THE HEALTH OF THE CITY.

As had a case in New Orleans has shown everywhere beyond its immediate limits we venture to say there is no city that can boast of a more healthy condition than this. The statistics of the health of the city for the past year, as compared with the year 1896, show a marked improvement. The mortality rate has been reduced to a minimum, and the average number of deaths per 1,000 population is the lowest in the history of the city. This is due to the fact that the city has been blessed with a most healthy season, and the people have been unusually careful in their sanitary habits. The result is that the city is now in a more healthy condition than it has been for many years past.
