THE BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY was chartered by an Act of the Pennsylvania Legislature, approved by Governor Francis R. Shunk, on the fifth day of February, 1846. In this volume of "Memorials" there is contained, besides the Commemoration Address by President Harris, a brief statement without comment of the events, year by year, during the fifty years of its legal existence. The names of all the trustees, curators, presidents, professors, alumni, and matriculates of the College are given, as well as of the principals of the Institute and Academy, and of the teachers who have served two years or more, and of the graduates of the Institute and School of Music. The names of the officers and students for 1895-96 are included. Specially instructive will be the "Comparison of the courses at different dates." The volume contains seventeen portraits of persons prominent in service for the institution during its first quarter century. The list might easily have been larger.

Commemoration Address.

DELIVERED JUNE 21, 1896.

BY JOHN H. HARRIS, LL. D.,

PRESIDENT OF BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY.

The real source of a river is to be sought, not in some Itasca lake, but in ten thousand springs from ten thousand hillsides, whence is gathered through myriad affluents the great current that bears on its bosom the commerce of States and nations. So in tracing the history of such an institution as this, we cannot say that in the thought or purpose of this one or of that, it was born, nor in this nor in that place. All the drops coming from the clouds, gathered from whencesoever they may, form the river, so wherever the fundamental ideas and motives of Christian liberal education are found, there is found the origin of this institution. Nor can any one say whether this person had more or that one less in the founding of it. Whose gift was largest, a glance at the treasurer's books will disclose; whose sacrifice was the greatest, whose service most consecrated is not to be thus discovered; whose was the effectual prayer which availed is known only to Him who answered it. We will, therefore, not concern ourselves to-day with details of deeds or eulogies of persons. Outward deeds are but the husks of history; history itself consists in ideas and spiritual potencies.

History is consequently concerned only with man and with human institutions. Man alone in this world is a free cause. He alone forecasts the years and builds intelligently for the future. He alone acts according to ideas, and his institutions are the embodiment of his ideas. A history of an institution will consequently be an exposition of the fundamental conceptions embodied in it, and will set forth in what way and to what extent the ideas have been realized, and in the light of these ideas will forecast the future. For all history is prophecy and is valuable chiefly for that reason.

I. There are, as I can conceive, embodied in this Bucknell University, the fiftieth year of whose legal existence we celebrate, three fundamental conceptions.

1. This school is consecrated to liberal education. It regards man as formed for freedom and educates him into freedom. Man is not the slave of nature, but is born for dominion over nature. He is not even the servant of nature, but is the servant of God alone. He is consequently not to be used as a means, as an instrument, nor to be treated as a thing. He is of more worth than the world of things. This regard for the worth of man, irrespective of race, nationality, sex or condition—a regard which lies at the basis of liberal education—is of Christian origin. If we would find its source, we must traverse the ages back to Bethlehem. We will have to listen to the words of John, fittingly called the Divine. The Word—who was with God and was God—became flesh and dwelt among us. In this fact is the germ of all education of man as man. It stamps man as of unmeasured worth. The man is not merely more than nature, he is also more than institutions. We do not educate for the State as an end, nor for the Church. We would not morally or mentally emasculate the man that the Church might be served, or even saved. The Church is for man, not man for the Church. The man is also more than his class or his vocation. As promoters of liberal education, we do not inquire what the man's position is or is to be. Liberal education is distinguished from caste education. The Hindoos educate for the caste. Each man's place is determined by his birth. His education, his morality, his vocation are thereby pre-determined. The treasures of thought are not common property, but are the possession of the higher caste alone. If a member of the lowest caste should hear the Vedas read, he must have molten lead poured into his ears. Caste education has its spring in the requirement that each one shall perfect himself in the labor allotted to him. An attempt is made in our day to establish caste education in the West. Herbert Spencer lends the weight of his name and the persuasiveness of his eloquence to diffusing the idea. Many advocate it without having penetrated the meaning of the movement. Prepare a man from his birth for his future calling is the cry. But to do so, the man's calling must be chosen for him. On the other hand, Christian education, regarding the man as more than his calling, breaks down caste by annihilating its principle. Educate the man. Develop his powers. Enlarge his personality. Later he may choose his vocation and train himself for it, and he will be all the better minister, or lawyer, or mechanic, or farmer for having been first developed as a man. How much would have been lost to America if the caste system of education had prevailed, and Franklin and Hamilton and Lincoln and Moody had followed the calling into which they were born.

But while Christian education favors and regards as indispensable the training of the mind into insight into principles and power of independent thought, it lays chief stress on the moral and religious element. The former element is a sword only, keen and tempered; but it is no less important that the sword be rightly used than that it be well tempered and keen. Character is of more importance than knowledge and must be made first in education. The great Lawgiver as He sat on Mount Hattin declared that in the kingdom which is to rule the earth character is first. He pronounced as of that kingdom and, therefore, blessed, those who are meek, merciful, and pure. In so doing He not only re-enacted the law given on Sinai, but revealed a still older code, one built into the constitution of the human soul as it came from the hand of God in whose image it was created; and, hence, the law of the creation and of Sinai and of Hattin is as old and enduring as God Himself. But Christ not only taught the law and lived it, but was it. Hence, Christian education has a definition of character in the character of Christ, whom it sets forth as the ideal of manhood into which the man is to be transformed. To the idea that character is more than skill, philosophy also is coming. The social mechanism, says Herbert Spencer, rests almost wholly upon character. The world of worths, according to Lotze, is the key to the world of forms. In other words, the foundation of the universe is laid in righteousness, and character is its goal. Now it is for character that a Christian college exists. To be sure, there must be training of the intellect, and in resources for attaining this end the Christian college should stand in the first rank. That a college exists for character is no excuse for poor buildings, scant libraries, insufficient apparatus, meagre courses, and obsolete methods. For such a high result these should be of the best. For in saying that character is highest we do not imply that intellectual insight is low. If we can have but one we will choose character. But they are not incompatible. We can have both, and the Christian college should keep both steadily in view. Technical or special skill, however, belongs to the professional or technical school, and for that the technical school exists. The college training precedes technical training both in time and importance.

2. The Christian education does not make the perfection of the individual its sole aim. It trains men for service. It is essentially missionary, apostolic. When Jesus after the night of prayer called to Him the twelve, He named them apostles. Thus He broke with Judaism both in organization and in spirit, and began the distinctively Christian dispensation, and with it everything fundamentally Christian, including Christian education. The Jewish spirit was exclusive, the Christian missionary. The Greek valued, not individuals, but the individual, the wealthy, the well-born. For all others, the defective, the poor, the slave, the artisan, the trader, the woman, there was no place in the Greek idea of education. The Christian spirit, on the other hand, is missionary. Go ye into all the world, and go teaching all nations. The Christian education is thus essentially apostolic. Each college is a missionary centre. It is conducted as a benevolence. Its buildings are erected by gifts from generous Christian givers. It needs endowments and receives them from the same source. Its professors are often its sole endowment. In the early history of Washington College men of such moral and intellectual eminence that they could educate and hold the lifelong respect of such men as Blaine and Bristow, served at a salary of four hundred dollars a year. The same spirit prevailed at Providence, at New Haven, at Hamilton, at Lewisburg. The missionary spirit of the professors pervaded the whole school. Men became heroic in the presence of self-devotion. This is a chief reason why the men of the earlier days were so deeply imbued with the missionary spirit. Hence, they went out and stimulated others to seek liberal culture. Thus the whole region round about became fructified. Each college created its own environment. It was not a question whether this institution or some other should educate those who came here. If this institution had not been founded three-fourths of those who have been educated here would have received no liberal education whatever. All the power which has gone forth from this centre for the uplifting of society, for the healing of the nations, would have been wanting to the world.

3. A liberal education is called Christian, not only because of the value it puts upon human worth and because of its missionary character, but also because of the principle and goal of its activity. Christian education finds its principle and goal in Christ. It recognizes the need of more than science and philosophy for the perfecting of character. It takes its watchword from the discourse with Nicodemus. While the work of the Christian college is education, its starting point is regeneration. After this it aims to form the man according to the type of Christ. This type, however, is broad enough and high enough and deep enough to include every excellence possible to man. No doubt a chief purpose of liberal education, from the intellectual point of view, is training the mind for insight into principles and thus laying the foundation for further progress. Only thus can the mind realize its freedom, and gain over nature and self the mastery for which it is designed. But to rational inquiry in every sphere of thought Christian education would be the last to interpose a barrier. Ecclesiastical authority has too often said, Thus far, no farther, but a hierarchy is not the Church, and ecclesiasticism is not Christianity. Nowhere should the fundamental questions of philosophy and life be discussed with more freedom than in the Christian school. There, if anywhere, should all questions be reverently thought through to the finish. No thinking will go beyond God. No true thinking will turn aside from God, nor will fundamental thinking stop short of Him. But the purpose of Christian education is not deep thinking and high imagining alone, but it is also and chiefly moral worth. Moral worth for the Christian finds its definition and example in Christ. The Christian education, therefore, makes its goal the transformation of the renewed man into the image of Christ. It includes the just and harmonious development of the whole of man's complex nature. That nature each man, according to the Christian idea, has received as a trust to be developed according to the will of the Giver. According to the same idea, the Christian school, its Trustees and Faculty, receive the youth, each of them of immeasurable worth and with an immortal destiny, as a solemn trust, the most solemn that man can take upon himself, to lead them into all fullness and completeness and pureness of manhood in the Son of man. In accomplishing this high task, the Christian education must look to a Power above itself. Education takes a second place in the work of human development. It does not claim for itself the first. The first place is given to the gospel of regeneration. This is the power of God and the wisdom of God, which is higher than the power of man and the wisdom of man. This beginning in the man of a life from above is indispensable to the right development of man, not only ethically, but also intellectually. Until the keystone is placed the whole arch must rest on frail timbers. Not in vain was it said, Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Not only is purity of heart necessary to seeing God, but also to discerning God's ways; to the knowledge of self and of the world. So it stands true for the stars above and for the earth beneath, for the movements of nations and the unresting soul of man, for the world which God has made and for God who made the world that it is the Spirit sent forth from Him, that guides in all the truth.

II. The most complete realization of the foundation ideas of an institution must still be imperfect. Yet, as I meditate upon those ideas, I cannot but feel that the exposition of them is an exhibition of the life of this institution. From the beginning it has stood for liberal education. It has been conducted as a benevolent, missionary enterprise. Men have been educated here to work for others. It has found the principle and inspiration of its life in Christ. In the founding of such an institution, there are two principal factors to be considered, to which may be added the outworking of the institution upon the world.

I. The external factor includes all those agencies which work upon the institution from without. Primary among these is the religious denomination with which it is connected, and which is responsible for its character and growth. The religious denominations in America have been pioneers in education, especially in the higher education. The Baptists, in the early history of the country, were few in number. In 1784 there were only 471 churches and 35,000 members in the United States. The first Baptist church in Pennsylvania was organized in 1684. The Baptists of the Philadelphia Association opened an academy in 1756, at Hopewell, New Jersey. Rev. Morgan Edwards, pastor of the first Baptist church, Philadelphia, projected a college, which was finally located at Providence, Rhode Island, and is now Brown University. In its charter is this noteworthy provision which has formed the keynote in all Baptist institutions: "Into this liberal and catholic institution shall never be admitted any religious tests. But on the contrary, all members hereof shall forever enjoy full, free, absolute, and uninterrupted liberty of conscience. Sectarian differences shall not make any part of the public and classical instruction." This was in 1764. In 1818, Dr. William Staughton and Professor Irah Chase organized a theological class in Philadelphia. This was removed to Washington city, and in 1821 appeared as Columbian University. In 1832, the Northumberland Baptist Association proposed a "Manual Labor Academy," which was waived in favor of the institution at Haddington. When this failed, the Northumberland Association, in 1845, renewed the effort, and began the enterprise which has resulted in the Bucknell University.

The Bucknell University, though coming later than the Madison and Columbian Universities, is a result of the same intellectual and moral uprising which characterizes this century, and which has shown itself in the Home and Foreign missionary movement, in the development of Sunday-schools, and, later, of the Young Men's Christian Association and young peoples societies within the Church ; in the temperance reform ; in the interest in the slave ; in the establishment of systems for the education of all the people by the State. This movement, which is transforming the world, has a distinctively religious basis. The colleges for the Christian education of the young rest upon the same foundation. There was a widespread feeling among the Baptists of Pennsylvania and New Jersey that they should do their part in this work. If it was regarded as a burden, they should not shrink from bearing their part ; if it was a privilege, they should claim a portion ; if it was a means of influence, they should have their share. The Baptists of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware formed the potential basis of the institution. That the potential was changed into the actual was due largely to Rev. William Shadrach. He had been pastor in Pittsburg, and was, in 1847, pastor in Philadelphia. He had the confidence as few other men of the denomination throughout the State. Rev. Eugenio Kincaid and he traversed the State, visiting nearly all the churches and the homes of many of the people. Four thousand four hundred and eighty-four different persons subscribed to the first $100,000. The work done by Doctor Shadrach and Doctor Kincaid has been of incalculable value to the institution. The bonds between the school and the hearts of the people of the two commonwealths forged by these men have never been broken. This is the real foundation of the institution, broad, deep, and enduring. This has given it prosperity and power, this guarantees its perpetuity. The vital connection between the college and the homes of the commonwealths has been maintained. Young men and young women have come from these homes, and have brought with them the hearts of the parents ; they have returned, and have carried Bucknell back with them in their hearts ; they have founded homes of their own, and have made the name of their Alma Mater familiar within its walls as a household word. Thus a school creates its own environment. Thus its constituency enlarges with the years, the interest broadens, and thus, grounded in the hearts of its denominational constituency, and in the hearts of its sons and daughters, it attains to an almost indestructible life.

Nor is it a matter of small consequence to the school that the people of the neighborhood are friendly. The people of Lewisburg contributed over $12,000 toward the first $100,000 for endowment. Soon after one hundred and fifty-five of them (so general was the interest), contributed $14,340 to the building fund of $30,000. In every subsequent effort they have borne their part. It is of consequence, both to the town and the school, that this good feeling continue. The prosperity of the one is the prosperity of the other. This is true, not only in the material, but also in the spiritual. There is a constant inter-action between the school and the town, which, if the influence be of the right kind, cannot but prove beneficial to all.

The Board of Trustees is the more immediate organ of the denomination and of the public in the administration of the University. The Trustees have the management of the funds, and care of the property; they appoint and remove members of the faculty; in them is vested the function of legislation. Upon them depends, therefore, in great measure the welfare of the institution. It is cause for thankfulness that in the boards of our University have sat men of unquestioned integrity, of commanding ability, such as to draw to the institution the confidence of the public. Nearly every man of financial strength in the denomination in the two States has been connected with the Bucknell University as contributor or trustee.

2. The Board of Trustees forms the connecting link between the external and internal factors. While the external factors make the school, the teachers and students are the school. It is no unimportant fact for the Bucknell University that so large a proportion of its students come from Christian homes. The present year fifty-eight came from the homes of Christian ministers. Young people coming from the atmosphere of the Christian home, of the Sunday-school and the Church, have a consecration and a conscientiousness not found in others less favorably nurtured. Most of the students are, or become while here, professing Christians. These young men, for whatever vocation preparing, give tone and character to the whole school. They maintain prayer-meetings, they support the Young Men's Christian Associations, they become pupils and teachers in the Sunday-schools, they engage in various kinds of religious work in the neighboring towns, they labor personally with fellow-students. This is the history in brief of the school from the foundation. It is a record of continuous work, year in year out, for fifty years. As a consequence the great majority of those who have come here without a personal faith in Christ have been led to accept Him as Saviour and Lord. The present year fully nine-tenths of the students are professing Christians.

This evangelistic spirit and work reinforces powerfully the intellectual life of the students. To this it is due, in great part, that the students of Bucknell University have been distinguished for hard work. When a man puts his conscience into his work, especially when he regards life as a Divine vocation, he will not do his work with eye service as a pleaser of men, but with singleness of heart, as unto God. Another capital reason for this spirit of work is, that most of our students are from families of moderate means. Their future is not made for them; they must make it for themselves. Such men are the coming leaders of the world. To induce such men to enter its classes, our oldest American university expends annually $75,000 to $80,000. Since it has adopted that policy its graduates are again taking the lead in every vocation. Our attendance is composed almost wholly of such men. Consequently the faithful, hard-working student at Bucknell is not regarded as an oddity, as is the case in some colleges, but work here has always been regarded as honorable and the worker has not been despised. This is as true to-day of Bucknell as it has ever been. An examination of the records shows that the percentage of hard-working students is as great as at any time in the history of the institution. The introduction of electives has also quickened the mental life of the institution, and broadens greatly the student's conception of the field of knowledge. I dwell thus upon the character of the students who come here, and the spirit which prevails because of their supreme importance as educational factors. The students educate and form one another. The other chief element in the life of the school is the men who teach. Education is not the acquisition of knowledge. Teaching is not the professor's chief function. He ought to be an educator, and education is dynamical. The professor educates by what he is; by what he is as a student and scholar, still more by what he is as a man. His mental force, his power of will, his self-command, his social tact, above all his warm sympathy, are much more potential in education, and much more valuable than learning and intellectual acumen. It is in the character of the professors that the Christian school should be pre-eminent. It is a mooted question what part of the curriculum should be given to religious instruction. What place shall the Bible have? Many think that if there could be daily recitations in the Bible, in all the classes, that the school would be pre-eminently Christian. I do not disparage Bible-study in the college; on the contrary, I favor it. Yet you might have the Bible given as prominent a place as the most ardent advocate of such teaching would ask, and the school be atheistic. The only place in the Christian school that the Christian religion can have, so that Christ will be first and last and all, is in the heart of every teacher and student. Then every subject studied and taught will be Christian. When Professor Bliss teaches Demosthenes and Plato, it is Christian oratory and philosophy that is taught, because of the manifestation of Christ in every word, tone, and act of the teacher. When Professor Grier teaches Latin, it becomes Christian Latin; when Professor Tustin teaches Science, it becomes Christian Science; when Professors Smith and Lowry teach Literature, it becomes Christian Literature; when Professors Taylor and James teach Mathematics, it becomes Christian Mathematics; when Presidents Malcom and Loomis teach Philosophy, it becomes Christian Philosophy. Of course, in emphasizing character, we do not undervalue scholarship; we must have both. And when we speak of character, we do not mean innocence or harmlessness. The last place for a merely harmless man is in the college. The college needs the man of positive righteousness—robust in faith, energetic in action, stimulating in thought. Such men in our schools of learning become of priceless value to the students, and through them to the world.

3. For we are not to conceive of the Bucknell University as limited to this town. The school must have its centre somewhere, and in the course of events this school is centred here. But it is not thus limited in its scope. Each man who goes out from its halls becomes a centre of influence—becomes himself a teacher. So we may regard the Faculty of Bucknell University as encircling the world. There is no vision so keen that it could from any coign of vantage, however high, perceive the whole of the work this University is now doing. Look to the east and north, through New Jersey to Maine; look southward, through Virginia and the Carolinas to Florida; survey Tennessee and the Gulf States; glance over the great North-central States, from Kentucky to Michigan; traverse the great plains and plateaus of the West to California and Alaska; look northward through the British Provinces, southward through Cuba and Mexico, and the Republics of Central and South America, and there is no State, no Territory, no province, scarcely a republic, in which during these fifty years an impulse from this institution has not been felt through the presence of some one of her sons or daughters. If this were all, it would be much. But you may spread out the globe like a map and note its islands and empires; look at its Japan, and China, and Central and Farther India, and Australia and Africa, and the islands of the sea, and not one of these is stranger to the influence which has gone out from this institution! Her line has gone out through all the earth, and her words to the end of the world. Or, looked at from another point of view, her voice has been heard through her sons in both houses of Congress, in the legislatures of many of the States, on the judges' bench, in the pulpit, at the bar, by the bedside of the sick, in a thousand homes, cheering, comforting, helping, pointing the way of life. This is but the beginning. Only fifty years. This is but a span in the life of a college. Princeton this year celebrates its one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, and is only a child yet; Harvard but recently commemorated her quarter of a thousand years; but Oxford, which still flourishes in perennial youth, has on her campus ten centuries chronicled in stone. In building upon the foundation laid here we are not building for a decade or a century, but for a thousand years. Surely, in view of results so far-reaching, of potencies so mighty, of outgoings so beneficent, we may well say that no privilege can be accorded to man greater than the privilege of having part in founding and carrying forward such an institution as this.

III. The perpetuity of an institution depends upon its fundamental ideas and its faithfulness to them. If the ideas for which it stands are of high and perpetual significance, and it is faithful to them, it will endure. Education will be a chief concern of man as long as the race continues. The child comes into the world ignorant and unformed, and must be instructed and formed. Capacity for education, general and special, is transmissible. The race will become more and more educable, but will never get beyond the need of education. The State is doing more, year by year, for education. This it does for three reasons; the political, because the intelligent are the best citizens; the industrial, because the ignorant artisan cannot compete in the world's market with the educated; the military, because bayonets which think will prevail. Sadowa and Sedan convinced Europe that an illiterate soldiery cannot face in the field an intelligent soldiery. So France, Italy, and England, adopted in 1870 systems of national education. But these reasons do not give liberal education. Liberal education is education into inner freedom (to which the outer must in the end conform), and there can be no education into freedom with the professor's chair chained to the throne of the king or of the caucus. Nor do such reasons lead to universal education; they do not apply to women. Much less do they lead to Christian education. It was not by accident but of inner necessity, not exceptional but universal, that Herod could not tell where the Christ should be born. It is not the function of the State to answer that question. Yet man's religious nature is the highest in him. For the State, also, religion is more important than supremacy in wealth or arms. The State reposes upon the ethical, and the ethical rests upon the religious. The conservation and strengthening of the ultimate foundation depends upon the Church and the Christian school. As a matter of fact, ethics is either not taught at all in the State colleges, or is treated historically, or is taught as pagan—Christian ethics has no place in them. There will remain this great field for the Christian school to cultivate. If the school fills the place with fidelity, it will endure. Money will be forthcoming for its endowment; friends will arise for its support. Those whom the institution has formed will in turn be the supporters and formers of the institution. They will take their place with others in the boards of trustees and in the faculties of instruction, and they will influence its life through a thousand channels. There is more danger that an institution may not continue sufficiently plastic and adapt itself to the changing conditions of society and knowledge, than that it will depart from its fundamental conceptions.

We may expect then that our Bucknell University—the fruit of so much sacrifice, hallowed by so many prayers, the child of so great faith, the mother of so many loyal sons and loving daughters—will continue in its beneficent course through the coming ages, faithful to its great mission, the development of Christian manhood; never forgetful of Him who is the source of spiritual life, the type of morality, the goal of ethics, the risen and reigning Son of God.

DAVID JAYNE, M. D., LL. D.

Trustee, 1851-1866.

Annals of Bucknell University.

1845. The Northumberland Association appointed a committee consisting of William H. Ludwig, M. D., Rev. Charles Tucker, Rev. J. E. Bradley, Rev. J. G. Miles, and James Moore, Sr., which reported, August 14th, that "A high school for males, another for females, a college, and also a Theological Institute" should be established in Central Pennsylvania. On December 27th Prof. Stephen W. Taylor accepted the position of General Agent.

1846. The charter of the University at Lewisburg was signed on February 5th by the Governor of Pennsylvania. Stephen W. Taylor was elected Principal of the school.

October 5th. The school was opened in the basement of the Baptist Church.

1847. College classes are organized.

December 4th. "Calliopean Literary Society" organized. College prayer-meeting established by Messrs J. N. Folwell, T. C. Trotter, and A. J. Hay.

1848. The Academy building completed at a cost of $8,000.

1849. The $100,000, required by the charter, secured. Lewisburg paid in $12,131. New Jersey, for a professorship, $10,720. The principal subscribers to this fund were: David Jayne & Sons, $12,500; John P. Crozer, $7,500; William Bucknell, $5,000; Thomas Wattson, $2,000; James Moore, Sr., $1,500, and John C. Davis, Martin Bell, Washington Butcher, W. W. Keen, Rev. Samuel J. Cresswell, Adam Johnston, Israel E. James, William H. Ludwig, Samuel Wolfe, James Moore, Jr., Levi B. Christ, Joseph Meixell, Benjamin Bear, each $1,000.

The labor of raising this sum was performed chiefly by Rev. William Shadrach, and Rev. Eugenio Kincaid.

Rev. George R. Bliss, A. M., was elected Professor of Greek, Rev.

George W. Anderson, A. M., Professor of Latin, and Isaac N. Loomis, A. M., Principal of the Academy.

1850. The west wing of the college completed. Cost, $12,000.

1850-51. On motion of Hon. James Buchanan, LL.D. (afterward President of the United States), degrees were conferred upon the first class presented for graduation, seven in number. Dr. Taylor resigned to accept the presidency of Madison University. Howard Malcom, D. D., LL. D., succeeded him, and became the first president of the University. Charles S. James, A. M., was elected Professor of Mathematics, and Alfred Taylor, A. M., Professor of Belles-lettres. A three years' course in Science was established, leading to the degree of Sc. B. The Theta Alpha and Euepia Literary Societies were established.

Attendance—College, 61; Academy, 117; Female Institute, 48. Total, 226.

1851-52. Howard Malcom, D. D., LL. D., President. Forty-five thousand dollars raised for buildings. Harvey D. Walker, A. M., Principal of the Academy. Ladies' Institute moved into the building corner Second and St. Louis Streets. Miss Hadassah E. Scribner, Principal.

Attendance—College, 64; Academy, 57; Female Institute, 18. Total, 139.

1852-53. Alfred Taylor, A. M., Professor of Belles-lettres, resigned.

Attendance—College, 83; Academy, 80; Female Institute, 48. Total, 211.

1853-54. Rev. George W. Anderson, A. M., Professor of Latin, resigned. Rev. Justin R. Loomis, Ph. D., elected Professor of Science. Miss Amanda Taylor, Principal of the Institute.

Attendance—College, 80; Academy, 66; Female Institute, 61. Total, 187.

1854-55. Theological Department established; Rev. Thomas F. Curtis, A. M., Professor. First class, two in number, graduated from the Institute.

Extracts from the Charter.

The said University shall be under the management, direction, government, and supervision of a number of trustees, not exceeding twenty-five, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum.

At least four-fifths of the trustees shall be members of regular Baptist churches.

The trustees have power of electing trustees in the place and stead of those who shall decline serving, resign or die, or whose places become vacant from any other cause ; of electing or appointing the president, professors, tutors, and other teachers of said University ; of agreeing with them for their salaries and stipends ; of removing them for misconduct, breaches of the ordinances of the institution, or other sufficient causes ; of appointing committees of their own body, to carry into effect all the resolutions of the Board ; of appointing a chairman, secretary, treasurer, and other officers necessary for managing the concerns of the corporation ; of providing for the maintenance and observance of discipline in said University, and of prescribing and inflicting the penalties due all violations of rules, ordinances or regulations thereof, or to other misconduct committed by students or other persons thereat ; and generally the majority of the voices of the Board, or quorum of said trustees, at any stated or extra meeting, shall determine all matters and things (although not herein specified), which shall occasionally arise and be incidentally necessary to be determined by said trustees : Provided, The said laws, rules, and ordinances, or any of them, be not repugnant to the laws and constitution of the United States of America, or to the laws and constitution of this Commonwealth.

As soon as said trustees shall have obtained in the form of subscriptions believed to be valid the amount of one hundred thousand dollars, they shall purchase a lot or farm and proceed to erect thereon suitable buildings for the use and benefit of said University, to procure the requisite library, apparatus, and specimens in natural history, and shall exercise their own judgment and discretion in so doing, as likewise in the general management and disposition of the funds of said University; Provided, however, said trustees shall exact from their treasurer adequate security for all moneys and other property of the institution which he may at any time receive; Provided, also, that if any person contributing to the funds of said institution, indicate a special appropriation of the amount so contributed, said contribution, if accepted, shall be disposed of in strict accordance with the evident intent or expressed wish of the contributor. And Provided, too, that said trustees shall not for any cause, or under any pretext whatever, encumber by mortgage, or otherwise, the real estate or other property of said institution; and that they shall not involve it in any debt which they have not the means of paying, consistently with the restrictions above mentioned.

The president and professors for the time being shall constitute the faculty of the University, and they together with the tutors and other teachers in their respective departments shall have the power of enforcing the rules and regulations adopted by the trustees for the government and instruction of the students; and the faculty, with the counsel and consent of a quorum of the trustees, shall have the power to grant and confirm unto students of the University, or others deemed worthy, such degrees in the liberal arts and sciences or in certain branches thereof, as have been usually granted in other Universities; to grant likewise to said graduates diplomas under the common seal of the corporation, in order to authenticate and to perpetuate the memory of such graduation; and to grant, also, certificates to such students as have duly completed the course of studies prescribed in any subordinate department of the University.

No misnomer of the said corporation shall defeat or annul any gift, grant, devise or bequest to or from the said corporation; Provided, The intent of the parties shall sufficiently appear upon the face of the gift, grant, will or other writing whereby any estate or interest was intended to pass to or from said corporation.

No religious sentiments are to be accounted as a disability to hinder the election of an individual to any office among teachers of the institution, or to debar persons from admittance as students in any department of the University.
