

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LOS ANGELES

SCHOOL OF LAW LIBRARY

PRINCIPLES

OF THE

LAW OF REAL PROPERTY,

INTENDED AS A FIRST BOOK

FOR

THE USE OF STUDENTS IN CONVEYANCING.

 $\mathbf{B}\mathbf{Y}$

JOSHUA WILLIAMS, ESQ.,

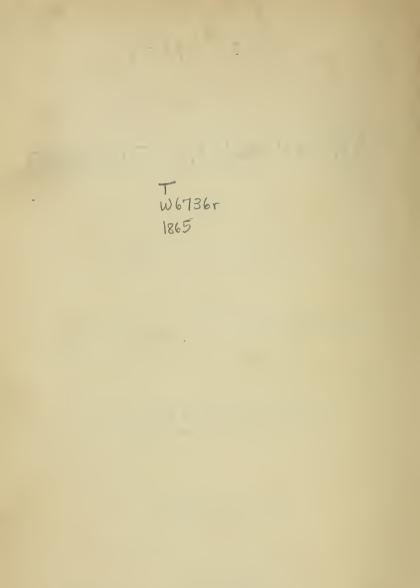

OF LINCOLN'S INN, ONE OF HER MAJESTY'S COUNSEL.

SEVENTH EDITION.

LONDON:

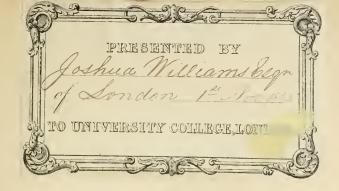

H. SWEET, 3, CHANCERY LANE, FLEET STREET, Law Bookseller and Publisher: HODGES, SMITH AND CO., GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.

1865

LONDON:

FRINTED BY C. ROWORTH AND SONS, BELL YARD, TEMFLE BAR.

5 oct 53

上行

ADVERTISEMENT

TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

In this Edition the alterations which have taken place in the law since the publication of the last Edition have been incorporated in the text.

3. STONE BUILDINGS, LINCOLN'S INN, October, 1865.

18394

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THE Author had rather that the following pages about should speak for themselves, than that he should speak for them. They are intended to supply, what he has long felt to be a desideratum, a First Book for the use of students in conveyancing, as easy and readable as the nature of the subject will allow. In attempting this object he has not always followed the old beaten track, but has pursued the more difficult, yet more interesting, course of original investigation. He has endeavoured to lead the student rather to work out his knowledge for himself, than to be content to gather fragments at the hand of authority. If the student wishes to become an adept in the practice of conveyancing, he must first be a master of the science; and if he would master the science, he should first trace out to their sources those great and leading principles, which, when well known, give easy access to innumerable minute details.

The object of the present work is not, therefore, to cram the student with learning, but rather to quicken his appetite for a kind of knowledge which seldom appears very palatable at first. It does not profess to present him with so ample and varied an entertainment as is afforded by Blackstone in his " Commentaries;" neither, on the other hand, is it as sparing and frugal as the "Principles" of Mr. Watkins; nor, it is hoped, so indigestible as the well-packed "Compendium" of Mr. Burton. This work was commenced many years ago; and it may be right to state that the substance of the introductory chapter has already appeared before the public in the shape of an article, "On the Division of Property into Real and Personal," in the "Jurist" newspaper for 7th September, 1839. The recent Act to simplify the transfer of property has occasioned many parts of the work to be re-written. But as this Act has so great a tendency to bewilder the student, the Author has since lost no time in committing his manuscript to the press, in hopes that he may be the means of bringing the minds of such beginners as may peruse his pages to that tone of quiet perseverance which alone can enable them to grapple with the increasing difficulties of Real Property Law. From the elder members of his profession he requests, and has no doubt of obtaining, a candid judgment of his performance of a most difficult task. To give to each principle its adequate importance,—from the crowds of illustrations to present the best—to write a book readable, yet useful for reference,— to avoid plagiarism, and yet abide by authority,—is indeed no easy matter. That in all this he has succeeded he can scarcely hope. How far he has advanced towards it must be left for the profession to decide.

3, New Square, Lincoln's Inn, 29th November, 1814.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

P INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.	AGE
OF THE CLASSES OF PROPERTY	1
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
PART I.
OF CORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS	13
CHAP. I.
OF AN ESTATE FOR LIFE	16
CHAP. II.
Of an Estate Tail	33
CHAP. III.
OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE	58
CHAP. IV.
OF THE DESCENT OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE	92
CHAP. V.
OF THE TENURE OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE	108
CHAP. VI.
OF JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON,	123
CHAP. VII.
OF A FEOFFMENT	130

Of the mutual Righ	CHAP. XI. TS OF HUSBAND AND WIFE 205
OF A WILL OF LANDS
	СНАР. Х.
OF A MODERN CONVEY	MANCE 164
	CHAP. IX.
OF USES AND TRUSTS
	CHAP. VIII.

PART II.

OF INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS	220
CHAP. I.
OF A REVERSION AND A VESTED REMAINDER	222
CHAP. II.
OF A CONTINGENT REMAINDER	242
СНАР. 111.
OF AN EXECUTORY INTEREST	267
Section 1.
OF THE MEANS BY WHICH EXECUTORY INTERESTS MAY BE CREATED	267
Section 2.
OF THE TIME WITHIN WHICH EXECUTORY INTERESTS MUST ARISE	293
CHAP. IV.
OF HEREDITAMENTS PURELY INCORPOREAL	297

CONTENTS.	Х
	PAGI
PART III.
OF COPYHOLDS	32:
CHAP. I.
)F ESTATES IN COPYHOLDS	32(
CHAP. II.
OF THE ALIENATION OF COPYHOLDS	34

PART IV.

OF PERSONAL INTERESTS IN REAL ESTATE	357
CHAP. I.
OF A TERM OF YEARS	359
СНАР. И.
Of a Mortgage Debt	389

PART V.

OF	TITLE					407
----	-------	--	--	--	--	-----

APPENDIX (A.)	 	 	427
Appendix (B.)	 	 	433
APPENDIX (C.)	 	 	446
APPENDIX (D.)	 	 	452
Appendix (E.)	 	 	463
APPENDIX (F.)	 	 	465
INDEX	 	 	467

INDEX TO CASES CITED.

PAGE Abernethy, Boddington v. .. 355 Acocks v. Phillips ... 226.. 303 Adams, Doe d. Barney v. .. 392Rowley v. 366 291Ainslie v. Harcourt 378 Albans, Duke of St. v. Skipwith 24 Albany's case 288 Aldborough, Lord v. Trye 420Allan v. Backhouse • • .. 378 Allen v. Allen .. 56,64 — Festing v. .. 251 Alston v. Atlay .. 318 Ambrose, Hodgson & Wife v. 194 Amcotts, Ingilby v. .. 256 80 Leeds v. 25•• . . . • • Andrew v. Motley 191 Andrews v. Hulse .. 325 Annesley, Tooker v. 2585 ... 400 Anstey, Saward v. 307 Archer's case .. 244• • Armitage, Earl of Cardigan v. 14 Armstrong, Tullett v. .. 87, 207 Arnold, Cattley v. 29 Arthur, Vyvyan v... 367 Ashton v. Jones 70 . . Aston, Yates v. .. 403 Atherstone, Nickells v. Atkinson v. Baker Atlay, Alston v. .. 378 20 • • .. 318 ... Attorney-General v. Lord Braybrooke.. 265 v. Chambers 302 v. Floyer .. 288 v. Hallett .. 266 Casberd v... 84 v. Glyn .. 70 v. Hamilton 129 ----- v. Lord Middleton .. 265

Α.

	PAGE
Attorney-General v. Parsons 11	0,323
v. Sibthorpo	e 265
v. Sitwell	317
	265
Audley, Jee v	52
Austin, Webb v	365
Aveline v. Whisson	142
Awdry, Cloves v	280

В.

Backhouse, Allan v	378
Bonomi v	14
	305
	207
	23
	75
	366
	138
Baird v. Fortune	303
Baker, Atkinson v	20
v. Gostling	376
	358
Banks, Right d. Taylor v	339
	291
Barker v. Barker	209
, Re	288
	431
	303
	275
Barnett, Muggleton v 94,
	376
	296
Barrow v. Wadkin	154
	8
	349 373
	73
	405
Baxter, Mainwaring v	49
	154
	309
Beaufort, Duke of, v. Mayor,	000
	302
Beaufort, Duke of, v. Phillips	80

xiv INDEX TO CASES CITED.

FAGE	PAGE
Beaumont " Marguis of Salis	PAGE Broughton v. James bury	Brown, Caldecott v
Beavan v. Earl of Oxford 81	$-$ Cattlin v_1
Bell, Consett v
Bellamy v. Sabine 85	Scratton v 302
Bennett v. Box 156	Browne v. Browne 251
v. Bishop of Lincoln 319	Brudenell v. Elwes 49, 253
Bentley, Poole v	Brummell v. Macpherson 368
Bentley, Poole v 362 Berridge v. Ward 301	Brydges v. Brydges 161
Beverley, case of the Provost of 239	Buckeridge v. Ingram 8
Bewitt, Whitfield v 23	Brudenell v. Elwes 49, 253 Brummell v. Macpherson 368 Brydges v. Brydges 161 Buckeridge v. Ingram 8 Buckland v. Pocknell 400 Buckley v. Howell 286 Burdekin, Bowker v. 138 Burdekt v. Doe d. Spilsbury 275 Burges, Hare v. 377 - v. Lamb 25 Burgess v. Wheate 18, 154 Burleton, Doe d. Grubb v. 154
Bewley, Noel v 261	Buckley v. Howell 286
Biggs, Mestayer v 305	Burdekin, Bowkerv 138
Bingham v. Woodgate 322	Burdett v. Doe d. Spilsbury 275
Bird v. Higginson 362	Burges, Hare v 377
Blackall, Long v 294
Blackburn v. Stables 250	Burgess v. Wheate 18, 154
Blackmore, Mathew v 403	Burlington, Doe d. Grubb v.
Blagrave, Powys v 23	Earl of
Blake, Perrin $v.$ 195, 236	Burrell v. Dodd
Blad Braphell v	Burroughes, Wright v 227
Bligh v. Brent	Burt, Edwards v 420
Beverley, case of the Provost of 239Bewitt, Whitheld v.23Bewley, Noel v.261Biggs, Mestayer v.305Bingham v. Woodgate322Bird v. Higginson362Blackall, Long v.294Blackally, Long v.250Blagrave, Nathew v.403Blagrave, Powys v.23Blake, Perrin v.195, 236— Shrapnell v.397Bligs, Dean of Ely v.418Blissett, Chapman v.264	Burgess v. wheate 18, 154 Burlington, Doe d. Grubb v. Earl of
Blood Crossel v 204	Bustaru s case 409
Blunt Griffith a 204	Bustard's case 409 Buttery v. Robinson 307 Butts, Trower v 250 Byron, Doe d. Wyatt v 226
Bluthe Westbrook a 274	Burron Doo d Wyott w 200
Boddington a Abornethy 255	Byron, Doe a. Wyatt v 220
Bliss, Dean of Ely v 416 Blissett, Chapman v	С
Bolton, Lord v Tomlin 361	Cadell v. Palmer
Bond v. Rosling 362 Bonifaut v. Greenfield 291 Bonomi v. Backhouse 14 Boothby, Tunstall v 88 Boraston's case 245 Borman, Scarborough v 87,207	Cadell v. Palmer
Bonifaut v. Greenfield 291	Caldecott v. Brown
Bonomi v. Backhouse 14	Calmady v. Rowe 302
Boothby, Tunstall v 88	Calvin's case 63
Boraston's case 245	Cann, Ware v 18
Borman, Scarborough v 87, 207	Canning v. Canning 95
Bosanquet, Williams v 366	Cardigan, Earl of, v. Armitage 14
Bosanquet, Williams v 366 Bousfield, Doe d. Robinson v. 327	Carleton v. Leighton 257
Bovey's, Sir Ralph, case 382	Carter, Parker v 210
Bousleid, Doe a. Robinson v. 327 Bovey's, Sir Ralph, case 382 Bower v. Cooper 153 Bowker v. Burdekin 138 Bowler, Matthew v 400 Bowles's case 25 Bowser v. Colby 227 	Casherd v. Attorney-General 84
Bowker v. Burdekin 138	Cattley v. Arnold 29
Bowler, Matthew v 400	Cattlin v. Brown 253
Bowles's case 25	Cattling, Wills v 376
Dowser v. Colby 227	Challis v. Doe d. Evers 254
Par Parnetter 150	Chamberlain, Cox v 280
Dox, Dennett v 150	Chambers, Attorney-General v. 302 Chambers, Edwards v. 56
rough 70 405	Champion, Edwards v 50 Chandless Hall v. 125 rough 79, 405 Brandon v. Robinson 87, 207	Channan # Blissett 264
	v Gatcombe 321
General v
Brent, Bligh v	Charlesworth, Manners v 129
Bridge v. Yates	Cheetham, Lloyd v. 88
Briggs v. Sowry	Cherry v. Heming 142
Bristow v. Warde 255	Cheslyn, Pearce v 362
Brocklehurst, Wardle v 303	Chester, Fox v. Bishop of 318
General v	Chambers, Attorney-General v. 302 Champion, Edwards v
Brookes, Millership v 138	Cheyne, Eccles v 194

Chichester, Rawe v.	D
Cholmeley v. Paxton 25	D
Cockerell a 285	Ď
Chudleighte sage 149 944
Chule Des I Company 2014	D
Clark, Doe a. Spencer v 334	D
Clarke, Doe v 250	D
v. Franklin 218, 282	D
Clay v. Sharpe 396	-
Clegg v. Fishwick 378	-
Clements v. Sandaman 90
Clere's Sir Edward case 280	D
Cliffon Doo d Hunster 200
Clinton, Doe a. Hurst v 395	D
Cloves v. Awary	D
Cockerell v. Cholmeley 285	_
Colby, Bowser v 227	-
Cole, Doe d. Were v. 166, 224	D
v. Sewell 253	D
" West London and Crus-	Ē
v. West London and Crys- tal Palace Railway Company 13	Ē
Coles, Hunt v 157 Collins, Doe d. Clements v. 13
Collins, Doe d. Clements v. 13	Γ
, Eddleston v	L
Colt, Pratt v 156	E
Colvile v. Parker 74	L
Complin, Goddard v 405	Γ
Consett v. Bell	-
Cooch a Goodman 142	I
Coole dom
Ullhaut	-
Collins, Doe d. Clements v. 13	Ι
Cooper, Bower v 153	I
Davies v 420	-
v. Emery 412, 420	-
v. France 433	-
v. Stephenson 422	_
Copper Miners Company, Wood
v 162	-
Coppinger v. Gubbins 24	-
Corder v. Morgan 396	- 1
Cornwallis, case of Lord 339	-
Corrie, Preece v 375	-
Cottee v. Richardson 375	-
Courtenay, Doe d. Earl of Egre-	_
mont v. 377	_
mont v 377 Coventry, Hay v. Earl of 49, 253
Cowell Vielsons n. 401
Cower, vickers b 401
Cox v. Chamberlain 280	-
Doe d. Bastow v 360	-
Covell, Vickers v	-
Crump d. Woolley v. Norwood 120	-
Curling v. Mills	-
Curtis v. Lukin 296	-
Cuthbertson a Irving 200
Curling v. Mills	-
D.	-
D-II II I	-

Dallaway, H	yde v.		417
Dallingham,	Regina a	. Lady of
Manor of.			354

PAGE	P. Dalton, Re	AGE
378	Dalton, Re	64
25	Damerell v. Protheroe	340
285	Danvers, Doe d. Cook n 328	329
8, 244	Darby Bight d Flower a 360	361
334	Darby, Hight at Hower 5. 500,	995
	Darke, futton v	154
. 250 .8, 282	Davan v. New River Company	104
8, 282	Davies v. Cooper	420
. 396	Doe d. Dixie v	360
378	Jones v	383
. 90	v. Wescomb	25
280	Davison v. Gent	378
. 393	Dawes v. Hawkins	301
280	Day, Duberley v	377
1	Doe d Parsley "	301
$\begin{array}{c c} \cdot & 285 \\ & 227 \end{array}$	Doe a. Faisley b	95
26 994	Death Smith a	20
36, 224	Death, Smith v	200
253	De Beauvoir v. Owen	418
S=	De Burgh, Lock v	28
ny 13	Dee, Parker v	75
. 157	Dendy, Simpson v	301
13	Dennett v. Pass	311
. 355	Dennison, Lucas v.	417
156	Dering, Moneypenny v. 253.	255
	Dickin » Hamer	214
$\begin{array}{c} \cdot & 74 \\ 405 \end{array}$	Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal	211
0 4	Company	951
	Company Dixon, Doe d. Crosthwaite v	351
142	Dixon, Doe a . Crostnwaite v	96
14	v. Gaytere	400
31	Dodd, Burrell v 328,	329
153	Doe v. Amey	80
420	d. Barney v. Adams	392
12, 420	Dodd, Burrell v	349
433
•• 422	d. Spilsbury, Burdett v	275
od	d. Grubb v. Earl of Bur-	-10
162	lington	398
	d Wuatt a Buren	020
$\begin{array}{c} \bullet & 24 \\ 396 \end{array}$	- d. Wyatt V. Dyron	220
	a. Evers, Chams v	204
	lington	334
375	v. Clarke	250
375	- v. Clarke - d. Hurst v. Clifton - d. Were v. Cole 166, - d. Clomonts v. Colling	393
e-	—— d. Were v. Cole 166,	224
377		13
49,253	d. Earl of Egremont v.
401	Courtenay d. Bastow v. Cox	377
280	d. Bastow v. Čox	360
360
378	- d Divie a Davies	360
d 120	- d. Divic V. Davies	201
	d Crosthwaita a Dire	0.01
	d. Crostilwaite v. Dixon	90
296	a. Curzon v. Eamonds	410
241	d. Bloomfield v. Eyre	278
392	d. Davies v. Gatacre	259
	d. Fisher v. Giles	392
	d. Muston v. Gladwin	370
417	d. Walker v. Groves	362
of	d. Riddell v. Gwinnell	356
354	d. Cook v. Danvers 328, d. Dixie v. Davies d. Parsley v. Day d. Crosthwaite v. Dixon d. Corosthwaite v. Dixon d. Curzon v. Edmonds d. Bloomfield v. Eyre d. Davies v. Gatacre d. Fisher v. Giles d. Muston v. Gladwin d. Riddell v. Groves d. Riddell v. Gowell	271

INDEX TO CASES CITED.

Р	AGE
	328, 329
d. Baker v. Jones	370
	63
d. Wigan v. Jones	281
- d. Barrett v. Kemp	301
	138
- d. Winder v. Lawes 347,	354
d, De Kutzen v. Lewis ••	369
d. Roylance v. Lightfoot	391
d. Johnson v. Liversedge	416
- d. Lushington v. Bishop of Llandaff	320
- d. Roby v. Maisey	392
d. Brune v. Martyn	134
d. Biddulph v. Meakin d. Twining v. Muscott	14
- d. Twining v. Muscott	351
—— Nepean v	416
d. Christmas v. Oliver	256
d. Freestone v. Parratt	208
- d. Lloyd v. Passingham	149
 d. Mansfield v. Peach d. Pring v. Pearsey d. Flower v. Peck d. Blight v. Pett 	275
d. Pring v. Pearsey	301
d. Flower v. Peck	370
- d. Blight v. Pett	383
	305
- d. Biddulph v. Poole	378
d. Starling v. Prince	185
$- d. \text{ Starling } v. \text{ Prince} \cdots \\ d. \text{ Griffith } v. \text{ Pritchard}$	65
d. Pearson v. Ries	362
d. Dixon v. Roe	226
d. Lumley v. Earl of Scarborough	256
d. Foster v. Scott	331
d. Strode v. Seaton	365
d. Blesard v. Simpson d. Clarke v. Smaridge	334
d. Clarke v. Smaridge	361
- d. Gutteridge v. Sowerby	348
d. Shaw v. Steward	377
	345
d. Reed v. Taylor	132
a. Lord Downe v. 1 nomp-	392
d Tofold a Tofold	347
son 	350
	000 361
kins	348
d. Leach v. Whittaker d. Gregory v. Whichelo	97,
427,	445
d Perry & Wilson	339
d. Perry v. Wilson d. Daniell v. Woodroffe	185
	377
Donne v. Hart Dowman's case	25
The second secon	355
Downing College, Flack v Downshire, Marquis of, v. Lady	000
Sandys	25
Drake, Souter v	413
errore, bouter e	110

PAGE
Drybutter v. Bartholomew 8
Duberley v. Day 377
Du Hourmelin v. Sheldon 154
Duke, Sheppard v 417
Dumpor's case
Dunne v. Dunne 31
Dungannon, Lord, Ker v 296
Dunraven, Lord, v. Llewellyn 110, 300
Dyke v. Rendall 217

Е.

Eccles v. Cheyne I	94
	55
	16
	_
	77 20
v. Champion	56
Ex parte 1	15
	95
	75
	61
Ekins, Bailey v	75
Elwell, Wainewright v 3	49
Elwes, Brudenell v 49, 2	53
	78
Ela Dava el a Dian	18
,	20
Ennismore, Lord, Phipps v	87
Evans, Greenwood v 3	78
Exton v. Scott 1	38
	33
v. Hansom 3	95

F.

Faithful, Warman v		362
Farebrother, Wodehouse v.		162
Faulkner, Johnson v	• •	307
v. Lowe		173
Fernandes, Hemingway v.	••	366
Ferrers, case of Earl		8
Festing v. Allen	•••	251
Few v. Backhouse		305
Fishwick, Clegg v	••	378
Fitch v. Weber		63
Flack v. Downing College	• •	355
Flarty v. Odlum		88
Fletcher v. Fletcher		138
Flight v. Gray		162
Floyer, Attorney-General v.		288
Flyn, Nash v		138
Follett v. Moore		401
Forster, Honeywood v		352

		PAGE
Fortune, Baird v.		303
Fox v. Bishop of Che	ster.	. 318
France, Cooper v.	• •	433
Franklin, Clarke v.		.218,282
Fry v. Noble	217,	218, 282
Futvoye, Kennard v.		405

Gale, Griffiths v	••	194
Gann, The Free Fisheries	of
Whitstable v		302
Garland v. Jekyll	••	324
Lester v		87
Garnett, Riley v		251
Gatacre, Doe d. Davies v.		259
Gatcombe, Chapman v.		321
Gathercole, Hawkins v		88
Gayfere, Dixon v	•••	400
Gee, The Queen v		302
v. Smart	••	162
Gennys, Ex parte		158
Gent, Davison v	• •	378
v. Harrison		25
Gerrard, Grugeon v	••	138
Gibbons v. Snape	•	352
Gibbs, Wells v	• •	80
Gibson, Thibault v		401
Giles, Doe d. Fisher v.	• •	392
Gimson, Worthington v		303
Gladwin, Doe d. Muston v.	••	370
Glass v. Richardson		355
Glasscock, Smith v	••	354
Glyn, Attorney-General v.		70
Goddard v. Complin		405
Goodman, Cooch v		142
Goodright d. Burton v. Rigb	у	4.5
Goold, M'Carthy v		88
v. White	• •	335
Gordon v. Graham		406
Gordon v. Graham	• •	208
Gostling, Baker v		376
Gower, Yellowly v	• •	24
Grafton, case of Duke of		52
Graham, Gordon v	• •	406
v. Graham		138
Grand Junction Canal Co pany, Dimes v	m-
pany, Dimes v		351
Grant, Ex parte	••	21
v. Mills		400
Graves v. Weld	27	, 360
Gray, Flight v		162
Grazebrook, Rogers v.	••	391
Greaves v. Wilson		402
Green v. James	207	392, 364
Re	907
	••	373
R.P.

	PAGE
Greenfield, Bonifaut v	291
Greenwood v. Evans	378
Griffith v. Blunt	294
	280
Griffiths v. Gale	194
Grose v. West	301
Grosvenor, Lord v. Hampstead	l
Junction Railway Company	13
Groves, Doe d. Walker v	362
Grugeon v. Gerrard	138
Gubbins, Coppinger v	24
Gurney v. Gurney	190
Gwinnell, Doe d. Riddell v.	356

н.

Hackett, Legg v	361
Hadleston v. Whelpdale	378
Haggerston v. Hanbury	184
Haigh, Ex parte	399
Halford v. Stains	296
4 Y 1 N .	255
Hale v. Pugh Hall v. Bainbridge	138
	138
	392
- v. Waterhouse	207
	266
Hallett, Attorney-General v Hamer, Dickin v
Hamer, Dickin v	214
Hamilton, Attorney-General v.	129
Hampstead Junction Railway Company, Lord Grosvenor v.	$^{-13}$
Hanbury, Haggerston v	184
Handcock, Jolly v	422
Hanson, Eyre v	395
v. Keating	377
Harcourt, Ainslie v	378
Harding v. Wilson	303
Hare v. Burges	377
Harnett v. Maitland	360
Harris v. Pugh	157
Harrison, Gent v	25
	28
Norris v
Rooperv	317
Hart, Donne v	377
Hatch, Holford v	376
Hatchell, Morgan v	114
Hatfield v. Thorp	189
Hawkins, Dawes v	301
v. Gathercole	- 88
Hay v. Earl of Coventry 49	, 253
— Heald v	- 88
Haygarth, Taylor v	151
Hayward, Williams v	376
Heald v. Hay	88
Heald v. Hay Helps v. Hereford	256
Heming, Cherry v.	142
Heming, Cherry v. Hemingway v. Fernandes hemingway v. Perhandes	000 0

PAGE	PAGE
Hereford, Helps v 256	James, Broughton v 296
Hertford Marquis of Lord	Green #
Southaninton a 206
Hereford, Heips v. 256 Hertford, Marquis of, Lord Southampton v 296 Hibbert v. Cooke 31 Hiern v. Mill 362 Higginson, Bird v. 362 Hill v. Edmonds 377 — v. Saunders 365 — Stephenson v. — Woolf v. </td <td>PAGE James, Broughton v. 296 Green v. </td>	PAGE James, Broughton v. 296 Green v.
Hibbert V. Cooke 51	Rommy v 207
Hiern v. Mill 85	Jee v. Audley
Higginson, Bird v 362	Jekyll, Garland v 324
Hill v. Edmonds 377	John, Lewis v 399 Johnson, Bates v 405
v. Saunders 365	Johnson, Bates v 405
Stephenson v 328, 329	v. Faulkner 307
Hinchcliffe v. Earl of Kinnoul 303	Shaw n 388
	Shaw v 388 Johnston, Salkeld v 418
Hobson, Stansfield v 417 Hodgkinson v. Wyatt 401	Jolling Handarah 499
Hougkinson b. wyatt 401	Johry D. Frandcock 422
Hodgson and Wife v. Ambrose 194	Jolly v. Handcock 422 Jones, Ashton v 70 — v. Davies
Hogan v. Jackson 19, 62	v. Davies 383
Hogan v. Jackson 19, 62 Holford v. Hatch	Doe d. Baker v
Holland, Rawley v 291	— Doe d. Duroure v 63 — Doe d. Wigan v. 281
Holmes, Poultney v 375	— Doe d. Wigan v 281
v. Prescott 251	v. Jones 217, 378, 405
Honeywood v. Forster 352	- Boe d. Perry n 256
Hook v Hook	$ Roe d. Perry v. \dots 256 \\ v. Smith \dots 400 $
Honking a Honking 140	u Tripp 406
Hopkinson Poles 406	Williams 80
Hopkinson, Rolt v 400	v. Tripp
Horlock v. Smith	Jones, Youde v
Horn v. Horn 201	Jope v. Morshead 311
Horner v. Swann 288	Jordan, Whitbread v
Hovenden, Majoribanks v. 274
Howell, Doe d. Harris v 271	77
Howell, Buckley v 286 Hughes, Rann v 137	К.
Hughes, Rann v 137	77 J 77
Hull and Selby Railway, re 302	Keating, Hanson v 377
Hulse Andrews v 325	Keech v. Hall
Humphries a Broaden 14	Kemp, Doe d. Barrett v 301
Hunt a Color	Kennard v. Futvoye 405
Hulse, Andrews v	Kenworthy v. Ward 126
Huntingdon, Doe a. Keay v. 328, 329	Keating, Hanson v. 377 Keech v. Hall 392 Kemp, Doe d. Barrett v. 301 Kennard v. Futvoye 405 Kenworthy v. Ward 126 Keppel v. Bailey 366 Ker v. Lord Dungannon 296 Ker v. Bayroon 212
Hurst v. Hurst	Ker v. Lord Dungannon 296
Hutchinson, Bearpark v 309	Kerr v. Pawson 343
Hyatt, Spyer v 356	King, The v. Lord of the Manor
Hyde v. Dallaway 417 of Our die of Oundle 355
	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302
	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302
Ι.	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302
Ι.	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302
Ι.	of Oundle
Ι.	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302 — v. Smith 84, 158 — v. Turner 339 — Vanderplank v. 255 Kinnoul, Earl of, Hincheliffe v. 303
Ι.	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302 — v. Smith 84, 158 — v. Turner 339 — Vanderplank v. 255 Kinnoul, Earl of, Hincheliffe v. 303
Ι.	of Oundle
	of Oundle 355 — The v. Lord Yarborough 302 — v. Smith 84, 158 — v. Turner 339 — Vanderplank v. 255 Kinnoul, Earl of, Hincheliffe v. 303

Igguiden v. May			377
Ingram, Buckeridge v	• •		8
Ingilby v. Amcotts		• •	256
Irving, Cuthbertson v.	• •		392
Isaac, re			21
Isherwood v. Oldknow	• •		227
Ives' case		•••	377

J.

Jackson,	Hogan v.		19), 62
	Lane v.		• •	81
	Oates d.	Hatterley	v.	126
	Pitt v.	••	••	255

L.

Lamb. Burges v		25
Lampet's case		256
Lane v. Jackson		81
- and Pers, I	Eylett v	333
Thomas v.		13
Langford v. Seln	nes	375, 376
Lansley, Major	v	206

Law v. Urlwin 383	Massey, Egerto
Law v. Urlwin 383 Lawes, Doe d. Winder v. 347, 354	Mathew, v. Bla
Leak, Melling v 360	Matthew v. Boy
Leeds, Duke of v. Earl Amherst 25	Maundrell v. M
Legg v. Hackett 361	May, Iggulden
v. Strudwick 361	M'Carthy v. Go
Leighton, Carleton v 257 Leman, Minet v 300	M'Culloch, Rus
Leman, Minet v 300	M'Donnell v. P
Leon, Rollason v	M'Gregor v. M'
Lester v. Garland 87	Mead, Taylor v
Lewis, Doe d. De Rutzen v. 369	Meakin, Doe d.
v. John	Melling v. Leak
Liddell, Barrington v 296	Merry, Day v.
Lightfoot, Doe d. Roylance v. 391	Mestayer v. Big Lincoln, Bennett v. Bishop of 319	Metcalf's Will.
Lingen, re 21	Meux, Bagget
Liversedge, Doe d. Johnson v. 416	Micklethwait v.
Llandaff, Doe d. Lushington v.	Mid Kent Raily
Bishop of 320	· Middleton, Lord
Llewellyn, Lord Dunraven v. 110,	neral v.
300	Mildmay, Rex
Lloyd v. Cheetham 88	Mill, Hiern v
Lock v. De Burgh 28	Miller v. Green
Lockyer v. Savage 87	Millership v. Bi Lockyer v. Savage 87 Long v. Blackall 294 	Mills, Curling i
v. Storie 88	Grant v.
Lowe, Faulkner v 173	Paterson
Lowe, Faulkner v 173 Lucas, v. Dennison 417	Mines Royal So
Lucena v. Lucena 277	Minet v. Lemar
Lukin, Curtis v 296	Minshull v. Oal
Lukin, Curtis v. 296 Lumley, Lord Ward v. 139 Lyon v. Reed 378	Mogg v. Mogg
Lyon v. Reed 378	Moleyn's case

M.

Machell v. Weeding
Mackintosh v. Barber	291
Maclean, Bowser v	327
Mackreth v. Symmons	400
Macpherson, Brummell v	368
Magnay, Mines Royal Societies v	162
Mainwaring v. Baxter	49
	206
Majoribanks v. Hovenden	274
Nairn v	31
Maisey, Doe d. Robey v	392
	360
Mandeville's case	244
Manners v. Charlesworth	129
Marks v. Marks	256
Marlborough, Brace v. Duchess of 79
Marston v. Roe d. Fox
Martin v. Swannell	199
	134
v. Williams	367
to triatanto 71	62
	0%

Massey, Egerton v	261
Mathew, v. Blackmore	403
Matthew v. Bowler	400
Maundrell v. Maundrell	280
May, Iggulden v	377
M'Carthy v. Goold	88
M'Culloch, Russell v	402
M'Donnell v. Pope	378
M'Gregor v. M'Gregor	126
Mead. Taylor v	207
Meakin, Doe d. Biddulph v	14
Mead, Taylor v Meakin, Doe d. Biddulph v Melling v. Leak Merry, Day v	360
Merry, Day v	25
Mestayer v. Biggs	305
Metcalf's Will.	23
Meux, Bagget v	207
Micklethwait v. Micklethwait	25
Mid Kent Railway, Re	25 I
Middleton Lord Attorney Go
neral n.	265
Mildmay, Rex v.	347
Mill. Hiern v	85
Miller v. Green 307.	364
Millership v. Brookes	138
Mills, Curling n.	362
Graut v	400
Mildrebn, Attoriey-Oe- neral v	440
Mines Royal Societies v. Magnay	162
Minet v. Leman	300
Minshull v. Oakes	366
Mogg v. Mogg	250
Moleyn's case 78,	239
Mollett, Tidy v	362
Mollett, Tidy v	255
Moore, Follett v	401
Pollexfen v	400
Morgan v. Hatchell	114
Corder v	396
Morrell, Scoones v	301
Morris v. Morris	25
Morshead, Jope v	$\frac{25}{341}$
Morton, Smart v	14
Motley, Andrew v	191
Muggleton v. Barnett 94,	$\frac{191}{427}$
Muscott, Doe d. Twining v.	351

N.

Nairn v. Majoribanks	31
Nanny v. Edwards	395
Nash v. Flyn	138
Nepean v. Doe	416
New River Company, Davall v.	154
Newman v. Newman	294
v. Selfe •• ••	395
Newton v. Ricketts	275
Nickells v. Atherstone	378

PAGE

		P	AGE
Nicolson v. Wordswor	rth		200
Nixon, Scott v.	• •		418
Noble, Fry v	217, 1
Noel v. Bewley
Nokes' case			409
Norris r. Harrison		• •	28
Robertson v.			205
Norton, Simmons v.		• •	24
Norwood, Crump d.	Wooley	7 v.	120

0.

Oakes, Minshull v	366
Oates d. Hatterley v. Jackson	126
	-88
Oldknow, Isherwood v	227
Oliver, Doe d. Christmas v	256
	81 Oundle, The King v. Lord of Manor of
Owen, De Beauvoir v

Р.

Pain v. Ridout	7
Palmer v. Cadell 49,	294
v. Edwards	375
	210
Colvile v	74
v. Dee	75
v. Taswell	362
Parmenter v. Webber	375
Parratt, Doe d. Freestone v	208
Parsons, Attorney-General v.	110,
	323
Pascoe v. Pascoe 375,	61
Pascoe r. Pascoe 375,	376
Pass, Dennett v	311
Passingham, Doe d. Lloyd v	149
Paterson v. Mills	410
Patrick, Shedden v	63
	343
	25
Payne v. Barker	431
	275
	392
Pearce v. Cheslyn	362
Pearsey, Doe d. Pring r	301
	370
	142
	351
Perrin v. Blake 195,	236
Pett, Dee d. Blight v	383
Pettit, Stratton v	362
Petty r. Styward	401
Pew, Hale v	255

Pheysey v. Vicary	303
Phillips, Acocks v	226
Duke of Beaufort v	80
v. Phillips	349
v, Smult	23
Phipps v. Lord Ennismore	87
Pidgeley v. Rawling	23
Pigot's case 138,	139
	405
Pineke, Shove v	184
Pike, Wilmot v Pincke, Shove v Pitt v. Jackson	255
Plant, James v	303
Plummer v. Whiteley	29
Pocknell, Buckland v	400
Pollexfen v. Moore	400
Pollock v. Stacy	375
Pomfret, Earl of, v. Lord Windsor	360
Pontilex, Doe d. Church v.	305
Poole v. Bentley	362
Doe d. Biddulph v.	378
Pope, M'Donnell v	378
Portington's ease	45
Poultney v. Holmes	375
Poultney v. Holmes Powys v. Blagrave	23
Prat v. Colt	156
Preece v. Corrie	375
Preece v. Corrie	251
Price, Curtis v	24I
v. Worwood	370
Prickett. Steel v	301
Prince, Doe d. Starling v.	185
Pritchard, Doe d. Griffith v	65
Shaw v	88
	340
Provost of Beverley's case	239
	157
Pung, Ray v	281
Purvis v. Raver	413

PAGE

Q.

Queen, Tl	1e v. G	ee .		 302
Queinton,	case o	of Kite	and	340

R.

Rabbits, Wiltshire v	405
Randfield v. Randfield	354
Rann v. Hughes	137
Rawe v. Chichester	378
Rawley v. Holland	291
Rawling, Pidgeley v.	23
	281
Rayer, Purvis v	413
DIT	378

PAGE	PAGE
Regina v. Lady of Manor of Dallingham 354 Rendall, Dyke v 217 Rex v. Mildmay, Dame Jane	Salkeld, Johnston v 418 Sandaman, Clements v 90 Sandys, Lady, Marquis of
Dallingham 354	Sandaman, Clements v 90
Rendall, Dyke v	Sandys, Lady, Marquis of
Bex v. Mildmay, Dame Jane	Downshire v 25 Saunders, Hill v 365 Saverage Adams v
St John 347	Saunders Hill v 365
" Lord Verberough 302	Savago Adams n 201
v. Lofu Farborough 220	Laduren n 97
	\sim Lockyer v_{\bullet} of
Reynolds v. Wright 309	Saward v. Anstey
Rhodes, Barlow v 303	Savage, Adams v 291 Lockyer v
Richardson, Cottee v 375	Doe d. Lumley v.
Glass v 355	$\frac{1}{10000000000000000000000000000000000$
Rex v. Mildmay, Dame Jane St. John	Scarisbrick v. Skelmersdale 296
Rickett's Trusts 275	Scoones v. Morrell 301
Newton v 275	Scott, Exton v 138
Rider v. Wood 121. 431	Doe d. Foster v 331
Ridout v. Pain	\rightarrow v. Nixon 418
Riddell » Riddell 410	Scratton v Brown 302
Bies Doe d Pearson a 362	Sector Dee d Strode n 365
Rics, Dec a. rearson v 002 Right Goodnight d Buston a. 45	Search, Doe a. Shoke v 505
Rigby, Goodright d. Burton v. 45	Selfe Newson 205
Right a. Laylor v. Danks 559	Selle, Newman $v \dots \dots 099$
d. Flower v. Darby 300, 361	Seimes, Langford v 375, 376
Riley v. Garnett 251	Sewell, Cole v
Rittson v. Stordy 154	Sharpe, Clay v 396
Rivis v. Watson 313	Shaw v. Pritchard 88
Roach v. Wadham 280	v. Johnson 388
Robertson v. Norris 205	Shedden v. Patrick 63
Rigby, Goodright d. Burton v. 45 Right d. Taylor v. Banks 339 — d. Flower v. Darby 360, 361 Riley v. Garnett 251 Rittson v. Stordy 154 Rivis v. Watson 313 Roach v. Wadham 280 Robertson v. Norris 205 Robey, Trulock v 417 Robinson, Buttery v 307 — Brandon v 87, 207 Boed Earl of Berkeley v. Arch-	Scott, Exton v
Robinson, Buttery v 307	Shelley's case 234, 236, 240, 241
Brandon v 87, 207	Sheppard v. Duke 417
Roe d. Earl of Berkeley v. Arch-	Shove v. Pincke
hishon of York 377	Shrappell v Blake 397
- Doo d Divon a 226	Sheppard v. Duke 417 Shove v. Pincke 184 Shrapnell v. Blake 397 Shum, Taylor v 366 Sibthorpe, Attorney-General v. 265
d For Monston a 101	Silution Attomory Consults 965
d. FOX Marston v 191	Simmon Nenter Offererat v. 205
a. rerry v. Jones 250	Simmons v. Norton 24 Simpson, Doe d. Blesard v 334
Rogers v. Grazebrook 391	Simpson, Doe a. Blesard v 334
v. Taylor 14	v. Dendy 301 Sims v. Thomas 158
Kollason v. Leon 362	Sims v. Thomas 158
Rolph, Barrett v 376	Sitwell, Attorney-General v. 317
Rolt v. Hopkinson 406	Skelmersdale, Scarisbrick v 296
Romilly v. James 267	Skipwith, Duke of St. Albansv. 24
Rooper v. Harrison 317	Smaridge, Doe d. Clarke v 361
Rose v. Bartlett 373	Smart, Gee v 162
Rosling, Bond v	v. Morton 14
Rosslyn, re Lady, trust 296	Smith, Ackrovd v 303
Rowbotham v. Wilson 14	v. Death
Roe d. Earl of Berkeley v. Archbishop of York 377 Doe d. Dixon v. 226 d. Fox Marston v. 191 d. Perry v. Jones 256 Rogers v. Grazebrook 391 v. Taylor 14 Rolhason v. Leon 362 Rolph, Barrett v. 376 Rolt v. Hopkinson. 406 Romilly v. James 267 Rooper v. Harrison 317 Rose v. Bartlett 373 Rosling, Bond v. 362 Rosslyn, re Lady, trust 296 Rowbotham v. Wilson 14 Rowe, Calmady v. 302 Rudall, Warren v. 236 Russell v. M'Culloch 402 Webb v. 329	Smartdge, Doe d. Clarke v
Rowe, Calmady v	——Horlock v. 31
Rudall, Warren n	Jones v 400
Bussell v M'Culloch 402	King a St 159
a Russell 200	Phillips at 07, 100
Wahhau 000	r mmps v 23
Webb 0 229	Wilson a Sto
	Smythe, Attorney-General v 265

S. .

Sabine, Be	llamy v.	• •	• •	85
Salisbury,	Marquis	of,	Beau-
mont v.	••	• •		375

25 . 365 . 291. 87 307

	AGE
Southampton, Lord v. Marquis of Hertford	296
Sowerby, Doe d. Gutteridge v.	348
Sowry, Briggs v	374
Spencer's case 366,	409
Spilsbury, Burdett v. Doe d.	275
Spyer v. Hyatt Stables, Blackburn v	356
Stables, Blackburn v	250
Stacy, Pollock v	375
Stains, Halford v	296
Stansfield v. Hobson	417
Steel v. Prickett	301
Stephenson, Cooper v	422
v. Hill 328,	329
Steward, Doe d. Shaw v	377
Stordy, Rittson v	154
Storie, Long v	88
Stratton v. Pettit	362
Strickland, Doe d. Rayer v	345
v. Strickland	201
Stroyan v. Knowles	14
Strudwick, Legg v	361
Styan, Ex parte	251
Styward, Petty v	401
Swann, Horner v	288
Swannell, Martin v	199
Swansea, Mayor, &c. of, Duke of Beaufort v	302
Swift v. Swift	10
Symmons, Macreth v	400
Symonds, Beale v	154

т.

Tabor v. Tabor	358
Taltarum's case	42
Tanner, Chapman v.	400
v. Elworthy	378
Taswell, Parker v	362
Taunton v. Pepler	142
Taylor v. Haygarth	154
Doe d. Reed v.	132
v. Mead	207
ci l	14
	366
Tempest v. Tempest	190
Tetley v. Tetley	305
Thibault v. Gibson
Thomas v. Lane	13
	158
Thompson, resp., Busher, app.	329
Doe d. Lord Downe v.	392
Thorn v. Woollcombe	375
Thornborough v. Baker	358
Thorp, Hatfield v
Tidy r. Mollett	189
The second secon	362
Tierney v. Wood	155

	P	AGE
Tiverton Market Act, in re	••	124
Tofield, Doe d. Tofield v		347
Tollemache v. Tollemache	••	25
Tomlin, Lord Bolton v		361
Tooker v. Annesley	• •	25
Tripp, Jones v		406
Trower v. Butts	•••	250
Trueman, Doe d. Bover v.		350
Trulock v. Robey		417
Trye, Lord Aldborough v		420
Tuck, Edwards v		296
Tullett v. Armstrong	87,	207
Tunstall v. Boothby		88
Turner, King v		339
Tutton v. Darke		225
Twyne's case		73

U.

Upton v. Bassett		••		• •	73
Urch v. Walker	• •		•••		200
Urlwin, Law v		••		••	383

v.

Vanderplank v. King	255
Vaughan, Viner v	24
Vicary, Pheysey v	303
Vickers v. Cowell	401
Vincent v. Bishop of Sodor and 275
Viner v. Vaughan	24
	367

w.

Wadham, Roach v.			280
Wadkin, Barrow v			154
Wainewright v. Elwell			349
Wakeford, Wright v			275
Waldo v. Waldo	••		25
Walker v. Richardson			70
Walker, Urch v	••		200
Ward, Berridge v			30 I
Kenworthy v.	••		126
Lord v. Lumley			139
Warde, Bristowe, v.			255
Wardle v. Brocklehurst			303
Ware v. Cann	••		18
Warman v. Faithfull			362
Warren v. Rudall			23
Waterhouse, Hale v		•••	207
Watkins, Docd. Lord Bra	dfo	rd v	.361
Watson, Rivis v.		•••	313
Watts, Smith v			376

I	AGE
Wayman, Peppercorn v	351
Webb v. Austin	365
v. Russell	229
webber, Parmenter v	375
Weber, Fitch v	63
Weeding, Machell v	197
Weld, Graves v. 27.	360
Weld, Graves v 27, Wellesley v. Wellesley	25
Wells v. Gibbs	$\frac{25}{80}$
Wescomb, Davies v.	25
West, Grose v.	301
Westbrook r. Blythe	374
Wells v. Gibbs	011
Whalley ex parte	21
Wheate Burgess # 18	154
Whelndale Hadleston "	378
Whalley, ex parte Wheate, Burgess v. Wheate, Hadleston v. Whichelo, Doe d. Gregory v. 97,	437
Whieldon Gordon "	208
Whisson Avalina n	149
Whithroad a Lordan	300
White Goold "	335
" White	378
Whitfold y Bowit	010
Whitetable The Free Fichers of	20
Whieldon, Gordon v. Whisson, Aveline v. Whitbread v. Jordan White, Goold v. v. White Whitfield v. Bewit Whitstable, The Free Fishers of v. Gann	302
	348
Whittaker, Doe d. Leach v Whitton v. Peacock	392
William Peacock	265
Wilcox v. Smith Willan, Chester v	$\frac{200}{126}$
Willes Days	339
Willes, Rex v Williams v. Bosanquet 366
v. Hayward	376
Jones v	80
- Martyn v	367
Willis v. Brown	178
Willis v. Brown	255
	386
Wills v. Cattling	376
Wilmot v. Pike	405
Wilson, Doe d. Perry v	339
Greaves v	402 303
Harding v	303

11/1 D 1 .1	P	AGE
Wilson, Rowbotham v	•	14
Wiltshire v. Rabbits .	• •	296
Windsor, Lord, Earl of Pom	fretv.	360
Winter v. Lord Anson .		400
Wishart v. Wylie		301
Wodehouse v. Farebrother		162
Wood v. Copper Miners C	lompany		162
Rider v.	121.	431
Pany — Rider v — Tierney v	•	155
Woodgate, Bingham v.		322
Woodroffe, Doe d. Daniell	n.	185
Woulf v. Hill		25
Woollcombe, Thorn v.	•	375
Wordsworth, Nicolson v.	89	200
Worthington v. Gimson .		303
Worwood, Price v		370
Wright v. Barlow		275
		227
		309
Reynolds v
		275
Wyatt, Hodgkinson v		401
Wylde, re		208
Wylie, Wishart v		301
Wynne v. Griffith	• •	280

Υ.

Yarborough (Lord), l	Rex v.		302
Yates v. Aston	••	• •	4.03
v. Boen			64
Bridge v	••	• •	126
Yellowly v. Gower			24
York, Archbishop of,	Roed. E	larl of Berkeley v			377
Youde v. Jones	••	••	173

Z.

Zouch v. Parsons 64

ADDENDUM.

Page 82.

THE attention of the author has just been called to the recent case of Thornton v. Finch, 4 Giffard, 515, on the construction of the stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112. The Court in that case granted an injunction to restrain mortgagees with a power of sale from paying over the balance of the purchase-money to the mortgagor, on the ground that the plaintiff had a judgment against him obtained subsequently to the passing of the act, viz., on the 4th of August, 1864, on which judgment a writ of elegit was issued on the 7th of September following. The act recites that it is desirable to assimilate the law affecting freehold, copyhold and leasehold estates to that affecting purely personal estates in respect of future judgments, statutes and recognizances. Judgments, as is well known, form no lien on the purely personal estate of the debtor. The Act then enacts that no judgment to be thereafter entered up shall affect any land until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution by virtue of a writ of elegit or other lawful authority. By section 2, the word "land" is to include all hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, or any interest therein. By section 3, every writ or other process of execution, by virtue whereof any land shall have been delivered in execution, shall be registered as therein mentioned, and no other or prior registration of such judgment shall be necessary for any purpose. By section 4, every creditor to whom any land shall have been actually delivered in execution, and whose writ or process shall be duly registered, may obtain from the Court of Chancery, upon petition, an order for sale of his debtors' interest in such lands. Section 5 enacts, that, if it shall appear that any other judgment debt is a charge on such land, the creditor entitled to the benefit of such charge (whether prior or subsequent to the charge of the petitioner) shall be served with notice of the order for sale. This last section certainly seems to imply the possibility of a subsequent judgment being a charge on the land. It is difficult to see why the words "or subsequent" were inserted. But the light thrown by the preamble on the construction of the Act seems to show the intention of the legislature, that no judgment as such should be a charge on any interest in real estate until the same should have been actually taken in execution under such judgment. Where the interest of the debtor can only be got at by the intervention of the Court of Chancery, the decree of that Court in the creditor's favour seems tantamount to actual delivery. The author submits that, though the injunction was rightly granted, the case affords no ground either for the doubt stated in the marginal note (p. 515), as to the application of the statute to an equity of redemption, or for the proposition in the note of the learned editor (p. 518), that the Act does not deprive a judgment creditor of his charge who is unable to have the land delivered to him in execution.

PRINCIPLES

OF THE

LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.

OF THE CLASSES OF PROPERTY.

In the early ages of Europe, property was chiefly of a Property at substantial and visible, or what lawyers call, a corporeal first chiefly kind. Trade was little practised (a), and consequently debts were seldom incurred. There were no public funds, and of course no funded property. The public wealth consisted principally of land(b), and the houses and buildings erected upon it, of the cattle in the fields, and the goods in the houses. Now land, which is Land indeimmoveable and indestructible, is evidently a different species of property from a cow or a sheep, which may be stolen, killed, and eaten; or from a chair or a table, which may be broken up or burnt. No man, be he ever so feloniously disposed, can run away with an acre of land. The owner may be ejected, but the land remains where it was; and he, who has been wrongfully turned out of possession, may be reinstated into the identical portion of land from which he had been removed. Not corporeal.

(a) 3 Hallam's Middle Ages, (b) 1 Hallam's Middle Ages, 367-369. 158.

structible.

R.P.

Moveables destructible. so with moveable property; the thief may be discovered and punished; but if he has made away with the goods, no power on earth can restore them to their owner. All he can hope to obtain is a compensation in money, or in some other article of equal value.

Moveable and immoveable.

The Norman conquest.

Moveable and immoveable(c) is then one of the simplest and most natural divisions of property in times of but partial civilization. In our law this division has been brought into great prominence by the circumstances of our early history.

By the Norman conquest, it is well known a vast number of Norman soldiers settled in this country. The new settlers were encouraged by their king and master; and whilst the conquered Saxons found no favour at court, they suffered a more substantial grievance in the confiscation of the lands of such of them as had opposed the Conqueror(d). The lands thus confiscated were granted out by the Conqueror to his followers, nor was their rapacity satisfied till the greater part of the lands in the kingdom had been thus disposed of (e). In these grants the Norman king and his vassals followed the custom of their own country, or what is called the feudal system(f). The lands granted were not given freely and for nothing; but they were given to hold of the king, subject to the performance of certain military duties as the condition of their enjoyment (q). The king was still considered as in some sense the proprietor, and was called the lord paramount(h); while the services

(c) Quandoque res mobiles, ut cattalla, ponuntur in vadium, quandoque res immobiles, ut terræ, et tenementa, et redditus. Glanville, lib. x. c. 6. See also lib. vii. c. 16, 17.

(d) Wright's Tenures, 61, 62;

2 Black. Com. 48.

(e) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 424.

(f) Wright's Tenures, 63.

(g) 1 Hallam's Middle Ages, 178, 179, note.

(h) Coke upon Littleton, 65 a.

to be rendered were regarded as incident or annexed to the ownership of the land; in fact, as the rent to be paid for it.

This feudal system of tenures, or holding of the king, Introduction was soon afterwards applied to all other lands, although they had not been thus granted out, but remained in the hands of their original Saxon owners. How this change was effected is perhaps a matter of doubt. Sir Martin Wright (i), who is followed by Blackstone(k), supposes that the introduction of tenures, as to lands of the Saxons, was accomplished at a stroke by a law (l) of William the Conqueror, by which he required all free men to swear that they would be faithful to him as their lord. "The terms of this law," says Sir Martin Wright, " are absolutely feudal, and are apt and proper to establish that policy with all its consequences." Mr. Hallam, however, takes a different view of the subject; for while he considers it certain that the tenures of the feudal system were thoroughly established in England under the Conqueror(m), he yet remarks that by the transaction in question an oath of fidelity was required, as well from the great landowners themselves as from their tenants, "thus breaking in upon the feudal compact in its most essential attribute, the exclusive dependence of a vassal upon his lord"(n). The truth appears to be that Norman

- (i) Wright's Tenures, 64, 65.
- (k) 2 Black. Com. 49, 50.

(1) The 52nd. Statuimus ut omnes liberi homines fædere et sacramento affirment, quod intra et extra universum regnum Angliæ Wilhelmo regi domino suo fideles esse volunt; terras et honores illius omni fidelitate ubique servare cum eo, et contra inimicos et alienigenas defendere.

(m) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 429.

(n) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 430. Mr. Hallam refers to the Saxon Chronicle, which gives the following account :-- Postea sic itinera disposuit ut pervenerit in festo Primitiarum ad Searebyrig (Sarum), ubi ei obviam venerunt ejus proceres; et omnes prædia tenentes, quotquot essent notæ me-of the feudal system.

customs, and their upholders and interpreters, Norman lawyers, were the real introducers of the feudal system of tenures into the law of this country. Before the conquest, landowners were subject to military duties(o); and to a soldier it would matter little whether he fought by reason of tenure, or for any other reason. The distinction between his services being annexed to his land, and their being annexed to the tenure of his land, would not strike him as very important. These matters would be left to those whose business it was to attend to them; and the lawyers from Normandy, without being particularly crafty, would, in their fondness for their own profession, naturally adhere to the precedents they were used to, and observe the customs and laws of their own $\operatorname{country}(p)$. Perhaps even they, in the time of the Conqueror, troubled themselves but little about the laws of landed property. The statutes of William are principally criminal, as are the laws of all half-civilized nations. Life and limb are of more importance than property; and when the former are in danger, the security of the latter is not much regarded. When the convulsions of the conquest began to subside, the Saxons felt the effects of the Norman laws, and cried out for the restoration of their own; but they were the weaker party and could not help themselves. By this time the industry of the lawyers had woven a net from which lioris per totam Angliam, hujus viri servi fuerunt, omnesque se illi subdidere, ejusque facti sunt vassali, ac ei fidelitatis juramenta præstiterunt se contra alios quoscunque illi fidos futuros.—Sax. Chron. anno 1085.

(o) Sharon Turner's Anglo-Saxons, vol. ii. app. iv. c. 3, 560;2 Hallam's Mid. Ages, 410.

(p) The Norman French was introduced by the Conqueror as the regular language of the courts of law. See Hume's History of England, vol. ii. 115, appendix ii. on the Feudal and Anglo-Norman government and manners. A specimen of this language, which was often curiously intermixed by our lawyers with scraps of Latin and pure English, will be given in a future note. there was no escaping (q). But in what precise manner tenures crept in, was a question perhaps never asked in those days; and if asked, it could not probably, even then, have been minutely answered.

The system of tenure could evidently only exist as to lands and things immoveable(r). Cattle and other moveables were things of too perishable and insignificant a nature to be subject to any feudal liabilities, and could therefore only be bestowed as absolute gifts. No duty or service could well be annexed as the condition of their ownership. Hence a superiority became attached to all immoveable property, and the distinction between it and moveables became clearly marked; so that, whilst lands were the subject of the disquisitions of lawyers(s), the decisions of the Courts of justice(t) and the attention of the legislature (u), moveable property passed almost unnoticed (x).

Lands, houses, and immoveable property,-things Lands, tenecapable of being held in the way above described,- ments and hereditand were called tenements or things held(y). They were also denominated hereditaments, because, on the death of the owner, they devolved by law to his heir(z). So that the phrase, lands, tenements and hereditaments, was used by the lawyers of those times to express all sorts of property of the first or immoveable class; and the expression is in use to the present day.

(q) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 468.

(r) Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), II. 2.

(s) See Treatises of Glanville, Bracton, Britton, and Fleta; the Old Tenures, and the Old Natura Brevium.

(t) See the Year-Books.

(u) See the Statutes.

(x) 2 Black. Com. 384.

(y) Constitutions of Clarendon. Art. 9; Glanville, lib. ix. cap. 1, 2, 3, passim; Bracton, lib. 2, fol. 26 a; stats. 20 Hen. III. c. 4; 13 Edw. I. c. 1; Co. Litt. 1 b; Shep. Touch. 91.

(z) Co. Litt. 6 a; Shep. Touch. 91.

hereditaments.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.

Goods and chattels.

The other, or moveable class of property, was known by the name of goods or chattels. The derivation of the word chattel has not been precisely ascertained (a). Both it and the word goods are well known to be still in use as technical terms amongst lawyers.

Tenements. So great was the influence of the feudal system, and so important was the tenure or holding of lands, whether by the vassals of the crown, or by the vassals of those vassals, that for a long time immoveable property was known rather by the name of tenements than by any other term more indicative of its fixed and indestructible nature (b). In time, however, from various causes, the feudal system began to give way. The growth of a commercial spirit, the rising power of towns, and the formation of an influential middle class, combined to render the relation of lord and vassal anything but a reciprocal advantage; and at the restoration of King Charles II. a final blow was given to the whole system(c). Its form indeed remained, but its spirit was extinguished. The tenures of land then became less burdensome to the owner, and less troublesome to the law student; and the Courts of law, instead of being occupied with disputes between lords and tenants, had their attention more directed to controversies between different owners. It became then more obvious that the essential difference between lands and goods was to be found in the remedies for the deprivation of either; that land could always be restored, but goods could not; that, as to the one, the real land itself could be recovered; but as to the other, proceedings must be had against the person who had taken them away. The two great classes of property accordingly began to acquire two other names more characteristic of their

(a) See 2 Black. Com. 385.

(b) It is the only word used in the important statute De Donis, 13 Edw. I. c. 1; see Co. Litt.

19 b.
(c) By statute 12 Car. II. c. 24.

6

difference. The remedies for the recovery of lands had long been called real actions, and the remedies for loss of goods personal actions (d). But it was not until the Real and perfeudal system had lost its hold, that lands and tenements sonal. were called real property, and goods and chattels personal property (e).

It appears then, that lands and tenements were designated, in later times, real property, more from the nature of the legal remedy for their recovery than simply because they are real things; and, on the other hand, goods and chattels were called personal property because the remedy for their abstraction was against the person who had taken them away. Personal property has been described as that which may attend the owner's person wherever he thinks proper to go(f), but goods and chattels were not usually called things personal till they had become too numerous and important to attend the persons of their owners.

The terms real property and personal property are now more commonly used than the old terms tenements and hereditaments, goods and chattels. The old terms

(d) Glanville, lib. x. c. 13; Bracton, lib. iii. fol. 101 b, par. 1; 102 b, par. 4; Britton, 1 b; Fleta, lib. i. c. 1; Litt. sects. 444, 492; Co. Litt. 284 b, 285 a; 3 Black. Com. 117.

(e) The terms lands and tenements, goods and chattels, are constantly used in Coke upon Littleton and Sheppard's Touchstone, both of them works compiled in the early part of the 17th century. The nearest approximation the writer can find in either of the above books to the now common division into real and personal is the expression "things, whether real, personal or mixed," in Co. Litt. 1 b and 6 a, and in Touchstone, p. 91, an expression which has an obvious reference to the division of actions into the same three classes. In the early part of the last century, the terms real and personal, as applied to property, were in common use. See 1 P. Wms. 553, 575, anno 1719; Ridout v. Pain, 3 Atkyns, 486, anno 1747.

(f) 2 Black. Com. 16, 834; 3 Black. Com. 144.

were, indeed, suited only to the feudal times in which they originated; since those times great changes have taken place, commerce has been widely extended, loans of money at interest have become common(q), and the funds have engulfed an immense mass of wealth. Both classes of property have accordingly been increased by fresh additions; and within the new names of real and personal many kinds of property are now included, to which our forefathers were quite strangers; so much so that the simple division into immoveable tenements and moveable chattels is lost in the many exceptions to which time and altered circumstances have given rise. Thus, shares in canals and railways, which are sufficiently immoveable, are generally personal property (h); funded property is personal; whilst a dignity or title of honour, which one would think to be as locomotive as its owner, is not a chattel but a tenement (i). Canal and railway shares and funded property are made personal by the different acts of parliament under the authority of which they have originated. And titles of honour are real property, because in ancient times such titles were annexed to the ownership of various lands(k).

But the most remarkable exception to the original rule occurs in the case of a lease of lands or houses for a term of years. The interest which the lessee, or person who has taken the lease, possesses, is not his real (l), but his personal property; it is but a chattel (m), though the (g) Such loans were formerly considered unchristian. Glanville, lib. 7, c. 16; lib. 10, c. 3; 1 Reeves's History, 119, 262.

(h) New River shares are an exception, Drybutter v. Bartholomew, 2 P. Wms. 127; see also Buckeridge v. Ingram, 2 Vest. jun. 652; Bligh v. Brent, 2 You. & Coll. 268. (i) Co. Litt. 20 a, n. (3); Earl Ferrer's case, 2 Eden, Appendix, p. 373.

(k) 1 Hallam's Middle Ages, 158.

(1) Bracton, lib. 2, fol. 27 a, par. 1.

(m) Co. Litt. 46 a; correct Lord Coke's reference at note (m), from ass. 82 to ass. 28.

rent may be only nominal, and the term ninety or even a thousand years. This seeming anomaly is thus explained. In the early times, to which we have before referred, towns and cities were not of any very great and general importance; their influence was local and partial, and their laws and customs were frequently peeuliar to themselves (n). Agriculture was then, though sufficiently neglected, yet still of far more importance than commerce; and from the necessities of agriculture arose many of our ancient rules of law. That the most ancient leases must have been principally farming leases, is evident from the specimens of which copies still remain (o), and also from the circumstance that the word farm applies as well to any thing let on lease, or let to farm, as to a farm house and the lands belonging to it. Thus, we hear of farmers of tolls and taxes, as well as of farmers engaged in agriculture. Farming in those days required but little capital (p), and farmers were regarded more as bailiffs or servants, accountable for the profits of the land at an annual sum, than as having any property of their own (q). If the farmer was ejected from his land by any other person than his landlord, he could not, by any legal process, again obtain possession of it. His only remedy was an action for damages against his landlord (r), who was bound to warrant him quiet possession (s). The farmer could therefore be scarcely said to be the owner of the land, even for the term of the lease; for his interest wanted the essential incident of real property, the capability of being restored

(n) See as a specimen, Bac. Abr. tit. Customs of London.

(o) See Madox's Formulare Anglicanum, tit. Demise for Years, in which the great majority of leases given are farming leases.

(p) See as to the bad' state of agriculture, 3 Hallam's Middle Ages, 365; 2 Hume's Hist. Eng.

349.

(q) Gilb. Tenures, 39, 40; Watkins on Descents, 108 (113, 4th edit.); 2 Black. Com. 141.

(r) 3 Black. Com. 157, 158, 200.

(s) Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years, and Covenant, (B). to its owner. Such an interest in land had, moreover, nothing military or feudal in its nature, and was, consequently, exempt from the feudal rule of descent to the eldest son as heir at law. Being thus neither real property, nor feudal tenement, it could be no more than a chattel; and when leases became longer, more valuable, and more frequent, no change was made; but to this day the owner of an estate for a term of years possesses in law merely a chattel. His leasehold estate is only his personal property, however long may be the term of years, or however great the value of the premises comprised in his lease (t).

There is now perhaps as much personal property in the country as real; possibly there may be more. Real property, however, still retains many of its ancient laws, which invest it with an interest and importance to which personal property has no claim. Of these ancient laws one of the most conspicuous is the feudal rule of descent, under which, as partially modified by amending acts (u), real property goes, when its owner dies intestate, to the heir, while personal property is distributed, under the same circumstances, amongst the next of hin of the intestate by an administrator appointed for that purpose by the Court of Probate (v).

Corporeal and incorporeal.

Besides the division of property into real and personal, there is another classification which deserves to be mentioned, namely, that of corporeal and incorporeal. It is evident that all property is either of one of these classes, or of the other; it is either visible and tangible,

(t) Quare, however, whether Lord Coke would have agreed that a lease for years is personal property or personal estate, though it is now clearly considered as such; and see Swift v. Swift, 1 De Gex, F. & J. 160, 173. (u) 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, amended by stat. 22 & 23 Vict.
c. 35, ss. 19, 20.

(v) Established by stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, amended by stat.
21 & 22 Vict. c. 95.

or it is not(w). Thus a house is corporeal, but the annual rent payable for its occupation is incorporeal. So an annuity is incorporeal; "for, though the money, which is the fruit or product of this annuity, is doubtless of a corporeal nature, yet the annuity itself, which produces that money, is a thing invisible, has only a mental existence, and cannot be delivered over from hand to hand" (x). Corporeal property, on the other hand, is capable of manual transfer; or, as to such as is immoveable, possession may actually be given up. Frequently the possession of corporeal property necessarily involves the enjoyment of certain incorporeal rights; thus the lord of a manor, which is corporeal property, may have the advowson or perpetual right of presentation to the parish church; and this advowson, which, being a mere right to present, is an incorporeal kind of property, may be appendant or attached, as it were, to the manor, and constantly belong to every owner. But, in many cases, property of an incorporeal nature exists apart from the ownership of any thing corporeal, forming a distinct subject of possession; and, as such, it may frequently be required to be transferred from one person to another. An instance of this separate kind of incorporeal property occurs in the case of an advowson or right of presentation to a church, when not appendant to any manor. In the transfer or conveyance of incor- The distinction poreal property, when thus alone and self-existent, for- was in the mode merly lay the practical distinction between it and corporeal property. For, in ancient times, the impossibility of actually delivering up any thing of a separate incorporeal nature, rendered some other means of conveyance necessary. The most obvious was writing; which was accordingly always employed for the purpose, and was considered indispensable to the separate transfer of every thing incorporeal (y); whilst the transfer of corporeal property, together with such incorporeal rights as its possession involved, was long permitted to take place without any written document (z). Incorporeal property, in our present highly artificial state of society, occupies an important position; and such kinds of incorporeal property as are of a real nature will hereafter be spoken of more at large. But for the present, let us give our undivided attention to property of a corporeal kind; and, as to this, the scope of our work embraces one branch only, namely, that which is real, and which, as we have seen, being descendible to heirs, is known in law by the name of hereditaments. Estates or interests in corporeal hereditaments, or what is commonly called landed property, will accordingly form our next subject for consideration.

(w) Bract. lib. 1, c. 12, par. 3; c. 1, sec. 4. lib. 2, c. 5, par. 7; Fleta, lib. 3, (x) 2 Black. Com. 20. of transfer.

(y) Co. Litt. 9 a.

(z) Co. Litt. 48 b, 121 b, 143 a, 271 b, n. (1).

(13)

PART L

OF CORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS.

-

BEFORE proceeding to consider the estates which may Terms of the be held in corporeal hereditaments or landed property, it is desirable that the legal terms made use of to designate such property should be understood; for the nomenclature of the law differs in some respects from that which is ordinarily employed. Thus a house is by A messuage. lawyers generally called a messuage; and the term messuage was formerly considered as of more extensive import than the word house (a). But such a distinction is not now to be relied on (b). Both the term messuage and house will comprise adjoining outbuildings, the orchard, and curtilage, or court yard, and, according to the better opinion, these terms will include the garden also(c). The word tenement is often used in law, as in ordinary Tenement. language, to signify a house: it is indeed the regular synonyme which follows the term messuage; a house being usually described in deeds as "all that messuage or tenement." But the more comprehensive meaning of the word tenement, to which we have before adverted (d). is still attached to it in legal interpretation, whenever the sense requires (e). Again, the word land comprehends Land.

(a) Thomas v. Lane, 3 Cha. Ca. 26; Keilw. 57.

(b) Doe d. Clements v. Collins, 2 T. Rep. 489, 502; 1 Jarman on Wills, 709, 1st ed.; 666, 2nd ed.; 740, 3rd ed.

(c) Shep. Touch, 94; Co. Litt. 5 b, n. (1); Lord Grosvenor v. Hampstead Junction Railway Company, 1 De Gex & Jones, 446; Cole v. West London and Crystal Palace Railway Company, 27 Beav. 242.

(d) Ante, p. 5. (e) 2 Black. Com. 16, 17, 59.

in law any ground, soil, or earth whatsoever (f); but its strict and primary import is arable land (g). It will, however, include castles, houses, and outbuildings of all kinds; for the ownership of land carries with it every thing both above and below the surface, the maxim being cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad cælum. A pond of water is accordingly described as land covered with water (h); and a grant of lands includes all mines and minerals under the surface (i). This extensive signification of the word land may, however, be controlled by the context; as where land is spoken of in plain contradistinction to houses, it will not be held to comprise them (h). So mines lying under a piece of land may be excepted out of a conveyance of such land, and they will then remain the corporeal property of the grantor, with such incidental powers as are necessary to work them (1), and subject to the incidental duty of leaving a sufficient support to the surface to keep it securely at its ancient and natural level (m). In the same manner, chambers may be the subjects of conveyance as corporeal property, independently of the floors above or below them (n). The word premises is frequently used in law in its proper etymological sense of that which has been before mentioned (o). Thus, after a recital of various facts in a deed, it frequently proceeds "in consideration of the premises," meaning in consideration of the facts

(f) Co. Litt. 4 a; Shep. Touch. 92; 2 Black. Com. 17; Cooke, dem. 4 Bing 90.

(g) Shep. Touch. 92.

(h) Co. Litt. 4 b.

(i) 2 Black. Com. 18.

(k) 1 Jarman on Wills, 707,
 1st ed.; 664, 2nd ed.; 738, 3rd ed.
 (l) Earl of Cardigan v. Armitage,

2 Barn. & Cress. 197, 211.
 (m) Humphries v. Brogden, 12

Q. B. 739; Smart v. Morton, 5 E.

& B. 30; Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H.
& N. 828; Rowbotham v. Wilson,
8 E. & B. 123; Bonomi v. Backhouse, E. B. & E. 622; Stroyan
v. Knowles, 6 H. & N. 454.

(n) Co. Litt. 48 b ; Shep. Touch. 206. See 12 Q. B. 757.

(o) Doe d. Biddulph v. Meakin, 1 East, 456; 1 Jarman on Wills, 707, 1st ed.; 665, 2nd ed.; 739, 3rd ed.

14

Mines.

Chambers.

Premises.

before mentioned; and property is seldom spoken of as premises, unless a description of it is contained in some prior part of the deed. Most of the words used in the description of property have however no special technical meaning, but are construed according to their usual sense (p); and, as to such words as have a technical import more comprehensive than their ordinary meaning, it is very seldom that such extensive import is alone relied on; but the meaning of the parties is generally explained by the additional use of ordinary words.

(p) As farm, meadow, pasture, &c.; Shep. Touch. 93, 94.

CHAPTER I.

OF AN ESTATE FOR LIFE.

IT seldom happens that any subject is brought frequently to a person's notice, without his forming concerning it opinions of some kind. And such opinions carelessly picked up are often carefully retained, though in many cases wrong, and in most inadequate. The subject of property is so generally interesting, that few persons are without some notions as to the legal rights appertaining to its possession. These notions, however, as entertained by unprofessional persons, are mostly of a wrong kind. They consider that what is a man's own is what he may do what he likes with; and with this broad principle they generally set out on such legal adventures as may happen to lie before them. They begin at a point at which the lawyer stops, or at which indeed the law has not yet arrived, nor ever will; but to which it is still continually approximating. Now the student of law must forget for a time that, if he has land, he may let it, or leave it by his will, or mortgage it, or sell it, or settle it. He must humble himself to believe that he knows as yet nothing about it; and he will find that the attainment of the ample power, which is now possessed over real property, has been the work of a long period of time; and that even now a common purchase deed of a piece of freehold land cannot be explained without going back to the reign of Henry VIII. (a), or an ordinary settlement of land without recourse to the laws of Edward I. (b).

(a) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, the Statute of Uses.

(b) Stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 1, De Donis Conditionalibus to which estates tail owe their origin. That such should be the case is certainly a matter of regret. History and antiquities are, no doubt, interesting and delightful studies in their place; but their perpetual intrusion into modern practice, and the absolute necessity of some acquaintance with them, give rise to much of the difficulty experienced in the study of the law, and to many of the errors of its less studious practitioners.

The first thing then the student has to do is to get Absolute rid of the idea of absolute ownership. Such an idea is quite unknown to the English law. No man is in law the absolute owner of lands. He can only hold an estate in them.

The most interesting, and perhaps the most ancient An estate for of estates, is an estate for life; and with this we shall begin. Soon after the commencement of the feudal system, to which, as we have seen, our laws of real property owe so much of their character, an estate for life seems to have been the smallest estate in conquered lands which the military tenant was disposed to accept(c). This estate was inalienable, unless his lord's consent could be obtained(d). A grant of lands to A. B. was then a grant to him as long as he could hold them, that is, during his life, and no longer(e); for feudal donations were not extended beyond the precise terms of the gift by any presumed intent, but were taken strictly(f); and, on the tenant's death, the lands re-

(c) Walk. Descents, 107 (113, 4th cd.); 1 Hallam's Middle Ages, 160. There seems no good reason to suppose that feuds were at any time held at will, as stated by Blackstone (2 Black. Com. 55), and by Butler (Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 4).

(d) Wright's Tenures, 29; 2 Black. Com. 57. (e) Bracton, lib. 2, fol. 92 b, par. 6.

(f) Wright's Tenures, 17, 152, Blackstone's reasons for the estate being for life—that it shall be construed to be as large an estate as the words of the donation will bear (2 Black. Com. 121)—is quite at variance with this rule of construction.

R.P.

verted to the lord or grantor. If it was intended that the descendants of the tenant should, at his decease, succeed him in the tenancy, this intention was expressed by additional words of grant; the gift being then to the tenant and his heirs, or with other words expressive of the intention. The heir was thus a nominee in the original grant; he took every thing from the grantor, nothing from his ancestor. So that, in such a case, "the ancestor and the heirs took equally as a succession of usufructuaries, each of whom during his life enjoyed the beneficial, but none of whom possessed, or could lawfully dispose of, the direct or absolute dominion of the property"(g). The feudal system, however, had not long been introduced into this country before the restriction on alienation began to be relaxed(h). Subsequently, by a statute of Edward I.(i), the right of every freeman to sell at his own pleasure his lands or tenements, or part thereof, was expressly recognized; at a still later period the power of testamentary alienation was bestowed (k), until, at the present day, the right to dispose of property is not only established, but has become inseparable from its possession(l). Moreover, the old feudal rule of strict construction has long since given way to the contrary maxim, that every grant is to be construed most strongly against the grantor(m). Yet so deeply rooted are the feudal principles of our law of real property, that, in the case before us, the ancient interpretation remains unaltered ; and a grant to A. B. simply now confers but an estate for his life(n), which

A grant to A.B. simply confers only a life estate.

> (g) Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 5; Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Wm. Black. 133.

> (h) Leg. Hen. I. 70, 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, 43, 44; Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 6.

(i) Stat. 18 Edw. I. c. 1.

(k) By stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, as to estates in fee simple, and by stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 12, as to estates held for the life of another person. See l Jarm. on Wills, 54, lst ed.; 49, 2nd ed.; 55, 3rd ed.

(1) Litt. sect. 360; Co. Litt. 223 a; Ware v. Cann, 10 Barn. & Cress. 433.

(m) Shep. Touch. 88.

(n) Litt. sect. 283; Co. Litt. 42 a; 2 Black. Com. 121; Lucas v. Brandreth, 28 Beav. 274. estate, though he may part with it if he pleases, will terminate at his death, into whosesoever hands it may have come.

The most remarkable effect of this antiquated rule has This rule has been its frequent defeat of the intentions of unlearned often defeated testators' intestators(o), who, in leaving their lands and houses to tentions. the objects of their bounty, were seldom aware that they were conferring only a life interest; though, if they extended the gift to the heirs of the parties, or happened to make use of the word estate, or some other such technical term, their gift or devise included the whole extent of the interest they had power to dispose of. "Generally speaking," says Lord Mansfield (p), "no common person has the smallest idea of any difference between giving a horse and a quantity of land. Common sense alone would never teach a man the difference; but the distinction, which is now clearly established, is this:-If the words of the testator denote only a description of the specific estate or land devised, in that case, if no words of limitation are added, the devisee has only an estate for life. But if the words denote the quantum of interest or property that the testator has in the lands devised, then the whole extent of such his interest passes by the gift to the devisee. The question, therefore, is always a question of construction, upon the words and terms used by the testator." Such questions, as may be imagined, have been sufficiently numerous. Happily by the act of parliament for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills(q), a construction more accordant with the plain intention of testators is now given in such cases.

(o) 2 Jarman on Wills, 170, (p) In Hogan v. Jackson, Cowp. 1st ed.; 219, 2nd ed.; 247, 3rd ed., 306. and the cases there cited. (q) 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 28. C 2

An estate pur autre vie.

If the owner of an estate for his own life should dispose thereof, the new owner will become entitled to an estate for the life of the former. This, in the Norman French, with which our law still abounds, is called an estate pur autre vie(r); and the person for whose life the land is holden is called the cestui que vie. In this case, as well as in that of an original grant, the new owner was formerly entitled only so long as he lived to enjoy the property, unless the grant were expressly extended to his heirs; so that, in case of the decease of the new owner, in the lifetime of the cestui que vie, the land was left without an occupant so long as the life of the latter continued, for the law would not allow him to re-enter after having parted with his life-estate(s). No person having therefore a right to the property, anybody might enter on the land; and he that first entered might lawfully retain possession so long as the cestui que vie lived(t). The person who had so entered was called a general occupant. If, however, the estate had been granted to a man and his heirs during the life of the cestui que vie, the heir might, and still may, enter and hold possession, and in such a case he is called in law a special occupant, having a special right of occupation by the terms of the grant (u). To remedy the evil occasioned by property remaining without an owner, it was provided by a clause in a famous statute passed in the reign of King Charles II.(v), that the owner of an estate pur autre vie might dispose thereof by his will; that if no such disposition should be made, the heir, as occupant, should be charged with the debts of his ancestor ; or, in case there should be no special occupant, (r) Litt. sect. 56.

(s) In very early times the law was otherwise. Bract. lib. ii. c. 9, fol. 27 a; lib. iv. tr. 3, c. 9, par. iv. fol. 263 a; Fleta, lib. iii. c. 12, s. 6; lib. v. c. 5, s. 15. (t) Co. Litt. 41 b; 2 Black. Com. 258.

(u) Atkinson v. Baker, 4 T. Rep. 229.

(v) The Statute of Frauds, 29 Car 11. c. 3, s. 12.

- General occupant
- Special occupant.
- Statute of Frauds.

it should go to his executors or administrators, and be subject to the payment of his debts, of course only during the residue of the life of the cestui que vie. In the construction of this enactment a question arose, whether or not, supposing the owner of an estate pur autre vie died without a will, the administrator was to be entitled for his own benefit, after paying the debts of the deceased. An explanatory act was accordingly passed in the reign of King George II. (x), by which the surplus, after payment of debts, was, in case of intestacy, made distributable amongst the next of kin, in the same manner as personal estate. By the New enactstatute (y) for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills, the above enactments have both been repealed, to make way for more comprehensive provisions to the same effect.

When one person has an estate for the life of another, Cestui que vie it is evidently his, interest that the cestui que vie, or he may be ordered to be produced. for whose life the estate is holden, should live as long as possible; and, in the event of his decease, a temptation might occur to a fraudulent owner to conceal his death. In order to prevent any such fraud, it is provided, by an act of parliament passed in the reign of Queen Anne(z), that any person having any claim in remainder, reversion or expectancy, may, upon affidavit that he hath cause to believe that the cestui que vie is dead, or that his death is concealed, obtain an order from the Lord Chancellor for the production of the cestui que vie in the method prescribed by the act; and, if such order be not complied with, then the cestui que vie shall be taken to be dead, and any person claiming (x) Stat. 14 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 9; see Co. Litt. 41 b, n. (5).

(y) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, ss. 3, 6.

(z) Stat. 6 Anne, c. 18, See

Ex parte Grant, 6 Ves. 512; Ex parte Whalley, 4 Russ. 561; Re Isaac, 4 Myl. & Craig, 18; Re Lingen, 12 Sim, 104.

ments.

any interest in remainder, or reversion or otherwise, may enter accordingly. The act, moreover, provides (a), that any person having any estate pur autre vie, who, after the determination of such estate, shall continue in possession of any lands, without the express consent of the persons next entitled, shall be adjudged a trespasser, and may be proceeded against accordingly.

A tenant for life—hath a freehold.

Estate during widowhood.

Natural life.

The owner of an estate for life is called a tenant for life, for he is only a holder of the lands according to the feudal principles of our law. A tenant, either for his own life, or for the life of another (pur autre vie), hath an estate of freehold, and he that hath a less estate cannot have a freehold (b). Here, again, the reason is feudal. A life estate is such as was considered worthy the acceptance of a free man; a less estate was not (c). And it is worthy of remark, that in the earlier periods of our law an estate for a man's own life was the only life estate considered of sufficient importance to be an estate of freehold: an estate for the life of another person was not then reckoned of equal rank (d). But this distinction has long since disappeared; and there are now some estates which may not even last a lifetime, but are yet considered in law as life estates, and are estates of freehold. Thus, an estate granted to a woman during her widowhood is in law a life estate, though determinable on her marrying again (e). Every life estate also may be determined by the civil death of the party, as well as by his natural death; for which reason in conveyances the grant is usually made for the term of a man's natural life (f). Formerly a person, by en-

 (a) Sect. 5.
 Fle

 (b) Litt. s. 57.
 c. 5

 (c) Watk. Desc. 108 (113, 4th
 (

 ed.); 2 Black. Com. 104.
 Com

 (d) Bract. lib. 2, c. 9, fol. 26 b;
 (

 lib. 4, tr. 3, c. 9, par. 3, fol. 263 a;
 Com

Fleta, lib. 3, c. 12, s. 6; lib. 5, c. 5, s. 15.

(e) Co. Litt. 42 a; 2 Black. Com. 121.

(f) Co. Litt. 132 a; 2 Black. Com. 121.

22

tering a monastery, and being professed in religion, became dead in law (g). But this doctrine is now inapplicable; for there is no longer any legal establishment for professed persons in England (h), and our law never took notice of foreign professions (i). Civil death may, however, occur by outlawry or attainder for treason or felony (j); in which cases only it appears that the insertion of the words "natural life" can now be of any importance (h).

Every tenant for life, unless restrained by covenant Timber. or agreement, has the common right of all tenants to cut wood for fuel to burn in the house, for the making and repairing of all instruments of husbandry, and for repairing the house, and the hedges and fences (l), and also the right to cut underwood and lop pollards in due course (m). But he is not allowed to cut timber, or to waste. commit any other kind of waste (n); either by voluntary destruction of any part of the premises, which is called voluntary waste, or by permitting the buildings to go to ruin, which is called permissive waste (o). Of late, however, doubts have been thrown on the liability of a tenant for life for waste which is merely permissive; and the Courts of Equity have refused to interfere in such cases (p). But there appears to be no sufficient

(g) 1 Black. Com. 132.

(h) Co. Litt. 3 b, n. (7), 132 b, n. (1); 1 Black. Com. 132; stat. 31 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 17; 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, ss. 28-37; 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 115, s. 4. See also Anstey's Guide to the Laws affecting Roman Catholics, pp. 24-27; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, s. 7; Re Metcalf's Will, M. R., 10 Jur., N. S. 224.

(i) Co. Litt. 132 b.

(j) 4 Black. Com. 319, 380.

(k) Watk. n. 123 to Gilb. Ten.

(1) Co. Litt. 41 b; 2 Black.

Com. 35, 122.

(m) Phillips v. Smith, 14 M. & W. 589. As to thinnings of young timber, see Pidgeley v. Rawling, 2 Coll. 275; Bagot v. Bagot, 32 Beav. 509, 518, qu.?

(n) Co. Litt. 53 a; Whitfield
v. Bewit, 2 P. Wms. 241; 2 Black.
Com. 122, 281; 3 Black. Com. 224.

(o) Co. Litt. 53 a.

(p) Powys v. Blagrave, 4 De Gex, M. & G. 448, 458; Warren v. Rudall, 1 John. & Hem. 1. ground for doubting the tenant's liability in a court of law (q). So a tenant for life cannot plough up ancient meadow land (r); and he is not allowed to dig for gravel, brick, or stone, except in such pits as were open and usually dug when he came in (s); nor can he open new mines for coal or other minerals, nor cut turf for sale on bog lands; for all such acts would be acts of voluntary waste. But to continue the working of existing mines, or to cut turf for sale in bogs already used for that purpose, is not waste; and the tenant may accordingly carry on such mines and cut turf in such bogs for his own profit (t). By an old statute (u) the committing of any act of waste was a cause of forfeiture of the thing or place wasted, in case a writ of waste was issued against the tenant for life. But this writ is now abolished (v); and a tenant for life is now liable only to damages in an action at law or suit in equity (w) for waste already done, or to be restrained by an injunction obtained by a suit in equity from cutting the timber or committing any other act of waste, which he may be known to contemplate. And where an action at law has been brought a writ of injunction may now be obtained, from the court of law in which the action has been brought, against the repetition or continuance of the injury (x). If any of the timber is in such an advanced state that it would take injury by standing, the Court of Chancery will allow it to be cut, on the money being secured for the benefit of the persons entitled on the expiration of the life estate; and the Court will allow the interest of

(9) Yellowly	\mathbf{v}_{\star}	Gower,	11	Ex.
271,	293.

(r) Simmons v. Norton, 7 Bing.
618. See Dake of St. Albans v.
S ipwith, 8 Beav. 354.

(s) Co. Lutt. 53 b; Viner v. Vaughan, 2 Beav. 466.

(1) Co. Litt. 51 b; Coppinger v. Gubbins, 3 Jones & Lat. 397. (u) The Statute of Gloucester, 6 Edw. I. e. 5; 2 Black. Com.
283; Co. Litt. 218 b, n. (2).

(v) By stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, s. 36.

(w) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, ss. 2, 3.

(x) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 79.

Writ of waste now abolished.

the money to be paid to the tenant during his life (y). And the act to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates (z) now empowers the Court of Chancery, if it think proper, to authorize a sale of any timber, not being ornamental timber, growing on any settled estates. If, however, the estate is given to the tenant by a Without imwritten instrument (a) expressly declaring his estate to peachment of be without impeachment of waste, he is allowed to cut timber in a husbandlike manner for his own benefit, to open mines, and commit other acts of waste with impunity (b); but so that he does not pull down or deface the family mansion, or fell timber planted or left standing for ornament, or commit other injuries of the like nature; all of which are termed equitable waste; for the Equitable Court of Chancery, administering equity, will restrain such proceedings (c).

As a tenant for life has merely a limited interest, he Leases by cannot of course make any disposition of the lands to take effect after his decease; and, consequently, he can make no leases to endure beyond his own life, unless he be specially empowered so to do by the deed under which he holds. It is however provided by the recent New enactact to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates (d), that

(y) Tooker v. Annesley, 5 Sim. 235; Waldo v. Waldo, 7 Sim. 261; 12 Sim. 107; Tollemache v. Tollemache, 1 Hare, 456; Consett v. Bell, 1 You. & Coll. New Cases, 569; Gent v. Harrison, Johnson, 517.

(z) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 11.

(a) Dowman's case, 9 Rep. 10 b. (b) Lewis Bowle's case, 11 Rep. 82 b; 2 Black. Com. 283; Burges v. Lamb, 16 Ves. 185; Cholmeley v. Paston, 3 Bing. 211; 10 Barn. & Cress. 564; Davies v. Wescomb, 2 Sim. 425; Woolf v. Hill, 2 Swanst. 149; Waldo v. Waldo, 12 Sim. 107.

(c) 1 Fonb. Eq. 33, n.; Marquis of Downshire v. Lady Sandys, 6 Ves. 107; Burges v. Lamb, 16 Ves. 183; Day v. Merry, 16 Ves. 375 a; Wellesley v. Wellesley, 6 Sim. 497; Duke of Leeds v. Earl Amherst, 2 Phil. 147; Morris v. Morris, 15 Sim. 505; 3 De Gex & Jones, 323; Micklethwait v. Micklethwait, 1 De Gex & Jones, 501.

(d) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77.

waste.

tenant for life.

ment.

when the instrument by which the estate is limited(e)is made after that act came in force, which was on the 1st of November, 1856(f), and does not contain an express declaration to the contrary, every tenant for life may demise the premises or any part thereof (except the principal mansion-house and the demesnes thereof, and other lands usually occupied therewith) for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, to take effect in possession; provided that every such demise be made by deed, and the best rent that can reasonable be obtained be thereby reserved, without any fine or other benefit in the nature of a fine, which rent shall be incident to the immediate reversion; and provided that such demise be not made without impeachment of waste, and do contain a covenant for payment of the rent, and such other usual and proper covenants as the lessor shall think fit, and also a condition of re-entry on nonpayment, for a period of not less than twenty-eight days, of the rent thereby reserved, and on non-observance of any of the covenants or conditions therein contained; and provided a counterpart of every deed of lease be exccuted by the lesse (q). But the execution of the lease by the lessor is to be deemed sufficient evidence that a counterpart of such lease has been duly executed by the lessee as required by the act(h). Leases may also be made by the authority of the Court of Chancery, on due application, whatever may be the date of the settlement, for terms not exceeding twenty-one years for an agricultural or occupation lease, forty years for a mining lease, or a lease of water, water mills, wayleaves, waterleaves, or other rights or easements, sixty years for a repairing lease (i), and ninety-nine years for a building lease, subject to the conditions prescribed by the act (i).

(e) Sect. I.
(f) Sects. 44, 46.
(g) Sect. 32.
(h) Sect. 34.

(i) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, s. 2.

(j) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 2, amended by stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 45.

Sic.

And where the Court shall be satisfied that it is the usual custom of the district, and beneficial to the inheritance, to grant leases for longer terms, any of the above leases, except agricultural leases, may be granted for such term as the Court shall direct (k).

If previously to the year 1845 a tenant for his own Forfeiture by life should have conveyed the lands by a fcoffment (to feoffment. be hereafter explained) to another person for any greater estate than the life of the tenant for life, such an act would have been a cause of forfeiture to the person next entitled (1). If, however, the tenant for life should sow Emblements. the lands, and die before harvest, his executors will have a right to the emblements or $\operatorname{crop}(m)$. And the same right will also belong to his under-tenant; with this difference, however, that if the life estate should determine by the tenant's own act, as by the marriage of a widow holding during her widowhood, the tenant would have no right to emblements; but the undertenant, being no party to the cesser of the estate, would still be entitled in the same manner as on the expiration of the estate by death (n). And with respect to tenants New enactat rack rent, it is now provided (o), that where the lease ment as to tenants at or tenancy of any farm or lands held by such a tenant rack rent. shall determine by the death or cesser of the estate of any landlord entitled for his life, or for any other uncertain interest, instead of claims to emblements, the tenant shall continue to hold and occupy such farm or lands until the expiration of the then current year of his tenancy, and shall then quit upon the terms of his lease or holding, in the same manner as if such lease or tenancy were then determined by effluxion of time, or

(k) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, s. 4.

(1) 2 Black. Com. 274. See stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 7; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4.

Graves v. Weld, 5 Barn. & Adol. 105.

(n) 2 Black. Com. 123, 124.

(o) Stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, s. 1.

(m) 2 Black. Com. 122; see other lawful means, during the continuance of his landlord's estate; and the succeeding owner will be entitled to a fair proportion of the rent from the death or cesser of the estate of his predecessor to the time of the tenant's so quitting. And the succeeding owner and the tenant respectively will, as between themselves and as against each other, be entitled to all the benefits and advantages, and be subject to the terms, conditions and restrictions to which the preceding landlord and the tenant respectively would have been entitled and subject in ease the lease or tenancy had determined in the manner before mentioned at the expiration of the current year; and no notice to quit shall be necessary from either party to determine such holding.

Apportionment of rent.

As a consequence of the determination of the estate of a tenant for life the moment of his death, it was held in old times, that if such a tenant had let the lands reserving rent quarterly or half-yearly, and died between two rent days, no rent was due from the under-tenant to anybody from the last rent day till the time of the decease of the tenant for life. But in modern times a remedy for a proportionate part of the rent, according to the time such tenant for life lived, has been given by act of parliament to his executors or administrators (p). Formerly also, when a tenant for life had a power of leasing, and let the lands accordingly, reserving rent periodically, his executors had no right to a proportion of the rent, in the event of his decease between two quarter days; and, as rent is not due till midnight of the day on which it is made payable, if the tenant for life had died even on the quarter day, but before midnight, his executors lost the quarter's rent, which went to the

(p) Stat. 11 Geo. 1I. c. 19, s. Smyth, 1 Swanst. 337, and the 15, explained by stat. 4 & 5 Will. learned editor's note.
1V. c. 22, s. 1. See Ex parte person next entitled (q). But by a modern act of parliament (r), the executors and administrators of any tenant for life who has granted a lease since the 16th of June, 1834, the date of the act, may claim an apportionment of the rent from the person next entitled, when it shall become due.

By a recent act of parliament(s) tenants for life, and Draining. some other persons having limited interests, are empowered to apply to the Court of Chancery for leave to make any permanent improvements by draining the lands with tiles, stones or other durable materials, or by warping, irrigation, or embankment in a permanent manner, or by erecting thereon any buildings of a permanent kind incidental or consequential to such draining, warping, irrigation or embanking, and immediately connected therewith (t). And if, in the opinion of the Court, such improvements will be beneficial to all persons interested (u), the money expended in making such improvements, or in obtaining the authority of the Court, will be charged on the inheritance of the lands, with interest at such rate as shall be agreed on, not exceeding five per cent. per annum, payable half yearly (x); the principal money to be repaid by equal annual instalments, not less than twelve nor more than eighteen in number; or in the case of buildings, by equal annual instalments, not less than fifteen nor more than twentyfive in number (y). And under the provisions of more Government advances for draining.

(q) Norris v. Harrison, 2 Mad. 268.

(r) Stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 22, s. 2; Lock v. De Burgh, 4 De Gex & Smale, 470; Plummer v. Whiteley, Johnson, 585. As to tenants from year to year, see Cattley v. Arnold, V. C. W., 5 Jur., N. S. 361; 7 W. Rep. 245; 1 Johns. & Hem. 651. (s) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56, repealing a prior act for the same purpose, stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 55.

- (t) Sect. 3.
- (u) Sects. 4, 5.
- (x) Sect. 8.
- (y) Sect. 9.

Private Money Drainage Act, 1849, now repealed.

Improvement of Land Act, 1864.

recent acts of parliament (z), called the Public Money Drainage Acts, tenants for life and other owners of land may obtain advances from government for works of drainage, which may be completed within five years (a); such advances to be repaid by a rent-charge on the land, after the rate of 61. 10s. rent-charge for every 1001. advanced, and to be payable for the term of twenty-two years (b). By another act of parliament, called the Private Money Drainage Act, 1849 (c), the owner of any land in Great Britain or Ireland was empowered to borrow or advance money for the improvement of such land by works of drainage, such money, with interest not exceeding five per cent. per annum, to be charged on the inheritance of the land, in the shape of a rentcharge, for the term of twenty-two years. This Act, however, is now repealed by the Improvement of Land Act, 1864(d), which gives a very wide definition to the phrase "improvement of land," and contains provisions for facilitating the raising of money by way of rent-charge for that purpose. The rate of interest to be charged is not to exceed five per cent. per annum, and the term for repayment is not to exceed twentyfive years (e). These loans are under the superintendence of the Inclosure Commissioners for England and Wales, and in Ireland under that of the Commissioners for Public Works in Ireland. But the authority to issue certificates of the redemption of the loans of public money belongs to the Board of Inland Re-Other improve- venue (f). In all other respects, improvements which

ments.

(z) Stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101, explained and amended by stats. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 11, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 119, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 31, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 9.

(a) Stat. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 11, 8. 7.

(b) Stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101,

s. 34.

(c) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 100, amended by stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 9.

(d) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 114.

(e) Sect. 26.

(f) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 9, s. 10.

a tenant for life may wish to make must be paid for out of his own pocket (q).

Tenants for life under wills are empowered, by recent Conveyance. acts of parliament, to convey in certain cases, under the direction of the Court of Chancery, the whole estate in the lands of which they are tenants for life. Such conveyances are made only when the concurrence of the other parties cannot be obtained, and a sale or mortgage of the lands is required for the payment of the debts of the testator (h). These powers, however, are given to the tenant for life for the sake of making a title to the property; and are more for the benefit of the creditors of the late testator, than for the advantage of the tenant for life, who is, in these cases, merely the instrument for carrying into effect the decree of the Court; and the powers given by these acts are now in a great measure superseded by the provisions of the act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the conveyance and transfer of real and personal property vested in mortgagees and trustees (i). More recently, however, an Sale of settled act has been passed, to which we have already referred (k), to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates (l). Under this act, if the Court of Chancery should deem it proper and consistent with a due regard for the interest of all parties entitled, a sale of any settled estate may be ordered to be made. And the money to be raised on any such sale is to be paid either to trustees of whom the Court shall approve, or into Court, and is to be ap-

(g) Nairn v. Majoribanks, 3 Russ. 582; Hibbert v. Cooke, 1 Sim. & Stu. 552; Caldecott v. Brown, 2 Hare, 144; Horlock v. Smith, 17 Beav. 572; Dunne v. Dunne, 7 De Gex, M. & G. 267. (h) Stat. 11 Geo. 1V. & 1

Will. IV. c. 47, s. 12; 2 & 3 Vict.

c. 60.

- (i) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 29.
 - (k) Ante, pp. 25, 26.

(1) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 45.

plied to the following purposes, namely, the redemption of the land tax, or of any incumbrance affecting the hereditaments sold or any other hereditaments settled in the same way, or the purchase of other hereditaments to be settled in the same manner, or in the payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled (m). And the money is in the meantime to be invested in Exchequer Bills or Consols, and the interest or dividends paid to the tenant for life (n). But the powers of the act are not to be exercised if an express declaration or manifest intention that they shall not be exercised is contained in the settlement, or may reasonably be inferred therefrom or from extrinsic circumstances or evidence (o).

In addition to estates for life expressly created by the acts of the parties, there are certain life interests, created by construction and operation of law, possessed by husbands and wives in each other's land. These interests will be spoken of in a future chapter. There are also certain other life estates held by persons subject to peculiar laws; such as the life estates held by beneficed clergymen. These estates are exceptions from the general law; and a discussion of them, in an elementary work like the present, would tend rather to confuse the student than to aid him in his grasp of those general principles, which it should be his first object to comprehend.

(m) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, (n) Sect. 25. s. 23. (o) Sect. 26.

CHAPTER II.

OF AN ESTATE TAIL.

THE next estate we shall notice is an estate tail, or an Estate tail. estate given to a man and the heirs of his body. This is such an estate as will, if left to itself, descend, on the decease of the first owner, to all his lawful issue,children, grand-children, and more remote descendants, so long as his posterity endures,—in a regular order and course of descent from one to another : and, on the other hand, if the first owner should die without issue, his estate, if left alone, will then determine. An estate General or tail may be either general, that is, to the heirs of his special. body generally and without restriction, in which case the estate will be descendible to every one of his lawful posterity in due course; or special, when it is restrained to certain heirs of his body, and does not go to all of them in general; thus, if an estate be given to a man and the heirs of his body by a particular wife; here none can inherit but such as are his issue by the wife specified. Estates tail may be also in tail male, or in Male or fetail female: an estate in tail male cannot descend to any male. but males, and male descendants of males; and cannot, consequently, belong to any one who does not bear the surname of his ancestor from whom he inherited: so an estate in tail female can only descend to females, and female descendants of females (a). Special estates tail, confined to the issue by a particular wife, are not now common: the most usual kinds of estates tail now given are estates in tail general, and in tail male. Tail female scarcely ever occurs.

(a) Litt. ss. 13, 14, 15, 16, 21; 2 Black. Com. 113, 114. R.P. D

The owner of an estate tail is called a donee in tail. Donee in tail. and the person who has given him the estate tail is called the donor. And here it may be remarked, that such correlative words as donor and donee, lessor and lessee, and many others of a like termination, are used in law to distinguish the person from whom an act proceeds, from the person for or towards whom it is done. The owner of an estate tail is also called a tenant in tail. Tenant in tail. for he is as much a holder as a tenant for life. But an estate tail is a larger estate than an estate for life, as it may endure so long as the first owner of the estate has any issue of the kind mentioned in the gift. It is con-An estate tail sequently an estate of freehold. We shall now proceed is a freehold. to give a short history of this estate; in doing which it will be necessary to advert to the origin and progress of the general right of alienation of lands.

Feudal tenancies become hereditary.

It will readily be supposed that a mere system of life estates, continually granted by feudal lords to their tenants, would not long continue; the son of the tenant would naturally be the first person who would hope to succeed to his father's tenancy: accordingly we find that the holding of lands by feudal tenants soon became hereditary, permission being granted to the heirs of the tenant to succeed on the decease of their ancestor. By the term "heirs" it is said that the issue of the tenant were at first only meant; collateral relations, such as brothers and cousins, being excluded (b); the true feudal reason of this construction is stated by Blackstone to be, that what was given to a man for his personal service and personal merit ought not to descend to any but the heirs of his person (c). But in our own country it appears that, at any rate in the time of Henry II. (d), collateral relations were admitted to succeed as heirs:

- (b) Wright's Tenures, 18.
- (c) 2 Black. Com. 221.

(d) 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, 108.

so that an estate which had been granted to a man and his heirs descended, on his decease, not only to his offspring, but also, in default of offspring, to his other relations in a defined order of succession. Hence if it were wished to confine the inheritance to the offspring of the donee, it became necessary to limit the estate expressly to him and the heirs of his body (e), making To the donee what was then called a conditional gift, by reason of the and the heirs of his body. condition implied in the donation, that if the donee died A conditional without such particular heirs, or in case of the failure of gift. such heirs at any future time, the land should revert to the donor (f). The most usual species of grant appears, however, to have been that to a man and his heirs generally; but, as the right of alienation seems to have arisen in the same manner with regard to estates granted in both the above methods, it will be desirable, in considering the origin of this right, to include in our remarks as well an estate granted to a man and his heirs, as an estate confined to the heirs of the body of the grantee.

In whichever method the estate might have been Two other pargranted, it is evident that, besides the tenant, there were the expectant two other parties interested in the lands; one, the person heir and the who was the expectant heir of the tenant, and who had, under the gift, a hope of succeeding his ancestor in the holding of the lands; the other, the lord, who had made the grant, and who had a right to the services reserved during the continuance of the tenancy, and also a possibility of again obtaining the lands on the failure of the heirs mentioned in the gift. An alienation of the lands by the tenant might therefore, it is evident, defeat the rights of one or both of the above parties. Let us, therefore, consider, in the first place, the origin and progress of the right of alienation as it affected the interest ties interested, lord.

⁽e) Bracton, lib. 2, cap. 6, fol. 290 b, n. (1), V. 1. 17 b; cap. 19, fol. 47 a; Co. Litt.

⁽f) 2 Black. Com. 110.

of the expectant heir; and, secondly, the origin and progress of this right as it affected the interest of the lord.

R ht of alienation as against the beir.

The right of an ancestor to defeat the expectation of his heir was not fully established at the time of Henry II. For it appears from the treatise of Glanville, written in that reign (g), that a larger right of alienation was possessed over lands which a man had acquired by purchase. than over those which had descended to him as the heir of some deceased person: and even over purchased lands the right of alienation was not complete, if the tenant had any heir of his own body(h); so that if lands had been given to a man and his heirs generally, he was able to disappoint the expectation of his collateral heirs, but he could not entirely disinherit the heirs sprung of his own body. For certain purposes, however, alienation of part of the lands was allowed to defeat the heirs of his body; thus part of the lands might be given by the tenant with his daughter on her marriage, and part might also be given for religious uses (i). Such gifts as these were, however, as we shall presently see, almost the only kinds of alienation, in ancient times, which occasioned any serious detriment to the heir; and the allowing of such gifts may accordingly be considered as an important step in the progress of the right of alienation. For, when lands were given to a daughter on her marriage, the daughter and her husband, or the donees in frank-marriage, as they were called, held the lands granted, to them and the heirs of their two bodies free from all manuer of service to the donor or his heirs (a mere oath of fealty or fidelity excepted), until the fourth degree of consanguinity from the donor was passed (k); and when lands were given to religious uses, the grantees in frankalmoign, as they were called, were for ever free

(g) 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, (i) Glanville, lib. 7, c. 1; 1 Reeves's Hist. 104. (h) Ibid. 105.

Frank-marri e.

Fra kalmoign.

(k) Litt. sects. 17, 19, 20.

from every kind of earthly or temporal service (1). Little or nothing, therefore, in these cases, remained for the heir of the grantor. But the other modes of alienation Other modes which then prevailed were very different in their results, as well from such gifts as above described, as from the ordinary sales of landed property which occur in modern times. Ready money was then extremely scarce; large fortunes, acquired by commercial enterprise, were not then expended in the purchase of country seats. The auction mart was not then established; such a thing as an absolute sale for a sum of money paid down was scarcely to be met with. The alienation of lands rather assumed the form of perpetual leases, granted in consideration of certain services or rents to be from time to time performed or paid. This method was, in feudal language, termed subinfeudation. In all the old convey- Subinfeudaances, almost without exception, the lands are given to tion. the grantee and his heirs, to hold as tenants of the grantor and his heirs, at certain rents or services(m); and when no particular service was reserved, it was understood that the grantee held of the grantor, subject to the same services as the grantor held of his superior lord (n). As, therefore, it cannot be supposed that gifts should be made without some fair equivalent, and as such equivalent, in the shape of rent or service, would

(1) Litt. sect. 135.

(m) All the forms of feotfments given in Madox's Formulare Anglicannm, with the exception of Nos. 318 and 325, are in this form. No. 318 is a gift in frankalmoign, and was afterwards confirmed by the son of the grantor (see title, Confirmation, No. 119); and No. 325 appears to have been a family transaction between a father and his son. The curious questions mentioned in Glanville (lib. 7, c. 1) as to the descent of lands which had been granted by a father to one of his younger sons, or by a brother to his younger brother, clearly show that grants of land were then made by subinfeudation. Mr. Reeves's observation (1 Hist. Eng. Law, 106, n. (m)), that the reservation of services was most commonly made to the feoffor, appears to be scarcely strong enough.

(n) Perkins's Profitable Book, sects. 529, 653.

of alienation.

descend to the heir in lieu of the land, we may fairly presume that alienation, as ordinarily practised in early times, was not so great a disadvantage to the heir as might at first be supposed : and this circumstance may perhaps help to account for that which at any rate is an undoubted fact, that the power of an ancestor to destroy the expectation of his heirs, whether merely collateral or heirs of his body, soon became absolute. In whichever way the grant were made, whether to the ancestor and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, we find that by the time of Henry III. the heir was completely in his ancestor's power, so far as related to any lands of which the ancestor had possession. Bracton, who wrote in this reign, expressly lays it down, that the heir acquires nothing from the gift made to his ancestor (o). The very circumstance that land was given to a person and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, enabled him to convey an interest in the land, to last as long as his heirs in the one case, or the heirs of his body in the other, continued to exist. And from the time of Bracton, a gift to a man and his heirs generally has enabled the grantee, either entirely to defeat the expectation of his heir by an absolute conveyance, or to prejudice his enjoyment of the descended lands by obliging him to satisfy any debts or demands, to the value of the lands, according to his ancestor's discretion. With respect to lands granted to a man and the heirs of his body, the power of the ancestor is not now so complete. The means by which this right of alienation was in this case curtailed will appear in the account we shall now give of the origin and progress of the right of alienation as it affected the interest of the lord.

Alienation as affecting the i t rests of the 1 rd. The interest of the lord was evidently of two kinds;

(o) Bracton, lib. 2, cap. 6, fol.
 17 a. Nihil acquirit ex donatione facta antecessori, quia cum donatorio non est feoffatus.

The power of the ancestor over the expectations of his heirs becon.cs absolute.

his interest in the rent and services during the continuance of the tenancy, and his chance or possibility of again obtaining the land on failure of the heirs of his tenant. On the former of these interests, the inroad of Interest of the alienation appears to have been first made. The tenants, and services by taking upon themselves to make grants of part of their first affected. lands to strangers to hold of themselves, prejudiced the security possessed by the lord for the due performance of the services of the original tenure. And accordingly we find it enacted in Magna Charta (p), that no freeman should give or sell any more of his land than so as what remained might be sufficient to answer the services he owed to his lord. The original services reserved on any conveyance were, however, always a charge on the laud while in the hands of the undertenants, and could be distrained for by the lord(q); although the enforcement of such services was doubtless rendered less easy by the division of the lands into various ownerships. The in- Infringement fringement on the lord's interest, expectant on the failure on the lord's interest expecof the heirs of his tenant, appears to have been the last tant on failure step in the progress of alienation. As the advantages of of heirs. a free power of disposition became apparent, a new form of grant came into general use. The lands were given not only to the tenant and his heirs, but to him and his heirs, or to whomsoever he might wish to give or assign the land (r), or with other words expressly conferring on the tenant the power of alienation (s). In this case, if the tenant granted, or underlet as it were, part of his land, then, on his decease and failure of his heirs, the tenant's grantee had still a right to continue to hold as tenant of the superior lord; and such superior lord then

(p) Chap. 32.

(q) Perkins's Profitable Book, sect. 674.

(r) Bract. lib. 2, c. 6, fol. 17 b.

(s) Madox's Formulare Anglicanum, Preliminary Dissertation, p. 5. The tendency towards the alienation of lands was perhaps fostered by the spirit of crusading; see 1 Watkins on Copyholds, pp. 149, 150.

took the place of landlord, which the original tenant or his heirs would have occupied had he or they been living(t). And if the tenant, instead of thus underletting part of his land, chose to dispose of the whole, he was at liberty so to do, by substituting, if he thought fit, a new tenant in his own place (u). Grants of lands with liberty of alienation, as they became more frequent, appear in process of time to have furnished the rule by which all grants were construed. During the long and feeble reign of Henry III. this change to the disadvantage of the lord appears to have taken place; for at the beginning of the next reign it seems to have been established that, in whatever form the grant were made, the fact of the existence of an expectant heir enabled the tenant to alienate, not only as against his heirs, but also as against the lord. If therefore lands were given to a man and his heirs, he could at once dispose of them (x); and if lands were granted to a man and the heirs of his body, he was able, the moment he had issue born-that is, the moment he had an expectant heir of the kind mentioned in the gift-to alienate the lands. And the alience and his heirs had a right to hold, not only during the existence of the issue, but also after their failure (y). The original intention of such gifts was therefore in a great measure defeated; originally, on failure of the issue the lands reverted to the donor; but now nothing was requisite but the mere birth of issue to give the donee a complete power of disposition.

The mere existence of an expectant heir having thus

(1) Bract. ubi sup.

(u) See stat. 4 Edw. I. c. 6.

(x) Perk. sec. 667-670; Co. Litt. 43 a. If a tenant of a condutional fee had a right of alienation on having issue born, surely a tenant in fee simple must have had at least an equal right. See however Co. Litt. 43 a, n. (2); Wright's Tenures, 155, note.

(y) Fitzherbert's Abr. title Formedon, 62, 65; Britton, 93 b, 94 a; Plowd. Comm. 246; 2 Inst. 333; Co. Litt. 19 a; Year Book, 43 Edw. 111. 3 a, pl. 13.

The fact of the existence of an expectant heir enables the tenant to alienate.

grown up into a reason for alienation, the barons of the time of Edw. I. began to feel how small was the possibility, that the lands, which they had granted by conditional gifts(z) to their tenants and the heirs of their bodies, should ever revert to themselves again; whilst at the same time they perceived the power of their own families weakened by successive alienations. To remedy these evils, and to keep up that feudal system, which landlords ever held in high esteem, but on which the necessities of society ever made silent yet sure encroaches, it was enacted in the reign of Edw. I. by the famous statute De Donis Conditionalibus (a),-and no Statute De doubt as was then thought finally enacted,-that the Donis. will of the donor, according to the form in the deed of gift manifestly expressed, should be from thenceforth observed; so that they, to whom the tenement was given, should have no power to alien it, whereby it should fail to remain unto their own issue after their death, or to revert unto the donor or his heirs, if issue should fail.

Since the passing of this statute, an estate given to Fee tail. a man and the heirs of his body has been always called an estate tail, or, more properly, an estate in fee tail (feudum talliatum). The word fee (feudum) anciently meant any estate feudally held of another person (b); but its meaning is now confined to estates of inheritance, that is, to estates which may descend to heirs; so that a fee may now be said to mean an inheritance (c). The word tail is derived from the French word tailler, to cut, the inheritance being, by the statute De Donis, cut

(z) Ante, p. 35.

(a) Stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 1, called also the Statute of Westminster the Second.

(b) Bracton, lib. 4, fol. 263 b, par. 6; Selden, Tit. of Honour, part 2, c. 1, s. 23, p. 332; Wright's Tenures, p. 5.

(c) Litt. s. 1; Co. Litt. 1 b. 2 a; Wright's Tenures, p. 149. 41 but though an estate tail still bears a name indicative of a restriction of the inheritance from any interruption in its course of perpetual descent from father to son, we shall find that in fact the right to establish such exclusive perpetual descent has long since been abolished. When the statute began to operate, the inconvenience Inconvenience of the strict entails, created under its authority, became of strict entails. sensibly felt : children, it is said, grew disobedient when they knew they could not be set aside; farmers were deprived of their leases; creditors were defrauded of their debts; and innumerable latent entails were produced to deprive purchasers of the land they had fairly bought ; treasons also were encouraged, as estates tail were not liable to forfeitures longer than for the tenant's life (e). The nobility, however, would not consent to a repeal, which was many times attempted by the commons(f), and for about two hundred years the statute remained in force. At length the power of alienation was once more introduced, by means of a quiet decision of the judges, in a case which occurred in the twelfth year of the reign of King Edward IV. (q). In this case, Tallarum's case, entails called Taltarum's case, the destruction of an entail was destroyed. accomplished by judicial proceedings collusively taken against a tenant in tail for the recovery of the lands entailed. Such proceedings were not at that period quite unknown to the English law, for the monks had previously hit upon a similar device, for the purpose of evading the statutes of Mortmain, by which open conveyances of lands to their religious houses had been prohibited; and this device they had practised with considerable success till restrained by act of parliament (h).

(d) Litt. s. 18; Co. Litt. 18 b,
327 a, n. (2); Wright's Tenures,
187; 2 Black. Com. 112.
(e) 2 Black. Com. 116.
(f) Cruise on Recoveries.

(g) Taltarum's case, Year Book, 12 Edw. IV. 19.

(h) Statute of Westminster the Second, 13 Edw. I. c. 32; 2 Black. Com. 271. In the case of which we are now speaking, the law would not allow the entail to be destroyed simply by the recovery of the lands entailed, by a friendly plaintiff on a fictitious title; this would have been too barefaced; and in such a case the issue of the tenant, claiming under the gift to him in tail, might have recovered the lands by means of a writ of formedon(i), so called because they Formedon. claimed per formam doni, according to the form of the gift, which the statute had declared should be observed. The alienation of the lands entailed was effected in a more circuitous mode, by judicial sanction being given to the following proceedings, which afterwards came into frequent and open use, and had some little show of justice to the issue, though without any of its reality. The A recovery. tenant in tail, on the collusive action being brought, was allowed to bring into Court some third person, presumed to have been the original grantor of the estate tail. The tenant then alleged that this third person had warranted Warranty. the title; and accordingly begged that he might defend the title which he had so warranted. This third person was accordingly called on; who, in fact, had had nothing to do with the matter; but, being a party in the scheme, he admitted the alleged warranty, and then allowed judgment to go against him by default. Whereupon judgment was given for the demandant or plaintiff, to recover the lands from the tenant in tail; and the tenant in tail had judgment empowering him to recover a recompence in lands of equal value from the defaulter, who had thus cruelly failed in defending his title(k). If any such lands had been recovered under the judgment, they would have been held by the tenant for an estate tail, and would have descended to the issue, in lieu of those which were lost by the warrantor's default(l). But the defaulter, on whom the burden was

(i) Litt. ss. 688, 690.
 (k) Co. Litt. 361 b; 2 Black.
 (l) 2 Black. Com. 360.

thus east, was a man who had no lands to give, some man of straw, who could easily be prevailed on to undertake the responsibility; and, in later times, the crier of the Court was usually employed. So that, whilst the issue had still the judgment of the Court in their favour, unfortunately for them it was against the wrong person ; and virtually their right was defeated, and the estate tail was said to be barred. Not only were the issue barred of their right, but the donor, who had made the grant, and to whom the lands were to revert on failure of issue, had his reversion barred at the same time (m). So also all estates which the donor might have given to other persons, expectant on the decease of the tenant in tail without issue, (and which estates are called remainders expectant on the estate tail,) were equally barred. The demandant, in whose favour judgment was given, became possessed of an estate in fee simple in the lands; an estate the largest allowed by law, and bringing with it the fullest powers of alienation, as will be hereafter explained: and the demandant, being a friend of the tenant in tail, of course disposed of the estate in fee simple according to his wishes.

Such a piece of solemn juggling could not long have held its ground, had it not been supported by its substantial benefit to the community; but, as it was, the progress of events tended only to make that certain which at first was questionable; and proceedings on the principle of those above related, under the name of suffering common recoveries, maintained their ground, and long continued in common use as the undoubted privilege of every tenant in tail. The right to suffer a common recovery was considered as the inseparable incident of an estate tail, and every attempt to restrain

(m) 2 Black. Com. 360; Cruise on Recoveries, 258.

Email barred.

The reversion barred.

And remainders.

Common recoveries. this right was held void (n). Complex, however, as the proceedings above related may appear, the ordinary forms of a common recovery in later times were more complicated still. The lands were in the first place conveyed, by a deed called the recovery deed, to a person against whom the action was to be brought, and who was called the tenant to the pracipe or writ (o). The Tenant to the proceedings then took place in the Court of Common præcipe. Pleas, which had an exclusive jurisdiction in all real actions. A regular writ was issued against the tenant to the præcipe by another person, called the demandant; Demandant. the tenant in tail was then required by the tenant to the præcipe to warrant his title according to a supposed engagement for that purpose; this was called vouching Vouching to the tenant in tail to warranty. The tenant in tail, on warranty. being vouched, then vouched to warranty in the same way the crier of the Court, who was called the common vouchee. The demandant then craved leave to impart or confer with the last vouchee in private, which was granted by the Court; and the vouchee, having thus got out of Court, did not return; in consequence of which, judgment was given in the manner before mentioned, on which a regular writ was directed to the sheriff to put the demandant into possession (p). The proceedings, as may be supposed, necessarily passed through numerous hands, so that mistakes were not unfrequently made and great expense was always incurred (q). To remedy this

(n) Mary Portington's case, 10 Rep. 36; Co. Litt. 224 a; Fearne on Contingent Remainders, 260; 2 Black. Com. 116.

(o) By stat. 14 Geo. II. c. 20, commonly called Mr. Pigott's Act, it was sufficient if the conveyance to the tenant to the præcipe appeared to be executed before the end of the term in which the recovery was suffered, 1 Prest. Con. 61, et seq.; Goodright d. Burton v. Rigby, 5 T. Rep. 177. Recoveries, being in form judicial proceedings, could only be suffered in term time.

(p) Cruise on Recoveries, ch. 1, p. 12.

(q) See 1st Report of Real Property Commissioners, 25.

evil, an act of parliament (r) was accordingly passed in the year 1833, on the recommendation of the commissioners on the law of real property. This act, which in the wisdom of its design, and the skill of its execution, is quite a model of legislative reform, abolished the whole of the cumbrous and suspicious looking machinery of common recoveries. It has substituted in their place a simple deed, executed by the tenant in tail and inrolled in the Court of Chancery (s): by such a deed, a tenant in tail in possession is now enabled to dispose of the lands entailed for an estate in fee simple; thus at once defeating the claims of his issue, and of all persons having any estates in remainder or reversion.

A common recovery was not, in later times, the only way in which an estate tail might be barred. There was another assurance as effectual in defeating the claim of the issue, though it was inoperative as to the remainders and reversion. This assurance was a fine. Fines were in themselves, though not in their operation on estates tail, of far higher antiquity than common recoveries (t). They were not, like recoveries, actions at law carried out through every stage of the process; but were fictitious actions, commenced and then compromised by leave of the Court, whereby the lands in question were acknowledged to be the right of one of the parties (u). They were called fines from their having anciently put an end, as well to the pretended suit, as to all claims not made within a year and a day afterwards (w), a summary method of ending all disputes, grounded on the solemnity

(r) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, drawn by Mr. Brodie; 1 Hayes's Conveyancing, 155.

(s) The involment must be within six calendar months after the execution, sect. 41. See sect. 74. (t) Cruise on Fines, chap. 1.

(u) 2 Black. Com. 348.

(w) Stat. 18 Edw. I. stat. 4;
2 Black. Com. 349, 354; Co. Litt.
121 a, n. (1).

46

A fine.

and publicity of the proceedings as taking place in open Court. This power of barring future claims was taken from fines in the reign of Edward III. (x); but it was again restored, with an extension however of the time of claim to five years, by statutes of Richard III. (y) and Henry VII. (z); by which statutes also provision was made for the open proclamation of all fines several times Proclamations. in Court, during which proclamation all pleas were to cease; and in order that a fine might operate as a bar after non-claim for five years, it was necessary that it should be levied, as it was said, with proclamations. But now, by a recent statute (a), all fines heretofore levied in the Court of Common Pleas shall be conclusively deemed to have been levied with proclamations, and shall have the force and effect of fines with proclamations. A judicial construction of the statute of Henry VII. (b), quite apart, as it should seem, from its real intention (c), gave to a fine by a tenant in tail the force of a bar to his issue after non-claim by them for five years after the fine; and this construction was confirmed by a statute of the reign of Henry VIII., which made the bar immediate (d). Since this time the effect of fines in barring an entail, so far as the issue were concerned, remained unquestioned till their abolition; which took place at the Fines same time, and by the same act of parliament (e), as the abolished.

(x) Stat. 34 Edw. III. c. 13, a curious specimen of the conciseness of ancient acts of parliament. This is the whole of it : " Also it is accorded, that the plea of nonclaim of fines, which from henceforth shall be levied, shall not be taken or holden for any bar in time to come."

(y) 1 Rich. III. c. 7.

(z) 4 Hen. VII. c. 24; see also stat. 31 Eliz. c. 2.

(a) Stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 70.

(b) Bro. Ab. tit. Fine, pl. 1; Dyer, 3 a; Cruise on Fines, 173. (c) 4 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, 135, 138; 1 Hallam's Const. Hist. 14, 17. The deep designs attributed by Blackstone (2 Black. Com. 118, 354) and some others to Henry VII. in procuring the passing of this statute, are shown by the above writers to have most probably had no existence.

(d) 32 Hen. VIII. c. 36. (e) 3 & 4 Will, IV. c. 74. abolition of common recoveries. A deed inrolled in the Court of Chancery has now been substituted, as well for a fine, as for a common recovery.

Although strict and continuous entails have long been virtually abolished, their remembrance seems still to linger in many country places, where the notion of heir land, that must perpetually descend from father to son, is still to be met with. It is needless to say that such a notion is quite incorrect. In families where the estates are kept up from one generation to another, settlements are made every few years for this purpose; thus in the event of a marriage, a life estate merely is given to the husband; the wife has an allowance for pin money during the marriage, and a rent-charge or annuity by way of jointure for her life, in case she should survive her husband. Subject to this jointure, and to the payment of such sums as may be agreed on for the portions of the daughters and younger sons of the marriage, the eldest son who may be born of the marriage is made by the settlement tenant in tail. In case of his decease without issue, it is provided that the second son, and then the third, should in like manner be tenant in tail; and so on to the others; and in default of sons, the estate is usually given to the daughters. By this means the estate is tied up till some tenant in tail attains the age of twenty-one years; when he is able, with the consent of the father, who is tenant for life, to bar the entail with all the remainders. Dominion is thus again acquired over the property, which dominion is usually exercised in a re-settlement on the next generation; and thus the property is preserved in the family. Primogeniture, therefore, as it obtains among the landed gentry of England, is a custom only, and not a right; though there can be no doubt that the custom has originated in the right, which was enjoyed by the eldest son, as heir to his father, in those days when estates tail

Settlements.

Primogeniture.

could not be barred. Primogeniture, as a custom, has been the subject of much remark (f). Where family honours or family estates are to be preserved, some such device appears necessary. But, in other cases, strict settlements, of the kind referred to, seem fitted rather to maintain the posthumous pride of present owners, than the welfare of future generations. The policy of the law is now in favour of the free disposition of all kinds of property; and as it allows estates tail to be barred, so it will not permit the object of an entail to be accomplished by other means, any further than can be done by giving estates to the unborn children of living persons. Thus an estate given to the children of an unborn child would be absolutely void(g). The desire of individuals A perpetuity. to keep up their name and memory has often been opposed to this rule of law, and many shifts and devices have from time to time been tried to keep up a perpetual entail, or something that might answer the same end (h). But such contrivances have invariably been defeated; and no plan can be now adopted by which lands can with certainty be tied up, or fixed as to their future destination, for a longer period than the lives of existing persons and a term of twenty-one years after their decease (i).

Whenever an estate tail is not an estate in possession, When the esbut is preceded by a life interest to be enjoyed by some ceded by a life tate tail is preinterest.

(f) See 2 Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations, 181, M'Culloch's edition; and M'Culloch's n. xix., vol. 4, p. 441. See also Traités de Législation Civile et Pénale, ouvrage extrait des Manuscrits de Bentham, par Dumont, tom. 1, p. 307, a work of profound philosophy, except where a hardened scepticism makes it shallow.

(g) Hay v. Earl of Coventry, R.P.

3 T. Rep. 86; Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East, 452.

(h) See Fearne's Contingent Remainders, 253, ct seq.; Mainwaring v. Baxter, 5 Ves. 458.

(i) Fearne's Contingent Remainders, 430 et seq. The period of gestation is also included, if gestation exist; Cadell v. Palmer, 7 Bligh, N. S. 202.

 \mathbf{E}

other person prior to the possession of the lands by the tenant in tail, the power of such tenant in tail to acquire an estate in fee simple in remainder expectant on the decease of the tenant for life is subject to some limitation. In the time when an estate tail, together with the reversion, could only be barred by a recovery, it was absolutely necessary that the first tenant for life, who had the possession of the lands, should concur in the proceedings; for no recovery could be suffered, unless on a feigned action brought against the feudal holder of the possession (k). This technical rule of law was also a valuable check on the tenant in tail under every ordinary settlement of landed property; for, when the eldest son (who, as we have seen, is usually made tenant in tail) came of age, he found that, before he could acquire the dominion expectant on the decease of his father, the tenant for life, he must obtain from his father consent for the purpose. Opportunity was thus given for providing that no ill use should be made of the property (1). When recoveries were abolished, the consent formerly required was accordingly still preserved, with some little modification. The act abolishing recoveries has established the office of protector, which almost always exists during the continuance of such estates as may precede an estate tail. And the consent of the protector is required to be given, either by the same deed by which the entail is barred, or by a separate deed, to be exccuted on or before the day of the execution of the former, and to be also inrolled in the Court of Chancery at or previously to the time of the inrolment of the deed which bars the entail (m). Without such consent, the remainders and reversion cannot be barred (n). In ordinary cases the protector is the first tenant for life, in (k) Cruise on Recoveries, 21. See however stat. 14 Geo. II. c. 20.

Property Commissioners, p. 32.

(n) Sects. 34, 35.

(m) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, ss. 42-47.

(1) See First Report of Real

50

The concurrence of the first tenant for life required.

Protector.

His consent required to bar remainders and reversions.

analogy to the old law(o); but a power is given by the act, to any person entailing lands, to appoint, in the place of the tenant for life, any number of persons, not exceeding three, to be together protector of the settlement during the continuance of the preceding estates (p); and, in such a case, the consent of such persons only need be obtained in order to effect a complete bar to the estate tail, and the remainders and reversion. The protector is under no restraint in giving or withholding his consent, but is left entirely to his own discretion (q). If he should refuse to consent, the tenant in tail may The issue may still bar his own issue; as he might have done before out protector's the act by levying a fine ; but he cannot bar estates in consent. remainder or reversion. The consequence of such a limited bar is, that the tenant acquires a disposable estate in the land for so long as he has any issue or descendants living, and no longer; that is, so long as the estate tail would have lasted had no bar been placed on it. But, when his issue fail, the persons having estates in remainder or reversion become entitled. When the estate tail is in possession, that is, when there is no previous estate for life or otherwise, there can very seldom be any protector (r), and the tenant in tail may, at any time by deed duly inrolled, bar the entail, remainders, and reversion at his own pleasure.

The above-mentioned right, of a tenant in tail to bar Estates tail the entail, is subject to a few exceptions; which, though not of very frequent occurrence, it may be as well to mention. And, first, estates tail granted by the crown as the reward for public services cannot be barred so long as the reversion continues in the crown. This restriction was imposed by an act of parliament of the

 $\mathbf{E} \mathbf{2}$

(o) Sect. 22.

(p) Sect. 32.

(q) Sects. 36, 37.

(r) See Sugd. Vend. and Pur. 593, 11th ed.

be barred with-granted by the reward of public services.

crown as the reign of Henry VIII. (s), and it has been continued by the act by which fines and recoveries were abolished (t), and by the act to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates (u), so far as regards any sale or lease beyond the term of twenty-one years. There are also some cases in which entails have been created by particular acts of parliament, and cannot be barred.

Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct.

Again, an estate tail cannot be barred by any person who is tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct. This can only happen where a person is tenant in special tail. For instance, if an estate be given to a man and the heirs of his body by his present wife; in this case, if the wife should die without issue, he would become tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct(v); the possibility of his having issue who could inherit the estate tail would have become extinct on the death of his wife. A tenancy of this kind can never arise in an ordinary estate in tail general or tail male; for, so long as a person lives, the law considers that the possibility of issue continues, however improbable it may be from the great age of the party (x). Tenants in tail after possibility of issue extinct were prohibited from suffering common recoveries by a statute of the reign of Elizabeth (y), and a similar prohibition is contained in the act for the abolition of fines and recoveries (z). But, as we have before remarked (a), tenancies in special tail are not now common. In modern times, when it is intended to make a provision for the children of a particular marriage, estates are given directly to the unborn

(s) Stat. 34 & 35 Hen. VIII.

c. 20; Cruise on Recoveries, 318.

(t) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74,
s. 18; Duke of Grafton's case, 5 New Cases, 27.

(u) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 42.

(v) Litt. sects. 32, 33; 2 Black.

Com. 124.

(x) Litt. sect. 34; Co. Litt. 40 a;

2 Black. Com. 125; Jee v. Audley,

1 Cox, 324.

- (y) 14 Eliz. c. 8.
- (z) 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, s. 18.
- (a) Ante, p. 33.

children, which take effect as they come into existence; whereas in ancient times, as we shall hereafter see (b), it was not lawful to give any estate directly to an unborn child.

The last exception is one that can only arise in the case of grants and settlements made before the passing of the recent act; for the future it has been abolished. It relates to women who are tenants in tail of lands of their husbands, or lands given by any of his ancestors. After the decease of the husband, a woman so tenant Tenant in tail in tail ex provisione viri was prohibited by an old sta- ex provisione viri. tute (c) from suffering a recovery without the assent, recorded or inrolled, of the heirs next inheritable to her, or of him or them that next after her death should have an estate of inheritance, (that is, in tail or in fee simple,) in the lands: she was also prohibited from levying a fine under the same circumstances by the statute which confirmed to fines their force in other cases (d). This kind of tenancy in tail very rarely occurs in modern practice, having been superseded by the settlements now usually made on the unborn children of the marriage.

It is important to observe, that an estate tail can only An estate tail be barred by a proper deed, duly inrolled according to cannot be barred by will the act of parliament by which a deed was substituted or contract. for a common recovery or fine. Thus every attempt by a tenant in tail to leave the lands entailed by his will (e), and every contract to sell them, not completed in his lifetime by the proper bar (f), will be null and void as against his issue claiming under the entail, or as against

(b) See the Chapter on a Con-	111 a ; stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, tingent Remainder.	s. 40.
(c) 11 Hen. VII. c. 20.	(f) Bac. Abr. tit. Estate in Tail
(d) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 36,	(D); stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74,
s. 2.	s. 40.
(e) Cro. Eliz. 805; Co. Litt.

the remaindermen or reversioners, (that is, the owners of estates in remainder or reversion,) should there be no such issue left.

Timber.

A tenant in tail may cut down timber for his own benefit, and commit what waste he pleases, without the necessity of barring the entail for that purpose(q). A tenant in tail was moreover empowered by a statute of Henry VIII. (h) to make leases, under certain restrictions, of such of the lands entailed as had been most commonly let to farm for twenty years before; but such leases were not to exceed twenty-one years, or three lives, from the day of the making thereof, and the accustomed yearly rent was to be reserved. This power was however of little use; for leases under this statute, though binding on the issue, were not binding on the remainderman or reversioner (i), and consequently had not that certainty of enjoyment which is the great inducement to the outlay of capital, and the consequent improvement of landed property; and this statute has been recently repealed (j). The Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries now empowers every tenant in tail in possession to make leases by deed, without the necessity of inrolment, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, to commence from the date of the lease, or from any time not exceeding twelve calendar months from the date of the lease, where a rent shall be thereby reserved, which, at the time of granting such lease, shall be a rack-rent, or not less than fivesixth parts of a rack-rent (k).

(g) Co. Litt. 224 a; 2 Black. (i) Co. Litt. 45 b; 2 Black. Com. 115. Com. 319. (h) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 28; (j) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, Co. Litt. 44 a; Bac. Abr. tit. s. 35. Leases and Terms for Years, (k) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, (D) 2. ss. 15, 40, 41.

ment.

Leases.

New enact-

It has been observed that, in ancient times, estates Forfeiture for tail were not subject to forfeiture for high treason beyond treason. the life of the tenant in tail(1). This privilege they were deprived of by an act of parliament passed in the reign of Henry VIII. (m), by which all estates of inheritance (under which general words estates tail were covertly included) were declared to be forfeited to the king upon any conviction of high treason(n). But the attainder of the ancestor does not of itself prevent the descent of an estate tail to his issue, as they claim from the original donor, per formam doni (o); and, therefore, on attainder for murder, an estate tail would still descend to the issue. By virtue of another statute of the reign Debts to the of Henry VIII. (p), estates tail are charged, in the crown. hands of the heir, with debts due from his ancestor to the crown, by judgment, recognizance, obligation, or other specialty, although the word heir shall not be comprised therein. And all arrears and debts due to the crown, by accountants to the crown, whose yearly or total receipts exceed three hundred pounds, were, by a later statute of the reign of Elizabeth(q), placed on the same footing. But estates tail, if suffered to descend, were not subject to the debts of the deceased tenant owing to private individuals(r). By an act passed at Judgment debts. the commencement of Her present Majesty's reign debts, for the payment of which any judgment, decree, order or rule had been given or made by any court of law or equity, were made binding on the lands of the debtor, as against the issue of his body, and also as against all other persons whom he might, without the assent of any other person, cut off and debar from any

(1) Ante, p. 42.
(m) 26 Hen. VIII. c. 13, s. 5;
see also 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 11, s. 9.
(n) 2 Black. Com. 118.
(o) 3 Rep. 10; 8 Rep. 165 b;
(p) Stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39,
(p) Stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39,
(s. 75.
(q) Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 4; and see 14 Eliz. c. 7; 25 Geo. 3, c. 35.
(r) Com. Dig. Estates (B) 22.

Cro. Eliz. 28.

remainder or reversion(s). But a more recent statute has enacted that no such judgment, decree, order or rule to be entered up after the 29th of July, 1864, the date of the act, shall affect any land until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution (t). An estate tail may also be barred and disposed of on the bankruptey of a trader tenant in tail, for the benefit of his creditors, to the same extent as he might have barred or disposed of it for his own benefit (u).

In addition to the liabilities above mentioned are the rights which the marriage of a tenant in tail confers on the wife, if the tenant be a man, or on the husband, if the tenant be a woman; an account of which will will be contained in a future chapter on the relation of husband and wife. But, subject to these rights and Descent of an estate tail. liabilities, an estate tail, if not duly barred, will descend to the issue of the donee in due course of law; all of whom will be necessarily tenants in tail, and will enjoy the same powers of disposition as their ancestor, the original donce in tail. The course of descent of an estate tail is similar, so far as it goes, to that of an estate in fee simple, an explanation of which the reader will find in the fourth chapter.

Husband and wife.

Bankruptcy.

Quasi entail.

If an estate pur autre vie should be given to a person and the heirs of his body, a quasi entail, as it is called, will be created, and the estate will descend, during its continuance, in the same manner as an ordinary estate tail. But the owner of such an estate in possession may bar his issue, and all remainders, by an ordinary deed of conveyance(x), without any inrolment under the

(s) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 13, 18. s. 208.

(1) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, $5. 1, 2.

(u) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74,

ss. 56-73; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106,

(x) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 495, et seq.

statute for the abolition of fines and recoveries. If the estate tail be in remainder expectant on an estate for life, the concurrence of the tenant for life is necessary to enable the tenant in tail to defeat the subsequent remainders (y).

(y) Allen v. Allen, 2 Dru. & v. Champion, 3 De Gex, M. & G. War. 307, 324, 332; Edwards 202.

CHAPTER III.

OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE.

An estate in fee simple (feudum simplex) is the greatest estate or interest which the law of England allows any person to possess in landed property (a). A tenant in fee simple is he that holds land or tenements to him and his heirs (b); so that the estate is descendible, not merely to the heirs of his body, but to collateral relations, according to the rules and canons of descent. An estate in fee simple is of course an estate of freehold, being a larger estate than either an estate for life, or in tail(c).

It is not, however, the mere descent of an estate in fee simple to collateral heirs, that has given to this estate its present value and importance: the unfettered right of alienation, which is now inseparably incident to this estate, is by far its most valuable quality. This right has been of gradual growth : for, as we have seen (d), estates were at first inalienable by tenants, without their lord's consent; and the heir did not derive his title so much from his ancestor as from the lord, who, when he gave to the ancestor, gave also to his heirs. In process of time, however, the ancestor acquired, as we have already seen (e), the right, first, of disappointing the expectations of his heir, and then of defeating the interests of his lord. The alienations by which these results were effected were, as (a) Litt. s. 11.

(b) Litt. s. 1.

(c) Ante, pp. 22, 34.

(d) Ante, pp. 17, 18. (e) Ante, pp. 36-40.

Tenant in fee simple holds to him and his heirs; and has an estate of freehold.

Right of alienation.

will be remembered, either the subinfeudation of parts of the land, to be holden of the grantor, or the conveyance of the whole, to be holden of the superior lord. It was Part of any impossible to make a grant of part of the lands to be lands could not anciently be holden of the superior lord without his consent; for, the granted to hold services reserved on any grant were considered as entire lord. and indivisible in their nature (f). The tenant, consequently, if he wished to dispose of part of his lands, was obliged to create a tenure between his grantee and himself, by reserving to himself and his heirs such services as would remunerate him for the services, which he himself was liable to render to his superior lord. In this manner the tenant became a lord in his turn; and the method, which the tenants were thus obliged to adopt, when alienating part of their lands, was usually resorted to by choice, whenever they had occasion to part with the whole; for the immediate lord of the holder of any lands had advantages of a feudal nature (q), which did not belong to the superior lord, when any mesne lordship intervened; it was therefore desirable for every feudal lord, that the possession of the lands should always be holden by his own immediate tenants. The barons at Subinfeudation the time of Edward I. accordingly, perceiving, that, by disadvanthe continual subinfeudations of their tenants, their privi- superior lords. leges as superior lords were gradually encroached on, proceeded to procure an enactment in their own favour with respect to estates in fee simple, as they had then already done with regard to estates tail(h). They did not, however, in this case attempt to restrain the practice of alienation altogether, but simply procured a prohibition of the practice of subinfeudation; and at the same time obtained, for their tenants, facility of alienation of parts of their lands, to be holden of the chief lords.

(f) Co. Litt. 43 a.

(g) Such as marriage and wardship, to be hereafter explained. See Bract. lib. ii. c. 19, par. 2. (h) By the stat. De Donis, 13 Edw. I. c. 1, ante, p. 41.

The statute of Quia emptores.

The statute by which these objects were effected is known by the name of the statute of Quia emptores (i); so called from the words with which it commences. Tt enacts, that from thenceforth it shall be lawful to every freeman to sell at his own pleasure his lands and tenements or part thereof, so nevertheless that the feoffee (or purchaser) shall hold the same lands or tenements of the same chief lord of the fee, and by the same services and customs as his feoffor held them before. And it further enacts (k), that, if he sell any part of such his lands or tenements to any person, the feoffee shall hold that part immediately of the chief lord, and shall be forthwith charged with so much service as pertaineth, or ought to pertain, to the said chief lord, for such part, according to the quantity of the land or tenement so This statute did not extend to those who held of sold. the king as tenants in capite, who were kept in restraint for some time longer(l). Free liberty of alienation was however subsequently acquired by them; and the right of disposing of an estate in fee simple, by act inter vivos, is now the undisputed privilege of every tenant of such an estate(m).

Alienation by will. The alienation of lands by will was not allowed in this country, from the time the feudal system became completely rooted, until many years after alienation inter vivos had been sanctioned by the statute of Quia emptores. The city of London, and a few other favoured places, formed exceptions to the general restraint on the power of testamentary alienation of estates in fee simple(n); for in these places tenements might be devised by will, in virtue of a special custom. In process of time, however, a method of devising lands by will

- (i) Stat. 18 Edw. I. c. 1.
- (k) Chap. 2.
- (1) Wright's Tenures, 162.

(m) Wright's Tenures, 172; Co. Litt. 111 b, n. 1.

(n) Litt. sec. 167; Perk. secs. 528, 537.

was covertly adopted by means of conveyances to other parties, to such uses as the person conveying should appoint by his will (o). This indirect mode of devising lands was intentionally restrained by the operation of a statute, passed in the reign of King Henry VIII. (p), known by the name of the Statute of Uses, to which we shall hereafter have occasion to make frequent reference. But only five years after the passing of this statute, lands were by a further statute expressly rendered devisable by will. This great change in the law was effected by statutes of the 32nd and 34th of Henry VIII. (q). But even by these statutes the right to devise was partial only, as to lands of the then prevailing tenure; and it was not till the restoration of king Charles II., when the feudal tenures were abolished (r), that the right of devising freehold lands by will became complete and universal. At the present day, every tenant in fee simple so fully enjoys the right of alienating the lands he holds, either in his lifetime or by his will, that most tenants in fee think themselves to be the lords of their own domains; whereas, in fact, all landowners are merely tenants in the eye of the law, as will hereafter more clearly appear.

Blackstone's explanation of an estate in fee simple is, that a tenant in fee simple holds to him and his heirs for ever, generally, absolutely, and simply, without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or the disposition of the law (s). But the idea of nominating an heir to succeed to the inheritance has no place in the English law, however it might have ob-

(p) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, intituled "An Act concerning Uses and Wills."

(q) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1; 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 5; Co. Litt. 111 b, n. (1).

⁽o) Perk. ubi sup.

⁽r) By stat. 12 Car. II. c. 24.

⁽s) 2 Black. Com. 104. See however 3 Black. Com. 224, where the correct account is given.

The heir is appointed by the law.

Assigns.

tained in the Roman jurisprudence. The heir is always appointed by the law, the maxim being Solus Deus haredem facere potest, non homo (t); and all other persons, whom a tenant in fee simple may please to appoint as his successors, are not his heirs but his assigns. Thus, a purchaser from him in his lifetime, and a devisee under his will, are alike assigns in law, claiming in opposition to, and in exclusion of the heir, who would otherwise have become entitled (u).

Excepted persons. Alien.

With respect to certain persons, exceptions occur to the right of alienation. Thus, if an alien or foreigner, who is under no allegiance to the $\operatorname{crown}(x)$, were to purchase an estate in lands, the crown might at any time assert a right to such estate ; unless it were merely a lease taken by a subject of a friendly state for the residence or occupation of himself or his servants, or for the purpose of any business, trade, or manufacture, for a term not exceeding twenty-one years (y). For the conveyance to an alien of any greater estate in lands in this country, is a cause of forfeiture to the Queen, who, after an inquest of office has been held for the purpose of finding the truth of the facts, may seize the lands accordingly (z). Before office found, that is, before the verdict of any such inquest of office has been given, an alien may make a conveyance to a naturalborn subject; and such conveyance will be valid for all purposes(a), except to defeat the prior right of the crown, which will still continue. No person is considered an alien who is born within the dominions of the crown, even though such person may be the child of an alien, unless such alien should be the subject of a

(t) 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law,
105; Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 3.
(u) Hogan v. Jackson, Cowp.
305; Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 10.
(x) Litt. s. 198.

(y) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 5.
(z) Co. Litt. 2 b, 42 b; 1 Black.
Com. 371, 372; 2 Black. Com. 249, 274, 293.

(a) Shep. Touch. 232; 4 Leo. 84.

hostile prince (b). And in Calvin's case (c), a person Calvin's case. born in Scotland after the accession of James I. to the crown of England, was held to be a natural-born subject, and consequently entitled to hold lands in England, although the two kingdoms had not then been united. Again, the children of the Queen's ambassadors are natural-born subjects by the Common Law(d); and, by several acts of parliament, the privileges of naturalborn subjects have been accorded to the lawful children, though born abroad, of a natural-born father, and also to the grandchildren on the father's side of a naturalborn subject (e); and more recently, the children of a natural-born mother, though born abroad, have been rendered capable of taking any real or personal estate (f). It has been also provided that any woman, who shall be married to a natural-born subject or person naturalized, shall be taken to be herself naturalized, and have all the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject (q). And by a statute of the reign of William the Third all the King's natural-born subjects are enabled to trace their title by descent through their alien ancestors (h). Any foreigner may, moreover, be made a Denizen. denizen by the Queen's letters patent, and capable as such of acquiring lands by purchase, though not by descent (i), or may be naturalized by act of parliament. Naturalization. But almost all the privileges of natural-born subjects may now be obtained by aliens intending to settle in (b) 1 Black. Com. 373; Bacon's Abr. tit. Aliens (A).

- (c) 7 Rep. 1.
- (d) 7 Rep. 18 a.

(e) Stat. 25 Edw. III. stat. 2; 7 Anne, c. 5; 4 Geo. II. c. 21; 13 Geo. III. c. 21. Doe dem. Duroure v. Jones, 4 T. Rep. 300; Shedden v. Patrick, 1 M'Queen's H. of L. Cas. 535; Fitch v. Weber, 6 Hare, 51.

- (f) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 3.
- (g) 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16.
- (h) Stat. 11 & 12 Will. III.
- c. 6, explained by stat. 25 Geo. II.c. 39.
 - (i) 1 Black. Com. 374.

this country, upon obtaining the certificate and taking the oath prescribed by the recent act to amend the laws relating to aliens (k).

Infants, idiots, and lunatics.

Infants' marriage settlements.

Infants, or all persons under the age of twenty-one years, and also idiots and lunatics, though they may hold lands, are incapacitated from making a binding disposition of any estate in them. The conveyances of infants are generally voidable only (1), and those of lunatics and idiots appear to be absolutely void, unless they were made by feoffment with livery of seisin before the year 1845 (m). But by a recent act of parliament(n)every infant, not under twenty if a male, and not under seventeen if a female, is empowered to make a valid and binding settlement on his or her marriage, with the sanction of the Court of Chancery. If, however, any disentailing assurance shall have been executed by any infant tenant in tail under the provisions of the act, and such infant shall afterwards die under age, such disentailing assurance shall thereupon become absolutely void (o). Under certain circumstances, also for the sake of making a title to lands, infants have been empowered, by modern acts of parliament, to make conveyances of fee-simple and other estates, under the direction of the Court of Chancery (p). And more extensive powers, with respect to the estates of idiots and lunatics, have been given to their committees, or the persons who have

(k) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66.

(l) 2 Black. Com. 291; Bac. Abr. tit. Infancy and Age (I 3); Zouch v. Parsons, 3 Burr. 1794; Allen v. Allen, 2 Dru. & War. 307, 338.

(m) Yates v. Boen, 2 Strange, 1104; Sugd. Pow. 604, 8th ed.; Bac. Abr. tit. Idiots and Lunatics (F); stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 7; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4. (n) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 43, extended to the Court of Chancery in Ireland by stat. 23 & 24 Vict.
c. 83; Re Dalton, 6 De Gex, Mac. & Gor. 201.

(o) Sect. 2.

(p) See stat. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 47, s. 11; 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, ss. 12, 16, 31; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 60; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 87. had committed to them the charge of such idiots and lunatics (q). And by the recent act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the conveyance and transfer of real and personal property vested in mortgagees and trustees (r), power is given to the Court of Chancery in the case of infants (s), and to the Lord Chancellor or other persons, namely the Lords Justices, intrusted by virtue of the Queen's sign manual with the care of the persons and estates of idiots and lunatics (t), by a simple order, to vest in any other person the lands of which any infant, idiot, or lunatic, may be seised or possessed upon any trust or by way of mortgage.

Married women are under a limited incapacity to Married women. Alternate, as will hereafter appear. And persons attainted for treason or felony cannot, by any conveyance which sons. they may make, defeat the right to their estates, which their attainder gives to the crown, or to the lord, of whom their estates may be holden (u).

There are certain objects, also, in respect of which the Excepted alienation of lands is restricted. In the reign of ^{objects.} George II. an act was passed, commonly called the Mortmain Act, the object of which, as expressed in the The Mortmain preamble, was to prevent improvident alienations or dispositions of landed estates, by languishing or dying

Adol. 765.

(q) See stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 108 et seq., repealing and consolidating stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 48, and other acts so far as they relate to idiots and lunatics in England and Wales. This act has been amended by stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 13, and extended by stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86.

(r) Stat. 13 & 14 Viet. c. 60, extended by stat. 15 & 16 Viet. R.P. c. 55, ss. 9, 10, 11.
(s) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,
ss. 7, 8.
(t) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,
ss. 3, 4; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55,
s. 11.
(u) Co. Litt. 42 b; 2 Black.
Com. 290; Perkins, tit. Grant, sect. 26; Com. Dig. tit. Capacity
(D.6); 2 Shep. Touch. 232; Doe d.

Griffith v. Pritchard, 5 Barn. &

 \mathbf{F}

persons, to the disherison of their lawful heirs (x). This statute provides that no lands or hereditaments, nor any money, stock, or other personal estate, to be laid out in the purchase of any lands or hereditaments, shall be conveyed or settled for any charitable uses, unless by deed indented, sealed and delivered in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, twelve calendar months at least before the death of the donor or grantor, including the days of the execution and death, and inrolled in the High Court of Chancery within six calendar months next after the execution thereof; and unless such stock be transferred six calendar months at least before the death of the donor or grantor, including the days of the transfer and death; and unless the same be made to take effect in possession for the charitable use intended immediately from the making thereof, and be without any power of revocation, reservation, trust, condition, limitation, clause, or agreement whatsoever, for the benefit of the donor or grantor, or of any person or persons claiming under him(y). Provided always, that nothing therein before mentioned relating to the sealing and delivering of any deed twelve calendar months at least before the death of the grantor, or to the transfer of any stock six calendar months before the death of the grantor, shall extend to any purchase of any estate or interest in lands or hereditaments, or any transfer of stock to be made really bonâ fide for a full and valuable consideration actually paid at or before the making of such conveyance or transfer, without fraud or collusion (z). And all gifts, conveyances and settlements for any charitable uses whatsoever made in any other manner or form than by that act is directed, are declared to be absolutely and to all intents and purposes null and void (a). Gifts to either of the two Universities, or any of their

(y) Sect. 1.

(a) Sect. 3.

Charities.

⁽x) Stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 36. (z) Sect. 2.

colleges, or to the college of Eton, Winchester, or Westminster, for the support and maintenance of the scholars only upon those foundations, are excepted (b). It will be seen that in consequence of this act no gift of any estate in land for charitable purposes can be made by will. By an act of parliament passed on the 25th July, 1828(c), the title to lands then already purchased for valuable consideration for charitable purposes is rendered valid, notwithstanding the want of an indenture duly attested and inrolled; but the act is retrospective merely(d). The stringency of the provisions in the Mortmain Act has often been felt to be unnecessarily great, especially with regard to that part of the act which provides that there shall be no reservation or clause whatever for the benefit of the donor or grantor. And an act has now been passed to amend the law relating to the conveyance of land for charitable uses(e). This New enactact, which was passed on the 17th of May, 1861, provides that no assurance for charitable uses shall be void by reason of the deed or assurance not being indented, or not purporting to be indented, nor by reason of such deed or assurance, or any deed forming part of the same transaction, containing any grant or reservation of any peppercorn or other nominal rent, or of any mines or minerals or easement, or any covenants or provisions as to the erection, repair, position or description of buildings, the formation or repair of streets or roads, drainage or nuisance, or any covenants or provisions of the like nature, for the use and enjoyment, as well of the hereditaments comprised in such deed or assurance as of any other adjacent or neighbouring hereditaments, or any right of entry on non-payment of any such rent, or on breach of any such covenant or provision, or any

- (b) Stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 4.
- (c) Stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 85.
- (d) Sect. 3.
- (e) Stat. 24 Vict. c. 9. Provisions were made with respect to Roman Catholic Charities by an act of the previous session, stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134.

ment.

stipulations of the like nature, for the benefit of the donor or grantor, or of any person or persons claiming under him; nor in the case of copyholds by reason of the assurance not being made by deed; nor in the case of such assurances, made bonâ fide on a sale for a full and valuable consideration, by reason of such consideration consisting wholly or partly of a rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment, reserved or made payable to the vendor or to any other person, with or without a right of re-entry for non-payment thereof: provided that in all reservations authorized by the act, the donor, grantor or vendor shall reserve the same benefits for his representatives as for himself (f). The act further provides, that in all cases where the charitable uses of any deed or assurance thereafter to be made for conveyance of any hereditaments for any charitable uses shall be disclosed by any separate deed, the deed of conveyance need not be inrolled; but it will be void, unless such separate deed be inrolled in Chancery within six calendar months next after the making or perfecting of the deed for conveyance(q).

Remarks on the act.

Separate deed of trust.

> This act, it will be observed, provides only for the reservation of a nominal rent, except in the case of an assurance made bonâ fide on a sale for a full and valuable consideration; so that a gift of land to a charity, reserving a pecuniary rent or rent-charge to the grantor, would still be void. Moreover no alteration was made in that part of the Mortmain Act which relates to the execution of the deed twelve calendar months at least before the death of the grantor. The only exception which that aet allowed was in the case of a purchase of land bonâ fide, for a full and valuable consideration actually paid at or before the making of the conveyance. If on a purchase a rent were reserved to the vendor, it is clear that the full consideration was not actually paid at the making of the conveyance. There was nothing in the new act, as there was certainly nothing in the former one, to preserve such a conveyance from becoming void by the decease of the vendor within twelve calendar months from the date of the deed. This oversight in the act has been provided for by a more recent statute (h), which enacts that every full and bona fide New enactvaluable consideration which shall consist either wholly or partly of a rent or other annual payment reserved or made payable to the vendor or grantor, or to any other person, shall, for the purposes of the Mortmain Act, be as valid and have the same force and effect as if such consideration had been a sum of money actually paid at or before the making of such conveyance without fraud or collusion.

(f) Stat. 24 Vict. c. 9, s. 1. (g) Sect. 2.

With regard to deeds and assurances already made, it has been provided (i), that all money really and bonâ fide expended before the 16th of May, 1862, the date of the act, in the substantial and permanent improvement, by building or otherwise for any charitable use, of land held for such charitable use, shall be deemed equivalent to money actually paid by way of consideration for the purchase of the said land. It has also been provided (k), that every deed or assurance by which any land shall have been demised for any term of years for any charitable use shall, for the purposes of the Mortmain Act, be deemed to have been made to take effect for the charitable use thereby intended immediately from the making thereof, if the term for which such land shall have been thereby demised was made to commence and take effect in possession at any time within one year from the date of such deed or assurance. And it has been further provided, with respect to all deeds and (h) Stat. 27 Viet. c. 13, s. 4. (i) Stat. 25 Vict. c. 17, s. 5.

ment.

As to deeds already made.

⁽k) Stat. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 106.

assurances under which possession is held for any charitable uses, that if made bonâ fide for a full and valuable consideration, actually paid at or before the making of such deed or assurance, or reserved by way of rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment, or partly paid and partly so reserved, no such deed or assurance shall be void within the Mortmain Act, if it was made to take effect in possession for the charitable uses intended immediately from the making thereof, and without any power of revocation, and has been or shall be inrolled in the Court of Chancery before the 17th of May, 1866 (1). And no deed executed before the 17th of May, 1861, requires any acknowledgment prior to inrolment (m). And all conveyances to charitable uses made upon such full and valuable consideration as aforesaid, and under which possession is now held for such uses, are rendered valid where any separate deed declaring the uses has alone been inrolled, or where such separate deed shall be executed within six calendar months from the 13th of May, 1864, and inrolled before the 17th of May, 1866(n). When land has been already devoted to charitable purposes, the conveyance thereof to other trustees, or to another charity, does not fall within the purview of the Mortmain Act, and accordingly requires no special attestation or inrolment(o). And where the original deed creating any charitable trust has been lost, the Court of Chancery is empowered to authorize the inrolment in its stead of any subsequent deed by which the trusts may sufficiently appear (p).

The Charity Commissioners. All charities are now placed under the control of the

(1) Stats. 24 Vict. c. 9, s. 8;
27 Vict. c. 13, s. 1.
(m) Stat. 25 Vict. c. 17, s. 3.
(n) Stats. 24 Vict. c. 9, s. 4; 27
A Vict. c. 13, ss. 1, 2.

 (o) Walker v. Richardson, 2
 Mees. & Wels. 882; Attorney-General v. Glyn, 12 Sim. 84; Ashton v. Jones, 28 Beav. 460.
 (p) Stat. 27 Vict. c. 13, s. 3.

Charity Commissioners for England and Wales (q). And an official trustee of charity lands has been ap-Official pointed, in whom may be vested, by order of the Court trustee. of Chancery or of any judge having jurisdiction, any charity lands whenever the trustees do not or will not act, or there are no trustees, or none certainly known, or where any of the trustees are under age, lunatic or of unsound mind, or otherwise incapable of acting, or out of the jurisdiction of the Court, or where a valid appointment of new trustees cannot be made, or shall be considered too expensive (r). But a majority of two-thirds of the trustees of any charity assembled at a meeting of their body duly constituted, and having power to determine on any disposition of the charity property, are empowered on behalf of themselves and their cotrustees, and also on behalf of the official trustee of charity lands, where his concurrence would be otherwise required, to do all requisite acts for carrying any such disposition into legal effect (s). An important exception Sites for to the Mortmain Act has been introduced by acts of schools. parliament recently passed to afford further facilities for the conveyance and endowment of sites for schools (t), by which one witness only is rendered sufficient for such a conveyance (u), and the death of the donor or grantor within twelve calendar months from the execution of the deed will not render it void (x). But the necessity of inrolment does not appear to be dispensed with (y). These acts contain many other provisions for facilitating (q) Stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, amended by stats. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 124, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 136, and explained by stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 112.

(r) Stats. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, s. 48; 18 & 19 Vict. c. 124, s. 15.

(s) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 136, s. 16.

(t) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, explained by stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 37; extended and further explained by stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 49, amended by stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 24; and extended by stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 49.

(u) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, s. 10.
(x) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 37, s. 3.
(y) See stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, s. 16.

Literary and scientific institutions.

Play grounds.

Corporation.

Incorporated charities.

Joint-stock companies. the erection of schools for the education of the poor. And, by more recent acts of parliament, provision has been made for the conveyance of sites for literary and scientific and other similar institutions (z); and also for facilitating grants of land for the recreation of adults, and as play-grounds for children (a).

Again, no conveyance can be made to any corporation, unless a licence to take lands has been granted to it by the crown. Formerly, licence from the lord, of whom a tenant in fee simple held his estate, was also necessary to enable him to alienate his lands to any corporation (b). For, this alienation to a body having perpetual existence was an injury to the lord, who was then entitled to many advantages, to be hereafter detailed, so long as the estate was in private hands; but in the hands of a corporation these advantages ceased. In modern times, the rights of the lords having become comparatively trifling, the licence of the crown alone has been rendered by parliament sufficient for the purpose (c). And it is now provided that any incorporated charity may, with the consent of the charity commissioners, invest money arising from any sale of land belonging to the charity, or received by way of equality of exchange or partition, in the purchase of land; and may hold such land, or any land acquired by way of exchange or partition, for the benefit of such charity, without any licence in mortmain(d). Every joint-stock company registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Acts(e) has also power to hold lands(f); but no company formed for the purpose

(z) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 112.
(a) Stat. 22 Vict. c. 27.
(b) 2 Black. Com. 269.
(c) Stat. 7 & 8 Will. 111. c. 37.
(d) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 124,
8. 35.
(c) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, amended by stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 14, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 60, and now consolidated by stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89.

(f) Stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 18. of promoting art, science, religion, charity or any other like object, not involving the acquisition of gain by the company or by the individual members thereof, shall, without the sanction of the Board of Trade, hold more than two acres of land; but the Board of Trade may, by licence under the hand of one of their principal or assistant secretaries, empower any such company to hold lands in such quantity and subject to such conditions as they think fit (g).

By a statute of the reign of Elizabeth, conveyances of Conveyances landed estates, and also of goods, made for the purpose of delaying, hindering or defrauding creditors, are void as against them; unless made upon good, which here means valuable, consideration, and bona fide, to any person not having, at the time of the conveyance, any notice of such fraud (h). And, by a subsequent statute Voluntary conof the same reign, voluntary conveyances of any estate in lands, tenements, or other hereditaments whatsoever, of revocation, and conveyances of such estates made with any clause purchasers. of revocation at the will of the grantor, are also void as against subsequent purchasers for money or other valuable consideration (i). The effect of this enactment is, that any person who has made a voluntary settlement of landed property, even on his own children, may afterwards sell the same property to any purchaser; and the purchaser, even though he have full notice of the settlement, will hold the lands without danger of interruption, from the persons on whom they had been previously settled (k). But if the settlement be founded on any

(g) Stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 21.

(h) Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5; Twyne's case, 3 Rep. 81 a ; 1 Smith's Leading Cases, 1.

(i) Stat. 27 Eliz. c. 4, made perpetual by 39 Eliz. c. 18, s. 31.

(k) Upton v. Bassett, Cro. Eliz. 444; 3 Rep. 83 a; Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 586, 13th ed.; Sugd. Pow., ch. 14, 8th ed.

for defrauding creditors.

veyances, or with any clause void as against valuable consideration, such as that of an intended marriage, it cannot be defeated (l).

The methods by which a tenant in fee simple can alienate his estate in his lifetime will be reserved for future consideration, as will also the subject of alienation by testament. As a tenant in fee simple may alienate his estate at his pleasure, so he is under no control in his management of the lands, but may open mines, cut timber, and commit waste of all kinds (m), grant leases of any length, and charge the lands with the payment of money to any amount. Fee simple estates are moreover subject, in the hands of the heir or devisee, to debts of all kinds contracted by the deceased tenant. This liability to what may be called an involuntary alienation, has, like the right of voluntary alienation, been established by very slow degrees (n). It appears that, in the early periods of our history, the heir of a deceased person was bound, to the extent of the inheritance which descended to him, to pay such of the debts of his ancestor as the goods and chattels of the ancestor were not sufficient to satisfy (o). But the spirit of feudalism, which attained to such a height in the reign of Edward I., appears to have infringed on this ancient doctrine; for we find it laid down by Britton, who wrote in that reign, that no one should be held to pay the debt of his ancestor, whose heir he was, to any other person than the king, unless he were by the deed of his ancestor especially bound to do so (p). On this footing the law of England long continued. It allowed Heirs might anciently be bound by specialty.

> (1) Colvile v. Parker, Cro. Jac. 158; Sugd. Pow. ch. 14, 8th ed.

(m) 3 Black. Com, 223.

(n) See Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 9.

(o) Glanville, lib. vii. c. 8; Bract. 61 a ; 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, 113. These authorities appear to be express; the contrary doctrine, however, with an account of the reasons for it, will be found in Bac. Abr. tit. Heir and Ancestor (F).

(p) Britt. 64 b.

74

Debts.

any person, by any deed or writing under seal (called a special contract or specialty) to bind or charge his heirs. as well as himself, with the payment of any debt, or the fulfilment of any contract: in such a case the heir was liable, on the decease of his ancestor, to pay the debt or fulfil the contract, to the value of the lands which had descended to him from the ancestor, but not further (q). The lands so descended were called assets Assets. by descent, from the French word assez, enough, because the heir was bound only so far as he had lands descended to him enough or sufficient to answer the debt or contract of his ancestor (r). If, however, the heir was not expressly named in such bond or contract, he was under no liability (s). When the power of testamentary alienation was granted, a debtor, who had thus bound his heirs, became enabled to defeat his creditor, by devising his estate by his will to some other person than his heir; and, in this case, neither heir nor devisee was under any liability to the creditor (t). Some debtors, however, impelled by a sense of justice to their creditors, left their lands to trustees in trust to sell them for the payment of their debts, or, which amounts to the same thing, charged their lands, by their wills, with the payment of their debts. The creditors then obtained payment by the bounty of their debtor; and the Court of Chancery, in distributing this bounty, thought that "equality was equity," and consequently allowed creditors by simple contract to participate equally with those who had obtained bonds binding the heirs of the deceased (u). In such a case the lands were called equitable assets. At length an act of William and Mary Equitable assets.

(q) Bac. Abr. tit. Heir and Ancestor (F); Co. Litt. 376 b.

(r) 2 Black. Com. 244; Bac. Abr. tit. Heir and Ancestor (1).

(s) Dyer, 271 a, pl. 25; Plow. 457.

(t) Bac. Abr. ubi sup.

(u) Parker v. Dee, 2 Cha. Cas. 201; Bailey v. Ekins, 7 Ves. 319; 2 Jarm. Wills, 544, Ist ed.; 523, 2nd ed.; 554, 3rd ed.

made void all devises by will, as against creditors by specialty in which the heirs were bound, but not further or otherwise(x); but devises or dispositions of any lands or hereditaments for the payment of any real and just debt or debts were exempted from the operation of the statute (y). Creditors, however, who had no specialty binding the heirs of their debtor, still remained without remedy against either heir or devisee ; unless the debtor chose of his own accord to charge his lands by his will with the payment of his debts; in which case, as we have seen, all creditors were equally entitled to the benefit. So that, till within the last few years, a landowner might incur as many debts as he pleased, and yet leave behind him an unincumbered estate in fee simple, unless his creditors had taken proceedings in his lifetime, or he had entered into any bond or specialty binding his heirs. At length, in 1807, the fee simple estates of deceased traders were rendered liable to the payment, not only of debts in which their heirs were bound, but also of their simple contract debts(z), or debts arising in ordinary business. By a subsequent statute(a), the above enactments were consolidated and amended, and facilities were afforded for the sale of such estates of deceased persons as were liable by law, or by their own wills, to the payment of their debts. But, notwithstanding the efforts of a Romilly were exerted to extend so just a liability, the lands of all deceased persons, not traders at the time of their death, continued exempt from their debts by simple contract, till the year 1833; when a provision, which, but a few years before, had been strenuously opposed, was passed without the least difficulty (b). All estates in fee simple, which the owner shall not by his will have charged with, or devised sub-

(x) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. & Mary,
c. 14, s. 2, made perpetual by stat.
6 & 7 Will. 111, c. 14.

(y) Sect. 4.

(z) By stat. 47 Geo. III. c. 74.

- (a) Stat. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 47.
 - (b) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 104.

ject to, the payment of his debts, are accordingly now liable to be administered in the Court of Chancery, for the payment of all the just debts of the deceased owner, as well debts due on simple contract as on specialty. But, out of respect to the ancient law, the act provides that all creditors by special contract, in which the heirs are bound, shall be paid the full amount of the debts due to them before any of the creditors by simple contract, or by specialty in which the heirs are not bound, shall be paid any part of their demands. If, however, Effect of a the debtor should by his last will have charged his lands by will. with, or devised them subject to, the payment of his debts, such charge will still be valid, and every creditor, of whatever kind, will have an equal right to participate in the produce. Hence arises this curious result, that a person who has incurred debts, both by simple contract, and by specialty in which he has bound his heirs, may, by merely charging his lands with the payment of his debts, place all his creditors on a level, so far as they may have occasion to resort to such lands; thus depriving the creditors by specialty of that priority to which they would otherwise have been entitled(c).

A creditor who has taken legal proceedings against Judgment his debtor, for the recovery of his debts, in the debtor's debts. lifetime, and has obtained the judgment of a Court of law in his favour, has long had a great advantage over creditors who have waited till the debtor's decease. The first enactment which gave to such a creditor a remedy against the lands of his debtor was made in the reign of Edward I. (d), shortly before the passing of the statute of Quia Emptores(e), which sanctioned the full and free alienation of fee simple estates. By this enactment it the Statute of Westminster the Second.

(c) See the author's Essay on Real Assets, p. 39.

(d) Stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 18, called

(e) Stat. 18 Edw. I. c. 1.

is provided, that, when a debt is recovered or acknowledged in the King's Court, or damages awarded, it shall be thenceforth in the election of him that such for such debt or damages to have a writ of fieri facias unto the sheriff of the lands and goods, or that the sheriff deliver to him all the chattels of the debtor (saving only his oxen and beasts of his plough), and the one half of his land, until the debt be levied according to a reasonable price or extent. The writ issued by the Court to the sheriff, under the authority of this statute, was called a writ of elegit; so named, because it was stated in the writ, that the creditor had elected (elegit) to pursue the remedy which the statute had thus provided for him(f). One moiety only of the land was allowed to be taken, because it was necessary, according to the feudal constitution of our law, that, whatever were the difficulties of the tenant, enough land should be left him to enable him to perform the services due to his lord(q). The statute, it will be observed, was passed prior to the time when the alienation of estates in fee simple was sanctioned by parliament; and there can be no doubt, that long after the passing of this statute the vendors and purchasers of landed property held a far less important place in legal consideration than they do at present. Construction of This circumstance may account for the somewhat harsh construction, which was soon placed on this statute, and which continued to be applied to it, until its replacement by an enlarged and amended act of modern date(h). It was held, that, if at the time when the judgment of the Court was given for the recovery of the debt, or awarding the damages, the debtor had lands, but afterwards sold them, the creditor might still, under the writ with which the statute had furnished him, take a moiety of the lands out of the hands of the purchaser (i). It > (f) Co. Litt. 289 b; Bac. Abr. tit. Execution (C. 2).

(g) Wright's Tenures, 170.

(h) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. (i) Sir John De Moleyn's case,

Year Book, 30 Edw. III. 24 a.

Writ of elegit.

the statute.

thus became important for all purchasers of lands to ascertain, that those from whom they purchased had no judgments against them. For, if any such existed, one moiety of the lands would still remain liable to be taken out of the hands of the purchaser to satisfy the judgment debt or damages. It was also held that if the debtor purchased lands after the date of the judgment, and then sold them again, even these lands would be liable, in the hands of the purchaser, to satisfy the claims of the creditors under the writ of elegit(k). In conscquence of the construction thus put upon the statute, judgment debts became incumbrances upon the title to every estate in fee simple, which it was necessary to discover and remove previously to every purchase. To Dockets. facilitate purchasers in their search for judgments, an alphabetical docket or index of judgments was provided by an act of William and Mary(l), to be kept in each of the courts, open to public inspection and search. But, by an enactment of the present reign(m) these dockets have now been closed, and the ancient statute New closed. is, with respect to purchasers, virtually repealed.

The rights of judgment creditors to follow the lands $s_{tat.1 & 2 Vict.}$ of their debtors in the hands of purchasers, were re- c. 110. modelled by an act of parliament of the present reign, passed for the purpose of extending the remedies of creditors against the property of their debtors (n). The The whole of old statute extended only to one half of the lands of the debtor; but, by this act, the whole of the lands, and all other hereditaments of the debtor, could be taken under (k) Brace v. Duchess of Marlborough, 2 P. Wms. 492; Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 418, 13th ed.; 3 Prest. Abst. 323, 331, 332.

(1) Stat. 4 & 5 Will. & Mary,
c. 20, made perpetual by stat. 7
& 8 Will. 111. c. 36.

(m) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11,
ss. 1, 2.
(n) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, amended by stats. 2 & 3 Vict.
c. 11, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, 18 &

c. 11, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38. the writ of elegit (o). The power of the judgment creditor to take lands out of the hands of purchasers was no longer left to depend on a forced construction, such as that applied to the old statute; for this act expressly extended the remedy of the judgment creditor to lands of which the debtor should have been seised or possessed at the time of entering up the judgment, or at any time afterwards. But as we shall presently see, this extensive power has since been much curtailed. The judgment creditor was also expressly provided with a remedy in equity, that is, in the Court of Chancery, as well as at law(p). And the remedies provided by the act were extended, in their application, to all decrees, orders, and rules made by the courts of equity and of common law, and by the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices in matters of bankruptcy, and by the Lord Chancellor in matters of lunacy, for the payment to any person of any money or costs(q). But before purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors could be affected under the provisions of this act, the name, abode and description of the debtor, with the amount of the debt, damages, costs or money recovered against him, or ordered by him to be paid, together with the date of registration, and other particulars, were required to be registered in an index which the act directed to be kept for the warning of purchasers, at the office of the Court of Common Pleas (r). This registration was required to be repeated every five years(s); but the purchaser was bound if the judgment, decree, order, or

(o) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 11. (p) Sect. 13.

(q) Sect. 18. See Jones v. Williams, 11 Ad. & Ell. 157; 8 Mecs. & Wels. 349; Doe v. Amey, 8 Mees. & Wels. 565; Wells v. Gibbs, 3 Beav. 399; Duke of Beaufort v. Phillips, 1 De Gex & Smale, 321. As to the Lords Justices, see stats. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 102; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 83. As to entering satisfaction on judgments, see stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 115, s. 2.

(r) Sect. 19; 2 & 3 Viet. c. 11,
s. 3; 18 & 19 Viet. c. 15, s. 10;
Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 423 et seq.,
13th ed.

(s) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 4.

Registry of judgments.

Re-registration.

rule was registered within five years before the execution of the conveyance to him, although more than five years should have elapsed since the last previous registration(t). If, however, the judgment, &c. were not so Notice immaregistered, or .re-registered, the purchaser was not terial. affected thereby, even though he should have had express notice of its existence (u); but the judgment creditor did not, by omitting to re-register, necessarily lose his priority, if once obtained, over subsequent judgments, though duly registered (x). And, by a Protection to further enactment, it was provided, in favour of pur- purchasers without notice. chasers without notice of any such judgments, decrees, orders, or rules, that none of such judgments, &c. should bind or affect any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest therein, as against such purchasers without notice, further or otherwise, or more extensively in any respect, although duly registered, than a judgment of one of the superior courts would have bound such purchasers before the last-mentioned act, when it had been duly docketed according to the law then in force (y). More recently it was provided (z), that no Further Act. judgment to be entered up after the 23rd of July, 1860, should affect any land as to a bonâ fide purchaser for valuable consideration, or a mortgagee, (whether such purchaser or mortgagee had notice or not of such judgment,) unless a writ or other due process of execution of such judgment should have been issued and registered, as provided by the act, before the execution of the conveyance or mortgage to him, and the payment of the purchase or mortgage money by him. And no such judgment, nor any writ of execution or other process thereon, was to affect any land as to a bonâ fide

(t) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, ford, 6 De Gex, M. & G. 492. s. 6. (y) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5; (u) Stat. 3 & 4 Viet. c. 82, s. 2; Lane v. Jackson, 20 Beav. 535. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, ss. 4, 5. (z) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38. (x) Beavan v. The Earl of Oxs. 1. R.P. G

81

purchaser or mortgagee, although execution or other process should have issued thereon and have been duly registered, unless such execution or other process should be executed and put in force within three calendar months from the time when it was registered. A registry of writs of execution was also provided (a); but as the entry was required to be made in alphabetical order by the names of the persons in whose behalf the judgments were registered, and not by the names of the debtors, it was still necessary to search for judgments in the registry above referred to (b).

An act has at length been passed which entirely New Act, lien of judgments deprives all future judgments of their lien on real abolished. estates (c). This act, which was passed on the 29th of July, 1864, provides that no future judgment shall affect any land, of whatever tenure, until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution by virtue of a writ of elegit, or other lawful authority, in pursuance of such judgment(d). In the construction of the act, the term "judgment" is to be taken to include registered decrees, orders of courts of equity and bankruptcy, and other orders having the operation of a judgment (e). Every writ, by virtue whereof any land Writ to be registered. shall have been actually delivered in execution, must be registered in the manner provided by the lastmentioned act(f), but in the name of the debtor against whom such writ or process is issued, instead of, as under that act, in the name of the creditor. And no other registration of the judgment is to be deemed necessary for any purpose (g). Every creditor to whom any land of his debtor shall have been actually delivered

 (a) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38,
 (e) Sect. 2.

 s. 2.
 (f) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38.

 (b) Ante, p. 80.
 (g) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112.

 (c) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112.
 s. 3.

 (d) Sect. 1.
 s. 3.

in execution by virtue of any judgment, and whose writ shall have been duly registered, may obtain from the Court of Chancery, upon petition in a summary way, Order for sale. an order for the sale of his debtor's interest in such land (h). The other judgment creditors, if any, are to be served with notice of the order for sale; and the proceeds of the sale are to be distributed amongst the persons who may be found entitled thereto, according to their priorities (i). And every person claiming any interest in such land through or under the debtor, by any means subsequent to the delivery of such land in execution as aforesaid, is bound by every such order for sale, and by all the proceedings consequent thereon (k). This act does not extend to Ireland(l). This act extends not only to judgments, but also to statutes and recognizances. Statutes merchant and statutes staple, which Statutes and are here referred to, are modes of securing money that recognizances. have long been obsolete. Recognizances are entered into before a court of record or a magistrate; and, like judgments, they were a charge on lands until the passing of this act(m).

Lands in either of the counties palatine of Lancaster Counties palaor Durham were affected both by judgments of the courts at Westminster, and also by judgments of the Palatine Court(n). These latter judgments had, within the county palatine, the same effect as judgments of the courts at Westminster; and an index for their registration was established in each of the counties palatine, similar to the index of judgments at the Common Pleas (o). And by a recent statute (p) it was provided,

 (h) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, perty," p. 100, 5th ed.

 s. 4.
 (n) 2 Wms. Saund. 194.

 (i) Sect. 5.
 (o) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110,

 (k) Sect. 6.
 s. 21.

 (l) Sect. 7.
 (p) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15,

 (m) See the Author's "Principles of the Law of Personal Pro s. 2.

that no judgment, decree, order, or rule of any court should bind lands in the counties palatine, as against purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, until registration in the court of the county palatine in which the lands were situate. And the same provisions as to re-registration within five years as applied to the registry of the Court of Common Pleas applied also to these registrics (q). Lands in the county palatine of Chester, and in the principality of Wales, have been placed by a modern statute exclusively within the jurisdiction of the courts at Westminster (r); and by another statute (s)the palatinate jurisdiction within the county of Durham, which formerly belonged to the Bishop of Durham, has been transferred to the crown.

Crown debts.

Debts due, or which may become due, to the crown, from persons who are accountants to the crown (t), and debts of record, or by bond or specialty, due from other persons to the crown (u), are also binding on their estates in fee simple when sold, as well as when devised by will, or suffered to descend to the heir-at-law. But any two (x) of the Commissioners of the Treasury are empowered, upon such terms as they may think proper, to certify by writing under their hands, that any lands of any crown debtor, or accountant to the crown, shall be held by the purchaser or mortgagee thereof discharged from all further claims of her Majesty, her heirs or successors, in respect of any debt or liability of the

(q) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 3.

(r) Stat. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 70, s. 14.

(s) Stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 19, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 45.

(t) Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 4; 25 Geo. 111. c. 35; Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 9. See also stats. 1 & 2 Geo. 1V. c. 121, s. 10; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, ss. 9, 10, 11; Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 436, 13th ed.

(u) Stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39, ss. 50, 75. But simple contract debts due to the crown by the vendor are not binding on the purchaser, unless he has notice of them, King v. Smith, Wightw. 34; Casberd v. Attorney-General, 6 Price, 474.

(x) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 89.

debtor or accountant to whom such lands belonged(y). And a similar power has more recently been given to any two of the commissioners, or other principal officers of any public department with respect to any crown bond or other security concerning or incident to any such department; or if there be only one such commissioner or officer then the power is vested in him(z). Actions at law and suits in equity, respecting the lands, Lis pendens. will also bind a purchaser, as well as the heir or devisee; that is, he must abide by the result, although he may be ignorant that any such proceedings are depending (a). To obviate the dangerous liability of purchasers to crown debts and pending suits, indexes have been opened at the Common Pleas of the names of crown debtors, and also of parties to suits; and lands cannot now be charged, in the hands of purchasers, with either of these liabilities, unless the name, abode, and description of the owner, with other particulars, are inserted in the proper index. And from the 31st of December, 1859, the provisions already mentioned for the re-registry of judgments every five years have been applied to crown debts; and notice of any crown debt not duly re-registered has been rendered of no avail against a purchaser (b). The indexes of crown debts and pending suits, together with the index of judgment debts, are accordingly searched previously to every purchase of lands; and, if the name of the vendor should be found in either, the debt or liability must be got rid of, before the purchase can be safely completed.

Another instance of involuntary alienation for the pay- Bankruptcy.

(y) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 10.

(z) Stats. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, ss. 195-197; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 115, s. 1.

(a) Co. Litt. 344 b; Anon. 1 Vern. 318; Hiern v. Mill, 13 Ves.

120; 3 Prest. Abst. 354; Bellamy v. Sabine, 1 De Gex & Jones, 566. (b) Stats. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, ss. 7, 8; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 22. Purchasers are indebted for this protection to Lord St. Leonards.

in which event the whole of his freehold, as well as his personal estate, is now vested first in the official and afterwards in the creditors' assignee, by virtue of his appointment, in trust for the whole body of the creditors (c). On the insolvency of any person, his whole estate formerly vested in the provisional assignee of the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, from whom it was transferred to assignees appointed by the Court, vesting in them by virtue of their appointment, and without any conveyance, in trust for the benefit of the creditors of the insolvent, according to the provisions of the act for amending the laws for the relief of insolvent debtors (d). The whole of these laws are however now repealed, and all debtors, whether traders or not, are subject to the provisions of the last act to amend the law relating to bankruptcy and insolvency in England (e). Involuntary alienation of lands also occurs in case of high treason or murder committed by the owner, as will be hereafter more fully explained.

The right and liability to alienation, both voluntary and involuntary, are inherent in property.

So inherent is the right of alienation of all estates (except estates tail, in which, as we have seen, the right is only of a modified nature), that it is impossible for any owner, by any means, to divest himself of this right. And in the same manner the liability of estates to involuntary alienation for payment of debts cannot by any means be got rid of. So long as any estate is in the hands of any person, so long does his power of disposition continue (f), and so long also continues his

(c) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 141, 142, repealing and consolidating the former statute 6 Geo. 1V. c. 16, and subsequent acts; amended by stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, and further amended and greatly altered by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134. (d) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 23 et seq. See also 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 102.

(e) Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.

(f) Litt. s. 360; Co. Litt. 206 b, 223 a.

Insolvency.

High treason and murder. liability to have the estate taken from him to satisfy the demands of his creditors (q). When, however, lands But a gift of or property are given by one person for the benefit of another, it is possible to confine the duration of the gift the period of within the period in which it can be personally enjoyed by the grantee. Thus land, or any other property, enjoyment. may be given to trustees in trust for A. until he shall dispose of the same, or shall become bankrupt or insolvent, or until any act or event shall occur, whereby the property might belong to any other person or persons (h); and this is frequently done. On the bankruptcy or insolvency of A., or on his attempting to make any disposition of the property, it will in such a case not vest in his assignees, or follow the intended disposition; but the interest which had been given to A. will thenceforth entirely cease; in the some manner as where lands are given to a person for life, his interest terminates on his decease. But, although another person may make such a gift for A.'s benefit, A. would not be allowed to make such a disposition of his own property in trust for himself (i). An exception to this rule of law Exception. occurs in a case of a woman, who is permitted by the Court of Chancery to have property settled upon her in such a way, that she cannot when married make any disposition of it during the coverture or marriage; but this mode of settlement is of comparatively modern date (k). There are also certain cases in which the personal enjoyment of property is essential to the performance of certain public duties, and in which no alienation of such property can be made; thus a benefice with cure of

(g) Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429, 433.

(h) Lockyer v. Savage, 2 Str. 947.

(i) Lester v. Garland, 5 Sim. 205; Phipps v. Lord Ennismore, 4 Russ. 131.

(k) Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 434; Tullett v. Armstrong, 1 Beav. 1; 4 M. & Cr .390; Scarborough v. Borman, 1 Beav. 34; 4 M. & Cr. 377.

property may be confined to the grantee's personal souls cannot be directly charged or encumbered (l); so offices concerning the administration of justice, and pensions and salaries given by the state for the support of the grantee in the performance of present or future duties, cannot be aliened (m); though pensions for past services are, generally speaking, not within the rule (n).

In addition to the interests which may be created by Husbands and wives.

alicnation, either voluntary or involuntary, there are certain rights, conferred by law on husbands and wives in each other's lands, by means of which the descent of an estate, from an ancestor to his heir, may partially be defeated. These rights will be the subject of a future chapter. If, however, the tenant in fce simple should not have disposed of his estate in his lifetime, or by his will; if it should not be swallowed up by his debts; and if he should not have been either traitor or murderer, his lands will descend (subject to any rights of his wife) to the heir at law. The heir, as we have before observed (0), is a person appointed by the law. He is called into existence by his ancestor's decease, for no man during his lifetime can have an heir. Nemo est hæres viventis. A man may have an heir apparent, or an heir presumptive, but until his decease he has no heir. The heir apparent is the person, who, if he survive the ancestor, must certainly be his heir, as the eldest son in the lifetime of his father. The heir presumptive is the person, who, though not certain to be heir at all events, should he survive, would yet be the heir in case of the ancestor's

(1) Stats. 13 Eliz. c. 20; 57
Geo. III. c. 99, s. 1; 1 & 2 Viet.
c. 106, s. 1; Shaw v. Pritchard, 10
Barn. & Cress. 241; Long v. Storie,
3 De Gex & Smale, 308; Hawkins
v. Gathercole, 6 De Gex, M. & G. 1.
(m) Flarty v. Odlum, 3 T. Rep.
681; stats. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16;
49 Geo. III. c. 126.

(n) M^cCarthy v. Goold, 1 Ball & Beatty, 387; Tunstal v. Boothby, 10 Sim. 542. But see statutes 47 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 25, s. 4 and 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 20, s. 47; Lloyd v. Cheetham, 3 Giff. 171; Heald v. Hay, 3 Giff. 467.

(o) Ante, p. 62.

88

The heir at law.

Heir apparent.

Heir presumptive. immediate decease. Thus an only daughter is the heiress presumptive of her father: if he were now to die, she would at once be his heir; but she is not certain of being heir; for her father may have a son, who would supplant her, and become heir apparent during the father's lifetime, and his heir after his decease. An heir at law is the only person in whom the law of England vests property, whether he will or not. If I make a conveyance of land to a person in my lifetime, or leave him any property by my will, he may, if he pleases, disclaim taking it, and in such case it will not vest in him against his will (p). But an heir at law, immediately on the decease of his ancestor, becomes presumptively possessed, or seised in law, of all his lands (q). No disclaimer that he may make will have The heir canany effect, though, of course he may, as soon as he not disclaim. pleases, dispose of the property by an ordinary conveyance. A title as heir at law is not nearly so frequent now as it was in the times when the right of alienation was more restricted. And when it does occur, it is often established with difficulty. This difficulty arises more from the nature of the facts to be proved, than from any uncertainty in the law. For the rules of descent have now attained an almost mathematical accuracy, so that, if the facts are rightly given, the heir at law can at once be pointed out. The accuracy of the Gradual prolaw has arisen by degrees, by the successive determination of disputed points. Thus, we have seen that, in the early feudal times, an estate to a man and his heirs simply, which is now an estate in fee simple, was descendible only to his offspring, in the same manner as an estate tail at the present day; but in process of time collateral relations were admitted to succeed. When this succession of collaterals first took place is a question involved in much obscurity; we only know that in the time of Henry II. the law was settled as follows :---In default of lineal descendants, the brothers and sisters came in : and if they were dead, their children ; then the uncles and their children; and then the aunts and their children; males being always preferred to females (r). Subsequently, about the time of Henry III. (s), the old Saxon rule, which divided the inheritance equally amongst all males of the same degree, and which had hitherto prevailed as to all lands not actually the subjects of feudal tenure (t), gave place to the feudal law, introduced by the Normans, of descent to the eldest son or eldest brother; though among females the estate was still equally divided, as it is at present. And, about the same time, all descendants in infinitum of any person, who would have been heir if living, were allowed to inherit by right of representation. Thus, if the eldest son died in the lifetime of his father, and left issue, that issue, though a grandson or granddaughter only, was to be preferred in inheritance before any younger son (u). The father, moreover, or any other lineal ancestor, was never allowed to succeed as heir to his son or other descendant; neither were kindred of the half-blood admitted to inherit(x). The rules of descent, thus gradually fixed, long remained unaltered. Lord Hale, in whose time they had continued the same for above 400 years, was the first to reduce them to a series of canons(y); which were afterwards admirably explained and illustrated by Blackstone, in his well-known Commentaries; nor was any alteration made till the enactment of the act for the amendment of the law of inheritance (z), A.D. 1833. By this act, amongst other

(p) Nicloson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst, 365, 372.

(q) Watkins on Descents, 25, 26 (4th ed. 34).

(r) 1 Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law, 43.

(s) 1 Reeves's Hist. 310; 2 Black. Com. 215; Co. Litt. 191 a, note (1), vi. 4.

(t) Clements v. Sandaman, 1 P. Wms. 64; 2 Lord Raymond, 1024; 1 Scriv. Cop. 53, (u) 1 Reeves's Hist. 310.

(x) 2 Black. Com. c. 14.

(y) Hale's Hist. Com. Law, 6th ed., p. 318 et seq.

(z) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, amended by stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, ss. 19, 20. important alterations, the father is heir to his son, supposing the latter to leave no issue; and all lineal ancestors are rendered capable of being heirs (a); relations of the half-blood are also admitted to succeed, though only on failure of relations in the same degree of the whole blood (b). The act has, moreover, settled a doubtful point in the law of descent to distant heirs. The rules of descent, as modified by this act, will be found at large in the next chapter.

(a) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, s. 6. (b) Sect. 9.

CHAPTER IV.

OF THE DESCENT OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE.

Rules of descent. WE shall now proceed to consider the rules of the descent of an estate in fee simple, as altered by the act for the amendment of the law of inheritance (a). This act does not extend to any descent on the decease of any person, who may have died before the first of January, 1834 (b). For the rules of descent prior to that date, the reader is referred to the Commentaries of Blackstone (c), and to Watkins's Essay on the Law of Descents.

Rule 1.

Purchase.

Descent formerly traced from the person

last possessed.

1. The first rule of descent now is, that inheritances shall lineally descend, in the first place, to the issue of the last purchaser in infinitum. The word purchase has in law a meaning more extended than its ordinary sense: it is possession to which a man cometh not by title of descent (d): a devisee under a will is accordingly a purchaser in law. And, by the act, the purchaser from whom descent is to be traced is defined to be, the last person who had a right to the land, and who cannot be proved to have acquired the land by descent, or by certain means (e) which render the land part of, or descendible in the same manner as, other land acquired by descent. This rule is an alteration of the old law, which was, that descent should be traced from the person who last had the feudal possession or seisin, as it was called;

(a) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, amended by stat. 22 & 23 Vict.
c. 35, ss. 19, 20.
(b) Sect. 11, (c) 2 Black. Com. c. 14.

(d) Litt. s. 12.

(e) Escheat, Partition and Inclosure, s. 1. the maxim being seisina facit stipitem (f). This maxim, a relict of the troublesome times when right without possession was worth but little, sometimes gave occasion to difficulties, owing to the uncertainty of the question, whether possession had or had not been taken by any person entitled as heir; thus, where a man was entering into a house by the window, and when half out and half in, was pulled out again by the heels, it was made a question, whether or no this entry was sufficient, and it was adjudged that it was(g). These difficulties cannot arise under the new act; for now the heir to be sought for is not the heir of the person last possessed, but the heir of the last person entitled who did not inherit, whether he did or did not obtain the possession, or the receipt of the rents and profits of the land. The rule, Objection to as altered, is not indeed altogether free from objection; for it will be observed that, not content with making a title to the land equivalent to possession, the act has added a new term to the definition, by directing descent to be traced from the last person entitled who did not inherit. So that if a person who has become entitled as heir to another should die intestate, the heir to be sought for is not the heir of such last owner, but the heir of the person from whom such last owner inherited. This provision, though made by an act consequent on the report of the Real Property Commissioners, was not proposed by them. The commissioners merely proposed that lands should pass to the heir of the person last entitled (h), instead, as before, of the person last possessed ; thus facilitating the discovery of the heir, by rendering a mere title to the lands sufficient to make the person entitled the stock of descent, without his obtaining the feudal possession, as before required. Under the old law, descent was confined within the limits of the family of the pur-

(f) 2 Black. Com. 209; Watk. 53). Descent, c. 1, s. 2. (h) Thirteenth proposal as to the alteration.

(g) Watk. Descent, 45 (4th ed. Descents.

chaser; but now no person who can be shown to have inherited can be the stock of descent, except in the case of the total failure of the heirs of the purchaser(i); in every other case, descent must be traced from the last purchaser. The author is bound to state that the decision of the Courts of Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, in the recent case of Muggleton v. Barnett(k), is opposed to this view of the construction of the statute. The reasons which have induced the author to think that decision erroneous will be found in Appendix A.

2. The second rule is, that the male issue shall be admitted before the female (l).

3. The third rule is, that where two or more of the male issue are in equal degree of consanguinity to the purchaser, the eldest only shall inherit; but the females shall inherit all together (m). The last two rules are the same now as before the recent act; accordingly, if a man has two sons, William and John, and two daughters, Susannah and Catherine (n), William, the eldest son, is the heir at law, in exclusion of his younger brother John, according to the third rule, and of his sisters, Susannah and Catherine, according to rule 2, although such sisters should be his seniors in years. If, however, William should die without issue, then John will succeed, by the second rule, in exclusion of his sisters; but if John also should die without issue, the two sisters will succeed in equal shares by the third rule, as being together heir to their father

Primogeniture.

re. Primogeniture, or the right of the eldest among the males to inherit, was a matter of far greater consequence in ancient times, before alienation by will was permitted,

(i) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, ss. 19, 20.
(k) 1 H. & N. 282; 2 H. & N. 653.

(l) 2 Black. Com. 212.
(m) 2 Black. Com. 214.
(n) See the Table of Descents annexed.

94

Rule 2.

Rule 3.

than it is at present. Its feudal origin is undisputed; but in this country it appears to have taken deeper root than elsewhere; for a total exclusion of the younger sons appears to be peculiar to England: in other countries, some portion of the inheritance, or some charge upon it, is, in many cases at least, secured by law to the younger sons (o). From this ancient right has arisen the modern English custom of settling the family estates on the eldest son; but the right and the custom are quite distinct: the right may be prevented by the owner making his will; and a conformity to the custom is entirely at his option.

When two or more persons together form an heir, Coparceners. they are called in law coparceners, or, more shortly, parceners (p). The term is derived, according to Littleton (q), from the circumstance, that the law will constrain them to make partition; that is, any one may oblige all the others so to do. Whatever may be thought of this derivation, it will serve to remind the reader, that coparceners are the only kind of joint owners, to whom the ancient common law granted the power of severing their estates without mutual consent: as the estate in coparcenary was cast on them by the act of the law, and not by their own agreement, it was thought right that the perverseness of one should not prevent the others from obtaining a more beneficial method of enjoying the property. This compulsory partition was formerly effected Partition. by a writ of partition (r), a proceeding now abolished (s). The modern method is by a commission issued for the purpose by the Court of Chancery (t); partition, however, is most frequently made by voluntary agreement

(o) Co. Litt. 191 a, n. (1), vi. 4. (p) Bac. Abr. tit. Coparceners. s. 36. (q) Sect. 241; 2 Black. Com. (t) Co. Litt. 169 a, n. (2); 1 189. 2 Drewry, 434. (r) Litt. ss. 247, 248.

(s) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27,

Fonb. Eq. 18; Canning v. Canning,

Severalty. Entirety. between the parties, and for this purpose a deed has, by a modern act of parliament, been rendered essential in every case (u). When partition has been effected, the lands allotted are said to be held in severalty; and each owner is said to have the entirety of her own parcel. After partition, the several parcels of land descend in the same manner as the undivided shares, for which they have been substituted (v); the coparceners, therefore, do not by partition become purchasers, but still continue to be entitled by descent. The term coparceners is not applied to any other joint owners, but only to those who have become entitled as coheirs (w).

Rule 4.

4. The fourth rule is, that all the lineal descendants in infinitum of any person deceased shall represent their ancestor; that is, shall stand in the same place as the person himself would have done, had he been living (x). Thus, in the case above mentioned, on the death of William the eldest son, leaving a son, that son would succeed to the whole by right of representation, in exclusion of his uncle John, and of his two aunts Susannah and Catherine; or had William left a son and daughter, such daughter would, after the decease of her brother, without issue, be, in like manner, the heir of her grandfather, in exclusion of her uncle and aunts.

Descent of an estate tail. The preceding rules of descent apply as well to the descent of an estate tail, if not duly barred, as to that of an estate in fee simple. The descent of an estate tail is always traced from the purchaser, or donee in tail, that is, from the person to whom the estate tail was at first given. This was the case before the recent act, as

 (u) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, Crosthwaite v. Dixon, 5 Adol. & repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, Ellis, 834.

 s. 3, to the same effect.
 (w) Litt. s. 254.

 (v) 2 Prest. Abst. 72; Doe d.
 (x) 2 Black. Com. 216.

well as now (y); for, the person who claims an entailed estate as heir claims only according to the express terms of the gift, or, as it is said, per formam doni. The gift is made to the donce, or purchaser, and the heirs of his body; all persons, therefore, who can become entitled to the estate by descent, must answer the description of heirs of the purchaser's body; in other words, must be his lineal heirs. The second and third rules also equally apply to estates tail, unless the restriction of the descent to heirs male or female should render unnecessary the second, and either clause of the third rule. The fourth rule completes the canon, so far as estates tail are concerned; for, when the issue of the donee are exhausted, such an estate must necessarily determine. But the descent of an estate in fee simple may extend to many other persons, and accordingly requires for its guidance additional rules, with which we now proceed.

5. The fifth rule is, that, on failure of lineal descend- Rule 5. ants, or issue of the purchaser, the inheritance shall descend to his nearest lineal ancestor. This rule is materially different from the rule which prevailed before the passing of the recent act. The former rule was, that, The old rule. on failure of lineal descendants or issue of the person last seised (or feudally possessed), the inheritance should descend to his collateral relations, being of the blood of the first purchaser, subject to the three preceding The old law never allowed lineal relations in rules(z). the ascending line (that is, parents or ancestors) to succeed as heirs. But, by the new act, descent is to be traced through the ancestor, who is to be heir in preference to any person who would have been entitled to inherit, either by tracing his descent through such lineal

(y) Doe d. Gregory v. Whichelo, (z) 2 Black. Com. 220. 8 T. Rep. 211. R.P. н

Exclusion of lineal ancestors.

Feudum novum ut antiquum.

ancestor, or in consequence of there being no descendant of such lineal ancestor. The exclusion of parents and other lineal ancestors from inheriting under the old law was a hardship of which it is not easy to see the propriety ; nor is the explanation usually given of its origin perhaps quite satisfactory. Bracton, who is followed by Lord Coke, compares the descent of an inheritance to that of a falling body, which never goes upwards in its course(a). The modern explanation derives the origin of collateral heirships, in exclusion of lineal ancestors, from gifts of estates (at the time when inheritances were descendible only to issue or lineal heirs) made, by the terms of the gift, to be descendible to the heirs of the donce, in the same manner as an ancient inheritance would have descended. This was called a gift of a feudum novum, or new inheritance, to hold ut feudum antiquum, as an ancient one. Now, an ancient inheritance, -one derived in a course of descent from some remote lineal ancestor,-would of course be descendible to all the issue or lineal heirs of such ancestor, including, after the lapse of many years, numerous families, all collaterally related to one another: an estate newly granted, to be descendible ut feudum antiquum, would therefore be capable of descending to the collateral relations of the grantee, in the same manner as a really ancient inheritance, descended to him, would have done. But an ancient inheritance could never go to the father of any owner, because it must have come from his father to him, and the father must have died before the son could inherit: in grants of inheritances to be descendible as ancient ones, it followed, therefore, that the father or any lineal ancestor could never inherit (b). So far, therefore, the explanation holds; but it is not consistent with every circumstance; for an elder brother has always been allowed to succeed as heir to his younger brother, contrary to this theory of an ancient lineal inheritance, which would have previously passed by every elder brother, as well as the father. The explanation of the origin of a rule, though ever so clear, is however a different thing from a valid reason for its continuance; and, at length, the propriety of placing the property of a family under the care of its head, is now perceived and acted on; and the father is heir to each of his children, who may die intestate and without issue, as is more clearly pointed out by the next rule.

(a) Bract. lib. 2, c. 29; Co. Litt. 11 a.

Wright's Tenures, 180. See also Co. Litt. 11 a, n. (1).

(b) 2 Black. Com. 212, 221, 222;

6. The sixth rule is, that the father and all the male Rule 6. paternal ancestors of the purchaser, and their descendants, shall be admitted, before any of the female paternal ancestors or their heirs; all the female paternal ancestors and their heirs, before the mother or any of the maternal ancestors, or her or their descendants; and the mother and all the male maternal ancestors, and her and their descendants, before any of the female maternal ancestors, or their heirs (c). This rule is a development Preference of of the ancient canon, which requires that, in collateral males to feinheritances, the male stocks should always be preferred to the female; and it is analogous to the second rule above given, which directs that in lineal inheritances the male issue shall be admitted before the female. This strict and careful preference of the male to the female line was in full accordance with the spirit of the feudal system, which, being essentially military in its nature, imposed obligations by no means easy for a female to fulfil; and those who were unable to perform the services could not expect to enjoy the benefits (d). The feudal origin of our laws of descent will not, however, afford a complete explanation of this preference; for

99

⁽c) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, of "descendants," sect. 1.
s. 7, combined with the definition (d) 2 Black. Com. 214.

such lands as continued descendible after the Saxon custom of equal division, and not according to the Norman and feudal law of primogeniture, were equally subject to the preference of males to females, and descended in the first place exclusively to the sons, who divided the inheritance between them, leaving nothing at all to their sisters. The true reason of the preference appears to lie in the degraded position in society which, in ancient times, was held by females; a position arising from their deficiency in that kind of might, which then too frequently made the right. The rights given by the common law to a husband over his wife's property (rights now generally controlled by proper settlements previous to marriage), show the state of dependence to which, in ancient times, women must have been reduced (e). The preference of males to females has been left untouched by the recent act for the amendment of the law of descents ; and the father and all his most distant relatives have priority over the mother of the purchaser: she cannot succeed as his heir until all the paternal ancestors of the purchaser, both male and female, and their respective families, have been exhausted. The father, as the nearest male lineal ancestor, of course stands first, supposing the issue of the purchaser to have failed. If the father should be dead, his eldest son, being the brother of the purchaser, will succeed as heir in the place of his father, according to the fourth rule; unless he be of the half blood to the purchaser, which case is provided for by the next rule, which is :--

Rule 7.

Preference of males to females still continued.

7. That a kinsman of the half blood shall be capable of being heir; and that such kinsman shall inherit next after a kinsman in the same degree of the whole blood, and after the issue of such kinsman, when the common ancestor is a male (f), and next after the common ancestor, when such ancestor is a female. This introduction of the half blood is also a new regulation : and, like the introduction of the father and other lineal ancestors. it is certainly an improvement on the old law, which had no other reason in its favour than the feudal maxims. or rather fictions, on which it was founded (g). By the By the old law old law, a relative of the purchaser of the half blood, could not inthat is, a relative connected by one only, and not by herit. both of the parents, or other ancestors, could not possibly be heir; a half brother, for instance, could never enjoy that right which a cousin of the whole blood, though ever so distant, might claim in his proper turn. The exclusion of the half blood was accounted for in a manner similar to that by which the exclusion of all lineal ancestors was explained; but a return to practical justice may well compensate a breach in a beautiful theory. Relatives of the half blood now take their proper and natural place in the order of descent. The position of the half blood next after the common ancestor, when such ancestor is a female, is rather a result of the sixth rule, then an additional independent regulation, as will appear hereafter.

(e) See post, the chapter on Husband and Wife.

8th. The eighth rule is, that, in the admission of Rule 8. female paternal ancestors, the mother of the more remote male paternal ancestor, and her heirs, shall be preferred to the mother of a less remote male paternal ancestor, and her heirs; and, in the admission of female maternal ancestors, the mother of the more remote male maternal ancestor, and her heirs, shall be preferred to the mother of a less remote male maternal ancestor, and her heirs (h). The eighth rule is a settlement of a point in distant heirships, which very seldom occurs,

(f) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, (h) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, s. 9. s. 8. (g) 2 Black, Com. 228.

101

but which has been the subject of a vast deal of learned controversy. The opinion of Blackstone (i) and Watkins (j) is now declared to be the law.

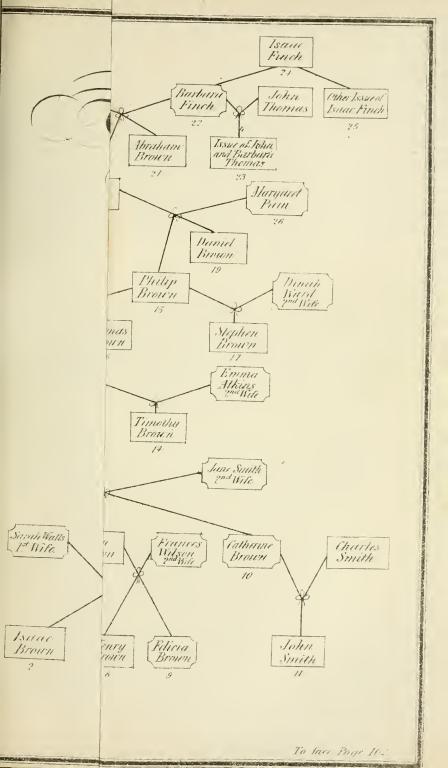

9th. A further rule of descent has now been intro-Rule 9. duced by a recent statute (k), which enacts that, where there shall be a total failure of heirs of the purchaser, or where any land shall be descendible as if an ancestor had been the purchaser thereof, and there shall be a total failure of the heirs of such ancestor, then and in every such case the land shall descend, and the descent shall thenceforth be traced, from the person last entitled to the land, as if he had been the purchaser thereof. This enactment provides for such a case as the following. A purchaser of lands may die intestate, leaving an only son and no other relations. On the death of the son intestate there will be a total failure of the heirs of the purchaser; and previously to this enactment the land would have escheated to the lord of the fee, as explained in the next chapter. But now, although there be no relations of the son on his father's side, yet he may have relations on the part of his mother, or his mother may herself be living: and these persons, who were before totally excluded, are now admitted in the order mentioned in the 6th rule Explanation of the table.

Descent to the sons and their issue.

The rules of descent above given will be better apprehended by a reference to the accompanying table, taken, with a little modification, from Mr. Watkins's Essay on the Law of Descents. In this table, Benjamin Brown is the purchaser, from whom the descent is to be traced. On his death intestate, the lands will accordingly descend first to his eldest son, by Ann Lee, William Brown; and from him (2ndly) to his eldest son, by Sarah Watts, Isaac Brown. Isaac dying without issue

(i) 2 Black. Com. 238.
(k) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35,
(j) Watkins on Descent, 130 ss. 19, 20.
(146 et seq. 4th ed.)

we must now seek the heir of the purchaser, and not the heir of Isaac. William, the eldest son of the purchaser, is dead; but William may have had other descendants, besides Isaac his eldest son; and, by the fourth rule, all the lineal descendants in infinitum of every person deceased shall represent their ancestor. We find accordingly that William had a daughter Lucy by his first wife, and also a second son, George, by Mary Wood, his second wife. But the son, George, though younger than his half sister Lucy, yet being a male, shall be preferred according to the second rule; and he is therefore (3rdly) the next heir. Had Isaac been the purchaser, the case would have been different; for, his half brother George would then have been postponed, in favour of his sister Lucy of the whole blood, according to the seventh rule. But now Benjamin is the purchaser, and both Isaac and George are equally his grandchildren. George dying without issue, we must again seek the heir of his grandfather Benjamin, who now is undeniably (4thly) Lucy, she being the remaining descendant of his eldest son. Lucy dying likewise without issue, her father's issue become extinct; and we must still inquire for the heir of Benjamin Brown, the purchaser, whom we now find to be (5thly) John Brown, his only son by his second wife. The land then descends from John to (6thly) his eldest son Edmund, and from Edmund (7thly) to his only son James. James dying without issue, we must once more seek the heir of the purchaser, whom we find among the yet living issue of John. John leaving a daughter by his first wife, and a son and a daughter by his second wife, the lands descend (8thly) to Henry, his son by Frances Wilson, as being of the male sex; but he dying without issue, we again seek the heir of Benjamin, and find that John left two daughters, but by different wives; these daughters, being in the same degree and both equally the children of their common father, whom they represent, shall succeed (9thly) in equal shares. One of these daughters dying without issue in the lifetime of the other, the other shall then succeed to the whole as the only issue of her father. But the surviving sister dying also without issue, we still pursue our old inquiry, and seek again for the heir of Benjamin Brown the purchaser.

Descent to the daughters of the purchaser and their issue.

The issue of the sons of the purchaser is now extinct; and, as he left two daughters, Susannah and Catherine, by different wives, we shall find, by the second and third rules, that they next inherit (10thly) in equal shares as heirs to him. Catherine Brown, one of the daughters, now marries Charles Smith, and dies, in the lifetime of her sister Susannah, leaving one son, John. The half share of Catherine must then descend to the next heir of her father Benjamin, the purchaser. The next heirs of Benjamin Brown, after the decease of Catherine, are evidently Susannah Brown and John Smith, the son of Catherine. And in the first edition of the present work it was stated that the half share of Catherine would, on her decease, descend to them. This opinion has been very generally entertained (1). On further research, however, the author inclined to the opinion that the share of Catherine would, on her decease, descend entirely to her son (11thly) by right of representation; and that, as respects his mother's share, he and he only is the right heir of the purchaser. The reasoning which led the author to this conclusion will be found in the Appendix (m). This point may now be considered as established.

Descent to the father of the purchaser, and his issue. If Susannah Brown and John Smith should die without issue, the descendants of the purchaser will then have become extinct; and Joseph Brown, the father of the purchaser, will then (12thly), if living, be his heir by the fifth and sixth rules. Bridget, the sister of the purchaser, then succeeds (13thly), as representing her father, in preference to her half brother Timothy, who is only of the half blood to the purchaser, and is accordingly postponed to his sister by the seventh rule. But next to Bridget is Timothy (14thly) by the same rule, Bridget being supposed to leave no issue.

(1) 23 Law Mag. 279; 1 Hayes's Conv. 313; 1 Jarman & Bythewood's Conveyancing, by Sweet, 139.

(m) See Appendix (B).

On the decease of Timothy without issue, all the de- Descent to the seendants of the father will have failed, and the inhe- male paternal ancestors of the ritance will next pass to Philip Brown (15thly), the purchaser, and paternal grandfather of the purchaser. But the grandfather being dead, we must next exhaust his issue, who stand in his place, and we find that he had another son, Thomas (16thly), who accordingly is the next heir; and, on his decease without issue, Stephen Brown (17thly), though of the half blood to the purchaser, will inherit, by the seventh rule, next after Thomas, a kinsman in the same degree of the whole blood. Stephen Brown dying without issue, the descendants of the grandfather are exhausted; and we must accordingly still keep, according to the sixth rule, in the male paternal line, and seek the paternal great grandfather of the purchaser, who is (18thly) Robert Brown; and who is represented, on his decease, by (19thly) Daniel Brown, his son. After Daniel and his issue follow, by the same rule, Edward (20thly) and his issue (21stly) Abraham.

All the male paternal ancestors of the purchaser, and Descent to the their descendants, are now supposed to have failed; and female paternal ancestors, and by the sixth rule, the female paternal ancestors and their their heirs. heirs are next admitted. By the eighth rule, in the admission of the female paternal ancestors, the mother of the more remote male paternal ancestor, and her heirs, shall be preferred to the mother of a less remote male paternal ancestor and her heirs. Barbara Finch (22ndly), and her heirs, have therefore priority both over Margaret Pain and her heirs, and Esther Pitt and her heirs; Barbara Finch being the mother of a more remote male their issue.

paternal ancestor than either Margaret Pain or Esther Pitt. Barbara Finch being dead, her heirs succeed her; she therefore must now be regarded as the stock of descent, and her heirs will be the right heirs of Benjamin Brown the purchaser. In seeking for her heirs, inquiry must first be made for her issue; now her issue by Edward Brown has already been exhausted in seeking for his descendants; but she might have had issue by another husband; and such issue (23rdly) will accordingly next succeed. These issue are evidently of the half blood to the purchaser. But they are the right heirs of Barbara Finch; and they are accordingly entitled to succeed next after her, without the aid they might derive from the position expressly assigned to them by the seventh rule. The common ancestor of the purchaser and of the issue is Barbara Finch, a female; and, by the united operation of the other rules, these issue of the half blood succeed next after the common ancestor. The latter part of the seventh rule is, therefore, explanatory only, and not absolutely necessary (n). In default of issue of Barbara Finch, the lands will descend to her father Isaac Finch (24thly), and then to his issue (25thly), as representing him. If neither Barbara Finch, nor any of her heirs can be found, Margaret Pain (26thly), or her heirs, will be next entitled, Margaret Pain being the mother of a more remote male paternal ancestor than Esther Pitt; but next to Margaret Pain and her heirs will be Esther Pitt (27thly), or her heirs, thus closing the list of female paternal ancestors.

Descent to the mother of the purchaser and the maternal ancestors. Next to the female paternal ancestors and their heirs comes the mother of the purchaser, Elizabeth Webb, (28thly) (supposing her to be alive), with respect to whom the same process is to be pursued as has before been gone over with respect to Joseph Brown, the pur-chaser's father. On her death, her issue by John Jones (29thly) will accordingly next succeed, as representing her, by the fourth rule, agreeably to the declaration as to the place of the half blood contained in the seventh rule. Such issue becoming extinct, the nearest male maternal ancestor is the purchaser's maternal grandfather, William Webb (30thly), whose issue (31stly) will be entitled to succeed him. Such issue failing, the whole line of male maternal ancestors and their descendants must be exhausted, by the sixth rule, before any of the female maternal ancestors, or their heirs, can find admission; and when the female maternal ancestors are resorted to, the mother of the more remote male maternal ancestor, and her heirs, is to be preferred, by the eighth rule, to the mother of the less remote male maternal ancestor, and her heirs. The course to be taken is, accordingly, precisely the same as in pursning the descent through the paternal ancestors of the In the present table, therefore, Harriet purchaser. Tibbs (32ndly), the maternal grandmother of the purchaser, is the person next entitled, no claimants appearing whose title is preferable; and, should she be dead, her heirs will be entitled next after her. On the failure of the heirs of the purchaser, the person last entitled is, as we have seen (o), to be substituted in his place, and the same course of investigation is again to be pursued with respect to the person last entitled as has already been pointed out with respect to the last purchaser.

(n) See Jarman & Blythewood's Conveyancing, by Sweet, vol. i. 146, note (a).

It should be carefully borne in mind, that the abovementioned rules of descent apply exclusively to estates in land, and to that kind of property which is denominated real, and have no application to money or other personal estate, which is distributed on intestacy in a manner which the reader will find explained in the author's treatise on the law of personal property (p).

(o) Ante, p. 102. (p) Page 256, 1st ed.; 275, 2nd ed.; 283, 3rd ed.; 293, 4th ed.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE TENURE OF AN ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE.

A lease for years.

THE most familiar instance of a tenure is given by a common lease of a house or land for a term of years; in this case the person letting is still called the landlord, and the person to whom the premises are let is the tenant; the terms of the tenure are according to the agreement of the parties, the rent being usually the chief item, and the rest of the terms of tenure being contained in the covenants of the lease : but, if no rent should be paid, the relation of landlord and tenant would still subsist, though of course not with the same advantage to the landlord. This, however, is not a freehold tenure; the lessee has only a chattel interest, as has been before observed (a); but it may serve to explain tenures of a freehold kind, which are not so familiar, though equally A lease for life. important. So, when a lease of lands is made to a man for his life, the lessee becomes tenant to the lessor (b), although no rent may be reserved; here again a tenure is created by the transaction, during the life of the lessec, and the terms of the tenure depend on the agreement of the parties. So, if a gift of land should be A gift in tail. made to a man and the heirs of his body, the donee in tail, as he is called, and his issue, would be the tenants of the donor as long as the entail lasted (c), and a freehold tenure would thus be created.

Fee simple.

But if a gift should be made to a man and his heirs, or for an estate in fee simple, it would not now be lawful

(a) Ante, p. 8. (b) Litt. s. 132; Gilb. Tenures, 90.

(c) Litt. s. 19; Kitchen on Courts, 410; Watk. Desc. p. 4, n. (m), pp. 11, 12, (4th ed.)

for the parties to create a tenure between themselves, as in the case of a gift for life, or in tail. For by the statute of Quia emptores (d), we have seen that it was Statute of Quia enacted, that from thenceforth it should be lawful for emptores. every free man to sell, at his own pleasure, his lands or tenements, or part thereof, so nevertheless that the feoffee, or purchaser, should hold the same lands or tenements of the same chief lord of the fee, and by the same services and customs as his feoffor, the seller, held them before. The giver or seller of an estate in fee simple is then himself but a tenant, with liberty of putting another in his own place. He may have under him a tenant for years, or a tenant for life, or even a tenant in tail, but he cannot now, by any kind of conveyance, place under himself a tenant of an estate in fee simple. The statute of Quia emptores now forbids any one from making himself the lord of such an estate: all he can do is to transfer his own tenancy; and the purchaser of an estate in fee simple must hold his estate of the same chief lord of the fee, as the seller held before him. The introduction of this doctrine of tenures has been already noticed (e), and it still prevails throughout the kingdom; for it is a fundamental rule, that all the lands within this realm were originally derived from the crown (either by express grant or tacit intendment of law), and therefore the Queen is sovereign lady, or Queen is lady lady paramount, either mediate or immediate, of all and paramount. every parcel of land within the realm (f).

The rent, services and other incidents of the tenure Ancient inciof estates in fee simple were, in ancient times, matters dents of tenure of much variety, depending as they did on the mutual fee simple. agreements which, previously to the statute of Quia emptores, the various lords and tenants made with each other; though still they had their general laws, governing such cases as were not expressly provided for (q). The lord was usually a baron, or other person of power and consequence, to whom had been granted an estate in fee simple in a tract of land. Of this land he retained as much as was necessary for his own use, as his own demesne (h), and usually built upon it a mansion or manor house. Part of this demesne was in the occupation of the villeins of the lord, who held various small parcels at his will, for their own subsistence, and cultivated the residue for their lord's benefit. The rest of the cultivable land was granted out by the lord to various freeholders, subject to certain stipulated rents or services, as " to plough ten acres of arable land, parcel of that which remained in the lord's possession, or to carry his dung unto the land, or to go with him to war against the Scots" (i). The barren lands which remained formed the lord's wastes, over which the cattle of the tenants were allowed to roam in search of pasture (i). In this way manors were created (k), every one of which is of a date prior to the statute of Quia emptores(l), except perhaps some, which may have been created by the king's tenants in capite with license from the crown (m). The lands held by the villeins were the origin of copyholds, of which more hereafter (n). Those granted to the freemen were subject to various (g) Bract. c. 19, fol. 48 b; Britton, c. 66.

⁽d) 18 Edw. I. c. 1, ante, p. 60. Book, M. 24 Edw. III. 65 b, pl. 60. (e) Ante, pp. 2, 3.

⁽f) Co. Litt. 65 a, 93 a; Year

(h) Attorney-General v. Parsons,2 Cro. & Jerv. 279, 308.

(i) Perkins's Profitable Book, s. 670.

(j) In the recent case of Lord Dunraven v. Llewellyn, 15 Q. B. 791, the Court of Exchequer Chamber held that there was no general common law right of tenants of a manor to common on the waste. But, in the humble opinion of the author, the authorities cited by the Court tend to the opposite conclusion.

(k) See Scriv. Cop. 1; Watk. Cop. 6, 7; 2 Black. Com. 90.

(1) 18 Edw. I. c. 1.

(m) 1 Watk. Cop. 15; ante, p. 60.

(n) Post, chapters on Copyholds.

The lord's demesne, &c.

Manors.

burdens, according to the nature of the tenure. In the Incidents of tenure by knights' service, then the most universal and the tenure by knights' serhonourable species of tenure, the tenant of an estate of vice. inheritance, that is, of an estate of fee simple or fee tail (o), was bound to do homage to his lord, kneeling to Homage. him, professing to become his man, and receiving from him a kiss (p). The tenant was moreover at first expeeted, and afterwards obliged, to render to his lord pecuniary aids, to ransom his person, if taken prisoner, Aids. to help him in the expense of making his eldest son a knight, and in providing a portion for the eldest daughter on her marriage. Again, on the death of a tenant, his heir was bound to pay a fine, called a relief, on taking Relief. to his ancestor's estate (q). If the heir were under age, the lord had, under the name of wardship, the custody Wardship. of the body and lands of the heir, without account of the profits, till the age of twenty-one years in males, and sixteen in females; when the wards had a right to require possession, or sue out their livery, on payment Livery. to the lord of half a year's profits of their lands. In addition to this, the lord possessed the right of marriage Marriage. (maritagium), or of disposing of his infant wards in matrimony, at their peril of forfeiting to him, in case of their refusing a suitable match, a sum of money equal to the value of the marriage; that is, what the suitor was willing to pay down to the lord as the price of marrying his ward; and double the market value was to be forfeited, if the ward presumed to marry without the lord's consent (r). The king's tenants in capite were moreover subject to many burdens and restraints, from

(o) Litt. s. 90.

(p) See a description of homage, Litt. ss. 85, 86, 87; 2 Bl. Com. 53.

(q) Scriven on Copyholds, 738 et seq.

(r) 2 Black. Com. 63 et seq.;

Scriven on Copyholds, 729. Wardship and marriage were no parts of the great feudal system, but were introduced into this country, and perhaps invented, by the Normans. 2 Hall. Midd. Ages, 415.

every lord, who had two tenants or more, had a right to compel their attendance at the court baron of the manor, to which his grants to them had given existence; this attendance was called suit of court, and the tenants were called free-suitors (t). And to every species of lay tenure, as distinguished from clerical, and whether of an estate in fee simple, in tail, or for life, or otherwise, there was inseparably incident a liability for the tenant, whenever called upon, to take an oath of fealty or fidelity Suit of court.

Fealty.

Free and common socage.

to his lord(u).

At the present day, however, a much greater simplicity and uniformity will be found in the incidents of the tenure of an estate in fee simple, for there is now only one kind of tenure by which such an estate can be held; and that is the tenure of free and common socage(x). The tenure of free and common socage is of great antiquity; so much so, that the meaning of the term socage is the subject only of conjecture (y). Comparatively few of the lands in this country were in ancient times the subjects of this tenure: the lands, in which estates in fee simple were thus held, appear to have been among those which escaped the grasp of the Conqueror, and

(s) As primer seisin, involuntary knighthood in certain cases and fines for alienation.

(t) Gilb. Ten. 431 et seq.; Scriven on Copyholds, 719 et seq.

(u) Litt. ss. 91, 131, 132; Scriv. Cop. 732.

(x) 2 Black. Com. 101.

(y) Sce Litt. s. 119; Wright's Tenures, 143; 2 Black. Com. 80; Co. Litt. 86 a, n. (1); 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 481. The controversy lies between the Saxon word soc, which signifies a liberty, privilege or franchise, especially one of jurisdiction, and the French word soc, which signifies a ploughshare. In favour of the former is urged the beneficial nature of the tenure, and also the circumstance that socagers were, as now, bound to attend the court baron of the lord, to whose soc or right of justice they belonged. In favour of the latter derivation is urged the nature of the employment, as well as the most usual condition of tenure of the lands of sockmen, who were principally engaged in agriculture.

remained in the possession of their ancient Saxon proprietors (z). The owners of fee simple estates, held by this tenure, were not villeins or slaves, but freemen (a); hence the term free socage. No military service was duc, as the condition of the enjoyment of the estates. Homage to the lord, the invariable incident to the military tenures (b), was not often required (c); but the services, if any, were usually of an agricultural nature: a fixed rent was sometimes reserved; and in process of Rent. time the agricultural services appear to have been very generally commuted into such a rent. In all cases of annual rent, the relief paid by the heir, on the death of Relief. his ancestor, was fixed at one year's rent(d). Frequently no rent was due; but the owners were simply bound to take, when required, the oath of fealty to the Fealty. lord of whom they held (e), to do suit at his court, if he Suit of court. had one, and to give him the customary aids for knight- Aids. ing his eldest son and marrying his eldest daughter (f). This tenure was accordingly more beneficial than the Superiority of military tenures, by which fee simple estates, in most socage tenure. other lands in the kingdom, were held. True, the actual military service, in respect of lands, became gradually commuted for an escuage or money payment, assessed Escuage. on the tenants by knights' service from time to time, first at the discretion of the crown, and afterwards by authority of parliament (q); and this commutation appears to have generally prevailed, from so early a period as the time of Henry II. But the great superiority of the socage tenure was still felt in its freedom from the

(z) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 481.

(a) Ibid.; 2 Black. Com. 60, 61.

(b) Co. Litt. 65 a, 67 b, n. (1).

(c) Co. Litt. 86 a.

(d) Litt. s. 126; 2 Black, Com. 87.

(e) Litt. ss. 117, 118, 131. (f) Co. Litt. 91 a; 2 Black. Com. 86. (g) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 439, 440; 2 Black. Com. 74; Wright's Tenures, 131; Litt. s. 97; Co. Litt. 72 a.

R.P.

I

burdens of wardship and marriage, and other exactions, imposed on the tenants of estates in fee held by the other tenures (h). The wardship and marriage of an infant tenant of an estate held in socage devolved on his nearest relation, (to whom the inheritance could not descend,) who was strictly accountable for the rents and profits (i). As the commerce and wealth of the country increased, and the middle classes began to feel their own power, the burdens of the other tenures became insupportable; and an opportunity was at last seized of throwing them off. Accordingly, at the restoration of King Stat. 12 Car. II. Charles II., an act of parliament was insisted on and obtained, by which all tenures by knights' service, and the fruits and consequences of tenures in capite (i), were taken away; and all tenures of estates of inheritance in the hands of private persons (except copyhold tenures) were turned into free and common socage; and the same were for ever discharged from homage, wardships, values and forfeitures of marriage, and other charges incident to tenure by knights' service, and from aids for marrying the lord's daughter and for making his son a knight(k).

Power for the father to appoint a guardian to his child.

The right of wardship or guardianship of infant tenants having thus been taken away from the lords, the opportunity was embraced of giving to the father a right of appointing guardians to his children. It was accordingly provided by the same act of parliament(l), that the father of any child under age and not married at the time of his death, may, by deed executed in his lifetime, or by his will in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, in such manner and from time to time as he shall think

(h) 2 Hallam's Middle Ages, 481.

(i) 2 Black. Com. 87, 88.

(j) Co. Litt. 108 a, n. (5).

(k) Stat. 12 Car. 11. c. 24. The 12th Car. II. A.D. 1660, was the first year of his actual reign.

(1) Stat. 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 8. See Morgan v. Hatchell, 19 Beav. 86.

c. 24.

fit, dispose of the custody and tuition of such child during such time as he shall remain under the age of one-and-twenty years, or any lesser time, to any person or persons in possession or remainder. And this power was given, whether the child was born at his father's decease or only in ventre sa mere at that time, and whether the father were within the age of one-and-twenty years, or of full age. But it seems that the father, if under age, cannot now appoint a guardian by will; for the Wills Act now enacts, that no will made by any person under the age of twenty-one years shall be valid (m). In other respects, however, the father's right to appoint a guardian still continues as originally provided by the above-mentioned statute of Charles II. The guardian so appointed has a right to receive the rents of the child's lands, for the use of the child, to whom, like a guardian in socage, he is accountable when the child comes of age. A guardian cannot be appointed by the mother of a child, or by any other relative than the father (n).

A rent is not now often paid in respect of the tenure Rent. of an estate in fee simple. When it is paid, it is usually called a quit rent (o), and is almost always of a very triffing amount: the change in the value of money in modern times will account for this. The relief of one Relief. year's quit rent, payable by the heir on the death of his ancestor, in the case of a fixed quit rent, was not abolished by the statute of Charles, and such relief is accordingly still due (p). Suit of court also is still Suit of court. obligatory on tenants of estates in fee simple, held of any manor now existing (q). And the oath of fealty still Fealty.

(m) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.
c. 26, s. 7; 1 Jarm. Wills, 36,
1st ed.; 34, 2nd ed.; 39, 3rd ed.

(n) Ex parte Edwards, 3 Atk.
519; Bac. Abr. tit. Guardian
(A) 3. Sce also Mr. Hargrave's

Notes to Co. Litt. 88 b. (0) 2 Black. Com. 43; Co. Litt. 85 a, n. (1). (p) Co. Litt. 85 a, n. (1); Scriv. Cop. 738. (q) Scriv. Cop. 736. continues an incident of tenure, as well of an estate in fee simple, as of every other estate, down to a tenancy for a mere term of years; but in practice it is seldom or never exacted (r).

Escheat

Bastardy.

There is yet another incident of the tenure of estates in fee simple; an incident, which has existed from the earliest times, and is still occasionally productive of substantial advantage to the lord. As the donor of an estate for life has a certain reversion on his tenant's death, and as the donor of an estate in tail has also a reversion expectant on the decease of his tenant, and failure of his issue, but subject to be defeated by the proper bar, so the lord, of whom an estate in fee simple is held, possesses, in respect of his lordship or seignory, a similar (s), though more uncertain advantage, in his right of escheat; by which, if the estate happens to end, the lands revert to the lord, by whose ancestors or predecessors they were anciently granted to the tenant (t). When the tenant of an estate in fee simple dies, without having alienated his estate in his lifetime, or by his will (u), and without leaving any heirs, either lineal or collateral, the lands in which he held his estate escheat (as it is called) to the lord of whom he held them. Bastardy is the most usual cause of the failure of heirs; for a bastard is in law nullius filius; and, being nobody's son, he can consequently have no brother or sister, or any other heir than

(r) Co. Litt. 67 b, n. (2), 68 b, n. (5).

(s) Watk. Descent, p. 2 (pp. 5, 6, 7, 4th ed.)

(t) 2 Black. Com. 72; Scriv. Cop. 757 et seq.

(u) Year Book, 49 Edw. III. c. 17; Co. Litt. 236 a, n. (1); Scriv. Cop. 762. But it may perhaps be doubted whether the new Wills Act (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 3) extends to this case, and whether, therefore, in order to prevent an escheat, three witnesses should not attest the will as under the old law, which still subsists as to wills to which the new act does not extend (see sect. 2). an heir of his body(v); nor can his descendants have any heirs, but such as are also descended from him. If such a person, therefore, were to purchase lands, that is, to acquire an estate in fee simple in them, and were to die possessed of them without having made a will (w), and without leaving any issue, the lands would escheat to the lord of the fee, for want of heirs. Again, when sentence of death is pronounced on a person convicted of high treason or murder, or of abetting, procuring, or counselling the same (x), his blood is said to be attainted Attainder. or corrupted, and loses its inheritable quality. In cases of high treason, the crown becomes entitled by forfeiture to the lands of the traitor (y); but in the other cases the lord, of whom the estate was held, becomes entitled by escheat to the lands, after the death of the attainted person (z); subject, however, to the Queen's right of possession for a year and a day, and of committing waste, called the Queen's year, day and waste,-a right now usually compounded for (a). The crown most frequently obtains the lands escheated in consequence of the before-mentioned rule, that the crown was the original proprietor of all the lands in the kingdom (b). But if there should be any lord of a manor, or other person, who could prove that the estate so terminated

(v) Co. Litt. 3 b; 2 Black. Com. 347; Bac. Abr. tit. Bastardy (B).

(w) See ante, p. 116, n. (u).

(x) Stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 145; 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 2, repealed by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, and reenacted by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 8.

(y) Stat. 26 Hen. VIII. c. 13, s. 5; 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 11, s. 9; 39 Geo. III. c. 93; 4 Black. Com. 381.

(z) 2 Black. Com. 245; 4 Black. Com. 380, 381; Swinburne, part 2, sect. 13; Bac. Abr. tit. Wills and Testaments (B).

(a) 4 Black. Com. 385.

(b) Lands escheated or forfeited to the crown are frequently restored to the families of the persons to whom such lands belonged pursuant to stat. 39 & 40 Geo. 11I. c. 88, s. 12, explained and amended by stats. 47 Geo. 11I. scss. 2, c. 24, and 59 Geo. 11I. c. 94, and extended to forfeited leaseholds by stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 17.

was held of him, he, and not the crown, would be entitled. In former times, there were many such mesne or intermediate lords; every baron, according to the feudal system, had his tenants, and they again had theirs. The alienation of lands appears, indeed, as we have seen (c), to have most generally, if not universally, proceeded on this system of subinfeudation. But now, the fruits and incidents of tenure of estates in fee simple are so few and rare, that many such estates are considered as held directly of the crown, for want of proof as to who is the intermediate lord; and the difficulty of proof is increased by the fact before mentioned, that, since the statute of Quia emptores, passed in the reign of Edward I. (d), it has not been lawful to create a tenure of an estate in fee simple; so that every lordship or seignory of an estate in fee simple bears date at least as far back as that reign: to this rule the few seignories, which may have been subsequently created by the king's tenants in capite, form the only exception(e).

A small occasional quit rent, with its accompanying relief,—suit of the Court Baron, if any such exists,—an oath of fealty never exacted,—and a right of escheat seldom accruing,—are now, it appears, therefore, the ordinary incidents of the tenure of an estate in fee simple. There are, however, a few varieties in this tenure which are worth mentioning; they respect either the persons to whom the estate was originally granted, or the places in which the lands holden are situate. And, first, respecting the persons: The ancient tenure of grand serjeanty was where a man held his lands of the king by services to be done in his own proper person to the king, as, to Grand serjeanty.

(c) Ante, pp. 37, 58.

(d) 18 Edw. I. c. 1; ante, pp. 69, 109.

(e) By a recent statute, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, lands vested in any person upon any trust, or by way of mortgage, are exempted from escheat. This act repeals a former statute, 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 23, to the same effect. carry the banner of the king, or his lance, or to be his marshal, or to carry his sword before him at his coronation, or to do other like services (f): when, by the statute of Charles II. (g), this tenure, with the others, was turned into free and common socage, the honorary services above described were expressly retained. The ancient tenure of petit serjeanty was where a man held Petit serjeanty. his land of the king, "to yield him yearly a bow, or a sword, or a dagger, or a knife, or a lance, or a paire of gloves of maile, or a paire of gilt spurs, or an arrow, or divers arrowes, or to yield such other small things belonging to warre" (h): this was but socage in effect (i), because such a tenant was not to do any personal service, but to render and pay yearly certain things to the king. This tenure therefore still remains unaffected by the statute of Charles II.

Next, as to such varieties of tenure as relate to places: - These are principally the tenures of gavelkind, borough-English, and ancient demesne. The tenure of gavelkind, or, as it has been more correctly styled (k), Gavelkind. socage tenure, subject to the custom of gavelkind, prevails chiefly in the county of Kent, in which county all estates of inheritance in land (1) are presumed to be holden by this tenure until the contrary is shown(m). The most remarkable feature of this kind of tenure is the descent of the estate, in case of intestacy, not to the eldest son, but to all the sons in equal shares (n), and so to brothers and other collateral relations, on failure of nearer heirs (o). It is also a remarkable peculiarity

(f) Litt. s. 153.

(g) 12 Car. Il. c. 24; ante, p. 114.

(h) Litt. s. 159.

(i) Litt. s. 160; 2 Black. Com. 81.

(k) Third Report of Real Property Commissioners, p. 7.

(1) Including estates tail, Litt.

s. 265; Robinson on Gavelkind, 51, 94 (64, 119, 3rd ed.)

(m) Robinson on Gavelkind, 44 (54, 3rd ed.)

(n) Every son is as great a gentleman as the eldest son is; Litt. s. 210.

(o) Rob. Gav. 92; 3rd Rep. of Real Property Commissioners, p.

of this custom, that every tenant of an estate of freehold (except of course an estate tail) is able, at the early age of fifteen years, to dispose of his estate by feoffment (p), the ancient method of conveyance, to be hereafter explained. There is also no escheat of gavelkind lands upon a conviction of murder (q); and some other peculiarities of less importance belong to this tenure (r). The custom of gavelkind is generally supposed to have been a part of the ancient Saxon law, preserved by the struggles of the men of Kent at the time of the Norman conquest; and it is still held in high esteem by the inhabitants, so that whilst some lands in the county, having been originally held by knights' service, are not within the custom (s), and others have been disgavelled, or freed from the custom, by various acts of parliament (t), any attempt entirely to extinguish the peculiarities of this tenure has uniformly been resisted (u). There are a few places, in other parts of the kingdom, where the course of descent follows the custom of gavelkind (x); but it may be doubted whether the tenure of gavelkind, 9; Crump d. Woolley v. Norwood, 7 Taunt. 362; Hook v. Hook, 1 Hemming & Miller, 43; in opposition to Bac. Abr. tit. Descent (D), citing Co. Litt. 140 a.

(p) Rob. Gav. 193 (248, 3rd ed.), 217 (277, 3rd ed.); 2 Black. Com. 84; Sandys' Consuetudines Kanciæ, p. 165. See stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3.

(q) Rob. Gav. 226 (228, 3rd ed.)

(r) The husband is tenant by courtesy of a moiety only of his deceased wife's land, until he marries again, whether there were issue born alive or not; the widow also is dowable of a moiety instead of a third, and during widowhood and chastity only; estates in fee simple were devisable by will, before the statute was passed, empowering the devise of such estates; and some other ancient privileges, now obsolete, were attached to this tenure. See Robinson on Gavelkind, passim; 3rd Report of Real Property Commissioners, p. 9.

(s) Rob. Gav. 46 (57, 3rd ed.)

(t) See Rob. Gav. 75 (94, 3rd ed.)

(u) An express saving of the custom of gavelkind is inserted in the act for the commutation of certain manorial rights, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 80.

(x) Kitchen on Courts, 200; Co. Litt. 140 a. with all its accompanying peculiarities, is to be found elsewhere than in the county of Kent (y).

Tenure subject to the custom of borough-English prevails in several cities and ancient boroughs, and districts adjoining to them; the tenure is socage, but, according to the custom, the estate descends to the youngest son in exclusion of all the other children (z). The custom does not in general extend to collateral relations; but by special custom it may, so as to admit the youngest brother, instead of the eldest (a). Estates, as well in tail as in fee simple, descend according to this custom (b).

The tenure of ancient demesne exists in those manors, Ancient deand in those only, which belonged to the crown in the mesne. reigns of Edward the Confessor and William the Conqueror, and in Domesday Book are denominated Terræ Regis Edwardi, or Terræ Regis(c). The tenants are freeholders (d), and possess certain ancient immunities, the chief of which is a right to sue and be sued only in their lord's court. Before the abolition of fines and recoveries, these proceedings, being judicial in their nature, could only take place, as to lands in ancient demesne, in the lord's court; but, as the nature of the tenure was not always known, much inconvenience frequently arose from the proceedings being taken by mistake in the usual Court of Common Pleas at Westminster; and these mistakes have given to the tenure a prominence

(y) See Bac. Abr. tit. Gavelkind (B) 3.

(z) Litt. s. 165; 2 Black. Com. 83.

(a) Comyns' Digest, tit. Borough-English; Watk. Descents, 89 (94, 4th ed.) See Rider v. Wood, 1 Kay & Johns. 644.

(b) Rob. Gav. 94 (120, 3rd edit.)

(c) 2 Seriv. Cop. 687.

(d) The account given by Blackstone of this tenure as altogether copyhold (2 Black. Com. 100) appears to be erroneous, though no doubt there are copyholds of some of the lands of such manors. 3rd Rep. of Real Property Commissioners, p. 13; 2 Scriv. Cop. 691. in practice which it would not otherwise have possessed. Such mistakes, however, have been corrected, as far as possible, by the act for the abolition of fines and recoveries (e); and for the future, the substitution of a simple deed, in the place of those assurances, renders such mistakes impossible. So that this peculiar kind of socage tenure now possesses but little practical importance.

So much then for the tenure of free and common socage, with its incidents and varieties. There is yet another kind of ancient tenure still subsisting, namely, the tenure of frankalmoign, or free alms, already men-Frankalmoign. tioned (f), by which the lands of the church are for the most part held. This tenure is expressly excepted from the statute 12 Car. II. c. 24, by which the other ancient tenures were destroyed. It has no peculiar incidents, the tenants not being bound even to do fealty to the lords, because, as Littleton says (q), the prayers and other divine services of the tenants are better for the lords than any doing of fealty. As the church is a body having perpetual existence, there is moreover no chance of any escheat. This tenure is therefore a very near practical approach to that absolute dominion on the part of the tenant, which yet in theory the law never allows.

(e) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, ss.
(f) Ante, p. 36.
(g) Litt. s. 135; Co. Litt. 67 b.

(123)

CHAPTER VI.

OF JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON.

A GIFT of lands to two or more persons in joint tenancy is such a gift as imparts to them, with respect to all other persons than themselves, the properties of one single owner. As between themselves, they must, of course, have separate rights; but such rights are equal in every respect, it not being possible for one of them to have a greater interest than another in the subject of the tenancy. A joint tenancy is accordingly said to be The four unidistinguished by unity of possession, unity of interest, ties of jo unity of title, and unity of the time of the commencement of such title (a). Any estate may be held in joint tenancy; thus, if lands be given simply to A. and B. without further words, they will become at once joint tenants for life (b). Being regarded, with respect to other persons, as but one individual, their estates will necessarily continue so long as the longer liver of them exists. While they both live, as they must have several rights between themselves. A. will be entitled to one moiety of the rents and profits of the land, and B. to the other; but after the decease of either of them, the survivor will be entitled to the whole during the residue of his life. So, if lands be given to A. and B., and the Joint tenants heirs of their two bodies; here, if A. and B. be persons who may possibly intermarry, they will have an estate in special tail, descendible only to the heirs of their two bodies (c): so long as they both live, they will be

(a) 2 Black. Com. 180.

(b) Litt. s. 283; Com. Dig. tit. Estates (K 1), see ante, p. 17.

(c) Co. Litt. 20 b, 25 b; Bac. Abr. tit. Joint Tenants (G).

ties of joint

Joint tenants for life.

in tail.

entitled to the rents and profits in equal shares; after the decease of either, the survivor will be entitled for life to the whole; and, on the decease of such survivor, the heir of their bodies, in case they should have intermarried, will succeed by descent, in the same manner as if both A. and B. had been but one ancestor. If, however, A. and B. be persons who cannot at any time lawfully intermarry, as, if they be brother and sister, or both males, or both females, a gift to them and the heirs of their two bodies will receive a somewhat different construction. So long as it is possible for a unity of interest to continue, the law will carry it into effect: A. and B. will accordingly be regarded as one person, and will be entitled jointly during their lives. While they both live their rights will be equal; and, on the death of either, the survivor will take the whole, so long as he may live. But, as they cannot intermarry, it is not possible that any one person should be heir of both their bodies: on the decease of the survivor, the law, therefore, in order to conform as nearly as possible to the manifest intent, that the heir of the body of each of them should inherit, is obliged to sever the tenancy, and divide the inheritance between the heir of the body of A., and the heir of the body of B. Each heir will accordingly be entitled to a moiety of the rents and profits, as tenant in tail of such moiety. The heirs will now hold in a manner denominated tenancy in common; instead of both having the whole, each will have an undivided half, and no further right of survivorship will remain (d).

Joint tenants in fee. An estate in fee simple may also be given to two or more persons as joint tenants. The unity of this kind of tenure is remarkably shown by the words which are made use of to create a joint tenancy in fee simple. The lands intended to be given to joint tenants in fee simple are limited to them and their heirs, or to them, their heirs and assigns (e), although the heirs of one of them only will succeed to the inheritance, provided the joint tenancy be allowed to continue : thus, if lands be given to A., B. and C. and their heirs, A., B. and C. will together be regarded as one person; and, when they are all dead, but not before, the lands will descend to the heirs of the artificial person (so to speak) named in the gift. The survivor of the three, who together compose the tenant, will, after the decease of his companions, become entitled to the whole lands(f). While they all lived each had the whole; when any die, the survivors or survivor can have no more. The heir of the survivor is, therefore, the person who alone will be entitled to inherit, to the entire exclusion of the heirs of those who may have previously died (g). A joint tenancy in fee simple is far more usual than a joint tenancy for life or in tail. Its principal use in practice is for the purpose Trustees are of vesting estates in trustees(h), who are invariably always made joint tenants. made joint tenants. On the decease of one of them, the whole estate then yests at once in the survivors or survivor of them, without devolving on the heir at law of the deceased trustee, and without being affected by any disposition which he may have made by his will; for joint tenants are incapable of devising their respective shares by will(i); they are not regarded as having any separate interests, except as between or amongst themselves, whilst two or more of them are living. Trustees, therefore, whose only interest is that of the persons for whom they hold in trust, are properly made joint tenants; and so long as any one of them is living, so long will every other person be excluded from the legal possession of the lands to which the trust extends. But

(d) Litt. s. 283. See Re Tiverton Market Act, 20 Beav. 374.

(e) Bac. Abr. tit. Joint Tenants (A); Co. Litt. 184 a. (f) Litt. s. 280. (g) Litt. ubi sup.

(h) See post, the chapter on Uses and Trusts.

(i) Litt. s. 287; Perk. s. 500.

on the decease of the surviving trustee, the lands will devolve on the devisee under his will, or on his heir at law, who will remain trustee till the lands are conveyed to some other trustee duly appointed.

As joint tenants together compose but one owner, it follows, as we have already observed, that the estate of each must arise at the same time(h); so that if A. and B. are to be joint tenants of lands, A. cannot take his share first, and then B. come in after him. To this rule, however, an exception has been made in favour of conveyances taking effect by virtue of the Statute of Uses, to be hereafter explained; for it has been held that joint tenants under this statute may take their shares at different times (l); and the exception appears also to extend to estates created by will(m). A further consequence of the unity of joint tenants is seen in the fact, that if one of them should wish to dispose of his interest in favour of any of his companions, he may not make use of any mode of disposition operating merely as a conveyance of lands from one stranger to another. The legal possession or seisin of the whole of the lands belongs to each one of the joint tenants of an estate of freehold; no delivery can, therefore, be made to him of that which he already has. The proper form of assur-A release is the ance between joint tenants is, accordingly, a release by deed (n), and this release operates rather as an extinguishment of right than as a conveyance; for the whole > (k) Co. Litt. 188 a; 2 Black. Com. 181.

> (1) 13 Rep. 56; Pollexf. 373; Bae. Abr. tit. Joint Tenants (D); Gilb. Uses and Trusts, 71 (135, n. 10, 3rd ed.)

> (m) 2 Jarman on Wills, 161, 1st ed.; 209, 2nd ed.; 235, 3rd ed.; Oates d. Hatterley v. Jackson, 2 Strange, 1172; Fearne, Cont.

Rem. 313; Bridge v. Yates, 12 Sim. 645; Kenworthy v. Ward, 11 Hare, 196; M'Gregor v. M'Gregor, 1 De Gex, F. & J. 73.

(n) Co. Litt. 169 a; Bac. Abr. tit. Joint Tenants (1) 3, 2; 2 Prest. Abst. 61. But a grant would operate as a release ; Chester v. Willan, 2 Wms, Saund, 96 a. proper form of assurance between joint tenants.

estate is already supposed to be vested in each joint tenant, as well as his own proportion. And in the Norman French, with which our law abounds, two persons holding land in joint tenancy are said to be seised per mie et per tout(o).

The incidents of a joint tenancy, above referred to, A joint telast only so long as the joint tenancy exists. It is in nancy may be severed. the power of any one of the joint tenants to sever the tenancy; for each joint tenant possesses an absolute power to dispose, in his lifetime, of his own share of the lands, by which means he destroys the joint tenancy (p). Thus, if there be three joint tenants of lands in fee simple, any one of them may, by any of the usual modes of alienation, dispose during his lifetime, though not by will, of an equal undivided third part of the whole inheritance. But should he die without having made such disposition, each one of the remaining two will have a similar right in his lifetime to dispose of an undivided moiety of the whole. From the moment of severance, the unity of interest and title is destroyed, and nothing is left but the unity of possession; the share which has been disposed of is at once discharged from the rights and incidents of joint tenancy, and becomes the subject of a tenancy in common. Thus, if there be three joint tenants, and any one of them should exercise his power of disposition in favour of a stranger, such stranger will then hold one undivided third part of the lands, as tenant in common with the remaining two.

Tenants in common are such as have a unity of pos- Tenants in session, but a distinct and several title to their shares(q). The shares in which tenants in common hold are by no means necessarily equal. Thus, one tenant in common common.

(o) Litt. s. 288. (q) Litt. s. 292; 2 Black. Com. (p) Co. Litt. 186 a. 191.

may be entitled to one-third, or one-fifth, or any other proportion of the profits of the land, and the other tenant or tenants in common to the residue. So, one tenant in common may have but a life or other limited interest in his share, another may be seised in fee of his, and the owners of another undivided share may be joint tenants as between themselves, whilst as to the others they are tenants in common. Between a joint tenancy and tenancy in common, the only similarity that exists is therefore the unity of possession. A tenant in common is, as to his own undivided share, precisely in the position of the owner of an entire and separate estate.

When the rights of parties are distinct, that is, for instance, when they are not all trustees for one and the same purpose, both a joint tenancy and a tenancy in common are inconvenient methods for the enjoyment of property. Of the two a tenancy in common is no doubt preferable; inasmuch as a certain possession of a given share is preferable to a similar chance of getting or losing the whole, according as the tenant may or may not survive his companions. But the enjoyment of lands in severalty(r) is far more beneficial than either of the above modes. Accordingly it is in the power of any joint tenant or tenant in common to compel his companions to effect a partition between themselves, according to the value of their shares. This partition was formerly enforced by a writ of partition, granted by virtue of statutes passed in the reign of Henry VIII.(s). Before this reign, as joint tenants and tenants in common always become such by their own act and agreement, they were without any remedy, unless they all agreed to the partition; whereas we have seen(t) that co-parceners, who become entitled by act of law, could always compel partition. In modern times, the Court of Chancery has been found to be the most convenient instrument for compelling the partition of cstates(u); and by a modern statute(x), the old writ of partition, which had already become obsolete, was abolished. Whether the partition be effected through the agency of the Court of Chancery, or by the merc private agreement of the parties, mutual conveyances of their respective undivided shares must be made, in order to carry the partition into complete effect(y). With respect to joint tenants, these conveyances ought, as we have seen, to be in the form of releases; but tenants in common, having separate titles, must make mutual conveyances, as between strangers; and by a modern statute it is provided, that a partition shall be void at law, unless made by deed(z). If any of the parties entitled should be infants under age, lunatic, or of unsound mind, and consequently unable to execute a conveyance, the Court of Chancery has now power to carry out its own decree for a partition by making an order, which will vest their shares in such persons as the court shall direct (a). Another very convenient mode of effecting a Partition by partition is, by application to the inclosure commis- inclosure comsioners for England and Wales, who are empowered by recent acts of parliament to make orders under their hands and seal for the partition and exchange of lands and other hereditaments, which orders are effectual without any further conveyance or release(b).

Partition.

(r) Ante, p. 96. (s) 31 Henry VIII. c. 1; 32

Henry VIII. c. 32. (t) Ante, p. 95.

(u) See Manners v. Charlesworth,

1 Mylne & Keen, 330.

(x) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, s. 36.

(y) Attorney-General v. Hamilton, 1 Madd. 214.

(z) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 3, to the same effect.

(a) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,

ss. 3, 7, 30.

(b) Stats. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, ss. 147, 150; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 70, ss. 9, 10, 11; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 111, ss. 4, 6; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 99, s. 13; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 83, ss. 7, 11; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 79, ss. 31, 32; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97, s. 5; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31, ss. 1-11; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 53.

CHAPTER VII.

OF A FEOFFMENT.

HAVING now considered the most usual freehold estates which are holden in lands, and the varieties of holding arising from joint tenancies and tenancies in common, we proceed to the means to be employed for the transfer of these estates from one person to another. And here we must premise that, by recent enactments (a), the conveyance of estates has been rendered, for the future, a matter independent of that historical learning which was formerly necessary. But, as the means formerly necessary for the conveyance of freeholds depend on principles, which still continue to exert their influence throughout the whole system of real property law, these means of conveyance and their principles must yet continue objects of the early attention of every student: of these means the most ancient is a feoffment with livery of seisin(b), which accordingly forms the subject of our present chapter.

Feoffment with livery of seisin.

> The feudal doctrine explained in the fifth chapter, that all estates in land are holden of some lord, necessarily implies that all lands must always have some feudal holder or tenant. This feudal tenant is the freeholder, or holder of the freehold; he has the feudal possession, called the seisin(c), and so long as he is seised, nobody else can be. The freehold is said to be in him, and till it is taken out of him and given to some other, the land

> (a) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, re(b) 2 Black. Com. 310.
> (c) Co. Litt. 153 a; Watkins on Descents, 108 (113, 4th ed.)

Seisin.

itself is regarded as in his custody or possession. Now this legal possession of lands-this seisin of the freehold-is a matter of great importance, and much formerly depended upon its proper transfer from one person to another; thus we have seen that, before the recent act for the amendment of the law of inheritance, seisin must have been acquired by every heir before he could himself become the stock of $\operatorname{descent}(d)$. The transfer or delivery of the seisin, though it accompanies the transfer of the estate of the holder of the seisin, is vet not the same thing as the transfer of his estate. For a tenant merely for life is as much a feudal holder, and consequently as much in possession, or seised, of the freehold, as a tenant in fee simple can be. If, therefore, a person seised of an estate in fee simple were to grant a lease to another for his life, the lessee must necessarily have the whole seisin given up to him, although he would not acquire the whole estate of his lessor; for an estate for life is manifestly a less estate than an estate in fee simple. In ancient times, however, possession was the great point, and, until recently (e), the conveyance of an estate of freehold was of quite a distinct character from such assurances as were made use of when it was not intended to affect the freehold or feudal possession. For instance, we have seen that a tenant for a term of years is regarded in law as having merely a chattel interest(f); he has not the feudal possession or freehold in himself, but his possession, like that of a bailiff or servant, is the possession of his landlord. The consequence is, that any expressions in a deed, from which an intention can be gathered to grant the occupation of land for a certain time, have always been sufficient for a lease for a term of years however long(q); but a lease

 (d) Ante, pp. 92, 93.
 (f) Ante, p. 8.

 (e) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76.
 (g) Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years (K).

к 2

131 for a single life, which transfers the freehold, has hitherto required technical language to give it effect.

Livery in deed.

A feoffment with livery of seisin was then nothing more than a gift of an estate in the land with livery, that is, delivery of the seisin or feudal possession (h); this livery of seisin was said to be of two kinds, a livery in deed and a livery in law. Livery in deed was performed "by delivery of the ring or haspe of the doore, or by a branch or twigge of a tree, or by a turfe of land, and with these or the like words, the feoffor and feoffee, both holding the deed of feoffment and the ring of the doore, haspe, branch, twigge or turfe, and the feoffor saying, 'Here I deliver you seisin and possession of this house, in the name of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed according to the forme and effect of this deed,' or by words without any ceremony or act, as the feoffor being at the house doore, or within the house, 'Here I deliver you seisin and possession of this house, in the name of seisin and possession of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed'"(i). The feoffee then, if it were a house, entered alone, shut the door, then opened it, and let in the others (k). In performing this ceremony, it was requisite that all persons who had any estate or possession in the house or land, of which seisin was delivered, should either join in or consent to making the livery, or be absent from the premises; for the object was to give the entire and undisputed possession to the feoffee (l). If the feoffment was made of different lands lying scattered in one and the same county, livery of seisin of any parcel, in the name of the rest, was sufficient for all, if all were in the complete possession of the same feoffor; but if they were in several counties, there must have been as many liveries as there were counties(m). For if the title to these lands should come to be disputed, there must have been as many trials as there were counties; and the jury of one county are not considered judges of the notoriety of a fact in another (n). Livery in law was not made on the land, but in sight of Livery in law. it only, the feoffor saying to the feoffee, "I give you yonder land, enter and take possession." If the feoffee entered accordingly in the lifetime of the feoffor, this was a good feoffment: but if either the feoffor or feoffee died before entry, the livery was void (o). This livery was good, although the land lay in another county(p); but it required always to be made between the parties themselves, and could not be deputed to an attorney, as might livery in deed (q). The word give was the apt The word give and technical term to be employed in a feoffment (r); to be used. its use arose in those times when gifts from feudal lords to their tenants were the conveyances principally employed.

(h) Co. Litt. 271 b, n. (1).

(i) Co. Litt. 48 a.

(k) 2 Black. Com. 315; 2 Sand. Uses, 4. (1) Shep. Touch. 213; Doe d. Reed v. Taylor, 5 Barn. & Adol. 575.

In addition to the livery of seisin, it was also neces- The estate sary that the estate which the feoffee was to take should taken must be marked out, or be marked out, whether for his own life or for that of limited. another person, or in tail, or in fee simple, or otherwise. This marking out of the estate is as necessary now as formerly, and it is called limiting the estate. If the feudal holding is transferred, the estate must necessarily be an estate of freehold; it cannot be an estate at will, or for a fixed term of years merely. Thus the land may

(m) Litt. s. 6I. But a manor, the site of which extended into two counties, appears to have been an exception to this rule; for it was but as one thing for the purpose of a feoffment; Perkins, sect. 227. See, however, Hale's M.S., Co. Litt. 50 a, n. (2).

(n) Co. Litt. 50 a; 2 Black. Com. 315. (o) Co. Litt. 48 b; 2 Black. Com. 316. (p) Co. Litt. 48 b. (q) Co. Litt. 52 b. (r) Co. Litt. 9 a ; 2 Black. Com. 310.

An estate for life.

An estate in fee simple.

to be used.

be given to the feoffee to hold to himself simply; and the estate so limited is, as we have seen(s), but an estate for his life(t), and the feoffee is then generally called a lessee for his life; though when a mere life interest is intended to be limited, the land is usually expressly given to hold to the lessee "during the term of his natural life" (u). If the land be given to the feoffee and the heirs of his body, he has an estate tail, and is called a donce in tail(x). And in order to confer an estate An estate tail. tail, it is necessary (except in a will, where greater indulgence is allowed) that words of procreation, such as heirs of his body, should be made use of; for a gift of lands to a man and his heirs male is an estate in fee simple, and not in fee tail, there being no words of procreation to ascertain the body out of which they shall issue(y); and an estate in lands descendible to collateral male heirs only, in entire exclusion of females, is unknown to the English law(z). If the land be given to hold to the feoffee and his heirs, he has an estate in fee simple, the largest estate which the law allows. In every conveyance (except by will) of an estate of inheritance, whether in fee tail or in fee simple, the word The word heirs heirs is necessary to be used as a word of limitation to mark out the estate. Thus if a grant be made to a man and his seed, or to a man and his offspring, or to a man and the issue of his body, all these are insufficient to confer an estate tail, and only give an estate for life for want of the word heirs(a); so if a man purchase lands to have and to hold to him for ever, or to him and his assigns for ever, he will have but an estate for his life,

- (s) Ante, p. 18.
- (t) Litt. s. 1; Co. Litt. 42 a.
- (u) Ante, p. 22.
- (x) Litt. s. 57; ante, p. 34.
- (y) Litt. s. 31; Co. Litt. 27 a;
- 2 Black. Com. 115; Doe d. Brune v. Martyn, 8 Barn. & Cress. 497. (z) But a grant of arms by the crown to a man and his heirs male, without saying "of the body," is good, and they will descend to his heirs male, lineal or collateral. Co. Litt. 27 a.

(a) Co. Litt. 20 b; 2 Black. Com. 115.

and not a fee simple(b). Before alienation was permitted, the heirs of the tenant were the only persons, besides himself, who could enjoy the estate; and if they were not mentioned, the tenant could not hold longer than for his own life (c); hence the necessity of the word heirs to create an estate in fee tail or fee simple. At the present day, the free transfer of estates in fee simple is universally allowed; but this liberty, as we have seen (d), is now given by the law, and not by the particular words by which an estate may happen to be created. So that, though conveyances of estates in fee simple are usually made to hold to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns for ever, yet the word heirs alone gives him a fee simple, of which the law enables him to dispose; and the remaining words, and assigns for ever, have at the present day no conveyancing virtue at all; but are merely declaratory of that power of alienation which the purchaser would possess without them.

The formal delivery of the seisin or feudal possession, A feoffment which always took place in a feoffment, rendered it, till might have created an recently, an assurance of great power; so that, if a estate by person should have made a feoffment to another of an estate in fee simple, or of any other estate, not warranted by his own interest in the lands, such a feoffment would have operated by wrong, as it is said, and would have conferred on the feoffee the whole estate limited by the feoffment along with the seisin actually delivered. Thus if a tenant for his own life should Feoffment by have made a feoffment of the lands for an estate in fee tenant for life. simple, the feoffee would not merely have acquired an estate for the life of the feoffor, but would have become seised of an estate in fee simple by wrong; accordingly, such a feoffment by a tenant for life was regarded, as wrong.

⁽d) Ante, p. 40. (b) Litt. s. 1; Co. Litt. 20 a.

⁽c) Ante, pp. 17, 18.

we have seen(e), as a cause of forfeiture to the person entitled in reversion; such a feoffment being in fact a conveyance of his reversion, without his consent, to another person. In the same manner, feoffments made by idiots and lunatics appear to have been only voidable and not absolutely void (f); whereas their conveyances made by any other means are void in toto; for, if the seisin was actually delivered to a person, though by a lunatic or idiot, the accompanying estate must necessarily have passed to him, until he should have been deprived of it. Again, the formal delivery of the seisin in a feoffment appears to be the ground of the validity of such a conveyance of gavelkind lands, by an infant of the age of fifteen years (q); although a conveyance of the same lands by the infant, made by any other means, would be voidable by him, on attaining his majority (h). By the act to amend the law of real property(i), it is, however, now provided, that a feoffment shall not have any tortious operation; but a feoffment made under a custom by an infant is expressly re- $\operatorname{cognised}(k).$

Down to the time of King Henry VIII. nothing more was requisite to a valid feoffment than has been already mentioned. In the reign of this king, however, an act of parliament of great importance was passed, known by the name of the Statute of Uses(l). And since this statute, it has now become further requisite to a feoffment, either that there should be a consideration for the gift, or that it should be expressed to be made, not simply unto, but unto and to the use of the feoffee. The manner in which this result has been brought about

- (e) Ante, p. 27.
- (f) Ante, p. 64.
- (g) Ante, p. 120.
- (h) Ante, p. 64.

(i) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4.

- (k) Sect. 3.
- (1) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

136

By idiots and lunatics.

By infants, of gavelkind lands.

New enactment.

The Statute of Uses.

A consideration required, or the gift to be made to the use of the feoffee. by the Statute of Uses will be explained in the next chapter.

If proper words of gift were used in a feoffment, and Writing forwitnesses were present who could afterwards prove sary. them, it mattered not, in ancient times, whether or not they were put into writing (m); though writing, from its greater certainty, was generally employed(n). There was this difference, however, between writing in those days, and writing in our own times. In our own times, almost every body can write; in those days very few of the landed gentry of the country were so learned as to be able to sign their own names(o). Accordingly, on every important occasion, when a written document was required, instead of signing their names, they affixed their seals; and this writing, thus sealed, was delivered to the party for whose benefit it was intended. Writing was not then employed for every trivial purpose, but was a matter of some solemnity; accordingly, it became a rule of law, that every writing under seal imported a consideration(p):—that is, that a step so solemn could not have been taken without some sufficient ground. This custom of sealing remained after the occasion for it had passed away, and writing had been generally introduced; so that, in all legal transactions, a seal was affixed to the written document, and the writing so sealed was, when delivered, called a deed, in Latin factum, a thing done; A deed. and, for a long time after writing had come into common use, a written instrument, if unsealed, had in law no superiority over mere words(q); nothing was in fact

(m) Bracton, lib. 2, fol. 11 b, par. 3, 33 b, par. 1; Co. Litt. 48 b, 121 b, 143 a, 271 b, n. (1).

(n) Madox's Form. Angl. Dissert. p. 1.

(o) 3 Hallam's Middle Ages, 329; 2 Black. Com. 305, 306.

(p) Plowden, 308; 3 Burrows, 1639; 1 Fonblanque on Equity, 342; 2 Fonb. Eq. 26.

(q) See Litt. ss. 250, 252; Co. Litt. 9 a, 49 a, 121 b, 143 a, 169 a; Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. Rep. 350, n.

called a writing, but a document under seal(r). And at the present day a deed, or a writing sealed and delivered(s), still imports a consideration, and maintains in many respects a superiority in law over a mere unsealed writing. In modern practice the kind of seal made use of is not regarded, and the mere placing of the finger on a seal already made, is held to be equivalent to sealing (t); and the words "I deliver this as my act and deed," which are spoken at the same time, are held to be equivalent to delivery, even if the party keep the deed himself(u). The sealing and delivery of a deed are termed the execution of it. Occasionally a deed is delivered to a third person not a party to it, to be delivered up to the other party or parties, upon the performance of a condition, as the payment of money or the like. It is then said to be delivered as an escrow or mere writing (scriptum); for it is not a perfect deed until delivered up on the performance of the condition; but when so delivered up, it operates from the time of its execution(x). Any alteration, rasure or addition made in a deed after its execution by the grantor, even though made by a stranger, will render it void; and any alteration made by the party to whom it is delivered, though in words not material, will also render it void(y). But if an estate has once been conveyed by a deed, of (r) See Litt. ss. 365, 366, 367; Shep. Touch. by Preston, 320, 321; Sugden's Ven. & Pur. 126, 11th ed.

(s) Co. Litt. 171 b; Shep. Touch. 50.

(t) Shep. Touch. 57.

(u) Doe d. Garnons v. Knight,
5 Barn. & Cress. 671; Grugeon
v. Gerrard, 4 You. & Coll. 119,
130; Exton v. Scott, 6 Sim. 31;
Fletcher v. Fletcher, 4 Hare, 67.
See also Hall v. Bainbridge, 12
Q. B. 699.

(x) See Shep. Touch. 58, 59;

Bowker v. Burdekin, 11 Mees. & Wels. 128, 147; Nash v. Flyn, 1 Jones & Lat. 162; Graham v. Graham, 1 Ves. jun. 275; Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 797.

(y) Pigot's case, 11 Rep. 27 a; Principles of the Law of Personal Property, p. 81, 4th ed.; 83, 5th ed.; Hall v. Chandless, 4 Bing. 123. It is now felony not only to steal, but also for any fraudulent purpose to destroy, cancel, obliterate or conceal any document of title to lands. Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 28.

Execution.

Escrow.

Alteration, rasure, &c. course the subsequent alteration, or even the destruction, of the deed cannot operate to reconvey the estate; and the deed, even though cancelled, may be given in evidence to show that the estate was conveyed by it whilst it was valid(z). But the deed having become void, no action could be brought upon any covenant contained in it (a).

Every deed, if not charged with any ad valorem or Stamps on deeds. other stamp duty, nor expressly exempted from all stamp duty, is liable to a stamp duty of 11. 15s.; and if the deed, together with any schedule, receipt or other matter put or indorsed thereon or annexed thereto, contain 2160 words, or 30 common law folios of 72 words each, or upwards, it is liable to a further progressive duty of 10s. for every entire quantity of 1080 words, or 15 folios, over and above the first 1080 words. But the duplicate or Duplicate or counterpart of any deed is liable only to a stamp duty of five shillings and a progressive duty of half-a-crown, unless the original be liable to a less duty, in which case the duty is the same as on the original. If, however, the deed was signed or executed by any party thereto, or bears date, before or upon the 10th of October, 1850, when the act to amend the stamp duties took effect, then the progressive duty is 11. 5s. for every entire quantity of 1080 words beyond the first 1080(b).

Deeds are divided into two kinds, Deeds, poll and Deeds poll and Indentures, a deed poll being made by one party only, and an indenture being made between two or more parties. Formerly, when deeds were more concise than at present, it was usual, where a deed was made between two parties, to write two copies upon the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters of the alphabet written between them, through which the (z) Lord Ward v. Lumley, 5 H. & N. 87, 656.

(a) Pigot's case, ubi supra.

(b) Stats. 55 Geo. III. c. 184; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 91, s. 31.

counterpart.

indentures.

parchment was cut, often in an indented line, so as to leave half the words on one part, and half on the other, thus serving the purpose of a tally. But at length indenting only came into use (c); and now every deed, to which there is more than one party, is cut with an indented or waving line at the top, and is called an indenture(d); and, until recently, when a deed assumed the form of an indenture, every person who took any immediate benefit under it, was always named as one of the parties. But now by the act to amend the law of real property it is enacted that, under an indenture, an immediate estate or interest in any tenements or hereditaments, and the benefit of a condition or covenant respecting any tenements or hereditaments, may be taken, although the taker thereof be not named a party to the same indenture; also that a deed, purporting to be an indenture, shall have the effect of an indenture, although not actually indented (e). A deed made by only one party is polled, or shaved even at the top, and is therefore called a deed poll; and, under such a deed, any person may accept a grant, though of course none but the party can make one. All deeds must be written either on paper or parchment (f).

Deed poll.

New enact-

ment

Writings not under seal. So manifest are the advantages of putting down in writing matters of any permanent importance, that, as commerce and civilization advanced, writings not under seal must necessarily have come into frequent use; but, until the reign of King Charles II., the use of writing remained perfectly optional with the parties, in every case which did not require a deed under seal. In this reign, however, an act of parliament was passed (g), requiring the use of writing in many transactions, which previously might have taken place by mere word of

(c) 2 Black. Com. 295.

(d) Co. Litt. 143 b.

(*) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 5, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 11, to the same effect.

(f) Shep. Touch. 54; 2 Black. Com. 297.

(g) Stat. 29 Car. H. c. 3.

mouth. This act is intituled "An Act for Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries," and is now commonly called the Statute of Frauds. It enacts (h), amongst other things, The Statute of that all leases, estates, interests of freehold, or terms of Frauds. years, or any uncertain interest, in messuages, manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, made or created by livery of seisin only, or by parol, and not put in writing, and signed by the parties so making or creating the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, shall have the force and effect of leases or estates at will only, and no greater force and effect; any consideration for making any such parol leases or estates, or any former law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding. The only exception to this sweeping An exception. enactment is in favour of leases not exceeding three years from the making, and on which a rent of twothirds at least of the full improved value is reserved to the landlord (i). In consequence of this act, it became necessary that a feoffment should be put into writing, and signed by the party making the same, or his agent lawfully authorized by writing; but a deed or writing under seal was not essential (h), if livery of seisin were duly made. But now by the act to amend the law of A deed now real property (l), it is provided that a feoffment, other than a feoffment made under a custom by an infant, shall be void at law, unless evidenced by deed (m). Where a deed is made use of, it is a matter of doubt, Whether signwhether signing, as well as scaling, is absolutely ne- ing of deeds necessary. cessary: previously to the Statute of Frauds, signing was not at all essential to a deed, provided it were only sealed and delivered (n); and the Statute of Frauds seems to be aimed at transactions by parol only, and not to be intended to affect deeds. Of this opinion is

(h) Sect. 1.

- (i) Sect. 2.
- (k) 3 Prest. Abst. 110.
- (1) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106. (m) Sect. 3. (n) Shep. Touch. 56.

necessary.

Mr. Preston (o). Sir William Blackstone, on the other hand, thinks signing now to be as necessary as sealing (p). And the Court of Queen's Bench has, if possible, added to the doubt (q). Mr. Preston's, however, appears to be the better opinion (r). However this may be, it would certainly be most unwise to raise the question by leaving any deed sealed and delivered, but not signed.

Legal doubts.

The doubt above mentioned is just of a class with many others, with which the student must expect to Lying just by the side of the common highway meet. of legal knowledge, it yet remains uncertain ground. The abundance of principles, and the variety of illustrations to be found in legal text books, are apt to mislead the student into the supposition, that he has obtained a map of the whole country which lies before him. But further research will inform him that this opinion is erroneous, and that, though the ordinary paths are well beaten by author after author again going over the same ground, yet much that lies to the right hand and to the left still continues unexplored, or known only as doubtful and dangerous. The manner in which our laws are formed is the chief reason for this prevalence of uncertainty. Parliament, the great framer of the laws, seldom undertakes the task of interpreting them, a task indeed which would itself be less onerous, were more care and pains bestowed on the making of them. But as it is, a doubt is left to stand for years, till the cause of some unlucky suitor raises the point before one of the Courts; till this happens, the judges themselves have no authority to remove it; and thus it remains a pest to society, till caught in the act of raising a lawsuit. No wonder (o) Shep. Touch. n. (24), Preston's ed.

(p) 2 Black. Com. 306.

(q) Cooch v. Goodman, 2 Queen's Bench Rep. 580, 597. (r) See Taunton v. Pepler, 6 Madd. 166, 167; Aveline v. Whisson, 4 Man. & Gran. 801; Cherry v. Heming, 4 Ex. 631, 636. then, when judges can do so little, that writers should avoid all doubtful points. Cases, which have been decided, are continually cited to illustrate the principles on which the decisions have proceeded; but in the absence of decision, a lawyer becomes timid, and seldom ventures to draw an inference, lest he should be charged with introducing a doubt.

To return: a feoffment, with livery of seisin, though once the usual method of conveyance, has long since ceased to be generally employed. For many years past, another method of conveyance has been resorted to, which could be made use of at any distance from the property; but as this mode derived its effect from the Statute of Uses(s), it will be necessary to explain that statute before proceeding further.

(s) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF USES AND TRUSTS.

PREVIOUSLY to the reign of Henry VIII., when the Anciently a gift with livery of seisin was all that was necessary for a conveyance.

In equity a different rule prevailed.

Statute of Uses (a) was passed, a simple gift of lands to a person and his heirs, accompanied by livery of seisin, was all that was necessary to convey to that person an estate in fee simple in the lands. The courts of law did not deem any consideration necessary; but if a man voluntarily gave lands to another, and put him in possession of them, they held the gift to be complete and irrevocable; just as a gift of money or goods, made without any consideration, is, and has ever been, guite beyond the power of the giver to retract it, if accompanied by delivery of possession (b). In law, therefore, the person to whom a gift of lands was made, and seisin delivered, was considered thenceforth to be the true owner of the lands. In equity, however, this was not always the case; for the Court of Chancery, administering equity, held that the mere delivery of the possession or seisin by one person to another was not at all conclusive of the right of the feoffee to enjoy the lands of which he was enfeoffed. Equity was unable to take from him the title which he possessed, and could always assert in the courts of law; but equity could and did compel him to make use of that legal title, for the benefit of any other person who might have a more righteous claim to the beneficial enjoyment. Thus if a feoffment was made of lands to one person for the benefit or to the use of another, such person was bound in conscience to hold the lands to the use or for the benefit of the

(a) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

(b) 2 Black. Com. 441.

144

other accordingly; so that while the title of the person enfeoffed was good in a court of law, yet he derived no benefit from the gift, for the Court of Chancery obliged him to hold entirely for the use of the other for whose benefit the gift was made. This device was introduced into England about the close of the reign of Edward III. by the foreign ecclesiastics, who contrived by means of it to evade the statutes of mortmain, by which lands were prohibited from being given for religious purposes; for they obtained grants to persons to the use of the religious houses; which grants the clerical chancellors of those days held to be binding(c). In process of time, such feoffments to one person to the use of another became very common; for the Court of Chancerv allowed the use of lands to be disposed of in a variety of ways, amongst others by will (d), in which a disposition could not then be made of the lands themselves. Sometimes persons made feoffments of lands to Feoffment to others to the use of themselves the feoffors; and when the use of the feoffor. a person made a feoffment to a stranger, without any consideration being given, and without any declaration being made for whose use the feoffment should be, it was considered in Chancery that it must have been meant by the feoffor to be for his own use (e). So that though the feoffee became in law absolutely seised of the lands, yet in equity he was held to be seised of them to the use of the feoffor. The Court of Chancery paid no regard to that implied consideration, which the law affixed to every deed on account of its solemnity, but looked only to what actually passed between the parties; so that a feoffment accompanied by a deed, if no consideration actually passed, was held to be made to the

(c) 2 Black. Com. 328; 1 Sand. Uses, 16 (15, 5th ed.); 2 Fonblanque on Equity, 3.

(d) Perkins, ss. 496, 528, 537; Wright's Tenures, 174; 1 Sand. R.P.

Uses, 65, 68, 69 (64, 67, 68, 5th ed.); 2 Black. Com. 329; ante, p. 61.

(e) Perkins, s. 533; 1 Sand. Uses, 61, 5th ed.; Co. Litt. 271 b.

L

use of the feoffor, just as a feoffment by mere parol or word of mouth. If however there was any, even the smallest, consideration given by the feoffee (f), such as five shillings, the presumption that the feoffment was for the use of the feoffor was rebutted, and the feoffee was held entitled to his own use.

Transactions of this kind became in time so frequent that most of the lands in the kingdom were conveyed to uses, "to the utter subversion of the ancient common laws of this realm"(q). The attention of the legislature was from time to time directed to the public inconvenience to which these uses gave rise; and after several attempts to amend them (h), an act of parliament was at last passed for their abolition. This act is no other than the Statute of Uses(i), a statute which still remains in force, and exerts at the present day a most important influence over the conveyance of real property. By this statute it was enacted, that where any person or persons shall stand seised of any lands or other hereditaments to the use, confidence or trust of any other person or persons, the persons that have any such use, confidence or trust (by which was meant the persons beneficially entitled) shall be deemed in lawful seisin and possession of the same lands and hereditaments for such estates as they have in the use, trust or confidence. This statute was the means of effecting a complete revolution in the system of conveyancing. It is a curious instance of the power of an act of parliament; it is in fact an enactment that what is given to A. shall, under certain circumstances, not be given to A. at all, but to somebody else. For suppose a feoffment be now made

(f) 1 Sand. Uses, 62 (61, 5th ed.)

(g) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, preamble.

(h) See particularly stat. I Rich.

III. c. 1, enabling the cestui que use, or person beneficially entitled, to convey the possession without the concurrence of his trustee.

(i) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

to A. and his heirs, and the seisin duly delivered to Feoffment to him; if the feoffment be expressed to be made to him and his heirs to the use of some other person, as B. and of B. and his his heirs, A. (who would, before this statute, have had an estate in fee simple at law) now takes no permanent estate, but is made by the statute to be merely a kind of conduit pipe for conveying the estate to B. For B. (who before would have had only a use or trust in equity) shall now, having the use, be deemed in lawful seisin and possession; in other words, B. now takes, not only the beneficial interest, but also the estate in fee simple at law, which is wrested from A. by force of the statute. Again, suppose a fcoffment to be now made Feoffment simply to A. and his heirs without any consideration. without con-We have seen that before the statute the feoffor would in this case have been held in equity to have the use, for want of any consideration to pass it to the feoffee; now therefore the feoffor, having the use, shall be deemed in lawful seisin and possession; and consequently, by such a feoffment, although livery of seisin be duly made to A., yet no permanent estate will pass to him; for the moment he obtains the estate he holds it to the use of the feoffor; and the same instant comes the statute, and gives to the feoffor, who has the use, the seisin and possession (k). The feoffor, therefore, instantly gets back all that he gave; and the use is said to result to himself. Resulting use. If however the feoffment be made unto and to the use of A. and his heirs-as before the statute, A. would have been entitled for his own use, so now he shall be deemed in lawful seisin and possession, and an estate in fee simple will effectually pass to him accordingly. The propriety of inserting, in every feoffment, the words to the use of, as well as to the feoffee, is therefore manifest. It appears also that an estate in fee simple may be effectually conveyed to a person by making a feoffment

(k) 1 Sand. Uses, 99, 100 (95, 5th ed.)

A. and his heirs to the use heirs.

to any other person and his heirs, to the use of, or upon confidence or trust for such former person and his heirs. Thus, if a feoffment be made to A. and his heirs, to the use of B. and his heirs, an estate in fee simple will now pass to B., as effectually as if the feoffment had been made directly unto and to the use of B. and his heirs in the first instance. The words to the use of are now almost universally employed for such a purpose; but "upon confidence," or "upon trust for," would answer as well, since all these expressions are mentioned in the statute.

Trusts.

Trusts still exist notwithstanding the Statute of Uses.

The word trust, however, is never employed in modern conveyancing, when it is intended to vest an estate in fee simple in any person by force of the Statute of Uses. Such an intention is always carried into effect by the employment of the word use; and the word trust is reserved to signify a holding by one person for the benefit of another similar to that (l), which, before the statute, was called a use. For, strange as it may appear, with the Statute of Uses remaining unrepealed, lands are still, as everybody knows, frequently vested in trustees, who have the seisin and possession in law, but yet have no beneficial interest, being liable to be brought to account for the rents and profits by means of the Court of Chancery. The Statute of Uses was evidently intended to abolish altogether the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery over landed estates (m), by giving actual possession at law to every person beneficially entitled in equity. But this object has not been accomplished; for the Court of Chancery soon regained in a curious manner its former ascendancy, and has kept it to the present day. So that all that was ultimately effected by the Statute of Uses, was to import into the rules of law some of the then existing doctrines of the Courts

(1) But not the same, 1 Sand. (m) Chudleigh's case, 1 Rep. 124, Uses, 266 (278, 5th ed.) 125. of Equity (n), and to add three words, to the use, to every conveyance (o).

The manner in which the Court of Chancery regained its ascendancy was as follows. Soon after the passing of the Statute of Uses, a doctrine was laid down, that there could not be a use upon a use (p). For instance, No use upon suppose a feoffment had been made to A. and his heirs, a use. to the use of B. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs ; the doctrine was, that the use to C, and his heirs was a use upon a use, and was therefore not affected by the Statute of Uses, which could only execute or operate on the use to B. and his heirs. So that B. and not C. became entitled, under such a feoffment, to an estate in fee simple in the lands comprised in the feoffment. This doctrine has much of the subtlety of the scholastic logic which was then prevalent. As Mr. Watkins says(q), it must have surprised every one, who was not sufficiently learned to have lost his common sense. It was however adopted by the courts, and is still law. Even if the first use be to the feoffee himself, no subsequent use will be executed, and the feoffee will take the fee simple; thus, under a feoffment unto and to the use of A. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs, C. takes no estate in law, for the use to him is a use upon a use; but the fee simple vests in A. to whom the use is first declared (r). Here then was at once an opportunity for the Court of Chancery in-Chancery to interfere. It was manifestly inequitable terfered. that C., the party to whom the use was last declared, should be deprived of the estate, which was intended solely for his benefit; the Court of Chancery, therefore, interposed on his behalf, and constrained the party, to

(n) 2 Fonb. Eq. 17. (o) See Hopkins v. Hopkins, 1

Atk. 591; 1 Sand. Uses, 265 (277, 5th ed.)

(p) 2 Black. Com. 335.

(q) Principles of Conveyancing, Introduction.

(r) Doe d. Lloyd v. Passingham, 6 Barn. & Cres. 305.

whom the law had given the estate, to hold in trust for him to whom the use was last declared. Thus arose the modern doctrine of uses and trusts. And hence it is, that if it is now wished to vest a freehold estate in one person as trustee for another, the conveyance is made unto the trustee, or some other person (it is immaterial which), and his heirs, to the use of the trustee and his heirs, in trust for the party intended to be benefited (called cestui que trust) and his heirs. An estate in fee simple is thus vested in the trustee, by force of the Statute of Uses, and the entire beneficial interest is given over to the cestui que trust by the Court of Chancery. The estate in fee simple, which is vested in the trustee, is called the legal estate, being an estate, to which the trustee is entitled, only in the contemplation of a court of law, as distinguished from equity. The interest of the cestui que trust is called an equitable estate, being an estate to which he is entitled only in the contemplation of the Court of Chancery, which administers equity. In the present instance, the equitable estate being limited to the cestui que trust and his heirs, he has an equitable estate in fee simple. He is the beneficial owner of the property. The trustee, by virtue of his legal estate, has the right and power to receive the rents and profits; but the cestui que trust is able, by virtue of his estate in equity, at any time to oblige his trustee to come to an account, and hand over the whole of the proceeds. -

Estates in equity. We have now arrived at a very prevalent and important kind of interest in landed property, namely, an estate in equity merely, and not at law. The owner of such an estate has no title at all in any court of law, but must have recourse exclusively to the Court of Chancery, where he will find himself considered as owner, according to the equitable estate he may have. Chancery in modern times, though in principle the same as Legal estate.

Equitable estate. the ancient court which first gave effect to uses, is yet Modern Chan-widely different in the application of many of its rules. from ancient. Thus we have seen (s) that a consideration, however trifling, given by a feoffee, was sufficient to entitle him to the use of the lands of which he was enfeoffed. But the absence of such a consideration caused the use to remain with, or more technically to result to, the feoffor, according to the rules of Chancery in ancient times. And this doctrine has now a practical bearing on the transfer of legal estates; the ancient doctrines of Chancery having, by the Statute of Uses, become the means of determining the owner of the legal estate, whenever USES are mentioned. But the modern Court of Chancery takes a wider scope, and will not withhold or grant its aid, according to the mere payment or non-payment of five shillings: thus, circumstances of fraud, mistake, or the like, may induce the Court of Chancery to require a grantee under a voluntary conveyance to hold merely as a trustee for the grantor; but the mere want of a valuable consideration would not now be considered by that court a sufficient cause for its interference (t).

By the recent act to confer on the County Courts a County Courts. limited jurisdiction in equity, it is enacted, amongst other things, that these courts shall have and exercise all the power and authority of the High Court of Chancery in all suits for the execution of trusts in which the trust estate or fund shall not exceed in amount or value the sum of five hundred pounds (u). This act came into operation on the first of October, 1865 (v).

In the construction and regulation of trusts, equity is Equity follows said to follow the law, that is, the Court of Chancery ^{the law.}

(s) Ante, p. 146. (u) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, (t) 1 Sand. Uses, 334 (365, 5th ed.) (i) Sect. 23, Equitable estates for life and in tail.

Equitable estate tail in lands to be purchased.

generally adopts the rules of law applicable to legal estates (w); thus, a trust for A. for his life, or for him and the heirs of his body, or for him and his heirs, will give him an equitable estate for life, in tail, or in fee simple. An equitable estate tail may also be barred, in the same manner as an estate tail at law, and cannot be disposed of by any other means. But the decisions of equity, though given by rule, and not at random, do not follow the law in all its ancient technicalities, but proceed on a liberal system, correspondent with the more modern origin of its power. Thus, equitable estates in tail, or in fee simple, may be conferred without the use of the words heirs of the body, or heirs, if the intention be clear: for, equity pre-eminently regards the intentions and agreements of parties; accordingly, words which at law would confer an estate tail, are sometimes construed in equity, in order to further the intention of the parties, as giving merely an estate for life, followed by separate and independent estates tail to the children of the donce. This construction is frequently adopted by equity in the case of marriage articles, where an intention to provide for the children might otherwise be defeated by vesting an estate tail in one of the parents, who could at once bar the entail, and thus deprive the children of all benefit (x). So if lands be directed to be sold, and the money to arise from the sale be directed to be laid out in the purchase of other land to be settled on certain persons for life or in tail, or in any other manner, such persons will be regarded in equity as already in possession of the estates they are intended to have : for, whatever is fully agreed to be done, equity considers as actually accomplished. And in the same manner if money, from whatever source arising, be directed to be laid out in the purchase of land to be

(w) 1 Sand. Uses, 269 (280, 5th ed.)

ed.); Watkins on Descents, 168, (214, 4th ed.)

(x) 1 Sand. Uses, 311 (337, 5th settled in any manner, equity will regard the persons on whom the lands are to be settled as already in the possession of their estates (y). And in both the above cases the estates tail directed to be settled may be barred, before they are actually given, by a disposition duly enrolled, of the lands which are to be sold in the one case, or of the money to be laid out, in the other (z). Again, an equitable estate in fee simple immediately Equitable belongs to every purchaser of freehold property the mo- estate in fee ment he has signed a contract for purchase, provided the vendor has a good title (a); and it is understood that the whole estate of the vendor is contracted for. unless a smaller estate is expressly mentioned, the employment of the word heirs not being essential (b). If, therefore, the purchaser were to die intestate the moment after the contract, the equitable estate in fee simple, which he had just acquired, would descend to his heir at law, who would have a right (to be enforced in equity) to have the estate paid for out of the money and other personal estate of his deceased ancestor; and the vendor would be a trustee for the heir, until he should have made a conveyance of the legal estate, to which the heir would be entitled. Many other examples of equitable or trust estates in fee simple might be furnished.

An equitable estate in fee will not escheat to the lord No escheat of upon corruption of the blood, or failure of heirs of the cestui que trust (c); for a trust is a mere creature of equity, and not a subject of tenure. In such a case, therefore, the trustee will hold the lands discharged from the trust which has so failed; and he will accordingly

(y) 1 Sand. Uses, 300 (324, 5th ed.)

(z) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, ss. 70, 71, repealing stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 45, which repealed stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 56. (a) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 146, 162, 13th ed.

(b) Bower v. Cooper, 2 Hare, 408.

(c) 1 Sand. Uses, 288 (302, 5th ed.)

Trust for alien.

Treason.

Descent of an equitable estate.

Creation and transfer of trust estates. Statute of Frauds.

have a right to receive the rents and profits without being called to account by any one. In other words, the lands will thenceforth be his own(d). But it has been held that, if lands be purchased by a natural born subject in trust for an alien (e), the crown may claim the benefit of the purchase (f); although, if lands be directed to be sold, and the produce given to an alien, the crown has then no claim (q). In the event of high treason being committed by the cestui que trust of an estate in fee simple, it is the better opinion that his equitable estate will be forfeited to the crown (h). By a recent statute (i) both the lord's right of escheat, and the crown's right of forfeiture, have been taken away in the case of the failure of heirs or corruption of blood of the trustee, except so far as he himself may have any beneficial interest in the lands of which he is seised (k). The descent of an equitable estate on intestacy follows the rules of the descent of legal estates; and, therefore, in the case of gavelkind and borough-English lands, trusts affecting them will descend according to the descendible quality of the tenure (l).

Trusts or equitable estates may be created and passed from one person to another, without the use of any particular ceremony or form of words(m). But, by the Statute of Frauds(n) it is enacted (o) that no action shall be brought upon any agreement made upon considera-

(d) Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Wm. Black. 123; 1 Eden, 177; Taylor v. Haygarth, 14 Sim. 8; Davall v. New River Company, 3 De Gex & Smale, 394; Beale v. Symonds, 16 Beav. 406.

(e) See ante, p. 62.

(f) Barrow v. Wadkin, 24 Beav.
1. See however Rittson v. Stordy,
3 Sm. & Giff. 230, qu.?

(g) Du Hourmelin v. Sheldon, 1 Beav. 79; 4 My. & Cr. 525. (h) 1 Hale, P. C. 249.

(i) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, repealing stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 23, to the same effect.

(k) Sect. 47.

(1) 1 Sand. Uses, 270 (282, 5th ed.)

(m) 1 Sand. Uses, 315, 316 (343, 844, 5th ed.)

(n) 29 Car. II. c. 3.

(o) Sect. 4; Sug. V. & P. c. 4, pp. 96 et seq., 13th ed. tion of marriage, or upon any contract or sale of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them, unless the agreement, upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized. It is also enacted (p), that all declarations or creations of trusts or confidences of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall be manifested and proved by some writing, signed by the party who is by law enabled to declare such trust, or by his last will in writing; and further (q), that all grants and assignments of any trust or confidence shall likewise be in writing, signed by the party granting or assigning the same, or by his last will. Trusts arising or resulting from any conveyance of lands or tenements, by implication or construction of law, and trusts transferred or extinguished by an act or operation of law, are exempted from this statute (r). In the transfer of equitable estates it is usual, in practice, to adopt conveyances applicable to the legal estate; but this is never necessary (s). If writing is used, and duly signed, in order to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and the intention to transfer is clear, any words will answer the purpose (t).

(p) Sect. 7; Tierney v. Wood, 19 Beav. 330.

(q) Sect. 9.

(r) Sect. 8.

(s) 1 Sand. Uses, 342 (377, 5th ed.)

(t) Agreements, the matter whereof is of the value of five pounds or upwards, now bear a stamp duty of sixpence, which may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, on which, if used, every party who signs the agreement must at the same time write his name, and the date of the day and year of writing the same, otherwise the stamp will be of no avail. Stats. 23 Vict. c. 15; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 111, s. 12. If they contain 2,160 words or upwards, there is a further progressive duty of sixpence for every entire quantity of 1,080 words, or fifteen folios, over and above the first 1,080 words. Declarations of trust made by any writing, not being a will, bear the same duty as ordinary deeds; stats. 55 Geo. III. c. 184; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97; ante, p. 139. Trust estates liable to debts.

The Statute of Frauds.

Subsequent statutes.

Judgment debts. The Statute of Frauds.

Trust estates, besides being subject to voluntary alienation, are also liable, like estates at law, to involuntary alienation for the payment of the owner's debts. Bv the Statute of Frauds it is provided, that if any cestui que trust shall die, leaving a trust in fee simple to descend to his heir, such trust shall be assets by descent, and the heir shall be chargeable with the obligation of his ancestors for and by reason of such assets, as fully as he might have been if the estate in law had descended to him in possession in like manner as the trust descended (u). And the subsequent statutes to which we have before referred, for preventing the debtor from defeating his bond creditor by his will, and for rendering the estates of all persons liable on their decease to the payment of their just debts of every kind, apply as well to equitable or trust estates as to estates at law(x).

The same Statute of Frauds also gave a remedy to the creditor who had obtained a judgment against his debtor, by providing (y) that it should be lawful for every sheriff or other officer to whom any writ should be directed, upon any judgment, to deliver execution unto the party in that behalf suing of all such lands and hereditaments as any other person or persons should be seised or possessed of in trust for him against whom execution was sued, like as the sheriff or other officer might have done if the party against whom execution should be sued had been seised of such lands or hereditaments of such estate as they be seised of in trust for him at the time of execution sued. This enactment was evidently copied from

(u) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 10. Before this provision the Court of Chancery had refused to give the bond creditor any relief. Bennet v. Box, 1 Cha. Ca. 12; Prat v. Colt, ib. 128. These decisions, in all probability, gave rise to the above enactment. See 1 Wm. Black. 159; 1 Sand. Uses, 276 (289, 5th ed.)

(x) Stat. 3 & 4 Wm. & Mary,
c. 14, s. 2; 47 Geo. III. c. 74;
11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 47;
3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 104; ante
pp. 75, 76.

(y) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 10.

a similar provision made by a statute of Henry VII. (z), respecting lands of which any other person or persons were seised to the use of him against whom execution was sued : and which statute of course became inoperative when uses were, by the Statute of Uses(a), turned The construction placed upon this into estates at law. enactment of the Statute of Frauds was more favourable to purchasers than that placed on the statute of Edward I. (b), by which fee simple estates at law were first rendered liable to judgment debts. For it was held that although the trustee might have been seised in trust for the debtor at the time of obtaining the judgment, yet if he had conveyed away the lands to a purchaser before execution was actually sued out on the judgment, the lands could not afterwards be taken ; because the trustee was not, in the words of the statute, seised in trust for the debtor at the time of execution sued(c). The act for extending the remedies of creditors against the property of debtors (d), however, deprived purchasers of this advantage, in consideration perhaps of the greater facilities which it afforded in the search for judgments; for it provided (e) that execution might be delivered under the writ of elegit, of all such lands and hereditaments as the person against whom execution was sued, or any person in trust for him, should have been seised or possessed of at the time of entering up the judgment, or at any time afterwards; and a remedy in equity was also given to the judgment creditor against all lands and hereditaments of or to which the debtor should at the time of entering up the judgment, or at any time afterwards, be seised, possessed or entitled for any estate or interest whatever at law or in equity (f).

- (z) Stat. 19 Hen. VII. c. 15.
- (a) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

(b) Stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 18; ante, p. 77.

(c) Hunt v. Coles, Com. 226; Harris v. Pugh, 4 Bing. 335; 12 J. B. Moore, 577.

- (d) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; ante, p. 79.
 - (e) Sect. 11.
 - (f) Sect. 13.

New enactments.

But the still more recent enactments (g), to which we have before referred (h), greatly diminish the effect of these provisions.

Crown debts. Trust estates are subject to debts due to the crown in the same manner and to the same extent as estates at law (i). They are also equally liable to involuntary alienation on the bankruptcy of the cestui que trust. But on the bankruptcy (k) of the trustee, the legal estate in the premises of which he is trustee remains vested in him and does not pass to his assignces; and the same rule formerly applied to cases of insolvency (l).

The Trustee Act, 1850.

The circumstance of property being vested in trustees sometimes occasions inconvenience. A trustee may become lunatic, or may leave the country, or may refuse to convey, when required, the lands of which he is trustee; or he may die intestate without an heir, or leaving an infant heir, on whom, if he was a sole or a sole surviving trustee, the lands will descend at law. In order to remedy the inconvenience thus occasioned to the persons beneficially entitled, it is provided by recent acts of parliament(m) that, in the case of a lunatic trustee, the Lord Chancellor, or the persons entrusted by the Queen's sign manual with the care of the persons and estates of lunatics, and the Court of Chancery in other cases, may make an order vesting the lands in any other person or persons; and such an order will operate as a valid conveyance of such lands accordingly.

(g) Stats. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, ss. 1, 2; 27 &
28 Vict. c. 112.

(h) Ante, pp. 81, 82.

(i) King v. Smith, Sugd. Ven. & Pur. Appendix, No. 15, p. 1098, 11th ed.

(k) Ex parte Gennys, Mont. & Mac. 258.

(1) Sims v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & El. 536.

(m) Stats. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, repealing and consolidating stats. 11 Geo. 1V. & 1 Will. 1V. c. 60, 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 23, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69. It is also provided that, whenever it is expedient to ap- New trustces. point a new trustee, and it is inexpedient, difficult or impracticable so to do without the assistance of the Court of Chancery, that Court may make an order appointing a new trustee or new trustees, either in substitution for or in addition to any existing trustee or trustees (n), or whether there be any existing trustee or not (o). The Court of Chancery is also empowered to appoint a new trustee in the place of any trustee who shall have been convicted of felony (p). And upon making any order appointing a new trustee, the Court may direct that any lands subject to the trust shall vest in the person or persons, who, upon the appointment, shall be the trustee or trustees for such estate as the Court shall direct; and such order will have the same effect as if the person or persons who before such order were the trustee or trustees (if any) had duly executed all proper conveyances of such lands (q). Property held Charity proin trust for charities may also be vested by the Court in perty. new trustees, or in the official trustee of charity lands, without any conveyance (r). But every such order is now chargeable with the like amount of stamp duty as it would have been chargeable with if it had been a deed executed by the person or persons possessed of the land (s). All the power and authority of the Court of County Courts. Chancery, in any of the above-mentioned matters, is now vested in the County Courts, in all proceedings in which the trust estate or fund to which the proceeding relates, shall not exceed in amount or value the sum of five hundred pounds (t). By another act of parlia- Property held

```
(n) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,
(r) Sect. 45. Stats. 16 & 17
Vict. c. 137, s. 48; 18 & 19 Vict.
(o) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55,
(p) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55,
(p) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55,
(q) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,
(s) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99,
(q) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60,
(s) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99,
(c) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99,
(c) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99,
```

for religious or educational purposes.

Literary and scientific institutions.

New enactment ; power to appoint new trustees.

ment (u) provision is made for vesting the property of congregations or societies for purposes of religious worship or education in new trustees from time to time without any conveyance. The provisions of this act have recently been extended to Literary and Scientific Institutions (v). But it is an ill-drawn act, and not likely to be very beneficial. More recently an act has been passed which contains a general provision for the appointment of new trustees, similar to the powers for that purpose ordinarily inserted in well drawn trust deeds. The act "to give to trustees, mortgagees and others, certain powers now commonly inserted in settlements, mortgages and wills," provides(x) that whenever any trustee shall die, or desire to be discharged from, or refuse, or become unfit or incapable to act in the trusts or powers reposed in him, the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or the acting executors or administrators of the last surviving or continuing trustee, or the last retiring trustee, may, if there be no person nominated for that purpose by the instrument creating the trust, or no such person able and willing to act, appoint a new trustee; and every such trustee, and also every trustee appointed by the Court of Chancery, is invested with the same powers as if he had been originally nominated by the instrument creating the trust (y). And the above-mentioned power of appointing new trustees may be exercised in cases where a trustee nominated in a will has died in the lifetime of the testator, as well as where he may have died after the testator's decease (z). It is now provided that where appointment of the appointment of a new trustee occasions several Stamps on new trustees.

> (u) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 28. (v) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 112, s. 12.

> (x) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 27.

(y) The words Court of Chancery here used extend to and include the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster. Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 40.

(z) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 28.

deeds, if one of them be stamped with the usual deed stamp of 1l. 15s., the others may bear the same stamp only as a duplicate would be charged with(a).

The concurrent existence of two distinct systems of Law and equity jurisprudence is a peculiar feature of English Law. On distinct sys-tems. one side of Westminster Hall a man may succeed in his suit under circumstances in which he would undoubtedly be defeated on the other side; for he may have a title in equity, and not at law (being a cestui que trust), or a title at law and not in equity (being merely a trustee). In the former case, though he would succeed in a chancery suit, he never would think of bringing an action at law; in the latter case he would succeed in an action at law; but equity would take care that the fruits should be reaped only by the person beneficially entitled. The equitable title is, therefore, the beneficial one, but if barely equitable, it may occasion the expense and delay of a chancery suit to maintain it. Every purchaser of landed property has, therefore, a right to a good title both at law and in equity; and if the legal estate should be vested in a trustee, or any person other than the vendor, the concurrence of such trustee or other person must be obtained for the purpose of vesting the legal estate in the purchaser, or, if he should please, in a new trustee of his own choosing. When a person has an estate at law, and does not hold it subject to any trust, he has of course the same estate in equity, but without any occasion for resorting to its aid. To him, therefore, the doctrine of trusts does not apply: his legal title is sufficient; the law declares the nature and incidents of his estate, and equity has no ground for interference(b).

(a) Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 91, (b) See Brydges v. Brydges, 3 s. 30. See ante, p. 139. Ves. 127. R. P. M Common Law Procedure Act, 1854.

A great step has now been taken towards the amalgamation of law and equity by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c), which confers on the Courts of Common Law an extensive equitable jurisdiction. The plaintiff in any action, except replevin and ejectment, may claim a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested (d), and by the nonperformance of which he may sustain damage (e). In all cases of breach of contract or other injury, where the party injured is entitled to maintain and has brought an action, he may claim a writ of injunction against the repetition or continuance of such breach or injury (f). If the defendant would be entitled to relief against the judgment on equitable grounds, he may plead, by way of defence to the action, the facts which entitled him to such relief (g); and the plaintiff may reply, in answer to any plea of the defendants, facts which avoid such plea on equitable grounds (h). But the facts pleaded must be such as would entitle the person pleading them to absolute and unconditional relief in the Court of Chancery, otherwise the plea will not be allowed (i). The change effected has not therefore been so great as might, at first sight, have been supposed. More recently another act of parliament has conferred a common law jurisdiction upon the Court of Chancery :--the Chancery Amendment Act, 1858(k), now empowers the Court of Chancery to award damages like a Court of Law in all cases of injunction and specific performance (l); and the amount of such damages may

The Chancery Amendment Act, 1858.

- (c) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125.
- (d) Sect. 68.
- (e) Sect. 69.
- (f) Sect. 79.
- (g) Sect. 83.
- (h) Sect. 85.
- (i) Mines Royal Societies v. Mag-nay, 10 Exch. 489; Wodehouse v. Farebrother, 5 E. & B. 277; Wood v. Copper Miners' Company, 17 C. B. 561; Flight v. Gray, 3 C. B. N. S. 320; Gee v. Smart, 8 E. & B. 313.

- (k) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27.
- (1) Sect. 2.

be assessed, or any question of fact tried, by a jury before the Court itself(m), or by the Court itself without a jury(n).

We shall now take leave of equity and equitable estates, and proceed, in the next chapter, to explain a modern conveyance.

```
(m) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, ss. 3, 4. (n) Sect. 5.
```

CHAPTER IX.

OF A MODERN CONVEYANCE.

In modern times, down to the year 1841, the kind of Lease and release. conveyance employed, on every ordinary purchase of a freehold estate, was called a lease and release; and for every such transaction, two deeds were always required. From that time to the year 1845, the ordinary method of conveyance was a release merely, or, more accu-Release. rately, a release made in pursuance of the act of parliament(a) intituled "An Act for rendering a Release as effectual for the Conveyance of Freehold Estates as a Lease and Release by the same Parties." The object of this act was merely to save the expense of two deeds to every purchase, by rendering the lease unnecessary.

New enactment. A further alteration was then made, by the act to simplify the transfer of property (b), which enacted (c), that, after the 31st day of December, 1844, every person might convey by any deed, without livery of seisin, or a prior lease, all such freehold land as he might, before the passing of the act, have conveyed by lease and release, and every such conveyance should take effect, as if it had been made by lease and release; provided always, that every such deed should be chargeable with the same stamp duty as would have been chargeable if such conveyance had been made by lease and release.

(a) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21. (b) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76. (c) Sects. 2, 13.

This act, however, had not been in operation more Further enactment. than nine months when it was repealed by the act to amend the law of real property (d), which provides, that after the 1st of October, 1845, all corporeal tenements and hereditaments shall, as regards the conveyance of the immediate freehold thereof, be deemed to lie in grant as well as in livery. A simple deed of grant is therefore now sufficient to grant the freehold or feudal seisin of all lands (e). But as a lease and release was so long the usual method of conveyance, the nature of a conveyance by lease and release should still form a subject of the student's inquiry; and with this we will accordingly begin.

From the little that has already been said concerning A lease for a lease for years (f), the reader will have gathered, that years. the lessee is put into possession of the premises leased for a definite time, although his possession has nothing feudal in its nature, for the law still recognizes the landlord as retaining the seisin or feudal possession. Entry Entry necesby the tenant was, however, in ancient times, absolutely sary. necessary to make a complete lease (q); although, in accordance with feudal principles, it was not necessary that the landlord should depart at once and altogether, as he must have done in the case of a feoffment where the feudal seisin was transferred. When the tenant had The tenant's thus gained a footing on the premises, under an express position alcontract with his landlord, he became, with respect to the feudal possession, in a different position from a mere

(d) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, 8. 2.

(e) By the second section of the act, the stamp duty on this single deed was the same as was chargeable on the lease and release, except the progressive duty on the lease. But the duty on the lease for a year is now repealed by stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, s. 6, so far as relates to any deed or instrument bearing date after the 10th of October, 1850.

(f) Ante, pp. 8, 108. (g) Litt. s. 459; Co. Litt. 270 a.

stranger; for, he was then capable of acquiring such feudal possession, without any formal livery of seisin, by a transfer or conveyance, from his landlord, of all his (the landlord's) estate in the premises. Being already in possession by the act and agreement of his landlord, and under a tenancy recognized by the law, there was not the same necessity for that open delivery of the seisin to him. as there would have been to a mere stranger. In his case, indeed, livery of seisin would have been improper, for he was already in possession under his lease (h); and, as a delivery of the possession of the lands could not, therefore, be made to him, it was necessary that the landlord's interest should be conveyed in some other manner. Now the ancient common law always required that a transfer or gift of every kind relating to real property should be made, either by actual or symbolical delivery of the subject of the transfer, or, when this was impossible, by the delivery of a written document (i). But in former times, as we have seen (k), every writing was under seal; and a writing so sealed and delivered is in fact a deed. In this case, therefore, a deed was required for the conveyance of the landlord's interest(l); and such conveyance by deed, under the above circumstances, was termed a release. To a lease and release of this kind, it is obvious that the same objection applies as to a feoffment: the inconvenience of actually going on the premises is not obviated; for, the tenant must enter before he can receive the release. In the very early periods of our history, this kind of circuitous conveyance was, however, occasionally used. A lease was made for one, two, or three years, completed by the actual entry of the lessee, for the express purpose of enabling him to receive a release of the inheritance,

(h) Litt. s. 460; Gilb. Uses and Trusts, 104 (223, 3rd ed.)

(i) Co. Litt. 9 a; Doe d. Were v. Cole, 7 Barn. & Cress. 243, 248; ante, p. 11.

(k) Ante, p. 137.

(1) Shep. Touch. 320.

A release.

Inconvenience of lease with entry. which was accordingly made to him a short time afterwards. The lease and release, executed in this manner, transferred the freehold of the releasor as effectually as if it had been conveyed by feoffment (m). But a lease and release would never have obtained the prevalence they afterwards acquired had not a method been found out of making a lease, without the necessity of actual entry by the lessee.

The Statute of Uses (n) was the means of accomplish- The Statute of Uses. ing this desirable object. This statute, it may be remembered, enacts, that when any person is seised of lands to the use of another, he that has the use shall be deemed in lawful seisin and possession of the lands, for the same estate as he has in the use. Now, besides a feoffment to one person to the use of another, there were, before this statute, other modes by which a use might be raised or created, or in other words, by which a man might become seised of lands to the use of some other person. Thus-if, before the Statute of Uses, a bargain was made Bargain and sale. for the sale of an estate, and the purchase-money paid, but no feoffment was executed to the purchaser,-the Court of Chancery, in analogy to its modern doctrine on the like occasions (o), considered that the estate ought in conscience immediately to belong to the person who paid the money, and, therefore, held the bargainor or vendor to be immediately seised of the lands in question to the use of the purchaser (p). This proper and equitable doctrine of the Court of Chancery had rather a curious effect when the Statute of Uses came into operation; for, as by means of a contract of this kind the purchaser became entitled to the use of the lands, so, after the passing of the statute, he became at once entitled, on

(m) 2 Sand. Uses, 61 (74, 5th ed.)

- (n) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.
- (o) Ante, pp. 152, 153.

(p) 2 Sand. Uses, 43 (53, 5th ed.); Gilb. Uses and Trusts, 49 (94, 3rd ed.)

payment of his purchase-money, to the lawful seisin and possession; or rather, he was deemed really to have, by force of the statute, such seisin and possession, so far at least as it was possible to consider a man in possession, who in fact was not(q). It, consequently, came to pass that the seisin was thus transferred, from one person to another, by a mere bargain and sale, that is, by a contract for sale and payment of money, without the necessity of a feoffment, or even of a deed(r); and, moreover, an estate in fee simple at law was thus duly conveyed from one person to another without the employment of the technical word heirs, which before was necessary to mark out the estate of the purchaser; for, it was presumed that the purchase-money was paid for an estate in fee simple (s); and, as the purchaser had, under his contract, such an estate in the use, he of course became entitled, by the very words of the statute, to the same estate in the legal seisin and possession.

The mischievous results of the statute, in this particular, were quickly perceived. The notoriety in the transfer of estates, on which the law had always laid so much stress, was at once at an end; and it was perceived to be very undesirable that so important a matter as the title to landed property should depend on a mere verbal bargain and money payment, or bargain and sale, as it was termed. Shortly after the passing of the Statute of Uses, it was accordingly required by another act of parliament (t), passed in the same year, that every bargain and sale of any estate of inheritance or freehold Bargains and sales required to be by deed enrolled.

> (q) Thus, he could not maintain an action of trespass without being actually in possession, for this action is grounded on the disturbance of the actual possession, which is evidently more than the Statute of Uses, or any other statute, can give. Gilb. Uses, 81 (135, 3rd ed.);

2 Fonb. on Equity, 12.

(r) Dyer, 229 a; Comyn's Digest, tit. Bargain and Sale (B. 1, 4); Gilb. on Uses and Trusts, 87, 271 (197, 475, 3rd ed.)

(s) Gilb. Uses, 62 (116, 3rd ed.) (t) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 16. should be made by deed indented and enrolled, within six months (which means lunar months) from the date, in one of the courts of record at Westminster, or before the custos rotulorum and two justices of the peace and the clerk of the peace for the county in which the lands lay, or two of them at least, whereof the elerk of the peace should be one. A stop was thus put to the secret conveyance of estates by mere contract and payment of money. For a deed entered on the records of a Court is of course open to public inspection; and the expense of enrolment was, in some degree, a counterbalance to the inconvenience of going to the lands to give livery of seisin. It was not long, however, before a loophole was A loophole discovered in this latter statute, through which, after discovered in the statute. a few had ventured to pass, all the world soon followed. It was perceived that the act spoke only of estates of inheritance or freehold, and was silent as to bargains and sales for a mere term of years, which is not a freehold. A bargain and sale of lands for a year only, was not Bargain and therefore affected by the act(u), but remained still eapable of being accomplished by word of mouth and payment of money. The entry on the part of the tenant, required by the law (v), was supplied by the Statute of Uses; which, by its own force, placed him in legal intendment in possession for the same estate as he had in the use, that is, for the term bargained and sold to him(x). And as any pecuniary payment, however small, was considered sufficient to raise a use(y), it followed that if A., a person seised in fee simple, bargained and sold his lands to B. for one year, in consideration of ten shillings paid by B. to A., B. became, in law, at once possessed of an estate in the lands for the term of one year, in the same manner as if he had actually entered sale for a year.

(u) Gilb. Uses, 98, 296 (214 (x) Gilb. Uses, 104 (223, 3rd 502, 3rd ed.); 2 Sand. Uses, 63 ed.) (y) 2 Sand. Uses, 47 (57, 5th (75, 5th ed.) (v) Ante, p. 165. ed.)

on the premises under a regular lease. Here then was an opportunity of making a conveyance of the whole fee simple, without livery of seisin, entry or enrolment. When the bargain and sale for a year was made, A. had simply to release by deed to B. and his heirs his (A.'s) estate and interest in the premises, and B. became at once seised of the lands for an estate in fee simple. This bargain and sale for a year, followed by a release, is the modern conveyance by lease and release-a method which was first practised by Sir Francis Moore, serjeant at law, at the request, it is said, of Lord Norris, in order that some of his relations might not know what convevance or settlement he should make of his estate (z). And although the efficiency of this method was at first doubted (a), it was, for more than two centuries, the common means of conveying lands in this country. It will be observed that the bargain and sale (or lease, as it is called) for a year derived its effect from the Statute of Uses: the release was quite independent of that statute, having existed long before, and being as ancient as the common law itself(b). The Statute of Uses was employed in the conveyance by lease and release only for the purpose of giving to the intended releasee, without his actually entering on the lands, such an estate as would enable him to receive the release. When this estate for one year was obtained by the lease, the Statute of Uses had performed its part, and the fee simple was conveyed to the release by the release alone. The release would, before the Statute of Uses, have conveyed the fee simple to the releasee, supposing him to have obtained that possession for one year, which, after the statute, was given him by the lease. After the passing of the Statute of Frauds (c), it became necessary that

(z) 2 Prest. Conv. 219.

(a) Sugd. note to Gilb. Uses, p. 328; 2 Prest. Conv. 231; 2 Fonb. Eq. 12. (b) Sugd. note to Gilb. Uses, 229.

(c) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, ante, p. 141.

Lease and release. every bargain and sale of lands for a year should be put Bargain and into writing, as no pecuniary rent was ever reserved, must be in the consideration being usually five shillings, the receipt writing. of which was acknowledged, though in fact it was never paid. And the bargain and sale, or lease for a year, was usually made by deed, though this was not absolutely necessary. It was generally dated the day before the date of the release, though executed on the same day as the release, immediately before the execution of the latter.

This eumbrous contrivance of two deeds to every Act abolishing purchase continued in constant use down to the year the lease for a year. 1841, when the act was passed to which we have before referred (d), intituled "An Act for rendering a Release as effectual for the Conveyance of Freehold Estates as a Lease and Release by the same Parties." This act enacts that every deed or instrument of release of a freehold estate, or purporting or intended to be so, which shall be expressed to be made in pursuance of the act, shall be as effectual, and shall take effect as a conveyance to uses or otherwise, and shall operate in all respects, as if the releasing party or parties, who shall have executed the same, had also executed, in due form, a deed or instrument of bargain and sale, or lease for a year, for giving effect to such release, although no such deed or instrument of bargain and sale, or lease for a year, shall be executed. And now, by the act to amend the law of real property (e), a deed of grant is Act to amend alone sufficient for the conveyance of all corporeal here- the law of real property. ditaments.

The legal seisin being thus capable of being trans- The estate ferred by a deed of grant, there is the same necessity taken must be marked out. now as there was when a feoffment was employed, that the estate which the purchaser is to take should be marked out(f). If he has purchased an estate in fee simple, the conveyance must be expressed to be made to him and his heirs; for the construction of all conveyances, wills only excepted, is in this respect the same; and a conveyance to the purchaser simply, without these words, would merely convey to him an estate for his life, as in the case of a feoffment (q). In this case also, as well as in a feoffment, it is the better opinion that, in order to give permanent validity to the conveyance, it is necessary either that a consideration should be expressed in the conveyance, or that it should be made to the use of the purchaser as well as unto him(h): for a lease and release was formerly, and a deed of grant is now, as much an established conveyance as a feoffment; and the rule was, before the Statute of Uses, that any conveyance, and not a feoffment particularly, made to another without any consideration, or any declaration of uses, should be deemed to be made to the use of the party conveying. In order, therefore, to avoid any such construction, and so to prevent the Statute of Uses from immediately undoing all that has been done, it is usual to express, in every conveyance, that the purchaser shall hold, not only unto, but unto and to the use of himself and his heirs.

(d) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21.

(e) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106.

Conveyance made unto and to the use of the purchaser.

A conveyance may be made to uses. A conveyance might also have been made by lease and release, as well as by a feoffment, to one person and his heirs, to the use of some other person and his heirs; and, in this case, as in a similar feoffment, the latter person took at once the whole fee simple, the former being made, by the Statute of Uses, merely a conduit pipe for conveying the estate to him (i). This extraordinary result of the Statute of Uses is continually relied on in modern conveyancing; and it may now be accomplished by a deed of grant in the same manner as it might have been before effected by a lease and release. It is found particularly advantageous as a means for avoiding a rule of law, that a man cannot make any conveyance to him- A man cannot self; thus if it were wished to make a conveyance of self. lands from A., a person solely seised, to A. and B. jointly, this operation could not, before the Statute of Uses, have been effected by less than two conveyances; for a conveyance from A. directly to A. and B. would pass the whole estate solely to B. (j). It would, therefore, have been requisite for A. to make a conveyance to a third person, and for such person then to re-convey to A. and B. jointly. And this was the method actually adopted, under similar circumstances, with respect to leasehold estates and personal property, which are not affected by the Statute of Uses, until an act was passed by which any person may now assign leasehold or personal property to himself jointly with another (k); but this act does not extend to freeholds. If the estate But a man may be freehold, A. must convey to B. and his heirs, to the convey freeuse of A. and B. and their heirs; and a joint estate in ther to his own fee simple will immediately vest in them both. Suppose, again, a person should wish to convey a freehold estate to another, reserving to himself a life interest,-without the aid of the Statute of Uses he would be unable to accomplish this result by a single deed (l). But, by means of the statute, he may now make a conveyance of the property to the other and his heirs, to the use of himself (the conveying party) for his life, and from and immediately after his decease, to the use of the other and his heirs and assigns. By this means the conveying party

(f) Shep. Touch. 327; see ante, p. 133.

(g) Shep. Touch. ubi supra.

(h) 2 Sand. Uses, 64-69 (77

(j) Perkins, s. 203. So a man cannot covenant to pay money to himself and another on a joint account, Faulkner v. Lowe, 2 Ex. Rep. 595.

(k) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 21.

(1) Perk. ss. 704, 705; Youde v. Jones, 13 Mee. & Wels. 534.

use.

will at once become seised of an estate only for his life, and after his decease an estate in fee simple will remain for the other.

The reader will now be in a situation to understand an An ordinary purchase deed. ordinary purchase deed of the simplest kind, with a specimen of which he is accordingly presented :---" THIS "INDENTURE(m) made the first day of January Date. " 1846 between A. B. of Cheapside in the city of London Parties. " esquire of the one part and C. D. of Lincoln's Inn in "the county of Middlesex esquire of the other part. "WHEREAS by indentures of lease and release (n) bear-Recital of the conveyance to " ing date respectively the first and second days of the vendor. " January 1838 and respectively made between E. F. of " the one part and the said A. B. of the other part for " the consideration therein mentioned the messnage lands " and hereditaments hereinafter described with the ap-" purtenances were conveyed unto and to the use of the " said A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever AND WHEREAS Recital of the " the said A. B. hath contracted with the said C. D. for contract for sale. " the absolute sale to him of the inheritance in fee sim-" ple(o) in possession of and in the said messuage lands " and hereditaments with the appurtenances free from all " incumbrances for the sum of one thousand pounds " Now THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH that in pursuance Testatum. " of the said contract and in consideration of the sum Consideration. " of one thousand pounds of lawful money of Great " Britain to the said A. B. in hand paid by the said C. " D. upon or before the execution of these presents (the " receipt of which said sum of one thousand pounds in Receipt. " full for the absolute purchase of the inheritance in fee " simple in possession of and in the messuage lands and " hereditaments herein before referred to and hereinafter " described with the appurtenances he the said A. B.

(m) Ante, p. 139.(n) Ante, p. 170.

(o) Ante, p. 58 et seq.

"doth hereby acknowledge and from the same doth " release the said C. D. his heirs executors administrators " and assigns) He the said A. B. DOTH by these presents Operative " GRANT (p) unto the said C. D. and his heirs ALL that "messuage or tenement [here describe the premises] To- General words. " gether with all outhouses ways watercourses trees com-" monable rights easements and appurtenances to the said "messuage lands hereditaments and $\operatorname{premises}(q)$ hereby " granted or any of them belonging or therewith used or "enjoyed And all the estate (r) and right of the said Estate. " A. B. in and to the same TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the Habendum. " said messnage lands hereditaments and premises in-"tended to be hereby granted with the appurtenances " unto and to the use of(s) the said C. D. his heirs and "assigns for ever (t)." [Then follow covenants by the vendor with the purchaser for the title; that is, that he has good right to convey the premises, for their quiet enjoyment by the purchaser, and freedom from incumbrances, and that the vendor and his heirs will make all such further conveyances as may be reasonably required.] " IN WITNESS whereof the said parties to these presents " have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and " year first above written." To the foot of the deed are appended the seals and signatures of the parties (u); and, on the back is indorsed a further receipt for the purchasemoney (x), and an attestation by the witnesses, of whom Two witnesses it is very desirable that there should be two, though the deed would not be void even without any(y). On the Stamps. face of the deed will be observed the proper stamps, without which it could not until recently have been admitted as evidence (z). But by the Common Law

- (p) Ante, pp. 165, 171.
- (q) Ante, p. 14.
- (r) Ante, p. 17.
- (s) Ante, p. 172.
- (t) Ante, pp. 135, 172.
- (u) Ante, p. 141.
- (x) This practice is of comparatively modern date. See 2 Atkyns, 478; 3 Atk. 112; 2 Sand. Uses, 305, n. A. (118, n., 5th ed.); 3 Preston's Abstracts, 15. (y) 2 Black. Com. 307, 378. (z) Ibid. 297.

words. Parcels.

desirable.

Procedure Act. 1854(a), it is now provided that, upon payment to the proper officer of the Court of the stamp duty, and the penalty required by statute, namely 101. (b), and the additional penalty of 12., any deed or other document shall be admissible in evidence, saving all just exceptions on other grounds. Purchase deeds are now subject to ad valorem stamps of one-half per cent., or five shillings per fifty pounds on the amount of the purchase-money paid, according to the table below(c); with a further progressive duty of 10s. for every entire quantity of 1080 words over and above the first 1080, unless the ad valorem duty is less than 10s., in which case the progressive duty is equal to the amount of the ad valorem duty (d). These duties were imposed by the recent Act to amend the Laws relating to the Inland Revenue (e), which was passed on the 5th of July, 1865. Before

(a) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 29.

(b) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, s. 12.

principal or only o	accuy mon un	Joine of Will	ing or co	integance exceed £5	•• ••	••	•• ••	••	£0	0	6
And where the s	ame shall ex	ceed £5 an	d not exc	eed £10	0	1	0
,,,	39	10	13	15	0	1	6
,,,	25	15	"	20	0	2	0
,,	,,	20	,,	25	0	2	6
""	,,	25	,,	50	0	5	0
	11	50	,,	75	0	7	6
,,,	33	75	"	100	0	10	0
13	11	100	,,	125	0	12	6
,,	,,	125	"	150	0	15	0
,,,		150	>>	175	0	17	6
,,	32	175	,,	200	1	0	0
11	33	200	,,	225	1	2	6
>>	3.9	225	,,	250	1	5	0
,,	11	250	,,	275	1	7	6
11		275	,,	300	1	10	0

ceed £300, then for every £50, and also for any fractional part of £50.....

tional part of $\pounds 50...$ 0 5 (d) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, schedule, title Progressive Duties.

0

(e) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 96.

this act the table of stamp duties advanced in a slightly different manner by less minute steps (f). These duties again did not apply to any deed or instrument signed or executed by any party thereto, or bearing date, before or upon the 10th of October, 1850. Such a deed, unless preceded by a lease for a year, bears the same stamp duty as the lease for a year was subject to, and also, whether so preceded or not, an ad valorem duty according to the table stated below (g). The

(f)) Stat. I.	3 &	14 Vict. c.	97	, schedule, title	e "Con	/eyance./	,
(g)	Where	the	purchase	or	consideration	money	therein	expressed hall	not amo	unt t	0.020				eo	10

15,	,	. Parenae	01 001101001	center income j
hall	not amount	to £20	• •	•• ••	£0	10
1	Amount to	20 a	and not to	50	1	0
	,,	50	97	150	1	10
	22	150	,,	300	2	0
	,,,	300	39	500	3	0
	3.3	500	22	750	6	0
	,,	750	>>	1000	9	0
	77	1000	33	2000	12	0
	""	2000	9 2	3000	25	0
	12	3000	"	4000	35	- 0
	22	4000	"	5000	45	0
	27	5000	""	6000	55	0
	2.7	6000	93	7000	65	0
	>>	7000	""	8000	75	0
	>>	8000	"	9000	85	0
		9000	,,,	10,000	95	0
	73	10,000	,,	12,500	110	0
	,,	12,500	19	15,000	130	0
	33	15,000	33	20,000	170	0
	>>	20,000	,,,	30,000	240	0
-	,,	30,000		40,000	350	0
	> 7	40,000	37	50,000	450	0
	37	50,000	,,	60,000	550	0
	,,	60,000	>>	80,000	650	0
	93	80,000	39	100,000	800	0
	,,	100,000		or upwards	1000	0

And for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein over and above the first 1080 words, a further whole of the law relating to stamp duties sadly needs revision and consolidation.

R.P.

If the premises should be situate in either of the Registry in Middlesex, counties of Middlesex or York, or in the town and Yorkshire and county of Kingston-upon-Hull, a memorandum will or ought to be found indorsed, to the effect that a memorial of the deed was duly registered on such a day, in such a book and page of the register, established by act of parliament, for the county of Middlesex (h), or the ridings of York, or the town of Kingston-upon-Hull (i). Under these acts, all deeds are to be adjudged fraudulent and void against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration, unless a memorial of such deeds be duly registered before the registering of the memorial of the deed under which such subsequent purchaser or mortgagee shall claim. Wills of lands in the above counties ought also to be registered, in order to prevail against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees. Conveyances of lands forming part of the great level of the Bedford Level. fens, called Bedford Level, are also required to be registered in the Bedford Level Office (k); but the construction which has been put on the statute, by which such registry is required, prevents any priority of interest from being gained by priority of registration (1).

From the specimen before him, the reader will be Formal style of legal instrustruck with the stiff and formal style which characterizes ments. legal instruments; but the formality to be found in every properly drawn deed has the advantage, that the reader who is acquainted with the usual order, knows at once where to find any particular portion of the contents;

(h) Stat. 7 Anne, c. 20.

(i) Stat. 2 & 3 Anne, c. 4, 5 Anne, c. 18, for the west riding; stat. 6 Anne, c. 35, for the east riding and Kingston-upon-Hull; and stat. 8 Geo. II. c. 6, for the north riding. The deeds must be first duly stamped. Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 91, s. 34.

(k) Stat. 15 Car. II. c. 17, s. 8.

(1) Willis v. Brown, 10 Sim-127.

Hull.

and, in matters of intricacy, which must frequently occur, this facility of reference is of incalculable advantage. The framework of every deed consists but of one, two, or three simple sentences, according to the number of times that the testatum, or witnessing part, " Now this Testatum. Indenture witnesseth," is repeated. This testatum is always written in large letters; and, though there is no limit to its repetition (if circumstances should require it) yet in the majority of cases, it occurs but once or twice at most. In the example above given, it will be seen that the sentence on which the deed is framed, is as follows :-- " This Indenture, made on such a day between " such parties, witnesseth, that for so much money A. B. " doth grant certain premises unto and to the use of " C. D. and his heirs." After the names of the parties have been given, an interruption occurs for the purpose of introducing the recitals; and when the whole of the introductory circumstances have been mentioned, the thread is resumed, and the deed proceeds, " Now this Indenture witnesseth." The receipt for the purchasemoney is again a parenthesis; and soon after comes the description of the property, which further impedes the progress of the sentence, till it is taken up in the haben- Habendum. dum, "To have and to hold," from which it uninterruptedly proceeds to the end. The contents of deeds, embracing as they do all manner of transaction between man and man, must necessarily be infinitely varied; and a simple conveyance, such as that we have given, is rare, compared with the number of those in which special circumstances occur. But in all deeds, as nearly as possible, the same order is preserved. The names of all the parties are invariably placed at the beginning; then Parties. follow recitals of facts relevant to the matter in hand; Recitals. then, a preliminary recital, stating shortly what is to be done ; then, the testatum, containing the operative words Operative of the deed, or the words which effect the transaction, words. of which the deed is the witness or evidence; after this,

N 2

Parcels.

- Habendum.
- Covenants.
- No stops.

scription of the property, either at large, or by reference to some deed already recited; then, the habendum show-Uses and trusts. ing the estate to be holden ; then, the uses and trusts, if any; and, lastly, such qualifying provisoes and covenants, as may be required by the special circumstances of the case. Throughout all this, not a single stop is to be found, and the sentences are so framed as to be independent of their aid; for, no one would wish the title to his estates to depend on the insertion of a comma or semicolon. The commencement of sentences, and now and then some few important words, which serve as landmarks, are rendered conspicuous by capitals: by the aid of these, the practised eye at once collects the sense; whilst, at the same time, the absence of stops renders it next to impossible materially to alter the meaning of a deed, without the forgery being discovered.

Similarity of deeds.

The adherence of lawyers, by common consent, to the same mode of framing their drafts has given rise to a great similarity in the outward appearance of deeds; and the eye of the reader is continually caught by the same capitals, such as, "THIS INDENTURE," "AND WHEREAS," "Now THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH," "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD," &c. This similarity of appearance seems to have been mistaken by some for a sameness of contents,—an error for which any one but a lawyer might perhaps be pardoned. And this mistake, coupled with a laudable anxiety to save expense to the public, appears to have produced a plan for making convevances by way of schedule. In pursuance of this plan, two acts of parliament have already passed, one for conveyances (m), the other for leases (n). These acts, however, as might have been expected, are very seldom employed; nor is it possible that any schedule should ever comprehend the multitude of variations to which purchase deeds are continually liable. In the midst of this variety, the adoption, as nearly as possible, of the same framework is a great saving of trouble, and consequently of expense; but so long as the power of alienation possessed by the public is exerciseable in such a variety of ways, and for such a multitude of purposes as is now permitted, so long will the conveyance of landed property call for the exercise of learning and skill, and so long also will it involve the expense requisite to give to such learning and skill its proper remuneration. The remuneration, however, which is afforded to Professional the profession of the law is bestowed in a manner which calls for some remark. In a country like England, where every employment is subject to the keenest competition, there can be little doubt but that, whatever method may be taken for the remuneration of professional services, the nature and quantity of the trouble incurred must, on the average and in the long run, be the actual measure of the remuneration paid. The misfortune is, that when a wrong method of remuneration is adopted, the true proportion between service and reward is necessarily obtained by indirect means, and therefore in a more troublesome, and, consequently, more expensive manner, than if a proper scale had been directly used. In the law, unfortunately, this has been the case, and there seems no good reason why any individual connected with the law should be ashamed or afraid of making it known. The labour of a lawyer is very different from that of a copyist or printer; it consists first and chiefly in acquiring a minute acquaintance with the principles of the law, then in obtaining a knowledge of the facts of any particular case which may be brought before him, and lastly in practically applying to such case the principles he has previously learnt. But, for the last and least of these items alone does he obtain any direct remuneration; for, deeds are now paid for by the length, like printing or copying, without any regard remuneration.

(m) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119. (n) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 124.

to the principles they involve, or to the intricacy or importance of the facts to which they may relate (o); and, more than this, the rate of payment is fixed so low, that no man of education could afford for the sake of it, first to ascertain what sort of instrument the circumstances may require, and then to draw a deed containing the full measure of ideas of which words are capable. The payment to a solicitor for drawing a deed is fixed at one shilling for every seventy-two words, denominated a folio; and the fees of counsel, though paid in guineas, average about the same. The consequence of this false economy on the part of the public has been, that certain well known and long established lengthy forms, full of synonyms and expletives, are current among lawyers as common forms, and, by the aid of these, ideas are diluted to the proper remunerating strength; not that a lawyer actually inserts nonsense simply for the sake of increasing his fee; but words, sometimes unnecessary in any case, sometimes only in the particular case in which he is engaged, are suffered to remain, sanctioned by the authority of time and usage. The proper amount of verbiage to a common form is well established and understood; and whilst any attempt to exceed it is looked on as disgraceful, it is never likely to be materially diminished till a change is made in the scale of payment. The case of the medical profession is exactly parallel; for, so long as the public think that the medicine supplied is the only thing worth paying for, so long will cures ever be accompanied with the customary abundance of little bottles.

(o) By statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, the charges of a solicitor for business relating entirely to conveyancing are rendered liable to taxation or reduction to the established seale, which is regulated only by length. Previously to this statute, the bill of a solicitor relating to conveyancing was not taxable, unless part of the bill was for business transacted in some Court of law or equity. But although conveyancing bills were not strictly taxable, they were always drawn up on the same principle of payment by length, which pervades the other branches of the law.

Common forms.

In both cases, the system is bad; but the fault is not with the profession, who bear the blame, but with the public, who have fixed the scale of payment, and who, by a little more direct liberality, might save themselves a considerable amount of indirect expense. If physicians' prescriptions were paid for by their length, does any one suppose that their present conciseness would long continue ?-unless indeed the rate of payment were fixed so high as to leave the average remuneration the same as at present. The acts above mentioned contain a provision that, in taxing any bill for preparing and executing any deed under the acts, the taxing officer shall consider, not the length of such deed, but only the skill and labour employed and responsibility incurred in the preparation thereof (p). This, so far, is an effort in the right direction; though it is too partial to be of any benefit. The student must, therefore, make up his mind to find in legal instruments a considerable amount of verbiage; at the same time he should be careful not to confound this with that formal and orderly style which facilitates the lawyer's perusal of deeds, or with that repetition which is often necessary to exactness without the dangerous aid of stops. The form of a purchase-deed, which has been given above, is disencumbered of the usual verbiage, whilst, at the same time, it preserves the regular and orderly arrangement of its parts. A similar conveyance, by deed of grant, in the old established common forms, will be found in the Appendix (q).

To return :- A lease and release was said to be an in- Lease and renocent conveyance; for when, by means of the lease and lease an inno-cent conveythe Statute of Uses, the purchaser had once been put into ance. possession, he obtained the fee simple by the release; and a release never operates by wrong, as a feoffment occasionally did(r), but simply passes that which may lawfully and rightfully be conveyed(s). The same rule is applicable to a deed of grant(t). Thus, if a tenant merely for his own life should, by a lease and release, or by a grant, purport to convey to another an estate in fee simple, his own life interest only would pass, and no injury would be done to the reversioner. The word grant is the proper and technical term to be employed in a deed of grant(u), but its employment is not absolutely necessary; for it has been held that other words indicating an intention to grant will answer the purpose (x).

(q) See Appendix (C). (p) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119, s. 4; stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 124, s. 3.

Bargain and sale.

Inrolment.

In addition to a conveyance by deed of grant, other methods are occasionally employed. Thus, there may be a bargain and sale of an estate in fee simple, by deed duly inrolled pursuant to the statute 27 Hen. VIII. c. 16, already mentioned (y). The chief advantage of a bargain and sale is, that by a statute of Anne(z), an office copy of the inrolment of a bargain and sale is made as good evidence as the original deed. In some cities and boroughs the inrolment of bargains and sales is made by the mayors or other officers (a). And in the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham it may be made in the palatine courts(b); and so the incolment of bargains and sales of lands in the county of Cheshire might have been made in the palatine courts of that county until their abolition (c). Bargains and sales of lands in the county of York may be inrolled in the register of the riding in which the lands lie(d). When a bargain and

(r) Ante, p. 135.	(a) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 16,
(s) Litt. s. 600.	s. 2.
(t) Litt. ss. 616, 617.	(b) Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 26.
(u) Shep. Touch. 229.	(c) By stat. 11 Geo. IV. & 1
(x) Shove v. Pincke, 5 T. Rep.	Will. IV. c. 70.
124; Haggerston v. Hanbury, 5	(d) Stat. 5 & 6 Anne, c. 18;
Barn. & Cres. 101.	6 Anne, c. 35, ss. 16, 17, 34; 8
(y) Ante, p. 168.	Geo. II. c. 6, s. 21.
(z) Stat. 10 Anne, c. 18, s. 3.

sale is employed the whole legal estate in fee simple passes, as we have seen (e), by means of the Statute of Uses,-the bargainor becoming seised to the use of the bargainee and his heirs. A bargain and sale, therefore, Bargain and cannot, like a lease and release, or a grant, be made to sale cannot I made to one one person to the use of another; for, the whole force of person to the the Statute of Uses is already exhausted in transferring the legal estate in fee simple to the bargainee (f). Similar to a bargain and sale is another method of conveyance occasionally, though very rarely, employed, namely, a covenant to stand seised to the use of another, Covenant to in consideration of blood or marriage (q). In addition to these methods, there may be a conveyance by appointment of a use, under a power of appointment, of which Appointment. more will be said in a future chapter (h). The student, indeed, can never be too careful to avoid supposing that, when he has read and understood a chapter of the present, or any other elementary work, he is therefore acquainted with all that is to be known on the subject. To place him in a position to comprehend more is all that can be attempted in a first book.

(e) Ante, p. 167.	Starling v. Prince, C. P. 15 Jur.
(f) See ante, p. 167.	632.
(g) See Doe d. Daniell v. Wood-	(h) See the chapter on executory roffe, 10 Mee. & Wels. 608; Doe d.	interests.

sale cannot be use of another.

stand seised.

CHAPTER X.

OF A WILL OF LANDS.

THE right of testamentary alienation of lands is a matter depending upon act of parliament. We have seen, that previously to the reign of Henry VIII. an estate in fee simple, if not disposed of in the lifetime of the owner, descended, on his death, to his heir at law(a). To this rule, gavelkind lands, and lands in a few favoured boroughs, formed exceptions; and the hardship of the rule was latterly somewhat mitigated by the prevalence of conveyance to uses; for the Court of Chancery allowed the use to be devised by will (b). But when the Statute of Uses(c) came into operation, and all uses were turned into legal estates, the title of the heir again prevailed, and the inconvenience of the want of testamentary power then began to be felt. To remedy this inconvenience, an act of parliament(d), to which we have before referred (e), was passed six years after the enactment of the Statute of Uses. By this act, every person having any lands or hereditaments holden in socage, or in the nature of socage tenure, was enabled by his last will and testament in writing, to give and devise the same at his will and pleasure; and those who had estates in fee simple in lands held by knights' service were enabled, in the same way, to give and devise two third parts thereof. When, by the statute of 12 Car. II.

(a) Ante, p. 61.
(b) Ante, p. 145.
(c) Stat. 27 Hen, VIII. c. 10; ante, p. 146. (d) 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, explained by statute 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 5.

(e) Ante, p. 61.

Statute of Wills.

c. 24(f) socage was made the universal tenure, all estates in fee simple became at once devisable, being all then holden by socage. This extensive power of devising lands by a mere writing unattested was soon curtailed by the Statute of Frauds (q), which required that all devises and The Statute of bequests of any lands or tenements, devisable either by Frauds. statute or the custom of Kent, or of any borough, or any other custom, should be in writing, and signed by the party so devising the same, or by some other person in his presence and by his express directions, and should be attested and subscribed in the presence of the said devisor by three or four credible witnesses, or else they should be utterly void and of none effect. And thus the law continued till the year 1837, when an act was passed for the amendment of the laws with respect to New Wills Act. wills (h). By this act the original statute of Henry VIII. (i) was repealed, except as to wills made prior to the 1st of January, 1838, and the law was altered to its present state. This act permits of the devise by will of overy kind of estate and interest in real property, which would otherwise devolve to the heir of the testator, or, if he became entitled by descent, to the heir of his ancestor (j); but enacts (k), that no will shall be valid, unless it shall be in writing, and signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction; and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator, in the presence of two or more witnesses, present at the same time; and such witnesses shall attest, and shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator. One would have thought that this enactment was sufficiently clear, especially that part of it which directs the will to be signed at the foot or end thereof. Some very careless testators,

(i) 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1. (f) Ante, p. 114. (g) 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 5. (j) Sect. 3. (h) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. (k) Sect. 9. c. 26.

and very clever judges, have, however, contrived to throw upon this clause of the act a discredit which it does not And it has accordingly been enacted(l), by deserve. way of explanation, that every will shall, so far only as regards the position of the signature of the testator, or of the person signing for him, be deemed to be valid, if the signature shall be so placed at, or after, or following, or under, or beside, or opposite to the end of the will, that it shall be apparent on the face of the will that the testator intended to give effect by such his signature to the writing signed as his will; and that no such will shall be affected by the circumstance that the signature shall not follow, or be immediately after, the foot or end of the will, or by the circumstance that a blank space shall intervene between the concluding word of the will and the signature, or by the circumstance that the signature shall be placed among the words of the testimonium clause, or of the clause of attestation, or shall follow or be after or under the clause of attestation, either with or without a blank space intervening, or shall follow or be after or under or beside the names, or one of the names, of the subscribing witnesses, or by the circumstance that the signature shall be on a side or page, or other portion of the paper or papers, containing the will, whereon no clause or paragraph or disposing part of the will shall be written above the signature, or by the circumstance that there shall appear to be sufficient space on or at the bottom of the preceding side or page, or other portion of the same paper, on which the will is written, to contain the signature; and the enumeration of the above circumstances is not to restrict the generality of the above enactment. But no signature is to he operative to give effect to any disposition or direction which is underneath, or which follows it; nor shall it give effect to any disposition or direction inserted after Wills Act Amendment Act, 1852. the signature shall be made. The unlearned reader will perhaps be of opinion that there is not one of the positions above so laboriously enumerated, that might not very properly have been considered as at the foot or end of the will within the spirit and meaning of the act; except in the case of a large blank being left before the signature, apparently for the purpose of the subsequent insertion of other matter: in which case the fraud to which the will lays itself open would be a sufficient reason for holding it void.

The Statute of Frauds, it will be observed, required Who may be that the witnesses should be credible; and, on the point witnesses. of credibility, the rules of law with respect to witnesses have, till recently, been very strict; for the law had so great a dread of the evil influence of the love of money, that it would not even listen to any witness who had the smallest pecuniary interest in the result of his own testimony. Hence, under the Statute of Frauds, a bequest to a witness to a will, or to the wife or husband of a witness, prevented such witness from being heard in support of the will; and, the witness being thus incredible, the will was void for want of three credible witnesses. By an act of Geo. II. (m), a witness to whom a gift was made was rendered credible, and the gift only which was made to the witness was declared void; but the act did not extend to the case of a gift to the husband or wife of a witness; such a gift, therefore, still rendered the whole will void (n). Under the new New enactment. act, however, the incompetency of the witness at the time of the execution of the will, or at any time afterwards, is not sufficient to make the will invalid (o); and

 (m) Stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 6.
 1st edit.; 2 Strange, 1255.

 (n) Hatfield v. Thorp, 5 Barn. &
 (o) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.

 Ald. 589; 1 Jarm. on Wills, 65,
 c. 26, s. 14.

if any person shall attest the execution of a will, to whom, or to whose wife or husband, any beneficial interest whatsoever shall be given, (except a mere charge for payment of debts,) the person attesting will be a good witness; but the gift of such beneficial interest to such person, or to the wife or husband of such person, will be void (p). Creditors, also, are good witnesses, although the will should contain a charge for payment of debts (q); and the mere circumstance of being appointed executor is no objection to a witness (r). By more recent statutes (s), the rule which excluded the evidence of witnesses in courts of justice, and of parties to actions and suits, on account of interest, has been very properly abolished; and the evidence of interested persons is now received, and its value estimated according to its worth; but the new Wills Act is not affected by these statutes (t). The courts of common law had formerly exclusive jurisdiction in questions arising on the validity of a will of real estate, whilst the ecclesiastical courts had the like exclusive jurisdiction over wills of personal estate. But an act has recently been passed establishing a Court of Probate (u), in which all wills of personal estate are now required to be proved. This act provides for the citation before the court of the heir at law of the testator and the devisees of his real estate; and such heir and devisees, when cited, will be bound by the proceedings (v); but this occurs only when a contest is expected or actually takes place. In all

(p) Sect. 15. See Gurney v.
Gurney, 3 Drew. 208; Tempest v.
Tempest, 2 Kay & J. 635.
(q) Sect. 16.
(r) Sect. 17.
(s) Stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85; 14
& 15 Vict. c. 99, amended by stat.
16 & 17 Vict. c. 83.

(t) Stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 5.

(u) Stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 95.

(v) Stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, ss. 61, 62, 63.

Court of Probate. ordinary cases a will, so far as it affects real estate, does not require to be proved.

So much, then, for the power to make a will of lands, Revocation of and for the formalities with which it must be accompanied. A will, it is well known, does not take effect until the decease of the testator. In the meantime, it may be revoked in various ways; as, by the marriage of By marriage. either a man or woman (w); though, before the Wills Act, the marriage of a man was not sufficient to revoke his will, unless he also had a child born (x). A will may also be revoked by burning, tearing, or otherwise By burning, destroying the same, by the testator, or by some person &c. in his presence and by his direction, with the intention of revoking the same (y). But the Wills Act enacts (z), that no obliteration, interlineation, or other alteration, made in any will after its execution shall have any effect (except so far as the words or effect of the will, before such alteration, shall not be apparent), unless such alteration shall be executed in the same manner as a will; but the signature of the testator, and the subscription of the witnesses, may be made in the margin, or on some other part of the will, opposite or near to such alteration, or at the foot or end of, or opposite to a memorandum referring to such alteration, and written at the end, or some other part of the will. A will may By writing also be revoked by any writing, executed in the same duly executed. manner as a will, and declaring an intention to revoke,

(w) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 18. "Except a will made in exercise of a power of appointment, when the real or personal estate thereby appointed would not, in default of such appointment, pass to his or her heir, customary heir, executor or administrator, or the person entitled, as his or her next of kin, under the Statute of Distributions."

(x) 1 Jarman on Wills, 106, 1st ed.; 102, 2nd ed.; 114, 3rd ed. See Marston v. Roe d. Fox, 8 Ad. & Ell. 14.

(y) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.
c. 26, s. 20; Andrew v. Motley,
12 C. B., N. S. 514.
(z) Sect. 21.

By subsequent will. By codicil. By codicil. before. And where a codicil is added, it is considered as part of the will; and the disposition made by the will is not disturbed further than is absolutely necessary to give effect to the codicil (b).

Subsequent disposition.

After-purchased lands.

The above are the only means by which a will can now be revoked; unless, of course, the testator choose afterwards to part with any of the property comprised in his will, which he is at perfect liberty to do. In this case the will is revoked, as to the property parted with, if it does not find its way back to the testator, so as to be his at the time of his death. Under the statute of Hen. VIII. a will of lands was regarded in the light of a present conveyance, to come into operation at a future time, namely, on the death of the testator. And if a man, having made a will of his lands, afterwards disposed of them, they would not, on returning to his possession, again become subject to his will, without a subsequent republication or revival of the will (c). But, under the Wills Act, no subsequent conveyance shall prevent the operation of the will, with respect to such devisable estate or interest as the testator shall have at the time of his death (d). In the same manner, the old statute was not considered as enabling a person to dispose by will of any lands, except such as he was possessed of at the time of making his will; so that lands purchased after the date of the will could not be affected by any of its dispositions, but descended to the heir at law(e). This also is altered by the Wills Act, which enacts(f), that every will shall be construed, with re-

(a) Sect. 20.

(b) 1 Jarman on Wills, 160, 1st cd.; 146, 2nd cd.; 162, 3rd ed.

(c) 1 Jarman on Wills, 130, 180, 1st ed.; 122, 164, 2nd ed.; 136, 183, 3rd ed. (d) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 23.

(e) 1 Jarman on Wills, 587, 1st ed.; 548, 2nd ed.; 610, 3rd ed.

(f) Sect. 24.

ference to the property comprised in it, to speak and take effect as if it had been executed immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. So that every man may now A will now dispose, by his will, of all such landed property, or real the death of estate, as he may hereafter possess, as well as that which the testator. he now has. Again, the result of the old rule, that a will of lands was a present conveyance, was, that a general devise by a testator of the residue of his lands was, in effect, a specific disposition of such lands and such only as the testator then had, and had not left to any one else (q). A general residuary devisee was a General residevisee of the lands not otherwise left, exactly as if such duary devisee. lands had been given him by their names. The consequence of this was, that if any other persons, to whom lands were left, died in the lifetime of the testator, the residuary devisee had no claim to such lands, the gift of which thus failed; but the lands descended to the heir at law. This rule is altered by the act, under which (h), unless a contrary intention appear by the will, all real estate comprised in any devise, which shall fail by reason of the death of the devisee in the lifetime of the testator, or by reason of such devise being contrary to law, or otherwise incapable of taking effect, shall be included in the residuary devise (if any) contained in the will.

This failure of a devise, by the decease of the devisee A lapse. in the testator's lifetime, is called a lapse; and this lapse is not prevented by the lands being given to the devisee and his heirs; and in the same way, before the recent act, a gift to the devisee and the heirs of his body would not carry the lands to the heir of the body of the devisee, in case of the devisee's decease in the lifetime of ⁽g) 1 Jarman on Wills, 587, 1st ed.; 548, 2nd ed.; 610, 3rd ed. (h) Sect, 25.

R.P.

No lapse now in two cases.

Estate tail.

of testator.

the testator (i). For, the terms heirs and heirs of the body are words of limitation merely; that is, they merely mark out the estate, which the devisee, if living at the testator's death, would have taken,-in the one case an estate in fee simple, in the other an estate tail; and the heirs are no objects of the testator's bounty, further than as connected with their ancestor (k). Two cases have, however, been introduced by the Wills Act, in which the devise is to remain unaffected by the decease of the devisee in the testator's lifetime. The first case is that of a devise of real estate to any person for an estate tail; in which case, if the devisee should die in the lifetime . of the testator, leaving issue who would be inheritable under such entail, and any such issue shall be living at the death of the testator, such devise shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of such person had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless Devise to issue a contrary intention shall appear by the will (l). The other case is that of the devisee being a child or other issue of the testator dying in the testator's lifetime and leaving issue, any of whom are living at the testator's death. In this case, unless a mere life estate shall have been left to the devisee, the devise shall not lapse, but shall take effect as in the former case (m).

Construction of wills.

The construction of wills is the next object of our attention. In construing wills, the Courts have always borne in mind, that a testator may not have had the same opportunity of legal advice in drawing his will, as he would have had in excenting a deed. And the first

(i) Hodgson and Wife v. Ambrose, 1 Dougl. 337.

(k) Plowd. 315; 1 Rep. 105; 1 Jarm. Wills, 293, 1st ed.; 277, 2nd ed.; 314, 3rd ed.

(1) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 32.

(m) Sect. 33. See Principles of the Law of Personal Property, p. 291, 4th ed.; 324, 5th ed.; Johnson'v. Johnson, 3 Hare, 157; Eccles v. Cheyne, 2 Kay & J. 676; Griffiths v. Gale, 12 Sim. 354.

great maxim of construction accordingly is, that the in- Intention to be observed. The tention of the testator ought to be observed (n). decisions of the Courts, in pursuing this maxim, have given rise to a number of subsidiary rules, to be applied in making out the testator's intention; and, when doubts occur, these rules are always made use of to determine the meaning; so that the true legal construction of a will is occasionally different from that which would occur to the mind of an unprofessional reader. Certainty cannot be obtained without uniformity, nor uniformity without rule. Rules, therefore, have been found to be absolutely necessary; and the indefinite maxim of observing the intention is now largely qualified by the numerous decisions which have been made respecting all manner of doubtful points, each of which decisions forms or confirms a rule of construction, to be attended to whenever any similar difficulty occurs. It is, indeed, very questionable, whether this maxim of observing the intention, reasonable as it may appear, has been of any service to testators; and it has certainly occasioned a great deal of trouble to the Courts. Testators have imagined that the making of wills, to be so leniently interpreted, is a matter to which any body is competent; and the consequence has been an immense amount of litigation, on all sorts of contradictory and nonsensical bequests. An intention, moreover, expressed clearly enough for ordinary apprehensions, has often been dofeated by some technical rule, too stubborn to yield to Technical the general maxim, that the intention ought to be observed. Thus, in one case (o), a testator declared his Example of an intention to be, that his son should not sell or dispose of intended life estate, held to his estate, for longer time than his life, and to that in- be an estate tail.

(n) 30 Ass. 183 a; Year Book, 9 (o) Perrin v. Blake, 4 Burr. 2579; 1 H. Bla. 672; 1 Dougl. Hen. VI. 24 b; Litt. s. 586; Perkins, s. 555; 2 Black. Com. 381. 343. 02 tent he devised the same to his son for his life, and after his decease, to the heirs of the body of his said son. The Court of King's Bench held, as the reader would no doubt expect, that the son took only an estate for his life; but this decision was reversed by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, and it is now well settled that the decision of the Court of King's Bench was erroneous (p). The testator unwarily made use of technical terms, which always require a technical construction. In giving the estate to the son for life, and after his decease to the heirs of his body, the testator had, in effect, given the estate to the son and the heirs of his body. Now such a gift is an estate tail; and one of the inseparable incidents of an estate tail is, that it may be barred in the manner already described (q). The son was, therefore, properly entitled, not to an estate for life only, but to an estate tail, which would at once enable him to dispose of the lands for an estate in fee simple. In contrast to this case are those to which we have before adverted, in the chapter on estates for life (r). In those cases, an intention to confer an estate in fee simple was defeated by a construction, which gave only an estate for life; a gift of lands or houses to a person simply, without words to limit or mark out the estate to be taken, was held to confer a mere life interest. But, in such cases, the Courts, conscious of the pure technicality of the rule, were continually striving to avert the hardship of its effect, by laying hold of the most minute variations of phrase, as matter of exception. Doubt thus took the place of direct hardship; till the legislature thought it time to interpose. A remedy is now provided by the act for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills (s), which enacts (t), fee simple, held to be only an estate for life.

An intended

New enactment.

 (p) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 147 to
 (r) Ante, p. 19.

 172.
 (s) 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26.

 (q) Ante, p. 45.
 (t) Sect. 28.

that where any real estate shall be devised to any person, without any words of limitation, such devise shall be construed to pass the fee simple, or other the whole estate or interest, which the testator had power to dispose of by will, in such real estate, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. In these cases, therefore, the rule of law has been made to give way to the testator's intention; but the case above cited, in which an estate tail was given when a life estate only was intended, is sufficient to show, that rules still remain which give to certain phrases such a force and effect, as can be properly directed by those only who are well acquainted with their power.

Another instance of the defeat of intention arose in Gift in case of the case of a gift of lands to one person, "and in case death without he shall die without issue," then to another. The courts interpreted the words, "in case he shall die without issue," to mean "in case of his death, and of the failure of his issue;" so that the estate was to go over to the other, not only in case of the death of the former, leaving no issue living at his decease, but also in the event of his leaving issue, and his issue afterwards failing, by the decease of all his descendants. The courts considered that a man might properly be said to be "dead without issue," if he had died and left issue, all of whom were since deceased; quite as much as if he had died, and left no issue behind him. In accordance with this view, they held such a gift as above mentioned to be, by implication, a gift to the first person and his issue, with a remainder over, on such issue failing, to the second. This was, in fact, a gift of an estate tail to the first Such a gift party (u); for an estate tail is just such an estate as held to be an estate tail. is descendible to the issue of the party, and will cease when he has no longer heirs of his body, that is, when his issue fails. Had there been no power of barring entails, this would no doubt have been a most effectual way of fulfilling to the utmost the testator's intention. But, as we have seen, every estate tail in possession is liable to be barred, and turned into a fee simple, at the will of the owner. With this legal incident of such an estate, the courts considered that they had nothing to do; and, by this construction, they accordingly enabled the first devisee to bar the estate tail which they adjudged him to possess, and also the remainder over to the other party. He thus was enabled at once to acquire the whole fee simple, contrary to the intention of the testator, who most probably had never heard of estates tail, or of the means of barring them. This rule of construction had been so long and firmly established, that nothing but the power of parliament could effect an alteration. This was done by the act for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills, which directs (x)that in a will, the words "die without issue," and similar expressions, shall be construed to mean a want or failure of issue in the lifetime, or at the death of the party, and not an indefinite failure of issue; unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will, by reason of such person having a prior estate tail, or of a preceding gift being, without any implication arising from such words, a gift of an estate tail to such person or issue, or otherwise.

(u) 1 Jarm. Wills, 488, 1st ed.; 464, 2nd ed.; 517, 3rd ed.; Machell v. Weeding, 8 Sim. 4, 7.

Implication.

From what has been said, it will appear that, before the above-mentioned alteration, an estate tail might have been given by will, by the mere implication, arising from the apparent intention of the testator, that the land should not go over to any one else, so long as the first devisee had any issue of his body. In the particular class of cases to which we have referred, this implication is now excluded by express enactment. But the general principle by which any kind of estates may be given by will, whenever an intention so to do is expressed, or clearly implied, still remains the same. In a deed, technical words are always required : to create an estate tail by a deed, it is necessary, as we have seen(y), that the word heirs, coupled with words of procreation, such as heirs of the body, should be made use of. So, we have seen that, to give an estate in fee simple, it is necessary, in a deed, to use the word heirs as a word of limitation, to limit or mark out the estate. But in a will, a devise to a Gift of an person and his seed(z), or to him and his issue(a), and $\frac{\text{estate tail by}}{\text{will.}}$ many other expressions, are sufficient to confer an estate tail; and a devise to a man and his heirs male, which, in a deed, would be held to confer a fee simple(b), in a will gives an estate in tail male(c); for, the addition of the word "male," as a qualification of heirs, shows that a class of heirs, less extensive than heirs general, was intended(d); and the gift of an estate in tail male, to which, in a will, words of procreation are unnecessary, is the only gift which at all accords with such an intention. So, even before the enactment, directing that a devise Gift of a fee without words of limitation should be construed to pass a fee simple, an estate in fee simple was often held to be conferred, without the use of the word heirs. Thus, such an estate was given by a devise to one in fee simple, or to him for ever, or to him and his assigns for ever(e), or by a devise of all the testator's estate, or of all his property, or all his inheritance, and by a vast simple by will.

Intention de-

New enactment.

⁽x) Sect. 29.

(y) Ante, p. 134.

(z) Co. Litt. 9 b; 2 Black, Com. 115.

(a) Martin v. Swannell, 2 Beav. 249; 2 Jarm. on Wills, 329, 1st ed. See however 2 Jarm. on Wills, 317, 2nd ed.; 388, 3rd ed.

(b) Ante, p. 134.

(c) Co. Litt. 27 a; 2 Black. Com. 115.

(d) 2 Jarman on Wills, 233, 1st ed.; 266, 2nd ed.; 298, 3rd ed.

(e) Co. Litt. 9 b; 2 Black. Com. 108.

number of other expressions, by which an intention to give the fee simple could be considered as expressed or implied (f).

Uses and trusts.

The doctrine of uses and trusts applies as well to a will as to a conveyance made between living parties. Thus, a devise of lands to A. and his heirs, to the use of B. and his heirs, upon certain trusts to be performed by B., will vest the legal estate in fee simple in B.; and the Court of Chancery will compel him to execute the trust; unless, indeed, he disclaim the estate, which he is at perfect liberty to do(q). But, if any trust or duty should be imposed upon A., it will then become a question, on the construction of the will, whether or not A. takes any legal estate; and, if any, to what extent. If no trust or duty is imposed on him, he is a mere conduit-pipe for conveying the legal estate to B., filling the same passive office as a person to whom a feoffment or conveyance has been made to the use of another (h). From a want of acquaintance on the part of testators with the Statute of Uses(i), great difficulties have frequently arisen in determining the nature and extent of the estates of trustees under wills. In doubtful cases, the leaning of the courts was to give to the trustees no greater estate than was absolutely necessary for the purposes of their trust. But this doctrine having frequently been found inconvenient, provision has been made in the Wills Act(k), that, under certain circumstances, not always to be easily explained, the fee simple shall pass to the trus-

(f) 2 Jarm. Wills, 181 et seq., 1st ed.; 225 et seq., 2nd ed.; 253 et seq., 3rd ed.

(g) Nicolson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 365; Urch v. Walker, 3 Mylne & Craig, 702.

(h) 2 Jarm. Wills, 198, 1st ed.;

239, 2nd ed.; 270, 3rd ed.; see ante, p. 147.

(i) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10; ante, p. 146.

(k) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.c. 26, ss. 30, 31.

tees, instead of an estate determinable when the purposes of the trust shall be satisfied.

The above examples may serve as specimens of the Danger of iggreat danger a person incurs, who ventures to commit legal rules. the destination of his property to a document framed in ignorance of the rules, by which the effect of such document must be determined. The Wills Act, by the alterations above mentioned, has effected some improvement; but no act of parliament can give skill to the unpractised, or cause every body to attach the same meaning to doubtful words. The only way, therefore, to avoid doubts on the construction of wills, is to word them in proper technical language,-a task to which those only who have studied such language can be expected to be competent.

If the testator should devise land to the person who Devise to heir. is his heir at law, it is provided by the "Act for the Amendment of the Law of Inheritance"(1), that such heir shall be considered to have acquired the land as a devisee, and not by descent. Such heir, thus taking by purchase(m), will, therefore, become the stock of descent; and in case of his decease intestate, the lands will descend to his heir, and not to the heir of the testator, as they would have done had the lands descended on the heir. Before this act, an heir to whom lands were left by his ancestor's will was considered to take by his prior title of descent as heir, and not under the will,-unless the testator altered the estate and limited it in a manner different from that in which it would have descended to the heir (n).

(1) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, s. 3; see Strickland v. Strickland, 10 Sim. 374.

(m) Ante, p. 92. (n) Watk. Descents, 174, 176 (229, 231, 4th ed.)

Devise of real estate is independent of executors' assent.

Charge of debts.

Where trustees may sell or mortgage to pay testator's debts or legacies.

It is usually the practice, as is well known, for every testator to appoint an executor or executors of his will; and the executors so appointed have important powers of disposition over the personal estate of the testator (o). But the devise of the real estate of the testator is quite independent of the executors' assent or interference, unless the testator should either expressly or by implieation have given his executors any estate in or power over the same. In modern times, however, the doctrine has been broached that if a testator charges his real estate with the payment of his debts, such a charge gives by implication a power to his executors to sell his real estate for the payment of his debts. The author has elsewhere attempted to show that this doctrine, though recognised in several modern cases, is inconsistent with legal prineiples(p); and in this he has since been supported by the great authority of Lord St. Leonards(q). In consequence however of the difficulties to which these cases gave rise, an act has lately passed by which, where there is a charge of debts or legacies, the trustees in some cases and in other cases the executors of a testator are empowered to sell his real estate for the purpose of paying such debts or legacies. The act to further amend the law of property and to relieve trustees (r), which was passed on the 13th August, 1859, enacts(s), that where by any will that shall come into operation after the passing of the act, the testator shall have charged his real estate or any specific portion thereof with the payment of his debts or of any legacy, and shall have devised the estate so charged to any trustee or trustees for the whole of his estate or interest therein, and shall not

(o) Principles of the Law of Personal Property, pp. 270 et seq., 4th ed.; 312 et seq., 5th ed.

(p) See the author's Essay on Real Assets, c. 6. (q) Sug. Pow. 120-122, Sth ed.

(r) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35.

(s) Sect. 14.

have made any express provision for the raising of such debts or legacy out of the estate, such trustee or trustees may, notwithstanding any trusts actually declared by the testator, raise such debts or legacy by sale or mortgage of the lands devised to them. And the powers thus conferred extend to all persons in whom the estate devised shall for the time being be vested by survivorship, descent or devise, and to any persons appointed to succeed to the trustceship, either under any power in the will, or by the Court of Chancery(t). But where execuif any testator, who shall have created such a charge, shall not have devised the hereditaments charged in such terms as that his whole estate and interest therein shall become vested in any trustee or trustees, the executor or executors for the time being named in his will (if any) shall have the same power of raising the same monies as is before vested in the trustees; and such power shall from time to time devolve to the person or persons (if any) in whom the executorship shall for the time being be vested (u). And purchasers or mortgagees are not to be bound to inquire whether the powers thus conferred shall have been duly exercised by the persons acting in exercise thereof (x). But these provisions are not to prejudice or affect any sale or mortgage made or to be made in pursuance of any will coming into operation before the passing of the act; nor are they to extend to a Devise in fee devise to any person in fee or in tail, or for the testator's or in tail charged with whole estate and interest, charged with debts or lega- debts. cies; nor are they to affect the power of any such devisee to sell or mortgage as he or they may by law now do. In these cases the law is that the devisee may, in the exercise of his inherent right of alienation, either sell or mortgage the lands devised to him; but if lega- Charge of lecies only are charged thereon, the purchaser or mortgagee is bound to see his money duly applied in their tors may sell or mortgage to pay debts or legacies.

gacies only.

(t) Sect. 15.

(u) Seet. 16.

(x) Sect. 17.

Charge of debts.

payment (y). If however the testator's debts are charged on the lands, then, whether there be legacies also charged or not, the practical impossibility of obliging the purchaser or mortgagee to look to the payment of so uncertain a charge exonerates him from all liability to do more than simply pay his money to the devisee on his sole receipt (z).

(y) Horn v. Horn, 2 Sim. & Stu.
(z) Essay on Real Assets, pp.
448; Essay on Real Assets, p. 63.
62, 63.

(205)

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE MUTUAL RIGHTS OF HUSBAND AND WIFE.

THE next subject of our attention will be the mutual rights in respect of lands, arising from the relation of husband and wife. In pursuing this subject, let us consider, first, the rights of the husband in respect of the lands of his wife; and, secondly, the rights of the wife in respect of the lands of her husband.

1. First then, as to the rights of the husband in re- The rights of spect of the lands of his wife. By the act of marriage, the husband in respect of the the husband and wife become in law one person, and lands of his so continue during the coverture or marriage (a). The wife is as it were merged in her husband. Accordingly, the husband is entitled to the whole of the rents and profits which may arise from his wife's lands, and acquires a freehold estate therein, during the continuance of the coverture (b); and, in like manner, all the goods and personal chattels of the wife, the property in which passes by mere delivery of possession, belong solely to her husband (c). For, by the ancient common law, it was impossible that the wife should have any power of disposition over property for her separate benefit, independently of her husband. In modern times, however, a Trusts for semore liberal doctrine has been established by the Court parate use now of Chancery; for this court now permits property of every kind to be vested in trustees, in trust to apply the wife.

established.

(a) Litt. s. 168; 1 Black. Com. 442; Gilb. Ten. 108; 1 Roper's Husband and Wife, 1.

(b) 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 3; Robertson v. Norris, 11 Q. B. 916. (c) 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 169.

income for the sole and separate use of a woman during any coverture, present or future. Trusts of this nature are continually enforced by the Court; that is, the Court will oblige the trustees to hold for the sole benefit of the wife, and will prevent the husband from interfering with her, in the disposal of such income; she will consequently enjoy the same absolute power of disposition over it as if she were sole or unmarried. And, if the income of property should be given directly to a woman, for her separate use, without the intervention of any trustee, the court will compel her husband himself to hold his marital rights in such income simply as a trustee for his wife, independently of himself(d). The limitation of property in trust for the separate use of an intended wife is one of the principal objects of a modern marriage settlement. By means of such a trust, a provision may be secured, which shall be independent of the debts and liabilities of the husband, and thus free from the risk of loss, either by reason of his commercial embarrassments, or of his extravagant expenditure. In order more completely to protect the wife, the Court of Chancery allows property thus settled for the separate use of a woman to be so tied down for her own personal benefit, that she shall have no power, during her coverture, to anticipate or assign her income; for it is evident that, to place the wife's property beyond the power of her husband, is not a complete protection for her,-it must also be placed beyond the reach of his persuasion. In this particular instance, therefore, an exception has been allowed to the general rule, which forbids any restraint to be imposed on alienation. When the trust, under which property is held for the separate use of a woman during any coverture, declares that she shall not dispose of the income thereof in any mode of anticipation, every attempted disposition by her during such coverture will be deemed absolutely void (e).

Separate property may be rendered inalienable.

⁽d) 2 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 152, 182; Major v. Lansley, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 355.

Not only the income, but also the corpus of any pro- As to the perty, whether real or personal, may be limited to the corpus. separate use of a married woman. Recent decisions have established that a simple gift of real estate, either Real estate. with or without the intervention of trustees (f), for the separate use of a married woman, is sufficient to give her in equity a power to dispose of it by deed or will, without the consent or concurrence of her husband (q). The same rule had long been established with respect to personal estate (h). But where the legal estate in lands is vested in the wife, it must still be conveyed by a deed to be separately acknowledged by her, in the manner to be presently explained.

Whilst provisions for the separate benefit of a married Husband and woman have thus arisen in equity, the rule of law, by wife still conwhich husband and wife are considered as one person, person. still continues in operation, and is occasionally productive of rather curious consequences. Thus, if lands be Gift to husband given to A. and B. (husband and wife), and C., a third and wife and a person, and their heirs—here, had A. and B. been distinct persons, each of the three joint tenants would, as we have seen (i), have been entitled, as between themselves, to one-third part of the rents and profits, and would have had a power of disposition also over onethird part of the whole inheritance. But, since A. and B., being husband and wife, are only one person, they (e) Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 434; 2 Rop. Husb. & Wife, 230; Tullett v. Armstrong, 1 Beav. 1; 4 Mylne & Cr. 390; Scarborough v. Borman, 1 Beav. 34; 4 M. & Cr. 377; Baggett v. Mcux, 1 Collyer, 138; ante, p. 87.

(f) Hall v. Waterhouse, V.-C.S., 13 W. R. 633.

(g) Taylor v. Mead, L. C., 13 W. R. 394.

(h) See Principles of the Law of Personal Property, p. 354, 5th ed. (i) Ante, pp. 123, 127.

sidered as one third person.

and wife and their heirs.

They take by entireties.

Husband and wife cannot convey to each other.

Unless by means of the Statute of Uses.

will take, under such a gift, a moiety only of the rents and profits, with a power to dispose only of one-half of the inheritance (j); and C., the third person, will take Gift to husband the other half, as joint tenant with them. Again, if lands be given to A. and B. (husband and wife) and their heirs-here, had they been separate persons, they would have become, under the gift, joint tenants in fee simple, and each would have been enabled, without the consent of the other, to dispose of an undivided moiety of the inheritance. But, as A. and B. are one, they now take, as it is said, by entireties; and, whilst the husband may do what he pleases with the rents and profits during the coverture, he cannot dispose of any part of the inheritance, without his wife's concurrence. Unless they both agree in making a disposition, each one of them must run the risk of gaining the whole by survivorship, or losing it by dying first(k). Another consequence of the unity of husband and wife is the inability of either of them to convey to the other. As a man cannot convey to himself, so he cannot convey to his wife, who is part of himself(l). But a man may leave lands to his wife by his will; for the married state does not deprive the husband of that disposing power which he would possess if single, and a devise by will does not take effect until after his decease (m). And by means of the Statute of Uses, the effect of a conveyance by a man to his wife can be produced (n); for a man may convey to another person to the use of his wife in the same manner as, under the statute, we have seen (o), a man may convey to the use of himself.

If the wife should survive her husband, her estates in (j) Litt. s. 291; Gordon v. Whieldon, 11 Beav. 170; Re Wylde, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 724. (k) Doe d. Freestone v. Parratt, 5 T. Rep. 652.

(1) Litt. s. 168. (m) Litt. ubi supra. (n) 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 53. (o) Ante, p. 173.

fee simple will remain to herself and her heirs, after his death, unaffected by any debts which he may have incurred, or by any alienation which he may have attempted to make; for, although the wife, by marriage, is prevented from disposing of her fee simple estates, either by deed or will, yet neither can the husband, without his wife's concurrence, make any disposition of her lands to extend beyond the limits of his own interest. If, Curtesy, however, he should survive his wife, he will, in case he has had issue by her born alive, that may by possibility inherit the estate as her heir, become entitled to an estate for the residue of his life in such lands and tenements of his wife as she was solely seised of in fee simple, or fee tail in possession (p). The husband, while in the enjoyment of this estate, is called a tenant by the curtesy of England, or, more shortly, tenant by the curtesy. If the wife's estate should be equitable only, that is, if Curtesy of the lands should be vested in trustees for her and her equitable estate. heirs, her husband will still, on surviving, in case he has had issue which might inherit, be entitled to be tenant by the curtesy, in the same manner as if the estate were legal (q); for, equity in this respect follows the law. But, whether legal or equitable, the estate must be Estate must a several one, or else held under a tenancy in common, not be joint. and must not be one of which the wife was seised or possessed jointly with any other person or persons (r). The estate must also be an estate in possession; for Estate must be in possession. there can be no curtesy of an estate in reversion expectant on a life interest or other estate of freehold (s). The Issue must have been born husband must also have had, by his wife, issue born alive except as alive; except in the case of gavelkind lands, where the to gavelkind lands. husband has a right to his curtesy, whether he has had

(p) Litt. ss. 35, 52; 2 Black. Com. 126; 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 5; Barker v. Barker, 2 Sim. 249.

(q) 1 Roper's Husband and R. P. Wife, 18.

(r) Co. Litt. 183 a; 1 Roper's Husb. and Wife, 12.
(s) 2 Black. Com. 127; Watk. Desc. 111 (121, 4th ed.)

P

209

Issue must be capable of inheriting as heir to the wife.

The wife must have been actually seised.

Power for husband and wife to lease the wife's lands.

issue or not; but, by the custom of gavelkind, curtesy extends only to a moiety of the wife's lands, and ceases if the husband marries again(t). The issue must also be capable of inheriting as heir to the wife (u). Thus, if the wife be seised of lands in tail male, the birth of a daughter only will not entitle her husband to be tenant by curtesy; for the daughter cannot by possibility inherit such an estate from her mother. And it is necessary that the wife should have acquired an actual seisin of all estates, of which it was possible that an actual seisin could be obtained: for the husband has it in his own power to obtain for his wife an actual seisin; and it is his own fault if he has not done so (v). A tenancy by the curtesy is not now of very frequent occurrence : the rights of husbands in the lands of their wives are, at the present day, generally ascertained by proper settlements made previously to marriage.

By a statute of the reign of Henry VIII. (w) power was given for all persons of full age, having an estate of inheritance in fee simple or in fee tail, in right of their wives, or jointly with their wives, to make leases, with the concurrence of their wives (x), of such of the lands as had been most commonly let to farm for twenty years before, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years or three lives, under the same restrictions as tenants in tail were by the same act empowered to lease. This statute, so far as it respects tenants in tail, has already been referred to (y); and it has now been re(t) Co. Litt. 30 a, n. (1); Bac. Abr. title Gavelkind (A); Rob. Gavel. book ii. c. 1.

(u) Litt. s. 52; 8 Rep. 34 b.

(v) 2 Black. Com. 131; Parker v. Carter, 4 Hare, 416. In the first edition of this work a doubt is thrown ont whether, under the new law of inheritance, a husband can ever become tenant by the curtesy to any estate which his wife has inherited. The reasons which have now induced the author to incline to the contrary opinion will be found in Appendix (D).

- (w) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII.c. 28.
- (x) Sect. 3.
- (y) Ante, p. 51.

New enactment.

pealed by the act to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates; which empowers every person entitled to the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits of any unsettled estate, as tenant by the curtesy, or in right of a wife who is seised in fee, to demise the same (except the principal mansion-house and the demesnes thereof, and other lands usually occupied therewith), for any term not exceeding twenty-one years in possession, subject to the same restrictions as before mentioned in the case of a tenant for life (z). And any such demise will be valid against the wife of the person granting the same, and any person claiming through or under her (a). By a statute of Anne (b), every husband seised in right Husband holdof his wife only, who, after the determination of his trespasser. estate or interest without the express consent of the persons next immediately entitled after the determination of such estate or interest, shall hold over and continue in possession of any hereditaments, shall be adjudged to be a trespasser; and the full value of the profits received during such wrongful possession may be recovered in damages against him or his executors or administrators.

Hitherto we have seen the extent of the husband's interest, and power of disposition, apart from his wife. If land should be settled in trust for the separate use of the wife, with a clause restraining alienation, we have seen that neither husband nor wife can make any disposition. But, in all other cases, the husband and wife may together make any such dispositions of the wife's interest in real estate as she could do if unmarried. The mode in which such dispositions were formerly

(z) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 33; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, s. 8. s. 32. See ante, pp. 25, 26. (b) Stat. 6 Anne, c. 18, s. 5. (a) Stats. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120,

211

mon Pleas. We have already had occasion to advert to fines, in respect to their former operation on estates tail (c). They were, as we have seen, fictitious suits commenced and then compromised by leave of the Court, whereby the lands in question were acknowledged to be the right of one of the parties. Whenever a married woman was party to a fine, it was necessary that she should be examined apart from her husband, to ascertain whether she joined in the fine of her own freewill, or was compelled to it by the threats and menaces of her husband (d). Having this protection, a fine by husband and wife was an effectual conveyance, as well of the wife's as of the husband's interest of every kind, in the land comprised in the fine. But, without a fine, no conveyance could be made of the wife's lands; thus, she could not leave them by her will, even to her husband; although, by means of the Statute of Uses (e), a testamentary appointment of lands, in the nature of a will, might be made by the wife in favour of her husband, in a manner to be hereafter explained(f). And in this respect the law still remains unaltered, although a change has been made in the machinery for effecting conveyances of the lands of married women. The cumbrous Present provision for conand expensive nature of fines having occasioned their veyance by abolition, provision has now been made by the act for married women. the abolition of Fines and Recoveries (q), for the con-the abolition of Fines and Recoveries (g), for the conveyance by deed merely of the interests of married women in real estate. Every kind of conveyance or disclaimer of freehold estates which a woman could execute if unmarried may now be made by her by a deed

(c) Ante, p. 46.

(d) Cruise on Fines, 108, 109.
(e) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, ante,

p. 146.

(f) See post, the chapter on Executory Interests.

(g) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74; ante, p. 46.

executed with her husband's concurrence (h): but the separate examination, which was before necessary in the case of a fine, is still retained ; and every deed, executed under the provisions of the act, must be produced and acknowledged by the wife as her own act and deed, be- The wife must fore a judge of one of the superior Courts at Westmin- acknowledge the deed. ster, or of any county court, or a master in Chancery, or two commissioners (i), who must, before they receive the acknowledgment, examine her apart from her husband touching her knowledge of the deed, and must ascertain whether she freely and voluntarily consents thereto (i). A recent statute (k) removes doubts which might arise, in consequence of any person taking the acknowledgment being an interested party.

2. As to the rights of the wife in the lands of her Rights of the husband. We have seen that, during the coverture, all wife in the lands of her the power is possessed by the husband, even when the husband. lands belong to the wife; and of course this is the case when they are the husband's own. After the decease of her husband, the wife however becomes, in some cases, entitled to a life interest in part of her deceased husband's lands. This interest is termed the dower of the Dower. wife. And by the act of parliament for the amendment of the law relating to dower (l), the dower of women married after the 1st of January, 1834, is placed on a different footing from that of women who were married previously. But as the old law of dower still regulates the rights of all women who were married on or before that day, it will be necessary, in the first place, to give some account of the old law before proceeding to the new.

(h) Sect. 77; Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 7.

(i) Stats. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, s. 79; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 73.

(j) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, s. 80.

(k) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 75.

(1) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 105.

Dower previously to the act.

Dower, as it existed previously to the operation of the Dower Act, was of very ancient origin, and retained an inconvenient property which accrued to it in the simple times when alienation of lands was far less frequent than at present. If at any time during the coverture the husband became solely seised of any estate of inheritance, that is fee simple or fee tail, in lands to which any issue, which the wife might have had, might by possibility have been heir (m), she from that time became entitled, on his decease, to have one equal third part of the same lands allotted to her, to be enjoyed by her in severalty during the remainder of her life (n). This right having once attached to the lands, adhered to them, notwithstanding any sale or devise which the husband might make. It consequently became necessary for the husband, whenever he wished to make a valid conveyance of his lands, to obtain the concurrence of his wife, for the purpose of releasing her right to dower. This release could be effected only by means of a fine, in which the wife was separately examined. And when, as often happened, the wife's concurrence was not obtained on account of the expense involved in levying a fine, a defect in the title obviously existed so long as the wife lived. As the right to dower was paramount to the alienation of the husband, so it was quite independent of his debts,—even of those owing to the crown (o). It was necessary, however, that the husband should be seised of an estate of inheritance at law; for the Court of Chancery, whilst it allowed to husbands curtesy of their wives' equitable estates, withheld from wives a like privilege of dower out of the equitable estates of their husbands(p). The estate, moreover, must have been

(m) Litt. ss. 36, 53; 2 Black. Com. 131; 1 Roper's Husband and Wife, 332.

(n) See Dickin v. Hamer, 1 Drew.& Smale, 284.

(o) Co. Litt. 31 a; 1 Roper's Husband and Wife, 411.

(p) 1 Roper's Husband and Wife, 354.

Dower could only be released by fine.

Dower independent of husband's debts.

A legal seisin required.

Estate must not be joint. held in severalty or in common, and not in joint tenancy; for the unity of interest which characterizes a joint tenancy forbids the intrusion into such a tenancy of the husband or wife of any deceased joint tenant: on the decease of any joint tenant, his surviving companions are already entitled, under the original gift, to the whole subject of the tenancy (q). The estate was also required to be an estate of inheritance in possession; although a seisin in law, obtained by the husband, was sufficient to cause his wife's right of dower to attach(r). In no case, also, was any issue required to be actually born; it was sufficient that the wife might have had issue who might have inherited. The dower of the widow in gavelkind Dower of galands consisted, and still consists, like the husband's curtesy, of a moiety, and continues only so long as she remains unmarried and chaste(s).

In order to prevent this inconvenient right from attaching on newly-purchased lands, and to enable the purchaser to make a title at a future time, without his wife's concurrence, various devices were resorted to in the framing of purchase-deeds. The old-fashioned Old method of method of barring dower was to take the conveyance to the purchaser and his heirs to the use of the purchaser and a trustee and the heirs of the purchaser : but as to the estate of the trustee, it was declared to be in trust only for the purchaser and his heirs. By this means the purchaser and the trustee became joint tenants for life of the legal estate, and the remainder of the inheritance belonged to the purchaser. If, therefore, the purchaser died during the life of his trustee, the latter acquired in law an estate for life by survivorship; and velkind lands.

(q) Ibid. 366; ante, p. 125 et (s) Bac. Abr. tit. Gavelkind (A); Rob. Gav. book 2, c. 2. seq. (r) Co. Litt. 31 a.

barring dower.

as the husband had never been solely seised, the wife's dower never arose; whilst the estate for life of the trustee was subject in equity to any disposition which the husband might think fit to make by his will. The husband and his trustee might also, at any time during their joint lives, make a valid conveyance to a purchaser without the wife's concurrence. The defect of the plan was, that if the trustee happened to die during the husband's life, the latter became at once solely seised of an estate in fee simple in possession; and the wife's right to dower accordingly attached. Moreover, the husband could never make any conveyance of an estate in fee simple without the concurrence of his trustee so long as he lived. This plan, therefore, gave way to another method of framing purchase-deeds, which will be hereafter explained (t), and by means of which the wife's dower under the old law is effectually barred, whilst the husband alone, without the concurrence of any other person, can effectually convey the lands.

Jointure.

The right of dower might have been barred altogether by a jointure, agreed to be accepted by the intended wife previously to marriage, in lieu of dower. This jointure was either legal or equitable. A legal jointure was first authorized by the Statute of Uses (u), which, by turning uses into legal estates, of course rendered them liable to dower. Under the provisions of this statute, dower may be barred by the wife's acceptance previously to marriage, and in satisfaction of her dower, of a competent livelihood of freehold lands and tenements, to take effect in profit or possession presently after the death of the husband for the life of the wife at least(x). If the jointure be made after marriage, the

(t) See post, the chapter on Executory Interests.

(u) 27 Hen, VIII. c. 10.

(x) Co. Litt. 36 b; 2 Black. Com. 137; 1 Roper's Husband and Wife, 462. wife may elect between her dower and her jointure(y). A legal jointure, however, has in modern times seldom been resorted to as a method of barring dower; when any jointure has been made, it has usually been merely of an equitable kind : for if the intended wife be of age, and a party to the settlement, she is competent, in equity, to extinguish her title to dower upon any terms to which she may think proper to agree(z). And if the wife Equitable should have accepted an equitable jointure, the Court of Chancery will effectually restrain her from setting up any claim to her dower. But in equity, as well as at law, the jointure, in order to be an absolute bar of dower, must be made before marriage.

With regard to women married since the 1st of Dower under the recent act. January, 1834, the doctrine of jointures is of very little moment. For by the recent act for the amendment of the law relating to dower(a), the dower of such women has been placed completely within the power of their husbands. Under the act no widow is entitled to dower out of any land which shall have been absolutely disposed of by her husband in his lifetime or by his will (b). And all partial estates and interest, and all charges created by any disposition or will of the husband, and all debts, incumbrances, contracts and engagements to which his lands may be liable, shall be effectual as against the right of his widow to dower(c). The husband may also, either wholly or partially, deprive his wife of her right to dower by any declaration for that purpose made by him, by any deed, or by his will (d).

(y) I Roper's Husband and Wife, 468.

- (z) Ibid. 488; Dyke v. Rendall,
- 2 De G., M. & G. 209.
 - (a) 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 105.
 (b) Sect. 4.

(c) Sect. 5; Jones v. Jones, 4 Kay & J. 361.

(d) Sects. 6, 7, 8. Sec Fry v.
Noble, 20 Beav. 598; 7 De Gex,
M. & G. 687.

As some small compensation for these sacrifices, the act has granted a right of dower out of lands to which the husband had a right merely without having had even a legal seisin(e); dower is also extended to equitable as well as legal estates of inheritance in possession, excepting of course estates in joint tenancy (f). The effect of the act is evidently to deprive the wife of her dower, except as against her husband's heir at law. If the husband should die intestate, and possessed of any lands, the wife's dower out of such lands is still left her for her support,-unless, indeed, the husband should have executed a declaration to the contrary. A declaration of this kind has, unfortunately, found its way, as a sort of common form, into many purchase-Its insertion seems to have arisen from a deeds remembrance of the troublesome nature of dower under the old law, united possibly with some misapprehension of the effect of the new enactment. But, surely, if the estate be allowed to descend, the claim of the wife is at least equal to that of the heir, supposing him a descendant of the husband ; and far superior, if the heir be a lineal ancestor, or remote relation (q). The proper method seems therefore to be, to omit any such declaration against dower, and so to leave to the widow a prospect of sharing in the lands, in case her lord shall not think proper to dispose of them.

Leases by tenant in dower.

Declaration against dower.

> The act to facilitate leases and sales of settled estates now empowers every person entitled to the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits of any unsettled estate as tenant in dower, to grant leases not exceeding twenty-one years, in the same manner as

(e) Sect. 3. Kay & J. 266.
 (f) Sect. 2; Fry v. Noble, 20
 (g) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 545,
 Beav. 598; Clarke v. Franklin, 4
 11th ed.

a tenant by the curtesy, or a tenant for life under a settlement made after that act came in force (h).

An action for dower is now commenced by writ of Action for summons issuing out of the Court of Common Pleas, dower. in the same manner as the writ of summons in an ordinary action (i); and the proceedings are the same as in ordinary actions commenced by writ of summons (k).

(h) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 26.
s. 52. See ante, pp. 25, 211. (k) Sect. 27.
(i) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126,

(220)

PART II.

OF INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS.

OUR attention has hitherto been directed to real property of a corporeal kind. We have considered the usual estates which may be held in such property,-the mode of descent of such estates as are inheritable,the tenure by which estates in fee simple are holden,and the usual method of the alienation of such estates. whether in the lifetime of the owner or by his will. We have also noticed the modification in the right and manner of alienation produced by the relation of husband and wife. Besides corporeal property, we have seen (a) that there exists also another kind of property, which, not being of a visible and tangible nature, is denominated incorporeal. This kind of property, though it may accompany that which is corporeal, yet does not in itself admit of actual delivery. When, therefore, it was required to be transferred as a separate subject of property, it was always conveyed, in ancient times, by writing, that is, by deed; for we have seen(b), that formerly all legal writings were in fact deeds. Property of an incorporeal kind was, therefore, said to lie in grant, whilst corporeal property was said to lie in livery(c). For the word grant, though it comprehends all kinds of conveyances, yet more strictly and properly taken, is a conveyance by deed only(d). And livery, as we have seen (e), is the technical name for that delivery which was made of the seisin, or feudal possession, on

(a) Ante, p. 10.

- (b) Ante, p. 137.
- (c) Co. Litt. 9 a.

(d) Shep. Touch. 228.

(e) Ante, p. 132.

Incorporeal property.

Lay in grant.

every feoffment of lands and houses, or corporeal hereditaments. In this difference in the ancient mode of transfer accordingly lay the chief distinction between these two classes of property. But as we have seen (f), the act to amend the law of real property now New enactprovides that all corporeal tenements and hereditaments shall, as regards the conveyance of the immediate freehold thereof, be deemed to lie in grant as well as in livery (g). There is, accordingly, now no practical difference in this respect between the two classes; and the lease for a year stamp, to which a grant of corporeal hereditaments was previously subject, has been abolished by the recent Stamp Act(h).

(f) Ante, p. 165. s. 2. (g) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, (h) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97. ment.

CHAPTER I.

OF A REVERSION AND A VESTED REMAINDER.

THE first kind of incorporeal hereditament which we shall mention is somewhat of a mixed nature, being at one time incorporeal, at another not; and, for this reason, it is not usually classed with those hereditaments which are essentially and entirely of an incorporeal kind. But as this hereditament partakes, during its existence, very strongly of the nature and attributes of other incorporeal hereditaments, particularly in its always permitting, and generally requiring, a deed of grant for its transfer,—it is here classed with such hereditaments. It is called, according to the mode of its creation, a reversion or a vested remainder.

If a tenant in fee simple should grant to another person a lease for a term of years, or for life, or even if he should grant an estate tail, it is evident that he will not thereby dispose of all his interest; for in each case, his grantee has a less estate than himself. Accordingly, on the expiration of the term of years, or on the decease of the tenant for life, or on the decease of the donee in tail without having barred his estate tail and without issue, the remaining interest of the tenant in fee will revert to himself or his heirs, and he or his heir will again become tenant in fee simple in possession. The smaller estate which he has so granted is called, during its continuance, the particular estate, being only a part, or particula, of the estate in fee (a). And, during the continuance of such particular estate, the interest of the tenant in fee simple, which still remains undisposed of-- Particular estate. that is, his present estate, in virtue of which he is to have again the possession at some future time-is called his reversion (b).

If at the same time with the grant of the particular estate he should also dispose of this remaining interest or reversion, or any part thereof, to some other person, it then changes its name, and is termed, not a reversion, but a remainder (c). Thus, if a grant be made by A., a Remainder. tenant in fee simple, to B. for life, and after his decease to C. and his heirs, the whole fee simple of A. will be disposed of, and C.'s interest will be termed a remainder, expectant on the decease of B. A remainder, therefore, A remainder always has its origin in express grant: a reversion arises from exmerely arises incidentally, in consequence of the grant of the particular estate. It is created simply by the law, whilst a remainder springs from the act of the parties (d).

1. And, first, of a reversion. If the tenant in fee A reversion on simple should have made a lease mercly for a term of a lease for years years, his reversion is looked on, in law, precisely as a continuance of his old estate, with respect to himself and his heirs, and to all other persons but the tenant for years. The owner of the fee simple is regarded as having simply placed a bailiff on his property (e); and the consequence is, that, subject to the lease, the owner's rights of alienation remain unimpaired, and may be exercised in the same manner as before. The feudal possession or seisin has not been parted with. And a may be conconveyance of the reversion may, therefore, be made by veyed by fcoffa feoffment, with livery of seisin, made with the consent or by deed of of the tenant for years (f). But, if this mode of transfer grant. should not be thought eligible, a grant by deed will be

- (b) Co. Litt. 22 b, 142 b.
- (c) Litt. ss. 215, 217.
- (d) 2 Black. Com. 163.

Reversion.

press grant.

⁽e) Watk. Descents, 108 (113, 4th ed.) (f) Co. Litt. 48 b., n. (8).

A reversion on a lease for life must be conveyed by decd of grant. strictly incorporeal, the tenant for years having the actual possession of the lands: so long, therefore, as such actual possession continues, the estate in fee simple is strictly an incorporeal reversion, which, together with the scisin or feudal possession, may be conveyed by deed of grant (g). But, if the tenant in fee simple should have made a lease for life, he must have parted with his seisin to the tenant for life; for, an estate for life is an estate of freehold, and such tenant for life will, therefore, during his life, continue to be the freeholder, or holder of the feudal seisin (h). No feoffment can consequently be made by the tenant in fee simple; for he has no seisin of which to make livery. His reversion is but a fragment of his old estate, and remains purely incorporeal, until, by the dropping of the life of the grantee, it shall again become an estate in possession. Till then, that is, so long as it remains a reversion expectant on an estate of freehold, it can only be conveyed, like all other incorporeal hereditaments when apart from what is corporeal, by a deed of grant(i).

We have before mentioned (k), that, in the case of a lease for life or years, a tenure is created between the parties, the lessee becoming tenant to the lessor. To this tenure are usually incident two things, fealty (l) and rent. The oath of fealty is now never exacted; but the rent, which may be reserved, is of practical importance. This rent is called in law rent service (m), in order to distinguish it from other kinds of rent, to be spoken of hereafter, which have nothing to do with the services anciently rendered by a tenant to his lord. It consists,

(g) Perkins, s. 221; Doe d. Were v. Cole, 7 Barn. & Cress. 243, 248; ante, p. 166.

(h) Watk. Descents, 109 (114, 4th ed.); ante, p. 131.

(i) Shep. Touch. 230.

- (k) Ante, p. 108.
- (1) Ante, p. 115.
- (m) Co. Litt. 142 a.

Fealty and rent.

Rent service.

usually, but not necessarily, of money; for, it may be rendered in corn, or in any thing else. Thus, an annual rent of one peppercorn is sometimes reserved to be paid, when demanded, in cases where it is wished that lands should be holden rent free, and yet that the landlord should be able at any time to obtain from his tenant an acknowledgment of his tenancy. To the reserva- A deed hitherto tion of a rent service, a deed was formerly not absolutely unnecessary to necessary (n). For, although the rent is an incorpo- of a rent. real hereditament, yet the law considered that the same ceremony, by which the nature and duration of the estate were fixed and evidenced, was sufficient also to ascertain the rent to be paid for it. But, by the act New enactto amend the law of real property (o), it is now provided, that a lease, required by law to be in writing, of any tenements or hereditaments shall be void at law, unless made by deed. In every case, therefore, where the Statute of Frauds(p) has required leases to be in writing, they must now be made by deed. But, according to the exception in that statute(q), where the lease does not exceed three years from the making, a rent of two-thirds of the full improved value, or more, may still be reserved by parol merely. Rent service, when created, Rent issues out is considered to be issuing out of every part of the land of every part of the lands, in respect of which it is paid (r): one part of the land is as much subject to it as another. For the recovery of Distress. rent service, the well known remedy is by distress and sale of the goods of the tenant, or any other person, found on any part of the premises. This remedy for the recovery of rent service belongs to the landlord of common right, without any express agreement(s). In (n) Litt. s. 214; Co. Litt. 143 a.

(0) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 4, to the same effect.

(p) Stat. 29 Car. II. e. 3, ante, p. 141.

R.P.

- (q) Sect. 2.
- (r) Co. Litt. 47 a, 142 a.

⁽s) Litt. ss. 213, 214. It must be made between sunrise and sunset, Tutton v. Darke, 5 H. & N. 647.

modern times it has been extended and facilitated by various acts of parliament (t).

Condition of re-entry.

Demand formerly required.

Modern proceedings.

In addition to the remedy by distress, there is usually contained in leases a condition of re-entry, empowering the landlord, in default of payment of the rent for a certain time, to re-enter on the premises and hold them as of his former estate. When such a condition is inserted, the estate of the tenant, whether for life or years, becomes determinable on such re-entry. In former times, before any entry could be made under a proviso or condition for re-entry on non-payment of rent, the landlord was required to make a demand, upon the premises, of the precise rent due, at a convenient time before sunset of the last day when the rent could be paid according to the condition; thus, if the proviso were for re-entry on non-payment of the rent by the space of thirty days, the demand must have been made on the evening of the thirtieth day(u). But now, if half a year's rent is due, and no sufficient distress is found on the premises, the landlord may recover the premises, at the expiration of the period limited by the proviso for re-entry (x), by action of ejectment, without any formal demand or entry (y); but all proceedings are to cease on payment by the tenant of all arrears and costs, at any time before the trial(z). Formerly also the tenant might, at an indefinite time after he was ejected, have filed his bill in the Court of Chancery, and he would have been relieved by that Court from the for-

(t) Stat. 2 Wm. & Mary, c. 5;
8 Anne, c. 14; 4 Geo. II. c. 28;
and 11 Geo. II. c. 19; Co. Litt.
47 b, n. (7); stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV.
c. 42, ss. 37, 38; 14 & 15 Vict.
c. 25, s. 2.

(u) 1 Wms. Saund. 287, n. (16);
 Acocks v. Phillips, 5 H. & N. 183.
 (x) Doe d. Dixon v. Roe, 7 C. B.

134.

(y) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76,
s. 210, re-enacting stat. 4 Geo. 11.
c. 28, s. 2.

(z) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76,
s. 212, re-enacting stat. 4 Geo. II.
c. 28, s. 4. An under-tenant has the same privilege, Doe d. *Wyatt*v. Byron, 1 C. B. 623.

feiture he had incurred, on his payment to his landlord of all arrears and costs. But now, the right of the tenant to apply for relief in equity is restricted to six calendar months next after the execution of the judgment on the ejectment (a); and by a recent statute, the same relief may now be given by the Courts of Law(b). In ancient times, also, the benefit of a condition of re- The benefit of entry could belong only to the landlord and his heirs; a condition of for the law would not allow of the transfer of a mere con- merly inalienditional right to put an end to the estate of another (c). A right of re-entry was considered in the same light as a right to bring an action for money due; which right in ancient times was not assignable. This doctrine sometimes occasioned considerable inconvenience; and in the reign of Henry VIII. it was found to press hardly on the grantees from the crown of the lands of the dissolved monasteries. For these grantees were of course unable to take advantage of the conditions of re-entry, which the monks had inserted in the leases of their tenants. A parliamentary remedy was, therefore, applied for the benefit of the favourites of the crown; and the opportunity was taken for making the same provision for the public at large. A statute was accordingly Remedy by passed (d), which enacts, that as well the grantees of statute. the crown as all other persons being grantees (e) or assignees, their heirs, executors, successors, and assigns, shall have the like advantages against the lessees, by entry for non-payment of rent, or for doing of waste, or other forfeiture, as the lessors or grantors themselves, or their heirs or successors, might at any time have had or

(a) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 210, re-enacting stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2; Bowser v. Colby, 1 Hare, 109.

(b) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 1.

(c) Litt. ss. 347, 348; Co. Litt.

(d) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 34; Co. Litt. 215 a ; Isherwood v. Oldknow, 3 Mau. & Selw. 382, 394.

(e) A lessee of the reversion is within the act, Wright v. Burroughes, 3 C. B. 685.

re-entry forable.

OF INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS.

enjoyed; and this statute is still in force. There exist Actions at law. also further means for the recovery of rent, in certain actions at law, which the landlord may bring against his tenant for obtaining payment.

Rent service passes by grant of the reversion.

Attornment.

Fine.

Attornment abolished.

Rent service, being incident to the reversion, passes by a grant of such reversion without the necessity of any express mention of the rent (f). Formerly no grant could be made of any reversion without the consent of the tenant, expressed by what was called his attornment to his new landlord (q). It was thought reasonable that a tenant should not have a new landlord imposed upon him without his consent; for, in early times, the relation of lord and tenant was of a much more personal nature than it is at present. The tenant, therefore, was able to prevent his lord from making a conveyance to any person whom he did not choose to accept as a landlord; for he could refuse to attorn tenant to the purchaser, and without attornment the grant was invalid. The landlord, however, had it always in his power to convey his reversion by the expensive process of a fine duly levied in the Court of Common Pleas; for this method of conveyance, being judicial in its nature, was carried into effect without the tenant's concurrence; and the attornment of the tenant, which for many purposes was desirable, could in such case be compelled (h). It can easily be imagined, that a doctrine such as this was found inconvenient when the rent paid by the tenant became the only service of any benefit rendered to the landlord. The necessity of attornment to the validity of the grant of a reversion was accordingly abolished by a statute passed in the reign of Queen Anne (i). But the statute very properly provides (k), that no tenant shall be

(f) Litt. ss. 228, 229, 572; (h) Shep. Touch. 254. Perk. s. 113. (i) Stat. 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, (g) Litt. ss. 551, 567, 568, 569; s. 9. Co. Litt. 309 a, n. (1).

(k) Sect. 10.

prejudiced or damaged by payment of his rent to the grantor, or by breach of any condition for non-payment of rent, before notice of the grant shall be given to him by the grantee. And by a further statute (l), any attornment which may be made by tenants without their landlords' consent, to strangers claiming title to the estate of their landlords, is rendered null and void. Nothing, therefore, is now necessary for the valid conveyance of any rent service, but a grant by deed of the reversion, to which such rent is incident. When the conveyance is made to the tenant himself, it is called a release (m).

The doctrine, that rent service, being incident to the Rent formerly reversion, always follows such reversion, formerly gave lost by destrucrise to the curious and unpleasant consequence of the version. rent being sometimes lost when the reversion was destroyed. For it is possible, under certain circumstances, that an estate may be destroyed and cease to exist. For instance, suppose A. to be a tenant of lands for a term of years, and B. to be his under-tenant for a less term of years at a certain rent; this rent is an incident of A.'s reversion, that is, of the term of years belonging to A. If, then, A.'s term should by any means be destroyed, the rent paid to him by B. would, as an incident of such term, have hitherto been destroyed also. Now, by the rules of law, a conveyance of the immediate fee simple to A. would at once destroy his term,-it not being possible that the term of years and the estate in fee simple should subsist together. In legal language the term of years would be merged in the larger Merger. estate in fee simple; and the term being merged and gone, it followed, as a necessary consequence, that all its incidents, of which B.'s rent was one, should cease Leases surrenalso (n). This unpleasant result was some time since dered in order to be renewed.

(n) Webb v. Russell, 3 T. R. (1) Stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 11. (m) Ante, p. 166. 393.

New enactment. provided for and obviated with respect to leases surrendered in order to be renewed,-the owners of the new leases being invested with the same right to the rent of under-tenants, and the same remedy for recovery thereof, as if the original leases had been kept on foot (0). But in all other cases the inconvenience continued, until a remedy was provided by the act to simplify the transfer of property (p). This act, however, was shortly afterwards repealed by the act to amend the law of real property (q), which provides, in a more efficient though somewhat crabbed clause (r), that, when the reversion expectant on a lease, made either before or after the passing of the act, of any tenements or hereditaments of any tenure, shall after the 1st of October, 1845, be surrendered or merge, the estate, which shall for the time being confer, as against the tenant under the same lease, the next vested right to the same tenements or hereditaments, shall, to the extent and for the purpose of preserving such incidents to and obligations on the same reversion as but for the surrender or merger thereof would have subsisted, be deemed the reversion expectant on the same lease.

A remainder.

No tenure between particular tenant and remainderman. 2. A remainder chiefly differs from a reversion in this,—that between the owner of the particular estate and the owner of the remainder (called the remainderman) no tenure exists. They both derive their estates from the same source, the grant of the owner in fee simple; and one of them has no more right to be lord than the other. But as all estates must be holden of some person,—in the case of a grant of a particular estate with a remainder in fee simple, the particular tenant and the remainder-man both hold their estates of

(o) Stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 6;
3 Prest. Conv. 138; extended to erown lands by stat. 8 & 9 Vict.
c. 99, s. 7.

(p) Stat. 7 & 8 Viet. c. 76, s. 12.

(q) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106. (r) Sect. 9. the same chief lord as their grantor held before (s). It No rent serconsequently follows, that no rent service is incident to a remainder, as it usually is to a reversion; for rent service is an incident of tenure, and in this case no tenure exists. The other point of difference between a reversion and a remainder we have already noticed (t), namely, that a reversion arises necessarily from the grant of the particular estate, being simply that part of the estate of the grantor which remains undisposed of, but a remainder is always itself created by an express grant.

We have seen that the powers of alienation possessed Powers of by a tenant in fee simple enable him to make a lease for a term of years, or for life, or a gift in tail, as well as to grant an estate in fee simple. But these powers are not may be exersimply in the alternative, for he may exercise all these rently. powers of alienation at one and the same moment; provided, of course, that his grantees come in one at a time, in some prescribed order, the one waiting for liberty to enter until the estate of the other is determined. In such a case the ordinary mode of conveyance is alone made use of; and until the passing of the act to amend the law of real property (u), if a feoffment should have been employed, there would have been no occasion for a deed to limit or mark out the estates of those who could not have immediate possession (v). The seisin would have been delivered to the first person who was to have possession (x); and if such person was to have been only a tenant for a term of years, such seisin would have immediately vested in the prescribed owner of the first estate of freehold, whose bailiff the tenant for years is accounted to be. From such first vice.

(s) Litt. s. 215. (v) Litt. s. 60; Co. Litt. 143 a. (t) Ante, p. 223. (x) Litt. s. 60; 2 Black. Com. (u) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, 167. s. 3; ante, p. 141.

alienation

Example.

freeholder, on the determination of his estate, the seisin, by whatever means vested in him, will devolve on the other grantees of freehold estates in the order in which their estates are limited to come into possession. So long as a regular order is thus laid down, in which the possession of the lands may devolve, it matters not how many kinds of estates are granted, or on how many persons the same estate is bestowed. Thus a grant may be made at once to fifty different people separately for their lives. In such case the grantee for life who is first to have the possession is the particular tenant to whom, on a feoffment, seisin would be delivered, and all the rest are remainder-men; whilst the reversion in fee simple, expectant on the decease of them all, remains with the grantor. The second grantee for life has a remainder expectant on the decease of the first, and will be entitled to possession on the determination of the estate of the first, either by his decease, or in case of his forfeiture, or otherwise. The third grantee must wait till the estate both of the first and second shall have determined: and so of the rest. The mode in which such a set of estates would be marked out is as follows :----To A. for his life, and after his decease to B. for his life, and after his decease to C. for his life, and so on. This method of limitation is quite sufficient for the purpose, although it by no means expresses all that is meant. The estates of B. and C. and the rest are intended to be as immediately and effectually vested in them, as the estate of A.; so that if A. were to forfeit his estate, B. would have an immediate right to the possession : and so again C. would have a right to enter, whenever the estates both of A. and B. might determine. But, owing to the necessary infirmity of language, all this cannot be expressed in the limitations of every ordinary deed. The words "and after his decease" are, therefore, considered a sufficient expression of an intention to confer a vested remainder after an estate for life. In the case we

Words used to confer a vested remainder after a life interest. have selected of numerous estates, every one given only for the life of each grantee, it is manifest that very many of the grantees can derive no benefit; and, should the first grantee survive all the others, and not forfeit his estate, not one of them will take anything. Nevertheless, each one of these grantees has an estate for life in remainder, immediately vested in him; and each of A vested rethese remainders is capable of being transferred, both be conveyed by at law and in equity, by a deed of grant, in the same manner as a reversion. In the same way, a grant may be made of a term of years to one person, an estate for life to another, an estate in tail to a third, and last of all an estate in fee simple to a fourth; and these grantees may be entitled to possession in any prescribed order, except as to the grantee of the estate in fee simple, who must necessarily come last; for his estate, if not literally interminable, yet carries with it an interminable power of alienation, which would keep all the other grantees for ever out of possession. But the estate tail may come first into possession, then the estate for life, and then the term of years; or the order may be reversed, and the term of years come first, then the estate for life, then the estate tail, and lastly the estate in fee simple, which, as we have said, must wait for possession till all the others shall have been determined. When a remainder comes after an estate tail, it is liable to be barred by the tenant in tail, as we have already seen. This risk it must run. But, if any estate, be it ever so Definition of a small, is always ready, from its commencement to its vested remainend, to come into possession the moment the prior estates, be they what they may, happen to determine,it is then a vested remainder, and recognized in law as an estate grantable by deed (y). It would be an estate in possession, were it not that other estates have a prior claim; and their priority alone postpones, or perhaps mainder may deed of grant.

(y) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 216; 2 Prest. Abst. 113.

may entirely prevent, possession being taken by the remainder-man. The gift is immediate; but the enjoyment must necessarily depend on the determination of the estates of those who have a prior right to the possession.

In all the cases which we have as yet considered, each of the remainders has belonged to a different person. No one person has had more than one estate. A. B. and C. may each have had estates for life; or the one may have had a term of years, the other an estate for life, and the last a remainder in tail, or in fee simple. But no one of them has as yet had more than one estate. It is possible, however, that one person may have, under certain circumstances, more than one estate in the same land at the same time,-one of his estates being in possession, and the other in remainder, or perhaps all of them being remainders. The limitation of a remainder in tail, or in fee simple to a person who has already an estate of freehold, as for life, is governed by a rule of law, known by the name of the rule in Shelley's case, - so called from a celebrated case in Lord Coke's time, in which the subject was much discussed (z),—although the rule itself is of very ancient As this rule is generally supposed to be date (a). highly technical, and founded on principles not easily to be perceived, it may be well to proceed gradually in the attempt to explain it.

Feudal holdings anciently for life only.

One person may have more than one estate.

Rule in Shelley's case.

> We have already seen, that, in ancient times, the feudal holding of an estate granted to a vassal continued only for his life (b). And from the earliest times to the present day a grant or conveyance of lands, made by any instrument (a will only excepted), to A. B.

> (z) Shelley's case, 1 Rep. 94, (c); 38 Edw. III. 26 b; 40 Edw. 104. III. 9.

(a) Year Book, 18 Edw. II. 577, translated 7 Man. & Gran. 944, n. (b) Ante, p. 17.

simply, without further words, will give him an estate for his life, and no longer. If the grant was anciently made to him and his heirs, his heir, on his death, became entitled; and it was not in the power of the ancestor to prevent the descent of his estate accordingly. He could not sell it without the consent of his lord; much less could he then devise it by his will. The ownership of an estate in fee simple was then but little more advantageous than the possession of a life interest at the present day. The powers of alienation belonging to such ownership, together with the liabilities to which it is subject, have almost all been of slow and gradual growth, as has already been pointed out in different parts of the preceding chapters (c). A tenant in fee simple was, accordingly, a person who held to him and his heirs; that is, the land was given to him to hold for his life, and to his heirs, to hold after his decease. It cannot, therefore, be wondered at, that a gift, expressly in these terms, " To A. for his life, and after his decease To A. for his to his heirs," should have been anciently regarded as life, and after identical with a gift to A. and his heirs, that is, a gift his heirs. in fee simple. Nor, if such was the law formerly, can it be matter of surprise that the same rule should have continued to prevail up to the present time. Such indeed has been the case. Notwithstanding the vast power of alienation now possessed by a tenant in fee simple, and the great liability of such an estate to involuntary alienation for the purpose of satisfying the debts of the present tenant, the same rule still holds; and a grant to A. for his life, and after his decease to his heirs, will now convey to him an estate in fee simple, with all its incidents; and in the same manner, a grant to A. for his life, and after his decease to the heirs of his body, will now convey to him an estate tail as effectually as a grant to him and the heirs of his body. In these cases, his decease to

(c) Ante, pp. 17, 31-40, 58-61.

Words of limi- therefore, as well as in ordinary limitations to A. and tation. his heirs, or to A. and the heirs of his body, the words heirs, and heirs of his body, are said to be words of limitation, that is, words which limit or mark out the estate to be taken by the grantee (d). At the present day, when the heir is perhaps the last person likely to get the estate, these words of limitation are regarded simply as formal means of conferring powers and privileges on the grantee-as mere technicalities, and nothing more. But, in ancient times, these same words of limitation really meant what they said, and gave the estate to the heirs, or the heirs of the body of the grantee, after his decease, according to the letter of the gift. The circumstance, that a man's estate was to go to his heir, was the very thing which, afterwards, enabled him to convey to another an estate in fee simple (e). And the circumstance, that it was to go to the heir of his body, was that which alone enabled him, in after times, to bar an estate tail and dispose of the lands entailed by means of a common recovery.

Rule in Shelley's case, as to estates in possession.

As to estates in remainder. Having proceeded thus far, we have already mastered the first branch of the rule in Shelley's case, namely, that which relates to estates in possession. This part of the rule is, in fact, a mere enunciation of the proposition already explained, that when the ancestor, by any gift or conveyance, takes an estate for life, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is immediately limited to his heirs in fee or in tail, the words "the heirs" are words of limitation of the estate of the ancestor. Suppose, however, that it should anciently have been wished to interpose between the enjoyment of the lands by the ancestor and the enjoyment by the heir, the possession of some other party for some limited estate, as for his

(d) See ante, pp. 133, 134; Per- (e) Ante, p. 40. rin v. Blake, ante, pp. 195, 196. own life. Thus, let the estate have been given to A. and his heirs, but with a vested estate to B. for his own life, to take effect in possession next after the decease of A.,-thus suspending the enjoyment of the lands by the heir of A., until after the determination of the life estate of B. In such a case it is evident that B. would have had a vested estate for his life, in remainder, expectant on the decease of A.; and the manner in which such remainder would have been limited would, as we have seen (f), have been to A. for his life, and after his decease to B. for his life. The only question then remaining would be as to the mode of expressing the rest of the intention,-namely, that, subject to B.'s life estate, A. should have an estate in fee simple. To this case the same reasoning applies, as we have already made use of in the case of an estate to A. for his life, and after his decease to his heirs. For an estate in fee simple is an estate, by its very terms, to a man and his heirs. But, in the present case, A. would have already had his estate given him by the first limitation to himself for his life; nothing, therefore, would remain but to give the estate to his heirs, in order to complete the fee simple. The last remainder would, therefore, be to the heirs of A.; and the limitations would run thus: "To A. for his life, and after his decease to B. for his life, and after his decease to the heirs of A." The heir, in this case, would not have taken any estate independently of his ancestor any more than in the common limitation to A. and his heirs: the heir could have claimed the estate only by its descent from his ancestor, who had previously enjoyed it during his life; and the interposition of the estate of B. would have merely postponed that enjoyment by the heir, which would otherwise have been immediate. But we have seen that the very circumstance of a man's having an estate which is to go to his heir will now give him a power of alienation either by deed or will, and enable him altogether to defeat his heir's expectations. And, in a case like the present, the same privilege will now be enjoyed by A.; for whilst he cannot by any means defeat the vested remainder belonging to B. for his life, he may, subject to B.'s life interest, dispose of the whole fee simple at his own discretion. A. therefore will now have in these lands, so long as B. lives, two estates, one in possession and the other in remainder. In possession A. has, with regard to B., an estate only for his own life. In remainder, expectant on the decease of B., he has, in consequence of his life interest being followed by a limitation to his heirs, a complete estate in fee simple. The right of B. to the possession, after A.'s decease, is the only thing which keeps the estate apart, and divides it, as it were, in two. If, therefore, B. should die during A.'s life, A. will be tenant for his own life, with an immediate remainder to his heirs; in other words, he will be tenant to himself and his heirs, and will enjoy, without any interruption, all the privileges belonging to a tenant in fee simple.

(f) Ante, p. 232.

Remainder to

By parity of reasoning, a similar result would follow, the heirs of the if the remainder were to the heirs of the body of A., or for an estate in tail, instead of an estate in fee simple. The limitation to the heirs of the body of A. would coalesce, as it is said, with his life estate, and give him an estate tail in remainder, expectant on the decease of B.; and if B. were to die during his lifetime, A. would become a complete tenant in tail in possession.

Any number of estates may interpose.

The example we have chosen, of an intermediate estate to B. for life, is founded on a principle evidently applicable to any number of intermediate estates, interposed between the enjoyment of the ancestor and that of his heir. Nor is it at all necessary that all these estates should be for life only; for some of them may be larger estates, as estates in tail. For instance, sup-Intermediate pose lands given to Λ . for his life, and after his decease estate tail. to B. and the heirs of his body, and in default of such issue (which is the method of expressing a remainder after an estate tail), to the heirs of Λ . In this case Λ . will have an estate for life in possession, with an estate in fee simple in remainder, expectant on the determination of B.'s estate tail. An important case of this kind Example. arose in the reign of Edward III. (q). Lands were given to one John de Sutton for his life, the remainder, after his decease, to John his son, and Eline, the wife of John the son, and the heirs of their bodies; and in default of such issue, to the right heirs of John the father. John the father died first; then John and Eline entered into possession. John the son then died, and afterwards Eline his wife, without leaving any heir of her body. R., another son, and heir at law of John de Sutton, the father, then entered. And it was decided by all the justices that he was liable to pay a relief(h) to the chief lord of the fee, on account of the descent of the lands to himself from John the father. Thorpe, who seems to have been a judge, thus explained the reason of the decision :--- "You are in as heir to your father, and your brother [father?] had the freehold before; at which time, if John his son and Eline had died [without issue] in his lifetime, he would have been tenant in fee simple."

The same principles will apply where the first estate Where the first is an estate in tail, instead of an estate for life. Thus, $e^{\text{estate is an}}$ suppose lands to be given to A. and the heirs male of his body begotten, and in default of such issue, to the heirs female of his body begotten (i). Here, in default of male heirs of the body of A., the heirs female will inherit from their ancestor the estate in tail female,

 (g) Provost of Beverley's case,
 (h) See ante, pp. 111, 113, 115.

 Year Book, 40 Edw. III. 9. See
 (i) Litt. s. 719; Co. Litt.

 1 Prest. Estates, 304.
 376 b.

which by the gift had vested in him. There is no need to repeat the estate which the ancestor enjoys for his life, and to limit the lands, in default of heirs male, to him and to the heirs female of his body begotten. This part of his estate in tail female has been already given to him in limiting the estate in tail male. The heirs female, being mentioned in the gift, will be supposed to take the lands as heirs, that is, by descent from their ancestor, in whom an estate in tail female must consequently be vested in his lifetime. For, the same rule, founded on the same principle, will apply in every instance; and this rule is no other than the rule in Shelley's case, which lays it down for law, that when the ancestor, by any gift or conveyance, takes an estate of freehold, and, in the same gift or conveyance, an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs in fee or in tail, the words "the heirs" are words of limitation of the estate of the ancestor. The heir, if he should take any interest, must take as heir by descent from his ancestor; for he is not constituted, by the words of the gift or conveyance, a purchaser of any separate and independent estate for himself.

Ancestor need not have an estate for the whole of his life.

Rule in Shelley's case.

> The rule, it will be observed, requires that an estate of freehold merely should be taken by the ancestor, and not necessarily an estate for the whole of his own life or in tail. In the examples we have given, the ancestor has had an estate at least for his own life, and the enjoyment of the lands by other parties has postponed the enjoyment by his heirs. But the ancestor himself, as well as his heirs, may be deprived of possession for a time; and yet an estate in fee simple or fee tail may be effectually vested in the ancestor, subject to such deprivation. For instance, suppose lands to be given to A., a widow, during her life, provided she continue a widow and unmarried, and after her marriage, to B. and his heirs during her life, and after her decease, to her heirs.

Here, A. has an estate in fee simple, subject to the remainder to B. for her life, expectant on the event of her marrying again(k). For to apply to this ease the same reasoning as to the former ones, Λ . has still an estate to her and to her heirs. She has the freehold or feudal possession, and after her decease, her heirs are to have the same. It matters not to them that a stranger may take it for a while. The terms of the gift declare that what was once enjoyed by the ancestor shall afterwards be enjoyed by the heirs of such ancestor. These very terms then make an estate in fee simple, with all its incidental powers of alienation, controlled only by the rights of B. in respect of the estate conferred on him by the same gift.

But if the ancestor should take no estate of freehold Where the anunder the gift, but the land should be granted only to his heirs, a very different effect would be produced. In such a case a most material part of the definition of an estate in fee simple would be wanting. For an estate in fee simple is an estate given to a man and his heirs, and not merely to the heirs of a man. The ancestor, to whose heirs the lands were granted, would accordingly take no estate or interest by reason of the gift to his heirs. But the gift, if it should ever take effect, would be a future contingent estate for the person who, at the ancestor's decease, should answer the description of heir to his freehold estates. The gift would accordingly fall within the class of future estates, of which an explanation is endeavoured to be given in the next chapter (l).

(k) Curtis v. Price, 12 Ves. 89. (1) The most concise account of the rule in Shelley's case, together with the principal distinctions which it involves, is that given by Mr. Watkins in his Essay on the Law of Descents, pp. 154 et seq. (194, 4th ed.)

cestor takes no estate of freehold.

CHAPTER II.

OF A CONTINGENT REMAINDER.

HITHERTO we have observed a very extensive power of alienation possessed by a tenant in fee simple. He may make an immediate grant, not of one estate merely, or two, but of as many as he may please, provided he ascertain the order in which his grantees are to take possession (a). This power of alienation, it will be observed, may in some degree render less easy the alienation of the land at a future time; for, it is plain that no sale can in future be made of an unincumbered estate in fee simple in the lands, unless every owner of each of these estates will concur in the sale, and convey his individual interest, whether he be the particular tenant, or the owner of any one of the estates in remainder. But if all these owners should concur, a valid conveyance of an estate in fee simple can at any time be made. The exercise of the power of alienation, in the creation of vested remainders, does not, therefore, withdraw the land for a moment from that constant liability to complete alienation, which it has been the sound policy of modern law as much as possible to encourage.

Vested remainders do not render the land inalienable.

But, great as is the power thus possessed, the law has granted to a tenant in fee simple, and to every other owner to the extent of his estate, a greater power still. Future estates. For, it enables him, under certain restrictions, to grant estates to commence in interest, and not in possession merely, at a future time. So that during the period which may elapse before the commencement of such estates, the land may be withdrawn from its former (a) Ante, pp. 231, 232. liability to complete alienation, and be tied up for the benefit of those who may become the owners of such future estates. The power of alienation is thus allowed to be exercised in some degree to its own destruction. For, till such future estates come into existence, they may have no owners to convey them. Of these future estates there are two kinds, a contingent remainder, and Two kinds. an executory interest. The former is allowed to be created by any mode of conveyance. The latter can arise only by the instrumentality of a will, or of a use executed, or made into an estate, by the Statute of Uses. The nature of an executory interest will be explained in the next chapter. The present will be devoted to contingent remainders, which, though abolished by the act to simplify the transfer of property (b), were revived the next session by the act to amend the law of real property (c), by which the former act, so far as it abolished contingent remainders, was repealed as from the time of its taking effect.

The simplicity of the common law allowed of the Contingent recreation of no other estate than particular estates, fol- mainders were lowed by the vested remainders, which have already gal. occupied our attention. A contingent remainder-a remainder not vested, and which never might vest,was long regarded as illegal. Down to the reign of Henry VI. not one instance is to be found of a contingent remainder being held valid (d). The early authorities on the contrary are rather opposed to such a conclusion (e). And, at a later period, the authority of

(b) Stat. 7 & 8 Viet. c. 76, s. 8. (c) Stat. 8 & 9 Viet. c. 106, s. 1.

(d) The reader should be informed that this assertion is grounded only on the writer's researches. The general opinion appears to be in favour of the antiquity of contingent remainders. See 3rd Rep. of Real Property Commissioners, p. 23; 1 Steph. Com. 614, n. (a).

(e) Year Book, 11 Hen. IV. 74; in which case, a remainder to the anciently ille-

Littleton is express(f), that every remainder, which beginneth by a deed, must be in him to whom it is limited, before livery of seisin is made to him who is to have the immediate freehold. It appears, however, to have been adjudged, in the reign of Henry VI., that if land be given to a man for his life, with remainder to the right heirs of another who is living, and who afterwards dies, and then the tenant for life dies, the heir of the stranger shall have this land; and yet it was said that, at the time of the grant, the remainder was in a manner void (g). This decision ultimately prevailed.

right heirs of a man, who was dead before the remainder was limited, was held to vest by purchase in the person who was heir. But it was said by Hankey, J., that if a gift were made to one for his life, with remainder to the right heirs of a man who was living, the remainder would be void, because the fee ought to pass immediately to him to whom it was limited. Note, also, that in Mandeville's case (Co. Litt. 26 b), which is an ancient case of the heir of the body taking by purchase, the ancestor was dead at the time of the gift. The cases of rents are not apposite, as a diversity was long taken between a grant of a rent and a conveyance of the freehold. The decision in 7 Hen. IV. 6 b, cited in Archer's case (1 Rep. 66 b), was on a case of a rentcharge. The authority of P. 11 Rich. II. Fitz. Ab. tit. Detinue, 46, which is cited in Archer's case (1 Rep. 67 a), and in Chudleigh's case (1 Rep. 135 b), as well as in the margin of Co. Litt. 378 a, is merely a statement by the judge of the opinion of the counsel against whom the decision was made. It runs as follows:—" Cherton to Rykhil—You think (vous quides) that inasmuch as A. S. was living at the time of the remainder being limited, that if he was dead at the time of the remainder falling in, and had a right heir at the time of the remainder falling in, that the remainder would be good enough? Rykhil—Yes, Sir.—And afterwards in Trinity Term, judgment was given in favour of Wad [the opposite counsel]: quod nota bene."

It is eurious that so much pains should have been taken by modern lawyers to explain the reasons why a remainder to the heirs of a person, who takes a prior estate of freehold, should not have been held to be a contingent remainder (see Fearne, Cont. Rem. 83 et seq.), when the construction adopted (subsequently called the rule in Shelley's case) was decided on before contingent remainders were allowed.

(f) Litt. s. 721; see also M. 27 IIen. VIII. 24 a.

(g) Year Book, 9 Hen. VI. 24 a; II. 32 Hen. VI. Fitz. Abr. tit. Feoffments and Faits, 99.

And the same case is accordingly put by Perkins, who Gift to A. for lays it down, that if land be leased to A. for life, the remainder to the right heirs of J. S., who is alive at the right heirs of time of the lease, this remainder is good, because there is one named in the lease (namely, A. the lessee for life,) who may take immediately in the beginning of the lease (h). This appears to have been the first instance in which a contingent remainder was allowed. In this case J. S. takes no estate at all; A. has a life interest; and, so long as J. S. is living, the remainder in fee does not vest in any person under the gift; for, the maxim is nemo est hæres viventis, and J. S. being alive, there is no such person living as his heir. Here, accordingly, is a future estate, which will have no existence until the decease of J. S.; if however J. S. should die in the lifetime of A., and if he should leave an heir, such heir will then acquire a vested remainder in fee simple, expectant on A.'s life interest. But, until these contingencies happen or fail, the limitation to the right heirs of J. S. confers no present estate on any one, but merely gives rise to the prospect of a future estate, and creates an interest of that kind which is known as a contingent remainder (i).

The gift to the heirs of J. S. has been determined to A gift to the be sufficient to confer an estate in fee simple on the heirs of a man confers a fee person who may be his heir, without any additional simple on his limitation to the heirs of such heir (k). If, however, the gift be made after the 31st of December, 1833, or by the will of a testator who shall have died after that day, the land will descend, on the decease of the heir intestate, not to his heir, but to the next heir of J. S., in the same manner as if J. S. had been first entitled to the estate (l).

(h) Perk. s. 52. (i) 3 Rep. 20 a, in Boraston's case.

ed.; 49, 2nd ed.; 55, 56, 3rd ed. (1) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, s. 4.

(k) 2 Jarman on Wills, 2, 1st life, with remainder to the J.S.

heir.

What becomes of the inheritance until the contingency happens.

When contingent remainders began to be allowed, a question arose, which is yet scarcely settled, what becomes of the inheritance, in such a case as this, during the life of J. S.? A., the tenant for life, has but a life interest; J. S. has nothing, and his heir is not yet in existence. The ancient doctrine, that the remainder must vest at once or not at all, had been broken in upon; but the judges could not make up their minds also to infringe on the corresponding rule, that the fee simple must, on every feoffment which confers an estate in fee, at once depart out of the feoffor. They, therefore, sagely reconciled the rule which they left standing to the contingent remainders which they had determined to introduce, by affirming that, during the contingency, the inheritance was either in abeyance, or in gremio legis or else in nubibus (m). Modern, lawyers, however, venture to assert, that what the grantor has not disposed of must remain in him, and cannot pass from him until there exists some grantee to receive it (n). And, when the gift is by way of use under the Statute of Uses, there is no doubt that, until the contingency occurs, the use, and with it the inheritance, result to the grantor. So, in the case of a will, the inheritance, until the contingency happens, descends to the heir of the testator (o).

But whatever difficulties may have beset the departure from ancient rules, the necessities of society required that future estates, to vest in unborn or unascertained persons, should under certain circumstances be allowed. And, in the time of Lord Coke, the validity of a gift in remainder, to become vested on some future contingency, was well established. Since his day the doctrine of contingent remainders has gradually become settled;

In Lord Coke's time, contingent remainders were well established.

(m) Co. Litt. 342 a; 1 P. Wms. 515, 516; Bac. Abr. tit. Remainder and Reversion (c).

See however 2 Prest. Abst. 100 -107, where the old opinion is maintained.

(n) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 361.

(o) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 351.

so that, notwithstanding the uncertainty still remaining The doctrine with regard to one or two points, the whole system now now settled. presents a beautiful specimen of an endless variety of complex cases, all reducible to a few plain and simple principles. To this desirable end the masterly treatise of Mr. Fearne's Mr. Fearne on this subject (p) has mainly contributed.

Let us now obtain an accurate notion of what a contingent remainder is, and, afterwards, consider the rules which are required to be observed in its creation. We Definition of a have already said, that a contingent remainder is a future contingent reestate. As distinguished from an executory interest, to be hereafter spoken of, it is a future estate, which waits for and depends on the determination of the estates which precede it. But, as distinguished from a vested remainder, it is an estate in remainder, which is not ready, from its commencement to its end, to come into possession at any moment when the prior estates may happen to determine. For, if any contingent remainder should, at any time, become thus ready to come into immediate possession, whenever the prior estates may determine, it will then be contingent no longer, but will at once become a vested remainder (q). For example, Example. suppose that a gift be made to A., a bachelor, for his life, and after the determination of that estate, by forfeiture or otherwise in his lifetime, to B. and his heirs during the life of A., and after the decease of A., to the eldest son of A. and the heirs of the body of such son. Here we have two remainders, one of which is vested, and the other contingent. The estate of B. is vested(r). Why? Because, though it be but a small estate, yet it is ready from the first, and, so long as it lasts, continues

(p) Fearne's Essay on the Learning of Contingent Remainders and Executory Devises. The last edition of this work has been rendered valuable by an original view of executory interests, contained in a second volume, appended by the learned editor, Mr. Josiah William Smith.

(q) See ante, p. 233.

(r) Fearne, Cont. Rem. pp. 7 n, 325.

treatise.

ready to come into possession, whenever A.'s estate may happen to determine. There may be very little doubt but that A. will commit no forfeiture, but will hold the estate as long as he lives. But, if his estate should determine the moment after the grant, or at any time whilst B.'s estate lasts, there is B. quite ready to take possession. B.'s estate, therefore, is vested. But the estate tail to the eldest son of A. is plainly contingent. For A., being a bachelor, has no son; and, if he should die without one, the estate tail in remainder will not be ready to come into possession immediately on the determination of the particular estates of A. and B. Indeed, in this case, there will be no estate tail at all. But if A. should marry and have a son, the estate tail will at once become a vested remainder; for, so long as it lasts, that is, so long as the son or any of the son's issue may live, the estate tail is ready to come into immediate possession whenever the prior estates may determine, whether by A.'s death, or by B.'s forfeiture, supposing him to have got possession(s). It will be observed that here there is an estate, which, at the time of the grant, is future in interest, as well as in possession; and till the son is born, or rather till he comes of age, the lands are tied up, and placed beyond the power of complete alienation. This example of a contingent remainder is here given as by far the most usual, being that which occurs every day in the settlement of landed estates.

Two rules for the creation of a contingent remainder.

Rule 1.

The rules which are required for the creation of a contingent remainder may be reduced to two; of which the first and principal is well established; but the latter has occasioned a good deal of controversy. The first of these rules is, that the seisin, or feudal possession, must never be without an owner; and this rule is sometimes expressed as follows, that every contingent remainder of an estate of freehold must have a particular estate of freehold to support it (t). The ancient law regarded Ancient notothe feudal possession of lands as a matter the transfer riety of transfer of which ought to be notorious; and it accordingly possession. forbad the conveyance of any estate of freehold by any other means than an immediate delivery of the seisin, accompanied by words, either written or openly spoken, by which the owner of the feudal possession might at any time thereafter be known to all the neighbourhood. If, on the occasion of any feoffment, such feudal possession was not at once parted with, it remained for ever with the grantor. Thus a feoffment, or any other Example, a conveyance of a freehold, made to-day to A., to hold from to-morrow, would be absolutely void, as involving from to-mora contradiction. For, if A. is not to have the seisin till to-morrow, it must not be given him till then (u). So, if, on any conveyance, the feudal possession were given to accompany any estate or estates less than an estate in fee simple, the moment such estates, or the last of them, determined, such feudal possession would again revert to the grantor, in right of his old estate, and could not be again parted with by him, without a fresh conveyance of the freehold. Accordingly, suppose a feoffment To A. for life, to be made to A. for his life, and after his decease and decease and decease and one day, to B. and his heirs. Here, the moment that one day, to B. A.'s estate determines by his death, the feudal possession, which is not to belong to B. till one day afterwards, reverts to the feoffor, and cannot be taken out of him without a new feoffment. The consequence is, that the gift of the future estate, intended to be made to B., is absolutely void. Had it been held good, the feudal possession would have been for one day without any owner, or, in other words, there would have been a so-called remainder of an estate of freehold, without a particular estate of freehold to support it. Let us now take the To A, for his case we have before referred to, of an estate to A., a of the feudal feoffment to A. to-day to hold row.

(s) See ante, pp. 232, 233.

life, and after his decease to his eldest son in tail.

(t) 2 Black. Com. 171.

(u) 2 Black. Com. 166.

bachelor, for his life, and after his decease to his eldest son in tail. In this case it is evident, that the moment A.'s estate determines by his death, his son, if living, must necessarily be ready at once to take the feudal possession, in respect of his estate tail. The only case in which the feudal possession could, under such a limitation, ever be without an owner, at the time of A.'s decease, would be that of the mother being then enceinte of the son. In such a case, the feudal possession would be evidently without an owner, until the birth of the son; and such posthumous son would accordingly lose his estate, were it not for a special provision which has been made in his favour. In the reign of William III. an act of parliament(x) was passed, to enable posthumous children to take estates, as if born in their father's lifetime. And the law now considers every child en ventre sa mère as actually born, for the purpose of taking any benefit to which, if born, it would be entitled(y).

A contingent remainder must Posthumous children may if born.

take estates as vest during the particular estate, or eo instanti that it determines.

Example.

As a corollary to the rule above laid down, arises another proposition, frequently itself laid down as a distinct rule, namely, that every contingent remainder must vest, or become an actual estate, during the continuance of the particular estate which supports it, or eo instanti that such particular estate determines; otherwise such contingent remainder will fail altogether, and can never become an actual estate at all. Thus, suppose lands to be given to A. for his life, and after his decease to such son of A. as shall first attain the age of twenty-four years. As a contingent remainder the estate to the son is well created(z); for the feudal seisin is not necessarily left without an owner after A.'s decease. If, therefore, A. should, at his decease, have a son who should

(x) Stat. 10 & 11 Will. III. & c. 16. 1

(y) Doe v. Clarke, 2 H. Bl. 399; Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & Beames, 367; Mogg v. Mogg, 1 Meriv. 654; Trower v. Butts, 1 Sim. & Stu. 181.

(s) 2 Prest. Abst. 148.

then be twenty-four years of age or more, such son will at once take the feudal possession by reason of the estate in remainder which vested in him the moment he attained that age. In this case the contingent remainder has vested during the continuance of the particular estate. But if there should be no son, or if the son should not have attained the prescribed age at his father's death, the remainder will fail altogether(a). For the feudal possession will then, immediately on the father's decease, revert, for want of another owner, to the person who made the gift in right of his reversion. And, having once reverted, it cannot now belong to the son, without the grant to him of some fresh estate by means of some other conveyance.

A contingent remainder cannot be made to vest on Events on any event which is illegal, or contra bonos mores. Ac- which a concordingly, no such remainder can be given to a child mainder may who may be hereafter born out of wedlock. But this can scarcely be said to be a rule for the creation of contingent remainders. It is rather a part of the general policy of the law in its discouragement of vice. In the reports of Lord Coke, however, a rule is laid down of which it may be useful to take some notice, namely, that the event on which a remainder is to depend must be a common possibility, and not a double possibility, or a possibility on a possibility, which the law will not Possibility on allow(b). This rule, though professed to be founded ^{a possibility.} on former precedents, is not to be found in any of the cases to which Lord Coke refers, in none of which do either of the expressions "possibility on a possibility," or "double possibility," occur. It appears to owe its

(a) Festing v. Allen, 12 Mees. & Wels. 279; 5 Hare, 573. See however as to this case, Riley v. Garnett, 3 De Gex & S. 629; Browne v. Browne, 3 Sma. & Giff.

568, qy? Re Mid Kent Railway Act, 1856, Ex parte Styan, John. 387 ; Holmes v. Prescott, V. C. W., 10 Jur., N. S. 507; 12 W.R. 636. (b) 2 Rep. 51 a; 10 Rep. 50 b.

not vest.

Scholastic logic.

Examples of common and double possibilities.

origin to the mischievous scholastic logic which was then rife in our courts of law, and of which Lord Coke had so high an opinion that he deemed a knowledge of it necessary to a complete lawyer(c). The doctrine is indeed expressly introduced on the authority of logic: -" as the logician saith, potentia est duplex, remota et propingua"(d). This logic, so soon afterwards demolished by Lord Bacon, appears to have left behind it many traces of its existence in our law; and perhaps it would be found that some of those artificial and technical rules which have the most annoyed the judges of modern times(e) owe their origin to this antiquated system of endless distinctions without solid differences. To show how little of practical benefit could ever be derived from the distinction between a common and a double possibility, let us take one of Lord Coke's examples of each. He tells us that the chance that a man and a woman, both married to different persons, shall themselves marry one another is but a common possibility (f). But the chance that a married man shall have a son named Geoffrey is stated to be a double or remote possibility (q). Whereas it is evident that the latter event is at least quite as likely to happen as the former. And if the son were to get an estate from being named Geoffrey, as in the case put, there can be very little doubt but that Geoffrey would be the name given to the first son who might be born(h). Respect to the memory of Lord Coke has long kept on foot in our law books(i) the rule that a possibility on a possi-

(c) Preface to Co. Litt. p. 37.

(d) 2 Rep. 51 a.

(e) Such as the rule in Dumpor's case, 4 Rep. 119.

(f) 10 Rep. 50 b; Year Book, 15 Hen. VII, 10 b, pl. 16.

(g) 2 Rep. 51 b.

(h) The true ground of the decision in the old case (10 Edw. 111. 45), to which Lord Coke refers, was no doubt, as suggested by Mr. Preston (1 Prest. Abst. 128), that the gift was made to Geoffrey the son, as though he were living, when in fact there was then no such person.

(i) 2 Black. Com. 170; Fearne, Cont. Rem. 252. bility is not allowed by law in the creation of contingent remainders. But the authority of this rule has long been declining(j), and lately a very learned living judge(k) has declared plainly that it is now abolished.

But although the doctrine of Lord Coke, that there can be no possibility on a possibility, has ceased to govern the creation of contingent remainders, there is yet a rule by which these remainders are restrained within due bounds, and prevented from keeping the lands, which are subject to them, for too long a period beyond the reach of alienation. This rule is the second rule, to Rule 2. which we have referred (l), and is as follows; —that an Gift to an unestate cannot be given to an unborn person for life, with remainder followed by any estate to any child of such unborn per- to his child, son(m); for in such a case the estate given to the child void. of the unborn person is void. This rule is apparently derived from the old doctrine which prohibited double possibilities. It may not be sufficient to restrain every kind of settlement which ingenuity might suggest; but it is directly opposed to the great motive which usually induces attempts at a perpetuity, namely, the desire of keeping an estate in the same family; and it has accordingly been hitherto found sufficient. An attempt has been recently made, with much ability, to explain away

(j) See Third Report of Real Property Commissioners, p. 29; 1 Prest. Abst. 128, 129.

(k) Lord St. Leonards, in Cole v. Sewell, 1 Conn. & Laws, 344; S. C. 4 Dru. & War. 1, 32. The decision in this case has been affirmed in the House of Lords, 2 H. of L. Cases, 186.

(1) Ante, p. 248.

(m) 2 Cases and Opinions, 432 -441; Hay v. Earl of Coventry, 3 T. Rep. 86; Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East, 452; Fearne's Posthuma, 215; Fearne, Cont. Rem. 502, 565, Butl. note; 2 Prest. Abst. 114; 1 Sugd. Pow. 470; 393, 8th ed.; 1 Jarm. Wills, 221, 1st ed.; 203, 2nd ed.; 227, 3rd ed.; Cole v. Sewell, 2 H. of L. Cases, 186; Monypenny v. Dering, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 145, 170; Sugden on Property, 120; Sugden on the Real Property Statutes, p. 285, n. (a), 1st ed.; 274, n. (a), 2nd ed. See however per Wood, V. C., in Cattlin v. Brown, 11 Hare, 375, qy?

this rule as merely an instance of the rule by which, as we shall hereafter see, executory interests are restrained(n). But this rule is more stringent than that which confines executory interests; and if there were no other restraint on the creation of contingent remainders than the rule by which executory interests are confined, landed property might in many cases be tied up for at least a generation further than is now possible(o).

The opinion which so generally prevails, that every man may make what disposition he pleases of his own estate, -an opinion countenanced by the loose description sometimes given by lawyers of an estate in fee simple(p),—has not unfrequently given rise to attempts made by testators to settle their property on future generations beyond the bounds allowed by law; thus lands have been given by will to the unborn son of some living person for his life, and after the decease of such unborn son, to his sons in tail. This last limitation to the sons of the unborn son in tail, we have observed, is void. The courts of law, however, have been so indulgent to the ignorance of testators, that, in the case of a will, they have endeavoured to carry the intention of the testator into effect, as nearly as can possibly be done, without infringing the rule of law; they, accordingly, take the liberty of altering his will to what they presume he would have done had he been acquainted with the rule which prohibits the son of any unborn son from being, in such circumstances, the object of a gift. This, in Law French, is called the cy près doctrine(q). From Gift by will to the sons of an unborn person, after a life estate to such person.

Cy près doctrine.

> (n) See Lewis on Perpetuities, p. 408 et seq. The case of Challis v. Doe d. Evers, 18 Q. B. 231, must be admitted to accord with this opinion; but the point, though adverted to by the counsel for the appellant, was not taken by the counsel for the respondent, nor mentioned in the judgment of the Court. This case has since been reversed in the House of Lords, 7 H. of L. Cas. 531.

(o) See Appendix (E).

(p) 2 Black. Com. 104.

(q) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 204, note; 1 Jarman on Wills, 260, 1st what has already been said, it will be apparent that the utmost that can be legally accomplished towards securing an estate in a family is to give to the unborn sons of a living person estates in tail; such estates, if not barred, will descend on the next generation; but the risk of the entails being barred cannot, by any means, be prevented. The courts, therefore, when they meet with such a disposition as above described, instead of confining the unborn son of the living person to the mere life estate given him by the terms of the will, and annulling the subsequent limitations to his offspring, give to such son an estate in tail, so as to afford to his issue a chance of inheriting should the entail remain unbarred. But this doctrine, being rather a stretch of judicial authority, is only applied where the estates given by the will to the children of the unborn child are estates in tail, and not where they are estates for life (r), or in fee simple (s). If, however, the estates be in tail, the rule equally applies, whether the estates tail be given to the sons successively according to seniority, or to all the children equally as tenants in common (t).

Though a contingent remainder is an estate which, if The expectant it arise, must arise at a future time, and will then belong to some future owner, yet the contingency may be of mainder may such a kind, that the future expectant owner may be now living. For instance, suppose that a conveyance Example. be made to A. for his life, and if C. be living at his decease, then to B. and his heirs. Here is a contingent remainder, of which the future expectant owner, B., may be now living. The estate of B. is not a present vested estate, kept out of possession only by A.'s prior ed.; 242, 2nd ed.; 278, 3rd ed.; Vanderplank v. King, 3 Hare, 1; Monypenny v. Dering, 16 Mee. & Wels. 418.

(r) Seaward v. Willcock, 5 East, 198.

(s) Bristow v. Warde, 2 Ves. jun. 336 ; Hale v. Pew, 25 Beav. 335.

(t) Pitt v. Jackson, 2 Bro. C. C.

51; Vanderplank v. King, 3 Hare, 1.

owner of a contingent rebe now living.

A possibility.

A contingent remainder could not be conveyed by deed, but might be released.

in equity.

right thereto. But it is a future estate not to commence, either in possession or in interest, till A.'s decease. It is not such an estate as, according to our definition of a vested remainder, is always ready to come into possession whenever A.'s estate may end; for if A. should die after C., B. or his heirs can take nothing. Still B., though he has no estate during A.'s life, has yet plainly a chance of obtaining one, in case C. should survive. This chance is called in law a possibility; and a possibility of this kind was long looked upon in much the same light as a condition of re-entry was regarded (u), having been inalienable at law, and not to be conveyed to another by deed of grant. A fine alone, before fines were abolished, could effectually have barred a contingent remainder (x). It might, however, have been released; that is to say, B. might, by deed of release, have given up his interest for the benefit of the reversioner, in the same manner as if the contingent remainder to him and his heirs had never been limited (y); for the law, whilst it tolerated conditions of re-entry and contingent remainders, always gladly permitted such rights to be got rid of by release, for the sake of preserving unimpaired such vested estates as Was devisable. might happen to be subsisting. A contingent remainder was also devisable by will under the old statutes (z), and is so under the present act for the amendment of Was assignable the laws with respect to wills (a). And it was the rule in equity, that an assignment intended to be made of a possibility for a valuable consideration should be de-

(u) Ante, p. 227.

(x) Fearne, Con. Rem. 365; Helps v. Hereford, 2 Barn. & Ald. 242; Doe d. Christmas v. Oliver, 10 Barn. & Cress. 181 ; Doe d. Lumley v. Earl of Scarborough, 3 Adol. & Ell. 2.

(y) Lampet's case, 10 Rep. 48 a, b; Marks v. Marks, 1 Strange, 132.

(z) Roe d. Perry v. Jones, 1 H. Black. 30; Fearne, Cont. Rem. 366, note.

(a) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 3; Ingilby v. Amcotts, 21 Beav. 585.

creed to be carried into effect(b). But the act to New enactment. amend the law of real property (c) now enacts, that a contingent interest, and a possibility coupled with an interest, in any tenements or hereditaments of any tenure, whether the object of the gift or limitation of such interest or possibility be or be not ascertained, may be disposed of by deed. But every such disposition, if made by a married woman, must be made conformably to the provisions of the act for the abolition of fines and recoveries (d).

The circumstance of a contingent remainder having Inalienable been so long inalienable at law was a curious relict of nature of a contingent rethe ancient feudal system. This system, the fountain of mainder. our jurisprudence as to landed property, was strongly opposed to alienation. Its policy was to unite the lord and tenant by ties of mutual interest and affection; and nothing could so effectually defeat this end as a constant change in the parties sustaining that relation. The proper method, therefore, of explaining our laws, is not to set out with the notion that every subject of property may be aliened at pleasure; and then to endeavour to explain why certain kinds of property cannot be aliened, or can be aliened only in some modified manner. The law itself began in another way. When, and in what manner, different kinds of property gradually became subject to different modes of alienation is the matter to be explained; and this explanation we have endeavoured, in proceeding, as far as possible to give. But, as to such interests as remained inalienable, the reason of their being so was, that they had not been altered, but remained as they were. The statute of Quia emptores (e)

(b) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 550, (c) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, 551; see, however, Carleton v. s. 6. Leighton, 3 Meriv. 667, 668, (d) See ante, pp. 212, 213. (e) 18 Edw. I. c. 1, ante, p. 60. note (b). R.P. S expressly permitted the alienation of lands and tenements,—an alienation which usage had already authorized; and ever since this statute, the ownership of an estate in lands (an estate tail excepted) has involved in it an undoubted power of conferring on another person the same, or, perhaps more strictly, a similar estate. But a contingent remainder is no estate, it is merely a chance of having one; and the reason why it has so long remained inalienable at law was simply because it had never been thought worth while to make it alienable.

Destruction of contingent remainders.

Liability to destruction now removed.

Example.

One of the most remarkable incidents of a contingent remainder was its liability to destruction, by the sudden determination of the particular estate upon which it depended. This liability has now been removed by the act to amend the law of real property (f): it was, in effect, no more than a strict application of the general rule, required to be observed in the creation of contingent remainders, that the freehold must never be left without an owner. For if, after the determination of the particular estate, the contingent remainder might still, at some future time, have become a vested estate, the freehold would, until such time, have remained undisposed of, contrary to the principles of the law before explained (q). Thus, suppose lands to have been given to A., a bachelor, for his life, and after his decease to his eldest son and the heirs of his body, and, in default of such issue, to B. and his heirs. In this case A. would have had a vested estate for his life in possession. There would have been a contingent remainder in tail to his eldest son, which would have become a vested estate tail in such son the moment he was born, or rather begotten; and B. would have had a vested estate in (f) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106. s. 8, 8, to the same effect. repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. (g) Ante, p. 249. fee simple in remainder. Now suppose that, before Λ . had any son, the particular estate for life belonging to A., which supported the contingent remainder to his eldest son, should suddenly have determined during A.'s life, B.'s estate would then have become an estate in fee simple in possession. There must be some owner of the freehold; and B., being next entitled, would have taken possession. When his estate once became an estate in possession, the prior remainder to the eldest son of A. was for ever excluded. For, by the terms of the gift, if the estate of the eldest son was to come into possession at all, it must have come in before the estate of B. A forfeiture by A. of his life estate, before the Forfeiture of birth of a son, would therefore at once have destroyed life estate. the contingent remainder, by letting into possession the subsequent estate of B. (h).

The determination of the estate of A. was, however, A right of in order to effect the destruction of the contingent remainder, required to be such a determination as would a contingent put an end to his right to the freehold or feudal possession. Thus, if A. had been forcibly ejected from the lands, his right of entry would still have been sufficient to preserve the contingent remainder; and, if he should have died whilst so out of possession, the contingent remainder might still have taken effect. For, so long as A.'s feudal possession, or his right thereto, continues, so long, in the eye of the law, does his estate last(i).

It is a rule of law, that "whenever a greater estate and a less coincide and meet in one and the same person, without any intermediate estate, the less is immediately annihilated; or, in the law phrase, is said to be merged, that is, sunk or drowned in the greater" (k). Merger.

s 2

(h) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 317; see Doe d. Davies v. Gatacre, 5 Bing. N. C. 609.

(i) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 286. (k) 2 Black, Com. 177.

remainder.

From the operation of this rule, an estate tail is preserved by the effect of the statute De donis (1). Thus, the same person may have, at the same time, an estate tail, and also the immediate remainder or reversion in fee simple, expectant on the determination of such estate tail by failure of his own issue. But with regard to other estates, the larger will swallow up the smaller; and the intervention of a contingent remainder, which, while contingent, is not an estate, will not prevent the application of the rule. Accordingly, if in the case above given A. should have purchased B.'s remainder in fee, and should have obtained a conveyance of it to himself, before the birth of a son, the contingent remainder to his son would have been destroyed. For, in such a case, A. would have had an estate for his own life, and also, by his purchase, an immediate vested estate in fee simple in remainder expectant on his own decease; there being, therefore, no vested estate intervening, a merger would have taken place of the life estate in the remainder in fee. The possession of the estate in fee simple would have been accelerated and would have immediately taken place, and thus a destruction would have been effected of the contingent remainder (m), which could never afterwards have become a vested estate; for, were it to have become vested, it must have taken possession subsequently to the remainder in fee simple; but this it could not do. both by the terms of the gift, and also by the very nature of a remainder in fee simple, which can never have a remainder after it. In the same manner the sale by A. to B. of the life estate of A., called in law a surrender of the life estate, before the birth of a son, would have accelerated the possession of the remainder in fee simple, by giving to B. an uninterrupted estate in fee simple in possession; and the contingent remainder would consequently have been destroyed(n). The same effect would have been produced by A. and B. both conveying their estates to a third person, C., before the birth of a son of A. The only estates then existing in the land would have been the life estate of A. and the remainder in fee of B. C., therefore, by acquiring both these estates, would have obtained an estate in fee simple in possession, on which no remainder could depend (o). But now, the act to amend New enactthe law of real property (p) has altered the law in all these cases; for, whilst the principles of law on which they proceeded have not been expressly abolished, it is nevertheless enacted (q), that a contingent remainder shall be, and if created before the passing of the act shall be deemed to have been, capable of taking effect, notwithstanding the determination by forfeiture, surrender or merger of any preceding estate of freehold, in the same manner in all respects as if such determination had not happened. This act, it will be observed, applies only to the three cases of forfeiture, surrender or merger of the particular estate. If, at the time when the particular estate would naturally have expired, the contingent remainder be not ready to come into immediate possession, it will still fail as before.

Surrender of the life estate.

(1) Stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 1; ante, (m) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 340. p. 41.

The disastrous consequences which would have resulted from the destruction of the contingent remainder, in such a case as that we have just given, were obviated in practice by means of the interposition of a vested estate between the estates of A. and B. We have seen (r) that an estate for the life of A., to take effect

(n) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 318.

(o) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 322, note; Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103; Egerton v. Massey, 3 C. B. N. S. 338.

(p) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 8, to the same effect. (q) Sect. 8. (r) Ante, p. 247.

ment.

Trustees to preserve contingent remainders. in possession after the determination, by forfeiture or otherwise, of A.'s life interest, is not a contingent, but a vested estate in remainder. It is a present existing estate, always ready, so long as it lasts, to come into possession the moment the prior estate determines. The plan, therefore, adopted for the preservation of contingent remainders to the children of a tenant for life was to give an estate, after the determination by any means of the tenant's life interest, to certain persons and their heirs during his life, as trustees for preserving the contingent remainders; for which purpose they were to enter on the premises, should occasion require, but should such entry be necessary, they were nevertheless to permit the tenant for life to receive the rents and profits during the rest of his life. These trustees were prevented by the Court of Chancery from parting with their estate, or in any way aiding the destruction of the contingent remainders which their estate supported (s). And, so long as their estate continued, it is evident that there existed, prior to the birth of any son, three vested estates in the land; namely, the estate of A. the tenant for life, the estate in remainder of the trustees during his life, and the estate in fee simple in remainder, belonging, in the case we have supposed, to B. and his heirs. This vested estate of the trustees, interposed between the estates of A. and B., prevented their union, and consequently prevented the remainder in fee simple from ever coming into possession, so long as the estate of the trustees endured, that is, if they were faithful to their trust, so long as A. lived. Provision was thus made for the keeping up of the feudal possession, until a son was born to take it; and the destruction of the contingent remainder in his favour was accordingly prevented. But now that contingent remainders can no longer be destroyed, of course there will be no occasion for trustees to preserve them.

(s) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 326.

The following extract from a modern settlement, of a date previous to the act to amend the law of real property (t), will explain the plan which used to be adopted. The lands were conveyed to the trustees and their heirs, to the uses declared by the settlement; by which conveyance the trustees took no permanent estate at all, as has been explained in the Chapter on Uses and Trusts(u), but the seisin was at once transferred to those to whose use estates were limited. Some of these estates were as follows :- " To the use of the To A, for life. " said A. and his assigns for and during the term of his " natural life without impeachment of waste and from " and immediately after the determination of that " estate by forfeiture or otherwise in the lifetime of the " said A. To the use of the said (trustees) their heirs To trustees " and assigns during the life of the said A. In trust during his life to preserve " to preserve the contingent uses and estates hereinafter contingent re-" limited from being defeated or destroyed and for that " purpose to make entries and bring actions as occasion " may require But nevertheless to permit the said A. " and his assigns to receive the rents issues and profits " of the said lands hereditaments and premises during " his life And from and immediately after the decease " of the said A. To the use of the first son of the said "A. and of the heirs of the body of such first son " lawfully issuing and in default of such issue To the To A.'s first " use of the second third fourth fifth and all and every in tail. " other son and sons of the said A. severally succes-" sively and in remainder one after another as they " shall be in seniority of age and priority of birth and " of the several and respective heirs of the body and " bodies of all and every such son and sons lawfully mainders.

(t) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106.

(u) Ante, pp. 147, 148.

" issuing the elder of such sons and the heirs of his "body issuing being always to be preferred to and to " take before the younger of such sons and the heirs " of his and their body and respective bodies issuing " And in default of such issue" &c. Then follow the other remainders.

Trust estates.

Contingent remainders of trust estates were indestructible.

In a former part of this volume we have spoken of equitable or trust estates(x). In these cases, the whole estate at law belongs to trustees, who are accountable in equity to their cestuis que trust, the beneficial owners. As equity follows the law in the limitation of its estates, so it permits an equitable or trust estate to be disposed of by way of particular estate and remainder, in the same manner as an estate at law. Contingent remainders may also be limited of trust estates. But between such contingent remainders, and contingent remainders of estates at law, there was always this difference, that whilst the latter were destructible, the former were not (y). The destruction of a contingent remainder of an estate at law depended, as we have seen, on the ancient feudal rule, which required a continuous and ascertained possession of every piece of land to be vested in some freeholder. But in the case of trust estates, the feudal possession remains with the trustee (z). And, as the destruction of contingent remainders at law defeated, when it happened, the intention of those who created them, equity did not so far follow the law as to introduce into its system a similar destruction of contingent remainders of trust estates. It rather compelled the trustees continually to observe the intention of those whose wishes they had undertaken to execute. Accordingly, if a conveyance had been made unto and to the

(x) See the chapter on Uses and Trusts, ante, p. 148 et seq.

(y) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 321.

(z) See Chapman v. Blissett, Cas. temp. Talbot, 145, 151. use of A. and his heirs, in trust for B. for life, and after his decease in trust for his first and other sons successively in tail,-here the whole legal estate would have been vested in A., and no act that B. could have done, nor any event which might have happened to his equitable estate, before its natural termination, could have destroyed the contingent remainder directed to be held by A. or his heirs in trust for the eldest son.

It may be proper to mention in this place, that an The Succesact has been recently passed for granting duties on suc- sion Duty Act, 1853. cession to property on the death of any person dying after the 19th of May, 1853, the time appointed for the commencement of the act(a). These dutics are as follows:-where the successor is the lineal issue or lineal ancestor of the predecessor, the duty is at the rate of one per cent. on the value of the succession; if a brother or sister, or a descendant of a brother or sister, three per cent.; if a brother or sister of the father or mother, or a descendant of such a brother or sister, five per cent.; if a brother or sister of the grandfather or grandmother of the predecessor, or a descendant of such a brother or sister, six per cent.; and if the successor shall be in any other degree of collateral consanguinity to the predecessor, or shall be a stranger in blood to him, the duty is ten per cent. (b). The interest, however, of a successor to real property is considered to be of the value of an annuity equal to the annual value of such property during his life, or for any less period during which he may be entitled; and every such annuity is to be valued, for the purposes of the act, according to tables set forth in the schedule to the act; and the duty is to be paid by eight equal half-yearly instalments, the first to be paid at the end of twelve months after the successor shall have become entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the property; and the seven following instalments are to be paid at half-yearly intervals of six months each, to be computed from the day on which the first instalment shall have become due. But if the successor shall die before all such instalments shall have become due, then any instalments not due at his decease shall cease to be payable; except in the case of a successor who shall have been competent to dispose by will(c) of a continuing interest in such property, in which case the instalments unpaid at his death shall be a continuing charge on such interest in exoneration of his other property, and shall be payable by the owner for the time being of such interest (d).

(a) Stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51; see Wilcox v. Smith, 4 Drew. 40; Attorney-Gen. v. Lord Middleton, 3 H. & N. 125; Attorney-Gen. v. Sibthorpe, 3 H. & N. 424; Attorney-Gen. v. Lord Braybrooke, 5 H. & N. 488; 9 H. of L. Cas. 150; Attorney-Gen. v. Smythe, 9 H. of L. Cas. 498. (b) Sect. 10.

(c) Attorney-Gen. v. Hallett, 2 (d) Stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, H. & N. 368. s. 21.

(267)

CHAPTER III.

OF AN EXECUTORY INTEREST.

CONTINGENT remainders are future estates which, as we have seen (a), were, until recently, continually liable, in law, until they actually existed as estates, to be destroyed altogether,-executory interests, on the other Executory inhand, are future estates, which in their nature are terests arise of indestructible (b). They arise, when their time comes, as strength. of their own inherent strength; they depend not for protection on any prior estates, but on the contrary, they themselves often put an end to any prior estates which may be subsisting. Let us consider, first, the means by which these future estates may be created; and secondly, the time fixed by the law, within which they must arise, and beyond which they cannot be made to commence.

SECTION I.

Of the Means by which Executory Interests may be created.

1. Executory interests may now be created in two ways—under the Statute of Uses(c), and by will. Exe-

(a) Ante, p. 258 et seq.

(b) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 418. Before fines were abolished, it was a matter of doubt whether a fine would not bar an executory interest, in case of non-claim for five years after a right of entry had arisen under the executory interest. Romilly v. James, 6 Taunt. 263, see ante, p. 47. Executory interests subsequent to, or in defeazance of an estate tail, may also be barred in the same manner, and by the same means, as remainders expectant on the determination of the estate tail. Fearne, Cont. Rem. 423.

(c) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

Springing and shifting uses.

anciently allowed by the Court of Chancery.

The Statute of Uses.

Executory uses still allowed.

entory interests created under the Statute of Uses are called springing or shifting uses. We have seen(d) that, previously to the passing of this statute, the use of lands was under the sole jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery Executory uses as trusts are now. In the exercise of this jurisdiction, it would seem that the Court of Chancery, rather than disappoint the intentions of parties, gave validity to such interests of a future or executory nature, as were occasionally created in the disposition of the use(e). For instance, if a feoffment had been made to A. and his heirs, to the use of B. and his heirs from to-morrow, the court would, it seems, have enforced the use in favour of B., notwithstanding that, by the rules of law, the estate of B. would have been void(f). Here we have an instance of an executory interest in the shape of a springing use, giving to B. a future estate arising on the morrow of its own strength, depending on no prior estate, and therefore not liable to be destroyed by its prop falling. When the Statute of Uses(q) was passed, the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery over uses was at once annihilated. But uses in becoming, by virtue of the statute, estates at law, brought with them into the courts of law many of the attributes, which they had before possessed whilst subjects of the Court of Chancery. Amongst others which remained untouched, was this capability of being disposed of in such a way as to create executory interests. The legal seisin or possession of lands became then, for the first time, disposable without the observance of the formalities previously required (h); and, amongst the dispositions allowed, were these executory interests, in which the legal seisin is shifted about from one person to another, at the mercy of the springing uses, to which the seisin has been indissolubly united > (d) Ante, pp. 144, 145. (e) Butl. n. (a) to Fearne, Cont. Rem. 384. (f) Ante, p. 249.

(g) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, ante, p. 146.

(h) See ante, pp. 167, 168.

by the act of parliament; accordingly it now happens that, by means of uses, the legal seisin or possession of lands may be shifted from one person to another in an endless variety of ways. We have seen(i), that a conveyance to B. and his heirs to hold from to-morrow, is absolutely void. But by means of shifting uses, the desired result may be accomplished; for, an estate may be conveyed to A. and his heirs to the use of the conveying party and his heirs until to-morrow, and then to the use of B. and his heirs. A very common instance Example:-To of such a shifting use occurs in an ordinary marriage settlement of lands. Supposing A. to be the settlor, the until a marlands are then conveyed by him, by the settlement exe- the marriage, cuted a day or two before the marriage, to the trustees to other uses. (say B. and C. and their heirs) "to the use of A. and his heirs until the intended marriage shall be solemnized, and from and immediately after the solemnization thereof," to the uses agreed on; for example, to the use of D., the intended husband, and his assigns for his life, and so on. Here B. and C. take no permanent estate at all, as we have already seen (k). A. continues, as he was, a tenant in fee simple until the marriage; and, if the marriage should never happen, his estate in fee simple will continue with him untouched. But, the moment the marriage takes place,-without any further thought or care of the parties, the seisin or possession of the lands shifts away from A. to vest in D., the intended husband, for his life, according to the disposition made by the settlement. After the execution of the settlement, and until the marriage takes place, the interest of all the parties, except the settlor, is future, and contingent also on the event of the marriage. But the life estate of D., the intended husband, is not an interest of the kind called a contingent remainder. For, the estate which precedes it, namely, that of A., is an estate in fee simple, the use of A. and his heirs riage, and, after

(i) Ante, p. 249.

(k) Ante, pp. 147, 172.

after which no remainder can be limited. The use to D. for his life springs up on the marriage taking place, and puts an end at once and for ever to the estate in fee simple which belonged to A. Here, then, is the destruction of one estate, and the substitution of another. The possession of A. is wrested from him by the use to D., instead of D.'s estate waiting till A.'s possession is over, as it must have done had it been merely a remainder. Another instance of the application of a shifting use occurs in those cases in which it is wished that any person who shall become entitled under the settlement should take the name and arms of the settlor. In such a case, the intention of the settlor is enforced by means of a shifting clause, under which, if the party for the time being entitled should refuse or neglect, within a definite time, to assume the name and bear the arms, the lands will shift away from him, and vest in the person next entitled in remainder.

From the above examples, an idea may be formed of the shifts and devices which can now be effected in settlements of land, by means of springing and shifting uses. By means of a use, a future estate may be made to spring up with certainty at a given time. It may be thought, therefore, that contingent remainders, having until recently been destructible, would never have been made use of in modern conveyancing, but that every thing would have been made to assume the shape of an executory interest. This, however, is not the case. For, in many instances, future estates are necessarily required to wait for the regular expiration of those which precede them; and, when this is the case, no art or device can prevent such estates from being what they are, contingent remainders. The only thing that could formerly be done, was to take care for their preservation, by means of trustees for that purpose. For, the law, having been acquainted with remainders long before uses were introduced into it, will never construe any No limitation construed as a limitation to be a springing or shifting use, which, by shifting use any fair interpretation, can be regarded as a remainder, which can be whether vested or contingent(l).

Another instance.

Name and arms.

The establishment of shifting and contingent uses occasioned great difficulties to the early lawyers, in consequence of the supposed necessity that there should, at the time of the happening of the contingency on which the use was to shift, be some person seised to the use then intended to take effect. If a conveyance were made to B. and his heirs, to the use of A. and his heirs until a marriage or other event, and afterwards to the use of C. and his heirs, it was said that the use was executed in A. and his heirs by the statute, and that as this use was co-extensive with the seisin of B., B. could have no actual seisin remaining in him. The event now happens. Who is seised to the use of C.? In answer to this question it was held that the original seisin reverts back to B., and that on the event happening he becomes seised to the use of C. And to support this doctrine it was further held that meantime a possibility of seisin, or scintilla juris, remained vested in B. But Scintilla juris. this doctrine, though strenuously maintained in theory, was never attended to in practice. And in modern times the opinion contended for by Lord St. Leonards was generally adopted, that in fact no scintilla whatever remained in B., but that he was, by force of the statute, immediately divested of all estate, and that the uses thenceforward took effect as legal estates according to their limitations, by relation to the original seisin momentarily vested in B.(m). And a final blow to the doctrine has now been given by a recent act of parliaregarded as a

Abst. 130. (1) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 386-395, 526; Doe d. Harris v. Howell, (m) Sug. Pow. 19, 8th ed. 10 Barn. & Cres. 191, 197; 1 Prest.

remainder.

New enactment. ment(n), which provides, that where by any instrument any hereditaments have been or shall be limited to uses, all uses thereunder, whether expressed or implied by law, and whether immediate or future, or contingent or executory, or to be declared under any power therein contained, shall take effect when and as they arise, by force of and by relation to the estate and seisin originally vested in the person seised to the uses; and the continued existence in him or elsewhere of any seisin to uses or scintilla juris shall not be deemed necessary for the support of, or to give effect to, future or contingent or executory uses; nor shall any such seisin to uses or scintilla juris be deemed to be suspended, or to remain or to subsist in him or elsewhere.

One of the most convenient and useful applications of springing uses occurs in the case of powers, which are Powers. methods of causing a use, with its accompanying estate, to spring up at the will of any given person(o):-Thus, Example. lands may be conveyed to A. and his heirs to such uses as B. shall, by any deed or by his will, appoint, and in default of and until any such appointment, to the use of C. and his heirs, or to any other uses. These uses will accordingly confer vested estates on C., or the parties having them, subject to be divested or destroyed at any time by B.'s exercising his power of appointment. Here B., though not owner of the property, has yet the power, at any time, at once to dispose of it, by executing a deed; and if he should please to appoint it to the use of himself and his heirs, he is at perfect liberty so to do; or, by virtue of his power, he may dispose of it by his will. This power of appointment is evidently a privilege Bankruptcy. of great value; and it is accordingly provided by the bankrupt act that the assignces of any person becoming bankrupt may exercise, for the benefit of his creditors, all powers (except the right of nomination to any vacant ecclesiastical benefice) which the bankrupt might have exercised for his own benefit (p). If, however, in the case above mentioned, B. should not become bankrupt, and should die without having made any appointment by deed or will, C.'s estate, having escaped destruction, will no longer be in danger. In such a case a liability was until recently incurred by the estate of C. in respect of the debts of B. secured by any judgment, decree, order, or rule of any court of law or equity. These judgment Judgment debts, by an act of parliament(q), to which reference debts. has before been made(r), were made binding on all lands over which the debtor should, at the time of the judgment, or at any time afterwards, have any disposing power, which he might, without the assent of any other person, exercise for his own benefit. Before this act was passed, nothing but an appointment by B. or his assignees, in exercise of his power, could have defeated or prejudiced the estate of C. And now, by the act to which we have before referred for amending the law New act. relating to future judgments(s), no judgment entered up after the 29th of July, 1864, the date of the act, can affect any land of whatever tenure, until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution by virtue of a writ of elegit, or other lawful authority, in pursuance of such judgment.

> (n) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, (o) See Co. Litt. 271 b, n. (1), s. 7. VII., 1.

Suppose, however, that B. should exercise his power, Exercise of and appoint the lands by deed to the use of D. and his power by deed. In this case, the execution by B. of the instruheirs.

(p) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 11, 13. s. 147, not repealed by stat. 24 & (r) Ante, pp. 79, 80. 25 Vict. c. 134. (s) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112; (q) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ante, p. 82. R.P. T

The power is only over the use.

ment required by the power, is the event on which the use is to spring up, and to destroy the estate already existing. The moment, therefore, that B. has duly executed his power of appointment over the use, in favour of D. and his heirs, D. has an estate in fee simple in possession vested in him, by virtue of the Statute of Uses, in respect of the use so appointed in his favour; and the previously existing estate of C. is thenceforth completely at an end. The power of disposition exercised by B. extends, it will be observed, only to the use of the lands; and the fee simple is vested in the appointee, solely by virtue of the operation of the Statute of Uses, which always instantly annexes the legal estate to the use(t). If, therefore, B. were to make an appointment of the lands, in pursuance of his power, to D. and his heirs, to the use of E. and his heirs. D. would still have the use, which is all that B. has to dispose of; and the use to E. would be a use upon a use, which, as we have seen(u), is not executed, or made into a legal estate, by the Statute of Uses. E., therefore, would obtain no estate at law; although the Court of Chancery would, in accordance with the expressed intention, consider him beneficially entitled, and would treat him as the owner of an equitable estate in fee simple, obliging D. to hold his legal estate merely as a trustee for E. and his heirs.

The terms and formalities of the power must be complied with.

In the exercise of a power, it is absolutely necessary that the terms of the power, and all the formalities required by it, should be strictly complied with. If the power should require a deed only, a will will not do; or, if a will only, then it cannot be exercised by a deed(v), or by any other act, to take effect in the lifetime of the (t) See ante, pp. 147, 148.

(u) Ante, p. 149.

(v) Majoribanks v. Hovenden, 1 Drury, 11. person exercising the power (x). So, if the power is to be exercised by a deed attested by two witnesses, then a deed attested by one witness only will be insuffi- $\operatorname{cient}(y)$. This strict compliance with the terms of the power was carried to a great length by the Courts of law; so much so, that where a power was required to Power to be be exercised by a writing under hand and seal attested writing under by witnesses, the exercise of the power was held to be hand and seal, invalid if the witnesses did not sign a written attestation witnesses. of the signature of the deed, as well as of the sealing (z). The decision of this point was rather a surprise upon the profession, who had been accustomed to attest deeds by an indorsement, in the words " sealed and delivered by the within-named B. in the presence of," instead of wording the attestation, as in such a case this decision required, " Signed, scaled and delivered, &c." In order, therefore, to render valid the many deeds which by this decision were rendered nugatory, an act of parliament (a) Stat. 54 Geo. was passed, by which the defect thus arising was cured, as to all deeds and instruments, intended to exercise powers which were executed prior to the 30th of July, 1814, the day of the passing of the act. But as the act had no prospective operation, the words "signed, sealed and delivered" were still necessary to be used in the attestation, in all cases where the power was to be exercised by writing under hand and seal, attested by witnesses (b). It is, however, now provided (c) that a New enact-

(x) Sugd. Pow. 210, 8th ed.; 1 Chance on Powers, ch. 9, pp. 273 et seq.

(y) Sugd. Pow. 207 et seq., 8th ed.; 1 Chance on Powers, 331.

(z) Wright v. Wakeford, 4 Taunt. 213; Doe d. Mansfield v. Peach, 2 Mau. & Selw. 576; Wright v. Barlow, 3 Mau. & Selw. 512.

(a) 54 Geo. 111. c. 168.

(b) See, however, Vincent v. Bishop of Sodor and Man, 5 Ex. Rep. 683, 693, in which case the Court of Exchequer intimated that they considered the case of Wright v. Wakeford, now overruled by the case of Burdett v. Doe d. Spilsbury, 10 Clark & Fin. 340; 6 Man. & Gran. 386. See also Re Rickett's Trusts, 1 John. & H. 70, 72, affirmed in II. of L.; Newton v. Ricketts, 9 H. of L. Cas. 262.

(c) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 12.

exercised by attested by

III. c. 168.

ment.

deed executed after the 13th of August, 1859, in the presence of and attested by two or more witnesses in the manner in which deeds are ordinarily executed and attested, shall, so far as respects the execution and attestation thereof, be a valid execution of a power of appointment by deed or by any instrument in writing not testamentary, notwithstanding it shall have been expressly required that a deed or instrument in writing made in exercise of such power should be executed or attested with some additional or other form of execution or attestation, or solemnity. Provided always, that this provision shall not operate to defeat any direction in the instrument creating the power that the consent of any particular person shall be necessary to a valid execution, or that any act shall be performed, in order to give validity to any appointment, having no relation to the mode of executing and attesting the instrument; and nothing contained in the act is to prevent the donee of a power from executing it conformably to the power by writing, or otherwise than by an instrument executed and attested as an ordinary deed; and to any such execution of a power this provision is not to extend.

Equitable relief on the defective execution of powers. The strict construction adopted by the Courts of law, in the case of instruments exercising powers, is in some degree counterbalanced by the practice of the Court of Chancery to give relief in certain cases, when a power has been defectively exercised. If the Courts of law have gone to the very limit of strictness, for the benefit of the persons entitled in default of appointment, the Court of Chancery, on the other hand, appears to have overstepped the proper boundaries of its jurisdiction in favour of the appointee (d). For, if the intended appointee be a purchaser from the person intending to exercise the power, or a creditor of such person, or his wife, or his child, or if the appointment be for a charitable purpose, - in any of these cases, equity will aid the defective execution of the power (e); in other words, the Court of Chancery will compel the person in possession of the estate, and who was to hold it until the power was duly exercised, to give it up on an undue execution of such power. It is certainly hard that, for want of a little caution, a purchaser should lose his purchase or a ereditor his security, or that a wife or child should be unprovided for; but it may well be doubted whether it be truly equitable, for their sakes, to deprive the person in possession; for the lands were originally given to him to hold until the happening of an event (the execution of the power), which, if the power be not duly executed, has in fact never taken place.

(d) See 7 Ves. 506; Sugd. Pow. 532 et seq., 8th ed.

The above remarks equally apply to the exercise of a Exercise of power by will. Formerly, every execution of a power to appoint by will was obliged to be effected by a will conformed, in the number of its witnesses and other circumstances of its execution, to the requisitions of the But the act for the amendment of the laws power. with respect to wills (f) requires that all wills should be executed and attested in the same uniform way (q); and it accordingly enacts (h), that no appointment made New enactby will in exercise of any power shall be valid, unless the same be executed in the manner required by the act; and that every will executed in the manner thereby required shall, so far as respects the execution and attestation thereof, be a valid execution of a power of appointment by will, notwithstanding it shall have been

(e) Sugd. Pow. 534, 535, 8th ed.; 2 Chance on Powers, c. 23, p. 488 et seq.; Lucena v. Lucena, 5 Beav. 249.

(f) 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26. (g) See ante, p. 187. (h) Sect. 10.

power by will.

ment.

expressly required that a will made in exercise of such power should be executed with some additional or other form of execution or solemnity.

Powers of alienation unconnected with ownership, differ from alienation in respect of ownership.

Appointments between husband and wife.

Married woman may exercise powers.

Infants' marriage settlements.

These powers of appointment, viewed in regard to the individuals who are to exercise them, are a species of dominion over property, quite distinct from that free right of alienation which has now become inseparably annexed to every estate, except an estate tail, to which a modified right of alienation only belongs. As alienation by means of powers of appointment is of a less ancient date than the right of alienation annexed to ownership, so it is free from some of the incumbrances by which that right is still clogged. Thus a man may exercise a power of appointment in favour of himself or of his wife (i); although, as we have seen (k), a man cannot directly convey, by virtue of his ownership, either to himself or to his wife. So we have seen (l)that a married woman could not formerly convey her estates without a fine, levied by her husband and herself, in which she was separately examined; and now, no conveyance of her estates can be made without a deed, in which her husband must concur, and which must be separately acknowledged by her to be her own act and deed. But a power of appointment either by deed or will, may be given to any woman ; and whether given to her when married or when single, she may exercise such a power without the consent of any husband to whom she may then or thereafter be married (m); and the power may be exercised in favour of her husband, or of any one clse(n). The act of parliament to which we have before referred (o), for enabling infants

- (i) Sugd. Pow. 471, Sth ed.
- (k) Ante, pp. 173, 208.
- (1) Ante, pp. 211, 212.
- (m) Doe d. Blomfield v. Eyre,

3 C. B. 557; 5 C. B. 713.

- (n) Sugd. Pow. 471, 8th ed.
- (o) Ante, p. 64.

to make binding settlements on their marriage, with the sanction of the Court of Chancery, extends to property over which the infant has any power of appointment, unless it be expressly declared that the power shall not be exercised by an infant(p). But the act provides, that in case any appointment under a power of appointment, or any disentailing assurance, shall have been executed by any infant tenant in tail under the act, and sic. such infant shall afterwards die under age, such appointment or disentailing assurance shall thereupon become absolutely void (q).

The power to dispose of property independently of Ignorance of any ownership, though established for some three centuries, is at the present day frequently unknown to those caused disapto whom such a power may belong. This ignorance intention. has often given rise to difficulties and the disappointment of intention in consequence of the execution of powers by instruments of an informal nature, particularly by wills, too often drawn by the parties themselves. A testator would, in general terms, give all his estate, or all his property; and because over some of it he had only a power of appointment, and not any actual ownership, his intention, till lately, was defeated. For such a general devise was no execution of his power of appointment, but operated only on the property that was his own. He ought to have given not only all that he had, but also all of which he had any power to dispose. The act for the amendment of the laws with respect A general to wills (r) has now provided a remedy for such cases, by enacting (s) that a general devise of the real estate of executed by a a testator shall be construed to include any real estate

the nature of powers has power of appointmentnow general devise.

(p) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 43, (r) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. s. 1. c. 26. (q) Sect. 2. (s) Sect. 27.

which he may have power to appoint in any manner he may think proper(t), and shall operate as an execution of such power, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will.

A power may exist concurrently with ownership.

A power may be extinguished or suspended by a conveyance of the estate.

A power of appointment may sometimes belong to a person concurrently with the ordinary power of alienation arising from the ownership of an estate in the lands. Thus lands may be limited to such uses as A. shall appoint, and in default of and until appointment to the use of A. and his heirs (u). And in such a case A. may dispose of the lands either by exercise of his power(x), or by conveyance of his estate (y). If he exercise his power the estate limited to him in default of appointment is thenceforth defeated and destroyed; and, on the other hand, if he convey his estate, his power is thenceforward extinguished, and cannot be exercised by him in derogation of his own conveyance. So if, instead of conveying his whole estate, he should convey only a partial interest, his power would be suspended as to such interest, although in other respects it would remain in force; that is, he may still exercise his power, so only that he do not defeat his own grant. When the same object may be accomplished either by an exercise of the power, or by a conveyance of the estate, care should be taken to express clearly by which of the two methods the instrument employed is intended to operate. Under such circumstances it is very usual first to exercise the power, and afterwards to convey the estate by way of further assurance only; in which case, if the power is valid and subsisting, the subsequent conveyance is of (t) Cloves v. Awdry, 12 Beav. 604.

(u) Sir Edward Clere's case, 6 Rep. 17 b; Maundrell v. Maundrell, 10 Ves. 246. 289.

(y) Cox v. Chamberlain, 4 Ves. 631; Wynne v. Griffith, 3 Bing. 179; 10 J. B. Moore, 592; 5 B. & Cress. 923; 1 Russ. 283.

280

(x) Roach v. Wadham, 6 East, course inoperative (z); but if the power should by any means have been suspended or extinguished, then the conveyance takes effect.

The doctrine of powers, together with that of vested remainders, is brought into very frequent operation by the usual form of modern purchase deeds, whenever the purchaser was married on or before the first of January, 1834, or whenever, as sometimes happens, it is wished to render unnecessary any evidence that he was not so married. We have seen(a) that the dower of such women as were married on or before the first day of January, 1834, still remains subject to the ancient law; and the inconvenience of taking the conveyance to the purchaser jointly with a trustee, for the purpose of barring dower, has also been pointed out(b). The modern method of effecting this object, and at the same time of Modern meconferring on the purchaser full power of disposition dower. over the land, without the concurrence of any other person, is as follows: A general power of appointment by deed is in the first place given to the purchaser, by means of which he is enabled to dispose of the lands for any estate at any time during his life. In default of and until appointment, the land is then given to the purchaser for his life, and after the determination of his life interest by any means in his lifetime, a remainder (which, as we have seen(c), is vested) is limited to a trustee and his heirs during the purchaser's life. This remainder is then followed by an ultimate remainder to the heirs and assigns of the purchaser for ever, or, which is the same thing, to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns for ever(d). These limitations are sufficient to prevent the wife's right of dower from attaching. For the pur-

(z) Ray v. Pung, 5 Mad. 310; 5 B. & Ald. 561; Doe d. Wigan v. Jones, 10 B. & Cress. 459. (a) Ante, p. 213.

(b) Ante, p. 216. (c) Ante, p. 247. (d) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 317, n.; Co. Litt. 379 b, n. (1).

thod of barring chaser has not, at any time during his life, an estate of inheritance in possession, out of which estate only a wife can claim dower (e): he has during his life only a life interest, together with a remainder in fee simple expectant on his own decease. The intermediate vested estate of the trustee prevents, during the whole of the purchaser's lifetime, any union of this life estate and remainder (f). The limitation to the heirs of the purchaser gives him, according to the rule in Shelley's case(q), all the powers of disposition incident to ownership: though subject, as we have seen (h), to the estate intervening between the limitation to the purchaser and that to his heirs. But the estate in the trustee lasts only during the purchaser's life, and during his life may at any time be defeated by an exercise of his power. A form of these uses to bar dower, as they are called, will be found in the Appendix (i). As the estate of the husband under these uses is partly legal and partly equitable, the wife, if married after the 1st of January, 1834, will not be barred of her dower by these limitations (k); and if the deed is of a date previous to that day, even an express declaration contained in the deed that such was the intent of the uses will not be suffi- $\operatorname{cient}(l)$.

Special powers. Where the estate is of limited duration.

Uses to bar dower.

Power of leasing. Besides these general powers of appointment, there exist also powers of a special kind. Thus the estate which is to arise on the exercise of the power of appointment may be of a certain limited duration and nature: of this an example frequently occurs in the power of leasing, which is given to every tenant for life under a properly drawn settlement. We have seen (m) that until

- (e) Ante, p. 215.
 (f) Ante, p. 262.
 (g) Ante, pp. 236, 240.
 (h) Ante, p. 237.
 (i) See Appendix (C).
- (k) Ante, p. 218.
- (1) Fry v. Noble, 20 Beav. 598;
- 7 De Gex, M. & G. 687; Clarke
- v. Franklin, 4 Kay & J. 266.
 - (m) Ante, pp. 25, 26.

recently a tenant for life, by virtue of his ownership, had no power to make any disposition of the property to take effect after his decease. He could not, therefore, grant a lease for any certain term of years, but only contingently on his living so long; and even now he must apply to the Court of Chancery, unless he claims under a settlement made after the 1st of November, 1856, and wishes only to make a lease not exceeding twenty-one years. But if his life estate should be limited to him in the settlement by way of use, as is now always done, a power may be conferred on him of leasing the land for any term of years, and under whatever restrictions may be thought advisable. On the exercise of this power, a use will arise to the tenant for the term of years, and with it an estate, for the term granted by the lease, quite independently of the continuance of the life of the tenant for life (n). But if the lease attempted to be granted should exceed the duration authorized by the power, or in any other respect infringe on the restrictions imposed, it would be void altogether as an exercise of the power, and might until recently have been set aside by any person having the remainder or reversion, on the decease of the tenant for life. But by a recent act of parliament (o) it is now provided, that such a Relief against lease, if made bona fide, and if the lessee have entered defects in leases under thereunder, shall be considered in equity as a contract powers. for a grant, at the request of the lessee, of a valid lease under the power, to the like purport and effect as such invalid lease, save so far as any variation may be necessary in order to comply with the terms of the power. But in case the reversioner is able and willing, during the continuance of the lessee's possession, to confirm the lease without variation, the lessee is bound to accept a confirmation accordingly; and such confirmation may be by memorandum or note in writing, signed by the (n) 10 Ves. 256. amended by stat. 13 & 14 Vict. (o) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 26, c. 17.

persons confirming and accepting respectively, or some other persons by them respectively thereunto lawfully authorized (p). And the acceptance of rent by the reversioner will be deemed a confirmation of the lease as against him, if upon or before such acceptance any receipt, memorandum or note in writing, confirming such lease, is signed by the person accepting such rent, or some other person by him thereunto lawfully authorized (q).

Power of sale and exchange.

Another instance of a special power occurs in the case of the power of sale and exchange usually inserted in settlements of real estate. This power provides that it shall be lawful for the trustees of the settlement, with the consent of the tenant for life in possession under the settlement, and sometimes also at their own discretion during the minority of the tenant in possession, to sell or exchange the settled lands, and for that purpose to revoke the uses of the settlement as to the lands sold or exchanged, and to appoint such other uses in their stead as may be necessary to effectuate the transaction proposed. But it is provided that the money to arise from any such sale, or which may be received for equality of exchange, shall be laid out in the purchase of other lands; and that such lands, and also the lands which may be received in exchange, shall be settled by the trustees to the then subsisting uses of the settlement. It is further provided that, until a proper purchase can be found, the money may be invested in the funds or on mortgage, and the income paid to the person who would have been entitled to the rents, if lands had been purchased and settled. The object of this power is to keep up the settlement, and at the same time to facilitate the acquisition of lands which for any reason may be more desirable in lieu of any of the settled lands which it

(p) Stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 17, (q) Sect. 2. s. 3. may be expedient to part with. The direction to lay out the money in the purchase of other lands makes the money, even before it is laid out, real estate in the contemplation of Courts of Equity (r); and though no land should ever be purchased, the parties entitled under the settlement will take in equity precisely the same estates in the investments of the money, as they would have taken in any lands which might have been purchased therewith. The power given to the trustees to revoke the uses of the settlement and appoint new uses, enables them, by virtue of the Statute of Uses, to give the purchaser of the settled property a valid estate in fee simple, provided only that the requisitions of the power are complied with. And a recent enactment enables the New enact-Court of Chancery to relieve a bonâ fide purchaser under such a power in case the tenant for life, or any mistaken payother party to the transaction, shall by mistake have ment by purbeen allowed to receive for his own benefit a portion of the purchase money, as the value of the timber or other articles(s). Previously to this statute, the Courts of Equity had not considered themselves authorized to give relief in such a case (t). And a more recent enact- New enactment(u) embodies in the settlement the usual provisions, $\frac{\text{ment}}{\text{Powers of sale}}$ whenever it is expressly declared therein that trustees and exchange or other persons therein named or indicated shall have embodied in a power of sale either generally or in any particular event, or a power of exchange. But no sale or exchange under this act, and no purchase of hereditaments out of money received on any such sale or exchange, shall be made without the consent of the person appointed by the settlement to consent, or if no such person be appointed, then of the person entitled in possession to the receipt of the rents, if there be such a person under no ment. Relief against chaser.

settlements.

(r) Ante, p. 152. (s) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 13. (t) Cockerell v. Cholmeley, 1

Russ. & M. 418. (u) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 115, pt. 1.

disability. But this is not to be taken to require any consent where it appears from the settlement to have been intended that such sale, exchange or purchase should be made without any consent(x). And none of the powers of the act are to take effect or be exercisable if the settlement declares that they shall not take effect; and where there is no such declaration, then if any variations or limitations of any of such powers are contained in the settlement, the same shall be exercisable or take effect subject to such variations or limitations (y). Of this act it has been remarked by a great authority (z), that the option of declaring that the act shall not take effect "will probably be frequently acted upon, more particularly owing to the latter portion of the section; for nothing can be more difficult, not to say dangerous, than an attempt to amalgamate the powers in a settlement and the powers in the act, or to engraft the latter on the former. Where the settlement is purposely silent as to the powers conferred by the act, and the settlor approves of and chooses to rely upon them, the only inconvenience will be that the settlement itself will not inform the persons claiming under it of the powers vested in them, but it will be necessary to refer to the act for the powers conferred by it."

As to sales reserving minerals. It was decided, in a recent case, that the ordinary power of sale and exchange contained in settlements does not authorize the trustees to sell the lands with a reservation of the minerals (a). In consequence of this decision, which took the profession rather by surprise, an act was passed (b) which confirms all sales, exchanges, partitions and enfranchisements theretofore made, in intended exercise of any trust or power, of land, with an

(x)	Stat.	23	& 24	Vict.	c. 145,	Pow.	877,8	th	ed.	•
s. 1	0.						(a)	Buck	ley	v.	Hot	well,	29	Beav.
()	y)	Sect.	32.				516.
(z)	Lord	St.	Leo	nards,	Sugd.	(b)	Stat.	25	&	26	Vict.	с.	108.

Remarks on the act. exception or reservation of minerals, or of the minerals separately from the residue of the land(c). And it is provided that for the future every trustee and other person authorized to dispose of land by way of sale, exchange, partition or enfranchisement, may, with the sanction of the Court of Chancery to be obtained on petition in a summary way, dispose of the land without the minerals, or of the minerals without the land, unless forbidden so to do by the instrument creating the trust or power(d).

Other kinds of special powers occur where the persons who are to take estates under the powers are limited to a jects are licertain class. Powers to jointure a wife, and to appoint estates amongst children, are the most usual powers of The estates this nature. When powers are thus given in favour of particular objects, the estates which arise from the exercise of the power take effect precisely as if such serted in the estates had been inserted in the settlement by which the power was given. Each estate, as it arises under the power, takes its place in the settlement in the same manner as it would have done had it been originally limited to the appointee, without the intervention of any power; and, if it would have been invalid in the original settlement, it will be equally invalid as the offspring of the power (e).

It is provided, by the Succession Duty Act, 1853, The Succession that where any person shall have a general power of Duty Act, 1853. appointment, under any disposition of property taking effect upon the death of any person, he shall, in the event of his making any appointment thereunder, be deemed to be entitled, at the time of his exercising such power, to the property thereby appointed, as a succession derived from the donor of the power; and where under the power take effect as if they had been insettlement.

(c) Sect. 1. (d) Sect. 2. (e) Co. Litt. 277 b, n. (1), VII. 2.

When the obmited.

any person shall have a limited power of appointment, under a disposition taking effect upon any such death, any person taking any property by the exercise of such power shall be deemed to take the same as a succession derived from the person creating the power as predecessor (f). But where the donee of a general power of appointment shall become chargeable with duty, in respect of the property appointed by him under such power, he shall be allowed to deduct from the duty so payable any duty he may have already paid in respect of any limited interest taken by him in such property (g).

Powers may generally speaking be destroyed or ex-Powers may be extinguished tinguished by deed of release made by the donee or by release. owner of the power to any person having any estate of freehold in the land; "for it would be strange and unreasonable that a thing, which is created by the act of the parties, should not by their act, with their mutual consent, be dissolved again" (h). The exceptions to this Exceptions. rule appear to be all reducible to the simple principle, that if the duty of the donee of the power may require him to exercise it at any future time, then he cannot extinguish it by release (i). By the act for the abolition Release of powers by marof fines and recoveries (k), it is provided (l), that every ried women. married woman may, with the concurrence of her husband, by deed to be acknowledged by her as her act and deed according to the provisions of the act(m), release or extinguish any power which may be vested in or limited or reserved to her, in regard to any lands of any tenure, or any money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands(n), or in regard to any estate in any

(f) Stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51,
s. 4. See Re Barker, Exch. 7 Jur.,
N. S. 1061; Attorney-General v. Floyer, 11. of Lords, 9 Jur., N.S. 1.
(g) Sect. 33.

(h) Albany's case, 1 Rep. 110 b, 113 a; Smith v. Death, 5 Mad. 371; Horner v. Swann, Turn. & Russ. 430.

(i) See 2 Chance on Powers, 581.

- (k) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74.
 (l) Sect. 77.
- (m) See ante, p. 213.
- (n) See ante, p. 152.

288

lands of any tenure, or in any such money as aforesaid, as fully and effectually as she could do if she were a feme sole. Our notice of powers must here conclude. On a subject so vast, much must necessarily remain unsaid. The masterly treatise of Sir Edward Sugden (now Lord St. Leonards), and the accurate work of Mr. Chance on Powers, will supply the student with all the further information he may require.

2. An executory interest may also be created by will. Creation of Before the passing of the Statute of Uses (0), wills were executory inemployed only in the devising of uses, under the protection of the Court of Chancery, except in some few cities and boroughs where the legal estate in lands might be devised by special custom (p). In giving effect to Directions that these customary devises, the courts, in very early times, should sell showed great indulgence to testators (q); and perhaps lands devisable the first instance of the creation of an executory interest occurred in directions given by testators, that their executors should sell their tenements. Such directions were allowed by law in customary devises (r); and in such cases it is evident that the sale by the executors operated as the execution of a power to dispose of that in which they themselves had no kind of ownership. For executors, as such, have nothing to do with freeholds.

(o) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

(p) Ante, p. 186.

(q) 30 Ass. 183 a; Litt. sec. 586.

(r) Year Book, 9 Hen. VI. 24 b, Babington :-- " La nature de devis ou terres sont devisables est, que on peut deviser que la terre sera vendu par executors, et ceo est bon, come est dit adevant, et est marveilous ley de raison: mes ceo est le nature d'un devis, et devise ad este use tout temps en tiel forme; et issint on aura loyalment franktenement de cesty qui n'avoit rien, et en meme le maniere come on aura fire from flint, et uncore nul fire est deins le flint : et ceo est pour performer le darrein volonte de le devisor." Paston .- " Une devis est marveilous en lui meme quand il peut prendre effect: car si on devise en Londres que ses executors vendront ses terres, et devie seisi; son heir est eins par descent, et encore par le vend des executors il sera ouste." See also Litt. s. 169.

U terests by will.

by custom.

R. P.

executors should sell lands of which others were seised to the testator's use.

Here, therefore, was a future estate or executory interest created; the fee simple was shifted away from the heir of the testator, to whom it had descended, and became vested in the purchaser, on the event of the sale of the tenement to him. The Court of Chancery also, in permitting the devise of the use of such lands as were not themselves devisable, allowed of the creation of executory interests by will, as well as in transactions between Directions that living persons (s). And in particular directions given by persons having others seised of lands to their use, that such lands should be sold by their executors, were not only permitted by the Court of Chancery, but were also recognised by the legislature. For, by a statute of the reign of Henry VIII. (t), of a date previous to the Statute of Uses, it is provided, that in such cases, where part of the executors refuse to take the administration of the will and the residue accept the charge of the same will, then all bargains and sales of the lands so willed to be sold by the executors, made by him or them only of the said executors that so doth accept the charge of the will, shall be as effectual as if all the residue of the executors, so refusing, had joined with him or them in the making of the bargain and sale.

The Statute of Uses.

But, as we have seen (u), the passing of the Statute of Uses abolished for a time all wills of uses, until the Statute of Wills (x) restored them. When wills were restored, the uses, of which they had been accustomed to dispose, had been all turned into estates at law: and such estates then generally came, for the first time, within the operation of testamentary instruments. Under these circumstances, the courts of law, in interpreting wills, adopted the same lenient construction which had formerly been employed by themselves in the interpretation of customary devises, and also by the Court of (s) Perk. ss. 507, 528. (u) Ante, p. 186. (t) Stat. 21 Hen. VIII. c. 4. (x) 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1.

Chancery in the construction of devises of the ancient use. The statute which, in the case of wills of uses, had given validity to sales made by the executors accepting the charge of the will, was extended, in its construction, to directions (now authorized to be made) for the sale by the executors of the legal estate, and also to eases where the legal estate was devised to the executors to be sold (y). Future estates at law were also allowed to be created by will, and were invested with the same important attribute of indestructibility which belongs to all executory interests. These future estates were called Executory deexecutory devises, and in some respects they appear to have been more favourably interpreted than shifting uses contained in deeds (z), though generally speaking their attributes are the same. To take a common instance: Example. a man may, by his will, devise lands to his son A., an infant, and his heirs; but in case A. should die under the age of twenty-one years, then to B. and his heirs. In this case A. has an estate in fee simple in possession, subject to an executory interest in favour of B. If A. should not die under age, his estate in fee simple will continue with him unimpaired. But if he should die under that age, nothing can prevent the estate of B. from immediately arising, and coming into possession, and displacing for ever the estate of A. and his heirs. Precisely the same effect might have been produced by

(y) Bonifaut v. Greenfield, Cro. Eliz. 80; Co. Litt. 113 a; see Mackintosh v. Barber, 1 Bing. 50.

(z) In the cases of Adams v. Savage (2 Lord Raym. 855; 2 Salk. 679), and Rawley v. Holland (22 Vin. Abr. 189, pl. 11), limitations which would have been valid in a will by way of executory devise were held to be void in a deed by way of shifting or springing use. But these cases have been doubted by Mr. Serjeant Hill and

Mr. Sanders (1 Sand. Uses, 142, 143; 148, 5th ed.), and denied to be law by Mr. Butler (note (y) to Fearne, Cont. Rem. p. 41). Mr. Preston also lays down a doctrine opposed to the above cases (1 Prest. Abst. 114, 130, 131). Sir Edward Sugden, however, supports these cases, and seems sufficiently to answer Mr. Butler's objection, (Sugd. Gilb. Uses and Trusts, 35, note.)

vises.

a conveyance to uses. A conveyance to C. and his heirs, to the use of A. and his heirs, but in case A. should die under age, then to the use of B. and his heirs, would have effected the same result. Not so, however, a direct conveyance independently of the Statute of Uses. A conveyance directly to A. and his heirs would vest in him an estate in fee simple, after which no limitation could follow. In such a case, therefore, a direction that, if A. should die under age, the land should belong to B. and his heirs, would fail to operate on the legal seisin; and the estate in fee simple of A. would, in case of his decease under age, still descend, without any interruption, to his heir at law.

Alienation of executory interests.

Example.

The alienation of an executory interest, before its becoming an actually vested estate, was formerly subject to the same rules as governed the alienation of contingent remainders (a). But by the act to amend the law of real property, all executory interests may now be disposed of by deed (b). Accordingly, to take our last example, if a man should leave lands, by his will, to A. and his heirs, but in case A. should die under age, then to B, and his heirs,-B. may by deed, during A.'s minority, dispose of his expectancy to another person, who, should A. die under age, will at once stand in the place of B. and obtain the fee simple. But, before the act, this could not have been done; B. might indeed have sold his expectancy; but after the event (the decease of A. under age), B. must have executed a convevance of the legal estate to the purchaser; for, until the event, B. had no estate to convey (c).

Sale or mortgage for payment of debts. In order to facilitate the payment of debts out of real estate, it is provided, by modern acts of parliament, that when lands are by law, or by the will of their owner,

(a) Ante, p. 256. s. 5. (b) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. e. 106, s. 6, (c) Ante, p. 257. repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, liable to the payment of his debts, and are by the will vested in any person by way of executory devise, the first executory devisee, even though an infant, may convey the whole fee simple in order to carry into effect any decree for the sale or mortgage of the estate for payment of such debts (d). And this provision, so far as it relates to a sale, has recently been extended to the case of the lands having descended to the heir subject to an executory devise over in favour of a person or persons not existing or not ascertained (e).

SECTION II.

Of the Time within which Executory Interests must arise.

Secondly, as to the time within which an executory The time estate or interest must arise. It is evident that some within which an executory limit must be fixed; for if an unlimited time were interest must allowed for the creation of these future and indestructible estates, the alienation of lands might be henceforward for ever prevented by the innumerable future estates which the caprice or vanity of some owners would prompt them to create. A limit has, therefore, been fixed on for the creation of executory interests; and every executory interest which might, under any circumstances, transgress this limit, is void altogether. With regard to future estates of a destructible kind, namely, contingent remainders, we have seen (f) that a limit to their creation is contained in the maxim, that no remainder can be given to the unborn child of a living person for his life, followed by a remainder to any of the issue of such unborn person :--- the latter of such remainders being absolutely void. This maxim, it is evident, in effect, forbids the tying up of lands for a longer period than can clapse until the unborn child of some living person shall come of age; that is, for the life of a party now in being, and for twenty-one years after,with a further period of a few months during gestation, supposing the child should be of posthumous birth. In analogy, therefore, to the restriction thus imposed on the creation of contingent remainders (g), the law has fixed the following limit to the creation of executory interests; -it will allow any executory estate to commence within the period of any fixed number of now existing lives, and an additional term of twenty-one years; allowing further for the period of gestation, should gestation actually exist (h). This additional term of twenty-one years may be independent or not of the minority of any person to be entitled(i); and if no lives are fixed on, then the term of twenty-one years only is allowed (k). But every executory estate which might, in any event, transgress this limit, will from its commencement be absolutely void. For instance, a gift to the first son of A., a living person, who shall attain the age of twentyfour years, is a void gift(l). For if A, were to die, leaving a son a few months old, the estate of the son would arise, under such a gift, at a time exceeding the period of twenty-one years from the expiration of the life of A., which, in this case, is the life fixed on. But a gift to the first son of A. who shall attain the age of twenty-one years will be valid, as necessarily falling within the allowed period. When a gift is infected with the vice of its possibly exceeding the prescribed limit, it

(e) Stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 87. (d) Stat. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 47, s. 12; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 60. (f) Ante, p. 253.

arise.

(g) Per Lord Kenyon, in Long v. Blackall, 7 'T. Rep. 102. See also 1 Sand. Uses, 197 (205, 5th ed.)

(h) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 430 et seq.

(i) Cadell v. Palmer, 7 Bligh, N. S. 202. (k) 1 Jarm. Wills, 230, 1st ed.; 205, 2nd ed.; 229, 3rd ed.; Lewis on Perpetuities, 172.

(1) Newman v. Newman, 10 Sim.
51; 1 Jarm. Wills, 227, 1st ed.;
208, 2nd ed.; 233, 3rd ed.; Griffith v. Blunt, 4 Beav. 248.

Limit to the creation of executory interests.

Example.

294

is at once and altogether void both at law and in equity. And even if, in its actual event, it should fall greatly within such limit, yet it is still as absolutely void as if the event had occurred which would have taken it beyond the boundary. If, however, the executory limita- Exception tion should be in defeazance of, or immediately preceded by an estate by, an estate tail, then, as the estate tail and all subse- tail. quent estates may be barred by the tenant in tail, the remoteness of the event on which the executory limitation is to arise will not affect its validity (m).

In addition to the limit already mentioned, a further Restriction on restriction has been imposed by a modern act of parliament (n), on attempts to accumulate the income of property for the benefit of some future owner. This act was occasioned by the extraordinary will of the late Mr. Thelluson, who directed the income of his property Mr. Thelluto be accumulated during the lives of all his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren who were living at the time of his death for the benefit of some future descendants to be living at the decease of the survivor(o); thus keeping strictly within the rule which allowed any number of existing lives to be taken as the period for an executory interest. To prevent the repetition of such a cruel absurdity, the act forbids the accu- Stat. 39 & 40 mulation of income for any longer term than the life of Geo. 111. c. 98. the grantor or settlor, or twenty-one years from the death of any such grantor, settlor, devisor or testator, or during the minority of any person living, or in ventre sa mère at the death of the grantor, devisor or testator, or during the minority only of any person who, under the settlement or will, would for the time being, if of full

(m) Butler's note (h) to Fearne, Cont. Rem. 562; Lewis on Perpetuities, 669. See ante, p. 267, n. (b).

(n) Stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III.

c. 98; Fearne, Cont. Rem. 538, n. (x). (o) 4 Ves. 227; Fearne, Cont. 436, note.

accumulation.

son's will.

age, be entitled to the income so directed to be accumulated (p). But the act does not extend (q) to any provision for payment of debts, or for raising portions for children (r), or to any direction touching the produce of timber or wood. Any direction to accumulate income, which may exceed the period thus allowed, is valid to the extent of the time allowed by the act, but void so far as this time may be exceeded (s). And if the direction to accumulate should exceed the limits allowed by law for the creation of executory interests, it will be void altogether, independently of the above act (t).

(p) Wilson v. Wilson, 1 Sim. N. S. 288.

(q) Sect. 3.

(r) See Halford v. Stains, 16 Sim. 488, 496; Barrington v. Liddell, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 480; Edwards v. Tuck, 3 De Gex, M. & G. 40.

(s) 1 Jarm. Wills, 269, 1st ed.; 250, 2nd ed.; 286, 3rd ed. See Re Lady Rosslyn's Trust, 16 Sim. 391.

(t) Lord Southampton v. Marquis of Hertford, 2 Ves. & Bea. 54; Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 1 Dr. & War. 509; Curtis v. Lukin, 5 Beav. 147; Broughton v. James, 1 Coll. 26; Scarisbrick v. Skelmersdale, 17 Sim. 187.

(297)

CHAPTER IV.

OF HEREDITAMENTS PURELY INCORPOREAL.

WE now come to the consideration of incorporeal hereditaments, usually so called, which, unlike a reversion, a remainder, or an executory interest, are ever of an incorporeal nature, and never assume a corporeal shape. Of these purely incorporeal hereditaments there are Three kinds of three kinds, namely, first, such as are appendant to corporeal hereditaments; secondly, such as are appurtenant; taments. both of which kinds of incorporeal hereditaments are transferred simply by the conveyance, by whatever means, of the corporeal hereditaments to which they may belong; and, thirdly, such as are in gross, or exist as separate and independent subjects of property, and which are accordingly said to lie in grant, and have always required a deed for their transfer (a). But almost all purely incorporeal hereditaments may exist in both the above modes, being at one time appendant or appurtenant to corporeal property, and at another time separate and distinct from it.

1. Of incorporeal hereditaments which are appendant to such as are corporeal, the first we shall consider is a seignory or lordship. In a previous part of our A seignory. work (b) we have noticed the origin of manors. Of such of the lands belonging to a manor as the lord granted out in fee simple to his free tenants, nothing remained to him but his seignory or lordship. By the grant of an estate in fee simple, he necessarily parted with the feudal possession. Thenceforth his interest, accordingly, became incorporeal in its nature. But he had no reversion; for no reversion can remain, as we have already seen (c), after an estate in fee simple. The grantee, however, became his tenant, did to him fealty, and paid to him his rent-service, if any were agreed for. This simply having a free tenant in fee simple was called a seignory. To this seignory the rent and fealty were incident, and the seignory itself was attached or appendant to the manor of the lord, who had made the grant; whilst the land granted out was said to be holden of the manor. Very many grants were thus made, until the passing of the statute of Quia emptores(d) put an end to these creations of tenancies in fee simple, by directing that, on every such conveyance, the feoffee should hold of the same chief lord as his feoffor held before (e). But such tenancies in fee simple as were then already subsisting were left untouched, and they still remain in all cases in which freehold lands are holden of any manor. The incidents of such a tenancy, so far as respects the tenant, have been explained in the chapter on the tenure of an estate in fee simple. The correlative rights belonging to the lord form the incidents of his seignory. The seignory, with all its incidents, is an appendage to the manor of the lord, and a conveyance of the manor simply, without mentioning its appendant seignories, will accordingly comprise the seignories, together with all rents incident to them (f). In ancient times it was necessary that the tenants should attorn to the feoffee of the manor, before the rents and services could effectually pass to him(q). For, in this respect, the owner of a seignory was in the same position as the owner of a reversion (h). But the Attornment.

> (a) Ante, p. 220. (b) Ante, p. 110.

(c) Ante, p. 233.
(d) 18 Edw. I. c. 1.
(e) Ante, pp. 60, 109.

(f) Perk, s. 116.

(g) Co. Litt. 310 b.

(h) Ante, p. 228.

same statute (i) which abolished attornment in the one case abolished it also in the other. No attornment, therefore, is now required.

Other kinds of appendant incorporeal hereditaments Rights of comare rights of common, such as common of turbury, or a mon. right of cutting turf in another person's land; common of piscary, or a right of fishing in another's water; and common of pasture, which is the most usual, being a right Common of of depasturing cattle on the land of another. The rights pasture. of common now usually met with are of two kinds; one where the tenants of a manor possess rights of common over the wastes of the manor, which belong to the lord of the manor, subject to such rights (k); and the other, where the several owners of strips of land, composing together a common field, have at certain seasons a right to put in cattle to range over the whole. The inclosure of commons, so frequent of late years, has rendered Common. much less usual than formerly the right of common possessed by tenants of manors over the lord's wastes. These inclosures were formerly effected by private acts of parliament, obtained for the purpose of each particular inclosure, subject to the provisions of the general inclosure act(l), which contained general regulations applicable to all. But by an act of parliament of the New enactpresent reign (m) commissioners have been appointed, styled the Inclosure Commissioners for England and

(i) Stat. 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, s. 9; ante, p. 228.

(k) Ante, p. 110.

(1) 41 Geo. 111. c. 109; see also stats. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 87; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 31.

(m) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, amended and extended by stats. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 70; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 111; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 99; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 83; 15 & 16 Vict.

c. 79; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31; and 22 & 23 Vict. c. 43; and continued by stats. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 53; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 53; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 81; and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 73. The stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, contains (sect. 147) a remarkably useful provision, authorizing exchanges of lands whether inclosed or not. And this provision has since been

ment.

Drainage. Common fields.

Wales, under whose sanction inclosures may now be more readily effected, several local inclosures being comprised in one act. The same commissioners have also been invested with powers for facilitating the drainage of lands (n). The rights of common possessed by owners of land in common fields, however useful in ancient times, are now found greatly to interfere with the modern practice of husbandry; and acts have accordingly been recently passed to facilitate the exchange (o) and separate inclosure(p) of lands in such common fields. Under the provisions of these acts, each owner may now obtain a separate parcel of land, discharged from all rights of common belonging to any other person. The rights of common above spoken of, being appendant to the lands in respect of which they are exercised, belong to the lands of common $\operatorname{right}(q)$, by force of the common law alone, and not by virtue of any grant, express or implied. And any conveyance of the lands to which such rights belong will comprise such rights of common also (r). Another kind of appendant incorporeal hereditament is an advowson appendant to a manor. But on this head we shall reserve our observations till we speak of the now more frequent subject of conveyance, an > extended to partition between owners of undivided shares (stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 99, s. 13, ante, p. 129) and to other hereditaments, rights and easements (stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 83, s. 7), and in other respects (see stats. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 79, ss. 31, 32; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97, ss. 31, 32; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97, ss. 2, 5; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31, ss. 4-11; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 43, ss. 10, 11). Socage lands may be exchanged for gavelkind. Minet v. Leman, 20 Bcav. 269; 7 De Gex, M. & G. 340.

Advowson appendant.

(n) Stat. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 38; see also the statutes mentioned, ante, pp. 29, 30.

(o) Stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 30.

(p) Stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 115, extended by stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 31.
Sce also stats. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118;
9 & 10 Vict. c. 70; 10 & 11 Vict.
c. 111; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 99; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 83; 15 & 16 Vict. c.
79; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31.

(q) Co. Litt. 122 a; Bac. Abr. tit. Extinguishment (C). See, however, Lord Dunraven v. Llewellyn, 15 Q. B. 791, ante, p. 110, n. (j).

(r) Litt. s. 183; Co. Litt. 121 b.

advowson in gross, or an advowson unappended to any thing corporeal.

In connection with the subject of commons, it may be Strips of waste mentioned that strips of waste land between an enclosure by the side of roads. and a highway, and also the soil of the highway to the middle of the road, presumptively belong to the owner of the enclosure (s). And a conveyance of the inclosure (t), even by reference to a plan which does not comprise the highway (u), will carry with it the soil as far as one-half the road. But if the strips of waste land communicate so closely to a common as in fact to form part of it, they will then belong to the lord of the manor, as the owner of the common (v). Where a public way is foundrous, as such ways frequently were in former times, the public have by the common law a right to travel over the adjoining lands, and to break through the fences for that purpose (x). It is said that in former times the landowners, to prevent their fences being broken and their crops spoiled when the roads were out of repair, set back their hedges, leaving strips of waste at the side of the road, along which the public might travel without going over the lands under cultivation. Hence such strips are presumed to belong to the owners of the lands adjoining(y). Where lands adjoin a river, the soil of one-half Soil of river. of the river to the middle of the stream is presumed to belong to the owner of the adjoining lands(z). But if it be a tidal river, the soil up to high water mark ap-

(s) Doe d. Pring v. Pearsey, 7 B. & C. 304; Scoones v. Morrell, 1 Beav. 251.

(t) Simpson v. Dendy, 8 C. B., N. S. 433.

(u) Berridge v. Ward, C. P. 30 L. J., C. P. 218; 10 C. B., N. S. 400.

(v) Grose v. West, 7 Taunt. 39; Doe d. Barrett v. Kemp, 2 Bing. N. C. 102.

(x) Com. Dig. tit. Chimin. (D. 6); Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B., N. S. 848.

(y) Steel v. Prickett, 2 Stark. 468.

(z) Hale de jure maris, ch. 1; Wishart v. Wylie, 2 Stuart, Thomson, Milne, Morison & Kinnear's Scotch Cases, H. L. 68.

Sea-shore.

pears presumptively to belong to the Crown(a). The Crown is also presumptively entitled to the sea-shore up to high water mark of medium tides (b); although grants of parts of the sea-shore have not unfrequently been made to subjects (c); and such grants may be presumed by proof of long continued and uninterrupted acts of ownership (d). A sudden irruption of the sea gives the Crown no title to the lands thrown under water (e), although when the sea makes gradual encroaches, the right of the owner of the land encroached on is as gradually transferred to the Crown(f). And in the same manner when the sea gradually retires, the right of the Crown is as gradually transferred to the owner of the land adjoining the coast(q). But a sudden dereliction of the sea does not deprive the Crown of its title to the soil (h).

Appurtenant incorporeal hereditaments arise by grant or prescription.

Appurtenant rights of common and of way. 2. Incorporeal hereditaments appurtenant to corporeal hereditaments are not very often met with. They consist of such incorporeal hereditaments as are not naturally and originally appendant to corporeal hereditaments, but have been annexed to them, either by some express deed of grant or by prescription from long enjoyment. Rights of common and rights of way or passage over the property of another person are the principal kinds of incorporeal hereditaments usually found appurtenant to lands. When thus annexed they will pass by a conveyance of the lands to which they have

(a) Hale de jure maris, ch. 4, p. 13.

(b) Attorney-General v. Chambers, 4 De Gex, M. & G. 206; The Queen v. Gee, 1 Ellis & Ellis, 1068.

(e) Scratton v. Brown, 4 B. & C. 485, 495.

(d) The Duke of Beaufort v. The Mayor, &c. of Swansea, 3 Ex. 413; Calmady v. Rowe, 6 C. B. 861; The Freefishers of Whitstable v. Gann, 11 C. B., N. S. 387.

(e) 2 Black. Com. 262.

(f) Re Hull & Selby Railway,5 Mec. & Wels. 327.

(g) 2 Bl. Com. 262; The King v.
Lord Yarborough, 3 B. & C. 91;
5 Bing, 163.

(h) 2 Black. Com. 262.

been annexed, without mention of the appurtenances (i); although these words, " with the appurtenances," are Appurteusually inserted in conveyances, for the purpose of distinetly showing an intention to comprise such incorporeal hereditaments of this nature as may belong to the lands. But if such rights of common or of way, though usually enjoyed with the lands, should not be strictly appurtenant to them, a conveyance of the lands merely, with their appurtenances, without mentioning the rights of common or way, will not be sufficient to comprise them (k). It is, therefore, usual in conveyances to insert at the end of the "parcels" or description of the property a number of "general words," in which are comprised, not only all rights of way and common, &c. which may belong to the premises, but also all such as may be therewith used or enjoyed (1).

3. Such incorporeal hereditaments as stand separate and alone are generally distinguished from those which are appendant or appurtenant, by the appellation in gross. Of these, the first we may mention is a seignory A seignory in in gross, which is a seignory that has been severed gross. from the demesne lands of the manor, to which it was anciently appendant (m). It has now become quite unconnected with any thing corporeal, and, existing as a separate subject of transfer, it must be conveyed by deed of grant.

The next kind of separate incorporeal hereditament Rent seek. is a rent seck, (redditus siccus,) a dry or barren rent, so (i) Co. Litt. 121 b. 164; Worthington v. Gimson, Q. B., 6 Jur., N. S. 1053; Baird v. For-(k) Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & Cres. 96; Barlow v. Rhodes, 1 Cro. tune, H. L. 10 W. R. 2; Wardle & M. 439. See also James v. Plant, v. Brocklehurst, 1 Ellis & Ellis, 4 Adol. & Ellis, 749; Hinchliffe v. 1058. Earl of Kinnoul, 5 New Cases, 1; (1) Ante, p. 175. Pheysey v Vicary, 16 Mee. & Wels. (m) 1 Scriv. Cop. 5. 484; Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B.

nances.

called, because no distress could formerly be made for it (n). This kind of rent affords a good example of the antipathy of the ancient law to any inroad on the then prevailing system of tenures. If a landlord granted his seignory, or his reversion, the rent service, which was incident to it, passed at the same time. But if he should have attempted to convey his rent, independently of the seignory or reversion, to which it was incident, the grant would have been effectual to deprive himself of the rent, but not to enable his grantee to distrain for it (o). It would have been a rent seck. Rent seck also occasionally arose from grants being made of rent charges, to be hereafter explained, without any clause of distress (p). But now, by an act of George II. (q)a remedy by distress is given for rent seck, in the same manner as for rent reserved upon lease.

Another important kind of separate incorporeal here-A rent charge. ditament is a rent charge, which arises on a grant by one person to another, of an annual sum of money, payable out of certain lands in which the grantor may have any estate. The rent charge cannot, of course, continue longer than the estate of the grantor; but supposing the grantor to be seised in fee simple, he may make a grant of a rent charge for any estate he pleases. giving to the grantee a rent charge for a term of years, or for his life, or in tail, or in fee simple (r). For this purpose a deed is absolutely necessary; for a rent charge, A deed required. being a separate incorporeal hereditament, cannot, according to the general rule, be created or transferred in any other way(s), unless indeed it be given by will. The creation of a rent charge or annuity, for any life or lives, or for any term of years or greater estate deter-

(n) Litt. s. 218.
(o) Litt. ss. 225, 226, 227, 228, 572.

(p) Litt. ss. 217, 218.

(q) Stat. 4 Geo. 11. e. 28, s. 5.

- (r) Litt. ss. 217, 218.
- (s) Litt. nbi sup.

minable on any life or lives, was also, until recently, required, under certain circumstances, to be attended with the incolment, in the Court of Chancery, of a me- Incolment of morial of certain particulars. These annuities were frequently granted by needy persons to money lenders, in lives granted consideration of the payment of a sum of money, for consideration. which the annuity or rent charge served the purpose of an exorbitant rate of interest. In order, therefore, to check these proceedings by giving them publicity, it was provided that, as to all such annuities, granted for pecuniary consideration of money's worth (t), (unless secured on lands of equal or greater annual value than the annuity, and of which the grantor was seised in fee simple, or fee tail in possession,) a memorial stating the date of the instrument, the names of the parties and witnesses, the persons for whose lives the annuity was granted, the person by whom the same was to be beneficially received, the pecuniary consideration for granting the same, and the annual sum to be paid, should, within thirty days after the execution of the deed, be inrolled in the Court of Chancery; otherwise the same should be null and void to all intents and purposes (u). But Now unnecesas these annuities were only granted for the sake of sary. evading the Usury Laws, the same statute which has repealed those laws (x) has also repealed the statutes by which memorials of such annuities were required to be inrolled. A subsequent statute, however, provides, that Registration any annuity or rent charge granted after the 26th of of annuities April, 1855, the date of the passing of the act, otherwise than by marriage settlement or will, for a life or memorial of annuities for for pecuniary now required.

(t) Tetley v. Tetley, 4 Bing. 214; Mestayer v. Biggs, 1 Cro. Mee. & Rosc. 110; Few v. Backhouse, 8 Ad. & Ell. 789; S. C. 1 Per. & Dav. 34; Doe d. Church v. Pontifex, 9 C. B. 229.

(u) Stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 141, R.P.

explained and amended by stats. 3 Geo. IV. c. 92, and 7 Geo. IV. c. 75, which rendered sufficient a memorial of the names of the witnesses as they appeared signed to their attestations.

(x) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 90.

х

lives, or for any estate determinable on a life or lives, shall not affect any lands, tenements or hereditaments, as to purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, until the particulars mentioned in the act are registered in the Court of Common Pleas, where they are entered in alphabetical order by the name of the person whose estate is intended to be affected (y). A search for annuities is accordingly made in this registry on every purchase of lands, in addition to the searches for judgments, crown debts and lis pendens (z).

Creation of rent charges under the Statute of Uses.

In settlements where rent charges are often given by way of pin-money and jointure, they are usually created under a provision for the purpose contained in the Statute of Uses(a). The statute directs that, where any persons shall stand seised of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in fee simple or otherwise, to the use and intent that some other person or persons shall have yearly to them and their heirs, or to them and their assigns, for term of life, or years, or some other special time, any annual rent, in every such case the same persons, their heirs and assigns, that have such use to have any such rent shall be adjudged and deemed in possession and seisin of the same rent of such estate as they had in the use of the rent; and they may distrain for non-payment of the rent in their own names. From this enactment it follows, that if a conveyance of lands be now made to A. and his heirs,-to the use and intent that B. and his assigns may, during his life, thereout receive a rent charge,-B. will be entitled to the rent charge, in the same manner as if a grant of the rent charge had been duly made to him by deed. The above enactment, it will be seen, is similar to the prior clause of the Statute of Uses relating to uses of estates (b), and is merely a carrying out of the same design, which was to render every use, then cognizable only in Chancery, an estate or interest within the jurisdiction of the courts of law(c). But in this case also, as well as in the former, the end of the statute has been defeated. For a conveyance of land to A. and his heirs, to the use that B. and his heirs may receive a rent charge, in trust for C. and his heirs, will now be laid hold of by the Court of Chancery for C.'s benefit, in the same manner as a trust of an estate in the land itself. The statute vests the legal estate in the rent in B.; and C. takes nothing in a court of law, because the trust for him would be a use upon a use (d). But C. has the entire beneficial interest; for he is possessed of the rent charge for an equitable estate in fee simple.

(z) Ante, pp. 80, 85.

306

⁽y) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, (a) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, ss. 12, 14. ss. 4, 5.

In ancient times it was necessary, on every grant of Clause of disa rent charge, to give an express power to the grantce tress. to distrain on the premises out of which the rent charge was to issue (e). If this power were omitted, the rent was merely a rent seck. Rent service, being an incident of tenure, might be distrained for by common right; but rent charges were matters the enforcement of which was left to depend solely on the agreement of the parties. But since a power of distress has been attached by parliament (f) to rents seek, as well as to rents service, an express power of distress is not necessary for the security of a rent charge (q). Such a power, however, is usually granted in express terms. In addition to the clause of distress, it is also usual, as a further security, to give to

(b) Ante, p. 146. 925, 935; Miller v. Green, 8 Bing. (c) Ante, p. 148. 92; 2 Cro. & Jerv. 142; 2 Tyr. 1. (d) Ante, p. 149. (g) Saward v. Anstey, 2 Bing. (e) Litt. s. 218. 519; Buttery v. Robinson, 3 Bing. (f) Stat. 4 Geo. 11. c. 28, s. 5. 392. See Johnson v. Faulkner, 2 Q. B.

Power of entry. the grantee a power to enter on the premises after default has been made in payment for a certain number of days, and to receive the rents and profits until all the arrears of the rent charge, together with all expenses, have been duly paid.

Estate for life in a rent charge.

Incorporeal hereditaments are the subjects of estates analogous to those which may be holden in corporeal hereditaments. If therefore a rent charge should be granted for the life of the grantee, he will possess an estate for life in the rent charge. Supposing that he should alienate this life estate to another party, without mentioning in the deed of grant the heirs of such party, the law formerly held that, in the event of the decease of the second grantee in the lifetime of the former, the rent charge became extinct for the benefit of the owner of the lands out of which it issued (h). The former grantee was not entitled because he had parted with his estate; the second grantee was dead, and his heirs were not entitled because they were not named in the grant. Under similar circumstances, we have seen(i) that, in the case of a grant of corporeal hereditaments, the first person that might happen to enter upon the premises after the decease of the second grantee had formerly a right to hold possession during the remainder of the life of the former. But rents and other incorporeal hereditaments are not in their nature the subjects of occupancy (k); they do not lie exposed to be taken possession of by the first passer by. It was accordingly thought that the statutes, which provided a remedy in the case of lands and other corporeal hereditaments, were not applicable to the case of a rent charge, but that it became extinct as before mentioned (l). By a modern decision,

- (k) Co. Litt. 41 b, 388 a.
- (1) 2 Black. Com. 260.

308

⁽h) Bac. Abr. tit. Estate for Life and Occupancy (B). and Occupancy (b

⁽i) Ante, p. 20.

however, the construction of these statutes was extended to this case also(m); and now the act for the amend- New enactment of the laws with respect to wills (n), by which these ment as to estate pur autre statutes have been repealed (o), permits every person to vie. dispose by will of estates pur autre vie, whether there shall or shall not be any special occupant thereof, and whether the same shall be a corporeal or an incorporeal hereditament (p); and in case there shall be no special occupant, the estate, whether corporeal or incorporeal, shall go to the executor or administrator of the party; and coming to him, either by reason of a special occupancy, or by virtue of the act, it shall be applied and distributed in the same manner as the personal estate of the testator or intestate (q).

A grant of an estate tail in a rent charge scarcely ever occurs in practice. But grants of rent charges for an estate in fee simple are not uncommon, especially in the Estate in fee towns of Liverpool and Manchester, where it is the usual simple in a rent charge. practice to dispose of an estate in fee simple in lands for building purposes in consideration of a rent charge in fee simple by way of ground rent, to be granted out of the premises to the original owner. These transactions are accomplished by a conveyance from the vendor to the purchaser and his heirs, to the use that the vendor and his heirs may thereout receive the rent charge agreed on, and to the further use that, if it be not paid within so many days, the vendor and his heirs may distrain, and to the further use that, in case of non-payment within so many more days, the vendor and his heirs may enter and hold possession till all arrears and expenses are paid; and subject to the rent charge, and to the powers and remedies for securing payment thereof, to the use of the purchaser, his heirs and assigns for ever. The purchaser thus acquires an estate in fee simple in the lands, subject to a perpetual rent charge payable to the vendor, his heirs and assigns(r). It should, however, be carefully borne in mind, that transactions of this kind are very different from those grants of fee simple estates which were made in ancient times by lords of manors, and from which quit or chief rents have arisen. These latter rents are rents incident to tenure, and may be distrained for of common right without any express clause for the purpose. But as we have seen (s), since the passing of the statute of Quia emptores (t) it has not been lawful for any person to create a tenure in fee simple. The modern rents, of which we are now speaking, are accordingly mere rent charges, and in ancient days would have required express clauses of distress to make them secure. They were formerly considered in law as against common right(u), that is as repugnant to the feudal policy, which encouraged such rents only as were incident to tenure. A rent charge was accordingly regarded as a thing entire and indivisible, unlike rent service, which was capable of apportionment. And from this property of a rent charge, the law, in its hostility to such charges, drew the following conclusion: that if

(m) Bearpark v., Hutchinson, 7 (p) Sect. 3. Bing. 178. (q) Sect. 6; Reynolds v. Wright, (n) 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26. 25 Beav. 100. (o) Sect. 2.

(r) By stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, conveyances of any kind, in consideration of an annual sum payable in perpetuity, or for any indefinite period, are subject to the following duties :—

	Where the yearl	y sum shall	not ex-	ceed £5	£0	6	0
	Shall exc	eed £5 and	not ex	ceed 10	0	12	0
	31	10	,,,	15	0	18	0
	39	15	"	20	1	4	0
	27	20	37	25	1	10	0
		25	,,	50	3	0	0
	93	50		75	4	10	0
	,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	75		100	6	0	0
	And when the	sum shall	exceed	£100, then for every £50, and also for any fractional part of £50						0
(s)	Ante, pp. 60, 109).	(u)	Co. Litt. 147 b
(t)	18 Edw. I. c. 1.

any part of the land, out of which a rent charge issued, A release of were released from the charge by the owner of the rent, was a release either by an express deed of release, or virtually by his of the whole. purchasing part of the land, all the rest of the land should enjoy the same benefit and be released also(v). If, however, any portion of the land charged should Apportiondescend to the owner of the rent as heir at law, the rent descent of part would not thereby have been extinguished, as in the of the land. case of a purchase, but would have been apportioned according to the value of the land; because such portion of the land eame to the owner of the rent, not by his own act, but by the course of law(x). But it is now provided (y), that the release from a rent charge of part New enactment of the hereditaments charged therewith shall not ex- an extinguishtinguish the whole rent charge, but shall operate only ment. to bar the right to recover any part of the rent eharge out of the hereditaments released; without prejudice, nevertheless, to the rights of all persons interested in the hereditaments remaining unreleased, and not concurring in or confirming the release. A recent statute empowers Apportionthe Inclosure Commissioners to apportion rents of every ment by In-closure Comkind on the application of any persons interested in the missioners. lands and in the rent (z).

By the act to amend and consolidate the laws relating Bankruptcy of to $\operatorname{bankrupts}(a)$, the assignces of any $\operatorname{bankrupt}$ having $\operatorname{subject}$ to perany land under a conveyance to him in fee, or under petual rent. an agreement for any such conveyance, subject to any perpetual yearly rent reserved by such conveyance or agreement, may elect to take or to decline the same; and any person entitled to the rent is empowered to oblige them to exercise this option, if they do not do

(v) Litt. s. 222; Dennett v. Pass. 1 New Cases, 388. (x) Litt s. 224. (y) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 10.

(z) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97, ss. 10-14. (a) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145; not repealed by stat. 24 &

25 Vict. c. 134.

so when required. If they elect to take the land, the bankrupt is discharged from liability to pay any rent accruing after the filing of the petition for adjudication of bankruptey. If they decline to take the land, the bankrupt will not be liable if, within fourteen days after he shall have had notice that the assignees have declined, he shall deliver up such conveyance or agreement to the person then entitled to the rent. This clause seems to have been drawn under a misconception of the nature of these rent charges; for the owner of such a rent has no estate in the land, and in order to acquire any estate therein, he should obtain not merely the delivery up of the old conveyance to the bankrupt, but also a conveyance of the fee simple of the land itself from the bankrupt to him.

Exoneration of executors and administrators from liability to pay rent charges.

The rent charges of which we are speaking are usually further secured by a covenant for payment, entered into by the purchaser in the deed by which they are granted. In order to exonerate the executors or administrators of such a purchaser from perpetual liability under this covenant, it is now provided (b) that where an executor or administrator, liable as such to the rent or covenants contained in any conveyance on chief rent or rent charge, or agreement for such conveyance, granted to or made with the testator or intestate whose estate is being administered, shall have satisfied all then subsisting liabilitics, and shall have set apart a sufficient fund to answer any future claim that may be made in respect of any fixed and ascertained sum agreed to be laid out on the property (although the period for laying out the same may not have arrived), and shall have conveyed the property, or assigned the agreement to a purchaser, he may distribute the residuary personal estate of the deceased without appropriating any part thereof to meet any future liability under such conveyance or agreement. But this is not to prejudice the right of the grantor or those claiming under him to follow the assets of the deceased into the hands of the persons amongst whom such assets may have been distributed.

Although rent charges and other self-existing incor- Incorporeal poreal hereditaments of the like nature are no favourites with the law, yet, whenever it meets with them, it ap- as possible, to plies to them, as far as possible, the same rules to which as corporeal corporeal hereditaments are subject. Thus, we have hereditaments. seen that the estates which may be held in the one are analogous to those which exist in the other. So estates in fee simple, both in the one and in the other, may be aliened by the owner, either in his lifetime or by his will, to one person or to several as joint tenants or tenants in common(c), and, on his intestacy, will descend to the same heir at law. But in one respect the analogy fails. Land is essentially the subject of tenure ; it may belong Tenure an exto a lord, but be holden by his tenant, by whom again it may be sub-let to another; and so long as rent is rent service, a mere incident arising out of the estate of the payer, and belonging to the estate of the receiver, so long may it accompany, as accessory, its principal, the estate to which it belongs. But the receipt of a rent charge is accessory or incident to no other hereditament. True a rent charge springs from and is therefore in a manner connected with the land on which it is charged; but the receiver and owner of a rent charge has no shadow of interest beyond the annual payment, and in the abstract right to this payment his estate in the rent Such an estate therefore cannot be subject consists. to any tenure. The owner of an estate in a rent charge consequently owes no fealty to any lord, neither can he be subject, in respect of his estate, to any rent as rent

(c) Rivis v. Watson, 5 M. & W. 255.

hereditaments subject, as far the same rules ception.

service; nor, from the nature of the property, could any distress be made for such rent service if it were reserved (d). So, if the owner of an estate in fee simple in a rent charge should die intestate, and without leaving any heirs, his estate cannot escheat to his lord, for he has none. It will simply cease to exist, and the lands out of which it was payable will thenceforth be discharged from its payment (e).

Common in gross.

Advowsons.

Another kind of separate incorporeal hereditament which occasionally occurs is a right of common in gross. This is, as the name implies, a right of common over lands belonging to another person, possessed by a man, not as appendant or appurtenant to the ownership of any lands of his own, but as an independent subject of property (f). Such a right of common has therefore always required a deed for its transfer.

Another important kind of separate incorporeal hereditament is an advowson in gross. An advowson is a perpetual right of presentation to an ecclesiastical benefice. The owner of the advowson is termed the patron of the benefice; but, as such, he has no property or interest in the glebe or tithes, which belong to the incumbent. As patron he simply enjoys a right of nomination from time to time, as the living becomes vacant. And this right he exercises by a presentation to the Presentation. bishop of some duly qualified clerk or clergyman, whom the bishop is accordingly bound to institute to the bene-Institution. fice, and to cause him to be inducted into it(q). When Induction. the advowson belongs to the bishop, the forms of pre-

> (d) Co. Litt. 47 a, 144 a; 2 Black. Com. 42. But it is said that the Queen may reserve a rent out of an incorporeal hereditament, for which, by her prerogative, she may distrain on all the lands of the lessee. Co. Litt. 47 a, note (1); Bac. Abr. tit. Rent (B).

- (e) Co. Litt. 298 a, n. (2).
- (f) 2 Black. Com. 33, 34.
- (g) 1 Black. Com. 190, 191.

sentation and institution are supplied by an act called Collation. collation (h). In some rare cases of advowsons dona- Donatives. tive, the patron's deed of donation is alone sufficient (i). And by a recent statute (k), every donation, presentation, or collation, of or to any ecclesiastical benefice, dignity or promotion, and every institution proceeding upon the petition of the patron to be himself admitted and instituted, and every nomination or licence to any perpetual curacy, is subject to an ad-valorem duty according to the subjoined table (l). Where the patron is entitled to the advowson as his private property, he is empowered by an act of parliament of the reign of George IV. (m) to present any clerk under a previous Agreements for agreement with him for his resignation in favour of any resignation. one person named, or in favour of one of two (n) persons, each of them being by blood or marriage an uncle, son, grandson, brother, nephew, or grand-nephew of the patron, or one of the patrons beneficially entitled. One part of the instrument by which the engagement is made must be deposited within two calendar months in the office of the registrar of the diocese (o), and the resignation must refer to the engagement, and state the name of the person for whose benefit it is made (p).

(h) 2 Black, Com. 22.

(i) 2 Black. Com. 23.

(k) Stat. 27 Vict. c. 18.

(1) Where the net yearly value of any such benefice, dignity, promotion or perpetual curacy—

Shall exc	£1	0	0
	100	,,	150	2	0	0
91	150	,,	200	3	0	0
	200	,,	250	4	0	0
	250	,,	300	5	0	0
And where suc	7	0	0
And also (wher for every first £200,	a further di	aty of	•• ••	5	0	0
(m) Stat. 9 Geo	o. IV. c. 94.
(n) The act reads one or two, (o) Sect. 4.
but this is clearly an error. (p) Sect. 5.

History of advowsons of rectories.

Advowsons are principally of two kinds,-advowsons of rectories, and advowsons of vicarages. The history of advowsons of rectorics is in many respects similar to that of rents and of rights of common. In the very early ages of our history advowsons of rectories appear to have been almost always appendant to some manor. The advowson was part of the manorial property of the lord, who built the church and endowed it with the glebe and most part of the tithes. The seignories in respect of which he received his rents were another part of his manor, and the remainder principally consisted of the demesne and waste lands, over the latter of which we have seen that his tenants enjoyed rights of common as appendant to their estates(q). The incorporeal part of the property, both of the lord and his tenants, was thus strictly appendant or incident to that part which was corporeal; and any conveyance of the corporeal part naturally and necessarily carried with it that part which was incorporeal, unless it were expressly excepted. But, as society advanced, this simple state of things became subject to many innovations, and in various cases the incorporeal portions of property became severed from the corporeal parts, to which they had previously belonged. Thus we have seen (r) that the seignory of lands was occasionally severed from the corporeal part of the manor, becoming a seignory in gross. So rent was sometimes granted independently of the lordship or reversion to which it had been incident, by which means it at once became an independent incorporeal hereditament, under the name of a rent seck. Or a rent might have been granted to some other person than the lord, under the name of a rent charge. In the same way a right of common might have been granted to some other person than a tenant of the manor, by means of which grant a separate incorporeal heredita-

(q) Ante, pp. 110, 297.

(r) Ante, p. 303.

ment would have arisen, as a common in gross, belonging to the grantee. In like manner there exist at the present day two kinds of advowsons of rectories; an advowson appendant to a manor, and an advowson in gross (s), which is a distinct subject of property, unconnected with any thing corporeal. Advowsons in gross Origin of adappear to have chiefly had their origin from the sever- vowsons in gross. ance of advowsons appendant from the manors to which they had belonged; and any advowson now appendant to a manor, may at any time be severed from it, either by a conveyance of the manor, with an express exception of the advowson, or by a grant of the advowson alone independently of the manor. And when once severed from its manor, and made an independent incorporeal hereditament, an advowson can never become appendant again. So long as an advowson is appendant to a manor, a conveyance of the manor, even by feoffment, Conveyance of and without mentioning the appurtenances belonging to the manor, will be sufficient to comprise the advowson (t). But, when severed, it must be conveyed, like any other separate incorporeal hereditament, by a deed of grant (u).

The advowsons of rectories were not unfrequently History of adgranted by the lords of manors in ancient time to monastic houses, bishoprics, and other spiritual corporations (x). When this was the case the spiritual patrons thus constituted considered themselves to be the most fit persons to be rectors of the parish, so far as the receipt of the tithes and other profits of the rectory was concerned; and they left the duties of the cure to be performed by some poor priest as their vicar or de-

(s) 2 Black. Com. 22; Litt. s. 617.

(t) Perk. s. 116; Co. Litt. 190 b, 307 a. See Attorney-General v. Sitwell, 1 You. & Coll. 559; Rooper v. Harrison, 2 Kay & John. 86. (u) Co. Litt. 332 a, 335 b.

(x) 1 Black, Com. 384.

an advowson.

puty. In order to remedy the abuses thus occasioned, it was provided by statutes of Richard II. (y) and Henry IV. (z), that the vicar should be sufficiently endowed wherever any rectory was thus appropriated. This was the origin of vicarages, the advowsons of which belonged in the first instance to the spiritual owners of the appropriate rectories as appendant to such rectories (a); but many of these advowsons have since, by severance from the rectories, been turned into advowsons in gross. And such adowsons of vicarages can only be conveyed by deed, like advowsons of rectories under similar circumstances.

Next presentation. The church must be full.

Simony.

The sale of an advowson will not include the right to the next presentation, unless made when the church is full; that is, before the right to present has actually arisen by the death, resignation or deprivation of the former incumbent (b). For the present right to present is regarded as a personal duty of too sacred a character to be bought and sold; and the sale of such a right would fall within the offence of simony,-so called from Simon Magus,-an offence which consists in the buying or selling of holy orders, or of an ecclesiastical benefice (c). But, before a vacancy has actually occurred, the next presentation, or right of presenting at the next vacancy, may be sold, either together with, or independently of, the future presentations of which the advewson is composed (d), and this is frequently done. No spiritual person, however, may sell or assign any patronage or presentation belonging to him by virtue of any dignity or spiritual office held by him, any such sale and assignment being void(e). And a clergyman

(y) Stat. 15 Rich. II. c. 6.

(z) Stat. 4 Hen. IV. c. 12.

(a) Dyer, 351 a.

(b) Alston v. Atlay, 7 Adol. & Ellis, 289.

(c) Bac. Abr. tit. Simony; stats.

31 Eliz. c. 6; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 122, ss. 2, 5, 9.

(d) Fox v. Bishop of Chester, 6 Bing. 1.

(e) Stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 42. is prohibited by a statute of Anne(f) from procuring preferment for himself by the purchase of a next presentation; but this statute is not usually considered as preventing the purchase by a clergyman of an entire advowson with a view of presenting himself to the living. When the next presentation is sold, independently of Next presentathe rest of the advowson, it is considered as mere per- tion is personal sonal property, and will devolve, in case of the decease of the purchaser before he has exercised his right, on his executors, and cannot descend to his heir at law(q). The advowson itself, it need scarcely be remarked, will descend, on the decease of its owner intestate, to his heir. The law attributes to it, in common with other separate incorporeal hereditaments, as nearly as possible the same incidents as appertain to the corporeal property to which it once belonged.

Tithes are another species of separate incorporeal Tithes. hereditaments, also of an ecclesiastical or spiritual kind. In the early ages of our history, and indeed down to the time of Henry VIII., tithes were exclusively the property of the church, belonging to the incumbent of the parish, unless they had got into the hands of some monastery, or community of spiritual persons. They never belonged to any layman until the time of the dissolution of monasteries by King Henry VIII. But this monarch, having procured acts of parliament for the dissolution of the monasteries and the confiscation of their property (h), also obtained by the same act(i) a con-

(f) Stat. 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 12, s. 2.

(g) See Bennett v. Bishop of Lincoln, 7 Barn. & Cres. 113; 8 Bing. 490.

(h) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 28, intituled, "An Act that all Religious Houses under the yearly Revenue of Two Hundred Pounds shall be dissolved, and given to the King and his heirs;" stat. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 13, intituled "An Act for the Dissolution of all Monasteries and Abbies;" and stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 24.

(i) 27 Hen. VIII. c. 28, s. 2; 31 Ilen. VIII. c. 13, ss. 18, 19.

property.

Tithes in lay hands. Conveyances of tithes.

Descent of tithes.

Tithes exist as distinct from the land.

patent of any of the property of the monasteries. These grants were many of them made to laymen, and comprised the tithes which the monasteries had possessed, as well as their landed estates. Tithes thus came for the first time into lay hands as a new species of property. As the grants had been made to the grantees and their heirs, or to them and the heirs of their bodies, or for term of life or years (k), the tithes so granted evidently became hereditaments in which estates might be holden, similar to those already known to be held in other hereditaments of a separate incorporeal nature; and a necessity at once arose of a law to determine the nature and attributes of these estates. How such estates might be conveyed, and how they should descend, were questions of great importance. The former question was soon settled by an act of parliament(l), which directed recoveries, fines, and conveyances to be made of tithes in lay hands, according as had been used for assurances of lands, tenements, and other hereditaments. And the analogy of the descent of estates in other hereditaments was followed in tracing the descent of estates of inheritance in tithes. But as tithes, being of a spiritual origin, are a distinct inheritance from the lands out of which they issue, they have not been considered as affected by any particular custom of descent, such as that of gavelkind or borough-English, to which the lands may be subject; but in all cases they descend according to the course of the common law(m). From this separate nature of the land and tithe, it also follows that the ownership of both by the same person will not have the effect of merging the one in the other. They exist as distinct subjects of property; and a conveyance of the land with its appurtenances, without mentioning the (k) Stat. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 13, s. 18; 32 Hen. VIII. c. 7, s. l. (1) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 7, s. 7.

(m) Doe d. Lushington v. Bishop of Llandaff, 2 New Rep. 491; 1 Eagle on Tithes, 16.

tithes, will leave the tithes in the hands of the conveying party (n). The acts which have been passed for the Commutation commutation of tithes (o) affect tithes in the hands of of tithes. laymen, as well as those possessed by the elergy. Under these acts a rent charge, varying with the price of corn, has now been substituted all over the kingdom for the inconvenient system of taking tithes in kind; and in these acts provision has been properly made for the merger of the tithes or rent charge in the land, by which Merger of the tithes or rent charge may at once be made to cease, charge in the whenever both land and tithes or rent charge belong to land. the same person (p).

There are other species of incorporeal hereditaments which are scarcely worth particular notice in a work so elementary as the present, especially considering the short notice that has necessarily here been taken of the more important kinds of such property. Thus, titles of Titles of honour, in themselves an important kind of incorporeal honour. hereditament, are yet, on account of their inalienable nature, of but little interest to the conveyancer. The same remark also applies to offices or places of business Offices. and profit. No outline can embrace every feature. Many subjects, which have here occupied but a single paragraph, are of themselves sufficient to fill a volume. Reference to the different works on the separate subjects here treated of must necessarily be made by those who are desirous of full and particular information.

(n) Chapman v. Gatcombe, 2 New 16 & 17 Vict. c. 124; 21 & 22 Cases, 516. Vict. c. 53 ; and 23 & 24 Vict. c. (o) Stats. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 71; 93. 1 Vict. c. 39; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64; (p) Stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 71, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62; 3 & 4 Vict. c. s. 71; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64; 2 & 3 15; 5 Vict. c. 7; 5 & 6 Vict. c. Vict. c. 62, s. 1; 9 & 10 Vict. 54; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73; 10 & 11 c. 73, s. 19. Vict. c. 104; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 53;

tithes or rent

(322)

PART III.

OF COPYHOLDS.

Our present subject is one peculiarly connected with those olden times of English history to which we have had occasion to make so frequent reference. Everything relating to copyholds reminds us of the baron of old, with his little territory, in which he was king. Estates in copyhold are, however, essentially distinct, both in their origin and in their nature, from those freehold estates which have hitherto occupied our attention. Copyhold lands are lands holden by copy of court roll; that is, the muniments of the title to such lands are copies of the roll or book in which an account is kept of the proceedings in the Court of the manor to which the lands belong. For all copyhold lands belong to, and are parcel of, some manor. An estate in copyhold is not a freehold; but, in construction of law, merely an estate at the will of the lord of the manor, at whose will copyhold estates are expressed to be holden. Copyholds are also said to be holden according to the custom of the manor to which they belong, for custom is the life of copyholds(a).

Origin of copyholds. In former days a baron or great lord becoming possessed of a tract of land granted part of it to freemen for estates in fee simple, giving rise to the tenure of such estates as we have seen in the chapter on Tenure (b). Part of the land he reserved to himself, forming the

(a) Co. Cop. s. 32, Tr., p. 58. (b) Ante, p. 110.

Definition of copyholds.

demesnes of the manor, properly so called (c): other parts of the land he granted out to his villeins or slaves, permitting them, as an act of pure grace and favour, to enjoy such lands at his pleasure ; but sometimes enjoining, in return for such favour, the performance of certain agricultural services, such as ploughing the demesne, carting the manure, and other servile works. Such lands as remained, generally the poorest, were the waste lands of the manor, over which rights of common were enjoyed by the tenants (d). Thus arose a manor, of which the tenants formed two classes, the freeholders and the villeins. For each of these classes a separate Court was held: for the freeholders, a Court Baron (e); for the villeins another, since called a Customary Court (f). Customary In the former Court the suitors were the judges; in the latter the lord only, or his steward (q). In some manors the villeins were allowed life interests; but the grants were not extended so as to admit any of their issue in a mode similar to that in which the heirs of freemen became entitled on their ancestors' decease. Hence arose copyholds for lives. In other manors a greater degree Copyholds for of liberality was shown by the lords; and, on the decease of a tenant, the lord permitted his eldest son, or sometimes all the sons, or sometimes the youngest, and afterwards other relations, to succeed him by way of heirship; for which privilege, however, the payment of a fine was usually required on the admittance of the heir to the tenancy. Frequently the course of descent of estates of freehold was chosen as the model for such inheritances; but, in many cases, dispositions the most capricious were adopted by the lord, and in time became the custom of the manor. Thus arose copyholds of

(c) Co. Cop. s. 14, Tr. 11; Attorney-General v. Parsons, 2 Cro. & Jerv. 279, 308.

(d) 2 Black. Com. 90.

(e) Ante, p. 112.

(f) 2 Watkins on Copyholds, 4, 5; 1 Scriven on Copyholds, 5, 6.

(g) Co. Litt, 58 a.

Y 2

Court.

lives.

Copyholds of inheritance.

Surrender and admittance.

The will of the lord gradually controlled by the custom.

Rise of copyholders to certainty of tenure. inheritance. Again, if a villein wished to part with his own parcel of land to some other of his fellows, the lord would allow him to surrender or yield up again the land, and then, on payment of a fine, would indulgently admit as his tenant, on the same terms, the other, to whose use the surrender had been made. Thus arose the method, now prevalent, of conveying copyholds by surrender into the hands of the lord to the use of the alience, and the subsequent admittance of the latter. But by long custom and continued indulgence, that which at first was a pure favour gradually grew up into a right. The will of the lord, which had originated the custom, came at last to be controlled by it (h).

The rise of the copyholder from a state of uncertainty to certainty of tenure appears to have been very gradual. Britton, who wrote in the reign of Edward I. (i), thus describes this tenure under the name of villeinage : " Villeinage is to hold part of the demesnes of any lord entrusted to hold at his will by villein services to improve for the advantage of the lord." And he adds that, " In manors of ancient demesne there were pure villeins of blood and of tenure, who might be ousted of their tenements at the will of their lord"(h). In the reign of Edward III., however, a case occurred in which the entry of a lord on his copyholder was adjudged lawful, because he did not do his services, by which he broke the custom of the manor (l), which seems to show that the lord could not, at the time, have ejected his tenant without cause (m). And in the reign of Edward IV. the judges gave to copyholders a certainty

(h) 2 Black. Com. 93 et seq., 147; Wright's Tenures, 215 et seq.; 1 Scriv. Cop. 46; Garland v. Jekyll, 2 Bing. 292.

(i) 2 Reeves's History of Eng. Law, 280.

(k) Britton, 165.

(1) Year Book, 43 Edw. III. 25 a.

(m) 4 Rep. 21 b. Mr. Hallam states that a passage in Britton, which had escaped his search, is said to confirm the doctrine, that, so long as the copyholder did of tenure, by allowing to them an action of trespass on ejection by their lords without just cause (a). "Now," says Sir Edward Coke (o), "copyholders stand upon a sure ground; now they weigh not their lord's displeasure; they shake not at every sudden blast of wind; they eat, drink and sleep securely; only having a special care of the main chance, namely, to perform carefully what dutics and services soever their tenure doth exact and custom doth require; then let lord frown, the copyholder cares not, knowing himself safe." A copyholder has, accordingly, now as good a title as a freeholder; in some respects a better; for all the transactions relating to the conveyance of copyholds are entered in the court rolls of the manor, and thus a record is preserved of the title of all the tenants.

In pursuing our subject, let us now follow the same course as we have adopted with regard to freeholds, and consider, first, the estates which may be holden in copyhold lands; and, secondly, the modes of their alienation.

continue to perform the regular stipulations of his tenure, the lord was not at liberty to divest him of his estate. 3 Hallam's Middle Ages, 261. Mr. Hallam was, perhaps, misled in his supposition by a quotation from Britton made by Lord Coke (Co. Litt. 61 a), in which the doctrine laid down by Britton as to socmen, is erroneously applied to copyholders. The passage from Britton, cited above, is also subsequently cited by Lord Coke, but with a pointing which spoils the sense.

(n) Co. Litt. 61 a. Equity has also a concurrent jurisdiction.
Andrews v. Hulse, 4 Kay & J. 392.
(o) Co. Cop. s. 9, Tr. p. 6.

CHAPTER I.

OF ESTATES IN COPYHOLDS.

Estates of copyhold.

An estate at will.

WITH regard to the estates which may be holden in copyholds, in strict legal intendment a copyholder can have but one estate; and that is an estate at will, the smallest estate known to the law, being determinable at the will of either party. For though custom has now rendered copyholders independent of the will of their lords, yet all copyholds, properly so called, are still expressly stated, in the court rolls of manors, to be holden at the will of the lord(a); and, more than this, estates in copyholds are still liable to some of the incidents of a mere estate at will. We have seen that, in ancient times, the law laid great stress on the feudal possession, or seisin, of lands, and that this possession could only be had by the holder of an estate of freehold, that is, an estate sufficiently important to belong to a free man (b). Now copyholders in ancient times belonged to the class of villeins or bondsmen, and held at the will of the lord lands of which the lord himself was alone feudally possessed. In other words, the lands held by the copyholders still remained part and parcel of the lord's manor; and the freehold of these lands still continued vested in the lord; and this is the case at the present day with regard to all copyholds. The lord of the manor is actually seised of all the lands in the possession of his copyhold tenants (c). He has not a mere incorporcal seignory over these as he has over his freehold tenants, or those who hold of him lands, once part of the manor, but which were anciently granted to freemen and their heirs (d). Of all the copyholds he is the feudal possessor; and the seisin he has thus is not without its substantial advantages. The lord having a legal estate in fee simple in the copyhold lands, possesses all the rights incident to such an estate (e), controlled only by the custom of the manor, which is now the tenant's safeguard. Thus he possesses a right to all mines and The lord has a minerals under the lands (f), and also to all timber right to mines and timber. growing on the surface, even though planted by the tenant(q). These rights, however, are somewhat interfered with by the rights which custom has given to the copyhold tenants; for the lord cannot come upon the lands to open his mines, or to cut his timber, without the copyholder's leave. And hence it is that timber is so seldom to be seen upon lands subject to copyhold tenure (h). Again, if a copyholder should grant a lease Lease of copyof his copyhold lands, beyond the term of a year, with- holds. out his lord's consent, such a lease would be a cause of forfeiture to the lord, unless it were authorized by a special custom of the manor(i). For such an act would be imposing on the lord a tenant of his own lands, without the authority of custom: and custom alone is the life of all copyhold assurances (i). So a copyholder

The lord is actually seised of all the copyhold lands of his manor.

> (a) 1 Watk. Cop. 44, 45; 1 (c) Watk. Descents, 51 (59, Scriv. Cop. 605. 4th ed.) (b) Ante, pp. 22, 130.

(d) Ante, pp. 297, 298.

(e) Ante, p. 74.

(f) 1 Watk. Cop. 333; 1 Seriv. Cop. 25, 508. See Bowser v. Maclean, 2 De G., F. & J. 415.

(g) 1 Watk. Cop. 332; 1 Scriv. Cop. 499.

(h) There is a common proverb, "The oak scorns to grow except on free land." It is certain that in Sussex and in other parts of England the boundaries of copyholds may be traced by the entire absence of trees on one side of a line, and their luxuriant growth on the other. 3rd Rep. of Real Property Commissioners, p. 15.

(i) 1 Watk. Cop. 327; 1 Seriv. Cop. 544; Doe d. Robinson v. Bousfield, 6 Q. B. 492.

(j) By stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, a licence to demise copyhold lands is subjected to a stamp duty of 10s.; but if the clear yearly value of the estate shall be expressed in the licence, and shall not exceed £75, the duty is the same only as on a lease at a yearly rent equal to such yearly cannot commit any waste either voluntary by opening mines, cutting down timber, or pulling down buildings, or permissive, by neglecting to repair. For the land, with all that is under it or on it, belongs to the lord: the tenant has nothing but a customary right to enjoy the occupation; and if he should in any way exceed this right, a cause of forfeiture to his lord would at once accrue (k).

Waste.

A peculiar species of copyhold tenure prevails in the north of England, and is to be found also in other parts of the kingdom, particularly within manors of the tenure of ancient demesne (l); namely, a tenure by copy of court roll, but not expressed to be at the will of the lord. The lands held by this tenure are denominated customary freeholds. This tenure has been the subject of a great deal of learned discussion (m); but the Courts of Law have now decided that, as to these lands, as well as to pure copyholds, the freehold is in the lord, and not in the tenant (n). If a conjecture may be hazarded on so doubtful a subject, it would seem that these customary freeholds were originally held at the will of the lords, as well as those proper copyholds in which the will is still expressed as the condition of tenure (o); but that these value under the act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97. See post, "Of a term of years." By stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, s. 3, the lords of settled manors may be empowered to grant licences to their copyhold tenants to lease their lands to the same extent and for the same purposes as leases may be authorized of freehold land. Sce ante, p. 26.

(k) 1 Watk. Cop. 331; 1 Scriv. Cop. 526. See Doe d. Grubb v. Earl of Burlington, 5 Barn. & Adol. 507. (1) Britt. 164 b, 165 a. See ante, p. 121.

(m) 2 Scriv. Cop. 665.

(n) Stephenson v. Hill, 3 Burr.
1278; Doe d. Reay v. Huntington,
4 East, 271; Doe d. Cook v. Danvers, 7 East, 299; Burrell v. Dodd,
3 Bos. & Pul. 378.

(o) See Bract. lib. 4, fol. 208 b, 209 a; Co. Cop. s. 32, Tr. p. 57. In Stephenson v. Hill, 3 Burr. 1278, Lord Mansfield says, that copyholders had acquired a permanent estate in their lands before these persons had done so.

Customary freeholds.

The freehold is in the lord. tenants early acquired, by their lord's indulgence, a right to hold their lands on performance of certain fixed services as the condition of their tenure; and the compliment now paid to the lords of other copyholds, in expressing the tenure to be at their will, was, consequently, in the case of these customary freeholds, long since dropped. That the tenants have not the fee simple in themselves appears evident from the fact, that the right to mines and timber, on the lands held by this tenure, belongs to the lord in the same manner as in other copyholds(p). Neither can the tenants generally grant leases without the lord's consent (q). The lands are. moreover, said to be parcel of the manors of which they are held, denoting that in law they belong, like other copyholds, to the lord of the manor, and are not merely held of him, like the estates of the freeholders (r). In law, therefore, the estates of these tenants cannot, in respect of their lords, be regarded as any other than estates at will, though this is not now actually expressed. If there should be any customary freeholds in which Freehold in the above characteristics, or most of them, do not exist, the tenant. such may with good reason be regarded as the actual freehold estates of the tenants. The tenants would then possess the rights of other freeholders in fee simple, subject only to a customary mode of alienation. That such a state of things may, and in some cases does exist, is the opinion of some very eminent lawyers(s).

But he does not state where he obtained his information.

(p) Doe d. Reay v. Huntington, 4 East, 271, 273; Stephenson v. Hill, 3 Burr. 1277, arguendo.

(q) Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299, 301, 314.

(r) Burrel v. Dodd, 3 Bos. & Pul. 378, 381; Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 320, 321.

(s) Sir Edward Coke, Co. Litt. 59 b; Sir Matthew Hale, Co.

Litt. 59 b, n. (1); Sir W. Blackstone, Considerations on the Question, &c.; Sir John Leach, Bingham v. Woodgate, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 32, 1 Tamlyn, 138. Tenements within the limits of the ancient borough of Kirby-in-Kendal, in Westmoreland, appear to be an instance; Busher, app., Thompson, resp, 4 C. B. 48. The freehold is in the tenants, and the customary mode of conveyance has always been by

OF COPYHOLDS.

But a recurrence to first principle seems to show that the question, whether the freehold is in the lord or in the tenant, is to be answered, not by an appeal to learned dicta or conflicting decisions, but by ascertaining in each case whether the well-known rights of freeholders, such as to cut timber and dig mines, are vested in the lord or in the tenant.

It appears then that, with regard to the lord, a copyholder is only a tenant at will. But a copyholder, who has been admitted tenant on the court rolls of a manor, stands, with respect to other copyholders, in a similar position to a freeholder who has the seisin. The legal estate in the copyholds is said to be in such a person in the same manner as the legal estate of freeholds belongs to the person who is seised. The necessary changes which are constantly occurring of the persons who from time to time are tenants on the rolls, form occasionally a source of considerable profit to the lords. For by the customs of manors, on every change of tenancy, whether by death or alienation, fines of more or less amount become payable to the lord. By the customs of some manors the fine payable was anciently arbitrary; but in modern times, fines, even when arbitrary by custom, are restrained to two years' improved value of the land after deducting quit rents (t). Occasionally a fine is due on the change of the lord; but, in this case, the change must be by the act of God and not by any act of the party (u). The tenants on the rolls, when once admitted, hold customary estates analogous to the estates which may be holden in freeholds. These estates of copyholders are only quasi freeholds; but as nearly as the rights of the lord, and the custom deed of grant, or bargain and sale, without livery of seisin, lease for a year, or inrolment. Some of the judges, however, seemed to doubt the validity of such a custom.

(t) 1 Seriv. Cop. 384.

(u) 1 Watk. Cop. 285.

Copyholders, when admitted, in a similar position to freeholders having the seisin.

Fines.

Customary estates analogous to freehold. of each manor will allow, such estates possess the same incidents as the freehold estates, of which we have already spoken. Thus there may be a copyhold estate E_{state} for life; for life; and some manors admit of no other estates, the lives being continually renewed as they drop. And in those manors in which estates of inheritance, as in fee simple and fee tail, are allowed, a grant to a man simply, without mentioning his heirs, will confer only a customary estate for his life (v). But as the customs of manors, having frequently originated in mere caprice, are very various, in some manors the words "to him and his," or "to him and his assigns," or "to him and his sequels in right," will create a customary estate in fee simple, although the word heirs may not be used (x).

It will be remembered that, anciently, if a grant had Estate pur been made of freehold lands to B. simply, without men- autre vie. tioning his heirs, during the life of A., and B. had died first, the first person who entered after the decease of B. might lawfully hold the lands during the residue of the life of A.(y). And this general occupancy was abolished by the Statute of Frauds. But copyhold lands were never subject to any such law(z). For the seisin or feudal possession of all such lands belongs, as we have seen (a), to the lord of the manor, subject to the customary rights of occupation belonging to his tenants. In the case of copyholds, therefore, the lord of the manor after the decease of B. would, until lately, have been entitled to hold the lands during the residue of A.'s life; and the Statute of Frauds had no application to such a case (b). But now, by the act for (v) Co. Cop. s. 49, Tr. p. 114.

 Barn. & Cress. 706; 7 Dow. &

 Sce ante, pp. 18, 134.
 Ryl. 190.

 (x) 1 Watk. Cop. 109.
 (a) Antc, p. 326.

(y) Ante, p. 20.

(z) Doe d. Foster v. Scott, 4

(b) 1 Scriv. Cop. 63, 108; 1

Watk. Cop. 302.

331

the amendment of the laws with respect to wills (c), the testamentary power is extended to copyhold or customary estates pur autre vie (d); and the same provision, as to the application of the estate by the executors or administrators of the grantee, as is contained with reference to freeholds (e), is extended also to customary and copyhold estates (f). The grant of an estate pur autre vie, in copyholds, may, however, be extended, by express words, to the heirs of the grantee (g). And in this event the heir will, in case of intestacy, be entitled to hold during the residue of the life of the cestui que vie, subject to the debts of his ancestor the grantee (h).

Estate tail in copyholds.

An estate tail in copyholds stands upon a peculiar footing, and has a history of its own, which we shall now endeavour to give (i). This estate, it will be remembered, is an estate given to a man and the heirs of his body. With regard to freeholds, we have seen (k)that an estate given to a man and the heirs of his body was, like all other estates, at first inalienable; so that no act which the tenant could do could bar his issue, or expectant heirs, of their inheritance. But, in an early period of our history, a right of alienation appears gradually to have grown up, empowering every freeholder to whose estate there was an expectant heir to disinherit such heir, by gift or sale of the lands. A man, to whom lands had been granted to hold to him and the heirs of

(c) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26.

(d) Sect. 3.

(e) Ante, p. 21.

(f) Sect. 6.

(g) 1 Scriv. Cop. 64; 1 Watk. Cop. 303.

(h) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.c. 26, s. 6.

(i) The attempt here made to explain this subject is grounded on the authorities and reasoning of Mr. Serjt. Scriven. (1 Scriv. Cop. 67 et seq.) Mr. Watkins sets out with right principles, but seems strangely to stumble on the wrong conclusion. (1 Watk. Cop. chap. 4.)

(k) Ante, p. 34 et seq.

his body, was accordingly enabled to alien the moment a child or expectant heir of his body was born to him; and this right of alienation at last extended to the possibility of reverter belonging to the lord, as well as to the expectancy of the heir (l); till at length it was so well established as to require an act of parliament for its abolition. The statute De donis (m) accordingly The statute restrained all alienation by tenants of lands which had De donis. been granted to themselves and the heirs of their bodies; so that the lands might not fail to descend to their issue after their death, or to revert to the donors or their heirs if issue should fail. This statute was passed avowedly to restrain that right of alienation, of the prior existence of which the statute itself is the best proof. And this right, in respect of fee simple estates, was soon afterwards acknowledged and confirmed by the statute of Quia emptores (n). But during all this period copy- Copyholders holders were in a very different state from the freemen, anciently in a who were the objects of the above statutes (o). Copy- state from freeholders were most of them mere slaves, tilling the soil of their lord's demesne, and holding their little tenements at his will. The right of an ancestor to bind his heir (p), with which right, as we have seen (q), the power to alienate freeholds commenced, never belonged to a copyholder (r). And, till recently, copyhold lands in fee simple descended to the customary heir, quite unaffected by any bond debts of his ancestor by which the heir of his freehold estates might have been bound (s). It would be absurd, therefore, to suppose that the right of alienation of copyhold estates arose in connexion

(1) Ante, p. 40.

(n) 18 Edw. I. c. 1.

(o) In the preamble of the statute De donis, the tenants are spoken of as feoffees, and as able by deed and feoffment to bar their donors, showing that freeholders only were intended. And in the statute of Quia emptores freemen are expressly mentioned.

(p) Ante, p. 75.

(q) Ante, pp. 36-38.

(r) Eylet v. Lane and Pers, Cro. Eliz. 380.

(s) 4 Rep. 22 a.

holders.

OF COPYHOLDS.

with the right of freeholders. The two classes were then quite distinct. The one were poor and neglected, the other powerful and consequently protected (t). The one held their tenements at the will of their lords; the other alienated in spite of them. The one were subject to the whims and caprices of their individual masters; the other were governed only by the general laws and customs of the realm.

Now, with regard to an estate given to a copyholder and the heirs of his body, the lords of different manors appear to have acted differently, - some of them permitting alienation on issue being born, and others forbidding it altogether. And from this difference appears to have arisen the division of manors, in regard to estates tail, into two classes, namely, those in which there is no custom to entail, and those in which such a custom exists. In manors in which there is no custom to entail, a gift of copyholds, to a man and the heirs of his body, will give him an estate analogous to the fee simple conditional which a freeholder would have acquired under such a gift before the passing of the statute De donis (u). Before he has issue, he will not be able to alien; but after issue are born to him, he may alienate at his pleasure (v). In this case the right of alienation appears to be of a very ancient origin, having arisen from the liberality of the lord in permitting his tenants to

(t) The famous provision of Magna Charta, c. 29,—" Nullus liber homo capiatur vel imprisonetur aut dissesiatur de aliquo libero tenemento suo, &c., nisi per legale judicium parium suorum vel per legem terræ. Nulli vendemus, nulli negabimus, aut differemus reetum vel justiciam,"—whatever classes of persons it may have been subsequently construed to include—plainly points to a distinction then existing between free and not free. Why else should the word liber have been used at all?

(u) Ante, pp. 35, 41; Doe d. Blesard v. Simpson, 4 New Cases, 333; 3 Man. & Gran. 929.

(v) Doe d. Spencer v. Clark, 5 Barn. & Ald. 458.

As to manors where there is no custom to entail.

Alienation was anciently allowed. stand on the same footing in this respect as freeholders then stood.

But, as to those manors in which the alienation of when alienathe estate in question was not allowed, the history ap- tion was not allowed. pears somewhat different. The estate, being inalienable, descended, of course, from father to son, according to the customary line of descent. A perpetual entail was thus set up, and a custom to entail established in the A custom to manor. But in process of time the original strictness of entail was estathe lord defeated his own end. For, the evils of such an entail, which had been felt as to freeholds, after the passing of the statute $De \ donis(x)$, became felt also as to copyholds (y). And, as the copyholder advanced in importance, different devices were resorted to for the purpose of effecting a bar to the entail; and, in different manors, different means were held sufficient for this purpose. In some, a customary recovery was suffered, Customary rein analogy to the common recovery, by which an entail of freeholds had been cut of (z). In others, the same effect was produced by a preconcerted forfeiture of the Forfeiture and lands by the tenant, followed by a re-grant from the lord re-grant. of an estate in fee simple. And in others a conveyance by surrender, the ordinary means, became sufficient for the purpose; and the presumption was, that a surrender would bar the estate tail until a contrary custom was shown (a). Thus it happened that in all manors, in which there existed a custom to entail, a right grew up, empowering the tenant in tail, by some means or other, at once to alienate the lands. He thus ultimately became placed in a better position than the tenant to him and the heirs of his body in a manor where alienation was originally permitted. For, such a tenant can now only alienate after he has had issue. But a tenant in (x) Ante, p. 41. (y) 1 Scriv. Cop. 70. (z) Ante, p. 44.

(a) Goold v. White, 1 Kay, 683.

covery.

tail, where the custom to entail exists, need not wait for any issue, but may at once destroy the fetters by which his estate has been attempted to be bound.

The beneficial enactment before referred to (b), by which fines and common recoveries of freeholds were abolished, also contains provisions applicable to entails of copyholds. Instead of the cumbrous machinery of a customary recovery, or a forfeiture and re-grant, it substitutes, in every case, a simple conveyance by surrender (c), the ordinary means for conveying a customary estate in fee simple. When the estate tail is in remainder, the necessary consent of the protector (d)may be given, either by deed, to be entered on the court rolls of the manor (e), or by the concurrence of the protector in the surrender, in which case the memorandum or entry of the surrender must expressly state that such consent has been given (f).

The same free and ample power of alienation, which belongs to an estate in fee simple in freehold lands, appertains also to the like estate in copyholds. The liberty of alienation inter vivos appears, as to copyholds, to have had little if any precedence, in point of time, over the liberty of alienation by will. Both were, no doubt, at first an indulgence, which subsequently ripened into a right. And these rights of voluntary alienation long outstripped the liability to involuntary alienation for the payment of the debts of the tenants; for, till the year 1838, copyhold lands of deceased debtors were under no liability to their creditors, even where the heirs of the debtor were expressly bound (g). And the crown had no further privilege than any other creditor.

(b) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74;	(e) Sect. 51.
ante, p. 46.	(f) Sect. 52.
(c) Sect. 50.	(g) 4 Rep. 22 a; 1 Watk. Copy-
(d) See ante, p. 51.	holds, 140.

Entails now barred by surrender.

Estate in fee simple.

Debts.

Crown debts.

But now, all estates in fee simple, whether freehold, customary or copyhold, are rendered liable to the payment of all the just debts of the deceased tenant (h). Creditors who had obtained judgments against their Judgment debtors were also, till the year 1838, unable to take any debts. part of the copyhold lands of their debtors under the writ of elegit (i). But the act, by which the remedies of judgment creditors were extended (j), enables the sheriff, under the writ of elegit, to deliver execution of copyhold or customary, as well as of freehold lands; and purchasers of copyholds thus became bound by all judgments which had been entered up against their vendors. But if any purchaser should have had no notice of any judgment, it would seem that he was protected by the clause in a subsequent act (k), which provided, that, as to purchasers without notice, no judgment should bind any lands, otherwise than it would have bound such purchasers under the old law. By a later act, even if the purchaser had notice of a judgment, he was not bound unless a writ of execution on the judgment should have been issued and registered before the execution of his conveyance and the payment of his purchase money; nor even then unless the execution should have been put in force within three calendar months from the time when it was registered (l). And now, as we have seen, the lien of all judgments of a date subsequent to the 29th of July, 1864, has been abolished altogether (m).

Copyholds are equally liable, with freeholds, to invo- Bankruptcy. luntary alienation on the bankruptcy of the tenant.

(h) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 104. (i) See ante, p. 78; 1 Scriv. Copyholds, 60.

(j) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 11.

(k) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5; ante, p. 81. (1) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 1; ante, pp. 81, 82. (m) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112; ante, p. 82.

R.P.

The Court of Bankruptcy has now power to dispose, for the benefit of the creditors, of any estate or interest at law, or in equity, which at adjudication or afterwards, before order of discharge, a bankrupt has in any copyhold or customary land, and to make an order vesting the land, or such estate or interest as the bankrupt has therein, in such person, and in such manner, as the court shall think fit (n). But every person to whom any such conveyance shall be made, shall, before he enters into or takes any profit of the same, compound with the lord of the manor for the fines, dues, and other services theretofore usually paid for the same; and thereupon the lord shall, at the next or any subsequent court to be holden for the manor, grant to the vendee, upon request, the said lands for such estate or interest as shall have been so conveyed to him, reserving the ancient rents, customs, and services, and shall admit him tenant of the same (o).

Descent of an estate in fee simple in copyholds. The descent of an estate in fee simple in copyholds is governed by the custom of descent which may happen to prevail in the manor; but, subject to any such custom, the provisions contained in the act for the amendment of the law of inheritance (p) apply to copyhold as well as freehold hereditaments, whatever be the customary course of their descent. As, in the case of freeholds, the lands of a person dying intestate descend at once to his heir (q), so the heir of a copyholder becomes, immediately on the decease of his ancestor, tenant of the lands, and may exercise any act of ownership before the ceremony of his admittance has taken place (r). But as between himself and the lord, he is not completely a tenant till he has been admitted.

(n) Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 114, repealing stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 209. And as to estates tail of bankrupt copyholders, see stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, ss. 55-66; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 208.

- (o) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 210.
 - (p) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106. (q) Ante, p. 88.

The tenure of an estate in fee simple in copyholds Tenure. involves, like the tenure of freeholds, an oath of fealty Fealty. from the tenant (s), together with suit to the customary Suit of Court. court of the manor. Escheat to the lord on failure of Escheat. heirs, or on corruption of blood by attainder (t), is also an incident of copyhold tenure; but the lord of a copyholder has the advantage over the lord of a freeholder in this respect, that, whilst freehold lands in fee simple are forfeited to the crown by the treason of the tenant, the copyholds of a traitor escheat to the lord of the manor of which they are held(u). Rents(v) also of Rent. small amount are not unfrequent incidents of the tenure of copyhold estates. And reliefs (x) may, by special Relief. custom, be payable by the heir (y). The other incidents of copyhold tenure depend on the arbitrary customs of each particular manor; for this tenure, as we have seen (z), escaped the destruction in which the tenures of all freehold lands (except free and common socage, and frankalmoign) were involved by the act of 12 Car. II. c. 24.

A curious incident to be met with in the tenure of some copyhold estates is the right of the lord, on the death of a tenant, to seize the tenant's best beast, or other chattel, under the name of a heriot (a). Heriots Heriots. appear to have been introduced into England by the (r) 1 Scriv. Cop. 357; Right d. Taylor v. Banks, 3 Bar. & Ad. 664; King v. Turner, 1 My. & K. 456; Doe d. Perry v. Wilson, 5 Ad. & Ell. 321.

- (s) 2 Scriv. Cop. 732.
- (t) See ante, pp. 116 et seq.; Rex v. Willes, 3 B. & Ald. 511.

(u) Lord Cornwallis's case, 2 Ventr. 38; 1 Watk. Cop. 340; 1 Scriv. Cop. 522.

- (v) Ante, p. 115.
- (x) Ante, pp. 111, 113, 115.
- (y) 1 Scriv. Cop. 436.
- (z) Ante, p. 114.
- (a) 1 Scriv. Cop. 437 et seq.

Danes. The heriot of a military tenant was his arms and habiliments of war, which belonged to the lord, for the purpose of equipping his successor. And, in analogy to this feudal custom, the lords of manors usually expected that the best beast or other chattel of each tenant, whether he were a freeman or a villein, should on his decease be left to them (b). This legacy to the lord was usually the first bequest in the tenant's will (c); and, when the tenant died intestate, the heriot of the lord was to be taken in the first place out of his effects (d), unless indeed, as not unfrequently happened, the lord seized upon the whole of the goods (e). To the goods of the villein he was indeed entitled, the villein himself being his lord's property. And from the difference between the two classes of freemen and villein has perhaps arisen the circumstance, that, whilst heriots from freeholders seldom occur (f), heriots from copyholders remain to this day, in many manors, a badge of the ancient servility of the tenure. But the right of the lord is now confined to such a chattel as the custom of the manor, grown into a law, will enable him to take (q). The kind of chattel which may be taken for a heriot varies in different manors. And in some cases the heriot consists merely of a money-payment.

Joint tenancy and in common. All kinds of estates in copyholds, as well as in freeholds, may be held in joint tenancy or in common; and an illustration of the unity of a joint tenancy occurs in

(b) Bract. 86 a; 2 Black. Com. 423, 424.

(c) Bract. 60 a; Fleta, lib. 2, cap. 57.

(d) Bract. 60 b; Fleta, lib. 2, cap. 57.

(e) See Articuli observanda per provisionem episcoporum Angliæ, s. 25, Matth. Paris, 951; Additamenta, p. 201 (Wats's ed. Lon. 1640).

(f) By the custom of the manor of South Tawton, otherwise 1tton, in the county of Devon, heriots are still due from the freeholders of the manor; Damerell v. Protheroe, 10 Q. B. 20; and in Sussex and some parts of Surrey heriots from freeholders are not unfrequent.

(g) 2 Watk. Cop. 129.

the fact, that the admission, on the court rolls of a manor, of one joint tenant, is the admission of all his companions; and on the decease of any of them the survivors or survivor, as they take no new estate, require no new admittance (h). The jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery in enforcing partitions between joint tenants and tenants in common did not formerly extend to copyhold lands (i). But by a recent enactment (j) this jurisdiction has been extended to the partition of copyholds as well as freeholds.

The rights of lords of manors to fines and heriots, Act for comrents, reliefs and customary services, together with the mutation of certain manolord's interests in the timber growing on copyhold lands, rial rights. have been found productive of considerable inconvenience to copyhold tenants, without any sufficient corresponding advantage to the lords. An act of parliament (k) was accordingly passed a few years ago, by which the commutation of these rights and interests, together with the lord's rights in mines and minerals, if expressly agreed on, has been greatly facilitated. The machinery of the act is, in many respects, similar to that by which the commutation of tithes was effected. The rights and interests of the lord are changed, by the commutation, into a rent charge varying or not, as may be agreed on, with the price of corn, together with a small fixed fine on death or alienation, in no case exceeding the sum of five shillings (1). By the same act facilities were also afforded for the enfranchisement of Enfranchise-ment.

(h) 1 Watk. Cop. 272, 277. (i) Jope v. Morshead, 6 Beav. 213.

(j) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 85. See also stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 30.

(k) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35; amended by stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 23, further amended and explained by stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 55, continued by stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 53, extended by stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, and continued by stats. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 53; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 81, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 73.

(1) Stats. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 14; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 41.

copyhold lands, or the conveyance of the freehold of such lands from the lord to the tenant, whereby the copyhold tenure, with all its incidents, is for ever destroyed. The enfranchisement of copyholds was authorized to be made, either in consideration of money to be paid to the lord, or of an annual rent charge, varying with the price of corn, issuing out of the lands enfranchised, or in consideration of the conveyance of other lands(m). Provision was also made for charging the money, paid for enfranchisement, on the lands enfranchised, by way of mortgage (n). The principal object of these enactments was to provide for the case of the lands being in settlement, or vested in parties not otherwise capable of at once entering into a complete arrangement; but no provision was made for compulsory enfranchisement. Recently, however, acts have been passed to make the enfranchisement of copyholds compulsory at the instance either of the tenant or of the lord (o). If the enfranchisement be made at the instance of the tenant, the compensation is to be a gross sum of money, to be paid at the time of the completion of the enfranchisement, or to be charged on the land by way of mortgage; and where the enfranchisement is effected at the instance of the lord, the compensation is to be an annual rent charge, to be issuing out of the lands enfranchised ; subject to the right of the parties, with the sanction of the commissioners appointed under the act, to agree that the compensation shall be either a gross sum or a yearly rent charge, or a conveyance of land to be settled to the same uses as the manor is settled (p). It is also provided that in any enfranchisement to be hereafter effected under the before-

(m) Stats. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, ss.
 56, 59, 73, 74, 75; 6 & 7 Vict. c.
 23; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 55, s. 5.

(n) Stats. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, ss. 70, 71, 72; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 55, s. 4. (o) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, amended by stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94.

(p) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 7; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 21.

The copyhold Acts, 1852 and 1858.

mentioned act, it shall not be imperative to make the enfranchisement rent charge variable with the prices of grain; but the same may, at the option of the parties or at the discretion of the commissioners, as the case may require, be fixed in money or be made variable as aforesaid (q). Enfranchisements under these acts are irrespective of the validity of the lord's title(r). By the Copyhold Act, 1858, an award of enfranchisement, confirmed by the Commissioners, has been substituted for the deed of enfranchisement required by the act of 1852 (s). The acts also provide for the extinguishment of heriots due by custom from tenants of freeholds and customary freeholds (t). But no enfranchisement under these acts is to affect the estate or rights of any lord or tenant in any mines or minerals within or under the lands enfranchised or any other lands, unless with the express consent in writing of such lord or tenant (u). And nothing therein contained is to interfere with any enfranchisement which may be made irrespective of the acts, where the parties competent to do so shall agree on such enfranchisement (x). Where all parties are sui juris and agree to an enfranchisement, it may at any time be made by a simple conveyance of the fee simple from the lord to his tenant (y).

(q) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51,
s. 41. See also stat. 21 & 22 Vict.
c. 94, s. 11.

(r) Kerr v. Pawson, Rolls, 4 Jur.
N. S. 425; S. C. 25 Beav. 394.
(s) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94,

s. 10.

(t) Stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 7, repealing stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 27.

(u) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 48. See also stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 14.

(x) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 55.

(y) 1 Watk. Cop. 362; 1 Scriv. Cop. 653.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE ALIENATION OF COPYHOLDS.

THE mode in which the alienation of copyholds is at present effected, so far at least as relates to transactions inter vivos, still retains much of the simplicity, as well as the inconvenience, of the original method in which the alienation of these lands was first allowed to take The copyholder surrenders the lands into the place. hands of his lord, who thereupon admits the alience. For the purpose of effecting these admissions, and of informing the lord of the different events happening within his manor, as well as for settling disputes, it was formerly necessary that his Customary Court, to which all the copyholders were suitors, should from time to time be held. At this Court, the copyholders present were called the homage, on account of the ceremony of homage which they were all anciently bound to perform to their lord (a). In order to form a Court, it was formerly necessary that two copyholders at least should be present (b). But, in modern times, the holding of courts having degenerated into little more than an inconvenient formality, it has been provided by a recent act, that Customary Courts may be holden without the presence of any copyholder; but no proclamation made at any such courts is to affect the title or interest of any person not present, unless notice thereof shall be duly served on him within one month (c); and it is also provided, that where, by the custom of any manor, the lord is authorized, with the consent of the homage, to grant

(a) Ante, p. 111.

(b) 1 Scriv. Cop. 289.

(c) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 86.

Customary Court.

Homage.

Courts may now be holden without the presence of any copyholder. any common or waste lands of the manor, the Court must be duly summoned and holden as before the act(d). No Court can lawfully be held out of the manor; but by immemorial custom, Courts for several manors may be held together within one of them (e). In order that the transactions at the Customary Court may be preserved, a book is provided, in which a correct account of all the proceedings is entered by a person duly authorized. This book, or a series of them, forms the court Court rolls. rolls of the manor. The person who makes the entries Steward. is the steward; and the court rolls are kept by him, but subject to the right of the tenants to inspect them (f). This officer also usually presides at the Court of the manor.

Before adverting to alienation by surrender and ad- Grants. mittance, it will be proper to mention, that, whenever any lands which have been demisable time out of mind by copy of court roll, fall into the hands of the lord, he is at liberty to grant them to be held by copy at his will, according to the custom of the manor, under the usual services (q). These grants may be made by the lord for the time being, whatever be the extent of his interest (h), so only that it be lawful: for instance, by a tenant for a term of life or years. But if the lord, instead of granting the lands by copy, should once make any conveyance of them at the common law, though it were only a lease for years, his power to grant by copy would for ever be destroyed (i). The steward, or his deputy, if duly authorized so to do, may also make grants, as well as the lord, whose servant he is (j). It was formerly doubtful whether the steward or his deputy could make grants of copyholds when out of the manor (k). But

(h) Doe d. Rayer v. Strickland, 2 (d) Sect. 91. (e) 1 Scriv. Cop. 6. Q. B. 792. (f) Ibid. 587, 588. (i) 1 Watk. Cop. 37. (g) 1 Watk. Cop. 23; 1 Scriv. (j) Ibid. 29. Cop. 111, (k) Ibid. 30.

Grants may now be made out of the manor.

by a recent act (l), to which we have before had occasion to refer, it is provided that the lord of any manor, or the steward, or deputy steward, may grant at any time, and at any place, either within or out of the manor, any lands parcel of the manor, to be held by copy of court roll, or according to the custom of the manor, which such lord shall for the time being be authorized and empowered to grant out to be held as aforesaid; so that such lands be granted for such estate, and to such person only, as the lord, steward, or deputy, shall be authorized or empowered to grant the same.

Alienation by surrender.

In Court.

When a copyholder is desirous of disposing of his lands, the usual method of alienation is by surrender of the lands into the hands of the lord (usually through the medium of his steward), to the use of the alienee and his heirs, or for any other customary estate which it may be wished to bestow. This surrender generally takes place by the symbolical delivery of a rod, by the tenant to the steward. It may be made either in or out of Court. If made in Court, it is of course entered on the court rolls, together with the other proceedings; and a copy of so much of the roll as relates to such surrender is made by the steward, signed by him and stamped like a purchase deed; it is then given to the purchaser as a muniment of his title (m). If the sur-Out of Court. render should be made out of Court, a memorandum of the transaction, signed by the parties and the steward, is made, in writing, and duly stamped as before (n). In

> (1) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 87.

(m) A form of such a copy of court roll will be found in Appendix (F).

(n) By stats. 55 Geo. III. c. 184, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, the stamp duty on the memorandum of a surrender if made out of court, or on the copy of court roll if made in court, is the same as on the sale or mortgage of a frechold estate; but if not made on a sale or mortgage, the duty is 11., where the clear yearly value exceeds that sum, and 5s. when it does not, with a further progressive duty of 10s. in the one case, and 5s. in the other.

order to give effect to a surrender made out of Court, Presentment, it was formerly necessary that due mention, or presentment, of the transaction, should be made by the suitors or homage assembled at the next, or, by special custom, at some other subsequent Court (o). And in this manner an entry of the surrender appeared on the court rolls, the steward entering the presentment as part of the business of the Court. But by the recent act, it is now unnecesnow provided that surrenders, copies of which may be sary. delivered to the lord, his steward, or deputy steward, shall be forthwith entered on the court rolls; which entry is to be deemed to be an entry made in pursuance of a presentment by the homage (p). So that in this case, the ceremony of presentment is now dispensed with. When the surrender has been made, the surrenderor still continues tenant to the lord, until the admittance of the surrenderee. The surrenderee acquires by Nature of surthe surrender merely an inchoate right, to be perfected renderee's right until adby admittance (q). This right was formerly inalienable mittance. at law, even by will, until rendered devisable by the new statute for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills (r); but, like a possibility in the case of freeholds, it may always be released, by deed, to the tenant of the lands (s).

A surrender of copyholds may be made by a man to Surrender the use of his wife, for such a surrender is not a direct to the use of a wife, conveyance, but operates only through the instrumentality of the lord (t). And a valid surrender may at any Surrender of time be made of the lands of a married woman, by her lands of the (o) 1 Watk. Cop. 79; 1 Scriv. Cop. 277.

(p) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 89.

(q) Doe d. Tofield v. Tofield, 11 East, 246; Rex v. Dame Jane St. John Mildmay, 5 B. & Ad. 254; Doe d. Winder v. Lawes, 7 Ad. &

E. 195.

(r) 7 Will. IV. & 1 Viet. c. 26, s. 3.

(s) Kite and Queinton's case, 4 Rep. 25 a; Co. Litt. 60 a.

(t) Co. Cop. s. 35; Tracts, p. 79.

husband and herself: she being on such surrender separately examined, as to her free consent, by the steward or his deputy (u).

Admittance.

When the surrender has been made, the surrenderee has, at any time, a right to procure admittance to the lands surrendered to his use; and, on such admittance, he becomes at once tenant to the lord, and is bound to pay him the customary fine. This admittance is usually taken immediately (v); but, if obtained at any future time, it will relate back to the surrender; so that, if the surrenderor should, subsequently to the surrender, have surrendered to any other person, the admittance of the former surrenderee, even though it should be subsequent to the admittance of the latter, will completely displace his estate (w). Formerly a steward was unable to admit tenants out of a manor (x); but, by the act for the improvement of copyhold tenure, the lord, his steward, or deputy, may admit at any time, and at any place, either within or out of the manor, and without holding a Court; and the admission is rendered valid without any presentment of the surrender, in pursuance of which admission may have been granted (y).

may now be had out of the manor.

Admittance

Alienation by will. The alienation of copyholds by will was formerly effected in a similar manner to alienation inter vivos. It was necessary that the tenant who wished to devise his

(u) 1 Watk. Cop. 63.

(v) See Appendix (F.)

(w) 1 Watk. Cop. 103.

(x) Doe d. Leach v. Whittaker,
5 B. & Ad. 409, 435; Doe d.
Gutteridge v. Sowerby, 7 C. B., N.
S. 599.

(y) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, ss.
88, 90. By stat. 13 & 14 Vict.
c. 97, the stamp duty on the memorandum of admittance, if made out of court, or on the copy of court roll of the admittance if made in court, is now reduced to half-a-crown on a sale or mortgage, with half-a-crown progressive duty; but in other cases the old duty charged by the stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 184, is still payable, namely, 1*l.*, when the clear yearly value exceeds that sum, and 5*s*. when it does not, though the progressive duty is now reduced to 10*s*, in the one case, and 5*s*. in the other. estate should first make a surrender of it to the use of his will. His will then formed part of the surrender, and no particular form of execution or attestation was necessary. The devisee, on the decease of his testator, was, until admittance, in the same position as a surrenderee (z). By a statute of Geo. III. (a), a devise of copyholds, without any surrender to the use of the will, was rendered as valid as if a surrender had been made (b). The act for the amendment of the laws with respect to wills requires that wills of copyhold lands should be executed and attested in the same manner as wills of freeholds (c). But a surrender to the use of the will is still unnecessary; and a surrenderee, or devisee, who has not been admitted, is now empowered to devise his interest (d). Formerly, the devise under a will was accustomed, at the next Customary Court held after the decease of his testator, to bring the will into Court; and a presentment was then made of the decease of the Presentment of will testator, and of so much of his will as related to the devise. After this presentment the devisee was admitted, according to the tenor of the will. But under the act for the improvement of copyhold tenure, the mere delivery to the lord, or his steward, or deputy steward, of a copy of the will is sufficient to authorize now unnecessary. its entry on the court rolls, without the necessity of any presentment; and the lord, or his steward, or deputy steward, may admit the devisee at once, without holding any Court for the purpose (e).

claim admit-

quousque.

tance, the lord may seize Sometimes, on the decease of a tenant, no person If no person came in to be admitted as his heir or devisee. In this

(z) Wainewright v. Elwell, 1 Mad. 627; Phillips v. Phillips, 1 My. & K. 649, 664.

(a) 55 Geo. III. c. 192, 12th July, 1815.

(b) Doe d. Nethercote v. Bartle, 5 B. & Ald, 492.

(c) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, ss. 2, 3, 4, 5, 9; see ante, p. 187. (d) Sect. 3.

(e) Stat. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, ss. 88, 89, 90.

Provision in favour of infants, married women, lunatics and idiots.

case the lord, after making due proclamation at three consecutive Courts of the manor for any person having right to the premises to claim the same and be admitted thereto, is entitled to seize the lands into his own hands quousque as it is called, that is, until some person claims admittance (f); and by the special custom of some manors, he is entitled to seize the lands absolutely. But as this right of the lord might be very prejudicial to infants, married women, and lunatics or idiots entitled to admittance to any copyhold lands, in consequence of their inability to appear, special provision has been made by act of parliament in their behalf (g). Such persons are accordingly authorized to appear, either in person or by their guardian, attorney or committee, as the case may be (h); and in default of such appearance, the lord or his steward is empowered to appoint any fit person to be attorney for that purpose only, and by such attorney to admit every such infant, married woman, lunatic or idiot and to impose the proper fine (i). If the fine be not paid, the lord may enter and receive the rents till it be satisfied out of them (k); and if the guardian of any infant, the husband of any married woman, or the committee of any lunatic or idiot, should pay the fine, he will be entitled to a like privilege (l). But no absolute forfciture of the lands is to be incurred by the neglect or refusal of any infant, married woman, lunatic or idiot to come in and be admitted, or for their omission, denial or refusal to pay the fine imposed on their admittance (m).

(f) 1 Watk. Cop. 234; 1 Scriv. Cop. 355; Doe d. Bover v. Trueman, 1 Barn. & Adol. 736.

(g) Stats. 11 Geo. 1V. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65; and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 108 et seq.

(h) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will.
IV. c. 65, ss. 3, 4; 16 & 17 Vict.
c. 70, s. 108.

(i) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will.

IV. c. 65, s. 5; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, ss. 108, 109.

(k) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will.
IV. c. 65, ss. 6, 7; 16 & 17 Vict.
c. 70, s. 110.

(1) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, s. 8; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 111.

(m) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, s. 9; 16 & 17 Vict. c.

Although mention has been made of surrenders to the Statute of Uses use of the surrenderee, it must not therefore be supposed does not apply to copyholds. that the Statute of Uses (n) has any application to copyhold lands. This statute relates exclusively to freeholds. The seisin or feudal possession of all copyhold land ever remains, as we have seen (o), vested in the lord of the manor. Notwithstanding that custom has given to the copyholder the enjoyment of the lands, they still remain, in contemplation of law, the lord's freehold. The copyholder cannot, therefore, simply by means of a surrender to his use from a former copyholder, be deemed, in the words of the Statute of Uses, in lawful seisin for such estate as he has in the use; for the estate of the surrenderor is customary only, and the estate of the surrenderee cannot, consequently, be greater. Custom, however, has now rendered the title of the copyholder quite independent of that of his lord. When a surrender of copyholds is made into the hands of the lord, to the use of any person, the lord is now mercly an instrument for carrying the intended alienation into effect; and the title of the lord, so that he be lord de facto, is quite immaterial to the validity either of the surrender or of the subsequent admittance of the surrenderee (p). But Trusts. if a surrender should be made by one person to the use of another, upon trust for a third, the Court of Chancery would exercise the same jurisdiction over the surrenderee, in compelling him to perform the trust, as it would in the case of freeholds vested in a trustee. And Settlements. when copyhold lands form the subject of settlement, the usual plan is to surrender them to the use of trustees, as joint tenants of a customary estate in fee simple, upon such trusts as will effect, in equity, the settlement intended. The trustees thus become the legal copyhold

70, s. 112. See Doe d. Twining v. Muscott, 12 Mee. & Wels. 832, 842; Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Company, 9 Q. B. 469, 510. (n) Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10;
ante, p. 146.
(o) Ante, p. 326.
(p) 1 Watk. Cop. 74.

tenants of the lord, and account for the rents and profits to the persons beneficially entitled. The equitable estates which are thus created are of a similar nature to the equitable estates in freeholds, of which we have already spoken (q); and a trust for the separate use of a married woman may be created as well out of copyhold as out of freehold lands(r). An equitable estate tail in copyholds may be barred by deed, in the same manner in every respect as if the lands had been of freehold tenure (s). But the deed, instead of being inrolled in the Court of Chancery (t), must be entered on the court rolls of the manor (u). And if there be a protector, and he consent to the disposition by a distinct deed, such deed must be executed by him either on, or any time before, the day on which the deed barring the entail is executed; and the deed of consent must also be entered on the court rolls (x).

As the owner of an equitable estate has, from the Equitable estate cannot nature of his estate, no legal right to the lands, he is not be surrendered. himself a copyholder. He is not a tenant to the lord: this position is filled by his trustee. The trustee, therefore, is admitted, and may surrender; but the cestui que trust cannot adopt these means of disposing of his equitable interest (y). To this general rule, however, there Exceptions. have been admitted, for convenience sake, two exceptions. The first is that of a tenant in tail whose estate is merely equitable : by the act for the abolition of fines Tenant of and recoveries (z), the tenant of a merely equitable estate equitable estate tail is empowered to bar the entail, either by deed in the tail may bar

- entail by surrender.
- (q) Ante, p. 150 et seq.
- (r) See ante, p. 205, 206.

(s) See ante, pp. 46, 49 et seq. (t) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74,

s. 54.

(u) Sect. 53. It has recently been decided, contrary to the prevalent impression, that the entry must be made within six calendar months. Honeywood v. Forster, M. R., 9 W. R. 855; 30 Beav. 1; Gibbons v. Snape, 32 Beav. 130.

- (x) Sect. 53.
- (y) 1 Scriv. Cop. 262.
- (z) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, s. 50.

Separate use.

Equitable estate tail may be barred by deed. manner above described, or by surrender in the same manner as if his estate were legal (a). The second exception relates to married women, it being provided by the same act (b) that, whenever a husband and wife shall Husband and surrender any copyhold lands in which she alone, or she render wife's and her husband in her right, may have any equitable equitable estate or interest, the wife shall be separately examined in the same manner as she would have been, had her estate or interest been at law instead of in equity merely (c); and every such surrender, when such examination shall be taken, shall be binding on the married woman and all persons claiming under her; and all surrenders previously made of lands similarly circumstanced, where the wife shall have been separately examined by the person taking the surrender, are thereby declared to be good and valid. But these methods of conveyance, though tolerated by the law, are not in accordance with principle; for an equitable estate is, strictly speaking, an estate in the contemplation of equity only, and has no existence anywhere else. As, therefore, an equitable estate tail in copyholds may properly be barred by a deed entered on the court rolls of the manor, so an equitable estate or interest in copyholds belonging to a married woman is more properly conveyed by a deed, executed with her husband's concurrence, and acknowledged by her in the same manner as if the lands were freehold (d). And the act for the abolition of fines and recoveries, by which this mode of conveyance is authorized, does not require that such a deed should be entered on the court rolls.

wife may surestate.

Copyhold estates admit of remainders analogous to Remainders. those which may be created in estates of freehold (e). And when a surrender or devise is made to the use of

(a) See ante, p. 336. (d) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, (b) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. e. 74, s. 77. See ante, p. 213. (e) See ante, pp. 230, 242. s. 90. (c) See ante, p. 347. R.P. AA

Contingent remainders. any person for life, with remainders over, the admission of the tenant for life is the admission of all persons having estates in remainder, unless there be in the manor a special custom to the contrary (f). A vested estate in remainder is capable of alienation by the usual mode of surrender and admittance. Contingent remainders of copyholds have always had this advantage, that they have never been liable to destruction by the sudden determination of the particular estate on which they depend. The freehold, vested in the lord, is said to be the means of preserving such remainders, until the time when the particular estate would regularly have expired (g). In this respect they resemble contingent remainders of equitable or trust estates of freeholds. as to which we have seen, that the legal seisin, vested in the trustees, preserves the remainders from destruction (h); but if the contingent remainder be not ready to come into possession the moment the particular estate would naturally and regularly have expired, such contingent remainder will fail altogether(i).

Executory devises of copyholds, similar in all respects to executory devises of freeholds, have long been permitted (h). And directions to executors to sell the copyhold lands of their testator (which directions we have scen (l), give rise to executory interests) are still in common use; for, when such a direction is given, the executors, taking only a power and no estate, have no > (f) 1 Watk. Cop. 276; Doe d. Winder v. Lawes, 7 Ad. & E. 195; Smith v. Glasscock, 4 C. B., N. S. 357; Randfield v. Randfield, 1 Drew. & S. 310. See, however, as to the reversioner, Reg. v. Lady of the Manor of Dallingham, 8 Ad. & E. 858.

(g) Fearne, Cont. Rem. 319; 1 Watk, Cop. 196; 1 Scriv. Cop. 477.

(h) Ante, p. 264.

(i) Gilb. Ten. 266; Fearne, Cont. Rem. 320.

(k) 1 Watk. Cop. 210.

(1) Ante, p. 289. The stat. 21 Hen. VIII. c. 4, applies to copyholds; Peppercorn v. Wayman, 5 De Gex & S. 230.

occasion to be admitted; and if they can sell before the lord has had time to hold his three Customary Courts for making proclamation in order to seize the land quousque (m), the purchaser from them will alone require admittance by virtue of his executory estate which arose on the sale. By this means the expense of only one admittance is incurred; whereas, had the lands been devised to the executors in trust to sell, they must first have been admitted under the will, and then have surrendered to the purchaser, who again must have been admitted under their surrender. And in a recent case, where a testator devised copyholds to such uses as his trustees should appoint, and subject thereto to the use of his trustees, their heirs and assigns for ever, with a direction that they should sell his copyholds, it was decided that the trustees could make a good title without being admitted, even although the lord had in the meantime seized the lands quousque for want of a tenant (n). But it has recently been decided that the lord of a Lord not bound manor is not bound to accept a surrender of copyholds inter vivos, to such uses as the surrenderee shall appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of the surrenderee, his heirs and assigns (o). This decision is in accordance with the old rule, which construed surrenders of copyholds in the same manner as a conveyance of freeholds inter vivos at common law (p). If, however, the lord should accept such a surrender, he will be bound by it, and must admit the appointee under the power of appointment, in case such power should be exercised (q).

to accept a surrender inter vivos to shifting uses.

(m) See ante, p. 349.

(n) Glass v. Richardson, 9 Hare, 698; 2 De Gex, M. & G. 658.

(o) Flack v. The Master, Fellows and Scholars of Downing College, C. P. 17 Jur. 697; 13 C. B. 945.

(p) 1 Watk. Cop. 108, 110;

1 Scriv. Cop. 178.

(q) The King v. The Lord of the Manor of Oundle, 1 Ad. & E. 283; Boddington v. Abernethy, 5 B. & C. 776; 9 Dow. & Ry. 626; I Scriv. Cop. 226, 229; Eddleston v. Collins, 3 De Gex, M. & G. I.

OF COPYHOLDS.

Husband and wife.

Curtesy.

Freebench.

Manor of Cheltenham is an exception.

With regard to the interest possessed by husband and wife in each other's copyhold lands, although the husband has necessarily the whole income of his wife's land during the coverture, yet a special custom appears to be necessary to entitle him to be tenant by eurtesy(r). A special custom also is required to entitle the wife to any interest in the lands of her husband after his decease. Where such custom exists, the wife's interest is termed her freebench; and it generally consists of a life interest in one divided third part of the lands, or sometimes of a life interest in the entirety (s); and, like dower under the old law, freebench is paramount to the husband's debts (t). Freebench, however, usually differs from the ancient right of dower in this important particular, that whereas the widow was entitled to dower of all freehold lands of which her husband was solely seised at any time during the coverture (u), the right to freebench does not usually attach until the actual decease of the husband (x). Freebench, therefore, is in general no impediment to the free alienation by the husband of his copyhold lands, without his wife's concurrence. To this rule the important manor of Cheltenham forms an exception; for, by the custom of this manor, as settled. by act of parliament, the freebench of widows attaches. like the ancient right of dower out of freeholds, on all the copyhold lands of inheritance of which their husbands were tenants at any time during the coverture (y).

 (r) 2 Watk. Cop. 71. See as (u)

 to freeholds, ante, p. 209.
 (x)

 (s) 1 Scriv. Cop. 89.
 (y)

(u) Ante, p. 214.
(x) 2 Watk. Cop. 73.
(y) Doe d. Riddell v. Gwinnell,

(t) Spyer v. Hyalt, 20 Beav. 621.

1 Q. B. 682.

(357)

PART IV.

OF PERSONAL INTERESTS IN REAL ESTATE.

THE subjects which have hitherto occupied our attention derive a great interest from the antiquity of their origin. We have seen that the difference between freehold and copyhold tenure has arisen from the distinction which prevailed, in ancient times, between the two classes of freemen and villeins (a); and that estates of freehold in lands and tenements owe their origin to the ancient feudal system (b). The law of real property, in which term both freehold and copyhold interests are included, is full of rules and principles to be explained only by a reference to antiquity; and many of those rules and principles were, it must be confessed, much more reasonable and useful when they were first instituted than they are at present. The subjects, however, on which we are now about to be engaged, possess little of the interest which arises from antiquity; although their present value and importance are unquestionably great. The principal interests of a personal nature, derived from landed property, are a term of years and a mortgage debt. The origin and reason of the personal Term of years. nature of a term of years in land have been already attempted to be explained (c); and at the present day, leasehold interests in land, in which amongst other things all building leases are included, form a subject sufficiently important to require a separate consideration. The personal nature of a mortgage debt was not Mortgage debt. clearly established till long after a term of years was considered as a chattel (d). But it is now settled that every mortgage, whether with or without a bond or covenant for the repayment of the money, forms part of the personal estate of the lender or mortgagee (e). And, when it is known that the larger proportion of the lands in this kingdom is at present in mortgage, a fact generally allowed, it is evident that a chapter devoted to mortgages cannot be superfluous.

(a) Ante, p. 323. (b) Ante, p. 17. (c) Ante, p. 8.

(d) Thornborough v. Baker, 1 Swanst. 636. Cha. Ca. 283; 3 Swanst. 628, (e) Co. Litt. 208 a, n. (1). anno 1675; Tabor v. Tabor, 3

CHAPTER I.

OF A TERM OF YEARS.

AT the present day, one of the most important kinds of chattel or personal interests in landed property is a term of years, by which is understood, not the time merely for which a lease is granted, but also the interest acquired by the lessee. Terms of years may practically be considered as of two kinds; first, those which are Two kinds of created by ordinary leases, which are subject to a yearly terms of years. rent, which seldom exceed ninety-nine years, and in respect of which so large a number of the occupiers of lands and houses are entitled to their occupation; and, secondly, those which are created by settlements, wills, or mortgage deeds, in respect of which no rent is usually reserved, which are frequently for one thousand years or more, which are often vested in trustees, and the object of which is usually to secure the payment of money by the owner of the land. But although terms of years of different lengths are thus created for different purposes, it must not, therefore, be supposed that a long term of years is an interest of a different nature from a short one. On the contrary, all terms of years of whatever length possess precisely the same attributes in the eye of the law.

The consideration of terms of the former kind, or A tenancy at those created by ordinary leases, may conveniently be will. preceded by a short notice of a tenancy at will, and a tenancy by sufferance. A tenancy at will may be created by parol (a), or by deed: it arises when a person

(a) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 1.

Emblements.

Cestui que trust tenant at will.

Tenancy by sufferance.

Lease from year to year. lets land to another, to hold at the will of the lessor or person letting (b). The lessee, or person taking the lands, is called a tenant at will; and, as he may be turned out when his landlord pleases, so he may leave when he likes. A tenant at will is not answerable for mere permissive waste (c). He is allowed, if turned out by his landlord, to reap what he has sown, or, as it is legally expressed, to take the emblements (d). But, as this kind of letting is very inconvenient to both parties, it is scarely ever adopted; and, in construction of law, a lease at an annual rent, made generally, without expressly stating it to be at will (e), and without limiting any certain period, is not a lease at will, but a lease from year to year (f), of which we shall presently speak. When property is vested in trustees, the cestui que trust is, as we have seen (g), absolutely entitled to such property in equity. But, as the courts of law do not recognise trusts, they consider the cestui que trust, when in possession, to be merely the tenant at will to his trustees (h). A tenancy by sufferance is when a person, who has originally come into possession by a lawful title, holds such possession after his title has determined.

A lease from year to year is a method of letting very commonly adopted: in most cases it is much more advantageous to both landlord and tenant than a lease at will. The advantage consists in this, that both landlord and tenant are entitled to notice before the tenancy can be determined by the other of them. This notice must

(b) Litt. s. 68; 2 Black. Com. 145.

(c) Harnett v. Maitland, 15 Mee.& Wels. 257.

(d) Litt. s. 68; see Graves v. Weld, 5 B. & Adol. 105.

(e) Doe d. Bastow v. Cox, 11 Q. B. 122; Doe d. Dixie v. Davies, 7 Exch. Rep. 89.

(f) Right d. Flower v. Darby, 1 T. Rep. 159, 163.

(g) Ante, p. 150.

(h) Earl of Pomfret v. Lord Windsor, 2 Ves. sen. 472, 481. Sce Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652. be given at least half a year before the expiration of the current year of the tenancy (i); for the tenancy cannot be determined by one only of the parties, except at the end of any number of whole years from the time it began. So that, if the tenant enter on any quarter day, he can quit only on the same quarter day: when once in possession, he has a right to remain for a year; and if no notice to quit be given for half a year after he has had possession, he will have a right to remain two whole years from the time he came in; and so on from year to year. A lease from year to year can be made by parol or word of mouth (j), if the rent reserved amount to two-thirds at least of the full improved value of the lands; for if the rent reserved do not amount to so much, the Statute of Frauds declares that such parol lease shall have the force and effect of a lease at will only (k). A lease from year to year, reserving a less amount of rent, must be made by deed (l). The best way to create this kind of tenancy is to let the lands to hold "from year to year" simply, for much litigation has arisen from the use of more circuitous methods of saying the same thing (m).

A lease for a fixed number of years may, by the Sta- Lease for a tute of Frauds, be made by parol, if the term do not vears, exceed three years from the making thereof, and if the rent reserved amount to two-thirds, at least, of the full improved value of the land(n). Leases for a longer term of years, or at a lower rent, were required, by the Statute of Frauds (o), to be put into writing and signed

(i) Right d. Flower v. Darby, 1 T. Rep. 159, 163; and see Doe d. Lord Bradford v. Watkins, 7 East, 551.

(j) Legg v. Hackett, Bac. Abr. tit. Leases (L. 3); S. C. nom. Legg v. Strudwick, 2 Salk. 414.

(k) 29 Car. II. c. 3, ss. 1, 2,

(1) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3.

(m) See Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years (L. 3); Doe d. Clarke v. Smaridge, 7 Q. B. 957. (n) 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 2; Lord Bolton v. Tomlin, 5 A. & E. 856. (o) 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 1.

Leases in writing now required to be by deed.

No formal words required to make a lease. by the parties making the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing. But a lease of a separate incorporeal hereditament was always required to be made by deed (p). And the act to amend the law of real property now provides that a lease, required by law to be in writing, of any tenements or hereditaments shall be void at law, unless made by deed(q). But such a lease, although void as a lease for want of its being by deed, may be good as an agreement to grant a lease, ut res magis valeat quam pereat(r). It does not require any formal words to make a lease for years. The words commonly employed are "demise, lease, and to farm let;" but any words indicating an intention to give possession of the lands for a determinate time will be sufficient (s). Accordingly, it sometimes happened, previously to the act, that what was meant by the parties merely as an agreement to execute a lease, was in law construed as itself an actual lease; and very many law suits arose out of the question, whether the effect of a memorandum was in law an actual lease, or merely an agreement to make one. Thus, a mere memorandum in writing that A. agreed to let, and B. agreed to take, a house or farm for so many years, at such a rent, was, if signed by the parties, as much a lease as if the most formal words had been employed (t). By such a memorandum a term of years

(p) Bird v. Higginson, 2 Adol.
& Ell. 696; 6 Adol. & Ell. 824;
S. C. 4 Nev. & Man. 505. See ante, p. 220.

(q) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 4, to the same effect.

(r) Parker v. Taswell, V.-C. S., 4 Jur., N. S. 183, affirmed 2 De Gex & Jones, 559; Bond v. Rosling, Q. B. 8 Jur., N. S. 78; 1 Best & Smith, 371; Tidy v. Mollett, 16 C. B., N. S. 298; Rollason v. Leon, Exch. 7 Jur., N. S. 608; 7 H. & N. 73, overruling the case of Stratton v. Pettitt, 16 C. B. 420.

(s) Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years (K); Curling v. Mills, 6 Man. & Gran. 173.

(t) Poole v. Bentley, 12 East, 168; Doe d. Walker v. Groves, 15 East, 244; Doe d. Pearson v. Ries, 8 Bing. 178; S. C. 1 Moo. & Scott, 259; Warman v. Faithfull, 5 Barn. & Adol. 1042; Pearce v. Cheslyn, 4 Adol. & Ellis, 225. was created in the premises, and was vested in the lessee, immediately on his entry, instead of the lessee acquiring, as at present, merely a right to have a lease granted to him in accordance with the agreement (u).

There is no limit to the number of years for which a A lease may be lease may be granted; a lease may be made for 99, 100, 1,000, or any other number of years; the only requisite years. on this point is, that there be a definite period of time

(u) By stats. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, leases, with some exceptions, are now subject to an ad valorem duty on the rent reserved, as follows :---

	If the term shall not exceed 35 Years.	Exceeding 35 and not exceeding 100 Years.	Exceed- ing 100 Years.
Where the yearly rent shall not ex-	s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
ceed £5	0 6	0 3 0	0 6 0
Shall exceed £5 and not exceed £10	1 0	0 6 0	0 12 0
,, 10 ,, 15	1 6	0 9 0	0 18 0
,, 15 ,, 20	2 0	0 12 0	1 4 0
,, 20 ,, 25	2 6	0 15 0	1 10 0
,, 25 ,, 50	5 0	1 10 0	3 0 0
,, 50 ,, 75	7 6	2 5 0	4 10 0
75 100	10 0	3 0 0	6 0 0
And where the same shall exceed $\pounds100$, then for every £50, and also for	ł
any fractional part of £50	5 0	1 10 0	3 0 0

And any premium which may be paid for the lease is also charged with the same ad valorem duty as on a conveyance upon the sale of lands for the same amount, though if the rent be under 20%, and the term do not exceed thirty-five years, the ad valorem duty is paid on the premium only. The progressive duty is ten shillings, unless the ad valorem duty be less, in which case it is the same as the ad valorem duty. The counterpart bears a duty of five shillings, with a progressive duty of half-a-crown, unless the duty on the lease is less than five shillings, in which case the counterpart bears the same duty as the lease; and if not executed by the lessor, it does not require any stamp denoting that the proper duty has been paid on the original. Stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 12. Agreements for leases for any term not exceeding seven years, are subject to the same duty as leases. Stat. 23 Vict. c. 15. Leases of furnished houses for any term less than a year, where the rent for such term shall exceed 251., are subject to a duty of half-a-crown. Stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 21. And any agreement or memorandum for the letting of a tenement or part thereof for any period less than a year, at a rent payable weekly or monthly, and not exceeding the rate of three shillings and six pence per week, is now chargeable with the stamp duty of one penny only. Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 96, s. 5.

made for any number of

There must be a period fixed for the ending.

fixed in the lease, at which the term granted must end (v); and it is this fixed period of ending which distinguishes a term from an estate of freehold. Thus, a lease to A. for his life is a conveyance of an estate of freehold, and must be carried into effect by the proper method for conveying the legal seisin; but a lease to A. for ninety-nine years, if he shall so long live, gives him only a term of years, on account of the absolute certainty of the determination of the interest granted at a given time, fixed in the lease. Besides the fixed time for the term to end, there must also be a time fixed from which the term is to begin; and this time may, if the A term may be parties please, be at a future period(x). Thus, a lease made to commay be made for 100 years from next Christmas. For, as leases anciently were contracts between the landlords and their husbandmen, and had nothing to do with the freehold or feudal possession (y), there was no objection to the tenant's right of occupation being deferred to a future time.

Entry.

mence at a future time.

Interesse termini. Bargain and sale.

When the lease is made, the lessee does not become complete tenant by lease to the lessor until he has entered on the lands let(z). Before entry, he has no estate, but only a right to have the lands for the term by force of the lease (a), called in law an interesse termini. But if the lease should be made by a bargain and sale, or any other conveyance operating by virtue of the Statute of Uses, the lessee will, as we have seen (b), have the whole term vested in him at once, in the same manner as if he had actually entered.

The circumstance, that a lease for years was anciently

(v) Co. Litt. 45 b; 2 Black. Miller v. Green, 8 Bingh. 92; ante, Com. 143. p. 165. (x) 2 Black. Com. 143.

(y) See ante, p. 9.

(z) Litt. s. 58; Co. Litt. 46 b;

(a) Litt. s. 459; Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years (M).

(b) Ante, p. 169.

364

nothing more than a mere contract, explains a curious point of law relating to the creation of leases for years, which does not hold with respect to the creation of any greater interest in land. If a man should by indenture Lease for years lease lands, in which he has no legal interest, for a term of years, both lessor and lessee will be estopped during the term, or forbidden to deny the validity of the lease. This might have been expected. But the law goes further, and holds, that if the lessor should at any time during the lease acquire the lands he has so let, the lease, which before operated only by estoppel, shall now take effect out of the newly-acquired estate of the lessor, and shall become for all purposes a regular estate for a term of years (c). If, however, the lessor has, at the Exception, time of making the lease, any interest in the lands he sor has any lets, such interest only will pass, and the lease will have interest. no further effect by way of estoppel, though the interest purported to be granted be really greater than the lessor had at the time power to grant (d). Thus, if A., a lessee for the life of B., makes a lease for years by indenture, and afterwards purchases the reversion in fee, and then B. dies, A. may at law avoid his own lease, though several of the years expressed in the lease may be still to come; for, as A. had an interest in the lands for the life of B., a term of years determinable on B.'s life passed to the lessee. But if in such a case the lease was made for valuable consideration, Equity would oblige the lessor to make good the term out of the interest he had acquired (e).

The first kind of leases for years to which we have adverted, namely, those taken for the purpose of occu-

(c) Co. Litt. 47 b; Bac. Abr. tit. Leases and Terms for Years (O); 2 Prest. Abst. 211; Webb v. Austin, 7 Man. & Gran. 701.

(d) Co. Litt. 47 b; Hill v. Saunders, 4 Barn. & Cress. 529; Doe d. Strode v. Seaton, 2 Cro. Mee. & Rosc. 728, 730.

(e) 2 Prest. Abst. 217.

by estoppel.

where the les-nants.

pation, are usually made subject to the payment of a Rent and cove- yearly rent (f), and to the observance and performance of certain covenants, amongst which a covenant to pay the rent is always included. The rent and covenants are thus constantly binding on the lessee, during the whole continuance of the term, notwithstanding any assignment which he may make. On assigning leasehold premises, the assignce is therefore bound to enter into a covenant with the assignor, to indemnify him against the payment of the rent reserved, and the observance and performance of the covenants contained in the lease (q). The assignee, as such, is liable to the landlord for the rent which may be unpaid, and for the covenants which may be broken during the time that the term remains vested in him, although he may never enter into actual possession (h), provided that such covenants relate to the premises let; and a covenant to do any act upon the premises, as to build a wall, is binding on the assignee, if the lessee has covenanted for himself and his assigns to do the act(i). But a covenant to do any act upon premises not comprised in the lease cannot be made to bind the assignee (k). Covenants which are binding on the assignee are said to run with the land, the burthen of such covenants passing with the land to every one to whom the term is from time to time assigned. But when the assignee assigns to another, his liability ceases as to any future breach(l). In the same manner the benefit of covenants relating to the land, entered into by the lessor, will pass to the assignee; for, though no contract has been made between the Covenants which run with the land.

(f) See ante, p. 224 et seq.

(g) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 30, 13th ed.

(h) Williams v. Bosanquet, 1 Brod. & Bing. 238; 3 J. B. Moore, 500.

(i) Spencer's case, 5 Rep. 16a; Hemingway v. Fernandes, 13 Sim.

228. See Minshull v. Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793, 809.

(k) Keppel v. Bailey, 2 My. & Keen, 517.

(1) Taylor v. Shum, 1 Bos. & Pul. 21; Rowley v. Adams, 4 M. & Cr. 534.

lessor and the assignee individually, yet, as the latter has become the tenant of the former, a privity of estate is said to arise between them, by virtue of which the covenants entered into, when the lease was granted, become mutually binding, and may be enforced by the one against the other (m). This mutual right is also confirmed by an express clause of the statute before referred to (n), by which assignces of the reversion were enabled to take advantage of conditions of re-entry contained in leases (o). By the same statute also, the assignce of the reversion is enabled to take advantage of the covenants entered into by the lessee with the lessor, under whom such assignee claims (p),—an advantage, however, which, in some cases, he is said to have previously possessed (q).

The payment of the rent, and the observance and Proviso for reperformance of the covenants, are usually further secured by a proviso or condition for re-entry, which enables the landlord or his heirs (and the statute above mentioned (r) enables his assigns), on non-payment of the rent, or on non-observance or non-performance of the covenants, to re-enter on the premises let, and repossess them as if no lease had been made. The proviso for reentry, so far as it relates to the non-payment of rent, has been already adverted to (s). The proviso for re-entry on breach of covenants was until recently the subject of a curious doctrine; that if an express licence were once Effect of given by the landlord for the breach of any covenant, licence for or if the covenant were, not to do a certain act without covenant. licence, and licence were once given by the landlord to perform the act, the right of re-entry was gone for

(m) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 478, note, 3rd ed.

(n) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 34, s. 2.

(o) Ante, p. 227.

(p) 1 Wms. Saund. 240, n. (3);

Martyn v. Williams, 1 H. & N. 817. (q) Vyvyan v. Arthur, 1 Barn. & Cres. 410, 414.

(r) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 34. (s) Ante, p. 226.

entry.

ever (t). The ground of this doctrine was, that every condition of re-entry is entire and indivisible; and, as the condition had been waived once, it could not be enforced again. So far as this reason extended to the breach of any covenant, it was certainly intelligible; but its application to a licence to perform an act, which was only prohibited when done without licence was not very apparent (u). This rule, which was well established, was frequently the occasion of great inconvenience to tenants; for no landlord could venture to give a licence to do any act, which might be prohibited by the lease unless done with licence, for fear of losing the benefit of the proviso for re-entry, in case of any future breach of covenant. The only method to be adopted in such a case was, to create a fresh proviso for re-entry on any future breach of the covenants, a proceeding which was of course attended with expense. The term would then, for the future, have been determinable on the new events stated in the proviso; and there was no objection in point of law to such a course; for a term, unlike an estate of freehold, may be made determinable, during its continuance, on events which were not contemplated at the time of its creation (x). By a recent act of parliament the inconvenient doetrine above mentioned ceased to extend to licences granted to the tenants of crown lands (y). And by a more recent statute (z) it has been provided, that every such licence shall, unless otherwise expressed, extend only to the permission actually given, or to any specific breach of any proviso or covenant made or to be made, or to the actual matter thereby specifically authorized to be done, but not so as to prevent any proceeding for any subsequent breach, unless otherwise specified in such licence. And all

(t) Dumpor's case, 4 Rep. 119; Brummell v. Macpherson, 14 Ves. 173.

(u) 4 Jarman's Conveyancing, by Sweet, 377, n. (e).

- (x) 2 Prest. Conv. 199.
- (y) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 99, s. 5.
- (z) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 1.

New enactment. Restriction on effect of licence.

rights under covenants and powers of forfeiture and re-entry contained in the lease are to remain in full force, and are to be available as against any subsequent breach or other matter not specifically authorized by the licence, in the same manner as if no such licence had been given; and the condition or right of re-entry is to remain in all respects as if such licence had not been given, except in respect of the particular matter authorized to be done. Provision has also been made (a) Licence to one that a licence to one of several lessees, or with respect of several lessees, or as to to part only of the property let, shall not destroy the part only. right of re-entry as to the other lessees, or as to the remainder of the property. It has been further pro- Severance of vided (b) that where the reversion upon a lease is severed, reversion. and the rent or other reservation is legally apportioned, the assignee of each part of the reversion shall, in respect of the apportioned rent or other reservation allotted or belonging to him, have and be entitled to the benefit of all conditions or powers of re-entry for non-payment of the original rent or other reservation, in like manner as if such conditions or powers had been reserved to him as incident to his part of the reversion in respect of the apportioned rent or other reservation allotted or belonging to him. Before this enactment a grantee of The old law. part of the reversion could not take advantage of the condition; as if a lease had been made of three acres reserving a rent upon condition, and the reversion of two acres were granted, the rent might be apportioned, but the condition was destroyed, "for that it is entire and against common right" (c).

The above enactments however failed to provide for Waiver of a the case of an actual waiver of a breach of covenant. breach of covenant. On this point the law stood thus. The receipt of rent

(a) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 2. coparceners, Doe d. De Rutzen v. (b) Sect. 3. Lewis, 5 A. & E. 277. (c) Co. Litt. 215 a. See as to R.P.

BB

Implied waiver. Continuing breach.

Actual waiver.

by the landlord, after notice of a breach of covenant committed by his tenant prior to the rent becoming due, was an implied waiver of the right of re-entry (d); but if the breach was of a continuing kind, this implied waiver did not extend to the breach which continued after the receipt (e). An implied waiver of this kind did not destroy the condition of re-entry (f); but an actual waiver had this effect. Few landlords therefore were disposed to give an actual waiver. The inconvenience which thus arose is now met by a subsequent act(g), which provides that, where any actual waiver of the benefit of any covenant or condition in any lease on the part of the lessor, or his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, shall be proved to have taken place, after the passing of that act(h), in any one particular instance, such actual waiver shall not be assumed or deemed to extend to any instance, or any breach of covenant or condition, other than that to which such waiver shall specially relate, nor to be a general waiver of the benefit of any such covenant or condition, unless an intention to that effect shall appear.

As to fire insurance. A condition of re-entry is, evidently, a very serious instrument of oppression in the hands of the landlord, when the property comprised in the lease is valuable, and the tenant by mere inadvertence may have committed some breach of covenant. To forget to pay the annual premium on the insurance of the premises against fire might thus occasion the loss of the whole property; although, on the other hand, the landlord might well consider such forgetfulness inexcusable, since it might end in the loss of the premises by fire whilst uninsured.

(d) Co. Litt. 211 b; Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512.

(e) Doe d. Muston v. Gladwin,
6 Q. B. 953; Doe d. Baker v. Jones,
5 Ex. Rep. 498.

(f) Doe d. Flower v. Peck, 1 B. & Adol. 428.

(g) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 6.

(h) 23rd July, 1860.

In this matter some beneficial provisions have been made by recent enactments. The Courts, both of Courts may Equity (i) and of Law (k), have now power to relieve, relieve against forfeiture for upon such terms as they may think fit, against a for- non-insurance. feiture for breach of a covenant or condition to insure against fire, where no loss or damage by fire has happened, and the breach has, in the opinion of the Court, been committed through accident or mistake, or otherwise without fraud or gross negligence, and there is an insurance on foot at the time of the application to the Court in conformity with the covenant to insure. But where such relief shall be granted, a record or minute thereof is required to be made by indorsement on the lease or otherwise (l). And the Courts are not to relieve the same person more than once in respect of the same covenant or condition; nor are they to grant any relief where a forfeiture under the covenant in respect of which relief is sought shall have been already waived out of Court in favour of the person seeking the relief (m). It is further provided (n) that the persons Lessor to have entitled to the benefit of a covenant on the part of a benefit of inlessee or mortgagor to insure against loss or damage ance. by fire shall, on loss or damage by fire happening, have the same advantage from any then subsisting insurance relating to the building covenanted to be insured, effected by the lessee or mortgagor in respect of his interest under the lease or in the property, or by any person claiming under him, but not effected in conformity with the covenant, as he would have from an insurance effected in conformity with the covenant.

It was provided by the Statute of Frands (0), that no Statute of Frauds re-

(i) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 5; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 3. (m) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 14. (k) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 6. s. 2. (n) Sect. 7. (1) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, (o) 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 3. в в 2 quired writing to assign a lease.

New enactment.

Protection of purchasers against previous noninsurance against fire. leases, estates or interests, not being copyhold or customary interests, in any lands, tenements or hereditaments, should be assigned, unless by deed or note in writing, signed by the party so assigning, or his agent thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, or by act or operation of law. And now, by the act to amend the law of real property (p), it is enacted that an assignment of a chattel interest, not being copyhold, in any tenements or hereditaments, shall be void at law unless made by deed (q).

A very beneficial provision for purchasers of leaseholds is made by the recent Act to which we have already frequently referred (r). This Act provides that where, on a bona fide purchase after the passing of the Act of a leasehold interest under a lease containing a covenant on the part of the lessee to insure against fire, the purchaser is furnished with a written receipt of the person entitled to receive the rent, or his agent, for the last payment of rent accrued due before the completion of the purchase, and there is subsisting at the time of the completion of the purchase an insurance in conformity with the covenant, the purchaser or any person claiming under him shall not be subject to any liability by way of forfeiture or damages, or otherwise, in respect of any breach of the covenant committed at any time before the completion of the purchase, of which the purchaser had not notice before the completion of the purchase (s).

(p) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s.
3, to the same effect.

(q) By stats. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 111, any assignment of a lease upon any other occasion than a sale or mortgage bears a duty equal to the ad valorem duty with which a similar lease would be chargeable under the act, unless such duty would amount to more than $\pounds 1: 15s$, in which case the duty on such assignment is $\pounds 1: 15s$, only.

(r) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, passed 13th Aug. 1859.

(s) Sect. 8.

Leasehold estates may also be bequeathed by will. Will of leaseholds. As leaseholds are personal property, they devolve in the first place on the exocutors of the will, in the same manner as other personal property; or, on the decease of their owner intestate, they will pass to his administrator. An explanation of this part of the subject will be found in the author's treatise on the principles of the law of personal property (t). It was formerly a rule General devise. that where a man had lands in fee simple, and also lands held for a term of years, and devised by his will all his lands and tenements, the fee simple lands only passed by the will, and not the leaseholds; but if he had leasehold lands, and none held in fee simple, the leaseholds would then pass, for otherwise the will would be merely void (u). But the act for the amendment of the laws New enactwith respect to wills (v) now provides, that a devise of ment. the land of the testator, or of the land of the testator in any place, or in the occupation of any person mentioned in his will, or otherwise described in a general manner, and any other general devise which would describe a leasehold estate if the testator had no freehold estate which could be described by it, shall be construed to include the leasehold estates of the testator, or his leasehold estates to which such description shall extend, as well as freehold estates, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. The act to which we have already referred (x) contains a provision for the exoneration of Exoneration of the executors or administrators of a lessee from liability executors and administrators to the rents and covenants of the lease, similar to that of lessee. to which we have already referred with respect to their liability to rents charge in conveyances on rents charge (y).

(t) Part IV. Chaps. 3 & 4.
(u) Rose v. Bartlett, Cro. Car.
(v) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.
(v) Stat. 7 Will. Vict.
<

373

Debts. Judgments.

Leasehold estates are also subject to involuntary alienation for the payment of debts. By the act for extending the remedies of creditors against the property of their debtors, they become subject, in the same manner as freeholds, to the claims of judgment creditors (z): with this exception, that, as against purchasers without notice of any judgments, such judgments had no further effect than they would have had under the old law(a). And, under the old law, leasehold estates, being goods or chattels merely, were not bound by judgments until a writ of execution was actually in the hands of the sheriff or his officer (b). So that a judgment had no effect as against a purchaser of a leasehold estate without notice, unless a writ of execution on such judgment had actually issued prior to the purchase. And if leaseholds should be considered to be "goods" within the meaning of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c), then a purchaser without notice was safe at any time before an actual seizure under the writ. And now, as we have seen, no judgment of a date later than the 29th of July, 1864, can affect any land of whatever tenure, until such land shall have been actually delivered in execution by virtue of a writ of elegit or other lawful authority in pursuance of such judgment (d).

Bankruptcy.

In the event of the bankruptcy of any person entitled to any lease or agreement for a lease, his assignces may elect to accept or to decline the same; and the lessor is empowered to oblige them to exercise this option, if they do not do so when required(e). If they accept the

(z) Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; ante, p. 79. s.

(a) Stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5;
Westbrook v. Blythe, Q. B. 1 Jurist,
N. S. 85; 3 E. & B. 737.

(b) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 16. See Principles of the Law of Personal Property, p. 46, 1st ed.; 47, 2nd cd.; 48, 3rd, 4th and 5th eds. (c) Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 1.

(d) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112; ante, p. 82.

(e) Stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106,
s. 145, repealing stat. 6 Geo. IV.
c. 16, s. 75, and not repealed by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134; Briggs
v. Sowry, 8 Mee. & Wels. 729.

lease or agreement, the bankrupt is discharged from all future liability in respect of the rent and covenants. And if the assignees decline to take such lease or agreement, the bankrupt will not be liable if, within fourteen days after he shall have had notice that the assignees have declined, he shall deliver up such lease or agreement to the person then entitled to the rent, or having so agreed to lease, as the case may be.

The tenant for a term of years may, unless restrained Underlease. by express covenant, make an underlease for any part of his term; and any assignment for less than the whole term is in effect an underlease (f). On the other hand, any assurance purporting to be an underlease, Underlease for but which comprises the whole term, is, by the better the whole opinion, in effect an assignment (q). It is true that in some cases, where a tenant for years, having less than three years of his term to run, has verbally agreed with another person to transfer the occupation of the premises to him for the rest of the term, he paying an equivalent rent, this has been regarded as an underlease, and so valid (h), rather than as an attempted assignment which would be void, formerly for want of a writing (i), and now for want of a deed (k). It is, however, held that no distress can be made for the rent thus reserved (l). No distress can But if a tenure be created, the lord, if he have no estate, must at least have a seignory (m), to which the rent would by law be incident; and being thus rent service, it must by the common law be enforceable by dis-

(f) See Sugd. Concise Vendors, 482; Cottee v. Richardson, 7 Ex. Rep. 143.

(g) Palmer v. Edwards, 1 Doug. 187 n.; Parmenter v. Webber, 8 Taunt. 593; 2 Prest. Conv. 124; Thorn v. Woollcombe, 3 B. & Adol. 586; Langford v. Selmes, 3 K. & J. 220, 227; Beaumont v. Marquis of Salisbury, 19 Beav. 198, 210.

(h) Poultney v. Holmes, I Strange,

405; Preece v. Corrie, 5 Bing. 27; Pollock v. Stacy, 9 Q. B. 1033.

(i) Stat. 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 3; ante, p. 372.

(k) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3; ante, p. 372.

(1) Bac. Abr. tit. Distress (A); Preece v. Corric, 5 Bing. 24; Pascoe v. Pascoe, 3 Bing. N. C. 898.

(m) Ante, p. 304.

be made.

tress(n). The very fact therefore that no distress can be made for the rent by the common law, shows that there can be no tenure between the parties. And, if so, the attempted disposition cannot operate as an underlease (o). If, however, the disposition be by deed, and be executed by the alience, it has been decided that the reservation of rent may operate to create a rentcharge (p), for which the owner may sue (q), and which he may assign, so as to entitle the assignee to sue in his own name (r). And if this be so, there seems no good reason why, under these circumstances, the statutory power of distress given to the owner of a rent seck (s), should not apply to the rent thus created (t). But on this point also opinions differ (u).

No privity between the lessor and the underlessee.

Derivative term is not an estate in original term. Every underlessee becomes tenant to the lessee who grants the underlesse, and not tenant to the original lessor. Between him and the underlessee, no privity is said to exist. Thus the original lessor cannot maintain any action against an underlessee for any breach of the covenants contained in the original lease (v). His remedy is only against the lessee, or any assignee from him of the whole term. The derivative term, which is vested in the underlessee, is not an estate in the interest originally granted to the lessee; it is a new and distinct term, for a different, because a less, period of time. It certainly arises and takes effect out of the original term, and its existence depends on the continuance of such term; but still, when created, it is a distinct chattel, in the same way as a portion of any moveable piece of

(n)	Litt. sect. 213.
(0)	Barrett v. Rolph, 14 M. & W.
348, 3	52.

(p) Ante, p. 304.

(q) Baker v. Gostling, 1 Bing. N. C. 19.

(r) Williams v. Hayward, Q. B., 5 Jur., N. S. 1417; 1 Ellis & Ellis, 1040.

(s) Stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 5;

ante, p. 307.

(t) Pascoe v. Pascoe, 3 Bing. N. C. 905.

(u) See — v. Cooper, 2 Wils. 375; Langford v. Selmes, 3 K. & J. 220; Smith v. Watts, 4 Drew. 338; Wills v. Cattling, Q. B., 7 W. R. 448.

(v) Holford v. Hatch, 1 Dougl. 183.

goods become, when cut out of it, a separate chattel personal.

If a married woman should be possessed of a term of Husband's years, her husband may dispose of it at any time during rights in his wife's term. the coverture, either absolutely or by way of mortgage (w); and in case he should survive her, he will be entitled to it by his marital right (x). But if he should die in her lifetime it will survive to her, and his will alone will not be sufficient to deprive her of it (y).

In many cases landlords, particularly corporations, Renewable are in the habit of granting to their tenants fresh leases, leases. either before or on the expiration of existing ones. In other cases a covenant is inserted to renew the lease on payment of a certain fine for renewal; and this covenant may be so worded as to confer on the lessee a perpetual right of renewal from time to time as each successive lease expires (z). In all these cases the acceptance by Surrender in the tenant of the new lease operates as a surrender in law of the unexpired residue of the old term; for the tenant by accepting the new lease affirms that his lessor has power to grant it; and as the lessor could not do this during the continuance of the old term, the acceptance of such new lease is a surrender in law of the former. But if the new lease be void, the surrender of the old one will be void also; and if the new lease be voidable, the surrender will be void if the new lease fail (a). It appears to be now settled, after much dif-

(w) Hill v. Edmonds, 5 De Gex & S. 603, 607.

(x) Co. Litt. 46 b, 351 a.

(y) 2 Black. Com. 434; 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 173, 177; Doe d. Shaw v. Steward, 1 Ad. & Ell. 300; as to trust term, Donne v. Hart, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 360; see also Hanson v. Keating, 4 Hare, 1; Duberly v. Day, Rolls, 16 Jurist, 581; S. C. 16 Beav. 33.

(z) Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 325; 7 East, 237; Hare v. Burges, 4 Kay & J. 45.

(a) Ive's case, 5 Rep. 11 b.; Roe d. Earl of Berkeley v. Archbishop of York, 6 East, 86; Doe d. Earl of Egremont v. Courtenay, 11 Q. B.

law.

ference of opinion, that the granting of a new lease to another person with the consent of the tenant is an implied surrender of the old term (b). Whenever a lease, renewable either by favour or of right, is settled in trust for one person for life with remainders over, or in any other manner, the benefit of the expectation or right of renewal belongs to the persons from time to time beneficially interested in the lease; and if any other person should obtain a new lease, he will be regarded in equity as a trustee for the persons beneficially interested in the old one (c); so the costs of renewal are apportioned between the tenant for life and remainder-men according to their respective periods of actual enjoyment of the new lease (d). Special provisions have been made by parliament for facilitating the procuring and granting of renewals of leases when any of the parties are infants, idiots or lunatics (e). And the provision by which the remedies against under-tenants have been preserved, when leases are surrendered in order to be renewed, has been already mentioned (f). More recently provisions have been made by parliament enabling trustees of renewable leaseholds to renew their leases (q), and to raise money by mortgage for that purpose(h). Provisions have also been made for facilitating the purchase by such trustees of the reversion of the lands, when it

702; Doe d. Biddulph v. Poole, 11 Q. B. 713.

(b) See Lyon v. Reed, 13 Mee. & Wels. 285, 306; Creagh v. Blood, 3 Jones & Lat. 133, 160; Nickells v. Atherstone, 10 Q. B. 944; M'Donnell v. Pope, 9 Hare, 705; Davison v. Gent, 1 H. & N. 744.

(c) Rawe v. Chichester, Ambl. 715; Tanner v. Elworthy, 4 Beav. 487; Clegg v. Fishwick, 1 Mac. & Gord. 294.

(d) White v. White, 5 Ves. 551;9 Ves. 560; Allan v. Backhouse,

2 Ves. & Bea. 65; Jacob, 631; Greenwood v. Evans, 4 Beav. 44; Jones v. Jones, 5 Hare, 440; Hadleston v. Whelpdale, 9 Hare, 775; Ainslie v. Harcourt, 28 Beav. 313.

(e) Stats. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, ss. 12, 14-18, 20, 21; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, ss. 113-115, 133-135.

(f) Stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 6; ante, p. 229.

(g) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 8.

(h) Sect. 9.

belongs to an ecclesiastical corporation, and for raising money for that purpose by sale or mortgage (i); also for the exchange of part of the lands comprised in any renewable lease for the reversion in other part of the same lands, so as thus to acquire the entire fee simple in a part of the lands instead of a renewable lease of the whole (k).

We now come to consider those long term of years of Long terms of which frequent use is made in conveyancing, generally years. for the purpose of securing the payment of money. For this purpose, it is obviously desirable that the person who is to receive the money should have as much power as possible of realizing his security, whether by receipt of the rents or by selling or pledging the land; at the same time it is also desirable that the ownership of the land, subject to the payment of the money, should remain as much as possible in the same state as before, and that when the money is paid, the persons to whom it was due should no longer have anything to do with the property. These desirable objects are accomplished by conveyancers by means of the creation of a long term of years, say 1,000, which is vested, (when the parties to be paid are numerous, or other circumstances make such a course desirable,) in trustees, upon trust out of the rents and profits of the premises, or by sale or mortgage thereof for the whole or any part of the term, to raise and pay the money required, as it may become due, and upon trust to permit the owners of the land to receive the residue of the rents and profits. By this means the parties to The parties be paid have ample security for the payment of their have ample security. More any the payment of their have ample security. receive on their behalf (if they think fit) the whole accruing income of the property, but they have also power at once to dispose of it for 1,000 years to come, a power which is evidently almost as effectual as if they were enabled to sell the fee simple. Until the time of payment comes, the owner of the land is entitled, on the other hand, to receive the rents and profits, by virtue of the trust under which the trustees may be compelled to permit him so to do. So, if part of the rents should be required, the residue must be paid over to the owner; but if non-payment by the owner should render a sale necessary, the trustees will be able to assign the property, or any part of it, to any purchaser for 1,000 years without any rent. But until these measures may be enforced, the ownership of the land, subject to the payment of the money, remains in the same state as before. The trustees, to whom the term has been granted, have only a chattel interest; the legal seisin of the freehold remains with the owner, and may be conveyed by him, or devised by his will, or will descend to his heir, in the same manner as if no term existed, the term all the while still hanging over the whole, ready to deprive the owners of all substantial enjoyment, if the money should not be paid.

(i) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, (k) Sect. 39. ss. 35-38.

If, however, the money should be paid, or should not ultimately be required, different methods may be employed of depriving the trustces of all power over the property. The first method, and that most usually adopted in modern times, is by inserting in the deed, by which the term is created, a proviso that the term shall cease, not only at its expiration by lapse of time, but also in the event of the purposes for which it is created being fully performed and satisfied, or becoming unnecessary, or incapable of taking effect (l). This proviso for cesser, as it is called, makes the term endure so long only as the purposes of the trust require ; and, when these are satisfied, the term expires without any act to be done by the trustces: their title at once ceases,

(1) See Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 508, 13th ed.

The ownership of the land, subject to the payment, remains as before.

Proviso for cesser.

and they cannot, if they would, any longer intermeddle with the property.

But if a proviso for cesser of the term should not be inserted in the deed by which it is created, there is still a method of getting rid of the term, without disturbing the ownership of the lands which the term overrides. The lands in such cases, it should be observed, may not, and seldom do, belong to one owner for an estate in fee simple. The terms of which we are now speaking Terms are used are most frequently created by marriage settlements, for securing portions. and are the means almost invariably used for securing the portions of the younger children; whilst the lands are settled on the eldest son in tail. But, on the son's coming of age, or on his marriage, the lands are, for the most part, as we have before seen (m), resettled on him for life only, with an estate tail in remainder to his unborn eldest son. The owner of the lands is therefore probably only a tenant for life, or perhaps a tenant in tail. But, whether the estate be a fee simple, or an Any estate of estate tail, or for life only, each of these estates is, as freehold is a larger estate we have seen, an estate of freehold (n), and as such, than a term of is larger, in contemplation of law, than any term of years. years, however long. The consequence of this legal doctrine is, that if any of these estates should happen to be vested in any person, who at the same time is possessed of a term of years in the same land, and no other estate should intervene, the estate of freehold will infallibly swallow up the term, and yet be not a bit the larger. The term will, as it is said, be merged in the Merger of the estate of freehold (o). Thus let A. and B. be tenants for a term of 1,000 years, and subject to that term, let C. be tenant for his life; if now A. and B. should assign their term to C. (which assignment under such circumstances is called a surrender), C. will still be merely Surrender.

(m) Ante, p. 48. (n) Ante, pp. 22, 34, 58.

(o) 3 Prest. Conv. 219. See ante, pp. 229, 259.

tenant for life as before. The term will be gone for ever; yet C. will have no right to make any disposition to endure beyond his own life. He had the legal seisin of the lands before, though A. and B. had the possession by virtue of their term; now, he will have both legal seisin and actual possession during his life, and A. and B. will have completely given up all their interest in the premises. Accordingly, if A. and B. should be trustees for the purposes we have mentioned, a surrender by them of their term to the legal owner of the land, will bring back the ownership to the same state as before. The act to amend the law of real property (p) now provides that a surrender in writing of an interest in any tenements or hereditaments, not being a copyhold interest, and not being an interest which might by law have been created without writing, shall be void at law unless made by deed (q).

The merger of a term of years is sometimes occasioned by the accidental union of the term and the immediate freehold in one and the same person. Thus, if the trustee of the term should purchase the freehold, or if it should be left to him by the will of the former owner, or descend to him as heir at law, in each of these cases the term will merge. So if one of two joint holders of a term obtain the immediate freehold, his moiety of the term will merge; or conversely if the sole owner of a term obtain the immediate freehold jointly with another, one moiety of the term will merge, and the joint ownership of the freehold will continue, subject only to the remaining moiety of the term (r).

(p) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, repealing stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 4, to the same effect.

(q) By stats. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 111, a surrender of a lease upon any other occasion than a sale or mortgage is charged with the same duty as an assignment. See ante, p. 372, n. (q).

(r) Sir Ralph Bovey's case, 1 Ventr. 193, 195; Co. Litt. 186 a; Burton's Compendium, pl. 900.

Surrenders now to be by deed.

Accidental merger.

Merger being a legal incident of estates, occurs quite irrespective of the trusts on which they may be held; but equity will do its utmost to prevent any injury being sustained by a cestui que trust, the estate of whose trustee may accidentally have merged (s). The law, however, though it does not recognize the trusts of e mity, yet takes notice in some few cases of property person in right of another, or in autre ed; and in these cases the general rule Estates held in a of the term with the immediate freeuse any merger, if such union be occaact of law, and not by the act of the if a term be held by a person, to whose ... ediate freehold afterwards comes by dese, such freehold, coming to the husband ais wife, will not cause a merger of the o, if the owner of a term make the freeexecutor, the term will not merge(u); for or is recognized by the law as usually holdfor the benefit of creditors and legatees; but ecutor himself should be the legatee of the seems that, after all the creditors have been he term will merge (x). And if an executor, wher legatee or not, holding a term as executor, hould purchase the immediate freehold, the better opinion is, that this being his own act, will occasion the merger of the term, except so far as respects the rights of the creditors of the testator (y).

There was until recently another method of disposing The term might of a term when the purposes for which it was created have been kept on foot. had been accomplished. If it were not destroyed by a

(s) See 3 Prest, Con. 320, 321. (t) Doe d. Blight v. Pett, 11

Adol. & Ellis, 842; Jones v. Davies, 5 H. & N. 766; 7 H. & N. 507. (u) Co. Litt. 338 b.

(x) 3 Prest. Conv. 310, 311.

See Law v. Urlwin, 16 Sim. 377, and Lord St. Leonards' comments on this case, Sng. V. & P. 507, 13th ed.

(y) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 505, 13th ed.

autre droit.

proviso for cesser, or by a merger in the freehold, it might have been kept on foot for the benefit of the owner of the property for the time being. A term, as we have seen, is an instrument of great power, yet easily managed; and in case of a sale of the property, it might have been a great protection to the purchaser. Suppose, therefore, that, after the creation of such a term as we have spoken of, the whole property had been sold. The purchaser, in this case, often preferred having the term still kept on foot, and assigned by the trustees to a new trustee of his own choosing, i'n trust for himself, his heirs and assigns; or, as it ras to chnically said, in trust to attend the inheritance. The reason for this proceeding was that the former over mig. ht, possibly, since the commencement of the tm, have created some incumbrance upon the property of which the purchaser was ignorant, and against whic if existing, he was of course desirous of being prected. Suppose, for instance, that a rent-charge haddeen granted to be issuing out of the lands, subsequent to the creation of the term: this rent-charge of cose could not affect the term itself, but was binding only the freehold, subject to the term. The purchase. therefore, if he took no notice of the term, bought an estate, subject not only to the term-but, also, to the rent-charge. Of the existence of the term, however, we suppose him to have been aware. If now he should have procured the term to be surrendered to himself, the unknown rent-charge, not being any estate in the land, would not have prevented the union and merger of the term in the freehold. The term would consequently have been destroyed, and the purchaser would have been left without any protection against the rentcharge, of the existence of which he had no knowledge, nor any means of obtaining information. The rentcharge, by this means, became a charge, not only on the legal seisin, but also on the possession of the lands,

Assignment in trust to attend the inheritance.

Case of a rentcharge.

Consequence of a surrender of the term. and was said to be accelerated by the merger of the term (z). The preferable method, therefore, always was to avoid any merger of the term; but, on the contrary, to obtain an assignment of it to a trustee in trust The term should have for the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, and to attend been assigned the inheritance. The trustee thus became possessed of to attend the inheritance. the lands for the term of 1,000 years; but he was bound, by virtue of the trust, to allow the purchaser to receive the rents, and exercise what acts of ownership he might please. If, however, any unknown incumbrance, such as the rent-charge in the case supposed, should have come to light, then was the time to bring the term into action. If the rent-charge should have been claimed, the trustee of the term would at once have interfered, and informed the claimant that, as his rent-charge was made subsequently to the term, he must wait for it till the term was over, which was in effect a postponement sine die. In this manner, a term became a valuable protection to any person on whose behalf it was kept on foot, as well as a source of serious injury to any incumbrancer, such as the grantee of the rent-charge, who might have neglected to procure an assignment of it on his own behalf, or to obtain a declaration of trust in his favour from the legal owner of the term. For it will be observed that, if the grantee of the rent-charge had obtained from the persons in whom the term was vested a declaration of trust in his behalf, they would have been bound to retain the term. and could not lawfully have assigned it to a trustee for the purchaser.

If the purchaser, at the time of his purchase, should If the purhave had notice of the rent-charge, and should yet have procured an assignment of the term to a trustee for his incumbrance own benefit, the Court of Chancery would, on the first his purchase, chaser had notice of the

(z) 3 Prest. Conv. 460.

he could not use the term.

An exception.

Dower barred by assignment of term.

principles of equity, have prevented his trustee from making any use of the term to the detriment of the grantee of the rent-charge (a). Such a proceeding would evidently be a direct fraud, and not the protection of an innocent purchaser against an unknown incumbrance. To this rule, however, one exception was admitted, which reflects no great credit on the gallantry, to say the least, of those who presided in the Court of Chancerv. In the common case of a sale of lands in fee simple from A. to B., it was holden that, if there existed a term in the lands, created prior to the time when A.'s seisin commenced, or prior to his marriage, an assignment of his term to a trustee for B. might be made use of for the purpose of defeating the claim of A.'s wife, after his decease, to her dower out of the premises (b). Here B. evidently had notice that A., was married, and he knew also that, by the law, the widow of A. would, on his decease, be entitled to dower out of the lands. Yet the Court of Chancery permitted him to procure an assignment of the term to a trustee for himself, and to tell the widow that, as her right to dower arose subsequently to the creation of the term, she must wait for her dower till the term was ended. We have already seen (c), that, as to all women married after the first of January, 1834, the right to dower has been placed at the disposal of their husbands. Such husbands, therefore, had no need to request the concurrence of their wives in a sale of their lands, or to resort to the device of assigning a term, should this concurrence not have been obtained.

The owner of the inheritance subject to an attendant term, in consequence of the trust of the term in his favour, as

(a) Willoughby v. Willoughby, 1 13th ed.; Co. Litt. 208 a, n. (1).
T. Rep. 763. (c) Ante, p. 217.
(b) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 510, having any interest of a personal nature, even in con- had a real templation of equity; but as, at law, he had a real estate of inheritance in the lands, subject to the term, so, in equity, he had, by virtue of the trust of the term in his favour, a real estate of inheritance in immediate possession and enjoyment(d). If the term were neither Term attendant surrendered nor assigned to a trustee to attend the by construction of law. inheritance, it still was considered attendant on the inheritance, by construction of law, for the benefit of all persons interested in the inheritance according to their respective titles and estates.

An act has, however, been passed "to render the Act to render assignment of satisfied terms unnecessary" (e). This the assignment act provides (f), that every satisfied term of years which, terms unneceseither by express declaration or by construction of law, shall upon the thirty-first day of December, 1845, be attendant upon the reversion or inheritance of any lands, shall on that day absolutely cease and determine as to the land upon the inheritance or reversion whereof such term shall be attendant as aforesaid, except that every such term of years, which shall be so attendant as aforesaid by express declaration, although thereby made to cease and determine, shall afford to every person the same protection against every incumbrance, charge, estate, right, action, suit, claim, and demand, as it would have afforded to him if it had continued to subsist, but had not been assigned or dealt with after the said thirty-first day of December, 1845, and shall, for the purpose of such protection, be considered in every court of law and of equity to be a subsisting term. The act further provides (g) that every term of years then subsisting, or thereafter to be created, becoming satisfied after the thirty-first of December, 1845, and which,

(d) Sugd. Ven. & Pur. 790, (f) Sect. 1. 11th ed. (g) Sect. 2.

(e) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112.

estate.

sary.

either by express declaration or by construction of law, shall after that day become attendant upon the inheritance or reversion of any land, shall, immediately upon the same becoming so attendant, absolutely cease and determine as to the land upon the inheritance or reversion whereof such term shall become attendant as aforesaid (h). In the two first editions of this work, some remarks on this act were inserted by way of Appendix. These remarks are now omitted, not because the author has changed his opinion on the wording of the act, but because the remarks, being of a controversial nature, seem to him to be scarcely fitted to be continued in every edition of a work intended for the use of students, and also because the act has, upon the whole, conferred a great benefit on the community. Experience has in fact shown that the cases in which purchasers enjoy their property without any molestation are infinitely more numerous than those in which they are compelled to rely on attendant terms for protection; so that the saving of expense to the generality of purchasers seems greatly to counterbalance the inconvenience to which the very small minority may be put, who have occasion to set up attendant terms as a defence against adverse proceedings. And it is very possible that some of the questions to which this act gives rise may never be actually litigated in a court of justice.

(h) It has been recently decided that a term of years assigned to a trustee in trust for securing a mortgage debt, and subject thereto to attend the inheritance, is not an attendant term within this act. Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Drew. & Smale, 412.

CHAPTER II.

OF A MORTGAGE DEBT.

OUR next subject for consideration is a mortgage debt. The term mortgage debt is here employed for want of one which can more precisely express the kind of interest intended to be spoken of. Every person who borrows money, whether upon mortgage or not, incurs a debt or personal obligation to repay out of whatever means he may possess; and this obligation is usually expressed in a mortgage deed in the shape of a covenant by the borrower to repay the lender the money lent, with interest, at the rate agreed on. If, however, the borrower should personally be unable to repay the money lent to him, or if, as occasionally happens, it is expressly stipulated that the borrower shall not be personally liable to repay, then the lender must depend solely upon the property mortgaged; and the nature of his interest in such property. here called his mortgage debt, is now attempted to be explained. In this point of view, a mortgage debt may A mortgage be defined to be an interest in land of a personal nature, recognized as such only by the Court of Chancery, in its in land in office of administering equity. In equity, a mortgage debt is a sum of money, the payment whereof is secured, with interest, on certain lands; and being money, it is personal property, subject to all the incidents which appertain to such property. The Courts of Law, on the other hand, do not regard a mortgage in the light of a mere security for the repayment of money with interest. A mortgage in law is an absolute conveyance, subject to an agreement for a re-conveyance on a certain given event. Thus, let us suppose freehold lands to be con- Example. veyed by A., a person seised in fee, to B. and his heirs, debt is a personal interest equity only.

subject to a proviso, that on repayment on a given future day, by A. to B., of a sum of money then lent by B. to A., with interest until repayment, B. or his heirs will reconvey the lands to A. and his heirs; and with a further proviso, that until default shall be made in payment of the money, A. and his heirs may hold the land without any interruption from B. or his heirs. Here we have at once a common mortgage of freehold land (a). A., who conveys the land, is called the mort-

(a) By stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, mortgages are now subject to an ad valorem duty of one-eighth per cent. or half-a-crown per hundred pounds on the amount of the mortgage money, according to the following table :—

				S.	d.
Not exce	eding £50			1	3
Exceedin	g £50 and	n ot exc eedir	ng £100	2	6
>>	100	,,	150	3	9
,,	150		200	5	0
,,	200	22	250	6	3
"	250	,,	300	7	6
And where the same shall exceed £300, then fo	r every £1	00 and also	for any fraction	al part of J	C100		2	6

And where the same shall be made as a security for the repayment of money to be thereafter lent, advanced, or paid, or which may become due upon an account current, together with any sum already advanced or due, or without, as the case may be (other than and except any sum or sums of money to be advanced for the insurance of any property comprised in such mortgage against damage by fire, or to be advanced for the insurance of any life or lives, or for the renewal of any grant or lease upon the dropping of any life or lives, pursuant to any agreement in any deed whereby any estate or interest held upon such life or lives shall be granted, assigned or assured, or whereby any annuity shall be granted or secured for such life or lives), if the total amount of the money secured, or to be ultimately recoverable thereupon, shall be limited not to exceed a given sum, the same duty will be payable as on a mortgage for such limited sum. And if the total amount secured or to be ultimately recoverable shall be uncertain and without any limit, the deed will be available as a security or charge for such an amount only as the ad valorem duty denoted by any stamp or stamps thereon will extend to cover. The progressive duty is the same as on purchase deeds. See ante, pp. 176, 177.

gagor; B., who lends the money, and to whom the land is conveyed, is called the mortgagee. The conveyance of the land from A. to B. gives to B., as is evident, an estate in fee simple at law. He thenceforth becomes, at law, the absolute owner of the premises, subject to the agreement under which A. has a right of enjoyment, until the day named for the payment of the money (b); on which day, if the money be duly paid, B. has agreed to re-convey the estate to A. If, when the day comes, A. should repay the money with interest, B. of course must re-convey the lands; but if the money should not be repaid punctually on the day fixed, there is evidently nothing on the face of the arrangement to prevent B. from keeping the lands to himself and his heirs for ever. But upon this arrangement, a very different construction is placed by a Court of law and by a Court of equity, a construction which well illustrates the difference between the two.

The Courts of law, still adhering, according to their Construction of ancient custom, to the strict literal meaning of the term, a mortgage in law. hold, that if A. do not pay or tender the money punctually on the day named, he shall lose the land for ever; and this, according to Littleton(c), is the origin of the term mortgage or mortuum vadium, " for that it is doubt- Origin of the ful whether the feoffor will pay at the day limited such sum or not: and if he doth not pay, then the land which is put in pledge, upon condition for the payment of the money, is taken from him for ever, and is dead to him upon condition, &c. And if he doth pay the money, then the pledge is dead as to the tenant, &c." Correct, however, as is Littleton's statement of the law, the accuracy of his derivation may be guestioned; as the term mortgage.

(b) See as to this, Doe d. Roy-Q. B. 147; Rogers v. Grazebrook, lance v. Lightfoot, 8 Mee. & W. 8 Q. B. 895. 553; Doe d. Parsley v. Day, 2 (c) Sect. 332.

word mortgage appears to have been applied, in more early times, to a feoffment to the creditor and his heirs, to be held by him until his debtor paid him a given sum; until which time he received the rents without account, so that the estate was unprofitable or dead to the debtor in the meantime (d); the rents being taken in lieu of interest, which, under the name of usury, was anciently regarded as an unchristian abomination (e). This species of mortgage has, however, long been disused, and the form above given is now constantly employed. From the date of the mortgage deed, the legal estate in fee simple belongs, not to the mortgagor, but to the mortgagee. The mortgagor, consequently, is thenceforward unable to create any legal estate or in-The mortgagor terest in the premises; he cannot even make a valid lease for a term of years (f),—a point of law too frequently neglected by those whose necessities have obliged them to mortgage their estates. When the day named for payment is passed, the mortgagee, if not repaid his money, may at any time bring an action of ejectment against the mortgagor without any notice, and thus turn him out of possession (q); so that, if the debtor had no greater mercy shown to him than a Court of law will allow, the smallest want of punctuality in his payment would cause him for ever to lose the estate he had Stat. 7 Geo. II. pledged. In modern times, a provision has certainly been made by act of parliament for staying the proceedings in any action of ejectment brought by the mort-

> (d) Glanville, lib. 10, cap. 6; Coote on Mortgages, ch. 2.

> (e) Interest was first allowed by law by stat. 37 Hen. VIII. c. 9, by which also interest above ten per cent. was forbidden.

> (f) See Doe d. Barney v. Adams, 2 Cro. & Jerv. 235; Whitton v. Peacock, 2 Bing. N. C. 411; Green v. James, 6 Mee. & Wels. 656;

Doe d. Lord Downe v. Thompson, 9 Q. B. 1037; Cuthbertson v. Irving, 4 H. & N. 724; 6 H. & N. 135.

(g) Keech v. Hall, Doug. 21; Doe d. Roby v. Maisey, 8 Bar. & Cres. 767; Doe d. Fisher v. Giles, 5 Bing. 421; Coote on Mortgages, book 3, ch. 3.

The legal estate belongs to the mortgagee.

cannot even make a valid lease.

When the day of payment is passed, the mortgagee may eject the mortgagor without notice.

c. 20.

gagee, on payment by the mortgagor, being the defendant in the action (h), of all principal, interest and costs (i). But at the time of this enactment, the jurisdiction of equity over mortgages had become fully established; and the act may consequently be regarded as ancillary only to that full relief, which, as we shall see, the Court of Chancery is accustomed to afford to the mortgagor in all such cases.

The relative rights of mortgagor and mortgagee ap- Interposition pear to have long remained on the footing of the strict Chancery. construction of their bargain, adopted by the Courts of law. It was not till the reign of James I. that the Court of Chancery took upon itself to interfere between the parties (j). But at length, having determined to interpose, it went so far as boldly to lay down as one of its rules, that no agreement of the parties, for the exclusion of its interference, should have any effect (k). This rule, no less benevolent than bold, is a striking instance of that determination to enforce fair dealing between man and man, which has raised the Court of Chancery, notwithstanding the many defects in its system of administration, to its present power and dignity. The Court of Chancery accordingly holds, that after the day fixed for the payment of the money has passed, the mortgagor has still a right to redeem his estate, on payment to the mortgagee of all principal, interest and costs due upon the mortgage to the time of actual payment. This right Equity of reis called the mortgagor's equity of redemption; and no demption. agreement with the creditor, expressed in any terms, however stringent, can deprive the debtor of his equitable right, on payment within a reasonable time. If, therefore, after the day fixed in the deed for payment, (h) Doe d. Hurst v. Clifton, 4 Adol. & Ell. 814.

(i) Stats. 7 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 1; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, ss. 219, 220.

(j) Coote on Mortgages, book 1, ch. 3.

(k) 2 Cha. Ca. 148; 7 Vcs. 273.

the mortgagee should, as he still may, eject the mortgagor by an action of ejectment in a Court of law, the Court of Chancery will nevertheless compel him to keep a strict account of the rents and profits; and, when he has received so much as will suffice to repay him the principal money lent, together with interest and costs, he will be compelled to re-convey the estate to his former debtor. In equity the mortgagee is properly considered as having no right to the estate, further than is necessary to secure to himself the due re-payment of the money he has advanced, together with interest for the loan; the equity of redemption, which belongs to the mortgagor, renders the interest of the mortgagee merely of a personal nature, namely, a security for so much money. In a Court of law, the mortgagee is absolutely entitled; and the estate mortgaged may be devised by his will (1), or, if he should die intestate, will descend to his heir at law; but in equity he has a security only for the payment of money, the right to which will, in common with his other personal estate, devolve on his executors or administrators, for whom his devisee or heir will be a trustee; and, when they are paid, such devisee or heir will be obliged by the Court of Chancery, without receiving a sixpence for himself, to re-convey the estate to the mortgagor.

Indulgent, however, as the Court of Chancery has shown itself to the debtor, it will not allow him for ever to deprive the mortgagee, his ereditor, of the money which is his due; and if the mortgagor will not repay him within a reasonable time, equity will allow the mortgagee for ever to retain the estate to which he is already entitled at law. For this purpose it will be necessary for the mortgagee to file a bill of foreclosure against the mortgagor, praying that an account may be taken of the principal and interest due to him, and that the mortgagor may be directed to pay the same, with costs, by a short day, to be appointed by the Court, and that in default thereof he may be foreclosed his equity of redemption (m). A day is then fixed by the Court for payment; which day, however, may, on the application of the mortgagor, good reason being shown(n), be postponed for a time. Or, if the mortgagor should be ready to make re-payment, before the cause is brought to a hearing, he may do so at any time previously, on making proper application to the Court, admitting the title of the mortgagee to the money and interest (o). If, however, on the day ultimately fixed by the Court, the money should not be forthcoming, the debtor will then be absolutely deprived of all right to any further assistance from the Court; in other words, his equity of redemption will be foreclosed, and the mortgagee will be allowed to keep, without further hindrance, the estate which was conveyed to him when the mortgage was first made. By the act to amend the practice and New enactcourse of proceeding in the Court of Chancery, the Court is empowered, in any suit for foreclosure, to direct a sale of the property at the request of either party instead of a foreclosure (p). And the equitable juris- County Courts. diction of the Court of Chancery is now extended to the County Courts with respect to all sums not exceeding five hundred pounds (q).

Foreclosure.

(1) See 1 Jarm. Wills, 638, 1st ed.; 591, 2nd ed.; 654, 3rd ed.

In addition to the remedy by foreclosure, which, it will be perceived, involves the necessity of a suit in Chancery, a more simple and less expensive remedy is now usually provided in mortgage transactions; this is Power of sale.

 (m) Coote on Mortgages, book
 (p) Stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86,

 5, ch. 4.
 s. 48; Hurst v. Hurst, 16 Beav.

 (n) Nanny v. Edwards, 4 Russ.
 374; Newman v. Selfe, 33 Beav.

 124; Eyre v. Hanson, 2 Beav. 478.
 522.

 (o) Stat. 7 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2.
 (q). Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99.

The mortgagor's concurrence cannot be required.

New enactment.

Statutory powers of sale, &c.

nothing more than a power given by the mortgage deed to the mortgagee, without further authority, to sell the premises, in case default should be made in payment. When such a power is exercised, the mortgagee, having the whole estate in fee simple at law, is of course able to convey the same estate to the purchaser; and, as this remedy would be ineffectual, if the concurrence of the mortgagor were necessary, it has been decided that his concurrence cannot be required by the purchaser (r). The mortgagee, therefore, is at any time able to sell; but, having sold, he has no further right to the money produced by the sale than he had to the lands before they were sold. He is at liberty to retain to himself his principal, interest and costs; and having done this, the surplus, if any, must be paid over to the mortgagor. And, by a recent act of parliament (s), a power of sale, a power to insure against fire, and a power to require the appointment of a receiver of the rents, or in default to appoint any person as such receiver, have been rendered incident to every mortgage or charge by deed affecting any hereditaments of any tenure. These powers, however, do not arise until after the expiration of one year from the time when the principal money shall have become payable according to the terms of the deed, or after any interest on such principal money shall have been in arrear for six months, or after any omission to pay any premium on any insurance, which by the terms of the deed ought to be paid by the person entitled to the property subject to the charge (t). And no sale is to be made until after six months' notice in writing (u). But none of these powers are to be exercisable, if it be declared in the mortgage-deed that they shall

(r) Corder v. Morgan, 18 Ves.
344; Clay v. Sharpe, Sugd. Vend.
& Pur. Appendix, No. XIII. p.
1096, 11th ed.

(s) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, part 2.

(t) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 11.

(u) Sect. 13.

not take effect; and where there is no such declaration, then if any variations or limitations of any of the powers are contained in the deed, such powers shall be exercisable only subject to such variations or limitations (v).

If, after the day fixed for the payment of the money Mortgagor is passed, the mortgagor should wish to pay off the must give six calendar mortgage, he must give to the mortgagee six calendar mouths' notice months' previous notice in writing of his intention so to of intention to repay. do, and must then punctually pay or tender the money at the expiration of the notice (w); for if the money should not be then ready to be paid, the mortgagee will be entitled to fresh notice; as it is only reasonable that he should have time afforded him to look out for a fresh security for his money.

Mortgages of freehold lands are sometimes made for Mortgages for long terms, such as 1000 years. But this is not now long terms of often the case, as the fec simple is more valuable, and therefore preferred as a security. Mortgages for long terms, when they occur, are usually made by trustees, in whom the terms have been vested in trust to raise, by mortgage, money for the portions of the younger children of a family, or other similar purposes. The reasons for vesting such terms in trustees for these purposes were explained in the last chapter (x).

Copyhold, as well as freehold lands, may be the sub- Mortgage of jects of mortgage. The purchase of copyholds, it will copyholds. be remembered, is effected by a surrender of the lands from the vendor into the hands of the lord of the manor, to the use of the purchaser, followed by the admittance of the latter as tenant to the lord (y). The mortgage of copyholds is effected by surrender, in a similar manner,

	(v)	Stat. 23	3&	24 Vict.	C.	145,	Ca. Abr. 603, pl. 34.
s.	32,	see ante	e, p.	286.			(x) See ante, p. 379.
	(w)) Shrapn	ell	v. Blake,	2	Eq.	(y) Ante, pp. 346, 348.

years.

from the mortgagor to the use of the mortgagee and his heirs, subject to a condition, that on payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of the money lent, together with interest, on a given day, the surrender shall be void. If the money should be duly paid on the day fixed, the surrender will be void accordingly, and the mortgagor will continue entitled to his old estate; but if the money should not be duly paid on that day, the mortgagee will then acquire at law an absolute right to be admitted to the customary estate which was surrendered to him; subject nevertheless to the equitable right of the mortgagor, confining the actual benefit derived by the former to his principal money, interest and costs. The mortgagee, however, is seldom admitted, unless he should wish to enforce his security, contenting himself with the right to admittance conferred upon him by the surrender; and, if the money should be paid off, all that will then be necessary will be to procure the steward to insert on the court rolls a memorandum of acknowledgment, by the mortgagee, of satisfaction of the principal money and interest secured by the surrender (z). If the mortgagee should have been admitted tenant, he must of course, on re-payment, surrender to the use of the mortgagor, who will then be re-admitted.

Mortgage of leaseholds. Leasehold estates also frequently form the subjects of mortgage. The term of years of which the estate consists is assigned by the mortgagor to the mortgagee, subject to a proviso for redemption or re-assignment on payment, on a given day, by the mortgagor to the mortgagee, of the sum of money advanced, with interest; and with a further proviso for the quiet enjoyment of the premises by the mortgagor until default shall be made in payment. The principles of equity as to redemption apply equally to such a mortgage, as to a mortgage of freeholds; but, as the security, being a term, is always wearing out, payment will not be permitted to be so long deferred. A power of sale also is frequently inserted in a mortgage of leaseholds, and the statutory powers given by the act already referred to(a) extends also to leaseholds. From what has been said in the last chapter (b), it will appear that, as the mortgagee is an assignee of the term, he will be liable to the landlord, during the continuance of the mortgage, for the payment of the rent and the performance of the covenants of the lease; against this liability the covenant of the mortgagor is his only security. In order, therefore, to obviate this liability, when the rent or covenants are onerous, mortgages of leaseholds are frequently made by way of demise or underlease : the mortgagee by this means Mortgage by becomes the tenant only of the mortgagor, and consequently a mere stranger with regard to the landlord (c). The security of the mortgagee in this case is obviously not the whole term of the mortgagor, but only the new and derivative term created by the mortgage.

(z) 1 Scriv. Cop. 242; 1 Watk. Cop. 117, 118.

underlease.

In some cases the exigency of the circumstances will Deposit of not admit of time to prepare a regular mortgage; a title deeds. deposit of the title deeds is then made with the mortgagee; and notwithstanding the stringent provision of the Statute of Frauds to the contrary (d), it has been held by the Court of Chancery that such a deposit, even without any writing, operates as an equitable mortgage of the estate of the mortgagor in the lands comprised in the deeds (e). And the same doctrine applies to copies of court roll relating to copyhold lands(f), for such copies are the title deeds of copyholders.

- (a) Ante, p. 396. (b) Ante, p. 366.
- (c) See ante, p. 376.

(d) 29 Car. II. c. 3, ss. 1, 3; ante, p. 141.

(e) Russell v. Russell, 1 Bro. C. C. 269. See Ex parte Haigh, 11 Ves. 403.

(f) Whitbread v. Jordan, 1 You. & Coll. 303; Lewis v. John. Vendor's lien.

Sale for annuity.

A stipulation to raise the interest on failure of punctual payment is void.

But a stipulation to diminish the interest on punctual payment is good.

When lands are sold, but the whole of the purchase money is not paid to the vendor, he has a lien in equity on the lands for the amount unpaid, together with interest at four per cent., the usual rate allowed in equity (g). And the circumstance of the vendor having taken from the purchaser a bond or a note for the payment of the money will not destroy the lien (h). But if the vendor take a mortgage of part of the estate, or any other independent security, his lien will be gone. If the sale be made in consideration of an annuity, it appears that a lien will subsist for such annuity (i), unless a contrary intention can be inferred from the nature of the transaction (h).

A curious illustration of the anxiety of the Court of Chancery to prevent any imposition being practised by the mortgage upon the mortgagor occurs in the following doctrine: that, if money be lent at a given rate of interest, with a stipulation that, on failure of punctual payment, such rate shall be increased, this stipulation is held to be void as too great a hardship on the mortgagor: whereas, the very same effect may be effectually accomplished by other words. If the stipulation be, that the higher rate shall be paid, but on punctual payment a lower rate of interest shall be accepted, such a stipulation, being for the benefit of the mortgagor, is valid, and will be allowed to be enforced (l). The highest rate of interest which could be taken upon the mortgage of any

1 C. P. Coop. 8. See, however, Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 630; 13th ed.; Jones v. Smith, 1 Hare, 56; 1 Phill. 244.

(g) Chapman v. Tanner, 1 Vern.
267; Pollixfen v. Moore, 3 Atk.
272; Mackreth v. Symmons, 15
Ves. 328; Sugd. Vend. & Pur.
552, 13th ed.

(h) Grant v. Mills, 2 Ves. &

Bea. 306; Winter v. Lord Anson, 3 Russ. 488.

(i) Matthew v. Bowler, 6 Hare, 110.

(k) Buckland v. Pocknell, 13
 Sim. 496; Dixon v. Gayfere, 21
 Beav. 118; 1 De Gex & Jones, 655.

(1) 3 Burr. 1374; 1 Fonb. Eq. 398.

lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any estate or interest therein, was formerly 51. per cent. per annum; and 51. per cent. all contracts and assurances, whereby a greater rate of highest rate of interest was reserved or taken on any such security, were interest on deemed to have been made or executed for an illegal lands. consideration (m). By a modern statute (n), the previous restriction of the interest of all loans to 5l. per cent. was removed, with respect to contracts for the loan or forbearance of money above the sum of 10l. sterling; but loans upon the security of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any estate or interest therein, were expressly excepted (o). But, by an act of parliament passed on Repeal of the the 10th of August, 1854 (p), all the laws against usury usury laws. were repealed; so that, now, any rate of interest may be taken on a mortgage of lands which the mortgagor is willing to pay.

The loan of money on mortgage is an investment fre- Mortgages to quently resorted to by trustees, when authorized by their trust to make such use of the money committed to their care; in such a case, the fact that they are trustees, and the nature of their trust, are usually omitted in the mortgage deed, in order that the title of the mortgagor or his representatives may not be affected by the trusts. It is, however, a rule of equity, that when money is advanced by more persons than one, it shall be deemed, unless the contrary be expressed, to have been lent in equal shares by each (q); if this were the case, the executor or administrator of any one of the parties would, on his decease, be entitled to receive his share (r). In order, (m) Stat. 12 Anne, st. 2, c. 16; 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 41; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37; Thibault v. Gibson, 12 Mee. & Wels. 88 ; Hodgskinson v. Wyatt, 4 Q. B. 749.

(n) 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, continued by stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 56.

(o) See Follett v. Moore, 4 Ex. R.P.

Rep. 410.

(p) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 90.

(q) 3 Atk. 734; 2 Ves. sen. 258; 3 Ves. jun. 631.

(r) Petty v. Styward, 1 Cha. Rep. 57; 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 290; Vickers v. Cowell, 1 Beav. 529.

D D mortgages of trustees.

therefore, to prevent the application of this rule, it is usual to declare, in all mortgages made to trustees, that the money is advanced by them on a joint account, and that, in case of the decease of any of them in the lifetime of the others, the receipts of the survivors or survivor shall be an effectual discharge for the whole of the money.

We have already defined a mortgage debt as an interest in land of a personal nature (s); and in accordance with this view, it has been held that judgment debts against the mortgagee are a charge upon his interest in the mortgaged lands (t). But it has been provided by a recent statute (u), that where any mortgage shall have been paid off prior to, or at the time of, the conveyance of the lands to a purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration, the lands shall be discharged both from the judgment and crown debts of the mortgagee. And by a still more recent statute, to which we have already referred (v), the lien of all judgments, of a date later than the 29th of July, 1864, has been abolished.

Transfer of mortgages.

Mortgages are frequently transferred from one person to another. The mortgagee may wish to be paid off, and another person may be willing to advance the same or a further amount on the same security. In such a case the mortgage debt and interest are assigned by the old to the new mortgagee; and the lands which form the security are conveyed, or if leasehold assigned, by the old to the new mortgagee, subject to the equity of redemption which may be subsisting in the premises; that is, subject to the right in equity of the mortgagor

(s) Ante, p. 389. (t) Russell v. M'Culloch, V. C. Wood, 1 Jur. N. S. 157; S. C. 1 Kay & J. 313.

(u) Stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 11; Greaves v. Wilson, Rolls, 4 Jur. N. S. 802; S. C. 25 Beavan, 434.

(v) Stat. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, ante, p. 82.

Judgment debts a charge on mortgagee's interest in the lands.

New enactment. or his representatives to redeem the premises on payment of the principal sum secured by the mortgage, with all interest and costs. By the recent act to amend Stamp duty on the laws relating to the inland revenue (w), which was transfers of mortgages. passed on the 5th of July, 1865, every transfer of a mortgage is charged with the duty of sixpence for every 1001., or fractional part of 1001., of the amount or value of the principal money or stock transferred; and if any further sum of money or stock shall be added to the principal money or stock already secured, there shall be charged and paid also the same duty as on a mortgage for the amount or value of such further money or stock(x). Mortgages are occasionally made for securing the re-transfer of stock transferred to the mortgagor, as well as for securing the repayment of money advanced to him by the mortgagee.

During the continuance of a mortgage, the equity of Equity of reredemption which belongs to the mortgagor is regarded demption is an equitable by the Court of Chancery as an estate, which is alien-estate. able by the mortgagor, and descendible to his heir, in the same manner as any other estate in equity (y); the Court in truth regards the mortgagor as the owner of the same estate as before, subject only to the mortgage. In the event of the decease of the mortgagor, the lands mortgaged will consequently devolve on the devisee under his will, or, if he should have died intestate, on his heir. And the mortgage debt, to which the lands are subject, was until recently payable in the first place, like all other debts, out of the personal estate of the mortgagor (z). As in equity the lands are only a security to the mortgagee, in case the mortgagor should not pay him, so also in equity the lands still devolved as the (w) Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 96, s. 17.

(x) Ante, p. 390.

(y) See ante, p. 150, et seq.

⁽z) See Yates v. Aston, 4 Q. B. 182; Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 762; Essay on Real Assets. p. 27.

The mortgage debt now primarily payable out of the mortgaged lands. real estate of the mortgagor, subject only to be resorted to for payment of the debt, in the event of his personal estate being insufficient for the purpose. But by a recent act of parliament (a) it is now provided, that when any person shall, after the 31st of December, 1854, die seised of or entitled to any estate or interest in any land or other hereditaments which shall at the time of his death be charged with the payment of any sum of money by way of mortgage, and such person shall not, by his will or deed or other document, have signified any contrary or other intention, the heir or devisee, to whom such lands or hereditaments shall descend or be devised, shall not be entitled to have the mortgage debt discharged or satisfied out of the personal estate or any other real estate of such person; but the land or hereditaments so charged shall, as between the different persons claiming through or under the deceased person, be primarily liable to the payment of all mortgage debts with which the same shall be charged; every part thereof, according to its value, bearing a proportionate part of the mortgage debts charged on the whole thereof; provided that nothing therein contained shall affect or diminish any right of the mortgagee to obtain full payment of his mortgage debt either out of the personal estate of the person so dying as aforesaid or otherwise; provided also, that nothing therein contained shall affect the rights of any person claiming under any deed, will or document made before the 1st of January, 1855.

Mortgage of equity of redemption. The equity of redemption belonging to the mortgagor may again be mortgaged by him, either to the former mortgagee by way of further charge, or to any other person. In order to prevent frauds by clandestine mortgages, it is provided by an act of William and Mary (b),

(a) Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 113; 106. see Essay on Real Asscts, pp. 36, (b) Stat. 4 & 5 Will. & Mary, that a person twice mortgaging the same lands, without discovering the former mortgage to the second mortgagee, shall lose his equity of redemption. Unfortunately, however, in such cases the equity of redemption, after payment of both mortgages, is generally worth nothing. And if the mortgagor should again mortgage the lands to a third person, the act will not deprive such third mortgagee of his right to redeem the two former mortgages (c). When lands are mortgaged, as occasionally happens, to several persons, each ignorant of the security granted to the other, the general rule is, that the several mortgages rank as charges on the lands in the order of time in which they were made, according to the maxim qui prior est tempore, potior est jure (d). But as the first mortgagee alone obtains the legal estate, he has this advantage over the others, that if he takes a further charge on a subsequent advance to the mortgagor, without notice of any intermediate second mortgage, he will be preferred to an intervening second mortgage (e). And if a third mortgagee, who has made his advance without notice of a second mortgage, can procure a transfer to himself of the first mortgage, he may tack, as Tacking. it is said, his third mortgage to the first, and so postpone the intermediate incumbrancer (f). For, in a contest between innocent parties, each having equal right to the assistance of a Court of Equity, the one who happens to have the legal estate is preferred to the others; the maxim being, that when the equities are equal, the law shall prevail. A mortgage, however, may be made for Mortgage for securing the payment of money which may thereafter future debts. become due from the mortgagor to the mortgagee;

c. 16, s. 3; see Kennard v. Futvoye, 2 Giff. 81.

(c) Sect. 4.

(d) Jones v. Jones, 8 Sim. 633; Wiltshire v. Rabbits, 14 Sim. 76; Wilmot v. Pike, 5 Hare, 14.

(e) Goddard v. Complin, 1 Cha. Ca. 119.

(f) Brace v. Duchess of Marlborough, 2 P. Wms. 491; Bates v. Johnson, 1 Johnson, 304.

Future costs.

Future advances. with this exception, that a solicitor is forbidden to take from his client such a security for future costs, lest he should be tempted on the strength of it to run up a long bill (g). Where a mortgage extends to future advances, it has recently been decided, that the mortgagee cannot safely make such advances, if he have notice of an intervening second mortgage (h).

(g) Jones v. Tripp, Jac. 322.	L. 9 W. R. 900, S. C. 9 H. of L.
(h) Rolt v. Hopkinson, L. C.,	Cas. 514; overruling Gordon v.
4 Jur. N. S. 1119, S. C. 3 De Gex	Graham, 7 Vin. Ab. 52, pl. 3.
& Jones, 177, affirmed in the H. of (407)

PART V.

OF TITLE.

IT is evident that the acquisition of property is of little benefit, unless accompanied with a prospect of retaining it without interruption. In ancient times conveyances were principally made from a superior to an inferior, as from the great baron to his retainer, or from a father to his daughter on her marriage (a). The grantee became the tenant of the grantor; and if any consideration were given for the grant, it more frequently assumed the form of an annual rent, than the immediate payment of a large sum of money (b). Under these circumstances, it may readily be supposed, that, if the grantor were ready to warrant the grantee quiet possession, the title of the former to make the grant would not be very strictly investigated; and this appears to have been the practice in ancient times; every charter or deed of feoffment usually ending with a clause of warranty, by Warranty. which the feoffor agreed that he and his heirs would warrant, acquit, and for ever defend the feoffee and his heirs against all persons (c). Even if this warranty were not expressly inserted, still it would seem that the word give, used in a feoffment, had the effect of an im- Warranty implied warranty; but the force of such implied warranty plied by word was confined to the feoffor only, exclusive of his heirs, whenever a feoffment was made of lands to be holden of the chief lord of the fee (d). Under an express war- Express warranty, the feoffor, and also his heirs, were bound, not ranty. only to give up all claim to the lands themselves, but also to give to the feoffee or his heirs other lands of the same value, in case of the eviction of the feoffee or his heirs by any person having a prior title (e); and this warranty was binding on the heir of the feoffor whether he derived any lands by descent from the feoffor or not(f), except only in the case of the warranty commencing, as it was said, by disseisin; that is, in the case of the feoffor making a feoffment with warranty of lands of which he, by that very act(g), disseised some person (h), in which case it was too palpable a hardship to make the heir answerable for the misdeed of his ancestor. But even with this exception, the right to bind the heir by warranty was found to confer on the ancestor too great a power; thus, a husband, whilst tenant by the curtesy of his deceased wife's lands, could, by making a feoffment of such lands with warranty, deprive his son of the inheritance; for the eldest son of the marriage would usually be heir both to his mother and to his father; as heir to his mother he would be entitled to her lands, but as heir of his father he was bound by his warranty. This particular case was the first in which a restraint was applied by parliament to the effect of a warranty, it having been enacted (i), that the son should not, in such a case, be barred by the warranty of his father, unless any heritage descended to him of his father's side, and then he was to be barred only to the extent of the value of the heritage so descended. The force of a warranty was afterwards greatly restrained by other statutes, enacted to meet other cases (k); and the clause of warranty having long been disused in modern conveyancing, its chief force and effect have now been removed by clauses of two modern statutes, passed Warranty now ineffectual.

(a) See ante, p. 36. (b) Ante, p. 36.

17 a.

(d) 4 Edw. I. stat. 3, c. 6; 2 (c) Bract. lib. 2, cap. 6, fol. Inst. 275; Co. Litt. 384 a, n. (1).

(e) Co. Litt. 365 a.
(f) Litt. s. 712.
(g) Litt. s. 704; Co. Litt. 371 a.
(h) Litt. ss. 697, 698, 699, 700.
(i) Stat. 6 Edw. I. c. 3.

(k) Stat. De donis, 13 Edw. I. c. 1, as construed by the judges, see Co. Litt. 373 b, n. (2); Vaughan, 375; stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 20; 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, s. 21. at the recommendation of the real property commissioners (l).

In addition to an express warranty, there were for- Words which merly some words used in conveyancing, which in themselves implied a covenant for quiet enjoyment; and one of these words, namely, the word demise, still retains this power. Thus, if one man demises and lets land to Demise. another for so many years, this word demise operates as an absolute covenant for the quiet enjoyment of the lands by the lessee during the term (m). But if the lease should contain an express covenant by the lessor for quiet enjoyment, limited to his own acts only, such express covenant showing clearly what is intended will nullify the implied covenant, which the word demise would otherwise contain (n). So, as we have seen, the word give formerly implied a personal warranty; and Give. the word grant was supposed to have implied a war- Grant. ranty, unless followed by an express covenant, imposing on the grantor a less liability (o). An exchange and a Exchange. partition between coparceners have also until recently Partition. implied a mutual right of re-entry, on the eviction of either of the parties from the lands exchanged or partitioned (p). And, by the Registry Acts for Yorkshire, the words grant, bargain, and sell, in a deed of bargain Grant, bargain and sale of an estate in fee simple, inrolled in the Register Office, imply covenants for the quiet enjoyment of the lands in Yorklands against the bargainor, his heirs and assigns, and all claiming under him, and also, for further assurance thereof, by the bargainor, his heirs and assigns, and all claiming under him, unless restrained by express words (q). The word grant, by virtue of some other acts

(1) 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, s. 39; 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, s. 14.

(m) Spencer's case, 5 Rep. 17 a; Bac. Ab. tit. Covenant (B).

(n) Nokc's case, 4 Rep. 80 b.

(o) See Co. Litt. 384 a, n. (1). (p) Bustard's case, 4 Rep. 121 (a). (q) Stat. 6 Anne, c. 35, ss. 30, 34; 8 Geo. II. c. 6, s. 35.

in themselves imply a covenant for quiet enjoyment.

and sell, in bargain and sale of shire.

New enactment. of parliament, also implies covenants for the title (r). But the act to amend the law of real property now provides that an exchange or a partition of any tenements or hereditaments made by deed shall not imply any condition in law; and that the word give or the word grant in a deed shall not imply any covenant in law in respect of any tenements or hereditaments, except so far as the word give or the word grant may by force of any act of parliament imply a covenant (s). The author is not aware of any act of parliament by force of which the word give implies a covenant.

Covenants for title.

The absence of a warranty is principally supplied in modern times by a strict investigation of the title of the person who is to convey; although, in most cases, covenants for title, as they are termed, are also given to the purchaser. On the sale or mortgage of copyhold lands these covenants are usually contained in a deed of covenant to surrender, by which the surrender itself is immediately preceded (t), the whole being regarded as one transaction (u). By these covenants, the heirs of the vendor are always expressly bound; but, like all other similar contracts, they are binding on the heir or devisee of the covenantor to the extent only of the property which may descend to the one, or be devised to the (r) As in conveyances by companies under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 132; and in conveyances to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 20, s. 22. Conveyances by joint stock companies registered under the Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856 (now repealed), also implied covenants for title. Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, s. 46. (s) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4, repealing 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 6.

(t) By stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, such a deed of covenant is now charged with a duty of 10s., and if the ad valorem duty on the sale or mortgage is less than that sum, then a duty of equal amount only is payable, with a progressive duty similar to that on a purchase. See ante, pp. 176, 177.

(u) Riddell v. Riddell, 7 Sim. 529.

other (v). Unlike the simple clause of warranty in ancient days, modern covenants for title are five in number, and few conveyancing forms can exceed them in the luxuriant growth to which their verbiage has attained (w). The first covenant is, that the vendor is seised in fee simple; the next, that he has good right to convey the lands; the third, that they shall be quietly enjoyed; the fourth, that they are free from incumbrances; and the last, that the vendor and his heirs will make any further assurance for the conveyance of the premises which may reasonably be required. At the present day, however, the first covenant is usually omitted, the second being evidently quite sufficient without it; and the length of the remaining covenants has of late years somewhat diminished. These covenants for title vary in comprehensiveness, according to the circumstances of the case. A vendor never gives absolute covenants for the title to Covenants for the lands he sells, but always limits his responsibility to the acts of those who have been in possession since the last sale of the estate; so that if the land should have been purchased by his father, and so have descended to the vendor, or have been left to him by his father's will, the covenants will extend only to the acts of his father and himself (x); but, if the vendor should himself have purchased the lands, he will covenant only as to his own acts (y), and the purchaser must ascertain, by an examination of the previous title, that the vendor purchased what he may properly re-sell. A mortgagor, on the Covenants for other hand, always gives absolute covenants for title; for those who lend money are accustomed to require every possible security for its re-payment; and, notwithstanding these absolute covenants, the title is investigated on every mortgage, with equal, and indeed with greater title by a vendor.

title by a mortgagor.

- (v) Ante, pp. 74, 75.
- (w) See Appendix (C).

(x) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 463,

13th ed.

(y) See Appendix (C).

Covenants by trustees. strictness, than on a purchase. When a sale is made by trustees, who have no beneficial interest in the property themselves, they merely covenant that they have respectively done no act to encumber the premises. If the money is to be paid over to A. or B., or any persons in fixed amounts, the persons who take the money are expected to covenant for the title (z); but, if the money belongs to infants, or other persons who cannot covenant, or is to be applied in payment of debts or for any similar purpose, the purchaser must rely for the security of the title solely on the accuracy of his own investigation (a).

The period for which the title is investigated is the Sixty years' title required. last sixty years (b); and every vendor of freehold property is bound to furnish the intended purchaser with an abstract of all the deeds, wills and other instruments which have been executed, with respect to the lands in question, during that period; and also to give him an opportunity of examining such abstract with the original deeds, and with the probates or office copies of the wills; for, in every agreement to sell is implied by law an agreement to make a good title to the property to be sold (c). The proper length of title to an advowson is, Advowson. however, 100 years (d), as the presentations, which are the only fruits of the advowson, and, consequently, the only occasions when the title is likely to be contested, occur only at long intervals. On a purchase of copyhold Copyholds. lands, an abstract of the copies of court roll, relating to the property for the last sixty years, is delivered to the purchaser. And even on a purchase of leasehold pro-Leaseholds. perty, the purchaser is strictly entitled to a sixty years'

(z) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 464,	388.
18th ed.	(c) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 281,
(a) Ibid. 463.	13th ed.
(b) Cooper v. Emery, 1 Phill.	(d) Ibid. 307.

title (e); that is, supposing the lease to have been granted within the last sixty years, so much of the title of the lessor must be produced as, with the title to the term since its commencement, will make up the full period of sixty years.

It is not easy to say how the precise term of sixty Reason for reyears came to be fixed on as the time for which an quiring a sixty years' title. abstract of the title should be required. It is true, that by a statute of the reign of Hen. VIII. (f), the time within which a writ of right (a proceeding now abolished (g) might be brought for the recovery of lands was limited to sixty years; but still in the case of remainders after estates for life or in tail, this statute did not prevent the recovery of lands long after the period of sixty years had elapsed from the time of a conveyance by the tenant for life or in tail; for it is evident, that the right of a remainder-man, after an estate for life or in tail, to the possession of the lands does not accrue until the determination of the particular estate(h). A remainder after an estate tail may, however, be barred by the proper means; but a remainder after a mere life estate cannot. The ordinary duration of human life is Duration of therefore, if not the origin of the rule requiring a sixty human life. years' title, at least a good reason for its continuance. For, so long as the law permits of vested remainders after estates for life, and forbids the tenant for life, by any act, to destroy such remainders, so long must it be necessary to carry the title back to such a point as will afford a reasonable presumption that the first person (e) Purvis v. Rayer, 9 Price, (g) By stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. 488; Souter v. Drake, 5 B. & c. 27, s. 36. Adol, 992. (h) Ante, p. 233. See Sugd. (f) 32 Hen. VIII. c. 2; 3 Vend. & Pur. 609, 11th ed. Black, Com. 196.

OF TITLE.

mentioned as having conveyed the property was not a tenant for life merely, but a tenant in fee simple (i).

Concurrence of parties interested.

Application of purchasemoney.

The abstract of the title will of course disclose the names of all parties, who, besides the vendor, may be interested in the lands; and the concurrence of these parties must be obtained by him, in order that an unincumbered estate in fee simple may be conveyed to the purchaser. Thus, if the lands be in mortgage, the mortgagee must be paid off out of the purchase money, and must join to relinquish his security and convey the legal estate (k). If the wife of the vendor would, on his decease, be entitled to dower out of the lands (1), she must release her right and separately acknowledge the purchase deed (m). And when lands were sold by trustees, and the money was directed to be paid over by them to certain given persons, it was formerly obligatory on the purchaser to see that such persons were actually paid the money to which they were entitled, unless it were expressly provided by the instrument creating the trust, that the receipt of the trustees alone should be an effectual discharge (n). The duty thus imposed being often exceedingly inconvenient, and tending greatly to prejudice a sale, a declaration, that the receipt of the trustees should be an effectual discharge, was usually inserted, as a common form, in all settlements and trust deeds. The act to simplify the transfer of property (o) provided that the bona fide payment to, and the receipt of, any person, to whom any money should be payable upon any express or implied trust, or for any limited purpose, should effectually dis-

(i) See Mr. Brodie's opinion, 1	(m) Ante, p. 213.
Hayes's Conveyancing, 564; Sugd.	(n) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 541,
Vend. & Pur. 305, 13th ed.	13th ed.
(k) Ante, p. 392.	(o) Stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76,
(1) Ante, p. 214.	s. 10.

charge the person paying the same from seeing to the application or being answerable for the misapplication thereof, unless the contrary should be expressly declared by the instrument creating the trust. But this act was shortly afterwards repealed, without, however, any provision being made for such instruments as had been drawn without any receipt clause upon the faith of this enactment (p). Subsequently it was enacted that the New enactbonû fide payment to and the receipt of any person to whom any purchase or mortgage money should be payable upon any express or implied trust, should effectually discharge the person paying the same from seeing to the application, or being answerable for the misapplication thereof, unless the contrary should be expressly declared by the instrument creating the trust or security (q). And at length it has again been generally provided that Trustees' rethe receipts in writing of any trustees or trustee for ceipts now good disany money payable to them or him, by reason or in charges. the exercise of any trusts or powers reposed or vested in them or him, shall be sufficient discharges for the money therein expressed to be received, and shall effectually exonerate the persons paying such money from seeing to the application thereof, or from being answerable for any loss or misapplication thereof (r).

Supposing, however, that, through carelessness in investigating the title, or from any other cause, a man should happen to become possessed of lands, to which some other person is rightfully entitled; in this case it is evidently desirable that the person so rightfully entitled to the lands should be limited in the time during which he may bring an action to recover them. To deprive a man of that which he has long enjoyed, and

(p) Stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 23. s. 1. (r) Stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, (q) Stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 29.

Statutes of limitation.

Stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. still expects to enjoy, will be generally doing more harm than can arise from forbidding the person rightfully entitled, but who has long been ignorant or negligent as to his rights, to agitate claims which have long lain dormant. Various acts for the limitation of actions and suits relating to real property have accordingly been passed at different times (s). By a statute of the reign of George III. (t) the rights of the crown in all lands and hereditaments are barred after the lapse of sixty years. With respect to other persons, the act now in force (u) was passed in the reign of King William IV., at the suggestion of the real property commissioners. By this act, no person can bring an action for the recovery of lands but within twenty years next after the time at which the right to bring such action shall have first accrued to him, or to some person through whom he claims (x); and, as to estates in reversion or remainder, or other future estates, the right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which any such estate became an estate in possession (y). But a written acknowledgment of the title of the person entitled, given to him or his agent, signed by the person in possession, will extend the time of claim to twenty years from such acknowledgment(z). If, however, when the right to bring an action first accrues, the person entitled should be under disability to sue by reason of infancy, coverture (if a woman), idiocy, lunacy, unsoundness of mind, or absence beyond seas, ten years are allowed from the Disabilities.

(s) See 3 Black. Com. 196, 306, 307; stat. 21 Jac. I. c. 16; Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 608 et seq. 11th ed.
(t) Stat. 9 Geo. III. c. 16, amended by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 62, and extended to the Duke of Cornwall by stats. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 53, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 62, s. 2.

(u) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, amended as to mortgagees by stat.

7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 28.

(x) Sect. 2. See Nepean v. Doe, 2 Mee. & Wels. 894.

(y) Sect. 3. See Doe d. Johnson v. Liversedge, 11 Mee. & Wels. 517.

(z) Sect. 14. See Doe d. Curzon v. Edmonds, 6 Mee. & Wels. 295.

time when the person entitled shall have ceased to be under disability, or shall have died, notwithstanding the period of twenty years above mentioned may have expired (a), yet, so that the whole period do not, including the time of disability, exceed forty years (b); and no further time is allowed on account of the disability of any other person than the one to whom the right of action first accrues (c). By the same act whenever a Mortgagee in mortgagee has obtained possession of the land comprised possession. in his mortgage, the mortgagor shall not bring a suit to redeem the mortgage but within twenty years next after the time when the mortgagee obtained possession, or next after any written acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagor, or of his right to redemption, shall have been given to him or his agent, signed by the mortgage (d). By the same act the time for bringing an action or suit to Advowson. enforce the right of presentation to a benefice is limited to three successive incumbencies, all adverse to the right of presentation claimed, or to the period of sixty years, if the three incumbencies do not together amount to that time (e); but whatever the length of the incumbencies, no such action or suit can be brought after the expiration of 100 years from the time at which adverse possession of the benefice shall have been obtained (f). Money secured by mortgage or judgment, or otherwise Judgments. charged upon land, and also legacies, are to be deemed Legacies. satisfied at the end of twenty years, if no interest should be paid, or written acknowledgment given in the meantime (q). The right to rents, whether rents service or Rents.

- (a) Sect. 16.
- (b) Sect. 17.

(c) Sect. 18.

(d) Sect. 28. See Hyde v. Dallaway, 2 Hare, 528; Trulock v. Robey, 12 Sim. 402; Lucas v. Dennison, 13 Sim. 584; Stansfield v. Hobson, 16 Beav. 236.

(e) Sect. 30.

R.P.

(f) Sect. 33.

(g) Sect. 40. This section extends to legacies payable out of personal estate; Sheppard v. Duke, 9 Sim. 567. And in this case absence beyond seas is now no disability. Stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10.

OF TITLE.

Tithes.

rents charge, and also the right to tithes, when in the hands of laymen (h), is subject to the same period of limitation as the right to land (i). And in every case where the period limited by the act is determined, the right of the person who might have brought any action or suit for the recovery of the land, rent or advowson in question within the period, is extinguished (k).

Commons, ways, watercourses, and light. The several lengths of uninterrupted enjoyment which will render indefeasible rights of common, ways and watercourses, and the use of light for buildings, are regulated by another act of parliament (l), of by no means easy construction, on which a large number of judicial decisions have already taken place.

Title-deeds.

Importance of their possession.

Registration.

On any sale or mortgage of lands, all the title-deeds in the hands of the vendor or mortgagor, which relate exclusively to the property sold or mortgaged, are handed over to the purchaser or mortgagee. The possession of the deeds is of the greatest importance; for if the deeds were not required to be delivered, it is evident that property might be sold or mortgaged over and over again to different persons, without much risk of discovery. The only guarantee, for instance, which a purchaser has that the lands he contracts to purchase have not been mortgaged, is that the deeds are in the possession of the vendor. It is true that, in the counties of Middlesex and York, registries have been established, a search in which will lead to the detection of all dealings with

(h) Dean of Ely v. Bliss, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 459.

(i) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, s. 1. As to the time required to support a claim of modus decimandi, or exemption from or discharge of tithes, see stat. 2 & 3 Will. JV. c. 100, amended by stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 83; Salkeld v. Johnston, 1 Mac. & Gord. 242. The circumstances under which lands may be tithe free are well explained in Burton's Compendium, ch. 6, sect. 4.

(k) Sect. 34; Scott v. Nixon, 3 Dru. & War. 388; De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Ex. Rep. 166.

(1) Stat. 2 & 3 Will. I¥. c. 71.

418 the property (m); but these registries, though existing in Scotland and Ireland, do not extend to the remaining counties of England or to Wales. Generally speaking, therefore, the possession of the deeds is all that a purchaser has to depend on : in most cases this protection, coupled with an examination of the title they disclose, is found to be sufficient; but there are certain circumstances in which the possession of the deeds can afford no security. Thus, the possession of the deeds is no Possession of safeguard against an annuity or rent-charge payable out guard against of the lands; for the grantee of a rent-charge has no right to the decds (n). So the possession of the deeds, Nor against the vendor being showing the conveyance to the vendor of an estate in tenant for life fee-simple, is no guarantee that the vendor is not now only. actually seised only of a life estate; for, since he acquired the property, he may, very possibly, have married; and on his marriage he may have settled the lands on himself for his life, with remainder to his children. Being then tenant for life, he will, like every other tenant for life, be entitled to the custody of the deeds (o); and if he should be fraudulent enough to suppress the settlement, he might make a conveyance from himself, as though seised in fee, deducing a good title, and handing over the deeds; but the purchaser, having actually acquired by his purchase nothing more than the life in-

(m) See ante, p. 178.

(n) The writer met lately with an instance in which lands were, from pure inadvertence, sold as free from incumbrance, when in fact they were subject to a rentcharge, which had been granted by the vendor on his marriage to secure the payment of the premiums of a policy of insurance on his life. The marriage settlement was, as usual, prepared by the solicitor for the wife; and the vendor's solicitor, who conducted the sale, but had never seen the settlement, was not aware that any charge had been made on the lands. The vendor, a person of the highest respectability, was, as often happens, ignorant of the legal effect of the settlement he had signed. The charge was fortunately discovered by accident shortly before the completion of the sale.

(o) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 468, 11th ed.

E E 2

419

deeds no safea rent-charge.

terest of the vendor, would be liable, on his decease, to be turned out of possession by his children; for, as marriage is a valuable consideration, a settlement then made cannot be set aside by a subsequent sale made by the settlor. Against such a fraud as this, the registration of deeds seems the only protection. In some cases, also, persons are entitled to an interest, which they would like to sell, but are prevented, from not having any deeds to hand over. Thus if lands be settled on A. for his life, with remainder to B. in fee, A. during his life will be entitled to the deeds; and B. will find great difficulty in disposing of his reversion at an adequate price; because, having no deeds to give up, he has no means of satisfying a purchaser that the reversion has not previously been sold or mortgaged to some other person. If, therefore, B.'s necessities should oblige him to sell, he will find the want of a registry for deeds the cause of a considerable deduction in the price he can obtain. It may here be remarked, that as few people would sell a reversion unless they were in difficulties, equity, whenever a reversion is sold, throws upon the purchaser the onus of showing that he gave the fair market price for it (p).

Covenant to produce deeds.

Attested copies.

Where the title-deeds relate to other property, and cannot consequently be delivered over to the purchaser, he is entitled, at the expense of the vendor, to a covenant for their production (q), and also to attested copies

(p) Lord Aldborough v. Trye, 7 Cl. & Fin. 436; Davies v. Cooper, 5 My. & Cr. 270; Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 235, 13th ed.; Edwards v. Burt, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 55.

(q) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 376, 13th ed.; Cooper v. Emery, 10 Sim. 609. By stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, the stamp duty on a separate deed of covenant for the production of title deeds on a sale or mortgage is 10s., and if the ad valorem duty on the sale or mortgage is less than that sum, then a duty of equal amount only is payable, with a progressive duty similar to that on a purchase. See ante, p. 176.

Difficulty in sale of a reversion, for want

vious sale has been made.

of evidence that no preof such of them as are not enrolled in any court of record (r); but as the expense thus incurred is usually great, it is in general thrown on the purchaser, by express stipulation in the contract. The covenant for the Covenant to production of the deeds will run, as it is said, with the produce deeds land; that is, the benefit of such a covenant will belong land. to every legal owner of the land sold for the time being (s); and the better opinion is, that the obligation to perform the covenant will also be binding on every legal owner of the land, in respect of which the deeds have been retained (s). Accordingly, when a purchase is made without delivery of the title-deeds, the only deeds that can accompany the lands sold are the actual conveyance of the land to the purchaser, and the deed of covenant to produce the former title-deeds. On a future sale, therefore, these deeds will be delivered to the new purchaser, and the covenant, running with the land, will enable him at any time to obtain production of the former deeds to which the covenant relates.

When the lands sold are situated in either of the Search in Mid. counties of Middlesex or York, search is made in the dlesex and York regisregistries established for those counties (t): this search tries. is usually confined to the period which has elapsed from the last purchase-deed,-the search presumed to have been made on behalf of the former purchaser being generally relied on as a sufficient guarantee against latent incumbrances prior to that time; and a memorial of the purchase deed is of course duly registered as soon as possible after its execution. As to lands in all other counties also, there are certain matters affecting the title, of which every purchaser can readily obtain information. Thus, if any estate tail has existed in the lands, the purchaser can always learn whether or not it has been (r) Sugd. Vend. & Pur. 373, (s) Ibid. 377. 13th ed. (t) Ante, p. 178.

Search for fines, recoveries, and disentailing deeds.

Deeds acknowledged by married women.

Crown and judgment debts.

Life annuities.

Bankruptcy or insolvency. barred; for the records of all fines and recoveries, by which the bar was formerly effected (u), are preserved in the offices of the Court of Common Pleas; and now, the deeds which have been substituted for those assurances are enrolled in the Court of Chancery (x). Conveyances by married women can also be discovered by a search in the index, which is kept in the Court of Common Pleas, of the certificates of the acknowledgment of all deeds executed and acknowledged by married women (y). So, we have seen (z), that debts due from the vendor, or any former owner, to the crown, or secured by judgment prior to the 23rd of July, 1860, together with suits which may be pending, concerning the land, all which are incumbrances on the land, are always sought for in the indexes provided for the purpose in the office of the Court of Common Pleas. Life annuities, also, which may have been charged on the lands for money or money's worth prior to August, 1854, may generally be discovered by a search in the office of the Court of Chancery, amongst the memorials of such annuities (a). And those which have been granted since the 26th of April, 1855, otherwise than by marriage-settlement or will, may be found in the registry now established in the Court of Common Pleas (b). And, lastly, the bankruptcy or insolvency of any vendor or mortgagor may be discovered by a search in the records of the Bankrupt or Insolvent Courts; and it is the duty of the purchaser's or mortgagee's solicitor to make such search, if he has any reason to believe that the vendor or mortgagor is or has been in embarrassed circumstances (c).

(u) Ante, pp. 44, 46.

(x) Ante, pp. 46, 48. As to fines and recoveries in Wales and Cheshire, see stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 32.

(y) Stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, ss. 87, 88; ante, p. 213. See Jolly
v. Handcock, Ex. 16 Jur. 550;

S. C. 7 Exch. Rep. 820.

(z) Ante, pp. 81, 84, 85.

(a) Ante, p. 306. The lands charged are not, however necessarily mentioned in the memorial.

(b) Ante, pp. 305, 306.

(c) Cooper v. Stephenson, Q. B. 16 Jur. 424.

Some mention should here be made of two acts of parliament which have recently been passed, one of which is intituled, "An Act to facilitate the Proof of Title to and the Conveyance of Real Estates" (d), and the other, "An Act for obtaining a Declaration of Title" (e). The latter of these acts empowers persons claiming to Act for obtainbe entitled to land in possession for an estate in fee ing a declarasimple, or claiming power to dispose of such an estate, to apply to the Court of Chancery by petition in a summary way for a declaration of title. The title is then investigated by the Court, and if the Court shall be satisfied that such a title is shown as it would have compelled an unwilling purchaser to accept, an order is made establishing the title, subject, however, to appeal as mentioned in the act.

The former act establishes an office of land registry, Act to facilitate and contains provisions for the official investigation of the proof of title to and titles, and for the registration of such as appear to be conveyance of good and marketable. Lands may be registered either with or without an indefeasible title. For the provisions of this act reference should be made to the act itself. It has not yet attained sufficient success to justify any lengthened account of it in an elementary work like the present. The system of official investigation of title once for all is a good one. Compensation, however, ought to be made to those whose estates may by any error be taken from them in their absence. When land is once registered under this act, it ceases, if situate in Middlesex or Yorkshire, to be subject to the county registry of deeds. All land which is placed under the operation of the act becomes subject to the system of registration thereby established. If the act should lead to an efficient system of registration of assurances throughout the kingdom, it would, in the author's opinion, be the means of conferring a great (e) Stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 67.

(d) Stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 53.

real estates.

benefit on the community. This, however, cannot be advantageously done without resort to the printing of registered deeds and of probates of wills, and above all the abolition of payment by length. The author's views on this subject will be found in a paper read by him before the Juridical Society, on the 24th of March, 1862, intituled " On the true Remedies for the Evils which affect the Transfer of Land" (f), and to which he begs to refer the reader.

Such is a very brief and exceedingly imperfect outline of the methods adopted in this country for rendering secure the enjoyment of real property when sold or mortgaged. It may perhaps serve to prepare the student for the course of study which still lies before him in this direction. The valuable treaties of Lord St. Leonards on the law of vendors and purchasers of estates will be found to afford nearly all the practical information necessary on this branch of the law. The title to purely personal property depends on other principles, for an explanation of which the reader is referred to the author's treatise on the principles of the law of personal property. From what has already been said, the reader will perceive that the law of England has two different systems of rules for regulating the enjoyment and transfer of property; that the laws of real estate, though venerable for their antiquity, are in the same degree ill adapted to the requirements of modern society; whilst the laws of personal property, being of more recent origin, are proportionably suited to modern times. Over them both has arisen the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, by means of which the ancient strictness and simplicity of our real property laws have been in a measure rendered subservient to the arrangements and modifications of ownership, which the various necessities of society have

(f) Published in a separate form, by H. Sweet, 3, Chancery Lane.

Added to this have been continual enactrequired. ments, especially of late years, by which many of the most glaring evils have been remedied, but by which, at the same time, the symmetry of the laws of real property has been greatly impaired. Those laws cannot indeed be now said to form a system : their present state is certainly not that in which they can remain. For the future, perhaps the wisest course to be followed would be to aim as far as possible at a uniformity of system in the laws of both kinds of property; and, for this purpose, rather to take the laws of personal estate as the model to which the laws of real estate should be made to conform, than on the one hand to preserve untouched all the ancient rules, because they once were useful, or, on the other, to be annually plucking off, by parliamentary enactments, the fruit which such rules must, until eradicated, necessarily produce.

.

(427)

APPENDIX (A.)

Referred to, p. 94.

The case of Muggleton v. Barnett was shortly as follows (a) :---Edward Muggleton purchased in 1772 certain copyhold property, held of a manor in which the custom was proved to be, that the land descended to the youngest son of the person last seised, if he had more than one; and if no son, to the daughters as parceners; and if no issue, then to the youngest brother of the person last seised, and to the youngest son of such youngest brother. There was, however, no formal record upon the rolls of the Court of the custom of the manor with respect to descents, but the custom was proved by numerous entries of admission. The purchaser died intestate in 1812, leaving two granddaughters, the only children of his only son, who died in his lifetime. One of the granddaughters died intestate and unmarried, and the other died leaving an only son, who died in 1854 without issue, and apparently intestate, and who was the person last seised. On his death the youngest son of the youngest brother of the purchaser brought an ejectment, and the Court of Exchequer, by two against one, decided against him. On appeal, this decision was confirmed by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, by four judges against three. But much as the judges differed amongst themselves as to the extent of the custom amongst collaterals, they appear to have all agreed that the act to amend the law of inheritance had nothing to do with the matter. The act, however, expressly extends to lands descendible according to the custom of borough English or any other custom; and it enacts that in every case descent shall be traced from the purchaser. Under the old law, seisin made the stock of descent. By the new law, the purchaser is substituted in every case for the person last seised. The legislature itself has placed this interpretation upon the above enactment. A well known statute, commonly called the Wills Act (b), enacts, "that it shall be lawful for every person to devise or dispose of by his will, executed in manner hereinafter required, all real estate which he shall be entitled to, either at law or in equity, at the time of his death, and which, if not so devised or disposed of, would devolve upon the heir at law or customary heir of him, or, if he became entitled by descent, of his ancestor." Now the old doctrine of possessio fratis was that,-that if a purchaser died seised, leaving a son and a daughter by his first wife, and a son by his second wife, and the eldest son entered as heir to his father, the possession of the son made his sister of the whole blood to inherit as his heir, in exclusion of his brother of the half-blood; but if the eldest son did not enter, his brother of the half-blood was entitled as heir to his father, the purchaser. This doctrine was abolished by the statute. Descent in every case is to be traced from the purchaser. Let the eldest son enter, and remain ever so long in possession, his brother of the half-blood will now be entitled, on his decease, in preference to his sister of the whole blood, not as his heir, but as heir to his father (c).

(a) The substance of these observations has already appeared in letters to the editor of the "Jurist" newspaper, 4 Jur. N. S., Part 2, pp. 5, 56.

Let us now take the converse case of a descent according to the custom of borough English, and let the purchaser die intestate, leaving a son by his first wife, and a son and daughter by his second wife. Here it is evident, that the youngest son has a right to enter as customary heir. He enters accordingly and dies intestate, and without issue. Who is the next heir since the statute? Clearly the brother of the half-blood, for he is the customary heir of the purchaser. As the common law, which is the general custom of the realm, was altered by the statute, and a person became en-

 (b) Stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict.
 Statutes, pp. 280, 281 (1st ed.);

 c. 26, s. 3, ante, p. 187.
 267, 268 (2nd ed.)

(c) See Sugden's Real Property

titled to inherit who before had no right, so the custom of borough English, and every other special custom, being expressly comprised in the statute, is in the same manner altered; and the stock of descent, which was formerly the person last seised, is now, in every case, the purchaser and the purchaser only.

Suppose, therefore, that Edward Muggleton, the purchaser, who died in 1812, had left a son by his first wife, and a son and a daughter by his second wife, and that the youngest son, having entered as customary heir, died intestate in 1854,-who would be entitled ? Clearly, the elder son, as customary heir, being of the male sex, in preference to the daughter. Before the act the sister of the whole blood would have inherited, as customary heir to her younger brother, and the elder brother, being of the half-blood to the person last seised, could not have inherited at all; but since the act, the descent is traced from the purchaser, and the elder brother would, accordingly, be entitled, not as heir to his half-brother, but as heir to his father. The act then breaks in upon the custom. By the custom before the act the land descended to the sister of the person last seised, in default of brothers of the whole blood. By the act the purchaser is substituted for the person last seised, and whoever would be entitled as heir to the purchaser, if he had just died seised, must now be entitled as his heir, however long ago his decease may have taken place.

Let us put another case :--Suppose the father of Edward Muggleton, the purchaser, had been living in 1854, when his issue failed. It is clear, that under the act the father would have been entitled to inherit, notwithstanding the custom. Here, again, the custom would have been broken in upon by the act, and a person would have been entitled to inherit who before was not.

Suppose, again, that the father of Edward Muggleton had been the purchaser, and that Edward Muggleton was his youngest son, and that the estate, instead of being a feesimple, had been an estate tail. Estates tail, it is well known, follow customary modes of descent in the same manner as estates in fee. The purchaser, however, or donee in tail, is and was, both under the new law and under the old, the stock of descent. The Courts appear to have been satisfied that in lineal descents according to the custom the youngest was invariably preferred. It is clear, therefore, that when the issue of Edward Muggleton failed in 1854, the land would have descended to the plaintiff as youngest son of the next youngest son of the purchaser, although the plaintiff was but the first cousin twice removed of the person last seised.

The change, however, which the act has accomplished is simply to assimilate the descent of estates in fee to that of estates tail. The purchaser is made the stock in lieu of the person last seised. It is evident, therefore, that upon the supposition last put, of the father of Edward Muggleton being the purchaser, although the estate was an estate in fee, the plaintiff would have been entitled as customary heir.

The step from this case to that which actually occurred is very easy. On failure of the issue of the purchaser (whether after his decease or in his lifetime it matters not), the heir to be sought is the heir of the purchaser, and not the heir of the person last seised; and if the descent be governed by any special custom, then the customary heir of the purchaser must be sought for. Who, then, was the customary heir of Edward Muggleton, the purchaser? The case in Muggleton v. Barnett expressly states that the land descends, if no issue, to the youngest son of the youngest brother of the person last seised, that is, of the stock of descent. There is no magic in the phrase "last seised." These words were evidently used in the statement of the custom as they would have been used before the act in a statement of the common law. It would have been said that the land descends, for want of issue, to the eldest son of the eldest brother of the person last seised. It would have been taken for granted that every body knew that seisin made the stock. The law, however, in now altered in this respect. The purchaser only is the stock. If Edward Muggleton had died without leaving issue, the plaintiff clearly would have been entitled. His issue fails after his decease; but so long as he is the stock, the same person under the same custom must of necessity be his heir.

It was expressly stated in the case, that there was no formal record with respect to descents. This is important, as showing that the person last seised was mentioned in the statement of the custom simply in accordance with the ordinary rule of law, that the person last seised was the stock of descent prior to the act. If, however, there had been such a formal record, still Edward Muggleton, the purchaser, died seised. If he had not died seised, it might be said, according to the strict construction placed upon the records of customary descent, that the custom did not apply, and that his heir according to the common law was entitled (d). But in the present case the custom is expressly stated to be gathered from admissions only; and so long as the person last seised was by law the stock of descent, it is evident that a statement of the custom, as applying to the person last seised, was merely a statement with reference to the stock of descent as then existing. The act alters the stock of descent, and so far alters the custom. It substitutes the purchaser for the person last seised, whatever may be the custom as to descents. It follows, therefore, that the plaintiff in Muggleton v. Barnett, being the customary heir of the purchaser, was entitled to recover.

Since these observations were written the following remarks have been made by Lord St. Leonards, on the case of Muggleton v. Barnett :—" In the result, the Exchequer and Exchequer Chamber, with much diversity of opinion as to the extent of the custom, decided the case against the claimant, who claimed as heir by the custom to the last pur- chaser, which he was; because he was not heir by the custom to the person last seised. And yet the act extends to all customary tenures, and alters the descent in all such cases as well as in descents by the common law, by substituting the last purchaser as the stock from whom the descent is to be traced for the person last seised. The Court, perhaps, hardly explained the grounds upon which they held the statute not to apply to this case "(e).

(d) Payne v. Barker, O. Bridg. 18; Rider v. Wood, 1 Kay & J. 614.

(e) Lord St. Leonards' Essay on the Real Property Statutes, p. 271 (2nd ed.)

(433)

APPENDIX (B.)

Referred to, p. 104.

The point in question is as follows (a): Suppose a man to be the purchaser of freehold land, and to die seised of it intestate, leaving two daughters, say Susannah and Catherine, but no sons. It is clear that the land will then descend to the two daughters, Susannah and Catherine, in equal shares as coparceners. Let us now suppose that the daughter Catherine dies on or after the 1st of January, 1834, intestate, and without having disposed of her moiety in her lifetime, leaving issue one son. Under these circumstances the question arises, to whom shall the inheritance descend? The act to amend the law of inheritance enacts, "that in every case descent shall be traced from the purchaser." In this case Catherine is clearly not the purchaser, but her father; and the descent of Catherine's moiety is accordingly to be traced from him. Who, then, as to this moiety, is his heir? Supposing that, instead of the moiety in question, some other land were, after Catherine's decease, to be given to the heir of her father, such heir would clearly be Susannah the surviving daughter, as to one moiety of the land, and the son of Catherine as to the other moiety. It has been argued, then, that the moiety which belonged to Catherine, by descent from her father, must, on her decease, descend to the heir of her father, in the same manner as other land would have done had she been dead in her father's lifetime; that is to say, that one moiety of Catherine's moiety will descend to her surviving sister Susannah, and the other moiety of Catherine's moiety will descend to her son. But the following reasoning seems to show that, on the decease of Catherine, her moiety will not descend equally between her surviving sister and her own son, but will descend entirely to her son.

(a) The substance of the following observations has already appeared in the "Jurist" newspaper for February 28, 1846. The point has since been expressly decided, in accordance with the opinion for which the author has contended, in Cooper v. France, V. C. E., 14 Jur. 214, the authority of which decision is recognized by Lord St. Leonards in his Essay on the Real Property Statutes, p. 282 (1st ed.), 269 (2nd ed.). But as the grounds on which the judgment of the Vice-Chancellor was rested do not appear to the author to be quite conclusive, he has not thought it desirable to omit his remarks.

In order to arrive at our conclusion it will be necessary to inquire, first, into the course of descent of an estate tail, under the circumstances above described, according to the old law; secondly, into the course of descent of an estate in fee simple, according to the old law, supposing the circumstances as above described, with this qualification, that neither Susannah nor Catherine shall be considered to have obtained any actual seisin of the lands. And, when these two points shall have been satisfactorily ascertained, we shall then be in a better position to place a correct interpretation on the act by which the old law of inheritance has been endeavoured to be amended.

1. First, then, as to the course of descent of an estate tail according to the old law. Let us suppose lands to have been given to the purchaser and the heirs of his body. On his decease, his two daughters, Susannah and Catherine, are clearly the heirs of his body, and as such will accordingly have become tenants in tail each of a moiety. Now there is no proposition more frequently asserted in the old books than this : that the descent of an estate tail is per formam doni to the heirs of the body of the donee. On the decease of one heir of the body, the estate descends not to the heir of such heir, but to the heir of the body of the original donee per formam doni. Suppose, then, that Catherine should die, her moiety would clearly have descended, by the old law, to the heir of the body of her father, the original donee in tail. Whom, then, under the above circumstances, did the old law consider to be the heir of his body quoad this moiety? The Tenures of Littleton, as explained by Lord Coke's Commentary, supply us with an answer. Littleton says, "Also, if lands or tenements be given to a man in tail who hath as much land in fee simple, and hath issue two daughters, and die, and his two daughters make partition between them, so as the land in fee simple is allotted to the younger daughter, in allowance for the land and tenements in tail allotted to the elder daughter; if, after such partition made, the younger daughter alieneth her land in fee simple to another in fee, and hath issue a son or daughter, and dies, the issue may enter into the lands in tail, and hold and occupy them in purparty with her aunt" (b). On this case Lord Coke makes the following comment :--- "The eldest coparcener hath, by the partition, and the matter subsequent, barred herself of her right in the fee-simple lands, insomuch as when the youngest sister aliencth the fee-simple lands and dieth, and her issue entereth into half the lands entailed, yet shall not the eldest sister enter into half of the lands in fee simple upon the alienee"(c). It is evident, therefore, that Lord Coke, though well acquainted with the rule that an estate tail should descend per formam doni, yet never for a moment supposed that, on the decease of the younger daughter, her moiety would descend half to her sister, and half to her issue; for he presumes, of course, that the issue would enter into half the lands entailed, that is, into the whole of the moiety of the lands which had originally belonged to their mother. After the decease of the younger sister, the heirs of the body of her father were no doubt the elder sister and the issue of the younger; but, as to the moiety which had belonged to the younger sister, this as clearly was not the case; the heir of the body of the father to inherit this moiety was exclusively the issue of such younger daughter, who were entitled to the whole of it in the place of their parent. This incidental allusion of Lord Coke is as strong, if not stronger, than a direct assertion by him of the doctrine: for it seems to show that a doubt on the subject never entered into his mind.

At the end of the section of Littleton, to which we have referred, it is stated that the contrary is holden, M., 10 Hen. VI. scil.; that the heir may not enter upon the par-

(b) Litt. sect. 260.

(c) Co. Litt. 172 b.

cener who hath the entailed land, but it is put to a formedon. On this Lord Coke remarks (d), that it is no part of Littleton, and is contrary to law; and that the case is not truly vouched, for it is not in 10 Hen. VI., but in 20 Hen. VI., and yet there is but the opinion of Newton, obiter, by the way. On referring to the case in the Year Books, it appears that Yelverton contended, that, if the sister, who had the fee simple, aliened, and had issue, and died, the issue would be barred from the land entailed by the partition, which would be a mischief. To this Newton replied, "No, sir; but he shall have formedon, and shall recover the half" (e). Newton, therefore, though wrong in supposing that a formedon was necessary, thought equally with Lord Coke, that a moiety of the land was the share to be recovered. This appears to be the Newton whom Littleton calls (f) "my master, Sir Richard Newton, late Chief Justice of the Common Pleas."

There is another section in Littleton, which, though not conclusive, yet strongly tends in the same direction; namely, section 255, where it is said, that, if the tenements whereof two parceners make partition "be to them in fee tail, and the part of the one is better in yearly value than the part of the other, albeit they be concluded during their lives to defeat the partition, yet, if the parcener who hath the lesser part in value hath issue and die, the issue may disagree to the partition, and enter and occupy in common the other part which was allotted to her aunt, and so the other may enter and occupy in common the other part allotted to her sister, &c., as if no partition had been made." Had the law been that, on the decease of one sister, her issue were entitled only to an undivided fourth part, it seems strange that Littleton should not have stated that they might enter into a fourth only, and that the other sister might occupy the remaining three-fourths.

In addition to these authorities, there is a modern case, which, when attentively considered, is an authority on the (e) Year Book, 20 Hen. VI. 14 a.

⁽d) Co. Litt. 173 a. f) Sect. 729.

same side ; namely, Doe d. Gregory and Geere v. Whichelo(g). This case, so far as it relates to the point in question, was as follows: Richard Lemmon was tenant in tail of certain premises, and died, leaving issue by his first wife one son, Richard, and a daughter, Martha; and by his second wife three daughters, Anne, Elizabeth and Grace. Richard Lemmon, the son, as heir of the body of his father, was clearly tenant in tail of the whole premises during his life. He died, however, without issue, leaving his sister Martha of the whole blood, and his three sisters of the half blood, him surviving, Martha then intermarried with John Whichelo, and afterwards died, leaving John Whichelo, the defendant, her eldest son and heir of her body. John Whichelo, the defendant, then entered into the whole of the premises, under the impression that as he was heir to Richard Lemmon, the son, he was entitled to the whole. In this, however, he was clearly mistaken; for the descent of an estate tail is, as we have said, traced from the purchaser, or first donee in tail, per formam doni. The heirs of the purchaser, Richard Lemmon, the father, were clearly his four daughters, or their issue; for the daughters by the second wife, though of the half blood to their brother by the former wife, were, equally with their half sister Martha, of the whole blood to their common father. The only question then is, in what shares the daughters or their issue became entitled. At the time of the ejectment all the daughters were dead. Elizabeth was dead, without issue : whereupon her one equal fourth part devolved, without dispute on her three sisters, Martha, Anne and Grace : each of these, therefore, became entitled to one equal third part. Martha, as we have seen, died, leaving John Whichelo, the defendant, her eldest son and heir of her body. Anne died, leaving James Gregory, one of the lessors of the plaintiff, her grandson and heir of her body; and Grace died, leaving Diones Geere, the other lessor of the plaintiff, her only son and heir of her body. Under these circumstances, an action of ejectment was brought by James Gregory and Diones Geere; and on a case reserved for the opinion of the Court, a verdict was directed to be entered for the plaintiff for two thirds. Neither the counsel engaged in the cause, nor the Court, seem for a moment to have imagined that James Gregory and Diones Geere could have been entitled to any other shares. It is evident, therefore, that the Court supposed that, on the decease of Martha, the heir of the body of the purchaser, as to her share, was her son, John Whichelo, the defendant; that, on the decease of Anne, the heir of the body of the purchaser, as to her share, was James Gregory, her grandson; and that, on the decease of Grace, the heir of the body of the purchaser, as to her share, was her son, Diones Geere. On no other supposition can the judgment be accounted for, which awarded one-third of the whole to the defendant, John Whichelo, one other third to James Gregory, and the remaining third to Diones Geere. For let us suppose that, on the decease of each coparcener, her onethird was divided equally amongst the then existing heirs of the body of the purchaser; and the result will be, that the parties, instead of each being entitled to one-third, would have been entitled in fractional shares of a most complicated kind; unless we presume, which is next to impossible, that all the three daughters died at one and the same moment. It is not stated, in the report of the case, in what order the decease of the daughters took place; but according to the principle suggested, it will appear, on working out the fractions, that the heir of the one who died first would have been entitled to the largest share, and the heir of the one who died last would have been entitled to the smallest. Thus, let us suppose that Martha died first, then Anne, and then Grace. On the decease of Martha, according to the principle suggested, her son, John Whichelo, would have taken only onethird of her share, or one-ninth of the whole, and Anne and Grace, the surviving sisters, would each also have taken onethird of the share of Martha, in addition to their own onethird of the whole. The shares would then have stood thus: John Whichelo $\frac{1}{4}$, Anne $\frac{1}{4} + \frac{1}{4}$, Grace $\frac{1}{4} + \frac{1}{4}$. Anne now dies. Her share, according to the same principle, would be equally divisible amongst her own issue, James Gregory, and the heirs of the body of the purchaser, namely, John Whichelo and Grace. The shares would then stand thus: John Whichelo $\frac{1}{9} + \frac{1}{3}(\frac{1}{3} + \frac{1}{9})$; namely, his own share and one-third of Anne's share, $=\frac{7}{27}$: James Gregory, $\frac{1}{3}(\frac{1}{3}+\frac{1}{3})=\frac{4}{27}$: Grace, $\frac{1}{3} + \frac{1}{9} + \frac{1}{3}(\frac{1}{3} + \frac{1}{9})$; namely, her own share and one-third of Anne's share $=\frac{16}{67}$. Lastly Grace dies, and her share, according to the same principle, would be equally divisible between her own issue, Diones Geere and John Whichelo and James Gregory, the other co-heirs of the body of the purchaser. The shares would then have stood thus : John Whichelo $\sqrt[7]{7} + (\frac{1}{3} \times \frac{1}{2} \sqrt[6]{7})$; namely, his own share and one-third of Grace's share, $=\frac{3}{8}$ of the entirety of the land. James Gregory, $\frac{4}{27} + (\frac{1}{3} \times \frac{167}{27})$; namely, his own share and one-third of Grace's share, $=\frac{28}{81}$: Diones Geere, $\frac{1}{3} \times \frac{1}{9} \frac{6}{7} = \frac{16}{81}$. On the principle, therefore, of the descent of the share of each coparcener amongst the co-heirs of the body of the purchaser for the time being, the heir of the body of the one who died first would have been entitled to thirty-seven eighty-first parts of the whole premises; the heir of the body of the one who died next would have been entitled to twenty-eight eightyfirst parts; and the heir of the body of the one who died last would have been entitled only to sixteen eighty-first parts. By the judgment of the Court, however, the lessors of the plaintiff were entitled each to one equal third part; thus showing that, although the descent of an estate tail under the old law was always traced from the purchaser (otherwise John Whichelo would have been entitled to the whole), yet this rule was qualified by another of equal force, namely, that all the lineal descendants of any person deceased should represent their ancestors, that is, should stand in the same place, and take the same share, as the ancestor would have done if living.

2. Let us now inquire into the course of descent of an estate in fee simple, according to the old law, in case the purchaser should have died, leaving two daughters, Susannah and Catherine, neither of whom should have obtained any actual seisin of the lands, and that one of them (say Catherine) should afterwards have died, leaving issue one son. In this case, it is admitted on all sides, that the share of Catherine would have descended to the heir of the purchaser, and not to her own heir, in the character of heir to her; for the maxim was seisina facit stipitem. Had either of the daughters obtained actual seisin, her seisin would have been in law the actual seisin of the sister also; and on the decease of either of them, her share would have descended, not to the heir of her father, but to her own heir, the seisin acquired having made her the stock of descent. In such a case, therefore, the title of the son of Catherine to the whole of his mother's moiety would have been indisputable; for, while he was living, no one else could possibly have been her heir. The supposition, however, on which we are now to proceed is, that neither of the daughters ever obtained any actual seisin; and the question to be solved is, to whom, on the death of Catherine, did her share descend; whether equally between her sister and her son, as being together heir to the purchaser, or whether solely to the son, as being heir to the purchaser, quoad his mother's share. In Mr. Sweet's valuable edition of Messrs. Jarman and Bythewood's Conveyancing (h), it is stated to be "apprehended that the share of the deceased sister would have descended in the same manner as by the recent statute it will now descend in every instance," which manner of descent is explained to be one-half of the share, or a quarter of the whole only, to the son, and the remaining half of the share to the surviving sister, thus giving her three quarters of the whole. This doctrine, however, the writer submits, is erroneous; and in proof of such error, it might be sufficient simply to call to mind the fact, that the law of England had but one rule for the discovery of the heir. The heirs of a purchaser were, first the heirs of his body, and then his collateral heirs; and an estate tail was merely an estate restricted in its descent to lineal heirs. If, therefore, the heir of a person had been discovered for the purpose of the descent of an estate tail, it is obvious that the same individual would also be heir of the same person for the purpose of the descent of an estate in fee simple. No distinction between the two is ever mentioned by Lord Coke, or any of the old authorities. Now, we have seen that the heir of the purchaser, under the circumstances above mentioned, for the

(h) Vol. i. p. 139. This point has, however, since been decided in accordance with the author's opinion in Paterson v. Mills, V.C.K. Bruce, 15 Jur. 1. purpose of inheriting an estate tail, was the son of the deceased daughter solely, quoad the share which such daughter had held; and it would accordingly appear that the heir of the purchaser, to inherit an estate in fee simple, was also the son of the deceased daughter quoad her share. That this was in fact the case appears incidentally from a passage in the Year Book (i), where it is stated, that "If there be two coparceners of a reversion, and their tenant for term of life commits waste, and then one of the parceners has issue and dies, and the tenant for term of life commits another waste, and the aunt and niece bring a writ of waste jointly, for they cannot sever, and the writ of waste is general, still their recovery shall be special; for the aunt shall recover treble damages for the waste done, as well in the life of her parcener as afterwards, and the niece shall only recover damages for the waste done after the death of her mother, and the place wasted they shall recover jointly. And the same law is, if a man has issue two daughters and dies seised of certain land, and a stranger abates, and afterwards one of the daughters has issue two daughters and dies, and the aunt and the two daughters bring assize of mort d'ancestor; here, if the aunt recover the moiety of the land and damages from the death of the ancestor, and the nieces recover each one of them the moiety of the moiety of the land, and damages from the death of their mother, still the writ is general." Here we have all the circumstances required; the father dies seised, leaving two daughters, neither of whom obtains any actual seisin of the land; for a stranger abates, that is, gets possession before them. One of the daughters then dies, without having had possession, and her share devolves entirely on her issue, not as heirs to her, for she never was seised, but as heirs to her father quoad her share. The surviving sister is entitled only to her original moiety, and the two daughters of her deceased sister take their mother's moiety equally between them.

There is another incidental reference to the same subject in Lord Coke's Commentary upon Littleton(k): "If a man hath issue two daughters, and is disseised, and the daughters have issue and die, the issues shall join in a præcipe, because one right descends from the ancestor, and it maketh no difference whether the common ancestor, being out of possession, died before the daughters or after, for that, in both cases, they must make themselves heirs to the grandfather which was last seised, and when the issues have recovered, they are coparceners, and one præcipe shall lie against them." "It maketh no difference," says Lord Coke, " whether the common ancestor, being out of possession, died before the daughters or after." Lord Coke is certainly not here speaking of the shares which the issue would take; but had any difference in the quantity of their shares been made by the circumstance of the daughters surviving their father, it seems strange that so accurate a writer as Lord Coke should not "herein" have "noted a diversity." The descent is traced to the issue of the daughters not from the daughters, but from their father, the common grandfather of the issue. On the decease of one daughter, therefore, on the theory against which we are contending, the right to her share should have devolved, one-half on her own issue and the other half on her surviving sister; and, on the decease of such surviving sister, her three quarters should, by the same rule, have been divided, one-half to her own issue and the other half to the issue of her deceased sister; whereas it is admitted, that had the daughters both died in their father's lifetime, their issue would have inherited in equal shares. Lord Coke, however, remarks no difference whether the father died before or after his daughters. Surely, then, he never could have imagined that so great an inequality in the shares could have been produced by so mere an accident. It should be remembered that the rule of representation for which we are contending is the rule suggested by natural justice, and might well have been passed over without express notice; but had the opposite rule prevailed, the inequality and injustice of its operation could scarcely have failed to elicit some remark. This circumstance may, perhaps, tend to explain the fact that the writer has been unable, after a lengthened search, to find any authority expressly directed to the point; and yet, when we consider that in ancient times the title by descent was the most usual one (testamentary alienation not having been permitted), we cannot doubt but that the point in question must very frequently have occurred. In what manner, then, can we account for the silence of our ancient writers on this subject, but on the supposition, which is confirmed by every incidental notice, that in tracing descent from a purchaser, the issue of a deceased daughter took the entire share of their parent, whether such daughter should have died in the lifetime of the purchaser or after his decease ?

(i) 35 Hen. VI. 23.

(k) Co. Litt. 164 a.

Having now ascertained the course of descent among coparceners under the old law, whenever descent was traced from a purchaser, we are in a better situation to place a construction on that clause of the act to amend the law of inheritance which enacts, "that in every case descent shall be traced from the purchaser" (l). What was the nature of the alteration which this act was intended to effect? Was it intended to introduce a course of descent amongst coparceners hitherto unknown to the law, and tending to the most intricate and absurd subdivision of their shares? or did the act intend merely to say that descent from the purchaser, which had hitherto occurred only in the case of an estate tail, and in the case where the heir to a fee simple died without obtaining actual seisin, should now apply to every case? In other words, has the act abolished the rule that, in tracing the descent from the purchaser, the issue of deceased heirs shall stand, quoad their entire shares, in the place of their parents? We have seen that, previously to the act, the rule that descent should be traced from the purchaser, whenever it applied, was guided and governed by another rule, that the issue of every deceased person should, quoad the entire share of such person, stand in his or her place. Why, then, should not the same rule of representation govern descent, now that the rule tracing descent from the purchaser has become applicable to every case? Had any modification been intended to be made of so important a rule for tracing descent from a purchaser, as the rule that the issue, and the issue alone, represent their ancestor, surely the act would not have been silent on the subject. A rule of law clearly continues in force until it be repealed. No repeal has taken place of the rule that, in tracing descent from a purchaser, the issue shall always stand in the place of their ancestor. It is submitted, therefore, that this rule is now in full operation; and that, although in every case descent is now traced from the purchaser, yet the tracing of such descent is still governed by the rules to which the tracing of descent from purchasers was in former times invariably subject. If this be so, it is clear, then, that, under the circumstances stated at the commencement of this paper, the share of Catherine will descend entirely to her own issue, as heir to the purchaser quoad her share, and will not be divided between such issue and the surviving sister.

It is said, indeed, that by giving to the issue one-half of the share which belonged to their mother, the rule is satisfied which requires that the issue of a person deceased shall, in all cases, represent their ancestor; for it is argued that the issue still take one-fourth by representation, notwithstanding that the other fourth goes to the surviving sister, who constitutes, together with such issue, one heir to their common ancestor. This, however, is a fallacy ; the rule is, "that the lineal descendants in infinitum of any person deceased shall represent their ancestor, that is, shall stand in the same place as the person himself would have done had he been living" (m). Now, in what place would the deceased daughter have stood had she been living? Would she have been heir to onefourth only, or would she not rather have been heir to the entire moiety? Clearly to the entire moiety; for, had she been living, no descent of her moiety would have taken place; if, then, her issue are to stand in the place which she would have occupied if living, they cannot so represent her unless they take the whole of her share.

But it is said, again, that the surviving daughter may have aliened her share; and how can the descent of her deceased sister's share be said to be traced from the purchaser, if the survivor, who constitutes a part of the purchaser's heir, is to take nothing? The descent of the whole, it is argued, cannot be considered as traced over again on the decease of any daughter, because the other daughter's moiety may, by that time, have got into the hands of a perfect stranger. The proper reply to this objection seems to be, that the laws of descent were prior in date to the liberty of alienation. In ancient times, when the rules of descent were settled, the objection could scarcely have occurred. Estates tail were kept from alienation by virtue of the statute De Donis for about 200 years subsequent to its passing. Rights of entry and action were also inalienable for a very much longer period. Reversions expectant on estates of freehold, in the descent of which the same rule of tracing from the purchaser occurred, could alone have afforded an instance of alienation by the heir; and the sale of reversions appears to have been by no means frequent in early times. In addition to other reasons, the attornment then required from the particular tenant on every alienation of a reversion operated as a check on such transactions. It may, therefore, be safely asserted as a general proposition, that on the decease of any coparcener, the descent of whose share was to be traced from the purchaser, the shares of the other coparceners had not been aliened; and to have given them any part of their deceased sister's share, to the prejudice of her own issue, would have been obviously unfair, and contrary to the natural meaning of the rule, that "every daughter hath a several stock or root" (n). If, as we have seen, the rule remained the same with regard to estates tail, notwithstanding the introduction of the right of alienation (o), surely it ought still to continue unimpaired, now that it has become applicable to estates in fce, which enjoy a still more perfect liberty. Rules of law which have their foundation in natural justice, should ever be upheld, notwithstanding they may have become applicable to cases not specifically contemplated at the time of their creation.

(n) Co. Litt. 164 b. (o) Doe v. Whichelo, 8 T. R. 211; ante, p. 437.

(446)

APPENDIX (C.)

Referred to, pp. 183, 282, 411.

A Deed of Grant.

Date.

Parties.

Recital of the conveyance to the vendor.

Recital of the contract for sale.

Testatum.

THIS INDENTURE made the second day of January (a) [in the eleventh year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Queen Victoria by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen Defender of the Faith and] in the year of our Lord 1848 BETWEEN A. B. of Cheapside in the city of London Esquire of the first part C. D. of Lincoln's Inn in the county of Middlesex Esquire of the second part and Y. Z. of Lincoln's Inn aforesaid gentleman of the third part (b) WHEREAS by indentures of lease and release bearing date respectively on or about the first and second days of January 1838 and respectively made or expressed to be made between E. F. therein described of the one part and the said A. B. of the other part for the consideration therein mentioned the messuage or tenement lands and hereditaments hereinafter described and intended to be hereby granted with the appurtenances were conveyed and assured by the said E. F. unto and to the use of the said A. B. his heirs and assigns for ever AND WHEREAS the said A. B. hath contracted and agreed with the said C. D. for the absolute sale to him of the inheritance in fee simple in possession of and in the said messuage or tenement lands and hereditaments hereinbefore referred to and hereinafter described with the appurtenances free from all incumbrances at or for the price or sum of one thousand pounds Now THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH that for carrying the said contract

(a) The words within brackets are now most frequently omitted.

(b) The reason why Y. Z. is made a party to this deed is, that the widow of C. D. may be barred or deprived of her dower. See ante, pp. 281, 282. If this should not be intended, the deed would be made between A. B. of the one part, and C. D. of the other part, as in the specimen given, p. 174. for sale into effect and in consideration of the sum of one Consideration. thousand pounds of lawful money of Great Britain to the said A. B. in hand well and truly paid to the said C. D. upon or immediately before the sealing and delivery of these presents (the receipt of which said sum of one thousand pounds Receipt. in full for the absolute purchase of the inheritance in fee simple in possession of and in the messuage or tenement lands and hereditaments hereinafter described and intended to be hereby granted with the appurtenances he the said A. B. doth hereby acknowledge and of and from the same and every part thereof doth acquit release and discharge the said C. D. his heirs executors administrators and assigns [and every of them for ever by these presents]) He the said A. B. HATH Operative granted and confirmed and by these presents Dorn grant words. and confirm unto the said C. D. and his heirs (c) ALL that Parcels. messuage or tenement situate lying and being at &c. commonly called or known by the name of &e (here describe the premises) Together with all and singular the houses out- General words. houses edifices buildings barns dovehouses stables yards gardens orchards lights easements ways paths passages waters watercourses trees woods underwoods commons and commonable rights hedges ditches fences liberties privileges emoluments commodities advantages hereditaments and appurtenances whatsoever to the said messuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises hereby granted or intended so to be or any part thereof belonging or in anywise appertaining or with the same or any part thereof now or at any time heretofore usually held used occupied or enjoyed [or accepted reputed taken or known as part parcel or member thereof] And the reversion and reversions remainder and remainders

" made in pursuance of an Act of " Parliament made and passed in " the fourth year of the reign of " her present Majesty Queen Vic-" toria intituled An Act for ren-" dering a Release as effectual for " the Conveyance of Freehold Es-" tates as a Lease and Release by " the same Parties) grant bargain " sell alien release and confirm " unto the said C.D. and hisheirs."

yearly and other rents issues and profits of the same premises and every part thereof And all the estate right title interest Estate. use trust inheritance property possession benefit claim and demand whatsoever both at law and in equity of him the said A. B. in to out of or upon the said messuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises hereby granted or intended so to be and every part and parcel of the same with their and every of their appurtenances. And all deeds evidences and And all deeds. writings relating to the title of the said A. B. to the said hereditaments and premises hereby granted or intended so to be now in the custody of the said A. B. or which he can procure without suit at law or in equity To HAVE and To HOLD the Habendum. said messuage or tenement lands and hereditaments hereinbefore described and all and singular other the premises hereby granted or intended so to be with their and every of their rights members and appurtenances unto the said C. D. and his heirs (d) To such uses upon and for such trusts intents Uses to bar dower. and purposes and with under and subject to such powers provisoes declarations and agreements as the said C. D. shall from time to time by any deed or deeds instrument or instruments in writing with or without power of revocation and new appointment to be by him sealed and delivered in the presence of and to be attested by two or more credible witnesses direct limit or appoint And in default of and until any such direction limitation or appointment and so far as any such direction limitation or appointment if incomplete shall not extend To the use of the said C. D. and his assigns for and during the term of his natural life without impeachment of waste And from and after the determination of that estate by forfeiture or otherwise in his lifetime To the use of the said Y. Z. and his heirs during the life of the said C. D. In trust nevertheless for him the said C. D. and his assigns and after the decease of the said C. D. To the use of the said C. D. his heirs and assigns for ever And the said A. B. doth Covenants for title. hereby for himself his heirs (e) executors and administrators covenant promise and agree with and to the said C. D.

> (d) If the dower of C. D.'s widow should not be intended to be barred, the form would here simply be "To the use of the said

"C. D. his heirs and assigns for "ever."

(c) See ante, pp. 74, 75.

his appointees heirs and assigns in manner following that is to say that for and notwithstanding any act deed matter or thing whatsoever by him the said A. B. or any person or persons lawfully or equitably claiming or to claim by from through under or in trust for him made done or committed to the contrary (f) [he the said A. B. is at the time of the seal- That the vening and delivery of these presents lawfully rightfully and ab- dor is seised in fee. solutely seised of or well and sufficiently entitled to the messuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises hereby granted or intended so to be with the appurtenances of and in a good sure perfect lawful absolute and indefeasible estate of inheritance in fee simple without any manner of condition contingent proviso power of revocation or limitation of any new or other use or uses or any other matter restraint cause or thing whatsoever to alter change charge revoke make void lessen or determine the same estate. And that for and notwithstanding any such act matter or thing as aforesaid] he the said A. B. now hath in himself good right full power and That the venlawful and absolute authority to grant and confirm the said dor has good right to conmessuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises vey. hereinbefore granted or intended so to be with their appurtenances unto the said C. D. and his heirs to the uses and in manner aforesaid and according to the true intent and meaning of these presents And that the same messuage or tene- For quiet enment lands hereditaments and premises with the appurte- joyment. nances shall and lawfully may accordingly from time to time and at all times hereafter be held and enjoyed and the rents issues and profits thereof received and taken by the said C. D. his appointees heirs and assigns to and for his and their own absolute use and benefit without any lawful let suit trouble denial hindrance eviction ejection molestation disturbance or interruption whatsoever of from or by the said A. B. or any person or persons lawfully or equitably claiming or to claim by from through under or in trust for him And that (g) For freedom free and clear and freely and clearly acquitted exonerated from incumand discharged or otherwise by him the said A. B. his heirs executors or administrators well and sufficiently saved defended kept harmless and indemnified of from and against all and all manner of former and other [gifts grants bargains sales leases mortgages jointures dowers and all right and title of dower uses trusts wills entails statutes merchant and of the staple recognizances judgments extents executions annuities legacies payments rents and arrears of rent forfeitures re-entries cause and causes of forfeiture and re-entry and of from and against all and singular other] estates rights titles charges and incumbrances whatsoever had made done committed executed or willingly suffered by him the said A, B, or any person or persons lawfully or equitably claiming or to claim by from through under or in trust for him And moreover that he the said A. B. and his heirs and all and every persons and person having or lawfully claiming or who shall or may have or lawfully claim any estate right title or interest whatsoever at law or in equity in to or out of the said messuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises hereinbefore granted or intended so to be with their appurtenances by from through under or in trust for him or them shall and will from time to time and at all times hereafter upon every reasonable request and at the costs and charges of the said C. D. his appointees heirs and assigns make do and execute or cause or procure to be made done and executed all and every or any such further and other lawful and reasonable acts deeds things grants conveyances and assurances in the law whatsoever for further better more perfectly and effectually granting conveying and assuring the said messuage or tenement lands hereditaments and premises. hereinbefore granted or intended so to be with their appurtenances unto the said C. D. and his heirs to the uses and in manner aforesaid and according to the true intent and meaning of these presents as by him the said C. D. his appointees heirs or assigns or his or their counsel in the law shall or may be reasonably advised or devised and required [so that no such further assurance or assurances contain or imply any further or any other warranty or covenant than against the person or persons who shall make and execute the same and his her or their heirs executors and administrators acts and deeds only and so that the person or persons who shall be required to make and execute any such further assurance or

(f) See ante, p. 411. R.P.

(g) The word that is here a pronoun.

GG

For further assurance.

assurances be not compelled or compellable for making or doing thereof to go or travel from his her or their dwelling or respective dwellings or usual place or places of abode or residence] IN WITNESS, &c.

On the back is endorsed the attestation and further receipt as follows :----

Signed sealed and delivered by the within-named A. B. C. D. and Y. Z. in the presence of John Doc of London Gent. Richard Roe Clerk to Mr. Doe.

Received the day and year first within written of and from the within-named C. D. the sum of One Thousand Pounds being the consideration within mentioned to be paid by him to me.

(Signed) A. B.

Witness John Doe Richard Roe.

(452)

APPENDIX (D.)

Referred to p. 210 (a).

ON the decease of a woman entitled by descent to an estate in fee simple, is her husband, having had issue by her, entitled, according to the present law, to an estate for life, by the curtesy of England, in the whole or any part of her share?

In order to answer this question satisfactorily, it will be necessary, first, to examine into the principles of the ancient law, and then to apply those principles, when ascertained, to the law as at present existing. Unfortunately the authorities whence the principles of the old law ought to be derived do not appear to be quite consistent with one another; and the consequence is, that some uncertainty seems unavoidably to hang over the question above propounded. Let us, however, weigh carefully the opposing authorities, and endeavour to ascertain on which side the scale preponderates.

Littleton, "not the name of the author only, but of the law itself," thus defines curtesy: "Tenant by the curtesie of England is where a man taketh a wife seised in fee simple or in fee tail general, or seised as heir in tail especial, and hath issue by the same wife, male or female, born alive, albeit the issue after dieth or liveth, yet if the wife dies, the husband shall hold the land during his life by the law of England. And he is called tenant by the curtesie of England, because this is used in no other realme, but in England only" (b). And, in a subsequent section, he adds, "Memorandum, that, in every case where a man taketh a wife seised of such an estate of tenements, &c., as the issue which he hath by his wife may by possibility inherit the same tenements of such an estate as the wife hath, as heir to the wife; in this case, after the decease of the wife, he shall have the same tencments by the curtesie of England, but otherwise not" (c). "Memorandum," says Lord Coke, in his Commentary (d), " this word doth ever betoken some excellent point of learn-"ing." Again, " As heir to the wife. This doth imply a secret of law; for, except the wife be actually seised, the heir shall not (as hath been said) make himself heir to the wife; and this is the reason, that a man shall not be tenant by the curtesie of a seisin in law." Here, we find it asserted by Littleton, that the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesy, unless he has had issue by his wife capable of inheriting the land as her heir; and this is explained by Lord Coke to be such issue as would have traced their descent from the wife, as the stock of descent, according to the maxim, "seisina facit stipitem." Unless an actual seisin had been obtained by the wife, she could not have been the stock of descent; for the descent of a fee simple was traced from the person last actually seised ; " and this is the reason" says Lord Coke, " that a man shall not be tenant by the curtesy of a mere seisin in law." The same rule, with the same reason for it, will also be found in Paine's case (e), where it is said, " And when Littleton saith, as heir to the wife, these words are very material; for that is the the true reason that a man shall not be tenant by the curtesy of a seisin in law; for, in such case, the issue ought to make himself heir to him who was last actually seised." The same doctrine again appears in Blackstone (f). "And this seems to be the principal reason why the husband cannot he tenant by the curtesy of any lands of which the wife was not actually seised ; because, in order to entitle himself to such estate, he must have begotten issue that may be heir to the wife; but no one, by the standing rule of law, can be heir to the ancestor of any land, whereof the ancestor was not actually seised; and, therefore, as the husband hath never begotten any issue that can be heir to

(a) The substance of the following observations has already appeared in the "Jurist" newspaper for March 14, 1846. (b) Litt. s. 35.

(c) Litt. s. 52.

(d) Co. Litt. 40 a.

(e) 8 Rep. 36 a.
(f) 2 Black. Comm. 128.

those lands, he shall not be tenant of them by the curtesy. And hence," continues Blackstone, in his usual laudatory strain, "we may observe, with how much nicety and consideration the old rules of law were framed, and how closely they are connected and interwoven together, supporting, illustrating and demonstrating one another." Here we have, indeed, a formidable array of authorities, all to the point, that, in order to entitle the husband to his curtesy, his wife, must have been the stock from whom descent should have been traced to her issue; for the principal and true reason that there could not be any curtesy of a seisin in law is stated to be, that the issue could not, in such a case, make himself heir to the wife, because his descent was then required to be traced from the person last actually seised.

Let us, then, endeavour to apply this principle to the present law. The act for the amendment of the law of inheritance (g) enacts (h), that in every case, descent shall be traced from the purchaser. On the decease of a woman entitled by descent, the descent of her share is, therefore, to be now traced, not from herself, but from her ancestor, the purchaser from whom she inherited. With respect to the persons to become entitled, as heir to the purchaser on this descent, if the woman be a coparcener, the question arises, which has already been discussed (i), whether the surviving sister equally with the issue of the deceased, or whether such issue solely, are now entitled to inherit? And the conclusion at which we arrived was, that the issue solely succeeded to their mother's share. But, whether this be so or not, nothing is clearer than that, on the decease of a woman entitled by descent, the persons who next inherit take as heir to the purchaser, and not to her; for, from the purchaser alone can descent now be traced; and the mere circumstance of having obtained an actual seisin does not now make the heir the stock of descent. How, then, can her husband be entitled to hold her lands as tenant by the curtesy? If tenancy by the

⁽g) 3 & 4 Will, IV. c. 106,

⁽i) Appendix (B.), ante, p. 433.

⁽h) Sect. 2.

curtesy was allowed of those lands only of which the wife had obtained actual seisin, because it was a necessary condition of curtesy that the wife should be the stock of descent, and because an actual seisin alone made the wife the stock of descent, how can the husband obtain his curtesy in any case where the stock of descent is confessedly not the wife, but the wife's ancestor? Amongst all the recent alterations of the law, the doctrine of curtesy has been left untouched; there seems, therefore, to be no means of determining any question respecting it, but by applying the old principles to the new enactments, by which, indirectly, it may be affected. So far, then, as at present appears, it seems a fair and proper deduction from the authoritics, that, whenever a woman has become entitled to lands by descent, her husband cannot claim his curtesy, because the descent of such lands, on her decease, is not to be traced from her.

But, by carrying our investigations a little further, we may be disposed to doubt, if not to deny, that such is the law; not that the conclusion drawn is unwarranted by the authorities, but the authorities themselves may, perhaps, be found to be erroneous. Let us now compare the law of curtesy of an estate tail with the law of curtesy of an estate in fee simple.

In the section of Littleton, which we have already quoted (l), it is laid down, that, if a man taketh a wife seised as heir in tail especial, and hath issue by her, born alive, he shall, on her decease, be tenant by the curtesy. And on this Lord Coke makes the following commentary: "And here Littleton intendeth a seisin in deed, if it may be attained unto. As if a man dieth seised of lands in fee simple or fee tail general, and these lands descend to his daughter, and she taketh a husband and hath issue, and dieth before any entry, the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesy, and yet, in this case, she had a seisin in law; but, if she or her husband had, during her life, entered, he should have been tenant by the curtesy" (m). Now, it is well known that the descent of an estate tail is always traced from the purchaser or original donee in tail. The actual seisin which might be obtained by the heir to an estate tail never made him the stock of descent. The maxim was, " Possessio fratris de feudo simplici facit sororem esse hæredem." Where, therefore, a woman who had been seised as heir or coparcener in tail died, leaving issue, such issue made themselves heir not to her, but to her ancestor, the purchaser or donee; and whether the mother did or did not obtain actual seisin was, in this respect, totally immaterial. When actual seisin was obtained, the issue still made themselves heir to the purchaser only, and yet the husband was entitled to his curtesy. When actual seisin was not obtained, the issue were heirs to the purchaser as before; but the husband lost his curtesy. In the case of an estate tail, therefore, it is quite clear that the question of curtesy or no curtesy depended entirely on the husband's obtaining for his wife an actual seisin, and had nothing to do with the circumstance of the wife's being or not being the stock of descent. The reason, therefore, before mentioned given by Lord Coke, and repeated by Blackstone, cannot apply to an estate tail. An actual seisin could not have been required in order to make the wife the stock of descent, because the descent could not, under any circumstances be traced from her, but must have been traced from the original donee to the heir of his body per formam doni.

(1) Sect. 35.

(m) Co. Litt. 29 a.

Again, if we look to the law respecting curtesy in incorporeal hereditaments, we shall find that the reason above given is inapplicable; for the husband, on having issue born, was entitled to his curtesy out of an advowson and a rent, although no actual seisin had been obtained, in the wife's lifetime, by receipt of the rent or presentation to the advowson (n). And yet, in order to make the wife the stock of descent as to such hereditaments, it was necessary that an actual seisin should be obtained by her (o). The husband, therefore, was entitled to his curtesy where the descent to the issue was traced from the ancestor of his wife, as well as where traced from the wife herself. In this case also, the right to curtesy was, accordingly, independent of the wife's being or not being the stock from which the descent was to be traced.

(n) Watk. Descents, 39 (47, (o) Watk. Descents, 60 (67, 4th ed.) 4th ed.)

We are driven, therefore, to search for another and more satisfactory reason why an actual seisin should have been required to be obtained by the wife, in order to entitle her husband to his curtesy out of her lands; and such a reason is furnished by Lord Coke himself, and also by Blackstone. Lord Coke says (p), "Where lands or tenements descend to the husband, before entry he hath but a seisin in law, and vet the wife shall be endowed, albeit it be not reduced to an actual possession, for it lieth not in the power of the wife to bring it to an actual seisin, as the husband may do of his nife's land when he is to be tenant by curtesy, which is worthy the observation." It would seem from this, therefore, that the reason why an actual seisin was required to entitle the husband to his curtesy was, that his wife may not suffer by his neglect to take possession of her lands; and, in order to induce him to do so, the law allowed him curtesy of all lands of which an actual seisin had been obtained, but refused him his curtesy out of such lands as he had taken no pains to obtain possession of. This reason also is adopted by Blackstone from Coke: "A seisin in law of the husband will be as effectual as a seisin in deed, in order to render the wife dowable : for it is not in the wife's power to bring the husband's title to an actual seisin, as it is in the husband's power to do with regard to the wife's lands ; which is one reason why he shall not be tenant by the curtesy but of such lands whereof the wife, or he himself in her right, was actually seised in dced" (q). The more we investigate the rules and principles of the ancient law, the greater will appear the probability that this reason was indeed the true one. In the troublous times of old, an actual seisin was not always easily acquired. The doctrine of continual claim shows that peril was not unfrequently incurred in entering on lands for the sake of asserting a title; for, in order to obtain an actual seisin, any person entitled, if unable to approach the premises, was bound to come as near as he dare (r). And "it is to be observed," says Lord Coke, " that every doubt or fear is not sufficient, for it must concern the safety of the person of a man, and not his houses or goods; for if he fear the burning of his houses or the taking away or spoiling his goods, this is not sufficient" (s). That actual seisin should be obtained was obviously most desirable, and nothing could be more natural or reasonable than that the husband should have no curtesy where he had failed to obtain it. Perkins seems to think that this was the reason of the rule; for in his Profitable Book he answers an objection to it, founded on an extreme case. "But if possession in law of lands or tenements in fee descend unto a married woman, which lands are in the county of York, and the husband and his wife are dwelling in the county of Essex, and the wife dieth within one day after the descent, so as the husband could not enter during the coverture, for the shortness of the time, yet he shall not be tenant by the curtesy, &c.; and yet, according to common pretence, there is no default in the husband. But it may be said that the husband of the woman, before the death of the ancestor of the woman, might have spoken unto a man dwelling near unto the place where the lands lay, to enter for the woman, as in her right, immediately after the death of her ancestor," &c.(t). This reason for the rule is also quite consistent with the circumstance that the husband was entitled to his curtesy out of incorporeal hereditaments, notwithstanding his failure to obtain an actual seisin. For if the advowson were not void, or the rent did not become payable during the wife's life, it was obviously impossible for the husband to present to the one or receive the other; and it would have been unreasonable that he should suffer for not doing an impossibility, the maxim being "impotentia excusat legem." This is the reason, indeed, usually given to explain this circumstance; and it will be found both in Lord Coke(u) and Blackstone(x). This reason, however,

(p) Co. Litt. 31 a.

(q) 2 Black. Com. 131.

(r) Litt. ss. 419, 421.

- (s) Co. Litt. 253 b.
- (t) Peik. 470.

- (u) Co. Litt. 29 a.
- (x) 2 Black. Com. 127.

is plainly at variance with that mentioned in the former part of this paper, and adduced by them to explain the necessity of an actual seisin, in order to entitle the husband to his curtesy out of lands in fee simple.

There still remains, however, the section of Littleton, to which we have before referred (y), as an apparent authority on the other side. Littleton expressly says, that when the issue may, by possibility, inherit, of such an estate as the wife hath, as heir to the wife, the husband shall have his curtesy, but otherwise not; and we have seen that, according to Lord Coke's interpretation, to inherit as heir to the wife, means here to inherit from the wife as the stock of descent. But the legitimate mode of interpreting an author certainly is to attend to the context, and to notice in what sense he himself uses the phrase in question on other occasions. If now we turn to the very next section of Littleton, we shall find the very same phrase made use of in a manner, which clearly shows that Littleton did not mean, by inheriting as heir to a person, inheriting from that person as the stock of descent. For, after having thus laid down the law as to curtesy, Littleton continues : " And, also, in every case where a woman taketh a husband seised of such an estate in tenements, &c., so as, by possibility, it may happen that the wife may have issue by her husband, and that the same issue may, by possibility, inherit the same tenements of such an estate as the husband hath, as heir to the husband, of such tenements she shall have her dower, and otherwise not(z). Now, nothing is clearer than that a wife was entitled to dower out of the lands of which her husband had only seisin in law(a); and nothing, also, is clearer than that a seisin in law only was insufficient to make the husband the stock of descent : for, for this purpose, an actual seisin was requisite, according to the rule "seisina facit stipitem." In this case, therefore, it is obvious that Littleton could not mean to say that the husband must have been made the stock of descent, by virtue of having obtained an actual seisin : for that would have been to con-

(y) Sect. 52.

(z) Litt. s. 53.

(a) Watk. Descents, 32 (42, 4th ed.)

tradict the plainest rules of law. What, then, was his meaning? The subsequent part of the same section affords an explanation : "For, if tenement be given to a man and to the heirs which he shall beget of the body of his wife, in this case the wife hath nothing in the tenements, and the husband hath an estate tail as donee in special tail. Yet, if the husband die without issue, the same wife shall be endowed of the same tenements, because the issue which she, by possibility, might have had by the same husband, might have inherited the same tenements. But, if the wife dieth leaving her husband, and after the husband taketh another wife and dieth, his second wife shall not be endowed in this case, for the reason aforesaid." This example shows what was Littleton's true meaning. He was not thinking, either in this section or in the one next before it, of the husband or wife being the stock of descent, instead of some earlier ancestor. He was laying down a general rule, applicable to dower as well as to curtesy; namely, that if the issue that might have been born in the one case, or that were born in the other, of the surviving parent, could not, by possibility, inherit the estate of their deceased parent, by right of representation of such parent, then the surviving parent was not entitled to dower in the one case, or to curtesy in the other. It is plain that, in the example just adduced, the issue of the husband by his second marriage could not possibly inherit his estate, which was given to him and the heirs of his body by his first wife ; the second wife, therefore, was excluded from dower out of this estate. And, in the parallel case of a gift to a woman and the heirs of her body by her first husband, it is indisputable that, for a precisely similar reason, her second hushand could not claim his curtesy on having issue by her; for such issue could not possibly inherit their mother's estate. All that Littleton then intended to state with respect to curtesy, was the rule laid down by the Statute de Donis (b), which provides that, where any person gives lands to a man and his wife and the heirs of their bodies, or where any person gives land in frankmarriage, the second husband of any such woman shall not have any thing in the land so given, after the death of his wife, by the law of England, nor shall the issue of the second husband and wife succeed in the inheritance (c). When the two sections of Littleton are read consecutively, without the introduction of Lord Coke's commentary, their meaning is apparent; and the intervening commentary not only puts the reader on the wrong cluc, but hinders the recovery of the right one, by removing to a distance the explanatory context.

(b) 13 Edw. 1. c. 1.

If our construction of Littleton be the true one, it throws some light on the question discussed in Appendix (B)., on the course of descent amongst coparceners. We there endeavoured to show that the issue of a coparcener always stood in the place of their parent, by right of representation, even where descent was traced from some more remote ancestor as the stock. Littleton, with this view of the subject in his mind, and never suspecting that any other could be entertained, might well speak generally of issue inheriting as heir to their parent, even though the share of the parent might have descended to the issue as heir to some more remote ancestor. The authorities adduced in Appendix (B.) thus tend further to explain the language of Littleton; whilst the language of Littleton, as above explained, illustrates and confirms the authorities previously adduced.

Having at length arrived at the true principles of the old law, the application of them to the state of circumstances produced by the new law of inheritance will be very easy. A coparcener dies leaving a husband who has had issue by her, and leaving one or more sisters surviving her. The descent of her share is now traced from their common parent, the purchaser. But, in tracing this descent, we have seen, in Appendix (B.), that the issue of the deceased coparcener would inherit her entire share by representation of her. And the condition which will entitle her husband to curtesy out of her share appears to be, that his issue might possibly inherit the estate by right of representation of their deceased mother.

⁽c) See Bac. Abr. tit. Curtesy of England (C.), 1.

This condition, therefore, is obviously fulfilled, and our conclusion consequently is, that the husband of a deceased coparcener, who has had issue by her, is entitled to curtesy out of the whole of her share. But in order to arrive at this conclusion, it seems that we must admit, first, that Lord Coke has endeavoured to support the law by one reason too many; and, secondly, that one laudatory flourish of Blackstone has been made without occasion. (463)

APPENDIX (E.)

Referred to, p. 254.

IF the rule of perpetuity, which restrains executory interests within a life or lives in being and twenty-one years afterwards, be, as is sometimes contended (a), the only limit to the settlement of real estate by way of remainder, the following limitations would be clearly unobjectionable :- To the use of A., a living unmarried person, for life, with remainder to the use of his first son for life, with remainder to the use of the first son of such first son, born in the lifetime of A., or within twenty-one years after his decease, for life, with remainder to the use of the first and other sons of such first son of such first son of A., born in the lifetime of A., or within twenty-one years after his decease, successively in tail male, with remainder to the use of the first son of the first son of A., born in his lifetime, or within twenty-one years after his decease, in tail male, with remainder to the use of the second son of such first son of A., born in the lifetime of A., or within twenty-one years after his decease, for life, with remainder to the use of his first and other sons, born in the lifetime of A., or within twenty-one years after his decease, successively in tail male, with remainder to the use of the second son of the first son of A., born in his lifetime, or within twenty-one years after his decease, in tail male, with remainder to the use of the third son of such first son of A., born in the lifetime of A., or within twenty-one years after his decease, for life, with remainder to the use of his first and other sons, born as before, successively in tail male, with remainder to the use of such third son of the first son of A., born as before, in tail male, with like remainders to the use of the fourth and every other son of such first son of A., born as before, for life respectively, followed by like remainders to the use of their respective first and other sons, born as before, successively in tail male, followed by like remainders to the use of themselves in tail male; with remainder to the use of the first son of A. in tail male, with remainder to the use of the second son of A. for life; with similar remainders to the use of his sons, and sons' sons, born as before; with remainder to the use of such second son of A. in tail male, and so on.

(a) Lewis on Perpetuity, p. 408 et seq.

It is evident that every one of the estates here limited must necessarily arise within a life in being (namely, that of A.) and twenty-one years afterwards. And yet here is a settlement which will in all probability tie up the estate for three generations : for the eldest son of a man's eldest son is very frequently born in his lifetime, or, if not, will most probably be born within twenty-one years after his decease. And great grandchildren, though not often born in the lifetime of their great grandfather, are yet not unusually born within twenty-one years of his death. Now if a settlement such as this were legal, it would, we may fairly presume, have been adopted before now; for conveyancers are frequently instructed to draw settlements containing as strict an entail as possible ; and the Court of Chancery has also sometimes had occasion to carry into effect executory trusts for making strict settlements. In these cases it would be the duty of the draftsman, or of the court, to go to the limit of the law in fettering the property in question. But it may be safely asserted that in no single case has a settlement, such as the one suggested, been drawn by any conveyancer, much less sanctioned by the Court of Chancery. The utmost that on these occasions is ever done is, to give life estates to all living persons, with remainder to their first and other sons successively in tail male. As, therefore, the best evidence of a man's having had no lawful issue is that none of his family ever heard of any, so the best evidence that such a settlement is illegal is that no conveyancer ever heard of such a draft being drawn.

(465)

APPENDIX (F.)

Referred to, pp. 346, 318.

THE Manor of Fairfield inA General Court Baron of John Freeman Esq. Lord of the said Manor holden in and for the said Manor on the 1st day of January in the third year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Queen Victoria by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen
Defender of the Faith and in the year of our Lord 1840
Before John Doe Steward of the said Manor.

At this Court comes A. B. one of the customary tenants of this manor and in consideration of the sum of £1000 of law- Consideration. ful money of Great Britain to him in hand well and truly paid by C. D. of Lincoln's Inn in the county of Middlesex Esq. in open court surrenders into the hands of the lord of this Surrender. manor by the hands and acceptance of the said steward by the rod according to the custom of this manor All that messuage Parcels. &c. (here describe the premises) with their appurtenances (and to which same premises the said A. B. was admitted at the general Court holden for this manor on this 12th day of October 1838) And the reversion and reversions remainder and remainders rents issues and profits thereof And all the estate right title interest trust benefit property claim and de- Estate. mand whatsoever of the said A. B. in to or out of the same premises and every part thereof To the use of the said C. D. his heirs and assigns for ever according to the custom of this manor.

Now at this Court comes the said C. D. and prays to be Admittance. admitted to all and singular the said customary or copyhold hereditaments and premises so surrendered to his use at this Court as aforesaid to whom the lord of this manor by the said Habendum. steward grants seisin thereof by the rod To HAVE and To HOLD the said messuage hereditaments and premises with their appurtenances unto the said C. D. and his heirs to be holden of the lord by copy of court roll at the will of the lord according to the custom of this manor by fealty suit of court and the ancient annual rent or rents and other duties and services therefore due and of right accustomed And so (saving the right of the lord) the said C. D. is admitted tenant thereof and pays to the lord on such his admittance a fine certain of £50 and his fealty is respited.

(Signed) John Doe Steward.

INDEX.

Α.

ABEYANCE, inheritance in, 246. ABSTRACT of title, vendor bound to furnish an, 412. ACCUMULATION, restriction on, 295. ACKNOWLEDGMENT of deeds by married women, 212, 422. ADMINISTRATOR, 10. ADMITTANCE to copyholds, 324, 348, 464. Abvowson appendant, 300. agreements for resignation, 315. convevance of, 317. in gross, 314, 316. of rectories, 316. of vicarages, 317. proper length of title to, 412. limitation of actions and suits for, 417. AGREEMENTS, what required to be in writing, 154. stamps on, 155. for lease, 362. stamps on, 363. AIDS, 111, 113. ALIEN, 62, 154. ALIENATION of real estate, 17, 18, 36, 38, 40, 58, 62, 63, 86, 231. power of, unconnected with ownership, 277. of executory interests, 292. of copyholds, 335, 344, 346. AMBASSADORS, children of, 63. ANCESTOR, descent to, 97, 104, 105, 106. formerly excluded from descent, 98. ANCIENT demesne, tenure of, 121, 328. incidents of tenure in fee, 109. ANNUITIES for lives, enrolment of memorial of, now unnecessary, 305. registration of, 305. search for, 422. ANTICIPATION, clause against, 206. APPENDANT incorporeal hereditaments, 297, 299, 300.

нн2

INDEX.

APPLICATION of purchase money, necessity of seeing to the, 414. APPOINTMENT, powers of, 185, 273, 275.-See Powers. APPORTIONMENT of rent, 28, 369. of rent-charge, 311. by Inclosure Commissioners, 311. APPURTENANCES, 303. APPURTENANT incorporeal hereditaments, 302, 303. rights of common and of way, 302, 303. ARMS, grant of, 134. directions for use of, 270. ASSETS. 75. ASSIGNEE of lease liable to rent and covenants, 366. ASSIGNMENT of satisfied terms, 385. of chattel interest must be by deed, 372. Assigns, 62, 135. ASSURANCE, further, in deed of grant, 450. ATTAINDER of tenant in tail, 55, 117. of tenant in fee, 65, 117. ATTENDANT terms, 384, 387. ATTESTATION to deeds, 175, 275. to wills, 187, 277, 349. to deeds exercising powers, 275, 276. ATTESTED copies, 420. ATTORNMENT, 228, 298. now abolished, 228, 299. AUTRE vie, estate pur, 19. quasi entail of, 56. in a rent-charge, 308, 309. in copyholds, 331.

в.

BANKRUFTCY, $5, 337, 374. of tenant in tail, 56. of cestui que trust, 158. of tenant in fee, 85. of trustee, 158. search for, 422. exercise of powers by assignees in, 272. of owner of land subject to rent-charge, 311. sale of copyholds in, 338. composition with the lord before entry for fines, &c., 338. as to leaseholds in, 374. BARGAIN and sale, 167, 168, 184, 364. required to be enrolled, 168, 184. for a year, 169, 171. of lands in Yorkshire, 409.

468

BASTARDY, 116. BEDFORD Level registry, 178. BENEFICE with cure of souls, 87. BOROUGH English, tenure of, 121. BREACH of covenant, waiver of, 369. actual waiver of, 370. implied waiver, 370.

С.

CANAL shares, personal property, 8. CESSER of a term, proviso for, 380. CESTUI que trust, 150, 264. is tenant at will, 360. que vie, 20, 21. CHAMBERS, 14. CHANCERY Amendment Act, 1858..162. ancient, 144, 151. modern, 151, 162. interposition of, between mortgagor and mortgagee, 393. CHARITIES, Incorporated, 72. CHARITY, conveyance to, 66, 67. new trustees of, 159. commissioners, 70. official trustee, 71. CHATTELS, 6, 7. CHELTENHAM, manor of, 356. CODICIL, 192. COLLATION, 315. COMMISSIONERS of Inclosures, 126, 299,311. COMMON, tenants in, 127. forms, 182. rights of, 299. fields, 299. in gross, 314. limitation of rights of, 418. Law Procedure Act, 1854..162, 176. COMMUTATION of tithes, 321. of manorial rights, 341. COMPANIES, joint stock, 72. CONDITION of re-entry for non-payment of rent, 226. demand of rent formerly required, 226. modern proceedings, 226. formerly inalienable, 227. for breach of covenants, 367. effect of licence for breach of covenant, 367, 368, 369. effect of waiver, 369.

INDEX.

CONDITIONAL gift, 35. CONSENT of protector, 50. as to copyholds, 336, 352. CONSIDERATION on feoffment, 136, 145, 147, 151. a deed imports a, 138. CONSTRUCTION of wills, 19, 194. of law as to attendant terms, 387. CONTINGENT remainders, 242. anciently illegal, 243. Mr. Fearne's Treatise on, 247. definition of, 247. example of, 247, 255. rules for creation of, 248, 249, 253. formerly inalienable, 257. destruction of, 258. now indestructible, 258. trustees to preserve, 262, 263. of trust estates, 264. of copyholds, 354. CONTINUING breach of covenant, 370. CONVEYANCE, fraudulent, 73. of tithes, 320. by tenant for life, 30. voluntary, 73. by deed, 138, 139, 170, 220, 224. by married women, 212. to uses, 172. COPARCENERS, 95. descent amongst, 104, 433. COPYHOLDS, definition of, 332. origin of, 322. for lives, 323, 331. of inheritance, 324. history of, 324, 325. estate tail in, 332, 335. estate pur autre vie, 331. customary recovery, 335. forfeiture and re-grant, 335. equitable estate tail in, 352. ancient state of copyholders, 322, 333. alienation of, 335, 345, 346. subject to debts, 336. sale of, by court of bankruptcy, 337. descent of, 338. tenure of, 339. commutation of manorial rights in, 341.

470

COPYHOLDS, enfranchisement of, 342. mortgage of, 397. grant of, 345, 346. seizure of, 349. contingent remainders of, 354. deposit of copies of court roll, 399. abstract of title on purchase of, 412. COPYHOLD Acts, 1852, and 1858...342. CORPORATION, CONVEYANCE to, 72. CORPOREAL hereditaments, 10, 13. now lie in grant, 220. Costs, mortgage to secure, 406. COUNTER-PART, stamp on, 139. COUNTIES, palatine, 83. COUNTY Courts, 151, 159, 395. COURT of Probate, 190. suit of, 112, 113, 115. customary, 323. Rolls, 322, 345. COVENANT to stand seised, 185. COVENANTS in a lease, 366. run with the land, 366. effect of licence for breach of, 367, 369. waiver of breach of, 369, 370. for quiet enjoyment, implied by certain words, 409. for title, 410, 448. to produce title deeds, 420. COVERTURE, 205, 416. CREDITORS, conveyances to defraud, 73. judgment, 77.-See JUDGMENT DEBTS. may witness a will, 190. sale of copyhold estates for benefit of, 337. CROWN debts, 55, 84, 158, 336. search for, 85. forfeiture to the, 117. limitation of rights of, 416. CURTESY, tenant by, 209. of gavelkind lands, 209. as affected by the new law of inheritance, 210, 452. of copyholds, 356. CUSTOMARY freeholds, 328. recovery, 335. Cy près, doctrine of, 254.

DAUGHTERS, descent to, 94, 104.

DEATH, civil, 23. gift by will in case of, without issue, 197. DEBTS, crown, 55, 84, 158, 336. where trustees and executors may sell or mortgage to pay, 202. devise in fee or in tail charged with, 203. of deceased traders, 76. judgment, 55, 77, 156, 273, 337, 374. liability of lands to, 74, 76. simple contract, 76. charge of, by will, 77, 202, 204. copyholds now liable to, 337. liability of trust estates to, 155. DEED, 137. alteration or rasure in, 138. whether signing necessary to, 141. poll, 139, 140. required to transfer incorporeal hereditaments, 220. of grant, conveyance of reversion by, 224. DEEDS, stamps on, 139. similarity of, 180. DEMAND for rent, 226. DEMANDANT, 45. DEMESNE, the lord's, 110, 323. DEMISE, implies a covenant for quiet enjoyment, 409. DENIZEN, 63. DESCENT, of an estate in fee simple, 92. of an estate tail, 96. gradual progress of the law of, 89. of gavelkind lands, 119. of borough English lands, 121. of an equitable estate, 154. of tithes, 313, 320. of copyholds, 338. DESTRUCTION of entails, 42. DEVISE .- See WILL. DISABILITIES, time allowed for, 416. DISCLAIMER, 89, 200. DISTRESS, 225. clause of, 307. for rent reserved by underlease, 375. DOCKETS, 79. DONATIVE advowsons, 315. DONEE in tail, 34. DOUBTS, legal, 142. Dower, 213. action for, 219.

472

DOWER of gavelkind lands, 215. under old law independent of husband's debts, 214. old method of barring, 215. under the recent act, 217. declaration against, 218. modern method of barring, 281. uses to bar, 282, 448. formerly defeated by assignment of attendant term, 386. release of, by acknowledgment of purchase dccd, 414. leases by tenant in, 218. DRAINING, 29, 30. DUPLICATE DEED, stamp on, 139.

Е.

EJECTMENT of mortgagor by mortgagee, 392. ELEGIT, writ of, 78, 80, 337. EMBLEMENTS, 27, 360. ENCLOSURE, 299. conveyance of, will carry adjoining waste, 301. ENFRANCHISEMENT of copyholds, 342. ENROLMENT.-See INROLMENT. ENTAIL .- See TAIL. ENTIRETY, 96. ENTIRETIES, husband and wife take by, 208. ENTRY, necessary to a lease, 165, 364. tenant's position altered by, 165, 166. right of, supported a contingent remainder, 259. on court roll of deed, barring estate tail, must be made within six months, 352, n. power of, to secure a rent charge, 308. EQUITABLE assets, 75. waste, 25. estate, 150, 307. no escheat of, 153. forfeiture of, 154. creation and transfer of, 154. descent of, 154. liable to debts, 154. tail in copyhold may be barred by deed, 352. of alien, 151. curtesy of, 209. EQUITY follows the law, 151. a distinct system, 161. of redemption, 393. is an equitable estate, 403. mortgage of, 404.

ERASURE, 138. ESCHEAT, 116, 117. none of trust estates, 153. none of a rent-charge, 314. of copyholds, 339. Escrow, 138. ESCUAGE, 113. ESTATE during widowhood, 22. legal, 150. pur autre vie, 20, 308. lcases of settled, 25. sale of settled, 31. grant of, 35. tail, 33, 49, 51, 134, 151, 197, 198, 239. for life, 134, 152, 195. in fee simple, 134. no escheat of trust, 153. forfeiture of trust, 154. creation and transfer of trust, 154. must be marked out, 171. of wife, 209. particular, 222. one person may have more than one, 234. words of limitation, 236. in remainder, 276, 238. where the first estate is an estate tail, 236. forfeiture of life, 27, 136, 259. in copyhold, 326. sale of, by court of bankruptcy, 337. at will, 326. equitable, 150. equitable for life and in tail, 151. equitable, in mortgaged lands, 403. ESTOPPEL, lease by, 365. EXCHANGE, implied effect of, 409. power of, 284, 285, 286. statutory provision for, 299, 300, n. EXECUTION of a deed, 138, 275, 276. EXECUTORS, directions to, to sell lands, 289, 290. devise of real estate independent of assent of, 202. where they may sell or mortgage to pay debts, 203. exoneration of, from liability to pay rent-charges, 312. exoneration of, from rents and covenants in leases, 373. EXECUTORY devises .- See EXECUTORY INTEREST. interest, 242, 243, 267. creation of, under Statute of Uses, 268.

EXECUTORY interest, creation of, by will, 289, 354. alienation of, 292. limit to creation of, 294. in copyholds, 354. where preceded by estate tail, 295. F. FATHER, descent to, 99, 104. his power to appoint a guardian, 114.

FEALTY, 112, 113, 115, 224, 339. FEE, meaning of term, 41. simple, 58. joint tenants in, 124. equitable estate in, 152. gift of, by will, 196, 197. estate of, in a rent charge, 309. customary estate in, 329, 336. FEE tail, 41, 134. FEME COVERT .- See MARRIED WOMAN and WIFE. FEOFFMENT, 130, 144. to the use of feoffor, 145. forfeiture by, 27, 136. deed required for, 141. by idiots and lunatics, 136. by infants of gavelkind lands, 136. by tenant for life, 135. writing formerly unnecessary to a, 137. FEUDAL system, introduction of, 2. feuds originally for life, 17, 234. tenancies become hereditary, 34, 235. FEUDUM novum ut antiquum, 98. FIELDS, common, 300. FINE, 46. formerly used to convey wife's lands, 212. attornment could be compelled on conveyance by, 228. payable to lord of copyholds, 330. FINES, search for, 422. FIRE, relief against forfeiture for non-insurance, 371. protection of purchasers of leaseholds as to insurance, 372. power to insure against, in mortgages, 396. FORECLOSURE, 394. court may direct sale of property instead of, 395. FORFEITURE for treason, 55, 117, 339. by feoffment, 27, 136. and re-grant of copyholds, 335. FORMEDON, 43.

INDEX.

FRANKALMOIGN, 36, 122.
FRANKMARRIAGE, 36.
FRAUDS, Statute of—(see Statute 29 Car. II. c. 3), 20, 140, 141, 154, 170, 187, 225, 359, 361, 371, 399.
FREEBENCH, 356.
FREEHOLD, 22, 34, 58.

any estate of, is larger than estate for term of years, 381.

G.

GAVELKIND, 119, 130, 136. curtesy of gavelkind lands, 209. dower of gavelkind lands, 215. GENERAL occupant, 20. residuary devisee, 193. registry, 418, 423. words, 175, 448. GESTATION, period of, included in time allowed by rule of perpetuity, 294. GIFT, conditional, 35, 83. in tail, 108, 199. in fee, 108, 199. to use of feoffee, 136. with livery of seisin, 130, 144. to husband and wife and a third person, 207. GIVE, word used in a feoffment, 133. warranty formerly implied by, 407, 409. GOODS, 6. GRAND Serjeanty, 118. GRANT, deed of, 165. an innocent conveyance, 183. construed most strongly against grantor, 18. incorporeal hereditaments lay in, 220. proper operative word for a deed of grant, 184. of copyholds, 345, 346. implied effect of the word, 409. GROSS, incorporeal hereditaments in, 303. seignory in, 303. common in, 314. advowson in, 314, 317. GUARDIAN, 114.

H.

HABENDUM, 175, 176, 448. HALF-BLOOD, descent to, 101, 106, 428. HEIR, anciently took entirely from grantor, 18.

HEIR, at first meant only issue, 34. alienation as against, 36. is appointed by the law, 62, 88. bound by specialty, 74. apparent, 88. presumptive, 88. cannot disclaim, 89. word "heirs" used in conveyance of estate of inheritance, 131. is a word of limitation, 134, 236. devise to, 201. 2 contingent remainder to, 241, 245. gift to "heirs," 245. HEREDITAMENTS, 5, 12. incorporeal, 220, 297. HERIOTS, 339. Нисн treason, 117, 339. HOMAGE, 111, 344. HONOUR, titles of, 8, 321. HUSBAND, right of, in his wife's lands, 205, 210, 377. and wife one person, 207. cannot convey to his wife, 208. holding over, is a trespasser, 211. appointment by, to his wife, 277.

I.

IDIOTS, 64, 136, 350. IMPLICATION, gifts in a will by, 198. IMPROVEMENTS, 30. INCLOSURE, 299. commissioners, 122, 299, n., 300, 311. INCORPORATED charities, 72. INCORPOREAL property, 10, 220, 297. not subject to tenure, 313. INDENTURE, 139, 140. INDESTRUCTIBILITY of land, 1. INDUCTION, 314 INFANTS, 64, 136, 278, 293, 350, 416. marriage settlements, 64, 278. INHERITANCE, law of .- See DESCENT. trust of terms to attend the, 384. owner of, subject to attendant term, had a real estate in equity, 386. INNOCENT CONVEYANCE, 183. INROLMENT of deeds barring estate tail, 46, 352. of bargain and sale, 168, 184.

INDEX.

INROLMENT of memorial of deeds as to lands in Middlesex and Yorkshire, 177, 421. of memorial of annuities for lives, 305, 422. INSOLVENCY, 86, 422. INSTITUTION, 314. INSURANCE, forfeiture of lease for non, courts may relieve, 371. protection of purchaser of leaseholds against non, 372. INTENTION, rule as to observing in wills, 194. INTERESSE termini, 364. INTEREST, stipulation to raise, void, 400. stipulation to diminish, good, 400. former highest legal rate of, 401. Issue, in tail, bar of, 46, 51. devise to, of testator, 195.' devise in case of death without, 197. J. JOINT stock companies, 72. tenants for life, 123. in tail, 123. in fee simple, 124. of copyholds, 340. trustees made, 125. tenancy, severance of, 127. estate, no curtesy of, 209. no dower of, 214, 216. JOINTURE, 216. equitable, 217. JUDGMENT DEBTS, 55, 77. lien of, now abolished, 82. in counties palatine, 83. registry of, 80. as to trust estates, 156, 157. as to powers, 273. as to copyholds, 337. search for, 80, 82. as to leaseholds, 374. limitation of actions on, 417. against a mortgagee, 402.

к.

KNIGHT's service, 111.

L.

LAND, indestructibility of, 1. term, 13.

LANDS, liability of, for debts, 76, 79. LAPSE, 194. LEASE and release, 164, 170, 183. agreements for, 362. stamp duty on agreements for, 363, n. from year to year, 360. for a number of years. 108, 165, 361. for years, is personal property, and why, 8, 10. for life, 108. entry necessary, 165, 364. by tenant in tail, 54. by tenant in dower, 218. for a year abolished, 171. no formal words required in a, 362. by tenant for life, 25, 283. by husband of wife's lands, 210. power to, 26, 282 by copyholder, 327. stamps on, 363, n. by estoppel, 365. rent reserved by, 366. mortgagor cannot make a valid, 392. forfeiture of, 117, n. LEASEHOLDS, will of, 373. mortgage of, 398. purchaser of, protection against non-insurance, 372. entitled to a sixty years' title, 412. LEGACIES, limitation of suits for, 417. charge of, 203. LEGAL doubts, 142. estate, 150, 307. LICENCE, effect of licence for breach of covenants in a lease, 367. restrictions on effect of, 368, 369. to demise copyholds, 327. LIEN of vendor, 400. LIFE, estate for, 16, 17, 134, 196, 234. joint tenants for, 123. equitable estate for, 151. tenant for, concurrence of, to bar entail, 50. estate for, in a rent-charge, 304. estate for, in copyholds, 331. tenant for, entitled to custody of title-deeds, 419. LIGHT, limitation of right to, 418. LIMITATION, of estates, 133, 171. of a vested remainder after a life estate, 232. words of, 133, 236.

INDEX.

LIMITATION, statutes of, 416. LIS pendens, 85. LITERARY institutions, 72, 160. LIVERY in deed, 132. in law, 133. of wardship, 111. of seisin, 130, 132, 133. corporeal hereditaments formerly lay in, 220. LOGIC, scholastic, 252. LONDON, custom of, 60. LUNATIC, 64, 136, 350, 416.

м.

MALES preferred in descent, 99, 100. MANORS, 110, 323. rights of lords of, to wastes by side of commons, 301. MARRIAGE, 64, 111, 191. MARRIED woman, separate property of, 206, 207. has no disposing power, 205. conveyance of her lands, 212. surrender of her copyhold lands, 347. rights of, in her husband's lands, 213, 217. rights of, in her husband's copyholds, 356. admittance of, to copyholds, 350. husband's rights in her term, 377. appointment by, 278. release of powers by, 288. release of her right to dower, 414. MATERNAL ancestors, descent to, 99, 106. MERGER, 229, 382, 383. none of tithes in the land, 320. of tithe rent-charge, 321. of a term of years in a freehold, 381. none of estates held in antre droit, 383. MESSUAGE, term, 13. MIDDLESEX register, 178, 421. MINES, 14, 23. sale under powers reserving, 286. right of the lord of copyholds to, 327. Modus decimandi, 418, n. MONEY land, 152. MORTGAGE, 357, 389. construction of, in law, 391. for payment of debts, 202, 203. for payment of legacies, 202, 203.

MORTGAGE, stamps on, 390. origin of term, 391. legal estate in, 392. to trustees, 401. equity of redemption of, 393, 403. foreclosure of, 394. power of sale in, 395. statutory powers of sale in, 396. appointment of receiver in, 396. fire insurance in, 371, 396. repayment of, 397. of copyholds, 397. of leaseholds, 398. by underlease, 399. interest on, 400, 401. to joint mortgagees, 401. now primarily payable out of mortgaged lands, 404. tacking, 405. for future advances, 406." for long term of years, 397. transfer of, 402. MORTGAGEE and mortgagor, relative rights of, 392. judgments against, 402. MORTGAGOR, covenants for title by a, 411. limitation of his right to redeem, 417. must give notice of intention to repay mortgage money, 397. MORTMAIN, 65. MOTHER, descent to, 105, 106. MOVEABLES, 2, 5. MURDER, 86.

Ν.

NATURAL life, 22. NATURALIZATION, 63. NEW trustees, 159, 160, 161. NEXT presentation, 314. NORMAN conquest, 2. NOTICE of an incumbrance, $1, 385. for repayment of mortgage money, 397.

0.

OCCUPANT, 20. of a rent-charge, 308. OPERATIVE words, 175, 176, 447. OWNERSHIP, no absolute ownership of real property, 17. R.P. I I

```
Р.
```

PALATINE, judgments in counties, 83. PARAMOUNT, queen is lady, 2, 109. PARCELS, 175, 180, 447. PARTICULAR estate, 222. PARTIES to a deed, 174, 179. PARTITION, 94, 128, 129, 300, n., 409. of copyholds, 341. PATERNAL ancestors, descent to, 97, 98, 104. PATRON of a living, 314. PERPETUITY, 49, 253, 254, 293, 466. PERSONAL property, 7, 8, 357. PETIT serjeanty, 119. PLAY grounds, 72. PORTIONS, terms of years used for securing, 381. Possession, mortgagee in, 417. POSSIBILITY, alienation of, 256, 257. of issue extinct, tenant in tail after, 52. on a possibility, 251. common and double, 252. Posthumous children, 250. Powers, 272, 277. vested in hankrupt or insolvent, 272, 273. compliance with formalities of, 274. attestation of deeds executing, 275, 276. equitable relief on defective execution of, 276. exercise of, by will, 277, 279. extinguishment of, 280, 288. suspension of, 280. of leasing, 282, 283. estates under, how they take effect, 287. release of, 288. of sale in mortgages, 395, 396. of sale and exchange in settlements, 284, 285, 286. PRÆCIPE, tenant to the, 45. PREMISES, term, 14. PRESCRIPTION, 302. PRESENTATION, 314. next, 318. sale or assignment of, by spiritual person, when void, 318. PRESENTMENT of surrender of copyholds, 347. of will of copyholds, 349. PRIMOGENITURE, 48, 94. PRIVITY between lessor and assignee of term, 367. none between lessor and under-lessee, 376. PROBATE, Court of, 190.

PROCLAMATIONS of fine, 47. PROFESSED persons, 23. PROTECTOR of settlement, 50, 336, 352. PUR autre vie, estate, 20, 56, 308, 331. PURCHASE, meaning of term, 92. when heir takes by, 201. deed, specimen of a, 174. deed, stamps on, 175. money, application of, 414. PURCHASER, voluntary conveyances void as to, 73. judgments formerly binding on, 78, 85. protection of, without notice, 81, 337, 385. descent traced from the last, 92, 427. conveyance to the use of, 173. relief against mistaken payment by, 285. protection against non-insurance against fire, 372.

Q.

QUASI entail, 56. QUEEN is lady paramount, 2, 109. QUIA emptores, statute of (see statute 18 Edw. I. c. 1). QUIT rent, 115.

R.

RACK-RENT, new enactment as to tenants at, 27. REAL property, 7. RECEIVER, power to appoint in a mortgage, 396. RECITAL of contract for sale, 174. of conveyance to vendor, 174. Recognizances, 83. RECOVERY, 43, 44, 45, 46. customary, 335. RECOVERIES, search for, 422. RECTORIES, advowsons of, 315. REDEMPTION, equity of, 393, 403. RE-ENTRY, condition of, 226, 367. not now destroyed by licence for breach of covenant, 368. not now destroyed by waiver of breach of covenant, 370. REGISTER of judgments, 80. of dceds, 178, 418, 423. search in the, 421. of annuities, 305. REGISTRATION of title, 423. TT2

REGRANT after forfeiture, 335. RELEASE, proper assurance between joint tenants, 126. conveyance by, 164, 166, 170, 183, 229. from rent-charge of part of hereditaments not an extinguishment, 311. of powers by married women, 288. Relief, 111, 113, 115, 339. REMAINDER, 223. bar of, after an estate tail, 44, 50. arises from express grant, 223. no tenure between particular tenant and remainderman, 230. vested, 231, 232. vested, may be conveyed by deed of grant, 233. definition of vested, 233. example of vested, 247. contingent .-- See CONTINGENT REMAINDER. of copyholds, 353. REMUNERATION, professional, 181. RENEWABLE leases, 229, 377, 378. RENT, quit, 115. demand for, 226. reservation of, 225. apportionment of, 28, 311. of estate in fee simple, 113, 115. service, 224, 228, 229, 339. passes by grant of reversion, 228. not lost now by merger of reversion, 230. none incident to a remainder, 231. seck, 303. limitations of actions and suits for, 417. charge, 304, 417. power to grantee to distrain for, 307. estate for life in, 308. estate in fee simple in, 309. release of, 311. apportionment of, 311. accelerated by merger of prior term, 384. grantee of, has no right to the title deeds, 419. creation of, under the Statute of Uses, 306. bankruptcy of owner of land, subject to, 311. RESIDUARY devise, 193. RESIGNATION, agreement for, 315. RESULTING USE, 147. REVERSION, 223, 228. bar of, expectant on an estate tail, 44, 50.

REVERSION on a lease for years, 223. severance of, 369. on lease for life, 224. difficulty in making a title to, 420. purchaser of, must show that he gave the market price, 420. REVOCATION, conveyance with clause of, 73. of wills, 191. RIVER, soil of, 301. rights of owner of adjoining lands to, 301. ROAD, soil of, 301. RULE in Shelley's case, 234, 236, 240.

RULES, technical, in construing a will, 195.

s.

SALE of copyhold estates by Court of Bankruptcy, 337. of settled estates, 31. for payment of debts, 202, 203, 292. power of, in settlements, 284, 285, 286. contract for. 446. SATISFIED terms, 384, 387. SCHOLASTIC logic, 252. SCHOOLS, sites for, 71. SCIENTIFIC institutions, 72, 160. SCINTILLA juris, 271, 272. SEA-SHORE, rights of owner of adjoining lands to, 302. rights of the Crown to, 302. SEIGNORY, 297. in gross, 303. SEISIN, 92. transfer of, required to be notorious, 249. actual seisin required for curtesy, 210. legal seisin required for dower, 214. of copyhold lands, is in the lord, 328. SEIZURE of copyholds, 349. SEPARATE property of wife, 87, 205, 207. SERJEANTY, grand, tenure of, 118. petit, tenure of, 119. SERVICES, feudal, 38. SETTLEMENT, 48. protector of, 50, 336. on infants on marriage, 63, 278. extract from a, 263. of copyholds, 351. SEVERALTY, 96, 128. SEVERANCE of joint tenancy, 127. SHELLEY's case, rule in, 234, 236, 240.

INDEX.

SHIFTING use, 268, 269, 270. no limitation construed as, which can be regarded as a remainder, 271. in copyhold surrenders, 355. SIGNING of deeds, 141. SIMONY, 318. SITES for schools, 71. SOCAGE, tenure of free and common, 112. derivation of word, 112, n. SOIL of river, 301. of road, 301. SONS, descent to, 94. SPECIAL occupant, 20. SPECIALTY, heir bound by, 74. Springing uses, 268, 270. STAMPS on deeds, 139, 176, 177, 221. on purchase deeds, 176. on conveyances in consideration of annuities, 310. on agreements, 155. on agreements for leases, 363. on orders of court vesting trust property, 159. on lease for year now repealed, 165. on licence to demise copyholds, 327, n. on surrender of copyholds, 346, n. on admittance to copyholds, 348, n. on leases, 363. on assignment of leases, 371.n on surrender of a lease, 382. on covenant to surrender copyholds, 410. on appointment of new trustees, 160. on covenant for production of title deeds, 420. on mortgages, 390. on transfer of mortgages, 403. STATUTES cited : 9 Hen. III. c. 29, (Magna Charta, freemen,) 334. 9 Hen. III. c. 32, (Magna Charta, alienation,) 39. 20 Hen. III. c. 4, (approvement,) 5. 4 Edw. I. c. 6, (warranty,) 40, 407. 6 Edw. I. c. 3, (warranty,) 408. 6 Edw. I. c. 5, (waste,) 24. 13 Edw. I. c. 1, (De donis,) 5, 6, 16, 41, 59, 60, 260, 333, 408. 13 Edw. I. c. 18, (judgments,) 77, 157. 13 Edw. I. c. 32, (mortmain,) 42. 18 Edw. I. c. 1, (Quia emptores,) 18, 60, 77, 109, 110, 118, 257, 298, 310, 333. 18 Edw. I. stat. 4, (fines,) 46.

STATUTES cited. 25 Edw. III. stat. 2, (natural-born subjects,) 63. 34 Edw. III. c. 16, (fines,) 47. 15 Rich. II. c. 6, (vicarages,) 318. 4 Hen. IV. c. 12, (vicarages.) 318, 1 Rich. III. c. 1, (uses,) 146. 1 Rich. III. c. 7, (fines,) 47. 4 Hen. VII. c. 24, (fines,) 47. 11 Hen. VII. c. 20, (tenant in tail ex provisione viri,) 53, 408. 19 Hen. VII. c. 15, (uses,) 157. 21 Hen. VIII. c. 4, (executors renouncing,) 290. 26 Hen. VIII. c. 13, (forfeiture for treason,) 55, 117. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, (Statute of Uses,) 61, 136, 143, 144, 146, 147, 167, 185, 186, 200, 212, 216, 267, 268, 289, 306, 351. ss. 4, 5, (rent-charge,) 306. ss. 6-9, (jointure,) 216. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 16, (enrolment of bargains and sales,) 168, 184. 27 Hen. VIII. c. 28, (dissolution of smaller monasteries,) 319. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 1, (partition,) 128. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 13, (dissolution of monasteries,) 319, 320. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, (wills,) 18, 61, 186, 187, 290. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 2, (limitation of real actions,) 413. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 7, (conveyances of tithes,) 320. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 24, (dissolution of monasteries,) 319. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 28, (leases by tenant in tail, &c.,) 54, 210. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 32 (partition,) 128. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 34, (condition of re-entry,) 227, 367. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 36, (fines,) 47, 53. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39, (crown debts,) 55, 84. 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 5, (wills,) 61, 186. 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 20, (estates tail granted by crown,) 52. 37 Hen. VIII. c. 9, (interest,) 392. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 11, (forfeiture for treason,) 55, 117. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, (offices,) 88. 5 Eliz. c. 26, (palatine courts,) 184. 13 Eliz. c. 4, (crown debts,) 55, 84. 13 Eliz. c. 5, (defrauding creditors,) 73. 13 Eliz. c. 20, (charging benefices,) 88. 14 Eliz. c. 7, (collectors of tenths,) 55. 14 Eliz. c. 8, (recoveries,) 52. 27 Eliz. c. 4, (voluntary conveyances,) 73. 31 Eliz. c. 2, (fines,) 47. 31 Eliz. c. 6, (simony,) 318. 39 Eliz. c. 18, (voluntary conveyances,) 73. 21 Jac. I. c. 16, (limitations,) 416.

1

STATUTES cited. 12 Car. II. c. 24, (abolishing feudal tenures,) 6, 61, 114, 119, 122, 339. 15 Car. II. c. 17, (Bedford level,) 178. 29 Car. II. c. 3, (Statute of Frauds,) s. 1, (leases, &c., in writing,) 140, 141, 154, 170, 225, 359, 361, 399. s. 2, (exception,) 141, 225, 361. s. 3. (assignments, &c. in writing,) 371, 375, 399. s. 4, (agreements in writing,) 154. s. 5, (wills,) 187. ss. 7, 8, 9, (trusts in writing,) 155. s. 10, (trust estates,) 156. s. 12, (estate pur autre vie,) 18, 20. s. 16, (chattels,) 374. 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, (distress for rent,) 226. 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 14, (creditors,) 76, 156. 4 & 5 Will. & Mary, c. 16, (second mortgage,) 404, 405. 4 & 5 Will. & Mary, c. 20, (docket of judgments,) 79. 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 14, (creditors,) 76. 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 36, (docket of judgments,) 79. 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 37, (conveyance to corporations,) 72. 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 16, (posthumous children,) 250. 11 & 12 Will. III. c. 6, (title by descent,) 63. 2 & 3 Anne, c. 4, (West Riding registry,) 178. 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, ss. 9, 10, (attornment,) 228, 299. s. 21, (warranty,) 408. 5 Anne, c. 18, (West Riding registry,) 178, 184. 6 Anne, c. 18, (production of cestui que vie,) 21, 22, 184, 211. 6 Anne, c. 35, (East Riding registry,) 178, 184, 409. 7 Anne, c. 5, (natural-born subjects,) 63. 7 Anne, c. 20, (Middlesex registry,) 178. 8 Anne, c. 14, (distress for rent,) 226. 10 Anne, c. 18, (copy of inrolment of bargain and sale,) 184. 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 12, (presentation,) 319. 12 Anne, stat. c. 16, (usury,) 401. 4 Geo. 11. c. 21, (aliens,) 63. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, (rent,) 226, 230, 304, 307, 376, 378. 7 Geo. 11. c. 20, (mortgage,) 393, 395. 8 Geo. II. c. 6, (North Riding registry,) 178, 184, 409. 9 Geo. II. c. 36, (charities,) 65, 67. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, (rent,) 28, 226, 229. 14 Geo. II. c. 20, (common recoveries,) 45, 50. s. 9, (estate pur autre vie,) 21. 25 Geo. II. c. 6, (witnesses to wills,) 189. 25 Geo. II. c. 39, (title by descent,) 63. 9 Geo. III. c. 16, (crown rights,) 416.

STATUTES cited. 13 Geo. III. c. 21, (natural-born subjects,) 63. 25 Geo. III. c. 35, (crown debts,) 55, 84. 31 Geo. III. c. 32, (Roman Catholics,) 23. 39 Geo. III. c. 93, (treason,) 117. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 56, (money land,) 153. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 88, (escheat,) 117. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 98, (accumulation,) 295. 41 Geo. III. c. 109, (General Inclosure Act,) 299. 44 Geo. 111. c. 98, (stamps,) 177. 47 Geo. III. c. 24, (forfeiture to the crown,) 117. 47 Geo. III. c. 25, (half-pay and pensions,) 88. 47 Geo. III. c. 74, (debts of traders,) 76, 156. 48 Geo. III. c. 149, (stamps,) 177. 49 Geo. 111. c. 126, (offices,) 88. 53 Geo. III. c. 141, (inrolment of memorial of life annuities.) 305. 54 Geo. III. c. 145, (attainder,) 117. 54 Geo. III. c. 168, (attestation to deeds exercising powers,) 275, 55 Geo. III. c. 184, (stamps,) 139, 155, 177, 346. 55 Geo. III. c. 192, (surrender to use of will,) 349. 57 Geo. 111. c. 99, (benefices,) 88. 59 Geo. III. c. 94, (forfeiture to the crown,) 117. 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 121, (crown debts,) 84. 3 Geo. IV. c. 92, (annuities,) 305. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, (bankruptcy,) 85, 374. 6 Geo. IV. c. 17, (forfeited leaseholds,) 117. 7 Geo. IV. c. 45, (money land,) 153. 7 Geo. IV. c. 75, (annuities,) 305. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, (petit treason,) 117. 9 Geo. IV. c. 85, (charities,) 67. 9 Geo. IV. c. 94, (resignation,) 315. 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, (Roman Catholics,) 23. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 20, (pensions,) 88. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 47, (sale to pay debts,) 31, 63, 76, 156, 293. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 60, (trustees,) 158. 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 65, (infants, &c.,) 64, 65, 350, 378. 11 Geo. IV. & I Will. IV. c. 70, (administration of justice,) 84, 184. 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 71, (limitation,) 418. 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 100, (tithes,) 418. 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 115, (Roman Catholics,) 23. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, (limitations,) 409, 416. s. 1, (rents, tithes, &c.,) 418. s. 2, (estate in possession,) 416. s. 3, (remainders and reversions,) 416.

STATUTES cited. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27, s. 14, (acknowledgment of title,) 416. s. 16-18, (disabilities,) 417. s. 28, (mortgage,) 417. s. 30, (advowson,) 417. s. 33. (advowson.) 417. s. 34, (extinguishment of right,) 418. s. 36, (abolishing real actions,) 24, 95, 129, 413. s. 39, (warranty not to defeat right of entry,) 409. s. 40, (judgments, legacies, &c.,) 417. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, (distress for rent,) 226. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74, (fines and recoveries abolished,) 46, 47, 212, 288, 336. ss. 4, 5, 6, (ancient demesne,) 122. s. 14, (warranty,) 409. s. 15, (leases,) 54. s. 18, (reversion in the crown,) 52. s. 22, (protector,) 51. s. 32, (protector,) 51. ss. 34, 35, 36, 37, (protector,) 50, 51. s. 40, (will, contract,) 53, 54. s. 41, (inrolment,) 46, 54. ss. 42-47, (protector,) 50. ss. 50-52, (copyholds,) 336, 352. s. 53, (equitable estate tail in copyholds,)352. s. 54, (entry on court rolls,) 352. ss. 56-73, (bankruptcy,) 56. ss. 55-66, (copyholds on bankruptcy,) 338. ss. 70, 71, (money land,) 153. ss. 77-80, (alienation by married women,) 212, 213, 288, 353. ss. 87, 88, (index of acknowledgment,) 422. s. 90, (wife's equitable copyholds,) 353. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 87, (inclosure, inrolment of award,) 299. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 104, (simple contract debts,) 76, 156, 337. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 105, (dower,) 213, 217, 218. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 106, (descents,) 10, 90, 91, 92, 99, 101, 201, 245, 338, 427, 448. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 22, (apportionment,) 28. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 23, (trust estates,) 118, 154, 158. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 30, (common fields exchange,) 300. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 83, (tithes,) 418. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 41, (usury,) 401. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 19, (Durham,) 84.

STATUTES cited.

- 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 71, (commutation of tithes,) 321.
- 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 115, (inclosure of common fields,) 300.
- 7 Will. 1V. & 1 Vict. c. 26, (wills,) 186, 192, 277, 309.
 - s. 2, (repeal of old statutes,) 116, 309, 349.
 - s. 3, (property devisable,) 21, 116, 187, 256, 309, 332, 347, 349, 428.
 - ss. 4, 5, (copyholds,) 349.
 - s. 6, (estate pur autre vic,) 21, 309, 332.
 - s. 7, (minors,) 115.
 - s. 9, (execution and attestation,) 187, 349.
 - s. 10, (execution of appointments,) 277.
 - ss. 14-17, (witnesses,) 189, 190.
 - ss. 18-21, (revocation), 191, 192.
 - s. 23, (subsequent disposition,) 192.
 - s. 24, (will to speak from death of testator,) 192.
 - s. 25, (residuary devise,) 193.
 - s. 26, (general devise,) 373.
 - s. 27, (general devise an exercise of general power,) 279.
 - s. 28, (devise without words of limitation,) 19, 196.
 - s. 29, (death without issue,) 198.
 - ss. 30, 31, (estates of trustees,) 200.
 - s. 32, (estate tail, lapse,) 194.
 - s. 33, (devise to issue, lapse,) 194.
- 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 28, (mortgagees,) 416.
- 1 Vict. c. 39, (tithe commutation,) 321.
- 1 & 2 Vict. c. 20, (Queen Anne's bounty,) 410.
- 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64, (tithes,) 321.
- 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69, (trust estates,) 158.
- 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, (benefices,) 88.
- 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, (judgment debts, insolvency,) 56, 78, 79, 80, 86, 157, 273, 337, 374.
- 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, (judgments, &c.,) 79, 80, 84, 85, 158, 337, 374.
- 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, (interest,) 401.
- 2 & 3 Vict. c. 60, (mortgage to pay debts, infants,) 31, 64, 293.
- 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, (tithes,) 321.
- 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, (tithes,) 321.
- 3 & 4 Vict. c. 31, (inclosure,) 299, 300.
- 3 & 4 Vict. c. 55, (draining,) 29.

STATUTES cited.

- 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, (judgments,) 79, 81.
- 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, (spiritual persons,) 318.
- 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21, (abolishing leases for a year,) 164, 171, 177, 447.
- 4 & 5 Viet. c. 35, (copyholds,) 120, 341, 342, 344, 345, 347, 348, 349.
- 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, (sites for schools,) 71.
- 5 Vict. c. 7, (tithes,) 315.
- 5 & 6 Vict. c. 32, (fines and recoveries in Wales and Cheshire,) 422.
- 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, (tithes,) 315.
- 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, (insolvency,) 86.
- 6 & 7 Vict. c. 23, (copyholds,) 341, 342.
- 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, (solicitor's bills,) 182.
- 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, (interested witnesses,) 190.
- 7 & 8 Vict. c. 37, (sites for schools,) 71.
- 7 & 8 Vict. c. 55, (copyholds,) 341, 342.
- 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, (aliens,) 62, 63, 64.
- 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, (transfer of property, now repealed,) 130, 131, 164, 177, 447.
 - s. 2, (conveyance by deed,) 164.
 - s. 3, (partition, exchange, and assignment by deed,) 96, 129, 372.
 - s. 4, (leases and surrenders by deed,) 225, 362, 382.
 - s. 5, (alienation of possibilities,) 292.
 - s. 6, (the words grant and exchange,) 410.
 - s. 7, (feoffment,) 27, 64.
 - s. 8, (contingent remainders,) 243, 258, 261.
 - s. 10, (receipts,) 414.
 - s. 11, (indenting deeds), 140.
 - s. 12, (merger of reversion on a lease,) 230.
 - s. 13, (time of commencement,) 164.
- 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, (insolvency,) 86.
- 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, (lands clauses consolidation,) 410.
- 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56, (draining,) 29.
- 8 & 9 Vict. c. 99, (tenants of crown lands,) 230, 368.
- 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, (amending law of real property,) 120, 130, 131,
 - 141, 165, 171, 177, 221, 258, 261, 263.
 - s. 1, (contingent remainders,) 243, 415.
 - s. 2, (grant,) 161, 221.
 - s. 3, (deed,) 96, 120, 129, 136, 141, 225, 231, 361, 362, 372, 375, 382.
 - s. 4, (feoffment, &c.,) 27, 64, 136, 410.
 - s. 5, (indenture,) 140.
 - s. 6, (possibilities,) 257, 292.
 - s. 7, (married women), 213.
 - s. 8, (contingent remainders,) 258, 261.
 - s. 9, (reversion on lease,) 230.

STATUTES cited. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, (satisfied terms,) 387. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, (Inclosure Act.) 129, 299, 300. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119, (conveyances.) 180, 183. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 124, (leases,) 180, 183. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 70, (inclosure,) 129, 299, 300. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, (tithes,) 321. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101, (draining,) 30. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 11, (draining,) 30. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 38, (draining,) 300. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 102, (bankruptcy and insolvency,) 80, 86. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 104, (tithes,) 321. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 111, (inclosure,) 129, 299, 300. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 70, (proclamations of fines,) 47. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 87, (infant heirs,) 64, 293. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 99, (inclosure,) 129, 299, 300. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 119, (draining,) 30. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 26, (leasing,) 283. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 49, (sites for schools,) 71. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 83, (inclosure,) 129, 299, 300. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 89, (treasury commissioners,) 84. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 100, (drainage,) 30. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, (bankruptey,) 56, 86, 273, 311, 338, 374. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 17, (leasing,) 283, 284. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 28, (religious and educational trusts,) 160. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 31, (draining,) 30. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 56, (interest,) 401. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, (trustees,) 31, 65, 118, 129, 154, 158, 159, 341. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, (stamps,) 139, 155, 165, 176, 177, 221, 328, 346, 363, 372, 382, 390, 410, 420. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 24, (sites for schools,) 71. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, (emblements, distress, &c.,) 27, 226. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 53, (enclosure, tithes,) 299, 321, 341. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 83, (Lords Justices,) 80. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, (evidence,) 190. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 24, (Wills Act Amendment,) 188. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 48, (lunatics,) 65. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 49, (sites for schools,) 71. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, (copyhold enfranchisement,) 341, 342, 343. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, (trustees,) 65, 158, 159. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, (common law amendment,) 226, 227, 393. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 79, (inclosures,) 129, 299, 300. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, (chancery amendment,) 395. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, (succession duty.) 265, 266, 288. 16 & 17 Vict, c. 59, (stamps,) 363. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, (idiots and lunatics,) 65, 350, 378.

STATUTES cited. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 83, (witnesses,) 190. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, (crown bonds,) 85. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 124, (copyholds, inclosures, tithes,) 321. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, (charity commissioners,) 71, 159. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 75, (alienation by married women,) 213. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, (stamps,) 310, 327, 363. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 90, (usury law repeal,) 305, 401. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 97, (inclosures), 129, 299, 300, 311. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 112, (literary and scientific institutions,) 72, 160. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 113, (mortgage debts,) 404. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 119, (bankruptcy,) 86. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, (common law procedure,) 24, 162, 176. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 13, (estate of idiots and lunatics,) 65. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, (purchasers' protection,) 79. s. 2, (palatine courts,) 83. ss. 4, 5, (notice to purchaser,) 81. s. 6, (registration of judgments,) 81. s. 10, (orders in bankruptcy,) 80. s. 11, (mortgages,) 402. ss. 12-14, (annuities,) 306. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 43, (settlements on infants,) 64, 279. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 124, (charity commissioners,) 71, 72, 159. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 9, (drainage,) 30. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, (joint-stock companies,) 72, 410. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, (Mercantile Law Amendment Act.) 374, 417. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 73, (acknowledgment of deeds by married women,) 213. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, (leases and sales of settled estates,) 25, 31, 32. s. 2, (leases,) 26. s. 11, (sales,) 25, 26. s. 23, (sales,) 31. s. 25, (investment of purchase money,) 31. ss. 32, 33, (leases by tenant for life,) 25, 211, 219. s. 34, (execution of counterpart,) 26. s. 35, (repeal of former acts,) 54. s. 42, (reversion in the crown,) 52. ss. 44, 46, (commencement of act,) 25. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 14, (joint-stock companies,) 72. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31, (inclosures,) 129, 299, 300. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, (Court of Probate,) 10, 190. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, (Chancery Amendment Act,) 24, 162, 163. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 45, (county of Durham,) 84. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 53, (inclosure, tithes,) 129, 299, 321, 341. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 60, (joint-stock companies,) 72.

STATUTES cited. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77, (settled estates,) 25, 26, 27, 31, 211, 328. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, (commutation of manorial rights,) 341, 342, 343. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 95, (Court of Probate,) 10, 190. 22 Vict. c. 27, (literary institutions,) 72. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, (property amendment and relief of trustees). ss. 1, 2, (effect of licence,) 368, 369. s. 3, (severance of reversion,) 369. s. 5, (relief to be recorded on lease,) 371. s. 6, (court to grant relief once only.) 371. s. 7, (lessor to have benefit of informal insurance,) 371. s. 8, (protection of purchasers against noninsurance, &c.,) 372. s. 10, (rent charge,) 311. s. 12, (powers,) 275. s. 13, (purchase money, mistaken payment,) 285. s. 14, (trustees of wills,) 202, 371. s. 15, (trustees,) 203. s. 16, (executors, power to raise money,) 203. s. 17, (purchasers and mortgagees,) 203. ss. 19, 20, (inheritance, descent,) 90, 91, 92, 94, 102. s. 21, (assignment of personalty,) 173. s. 22, (index of crown debtors,) 85. s. 23, (payment of mortgage or purchase money,) 415. s. 27, (liability of executors for rents, &c.,) 373.s. 28, (exoneration of executors from rentcharges, &c.,) 312. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 43, ss. 10, 11, (inclosure acts amendment, partition,) 299, 300. 23 Vict. c. 15, (stamps on agreements,) 155, 363. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, (property amendment,) 79. s. 1, (judgments,) 81, 337. ss. 1, 2, (writs of execution to be registered.) 82.158. s. 6, (restriction of waiver,) 370. s. 7, (uses, scintilla juris,) 272. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 53, (Duke of Cornwall,) 416. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 81, (completing proceedings under tithe commutation acts,) 299, 341. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 83, (infants' settlements,) 64.

STATUTES cited. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, (commutation of tithes,) 321. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 111, (stamps,) 372, 382. s. 12, (stamps,) 155. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 115, s. 1, (crown bonds, &c.,) 85. s. 2, (entering satisfaction on judgment,) 80. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, ss. 35, 39, (purchase of reversion of leaseholds,) 379. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 1, (ejectment,) 227. s. 2, (relief from forfeiture, &c.,) 371. s. 3, (indorsement on lease,) 371. ss. 26, 27, (dower,) 219. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, (Roman Catholic charities,) 23, 67. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 136, (charities,) 71, 159. s. 16, (majority of trustees, power of, to sell, &c.,) 71. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, (power of sale, &c.,) 285, 396. ss. 8, 9, (renewal of leases, and raising money,) 378. s. 10, (consent to sale, &c.,) 285, 286. s. 11, (powers to sell, &c. in mortgages,) 396. s. 13, (notice of sale,) 396. s. 27, (powers to appoint new trustees,) 160. s. 28, (appointment of new trustees notwithstanding death of testator,) 160. s. 29, (trustees' receipts good discharges,)415. s. 32, (negative, declaration in settlements,) 286. 397. 24 Vict. c. 9, (conveyance of land to charitable uses), 68, 70. s. 1, (reservation of rent, &c.,) 68. ss. 2-5, (separate deed,) 70. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 21, (stamps,) 363. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 62, (limitation as to crown suits,) 416. s. 2, (Duke of Cornwall, limitations as to suits by,) 416. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 91, s. 30, (stamps on appointment of new trustees,) 161. s. 31, (stamps,) 139. s. 34, (registration of memorial,) 178. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, (repcal of criminal statutes,) 117. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 28, (destruction, &c., of title deeds,) 138. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, (attainder,) 117. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, (bankruptcy,) 86, 273, 311, 338, 374. s. 114, (copyhold lands, &c., of bankrupt,) 338. 25 Vict. c. 17, (charities,) 69, 70.

STATUTES cited. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 53, (title and conveyance of real estates,) 423. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 67, (declaration of title,) 423. 25 & 26 Viet. c. 73, (inclosure commissioners,) 299, 341. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, (lunatics,) 65. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, (joint-stock companies,) 72, 73. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, (sale, minerals,) 286. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 106, (charities,) 69. 27 Vict. c. 13, (charities,) 69, 70. 27 Vict. c. 18, (stamp on presentations,) 315. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 45, (settled estates,) 31. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, (judgments,) 56, 82, 83, 158, 273, 337, 374, 402. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 114, (improvement of land,) 30. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 40, (County Palatine of Lancaster,) 160. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 96, (stamps,) 176, 363, 403. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 99, (county courts,) 151, 159, 395. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 122, (simony,) 318. STATUTES, merchant and staple, 83. STEWARD of manor, 345. STOPS, none in deeds, 180. SUBINFEUDATION, 37, 59. Succession duty, 265, 287. SUFFERANCE, tenant by, 360. SUIT of Court, 112, 113, 115, 339. SURRENDER of life interest, 260. of copyholds, 324. nature of surrenderee's right, 347. of copyholds of a married woman, 347. of a term of years, 377, 381. in law, 377. SURVIVORS of joint tenants entitled to the whole, 124. of copyhold joint tenants do not require fresh admittance, 341. Т. TABLE of descent, explanation of, 102. TACKING, 405. TAIL, estate, 33, 34, 49, 51, 134. derivation of word, 41. quasi entail, 56. constructive estate, in a will, 197. bar of estate, 44, 53, 335, 352. descent of estate, 19, 56. tenant in, after possibility of issue extinct, 52.

R.P.

TAIL, tenant in, ex provisione viri, 53. equitable estate, 151, 152. no lapse of an estate, 194. joint tenants in, 123. estate not subject to merger, 259. in copyholds, 332. equitable, in copyholds, 352. TALTARUM'S case, 42. TENANT for life, 22, 25, 30, 50.-(And see LIFE.) in tail, 34.- (And see TAIL.) for life, feoffment by, 135. in dower, leases by, 218. in fee simple, 58 .- (And see FEE SIMPLE.) in common, 127, 340. at will, 359. right of, to inspect court rolls, 345. by sufferance, 360. TENEMENTS, 5, 6, 13. TENURE of an estate in fee simple, 109. rise of copyholders to a certainty of, 324. of an estate tail. 108. none of purely incorporeal hereditaments, 313. of copyholds, 339. by knight service, 111. TERM of years, tenant for, 8, 357, 361, 365 .- (And see LEASE.) for securing money, 379. husband's rights in his wife's, 377. attendant on the inheritance, 384. mortgage for, 397. for securing portions, 381. attendant by construction of law, 388. TESTATUM, 174, 179, 446. THELLUSON, will of Mr., 295. act, 295. TIMBER, 23, 54. on copyhold lands, 327. TIME, unity of, in joint tenancy, 123, 126: within which an executory interest must arise, 293. limited for making entry on court roll of deed, 352, n. Тітнеs, 319. lay, 320. commutation of, 321. limitations of actions for, 418. TITLE, 407. covenants for, 410, 448. sixty years' required, 412.

TITLE, reasons for requiring sixty years, 413. act for obtaining a declaration of, 423. act to facilitate proof of, 423. TITLE deeds, mortgage by deposit of, 399. importance of possession, 418. who entitled to custody of, 419. covenant to produce, 420. attested copies of, 420. TRADERS, debts of, 76. TRANSFER of mortgages, 402. TREASON, forfeiture for, 55, 86, 117, 154. TRUSTEE Act, 1850..158. TRUSTEES, made joint tenants, 125. bankruptcy or insolvency of, 157. acts for appointing new, 159. of charity property, 159. stamps on appointment of new, 161. where they may sell or mortgage to pay testator's debts or legacies, 202. estates of, under wills, 200. to preserve contingent remainders, 262, 263. such trustees not now required, 262. of copyholds, tenants to the lord, 351. mortgages to, 401. covenants by, on a sale, 412. receipts of, good discharges, 415. TRUSTS, 144, 264. in a will, 200. contingent remainders of trust estates, 261. of copyholds, 351. for separate use, 86, 205, 206, 207, 352. for alien, 153. See EQUITABLE ESTATE. TURF, 24.

U, V.

VENDOR, lieu of, for unpaid purchase-money, 400. covenants for title by a, 411, 448. VESTED remainder, 232, 233. definition of, 233. See REMAINDER. VICARAGES, advowsons of, 317. UNBORN persons, gifts to, 254. UNDERLEASE, 375. mortgage by, 399.

кк2

UNITIES of a joint tenancy, 123, 126. VOLUNTARY conveyance, 73. VOUCHING to warranty, 45. USES, 144, 149, 166, 179, 268, 272. explanation of, 145, 272, 290. statute of, does not apply to copyholds, 351. no use upon a use, 149. conveyance to, 172, 173. doctrine of, applicable to wills, 200. springing and shifting, 268. examples of, 269, 270, 272. power to appoint a use, 274. to bar dower, 282. USURY laws, repeal of the, 401.

w.

WAIVER of breach of covenant in a lease, 369, 370. WARDSHIP, 111, 114. WARRANTY, 43, 45, 407. formerly implied by word give, 407. effect of express, 407. now ineffectual, 408. WASTE, 23, 24, 25. equitable, 25. by copyholder, 328. strips of, by the road-side, 301. WATER, description of, 14. limitation of right to, 418. WAY, rights of, 302, 418. WIDOW, dower of, 213, 217, 218. freebench of, 356. WIDOWHOOD, estate during, 22. WIFE, separate property of, 87, 205, 206, 207, 352. conveyance of her lands, 212. rights of, in her husband's lands, 212, 217, 356. appointment by, and to, 277, 278. surrender of copyholds to use of, 347, 353. husband's right in her term, 377. See MARRIED WOMAN. WILL, cannot bar an estate tail, 54. construction of, 19, 194. alienation by, 60, 186, 348. witnesses to, 187, 189, 349. revocation of, 191, 192. of real estate now speaks from testator's death, 192.

WILL, gift of estate tail by, 194, 197, 199. gift of fee simple by, 199. uses and trusts in a, 200. exercise of powers by, 277, 279. executory devise by, 289, 291. tenant at, 359. of copyholds, 349. of leaseholds, 373. of Mr. Thelluson, 295. charge of debts by, 77, 202, 201. devise to heir, 201. devise in fee or in tail charged with debts, 203. WILLS, Statute of, 186. new acts, 187. Amendment Act, 1852...188. WITNESSES to a deed, 174. to a will, 187, 189, 277, 349. to a deed executing powers, 274, 275. WRIT of clegit, 78, 80. registration of, 82. WRITING, formerly unnecessary to a feoffment, 137. nothing but deeds formerly called writings, 138. now required, 141. contracts and agreements in, 155. trusts of lands required to be in, 155. WRONG, estate by, 135.

Y. ⁻

YEAR to year, tenant from, 360. YORK register, 178, 421. YORKSHIRE, bargain and sale of lands in, 409.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY C. ROWORTH AND SONS, FELL YARD, TEMPLE BAK.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

Williams on Personal Property.

PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF PERSONAL PROPERTY, intended for the use of Students in Conveyancing. By JOSHUA WILLIAMS, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law. The Fifth Edition. 8vo. Price 18s. 1864

Williams on Real Assets.

AN Essay on Real Assets; or the Payment of the Debts of a deceased Person out of his Real Estate, and the Means by which that Payment ought to be accomplished. By JOSHUA WILLIAMS, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn. 6s. cloth. 1861

Hayes and Jarman's Concise Forms of Wills-6th edit.

CONCISE Forms of Wills, with Practical Notes, a popular view of the Statute of Wills, and Suggestions to Persons taking Instructions for and preparing Wills; the Decisions on the Wills Acts and other Testamentary Matters in the House of Lords and Privy Council, and in the Equity, Common Law, Ecclesiastical and Probate Courts, down to the time of Publication, and many Additional Forms, Sixth Edition, by THOMAS S. BADGER EASTWOOD, of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, M.A., and of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister at Law; Reader on the Law of Real Property to the Four Inns of Court. I thick vol. Roy. 12mo. 11. 1s. cloth. 1863

Hayes's Concise Conveyancer.

THE Concise Conveyancer, or Short Precedents of Conveyances, with Practical Remarks and Summary of the Stamp Laws relating to Conveyances. By WILLIAM HAYES, Esq., Barrister at Law, one of the six Conveyancing Counsel of the High Court of Chancery. The Second Edition, with eonsiderable Additions, including a Chapter on Composition Deeds under the New Bankrupt Act. By W. B. CoLT-MAN, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law. Royal 12mo. Price 18s. 1864

Recently Published.

Homersham Cox on the British Constitution.

THE Institutions of the English Government; being an Account of the Constitution, Powers and Procedure of its Legislative, Judicial and Administrative Departments, with copious references to Ancient and Modern Anthorities. By HOMERSHAM COX, M.A., Barrister at Law. 1 thick vol. 8vo. 11. 4s. cloth. 1863

Contents and Arrangement of the Work.

- Book I.-Legislature.-Chapter I. Divisions of Government.-II. The Authority of Parliament.-III. The Origin of Parliament.-IV. The Acts of Parliament.-V. Legislative Prerogatives of the Crown.-VI. The Parliamentary Powers of the Crown.-VII. The Constitution of the House of Lords.-VIII. The Constitution of the House of Commons.-IX. Procedure in Parliament.-X. The Privy Council and Cabinet Council.-XI. The Rights of Petition, Public Meetings and the Press.
- Book II.—Judicature.—Chapter I. Divisions of the Judicature.—II. Origin of Courts of Law.—III. Judicial Offices.—IV. Procedure in Courts of Justice generally.—V. The Supreme Power of the Law.—VI. The Judicature of Parliament and the Lords.—VII. The Judicature of the Privy Council.—VIII. The Court of Chancery.—IX. The Superior Courts of Common Law.—X. Courts of Criminal Jurisdiction.— X1. Courts of Special Civil Jurisdiction.
- Book III.—Administrative Government.—Chapter I. Division of Administrative Offices.—II. Administrative Prerogative of the Crown.— III. The Title of the Crown.—IV. Origin and Distribution of Administrative Offices.—V. The Privy Council and its Committees.— VI. The Secretarial Departments.—VII. The Fiscal Administrative Offices.—VIII. Military and Naval Offices.—IX. Local Administrative Government.
- General Index—Index of Statutes—Addenda et Corrigenda—Table of Authorities cited—Analysis of the Work.

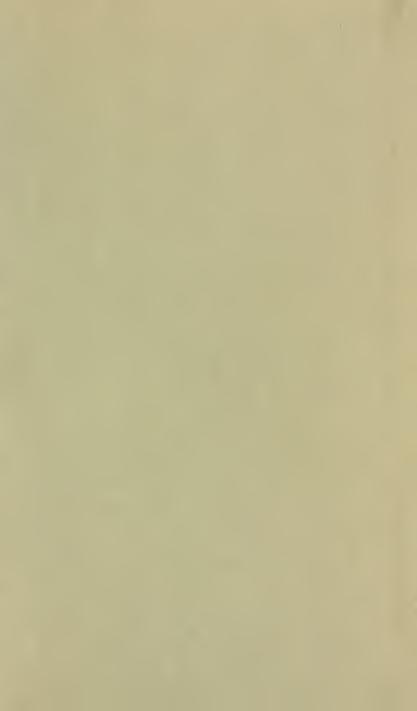

Day's Common Law Practice.

THE Common Law Procedure Acts of 1852, 1854 and 1860, and other Statutes relating to the Practice of the Superior Courts of Common Law, with an Introduction, explanatory of the recent Changes, the Rules of Court, Notes, Forms of Proceeding, and a copious Index. By J. C. F. S. DAY, Esq., Barrister at Law. The Second Edition, enlarged.

 This Work comprises a carefully revised Edition of Mr. KERR'S Procedure Acts of 1852 and 1854, the Cases that have been decided since the publication of these Works being added; the Bills of Exchange Act of 1855, and the Decisions upon it; those portions of the Interpleader Act and Mercantile Law Amendment Act which relate to the Procedure thereon in Court or at Chambers, and all the New Rules: thus constituting a Complete Practice of the Superior Courts of Common Law. In 1 vol. royal 12mo. Price 15s. cloth boards. 1863 Chitty's (jun.) Law of Contracts: by Russell.

A PRACTICAL Treatise on the Law of Contracts, and upon the Defences to Actions thercon. By JOSEPH CHITTY, jun., Esq. The Seventh Edition. By JOHN A. RUSSELL, LL.B., of Gray's Inn, Barrister at Law, and Professor of English Law in University College, London. 1 vol. royal 8vo. Price 11. 12s. cloth boards. 1863

SCHOOL OF LAW LIBRARY UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LOS ANGELES

