Wa recommend to public attention the property advertised to be hold to-day at the exchange, by Tricou & Canonge. It consists of three valuable lots of ground situated in Royal between Damain and St. Philippe streets. Their proximity to the splendid buildings belonging to the architect company, and the beautiful dwelling-house lately erected by Di De Lacrois, considerably enhance their value.

We also call the attention to the sale, by the register wills, of the balance of the late Livermore's properties. For particulare, see bills.

The northern mail not coming to hand yesterday, we have had recourse to our English files of, papers, and have made selections therefrom not wholly devoid of interest.

REPOSTED FOR THE BEE.

The trial of Josephim Rupio for the murder of José Olivar, occupied the attention of the Criminal Court nearly the whole of yesterday. After a minute and clear investigation, in the good wishes of your reliable arrangements were made by Mesars Mazuren.

Following resists of shameful acts of proscription in New-York, resorted to by the slaves of the bank to control public sensitivent, and to force those in their employ to yield the no-ble privileges of flooman. It is true, that the agony has now passed and that the liberties of the poople are now accure; but such conditions that the liberties of the poople are now accure; but such conditions the portraits of the former Leing so large—eight times the size of the poople are now accure; but such conditions to provide and the poople are now accure; but such conditions to provide a provide and that the liberties of the poople are now accure; but such conditions to provide a provide and the poople are now accure; but such conditions to provide a pro N. FROM PORT-AU-PRINCE. -The following extract of a letter has been politely communicated to us for publication. It buars data "Pont-Ac-Paince, 24th March, 1834.

The chambers of commerce in Havro and Bordeaux, hawing demanded information from the minister of the marine Separtment, as to the relations existing between their goverament and that of Hayti; he replied that French commerce might without risk be continued between the two quatries. The king's government had no intention of committing a single act of hostility towards at of Hayti." We perceive, in scanning over our late English files, that

Mr. O'Conwell has introduced a bill in the British House of Commons to amend the libel laws, and to establish, to use his own expression, the liberty of the press. He proposes, among other things, to make truth the defence against general stander. This provise is stre monely objected to by the London Standard, on the ground that it places the character of every man as the mercy of any unprincipled journalist who may from malice, or other improper motive, wage war against it. There does not seem to us to be much force in this objection. The true-test of slander should, in our opinion, be its fairly, and that alone should determine the point, as a mat is slander and what is not. The penalt / or in-ing the reputation of an individual, by charging him with and the second of which ha is innocent, would deter any one from doing so; while the privilege of expressing the truth without fear of consequences, could not but exercise a most salutary influence upon the murals of the people, and prevent the commission, from the apprehension of exposure, of low and destardly acts on the part of those whose reputations were to themselves of the least moment. The other propositions of Mr. O'Connell is, to our thinking, equally judicious, and would doubtless be attended with the beneficial consequences he anticipates. We take the following summary, embracing his whole plan, from the London

To fix the legal definition of the offence of libe! issimilating it to that of slander,

To determine the boundary which separates public tion private libel and, in connection with appears to draw precise distinctions between principals and acceptance.

[To the Editor of the Bee.]

Sir—Being placed in the awkward and delicate predicament of hearing my own praises from morning till night, I am at a loss to know how to express my obligations to the many kind friends who continually surround me. This sione has kept me silent so long and will be an apology to those enthusiastic admi ers who ask if I never spicks. Things, how ver, have been said in our presence, which I scarcely think would have been untered, had the speaker reflected that "the stones themselves have earry," and I question rather if, in the multitude of flatterers, justice has been universally done to our real merits. How many can see nothing so worthy to admire in me as that I am "all of a piece," and that the texture of my Shetland horse is not to be mistaken for any other fabric!

Now, sir, I feel indebted to my maker for as personal a form as ever crossed the sark; and if I had not been thus, warmly clad, I can tell you that the shape and flexions of my lower timbs would be found meet for the finest stocking that we sever gattered with "flour soit qui mal y pense." Therefore, finding that we aroon the point of leaving town, and that one half wiso have slighted me in these particulars will not be able to crowed in upon me, during my two remaining the creatagy in New Orleans, however much they may be disposed to repair the oversight, and solare my wounded vanity, permit me to solicit justice through the medium of your valuability, and solare my two medium of your valuability and solare my two results and of your friend in free stone.

Miss Edgeworm.—The new novel from the pen of this now unrivalled novelist will appear in the course of the pe-sent month. rest to the lit rary world.

The forthcoming novel, called "The Guerrilla," is from the pen of Mr. Trucba. It will contain, we hear, not only an animated picture of the present state of Spain, which, coming from a Spaniarl, may be relied on for its fidelity, but a development of many interesting circumstances in in the life of Mina, and that of many other patriot chiefs whose adventures in their respective enterprises have assumed a highly romantic character. The author was the personal friend of several of the late Martyrs for their country's freedom, and in The Guerrilla will be embodied many of those striking and curious particulars which that friendship has put into his possession.
