PREFACE

As a yearbook, the first function of the 93rd edition of the Yackety Yack is to serve as a memory book, to tell you as best we can in a university of 25,000, who did what when. Space limitations obviously prohibit us from printing a synopsis of each individual's experience over the past year. Consequently, most of the groups represented herein are ones that have purchased pages.

The solution to this problem aligns with our second function, documenting the collective experience of the University for 1982-83. We have attempted to do this in poetic fashion; to communicate more with photos and layout than the actual subjective content of those photos; to communicate the emblematic and symbolic. With very few exceptions, the photographs selected for this book were chosen because we felt, from our perception and experience, that they performed that function of conveying essence and periphery.

Like many other student endeavors, a yearbook functions on the principle of delayed gratification. It takes nearly 2 years of seemingly unending work to complete this project, and we will know, only after several years, if we have been successful, if this book reminds you what it was to be you in Chapel Hill in 1983.

CELEBRATIONS

FRAT COURT PARTY

DORMITORY TOGA PARTY

could feel it was the benouement that brought the party gone out of control. The 80's played on the stereo, my feet stuck to the floor. A girl in a black spandex skin-tight top decked with flowers held a drink in one hand and asked me to rush St. A's.

"I'll be rush chairman and I'm sure you'll get a bid," I rushed here several years ago and decided not to accept my bid.

You really ought to join. She grasped my arm and a red light. My feet were sticking to the floor. Again, I told her that I'd think about it.

I am. Fraternities seem to be an anchor in the university. Five years o.w.a., I won't know anyone here, my dorm room name will be innapated by strangers, my professors will have forgotten me. St. A's will probably be here when I die.

Perhaps.

As I turned the corner, I was staring into Randy, who's redder than his real hair face. He was hanging upside down in the star wheel with the help of his friends. Carter and Nick held onto one foot, someone I don't know held onto the other. They were saying something about gravity inversion friends.

Randy seemed to be enjoying the ride on his tongue and stared through me, the wall, and the Cardinals in the over to somewhere on main campus.

Marks are the masters of all existence, mark he explained.

They nailed him up and he immediately slammed Nick into the corner. Dickie came in holding a knife in his teeth. Carter ripped it out, tacked him and held the knife over his chest. Carter is in Med School. Carter and Dickie are friends.

There were about three women (girls) and fifteen men (boys) at the party. Someone I don't know proposed a toast to Mary's tits. Long may her nipples wave. She felt complimented.

Several people walked through the party in one door and out the other. Couldn't handle it. A guy in leather wants soccer in an English accent. Carmentis (Irene) held to the girl with the whip. She was being strangled or something. She felt complimented.

was out of sync with the party. Too many beers at noon, four to five hours of sleep, one hour to eat and talk at the Looking Glass Cafe and the party, stoned. At the liquor was resorted earlier by a big guy attached to beautiful girls in skimpy clothing. I was not intoxicated, they were all drunk and screaming. I turned in on snapshots of conversation and watched the furniture chicken fights.

We were driving in the convertible for girl and saw God mark. Randy stared through me again and bit his tongue. He showed the god in his teeth.

This road is perfectly flat and goes into a slight dip at the end. We were doing 15, and the mushrooms flew out of Paul's cocker. They were gone for sure. When we stopped, they were sitting on the front seat.

He bit his tongue and smiled and stared in order. I told him that was amazing, turned around and waked name.

Radiation Effects Of Nuclear Explosions

Acute Radiation Syndrome

1. Acute radiation syndrome (ARS) is a collection of effects that occur in humans after a relatively short-term exposure to a high dose of ionizing radiation. The symptoms of ARS are caused by the damage to the cells of the bone marrow, the gastrointestinal tract, and the lungs.

2. The symptoms of ARS are divided into three stages: prodromal, latent, and manifest illness. The prodromal stage is characterized by nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea. The latent stage is a period of relative well-being. The manifest illness stage is characterized by a decrease in the number of white blood cells, a decrease in the number of platelets, and a decrease in the number of red blood cells.

3. The symptoms of ARS are caused by the damage to the cells of the bone marrow, the gastrointestinal tract, and the lungs.

4. The symptoms of ARS are caused by the damage to the cells of the bone marrow, the gastrointestinal tract, and the lungs.

LAWRENCE FERLINGHETTI AND STAN BRAXHAGE

If language is a desiring machine, then poetry is the supreme essence or ideal model of that machine. All our desires are expressed in our language; written, sung, painted, played, or otherwise signed in music, painting, poetry, or prose. Language is the primary carrier of ideal illusions, but more primal than that, it is the carrier of our half-formed, inchoherent, amorphous, barely articulated or inaudible thoughts and emotions, including nascent unrecognition, unformulated desires, longings, needs, hungers, and dreams.

Through the front and back doors of perception pour all the phenomena of existence, and through our tongues pour forth all that we assimilate and synthesize of that existence, transformed by our particular and pressing needs into that consensu and unconscious language of desiring that each of us speaks, whether clearly or covertly, honestly and openly, cleverly or obliquely.

This is where poetry and painting and film, in its purest and most potent form, has its most crucial function, its greatest opportunity, to meet its most imperative task. It is a unique function that poetry, above all other forms of art, should be able to accomplish, articulating our deepest perceptions and desires, dreams and ideas in the most vivid form. It is the desiring machine par excellence.

Poetry is hardly functioning as such today, and neither is film, except on the most parochial and petty level. It should function as a peace-seeking missile, but somehow it has been disarmed. Why is this and what is so blatantly missing? This is where ethics come in.

Ethics? A term not ordinarily applied to poetry today, not demanded of poetry today, as it has not been since the 1730's. Literature, as the privileged locus of thinking out man's fate and giving meaning to life, requires that it cast its synthesis of existence in the profoundest terms and dreams of humanity.

Such terms and frames have already been established by the greatest philosophers, thinkers, and gurus. Take your choice of their models of the universe, their systems of ideas, their ontologies, their religions, their philosophies. But fail to make any choice at your own risk. The poet who does fail to make any choice, rejecting all before him or her, must invent a better one. The poet, who, through ignorance or laziness, abdicates his role as the conscience of the race, as the gadfly of the state, and of the mind, and of the soul, is hardly a great poet, or filmmaker. We had better sell insurance in our plutocracy... for if he is not the conscience of our race, who is to be?

If the poet or filmmaker is not the poetic conscience, he is guilty by complicity of the ruin of the world, just as guilty as the well-known grand German, saying nothing under Hitler, just as guilty as the Nazi collaborator in occupied France in World War Two, just as guilty as the supposedly dissident writers and poetry presses and painters and filmmakers in this country who took grants through the National Endowment of the Arts and Humanities from the government, which, with its other hand, was killing millions of unfortunated people overseas in illegal wars, just as guilty as the millions of Americans, affluent Americans everywhere today, who are doing nothing about the proliferation of nuclear arms and nuclear power and the ecological destruction of our world.

Just as in art, in music, and in film, literature has been the witness of a divided left since early in this century. In the 1930's, the political disintegration of the avant-garde became all too devastatingly evident. The god that failed was that communism which so much of the artistic and intellectual community embraced and then inexorably rejected, leaving the literary avant-garde in complete shambles from which it has never recovered. It's as if we've had nowhere to go except in circles. Struggling between shored-up Marxist ruins and Liberalism chimeras, the contemporary poet, in particular, has never been able to find him or her self again.

Today he is helplessly mired in the position of a disappearing left which he inherited from older generations, and this position is primarily one of Alienation with a capital "A", Alienation from society in general. It is this general attitude of alienation which poetry and the arts today cannot seem to move beyond.

Since the avant-garde has articulated nothing new to replace this alienation, it no longer deserves to exist. It doesn't, in fact. Whether out of apathy, too well-fed indifference, political complicity, or lack of genius, those who should constitute the avant-garde certainly aren't recognized by anyone to be the conscience of our race.

The idea itself of language itself as a primal desiring machine is certainly poetic. Today, this desiring machine must be made to perform, as never before, its unique function of not only articulating the consciousness of the race, but expanding that consciousness and raising that conscience.

Thus I have dreamed this essay, but as with most dreams, it breaks off unfinished and must await another epiphany.

EDITOR'S NOTE IN APRIL OF 1983, BUCKMINSTER FULLER STOOD ON HIS NEW PLASTIC HIP AND SPOKE TO A CAPACITY CROWD IN MEMORIAL HALL FOR CLOSE TO THREE HOURS USING NO NOTES. HIS TOPICS RANGED FROM THE MEANING OF LIFE TO TENSILE STRENGTHS OF CONSTRUCTION MATERIALS, TO THE MATHEMATICAL AND PHYSICAL INTEGRITY OF THE TRIANGLE.

PRINTED HERE IS ONLY A SMALL PORTION OF HIS LECTURE, AN EXTRACTION OF SOME OF THE GENERALITIES THAT HE SUPPORTED WITH SPECIFIC EXAMPLES. SOME RUN-ON SENTENCES AND AWKWARD GRAMMAR HAVE BEEN LEFT TO APPROXIMATE THE IMMEDIACY OF THE UNWRITTEN SPEECH.

WHEN READING, TRY TO IMAGINE THE UNDERSTATED REVERENCE OF A SCIENTIST OF SEVENTY YEARS WHO SPEAKS OF THE GREAT HYDROCARBONS, OR THE SPEED WITH WHICH HE SAYS RED, ORANGE, YELLOW, GREEN, BLUE, VIOLET, AND THE IMPERATIVE SHOUTING WHEN HE SAYS, "IT NO LONGER HAS TO BE YOU OR ME."

"I'm going to tonight, as I often do, speak entirely spontaneously, what I call thinking out loud. I find that way I start right where we are this minute in our experience.

We are all aware of humanity being in a strange moment of transition, and I'm going to do my best to explore what I know about where we are.

I started an experiment 55 years ago to discover what, if anything, a little, unknown, penniless human being with a dependent wife and child might be able to do effectively, on behalf of all humanity, that would be inherently impossible for great political states, great private enterprise, or great religions to do under any circumstances.

I saw that all great states were locally preoccupied with their state, their side, and private enterprise had to make a profit in a reasonable amount of time or go broke, therefore it was inherently short-sighted. But there was nothing to stop me as a little individual from thinking about our total planet as a spaceship and all the people on board of it, and our total acquired knowledge of resources on board, and our total acquired knowledge of how to employ those resources, both mental and physical, and how then to operate in such a manner as to take care of everybody on board.

In order to be able to do any good thinking about how to be effective on behalf of all humanity, I had to have a pretty good working idea of how and why humans are on board of our planet. Why were humans included in the design of the universe?

To have a better idea of why humans are here, in contradistinction to all other living creatures, I found that human beings have some really unique differences. All living creatures have some built-in organic equipment that gives them some special advantages in some special environment: the little vine that can just grow in the Amazon and no place else; the little dog with very short legs so his nose could follow the trail and good sharp claws to grab the quarry at the end of the trail. I saw that many creatures had brains, including humans, there's nothing special about brains.

All brains of all creatures, including humans, are always and only coordinating information from our senses: the smelling, the seeing, the touching, the hearing. Our brains are then always dealing with special cases.

Humans have, in addition to the brain, a capability called a mind. I feel very confident in differentiating brain and mind to you. I find it's not being done in any of the schools and colleges. By mind, I mean that humans have a faculty for discovering relationships existing between special cases that can not be discovered by any of our special case senses themselves. We come to the distinction that the brain views in the temporal and the mind discovers and deals in the eternal. It's a completely different kind of capability.

If I were designing an eternally regenerative universe, I'd find it very appropriate to include a human mind, with access to local critical information, and the capabilities to understand design epistles, which are access to the great design laws that the universe has given us. I would give them the ability to employ those epistles objectively.

I say, then, that humans are here as local information gatherers, with local universe problem-solving capabilities.

In order for us to do this, we are going to have to have a great deal of energy to get around and find out all the information we are going to need. It takes a tremendous amount of energy for us to grow.

All the stars in the sky are atomic energy plants giving off radiation; they are all entropic. Where is all this energy being collected? We find that our own planet, though not till we understand photosynthesis, that our own little planet is what we call a syntropic center, where energy is being collected and converted from randomness to beautiful orderly structures. What we call the great hydrocarbons are just the energy income being stored here, against the day when we need it to be a star.

When I started my experiment in 1927, I asked myself at the outset, "Do I have any experimental evidence that inclines me to assume that there exists a greater intellect operating the universe than that of humans?"

Luckily, I had a very good scientific training, and all the things I've just been telling you about, the mind and so forth, gave me absolute conviction of a greater intellectual integrity operating eternally in the universe.

When I was born, society was clearly thinking that reality was everything that humans could see, touch, smell, and hear. The year I was born, however, X-ray was discovered. I couldn't see it, you couldn't see it, but you could see your bones in photographs. The year I was born wireless was discovered, you couldn't see it either. When I was three years of age, the electron was discovered. It didn't make any newspapers; nobody thought that was going to be anything. The year I entered Harvard, 1913, I had in the back of my physics book some yellow pages glued in called "Electricity."

After the electron, we find the existence of spectrum lines unique to each chemical element. Each element has its own wavelength and frequency. This is a new world of wavelengths and frequencies, something we haven't been dealing with before.

In 1930 the Westinghouse Company published the first chart of the known electromagnetic spectrum, from mile-long radio waves down to the shorter waves of higher frequencies. It was in evidence, for the first time in history, that although you and I thought reality was what we could see, touch, hear, and smell; red, orange, green, blue, violet; the reality we are now faced with is a million times greater in range than what we had the tuned-in capability for. We don't find society talking in terms of the magnitude of this invisible reality, a reality that can only be reached through your mind and understanding epistles.

Today, 99% of everything that is going to effect everybody's life tomorrow, will be conducted in the realm of a reality not directly contactable by the human senses. The question then arises, "How must we cultivate our capabilities to deal with our new reality?"

In 1917 I was a regular in the United States Navy, and I was interested to know why everything always led up to contact with the enemy and then destruction, oh, somebody's going to go to the bottom, all the beautiful technology continually leading to destruction. Why was that?

In the eighteenth century, Queen Elizabeth the First set up the East India Company to control the Lines of supply from the Orient to Europe. The East India Company set up the East India Company College where they deposited all the data of their exploration of a closed sphere.

They had the world's vital statistics, everything that was known about the resources around the world, all the population assessments, all the data about the control of different kingdoms and ways of trading, all that into one spot. Thomas Malthus was the first human being in history to have the total vital statistics about our closed sphere.

Within five years, he was able to report quite clearly that the vast portion of humanity was going to have to go through great want and pain because there was nowhere nearly enough to go around. The world knew nothing of what Malthus was saying because it was highly classified information.

Politics has always had to do with which policy do we dump, in view of the fact that there is not enough to go around, somebody's going to have to die. Politics is based on the fundamental inadequacy of life support on our planet.

In the last forty years, we have developed the capability to destroy all of humanity in half an hour as a consequence of the myth that it has to be you or me. We are spending enormous amounts of our capabilities getting ready for siege.

We've gotten to the point, in our great syntropic center, where some extraordinary rapid changes are going on. Not only are we in the transition from visible to invisible reality, but just in my lifetime we've gone from 95% illiteracy to 65% literate despite the doubling of the population.

When I was young, the average workman had a vocabulary of about 300 words. Today the average six-year-old child has a vocabulary of about 6000 words. We have gone from a point where the greater part of humanity was out of the information, to a point where they are in on the information.

In 1917, if you wanted to send a message across the Atlantic, you had to send a ship weighing hundreds of tons and wait three weeks for it to cross. Suddenly, we have hundreds of pounds of radio equipment that could send that message at 186,000 miles per second. We have the capability here of doing so much with so little.

We find that birds in the sky fly beautifully, but when they are not flying, they are unable to divest themselves of their wings. Human beings, through understanding epistles, are able to design wing foils that are able to way out-fly any bird in height and speed. We not only have the capability to make these wings, but to be able to take them off. "Oh, you can have my wings when I'm not using them." This is an extraordinary new relationship to the universe.

In 1970 we crossed the threshold where for the first time, we could demonstrate engineering lives. If we took all the metals, energy, and effort going into weaponry and put that into living, we could have all of humanity at a higher standard of living than they had ever known. We could have this on a completely sustainable basis, phasing out all further use of fossil fuels, phasing out all further use of atomic energy, and all of this could be done as of 1970.

I want you to realize the enormous ignorance in society today of its potential. I have the responsibility of telling you that for the first time in history, it does not have to be you or me. There is now enough for all of us.

Do you understand me?

I want you to understand something about the seriousness of your responsibility. I am telling you this because I am absolutely convinced that nature did place us here with our beautiful minds and access to principles. Unless we have the integrity and the courage individually to go after the truth as we individually find it, I am quite confident that nature will let us blow ourselves up.

When I started my experiment 55 years ago, I was interested to know why we were here. I saw that the grass was not paying the clouds for the rain. Only people were using money, money was irrelevant. What was relevant was truth and competence and comprehension. So I said I was going to commit myself to the absolute faith in the great intellectual integrity of the universe.

The point I make about myself is that I am an ordinary human being. There is nothing that I've done that others couldn't do under the same circumstances, giving up anything to do with earning a living or getting in the power structure. I gave myself up to try and find out what God wanted.

I simply want to say that I have been able to get a lot done. I've gotten to the point where I am able to inform you that you now have the option to make it. And you better do what you can, otherwise we really are going to be all through.

Goodnight
