STATE CAPITOL BUILDING

The site for the city of Raleigh was purchased March 30, 1792, 1,000 acres, and 400 acres laid out, with streets and public squares. On Union Square the first State Capitol was built, at a cost of $20,000, this sum being the proceeds of the sale of lots to private individuals. This capitol was accidentally burned June 21, 1831. The present one, of granite from the State quarry on the eastern boundary of Raleigh, was begun July 4, 1833, and finished June 20, 1840, at the same time as the first railway to this city, the Raleigh and Gaston (now a link of the Seaboard Air Line), so there was a joint celebration of the double event. The cost of the capitol was $530,000. It has the honor of being one of the four most beautiful public buildings in America. Its architect was David Paton, a Scotchman, and the stone was cut and laid by workmen from Scotland, who came here for that purpose.

“Just a Little Different—Just a Little Better”

BIRTHPLACE OF JOEL LANE

The home of Joel Lane stands near the State's Prison, on West Martin Street. It was built about 1760. Wake County was formed March 2, 1771, and June 4 of that year the first county court was held in Lane's house, he being a member. The county-seat was established there and was named Bloomsbury, though it was usually called Wake Court House. In this house was held the last court under royal rule, March 5, 1775, and the first under the State form of government, June 3, 1776. That year the State Council of Safety met in it, and June 23, 1781, the General Assembly began a month's session there, being guarded by troops to prevent an anticipated raid by the "Tories." In 1788 a State Convention decided that a place must be fixed for the "unalterable seat of government, and ordered that this should be in Wake County," "in ten miles of Isaac Hunter's plantation." In 1791 a commission was named to buy the site, after choosing it, and March 30, 1792, this commission bought from Lane the site for $2,756.

BIRTHPLACE OF ANDREW JOHNSON

The house in which Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, was born now stands in Pullen Park, to which it was removed in 1906 from its location on West Lenoir Street by the Daughters of the American Revolution, aided by Mr. Thayer, of New York. The house is small, with a lower and an upper room, with tiny windows. The father of Andrew Johnson was Jacob Johnson, who is buried in the old or City Cemetery near its western side. His mother's maiden name was Polly McDonough, and she was married September 9, 1801. His father was the hostler and his mother the weaver at the inn, or hotel, of Peter Casso, which stands on Fayetteville Street next to the Capitol Square. Andrew was born in December, 1808; was apprenticed to a tailor in April, 1822, to learn the trade, and ran away in June, 1824. His father had died and his mother remarried. Andrew made his home at Greenville, Tenn., and in April, 1865, became President on the death of Abraham Lincoln. He visited Raleigh in 1867 to attend the dedication of the monument at the grave of his father.

STATE AGRICULTURAL BUILDING

The State Agricultural Department was formed, by law, in 1877, upon the beginning of the administration of Governor Z. B. Vance, with Col. Leonidas L. Polk as Commissioner of Agriculture. He established his office and the "State Museum" of Agriculture on the second floor of the Briggs building on Fayetteville Street. In 1885 Governor Jarvis purchased for the use of the Department of Agriculture the building on the north side of the Capitol, built in 1812 as the Eagle Hotel, and this building was enlarged, notably in 1901, when what was known as the Museum Annex was built on the north side. In 1922 the Agricultural Building was torn down, and in 1923 the present one of limestone was finished, five stories high, this having also room for the State Tax Commission and the various committees of the Legislature.
