sustenance.

ELLIS, Clement, M. A., an Englishman, distinguished as a scholar and divine; he died in 1760.

ELLIS, John, deputy of Broad-street ward, and a member of the corporation of London, nearly half a century, was the last of that ancient profession called scriveners, which is one of the companies of London; but the business is now carried on by attorneys and others. He was a man of literature, and wrote some Hudibrastic translations; but never put his name to any thing that he published. Of him Dr. Johnson once said, "The most literary conversation that I ever enjoyed was at the table of Jack Ellis, a money-scrivener behind the Royal Exchange; with whom I, at one period, used to dine generally once a week." It may be supposed, that the merit could not be inconsiderable which extorted such praise from Dr. Johnson. He was born in London, 1698, and died Dec. 31, 1791.

ELLIS, George, an English miscellaneous writer, died in 1815.

ELLIS, Henry, F. R. S., an English lawyer, colonial governor of Georgia, and afterwards governor of Nova-Scotia; he died in Europe, at an advanced age.

ELLSWORTH, Oliver, LL.D., an eminent jurist of Connecticut, and chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, was distinguished for the strong powers of his mind, for the solidity of his judgment, and for his great professional learning. He was appointed a member of the senate of the United States, a judge in his native state, and, in 1799, ambassador to France; he died in 1807.

ELLWOOD, Thomas, an Englishman, sometime reader to Milton; he wrote in defence of the Quakers, and died in 1713.

ELLYS, Dr. Anthony, bishop of St. David's, born 1693, and died 1761. He was a man of fine parts, extensive knowledge, and sound judgment, with a heart overflowing with benevolence and candour, and a most Christian temper; for he always thought a person, though on the right side of the question, with principles of persecution, to be a worse man than he who was on the wrong.

ELMACINUS, George, author of a history of the Saracens, or rather a chronology of the Mahometan empire, flourished in Egypt toward the middle of the 13th century.

ELMENHORST, Geverhart, a critic of Hamburgh, and author of notes on ancient authors; he died in 1621.

ELMENHORST, Henry, author of a treatise on public spectacles, of which he seems to approve.

ELPHINSTON, James, born at Edinburgh, Dec. 6, 1721, very early devoted his attention to establishing the principles of the English language, but with the best intentions, his zeal led him astray into enthusiasm. As a grammarian, he stood on very high ground; but he fondly embraced an idea, that the orthography of the English language might be thoroughly reformed; and being encouraged by Dr. Franklin, he conceived the project of effecting it, by spelling words as they are pronounced. This romantic (not to say ridiculous) scheme, in the latter part of his life, became his hobby-horse, and for a while clouded the genuine claims he had to the gratitude of every Englishman; claims candidly acknowledged by most English scholars, and publicly by the late Mr. Walker, author of "The Pronouncing Dictionary," where his name constantly recurs in references to authority. In 1782, he published, in 4to. a translation of the "Epigrams of Martial," but it exhibited more of elaborate erudition than of poetical ease or grace, and was severely treated by the critics. Mr. Elphinston was unaffectedly pious and virtuous: perhaps the most distinguishing feature of his mind was a simplicity and purity that never doubted the truth or virtue of another. His death happened Oct. 8, 1809.

ELPHINSTONE, William, a Scotch prelate and statesman, born at Stirling, in 1432, died in 1513, having written a "History of Scotland," a copy of which in MS. is now in the Bodleian library.

ELSHEIMER, Adam, a celebrated German painter, born at Frankfort, in 1574, excelled particularly in landscapes, histories, and night pieces, with little figures. His works are very few; and, for the incredible pains and labour which he bestowed upon them, valued at such prodigious rates, that they are hardly any where to be found but in the cabinets of princes. He died in 1610.

ELSNER, James, a Prussian, professor at Lingen, and author of various works; he died in 1750.

ELSTOB, William, an English divine, eminent for his skill in the Saxon language, born at Newcastle, in 1673, died in 1714.

ELSTOB, Elizabeth, sister of the above, and a famous Saxonist also, born in 1683, died 1756. She published a curious Saxon homily on the birthday of St. Gregory, with a translation, in 8vo, 1709; and in 1715, a grammar of the Saxon language, in 4to.

ELSWICH, John Herman d', a Lutheran divine, native of Holstein, published several works, and died in 1721.

ELSYNGE, Henry, clerk of the house of commons, in the reign of Charles I., born at Battersea, in 1598. He was the author of a few things which were reckoned very good, and have been much esteemed; particularly "The ancient method and manner of holding parliaments in England, 1663;" reprinted often since. He died in 1664.

ELVIUS, Peter, a native of Upsal, who made surveys of the Swedish lakes, and invented several machines to go by water; he died in 1749.

ELWES, John, M. P., for Berkshire. He was a man of clear perception, sound judgment, and unskaken integrity; and in such high estimation was he held for his love of justice, that numberless disputes among his constituents and others, which would have been decided by courts of law, were left to his sole arbitrament; and his determination was sure to be thoroughly satisfactory to the judicious. Yet, notwithstanding his great and good qualities, he was a man (respecting himself) of an extraordinarily penurious and singular turn; instances of which, that almost stagger belief, are related in an interesting account of his life, published by E. Topham, esq. 8vo, 1790. He died Nov 26, 1789, aged 80.

ELXAI, or ELXÆUS, founder of a sect among the Jews, in the 2d century; he taught his followers to pray toward Jerusalem; the sect continued till the 4th century.

ELYOT, Sir Thomas, was employed by Henry VIII., in several embassies. He was an excellent grammarian, poet, rhetorician, philosopher, physician, cosmographer, and historian; and distinguished as much for his candour, and the innocence and integrity of his life, as for his accomplishments. He wrote and translated several works, and died in 1546.

ELYS, Edmund, an Englishman, who wrote against Tillotson's sermons on the incarnation; he died after 1693.

ELZEVIRS, celebrated printers, at Amsterdam and Leyden, in the 17th century, who greatly adorned the republic of letters by many beautiful editions of the best authors of antiquity. Their Virgil, Terence, and Greek Testament, have been reckoned their master-pieces; and are indeed so very fine, that they justly gained them the reputation of being the best printers in Europe.

EMANUEL, succeeded John II., as king of Portugal, distinguished for patronising commercial enterprises; he died in 1521.

EMEBRAET, a Flemish painter, at Antwerp, who was eminent in landscapes, lived in the 17th century.

EMERI, Sebastian, an advocate, of Paris, in the 16th century: he refused to defend the duchess of Angouleme against the constable of Bourbon.

EMERSON, William, a very eminent mathematician, born at Hurworth, a village on the borders of Durham, 1701, died in 1782. He was a man of great singularity in his manners, dress, and conversation. His works are extremely valuable and numerous.

EMERSON, Joseph, minister of Malden, Mass., distinguished for his zeal and humility, died in 1767.

EMILIANO, John, an Italian philosopher of the 16th century.

EMLYN, Thomas, a learned and pious English dissenting divine, memorable for his sufferings on the score of heterodoxy, was born at Stamford, in Lincolnshire, 1663, and died 1741. His son, Sollow Emlyn, was bred to the law, became an eminent counsellor, and was employed to publish lord chief justice Hale's "Pleas of the Crown," which he did with notes, and a preface, and died in the year 1756.

EMLYN, Henry, a very eminent architect, to whom king George III. confided the whole management of the architectural improvements in St. George's chapel, Windsor; to which, perhaps, no edifice of the kind in Europe is equal in beauty. There is a publication, by Mr. Emlyn, of a "Design for a New Order in Architecture," which consists of a double pillar from a single pedestal. Mr. Emlyn died at Windsor, in his 87th year, Dec. 10, 1815.

EMMA, wife of Ethelred, of England, afterwards married Canute, and upon her husband's death, reigned jointly with her son.

EMMIUS, Ubo, a professor of Groningen; he published several works on Chronology, Geography, &c., and died in 1625

EMPEDOCLES, a Pythagorean philosopher, poet, and historian, of Agrigentum, in Sicily, died 440 B. C. Some say, that he fell or threw himself into the burning gulf of Ætna; and others, that he was drowned in the sea.

EMPEREUR, a well known French engraver, in the 18th century.

EMPEREUR, Constantine I, of Holland, professor of Hebrew at Leyden; he published several works on the Jewish books, and died in 1648.

EMPOLI, Jacopo da, an eminent historical painter, of Empoli, died in 1640.

EMPSON, Sir Richard, favourite of Henry VII., was afterwards beheaded in 1510.

ENCOLPIUS, a favourite of the emperor Alexander, whose history he wrote.

ENDICOT, John, governor of Mass., was a native of England; he was violent in his opposition to sectarians, and died in 1665.

ENFIELD, William, a dissenting clergyman, of Norwich, born at Sudbury, 1740, died 1797. He had been lecturer in the belles lettres at Warrington Academy, and was well known to the public by many ingenious and useful publications, of which the principal are, "The Preacher's Directory;" a great number of "Sermons;" the "Speaker," and "Exercises in Elocution;" the two latter very popular selections of passages from celebrated authors: "The English Preacher," the "History of Philosophy," &c.

ENGELBRECHT, John, a German Lutheran, of Brunswick, who maintained doctrines similar to those which Swedenborg has since promulgated: he died in 1641.

ENGHELBRECHTSEN, Cornelius, a painter, of Leyden, the first who painted in oil; he died in 1533.

ENGHELRAMS, Cornelius, a painter in water colours, was born at Malines, and died in 1583.

ENGHIEN, duke of, son of the duke of Bourbon was seized by order of Buonaparte, hurried to Paris, condemned after a mock trial, for having carried arms against his country, during the tyranny of Robespierre, and shot in 1804.

ENGLISH, Hester, a French lady, settled in England, and eminent for the most exquisite skill in penmanship. She lived in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I.

ENJEDIM, George, an ingenious unitarian of Hungary, who wrote against trinitarians; he died in 1597.

ENNIVS, Quintus, an ancient Latin poet, born in Calabria, 237 B. C. He died at the age of 70 years; and his death is said to have been occasioned by the gout, contracted by an immoderate use of wine, of which he always drank very freely before he applied himself to writing. Hor. Lih. 1. Ep. 19. He was the first among the Romans who wrote heroic verses, had an admirable genius, and did prodigious things for polishing the Latin poetry, though he left a great deal to be done by succeeding ages. He wrote the "Annals of Rome;" which were so highly esteemed, that they were publicly recited with vast applause by Quintus Vargontius, who digested them into books; and they were read at Puteoli, in the theatre, by a man of learning who assumed the name of the Ennianist. He translated several tragedies from the Greek, and wrote others. He published likewise several comedies; but whether of his own invention, or translated by him, is uncertain. It appears from his writings, that he had very strong sentiments of religion. He held the doctrine of transmigration, and is said to have affirmed that Homer's soul was transmigrated into him.

ENNODIUS, Magnus Felix, bishop of Pavia, in Italy, born 473, died 521. His works, chiefly theological, are not voluminous.

ENOCH, son of Jared, seventh from Adam, was translated to heaven without dying, 3017 B. C.

ENSENADA, Zeno Somo de Silva, marquis de la, an able minister of Spain, who rose to that station from being a book-keeper to a banker; he died in 1755.

ENT, Sir George, a very ingenious and eminent English physician and medical writer born at Sandwich, in Kent, 1604, died 1689.

ENTICK, John, an English divine, who published a "Spelling Dictionary," a "History of the War which terminated in 1763," and a "History of London," and died May 22, 1773.

ENTINOPE, an architect of Candia, in the 5th century, one of the chief founders of Venice.

ENZINAS, Francis, a native of Burgos, and disciple of Melancthon, he translated the new Testament into Spanish.

EOBANUS, Elias, surnamed Hesus, an elegant scholar and good poet, was professor at Nuremberg; he died in 1540.

EON, de l'Étoile, a fanatic, of Brittany, who pretended that he was the son of God; he had some followers, but eventually died in prison.

EON, Chevalier Charles Genieve-Louisa-Augusta-Andrea-Timothée du Beaumont d', born at Tonnerre, in Burgundy, August, 5, 1728, died in London, May 22, 1810. The chevalier was memorable as a political character, and once charge des affaires in England from the court of France; but more so on account of the questionable gender to which this extraordinary character naturally appertained. In the year 1777, policies were opened to ascertain the sex of this extraordinary nondescript, to the amount of 200,000*l.* which were eventually decided, and paid, upon a surgical certificate, after personal examination, that the reputed chevalier was a female. From that period the chevalier wore female habiliments. After death, however, it was ascertained that the deceased was of the masculine gender.

EPAMINONDAS, a famous Theban general, slain in battle, 363 B. C.

EPAPHRODITUS, a bishop of Philippi, who carried the contributions of his country to the saints of Jerusalem, and brought back Paul's epistle to his church, A. D. 62.

EPEE, Charles Michael de l', a very ingenious and benevolent French abbe, and the extensive promoter (if not the inventor) of a mode for relieving the deaf and dumb, and rendering them useful members of society. Some of his pupils were enabled to learn several languages; some became profound mathematicians; and others obtained academeal prizes by poetical and literary works. This amiable man died in Feb. 1790, justly lamented by his country; and was succeeded in his school by the abbe Sicard.

EPHORUS, a historian of Cuma, pupil of Isocrates.

EPHRAIM, son of Joseph, who gave name to one of the tribes of Israel.

EPHREM, St., an ancient Christian writer of the 4th century. Photius tells us, that he wrote above 1000 orations, and that himself had seen 49 of his sermons: and Sozomen oberves, that he composed 300,000 verses. His works were so highly esteemed, that they were publicly read in the churches after the Scriptures. St. Ephrem was a man of the greatest severity of morals; and so strict an observer of chastity, that he avoided even the sight of women. He died in 378.

EPICHRMUS, an ancient poet and philosopher, born in the island of Cos, and carried, as Laertius tells us, into Sicily, when he was but five months old. He had the honour of being taught by Pythagoras himself: and he and Phormus are said to have invented comedy in Syracuse, though others have pretended to the glory of that discovery. He composed 55, or, according to others, 35 plays; but his works have been so long lost, that even their character is scarcely on record. Lucian says, that he lived to the age of 97 years.

EPICIE, an eminent French engraver.

EPICETUS, a celebrated philosopher, of antiquity, born near the end of Nero's reign, as is commonly supposed, at Hierapolis, in Phrygia. He lived in extreme poverty at Rome, in a little cottage without so much as a door to it; no attendants but one old woman, and no furniture but an earthen lamp, to the light of which we owe those beautiful and divine thoughts, of which Arrian has preserved some noble remains. This lamp was purchased for about 100*l.* after his death, by a person whom Lucian ridicules for it, as hoping to acquire the wisdom of Epictetus by studying over it. We have no account that can be depended on, either of what distemper, or about what time, he died. Epictetus, though a philosopher, was a man of great humility and modesty; which was most eminent in his own practice, as well as in his recommendation of it to others. His "Commentaries," and the "Enchiridion, or Manual of the Stoic Philosophy," have been often published, and translated into almost every language.

EPICURUS, the greatest philosopher of his age, was born at Gargetus, in Attica, about the year 340 B. C. From the place of his birth, we find him often called by ancient authors, the "Gargettic author," the "Gargettic old man," and simply, the "Gargettian." Whereas other professors of sects made choice of particular places in Athens, as the Academy, the Lyceum &c., Epicurus purchased a very pleasant garden, where he lived with his friends in great tranquillity, and taught philosophy to a great number of disciples. They lived all in common with their master; and a better regulated society had never been seen. He wrote a prodigious number of books, and died in his 72*d* year. As to his doctrine, that the happiness of man consists in pleasure, though it has occasioned some effects which have discredited his sect, yet, if it be rightly interpreted, it is certainly very reasonable; for it amounts to nothing more, than that the happiness of man consists in his being at ease, and in feeling pleasure, or, generally, in being contented. Could we ask Epicurus where this ease and contentment must be found, he would not say in good eating, drinking, or in commerce with women; but, in sobriety, temperance, and the checking of tumultuous and disorderly passions, which deprive the soul of her state of happiness; that is, the soft and quiet acquiescence in her condition. These were the pleasures in which Epicurus made the happiness of man to consist. But people exclaimed against the word pleasure: those who were corrupted already made an ill use of it; the enemies of his sect took advantage of it; and so the name of Epicurean became odious: all this, however, is accidental to the doctrine; for it is certain that he lived in a most exemplary manner himself, and conformably to the rules of philosophical wisdom and frugality.

EPIMENIDES, an ancient poet and philosopher, born at Gnosus, in Crete. Many wonderful things are related of him; and his reputation was so great all over Greece, that he was there esteemed a favourite of the gods. He died at the age of 157; and is alluded to by St. Paul, Titus, c. i. v. 12. Plutarch tells us, that he was accounted the 7th wise man by those who would not admit Periander into the number.

EPHANIUS, bishop of Salamis, in Cyprus, born 332, and died 403. He was very conversant in ecclesiastical antiquities, on which account he is chiefly regarded.

EPIPIANIUS, a writer of the 6th century, who translated the histories of Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret.

EPIPHANIUS, a heretic, who advocated a community of women.

EPISCOPIUS, Simon, a theological and controversial writer of uncommon parts and learning, and the chief support of the Arminian sect, born at Amsterdam, in 1583, died 1643.

EPENDORF, Henry, a noble German, who acquired celebrity by his dispute with Erasmus.

ERASISTRATUS, an eminent Greek physician, whose works are mentioned by Galen, but are now lost. He flourished 294 B. C.

ERASMUS, Desiderius, born at Rotterdam, the 28th of Oct., 1467. He was called Gerard, after his father; and afterwards took the name of Desiderius, which in Latin, like the surname of Erasmus, in Greek, signify much the same as Gerard among the Hollanders, that is, "amabilis," or amiable. He was the most learned man of the age in which he lived; and contributed, by his example and his writings, to the restoration of learning in the several countries wherein he occasionally resided, viz. Italy, Switzerland, Holland, France and England; with the last he was most satisfied; and there he met with the greatest encouragement from Henry VIII., sir Thomas More, and all the learned Englishmen of those days. He was the most correct and elegant Latin writer among the moderns; and died in 1536. Nothing has made the city of Rotterdam more famous, than her having given birth to this great man, whose works were published at Leyden, 1706, in a very handsome manner, in ten volumes folio.

ERASTUS, Thomas, a celebrated physician and divine, born at Baden, in Germany, about 1524, died in 1583. He wrote several books on philosophy, physic, and divinity; but what made the most noise of all his performances, and chiefly makes him memorable now, was his book "De Excommunicatione Ecclesiastica." In this he denies the power of the church, and affirms their censures to be incapable of extending beyond the present life.

ERASTOSTHENES, a Greek philosopher, mathematician, historian, and poet, died 194 B. C.

ERATOSTRATUS, an Ephesian, who on the very night that Alexander the Great was born, 356 B. C., burnt the temple of Diana, at Ephesus, merely to eternize his name in the records of history.

ERCHEMBERT, a Lombard, of the 9th century, author of a Chronicle of the Lombards from 774 to 828.

ERCILL-YA-CUNIGA, Don Alonzo d', a Spaniard, who fought against the Indians of Chili and Peru, and made his adventures the subject of an animated poem, called Araucana.

ERCKERN, Lazarus, a German, was superintendent of the mines of Hungary, &c.

ERCOLE, a painter, patronised by the court of Savoy, died in 1676.

EREMITA, Daniel, of Antwerp, intimate with Scaliger, author of several works, some poems, &c.; he was a deist, and died at Leghorn, in 1613.

ERIC IX, king of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, solemnly deposed, and retired to Pomerania; he died in 1459.

ERIC XIV, succeeded his father Gustavus on the throne of Sweden, and became the unsuccessful suitor of queen Elizabeth; he died in 1572.

ERIC, Peter, a Venetian admiral, infamous for his cruelty to the widow of the bashaw of Tripoli, whom, with her treasures, he carried to Constantinople; he was beheaded by order of the Venetian senate.

ERIGENA, John, Scotus, born at Ayr, in Scotland, flourished in the 9th century, and was very learned in a very barbarous age. He was employed by King Alfred to promote learning and the liberal arts. For this purpose he was appointed to preside, at Oxford, over the studies of geometry and astronomy in particular; that university being either lately founded or lately restored by Alfred. Three years he spent in this situation; but, some disputes and disturbances arising at Oxford, he left that place, and retired to a monastery at Malnesbury. There he opened a school; and, behaving harshly and with severity to his scholars, was stabbed by them, with the iron bodkins they then wrote with, in such a manner that he died. His death happened in 883.

ERINNA, a Grecian poetess, cotemporary with Sappho.

ERIZZO, Lewis and Marc Anthony, two brothers, of a noble Venetian family, who murdered their uncle for his riches; for which the one was beheaded; the other died in prison, about 1546.

ERIZZO, Paul, a noble, of the same family, inhumanly butchered by Mahomet, in 1469, after having surrendered.

ERIZZO, Sebastian, a noble Venetian, author of a work on medals, died in 1585.

ERKIVINS, a famous architect of Steinbach, who died in 1305.

ERLACH, John Lewis, father of the six families of the same name, so illustrious in Switzerland; he was distinguished in military life, and died in 1650.

ERNESTI, John Augustus, professor of theology at Leipsic, author of numerous works, literary and theological; he died in 1781.

ERPENIUS, Thomas, or, as he is called in Dutch, Thomas of Erpe, a most learned writer, and incomparably skilled in the oriental tongues, born 1584, died 1624.

ERSKINE, Ralph, a Scotch divine, and non-conformist who was imprisoned about 1662, and liberated by the earl of Mar; he died in 1696.

ERSKINE, Ebenezer, son of the preceding, born in prison, became a seceder, published several volumes of sermons, and died in 1755.

ERSKINE, Ralph, brother to the preceding, published many works and sermons, and died in 1751.

ERSKINE, David, lord Dun, a celebrated Scotch judge, who published an excellent work in one volume 12mo., under the title of "Lord Dun's Advicees." He was born at Dun, in Angusshire, 1670, and died there in 1755.

ERSKINE, James, lord Alva, one of the barons of the Scotch exchequer, afterwards appointed to the supreme civil court of Scotland; he died in 1796.

ERVING, William, an officer in the British army, which he quitted at the commencement of the American war; he bequeathed 1000*l.* to Harvard college, and died in 1791.

ERXLEBEL, John Christian Polycarp, a native of Quediuburg, and an able naturalist died in 1777.

ERYCEIRA, Ferdinand de Meneses count d', distinguished himself as governor of Penicha and Tangiers.

ERYCEIRA, Francis Xavier de Meneses count d', born at Lisbon, in 1673, increased the valuable library of his ancestors with 15,000 new vols., and 1000 MSS.; he wrote 100 different publications.

ERYTROPHEILUS, Rupert, a German divine, in the 17th century, author of a work on the passion.

ES, James Van, a painter, of Antwerp, well known for his pictures of birds, &c.

ESAU, son of Isaac and Rebecca, died about 1710 B. C.

ESCALO, Mastin de l', elected podestat of Verona, in 1259, was assassinated by his enemies, in 1273.

ESCALQUENS, William, capitou of Toulouse, in 1326; he ordered himself to be carried to the cathedral in a coffin, and then invited the attendants to a feast.

ESCOBAR, Marine d', the foundress of the reconciliation of St. Bridget, in Spain, died 1633.

ESCOBAR, Anthony, a Spanish jesuit, whose works in 16 vols., and his Principles of Morality, in 7 vols., were ridiculed by Pascal; he died in 1669.

ESCOBAR, Bartholomew, a learned jesuit, of Seville, went to America as a monk; he employed himself in works of charity, and died in 1624.

ESCOUBLEAU, Francis d', cardinal de Sourdis, a great favourite with pope Leo IX., died in 1686.

ESCOUBLEAU, Henry d', brother and successor of the preceding, was at the siege of Rochelle, under Lewis XIII.; he died in 1645.

ESPAGNAC, John Baptist Joseph de Sapuguet Damarzil baron d', a French general, who signalized himself in the campaigns of Italy, died in 1783.

ESPAGNANDEL, Matthew P, an eminent French sculptor, of the 17th century.

ESPAGNE, John d', a Frenchman, who settled in England, as minister of a French protestant congregation, in the reign of James II.

ESPAGNET, John d', a Frenchman, president of the parliament of Bordeaux, who wrote in opposition to Aristotle's tenets.

ESPAGNOLET, Joseph Riberia l', a Spanish painter, particularly successful in the representation of terror, anguish, &c.; he died in 1656.

ESPARRON, Charles d' Arcussia Viscount d', author of a treatise on hawking and falconry, published in 1644.

ESPEN, Zeger Bernard Van, born at Louvain, wrote against the pope's bull unigenitus, and died in 1723.

ESPENCE, Claude d', a Frenchman, a distinguished orator, and author of commentaries on the epistles; he died in 1571.

ESPER, John Frederic, a native of Drossenfeld, in Bayreuth, a botanist and naturalist, and author of works on these subjects; he died in 1781.

ESPERIENTE, Philip Callimachus, a Tuscan, preceptor of an academy under Pius II; afterwards ambassador to Constantinople, &c., died in 1496.

ESPREMENIL, James Duval d', an advocate and counsellor of the parliament of Paris, remarkable for his violent proceedings during the revolution; he was guillotined in 1794.

ESPRIT, James, a Frenchman, an agreeable writer, the friend of Rochefoucault and Conti, died in 1678.

ESSARS, Pierre des, a French nobleman, who served in the Scotch army against the English, in 1402; on his return to France, he was raised to posts of honour, became suspected, was imprisoned, and beheaded in 1413.

ESSARS, Charlotte des, countess of Romorantin, mistress to Henry IV., and others, who, in attempting to advance her son, fell under the resentment of the king and Richelieu, by whom she was imprisoned, where she died in 1651.

ESSEX, James, famous for his skill in gothic architecture. His principal practice was at Cambridge, Ely, Lincoln, and Winchester; and his writings may be found in the Achæoloria, vol. iv. vi., &c. He was born in 1723, and died at Cambridge, in 1784.

ESTAING, Charles Henry count d', a French admiral, who commanded the French fleet in the American revolution; he was guillotined in 1793.

ESTAMPES, Anne, of Pisseleu, duchess of, mistress to Francis I., of France. She was a woman of great cunning and intrigue; and one of those instances which prove that the ascendancy of a mistress may be the ruin of a kingdom; for by her ambitious views the monarchy of France had nearly been subverted.

ESTAMPES, Leonor d', bishop of Chartres, in 1620, who opposed the jcsuits in the assembly of the French clergy.

ESTCOURT, Richard, well known both as an actor and a dramatic writer. In all his parts, he was mostly indebted for his applause to his powers of mimicry, in which he was inimitable, and which, at times, afforded him opportunities of appearing a much better actor than he really was, by enabling him to copy very exactly several performers of merit, whose manner he remembered and assumed. His company was extremely courted by every one; and his mimicry so much admired, that persons of the first quality frequently invited him to their entertainments, in order to divert their friends with his drollery; on which occasions he constantly received very handsome presents for his company. He died in 1713, leaving behind him two dramatic pieces.

ESTHER, a Jewess, mistress to Casimir III., king of Poland, in the 14th century.

ESTHER, a Jewish maid, who became wife to Ahasuerus, king of Persia, and was the means of saving the Jews from destruction.

ESTOUTEVILLE, William d', a Norman, and a cardinal, who reformed the university of Paris; he possessed great firmness and benevolence, and died in 1453.

ESTRADES, Godfrey count d', marshal of France, and viceroy of America, ambassador to England, &c., died in 1686.

ESTRANGE. See L'ESTRANGE.

ESTREES, John d', page to queen Anne, of Brittany, distinguished himself in several battles, and died in 1567.

ESTREES, Francis Annibal d', son of the preceding, a duke, peer, and marshal of France, died in 1670.

ESTREES, Cesar d', son of the preceding, was employed in several important offices by the French king, and died in 1714.

ESTREES, Gabrielle d', sister of Francis, mistress of Henry IV., died in 1599.

ESTREES, Victor Marie d', a vice admiral of France, and a learned man, died in 1737.

ESTREES, Lewis Cesar duke d', marshal of France, and minister of state, distinguished himself in the war against Spain; he died in 1771.

ETHELBERT, king of Kent, became a Christian by the preaching of Austin, and died in 616.

ETHELBERT, king of England, was a popular and benevolent prince.

ETHELRED, king of England; to deliver himself from the oppressive tax which he paid to the dames, he caused those unfortunate foreigners to be all murdered; he died in 1016.

ETHELWOLF, king of England, in 898, went to Rome to improve the education of his son the great Alfred; he died in 857.

ETHEREGE, Sir George, a celebrated English wit, and eminent in particular for his comic genius, flourished in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. His three comedies are, "The Conical Revenge; or, Love in a Tub;" "She Would if She Could;" and "The Man of Mode; or, Sir Foppling Flutter;" in which last piece he is supposed to have drawn some of the chief characters from certain of his cotemporaries, and acquaintance. Thus, beau Hewitt, the most notorious fop of his time, was supposed to be designed under his first character; Dorimant for his friend lord Rochester, under which are characterised inconstancy, falsehood, and triumphs, in the conquest and ruin of the fair, varnished over with agreeable and captivating graces of modish gallantry, peculiar to that witty but licentious nobleman. He was also suspected to have sketched out himself in the character of Medley. Applauded, however, as this play was for wit, yet, like his others, it was condemned for immorality. He was born in Oxfordshire, about 1636, and died about 1690.

ETHRYG, George, or ETHERIDGE, or ED-RYCUS, an Englishman, who lived about 1550. He excelled not only in the Greek and Hebrew, but also in medicine and music.

ETTMULLER, Michael, an eminent physician born at Leipsic, 1644, died 1683. His works, amounting to no less than 5 vols. in folio, were printed at Naples, in 1729.

ETTMULLER, Michael Erne St., professor of anatomy and surgery, wrote several learned and curious treatises on medical subjects, and died in 1732.

EUCHADIUS, Augustinus, a Latin historian.

EUCHARIUS, or HOUCARIUS Eligius, a divine and poet, of Ghent. He wrote the lives of St. Levinus, Coleta, and Bertulfus, &c.

EUCHERIUS, archbishop of Lyons, was canonized for his piety; he died in 454.

EUCLID, a philosopher, of Megara, founder of the sect of wranglers.

EUCLID, a most celebrated mathematician and astronomer, who collected all the fundamental principles of pure mathematics, which had been delivered down by Thales, Pythagoras, Eudoxus, and other mathematicians before him, which he digested into regularity and order, with many others of his own: on which account he is said to have been the first who reduced arithmetic and geometry into the form of a science. When this great man was born, and what was his country, we have no distinct account; but he flourished, as appears from Proclus' Comment upon his Elements, about 277 years before Christ, and taught mathematics at Alexandria with vast applause.

EUDEMÓN, John Andrew, a jesuit, published some works, and died in 1625.

EUDES, John, founded the congregation of the Eudists; he left some devotional works, and died in 1680.

EUDOCIA, daughter of Leontius, an Athenian sophist and philosopher, born about 400. Her father took such care of her education, that she became at length consummately learned; and so accomplished in every respect, that, at his death, he left his whole estate to his two sons, except 100 pieces of gold, which he left to his daughter, with this declaration, that "her own good fortune would be sufficient for her." Upon this she went to law with her brothers, but without success; and therefore carried her cause to Constantinople, where she was recommended to Pulcheria, sister of the emperor Theodosius the Younger, and became her favourite. In 421 she embraced Christianity, and was baptized by the name of Eudocia, for her heathen name was Athenais; and the same year was married to the emperor, through the powerful recommendation of his sister: by which event the words of her father might seem to have something prophetic in them. She died about A. D. 460.

EUDOCIA or EUDOXIA, queen of Constantinople, in 1067, died in prison, the government having been usurped by Michael, her son, in 1071.

EUDOCIA, Feodoreuna, first wife of Peter the Great, was divorced in 1696, on account of her infidelity; she died in 1731.

EUDOXIUS, bishop of Germanicia. He wrote a discourse on the incarnation of the word; he died in 370.

EUDOXUS, of Cuidus, a city of Caria, in Asia Minor, flourished about 370 years before Christ; and was so skillful, that Cicero did not scruple to call him the greatest astronomer that had ever lived.

EUGENE, Francis, prince of Savoy, born 1363. Having found himself slighted by Lewis XIV., in France, his native country, he retired to Germany, and spent his life in the service of the house of Austria. His victories over the Turks, and afterwards over the French, too numerous to be detailed in this work, have rendered his name immortal in the annals of fame. This illustrious hero died at Vienna, in 1736.

EUGENIUS I. St., pope after Martin, in 654, he died 3 years after.

EUGENIUS II., succeeded Pascal I. in 824, and died 3 years after.

EUGENIUS III., was made pope in 1145, and died in 1153.

EUGENIUS IV., Gabriel Condolmero elected pope in 1431. He was unjustly deposed, for a time, but was afterwards restored; he died 1447.

EUGENIUS, emperor in Dauphiné, fell in battle in 394.

EULER, Leonard, a very eminent mathematical writer, born at Basil, in 1707, died Sept. 7, 1783. He possessed, to a great degree, what is commonly called erudition; had read all the Latin classics; was perfect master of ancient mathematical literature; and had the history of all ages and nations, even to the minutest facts, ever present to his mind.

EULOGIUS, a patriarch, of Alexandria, wrote against the Novatians, and died in 608.

EULOGIUS, the martyr, of Cordova, was put to death by the Saracens, in 859. He wrote a history of some martyrs.

EUMATHIUS, a Greek, writer of amatorial compositions; in what age he wrote is unknown.

EUMENES, a celebrated general of Alexander, put to death by Antigonus, 316 B. C.

EUMENES, a king of Pergamus, 263 B. C. His nephew of the same name was king, 197 B. C.

EUMENIUS, an eminent orator, about 310.

EUNAPIUS, a native of Sardis, in Lydia, flourished in the 4th century. He was a celebrated sophist, a physician, and no inconsiderable historian. We have no remains of Eunapius, but his "Lives of the Philosophers and Sophists."

EUNOMIUS, a heresiarch, of the 4th century, bishop of Cyzicum, and founder of the sect that have since been called Eunomians. He died very old, about 394, after having experienced great variety of sufferings. Eunomius wrote many things, and his writings were so highly esteemed by his followers, that they thought their authority preferable to that of the gospel. His doctrines were, that "there is one God uncreate and without beginning: who has nothing existing before him; for nothing can exist before what is uncreate: nor with him; for what is uncreate must be one: nor in him; for God is a simple and uncompounded being. This one simple and eternal being is God the creator and ordainer of all things; first indeed and principally of his only-begotten Son, and then through him of all other things: for God beget, created, and made the Son only, by his own direct operation and power, before all things and every other creature: not producing, however, any other being like himself, nor imparting any of his own proper substance to the Son: for God is immortal, uniform, indivisible, and therefore cannot communicate any part of his own proper substance to another," &c.

EUPHEMIA, Flavia Elia Marcia, a concubine, and wife of the emperor Justin I., died in 523.

EUPHEMIUS, a patriarch, of Constantinople, was banished, and died in 515.

EUPHORION, a Greek poet and historian, of Chalcis, 274 B. C.

EUPHRANOR, an excellent sculptor and painter, of antiquity, flourished about 362 B. C. He wrote several volumes on the art of colouring, and on symmetry; and was the first who signalized himself by representing the majesty of heroes

EUPHRATES, a heretic, of the 2d century, who maintained that our first parents were deceived by Christ in the form of a serpent.

EUPOLIS, an Athenian comic poet, in the 85th Olympiad. He used the freedom of the ancient comedy to lash the vices of the people; and having lost his life in a seafight between the Athenians and Lacedæmonians, his death was so lamented, that a statute was enacted, which decreed that no poet should thenceforth serve in the wars.

EURIPIDES, an ancient Greek poet, born in the island of Salamis, in the 1st year of the 75th Olympiad. He wrote a great number of tragedies, which were highly esteemed, both in his life-time, and after his death; and nothing can better demonstrate the high esteem they were in, than the service they did to the Athenians in Sicily. The Athenian army under the command of Nicias, suffered all the calamities that ill-fortune can reduce men to. The victors made a most cruel advantage of their victories: but, although they treated the Athenian soldiers with so much inhumanity, yet they were extremely kind to such as could repeat any of Euripides' verses. An unhappy accident concluded his life. He was walking in a wood, and, according to his usual manner, in deep meditation, when unfortunately happening upon Archelaus' hounds, he was by them torn to pieces, in the 75th year of his age. He is, of all writers, remarkable for having interspersed moral reflections and philosophical aphorisms in his dramatic pieces. It is said that he used to shut himself up in a gloomy cave, and there compose his works. This cave was in the isle of Salamis, and Aulus Gellius had the curiosity to go into it. He composed his verses with great difficulty; and one day complained to the poet Alcestis, that in the last three days he had been able to write but three verses, though he had laboured with all his might. Alcestis observed, with an air of high vanity, that he had written a hundred with the utmost ease. "Ay, but (says Euripides) you don't consider the difference: your verses are made to live no longer than these three days; whereas mine are to continue for ever." There are now extant but 19 of his tragedies, and part of a 20th; though Suidas says that he composed 92.

EURYDICE, wife of Amyntas, king of Macedonia, and mother of Philip.

EURYDICE, daughter of Aridæus, was put to death by Olympias.

EUSDEN, Lawrence, an English divine and poet, born in Yorkshire, was preferred in 1718 to the laureatship. He had several enemies; and, among others, Pope, who put him into his Dunciad; though we do not know what provocation he gave to any of them, unless, by being raised to the dignity of the laurel. He was no inconsiderable versifier, and died at his rectory, at Coningsby, Lincolnshire, in 1730.

EUSEBIA, abbess of St. Cyr, at Marseilles, who cut off her nose to secure herself from the brutality of the Saracens, in 731.

EUTHYMIUS, Zigabenus, or Zigadenus, a Greek monk, of Constantinople, author of several works, died after 1118.

EUTOCIUS, a Greek mathematician, of the 6th century, author of several works.

EUTROPIUS, Flavius, an Italian sophist, as Suidas calls him, wrote a compendious history of Roman affairs, divided into 10 books, from the foundation of the city, to the reign of Valens, (to whom it was dedicated,) that is, to A. D. 364.

EUTROPIUS, a eunuch, and minister to Arcadius, was consul, but was banished and beheaded about 299.

EUTYCHES, an abbot of Constantinople, who maintained that Christ's body was an aerial form, and therefore not human.

EUTYCHIANUS, pope, successor of Felix, in 275, was martyred in 283.

EUTYCHIUS, patriarch of Constantinople, in 553; deposed in 564; restored, and died in 585.

EUTYCHIUS, a Christian author, patriarch of Alexandria, was born at Cairo, in Egypt, in 876, and became eminent in the knowledge of physic. He wrote annals from the beginning of the world to the year 900; in which may be found many things which occur no where else, but certainly many more which were collected from lying legends, and are entirely fabulous. He died in 950.

EUZORIUS, a deacon of Alexandria, deposed and condemned by the council of Nice, for adhering to Arius; he baptized Constantius, and died in 376. Another of the same name was bishop of Cæsarea.

EVAGORAS, king of Cyprus, was defeated by the Persians, and assassinated 394 B. C.

EVARISTUS, bishop of Rome in 100, was martyred nine years after.

EVELYN, John, one of the greatest natural philosophers that England ever produced, was born at Wotton, in Surry, in 1620. Among his numerous writings (which are on the subjects of agriculture, navigation, commerce, antiquities, sculpture, painting, &c.) the most celebrated at the present day is "Sylva; or a Discourse of Forest-Trees, and the Propagation of Timber in His Majesty's Dominions." Full of age and honours, this amiable author died Feb. 27, 1705-6, in his 86th year; and was interred at Wotton, under a tomb of freestone, shaped like a coffin, with an inscription upon a white marble, expressing, according to his own intention, that, "Living in an age of extraordinary events and revolutions, he had learned from thence this truth, which he desired might be thus communicated to posterity, That all is vanity which is not honest, and that there is no solid wisdom but in real piety." The eulogiums which have been bestowed upon him are as numerous as they are great.

EVELYN, John, son of the preceding, at the age of 15 wrote an elegant Greek poem; he died in 1698.

EVERARD, Sir Richard, baronet, was proprietary governor of North-Carolina, in 1722, after an administration of three or four years. which was disturbed by controversies with other branches of the government, he returned to England, where he died in 1733.

EVERDINGEN, Cæsar Van, a Dutch painter of eminence, died in 1675.

EVERETT, Oliver, minister in Boston for some years; afterwards judge of the court of common pleas for Norfolk; he died in 1802.

EVERMOND ST., Charles de St. Denis, lord of, a celebrated French officer and satirical writer, born in Normandy, 1613, died 1703. As for religion, he always professed the Romish, in which he was born; though at the bottom he was certainly a freethinker; but whatever might be his sentiments of religion, he never let fall any loose expressions about it: he could not bear that any one should drop upon it; for, said he, "bare decency, and the regard due to one's fellow-creatures, will never suffer it."

EWALD, John, a native of Copenhagen, who, from a military life, studied divinity, and wrote several poems of much merit; he died in 1781.

EWING, John, D. D., minister in Philadelphia, and provost of the college in that city; he was much respected for his talents, learning, and piety, and died in 1802.

EZEKIEL, an eminent Jew and poet, author of some fragments on Scripture subjects, flourished, according to some, 300, according to others, 200 B. C.

EZRA, one of the descendants of Aaron, son of Seraiah; he rebuilt the temple at Jerusalem about 467 B. C.

F

FABER, or, according to some, FEVRE LE, Nicolaus, a very ingenious, learned, and pious man, born at Paris, in 1544. During the course of his studies, a terrible accident happened to him. As he was cutting a pen, a bit of the quill flew into his eye, and gave him such excessive pain, that hastily lifting up his hand to it he struck it out with the knife. He applied himself to the mathematics particularly; in which he succeeded so well, that he discovered immediately the defect in Scaliger's demonstration of the quadrature of the circle. When Henry IV., of France, became at length the peaceable possessor of the crown, he appointed Faber preceptor to the prince of Conde. During this important trust, he found time to labour upon some considerable works and composed his fine preface to the fragments of Hilary, in which he discovered many important facts relating to the history of Arianism, not known before. After the death of Henry IV., he was chosen by the queen, preceptor to Lewis XIII. He died in 1611.

FABER, Tanaquil, in French, Taneguy le Fevre, a very learned man, born at Caen, in Normandy, in 1615. Cardinal de Richelieu, settled on him a pension of 2000 livres, to inspect all the works printed at the Louvre. He died in 1672, leaving a son of his own name, and two daughters, one of whom was the celebrated madame Dacier, the other married Paul Baudri, professor at Utrecht.

FABIAN, a saint of the Romish church, who was made pope, in 826, and suffered martyrdom in the reign of the emperor Decius.

FABIAN, Robert, author of the "Chronicle of England and France," or, as he himself calls it, "The Concordance of Stories," was born in London, in the 15th century. He was brought up to trade, and became so considerable a merchant, that he was chosen an alderman of that city, and in 1493, was one of the sheriffs for the same. He died at London, in 1512, and was buried in St. Michael's, Cornhill.

FABIUS, Maximus Rullianus, a Roman, master of the horse, and afterwards dictator, 287 B. C.

FABIUS, Maximus Quintus, an illustrious Roman general, who opposed Hannibal in Italy; he died 203 B. C.

FABIUS, Pictor, the first Latin historian mentioned among the Romans, 225 B. C.

FABRE, Jean Claude, a priest of the oratory of Paris, known as an indefatigable compiler, died in 1753.

FABRE, N., a native of Languedoc, who voluntarily submitted to 6 years confinement in the galleys, to save his father from that punishment in 1752.

FABRE, D'EGLANTINE, Philip Francis Mazaire, successively an actor, a comic writer, and a statesman, was the friend of Danton, and other promoters of the infernal butcheries, during the revolution; he was himself guillotined in 1794.

FABRETTI, Raphael, a very learned antiquary of Italy, born at Urbino, in 1619; died 1700. Fabretti had an admirable talent for decyphering the most difficult inscriptions; and discovered a method of making something out of those which seemed entirely disfigured through age, and the letters of which were effaced in such a manner as not to be discernable. He cleaned the surface of the stone, without touching those places where the letters had been engraven. He then laid upon it a piece of thick paper well moistened, and pressed it with a sponge, or wooden pin, covered with linen; by which means the paper entered into the cavity of the letters, and taking up the dust there, discovered the traces of the letters.

FABRI, Honore, a learned jesuit, professor of philosophy, at Lyons, and penitentiary at Rome, died in 1688. He is said to have discovered the circulation of the blood before Harvey.

FABRIANO, Gentile da, a historical painter, of Verona, who deservedly attained the honours of Venetian nobility; he died in 1412.

FABRICIUS, Caius, a Roman general, who conquered the Sannites, and spurned the offers of Pyrrhus to bribe him. He afterwards exposed to Pyrrhus, the plot of his physician to poison him, 250 B. C.

FABRICIUS, William, a surgeon and physician, at Berne, author of several surgical works, died in 1634.

FABRICIUS, Jerome, an Italian, was a physician of vast repute in his day. The republic of Venice, settled upon him a yearly stipend of 1000 crowns in gold, and honoured him with a statue and a gold chain. He died about 1603, leaving behind him several treatises both in physic and chirurgery.

FABRICIUS, George, a learned German, born in Upper Saxony, 1516. His chief work is entitled "Roma," containing a description of that city. He was the author of numerous Latin poems, written with great purity and elegance, and died in 1571.

FABRICIUS, John Lewis, professor of theology and philosophy, at Heidelberg, and also ecclesiastical counsellor to the elector, died at Frankfort, in 1697.

FABRICIUS, Vincent, a learned German, born at Hanburgh. He wrote Latin poetry with ease and elegance; he was counsellor to the bishop of Lubec, and 13 times deputy to Poland; he died in 1667.

FABRICIUS, John Albert, a most learned and laborious historian and critic, born at Leipsic, 1668, died 1736. Fabricius has laid the whole learned world under the greatest obligations; since he has contributed, more perhaps than any other man ever did, to abridge and shorten the fatigue and drudgery which scholars are obliged to undergo, in order to be acquainted with the materials of their profession.

FABRICIUS, Baron, known to the public by his letters relating to Charles XII., of Sweden, during his residence in the Ottoman empire. He stood very high in the good graces of that prince; accompanied him in his exercises, was frequently at his table, and spent hours alone with him in his closet. He had but one enemy in the court, viz. general Daldorf, who was made prisoner by the Tartars when they stormed the king's camp at Bender. Fabricius took pains to find him out, released him, and supplied him with money; which so entirely vanquished the general, that he afterwards became a warm friend. This amiable person was likewise in favour with king Stanislaus, and with George I., whom he accompanied in his last journey to Hanover, and who may be said to have died in his arms.

FABRICIUS, Charles, a painter, of Delft who gave indications of great merit, perished in his house, with his pupil Spoor, by the explosion of a powder magazine.

FABRONI, Angiolo, a native of Tuscany, was prior of St. Lorenzo's church, at Florence, and curator of Pisa University. He wrote an account of the illustrious men of the house of Medicis, and another of the learned men of Italy in the 17th and 18th centuries, in 21 vols; he died in 1802.

FABROT, Charles Hannibal, a French advocate and professor of law, at Aix, in Provence. He published, at Paris, an edition of the Basilicæ, or the constitutions of the Eastern emperors, and other valuable and important works, and died in 1659.

FAGE, Raimond de la, an artist, celebrated for his drawings with the pen and Indian ink; he died at Languedoc, in 1690.

FAGIUS, Paul, alias BUCHLIN, a very learned protestant German minister, born at Rheinabern, in 1504. He and Bucer went to England, upon receiving letters from Cranmer, in 1549, were entertained some days in the palace at Lambeth, and destined to reside at Cambridge, where they were to perfect a new translation and illustration of the Scriptures, Fagius taking the Old Testament, and Bucer the New, for their several parts. But this was all put an end to by the sudden illness and death of both these professors. Fagius died Nov. 1550; and Bucer did not live above a year after.

FAGNANI, Prospero, an Italian commentator on the 5 books of the decretals, and secretary to the holy congregation, died in 1673.

FAGNANO, Julius Charles, count of, marquis of Toschi, author of a treatise on the properties and use of the geometrical curve; he died in 1760.

FAGON, Guy Crescent, an eminent physician and botanist, of Paris, professor of botany and chymistry in the royal gardens, and physician to Louis XIV., died in 1718. One of his sons became a bishop, the other a counsellor of state.

FAGUNDY, Stephen, a Portuguese Jesuit, died at Lisbon, in 1645.

FAHRENHEIT, Gabriel Daniel, a natural philosopher, eminent for his great improvements in the construction of thermometers, was born at Dantzic, 1586. He published a "Dissertation on Thermometers," 1724, and died in 1736.

FAILLE, William dela, a syndic of Toulouse, and author of a history of that city, died in 1711.

FAIRCLOUGH, Samuel, an English clergyman, educated at Cambridge, died in 1678.

FAIRFAX, Edward, an English poet, who flourished in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., and chiefly distinguished himself by a translation of Tasso's "Godfrey of Bouillon." His merits were so great, that Waller professed to have learnt from him the art of versification. He was born at Denton, in Yorkshire, and died in 1632.

FAIRFAX, Thomas, lord, general of the parliament forces against Charles I., died 1671. See CROMWELL, Oliver.

FAIRFAX, Brian, minister of the episcopal church in Alexandria, Virginia, died in 1802.

FAIRTHORNE, William, an eminent English painter and engraver, who flourished in the 17th century. He wrote a book "Upon Drawing, Graving, and Etching," for which he was celebrated by his friend Flatman, the poet, in an elegy which ends with these lines:

"So long as brass, so long as books endure,
"So long as neat-wrought pieces, thour't secure;

"A 'Fairthorne sculpit,' is a charm can save

"From dull oblivion and a gaping grave."

Fairthorne was born about 1615, and died 1691.

FAISTENBERGER, Anthony, a distinguished landscape painter, of Inspruck died in 1722. His brother Joseph was equally eminent in the same branch of his profession.

FALCANDUS, Hugo, an accurate historian, of Sicily; the time of his death is unknown.

FALCONBERG, Mary, countess of, third daughter of Oliver Cromwell, was a woman of great beauty, and uncommon strength of mind. On the deposition of her brother Richard, she exerted her influence in favor of the restoration of Charles II. She died in 1712.

FALCONE, da Benevento, secretary to pope Innocent II., and author of a History of Naples from 1102 to 1140.

FALCONER, William, an ingenious Scotch sailor, author of a "Marine Dictionary," &c., and of a charming pathetic poem called "The Shipwreck," founded on a disaster experienced by himself; in a second calamity of which kind he lost his life, in 1770, on board of the Aurora frigate.

FALCONET, Camille, an eminent physician, of Lyons, a member of the French academy, died in 1761. His library contained nearly 500,000 volumes.

FANNING, Edmund, LL. D., a native of Connecticut, settled as a lawyer in North-Carolina. In the war of the revolution, he united with the British, and was conspicuous, for the bitterness and zeal he displayed against his countrymen. He was afterwards made a general in the British service, and lieutenant-governor of Nova-Scotia. He died in 1818.

FANNIUS, surnamed Strabo, a Roman, known by his law to check the extravagance of his countrymen. Another of the same name, wrote an account of Nero's reign, which is lost.

FANSHAW, sir Richard, an English gentleman, famous for his embassies and poetic writings, born at Ware Park, in Hertfordshire, 1607, died 1666. A translation by him, of the "Pastor Fido" of Guarini, did him much credit. Some interesting private history of this family will be found in Mr. Seward's "Anecdotes of Distinguished Persons."

FARDELLA, Michael Angelo, professor of natural history and astronomy at Padua, died at Naples, in 1718.

FARE, Charles Augustus, marquis de la, a captain in the French guards, known as the author of Memoirs on the reign of Louis XIV., died in 1712.

FAREL, William, an able reformer, born in 1489. Being driven from Paris, as a protestant, he went to Strasburgh, Geneva, Basil and Neuchâtel, where he preached the doctrines of the reformation, with zeal, ability, and success, although opposed with ridicule and abuse. He was the associate of Calvin, and died in 1565.

FARET, Nicholas, one of the first members of the French academy, died in 1646.

FARIN, Emanuel de Sousa, a Portuguese knight, and ambassador at Rome, distinguished as a poet and historian, died in 1650.

FARINACCIO, Prosper, an Italian lawyer, whose writings on the civil law, are much esteemed at Rome, died in 1618.

FARINATO, Paul, an eminent Italian painter, born at Verona, 1522, and cut, it is said, out of his mother's womb, who was just dead in labour. He was famous also for being an excellent swordsman and a very good orator, and for his knowledge in sculpture and architecture, especially that part of it which relates to fortifications. His last moments are said to have been as remarkable as his first, on account of the death of his nearest relation. He lay upon his death-bed in 1606, and his wife, who was sick in the same room, hearing him cry out, "he was going," told him, "she would bear him company;" and was as good as her word, they both expiring at the very same minute.

FARINELLI, Carlo Broschi, an Italian singer, born at Naples 1705; and, being trained to singing, acquired great reputation at Rome and at Bologna. The fame of his great talents reaching England, he was engaged to sing in the opera at London, in 1734; for England was then, as it is eminently now, the place of all places for fiddlers, singers, dancers, tumblers, sharpers, and impostors of every kind, to flock to and grow rich. His arrival in that country was in the newspapers announced to the public as an event worthy of national attention. Upon what terms Farinelli was engaged to sing is not known to any degree of certainty; his salary, however, be it what it might, bore but small proportion to the annual amount of his profits. The excessive fondness which the nobility discovered for this person, the caresses they bestowed on, and the presents they made him, indicated little less than infatuation: their bounty was prodigality, and their applause adoration. "One God, one Farinelli!" will be long remembered of a lady of distinction, who, being charmed with a particular passage in one of his songs, uttered aloud from the boxes that invidious exclamation. He quitted England in 1737.

FARINGDON, Anthony, an English divine, and author of several volumes of sermons, died in 1658.

FARMER, Hugh, a dissenting minister, educated under Dr. Doddridge, and known as a theological writer; he died in 1787.

FARMER, Dr. Richard, master of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, principal librarian to the university, &c. &c., was born at Leicester, in 1735, and distinguished himself in the walks of literature by a very masterly "Essay on the Learning of Shakspeare;" in which he decided a point that had been much litigated among the learned. For a man of his rare endowments he published but little: the essay already mentioned; some "Notes on Shakspeare;" a "Poem on laying the first stone of the public library in 1755," and a sonnet on the king's death, in 1760, (both in the Cambridge collection of verses;) "Directions for the study of English History" (Europ. Mag. xix. 415,) and a "Letter on Dennis the Critic," (Europ. Mag. xxv. 412,) being all that is known. Dr. F., however, assisted many authors in various works, for which he received their public acknowledgments and thanks. He died in 1797.

FARNABY, Thomas, an English grammarian and critic, born in London, in 1575, died in 1647.

FARNESI, Peter Louis, son of pope Paul III., by a secret marriage, duke of Parma, and Placentia, was assassinated in 1547, on account of his tyranny and debauchery.

FARNESE, Alexander, known by the title of cardinal Farnese, was son of the first duke of Parma, and born 1520 (long before his father was advanced to the dukedom). At fourteen years of age he was made bishop of Parma by Clement VII. Paul III., raised him to the purple in 1554, and employed him in various embassies. He died in 1589, lamented as a true patron of the arts, and protector of men of letters.

FARNESE, Alexander, nephew to the Cardinal, was the 3d duke of Parma, and governor of the Low Countries. He was mortally wounded, at the siege of Rouen by Henry IV., of France and died in 1592.

FARNEWORTH, Ellis, distinguished by translating some eminent authors, was born at Bonteshall, in Derbyshire, and died 1763. His publications were, "The Life of Pope Sixtus V., translated from the Italian," "Davila's History of France," "The works of Machiavel, illustrated with Annotations, Dissertations, and several new plans on the art of war."

FARQUHAR, George, an ingenious comic writer, was the son of a clergyman, in Ireland, and born at Londonderry, in 1678. In 1696 he went to London, and was solicited by his friend Wilks, the celebrated actor, to write a play; but he was still more substantially invited by a genteel accommodation, which suffered him to exercise his genius at his leisure: for the earl of Orrery, who was a patron as well as master of letters, conferred a lieutenant's commission upon him in his own regiment in Ireland, which Farquhar held several years, and behaved himself so well as an officer, giving several proofs both of courage and conduct. He died in April, 1707, before he was 30 years of age. His come:

dies display a sprightly genius, and are extremely diverting.

FASTOLFF, Sir John, a valiant and renowned general during the English conquests in France, born at Yarmouth, in Norfolk, in 1377, died 1459. He was knighted in the field, and honoured with the Garter. Sir John was a benefactor to both the universities, bequeathing a considerable legacy to Cambridge for building the schools of Philosophy and Civil Law; and at Oxford he was so bountiful to Magdalen College, that his name is there commemorated in an anniversary speech. Shakspeare has been very unjustly accused of having drawn his Sir John Falstaff to ridicule this great and good man.

FAUCHET, Claude, vicar-general to the archbishop of Bruges, and preacher to Louis XVI. His manner of preaching disgusting the monarch, Fauchet became a bitter enemy of the government, a leader in the destruction of the Bastille, and a member of the national assembly and of the convention; he was guillotined in 1793.

FAUCHET, Claude, a French antiquarian, and historiographer to Henry IV., died in 1601. His writings are valuable, but inelegantly written.

FAUCHEUR, Michael, a French protestant divine, admired as a preacher, died at Paris, in 1667.

FAUGERES, Margaretta V., distinguished for her literary accomplishments, was a native of the state of New-York; she was unfortunate in her marriage, and died in 1801. She published several little poems.

FAULKNER, George, a worthy printer, of Dublin, of no mean celebrity, being the first man who carried his profession to a high degree of credit in Ireland. He was the confidential printer of dean Swift; and enjoyed the friendship and patronage of the earl of Chesterfield, whose ironical letters to Faulkner, comparing him to Atticus, are perhaps the finest parts of his writings. He settled at Dublin, as a printer and bookseller, soon after the year 1726; raised there a very comfortable fortune by his well-known "Journal," and other laudable undertakings; and died an alderman of Dublin, Aug. 28, 1775.

FAUQUIER, Francis, succeeded governor Dinwiddie, as chief magistrate of the colony of Virginia. He was respected for his integrity, talents, and piety, and was extremely popular with the colonists; he died in 1768.

FAUR, Guy de, lord of Pibrac, advocate-general of the parliament of Paris, and counsellor of state, known also as a poet; he died in 1584.

FAUST, or FAUSTUS. See FUST.

FAUSTA, Flavia Maximiana, second wife of the emperor Constantine, was suffocated in a bath, for her incontinence, in 327.

FAUSTINA, Anna Galeria, the wife of Antoninus Pius, known only for her profligacy, died in 141.

FAUSTUS, an English monk, abbot of the monastery of the Lerin islands, and afterwards bishop of Riez, in Provence; he died in 481.

FAVART, Charles Simon, a Parisian, known for his admired operas, died in 1793.

FAVART, Marie Justine Benoitte, a celebrated French actress, wife of the preceding, died in 1772.

FAVOLIVS, Hugu, a Dutch physician and poet, died in 1585.

FAVORINUS, a Platonic philosopher, who lived in the age of Adrian.

FAVORINUS, Varinus, a Benedictine monk, keeper of the mendicant library, and afterwards bishop of Nocera; he died in 1537.

FAVRE, Anthony, an eminent lawyer at Bresse, afterwards governor of Savoy, died in 1624.

FAVRE, Claude. See VAUGELAS.

FAWCETT, sir William, an English officer of great merit, who, for his services, was promoted to the rank of general, made a knight of the bath, and governor of Chichester hospital; he died in 1804.

FAWKES, Francis, an ingenious English poet and divine, born in Yorkshire, 1721. He published a volume of poems, by subscription, 1761, in 8vo, and several poems afterwards. But his great strength is supposed to have lain in translation; as his Anacreon, Sappho, Bion, Moschus, Musæus, and Theocritus, show. His name is set to a "Family Bible, with notes, 1761," in 4to. He died Aug. 26, 1777.

FAYDIT, Anselm, a Provençal poet, or troubadour, celebrated among the princes of his time for his wit, and the elegance of his manners; he died in 1220.

FAYDIT, Peter, a French priest, known for his satirical attacks on Bossuet and Fenelon, died in 1709.

FAYETTE, Louisa de la, a French lady of great celebrity, maid of honour to Anne of Austria, and the confidant of Louis XIII., retired to a convent, after reconciling the monarch to his queen, where she died universally beloved and esteemed.

FAYETTE, Marie Madeleine, countess of, a French lady, more distinguished by her literary productions than by her family. She was married to the count de Fayette, in 1655, and died in 1693. The principal works of this lady are, "Zaide," a romance often printed, and "La Princesse de Cleves," a romance also, to which Fontenelle is said to have given four readings. M. Fayette was so regardless of fame, that she published these works under the name of Segrais, who, however, is supposed to have been no farther concerned than in aiding a little in the design of them. Voltaire says, that the romances of Fayette were the first which exhibited the manners of people of fashion in a graceful, easy, natural way; all before having been pompous, bombast, and swelling every thing beyond nature and life.

FEARNE, Charles, an eminent English conveyancer, and author of a well-known work, entitled, "An Essay on Contingent Remainders and Executory Devises," born in 1742, died Jan. 21, 1794.

FEATLEY, or FAIRCLOUGH, Daniel, D.D., an English divine, celebrated as an able theologian, and as a popular and eloquent preacher; he was provost of Chelsea college, where he died in 1645.

FECHT, or FECHTIUS, John, a Lutheran divine, settled at Rostock, died in 1716.

FECKENHAM, John de, so called because he was born of poor parents, in a cottage, near the forest of Feckenham, in Worcestershire, his right name being Hlowman. He was the last abbot of Westminster, and died in 1585. Camden calls him a "learned and good man, that lived long, did a great deal of good to the poor, and always solicited the minds of his adversaries to benevolence."

FEIJOO, Benedict Jerom, a Spanish Benedictine, who attempted, by his writings, to expose the ignorance of the clergy, and the inutilty of pilgrimages, &c. He died in 1765.

FEITHUS, Everard, a learned German, who retired to France, where he became conspicuous for his learning, and was honoured with the friendship of the most eminent literary men of that country.

FELIBIEN, Andrew, counsellor and historiographer to the king of France, born at Chartres, in 1619, died 1695. His "Dialogues upon the Lives of the Painters" have done him great honour.

FELIBIEN, John Francis, son of the preceding, inherited from his father a taste and knowledge of the fine arts, and succeeded him in all his appointments; he died in 1733.

FELIBIEN, James, brother of Andrew, and archdeacon of Chartres, died in 1716.

FELIBIEN, Michael, son of Andrew, an author of reputation, died in 1719.

FELIX, governor of Judea, in the reign of Nero.

FELIX, bishop of Urgella, in Spain, deposed for heretical opinions, died in exile in 815.

FELIX, Minutius, a father of the primitive church, who flourished in the 3d century, about the year 220. He wrote a very elegant dialogue in defence of the Christian religion, entitled "Octavius."

FELIX I., pope after Dionysius, was put to death in 274, and canonized.

FELIX II., was elected pope in 355, and afterwards died in exile in 365.

FELIX III., elevated to the papacy in the reign of Zeno, died in 492.

FELIX IV., a pious and exemplary prelate, was chosen pope in 526, and died four years after.

FELL, Dr. John, an eminently learned divine, and bishop of Oxford, born at Longworth, in Berkshire, 1625, died 1686.

FELLA, John, an English dissenting minister, tutor of an academy at Homerton, died in 1797.

FELLER, Joachim Frederic, a learned German, secretary to the duke of Weimar, died in 1726.

FELLER, Francis Xavier, an ex-jesuit, of Brussels, author of Observations on Newton's Philosophy, and on Buffon's works, with other writings; he died in 1202.

FELTHAM, Owen, a miscellaneous writer, born in Suffolk, who lived many years in the family of the earl of Thomond, wrote a book of great merit, called "Resolves, Divine, Moral, and Political," many editions of which have been published. He died about 1678.

FELTON, John, an Englishman, known only as the murderer of Villiers, duke of Buckingham, in 1628, for which he was executed. His father and grandfather had been executed before him, as bigoted and seditious catholics.

FELTON, Henry, principal of Edmund hall, Oxford, died in 1739.

FENDALL, Josias, governor and chief justice of the province of Maryland, was succeeded in 1660 by Calvert. He was afterwards banished from the province, for misdemeanors.

FENELON, Francis de Salignac de la Motte, archbishop of Cambray, born at the castle of Fenelon, in the province of Perigord, 1651, died 1715. He wrote many works; but what has gained him the greatest reputation, and for which he will be immortal, is his "Telemachus." No work ever had a greater reputation; the style of it is lively, natural, and beautiful; the fictions well contrived; the moral sublime; and the political maxims tending all to the happiness of mankind. He published another considerable work, entitled, "A Demonstration of the Being of God, grounded on the knowledge of Nature, and suited to the meanest capacity," which is one of the best books that is written in French, upon that subject.

FENN, Sir John, a very learned antiquary, born in Norwich, 1739, died February, 1794, having greatly distinguished himself by his application to the study of natural history and antiquities, which enabled him to collect and publish, in 4 vols. 4to, a large collection of "Original Letters, written during the reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., Richard III., and Henry VII.," by such of the Paston family, and others, as were personally present in court and camp, and were, in those times, persons of great consequence in the county of Norfolk. These letters contain many curious and authentic state anecdotes, relating not only to Norfolk, but to the kingdom in general, and to the wars in France.

FENNER, Arthur, governor of the state of Rhode-Island, died in 1805.

FENTON, sir Geoffrey, an eminent writer and statesman during the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., was born in Nottinghamshire, and died in 1603. He is known by a translation from the Italian of "The History of the Wars of Italy, by Guicciardini

FENTON, Elijah, secretary to the earl of Orrery, an elegant poet, and one of the worthiest and most modest men that ever adorned the court of Apollo. In 1717 he published a volume of poems, and in 1723 introduced upon the stage his tragedy of "Mariamne." Fenton was much beloved by Mr. Pope, who, after his death, (1730) honoured him with the following epitaph:

"This modest stone, what few vain marbles can,
"May truly say, Here lies an honest man:

"A poet bless'd beyond a poet's fate,
"Whom Heaven kept sacred from the proud "and great:

"Foe to loud praise, and friend to learned ease,
"Content with science in the vale of peace,
"Calmly he looked on either life, and here
"Saw nothing to regret, or there to fear:
"From Nature's temperate feast rose satisfied,
"Thank'd heav'n that he had liv'd, and that he "died."

FERAJUOLI, Nuzio, an eminent Italian landscape painter in the 17th century.

FERDINAND I., emperor of Germany, was crowned king of Hungary, in 1527, elected king of the Romans, in 1531, and succeeded his brother Charles V. as emperor, in 1558; he died in 1564.

FERDINAND II., king of Bohemia and Hungary, and emperor of Germany, in 1619; after subduing his revolted Bohemian subjects, and waging successful war against Denmark, and other neighbouring powers, he died at Vienna, in 1637.

FERDINAND III., son of the preceding, was also king of Bohemia, &c., and emperor of Germany. His plans of ambition and aggrandizement were successfully opposed by the Swedes, under the duke of Weimar, and by the French, under the great Conde, until the peace of Westphalia, &c.; the emperor died in 1657.

FERDINAND I., king of Castile and Leon, surnamed the Great, defeated the king of Leon, and usurped his throne; he penetrated into the centre of Portugal, and afterwards defeated and killed his brother, the king of Navarre; he died in 1065.

FERDINAND II., king of Castile and Leon, and son of Alphonso VIII., died in 1187.

FERDINAND III., St., obtained the throne of Castile on the abdication of his mother; and that of Leon, on the death of his father, Alphonso IX., in 1230; he made war successfully against the Moors, and died in 1252.

FERDINAND IV., succeeded to the throne of Castile at 10 years of age, and died suddenly in 1312.

FERDINAND V., surnamed the Catholic, united the kingdoms of Castile and Arragon, by his marriage with Isabella, of Castile. During their reign, the Moorish power in Spain was destroyed by Ferdinand, and a new world was added to their dominions, by the discoveries of Columbus; he died in 1516.

FERDINAND VI., surnamed the Wise, succeeded his father, Philip V., in 1746. He was distinguished for his justice, prudence, and benevolence, and his reign was prosperous and popular; he died in 1759.

FERDINAND I., king of Naples and Sicily, although a patron of commerce and the arts, was unpopular for his cruelties; he died in 1494.

FERDINAND, king of Portugal, died in 1383, after a turbulent and unfortunate reign.

FERDINAND I., grand duke of Tuscany, eminent for the wisdom and energy of his government; he died in 1609.

FERDINAND II., grand duke of Tuscany, after Cosmo II., was respected by all, for the decided and impartial neutrality he preserved during the wars between France and Spain; he died in 1698.

FERDINAND, of Cordova, a Spaniard, of the 15th century, so conspicuous for his learning, that he was considered by the vulgar as a magician.

FERDINAND LOPEZ, a Portuguese, who, in the 16th century, visited the East Indies, and published a valuable account of his voyage, &c.

FERDINAND, Charles, a poet and philosopher, of Bruges, died at Paris, in 1494.

FERDINAND, John, a jesuit, of Toledo, known as a theological writer, died in 1595.

FERDINAND DE JESUS, an eloquent Carmelite monk, of Spain, in the 17th century.

FERDINANDI, Epiphanius, an eminent physician, died in 1638.

FERDOUSI, Hassan Ben Scharf, the most celebrated of all the Persian poets. His epic poem, entitled "Schanamek," that is, "The History," contains the annals of the kings of Persia, and consists of 60,000 verses. Ferdousi composed this poem at the command of the sultan Mahmoud, and was employed upon it thirty years; after which receiving only 60,000 drachmas of silver for his trouble, he quitted the court of Mahmoud in disgust, and wrote satirical verses against him. He died in 1020.

FERG, or FERGIRE, Francis Paul, an eminent landscape painter, born at Vienna, died at London, in 1740.

FERGUS I., king of Scotland, elected king for his services in repelling the Picts; he was drowned in 404.

His principal writings were "An Essay on Civil Society;" "History of the Roman Republic;" "A Treatise on Moral and Political Science;" and "Institutes of Moral Philosophy." Dr. Ferguson held many years a professorship in the university of Edinburgh, which he resigned in favour of Mr. Dugald Stewart. He died in 1816.

FERGUSON, James, an extraordinary phenomenon of the self-taught kind, particularly in the astronomical branch of science, was born in Bamfshire, Scotland, in 1710. His parents being in low circumstances, he was obliged to keep sheep for four years; but in this situation he learned to mark the position of the stars with a thread and bead. One Alexander Cantley, butler to Thomas Grant, esq., taught him decimal arithmetic, algebra, and the elements of geometry: after this he went into two very hard services. His ingenuity at length introduced him to Sir James Dunbar, when he learned to draw, and began to take portraits. At 30 years of age, he invented his Astronomical Rotula, a machine for showing the new moons and eclipses. About 1744 he went to London, and, by his delineation of the complex line of the moon's motion, procured the honour of being elected fellow of the royal society, without paying for admission. His dissertations and inventions in mechanics, and other branches of the mathematics, introduced him to the favour of king George III., who conferred an annual pension of 50*l.* upon him. He died November 16 1776.

FERGUSON, Robert, a very ingenious though unfortunate, Scotch poet, born at Edinburgh, in 1750, died Oct. 16, 1774. He was possessed of the brightest genius, and the best heart; but his social qualifications were so fascinating that they led him into a course of dissipation and imprudence, which too often is the ruin of men of genius. Burns (his brother poet, and enthusiastic admirer) erected a neat monument to his memory in the Canongate church-yard.

FERMAT, Peter, a native of Toulouse, was distinguished as an able lawyer, and an eminent mathematician and philosopher; the associate of Descartes and Huygens; he died in 1664.

FIDDES, Dr. Richard, an English divine, and ingenious biographical and theological writer, born in 1671, died in 1725. His chief work is, "The Life of Cardinal Wolsey."

FIELD, Richard, an English divine, eminent for his learning, benevolence and piety, chaplain to queen Elizabeth, canon of Windsor, and dean of Gloucester; he died in 1616.

FIELDING, Henry, son of general Fielding, was born in 1707, and received the first rudiments of his education at home, under the care of the Rev. Mr. Oliver; he was removed to Eton-school; from whence, at about 18 years of age, he went to Leyden, where he studied under the most celebrated civilians for two years; at the expiration of which time he returned to London; and in 1727 commenced writer for the stage. Between this time and 1743, he wrote 26 dramatic pieces. About six or seven years after Mr. Fielding's commencing a writer for the stage, he married Miss Craddock, a young lady from Salisbury, possessed of beauty, and a fortune of about 15000l.; and near the same time his mother dying, an estate of somewhat better than 2000l. per annum, came into his possession. This fortune, had it been conducted with prudence and economy, might have secured to him a state of independence for life, and, with the helps it might have derived from the productions of a genius unincumbered with anxieties and perplexity, might have even afforded him an affluent income; but, fond of figure and magnificence, he threw wide open the gates of hospitality, and suffered his whole patrimony to be wasted. In short, in less than three years, he reduced himself to the unpleasant situation of having no fortune. Not discouraged, however, he betook himself closely to the study of the law, and, after the customary time of probation at the Temple, was called to the bar, and made no inconsiderable figure in Westminster-hall. He began soon after to be molested with such violent attacks from the gout, as rendered it impossible for him to be so constant at the bar as the laboriousness of his profession required; and a proof of the great force and vigour of his mind is, his pursuing so arduous a study under the exigencies of family distress, with a wife and children, whom he tenderly loved, looking up to him for sustenance; with a body torn by the acutest pains, and a mind distracted by a thousand avocations; yet obliged, for immediate supply, to produce almost extempore, a play, a farce, a pamphlet, or a newspaper. A large number of fugitive political tracts, which had their value when the incidents were actually passing on the great scene of business, came from his pen. At this time too he produced his "Joseph Andrews," which is too well known and too justly admired to leave us any room to expatiate on its merits. About 1745, Mr. F. accepted of the office of an acting magistrate in the commission of the peace for the county of Middlesex, in which station he continued till pretty near the time of his death. Yet, amidst all the laborious duties of his office, he found leisure to amuse himself, and afterwards the world, with "The History of Tom Jones," and "Amelia." At length, however, his whole frame of body was so entirely shattered by continual inroads of complicated disorders, and the incessant fatigue of business in his office, that, by the advice of his physicians, he set out for Lisbon. Even in this distressful condition, his imagination still continued making the strongest efforts to display itself; and the last gleam of his wit and humour faintly sparkled in the "Journal" he left behind him of his "Voyage" to that place, which was published in 1755, at London. In about two months after his arrival at Lisbon, in 1754, he died, in his 48th year.

FIELDING, Sarah, sister of Henry, author of "David Simple," a novel of considerable merit, born in 1714, died in 1768.

FIELDING, Sir John, half-brother to Henry, an excellent magistrate, and author of many useful regulations in the police of London and Westminster, died in 1780.

FIENNES, William, lord Say and Sele, although raised to the peerage by James I., was a rebel against his son, an active member of the long parliament, and one of Cromwell's adherents. He was afterwards chamberlain, and lord privy seal to Charles II.; he died in 1662.

FIENNES, Nathanael, second son of the preceding, was, like his father, an enemy to the church and king, a friend of Cromwell, and one of his peers; he died in 1669.

FIENUS, Thomas, a very ingenious and learned physician, born at Antwerp, in 1566, died in 1631. He composed several works, among which were, "De Veribus Imaginationis."

FIESCHO, John Lewis, a noble Genoese, who conspired to deliver Andrew Doria and his fleet to the French, and was drowned in the attempt, in 1547.

FIGINO, Ambrozio, a painter, born at Milan, died in 1590.

FIGRELIUS, Edmundus, a learned Swede, and professor at Upsal, died in 1676.

FILANGERI, Gaetano, a gentleman of Naples, employed about the court, who wrote a popular work on legislation; he died in 1787.

FILELFO, Francis. See PHILELPHIUS.

FILESAC, John, dean of the faculty of theology, at Paris, died in 1628.

FILICAJA, Vincentio di, an elegant poet, of Florence, and a senator of that city, died in 1707.

FILMER, Sir Robert, author of some publications on the nature of monarchical government, was born in Kent toward the end of the 16th century, and died in 1647.

FINÆUS, Orontius, a celebrated astronomer, and professor of mathematics in the Royal College at Paris, born at Briançon, in 1494, died 1555. He was one of those who vainly boasted of having found out the quadrature of the circle.

FINCH, Heneage, earl of Nottingham, lord high chancellor of England, born in 1621, died in 1682. Though he lived in very troublesome times, yet he retained the good opinion of both prince and people. He was distinguished by his wisdom and eloquence; and was such an excellent orator, that some have styled him the English Cicero. He left behind him, written with his own hand, "Chancery Reports," MS. in folio.

FINCH, Daniel, earl of Nottingham, son of the preceding, was secretary under William and his successor, and president of the council, at the accession of George I.; he died in 1730.

FINCH, Edward, brother of Sir Heneage, was vicar of Christ-church, London, from which he was expelled for preaching in a surplice, and associating with women; he died in 1642.

FINCH, Thomas, physician to the duke of Sleswick, and successively professor of mathematics, of eloquence, and of medicine, at Copenhagen; he died in 1656.

FINET, Sir John, born in 1571, was bred up in the court, where, by his wit, mirth, and uncommon skill in composing songs, he pleased James I. very much. In 1626, being then in good esteem with Charles I. he was made master of the ceremonies, and died in 1641.

FINGAL, a Caledonian chief, died in 283.

FINKENSTEIN, Count, an eminent Prussian statesman, born in 1713, held the important station of cabinet minister at the court of Berlin more than 50 years, and died in 1800.

FINLEY, Samuel, D. D., a native of Ireland, and president of New-Jersey College; he was much distinguished for his piety; published many sermons, and died in 1766.

FINLEY, Robert, D. D., an eminent presbyterian clergyman of New-Jersey, was elected president of the university of Athens, Georgia, in 1817, and died soon after he had entered on the duties of that office.

FIRENZUOLA, Angelo, an Italian poet, born at Florence, and patronised by pope Clement VII. His comedies, prose, and poetical works, were published in 3 vols.; he died in 1545.

FIRMICIUS MATERNUS, Julius, an ancient Christian writer of the 4th century. His treatise "Of the Errors of the Profane Religions" shows great learning, and great zeal for Christianity.

FIRMILIAN, bishop of Cæsarea, in Cappadocia died in 269.

FIRMIN, Thomas, a citizen of London, memorable for his public benefactions and charities, born in 1632, died in 1697. In good works he was indefatigably industrious, and successfully provoked many others thereto, becoming also their almoner, visiting and relieving the poor at their houses, and in prisons, whence also he redeemed many. He set many hundreds of them to work, to the expending of great sums. He rebuilt, repaired, and added conveniences to hospitals, weekly overseeing the orphans. The refugees from France, and from Ireland, partook largely the effects of his charity, pains, and earnest solicitations for them: in short, his charities were unequalled at the time when he lived.

FIRMIN, Giles, a physician, of New-England, in its early settlement, and afterwards a clergyman in Great Britain, author of the "Real Christian," died in 1697.

FIRONZABADI, surnamed Sharazi, a Persian writer on the Mahomedan law, in the 11th century. Another of that name wrote an Arabic Dictionary, and died in 1414.

FISCHER, John Christian, a very eminent performer on, and composer for, the hautbois, was born at Fribourg, but was long settled in England, where he was appointed one of the queen's chamber musicians. This admirable musician was seized with an apoplectic fit, April 29, 1800, and died in about an hour.

FISH, Simon, an English lawyer, author of "The Supplication of Beggars," a violent satire on bishops and clergy, which gained him the favour of Henry VIII.; he died of the plague in 1571.

FISHER, John, bishop of Rochester, and martyr to popery, born in 1453, was beheaded for denying the king's supremacy, in 1535. During his confinement, the poor old bishop was but hardly used, and scarcely allowed necessaries. He continued above a year in the tower and might have continued there till released by a natural death, if an unseasonable honour paid him by pope Paul III. had not hastened his destruction; this was, the creating him, in May, 1535, cardinal, by the title of cardinal priest of St. Vitalis. When the king heard of it, he said, in a great passion, "Well, let the pope send him a hat when he will; Mother of God, he shall wear it on his shoulders then, for I will leave him never a head to set it on." Erasmus represents him as a man of integrity, deep learning, sweetness of temper, and greatness of soul.

FISHER, Mary, an enthusiastic quakeress, of the 17th century, who went to Constantinople to convert the grand seignior. Mahomet, after hearing her patiently, sent her back to her own country in safety.

FISHER, Alexander M., professor of mathematics and natural philosophy, in Yale College, Connecticut, was lost with the packet Albion, on the coast of Ireland, in 1822, while on a voyage to Europe for the advancement of his professional knowledge. Talents of the highest order, united with an entire and intense devotion to the pursuit of philosophical and scientific subjects, had excited great expectations of his future usefulness, and eminence, and the news of his death was heard with the deepest regret wherever he was known.

FISKE, John, first minister of Wenham and Chelmsford, Mass., died in 1677.

FISKE, Nathan, D. D., minister of Brookfield, Mass., distinguished for his industry and perseverance in the great duties of his office; he published some sermons, and died in 1799.

FITCH, James, first minister of Saybrook, Conn., died in 1702.

FITCH, Jabez, minister of Portsmouth, N. H., author of some unpublished MSS. relating to the history of New-Hampshire, died in 1746.

FITCH, Thomas, an eminent lawyer and statesman, was, for several years, chief justice of the colony of Connecticut, and afterwards governor of the same. He died in 1774.

FITZGIBBON, John, earl of Clare, an emiment Irish lawyer, was attorney-general of Ireland, and keeper of the great seal. He was distinguished as the great promoter of the union between England and Ireland, and died at Dublin, in 1802.

FITZHERBERT, Sir Anthony, a very learned judge, of the common pleas, in the reign of Henry VIII. He was born at Norbury, in Derbyshire, died in 1538, and left behind him many valuable works, of which the chief are, "The Grand Abridgment collected by that most reverend judge, Mr. Anthony Fitzherbert, lately conferred with his own manuscript, corrected by himself, together with the references of the cases to the books by which they may be easily found; an improvement never before made;" and "The New Natura Brevium," always held in very high esteem.

FITZHERBERT, Thomas, grandson to Sir Anthony, a zealous catholic, voluntarily fled to France, and afterwards to Rome, where he presided over the English college, and died in 1640, in the 88th year of his age. His writings were controversial, and on theology.

FITZHERBERT, Nicholas, also exiled himself, and went to Rome, on account of his religious principles, where he wrote several books, and was drowned in 1612.

FITZJAMES, James, duke of Berwick, natural son of James II., was distinguished for his bravery as an officer, and his successes as a general, for which he was made a marshal of France. He was killed at the head of the French army in Germany, in 1734.

FITZ-STEPHEN, William, a monk, of Canterbury, who was present at the murder of Becket, of which he wrote an account, including a curious description of London; he died in 1191.

FIXMILLNER, Placidus, an Austrian, ecclesiastical professor at Kremsmunster, and a writer on astronomy and the canon law; he died in 1791.

FIZES, Anthony, an eminent physician, of Montpellier, whose works on medical subjects are much esteemed; he died in 1763.

FLACCOUR, F. de, director general of the French East India company, and at the head of a colony in Madagascar, in 1648, an account of which he published.

FLACCUS, Caius Valerius, an ancient Latin poet, of whom remain but very imperfect accounts. He lived, however, in the time of the emperor Vespasian, to whom he addressed a poem on the Argonautic expedition; of which he lived to compose no more than seven books, and part of an eighth. In this poem he imitated Virgil, and often in the most happy manner.

FLACIUS, Matthias. See FRANCOWITZ.

FLAMEEL, Bertholet, a historical painter, of Liege, whose pieces are to be found in the churches of that city, and of Paris; he died in 1675.

FLAMEL, Nicolas, a notary of Paris, who suddenly rose from poverty to opulence, probably by commercial speculations. His wealth gave rise to a report that he had discovered the philosopher's stone. He was living in 1399.

FLAMINIO, Giovanni Antonio, an orator, poet, and historian, of Bologna, who wrote the life of Albertus Magnus, &c., died in 1536.

FLAMINIO, Marc Antonio, son of the preceding, eminent as a man of learning, and as a writer of epigrams, &c.; he died at Rome, in 1550.

FLAMINIUS, or FLAMININUS, Titus Quintus, a Roman consul, celebrated for his defeat of Philip of Macedon, 198 B. C., and his restoration of the liberties of Greece.

FLAMINIUS, Nobilis, an eminent Italian divine and critic, who corrected the Vulgate edition of the Septuagint, and died in 1590.

FLAMSTEED, John, a most eminent English mathematician and astronomical writer, born in 1646, died 1719.

FLANDRIN, Peter, of Lyons, celebrated for his knowledge of the veterinary art, and of comparative anatomy; he wrote a treatise on the management of cattle and other works, and died in 1796.

FLASSANS, Taraudet de, a Provençal poet of the 14th century, born at Flassans.

FLATMAN, Thomas, an English wit and poet, born in London, in 1633, died in 1688. It is remarked, that Flatman in his younger days, had a dislike to marriage, and made a song describing the incumbrances of it, with this beginning:

"Like a dog with a bottle tied close to his tail
"Like a toad in a bog, or a thief in a jail," &c

but being afterwards smitten with a fair virgin, and with her fortune, he espoused her, in 1672; upon which his ingenious comrades did serenade him that night, while he was in the embraces of his mistress, with the said song.

FLAUST, John Baptist, an advocate of the parliament of Rouen, and author of a work on Norman jurisprudence, upon which he was employed fifty years; he died in 1783.

FLAVEL, John, an English divine, educated at Oxford, was ejected from his living at Dartmouth, and afterwards restored by Charles I.; he died in 1692.

FLAVIAN, a patriarch of Antioch, died in 404.

FLAVIAN, a patriarch of Constantinople, in 447. He was deposed, and died in banishment.

FLAVIGNI, Valerian de, doctor of the Sorbonne, and professor of Hebrew, at the royal college, died at Paris, in 1674.

FLAVITAS, patriarch of Constantinople, after Acacius.

FLECHIER, Esprit, a French bishop, celebrated for poetry and oratory, born in 1632, died in 1710. His works consist of Sermons, Latin and French poetry, Letters, &c. He wrote also the "History of Cardinal Ximenes."

FLECKNOE, Richard, an English poet and dramatic writer, in the reign of Charles II., remembered only as giving a name to Dryden's incomparable satire against Shadwell, called "Mac Flecknoe," from which Pope afterwards acknowledged to have taken the plan of his Dunciad.

FLEETWOOD, William, an English lawyer, recorder of London, in the reign of Elizabeth, and author of several law treatises, died in 1593.

FLEETWOOD, William, bishop of Ely, born in the Tower of London, in 1656, died in 1723. His most celebrated writings are "An Essay upon Miracles;" "Chronicon Preciosum; or, an account of the English money, the price of corn, and other commodities, for the last six hundred years," &c. Bishop Fleetwood's character was great in every respect. His virtue was not of the fanatical kind, nor was his piety the least tinged with superstition: yet he cultivated and practised both to perfection. As for his accomplishments, he was incontestably the best preacher, of his time; and, for occasional sermons, may be considered as a model.

FLEMING, Robert, a Scotch dissenting minister and powerful preacher, born in 1630, died in 1694, leaving behind him a work of considerable merit, called "The Fulfilling of the Scriptures."

FLEMING, Robert, son of the above, minister at Leyden and Amsterdam, and afterwards at London, wrote tracts, &c. on religious subjects. He died in 1716.

FLEMING, Caleb, an English dissenting clergyman and writer, died in 1773.

FLEMMING, or FLEMMYNGE, Richard, prebendary of York, and bishop of Lincoln, was the founder of Lincoln college, Oxford; he died in 1431.

FLESSELLES, N. de, a French magistrate, who was shot while attempting to repress a revolutionary mob in Paris, in 1789.

FLETCHER, Giles, LL. D., brother to the bishop, was an ambassador from Elizabeth to Russia, and otherwise employed in her service; he died in 1610.

FLETCHER, Phineas, called the "Spenser of the age," was born about 1582, and died in 1650. His most famous composition called "The Purple Island," is an allegorical description of man. His works were printed at Cambridge, in 1633, and in 1772 his "Eclogues" were reprinted at Edinburgh, with an introduction and argument to each eclogue, and notes by an anonymous editor.

FLETCHER, Giles, brother of the foregoing, and author of a rich and picturesque poem, called "Christ's Victorie," was beneficed at Alderton, in Suffolk, where he died in 1623.

FLETCHER, John, an English dramatic writer, born in 1576, was the son of Dr. Richard Fletcher, bishop of London. He wrote plays jointly with Beaumont, though it is not known what share each bore in forming the plots, writing the scenes, &c.; but the general opinion is, that Beaumont's judgment was usually employed in correcting and retrenching the superfluities of Fletcher's wit. He died of the plague, at London, in 1625.

FLETCHER, Abraham, a self-taught mathematician and astrologer, died in 1793.

FLETCHER, Benjamin, governor of the colony of New-York, known only for his passionate disposition, and his avaricious propensities, which rendered him extremely unpopular.

PLEURIEU, Charles Peter Clarel de, a French hydrographer, captain in the marine, and afterwards minister of that department, and tutor to the dauphin. Under Napoleon, he was appointed intendant of the house, and governor of the Thuilleries. He died in 1810.

FLEURY, Claude, a French advocate, of great learning, tutor to several of the French princes, abbot of Locdieu, and prior of Argenteuil; he was confessor to Lewis XV., and died in 1723.

FLEURY, Andrew Hercule de, cardinal, a most eminent French statesman and negotiator, born in Languedoc, 1653, died in 1743.

FLEURY, Julian, the learned editor of the Delphin Apuleius.

FLENDERS, Matthew, a distinguished English navigator, who explored the coast of New South Wales in a small boat, and was afterwards sent out as commander of a vessel, for the purpose of making further discoveries in that region. He was taken prisoner by the French, his journal detained, and himself so cruelly treated as to cause his death, in 1814.

FLINK, Godfrey, a Dutch painter, pupil of Rembrandt, died in 1660.

FLINT, Abel, D. D., a distinguished presbyterian clergyman, for many years pastor of a church in Hartford, Connecticut, died in 1825.

FLIPART, John James, a French engraver, of great merit, died in 1782.

FLOCCQUET, Stephen Joseph, an eminent musician, died at Paris, in 1785.

FLODOARD, or FRODOARD, a French historian, and an ecclesiastic, of Rheims, who wrote a history of his church from its foundation to 949; he died in 966.

FLOGEL, Charles Frederic, professor of philosophy in the college of noblemen, at Leignitz, author of a history of the human understanding, and several other works; he died in 1788.

FLOOD, Henry, a very celebrated senator, formerly of Ireland, but latterly of England, born in 1732. For many years a most distinguished member of the house of commons, his every effort was invariably directed to improve the political constitution, to increase the internal resources, and to promote the general prosperity of Ireland. As an orator, he made Demosthenes his model, and emulated his strength and vehemence, without aiming at the diffusion or brilliancy of Cicero; and, as a writer, energy, force, and argument, more distinguished his productions, than an elaborate structure of words, or accurately polished sentences. He died in 1791.

FLORENTINO, Stephano, a historical painter, of Florence, died in 1350.

FLORIAN, John Peter Claris de, a very popular French writer, born in 1755. Voltaire, to whom he was near akin, procured him the place of page to the duc de Penthièvre, who soon gave him a commission in the army; but, on observing the success of his first literary production, "Galathée," which appeared in 1782, the duke determined that he should confine himself to literature, and furnished him with a library. His dramas, pastorals, and novels, have placed him in the first rank of popularity as a sentimental writer. His "Numa Pompilius," and "Fables," are also much admired. He died in 1794.

FLORIMOND DE REMOND, counsellor of the parliament of Bourdeaux, known as an opposer of Calvinists, died in 1602.

FLORIO, John, born in London, in the reign of Henry VIII., died of the plague in 1625. He was the author of several works, viz. "First Fruits, which yield familiar Speech, merry Proverbs, witty Sentences, and golden Sayings;" "Dictionary, Italian and English;" which was afterwards published, in 1611, under this title, "Queen Anna's New World of Words," &c.

FLORIS, Francis, a sculptor, and celebrated painter, of Antwerp, died in 1570.

FLORUS, Lucius Annaeus, an ancient Latin historian, of the same family with Seneca and Lucan, flourished in the reigns of Trajan and Adrian, and wrote an abridgment of the Roman history in four books.

FLORUS, surnamed Master, a deacon of Lyons, in the 9th century, author of a commentary on St. Paul, &c.

FLOYER, Sir John, a respectable English physician and medical writer, died in 1720.

FLOYD, William, a member of congress, before and after the adoption of the federal constitution, and a signer of the declaration of independence; he died in 1821.

FLUDD, Robert, an English physician and philosopher, and a voluminous writer on the wonders of alchemy, and the Rosicrucian doctrines, early in the 17th century.

FLYNT, Henry, one of the first ministers of Braintree, was a man of piety and integrity; he died in 1668.

FLYNT, Henry, tutor and fellow of Harvard college, a native of Dorchester, Mass., and a preacher, distinguished for his solid talents; he published a number of sermons, and died in 1760.

FOES, or FOESIUS, Anutius, a very celebrated physician, of Paris, born at Metz, in 1528, and died in 1596. He translated into Latin the whole works of Hippocrates, and judiciously corrected the Greek text as he went along. He translated also the commentaries of Galen, upon the second book of Hippocrates, "Concerning vulgar Maladies."

FOGLIETA, or FOLIETA, Uberto, a learned Genoese priest, died at Rome, in 1521.

FOHI, the first king of China, who is said to have founded this empire about 200 years after the deluge. He was the first who taught the Chinese the advantages of civil society, invented instruments of music, established laws and ordinances, and is said to have reigned no less than 115 years.

FOINARD, Frederic Maurice, a native of Normandy, eminent as a Hebrew scholar, was vice-president of the college of du Plessis, and died in 1743.

FOIX, Mark Anthony, a jesuit, eminent as a preacher, died at Auvergne, in 1687.

FOIX, Odel de, lord of Lautrec, an eminent French general under Lewis XII. and Francis I., and governor of Milan; he died in 1528.

FOLARD, Charles, a Frenchman, born in 1669, died 1752. He was author of several works, the principal of which are, "Commentaries upon Polybius," and "A Treatise concerning the Defence of Places," &c.

FOLENGO, Theophilus, a nobleman, of Mantua, was for some time a soldier, and afterwards became a Benedictine. He died in 1544. His writings are numerous, both in prose and poetry.

FOLENGO, John Baptist, a Benedictine writer, of Mantua, died in 1559.

FOLKES, Martio, an English antiquarian, mathematician, and philosopher, and president of the royal society of London, born in 1690, died 1754. His last production was a book upon the "English Silver Coin," from the conquest to his own times.

FONCEMAGNE, Stephen Laurent de, of Orleans, preceptor to the duke of Chartres, died in 1779.

FONSECA, Anthony de, a Dominican, of Lisbon, preacher to the king, and professor of theology at the university of Coimbra, about 1540.

FONSECA, Peter, a Portuguese metaphysician and writer, died in 1559.

FONT, Joseph de la, a French comic writer, died in 1725.

FONT, Pierre de la, a French divine and theological writer, died in 1699.

FONTAINE, John de la, a celebrated French poet, born in 1621, died 1695. His compositions have a great deal of nature, without the least affectation: his wit seems unstudied, and so much pleasantry is hardly to be elsewhere met with. His "Fables" are observed to have more sobriety and correctness than his "Tales," which are very licentious.

FONTAINE, Nicholas, a French theological writer of great piety, learning, and industry, died in 1709.

FONTAINES, Peter Francis Guyot des, a French critic and historical writer, and translator, born in 1685, died 1745.

FONTANA, Dominico, a Roman architect and mechanic of great eminence, who succeeded in setting up the obelisk in front of St. Peter's, a work before deemed impracticable. He died at Naples, in 1607.

FONTANA, Prospero, an eminent painter at Bologna, born in 1512.

FONTANA, Lavinia, daughter of the preceding, was also eminent as a painter, and was patronised by pope Gregory XIII.; she died in 1602.

FONTANGES, Marie Angelique, duchess of, favourite of Lewis XIV., was distinguished for her beauty; she died in 1681.

FONTANINI, Juste, archbishop of Ancyra, died at Rome in 1736.

FONTE-MODERATA, a celebrated Venetian lady, whose real name was Modesta Pozzo, was born at Venice, in 1555. She is the author of several poems, and published a book in prose, "Dei Meriti delle Donne," in which she maintains, that the female sex is not inferior in understanding and merit to the male. This book upon "The Merits of Women," was printed immediately after her death; and father Ribera has made a eulogium of this learned heroine, in his "Theatre of Learned Women." She died in 1592.

FONTENAY, Peter Claude, a learned jesuit, of Paris, died in 1742.

FONTENAY, John Baptist Blain de, an eminent French painter, born at Caen, in 1654, died 1715. Nothing is finer than his fruits and flowers. They have all the freshness and beauty imaginable: and the very dew seems to trick down the stalks of them with all the lustre and transparency of a diamond. The insects upon them also appear perfectly animated.

FONTENELLE, Bernard le Bovier de, a French author, born in 1657, died 1757. Voltaire declares him to have been the most universal genius that the age of Lewis XIV. produced. In his poetical performances, and "Dialogues of the Dead," the spirit of Voiture was discerned, though more extended, and more philosophical. His "Plurality of Worlds" is a work singular in its kind; his design in it was, to present that part of philosophy to view in a gay and pleasing dress; for which purpose he has introduced a lady, and drawn up the whole in a most agreeable, as well as instructing dialogue. In the same manner he made an entertaining book out of "Vandale's Oracles." Having been appointed perpetual secretary to the academy of sciences, he discharged that trust above 40 years, so as to meet with universal applause. His "History of the Academy of Sciences" often throws a great light upon their memoirs, which are very obscure. The "Eloges" which he spoke of the deceased members of the academy have this particular merit, that they excite a respect for the sciences as well as for the author.

FONTENU, Lewis Francis de, a French writer and a great antiquarian, died in 1759.

FONTIUS, Bartholomew, a historian of Florence, and librarian to the king of Hungary, at Buda; he died in 1513.

FOOTE, Samuel, born at Truro, in Cornwall, in 1722. He was designed for the law, but the dryness and gravity of this study not suiting the vivacity of Foote's spirit, he left it, and had recourse to the stage. He appeared first in Othello, but soon struck out into a new and untroubled path; which was, by taking upon himself the double character of author and performer. Under this form, in 1747, he opened the little theatre in the Haymarket with a drama of his own composing, called, "The Diversions of the Morning." This piece was nothing more than the introduction of well-known characters in real life; whose manner of conversing and expressing themselves he had a most amazing talent at imitating, even to the very voice of those he intended to take off. From 1752 to 1761, he continued to perform at one of the theatres every season, as fancy or interest directed his choice, generally for a stated number of nights: on which engagements he usually brought out a new piece. And thus he went on, till a very pressing embarrassment in his affairs compelled him to perform "The Minor" at the Haymarket, in the summer of 1760, with such a company as he could hastily collect. Henceforward he pursued the scheme of occupying that theatre when the others were shut up; and, from 1762, to the season before his death, he regularly performed there. In 1766, when at Lord Mexborough's in the country, he broke his leg by a fall from his horse, the duke of York being also there; and it is generally supposed, that this accident facilitated his application for a patent, which he obtained in July of the same year. Foote now acquired a great deal of money, and seemed to set mankind at defiance; for he cared not whom he offended, if they were but subjects convertible to ridicule; he died in 1777. Foote has been called the "English Aristophanes," and certainly was a most powerful satirist of the follies of the age.

FOPEN'S, John Francis, professor of divinity, at Louvain, and archdeacon of Mechlin, died in 1761.

FORBES, Patrick, a learned and pious bishop, of Aberdeen, born 1564, died 1635. His principal work is a "Commentary on the Revelations."

FORBES, John, made bishop of Aberdeen by James VI., was the son of Patrick Forbes just mentioned. His book of "Historical and Theological Institutions," is so excellent a work, that Burnet says, if he could have finished it by a second volume, it would, perhaps, have been the most valuable treatise of divinity that has yet appeared in the world. He died in 1645.

FORBES, Duncan, an eminent Scottish lawyer, and many years president of the court of sessions; but as a writer chiefly employed on theological subjects: born in 1685, died in 1747.

FORBES, James, F. R. S., a celebrated tourist and natural historian, born in London, in 1749, a lineal descendant of the earls of Granard; died in 1819. He travelled nearly 20 years in different parts of Asia, Africa, and America; and his drawings, and accompanying descriptions, during these travels, fill 150 folio volumes, containing upwards of 52,000 pages, the work of his own hand. His chief work, however, is entitled, "Oriental Memoirs," &c., with 93 beautiful engravings from his original drawings.

FORBES, William, principal of Marischal college, at Aberdeen, and bishop of Edinburgh; he died in 1634.

FORBES, John, a physician, afterwards a brigadier general in the British army, and commander of the expedition against fort Du Quene, which he took and called fort Pitt, now Pittsburgh; he died at Philadelphia, in 1759.

FORBES, Eli, D. D., minister of a church in Brookfield, and afterwards in Gloucester, Mass.; died in 1804.

FORBIN, Claude chevalier de, a naval officer of France. In 1686, chief admiral to the king of Siam, in the East-Indies, and afterwards in the service of Lewis XIV.; he died in 1733.

FORBISHER. See FROBISHER.

FORBONNAIS, Francis Veron de, inspector general of the manufactures of France, and a writer on finance and commerce, died in 1800.

FORCE, Charlotte Rose de Caumont de la, a French poetess of considerable merit, died in 1724.

FORCE, James duke de la, fortunately escaped the massacre of St. Bartholomew, in which his father and brother were murdered. He fought with the protestants, under Henry IV., against Lewis XIII., but was afterwards reconciled to him, and made a marshal of France, a duke and lieutenant general of the army, with liberal presents; he died in 1652.

FORD, John, a dramatic writer in the reigns of James I. and Charles I. He wrote 12 plays, which were all published between 1623 and 1639. He was born in 1586, and died about 1639.

FORDUN, John de, a Scotch historian, who lived toward the end of the 14th century, and wrote the history of his own country, under the title of "Scot Chronicon."

FORDYCE, David, a learned and elegant writer of the present age, professor of philosophy in the Marischal-college, Aberdeen, and author of "Dialogues concerning Education," a "Treatise on Moral Philosophy," and "Theodorus, a Dialogue concerning the Art of Preaching," published after his untimely death. He was born at Aberdeen, in 1720, and died by shipwreck, in 1751.

FORDYCE, Sir William, one of the most eminent physicians of London, in the 18th century, and a very benevolent man, died in 1792.

FORDYCE, Dr. James, many years a very popular and eloquent preacher among the protestant dissenters, born at Aberdeen, in 1720, died in 1796, leaving behind him some excellent moral and religious publications; particularly, "Sermons to Young Men and Women."

FORDYCE, Dr. George, an eminent physician and writer on medicine and chymistry, was born at Aberdeen, in 1736, and died in London, in 1802. His principal works are, "Elements of Agriculture and Vegetation," "Elements of the Practice of Physic," and "A Treatise on the Digestion of Food." Other works of his, are to be found in the Philosophical Transactions, &c.

FOREIRO, Francis, a Dominican monk, of Lisbon, eminent for his abilities and learning, died in 1581.

FOREST, or FORESTA, James Philip, an Augustine monk, born at Bergamo, died about 1503.

FOREST, Peter, a Dutch physician and medical writer, born 1522, died 1597.

FOREST, John, an eminent French painter, who excelled in landscapes, born 1636, died 1712.

FORMEY, John Henry Samuel, minister of the French church at Berlin, and professor of philosophy in the French college there; he died in 1797.

FORMOSUS, bishop of Porto, and pope after

Stephen V., in 891. His unpopularity was such, that his body was dragged from his grave by the populace, and thrown into the Tyber.

FORSKAL, Peter, a naturalist of Sweden, who studied under Linnæus, and afterwards went with Neibuhr to Arabia, where he died in 1763.

FORSTER, John, a protestant Hebraist, of Wittenberg, the friend of Luther and Melancthon, died in 1556.

FORSTER, George, an ingenious naturalist, who accompanied Cook in his second voyage round the world; he was afterwards professor in the university of Cassel, and died in 1792, while preparing to visit Thibet. He was the author of a journal of Cook's voyages, &c.

FORSTER, Dr. John Reinold, an eminent writer in natural history and natural philosophy, who accompanied captain Cook in his second voyage round the world in 1772. He was born 1729, and died at Halle, a Prussian university, in Saxony, 1799, leaving behind him many valuable treatises.

FORSTER, Nathaniel, an English clergyman, prebendary of Bristol cathedral, and chaplain to the king, died in 1757. His writings were numerous, on various subjects.

FORSYER, Christopher, an Austrian lawyer, who, for his services in negotiating the peace of Munster, was made a member of the Aulic council; he died in 1667.

FORSYTH, William, F. A. S., was born in 1737. He was early initiated in horticulture; went to London, in 1763, and shortly afterwards became a pupil to the celebrated Philip Miller, gardener to the company of apothecaries; and whom he succeeded in that situation, in 1771. Here he remained till he was appointed by his majesty, chief superintendent of the royal gardens at Kensington and St. James'; which he held until his death, in 1804. About the year 1768, Mr. Forsyth paid particular attention to the cultivation of fruit and forest trees, and turned his thoughts more especially toward the discovery of a composition to remedy the diseases and injuries incident to them. After repeated trials, he at length succeeded in preparing one which fully answered his expectations; and in the year 1769, the success of his experiments attracted the notice of the commissioners of the land revenue; upon whose recommendation, a committee of both houses of parliament was appointed to report upon the merits of his discovery. The result of their inquiries was, a perfect conviction of its utility; and, in consequence, an address was voted by the house of commons to his majesty, praying that a reward might be granted to Mr. F. upon his disclosing the secret of his composition to the public; which was accordingly done; and in 1791, Mr. F. published his "Observations on the Diseases, Defects, and injuries of Fruit and Forest Trees;" to which he added the whole correspondence between the commissioners of the land revenue, the committee of parliament, and himself. In 1802, Mr. F. published the final result of his labours, "A Treatise on the Culture and Management of Fruit Trees," &c., in a 4to volume, with many plates; the value of which work has been duly appreciated by the public, three editions having been sold in a very short time.

FORT, Francis le, a native of Geneva, who entered the service of Peter I., of Russia, where he behaved with such skill and ability, that the emperor made him commander of his armies, and his prime minister. He died at Moscow, in 1699, deeply lamented.

FORTESCUE, Sir John, an eminent English lawyer, in the reign of Henry VI. In 1441, he was made a king's serjeant at law; and the year after, chief justice of the King's bench. He held this office through the reign of Henry VI., to whom he steadily adhered and served faithfully in all his troubles. His most famous work, "De Laudibus Legum Angliæ," yet remains an everlasting monument of this great and good man's respect and affection for his country. He died about 1465.

FORTIGUERRA, Nicolas, an Italian poet, made a bishop by Clement XI., and promised a cardinal's hat by Clement XII.; he died in 1735.

FORTIUS, or FORTIS, Joachim, a teacher of Greek and mathematics, at Antwerp, and the friend of Erasmus; he died in 1536.

FOSCARI, Francis, made doge of Venice, in 1423, signalized his government by great territorial conquests; but these were attended with so much expense to the Venetians, that they murmured loudly against him. The malice of his enemies vented itself upon his son, whom, upon various pretexts, they caused thrice to be banished. The father was deposed in 1457, at the age of 84, and died two days after. His son also died in prison under a false accusation of murdering a senator, which the real assassin confessed on his deathbed, but too late to save the life of young Foscari, who had died in confinement, the victim of calumny.

FOSCARINI, Michael, a Venetian senator and historian, and a novel writer, died in 1692.

FOSSE, Charles de la, an eminent French painter, and professor and rector of the academy for painting, with a pension from Lewis XIV., of 1000 crowns; he died in 1716.

FOSSE, Antony de la, lord of Aubigny, distinguished as a poet and tragedian, died in 1708.

FOSTER, Dr. James, an English dissenting minister, born in 1697. He published a "Defence of the Usefulness, Truth, and Excellency, of the Christian Revelation," against Tindal's "Christianity as old as the Creation." This defence is written with great force of argument and great moderation, has been well accepted, is much esteemed by the candid and judicious of all parties; and, as he said, was spoken of with great regard by Tindal himself. He died in 1753.

FOSTER, Samuel, an eminent English mathematician, and astronomy professor of Gresham college, born about 1600, died in 1652. His works on mathematics and mechanics are numerous and valuable.

FOSTER, John, canon of Windsor, and an excellent classic scholar, born in 1731, died in 1773. He wrote "An Essay on the different Nature of Accent and Quantity, with their Use and Application in the Pronunciation of the English, Latin, and Greek Languages," which sufficiently attests his character as a scholar.

FOSTER, Sir Michael, an eminent judge, was recorder of Bristol, and afterwards one of the justices of the king's bench. He died in 1765.

FOSTER, Jedediah, a justice of the superior court of Massachusetts, was one of the principal members of the convention which framed the constitution of that state; he died at Brookfield, in 1779.

FOSTER, Benjamin, D. D., minister in New-York, became a baptist; he was learned in the languages and died in 1798.

FOTHERGILL, George, D. D., an English clergyman, head of St. Edmund hall, Oxford, and vicar of Bramley; he died in 1760.

FOTHERGILL, Samuel, brother of George, was eminent as a preacher among the quakers. He travelled over Great Britain and North America, to propagate his doctrines, and died in 1773.

FOTHERGILL, John, an eminent quaker physician, born in 1712. His public and private benefactions, his encouragement of science, the instances of his attention to the health, the police, the convenience of the metropolis, &c. are too numerous to specify, and his great medical skill too well known to need our eulogy.

FOUCAULT, Nicolas Joseph, a distinguished antiquary, who discovered the ancient town of the Viducassians, in 1704, within six miles of Caen, an account of which he published, with the history of the coins, medals, &c. found there; he died in 1721.

FOUCHER, Simon, a native of Dijon, author of a treatise on Hygrometers, and other works; he died in 1696.

FOUCHIER, Bertram de, a Dutch painter, of Bergen-op-Zoom, and a disciple of Vandyck, died in 1674.

FOUCQUET, Nicholas, marquis of Belle-Isle, procurator-general of the parliament of Paris, and superintendent of finances, was banished for his extravagance with public moneys; he died in 1680.

FOUCQUET, Charles Louis Augustus, better known by the title of marshal Belle-Isle, one of the greatest statesmen and generals that France has produced, was born in 1684, and died in 1761.

FOUGEROUX, Augustus Denys, an eminent writer and antiquary, of Paris, died in 1789.

FOULLON, James, an ecclesiastic, born at Rochelle, and educated among the jesuits, about 1700.

FOULIS, Robert and Andrew, two learned printers, of Scotland, natives, it is believed, of Glasgow; from whose presses have issued some of the finest specimens of correct and elegant printing that was produced in the 18th century. In 1744, came out Robert's immaculate edition of "Horace;" the sheets of which, as they were printed, were hung up in the college of Glasgow: and a reward was offered to those who should discover an inaccuracy. Andrew died in 1774, and Robert in 1776.

FOULON, William, a schoolmaster, at the Hazue, known as a writer of Latin comedies; he died in 1538.

FOULON, John, a jesuit, of Liege, author of a commentary on some part of the Scriptures, died in 1668.

FOULON, N. a French politician and financier, who was placed at the head of the finances at the beginning of the revolution, and became one of its first victims, in 1789.

FOUNTAIN, Sir Andrew, received the honour of knighthood from king William, and travelled over most parts of Europe; where he made a large and valuable collection of pictures, ancient statues, medals, and inscriptions; and by his skill and judgment, furnished the most considerable cabinets in England, to his own emolument, being a perfect connoisseur in medals, ancient as well as modern. He died in 1753.

FOUQUIER TINVILLE, Anthony Quentin, a Frenchman, of infamous memory, who, as public accuser during the revolution, under Robespierre, was conspicuous for his depravity even at that time; he was guillotined in 1794, universally execrated.

FOUQUIERES, James, a Flemish landscape painter, born at Antwerp, in 1580. Some have placed him so near Titian, as to make the difference of their pictures consist, rather in the countries represented, than in the goodness of the pieces. He painted for Rubens, of whom he learned the essentials of his art, and died in 1639.

FOUR, du. See LONGUERUE.

FOURCROI, N. an eminent French engineer, died in 1791.

FOURCROY, Anthony Francis, a very eminent French writer, on chymistry, and a member of the Institute, born at Paris, in 1755, died in 1809. His funeral oration was pronounced by count Regnard de St. Jean D'Angely.

FOURMONT, Stephen, professor of Arabic and Chinese, at Paris, was distinguished for his learning, not only by Frenchmen, but by foreigners, who resorted to his house for literary conversation; he died in 1743.

FOURMONT, Michael, brother to the above, was an ecclesiastic, and professor of Syriac, in the royal college; he died in 1746.

FOURNIER, Peter Simon, a French engraver and letter-founder, born at Paris, in 1712. His letters not only embellished the typographical art, but his genius illustrated and enlarged it. He published, in 1737, a table of proportions to be observed between letters, in order to determine their height and relations to each other. This ingenious artist ascended to the very origin of printing, for the sake of knowing it thoroughly. He produced at different times several historical and critical dissertations upon the rise and progress of the typographical art, which have since been collected and published in 1 vol., divided into three parts: the last includes a curious history of the engravers in wood. But the most important work of Fournier is his "Manual Typographique, utile aux Gens de Lettres, et a ceux qui exercent les differens Parties de l'Art de l'Imprimerie." The author meant to have added two more, but was prevented by his death, which happened in 1768.

FOURNY, Honore Caille du, a very learned Frenchman, auditor of the chamber of accounts, at Paris, died in 1731.

FOURQUEVAUX, Raymond, of Pavia, baron of, distinguished himself in the wars of the Guelphs and Gibbelines, and in defence of Toulouse, against the Huguenots, for which he was made governor of Narbonne, where he died in 1574.

FOWLER, John, an English printer, educated at Oxford, and settled at Antwerp, where he learned printing; he was a learned man, skilled in Latin and Greek, a poet, and an orator. He died in 1578.

FOWLER, Christopher, a puritan of some eminence, who became vicar of St. Mary's from which he was ejected; he died in 1676.

FOWLER, Edward, an English prelate, of great piety, prebendary and afterwards bishop of Gloucester, died in 1714.

FOWLER, Thomas, an English physician, eminent as a writer on medical subjects, died in 1801.

FOX, Richard, a native of Grantham, of obscure origin, was educated at Oxford and Cambridge, and made a privy counsellor, and bishop of Exeter, by Henry, earl of Richmond, on his accession to the throne. He was also employed in various embassies, and removed to the see of Durham; he died in 1528.

FOX, Edward, an eminent statesman, almoner to Henry VIII., and bishop of Hereford. He was the principal pillar of the Reformation, as to the politic and prudential part of it; being of more activity and no less ability than Cranmer himself; but he acted more secretly than Cranmer, and by that means did not bring himself into danger of suffering on that account. He was born at Dursley, in Gloucestershire, and died in 1538.

FOX, John, an English divine and church historian, born at Boston, in Lincolnshire, in 1517, the very year that Luther began to oppose the errors of the church of Rome; he died in 1587.

FOX, George, founder and head of the English quakers, was born in 1624, and died in 1690. He was brought up a shoemaker, and followed his trade in Nottingham; till at length his reflections upon the degeneracy of mankind made him resolve to attempt a reformation; and, believing himself under the advantage of spiritual illumination, he shut up his shop, and turned preacher. This was in 1650; and his wife Margaret, being under the same persuasion, had also a share in his ministerial functions. His doctrine and appearance being altogether new, the people ran after him in great numbers: which success encouraged him to declaim with the utmost vehemence against the disorders of the times. His disciples adopted plainness in their habits, were frugal in their manner of living, and very reserved in their conversation. Fox had several rough traverses in executing the instructions that he professed to receive from heaven, and was often in danger of his life. Notwithstanding all these discouragements, he fearlessly persevered, and this sect prevailed much; many considerable men being drawn over to them, among whom were Barclay and Penn. Their followers of the present time, are distinguished by neatness of dress, peaceable demeanor, and correctness of manners.

FOX, Charles James, a distinguished English statesman and orator, born in 1749, was the second son of lord Holland. After receiving a liberal education at Westminster, Eton, and Oxford, he made the tour of Europe; and, returning home, was even, while yet in his minority, elected M. P. for Midhurst. His first speech was in favour of ministers, against Mr. Wilkes and the Middlesex election. He was successively made a lord of the admiralty and of the treasury, but at length dismissed from office; and before he was 24 years of age, became one of the most eloquent opponents of government. With the exception of a short time under the Rockingham administration, when he was secretary of state, Mr. Fox continued leader of the opposition party in the house of commons from that time till the death of Mr. Pitt in the beginning of 1806; when he was made secretary of state for foreign affairs. He now entered on a negotiation with the French government with a view to a peace; but a dropsy seized him during its progress, which terminated fatally at Chiswick House, Sept. 13, of the same year. His remains received the honours of a public funeral in Westminster Abbey on the 10th of October, and were interred within eighteen inches of the grave of his late political rival, Mr. Pitt.

FOX DE MORZILLO, Sebastian, a native of Seville, author of philosophical tracts, &c.; he was drowned on his way to Spain, to become the tutor to Don Carlos, son of Philip III.

FOX-CROFT, Thomas, a distinguished and admired minister, of Boston; published numerous sermons, and died in 1769.

FRACASTORIO, Girolamo, an Italian poet and physician, distinguished also as a mathematician and astronomer, and as the intimate friend of Cardinal Bembo, Scaliger, and other learned men; he died in 1553.

FRACHETTA, Girolamo, a native of Rovigno, in Italy, who gained great reputation by his political works, the most considerable of which is entitled, "Il Seminario de Governi di Stato, et di Guerra." In this work, he has collected, under 110 chapters, about 6000 military and state maxims, extracted from the best authors; and has added to each chapter a discourse, which serves as a commentary to it. He died about 1610.

FRAGUIER, Claude Francis, a French writer, an eminent classical scholar, and author of Latin poems, &c.; he died in 1728.

FRANCESCA, Peter, an eminent painter, of Venice, who delighted in representing night-pieces and battles. He drew also several portraits, wrote of arithmetic and geometry, and died in 1443.

FRANCESCHINI, Mark Antony, a painter, of Bologna, died in 1729.

FRANCHI, Antonio, a painter, of Lucca, engaged in the service of the duchess of Florence; he died in 1709.

FRANCIA, Francesco, an eminent painter, born at Bologna in 1450, was at first a goldsmith or jeweller, afterwards a graver of coins and medals; but at last applying himself to painting, he acquired great credit by his skill. Raphael's reputation made him desirous to see his works, but his age would not suffer him to take a journey to Rome: nevertheless, a friendly correspondence commenced between these two painters. Raphael having painted the picture of St. Cecilia for a church in Bologna, sent it to Francia to place it properly for him, and even to correct its faults, if he discerned any. But Francia was so struck with the beauty of the piece, that, despairing of attaining the same perfection, he fell, it is said, into a kind of melancholy; and this, bringing on a consumption, occasioned his death in 1518.

FRANCIS, Simon, a French painter, born in 1606, was in his youth very devout, and declared for a religious life. Seeking out a profession which might assist him in raising his soul to the love of God, and by chance looking on a picture of our Saviour's activity, he was so extremely touched, that, in hopes of being able to draw some pieces whose effect on the spectators might be as lively, he resolved to turn painter. He died in 1671.

FRANCIS, of Paulo, a Romish saint, canonized by pope Leo X., was the founder of the Minims, and celebrated for his austerities; he died in 1507.

FRANCIS, of Assisi, a great saint of the Romish church, and founder of one of four orders of mendicant friars, born in 1182. He was the son of a merchant, whose profession he followed till 1206; at which time he became so strongly affected with religious truths, that he resolved to retire from the world. He prevailed with great numbers to devote themselves, as he had done, to the poverty enjoined by the gospel; and drew up an institute, or rule, for their use, which was approved by the Roman Pontiffs. Francis was canonized by pope Gregory IX., the 6th of May, 1230; and Oct. the 4th, on which his death happened in 1226, was appointed as his festival. His order soon rose to great splendour, and has done prodigious service to the Roman pontiffs.

FRANCIS DE SALES, a Romish saint, was bishop of Geneva, and founder of the order of the visitation. He is said to have converted 70,000 protestants before his death, which happened in 1622. He was canonized by pope Alexander VI.

FRANCIS XAVIER, the great condjutor of Ignatius Loyola, was born at Xavier, at the foot of the Pyrenees, in 1506; and was sent one of the earliest missionaries to the East Indies; for his zeal and ability in which undertaking, he obtained the appellation of the Apostle of the Indies. He died in 1552, and was canonized in 1622, by Gregory XV.

FRANCIS, of Lorraine, emperor of Germany, married a daughter of the emperor Charles VI., and was associated with his wife in the empire till 1745, when he was elected emperor. He was a patron of literature and the arts, as well as of commerce; he died suddenly in 1675.

FRANCIS I., king of France, succeeded Lewis XII. on the French throne, in 1515. He is known as the rival and opponent of the emperor Charles V., with whom he was involved in war, during almost his whole reign, with various success, and to whom he was, at one time, a prisoner, with his two sons; also, as the patron of literature and the arts. He died at Rambouillet, in 1547.

FRANCIS II., son of Henry II. and Catherine de Medici, succeeded to the throne of France on the death of his father. He married the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, and died in 1560, aged 17, after a reign of 17 months.

FRANCIS, duke of Alencon, Anjou, and Berri, and brother of the preceding, opposed his brother Henry III., for which he was imprisoned by Catherine, and afterwards liberated. He was subsequently crowned duke of Brabant, and was one of the suitors of queen Elizabeth; he died in 1584.

FRANCIS DE BOURBON, count of St. Pol and Chammont, distinguished himself at the battle of Marignan. He was taken prisoner with Francis I., but escaped, and died in 1545.

FRANCIS DE BOURBON, count Enguien, was a celebrated general in the service of Francis I.; he was killed by accident, in 1545.

FRANCIS DE BOURBON, duke of Montpensier, was the faithful associate of Henry IV. of France, and distinguished himself in his service as a soldier; he died in 1592.

FRANCIS, of Lorraine, duke of Guise and of Aumale, distinguished himself in the wars with Charles V., and the English; and in the reigns of Henry II., and Francis II. of France, completely governed the kingdom. After the death of Francis, he espoused the side of the catholics, in the civil wars, and was assassinated in 1563.

FRANCIS DE BORGIA, St., duke of Candia, and viceroy of Catalonia, was the grandson of pope Alexander VI. He afterwards became a jesuit, and died at Rome, in 1572. He was canonized by pope Clement X.

FRANCIS, Lucas, a historical and portrait painter, employed by the kings of France and Spain; he died in 1643.

FRANCIS ROMAIN, a Dominican, of Ghent, was an eminent architect; he was employed by Lewis XIV., to finish the Pont Royal, of Paris, for which he was liberally rewarded; he died in 1735.

FRANCIS, Dr. Philip, more distinguished as a translator than as an original writer. His versions of Horace and Demosthenes have been justly valued: the former is perhaps as complete and useful a work of its kind as hath yet appeared. He was also the author of two tragedies, "Eugenia," and "Constantia;" but, as a dramatic writer, not very successful. He died in 1773.

FRANCIS, James Charles, an eminent French engraver, died in 1769.

FRANCIS, sir Philip, was a member of the English parliament, and an active promoter of the articles of impeachment of Warren Hastings. He has been considered by some as the author of Junius' Letters; he died in 1818.

FRANCISCA, or FRANCES, a Roman lady, who founded a convent at Rome, and was canonized in 1608; she was born in 1384.

FRANCIUS, Peter, professor of rhetoric, and oratory at Amsterdam, his native city; he died in 1704.

FRANCK, George, a native of Naumburg, received a poetic crown, at the age of 18, for his Latin, Greek, German, and Hebrew poetry. He was professor of medicine at Heidelberg and Wittemberg, and died in 1704.

FRANCK, Augustus Herman, of Lubeck, professor of oriental languages, and of divinity, at Halle, was distinguished for his benevolence and piety; he died in 1727.

FRANCK, or FRANCKEN, Franciscus, a Flemish painter, of great merit, died in 1616.

FRANCK, Franciscus, son of the preceding, and a pupil of his father, was also a painter; he died in 1642.

FRANCKER, Christian, successively a jesuit, a socinian, a unitarian, and a catholic, in the 16th century.

FRANCKENSTEIN, Christian Godfrey, of Leipsic, an advocate, distinguished as a man of letters, and a historian; he died in 1717.

FRANCO, Nicolo, a satirist, born at Benevento, in 1510. He was condemned to death, for some severe satires on illustrious persons of Rome; but it is not known that he was executed.

FRANCO, Battista, a painter, of Venice, who imitated the manner of Buonarrotte, died in 1561.

FRANCOIS, Abbe Laurent, an able opponent of the French philosophers, died in 1782. His works were principally in defence of religion.

FRANCOIS, Simon, a selftaught portrait painter of Tours, died in 1671.

FRANCOIS, Lucas, a historical painter, in the service of the kings of France and Spain, died in 1643.

FRANCOIS, Lucas, called the Younger, son of the preceding, was also highly respected as a painter; he died in 1654.

FRANCOWITZ, Matthias, a protestant divine, pupil of Luther and Melancthon, was a private teacher, and afterwards professor of the Greek and Latin languages at Wittemberg; he died in 1575.

FRANCUS, Sebastian, a German anabaptist of the 16th century.

FRANCK FLORIS. See FLORIS.

FRANKLIN, Dr. Benjamin, born at Boston, in America, in 1706, was placed at a very early age under one of his brothers, who was a printer, where he made a rapid progress in that art so useful to mankind, and contracted an attachment for the press which continued as long as he lived. Scarcely emerged from infancy Franklin was a philosopher without being conscious of it, and by the continual exercise of his genius, prepared himself for those great discoveries in science which have since associated his name with that of Newton, and for those political reflections which have placed him by the side of a Solon and a Lycurgus. Soon after his removal from Boston to Philadelphia, Franklin, in concert with some other young men, established a small club; where every member, after his work was over, and on holidays, brought his stock of ideas, which were submitted to discussion. This society of which the young printer was the soul, has been the source of every useful establishment in Pennsylvania calculated to promote the progress of science, the mechanical arts, and particularly the improvement of the human understanding. Higher employments, however, at length called him from his country, which he was destined to serve more effectually as its agent in England, whither he was sent in 1757. The stamp act, by which the British minister wished to familiarize the Americans to pay taxes to the mother-country, revived that love of liberty which had led their forefathers to a country at that time a desert; and the colonies formed a congress, the first idea of which had been communicated to them by Franklin, at the conferences at Albany, in 1754. The war that was just terminated, and the exertions made by them to support it, had given them a conviction of their strength; they opposed this measure, and the minister gave way, but reserved the means of renewing his attempts. Once cautioned, however, they remained on their guard; liberty, cherished by their alarms, took deep root; and the rapid circulation of ideas by means of newspapers, for the introduction of which they were indebted to the printer of Philadelphia, united them together to resist every fresh enterprise. In the year 1766, this printer, called to the bar of the house of commons, underwent that famous interrogatory, which placed the name of Franklin as high in politics, as it was before in natural philosophy. From that time he defended the cause of America with a firmness and moderation becoming a great man, pointing out to ministry all the errors they had committed, and the consequences they would induce, till the period when, the tax on the tea meeting the same opposition as the stamp-act had done, England blindly fancied herself capable of subjecting by force 3,000,000 of men determined to be free, at a distance of 2000 leagues. Every man is acquainted with the particulars of that war; but every man has not equally reflected on the bold attempt of Franklin as a legislator. Having asserted their independence, and placed themselves in the rank of nations, the different colonies, now the United States of America, adopted each its own form of government; and, retaining almost universally their admiration for the British constitution, framed them from the same principles variously modelled. Franklin alone, disengaging the political machine from those multiplied movements and admired counterpoises that rendered it so complicated, proposed the reducing it to the simplicity of a single legislative body. This grand idea startled the legislators of Pennsylvania; but the philosopher removed the fears of a considerable number, and at length determined them to the adoption of his principle. Having given laws to his country, Franklin undertook again to serve it in Europe, not by representations to the metropolis, or answers at the bar of the house of commons; but by treaties with France, and successively with other powers.

From France he returned to America in 1785, and lived five years after this period; for three years he was president of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania; he was a member of the convention that established the new form of federal government; and his last public act was a grand example for those who are employed in the legislation of their country. In this convention he had differed in some points from the majority; but, when the articles were ultimately decreed, he said to his colleagues, "We ought to have but one opinion; the good of our country requires that the resolution be unanimous;" and he signed. He died April 17, 1790. As an author, he never wrote a work of any length. His political works consist of letters or short tracts; but all of them, even those of humour, bear the marks of his observing genius and mild philosophy. He wrote many for that rank of people who have no opportunity for study, and whom it is yet of so much consequence to instruct; and he was well skilled in reducing useful truths to maxims easily retained, and sometimes to proverbs, or little tales, the simple and natural graces of which acquire a new value when associated with the name of their author. In short, the whole life of Franklin, his meditations, and his labours, have all been directed to public utility; but the grand object that he had always in view did not shut his heart against private friendship: he loved his family, his friends, and was extremely beneficent. In society he was sententious, but not fluent; a listener rather than a talker; an informing rather than a pleasing companion; impatient of interruption, he often mentioned the custom of the Indians, who always remain silent some time before they give an answer to a question which they have heard attentively; unlike some of the politest societies in Europe, where a sentence can scarcely be finished without interruption. In the midst of his greatest occupations for the liberty of his country, he had some physical experiment near him in his closet; and the sciences, which he had rather discovered than studied, afforded him a continual source of pleasure. He made various bequests and donations to cities, public bodies, and individuals; and requested that the following epitaph, which he had composed for himself some years before, might be inscribed on his tombstone:

"The body of
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Printer, (like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out, and strip of its lettering and gilding) lies here food for worms;
yet the work itself shall not be lost, but will (as he believed) appear once more in a new and more beautiful edition, corrected and amended by THE AUTHOR."

FRANKLIN, William, son of Dr. Franklin, embraced the side of Britain, in the revolutionary war, was taken prisoner, and afterwards suffered to retire to England, where he died. He was the last royal governor of New-Jersey.

FRANKLIN, Dr. Thomas, one of the king's chaplains, and rector of Brasted, in Kent. This gentleman was possessed of no inconsiderable share of learning and poetical abilities, and was long a favourite in the literary world. His translations of Phalaris, Sophocles, and Lucian, equally evince his learning and his genius. His dramatic compositions, are well known, and deservedly esteemed; he was born in London, about 1720, and died in 1784.

FRANKS, Sebastian, a landscape painter, of Antwerp, born in 1573.

FRANKS, John Baptist, son of the preceding, was a successful imitator of the manner of Vanduyck and Rubens; he was born in 1600.

FRANS FLORIS, an eminent painter, born at Antwerp, in 1520. He grew rich and famous, his performances being good and numerous; but was greatly addicted to drinking, and died at 50 years of age. He was called the Raphael of Flanders.

FRANTZIUS, Wolfgang, a German divine, and professor of divinity at Wittenburgh, died in 1620.

FRASSON, Claude, a French monk, was a doctor of the Sorbonne, and professor of theology at Paris, also superior of the Franciscan convent there; he died in 1711.

FRATELLINI, Giovanna, a female painter, of Florence, patronised by the archduchess Victoria; she died in 1731.

FRATELLINI, Lorenzo Maria, son of the preceding, eminent as a historical and landscape painter, died in 1729.

FRAUNCE, Abraham, a poet, who was educated at the expense of sir Philip Sidney, in Cambridge; after which he was called to the bar. He wrote, amongst other things, "The Countess of Pembroke's Ivy Church and Emanuel," in 1591; and a "Translation of Heliodorus' Ethiopics."

FRAUWENLOB, Henry, a German writer, died in 1317.

FREDEGARIUS, the earliest French historian, after Gregory of Tours; his chronicle, in barbarous language, extends to the year 641.

FREDEGONDE, wife of Chilperic, king of France, was born of obscure parents, but, by her beauty and art, raised herself to the throne; she poisoned all around her whom she considered enemies or rivals, and, finally, the king himself; she died in 597.

FREDERIC I., surnamed Barbarossa, duke of Swabia, succeeded his uncle, Conrad III., as emperor of Germany, and was crowned in Italy by Adrian IV. A part of his reign was disturbed by quarrels and wars with the popes, who, after a reconciliation, persuaded him to undertake a crusade against Saladin. He died during the expedition, in 1190, after having gained several victories over the Turks and Greeks. His son Frederic, duke of Swabia, who attended him, and displayed great valour in the Holy Land, also died there.

FREDERIC II., grandson of the preceding, and son of Henry VI., was born in 1194, and elected king of the Romans, two years after. In 1210, he was elected emperor of Germany. He died in 1250, aged 57.

FREDERIC III., surnamed the Fair, son of Albert of Austria, was the rival of Lewis of Bavaria, in a contest for the imperial throne. He was defeated by him at the battle of Michaelsdorf, and taken prisoner; he died in 1330.

FREDERIC IV., surnamed the Pacific, emperor of Germany, was the last of the German princes, who submitted to a coronation at Rome. He was a weak, indolent, and superstitious prince, who saw his subjects revolt, with indifference, and afterwards fled from Vienna; he was reduced to beg his bread, and died in 1493.

FREDERIC I., king of Denmark, distinguished himself by his wisdom, prudence, and by the utility of his public measures, particularly in instructing Lutheranism among his subjects; he died in 1533.

FREDERIC II., king of Denmark, was the patron of literature and of learned men; and the liberal protector of Tycho Brahe; he died in 1588.

FREDERIC III., archbishop of Bremen, succeeded his father, Christian IV., as king of Denmark, and improved the condition of his people, by making them more independent of the nobles, and by making the crown hereditary; he died in 1670.

FREDERIC IV., king of Denmark, was engaged in war with Charles XII., of Sweden, and lost some part of his territories, which he afterwards recovered; he died in 1730.

FREDERICK V., grandson of the preceding, reigned on the throne of Denmark from 1746 to 1766. He was succeeded by his son, Christian VII.

FREDERIC AUGUSTUS I., king of Poland, and elector of Saxony, recommended himself to the Poles, by his valour against the Turks, and was elected their king in 1696. He was beaten by Charles XII., and stripped of his dominions, which he afterwards recovered and maintained till his death, in 1733. He was the patron of literature, and his court was for a long time one of the most brilliant in Europe.

FREDERIC AUGUSTUS II., succeeded his father on the throne of Poland, in 1734. The last of his reign was disturbed by a war with the king of Prussia, who invaded his kingdom, and reduced him to unconditional submission. He died in 1763.

FREDERIC, prince of Hesse Cassel, married a sister of Charles XII., of Sweden, and obtained possession of the Swedish throne in 1720. He died in 1757.

FREDERIC WILLIAM, elector of Brandenburg, distinguished himself by his war with Poland, and afterwards with Lewis XIV. After repelling the Swedes, who had invaded his dominions, he devoted his attention to the commerce of his people, and to internal improvements. He died in 1688.

FREDERIC I., elector of Brandenburg, son of the preceding, was ambitious of raising his duchy into a kingdom, and joined Leopold, emperor of Germany, in a war against several states, to accomplish the object; he died in 1713.

FREDERIC WILLIAM I., king of Prussia, son of the preceding, succeeded his father, in 1713. He began his reign by a strict reform in the expenditures of his kingdom, by encouraging commerce and industry, and by inviting foreign artisans to settle in his dominions; at the same time he provided for his security by creating an army of 60,000 men. He died in 1740.

FREDERIC II., son of the preceding, ascended the throne in 1740. He was distinguished by the appellation of "the Great," to which his superior talents and conspicuous achievements gave him a just claim. During his reign, he was engaged in war with almost every potentate of Europe; and, in most instances successfully. At the same time, he was solicitous for the welfare of his subjects, and devoted a part of every day to a redress of their grievances.

He encouraged commerce and the arts, invited literary men from all parts of Europe to his court, administered justice impartially, and relieved the unfortunate and distressed, wherever to be found. In the midst of all his cares, he found time to devote to literary pursuits, and was himself a philosopher and an author, but of infidel principles; he died in 1786, aged 75.

FREDERIC, surnamed the Wise, elector of Saxony, was the friend of the emperor Maximilian, and might have succeeded him had he not declined. He was the firm and zealous friend of Luther, and the reformation, and died in 1526.

FREDERIC V., elector of Palatine, married a daughter of James I., of England. He was elected king of Bohemia by the protestants, but opposed and defeated by Ferdinand, of Austria. The death of Gustavus, who had promised to assist him, put an end to his hopes, and he died a month afterwards, in 1632.

FREDERIC, Colonel, son of the unfortunate Theodore, king of Corsica, was engaged in the service of the elector of Wirtemberg, who honoured him with his friendship. He went to England as agent of the elector, and there committed suicide, in 1796.

FREEKE, William, born in 1664. He wrote, among other things, "A Dialogue by way of question and answer, concerning the Deity," and "A brief and clear confutation of the Doctrine of the Trinity;" which two pieces being laid before the house of commons, were voted to be burnt, as containing much blasphemy, and accordingly were so; the author being afterwards fined 500*l.*, and obliged to give security for his good behaviour for three years, and to make a recantation in the four courts in Westminster-hall.

FREEMAN, John, an English painter, who lived in the reign of Charles II.

FREGOSO, Baptist, doge of Genoa, was deposed and banished for his haughtiness; the time of his death is unknown.

FREHER, Marquard, a German, who studied the civil law in France. He was counsellor to Casimir, prince Palatine, afterwards professor of law, at Heidelberg, and engaged in important affairs by the elector, Frederic IV.; he died in 1614.

FREIGIUS, John Thomas, a learned German, employed as a teacher, at Friburg, and at Basil, was afterwards chosen rector of the college of Altorf. He died in 1583.

FREIND, John, an English physician, and elegant writer, born in 1675, died 1728. The most elaborate of his numerous works is "The History of Physic, from the time of Galen to the beginning of the 16th century, chiefly with regard to practice;" and this is justly deemed a masterly performance, both for use and elegance.

FREIND, Robert, brother to the physician, and head master of Westminster school, born in 1667; he published an edition of Cicero's "Orator," and died in 1751.

FREINSHMIUS, John, a most ingenious and learned man, born at Ulm, in Swabia, in 1668. He is said to have understood almost all the European languages, besides Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. He was professor of eloquence, at Upsal, librarian and historiographer to Christina, of Sweden, and afterwards professor at Heidelberg, where he died in 1660.

FREIRE DE ANDRADE, Hyacinthe, a Portuguese, abbot of St. Mary de Chans, and a great favourite of John IV., of Portugal; he died in 1657.

FRELINGHUYSEN, Theodorus Jacobus, minister of the Reformed Dutch Church, at Rarlton, New-Jersey; was an able and successful preacher.

FREMINET, Martin, an eminent French painter, died in 1619.

FREMONT D'ABLANCOURT, Nicholas, a native of France, who fled to Holland, at the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and was historiographer to the prince of Orange; he died in 1693.

FRENICLE DE BESSY, Bernard, a mathematician, and author of a treatise on right-angled triangles, and other works; he died in 1675.

FRESNES, Theodore, a painter, born in 1643, at Enkhuyzen; the best of his pieces are preserved in Amsterdam.

FRERET, Nicolas, of Paris, a historian and chronologist, and opposer of Sir Isaac Newton's system of chronology, born at Paris, in 1688, died 1749. He was a complete sceptic; and Voltaire, for the worst of purposes, revised two of his works: viz. "The Letters of Thrasylulus to Leucippus," and "Examination of the Apologists for Christianity."

FRERON, Elie Catherine, a French critic and journalist of considerable talents, and known as having been the constant object of the satire of Voltaire, was born at Quimper, in 1719, and died in 1776. His "Letters on certain writings of the Times," he began in 1749, and published 13 volumes. In 1754, he began his "Aunee Literaire," of which he published 7 volumes that year, and eight every year after, till his death; and in that work, Freron, as a zealous enemy of the modern philosophy, attacked Voltaire with spirit. He represented him as a skillful plagiarist; as a poet, brilliant, but inferior to Corneille, Racine, and Boileau; as an elegant, but inaccurate historian; and rather the tyrant than the king of literature.

FRESNAYE, John Vauguelin de la, an early French poet, king's advocate for Caen, and president of that city; he died in 1606.

FRESNE, Charles du Cange du, a learned Frenchman, born at Amiens, in 1610, died 1688. His best works are a "Latin and Greek Glossary," the "History of Constantinople under the French Emperors," &c.

FRESNOY, Charles Alphonso du, an excellent French poet and painter, born at Paris, in 1611. After his death, his poem, "De Arte Graphica," was printed with a prose translation and notes, by De Piles, and dedicated to Colbert. It was afterwards translated into English, by Dryden, who prefixed to it an original "Preface, containing a parallel between painting and poetry." This poem will keep his name alive as long as either poetry or painting shall find any esteem. A later version of Du Fresnoy has been made by Mr. Mason, and enriched with notes by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

FRESNY, Charles Riviere du, a French poet, born at Paris, in 1648. He had a good natural taste for music, painting, sculpture, architecture, and all the fine arts. He had also a taste for laying out gardens, which procured him the place of overseer of the king's gardens, whose valet de chambre he likewise was. He died in 1724; and in 1731, his works were collected and printed in 6 vols., consisting of "dramatic performances, songs, amusements serious and comical," &c.

PRETEAU DE ST. JUST, Emmanuel Marie

Michael Philip, a French nobleman, who, from dissatisfaction with the court, embraced the popular party, at the revolution; but was condemned by Robespierre, and executed in 1793.

FREWEN, Accepted, an English prelate, educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he became president, afterwards chaplain to Charles I., dean of Gloucester, bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, and archbishop of York; he died in 1664.

FRITH, John. See FRYTH.

FRIZON, Peter, master of the jesuit's college, of Navarre, and author of a history of the French cardinals. &c., died in 1651.

PROBENIUS, John, an eminent and learned German printer. He was the first of the Germans who brought the art to any perfection; and the great character of this printer was the principal motive which led Erasmus to fix his quarters at Basil, in order to have his own works printed by him. He died at Basil, in 1527, lauded by all, but by none more than Erasmus, who wrote his epitaph in Greek and Latin.

PROBISHER, Sir Martin, an eminent navigator, and the first Englishman that attempted to find out a north-west passage to China. He was born in Yorkshire, and was killed in battle in 1594.

FROELICH, Erasmus, a jesuit, eminent for his knowledge of mathematics and medallic history, died in 1758.

FROIDMONT, Libert, a native of Liege, dean of St. Peters, and professor of philosophy, at Louvain, died in 1653.

FROILA I., king of Spain, is known for a victory gained over the Saracens, in 760. He caused his brother to be murdered, and was himself killed by another brother, in 768.

FROILA II., king of Spain, in 923, died of a leprosy.

FROISSARD, or FROISSART, John, born at Valenciennes, about 1337. His chief work is a history, which comprises what happened in France, Spain, and England, from 1336 to 1400. He was also a poet, as well as a historian. He died in 1402. His history was translated recently by Mr. Johnes, of Havod, Wales.

FROMAGE, Peter, a superior of the jesuits, who died in Syria, in 1740.

FRONTEAU, John, a native of Angers, chancellor of Paris university, and afterwards prior of Benay, in Angiers; he died in 1662.

FRONTENAC, Louis count, governor-general of Canada, whose exertions conduced to the protection and property of Canada; he died in 1698.

FRONTINUS, Sextus Julius, a Roman writer, in high repute under Vespasian, Titus, Domitian, Nerva, and Trajan. Nerva made him curator of the aqueducts, which occasioned him to write his treatise "De Aqueductibus Urbis Romæ." He wrote also, "Tres Libros Stratagematum," or, concerning the stratagems used in war by the most eminent Greek and Roman commanders; and afterwards added a fourth containing examples of those arts and maxims disapproved of in the former. These two works are still extant.

FRONTO, Marcus Cornelius, a Roman orator, preceptor to Vereius and M. Aurelius.

FROWDE, Philip, author of several pieces of poetry, some of which in Latin were pure and elegant enough to entitle them to a place in the Musæ Anglicaæ. He likewise wrote two tragedies, "The Fall of Saguntum," and "Philotas." He died in 1738.

FRUGONI, Charles Innocent, an Italian poet, born at Genoa, died in 1768.

FRUMENTIUS, a Romish saint, consecrated bishop of the Ethiopians, by Athanasius, died in 360.

FRYE, Thomas, a painter, who acquired some eminence in London, where he died, in 1762.

FRYTH, John, an English martyr, who was converted to Lutheranism, at Oxford. He preached his doctrines so boldly, that he was sent to the Tower, and, on his refusing to recant, was burnt at Smithfield, in 1533.

FUCHSIUS, or FUCHS, Leonard, an eminent physician and botanist, of Munich and Ingolstadt, died in 1566.

FUESSL, John Gaspard, an eminent artist of Zurich, author of the history of the artists of Switzerland, died in 1782.

FUGGER, Huldric, born at Augsburg, in 1526, was eminent for his affection to learning and learned men. He laid out great sums in purchasing good manuscripts of ancient authors, and getting them printed; and for this purpose, he allowed for some time a salary to the famous Henry Stephens. His relations were so incensed at him for the moneys he expended in this way, that they brought an action against him for it, and got him to be declared incapable of managing his affairs. He died in 1584, having bequeathed his library to the elector Palatine, and a fund for the maintenance of six scholars.

FUIBERT, an Italian, who acquired great celebrity as a preacher in France, and was made bishop of Chartres; he died in 1028.

FULDA, Charles Frederic, a native of Swabia, eminent as a Lutheran divine, and as a mechanic; he died in 1788.

FULLER, Nicolas, a distinguished English scholar and critic, prebendary of Salisbury, died in 1622.

FULLER, Thomas, an English historian and divine, born in 1608, died in 1661. He is celebrated particularly as author of a "History of the War," "The Church History of Britain, from the birth of Jesus Christ, to the year 1548;" "The History of the University of Cambridge since the Conquest," &c. &c. He had a memory so tenacious and comprehensive, that it enabled him to do things which are hardly credible. He could repeat 500 strange words after twice hearing; and could make use of a sermon, verbatim, if he once heard it.

FULLER, Isaac, a celebrated English painter, in the reign of Charles II., died in London.

FULLO, Peter, a heretical bishop of Antioch, in the 5th century.

FULTON, Robert, a native of Pennsylvania, was born in 1765. He early evinced a genius for mechanics and painting, and went to England to improve himself in the latter. His attention, however, was soon turned to mechanics, and he became a civil engineer. From that time, his discoveries and inventions were numerous and important. But that which will continue his name to posterity, and associate him with the benefactors of mankind, was the successful application of steam to the propelling of boats. The discovery was made, and the first experiment tried at Paris, in 1803; after which he returned to America and exhibited a boat in successful operation on the waters of New-York. Vessels propelled by his machinery are now in common use throughout the United States, and in Europe. He died suddenly, in the midst of his career, in Feb., 1815.

FULVIA, an extraordinary Roman lady, and wife of Mark Antony, who had no more of her sex than her body; for her temper and courage breathed nothing but policy and war. This lady was an admirable coadjutor to her cruel husband during the massacres of the triumvirate. She put several persons to death of her own head, either out of avarice or a spirit of revenge; and even people whom her husband did not know. Antony caused the heads of those whom he had proscribed to be brought to a table, and fed his eyes a long while with these unhappy spectacles. The head of Cicero was one of them, which he ordered to be fixed on the rostrum from whence Cicero had made so many speeches against him; but, before that order was executed, Fulvia took the head and spit upon it, and placing it on her lap, drew out the tongue, which she pierced several times with her bodkin, uttering all the while the most opprobrious language against Cicero.

FUNCCIUS, or FUNCK, John Nicholas, a celebrated critic, born at Marburg, in 1693, died in 1773.

FURETIERE, Anthony, an ingenious and learned Frenchman, born at Paris, in 1620, was eminent in the civil and canon law; but he is chiefly known by, and valued for, his "Universal Dictionary of the French Tongue," in which he explains the terms of art in all sciences. He died in 1688.

FURINI, Francesco, a painter, of Florence, admired for the elegance displayed in his figures; he died in 1646.

FURIUS, called Bibaculus, perhaps from his excessive drinking, an ancient Latin poet, born at Cremona, about the year of Rome 650, or 100 B. C. He wrote annals, of which Macrobius has preserved some fragments.

FURNEAUX, Philip, D. D., an English dissenting clergyman, died in 1783.

FURST, or FURSTIUS, Walter, revered by his countrymen as one of the founders of Swiss liberty, lived about 1307.

FURSFEMBURG, Ferdinand de, a native of Westphalia, promoted in the church by pope Alexander VII., and made bishop of Munster, and apostolical vicar of northern Europe, died in 1683.

FUSI, Anthony, a doctor of the Sorbonne, afterwards became a protestant at Geneva, died in 1630.

FUST, or FAUSTUS, John, a citizen of Mentz, and one of the earliest printers. He had the policy to conceal his art; and to this policy we are indebted for the tradition of "The Devil and Dr. Faustus," handed down to the present times. About 1460, he associated with John of Guttenburgh; their types were cut in wood, and fixed, not moveable as at present. Having printed off a considerable number of copies of the Bible, to imitate those which were commonly sold in MS., Fust undertook the sale of them at Paris, where the art of printing was then unknown. As he sold his printed copies for 60 crowns, while the scribes demanded 500, this created universal astonishment; but, when he produced copies as fast as they were wanted, and lowered the price to 30 crowns, all Paris was agitated. The uniformity of the copies increased the wonder; informations were given in to the police against him as a magician; his lodgings were searched, and a great number of copies being found, they were seized; the red ink with which they were embellished was said to be his blood; it was seriously adjudged that he was in league with the devil; and, if he had not fled, most probably he would have shared the fate of those whom ignorant and superstitious judges condemned, in those days, for witchcraft. Fust died at Mentz, in 1466.

FUZELIER, Lewis, a dramatic writer, of Paris, and the conductor of a periodical paper, called the Mercury, died in 1752.

GAIQUES, John, priest, of the oratory, and canon of Soissons, died in 1730.

GAILLARD, de Lonjumeau, bishop of Apt, was the first projector of a universal historical dictionary; he died in 1695.

GAILLARD, Gabriel Henry, a French historical writer, and member of the French academy died in 1805.

GAINAS, a Goth, of great valour, became a general under Arcadius and desolated Thrace, because refused a church for the Arians; he was killed A. D. 400.

GAINSBOROUGH, Thomas, born at Sudbury in Suffolk, 1727, very early discovered a propensity to painting. Nature was his teacher, and the woods of Suffolk his academy. Here he would pass in solitude his mornings, in making a sketch of an old tree, a marshy brook, a few cattle, a shepherd and his flock, or any other accidental objects that were presented. From delineation he proceeded to colouring; and after painting several landscapes from the age of 10 to 12, he quitted Sudbury for London, where he commenced portrait painter. His landscapes will establish his name on the record of fine arts with honours such as never before attended a native of England. These subjects he painted with a faithful adherence to nature; indeed, the brilliancy of Claude, and the simplicity of Ruysdael, appear combined in Mr. G's romantic scenes. While we lament him as an artist, let us not pass over those virtues which were an honour to human nature, that generous heart, whose strongest propensities were to relieve the genuine claims of poverty. If he selected, for the exercise of his pencil, an infant from a cottage, all the tenants of the humble roof generally participated in the profits of the picture; and some of them frequently found in his habitation a permanent abode. His liberality was not confined to this alone; needy relatives, and unfortunate friends, were further incurable on a spirit that could not deny; and, owing to this generosity of temper, that affluence was not left to his family which so much merit might promise, and such real worth deserve. He died in 1788.

GALADIN, Mahomet, a popular emperor of the Moguls, died in 1695.

GALANTINI, Hippolito, a delicate miniature painter, of Genoa, died in 1706.

GALANUS, Clement, an Italian, missionary to America, wrote a grammar of that language, about 1650.

GALAS, Matthew, a general, who, from being a page, rose to high standing; he was in the service of the emperor Frederic II., and Philip IV., of Spain; he died in 1647.

GALATEO, Ferrari Antonio, a scholar and physician, born at Galatania; he was author of several works, and died in 1517.

GALATIN, Peter, author of the valuable work "De Arcanis Catholicæ Veritatis;" he died about 1530.

GALBA, Servius Sulpicius, emperor of Rome after Nero: he was slain by the guards, who raised Otho to the throne, A. D. 69.

GALE, John, a learned divine, among the baptists, born at London, in 1680. His father was a citizen of good repute. He is chiefly known for his writings against "Wall's Defence of Infant Baptism," and died in 1721.

GALE, Theophilus, a learned divine, among the non-conformists, born in 1628, died in 1678. He wrote a large and laborious work, called "The Court of the Gentiles."

GALE, Thomas, dean of York, formerly head-master of St. Paul's school, and celebra ted for his knowledge of the Greek language, and antiquities, was born in 1636, died in 1702.

GALE, Roger, F. R. S. and A. S. S., son of the dean, first vice-president of the society of antiquaries, and treasurer to the same society, born 1672, was considered as one of the most learned men of his age, and most highly skilled in the antiquities of his country. He died in 1745.

GALE, Samuel, the youngest of the dean's sons, born in 1682. He was one of the revivers of the society of antiquaries, in 1717, and their first treasurer. He was a man of great learning and uncommon abilities, and well versed in the antiquities of England, for which he left many valuable collections behind him. He died in 1754.

GALEANO, Joseph, a physician of great repute, at Palermo. We owe to him a collection of little pieces of the Sicilian poets. He was born in 1605, and died in 1675, greatly regretted; for he was a kind of oracle with his countrymen.

GALEN, Matthew, a native of Zealand, chancellor of Douay university, and author of several works.

GALEN, Claudian, after Hippocrates, prince of the Greek physicians, was a native of Pergamus, in the Lesser Asia, where he was born about 131. He chose physic for his profession, being determined thereto by a dream which his father had a little before his death; and at 28 years of age had made some considerable advances toward improving his art: for instance, he had acquired a particular skill in the wounds of the nerves; and was possessed of a method of treating them never known before. The pontiff of Pergamus gave him an opportunity of trying his new method upon the gladiators; and he was so successful, that not a single one perished by any wounds of this kind. By this we find, as well as by several other instances, that Galen studied, understood, and practised surgery, as well as physic. Distinguished above his contemporaries, this prince of physicians continued to practise at Rome, the capital of the world, till he was obliged to submit to fate like other mortals. His death happened in 201. There are reckoned above 500 books of his upon physic only, and about half that number upon other sciences.

GALEN, Bernard Van, a native of Westphalia, known as a bishop and a general; he was engaged in a war with the Turks, attacked the United States, Sweden, &c., and died in 1678.

GALEOTTI, Nicholas, an Italian jesuit, author of the lives of the generals of his order; he died in 1748.

GALEOTTI, Marco, a native of Narni, tutor to the son of Matthias Corvinus, the king, and being invited to France by Lewis XI., on going to pay his respects to him, fell, and so injured himself as to cause his death.

GALERIUS, C. Valerius Maximianus, from a herdsman in Dacia, became emperor of Rome; he died in 311.

GALGACIUS, a Caledonian chief, famous for his noble resistance against the invasions of the Romans.

GALILEI, Galileo, a most eminent astronomer and mathematician, inventor of the telescope, &c., born at Florence, Feb. 19, 1564. Having observed some solar spots, in 1612, he printed that discovery the following year, at Rome; in which, and in some other pieces, he ventured to assert the truth of the Copernican system, and brought several new arguments to confirm it. This startled the jesuits, who thereupon procured a citation for him to appear before the holy office, at Rome, in 1615, where he was charged with heresy, for maintaining these two propositions: 1. That the sun is in the centre of the world, and immovable by a local motion; and, 2. That the earth is not the centre of the world, nor immovable, but actually moves by a diurnal motion. The first of these positions was declared to be absurd, false in philosophy, and formally heretical, being contrary to the express word of God; the second was also alleged to be philosophically false, and, in a theological view at least, erroneous in point of faith. The inquisition pronounced sentence against him and his books. They obliged him to abjure his errors in the most solemn manner, committed him to the prison of their office during pleasure, which was till 1634, and his "Dialogues of the System of the World" were burnt at Rome. Galilei died Jan. 8, 1642. He was the author of several noble and useful inventions and discoveries in astronomy, geometry and mechanics; the principal of which, besides those already mentioned, are, in the first of those sciences, the trepidation or vibration of the moon, as also the inequalities or mountains in its surface. In geometry, he invented the cycloid, or trochoid; and, in mechanics, first found the exact degree of celerity in the descent of bodies by the force of gravity: to which may be added the machine with which the Venetians render their Laguna fluid and navigable; the invention whereof was his.

GALISSONNIERE, Roland Michael Barria, marquis, a French admiral; after serving with distinction in the navy, was made governor of Canada. He died in 1756.

GALLAND, Antony, a learned antiquary, of France, and professor of Arabic in the royal college at Paris, born in 1646, died in 1715. He is chiefly known as the translator or author of "Arabian Nights' Entertainments."

GALLAND, Augustus, a French counsellor of state, wrote some memoirs, &c., and died in 1644.

GALLE, 'or GALLÆUS, Servatius, pastor of the church at Haerlem, died in 1709.

GALLET, N., a French spice merchant, known for some comic pieces, died in 1757.

GALLIENUS, a Roman emperor. He was assassinated in 268.

GALLIGAI, Eleonora, was the daughter of a joiner, and Mary de Medicis' nurse. That princess carried her with her into France, when she went thither, in 1606, to be married to Henry IV.; and Galligai, under the title of bed-chamber woman to that queen, governed her just as she pleased. She married Concino Concini, afterwards marshal D'Ancre; and their inordinate pride and ambition was at length punished by the assassination of the husband and the execution of the wife.

GALLITZIN, Basil, a noble Russian; though unsuccessful in his ambitious views, he was a man of great merit. He died in 1713.

GALLITZIN, Michael Michaelowitz, prince of, distinguished himself under Peter the Great against Charles XII. of Sweden; he died 1730.

GALLOUHE, Lewis, a painter, of the French school, died in 1761.

GALLOIS, John, a learned Frenchman, born at Paris, in 1632. He was a universal scholar; but is now memorable chiefly for having been the first who published the Journal des Savans, in conjunction with M. de Sallo, who had formed the design of that work. He died in 1707.

GALLOIS, Julian Jean César le, a French physiologist, who distinguished himself by his "Experiments on the Principle of Life, particularly on that of the Motion of the Heart, and the Seat of this Principle;" he died in 1818.

GALLONIO, Antonio, an ecclesiastic at Rome, died in 1605.

GALLOWAY, Joseph, an eminent lawyer, of Pennsylvania, was a member of the first congress, in 1774, but afterwards deserted the American cause. He died in England, in 1803.

GALLUCCI, Tarquinio, an Italian jesuit died in 1649.

GALLUCCI, Giovanni Paulo, an Italian astronomer, wrote "on the Instruments of Astronomy."

GALLUCCI, Angelo, an Italian jesuit, author of "44 Commentarii de Eello Belgico," died in 1674.

GALLUS, C. Vibius, a Roman emperor, was assassinated by his soldiers, in 253.

GALLUS, Flavius Claudius Constantius, brother of the emperor Julian, was put to death on suspicion of cruelty, in 354.

GALLUS, Cornelius, an ancient Roman poet, the particular favourite of Augustus Cæsar, who made him governor of Egypt after the death of Antony and Cleopatra; but he was guilty of such mal-administration in his government, that he was condemned to banishment, and to lose his estate. This disgrace grieved him so, that he put an end to his life, when he was about 43 years of age, in the year of Rome 728.

GALLY, Henry, an Englishman, promoted to several benefices, wrote some sermons, &c., died in 1709.

GALVANI, Lewis, an Italian philosopher, from whom Galvanism, which has made so much noise in the philosophical world, took its name. It is said, that a fit of illness, by which his wife was attacked, led him to the discovery of his theory respecting metallic irritation and animal electricity. The physician having prescribed for his wife soup made of boiled frogs, Galvani prepared them himself; and having accidentally touched a frog after he had skinned it, he observed it in an involuntary motion, which induced him to make some experiments that conducted him to the discovery. He was born at Bologna, in 1737, died 1798.

GALVANO, Antony, a native of the East Indies, governor of the Moluccas. Became poor by his liberality, and died in a hospital, at Lisbon, in 1557.

GAM, David, a brave Welchman, who fell in battle nobly defending Henry V. He was knighted by his sovereign just as he expired.

GAMA, Vasco de, a celebrated Portuguese navigator, who discovered the course to the East Indies by the Cape of Good Hope, was born at Sines, in Portugal, and died in 1525.

GAMACHES, Stephen Simon, author of Physical Astronomy, &c., died in 1756.

GAMACHES, Philip de, author of Commentaries on the Summa of Aquinas, died in 1625.

GAMALIEL, a Jewish doctor of the law, and a secret disciple of our Saviour.

GAMBARA, Lorenzo, an Italian poet, author of a Latin poem on Columbus; he died in 1586.

GAMBARA, Veronica, an Italian lady, who devoted herself to literature, and published some poems; she died in 1530.

GAMBOLIN, John, a truly primitive Christian, and a bishop among the Moravian brethren. He was not only a good scholar, but a man of great parts, and of singular mechanical ingenuity; he died universally respected, in 1771.

GANDY, James, a painter, who came to Ireland with the duke of Ormond, and died there in 1689.

GANGANELLI, John Vincent Antony, was born in 1705, the son of a physician; and, from being a petty monk of the order of St. Francis, ascended to the papacy, May 19, 1769, when he assumed the name of Clement XIV. Thus becoming sovereign pontiff in the most critical and tempestuous times, in his commerce with the world, he practised the humility of a Franciscan monk; but, on occasion of splendour, he sustained the papal grandeur with appropriate magnificence. The most striking incident of his life was his being the instrument, under Providence, of annihilating the mighty order of the jesuits. To the resentment of that order it is supposed he at last fell a sacrifice, his robust constitution and regularity of life seeming to promise him a much longer period than 69 years; for he died in 1774, poisoned, as is supposed, in the sacrament; he himself declaring his suspicions before he died, and all the after symptoms strongly confirming the same.

GANO, John, collected the first baptist society in New-York, and was its minister; he distinguished himself in the American war, and died in 1804.

GANSEVOORT, Peter, a distinguished officer of the American army during the revolution. He rendered his country essential service by defending fort Stanwix, when besieged by St. Leger: and afterwards, by preventing the co-operation of that officer with Burgoyne, he contributed essentially to the surrender of the latter. He died in 1812.

GARAMONT, Claude, a French engraver and letter fonder, was a native of Paris, and began to distinguish himself about 1510. He brought his types to so great a degree of perfection, that he can neither be denied the glory of having surpassed whatever had been done in this way before, nor that of not being excelled by any of his successors in this useful mechanic art. Garamont died in 1561; and all his fine types came into the hands of Fournier the Elder, an eminent letter fonder at Paris.

GARASSE, Francis, a jesuitical writer, and author of the enmity between the jesuits and the jansenists, in the church of Rome, was born at Angoulême, in 1585, and died in 1631.

GARBHEN, Lorenzo, a painter, of Bologna, and pupil of Ludovici Caracci, died in 1654.

GARBO, Raphael del, a historical painter, of Florence, died in 1534.

GARCIAS II., king of Navarre after Sancho II., died in 1000.

GARCILASSO, Garcias Lasso de la Vega, a celebrated Spanish poet, born at Toledo, in 1500, died 1536, by a stone thrown by a countryman from a turret, falling upon his head.

GARDEN, Alexander, a distinguished episcopal clergyman, of Charleston, South-Carolina. He came from Scotland to Charleston, in 1720, and resided there until his death, in 1756.

GARDEN, Alexander, M. D., a scientific physician, of South-Carolina, who introduced into medical use the Virginian snake root; he died about 1771.

GARDIE, Pontus de la, a French adventurer, successively in the employment of marshal Briaac, the Danes, and Swedes; he died in 1585.

GARDIN DUMESNIL, N., professor of rhetoric at Paris, and an eminent scholar; he wrote on Latin synonyms, and died in 1802.

GARDINER, Stephen, bishop of Winchester, and chancellor of England, was born at Bury St. Edmund's, in Suffolk, 1483. His character as a minister is to be drawn from the general histories: he had a large portion of laughtiness, boundless ambition, and deep dissimulation; for he looked on religion as an engine of state, and made use of it as such. He died in 1555.

GARDINER, James, a colonel in the army of George II., born in Scotland, 1688, was equally admirable for the virtues of piety and personal courage, and died bravely fighting against the rebels at Preston-pans, near Edinburgh, in 1745.

GARNGEOT, Rene, Jacques, Croissant de, a French surgeon of great reputation; he wrote several valuable works, and died in 1759.

GARESSOLES, Anthony, a native of Montanban, who wrote several theological works, died in 1650.

GARET, John, a Benedictine of St. Maur, born at Havre de Grace, died in 1694.

GARLANDE, Jean de, a grammarian, obtained some celebrity by his poem on the "Contentment of the World," &c.; he was living in 1801.

GARNET, Henry, a person memorable in English history, for having been privy to, and aiding in, the celebrated conspiracy called "The Gunpowder Plot," was executed at the west end of St. Paul's, May 3, 1606.

GARNETT, Dr. Thomas, an English physician and natural philosopher, was born in 1766. After having studied medicine and chymistry, and graduated at Edinburgh, he delivered several courses of lectures on chymistry and experimental philosophy, at Manchester, Liverpool, &c. He was soon after elected professor of philosophy, in Anderson's institution at Glasgow; and his leisure hours in Scotland were employed in collecting materials for his "Tour through the Highlands, and part of the Western Isles." Dr. Garnett afterwards accepted an invitation from the new royal institution, in London; where, for one season, he was professor of natural philosophy and chymistry, and delivered the whole of the lectures. On retiring from this situation, as being too laborious for the state of his health, he commenced a course of lectures at his house, on Zoonomia, or the Laws of Animal Life, arranged according to the Brunonian theory. From a patient, whom he attended in a fever, he caught the infection, and died in 1802.

GARNIER, Robert, a French tragic poet, born in 1534, died 1590.

GARNIER, John, a jesuit, professor of rhetoric and philosophy, died in 1691.

GARNIER, Julian, a Benedictine monk, died in 1723.

GAROSALO, Bonvenuto, an Italian painter, born at Ferrara, died in 1695.

GARRARD, Mark, an eminent painter, born at Bruges, in Flanders, in 1551. He was principal painter to queen Elizabeth, and died in 1635.

GARRARD, James, was an officer of the revolutionary army, and one of the first settlers of Kentucky, of which state he was afterwards governor; he died in 1822.

GARRICK, David, an excellent English actor, born at Hereford, and baptized there, Feb. 23, 1716. Having performed a noviciate at Ipswich, he made his appearance at Goodman's Fields; and, Oct. 1741, acted Richard III. for the first time. His acting was attended with the loudest acclamations of applause; and his fame was so quickly propagated through the town, that the more established theatres of Drury Lane and Covent Garden were deserted. These patentees, alarmed at the great deficiency in the receipts of their houses, and at the crowds which constantly filled the theatre of Goodman's Fields, united their efforts to destroy the new-raised seat of theatrical empire; in consequence of which, Garrick entered into an agreement with Fleetwood, patentee of Drury Lane, for 500*l.* a year. The fame of our English Roscius was now so extended, that an invitation from Ireland, upon very profitable conditions, was sent him to act in Dublin during the months of June, July, and August, 1742; which invitation he accepted. His success there exceeded all imagination; he was caressed by all ranks as a prodigy of theatrical accomplishments; and the play-house was so crowded during this hot season, that a very mortal fever was produced, which was called Garrick's fever. He returned to London before the winter, and now attended closely to his theatrical profession, in which he was irrevocably fixed. April, 1747, he became joint patentee of Drury Lane theatre with Mr. Lacy; and in July, 1749, married Mademoiselle Violetti. In 1763, he undertook a journey into Italy for the benefit of his health; and during his travels, gave frequent proofs of his theatrical talents; for he could, without the least preparation, transform himself into any character, tragic or comic, and seize instantaneously upon any passion of the human mind. After he had been abroad about a year and a half, he turned his thoughts homewards, and arrived in London April, 1765. In 1769 he projected and conducted the memorable Jubilee at Stratford, in honour of Shakspeare, so much admired by some, and so much ridiculed by others. On the death of Mr. Lacy in 1773, the whole management of the theatre devolved on him; but, being advanced in years, and much afflicted with chronic disorders, he finally left it in June, 1776, and disposed of his moiety of the patent to Messieurs Sheridan, Linley, and Ford, for 35,000*l.* He died Jan. 20, 1779. Notwithstanding his constant employ as both actor and manager, he was perpetually producing various little things in the dramatic way; some of which are originals; others translations or alterations from other authors, adapted to the taste of the present times.

GARRIEL, Peter, he wrote an account of Montpellier cathedral, in 1631.

GARSAULT, Francis Alexander, a learned Frenchman; he wrote the anatomy of the horse, and died at Paris, in 1778.

GARTII, Sir Samuel, an excellent poet and physician, and author of a most admirable satire, called "The Dispensary," was born in Yorkshire. After having eminently distinguished himself, as well by his various poetical productions as by his professional merit, he died Jan. 18, 1718-19.

GARTHSHORE, Maxwell, a physician and an accoucheur, who practised in London, with great reputation, near fifty years, was a Fellow of the Royal Society; born in 1732, in Scotland, died in London, in 1812. Some papers of his will be found in "The Philosophical Transactions."

GARZI, Lewis, a painter, considered the successful rival of Carlo Marat, died in 1721.

GASCOIGNE, Sir William, chief justice of the King's Bench in the reign of Henry IV., was born in 1350. How much he distinguished himself in his high office appears from the several abstracts of his opinions, arguments, distinctions, and decisions which occur in our old books of law reports; but he is said to have distinguished himself above his brethren by a most memorable transaction in the latter end of the king's reign. A servant of the prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V., being arraigned for felony at the bar of the King's Bench, the news soon reached his master's ears, who, hastening to the court, ordered him to be unfettered, and offered to rescue him; in which, being opposed by the judge, who commanded him to leave the prisoner and depart, he rushed furiously up to the bench, and, as it is generally affirmed, struck the chief justice then sitting in the execution of his office. Hereupon Sir William, after some expostulation upon the outrage, indignity, and unwarrantable interruption of the proceedings in that place, directly committed him to the king's bench prison, there to wait his father's pleasure. The prince submitted to his punishment with a calmness no less sudden and surprising than the offence had been which drew it upon him; and the king, being informed of the whole affair, was so far from being displeased with the justice, that he returned thanks to God, "That he had given him both a judge who knew how to administer, and a son who could obey justice." The prince also, who had for some time led a dissolute life, was entirely reformed thereby, and afterwards became with the title of Henry V., that renowned king who conquered France. Sir William died in 1413.

GASCOIGNE, George, a celebrated poet in the early part of the reign of queen Elizabeth, was bred to the law, but became a soldier, and served with credit in the wars of the Low Countries. He was author of four dramatic pieces, and several poems; the most remarkable of which was a satire called "The Steel Glass;" he died in 1577. His works were most collected in 1587.

GASPARINI, a celebrated grammarian, born in 1370, died in 1431. He is deservedly recorded as one of the first restorers of good Latin in Italy.

GASSENDI, Peter, a very eminent French philosophical, moral, and mathematical writer, born in 1592, died at Paris, in 1655.

GASSION, John de, a native of Pau, marshal of France, eminently distinguished for his valour in war, fell at the siege of Lens, in 1647.

GAST, John, a native of Dublin, he published some works of merit, for which the university of Dublin honoured him with a degree of D. D. without the usual expenses; he died in 1788.

GASTALDI, John Baptiste, a native of Seston, an eminent physician, died in 1747.

GASTAUD, Francis, an ecclesiastic of Aix, he insulted the bishop of Marseilles in his writings, and was denied the honours of sepulture; he died in 1732.

GASTON of France, John Baptist, duke of Orleans, was son of Henry IV., and brother of Lewis XIII.; he died in 1660.

GASTON DE FOIX, duke of Nemours, early distinguished himself in the army in Italy; he fell in battle in 1512.

GASTRELL, Francis, bishop of Chester, and a controversial writer, born in 1662, died in 1725.

GATAKER, Thomas, an English divine, and critical and theological writer, born in London, in 1574, died in 1631.

GATAKER, Charles, son of the preceding, and a writer on controversial divinity, born in 1614, died in 1680.

GATES, Sir Thomas, one of the first governors of the colony of Virginia, about 1609, and again, on returning from England, in 1611; he died in the East-Indies.

GATES, Horatio, a major general, and a distinguished officer of the American army during the revolution. He was a major in the British service, at the defeat of general Braddock; at the declaration of independence, he was made adjutant general, afterwards commander of the northern army, to which general Burgoyne surrendered in 1777; in 1780, he was appointed commander of the southern army; after the war he returned to his farm, from which he removed to New-York, where he died in 1806.

GATIMOSIN, the last of the Mexican kings. He was cruelly tortured in a fiery ordeal by Cortez, and three years after was hanged in his capital in 1526.

GAUBIL, Anthony, a French missionary in China, where he resided 30 years; he died in 1759.

GAUBIUS, Jerome David, a native of Heidelberg, professor of medicine, and lecturer on botany and chymistry, died in 1780.

GAUD, Henry, a painter and engraver, of Utrecht, died in 1639.

GAUDEN, John, bishop of Worcester born in 1605, celebrated for his zeal in the cause of the unfortunate king Charles, and reputed (though falsely) the author of "Eikon Basilike," died in 1662.

GAUDENTIO, a painter, of Milan, born about 1480.

GAUDENTIUS, St., a bishop of Brescia, he wrote sermons, letters, &c., and died in 427.

GAUDENZIO, Paganin, a native of Valte-line, Greek professor, died in 1648.

GAULI, Giovanni Baptista, a painter, of Genoa, died at Rome, in 1760.

GAULMIN, Gilbert, a French writer of some celebrity, died in 1665.

CAUPP, John, a native of Lindau, educated at Jena, was an able mathematician; he died in 1738.

GAURICO, Luca, an Italian professor of astronomy, at Ferrara, died in 1558.

GAUSSEM, Jane Catharine, a celebrated actress, retired from the theatre from motives of religion; she died at Paris, in 1767.

GAUSHLER, Jean Baptiste, a French abbe, he wrote a "Tract against Pope's Essay on Mao," and died of a fall in 1755.

GAVANTS, Bartholomew, a Barnabite monk, author of some works; died at Milan, in 1658.

GAVESTON, Peter, a favourite of Edward II., was proud, overbearing, and cruel; he was beheaded in 1332.

GAY, John, an English poet, born in 1688. His amiable qualities recommended him to the acquaintance of Swift and Pope, who were exceedingly struck with the open sincerity, the undisguised simplicity of his manners, and the easiness of his temper. In 1712 he produced his celebrated poem, called "Trivia, or, the Art of walking the Streets;" and the following year, at the instance of Pope, formed the plan of his "Pastorals." The "Shepherd's Week" came out in 1714, with a dedication to Lord Bolingbroke. Gay was soon after introduced at court, and for several years experienced the usual vicissitudes of favour and of mortification incident to such a life. His opinions of a court friendship are pretty plainly intimated in his "Beggars Opera," which, being brought upon the stage in 1727, was received with greater applause than had ever been known on any occasion, being acted in London 63 days without interruption, and renewed the next season with amazing success. He wrote several other plays of no great celebrity; but what will always distinguish him as a poet are his "Fables," which will be read and admired so long as any taste for that kind of writing shall exist. He died in 1732, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

GAY, Ebenezer, D. D., minister of Hingham, Mass.: he published several sermons, and died in 1737.

GAYOT DE PITAVALL, Francis, a French author, born at Lyons, was unfortunate in all his pursuits; he died in 1743.

GAZA, Theodore, a very eminent grammarian, and translator of Greek writings, born at Thessalonica, in Greece, in 1398, died in 1478.

GAZALI, or ABON HAMED MOHAMMED ZEIN EDDIN AL THOUSI, a mussulman doctor, died at Khorassan, in 1112.

GAZET, William, a native of Arras, and an ecclesiastic; he wrote a Chronological History, and died in 1612.

GAZOLA, Joseph, a physician, of Verona, died in 1715.

GAZON DOURXIGNE, S. M. M., a native of Quimper, a famous critic, died in 1784.

GAZZOLI, Benozzo, an Italian painter, died in 1478.

GEBELIN, Anthony Court de, celebrated as author of "Le Monde Primitif compare a Monde Moderne," born in 1727, died in 1784. When the plan of his great work, "Le Monde Primitif," made its appearance, M. d'Alembert was so struck with it, that he asked with enthusiasm, "si c'etoit une societe de 40 hommes qui estoit charges de l'executer?" The French academy were so well satisfied with the undertaking, that they twice decreed to him the prize of 1200 livres, which they give annually to the author of the most valuable work that has appeared in the course of the year.

GEBER, John an Arabian physician of the 9th century. His works contain much knowledge.

GED, William, an ingenious artist, memorable for a new invention in the art of printing. From any types of Greek or Roman, or any other character, he formed a plate for every page or sheet of a book from which he printed, instead of using a type for every letter, as is done in the common way. This scheme has recently, through the ingenuity and perseverance of Earl Stanhope, and Mr. Andrew Wilson, arrived at a high degree of practical perfection. On the 29th May 1810, Mr. Wilson was honoured with the gold medal, by the Society of Arts, for his exertions in Stereotype printing. Mr. Ged died in 1749.

In 1774, Mr. Gibbon was elected to a seat in parliament, which he vacated in 1780; in the course of which period, however, he was some time a lord of trade. His celebrated "History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," will probably last as long as the language in which it is written. It abounds in proofs of unexampled learning, of a mind penetrating and sagacious, and of talents for ridicule agreeable and exquisite. Upon the subject of Christianity, however, he has indulged much latitude, which has justly raised him a great number of opponents. The greater part of this immortal history was written at Lausanne, in Switzerland. Mr. Gibbon died in 1794.

GIBBONS, Grinling, a famous sculptor employed by Charles II., died in 1721.

Charles I. was pleased to honour their marriage with his presence, and to give the bride. Waller wrote a poem on this occasion, "Of the Marriage of the Dwarfs," which begins thus:

"Design or chance make others wive;
But nature did this match contrive;
Eye might as well have Adam fled,
As she denied her little bed
To him, for whom Heav'n seem'd to frame
And measure out this only dame," &c.

They appear to have been of an equal stature, each of them measuring three feet ten inches. They had, however, nine children; five of which attained to maturity, and were well proportioned to the usual standard of mankind. He died in 1689, aged 75, and his wife died in 1709, at the age of 89.

GILPIN, William, an English divine, biographer, and delineator of nature's picturesque beauties, was born in 1724, died 1801. His principal works are, "An Exposition of the New Testament;" "An Essay on Prints;" and numerous Essays and Observations on Picturesque Scenery, &c., in different parts of England. To these we should add, his "Sermons to a Country Congregation."

GILPIN, Sawrey, R. A., a celebrated painter, particularly of horses and wild animals, was born in 1733, and was brother of the preceding.

He went to London at the age of 14, and was articulated to Mr. Scott, a ship-painter, who lived in Covent-Garden, where Mr. Gilpin caught his first relish for animal painting, frequently amusing himself in sketching the carts and horses, market-groups, &c. He was afterwards patronised by William, duke of Cumberland, at Windsor; and from his royal highness' stud he acquired that knowledge of the horse which he has so ably exhibited in his works. The historical compositions he has left, show that he might have claimed the palm in the first department of art. The Triumph of Camillus, Diomedes' Horses, his poetical subjects, and drawings of animals, possess a taste peculiar to himself. His chef d'œuvre is in the possession of S. Whitebread, esq. M. P. It consists of a group of tigers, and is a noble and spirited composition. He excelled much in giving an expression of terrible, but majestic fierceness, to that noblest of all animals, the lion. GODFREY, Thomas, the inventor of Hadley's quadrant, died in Philadelphia, in 1749.

GODFREY, Thomas, son of the preceding, a poet; died at Wilmington, in 1763.

GODIVA, the name of a beautiful lady, wife of Leofric earl of Mercia, in the reign of Edward the Confessor. Having an extraordinary affection for Coventry, she solicited her husband to release the inhabitants of that city from a grievous tax. To this he evasively consented, on condition that she would ride naked through the streets of Coventry; which she performed, covering her body with her hair, and commanding all persons to keep within doors and from the windows on pain of death. The pictures of Leofric and Godiva are in the window of Trinity Church; and every year on the Friday after Trinity Sunday, there is a procession through the town, with a figure representing a naked woman on horseback.

GODOLPHIN, John, an eminent civilian, of England, born in 1617, died in 1678. He published several books which were held in much esteem.

GODWIN, Earl, brother to Edward the Confessor, invaded England, in 1052. Being tried for the murder of prince Alfred his brother, he was pardoned, but died at the king's table, while protesting his innocence of the said murder; supposed by the historian of those times to have been choked with a piece of bread, as a judgment from heaven, having wished it might stick in his throat if he were guilty of the murder, which he certainly was.

GODWIN, Thomas, an English prelate, who embraced the tenets of the protestants, but on the accession of Mary, was persecuted; he was afterwards favoured by Elizabeth, who at length became displeas'd with him, which hastened his death in 1530.

GODWIN, Dr. Francis, an excellent mathematician, philosopher, and historian, born in 1561. In 1583, he wrote an entertaining piece, which came out about five years after his death, under the title of "The Man in the Moon; or a Discourse of a Voyage thither, by Domingo Gonsales," in 1638. But his principal work is, "A Catalogue of the Bishops of England, since the first planting of the Christian Religion in this Island; together with a brief History of their Lives and memorable Actions, so near as can be gathered of Antiquity;" he died in 1633.

GODWIN, Dr. Thomas, a learned English writer, and excellent schoolmaster, born in 1537, died in 1642. His chief work is, "Romanæ Historiæ Anthologia," an English Exposition of the Roman Antiquities, &c.

GODWIN, Mary Wollstonecraft, a lady of very superior literary accomplishments, who distinguished herself by many able productions, but chiefly by "A Vindication of the Rights of Women, with Strictures on Moral and Political Subjects." She also wrote well on female education and conduct, and her practical skill in education was even superior to her speculations on the subject. For soundness of understanding, and sensibility of heart, she was, perhaps, never excelled; but there were certain peculiarities of system both in her writings and her conduct, against which every lover of religion or morals must protest. She was born in 1768, and died in 1797.

GOERCE, William, an eminent scholar, of Middlebury, author of Jewish Antiquities, &c., died in 1715.

GOERING, Jacob, for many years minister of the German Lutheran church in New-York, died in 1807.

GOLDSMITH, Francis, a poet and translator, who lived in the reign of Charles I.

GOLDSMITH, Oliver, an eminent English historic, dramatic, and miscellaneous writer, was born at Elphin, in Ireland, Nov. 29, 1729. Quitting home to taste of foreign climes, he encountered many difficulties; and having experienced all the vicissitudes to which a pennyless wanderer must necessarily be subject, arrived in England in 1758. Shortly after, he became an assistant at an academy at Peckham; then a writer in "The Monthly Review;" and afterwards in "The Public Ledger," in which his "Citizen of the World" originally appeared, under the title of "Chinese Letters." Fortune seemed now to take some notice of a man she had long neglected. The simplicity of his character, the integrity of his heart, and the merit of his productions, made his company acceptable to the better sort. He took handsome chambers in the temple, and lived in a genteel style. His "Traveller," his "Vicar of Wakefield," his "Good-natured Man, a Comedy," raised him up, and ensured him success to any thing that should follow; as "The Deserted Village," "She Stoops to Conquer," &c. Notwithstanding the success of his works, by which he cleared vast sums, his circumstances were by no means prosperous; and this has been imputed to two causes: partly to the liberality of his disposition; and partly to an unfortunate habit of gaming, the arts of which he very little understood. He died April 4, 1774. Goldsmith, like Smollet, Guthrie, and others, who subsisted by their pens, as supposed sometimes to have sold his name to works in which he had little or no concern.

GOLIUS, James, a learned orientalist, born at the Hague; travelled into several countries; he published several learned works, and died in 1667.

GOLIUS, Peter, brother of the preceding, an excellent orientalist, assisted in the edition of the great Arabic Bible, printed at Rome, in 1671; he died in 1673.

GOLTZIUS, Henry, a famous Dutch painter and engraver, born in 1553, died 1617.

GONDEBAUD, third king of Burgundy, became tributary to Clovis, king of the Franks; he died in 516.

GONDRIN, Lewis Antony, a favourite of Louis XIV., who gratified that monarch by employing 1200 men to destroy a wood which was offensive to him.

GONDY, John Francis Paul, afterwards Cardinal de Retz, born 1613, died 1679. This extraordinary man has drawn his own character in his "Memoirs," which are written with such an air of grandeur, impetuosity of genius, and inequality, as give us a very strong representation of his conduct. He was a man who, from the greatest degree of debauchery, and still languishing under its consequences, preached to the people, and made himself adored by them. Voltaire says, that "in his youth he lived like Cataline, and like Attieus in his old age." Of his Memoirs, "several parts," says the same Voltaire, "are worthy of Sallust, but the whole is not equal." They are supposed, however, to be written with impartiality; the author having every where spoken with the same freedom of his own infirmities and vices, as any other writer could have done.

GONET, John Baptist, a Dominican friar, professor at Bourdeaux, and author of a system of theology; he died in 1681.

GONGORA, Lewis de, a Spanish poet, born in 1652, died in 1627. His works are all posthumous, and consist of sonnets, elegies, a comedy, a tragedy, &c. The Spaniards have a very high opinion of this poet, even so as to entitle him prince of the poets of their own nation.

GONNELLI, John, a Tuscan sculptor and painter, who lost his sight at the age of 20; but modelled in clay; and by his exquisite sensation of feeling, wrought his statues to great perfection, and drew portraits with striking resemblance. He died at Rome in 1673.

GONSALVA, or GONSALVO, Fernandez, duke of Terra Nuova, and called The Great Captain, a renowned Spanish general under Ferdinand and Isabella, was born at Cordova in 1443, and died in 1515.

GONTHER, a Latin poet, author of a history of Constantinople, in 1203.

GONTHER, Leonard and John, Frenchmen and brothers, eminent in the art of painting or staining glass: the time of their birth and death is uncertain.

GONZAGA, Lucretia, an illustrious lady of the 16th century, as remarkable for wit, learning, and style, as for high birth. She wrote such beautiful letters, that the utmost care was taken to preserve them; and a collection of them was printed at Venice, in 1552. All that came from her pen was so much esteemed, that a collection was made even of the notes that she wrote to her servants, several of which are to be met with in the edition of her letters.

GONZAGA, Scipio, a noble Italian, who wrote some poems, and left manuscript memoirs of himself: he died in 1593.

GONZAGA, Vespasian, duke of Sabbioneta, a city which he founded; he died in 1591, much respected.

GONZALEZ, Thyrsus, a Spaniard, general of the jesuits, who died at Rome, in 1705.

GOOCH, Sir William, a distinguished officer in the military service of Great-Britain, commander of the forces raised for the Spanish war, and afterwards a major-general, and governor of the colony of Virginia, after Drysdale, in 1727.

GOODALL, Walter, a Scotchman, known as a philologist, and author of a vindication of Mary: he died in 1758.

GOODRICH, Elizur, D. D., minister of Durham, Conn.; was distinguished for his literary and scientific acquirements: he was well versed in the languages, and familiar with mathematical and philosophical investigation: he published several sermons, and died in 1797.

GOODRICH, Chauncey, son of the preceding, was a eminent lawyer and statesman, of Hartford, Conn. He was a representative, and afterwards a senator in congress, a counsellor and lieutenant-governor of Connecticut, and mayor of the city of Hartford. For depth and solidity of judgment, great professional attainments, strict integrity, benevolence and piety, he had few equals; and his death, which happened in 1815, was lamented as a public calamity.

GOODWIN, Thomas, a puritanical divine, one of the members of the assembly of divines at Westminster, and author of theological works; he died in 1679.

GOODWIN, John, a most acute and subtle controversialist of the 17th century. He wrote a vindication of the death of Charles I., which at the Restoration was burnt by the common hangman. He was excepted out of the act of indemnity, and died soon after. His works are numerous, but mostly in support of Arminian doctrines.

HOOKIN, Daniel, author of the historical collections of the Indians in New-England, and major-general of Massachusetts: died in 1687.

HOOKIN, Nathaniel, minister of Hampton, N. H.; much respected for his faithfulness; he died in 1734.

GOOL, John, Van, a Dutch painter, born at the Hague, in 1685.

GORDIAN I., emperor of Rome, invested with the purple in Africa, much against his will, in 237, in the reign of Maximinus, and soon after killed by a general of that monarch.

GORDON, Robert, of Straloch, author of "Theatrum Scotiae," an excellent work, containing a description of the whole country of Scotland, with maps of every county. He died about the middle of the 17th century.

GORDON, Thomas, a native of Scotland, greatly distinguished by his writings on political and religious subjects. He was concerned with Mr. Trenchard in the composition of "Cato's Letters," and "The Independent Whig;" and published English translations of Sallust and Tacitus, with additional discourses to each author. He died in 1750.

GORDON, James, a jesuit, who taught philosophy and languages at Paris and Bourdeaux, died in 1620. Another of that name, was author of a commentary on the Bible.

GORDON, Alexander, a learned Scotchman, an excellent draftsman and antiquary, and secretary to the Antiquarian Society, in 1740. He published a Journey through most parts of the counties of Scotland, with 66 copper-plates; "The Lives of Pope Alexander VI. and his son Cesar Borja;" "A Complete History of the Ancient Amphitheatres," &c. &c.

GORDON, Hon. George, commonly called Lord George Gordon, a man whose restless spirit has furnished too many materials for future history, to pass unmentioned in this collection. He was son of Cosmo-George, duke of Gordon, and born in 1750. At an early period of life he entered into the royal navy, which he quitted during the American war, in consequence of an altercation with the earl of Sandwich, relative to promotion. He afterwards represented the borough of Ludgershall in parliament during several sessions; and, as he unadvisedly with great freedom, and often with great wit, on the proceedings of both sides of the House, it was usual at that period to say, that "there were three parties in parliament, the ministry, the opposition, and Lord George Gordon;" at length, however, taking a very violent part in the House against a "Bill for the Relief of Papists from certain Penalties and Disabilities," he headed a popular association to oppose the measure; which transaction gave rise to, though it certainly did not authorize, the dreadful riots by which the kingdom, and particularly the metropolis, was for some days devastated in 1780. For this Lord George was tried on a charge of high treason; but acquitted, on the ground that his intentions in assembling the people were not malicious and traitorous. May 4, 1786, he was excommunicated by the archbishop of Canterbury, for contempt, in not appearing in court as witness in a cause. Jan. 28, 1788, having received sentence on two convictions, for libelling the French ambassador and queen, and the criminal justice of Great Britain, he retired to Holland, but was sent back under a guard, and committed to Newgate. In July, 1789, he presented a petition to the national assembly of France, for its interference in his behalf; but Lord Grenville informed the French ambassador that the application in his favour could not be admitted, and the ambassador acquainted him with it. He died in Newgate, in 1793; and his last moments were embittered by the knowledge that he could not be buried among the Jews, whose religion he had embraced, during his imprisonment, and to which he was warmly attached.

GORDON, Andrew, a native of Aberdeen, professor and author; he died in 1751.

GORDON, Sir Adam, an English divine, rector of Hineckworth, and prebendary at Bristol, author of sermons and other works, died in 1817.

GORDON, Patrick, succeeded Sir William Keith, as governor of Pennsylvania, in 1726. His administration was prudent, judicious, and advantageous to the colonists; he died in 1736.

GORDON, William, D. D. minister of Roxbury, Mass., and author of a history of the Revolution of the United States, &c.; he died in 1807.

GORE, Thomas, a native of Alderton, and author of some Latin poems, died in 1684.

GORELLI, an Italian poet, who wrote, after the manner of Dante, a history of his country from 1010 to 1384.

- GOSSON, Stephen, a divine and poet, born in Kent, in 1554, educated at Christ Church, Oxford, took orders, and obtained the living of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, where he died, in 1623. He wrote three plays; and afterwards, in 1579, published an invective against poets, players, &c. called "The Schoole of Abuse."
- GOTH, Stephen, archbishop of Upsal, who, in attempting to restore the Catholic religion in Sweden, nearly kindled a civil war, in the 16th century.
- GOTHOFRED, the name of a very learned family, originally of France. Denis Gothofred, a celebrated lawyer, born in 1549, died in 1622. He is now best known by an edition of the "Corpus Juris Civilis." Theodosius, the eldest son of Denis, born in 1580, became a counsellor of state, and died in 1649. James, another son of Denis, born in 1587, was preferred to the first offices in the republic of Geneva, and died there in 1652. Denis, the son of Theodosius, born in 1615, died in 1681. He inherited his father's taste for French history, and made great additions to what his father had done. Of this kind are the histories of Charles VI., Charles VII., and Charles VIII., magnificently printed at the Louvre. John, son of the foregoing, had also, like his father, a passion for the history and antiquities of France. He gave an edition of "Philip de Commines," and other works, and died in 1732.
- GOTTESCHALC, vid. Godeschalch.
- GOTTI, Vincent Lewis, an Italian, made cardinal by Benedict XIII.; he died in 1742.

GRAFTON, Richard, an English printer, in the 16th century. He compiled the greater part of "Hall's Chronicle;" and, in 1562, published "An Abridgment of the Chronicles of England." His large Chronicle appeared in 1569. Grafton was a great promoter of the reformation, by printing Bibles. He was living in 1572.

GRAFTON, Augustus Henry Fitzroy, duke of, was educated at Cambridge university, of which he was afterwards chancellor, and succeeded to the family honours, in 1757. He was made secretary of state, and afterwards first lord of the treasury, which office he held till 1770. From 1771 until 1775, he was lord privy seal, and, after that time, was an opponent of the ministry till his death, in 1811. The celebrated letters of Junius, were many of them addressed to him, with a severity which must have been dictated by private hatred.

GRAHAM, George, clock and watch maker, was born at Gratick, a village in the north of Cumberland, in 1675; and, in 1688, went to London. He was not put apprentice to Tompion, as is generally said; but, after he had been sometime with another master, Tompion received him into his family purely for his merit, and treated him with a kind of parental affection till his death. That Graham was, without competition, the most eminent of his profession, is but a small part of his character; he was the best mechanic of his time, and had a complete knowledge of practical astronomy; so that he not only gave to various movements for the mensuration of time, a degree of perfection which had never before been attained, but invented several astronomical instruments, by which considerable advances have been made in that science; he made great improvements in those which had before been in use; and, by a wonderful manual dexterity, constructed them with greater precision and accuracy than any other person in the world. He was many years a member of the royal society, to which he communicated several ingenious and important discoveries, and died in 1751.

GRAHAM, Catherine Macauley, a celebrated English historian. She began her literary career with the "History of England, from James I. to the Brunswick line." Her other works were a "History of England from the Revolution to the present time, in a series of Letters to a Friend;" "A Treatise on the Immutability of Moral Truth;" "An Address to the People of England, Scotland, and Ireland, on the present important Crisis of Affairs;" "Letters on Education," &c. She died in 1791.

GRANDI, Francis Lewis, a native of Cremona, professor of philosophy at Florence, &c., he wrote various mathematical works, and died in 1742.

GRANDIER, Urban, curate and canon of Loudon, in France, famous as a martyr to the superstitious belief of magic; being burnt alive on a charge of having bewitched several Ursuline nuns of Loudon. He was born at Bouvere, near Sabie, and suffered in 1634.

GRANDIN, Martin, a doctor of the Sorbonne, and author of a system of theology, died in 1691.

GRANDIUS, Guido, a mathematician, of Cremona, translated Euclid into Italian, and died in 1742.

GRANDUET, Charles, a French actor, who played with success.

GRANET, Francis, a French writer, highly spoken of by Abbe de Fontaine; he died in 1741.

GRANGE, Joseph de Chancel, a French writer, who was imprisoned and exiled for writing against Philip, duke of Orleans; he died in 1758.

GRANGE, Nicolas, an able writer, who translated Lucretius, Seneca, &c.; he died in 1775.

GRANGER, James, a learned and ingenious English divine, author of a very valuable work in 4 vols., 4to, under the title of "A Biographical History of England." When vicar of Ship-lake, in Oxfordshire, he was seized with a sudden fit while administering the sacrament at the communion-table, by the bursting of a vessel in his brain, in 1776, and died the next morning. This death was similar to that of the cardinal de Berulle.

GRANGER, Gideon, a native of Connecticut; he graduated at Yale college in 1787, and was soon after admitted to the bar of his native state, where he practised law with considerable reputation. He was appointed postmaster-general of the United States, in 1801, and retained the office until 1814, after which he removed to New-York, and was chosen a member of the senate of that state; he died in 1823.

GRANT, Francis, lord Cullen, an eminent lawyer and judge, of Scotland, died in 1725, universally respected.

GRANT, Patrick, a Scotch judge, who wrote against the rebellion; he died in 1762.

GRANVILLE, George, viscount Lansdowne, an eminent English poet, born in Devonshire in 1667, died in 1735. Having vainly endeavoured to get employment in arms, for the defence of James II., to whose cause he was warmly attached, he passed the course of king William's reign in private life, enjoying the company of his muse, which he employed in celebrating the reigning beauties of that age, as Waller, whom he strove to imitate, had done those of the preceding. We have also several dramatic pieces of his, which were all well received.

GRAPALDUS, Francis Marius, a native of Parma, so distinguished as an ambassador to the pope, that Julius II., crowned him with his own hand.

GRAS, Anthony le, an ecclesiastic of Paris who translated C. Nepos; he died in 1761.

GRAS, James le, an advocate of Rouen, who translated Hesiod into French verse, in the 17th century.

GRASWINCKEL, Theodore, a native of Delft, eminent as a lawyer, and a man of letters; he vindicated the Venetians against the duke of Savoy, and died in 1666.

GRATAROLUS, William, a learned physician, of Basil. wrote many books, and died in 1562.

GRATIAN, one of the most virtuous of the Roman emperors, son of Valentinian, born in 359, was assassinated by rebels in 383.

GRATIAN, a monk of Tuscany, in the 12th century; he was employed 24 years in reconciling the contradictory canons one to another.

GRATIANI, Jerome, an Italian of the 17th century; he wrote, Conquest of Grenada, &c.

GRATIUS, Faliscus, an eminent Latin poet, supposed to have been cotemporary with Ovid. We have the fragment of a poem of his on hunting, called "Cynegeticon."

GRATIUS, Ortuius, a learned German, who wrote several works; he died in 1542.

GRATTAN, Right Hon. Henry, a statesman, and an orator, born in Dublin, about 1750. He was bred to the bar, but relinquished that profession for the senate. He was elected into the Irish parliament in 1775, and by his powerful eloquence obtained for his country a participation in the commerce of Britain: for which he was rewarded with a vote of 50,000*l.* He was the active and vigilant leader of the opposition, till the Union, which measure he resisted with all his power. In the British parliament he chiefly exerted his talents in advocating the Catholic claims, to which cause he fell a martyr, by leaving Ireland in an exhausted state of health, to carry to England the petition with which he had been intrusted. He died soon after his arrival, May 14, 1820, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

GRAUNT, John, a well known author of "Observations on the Bills of Mortality," born in London, in 1620, died in 1674.

GRAUNT, Edward, a learned man, head of Westminster school, died in 1601.

GRAVELOT, Henry Francis Bourguignon, a very famous engraver, born at Paris, in 1699, died in 1773.

GRAVEROL, Francis a French advocate, he wrote Sorberiana, and died in 1694.

GRAVES, Thomas Lord, a gallant British admiral, born at Thanckes, in Cornwall, died in 1802.

GRAVES, Richard, 52 years rector of Claverton, near Bath, was born at Mickleton, in Gloucestershire, in 1715; at the age of 16 he was chosen a scholar of Pembroke College, Oxford; and in 1736 elected a fellow of All Souls. He was presented to the living of Claverton, in 1750; and from that time to his death in 1804, never absented himself a single month at any one time: thus setting an example worthy the approbation and imitation of all clergymen. Mr. Graves was the intimate friend and correspondent of Shenstone, as well as of many other literary characters, and was author of an ingenious satirical novel, called "The Spiritual Quixotte;" besides a dramatic piece, essays, and many poems, translations, and sermons on various subjects. He always enjoyed good health, and but a few months before his death, when nearly 90 years of age, published "The Invalid, with the obvious Means of enjoying Life, by a Nonagenarian." There is an ease, and sprightliness, and an epigrammatic turn in his writings, which was peculiar to himself, and will make them be always read with pleasure.

GRAVESANDE, William James, a celebrated mathematician and moral philosopher, born in 1668, at Bois-le-Duc, in Holland, died in 1742.

GRAVINA, Peter, an Italian poet, who published a 4to vol. of poems much admired.

GRAVINA, John Vincent, an eminent dramatic poet, critic, antiquary, and lawyer, of Italy, born at Roggiano, in 1664, died in 1718. The greatest of all his works, and for which he will be ever memorable, is his three books, "De Ortu et Progressu Juris Civilis."

GRAY, Thomas, eminent for a few poems that he has left: was born in London, in 1716, and died in 1771. He was perhaps the most learned man in Europe, equally acquainted with the elegant and the profound parts of science. A new arrangement of his poems, with notes and additions, was made and printed in 8vo., in 1799.

GRAYSON, William, a senator of the United States, from Virginia; of great abilities and unimpeachable integrity; he died in 1790.

GRAZZINI, Antony Francis, surnamed Lasca, considered nearly of equal merit as a writer with Boccaccio; he died in 1583.

GREATRAKES, Valentine, a most extraordinary person, celebrated for his power (real or supposed) of curing the king's evil and other diseases by stroking the affected parts with his hands. He was born in Ireland, in 1628, but it is first recorded in what year he died. He was hanged, however, in 1681.

GREAVES, John, an eminent mathematician and antiquary, born at Colmore, Hauts, in 1602, published several learned works, and died in 1652.

GRECOURT, John Baptist Joseph Villart de, a French poet, who became a favourite of men of wit and rank; he died in 1743.

GREEN, Robert, a dramatic author in queen Elizabeth's reign, born in 1550. He was a man of great wit and humour, but in the life that he led prostituted great talents to the purposes of vice and obscenity; and upon the whole, both in theory and practice, seems to have been a most perfect libertine. His works of different kinds are very numerous; many of them are pastoral romances in prose and verse. His dramatic pieces, amounting to four or five, may be seen in the "Biographia Dramatica;" he died in 1532. One of his biographers says of him that his works contain the seeds of virtue, while his acts display the tares of folly.

GREEN, Matthew, an ingenious English poet, born in 1696, of a good family among the dissenters; held an office in the custom-house of London, and died in 1737. His poems were first collected and published in 12mo, in 1796. The most celebrated of them is entitled "The Spleen," in which (says Mr. Mehnouth) "there are more original thoughts thrown together, than I have ever read in the same compass of lines."

GREEN, Dr. Maurice, an eminent musician and composer, who was successively organist and composer to the Royal Chapel, professor of music in the university of Cambridge, and master of the royal band. About 1750, he conceived a project of reforming church-music, and had made a considerable progress in the work; but, his health failing him, he transmitted the further prosecution of it to his friend Dr. Boyce, who completed and published it. Dr. Green was born in London, and died in 1755.

GREEN, John Richard. See GIFFORD, John.

GREEN, John, bishop of Lincoln, and an eminent controversial and miscellaneous writer, born at Hull, about 1798, died in 1779.

GREEN, Samuel, the first printer in North-America, who printed first the freeman's oath, then an almanac; he died after 1685.

GREEN, Edward Burnaby, a gentleman well known in the regions of Parnassus, by "Translations of Anacreon and Pindar," and many single poems and essays; he died in 1788.

GREENE, William, deputy governor and governor of the colony of Rhode-Island, died in 1758.

GREENE, Nathaniel, a major-general in the army of the United States, during the revolution, distinguished himself in the battles of Trenton and Princeton, and afterwards, in that of Germantown, where he commanded the left, and of Monmouth, where he commanded the right wing of the army. He was appointed quarter master general, in 1778, and in 1780 to the command of the southern army, with which he gained the victory at the Eutaw Springs. His bravery, skill, and services, were such as to merit the express approbation of congress, and of his country; he died in Georgia, in 1786.

GREENHILL, John, a very ingenious English painter, the most excellent of all the disciples of Sir Peter Lely, who is said to have considered him so much a rival, that he never suffered him to see him paint; he was born at Salisbury, and died in 1676.

GREENUP, Christopher, a soldier of the revolution, and a representative in congress, from Kentucky, was governor of that state, in 1804; he died in 1818.

GREENVILLE, Sir Richard, grandfather, of the well known Sir Bevil Greenville, commanded a fleet in America, in 1585, against the Spaniards, but was taken, and died of his wounds.

GREENVILLE, Sir Revil, distinguished in the civil wars for defending his sovereign; he fell at the battle of Lansdowne, in 1643.

GREENWOOD, Isaac, professor of mathematics and natural philosophy, in Harvard college, from 1728 to 1738.

GREGORIUS, Georgius Florentinus, a learned bishop of Tours, in the 6th century; he was an able writer, but censured by Gibbon; he died about 595.

GREGORY, George, D. D., an English divine, and miscellaneous writer, was settled in London, where he supported and defended the ministry by his writings; he died in 1808.

GREGORY, St., surnamed the Great, a mild and benevolent pontiff, died in 601.

GREGORY II., an enlightened and virtuous pontiff, died in 731.

GREGORY XIV., Nicholas Sfondrate, elected pope after Urban VII., and died in 1591.

GREGORY XV., Alexander Ludovisio, made pope in 1621, died in 1623.

GREGORY, James, a very eminent mathematician, born at Aberdeen, in 1639, died in 1675. The chief inventions of Gregory are, the reflecting telescope, the burning concave mirror, and the quadrature of the circle by an infinite converging series. He was likewise the first who demonstrated the meridian line to be analogous to a scale of logarithmic tangents, of the half complement of latitude: he also invented and demonstrated geometrically, by the help of the hyperbola, a very swift converging series for making the logarithms, and therefore recommended by Dr. Halley as very proper for practice.

GREGORY, David, a distinguished mathematician, who first introduced Newton's Principia into the university schools; he died in 1710.

GREGORY, Dr. John, an eminent physician and moral writer, died in 1773. His writings are spirited and elegant, and calculated for general utility. Those by which he is best known are, "A Comparative View of the state of Man and other Animals;" "A Father's Legacy to his Daughters;" and "An Essay on the Office and Duties of a Physician;" by the latter of which he plainly shows that he thought the medical art, to be generally admired, needed only to be better known; and that the affectation of concealment retarded its progress, rendered it a suspicious art, and tended to draw ridicule and disgrace on its professors.

GREGORY, John, an English divine, who wrote several works; he died in 1646.

GREGORY, Edmund, author of the "Historical Anatomy of Christian Melancholy," &c. died in 1650.

GREGORY, Nazianzen, patriarch of Constantinople, born in 324, died in 389. He was one of the ablest champions of the orthodox faith concerning the Trinity, whence he had the title given him of "THE DIVINE," by unanimous consent.

GREGORY, Nyssen, bishop of Nyssa, in 371, and author of the Nicene Creed, died in 396.

GREGORY, Theodorus, bishop of Neo-Cesarea, surnamed Thaumaturgus, a disciple of Origen, and famous for his conversion of the Gentiles; he died about 265.

GREGORY Peter, a native of Toulouse, author of some learned, but injudicious works; he died in 1527.

GREGORY, Dr. George, a native of Ireland, and a learned and industrious moral and miscellaneous writer, died vicar of West-Ham, in 1808.

GRENADA, Lewis de, who refused the bishopric of Brazanza, being so much attached to a monastic life; he died in 1588.

GRENAN, Benignus, a Latin poet, poetical rival of professor Coffin; he died in 1723.

GRENCE, a French painter of great merit.

GRENVILLE, George, a celebrated British statesman, known in parliamentary history for his two bills for a more regular payment of the navy, in 1757, and for the trial of contested elections in 1770.

GRESHAM, Sir Thomas, an eminent merchant, born in London, in 1519, and died in 1579. He was well acquainted with the ancient and several modern languages, had a very comprehensive knowledge of all affairs relating to commerce, whether foreign or domestic; and his success was not less, being in his time esteemed the richest commoner in England. He transacted queen Elizabeth's mercantile affairs so constantly, that he was called "The Royal Merchant;" and his house was sometimes appointed for the reception of foreign princes upon their first arrival in London; but the most shining part of his character appears in his public benefactions. The Royal Exchange, which he built, was a singular ornament to the city of London, and a great convenience to the merchants, who wanted such a place to meet and transact their affairs in; and the donation of his own mansion-house, in Bishopsgate-street, for a seat of learning and the liberal arts, with the handsome provision made for the endowment and support of it, was such an instance of a generous and public spirit as has been equaled by few, and must perpetuate his memory with the highest esteem and gratitude, so long as any regard to learning and virtue is preserved; nor ought his charities to the poor, his 8 almshouses, and his liberal contributions to the 10 prisons and hospitals in London and Southwark, to be forgotten in the delineation of Sir Thomas Gresham's benevolent character.

GRESSET, John Baptist Lewis, a celebrated French poet, and author of Vert-vert; he died in 1777.

GRETSEER, James, a learned jesuit, 24 years professor at Ingoldstadt; he died in 1635.

GREW, Nehemiah, a learned writer and physician, and secretary to the Royal Society, born at Coventry, in 1628. His chief works are "A Catalogue of the natural and artificial Rarities belonging to the Society;" "A Comparative Anatomy of the Stomach and Guts;" and "The Anatomy of Plants," &c.; he died in 1711.

GREY, Lady Jane, an illustrious, but unfortunate personage of the blood royal of England by both parents; her grandmother on her father's side, Henry Grey, marquis of Dorset, being queen consort to Edward IV., and her grandmother on her mother's, lady Frances Brandon, being daughter to Henry VII., queen Dowager of France, and mother of Mary queen of Scots. She was born in 1537, and fell a victim to the ambition of her parents, who on the demise of Edward VI., overcame her by their persuasions to suffer herself to be proclaimed queen of England. Though only an innocent agent, she was, on the accession of Mary, declared guilty of high treason, and beheaded in 1554, aged 17 years. She was eminent for her piety and learning, being mistress of the Greek and Latin languages, in both of which she wrote elegant letters, which were printed after her death.

GREY, Dr. Zachary, an ingenious English scholar, born in Yorkshire, in 1687, died at Amptill, in 1766. He was the author of nearly 30 publications; but his edition of "Hudibras," 2 volumes 8vo., is the work which will best preserve his memory.

GREY, Dr. Richard, a learned English divine and polemical writer, born in 1693, died in 1771. He published "Memoria Technica; or a new Method of Artificial Memory;" "A System of English Ecclesiastical Law;" "A new and easy Method of learning Hebrew without points," &c.

GRIBALDUS, Matthew, a learned civilian, of Padua, who left Italy to embrace protestantism; he embraced the anti-trinitarian doctrine, for which he was persecuted; he died of the plague, in 1564.

He practised and taught successively, rhetoric, history, mathematics, hydraulics, chymistry, architecture, and medicine, in which he obtained the degree of doctor. His recreations were physical and chymical experiments, drawing and painting. On the suppression of the society of jesuits, the empress Maria Theresa took him into her service, and intrusted to him the superintendance of ship-building at Trieste, as well as the draining of the Slavonian and Hungarian morasses. As soon as he learned that the society continued to exist in the Russian empire under the protection of the government, he joined the society at Polocz, where he applied himself to his favourite studies for several years.

Being sent to St. Petersburg several times on the business of the society, he gained the esteem of their imperial majesties. In 1802 he was elected general of the society, and showed much tranquillity and perseverance in very arduous and trying circumstances. By his exertions, the order increased in Russia, and was restored in the kingdom of Naples. His amiable and philanthropic behaviour, and the variety and extent of his knowledge, procured him many friends, as well as the confidence and good-will of men of the highest rank. With those abilities and information which form a great mind, he united the piety and virtue of a true member of a religious order. He died in 1805.

GUISE, Claude de Lorraine, duke of, settled in France, and became founder of the family of Guise there; he died in 1513.

GUISE, Francis, duke of, son of the preceding, a man of great talents; in him began the factions of Conde and Guise; he died in 1563.

GUISE, Henry, duke of, memorable in the history of France as a gallant officer; but an imperious, turbulent, seditious subject, who placed himself at the head of an armed force, and called his rebel band, The League; the plan was formed by the cardinal, his younger brother; and, under the pretext of defending the Roman catholic religion, the king, Henry III., and the freedom of the state, against the designs of the Huguenots, or French protestants, they carried on a civil war, massacred the Huguenots, and governed the king, who forbade his appearance at Paris; but Guise now became an open rebel, entered that city against the king's express order, and put to the sword all who opposed him; the streets being barricaded to prevent his progress, this fatal day is called in the French history, The Day of the Barricades. Masters of Paris, the policy of the Guises failed them; for they suffered the king to escape to Blois, though he was deserted in his palace at Paris by his very guards. At Blois, Henry convened an assembly of the states of France; the duke of Guise had the boldness to appear to a summons sent him for that purpose; a forced reconciliation took place between him and the king, by the advice of this assembly; but it being accidentally discovered, that Guise had formed a plan to dethrone the king, that weak monarch, instead of resolutely bringing him to justice, had him privately assassinated, Dec. 23, 1558, in the 33th year of his age. His brother, the cardinal, shared the same fate the next day.

GUISE, Charles, duke of, eldest son of Henry, was arrested on his father's murder, but escaped; he was reconciled to the king, but the jealousy of Richelieu drove him from the kingdom; he died in 1640.

GUISE, Lewis de Lorraine, cardinal of, son of Henry, well known as illustrious in arms, and in the arts of peace; he died in 1621.

GUISE, Henry of Lorraine, duke of, grandson of Henry, was remarkable for his intrigues with the duke of Bouillon, &c.; he died in 1664.

GUISE, William, an English divine, eminent for his translations from the oriental languages, born in Gloucestershire, in 1653, died in 1683. Foreigners have styled him "the immortal ornament of the university of Oxford."

GUITTON, John, a citizen of Rochelle, was elected mayor, captain-general, and governor, when that city was besieged by cardinal Richelieu, in 1637. He would not accept the command, unless it was agreed that a poignard, which he produced, should lie on the table in the town-house, for him to put to death the first man who proposed to surrender. When he was told that fanatic had swept off the greatest part of the inhabitants, he coolly answered, "No matter, while there is one left to shut the gates."

GUITION, d'Arrezzo, an early Italian poet, flourished in the middle of the 13th century.

GULDENSTAEDT, John Antony, a famous traveller, born at Riga; visited Astracan, Caucasus, &c.; he died in 1781.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, the greatest king that Sweden ever had. He conquered Ingria, Livonia, Bremen, Venden, Wiesmar, Pomerania, &c. He shook the throne of the emperor Ferdinand II. He protected the Lutherans in Germany, and by his victories humbled the house of Austria. The glory of this action has been unjustly attributed to cardinal Richelieu, who had the art of raising his reputation from the victories which Gustavus was content to gain. He carried the war beyond the Danube, and would perhaps have dethroned the emperor, had he not been slain at the battle of Lutzen, A. D. 1663, in the 37th year of his age, after he had defeated the imperial army commanded by Walstein. He carried to his tomb the name of "The Great Gustavus," the love of his subjects, and the esteem of his enemies.

GUSTAVUS III., king of Sweden, came to the throne in 1771, was shot at a masked ball, and having languished some time, died in 1792.

known as an able antiquarian, and correct writer; he died in 1638.

GUTHRIE, William, a very laborious and voluminous writer on history, politics, and other subjects, born at Breichen, in Angusshire, in 1701, died in 1769. His principal works are, "Histories of the World," of "England," and of "Scotland." He was a "writer by profession," and is said to have lent his name to booksellers for publications in which he had no concern. Such is asserted to have been the case with respect to the Geographical Grammar, called "Guthrie's;" which, however, is a work that, for its general utility and comparative perfection, confers credit on the compiler, whoever he be.

GUTTEMERGH, John of, a citizen of Strasbourg, to whom is attributed the invention of the art of printing, in conjunction with Fust, or Faustus, and Peter Schoeffer, or Schuffer, the servant, and afterwards the son-in-law, of Faustus, by whom it was further improved. He was born at Mentz, in 1408, and died there, in 1467.

GUY, a monk of Arrezzo, who invented the six syllables of the gamut, ut, re, ni, fa, sol, la, lived about 1026.

GUY, Thomas, founder of Guy's hospital, was the son of Thomas Guy, lighterman and coal-dealer in Horsley-down, Southwark. He was put apprentice, in 1660, to a bookseller, in the porch of Mercer's chapel, and set up trade with a stock of about 200*l.*, in the house that forms the angle between Cornhill and Lombard-street. The English Bibles being at that time very badly printed, Mr. Guy engaged, with others, in a scheme for printing them in Holland, and importing them; but this being put a stop to, he contracted with the university of Oxford for their privilege of printing them, and carried on a great Bible trade for many years to considerable advantage. Thus he began to accumulate money, and his gains rested in his hands; for, being a single man, and very penurious, his expenses were next to nothing. His custom was, to dine on his shop-counter, with no other table cloth than an old newspaper; he was also as little nice with regard to his apparel. The bulk of his fortune, however, was acquired by purchasing seamen's tickets during queen Anne's wars, and by South-sea stock, in the memorable year 1720. He was 76 years of age when he formed the design of building the hospital, near St. Thomas', which bears his name. The charge of erecting this vast pile amounted to 18,733*l.*, besides 219,499*l.* which he left to endow it: and he just lived to see it roofed in. He died Dec. 17, 1724, in the 81st year of his age, after having dedicated to charitable purposes more money than any one private man upon record in England.

GUYARD, de Berville, a French author of some merit, died in poverty, aged 73.

GUYARD, Anthony, a Benedictine monk, author of several works, died at Dijon, in 1770.

HAMILTON, Alexander, secretary of the Treasury of the United States, under general Washington, and a major general in the American army, was born in the island of St. Croix, in 1757, and came to New-York, in 1773. At the commencement of the revolution he joined the army, was aid-de-camp to the commander in chief, and continued in the service until the surrender of Cornwallis, at Yorktown, where the Americans under his command stormed and took the British works. He afterwards commenced the practice of the law in New-York, and rose to the highest eminence in the profession. He was killed in a duel with colonel Burr, in 1804. As a statesman and a financier, he revived the public credit, and placed the United States revenue on a permanent footing. He always possessed the confidence of Washington, and his death was lamented by the whole community, as an irreparable loss to his country.

HAMILTON, Paul, was a firm and decided patriot of the revolution, governor of the state of South Carolina, and afterwards secretary of the Navy of the United States under President Madison. He died in 1816.

His chief works are, a "Practical Catechism;" a "Paraphrase and Annotations on the New Testament;" and a "Paraphrase and Commentary on the Old Testament;" of which he only published the Psalms, and went through a third part of the book of Proverbs.

HAMMOND, James, an elegant English poet, born in 1710, died in 1742. He was squerry to the prince of Wales; and is said to have divided his life between pleasure and books; in his retirement forgetting the town, and in his gayety losing the student. Of his literary honours the principal effects are exhibited in his memorable "Love Elegies."

HAMON, John, a French physician, who wrote on religious subjects in an admired style; he died in 1687.

HAMPDEN, John, a celebrated political character in the reign of Charles I., famous for sustaining singly the weight of a royal prosecution, on his refusing to pay the ship-money in the reign of Charles I., was born in London, in 1594. Having in 1625-6 obtained a seat in the house of commons, he soon grew to be one of the most popular men in the nation; and after he had held the chief direction of his party in the house against the king, he took up arms in the same cause, and was one of the first who opened the war by an action at a place called Brill, about 5 miles from Oxford; but he was cut off early by a mortal wound, which he received by a pistol bursting in his hand, in a skirmish with prince Rupert, June 18, 1643, and of which he died the 24th. Clarendon has given Hampden the character of a great, rather than a good man; but when passive obedience and non-resistance were disgraced by law, he came to be esteemed a good as well as a great man, and has continued to be thought so from that time to this.

HAMPTON, James, translator of Polybius, died 1778.

HANSA, a Mahometan doctor, known for his attempt to eradicate the tenets of Mahomet and to establish his own. He flourished about 1020.

HANNEMAN, John, a painter, at the Hague, and an excellent copyist of Vandyck; he died in 1680.

HANNIBAL, a great Carthaginian general, was the son of Hamlicar, who made him swear on the altar, that he would never be reconciled to the Romans. At 25 years of age, he took upon him the command of the army. After taking Salamanca and Saguntum, in Spain, he defeated the Gauls, and passed the Alps in defiance of the snow, and of Publius Cornelius; having mollified the rocks with vinegar, and cut through them with iron. He took Turin, and at Pavia defeated Cornelius Scipio. The following year he defeated Flaminius, and slew 15,000 men; he next overthrew Varro at Cannæ, with 40,000 foot, and 2700 horse, the flower of the Roman youth, and sent to Carthage two or three baskets of gold rings taken from the hands of 5530 slain Roman gentlemen. And now had Hannibal gone straight to Rome, he had certainly ruined that commonwealth; but going to Capua, where he wintered, the delights of the place so debauched his whole army, that the Romans recovered themselves from the consternation into which the loss of five battles had thrown them. Two years after, Marcellus gave him battle, and conquered, but was himself killed in an ambush. Hannibal was defeated afterwards by Sempronius Gracchus, and at last met with a total overthrow by Scipio; when, falling (or fearing to fall) into the hands of the Romans, he took poison, which he had kept in a ring for that purpose, 182 B. C., aged 70.

HANWAY, Jonas, was born at Portsmouth, in 1712. Being bred to commerce, he left England, and entered into business at Lisbon as a merchant; from Lisbon he removed to Petersburg, where he was appointed agent to the British factory; and, with the view of opening a trade through Russia into Persia, he undertook a laborious and dangerous course of travels, of which he afterwards published an interesting account at his return to England. To the charitable disposition and benevolent exertions of Mr. Hanway, London owes in a great measure the institution of the Marine Society, the support of the Magdalen Hospital, the improvement of its streets and avenues; and the poor of various descriptions, their most effectual comfort and support. He died in 1786.

HARCOURT, Harriet Eusebia, an English lady, who established a female monastery on her lauds in Yorkshire, which was dissolved at her death, in 1745.

HARLEY, Robert, afterwards earl of Oxford and earl Mortimer, and lord high treasurer in the reign of queen Anne, was born in London, in 1661. On the 8th of March, 1711, he was in great danger of his life; the marquis of Guiscard, a French papist, then under examination of a committee of the privy council at Whitehall, stabbing him with a penknife, which he took up in the clerk's room, where he waited before he was examined. Guiscard was imprisoned and died in Newgate, the 17th of the same month; whereupon an act of parliament passed, making it felony, without benefit of clergy, to attempt the life of a privy counsellor in the execution of his office. After the death of queen Anne, viz. June 10, 1715, Harley was impeached by the house of commons of high treason, and high crimes and misdemeanors; and was committed to the Tower by the house of lords, where he suffered confinement till July 1, 1717, and then, after a public trial, was acquitted by his peers; he died in 1724, and Pope has celebrated his memory in the following lines:

"A soul supreme in each hard instance tried,
Above all pain, all anger, and all pride,
The rage of power, the blast of public breath,
The lust of lucre, and the dread of death."

This nobleman laid the foundation of the Harleian Collection of MSS. now in the British Museum; which was enlarged by his son Edward, who succeeded to his title and estates, and at whose death, it consisted of 8000 volumes, and above 40,000 original rolls, charters, and other deeds and instruments of great antiquity.

HARLOW, an eminent English portrait and historical painter, died in the bloom of life, in 1819. The admirable arrangement and powerful effect with which he represented the scene from Henry VIII., in which Mrs Siddons is the principal figure, and all the Kemble family are introduced, is a masterly proof of his taste, judgment, and skill, as a historical painter; as his portraits of West, Northcote, Fuseli, &c., were of his fidelity in that branch of the art. As a copyist also he was entitled to high praise. His copy of a picture of Rubens might be taken for the original; and his copy of Raphael's famous picture of The Transfiguration, which he painted with astonishing rapidity, was highly admired at Rome, where the original might be compared with it.

HARMER, Thomas, an eminent dissenting divine, and critical writer on biblical literature, born at Norwich, in 1715, was 54 years pastor of a congregation at Watesfield, in Suffolk, and died in 1783.

HARRIS, William, minister of a dissenting congregation in London, died in 1740.

HARRIS, William, a protestant dissenting minister, of eminent abilities and character, and author of a historical and critical Account of the Lives of James I., Charles I., and Oliver Cromwell, all tending to recommend republicanism, in 5 vols., after the manner of Mr. Bayle. He died in 1770.

HARRIS, James, an English gentleman, of very uncommon parts and learning, born in the Close, at Salisbury, in 1709, died in 1780. He is the author of "Three Treatises, concerning Art, Music, and Painting, and Poetry, and Happiness;" "Hermes, or, a Philosophical Inquiry concerning Universal Grammar," (which bishop Lowth, in the preface to his "English Grammar," calls the most beautiful and perfect example of analysis that has been exhibited since the days of Aristotle); "Philosophical Arrangements;" and "Philological Inquiries."

HARRIS, James, earl of Malmesbury, an English ambassador at the court of Berlin, St. Petersburg, and afterwards at the Hague, and a member of the privy council, was raised to the peerage in 1800, and died in 1820.

HARRISON, William, an elegant poet, and secretary to the English ambassador at the Hague, died in London, in 1713.

HARRISON, William, an English writer, author of the Pilgrim, a pastoral tragedy, 1709.

HARRISON, John, a colonel in the parliament army, and one of the judges of the unfortunate Charles; he was executed for his perjury, after the restoration.

HARRISON, Robert Hansen, an eminent lawyer, of Maryland, was chief justice of the general court, and governor of that state. He was appointed a judge of the supreme court of the United States, in 1789, but declined the office, and died in 1790.

HARRISON, John, a most accurate English mechanic, inventor and maker of the famous time-keeper, for ascertaining the longitude at sea, born at Foulby, near Pontefract, in Yorkshire, 1693, died 1776. After many experiments, he made a time-keeper in the form of a watch, with which two trials were in voyages to the West Indies; and, being found to answer, the discoverer received from parliament the sum of 24,000*l*.

HARRISON, Benjamin, one of the delegation from Virginia, who signed the declaration of Independence.

HART, Oliver, minister of Charleston, South Carolina, published several sermons, and died in 1795.

HART, Levi, D. D., minister of Preston, Conn., instructed many young men for the ministry, and died in 1808.

HART, John, a signer of the declaration of Independence, and an active and useful revolutionary patriot, he died in 1779.

HARTE, Walter, a divine, poet and historian, born early in the 18th century, and educated in the free-school of Marlborough. Lord Chesterfield, to whose son Harte was tutor, describes him as a man of consummate erudition. His greatest poetical work, called "The Amarant," was published in 1767; his "History of Gustavus Adolphus," in 1765; and his "Essays on Husbandry," in 1764. He died in 1773.

HARTLEY, David, an English physician of eminence, born in Yorkshre, in 1705. His principal work is entitled "Observations on Man, his Frame, his Duty, and his Expectations." He died in 1757.

HARTMAN, John Adolphus, a convert from the jesuits, to Calvinism, and professor of philosophy and poetry, at Castel, and afterwards of history, at Marburg; he died in 1744.

HARTSOEKER, Nicolas, professor of philosophy, at Heidelberg, and mathematician to the elector palatine, died in 1725.

HARTUNGUS, John, professor of Greek at Heidelberg, for some time in arms against the Turks; he died in 1579.

HARVARD, John, an eminent American divine, founder of Harvard college, Massachusetts, died in 1638.

HARVEY, Gideon, an eminent English physician, attendant upon Charles II. in his exile, and after his restoration; he died in 1700.

HARVEY, William, an eminent English physician who first discovered the circulation of the blood and the motion of the heart, in animals, born at Folkstone, in Kent, in 1578, died in 1657.

HARVEY, Sir John, governor of the colony of Virginia. His tyranny and rapacity caused his impeachment and removal, in 1635.

HARWOOD, Dr. Edward, an English dissenting divine, and excellent classical scholar, born in 1729, died in 1794. His chief works are, "An Introduction to the Study of the New Testament," "A View of the various editions of the Greek and Roman Classics," and an edition of the "New Testament in Greek, with English notes."

HASE, Theodore, professor of Hebrew at Bremen, his native town, died in 1731.

HASE, James, brother of the preceding, distinguished for his learning and writings, died in 1723.

HASSELQUIST, Frederic, a Swedish botanist and natural historian, born in East Gothland, in 1722, died at Smyrna, in 1752.

HASTED, Edward, a topographer, born at Hawley, in Kent, in 1732. His "History of Kent" is well known and esteemed. In the latter part of his life he was much reduced in circumstances, and was, by lord Radnor, presented with the mastership of the hospital at Corsham, Wilts. He died there in 1812.

HASTINGS, Elizabeth, daughter of the earl of Huntington, was celebrated for her accomplishments, and for her public and private charity. She died in 1740, deservedly lamented.

HASTINGS, Rt. Hon. Warren, was born near Daylesford, in Worcestershire, in 1733. Having been educated at Westminster school, he went out to the East Indies as a writer, and in course of time became governor of Bengal. He was removed from Madras to the presidency of Calcutta at a critical period, when the state of Hindostan became perilous from the rapidly increasing power of Hyder Ally, the sovereign of Mysore, and the intrigues of the French, who were taking advantage of the rupture between Great Britain and her colonies. In this exigency, the governor-general had to rely solely upon his own exertions; and he succeeded, beyond all expectation, in saving British India from a combination of enemies. Party spirit at home, however, turned his merit into a crime, and charges were brought against him in parliament. He returned in 1786, and an impeachment followed, the trial of which lasted nine years, and terminated in an acquittal. After this he led a retired life on the wreck of his fortune, and an annuity from the India company. He lived, however, to see his plans for the security of India publicly applauded; but received no other recompense for his sufferings, than that of being sworn of the privy-council. Sir Warren died in 1818.

HATSELL, John, clerk of the house of commons, from 1768 to 1797, died in 1820.

HATTON, Sir Christopher, an eminent statesman, and lord chancellor under Queen Elizabeth, died in 1591.

HAUSTEAD, Peter, a clergyman and a comic writer, in the reign of Charles I.

HAUTE-FEUILLE, Gabbe, a French gentleman, skilled in mechanics, who made considerable improvements in the movements of watches, and invented a specular gnomon for regulating clocks and watches by the sun, &c., born in 1647, died in 1724.

HAUTEROUCHE, Noel le Breton de, a French dramatic poet and actor, died at Paris, in 1767.

HAUTETERRE, Anthony Dantine de, professor of law at Toulouse, author of a treatise on monastic life, and other works, indicative of great talents and learning; he died in 1682.

HAVARD, William, a respectable actor, and dramatic writer, of Dublin, died in 1778.

HAVEN, Samuel, D. D., minister of Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, published many sermons, and died in 1806.

HAVEN, Jason, minister of Dedham, Massachusetts, author of many published sermons, died, much respected, in 1803.

HAVERCAMP, Sigibert, a celebrated Dutch critic, and professor of history, eloquence, and the Greek tongue, at Leyden. He was particularly skilled in the science of medals, and was the author of some works in this way that were very much esteemed. He gave good editions, as well as grand ones, of several Latin and Greek authors; of Eutropius, Tertullian's "Apologetic," Josephus, Sallust, &c.; and his editions of those authors are reckoned the best. He died in 1742, aged 58.

HAVERS, Clopton, an English physician, author of a treatise on the bones, died early in the 18th century.

HAWES, Stephen, an English poet, who flourished about 1500.

HAWES, Dr. William, an English physician, who has immortalized his name by being the founder of the Royal Humane Society, for the recovery of persons apparently dead by drowning, suffocation, or strangulation, was born at Islington, in 1736, and died in 1808. Dr. Hawes was a truly amiable and benevolent man; and gave a strong proof of his philanthropy in his unwearied attention to the above-mentioned institution, which has been found highly useful, and to establish which he employed many years of his life. So much, indeed, did this engross his mind, and engage his attention, that his own immediate interests appeared to him to be very subordinate considerations; yet he was always ready to afford his professional assistance to distress. It would be difficult for the enemies of Dr. Hawes, (if such a truly benignant character could have any enemies,) to say any thing to his disadvantage. There was a remarkable simplicity in his manners, the result of an innocent and unsuspecting heart; and his name ought to be recorded among the benefactors of their country, for the establishment of an institution, which has been a source of renewed happiness to thousands, who might otherwise have sunk into wretchedness, arising from the untimely loss of their dearest relatives.

HAWES, Thomas, an English divine, known as chaplain to the countess of Huntington, and as principal of a seminary which she founded for the education of students in divinity; he died in 1820.

HAWKE, Edward lord, a brave and intrepid English admiral, appointed rear of the white, in 1747, being then styled by George II. "His own Admiral;" and, by successive promotions, he became vice-admiral of Great Britain, in 1765. He was one of the greatest characters that ever adorned the British navy; but most of all remarkable for the daring courage, which induced him, on many occasions, to disregard those forms of conducting or sustaining an attack, which, by the rules and ceremonies of service, had before been considered as indispensable. His defeat of the French armament, under marshal Conflans, off Belleisle, will never be forgotten. He died in 1781.

HAWKESWORTH, Dr. John, an English writer, of a very soft and pleasing cast, born at Bromley, in Kent, in 1715, died in 1773. As an author, "The Adventurer" is his capital work; the merits of which, it is said, procured him the degree of LL. D. from Dr. Herring, archbishop of Canterbury. When the design of compiling a narrative of the discoveries in the South Seas was on foot, he was recommended as a proper person to be employed on the occasion; but the performance did not answer expectation. Works of taste and elegance, where imagination and the passions were to be affected, were his province; not works of dry, cold, accurate narrative. However, he executed his task, and is said to have received for it the enormous sum of 6000*l*.

HAWKINS, Sir John, an English admiral, who signalized himself, in the reign of Elizabeth, by opposing the Spanish armada, and in his expeditions to the West Indies; he died in 1595.

HAWKINS, Sir John, to whom the public are indebted for a good edition, with notes, of "Walton's Angler," as well as a valuable "History of Music," was born in 1719, and died in 1789. Some short time before his death, he wrote a "Life of Dr. Samuel Johnson," which, though replete with literary anecdote and entertainment, met with but an indifferent reception from the critics.

HAWKINS, William, governor of the state of Georgia, died in 1819.

HAWKSMOOR, Nicolas, an English architect, pupil to Sir Christopher Wren, died in 1736.

HAWKWOOD, Sir John, born in the reign of Edward II., died in 1394. Though bred a tailor, having afterwards taken to arms, he signalized himself in the wars in Italy, by his valour and conduct, which raised him to the highest posts. He gained so great honour and reputation for having restored, in those parts, military discipline, which was almost lost, that, after his death, the Florentines erected, in their city, a black marble statue as an acknowledgment for the services he had done them.

HAWLEY, Joseph, distinguished as a statesman and patriot, and regarded as having been one of the ablest advocates of American liberty; he died in 1788.

HAWLEY, Gideon, many years a missionary to the Stockbridge, Mohawk, and Oneida Indians, and eminently useful to them; he died in 1807.

HAY, James, a Scotchman, who went to England with James I., where he was ennobled, and employed on several embassies, and to negotiate a marriage between the prince of Wales and a princess of France; he died in 1636.

HAY, William, born in Sussex, in 1695, was remarkable for his personal deformity; on which subject he wrote an excellent "Essay," wherein he alluded to his own case with singular good humour. He was representative in parliament for Seaford, and died in 1755; having written, beside the above essay, "Religio Philosophi," "Imitations of Martial," and some other pieces, which were collected and printed in 1794.

HAYDN, Joseph, was born of low parentage, at Rhorau, in Austria, in 1733. At an early age he was received into the choir of the cathedral in Vienna. He afterwards got his living by teaching music, and by composition. In 1791, he went to England, and published several of his works; in consequence of which the university of Oxford conferred upon him the degree of doctor of music. In 1796, he returned to Germany, where he composed his sublime oratorio of "The Creation," and "The Seasons," and died in 1809. His works are very numerous and valuable. While Haydn was in England, a ship captain entered his chamber one morning: "You are Mr. Haydn?" "Yes." "Can you make me a march to enliven my crew? You shall have thirty guineas; but I must have it to-day, for to-morrow I start for Calcutta." Haydn agreed: the seaman left him; the composer opened his piano, and in a quarter of an hour the march was written. Haydn appears to have had a delicacy, rare among the musical birds of prey and passage, who go to feed on the unwieldy wealth of England; he thought so large a sum, for a labour eventually so slight, a species of plunder—came home early in the evening, and made two other marches, in order to allow the liberal seaman his choice, or to give them all to him. At daybreak the purchaser came—"Where is my march?" "Here, try it on the piano." Haydn played it. The captain counted the thirty guineas on the piano, took up the march, and went down stairs. Haydn ran after him; "I have made two others, both better, come up and hear them, and take your choice." "I am satisfied with the one I have." The captain still went down. "I will make you a present of them." The captain went down only the more rapidly, and left Haydn on the stairs. Haydn, from one of those motives not easily defined, determined on overcoming this singular self-denial. He immediately went to the exchange, ascertained the name of the ship, made a roll of his marches, and sent them, with a polite billet, to the captain on board. He was surprised at receiving, shortly after, his envelope, unopened, from the Englishman, who had judged it to be Haydn's. The composer tore the whole in pieces on the spot. The anecdote is of no great elevation; but it expresses peculiarity of character; and certainly neither the captain nor the composer could have been easily classed among the common, or the vulgar of men. Haydn soon adopted the custom of shopping, and frequently wandered in the morning from house to house of the music-sellers. He used to mention his dialogue with one of those persons. He had inquired for any particularly good music, "You are come exactly at the right time," was the shopkeeper's answer, "for I have just printed off Haydn's sublime music. Oh! as for that, I will have nothing to do with it." "How, sir, nothing to do with Haydn! what fault is to be found with it?" "Oh! fault enough; but there is no use in speaking about it now; it does not please me, show me something else." The music-seller, who was an enthusiast about Haydn's compositions, looked at the inquirer, "No, sir, I have other music, no doubt, but it is not fit for you," and turned his back upon him. Haydn was going out of the shop, laughing, when he met an acquaintance coming in, who pronounced his name. The music-seller, whose vexation had revived with the sound, turned round and said, "Yes, sir, here is a gentleman who actually does not like that great man's music." The mistake was of course soon cleared up, and the person was known who alone might presume to object to Haydn's music.

HAYER DU PERRON, Peter le, a native of Alencon, distinguished for his poems, odes, songs, &c.; he was born in 1603.

HAYER, John Nicholas Hubert, a French ecclesiastic, author of a work on the immortality of the soul, and other valuable writings, he died at Paris, in 1780.

HAYES, Charles, an ingenious mathematical writer, author of a treatise on fluxions, and other works; he died in London, in 1760.

HAYES, Dr. William, an eminent musical composer, born in 1708. He became professor of music at Christ Church College, Oxford, and published a collection of English ballads; but is best known by his cathedral music and catches. He defended Handel against Avison, with some asperity, and died in 1777.

HAYLEY, William, an English poet, and miscellaneous writer, died in 1820.

HAYLEY, William, a poet, dramatist, and miscellaneous writer, born in 1745, was educated at Cambridge. On leaving the university he retired to his estate of Earham, in Sussex; he died at Felpham, in 1820.

HAYMAN, Francis, a painter, of some distinction, born at Exeter, in 1708, became a member, and librarian of the royal academy, and died in 1776.

HAYMON, a native of the Tyrolese, in the 15th century, of gigantic stature. He is said to have been 16 feet in height, with strength proportionate to his size.

HAYNES, Hopton, assay master of the English mint, known as the author of a work on the attributes and worship of God, and the character and offices of Christ; he died in 1749.

HAYNES, Samuel, an English clergyman; he published a collection of state papers, and died in 1752.

HAYNES, John, governor of Massachusetts and Connecticut, of which latter colony he was one of the founders; he died in 1654.

HAYTER, Rev. John, an excellent Greek scholar, who was employed by the prince of Wales, (present king,) for many years, in unrolling and decyphering the MSS. found at Herulanum. He died at Paris, of apoplexy, in 1818, in his 63d year.

HAYWOOD, Sir John, an eminent English historian, died in 1627.

HAYWOOD, Elizabeth. See HEYWOOD.

HAYWOOD, Henry, minister in South Carolina to the Socinian baptists, died in 1755.

HAZAEI, servant of Benhadad, king of Syria, was sent by his master to inquire of the prophet Elisha, the result of his sickness. On his return, he killed the king, and usurped his throne, 889 B. C.

HEAD, Richard, a native of Ireland, known as the author of "The English Rogue," a comedy, and several other dramatic pieces; he died in 1678.

HEADLEY, Henry, an ingenious poet, and excellent young man, was born at Irstead, in Norfolk, in 1766, and, after passing under the tuition of Dr. Parr, was admitted to Trinity college, Oxford. He died in 1788. Before the age of 20 he published a volume of "Poems;" but he is principally known to the literary world by two volumes of "Select Beauties of Ancient English poetry, with Remarks," 1787: a work very deservedly in high esteem; and which was elegantly republished by Mr. Sharpe, in 1810, with a biographical sketch of the author, by the Rev. Henry Kett, B. D., Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford.

HEARNE, Thomas, an English antiquary, and indefatigable collector and editor of books and MSS. chiefly concerning English history, born in 1678, and died in 1735.

HEATH, Nicholas, archbishop of York, and chancellor of England in the reign of Mary, died in 1560.

HEATH, James, an English historian, born in London, in 1629, and died in 1664.

HEATH, Thomas, brother of the preceding, and a jesuit; he was sent as a missionary to England, where he died about 1568.

HEATH, Benjamin, a lawyer of eminence, and town-clerk of Exeter, who wrote several works, but is best known by "A Revisal of Shakspeare's Text, wherein the alterations introduced into it by the more modern editors and critics are particularly considered, 1765.

HEATH, William, a brigadier, and afterwards a major-general in the American army during the revolution; he was distinguished for his patriotism and zeal, and died after the war at Roxbury, Massachusetts.

HEATHCOTE, Dr. Ralph, a very learned divine and controversial writer, born in 1721, and died in 1795. When very young, he published, at Cambridge, "Historia Astronomiæ," which laid the foundation of that merit which he afterwards acquired in the literary world. The doctor was deeply engaged in the Middletonian controversy upon the miraculous powers. In 1775 he published "A Sketch of Lord Bolingbroke's Philosophy;" and, in the latter end of the same year, came out, "The use of Reason asserted in Matters of Religion." The doctor also was engaged in the compilation of the "Biographical Dictionary," 12 vols. 8vo, 1761, and had a considerable sum from the booksellers for several new articles in the edition of 1784. In 1771 appeared "The Irenarch; or, Justice of Peace's Manual;" and he then qualified himself for acting for the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby. The first volume of "Sylva; or, The Wood," was published in 1786, and a second edition in 1788. He had intended publishing a second volume of this work, but indisposition prevented his accomplishing it.

HEATHFIELD, Lord. See ELIOT.

HEBENSTREIT, John Ernest, a physician and writer educated at Jena; he went afterwards to Leipsic, where he died in 1756.

HEBER, son of Selah, and father of Pheleg, died 817 B.C. aged 464. The Jews derive the name of Hebrews from him.

HEBERDEN, Dr. William, an eminent English physician and medical writer, born in 1710, died in 1801.

HEBERT, James Rene, a French revolutionist, distinguished for his abusive writings and his bitterness against the queen. He was guillotined by order of Robespierre, in 1794.

HEIDEGGER, John Henry, an eminent protestant divine, professor at Heidelberg, at Steinfurt and at Zurich, where he died in 1698.

HEIDEGGER, John James, born in Switzerland, in 1661, and famous for his humour and his ugliness. His judgement and taste in operatic amusements gained him the favour of George II. and his court, and acquired him the chief management of the Opera-house in the Haymarket. He also improved another species of diversion, not less agreeable to the king, which was the masquerades; and over these he always presided at the king's theatre. He was likewise appointed master of the revels. From these several employments, he gained a regular income, amounting in some years to 5000*l.*, which he spent with much liberality; and his charity was boundless; it being well attested, that after a successful masquerade he has been known to give away several hundred pounds at a time. He is supposed to have been the most hard-fa-tured man in the kingdom, and innumerable jests are related of him; but being good humoured, and always the first to joke on his own ugliness, he bantered every shaft of ridicule; he died in 1649.

HELL, Daniel Van, a painter, of Brussels, born about 1704.

HELL, John Baptist, brother of the preceding, was an eminent historical and portrait painter; he was born in 1609. Leonard Van, another brother, was also distinguished as a painter, particularly of flowers and insects.

HEIN, Peter, a Dutchman, who, from obscurity, rose to the command of the fleets of his country, was killed in a battle with the French, in 1629.

HEINECCIUS, John Gottlieb, a German law professor and writer, born at Eisenberg, in 1681, died 1741.

HEINECKEN, Christian Henry, an extraordinary youth, born at Lubeck, in 1721. He spoke his maternal tongue fluently at ten months; at one year old he knew the principal events of the Pentateuch; in two months more he was master of the entire histories of the Old and New Testament; at two years and a half he answered the principal questions in geography, and in ancient and modern history. He spoke Latin and French, German and Low Dutch, with great facility, before the commencement of his fourth year, 1725, in which he died. His constitution was so delicate, that he was not weaned till a few months before his death.

HEINSIUS, Daniel, professor of politics and history, at Leyden, and librarian of the university there, born at Ghent, in 1580, died 1655. He distinguished himself as a critic by his labours upon Theocritus, Hesiod, Seneca, Horace, Theophrastus, Ovid, Livy, Terence, Horace &c., and wrote poems in various languages, which have been often printed, and always admired.

HEINSIUS, N., grand pensionary of Holland, was an able statesman, and a man of strong powers of mind. He died at the Hague, in 1720.

HEINSIUS, Nicholas, the son of Daniel, born at Leyden, in 1620, became as great a Latin poet, and a greater critic, than his father, and died in 1681.

HEISS, N., a German historical writer, of the 17th century.

HEISTER, Lawrence, a physician, surgeon, and naturalist, born at Frankfort, in 1653, died in 1752. His principal works are, "Compendium Anatomicum," and "Institutions of Surgery."

HELE, Thomas, an Englishman, who, after serving in the army, settled at Paris, where he became an esteemed dramatic writer, in the French language; he died in 1780.

HELENA, St., the mother of Constantine the Great, was distinguished for her piety and Christian charity, and as the founder of several churches. She died in 323.

HELLODORUS, of Phoenicia, flourished about 338. In his youth he wrote a romance, by which he is now better known than by his bishopric of Tricca, to which he was afterwards promoted. It is entitled, "Ethiopia," and relates the amours of Theagenes and Chariclea. The learned Heurtius is of opinion, that Heliodorus was among the romance writers, what Homer was among the poets.

HELIOGABALUS, Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, emperor of Rome. He was cruel, vindictive, and licentious, and was assassinated A. D. 218.

HELLENICUS, a Greek historian, who died 411 B. C.

HELLIOT, John, a French philosophical and chymical writer, and a distinguished chymist, died in 1766.

HELMBREKER, Theodore, a Dutch landscape and historical painter, of Haerlem, died at Rome, in 1694.

HELMONT, John Baptist Van, commonly called Van Helmont, a man of great learning, especially in physic and natural philosophy, born at Brussels, in 1577. By his skill in physic he performed such unexpected cures, that he was put into the inquisition, as a man that did things beyond the reach of nature. He cleared himself before the inquisitors; but, to be more at liberty, retired afterwards into Holland, where he died, in 1644.

HELMONT, Matthew Van, a painter, of Antwerp, died in 1726.

HELOISE, the concubine, and afterwards the wife, of Peter Abelard; a nun, and afterwards prioress of Argenteuil; and, lastly, abbess of the Paraclete. She was born about the beginning of the 12th century, and died in 1163. See ABELARD.

HELISHAM, Richard, M. D., professor of physic and natural philosophy in Dublin college; and author of lectures on natural philosophy.

HELSE, Bartholomew Van der, a painter, of Haerlem, died in 1670.

HELVETIUS, John Claude, son of the preceding, was physician to the queen of France, counsellor of state, &c.; he died in 1755.

HELVETIUS, Claude Adrian, who wrote the celebrated book "De l'Esprit," On the Mind, and "De l'Homme," On Man, and whom Voltaire calls "a true philosopher," was born at Paris, in 1715, and died in 1771. His hypothesis is materialism in the worst sense.

HELVICUS, Christopher, professor of Greek and eastern languages, and of divinity at Giessen university; he died in 1517.

HELVIOT, Peter a native of England, of the order of Franciscans, author of a history of the monastic orders, &c., died in 1716.

HEMELAR, John, a Flemish poet and orator, and author of some extremely useful commentaries upon the medals of the Roman emperors, from the time of Julius Caesar down to Justinian, was born at the Hague, and died in 1640.

HEMMERLIN, or MALLEOLUS, Felix, a canon, and writer of Zurich, in 1428.

HEMMINGFORD, Walter de, canon of Gisborough abbey, England, and author of a history of England, from 1066 to 1303; he died in 1347.

HEMSKIRK, Martin, an eminent painter, born at a village of his name in Holland, in 1498. Most of his works were engraved; but it is visible that he did not understand the chiaro oscuro, and that his manner of designing was dry. He has, however, been called the Raphael of Holland, and died in 1574.

HEMSKIRK, Egbert, a Dutch painter. HEMSKIRK, Egbert, the Younger, a son of the preceding, was also an eminent Dutch painter. He died in 1704.

HEMSTERHUIS, or HEMSTERHUISIUS, Tiberius, a learned critic, born at Groningen, was professor of mathematics and philosophy, at Amsterdam, and of Greek and history, at Leyden; he died in 1705.

HENSTERIUSIUS, Francis, grandson of the preceding, was in the service of the United States. He was author of "Œuvres Philosophiques," and other works, and died in 1790.

HENAUT, John d', a Frenchman, who acquired considerable celebrity as a poet, died in 1682.

HENAUT, Charles John Francis, born at Paris, in 1685, was admitted counsellor in parliament, in 1705, with a dispensation on account of his age, and, in 1710, was made president of the first chamber of inquests. He spent several years in making himself master of the Roman law, the ordinances of the French kings, their customs, and public law; but history was his favourite study; and he is deservedly accounted the first framer of chronological abridgments; in which, without stopping at detached facts, he attends only to those which form a chain of events that perfect or alter the government and character of a country, and traces only the springs which exalt or humble a nation, extending or contracting the space that it occupies in the world. The first edition of his work, the result of forty years' reading, appeared in 1744, under the auspices of the chancellor Draguesseau, with the modest title of, "An Essay." The success it met with surprised him. He made continued improvements in it, and it has gone through nine editions, and been translated into Italian, English, and German, and even into Chinese. He wrote, in early life, three tragedies, which met with indifferent success; but afterwards he composed three delightful comedies. Henaut died in 1771.

HENDERSON, Alexander, a leader of the presbyterian party in Scotland, and one of the divines sent to meet Charles I. at Newcastle. He died about 1646.

HENDERSON, John, of Covent Garden theatre, an admirable actor in various characters of the immortal Shakespeare. His private life was exceedingly amiable. He was born in London, in 1747, and died in 1783.

HENDERSON, John, B. A., of Pembroke college, Oxford, born in Ireland, in 1757, displayed, at a very early period of life, an uncommon thirst after knowledge, which he gratified with unremitting ardour. The favourite subjects of his studies were metaphysics, divinity, morality, chymistry, and medicine; and the virtues of his heart were superior even to the astonishing powers of his understanding. He died, however, the victim of intemperance, in 1788.

HENGEST, a Saxon chief, who went to England to assist in repelling the Picts, and received the kingdom of Kent as a reward for his services; he died in 489.

HENLEY, Anthony, a member of the British parliament, distinguished for his eloquence, the wit and ease of his writings, the elegance of his manners, and his patronage of literary men; he died in 1711.

HENLEY, John, better known by the appellation of "Orator Henley," was born at Melton Mowbray, in Leicestershire, in 1692. He published several pieces; as a translation of Pliny's "Epistles," of several works of Abbe Vertot, of Montfaucon's "Italian Travels," in folio, and many other lucubrations; but his celebrity he acquired as a popular orator near Clare Market. He preached on Sundays upon theological matters, and on Wednesdays upon all other sciences. He struck medals, which he dispersed as ticks to his subscribers, a star rising to the middle, with this motto, "ad summa," and below, "Inveniam viam, aut faciam." Each auditor paid one shilling. He was also author of a weekly paper, called "The Hyp Doctor," for which he had 100*l.* a year given him. This singular character died in 1756.

HENLEY, Samuel, D. D., professor of moral philosophy in the college of Williamsburg, Virginia, afterwards head of the East India college, at Hertford, England; he died in 1816.

HENNINGS, Jerome, a German historian, in the 16th century.

HENNUYER, John, a bishop of Lisieux, in France, justly memorable for his humanity at the time of the dreadful massacre of St. Bartholomew, died in 1577.

HENRION, Nicholas, a native of Troyes, was engaged, at the time of his death, in 1720, in writing a work on weights and measures.

HENRY, of Huntingdon, an early English historian, died in 1168.

HENRY I., surnamed the Fowler, emperor of Germany, was elected to the throne in 919. He was a wise and politic prince, was successful in his wars, strengthened his empire, and promoted harmony and union, among the German princes. He died in 936.

HENRY II., surnamed the lame, was grandson of the preceding, and ascended the imperial throne in 1002. He died in 1024.

HENRY III., emperor of Germany, succeeded to the throne in 1039. He made war with several of the popes, expelled three of them, and was crowned by a fourth. He died in 1055.

HENRY IV., emperor of Germany, succeeded his father, Henry III., when only six years old; during his minority, the kingdom was governed by his mother. He was involved in wars with the popes, was dethroned by his children, and died in poverty and obscurity, in 1105.

HENRY V., son of the preceding, deposed his father in 1106. He died in 1125, leaving the character of an unnatural son, an impious hypocrite, and an insidious and imperious master.

HENRY VI., ascended the throne of the empire in 1190. He detained Richard of England, who had fallen into his hands, a prisoner, and obtained a large sum, as his ransom. He died in 1197.

HENRY VII., was elected emperor in 1308. He entered Rome, sword in hand, and was crowned by the pope, 1312, and died the following year.

HENRY, Raspon, margrave of Thuringia, was raised to the imperial throne in 1246, but died the following year.

HENRY I., king of France, succeeded to the throne in 1031. He died in 1060, with the reputation of a brave warrior, and a benevolent inan.

HENRY II., succeeded his father, Francis I., as king of France, in 1547. He was engaged in wars with England, and with Charles V., of Spain, and supported the glory of his arms, by his bravery and success. He died of a wound, accidentally inflicted at a tournament, in 1559.

HENRY III., was chosen king of Poland, but quitted that throne, to succeed his brother, as king of France. After a reign, distracted by the quarrels between the protestants and catholics, he was killed by a priest, named Clement, in 1589. In his person, the house of Valois became extinct.

HENRY IV., king of France, was born at Pau, in 1553. His right to the throne was disputed, because he was a protestant; but, after the massacre of St. Bartholomew, he signalized himself against the leaguers; and Henry III. dying, he succeeded him, in opposition to cardinal de Bourbon. In 1589, with 4000 men, he defeated 30,000, commanded by the duke of Mayenne, &c. He afterwards embraced the catholic religion, and was crowned. He also defeated 18,000 Spaniards, in Burgundy, and reduced the leaguers to their duty, whom he pardoned. A young scholar, John Chastel, would have struck him in the mouth with a knife, but missed him; the king said, "And is it so, that the jesuits must be condemned by my mouth?" and thereupon they were banished. A protestant minister told him, "He denied God with his mouth, and therefore he was struck there; but if he denied him in his heart, the next stroke might be thereabouts too." He concluded a peace with Spain, and an agreement with Savoy, in 1601; and was stabbed with a knife, by Ravillac, in his coach, at Paris, May 14, 1610. Above fifty historians, and five hundred panegyrists, poets, and orators, have spoken in his praise. But the "Henriade" of Voltaire is the most likely to immortalize him.

HENRY I., king of England, and duke of Normandy, was the third son of William the Conqueror, and ascended the throne in 1100. Although absolute in power, he reigned with wisdom, opposed the encroachments of the church of Rome, abolished the curfew, regulated the weights and measures of his kingdom, and laid the foundation of that liberty, of which Englishmen are so justly proud. He died in 1185.

HENRY II., succeeded to the throne of England in 1154. He added Brittany and Ireland to his dominions, attempted to repress the ambition of the clergy, and died of a broken heart, at the rebellion of his children, in 1189. His reign was marked with wisdom, valour, and popularity, and was calculated to advance the welfare of his people.

HENRY III., succeeded John, as king of England, in 1216. He was defeated in his wars abroad, and imprisoned by his barons at home, and died after a weak and disgraceful reign, in 1272.

HENRY IV., third son of Henry III., usurped the throne in 1399, and by that act, gave rise to the long wars between the houses of York and Lancaster; he died in 1413.

HENRY V., son of Henry IV., on ascending the throne, abandoned his dissolute associates, and his equally dissolute habits, and became a wise and virtuous monarch. He formed the design of conquering France, fought the battle of Agincourt, married Catherine, and was declared heir to the throne of that kingdom; but died suddenly in the midst of his successes, in 1422.

HENRY VI., son of Henry V., succeeded his father on the English throne, when only ten months old, and his grandfather Charles VI. as sovereign of France. He was crowned king of France at Paris; but his claims were opposed by the duke of Orleans, under the name of Charles VII. who recovered the French dominions, and expelled the English. He was afterwards deposed at home by the duke of York, and committed a prisoner to the tower, where he was murdered, in 1471.

HENRY VII., opposed and defeated Richard III. and was crowned king of England, on the field, after the battle of Bosworth, in 1485. He was devoted to the happiness of his subjects, and contributed materially to the establishment of commerce, the encouragement of industry, and to the protection of the arts. He checked the encroachments of the nobles, made salutary laws, and died with the reputation of a great and good king, in 1509. By his marriage, the rival claims of the houses of York and Lancaster, were united and settled.

HENRY VIII., son and successor to Henry VII., ascended the throne, in 1509, aged 18. Although for a short time popular, he soon, by his arbitrary and capricious conduct, proved himself a tyrant. He obtained the title of defender of the faith, from the pope, by opposing Luther. He afterwards quarrelled with the pope, who refused to divorce him from his wife, and renounced his authority, and declared himself head of the church, thus introducing the reformation into England. He was six times married; two of his wives perished on the scaffold, and two others were divorced. Although benefits resulted from his reign, he must be detested for his tyranny and oppression; he died in 1547.

HENRY, prince of Wales, oldest son of James I., died in 1612, aged 18, lamented by the nation, who viewed in him their future friend and common benefactor.

HENRY, of Huntingdon, an early English historian, died in 1168.

HENRY, Matthew, an eminent dissenting teacher, and voluminous writer, born in 1662, died in 1714. His best known work is his "Exposition of the Bible."

HENRY, Dr. ROBERT, minister of one of the churches of Edinburgh, and author of the "History of Great Britain," in 5 vols., born at St. Ninian's, in 1718, died in 1790. A posthumous volume, being the 6th, has been published since his death.

HENRY, Philip, an English dissenting clergyman, eminent for his piety, benevolence, and moderation, died about 1670.

HENRY, David, a printer, was for more than half a century, an active manager of the Gentleman's Magazine, he was born in the neighbourhood of Aberdeen, in 1710. A concurrence of circumstances placing him within the notice of Mr. Edward Cave, of St. Gate, he at length became related to his patron, by marrying his sister, in 1736. Those useful and popular publications which describe the curiosities in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Church, the Tower of London, &c. printed for Newbury, were originally compiled by Mr. Henry, and were improved by him through many successive impressions. He published in 1772, "The Complete English Farmer; or, A Practical System of Husbandry, in which is comprised a general View of the whole Art of Husbandry;" from this he withheld his name, as he did also from "A Historical Account of all the Voyages round the World, performed by English Navigators," in 4 vols., in 1774; to which, in 1775, Mr. H. added a 5th, containing Captain Cook's Voyage in the Resolution; and in 1786, a 6th, containing the last Voyage of Captain Cook; introduced by an admirable summary of all the voyages undertaken for discovery only, in the Southern and Northern hemispheres, and in the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. He died in 1792.

HENRY, Patrick, a native of Virginia, distinguished for his commanding eloquence, was the first man who proposed to the colonies, hostile measures against Great Britain. He was the first governor of Virginia, after the declaration of Independence, and a member of the old congress; he declined the appointments of secretary of state, under president Washington, and of minister to France, under his successor; he died in 1799.

HENRY, John, a member of congress, from Maryland, in 1778, afterwards elected a senator of the United States, and in 1797, governor of the state of Maryland; he died in 1798.

HERACLITUS, a celebrated Ephesian philosopher, who is said to have continually bewailed the wicked lives of men, and as often as he came among them to have fallen a weeping; contrary to Democritus, who made the follies of mankind the subject of laughter; he flourished about 500 B. C.

HERBERT, Mary, countess of Pembroke, a great encourager of letters, and herself an ingenious poet. Her character may be highly judged of, from the epitaph written by Beaumont, viz.

"Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother,
Death! ere thou hast kill'd another,
Fair, and good, and learn'd as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee."

HERBERT, Edward, lord Herbert of Cheshire, in Shropshire, an eminent English statesman, and writer on history, philosophy, and criticism, born in Montgomery Castle, in 1581, died in 1633.

HERBERT, George, brother of the preceding, a divine and poet, of whose judgment the great Lord Bacon, had so high an opinion, that he would not suffer his works to be printed till they had passed Herbert's examination; he was born in 1593, and wrote a volume of devout poems called "The Temple." He also wrote a valuable work in prose, entitled "A Priest to the Temple;" he died about 1635.

HERBERT, William, earl of Pembroke, born in Wiltshire, in 1580, died of apoplexy, in 1630. He was chancellor of Oxford, and made the university a present of a large collection of manuscripts. Pembroke College was so named in honour of him.

HIEROCLES, an enemy and persecutor of the Christians in the 4th century.

HIEROCLES, a Platonic philosopher of the 5th century, taught at Alexandria with great reputation, and wrote seven books upon Providence and Fate. These books, however, are lost, and all we know of them is by the extracts which are to be met with in Photius. Hierocles wrote also "A Commentary upon the Golden Verses of Pythagoras," which is still extant, and has several times been published with those verses.

HIERONIMUS, or, as he is commonly called, Jerome, a very celebrated father of the church, born on the confines of Dalmatia, about 329, died in 420.

HIFFERNAN, Paul, a native of Ireland, but chiefly resident in England, and known as a dramatic writer, translator, and compiler, was born in Dublin, in 1719, and died in 1777. Some very curious and entertaining memoirs of this singular character, will be found in the European Magazine, vol. XXV.

HIGDEN, Ralph, an early English chronicler - died in 1363.

HIGDEN, Dr. William, an eminent political writer in the time of queen Anne, died in 1715.

HIGGENS, or HIGINS, John, an English divine, who instructed youth, and wrote several school-books; he died after 1604.

HIGGINSON, Francis, first minister of Salem, Massachusetts, arrived from England in 1629, and died in 1630.

HIGGINSON, John, son of the preceding, much respected; died in 1708, aged 93; he was a minister 72 years.

HIGGONS, Sir Thomas, a writer, and an ambassador from England to Saxony and Vienna; he was knighted for his services, and died in 1691.

HIGGONS, Bevil, a dramatic poet and historian; died in 1738.

HIGHMORE, Nathaniel, an eminent English anatomist; he died in 1684.

HIGHMORE, Joseph, an eminent English painter, born in London, in 1692, died in 1780. Mr. Highmore was also a respectable writer, and, among several other things, published in 1766, two small volumes of "Essays, Moral, Religious, and Miscellaneous."

HILARION, a native of Gaza, founded a monastic order in Palestine, and died in 371.

HILARIUS, an ancient father of the Christian church, and bishop of Poitiers, who flourished in the 4th century.

HILARIUSE, Joseph, eminent as a medalist and antiquary, at Vienna; died in 1798.

HILARY, St. a native of Poitiers, in France, bishop of that town, in 355; was banished by Constantius, into Phrygia; and died in 367.

HILDEBERT, bishop of Mans, and then archbishop of Tours, distinguished for piety, learning, &c.; died in the 12th century.

HILDESLEY, Mark, an English bishop much esteemed; he died in 1772.

HILL, Aaron, a celebrated poet and miscellaneous writer, born in London, in 1685, died in 1750. His principal works are, "Elfrid, or The Fair Inconstant," a tragedy; "Rinaldo," an opera; another tragedy, called, "The Fatal Vision, or, The Fall of Siam;" and two tragedies, called, "Merope," and "Zara;" which were brought upon the stage in Drury-lane, by Garrick.

HILL, Joseph, an English puritan divine, who fled to Holland; author of an improved edition of "Schrevelii Lexicon," &c.; he died in 1707.

HILL, Sir John, an English writer, born about 1716, died in 1775. He was bred an apothecary, and set up in St. Martin's lane, Westminster; but, marrying early, and without a fortune, he was obliged to look round for other resources than his profession. Being possessed of quick natural parts, he soon made himself acquainted with the theoretical as well as practical parts of botany; and being recommended to the duke of Richmond and lord Petre, he, under their patronage, executed a scheme of travelling over several parts of England, to gather certain of the most rare and uncommon plants, which he afterwards published by subscription. About 1746, he translated from the Greek a small tract, written by Theophrastus, "On Gems;" and this being well executed, procured him friends, reputation, and money. Encouraged by this, he engaged in works of greater extent and importance. The first that he undertook was, "A General Natural History," 3 vols. folio. He next engaged, in conjunction with George Lewis Scott, Esq., for a "Supplement to Chamber's Dictionary." He at the same time started the "British Magazine;" and, when engaged in a number of these and other works, some of which seemed to require a man's whole attention, carried on a daily essay, under the title of "The Inspector." He next applied himself to the preparation of certain simple medicines: namely, the "Essence of Water-dock, Tincture of Valerian, Pectoral Balsam of Honey, and Tincture of Bardana." The well-known simplicity of these medicines made the public judge favourably of their effects, inasmuch that they had a rapid sale. Soon after the publication of the first of these medicines, he obtained the patronage of the earl of Bute; under which he published a very pompous and voluminous botanical work, entitled, "A System of Botany;" and having, a year or two before his death, presented an elegant set of his botanical works to the king of Sweden, that monarch invested him with one of the orders of his court.

HILL, Robert, a man remarkable for his perseverance and talent in learning many languages by the aid of books alone, and that under every disadvantage of laborious occupation (as a tailor) and extreme poverty; he was born at Miswell, near Tring, in Hertfordshire, in 1699, and died in 1777.

HILL, William, an English scholar, who prepared an edition of Dionysius Periegetis; he died in 1667.

HILL, George, an eminent clergyman, of Scotland, professor of Greek, and afterwards of divinity at the college of St. Salvador, principal of St. Mary's College, and chaplain to the king; he died in 1820.

HILL, Thomas Ford, an eminent English antiquary and philologist, died Sept., 1795.

HILLEL, the Elder, a Jewish doctor, of the Mishna, born about 30 B. C., he reduced the Jewish traditions into six treatises.

HILLEL, the prince, great grandson of Judas Hakkadosh, was one of the writers of the Gemara; he flourished in the middle of the 4th century.

HILLIARD, Nicholas, limner to queen Elizabeth, whose picture he drew several times, was born at Exeter, in 1547, died in 1619. He imitated the style of Holbein; and Isaac Oliver was his pupil. Donne has celebrated this painter in a poem, called, "The Storm;" where he says,

"A hand, an eye,
By Hilliard drawn, is worth a history."

HILLIARD, Timothy, minister of Cambridge, Mass., died in 1790, much respected for his talents and qualifications.

HIMERIUS, a Greek grammarian, who kept a school at Athens, in the time of Julian.

HINCKLEY, John, an English divine, who published some works; he died in 1691.

HINCMAR, or HINCMARUS, archbishop of Rheims, a zealous supporter of the Gallican church; he died in 882.

HIPPARCHIA, a celebrated lady who flourished in the time of Alexander. She addicted herself to philosophy, and wrote some things which have not been transmitted down to us; among which were "Tragedies; Philosophical Hypotheses, or Suppositions; some Reasonings and Questions proposed to Theodorus, surnamed the Atheist," &c.

HIPPARCHUS, a great astronomer, born at Nice, in Bithynia, flourished between 160 and 125 B. C. He is reckoned to have been the first who from vague and scattered observations reduced astronomy into a science, and prosecuted the study of it systematically.

HIPPARCHUS, son of Pisistratus, was slain by Harmodius and Aristogiton, 528 B. C.

HIPPOCRATES, the father of physic and prince of physicians, born in the island of Cos, in the 80th Olympiad, flourished at the time of the Peloponnesian war. He was the first man that we know of, who laid down precepts concerning physic. On account of his wonderful skill and foresight in this art, he passed with the Grecians for a god, and after his death had divine honours paid him. He died at about 90 years of age. His works have often been printed.

HIPPONAX, a satirist of Ephesus, as remarkable for his wit as the deformity of his person. Bupalus and Anthermus, two eminent statuaries, caricatured him in a statue: on which he wrote such bitter invectives against them, that they both despatched themselves; or (as others say) left Ephesus on the occasion.

"Acer hostis Bupalus," says Horace.

In the Anthologia, there are some epigrams on Hipponax.

HIRAM, king of Tyre; he furnished Solomon with materials for the temple, and died 1000 B. C.

HIRE, Laurence de la, a much admired French painter, died in 1656.

HIRE, Philip de la, a celebrated French mathematician, son of Laurence; his works are numerous and valuable; he died in 1718.

HIRE, Philip de la, brother of the preceding, a painter, whose portraits are admired; he died in 1719.

HISCAM, or HISIAM, 15th caliph of the Omniads, ascended the throne in 723, and died in 743.

HITCHCOCK, Enos, D. D., minister of Providence, Rhode Island, was sometime chaplain in the American army; he died in 1803.

HOADLY, John, D. D., bishop of Leighlin and Ferns, archbishop of Dublin and of Armagh, and primate of Ireland; he died in 1746.

HOADLY, Benjamin, bishop of Winchester, born at Westerham, in Kent, 1676, died in 1761. Preaching against what he considered as the inveterate errors of the clergy, among other discourses one was upon these words, "My kingdom is not of this world;" which producing the famous Bangorian controversy, as it was called, employed the press for many years. Hoadly contended, that the clergy had no pretensions to any temporal jurisdictions; but that temporal princes had a right to govern in ecclesiastical politics; and by this means he drew on himself the indignation of almost all the clergy. These disputes, however, have long since subsided.

HOADLY, Dr. Benjamin, eldest son of the bishop of Winchester, born in London, in 1705-6. He was appointed physician to his majesty's household, in 1742, and to that of the prince of Wales, in 1746. This, being at a time when the families were not upon the best terms, is a proof that Dr. Hoadly was a most unexceptionable man; and he is said to have filled the post with singular honour. He published some medical and philosophical works, and "The Suspicious Husband," a comedy, which, whenever represented, continually affords fresh pleasure to the audience; he died in 1757.

HOADLY, Dr. John. This gentleman, youngest son of the bishop of Winchester, was born in London, in 1711, and died in 1776; and with him the name of Hoadly became extinct. He revised Lillo's "Arden of Feversham," wrote the 5th act of Miller's "Mahomet," and left behind him several dramatic works in MSS.; among the rest, "The Housekeeper," a farce, on the plan of High Life below Stairs, and a tragedy on the story of lord Cronwell.

HOAR, Leonard, M. D., president of Harvard College, respected as a scholar and a Christian; he died in 1675.

HOBART, Peter, first minister of Hingham, Mass., died in 1679.

HOBART, Nehemiah, son of Peter, and minister of Newton; he was humble, pious, and learned, and died in 1712.

HOBART, Noah, minister of Fairfield, Conn., was a man of great talents and extensive acquirements; he wrote in favour of presbyterian ordination, and died in 1773.

HOBART, John Sloss, judge of the district court of New York, and a senator of the United States; he died in 1805.

HOBBS, Thomas, born at Malmsbury, in 1588, died in 1679. He published, among other things, an "English translation of Thucydides," "Human Nature," and a treatise "De Corpore Politico, or, of the Elements of the Law." This latter piece was presented to Gassendus, and read by him a few months before his death; who is said first to have kissed it, and then to have delivered his opinion of it in these words: "This treatise is indeed small in bulk, but, in my judgment, the very marrow of science." In 1651, he published his religious, political, and moral principles in a complete system, which he called the "Leviathan;" and caused a copy of it, very fairly written on vellum, to be presented to Charles II. He also, in his 88th year, published in English verse, the whole "Iliad" and "Odyssey" of Homer; but his poetry is below criticism, and has long been exploded.

There have been few persons whose writings have had a more pernicious influence in spreading irreligion and infidelity than Hobbes; and yet none of his treatises are directly levelled against revealed religion.

HOBBIMA, Minderhout, an eminent Dutch landscape painter, born at Antwerp, about 1611.

HOCHE, Lazarus, a native of Versailles, distinguished as a brave and intrepid general in the French army, during the revolution; he died in Austria, in 1797.

HOCHESTER, Andrew Adam, a German divine, historian, and political writer, born at Tubingen, in 1668, died in 1717.

HODGES, Nathaniel, an eminent English physician, settled in London, where he died in 1684. He wrote an account of the plague in London, and other medical works.

HODY, Humphrey, an eminent English divine, and controversial writer, regius professor of Greek at Oxford, and an archdeacon; he died in 1706.

HOE, Matthias de Hoeneegg, a distinguished German Lutheran divine, and preacher to the elector of Saxony; he died in 1645.

HOECK, Robert Van, an eminent painter, of Antwerp, died in the middle of the 17th century.

HOECK, John Van, a distinguished portrait and historical painter, born at Antwerp, in 1600, and died in 1650.

HOEL, Gerard, a distinguished historical and landscape painter, of Utrecht, died in 1733.

HOELTZLINUS, Jeremias, a learned philologist, of Nuremberg, settled at Leyden, where he died in 1641.

HOESCHLIUS, David, a learned and indefatigable scholar, of Augsburg, and librarian and teacher in the college there, died in 1617.

HOFFMAN, Daniel, an eminent Lutheran divine, and professor, at Helmstadt, toward the close of the 16th century.

HOFFMAN, Maurice, a German medical, anatomical, and botanical writer, born at Braudenburg, in 1621, and died in 1698.

HOFFMAN, Joho Maurice, son of the preceding, a physician, and medical writer, born at Altdorf, in 1556, and died in 1727.

HOFFMAN, John James, the laborious compiler of a "Lexicon Universale Historico-Geographico-Poetico-Philosophico-Politico-Philologicum," 2 vols. folio, Geneva, 1877. It has been since enlarged and published in 4 vols. folio, and finds a place in every learned library. He was born at Basle, in 1635, and died there in 1706.

HOFFMAN, Gasper, professor of physic, at Altdorf, and author of some medical works; he died in 1649.

HOFFMAN, Frederic, born at Hall, near Magdeburg, in 1660, was professor of physic at that place, and died in 1742. His works were collected at Geneva, in six large folios, 1748, and 1754; and he has deservedly been reckoned among the best writers on physic.

HOGARTH, William, a truly great and original genius in painting and engraving, was born in 1697, in the parish of St. Martin, Ludgate, and bound apprentice to Mr. Ellis Gable, a silversmith of eminence, in Cranbourn street, Leicester Fields. In this profession it is not unusual to bind apprentices to the single branch of engraving arms and cyphers on every species of metal; and in that particular department, young Hogarth was placed. He began business on his own account about 1730; and his first employment seems to have been the engraving of arms and shop-bills. The next step was to design and furnish plates for book sellers; of which, those best known are 17 for a duodecimo edition of "Hudibras," (with Butler's head,) in 1726. The first piece in which he distinguished himself as a painter, was a representation of Waustead assembly, the portraits from life, without burlesque, and the colouring rather better than some of his later and more highly finished performances. It was Hogarth's custom to sketch out on the spot any remarkable face which particularly struck him, and of which he wished to preserve the remembrance; and this he frequently did with a pencil on his nail. In 1730, Mr. Hogarth married the only daughter of Sir James Thornhill; and soon after, having summer lodgings at South Lambeth, and being intimate with Mr. Tyers, he contributed to the improvement of the Spring Gardens, at Vauxhall, by the hint of embellishing them with painting, some of which were the productions of his own truly comic pencil. In 1733 his genius became conspicuously known. His "Harlot's Progress" introduced him to the notice of the great, and Hogarth rose completely into fame. Soon after the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, he went over to France, and was taken into custody at Calais, while he was drawing the gate of the town; a circumstance which he has recorded in his picture, entitled "O the Roast Beef of Old England!" published 1749. He was actually carried before the governor as a spy, and after a strict examination, committed a prisoner to Grand sire, his landlord, on his promising that Hogarth should not go out of his house, till he was to embark for England. In 1753, he appeared to the world in the character of an author, and published a 4to volume, entitled "The Analysis of Beauty, written with a view of fixing the fluctuating Ideas of Taste." In this performance, he shows, by a variety of examples, that a curve is the line of beauty, and that round swelling figures are most pleasing to the eye; and the truth of his opinion has been countenanced by subsequent writers on the subject. Hogarth was one of the most absent of men. Soon after he set up his carriage he had occasion to pay a visit to the lord-mayor, (Mr. Beckford.) When he went, the weather was fine; but business detained him till a violent shower of rain came on. He was let out of the mansion-house by a different door from that at which he entered; and, seeing the rain, began immediately to call for a hackney-coach. Not one was to be met with on any of the neighbouring stands; and our artist sallied forth to brave the storm, and actually reached Leicester Fields without bestowing a thought on his own carriage, till Mrs. Hogarth, (surprised to see him so wet and splashed) asked him where he had left it. The last memorable event in our artist's life, was his quarrel with Mr. Wilkes; in which, if Mr. Hogarth did not commence direct hostilities, he at least, obliquely gave the first offence, by an attack on the friends and party of that gentleman. Mr. Churchill, the poet, soon after published the "Epistle to William Hogarth," and took for the motto, "ut pictura poesis." Mr. Hogarth's revenge against the poet, terminated in vamping up an old print of a pug-dog and a bear, which he published under the title of "The Bruiser C. Churchill, (once the Rev.) in the character of a Russian Hercules," &c. At the time these hostilities were carrying on in a manner so violent and disgraceful to all the parties, Hogarth died, October 25, 1764.

HOLENLOHE, prince de, a distinguished general of the imperial army, in the wars against the French and Turks; he died in 1796.

HOLBACH, Paul Thiéri, baron de, an eminent mineralogist, and member of several of the academies of Europe; he died at Paris, in 1789.

HOLBEIN, John, better known by his German name, Hans Holbein, an admirable painter, born at Basil, in Switzerland, in 1488, died of the plague, in 1554. His most famous pictures are, Our Saviour's Passion, in the town-house, at Basil; and, in the fish-market of the same town, a Dance of Peasants, and Death's Dance; which are exceedingly striking to the connoisseur. Going to England Holbein was introduced by Sir Thomas More to Henry VIII., in this manner. Sir Thomas invited the king to an entertainment, and hung up all Holbein's pieces, disposed in the best order, and in the best light, in the great hall of his house. The king, upon his first entrance, was so charmed with the sight of them, that he asked "Whether such an artist were now alive, and to be had for money?" Upon which, Sir Thomas presented Holbein to the king, who immediately took him into his service, and brought him into great esteem with the nobility of the kingdom. Holbein had the same singularity which Pliny mentions of Turpilius, a Roman; namely, that of painting with his left hand.

HOLBERG, Louis de, a distinguished Danish writer, author of a history of Denmark, and other works, died in 1754.

HOLCROFT, Thomas, a miscellaneous, poetical, political, and dramatical writer, and novelist, was the son of a shoemaker, and born in 1744. He was bred to his father's trade, but quitted it for a time, and became jockey to the Hon. Mr. Vernon, at Newmarket races. He returned afterwards to shoemaking, at which he continued till he was about 25 years of age. Mr. Holcroft then became an actor, which profession he followed (not with the most flattering success) till after the production, in 1781, of his comedy, called Duplicity. He then withdrew from the stage as an actor, and for several years devoted his attention to dramatic and novel writing. His plays (of which the best is "The Road to Ruin") are enumerated in the Biographia Dramatica. Mr. Holcroft died in 1809.

HOLDEN, Henry, an excellent English commentator on the New Testament, and writer on Faith, died in 1662.

HOLDEN, Samuel, died in London, in 1740, and bequeathed 4,847*l.* in charity, for promoting the gospel, &c., in New England.

HOLDÉR, William, an ingenious English man, who, among many other works, published a book entitled "The Elements of Speech; an Essay of Inquiry into the natural production of Letters: with an Appendix concerning Persons that are Deaf and Dumb, 1669." He died in 1697.

HOLDSWORTH, Edward, born in 1688, died in 1747. He was the author of "Muscipula," a poem, esteemed a master-piece in its kind; and also of "Remarks and Dissertations on Virgil;" and Mr. Spence speaks of him to "Prolymetis," as one who understood Virgil in a more masterly manner than any person he ever knew.

HOLE, Richard, an English poet and divine, born at Exeter; he died in 1803.

HOLINSHEAD, Raphael, an English historian, and famous for the chronicles that go under his name, died in 1581. His "Chronicles" were first published in 1577, in 2 vols. folio; and then in 1587, in 3; the two first of which are generally bound together. The continuations from 1577, to 1587, were by Stow, Thim, Fleming, and others.

HOLL, Francis Xavier, a jesuit, professor of belles letters, and of ecclesiastical law, in several German universities; he died at Heidelberg, in 1784.

HOLLAND, Philemon, a very laborious translator, was born at Chelmsford, Essex, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge. He died in 1636, at the age of 85, having published translations of Livy, Pliny, Plutarch, Suetonius, Xenophon, and "Camden's Britannia;" to which last he made additions.

HOLLAR, Wentzel, or Wenceslaus, a most admired engraver of views and portraits, born at Prague, in Bohemia, in 1607, died in 1667.

HOLLIS, Denzil, lord, second son of the earl of Clare, an eminent English patriot, born in 1597, died in 1680. He nobly maintained and defended the rights and privileges of the house of commons, of which he was a most worthy member, against the arbitrary measures of Charles I. and his favourites, falsely styled "The King's Friends." His lordship was also a political writer.

HOLLIS, Thomas Felham, duke of Newcastle, was employed in several high offices during the reign of George II. He retired from the administration soon after the accession of George III., and died in 1768.

HOLLIS, Thomas, born in London, in 1720, died in 1774. He was possessed of a large fortune; more than half of which he devoted to charities, to the encouragement of genius, and to the support and defence of liberty. His studious hours were devoted to the search of noble authors hidden by the rust of time, and to do their virtues justice by brightening their actions for the review of the public. A new edition of "Toland's Life of Milton" was published under his direction, in 1761; and in 1763, he gave an accurate edition of Algernon Sidney's "Discourses on Government;" on which the pains and expense that he bestowed are almost incredible.

HOLLIS, Thomas, a benefactor of Harvard college, and founder of a professorship of mathematics and theology, in that seminary; he died in England, in 1731.

HOLMES, George, a distinguished English antiquary, employed to arrange the valuable papers in the Tower; he died in 1749.

HOLMES, Dr. Nathaniel, an English divine, eminent for his knowledge of the Hebrew languages; he died in 1678.

HOLMES, Robert, D. D., an English divine, successively canon of Salisbury and dean of Winchester, distinguished as a poet and scholar, and for his devotion to biblical criticism; he died at Oxford, in 1805.

HOLSTEN, Cornelius, an eminent painter, of Haarlem, who lived about the end of the 17th century.

HOLSTEINIUS, Lucas, a German commentator, on Greek and Latin authors, born at Hainburg, in 1596, and died in 1661.

HOLT, sir John, chief justice of the court of king's bench, in the reign of king William, was born in 1642, died in 1708. He published chief justice Kelynge's Reports, with annotations upon them, by himself; and his integrity and uprightness as a judge are celebrated by the author of the "Tattler," No. 14, under the character of Venus, the magistrate.

HOLT, John, an English miscellaneous writer, died near Liverpool, in 1801. At the time of his death he was engaged in writing a history of that city.

HOLWELL, John Zephaniah, a governor of Bengal, and one of the wretched prisoners confined in the Black Hole, in Calcutta, 20th June, 1756, wherein a great number of gentlemen were suffocated; but Mr. Holwell, with a few others, surviving, he published a "Narrative" of the dreadful affair. He also wrote a great number of tracts, chiefly on Indian affairs, and died, aged near 90, in 1798.

HOLYDA, Barten, an ingenious and learned English divine, poet and philosopher, born at Oxford, in 1593, died in 1661. He wrote "Technogamia, or the Marriage of the Arts," a comedy, acted by some Oxford scholars, at Woodstock, in 1621, before king James; and a "Survey of the World," in 10 books, a poem, in 1561; but the work that he is known and esteemed for now, is his "Translation of the Satires of Juvenal and Persius;" for though his poetry is but indifferent, yet his translation is generally allowed to be faithful, and his notes good.

HOLYOAKE, Francis, a learned Englishman, memorable for having made an "Etymological Dictionary of Latin Words," born in Warwickshire, in 1567, died in 1633.

HOLYOAKE, Thomas, an officer in the English army, afterwards a clergyman, and author of a Latin and English Dictionary; he died in 1675.

HOLYOAKE, Edward, president of Harvard college, died in 1767.

HOLYWOOD, John, an English mathematician, died at Paris, in 1256.

HOMBERG, William, a native of Batavia, in Java; he went to Europe, and settled at Paris, where he became a distinguished chymist, and physician to the duke of Orleans; he died in 1715.

HOME, David, a celebrated Scotch divine and writer, the time of his death is unknown.

HOME, Henry, lord Kaimes, one of the senators of the college of justice in Scotland, and eminent as a critical and philosophical writer, born in Scotland, in 1696, died in 1782. His principal works are, "Sketches of the History of Man," "Elements of Criticism," and "The Gentleman Farmer."

HOME, John, was born in the city of Ancrum, in Roxburghshire, in 1724, and died at Merchiston House, near Edinburgh, in 1808. Mr. Home was originally educated for the church of Scotland, inducted into a living in the Lothians, the duties of which he discharged with the greatest propriety. As soon, however, as it was known that he was the author of the excellent tragedy of "Douglas," he became very unpopular, from the puritanical spirit of the times, which rendered it criminal in the eyes of the multitude, that a clergyman should even read a play, far less be the author of one. On this, Mr. Home gave in his resignation, and contented himself with the income of a small paternal estate. He was always, as far as his means would admit, the friend and patron of merit; and under his fostering hand, many sparks of literary genius, that would otherwise have lain dormant, were brought to light. He was, in early life, a very kind patron to Macpherson, the translator of Ossian, who had afterwards an opportunity of manifesting his gratitude by a bequest of 2000*l.* Though Mr. Home wrote several tragedies besides "Douglas" some of which possess merit, none of them were successful on the stage.

HOMER, the most ancient of the Greek poets, was the father of poetry, as Herodotus was of history, and Hippocrates of physic. As much as he has celebrated the praises of others, he has been so very modest about himself, that we do not find the least mention of him throughout his poems: so that where he was born, who were his parents, what age he lived in, and almost every circumstance of his life, remain, at this day, in a great measure, if not wholly, unknown. The only incontestable works which Homer has left behind him are the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey." It was by these poems that all the wondrous of antiquity were formed. Hence the lawgivers, the founders of monarchies and commonwealths, took the model of their politics; hence the philosophers drew the first principles of morality which they taught the people; hence physicians have studied diseases and their cures; astronomers have learned the knowledge of the heavens, and geographers of the earth: kings and princes, the art to govern; and captains, to form a battle, to encamp an army, to besiege towns, to fight, and gain victories. "Homer (says Sir William Temple) was, without doubt, the most universal genius that has been known in the world, and Virgil the most accomplished. To the first must be allowed the most fertile invention, the richest vein, the most general knowledge, and the most lively expressions: to the last, the noblest ideas, the justest institution, the wisest conduct, and the choicest elocution. The colouring of both seems equal, and indeed in both is admirable. Homer had more fire and rapture, Virgil more light and sweetness; or, at least, the poetical fire was more raging in the one, but clearer in the other; which makes the first more amazing, and the latter more agreeable. In short, these two immortal poets must be allowed to have so much excelled in their kinds as to have exceeded all comparison, to have even extinguished emulation, and, in a manner, confined true poetry, not only to their two languages, but to their very persons." The first appearance of Homer's works in Greece, was about 120 years before Rome was built; that is, about 200 years after the supposed time of Homer. The Arundelian marbles give 907 years before Christ, as the period when he flourished.

HOMMEL, Charles Frederic, a voluminous writer, of Leipsic, died in 1781.

HOMMOND, Charles Francis P., an instructor of youth, at Paris, author of an Epitome Historiæ Sacræ, and "De viris Illustribus Urbis Romæ," &c., died in 1794.

HONDEKOETER, Gilles, a landscape and flower painter, at Utrecht, born in 1583.

HONDEKOETER, Gysbrecht, son of the preceding, was also a painter, and was born in 1613.

HONDEKOETER, Melchior, a landscape painter, of Utrecht, died in 1695.

HONDIUS, Abraham, an eminent painter, of Rotterdam, died in 1695.

HONDIUS, Jesse, an eminent selftaught engraver on copper and ivory, and a writer of distinction, in Flanders; he died in 1614.

HOOKER, John, an eminent English antiquary, born at Exeter, in 1524. He afterwards represented his native place in parliament, and died in 1601.

HOOKER, Richard, an eminent English divine, author of an excellent work, entitled "The Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity, in 8 books," was born in 1553, and died in 1600. Of Hooker and this work, pope Clement VIII. said, "This man indeed deserves the name of an author. His books will get reverence by age; for there are in them such seeds of eternity, that they shall continue till the last fire shall devour all learning."

HOOKER, Thomas, first minister of Cambridge, Mass., and one of the founders of Connecticut; he published several sermons, and died in 1647.

HOOKER, John, minister of Northampton, Mass., was able and faithful in his office; he died in 1777.

HOOLE, Charles, an English teacher and divine, prebendary of Lincoln cathedral; he died in 1663.

HOOLE, John, a poet and translator of considerable reputation, was born in London, 1727, and educated in Herefordshire, under Mr. James Eneatt, the publisher of Roger Ascham's works. In 1744, he was placed as a clerk in the India House, in which establishment he remained till the end of the year 1785, when he resigned his office of auditor of Indian accounts, and soon after retired to the neighbourhood of Dorking, in Surrey, where he died in 1803, having produced elegant translations of the works of Tasso, Ariosto, and Metastasio, and written three tragedies. He was a very amiable character, and greatly esteemed by Dr. Johnson.

HOOPER, or HOPEL, John, bishop of Gloucester, was born in Somersetshire, in 1495. In the persecution under Mary, refusing to recant his opinions, he was burned in the city of Gloucester, and suffered death with admirable constancy, in 1555.

HOOPER, George, D. D., a distinguished English prelate, bishop of St. Asaphs, and afterwards of Bath and Wells; he died in 1727.

HOOPER, William, a member of the continental congress, from North Carolina, and a signer of the declaration of Independence; he died in 1790.

HOPTON, Susanna, an English lady, author of "Daily Devotions" and other religious works; she died in 1709.

HORAPOLLO, or HORUS APOLLIO, a celebrated grammarian, of Egypt, flourished about A. D. 380. There are extant under his name two books "Concerning the Hieroglyphics of the Egyptians."

HORATHI, three Roman brothers, who fought and conquered the three Curiatii of Alba, 667 B. C.

HORATIUS, Cocles, a renowned Roman knight, who saved the city by his noble defence of a wooden bridge, attacked by Porsenna. While he and two associates opposed the enemy at the entrance, he desired his fellow-citizens to cut away the bridge behind him; this being executed, he fell into the Tyber; but, though wounded, and oppressed by heavy armour, he gained the shore. He flourished 500 B. C.

HORATIUS, Quintus Flaccus, or Horace, an ancient Roman lyric and satiric poet, who flourished in the age of Augustus, was born at Venusium, about 65 B. C. His poetical talents soon made him known to some of the greatest men in Rome. Virgil, as he has told us, was the first who recommended him to Mæcenas; and this celebrated patron of literature and learned men grew so fond of him, that he became a suitor for him to Augustus, and got his estate (which had been forfeited) to be restored. Augustus was highly taken with his great merit and address; admitted him to a close familiarity with him in his private hours, and afterwards made him no small offers of preferment. The poet had the greatness of mind to refuse them all; the life he loved best, and lived as much as he could, was the very reverse of a court life; a life of retirement and study, free from the noise and hurry of ambition. He died about 8 B. C.

HORMAN, William, a native of Salisbury, distinguished as a divine and as a botanist, died in 1535.

HORMISDAS, a pope of Rome, in 514, died in 523, and was afterwards canonized.

HORMISDAS II., succeeded his father as king of Persia, in 578. His subjects revolted under his general, Varanes, who defeated him, and deprived him of sight. He died in 590.

HORNE, George, bishop of Norwich, born at Otham, in Kent, in 1730, and died in 1792. This divine united, in a remarkable degree, depth of learning, brightness of imagination, sanctity of manners, and sweetness of temper. Four volumes of his incomparable "Sermons" are published. His "Commentary on the Psalms," in 2 vols. 4to, "will (as the writer of his epitaph expresses it) continue to be a companion to the closet, till the devotion of earth shall end in the hallelujahs of heaven." Dr. Horne also wrote a celebrated piece of irony, in reply to Adam Smith's Sketch of David Hume's Life.

HORNECK, Dr. Anthony, an eminent English divine, born in the Lower Palatinate, in 1641, died in 1696.

HORNER, Francis, an English lawyer, and a member of parliament, of some distinction, died in 1817.

HORNIUS, George, professor of history in the university of Leyden, died in 1670.

HORNSBY, Thomas, D. D., born in 1734, and died in 1810, at the Observatory, in the university of Oxford. He was Savilian professor of astronomy, professor of natural philosophy, reader in experimental philosophy, and librarian to the Radcliffe library; and his long and eminent services in the cause of science, and successful labours in completing the astronomical arrangements at the Observatory, will ever be remembered with gratitude by the university.

HORREBOW, Peter, professor of astronomy, mathematics, and philosophy, at Copenhagen, and a writer on the Copernican system; he died in 1764.

HORROX, Jeremiah, an English astronomer, memorable from being the first, from the beginning of the world, who had observed the transit of Venus over the sun's disk. He was born in 1619, and died in 1641.

HORSLEY, John, author of a very learned and excellent work, entitled, "Britannia Romana;" being an ample account of the vestiges of the Romans in Britain. He was born in Northumberland, and died in 1731.

HORSLEY, Samuel, bishop of St. Asaph, was born in the parish of St. Martin's in the Fields, where his father was clerk in orders, and was educated at Trinity hall, Cambridge. He became one of the most eminent men of his day, as a theologian, a mathematician, and a profound classic. He was many years rector of St. Mary's, Newington, the first parish to which he was ever promoted, and which preferment he held long after his episcopal elevation. His lordship's first seat on the right reeveid bench was in 1788, as bishop of St. David's. In 1793, he was translated to the see of Rochester, with which he held the deanery of Westminster; and, in 1802, elevated to the more lucrative bishopric of St. Asaph. No man of the age, perhaps, possessed more of what is generally understood by the idea of recondite learning, or was more profoundly versed in classical chronology. He edited and illustrated some of the most important of Sir Isaac Newton's works, in 5 vols. 4to, and was himself the author of several esteemed mathematical and theological productions. As a senator, he was deservedly considered in the first class; there were few important discussions in the house of lords, especially when the topics referred to the hierarchical establishments of England, the French revolution, or the African slave trade, (of which he was a systematic opponent,) in which his lordship did not participate. The reverend prelate was many years a leading member of the royal society; but withdrew from it, as has been said, in consequence of a certain high appointment taking place, of which he disapproved. His concluding words, on retiring, were, "I quit that temple where philosophy once presided, and where Newton was her officiating minister!" His lordship died at Brighton, Oct. 4, 1806.

HORSTIUS, James, a German physician, and professor of medicine in the university of Helmsstadt; he died in 1600.

HORSTIUS, Gregory, of such reputation in the practice of physic, that he was usually called the Æsculapius of Germany. He was born in Torgan, in 1578, and died in 1636.

HORTE, John, an English divine, bishop of Kilmore, and afterwards of Tuam, in Ireland; he died in 1751.

HORTENSIA, a celebrated Roman matron, who, when the senate laid a heavy tax on the women of Rome, pleaded with so much eloquence in behalf of her sex, that the tax was considerably diminished.

HORTENSIVS, Quintus, a celebrated Roman orator and poet, who, being eclipsed at the bar by Cicero, quitted it for a military life, and became military tribune, prætor, and consul. He died about 50 B. C.

HORTENSIUS, Lambert, a Dutch philologist, poet, and historian, a native of Utrecht; he died in 1577.

HORTENSIUS, Martin, an astronomer, of Delft; he died in 1639.

HOSEA, the first of the minor prophets, flourished under the reigns of Jeroboam and Uzziah.

HOSIUS, Stanislaus, a native of Poland, was secretary to the king of Poland, bishop of Cujav and of Warmia, and afterwards a cardinal. He died in 1579.

HOSKINS, John, an eminent English portrait painter, died in 1634.

HOSPINIAN, Rodolphus, a learned Swiss writer, who has done prodigious service to the protestant cause, born at Aildorf, in 1547, died in 1626. He wrote an excellent work of vast extent, called, "A History of the Errors of Popery."

HOSPITAL, William Francis Antony, marquis de l', a great mathematician, of France, born in 1651, died in 1704.

HOSPITAL, Michael de l', chancellor of France, to which office he was raised on the death of Henry II. in the midst of turbulence and faction. He displayed great abilities, and was distinguished for the firmness, integrity, and mildness of his administration; he died in 1573.

HOSSCH, Sidronius, a Flemish jesuit, author of some elegant Latin poems, &c., died in 1653.

HOSTE, Paul l', a French jesuit, professor of mathematics at Toulon, and a mathematical writer; he died in 1700.

HOSTUS, Matthew, a German antiquary, died in 1587.

HOTMAN, Francis, a learned French civilian, and commentator on Latin authors, born at Paris, in 1524, died in 1590.

HOTTINGER, John Henry, a native of Zurich, distinguished for his great learning and talents. His abilities were so conspicuous, that he was educated at the public expense; he was professor of divinity and oriental languages at Zurich, professor at Heidelberg, and ecclesiastical counsellor to the elector Palatine. His writings are very numerous. He died in 1667.

HOTZE, an Austrian general, born in Zurich, distinguished for his bravery, was killed in battle about 1799.

HOUARD DE LA MOTHE, Anthony, a French lawyer, skilled in the profession, and author of several works connected with it; he died in 1803.

HOUBIGOUT, Charles Francis, a learned divine, born at Paris, in 1686. He published an excellent edition of the Hebrew Bible, with a Latin version, and notes, 4 vols. folio, 1753, and many other learned works, and died in 1783, in the 98th year of his age.

HOUBRAKEN, Arnold, a Dutch painter, author of the "Lives of the Flemish painters," was born at Dordt, in 1660.

HOUGH, John, bishop of Worcester, memorable for the noble stand he made, when president of Magdalen college, Oxford, against James II. who wanted arbitrarily to impose fellows and officers upon the college by his royal mandate, was born in Middlesex, in 1650, and died in 1743.

HOULIERES, Antoinette de la Garde des, a French lady, distinguished as a poetess and dramatic writer; she died in 1694. Her daughter, who also possessed poetical talents, died in 1718.

HOUSEMAN, Cornelius, a celebrated landscape painter, of Antwerp, died in 1727.

HOUSEMAN, James, an eminent portrait and historical painter, of Antwerp, died in 1696.

HOUSSAYE. See AMELOT.

HOUSTON, William, M. D., an eminent English physician, pupil to Boerhaave, died in the West Indies, in 1733.

HOUSTON, John, a distinguished advocate for the revolution, was a member of congress in 1775, afterwards a judge of the supreme court, and governor of the state of Georgia; he died in 1796.

HOUTEVILLE, Claude Francis, a native of Paris, who wrote an admirable work, called "La Verite de la Religion Chretienne prouvee par les Faits," died in 1742, aged 54.

HOVEDEN, Roger de, an early English historian, whose annals commenced where those of Bede terminated; he lived in the age of Henry II.

HOVEY, Ivory, minister of Plymouth, Mass. He left a journal which contained about 7,000 octavo pages, and died in 1803.

HOW, William, an officer in the royal army, during the civil wars in England, afterwards a physician and botanist of distinction in London; he died in 1656.

HOWARD, Charles, earl of Nottingham, an intrepid English admiral, commander-in-chief at the defeat of the Spanish Armada, born in 1536, died in 1624.

HOWARD, Sir Robert, an English historian and dramatic poet, died about 1698. There was one Edward Howard, esq., likewise a descendant of the same family, who exposed himself to the satirists by writing bad plays.

HOWARD, Henry, earl of Surrey, a brave general and esteemed poet, born in 1520, was beheaded on a suspicion of his designing to wed the princess Mary, and thereby aspiring to the crown.

HOWARD, Thomas, earl of Surrey, and duke of Norfolk, lord high admiral of England, in the reign of Henry VIII., distinguished for his services as a naval officer, and as a soldier, at the battle of Floddenfield, and afterwards as viceroy of Ireland; he narrowly escaped the capricious tyranny of that prince, and died in 1554.

HOWARD, Edward, a brave and celebrated English admiral, brother to the preceding, was killed in an action with a French ship, in 1514.

HOWARD, John, was born at Hackney, in Middlesex, in the year 1726, and put apprentice to Mr. Nathaniel Newnham, a wholesale grocer, in Watling-street. His constitution was thought very weak, and his health appeared to have been injured by the necessary duties of his apprenticeship; at the expiration of it, therefore, he took an apartment in a lodging-house, in Stoke, Newington, kept by a Mrs. Sarah Lardeau, a widow, by whom he was nursed with the utmost care and attention. At length he became so fond of his landlady, that they were privately married, about the year 1753. She was possessed of a small fortune, which he presented to her sister. This wife, however, died in 1755, and he was a sincere and affectionate mourner for her death. About this time, it is believed, he was elected F. R. S., and, with an intention of visiting Lisbon after the earthquake, he at midsummer, 1756, set sail on board the Hanover packet, which was taken by a French privateer; and he behaved with so much hauteur, so much a l'Anglois to the captain of the privateer, as might probably be the cause of his suffering so severely as it appears he did, and "perhaps what he suffered on this occasion increased (if it did not first call forth) his sympathy with the unhappy people." He afterwards, it is believed, made the tour of Italy; and at his return, settled at Brokenhurst, a retired and pleasant villa in the New Forest, near Lymington, in Hampshire; having, April 25, 1758, married Harriet, only daughter of Edward Leeds, esq., of Croxton, in Cambridgeshire. Mrs. H. died in 1763, in childbed. After the death of his second wife, he left Lymington, and purchased an estate at Cardington, near Bedford, where he very much conciliated the esteem of the poor, by employing them, building cottages for them, &c. In 1773, he served the office of sheriff of the county of Bedford. This office, as he observes, brought "the distress of prisoners more immediately under his notice;" and with a view to its alleviation, he began his labours by "visiting most of the county jails in England," and afterwards "the bridewells, houses of correction, city and town jails," where he found "multitudes, both of felons and debtors, dying of the jail fever and the small-pox." Upon this subject he was examined in the house of commons, in March, 1774, when "he had the honour of their thanks." This encouraged him to proceed in his design: he travelled again and again through Great Britain and Ireland, and also into France, Flanders, Holland, Germany, and Switzerland; and published "The State of the Prisons in England and Wales, with preliminary observations, and an account of some foreign prisons, 1777." In 1780, he published an Appendix to this Account, in which he extended the narrative of his travels to Italy, and gave some observations on the management of prisoners of war, and the hulks on the Thames. This Appendix he republished, in 1784; which publication included also an account of his visit to Denmark, Sweden, Russia, Poland, Portugal, and Spain. By this time his character for active benevolence had engaged the public attention, and it was proposed that a subscription should be set on foot, to erect a statue to his honour. This idea was so well received, that in 15 or 16 months, 615 persons subscribed 1533*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*; but some of those who knew Mr. Howard best never concurred in the scheme, being well assured that he would never countenance nor accede to it: and the event justified their conduct; for the language that he held upon the subject, when first advised of it, was, "Have not I one friend in England that would put a stop to such a proceeding?" In consequence of two letters from Mr. Howard himself to the subscribers, the design was laid aside. In 1789, Mr. H. published "An Account of the principal Lazarettos in Europe, with various papers relative to the plague, together with further Observations on some Foreign Prisons and Hospitals, and additional Remarks on the present State of those in Great Britain and Ireland," with a great number of curious plates not satisfied, however, with what he had already done, he concludes his "Account of Laza-rettos" with announcing his intention again to quit his country, for the purpose of revisiting Russia, Turkey, and some other countries, and extending his tour in the East. On this tour, however, he fell a victim to his humanity; for, having visited a young lady at Cherson, sick of an epidemic fever, for the purpose of administering some medical assistance, he caught the distemper himself, and was carried off in 12 days, Jan. 20, 1790. The name of Howard will live in the remembrance of those who have been rescued, by his exertions, from the gloomy horrors of confinement, which might otherwise have been unlimited; alleviated in the pangs of disease, which might have been irremediable; and comforted in the still more agonizing reproaches of conscious guilt, which would inevitably have terminated in destruction. A statue to Mr. Howard's memory has been erected in St. Paul's cathedral.

HOWARD, Francis, earl of Effingham, governor of the colony of Virginia, in 1684. After an unpopular administration of five years, he returned to England, and died in 1700.

HOWARD, Simon, D. D., minister in Boston; he took a deep interest in the American revolution, and died in 1804.

HOWARD, Benjamin, a member of congress, from Kentucky, afterwards governor of the territory of Upper Louisiana, was a brigadier-general in the army of the United States, during the last war; he died in 1814.

HOWE, John, an English non-conformist divine, eminent for his learning, moderation, and great virtues; he died in 1705.

HOWE, John, an English statesman, and member of parliament, was a privy counsellor, in the reign of Anne. He died in 1721.

HOWE, Richard, earl, a famous British admiral, born in 1725. At 14 he entered the navy; and at the early age of 20 was appointed captain of the Baltimore sloop, in which he attacked two French frigates of 30 guns each, and obliged them to sheer off. Our limits prevent us from tracing this brave man through all his exploits; but, being presented to the king, by lord ~~Howe~~, after the memorable victory over ~~Confans~~, in 1759, his majesty said, "My lord Howe, your life has been one continued series of services to your country." In brief, we may say the same thing of the latter period of his existence. In 1782 he was sent to the relief of Gibraltar, a service which he performed in the most admirable manner in the sight of the hostile fleet, which he in vain challenged to battle. In 1793, his lordship took the command of the channel fleet; and in 1794, totally vanquished one of the most powerful fleets that France had ever equipped for sea, and brought home seven ships of the line, besides smaller vessels. On this glorious occasion their majesties, with three of the princesses, paid him a visit on board his ship, at Spithead; when the king presented him with a magnificent sword, enriched with diamonds, a gold chain, and a medal; and the thanks of both houses of parliament, the freedom of London, and the universal acclamations of the nation, followed these acknowledgments of the sovereign. Earl Howe died in 1799, and a handsome monument is erected to his memory, in St. Paul's cathedral.

HOWELL, James, an English political and historical writer, and poet, born in Caernarthen-shire, in 1596, died in 1666. Of his very numerous works, the best are "Dodona's Grove, or, the Vocal Forest," and "Epistolæ Ho Elianae:

Familial Letters Domestic and Foreign, partly historical, partly political, partly philosophical." It is not to be wondered that these letters have run through many editions; since they not only contain much of the history of his own times, but are also interspersed with many pleasant stories properly introduced and applied.

HOWELL, William, a civilian, of Oxford, and chancellor of Lincoln, died in 1688. The works that he has left behind him are, among others, "Medulla Historiæ Anglicanæ;" a "History of the World from the earliest Times to the Ruin of the Roman Empire;" and "Elementa Historiæ Civilis."

HOWELL, David, an eminent lawyer, of Rhode Island, was a member of congress, attorney-general, and judge of the supreme court of that state, professor of mathematics, and afterwards of law, in Brown university, and a judge of the district court of the United States, for that district. He died in 1824.

HOWELL, Richard, governor of New Jersey, in 1793, to which office he was elected eight years successively; he died in 1802.

HOYLE, Edmund, author of some celebrated treatises on the games of Whist, Quadrille, &c., born in 1672, died in 1769.

HOZIER, Francis, a brave English admiral, died in 1727.

HUARTE, John, a native of French Navarre, though he usually passes for a Spaniard, lived in the 16th century, and gained great fame by a work that he published in the Spanish tongue, upon a very curious and interesting subject, viz. to show the gifts and different abilities of men, and for what kind of study the genius of every man is adapted. This book has been translated into several languages. Its title is "The Trial of Wits."

HUBBARD, William, minister of Ipswich, Mass., author of a history of New England in manuscript; he died in 1704.

HUBER, Samuel, a native of Berne, was professor of divinity, at Wittenberg, in 1592.

HUBER, Ulric, a Dutch lawyer, professor of law and history, at Franeker; he died in 1694. His writings were on subjects connected with his profession.

HUBER, Mary, a native of Geneva, distinguished as a writer. She died at Lyons, in 1753.

HUBER, John Rudolph, a portrait and historical painter, of Basil; he died in 1748, aged 80.

HUBERT, Matthew, a preacher, and priest of the oratory of Paris, distinguished for his eloquence; he died in 1717.

HUBNER, John, of Saxony, was professor of geography, at Leipsic, and rector of the school at Hamburg, where he died in 1731.

HUDE, John, a burgomaster of Amsterdam, eminent as a mathematician, and known also as a politician; he died in 1704.

HUDSON, Captain Henry, an eminent English navigator, who flourished in high fame, in the beginning of the 17th century, having discovered Hudson's bay at the north of Canada, and the river in New-York, which has since borne his name. He is supposed to have perished at sea, being set adrift in a shallop by his mutinous crew, in 1611.

HUDSON, Thomas, a painter, born at Exeter, in 1701, had Sir Joshua Reynolds for a scholar, by whom he was eclipsed in the art. He died in London, in 1779.

HUDSON, Dr. John, an eminent English critic, and keeper of the Bodleian library, and principal of St. Mary-hall, Oxford; he died in 1719.

HUDSON, William, an eminent botanist, born in Westmoreland, about 1730. In 1762 he published "Flora Anglica," and died in 1793.

HUET, Peter Daniel, bishop of Avranches, in France, and a celebrated philosophical, historical, and commercial writer, born at Caen, in 1630, and died in 1721.

HUFNAGEL, George, a native of Antwerp, distinguished as a writer on natural history, and of Latin poetry; he died in 1600.

HUGH CAPET, count of Paris and Orleans, was raised to the throne of France by his merits and courage, in 987, and thus became the head of the third race of the French monarchy; he died in 996.

HUGHES, John, an English poet, dramatic author, and essayist, born at Marlborough, in 1677, died in 1720. His last work was "The Siege of Damascus," a tragedy, which is still occasionally acted. Several papers in the "Tatlers," "Spectators," and "Guardians," were written by him.

HUGHES, Jabez, younger brother of the preceding, distinguished as a scholar, and as a translator from the Latin and Spanish; he died in 1731.

HUNTER, William, M. D., a most celebrated English physician and anatomist, born in 1718, died in 1783. The most splendid of Dr. Hunter's medical publications is, "The Anatomy of the Human Gravid Uterus." His Anatomical Museum was the most complete of all the private ones in Europe, and was collected by him at the expense of upwards of 20,000*l*.

HUNTER, John, younger brother of the preceding, a very eminent English surgeon, and anatomical writer, born in 1728, died suddenly in 1793. At the age of 20 he began, as assistant to his brother, the career that ended in his becoming, both in theory and practice, the first surgeon in the world. His anatomical researches were various, persevering, and successful: with the office, use, situation, or communication, of the several parts of the human structure, no man was better acquainted; and his numerous writings may be considered as a basis on which the whole art of physic may securely rest. Mr. Hunter's most valuable treatises may be found in the "Philosophical Transactions," from the 62d to the 82d volumes.

HUNTER, Anne, widow of Mr. John Hunter, the anatomist, was distinguished as the author of several beautiful poems, and as the intimate friend of the celebrated Mrs. Elizabeth Carter; she died in 1802.

HUNTER, Dr. Henry, an eminent presbyterian divine, equally admired for his pulpit eloquence, and beloved for his benevolence, was born at Culross, in Perthshire, in 1741, and died at Bristol, in 1802. His works are numerous, but the most important are translations. His principal original publication is a course of sermons, in 6 vols. 8vo., entitled "Sacred Biography." The most distinguished of his translations are, "St. Pierre's Studies of Nature;" "Sounin's Travels in Egypt;" "Saurin's Sermons;" and the "Physiognomical Essays of Lavater."

HUNTINGDON, Selina, countess dowager of, daughter of Washington, earl Ferrers, was born in 1707, married in 1728, Theophilus earl Huntingdon, by whom she had issue four sons and three daughters, and died in 1791. Her ladyship had been a widow 45 years; and her great religious concerns, as head of a very numerous sect in Great Britain and Ireland, she left by will in the hands of committees for managing them in both kingdoms. Her religious principles have been long since known; and her unbounded benevolence bore the best testimony of the purity of her intentions; having, in the course of her life, expended above 100,000*l.* in public and private acts of charity.

HYPATTA, a most beautiful, virtuous, and learned lady of antiquity, daughter of Theon, who governed the Platonic school at Alexandria, the place of her birth and education, in the latter part of the 4th century. Socrates tells us, that Hypatia "arrived at such a pitch of learning, as very far to exceed all the philosophers of her time." But our notions of Hypatia will be prodigiously heightened, when we consider her succeeding her father, as she actually did, in the government of the Alexandrian school: teaching out of that chair, where Ammonius, Hierocles, and many great and celebrated philosophers had taught; and this at a time too, when men of immense learning abounded, both at Alexandria, and in many other parts of the Roman empire. She was murdered, A. D. 415.

JOHN, of Paris, a celebrated Dominican, and theological professor at Paris, died in 1301.

JOHN, of Udino, a celebrated painter, at Rome, died in 1564.

JOHNES, Thomas, born at Ludlow, in Shropshire, in 1748, was bred at Eton and Oxford.

He was a member of parliament, first for Cardigan, and afterwards for the county of Radnor.

His estates at Hafod, in Cardiganshire, were conducted on the most liberal scale, and were a strong attraction to all visitors of that part of Wales.

But in 1807, the elegant mansion, a most valuable library, and a printing establishment, from which had issued many elegant productions, were destroyed by an accidental fire, while Mr. Johnes was attending his duty in parliament. In 1811 he lost a favourite daughter, from the effects of which shock he never recovered.

He died in 1816. Mr. Johnes reprinted, with great care and attention, generally with notes and illustrations, at his private press, above alluded to, the valuable works of "Proussart," "de Joinville," and "Monstrelet."

JOHNSON, Martin, an excellent painter of landscapes, died in the reign of James II.

JOHNSON, Samuel, an English divine, of remarkable learning, and steadiness in suffering for the principles of the revolution, in 1688.

He was born in 1649, and died in 1703.

JOHNSON, John, a non juror divine, who, though promoted in the established church, expressed a mean opinion of her articles and liturgy; he died in 1725.

JOHNSON, or JANSEN, Cornelius, an excellent painter, a native of Amsterdam. In the reign of James I., he drew several fine portraits of that monarch, and most of his court, and died in 1665.

JOHNSON, Charles, a dramatic writer of merit, died in 1748. The dramatic pieces which this author produced are enumerated in the "Biographia Dramatica."

JOHNSON, Maurice, an excellent English antiquary, died in 1755.

JOHNSON, Dr. Samuel, born at Litchfield, in 1709, where his father was a reputable bookseller. He was entered of Pembroke college, Oxford, in 1723, but left the university without taking any degree.

In March, 1737, he went to London, where he appears to have met with disappointments which disgusted him with the town; for, in August, we find him desirous of returning again into his native country, to take upon himself the office of master of a charity school, in Shropshire, then vacant, the salary of which was 60*l.* a year.

But the statutes of the school requiring the person who should be elected to be a master of the arts, this attempt seems to have been frustrated.

In 1740, he began to write the "Debates in the Senate of Lilliput," printed in the Gentleman's Magazine; and, after producing some poems, translations, and biographical works, which met with a good reception, (particularly "London," the "Vanity of Human Wishes," and "The Life of Savage,") he brought forth "Irene," a tragedy, in 1749.

This not meeting with the success that he expected, he set about his "Dictionary."

The execution of this cost him the labour of many years; but he was amply repaid by the fame which he acquired.

During the recesses of this stupendous labour, he published his "Rambler's." The reputation of these works gained him the honorary degree of doctor of laws, in the university of Dublin, which was soon after followed by the same degree from Oxford.

To this succeeded his "Idlers." His next publication was "Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia," a beautiful little novel, in the Eastern style, abounding with the most useful and moral maxims, suited to the several conditions of life. Of his political works, which followed at distant intervals, the public are more divided about the merits: it is, however, but fair to presume that they were his candid opinions upon the subjects, and, as such, deserving of no censure from the judgment of impartiality. His last undertaking, "The Lives of the British Poets," would alone have been sufficient to immortalize his name, as it by far excels any thing executed upon a similar plan, by others; and, though the critical remarks, in a few instances, incorporate a little too much with political opinions, their general excellence must always give them deserved celebrity. It is said, that he was executing a second part of "The Prince of Abyssinia," and was in hopes to have finished it before his death, which event happened Dec. 13, 1784. The editor of the "Biographia Dramatica," after bestowing many just encomiums on the genius of Dr. J., says, it would be the highest injustice, were I not to observe, that nothing but that genius can possibly exceed the extent of his erudition; and it would be adding a greater injury to his still more valuable qualities, were we to stop here; since, together with the ablest head, he seems to have been possessed of the very best heart at present existing. Every line, every sentiment, that issues from his pen, tends to the great centre of all his views, the promotion of virtue, religion, and humanity; nor are his actions less pointed toward the same great end. Benevolence, charity, and piety, are the most striking features of his character; and while his writings point out to us what a good man ought to be, his own conduct sets us an example of what he is." A statue to Dr. Johnson's memory has been erected in St. Paul's cathedral. In an East India newspaper we meet with the following poetical picture of this celebrated character:

"Herculean strength and a stentorian voice,
Of wit a fund, of words a countless choice;
In learning, rather various than profound,
In truth intrepid, in religion sound:
A trembling frame and a distorted sight,
But firm in judgment and in genius bright;
In controversy rarely known to spare,
But humble as the publican in pray'r;
To more than merited his kindness, kind,
And, tho' in manners harsh, of friendly mind;
Deep tinged with melancholy's blackest shade,
And, tho' prepared to die, of death afraid.—
Such Johnson was—of him with justice vain,
When will this nation see his like again.

JOHNSON, Thomas, a London apothecary, and the best herbalist of his time, died in 1644.

JOHNSON, Samuel, LL. D., a member of congress, and senator from North Carolina, afterwards a judge of the supreme court, and governor of that state; he died in 1846.

JOHNSON, Sir Nathaniel, governor of the colony of South Carolina, in 1706. He displayed great ability and judgment in defending the colony from the French and Indians; he died in 1713.

JOHNSON, Edward, an inhabitant of Massachusetts, author of a work, entitled "The Wonder Working Providence of Zion's Saviour, in New-England, from 1622 to 1652."

JOHNSON, Robert, the last proprietary governor of South Carolina, in 1719, afterwards appointed to the same office by the crown; he died in 1735.

JOHNSON, Sir William, superintendent of Indian affairs, in the colony of New-York known for the great influence and authority he acquired over that people; he died in 1774.

JOHNSON, Samuel, D. D., a native of Connecticut, distinguished as the first convert to episcopacy in the colony, and afterwards as president of King's college, New-York; he died in 1772.

JOHNSON, William Samuel, LL. D., F. R. S son of the preceding, was an eminent lawyer, and for several years, agent of the colony of New-York, in England. He was afterwards a judge of the supreme court of Connecticut, a delegate to congress, and to the convention which formed the constitution of the United States, and first senator of the U. S., from Connecticut. He was also president of Columbia college, New-York, for several years. He died at Stratford, in 1819, aged 93.

JOHNSON, Thomas, an eminent lawyer, and a firm patriot, of Maryland, governor of that state after the revolution, and afterwards an associate judge of the supreme court of the United States; he died in 1819.

JOHNSTON, Dr. Arthur, a physician, but more celebrated as a Latin poet, was born at Aberdeen, in 1587, of which university he afterwards became principal; he died at Oxford, in 1641. His "Epigrams," and version of the "Psalms," are excellent.

JOHNSTON, Charles, born in Ireland, was bred to the bar; but, being exceedingly deaf, he relinquished that profession. In 1760, he published "Chrysal, or the Adventures of a Guinea;" a political Romance, in which all the scenes and characters were sketched from real life. This was followed by "The Reverie; or, a Flight to the Paradise of Fools;" the "History of John Juniper, Esq., alias Juniper Jack," &c. &c. In 1782, Mr. Johnston went to India, where he died about 1800.

JOHNSTON, Gabriel, governor of the colony of North Carolina, died in 1762. His administration contributed to the increase and prosperity of the colony, and to the advancement of learning there.

JOHNSTONE, James, a Scotch physician, distinguished for his treatment of a malignant fever, at Kidderminster, died in 1802.

JOHNSTONE, George, one of the commissioners sent to treat with America, during the war; he died in 1787.

JOINVILLE, John Sieur de, an eminent French statesman, and author of "The History of St. Louis," a very curious and interesting piece, died in 1318, aged 90.

JOLOGOEH, a Welch bard, who, from 1370 to 1420, was in the court of Owen Glendower.

JOLY, Guy, known by his long and faithful attachment to the famous cardinal de Rhetz, whom he attended both in his prosperity and adversity. He wrote "Memoirs of his Times," from 1648 to 1665: which, as Voltaire expresses it, "are to those of the cardinal, what the servant is to the master."

JOLY, Claude, a French ecclesiastic, who died in 1700.

JONAH, the fifth of the minor prophets, was sent to denounce judgments on Nineveh. He died about 761 B. C.

JONAS, Anagrimus, a learned Icclander, who acquired a great reputation for astronomy and the sciences, died in 1640, at the age of 95.

JONAS, Justus, a famous protestant divine and polemical writer, in Germany, born in Thuringia, in 1493, died in 1555.

JONATHAN, son of Saul, and the faithful friend of David, was slain in battle by the Philistines, 1055 B. C.

JONATHAN, a general of the Jews, and brother of Judas Maccabeus, was a valiant man, and cruelly put to death, 144 B. C.

JONES, William, an English divine, of learning and piety, whose works are highly esteemed; he died in 1801.

JONES, Jeremiah, a dissenting divine, and author, died in 1724.

JONES, John, a Benedictine monk, educated at Oxford, was made vicar-general of his order, and died in 1636.

JONES, David, a native of Wales, wrote some poetical pieces, and died in 1780.

JONES, John, a Welch antiquary, who was employed 40 years, from 1590 to 1630 in collecting Welch MSS.

JONES, Rice, a Welch poet, died in 1801.

JONES, John, a dramatic writer, in the reign of Charles I.

JONES, Inigo, a celebrated English architect, born in London, in 1572, died in 1652. His abilities in all human sciences surpassed most of his age. His designs and buildings were many and important; but for an account of these we must refer the reader to Campbell's "Vitruvius Britannicus."

JONES, John, a medical writer, born in Wales, died in 1580.

JONES, Sir William, judge of the king's bench, in the reign of James I., and Charles I.

JONES, Sir Thomas, a judge of the king's bench, under Charles II. and James II.

JONES, William, one of the last of those genuine mathematicians, admirers, and contemporaries of Newton, who cultivated and improved the sciences in the present century, father to Sir William Jones, was born in Anglesey, in the year 1680, and died in 1749.

JONES, Henry, a native of Drogheda, in Ireland, and no mean dramatic poet, though originally a journeyman bricklayer, died very poor, in 1770. His principal performance, "The Earl of Essex," a tragedy, appeared in 1753.

JONES, Griffith, born in London, in 1721, died in 1786. This gentleman was many years editor of the London Chronicle, of the Daily Advertiser, and, we believe, of the Public Ledger, in the "Literary Magazine," with Johnson, and in the "British Magazine," with Smollet and Goldsmith, his anonymous labours were often associated. His modest mind shrunk from public attention; and his labours were most frequently directed to the improvement of the younger and more untutored classes of mankind. His translations from the French are very numerous, but cannot now be traced.

JONES, Sir William, one of the judges of the supreme court of judicature, in Bengal, and an excellent poet, to whose translations we are indebted for many beautiful effusions of the Persian muse, was born in London, in 1746, and died in 1794, at the premature age of 48. Endowed by nature with a mind of extraordinary vigour, Sir William, by unwearied industry, aided by superior genius, successfully explored the hidden sources of Oriental science and literature; and his attainments in this interesting branch of learning were such as to make him far beyond all competition, the most eminent Oriental scholar, in this, or perhaps any other age. Unlike many other eminent literary characters of the age, Sir William was a sincere and pious Christian; instead of labouring by his writings, to propagate the doctrines of infidelity as has been a favourite practice with some modern philosophers of reputation, he was desirous to lend the Scriptures his utmost support; and, in one of his latest annual discourses to the Asiatic Society, he has done more to give validity to the Mosaic history of the creation than has been done by the researches of any contemporary writer. The following epitaph, written by and for himself, is equally admired for its truth and its elegance.

"Here was deposited the mortal part of a man who feared GOD, but not death;
and maintained independence,
but sought not riches;
who thought none below him,
but the base and unjust;
none above him but the wise and virtuous;
who loved his parents, kindred, friends,
and country:
and having devoted his life to their service, and the improvement of his mind,
resigned it calmly,
giving glory to his Creator,
wishing peace on earth,
and good will to all his creatures, on the day of in the year of our blessed Redeemer"

JONES, Richard, a Welchman, and an ingenious author, died in the 17th century.

JONES, David, speaker of the colonial assembly of New-York, and a judge of the supreme court of that state, died in 1775.

JONES, Thomas, an English divine, eminent as an instructor of mathematics, at Cambridge, died in 1807.

JONES, John Paul, a native of Scotland, who, after being engaged in the merchant service of Great Britain, came to America, at the commencement of the revolution, and received a lieutenants commission in the navy of the United States. He was soon after promoted, and, as captain of the Ranger, and afterwards of the Bonne Homme Richard, fought battles and gained victories, which gave him reputation throughout Europe, and which, for their desperation, have seldom been equalled. He also annoyed the enemy's merchant vessels in every sea. After the peace, he was, for a time, in the service of Russia. He died at Paris, in 1792.

JONES, John, M. D., an eminent physician, of New-York, afterwards professor of surgery in King's college; he died in 1791.

JONES, William, speaker of the house of assembly, and governor of the state of Rhode-Island, died in 1822.

JONG, Ludolph de, a Dutch painter of eminence, died in 1697.

JONGHE, Baldwin, or Junius, a Franciscan monk, and the author of several works, died in 1634.

JONIN, Gilbert, a jesuit, known as an eminent poet, died at Tournon, in 1638.

JONSIUS, John, a native of Holstein, and an elegant writer, died in 1659.

JONSON, Benjamin, a celebrated English poet, born in Westminster, in 1574. He was bred a bricklayer, but went afterwards to St. John's college, Cambridge; where, however, his continuance was short in proportion to his finances, which would not supply the decent conveniences of a learned ease. In this exigence he turned his thoughts upon the playhouses: his inclination and genius lay to compositions for the stage; and he had the example of Shakspeare, who had taken the same course, in the like difficulties, with success. The first play Jonson printed was the comedy entitled "Every man in his humour;" after which he produced a play regularly every year, for some years successively. In 1619, on the death of Daniel, he succeeded to the vacant laurel; and this office obliged him to provide the Christmas diversion of a masque: accordingly, in his works, we have a series of these and other entertainments of a like kind, most of which were presented at court from 1615 to 1625. He died in 1637, and was interred in Westminster Abbey. Over his grave is a common pavement stone, and on it are engraven these words,

"O RARE BEN JONSON."

JOHNSTON, John, a polish naturalist, travelled over Europe, and died in 1675.

JORAM, king of Israel, 896 B. C.; he was slain 884 B. C.

JORAM, king of Judah 889 B. C.; he died in 885 B. C.

JORDAENS, James, an eminent painter of the Flemish school, born at Antwerp, in 1593, died in 1678. He improved under Rubens, for whom he worked, and from whom he drew his best principles.

JORDAN, Sir Joseph, an English admiral, by whose extraordinary valour, the Dutch were defeated at the battle of Solebay, in 1672.

JORDAN, Charles Stephen, a Prussian writer, highly esteemed by Frederick the Great, who erected a monument to him, with this inscription, "Here lies Jordan, the friend of the muses and of the king." He died in 1746.

JORDAN, John Christopher, privy counsellor to the king of Bohemia, was an eminent antiquary, and died in 1740.

JORDAN, Dorothea, an eminent English actress, was the daughter of Capt. Bland, of a most respectable family in Ireland. Her mother eloped with her father; they both took to the stage; and our heroine was born among the Thespian corps. As an actress, she commenced her career in Dublin; but soon quitted that for Tate Wilkenson's York company; where she soon distinguished herself so much as speedily to attract the notice of the London managers. She died at St. Cloud, in France, in 1816; and was indebted, we believe, to the kindness of a casual English traveller for a decent interment. The obscurity of her retreat, and the penury in which she ended a life that had led to much higher expectations, very much interested and astonished the public.

JORDAN, Thomas, a dramatic writer, in the reign of Charles I. Langbaine speaks of him as having been an actor also.

JORDANO, Luca, an eminent Italian painter, was born at Naples, in 1632, died in 1705.

JORDEN, Edward, an English physician, and an author, died in 1632.

JORNANDES, a Goth, author in the time of Justinian.

JORTIN, Dr. John, a learned English divine and ecclesiastical historian, born in London, in 1698, died in 1770. His chief works are, "Discourses concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion;" "Miscellaneous Observations upon Authors, ancient and modern;" "Remarks upon Ecclesiastical History," "Life of Erasmus;" and "Remarks upon the works of Erasmus"

JOSEPH, son of Jacob and Rachel, was the favourite of his father. In Egypt he rose to be the governor of the country, and died 1636 B. C.

JOSEPH, husband of Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ, was of the tribe of Judah, and of the lineage of David.

JOSEPH, of Arimathea, a counsellor, and disciple of our Saviour.

JOSEPH I., 15th emperor of the house of Austria, was crowned king of Hungary, in 1687, elected king of the Romans, in 1690, and succeeded to the empire of Germany, in 1703; he died in 1711.

JOSEPH II., emperor of Germany, was elected king of the Romans, in 1764, and crowned emperor the following year; he was a benevolent monarch, but too fond of innovation; he died in 1790.

JOSEPH, king of Portugal, of the Braganza family, ascended the throne in 1750, and died in 1777. His reign was turbulent and unfortunate.

JOSEPH MEIR, a learned rabbi, was born in France, in 1496, and died in 1554.

JOSEPH, Ben Gorion, a Jewish historian, who flourished in the 10th century.

JOSEPH, of Paris, a capuchin, and confidant of Richelieu, died in 1638.

JOSEPH, Father, an apostate monk, who raised 6000 banditti in 1678, to extirpate the catholic religion in Hungary.

JOSEPHUS, Flavius, the ancient historian of the Jews, born at Jerusalem, A. D. 37, died in 93. His "History of the Jewish War and the Destruction of Jerusalem," in 7 books, was composed at the command of Vespasian, and is singularly interesting and affecting, as the historian was an eye-witness of all that he relates. St. Jerome calls him "the Livy of the Greeks." His "Jewish Antiquities," in 20 books, written in Greek, are a very noble work: we have also a discourse "upon the Martyrdom of the Maccabees;" which is a master-piece of eloquence, for he was certainly a great orator, as well as a great historian.

JOSHUA, the son of Nun, and successor of Moses, in conducting the Israelites to Canaan, he died 1424 B. C.

JOSIAH, king of Judah, 641 B. C., died 610 B. C.

JOSELYN, John, a native of Great Britain, who came to America in 1663, and wrote an account of New-England, &c. As a historian he is not esteemed worthy of great credit.

JOUBERT, Francis, a priest of Montpelier, confined in the Bastille, for his attachment to the Jansenists; he died in 1763.

JOUBERT, Laurence, a French physician and medical writer, born at Valence, in 1520, died in 1582.

JOUBERT, Bartholomew Catharine, a French general of great celebrity, second in command under Buonaparte in the conquest of Italy, was killed at the battle of Novi, in 1799.

JOUVENET, John, a French painter, whose pieces are esteemed, died in 1717.

JOVIANUS, Flavius Claud, a Roman emperor, elected by the army after the death of Julian the Apostate, in 363. He at first refused, saying, that he would not command idolatrous soldiers; but, upon an assurance that they would embrace Christianity, he accepted the throne, immediately shut up all the pagan temples, and forbade their sacrifices; but he did not long enjoy the dignity to which his merit had raised him; being suffocated in his bed by the fumes of a fire which had been made to dry the chamber, in 354, in the 33d year of his age, and 8th month of his reign.

JOVINIAN, a monk of Milan, who became the head of a sect, and died in consequence of his debauchery, A. D. 405.

JOVIUS, Benedictus, brother of the historian, known as a poet and historical writer.

JOVIUS, Paul, an Italian Gioivo, well known by his histories, was born at Como, in Italy, in 1483, and died in 1552.

JOYEUSE, Anne de, a duke and admiral of France, and a favourite of Henry III.; he died in 1587.

JOYEUSE, Francis de, brother to the preceding, was an able minister of Henry III. and IV., and Lewis XIII.; he died in 1615.

JOYNER, William, or Lyde, an English writer, who embraced popery, and died in 1705.

JUAN, George, a Spaiiard, knight of Malta, known as an able mathematician; he died at Madrid, in 1773.

JUBA, king of Mauritania, was driven from his kingdom by Cæsar, and destroyed himself 42 B. C.

JUBA, son of the preceding, was carried prisoner to Rome by Cæsar, but under Augustus, he recovered his dominions.

JUDA, Hakkadish, or the Saint, a rabbi, celebrated for his learning and riches, who lived in the time of the emperor Antoninus, and was the friend and preceptor of that prince. He collected, about 26 years after the destruction of the Temple, in a book which he called the "Misna," the constitutions and traditions of the Jewish magistrates and doctors who preceded him.

JUSTIN II., successor of Justinian, in 563. He was a weak prince, but his wife governed him and his empire with ability; he died in 578.

JUSTINIAN, the first Roman emperor of his name, celebrated for having collected the immense variety and number of the Roman laws into one body, called "The Code;" to which the emperor gave his own name; he also had the decisions of judges and other magistrates, together with the authoritative opinions of the most eminent lawyers, collected; and the name of "Digests" or "Pandects" given to them. Besides these, for the use chiefly of young students in the law, Justinian ordered 4 books of "Institutes" to be drawn up, containing an abstract or abridgment of the text of all the laws; and lastly, the laws of modern date, posterior to that of the former, were thrown into one vol. in the year 541, and called the "Novellæ," or "New Code." This most important transaction in the state has rendered Justinian's name immortal.

JUSTINIAN II., succeeded to the throne in 685. He was successful against the Saracens, but was of an infamous character, and was assassinated in 711.

JUSTINIANI, St. Lawrence, a noble of Venice, was made the first patriarch of Venice, in 1451; he died in 1455, and was canonized by pope Alexander VIII.

JUSTINIANI, Bernard, nephew to the preceding, went ambassador from Venice to Lewis XI. of France; he wrote several historical works, and died in 1489.

JUSTINIANI, Augustin, bishop of Nebo, in Corsica, was a learned man, and professor of Hebrew at Paris. He was lost at sea in 1536.

JUSTINIANI, Fabio, bishop of Ajaccio, was an author, and died in 1627.

JUVARA, Philip, a Sicilian architect, who erected beautiful edifices at Turin; he died in 1735.

JUVENAL, Decius Junius, a Roman poet and satirist, was born about the beginning of the emperor Claudius' reign, and died in his 80th year. Juvenal, as a poet, improved on Horace and Persius, being elegant and witty with the former, and great and sublime with the latter.

JUVENAL, de Carleaux Felix, a French writer, highly respected, died in 1760.

JUVENCUS, Cassius Vectius Aquilinus, a Spaniard, of noble birth, in the 4th century, and author of a poem.

KANOLD, John, a German physician, and an author, died in 1729.

KANT, Immanuel, an eminent metaphysician, born at Königsberg, in 1724, and died in 1804.

KASTNER, Abraham Gothelf, professor of mathematics at Göttingen, secretary of the royal society, and keeper of the observatory at that place, died in 1800.

KATEB, a Persian poet at the court of the Samanides.

KATTERFELTO, Dr., an eccentric sort of quack philosopher, who for several years gulled the good people of England with the exhibition of experiments in electricity, &c., which he called "Wonderful Wonder;" insinuating that his practices were magical, and performed under the supernatural agency of the Black Cat, his constant companion on those occasions. He is supposed to have been a Prussian by birth, and died in Yorkshire, in 1799.

KAUFFMAN, Mary Angelica, an eminent paintress, and royal academican, in London, was born in 1740, died at Rome, in 1807. The Germans styled her "The Paintress of the Soul;" and her mental acquirements and moral conduct were no less distinguished than her talents as an artist. She was at one time of her life the dupe of a villainous artifice, by which she was drawn into an unfortunate matrimonial connexion.

KAUNITZ, RITBERG prince, a celebrated statesman, and for 40 years prime minister of Austria; he died in 1794.

KAY, William, a native of Breda, distinguished as a historical painter, died in 1568.

KEACH, Benjamin, a baptist teacher, and author of works of great merit, died in the beginning of the 18th century.

KEATE, George, a poet and miscellaneous writer, born at Trowbridge, in 1723, died 1797. What will chiefly distinguish him as a writer is, "An Account of the Pelew Islands," which he compiled from the papers of captain Wilson.

KEATING, Jeffry, an Irish clergyman and an author, died in 1630.

KEBLE, Joseph, an eminent English lawyer, born in 1632, died in 1710. He was a man of incredible industry, having published several books in his lifetime; beside which, he left above 100 large folios, and more than 50 thick quartos, in manuscript. His principal works are, "An Assistance to Justices of the Peace, for the easier Performance of their Duty," and "Reports," taken at the king's bench at Westminster, from the 12th to the 30th year of the reign of Charles II.

KECKERMAN, Bartholomew, professor of Hebrew at Heidelberg, fell a sacrifice to his intense application to study, in 1609.

KEILL, John, an eminent mathematician and philosopher, born at Edinburgh, in 1671, died in 1721. His works are numerous, and in high repute.

KEILL, James, an eminent physician and anatomist, younger brother of the preceding, born in 1673, died in 1719.

KEITH, James, a brave and experienced field-marshal, in the king of Prussia's service, born in Scotland, in 1696, distinguished himself in the memorable wars of that illustrious monarch, and was killed in the unfortunate affair of Hohkerchen, in 1758.

KEITH, Sir William, governor of the colony of Pennsylvania, from 1717 to 1726, and author of a history of Virginia; he died in 1749.

KELLER, James, a learned jesuit, of Sekingen, the friend of the emperor Maximilian, died at Munich, in 1631.

KELLEY, Edward, a famous English necromancer, was born in 1555. Behaving indiscreetly in Germany, he was imprisoned by the emperor Rodolphus II., by whom he had been knighted; and, endeavouring to make his escape out of the window, so hurt himself by a fall, that he died soon after, in 1595. His chief works are, "A Poem of Chymistry;" "A Poem of the Philosopher's Stone;" and "A true and faithful Relation of what passed for many years between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits, &c., London, 1639."

KELLY, Hugh, born in Ireland, in 1739, was bound apprentice to a stay-maker. At the expiration of his indentures he set out for London, to procure a livelihood by his business. This happened in 1760; and he encountered all the difficulties which a person poor and without friends could be subject to on his first arrival in town. He soon after, about 1762, commenced author, and was intrusted with the management of "The Public Ledger," and other periodical publications, in which he wrote many original essays and pieces of poetry. For several years after this period, he continued writing upon a variety of subjects, as the accidents of the times chanced to call for the assistance of his pen. In 1767, the "Babler" appeared in 2 pocket vols., which had at first been inserted in "Owen's Weekly Chronicle," in single papers; as did the "Memoirs of a Magdalen," under the title of "Louisa Mildmay." He died in 1777, leaving six dramatic pieces.

KELLY, John, LL. D. a Scotch divine, who translated the Bible into the Manks tongue, and published a grammar of that language; he died in 1809.

KEMP, John, LL. D. a native of Scotland, came to America soon after the revolution. He was appointed professor of mathematics, and afterwards of geography, history, and experimental philosophy, in Columbia college, New-York. He died in 1812.

KEMPIS, Thomas, famous for his transcendent piety and devotion, was born at Kempen, in the diocess of Cologne, about 1380, and died in 1471. His well-known book, "De Imitatione Christi," of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, has been translated into almost all the languages in the world.

KEN, Thomas, an English prelate, chaplain to the king. He devoted his life to pious and literary pursuits, and died in 1710.

KENDAL, George, lost all his preferments in the church for non-conformity, in 1662. He was the author of several works.

KENNEDY, John, an English clergyman, author of Scripture Chronology, 1753.

KENNEDY, James, regent of Scotland during the minority of James II. He was made archbishop of St. Andrews, and died in 1472.

KENNEDY, John, a Scotch physician and antiquary, died in 1760.

KENNET, Basil, D. D., born at Postling, in Kent, in 1674, died in 1714. He was author of the "Antiquities of Rome; The Lives and Characters of the ancient Grecian Poets;" "An Exposition of the Apostles' Creed," &c.

KENNET, White, an English prelate. He was an eloquent and popular preacher, and had a valuable manuscript collection. He died in 1728.

KENNETH II., the 69th king of Scotland, ascended the throne in 823. He brought to Scone the famous stone chair in which the kings of Scotland were crowned, and died in 854.

KENNETH III., son of Malcolm, defeated the Danes, and also the English; he was assassinated in 994.

KENNICOTT, Dr. Benjamin, well known in the learned world for his elaborate edition of the Hebrew Bible, and other very valuable publications, was canon of Christ Church, Oxford, keeper of the Radcliffe Library, and vicar of Culham in Oxfordshire. He was born in 1718, and died in 1783.

KENRICK, Dr. William, was the son of a stay-maker, at or near Watford, Herts, and brought up to the business of a rule maker. However, he seems early to have abandoned it, and to have devoted his talents to the cultivation of letters. His first production as a poet was a volume of "Epistles Philosophical and Moral," in 1759, addressed to Lorenzo; an avowed defence of Infidelity. He was for a considerable time a writer in "The Monthly Review." In the year 1766 he produced his pleasant comedy of "Falstaff's Wedding." It was at first intended to have been given to the public as an original play of Shakspeare retrieved from obscurity; and it must be acknowledged a most happy imitation of our great dramatic bard. Dr. Kenrick also translated the "Emilius" and "Eloisa" of Rousseau, and the "Elements of the History of England," by Milot; produced several dramatic performances; a volume of "Poems, judicious, satirical, and moral," and an infinite variety of other publications both original and translated, and died in 1779.

KENT, William, an English painter, but much more eminent as an architect, born in 1685, died in 1748. Mr. Walpole considers him as the inventor of modern gardening.

KENTIGERN, or St. Mungo, a Scotchman and bishop of Glasgow, in the 6th century.

KENYON, Lloyd, lord, an English judge, born in 1733. In 1782, he was made attorney-general; in 1684, master of the rolls; and in 1788, lord chief justice of the king's bench, which office he filled with distinguished integrity. His lordship possessed an uncommon strength of mind, and an intuitiveness of perception, which enabled him at once to discern the direct path of justice, however attempted to be concealed by legal chicanery, and subtleties of practice. To his exertions, England is indebted for much of that reform which has been introduced into the practice of the law, and particularly with regard to attorneys, whose misconduct never failed to meet his just resentment and indignation. His endeavours on the Bench, were uniformly directed to the promotion of every moral and religious duty, to the discouragement of vice, and to the exposure of those false principles of honour, the baneful effects of which we have too often reason to contemplate. He died at Bath, in 1802.

KEPLER, John, a celebrated German astronomer, and author of many valuable discoveries in that science, born in 1571, died in 1630.

KEPPEL, Rt. Hon. Augustus viscount, son of William, earl of Albemarle, greatly distinguished himself in the naval service of his country. He was created a peer of Great Britain, by the title of viscount Kepple, and was, at two different periods, first lord of the admiralty. Respecting his services during the American war, while he commanded the channel fleet, we must refer to history for the detail. He died in 1786.

KERCKHOEFF, Joseph Van der, a painter of Brussels, of some note, died in 1724.

KERCKRING, Thomas, a physician, obtained celebrity in his profession, and died at Hainburgh in 1693.

KERGUELIN DE TREMARA, Yves Joseph, a distinguished French naval commander, died in 1797.

KERI, Francis Borgia, a learned jesuit, of Hungary, and an author, died in 1769.

KERKHERDERE, John Gerard, historiographer to the emperor Joseph I. died in 1738.

KERSAINT, Armand Guy Simon, count of, a French naval officer of merit. He belonged to the party of Girondists in the convention, and was condemned to die in 1793.

KERSEY, John, a mathematician, born in 1616, died about 1700. He published "Elements of Algebra," and "Dictionarium Anglo Britannicum; or a General English Dictionary."

KERVILLARS, John Marin de, a jesuit, who translated Ovid into French; he died in 1765.

KESSEL, John Van, a Dutch painter of eminence in the 17th century.

KETEL, Cornelius, a Dutch historical and portrait painter, who resided sometime in England, and being introduced to queen Elizabeth, painted her a picture. After his return to Holland, he laid aside his pencil, and painted with his fingers. He died 1602.

KETT, William, a tanner, of Norfolk, who headed an insurrection in the reign of Edward III.; he was defeated and executed in 1349.

KETTLEWELL, John, an eminently learned and pious English divine, born in 1653, and died in 1695. His most celebrated work, entitled "Measures of Christian Obedience," has gained him a lasting reputation.

KEULEN, Janssen Van, a Dutch portrait painter, and favourite of Charles I., died in 1665.

KEYSLER, John George, a learned antiquary, of Germany, born in 1689, died in 1743. He was author of several learned works; but is most generally known by a "Dissertation on the consecrated Mistletoe of the Druids; and by "Travels through Germany, Bohemia, Hungary, Switzerland, Italy, and Lorraine," illustrated with copper-plates engraven from drawings taken on the spot.

KHERASKOF, Michael, a Russian poet of the 18th century, and counsellor of state.

KHILHOF, Prince, a Russian nobleman, ambassador to Charles XII., of Sweden; he was imprisoned by that monarch, and died in 1798.

KICK, Cornelius, a painter, of Amsterdam, of great merit, died in 1695.

KIDDER, Dr. Richard, bishop of Bath and Wells, author of "A Commentary on the five books of Moses; with a dissertation concerning the writer of the said books; and a general argument to each of them." He was a very clear, elegant, learned writer, and one of the best divines of his time; and was unfortunately killed in his bed, together with his wife, by the fall of a stack of chimneys, in 1703.

KIEN-LONG, emperor of China, died in the latter part of the 18th century, after reigning 60 years. He was a popular and benevolent monarch.

KIERINGS, Alexander, a Dutch painter of eminence, died in 1646.

KILBURN, Richard, an English author of the 17th century.

KILBYE, Richard, Hebrew professor at Oxford, and one of the translators of the bible, died in 1620.

KIL-BYE, Richard, a minister of England, who wrote "Binder of a loaded Conscience," died in 1617.

KILIAN, Cornelius, a native of Brabant, for 50 years corrector of the press; he died in 1607.

KILLEN, William, an eminent lawyer, of Delaware, chief Justice of the supreme court, and chancellor of that state; he died in 1805.

KILLIGREW, Catherine, an English lady had a great knowledge of the learned langunges, and wrote elegant Latin poems; she died in 1600.

KILLIGREW, Sir William, an English dramatic poet, born at Hanworth, in 1605, died in 1693.

KILLIGREW, Thomas, brother of the former, born in 1611, and distinguished by uncommon natural parts, was page of honour to Charles I., and groom of the bedchamber to Charles II., with whom he had suffered many years' exile. During his absence from his country, he applied his leisure hours to poetry, and wrote 11 plays. He died in 1682, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. Killigrew was a man of very droll humour, with which he used to divert the merry monarch, Charles II., who on that account, was fonder of him than of his best ministers, and would give him access to his presence when he denied it to them.

KILLIGREW, Dr. Henry, brother of the former, born in 1612. His writings were on opposite themes of theology and the drama; that is, sermons and plays.

KILLIGREW, Anne, "a grace for beauty, and a muse for wit," was the daughter of Henry Killigrew, and born in London, a little before the Restoration. She became eminent in the arts of poetry and painting, and died in 1685.

KILLIGREW, Margaret, wife of the duke of Newcastle, and author of 13 folio volumes; she died in 1673.

KILWARDEN, Arthur Wolfe, lord, an Irish judge, of great virtue and impartiality in public life, was killed by a mob in the streets of Dublin, in 1803.

KIMBER, Isaac, a learned protestant dissenting minister, born in 1692, died in London, in 1755. This gentleman was the author of many literary productions, highly esteemed for purity of style and impartiality; among which were "The Life of Oliver Cromwell," "The Life of Bishop Beveridge," a "History of England," in which he was concerned with Messrs. Saily, Hodges, and Kidpath "The Reign of George II." "History of England," esteemed one of the best abridgments of the English history extant. In 1731, he was engaged as editor of "The London Magazine," which he conducted with credit to himself, and advantage to the proprietors, to the time of his death, which was occasioned by a fit of apoplexy.

KIMBER, Edward, son of the preceding, born in 1719, died in 1769. He served an apprenticeship to Mr. John Noon, bookseller, in Cheapside; but his active genius led him early in life to prefer a military occupation under the late general Oglethorpe, from whom he received an ensign's commission, and he was with him at settling the then infant colony of Georgia, and signalized himself in an expedition to the gates of St. Augustine, in Florida; "A Relation or Journal," of which, printed in 1744, was the first production of his pen. Upon quitting the army he succeeded his father as editor of "The London Magazine," which flourished to the time of his death, and then gradually declined till it was entirely dropped, in 1785. In 1750, he published "A Letter from a Citizen of London to his Fellow-citizens, &c., occasioned by the late Earthquakes;" and soon after, "The Life and Adventures of Joe Thompson," 2 vols., and several other novels, of considerable merit. He also compiled, "The Peerages of England, Scotland, and Ireland," contrived for the pocket, and a "History of England," in 10 vols. with plates.

KIMCHI, David, a Jewish rabbi and commentator in the 13th century. In 1232, he was appointed to arbitrate the differences between the French and Spanish synagogues concerning the books of Maimonides. His "Hebrew Grammar" was printed at Venice, in 1545; and his "Talmudical Dictionary" in 1506. His "Commentaries on the Psalms, Prophets, and other books of Scripture," are very valuable.

KINASTON, Francis, an Englishman, educated at Oxford, and an author, died in 1642.

KING, John, bishop of London, born in 1559, died in 1621. James I. used to style him "the king of preachers;" and lord chief justice Coke often declared that "he was the best speaker of the star-chamber in his time."

KING, Henry, bishop of Chichester, son of the preceding, and an elegant poet. He turned the Psalms into verse, and published "Poems, Elegies, Paradoxes, and Sonnets." He was born in 1591, and died in 1669.

KING, John, second son of the bishop of London, and an author, died in 1639.

KING, Edward, fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, in 1633. He was unfortunately drowned in 1637, in his passage from Chester, in the Irish sea; a circumstance which gave birth to the admirable "Lycidas" of Milton, who says of him, that ..... "He knew Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme."

KING, Dr. William, an ingenious and humorous English writer, born in London, in 1663, died in 1712. His poetical and political works are numerous; but his most useful book is "A Historical Account of the Heathen Gods and Heroes, necessary for the understanding of the ancient Poets."

KING, Dr. William, archbishop of Dublin, born in 1650, wrote a celebrated treatise, "De Origine Mali," on the Origin of Evil; wherein he undertook to show how all the several kinds of evil with which the world abounds are consistent with the goodness of God, and may be accounted for without the supposition of an evil principal. He died in 1729.

KING, Peter, chancellor of England, and famous for his ecclesiastical learning, as well as his knowledge in the law, was born in 1669, and died in 1734.

KING, Dr. William, principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and an ingenious theological and political writer, born in 1685, died in 1763.

KING, Sir Edmund, a surgeon and chymist, esteemed by Charles II., whom he attended in his last illness.

KING, John G'len, D. D., F. R. and A. S. S., author of "The Rites and Ceremonies of the Greek Church in Russia," &c., died in 1757.

KING, Edward, F. R. and A. S. S., an eminent English antiquary, poet, and biblical critic, author of "Morsels of Criticism," and other works, born in 1735, died in London, in 1807.

KING, Thomas, a very eminent comedian, who continued 42 years an ornament of the English stage, was born in London, in 1730, and first appeared at Drury-lane Theatre, in 1743. His first essays being passed over without notice, he repaired to Bath, and afterwards to Ireland, where he rapidly accomplished himself in his profession. He was recalled to Drury-lane stage in the year 1749, when he was received as one of the first comic performers of the day. For forty years, he was constantly before the public; and those who recollect his Lord Ogleby, Sir Peter Teazle, Tom, Brass, and Lissardo, must be rather fastidious in their reception of any successor in those parts, finally quitted the stage in 1801. In private life, he was full of whim, anecdote, and pleasantry; and his general conduct bore, even on the most trying occasions, the stamp of the strictest integrity. His acting was characterised by a union of chasteness with vigour, which always produced the most admirable effect. Mr. King died in 1805.

KING, Edward, an eminent and learned English antiquarian, and fellow of the Royal Society, &c.; he died in 1807.

KINSEY, James, L.L. D., a member of Congress from New-Jersey, in 1774, and afterwards chief justice of that state; he died in 1802.

KIPPENHIDS, Henry, a sub-rector of Bremen University, and an author, died in 1678.

KIPPIS, Dr. Andrew, a very celebrated English biographer, being the principal author and conductor of the second edition of the "Biographia Britannica," was born in 1725. His father, a respectable tradesman, dying in the year 1730, he went to reside with his grandfather, Andrew Kippis, of Seaford, in Lincolnshire, and received his classical education at the grammar school in that town. In 1741, he removed to Northampton, and commenced his academical studies under Dr. Doddridge. After a residence of five years at the academy, he was invited by several congregations to become their minister, but gave the preference to an invitation from Boston and Lincolnshire, where he went to reside in September, 1746. Here he continued four years; and in November, 1750, accepted the pastoral charge of a congregation at Dorking, in Surrey. The congregation meeting in Princes-street, Westminster, having been without a minister about two years, he was chosen, in June, 1753, to succeed the Rev. Dr. Obadiah Hughes. In September following, he married, at Boston, Miss Elizabeth Bott; and in the month of October fixed his residence in Westminster. In June, 1767, he received the degree of D. D. from the university of Edinburgh, on the unsolicited recommendation of the late learned professor Robertson. The interests of literature, science, and religion, have received from the exertion of his talents as a writer the most essential advantages. His first efforts in literature were made in the "Gentleman's Magazine;" a periodical publication called the "Library;" and the "Monthly Review;" to each of which he contributed many important articles, especially in the historical and philological departments of the last. His improved edition of Dr Doddridge's Lectures is a work of great value; and "The History of Knowledge, Learning, and Taste, in Great Britain," prefixed to the New Annual Register, merits, and has received, the approbation of the public. He published, at different times, several single sermons entitled to very high praise. The greater part of these he republished, with other practical discourses, in the year 1794; but the work which, next to the studies immediately connected with his office as a Christian minister, engaged his principal attention, and by which he will ever be distinguished, is the "Biographia Britannica." This great national publication has given him a high rank among the literati of his country, and will carry down his name with distinguished reputation to posterity. This great and good man died in 1795.

KIRBY, John Joshua, an artist, born in 1716, was originally a house painter at Ipswich. In 1754 he published Dr. Brook Taylor's "Method of Perspective made easy." By the favour of lord Bute, he became clerk of the works at Ken; and in 1761 published, at the king's expense, "The Perspective of Architecture." Mr. Kirby was a member of the Royal and Antiquarian Societies, and died in 1774.

KIRSTENIUS, Peter, a German physician, author of an "Arabic Grammar," and of several other works in Arabic, born in 1577, died in 1640. It is observed in his epitaph, that he understood 26 languages.

KIRSTENIUS, George, a native of Stettin, eminent as a botanist, died in 1660.

KIRWAN, William, dean of Killala, a distinguished ornament of the church, was originally a Romish priest; but became a zealous adherent and powerful supporter of the protestant faith. He was certainly one of the most popular orators that ever appeared in the pulpit, and no man ever made a more powerful impression on his audience. He was at all times ready to exert his great powers in forwarding the objects of benevolence; many of them owe existence and prosperity to his unparalleled exertions. He was born about 1754, and died near Dublin, in 1805.

KLAPROTH, Martin Henry Von, professor of chymistry at Berlin, and an eminent writer on that science, died in 1817.

KLEBER, L. B., a famous general in the French revolutionary army, was born at Strasburg, in 1750. He accompanied Buonaparte to Egypt, and was by him left to command there on his departure. Kleber afterwards captured Cairo, and formed an alliance with Murat Bey. In 1800 he was assassinated by an Arab.

KLEIST, Ewald Christian de, distinguished as an officer in the Prussian service, and as a poet. He was killed in battle, in 1759.

lord Bute, he became clerk of the works at Ken; and in 1761 published, at the king's expense, "The Perspective of Architecture." Mr. Kirby was a member of the Royal and Antiquarian Societies, and died in 1774.

KIRBY, Ephraim, a native of Connecticut, was the first reporter of law cases and decisions, in the United States. He was afterwards a judge of the district court of the U. S. at New-Orleans, and died in 1804.

KIRCH, Mary Margaret, a native of Leipsic. She was much attached to astronomical studies, and in 1702, discovered a comet, on which she published observations; she died in 1730.

KIRCHER, Athanasius, a famous German philosopher, and mathematician, born in 1601, died in 1680, after having published 22 vols. in folio, 11 in 4to., and 3 in 8vo. His works are rather curious than useful, savouring much of vision and fancy.

KIRCHER, Conrad, of Augsburg, known for his Greek concordance of the Old Testament, in 1602.

KIRCHMAN, a learned German, died at Lubeck, in 1643.

He was likewise author of three tragedies, called "The Death of Adam;" "Solomon;" and "David." His funeral was conducted with extraordinary pomp; being attended by the senate of Hamburg, the diplomatic body, the clergy, men of letters, and merchants, in a procession of 76 coaches: at Altona, it was joined by 50 more carriages to the village of Ottensen, where he was buried with all the most honourable ceremonies that could be devised.

KNAPTON, George, a portrait painter, and keeper of the king's pictures, died in 1778.

KNELLER, Sir Godfrey, an eminent painter, born at Lubec, about 1648. His great patron in England was Charles II.; but after the death of that monarch, he was well received by king James and his queen, and constantly employed by them until the Revolution. It is very remarkable of this painter that he had the honour to draw 10 crowned heads; 4 kings of England and three queens; the czar of Muscovy; Charles II., king of Spain, afterwards emperor, when he was in England; and the French king, Lewis XIV.; besides several electors and princes. He was gentleman of the privy chamber to king William, to queen Anne, and to George I.; and was, in several reigns, a deputy-lieutenant of the county of Middlesex, and in the commission of the peace for that and other counties. He died in 1723.

KNIGHT, Dr. Samuel, archdeacon of Berks, and author of "Lives of Erasmus and Dean Colet," died in 1746.

KNOLLES, Sir Robert, a very eminent general, who rose by degrees from the rank of a private, and with 30,000 men in the wars of Edward III., marched to the gates of Paris. Returning home, laden with wealth and honours, he founded Rochester bridge.

KNOWLTON, Thomas, an English botanist, died in 1782.

KNOX, John, an eminent Scottish minister, a chief instrument and promoter of the reformation in that country, and a steady and undaunted patriot in the worst of times, born in 1505, and died in 1572. As to his character, he was, like Luther, one of those extraordinary persons, of whom few, if any, are observed to speak with sufficient temper; all is either extravagant encomium or senseless invective. After his death, came out a "History of the Reformation within the realm of Scotland," &c., to which are subjoined all his other works.

KNOX, John, many years a bookseller of eminence in London, who devoted the fortune he acquired in this business to the improvement of his country, in the planning a herring fishery, and the settlement of new towns on the north east of Scotland. He visited and explored that kingdom 16 times in 22 years, beginning in 1764; and, in two volumes, gave a systematic view of Scotland in general; he died in 1790.

KNOX, Vicesimus, D. D., a learned divine and miscellaneous writer, born in 1752. At the death of his father, he was elected, in his room, master of Tunbridge school, where he resided 33 years; retiring from it in 1812, and being himself succeeded by his son, the present master. The duties of a parish priest he discharged for nearly forty years, with a zeal and ability perhaps never surpassed; scarcely, during that long period, requiring any assistance in the performance of the church service. He died at his son's, in 1821. His principal works are, "Essays, Moral and Literary;" "Liberal Education;" "Winter Evenings;" "Personal Nobility;" "Christian Philosophy;" "Sermons;" "Elegant Extracts;" "Elegant Epistles;" "Domestic Divinity," &c.

KNOX, Hugh, D. D., an eminent congregational clergyman at the island of St. Croix, where he died after a long and useful life, at a very advanced age.

KNOX, Henry, a distinguished officer of the revolution, was commander of the artillery until the capture of Cornwallis, after which he was made a major general in the army. He was afterwards secretary at war, under Washington, and died in 1810.

KOSCIUSKO, Thaddeus, a famous Polish general, was bred at Warsaw, and served in the American war as aid de-camp to general Washington. He afterwards headed the Poles in their resistance to Russian oppression, but in vain; he was severely wounded and made prisoner by the Russians, who, however, treated him with great respect, and the emperor Paul gave him an estate. He died in Switzerland, in 1817.

KOTTER, Christopher, a fanatic, who lived at Sprottow; he died in 1647.

KOTTERUS, Christopher, a tanner, of Silesia, and one of the three fanatics whose visions were published at Amsterdam in 1657, with the following title, "Lux in Tenebris." He died in 1647.

KOTZEBUE, Augustus Von, born at Weimar, in 1761. He was intended for the profession of the law; but the drama had more attractions for him, and he wrote numerous plays, the best of which have been translated. His "Stranger," "Lover's Vows," and "Pizarro," have had great success. Kotzebue was assassinated, in 1819, by a fanatical student of Jena, named Sandt, who then stabbed himself, but recovered from his wounds, and suffered decapitation for the murder.

KOUCK, Peter, a Dutchman, and principal painter to Charles V., died in 1559.

KOULI KHAN, Thamas, alias NADIR SHAH, born in 1687, in the province of Chersan, in Persia. He was the son of the governor of a Persian fortress; and engaging in the service of the Schah Thamas, whose throne Eschref, a usurper, possessed, and had lorded it over the Persians for five years with the utmost barbarity, the sophi gave him at length the command of his army. The new general entirely defeated Eschref, conducted Schah Thamas in triumph to Ispahan, and established him upon the throne of his ancestors. Eschref, having got together his treasures and his women, fled toward Candahar with 10,000 men. Kouli Khan, at the head of 15,000 men, went in pursuit of him, and recommended it to the king to go against the Turks with the rest of his army; assuring him that, as soon as he had secured Eschref, he would fly to his assistance. Kouli Khan at last came up with the usurper, and prepared for an engagement which was very soon decisive. The Aghwans, surrounded, were either cut to pieces or taken: Eschref was among the prisoners, and all his treasures fell into the hands of the victor. Kouli Khan ordered both his eyes to be put out, and some days after had him beheaded. He then hastened back to succour the sophi, whom he supposed to be engaged with the Turks; but was surprised to find, when he came near Ispahan, that he had concluded a peace with the Porte, disbanded his army, and sent him orders to do the same. These orders he received with indignation, exclaiming against the ignominious peace and his effeminate prince. Instead of disbanding his army, which now consisted of 70,000 men, he marched with it to Ispahan, seized the Schah Thamas, imprisoned him in a strong fortress, and in an assembly of the chief men of Persia got him deposed, and his son, an infant six months old, proclaimed Schah, by the name of Schah Abbas III. In his name, Kouli Khan assumed to himself the sovereign power, and presently issued a manifesto disclaiming the late peace with the Turks. After having recovered all that had been taken from Persia, he concluded a peace with the Ottoman Porte in 1736. The following year, the young Schah Abbas died, and Kouli Khan procured himself to be proclaimed his successor. As he thought war would be a better prop to his throne than peace, he immediately carried his victorious arms against the Mogul, and in one single battle conquered almost all that empire. In this expedition he killed 200,000 people; and brought away a treasure worth about 145 millions, in which was the imperial throne, set with diamonds of an immense value. Taking from the Mogul all the country that lay between the former limits of Persia and the Indus, and subduing the whole country of the Usbeck, he vastly enlarged the bounds of his empire; but he now fell into a state which seemed to border upon distraction: he attempted to change the religion of Persia to that of Omar; hanged up the chief priests; put his own son to death; and was guilty of such cruelty, that he was assassinated in 1747, in his 60th year; having reigned above 20 years over one of the most powerful empires on the globe.

LAMBRUN, Margaret, was a Scotch woman, and one of the retinue of Mary queen of Scots, as was also her husband, who dying of grief for the tragical end of that princess, his wife took up a resolution of revenging the death of both upon queen Elizabeth. For that purpose she put on a man's habit; and, assuming the name of Anthony Sparke, repaired to the court of the queen of England, always carrying with her a brace of pistols, one to kill Elizabeth, and the other to shoot herself, in order to avoid the hands of justice; but her design happened to miscarry by an accident which saved the queen's life. One day, as she was pushing through the crowd to come up to her majesty, who was then walking in her garden, she chanced to drop one of the pistols. This being seen by the guards, she was seized, in order to be sent immediately to prison, but the queen not suspecting her to be one of her own sex, had a mind first to examine her. Accordingly demanding her name, country, and quality, Margaret replied with an unmoved steadiness, "Madam, though I appear in this habit, I am a woman; my name is Margaret Lambrun; I was several years in the service of queen Mary, my mistress, whom you have so unjustly put to death; and by her death you have also caused that of my husband, who died of grief to see so innocent a queen perish so iniquitously. Now, as I had the greatest love and affection for both those personages, I resolved, at the peril of my life, to revenge their death by killing you, who are the cause of both." The queen pardoned her, and granted her a safe conduct till she should be set upon the coast of France.

LATIMER, Hugh, bishop of Worcester, one of the first reformers of the church of England, born in 1470. It is a remarkable circumstance, though not altogether without parallel, that, from being a papist he became a zealous protestant, active in supporting the reformed doctrine, and assiduous to make converts. For his zeal, however, in the protestant faith, he was, with Ridley, bishop of London, burnt at Oxford, in 1555.

LAUD, William, archbishop of Canterbury in the reign of Charles I., was born in 1573, and beheaded in 1645 for high treason; he fell a sacrifice to party violence, and high church sentiments.

LAUDER, William, a native of Scotland, memorable for an attempt to ruin the reputation of Milton; an attempt which ended in the destruction of his own. He began first to retail part of his design in the Gentleman's Magazine, 1747; and finding that his forgeries were not detected, was encouraged, in 1751, to collect them, with additions, into a volume, entitled "An Essay on Milton's Use and Imitation of the Modems in his Paradise Lost." The fidelity of his quotations had been doubted by several people; and the falsehood of them was soon after demonstrated by bishop Douglas, in a pamphlet entitled, "Milton vindicated from the charge of Plagiarism, brought against him by Lander; and Lander himself convicted of several Forgeries and gross Impositions on the Public." The appearance of this detection overwhelmed Lander with confusion. He subscribed a confession dictated by Dr. Johnson; and, finding that his character was not to be retrieved, quitted the kingdom, and passed the remainder of his life in universal contempt. He died at Barbadoes, in 1770. See BOWLE.

LAUDONIN, or LOUDON, Gideon Ernest, field-marshal, and commander in chief of the Austrian forces, born in 1716, died in 1790. So high was his reputation, that Frederic the Great, of Prussia, used to say, he feared nobody so much as Laudonin.

LAVATER, Lewis, an ecclesiastic, known for his abilities as a protestant controversialist, died in 1586.

LAVATER, John Gaspar Christian, a Swiss divine, of warm fancy, and natural acuteness, by which he was led to turn his attention to the expression of human sentiment and character. He perceived that not only transient passion, but even the more permanent qualities of character, are often very distinctly expressed; and carried his observations in this way much farther than any other person had before advanced. Success inflated his imagination, and he became an enthusiast in the study of physiognomy. The opinions relative to it, which he propagated, were a medley of acute observation, ingenious conjecture, and wild reverie. His books, published in the German language, were multiplied by many editions, and translations. This amiable clergyman (for such he was,) was born at Zurich, in 1741, and died there in 1801, in consequence of a wound which he received from a French soldier a twelve month before.

LEE, Samuel, an Englishman, ejected from his living for non-conformity in 1686, and embarked for North America.

LEE, Nathaniel, an eminent English dramatic poet. He is the author of eleven plays, all acted with applause. His thoughts are wonderfully suited to tragedy; but frequently lost in such a cloud of words, that it is difficult to see the beauty of them. He died in 1691.

LEE, Thomas, president of the council of Virginia, in 1749. The administration of the affairs of the colony devolved on him until his death, which occurred in 1750.

LEE, Charles, a native of Wales. After serving in the English army under generals Abercrombie and Burgoyne, came to Virginia, in 1773, and at the commencement of the revolutionary war, was appointed a major-general in the army, and afterwards to the command of the troops in the southern states. He rendered great and important services to the United States, but being censured and suspended for disobedience of orders, he retired to private life, and died from chagrin and mortification, on account of his disgrace, about 1782.

LEE, Richard Henry, an eminent citizen, and distinguished patriot of the revolution, was a member of congress from Virginia, in 1776, and first proposed to that body the declaration of independence, which he afterwards signed. He was subsequently president of congress, and a senator of the United States, under the federal constitution. He died in 1794, and his name will be remembered with gratitude, as one of the most conspicuous actors of the revolution, so long as Americans enjoy the benefits resulting from that event.

LEE, Arthur, LL. D., brother of the preceding, was also an ardent friend to the rights of the colonies, and rendered them essential services, while agent of Virginia, at London. He was afterwards minister to France, from the United States, with Dr. Franklin and Mr. Deane; he died in 1792.

LEMON, George William, an English divine, who distinguished himself by the publication of a large volume on "English Etymology," being a derivative dictionary, in which he has not only investigated the radical meaning of many obscure and almost unintelligible words, but exploded many vulgar errors, and illustrated many passages in ancient English writers. He was born in 1726, and died in 1797.

LE MONNIER, Peter Charles, a celebrated French astronomer, and one of those who made the journey to the north in 1785, for the admeasurement of the globe, died at Paris, in 1799.

LE MONNIER, Lewis William, brother of the preceding, was a distinguished physician and an able philosopher. He wrote several valuable articles for the French Encyclopedia, and died in 1799.

L'ENCLOS, Ninon de, a very distinguished French courtizan, who, with a fine understanding and philosophic spirit, would reason like Socrates, though she acted like Lais; while, therefore, the great Conde, the Villareaux, the Sevignes, the Rochefoucaults, enjoyed her as a mistress, the learned consulted her as a philosopher and a critic. This bewitching woman died in 1706, aged 90, retaining her personal charms to the last. She left some children, and one of her sons died before her, a very tragical death indeed. Not knowing her to be his mother (for all her operations were conducted with secrecy and mystery), he actually fell in love with her; and when, to get rid of his passion, she discovered herself to him, through shame and despair he poignarded himself in her presence.

L'ENFANT, James, an eminent French protestant minister, born in 1691, died in 1728. He was author of three capital works, viz. Histories of the Council of Constance, Basil, and Pisa. LEO X., pope of Rome, ever to be remembered by protestants as having been the cause of the Reformation begun by Luther, was born at Florence, in 1475, and died in 1521. He was a lover and patroniser of learning and learned men, and equally favoured arts and sciences, being himself a man of taste. For this he has been often celebrated, and by Pope in particular:

“But see! each Muse in Leo's golden days Starts from her trance, and trims her wither'd bays;

Rome's ancient genius, o'er its ruins spread,
Shakes off the dust, and rears his rev'rend head.
Then Sculpture and her sister arts revive;
Stones leap to form, and rocks begin to live;
With sweeter notes each rising temple rung;
A Raphael painted and a Vida sung.”

LILBURNE, John, a famous English enthusiast, born in 1618, died in 1657. He was the chief ringleader of the levellers, a modeller of state, and publisher of several seditious pamphlets; and of so quarrelsome a disposition, as to have it aptly said of him, that if there were none living but him, John would be against Lilburne, and Lilburne against John.

LILIENTAL, Michael, a Prussian, professor at Königsberg. He published various works, which are preserved in the memoirs of the Berlin academy; he died in 1750.

LILLO, George, an excellent dramatic writer, born in London, in 1693. Though strongly attached to the muses, he seemed to have laid it down as a maxim, that the devotion paid to them ought always to tend to the promotion of virtue, morality and religion. In pursuance of this aim, Lillo was happy in the choice of his subjects, and showed great power in affecting the heart, by working up the passions to such a height as to render the distresses of common and domestic life equally interesting to the audiences as that of kings and heroes; and the ruin brought on private families by an indulgence of avarice, lust, &c., as the havoc made in states and empires by ambition, cruelty, or tyranny. His "George Barnwell," "Fatal Curiosity," and "Arden of Feversham," are all planned on common and well-known stories; yet they have much more frequently drawn tears from an audience than the more pompous tragedies of "Alexander the Great," "All for Love," &c. He died in 1739.

LILLY, William, a famous English astrologer, born in 1602, died in 1681. In him we have an instance of the general superstition and ignorance that prevailed in the time of the civil war between Charles I. and his parliament; for the king consulted this astrologer to know in what quarter he should conceal himself if he could escape from Hampton court; and general Fairfax, on the other side, sent for him to his army, to ask him if he could tell by his art whether God was with them and their cause. Lilly, who made his fortune by favourable predictions to both parties, assured the general that God would be with him and his army. His almanacs were in repute upwards of 36 years, and to be found in almost every family in England.

LILY, William, an English grammarian, born at Oldham, in Hampshire, in 1466. He was appointed first master of St. Paul's school, by the founder, Dean Colet, in 1510, and died of the plague at London, in 1522. He is highly praised by Erasmus, who revised the syntax in his "Grammar," for his uncommon knowledge in the languages, and admirable skill in the instruction of youth.

LILY, George, eldest son of the grammarian, patronised at Rome, by cardinal Pole. He wrote some historical books, and was the first who published a correct map of England; he died in 1559.

LOWTH, Dr. Robert, son of the preceding, bishop of London, &c., born in 1710, died in 1787. His literary character is well known by his learned "Praelections" on Hebrew poetry, which were translated into English by Mr. Gregory, in 1787. But perhaps the most useful of his achievements are what refer to his own language; which owes to him, what nothing said in it can ever pay, the "First Institutes of Grammar;" and, in his "Translation of Isaiah," the sublimest poetry in the world.

LOYER, Peter le, a native of Anjou, and author of a curious history of spectres, and other works; he died in 1634.

LOYOLA, Ignatius, of, the founder of the jesuits, born in 1491, at the castle of Loyola, in Spain, was first page to Ferdinand V. king of Spain, and then an officer in his army; in which he signalized himself by his valour, and was wounded in both legs at the siege of Pampeluna, in 1521. To this circumstance the jesuits owe their origin; for while he was under cure of his wounds, a Life of the Saints was put into his hands, which determined him to forsake the military for the ecclesiastical profession. His first devout exercise was to dedicate himself to the blessed virgin as her knight: he then went a pilgrimage to the Holy Land; and on his return to Europe he continued his theological studies in the universities of Spain, though he was then 33 years of age. After this he went to Paris, and in France laid the foundation of this new order, the institutes of which he presented to pope Paul III., who made many objections to them; but Ignatius adding to the three vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience, a fourth implicit submission to the holy see, the institution was confirmed in 1540. The pious founder died in 1555.

LUBIENETSKI, Theodore, a native of Cracow, eminent as a painter; he died in 1716.

LUCIUS II., Gerard de Caccianemici, a native of Bologna, elected pope, in 1144, and died soon after.

LUCIUS III., Humbaldo Allineigoli, a native of Lucca, elected pope in 1181. The inquisition originated under this pontiff.

LUCRETIA, the famous Roman matron, wife of Collatinus, and the cause of the revolution of Rome from a monarchy to a republic. This lady, being violated by Sextus, the eldest son of Tarquin, king of Rome, stabbed herself, 509 B. C. The bloody poniard, with her dead body, exposed to the senate, was the signal of Roman liberty. The expulsion of the Tarquins, and the abolition of the regal dignity, was instantly resolved on, and carried into execution.

LUCRETIUS, Titus Carus, an ancient Roman philosopher and poet, much esteemed for his learning and eloquence, wrote 6 books "De Natura Rerum," was born about 96 B. C., and died 54 B. C. His poem has been translated into English by Mr. Creech, and his version is generally esteemed.

LULLI, John Baptist, an eminent musical composer, and superintendent of music to Louis XIV., born at Florence, in 1634. In 1686, the king was seized with an indisposition which threatened his life; but recovering from it, Lulli was required to compose a Te Deum upon the occasion. He did compose one, not more remarkable for its excellence, than for the unhappy accident which attended the performance of it. He had neglected nothing in the composition of the music, or the preparations for the execution of it; and, the better to demonstrate his zeal, he himself led the time; but, with the cane he used for this purpose, he gave himself, in the heat of action, a blow upon the end of his foot; and this, ending in a gangrene which baffled all the skill of his surgeons, put an end to his life, in 1687.

LUMLEY, Joanna lady, translated into Latin, from the Greek, three of Isocrates' orations, which are still preserved at Westminster; she died in 1620.

LUTHER, Martin, an illustrious German divine, and reformer of the church, born at Isleben, in Saxony, in 1483. He studied at Erfurth, being designed for a civilian; but an awful catastrophe made such an impression upon his mind, that he resolved to retire from the world. As he was walking in the fields with a fellow-student, they were struck by lightning, Luther to the ground, and his companion dead by his side. He entered into the order of Augustine hermits at Erfurth; from this place he removed to Wittembergh, being appointed by the elector of Saxony, professor of theology and philosophy in the university just founded there by that prince. In 1512, he was sent to Rome, to plead the cause of some convents of his order who had quarrelled with their vicar-general; this gave him an opportunity of observing the corruption of the pontifical court, and the debauched lives of the dignitaries of the church, and probably gave him the first disgust to the Romish ecclesiastical government, especially as he had engaged in the monastic life from motives of genuine piety. Upon his return to Wittenbergh, it was remarked that he grew unusually pensive, and more austere in his life and conversation: he likewise read and expounded the sacred writings in lectures and sermons, and threw new lights on obscure passages: the minds of his auditors being thus prepared, a favourable occasion soon offered for carrying into execution his grand plan of reformation. In 1517, pope Leo X. published his indulgencies. Albert, archbishop of Mentz and Magdeburgh, was commissioner for Germany, and was to have half the sum raised in that country; Tezelus, a Dominican friar, was deputed to collect, with others of his order, for Saxony, and he carried his zeal so far, as to declare his commission to be so extensive, that no crime could be too great to be pardoned; by purchasing indulgencies, not only past sins, but those intended, were to be forgiven. Against these vile practices Luther openly preached, with wonderful success, and thus began the Reformation in Germany. Luther died in 1546.

MAGIUS, Bartholomew, brother of Jerome, a physician of Bologna, author of a treatise on gunshot wounds, died in 1552.

MAGLIABECCHI, Antony, librarian to the grand duke of Tuscany, and editor of some scarce Latin authors, born at Florence, in 1633, died in 1714. His name is very famous among the learned; but a prodigious memory was his distinguishing talent. As an instance of this, Mr. Spence tells the following story of him, which indeed seems hardly credible: "A gentleman, to make trial of the force of his memory, lent him a manuscript that he was going to print. Some time after it was returned, the gentleman came to him with a melancholy face, and pretended that it was lost. Magliabecchi, being requested to recollect what he remembered of it, wrote the whole without missing a word, or varying the spelling." His attention was wholly absorbed by his books and studies. As he led a most sedentary life, and yet arrived to an extreme old age, (for he died in his 81st year,) it may be curious to subjoin an account of the regimen that he observed; which is given us by Marmi, who composed his eulogium. "He always kept his head warmly covered, and took, at certain times, treacle, which he esteemed an excellent preservative against noxious vapours. He loved strong wine, but drank it soberly, and in small quantities. He lived upon the plainest and most ordinary food. He took tobacco, to which he was a slave to excess; but was absolute master of himself in every other particular."

MAHMED, Aga, a noble Persian, of great renown as a warrior; he died in 1788.

MAHOMET, or MOHAMMED, a celebrated impostor, and founder of the Mahometan religion, born in 571, at Mecca, a city of Arabia, of the tribe of the Korashites, which was reckoned the noblest in all that country, and was descended in a direct line from Pher Korais, the founder of it. In his 40th year he began to take upon him the style of the Apostle of God, and under that character to propagate the imposture which he had concerted. On his first appearance, he was treated with derision and contempt, and called by the people, a sorcerer, magician, liar, impostor, and teller of fables, of which he frequently complains in the Koran; so that for the first year he made little or no progress; but persevering in his design, which he managed with great address, he afterwards gained many proselytes, among which were some of the most considerable men of the city. The main arguments which Mahomet used to delude men into a belief of this imposture, were promises and threats, being those which he knew would work the easiest on the affections of the vulgar. His promises were chiefly of paradise; which with great art he framed agreeably to the customs and taste of the Arabians: for they, lying within the torrid zone, were, through the nature of their climate, as well as the then excessive corruption of their manners, exceedingly given to the love of women; and the scorching heat and dryness of the country making rivers of water, cooling drinks, shaded gardens, and pleasant fruits, most refreshing and delightful to them, they were from hence apt to place their highest enjoyment in things of this nature; and therefore, to answer the height of their carnal desires, he made the joys of heaven to consist totally in these particulars, which he promises them abundantly in many places of the Koran. On the contrary, he described the punishments of hell, which he threatened to all who would not believe in him, to consist of such torments as would appear to them the most afflicting and grievous to be borne: as that they should drink nothing but boiling and stinking water, nor breathe any thing but exceeding hot winds, things most terrible in Arabia; that they should dwell for ever in continual fire, intensely burning, and be surrounded with a black, hot, salt smoke, as with a coverlid, &c., and, that he might omit nothing which could work on their fears, he terrified them with the threats of grievous punishments in this life. He pretended to receive all his revelations from the angel Gabriel, who, he said, was sent from God on purpose to deliver them to him. He was, it seems, subject to the falling sickness, so that, whenever the fit was upon him, he pretended it to be a trance, and that then the angel Gabriel was come from God with some new revelations to him. His pretended revelations he put into several chapters, the collection whereof makes up the Koran, which is the bible of the Mahometans. It is the universal doctrine of the Mahometans that their religion is to be propagated by the sword, and that all true mussulmen are bound to fight for it. To reconcile the minds of the cowardly, and add vigour to the brave, he invented his doctrine of fate and destiny; telling them, that those who were slain in battle, though they had tarried at home in their houses, must, nevertheless, have died at that moment, the time of every man's life being predetermined by God; but that those who died fighting for the faith, gained the advantage of dying martyrs for their religion, and immediately entered into Paradise, as the reward of it. Having at length been established in the temporal sovereignty, which he had long been aiming at, Mahomet assumed all the insignia belonging there to; still retaining the sacred character of chief pontiff of his religion, as well as the royal with which he had been invested. He transmitted them both together to all his successors, who by the title of caliphs reigned after him. He died Sept. 12, 632, in consequence of having, 3 years before, eaten of a shoulder of mutton which had been poisoned by a daughter of his host, at Caibar. He was buried in the place where he died, which was in the chamber of his best-beloved wife, at Medina, where he lies to this day.

MARIA THERESA, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, married Francis Stephen of Lorraine, who was crowned emperor, in 1745. Her reign began with a war, in which all the neighbouring nations were engaged, and Maria was near losing her throne. After the war had continued eight years, a peace was concluded at Aix-la-Chapelle, and Maria immediately devoted herself to repairing the ravages which her subjects had suffered during the commotion. She built hospitals, encouraged commerce and science, and did every thing which humanity and munificence could devise, to render her infirm soldiers comfortable. The king of Prussia, again declared war against her, but in this terrible struggle, she maintained her elevation, and a peace was established. After a long reign, during which she displayed, heroism, virtue, and charity, to a degree which endeared her to her subjects, she died at Vienna, in 1780.

MARIA ANTOINETTE, queen of France, was the daughter of the emperor Francis I., and Maria Theresa; she was married to Lewis XVI. of France, in 1770. This celebrated queen, was humane and benevolent to her subjects, but fond of magnificence and pleasure. She was doomed in the latter part of her reign to witness the most horrid scenes of riot and murder among her subjects, the execution of her husband, and her own trial and condemnation. She bore all these calamities with great fortitude and serenity, but such was their effect on her, that the colour of her hair changed to a silvery white. She was guillotined, being carried to the scaffold in a cart, on the 16th Oct., 1793.

MARVIELLES, N. de, a French officer, author of some poetical pieces of merit, in Latin and French; he died in 1775.

MARY, the mother of our blessed Saviour, was of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal house of David.

MARY, wife of Cleophas, called in Scripture, the sister of the Virgin, and mother of the apostles James the Less, Simon, Jude, and Joseph.

MARY, queen of England, eldest daughter of Henry VIII., and Catharine of Arragon. She was a learned woman, but bigoted in the popish superstition, exceedingly jealous, and violent and sanguinary in her resentments. During her reign, fire, faggots, and the stake, were the horrid means used to make proselytes to the Romish church. The sacrifice of the innocent lady Jane Grey and her husband, to a mean fit of jealousy, showed a degree of barbarity rarely equalled in civilized life. She married Philip of Spain, whose coldness toward her, together with the loss of Calais, is said to have so preyed on her mind, that she fell into a fever, of which she died in 1558.

MARY, queen of England, wife of William III., was daughter of James II., by the daughter of lord Clarendon. She is represented as a meek, inoffensive character, little inclined to meddle with public affairs, and of a humane and benevolent disposition; she died in 1694.

MARY, daughter of Henry III., duke of Brabant, married Philip the Bold, of France, in 1274. She was accused of poisoning one of her husband's sons, of which crime, she was, however, probably innocent; she died in 1321.

MARY, of Anjou, daughter of Lewis II., and wife of Charles VII., of France. She was a woman of a very heroic character, and died in 1463.

MARY, daughter of Henry VII., of England, married Lewis XII., of France, and was grandmother to the unfortunate lady Jane Grey; she died in 1534.

MARY THERESA, of Austria, daughter of Philip IV., of Spain, married Lewis XIV., of France, in 1660, and died in 1683.

MARY DE MEDICIS, daughter of Francis II., duke of Tuscany, was married to Henry IV., of France, in 1600. She was banished by her son Lewis XIII, together with her favourites and attendants, and died in poverty, at Cologne, in 1642.

MARY LECZINSKA, daughter of Stanislaus, king of Poland, married Lewis king of France, in 1725, and is represented as a very amiable and virtuous princess; she died in 1768.

MARY, of Cleves, married Henry I., prince of Conde. She was loved with so much ardour by the duke of Anjou, afterwards Henry III., that when he came to the throne, he designed to annul her marriage, and take her himself; but her sudden death, probably by poison, at the age of 18, in 1574, left him disconsolate.

MARY, of Arragon, daughter of Sancho III., wife of Otho, was put to death in 993, for falsely accusing, and destroying the count of Modena.

MARY, daughter of Charles, duke of Burgundy, married Maximilian, son of the emperor Frederic, and thus transferred the dominions of Burgundy to the house of Austria; she died in 1482.

MARY, of Austria, daughter of Philip, king of Spain, married, in 1521, Lewis, king of Hungary, who was slain at the battle of Mohats. She was a woman of courage and firmness, and a great protector of literature; she died in 1558.

MARY STUART, queen of Scots, famous for her beauty, wit, learning, and misfortunes, daughter of James V., king of Scotland, succeeded her father, in 1542, eight days after her birth. In 1558, she married Francis, dauphin, and afterwards king of France; by which means she became queen of France. This monarch dying in 1560, she returned into Scotland, and married her cousin, Henry Stuart, (lord Darnley,) in 1565; but excluding him from any share of the government (as he suspected) by the advice of Rizzio, an Italian musician, her favourite and secretary, the king, by the assistance of some of the principal nobility, suddenly surprised them together, and Rizzio was slain in the queen's presence, in 1566. The next year the king was blown up with gunpowder, in a private house, to which he had retired with a few friends. The earl of Bothwell, the new favourite of Mary, was undoubtedly the contriver of this murder; he was, however, acquitted by the nobles of his and Mary's party; and, in about two months after, the queen, to the astonishment of all Europe, married this ambitious villain. This shameful conduct occasioned the revolt of the chief nobility, and her best subjects, by whom she was taken prisoner, compelled to resign the crown, and her son James VI., was crowned. The queen soon after escaped from prison and raised an army to oppose the regent, Murray, but was defeated, and fled to England, in 1568 where she was detained a prisoner, charged by her own subjects with the murder of her husband, king Henry. During the long imprisonment of the queen, she was justly considered as the head of the popish party, who wished to see a princess of their persuasion on the throne of England. She countenanced, if she was not directly concerned in, the plots against the life of Elizabeth, who was reduced to the necessity of sacrificing her to her own personal safety. She was tried for a conspiracy, condemned, and beheaded, in 1587.

MARY, a French poetess, who resided in England, in the 13th century. Her poems on chivalry, &c., are preserved in the British museum.

MILTON, John, a most illustrious English poet, and famous politician, was born in London, in 1608. In 1625, he was admitted of Christ's college, Cambridge. His father designed him for the church, and he was himself inclined to that profession for some time, but after he had taken the degree of M. A., in 1632, he left the university and returned to his father. During his retirement for five years, he enriched his mind with the choicest stores of Grecian and Roman learning, making poetry his principal study. The poems entitled "Comus," "L'Allegro," "Il Penseroso," and "Lycidas," all written during this time, would have transmitted his fame to the latest posterity, if he had never produced any thing else. On the death of his mother, in 1638, he visited foreign countries, and passed nearly two years in France and Italy, where he distinguished himself by his talents in poetry. Milton returned to England, in 1659, and employed himself in educating his sister's two sons: and being solicited by several friends for the same favour for their children, he took a handsome garden-house, in Aldersgate-street, fit for the purpose. Here he wrote many polemic and controversial tracts. In 1643, he married a daughter of Richard Powell, Esq. She had not lived with her husband much more than a month, when, under a pretence of visiting her friends, she deserted him. About two years afterwards, he was surprised by the entrance of his wife, who imploring pardon and reconciliation on her knees, was again received to his bosom.

"——— soon his heart relented
Towards her, his life so late and sole delight,
Now at his feet submissive in distress."

At the subversion of the monarchy by the death of the king, Milton, whose principles were strongly republican, was taken into the service of the commonwealth, and made Latin secretary to the council of state. In 1651, he published his celebrated piece entitled "Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio contra Claudii Salmasii Defensionem Regiam;" which spread his fame over all Europe. While writing this, he lost his eyesight, which had been decaying several years. In 1652, he lost his wife; but he immediately married a second. At the restoration, he was included in the general amnesty; and having married a third wife, removed to a house in the Artillery-walk. His circumstances were much reduced by losses at the restoration; but his principles not suffering him to seek or accept of any public employment at court, he sat down to his studies, and applied himself diligently to finish his grand poem, "Paradise Lost," which was published in 1667, and in 1670, he published "Paradise Regained," to which was added "Samson Agonistes, a dramatic poem." In 1669, he published his "History of Britain," which had occupied him many years. He died of the gout, in 1674.

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY

OF SOME OF THE MOST

EMINENT LIVING CHARACTERS,

IN VARIOUS PARTS OF THE WORLD.

AL

AN

ADAMS, John, late president of the United States, was born at Boston, about 1735, and bred to the bar, of which he became a distinguished member. He was conspicuous as one of the first and most decided opponents of the encroachments of the British government, on the rights and liberties of the colonies, and as one of the most energetic friends of the revolution. He was a member of the continental congress in 1776, and one of the signers of the declaration of Independence. He was afterwards sent as minister from the congress to Holland, and was acknowledged in that character by the states. While he retained that station, he rendered important services to his country by procuring loans, and concluding treaties of amity and commerce. Toward the close of the revolutionary war, he was appointed, together with Dr. Franklin, Mr. Jay, and Mr. Laurens, commissioner for negotiating a peace with Great Britain; with this view he repaired to Paris, where with his colleagues, he had the high honour of procuring the recognition of the entire independence of the colonies by that power, and of signing a treaty of peace to that effect. He was afterwards the first ambassador from the United States to Great Britain. On the adoption of the constitution of the United States, Mr. Adams was chosen first vice president, and on the retirement of general Washington at the close of his second presidential term, he succeeded him as president of the United States. Mr. Adams has resided as a private citizen on his estate at Quincy, since his retirement from the presidency. He has written an able defence of the constitution of the United States.

ADAMS, John Quincy, is the son of the preceding, and was born at Quincy, about 1765. He has long been engaged in public life, as the representative of Massachusetts, in the United States senate, and of his country, as her ambassador at several of the European courts. He was one of the commissioners, who signed the treaty of peace with Great Britain, at Ghent, in 1815. The following year he was appointed secretary of state under Mr. Monroe, and discharged the duties of that office, for eight years, with distinguished reputation and ability. Mr. Adams is now president of the United States, for the term of four years, from the 4th day of March, 1825.

ALLEXANDER, Paulowitz, emperor of Russia, is the eldest son of Paul I. He was born December 22, 1777, and married to Elizabeth Alexiowna, princess of Baden, in 1793. He ascended the throne in 1801, and was crowned at Moscow the same year. The first acts of his reign, were distinguished for their wisdom and lenity. He ordered the recruiting for the army to be discontinued, the public taxes to be diminished, the situation of the exiles to be examined, and their miseries alleviated; he abolished the censorship of writings, and gave liberty to the press; he corrected the administration of justice; established a uniformity of weights and measures, throughout his empire; encouraged learning and science, and patronized literary men; and also liberally endowed schools and universities, in different parts of the empire. The invasion of Russia in 1812, by Napoleon, and the subsequent events which resulted in the defeat and dethronement of that emperor, are familiarly known; they were such as greatly to elevate the character and influence of Alexander, and to place him first on the list of European sovereigns. Later events, however, have contributed farther to develop his character; they have shown him haughty, ambitious, and tyrannical; the champion of legitimacy; the enemy of liberal principles of civil government, and the decided opponent of reform. He is now the most efficient member of the Holy Alliance.

ANGOULEME, Louis Anthony de Bourbon, duc d', dauphin of France, is the oldest son of Charles X., king of France, and of Maria Theresa, princess of Savoy. He was born at Versailles, in 1775, and in early life was distinguished for his mild and amiable disposition, and for his studious habits. At the beginning of the French revolution, he emigrated with his father to the court of Turin, where for some time he devoted himself to his studies. He afterwards commanded a corps of emigrants in Germany. In 1799, he married the only daughter and surviving child of Louis XVI., his paternal uncle. For several years he resided at different European courts, as the interest or inclinations of the sovereigns permitted, until 1800, when he visited England, where he remained until the accession of Louis XVIII. to the throne. As lieutenant-general of the kingdom, he was taken prisoner by marshal Grouchy, when Buonaparte returned from Elba, but was permitted by the emperor to retire. Since that time he has only appeared in public, as commander of the French armies, in the late invasion of Spain. He is heir apparent to the French throne. The duke and his dutchess are said to be extremely devout, but not sufficiently tolerant toward the protestants of the kingdom.

ANGOULEME, Maria Theresa Charlotte, dutchess d', is the sole surviving child of Louis

XVI., and his queen Maria Antoinette; she married the duke in 1799. The unparalleled misfortunes of her early life, have rendered her melancholy, both in appearance and in reality; she has drank too deep of the bitter cup of affliction, ever to forget it; and the traces of her unexampled misery, are probably indelible. She is however distinguished for her piety, benevolence and humanity. The events of her life, are identified with the history of France, and of the revolution. On the return of Buonaparte from Elba, she retired to Bourdeaux, where she was received with acclamations; but being afterwards deserted by the inhabitants, she embarked on board an English vessel for London, from which place she joined Louis XVIII. at Ghent; she returned to Paris after the battle of Waterloo; she has had no children.

B

BADEN, Charles Louis Frederick, duke of, was born in 1786, and married in 1806 to a cousin of the empress Josephine, and the adopted daughter of Napoleon. He succeeded to the dukedom of Baden, in 1810. During the wars on the continent, he served with reputation, in several campaigns under Buonaparte, by whom he was highly esteemed. The misfortunes of the emperor, however, and the disasters of the Russian campaign, led him to form new connexions with the other sovereigns of Europe; he joined the allies, fought against the emperor, and was rewarded by the allies, with an accession of territory. He is one of the few German princes, who has given a constitution to his people, founded on the same basis as that of the kingdom of Wirtemberg.

BAILLIE, Joanna, is a single lady, who resides chiefly in her native country, Scotland. She is distinguished for her talents and writings, and has published a series of plays in several volumes, illustrative of the strong passions of the mind. She has also written a collection of metrical legends of eminent characters in one volume.

BARBAULD, Anna Letitia, is the daughter of the Rev. John Aiken, an English dissenting clergyman, and wife of the Rev. R. Barbauld, master of a school in Norfolk. She was born in the year 1731, and was early instructed in the Latin and Greek languages by her father. This lady is distinguished for her learning, as well as for her numerous writings, which have gained her great celebrity. She is now far advanced in life, and yet retains great vigour both of intellect and of body. As a writer of prose, she has surpassed almost every female of her time, and is equalled for elegance of diction, and soundness of sense, by few of the other sex.

BATHURST, Henry, earl, was born in 1762, and succeeded his father, who was several years lord chancellor of England, as earl, in 1794. As a member of the house of commons, he was honoured with the confidence of Mr. Pitt. He was made a commissioner of the admiralty, in 1783, and lord of the treasury, in 1788, and has subsequently held several other important offices, the duties of which, he has discharged with ability. He is now secretary of state for the colonial department, and one of the tellers of the English exchequer.

BEETHOVEN, Ludwig Van, was born at Bonn, in the electorate of Cologne, in 1772, and at the early age of eleven, gave evidence of those great musical talents, both as a composer and performer, for which he has been since so much distinguished. In 1792, he was sent by the elector of Cologne, to Vienna, to study the theory of music, under the celebrated Haydn; he has continued to reside in that city since, under the patronage of several distinguished noblemen, by whom he is munificently supported. His works are far too numerous to be mentioned here; they are universally known, and are admitted to be productions of the highest order: many of them will be heard with delight, after the overtures, even of Mozart. Beethoven is extremely deaf; this, together with a degree of inattention to the ordinary rules of politeness in private life, has detracted somewhat from his reputation. He is however, said to possess a nice sense of honour and of moral rectitude, and an extensive acquaintance with literary and scientific subjects.

BERNADOTTE, John Baptist Julius, now Charles John, king of Sweden, is the son of a citizen of Pau, in Bearn. He was born January 26, 1764, and after receiving a limited education, commenced his career, as a private soldier in a regiment of royal marines, at the beginning of the French revolution. His activity and valour soon raised him from obscurity; in 1792, he attained the rank of colonel, and the next year, that of general of brigade. From that time, his reputation as an officer rapidly increased, and his promotion in the French service, consequently followed. He was appointed ambassador from France to Vienna, and to the Hague; commander-in-chief of the army of the west, and minister of war. Buonaparte made him a marshal of the empire, and gave him the principality of Ponte Corvo. He was also decorated with the order of the Eagle by the king of Prussia, and with the insignia of several other orders, by different princes. Until 1810, he was actively and successfully engaged as a general officer, under Napoleon, and maintained the reputation of a brave, skilful, and efficient commander. He was also distinguished no less for his humanity and moderation, than for his valour and energy. This fact, so foreign to the characters of the other French marshals, endeared him to the people of those countries through which the vicissitudes of war led him, and contributed in a great degree to his present elevation. On the deposition of Gustavus Adolphus, in 1810, the throne of Sweden was without an heir, and he was selected by the principal inhabitants of that country, to supply the vacancy. He was accordingly proclaimed by the states of Sweden, crown prince of that kingdom, August, 1811, and adopted by Charles XIII. as his son. On receiving intelligence of that event at Paris, he solemnly renounced the catholic religion; hastened his departure from France, and made his public entrance into Stockholm on the 1st of November following. From that time to the present, he has been devoted to the interests and prosperity of his adopted country, and he has gained the confidence and esteem of his subjects by his exertions for their welfare. In 1813, Sweden entered into the coalition against France, and the crown prince was appointed to command the right wing of the allied army, consisting of nearly one hundred thousand men; with this force he gained several important victories, and contributed to the overthrow of Napoleon. On the death of Charles XIII., February 5th, 1818, the crown prince was elevated to the throne of Sweden, and has since been acknowledged by all the great powers of Europe, as sovereign of that kingdom.

BERTRAND, count Henry Gratian, is descended from a respectable family in Touraine. He took the oath of fidelity to Napoleon, and served as a general of artillery in the camp of St. Omers, in 1806. The succeeding year he was aid-de-camp to the emperor, and in that capacity, acted a distinguished part in most of the campaigns of that period. In the battles of Austerlitz, and Friedland, he signalized himself as a brave and skilful general, and as a firm friend of the emperor; and he so far succeeded to his confidence and favour, that he was named grand marshal of the palace. Marshal Bertrand was engaged in the memorable campaign of Russia, and the severe actions that ensued. He then retired with the emperor to Elba, and, while there, was his confidential friend and adviser. On the return of Buonaparte from that island, Bertrand accompanied him as his first minister, was with him during the important events of the "One hundred days," and after the battle of Waterloo, and the second abdication of the emperor, retired with him on board the Bellerophon, to share the banishment of his sovereign, to the island of St. Helena. Too much praise cannot be given to the gratitude and fidelity which induced this noble minded man, to quit his native country, and all the prospects of ambition, that he might soften the captivity of his fallen sovereign.

BLOOMFIELD, Robert, a distinguished English poetical writer, was born in the county of Suffolk, in the year 1776. His father was a mechanic of middling circumstances, and with a large family dependant on him for support; he, of course, was enabled to give his children but a limited and common education. The death of this parent compelled Mr. Bloomfield, when a lad of eleven years old, to accept the employment of a farmer's boy. In the intervals of his labours, his native genius prompted him to peruse such books and newspapers as came within his reach, and even then, he wrote a small poem which was published in the London Magazine. He now turned his attention to poetry during the hours of relaxation from labour, and composed many excellent pieces; the principal of which, the "Farmer's Boy," as a descriptive poem, possesses great merit; it has fully established the claim of the author to the title of poet, and stamped his name with the honour of genius. He has also published songs, ballads, and other pieces; and the "Banks of Wye," a poem.

BOLIVAR, Simon, is the most brilliant star in Colombian history, and indeed in the history of modern revolutions; and, to whatever it may be ascribed, whether to accident, good fortune, or personal merit, or to all combined, he has raised himself to an eminent station in the list of successful heroes and remarkable men. He was born at Caraccas, about the year 1785, and is said to be descended of a noble and wealthy family of that place. After completing his studies at Madrid, where he received his education, he resided for some time at Paris, where he was intimate with Humboldt and Bonpland, and then travelled through England, France, and other countries of Europe. Before he returned to America, he had formed the design of devoting himself to the cause of South American independence, and he returned in season to join Miranda and his associates, just as he had unfurled the standard of liberty in Venezuela. Being dissatisfied, however, with the general system of measures pursued by the patriot party, he for a time, avoided taking any active part; but the time soon arrived, when he felt it his duty not to be kept inactive by a mere difference of opinion; he then joined the army and engaged in the contest, with a zeal and patriotism, that raised him to popularity and influence. From that day to this, his history is before the world; it has been a succession of splendid achievements, which have gained for his name a merited place on the same tablet with that of Washington. The brightest records of ancient or modern fame, have nothing prouder to offer. Time must show, whether he will complete the parallel with his illustrious model, which may thus far be run with so much apparent justice. Bolivar, was in his early career, unfortunate as a soldier; he has however triumphed over his disasters. For a considerable time he was supreme dictator, with all the army at his command; but when a favourable opportunity presented, he voluntarily relinquished his power, and returned to the rank of a private citizen. As president of the republic of Colombia, he has proved himself equally eminent as a statesman, as well as a soldier. He has recently exhibited his magnanimity, and disinterestedness, by relinquishing supreme authority in an adjoining state, for whose liberties he had been contending; and by declining to accept a present of a million of dollars, which had been voted him, by the congress of Peru, for his patriotic services. There is reason to believe that he is about to attempt the liberation of Brazil from the domination of a Portuguese dynasty.

An American gentleman, in a letter from Lima, thus speaks of him:

"General Bolivar, or, as he is always called, the Libertador, is about 5 feet 7, slender in his person, and, as the "Hero of the Equator," which the Americans call him, might be supposed to be rather dark in his complexion. His countenance, always of a serious cast, yet notwithstanding the mouztachio on his upper lip, not ferocious, as many represent him; his eyes, dark hazel, are expressive and penetrating; he reads English, but does not speak more than a few words. French he speaks fluently, though not correctly. Apologizing one day for my imperfect knowledge of French and Spanish; he said, "O, no matter, never regret it, your own fine idiom is the only one worth speaking; all that is liberal, all that is noble, is to be found in that. It is the language of liberty." He talks a great deal, and with apparent frankness, and without premeditation. He seems fond of social life, and never balks a party by going away prematurely, &c. On two occasions I have been with him in large parties, once at a ball and supper, where he staid from eight in the evening to five in the morning talked the whole time; at supper, gave toasts and made speeches, and after supper danced a waltz with a handsome girl. At a breakfast on Washington's birth day, the day he selected for his visit to the frigate United States, which lasted from eleven to three, he gave several toasts and speeches, in one of which he exalted the United States as infinitely surpassing every nation of ancient and modern times, in knowing how to unite the most entire liberty with the most perfect order, intelligence, and liberality.

His ambition appears to be of a lofty and fine description. He wishes to go down as the assertor and founder of South American Independence, and satisfied with an ample private fortune, disdains all accession of wealth. His favourite projects are a canal across the isthmus, and the establishment of a congress at Panama, to consist of a grand federative council, to decide on all disputes between the different states; to have an army which they shall call out when either of the states or any foreign power commits an aggression. After settling the affairs of these countries, and establishing their peace and independence, it is his wish to travel through the United States and England, for both of which countries he has a high admiration. His enmity against the Spaniards, nourished in the bloody war of Venezuela, is irreconcilable. All his connexions were murdered by them, except an uncle whom he has in Spain."

BOYER, John Peter, president of the island of Hayti, is a native of St. Domingo. Of his birth and early life, we are unable to give any particulars. He is said to be well educated, and it appears that he must long have possessed considerable influence in his native island, as on the death of Petion, he was elected president of the republic, without opposition. Since the death of Christophe, he has extended his authority over the whole island, and united all the inhabitants under his government. Boyer has recently procured, by negotiation, the recognition on the part of France, of the independent sovereignty of the whole island. So far as we are acquainted with the acts of his administration, he has given evidence of a strong mind, and of talents for governing, which might be coveted by some of the more legitimate sovereigns of Europe.

BRYANT, William Cullen, a poet of considerable eminence, was born in the town of Cornington, Massachusetts. His father was a respectable physician of that place. After completing his preparatory studies, he became a member of the Williamstown college, and remained there two years. He then commenced his professional studies, read law in an office at Northampton, and settled as a lawyer in Great Barrington. His amiable character, and social qualities have obtained for him the regard of a large circle of friends; while his pure taste and cultivated genius have excited admiration on both sides of the Atlantic. He now resides at New York, and is an editor of the Athenum Magazine (1825.)

BUONAPARTE, madam Letitia Romalina, mother to the late emperor of France, was born at Ajaccio, in Corsica, 1750, and in 1767 married an assessor to the tribunal of that island. On the death of her husband, she was left with a numerous family, and without a fortune. She, however, succeeded in gaining powerful friends and protectors, to some of whom she was indebted for the elevation of her family. On the invasion of Corsica by the English, she removed to Marseilles, and from thence to Paris, where she resided until the downfall of the emperor. During the greater part of that period, she lived in all the splendour and luxury of a court, and received from the French people, that homage which was due to the mother of their sovereign. But the elegance which surrounded this lady had no charms for her, and it was said, that she was constantly advising Napoleon to recollect, that the day of trial might come, when the dazzling glory with which he was encircled, might pass away. Since the abdication of the emperor, madam Buonaparte has resided in the states of the church, with her sons Lucien and Louis.

BUONAPARTE, Joseph, brother to Napoleon, was born at Ajaccio, Jan. 7, 1768, and removed with his family to France, in 1793. The next year he married a mademoiselle Clary, sister to the present queen of Sweden. He was appointed by his brother a commissary in the army; and by the republic ambassador to Rome, in 1797. On his return, he was chosen a deputy to the council of Five Hundred, and secretary to that body. After the revolution of the 18th Brumaire, his brother named him counsellor of state, and minister plenipotentiary to negotiate a treaty of amity and commerce with the United States. He signed the treaty of Luneville, in 1801, and soon after concluded a peace with Great Britain, at Amiens. He was nominated president of the senate, by the emperor, and honoured with the titles of prince and grand elector of the empire. This was but the prelude to farther advancement; he was raised to the rank of general and commander-in-chief of the army of Naples, and lastly named lieutenant-general of that kingdom, which he had invaded at the head of a powerful army. On the 13th of Feb., 1806, king Ferdinand left Naples for Sicily, and the next day Joseph entered the city and took possession of the palace. He was soon after proclaimed king of Naples, and formally elevated to that dignity. As sovereign of the kingdom of Naples, he became subservient to the views and policy of Napoleon. He suppressed the religious orders, seized upon their property, and converted their lands to the public use. He also abolished the feudal rights, and created a new order, called the order of the Two Sicilies. He was likewise accused of resigning to pleasure, hours which should have been devoted to business, and of preferring a voluptuous and ostentatious life, to the welfare and respect of his subjects. His administration, however, was far from being either tyrannical or cruel, and his people complained rather of his prodigality of expediture, and the burthen of the public taxes, than of his vices or injustice. In the year 1808, he was proclaimed king of Spain and the Indies, by Napoleon, and he immediately quitted Naples, for his new monarchy. The civil wars which ensued in Spain, the interference of the English, and the victories of Wellington, caused his overthrow in that kingdom, and his retreat from it, in 1813. He returned to France, and on the invasion of Russia, in 1814, he was appointed by the emperor, lieutenant-general of the empire, and commandant-general of the national guards, and confidential adviser to the empress Maria Louisa, then invested with the regency. Being afterwards overpowered by the allied army, he left the kingdom, and retired to Switzerland; and on the final abdication of Napoleon, he came to the United States. He has since resided as an American citizen, in the state of New-Jersey, and has acquired the confidence and esteem of the inhabitants of that state, and of the country. His wife resides with her two daughters in the vicinity of Frankfort.

BUONAPARTE, Lucien, was born in 1775, and went to France in 1793. He was at first employed as a commissary of stores, in Belgium, and did not commence his political career until 1797. He was then sent as a deputy to the council of Five Hundred, and, while a member of that body, was distinguished for his moderation and love of justice. Perceiving that the then government was tottering, and that a change of affairs was approaching, Lucien wrote to his brother, then in Egypt, advising him of the state of parties in France, and urging his return.

and on the arrival of Napoleon, he acted a principal part in the revolution which elevated his brother to the first consulship. His services on that occasion were rewarded by an appointment to the ministry, and by embassies abroad, in which he amassed immense wealth. He was said to have been opposed to the elevation of Napoleon to the throne; in consequence of which, a coolness ensued between the brothers which was so far increased by a subsequent marriage of Lucien, that he was ordered to quit France. He retired to Milan, and afterwards to Rome. Subsequently he embarked for the United States, was taken prisoner by a British frigate, and sent to England, where he continued until 1814. On the return of Buonaparte from Elba, he repaired to his assistance, and took an active part in the affairs of that period. Since the abdication of the emperor, he has resided at Rome. He has been created prince of Canino, by the pope.

BUONAPARTE, Louis, third brother of Napoleon, was born in the year 1778. He entered young into the military service, was with his brother in the campaigns of Italy and Egypt, and returned from the latter country with despatches for the directory. When Napoleon was proclaimed emperor, he was made a constable of the empire, and governor-general of Piedmont. In 1805, he succeeded Murat in the government of the city of Paris; he afterwards took command of the army north, and on the 4th of June, 1806, he became king of Holland. Louis was distinguished for his mild and gentle disposition, and for his love of justice. He made his administration, so far as was in his power, beneficial to his people; he diminished the taxes of the country, secretly encouraged trade, and generally adopted such measures as acquired for him the character of a good prince. His policy so far interfered with the views of Napoleon, that he was compelled to relinquish the throne, and he retired to Gratz, in Styria, and afterwards to Rome, where he now resides. He has recently published an interesting work, relative to his reign over Holland.

BUONAPARTE, Jerome, the younger brother of Napoleon, was born in 1784, and educated in France. He went to St. Domingo with Le Clerc, as a lieutenant, and soon afterwards was appointed to the command of a frigate. Buonaparte had so high an opinion of his nautical talents that he made him an admiral; he, however, was soon dissatisfied, and transferred him to the army, where he rose to the command of a division. About the year 1801, Jerome visited the United States, and while here, he married a Miss Patterson, daughter of a very respectable gentleman of Baltimore. Napoleon compelled him to divorce this lady, with a view of marrying a princess of the house of Wertemburg. This marriage took place in 1807, and he now resides with his family in the territory of Wertemburg, under the title of count of Montfort.

BURR, Aaron, late vice-president of the United States, was born at Fairfield, in Connecticut, in 1749, and educated at Princeton college, in New-Jersey, of which his father was president. At the age of twenty-five he was aid-de-camp to general Putnam, and he was afterwards lieutenant-colonel in one of the twelve regiments of the new levy, in the revolutionary war. During the whole of that war he was distinguished for his bravery, talents, and liberality. At the close of the war he applied himself to the study of the law, and was soon called to the bar, where he rose to the highest rank of professional eminence. He was afterwards chosen a member of the United States senate from the state of New-York, and subsequently vice-president of the United States. A dispute of a political nature, led to a personal encounter between colonel Burr and general Alexander Hamilton, in which the latter was mortally wounded. This event, and a charge of high treason against the United States, for which he was tried and acquitted, have destroyed the character and influence of colonel Burr, and cast a stigma upon his reputation. For several years after the above event, he resided in Europe. He has now, however, returned to America, and resides in the city of New-York.

C

CALHOUN, John C., is a native of South Carolina, and was born in the district of Abbeville, about the year 1781. His father emigrated from Pennsylvania to South Carolina, anterior to the revolution, and was an ardent whig during that struggle. Mr. Calhoun laid the foundation of his classical attainments under the tuition of the Rev. Dr. Waddell, after which he became a student at Yale College, and graduated with much distinction for his proficiency in metaphysics, mathematics, and the sciences generally; and with a high reputation for his talents. At this period, Dr. Dwight foretold the political eminence which he would one day attain. Mr. Calhoun prepared himself for the practice of law, attended the lectures of judge Reeve, at Litchfield, Conn., and soon after, rose to the first grade in his profession. In a short time he became a member of the legislature of his native state, where he attracted great confidence, and in two years he was elected to congress. Of this body, Mr. Calhoun was an able, an eloquent, and a leading member, until the close of the year 1817, when he was appointed secretary at war. In this capacity, "his attention was actively directed to the great and important object of the general defence," and his active mind seems to have pervaded and analyzed the great and complicated mass of our national interests, and to have formed almost a new creation in the military department of the government." In March, 1825, Mr. Calhoun was elected vice-president of the United States. He was a leading, decided, and able advocate for the late war, and has ever been a uniform advocate for internal improvements, and also for a navy, "as the appropriate armour for a free people, without endangering their liberty." As a statesman, Mr. Calhoun is an ornament to his country; as a patriot, he is ardent and independent; and his colloquial powers are of the first order.

CAMBACERES, John James Regis de, was born at Montpellier, of a respectable family, in 1753, and educated for the bar. His talents soon gave him reputation, and in 1792, he was named a deputy to the national convention, and, in that capacity, voted for the death of the king. He was afterwards president of the council of Five Hundred, and minister of justice. On the elevation of Napoleon to the first consulship, Cambaceres was created second consul, and, in that office, devoted himself to the organization of the courts of justice. As emperor, Napoleon named him arch-chancellor of the empire, and a member of the legion of honour. He was indefatigable in the service of the emperor, who initiated him in all his secrets, and on several occasions, in the absence of Napoleon, he was intrusted with the control of affairs. In 1814, he was created grand dignitary of the order of the iron crown, and president of the council of regency, during the campaign of Russia. After the abdication of Buonaparte, he sent in his adhesion to the king; but on the return of that monarch from Elba, he resumed his offices of arch-chancellor and minister of justice. On the final return of Louis XVIII., he was banished as a regicide, but has been since suffered to return to Paris, where he now lives in a very retired manner. He published, in 1794, his project for a civil code, which has since served as a basis of the Napoleon code.

CAMBRIDGE, Adolphus Frederick, duke of, is the youngest son of the late king of Great Britain, and was born in 1774. He was educated at Gottingen, and when he came of age, was made a colonel, and created duke of Cambridge, with a stipend of 12,000*l.* a year. In 1803 he was sent with 14,000 men to defend Hanover, but not succeeding, he returned to England. He then took his seat in the house of lords, and was promoted in the army to the rank of field marshal. In 1818 he married the princess Augusta, niece of the landgrave of Hesse, by whom he has a son. Since his marriage his yearly allowance has been doubled.

CAMPBELL, Thomas, a distinguished poetical and miscellaneous writer, was born at Glasgow, in the year 1777, and received his education at the university of that city. In 1799, he published "The Pleasures of Hope," a poem of great merit, and which has passed through several editions. He subsequently travelled on the continent, and on his return settled in London. He has since written "Gertrude of Wyoming," and other poems, and "Annals of Great Britain from the accession of George III. to the peace of America. Mr. Campbell is the author of several articles on poetry and belles lettres in the Edinburgh Encyclopædia, and is now editor of the London New Monthly Magazine (1825).

CANNING, George, Rt. Hon. The father of this gentleman, a native of Ireland, having displeased his friends by marriage, was left to provide for himself, and died in early life, leaving his family destitute. Mr. Canning was educated by his relations, at Eton and Oxford, where he gained several prizes. He afterwards went to the Temple to study law, and after completing his studies, was returned a member of parliament for Newtown, in the Isle of Wight. The minister, Mr. Pitt, soon discovered his abilities, and offered him the place of under secretary of state, in the administration, which, in 1796, he accepted. From that time, he supported Mr. Pitt until his death; he then joined Mr. Percival, and was made secretary of state for foreign affairs. In this capacity, his conduct to lord Castlereagh, brought on a duel between them, in which he was wounded, and for which he lost his place. He afterwards came into parliament from Liverpool; was sent as ambassador to Lisbon, and on his return was made president of the Board of Control for India Affairs. Mr. Canning is now secretary of state for foreign affairs, and leader of the administration party in the house of commons. He is said to have been a contributor to, and perhaps proprietor of, the Quarterly Review.

CANTERBURY, Charles Manners Sutton, archbishop of, is the grandson of John, duke of Rutland, and son of lord George Manners. He was born in 1755, and educated at Cambridge, where he took his first degree in 1777. He was soon made dean of Windsor, and in 1791, raised to the bishopric of Norwich. On the death of the late primate, Dr. Sutton was, by the influence of the king, nominated to fill the vacancy. He is said to be a prelate of great learning, conciliating habits of life, of an amiable character, and well calculated to fill the highest episcopal dignity of the realm. His only son, is now speaker of the house of commons.

CAREY, William, LL. D., baptist missionary at Bengal, was originally a shoemaker. In his twenty-fourth year he was ordained as a clergyman, and in 1793, was sent as a missionary to India. On his arrival there, he immediately made himself master of the Bengalee, Sanscrit, and Mahratta languages, and is now professor of those languages, in the college of Fort William, at Bengal. Dr. Carey, with his associates, has been assiduous in printing and publishing the Scriptures, in different languages and dialects of India, and in promoting the spread of the Gospel in that country. He is now far advanced in life, yet still continues his labours and usefulness, with all the zeal and energy of an apostle of the primitive church.

CATALANI, Angelica, madam, is probably the most distinguished female singer of the age. She was born near Rome, in 1782, and educated in a convent. Her father who was a silversmith, becoming embarrassed in his pecuniary affairs, his daughter became a public singer at Milan, at the age of fifteen, and was highly applauded by the Italian and French critics and journals. On her first appearance in England, in 1806, she was found superior to all the continental panegyrics, and has never since ceased to be greatly admired. Her voice is singularly powerful, and equally melodious in the high and low tones. Her figure is finely formed, and her deportment majestic. She is still heard with delight, both in Great Britain and on the continent.

CHANTREY, Francis, an eminent English sculptor, was born at Norton, in Derbyshire, in the year 1782. His father dying when he was quite young, he was educated by his mother, and in early life gave indications of his genius, by making models in clay. His friends had chosen the law as a profession for him, and he was on his way to Sheffield, to enter an office, when he chanced to look at some figures in the shop of a carver and gilder, which immediately induced him to change his pursuits. He therefore became an apprentice to the carver, and resided with him three years; during which he devoted himself to drawing, modelling, and studying from nature. He then went to London, where he soon attracted attention, and obtained extensive employment. His first public work, was a statue of the king in Guildhall. He has since established his reputation, by several splendid specimens of his genius. In 1818, Mr. Chantrey visited Italy, and contracted an intimate friendship with his great rival Canova.

CHAPTAL, John, count de Chanteloup, was born at Montpellier, in the year 1755. He studied medicine and natural philosophy when young, and, before the French revolution, was distinguished as a physician and chymist. At the beginning of the revolution he headed a mob in Montpellier, and took possession of the citadel in 1791. In 1793, he was called to Paris by the committee of safety, to be consulted as a chymist, relative to the production of saltpetre, and the making of gunpowder, and he so far succeeded in improving the manufacture of that article, as to produce all that was wanted for the use of the French army, consisting of 1,400,000 men. It may safely be said, that if any man contributed more than another to prevent the republic from being overrun, at that time, it was M. Chaptal. He was rewarded for his services by the directory with the professorship of chemistry, in the university of Montpellier. He was afterwards, under Buonaparte, made minister of the interior. In that situation, he paid great attention to the manufacturing establishments in France, and to the means of promoting education. He was a devoted friend to Napoleon during his reign, and since his abdication has lived as a private citizen. His writings have been very numerous, principally on chymical subjects.

CHARLES X., king of France, was born Oct. 9, 1757. He married, in 1773, Maria Theresa, of Savoy, by whom he had three children, a daughter, who died young, the present duc d'Angouleme, and the late duc d'Berri. In his youth, the king was gay and extravagant; he was, however, amiable in his disposition, and a patron and protector of men of letters. From the beginning of the revolution he was decidedly opposed to any reform, and soon emigrated with his family. He went to Turin, and, in 1791, joined his brother, the late king Louis XVIII., and prepared to assist in invading France. The events of this period of his life are matters of history, and do not need repetition here. Failing in his projected invasion of France, he retired to Westphalia, and afterwards to Great Britain, where he resided until the restoration of his family. In 1814, he returned to France, and took up his residence in the Thuilleries, as lieutenant-general of the kingdom in the absence of his brother; and by his affable deportment and condescending manners, contributed not a little to reconcile the French to a change of government. On the death of his brother, he succeeded to the throne under the title of Charles X.; he was recently crowned at Rheims, with all the parade and splendour of modern extravagance. The general policy of his administration has been the same as that of his predecessor, since his elevation to the throne. He has, however, abolished the censorship of the press, and done some other acts indicative of sounder views of government, than were entertained during the last reign.

CHARLES LOUIS, of Lorraine, archduke of Austria, was born in the year 1771. He began his military career under the prince of Cobourg, in Brabant, and was soon afterwards made governor and captain-general of the low countries, and field marshal of the empire. This prince commanded with great reputation and glory in the war against revolutionary France, and in a succession of campaigns, and during a series of severe actions with the first French generals of the age, proved himself not only a match for them, but almost the only general capable of successfully opposing them. Our limits will not allow us to recapitulate his victories; we can only say, that whether opposing Moreau on the Rhine, Buonaparte in Italy, or Massena in Switzerland, he displayed great military talents, and acquired great glory. Owing to the intrigues of the Austrian court, he was induced to resign his military command, and he was made minister of war. In 1805, he resumed the command of the army of Italy, and the next year he was made Austrian generalissimo of the army. After the peace with France, he had an interview with Napoleon, and represented him at the marriage ceremony with the arch dutchess Maria Louisa, at Vienna. Prince Charles now resides at Vienna, devoted to military and literary studies.

CHATEAUBRIAND, Francis Augustus, viscount de, was born in 1769, of an ancient family in Brittany. He entered into the military service in 1786, but his regiment revolting at the beginning of the revolution, he came to America, and spent some time among the Indians of the western wilderness, studying the character of that people, and viewing the beauties of nature in their original state. He returned to Europe in 1792, and from a sense of duty, enlisted under the banner of the French princes. In their service he was severely wounded, and confined to his bed for three years; this ruined his finances, and compelled him to resort to his pen for support. He published his Essay on Ancient and Modern Revolutions, and afterwards his Genius of Christianity, works which have been much read and admired. Napoleon wished to attach him to his interests; and for a short time succeeded; but on the death of the duke d'Enghien, he resigned his employments. He then travelled in Italy, Greece, and the Holy Land; and has since published his travels in those countries. During the residue of the reign of Napoleon, he lived a private life; but on the restoration of the Bourbons, he was created a viscount, and named minister to Sweden. He was afterwards minister to Berlin, president of the electoral college of the department of Loiret, and minister of state. He has lately resigned his offices in consequence of a quarrel with the ministry.

CLARENCE, William Henry, duke of, is the third son of his late majesty, George III. He was born in 1765, educated for the navy, and sent to sea at an early age. Having served his time as a midshipman, he was gradually promoted to the command of a frigate, and recently to the station of admiral of the fleet. In 1789, he was created duke of Clarence, and St. Andrews, with an income of 12,000*l.* per annum. In 1814, he commanded the royal yacht, which conveyed Louis XVIII. to France and a throne. He married in 1813, a sister of the duke of Saxe Meiningen.

CLARKSON, Thomas, a distinguished English philanthropist, was born in the year 1761, and educated at Cambridge, where he had a high reputation. In 1785, Mr Clarkson composed a prize essay in Latin, on the question, "Is it just to make men slaves against their will?" a translation of which he afterwards published. This was, probably the first effectual step toward the suppression of the African slave trade; and seems to have stimulated its author to those great exertions, which so materially contributed to the English act of abolition. From this time, Mr. Clarkson relinquished his professional pursuits, and devoted his whole time to this great object. He connected himself with Mr. Wüberforce and others, and formed a society for the abolition of the African slave trade; he also wrote and published several works on the subject; had several interviews with Mr. Pitt, and the privy council; and after years of unwearied exertion, has accomplished the great object he had in view. He has lived to witness the triumph of principle, and of humanity, and to see his name placed among the benefactors of the human race.

CLAY, Henry, was born in April, 1776, and is a native of the county of Hanover, in Virginia. His father, a respectable baptist clergyman, died when he was very young, leaving his family in pecuniary means, somewhat limited. His education was not that of a scholar; but at an early age as a clerk in the chancery office at Richmond, Mr. Clay attracted the attention of chancellor Wythe, in whose house he found an asylum and a home, an instructor and patron, under whose auspices he soon acquired a proficiency in the law. He removed to Lexington, Ky., in 1797, and there was successful in his profession, and soon became distinguished as a politician. From 1799 until 1806, he was a leading and eloquent member of the house of representatives of Kentucky, at which time he was elected a member of the senate of the United States. After this, he was successively chosen a member of the legislature of his adopted state; of the senate of the United States; and in Nov. 1811, a member of the house of representatives of the United States, and was immediately chosen speaker of that body. This office he held until his recent appointment of secretary of state; at the commencement of Mr. Adams' administration. Mr. Clay's political career has been popular. In every appointment which he has held, he has acquitted himself with dignity and firmness, and he has acquired the reputation of a zealous patriot; a statesman, sound, prompt, and sagacious; and a brilliant and forcible orator.

CLINTON, De Witt, son of James Clinton, a major-general in the revolutionary army, was born in the county of Orange, state of New-York, in the year 1769. He was educated at Columbia College, and after receiving the honours of the university, commenced the study of the law, in 1786, and was admitted to the bar. He was secretary to his uncle, governor George Clinton, who appointed him secretary of the university, and of the board of fortifications of New-York. He was elected a member of the legislature, from the city of New-York, in 1797, without opposition, and soon after was chosen a member of the senate. Mr. Clinton was afterwards a member of the council of appointment, in 1802 a senator in congress, and was from 1803 to 1807 mayor of the city of New-York. During this time, he was for nine months a senator in the legislature, and member of the council of appointment. In 1809 he was again chosen mayor of the city of New-York, and received the appointment of regent of the university. During Mr. Clinton's public life, much of his attention has been bestowed upon subjects relative to the public health and internal improvements generally, and when the law was passed, in 1817, authorizing the junction of the Western and Northern lakes and the Hudson river, by canals, Mr. Clinton was appointed commissioner. In 1811 he was elected lieutenant-governor of the state of New-York, and recommended as a candidate for president of the United States, by a majority of the members of the legislature, and from that time until 1815, was again mayor of the city of New-York. He was elected, in 1817, governor of the state of New-York almost without opposition, and was re-elected in 1824. In the great and growing state of which Mr. Clinton is a native, his name, his genius, and his services, are stamped upon many monuments of public munificence; and the promptitude, solidity and talent exhibited in his public career, evince that his energy is equal to any occurrence.

COBBETT, William, is the son of a farmer in Surrey. His father taught him arithmetic, and to read and write, and educated him as a farmer. Early in life, he left his father and went to London, and afterwards enlisted in a regiment destined to Nova Scotia, where he resided six years. During this time, he devoted all his leisure to the cultivation of his mind. In 1792, he came to America, here he commenced author, and under the name of Peter Porcupine, wrote a series of essays, which exhibited his powers, and enraged his opponents. Being prosecuted for a libel and amerced in 5000 dollars damages; he left the country and returned to England, where he commenced his Political Register, which he extended to forty volumes. In this paper he attacked the administration with his whole energies, and with such effect, as to incur the vengeance of the ministry. Mr. Cobbett visited America again in 1817, and returned to England in 1819. He still continues his writings, which are already numerous. In dry humour, in pointed sarcasm, and in the power of casting ridicule upon an opponent, he is almost unrivalled. Mr. C. is said to be preparing for publication, a History of the Persecutions of the late Queen.

CONGREVE, sir William, was born in the year 1760, and entered young into the artillery, of which his father was an officer of rank. He applied himself assiduously to the service, and soon distinguished himself by his mechanical genius, and by his important improvements. The principal of these, is the rocket, known by the name of the Congreve Rocket, which, as a formidable means of military annoyance, is generally admitted to be more efficient than almost any other. This he invented in 1808; It is now adopted generally in the armies of the military powers of Europe. Sir William has published several scientific works, which prove him a man of extraordinary talents. He is said to be high in favour with the present king George IV.

CONSTANTINE, grand duke of Russia, is the second son of Paul I. He married, in 1798, a princess of Saxe Cobourg, who has since returned to her family. In 1799, he served under general Sturrow, and behaved with great bravery. He was in the battle of Austerlitz, opposed to Bernadotte, and distinguished himself by his gallant resistance to the French. During the invasion of Russia, he was actively engaged, and in the subsequent campaigns; and he entered Paris with the allies. He is now viceroy of Poland, under his brother Alexander.

COOPER, sir Astley Paston, F. R. S., is one of the most distinguished surgeons and medical writers in Great Britain. Few possess an equal share of science and practice, and none enjoy a higher reputation for that spirit of liberality and philosophy, which ought to characterize the member of a learned profession. He is a member of the Royal Society, a surgeon of Guy's Hospital, and president of the Medical and Chirurgical Society. His writings, which are numerous, are considered standard works by the members of the profession. He has lately been appointed surgeon to the king, and created a baronet.

CUVIER, baron de, was born at Montbeliard in 1769, and educated at Stutgard, where he became acquainted with the language, the literature, and the sciences of Germany. He arrived in France at the beginning of the revolution, and was soon distinguished among scientific men. He was one of the first members of the French Institute; and is perpetual secretary of the academy of physical science, and professor of natural history to the college of France. Baron Cuvier is one of the most distinguished naturalists of the present age; and to profound knowledge, he has the art of expressing his ideas with great clearness and elegance. His writings are very numerous, on scientific and miscellaneous subjects. He is one of the editors of the Journal des Savants.

D

D'ARBLAY, madame, is the daughter of Dr. Burney, and is better known by her maiden name, of Miss Frances Burney. This lady has deservedly attracted public attention, and gained a high reputation for herself, by her writings. She unquestionably ranks among the first female novel writers of the age. Her first work was Evelina, published in 1777. To this succeeded Cecilia and Camilla; she has also written a tragedy, which has been performed on the English stage, and recently a novel called the Wanderer, or Female Difficulties. Madame D'Arblay is now a widow, and resides, since the death of her husband, in England.

DAVID. This celebrated French painter has been greatly distinguished for his zeal and atrocity as a revolutionist. He was a member of the national convention, and voted for the immediate death of Louis XVI.; and he was the constant associate and intimate friend of Robespierre and Marat. After the fall of the former, he was arrested and imprisoned, but his merit as an artist, probably saved his life. He is acknowledged to be the first French painter of the present day. His pictures of the "Death of Marat," of the Sabines, and of the coronation of Napoleon, are considered as admirable specimens of the art. As a regicide, David has been banished, since the return of Louis XVIII., and now resides in Bruxelles.

DAVY, sir Humphrey. This distinguished philosopher, who has done so much to enlarge the bounds of chymical science, was born at Penlance, in the year 1779, and received the rudiments of education at the school in that place. At the age of 15, he was placed as a pupil with a Mr. Borkase, an excellent surgeon and accomplished scholar, with whom he resided several years, during which time, he laid down for himself, and pursued a course of study, which made him master of the leading principles of botany, anatomy, and physiology, the simple mathematics, natural philosophy, and chymistry. The latter study, however, was most congenial to his taste, and some early discoveries in that science, drew him from obscurity, and devoted him for life, to the pursuit of his favourite science. He soon after published his "Researches Chymical and Philosophical," and was chosen professor of chymistry in the royal institution. His most brilliant discoveries were subsequent to this period. Our limits will not permit us to mention them. The most important, however, to the cause of humanity, as well as of science, was the invention of the safety lamp, which has proved of immense benefit to the English miners. Sir Humphrey is now president of the Royal Society, and a member of most of the philosophical societies of Europe. His writings are numerous, and of great importance to the cause of science and philosophy.

DECAZES, duke, was born in 1780. At an early age he was a judge of the tribunal of the Seine, and in 1810, was appointed counsellor of the court of appeals. In 1815, he put himself at the head of a company of national guards, in support of the royal cause, and vehemently opposed the restoration of Buonaparte. On the return of the king, he was appointed prefect of police and a member of the council of state, and soon after, he was made minister of police in the room of Fouché. He was afterwards created a count, removed from the ministry of police, to that of the home department; and in 1818, created a duke, and sent as minister from Louis XVIII. to Great Britain. He is now one of the ministry, and president of the council. His measures have been generally calculated for the prosperity of France, and his speeches in their defence, have been received with respect, by the patriot, and the man of letters.

DESEZE, Raymond, the intrepid and eloquent defender of Louis XVI. at the bar of the French national convention, was born at Bourdeaux, in 1750, and educated for the bar from his earliest years. His professional success was unusually rapid. Having been engaged in a defence which had attracted the attention of the fashionable world, he so far succeeded, as to gain the esteem and patronage of the count de Vergennes. With his influence, he removed to Paris, where he soon gained the reputation of the most eloquent advocate of France. He was imprisoned for his defence of his unfortunate sovereign, and narrowly escaped death; lived in retirement during the reign of Napoleon, and was only rewarded for his loyalty, on the restoration of the Bourbons.

E

EDGEWORTH, Maria, is the daughter of Richard Lovell Edgeworth, esq., of Edgeworthstown, Ireland, a gentleman distinguished in the literary world for his talents and writings. The daughter is said to excel her parent in talents; she has devoted herself to literary pursuits, with zeal and ardour. One of her objects has been to perfect the system of female education, in which she has in part succeeded. As a novel writer, she ranks among the most eminent; and the Irish character has never been drawn with equal truth and spirit by any other writer. Her publications, which are numerous, have been well received on both sides of the Atlantic.

ELDON, the earl, is the son of a Mr. Scott of Newcastle, and was born in 1750. He was educated at Oxford, entered at Middle Temple, in 1772, and called to the bar at the usual period. His first efforts were far from successful, but the encouragement he received from lord Thurlow, induced him to proceed, and he then rose into repute. He was in 1783, chosen a member of parliament, and soon after attorney-general. In 1799, he was appointed chief-justice of the common pleas, and raised to the peerage. Two years after, he was made lord chancellor of Great Britain, an office which he still retains. He has accumulated an immense fortune by his profession, and has been created an earl.

EMMET, Thomas Addis, esq., is a native of Dublin. His father was an eminent physician, of that city, and the son was educated for that profession, and took a doctor's degree at Edinburgh; but on the death of a brother, who had risen to eminence as a barrister, he quitted the practice of medicine for that of the law, and soon obtained great celebrity as a lawyer in Dublin. Mr. Emmet was one of the leading members of the society of united Irishmen, and was appointed a member of the Irish directory, which was to be substituted for the existing government. His safety being stipulated for by the man who betrayed the plot, he was exiled from the British dominions. He then established himself in New-York, where he now practices with great reputation and success.

ERSKINE, Thomas, lord, is the third son of the late earl of Buchan, and was born in Scotland, in 1750. After completing his education, under the care of one of the most accomplished scholars of Scotland, he entered the navy, which he soon exchanged for the army, in which he served several years. The demands of an increasing family, and the scantiness of his income as an officer, induced him to make choice of a profession, and in 1777 he commenced his legal studies. The next year he was called to the bar. Here he soon had an opportunity of displaying his transcendent talents, and his first effort was considered a masterpiece of forensic eloquence. From that moment his success was certain, and his subsequent exertions have only realized the expectations formed by those who then heard him. As an eloquent and accomplished advocate, he unquestionably stood first at the English bar. Lord Erskine became a member of the house of commons, in 1783, was created a peer in 1806, and raised to the dignity of lord high chancellor of the realm; which office he resigned, on his friends going out of administration.

F

FELLENBERG, M., a celebrated agriculturist and instructor, was born at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1771. He is a great-grandson, by the mother's side, of admiral Van Tromp. He was very carefully educated, and, in early life, travelled in France, Switzerland, and Germany, assuming the garb and appearance of a labourer, that he might better acquaint himself with men, and their wants. He was of great use in preserving tranquillity, by his influence, in his native country, after the conquest of the French, in 1798. He soon withdrew from public affairs, and having formed an acquaintance with the celebrated Pestalozzi, bought a large farm at Hofwyl, about 6 miles from Berne, which he cultivated in the most approved manner, to serve as a model for the neighbourhood, and which is tilld by the scholars in his school of industry. He also established a school, in which he has very successfully attempted a new system of education, and which has attracted great attention in Europe.

FERDINAND IV., king of the Two Sicilies, the third son of Charles III. of Spain, was born in Naples the 12th of January, 1751. His natural disposition was mild and amiable, and in early life was exhibited in acts of charity and benevolence, which rendered him the idol of the people of Naples. His father succeeding to the throne of Spain in 1759, Ferdinand was declared king of the Two Sicilies, and during his minority, was placed by his father under a regency. He married in 1768, Mary Caroline, sister of the emperor Joseph II., who soon acquired an almost uncontrolled ascendancy over him, which she used to effect her own political purposes. From the beginning of the French revolution, Ferdinand has been involved in disputes and wars, with one or another of the powers of Europe; and since then, has experienced all the vicissitudes of fortune, from victory and conquest to defeat and disgrace. He has repeatedly been driven from his capital, and compelled to take shelter in Sicily; he has seen that capital threatened with bombardment and pillage, by a foreign foe, and saved from that fate, only by bribery and corruption; he has seen his empire wrested from him by an enemy, himself dethroned, and Murat, the brother of that enemy, seated on his throne; he has seen himself deserted by his own subjects, and at the mercy of a neighbouring power; and when restored to his throne, and to the plenitude of his authority, he has again seen his people revolting against a reign distinguished only for its tyranny, bigotry, and oppression, and demanding of their sovereign a constitutional form of government, and mild and equal laws, and has found himself obliged to yield to their demands. The interference of the Holy Alliance has rescued him from the influence of his subjects, and again placed him on an absolute throne. He now holds despotic dominion over his subjects, supported by an Austrian armed force within his territory, and liable on the removal of that force, to the vengeance of an injured, oppressed, and insulted people.

FERDINAND VII., king of Spain and the Indies, is the son of Charles IV. of Spain, and was born the 13th of October, 1784. He was created prince of Asturias, when only six years of age, and succeeded to the throne by the abdication of his father in his favour, in 1808. The incidents of his eventful reign, have been marked by the stupidity and bigotry, which so eminently characterize this sovereign. Soon after he ascended the throne, he was persuaded to leave his dominions, and meanly submit himself to the power of Napoleon, that he might obtain from that emperor a recognition of his title; when in his power, he was made a prisoner to France, forced to relinquish his sceptre unconditionally, to his father, by whom it was resigned to Buonaparte, and for five years kept in custody in the interior of France. On a change of affairs in France, he was suffered to return to his dominions. Before he left his kingdom, he had authorized the convocation of a cortes, and he had solemnly promised to maintain them in their privileges, and to approve their acts. No sooner, however, had he returned to Spain, than he refused to sign a constitution enacted by the cortes, he declared null all their acts done in his absence, he restored the inquisition, ordered the monks who had been serving in the army during the revolution, to return to their monasteries, and denounced all those who had taken the oath of allegiance to Buonaparte. He even went farther, and condemned to exile and imprisonment the most patriotic members of the cortes, who had struggled during his imprisonment, to support his throne, and preserve it unimpaired until his restoration. During his reign, the inhabitants of his South American colonies have disclaimed allegiance to his throne, entered from their vassalage, and become sovereign and independent states. His subjects too at home, tired of his despotism, have within a few years resisted his authority, convoked anew the ancient cortes of the kingdom, and re-established a constitution, to which Ferdinand was obliged to swear fidelity or lose his crown. The principles of the allied sovereigns, and the arms of France have interfered, to check the progress of correct principles of civil government, and Ferdinand is once more permitted to triumph over the wishes of his subjects. He holds his sceptre, however, by a precarious tenure, he has lost the confidence and good will of his subjects, and there now exists, from one end of Spain to the other, a rooted distrust of him, which is but too well justified by his former conduct, probably, should the French army be withdrawn from his kingdom, his throne would be shaken to its foundation, by his oppressed subjects.

FERDINAND III., grand duke of Tuscany, and archduke of Austria, was born in the year 1769. He is a son of the late Leopold, emperor of Germany, and brother of the present emperor of Austria. Tuscany was granted him by his father, and he was created grand duke in 1791. Distinguished by his protection of letters, and the mildness of his administration, he has shown himself more desirous to maintain peace in his states, than to involve them in war, for what are now styled the essential principles of government. He was, therefore, the first of the princes of Europe, to recognise the French republic. This of course involved him in difficulty with neighbouring powers, who compelled him to change his policy, and adopt a system, which resulted in his expulsion from his state. He has been re-established in Tuscany, since the abdication of Buonaparte, and yet retains his authority in that state.

FESCI, cardinal, uncle of Napoleon, late emperor of France, was born at Ajaccio, in Corsica, in 1763, and educated for the church. An ardent partizan of French revolutionary principles, he threw off his clerical dress, and entered the army. In 1796, he became commissary general in the army of Italy, under Napoleon, and in that office he acquired a large fortune. After this, he resumed the ecclesiastical profession, was appointed archbishop of Lyons, and in 1803, obtained a cardinal's hat. He was soon after sent ambassador to Rome, where he resided until the coronation of the emperor, when he accompanied pope Pius VII. to Paris, to assist in that ceremony. He was the same year appointed grand almoner of France, and a principal officer of the legion of honour. In 1806, he was nominated by the elector, arch-cancellor of the Germanic empire, his coadjutor and successor. He afterwards fell into disgrace with Buonaparte, for opposing his violent treatment of the pope, and retired to his see in Lyons, where he resided in great splendour, until 1814. On the downfall of his nephew, he went with his sister Madam Letitia Buonaparte to Rome, where he lived in retirement, until the return from Elba. He then resumed his dignities in France for a short period, but again took up his residence at Rome after the battle of Waterloo.

FRANCIS II., emperor of Austria, and son of Leopold II. of Spain, was born in February, 1768. In June, 1792, he was crowned king of Hungary; in July, elected king of the Romans; and in August of the same year, he was crowned king of Bohemia. In 1804, he took the title of hereditary emperor of Austria. Francis is not willing to relinquish the rights of despotism; yet his mildness of temper, and his attachment to his subjects are remarkable. He is an efficient member of the "Holy Alliance."

FREDERICK VI., king of Denmark, son of Christian VII., was born in January, 1768. He distinguished himself by the probity, justice, and publicity of his administration while regent, and since 1808, when he ascended the throne, his reign has afforded an example of political and religious liberty, singular in a country, the constitution of which is almost wholly at the disposal of the sovereign.

FREDERICK WILLIAM III., king of Prussia, born in August, 1770, succeeded his father, Frederick William II., November, 1797. His early life was much devoted to the interests of Prussia; but since his alliance with Alexander of Russia, the character of Frederick seems to have been changed; the promises made to his subjects during his turbulent wars with France, have been broken, and Frederick, backed by the armies of the "Holy Alliance," defies the discontent and anger of his people.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS I., son of Frederick Christian, was born December, 1750; became elector of Saxony in 1768, and in 1777, elector of Bavaria, by the death of Maximilian. In 1791, the crown of Poland was proffered him in the name of the Polish nation, which he declined accepting, at the desire of his subjects. In 1806, Saxony was constituted a kingdom, and Frederick elected king. He became a member of the Germanic body in 1812. Taken prisoner by the armies of France, Russia, and Prussia in 1813, he was obliged to relinquish large portions of his territory, and, by order of the king of Prussia, he acceded to the "Holy Alliance" in 1817.

G

GALL, Dr., is now a resident of Paris, and was born in Wertemberg, in 1758. With him originated the science of craniology, which has found so many advocates in Germany, Paris, England, and the United States.

GALLATIN, Albert, a native of Geneva, came many years since to the United States. For subsistence he became a French teacher, but afterwards connecting himself with Mr. Jefferson, he rose to high employments in this country. He was appointed secretary of the treasury; and, in 1813, was sent to conclude a peace between the United States and Great Britain; failing in this he returned in 1814; in 1815, he was appointed minister to Paris, and afterwards went to London on public business.

GALT, John, an extensive and observant traveller, and an author of considerable talent, was born in Greenock, 1779. He has published the "Life of Benjamin West, Esq.;" the "Life and Administration of Cardinal Wolsey;" "Annals of the Parish;" and many other works.

GEORGE IV., king of Great Britain and Ireland, son of George III., was born August 12th, 1762, on the 17th of that month was created prince of Wales, and earl of Chester. He connected himself with Mr. Fox and the popular party, in 1783, and in the same year, having taken his seat in parliament, supported Mr. Fox's celebrated India bill. In 1795 he married the princess Caroline of Brunswick, and, in 1810, in consequence of the king's indisposition, he was appointed regent, and continued closely attached to the Pitt party. He succeeded his father in 1820. His attempts to procure a divorce from the queen, produced an extraordinary feeling of indignation throughout the kingdom, which only subsided at her death, which took place soon after.

GERARD, M., a celebrated painter, was born at Rome, in 1770; he is now a resident of France, and chief painter to the king.

GILFORD, William, editor of the "London Quarterly Review," was born in 1757. When he had learned to write and cipher, he was put on board a coasting vessel, where he remained a year. He afterwards was bound an apprentice to a shoemaker, where he continued till he was twenty years of age, when his talents were discovered, and he was sent to Oxford. He performed two tours afterwards on the continent, as tutor to lord Belgrave, who, on his return, placed him in a state of independence. He has published a translation of the "Satires of Juvenal;" the "Baviad;" the "Mæviad;" and some other works.

GILLIES, John, a native of Brechin, was born in 1750, and educated at the university of Glasgow. His great work, the "History of Ancient Greece," and the "History of the World from Alexander to Augustus," have gained him the reputation of a correct historian. He has also published other works of merit, and now resides in London.

GISBORNE, Rev. T., an English curate, and distinguished moral writer. Among his works are "The Principles of Moral Philosophy," an "Inquiry into the Duties of the Female sex," and "A Familiar Survey of the Christian Religion," &c.

GLOUCESTER, duke of, son of the late duke of that name, was born at Rome, and succeeded to his father's title in 1805. In politics, the duke has generally voted with the whigs, and during the queen's trial, he supported her as a much injured and oppressed woman. He has lately acted much in public life. He was educated at Cambridge, and is now chancellor of that university.

GODOI, Don Manuel, prince of peace, was born at Badajoz, in Spain, in 1764, of a poor family. From one of the king's body guards, living on a pay of twenty cents a day, he became a favourite of the king and queen, was made prime minister, and, besides being invested with all the titles and honours his majesty could bestow, the king gave him his cousin in marriage. His ambition and influence were unlimited, nor did Godoi finish his career of artifice and intrigue, till Buonaparte, in 1803, became king of Spain.

GODWIN, William, son of a dissenting clergyman, was himself a preacher of that persuasion for some years. In 1792, as the author of "Political Justice," he inculcated some doctrines, both on religion and politics, which gave great offence. He has since been a political and miscellaneous writer, and has acquired much celebrity by his masterly examination of Malthus' "Theory of Population," "Fleetwood," "Mandeville," "Life and Age of Geoffrey Chaucer," and "Caleb Williams," are from his pen. Besides these, he has written many useful books on education, and is now a juvenile bookseller in London.

GORTHE, baron, a most celebrated German writer was born at Frankfort, in 1749. In 1782, he was ennobled, and as baron Gorthe was named president of the ducal chamber. Gorthe, in his own country, is almost worshipped, and abroad his reputation is high as a poet, and as a scholar. His works are voluminous, the first of which was the "Sorrows of Werter."

GOOD, Dr., a man of distinguished talents, and eminent as a physician, he resides in London. Besides many other works, he lately published the "Study of Medicine," and a "System of Nosology," both of which have been republished in this country.

GOUVION, St. Cyr, count, one of the best French tacticians, was an officer under Louis XVI., and acquired great reputation as a soldier under Buonaparte, who appointed him a marshal. When Louis XVIII. returned to France, he created him a peer. He is now at the head of the war department.

GRAFTON, duke of, was born in 1760. He was closely attached to Mr. Pitt, is now one of the whig party, and was actively engaged for the queen, during her trial.

GRANT, Mrs., author of "Memoirs of an American Lady," "Letters from the Mountains," &c. She was born at Glasgow, in 1756; and when a child, spent some years in this country with her father, who was a British officer stationed among the Mohawks.

GRENVILLE, lord, was born in 1769, and educated at Oxford, where he studied law for a short time, and afterwards devoted his life to politics. He for some time supported Mr. Pitt in his administration. He was afterwards a member of parliament, and for a short time speaker of the house of commons. When Mr. Pitt's interest declined, lord Grenville joined Mr. Fox in the opposition, and has since acted mostly with that body.

GROS, M., a historical painter, a pupil of David, and one of the best masters of the French school.

GROUCHY, marshal, born at Paris, in 1766, was once a lieutenant of the body guards of Louis XVI., afterwards under Napoleon; he acquired great reputation as a general, and rendered important services to France. By Buonaparte he was made a count, and afterwards marshal of the empire. His attachment to Napoleon however has been doubted, and it is certain that during the battle of Waterloo, he was within hearing of the canonade with 40,000 men. Soon after the return of the king, Grouchy came to the United States but lately obtained permission to return to France.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, ex-king of Sweden, was born November, 1778, and succeeded his father, Gustavus III., in 1792. At the commencement of his reign, he resolved to follow the pacific system of his father. But he refused to marry Catharine Paulowna, of Russia, afterwards queen of Wertemburg, although he went to St. Petersburg with that object; this, and his refusal to recognise Buonaparte as emperor of France, was sufficient to involve him in his after difficulties. A coalition of France, Russia, Prussia, and Denmark, was formed in 1809, against Sweden, and the fear, anxiety, and discontent manifested in all classes of the Swedes on this account, would have terminated in a civil war, had not Gustavus been seized, and required to abdicate the throne. He now resides at Basle, in Switzerland.

H

HALL, Rev. Robert, a Baptist minister, and not only one of the most eloquent dissenting ministers of his time, but an able polemical writer, was born in England in 1766. He was some time a minister at Cambridge, but his declining health has obliged him to retire to Leicestershire.

HARDENBERG, prince was born in Hanover, 1750. After the Margravate of Anspach and Barcuth was sold to Prussia, M. Hardenberg was employed to assimilate their laws and government to those of Prussia. He is now chancellor of state, minister of war, and member of the cabinet of the king of Prussia, who gave him the rank of prince. He is considered one of the ablest statesmen of Europe.

HASTINGS, marquis of, born 1754, and as lord Rawdon, is well known in this country as a general in the British service during the revolutionary war. His career since has gained him much popularity. In 1805, he was sent as commander-in-chief, into Scotland; and in 1822, he returned to England from India, where he had been for some years as governor-general.

HAZLITT, William, the son of a dissenting minister, was originally an artist, but, relinquishing the pencil for the pen, has become considerably distinguished as an author. Besides many other works, he has written "Lectures on the English Poets," "Political Essays, with Sketches of Public Characters," "Lectures on the English Comic Writers," and "Characters of Shakspeare's Plays."

HEATH, James, an eminent engraver, of England, was born in 1757. He has engraved several beautiful prints, which have gained him great reputation; his son, Charles Heath, is considered one of the best engravers of his time.

HENRY, Dr. William, born in Manchester, Eng., has acquired much celebrity as a chymist. His works have all been well received. Among them, are "Elements of Experimental Chymistry," and "A General View of the Nature and Objects of Chymistry."

HESSE CASSEL, elector of, was born June, 1743. He is one of the most illiberal monarchs of the present day. After the battle of Jena, Buonaparte took from him his electorate, to which he did not return till after the coalition, into which he entered, was victorious over France.

HOBHOUSE, John Cam, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and soon after travelled into Greece and some provinces of the Turkish empire, in company with lord Byron. He has written an "Account of a Journey into Albania and other provinces in the Turkish Empire," a volume, illustrative of lord Byron's "Childe Harold," and some other works. In a reply to lord Erskine, he offended the house of commons, for which he was imprisoned; but he was soon after elected a member of the house he had offended, and is an intimate friend of sir F. Burdett.

HOFLAND, Mr. and Mrs., the former a landscape painter, and the latter an author, each uniting considerable talents in their profession. Among the works of Mrs. Holland are "The Son of a Genius," "Says she to her neighbour, what?" "Ellen the Teacher," "The Sisters," and the "Officer's, Clergyman's and Merchant's Widow." Many of her works are designed for youth, and all are strictly moral.

HOGG, James, the Ettrick shepherd, is the son of a respectable farmer and sheep dealer in Scotland, who was ruined when the subject of this article was a child. At seven years of age he became a cowherd, and afterwards a shepherd. During this period he suffered many hardships. "Time after time," says he "I had but two shirts, which often grew so bad, that when I put them on they hung in long tatters as far as my heels." At eighteen years of age, he could hardly read, and in writing a letter at that time, he says, "I had actually forgot how to make sundry letters of the alphabet." When he was nineteen, he hired himself as a shepherd, to a gentleman, with whom he lived nine years. Here he had access to many valuable books, and aspired to be an author. In 1793, he wrote "An Address to the Duke of Buccleugh in behalf o' mysel' an' ither poor folk." His first printed work appeared in 1801, and soon after, he published the "Mountain Bard," by which, and a work on sheep, he became master of nearly three hundred pounds; a sum which, he says, made him "perfectly mad." But in three years he was penniless, and in 1810, in utter desperation, he took his plaid about his shoulders, set out for Edinburgh, and forced himself into notice as a literary character. His works, among which are the "Queen's Wake," "The Pilgrims of the Sun," "Mador of the Moor," "The Brownie of Bodsbeck," and "Winter Evening Tales," have nearly all been published in the U. States.

HOME, sir Everard, is not only one of the principal operative surgeons, but is a writer of considerable eminence, in London. He has written on the "Properties of Pus," "Practical Observations on the treatment of Strictures in the Urethra," "Observations on Cancers," "Lectures on comparative Anatomy," &c.

HUFELAND, Dr., the most celebrated of German physicians, is professor of the university of Jena, and physician to the king of Prussia. He has published many works on medicine, among which, the most curious is the "Art of prolonging Human Life," by means of which, he is of opinion that the age of man may be extended to two hundred years.

HUMBOLDT, baron, Frederick, one of the most indefatigable and intelligent of modern travellers, was born at Berlin, in 1769. He has visited Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Cuba, South America, and the United States; few have encountered toil and danger more readily, in pursuit of a favourite object; or looked upon the works of nature with a more observant eye. Baron Humboldt has published several volumes of travels, and is known as a botanist and mineralogist. He is now supposed to be in the East Indies.

HUNT, Leigh, a nephew of the late Benjamin West, was born in England, in 1784. As a poet and prose writer, he has exhibited considerable talents; among his works are "The Feast of the Poets," "The Descent of Liberty," "Foliage," a translation of the "Aminta of Tasso," "The Round Table," &c. For a time he was editor of a paper, called the "Examiner," and for a libel published in it on the prince regent, he was once sentenced to two years imprisonment.

HUTTON, Dr. Charles, born at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in 1737. Although since the age of eighteen, he has always been a schoolmaster, he has become eminent as a mathematician. Among his works are "Elements of Conic Sections," "A Mathematical and Philosophical Dictionary," and "A new course of Mathematics." He now resides at Woolwich.

HYDE DE NEUVILLE, count, the son of an Englishman, a resident of France. De Neuville was a principal agent of the exiled Bourbons after the establishment of the consulship, and had the boldness to propose to Buonaparte to restore the exiled family. For this, and some unsuccessful intrigues, an order was issued for his arrest; but he escaped, and fled, finally, to this country, and resided in the vicinity of New York, for several years. After the restoration of Louis XVIII., he returned to France, and for his fidelity to the Bourbons, he was rewarded with the title of count, and the place of ambassador to the United States. He has lately returned to Paris.

I

IRVING, Washington, was born in the city of New-York, about the year 1783, was educated at Columbia College, and while there he amused the town occasionally by some effusions which appeared in one of the papers of the time. He had commenced the study of the law, when in 1805, his studies were interrupted by decaying health; he immediately sailed for Europe, and at the expiration of two years, having visited many of the most important places on the continent, he returned through England to his native city. After completing his studies, he was admitted to the bar; but preferring other pursuits to the details of the law, he devoted himself to literature, and in 1807, in connexion with Mr. Paulding and Mr. Verplanck, the most amusing and popular periodical publication of the times, was produced under the title of "Salmagundi." In 1810, Mr. Irving published "Knickerbocker's History of New-York," and the fame of it established the reputation of its author. During the late war, Mr. Irving was military secretary, and aid-de-camp to the governor of the state of New-York; and in 1815, he went to England, and has since resided in Europe. Since his arrival in England, he has added much to his literary reputation, both there, and in his native country, by several volumes under the titles of "The Sketch Book," "Bracebridge Hall," and "Tales of a Traveller." Mr. Irving is now engaged at Paris, in editing an extensive collection of English and American literature.

J

JACKSON, Andrew, was born in the (then) Waxaw settlement, South Carolina, in the year 1767, and is of Irish parentage. He enlisted in the service of his country at the age of fourteen, and after fighting bravely, was wounded and taken prisoner. After his release, he studied at a flourishing academy in the settlement, prepared himself for the bar in Salisbury, in North Carolina, was admitted to it, and settled himself at Nashville, in Tennessee, where he was so successful in his practice, that he was soon appointed attorney-general for the district. At a state convention in 1796, Mr. Jackson was much distinguished, and he was that year elected to congress, after being a member of each house one year, he resigned his seat, esteemed for the soundness of his understanding, and the moderation of his demeanour. He was then for a short time a judge of the supreme court of Tennessee. At the commencement of the late war he was a major-general of militia in Tennessee, and by an energetic address to the militia of his division, he drew 2500 volunteers to his standard. These were disbanded in the spring of 1813. General Jackson's military career since, is well known; in his various campaigns, he has proved himself a most skilful commander, a vigilant disciplinarian, and a dauntless soldier. He was sent by government to receive the Floridas from Spain, as commissioner, and afterwards was appointed governor of these provinces. General Jackson was elected a senator to congress from Tennessee, where he has since held a seat, and he was a prominent, although unsuccessful candidate for the presidency, in opposition to Mr. Adams.

JAMIESON, Robert, an eminent mineralogist, and a resident of Edinburgh, where he is a professor of natural history, president of the Wernerian Society, and lecturer in mineralogy. His largest work is a "System of Mineralogy," 3 vols. 8vo. Among other works which he has published, is a "Treatise on the external, chymical, and physical character of Minerals;" and "Outlines of the Mineralogy of the Scottish Isles."

JAY, John, was born in the city of New-York, on the 1st of December, old style, in 1745. He was educated at Columbia College, and was afterwards admitted to the bar, where he attained great and deserved reputation as a lawyer. He was elected by the citizens of New-York, to the first American congress, in 1774, and after having been re-elected the two succeeding years, he was chosen president of congress, in 1776. He was afterwards appointed a member of the convention of New-York, and after the organization of that government, was appointed chief-justice of the state. In 1778, he was minister plenipotentiary to the court of Spain, and in 1782, was appointed one of the commissioners to negotiate a peace with England, and a treaty was signed in Sep. 1784, when he returned to New-York. After this, he was at the head of foreign affairs until the organization of the government, when he was appointed chief-justice of the United States; while in this occupation, he was engaged with Mr. Madison, and colonel Hamilton in writing the Federalist. As envoy-extraordinary to Great Britain, he negotiated and signed the treaty which bears his name, and on his return in 1795, he found himself elected governor of the state of New-York. This office he held until 1807, when declining a re-election, and also the situation of chief-justice of the United States, to which he had been appointed, he retired from public life to his farm at Bedford, N. Y., still the friend of his country, but wholly unambitious of further honours or distinctions. He is one of the most worthy men who were bred in the school of the revolution; and is conspicuous alike for the soundness of his judgment and his legal acquirements. His piety is undoubted, and the wanton malice, and rancorous endeavours to injure his name, he has viewed with the complacency of a Christian.

JEFFERSON, Thomas, was born in Chesterfield county, Virginia, on the 2d of October, 1743, and was educated at William and Mary College. He was a pupil in the office of chancellor Wythe, and was a distinguished member of the Virginia legislature in 1769, where he continued three years, and afterwards was a delegate, and took a most conspicuous stand in the congress at Philadelphia. Here he drew up that gigantic and spirited article, the Declaration of Independence. After this, from 1779 to 1781, he was governor of Virginia, and at the conclusion of peace, was appointed, with Dr. Franklin and Mr. Adams, minister plenipotentiary to Europe. He returned in 1789, and was appointed secretary of state, which office he resigned in 1790, and retired to private life. Mr. Jefferson was elected vice-president in 1797, and for the eight years succeeding Mr. Adams' administration, he was president of the United States. He then withdrew from public life, and retired to Monticello. During Mr. Jefferson's political career, he was distinguished as a sound legislator and statesman, unyielding in his determination, and a firm patriot. In private life, he is said to be benevolent, humane, and affable. He is president of the American Philosophical Society, and is a member of several literary societies in Europe and America. He published "Notes on Virginia" in 1781, which has lately been republished; it was also translated in France, and published in 1784.

JEFFERY, Francis, a celebrated literary and legal character of Edinburgh, where he was born, in 1773. In 1814, he visited the United States, and married a Miss Wilkes, of New-York. Mr. Jeffery is most generally known as a literary character, and this reputation he has acquired as editor of the Edinburgh Review. This office, however, he has declined the present year (1825).

JOHN VI., king of Portugal, was born in 1767, and in 1792 became regent of the kingdom. At the outset of his administration as regent, he offended both Buonaparte and Spain, and these soon combined to manifest their disaffection. Napoleon made demands of the regent which were not complied with, and he then declared that the house of Braganza had ceased to reign. The regent immediately sailed for the Brazils, and reached Rio Janeiro in safety. In March, 1810, he succeeded his mother, as king of Portugal. Though he had somewhat ameliorated the situation of the Brazilians, the government continued despotic, till, in 1820, he took the oath as constitutional sovereign. In July, 1821, he returned to Portugal, and appears to be on the best terms with the cortes, the people, and the new order of things.

JOURDAN, marshal count, an eminent military commander, was born at Limoges, in 1762. He served in the United States in the regiment of Auxerrois, from the age of 16 to the close of the revolutionary contest. In 1793 he commanded the army of the North, and defeated the prince of Saxe Cobourg, and compelled him to abandon the blockade of Maubenge. At the head of the army of the Moselle, in 1794, he defeated the allies, under Cobourg, and the entire conquest of the Netherlands was the consequence. As a member of the council of Five Hundred, in 1797, he manifested a decidedly republican spirit, and was soon chosen president of the council. In July, 1800, he was sent as administrator to Piedmont, and by his judicious management did himself much honour. In 1803, he was at the head of the army of Italy, and, in 1804, was appointed marshal and grand officer of the legion of honour. After this he was sent into Spain with Joseph Buonaparte, as his major-general and military counsellor. He assented to the return of the Bourbons, was created a knight of St. Louis, and in 1819, became a member of the house of peers.

K

KEAN, Edmund, an actor, born in London, in 1787. As an actor, Mr. Kean's talents and powers rank him among the first of his profession. But a late trial has rendered the infamy of his character as conspicuous as are his talents as a performer. It is said, notwithstanding the disgrace in which he left the stage in this country, in 1822, that he is about making the United States another visit.

KEMBLE, Charles, an actor of great merit as a tragedian, and one of the first comic actors, was born in Wales, in 1775. His wife, Mrs. M. T. Kemble, is an actress of considerable ability. They are both engaged at the Covent Garden Theatre, and both have written several plays.

KETT, rev. Henry, was educated at Oxford, and is a fellow and tutor of Trinity College, and one of the king's preachers at Whitehall. He has published many works, among which are "Sermons at the Banpton Lectures;" "Elements of General Knowledge;" a translation of Chateaubriand's "Beauties of Christianity;" and "The Flowers of Wit."

KING, Rufus, is the son of Richard King, a merchant, of Scarborough, in Maine, and was born in 1755. He graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, and completed his studies in the law in the office of the late chief-justice Parsons. While a student, he volunteered his services in the cause of his country under general Sullivan, who soon appointed him his aid, and served with much ardour and alacrity in the enterprise against the British on Long Island. In 1784, he was a delegate to the congress then sitting at Trenton, and in 1787, bore a conspicuous part in the general convention at Philadelphia. In 1783, Mr. King removed to New-York, and was elected to the legislature in 1789, and also a senator to congress. He represented the United States at the English court from the last year of president Washington's administration to the year 1803, with much honour to himself and his country, when he returned home. In 1813, he was again chosen senator to congress, which office he continued to fill with undiminished esteem and applause. Mr. King in his public life, has displayed a sound mind, and discriminating judgment, and is a profound statesman, civilian, and orator. He has recently been appointed by president Adams, minister to England.

KNAZIEWICZ, general, a native of Poland, who first distinguished himself in the gallant struggles made by the Poles, in 1794, to expel their Russian tyrants. He commanded, under Zajoncsek, at the combat of Gulkow; and at the fatal battle of Macejorice, he seconded Kosciusko with the utmost intrepidity and intelligence. As second in command of the Polish legions in the French service, he repeatedly distinguished himself, and afterwards, at the head of the Polish legion on the Rhine, he contributed his services to the gaining of the victory of Hohenlinden. Napoleon, in 1803, sent him the decoration of a commander of the legion of honour, and he has since been a lieutenant-general in the army of Poland.

KONOVNITZIN, lieutenant general in the Russian service, born in 1764. He was employed in the war against Sweden, and, in 1812, fought gallantly at Witepsk, at Smolensko, at Borodino, and at Krasnoi; and was rewarded with the cross of several orders.

L

LABILLARDIERE, M., a native of Alencon, and eminent as a botanist. His enthusiasm has led him to visit many parts of Europe, Asia, and America; and on returning from one of his expeditions abroad, he found himself in possession of a herbal of four thousand plants, three fourths of which were new discoveries. He has published the most ample collection of the plants of New Holland, that has appeared.

LABRADOR, Don Pedro Gomez, formerly minister of Charles IV. at the court of Florence. By invitation of Ferdinand VII., he accompanied him to Bayonne, where he held a conference with Champagny relative to the proposals offered by Napoleon for the acceptance of Ferdinand. Don Petro attended Ferdinand in his exile, and on his return to Spain, in 1814, that prince nominated him counsellor of state, as well as ambassador to France, and his representative at the congress of Vienna; in all which situations, he distinguished himself by his diplomatic talents.

LACEPEDE, count, a distinguished naturalist, and a pupil of Daubenton and Buffon. He is also a politician. In 1796, he was appointed a member of the National Institute, and in 1799, Napoleon called him to the conservative senate, of which he became president, in 1801. He afterwards was a member of the grand council of administration, and was soon chosen president of the senate. He accepted the dignity of peer of France offered to him by Napoleon, which was confirmed by Louis, in 1819. He has published many works, among which is an edition of the "Works of Buffon," with notes, a Biography of the Author, and a Discourse on the progress of the Natural Sciences, by himself.

LA CHATRE, the duke de, was born in Berry, about 1750. He accompanied Louis XVIII. in his exile from France, and was his particular confidant. In 1805, Louis nominated him his agent at the court of England, where he remained after the restoration of the Bourbons, with the title of French ambassador. The duke returned to France in 1816, and in 1817, was appointed a member of the chamber of peers.

LACROIX, M. Sylvester, is considered in all respects, the ablest mathematician in Europe, and his publications are numerous and valuable. In 1782, he was appointed professor of mathematics in the naval academy of Rochefort, and also a member of the French Institute, and of the legion of honour, in 1799.

LAFAYETTE, Gilbert Motier, marquis de, was born on the 6th of September, 1757, at the Chateau de Chavagnac, in the department of Haute Loire, and was the inheritor of a princely fortune, and descended from distinguished ancestors. At seven years of age, he entered the college of Louis le Grande, at Paris, and commenced his literary education. Here the lovely but ill-fated Antoinette, the late queen of France, took him under her immediate patronage, and at a very early age, he rose to the rank of a commissioned officer in the king's guards. In 1774, he married the countess de Noilles. At nineteen years of age, he sailed for America, and landed on the shores of South Carolina. This illustrious friend had become an advocate of the colonies, and felt all that ardour in the cause of liberty, which has not deserted him in maturer years. Lafayette had watched attentively the momentous controversy between Great Britain and her oppressed subjects, and resolved to make any sacrifice in their cause. He made known his intention to Dr. Franklin, then our commissioner in France, who laid before him the disastrous state of the country. "The more hopeless your cause," said he, "the more occasion is there for my assistance, the more honour shall I acquire by bestowing it." He immediately equipped a vessel for this enterprise at his own expense, and severing the ties which would have detained him in his native country, he sailed for the United States. Arrived at Philadelphia, he presented himself before congress. "I am come," said he, "to request two favours of this assemblage of patriots. One is that I may serve in your army, the other, that I receive no pay." He was immediately received into the family of Washington, and congress in July following, tendered him a commission of major-general. Soon after, learning the embarrassments of the army, he gave Washington 60,000 francs (about 10000 dollars) to procure supplies; by which generous act, Washington was so affected, that he embraced Lafayette with tears of joy and affection. At the battle of Brandywine, the marquis exhibited full evidence of his bravery and military character, and in this bloody contest was wounded. After his recovery he joined general Green, in New-Jersey, and was at the head of 2000 men, whom he had formed, clothed, armed, equipped and disciplined himself. He was afterwards actively employed in different parts of the country, till 1779, when he returned to France, his object to obtain assistance for his adopted country. In this he succeeded, and in May, 1780, he returned with the joyful intelligence, that a French fleet and army would soon arrive on our coast. He immediately resumed his command, and in the campaigns of 1780 and 1781, he displayed the most consummate generalship in preserving his little army, then opposed to lord Cornwallis, till the siege of that general at Yorktown, where, collected and undismayed, he shared largely in the honours of the day. In November, 1781, the contest in which he had been so nobly engaged, drawing near a completion, Lafayette signified his intention of returning to his country. After the conclusion of peace, in August, 1784, general Lafayette again visited the United States, and several of the larger cities, in some of which the freedom of the city was presented him; he returned to France, in December following.

General Lafayette was a member of the Assembly of Notables at Versailles, in 1787, and in 1789 he was elected a member of the States General, made president of that assembly, and commandant of the national guards. In this capacity, his influence was exerted in favour of lenient measures; and he did much to prevent the mob of Paris from running into those horrid excesses, which were afterwards committed. He acted a conspicuous part on the day the constitution was adopted, and soon after resigned his command. In 1792, he was called again into service; but on that memorable day, the 10th of August, when the royal family fled to the national assembly for safety, he opposed the fury of the mob, was deprived of command, a price was set on his head, and he was obliged to fly his country for safety. He was thrown into prison by the king of Prussia, and afterwards chained and imprisoned by the emperor of Austria in the citadel at Olmutz. His estate was confiscated. In prison, he was subjected to the most barbarous treatment, and frequently threatened with an ignominious death. Great exertions were made to obtain his liberation without effect, until, in 1797, in settling terms of peace with Austria, Buonaparte expressly stipulated that Lafayette should be set at liberty, and in 1799, after the overthrow of the French directory, he returned to France, and settled at La Grange, about 40 miles from Paris. Previous to Buonaparte's first abdication, he was elected to the chamber of deputies, and there proposed a vote of permanent session, which was passed, and in consequence, the emperor found himself under the necessity of abdicating the throne. From that period to the time of his embarkation for the United States, with the exception of his having been once again elected to the chamber of deputies, general Lafayette spent most of his time in the pursuits of agriculture at La Grange. When he expressed his intention of again visiting the United States, every heart beat high with joyful anticipation. He declined the offer of a national ship of the line to convey him across the Atlantic, which, together with a formal invitation to visit the United States, was voted him by congress, and arrived in the harbour of New-York on the 15th of August, 1824, in the ship Cadmus. The next day he was received in the city with the most enthusiastic demonstrations of joy and respect, by an immense concourse of citizens. After making a complete tour through the United States, being received every where with the highest marks of gratitude which a free people could bestow, he sailed again for his native country, on the 7th of September, 1825, in a ship fitted out by government for that purpose, and called the Brandywine, in honour of his bravery in that memorable battle. In gratitude for his former services, with a becoming magnificence, congress soon after his arrival passed a vote granting general Lafayette 200,000 dollars from the treasury, and a township of land, to be located in any of the lands belonging to the United States.

LAHARPE, general, was, in the early part of his life, a barrister in his native province, the Pays de Vaud. He was invited to Russia by Paul I., where the emperor Alexander was his pupil. Afterwards, while a resident of France, he was commissioned by the executive directory of Switzerland to prepare that country for a revolution, which he accomplished by means of writings and proclamations, with so much zeal and activity, that he was presented with a gold medal by the new government, to express the gratitude of the Pays de Vaud. Happening to be at Paris during the eventful year 1714, Alexander decorated him with the orders of Russia, and gave him the rank of general in his army. He is now in retirement in Switzerland.

LALLY TOLLENDAL, marquis, was born at Paris, 1751. In 1789, he was one of the most popular members of the constituent assembly, and supported the famous declaration of the rights of man, that was proposed by Lafayette. In 1792, he exerted himself with energy in defence of Louis XVI., and since the restoration, has been a member of the privy council of Louis XVIII.

LAMARQUE, count, was born at St. Sever, in 1770. At the head of two hundred grenadiers, he marched against Fontarabia, and by a masterly coup de-main, he took the place, defended by eighty pieces of cannon, and made one thousand eight hundred men prisoners. In 1801, he was made general of brigade, and distinguished himself at the battle of Hohenlinden. After this, he took the island of Caprea from the English, was at the battle of Wagram, where he had four horses killed under him; he served in Russia, and in Spain, in 1812, and in 1814, was created a knight of St. Louis. After the return of Louis XVIII., he took refuge in Brussels, and afterwards passed into Austria.

LAMETHI, count, Alexander de, a knight of Malta, was born in France, in 1757, and as aid-de-camp to general Rochambeau, served in the revolutionary war of this country, with great zeal and energy. In 1783, he was a deputy to the States General from Peronne, and embraced the popular side at the commencement of the French revolution. In 1792, he joined the army of Lafayette, fled with him and was thrown into prison by the Austrians. He obtained liberty to return to France in 1800, and was successively named prefect of the Lower Alps, of the Rhine and Moselle, and of La Somme, and was also created knight of St. Louis, and appointed lieutenant-general in the army. In 1819, he was elected to the chamber of deputies, and has constantly proved himself a zealous friend of liberty. The political career of his brother, the count Charles de Lameth, much resembles his own. He served in America with reputation; was a deputy to the States General, in 1789, and joined the army of Lafayette, in 1792. He commanded in Spain in 1812 and 1813, and on his return to France in 1814, was appointed lieutenant-general. In 1807, as aid-de-camp to general Murat, he was distinguished by his bravery at the battle of Heilsberg, where he was wounded.

LANCASTER, Joseph, famous as the inventor, and successful promulgator of a new system of instruction. He was born in England, in 1771, was bred and still maintains the habits and manners of a quaker. Disappointed in his expectations in his native country, he left England in disgust, and came to the United States about 1817, where his fame procured him friends, and his industry rendered him useful. He has recently gone to South America, where, under the liberal patronage of Bolivar, his prospects of success are most flattering.

LAPLACE, marquis, a geometrician of high celebrity, was born in 1749. He was president of the conservative senate in 1803, and in 1814, gave his vote for the dethronement of Napoleon, for which the king gave him the title of a peer. M. Laplace, holds the first rank among French mathematicians, and, in his "Exposition of the System of the World," he has powerfully contributed to advance the boundaries of a science that has so often employed the industry of the most profound geniuses of the world.

LASCASAS, count de, is descended from an ancient Spanish family, and is distinguished as the faithful and spirited friend of Napoleon, whom he accompanied to St. Helena, and who, during his reign, loaded Lascasas with favours. Lascasas has published a Narrative of his Residence at St. Helena, and also, under the name of Lesage, "A Historical and Geographical Atlas."

LAVALETTE, count, was born in 1769, at Paris, of obscure parents. To Baudelocque he was indebted for a superior education. He was destined for the church, but, having finished his education, he studied the law. But the revolution interrupted his pursuits. As an officer in the national guards, in August, 1792, he endeavoured to defend the palace of the Thuilleries; afterwards he enrolled himself in the legion of the Alps, and served in the army of the Rhine, and that of Italy, with such distinction, that Buonaparte made him his aid-de-camp, and entrusted him with his secret correspondence. He gave him mademoiselle Beauharnois, the niece of his wife, Josephine, in marriage, to draw the ties of attachment closer between them. Lavalette accompanied Buonaparte to Egypt, and after the establishment of the consulship, was appointed postmaster-general and counsellor of state; he was subsequently made a count, and a commander of the legion of honour. For the extraordinary vigilance and activity of his measures to accelerate the progress of Napoleon, on his return from Elba, he was created a peer of France. But on the return of the king, he was brought to trial, as an accomplice of Napoleon, and condemned to death. He, however, escaped from prison in disguise, by the assistance of his wife, and fled to Munich, where he has since found an asylum and powerful friends. Madame Lavalette was cruelly retained some time in prison, having been accessory to the escape of her husband; a treatment which disordered her senses, and she has since been a confirmed lunatic.

LAWRENCE, sir Thomas, the successor of sir Benjamin West, as president of the Royal Academy at London, is now about fifty-eight years of age, and was born at Bath. He first became distinguished by his portraits of the Kemble family, and in a few years he began to obtain the highest patronage, and no exhibition was considered complete or interesting, without some of his pictures. The personal character of sir Thomas Lawrence accords with his professional talents, and he possesses much native modesty, and suavity of manners. He is painter to George IV.

LEOPOLD, prince of Saxe Cobourg Saalfeld, was born in 1790, and entered into the Austrian army, where he distinguished himself on several occasions, and attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He visited England in 1814, in the suite of the sovereigns of Russia and Prussia. The intended marriage between the prince of Orange and the princess of Wales having been broken off, prince Leopold was the protestant selected to espouse her, and they were married in 1817. By the preliminaries of their marriage, the prince was entitled to an income of more than 256,000 dollars, (beside an outfit to the same amount,) about 222,000 dollars of which was to remain with him in case he survived her. He was naturalized by an act of parliament previous to his marriage, and was appointed a colonel and field-marshal. The death of the princess Charlotte has reduced him to the rank of a commoner, in England.

LESLIE, professor of the university of Edinburgh, is a native of Scotland, and a profound mathematician and chymist. He has invented several valuable philosophical instruments, has published several scientific works, and is a contributor to the Edinburgh Review.

LOCKHART, John G., a native of Scotland, was born about the year 1792; he is a lawyer, and resides at Edinburgh. He is a popular author, and is supposed to have written Peter's Letters, and also a leading writer for Blackwood's Magazine. Among his best performances, is Reginald Dalton. About four years since he married the eldest daughter of sir Walter Scott. His works, which are numerous, are distinguished for masculine and original talent; but are deficient in elegance and refinement. He is, however, one of the most eminent writers of the day.

LUCCA, the dutchess of, formerly Maria Louisa, of Bourbon, infanta of Spain, was born at Madrid, in 1782. She married Don Louis de Bourbon, eldest son of the duke of Parma, and in 1801, by political events, they were called to reign over the kingdom of Etruria. In 1803, her husband's death left her regent of that kingdom. Her court became by degrees one of the most brilliant in Europe. But, in 1807, the king of Spain having ceded her kingdom to Napoleon, she retired to the court of her father. She asserted before the congress of Vienna, her rights to the estates of Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, but obtained only the principality of Lucca, of which she took possession in 1817.

M

MACANZA, Don Pedro, a pecculating minister, descended from an ancient Irish family, and was born about 1760. He rose rapidly into the favour of Ferdinand, who appointed him minister of grace and justice. To him is attributed the crime of having been the principal prompter of the monarch to destroy the liberties of Spain. He issued the edict prohibiting the exiles who espoused the cause of Joseph from entering the peninsula, and afterwards commenced the persecution of the patriots. But he was soon discovered to have been guilty of the grossest bribery and corruption, and he was thrown into prison, from which, after two years, he was allowed to retire to an estate in Castile, where he now lives, despised by all parties.

MADALINSKI, general, the patriotic Pole, who had the honour of being the first to raise the standard of liberty against the Russians, in 1794. He had long held a secret correspondence with Kosciusco, and, when the order was given for disbanding the Polish army, he collected his regiment of seven hundred men, defeated the scattered Russian detachments, and succeeded in joining Kosciusco, (who had been appointed generalissimo,) at Racow, though pursued by seven thousand Russians. He distinguished himself in several battles, particularly in the defence of Warsaw. He still resides in Poland, beloved and respected by his countrymen.

MADISON, James. The career of this statesman commenced at the close of the revolutionary war. When the public mind was chiefly occupied with the formation of a national constitution, Mr. Madison vigorously co-operated with the principal men of the country, and in the meeting at Annapolis, and the convention in Philadelphia, he ranked high among the luminaries of the day. He participated in the discussions relative to the constitution, and furnished many able papers for the "Federalist." Afterwards, Mr. Madison was a member of the legislature of Virginia, and subsequently was elected to congress, and in both these bodies he was an able advocate for the people. He was appointed secretary of state by Mr. Jefferson, and in this capacity displayed much talent as a statesman and logician. Mr. Madison was elected president in 1809, and was re-elected in 1813. In affairs of state his reserve was habitual; he seldom yielded to expediency, and his honesty as a statesman, it is believed, was never doubted. Mr. Madison is a native of Virginia, where he now resides, and is about seventy years of age.

MAHMOUD II., sultan or emperor of the Turks, was born in 1784, and succeeded his brother, Mustapha IV., in 1808. At the time he became emperor, troubles and dangers the most appalling, existed in the interior of his dominions, while a war with Russia and the Servians, threatened the dissolution of his empire. He was compelled to submit to a burdensome peace with Russia, but by his prudence and energy, and the wisdom of his policy, he successively reduced to obedience the pachas of Romelia, Widdin, Bagdad, Damascus, and the beys of Egypt; released the city of Mecca from the Wahabees, and conquered the Servians. But his present contest with the Greeks, and the barbarous massacres he has permitted, exhibits the bloody tyranny of his government; his internal administration is exercised with excessive rigour.

MANCHESTER, duke of, was born in 1768. Although his father was a strong oppositio-nist, he joined the ministry, and was appointed lieutenant governor, and afterwards governor of Jamaica, where he now resides.

MANUEL, M., one of the most eloquent and intrepid of the defenders of French liberty, was born in the department of the Lower Alps, in 1775. In 1815, he was a member of the chamber of deputies, convoked by Napoleon, and afterwards, strongly contended for the rights of the younger Napoleon, and moved a spirited protest against the force employed by the allies to restore the Bourbons. In 1818, he was re-elected to the chamber of deputies, and has since held a seat there. In point of argument and elocution, he is one of the most formidable opponents of the ministry.

MARET, duke of Bassano, enjoyed the confidence and friendship of Napoleon, from the time he was made consul to his abdication. He was made secretary of the council of state, and was employed in negotiating the treaty of Presburgh; in 1811, he was made minister of foreign affairs, and created duke of Bassano; in 1812, he negotiated treaties with Austria, and Prussia; and in 1813 and 1814 was entrusted with various important missions. He was banished by Louis, and is now a resident at Gratz, in Syria, occupied in the education of his children. He was born at Dijon, in 1753.

MARIA LOUISA, late empress of France, is daughter of Francis II. of Austria, and was born in 1791. The younger branches of the imperial family had been taught to think of Napoleon with so much horror, that the princess fainted at the first suggestion of her marriage to him; but at length she yielded to the entreaties of her father, and to state policy, and afterwards became sincerely attached to him. They were married in 1810. During the absence of Buonaparte in the campaigns of 1812, and 1813, she was placed by him at the head of the French government as empress-regent, and in that capacity, she went in state to the senate, and demanded a levy of 190,000 men. On setting out for the army in 1814, Buonaparte took, as it afterwards proved to be, his final farewell of her. The officers of the national guard of Paris, 800 in number, were summoned to the great saloon of the Thuilleries, to receive the solemn deposit which Napoleon entrusted to their honour, in the persons of his wife and child. "I confide," said he, and he spoke it in a tremulous accent, "my wife and child to my faithful citizens of Paris, thus giving them the dearest mark of confidence, which I have in my power to bestow." On the 29th of March, the day before the battle of Paris, the empress fled to Blois, and in May, went to Vienna. The principality of Parma, had in the mean time been secured to her by treaty, and in 1817, she took possession of this as princess of Parma, but her court is neither numerous nor splendid. Her son was separated from her in 1815, and has not since been under her care.

MARINO, Don Santiago, one of the most intrepid and indefatigable generals, who have fought for the independence of South America. He is of a rich family, and was born in the province of Cumana. He espoused the cause of liberty at an early period, and at the town of Matarin, where he was enabled to procure a supply of provisions and horses, and keep up a correspondence with the revolted colonies, he sustained the place against Montaverde, twice routing his army with immense loss, and at a third attack, completely defeating him. Marino soon after joined Bolivar, and has been engaged in many of the battles since that period.

MARMONT, duke of Ragusa, who has immortalized his name by his bravery and military talents, and stained it by being the first to desert his benefactor, was born at Châtillon upon the Seine, in 1774, and was educated for the army. This he entered in 1792, and was present in the first campaigns of the armies of the Alps, and of Italy. He then became aid-de-camp to Buonaparte, and displayed much courage and talent at the battles of Lodi, Castiglione, and St. George. In 1793, he was made a brigadier-general for his conduct at Malta. In Dalmatia, he routed, with a handful of troops, the Russians and Montenegrins, and for this he was rewarded with a dukedom. He compelled Wellington to raise the siege of Badajoz, took the command of an army in Germany; and contributed at the victories of Lutzen, Bautzen, Dresden, and others. He was made a marshal on the field of Znaim, where he had been victorious, and in 1814, shared in the laurels gained at Brienne, Champ Aubert, Vauchamp, and Montmirail. Here ends the glory of his career. In the retreat, on Paris, Marmont, finding himself in a situation in which he could pursue his own views without accountability to Buonaparte, negotiated with the allies, and separated his division from the rest of the army. Louis rewarded so valuable a subject with a peerage, and has since appointed him one of the four marshals of the royal guard and a commander of St. Louis.

MARSHALL, John, was born in Virginia, about the year 1756, and went through the usual course of classical education in a private seminary. He shared in the dangers and fatigues of the army during the revolutionary war, and was under the immediate command of Washington, after which he studied the law, and soon after, he was elected to the legislature, and then was a member of the executive council. In a short time he was at the head of his profession; was a member of the Virginia convention, in 1788, and generally represented the city of Richmond in the legislature of the state, until in 1797, he was prevailed on to accept the appointment of an envoy to France, with Messrs. Pinckney and Gerry. Mr. Marshall shared largely in the transactions and honours of this embassy. After his return, he had been a short time a distinguished member of congress, when he was appointed secretary of state by Mr. Jefferson. He soon after received the appointment of chief-justice of the United States, which high office he has since continued to fill with dignity and reputation, and is alike conspicuous for his sound judgment and luminous mind. Judge Marshall has published a Life of Washington, in five volumes, 8vo, and is now employed in revising it for a second edition.

MATURIN, rev. C. R., born in Ireland, in 1782, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he obtained several prizes and medals as the reward of his acquirements, and yet was there more remarkable for his indolence and melancholy, than for his talents. But, by the misfortunes of his father, he was compelled to provide for himself, and he sought for a resource in literary labour. Under the assumed name of Denis Jasper Murphy, he produced "The Fatal Revenge," "The Wild Irish Boy," and "The Milesian Chief." "Bertram," a tragedy, through the interest of Lord Byron, was brought out at Drury-lane, and its success established the fame of its author. He has since published two finely written works: "Women, or Pour et Contre," and "Melmoth, the Wanderer."

MAXIMILIAN I., king of Bavaria, was born in 1756, and succeeded his uncle, Charles Theodore, as elector of Bavaria, in 1799. He early displayed the qualities of a wise and good prince; he introduced various popular reforms in his states, and abolished the oppressive privileges and immunities of the nobles and clergy. In 1806, he joined Napoleon, with an army of 25,000 Bavarians, against Francis II., and at the conclusion of peace, was elevated by his potent ally, to the dignity of king of Bavaria, and the Tyrol and other provinces were added to his territory. Maximilian remained faithful to his engagements with Napoleon till the disastrous campaign in Russia compelled him to join the subsequent alliance against France. After the general peace of 1814, he purchased for himself new titles to the affections of his people, by giving them a representative government, and placing them in the rank of free nations.

METTERNICH-WINEBOURG, prince, commenced his political career as ambassador to various courts of the highest rank, and was born in Austria, in 1775. While ambassador to France, he ingratiated himself greatly with Napoleon, and obtained an advantageous peace with him, at the conclusion of the war which commenced in 1809, between France and Austria. On his return, Francis made him minister of foreign affairs, and afterwards prime minister. He afterwards followed his sovereign to Paris, and signed the treaty of 1814, after the success of the allies. He accompanied the king of Prussia, and emperor of Russia to England, and received the degree of doctor of laws from the university of Oxford, and on his return to Vienna, was raised to the dignity of a prince, and received the lordship and estates of Arnvar, in Hungary. He assisted at the congress of Vienna, and also at that of Aix la Chappelle, and there is scarcely a prince in Europe from whom he has not received some token of distinction and esteem.

MILORADOWITCH, count, one of the best of the Russian generals, was employed in the campaign against the Turks, in 1789, and against the Poles in 1794 and 1795. He possessed the entire confidence of Suwarrow, and was at the head of his advanced guard, in 1799. He commanded a division at Austerlitz, and in 1812, was again appointed to the command of the Russian advanced guard, and greatly distinguished himself in the action near Krasnoy, and Wiazma. At the battle of Leipzig he led the Russian and Prussian reserves, and took a conspicuous part in the campaign of 1814.

MINA, Don Francisco Espoz y, was born in Navarre, in 1782. He is one of the most distinguished Spanish patriots: brave, active, and indefatigable, at the head of Guerilla corps during the war against the French, his exploits were so successful that he was often denominated king of Navarre. Mortified to find that he had only been labouring to re-establish despotism, and the division of troops of which he had been appointed general having been dismissed, he gained over the garrison of Pampluna, and was on the point of proclaiming the constitution, when his plan was betrayed. He fled to France; but when the standard of freedom was raised at Cadiz, he hurried back to Navarre, and took a leading part in the struggle. After the king had submitted to the new order of things, Mina was appointed captain-general of Navarre, and afterwards, taking command of the army destined to act against a formidable insurrection in Catalonia, he completely subdued it. He is regarded as the most experienced general in Spain, and as the sheet-anchor of the constitutional cause.

MONCEY, marshal, duke Congignano, was born at Besancon, in 1754. In 1793 he commanded a corps in the army of the Pyrenees, and in 1794 was raised to general of brigade, and soon after to the rank of general of division. He served with distinction during the war with Spain; in 1795 commanded the army of the Eastern Pyrenees, and afterwards greatly distinguished himself in the campaign of Italy. In 1804 he was made marshal of France, and grand officer of the legion of honour. He served in the campaigns of 1812 and 1813, and, as second in command of the Parisian national guard at the attack of the allies on Paris, he displayed much presence of mind and firmness of purpose. After the return of Louis he was made minister of state, knight of St. Louis, and peer of France. But, as he accepted a peerage of Napoleon, in 1815, he has since only been restored to his titles.

MONROE, James, was born in Virginia, is now (1825) about 67 years of age, and resides at London, in his native state. Ardently devoted to his country, he took part in the revolution when a youth, and his undaunted courage was evinced on more than one occasion. He was devoted to Washington, an admirer and imitator of Jefferson, and a friend and companion of Madison. Mr. Monroe was a member of the old congress, and was instrumental in the formation of the constitution. He was a successful lawyer, and in the legislature of Virginia, and in the new congress, he was an intelligent, active, and efficient member. France, Spain, and Great Britain have been the theatres of his diplomatic career. He was successively secretary of state, and of war, and his constancy and capacity in the one, and vigour and firmness in the other, were alike conspicuous. Mr. Monroe was elected to the presidency in 1817, and had a most difficult part to perform; but it will be difficult to find a real blemish in his administration, and in the course of it, he has proved himself a benefactor of his country, and a worthy patriot. He was re-elected president in 1821, and in 1823 was succeeded by Mr. Adams.

MONTGOMERY, James, an excellent poet, was born in Ayrshire, in 1771, and is the son of a Moravian minister. He was early devoted to poetry, and, as early as twelve years of age, had written three volumes. His education was limited, but he acquired a knowledge of the Greek, Latin, French, and German languages, in Yorkshire. He went to London, and for sometime was in the shop of a bookseller; afterwards he became the publisher of a paper in Sheffield, entitled "The Iris." For some pieces which happened in this, he was twice imprisoned, and while incarcerated, published "Prison Amusements." In 1806, he published "The Wanderer of Switzerland," and other poems, which rose in popularity, and established his reputation. He has since published "The West Indies," "The World before the Flood," "Songs of Zion," &c. He still resides at Sheffield, is yet the conductor of "The Iris," and is considered an amiable and pious man.

MONTIOLON, marquis, celebrated for his unshaken and generous adherence to the fallen fortunes of his illustrious master, entered the French army at the age of fifteen, serving under Buonaparte, from whom he received a sword, for his services on the memorable 18th Brumaire. He was aid-de-camp to marshal Berthier before he was twenty-one years of age, and in that capacity distinguished himself at the battles of Austerlitz, Wagram, Jena, and Friedland. He commanded in the department of the Loire, when he received the news of the emperor's abdication: with his wife and children, he voluntarily partook of the ex-emperor's imprisonment at St. Helena, and continued with him till his decease. He is now arranging for the press, memoirs dictated to him by his late sovereign.

MOORE, Thomas, one of the first of British poets, was born in Ireland, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He went to London, with a view of making the law his profession, and was called to the bar. It was then that he translated the Odes of Anacreon; these met with so favourable a reception, that he abandoned the law, and devoted himself to literature. Under the name of Little, he published a volume of poems, which were justly censured for their licentiousness. He visited the United States in 1805, but his prejudices did not allow him to form a favourable opinion of our country. Since his return, in 1806, he has published "The Two-penny Post-bag;" "The Fudge family in Paris;" "The Loves of the Angels;" and "Lalla Rookh," an oriental romance, which unites the purest and softest tenderness with the loftiest dignity, and in every page, glows with all the fervour of poetry.

MORE, Mrs. Hannah, was born near Bristol, about the year 1750, and is the youngest of five sisters. At Bristol, her taste and knowledge acquired her the friendship of Dr. Stonehouse, who encouraged her to write, and corrected all her early effusions. The "Search after Happiness," her first publication, was favourably received; and she soon after published several other pieces. In 1782, she published her "Sacred Dramas." She retired about 1798, to Somersetshire, with her sisters, where they established charity schools among the colliers, with much advantage to them. She has continued since to give her productions to the world, and besides many others, has published "Thoughts on the Manners of the Great;" "Strictures on the Modern System of Female Education;" and being consulted on the subject of the education of the princess Charlotte, produced "Hints toward forming the character of a young Princess," which was highly approved of, and received with royal approbation. This excellent woman, who has constantly been labouring to benefit mankind, has been many years confined to her bed by an excruciating disease; but in this situation, she has produced some of her best works, among which are "Cælebs in Search of a Wife," "Practical Piety," "Christian Morals," "Essay on the Character and Writings of St. Paul," and "Moral Sketches of Prevailing Opinions and Manners." Amongst her most intimate friends, Mrs. More has numbered Dr. Porteus, Dr. Beattie, Mrs. Montague, Dr. Johnson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Mr. Garrick.

MORGHEN, Raphael, an eminent professor of the graphic art, and one of the first European engravers, was born at Naples, in 1756, and was a pupil under the celebrated Volpato. Among the most remarkable of his works, are the Transfiguration, from Raphael; a Magdalen, from Murillo; a Head of the Saviour, from da Vinci; the Monument of Clement XIII., from Canova; and Theseus vanquishing the Minotaur.

MORILLO, Don Pablo, a man of courage and talent, was originally a serjeant of artillery in the Spanish marines, but distinguished himself so much during the war between Spain and France, that in the course of it he was promoted to be a general. In 1815, he was placed at the head of an expedition against South America, consisting of twelve thousand men. He was at first successful: Carthagená surrendered to him after a siege, during which he confiscated the property of the Venezuelans, and committed many cruelties. New Granada was afterwards reduced, and again Morillo had recourse to the system of bloodshed and pillage. These events roused the spirits of Bolívar, Páez, and Arismendi, and Morillo was several times defeated, he was driven from Granada, and a great part of Caracacas. In 1820, having heard of the revolution, he returned to Spain, joined the patriots, and for a time was the political chief of Madrid. But he has been removed, and appears to be viewed with suspicion by the liberal party.

MOSTONSKI, count Thaddeus, an illustrious patriot of Poland, was born at Warsaw, in 1790. When Stanislaus was compelled to accede to the confederation of Targowitz, and consequently to the overthrow of Polish liberty, Mostonski fled to Paris, became connected with the Girondist party, and obtained a promise of assistance for the Poles; but the triumph of the jacobin party put an end to his prospects; he returned to Poland, took an active part with his countrymen in their efforts to expel their oppressors, and when no hope was left of saving his country, he refused to fly from Warsaw, was taken prisoner, and was some time confined at St. Petersburg. He afterwards resided in France, till, in 1815, he was recalled to Poland by Alexander, appointed minister of the home department, and of police.

N

NESSSELRODE, count Charles Robert de, secretary for foreign affairs, and privy counsellor to the emperor of Russia, was born in Livonia, about the year 1770. This minister stands high in the confidence of his sovereign, and has often received marks of his esteem. He accompanied the emperor into France in the campaign of 1814, and was one of the four plenipotentiaries that signed the treaty of quadruple alliance, at Chaumont, in March, of that year. All the notes and addresses of the emperor, at this period, bear his signature, and were mostly drawn up by him. After a short stay in Paris, he repaired to Vienna, to assist in the conference relative to the future constitution of Germany. And afterwards, in 1815, he was one of the committee that signed the declaration or profession of faith of the several powers with respect to Buonaparte.

O

OPIE, Mrs., was born in 1771. She is the daughter of Dr. Alderson, an eminent physician, of Norwich. This lady early evinced superior talents, by composing poems and descriptive pieces, at an age when young ladies have not usually finished their education. In 1798 she married Mr. Opie, a celebrated painter, and soon after his death, in 1808, she published a memoir of his life, prefixed to the lectures he had read at the Royal Academy. By this and other publications, she has acquired considerable reputation, both as a prose and poetical writer.

ORANGE, the hereditary prince of, is the son of the king of the Netherlands. He was born in 1792. In 1811, he became a colonel in the British army, and served with Wellington in Spain. He was promoted to the rank of general in 1814, and was present at all the important battles in the peninsula. At the battle of Waterloo, he commanded the Dutch troops with his accustomed gallantry, and was severely wounded. In 1816, he married a sister of the emperor Alexander of Russia.

ORLEANS, the duke of, is a descendant of Henry IV., whose virtues he imitates. He was born in October, 1773, and in early life was distinguished for his sedate character, and for his prudence and moderation. As duc de Chartres, he was a soldier in the armies of the republic for a short time, but was soon proscribed. He then escaped, travelled in disguise through different parts of Europe, and at one time filled the professorship of mathematics at Reichenman, in the Grisons country, under a borrowed name. He afterwards visited the United States, with his brothers, and returned to Europe to assist his mother. In 1800, he took up his residence in England. He married a daughter of the king of Naples, and now lives in Paris. He is heir, in no very remote degree, to the throne of France.

OWEN, Robert, esq., a native of Great Britain, was born to a moderate fortune, and educated as a manufacturer. With a benevolent disposition, and a powerful understanding, he has devoted his life to the study of plans for ameliorating the condition of the poor. With this view, he has formed an establishment in Scotland, called New Lanark, in which his plans have been crowned with success. His principle seems to have been taken originally from the Moravian settlements, but with this difference, that among them, property is in common, but, on Mr. Owen's plan, only such things are in common, as tend to general advantage. Mr. Owen is about forming a similar establishment in this country. How far his plan will succeed here, or as a public system, elsewhere, remains to be seen. By his mode of living, he anticipates a saving of several thousand dollars per annum, to every association formed on his plan.

P

PAEZ, general, is a native of Caraccas, and was born in 1787, of poor, but respectable parents. In early life he was employed as a superintendent of the flocks of an establishment in Barinas. When the first struggle for liberty took place in Caraccas, he joined the royalist party, and fought on their side until the cruelties of his associates filled him with disgust. He then left them with a body of cavalry, and joined the patriots in New Grenada, where he performed such prodigies of valour, in opposing Murillo, that he was made a brigadier-general, and afterwards general of division. The liberation of the Colombian republic, by the victory of Carabobo, crowned his glory. Paez is of a robust constitution, and possesses great muscular activity and power. He lives as frugally as his soldiers, always divides his booty with them, and often, after fighting with them during the day, amuses himself by dancing with them at night.

PARRY, Edward William, a captain in the English navy, was born in the year 1790. He was placed in the navy when quite young, and gradually rose to the rank of first lieutenant, with a high reputation as an officer. Captain Parry has distinguished himself, as commander of an English squadron fitted out on a voyage of discovery to the north pole, by successfully penetrating into the Polar Sea as far as the 110th degree of west longitude, and wintering on one of the newly discovered islands. For this, he, and the men under his command, received the parliamentary reward of 5,000*l*. Captain Parry is now absent on a third voyage to the polar regions. It is to be hoped that the long agitated question of a northwest passage, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be put to rest on his return.

PEPE, general William, is a native of Calabria, and was born in the year 1783, of one of the most respectable families of that country. He received his education in the military college of the province, and entered into the army of his country, then declared a republic by the French. He afterwards joined the French, and was actively employed in all the campaigns of that nation in Italy. He subsequently returned to Naples, and was appointed aid-de-camp to king Joachim, and general of brigade. He continued in the service of that sovereign until his downfall, and remained inactive after that event until 1818. He was then employed by Ferdinand, with a high military rank, in suppressing the dreadful system of brigandism and robbery which then prevailed in that country. General Pepe has gained his principal reputation by heading the late revolutionary movements in Naples, and by procuring a constitutional form of government for that country. The interposition of an Austrian armed force, has defeated the patriotic views of this officer, and compelled him to retire to England, where he now resides.

PERCIVAL, James G., a poet and scholar, alike distinguished for genius and the accuracy of his learning. He was born in Berlin, Conn., about the year 1795. He was graduated at Yale College in 1815, and commenced the practice of medicine in 1820. He published his first work at New-Haven, in 1820, and two numbers of Clio soon after. In 1824, he published a handsome edition of his works, which was republished the same year in London. He was appointed a professor at West Point by the government, in 1824, which he was obliged to relinquish on account of his health, and was soon after employed as surgeon in connexion with the recruiting service at Boston. This situation he soon left, to devote his attention more exclusively to literary pursuits. He is a regular writer for the Boston Literary Gazette, and his poetry in that is received with general admiration. He resides in his native village, (1825,) and is engaged in editing some works for the press. His disposition is melancholy and retiring, and his career has been marked with traits of great eccentricity. He is, however, a man of singular elevation and purity of character in private life.

PORTER, Jane, and Ann Maria. These ladies are sisters, and daughters of sir Robert Porter. They have long held a high rank among the female novel writers of the day. The former has written "Thaddeus of Warsaw," "The Scottish Chiefs," and other works, which have been well received by the public, and very extensively read. The younger sister has published "The Hungarian Brothers," "The Recluse of Norway," and more recently the "Fast of St. Magdalen." Until the appearance of that splendid series of works, the Waverley novels, these sisters had gained a great degree of popularity. They have, however, with others, been obliged to yield to the unrivalled merits of the "Great Unknown."

Q

QUIROGA, general Antonio. This distinguished Spaniard is indebted for his reputation, to his recent patriotic efforts in favour of the liberty of his country. When he commenced the daring task of limiting the powers of his sovereign, and assembling the constituted but almost obsolete authorities of the kingdom, he was but a colonel in the Spanish army. He was placed at the head of those troops, who, at Cadiz, declared in favour of a free constitution, and he issued several spirited proclamations, and took every measure in his power to ensure success to the cause in which he had embarked. Quiroga, with his associates, had the happiness to accomplish their glorious purposes; to see a cortes assembled, a constitution adopted, and the government organized under that constitution. Subsequent events have destroyed the prospects of the liberal party in Spain, and compelled Quiroga to take up his residence in England.

R

ROSCOE, William, esq., a distinguished English writer, was born of humble parents, from whom he received but a common education, and articulated to an attorney in Liverpool. His ardent mind led him to devote all his leisure time to the study of the classics, and he soon made himself acquainted with the ancient and modern languages. Mr. Roscoe was early celebrated both as a prose and as a poetical writer; but the work which gained him the greatest reputation, was his "Life of Lorenzo de Medici," a work, which for purity and elegance of style, and extensive research, has seldom been surpassed. He has also been the great mover and supporter of several public works in Liverpool; so much so, that his name is identified with the prosperity and even existence of that city.

S

SAN MARTIN, general Don Juan, was born in the midst of the Andes, and sent to Madrid for education. He entered the army in 1803, and displayed great valour in defending the independence of his country under the banners of the cortes. After the dissolution of that body he quitted Spain for Buenos Ayres, and immediately joined the patriot forces of that country. As an officer of the patriot army he has gained several important victories, and contributed much to the independence of the South American states. He is now at the head of the independent government of Peru.

SCOTT, Sir Walter, one of the most distinguished and prolific writers of the present day, was born at Edinburgh, in the year 1771, and educated, first at the high school of that city, and then at the university, under professor

Stewart. The reputation of this gentleman is well known on both sides of the Atlantic; as a poet, he may justly be ranked above most of his cotemporaries. His first literary attempt, was a translation of two ballads, from the German, "The Chase," and another. In 1802, he published his "Border Minstrelsy," a work which opened to him a most brilliant literary career. Mr. Scott has since published, "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," "Marmion, or Flodden Field," "The Lady of the Lake," "The Vision of Don Roderick," "Rokeby," and other poems. He has also been employed to edit the works of Swift, Dryden, and other distinguished authors. Sir Walter Scott's talents, however, are not confined to poetry. He is understood to be the author of "Paul's Letters," and of the historical department of the recent volumes of the Edinburgh Annual Register; and he is generally believed to be the author of the popular series of novels, known by the name of the Waverley novels. These alone would have placed the name of Scott among the great men of the age. With his other productions, they will perpetuate his reputation, so long as talents are esteemed, or fine writing admired. Sir Walter is clerk of the court of sessions of Scotland, for which he receives about 1,500*l.* sterling per annum. He resides at Edinburgh during the session of the court, and the rest of his time at his splendid seat at Abbotsford, 40 miles from Edinburgh. He has been from infancy quite lame; in his manners he is perfectly simple and unostentatious. He has four children; one of whom is married to the celebrated professor Lockhart.

SEDGWICK, Catharine, author of two very popular novels, the "New-England Tale" and "Redwood," is the daughter of judge Sedgwick, and was born at Stockbridge, Mass., in the year 1793. She is deservedly ranked among the most elegant prose writers of the day; and is understood to be now (1825) engaged in the preparation of a series of Tales, founded on scenes in New-England.

SENEFELDER, Alois, was born at Munich, and placed for education in the university of Ingolstadt, as a student of jurisprudence. To him the arts are indebted for the invention of lithography; a process, by means of which books may now be embellished with prints, without incurring such an expense as to place them beyond the reach of persons of small fortunes. An accurate account of the inventor and the invention, may be found in the 5th volume of the supplement to the Encyclopædia Britannica. We can only say, that he received the first suggestions of this useful art, from an accidental discovery, and that he brought it to a degree of perfection, by successive experiments, which will make it of great service to mankind. Lithography has since rapidly extended, and been applied to a variety of purposes, connected with the arts, in different parts of the continent, and in Great Britain.

SIDDONS, Mrs., is the daughter of Mr. R. Kemble. She was born about the year 1749. This lady commenced her career as a singer, but she soon relinquished that employment, and attempted tragedy. On her appearance at Drury-lane theatre in 1782, her success was complete; the public were astonished at her powers, and she was acknowledged to be the first tragic actress of the age. For more than twenty years she retained her high rank as an actress, and continued during that period, to enchant the lovers of the drama. She also possesses considerable merit as a sculptor. Mrs. Siddons has accumulated an ample property, with which she has retired from the stage to the quiet of domestic life.

SOUTHEY, Robert, esq., was born at Bristol, in the year 1774. He was educated at Westminster school, and at Oxford, and was designed for the ministry, but his partiality for the French revolution inspired him with other thoughts. For some office, which he held under his government for a short time, he receives a pension of 200*l.* a year; this has converted him from an admirer of French republican principles, to a zealous writer in the Quarterly Review. From 1795, when he first appeared before the public as an author, this gentleman has been devoted to literary pursuits. His poetical and prose writings are very numerous. He is the author of "Thalaba the Destroyer," "Madoe," a poem, "Espriellas Letters," "The Curse of Kehama," "Life of Nelson," "Life of Wesley," "Remains of Henry Kirk White," "Roderic, the last of the Goths," and many other works, and he is still employed as a writer.

SPURZHEIM, Dr., a celebrated physiologist, was born near Treves, in 1776, and educated at Vienna, where he studied under the celebrated Dr. Gall, the founder of the science of craniology. In Great Britain, in conjunction with Dr. Gall, he published the result of his inquiries, in "The Anatomy and Physiology of the Nervous System," and several other works.

STEWART, Dugald, esq., a distinguished metaphysician, and professor of moral philosophy in the university of Edinburgh, was born in that city, in 1753. His writings have gained him a high reputation at home and abroad; among them are his "Elements of the Philosophy of the Human Mind," "Outlines of Moral Philosophy for the use of Students," &c.

SUSSEX, the duke of, is the fourth son of George III., and was born in 1773. He received the latter part of his education at Gottingen, and afterwards travelled in Italy. In that country he contracted a marriage with lady Augusta Murray, according to the Romish church, and on their return to England, they were married in Hanover Square. This marriage has since been annulled, as violating the royal marriage act. The duke has entered much into public life, particularly by accepting the office of president of various societies. He is grand-master of the society of freemasons in England. His annual income is fixed at 12,000*l.*

T

TALLEYRAND, Perigord, prince de. This celebrated nobleman, who is perhaps the most considerable politician in Europe, was born in the year 1754, of one of the most ancient families in France. He was educated for the church, and in 1783 was made bishop of Autun. His inclination and talents, however, led him to engage in political life; at the beginning of the revolution he became a member of the legislative assembly, took an active part in its deliberations, and was sent as the agent of that body, on a secret mission to England. On his return, his influence rapidly increased, and he was made minister for foreign affairs. He took an active part in the elevation of Buonaparte to the consulship, and under the consular government was employed as a minister and diplomatist. In 1802, the pope granted a brief, which restored him to a secular life, and legitimated a marriage which he had contracted. In 1804, he was named high chamberlain, and in 1806, created prince of Beneventum, in Naples. On the approaching downfall of Napoleon, Talleyrand began to intrigue against him, and provide for himself. He was in consequence reinstated as minister for foreign affairs, by Louis XVIII., and sent as his plenipotentiary to Vienna. He is now in private life, an active and attentive observer of the political affairs of Europe. Probably no man living has taken a more active part in the political changes which have occurred in Europe during the last thirty years, or gained a higher reputation for talents, intrigue, and political cunning.

TALMA, M. This distinguished and admirable actor, was born at Paris, in 1766. He attended for some time the classes of declamation in the royal school of Paris, and soon obtained an order for his appearance on the stage, and in a short time took the lead in his profession. Madam de Stael says of him, "Talma may be cited as a model of power, and of discretion in the use of it, of simplicity and true grandeur. His attitudes recall to mind the fine statues of antiquity; and the expression of his face and every look, ought to be the study of our best painters. There is in the voice of this man a magic, which I cannot describe; which, from the moment when its first accent is heard, awakens all the sympathies of the heart; all the charms of music, of painting, of sculpture, and of poetry; but, above all, the language of the soul." Talma has succeeded in acquiring such dignity of mien, and grandeur of deportment, that the emperor Napoleon seriously took lessons of him, the better to support his own dignity on all great occasions; it may be added, that these great contemporaries loved each other almost to idolatry. The wife of Talma is also possessed of considerable theatrical reputation, both in tragic and comic parts. Her health, however, has compelled her to relinquish the stage since 1810.

TEIGNMOUTH, lord, was born in Devonshire, in 1754, and sent early to India, as a writer in the service of the East India Company. While in that country, he was intimate with Mr. Hastings, and under his government filled several important offices. In 1793, he succeeded to be governor of Bengal. From his different employments in India, he realized a handsome fortune, with which he returned to England, where, in 1797, he was created a peer by the title of baron Teignmouth. He was the intimate friend of sir William Jones, whose life and works he has published. Lord Teignmouth is distinguished for his piety and benevolence; he was one of the founders, and is now president of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

THENARD, M. This celebrated French chymist was born in 1777. He early applied himself to the study of chymistry, and with such success, that at the age of 20, he was a chymical teacher in the principal public laboratories of Paris, and at the polytechnic school. When he was 26, he was made professor of chymistry in the college of France, and he soon after succeeded the celebrated Fourcroy, as a member of the Institute. In conjunction with Gay-Lussac, he published in 1810, a highly interesting work, entitled "Physico Chymical Enquiries." He has also distinguished himself by several other scientific publications.

THORVALDSEN, Albert, was born at Copenhagen in 1772. He is the son of an Icelandic who lived in that city. From his infancy he was fond of the comparatively rude carvings of his father, who was a stonecutter, and who had the sagacity to perceive the talents of his son. He accordingly placed him in the free drawing-school at Copenhagen. After displaying great talents there, particularly in modelling in clay, and receiving several prizes, he was sent to Rome, where he resided for some time, giving the most assiduous attention to his favourite pursuits. His first production there, was a model of Jason, which was considered a masterpiece. He was afterwards commissioned to execute the Jason in marble, and from that time has been constantly employed. He has produced several other valuable works. Since the death of Canova, Thorvaldsen and Chantrey may be considered as being at the head of modern sculptors.

TRUMBULL, John, author of M'Fingal, was born in 1750, in Watertown, Conn. His father was the congregational clergyman of that place. He was graduated at Yale College, in 1767, and was admitted to the bar in Connecticut, in 1773, but soon after entered into the office of John Adams, at Boston, as a student. Here he took a lively interest in the passing scenes in politics, and often was a contributor to the papers with great effect. He has resided at Hartford, Conn., since 1781, has passed through a career of high success at the bar, and from 1801 to 1819, was a judge of the superior court in his native state. In 1820, he revised his several works, and an edition of them was published, for which he received a liberal compensation. At the age of seventy-five, his conversation is still marked with all that wit and vivacity which have distinguished him.

W

WELLINGTON, the duke of, fourth son of the late earl of Mornington, was born in Ireland, May, 1769. He was first placed at Eton school, and then sent to the military school of Angers, in France. He entered the army as an ensign, and rose by interest and purchase, to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, in 1793. The next year he commanded a brigade on the continent under the duke of York. In 1797, he accompanied his brother, lord Wellesley, to India, where he rose to the rank of major-general, and to be governor of Seringapatam. On his return to England, in 1805, he married a lady of the family of lord Longford, was sent to Ireland, as secretary of state under the duke of Richmond, and subsequently elected a member of parliament. In 1809, lord Wellington, then sir Arthur Wellesley, was ordered to the Peninsula, as commander in chief of the British forces; and it is to his great talents, and brilliant successes, in Spain and Portugal, that he is principally indebted for his distinguished military reputation. During the time he commanded in those countries, he was constantly opposed to Massena, Marmont, and Soult, three of the most distinguished French generals; and on all occasions, he proved himself their equal as a general and as a commander. For his services there, he was created duke of Rodrigo, with the rank of a grandee of Spain, by the Spanish regency, and was successively made an earl and a marquis, by his own government, with a pension of 4,000*l.* per annum, and a present from parliament of 200,000*l.* In 1813, after the disasters of Buonaparte in Russia, lord Wellington forced the passage of the Bidassoa and entered France. The restoration of the Bourbons following, and peace taking place soon after, he returned to England, and was rewarded for his services, with a dukedom, and a gift from parliament of 400,000*l.* In July, he was nominated ambassador-extraordinary to France, and was then sent to the congress at Vienna. He was there on the return of Napoleon from Elba, and was instantly nominated by the allied sovereigns, generalissimo of the European troops. In this capacity he gained the memorable victory at Waterloo, which crowned his fame and put an end to the wars that had so long desolated Europe. He is now a field marshal of the forces, master general of the ordinance, &c. A part of the money voted him by parliament, amounting in all to more than 800,000*l.*, has been appropriated to the purchase of an estate, on which is to be erected for him, a splendid mansion at the public expense.

WILBERFORCE, William, esq., a member of the English parliament, was born in Yorkshire, in the year 1759, and educated at Cambridge, where he became the intimate friend of the late English prime minister, Mr. Pitt. Mr. Wilberforce is particularly distinguished for the active part he has taken in the abolition of the African slave trade. His unshaken perseverance, his untiring zeal, and his unbounded philanthropy on this important subject, as well as on other occasions, entitle him to the highest expressions of applause and gratitude from all good men.

WILKIE, David, esq. This distinguished painter is a native of Scotland, and was born in 1785. Having early displayed a talent for drawing, he was sent at the age of fifteen to the academy at Edinburgh, where he continued several years. He went to London in 1805, and was elected a member of the Royal Academy, in 1812. He is said to be highly successful in painting scenes of domestic life, in the manner of Hogarth, and like that great painter seems never to omit the most trifling circumstance, which can tend to exhibit the spirit of the scene which he means to represent.

WILLIAM FREDERICK, king of the Netherlands, is the son of the stadtholder of the United Provinces, who was expelled from his country by the French, in 1795. He was born at the Hague, in 1772, and married, in 1791, a princess of Prussia. For several years he commanded the Dutch troops opposed to France, but was compelled to abandon his country, and retired to England. In 1813, he was invited by a deputation from Holland, to assume the stadtholdership, but was saluted by the populace as sovereign prince. The congress of Vienna added the Netherlands and Luxemburg to his dominions, and raised him to the rank of king. Since the restoration of peace, he has given his sanction to a new constitution, which had been approved by the states-general, and has since been employed in reducing to order the discordant materials of his kingdom.

WILLIAM FREDERICK, the present sovereign of Wirtemberg, was born in 1781. He married, in 1810, the princess Charlotte of Bavaria, against his inclination, and solely in compliance with the wishes of Napoleon. His marriage has since been dissolved by the pope. While prince royal of Wirtemberg, he commanded the troops of his own country in the allied army, and gave proofs of talents and bravery on several occasions. He succeeded his father in 1810, at a time when the crown was engaged in disputes with the representatives of the people. He has since given his people a liberal constitution of government.

WORDSWORTH, William, esq. This distinguished English poet was born in the year 1770, and educated at Cambridge. He was in early life an enthusiast in the cause of liberty: and, in consequence of his political views, he at one time contemplated an establishment in the United States, with his friend, Mr. Coleridge and others. Mr. Wordsworth is considered as at the head of what is termed the Lake School of poetry; a poetical style of writing, novel and simple in the extreme, which has been assailed by the weapons of ridicule, satire, and argument; but which has nevertheless found many admirers and imitators. Mr. Wordsworth has published "The White Doe of Rylstone," "Peter Bell," "The Wagoner," and many other poems.

YORK, the duke of, is the second son of his late majesty, George III. He was born in 1763, and educated by the same instructors as his brother, the present king of England. He was, when young, presented to the lay bishoprick of Osnaburg, and made grand master of the order of the Bath, by his father. Being destined for the army, he was sent to Germany, where he obtained a knowledge of the language and tactics of the country. He was subsequently sent to the continent as commander of the British forces, and was for some time employed there in the military movements of that period. Never, however, much to his credit as a soldier or officer. On one occasion, he was compelled to capitulate to the French. On the investigation of the charges against him for malversations in office, by the house of commons, he resigned his commission, but has since been reinstated. He was created duke of York and Albany in 1784. In 1791 he married a daughter of Frederick William, king of Prussia. The duke is heir presumptive to the throne of England on the death of the present king.

444

SKETCHES OF THE LIVES OF JOHN ADAMS AND THOMAS JEFFERSON.

JOHN ADAMS was born in Braintree, now Quincy, on the 19th of October, 1735, and was descended from the first English emigrants to Massachusetts.—Having early disclosed a taste for reading, his father was induced to give him a liberal education. He prepared for college under Mr. Marsh, and entered Harvard University in 1751, where he graduated in 1755. Whether he was distinguished at college, or shared its first honors, is not now certainly known. After he left college, Mr. Adams engaged in a grammar school at Worcester, where he commenced the study of law, under col. James Putnam, a practitioner of reputation and extensive business. At this period, it was common in New-England, for young men, after leaving college, to engage in instructing youth, previous to entering upon professional studies, or during the time they were employed in acquiring professional knowledge. Let no one suppose that it is beneath his dignity to be an instructor of youth, when he reflects, that it was the first employment of a man who afterwards became a teacher of men and of nations. The fact however shows that Mr. Adams' condition and prospects were no better than those of almost every other young graduate, as it respects extrinsic considerations, and that his success depended wholly on his own exertions. It must not be disguised however, that he, and all his co-patriots, were fortunate in the age in which they lived; and that they owed their distinction, and in some degree, the extraordinary talents and efforts, which characterized them, to the circumstances of the times. It is only in times of public danger, when the liberties of a nation are invaded, and their dearest rights menaced by lawless power, which like a torrent, breaking over its accustomed barriers, threatens general ruin, that eminent talents, distinguished patriotism, and heroic courage, are called into action. The laurels of immortality are reaped only in the field of death.

Perhaps no period in history, is more distinguished than that, from the treaty of Paris in 1763, to the treaty of Peace concluded at the same place, in 1783; comprising the dispute between Great Britain and her American Colonies, and the war for the liberty and independence of America, which grew out of that dispute. This period gave birth to a new era, most auspicious to mankind. In it, commenced the great struggle in vindication of the rights of man, first by the pen, and then by the sword; which has not yet ceased, and we trust will not, until Europe, as well as America, is free. Fortunately for her future fame, as well as her more immediate prosperity, America was destined to be the first theatre of this struggle, on which depend the highest interests and the brightest hopes of the human race.—This contest, taking so deep a hold on the feelings of the heart, aroused all the passions, and produced the most incredible efforts of talents, of patriotism, and of valor. The character of individuals was in some measure stamped by the times. Had John Adams lived in a different age, he would doubtless have been distinguished; but he would not have been what the circumstances of his times made him. When a crisis arrives requiring extraordinary men, they are generally found; as the very circumstances which demand them, conduce, if not to create, at least to call them forth. Mr. Adams owes much to the Revolution, and the Revolution owes much to him. His bold and fearless spirit, his vigorous intellect, his ardent patriotism, and his unshaken firmness of purpose, eminently qualified him, to act a conspicuous part in the defence of the liberties of his country.

The letter which he wrote whilst engaged in a school at Worcester, in 1755, is at once an evidence of the bent of his mind, and of his wonderful sagacity in political speculations. (a) His prophetic language, "that in another century, this country would become more populous than England, and the seat of empire be transferred to America—that possessing all the naval stores in our hands, we could easily acquire the mastery of the seas," (a) His letter is dated Worcester, Oct 12, 1755.

when the united force of Europe would not be able to subdue us," he himself lived to see fulfilled in little more than half the time specified.

Before we follow Mr. Adams into the field of politics, we must notice the success of his professional exertions.—Being admitted to the bar in 1758, he commenced business in his profession at Braintree, his native town. His success was so rapid, and his reputation so great, that in 1766 he removed to Boston, where he continued to attend the neighboring circuits, and was occasionally called to remote parts of the province. In 1770 he undertook the defence of the British officers and soldiers, who were indicted for the massacre on the memorable 5th of March, of that year. This step surprised the friends of Mr. Adams, and occasioned doubts and suspicions of his attachment to the popular cause. He says himself, that he "lost as much of his popularity as Mr. Pitt did of his, by accepting of a peerage and a pension; and that it was propagated, that he had been bribed by an immense fee to sell his country;" although he informs us that nineteen guineas, was all he received for one year's anxiety and attention to those trials. The sacrifice he made by assisting the accused in these trials, shews the high sense he entertained of professional duty.

From this period, his attention and time were considerably occupied, by the disputes between Great Britain and the Colonies; yet he did not neglect his profession, and so high was his reputation, that in 1776, when the judiciary was organized under the new Constitution, he was offered the exalted station of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. But at this time he had engaged too deeply in the political contests of his country, to accept a situation, which would in some measure, have withdrawn him from them: he was reserved for a different and more glorious career.

In 1769, John Adams was one of a Committee appointed by the town of Boston, to examine and report on the celebrated letters of Gov. Baynard, and other officers of the crown in Massachusetts, which had been obtained in England. His associates were Thomas Cushing, James Otis, Samuel Adams, Joseph Warren, and several other distinguished leaders. The following year, he was elected one of the Representatives of the town of Boston, in the Legislature of the Province, which connected him more intimately with the great leaders of the popular party, and enlisted his feelings more ardently in public affairs, which at this time were assuming a very serious aspect. The popularity he lost in advocating the cause of Captain Preston and the British soldiers, he soon regained by his zeal and spirited conduct, in support of the popular cause. And such was his increasing reputation as a patriot and politician, that he was appointed by the Assembly, one of its Representatives to the Continental Congress, held in Philadelphia in 1774. Previously, this year, he had been appointed a member of the Council of Massachusetts, but was negatived by Governor Hutchinson; and the following year he was again appointed, and negatived by General Gage. The colleagues of Mr. Adams, in the Congress of 1774, were Thomas Cushing, Samuel Adams, and Robert Treat Paine. Although Mr. Adams must have been one of the youngest members of this distinguished Assembly, he took an active part in its deliberations, and the important measures it adopted. He was a member of the Committee which prepared the declaration of the rights of the Colonies, and likewise of that which reported the Address to the King. Near the close of the year 1774, Mr. Adams wrote the numbers signed Nov-Anglus, in reply to the publications supposed to be written by Jonathan Sewall, signed Massachusettsensis, which deprecated, what the writer considered the rash measures of the Colonists. Mr. Adams' defence of those measures, and censure of the conduct of the crown officers, and the British party, was uncommonly bold and spirited.

He now devoted himself almost entirely to public affairs; he was a member of the Congress the next year, and made the motion to appoint George Washington the Commander in Chief of the forces, to be raised in defence of American liberty. He continued in Congress in 1776, when the controversy was brought to a crisis, and took an active part in the most important measure, which was ever acted on by any deliberative body. He was one of the Committee appointed to prepare a Declaration of Independence, and he and Thomas Jefferson were named as a sub-committee to prepare the draft. Mr. Jefferson was the draftsman of the Declaration, but Mr. Adams was its boldest and ablest defender. The author of the declaration has himself borne testimony to this: "John Adams," says he, "was our colossus on the floor; not graceful, nor elegant, nor always fluent, but he came out with a power both of thought and expression, which moved us from our seats." "The eloquence of Mr. Adams," says one of his eulogists, "resembled his general character, and formed indeed a part of it. It was bold, manly, and energetic, and such as the occasion required.*

The part which Mr. Adams acted on this momentous occasion, is of itself sufficient to render his name as illustrious and immortal, as the liberty and independence of the country, he aided to establish.

In the course of this year, Mr. Adams and Dr. Franklin, and Edward Rutledge, were appointed Commissioners to treat with Lord Howe for a pacification. The following year, 1779, he was appointed by Congress a Commissioner to the Court of France, in the place of Silas Dean; and such was the satisfaction which he gave in this situation, that he was excepted from a vote of censure, passed by Congress in 1779, on our Commissioners in Europe.

In 1779 Mr. Adams returned from Europe; and the next year he was appointed a member of the Convention, which framed the Constitution of Massachusetts; and he drafted a considerable part of it. Before the close of the year 1780, he was sent to Europe again, as Commissioner to negotiate a general peace; and remained in Europe until 1783. In 1782 he negotiated a treaty with the Dutch Provinces, favourable to his country; and the same year he was joined with Franklin, Jay, Laurens and Jefferson, in a plenipotentiary commission for concluding treaties of amity and commerce, with several European powers. The only treaty concluded under this commission was with Prussia. In conjunction with Franklin and Jay, he had the good fortune, in 1783, to be concerned in negotiating the treaty of peace with Great Britain, and had the satisfaction to witness the Representative of his Britannic Majesty, solemnly acknowledge that declaration, which he and his co-patriots had six years before published, "that these United States were, and of right ought to be, free, sovereign, and independent."

Mr. Adams was the first Minister of the United States, at the Court of Great Britain; and whilst residing there, in 1787, he published his defence of the American Constitutions. On his return to the United States, in 1788, he found the government going into operation under the new Constitution, and was himself chosen the first Vice President; which situation he held during the eight years of Washington's administration, when he succeeded the father of his country in the Presidential chair. The period of his administration, was one of great excitement and political animosities; the country became divided into two great parties, and the political commotions in Europe disturbed our foreign relations; all of which contributed to render the situation and duties of the government peculiarly embarrassing and difficult. Without deciding whether one party or the other was right, as to the particular questions of the controversy, it must we think be admitted, that the administration was entirely wrong in attempting to put down opposition, by coercive measures and the strong arm of power.

Public opinion sustained the opposition, and consequently the administration went down. Mr. Adams was succeeded by Mr. Jefferson in 1801, and retired to private life. The rivalry and hostility, which this contest occasioned between these two illustrious men, who had become the heads of the two great parties in the country, fortunately subsided a few years after the retirement of Mr. Adams, and they continued warm friends until their deaths.

From this time, Mr. Adams lived as became a great and wise man. His correspondence and writings were extensive, and highly interesting; although perhaps some of them, are not entirely free from the peculiar bias of his feelings. In 1820, at the advanced age of 85 years, he was once more withdrawn from retirement, being first chosen an elector of President and Vice President, and then elected a member of the Convention to revise the Constitution of Massachusetts. He was unanimously chosen President of the Convention, but declined. Mr. Adams died on the 4th of July, 1826, the fiftieth anniversary, and the national jubilee of his country, and whilst all his fellow citizens were assembled, commemorating that great and glorious event, with which his name is inseparably and honourably associated.

THOMAS JEFFERSON was born on the 2d of April, O. S. 1743, at Shadwell, in the county of Albemarle, in the State of Virginia, but a short distance from Monticello. His father, Peter Jefferson, was a man of some distinction; he was one of the Commissioners for establishing the boundary line, between Virginia and North Carolina, and he left his son a large estate. The Jefferson family was among the earliest settlers in Virginia.

Thomas Jefferson was educated at the College of William and Mary, and received the highest honours of that Institution. After leaving College, he entered upon the study of the law, under the tuition of George Wythe, the first lawyer and advocate in the State. Soon after he came of age, he was appointed Justice of the Peace, and this was followed by an election to a seat in the house of Burgesses. His whole life was spent in public employments; although, as he says himself, his disposition always inclined him to retirement and quietude, and to the peaceful pursuit of letters and science.

With perhaps the exception of Franklin, no one of the patriots or heroes of the American Revolution, owed less to the circumstances of the times in which he lived, than Mr. Jefferson. His greatness was personal and intrinsic, and no external circumstances could scarcely add to it. Had he lived in any age or country, he would have been an eminent man. Neither his disposition nor his talents, were adapted to the turbulent times in which he lived; yet his liberal principles, his philanthropy, his love of liberty and ardent patriotism, when the liberties of his country were invaded, overcoming his natural repugnance to scenes of contention and strife, urged him on to the arena of politics, and rendered him one of the most useful and efficient supporters of the rights and liberties of the Colonies.—When his country—his suffering and oppressed country, demanded his services, he did not hesitate to obey her call. He entered with his whole soul into the cause of liberty, regardless of all consequences to himself. How absurd was the opinion which prevailed in Britain, that the whole difficulties in America arose from the turbulent and factious spirit of some discontented individuals, when such mild and pacific men as Jefferson, became the champions of the popular cause.

His pen, which he wielded with masterly ability, was the weapon with which he entered on the defence of the rights of the Colonies. In addition to publications in the newspapers, he brought out in 1774, his "Summary View of the Rights of the Colonies of America," one of the most enlightened and valuable publications of the day. This work placed the dispute between the parent country and her colonies on just ground, by disallowing the supremacy of Parliament over America, whilst some of the controversial writers, had involved themselves in difficulties and inconsistencies, by admitting the supremacy of Parliament. In June, 1775, he was elected a member of the Continental Congress, in the place of Peyton Randolph, who had resigned his seat in consequence of ill health. He continued a member, and one of the brightest ornaments of this august body, until 1777.

The part which he performed in the most solemn act, ever passed by any deliberative body on earth, the annunciation of Independence, is well known; yet it is proper that it should be briefly noted here. On the 7th of June, 1776, Richard Henry Lee submitted a resolution in these words: "Resolved, That these United States are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connexion between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved."—This resolution was debated until the 10th, when it was postponed until the first of July, and a Committee appointed to prepare a DECLARATION of Independence, which should exhibit more fully, the grounds and reasons of the measure.—The Committee were appointed by ballot, and consisted of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert R. Livingston. The order of their names was determined by the number of votes given for each. Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Adams, the two first on the Committee, were named as a sub-committee, to prepare the draft. It was written by Mr. Jefferson, and first submitted to Mr. Adams, who says that he made no alterations. It was then submitted to the whole Committee, and some alterations were made by Franklin, and others of the Committee. Some parts of it were omitted by Congress after it was reported, and some slight alterations made; but its tone, spirit and arrangement, remained the same as when reported. The merit of this instrument as a composition, belongs exclusively to Mr. Jefferson, and this merit alone is sufficient to render its author immortal.

If it is admitted, as we think it must be, that no other state paper ever had so momentous an object, or was connected with so solemn an occasion, it may perhaps be sufficient praise to say, that this little deed of the liberties of America, is every way equal to the subject—that its style and dignity, rise to the dignity of the subject, and even add to it. What political document can be found, that will bear comparison with this? On the first of July, the resolution was taken up, and being debated on that and the next day, on the last it was adopted. On the same day, the declaration was taken into consideration, and having been discussed on the second, third, and fourth days of July, it was passed on the last of those days.

In 1777, Mr. Jefferson left Congress, and during that and the following year, he was employed in conjunction with George Wythe and Edmund Pendleton, in revising the laws of Virginia. This was a work of great labour and difficulty, and was performed with distinguished ability and success, by these three learned and enlightened jurists. The most important statutes which were altered, in conformity with the more just and republican sentiments which succeeded the Revolution, were those relating to the tenure of office, to entails, to descents, and to religion, and the clergy. Until this time, or at least the rupture with Britain, the English act of uniformity, was acknowledged and enforced in Virginia, and the Church of England was established by law, to the exclusion of all other denominations.—Mr. Jefferson is entitled to the principal merit of securing the rights of conscience, and establishing religious liberty in Virginia. He approached this difficult work with caution, and for several years effected successive modifications of the laws, until finally the legal establish was done away, and religion left entirely free. His principal coadjutor in this reformation, was Mr. Madison. The example of Virginia, and the various enlightened and able productions of Mr. Jefferson's pen on this subject, have had no small influence in securing the religious liberty of our own country, both as it respects the national government, and the institutions of the States. No part of the conduct of Mr. Jefferson made him more enemies, or brought on him more censure, than his exertions in favour of religious freedom; and perhaps in no other particular, were his efforts more extensively useful.

In 1779, Mr. Jefferson succeeded Patrick Henry as governor of Virginia, and was in that station when the state was invaded by the British. In 1781, he published his celebrated Notes on Virginia, which attracted attention in Europe as well as at home, and added to the lustre of his reputation as a man of science and a philosopher, whilst it contributed to dispel the absurd opinions which prevailed in Europe, concerning America. In 1783, he was again elected a member of the continental congress, and took his seat in that body; and in May, 1784, he was commissioned as minister plenipotentiary, with Franklin, John Adams, Jay, and Laurens, to negotiate treaties with several European powers. He proceeded to the north, and embarked at Boston for France; the only treaty executed under this joint commission, was with Prussia. In 1785, he was appointed resident minister at the French court, and remained in France until October, 1789, when, having obtained leave of congress, he returned home, just at the commencement of the tremendous revolution in that country, which agitated all Europe. The period he remained in France was one of unusual interest. At no other time has that polished nation been more distinguished for the number and high character of its learned men; yet in the midst of these, Mr. Jefferson was distinguished for his extensive intelligence, and his philanthropy, as well as for the urbanity of his manners. His own erudition and his love for learning, procured him the acquaintance and admiration of the literati of Paris, and the respect of the first circles of the French capital. The minister of no other nation at the French Court, sustained so high a reputation as the representative of this infant republic.

On his return home, when the new government was going into operation, he was named by President Washington Secretary of State. Mr. Jefferson's great ability as a writer, his extensive attainments and perfect knowledge of European politics, as well as those of his own country, peculiarly qualified him for this situation, and justly procured him the reputation of one of the most distinguished statesmen of the age. The state papers which are the productions of his pen, are at least equal to those of the elder Pitt, or the most illustrious statesmen which Great Britain has ever produced; and they have become the models of his successors, some of whom, have been scarcely less distinguished. He continued in the office of Secretary of State, until December, 1793, when he resigned and remained in retirement for several years. In 1797, when John Adams was elected president, Mr. Jefferson was chosen vice president, and to facilitate the discharge of the duties of president of the Senate, he composed his manual of parliamentary practice.

Whilst occupying this station, the clouds began to appear, and grew thicker and thicker, until they produced the violent political storm, which swept over the country. The sources of these political dissensions, were two-fold; the foreign relations of the country as it respected Great Britain and France, and various in-interesting questions growing out of the new constitution, of which the most important was that relating to the powers of the general government, a question not yet entirely settled. The whole country became divided into two great parties, and the two first officers of the government, so long friends and co-patriots, were transformed into rivals, they being regarded as the heads of the two parties. The struggle resulted in favour of the party of which Mr. Jefferson was the leader; and in 1801, there having been no choice, by the electors, he was chosen President of the United States, by the house of representatives, after an alarming and memorable contest. Placed at the head of the government, as the leader of the popular party, and enjoying the confidence of that party in an eminent degree, perhaps no man ever had a better opportunity of incorporating his own principles into the government of his country, without force or the exertion of power, and of shaping its policy according to his own views.— And the same circumstances, afforded him the like facility of infusing his own sentiments into the minds of his countrymen. And if no man ever enjoyed greater advantages of personal influence, no one ever exercised his influence more patriotically or disinterestedly. This is now admitted by all, although different opinions prevail respecting his political views, on many subjects. His administration, however, will always remain a distinguished one, in the annals of his country. Some of his particular measures, were probably founded on a mistaken policy; yet his more fundamental doctrines have become political axioms in the United States. Among them are these; that the government of the United States must be supported by public opinion, not by attempting to control it, which was the great error of the preceding administration; that in all governments there is a natural tendency to an extension of power, and consequently in a government of limited and delegated powers, like that of the American confederacy, these powers should receive a strict construction, and the exercise of them should be watched with the utmost vigilance. The most important measure of his administration, was the acquisition of the immense territory of Louisiana by purchase, which alone cannot fail of rendering it illustrious to the latest posterity.

Although the opposition to his administration was violent beyond any example, yet such was the change in public sentiment, that at the expiration of his first term, he was re-elected with an expression of public opinion, approaching to unanimity. In 1809, this illustrious patriot retired from political life, carrying with him the respect and affections of a large portion of his fellow-citizens. But in retirement he did not, and indeed could not, abstract himself from public objects and the interests of his beloved country. His extensive correspondence contributed to diffuse his sentiments, as much perhaps as he was enabled to do, at any other period of his life. Mr. Jefferson's talent at epistolary composition, was peculiarly happy, and perhaps unrivalled. His correspondence, which is expected to be published, cannot fail of possessing great interest and extensive usefulness. But his correspondence and other literary employments did not occupy his whole attention. At this advanced period of life, his active mind, always intent on promoting the best interests of his race, led him to engage in a work of great and lasting utility, which will be a monument alike honorable to Virginia, and its illustrious patron. It need scarcely be added, that we allude to the establishment of the University of Virginia, of which he was rector and visitor, and which occupied a large share of his attention during the last years of his life. He was blessed with living to see it completed, and in successful operation. He bequeathed most of his library to this institution. All his useful and great labours on earth being finished, his end seemed to be approaching. He viewed it with calmness and serenity, and seemed to manifest some uneasiness in waiting for his departure. In a letter to one of his friends a short time before his death, after stating that he was failing fast, he says—"Do not think that I fear to die; there is nothing I desire more." He however had one wish which was granted him. This cannot be expressed so well as in the language of one of his eulogists: * "That day was at hand which he had helped to make immortal. One wish, one hope—if it were not presumptuous, beat in his fainting breast. Could it be so,—might it please God—he would desire, once more to see the sun,—once more to look abroad on the scene around him, on the great day of liberty. Heaven in its mercy fulfilled that prayer. He saw that sun—he enjoyed its sacred light—he thanked God for this mercy, and bowed his aged head to the grave." He expired at Monticello, at one o'clock in the afternoon, on the 4th of July, 1826, the half century anniversary of that day, which is first in the annals of his country, and in his own fame.
