Subject: Resolution Confirming Invalidity of Imperial Rescript on Education.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

FACILITIES BRANCH

The Honorable
The Secretary of State,
Washington.

Sir:

I have the honor to enclose copy of a translation of a joint resolution (together with one copy of the original Japanese text) adopted by the House of Councillors and the House of Representatives of the Japanese Diet on June 19, 1948, confirming the invalidity of the Imperial Rescript on Education and of other Imperial Rescripts and Edicts. As the Department is aware, the Education Ministry issued instructions in November 1945 that the reading of the Rescript in schools and on ceremonial occasions was no longer compulsory. In May 1948, members of the education committees of the Diet charged that these instructions were not obeyed in some schools and other institutions. During subsequent discussions in the Diet, it has been claimed that the rescript runs counter to Article 98 of the new constitution which provides that "no law, ordinance, imperial rescript, or other action of Government, or part thereof, contrary to the provisions of the Constitution, shall have legal force or validity".

The resolution adopted confirms that the Imperial Rescript on Education, together with other Imperial Rescripts and Edicts as the Imperial Rescript granted to the Men of the Army and Navy, the Imperial Edict of 1908, and the Imperial Rescript granted to Youths and Students, has been abolished and is null and void. The resolution further states that all copies of the rescripts and edicts will be recalled and that all people are expected to concentrate on popularizing the ideals set forth in the Basic Education Law.

There has been some discussion in Japan as to whether a new educational charter is needed, but the consensus appears to be that the Constitution and the Basic Education Law already contain all the essential precepts for education in a democracy. An editorial in the June 1, 1948 issue of the Asahi (five copies enclosed) points out that issuance of another document would be superfluous and goes on to say that it is more necessary to appreciate the spirit of the Constitution and the Basic Education Law than to write a new charter on the subject.

We believe that the adoption of the joint resolution was warranted by the tendency of the Japanese people to retain respect for the rescripts which were obstacles to the inculcation of democratic ideas. With wide dissemination in Japan of the resolution, it is hoped that the Japanese people will at long last become convinced of the invalidity of the rescripts and look to the provisions of the Basic Education Law for guidance in the education of their children.

Respectfully yours,

W. J. Sebald

Enclosure No. 1 to Despatch No. 389 dated June 25, 1948 from the Office of the Political Adviser for Japan, Tokyo, on the subject, "Resolution Confirming Invalidity of Imperial Rescript on Education".

RESOLUTION CONCERNING CONFIRMATION OF THE INVALIDITY OF THE IMPERIAL RESCRIPT ON EDUCATION, etc.

In pursuance of the universal principle of mankind elucidated by the Constitution of Japan, we have already legislated the Fundamental Law of Education, in which we have solemnly declared the educational ideal to foster a people eager to seek truth and peace, eradicating completely and thoroughly the past errors in education centering upon our State and our race.

The Imperial Rescript on Education, together with such other Imperial Rescripts and Edicts as the Imperial Rescript granted to the Men of the Army and the Navy, the Imperial Edict of 1908, and the Imperial Rescript granted to the youths and Students, has been already abolished and has become null and void.

However in consideration of mis-understandings that might still be held by some people as if those Rescripts still preserve the same validity as hitherto, we confirm the fact that they have already become null and void, and we will cause the Government to recall all the copies of the Imperial Rescript on Education and other Imperial Rescripts and Edicts.

We expect all the people to make concentrated efforts for through-going popularization of the ideals of the new education indicated in the Fundamental Law of Education so that the real authority of education may be set up and the national morality enhanced.

We are resolved as above.

NEW EDUCATIONAL CHARTER UNNECESSARY

ASAHI—The proposal made by the education committees of both Houses of the Diet to scrap the Imperial Rescript on Education is very welcome. It is to be hoped that some appropriate steps will be taken to inform the public thoroughly of the fact that the Rescript has become completely null and void.

After the copies of the Educational Rescript have been withdrawn from all educational institutions and its invalidation confirmed, there still remains one problem, that is, whether a new educational charter befitting a democratic Japan is necessary or not. Those in favor of a new charter take the stand that inasmuch as mere proclamation of the invalidation of the Rescript falls short of eradicating the deep-rooted influences it has had in the minds of the public; it is appropriate to ordain a new charter to reorient the educators and the general public for democratic concepts of education.

What, then, should be contained in such a document? We have the new Constitution and the Basic Education Law. The Constitution solemnly ordains popular sovereignty, renunciation of war, pious hope for eternal peace and banishment of tyranny and slavery, oppression and intolerance, whereas the Basic Education Law provides for respect for the dignity of the individual, aspirations to truth and peace and educational principles for the creation of worthy culture. What else besides these precepts can the new educational charter provide for? Issuance of another document would only mean a superfluous addition and add to the perplexity on the part of educators and the general public.

It is more necessary thoroughly to appreciate the spirit of the Constitution and the Basic Education Law than to write a new charter on education.

INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

This study was made to fill a critical need in the field of Japanese education. The statistical procedures and products of record-keeping in Japan have been entirely inadequate. The Ministry of Education maintains no records of schools not under its direct control, with the result that for information concerning nearly all schools of the elementary and secondary levels, and many institutions of the higher educational level, one must depend upon the prefecture. Even at that source there are no complete records. In almost any area of education, one must collect data from the original sources. One serious gap in the records has been the lack of a list of all educational institutions in Japan. It is this major void which this study is intended to fill.

SCOPE

The results of this study were originally set up as two projects, a "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, and "Statistical Tables for Japanese Educational Institutions" in 46 prefectural reports, with a summarizing report for the whole of Japan. A little trial use of the first finished reports indicated, however, that the two series would be more effective if combined. For that reason, the two reports for each prefecture have been consolidated into one report.

There are two summary statistical sections. Part One presents in six tables summary numerical and percent distribution data arranged as follows: level by types, control by level, and level by control. Part Two consists of six tables which summarize data by control jurisdiction according to level and type.

The "Roster of Japanese Educational Institutions" constitutes Part Three of this report. It is primarily a list of all institutions which are a part of the regular Japanese educational system, with significant data for each. The project is, in reality, an act of pioneering. In the course of its development, scattered and, in large degree, hitherto unclassified facts have been assembled and made available in an easily referable form. For the first time in the history of Japanese education, there is a composite list of all of the more than 40,000 educational institutions in Japan, a list which records for each its name, date of foundation, address,[1] enrollment by sex and by totals,[2] and the teaching force by sex, by full-time

1. The addresses of separate institutions supplied in this report will be more intelligible if the reader remembers that "cho" means "street," "mura" means "village" or "hamlet," "machi," means "town" or "small city," "gun" means "county" or "district," and "ken" means "prefecture."
2. The enrollment figures are not those of actual attendance on 30 April and 30 November 1946 respectively, but those of enrollment on the school records on these dates.

or part-time classification,[3] and by totals.

The roster is arranged according to prefecture, control jurisdiction, and school level. There are totals for every subheading, and subheading and grand totals for every main heading and for every prefecture. Grand totals have been worked out on two bases of organization, that of control jurisdiction and that of school level.

The two dates chosen as focal points in the collection of data, 30 April 1946 and 30 November 1946, were selected at the request of Education Division, Civil Information and Education Section, for purposes of comparison regarding developments in the educational program.

Since this series of reports is based upon data collected before changes in the organization of the educational system were effected, the categories used are those into which schools fell before the 6-3-3-4 system was inaugurated in Japan,[4] and the terms employed are translations of the Japanese nomenclature. The terminology used to indicate the broad levels of education are those currently used in the United States: elementary, including kindergarten, primary, and grammar grades; secondary, including high schools and preparatory schools; and higher, including schools of junior college, college, and university level.

Within each of these broad levels, however, terminology is not so simple or so clear. The various types of schools in Japan are numerous, over-lapping, and confusing to the uninitiated. Some of the group names mig[h]t out explanation. They are not un[known] even by the Japanese.

There are three control juris[dictions] in the educational system: (1) national, whi[ch] or Ministry of Education control, which conduct specialized educatio[n] control," or that exercised by [the] the central national level, su[ch] (ken), metropolis (to), city (sh[i] (mura); and (3) "private control." There are three control jurisdictions in the Japanese educational system: (1) national, which includes both "Government" or Ministry of Education control, and that of other ministries which conduct specialized educational institutions; (2) "public control," or that exercised by any level of government below the central national level, such as that by the prefecture (ken), metropolis (to), city (shi), town (machi), or village (mura); and (3) "private control." Schools of the three educational levels fall within these three control jurisdictions.

The Ministry of Education has exercised extensive powers in educational matters at all levels and over schools under all jurisdictions except those under other ministries. Through the use of standardized texts and curricula, and through directives of many sorts for every purpose, it has exerted tremendous control over even those schools supposedly under other jurisdictions. An unusual fact concerning this aspect of Japanese education is that control does not include financial support or appointing power for prefectural and local schools. Money for the maintenance of schools is appropriated by the national Government, and for all practical effects much of the control exercised over school matters is in the hands of the Ministries of Finance and of Home Affairs, who obtain their power through control of the national budget and of Civil Service appointment respectively. Within the limitations imposed by the powers of these two ministries, the Ministry of Education has enjoyed a high degree of centralized control. Its direct control, however, is applied only to a limited group of institutions.

4. As rapidly as possible the shinsei chu gakko (lower secondary school) and shinsei koto gakko (upper secondary school) system is being established, but practical difficulties have made it impossible to effect a complete change-over. The standardization of institutions on the higher education level as four-year degree granting institutions is also in progress, but the pace of this development, likewise, is limited by practical difficulties.

In 1946 the Ministry of Education exercised complete or "direct" control over only certain schools, mainly on the higher education level. These included the seven Teikoku daigaku (Imperial universities), which enjoyed generally accepted prestige as superior institutions for advanced learning, and the daigaku (ordinary universities), which were not granted such high favors either in personnel or equipment, and consequently were not accorded comparable esteem. These two types of universities were analogous roughly to both senior colleges and universities in the United States. Other types of schools under the complete control of the Monbusho were senmon gakko (colleges), which usually did not grant degrees, and, in many ways, corresponded to junior colleges, and koto gakko (higher schools), which were even more unclassifiable, being a kind of cross between preparatory schools and junior colleges. Also under Ministry of Education jurisdiction were koto shihan gakko (higher normal schools), or a level similar to that of senmon gakko, but with more specialized purposes, being established expressly for the purpose of training teachers, and shihan gakko (normal schools), at first considered of secondary level, but in 1935 placed on the higher education level. The course of study for shihan gakko was three years in length, whereas that for the higher normal schools was four years. Some special schools, such as mo gakko (schools for the blind), roa gakko (schools for the deaf and deaf mutes), and moa gakko (schools for the blind and mute), were under Ministry of Education jurisdiction.

Public control covered all institutions conducted and regulated by governmental units lower than the national level, i.e: prefectural, municip[al] Japan in 1946, public c[ontrol] school levels than did the higher education leve[l] schools, normal schools, types under the "direct c[ontrol]" with the exception of Im[perial] licly controlled institut[ions] ondary and elementary l[evel] schools) were numerous a[nd] were schools of high sc[hool] jo gakko (girls' high s[chool] substitutes for middle were institutions estab[lished] cation of students who [had] were unable to attend [day] often they were ni[ght] sc[hools] after 1941 called ko[kumin] yochien (kindergartens).

In Japan in 1946, public control covered a much wider range of school levels than did the Ministry of Education control. On the higher education level were universities, colleges, higher schools, normal schools, and a few special schools, all of the types under the "direct control" of the Ministry of Education, with the exception of Imperial universities. In addition, publicly controlled institutions included also schools of the secondary and elementary levels. Jitsugyo gakko (vocational schools) were numerous and varied. Chuo gakko (middle schools) were schools of high school level established for boys. Koto jo gakko (girls' high schools) were established for girls as substitutes for middle schools. Seinen gakko (youth schools) were institutions established to take care of the further education of students who had finished elementary training, but who were unable to attend regular schools of the secondary level. Often they were night schools. Sho gakko (elementary schools, after 1941 called kokumin gakko, or national schools) and yochien (kindergartens) require no special explanation.

Private control meant substantially what the term means in the States, control exercised by an individual or group of individuals independently of government on any level, with support coming from nongovernmental sources. The chief difference, however, between both public and private schools in Japan and public and private schools in the States, was that in Japan the central Governmental agency for education (the Ministry of Education) exerted much more power over the management of schools than does the Federal Government in the United States, a power which was described as "indirect control." The scope of jurisdiction for privately controlled institutions was identical with that of public jurisdiction, including institutions on all levels and of all types except Teikoku daigaku (Imperial Universities). The chart on pages iv to vi indicates by level the type of schools under each of the three control jurisdictions in 1946.

SOURCE OF DATA

The Ministry of Education, in serving as the data-collecting agent, has played an invaluable part in this work. In the summer of 1946 Ministry of Education officials and Civil Information and Education Section researchers evolved a form which served as the basis for securing the desired information. Through the Ministry of Education, prefectural education divisions, and local education officials, the data were gradually secured from the individual schools. Not enough can be said in praise of the patience and enthusiasm of the Ministry in their cooperation with Civil Information and Education Section to make this an accurate and effective study.

Throughout the preparation of this report, workers in Education Research were in constant touch with Ministry of Education officials to check the materials as they were received from the individual schools. Figures were carefully checked and scrutinized. As discrepancies or ambiguities in data were discovered they were rectified and clarified insofar as checking made correction possible. While a high degree of accuracy was thus achieved, the materials are still subject to the limitations inherent in Japanese statistics and in the reporting from individual schools.
