HEADQUARTERS EAGLE PASS ARMY AIR FIELD

Office of the Commanding Officer

EAGLE PASS, TEXAS

To the Officers and Men of the Eagle Pass Army Air Field:

I wish to extend to the personnel of this field my appreciation of the untiring effort which has gone into making this field a success, and I wish to congratulate you on the success that has been attained.

The Eagle Pass Army Air Field has come a long way since that November day it welcomed the first Aviation Cadet and began training. There is still a long way to go, a way that is to see sweat and toil and effort, for this business of turning out fighter pilots has no ending until the day the Axis is eradicated from the face of the earth.

I know that in the future such additional efforts and sacrifices as are required, whether it be here or on some combat front, will be forthcoming from the men of this command.

Colonel, A. C.,
Commanding.

JOHN H. BUNDY

COLONEL

Commanding

In this day of a budding young Air Force, Colonel John H. Bundy, Commanding Officer, is a veteran in every sense of the word. For since that day, 14 years ago, that he received his commission as a flying officer in the United States Army at Kelly Field, Texas, he has been on duty at stations throughout the United States and the Philippine Islands. Upon graduation from Kelly Field in 1929, Colonel Bundy served two years at Coronado, California; two more through 1933 at March Field, California; and then an overseas trip took him to Jap-ravaged Clark Field, Philippines, for the next two years. Back in the States, Colonel Bundy spent his next two years at Chanute Field, Illinois, and from 1936 to 1942 was stationed at Kelly Field, Texas, serving all along the line from flying instructor to director of training.

Colonel Bundy assumed command of the Eagle Pass Army Air Field—then a suite of offices in the town of Eagle Pass—early in July, 1942, and has nurtured the air field from the days when it was mesquite and cactus-covered grazing land until today when efficient operation make it a modern, scientific university for turning out fighter pilots.

A command pilot, Colonel Bundy is a graduate of Santa Clara with a bachelor's degree in Civil Engineering. He won four varsity football letters while at Santa Clara.

HISTORY OF EAGLE PASS ARMY AIR FIELD

Conceived in the vigor of this country at war and raised like the phoenix from the dust of mesquite-covered Texas plains along the Rio Grande, Eagle Pass Army Air Field stands now, eight months after it sent its first cadets into the air on training flights, a potent symbol of America's campaign against tyranny.

When the first class of aviation cadets—it was officially known as Class 43-A—arrived at the embryo flying school in November, 1942, there was talk of having to travel the last 50 miles to Eagle Pass by way of ox cart and raft. Geographically isolated the field was—and is. But that very fact was a cornerstone for the sound morale and healthy spirits which prevailed then, in November, 1942, and which prevail now.

Eagle Pass Army Air Field was new in November, although some of the personnel had been here since the previous month. It was painfully young, and was afflicted for a while with growing pains.

Construction workers had not yet finished grading and surfacing the streets, which were little more than wide, shallow ditches. The main hangar was not yet complete; and the recreation hall—now the field's pride and joy—was still a-building. Water was scarce almost to the point where a rationing program was needed. The chlorinating plant was unfinished, and pure water was imported and stored in lister bags hung on various barracks. The men could drink if they were able to find a lister bag with water left in it and had a cup to drink from.

But these inconveniences were minor and temporary. Superficially, the first class of cadets, as well as the rest of the personnel, had a difficult time for the first month or two. Forget that. The men who were here then and who are here now have forgotten it. Life at the newly-created Eagle Pass Field struck deeper and beyond physical discomforts. A kind of "in the same boat" philosophy came into ascendancy, and the officers, cadets and enlisted men functioned together as smoothly as the engine, propellor and rudder of an AT-6. Everyone from Colonel to buck private took pride in achievements—achievements which were becoming more numerous and more significant.

Aviation Cadet Class 43-A buried itself in the task of learning to become expert pilots of the slim, silvery advanced trainers. Planes took off at sunrise and came down at sunset, punctuating the Texas sky with their cheerful growl throughout the day. All day, that is, until night flying was begun; and then it was all day and most of the night.

Thanksgiving Day came, and Christmas, with no snow, ice or cold weather—strange winter holidays, these, to the men of Eagle Pass, most of whom have homes in the North.

Then, suddenly, it was January 14, graduation day for Class 43-A. That was the day when Eagle Pass Army Air Field's first cherished cadets put on their white gloves and marched in four ranks to the Post Theater for the graduation ceremonies which saw them receive their bright silver Wings and brand new commissions as officers.

That was the day, too, when the field paused momentarily in its labors and straightened its back to consider the good work of the previous two months. And it was good work; the class was graduated in its entirety. Every cadet who came to Eagle Pass in November left in January with his wings and gold bars. Class 43-A had successfully completed its training.

Graduation ceremonies on January 14 were held in the morning. In the afternoon, cadets of Class 43-B, upper-classmen now, were making echoes in the sky. Life and training was going on. That was typical of Eagle Pass.

Next in the recorded annals was the formal dedication of the field on February 16, 1943. Another class of cadets was graduated that day—Class 43-B—and its members sprouted their wings to stage a sparkling aerial revue in which they machine-gunned an oil-soaked cardboard replica of an Axis train carrying pictorial effigies of Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini. Satisfactory clouds of black smoke pillared into the air, and everybody loved the exhibition—including the newsreel cameramen who were there.

Another memorable day came early in May when Staff Sergeant Fred Ray proudly produced a colorful new lawnmower and began cutting the grass around Post Headquarters—the first grass on the field. It had been planted in late winter, and no one believed it would grow. But there it was in May, green and pleasant, getting its first haircut. Work was suspended for several minutes while everyone watched the mowing operations.

All this has been Eagle Pass, big events and little ones. The field works now with a smooth routine. Graduation ceremonies have begun to assume an aura of tradition, and have come to be the occasion of the month. Eagle Pass Army Air Field has renounced its swaddling clothes and donned its long pants. Dedicated to the idea of victory, it has taken a vital place in this nation at war.

Tito was a steer—part Brahma and part Longhorn—with a soulful, if somewhat blundering, mien. It may be said that he was a gentle steer, an active steer, a very extrovert of a steer. And during his brief sojourn in this life at Eagle Pass, he gladdened many a heart.

Tito came across the Rio Grande from south of the border to act as mascot for Eagle Pass Army Air Field. He was a gift of friends of the field from Rosita, Mexico.

A middle-aged steer at the time of his transfer to Eagle Pass, Tito arrived at his new home somewhat indifferently. He was seen first trundling pleasantly up the road to Post Headquarters in the custody of two rather impatient jeeps. From time to time he would shake his great curving horns at a plane overhead and bellow softly. He was thinking, perhaps, that all this was so sudden.

Tito, you must know, was tito in name only—that Spanish word being loosely translated "little one." He, as a matter of fact, was the biggest thing on the field, with the possible exception of the gas trucks. Comparable in size to Babe the Blue Ox, Tito was originally white in color, although the ravages of time and the weather had turned his coat into a nondescript camouflage grey. But big he was, with legs like pillars of marble, a neck like the Tower of David, and horns that appeared as though they might outspan the Colossus of Rhodes.

Albeit large, Tito was as a kitten by temperament. He would pace around the field in search of grass, and would consent, at times, to be led by the nose. He also posed obligingly for photographers.

Yet, in retrospect we see Tito as a tragic figure—a bovine Pagliacchi. For Tito is dead. He was struck by lightning one night during a rare thunderstorm. Next morning he was found, horns askew, eyes closed and tail still. His funeral elegy was written in the hearts of men.

AIRPLANE DOCTORS

"Airplane Doctors" is a title that could well be applied to the enlisted men of the air forces, because they are thoroughly trained in the general construction principles, minor repairs, adjustment, inspection and maintenance of the complete plane engine, and affiliated equipment. They are also trained in the care and use of material, tools and equipment used in the hangar. On the shoulders of these men rest the responsibilities of keeping that engine running or making any necessary repairs. Although Air Forces airplanes are of modern design and construction and capable of withstanding abuse and mistreatment, there is always a day of reckoning, and on that day the "Airplane Doctors" have to be ready to prescribe and administer to the ailing plane.

ALTO A LA GUARDIA

GUARDS
ON

Explaining the advantages of a modern air-cooled Browning machine gun over the hybrid 1905 German model that he used for 28 reliefless days in front of Madrid in the Spanish Civil War is Private Alfred Ripps. A member of the first unit of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, Ripps points out that there's not much chance of their guns jamming as did his repeatedly.

That worried look on the face of this cadet is understandable. That stuff beneath him is cactus, the prickly pear kind that boasts mighty sharp needles. The cactus is part of the Eagle Pass Army Air Field obstacle course, designed to combat-toughen future fliers for the rigors that await fighter pilots on the far-flung combat fronts.

Snapshots

Inspecting the guard of honor on his arrival at the Army Air Forces here recently is Major General Brandt. During General Brandt's previous tour of duty Eagle Pass was nothing but a wide expanse of mesquite-covered South Texas range land. In the ensuing 15 months, and under the guiding hand of Colonel Bundy, the mesquite-covered range has blossomed into a hub-bub of pilot-training activity.

Nitrogen is a package of life or death according to how it is wrapped. Life is dependent, more or less, upon fixed nitrogen in combination with other minor elements. Here soldiers study the use of unfixed nitrogen, a combination of nitrogen with antagonistic elements, in modern and destructive warfare.
