BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. Books I. and II. .	I

EDITOR'S NOTE.

IN the present edition of Browne's poems the text has been revised by a careful collation of the original editions and all known manuscripts. The more important various readings are given in the notes at the end of the second volume.

The first book of Britannia's Pastorals appeared in folio, without any date on the curiously-engraved title-page, but the address to the reader is dated 18th June, 1613, and the volume was entered in the Stationers' Registers on the ensuing 15th November. The second book followed in 1616. The two books were reissued in an octavo volume in 1625. The third book of the Pastorals was not published in the poet's lifetime; but Beriah Botfield, while engaged in collecting materials for his work on cathedral libraries, discovered a manuscript copy of it in the library of Salisbury Cathedral. It is a neatly-written manuscript, bound up at the end of a copy of the folio edition of the first two books (1613-16), which appears to have belonged to one Richard Charles. Preceding it are two leaves, roughly written and with many corrections and erasures, containing the elegy on Thomas Manwood (the fourth eclogue of The Shepherd's Pipe), and three short poems, which are now printed for the first time. In the printed portion of the volume are several manuscript emendations. The MS., so far as it related to the Pastorals, was printed for the Percy Society in 1852, under the editorship of T. Crofton Croker, and it has since been reprinted in Mr. W. Carew Hazlitt's collective edition of Browne's works (2 vols. 1868-69).

The Shepherd's Pipe appeared in 1614, small 8vo. It contains seven eclogues by Browne, to which are appended eclogues by Christopher Brooke, George Wither, and John Davies of Hereford. A reprint of it was included in The Works of Master George Wither (1620).

The Inner Temple Masque, written to be represented by the members of that society on the 13th January, 1614-15, was first printed in Thomas Davies's edition of Browne's poems (3 vols. 1772), from a manuscript in the library of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Another manuscript copy is in the possession of Mr. H. Chandos Pole-Gell, of Hopton Hall, Wirksworth, and has been kindly lent for collation.

Among the Lansdowne MSS. (No. 777) in the British Museum is a collection of poems by Browne, dated 1650, but apparently made a few years earlier, which was first printed by Sir Samuel Egerton Brydges at the Lee Priory Press in 1815, and reprinted in 1869 by Mr. Hazlitt. Another middle seventeenth-century MS. in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, contains two poems by Browne—the epitaph on Anne Prideaux (six lines), and that on the Countess of Pembroke (twelve lines), both of which, however, are in the Lansdowne MS.

Browne's elegy on Henry, Prince of Wales, his earliest publication, was printed in 1613, with an elegy by Christopher Brooke, in a small quarto of seventeen leaves, entitled Two Elegies, consecrated to the never-dying Memory of the most worthily admired, most heartily loved, and generally bewailed Prince, Henry Prince of Wales. There is a manuscript copy of this elegy in the Bodleian Library. It was afterwards introduced, in a somewhat altered form, into the fifth song of the first book of Britannia's Pastorals.

I have derived considerable assistance from the previous labours of Mr. Hazlitt : his commentary contains much that is suggestive ; while the topographical and other notes of his Devonshire correspondent, Mr. John Shelly, have but one fault—they are too few.

GORDON GOODWIN.

INTRODUCTION.

INTRODUCTION.

WILLIAM BROWNE was a modest unassuming spirit, but he flushed with honest pride when he reflected on the worthiness of his native Devonshire. In the Third Song of the Second Book of Britannia's Pastorals, he writes :—

Show me who can so many crystal rills,
Such sweet-cloth'd vallies or aspiring hills ;
Such wood-ground, pastures, quarries, wealthy mines ;
Such rocks in whom the diamond fairly shines.

If for beauty and fertility Devonshire might be matched, yet where could be found such another race of sea-ruling men as Grenville, Davis, Gilbert, Drake, Hawkins, and thousands more

That by their power made the Devonian shore
Mock the proud Tagus ?

He sadly contrasted the stirring days of Elizabeth with the pusillanimous reign of

James I. In a passage of striking picturesqueness, he describes how the old ships that had repelled the Armada, and had harassed the Spaniard on every sea, now lay rotting in harbour :

And on their masts, where oft the ship-boy stood,
Or silver trumpet charm'd the brackish flood,
Some wearied crow is set.

Once these ships had sailed into the Devon ports laden with the harvests snatched from Spain, but now

Upon their hatches, where half-pikes were borne,
In every chink rise stems of bearded corn :
Mocking our idle times that so have wrought us,
Or putting us in mind what once they brought us.

It is pleasant to know that the old poet who sang so heartily the praises of Devon is yet beloved * on the banks of the Tavy and the Plym.

Tavistock was Browne's native place, and he was born not later than 1591. No record of his baptism is extant, as the Tavistock registers do not begin before 1640. He was a son of

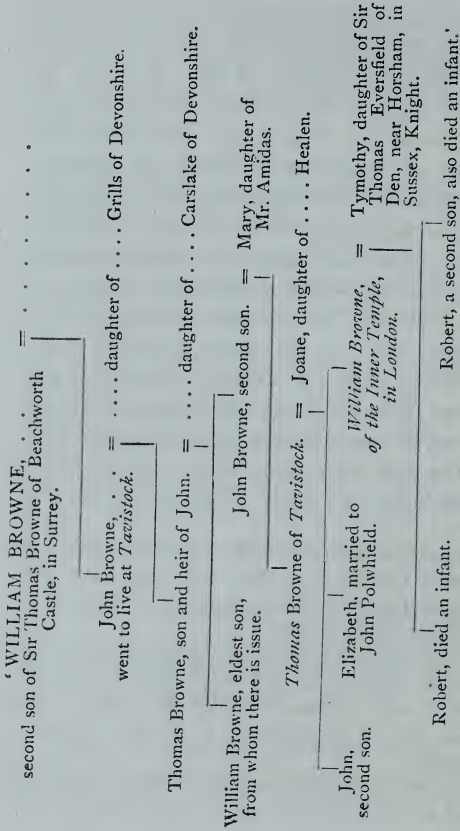

* Articles on Browne are in the Transactions of the Devonshire Association, vol. vi, 532, and vol. xix. 219-237.

Thomas Browne of Tavistock, who is supposed by Prince (Worthies of Devon) to have belonged to the knightly family of the Brownes of Browne's Ilash in the parish of Langtree, near Great Torrington, Devonshire, a branch of the Brownes of Betchworth Castle in Surrey.* From Tavistock Grammar-school he passed "about the beginning of the reign of James I." (Wood's Fasti) to Exeter College, Oxford. Leaving the University without a degree, he entered Clifford's Inn, whence he migrated in November 1611 to the Inner Temple.† On 18th April, 1615, a William Browne was appointed pursuivant to the Court of Wards and Liveries; but we cannot be confident‡ that it was the poet who received the appointment, for there were two other William Brownes at

* The pedigree on the following page was given by Sir Egerton Brydges from Harl. MS. 6164, before the collection of Browne's miscellaneous poems issued from the Lee Priory Press in 1815.

† He was admitted to the Inner Temple on 1st March, 1611-12 (not 1612-13, as stated by Mr. Hazlitt). George Glapthorne, who became a surety for him on his admission, was the elder brother of Henry Glapthorne the dramatist.

‡ It is worth noting that the poet's friend Sir Benjamin Rudyard was appointed Surveyor of this Court in 1618.

[Brydges was not aware that Timothy Eversfield was the poet's second wife,—a fact discovered by Mr. Gordon Goodwin.]

the Inner Temple—one from Chichester, and one from Walcott, Northants (Students of the Inner Temple, 1571-1625, pp. 32, 57).

Browne was twice married. His first wife appears to have died in 1614. Among his miscellaneous poems in Lansdowne MS. 777 (first printed by Brydges) is the following epitaph:—

IN OBITUM M S, X^o MAIJ, 1614.

May! be thou never grac'd with birds that sing,

Nor Flora's pride!

In thee all flowers and roses spring,

Mine only died.

The letters "M S" may well stand for "Maritæ Suæ." In the same collection is an undated epitaph "On his Wife"; it is immediately preceded by "My own Epitaph," which is subscribed "Wm. Browne, 1614." His second wife was Timothy, daughter of Sir Thomas Eversfield, Kt., of Denne in the parish of Horsham, Sussex. The series of Sonnets (II, 217-225) headed "Cælia" was evidently addressed to this lady. From the epistle beginning "Dear soul, the time is come and we must part" (II, 228-9) it may be gathered that the engagement was protracted,—

Seven summers now are fully spent and gone,

Since first I lov'd, lov'd you, and you alone.

Browne's friend Michael Drayton wooed a lady for thirty years, and the marriage never took place after all. Browne began to pay his addresses to Miss Eversfield in 1615 (see An Epistle, II, 234-6) ; and at length, after thirteen years' courtship, they were married at Horsham on 24th December, 1628. Two sons were born of the marriage, but died in infancy.* Sir Thomas Eversfield, in his will proved on 25th October, 1616, wished his three unmarried daughters—Timothy, Joyce, and Bridget—to have such portions as his wife should think fit to be raised out of his lease of Tilgate, and he named one thousand marks apiece as being a suitable sum. Lady Eversfield appears to have paid Timothy's dowry in full, as her will (made in October 1640) concludes with this emphatic declaration :—" I owe my son Browne not one farthing of my daughter's portion for use nor yet principal."†

* 1. Robert, baptized at Horsham on 27th September, 1629, died soon afterwards; 2. Robert, baptized on 20th March, 1630-1, buried on 22nd of the following March.

† Lady Eversfield thus mentions Mrs. Browne in her will :—" I give to my daughter Browne for a remembrance, to whom I have already given a portion, more now, twenty shillings to make her a ring to wear for

Browne dedicated the First Book of Britannia's Pastorals, n. d. [1613], and The Shepherd's Pipe, 1614, to Lord Zouch, who had been President of Wales, and was afterwards (1615) Warden of the Cinque Ports. Selden contributed laudatory verses in Greek, Latin, and English; Michael Drayton, Christopher Brooke, and others added their commendations. The Second Book of Britannia's Pastorals, 1616, was dedicated to that famous patron of poets, himself a poet, William Herbert, third Earl of Pembroke. Among those who prefixed complimentary verses were John Davies of Hereford, George Wither, and Ben Jonson. One of the contributors, John Morgan of the Inner Temple, delicately expressed the hope that Browne would receive some tangible token of the Earl's esteem:—

And may thy early strains affect the ear
Of that rare Lord, who judge and guerdon can
The richer gifts which do advantage man,

Browne owed much to the Herberts; and his my sake, and my seal ring, and my velvet gown and white petticoat, my gold coif and crosscloth to it."—For this extract I am indebted to Mr. Gordon Goodwin, whose researches have supplied whatever additions I have been able to make to Browne's family history.

monument of gratitude—the noble epitaph* on “Sidney’s sister, Pembroke’s mother”—will endure to the end of time.

At the beginning of 1624 Browne returned to Exeter College as tutor to Hon. Robert Dormer,† afterwards Earl of Carnarvon. The Matriculation Book contains the entry—“30 April 1624, William Browne, son of Thomas Browne, gentleman, of Tavistock, matriculated, age 33.” On 25th August of the same year he obtained permission to be created Master of Arts, and the degree was conferred on 16th November. In the public register of the University he was styled “vir omni humana literarum et bonarum artium cognitione instructus.” By the members of his college he was held in high admiration. Beloe possessed a copy of the 1625 edition of Britannia’s Pastorals, containing MS. commendatory poems, evidently written to accompany the Third Book (circ. 1635), which was prepared for publication, but was left unpublished. These poems in almost every instance bear the signatures of members of Exeter College ; their merit is slender, but they testify strongly to the affectionate esteem which Browne had won for himself. Sometimes we find his name coupled with the name of his dear friend Michael Drayton.* In 1629 Samuel Austin, a Cornishman who had been educated at Exeter College, dedicated a sacred poem, "Urania," to "my ever-honoured friends, those most refined wits and favourers of most exquisite learning, Mr. M. Drayton, Mr. Will. Browne, and my most ingenious kinsman, Mr. Andrew Pollexfen." Young Abraham Holland, a son of Philemon Holland, addressed a copy of verses (preserved in Ashmole MS. 36) to "my honest father Mr.

* This epitaph is commonly assigned (without authority) to Ben Jonson. The evidence in favour of Browne’s claim is convincing. See note, vol. ii, p. 350.

* In his delightful Epistle to Henry Reynolds of Poets and Poesy (1627), Drayton spoke with cordial warmth of the friendship that he bore to Browne :—

" Then the two Beaumonts and my Browne arose,
My dear companions whom I freely chose
My bosom friends, and in their several ways
Rightly born poets, and in these last days
Men of much note and no less nobler parts,
Such as have freely told to me their hearts
As I have mine to them."

One of his epistles was addressed to Browne.

Michael Drayton and my new yet loved friend Mr. Will. Browne."

Anthony à Wood states that, after acting as tutor to Robert Dormer, Browne was received into the family of the Herberts at Wilton, where "he got wealth and purchased an estate." Browne may have been temporarily in the service of the Herberts (as Samuel Daniel had been in earlier days), but it is hard to believe the latter part of Wood's statement. He seems to have acquired in some way a modest competence, which secured him immunity from the troubles that weighed so heavily on men of letters. In Surrey, round Betchworth and Dorking, his family had been long established. He married in 1628, as we have seen, a knight's daughter at Horsham, who brought him a portion. With the patronage of the Herberts and the Dormers, and with such money as he received with his wife, he was able to "rub on," though he may not have "got wealth and purchased an estate." After his second marriage he appears to have settled in the neighbourhood of Dorking. In Ashmole MS. 830 is preserved the following letter (first printed by Mr. Hazlitt), which he addressed in November, 1640, to Sir Benjamin Rudyard :—

TO SIR BENJAMIN RUDYARD.

SIR,—I beseech you to pardon my interposing your most serious affairs with the remembrance of my service. The cause requires it, and every man who knows I have the honour to be known by you would think me stupid in not congratulating what every one thinks he hath a share in. I mean your late speech in Parliament, wherein they believe the spirit which inspired the Reformation and the genius which dictated the Magna Charta possessed you. In my poor cell and sequestration from all business, I bless God and pray for more such members in the Commonwealth; and could you but hear (as it is pity but you should) what I do, it would add some years to your honoured hairs. Believe it, Sir, you have given such a maintenance to that repute which your former deportment had begotten that it will need no other livelihood than a chronicle, which I hope our ensuing age will not see it want for. I have now done. 'Tis Sunday night: when I have prayed for my honoured lord the Lord Chamberlain,* my good lord and master the Earl of Carnarvon, and for you and your good proceedings, I hope I shall wake with the same thoughts again, and be ever

Your most obliged servant,

WM. BROWNE.

Dorking, Nov. 29, 1640.

* Philip Herbert, fourth Earl of Pembroke. He was father-in-law to the Earl of Carnarvon (Robert Dormer). In the Civil Wars he sided with the Parliament; his son-in-law fell, fighting for the King, at the first battle of Newbury (20th Sept., 1643).

The speech to which the letter refers was delivered before the Long Parliament early in November. It dealt freely with the subject of public grievances, urging that evil counsellors should be removed from the King.

William Browne died in or before 1645. Administration of his estate was granted (in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury) to his widow, Timothy Browne, on 6th November, 1645.* In the Act† he is described as “late of Dorking, in the county of Surrey, Esquire.” There is no trace of his death or burial in the Dorking register, and the Horsham register has been searched in vain. It is possible that he was buried at Tavistock. The Tavistock register, under date 27th March, 1643, has an entry—“William Browne was buried.” No portrait of the poet is known. Prince says that he had a great mind in a little body,—a conventional expression.

* His estate was again administered in May 1662, by which time his widow was presumably dead. The Act Book for that year is lost, so that the name of the person to whom this second administration was granted cannot be ascertained.

† Administration Acts afford no clue to the actual date of death. Wood surmised that Browne died in 1645.

The bulk of William Browne's poetry was composed in youth and early manhood. He states that the First Book of Britannia's Pastorals was written before he had reached his twentieth year :—

O how, methinks, the imps of Mneme bring
Dews of invention from the sacred spring !
Here could I spend that spring of poesy
Which not twice ten suns have bestow'd on me.

The story of the Pastorals, if story there be, is naught ; it would be a hopeless task to attempt to give an intelligible summary of the adventures of Celand, Marina, and the others. But the dallying diffuseness of the poem constitutes no small part of its charm. Horace Walpole threw out the suggestion that somebody should issue a series of " Lounging Books "—books that one can take up, without fatigue, at odd moments. I fear that his nice critical judgment would not have included William Browne in the series ; but to the lovers of our old poets Britannia's Pastorals will always be a favourite lounging book. They know that, at whatever page they open, they have not far to travel before they find entertainment. In the Third Song of the Second Book there is a description of a delightful grove, perfumed with " odoriferous buds and herbs of price," where fruits hang in gallant clusters from the trees, and birds tune their notes to the music of running water ; so fair a pleasaunce that you are fain

Where last you walk'd to turn and walk again.

A generous reader might apply that description to Browne's poetry ; he might urge that the breezes which blew down those leafy alleys and over those trim parterres were not more grateful than the fragrance exhaled from the Pastorals, that the brooks and birds babble and twitter in the printed page not less blithely than in that western Paradise.

What so pleasant as to read of May-games, true-love knots, and shepherds piping in the shade ? of pixies and fairy-circles ? of rustic bridals and junketings ? of angling, hunting the squirrel, nut-gathering ? Of such-like subjects William Browne treats, singing like the shepherd in the Arcadia as though he would never grow old. He was a happy poet. It was his good fortune to grow up among wholesome surroundings, whose gracious influences sank into his spirit. He loved the hills and dales round Tavistock, and lovingly described them in his verse. Frequently he indulges in descriptions of sunrise and sunset ; they leave no vivid impression, but charm the reader by their quiet beauty. It cannot be denied that his fondness for simple, homely images sometimes led him into sheer fatuity ;* and candid admirers must also admit that, despite his study of simplicity, he could not refrain from hunting (as the manner was) after far-fetched outrageous conceits.

Browne had nothing of that restless energy which inspired the old dramatists ; he was all for pastoral contentment. Assuredly he was not a great poet, but he was a true poet, and a modest. In the Fourth Song of the Second Book he tells of the pleasure that he took in writing his poetry, and manfully declares that his free-born Muse shall never stoop to servile

* No excuse can be offered for such a passage as the following (Book I, Song 3) :—

“ As when some boy trying the somersault,
Stands on his head, and feet, as he did lie
To kick against earth's spangled canopy ;
When seeing that his heels are of such weight,
That he cannot obtain their purpos'd height,
Leaves any more to strive ; and thus doth say,
What now I cannot do, another day
May well effect : it cannot be denied
I show'd a will to act, because I tried.”

flattery. He cultivated poetry for its own sake, and not for what it might bring of advantage or reward :—

In this case I, as oft as I will choose,
Hug sweet content by my retired Muse,
And in a study find as much to please
As others in the greatest palaces.

Sidney and Spenser, whom he regarded as his masters, he held in highest veneration. Among his friends were Ben Jonson, Chapman (“the learned shepherd of fair Hitchin hill”), “well-languaged Daniel,” Christopher Brooke, John Davies of Hereford, and Wither. In the Second Song of the Second Book he passes these poets in review, and eulogizes each in turn. The praise that he bestowed on contemporary poets was by them amply repaid ; and with poets of a later age Browne has found favour. In Mr. Huth’s library is preserved a copy of the folio edition of Britannia’s Pastorals, containing MS. annotations stated to be in the handwriting of Milton (who may possibly have taken some hints for Comus from Browne’s Inner Temple Masque). Henry Vaughan, in his praises of the river Usk, borrowed from the Second Song of the First Book of the Pastorals. Keats, who chose a motto from the Pastorals for one of his early poems, was much under Browne's influence at the beginning of his glorious career, but quickly passed to regions of fancy far removed from the ken of the earlier poet. Mrs. Browning did not omit to introduce Browne in her Vision of the Poets.

Browne was not only a poet, but a scholar and antiquary,—the friend of Selden. At the beginning of the Pastorals he refers (in a marginal note) to an MS. copy of William of Malmesbury "in the hands of my learned friend M. Selden." In The Shepherd's Pipe he printed from MS. a poem of Hoccleve, and announced "As this shall please, I may be drawn to publish the rest of his works, being all perfect in my hands." Seemingly the public of those days had no anxiety to see Hoccleve's works collected: the project fell through. A curious passage occurs in Nathaniel Carpenter's* Geography delineated forth in two Bookes, 1625 (pp. 263-4):—"Many inferiour faculties are yet left, wherein our Devon hath displaid her abilities as well as in the former, as in Philosophers, Historians, Oratours and Poets, the blazoning of whom to the life, especially the last, I had rather leave to my worthy friend Mr. W. Browne, who, as hee hath already honoured his countrie in his elegant and sweet Pastoralls, so questionles will easily bee intreated a little farther to grace it by drawing out the line of his Poeticke Auncesters, beginning in Josephus Iscanus and ending in himselfe." Probably Carpenter threw out this suggestion at a venture, for there is no evidence to show that Browne had any intention of collecting materials for Lives of the Poets of Devonshire.*

* Carpenter was a fellow of Exeter College. He dedicated his Geography to William, Earl of Pembroke.

The Two Books of Pastorals, the Eclogues in The Shepherd's Pipe, and some contributions to the 1614 edition of England's Helicon, contain all the poetry that Browne published. He left in MS. a Third Book of Pastorals, the Inner Temple Masque, and some miscellaneous poems. Among the miscellaneous pieces are the excellent bacchanalian song "Now that the spring hath filled our veins,"† and the

* Anthony à Wood and others, garbling Carpenter's words, have represented that Browne was engaged on a History of English Poetry.

† It was popular in the xviiith century, though no early printed copy is extant. In Poor Robin's Almanac, 1699, it is mentioned as a well-known song:—"Now [June] famous ballad "Lydford Journey." Browne lived in an age of song-writing, and at times he could sing with the best. Some charming songs, notably "Shall I tell you whom I love?" and "Venus by Adonis' side," are scattered through the Pastorals, and there are good lyrical passages in the Masque.

In 1647 appeared a translation from the French of M. Le Roy, Sieur de Gomberville,—The History of Polexander. Done into English by William Browne, Gent. For the Right Honourable Philip, Earle of Pembroke and Montgomery, &c. London, printed by Tho: Harper for Thomas Walkley, fol. It is to be noted that Walkley was the publisher of the 1620 edition of The Shepherd's Pipe. The translation (a holiday task of slender interest) was issued without dedication or preface. Probably the translator may be identified with the author of the Pastorals, for we hear of no other William Browne who was connected with the Pembroke family. A copy of the French original is in the library at Wilton, but not of the English translation.

is the time when Farmers shear their Sheep . . . and yet for all this, the old Song is in force still, and ever will be,

'Shear Sheep that have 'em cry we still.' "

Whether his be the translation or not, the poet was dead when Polexander appeared. His early years were passed in the delightful town of Tavistock; he spent much time at Wilton, the home of the Herberts; and he died in, or near, Dorking. Tavistock,—Wilton,—Dorking. Surely few poets have had a more tranquil journey to the Elysian Fields.

HONOUR'S bright ray,
More highly crown'd with virtue than with years,
Pardon a rustic Muse that thus appears
 In shepherd's grey,
Entreating your attention to a lay
Fitting a sylvan bower, not courtly trains ;
 Such choicer ears,
Should have Apollo's priests, not Pan's rude swains.
But if the music of contented plains
 A thought uprears
For your approvement of that part she bears,
When time (that embryos to perfection brings)

Hath taught her strains
 May better boast their being from the spring
 Where brave heroës' worths the Sisters sing :
 (In lines whose reigns
 In spite of Envy and her restless pains
 Be unconfin'd as blest eternity :)
 The vales shall ring
 Thy honour'd name, and every song shall be
 A pyramis built to thy memory.

TO THE READER.

THE times are swoll'n so big with nicer wits,
 That nought sounds good but what Opinion strikes
 Censure with Judgment seld^a together sits ;
 And now the man more than the matter likes.

The great rewardress of a poet's pen,
 Fame, is by those so clogg'd she seldom flies ;
 The Muses sitting on the graves of men,
 Singing that Virtue lives and never dies,

^a Seld, seldom.

Are chas'd away by the malignant tongues
Of such, by whom Detraction is ador'd :
Hence grows the want of ever-living songs,
With which our isle was whilom^a bravely stor'd.

If such a basilisk dart down his eye
(Impoison'd with the dregs of utmost hate),
To kill the first blooms of my poesy,
It is his worst, and makes me fortunate.

Kind wits I vail^b to, but to fools precise
I am as confident as they are nice.

By the Same.

So much a stranger my severer Muse
 Is not to love-strains, or a shepward's^a reed,
 But that she knows some rites of Phœbus' dues,
 Of Pan, of Pallas, and her Sisters' meed.
 Read and commend she durst these tun'd essays
 Of him that loves her. (She hath ever found
 Her studies as one circle.) Next she prays
 His readers be with rose and myrtle crown'd !
 No willow touch them ! As his bays* are free
 From wrong of bolts, so may their chaplets be.

J. SELDEN, Juris C.

To his Friend the Author.

DRIVE forth thy flock, young pastor, to that plain
 Where our old shepherds wont their flocks to feed ;
 To those clear walks where many a skilful swain
 To'ards the calm ev'ning tun'd his pleasant reed.

^a Shepward, shepherd.

* Bays (fair Readers) being the materials of Poets' Garlands (as myrtle and roses are for enjoying lovers, and the fruitless willow for them which your inconstancy too oft makes happy) are supposed not subject to any hurt of

 are.

Those, to the Muses once so sacred, downs,
 As no rude foot might there presume to stand :
 (Now made the way of the unworhiest clowns, Digg'd and plough'd up with each unhallowed hand)
 If possible thou canst redeem those places,
 Where, by the brim of many a silver spring,
 The learned maidens and delightful graces
 Often have sat to hear our shepherds sing :
 Where on those pines, the neighb'ring groves among (Now utterly neglected in these days),
 Our garlands, pipes, and cornamutes^a were hung,
 The monuments of our deserved praise.
 So may thy sheep like,^b so thy lambs increase,
 And from the wolf feed ever safe and free !
 So may'st thou thrive, among the learned prease,^c
 As thou young shepherd art belov'd of me !

MICHAEL DRAYTON.

To his ingenious and worthy Friend the Author.

HE that will tune his oaten-pipe aright
 To great Apollo's harp ; he that will write
 A living poem, must have many years,
 And settled judgment 'mongst his equal peers,

^a Cornamutes, rustic instruments blown like the bagpipe.

^b Like, thrive.

^c Prease, press or crowd.

In well-rigg'd bark to steer his doubtful course ;
Lest secret, rocky envy, or the source
Of frothy, but sky-tow'ring arrogance,
Or fleeting, sandy vulgar-censure chance
To leave him shipwreck'd on the desert main,
Imploring aged Neptune's help in vain.
The younger cygnet, even at best, doth tear
With his harsh squealings the melodious ear :
It is the old and dying swan that sings
Notes worthy life, worthy the Thespian springs.
But thou art young ; and yet thy voice as sweet,
Thy verse as smooth, composure as discreet
As any swan's whose tuneful notes are spent
On Thames his banks ; which makes me confident,
He knows no music, hath nor ears, nor tongue,
That not commends a voice so sweet, so young.

On him ; a Pastoral Ode to his fairest Shepherdess.

SYREN more than earthly fair,
Sweetly break the yielding air ;
Sing on Albion's whitest rocks ;
Sing ; whilst Willy to his flocks
Deftly tunes his various reed.
Sing ; and he, whilst younglings feed,
Answer shall thy best of singing,
With his rural music bringing

Equal pleasure ; and requite
 Music's sweets with like delight.
 What though Willy's songs be plain ?
 Sweet they be : for he's a swain
 Made of purer mould than earth.
 Him did Nature from his birth,
 And the Muses single out,
 For a second Colin Clout.^a
 Tityrus^b made him a singer :
 Pan him taught his pipe to finger :
 Numbers, curious ears to please,
 Learn'd he of Philisides.^c
 Kala^d loves him : and the lasses
 Point at him as by he passes,
 Wishing never tongue that's bad
 Censure may so blithe a lad.
 Therefore well can he requite
 Music's sweets with like delight :
 Sing then, break the yielding air
 Syren more than earthly fair.

EDWARD HEYWARD,

^a Colin Clout is the pastoral name which Spenser adopted for himself.

^b Tityrus, Virgil.

^c Philisides, one of the poetical names of Sir Philip Sidney, invented by himself, and evidently formed from portions of the two names, Philip and Sidney.

^d Kala, a shepherdess in Sidney's Arcadia.

To his Friend the Author upon his Poem.

THIS plant is knotless that puts forth these leaves,
 Upon whose branches I his praise do sing :
 Fruitful the ground, whose verdure it receives
 From fertile Nature, and the learned Spring.
 In zeal to good known, but unpractis'd ill,
 Chaste in his thoughts, though in his youthful prime,
 He writes of past'ral love with nectar'd quill,
 And offers up his first fruits unto Time.
 Receive them (Time) and in thy border place them
 Among thy various flowers of poesy ;
 No envy blast, nor ignorance deface them,
 But keep them fresh in fairest memory !

And, when from Daphne's tree he plucks more bays,
 His Shepherd's Pipe may chant more heav'nly lays.

To his Friend the Author.

ON (jolly lad) and hie thee to the field
 Among the best swains that the valleys yield ;
 Go boldly, and in presence of them all,
 Proceed a shepherd with this Pastoral.
 Let Pan, and all his rural train attending,
 From stately mountains to the plains descending,
 Salute this Pastor with their kind embraces,
 And entertain him to their holy places.
 Let all the nymphs of hills and dales together
 Kiss him for earnest of his welcome thither :
 Crown him with garlands of the choicest flowers,
 And make him ever dwell within their bowers :
 For well I wot in all the plains around,
 There are but few such shepherds to be found,
 That can such learned lays and ditties frame,
 Or aptly fit their tunes unto the same.
 And let them all (if this young swain should die)
 Tune all their reeds to sing his memory.

THO. GARDINER,

è So. Int. Templ.

To the Author.

HAD I beheld thy Muse upon the stage,
 A poesy in fashion with this age ;
 Or had I seen, when first I view'd thy task,
 An active wit dance in a satyr's mask,

I should in those have prais'd thy wit and art,
 But not thy ground, a poem's better part :
 Which being the perfect'st image of the brain,
 Not fram'd to any base end, but to gain
 True approbation of the artist's worth,
 When to an open view he sets it forth,
 Judiciously he strives no less t'adorn
 By a choice subject than a curious form :
 Well hast thou then pass'd o'er all other rhyme,
 And in a Pastoral spent thy leisure's time :
 Where fruit so fair, and field so fruitful is,
 That hard it is to judge whether in this
 The substance or the fashion more excel,
 So precious is the gem, and wrought so well.
 Thus rest thou prais'd of me, fruit, field, gem, art,
 Do claim much praise to equal such desert.

BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS.

THE FIRST SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Marina's love, yclep'd^a the fair,
Celand's disdain, and her despair.
Are the first wings my Muse puts on
To reach the sacred Helicon.

I THAT whilere near Tavy's* stragling spring
Unto my seely sheep did use to sing,
And play'd to please myself on rustic reed,
Nor sought for bay (the learned shepherd's meed),

^a.—Ycleped, called.

2.—See'ly, simple.

* Tavy is a river, having his head in Dartmoor in Devon, some few miles from Mary Tavy, and falls southward into Tamar: out of the same moor riseth, running northward, another, called Tau: which by the way the rather I speak of, because in the printed Malmesbury degest. Pontific. lib. 2, fol. 146, you read, "Est in Dominonia cænobium monachorum juxta Tau fluvium, quod Tavistok vocatur:" whereas upon Tau stands (near the north side of the shire) Tawstock, being no remnants of a monastery: so that you must there read, "Juxta Tavi Fluvium," as in a manuscript copy of Malmesbury (the form of the hand assuring Malmesbury's time) belonging to the Abbey of S. Augustine in Canterbury I have seen, in the hands of my very learned friend M. Selden.

But as a swain unkent fed on the plains, 5
 And made the Echo umpire of my strains :
 Am drawn by time (although the weak'st of many)
 To sing those lays as yet unsung of any.
 What need I tune the swains of Thessaly ?
 Or, bootless, add to them of Arcadie ? 10
 No, fair Arcadia cannot be completer ;
 My praise may lessen, but not make thee greater.
 My Muse for lofty pitches shall not roam,
 But homely piper of her native home ;
 And to the swains, love rural minstrelsy ; 15
 Thus, dear Britannia, will I sing of thee.

High on the plains of that renowned isle,
 Which all men Beauty's garden-plot enstyle,
 A shepherd dwelt, whom Fortune had made rich
 With all the gifts that silly men bewitch. 20
 Near him a shepherdess for beauty's store
 Unparallel'd of any age before.
 Within those breasts her face a flame did move,
 Which never knew before what 'twas to love, [25
 Dazzling each shepherd's sight that view'd her eyes :
 And as the Persians did idolatrize
 Unto the sun : they thought that Cynthia's light
 Might well be spar'd where she appear'd in night.
 And as when many to the goal do run,
 The prize is given never but to one : 30
 So first, and only Celandine was led,

5.—Unkent, unknown, for unkenned.

Of Destiny's and Heaven much favoured,
 To gain this beauty, which I here do offer
 To memory : his pains (who would not proffer [35 Pains for such pleasures?) were not great nor much,
 But that his labour's recompense was such
 As countervailed all : for she, whose passion,
 (And passion oft is love,) whose inclination
 Bent all her course to him-wards, let him know
 He was the elm whereby her vine did grow : 40
 Yea, told him, when his tongue began this task,
 She knew not to deny when he would ask.
 Finding his suit as quickly got as mov'd,
 Celandine, in his thoughts not well approv'd
 What none could disallow, his love grew feign'd, 45
 And what he once affected now disdain'd.
 But fair Marina (for so was she call'd)
 Having in Celandine her love install'd,
 Affected so this faithless shepherd's boy,
 That she was rapt beyond degree of joy. 50
 Briefly, she could not live one hour without him,
 And thought no joy like theirs that liv'd about him.

This variable shepherd for a while
 Did Nature's jewel by his craft beguile :
 And still the perfecter her love did grow, 55
 His did appear more counterfeit in show.
 Which she perceiving that his flame did slake,
 And lov'd her only for his trophy's sake :
 "For he that's stuffed with a faithless tumour, Loves only for his lust and for his humour : " 60

And that he often in his merry fit
Would say, his good came ere he hop'd for it :
His thoughts for other subjects being press'd,
Esteeming that as nought which he possess'd :
" For what is gotten but with little pain, 65
As little grief we take to lose again."
Well-minded Marine grieving, thought it strange
That her ingrateful swain did seek for change.
Still by degrees her cares grew to the full,
Joys to the wane, heartrending grief did pull 70
Her from herself, and she abandon'd all
To cries and tears, fruits of a funeral ;
Running the mountains, fields, by wat'ry springs,
Filling each cave with woful echoings ;
Making in thousand places her complaint, 75
And uttering to the trees what her tears meant.
" For griefs conceal'd (proceeding from desire) Consume the more, as doth a close-pent fire."
Whilst that the day's sole eye doth gild the seas
In his day's journey to th' Antipodes, 80
And all the time the jetty-charioteer
Hurls her black mantle through our hemisphere,
Under the covert of a sprouting pine
She sits and grieves for faithless Celandine.
Beginning thus : Alas ! and must it be 85
That Love which thus torments and troubles me
In settling it, so small advice hath lent
To make me captive, where enfranchisement
Cannot be gotten ? nor where, like a slave,

The office due to faithful prisoners, have? 90
 Oh cruel Celandine, why shouldst thou hate
 Her, who to love thee, was ordain'd by Fate !
 Should I not follow thee, and sacrifice
 My wretched life to thy betraying eyes ?
 Aye me ! of all my most unhappy lot ; 95
 What others would, thou may'st, and yet wilt not.
 Have I rejected those that me ador'd,
 To be of him, whom I adore, abhorr'd ?
 And pass'd by others' tears, to make election
 Of one, that should so pass-by my affection ? 100
 I have : and see the heav'nly powers intend
 " To punish sinners in what they offend."
 Maybe he takes delight to see in me
 The burning rage of hellish jealousy ;
 Tries if in fury any love appears ; 105
 And bathes his joy within my flood of tears.
 But if he lov'd to soil my spotless soul,
 And me amongst deceived maids enrol,
 To publish to the world my open shame : [110
 Then, heart, take freedom ; hence, accursed flame ;
 And, as queen-regent, in my heart shall move
 " Disdain, that only over-ruleth Love :"
 By this infranchis'd sure my thoughts shall be,
 And in the same sort love, as thou lov'st me.
 But what ? or can I cancel or unbind 115
 That which my heart hath seal'd and love hath sign'd ?
 No, no, grief doth deceive me more each hour ;
 " For, who so truly loves, hath not that power."

I wrong to say so since of all 'tis known,
 "Who yields to love doth leave to be her own." 120
 But what avails my living thus apart?
 Can I forget him? or out of my heart
 Can tears expulse his image? surely no.
 "We well may fly the place, but not the woe :
 Love's fire is of a nature which by turns 125
 Consumes in presence, and in absence burns."
 And knowing this : aye me ! unhappy wight !
 What means is left to help me in this plight ?
 And from that peevish shooting, hood-wink'd elf,
 To repossess my love, my heart, myself? 130
 Only this help I find, which I elect :
 Since what my life nor can nor will effect,
 My ruin shall : and by it, I shall find,
 "Death cures (when all helps fail) the grieved mind."
 And welcome here (than Love a better guest), 135
 That of all labours art the only rest :
 Whilst thus I live, all things discomfort give,
 The life is sure a death wherein I live :
 Save life and death do differ in this one,
 That life hath ever cares, and death hath none. 140
 But if that he (disdainful swain) should know
 That for his love I wrought my overthrow ;
 Will he not glory in't? and from my death
 Draw more delights, and give new joys their breath?
 Admit he do, yet better 'tis that I 145

120.—Leave, cease.123.—Expulse, expel.

Render myself to Death than misery.
 I cannot live, thus barred from his sight,
 Nor yet endure, in presence, any wight
 Should love him but myself. O Reason's eye,
 How art thou blinded with vild jealousy ! 150
 And is it thus ? Then which shall have my blood,
 Or certain ruin, or uncertain good ?
 Why do I doubt ? Are we not still advis'd
 "That certainty in all things best is priz'd ?"
 Then, if a certain end can help my moan, 155
 "Know Death hath certainty, but Life hath none."

Here is a mount, whose top seems to despise
 The far inferior vale that under lies :
 Who like a great man rais'd aloft by fate,
 Measures his height by others' mean estate : 160
 Near to whose foot there glides a silver flood.
 Falling from hence, I'll climb unto my good,
 And by it finish Love and Reason's strife,
 And end my misery as well as life.
 But as a coward's heartener in war, 165
 The stirring drum, keeps lesser noise from far :
 So seem the murmuring waves tell in mine ear
 That guiltless blood was never spilled there.
 Then stay a while ; the beasts that haunt those springs,
 Of whom I hear the fearful bellowings, 170
 May do that deed (as moved by my cry),
 Whereby my soul, as spotless ivory,

150.—Vild, vile.

165.—Heartener, an encourager.

May turn from whence it came, and, freed from hence,
Be unpolluted of that foul offence.

But why protract I time? death is no stranger : 175

“ And generous spirits never fear for danger :

Death is a thing most natural to us,

And fear doth only make it odious.”

As when to seek her food abroad doth rove

The Nuncius of peace, the seely dove, 180

Two sharp-set hawks do her on each side hem,

And she knows not which way to fly from them :

Or like a ship, that tossed to and fro

With wind and tide ; the wind doth sternly blow,

And drives her to the main, the tide comes sore 185

And hurls her back again towards the shore ;

And since her ballast and her sails do lack,

One brings her out, the other beats her back ;

Till one of them increasing more his shocks,

Hurls her to shore, and rends her on the rocks : 190

So stood she long, 'twixt love and reason toss'd,

Until despair (who where it comes rules most)

Won her to throw herself, to meet with death,

From off the rock into the flood beneath.

The waves that were above when as she fell, 195

For fear flew back again into their well,

Doubting ensuing times on them would frown,

That they so rare a beauty help'd to drown.

Her fall, in grief, did make the stream so roar,

120.—Nuncius, messenger.

180.—Seely, simple.

Song 1.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 25

That sullen murmurings fill'd all the shore. 200

A shepherd (near this flood that fed his sheep,
Who at this chance left grazing and did weep)
Having so sad an object for his eyes,
Left pipe and flock, and in the water flies,
To save a jewel, which was never sent 205

To be possess'd by one sole element :
But such a work Nature dispos'd and gave,
Where all the elements concordance have.
He took her in his arms, for pity cried,
And brought her to the river's further side : 210

Yea, and he sought by all his art and pain,
To bring her likewise to herself again :
While she that by her fall was senseless left,
And almost in the waves had life bereft,
Lay long, as if her sweet immortal spirit 215
Was fled some other palace to inherit.

But as clear Phœbus, when some foggy cloud
His brightness from the world a while doth shroud,
Doth by degrees begin to show his light
Unto the view : or, as the queen of night, 220
In her increasing horns, doth rounder grow,
Till full and perfect she appear in show :
Such order in this maid the shepherd spies,
When she began to show the world her eyes. [225
Who (thinking now that she had pass'd death's dream,
Occasion'd by her fall into the stream,

And that hell's ferryman did then deliver
 Her to the other side th' infernal river)
 Said to the swain : O Charon, I am bound
 More to thy kindness than all else that round 230
 Come thronging to thy boat : thou hast pass'd over
 The woful'st maid that e'er these shades did cover,
 But, prithee, ferryman, direct my spright
 Where that black river runs that Lethe hight,
 That I of it (as other ghosts) may drink, 235
 And never of the world, or love, more think.
 The swain perceiving by her words ill sorted,
 That she was wholly from herself transported,
 And fearing lest those often idle fits
 Might clean expel her uncollected wits : 240
 Fair nymph (said he), the powers above deny
 So fair a beauty should so quickly die.
 The heavens unto the world have made a loan,
 And must for you have interest, three for one. [245
 Call back your thoughts o'er cast with dolour's night ;
 Do you not see the day, the heavens, the light ?
 Do you not know in Pluto's darksome place
 The light of heaven did never show his face ?
 Do not your pulses beat ? y'are warm, have breath,
 Your sense is rapt with fear, but not with death. 250
 I am not Charon, nor of Pluto's host ;
 Nor is there flesh and blood found in a ghost ;
 But as you see, a seely shepherd's swain,

Who though my mere revenues be the train
 Of milk-white sheep, yet am I joy'd as much 255
 In saving you (O, who would not save such?),
 As ever was the wand'ring youth of Greece,
 That brought from Colchos home the golden fleece.

The never-too-much-praised fair Marine,
 Hearing those words, believ'd her ears and eyne: 260
 And knew how she escaped had the flood
 By means of this young swain that near her stood.
 Whereat for grief she 'gan again to faint,
 Redoubling thus her cries and sad complaint:
 Alas! and is that likewise barr'd from me, 265
 Which for all persons else lies ever free?
 Will life, nor death, nor ought abridge my pain?
 But live still dying, die to live again?
 Then most unhappy I! which find most sure,
 The wound of love neglected is past cure. 270
 Most cruel god of love (if such there be),
 That still to my desires art contrary!
 Why should I not in reason this obtain,
 That as I love, I may be lov'd again?
 Alas! with thee too, Nature plays her parts, 275
 That fram'd so great a discord 'tween two hearts:
 One flies, and always doth in hate persevere;
 The other follows, and in love grows ever.
 Why dost thou not extinguish clean this flame,
 And place't on him that best deserves the same? 280
 Why had not I affected some kind youth,
 Whose every word had been the word of truth?

Who might have had to love, and lov'd to have,
 So true a heart as I to Celand gave.
 For Psyche's love ! if beauty gave thee birth, 285
 Or if thou hast attractive power on earth,
 Dame Venus' sweetest child, requite this love.
 Or fate yield means my soul may hence remove !
 Once seeing in a spring her drowned eyes,
 O cruel beauty, cause of this (she cries), 290
 Mother of Love (my joy's most fatal knife),
 That work'st her death, by whom thyself hast life !
 The youthful swain that heard this loving saint
 So oftentimes to pour forth such complaint,
 Within his heart such true affection prais'd, 295
 And did perceive kind love and pity rais'd
 His mind to sighs ; yea, beauty forced this,
 That all her grief he thought was likewise his.
 And having brought her what his lodge affords,
 Sometime he wept with her, sometime with words 300
 Would seek to comfort ; when, alas ! poor elf,
 He needed then a comforter himself.
 Daily whole troops of grief unto him came
 For her who languish'd of another flame.
 If that she sigh'd, he thought him lov'd of her, 305
 When 'twas another sail her wind did stir :
 But had her sighs and tears been for this boy,
 Her sorrow had been less, and more her joy.
 Long time in grief he hid his love-made pains,
 And did attend her walks in woods and plains : 310
 Bearing a fuel, which her sun-like eyes

Enflam'd, and made his heart the sacrifice :
 Yet he, sad swain, to show it did not dare ;
 And she, lest he should love, nigh died for fear.
 She, ever-wailing, blam'd the powers above, 315
 That night nor day give any rest to love.

He prais'd the heavens in silence, oft was mute,
 And thought with tears and sighs to win his suit.

Once in the shade, when she by sleep repos'd,
 And her clear eyes 'twixt her fair lids enclos'd, 320
 The shepherd swain began to hate and curse
 That day unfortunate, which was the nurse
 Of all his sorrows. He had given breath
 And life to her which was his cause of death.

O Æsop's snake, that thirstest for his blood, 325
 From whom thyself receiv'd'st a certain good.

Thus oftentimes unto himself alone
 Would he recount his grief, utter his moan ;
 And after much debating, did resolve
 Rather his grandame Earth should clean involve 330
 His pining body, ere he would make known
 To her, what tares love in his breast had sown.
 Yea, he would say when grief for speech hath cried,

“ 'Tis better never ask than be denied.”

But as the queen of rivers, fairest Thames, 335
 That for her buildings other floods enflames
 With greatest envy ; or the Nymph of Kent,

That stateliest ships to sea hath ever sent ;
 Some baser groom, for lucre's hellish course,
 Her channel having stopp'd, kept back her source, 340
 (Fill'd with disdain) doth swell above her mounds,
 And overfloweth all the neighb'ring grounds,
 Angry she tears up all that stops her way,
 And with more violence runs to the sea :
 So the kind shepherd's grief (which long up-pent 345 Grew more in power, and longer in extent)
 Forth of his heart more violently thrust,
 And all his vow'd intentions quickly burst.
 Marina, hearing sighs, to him drew near,
 And did entreat his cause of grief to hear ; 350
 But had she known her beauty was the sting
 That caused all that instant sorrowing,
 Silence in bands her tongue had stronger kept,
 And sh'ad not ask'd for what the shepherd wept.

The swain first, of all times, this best did think 355
 To show his love, whilst on the river's brink
 They sat alone, then thought, he next would move her

With sighs and tears (true tokens of a lover) ;
 And since she knew what help from him she found
 When in the river she had else been drown'd, 360
 He thinketh sure she cannot but grant this,
 To give relief to him by whom she is ;
 By this incited, said : Whom I adore,

Sole mistress of my heart, I thee implore,
 Do not in bondage hold my freedom long. 365
 And since I life or death hold from your tongue,
 Suffer my heart to love ; yea, dare to hope
 To get that good of love's intended scope.
 Grant I may praise that light in you I see,
 And dying to myself, may live in thee. 370
 Fair nymph, surcease this death-alluring languish,
 So rare a beauty was not born for anguish.
 Why shouldst thou care for him that cares not for thee ?
 Yea, most unworthy wight, seems to abhor thee.
 And if he be as you do here paint forth him, 375
 He thinks you, best of beauties, are not worth him ;
 That all the joys of love will not quite cost
 For all lov'd freedom which by it is lost.
 Within his heart such self-opinion dwells,
 That his conceit in this he thinks excels ; 380
 Accounting women's beauties sugar'd baits,
 That never catch but fools with their deceits.
 " Who of himself harbours so vain a thought, Truly to love could never yet be brought."
 Then love that heart where lies no faithless seed, 385
 That never wore dissimulation's weed :
 Who doth account all beauties of the spring,
 That jocund summer days are ushering,
 As foils to yours. But if this cannot move
 Your mind to pity, nor your heart to love, 390

Yet, sweetest, grant me love to quench that flame,
 Which burns you now. Expel his worthless name,
 Clean root him out by me, and in his place
 Let him inhabit that will run a race
 More true in love. It may be for your rest. 395
 And when he sees her, who did love him best,
 Possessed by another, he will rate
 The much of good he lost, when 'tis too late :
 " For what is in our powers we little deem,
 And things possess'd by others best esteem." 400
 If all this gain you not a shepherd's wife,
 Yet give not death to him which gave you life.

Marine the fair, hearing his wooing tale,
 Perceived well what wall his thoughts did scale ;
 And answer'd thus : I pray, Sir Swain, what boot 405
 Is it to me to pluck up by the root
 My former love, and in his place to sow
 As ill a seed, for anything I know ?
 Rather 'gainst thee I mortal hate retain,
 That seek'st to plant in me new cares, new pain. 410
 Alas ! th'hast kept my soul from death's sweet bands
 To give me over to a tyrant's hands,
 Who on his racks will torture by his power
 This weaken'd, harmless body, every hour.
 Be you the judge, and see if reason's laws 415
 Give recompense of favour for this cause.
 You from the streams of death brought life on shore ;
 Releas'd one pain to give me ten times more.
 For love's sake, let my thoughts in this be free ;

Object no more your hapless saving me : 420
 That obligation which you think should bind,
 Doth still increase more hatred in my mind.
 Yea, I do think more thanks to him were due
 That would bereave my life than unto you.

The thunder-stricken swain lean'd to a tree, 425
 As void of sense as weeping Niobe ;
 Making his tears the instruments to woo her,
 The sea wherein his love should swim unto her :
 And, could there flow from his two-headed font,
 As great a flood as is the Hellespont, 430
 Within that deep he would as willing wander
 To meet his Hero, as did e'er Leander.
 Meanwhile the nymph withdrew herself aside,
 And to a grove at hand her steps applied.

With that sad sigh (O ! had he never seen, 435
 His heart in better case had ever been)

Against his heart, against the stream he went,
 With this resolve, and with a full intent,
 When of that stream he had discovered
 The fount, the well-spring, or the bubbling head, 440
 He there would sit, and with the well-drop vie,
 That it before his eyes would first run dry.

But then he thought the god* that haunts that lake,
 The spoiling of his spring would not well take ;
 And therefore leaving soon the crystal flood, 445
 Did take his way unto the nearest wood :

420.—Object, urge.

Seating himself within a darksome cave,
 (Such places heavy Saturnists do crave,)
 Where yet the gladsome day was never seen,
 Nor Phœbus' piercing beams had ever been, 450
 Fit for the synod house of those fell legions,
 That walk the mountains and Silvanus' regions ;
 Where Tragedy might have her full scope given,
 From men[']s aspects, and from the view of heaven.
 Within the same some crannies did deliver 455
 Into the midst thereof a pretty river ;
 The nymph whereof came by out of the veins
 Of our first mother, having late ta'en pains
 In scouring of her channel all the way,
 From where it first began to leave the sea : 460
 And in her labour thus far now had gone,
 When coming through the cave, she heard that one
 Spake thus : If I do in my death persever,
 Pity may that effect which love could never.
 By this she can conjecture 'twas some swain, 465
 Who overladen by a maid's disdain,
 Had here (as fittest) chosen out a place
 Where he might give a period to the race
 Of his loath'd life : which she (for pity's sake)
 Minding to hinder, div'd into her lake, 470
 And hasten'd where the ever-teeming Earth
 Unto her current gives a wishèd birth ;
 And by her new-deliver'd river's side,

448.--Saturnists, persons supposed to be under the influence of the planet Saturn, which tended to make men morose.

Upon a bank of flow'rs, had soon espied [475
 Remond, young Remond, that full well could sing,
 And tune his pipe at Pan's birth carolling ;
 Who for his nimble leaping, sweetest lays,
 A laurel garland wore on holy-days ;
 In framing of whose hand Dame Nature swore
 There never was his like, nor should be more ; 480
 Whose locks (ensnaring nets) were like the rays
 Wherewith the sun doth diaper the seas,
 Which, if they had been cut and hung upon
 The snow-white cliffs of fertile Albion,
 Would have allured more to be their winner, 485
 Than all the diamonds* that are hidden in her.
 Him she accosted thus : Swain of the Wreath,
 Thou art not placed only here to breathe ;
 But Nature in thy framing shows to me
 Thou shouldst to others as she did to thee, 490
 Do good ; and surely I myself persuade,
 Thou never wert for evil action made.
 In heaven's consistory 'twas decreed
 That choicest fruit should come from choicest seed ;
 In baser vessels we do ever put 495
 Basest materials, do never shut
 Those jewels most in estimation set,
 But in some curious costly cabinet.
 If I may judge by th' outward shape alone,

Within, all virtues have convention : 500
 "For 't gives most lustre unto Virtue's feature,
 When she appears cloth'd in a goodly creature."
 Half way the hill, near to those aged trees,
 Whose insides are as hives for lab'ring bees,
 (As who should say, before their roots were dead, 505
 For good work's sake and alms they harboured
 Those whom nought else did cover but the skies :)
 A path, untrodden but of beasts, there lies,
 Directing to a cave in yonder glade,
 Where all this forest's citizens for shade 510
 At noon-time come, and are the first, I think,
 That (running through that cave) my waters drink :
 Within this rock there sits a woful wight,
 As void of comfort as that cave of light ;
 And as I wot, occasion'd by the frowns 515
 Of some coy shepherdess that haunts these downs.
 This I do know (whos'ever wrought his care)
 He is a man nigh treading to despair.
 Then hie thee thither, since 'tis charity
 To save a man ; leave here thy flock with me : 520
 For whilst thou sav'st him from the Stygian bay,
 I'll keep thy lambkins from all beasts of prey.
 The nearness of the danger (in his thought)
 As it doth ever, more compassion wrought :
 So that, with reverence to the nymph, he went 525
 With wingèd speed, and hasten'd to prevent
 Th' untimely seizure of the greedy grave.
 Breathless, at last, he came into the cave,

Where, by a sigh directed to the man,
 To comfort him he in this sort began : 530
 Shepherd, all hail ! what mean these plaints ? this cave
 (Th' image of death, true portrait of the grave)
 Why dost frequent ? and wail thee underground
 From whence there never yet was pity found ?
 Come forth, and show thyself unto the light, 535
 Thy grief to me. If there be ought that might Give any ease unto thy troubled mind,
 We joy as much to give, as thou to find.
 The love-sick swain replied : Remond, thou art
 The man alone to whom I would impart 540
 My woes more willing than to any swain,
 That lives and feeds his sheep upon the plain.
 But vain it is, and 'twould increase my woes
 By their relation, or to thee or those
 That cannot remedy. Let it suffice, 545
 No fond distrust of thee makes me precise
 To show my grief. Leave me then, and forego
 This cave more sad since I have made it so.
 Here tears broke forth, and Remond 'gan anew
 With such entreaties, earnest to pursue 550
 His former suit, that he (though hardly) wan
 The shepherd to disclose, and thus began :
 Know briefly, Remond, then, a heavenly face,
 Nature's idea, and perfection's grace,
 Within my breast hath kindled such a fire, 555
 That doth consume all things, except desire ;

Which daily doth increase, though always burning,
 And I want tears, but lack no cause of mourning.
 "For he whom love under his colours draws,
 May often want th' effect, but ne'er the cause." 560
 Quoth th' other, have thy stars malign been such,
 That their predominations sway so much
 Over the rest, that with a mild aspect
 The lives and loves of shepherds do affect ?
 Then do I think there is some greater hand, 565
 Which thy endeavours still doth countermand :
 Wherefore I wish thee quench the flame, thus mov'd,
 "And never love except thou be below'd.
 For such an humour every woman seizeth, [570
 She loves not him that plaineth, but that pleaseth.
 When much thou lovest, most disdain comes on thee ;
 And when thou think'st to hold her, she flies from thee :
 She follow'd, flies ; she fled from follows post,
 And loveth best where she is hated most.
 'Tis ever noted both in maids and wives, 575
 Their hearts and tongues are never relatives.
 Hearts full of holes (so elder shepherds sain)
 Are apter to receive than to retain."
 Whose crafts and wiles did I intend to show,
 This day would not permit me time, I know : 580
 The day's swift horses would their course have run,

And div'd themselves within the ocean,
 Ere I should have performed half my task,
 Striving their crafty subtleties t'unmask.
 And, gentle swain, some counsel take of me ; 585
 Love not still where thou may'st ; love, who loves
 thee ;

Draw to the courteous, fly thy love's abhorrer,
 " And if she be not for thee, be not for her."
 If that she still be wavering, will away, [590
 Why shouldst thou strive to hold that will not stay ?
 This maxim reason never can confute,
 " Better to live by loss than die by suit."

If to some other love she is inclin'd,
 Time will at length clean root that from her mind.
 Time will extinct love's flames, his hell-like flashes, 595

And like a burning brand consume 't to ashes.
 Yet may'st thou still attend, but not importune :
 " Who seeks oft misseth, sleepers light on fortune,"
 Yea, and on women too. " Thus doltish sots
 Have Fate and fairest women for their lots. 600
 Favour and pity wait on patience :"
 And hatred oft attendeth violence.

If thou wilt get desire whence love hath pawn'd it,
 Believe me, take thy time, but ne'er demand it.
 Women, as well as men, retain desire ; 605
 But can dissemble, more than men, their fire.
 Be never caught with looks, nor self-wrought rumour ;
 Nor by a quaint disguise, nor singing humour.

Those outside shows are toys which outwards snare,
But virtue lodg'd within is only fair. 610

If thou hast seen the beauty of our nation,
And find'st her have no love, have thou no passion :
But seek thou further ; other places sure
May yield a face as fair, a love more pure :
Leave, O then leave, fond swain, this idle course, 615
For Love's a god no mortal wight can force.

Thus Remond said, and saw the fair Marine
Plac'd near a spring, whose waters crystalline
Did in their murmurings bear a part, and plain'd
That one so true, so fair, should be disdain'd : 620
Whilst in her cries, that fill'd the vale along,
Still Celand was the burthen of her song.
The stranger shepherd left the other swain,
To give attendance to his fleecy train ;
Who, in departing from him, let him know, 625
That yonder was his freedom's overthrow,
Who sat bewailing (as he late had done)
That love by true affection was not won.
This fully known, Remond came to the maid,
And after some few words, (her tears allay'd,) 630
Began to blame her rigour, call'd her cruel,
To follow hate, and fly love's chiefest jewel.

Fair, do not blame him that he thus is mov'd ;
For women sure were made to be belov'd.
If beauty wanting lovers long should stay, 635
It like an house undwelt in would decay :
When in the heart if it have taken place

Time cannot blot, nor crooked age deface.
 The adamant and beauty we discover
 To be alike ; for beauty draws a lover, 640
 The adamant his iron. Do not blame
 His loving then, but that which caus'd the same.
 Whoso is lov'd, doth glory so to be :
 The more your lovers, more your victory. [645
 Know, if you stand on faith, most women's loathing,
 'Tis but a word, a character of nothing.
 Admit it somewhat, if what we call constance
 Within a heart hath long time residence,
 And in a woman, she becomes alone
 Fair to herself, but foul to every one. 650
 If in a man it once have taken place,
 He is a fool, or dotes, or wants a face
 To win a woman, and I think it be
 No virtue, but a mere necessity.
 Heaven's powers deny it ! Swain (quoth she) have done, 655
 Strive not to bring that in derision,
 Which whosoe'er detracts in setting forth,
 Doth truly derogate from his own worth.
 It is a thing which heaven to all hath lent
 To be their virtue's chiefest ornament : 660
 Which whoso wants is well compar'd to these False tables wrought by Alcibiades,

639.—Adamant, the magnet ; the loadstone.

647.—Constance, constancy.

Which noted well of all were found t'have been
 Most fair without but most deform'd within.
 Then, shepherd, know, that I intend to be 665
 As true to one as he is false to me.

To one? (quoth he) why so? Maids pleasure take
 To see a thousand languish for their sake :
 Women desire for lovers of each sort,
 And why not you? Th' amorous swain for sport ; 670
 The lad that drives the greatest flock to field
 Will buskins, gloves, and other fancies yield ;
 The gallant swain will save you from the jaws
 Of ravenous bears, and from the lions' paws.
 Believe what I propound ; do many choose ; 675
 "The least herb in the field serves for some use."

Nothing persuaded, nor assuag'd by this,
 Was fairest Marine, or her heaviness :
 But pray'd the shepherd, as he e'er did hope
 His silly sheep should fearless have the scope 680
 Of all the shadows that the trees do lend,
 From reynard's stealth, when Titan doth ascend,
 And run his midway course, to leave her there,
 And to his bleating charge again repair.
 He condescended ; left her by the brook, 685
 And to the swain and 's sheep himself betook.

He gone, she with herself thus 'gan to sain :
 Alas ! poor Marine, think'st thou to attain
 His love by sitting here? or can the fire

Be quench'd with wood? can we allay desire 690
 By wanting what's desired? O that breath,
 The cause of life, should be the cause of death!
 That who is shipwreck'd on love's hidden shelf,
 Doth live to others, dies unto herself.

Why might not I attempt by death as yet 695
 To gain that freedom which I could not get,
 Being hinder'd heretofore? A time as free,
 A place as fit offers itself to me,

Whose seed of ill is grown to such a height,
 That makes the earth groan to support his weight. 700

Whoso is lull'd asleep with Midas' treasures,
 And only fears by death to lose life's pleasures;
 Let them fear death: but since my fault is such,
 And only fault, that I have lov'd too much,
 On joys of life why should I stand? For those 705
 Which I ne'er had I surely cannot lose.

Admit a while I to these thoughts consented,
 "Death can be but deferred, not prevented."

Then raging with delay, her tears that fell
 Usher'd her way, and she into a well 710
 Straightways leapt after. "O! how desperation
 Attends upon the mind enthral'd to passion!"

The fall of her did make the god below,
 Starting, to wonder whence that noise should grow;
 Whether some ruder clown in spite did fling 715
 A lamb, untimely fall'n, into his spring:

693.—Shelf, rock.

716.—Untimely fall'n, stillborn.

And if it were, he solemnly then swore
 His spring should flow some other way : no more
 Should it in wanton manner e'er be seen
 To writhe in knots, or give a gown of green 720
 Unto their meadows, nor be seen to play,
 Nor drive the rushy mills that in his way
 The shepherds made ; but rather for their lot,
 Send them red waters that their sheep should rot ;
 And with such moorish springs embrace their field, 725
 That it should nought but moss and rushes yield.
 Upon each hillock, where the merry boy
 Sits piping in the shades his notes of joy,
 He'd show his anger by some flood at hand,
 And turn the same into a running sand. 730
 Upon the oak, the plum-tree, and the holm,
 The stock-dove and the blackbird should not come,
 Whose muting on those trees do make to grow
 Rots-curing hyphear,* and the mistletoe. [735
 Nor shall this help their sheep, whose stomach fails,
 By tying knots of wool near to their tails :
 But as the place next to the knot doth die,
 So shall it all the body mortify.
 Thus spake the god : but when as in the water [740
 The corps came sinking down, he spied the matter,
 And catching softly in his arms the maid,
 He brought her up, and having gently laid

731.—Holm, the holly.

733.—Muting, dropping dung (of birds).

734.—Hyphear, the Latin name for mistletoe.

Her on his bank, did presently command
 Those waters in her to come forth : at hand
 They straight came gushing out, and did contest 745
 Which chiefly should obey their god's behest.
 This done, her then pale lips he straight held ope,
 And from his silver hair let fall a drop
 Into her mouth of such an excellence,
 That call'd back life which griev'd to part from thence, 750
 Being for troth assur'd that than this one,
 She ne'er possess'd a fairer mansion.
 Then did the god her body forwards steep,
 And cast her for a while into a sleep ;
 Sitting still by her did his full view take 755
 Of Nature's masterpiece. Here for her sake,
 My pipe in silence as of right shall mourn,
 Till from the wat'ring we again return.

753. — Steep, to lay down lengthways.

THE SECOND SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Oblivion's spring, and Dory's love,
 With fair Marina's rape, first move
 Mine oaten pipe, which after sings
 The birth of two renowned springs.

Now till the sun shall leave us to our rest,
 And Cynthia have her brother's place possess'd,
 I shall go on : and first in diff ring stripe,
 The flood-god's speech thus tune on oaten pipe.

Or mortal, or a power above, 5

Enrag'd by fury, or by love,

Or both, I know not ; such a deed

Thou wouldst effected, that I bleed

To think thereon : alas ! poor elf,

What, grown a traitor to thyself? 10

This face, this hair, this hand so pure

Were not ordain'd for nothing, sure.

Nor was it meant so sweet a breath

3.—Stripe, measure.

Should be expos'd by such a death ;
 But rather in some lover's breast 15
 Be given up, the place that best
 Befits a lover yield his soul.
 Nor should those mortals e'er control
 The gods, that in their wisdom sage
 Appointed have what pilgrimage 20
 Each one should run : and why should men
 Abridge the journey set by them ?
 But much I wonder any wight
 If he did turn his outward sight
 Into his inward, dar'd to act 25
 Her death, whose body is compact
 Of all the beauties ever Nature
 Laid up in store for earthly creature.
 No savage beast can be so cruel
 To rob the earth of such a jewel. 30
 Rather the stately unicorn
 Would in his breast enraged scorn,
 That maids committed to his charge
 By any beast in forest large
 Should so be wronged. Satyrs rude 35
 Durst not attempt, or e'er intrude
 With such a mind the flow'ry balks
 Where harmless virgins have their walks.
 Would she be won with me to stay,
 My waters should bring from the sea 40

37.—Balks, a ridge of land left by the plough in ploughing.

The coral red, as tribute due,
 And roundest pearls of Orient hue :
 Or in the richer veins of ground
 Should seek for her the diamond.
 And whereas now unto my spring 45
 They nothing else but gravel bring,
 They should within a mine of gold
 In piercing manner long time hold,
 And having it to dust well wrought,
 By them it hither should be brought ; 50
 With which I'll pave and overspread
 My bottom, where her foot shall tread.
 The best of fishes in my flood
 Shall give themselves to be her food.
 The trout, the dace, the pike, the bream, 55
 The eel, that loves the troubled stream,
 The miller's thumb, the hiding loach,
 The perch, the ever-nibbling roach,
 The shoats with whom is Tavy fraught,
 The foolish gudgeon, quickly caught, 60
 And last the little minnow-fish,
 Whose chief delight in gravel is.

In right she cannot me despise
 Because so low mine empire lies.
 For I could tell how Nature's store 65
 Of majesty appeareth more
 In waters than in all the rest

59.—Shoats, or shotes, a kind of trout.

Of elements. It seem'd her best
 To give the waves most strength and power :
 For they do swallow and devour 70
 The earth ; the waters quench and kill
 The flames of fire : and mounting still
 Up in the air, are seen to be
 As challenging a seignorie
 Within the heavens, and to be one 75
 That should have like dominion.
 They be a ceiling and a floor
 Of clouds, caus'd by the vapours' store
 Arising from them, vital spirit
 By which all things their life inherit 80
 From them is stopped, kept asunder.
 And what's the reason else of thunder,
 Of lightning's flashes all about,
 That with such violence break out,
 Causing such troubles and such jars, 85
 As with itself the world had wars?
 And can there anything appear
 More wonderful than in the air
 Congealed waters oft to spy
 Continuing pendant in the sky ? 90
 Till falling down in hail or snow,
 They make those mortal wights below
 To run, and ever help desire
 From his foe element the fire,

74.—Seignorie, domain.

Which fearing then to come abroad, 95
 Within doors maketh his abode ;
 Or falling down ofttime in rain,
 Doth give green liveries to the plain,
 Make[s] shepherds' lambs fit for the dish,
 And giveth nutriment to fish ; 100
 Which nourisheth all things of worth
 The earth produceth and brings forth ;
 And therefore well considering
 The nature of it in each thing :
 As when the teeming earth doth grow 105
 So hard, that none can plough nor sow,
 Her breast it doth so mollify,
 That it not only comes to be
 More easy for the share and ox,
 But that in harvest times the shocks 110
 Of Ceres' hanging eared corn
 Doth fill the hovel and the barn.
 To trees and plants I comfort give,
 By me they fructify and live :
 For first ascending from beneath 115
 Into the sky, with lively breath,
 I thence am furnish'd, and bestow
 The same on herbs that are below.
 So that by this each one may see
 I cause them spring and multiply. 120
 Who seeth this can do no less,
 Than of his own accord confess,
 That notwithstanding all the strength

The earth enjoys in breadth and length,
 She is beholding to each stream, 125
 And hath received all from them.
 Her love to him she then must give
 By whom herself doth chiefly live.
 This being spoken by this water's god,
 He straightway in his hand did take his rod, 130
 And struck it on his bank, wherewith the flood
 Did such a roaring make within the wood,
 That straight the nymph* who then sat on her shore, * The watery
 Knew there was somewhat to be done in store : nymph
 And therefore hasting to her brother's spring 135 that spoke
 She spied what caus'd the waters' echoing. to Remond.
 Saw where fair Marine fast asleep did lie,
 Whilst that the god still viewing her sat by :
 Who when he saw his sister nymph draw near,
 He thus 'gan tune his voice unto her ear : 140
 My fairest sister (for we come
 Both from the swelling Thetis' womb)
 The reason why of late I strook
 My ruling wand upon my brook,
 Was for this purpose : Late this maid 145
 Which on my bank asleep is laid,
 Was by herself or other wight
 Cast in my spring, and did affright
 With her late fall the fish that take
 Their chiefest pleasure in my lake : 150
 Of all the fry within my deep,
 None durst out of their dwellings peep.

The trout within the weeds did scud,
 The eel him hid within the mud.
 Yea, from this fear I was not free ; 155
 For as I musing sat to see
 How that the pretty pebbles round
 Came with my spring from underground,
 And how the waters issuing
 Did make them dance about my spring ; 160
 The noise thereof did me appall :
 That starting upward therewithal,
 I in my arms her body caught,
 And both to light and life her brought :
 Then cast her in a sleep you see. 165
 But, brother, to the cause (quoth she)
 Why by your raging waters wild
 Am I here called? Thetis' child,
 Replied the god, for thee I sent,
 That when her time of sleep is spent, 170
 I may commit her to thy gage,
 Since women best know women's rage.
 Meanwhile, fair nymph, accompany
 My spring with thy sweet harmony ;
 And we will make her soul to take 175
 Some pleasure, which is said to wake,
 Although the body hath his rest.
 She gave consent, and each of them address'd
 Unto their part. The wat'ry nymph did sing

171.—Gage, here used in the sense of "temporary keeping."

Song 2.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 53

In manner of a pretty questioning : 180

The god made answer to what she propounded,
Whilst from the spring a pleasant music sounded,
Making each shrub in silence to adore them,
Taking their subject from what lay before them.

Nymph. What's that, compact of earth, infus'd with air ; 185

A certain made full with uncertainties ;
Sway'd by the motion of each several sphere ;
Who's fed with nought but infelicities ;
Endures nor heat nor cold ; is like a swan,
That this hour sings, next dies ? 190

God. It is a man.

Nymph. What's he, born to be sick, so always dying,
That's guided by inevitable fate ;

That comes in weeping, and that goes out crying ;
Whose calendar of woes is still in date ; 195
Whose life's a bubble, and in length a span ;
A concert still in discords ?

God. 'Tis a man.

Nymph. What's he, whose thoughts are still quell'd in th' event,

Though ne'er so lawful, by an opposite, 200
Hath all things fleeting, nothing permanent,
And at his ears wears still a parasite :

Hath friends in wealth, or wealthy friends, who can
In want prove mere illusions?

God. 'Tis a man. 205

Nymph. What's he, that what he is not strives to seem;

That doth support an Atlas-weight of care;
That of an outward good doth best esteem,
And looketh not within how solid they are;
That doth not virtuous, but the richest scan, 210
Learning and worth by wealth?

God. It is a man.

Nymph. What's that possessor, which of good makes bad;

And what is worst, makes choice still for the best;
That grieveth most to think of what he had, 215
And of his chiefest loss accounteth least;
That doth not what he ought, but what he can;
Whose fancy's ever boundless?

God. 'Tis a man.

The first woman is feigned to be named Pandora, i. a creature framed of the concurrence of the gifts and ornaments of all

Nymph. But what is it wherein Dame Nature wrought
The best of works, the only frame of Heaven; [220
And having long to find a present sought,
Wherein the world's whole beauty might be given,
She did resolve in it all arts to summon,
To join with Nature's framing? 225

God. 'Tis this woman.

Nymph. If beauty be a thing to be admired,
 And if admiring draw to it affection,
 And what we do affect is most desired,
 What wight is he to love denies subjection? 230
 And can his thoughts within himself confine?

Marine that waking lay, said : Celandine.
 He is the man that hates which some admire ;
 He is the wight that loathes whom most desire ;
 'Tis only he to love denies subjecting, 235
 And but himself, thinks none is worth affecting.
 Unhappy me the while, accurs'd my fate,
 That Nature gives no love where she gave hate.
 The wat'ry rulers then perceived plain,
 Nipp'd with the winter of love's frost, disdain, 240
 This nonpareil of beauty had been led
 To do an act which Envy pitied :
 Therefore in pity did confer together
 What physic best might cure this burning fever.
 At last found out that in a grove be'ow, 245
 Where shadowing sycamores past number grow,
 A fountain takes his journey to the main,
 Whose liquor's nature was so sovereign
 (Like to the wondrous well and famous spring,
 Which in Bœotia* hath his issuing), 250
 That whoso of it doth but only taste,
 All former memory from him doth waste ;
 Not changing any other work of Nature,
 But doth endow the drinker with a feature

* Pliny writes of two springs rising in Bœotia,
 the first helping memory, called μνήμη:
 the latter causing oblivion, called ληθή.

More lovely. Fair Medea took from hence 255
 Some of this water, by whose quintessence
 Æson from age came back to youth. This known,
 The god thus spake :

Nymph, be thine own,
 And after mine. This goddess here
 (For she's no less) will bring thee where 260
 Thou shalt acknowledge springs have do[n]e
 As much for thee as any one.
 Which ended, and thou gotten free,
 If thou wilt come and live with me,
 No shepherd's daughter, nor his wife, 265
 Shall boast them of a better life.
 Meanwhile I leave thy thoughts at large,
 Thy body to my sister's charge ;
 Whilst I into my spring do dive
 To see that they do not deprive 270
 The meadows near, which much do thirst,
 Thus heated by the sun. May first (Quoth Marine) swains give lambs to thee ;
 And may thy flood have seignorie
 Of all floods else, and to thy fame 275
 Meet greater springs, yet keep thy name.
 May never evet nor the toad
 Within thy banks make their abode !
 Taking thy journey from the sea,

274.—Seignorie, lordship, dominion.

277.—Evet, or hibit, the Devonshire name of the newt.

May'st thou ne'er happen in thy way 280
 On nitre or on brimstone mine,
 To spoil thy taste ! this spring of thine
 Let it of nothing taste but earth,
 And salt conceived, in their birth
 Be ever fresh ! Let no man dare 285
 To spoil thy fish, make lock or ware ;
 But on thy margent still let dwell
 Those flowers which have the sweetest smell.
 And let the dust upon thy strand
 Become like Tagus' golden sand. 290
 Let as much good betide to thee,
 As thou hast favour show'd to me.

Thus said, in gentle paces they remove,
 And hasten'd onward to the shady grove,
 Where both arriv'd ; and having found the rock, 295
 Saw how this precious water it did lock.
 As he whom avarice possesseth most,
 Drawn by necessity unto his cost,
 Doth drop by piecemeal down his prison'd gold,
 And seems unwilling to let go his hold : 300
 So the strong rock the water long time stops,
 And by degrees lets it fall down in drops.
 Like hoarding housewives that do mould their food,
 And keep from others what doth them no good.
 The drops within a cistern fell of stone, 305
 Which fram'd by Nature, Art had never one

Half part so curious. Many spells then using,
 The water's nymph 'twixt Marine's lips infusing
 Part of this water, she might straight perceive
 How soon her troubled thoughts began to leave 310
 Her love-swoll'n breast ; and that her inward flame
 Was clean assuaged, and the very name
 Of Celandine forgotten ; did scarce know
 If there were such a thing as love or no.
 And sighing, therewithal threw in the air 315
 All former love, all sorrow, all despair ;
 And all the former causes of her moan
 Did therewith bury in oblivion.

Then must'ring up her thoughts, grown vagabonds,
 Press'd to relieve her inward bleeding wounds, 320
 She had as quickly all things past forgotten,
 As men do monarchs that in earth lie rotten.
 As one new born she seem'd, so all-discerning,
 " Though things long learn'd are the long'st unlearn-
 ing."

Then walk'd they to a grove but near at hand, 325
 Where fiery Titan had but small command,
 Because the leaves, conspiring, kept his beams,
 For fear of hurting (when he's in extremcs)
 The under-flowers, which did enrich the ground
 With sweeter scents than in Arabia found. 330
 The earth doth yield (which they through pores exhale)

Earth's best of odours, th'aromatical :
 Like to that smell which oft our sense descries

Within a field which long unploughed lies,
 Somewhat before the setting of the sun ; 335
 And where the rainbow in the horizon
 Doth pitch her tips : or as when in the prime,
 The earth being troubled with a drought long time,
 The hand of Heaven his spongy clouds doth strain,
 And throws into her lap a shower of rain : 340
 She sendeth up (conceived from the sun)
 A sweet perfume and exhalation.
 Not all the ointments brought from Delos' Isle,
 Nor from the confines of seven-headed Nile,
 Nor that brought whence Phœnicians have abodes, 345
 Nor Cyprus' wild vine-flowers, nor that of Rhodes,
 Nor roses' oil from Naples, Capua,
 Saffron confected in Cilicia,
 Nor that of quinces, nor of marjoram,
 That ever from the Isle of Coös came ; 350
 Nor these, nor any else, though ne'er so rare,
 Could with this place for sweetest smells compare.
 There stood the elm, whose shade so mildly dim
 Doth nourish all that groweth under him ;
 Cypress that like pyramids run topping, 355
 And hurt the least of any by their dropping ;
 The alder, whose fat shadow nourisheth,
 Each plant set near to him long flourisheth ;
 The heavy-headed plane-tree, by whose shade
 The grass grows thickest, men are fresher made ; 360

337.—Prime, spring.

343.—Confectet, prepared as sweetmeats.

The oak, that best endures the thunder-shocks ;
 The everlasting eben, cedar, box ;
 The olive that in wainscot never cleaves ;
 The amorous vine, which in the elm still weaves ;
 The lotus, juniper, where worms ne'er enter ; 365
 The pine, with whom men through the ocean venter ;
 The warlike yew, by which (more than the lance)
 The strong-arm'd English spirits conquer'd France.
 Amongst the rest the tamarisk there stood,
 For housewives' besoms only known most good ; 370
 The cold-place-loving birch, and service-tree ;
 The walnut loving vales, and mulberry ;
 The maple, ash, that do delight in fountains
 Which have their currents by the sides of mountains ;
 The laurel, myrtle, ivy, date, which hold 375
 Their leaves all winter, be it ne'er so cold ;
 The fir, that oftentimes doth rosin drop ;
 The beech, that scales the welkin with his top ;
 All these, and thousand more within this grove,
 By all the industry of Nature strove 380
 To frame an harbour that might keep within it
 The best of beauties that the world hath in it.

Here ent'ring, at the entrance of which shroud,
 The sun, half angry, hid him in a cloud,
 As raging that a grove should from his sight 385
 Lock up a beauty whence himself had light,

369.—Tamarisk, a shrub growing freely on the south coast of England. See Note.

371.—Service-tree, the wild pear-tree.

The flowers pull'd in their heads as being 'sham'd
 Their beauties by the others were defam'd.

Near to this wood there lay a pleasant mead,
 Where fairies often did their measures tread, 390
 Which in the meadow made such circles g[r]een,
 As if with garlands it had crowned been,
 Or like the circle where the signs we track,
 And learned shepherds call't the Zodiac :
 Within one of these rounds was to be seen 395
 A hillock rise, where oft the fairy-queen
 At twilight sat, and did command her elves
 To pinch those maids that had not swept their shelves ;

And further, if by maidens' oversight
 Within doors water were not brought at night ; 400
 Or if they spread no table, set no bread,
 They should have nips from toe unto the head ;
 And for the maid that had perform'd each thing,
 She in the water-pail bade leave a ring.

Upon this hill there sat a lovely swain, 405
 As if that Nature thought it great disdain
 That he should (so through her his genius told him)
 Take equal place with swains, since she did hold him
 Her chiefest work, and therefore thought it fit
 That with inferiors he should never sit. 410
 Narcissus' change sure Ovid clean mistook,
 He died not looking in a crystal brook,
 But (as those which in emulation gaze)
 He pin'd to death by looking on this face.

When he stood fishing by some river's brim, 415
 The fish would leap, more for a sight of him
 Than for the fly. The eagle, highest bred,
 Was taking him once up for Ganymede.
 The shag-hair'd satyrs, and the tripping fawns,
 With all the troop that frolic on the lawns, 420
 Would come and gaze on him, as who should say
 They had not seen his like this many a day.
 Yea, Venus knew no difference 'twixt these twain,
 Save Adon was a hunter, this a swain.
 The wood's sweet quiristers from spray to spray 425
 Would hop them nearer him, and then there stay :
 Each joying greatly from his little heart
 That they with his sweet reed might bear a part.
 This was the boy (the poets did mistake)
 To whom bright Cynthia so much love did make ; 430
 And promis'd for his love no scornful eyes
 Should ever see her more in horned guise :
 But she at his command would as of duty
 Become as full of light as he of beauty.
 Lucina at his birth for midwife stuck ; 435
 And Cytherea nurs'd and gave him suck,
 Who to that end, once dove-drawn from the sea,
 Her full paps dropp'd, whence came the milky-way.
 And as when Plato did i' th' cradle thrive,
 Bees to his lips brought honey from their hive : 440
 So to this boy they came, I know not whether

They brought, or from his lips did honey gather.
 The wood-nymphs oftentimes would busied be,
 And pluck for him the blushing strawberry,
 Making of them a bracelet on a bent, 445
 Which for a favour to this swain they sent.
 Sitting in shades, the sun would oft by skips
 Steal through the boughs, and seize upon his lips.
 The chiefest cause the sun did condescend
 To Phaeton's request was to this end, 450
 That whilst the other did his horses rein,
 He might slide from his sphere and court this swain,
 Whose sparkling eyes vied lustre with the stars,
 The truest centre of all circulars.
 In brief, if any man in skill were able 455
 To finish up Apelles' half-done table,
 This boy (the man left out) were fittest sure
 To be the pattern of that portraiture.
 Piping he sat, as merry as his look,
 And by him lay his bottle and his hook. 460
 His buskins (edg'd with silver) were of silk,
 Which held a leg more white than morning's milk.
 Those buskins he had got and brought away
 For dancing best upon the revel day.
 His oaten reed did yield forth such sweet notes, 465
 Joined in concert with the birds' shrill throats,

445.—Bent, a long coarse grass.

449.—Condescend, consent.

455 — Table, a picture of Aphrodite.

That equaliz'd the harmony of spheres,
 A music that would ravish choicest ears.
 Long look'd they on, (who would not long look on,
 That such an object had to look upon?) 470
 Till at the last the nymph did Marine send
 To ask the nearest way whereby to wend
 To those fair walks where sprung Marina's ill,
 Whilst she would stay : Marine obey'd her will,
 And hasten'd towards him (who would not do so, 475
 That such a pretty journey had to go?)
 Sweetly she came, and with a modest blush,
 Gave him the day, and then accosted thus :
 Fairest of men, that (whilst thy flock doth feed)
 Sitt'st sweetly piping on thine oaten reed 480
 Upon this little berry (some ycleep
 A hillock) void of care, as are thy sheep
 Devoid of spots, and sure on all this green
 A fairer flock as yet was never seen :
 Do me this favour (men should favour maids) 485
 That whatsoever path directly leads,
 And void of danger, thou to me do show,
 That by it to the Marish I might go.
 Marriage ! (quoth he) mistaking what she said,
 Nature's perfection : thou most fairest maid, 490
 (If any fairer than the fairest may be)
 Come sit thee down by me ; know, lovely lady,

481.—Berry, barrow, or mound. Berry, Berry-Head, Berry Pomeroy, all in Devonshire, are perhaps instances of its use.

488.—Marish, marsh.

Love is the readiest way : if ta'en aright,
 You may attain thereto full long ere night.
 The maiden thinking he of marish spoke, 495
 And not of marriage, straightway did invoke,
 And pray'd the shepherds' god might always keep Him from all danger, and from wolves his sheep.
 Wishing withal that in the prime of spring
 Each sheep he had two lambs might yearly bring. 500
 But yet (quoth she) arede, good gentle swain,
 If in the dale below, or on yond plain ;
 Or is the village situate in a grove,
 Through which my way lies, and ycleeped Love ?
 Nor on yond plain, nor in this neighbouring wood ;
 Nor in the dale where glides the silver flood ; [505
 But like a beacon on a hill so high,
 That every one may see 't which passeth by,
 Is Love yplac'd : there's nothing can it hide,
 Although of you as yet 'tis unespied. 510
 But on which hill (quoth she) pray tell me true ?
 Why here (quoth he) it sits and talks to you.
 And are you Love (quoth she ?) fond swain, adieu,
 You guide me wrong, my way lies not by you.
 Though not your way, yet you may lie by me : 515
 Nymph, with a shepherd thou as merrily
 May'st love and live, as with the greatest lord.
 "Greatness doth never most content afford."
 I love thee only, not affect world's pelf ;

501.—Arede, explain.

"She is not lov'd that's lov'd not for herself." 520
 How many shepherds' daughters, who in duty
 To griping fathers have enthrall'd their beauty,
 To wait upon the gout, to walk when pleases
 Old January halt. O that diseases [525
 Should link with youth! She that hath such a mate
 Is like two twins born both incorporate :
 Th' one living, th' other dead : the living twin
 Must needs be slain through noisomeness of him
 He carrieth with him : such are their estates,
 Who merely marry wealth and not their mates. 530
 As ebbing waters freely slide away
 To pay their tribute to the raging sea ;
 When meeting with the flood they jostle stout,
 Whether the one shall in, or th' other out : [535
 Till the strong flood new power of waves doth bring,
 And drives the river back into his spring :
 So Marine's words off'ring to take their course,
 By Love then ent'ring, were kept back, and force
 To it, his sweet face, eyes, and tongue assign'd,
 And threw them back again into her mind. 540
 "How hard it is to leave and not to do
 That which by nature we are prone unto !
 We hardly can (alas why not?) discuss,
 When Nature hath decreed it must be thus.
 It is a maxim held of all, known plain : 545
 Thrust Nature off with forks, she'll turn again."
 Blithe Doridon (so men this shepherd hight)
 Seeing his goddess in a silent plight,

("Love often makes the speech's organs mute,")
 Began again thus to renew his suit : 550

If by my words your silence hath been such,
 Faith I am sorry I have spoke so much.
 Bar I those lips? fit to be th' utt'ers when
 The heavens would parley with the chief of men ;
 Fit to direct (a tongue all hearts convinces) 555
 When best of scribes writes to the best of princes.
 Were mine like yours, of choicest words completest,
 "I'd show how grief's a thing weighs down the greatest ;

The best of forms (who knows not) grief doth taint it,
 The skilfull'st pencil never yet could paint it ;" 560
 And reason good, since no man yet could find
 What figure represents a grieved mind.

Methinks a troubled thought is thus express'd,
 To be a chaos rude and indigest :
 Where all do rule, and yet none bears chief sway: 565
 Check'd only by a power that's more than they.

This do I speak, since to this every lover
 That thus doth love, is thus still given over.

If that you say you will not, cannot love : [570

Oh heavens ! for what cause then do you here move?

Are you not fram'd of that expertest mould

For whom all in this round concordance hold?

Or are you framed of some other fashion,

And have a form and heart, but yet no passion?

572.—Round, globe, world.

It cannot be : for then unto what end 575
 Did the best workman this great work intend ?
 Not that by minds' commerce, and joint estate,
 The world's continuers still should propagate ?
 Yea, if that Reason (regent of the senses)
 Have but a part amongst your excellences, 580
 She'll tell you what you call Virginity,
 Is fitly liken'd to a barren tree ;
 Which when the gard'ner on it pains bestows,
 To graft an imp thereon, in time it grows
 To such perfection that it yearly brings 585
 As goodly fruit as any tree that springs.
 Believe me, maiden, vow no chastity :
 For maidens but imperfect creatures be.

Alas, poor boy (quoth Marine), have the Fates
 Exempted no degrees ? are no estates 590
 Free from Love's rage ? Be rul'd, unhappy swain ;
 Call back thy spirits, and recollect again
 Thy vagrant wits. I tell thee for a truth
 " Love is a siren that doth shipwreck youth."
 Be well advis'd ; thou entertain'st a guest 595
 That is the harbinger of all unrest :
 Which like the viper's young, that lick the earth,
 Eat out the breeder's womb to get a birth.

Faith (quoth the boy), I know there cannot be Danger in loving or enjoying thee. 600
 For what cause were things made and called good,

But to be loved? If you understood
 The birds that prattle here, you would know then,
 As birds woo birds, maids should be woo'd of men.
 But I want power to woo, since what was mine 605
 Is fled, and lie as vassals at your shrine:
 And since what's mine is yours, let that same move,
 Although in me you see nought worthy love.
 Marine about to speak, forth of a sling
 (Fortune to all misfortunes plies her wing 610
 More quick and speedy) came a sharpen'd flint,
 Which in the fair boy's neck made such a dint,
 That crimson blood came streaming from the wound,
 And he fell down into a deadly swoond.
 The blood ran all along where it did fall, 615
 And could not find a place of burial:
 But where it came, it there congealed stood,
 As if the Earth loath'd to drink guiltless blood.

Gold-hair'd Apollo, Muses' sacred king,
 Whose praise in Delphos' Isle doth ever ring, 620
 Physic's first founder, whose art's excellence
 Extracted Nature's chiefest quintessence,
 Unwilling that a thing of such a worth
 Should so be lost, straight sent a dragon forth
 To fetch this blood, and he perform'd the same: 625
 And now apothecaries give it name,
 From him that fetch'd it—(doctors know it good
 In physic's use)—and call it dragon's blood.
 Some of the blood by chance did downward fall,
 And by a vein got to a mineral, 630

Whence came a red : decayed dames infuse it
 With Venice ceruse, and for painting use it.
 Marine astonish'd (most unhappy maid),
 O'ercome with fear, and at the view afraid,
 Fell down into a trance, eyes lost their sight, 635
 Which being open made all darkness light.
 Her blood ran to her heart, or life to feed,
 Or loathing to behold so vile a deed.

And as when winter doth the earth array
 In silver suit, and when the night and day 640
 Are in dissension, night locks up the ground,
 Which by the help of day is oft unbound,
 A shepherd's boy with bow and shafts address'd,
 Ranging the fields, having once pierc'd the breast
 Of some poor fowl, doth with the blow straight rush
 To catch the bird lies panting in the bush : [645
 So rush'd this striker in, up Marine took,
 And hasten'd with her to a near-hand brook.

Old shepherds sain (old shepherds sooth have sain)
 Two rivers* took their issue from the main, 650
 Both near together, and each bent his race,
 Which of them both should first behold the face
 Of radiant Phœbus : one of them in gliding
 Chanc'd on a vein where nitre had abiding :
 The other, loathing that her purer wave 655
 Should be defil'd with that the nitre gave,

* An expression of the natures of two rivers rising near together, and differing in their tastes and manner of running.

632.—Venice ceruse, white-lead, used by ladies for painting their faces and bosoms.

Fled fast away, the other follow'd fast,
 Till both been in a rock ymet at last.
 As seemed best, the rock did first deliver
 Out of his hollow sides the purer river, 660
 (As if it taught those men in honour clad
 To help the virtuous and suppress the bad,)
 Which gotten loose, did softly glide away.
 As men from earth, to earth ; from sea, to sea ;
 So rivers run : and that from whence both came 665
 Takes what she gave : waves, earth : but leaves a name.

As waters have their course, and in their place
 Succeeding streams will out, so is man's race :
 The name doth still survive, and cannot die,
 Until the channels stop, or spring grow dry. 670

As I have seen upon a bridal day
 Full many maids clad in their best array,
 In honour of the bride come with their flaskets
 Fill'd full with flowers : others in wicker-baskets
 Bring from the marish rushes to o'erspread 675
 The ground whereon to church the lovers tread ;
 Whilst that the quaintest youth of all the plain
 Ushers their way with many a piping strain :
 So, as in joy, at this fair river's birth,
 Triton came up a channel with his mirth, 680

673.—Flaskets, clothes-baskets.

675.—Marish, marsh.

677.—Quaintest, neat, elegant, or ingenious.

And call'd the neighb'ring nymphs each in her turn
 To pour their pretty rivulets from their urn.
 To wait upon this new-deliver'd spring,
 Some running through the meadows, with them bring
 Cowslip and mint : and 'tis another's lot 685
 To light upon some gard'ner's curious knot,
 Whence she upon her breast (love's sweet repose)
 Doth bring the queen of flowers, the English rose.
 Some from the fen bring reeds, wild-thyme from downs ;

Some from a grove the bay that poets crowns ; 690
 Some from an aged rock the moss hath torn,
 And leaves him naked unto winter's storm ;
 Another from her banks (in mere goodwill)
 Brings nutriment for fish, the camomile.
 Thus all bring somewhat, and do overspread 695
 The way the spring unto the sea doth tread.

This while the flood which yet the rock up-pent,
 And suffer'd not with jocund merriment
 To tread rounds in his spring, came rushing forth,
 As angry that his waves (he thought) of worth 700
 Should not have liberty, nor help the prime.
 And as some ruder swain composing rhyme,
 Spends many a grey goose-quill unto the handle,
 Buries within his socket many a candle,
 Blots paper by the quire, and dries up ink, 705

686.—Knot, garden plat.691.—An aged rock, etc. See Note.

As Xerxes' army did whole rivers drink,
 Hoping thereby his name his work should raise
 That it should live until the last of days :
 Which finished, he boldly doth address
 Him and his works to undergo the press ; 710
 When lo (O Fate !) his work not seeming fit
 To walk in equipage with better wit,
 Is kept from light, there gnawn by moths and worms,
 At which he frets : right so this river storms :
 But broken forth ; as Tavy creeps upon 715
 The western vales of fertile Albion,
 Here dashes roughly on an aged rock,
 That his intended passage doth up-lock ;
 There intricately 'mongst the woods doth wander,
 Losing himself in many a wry meander : 720
 Here amorously bent, clips some fair mead ;
 And then dispers'd in rills, doth measures tread
 Upon her bosom 'mongst her flow'ry ranks :
 There in another place bears down the banks
 Of some day-labouring wretch : here meets a rill, 725
 And with their forces join'd cuts out a mill
 Into an island, then in jocund guise
 Surveys his conquest, lauds his enterprise :
 Here digs a cave at some high mountain's foot :
 There undermines an oak, tears up his root : 730
 Thence rushing to some country-farm at hand,
 Breaks o'er the yeoman's mounds, sweeps from his land

712.—To walk in equipage, etc. See Note.

729.—Here digs a cave, etc. See Note.

His harvest hope of wheat, of rye, or pease :
 And makes that channel which was shepherd's lease :
 Here, as our wicked age doth sacrilege, 735
 Helps down an abbey, then a natural bridge
 By creeping underground he frameth out,
 As who should say he either went about
 To right the wrong he did, or hid his face,
 For having done a deed so vile and base : 740
 So ran this river on, and did bestir
 Himself to find his fellow-traveller.

But th' other fearing lest her noise might show
 What path she took, which way her streams did flow :
 As some wayfaring man strays thro' a wood, 745
 Where beasts of prey, thirsting for human blood,
 Lurk in their dens, he softly list'ning goes,
 Not trusting to his heels, treads on his toes ;
 Dreads every noise he hears, thinks each small bush
 To be a beast that would upon him rush ; 750
 Feareth to die, and yet his wind doth smother ;
 Now leaves this path, takes that, then to another ;
 Such was her course. This feared to be found,
 The other not to find, swells o'er each mound,
 Roars, rages, foams, against a mountain dashes, 755
 And in recoil makes meadows standing plashes :
 Yet finds not what he seeks in all his way,
 But in despair runs headlong to the sea.

734.—Lease, pasture.736.—Helps down an abbey, etc. See Note.756.—Plashes, pools.

Song 2.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 75

This was the cause them by tradition taught,
Why one flood ran so fast, th' other so soft, 760
Both from one head. Unto the rougher stream, (Crown'd by that meadow's flow'ry diadem,
Where Doridon lay hurt) the cruel swain
Hurries the shepherdess, where having lain
Her in a boat like the cannows of Inde, 765
Some silly trough of wood, or some tree's rind,
Puts from the shore, and leaves the weeping strand,
Intends an act by water, which the land
Abhorr'd to bolster ; yea, the guiltless earth
Loath'd to be midwife to so vile a birth : 770
Which to relate I am enforc'd to wrong
The modest blushes of my maiden-song.
Then each fair nymph whom Nature doth endow
With beauty's cheek, crown'd with a shamefast brow ;
Whose well-tun'd ears, chaste-object-loving eyne 775
Ne'er heard nor saw the works of Aretine ;*
Who ne'er came on the Cytherean shelf,
But is as true as Chastity itself ;
Where hated Impudence ne'er set her seed ;
Where lust lies not veil'd in a virgin's weed : 780

* An obscene Italian poet.

765.—Cannows, canoes.

769.—Bolster, support.

777.—Cytherean shelf, Cythera, a very rocky island lying off the south-eastern extremity of Laconia, represented in the Greek and Latin poets as one of the favourite residences of Aphrodite.

Let her withdraw. Let each young shepherdling
Walk by, or stop his ear, the whilst I sing.

But ye, whose blood, like kids upon a plain,
Doth skip and dance lavoltas in each vein ; [785
Whose breasts are swoll'n with the venerean game,
And warm yourselves at lust's alluring flame ;
Who dare to act as much as men dare think,
And wallowing lie within a sensual sink ;
Whose feigned gestures do entrap our youth
With an apparency of simple truth ; 790
Insatiate gulfs, in your defective part
By Art help Nature, and by Nature, Art :
Lend me your ears, and I will touch a string
Shall lull your sense asleep the while I sing.

But stay : methinks I hear something in me 795
That bids me keep the bounds of modesty ;
Says, " Each man's voice to that is quickly mov'd
Which of himself is best of all belov'd ;
By utt'ring what thou know'st less glory's got,
Than by concealing what thou knowest not." 800
If so, I yield to it, and set my rest
Rather to lose the bad than wrong the best.
My maiden-Muse flies the lascivious swains,
And scorns to soil her lines with lustful strains ;
Will not dilate (nor on her forehead bear 805 Immodesty's abhorred character)

784.—Lavoltas, romping waltzes.

801.—Set my rest, am determined, a metaphor from the once fashionable game of primero.

His shameless prying, his undecent doings,
 His curious searches, his respectless wooings ;
 How that he saw—But what ? I dare not break it,
 You safer may conceive than I dare speak it. 810
 Yet verily had he not thought her dead,
 Sh'ad lost, ne'er to be found, her maidenhead.

The rougher stream, loathing a thing compacted
 Of so great shame should on his flood be acted,
 (According to our times not well allow'd 815
 In others what he in himself avow'd)
 Bent hard his forehead, furrow'd up his face,
 And danger led the way the boat did trace.
 And as within a landskip that doth stand
 Wrought by the pencil of some curious hand, 820
 We may descry, here meadow, there a wood ;
 Here standing ponds, and there a running flood ;
 Here on some mount a house of pleasure vanted,
 Where once the roaring cannon had been planted ;
 There on a hill a swain pipes out the day, 825
 Out-braving all the quiristers of May ;
 A huntsman here follows his cry of hounds,
 Driving the hare along the fallow grounds,
 Whilst one at hand seeming the sport t' allow, [830
 Follows the hounds and careless leaves the plough ;
 There in another place some high-rais'd land,
 In pride bears out her breasts unto the strand ;

823.—Vanted, made an ostentatious display.

826.—Quiristers, choristers, constantly used for birds.

Here stands a bridge, and there a conduit head ;
 Here round a Maypole some the measures tread ;
 There boys the truant play and leave their book ; 835
 Here stands an angler with a baited hook ;
 There for a stag one lurks within a bough ;
 Here sits a maiden milking of her cow ;
 There on a goodly plain (by time thrown down)
 Lies buried in his dust some ancient town), 840
 Who now invillaged there's only seen
 In his vast ruins what his state had been ;
 And of all these in shadows so express'd
 Make the beholders' eyes to take no rest :
 So for the swain the flood did mean to him 845
 To show in Nature (not by Art to limn)
 A tempest's rage : his furious waters threat,
 Some on this shore, some on the other beat.
 Here stands a mountain where was once a dale ;
 There where a mountain stood is now a vale. 850
 Here flows a billow, there another meets ;
 Each, on each side the skiff, unkindly greets.
 The waters underneath 'gan upward move,
 Wond'ring what stratagems were wrought above :
 Billows that miss'd the boat still onward thrust, 855
 And on the cliffs, as swoll'n with anger, burst.
 All these, and more, in substance so express'd,
 Made the beholder's thoughts to take no rest.
 Horror in triumph rid upon the waves ;
 And all the Furies from their gloomy caves 860
 Came hovering o'er the boat, summon'd each sense

Before the fearful bar of conscience ;
Were guilty all, and all condemned were
To undergo their horrors with despair.

What Muse? what Power? or what thrice sacred herse, 865

That lives immortal in a well-tun'd verse,
Can lend me such a sight that I might see
A guilty conscience' true anatomy ;
That well-kept register wherein is writ
All ill men do, all goodness they omit? 870

His pallid fears, his sorrows, his affrightings ;
His late-wish'd had-I-wists, remorseful bitings ;
His many tortures, his heartrending pain ;
How were his griefs composed in one chain,
And he by it let down into the seas, 875

Or through the centre to th' Antipodes?
He might change climates, or be barr'd Heaven's face ;

Yet find no salve, nor ever change his case.
Fears, sorrows, tortures, sad affrights, nor any, [880
Like to the conscience sting, though thrice as many ;
Yet all these torments by the swain were borne,
Whilst Death's grim visage lay upon the storm.

But as when some kind nurse doth long time keep
Her pretty baby at suck, whom fall'n asleep
She lays down in his cradle, stints his cry 885
With many a sweet and pleasing lullaby ;
Whilst the sweet child, not troubled with the shock,
As sweetly slumbers, as his nurse doth rock :

So lay the maid, th' amazed swain sat weeping,
 And Death in her was disposess'd by sleeping. 890
 The roaring voice of winds, the billows' raves,
 Nor all the mutt'ring of the sullen waves
 Could once disquiet, or her slumber stir ;
 But lull'd her more asleep than waken'd her.
 Such are their states whose souls from foul offence 895
 Enthroned sit in spotless innocence.
 Where rest my Muse ; till (jolly shepherds' swains)
 Next morn with pearls of dew bedecks our plains
 We'll fold our flocks, then in fit time go on
 To tune mine oaten pipe for Doridon. 900

THE THIRD SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The shepherd's swain here singing on,
 Tells of the cure of Doridon :
 And then unto the waters' falls
 Chanteth the rustic Pastorals.

Now had the sun, in golden chariot hurl'd,
 Twice bid good-morrow to the nether world ;
 And Cynthia, in her orb and perfect round,
 Twice view'd the shadows of the upper ground ;
 Twice had the day-star usher'd forth the light ; 5
 And twice the evening-star proclaim'd the night ;
 Ere once the sweet-fac'd boy (now all forlorn)
 Came with his pipe to resalute the morn.

When grac'd by time (unhappy time the while)
 The cruel swain (who ere knew swain so vile?) 10
 Had struck the lad, in came the wat'ry nymph
 To raise from sound poor Doridon (the imp

1.—Hurl'd, wheeled.

12.—Sound, swoon.

12.—Imp, a graft or shoot inserted into a tree, used metaphorically for offspring, a child.

Whom Nature seem'd to have selected forth
 To be ingrafted on some stock of worth ;
 And the maid help, but since "to dooms of Fate 15
 Succour, though ne'er so soon, comes still too late,"
 She rais'd the youth, then with her arms enrings him,
 And so with words of hope she homewards brings him.

At door expecting him his mother sat,
 Wond'ring her boy should stay from her so late ; 20
 Framing for him unto herself excuses,
 And with such thoughts gladly herself abuses :
 As that her son, since day grew old and weak,
 Stay'd with the maids to run at barley-break ;
 Or that he cours'd a park with females fraught, 25
 Which would not run except they might be caught ;
 Or in the thickets laid some wily snare
 To take the rabbit or the purblind hare ;
 Or taught his dog to catch the climbing kid :
 Thus shepherds do, and thus she thought he did. 30
 " In things expected meeting with delay,
 Though there be none, we frame some cause of stay."
 And so did she (as she who doth not so?)
 Conjecture Time unwing'd he came so slow.
 But Doridon drew near, so did her grief : 35
 " Ill-luck, for speed, of all things else is chief."
 * Homer. For as the blind man* sung, " Time so provides,
 That Joy goes still on foot, and Sorrow rides."

24 and 25.—Barley-break, and Course-a-park, country games.

Now when she saw (a woful sight) her son,
 Her hopes then fail'd her, and her cries begun 40
 To utter such a plaint, that scarce another,
 Like this, ere came from any love-sick mother.

If man hath done this, Heaven, why mad'st thou
 men ?

Not to deface thee in thy children,
 But by the work the workman to adore ; 45
 Framing that something which was nought before.

Aye me, unhappy wretch ! if that in things
 Which are as we (save title) men fear kings,
 That be their postures to the life limn'd on
 Some wood as frail as they, or cut in stone, 50
 "'Tis death to stab : why then should earthly things
 Dare to deface his form who formed kings ?

When the world was but in his infancy,
 Revenge, desires unjust, vile jealousy,
 Hate, envy, murder, all these six then reign'd, 55
 When but their half of men the world contain'd :
 Yet but in part of these, those ruled then.

When now as many vices live as men.
 Live they ? yes, live, I fear, to kill my son,
 With whom my joys, my love, my hopes are done. 60

Cease, quoth the water's nymph, that led the swain ;
 Though 'tis each mother's cause thus to complain,
 Yet "abstinence in things we must profess
 Which Nature fram'd for need, not for excess."

Since the least blood, drawn from the lesser part 65
 Of any child, comes from the mother's heart,

We cannot choose but grieve, except that we Should be more senseless than the senseless tree,
Replied his mother. Do but cut the limb
Of any tree, the trunk will weep for him : 70

tion and in-

Rend the cold sycamore's* thin bark in two,
His name and tears would say, So love should do.
"That mother is all flint (than beasts less good)
Which drops no water when her child streams blood."

At this the wounded boy fell on his knee, 75
Mother, kind mother (said) weep not for me.
Why, I am well. Indeed I am : if you
Cease not to weep, my wound will bleed anew.
When I was promis'd first the light's fruition,
You oft have told me, 'twas on this condition, 80
That I should hold it with like rent and pain
As others do, and one time leave 't again.
Then, dearest mother, leave, oh leave to wail,
"Time will effect where tears can nought avail."

Herewith Marinda taking up her son, 85
Her hope, her love, her joy, her Doridon,
She thank'd the nymph for her kind succour lent,
Who straight tripp'd to her wat'ry regiment.

* July took his name from Julius Cæsar.

Down in a dell (where in that month* whose fame
Grows greater by the man who gave it name, 90
Stands many a well-pil'd cock of short sweet hay
That feeds the husband's neat each winter's day)

83.—Leave, cease.

92.—Husband's neat, farmer's oxen.

A mountain had his foot, and 'gan to rise
 In stately height to parley with the skies.
 And yet as blaming his own lofty gait, 95
 Weighing the fickle props in things of state,
 His head began to droop, and downwards bending, Knock'd on that breast which gave it birth and ending :

And lies so with an hollow hanging vault,
 As when some boy trying the somersault, 100
 Stands on his head, and feet, as he did lie
 To kick against earth's spangled canopy ;
 When seeing that his heels are of such weight,
 That he cannot obtain their purpos'd height,
 Leaves any more to strive ; and thus doth say, 105
 What now I cannot do, another day
 May well effect : it cannot be denied
 I show'd a will to act, because I tried :
 The Scornfull-hill men call'd him, who did scorn
 So to be call'd, by reason he had borne 110
 No hate to greatness, but a mind to be
 The slave of greatness through humility :
 For had his mother Nature thought it meet,
 He meekly bowing would have kiss'd her feet.

Under the hollow hanging of this hill 115
 There was a cave cut out by Nature's skill :
 Or else it seem'd the mount did open's breast,
 That all might see what thoughts he there possess'd.

99.—Vaut, vault.

105.—Leaves, ceases.

Whose gloomy entrance was environ'd round [120
 With shrubs that cloy ill husbands' meadow-ground :
 The thick-grown hawthorn and the binding briar,
 The holly that out-dares cold winter's ire :
 Who all entwin'd, each limb with limb did deal,
 That scarce a glimpse of light could inward steal.
 An uncouth place, fit for an uncouth mind, 125
 That is as heavy as that cave is blind.
 Here liv'd a man his hoary hairs call'd old,
 Upon whose front time many years had told ;
 Who, since Dame Nature in him feeble grew,
 And he unapt to give the world ought new, 130
 The secret power of herbs that grow on mould,
 Sought out, to cherish and relieve the old.

Hither Marinda all in haste came running,
 And with her tears desir'd the old man's cunning ;
 When this good man (as goodness still is prest 135
 At all assays to help a wight distress'd)
 As glad and willing was to ease her son,
 As she would ever joy to see it done ;
 And giving her a salve in leaves up-bound,
 And she directed how to cure the wound, 140
 With thanks, made homewards (longing still to see
 Th' effect of this good hermit's surgery).
 There carefully, her son laid on a bed
 (Enriched with the blood he on it shed),

135.—Still, constantly.Prest, ready.136.—Assays, essays, trials.

She washes, dresses, binds his wound (yet sore) 145
 That griev'd it could weep blood for him no more.

Now had the glorious sun ta'en up his inn,
 And all the lamps of heav'n enlighten'd been ;
 Within the gloomy shades of some thick spring
 Sad Philomel 'gan on the hawthorn sing 150

(Whilst every beast at rest was lowly laid),
 The outrage done upon a silly maid.
 All things were hush'd ; each bird slept on his bough ;
 And night gave rest to him day tir'd at plough ;
 Each beast, each bird, and each day-toiling
 wight 155

Receiv'd the comfort of the silent night ;
 Free from the gripes of sorrow every one,
 Except poor Philomel and Doridon ;
 She on a thorn sings sweet though sighing strains ;
 He on a couch more soft, more sad complains ; 160
 Whose in-pent thoughts him long time having pain'd,
 He sighing, wept, and weeping thus complain'd :

Sweet Philomela (then he heard her sing),
 I do not envy thy sweet carolling,
 But do admire thee that each even and morrow 165
 Canst carelessly thus sing away thy sorrow.
 Would I could do so too ! and ever be
 In all my woes still imitating thee :
 But I may not attain to that, for then
 Such most unhappy, miserable men 170

Would strive with Heaven, and imitate the sun,
 Whose golden beams in exhalation,
 Though drawn from fens, or other grounds impure,
 Turn all to fructifying nouriture ;
 When we draw nothing by our sun-like eyes, 175
 That ever turns to mirth, but miseries.
 Would I had never seen, except that she
 Who made me wish so, love to look on me.
 Had Colin Clout yet liv'd (but he is gone),
 That best on earth could tune a lover's moan, 180
 Whose sadder tones enforc'd the rocks to weep,
 And laid the greatest griefs in quiet sleep :
 Who when he sung (as I would do to mine)
 His truest loves to his fair Rosaline,
 Entic'd each shepherd's ear to hear him play, 185
 And rapt with wonder, thus admiring say :
 Thrice happy plains (if plains thrice happy may be)
 Where such a shepherd pipes to such a lady.
 Who made the lasses long to sit down near him ;
 And woo'd the rivers from their springs to hear
 him. 190
 Heaven rest thy soul (if so a swain may pray)
 And as thy works live here, live there for aye.
 Meanwhile (unhappy) I shall still complain
 Love's cruel wounding of a seely swain.
 Two nights thus pass'd : the lily-handed Morn 195
 Saw Phœbus stealing dew from Ceres' corn.

The mounting lark (day's herald) got on wing,
 Bidding each bird choose out his bough and sing.

*The lofty treble sung the little wren ;
 Robin the mean, that best of all loves men ; 200
 The nightingale the tenor, and the thrush
 The counter-tenor sweetly in a bush.

* A description of a musical concert of birds.

And that the music might be full in parts,
 Birds from the groves flew with right willing hearts ;
 But (as it seem'd) they thought (as do the swains, 205

Which tune their pipes on sack'd Hibernia's plains)
 There should some droning part be, therefore will'd
 Some bird to fly into a neighb'ring field,

In embassy unto the King of Bees,
 To aid his partners on the flowers and trees 210

Who, condescending, gladly flew along
 To bear the bass to his well-tuned song.

The crow was willing they should be beholding
 For his deep voice, but being hoarse with scolding,

He thus lends aid ; upon an oak doth climb, 215
 And nodding with his head, so keepeth time.

O true delight, enharboured the breasts
 Of those sweet creatures with the plummy crests.

Had Nature unto man such simpl'ess given,
 He would, like birds, be far more near to heaven. 220

But Doridon well knew (who knows no less ?)
 " Man's compounds have o'erthrown his simpleness."

Noontide the Morn had woo'd, and she 'gan yield,
 When Doridon (made ready for the field)
 Goes sadly forth (a woful shepherd's lad) 225
 Drowned in tears, his mind with grief yclad,
 To ope his fold and let his lambkins out,
 (Full jolly flock they seem'd, a well-fleec'd rout)
 Which gently walk'd before, he sadly pacing, [230
 Both guides and follows them towards their grazing.
 When from a grove the wood-nymphs held full dear,
 Two heavenly voices did entreat his ear,
 And did compel his longing eyes to see
 What happy wight enjoy'd such harmony ;
 Which joined with five more, and so made seven, 235
 Would parallel in mirth the spheres of heaven.
 To have a sight at first he would not press,
 For fear to interrupt such happiness ;
 But kept aloof the thick-grown shrubs among,
 Yet so as he might hear this wooing song : 240

F. Fie, shepherd's swain, why sit'st thou all alone,
 Whilst other lads are sporting on the leys ?
R. Joy may have company, but grief hath none :
 Where pleasure never came, sports cannot please.
F. Yet may you please to grace our this day's sport, 245
 Though not an actor, yet a looker-on.

228.—Rout, company.

242.—Leys, leas or pastures.

R. A looker-on, indeed ! so swains of sort,
Cast low, take joy to look whence they are thrown?

R. Seek joy and find it.

F. Grief doth not mind it. 250

Both.

Then both agree in one,
Sorrow doth hate
To have a mate ;
“ True grief is still alone.”

F. Sad swain, arede (if that a maid may ask) 255
What cause so great effects of grief hath wrought ?

R. Alas ! Love is not hid, it wears no mask ;
To view 'tis by the face conceiv'd and brought.

F. The cause I grant : the causer is not learn'd :
Your speech I do entreat about this task. 260

R. If that my heart were seen, 'twould be discern'd ;
And Fida's name found graven on the cask.

F. Hath Love young Remond moved ?

R. 'Tis Fida that is loved.

Both.

Although 'tis said that no men 265
Will with their hearts,

255.—Arede, explain.

262.—Cask, casket.

Or goods' chief parts
Trust either seas or women.

- F.* How may a maiden be assur'd of love,
Since falsehood late in every swain excelleth? 270
- R.* When protestations fail, time may approve
Where true affection lives, where falsehood dwelleth.
- F.* The truest cause elects a judge as true :
Fie, how my sighing my much loving telleth.
- R.* Your love is fix'd in one whose heart to you 275
Shall be as constancy, which ne'er rebelleth.
- F.* None other shall have grace.
- R.* None else in my heart place.

Both.

Go, shepherds' swains and wive all,
For love and kings 280
Are two like things
Admitting no co-rival.

As when some malefactor judg'd to die
For his offence, his execution nigh,
Casteth his sight on states unlike to his, 285
And weighs his ill by others' happiness :
So Doridon thought every state to be Further from him, more near felicity.
O blessed sight, where such concordance meets;

Where truth with truth, and love with liking greet. 290

Had (quoth the swain) the Fates giv'n me some measure

Of true delight's inestimable treasure,
I had been fortunate : but now so weak

My bankrupt heart will be enforc'd to break.

Sweet love, that draws on earth a yoke so even ; 295

Sweet life, that imitates the bliss of heaven ;

Sweet death they needs must have, who so unite

That two distinct make one hermaphrodite :

Sweet love, sweet life, sweet death, that so do meet
On earth ; in death, in heaven be ever sweet ! 300

Let all good wishes ever wait upon you,

And happiness as handmaid tending on you.

Your loves within one centre meeting have !

One hour your deaths, your corps possess one grave ! [305

Your names still green, (thus doth a swain implore)

Till time and memory shall be no more !

Herewith the couple hand-in-hand arose,

And took the way which to the sheep-walk goes.

And whilst that Doridon their gait look'd on,

His dog disclos'd him, rushing forth upon 310

A well-fed deer, that trips it o'er the mead

As nimble as the wench did whilom tread

312.—The wench, Camilla, one of the swift-footed huntresses of Diana (Virgil, Æneid, vii. 803, etc.).

On Ceres' dangling ears, or shaft let go
 By some fair nymph that bears Diana's bow.
 When turning head, he not a foot would stir, 315
 Scorning the barking of a shepherd's cur :
 So should all swains as little weigh their spite,
 Who at their songs do bawl, but dare not bite.

Remond, that by the dog the master knew,
 Came back, and angry bade him to pursue. 320

Dory (quoth he), if your ill-tutor'd dog
 Have nought of awe, then let him have a clog.
 Do you not know this seely timorous deer,
 (As usual to his kind) hunted whilere

The sun not ten degrees got in the signs, 325
 Since to our maids, here gathering columbines,
 She weeping came, and with her head low laid
 In Fida's lap, did humbly beg for aid.

Whereat unto the hounds they gave a check,
 And saving her, might spy about her neck 330
 A collar hanging, and (as yet is seen)

These words in gold wrought on a ground of green :
 " Maidens, since 'tis decreed a maid shall have me,
 Keep me till he shall kill me that must save me."
 But whence she came, or who the words concern, 335
 We neither know nor can of any learn.

Upon a pallat she doth lie at night,
 Near Fida's bed, nor will she from her sight :
 Upon her walks she all the day attends,

And by her side she trips where'er she wends. 340
 Remond (replied the swain) if I have wrong'd
 Fida in ought which unto her belong'd,
 I sorrow for't, and truly do protest,
 As yet I never heard speech of this beast :
 Nor was it with my will ; or if it were, 345
 Is it not lawful we should chase the deer,
 That breaking our enclosures every morn
 Are found at feed upon our crop of corn ?
 Yet had I known this deer, I had not wrong'd
 Fida in ought which unto her belong'd. 350
 I think no less, quoth Remond ; but, I pray,
 Whither walks Doridon this holy-day ?
 Come drive your sheep to their appointed feeding,
 And make you one at this our merry meeting.
 Full many a shepherd with his lovely lass 355
 Sit telling tales upon the clover grass.
 There is the merry shepherd of the Hole,
 Thenot, Piers, Nilkin, Duddy, Hobbinoll,
 Alexis, Silvan, Teddy of the Glen,
 Rowly and Perigot here by the Fen, 360
 With many more (I cannot reckon all)
 That meet to solemnize this festival.
 I grieve not at their mirth, said Doridon :
 Yet had there been of feasts not any one
 Appointed or commanded, you will say, 365
 "Where there's content 'tis ever holy-day."
 Leave further talk (quoth Remond) let's be gone,
 I'll help you with your sheep, the time draws on.

Fida will call the hind, and come with us.

Thus went they on, and Remond did discuss 370
 Their cause of meeting, till they won with pacing
 The circuit chosen for the maidens' tracing.

It was a roundel seated on a plain,
 That stood as sentinel unto the main,
 Environ'd round with trees and many an arbour, 375

Wherein melodious birds did nightly harbour,
 And on a bough within the quick'ning spring,
 Would be a-teaching of their young to sing ;
 Whose pleasing notes the tired swain have made
 To steal a nap at noontide in the shade. 380

Nature herself did there in triumph ride,
 And made that place the ground of all her pride.
 Whose various flow'rs deceiv'd the rasher eye
 In taking them for curious tapestry.

A silver spring forth of a rock did fall, 385
 That in a drought did serve to water all.

Upon the edges of a grassy bank
 A tuft of trees grew circling in a rank,
 As if they seem'd their sports to gaze upon,
 Or stood as guard against the wind and sun. 390

So fair, so fresh, so green, so sweet a ground
 The piercing eyes of Heaven yet never found.
 Here Doridon all ready met doth see,
 (Oh, who would not at such a meeting be?)

372.—Tracing, dancing.

373.—Roundel, a round space of ground.

Where he might doubt, who gave to other grace, 395
 Whether the place the maids, or maids the place.

Here 'gan the reed and merry bagpipe play,
 Shrill as a thrush upon a morn of May,
 (A rural music for an heavenly train)

And every shepherdess danc'd with her swain. 400

As when some gale of wind doth nimbly take
 A fair white lock of wool, and with it make
 Some pretty driving ; here it sweeps the plain ;
 There stays, here hops, there mounts, and turns again ;

Yet all so quick, that none so soon can say 405

That now it stops, or leaps, or turns away :
 So was their dancing : none look'd thereupon,
 But thought their several motions to be one.

A crooked measure was their first election,
 Because all crooked tends to best perfection. 410

And as I ween this often bowing measure
 Was chiefly framed for the women's pleasure.
 Though like the rib, they crooked are and bending,
 Yet to the best of forms they aim their ending.

Next in an (I) their measure made a rest, 415

Showing when love is plainest it is best.
 Then in a (Y) which thus doth love commend,
 Making of two at first, one in the end.

And lastly closing in a round do enter,
 Placing the lusty shepherds in the centre : 420

About the swains they dancing seem'd to roll,
 As other planets round the heav'nly pole,

Who by their sweet aspect or chiding frown,
 Could raise a shepherd up, or cast him down.
 Thus were they circled till a swain came near, 425
 And sent this song unto each shepherd's ear :
 The note and voice so sweet, that for such mirth
 The gods would leave the heavens, and dwell on earth.

Happy are you so enclosed ;
 May the maids be still disposed 430
 In their gestures and their dances,
 So to grace you with entwining,
 That Envy wish in such combining,
 Fortune's smile with happy chances.

Here it seems as if the Graces 435
 Measur'd out the plain in traces,
 In a shepherdess disguising.
 Are the spheres so nimbly turning?
 Wand'ring lamps in heaven burning,
 To the eye so much enticing? 440

Yes, Heaven means to take these thither,
 And add one joy to see both dance together.

Gentle nymphs, be not refusing,
 Love's neglect is time's abusing,
 They and beauty are but lent you, 445
 Take the one and keep the other :
 Love keeps fresh what age doth smother :
 Beauty gone you will repent you.

'Twill be said when yee haue proued,
 Neuer Swaines more truly loued:
 O then slye all nice behamour.
 Pitty faine would (as her dutie)
 Be attending still on beautie
 Let her not be out of fauour.

Disdaine is now so much rewarded,
 That Pitty weepes since shee is unregarded.

The measure and the Song here being ended:
 Each Swaine his thoughts thus to his Loue commended.

The first presents his Dogge, with these:

When I my flocke nere you doe keepe,
 And bid my Dogge goe take a Sheepe.
 He cleare mistakes what I bid doe,
 And bends his pace still towards you.
 Poore wretch, he knowes more care I

THE FOURTH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Fida's distress, the hind is slain,
 Yet from her ruins lives again.
 Riot's description next I rhyme ;
 Then Aletheia, and old Time :
 And lastly, from this song I go,
 Having describ'd the Vale of Woe.

HAPPY ye days of old, when every waste
 Was like a Sanctuary to the chaste ;
 When incests, rapes, adulteries, were not known ;
 All pure as blossoms which are newly blown.
 Maids were as free from spots, and soils within, 5
 As most unblemish'd in the outward skin.
 Men every plain and cottage did afford,
 As smooth in deeds, as they were fair of word.
 Maidens with men as sisters with their brothers, [10
 And men with maids convers'd as with their mothers ;
 Free from suspicion, or the rage of blood.
 Strife only reign'd, for all striv'd to be good.
 But then as little wrens but newly fledge,

First, by their nests hop up and down the hedge ;
 Then one from bough to bough gets up a tree : 15
 His fellow noting his agility,
 Thinks he as well may venture as the other,
 So flushing from one spray unto another,
 Gets to the top, and then embolden'd flies,
 Unto an height past ken of human eyes : 20
 So time brought worse, men first desir'd to talk ;
 Then came suspect ; and then a private walk ;
 Then by consent appointed times of meeting,
 Where most securely each might kiss his sweeting ;
 Lastly, with lusts their panting breasts so swell, 25
 They came to—— But to what I blush to tell,
 And enter'd thus, rapes used were of all,
 Incest, adultery, held as venial :
 The certainty in doubtful balance rests,
 If beasts did learn of men, or men of beasts. 30
 Had they not learn'd of man who was their king,
 So to insult upon an underling,
 They civilly had spent their lives' gradation,
 As meek and mild as in their first creation ;
 Nor had th' infections of infected minds 35
 So alter'd nature, and disorder'd kinds,
 Fida had been less wretched, I more glad,
 That so true love so true a progress had.
 When Remond left her (Remond then unkind)
 Fida went down the dale to seek the hind ; 40

18.—Flushing, flying out suddenly.

And found her taking soil within a flood :
 Whom when she call'd straight follow'd to the wood.
 Fida, then wearied, sought the cooling shade,
 And found an arbour by the shepherds made
 To frolic in (when Sol did hottest shine) . 45
 With cates which were far cleanlier than fine ;
 For in those days men never us'd to feed
 So much for pleasure as they did for need.
 Enriching then the arbour down she sat her ;
 Where many a busy bee came flying at her : 50
 Thinking when she for air her breasts discloses,
 That there had grown some tuft of damask roses,
 And that her azure veins which then did swell,
 Were conduit-pipes brought from a living well ;
 Whose liquor might the world enjoy for money, 55
 Bees would be bankrupt ; none would care for honey .
 The hind lay still without (poor silly creature,
 How like a woman art thou fram'd by Nature ?
 Timorous, apt to tears, wily in running,
 Caught best when force is intermix'd with cunning) 60
 Lying thus distant, different chances meet them,
 And with a fearful object Fate doth greet them.
 Description
 of Riot. Something appear'd, which seem'd, far off, a man
 In stature, habit, gait, proportion :
 But when their eyes their objects' masters were, 65
 And it for stricter censure came more near,
 By all his properties one might well guess,
 Than of a man, he sure had nothing less.

41.— Taking soil, a term in hunting for taking water.

For verily since old Deucalion's flood,
 Earth's slime did ne'er produce a viler brood. 70

Upon the various earth's embroidered gown
 There is a weed upon whose head grows down ;
 Sow-thistle 'tis yclept, whose downy wreath,
 If any one can blow off at a breath,
 We deem her for a maid : such was his hair, 75
 Ready to shed at any stirring air.

His ears were stricken deaf when he came nigh,
 To hear the widow's or the orphan's cry ;
 His eyes encircled with a bloody chain,
 With poring in the blood of bodies slain ; 80

His mouth exceeding wide, from whence did fly
 Vollies of execrable blasphemy,
 Banning the heavens, and he that rideth on them,
 Dar'd vengeance to the teeth to fall upon him :
 Like Scythian wolves, or men* of wit bereaven, 85
 Which howl and shoot against the lights of heaven.
 His hands (if hands they were) like some dead

* Men of Scirum shoot against the stars.

corse,
 With digging up his buried ancestors ;
 Making his father's tomb and sacred shrine
 The trough wherein the hog-herd fed his swine. 90
 And as that beast hath legs (which shepherds fear, Yclept a badger, which our lambs doth tear)
 One long, the other short, that when he runs
 Upon the plains, he halts ; but when he wons

On craggy rocks, or steepy hills, we see 95
 None runs more swift, nor easier than he :
 Such legs the monster had, one sinew shrunk,
 That in the plains he reel'd, as being drunk ;
 And halted in the paths to virtue tending,
 And therefore never durst be that way bending : 100
 But when he came on carved monuments,
 Spiring colosses, and high-raised rents,
 He pass'd them o'er, quick, as the Eastern wind
 Sweeps through a meadow ; or a nimble hind,
 Or satyr on a lawn, or skipping roe, 105
 Or well-wing'd shaft forth of a Parthian bow.
 His body made (still in consumptions rife)
 A miserable prison for a life.

Riot he hight ; whom some curs'd fiend did raise,
 When like a chaos were the nights and days : 110
 Got and brought up in the Cimmerian clime,
 Where sun nor moon, nor days, nor nights do time :
 As who should say, they scorn'd to show their faces
 To such a fiend should seek to spoil the Graces.

At sight whereof Fida, nigh drown'd in fear, 115
 Was clean dismay'd when he approached near ;
 Nor durst she call the deer, nor whistling wind her,
 Fearing her noise might make the monster find her ;

102.—Rents, fissures, crevices.

111.—Cimmerian clime, a land described by Homer (Odyssey, xi. 14) as being beyond the ocean-stream, plunged in darkness, and unblest by the rays of the sun.

117.—Wind her, make her turn.

Who slyly came, for he had cunning learn'd him,
 And seiz'd upon the hind ere she discern'd him. 120

Oh, how she striv'd and struggl'd ; every nerve
 Is press'd at all assays a life to serve :

Yet soon we lose what we might longer keep
 Were not prevention commonly asleep.

Maids, of this monster's brood be fearful all ; 125
 What to the hind may hap to you befall.

Who with her feet held up instead of hands,
 And tears which pity from the rock commands,
 She sighs, and shrieks, and weeps, and looks upon
 him : [130

Alas ! she sobs, and many a groan throws on him ;
 With plaints which might abate a tyrant's knife
 She begs for pardon, and entreats for life.

The hollow caves resound her moanings near it,
 That heart was flint which did not grieve to hear it ;
 The high-topp'd firs which on that mountain keep, 135
 Have ever since that time been seen to weep.

The owl till then, 'tis thought, full well could sing,
 And tune her voice to every bubbling spring :
 But when she heard those plaints, then forth she yode
 Out of the covert of an ivy tod, 140

And hollowing for aid, so strain'd her throat,
 That since she clean forgot her former note.

A little robin sitting on a tree,
 In doleful notes bewail'd her tragedy.

An asp, who thought him stout, could not dissemble,
 But show'd his fear, and yet is seen to tremble. [145
 Yet Cruelty was deaf, and had no sight
 In ought which might gainsay the appetite :
 But with his teeth rending her throat asunder,
 Besprinkl'd with her blood the green grass under, 150
 And gormandizing on her flesh and blood,
 He, vomiting, returned to the wood.

Riot but newly gone, as strange a vision,
 Though far more heavenly, came in apparition.
 As that Arabian bird (whom all admire) 155
 Her exequies prepar'd and funeral fire,
 Burnt in a flame conceived from the sun,
 And nourished with slips of cinnamon,
 Out of her ashes hath a second birth,
 And flies abroad, a wonderment on earth : 160
 So from the ruins of this mangled creature
 Arose so fair and so divine a feature,
 That Envy for her heart would dote upon her ;
 Heaven could not choose but be enamour'd on her :
 Were I a star, and she a second sphere, 165
 I'd leave the other, and be fixed there.
 Had fair Arachne wrought this maiden's hair,
 When she with Pallas did for skill compare,
 Minerva's work had never been esteem'd,
 But this had been more rare and highly deem'd ; 170
 Yet gladly now she would reverse her doom,
 Weaving this hair within a spider's loom.
 Upon her forehead, as in glory, sat

Mercy and Majesty, for wond'ring at,
 As pure and simple as Albania's snow, 175
 Or milk-white swans which stem the streams of Po :
 Like to some goodly foreland, bearing out
 Her hair, the tufts which fring'd the shore about.

And lest the man which sought those coasts might slip,
 Her eyes like stars did serve to guide the ship. 180

Upon her front (heaven's fairest promontory)
 Delineated was th' authentic story
 Of those elect, whose sheep at first began
 To nibble by the springs of Canaan :
 Out of whose sacred loins (brought by the stem 185
 Of that sweet singer of Jerusalem)

Came the best Shepherd ever flocks did keep,
 Who yielded up his life to save his sheep.

O thou Eterne ! by whom all beings move,
 Giving the springs beneath, and springs above ; 190

Whose finger doth this universe sustain,
 Bringing the former and the latter rain ;
 Who dost with plenty meads and pastures fill,
 By drops distill'd like dew on Hermon hill :

Pardon a silly swain, who (far unable 195
 In that which is so rare, so admirable)

Dares on an oaten pipe thus meanly sing
 Her praise immense, worthy a silver string.
 And thou which through the desert and the deep,
 Didst lead thy chosen like a flock of sheep : 200

As sometime by a star thou guided'st them,
 Which fed upon the plains of Bethlehem ;

So by thy sacred Spirit direct my quill,
 When I shall sing ought of thy holy hill,
 That times to come, when they my rhymes rehearse, 205
 May wonder at me, and admire my verse :

For who but one rapt in celestial fire,
 Can by his Muse to such a pitch aspire,
 That from aloft he might behold and tell
 Her worth, whereon an iron pen might dwell? 210

When she was born, Nature in sport began
 To learn the cunning of an artisan,
 And did vermilion with a white compose,
 To mock herself and paint a damask rose.
 But scorning Nature unto Art should seek, 215
 She spilt her colours on this maiden's cheek.

Her mouth the gate from whence all goodness came,
 Of power to give the dead a living name.

Her words embalmed in so sweet a breath, [220
 That made them triumph both on Time and Death ;
 Whose fragrant sweets, since the chameleon knew,
 And tasted of, he to this humour grew,
 Left other elements, held this so rare,
 That since he never feeds on ought but air.

O had I Virgil's verse, or Tully's tongue, 225
 Or raping numbers like the Thracian's song,
 I have a theme would make the rocks to dance,
 And surly beasts that through the desert prance,
 Hie from their caves, and every gloomy den,

To wonder at the excellence of men. 230

Nay, they would think their states for ever rais'd,

But once to look on one so highly prais'd.

Out of whose maiden breasts (which sweetly rise)

The seers suck'd their hidden prophecies :

And told that for her love in times to come, 235

Many should seek the crown of martyrdom,

By fire, by sword, by tortures, dungeons, chains,

By stripes, by famine, and a world of pains ;

Yet constant still remain (to her they lov'd)

Like Sion Mount, that cannot be remov'd. 240

Proportion on her arms and hands recorded,

The world for her no fitter place afforded.

Praise her who list, he still shall be her debtor :

For Art ne'er feign'd, nor Nature fram'd a better.

As when a holy father hath began 245

To offer sacrifice to mighty Pan,

Doth the request of every swain assume,

To scale the welkin in a sacred fume

Made by a widow'd turtle's loving mate,

Or lambkin, or some kid immaculate, 250

The off'ring heaves aloft, with both his hands,

Which all adore that near the altar stands :

So was her heavenly body comely rais'd

On two fair columns ; those that Ovid prais'd

In Julia's borrow'd name, compar'd with these, 255

Were crabs to apples of th' Hesperides ;

255.—Julia's borrow'd name, Corinna.

Or stump-foot Vulcan in comparison
With all the height of true perfection.

Nature was here so lavish of her store,
That she bestow'd until she had no more ; 260
Whose treasure being weaken'd (by this dame)
She thrusts into the world so many lame.

The highest synod of the glorious sky
(I heard a wood-nymph sing) sent Mercury
To take a survey of the fairest faces, 265
And to describe to them all women's graces ;
Who long time wand'ring in a serious quest,
Noting what parts by Beauty were possess'd :
At last he saw this maid, then thinking fit
To end his journey, here, nil-ultra, writ. 270

Fida in adoration kiss'd her knee,
And thus bespake : Hail glorious Deity !
(If such thou art, and who can deem you less?)
Whether thou reign'st queen of the wilderness,
Or art that goddess ('tis unknown to me) 275
Which from the ocean draws her pettigree :
Or one of those, who by the mossy banks
Of drizzling Helicon, in airy ranks
Tread roundelays upon the silver sands,
Whilst shaggy satyrs, tripping o'er the strands, 280
Stand still at gaze, and yield their senses thralls
To the sweet cadence of your madrigals :
Or of the fairy troop which nimbly play,

And by the springs dance out the summer's day,
 Teaching the little birds to build their nests, 285
 And in their singing how to keepen rests ;
 Or one of those who, watching where a spring
 Out of our Grandame Earth hath issuing,
 With your attractive music woo the stream
 (As men by fairies led, fall'n in a dream) 290
 To follow you, which sweetly trilling wanders
 In many mazes, intricate meanders ;
 Till at the last, to mock th' enamour'd rill,
 Ye bend your traces up some shady hill ;
 And laugh to see the wave no further tread ; 295
 But in a chafe run foaming on his head,
 Being enforc'd a channel new to frame,
 Leaving the other destitute of name.
 If thou be one of these, or all, or more,
 Succour a seely maid, that doth implore 300
 Aid, on a bended heart, unfeign'd and meek,
 As true as blushes of a maiden cheek.

Maiden, arise, replied the new-born maid :
 " Pure Innocence the senseless stones will aid."
 Nor of the fairy troop, nor Muses nine, 305
 Nor am I Venus, nor of Proserpine :
 But daughter to a lusty aged swain,
 That cuts the green tufts off th' enamell'd plain ;
 And with his scythe hath many a summer shorn
 The plough'd-lands lab'ring with a crop of corn ; 310
 Who from the cloud-clipt mountain by his stroke
 Fells down the lofty pine, the cedar, oak :

Description
 of Time.

He opes the flood-gates as occasion is,
 Sometimes on that man's land, sometimes on this.
 When Verulam, a stately nymph of yore, 315
 Did use to deck herself on Isis' shore,
 One morn (among the rest) as there she stood,
 Saw the pure channel all besmear'd with blood ;
 Inquiring for the cause, one did impart,
 Those drops came from her holy Alban's heart ; 320
 Herewith in grief, she 'gan entreat my sire,
 That Isis' stream, which yearly did attire
 Those gallant fields in changeable array,
 Might turn her course and run some other way,
 Lest that her waves might wash away the guilt 325
 From off their hands which Alban's blood had spilt :

He condescended, and the nimble wave
 Her fish no more within that channel drave :
 But as a witness left the crimson gore
 To stain the earth, as they their hands before. 330
 He had a being ere there was a birth,
 And shall not cease until the sea and earth,
 And what they both contain, shall cease to be,
 Nothing confines him but eternity.
 By him the names of good men ever live, 335
 Which short-liv'd men unto oblivion give :
 And in forgetfulness he lets him fall,
 That is no other man than natural :

'Tis he alone that rightly can discover
 Who is the true, and who the feigned lover. 340
 In summer's heat, when any swain to sleep
 Doth more addict himself than to his sheep ;
 And whilst the leaden god sits on his eyes,
 If any of his fold or strays or dies,
 And to the waking swain it be unknown, 345
 Whether his sheep be dead, or stray'd, or stol'n ;
 To meet my sire he bends his course in pain,
 Either where some high hill surveys the plain ;
 Or takes his step toward the flow'ry valleys,
 Where Zephyr with the cowslip hourly dallies ; 350
 Or to the groves, where birds from heat or weather,
 Sit sweetly tuning of their notes together ;
 Or to a mead a wanton river dresses
 With richest collars of her turning esses ;
 Or where the shepherds sit old stories telling, 355
 Chronos, my sire, hath no set place of dwelling ;
 But if the shepherd meet the aged swain,
 He tells him of his sheep, or shows them slain.
 So great a gift the sacred Powers of heaven
 (Above all others) to my sire have given, 360
 That the abhorred stratagems of night,
 Lurking in caverns from the glorious light,
 By him (perforce) are from their dungeons hurl'd,
 And show'd as monsters to the wond'ring world.
 What mariner is he sailing upon 365
 The wat'ry desert-clipping Albion,
 Hears not the billows in their dances roar,

Answer'd by echoes from the neighbour shore?
 To whose accord the maids trip from the downs,
 And rivers dancing come, y'crown'd with towns, 370
 All singing forth the victories of Time
 Upon the monsters of the Western clime,
 Whose horrid, damned, bloody plots would bring
 Confusion on the laureate poet's king,
 Whose hell-fed hearts devis'd how never more 375
 A swan might singing sit on Isis' shore :
 But croaking ravens, and the screech-owl's cry,
 The fit musicians for a tragedy,
 Should evermore be heard about her strand,
 To fright all passengers from that sad land. 380
 Long summer's days I on his worth might spend,
 And yet begin again when I would end.
 All ages since the first age first begun,
 Ere they could know his worth their age was done :
 Whose absence all the treasury of earth 385
 Cannot buy out. From far-fam'd Tagus' birth,
 Not all the golden gravel he treads over,
 One minute past, that minute can recover.
 I am his only child (he hath no other),
 Clept Aletheia, born without a mother : 390
 Poor Aletheia, long despis'd of all,
 Scarce Charity would lend an hospital
 To give my month's cold watching one night's rest,
 But in my room took in the miser's chest.

In winter's time, when hardly fed the flocks, 395
 And icicles hung dangling on the rocks ;
 When Hyems bound the floods in silver chains,
 And hoary frosts had candied all the plains ;
 When every barn rung with the threshing flails,
 And shepherds' boys for cold 'gan blow their nails: 400
 Wearied with toil in seeking out some one
 That had a spark of true devotion,
 It was my chance (chance only helpeth need)
 To find an house ybuilt for holy deed,
 With goodly architect, and cloisters wide, 405
 With groves and walks along a river's side ;
 The place itself afforded admiration,
 And every spray a theme of contemplation.
 But (woe is me !) when knocking at the gate,
 I 'gan entreat an enterance thereat : 410
 The porter ask'd my name : I told ; he swell'd,
 And bade me thence : wherewith in grief repell'd,
 I sought for shelter to a ruin'd house,
 Harb'ring the weasel, and the dust-bred mouse ;
 And others none, except the two-kind bat, 415
 Which all the day there melancholy sat :
 Here sat I down, with wind and rain ybeat ;
 Grief fed my mind, and did my body eat.
 Yet Idleness I saw (lam'd with the gout)
 Had entrance when poor Truth was kept without. 420
 There saw I Drunkenness with dropsies swoll'n ;

Aletheia
 seeks relief at an abbey, and is denied.

415.—Two-kind bat, i.e. half-bird and half-mouse.

And pamper'd Lust, that many a night had stol'n
 Over the abbey-wall when gates were lock'd,
 To be in 'Venus' wanton bosom rock'd :
 And Gluttony, that surfeiting had been, 425
 Knock at the gate and straightway taken in ;
 Sadly I sat, and sighing, griev'd to see
 Their happiness, my infelicity.
 At last came Envy by, who, having spied
 Where I was sadly seated, inward hied, 430
 And to the convent eagerly she cries,
 Why sit you here, when with these ears and eyes
 I heard and saw a strumpet dares to say
 She is the true fair Aletheia,
 Which you have boasted long to live among you, 435
 Yet suffer not a peevish girl to wrong you ?
 With this provok'd, all rose, and in a rout
 Ran to the gate, strove who should first get out,
 Bade me begone, and then (in terms uncivil)
 Did call me counterfeit, witch, hag, whore, devil ; 440
 Then like a strumpet drove me from their cells,
 With tinkling pans, and with the noise of bells.
 And he that lov'd me, or but moan'd my case,
 Had heaps of firebrands banded at his face.

Thus beaten thence (distress'd, forsaken wight) 445
 Enforc'd in fields to sleep, or wake all night ;
 A silly sheep, seeing me straying by,
 Forsook the shrub where once she meant to lie ;

As if she in her kind (unhurting elf)
 Did bid me take such lodging as herself : 450
 Gladly I took the place the sheep had given,
 Uncanopied of anything but heaven.
 Where, nigh benumb'd with cold, with grief frequented,
 Unto the silent night I thus lamented :
 Fair Cynthia, if, from thy silver throne, 455
 Thou ever lent'st an ear to virgin's moan !
 Or in thy monthly course one minute stay'd
 Thy palfreys' trot, to hear a wretched maid !
 Pull in their reins, and lend thine ear to me,
 Forlorn, forsaken, cloth'd in misery : 460
 But if a woe hath never woo'd thine ear,
 To stop those coursers in their full career ;
 But as stone-hearted men, uncharitable,
 Pass careless by the poor, when men less able
 Hold not the needy's help in long suspense, 465
 But in their hands pour their benevolence.
 O ! if thou be so hard to stop thine ears,
 When stars in pity drop down from their spheres,
 Yet for a while in gloomy veil of night,
 Enshroud the pale beams of thy borrow'd light ! 470
 O ! never once discourage Goodness (lending
 One glimpse of light) to see Misfortune spending
 Her utmost rage on Truth, despis'd, distress'd,
 Unhappy, unrelieved, yet undress'd !
 Where is the heart at Virtue's suff'ring grieveth ? 475
 Where is the eye that, pitying, relieveth ?

Where is the hand that still the hungry feedeth?
 Where is the ear that the decrepit steedeth?
 That heart, that hand, that ear, or else that eye,
 Giveth, relieveth, feeds, steeds Misery? 480
 O Earth! produce me one of all thy store
 Enjoys; and be vain-glorious no more.

By this had chanticleer, the village clock,
 Bidden the goodwife for her maids to knock;
 And the swart ploughman for his breakfast stay'd, 485
 That he might till those lands were fallow laid:
 The hills and valleys here and there resound
 With the re-echoes of the deep-mouth'd hound.
 Each shepherd's daughter, with her cleanly peal,
 Was come afield to milk the morning's meal, 490
 And ere the sun had climb'd the eastern hills,
 To gild the mutt'ring bourns and pretty rills,
 Before the lab'ring bee had left the hive,
 And nimble fishes which in rivers dive,
 Began to leap, and catch the drowned fly, 495
 I rose from rest, not in felicity.
 Seeking the place of Charity's resort,
 Unware I happen'd on a prince's court;
 Where, meeting Greatness, I requir'd relief,
 (O happy undelay'd) she said in brief, 500
 To small effect thine oratory tends,

478.—Steedeth, assists.485.—Swart, sunburnt.489.—Peal, pail.

How can I keep thee and so many friends?
 If of my household I should make thee one,
 Farewell my servant, Adulation :
 I know she will not stay when thou art there : 505
 But seek some great man's service elsewhere.
 Darkness and light, summer and winter's weather
 May be at once, ere you two live together.
 Thus with a nod she left me cloth'd in woe.

Thence to the city once I thought to go, 510
 But somewhat in my mind this thought had thrown,
 It was a place wherein I was not known.
 And therefore went unto these homely towns,
 Sweetly environ'd with the daisied downs.

Upon a stream washing a village end 515
 A mill is plac'd, that never difference kenn'd
 'Twixt days for work, and holy-tides for rest,
 But always wrought and ground the neighbours' grist.
 Before the door I saw the miller walking,
 And other two (his neighbours) with him talking : 520
 One of them was a weaver, and the other
 The village tailor, and his trusty brother.

Truth en-treats suc-
 cour from a miller, a tailor, and a weaver.

To them I came, and thus my suit began :
 Content, the riches of a country-man,
 Attend your actions, be more happy still 525
 Than I am hapless ! and as yonder mill,
 Though in his turning it obey the stream,
 Yet by the headstrong torrent from his beam
 Is unremov'd, and till the wheel be tore,
 It daily toils ; then rests, and works no more : 530

So in life's motion may you never be (Though sway'd with griefs) o'erborne with misery.
 With that the miller, laughing, brush'd his clothes,
 Then swore by Cock and other dunghill oaths,
 I greatly was to blame that durst so wade 535
 Into the knowledge of the wheelwright's trade.
 Ay, neighbour quoth the tailor (then he bent
 His pace to me, spruce like a Jack of Lent)
 Your judgment is not seam-rent when you spend it,
 Nor is it botching, for I cannot mend it. 540
 And, maiden, let me tell you in displeasure,
 You must not press the cloth you cannot measure :
 But let your steps be stitch'd to Wisdom's chalking,
 And cast presumptuous shreds out of your walking.
 The weaver said, Fie, wench ! yourself you wrong,
 Thus to let slip the shuttle of your tongue ; [545
 For mark me well, yea, mark me well, I say,
 I see you work your speech's web astray.

Sad to the soul, o'erlaid with idle words,
 O Heaven ! quoth I, where is the place affords 550
 A friend to help, or any heart that ru'th
 The most dejected hopes of wronged Truth ?
 Truth ! quoth the miller, plainly for our parts,
 I and the weaver hate thee with our hearts :
 The strifes you raise I will not now discuss, 555

534.—Cock, a vulgar corruption of the name of God.

538.—Jack of Lent, a stuffed puppet which was thrown at during Lent : hence a term of reproach.

551.—Ru'th, rueth, pities.

Between our honest customers and us :
 But get you gone, for sure you may despair
 Of comfort here, seek it some otherwhere.
 Maid (quoth the tailor) we no succour owe you,
 For as I guess here's none of us doth know you: 560
 Nor my remembrance any thought can seize
 That I have ever seen you in my days.
 Seen you? nay, therein confident I am ;
 Nay, till this time I never heard your name,
 Excepting once, and by this token chief, 565
 My neighbour at that instant call'd me thief.
 By this you see you are unknown among us,
 We cannot help you, though your stay may wrong us.

Thus went I on, and further went in woe :
 For as shrill-sounding Fame, that's never slow, 570
 Grows in her going, and increaseth more,
 Where she is now, than where she was before :
 So Grief (that never healthy, ever sick,
 That froward scholar to arithmetic,
 Who doth division and subtraction fly, 575
 And chiefly learns to add and multiply)
 In longest journeys hath the strongest strength,
 And is at hand, suppress'd, unquail'd at length.

Between two hills, the highest Phœbus sees
 Gallantly crown'd with large sky-kissing trees, 580
 Under whose shade the humble valleys lay ;
 And wild boars from their dens their gambols play :
 There lay a gravell'd walk o'ergrown with green,
 Where neither tract of man nor beast was seen.

Description of a solitary vale.

And as the ploughman, when the land he tills, 585
 Throws up the fruitful earth in ridged hills,
 Between whose chevron form he leaves a balk ;
 So 'twixt those hills had Nature fram'd this walk,
 Not over-dark, nor light, in angles bending,
 And like the gliding of a snake, descending ; 590
 All hush'd and silent as the mid of night ;
 No chatt'ring pie, nor crow appear'd in sight ;
 But further in I heard the turtle-dove
 Singing sad dirges on her lifeless love.

Birds that compassion from the rocks could bring, 595
 Had only license in that place to sing :
 Whose doleful notes the melancholy cat
 Close in a hollow tree sat wond'ring at.
 And trees that on the hill-side comely grew,
 When any little blast of Æol blew, 600
 Did nod their curled heads, as they would be
 The judges to approve their melody.

Just half the way this solitary grove,
 A crystal spring from either hill-side strove, [605
 Which of them first should woo the meeker ground,
 And makes the pebbles dance unto their sound.
 But as when children having leave to play,
 And near their master's eye sport out the day,
 (Beyond condition) in their childish toys
 Oft vex their tutor with too great a noise, 610

587.—Chevron, zigzag.

587.—Balk, a bank or ridge of land left by the plough.

And make him send some servant out of door,
 To cease their clamour, lest they play no more :
 So when the pretty rill a place espies,
 Where with the pebbles she would wantonize,
 And that her upper stream so much doth wrong
 her 615

To drive her thence, and let her play no longer ;
 If she with too loud mutt'ring ran away,
 As being much incens'd to leave her play,
 A western, mild and pretty whispering gale
 Came dallying with the leaves along the dale, 620
 And seem'd as with the water it did chide,
 Because it ran so long unpacified :
 Yea, and methought it bade her leave that coil,
 Or he would choke her up with leaves and soil :
 Whereat the riv'let in my mind did weep, 625
 And hurl'd her head into a silent deep.

Now he that guides the chariot of the sun,
 Upon th' ecliptic circle had so run,
 That his brass-hoof'd fire-breathing horses wan
 The stately height of the meridian : 630
 And the day-lab'ring man (who all the morn
 Had from the quarry with his pickaxe torn
 A large well-squared stone, which he would cut
 To serve his stile, or for some water-shut)
 Seeing the sun preparing to decline, 635
 Took out his bag, and sat him down to dine :

623.—Coil, tumult, bustle.

635.—Water-shut, a floodgate, dam.

When by a sliding, yet not steep descent,
 I gain'd a place, ne'er poet did invent
 The like for sorrow ; not in all this round
 A fitter seat for passion can be found. 640

As when a dainty fount, and crystal spring,
 Got newly from the earth's imprisoning,
 And ready prest some channel clear to win,
 Is round his rise by rocks immured in,
 And from the thirsty earth would be withheld, 645
 Till to the cistern top the waves have swell'd,
 But that a careful hind the well hath found,
 As he walks sadly through his parched ground ;
 Whose patience suff'ring not his land to stay
 Until the water o'er the cistern play, 650
 He gets a pickaxe, and with blows so stout
 Digs on the rock, that all the groves about
 Resound his stroke, and still the rock doth charge,
 Till he hath made a hole both long and large,
 Whereby the waters from their prison run 655
 To close earth's gaping wounds made by the sun :
 So through these high-rai's'd hills, embracing round
 This shady, sad, and solitary ground,
 Some power (respecting one whose heavy moan
 Requir'd a place to sit and weep alone) 660
 Had cut a path, whereby the grieved wight
 Might freely take the comfort of this site.
 About the edges of whose roundly form

643.—Ready prest, ready and eager.

In order grew such trees as do adorn
 The sable hearse, and sad forsaken mate, 665
 And trees whose tears their loss commiserate.
 Such are the cypress, and the weeping myrrh,
 The dropping amber, and the refin'd fir,
 The bleeding vine, the wat'ry sycamore,
 And willow for the forlorn paramour ; 670
 In comely distance : underneath whose shade
 Most neat in rudeness Nature arbours made :
 Some had a light, some so obscure a seat,
 Would entertain a suff'rance ne'er so great :
 Where grieved wights sat (as I after found, 675 Whose heavy hearts the height of sorrow crown'd)
 Wailing in saddest tunes the dooms of Fate
 On men by virtue cleeped fortunate.

The first note that I heard I soon was won
 To think the sighs of fair Endymion ; 680
 The subject of whose mournful heavy lay
 Was his declining with fair Cynthia.

Next him a great man sat, in woe no less ;
 Tears were but barren shadows to express
 The substance of his grief, and therefore stood 685
 Distilling from his heart red streams of blood :
 He was a swain whom all the Graces kiss'd,

679.—The first note, etc., referring to Sir Walter Raleigh, who was for some time in disgrace at Court.

682.—Cynthia, Queen Elizabeth.

683.—A great man, Robert Devereux, second Earl of Essex.
See Note.

A brave, heroic, worthy martialist :
 Yet on the downs he oftentimes was seen
 To draw the merry maidens of the green 690
 With his sweet voice : once, as he sat alone,
 He sung the outrage of the lazy drone
 Upon the lab'ring bee, in strains so rare,
 That all the flitting pinionists of air
 Attentive sat, and in their kinds did long 695
 To learn some note from his well-timed song.
 Exiled Naso (from whose golden pen
 The Muses did distil delights for men)
 Thus sang of Cephalus (whose name was worn
 Within the bosom of the blushing Morn :) 700
 He had a dart was never set on wing,
 But Death flew with it : he could never fling,
 But life fled from the place where stuck the head.
 A hunter's frolic life in woods he led
 In separation from his yoked mate, 705
 Whose beauty, once, he valued at a rate
 Beyond Aurora's cheek, when she (in pride)
 Promis'd their offspring should be deified ;
 Procris she hight ; who (seeking to restore Herself that happiness she had before) 710
 Unto the green wood wends, omits no pain
 Might bring her to her lord's embrace again :
 But Fate thus cross'd her, coming where he lay
 Wearied with hunting all a summer's day,

633.—Martialist, a soldier.694.—Pinionists, winged creatures, birds.

He somewhat heard within the thicket rush, 715
 And deeming it some beast hid in a bush,
 Raised himself, then set on wing a dart,
 Which took a sad rest in the restless heart
 Of his chaste wife ; who with a bleeding breast
 Left love and life and slept in endless rest. 720
 With Procris' heavy fate this shepherd's wrong
 Might be compar'd, and ask as sad a song.

In th' autumn of his youth and manhood's spring,
 Desert (grown now a most dejected thing)
 Won him the favour of a royal maid, 725
 Who with Diana's nymphs in forests stray'd,
 And liv'd a huntress' life, exempt from fear.
 She once encounter'd with a surly bear,
 Near to a crystal fountain's flowery brink :
 Heat brought them thither both, and both would drink, 730

When from her golden quiver she took forth
 A dart, above the rest esteem'd for worth,
 And sent it to his side : the gaping wound
 Gave purple streams to cool the parched ground. [735
 Whereat he gnash'd his teeth, storm'd his hurt limb,
 Yielded the earth what it denied him :
 Yet sunk not there, but (wrapt in horror) hied
 Unto his hellish cave, despair'd and died.

After the bear's just death the quick'ning sun
 Had twice six times about the zodiac run, 740

728.—A surly bear, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, in allusion probably to his arms, a bear and ragged staff.

And (as respectless) never cast an eye
 Upon the night-enveil'd Cimmerii,
 When this brave swain, approved valorous,
 In opposition of a tyrannous
 And bloody savage being long time gone, 745
 Quelling his rage with faithless Gerion,
 Returned from the stratagems of wars,
 Enriched with his quail'd foes' bootless scars,
 To see the clear eyes of his dearest love,
 And that her skill in herbs might help remove 750
 The freshing of a wound which he had got
 In her defence by Envy's poison'd shot,
 And coming through a grove wherein his fair
 Lay with her breasts display'd to take the air,
 His rushing through the boughs made her arise, 755
 And dreading some wild beast's rude enterprise,
 Directs towards the noise a sharpen'd dart,
 That reach'd the life of his undaunted heart,
 Which when she knew, twice twenty moons nigh spent
 In tears for him, and died in languishment. 760
 Within an arbour shadow'd with a vine,
 Mixed with rosemary and eglantine,
 A shepherdess was set, as fair as young,
 Whose praise full many a shepherd whilom sung,
 Who on an altar fair had to her name, 765
 In consecration, many an anagram :

742.—Cimmerii. See Note at p. 108.746.—Gerion, Philip II., King of Spain. See Note.

And when with sugar'd strains they strove to raise
 Worth to a garland of immortal bays,
 She as the learned'st maid was chose by them,
 Her flaxen hair crown'd with an anadem, 770
 To judge who best deserv'd, for she could fit
 The height of praise unto the height of wit.
 But, well-a-day ! those happy times were gone :
 Millions admit a small subtraction.

And as the year hath first his jocund spring, 775
 Wherein the leaves, to birds' sweet carolling,
 Dance with the wind ; then sees the summer's day
 Perfect the embryon blossom of each spray ;
 Next cometh autumn, when the threshed sheaf
 Loseth his grain, and every tree his leaf ; 780
 Lastly, cold winter's rage, with many a storm,
 Threats the proud pines which Ida's top adorn,
 And makes the sap leave succourless the shoot,
 Shrinking to comfort his decaying root :
 Or as a quaint musician being won 785
 To run a point of sweet division,
 Gets by degrees unto the highest key ;
 Then, with like order, falleth in his play
 Into a deeper tone ; and lastly, throws
 His period in a diapason close : 790
 So every human thing terrestrial,

770.—Anadem, garland.

785.—Quaint, skilled.

786.—Division, rapid passage.

790.—Diapason close, a close with the interval of an octave.

His utmost height attain'd, bends to his fall.
 And as a comely youth, in fairest age,
 Enamour'd on a maid, whose parentage
 Had Fate adorn'd, as Nature deck'd her eye, 795
 Might at a beck command a monarchy,
 But poor and fair could never yet bewitch
 A miser's mind, preferring foul and rich,
 And therefore, as a king's heart left behind,
 When as his corps are borne to be enshrin'd, 800
 (His parents' will, a law) like that dead corse,
 Leaving his heart, is brought unto his horse,
 Carried unto a place that can impart
 No secret embassy unto his heart,
 Climbs some proud hill, whose stately eminence 805
 Vassals the fruitful vale's circumference :
 From whence, no sooner can his lights descry
 The place enriched by his mistress' eye,
 But some thick cloud his happy prospect blends,
 And he in sorrow rais'd, in tears descends: 810
 So this sad nymph (whom all commiserate)
 Once pac'd the hill of greatness and of state,
 And got the top ; but when she 'gan address
 Her sight, from thence to see true happiness,
 Fate interpos'd an envious cloud of fears, 815
 And she withdrew into this vale of tears,
 Where Sorrow so enthrall'd best Virtue's jewel,
 Stones check'd Grief's hardness, call'd her too, too cruel.

A stream of tears upon her fair cheeks flows,

Song 4.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 135

As morning dew upon the damask rose, 823
Or crystal glass veiling vermilion,
Or drops of milk on the carnation :
She sang and wept (O ye sea-binding cleeves, Yield tributary drops, for Virtue grieves !)
And to the period of her sad sweet key 825
Intwinn'd her case with chaste Penelope.
But see, the drizzling south my mournful strain
Answers in weeping drops of quick'ning rain ;
And since this day we can no further go,
Restless I rest within this vale of woe, 830
Until the modest Morn on Earth's vast zone
The ever gladsome Day shall re-enthroned.

823.—Cleeves, cliffs

THE FIFTH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

In notes that rocks to pity move,
 Idya^a sings her buried love :
 And from her horn of plenty gives
 Comfort to Truth, whom none relieves.
 Repentance' house next calls me on,
 With Riot's true conversion :
 Leaving Amintas' love to Truth
 To be the theme the Muse ensu'th.

HERE full of April, veil'd with Sorrow's wing,
 For lovely lays, I dreary dirges sing.
 Whoso hath seen young lads (to sport themselves)
 Run in a low ebb to the sandy shelves ;
 Where seriously they work in digging wells, 5
 Or building childish sorts of cockle-shells ;
 Or liquid water each to other bandy ;
 Or with the pebbles play at handy-dandy,

^a Idya, the pastoral name of England.

4.—Shelves, rocks.

8.—Handy-dandy, a game played by two children.

Till unawares the tide hath clos'd them round,
 And they must wade it through or else be drown'd : 10
 May (if unto my pipe he listen well)

My Muse' distress with theirs soon parallel.
 For where I whilom sung the loves of swains,
 And woo'd the crystal currents of the plains,
 Teaching the birds to love, whilst every tree 15

Gave his attention to my melody :
 Fate now (as envying my too-happy theme)
 Hath round begirt my song with Sorrow's stream,
 Which till my Muse wade through and get on shore,
 My grief-swoll'n soul can sing of love no more. 20

But turn we now (yet not without remorse)
 To heavenly Aletheia's sad discourse,
 That did from Fida's eyes salt tears exhale,
 When thus she show'd the solitary vale.

Just in the midst this joy-forsaken ground 25
 A hillock stood, with springs embraced round,
 (And with a crystal ring did seem to marry
 Themselves to this small Isle sad-solitary,
 Upon whose breast, which trembled as it ran,
 Rode the fair downy-silver-coated swan : 30
 And on the banks each cypress bow'd his head,
 To hear the swan sing her own epiced.*

As when the gallant youth which live upon
 The western downs of lovely Albion,
 Meeting, some festival to solemnize, 35
 Choose out two, skill'd in wrestling exercise,
 Who strongly, at the wrist or collar cling,

* A funeral song before the corpse be interred.

Whilst arm-in-arm the people make a ring :
 So did the water round this Isle enlink,
 And so the trees grew on the water's brink ; 40
 Waters their streams about the Island scatter
 And trees perform'd as much unto the water :
 Under whose shade the nightingale would bring
 Her chirping young, and teach them how to sing.
 The woods' most sad musicians thither hie, 45
 As it had been the Sylvians' Castalie,
 And warbled forth such elegiac strains,
 That struck the winds dumb ; and the motley plains
 Were fill'd with envy that such shady places
 Held all the world's delights in their embraces. 50

O how (methinks) the imps of Mneme bring
 Dews of invention from their sacred spring !
 Here could I spend that spring of poesy,
 Which not twice ten suns have bestow'd on me ;
 And tell the world the Muses' love appears 55
 In nonag'd youth as in the length of years.
 But ere my Muse erected have the frame,
 Wherein t' enshrine an unknown shepherd's name,
 She many a grove, and other woods must tread, [60
 More hills, more dales, more founts must be display'd,
 More meadows, rocks, and from them all elect
 Matter befitting such an architect.

As children on a play-day leave the schools,

48.—Motley, various-coloured.

51.—Imps, offspring. Mneme, Greek μνήμη, memory.

56.—Nonag'd youth, not of full age.

And gladly run unto the swimming pools ;
 Or in the thickets, all with nettles stung, 65
 Rush to despoil some sweet thrush of her young ;
 Or with their hats (for fish) lade in a brook
 Withouten pain ; but when the Morn doth look
 Out of the Eastern gates, a snail would faster
 Glide to the schools, than they unto their master : 70
 So when before I sung the songs of birds,
 Whilst every moment sweeten'd lines affords,
 I pip'd devoid of pain, but now I come
 Unto my task, my Muse is stricken dumb.
 My blubb'ring pen her sable tears lets fall 75
 In characters right hieroglyphical,
 And mixing with my tears are ready turning
 My late white paper to a weed of mourning ;
 Or ink and paper strive how to impart
 My words, the weeds they wore, within my heart : 80
 Or else the blots unwilling are my rhymes
 And their sad cause should live till after-times ;
 Fearing if men their subject should descry,
 They forthwith would dissolve in tears and die.
 Upon the Island's craggy rising hill 85
 A quadrant ran, wherein by artless skill,
 At every corner Nature did erect
 A column rude, yet void of all defect :
 Whereon a marble lay. The thick-grown briar,
 And prickled hawthorn (woven all entire) 90
 Together clung, and barr'd the gladsome light
 From any entrance, fitting only night.

No way to it but one, steep and obscure,
 The stairs of rugged stone, seldom in ure,
 All overgrown with moss, as Nature sat 95
 To entertain Grief with a cloth of state.

Hardly unto the top I had ascended,
 But that the trees (siding the steps) befriended
 My weary limbs, who bowing down their arms
 Gave hold unto my hands to 'scape from harms : 100
 Which evermore are ready, still present
 Our feet, in climbing places eminent.
 Before the door (to hinder Phœbus' view)
 A shady box-tree grasped with a yew,
 As in the place' behalf they menac'd war 105
 Against the radiance of each sparkling star.
 And on their barks (which Time had nigh deprav'd)
 These lines (it seem'd) had been of old engrav'd :
 " This place was fram'd of yore to be possess'd
 By one which sometime hath been happiest." 110

Lovely Idya, the most beauteous
 Of all the darlings of Oceanus,
 Hesperia's envy and the Western pride,
 Whose party-coloured garment Nature dy'd
 In more eye-pleasing hues, with richer grain, 115
 Than Iris' bow attending April's rain ;
 Whose lily white inshaded with the rose
 Had that man seen who sung th' Eneidos,
 Dido had in oblivion slept, and she

Had given his Muse her best eternity. 120

Had brave Atrides, who did erst employ
 His force to mix his dead with those of Troy,
 Been proffer'd for a truce her feigned peace
 Helen had stay'd, and that had gone to Greece :
 The Phrygian soil had not been drunk with blood, 125

Achilles longer breath'd, and Troy yet stood :
 The prince of poets had not sung his story,
 My friend had lost his ever-living glory.

But as a snowy Swan, who many a day
 On Tamar's swelling breasts hath had her play, 130
 For further pleasure doth assay to swim
 My native Tavy, or the sandy Plim ;
 And on the panting billows bravely rides,
 Whilst country-lasses, walking on the sides,
 Admire her beauty, and with clapping hands, 135
 Would force her leave the stream, and tread the sands,
 When she, regardless, swims to th' other edge,
 Until an envious briar, or tangling sedge,
 Despoils her plumes ; or else a sharpen'd beam
 Pierceth her breast, and on the bloody stream 140
 She pants for life : so whilom rode this maid
 On streams of worldly bliss, more rich array'd
 With Earth's delight than thought could put in ure
 To glut the senses of an epicure.

128.—My friend, George Chapman, translator of Homer's poems.

130.—The old editions read " his play."

Whilst neighb'ring kings upon their frontiers stood,
 And offer'd for her dower huge seas of blood : [145
 And perjur'd Gerion to win her rent
 The Indian rocks for gold, and bootless spent Almost his patrimony for her sake,
 Yet nothing like respected as the Drake 150
 That scour'd her channels, and destroy'd the weed
 Which spoil'd her fishers' nets and fishes' breed.
 At last her truest love she threw upon
 A royal youth, whose like, whose paragon,
 Heaven never lent the Earth : so great a spirit 155
 The world could not contain, nor kingdoms merit :
 And therefore Jove did with the saints enthrone him,
 And left his lady nought but tears to moan him.

Within this place (as woful as my verse)
 She with her crystal founts bedew'd his hearse ; 160
 Inveiled with a sable weed she sat,
 Singing this song which stones dissolved at.

WHAT time the world, clad in a mourning-robe,
 A stage made for a woful tragedy ;
 When showers of tears from the celestial globe 165
 Bewail'd the fate of sea-lov'd Britany ;
 When sighs as frequent were as various sights,
 When Hope lay bed-rid, and all pleasures dying,

150.—The Drake, Sir Francis Drake.

154.—A royal youth, Henry, Prince of Wales. See Note.

When Envy wept,
And Comfort slept, 170

When Cruelty itself sat almost crying,
Nought being heard but what the mind affrights ;
When Autumn had disrob'd the Summer's pride,
Then England's honour, Europe's wonder, died.

O saddest strain that e'er the Muses sung ! 175

A text of woe for Grief to comment on ;

Tears, sighs, and sobs, give passage to my tongue,

Or I shall spend you till the last is gone.

Which done, my heart in flames of burning love

(Wanting his moisture) shall to cinders turn ; 180

But first, by me

Bequeathed be

To strew the place wherein his sacred urn

Shall be enclos'd : this might in many move

The like effect : who would not do it when 185

No grave befits him but the hearts of men ?

That man whose mass of sorrows hath been such,

That by their weight laid on each several part,

His fountains are so dry, he but as much

As one poor drop hath left to ease his heart ; 190

Why should he keep it ? since the time doth call,

That he ne'er better can bestow it in ;

If so he fears

That others' tears

In greater number, greatest prizes win ; 195
 Know none gives more than he which giveth all.
 Then he which hath but one poor tear in store,
 O let him spend that drop, and weep no more.

Why flows not Helicon beyond her strands?
 Is Henry dead, and do the Muses sleep? 200
 Alas ! I see each one amazed stands ;
 " Shallow fords mutter, silent are the deep."
 Fain would they tell their griefs, but know not where ;
 All are so full, nought can augment their store :
 Then how should they 205
 Their griefs display
 To men so cloy'd, they fain would hear no more,
 Though blaming those whose plaints they cannot hear ?
 And with this wish their passions I allow,
 May that Muse never speak that's silent now ! 210

Is Henry dead ? alas ! and do I live
 To sing a screech-owl's note that he is dead ?
 If any one a fitter theme can give,
 Come, give it now, or never to be read.
 But let him see it do of horror taste, 215
 Anguish, destruction : could it rend in sunder
 With fearful groans
 The senseless stones,

Yet should we hardly be enforc'd to wonder,
Our former griefs would so exceed their last. 220
Time cannot make our sorrows ought completer ;
Nor add one grief to make our mourning greater.

England was ne'er engirt with waves till now ;
Till now it held part with the Continent.
Aye me ! some one in pity show me how 225
I might in doleful numbers so lament,
That any one which lov'd him, hated me,
Might dearly love me for lamenting him.

Alas ! my plaint
In such constraint 230
Breaks forth in rage, that though my passions swim,
Yet are they drowned ere they landed be :
Imperfect lines ! O happy ! were I hurl'd
And cut from life as England from the world.

O happier had we been ! if we had been 235
Never made happy by enjoying thee !
Where hath the glorious eye of heaven seen
A spectacle of greater misery ?
Time, turn thy course, and bring again the spring ;
Break Nature's laws ; search the records of old, 240
If aught befell
Might parallel
Sad Britain's case : weep, rocks, and Heaven behold
What seas of sorrow she is plunged in,

Where storms of woe so mainly have beset her, 245
 She hath no place for worse, nor hope for better.

Britain was whilom known (by more than fame)
 To be one of the Islands Fortunate.
 What frantic man would give her now that name,
 Lying so rueful and disconsolate? 250

Hath not her wat'ry zone in murmuring
 Fill'd every shore with echoes of her cry?

Yes, Thetis raves,
 And bids her waves

Bring all the nymphs within her emperie 255
 To be assistant in her sorrowing.

See where they sadly sit on Isis' shore,
 And rend their hairs as they would joy no more.

Isis, the glory of the Western world,
 When our heroë (honour'd Essex) died, 260
 Strucken with wonder, back again she hurl'd,
 And fill'd her banks with an unwonted tide :
 As if she stood in doubt, if it were so,
 And for the certainty had turn'd her way.

Why do not now 265
 Her waves reflow?

Poor nymph, her sorrows will not let her stay ;
 Or flies to tell the world her country's woe ;
 Or cares not to come back, perhaps, as showing
 Our tears should make the flood, not her reflow-
 ing. 270

Sometimes a tyrant held the reins of Rome,
Wishing to all the city but one head,
That all at once might undergo his doom,
And by one blow from life be severed.
Fate wish'd the like on England, and 'twas
given : 275

O miserable men, enthrall'd to Fate !
Whose heavy hand
That never scann'd
The misery of kingdoms ruinate,
Minding to leave her of all joys bereaven, 280
With one sad blow (alas ! can worser fall ?)
Hath given this little Isle her funeral.

O come, ye blessed imps of Memory,
Erect a new Parnassus on his grave !
There tune your voices to an elegy, 285
The saddest note that e'er Apollo gave.
Let every accent make the stander-by
Keep time unto your song with dropping tears,
Till drops that fell
Have made a well 290
To swallow him which still unmoved hears !
And though myself prove senseless of your cry,
Yet gladly should my light of life grow dim,
To be entomb'd in tears are wept for him.

When last he sicken'd, then we first began 295
 To tread the labyrinth of woe about :
 And by degrees we further inward ran,
 Having his thread of life to guide us out.
 But Destiny no sooner saw us enter
 Sad Sorrow's maze, immured up in night, 300
 (Where nothing dwells
 But cries and yells
 Thrown from the hearts of men depriv'd of light,)
 When we were almost come into the centre,
 Fate (cruelly) to bar our joys returning, 305
 Cut off our thread, and left us all in mourning.

If you have seen at foot of some brave hill
 Two springs arise, and delicately trill
 In gentle chidings through an humble dale,
 Where tufty daisies nod at every gale, 310
 And on the banks a swain, with laurel crown'd,
 Marrying his sweet notes with their silver sound ;
 When as the spongy clouds swoll'n big with water,
 Throw their conception on the world's theatre,
 Down from the hills the rained waters roar, 315
 Whilst every leaf drops to augment their store ;
 Grumbling the stones fall o'er each other's back,
 Rending the green turfs with their cataract,*
 And through the meadows run with such a noise,
 That taking from the swain the fountain's voice, 320
 Enforce him leave their margent, and alone

* A fall of waters from a very high place.

Couple his base pipe with their baser tone :
 Know (Shepherdess) that so I lent an ear
 To those sad wights whose plaints I told whilere ; Aletheia to Fida.
 But when this goodly lady 'gan address 325
 Her heavenly voice to sweeten heaviness,
 It drown'd the rest, as torrents little springs ;
 And stricken mute at her great sorrowings,
 Lay still and wonder'd at her piteous moan,
 Wept at her griefs, and did forget their own, 330
 Whilst I attentive sat, and did impart
 Tears when they wanted drops, and from a heart,
 As high in sorrow as e'er creature wore,
 Lent thrilling groans to such as had no more.
 Had wise Ulysses (who regardless flung 335
 Along the ocean when the sirens sung)
 Pass'd by and seen her on the sea-torn cleeves
 Wail her lost love (while Neptune's wat'ry thieves Durst not approach for rocks :) to see her face
 He would have hazarded his Grecian race, 340
 Thrust headlong to the shore, and to her eyes
 Offer'd his vessel as a sacrifice.
 Or had the sirens on a neighbour shore
 Heard in what raping notes she did deplore
 Her buried glory, they had left their shelves, 345
 And to come near her would have drown'd themselves.

335.—Flung, hastened.

337.—Cleaves, cliffs.

344.—Raping, ravishing.

Aletheia
cometh to Idya.

Now silence lock'd the organs of that voice
 Whereat each merry sylvan wont rejoice,
 When with a bended knee to her I came,
 And did impart my grief and hated name. 350
 But first a pardon begg'd, if that my cause
 So much constrain'd me as to break the laws
 Of her wish'd sequestration, or ask'd bread
 (To save a life) from her whose life was dead ;
 But lawless famine, self-consuming hunger, 355
 Alas ! compell'd me : had I stayed longer,
 My weaken'd limbs had been my want's forc'd need,
 And I had fed on that I could not feed.
 When she (compassionate) to my sad moan
 Did lend a sigh, and stole it from her own ; 360
 And (woful lady wreck'd on hapless shelf)
 Yielded me comfort, yet had none herself :
 Told how she knew me well since I had been
 As chiefest consort of the Fairy Queen.
 O happy Queen ! for ever, ever praise 365
 Dwell on thy tomb ; the period of all days
 Only seal up thy fame ; and as thy birth
 Enrich'd thy temples on the fading earth,
 So have thy virtues crown'd thy blessed soul,
 Where the first Mover with his words control ; 370
 As with a girdle the huge ocean binds ;
 Gathers into his fist the nimble winds ;
 Stops the bright courser in his hot career ;

Commands the moon twelve courses in a year :
 Live thou with him in endless bliss, while we 375
 Admire all virtues in admiring thee.

Thou, thou, the fautress of the learned Well ;
 Thou nursing mother of God's Israel ;
 Thou, for whose loving truth, the heavens rains
 Sweet mel and manna on our flow'ry plains ; 380
 Thou, by whose hand the sacred Trine did bring Us out of bonds, from bloody Bonnering.
 Ye suckling babes, for ever bless that name
 Releas'd your burning in your mothers' flame !
 Thrice-blessed maiden, by whose hand was given 385

Free liberty to taste the food of Heaven.
 Never forget her (Albion's lovely daughters)
 Which led you to the springs of living waters !
 And if my Muse her glory fail to sing,
 May to my mouth my tongue for ever cling ! 390

Herewith (at hand) taking her horn of plenty
 Fill'd with the choice of every orchard's dainty, 395
 As pears, plums, apples, the sweet raspis-berry,
 The quince, the apricock, the blushing cherry,
 The mulberry (his black from Thisbe taking),
 The cluster'd filbert, grapes oft merry-making.
 (This fruitful horn th' immortal ladies fill'd
 With all the pleasures that rough forests yield,

Idya
 cherisheth
 Aletheia.

377.—Fautress, patroness.

381.—Trine, Trinity.

382.—Bonnering. See Note.

395.—Thisbe. See Note.

And gave Idya, with a further blessing,
 That thence, as from a garden, without dressing 400
 She these should ever have, and never want
 Store, from an orchard without tree or plant.)
 With a right willing hand she gave me hence
 The stomach's comforter, the pleasing quince ;
 And for the chiefest cherisher she lent 405
 The royal thistle's milky nourishment.

Here stay'd I long ; but when to see Aurora
 Kiss the perfum'd cheeks of dainty Flora,
 Without the vale I trod one lovely morn,
 With true intention of a quick return, 410
 An unexpected chance strove to defer
 My going back, and all the love of her.
 But, maiden, see the day is waxen old,
 And 'gins to shut in with the marigold.
 The neatherd's kine do bellow in the yard ; 415
 And dairy maidens, for the milk prepar'd,
 Are drawing at the udder ; long ere now
 The ploughman hath unyok'd his team from plough.
 My transformation to a fearful hind
 Shall to unfold a fitter season find. 420
 Meanwhile yond palace, whose brave turrets' tops
 Over the stately wood survey the copse,
 Promis'th (if sought) a wished place of rest,
 Till Sol our hemisphere have repossess'd.
 Now must my Muse afford a strain to Riot, 425

Who, almost kill'd with his luxurious diet,
 Lay eating grass (as dogs) within a wood,
 So to disgorge the undigested food.
 By whom fair Aletheia pass'd along
 With Fida, queen of every shepherd's song, 430
 By them unseen (for he securely lay
 Under the thick of many a leaved spray)
 And through the levell'd meadows gently threw
 Their neatest feet, wash'd with refreshing dew,
 Where he durst not approach, but on the edge 435
 Of th' hilly wood, in covert of a hedge,
 Went onward with them, trod with them in paces,
 And far off much admir'd their forms and graces.
 Into the plains at last he headlong venter'd ;
 But they the hill had got and palace enter'd. 440
 When, like a valiant, well-resolved man,
 Seeking new paths i' th' pathless ocean,
 Unto the shores of monster-breeding Nile,
 Or through the North to the unpeopled Thyle,
 Where, from the equinoctial of the spring 445
 To that of autumn, Titan's golden ring
 Is never off ; and till the spring again
 In gloomy darkness all the shores remain :
 Or if he furrow up the briny sea
 To cast his anchors in the frozen bay 450

444.—Thyle, or rather Thule, the name given by Greek and Roman geographers to a land situated to the North of Britain, which they held to be the most northerly portion of Europe—indeed of the known world.

Of woody Norway, who hath ever fed
 Her people more with scaly fish than bread,
 Though rattling mounts of ice thrust at his helm,
 And by their fall still threaten to o'erwhelm
 His little vessel, and though Winter throw 455
 (What age should on their heads) white caps of snow ;
 Strives to congeal his blood ; he cares not for't,
 But arm'd in mind, gets his intended port :

So Riot, though full many doubts arise
 Whose unknown ends might grasp his enterprise, 460
 Climbs towards the palace, and with gait demure,
 With hanging head, a voice as feigning pure,
 With torn and ragged coat, his hairy legs
 Bloody, as scratch'd with briars, he entrance begs.

Remembrance sat as portress of this gate : 465
 A lady always musing as she sat,
 Except when sometime suddenly she rose,
 And with a back-bent eye, at length, she throws
 Her hands to heaven ; and in a wond'ring guise,
 Star'd on each object with her fixed eyes : 470

As some wayfaring man passing a wood,
 Whose waving top hath long a sea-mark stood,
 Goes jogging on, and in his mind nought hath,
 But how the primrose finely strew the path,
 Or sweetest violets lay down their heads 475
 At some tree's root on mossy feather-beds,
 Until his heel receives an adder's sting,
 Whereat he starts, and back his head doth fling.

She never mark'd the suit he did prefer,

But (careless) let him pass along by her. 480

So on he went into a spacious court,
 All trodden bare with multitudes' resort ;
 At th' end whereof a second gate appears,
 The fabric show'd full many thousand years,
 Whose postern-key that time a lady kept, 485

Her eyes all swoll'n as if she seldom slept,
 And would by fits her golden tresses tear,
 And strive to stop her breath with her own hair.
 Her lily hand (not to be lik'd by Art)

A pair of pincers held ; wherewith her heart 490
 Was hardly grasped, while the piled stones
 Re-echoed her lamentable groans.

Here at this gate the custom long had been
 When any sought to be admitted in,
 Remorse thus us'd them, ere they had the key, 495
 And all these torments felt, pass'd on their way.

When Riot came, the lady's pains nigh done,
 She pass'd the gate ; and then Remorse begun
 To fetter Riot in strong iron chains,
 And doubting much his patience in the pains : 500
 As when a smith and 's man, lame Vulcan's fellows,
 Call'd from the anvil or the puffing bellows,
 To clap a well-wrought shoe, for more than pay,
 Upon a stubborn nag of Galloway,
 Or unback'd jennet, or a Flanders mare, 505
 That at the forge stand snuffing of the air ;

505.—Jennet, a small Spanish horse.

The swarty smith spits in his buckhorn fist,
 And bids his man bring out the five-fold twist,
 His shackles, shacklocks, hampers, gyves and chains,
 His linked bolts ; and with no little pains 510
 These make him fast ; and lest all these should falter,
 Unto a post with some six-doubled halter
 He binds his head ; yet all are of the least
 To curb the fury of the headstrong beast ;
 When, if a carrier's jade he brought unto him, 515
 His man can hold his foot whilst he can shoe him :
 Remorse was so enforc'd to bind him stronger,
 Because his faults requir'd infliction longer
 Than any sin-press'd wight which many a day
 Since Judas hung himself had pass'd that way. 520
 When all the cruel torments he had borne,
 Galled with chains, and on the rack nigh torn,
 Pinching with glowing pincers his own heart,
 All lame and restless, full of wounds and smart,
 He to the postern creeps, so inward hies, 525
 And from the gate a two-fold path descries,
 One leading up a hill, Repentance' way,
 And (as more worthy) on the right hand lay :
 The other headlong, steep, and liken'd well
 Unto the path which tendeth down to hell : 530
 All steps that thither went show'd no returning,
 The port to pains, and to eternal mourning ;

507.—Swarty, grimy.509.—Shacklocks locks for fetters.

Where certain Death liv'd, in an ebon chair,
 The soul's black homicide, meagre Despair,
 Had his abode : there 'gainst the craggy rocks 535
 Some dash'd their brains out with relentless knocks ;
 Others on trees (O most accursed elves !)
 Are fastening knots, so to undo themselves.

Here one in sin, not daring to appear
 At Mercy's seat with one repentant tear, 540
 Within his breast was lancing of an eye,
 That unto God it might for vengeance cry ;
 There from a rock a wretch but newly fell,
 All torn in pieces, to go whole to hell.

Here with a sleepy potion one thinks fit 545
 To grasp with Death, but would not know of it ;
 There in a pool two men their lives expire,
 And die in water to revive in fire.

Here hangs the blood upon the guiltless stones ;
 There worms consume the flesh of human bones. 550
 Here lies an arm ; a leg there ; here a head ;
 Without other limbs of men unburied,
 Scatt'ring the ground, and as regardless hurl'd,
 As they at virtue spurned in the world.

Fie, hapless wretch ! O thou, whose graces sterv-
 ing, 555
 Measur'st God's mercy by thine own deserving ;
 Which cri'st (distrustful of the power of Heaven)
 " My sins are greater than can be forgiven ; "
 Which still are ready to " curse God and die "
 At every stripe of worldly misery : 560

O learn thou, in whose breasts the dragon lurks,
 God's mercy ever is o'er all his works.

Know he is pitiful, apt to forgive ;

Would not a sinner's death, but that he live.

O ever, ever rest upon that word 565

Which doth assure thee, though his two-edg'd sword

Be drawn in justice 'gainst thy sinful soul,

To separate the rotten from the whole ;

Yet if a sacrifice of prayer be sent him,

He will not strike ; or, if he strike, repent him. 570

Let none despair : for cursed Judas' sin

Was not so much in yielding up the King

Of life to death, as when he thereupon

Wholly despair'd of God's remission.

Riot, long doubting stood which way were best

575

To lead his steps : at last, preferring rest -

(As foolishly he thought) before the pain

Was to be past ere he could well attain

The high-built palace, 'gan adventure on

That path which led to all confusion, 580

When suddenly a voice as sweet as clear,

With words divine began entice his ear :

Whereat, as in a rapture, on the ground

He prostrate lay, and all his senses found

A time of rest ; only that faculty 585

Which never can be seen, nor ever die,

That in the essence of an endless nature

Doth sympathize with the All-good Creator,

That only wak'd which cannot be interr'd
And from a heavenly choir this ditty heard. 590

Vain man, do not mistrust
Of heaven winning ;
Nor (though the most unjust)
Despair for sinning.

God will be seen his sentence changing, 595
If he behold thee wicked ways estranging.

Climb up where pleasures dwell
In flow'ry alleys ;
And taste the living well
That decks the valleys. 600

Fair Metanoia is attending
To crown thee with those joys which know no ending.

Herewith on leaden wings sleep from him flew,
When on his arm he rose, and sadly threw
Shrill acclamations ; while an hollow cave, 605
Or hanging hill, or heaven an answer gave.
O sacred essence, light'ning me this hour !
How may I lightly style thy great Power? Echo.
Power.

Power ? but of whence ? under the green-wood spray,
Or liv'st in heav'n ? say. Echo. In heavens aye. 610

In heavens aye I tell. May I it obtain
 By alms, by fasting, prayer, by pain? Echo. By pain.
 Show me the pain, 't shall be undergone :
 I to mine end will still go on. Echo. Go on.
 But whither? On! Show me the place, the time. 615
 What if the mountain I do climb? Echo. Do; climb.
 Is that the way to joys which still endure?
 O bid my soul of it be sure! Echo. Be sure.
 Then thus assured, do I climb the hill. [620
 Heaven be my guide in this thy will. Echo. I will.

As when a maid taught from her mother wing
 To tune her voice unto a silver string,
 When she should run, she rests, rests when should run,

And ends her lesson having now begun :
 Now misseth she her stop, then in her song, 625
 And doing of her best she still is wrong,
 Begins again, and yet again strikes false,
 Then in a chafe forsakes her virginals,
 And yet within an hour she tries anew,
 That with her daily pains (Art's chiefest due) 630
 She gains that charming skill; and can no less
 Tame the fierce walkers of the wilderness,
 Than that Oeagrin harpist, for whose lay

628.—Virginals, the more usual name for the keyed musical instrument, the virginal, with one string, jack and quill to each note; it was the precursor of the harpsichord.

633.—Oeagrin Harpist, Orpheus, according to some accounts, the son of Oeagrus and Clio or Polyhymnia.

Tigers with hunger pin'd and left their prey :
 So Riot, when he 'gan to climb the hill, 635
 Here maketh haste and there long standeth still,
 Now getteth up a step, then falls again,
 Yet not despairing all his nerves doth strain
 To clamber up anew, then slide his feet,
 And down he comes : but gives not over yet, 640
 For (with the maid) he hopes a time will be
 When merit shall be link'd with industry.

Now as an angler melancholy standing
 Upon a green bank yielding room for landing,
 A wriggling yellow worm thrust on his hook, 645
 Now in the midst he throws, then in a nook :
 Here pulls his line, there throws it in again,
 Mendeth his cork and bait, but all in vain,
 He long stands viewing of the curled stream ;
 At last a hungry pike, or well-grown bream 650
 Snatch at the worm, and hasting fast away,
 He knowing it a fish of stubborn sway,
 Pulls up his rod, but soft, as having skill,
 Wherewith the hook fast holds the fish's gill ;
 Then all his line he freely yieldeth him, 655
 Whilst furiously all up and down doth swim
 Th'insnared fish, here on the top doth scud,
 There underneath the banks, then in the mud,
 And with his frantic fits so scares the shoal,
 That each one takes his hide, or starting hole : 660
 By this the pike, clean wearied, underneath
 A willow lies. and pants (if fishes breathe)

Wherewith the angler gently pulls him to him,
 And lest his haste might happen to undo him,
 Lays down his rod, then takes his line in hand, 665
 And by degrees getting the fish to land,
 Walks to another pool : at length is winner
 Of such a dish as serves him for his dinner :
 So when the climber half the way had got,
 Musing he stood, and busily 'gan plot 670
 How (since the mount did always steeper tend)
 He might with steps secure his journey end.
 At last (as wand'ring boys to gather nuts)
 A hooked pole he from a hazel cuts ;
 Now throws it here, then there to take some hold, 675
 But bootless and in vain, the rocky mould
 Admits no cranny where his hazel hook
 Might promise him a step, till in a nook
 Somewhat above his reach he hath espied
 A little oak, and having often tried 680
 To catch a bough with standing on his toe,
 Or leaping up, yet not prevailing so,
 He rolls a stone towards the little tree,
 Then gets upon it, fastens warily
 His pole unto a bough, and at his drawing 685
 The early-rising crow with clam'rous cawing,
 Leaving the green bough, flies about the rock,
 Whilst twenty twenty couples to him flock :
 And now within his reach the thin leaves wave,
 With one hand only then he holds his stave, 690
 And with the other grasping first the leaves,

A pretty bough he in his fist receives ;
 Then to his girdle making fast the hook,
 His other hand another bough hath took ;
 His first, a third, and that, another gives, 695
 To bring him to the place where his root lives.
 Then, as a nimble squirrel from the wood,
 Ranging the hedges for his filberd-food,
 Sits peartly on a bough his brown nuts cracking,
 And from the shell the sweet white kernel taking, 700
 Till with their crooks and bags a sort of boys,
 To share with him, come with so great a noise,
 That he is forc'd to leave a nut nigh broke,
 And for his life leap to a neighbour oak,
 Thence to a beech, thence to a row-of ashes ; 705
 Whilst through the quagmires, and red water splashes,
 The boys run dabbling thorough thick and thin ;
 One tears his hose, another breaks his shin,
 This, torn and tatter'd, hath with much ado
 Got by the briars ; and that hath lost his shoe ; 710
 This drops his band ; that headlong falls for haste ;
 Another cries behind for being last ;
 With sticks and stones, and many a sounding holloa,
 The little fool, with no small sport, they follow,
 Whilst he, from tree to tree, from spray to spray, 715
 Gets to the wood, and hides him in his dray :

699.—Peartly, briskly.701.—Sort, set or company.706.—Plashes, pools.716.—Dray, a squirrel's nest.

Such shift made Riot ere he could get up,
 And so from bough to bough he won the top,
 Though hindrances, for ever coming there,
 Were often thrust upon him by Despair. 720

Now at his feet the stately mountain lay,
 And with a gladsome eye he 'gan survey
 What perils he had trod on since the time
 His weary feet and arms assayed to climb.
 When with a humble voice, withouten fear, 725
 Though he look'd wild and overgrown with hair,
 A gentle nymph, in russet coarse array,
 Comes and directs him onward in his way.

Description of the house of Repentance.

First, brings she him into a goodly hall,
 Fair, yet not beautified with mineral : 730
 But in a careless art and artless care
 Made loose neglect more lovely far than rare.
 Upon the floor ylav'd with marble slate,
 With sack-cloth cloth'd, many in ashes sat ;
 And round about the walls for many years 735
 Hung crystal vials of repentant tears ;
 And books of vows, and many a heavenly deed
 Lay ready open for each one to read.
 Some were immured up in little sheds,
 There to contemplate heaven, and bid their beads ;
 Others with garments thin of camel's hair, [740
 With head, and arms, and legs, and feet all bare,
 Were singing hymns to the Eternal Sage,
 For safe returning from their pilgrimage ;
 Some with a whip their pamper'd bodies beat ; 745

Others in fasting live, and seldom eat :
 But as those trees which do in India grow
 And call'd of elder swains full long ago
 The sun and moon's fair trees, full goodly dight,
 And ten times ten feet challenging their height, 750
 Having no help to overlook brave towers,
 From cool refreshing dew, or drizzling showers,
 When as the earth, as oftentimes is seen,
 Is interpos'd 'twixt Sol and Night's pale queen ;
 Or when the moon eclipseth Titan's light, 755
 The trees all comfortless robb'd of their sight
 Weep liquid drops, which plentifully shoot
 Along the outward bark down to the root,
 And by their own shed tears they ever flourish,
 So their own sorrows, their own joys do nourish : 760
 And so within this place full many a wight
 Did make his tears his food both day and night,
 And had it g[r]anted from th' Almighty great
 To swim through them unto his mercy-seat.
 Fair Metanoia in a chair of earth, 765
 With count'nance sad, yet sadness promis'd mirth,
 Sat veil'd in coarsest weeds of camel's hair,
 Enriching poverty ; yet never fair
 Was like to her, nor since the world begun
 A lovelier lady kiss'd the glorious sun. 770
 For her the god of thunder, mighty, great,
 Whose footstool is the earth, and heaven his seat,
 Unto a man who from his crying birth
 Went on still shunning what he carried, earth,

When he could walk no further for his grave, 775
 Nor could step over, but he there must have
 A seat to rest, when he would fain go on,
 But age in every nerve, in every bone
 Forbad his passage : for her sake hath Heaven
 Fill'd up the grave, and made his path so even 780
 That fifteen courses had the bright steeds run,
 (And he was weary) ere his course was done.
 For scorning her the courts of kings which throw
 A proud rais'd pinnacle to rest the crow,
 And on a plain outbrave a neighbour rock 785
 In stout resistance of a tempest's shock,
 For her contempt Heaven, raining his disasters,
 Have made those towers but piles to burn their masters.

To her the lowly nymph (Humblessa hight)
 Brought as her office this deformed wight ; 790
 To whom the lady courteous semblance shows,
 And pitying his estate in sacred thewes,
 And letters worthily ycleep'd divine,
 Resolv'd t' instruct him : but her discipline
 She knew of true effect would surely miss, 795
 Except she first his metamorphosis
 Should clean exile : and knowing that his birth
 Was to inherit reason, though on earth
 Some witch had thus transform'd him, by her skill,
 Expert in changing, even the very will, 800

In few days' labours with continual prayer,
 (A sacrifice transcends the buxom air)
 His grisly shape, his foul deformed feature,
 His horrid looks, worse than a savage creature,
 By Metanoia's hand from heaven, began 805
 Receive their sentence of divorce from man.

And as a lovely maiden, pure and chaste,
 With naked iv'ry neck, and gown unlac'd,
 Within her chamber, when the day is fled,
 Makes poor her garments to enrich her bed : 810

First, puts she off her lily-silken gown,
 That shrieks for sorrow as she lays it down ;
 And with her arms graceth a waistcoat fine,
 Embracing her as it would ne'er untwine.
 Her flaxen hair, ensnaring all beholders, 815

She next permits to wave about her shoulders,
 And though she cast it back, the silken slips
 Still forward steal and hang upon her lips :
 Whereat she sweetly angry, with her laces
 Binds up the wanton locks in curious traces, 820
 Whilst (twisting with her joints) each hair long lingers,

As loth to be enchain'd but with her fingers.
 Then on her head a dressing like a crown ;
 Her breasts all bare, her kirtle slipping down,
 And all things off (which rightly ever be 825
 Call'd the foul-fair marks of our misery)

802.—Buxom, yielding, in which sense it is constantly used by Spenser.

Except her last, which enviously doth seize her,
 Lest any eye partake with it in pleasure,
 Prepares for sweetest rest, while sylvans greet her,
 And longingly the down bed swells to meet her : 830
 So by degrees his shape all brutish vild,
 Fell from him (as loose skin from some young child)
 In lieu whereof a man-like shape appears,
 And gallant youth scarce skill'd in twenty years,
 So fair, so fresh, so young, so admirable 835
 In every part, that since I am not able
 In words to show his picture, gentle swains,
 Recall the praises in my former strains ;
 And know if they have graced any limb,
 I only lent it those, but stole 't from him. 840

Had that chaste Roman dame beheld his face,
 Ere the proud king possess'd her husband's place,
 Her thoughts had been adulterate, and this stain
 Had won her greater fame had she been slain.
 The lark that many morns herself makes merry 845
 With the shrill chanting of her teery-lerry,
 (Before he was transform'd) would leave the skies,
 And hover o'er him to behold his eyes.
 Upon an oaten pipe well could he play,
 For when he fed his flock upon the lay 850
 Maidens to hear him from the plains came tripping,

831.—Vild, vile.

846.—Teery-lerry, more usually tirra-lirra, borrowed from the French tire-lire.

850.—Lay, ley, lea.

And birds from bough to bough full nimbly skipping ;
 His flock (then happy flock) would leave to feed,
 And stand amaz'd to listen to his reed ;
 Lions and tigers, with each beast of game, 855
 With hearing him were many times made tame ;
 Brave trees and flowers would towards him be bend-
 ing,

And none that heard him wish'd his song an ending :
 Maids, lions, birds, flocks, trees, each flower, each spring

Were wrapt with wonder when he used to sing. 860
 So fair a person to describe to men
 Requires a curious pencil, not a pen.

Him Metanoia clad in seemly wise
 (Not after our corrupted age's guise,
 Where gaudy weeds lend splendour to the limb, 865
 While that his clothes receiv'd their grace from him),
 Then to a garden set with rarest flowers,
 With pleasant fountains stor'd and shady bowers,
 She leads him by the hand, and in the groves,
 Where thousand pretty birds sung to their loves, 870
 And thousand thousand blossoms (from their stalks)
 Mild Zephyrus threw down to paint the walks :
 Where yet the wild boar never durst appear :
 Here Fida (ever to kind Raymond dear)
 Met them, and show'd where Aletheia lay, 875
 The fairest maid that ever bless'd the day.
 Sweetly she lay, and cool'd her lily hands
 Within a spring that threw up golden sands :

As if it would entice her to persever
 In living there, and grace the banks for ever. 880
 To her Amintas (Riot now no more)
 Came, and saluted : never man before
 More bless'd, nor like this kiss hath been another
 But when two dangling cherries kiss'd each other :
 Nor ever beauties, like, met at such closes, 885
 But in the kisses of two damask roses.
 O how the flowers (press'd with their treadings on them)
 Strove to cast up their heads to look upon them !
 How jealously the buds that so had seen them
 Sent forth the sweetest smells to step between them, 890
 As fearing the perfume lodg'd in their powers
 Once known of them, they might neglect the flowers.
 How often wish'd Amintas with his heart,
 His ruddy lips from hers might never part ;
 And that the heavens this gift were them bequeath-
 ing, 895
 To feed on nothing but each other's breathing !
 A truer love the Muses never sung,
 Nor happier names e'er grac'd a golden tongue.
 O ! they are better fitting his sweet stripe,
 Who on the banks of Ancor tun'd his pipe : 900

899.—Stripe, strain or measure.900.—Ancor, or Anker, the river intersecting Hartshill in Warwickshire, the birthplace of Michael Drayton.

Or rather for that learned swain whose lays
 Divinest Homer crown'd with deathless bays :
 Or any one sent from the sacred Well
 Inheriting the soul of Astrophel :
 These, these in golden lines might write this story,
 And make these loves their own eternal glory : [905
 Whilst I, a swain as weak in years as skill,
 Should in the valley hear them on the hill.
 Yet when my sheep have at their cistern been,
 And I have brought them back to shear the green,
 To miss an idle hour, and not for meed, [910
 With choicest relish shall mine oaten reed
 Record their worths : and though in accents rare
 I miss the glory of a charming air,
 My Muse may one day make the courtly swains 915
 Enamour'd on the music of the plains,
 And as upon a hill she bravely sings,
 Teach humble dales to weep in crystal springs.

901.—That learned swain, George Chapman, the translator of Homer's poems.

904.—Astrophel, a poetical name given by Spenser and his contemporaries to Sir Philip Sidney.

TO

The truly Noble and Learned

WILLIAM, EARL OF PEMBROKE,

Lord Chamberlain to His Majesty, &c.

NOT that the gift, great Lord, deserves your hand,
Held ever worth the rarest works of men,
Offer I this ; but since in all our land
None can more rightly claim a poet's pen :
That noble blood and virtue truly known,
Which circular in you united run,
Makes you each good, and every good your own,
If it can hold in what my Muse hath done.
But weak and lowly are these tuned lays,
Yet though but weak to win fair Memory,
You may improve them, and your gracing raise ;
For things are priz'd as their possessors be.

If for such favour they have worthless striven,
Since love the cause was, be that love forgiven !

Your Honour

W. BROWNE.

To the most ingenious Author Mr. W. Browne.

INGENIOUS swain ! that highly dost adorn
Clear Tavy ! on whose brink we both were born !
Just praise in me would ne'er be thought to move
From thy sole worth, but from my partial love.
Wherefore I will not do thee so much wrong,
As by such mixture to allay thy song.
But while kind strangers rightly praise each grace
Of thy chaste Muse, I (from the happy place
That brought thee forth, and thinks it not unfit
To boast now that it erst bred such a wit)
Would only have it known I much rejoice
To hear such matters sung by such a voice.

JOHN GLANVILL.

To his Friend Mr. Browne.

ALL that do read thy works, and see thy face,
Where scarce a hair grows up thy chin to grace,
Do greatly wonder how so youthful years
Could frame a work where so much worth appears.

To hear how thou describ'st a tree, a dale,
 A grove, a green, a solitary vale,
 The evening showers, and the morning gleams,
 The golden mountains, and the silver streams,
 How smooth thy verse is, and how sweet thy rhymes,
 How sage, and yet how pleasant are thy lines ;
 What more or less can there be said by men,
 But, Muses rule thy hand, and guide thy pen.

THO. WENMAN,

è Societate Inter. Templi.

To his worthily-affected Friend Mr. W. Brown.

AWAKE, sad Muse, and thou my sadder spright,
 Made so by Time, but more by Fortune's spite ;
 Awake, and hie us to the green ;
 There shall be seen
 The quaintest lad of all the time
 For neater rhyme :
 Whose free and unaffected strains
 Take all the swains
 That are not rude and ignorant,
 Or Envy want.

And Envy, lest its hate discover'd be,
 A courtly love and friendship offers thee :
 The shepherdesses, blithe and fair,
 For thee despair.

And whosoe'er depends on Pan
 Holds him a man
 Beyond themselves (if not compare),
 He is so rare,
 So innocent in all his ways
 As in his lays.

He masters no low soul who hopes to please
 The nephew^a of the brave Philisides.

Another to the same.

WERE all men's envies fix'd in one man's looks,
 That monster that would prey on safest Fame,
 Durst not once check at thine, nor at thy name :
 So he who men can read as well as books
 Attest thy lines ; thus tried, they show to us
 As Scæva's shield,^b thyself Emeritus.

W. HERBERT.

*To my Browne, yet brightest swain
 That woons,^c or haunts or hill or plain.*

Poeta nascitur.

PIPE on, sweet swain, till joy, in bliss, sleep waking ;
 Hermes, it seems, to thee, of all the swains,

^a The nephew, etc., William, Earl of Pembroke, to whom the book is dedicated.

^b Scæva's shield, transfixed in a hundred and twenty places at the battle of Dyrrhachium.

^c Woons, wons, dwells.

Hath lent his pipe and art : for thou art making
With sweet notes (noted) heav'n of hills and plains!

Nay, if as thou begin'st, thou dost hold on,
The total earth thine Arcadie will be,
And Neptune's monarchy thy Helicon ;
So all in both will make a god of thee,
To whom they will exhibit sacrifice
Of richest love and praise ; and envious swains
(Charm'd with thine accents) shall thy notes agnize^a
To reach above great Pan's in all thy strains.
Then ply this vein, for it may well contain
The richest morals under poorest shroud ;
And sith in thee the past'ral spirit doth reign,
On such wit's-treasures let it sit abroad,
Till it hath hatch'd such numbers as may buy
The rarest fame that e'er enriched air ;
Or fann'd the way fair to eternity,
To which unsoil'd thy glory shall repair !
Where (with the gods that in fair stars do dwell,
When thou shalt, blazing, in a star abide)
Thou shalt be styl'd the shepherds' star to tell
Them many mysteries and be their guide.

Thus do I spur thee on with sharpest praise,
To use thy gifts of Nature and of skill,
To double-gild Apollo's brows and bays,
Yet make great Nature Art's true sov'reign still.

^a Agnize, acknowledge.

So Fame shall ever say, to thy renown,
The shepherd's-star, or bright'st in sky, is Browne !

The true lover of thine

Art and Nature,

CAROLUS CROKE.

To my noble Friend the Author.

A PERFECT pen itself will ever praise.
So pipes our shepherd in his roundelays,
That who could judge of Music's sweetest strain,
Would swear thy Muse were in a heavenly vein.

A work of worth shows what the workman is :
 When as the fault that may be found amiss,
 (To such at least as have judicious eyes)
 Nor in the work, nor yet the workman lies.
 Well worthy thou to wear the laurel wreath :
 When from thy breast these blessed thoughts do
 breathe,
 That in thy gracious lines such grace do give,
 It makes thee everlastingly to live.
 Thy words well couch'd, thy sweet invention show
 A perfect poet that could place them so.

UNTON CROKE,

è Societate Inter. Templi.

To the Author.

THAT privilege which others claim,
 To flatter with their friends,
 With thee, friend, shall not be mine aim ;
 My verse so much pretends.
 The general umpire of best wit
 In this will speak thy fame.
 The Muses' minions, as they sit,
 Will still confirm the same :
 Let me sing him that merits best ;
 Let others scrape for fashion ;
 Their buzzing prate thy worth will jest,
 And slight such commendation.

ANTH. VINCENT.

To his worthy Friend Mr. W. Browne, on his Book.

THAT poets are not bred so, but so born,
 Thy Muse it proves ; for in her age's morn
 She hath struck Envy dumb, and charm'd the love
 Of 'ev'ry Muse whose birth the skies approve.
 Go on ; I know thou art too good to fear.
 And may thy early strains affect the ear
 Of that rare Lord, who judge and guerdon can
 The richer gifts which do advantage man !

JOHN MORGAN,

è Societate Inter. Templi.

To his Friend the Author.

SOMETIMES, dear friend, I make thy book my meat,
 And then I judge 'tis honey that I eat.
 Sometimes my drink it is, and then I think
 It is Apollo's nectar, and no drink.
 And being hurt in mind, I keep in store
 Thy book, a precious balsam for the sore.
 'Tis honey, nectar, balsam most divine :
 Or one word for them all ; my friend, 'tis thine.

THO. HEYGATE,

è Societate Inter. Templi.

To his Friend the Author.

IF antique swains wan such immortal praise,
 Though they alone with their melodious lays
 Did only charm the woods and flow'ry lawns,
 Satyrs, and floods, and stones, and hairy fawns :
 How much, brave youth, to thy due worth belongs,
 That charm'st not them but men with thy sweet songs?

AUGUSTUS CÆSAR,

è Societate Inter. Templi.

To the Author.

'TIS known I scorn to flatter, or commend,
 What merits not applause, though in my friend ;
 Which by my censure should now more appear,
 Were this not full as good as thou art dear :
 But since thou couldst not (erring) make it so,
 That I might my impartial humour show
 By finding fault ; nor one of these friends tell
 How to show love so ill, that I as well
 Might paint out mine : I feel an envious touch,
 And tell thee, swain, that at thy fame I grutch,^a
 Wishing the art that makes this poem shine,
 And this thy work (wert not thou wronged) mine.

^a Grutch, grumble.

For when detraction shall forgotten be,
 This will continue to eternize thee ;
 And if hereafter any busy wit
 Should, wronging thy conceit, miscensure it,
 Though seeming learn'd or wise : here he shall see,
 'Tis prais'd by wiser and more learn'd than he.

G. WITHER.

To Mr. Browne.

WERE there a thought so strange as to deny
 That happy bays do some men's births adorn,
 Thy work alone might serve to justify,
 That poets are not made so, but so born.
 How could thy plumes thus soon have soar'd thus high,
 Hadst thou not laurel in thy cradle worn?
 Thy birth o'ertook thy youth : and it doth make
 Thy youth (herein) thine elders overtake.

W. B.

To my truly belov'd Friend M. Browne, on his Pastorals.

SOME men, of books or friends not speaking right,
 May hurt them more with praise than foes with spite.
 But I have seen thy work, and I know thee :
 And, if thou list thyself, what thou canst be.

For though but early in these paths thou tread,
I find thee write most worthy to be read.
It must be thine own judgment yet that sends
This thy work forth : that judgment mine commends.
And, where the most read books, on authors' fames,
Or, like our money-brokers, take up names
On credit, and are cozen'd ; see that thou,
By off'ring not more sureties than enow,
Hold thine own worth unbroke, which is so good
Upon th' Exchange of Letters, as I would
More of our writers would, like thee, not swell
With the how much they set forth, but th' how well.

BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS.

THE SECOND BOOK.

THE FIRST SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Marina's freedom now I sing,
And of her new endangering :
Of Famine's Cave, and then th' abuse
Tow'rds buried Colin^a and his Muse.

As when a mariner, accounted lost,
Upon the wat'ry Desert long time tost,
In Summer's parching heat, in Winter's cold,
In tempests great, in dangers manifold,
Is by a fav'ring wind drawn up the mast, 5
Whence he descries his native soil at last,
For whose glad sight he gets the hatches under,
And to the ocean tells his joy in thunder,

^a Colin, Edmund Spenser.

(Shaking those barnacles into the sea,
 At once that in the womb and cradle lay) 10
 When suddenly the still inconstant wind
 Masters before, that did attend behind,
 And grows so violent that he is fain
 Command the pilot stand to sea again,
 Lest want of sea-room in a channel straight, 15
 Or casting anchor might cast o'er his freight :
 Thus, gentle Muse, it happens in my song :
 A journey, tedious for a strength so young,
 I undertook by silver-seeming floods,
 Past gloomy bottoms and high-waving woods, 20
 Climb'd mountains where the wanton kidling dallies,
 Then with soft steps enseal'd the meeken'd valleys,
 In quest of memory : and had possest
 A pleasant garden for a welcome rest
 No sooner, than a hundred themes come on, 25
 And hale my bark anew for Helicon.
 Thrice-sacred Powers ! (if sacred Powers there be Whose mild aspect engyrland Poesy)
 Ye happy sisters of the learned Spring,
 Whose heavenly notes the woods are ravishing ! 30
 Brave Thespian maidens, at whose charming lays Each moss-thrumb'd mountain bends, each current plays !
 Piciŕian singers ! O ye blessed Muses !

28.—Engyrland, encircle.32.—Moss-thrumb'd, knitted over with moss.

Who as a gem too dear the world refuses !
 Whose truest lovers never clip with age, 35
 O be propitious in my pilgrimage !
 Dwell on my lines ! and till the last sand fall,
 Run hand in hand with my weak Pastoral !
 Cause every coupling cadence flow in blisses,
 And fill the world with envy of such kisses. 40
 Make all the rarest beauties of our clime,
 That deign a sweet look on my younger rhyme,
 To linger on each line's enticing graces,
 As on their lovers' lips and chaste embraces ! [45
 Through rolling trenches of self-drowning waves,
 Where stormy gusts throw up untimely graves,
 By billows whose white foam show'd angry minds
 For not out-roaring all the high-rais'd winds,
 Into the ever-drinking thirsty sea
 By rocks that under water hidden lay 50
 To shipwreck passengers, (so in some den
 Thieves bent to robb'ry watch wayfaring men,)
 Fairest Marina, whom I whilom sung,
 In all this tempest, violent though long,
 Without all sense of danger lay asleep : 55
 Till tossed where the still inconstant deep,
 With widespread arms, stood ready for the tender
 Of daily tribute that the swell'd floods render
 Into her chequer ; whence, as worthy kings,
 She helps the wants of thousand lesser springs : 60

Here wax'd the winds dumb, shut up in their caves ;
 As still as midnight were the sullen waves ;
 And Neptune's silver ever-shaking breast
 As smooth as when the halcyon builds her nest.
 None other wrinkles on his face were seen 65
 Than on a fertile mead, or sportive green,
 Where never ploughshare ripp'd his mother's womb
 To give an aged seed a living tomb ;
 Nor blinded mole the batt'ning earth e'er stirr'd ;
 Nor boys made pitfalls for the hungry bird. 70
 The whistling reeds upon the waters' side
 Shot up their sharp heads in a stately pride ;
 And not a binding osier bow'd his head,
 But on his root him bravely carried.
 No dandling leaf play'd with the subtile air, 75
 So smooth the sea was, and the sky so fair.
 Now with his hands, instead of broad-palm'd oars,
 The swain attempts to get the shell-strew'd shores,
 And with continual lading making way.
 Thrust the small boat into as fair a bay 80
 As ever merchant wish'd might be the road
 Wherein to ease his sea-torn vessel's load.
 It was an island, hugg'd in Neptune's arms,
 As tend'ring it against all foreign harms,
 And Mona hight : so amiably fair, 85
 So rich in soil, so healthful in her air,

64.—Halcyon, kingfisher.69.—Batt'ning, thriving, fertile.

So quick in her increase, (each dewy night
 Yielding that ground as green, as fresh of plight
 As 'twas the day before, whereon then fed
 Of gallant steers full many a thousand head) 90

So deck'd with floods, so pleasant in her groves,
 So full of well-fleec'd flocks and fatten'd droves ;
 That the brave issue of the Trojan line,
 Whose worths, like diamonds, yet in darkness shine ;
 Whose deeds were sung by learned bards as high, 95
 In raptures of immortal poesy,

As any nations, since the Grecian lads
 Were famous made by Homer's Iliads :
 Those brave heroic spirits, 'twixt one another,
 Proverbially call Mona Cambria's mother.*

100 * Mon Cambria Kumbry.

Yet Cambria is a land from whence have come
 Worthies well worth the race of Ilium ;
 Whose true desert of praise could my Muse touch,
 I should be proud that I had done so much.

And though of mighty Brute I cannot boast, 105
 Yet doth our warlike strong Devonian coast
 Resound his worth, since on her wave-worn strand
 He and his Trojans first set foot on land,
 Struck sail, and anchor cast on Totnes'* shore,
 Though now no ship can ride there any more. 110

In th' island's road the swain now moors his boat
 Unto a willow, lest it outwards float,
 And with a rude embracement taking up
 The maid, more fair than she* that fill'd the cup
 Of the great thunderer, wounding with her eyes 115

More hearts than all the troops of deities,
 He wades to shore, and sets her on the sand,
 That gently yielded when her foot should land ;
 Where bubbling waters through the pebbles fleet,
 As if they strove to kiss her slender feet. 120

Whilst like a wretch, whose cursed hand hath ta'en
 The sacred relics from a holy fane,
 Feeling the hand of Heaven (enforcing wonder)
 In his return, in dreadful cracks of thunder,
 Within a bush his sacrilege hath left, 125
 And thinks his punishment freed with the theft :
 So fled the swain from one ; had Neptune spied
 At half an ebb he would have forc'd the tide
 To swell anew, whereon his car should sweep,
 Deck'd with the riches of th' unsounded deep, 130
 And he from thence would with all state on shore,
 To woo this beauty, and to woo no more.

Divine Electra (of the sisters seven
 That beautify the glorious orb of heaven)
 When Ilium's stately towers serv'd as one light 135
 To guide the ravisher in ugly night
 Unto her virgin beds, withdrew her face,
 And never would look down on human race
 Till this maid's birth ; since when some power hath won her
 By often fits to shine as gazing on her. 140
 Grim Saturn's son, the dread Olympic Jove,

122.—Fane, temple.

133.—The sisters seven, the seven Pleiades.

That dark'd three days to frolic with his love,
 Had he in Alcmen's stead clipp'd this fair wight,
 The world had slept in everlasting night.
 For whose sake only (had she lived then) 145
 Deucalion's flood had never rag'd on men ;
 Nor Phaeton perform'd his father's duty,
 For fear to rob the world of such a beauty :
 In whose due praise a learned quill might spend
 Hours, days, months, years, and never make an end.

What wretch inhuman, or what wilder blood, [150
 Suck'd in a desert from a tiger's brood,
 Could leave her so disconsolate ? but one
 Bred in the wastes of frost-bit Calydon ;
 For had his veins been heat with milder air, 155
 He had not wrong'd so foul a maid so fair.

Sing on, sweet Muse, and whilst I feed mine eyes
 Upon a jewel and unvalued prize,
 As bright a star, a dame, as fair, as chaste,
 As eye beheld, or shall, till Nature's last, 160
 Charm her quick senses, and with raptures sweet
 Make her affection with your cadence meet !
 And if her graceful tongue admire one strain,
 It is the best reward my pipe would gain.
 In lieu whereof, in laurel-worthy rhymes 165
 Her love shall live until the end of times,
 And spite of age the last of days shall see
 Her name embalm'd in sacred poesy.

158.—Unvalued, priceless.

Sadly alone upon the aged rocks,
 Whom Thetis grac'd in washing oft their locks 170
 Of branching samphire, sat the maid o'ertaken
 With sighs and tears, unfortunate, forsaken,
 And with a voice that floods from rocks would borrow,
 She thus both wept and sung her notes of sorrow :

If Heaven be deaf and will not hear my cries, 175
 But adds new days to add new miseries ;
 Hear then, ye troubled waves and flitting gales,
 That cool the bosoms of the fruitful vales !
 Lend, one, a flood of tears, the other, wind,
 To weep and sigh that Heaven is so unkind ! 180
 But if ye will not spare of all your store
 One tear or sigh unto a wretch so poor ;
 Yet as ye travel on this spacious round,
 Through forests, mountains, or the lawny ground,
 If't hap you see a maid weep forth her woe, 185
 As I have done, O bid her as ye go
 Not lavish tears ! for when her own are gone,
 The world is flinty and will lend her none.
 If this be eke deni'd, O hearken then,
 Each hoilow vaulted rock and crooked den ! 190
 And if within your sides one Echo be,
 Let her begin to rue my destiny !
 And in your clefts her plainings do not smother,
 But let that Echo teach it to another ! [195
 Till round the world in sounding coombe and plain,

183.—Round, globe.195.—Coombe, valley.

The last of them tell it the first again :
 Of my sad fate so shall they never lin,
 But where one ends, another still begin.
 Wretch that I am, my words I vainly waste ;
 Echo of all woes only speaks the last ; 200
 And that's enough : for should she utter all,
 As at Medusa's head, each heart would fall
 Into a flinty substance, and repine
 At no one grief except as great as mine.
 No careful nurse would wet her watchful eye, 205
 When any pang should gripe her infantry,
 Nor though to Nature it obedience gave,
 And kneel'd to do her homage in the grave,
 Would she lament her suckling from her torn ;
 'Scaping by death those torments I have borne. 210
 This sigh'd, she wept, low leaning on her hand,
 Her briny tears down raining on the sand,
 Which seen by them that sport it in the seas
 On dolphins' backs, the fair Nereides,
 They came on shore, and slily as they fell 215
 Convey'd each tear into an oyster-shell,
 And by some power that did affect the girls,
 Transform'd those liquid drops to orient pearls,
 And strew'd them on the shore : for whose rich prize
 In winged pines the Roman colonies 220

197.—Lin, cease.

206.—Infantry, children.

220.—Pines, ships.

Flung through the deep abyss to our white rocks
 For gems to deck their ladies' golden locks :
 Who valu'd them as highly in their kinds
 As those the sunburnt Æthiopian finds.

Long on the shore distress'd Marina lay : 225
 For he that opes the pleasant sweets of May,
 Beyond the noonstead so far drove his team,
 That harvest folks, with curds and clouted cream,
 With cheese and butter, cakes, and cates enow,
 That are the yeoman's from the yoke or cow, 230
 On sheaves of corn were at their noonshun's close,
 Whilst [by] them merrily the bagpipe goes :
 Ere from her hand she lifted up her head,
 Where all the Graces then inhabited.
 When casting round her over-drowned eyes, 235
 (So have I seen a gem of mickle price Roll in a scallop-shell with water fill'd)
 She, on a marble rock at hand beheld,
 In characters deep cut with iron stroke, [240
 A shepherd's moan, which, read by her, thus spoke :

Glide soft, ye silver floods,
 And every spring :
 Within the shady woods
 Let no bird sing !
 Nor from the grove a turtle-dove 245
 Be seen to couple with her love ;

227.—Noonstead, period of noon.

231.—Noonshun, luncheon.

Song 1.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 197

But silence on each dale and mountain dwell,
Whilst Willy bids his friend and joy farewell.

But (of great Thetis' train)
Ye mermaids fair, 250
That on the shores do plain
Your sea-green hair,
As ye in trammels knit your locks,
Weep ye ; and so enforce the rocks
In heavy murmurs through the broad shores tell 255
How Willy bade his friend and joy farewell.

Cease, cease, ye murd'ring winds,
To move a wave ;
But if with troubled minds
You seek his grave ; 260
Know 'tis as various as yourselves,
Now in the deep, then on the shelves,
His coffin toss'd by fish and surges fell,
Whilst Willy weeps and bids all joy farewell.

Had he Arion-like 265
Been judg'd to drown,
He on his lute could strike
So rare a sowne,

251.—Plain, make smooth.

262.—Shelves, rocks.

268.—Sowne, sound.

A thousand dolphins would have come
 And jointly strive to bring him home. 270
 But he on shipboard died, by sickness fell,
 Since when his Willy bade all joy farewell.

Great Neptune, hear a swain !
 His coffin take,
 And with a golden chain 275
 For pity make
 It fast unto a rock near land !
 Where ev'ry calmy morn I'll stand,
 And ere one sheep out of my fold I tell,
 Sad Willy's pipe shall bid his friend farewell. 280

Ah heavy shepherd, whosoe'er thou be,
 Quoth fair Marina, I do pity thee :
 For who by death is in a true friend cross'd,
 Till he be earth, he half himself hath lost.
 More happy deem I thee, lamented swain, 285
 Whose body lies among the scaly train,
 Since I shall never think that thou canst die,
 Whilst Willy lives, or any poetry :
 For well it seems in versing he hath skill,
 And though he, aided from the sacred hill, 290
 To thee with him no equal life can give,
 Yet by his pen thou may'st for ever live.
 With this a beam of sudden brightness flies
 Upon her face, so dazzling her clear eyes,
 That neither flower nor grass which by her grew 295

She could discern cloth'd in their perfect hue.
For as a wag, to sport with such as pass,
Taking the sunbeams in a looking-glass,
Conveys the ray into the eyes of one
Who, blinded, either stumbles at a stone, 300
Or as he dazzled walks the peopled streets,
Is ready justling every man he meets :
So then Apollo did in glory cast
His bright beams on a rock with gold enchas'd,
And thence the swift reflection of their light 305
Blinded those eyes, the chiefest stars of night.
When straight a thick-swoll'n cloud (as if it sought
In beauty's mind to have a thankful thought)
Inveil'd the lustre of great Titan's car,
And she beheld from whence she sat, not far, 310
Cut on a high-brow'd rock, inlaid with gold,
This epitaph, and read it, thus enroll'd :

In depth of waves long hath Alexis slept,
So choicest jewels are the closest kept ;
Whose death the land had seen, but it appears 315
To countervail his loss men wanted tears.
So here he lies, whose dirge each mermaid sings,
For whom the clouds weep rain, the Earth her springs.

Her eyes these lines acquainted with her mind
Had scarcely made, when o'er the hill behind 320
She heard a woman cry : " Ah well-a-day,
What shall I do ? Go home, or fly, or stay ? "

Admir'd Marina rose, and with a pace
 As graceful as the goddesses did trace
 O'er stately Ida when fond Paris' doom 325
 Kindled the fire should mighty Troy entomb,
 She went to aid the woman in distress,
 (True beauty never was found merciless)
 Yet durst she not go nigh lest, being spied,
 Some villain's outrage that might then betide, 330
 For ought she knew, unto the crying maid,
 Might grasp with her : by thickets which array'd
 The high sea-bounding hill so near she went,
 She saw what wight made such loud dreriment.
 Loud? yes : sung right : for since the azure sky 335
 Imprison'd first the world, a mortal's cry
 With greater clangour never pierc'd the air.

A wight she was so far from being fair ;
 None could be foul esteem'd compar'd with her.
 Describing foulness, pardon if I err, 340
 Ye shepherds' daughters, and ye gentle swains !
 My Muse would gladly chant more lovely strains :
 Yet since on miry grounds she trod, for doubt
 Of sinking, all in haste, thus wades she out.
 As when great Neptune in his height of pride 345
 The inland creeks fills with a high spring-tide,
 Great shoals of fish among the oysters hie,
 Which by a quick ebb on the shores left dry,

325.—Doom, judgment.334.—Dreriment, lamentation.

The fishes yawn, the oysters gopen wide :
 So broad her mouth was. As she stood and cried, 350
 She tore her elvish knots of hair, as black
 And full of dust as any collier's sack.

Her eyes, unlike, were like her body right,
 Squint and misshapen, one dun, t'other white.

As in a picture limn'd unto the life, 355
 Or carved by a curious workman's knife,

If twenty men at once should come to see
 The great effects of untir'd industry,
 Each sev'rally would think the picture's eye
 Was fix'd on him and on no stander-by : 360

So as she bawling was upon the bank,
 If twice five hundred men stood on a rank,
 Her ill face towards them, every one would say,
 She looks on me ; when she another way
 Had cast her eyes, as on some rock or tree, 365
 And on no one of all that company.

Her nose (O crooked nose !) her mouth o'erhung,
 As it would be directed by her tongue :

Her forehead such, as one might near avow [370
 Some ploughman there had lately been at plough.

Her face so scorch'd was, and so vild it shows,
 As on a pear-tree she had scar'd the crows.

Within a tanner's fat I oft have eyed
 (That three moons there had lain) a large ox-hide
 In liquor mix'd with strongest bark (for gain) 375

351.—Elvish knots, elf-locks, tangled hair.

373.—Fat, vat.

Yet had not ta'en one-half so deep a stain
 As had her skin, and that as hard well-nigh
 As any brawns long harden'd in the sty.
 Her shoulders such, as I have often seen
 A silly cottage on a village green 380
 Might change his corner-posts, in good behoof,
 For four such under-proppers to his roof.
 Housewives, go hire her, if you yearly gave
 A lambkin more than use, you that might save
 In washing-beetles, for her hands would pass 385
 To serve that purpose, though you daily wash.
 For other hidden parts thus much I say ;
 As ballad-mongers on a market-day
 Taking their stand, one (with as harsh a noise
 As ever cart-wheel made) squeaks the sad choice 390
 Of Tom the Miller with a golden thumb,
 Who, cross'd in love, ran mad and deaf and dumb ;
 Half part he chants, and will not sing it out,
 But thus he speaks to his attentive rout :
 Thus much for love I warbled from my breast, 395
 And, gentle friends, for money take the rest :
 So speak I to the over-longing ear,
 That would the rest of her description hear,
 Much have I sung for love, the rest (not common)
 Martial will show for coin in 's crabbed woman. 400

378.—Brawns, hogs.

380.—Silly, simple, humble.

385.—Washing-beetles, or batlets, instruments with which washers beat their coarse clothes.

If e'er you saw a pedant 'gin prepare
 To speak some graceful speech to master mayor,
 And being bashful, with a quaking doubt
 That in his eloquence he may be out,
 He oft steps forth, as oft turns back again ; 405
 And long 'tis ere he ope his learned vein :
 Think so Marina stood : for now she thought
 To venture forth, then some conjecture wrought
 Her to be jealous left this ugly wight, [410
 Since like a witch she look'd, through spells of night
 Might make her body thrall that yet was free
 To all the foul intents of witchery :
 This drew her back again. At last she broke
 Through all fond doubts, went to her, and bespoke
 In gentle manner thus : Good day, good maid ; 5
 With that her cry she on a sudden stay'd,
 And rubb'd her squint eyes with her mighty fist
 But as a miller, having ground his grist,
 Lets down his flood-gates with a speedy fall,
 And quarring up the passage therewithal, 420
 The waters swell in spleen, and never stay
 Till by some cleft they find another way :
 So when her tears were stopp'd from either eye
 Her singults, blubb'rings seem'd to make them fly
 Out at her oyster-mouth and nosethrils wide. 425
 Caa there (quoth fair Marina) e'er betide

414.—Fond, foolish.

420.—Quarring, closing.

424.—Singults, sobs.

425.—Nosethrils, nostrils.

In these sweet groves a wench so great a wrong,
 That should enforce a cry so loud, so long?
 On these delightful plains how can there be
 So much as heard the name of villainy? 430
 Except when shepherds in their gladsome fit
 Sing hymns to Pan that they are free from it.

But show me, what hath caus'd thy grievous yell?
 As late (quoth she) I went to yonder well,
 (You cannot see it here ; that grove doth cover 435
 With his thick boughs his little channel over)
 To fetch some water, as I use, to dress
 My master's supper (you may think of flesh ;
 But well I wot he tasteth no such dish)
 Of rotchets, whittings, or such common fish, 440
 That with his net he drags into his boat :
 Among the flags below there stands his cote,
 A simple one, thatch'd o'er with reed and broom ;
 It hath a kitchen and a several room
 For each of us.—But this is nought : you flee, 445
 Replied Marine, I prithee answer me
 To what I question'd. Do but hear me first,
 Answer'd the hag. He is a man so curst,
 Although I toil at home, and serve his swine,
 Yet scarce allows he me whereon to dine : 450
 In summer time on blackberries I live,
 On crabs and haws, and what wild forests give :
 In winter's cold, barefoot, I run to seek

440.—Rotchets, piper-fish.442.—Cote, cottage.

For oysters and small winkles in each creek,
 Whereon I feed, and on the meagre slone. 455
 But if he home return and find me gone,
 I still am sure to feel his heavy hand.
 Alas and wealaway, since now I stand
 In such a plight : for if I seek his door
 He'll beat me ten times worse than e'er before. 460
 What hast thou done ? (yet ask'd Marina) say ?
 I with my pitcher lately took my way
 (As late I said) to thilk same shaded spring,
 Fill'd it, and homewards, rais'd my voice to sing ;
 But in my back return, I (hapless) spied 465
 A tree of cherries wild, and them I eyed
 With such a longing that unwares my foot
 Got underneath a hollow-growing root ;
 Carrying my pot as maids use on their heads,
 I fell with it, and broke it all to shreds. 470
 This is my grief, this is my cause of moan.
 And if some kind wight go not to atone
 My surly master with me, wretched maid,
 I shall be beaten dead. Be not afraid,
 Said sweet Marina, hasten thee before ; 475
 I'll come to make thy peace : for since I sore
 Do hunger, and at home thou hast small cheer,
 (Need and supply grow far off, seldom near,)
 To yonder grove I'll go to taste the spring,
 And-see what it affords for nourishing. 480

455.—Slone, sloe.

463.—Thilk, that.

Thus parted they. And sad Marina blest
 The hour she met the maid, who did invest
 Her in assured hope she once should see
 Her flock again and drive them merrily
 To their flower-decked lair, and tread the shores 485
 Of pleasant Albion through the well-pois'd oars
 Of the poor fisherman that dwelt thereby.

But as a man who in a lottery
 Hath ventur'd of his coin, ere he have ought,
 Thinks this or that shall with his prize be bought, 490
 And so enrich'd, march with the better rank,
 When suddenly he's call'd, and all is blank :
 To chaste Marina so doth Fortune prove,
 "Statesmen and she are never firm in love."

No sooner had Marina got the wood, 495
 But as the trees she nearly search'd for food,
 A villain lean as any rake appears,
 That look'd, as pinch'd with famine, Egypt's years,
 Worn out and wasted to the pithless bone,
 As one that had a long consumption. 500
 His rusty teeth (forsaken of his lips
 As they had serv'd with want two 'prenticeships)
 Did through his pallid cheek and lankest skin
 Bewray what number were enrank'd within.
 His greedy eyes deep sunk into his head, 505
 Which with a rough hair was o'ercovered.
 How many bones made up this starved wight

Was soon perceiv'd ; a man of dimmest sight
 Apparently might see them knit, and tell
 How all his veins and every sinew fell. 510
 His belly inwards drawn, his bowels press'd,
 His unfill'd skin hung dangling on his breast,
 His feeble knees with pain enough uphold
 That pined carcase, casten in a mould
 Cut out by Death's grim form. If small legs wan 515
 Ever the title of a gentleman,
 His did acquire it. In his flesh pull'd down
 As he had liv'd in a beleaguer'd town,
 Where plenty had so long estranged been
 That men most worthy note in grief were seen 520
 (Though they rejoic'd to have attain'd such meat)
 Of rats and half-tann'd hides with stomachs great
 Gladly to feed : and where a nurse, most vild,
 Drunk her own milk, and starv'd her crying child.
 Yet he through want of food not thus became : 525
 But Nature first decreed, that as the flame
 Is never seen to fly his nourishment,
 But all consumes : and still the more is lent
 The more it covets : and as all the floods,
 Down trenching from small groves and greater woods, 530
 The vast insatiate sea doth still devour,
 And yet his thirst not quenched by their power :
 So ever should befall this starved wight,

530.—Down trenching, flowing down through made channels.

The more his viands more his appetite.
 Whate'er the deeps bring forth, or earth, or air, 535
 He ravine should, and want in greatest fare.
 And what a city twice seven years would serve,
 He should devour, and yet be like to starve.
 A wretch so empty, that if e'er there be
 In Nature found the least vacuity, 540
 'Twill be in him. The grave to Ceres' store ;
 A cannibal to lab'ers old and poor ;
 A sponge-like dropsy, drinking till it burst ;
 The sickness term'd the wolf, vild and accurs'd ;
 In some respects like th' art of alchemy, 545
 That thrives least when it long'st doth multiply.
 Limos he cleeped was : whose long-nail'd paw
 Seizing Marina, and his sharp-fang'd jaw
 (The strongest part he had) fix'd in her weeds, [550
 He forc'd her thence, through thickets and high reeds,
 Towards his cave. Her fate the swift winds rue,
 And round the grove in heavy murmurs flew.
 The limbs of trees that, as in love with either,
 In close embracements long had liv'd together,
 Rubb'd each on other, and in shrieks did show 555
 The winds had mov'd more partners of their woe.
 Old and decayed stocks that long time spent
 Upon their arms their roots' chief nourishment,
 And that drawn dry, as freely did impart
 Their boughs a-feeding on their father's heart, 560

547.—Limos, the Greek word for famine.

Yet by respectless imps when all was gone,
 Pithless and sapless, naked left alone,
 Their hollow trunks, fill'd with their neighbours'
 moans,

Sent from a thousand vents ten thousand groans.
 All birds flew from the wood, as they had been 565
 Scar'd with a strong bolt rattling 'mong the trees.

Limos with his sweet theft full silyly rushes
 Through sharp-hook'd brambles, thorns, and tangling bushes,

Whose tenters sticking in her garments sought,
 Poor shrubs, to help her, but availing nought, 570
 As angry (best intents miss'd best proceeding)
 They scratch'd his face and legs, clear water bleed-
 ing.

Not greater haste a fearful school-boy makes
 Out of an orchard whence by stealth he takes
 A churlish farmer's plums, sweet pears or grapes. 575
 Than Limos did, as from the thick he 'scapes
 Down to the shore. Where resting him a space,
 Restless Marina 'gan entreat for grace
 Of one whose knowing it as desp'rate stood,
 As where each day to get supply of food. 580

O ! had she thirsty such entreaty made
 At some high rock, proud of his evening shade,
 He would have burst in two, and from his veins,
 For her avail, upon the under plains

569.—Tenters, prickles

A hundred springs a hundred ways should swim, 585
To show her tears enforced floods from him.

Had such an oratress been heard to plead
For fair Polyxena, the murth'rer's head
Had been her pardon, and so 'scap'd that shock,
Which made her lover's tomb her dying block. 590

Not an enraged lion, surly, wood ;
No tiger rest her young, nor savage brood ;

No, not the foaming boar, that durst approve
Loveless to leave the mighty Queen of Love,

But her sad plaints their uncouth walks among 595
Spent in sweet numbers from her golden tongue,

So much their great hearts would in softness steep,
They at her foot would grovelling lie and weep.

Yet now (alas !) nor words, nor floods of tears
Did ought avail. The belly hath no ears. 600

As I have known a man loath meet with gain
That carrieth in his front least show of pain,

Who for his victuals all his raiment pledges,
Whose stacks for firing are his neighbours' hedges,

From whence returning with a burden great, 605
Wearied, on some green bank he takes his seat,

But fearful (as still theft is in his stay)
Gets quickly up, and hasteth fast away :

588.—Murth'rer's head, that of Paris, who treacherously slew Achilles, the lover of Polyxena.

591.—Wood, mad or wild.

593.—The foaming boar, etc., alluding to Adonis, beloved of Venus, who met his death while hunting a boar.

595.—Uncouth, unfrequented.

So Limos sooner eased than yrested
 Was up and through the reeds (as much molested 610
 As in the brakes) who lovingly combine,
 And for her aid together twist and twine ;
 Now manacling his hands, then on his legs
 Like fetters hang the under-growing segs :
 And had his teeth not been of strongest hold, 615
 He there had left his prey. Fates uncontroll'd
 Denied so great a bliss to plants or men,
 And lent him strength to bring her to his den.

West, in Apollo's course to Tagus' stream,
 Crown'd with a silver-circling diadem 620
 Of wet exhaled mists, there stood a pile
 Of aged rocks (torn from the neighbour isle
 And girt with waves) against whose naked breast
 The surges tilted, on his snowy crest
 The tow'ring falcon whilom built, and kings 625
 Strove for that aerie, on whose scaling wings
 Monarchs in gold refin'd as much would lay
 As might a month their army royal pay.
 Brave birds they were, whose quick, self-less'ning kin
 Still won the girlonds from the peregrine.* 630
 Not Cerna Isle in Afric's silver main,
 Nor lustful-bloody-'Tereus' Thracian strain,
 Nor any other lording of the air,
 Durst with this aerie for their wing compare.

* A falcon differing from the falcon-gentle.

614.—Segs, sedges.

630.—Girlonds, garlands.

631.—Cerna Isle, Mauritius.

About his sides a thousand sea-gulls bred, 635
 The mevy and the halcyon famosed
 For colours rare, and for the peaceful seas
 Round the Sicilian coast, her brooding days.
 Puffins (as thick as starlings in a fen) [640
 Were fetch'd from thence : there sat the pewet hen,
 And in the clefts the martin built his nest.
 But those by this curs'd caitiff disposess'd
 Of roost and nest, the least ; of life, the most :
 All left that place, and sought a safer coast.
 Instead of them the caterpillar haunts, 645
 And cankerworm among the tender plants,
 That here and there in nooks and corners grew
 Of cormorants and locusts not a few ;
 The cramming raven, and a hundred more
 Devouring creatures ; yet when from the shore 650
 Limos came wading (as he easily might Except at high tides) all would take their flight,
 Or hide themselves in some deep hole or other,
 Lest one devourer should devour another.

Near to the shore that border'd on the rock 655
 No merry swain was seen to feed his flock,
 No lusty neatherd thither drove his kine,
 Nor boorish hogherd fed his rooting swine :
 A stony ground it was, sweet herbage fail'd :
 Nought there but weeds, which Limos, strongly nail'd, 660

636.—Mevy, sea-mew. Halcyon, kingfisher. Famosed, celebrated.

Tore from their mother's breast to stuff his maw.
 No crab-tree bore his load, nor thorn his haw.
 As in a forest well complete with deer
 We see the hollies, ashes, everywhere
 Robb'd of their clothing by the browsing game : 665
 So near the rock all trees where'er you came,
 To cold December's wrath stood void of bark.
 Here danc'd no nymph, no early-rising lark
 Sung up the ploughman and his drowsy mate :
 All round the rock[']s] barren and desolate. 670

In midst of that huge pile was Limos' cave,*
 Full large and round, wherein a miller's knave
 Might for his horse and quern have room at will :
 Where was out-drawn by some enforced skill
 What mighty conquests were achiev'd by him. 675
 First stood the siege of great Jerusalem,
 Within whose triple wall and sacred city—(Weep, ye stone-hearted men ! oh, read and pity !
 'Tis Sion's cause invokes your briny tears :
 Can any dry eye be when she appears 680
 As I must sing her ? oh, if such there be,
 Fly, fly th' abode of men ! and hasten thee
 Into the desert, some high mountain under,
 Or at thee boys will hiss, and old men wonder)—
 Here sits a mother weeping, pale and wan, 685
 With fixed eyes, whose hopeless thoughts seem'd ran

* The description of the Cave of Famine.

672.—Knave, servant.

673.—Quern, mill.

How (since for many days no food she tasted,
 Her meal, her oil consum'd, all spent, all wasted)
 For one poor day she might attain supply,
 And desp'rate of aught else, sit, pine, and die. 690
 At last her mind meets with her tender child
 That in the cradle lay (of osiers wild),
 Which taken in her arms, she gives the teat,
 From whence the little wretch with labour great
 Not one poor drop can suck : whereat she, wood, 695
 Cries out, O Heaven ! are all the founts of food
 Exhausted quite ? and must my infant young
 Be fed with shoes ? yet wanting those ere long,
 Feed on itself ? No, first the room that gave Him soul and life shall be his timeless grave : 700
 My dugs, thy best relief, through griping hunger
 Flow now no more, my babe ; then since no longer

By me thou canst be fed, nor any other,
 Be thou the nurse and feed thy dying mother.
 Then in another place she straight appears, 705
 Seething her suckling in her scalding tears.
 From whence not far the painter made her stand
 Tearing his sod flesh with her cruel hand
 In gobbets which she ate. O cursed womb,
 That to thyself art both the grave and tomb. 710

A little sweet lad, there, seems to entreat
 With held up hands his famish'd sire for meat,
 Who wanting aught to give his hoped joy
 But throbs and sighs ; the over-hungry boy,

For some poor bit in dark nooks making quest, 715
His satchel finds, which grows a gladsome feast
To him and both his parents. Then, next day
He chews the points wherewith he us'd to play :
Devouring last his books of every kind,
They fed his body which should feed his mind : 720
But when his satchel, points, books all were gone,
Before his sire he droops, and dies anon.

In height of art then had the workman done,
A pious, zealous, most religious son,
Who on the enemy excursion made, 725
And spite of danger strongly did invade
Their victuals' convoy, bringing from them home
Dri'd figs, dates, almonds, and such fruits as come
To the beleag'ring foe, and sates the want
Therewith of those who from a tender plant 730
Bred him a man for arms : thus oft he went,
And stork-like sought his parents' nourishment,
Till fates decreed he on the Roman spears
Should give his blood for them who gave him theirs.

A million of such throes did Famine bring 735
Upon the city of the mighty king,
Till, as her people, all her buildings rare
Consum'd themselves and dimm'd the lightsome air.

Near this the curious pencil did express
A large and solitary wilderness, 740
Whose high well-limned oaks in growing show'd
As they would ease strong Atlas of his load :

Here underneath a tree in heavy plight,
 Her bread and pot of water wasted quite,
 Egyptian Hagar, nipp'd with hunger fell, 745
 Sat robb'd of hope : her infant Ishmael,
 Far from her being laid, full sadly seem'd
 To cry for meat, his cry she naught esteem'd,
 But kept her still, and turn'd her face away,
 Knowing all means were bootless to assay 750
 In such a desert ; and since now they must Sleep their eternal sleep, and cleave to dust,
 She chose apart to grasp one death alone,
 Rather than by her babe a million.

Then Eresichthon's case in Ovid's song 755
 Was portrayed out ; and many more along
 The insides of the cave, which were descried
 By many loop-holes round on every side.

These fair Marina view'd, left all alone,
 The cave fast shut, Limos for pillage gone ; 760
 Near the wash'd shore 'mong roots and breers and thorns,

A ballock finds, who delving with his horns
 The hurtless earth (the while his tough hoof tore
 The yielding turf) in furious rage he bore
 His head among the boughs that held it round, 765
 While with his bellows all the shores resound :

755.—Eresichthon, a son of Triopas, who cut down trees in a grove sacred to Demeter, for which he was punished by the goddess with fearful hunger.

761.—Breers, briars.

Him Limos kill'd, and hal'd with no small pain —
 Unto the rock ; fed well ; then goes again :
 Which serv'd Marina fit, for had his food [770
 Fail'd him, her veins had fail'd their dearest blood.

Now great Hyperion left his golden throne
 That on the dancing waves in glory shone,
 For whose declining on the western shore
 The oriental hills black mantles wore,
 And thence apace the gentle twilight fled, 775
 That had from hideous caverns ushered
 All-drowsy Night, who in a car of jet,
 By steeds of iron-grey, which mainly sweat
 Moist drops on all the world, drawn through the sky,
 The helps of darkness waited orderly. 780
 First thick clouds rose from all the liquid plains ;
 Then mists from marishes, and grounds whose veins
 Were conduit-pipes to many a crystal spring ;
 From standing pools and fens were following
 Unhealthy fogs ; each river, every rill 785
 Sent up their vapours to attend her will
 These pitchy curtains drew 'twixt earth and heaven.
 And as Night's chariot through the air was driven,
 Clamour grew dumb, unheard was shepherd's song,
 And silence girt the woods ; no warbling tongue 790
 Talk'd to the Echo ; satyrs broke their dance,
 And all the upper world lay in a trance.
 Only the curled streams soft chidings kept ;

And little gales that from the green leaf swept
 Dry summer's dust, in fearful whisp'rings stirr'd, 795
 As loath to waken any singing bird.

Darkness no less than blind Cimmerian
 Of Famine's cave the full possession wan,
 Where lay the shepherdess inwraught with night,
 The wished garment of a mournful wight. 800
 Here silken slumbers and refreshing sleep
 Were seldom found ; with quiet minds those keep,
 Not with disturbed thoughts ; the beds of kings
 Are never press'd by them, sweet rest enrings
 The tired body of the swarty clown, 805
 And oft'ner lies on flocks than softest down.

Twice had the cock crown, and in cities strong
 The bellman's doleful noise and careful song
 Told men, whose watchful eyes no slumber hent,
 What store of hours theft-guilty night had spent. 810
 Yet had not Morpheus with this maiden been,
 As fearing Limos, whose impetuous teen
 Kept gentle rest from all to whom his cave
 Yielded enclosure deadly as the grave ;
 But to all sad laments left her forlorn, 815
 In which three watches she had nigh outworn.

Fair silver-footed Thetis that time threw
 Along the ocean with a beauteous crew
 Of her attending sea-nymphs, Jove's bright lamps

805.—Swarty, sunburnt. 809.—Hent, took, seized.

812.—Teen, violence.

Guiding from rocks her chariot's hippocamps :* 820 * Sea-horses.
 A journey only made unwares to spy
 If any mighties of her empery
 Oppress'd the least, and forc'd the weaker sort
 To their designs by being great in court.
 O ! should all potentates whose higher birth 825
 Enrols their titles, other gods on earth,
 Should they make private search, in veil of night,
 For cruel wrongs done by each favourite ;
 Here should they find a great one paling in
 A mean man's land, which many years had been 830
 His charge's life, and by the other's hest,
 The poor must starve to feed a scurvy beast.
 If any recompense drop from his fist,
 His time's his own, the money what he list.
 There should they see another that commands 835
 His farmer's team from furrowing his lands,
 To bring him stones to raise his building vast,
 The while his tenant's sowing time is past.
 Another (spending) doth his rents enhance,
 Or gets by tricks the poor's inheritance. 840
 But as a man whose age hath dimm'd his eyes,
 Useth his spectacles, and as he prys
 Through them all characters seem wondrous fair,
 Yet when his glasses quite removed are,
 Though with all careful heed he nearly look, 845
 Cannot perceive one tittle in the book ;

831.—Hest, command.

845.—Nearly, closely.

So if a king behold such favourites,
 Whose being great was being parasites,
 With th' eyes of favour, all their actions are
 To him appearing plain and regular : 850
 But let him lay his sight of grace aside,
 And see what men he hath so dignified,
 They all would vanish, and not dare appear,
 Who, atom-like, when their sun shined clear,
 Danc'd in his beam ; but now his rays are gone, 855
 Of many hundred we perceive not one.
 Or as a man who, standing to descry
 How great floods far off run, and valleys lie,
 Taketh a glass prospective good and true,
 By which things most remote are full in view : 860
 If monarchs, so, would take an instrument
 Of truth compos'd to spy their subjects drent
 In foul oppression by those high in seat,
 Who care not to be good but to be great,
 In full aspect the wrongs of each degree 865
 Would lie before them ; and they then would see
 The devilish politician all convinces,
 In murd'ring statesmen and in pois'ning princes ;
 The prelate in pluralities asleep,
 Whilst that the wolf lies preying on his sheep ; 870
 The drowsy lawyer, and the false attorneys
 Tire poor men's purses with their lifelong journeys ;
 The country gentleman from 's neighbour's hand

862.—Drent, drowned.867.—Convinces, overthrows.

Forceth th' inheritance, joins land to land,
 And most insatiate seeks under his rent 875
 To bring the world's most spacious continent ;
 The fawning citizen (whose love's bought dearest)
 Deceives his brother when the sun shines clearest,
 Gets, borrows, breaks, lets in, and stops out light,
 And lives a knave to leave his son a knight ; 880
 The griping farmer hoards the seed of bread,
 Whilst in the streets the poor lie famished :
 And free there's none from all this worldly strife,
 Except the shepherd's heaven-bless'd happy life. [885

But stay, sweet Muse, forbear this harsher strain !
 Keep with the shepherds ; leave the satyrs' vein ;
 Coop not with bears ; let Icarus alone
 To scorch himself within the torrid zone :
 Let Phaeton run on, Ixion fall,
 And with an humble styled Pastoral 890
 Tread through the valleys, dance about the streams.
 The lowly dales will yield us anadems
 To shade our temples, 'tis a worthy meed,
 No better garland seeks mine oaten reed ;
 Let others climb the hills, and to their praise, 895
 Whilst I sit girt with flowers, be crown'd with bays.

Show now, fair Muse, what afterward became
 Of great Achilles' mother ; she whose name
 The mermaids sing, and tell the weeping strand
 A braver lady never tripp'd on land, 900

Except the ever-living Faëry Queen,
 Whose virtues by her swain so written been,
 That time shall call her high enhanced story
 In his rare song, the Muses' chiefest glory.

So mainly Thetis drove her silver throne, 905
 Inlaid with pearls of price and precious stone,
 For whose gay purchase she did often make
 The scorched negro dive the briny lake,
 That by the swiftness of her chariot wheels,
 Scouring the main as well-built English keels, 910
 She of the new-found world all coasts had seen,
 The shores of Thessaly, where she was queen,
 Her brother Pontus' waves, embrac'd, with those Mœotian fields and vales of Tenedos, [915
 Strait Hellespont, whose high-brow'd cliffs yet sound
 The mournful name of young Leander drown'd ;
 Then with full speed her horses doth she guide
 Through the Ægean Sea, that takes a pride
 In making difference 'twixt the fruitful lands,
 Europe and Asia almost joining hands, 920
 But that she thrusts her billows all afront
 To stop their meeting through the Hellespont.
 The Midland Sea so swiftly was she scouring,
 The Adriatic gulf brave ships devouring.
 To Padus' silver stream then glides she on, 925
 Enfamoused by reckless Phaeton,

Plin. lib. 3.
 cap. 16.

902.—Swain, Spenser.

926.—Enfamoused, made famous.

Padus that doth beyond his limits rise,
 When the hot dog-star rains his maladies,
 And robs the high and air-invading Alps
 Of all their winter-suits and snowy scalps, 930
 To drown the levell'd lands along his shore,
 And make him swell with pride. By whom of yore
 The sacred Heliconian damsels sat,
 To whom was mighty Pindus consecrate,
 And did decree, neglecting other men, 935
 Their height of art should flow from Maro's pen ;
 And prattling echoes evermore should long
 For repetition of sweet Naso's song.
 It was enacted here in after days
 What wights should have their temples crown'd with bays ; 940
 Learn'd Ariosto, holy Petrarch's quill,
 And Tasso should ascend the Muses' hill.
 Divinest Bartas, whose enriched soul
 Proclaim'd his Maker's worth, should so enroll
 His happy name in brass, that Time nor Fate 945
 That swallow all, should ever ruinate :
 Delightful Saluste, whose all-blessed lays
 The shepherds make their hymns on holy-days ;
 And truly say thou in one week hast penn'd
 What time may ever study, ne'er amend. 950
 Marot and Ronsard, Garnier's buskin'd Muse

947.—Saluste, Guillaume de Saluste du Bartas. See Note.

951.—Garnier's buskin'd Muse, the tragedies of Robert Garnier, the French dramatist and poet (1545-1601).

Should spirit of life in very stones infuse ;
 And many another swan whose powerful strain
 Should raise the golden world to life again.

But let us leave, fair Muse, the banks of Po ; 955
 Thetis forsook his brave stream long ago,
 And we must after. See, in haste she sweeps
 Along the Celtic shores ; th' Armorick deeps
 She now is ent'ring : bear up then ahead,
 And by that time she hath discovered 960
 Our alabaster rocks, we may descry
 And ken with her the coasts of Britany.
 There will she anchor cast to hear the songs
 Of English shepherds, whose all-tuneful tongues
 So pleas'd the naiades, they did report 965
 Their songs' perfection in great Nereus' court :
 Which Thetis hearing, did appoint a day
 When she would meet them in the British Sea,
 And thither for each swain a dolphin bring
 To ride with her, whilst she would hear him sing. 970
 The time prefix'd was come ; and now the star
 Of blissful light appear'd, when she her car
 Stay'd in the Narrow Seas. At Thames' fair port
 The nymphs and shepherds of the Isle resort,
 And thence did put to sea with mirthful rounds, 975
 Whereat the billows dance above their bounds,
 And bearded goats, that on the clouded head

958.—Armorick deeps, the sea sweeping the coast between the Loire and the Seine.

973.—Narrow Seas, the Straits of Dover.

Of any sea-surveying mountain fed,
 Leaving to crop the ivy, list'ning stood
 At those sweet airs which did entrance the flood. 980
 In jocund sort the goddess thus they met,
 And after rev'rence done, all being set
 Upon their finny coursers round her throne,
 And she prepar'd to cut the wat'ry zone
 Engirting Albion, all their pipes were still, 985
 And Colin Clout began to tune his quill
 With such deep art, that every one was given
 To think Apollo, newly slid from heav'n,
 Had ta'en a human shape to win his love,
 Or with the Western swains for glory strove. 990
 He sung th' heroic knights of fairyland
 In lines so elegant, of such command,
 That had the Thracian* play'd but half so well, * Orpheus
 He had not left Eurydice in hell.
 But ere he ended his melodious song 995
 An host of angels flew the clouds among,
 And rapt this swan from his attentive mates
 To make him one of their associates
 In heaven's fair choir : where now he sings the praise
 Of him that is the first and last of days. 1000
 Divinest Spenser, heav'n-bred, happy Muse !
 Would any power into my brain infuse
 Thy worth, or all that poets had before,
 I could not praise till thou deserv'st no more.

986.—Colin Clout, Spenser. Quill, pipe.

A damp of wonder and amazement strook 1005
 Thetis' attendants ; many a heavy look
 Follow'd sweet Spenser, till the thick'ning air
 Sight's further passage stopp'd. A passionate tear
 Fell from each nymph, no shepherd's cheek was dry,
 A doleful dirge, and mournful elegy 1010
 Flew to the shore ; when mighty Nereus' queen,
 In memory of what was heard and seen,
 Employ'd a factor, fitted well with store
 Of richest gems, refined Indian ore,
 To raise, in honour of his worthy name, 1015
 A pyramis, whose head like winged Fame
 Should pierce the clouds, yea, seem the stars to kiss,
 And Mausolus' great tomb might shroud in his.
 Her will had been performance, had not Fate,
 That never knew how to commiserate, 1020
 Suborn'd curs'd Avarice to lie in wait
 For that rich prey—(gold is a taking bait) —
 Who closely lurking like a subtle snake
 Under the covert of a thorny brake,
 Seiz'd on the factor by fair Thetis sent, 1025
 And robb'd our Colin of his monument.

Ye English shepherds, sons of Memory,
 For satires change your pleasing melody ;
 Scourge, rail and curse that sacrilegious hand,
 That more than fiend of hell, that Stygian brand, 1030
 All-guilty Avarice, that worst of evil,

That gulf-devouring offspring of a devil :
 Heap curse on curse so direful and so fell,
 Their weight may press his damned soul to hell.
 Is there a spirit so gentle can refrain 1035
 To torture such ? O let a satyr's vein
 Mix with that man ! to lash this hellish limb,
 Or all our curses will descend on him.

For mine own part, although I now commerce
 With lowly shepherds in as low a verse, 1040
 If of my days I shall not see an end
 Till more years press me, some few hours I'll spend
 In rough hewn satires, and my busied pen
 Shall jerk to death this infamy of men.
 And like a Fury glowing coulters bear, 1045
 With which—But see how yonder fondlings tear
 Their fleeces in the brakes ; I must go free
 Them of their bonds ; rest you here merrily
 Till my return, when I will touch a string
 Shall make the rivers dance and valleys ring. 1050

1037.—Limb, a term of reproach, e.g. a limb of Satan.

1044.—Jerk, beat.

1045.—Coulters, ploughshares.

1046.—Fondlings, lambs.

THE SECOND SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

What shepherds on the sea were seen
 To entertain the Ocean's Queen ;
 Remond in search of Fida gone,
 And for his love young Doridon ;
 Their meeting with a woeful swain,
 Mute, and not able to complain
 His metamorphos'd mistress' wrong,
 Is all the subject of this song.

THE Muses' friend (grey-eyed Aurora) yet
 Held all the meadows in a cooling sweat,
 The milk-white gossamers not upwards snow'd,
 Nor was the sharp and useful-steering goad
 Laid on the strong-neck'd ox ; no gentle bud 5
 The sun had dried ; the cattle chew'd the cud
 Low levell'd on the grass ; no fly's quick sting
 Enforc'd the stonehorse in a furious ring
 To tear the passive earth, nor lash his tail
 About his buttocks broad ; the slimy snail 10
 Might on the wainscot, by his many mazes,
 Winding meanders and self-knitting traces,

Be follow'd where he stuck, his glittering slime
 Not yet wip'd off. It was so early time,
 The careful smith had in his sooty forge 15
 Kindled no coal ; nor did his hammers urge
 His neighbours' patience : owls abroad did fly,
 And day as then might plead his infancy.
 Yet of fair Albion all the western swaines
 Were long since up, attending on the plains 20
 When Nereus' daughter with her mirthful host
 Should summon them on their declining coast.
 But since her stay was long, for fear the sun
 Should find them idle, some of them begun
 To leap and wrestle, others threw the bar ; 25
 Some from the company removed are
 To meditate the songs they meant to play,
 Or make a new round for next holiday.
 Some tales of love their love-sick fellows told :
 Others were seeking stakes to pitch their fold. 30
 This, all alone was mending of his pipe :
 That, for his lass sought fruits most sweet, most ripe.
 Here from the rest a lovely shepherd's boy
 Sits piping on a hill, as if his joy
 Would still endure, or else that age's frost 35
 Should never make him think what he had lost.
 Yonder a shepherdess knits by the springs,
 Her hands still keeping time to what she sings :
 Or seeming, by her song, those fairest hands
 Were comforted in working. Near the sands 40
 Of some sweet river sits a musing lad,

That moans the loss of what he sometime had,
 His love by death bereft : when fast by him
 An aged swain takes place, as near the brim
 Of's grave as of the river, showing how 45
 That as those floods, which pass along right now,
 Are follow'd still by others from their spring,
 And in the sea have all their burying :
 Right so our times are known, our ages found,
 (Nothing is permanent within this round,) 50
 One age is now, another that succeeds,
 Extirping all things which the former breeds :
 Another follows that, doth new times raise,
 New years, new months, new weeks, new hours, new days,
 Mankind thus goes like rivers from their spring, 55
 And in the earth have all their burying.
 Thus sat the old man counselling the young ;
 Whilst, underneath a tree which overhung
 The silver stream (as some delight it took
 To trim his thick boughs in the crystal brook) 60
 Were set a jocund crew of youthful swains,
 Wooing their sweetings with delicious strains.
 Sportive Oreades the hills descended,
 The Hamadryades their hunting ended,
 And in the high woods left the long-liv'd harts 65
 To feed in peace, free from their winged darts ;
 Floods, mountains, valleys, woods, each vacant lies

50.—Round, globe, world.62.—Sweetings, sweethearts.

Of nymphs that by them danc'd their haydigyes :
 For all those powers were ready to embrace
 The present means to give our shepherds grace. 70
 And underneath this tree (till Thetis came)
 Many resorted, where a swain of name
 Less than of worth : (and we do never own
 Nor apprehend him best that most is known).
 Fame is uncertain, who so swiftly flies 75
 By th' unregarded shed where Virtue lies ;
 She, ill-inform'd of Virtue's worth, pursu'th
 In haste Opinion for the simple truth.
 True Fame is ever liken'd to our shade,
 He soonest misseth her that most hath made 80
 To overtake her ; whoso takes his wing,
 Regardless of her, she'll be following :
 Her true propriety she thus discovers.
 " Loves her contemners, and contemns her lovers."

Th' applause of common people never yet 85
 Pursu'd this swain ; he knew 't the counterfeit
 Of settled praise, and therefore at his songs,
 Though all the shepherds and the graceful throngs
 Of semi-gods compar'd him with the best
 That ever touch'd a reed, or was address'd 90
 In shepherd's coat, he never would approve
 Their attributes given in sincerest love ;
 Except he truly knew them as his merit.
 Fame gives a second life to such a spirit.

This swain, entreated by the mirthful rout, 95
 That with entwined arms lay round about
 The tree 'gainst which he lean'd, (so have I seen
 Tom Piper stand upon our village green,
 Back'd with the May-pole, whilst a jocund crew
 In gentle motion circularly threw 100
 Themselves about him), to his fairest ring
 Thus 'gan in numbers well according sing :

Venus by Adonis' side
 Crying kiss'd, and kissing cried,
 Wrung her hands and tore her hair 105
 For Adonis dying there.

Stay (quoth she) O stay and live !
 Nature surely doth not give
 To the earth her sweetest flowers
 To be seen but some few hours. 110

On his face, still as he bled
 For each drop a tear she shed,
 Which she kiss'd or wip'd away,
 Else had drown'd him where he lay.

Fair Proserpina (quoth she) 115
 Shall not have thee yet from me ;
 Nor thy soul to fly begin
 While my lips can keep it in.

98.—Tom Piper, one of the characters making up a morris dance (BRAND, Pop. Antiq., ed. Bohn, i. 266-7).

Here she clos'd again. And some Say Apollo would have come 120
 To have cur'd his wounded limb,
 But that she had smother'd him.

Look as a traveller in summer's day,
 Nigh chok'd with dust and molt with Titan's ray,
 Longs for a spring to cool his inward heat, 125
 And to that end with vows doth Heaven entreat,
 When going further finds an apple-tree,
 Standing as did old Hospitality,
 With ready arms to succour any needs :
 Hence plucks an apple, tastes it, and it breeds 130
 So great a liking in him for his thirst,
 That up he climbs, and gathers to the first
 A second, third ; nay, will not cease to pull
 Till he have got his cap and pockets full :
 " Things long desir'd so well esteemed are, 135
 That when they come we hold them better far.
 There is no mean 'twixt what we love and want,
 Desire, in men, is so predominant : "
 No less did all this quaint assembly long
 Than doth the traveller : this shepherd's song 140
 Had so ensnar'd each acceptable ear,
 That but a second, naught could bring them clear
 From an affected snare ; had Orpheus been Playing, some distance from them, he had seen
 Not one to stir a foot for his rare strain, 145
 But left the Thracian for the English swain.

Or had suspicious Jove (when her Jove
 * Iö. Into a cow transform'd his fairest love*)
 Great Inachus' sweet stem in durance given
 * Mercury. To this young lad, the messenger of heaven,* 150
 Fair Maia's offspring, with the depth of art
 That ever Jove to Hermes might impart,
 In fing'ring of a reed, had never won
 Poor Iö's freedom. And though Arctor's son,
 Hundred-ey'd Argus, might be lull'd by him, 155
 And loose his pris'ner, yet in every limb
 That god of wit had felt this shepherd's skill,
 And by his charms brought from the Muses' hill
 Enforc'd to sleep ; then, robb'd of pipe and rod,
 And vanquish'd so, turn swain, this swain a god. 160
 Yet to this lad not wanted Envy's sting,
 (" He's not worth aught that's not worth envying,")
 Since many at his praise were seen to grutch.
 For as a miller in his bolting-hutch
 Drives out the pure meal nearly as he can, 165
 And in his sifter leaves the coarser bran :
 So doth the canker of a poet's name
 Let slip such lines as might inherit fame,
 And from a volume culls some small amiss
 To fire such dogged spleens as mate with his. 170
 Yet, as a man that by his art would bring
 The ceaseless current of a crystal spring
 To overlook the lowly flowing head,

163.—Grutch, grumb'e.169.—Amiss, fault.

Sinks by degrees his solder'd pipes of lead
Beneath the fount, whereby the water goes 175
High, as a well that on a mountain flows :
So when detraction and a cynic's tongue
Have sunk desert unto the depth of wrong,
By that the eye of skill true worth shall see
To brave the stars, though low his passage
be. 180

But here I much digress, yet pardon, swains :
For as a maiden gath'ring on the plains
A scentful nosegay to set near her pap,
Or as a favour for her shepherd's cap,
Is seen far off to stray if she have spied 185
A flower that might increase her posy's pride :
So if to wander I am sometimes press'd,
'Tis for a strain that might adorn the rest.

Requests, that with denial could not meet,
Flew to our shepherd, and the voices sweet 190
Of fairest nymphs entreating him to say
What wight he lov'd ; he thus began his lay :

SHALL I tell you whom I love ?
Hearken then awhile to me ;
And if such a woman move, 195
As I now shall versify ;
Be assur'd, 'tis she, or none
That I love, and love alone.

Nature did her so much right,
 As she scorns the help of Art ; 200
 In as many virtues dight
 As e'er yet embrac'd a heart.
 So much good so truly tried,
 Some for less were deified.

Wit she hath without desire 205
 To make known how much she hath ;
 And her anger flames no higher
 Than may fitly sweeten wrath.
 Full of pity as may be,
 Though perhaps not so to me. 210

Reason masters every sense,
 And her virtues grace her birth :
 Lovely as all excellence,
 Modest in her most of mirth :
 Likelihood enough to prove, 215
 Only worth could kindle love.

Such she is: and if you know
 Such a one as I have sung ;
 Be she brown, or fair, or so,
 That she be but sometime young ; 220
 Be assur'd, 'tis she, or none
 That I love, and love alone.

* Eöus, Pyroëis, Aethon, and Phlegon, were feigned to be the horses of the Sun.

Eöus and his fellows in the team,*
 (Who, since their wat'ring in the Western stream,

Song 2.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 237

Had run a furious journey to appease 225
The night-sick eyes of our Antipodes,)
Now sweating were in our horizon seen
To drink the cold dew from each flow'ry green :
When Triton's trumpet with a shrill command
Told silver-footed Thetis was at hand. 230

As I have seen when on the breast of Thames
A heavenly bevy of sweet English dames,
In some calm ev'ning of delightful May,
With music give a farewell to the day,
Or as they would, with an admired tone, 235
Greet Night's ascension to her eben throne,
Rapt with their melody a thousand more
Run to be wafted from the bounding shore :
So ran the shepherds, and with hasty feet [240
Strove which should first increase that happy fleet.

The true presagers of a coming storm,* * Dolphins.
Teaching their fins to steer them to the form
Of Thetis' will, like boats at anchor stood,
As ready to convey the Muses' brood
Into the brackish lake that seem'd to swell 245
As proud so rich a burden on it fell.

Ere their arrival Astrophel had done
His shepherd's lay, yet equaliz'd of none.
Th' admired mirror, glory of our Isle,
Thou far-far-more than mortal man, whose style 250
Struck more men dumb to hearken to thy song,

Than Orpheus' harp or Tully's golden tongue.
 To him (as right) for wit's deep quintessence,
 For honour, valour, virtue, excellence,
 Be all the garlands, crown his tomb with bay, 255
 Who spake as much as e'er our tongue can say.

Happy Arcadia ! while such lovely strains
 Sung of thy valleys, rivers, hills and plains ;
 Yet most unhappy other joys among,
 That never heard'st his music nor his song. 260

Deaf men are happy so, whose virtues' praise
 (Unheard of them) are sung in tuneful lays.
 And pardon me, ye sisters of the mountain,
 Who wail his loss from the Pegasian fountain,
 If, like a man for portraiture unable, 265
 I set my pencil to Apelles' table ;

Or dare to draw his curtain, with a will
 To show his true worth, when the artist's skill
 Within that curtain fully doth express
 His own art's-mast'ry, my unableness. 270

He sweetly touched what I harshly hit,
 Yet thus I glory in what I have writ ;
 Sidney began (and if a wit'so mean
 May taste with him the dews of Hippocrene)
 I sung the Past'ral next ; his Muse, my mover : 275
 And on the plains full many a pensive lover
 Shall sing us to their loves, and praising be
 My humble lines the more for praising thee.

266.—Apelles' table, a picture of Aphrodite left unfinished at the painter's death.

Thus we shall live with them by rocks, by springs,
As well as Homer by the death of kings. 280

Then in a strain beyond an oaten quill
The learned shepherd of fair Hitchin hill* * M. Chap-
Sung the heroic deeds of Greece and Troy, man.
In lines so worthy life, that I employ
My reed in vain to overtake his fame. 285

All praiseful tongues do wait upon that name.
Our second Ovid, the most pleasing Muse
That Heav'n did e'er in mortal's brain infuse,
All-loved Drayton, in soul-raping strains,
A genuine note of all the nymphish trains 290
Began to tune ; on it all ears were hung
As sometime Dido's on Æneas' tongue.

Jonson, whose full of merit to rehearse
Too copious is to be confin'd in verse ;
Yet therein only fittest to be known, 295
Could any write a line which he might own.
One so judicious, so well knowing, and
A man whose least worth is to understand ;
One so exact in all he doth prefer
To able censure ; for the theatre 300
Not Seneca transcends his worth of praise ;
Who writes him well shall well deserve the bays.

Well-languag'd Daniel : Brooke, whose polish'd lines

282.—Hitchin, in Hertfordshire, the birthplace of George Chapman, the translator of Homer's poems.

289.—Soul-raping, soul-ravishing.

Are fittest to accomplish high designs,
 Whose pen (it seems) still young Apollo guides ; 305
 Worthy the forked hill, for ever glides
 Streams from thy brain, so fair, that time shall see
 Thee honour'd by thy verse, and it by thee.
 And when thy temple's well-deserving bays
 Might imp a pride in thee to reach thy praise, 310
 As in a crystal glass, fill'd to the ring
 With the clear water of as clear a spring,
 A steady hand may very safely drop
 Some quantity of gold, yet o'er the top
 Not force the liquor run, although before 315
 The glass (of water) could contain no more :
 Yet so, all-worthy Brooke, though all men sound
 With plummets of just praise thy skill profound,
 Thou in thy verse those attributes canst take,
 And not apparent ostentation make, 320
 That any second can thy virtues raise,
 Striving as much to hide as merit praise.

Davies and Wither, by whose Muses' power
 A natural day to me seems but an hour,
 And could I ever hear their learned lays, 325
 Ages would turn to artificial days.
 These sweetly chanted to the Queen of Waves,
 She prais'd, and what she prais'd, no tongue depraves.
 Then base contempt (unworthy our report)
 Fly from the Muses and their fair resort, 330

310.—Imp, engraft, insert.323.—Depraves, traduces, vilifies.

And exercise thy spleen on men like thee :
Such are more fit to be contemn'd than we.
'Tis not the rancour of a canker'd heart
That can debase the excellence of Art ;
Nor great in titles make our worth obey, 335
Since we have lines far more esteem'd than they.
For there is hidden in a poet's name
A spell that can command the wings of Fame,
And maugre all Oblivion's hated birth,
Begin their immortality on earth ; 340
When he that 'gainst a Muse with hate combines,
May raise his tomb in vain to reach our lines.

Thus Thetis rides along the Narrow Seas
Encompass'd round with lovely naiades,
With gaudy nymphs, and many a skilful swain, 345
Whose equals earth cannot produce again,
But leave the times and men that shall succeed them
Enough to praise that age which so did breed them.

Two of the quaintest swains that yet have been Fail'd their attendance on the Ocean's Queen, 350
Remond and Doridon, whose hapless fates
Late sever'd them from their more happy mates.
For, gentle swains, if you remember well,
When last I sung on brim of yonder dell,
And as I guess it was that sunny morn, 355
When in the grove there by my sheep were shorn,
I ween I told you, while the shepherds young
Were at their past'ral and their rural song,
The shrieks of some poor maid, fallen in mischance,

Invok'd their aid, and drew them from their dance :
 Each ran a several way to help the maid ; [360
 Some tow'rds the valley, some the green wood st ray'd :
 Here one the thicket beats, and there a swain
 Enters the hidden caves ; but all in vain. [365
 Nor could they find the wight whose shrieks and cry
 Flew through the gentle air so heavily,
 Nor see or man or beast, whose cruel teen
 Would wrong a maiden or in grave or green.
 Back then return'd they all to end their sport
 But Doridon and Remond, who resort 370
 Eack to those places which they erst had sought,
 Nor could a thicket be by Nature wrought
 In such a web, so intricate, and knit
 So strong with briars, but they would enter it.
 Remond his Fida calls ; Fida the woods 375
 Resound again, and Fida speak the floods,
 As if the rivers and the hills did frame
 Themselves no small delight to hear her name.
 Yet she appears not. Doridon would now
 Have call'd his love too, but he knew not how : 380
 Much like a man who dreaming in his sleep
 That he is falling from some mountain steep
 Into a soundless lake, about whose brim
 A thousand crocodiles do wait for him, [385
 And hangs but by one bough, and should that break
 His life goes with it, yet to cry or speak,

Though fain he would, can move nor voice nor tongue :

So when he Remond heard the woods among
Call for his Fida, he would gladly too
Have call'd his fairest love, but knew not who, 390
Or what to call ; poor lad, that canst not tell,
Nor speak the name of her thou lov'st so well.

Remond by hap near to the arbour found,
Where late the hind was slain, the hurtless ground
Besmear'd with blood ; to Doridon he cried, 395
And tearing then his hair, O hapless tide
(Quoth he), behold ! some cursed hand hath ta'en
From Fida this ; O what infernal bane,
Or more than hellish fiend enforced this !
Pure as the stream of aged Simois, 400
And as the spotless lily was her soul !
Ye sacred Powers that round about the pole
Turn in your spheres ! O could you see this deed,
And keep your motion ? If the eldest seed
Of chained Saturn hath so often been 405
In hunter's and in shepherd's habit seen
To trace our woods, and on our fertile plains
Woo shepherds' daughters with melodious strains,
Where was he now, or any other power ?
So many sev'ral lambs have I each hour, 410
And crooked horned rams brought to your shrines,

394 - -Hurtless, innocent.

400.—Simois, the river in the plain of Troy.

And with perfumes clouded the sun that shines,
 Yet now forsaken ? to an uncouth state
 Must all things run, if such will be ingrate. [415

Cease, Remond, quoth the boy, no more complain,
 Thy fairest Fida lives ; nor do thou stain
 With vile reproaches any power above,
 They all as much as thee have been in love :
 Saturn his Rhea ; Jupiter had store,
 As Iö, Leda, Europa, and more ; 420

* Hyacinth.

Phœbus had Daphne, and the sweet-fac'd boy ;*
 Venus, Adonis ; and the God of Wit
 In chastest bonds was to the Muses knit,
 And yet remains so, nor can any sever 425

His love, but brother-like affects them ever ;
 Pale, changeful Cynthia her Endymion had,
 And oft on Latmus sported with that lad :
 If these were subject (as all mortal men)
 Unto the golden shafts, they could not then 430
 But by their own affections rightly guess

Her death would draw on thine ; thy wretchedness
 Charge them respectless ; since no swain than thee
 Hath offer'd more unto each deity.

But fear not, Remond, for those sacred Powers 435
 Tread on oblivion ; no desert of ours
 Can be entomb'd in their celestial breasts ;
 They weigh our off'rings and our solemn feasts,
 And they forget thee not : Fida (thy dear) [440
 Treads on the earth ; the blood that's sprinkled here

Ne'er fill'd her veins, the hind possess'd this gore ;
 See where the collar lies she whilom wore.
 Some dog hath slain her, or the griping carl
 That spoils our plains in digging them for marl.

Look, as two little brothers who address'd 445
 To search the hedges for a thrush's nest,
 And have no sooner got the leavy spring,
 When mad in lust with fearful bellowing
 A strong-neck'd bull pursues throughout the field,
 One climbs a tree, and takes that for his shield, 450
 Whence looking from one pasture to another,
 What might betide to his much-loved brother,
 Further than can his over-drowned eyes
 Aright perceive, the furious beast he spies
 Toss something on his horns, he knows not what, 455
 But one thing fears, and therefore thinks it that ;
 When coming nigher he doth well discern
 It of the wondrous-one-night-seeding fern
 Some bundle was : yet thence he homeward goes
 Pensive and sad, nor can abridge the throes 460
 His fear began, but still his mind doth move
 Unto the worst : mistrust goes still with love.
 So far'd it with our shepherd : though he saw
 Not aught of Fida's raiment, which might draw
 A more suspicion ; though the collar lay 465
 There on the grass, yet goes he thence away
 Full of mistrust, and vows to leave that plain,

Till he embrace his chastest love again.
 Love-wounded Doridon entreats him then
 That he might be his partner, since no men 470
 Had cases liker ; he with him would go,
 Weep when he wept, and sigh when he did so.
 I, quoth the boy, will sing thee songs of love,
 And as we sit in some all-shady grove,
 Where Philomela and such sweeten'd throats 475
 Are for the mast'ry tuning various notes,
 I'll strive with them, and tune so sad a verse,
 That whilst to thee my fortunes I rehearse,
 No bird but shall be mute, her note decline,
 And cease her woe, to lend an ear to mine. 480
 I'll tell thee tales of love, and show thee how
 The gods have wander'd as we shepherds now,
 And when thou plain'st thy Fida's loss, will I
 Echo the same, and with mine own supply.
 Know, Remond, I do love, but, well-a-day ! 485
 I know not whom ; but as the gladsome May She's fair and lovely, as a goddess she
 (If such as her's a goddess' beauty be)
 First stood before me, and inquiring was
 How to the marish she might soonest pass, 490
 When rush'd a villain in, hell be his lot,
 And drew her thence, since when I saw her not,
 Nor know I where to search ; but if thou please
 'Tis not a forest, mountain, rocks, or seas

Song 2.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 247

Can in thy journey stop my going on. 495
Fate so may smile on hapless Doridon,
That he rebless'd may be with her fair sight,
Though thence his eyes possess eternal night.

Remond agreed, and many weary days
They now had spent in unfrequented ways : 500
About the rivers, valleys, holts and crags,
Among the osiers and the waving flags
They nearly pry, if any dens there be,
Where from the sun might harbour cruelty :
Or if they could the bones of any spy, 505
Or torn by beasts, or human tyranny.
They close inquiry make in caverns blind,
Yet what they look for would be death to find.
Right as a curious man that would descry,
Led by the trembling hand of Jealousy, 510
If his fair wife have wrong'd his bed or no,
Meeteth his torment if he find her so.

One ev'n, ere Phœbus near the golden shore
Of Tagus' stream his journey 'gan give o'er,
They had ascended up a woody hill, 515
Where oft the fauni with their bugles shrill
Waken'd the echo, and with many a shout
Follow'd the fearful deer the woods about,
Or through the brakes that hide the craggy rocks
Digg'd to the hole where lies the wily fox ; 520
Thence they beheld an underlying vale,

501.—Holts, woody hills.

503.—Nearly, closely.

Where Flora set her rarest flowers at sale,
 Whither the thriving bee came oft to suck them,
 And fairest nymphs to deck their hair did pluck
 them ;

Where oft the goddesses did run at base, 525

And on white harts began the wild-goose-chase :

Here various Nature seem'd adorning this,

In imitation of the fields of bliss ;

Or as she would entice the souls of men

To leave Elysium, and live here again. 530

Not Hybla mountain in the jocund prime

Upon her many bushes of sweet thyme

Shows greater number of industrious bees,

Than were the birds that sung there on the trees.

Like the trim windings of a wanton lake, 535

That doth his passage through a meadow make,

Ran the delightful valley 'tween two hills :

From whose rare trees the precious balm distils,

And hence Apollo had his simples good

That cur'd the gods hurt by the Earth's ill brood. 540

A crystal river on her bosom slid,

And passing seem'd in sullen mutt'rings chid

The artless songsters, that their music still

Should charm the sweet dale and the wistful hill :

Not suffering her shrill waters, as they run 544

525.—Bis, the game of prisoner's-bars.

526.—Wild-goose-chase, a game.

531.—Prime, spring.

Tun'd with a whistling gale in unison
 To tell as high they priz'd the broider'd vale
 As the quick linnet or sweet nightingale.
 Down from a steep rock came the water first,
 (Where lusty satyrs often quench'd their thirst) 550
 And with no little speed seem'd all in haste,
 Till it the lovely bottom had embrac'd :
 Then as entranc'd to hear the sweet birds sing,
 In curled whirlpools she her course doth bring,
 As loath to leave the songs that lull'd the dale, 555
 Or waiting time, when she and some soft gale
 Should speak what true delight they did possess
 Among the rare flowers which the valley dress.
 But since those quaint musicians would not stay,
 Nor suffer any to be heard but they : 560
 Much like a little lad who gotten new
 To play his part amongst a skilful crew
 Of choice musicians on some softer string
 That is not heard, the others' fingering
 Drowning his art, the boy would gladly get 565
 Applause with others that are of his set,
 And therefore strikes a stroke loud as the best,
 And often descants when his fellows rest ;
 That to be heard (as usual singers do)
 Spoils his own music and his partners' too : 570
 So at the further end the waters fell
 From off an high bank down a lowly dell,
 As they had vow'd, ere passing from that ground,
 The birds should be enforc'd to hear their sound.

No small delight the shepherds took to see 575
 A coombe so dight in Flora's livery,*

 Feronia luco.
 Where fair Feronia* honour'd in the woods,
 And all the deities that haunt the floods,
 With powerful Nature strove to frame a plot,
 Whose like the sweet Arcadia yielded not. 580
 Down through the arched wood the shepherds wend,
 And seek all places that might help their end,
 When, coming near the bottom of the hill,
 A deep-fetch'd sigh (which seem'd of power to kill
 The breast that held it) pierc'd the list'ning wood; 585
 Whereat the careful swains no longer stood
 Where they were looking on a tree, whose rind
 A love-knot held, which two join'd hearts entwin'd;
 But searching round, upon an aged root [590
 Thick lin'd with moss which (though to little boot)
 Seem'd as a shelter it had lending been Against cold winter's storms and wreakful teen:
 Or clad the stock in summer with that hue
 His wither'd branches not a long time knew:
 For in his hollow trunk and perish'd grain 595
 The cuckow now had many a winter lain,
 And thriving pismires laid their eggs in store:
 The dormouse slept there, and a many more—
 Here sat the lad, of whom I think of old
 Virgil's prophetic spirit had foretold, 600
 Who whilst Dame Nature for her cunning's sake

A male or female doubted which to make,
 And to adorn him more than all assay'd,
 This pretty youth was almost made a maid.
 Sadly he sat, and (as would Grief) alone, 605
 As if the boy and tree had been but one,
 Whilst down near boughs did drops of amber creep,
 As if his sorrow made the trees to weep.
 If ever this were true in Ovid's verse
 That tears have power an adamant to pierce, 610
 Or move things void of sense, 'twas here approv'd :
 Things, vegetative once, his tears have mov'd.
 Surely the stones might well be drawn in pity
 To burst that he should moan, as for a ditty
 To come and range themselves in order all, 615
 And of their own accord raise Thebes a wall.
 Or else his tears (as did the other's song)
 Might have th' attractive power to move the throng
 Of all the forest's citizens and woods,
 With ev'ry denizen of air and floods, 620
 To sit by him and grieve : to leave their jars,
 Their strifes, dissensions, and all civil wars ;
 And though else disagreeing, in this one
 Mourning for him should make an union.
 For whom the heavens would wear a sable suit, 625
 If men, beasts, fishes, birds, trees, stones were mute.
 His eyes were fixed (rather fixed stars)
 With whom it seem'd his tears had been in wars,

The difference this (a hard thing to descry)
 Whether the drops were clearest, or his eye. 630
 Tears fearing conquest to the eye might fall,
 An inundation brought and drowned all.
 Yet like true Virtue from the top of state,
 Whose hopes vile Envy hath seen ruinate,
 Being lowly cast, her goodness doth appear 635
 (Uncloth'd of greatness) more apparent clear :
 So though dejected, yet remain'd a feature,
 Made sorrow sweet plac'd in so sweet a creature.
 " The test of misery the truest is,
 In that none hath but what is surely his." 640
 His arms across, his sheep-hook lay beside him :
 Had Venus pass'd this way, and chanc'd t' have spied
 him,
 With open breast, locks on his shoulders spread,
 She would have sworn (had she not seen him dead)
 It was Adonis ; or if e'er there was 645
 Held transmigration by Pythagoras
 Of souls, that certain then her lost love's spirit
 A fairer body never could inherit.
 His pipe, which often wont upon the plain
 To sound the Dorian, Phrygian, Lydian strain, 650
 Lay from his hook and bag clean cast apart,
 And almost broken like his master's heart.
 Yet till the two kind shepherds near him stepp'd,
 I find he nothing spake but that he wept.
 Cease, gentle lad (quoth Remond), let no tear 655
 Cloud those sweet beauties in thy face appear ;

Why dost thou call on that which comes alone,
 And will not leave thee till thyself art gone ?
 Thou may'st have grief, when other things are left
 thee :

All else may slide away, this still is left thee ; 660

And when thou wantest other company,
 Sorrow will ever be embracing thee.

But, fairest swain, what cause hast thou of woe ?

Thou hast a well-fleec'd flock feed to and fro
 (His sheep along the valley that time fed 665

Not far from him, although unfollowed).

What, do thy ewes abortives bring ? or lambs

For want of milk seek to their fellows' dams ?

No griping landlord hath enclos'd thy walks,
 Nor toiling ploughman furrow'd them in balks. 670

Ver hath adorn'd thy pastures all in green

With clover-grass as fresh as may be seen :

Clear-gliding springs refresh thy meadows' heat,

Meads promise to thy charge their winter-meat,

And yet thou griev'st ! O ! had some swains thy store, 675

Their pipes should tell the woods they ask'd no more.

Or have the Parcæ with impartial knife

Left some friend's body tenantless of life,

And thou bemoan'st that Fate in his youth's morn

O'ercastr'd with clouds his light but newly born ? 680

670.—Balks, the ridge left by the plough between two furrows.

677.—Unpartial, unkindly.

"Count not how many years he is bereav'd,
 But those which he possess'd and had receiv'd ;
 If I may tread no longer on this stage,
 Though others think me young ; it is mine age :
 For whoso hath his fate's full period told, 685
 He full of years departs, and dieth old."
 May be that avaricé thy mind hath cross'd,
 And so thy sighs are for some trifle lost.
 Why shouldst thou hold that dear the world throws on thee ? 690
 "Think nothing good which may be taken from thee."
 Look as some pond'rous weight or massy pack,
 Laid to be carried on a porter's back,
 Doth make his strong joints crack, and forceth him
 (Maugre the help of every nerve and limb)
 To straggle in his gait, and goeth double, 695
 Bending to earth, such is his burden's trouble :
 So any one by avarice engirt,
 And press'd with wealth, lies grovelling in the dirt.
 His wretched mind bends to no point but this,
 'That who hath most of wealth hath most of bliss. 700
 Hence comes the world to seek such traffic forth
 And passages through the congealed North,
 Who when their hairs with icicles are hung,
 And that their chatt'ring teeth confound their tongue,
 Show them a glitt'ring stone, will straightways say, 705
 If pains thus prosper, oh, what fools would play ?
 Yet I could tell them (as I now do thee)

" In getting wealth we lose our liberty.
 Besides, it robs us of our better powers,
 And we should be ourselves, were these not ours. 710
 He is not poorest that hath least in store,
 But he which hath enough, yet asketh more :
 Nor is he rich by whom are all possess'd,
 But he which nothing hath, yet asketh least.
 If thou a life by Nature's leading pitch, 715
 Thou never shalt be poor, nor ever rich
 Led by Opinion ; for their states are such,
 Nature but little seeks, Opinion much."
 Amongst the many buds proclaiming May,
 (Decking the fields in holy-day's array, 720
 Striving who shall surpass in bravery)
 Mark the fair blooming of the hawthorn-tree,
 Who, finely clothed in a robe of white,
 Feeds full the wanton eye with May's delight ;
 Yet for the bravery that she is in 725
 Doth neither handle card nor wheel to spin,
 Nor changeth robes but twice : is never seen
 In other colours than in white or green.
 Learn then content, young shepherd, from this tree,
 Whose greatest wealth is Nature's livery ; 730
 And richest ingots never toil to find,
 Nor care for poverty but of the mind.

This spoke young Remond : yet the mournful lad

726.—Doth neither handle card, etc., Luke, c. xii. v. 27 ;
 Spenser's Faëry Queen, b. 2 c. 6, st. 16, l. 8.

732.—Not care for poverty, etc., Matt. c. 5, vv. 3, 6.

Not once replied ; but with a smile, though sad,
 He shook his head, then cross'd his arms again, 735
 And from his eyes did showers of salt tears rain ;
 Which wrought so on the swains, they could not smother

Their sighs, but spent them freely as the other.

Tell us (quoth Doridon), thou fairer far

* Hippolytus.

Than he whose chastity made him a star,* 740

More fit to throw the wounding shafts of Love

Than follow sheep, and pine here in a grove.

O do not hide thy sorrows, show them brief ;

“ He oft finds aid that doth disclose his grief.”

If thou wouldst it continue, thou dost wrong ; 745

“ No man can sorrow very much and long : ”

For thus much loving Nature hath dispos'd,

That 'mongst the woes that have us round enclos'd,

This comfort's left (and we should bless her for't)

That we may make our griefs be born, or short. 750

Believe me, shepherd, we are men no less

Free from the killing throes of heaviness

Than thou art here, and but this diff'rence sure,

That use hath made us apter to endure.

More he had spoke, but that a bugle shrill 755

Rung through the valley from the higher hill,

And as they turn'd them tow'rds the heart'ning sound,

A gallant stag, as if he scorn'd the ground,

Came running with the wind, and bore his head

As he had been the king of forests bred. 760

Not swifter comes the messenger of heaven,

Or winged vessel with a full gale driven,
 Nor the swift swallow flying near the ground,
 By which the air's distemp'ature is found :
 Nor Myrrha's course, nor Daphne's speedy flight, 765
 Shunning the dalliance of the God of light,
 Than seem'd the stag, that had no sooner cross'd them,
 But in a trice their eyes as quickly lost him.

The weeping swain ne'er mov'd, but as his eyes
 Were only given to show his miseries, 770
 Attended those ; and could not once be won
 To leave that object whence his tears begun.

O had that man,* who (by a tyrant's hand) * Phiton.
 Seeing his children's bodies strew the sand,
 And he next morn for torments press'd to go, 775
 Yet from his eyes let no one small tear flow,
 But being ask'd how well he bore their loss,
 Like to a man affliction could not cross,
 He stoutly answer'd : Happier sure are they
 Than I shall be by space of one short day : 780
 No more his grief was ; but had he been here,
 He had been flint, had he not spent a tear.
 For still that man the perfecter is known,
 Who others' sorrows feels more than his own.

Remond and Doridon were turning then 785
 Unto the most disconsolate of men,
 But that a gallant dame, fair as the morn
 Or lovely blooms the peach-tree that adorn,
 Clad in a changing silk, whose lustre shone
 Like yellow flowers and grass far off in one, 790

Or like the mixture Nature doth display
 Upon the quaint wings of the popinjay :
 Her horn about her neck with silver tip,
 Too hard a metal for so soft a lip,
 Which it no oft'ner kiss'd than Jove did frown, 795
 And in a mortal's shape would fain come down
 To feed upon those dainties, had not he
 Been still kept back by Juno's jealousy.
 An ivory dart she held of good command,
 White was the bone, but whiter was her hand ; 800
 Of many pieces was it neatly fram'd,
 But more the hearts were that her eyes inflam'd.
 Upon her head a green light silken cap :
 A piece of white lawn shadow'd either pap,
 Between which hillocks many Cupids lay, 805
 Where with her neck or with her teats they play,
 Whilst her quick heart will not with them dispense,
 But heaves her breasts as it would beat them thence :
 Who, fearing much to lose so sweet repair,
 Take faster hold by her dishevell'd hair. 810
 Swiftly she ran ; the sweet briars to receive her
 Slipp'd their embracements, and (as loath to leave her) Stretch'd themselves to their length ; yet on she goes.

So great Diana frays a herd of roes
 And speedy follows : Arethusa fled 815
 So from the river* that her ravished.

Alpheus.

792.—Popinjay, parrot.

814.—Frays, affrights.

When this brave huntress near the shepherds drew
 Her lily arm in full extent she threw
 To pluck a little bough to fan her face
 From off a thick-leav'd ash (no tree did grace 820
 The low grove as did this, the branches spread
 Like Neptune's trident upwards from the head).
 No sooner did the grieved shepherd see
 The nymph's white hand extended tow'rd's the tree,
 But rose and to her ran, yet she had done 825
 Ere he came near, and to the wood was gone ;
 Yet now approach'd the bough the huntress tore,
 He suck'd it with his mouth, and kiss'd it o'er
 A hundred times, and softly 'gan it bind
 With dock-leaves and a slip of willow rind. 830
 Then round the trunk he wreathes his weaken'd arms,
 And with his scalding tears the smooth bark warms,
 Sighing and groaning, that the shepherds by Forgot to help him, and lay down to cry :
 "For 'tis impossible a man should be 835
 Griev'd to himself, or fail of company."
 Much the two swains admir'd, but pitied more
 That he no power of words had to deplore
 Or show what sad misfortune 'twas befell
 To him, whom Nature (seem'd) regarded well. 840
 As thus they lay, and while the speechless swain
 His tears and sighs spent to the woods in vain,
 One like a wild man overgrown with hair,

837.—Admir'd, wondered.

His nails long grown, and all his body bare,
 Save that a wreath of ivy twist did hide 845
 Those parts which Nature would not have descried,
 And the long hair that curled from his head
 A grassy garland rudely covered——

But, shepherds, I have wrong'd you ; 'tis now late,
 For see our maid stands hollowing on yond gate. 850
 'Tis supper-time withal, and we had need
 Make haste away unless we mean to speed
 With those that kiss the hare's foot : rheums are bred,
 Some say, by going supperless to bed,
 And those I love not ; therefore cease my rhyme, 855
 And put my pipes up till another time.

853.—Kiss the hare's foot, a proverbial expression signifying to be too late for anything.

THE THIRD SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

A redbreast doth from pining save
Marina shut in Famine's Cave.
The golden age described plain,
And Limos by the shepherds slain,
Do give me leave awhile to move
My pipe of Tavy and his love.

ALAS that I have done so great a wrong
Unto the fairest maiden of my song,
Divine Marina, who in Limos' cave
Lies ever fearful of a living grave,
And night and day upon the harden'd stones 5
Rests, if a rest can be amongst the moans
Of dying wretches ; where each minute all
Stand still afraid to hear the death's-man call.

Thrice had the golden sun his hot steeds wash'd
In the west main, and thrice them smartly lash'd 10
Out of the balmy east, since the sweet maid
Had in that dismal cave been sadly laid.
Where hunger pinch'd her so, she need not stand

In fear of murd'ring by a second hand :
 For through her tender sides such darts might pass 15
 'Gainst which strong walls of stone, thick gates of brass,

Deny no entrance, nor the camps of kings,
 Since soonest there they bend their flaggy wings.

But Heaven that stands still for the best's avail,
 Lendeth his hand when human helpings fail; 20

For 'twere impossible that such as she
 Should be forgotten of the Deity ;
 Since in the spacious orb could no man find
 A fairer face match'd with a fairer mind.

A little robin-redbreast, one clear morn, 25

Sat sweetly singing on a well-leav'd thorn :
 Whereat Marina rose, and did admire
 He durst approach from whence all else retire :

And pitying the sweet bird what in her lay,
 She fully strove to fright him thence away. 30

Poor harmless wretch, quoth she, go, seek some spring,

And to her sweet fall with thy fellows sing ;
 Fly to the well-replenish'd groves, and there
 Do entertain each swain's harmonious ear ;
 Traverse the winding branches ; chant so free, 35

That every lover fall in love with thee ;
 And if thou chance to see that lovely boy .
 (To look on whom the sylvans count a joy) :

He whom I lov'd no sooner than I lost,
 Whose body all the Graces hath engross'd, 40
 To him unfold (if that thou dar'st to be
 So near a neighbour to my tragedy)
 As far as can thy voice (in plaints so sad,
 And in so many mournful accents clad,
 That as thou sing'st upon a tree there by 45
 He may some small time weep, yet know not why),
 How I in death was his, though Powers divine
 Will not permit that he in life be mine.
 Do this, thou loving bird ; and haste away
 Into the woods : but if so be thou stay 50
 To do a deed of charity on me,
 When my pure soul shall leave mortality,
 By cov'ring this poor body with a sheet
 Of green leaves, gather'd from a valley sweet ;
 It is in vain : these harmless limbs must have 55
 Than in the caitiff's womb no other grave.
 Hence then, sweet robin ; lest in staying long
 At once thou chance forego both life and song.
 With this she hush'd him thence ; he sung no more,
 But ('fraid the second time) flew tow'rds the shore. 60

Within as short time as the swiftest swain
 Can to our May-pole run and come again,
 The little redbreast to the prickled thorn
 Return'd, and sung there as he had beforn :
 And fair Marina to the loophole went, 65
 Pitying the pretty bird, whose punishment
 Limos would not defer if he were spied.

No sooner had the bird the maiden eyed,
 But leaping on the rock, down from a bough,
 He takes a cherry up (which he but now 70
 Had thither brought, and in that place had laid
 Till to the cleft his song had drawn the maid),
 And flying with the small stem in his bill,
 (A choicer fruit than hangs on Bacchus' hill,)*
 In fair Marina's bosom took his rest, 75
 A heavenly seat fit for so sweet a guest :
 Where Cytherea's doves might billing sit,
 And gods and men with envy look on it ;
 Where rose two mountains, whose rare sweets to crop
 Was harder than to reach Olympus' top : 80
 For those the gods can ; but to climb these hills
 Their powers no other were than mortal wills.
 Here left the bird the cherry, and anon
 Forsook her bosom, and for more is gone,
 Making such speedy flights into the thick, 85
 That she admir'd he went and came so quick.
 Then lest his many cherries should distaste,
 Some other fruit he brings than he brought last.
 Sometime of strawberries a little stem,
 Oft changing colours as he gather'd them : 90
 Some green, some white, some red on them infus'd,
 These lov'd, those fear'd, they blush'd to be so us'd.
 The peascod green oft with no little toil
 He'd seek for in the fattest, fertil'st soil,

* Cithæron

85.—Thick, thicket.

86.—Admir'd, wondered.

And rend it from the stalk to bring it to her, 95
 And in her bosom for acceptance woo her.

No berry in the grove or forest grew,
 That fit for nourishment the kind bird knew,
 Nor any powerful herb in open field
 To serve her brood the teeming earth did yield, 100

But with his utmost industry he sought it,
 And to the cave for chaste Marina brought it.

So from one well-stor'd garden to another,
 To gather simples runs a careful mother,
 Whose only child lies on the shaking bed 105

Grip'd with a fever (sometime honoured
 In Rome as if a god*), nor is she bent
 To other herbs than those for which she went.

The feather'd hours five times were overtold,
 And twice as many floods and ebbs had roll'd 110
 The small sands out and in, since fair Marine
 (For whose long loss a hundred shepherds pine)
 Was by the charitable robin fed :

For whom (had she not so been nourished)
 A hundred doves would search the sunburnt hills, 115

Or fruitful valleys lac'd with silver rills,
 To bring her olives. Th' eagle strong of sight

To countries far remote would bend her flight,
 And with unwearied wing strip through the sky
 To the choice plots of Gaul and Italy, 120

And never lin till homeward she escape

* Febrem ad minus nocendum templis colebant, ait Val. Maximus. Vide Tullium in tertio de Nat. Deorum, et secundo de Legibus.

119.—Strip, fly rapidly.

121.—Lin, cease.

With the pomegranate, lemon, orange, grape,
 Or the lov'd citron, and attain'd the cave.
 The well-plum'd goshawk (by th' Egyptians grave
 Us'd in their mystic characters for speed) 125
 Would not be wanting at so great a need,
 But from the well-stor'd orchards of the land
 Brought the sweet pear, once by a cursed hand
 At Swinsted* us'd with poison for the fall
 Of one who on these plains rul'd lord of all. 130
 The scentful osprey by the rock had fish'd,
 And many a pretty shrimp in scallops dish'd,
 Some way convey'd her ; no one of the shoal
 That haunt the waves, but from his lurking hole
 Had pull'd the crayfish, and with much ado 135
 Brought that the maid, and periwinkles too.
 But these for others might their labours spare,
 And not with robin for their merits share.
 Yet as a herdess in a summer's day,
 Heat with the glorious sun's all-purging ray, 140
 In the calm evening, leaving her fair flock,
 Betakes herself unto a froth-girt rock,
 On which the headlong Tavy throws his waves,
 And foams to see the stones neglect his braves :
 Where sitting to undo her buskins white, 145
 And wash her neat legs, as her use each night,
 Th' enamour'd flood, before she can unlace them,
 Rolls up his waves as hast'ning to embrace them,

* One writes that K. John was poison'd at Swinsted, with a dish of pears : others, there, in a cup of wine : some that he died at Newark of the flux. A fourth by the distemperature of peaches eaten in his fit of an ague. Among so many doubts, I leave you to believe the author most in credit with our best of antiquaries.

And though to help them some small gale do blow,
 And one of twenty can but reach her so ; 150
 Yet will a many little surges be
 Flashing upon the rock full busily,
 And do the best they can to kiss her feet,
 But that their power and will not equal meet :
 So as she for her nurse look'd tow'rds the land, 155
 And now beholds the trees that grace the strand,
 Then looks upon a hill whose sliding sides
 A goodly flock like winter's cov'ring hides,
 And higher on some stone that jutteth out,
 Their careful master guiding his trim rout 160
 By sending forth his dog as shepherds do,
 Or piping sat, or clouting of his shoe ;
 Whence, nearer hand drawing her wand'ring sight,
 So from the earth steals the all-quick'ning light,
 Beneath the rock, the waters high, but late, 165
 (I know not by what sluice or emptying gate)
 Were at a low ebb ; on the sand she spies
 A busy bird that to and fro still flies,
 Till pitching where a heatful oyster lay,
 Opening his close jaws, closer none than they 170
 Unless the griping fist, or cherry lips
 Of happy lovers in their melting sips,
 Since the decreasing waves had left him there
 Gaping for thirst, yet meets with nought but air,
 And that so hot, ere the returning tide, 175

He in his shell is likely to be fried ;
 The wary bird a pretty pebble takes
 And claps it 'twixt the two pearl-hiding flakes
 Of the broad-yawning oyster, and she then Securely picks the fish out (as some men 180
 A trick of policy thrust 'tween two friends,
 Sever their powers), and his intention ends.
 The bird thus getting that for which she strove,
 Brought it to her : to whom the Queen of Love
 Serv'd as a foil, and Cupid could no other, 185
 But fly to her mistaken for his mother.
 Marina from the kind bird took the meat,
 And (looking down) she saw a number great
 Of birds, each one a pebble in his bill,
 Would do the like, but that they wanted skill : 190
 Some threw it in too far, and some too short ;
 This could not bear a stone fit for such sport,
 But, harmless wretch, putting in one too small,
 The oyster shuts and takes his head withal.
 Another bringing one too smooth and round, 195
 (Unhappy bird that thine own death hast found)
 Lays it so little way in his hard lips,
 That with their sudden close, the pebble slips
 So strongly forth (as when your little ones
 Do 'twixt their fingers slip their cherry-stones), 200
 That it in passage meets the breast or head
 Of the poor wretch, and lays him there for dead.
 A many striv'd, and gladly would have done
 As much or more than he which first begun,

But all in vain : scarce one of twenty could 205
 Perform the deed, which they full gladly would.
 For this not quick is to that act he go'th,
 That wanteth skill, this cunning, and some both :
 Yet none a will, for from the cave she sees
 Not in all-lovely May th' industrious bees 210
 More busy with the flowers could be, than these
 Among the shell-fish of the working seas.

Limos had all this while been wanting thence,
 And but just Heav'n preserv'd pure innocence
 By the two birds, her life to air had flit, 215
 Ere the curst caitiff should have forced it.

The first night that he left her in his den,
 He got to shore, and near th' abodes of men
 That live as we by tending of their flocks,
 To interchange for Ceres' golden locks, 220
 Or with the neatherd for his milk and cream,
 Things we respect more than the diadem
 His choice made-dishes. O ! the golden age
 Met all contentment in no surplusage
 Of dainty viands, but, as we do still, 225
 Drank the pure water of the crystal rill,
 Fed on no other meats than those they fed,
 Labour the salad that their stomachs bred.
 Nor sought they for the down of silver swans,
 Nor those sow-thistle locks each small gale fans, 230
 But hides of beasts, which when they liv'd they kept,

222.—Diadem, monarch.

224.—Surplusage, excess.

Serv'd them for bed and cov'ring when they slept.
 If any softer lay, 'twas (by the loss
 Of some rock's warmth) on thick and spongy moss,
 Or on the ground : some simple wall of clay 235
 Parting their beds from where their cattle lay.
 And on such pallets one man clipped then
 More golden slumbers than this age again.
 That time physicians thriv'd not : or, if any,
 I dare say all : yet then were thrice as many 240
 As now profess't, and more ; for every man
 Was his own patient and physician.
 None had a body then so weak and thin,
 Bankrupt of nature's store, to feed the sin
 Of an insatiate female, in whose womb 245
 Could nature all hers past, and all to come
 Infuse, with virtue of all drugs beside,
 She might be tir'd, but never satisfied.
 To please which ork her husband's weaken'd piece
 Must have his cullis mix'd with ambergris : 250
 Pheasant and partridge into jelly turn'd,
 Grated with gold, seven times refin'd and burn'd
 With dust of Orient pearl, richer the East
 Yet ne'er beheld : (O Epicurean feast !)
 This is his breakfast ; and his meal at night 255
 Possets no less provoking appetite,

237.—Clipped, embraced.

247.—Ork, a sea-monster : here employed to signify a prodigy of lust.

250.—Cullis, broth.

Whose dear ingredients valu'd are at more
 Than all his ancestors were worth before.
 When such as we by poor and simple fare
 More able liv'd, and died not without heir, 260
 Sprung from our own loins, and a spotless bed
 Of any other power unseconded :
 When th' other's issue, like a man fall'n sick,
 Or through the fever, gout, or lunatic,
 Changing his doctors oft, each as his notion 265
 Prescribes a sev'ral diet, sev'ral potion,
 Meeting his friend (who meet we nowadays
 That hath not some receipt for each disease ?)
 He tells him of a plaister, which he takes ;
 And finding after that, his torment slakes, 270
 (Whether because the humour is out-wrought,
 Or by the skill which his physician brought,
 It makes no matter :) for he surely thinks
 None of their purges nor their diet drinks
 Have made him sound ; but his belief is fast 275
 That med'cine was his health which he took last :
 So by a mother being taught to call
 One for his father, though a son to all,
 His mother's often 'scapes, though truly known,
 Cannot divert him ; but will ever own 280
 For his begetter him, whose name and rents
 He must inherit. Such are the descents
 Of these men ; to make up whcse limber heir

As many as in him must have a share ;
 When he that keeps the last yet least ado, 285
 Father the people's child, and gladly too.

Happier those times were when the flaxen clew
 By fair Arachne's hand the Lydians knew,
 And-sought not to the worm for silken threads,
 To roll their bodies in, or dress their heads. 290
 When wise Minerva did th' Athenians learn
 To draw their milk-white fleeces into yarn ;
 And knowing not the mixtures which began
 (Of colours) from the Babylonian,
 Nor wool in Sardis dyed, more various known 295
 By hues, than Iris to the world hath shown :
 The bowels of our mother were not ripp'd
 For madder-pits, nor the sweet meadows stripp'd
 Of their choice beauties, nor for Ceres' load
 The fertile lands burden'd with needless woad. 300
 Through the wide seas no winged pine did go
 To lands unknown for staining indico ;
 Nor men in scorching climates moor'd their keel
 To traffic for the costly cochineal.
 Unknown was then the Phrygian broidery, 305
 The Tyrian purple, and the scarlet dye,
 Such as their sheep clad, such they wove and wore,
 Russet or white, or those mix'd, and no more :
 Except sometimes (to bravery inclin'd)
 They dyed them yellow caps with alder rind. 310

287.—Clew, thread.302.—Indico, indigo.

The Grecian mantle, Tuscan robes of state,
 Tissue, nor cloth of gold of highest rate,
 They never saw ; only in pleasant woods,
 Or by th'embroidered margin of the floods,
 The dainty nymphs they often did behold 315
 Clad in their light silk robes, stitch'd oft with gold.

The arras hangings round their comely halls
 Wanted the cerite's web and minerals :
 Green boughs of trees which fatt'ning acorns lade,
 Hung full with flowers and garlands quaintly made, 320

Their homely cotes deck'd trim in low degree,
 As now the court with richest tapestry.
 Instead of cushions wrought in windows lain,
 They pick'd the cockle from their fields of grain,
 Sleep-bringing poppy, by the ploughmen late 325
 Not without cause to Ceres consecrate,

For being round and full at his half birth
 It signified the perfect orb of earth ;
 And by his inequalities when blown, [330
 The earth's low vales and higher hills were shown.

By multitude of grains it held within,
 Of men and beasts the number noted been ;
 And she since taking care all earth to please,
 Had in her Thesmophoria* offer'd these.
 Or cause that seed our elders us'd to eat, 335

With honey mix'd, and was their after meat,
 Or since her daughter that she lov'd so well
 By him that in th' infernal shades doth dwell,
 And on the Stygian banks for ever reigns,
 Troubled with horrid cries and noise of chains, 340
 Fairest Proserpina, was rapt away ;
 And she in plaints the night, in tears the day
 Had long time spent, when no high Power could give her

Any redress ; the poppy* did relieve her :
 For eating of the seeds they sleep procur'd, 345
 And so beguil'd those griefs she long endur'd.
 Or rather since her love, then happy man,
 Micon ycleep'd, the brave Athenian,
 Had been transform'd into this gentle flower,
 And his protection kept from Flora's power. 350
 The daisy scatter'd on each mead and down,
 A golden tuft within a silver crown ;
 (Fair fall that dainty flower ! and may there be No shepherd grac'd that doth not honour thee !)
 The primrose, when with six leaves gotten grace 355
 Maids as a true-love in their bosoms place ;
 The spotless lily, by whose pure leaves be Noted the chaste thoughts of virginity ;
 Carnations sweet with colour like the fire,
 The fit impresas for inflam'd desire ; 360
 The harebell for her stainless azur'd hue

348. — Ycleep'd, called.

360. — Impresas, devices.

Claims to be worn of none but those are true ;
 The rose, like ready youth, enticing stands,
 And would be cropp'd if it might choose the hands.
 The yellow kingcup Flora them assign'd 365
 To be the badges of a jealous mind ;
 The orange-tawny marigold : the night
 Hides not her colour from a searching sight.
 To thee then, dearest friend (my song's chief mate),
 This colour chiefly I appropriate, 370
 That spite of all the mists oblivion can
 Or envious frettings of a guilty man,
 Retain'st thy worth ; nay, mak'st it more in price,
 Like tennis-balls, thrown down hard, highest rise.
 The columbine in tawny often taken, 375
 Is then ascrib'd to such as are forsaken ;
 Flora's choice buttons of a russet dye
 Is hope even in the depth of misery.
 The pansy, thistle, all with prickles set,
 The cowslip, honeysuckle, violet, 380
 And many hundreds more that grac'd the meads,
 Gardens and groves, where beauteous Flora treads,
 Were by the shepherds' daughters (as yet are Us'd in our cotes) brought home with special care :
 For bruising them they not alone would quell 385
 But rot the rest, and spoil their pleasing smell.
 Much like a lad, who, in his tender prime,
 Sent from his friends to learn the use of time,
 As are his mates or good or bad, so he
 Thrives to the world, and such his actions be. 390

As in the rainbow's many-colour'd hue,
 Here see we watchet deepen'd with a blue :
 There a dark tawny with a purple mix'd,
 Yellow and flame, with streaks of green betwixt,
 A bloody stream into a blushing run, 395
 And ends still with the colour which begun ;
 Drawing the deeper to a lighter stain,
 Bringing the lightest to the deep'st again,
 With such rare art each mingleth with his fellow,
 The blue with watchet, green and red with yellow ;
 Like to the changes which we daily see [400
 About the dove's neck with variety,
 Where none can say (though he it strict attends)
 Here one begins, and there the other ends :
 So did the maidens with their various flowers 405
 Deck up their windows, and make neat their bowers :
 Using such cunning as they did dispose
 The ruddy piny with the lighter rose,
 The monkshood with the bugloss, and entwine
 The white, the blue, the flesh-like columbine 410
 With pinks, sweet-williams : that far off the eye
 Could not the manner of their mixtures spy.

Then with those flowers they most of all did prize,
 With all their skill, and in most curious wise
 On tufts of herbs and rushes, would they frame 415
 A dainty border round their shepherd's name.

392.—Watchet, pale blue.407.—Piny, peony.

Or posies make, so quaint, so apt, so rare,
As if the Muses only lived there :
And that the after world should strive in vain
What they then did, to counterfeit again. 420
Nor will the needle nor the loom e'er be
So perfect in their best embroidery,
Nor such composures make of silk and gold,
As theirs, when Nature all her cunning told.

The word of mine did no man then bewitch, 425
They thought none could be fortunate if rich.
And to the covetous did wish no wrong
But what himself desir'd : to live here long.

As of their songs, so of their lives they deem'd :
Not of the long'st, but best perform'd, esteem'd. 430
They thought that Heaven to him no life did give,

Who only thought upon the means to live.
Nor wish'd they 'twere ordain'd to live here ever,
But as life was ordain'd they might persever.

O happy men ! you ever did possess 435
No wisdom but was mix'd with simpleness ;
So wanting malice and from folly free,
Since reason went with your simplicity,
You search'd yourselves if all within were fair,
And did not learn of others what you were. 440
Your lives the patterns of those virtues gave,
Which adulation tells men now they have.

With poverty in love we only close,
Because our lovers it most truly shows :

When they who in that blessed age did move, 445
Knew neither poverty nor want of love.

The hatred which they bore was only this,
That every one did hate to do amiss.
Their fortune still was subject to their will :
Their want (O happy !) was the want of ill. 450

- Ye truest, fairest, loveliest nymphs that can
Out of your eyes lend fire Promethean,
All-beauteous ladies, love-alluring dames,
That on the banks of Isca, Humber, Thames,
By your encouragement can make a swain 455

Climb by his song where none but souls attain :
And by the graceful reading of our lines
Renew our heat to further brave designs :
You, by whose means my Muse thus boldly says :
Though she do sing of shepherds' loves and lays,
And flagging weakly low gets not on wing [460
To second that of Helen's ravishing :

Nor hath the love nor beauty of a queen
My subject grac'd, as other works have been ;
Yet not to do their age nor ours a wrong, 465
Though queens, nay, goddesses, fam'd Homer's song :

Mine hath been tun'd and heard by beauties more
Than all the poets that have liv'd before.
Not 'cause it is more worth, but it doth fall
That Nature now is turn'd a prodigal, 470

454.—Isca, the river Exe. 466.—Fam'd, made famous.

And on this age so much perfection spends,
 That to her last of treasure it extends ;
 For all the ages that are slid away
 Had not so many beauties as this day.

O what a rapture have I gotten now ! 475
 That age of gold, this of the lovely brow
 Have drawn me from my song ! I onward run
 Clean from the end to which I first begun.
 But ye, the heavenly creatures of the West,
 In whom the virtues and the graces rest, 480
 Pardon ! that I have run astray so long,
 And grow so tedious in so rude a song,
 If you yourselves should come to add one grace
 Unto a pleasant grove or such like place,
 Where here the curious cutting of a hedge : 485
 There, by a pond, the trimming of the sedge :
 Here the fine setting of well-shading trees :
 The walks there mounting up by small degrees,
 The gravel and the green so equal lie,
 It, with the rest, draws on your ling'ring eye : 490
 Here the sweet smells that do perfume the air,
 Arising from the infinite repair
 Of odoriferous buds and herbs of price,
 (As if it were another Paradise)
 So please the smelling sense, that you are fain 495
 Where last you walk'd to turn and walk again.
 There the small birds with their harmonious notes

Sing to a spring that smileth as she floats :
For in her face a many dimples show,
And often skips as it did dancing go : 500
Here further down an over-arched alley,
That from a hill goes winding in a valley,
You spy at end thereof a standing lake,
Where some ingenious artist strives to make
The water (brought in turning pipes of lead 505
Through birds of earth most lively fashioned)
To counterfeit and mock the sylvans all,
In singing well their own set madrigal.
This with no small delight retains your ear,
And makes you think none blest but who live
there. 510

Then in another place the fruits that be
In gallant clusters decking each good tree,
Invite your hand to crop some from the stem,
And liking one, taste every sort of them :
Then to the arbours walk, then to the bowers, 515
Thence to the walks again, thence to the flowers,
Then to the birds, and to the clear spring thence,
Now pleasing one, and then another sense.
Here one walks oft, and yet anew begin'th,
As if it were some hidden labyrinth ; 520
So loath to part, and so content to stay,
That when the gard'ner knocks for you away,
It grieves you so to leave the pleasures in it,
That you could wish that you had never seen it :
Blame me not then, if while to you I told 525

The happiness our fathers clipt of old,
 The mere imagination of their bliss
 So rapt my thoughts, and made me sing amiss.
 And still the more they ran on those days' worth,
 The more unwilling was I to come forth. 530
 Oh ! if the apprehension joy us so,
 What would the action in a human show ?
 Such were the shepherds (to all goodness bent)
 About whose thorps* that night curs'd Limos went ; * Villages.
 Where he had learn'd that next day all the swains,
 That any sheep fed on the fertile plains, [535
 The feast of Pales, goddess of their grounds,
 Did mean to celebrate. Fitly this sounds,
 He thought, to what he formerly intended,
 His stealth should by their absence be befriended: 540
 For whilst they in their off'rings busied were,
 He 'mongst the flocks might range with lesser fear.
 How to contrive his stealth he spent the night.
 The morning now in colours richly dight
 Stepp'd o'er the Eastern thresholds, and no lad 545
 That joy'd to see his pastures freshly clad,
 But for the holy rites himself address'd
 With necessaries proper to that feast.
 The altars everywhere now smoking be
 With bean-stalks, savin, laurel, rosemary, 550
 Their cakes of grummell-seed they did prefer,

537.—Pales, the goddess of sheepfolds.

550.—Savin, a species of juniper.

551.—Grummell, more usually groomwell.

And pails of milk in sacrifice to her.
 Then hymns of praise they all devoutly sung
 In those Palilia for increase of young.
 But ere the ceremonies were half past 555
 One of their boys came down the hill in haste,
 And told them Limos was among their sheep ;
 That he, his fellows, nor their dogs could keep
 The rav'ner from their flocks ; great store were kill'd,
 Whose blood he suck'd, and yet his paunch not fill'd. 560

O hasten then away ! for in an hour
 He will the chiefest of your fold devour.
 With this most ran (leaving behind some few
 To finish what was to fair Pales due),
 And as they had ascended up the hill, 565
 Limos they met, with no mean pace and skill
 Following a well-fed lamb ; with many a shout
 They then pursu'd him all the plain about.
 And either with fore-laying of his way,
 Or he full gorg'd ran not so swift as they, 570
 Before he could recover down the strand,
 No swain but on him had a fasten'd hand.

Rejoicing then (the worst wolf to their flock
 Lay in their powers), they bound him to a rock
 With chains ta'en from the plough, and leaving him 575
 Return'd back to their feast. His eyes late dim

Now sparkle forth in flames, he grinds his teeth,
 And strives to catch at everything he seeth ;
 But to no purpose : all the hope of food
 Was ta'en away ; his little flesh, less blood, 580
 He suck'd and tore at last, and that denied,
 With fearful shrieks most miserably died.

Unfortunate Marina, thou art free
 From his jaws now, though not from misery.
 Within the cave thou likely art to pine, 585
 If (O may never) fail a help divine,
 And though such aid thy wants do still supply,
 Yet in a prison thou must ever lie.

But Heav'n, that fed thee, will not long defer
 To send thee thither some deliverer : 590

For than to spend thy sighs there to the main
 Thou fitter wert to honour Thetis' train :
 Who so far now with her harmonious crew
 Scour'd through the seas (O who yet ever knew
 So rare a concert ?) she had left behind 595

The Kentish, Sussex shores, the Isle* assigned
 To brave Vespasian's conquest, and was come
 Where the shrill trumpet and the rattling drum
 Made the waves tremble (ere befell this chance)
 And to no softer music us'd to dance. 600

Hail, thou my native soil ! thou blessed plot

Such sweet-cloth'd valleys or aspiring hills ; [605
 Such wood-ground, pastures, quarries, wealthy mines ;
 Such rocks in whom the diamond fairly shines ;
 And if the earth can show the like again,
 Yet will she fail in her sea-ruling men.
 Time never can produce men to o'ertake
 The fames of Grenville, Davies, Gilbert, Drake, 610
 Or worthy Hawkins, or of thousands more
 That by their power made the Devonian shore
 Mock the proud Tagus ; for whose richest spoil
 The boasting Spaniard left the Indian soil
 Bankrupt of store, knowing it would quit cost 615
 By winning this, though all the rest were lost.

As oft the sea-nymphs on her strand have set,
 Learning of fishermen to knit a net,
 Wherein to wind up their dishevell'd hairs,
 They have beheld the frolic mariners 620
 For exercise (got early from their beds)
 Pitch bars of silver, and cast golden sleds.

At Exe a lovely nymph with Thetis met :
 She singing came, and was all round beset
 With other wat'ry powers, which by her song 625
 She had allur'd to float with her along.
 The lay she chanted she had learn'd of yore,
 Taught by a skilful swain,* who on her shore
 Fed his fair flock : a work renown'd as far
 As his brave subject of the Trojan war. 630

622.—Sleds, sledge-hammers.

* Joseph of Exeter wrote a poem of the Trojan War according to Dares the Phrygian's story, but falsely attributed to Cornelius Nepos, as it is printed. He lived in the time of Hen. 2, and Rich. 1. See the illustrations of my most worthy friend, M. Selden, upon M. Drayton's Polyolbion, p. 98.

When she had done, a pretty shepherd's boy
That from the near Downs came (though he small joy
Took in his tuneful reed, since dire neglect
Crept to the breast of her he did affect,
And that an ever-busy-watchful eye 635
Stood as a bar to his felicity),
Being with great entreaties of the swains,
And by the fair queen of the liquid plains
Woo'd to his pipe, and bade to lay aside
All troubled thoughts, as others at that tide, 640
And that he now some merry note should raise,
To equal others which had sung their lays :
He shook his head, and knowing that his tongue
Could not belie his heart, thus sadly sung :

As new-born babes salute their ages' morn 645
With cries unto their woful mother hurl'd :
My infant Muse, that was but lately born,
Began with wat'ry eyes to woo the world.
She knows not how to speak, and therefore weeps
 Her woe's excess, 650
And strives to move the heart that senseless sleeps,
 To heaviness ;
Her eyes enveil'd with sorrow's clouds
 Scarce see the light,
Disdain hath wrapt her in the shrouds 655
 Of loathed night.

How should she move then her grief-laden wing,
Or leave my sad complaints, and pæans sing ?

Six Pleiads live in light, in darkness one.
Sing, mirthful swains, but let me sigh alone. 660

It is enough that I in silence sit,
And bend my skill to learn your lays aright ;
Nor strive with you in ready strains of wit,
Nor move my hearers with so true delight.
But if for heavy plaints and notes of woe 665
 Your ears are prest ;
No shepherd lives that can my pipe outgo
 In such unrest.

I have not known so many years
 As chances wrong, 670
Nor have they known more floods of tears
 From one so young.

Fain would I tune to please as others do,
Were't not for feigning song and numbers too.
Then (since not fitting now are songs of moan) 675
Sing, mirthful swains, but let me sigh alone.

The nymphs that float upon these wat'ry plains
Have oft been drawn to listen to my song,
And sirens left to tune dissembling strains
In true bewailing of my sorrows long. 680

659.—In darkness one, Electra.

666.—Prest, ready.

Upon the waves of late a silver swan
 By me did ride ;
 And thrilled with my woes forthwith began
 To sing, and died.
 Yet where they should, they cannot move. 685
 O hapless verse !
 That fitter than to win a love
 Art for a hearse.
 Henceforward silent be ; and ye my cares
 Be known but to myself, or who despairs ; 690
 Since pity now lies turned to a stone.
 Sing, mirthful swains, but let me sigh alone.

The fitting accent of his mournful lay
 So pleas'd the pow'rful Lady of the Sea,
 That she entreated him to sing again ; 695
 And he obeying tun'd this second strain :

Born to no other comfort than my tears,
 Yet robb'd of them by griefs too inly deep,
 I cannot rightly wail my hapless years,
 Nor move a passion that for me might weep. 700
 Nature, alas ! too short hath knit
 My tongue to reach my woe :
 Nor have I skill sad notes to fit
 That might my sorrow show.
 And to increase my torments' ceaseless sting, 705

There's no way left to show my pains,
 But by my pen in mournful strains,
 Which others may perhaps take joy to sing.

As (woo'd by May's delights) I have been borne
 To take the kind air of a wistful morn 710
 Near Tavy's voiceful stream (to whom I owe
 More strains than from my pipe can ever flow),
 Here have I heard a sweet bird never lin
 To chide the river for his clam'rous din ;
 There seem'd another in his song to tell, 715
 That what the fair stream did he liked well ;
 And going further heard another too,
 All varying still in what the others do ;
 A little thence, a fourth with little pain
 Conn'd all their lessons, and them sung again ; 720
 So numberless the songsters are that sing
 In the sweet groves of the too-careless spring,
 That I no sooner could the hearing lose
 Of one of them, but straight another rose,
 And perching deftly on a quaking spray, 725
 Nigh tir'd herself to make her hearer stay ;
 Whilst in a bush two nightingales together
 Show'd the best skill they had to draw me thither :
 So (as bright Thetis pass'd our cleeves along)
 This shepherd's lay pursu'd the others' song, 730
 And scarce one ended had his skilful stripe,
 But straight another took him to his pipe.

713.—Lin, cease. 729.—Cleaves, cliffs. 731.—Stripe, strain.

By that the younger swain had fully done,
 Thetis with her brave company had won
 The mouth of Dart, and whilst the Tritons charm 735

The dancing waves, passing the crystal Earme,
 Sweet Yealm and Plym, arriv'd where Tamar pays
 Her daily tribute to the western seas.
 Here sent she up her dolphins, and they plied
 So busily their fares on every side, 749

They made a quick return, and brought her down
 A many homagers to Tamar's crown,
 Who in themselves were of as great command
 As any meaner rivers of the land.

With every nymph the swain of most account 745
 That fed his white sheep by her clearer fount :
 And every one to Thetis sweetly sung.

Among the rest a shepherd (though but young,
 Yet hearten'd to his pipe) with all the skill
 His few years could, began to fit his quill. 750

By Tavy's speedy stream he fed his flock,
 Where when he sat to sport him on a rock,
 The water-nymphs would often come unto him,
 And for a dance with many gay gifts woo him.
 Now posies of this flower, and then of that ; 755

Now with fine shells, then with a rushy hat,
 With coral or red stones brought from the deep
 To make him bracelets, or to mark his sheep :

749.—Hearten'd, wedded or attached heartily.

Willy he hight. Who by the ocean's queen
 More cheer'd to sing than such young lads had been, 760
 Took his best framed pipe, and thus 'gan move
 His voice of Walla, Tavy's fairest love :

Fair was the day, but fairer was the maid
 Who that day's morn into the greenwoods stray'd.
 Sweet was the air, but sweeter was her breath-
 ing, 765
 Such rare perfumes the roses are bequeathing.
 Bright shone the sun, but brighter were her eyes,
 Such are the lamps that guide the deities ;
 Nay such the fire is, whence the Pythian knight
 Borrows his beams, and lends his sister light. 770
 Not Pelops' shoulder whiter than her hands,
 Nor snowy swans that jet on Isca's sands.
 Sweet Flora, as if ravish'd with their sight,
 In emulation made all lilies white :
 For as I oft have heard the wood-nymphs say, 775
 The dancing fairies, when they left to play,
 Then back did pull them, and in holes of trees
 Stole the sweet honey from the painful bees ;
 Which in the flower to put they oft were seen,
 And for a banquet brought it to their queen. 780

762.—Walla. See Note.772 —Jet, strut. Isca, the river Exe.776.—Left to play, ceased playing.

But she that is the goddess of the flowers
 (Invited to their groves and shady bowers)
 Mislik'd their choice. They said that all the field

No other flower did for that purpose yield ;
 But quoth a nimble fay that by did stand : 785

If you could give 't the colour of yond hand, (Walla by chance was in a meadow by Learning to sample earth's embroidery.)

It were a gift would Flora well besit,
 And our great queen the more would honour it. 790

She gave consent ; and by some other power
 Made Venus' doves be equall'd by the flower,
 But not her hand ; for Nature this prefers :
 All other whites but shadowings to hers.

Her hair was roll'd in many a curious fret, 795
 Much like a rich and artful coronet,

Upon whose arches twenty Cupids lay,
 And were or tied, or loath to fly away.
 Upon her bright eyes Phœbus his inclin'd,
 And by their radiance was the god struck blind, 800

That clean awry th' ecliptic then he stripp'd
 And from the milky way his horses whipp'd ;
 So that the Eastern world to fear begun

Some stranger drove the chariot of the sun.
 And never but that once did heaven's bright eye 805
 Bestow one look on the Cimmerii.

A green silk frock her comely shoulders clad,
 And took delight that such a seat it had,

Which at her middle gather'd up in pleats,
 A love-knot girdle willing bondage threats. 810
 Not Venus' ceston held a braver piece,
 Nor that which girt the fairest flower of Greece.
 Down from her waist her mantle loose did fall,
 Which Zephyr (as afraid) still play'd withal,
 And then tuck'd up somewhat below the knee 815
 Show'd searching eyes where Cupid's columns be.
 The inside lin'd with rich carnation silk,
 And in the midst of both, lawn white as milk,
 Which white beneath the red did seem to shroud,
 As Cynthia's beauty through a blushing cloud. 820
 About the edges curious to behold
 A deep fringe hung of rich and twisted gold,
 So on the green marge of a crystal brook
 A thousand yellow flowers at fishes look ;
 And such the beams are of the glorious sun, 825
 That through a tuft of grass dispersed run.
 Upon her leg a pair of buskins white,
 Studded with orient pearl and chrysolite,
 And like her mantle stitch'd with gold and green,
 (Fairer yet never wore the forest's queen) 830
 Knit close with ribbons of a party hue,
 A knot of crimson and a tuft of blue ;
 Nor can the peacock in his spotted train

811.—Ceston, cestus, a studded girdle.812.—Fairest flower of Greece, Helen.828.—Chrysolite, a stone of a green colour.

So many pleasing colours show again ;
Nor could there be a mixture with more grace, 835
Except the heav'nly roses in her face.

A silver quiver at her back she wore,
With darts and arrows for the stag and boar,
But in her eyes she had such darts again [840
Could conquer gods, and wound the hearts of men.

Her left hand held a knotty Brazil bow,
Whose strength with tears she made the red deer know.

So clad, so arm'd, so dress'd to win her will
Diana never trod on Latmus' hill.
Walla, the fairest nymph that haunts the woods, 845
Walla, belov'd of shepherds, fawns, and floods,
Walla, for whom the frolic satyrs pine,
Walla, with whose fine foot the flow'rets twine,
Walla, of whom sweet birds their ditties move,
Walla, the earth's delight, and Tavy's love. 850

This fairest nymph, when Tavy first prevail'd
And won affection where the sylvans fail'd,
Had promis'd (as a favour to his stream)
Each week to crown it with an anadem :
And now Hyperion from his glitt'ring throne 855
Sev'n times his quick'ning rays had bravely shown
Unto the other world, since Walla last
Had on her Tavy's head the garland plac'd ;

And this day (as of right) she wends abroad
To ease the meadows of their willing load. 860

Flora, as if to welcome her, those hours
Had been most lavish of her choicest flowers,
Spreading more beauties to entice that morn
Than she had done in many days befor.

Look as a maiden sitting in the shade 865

Of some close arbour by the woodbind made,
Withdrawn alone where undescri'd she may

By her most curious needle give assay

Unto some purse (if so her fancy move)

Or other token for her truest love ; 870

Variety of silk about her pap,

Or in a box she takes upon her lap,

Whose pleasing colours wooing her quick eye,

Now this she thinks the ground would beautify,

And that, to flourish with, she deemeth best ; 875

When spying others, she is straight possess'd

Those fittest are ; yet from that choice doth fall,

And she resolves at last to use them all :

So Walla, which to gather long time stood,

Whether those of the field, or of the wood, 880

Or those that 'mong the springs and marish lay ;

But then the blossoms which enrich'd each spray

Allur'd her look ; whose many-colour'd graces

Did in her garland challenge no mean places :

And therefore she (not to be poor in plenty) 885

From meadows, springs, woods, sprays, culls some one dainty,

Which in a scarf she put, and onwards set
 To find a place to dress her coronet.

A little grove is seated on the marge
 Of Tavy's stream, not over-thick nor large, 890

Where every morn a choir of sylvans sung,
 And leaves to chatt'ring winds serv'd as a tongue,

By whom the water turns in many a ring,
 As if it fain would stay to hear them sing;
 And on the top a thousand young birds fly, 895

To be instructed in their harmony.

Near to the end of this all-joysome grove

A dainty circled plot seem'd as it strove

To keep all briars and bushes from invading

Her pleasing compass by their needless shading, 900

Since it was not so large, but that the store

Of trees around could shade her breast and more.

In midst thereof a little swelling hill,

Gently disburden'd of a crystal rill

Which from the greenside of the flow'ry bank 905

Ate down a channel; here the wood-nymphs drank,

And great Diana having slain the deer,

Did often use to come and bathe her here.

Here talk'd they of their chase, and where next day

They meant to hunt; here did the shepherds play, 910

And many a gaudy nymph was often seen

Embracing shepherds' boys upon this green.
 From hence the spring hastes down to Tavy's brim,
 And pays a tribute of his drops to him.

Here Walla rests the rising mount upon, 915
 That seem'd to swell more since she sat thereon,
 And from her scarf upon the grass shook down
 The smelling flowers that should her river crown :
 The scarf (in shaking it) she brushed oft,
 Whereon were flowers so fresh and lively wrought, 920
 That her own cunning was her own deceit,
 Thinking those true which were but counterfeit.

Under an alder on his sandy marge
 Was Tavy set to view his nimble charge,
 And there his love he long time had expected : 925
 While many a rose-cheek'd nymph no wile neglected
 To woo him to embraces ; which he scorn'd,
 As valuing more the beauties which adorn'd
 His fairest Walla, than all Nature's pride
 Spent on the cheeks of all her sex beside. 930
 Now would they tempt him with their open breasts,
 And swear their lips were love's assured tests :
 That Walla sure would give him the denial
 Till she had known him true by such a trial.
 Then comes another, and her hand bereaves 935
 The soon slipp'd alder of two clammy leaves,
 And clapping them together, bids him see
 And learn of love the hidden mystery.
 Brave flood (quoth she) that hold'st us in suspense,
 And show'st a godlike power in abstinence, 940

At this thy coldness we do nothing wonder,
 These leaves did so, when once they grew asunder ;
 But since the one did taste the other's bliss,
 And felt his partner's kind partake with his,
 Behold how close they join ; and had they power 945
 To speak their now content, as we can our,
 They would on Nature lay a heinous crime
 For keeping close such sweets until this time.
 Is there to such men ought of merit due,
 That do abstain from what they never knew? 950
 No : then as well we may account him wise
 For speaking nought, who wants those faculties.
 Taste thou our sweets ; come here and freely sip
 Divinest nectar from my melting lip ;
 Gaze on mine eyes, whose life-infusing beams 955
 Have power to melt the icy northern streams,
 And so inflame the gods of those bound seas
 They should unchain their virgin passages,
 And teach our mariners from day to day
 To bring us jewels by a nearer way. 960
 Twine thy long fingers in my shining hair,
 And think it no disgrace to hide them there ;
 For I could tell thee how the Paphian queen
 Met me one day upon yond pleasant green,
 And did entreat a slip (though I was coy) 965
 Wherewith to fetter her lascivious boy.
 Play with my teats that swell to have impression ;
 And if thou please from thence to make digression,
 Pass thou that milky way where great Apollo

But that it moves from this shore to the other.
 There's no one season such delight can bring,
 As summer, autumn, winter, and the spring. 1000
 Nor the best flower that doth on earth appear
 Could by itself content us all the year.

The salmons, and some more as well as they,
 Now love the freshet, and then love the sea.
 The fitting fowls not in one coast do tarry, 1005
 But with the year their habitation vary.

What music is there in a shepherd's quill
 (Play'd on by him that hath the greatest skill)
 If but a stop or two thereon we spy?
 Music is best in her variety. 1010

So is discourse, so joys ; and why not then
 As well the lives and loves of gods as men?
 More she had spoke, but that the gallant flood
 Replied : ye wanton rangers of the wood,
 Leave your allurements ; hie ye to your chase ; 1015
 See where Diana with a nimble pace
 Follows a struck deer : if you longer stay
 Her frown will bend to me another day.
 Hark how she winds her horn ; she some doth
 call,

Perhaps for you, to make into the fall. 1020
 With this they left him. Now he wonders much

Why at this time his Walla's stay was such,
 And could have wish'd the nymphs back, but for fear

His love might come and chance to find them
there.

To pass the time at last he thus began 1025
(Unto a pipe join'd by the art of Pan)
To praise his love : his hasty waves among
The frothed rocks, bearing the under-song :

As careful merchants do expecting stand,
After long time and merry gales of wind, 1030
Upon the place where their brave ship must land :
So wait I for the vessel of my mind.

Upon a great adventure is it bound,
Whose safe return will valu'd be at more [1035
Than all the wealthy prizes which have crown'd
The golden wishes of an age before.

Out of the East jewels of worth she brings ;
Th' unvalu'd diamond of her sparkling eye
Wants in the treasures of all Europe's kings ;
And were it mine they nor their crowns should
buy. 1040

The sapphires ringed on her panting breast
Run as rich veins of ore about the mould,
And are in sickness with a pale possess'd,
So true ; for them I should disvalue gold.

1028.—Under-song, burden.

The melting rubies on her cherry lip 1045
Are of such power to hold, that as one day
Cupid flew thirsty by, he stoop'd to sip,
And fasten'd there could never get away.

The sweets of Candy are no sweets to me
When hers I taste ; nor the perfumes of price 1050
Robb'd from the happy shrubs of Araby,
As her sweet breath, so powerful to entice.

O hasten then ! and if thou be not gone
Unto that wished traffic through the main,
My powerful sighs shall quickly drive thee on, 1055
And then begin to draw thee back again.

If in the mean rude waves have it oppress'd,
It shall suffice I ventur'd at the best.

Scarce had he given a period to his lay
When from a wood (wherein the eye of day 1060
Had long a stranger been, and Phoebe's light
Vainly contended with the shades of night,)
One of those wanton nymphs that woo'd him late

Came crying tow'rds him ; O thou most ingrate,
Respectless flood ! canst thou here idly sit, 1065
And loose desires to looser numbers fit ?
Teaching the air to court thy careless brook,
Whilst thy poor Walla's cries the hills have shook

With an amazed terror : hear ! O hear !
 A hundred echoes shrieking everywhere ! 1070
 See how the frightful herds run from the wood !
 Walla, alas ! as she, to crown her flood,
 Attended the composure of sweet flowers,
 Was by a lust-fir'd satyr 'mong our bowers
 Well-near surpris'd, but that she him descri'd 1075
 Before his rude embracement could betide.
 Now but her feet no help, unless her cries
 A needful aid draw from the deities.

It needless was to bid the flood pursue :
 Anger gave wings ; ways that he never knew 1080
 Till now, he treads ; through dells and hidden brakes
 Flies through the meadows, each where overtakes
 Streams swiftly gliding, and them brings along
 To further just revenge for so great wrong.
 His current till that day was never known, 1085
 But as a mead in July, which unmown
 Bears in an equal height each bent and stem,
 Unless some gentle gale do play with them.
 Now runs it with such fury and such rage,
 That mighty rocks opposing vassalage 1090
 Are from the firm earth rent and overborne
 In fords where pebbles lay secure beforne.
 Lo'd cataracts, and fearful roarings now
 Affright the passenger ; upon his brow
 Continual bubbles like compelled drops, 1095

1071.—Frightful, frightened.

And where (as now and then) he makes short stops

In little pools drowning his voice too high,
'Tis where he thinks he hears his Walla cry.
Yet vain was all his haste, bending away,
Too much declining to the Southern Sea, 1100
Since she had turned thence, and now begun
To cross the brave path of the glorious sun.

There lies a vale extended to the north
Of Tavy's stream, which (prodigal) sends forth
In autumn more rare fruits than have been spent 1105
In any greater plot of fruitful Kent.

Two high-brow'd rocks on either side begin,
As with an arch to close the valley in :
Upon their rugged fronts short writhen oaks
Untouch'd of any feller's baneful strokes : 1110
The ivy twisting round their barks hath fed
Past time wild goats which no man followed.

Low in the valley some small herds of deer,
For head and footmanship withouten peer, [1115
Fed undisturb'd. The swains that thereby thriv'd
By the tradition from their sires deriv'd,

Call'd it sweet Ina's Coombe : but whether she
Were of the earth or greater progeny,
Judge by her deeds ; once this is truly known
She many a time hath on a bugle blown, 1120

1109.—Writhen, twisted.

1117.—Ina's Coombe, Inescombe, or Inscombe, about a mile and a half from Tavistock.

And through the dale pursu'd the jolly chase,
As she had bid the winged winds a base.

Pale and distracted hither Walla runs,
As closely follow'd as she hardly shuns ;
Her mantle off, her hair now too unkind 1125
Almost betray'd her with the wanton wind.

Breathless and faint she now some drops discloses,
As in a limbeck the kind sweat of roses,
Such hang upon her breast, and on her cheeks ;[1130
Or like the pearls which the tann'd Æthiop seeks.
The satyr (spurr'd with lust) still getteth ground,
And longs to see his damn'd intention crown'd.

As when a greyhound of the rightest strain
Let slip to some poor hare upon the plain,
He for his prey strives, th' other for her life, 1135
And one of these or none must end the strife ;
Now seems the dog by speed and good at bearing
To have her sure ; the other ever fearing
Maketh a sudden turn, and doth defer
The hound a while from so near reaching her : 1140
Yet being fetch'd again and almost ta'en,
Doubting (since touch'd of him) she 'scapes her bane :
So of these two the minded races were,
For hope the one made swift, the other fear.

O if there be a power (quoth Walla then, 1145
Keeping her earnest course) o'erswaying men

1122.—Base, the game of prisoner's bars.

1128.—Limbeck, still.

1142.—Bane, doom.

And their desires ! O let it now be shown
 Upon this satyr half part earthly known.
 What I have hitherto with so much care
 Kept undefiled, spotless, white and fair, 1150
 What in all speech of love I still reserv'd,
 And from its hazard ever gladly swerv'd ;
 O be it now untouch'd ! and may no force
 That happy jewel from myself divorce !
 I that have ever held all women be 1155
 Void of all worth if wanting chastity ;
 And whoso any lets that best flower pull,
 She might be fair, but never beautiful :
 O let me not forgo it ! strike me dead !
 Let on these rocks my limbs be scattered ! 1160
 Burn me to ashes with some powerful flame,
 And in mine own dust bury mine own name,
 Rather than let me live and be defil'd.
 Chastest Diana ! in the deserts wild,
 Have I so long thy truest handmaid been ? 1165
 Upon the rough rock-ground thine arrows keen,
 Have I (to make thee crowns) been gath'ring still Fair-cheek'd Etesia's yellow camomile ?
 And sitting by thee on our flow'ry beds [1170
 Knit thy torn buckstalls with well-twisted threads,
 To be forsaken ? O now present be,
 If not to save, yet help to ruin me !
 If pure virginity have heretofore

1170.—Buckstalls, nets for catching deer.

By the Olympic powers been honour'd more Than other states ; and gods have been dis-pos'd 1175

To make them known to us, and still disclos'd
 To the chaste hearing of such nymphs as we
 Many a secret and deep mystery ;
 If none can lead without celestial aid
 Th' immaculate and pure life of a maid, 1180
 O let not then the Powers all-good, divine,
 Permit vile lust to soil this breast of mine !

Thus cried she as she ran : and looking back
 Whether her hot pursuer did ought slack
 His former speed, she spies him not at all, 1185
 And somewhat thereby cheer'd 'gan to recall
 Her nigh-fled hopes : yet fearing he might lie
 Near some cross path to work his villainy,
 And being weary, knowing it was vain
 To hope for safety by her feet again, 1190
 She sought about where she herself might hide.

A hollow vaulted rock at last she spied,
 About whose sides so many bushes were,
 She thought securely she might rest her there.
 Far under it a cave, whose entrance straight 1195
 Clos'd with a stone-wrought door of no mean weight ;

Yet from itself the gemels beaten so
 That little strength could thrust it to and fro.

Thither she came, and being gotten in
 Barr'd fast the dark cave with an iron pin. 1200

The satyr follow'd, for his cause of stay
 Was not a mind to leave her, but the way
 Sharp-ston'd and thorny, where he pass'd of late,
 Had cut his cloven foot, and now his gait
 Was not so speedy, yet by chance he sees 1205
 Through some small glade that ran between the trees

Where Walla went, and with a slower pace,
 Fir'd with hot blood, at last attain'd the place.

When like a fearful hare within her form, [1210
 Hearing the hounds come like a threat'ning storm,
 In full cry on the walk where last she trod,
 Doubts to stay there, yet dreads to go abroad :
 So Walla far'd. But since he was come nigh,
 And by an able strength and industry
 Sought to break in, with tears anew she fell 1215
 To urge the Powers that on Olympus dwell.

And then to Ina call'd : O if the rooms,
 The walks and arbours in these fruitful coombes
 Have famous been through all the Western plains
 In being guiltless of the lasting stains 1220

Pour'd on by lust and murder : keep them free !

Turn me to stone, or to a barked tree,
 Unto a bird, or flower, or ought forlorn ;

So I may die as pure as I was born.

“ Swift are the prayers and of speedy haste, 1225

That take their wing from hearts so pure and chaste.

And what we ask of Heaven it still appears
 More plain to it in mirrors of our tears."
 Approv'd in Walla. When the satyr rude
 Had broke the door in two, and 'gan intrude 1230
 With steps profane into that sacred cell,
 Where oft (as I have heard our shepherds tell)
 Fair Ina us'd to rest from Phœbus' ray :
 She or some other having heard her pray,
 Into a fountain turn'd her ; and now rise 1235
 Such streams out of the cave, that they surprise
 The satyr with such force and so great din,
 That quenching his life's flame as well as sin,
 They roll'd him through the dale with mighty roar
 And made him fly that did pursue before. 1240

Not far beneath i' the valley as she trends
 Her silver stream, some wood-nymphs and her friends
 That follow'd to her aid, beholding how
 A brook came gliding, where they saw but now
 Some herds were feeding, wond'ring whence it came : 1245

Until a nymph that did attend the game
 In that sweet valley, all the process told,
 Which from a thick-leav'd tree she did behold :
 See, quoth the nymph, where the rude satyr lies
 Cast on the grass, as if she did despise 1250
 To have her pure waves soil'd with such as he :
 Retaining still the love of purity.

1241.—Trends, bends, an uncommon word even in Devonshire.

To Tavy's crystal stream her waters go,
 As if some secret power ordained so,
 And as a maid she lov'd him, so a brook 1255
 To his embracements only her betook.
 Where growing on with him, attain'd the state
 Which none but Hymen's bonds can imitate.

On Walla's brook her sisters now bewail,
 For whom the rocks spend tears when others fail, 1260
 And all the woods ring with their piteous moans :
 Which Tavy hearing as he chid the stones,
 That stopp'd his speedy course, raising his head
 Inquir'd the cause, and thus was answered :
 Walla is now no more. Nor from the hill 1265
 Will she more pluck for thee the daffodil,
 Nor make sweet anadems to gird thy brow,
 Yet in the groves she runs, a river now.

Look as the feeling plant* (which learned swains * Sentida.
 Relate to grow on the East Indian plains) 1270
 Shrinks up his dainty leaves, if any sand
 You throw thereon, or touch it with your hand :
 So with the chance the heavy wood-nymphs told,
 The river (inly touch'd) began to fold
 His arms across, and while the torrent raves, 1275
 Shrunk his grave head beneath his silver waves.

Since when he never on his banks appears
 But as one frantic : when the clouds spend tears

1269.—Feeling plant, sensitive plant.

1273.—Chance, mishap.

1274.—Inly, inwardly, to the very depths.

He thinks they of his woes compassion take,
 (And not a spring but weeps for Walla's sake) 1280
 And then he often, to bemoan her lack,
 Like to a mourner goes, his waters black,
 And every brook attending in his way,
 For that time meets him in the like array.

Here Willy that time ceas'd; and I a while: 1285
 For yonder's Roget coming o'er the stile;
 'Tis two days since I saw him (and you wonder,
 You'll say, that we have been so long asunder).
 I think the lovely herdess of the dell
 That to an oaten quill can sing so well, 1290
 Is she that's with him: I must needs go meet them,
 And if some other of you rise to greet them
 'Twere not amiss, the day is now so long
 That I ere night may end another song.

1290.—Quill, pipe.

THE FOURTH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Cornish swains and British bard
Thetis hath with attention heard.
And after meets an aged man
That tells the hapless love of Pan:
And why the flocks do live so free
From wolves within rich Britanny.

LOOK as a lover with a ling'ring kiss
About to part with the best half that's his,
Fain would he stay but that he fears to do it,
And curseth time for so fast hast'ning to it :
Now takes his leave, and yet begins anew 5
To make less vows than are esteemed true :
Then says he must be gone, and then doth find Something he should have spoke that's out of mind ;
And whilst he stands to look for't in her eyes,
Their sad-sweet glance so tie his faculties 10
To think from what he parts, that he is now
As far from leaving her, or knowing how,

As when he came ; begins his former strain,
 To kiss, to vow, and take his leave again :
 Then turns, comes back, sighs, parts, and yet doth go, 15

Apt to retire, and loath to leave her sc.
 Brave stream, so part I from thy flow'ry bank,
 Where first I breath'd, and, though unworthy, drank
 Those sacred waters which the Muses bring
 To woo Britannia to their ceaseless spring. 20

Now would I on, but that the crystal wells,
 The fertile meadows and their pleasing smells,
 The woods delightful and the scatter'd groves,
 Where many nymphs walk with their chaster loves,

* Ordulphus. Soon make me stay : and think that Ordgar's* son, 25
 Admonish'd by a heavenly vision,
 Not without cause did that apt fabric rear,
 Wherein we nothing now but echoes hear
 That wont with heavenly anthems daily ring
 And duest praises to the greatest King, 30
 In this choice plot, since he could light upon
 No place so fit for contemplation.
 Though I awhile must leave this happy soil,
 And follow Thetis in a pleasing toil,
 Yet when I shall return, I'll strive to draw 35
 The nymphs by Tamar, Tavy, Exe and Taw,
 By Turrige, Otter, Ock, by Dart and Plym,
 With all the naiades that fish and swim

27.—That apt fabric, Tavistock Abbey. See Note.

In their clear streams, to these our rising Downs,
Where while they make us chaplets, wreaths and crowns, 40

I'll tune my reed unto a higher key,
And have already conn'd some of the lay,
Wherein, as Mantua by her Virgil's birth,
And Thames by him that sung her nuptial mirth,
You may be known, though not in equal pride, 45
As far as Tiber throws his swelling tide.

And by a shepherd, feeding on your plains,
In humble, lowly, plain, and ruder strains,
I hear your worths challenge other floods among,
To have a period equal with their song. 50

Where Plym and Tamar with embraces meet,
Thetis weighs anchor now, and all her fleet :
Leaving that spacious sound,* within whose arms * Plym
I have those vessels seen, whose hot alarms mouth.
Have made Iberia tremble, and her towers 55
Prostrate themselves before our iron showers ;
While their proud builders' hearts have been inclin'd

To shake, as our brave ensigns, with the wind.
For as an eyerie from their siege's wood
Led o'er the plains and taught to get their food 60
By seeing how their breeder takes his prey ;

44.—Him that sung, Spenser, in the Faëry Queen, B. iv. c. 11.

55.—Iberia, Spain.

58.—Ensigns, flags.

59.—Eyerie, young brood. Siege, a company of herons.

Now from an orchard do they scare the jay,
 Then o'er the cornfields as they swiftly fly,
 Where many thousand hurtful sparrows lie
 Beating the ripe grain from the bearded ear, 65
 At their approach all (overgone with fear)
 Seek for their safety : some into the dike,
 Some in the hedges drop, and others like
 The thick-grown corn as for their hiding best,
 And under turfs or grass most of the rest ; 70
 That of a flight which cover'd all the grain,
 Not one appears, but all or hid, or slain :
 So by heröes were we led of yore,
 And by our drums that thunder'd on each shore,
 Struck with amazement countries far and near ; 75
 Whilst their inhabitants, like herds of deer
 By kingly lions chas'd, fled from our arms.
 If any did oppose instructed swarms
 Of men immail'd, Fate drew them on to be
 A greater fame to our got victory. 80

But now our leaders want ; those vessels lie
 Rotting, like houses through ill husbandry ;
 And on their masts, where oft the ship-boy stood,
 Or silver trumpets charm'd the brackish flood,
 Some wearied crew is set ; and daily seen 85
 Their sides instead of pitch caulk'd o'er with green :

Ill hap (alas) have you that once were known
 By reaping what was by Iberia sown,
 By bringing yellow sheaves from out their plain,

Making our barns the storehouse for their grain : 90
 When now as if we wanted land to till,
 Wherewith we might our useless soldiers fill :
 Upon their hatches where half-pikes were borne,
 In every chink rise stems of bearded corn :
 Mocking our idle times that so have wrought us, 95
 Or putting us in mind what once they brought us.

Bear with me, shepherds, if I do digress,
 And speak of what ourselves do not profess.
 Can I behold a man that in the field,
 Or at a breach hath taken on his shield 100
 More darts than ever Roman* ; that hath spent
 Many a cold December in no tent
 But such as earth and heaven make ; that hath been Except in iron plates not long time seen ;
 Upon whose body may be plainly told 105
 More wounds than his lank purse doth almsdeeds hold ;

* M. Scæva.

O ! can I see this man, advent'ring all,
 Be only grac'd with some poor hospital,
 Or may be worse, entreating at his door
 For some relief whom he secur'd before, 110
 And yet not show my grief? First may I learn
 To see, and yet forget how to discern ;
 My hands neglectful be at any need,
 Or to defend my body, or to feed,

106.—Almsdeeds, money bestowed in charity.

Ere I respect those times that rather give him 115
 Hundreds to punish than one to relieve him.

As in an evening when the gentle air
 Breathes to the sullen night a soft repair,
 I oft have sat on Thames' sweet bank to hear [120
 My friend with his sweet touch to charm mine ear,

When he hath play'd, as well he can, some strain
 That likes me, straight I ask the same again ;
 And he as gladly granting, strikes it o'er
 With some sweet relish was forgot before,
 I would have been content if he would play 125

In that one strain to pass the night away ;
 But fearing much to do his patience wrong,
 Unwillingly have ask'd some other song :
 So in this differing key, though I could well
 A many hours but as few minutes tell, 130
 Yet lest mine own delight might injure you,
 Though loath so soon, I take my song anew.

Yet as when I with other swains have been Invited by the maidens of our green
 To wend to yonder wood, in time of year 135
 When cherry-trees enticing burdens bear,
 He that with wreathed legs doth upwards go,
 Plucks not alone for those which stand below ;
 But now and then is seen to pick a few
 To please himself as well as all his crew : 140

Or if from where he is he do espy
 Some apricock upon a bough thereby,
 Which overhangs the tree on which he stands,
 Climbs up and strives to take it with his hands :
 So if to please myself I somewhat sing, 145
 Let it not be to you less pleasuring.
 No thirst of glory tempts me : for my strains
 Befit poor shepherds on the lowly plains ;
 The hope of riches cannot draw from me
 One line that tends to servile flattery, 150
 Nor shall the most in titles on the earth
 Blemish my Muse with an adulterate birth,
 Nor make me lay pure colours on a ground
 Where nought substantial can be ever found.
 No ; such as sooth a base and dunghill spirit, 155
 With attributes fit for the most of merit,
 Cloud their free Muse ; as when the sun doth shine
 On straw and dirt mix'd by the sweating hyne,
 It nothing gets from heaps so much impure
 But noisome steams that do his light obscure. 160
 My freeborn Muse will not like Danae be,
 Won with base dross to clip with slavery ;
 Nor lend her choicer balm to worthless men,
 Whose names would die but for some hired pen.
 No ; if I praise, virtue shall draw me to it, 165
 And not a base procurement make me do it.

What now I sing is but to pass away
 A tedious hour, as some musicians play ;
 Or make another my own griefs bemoan ;
 Or to be least alone when most alone. 170
 In this can I as oft as I will choose,
 Hug sweet content by my retired Muse,
 And in a study find as much to please
 As others in the greatest palaces.
 Each man that lives, according to his power, 175
 On what he loves bestows an idle hour.
 Instead of hounds that make the wooded hills
 Talk in a hundred voices to the rills,
 I like the pleasing cadence of a line
 Struck by the consort of the sacred Nine. 180
 In lieu of hawks, the raptures of my soul
 Transcend their pitch and baser earth's control.
 For running horses, Contemplation flies
 With quickest speed to win the greatest prize.
 For courtly dancing, I can take more pleasure 185
 To hear a verse keep time and equal measure.
 For winning riches, seek the best directions
 How I may well subdue mine own affections.
 For raising stately piles for heirs to come,
 Here in this poem I erect my tomb. 190
 And Time may be so kind in these weak lines
 To keep my name enroll'd past his that shines
 In gilded marble, or in brazen leaves :
 Since verse preserves, when stone and brass de-ceives.

Or if (as worthless) Time not lets it live 195
 To those full days which others' Muses give,
 Yet I am sure I shall be heard and sung
 Of most severest eld and kinder young
 Beyond my days ; and, maugre Envy's strife,
 Add to my name some hours beyond my life. 200

Such of the Muses are the able powers,
 And since with them I spent my vacant hours,
 I find nor hawk, nor hound, nor other thing,
 Tourneys nor revels, pleasures for a king,
 Yield more delight ; for I have oft possess'd 205
 As much in this as all in all the rest,
 And that without expense, when others oft
 With their undoings have their pleasures bought.

On now, my loved Muse, and let us bring
 Thetis to hear the Cornish Michael sing ; 210
 And after him to see a swain unfold
 The tragedy of Drake in leaves of gold.
 Then hear another Grenville's name relate,
 Which times succeeding shall perpetuate,
 And make those two the pillars great of fame, 215
 Beyond whose worths shall never sound a name,
 Nor Honour in her everlasting story
 More deeper grave for all ensuing glory.

Now Thetis stays to hear the shepherds tell
 Where Arthur met his death, and Mordred fell : 220
 Of holy Ursula, that fam'd her age,
 With other virgins in her pilgrimage :
 And as she forwards steers is shown the rock

Main-Amber, to be shook with weakest shock,
 So equal is it pois'd ; but to remove 225
 All strength would fail, and but an infant's prove.
 Thus while to please her some new songs devise,
 And others diamonds (shaped angle-wise,
 And smooth'd by Nature, as she did impart
 Some willing time to trim herself by art,) 230
 Sought to present her and her happy crew ;
 She of the Gulf and Scillies took a view,
 And doubling then the Point, made on away
 Tow'rd's goodly Severn and the Irish Sea ;
 There meets a shepherd that began sing o'er 235
 The lay which aged Robert* sung of yore,
 In praise of England and the deeds of swains
 That whilom fed and rul'd upon our plains.
 The British bards then were not long time mute,
 But to their sweet harps sung their famous Brute: 240
 Striving in spite of all the mists of eld,
 To have his story more authentic held.

* Robert of Gloucester.

Why should we envy them those wreaths of fame :
 Being as proper to the Trojan name,
 As are the dainty flowers which Flora spreads 245
 Unto the spring in the discolour'd meads?
 Rather afford them all the worth we may,

224.—The Rock Main-Amber, probably the Logan Rock near Land's End.

232.—The Gulf, Mount's Bay.

233.—The Point, Lizard Point.

246.—Discolour'd, variously coloured.

For what we give to them adds to our ray.
And, Britons, think not that your glories fall,
Derived from a mean original ; 250
Since lights that may have power to check the dark,

Can have their lustre from the smallest spark.
“Not from nobility doth virtue spring,
But virtue makes fit nobles for a king.
From highest nests are croaking ravens born, 255
When sweetest nightingales sit in the thorn.”
From what low fount soe'er your beings are,
In softer peace and mighty brunts of war,
Your own worths challenge as triumphant bays
As ever Trojan hand had power to raise. 260

And when I leave my music's plainer ground,
The world shall know it from Bellona's sound.
Nor shall I err from truth ; for what I write
She doth peruse, and helps me to indite.
The small converse which I have had with some, 265
Branches which from those gallant trees have come,
Doth what I sing in all their acts approve,
And with more days increase a further love.

As I have seen the Lady of the May
Set in an arbour, on a holiday, 270
Built by the May-pole, where the jocund swains
Dance with the maidens to the bagpipe's strains,
When envious night commands them to be gone,
Call for the merry youngsters one by one,
And for their well performance soon disposes : 275

To this a garland interwove with roses,
 To that a carved hook or well-wrought scrip,
 Gracing another with her cherry lip ;
 To one her garter, to another then
 A handkerchief cast o'er and o'er again ; 280
 And none returneth empty that hath spent
 His pains to fill their rural merriment :
 So Nereus' daughter, when the swains had done,
 With an unsparing, liberal hand begun
 To give to every one that sung before, 285
 Rich orient pearls brought from her hidden store,
 Red branching coral, and as precious gems
 As ever beautified the diadems :
 That they might live what chance their sheep betide,
 On her reward, yet leave their heirs beside. 290
 Since when I think the world doth nothing give them,
 As weening Thetis ever should relieve them ;
 And poets freely spend a golden shower,
 As they expected her again each hour.
 Then with her thanks and praises for their skill 295
 In tuning numbers of the sacred hill,
 She them dismiss'd to their contented cotes ;
 And every swain a several passage floats
 Upon his dolphin. Since whose safe repair,
 Those fishes like a well-composed air ; 300
 And (as in love to men) are ever seen

Before a tempest's rough regardless teen,
 To swim high on the waves, as none should dare,
 Excepting fishes, to adventure there.

When these had left her, she drave on in pride 305
 Her prouder coursers through the swelling tide,
 To view the Cambrian cliffs, and had not gone
 An hour's full speed, but near a rock (whereon
 Congealed frost and snow in summer lay,
 Seldom dissolved by Hyperion's ray,) 310
 She saw a troop of people take their seat,
 Whereof some wrung their hands, and some did beat

Their troubled breasts, in sign of mickle woe,
 For those are actions grief enforceth to.
 Willing to know the cause, somewhat near hand 315
 She spies an aged man sit by the strand,
 Upon a green hillside, not meanly crown'd
 With golden flowers, as chief of all the ground :
 By him a little lad, his cunning heir,
 Tracing green rushes for a winter chair. 320
 The old man while his son full neatly knits them
 Unto his work begun, as trimly fits them.
 Both so intending what they first propounded,
 As all their thoughts by what they wrought were bounded.

To them she came, and kindly thus bespake : 325

302.—Teen, violence.

319.—Cunning, skilful.

320.—Tracing, plaiting.

Ye happy creatures, that your pleasures take
 In what your needs enforce, and never aim
 A limitless desire to what may maim
 The settled quiet of a peaceful state,
 Patience attend your labours ! And when Fate 330
 Brings on the restful night to your long days,
 Wend to the fields of bliss ! Thus Thetis prays.

Fair queen, to whom all duteous praise we owe,
 Since from thy spacious cistern daily flow
 (Replied the swain) refreshing streams that fill 335
 Earth's dugs, the hillocks, so preserving still
 The infant grass, when else our lambs might bleat
 In vain for suck, whose dams have nought to eat :
 For these thy prayers we are doubly bound, [340
 And that these cleeves should know ; but, O, to sound

My often mended pipe presumption were,
 Since Pan would play if thou wouldst please to hear.
 The louder blasts which I was wont to blow
 Are now but faint, nor do my fingers know
 To touch half part those merry tunes I had. 345
 Yet if thou please to grace my little lad
 With thy attention, he may somewhat strike
 Which thou from one so young may'st chance to like.
 With that the little shepherd left his task,
 And with a blush, the roses' only mask, 350
 Denied to sing. Ah father, quoth the boy,

How can I tune a seeming note of joy?
 The work which you command me, I intend Scarce with a half-bent mind, and therefore spend
 In doing little, now, an hour or two, 355
 Which I in lesser time could neater do.
 As oft as I with my more nimble joints
 Trace the sharp rushes' ends, I mind the points
 Which Philocel did give; and when I brush
 The pretty tuft that grows beside the rush, 360
 I never can forget in yonder lair
 How Philocel was wont to stroke my hair.
 No more shall I be ta'en unto the wake,
 Nor wend a-fishing to the winding lake;
 No more shall I be taught on silver strings 365
 To learn the measures of our banquetings;
 The twisted collars and the ringing bells,
 The morris scarves and cleanest drinking shells
 Will never be renew'd by any one;
 Nor shall I care for more when he is gone. 370
 See! yonder hill where he was wont to sit,
 A cloud doth keep the golden sun from it,
 And for his seat, as teaching us, hath made
 A mourning covering with a scowling shade.
 The dew on every flower this morn hath lain 375
 Longer than it was wont this side the plain;
 Belike they mean, since my best friend must die,
 To shed their silver drops as he goes by.

Not all this day here, nor in coming hither, [380
 Heard I the sweet birds tune their songs together,
 Except one nightingale in yonder dell
 Sigh'd a sad elegy for Philocel ;

Near whom a wood-dove kept no small ado
 To bid me in her language " Do so too."
 The wether's bell that leads our flock around 385
 Yields, as methinks, this day a deader sound.
 The little sparrows which in hedges creep,
 Ere I was up did seem to bid me weep.

If these do so, can I have feeling less,
 That am more apt to take and to express? 390
 No ; let my own tunes be the mandrake's groan,
 If now they tend to mirth when all have none.

My pretty lad, quoth Thetis, thou dost well
 To fear the loss of thy dear Philocel.
 But tell me, sire, what may that shepherd be? 395
 Or if it lie in us to set him free,
 Or if with you yond people touch'd with woe
 Under the self-same load of sorrow go.

Fair queen, replied the swain, one is the cause
 That moves our grief, and those kind shepherds draws 400

To yonder rock. Thy more than mortal spirit
 May give a good beyond our power to merit ;
 And therefore please to hear while I shall tell
 The hapless fate of hopeless Philocel.

Whilom great Pan, the father of our flocks, 405
 Lov'd a fair lass so famous for her locks,

That in her time all women first begun
 To lay their looser tresses to the sun ;
 And theirs whose hue to hers was not agreeing,
 Were still roll'd up as hardly worth the seeing. 410
 Fondly have some been led to think that man
 Music's invention first of all began
 From the dull hammer's stroke ; since well we know
 From sure tradition that hath taught us so,
 Pan, sitting once to sport him with his fair, 415
 Mark'd the intention of the gentle air,
 In the sweet sound her chaste words brought along,
 Fram'd by the repercussion of her tongue :
 And from that harmony begun the art
 Which others (though unjustly) do impart 420
 To bright Apollo from a meaner ground :
 A sledge or parched nerves ; mean things to found
 So rare an art on ; when there might be given
 All earth for matter with the gyre of heaven.
 To keep her slender fingers from the sun, 425
 Pan through the pastures oftentimes hath run
 To pluck the speckled foxgloves from their stem,
 And on those fingers neatly placed them.
 The honeysuckles would he often strip,
 And lay their sweetness on her sweeter lip, 430
 And then, as in reward of such his pain,
 Sip from those cherries some of it again.

411.—Fondly, foolishly. 422.—Sledge, hammer.

424.—Gyre, circle.

Some say that Nature, while this lovely maid
 Liv'd on our plains, the teeming earth array'd
 With damask roses in each pleasant place, 435
 That men might liken somewhat to her face.

Others report : Venus, afraid her son
 Might love a mortal as he once had done,
 Preferr'd an earnest suit to highest Jove,
 That he which bore the winged shafts of love, 440
 Might be debarr'd his sight, which suit was sign'd,
 And ever since the god of love is blind.

Hence is't he shoots his shafts so clean awry,
 Men learn to love when they should learn to die ;
 And women, which before to love began 445
 Man without wealth, love wealth without a man.

Great Pan of his kind nymph had the embracing

Long, yet too short a time. For as in tracing
 These pithful rushes, such as are aloft
 By those that rais'd them presently are brought 450

Beneath unseen : so in the love of Pan
 (For gods in love do undergo as man),

She whose affection made him raise his song,
 And, for her sport, the satyrs rude among

Tread wilder measures than the frolic guests, 455
 That lift their light heels at Lyæus' feasts :

She by the light of whose quick-turning eye
 He never read but of felicity :

She whose assurance made him more than Pan,
 Now makes him far more wretched than a man. 460

For mortals in their loss have death a friend,
 When gods have losses, but their loss no end.

It chanc'd one morn, clad in a robe of grey,
 And blushing oft as rising to betray,
 Entic'd this lovely maiden from her bed 465

(So when the roses have discovered
 Their taintless beauties, flies the early bee
 About the winding alleys merrily)
 Into the wood, and 'twas her usual sport,
 Sitting where most harmonious birds resort, 470

To imitate their warbling in a quill
 Wrought by the hand of Pan, which she did fill
 Half full with water : and with it hath made
 The nightingale, beneath a sullen shade,
 To chant her utmost lay, nay, to invent 475
 New notes to pass the other's instrument,
 And, harmless soul, ere she would leave that strife,
 Sung her last song, and ended with her life ;
 So gladly choosing, as do other some,
 Rather to die than live and be o'ercome. 480

But as in autumn (when birds cease their notes,
 And stately forests don their yellow coats ;
 When Ceres' golden locks are nearly shorn,
 And mellow fruit from trees are roughly torn),
 A little lad set on a bank to shale 485
 The ripen'd nuts pluck'd in a woody vale,
 Is frighted thence, of his dear life afeard,

By some wild bull loud bellowing for the herd :
 So while the nymph did earnestly contest
 Whether the birds or she recorded best, 490
 A ravenous wolf, bent eager to his prey,
 Rush'd from a thievish brake ; and making way,
 The twined thorns did crackle one by one,
 As if they gave her warning to be gone.
 A rougher gale bent down the lashing boughs, 495
 To beat the beast from what his hunger vows.
 When she (amaz'd) rose from her hapless seat
 (Small is resistance where the fear is great),
 And striving to be gone, with gaping jaws
 The wolf pursues, and as his rending paws 500
 Were like to seize, a holly bent between ;
 For which good deed his leaves are ever green.

Saw you a lusty mastive at the stake,
 Thrown from a cunning bull, more fiercely make
 A quick return ? yet to prevent the gore 505
 Or deadly bruise which he escap'd before,
 Wind here and there, nay creep if rightly bred,
 And proffring otherwhere, fight still at head :
 So though the stubborn boughs did thrust him back,
 (For Nature, loath so rare a jewel's wrack, 510
 Seem'd as she here and there had splash'd a tree,
 If possible to hinder destiny,)
 The savage beast foaming with anger flies

492.—Thievish brake, a thicket that might harbour thieves.

511.—Plash'd, had bent down and interwoven the branches or twigs.

More fiercely than before, and now he tries
 By sleights to take the maid ; as I have seen 515
 A nimble tumbler on a burrow'd green,
 Bend clean awry his course, yet give a check
 And throw himself upon a rabbit's neck.
 For as he hotly chas'd the love of Pan,
 A herd of deer out of a thicket ran, 520
 To whom he quickly turn'd, as if he meant
 To leave the maid, but when she swiftly bent
 Her race down to the plain, the swifter deer
 He soon forsook ; and now was got so near
 That, all in vain, she turned to and fro 525
 As well she could, but not prevailing so,
 Breathless and weary calling on her love
 With fearful shrieks that all the echoes move
 To call him too, she fell down deadly wan,
 And ends her sweet life with the name of Pan. 530

A youthful shepherd of the neighbour wold,
 Missing that morn a sheep out of his fold,
 Carefully seeking round to find his stray,
 Came on the instant where this damsel lay.
 Anger and pity in his manly breast 535
 Urge yet restrain his tears. Sweet maid, possess'd
 (Quoth he) with lasting sleep, accept from me
 His end, who ended thy hard destiny !
 With that his strong dog, of no dastard kind,
 Swift as the foals conceived by the wind, 540

He sets upon the wolf, that now with speed
 Flies to the neighbour-wood ; and lest a deed
 So full of ruth should unrevenged be,
 The shepherd follows too, so earnestly
 Cheering his dog, that he ne'er turn'd again 545
 Till the curst wolf lay strangled on the plain.

The ruin'd temple of her purer soul
 The shepherd buries. All the nymphs condole
 So great a loss, while on a cypress' graff
 Near to her grave they hung this epitaph : 550

Lest loathed age might spoil the work in whom
 All earth delighted, Nature took it home ;
 Or angry all hers else were careless deem'd,
 Here did her best to have the rest esteem'd ;
 For fear men might not think the Fates so cross, 555
 But by their rigour in as great a loss.

If to the grave there ever was assign'd
 One like this nymph in body and in mind,
 We wish her here in balm not vainly spent,
 To fit this maiden with a monument. 560
 For brass and marble were they seated here
 Would fret or melt in tears to lie so near.

Now Pan may sit and tune his pipe alone
 Among the wished shades, since she is gone,
 Whose willing ear allur'd him more to play, 565
 Than if to hear him should Apollo stay.

Yet happy Pan ! and in thy love more blest,
 Whom none but only death hath disposess'd ;
 While others love as well, yet live to be Less wrong'd by Fate than by inconstancy. 570

The sable mantle of the silent night
 Shut from the world the ever-joyesome light ;
 Care fled away, and softest slumbers please
 To leave the court for lowly cottages ;
 Wild beasts forsook their dens on woody hills, 575
 And sleightful otters left the purling rills ;
 Rooks to their nests in high woods now were flung,
 And with their spread wings shield their naked young ;

When thieves from thickets to the cross-ways stir,
 And terror frights the lonely passenger ; 580
 When nought was heard but now and then the howl
 Of some vild cur, or whooping of the owl ;

Pan, that the day before was far away
 At shepherds' sports, return'd ; and as he lay
 Within the bower wherein he most delighted, 585
 Was by a ghastly vision thus affrighted :

Heart-thrilling groans first heard he round his bower,
 And then the screech-owl with her utmost power
 Labour'd her loathed note, the forests bending
 With winds, as Hecate had been ascending. 590
 Hereat his curled hairs on end do rise,
 And chilly drops trill o'er his staring eyes.

Fain would he call, but knew not who, nor why,
 Yet getting heart at last would up and try
 If any devilish hag were come abroad 595
 With some kind mother's late deliver'd load,
 A ruthless bloody sacrifice to make
 To those infernal powers that by the lake
 Of mighty Styx and black Cocytus dwell,
 Aiding each witch's charm and mystic spell. 600
 But as he rais'd himself within his bed,
 A sudden light about his lodging spread,
 And therewithal his love, all ashy pale
 As evening mist from up a wat'ry vale,
 Appear'd, and weakly near his bed she press'd. 605
 A ravell'd wound distain'd her purer breast,
 Breasts softer far than tufts of unwrought silk,
 Whence had she liv'd to give an infant milk,
 The virtue of that liquor, without odds,
 Had made her babe immortal as the gods. 610
 Pan would have spoke, but him she thus prevents :
 Wonder not that the troubled elements
 Speak my approach ; I draw no longer breath,
 But am enforced to the shades of death.
 My exequies are done, and yet before 615
 I take my turn to be transported o'er
 The nether floods among the shades of Dis,
 To end my journey in the fields of bliss,
 I come to tell thee that no human hand
 Made me seek waftage on the Stygian strand ; 620
 It was an hungry wolf that did imbrue

Himself in my last blood. And now I sue
 In hate to all that kind, and shepherds' good,
 To be revenged on that cursed brood. [625
 Pan vow'd, and would have clipp'd her, but she fled,
 And as she came, so quickly vanished.

Look as a well-grown, stately-headed buck,
 But lately by the woodman's arrow struck,
 Runs gadding o'er the lawns, or nimbly strays
 Among the cumbrous brakes a thousand ways, 630
 Now through the high-wood scours, then by the brooks,

On every hillside, and each vale he looks,
 If 'mongst their store of simples may be found
 An herb to draw and heal his smarting wound,
 But when he long hath sought, and all in vain, 635
 Steals to the covert closely back again,
 Where round engirt with fern more highly sprung,
 Strives to appease the raging with his tongue,
 And from the speckled herd absents him till
 He be recover'd somewhat of his ill : 640

So wounded Pan turns in his restless bed,
 But finding thence all ease abandoned,
 He rose, and through the wood distracted runs :
 Yet carries with him what in vain he shuns.
 Now he exclaim'd on Fate, and wish'd he ne'er 645
 Had mortal lov'd, or that he mortal were.
 And sitting lastly on an oak's bare trunk,
 Where rain in winter stood long time unsunk,
 His plaints he 'gan renew, but then the light

That through the boughs flew from the Queen of Night, 650

As giving him occasion to repine,
Bewray'd an elm embraced by a vine,
Clipping so strictly that they seem'd to be
One in their growth, one shade, one fruit, one tree,
Her boughs his arms, his leaves so mix'd with hers,
That with no wind he mov'd but straight she stirs, [655
As showing all should be, whom love combin'd :
In motion one, and only two in kind.

This more afflicts him while he thinketh most
Not on his loss, but on the substance lost. 660

O hapless Pan, had there but been one by
To tell thee, though as poor a swain as I,
Though, whether casual means or death do move,
"We part not without grief things held with love :
Yet in their loss some comfort may be got 665
If we do mind the time we had them not."

This might have lessen'd somewhat of thy pain,
Or made thee love as thou might'st lose again.
If thou the best of women didst forego, [670
Weigh if thou found'st her, or didst make her so ;
If she were found so, know there's more than one ;
If made, the workman lives, though she be gone.
Should from mine eyes the light be ta'en away,
Yet night her pleasures hath as well as day ;
And my desires to Heaven yield less offence, 675
Since blindness is a part of innocence.
So though thy love sleep in eternal night,

Yet there's in liveness somewhat may delight.
 Instead of dalliance, partnership in woes
 It wants, the care to keep, and fear to lose. 680
 For jealousies and fortune's baser pelf,
 He rest enjoys that well enjoys himself.

Had some one told thee thus, or thou bethought
 thee
 Of inward help, thy sorrow had not brought thee
 To weigh misfortune by another's good : 685
 Nor leave thy seat to range about the wood.
 Stay where thou art, turn where thou wert before,
 Light yields small comfort, nor hath darkness more.

A woody hill there stood, at whose low feet
 Two goodly streams in one broad channel meet, 690
 Whose fretful waves beating against the hill,
 Did all the bottom with soft mutt'rings fill.
 Here in a nook made by another mount,
 (Whose stately oaks are in no less account
 For height or spreading, than the proudest be 695
 That from Oöta look on Thessaly,)
 Rudely o'erhung there is a vaulted cave,
 That in the day as sullen shadows gave,
 As evening to the woods. An uncouth place,
 (Where hags and goblins might retire a space,) 700
 And hated now of shepherds, since there lies
 The corpse of one, less loving deities
 Than we affected him, that never lent
 His hand to ought but to our detriment.

A man that only liv'd to live no more, 705
 And died still to be dying ; whose chief store
 Of virtue was, his hate did not pursue her,
 Because he only heard of her, not knew her ;
 That knew no good, but only that his sight
 Saw everything had still his opposite ; 710
 And ever this his apprehension caught,
 That what he did was best, the other naught ;
 That always lov'd the man that never lov'd ;
 And hated him whose hate no death had mov'd ;
 That (politic) at fitting time and season 715
 Could hate the traitor, and yet love the treason ;
 That many a woful heart (ere his decease)
 In pieces tore to purchase his own peace ;
 Who never gave his alms but in this fashion,
 To salve his credit more than for salvation ; 720
 Who on the names of good men ever fed,
 And (most accursed) sold the poor for bread.
 Right like the pitch-tree, from whose any limb
 Comes never twig, shall be the seed of him.
 The Muses scorn'd by him, laugh at his fame, 725
 And never will vouchsafe to speak his name.
 Let no man for his loss one tear let fall,
 But perish with him his memorial !

Into this cave the god of shepherds went ;
 The trees in groans, the rocks in tears lament 730
 His fatal chance : the brooks that whilom leapt
 To hear him play while his fair mistress slept,
 Now left their eddies and such wanton moods,

And with loud clamours fill'd the neighb'ring
woods.

There spent he most of night ; but when the day
Drew from the earth her pitchy veil away, [735
When all the flow'ry plains with carols rung
That by the mounting lark were shrilly sung,
When dusky mists rose from the crystal floods,
And darkness nowhere reign'd but in the woods, 740
Pan left the cave, and now intends to find
The sacred place where lay his love enshrin'd :
A plot of earth, in whose chill arms was laid
As much perfection as had ever maid ;
If curious Nature had but taken care 745
To make more lasting what she made so fair.

Now wanders Pan the arched groves, and hills
Where fairies often danc'd, and shepherds' quills
In sweet contentions pass'd the tedious day :
Yet, being early, in his unknown way 750
Met not a shepherd, nor on all the plain
A flock then feeding saw, nor of his train
One jolly satyr stirring yet abroad,
Of whom he might inquire ; this to the load
Of his affliction adds. Now he invokes 755
Those nymphs* in mighty forests that with oaks
Have equal fates, each with her several tree
Receiving birth and ending destiny :
Calls on all powers, entreats that he might have
But for his love the knowledge of her grave ; 760
That since the fates had ta'en the gem away,

He might but see the cark'net where it lay,
 To do fit right to such a part of mould,
 Covering so rare a piece that all the gold
 Or diamond earth can yield, for value ne'er 765
 Shall match the treasure which was hidden there !

A hunting nymph awaken'd with his moan,
 (That in a bower near hand lay all alone,
 Twining her small arms round her slender waist,
 That by no others us'd to be embrac'd,) 770
 Got up, and knowing what the day before
 Was guilty of, she adds not to his store
 As many simply do, whose friends so cross'd
 They more afflict by showing what is lost,
 But bade him follow her. He, as she leads, 775
 Urgeth her haste. So a kind mother treads
 Earnest, distracted, where with blood defil'd
 She hears lies dead her dear and only child.
 Mistrust now wing'd his feet, then raging ire,
 "For speed comes ever lamely to desire." 780

Delays, the stones that waiting suitors grind,
 By whom at court the poor man's cause is sign'd,
 Who to dispatch a suit will not defer
 To take death for a joint commissioner ;
 Delay, the wooer's bane, revenge's hate, 785
 The plague to creditors' decay'd estate,
 The test of patience, of our hopes the rack,

762.—Cark'net, carkanet, a necklace, but possibly 'casknet,' a casket, should be read.

That draws them forth so long until they crack ;
 Virtue's best benefactor in our times,
 One that is set to punish great men's crimes, 790
 She that had hinder'd mighty Pan a while,
 Now steps aside : and as o'erflowing Nile
 Hid from Clymene's son his reeking head,
 So from his rage all opposition fled,
 Giving him way to reach the timeless tomb 795
 Of Nature's glory, for whose ruthless doom
 (When all the Graces did for mercy plead,
 And youth and goodness both did intercede.)
 The sons of earth, if living, had been driven
 To heap on hills, and war anew with Heaven. 800
 The shepherds which he miss'd upon the downs
 Here meets he with : for from the neighb'ring towns
 Maidens and men resorted to the grave
 To see a wonder more than time e'er gave.
 The holy priests had told them long ago 805
 Amongst the learned shepherds there was one
 So given to piety, and did adore
 So much the name of Pan, that when no more
 He breath'd, those that to ope his heart began,
 Found written there with gold the name of Pan. 810
 Which unbelieving man that is not mov'd
 To credit ought, if not by reason prov'd,
 And ties the overworking power to do
 Nought otherwise than Nature reacheth to,

Held as most fabulous : not inly seeing, 815
 The hand by whom we live, and all have being,
 No work for admirable doth intend,
 Which reason hath the power to comprehend,
 And faith no merit hath from heaven lent
 Where human reason yields experiment. 820
 Till now they durst not trust the legend old,
 Esteeming all not true their elders told,
 And had not this last accident made good
 The former, most in unbelief had stood. [825
 But Fame, that spread the bruit of such a wonder,
 Bringing the swain[s] of places far asunder
 To this selected plot (now famous more
 Than any grove, mount, plain, had been before
 By relic, vision, burial, or birth
 Of anchoress, or hermit yet on earth), 830
 Out of the maiden's bed of endless rest
 Shows them a tree new grown, so fairly dress'd
 With spreading arms and curled top that Jove
 Ne'er braver saw in his Dodonian grove ;
 The heart-like leaves oft each with other pile, 835
 As do the hard scales of the crocodile ;
 And none on all the tree was seen but bore
 Written thereon in rich and purest ore
 The name of Pan ; whose lustre far beyond
 Sparkled, as by a torch the diamond ; 840
 Or those bright spangles which, fair goddess, do

Shine in the hair of these which follow you.
 The shepherds by direction of great Pan
 Search'd for the root, and finding it began
 In her true heart, bids them again enclose 845
 What now his eyes for ever, ever lose.
 Now in the self-same sphere his thoughts must move
 With him* that did the shady plane-tree love. * Xerxes
 Yet though no issue from her loins shall be
 To draw from Pan a noble pedigree, 850
 And Pan shall not, as other gods have done,
 Glory in deeds of an heroic son,
 Nor have his name in countries near and far
 Proclaim'd, as by his child the Thunderer ;
 If Phœbus on this tree spread warming rays, 855
 And northern blasts kill not her tender sprays,
 His love shall make him famous in repute,
 And still increase his name, yet bear no fruit.
 To make this sure, the god of shepherds last,
 When other ceremonies were o'erpast, 860
 And to perform what he before had vow'd
 To dire revenge, thus spake unto the crowd :
 What I have lost, kind shepherds, all you know,
 And to recount it were to dwell in woe :
 To show my passion in a funeral song, 865
 And with my sorrow draw your sighs along,
 Words, then, well plac'd might challenge somewhat due,
 And not the cause alone, win tears from you.
 This to prevent, I set orations by,

“ For passion seldom loves formality.” 870
 What profits it a prisoner at the bar,
 To have his judgment spoken regular?
 Or in the prison hear it often read,
 When he at first knew what was forfeited?
 Our griefs in others' tears, like plates in water, 875
 Seem more in quantity. To be relator
 Of my mishaps, speaks weakness, and that I
 Have in myself no power of remedy.

Once (yet that once too often) heretofore
 The silver Ladon on his sandy shore 880
 Heard my complaints, and those cool groves that be Shading the breast of lovely Arcady
 Witnesse[d] the tears which I for Syrinx spent :
 Syrinx the fair, from whom the instrument [885
 That fills your feasts with joy (which when I blow Draws to the sagging dug milk white as snow),
 Had his beginning. This enough had been
 To show the Fates, my deemed sisters,* teen.
 Here had they stay'd, this adage had been none :
 “ That our disasters never come alone.” 890
 What boot is it though I am said to be
 The worthy son of winged Mercury?
 That I with gentle nymphs in forests high
 Kiss'd out the sweet time of my infancy?
 And when more years had made me able grown, 895

Was through the mountains for their leader known?
 That high-brow'd Mænalus where I was bred,
 And stony hills not few have honoured
 Me as protector by the hands of swains,
 Whose sheep retire there from the open plains? 900
 That I in shepherds' cups (rejecting gold*)
 Of milk and honey measures eight times told
 Have offer'd to me, and the ruddy wine
 Fresh and new pressed from the bleeding vine?
 That gleesome hunters, pleased with their sport, 905
 With sacrifices due have thank'd me for't?
 That patient anglers standing all the day
 Near to some shallow stickle or deep bay,
 And fishermen whose nets have drawn to land
 A shoal so great it well-nigh hides the sand, 910
 For such success some promontory's head
 Thrust at by waves, hath known me worshipp'd?
 But to increase my grief, what profits this,
 "Since still the loss is as the loser is?"

Smyrnæus.

The many-kernel-bearing pine of late 915
 From all trees else to me was consecrate,
 But now behold a root more worth my love,
 Equal to that which in an obscure grove
 Infernal Juno proper takes to her:
 Whose golden slip the Trojan wanderer, 920

908.—Stickle, a run or swift part of a river; a word still used in Devonshire.

920.—The Trojan wanderer, Æneas (Virgil, Æn. vi. 136 et seq.)

By sage Cumæan Sybil taught, did bring,
 By Fates decreed, to be the warranting
 Of his free passage, and a safe repair
 Through dark Avernus to the upper air.
 This must I succour, this must I defend, 925
 And from the wild boars' rooting ever shend.
 Here shall the woodpecker no entrance find,
 Nor Tavy's beavers gnaw the clothing rind,
 Lambeder's herds, nor Radnor's goodly deer
 Shall never once be seen a-browsing here. 930
 And now, ye British swains, whose harmless sheep
 Than all the world's besides I joy to keep,
 Which spread on every plain and hilly wold
 Fleeces no less esteem'd than that of gold,
 For whose exchange one Indy gems of price, 935
 The other gives you of her choicest spice,
 And well she may ; but we unwise the while
 Lessen the glory of our fruitful Isle,
 Making those nations think we foolish are
 For baser drugs to vent our richer ware, 940
 Which, save the bringer, never profit man
 Except the sexton and physician ;
 And whether change of climes or what it be
 That proves our mariners' mortality,
 Such expert men are spent for such bad fares 945
 As might have made us lords of what is theirs—

Stay, stay at home, ye nobler spirits, and prize
 Your lives more high than such base trumperies :
 Forbear to fetch, and they'll go near to sue,
 And at your own doors offer them to you ; 950
 Or have their woods and plains so overgrown
 With pois'nous weeds, roots, gums and seeds unknown,

That they would hire such weeders as you be
 To free their land from such fertility ?
 Their spices hot their nature best endures, 955
 But 'twill impair and much distemper yours.
 What our own soil affords befits us best,
 And long, and long, for ever, may we rest
 Needless of help ! and may this Isle alone
 Furnish all other lands, and this land none ! 960

Excuse me, Thetis, quoth the aged man,
 If passion drew me from the words of Pan,
 Which thus I follow : you whose flocks, quoth he,
 By my protection quit your industry,
 For all the good I have and yet may give 965
 To such as on the plains hereafter live,
 I do entreat what is not hard to grant,
 That not a hand rend from this holy plant
 The smallest branch ; and whoso cutteth this
 Die for th' offence ; to me so heinous 'tis. 970
 And by the floods infernal here I swear,
 (An oath whose breach the greatest gods forbear,)

Ere Phoebe thrice twelve times shall fill her horns
 No furzy tuft, thick wood, nor brake of thorns
 Shall harbour wolf, nor in this Isle shall breed, 975
 Nor live one of that kind, if what's decreed
 You keep inviolate. To this they swore :
 And since those beasts have frighted us no more.
 But swain, quoth Thetis, what is this you tell,
 To what you fear shall fall on Philocel? 980
 Fair queen, attend ; but oh I fear, quoth he,
 Ere I have ended my sad history,
 Unstaying time may bring on his last hour,
 And so defraud us of thy wished pow'r.
 Yond goes a shepherd : give me leave to run 985
 And know the time of execution.
 Mine aged limbs I can a little strain,
 And quickly come, to end the rest, again.

THE FIFTH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Within this Song my Muse doth tell
The worthy fact^a of Philocel,
And how his Love and he in thrall
To death depriv'd of funeral
The Queen of Waves doth gladly save,
And frees Marina from the cave.

So soon as can a martin from our town
Fly to the river underneath the down,
And back return with mortar in her bill,
Some little cranny in her nest to fill,
The shepherd came, and thus began anew : 5
'Two hours, alas, only two hours are due
From time to him, 'tis sentenc'd so of those
That here on earth as Destinies dispose
The lives and deaths of men ; and that time past
He yields his judgment leave and breathes his last. 10
But to the cause. Great goddess, understand
In Mona-Isle thrust from the British land,

^a Fact, deed.

As (since it needed nought of others' store)
 It would entire be and a part no more,
 There liv'd a maid so fair, that for her sake 15
 Since she was born the Isle had never snake,
 Nor were it fit a deadly sting should be
 To hazard such admired symmetry :
 So many beauties so commix'd in one,
 That all delight were dead if she were gone. 20
 Shepherds that in her clear eyes did delight,
 Whilst they were open never held it night ;
 And were they shut, although the morning grey
 Call'd up the sun, they hardly thought it day ;
 Or if they call'd it so, they did not pass 25
 Withal to say that it eclipsed was.
 The roses on her cheeks, such as each turn,
 Phœbus might kiss, but had no pow'r to burn.
 From her sweet lips distil sweets sweeter do,
 Than from a cherry half way cut in two ; 30
 Whose yielding touch would, as Promethean fire,
 Lumps truly senseless with a Muse inspire ;
 Who praising her would youth's desire so stir,
 Each man in mind should be a ravisher.
 Some say the nimble-witted Mercury 35
 Went late disguis'd professing palmistry,
 And milkmaids' fortunes told about the land,
 Only to get a touch of her soft hand ;
 And that a shepherd walking on the brim

Of a clear stream where she did use to swim, 40
 Saw her by chance, and thinking she had been
 Of chastity the pure and fairest queen,
 Stole thence dismay'd, lest he by her decree
 Might undergo Actæon's destiny.
 Did youth's kind heat inflame me (but the snow 45
 Upon my head shows it cool'd long ago),
 I then could give, fitting so fair a feature,
 Right to her fame, and fame to such a creature.
 When now much like a man the palsy shakes
 And spectacles befriend, yet undertakes 50
 To limn a lady, to whose red and white
 Apelles' curious hand would owe some right :
 His too unsteady pencil shadows here
 Somewhat too much, and gives not overclear ;
 His eye deceiv'd mingles his colours wrong, 55
 There strikes too little, and here stays too long,
 Does and undoes, takes off, puts on (in vain)
 Now too much white, then too much red again ;
 And thinking then to give some special grace,
 He works it ill, or so mistakes the place, 60
 That she which sits were better pay for nought,
 Than have it ended, and so lamely wrought :
 So do I in this weak description err,
 And striving more to grace, more injure her ;
 For ever where true worth for praise doth call, 65
 He rightly nothing gives that gives not all ;
 But as a lad who learning to divide,

By one small miss the whole hath falsified.
 Cælia men call'd, and rightly call'd her so :
 Whom Philocel (of all the swains I know 70
 Most worthy) lov'd : alas ! that love should be Subject to fortune's mutability !
 Whatever learned bards tofore have sung,
 Or on the plains shepherds and maidens young,
 Of sad mishaps in love are set to tell, 75
 Comes short to match the fate of Philocel.

For as a labourer toiling at a bay
 To force some clear stream from his wonted way,
 Working on this side sees the water run
 Where he wrought last and thought it firmly done ; 80
 And that leak stopp'd, hears it come breaking out
 Another where, in a far greater spout,
 Which mended too, and with a turf made trim,
 The brook is ready to o'erflow the brim ;
 Or in the bank the water having got, 85
 Some mole-hole, runs where he expected not ;
 And when all's done, still fears lest some great rain
 Might bring a flood and throw all down again :
 So in our shepherd's love : one hazard gone,
 Another still as bad was coming on : 90
 This danger past, another doth begin,
 And one mishap thrust out lets twenty in.
 For he that loves, and in it hath no stay,
 Limits his bliss seld' past the marriage-day.

But Philocel's, alas, and Cælia's too 95

70.—Philocel, perhaps Philo-Cælia.

Must ne'er attain so far as others do ;
 Else Fortune in them from her course should swerve,
 Who most afflicts those that most good deserve.

Twice had the glorious sun run through the signs,
 And with his kindly heat improv'd the mines, 100
 (As such affirm with certain hopes that try
 The vain and fruitless art of alchemy,)
 Since our swain lov'd : and twice had Phœbus been
 In horned Aries taking up his inn,
 Ere he of Cælia's heart possession won ; 105
 And since that time all his intentions done
 Nothing to bring her thence. All eyes upon her Watchful, as Virtue's are on truest honour :
 Kept on the Isle as carefully of some,
 As by the Trojans their Palladium. 110

But where's the fortress that can Love debar ?
 The forces to oppose when he makes war ?
 The watch which he shall never find asleep ?
 The spy that shall disclose his counsels deep ? [115
 That fort, that force, that watch, that spy would be
 A lasting stop to a fifth empery ;
 But we as well may keep the heat from fire
 As sever hearts whom love hath made entire.

In lovely May when Titan's golden rays [12

110.—Palladium, the image or statue of Pallas, which, in the reign of Ilus, fell from heaven at Troy, and upon the possession of which depended the fate of the city (Virgil, Æneid, ii. 166).

And weigheth almost down the once-even scale
 Where night and day by th' Equinoctial
 Were laid in balance, as his pow'r he bent
 To banish Cynthia from her regiment
 To Latmus' stately hill, and with his light 125
 To rule the upper world both day and night :
 Making the poor Antipodes to fear
 A like conjunction 'twixt great Jupiter
 And some Alcmena new, or that the sun
 From their horizon did obliquely run : 130
 This time the swains and maidens of the Isle
 The day with sportive dances do beguile,
 And every valley rings with shepherds' songs,
 And every echo each sweet note prolongs,
 And every river with unusual pride 135
 And dimpled cheek rolls sleeping to the tide ;
 And lesser springs, which aërie-breeding woods
 Prefer as handmaids to the mighty floods,
 Scarce fill up half their channels, making haste
 (In fear, as boys) lest all the sport be past. 140

Now was the Lord and Lady of the May Meeting the May-pole at the break of day,
 And Cælia, as the fairest on the green,
 Not without some maids' envy chosen queen.
 Now was the time com'n, when our gentle swain 145
 Must in his harvest or lose all again.

137.—Aërie-breeding woods, woods chosen by hawks to rear their young, hence well-grown, lofty

146.—In, gather in.

Now must he pluck the rose lest other hands,
 Or tempests, blemish what so fairly stands :
 And therefore, as they had before decreed,
 Our shepherd gets a boat, and with all speed 150
 In night, that doth on lovers' actions smile,
 Arrived safe on Mona's fruitful isle.

Between two rocks (immortal, without mother,)
 That stand as if out-facing one another,
 There ran a creek up, intricate and blind, 155
 As if the waters hid them from the wind ;
 Which never wash'd but at a higher tide
 The frizzled coats which do the mountains hide ;
 Where never gale was longer known to stay
 Than from the smooth wave it had swept away 160
 The new divorced leaves, that from each side
 Left the thick boughs to dance out with the tide.
 At further end the creek a stately wood
 Gave a kind shadow to the brackish flood
 Made up of trees, not less kenn'd by each skiff 165
 Than that sky-scaling Peak of Teneriffe,
 Upon whose tops the hernshaw bred her young,
 And hoary moss upon their branches hung ;
 Whose rugged rinds sufficient were to show, [170
 Without their height, what time they 'gan to grow ;
 And if dry eld by wrinkled skin appears,
 None could allot them less than Nestor's years.
 As under their command the thronged creek

167.—Hernshaw, heron.

Ran lessen'd up. Here did the shepherd seek
 Where he his little boat might safely hide, 175
 Till it was fraught with what the world beside
 Could not outvalue ; nor give equal weight
 Though in the time when Greece was at her height.

The ruddy horses of the rosy Morn
 Out of the Eastern gates had newly borne 180
 Their blushing mistress in her golden chair,
 Spreading new light throughout our hemisphere,
 When fairest Cælia with a lovelier crew
 Of damsels than brave Latmus ever knew [185
 Came forth to meet the youngsters, who had here
 Cut down an oak that long withouten peer
 Bore his round head imperiously above
 His other mates there, consecrate to Jove.
 The wished time drew on : and Cælia now,
 That had the fame for her white arched brow, 190
 While all her lovely fellows busied were
 In picking off the gems from Tellus' hair,
 Made tow'rd's the creek, where Philocel unspied
 Of maid or shepherd that their May-games plied,
 Receiv'd his wish'd-for Cælia, and begun 195
 To steer his boat contrary to the sun,
 Who could have wish'd another in his place
 To guide the car of light, or that his race
 Were to have end (so he might bless his hap)

184.—Latmus, a mountain in Caria, where Artemis (Luna) kissed the sleeping Endymion.

In Cælia's bosom, not in Thetis' lap. 200

The boat oft danc'd for joy of what it held :
 The hoist-up sail not quick but gently swell'd,
 And often shook, as fearing what might fall,
 Ere she deliver'd what she went withal.

Winged Argestes, * fair Aurora's son, 205

Licens'd that day to leave his dungeon,
 Meekly attended and did never err,
 Till Cælia grac'd our land, and our land her.

As through the waves their love-fraught wherry ran, 210

A many Cupids, each set on his swan,
 Guided with reins of gold and silver twist

The spotless birds about them as they list :
 Which would have sung a song (ere they were gone),

Had unkind Nature given them more than one ;
 Or in bestowing that had not done wrong, 215

And made their sweet lives forfeit one sad song.

Yet that their happy voyage might not be Without time's short'ner, heaven-taught melody
 (Music that lent feet to the stable woods,
 And in their currents turn'd the mighty floods : 220

Sorrow's sweet nurse, yet keeping joy alive :

Sad discontent's most welcome corrosive :

The soul of Art, best lov'd when Love is by :

The kind inspirer of sweet Poesy, [225

Lest thou shouldst wanting be, when swans would fain
 Have sung one song, and never sung again,)

The gentle shepherd hasting to the shore
 Began this lay, and tim'd it with his oar :

* The western wind.
 And supposed (with the stars) the birth of Aurora by Astræus as Apollodorus :
 Ἡοῦς δὲ καὶ
 Ἀστραίου
 ὄνεμοι καὶ
 ἄστρα.

Never more let holy Dee
 O'er other rivers brave, 230
 Or boast how (in his jollity)
 Kings row'd upon his wave ;
 But silent be, and ever know
 That Neptune for my fare would row.

Those were captives. If he say 235
 That now I am no other,
 Yet she that bears my prison's key
 Is fairer than Love's mother.
 A god took me, those, one less high :
 They wore their bonds, so do not I. 240

Swell then, gently swell, ye floods,
 As proud of what ye bear,
 And nymphs, that in low coral woods
 String pearls upon your hair,
 Ascend : and tell if ere this day 245
 A fairer prize was seen at sea.

See, the salmons leap and bound
 To please us as we pass ;
 Each mermaid on the rocks around,
 Lets fall her brittle glass, 250

232.—Kings, i.e., of the Scots, of Cumberland, and of the Isles, and five Welsh princes, who declared their vassalage to Eadgar, king of the English, by rowing him in a boat which he himself steered at his coronation in 973.

As they their beauties did despise,
And lov'd no mirror but your eyes.

Blow, but gently blow, fair wind,
From the forsaken shore,
And be as to the Halcyon kind, 255
Till we have ferried o'er :
So may'st thou still have leave to blow,
And fan the way where she shall go.

Floods, and nymphs, and winds, and all
That see us both together, 260
Into a disputation fall,
And then resolve me whether
The greatest kindness each can show
Will quit our trust of you or no.

Thus as a merry milkmaid, neat and fine, 265
Returning late from milking of her kine,
Shortens the dew'd way which she treads along
With some self-pleasing-since-new-gotten song,
The shepherd did their passage well beguile.

And now the horned flood bore to our Isle 270
His head more high than he had us'd to do,
Except by Cynthia's newness forced to.
Not January's snow dissolv'd in floods
Makes Tamar more intrude on Blanchden Woods,

274.—Blanchden, or Blanchdown Woods, on the east bank of the Tamar, about four miles west of Tavistock.

Nor the concourse of waters where they fleet 275
 After a long rain, and in Severn meet,
 Rais'th her enraged head to root fair plants,
 Or more affright her nigh inhabitants,
 (When they behold the waters ruefully,
 And save the waters nothing else can see,) 280
 Than Neptune's subject now, more than of yore :
 As loath to set his burden soon on shore.

O Neptune ! hadst thou kept them still with thee,
 Though both were lost to us and such as we, [285
 And with those beauteous birds which on thy breast
 Get and bring up, afforded them a rest,
 Delos, that long time wand'ring piece of earth,
 Had not been fam'd more for Diana's birth,
 Than those few planks that bore them on the seas,
 By the blest issue of two such as these. 290

But they were landed : so are not our woes,
 Nor ever shall, whilst from an eye there flows
 One drop of moisture ; to these present times
 We will relate, and some sad shepherd's rhymes
 To after ages may their fates make known, 295
 And in their depth of sorrow drown his own.
 So our relation and his mournful verse
 Of tears shall force such tribute to their hearse,
 That not a private grief shall ever thrive
 But in that deluge fall, yet this survive. 300

Two furlongs from the shore they had not gone,
 When from a low-cast valley (having on
 Each hand a woody hill, whose boughs unlopp'd

Have not alone at all time sadly dropp'd,
 And turn'd their storms on her dejected breast, 305
 But when the fire of heaven is ready prest
 To warm and further what it should bring forth,
 For lowly dales mate mountains in their worth,
 The trees (as screenlike greatness) shade his ray,
 As it should shine on none but such as they)— 310
 Came, and full sadly came, a hapless wretch,
 Whose walks and pastures once were known to stretch
 From east to west so far that no dike ran
 For noted bounds, but where the ocean
 His wrathful billows thrust, and grew as great 315
 In shoals of fish as were the other's neat :
 Who now dejected and depriv'd of all,
 Longs, and hath done so long, for funeral.

For as with hanging head I have beheld
 A widow vine stand in a naked field, 320
 Unhusbanded, neglected, all forlorn,
 Brows'd on by deer, by cattle cropp'd and torn ;
 Unpropp'd, unsuccoured by stake or tree
 From wreakful storms' impetuous tyranny,
 When, had a willing hand lent kind redress, 325
 Her pregnant bunches might from out the press
 Have sent a liquor both for taste and show
 No less divine than those of Malligo :
 Such was this wight, and such she might have been.

316.—Neat, oxen.

328.—Malligo, a corruption of Malaga, famous for its wine.

She both th' extremes hath felt of Fortune's teen, 330
 For never have we heard from times of yore,
 One sometime envied and now pitied more.
 Her object, as her state, is low as earth ;
 Privation her companion ; thoughts of mirth
 Irksome ; and in one self-same circle turning, 335
 With sudden sports brought to a house of mourning.
 Of others' good her best belief is still
 And constant to her own in nought but ill.
 The only enemy and friend she knows
 Is Death, who, though defers, must end her woes ; 340
 Her contemplation frightful as the night ;
 She never looks on any living wight
 Without comparison ; and as the day
 Gives us, but takes the glowworm's light away :
 So the least ray of bliss on others thrown 345
 Deprives and blinds all knowledge of her own.
 Her comfort is (if for her any be)
 That none can show more cause of grief than she.
 Yet somewhat she of adverse Fate hath won,
 Who had undone her were she not undone. 350
 For those that on the sea of greatness ride
 Far from the quiet shore, and where the tide
 In ebbs and floods is guess'd, not truly known ;
 Expert of all estates except their own ;
 Keeping their station at the helm of State 355
 Not by their virtues but auspicious fate ;

Subject to calms of favour, storms of rage,
 Their actions noted as the common stage ;
 Who, like a man born blind that cannot be
 By demonstration shown what 'tis to see, 360
 Live still in ignorance of what they want,
 Till misery become the adamant,
 And touch them for that point, to which with speed
 None comes so sure as by the hand of Need.
 A mirror strange she in her right hand bore, 365
 By which her friends from flatterers heretofore
 She could distinguish well ; and by her side,
 As in her full of happiness, untied
 Unforc'd and uncompell'd did sadly go,
 As if partaker of his mistress' woe, 370
 A loving spaniel, from whose rugged back,
 The only thing but death she moans to lack,
 She plucks the hair, and working them in pleats
 Furthers the suit which modesty entreats.
 Men call her Athliot : who cannot be 375
 More wretched made by infelicity,
 Unless she here had an immortal breath,
 Or living thus, liv'd timorous of death.

Out of her lowly and forsaken dell
 She running came, and cried to Philocel : 380
 Help ! help ! kind shepherd, help ! see yonder, where
 A lovely lady hung up by the hair
 Struggles, but mildly struggles, with the Fates,

375.—Athliot, Gr. ἀθλιότης, wretchedness.

Whose thread of life, spun to a thread that mates
 Dame Nature's in her hair, stays them to wonder, 385
 While too fine twisting makes it break in sunder.
 So shrinks the rose that with the flames doth meet ;
 So gently bows the virgin parchment sheet ;
 So roll the waves up and fall out again,
 As all her beauteous parts, and all in vain. 390
 Far, far, above my help or hope in trying,
 Unknown, and so more miserably dying,
 Smoth'ring her torments in her panting breast,
 She meekly waits the time of her long rest.
 Hasten ! O hasten then ! kind shepherd, haste. 395

He went with her, and Cælia, that had grac'd
 Him past the world besides, seeing the way
 He had to go, not far, rests on the lay.

'Twas near the place where Pan's transformed love
 Her gilded leaves display'd, and boldly strove 400
 For lustre with the sun : a sacred tree,
 Pal'd round and kept from violation free :
 Whose smallest spray rent off we never prize
 At less than life. Here, though her heavenly eyes
 From him she lov'd could scarce afford a sight, 405
 As if for him they only had their light,
 Those kind and brighter stars were known to err
 And to all misery betrayed her.
 For turning them aside, she (hapless) spies
 The holy tree, and (as all novelties 410

In tempting women have small labour lost
 Whether for value nought, or of more cost,)
 Led by the hand of uncontroll'd desire
 She rose, and thither went. A wrested briar
 Only kept close the gate which led into it, 415
 (Easy for any all times to undo it,
 That with a pious hand hung on the tree
 Garlands or raptures of sweet poesy,
 Which by her opened, with unweeting hand
 A little spray she pluck'd, whose rich leaves fann'd 420
 And chatter'd with the air, as who should say :
 Do not for once, O do not this bewray !
 Nor give sound to a tongue for that intent !
 " Who ignorantly sins, dies innocent."

By this was Philocel returning back,
 And in his hand the lady ; for whose wrack
 Nature had clean foresworn to frame a wight
 So wholly pure, so truly exquisite ;
 But more deform'd and from a rough-hewn mould,
 Since what is best lives seldom to be old. 430
 Within their sight was fairest Cælia now ;
 Who drawing near, the life-priz'd golden bough
 Her love beheld. And as a mother kind
 What time the new-cloth'd trees by gusts of wind
 Unmov'd, stand wistly list'ning to those lays 435
 The feather'd quiristers upon their sprays
 Chant to the merry Spring, and in the even

She with her little son for pleasure given,
 To tread the fring'd banks of an amorous flood,
 That with her music courts a sullen wood, 440
 Where ever talking with her only bliss,
 That now before and then behind her is,
 She stoops for flow'rs the choicest may be had,
 And bringing them to please her pretty lad,
 Spies in his hand some baneful flow'r or weed, 445
 Whereon he 'gins to smell, perhaps to feed,
 With a more earnest haste she runs unto him,
 And pulls that from him which might else undo him :
 So to his Cælia hasten'd Philocel,
 And raught the bough away : hid it : and fell 450
 To question if she broke it, or if then
 An eye beheld her. Of the race of men,
 Replied she, when I took it from the tree
 Assure yourself was none to testify,
 But what hath past since in your hand, behold, 455
 A fellow running yonder o'er the wold
 Is well inform'd of. Can there, love, ensue,
 Tell me ! oh tell me ! any wrong to you
 By what my hand hath ignorantly done ?
 (Quoth fearful Cælia) Philocel ! be won 460
 By these unfeigned tears, as I by thine,
 To make thy greatest sorrows partly mine !
 Clear up these showers, my Sun, quoth Philocel,
 The ground it needs not. Nought is so from well

Song 5.] BRITANNIA'S PASTORALS. 367

But that reward and kind entreaties may 465

Make smooth the front of wrath, and this allay.

Thus wisely he suppress'd his height of woe,

And did resolve, since none but they did know

Truly who rent it, and the hateful swain

That lately pass'd by them upon the plain 470

(Whom well he knew did bear to him a hate,

Though undeserved, so inveterate

That to his utmost pow'r he would assay

To make his life have ended with that day)

Except in his had seen it in no hand, 475

That he against all throes of Fate would stand,

Acknowledge it his deed, and so afford

A passage to his heart for Justice' sword,

Rather than by her loss the world should be

Despis'd and scorn'd for losing such as she. 480

Now, with a vow of secrecy from both,

Enforcing mirth, he with them homewards go'th ;

And by the time the shades of mighty woods

Began to turn them to the eastern floods,

They thither got : where with undaunted heart 485

He welcomes both, and freely doth impart

Such dainties as a shepherd's cottage yields,

Ta'en from the fruitful woods and fertile fields :

No way distracted nor disturb'd at all.

And to prevent what likely might befall 490

His truest Cælia, in his apprehending,

Thus to all future care gave final ending :

Into their cup (wherein for such sweet girls

Nature would myriads of richest pearls
 Dissolve, and by her pow'rful simples strive 495
 To keep them still on earth, and still alive),
 Our swain infus'd a powder which they drank :
 And to a pleasant room, set on a bank
 Near to his coat, where he did often use
 At vacant hours to entertain his Muse, 500
 Brought them and seated on a curious bed,
 Till what he gave in operation sped,
 And robb'd them of his sight, and him of theirs,
 Whose new enlight'ning will be quench'd with tears.

The glass of Time had well-nigh spent the sand 505
 It had to run ere with impartial hand
 Justice must to her upright balance take him :
 Which he (afraid it might too soon forsake him)
 Began to use as quickly as perceive,
 And of his love thus took his latest leave : 510

Cælia ! thou fairest creature ever eye
 Beheld, or yet put on mortality !
 Cælia, that hast but just so much of earth,
 As makes thee capable of death ! Thou birth
 Of every virtue, life of every good ! 515
 Whose chastest sports and daily taking food
 Is imitation of the highest pow'rs
 Who to the earth lend seasonable show'rs,
 That it may bear, we to their altars bring
 Things worthy their accept, our offering. 520

I the most wretched creature ever eye
 Beheld, or yet put on mortality,
 Unhappy Philocel, that have of earth
 Too much to give my sorrows endless birth,
 The spring of sad misfortunes ; in whom lies 525
 No bliss that with thy worth can sympathize,
 Clouded with woe that hence will never flit,
 Till death's eternal night grow one with it :
 I as a dying swan that sadly sings
 Her moanful dirge unto the silver springs, 530
 Which careless of her song glide sleeping by Without one murmur of kind elegy,
 Now stand by thee ; and as a turtle's mate,
 With lamentations inarticulate,
 The near departure from her love bemoans, 535
 Spend these my bootless sighs and killing groans.
 Here as a man (by Justice' doom) exil'd
 To coasts unknown, to deserts rough and wild,
 Stand I to take my latest leave of thee :
 Whose happy and heaven-making company 540
 Might I enjoy in Libya's continent,
 Were blest fruition and not banishment.
 First of those eyes that have already ta'en
 Their leave of me : lamps fitting for the fane
 Of heaven's most pow'r, and which might ne'er expire 545
 But be as sacred as the vestal fire :

541.—Libya's continent, Africa.

Then of those plots, where half-ros'd lilies be,
 Not one by Art but Nature's industry,
 From which I go as one excluded from
 The taintless flow'rs of blest Elysium : 550
 Next from those lips I part, and may there be
 No one that shall hereafter second me !
 Guiltless of any kisses but their own,
 Their sweets but to themselves to all unknown :
 For should our swains divulge what sweets there
 be 555
 Within the sea-clipt bounds of Britany,
 We should not from invasions be exempted,
 But with that prize would all the world be tempted.
 Then from her heart : O no ! let that be never,
 For if I part from thence I die for ever. 560
 Be that the record of my love and name !
 Be that to me as is the Phoenix' flame !
 Creating still anew what Justice' doom
 Must yield to dust and a forgotten tomb.
 Let thy chaste love to me (as shadows run 565
 In full extent unto the setting sun)
 Meet with my fall ; and when that I am gone,
 Back to thyself retire, and there grow one.
 If to a second light thy shadow be,
 Let him still have his ray of love from me ; 570
 And if, as I, that likewise do decline,
 Be mine or his, or else be his and mine.
 But know no other, nor again be sped,
 " She dies a virgin that but knows one bed."

And now from all at once my leave I take 575
 With this petition, that when thou shalt wake,
 My tears already spent may serve for thine,
 And all thy sorrows be excus'd by mine !
 Yea, rather than my loss should draw on hers, [580
 (Hear, Heaven, the suit which my sad soul prefers !)
 Let this her slumber, like Oblivion's stream,
 Make her believe our love was but a dream !
 Let me be dead in her as to the earth,
 Ere Nature lose the grace of such a birth.
 Sleep thou, sweet soul, from all disquiet free, 585
 And since I now beguile thy destiny,
 Let after patience in thy breast arise,
 To give his name a life who for thee dies.
 He dies for thee that worthy is to die,
 Since now in leaving that sweet harmony 590
 Which Nature wrought in thee, he draws not to him
 Enough of sorrow that might straight undo him ;
 And have for means of death his parting hence,
 So keeping Justice still in innocence.

Here stay'd his tongue, and tears anew began : 595
 "Parting knows more of grief than absence can."

And with a backward pace and ling'ring eye
 Left, and for ever left, their company.

By this the curs'd informer of the deed [600
 With wings of mischief (and those have most speed)
 Unto the priests of Pan had made it known ;
 And, though with grief enough, were thither flown
 With strict command the officers that be

And sorrow Philocel's. Where he espies,
 What he did only fear, the beauteous maid,
 His woful Cælia, whom (ere night array'd
 Last time the world in suit of mournful black, 665
 More dark than use, as to bemoan their wrack)
 He at his cottage left in sleep's soft arms
 By pow'r of simples and the force of charms :
 Which time had now dissolv'd, and made her know
 For what intent her love had left her so. 670
 She stay'd not to awake her mate in sleep,
 Nor to bemoan her fate. She scorn'd to weep,
 Or have the passion that within her lies
 So distant from her heart as in her eyes.
 But rending of her hair, her throbbing breast 675
 Beating with ruthless strokes, she onward press'd
 As an enraged furious lioness,
 Through uncouth treadings of the wilderness,
 In hot pursuit of her late missed brood.
 The name of Philocel speaks every wood, 680
 And she begins to still and still her pace :
 Her face deck'd anger, anger deck'd her face.
 So ran distracted Hecuba along
 The streets of Troy. So did the people throng
 With helpless hands and heavy hearts to see 685
 Their woful ruin in her progeny.
 And harmless flocks of sheep that nearly fed
 Upon the open plains wide scattered,

666.—Wrack, destruction.681.—Still, slacken.

Ran all afront, and gaz'd with earnest eye
 (Not without tears) while thus she passed by. 690
 Springs that long time before had held no drop,
 Now welled forth and over-went the top :
 Birds left to pay the spring their wonted vows,
 And all forlorn sat drooping on the boughs : [695
 Sheep, springs and birds, nay trees' unwonted groans
 Bewail'd her chance, and forc'd it from the stones.

Thus came she to the place (where aged men,
 Maidens and wives, and youth and children
 That had but newly learnt their mothers' name,
 Had almost spent their tears before she came,) 700
 And those her earnest and related words
 Threw from her breast ; and unto them affords
 These as the means to further her pretence :
 Receive not on your souls, by innocence [705
 Wrong'd, lasting stains which from a sluice the sea
 May still wash o'er, but never wash away.
 Turn all your wraths on me : for here behold
 The hand that tore your sacred tree of gold ;
 These are the feet that led to that intent ;
 Mine was th' offence, be mine the punishment. 710
 Long hath he liv'd among you, and he knew
 The danger imminent that would ensue ;
 His virtuous life speaks for him, hear it then !
 And cast not hence the miracle of men !
 What now he doth is through some discontent : 715
 Mine was the fact, be mine the punishment !

 What now he doth is through some discontent : 715
 Mine was the fact, be mine the punishment !

What certain death could never make him do
 (With Cælia's loss), her presence forc'd him to.
 She that could clear his greatest clouds of woes,
 Some part of woman made him now disclose, 720
 And show'd him all in tears : and for a while
 Out of his heart unable to exile
 His troubling thoughts in words to be conceiv'd ;
 But weighing what the world should be bereav'd,
 He of his sighs and throbs some license wan, 725
 And to the sad spectators thus began :
 Hasten ! O haste ! the hour's already gone,
 Do not defer the execution !
 Nor make my patience suffer ought of wrong !
 'Tis nought to die, but to be dying long ! 730
 Some fit of frenzy hath possess'd the maid :
 She could not do it, though she had assay'd ;
 No bough grows in her reach ; nor hath the tree
 A spray so weak to yield to such as she.
 To win her love I broke it, but unknown 735
 And undesir'd of her ; then let her own
 No touch of prejudice without consent.
 Mine was the fact, be mine the punishment !
 O ! who did ever such contention see
 Where death stood for the prize of victory ? 740
 Where love and strife were firm and truly known,
 And where the victor must be overthrown ?
 Where both pursu'd, and both held equal strife
 That life should further death, death further life.
 Amazement struck the multitude ; and now 745

They knew not which way to perform their vow.
 If only one should be depriv'd of breath,
 They were not certain of th' offender's death ;
 If both of them should die for that offence,
 They certainly should murder innocence ; 750
 If none did suffer for it, then there ran
 Upon their heads the wrath and curse of Pan.
 This much perplex'd and made them to defer
 The deadly hand of th' executioner,
 Till they had sent an officer to know 755
 The judges' wills (and those with Fate's do go) :
 Who back return'd, and thus with tears began :
 The substitutes on earth of mighty Pan
 Have thus decreed (although the one be free)
 To clear themselves from all impunity, 760
 If, who the offender is, no means procure,
 Th' offence is certain, be their death as sure.
 This is their doom (which may all plagues prevent)
 To have the guilty kill the innocent. [765

Look as two little lads, their parents' treasure,
 Under a tutor strictly kept from pleasure,
 While they their new-given lesson closely scan,
 Hear of a message by their father's man,
 That one of them, but which he hath forgot,
 Must come along and walk to some fair plot ; 770
 Both have a hope : their careful tutor loath
 To hinder either, or to license both,
 Sends back the messenger that he may know
 His master's pleasure which of them must go :

While both his scholars stand alike in fear 775
 Both of their freedom and abiding there,
 The servant comes and says that for that day
 Their father wills to have them both away.
 Such was the fear these loving souls were in
 That time the messenger had absent been. 780
 But far more was their joy 'twixt one another,
 In hearing neither should outlive the other.

Now both entwin'd, because no conquest won
 Yet either ruined, Philocel begun
 To arm his love for death : a robe unfit 785
 Till Hymen's saffron'd weed had usher'd it.
 My fairest Cælia ! come ; let thou and I,
 That long have learn'd to love, now learn to die ;
 It is a lesson hard if we discern it,
 Yet none is born so soon as bound to learn it. 790
 Unpartial fate lays ope the book to us,
 And let[s] us con it still embracing thus ;
 We may it perfect have, and go before
 Those that have longer time to read it o'er ;
 And we had need begin and not delay, 795
 For 'tis our turn to read it first to-day.
 Help when I miss, and when thou art in doubt
 I'll be thy prompter, and will help thee out.
 But see how much I err : vain metaphor
 And elocution destinies abhor. 800
 Could death be stay'd with words, or won with tears,
 Or mov'd with beauty, or with unripe years,
 Sure thou couldst do't ; this rose, this sun-like eye

Should not so soon be quell'd, so quickly die.
But we must die, my love ; not thou alone, 805
Nor only I, but both ; and yet but one.
Nor let us grieve ; for we are married thus,
And have by death what life denied us.
It is a comfort from him more than due ;
"Death severs many, but he couples few." 810
Life is a flood that keeps us from our bliss,
The ferryman to waft us thither is Death, and none else ; the sooner we get o'er
Should we not thank the ferryman the more ?
Others entreat him for a passage hence, 815
And groan beneath their griefs and impotence,
Yet (merciless) he lets those longer stay,
And sooner takes the happy man away.
Some little happiness have thou and I,
Since we shall die before we wish to die. 820
Should we here longer live, and have our days
As full in number as the most of these,
And in them meet all pleasures may betide,
We gladly might have liv'd and patient died.
When now our fewer years, made long by cares, 825
That without age can snow down silver hairs,
Make all affirm which do our griefs descry
We patiently did live, and gladly die.
The difference, my love, that doth appear
Betwixt our fates and theirs that see us here, 830
Is only this : the high all-knowing Pow'r
Conceals from them, but tells us our last hour.

For which to Heaven we far-far more are bound
 Since in the hour of death we may be found,
 By its prescience, ready for the hand 835
 That shall conduct us to the holy land.

When those, from whom that hour conceal'd is, may
 Even in their height of sin be ta'en away.
 Besides, to us Justice a friend is known,
 Which neither lets us die nor live alone. 840
 That we are forc'd to it cannot be held ;
 " Who fears not death, denies to be compell'd."

O that thou wert no actor in this play,
 My sweetest Cælia ! or divorc'd away
 From me in this : O Nature ! I confess 845
 I cannot look upon her heaviness
 Without betraying that infirmity
 Which at my birth thy hand bestow'd on me.
 Would I had died when I receiv'd my birth !
 Or known the grave before I knew the earth ! 850
 Heavens ! I but one life did receive from you,
 And must so short a loan be paid with two ?
 Cannot I die but like that brutish stem
 Which have their best belov'd to die with them ?
 O let her live ! some bless'd power hear my cry ! 855
 Let Cælia live and I contented die.

My Philocel (quoth she) neglect these throes !
 Ask not for me, nor add not to my woes !
 Can there be any life when thou art gone ?

Nay, can there be but desolation? 860

Art thou so cruel as to wish my stay,

To wait a passage at an unknown day?

Or have me dwell within this vale of woe,

Excluded from those joys which thou shalt know?

Envy not me that bliss! I will assay it, 865

My love deserves it, and thou canst not stay it.

Justice! then take thy doom; for we intend,

Except both live, no life: one love, one end.

Thus with embraces and exhorting other: [870

With tear-dew'd kisses that had pow'r to smother

Their soft and ruddy lips close join'd with either,

That in their deaths their souls might meet together:

With prayers as hopeful as sincerely good,

Expecting death they on the cliff's edge stood,

And lastly were (by one oft forcing breath) 875

Thrown from the rock into the arms of death.

Fair Thetis, whose command the waves obey,

Loathing the loss of so much worth as they,

Was gone before their fall; and by her pow'r

The billows (merciless, us'd to devour, 880

And not to save,) she made to swell up high,

Even at the instant when the tragedy

Of those kind souls should end: so to receive them,

And keep what cruelty would fain bereave them.

Her hest was soon perform'd: and now they lay 885

Embracing on the surface of the sea,

Void of all sense ; a spectacle so sad
 That Thetis, nor no nymph which there she had,
 Touch'd with their woes, could for a while refrain,
 But from their heavenly eyes did sadly rain 890
 Such show'rs of tears (so pow'rful, since divine)
 That ever since the sea doth taste of brine.
 With tears, thus to make good her first intent,
 She both the lovers to her chariot hent :
 Recalling life that had not clearly ta'en 895
 Full leave of his or her more curious fane,
 And with her praise sung by these thankful pair
 Steer'd on her coursers, swift as fleeting air,
 Towards her palace built beneath the seas,
 Proud of her journey, but more proud of these. 900
 By that time Night had newly spread her robe
 Over our half-part of this massy globe,
 She won that famous Isle which Jove did please
 To honour with the holy Druidës ;
 And as the western side she stript along, 905
 Heard, and so stay'd to hear, this heavy song :

O Heaven ! what may I hope for in this cave ?

A Grave.

But who to me this last of helps shall retch ?

A Wretch. 910

Shall none be by pitying so sad a wight ?

Yes : Night.

894.—Hent, took.

903.—Isle, Anglesea.

905.—Stript, moved rapidly.

909.—Retch, reach.

Small comfort can befall in heavy plight
 To me, poor maid, in whose distresses be
 Nor hope, nor help, nor one to pity me, 915
 But a cold Grave, a Wretch, and darksome Night.

To dig that grave what fatal things appears?
 Thy Tears.

What bell shall ring me to that bed of ease?
 Rough Seas. 920

And who for mourners hath my Fate assign'd?
 Each Wind.

Can any be debarr'd from such I find?
 When, to my last rites gods no other send [925
 To make my grave, for knell, or mourning friend,
 Than mine own Tears, rough Seas, and gusts of Wind.

Tears must my grave dig : but who bringeth those?
 Thy Woes.

What monument will Heaven my body spare?
 The Air. 930

And what the epitaph when I am gone?
 Oblivion.

Most miserable I, and like me none
 Both dying, and in death, to whom is lent
 Nor spade, nor epitaph, nor monument, 935
 Excepting Woes, Air, and Oblivion.

The end of this gave life unto a groan,
 As if her life and it had been but one ;

Yet she as careless of reserving either,
 If possible would leave them both together. 940
 It was the fair Marina, almost spent
 With grief and fear of future famishment.
 For (hapless chance) but the last rosy morn
 The willing redbreast, flying through a thorn,
 Against a prickle gor'd his tender side, 945
 And in an instant so, poor creature, died.

Thetis, much mov'd with those sad notes she heard,
 Her freeing thence to Triton soon referr'd ;
 Who found the cave as soon as set on shore,
 And by his strength removing from the door 950
 A weighty stone, brought forth the fearful maid,
 Which kindly led where his fair mistress stay'd,
 Was entertain'd as well became her sort,
 And with the rest steer'd on to Thetis' court,
 For whose release from imminent decay 955
 My Muse awhile will here keep holiday.
