THE NATIONAL ART COMMITTEE

ORGANIZATION

In the Spring of 1919 it became evident to several lovers of American art that if the United States was to have a pictorial record of the World War it would be necessary immediately to send artists to Europe for that purpose.

The interest of a number of the distinguished leaders of America and of the Allied Nations was enlisted and their consent secured for the painting of the portraits by prominent American artists.

With the endorsement of the Smithsonian Institution as custodian of the National Gallery of Art, The American Federation of Arts, and the American Mission to Negotiate Peace then in session at Paris, the National Art Committee came into being for the purpose of carrying out this idea and thus initiating and establishing at Washington the National Portrait Gallery.

THE PRESENTATION PLAN

That the gift of these paintings to the National Portrait Gallery might be thoroughly National in character, it was decided that a group of these portraits, financed by the art patrons of any City, would be inscribed as presented to the National Portrait Gallery by that City and that a representative of that City should become an honorary member of the National Art Committee. It was further decided that a tablet or other permanent record in the National Portrait Gallery should bear the names of the members of the National Art Committee, including the chairmen of all local committees; and that there should be a record of the name of each subscriber to the purchase fund.
