sizeable quantity of strenuous labor.

For More College Training

IN the past few years, more college-trained men have taken up the study of dentistry than in decades before. There is a reason. Dentistry has advanced to the position of one of the learned scientific professions, a specific branch of medicine, and the young man who enters this field has opportunities for financial and scientific advancement offered by few professions. Indiana Dental College offers a four-year course leading to the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery.

The DRIFT

Dedication

THIS book is dedicated to Hilton U. Brown, President of the Board of Directors, and to Vincent Clifford, Perry H. Clifford, G. F. Quick, Thomas Carr Howe, C. B. Coleman, R. F. Davidson, and Robert Hall, of whose ever-ready loyalty to and interest in all that pertains to Butler College the Drift of 1917 is a monument.

The DRIFT

To Butler College

A master artisan, stooped and old,
Is silent, bent above his work;
His fingers fashion with firm touch,
And loving gleams in his dark eyes lurk.
A man of vision he, whose star
Has not been dimmed by smiles or tears,
Whose purpose day by day has grown
And ripened with the passing years.
With patient care, an artist's skill,
He fashions what his craft demands;—
The cast is done, he views with pride
The well-formed product of his hands.

Thine, too, has been a wondrous task,
And thou, a workman, here hast wrought
With undimmed vision far more clear,
For greater was the goal here sought,
More perfect was the clay, more strong
The vessel thou didst mould;
For men and women thou hast made,
Not cast of clay, nor vase of gold.
—Hope Bedford, '20.

THE OLD NORTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY

Butler College

BUTLER College was chartered in 1849 as the Northwestern Christian University, and in the fall of 1855 opened its doors in the old buildings on what is now College Avenue, Indianapolis. The College of Liberal Arts, opened at that time, has since had an uninterrupted existence.

In 1873 it was determined to remove to Irvington, and in 1875 instruction was begun in the building in the present location. In 1877 the name was changed to Butler University in recognition of the benefactions of Ovid Butler, and in 1896 this name was changed to Butler College.

Butler College is ideally located on a large wooded campus in Irvington, a quiet shaded suburb of Indianapolis. The situation is one of especial advantages, affording for students a most desirable place of residence that is somewhat withdrawn from the distractions and yet enjoys all the benefits of the capital city.

The DRIFT

Here They Are--

Dignified Seniors, world-wearied Juniors, important Sophomores, and frivolous Freshmen. It is true that one is unable to judge from the looks of most of them to which classification each belongs, but that is a result of the broad outlook and spirit of cosmopolitanism imparted to all its students by Butler College. Three months within its walls give a Freshman all the self-sufficiency of a Senior, and the majority of students are subject to various hallucinations as to the classes to which they belong. Some, whom the office record maintains are half-feathered Freshmen swear solemnly that they are Juniors, and faithfully attend all Junior meetings; Sophomores order Senior caps and gowns for themselves; Juniors frequently mistake themselves for members of the Faculty or, when occasion offers, help elect a Freshman President; and the "E-E" Vigilance Committee—for all its wonderful wisdom and perspicacity—is not immune from the possibility of forcing a green cap upon a Senior or Graduate Student. Truly, affairs are far advanced when Juniors tearfully bemoan the fact that they are compelled to be absent from an important Senior meeting in order to get in the Freshman and Sophomore pictures for the "Drift."

As We See Ourselves

WE are a chosen fifty, trained by Butler College to become the leaders of men. We are humble—but even in our moments of greatest humility, we can not be insensible to the germs of greatness that lie within us. The work of a college is to build character, to cultivate men's souls, to train their intellects, and to make them wise. For four years we have dutifully followed the guidance of great men dedicated to the noble task of developing our greatness. Soon they will look upon their work and they will say, "It is good." They will put their stamp of approval upon us. What will it mean if not that we are wise, our characters builded, our souls cultivated, our intellects trained? For is not that the purpose of a college, and have we not completed a college course? Let all mankind be grateful that such as we are soon to go from college walls to lead the ranks of men. Verily, our greatness is exceeded only by our great humility.

The

DRIFT

As We See Ourselves

1918

WE are the class of the college, and some class, believe us. Whenever anything is done around Butler we are the ones who set the pace. Our Prom was the biggest and most successful social event of the year, and as for pep and go-aheadness we are the first class for four years that has had the spirit and energy to put out a "Drift".

We do not believe in bragging, for the simple reason that the plain facts without any embellishment are sufficient evidence to establish our superiority. From our Freshman year we have believed in and worked for Butler—and Butler has grown larger and stronger during the last three years than during any fifteen years previously. If the Faculty could only succeed in convincing us that Butler needed anything in the line of new buildings or endowment we would build for them a new gymnasium, class-room building, etc., and establish a few more professional chairs. But, until the coming of such a time, we shall go on pushing to the top of the ladder and maintaining there the Butler that now is.

The DRIFT

FRED WITHERSPOON, $\Phi\Delta\Theta$, Indianapolis.

"Duke" is a prince of a chap. His quiet, distinguished pose, evidenced in the picture above, and his interesting dreamy class-room attitude are responsible for more than one feminine exclamation of "Oh, isn't he cute!" It is current gossip that that puzzled, sad expression has come into Fred's eyes only since the high cost of gasoline has forced him to surrender to more affluent competition.

HELEN REED, $KA\Theta$, Indianapolis.

Helen has an eye for beauty, and thinks her yellow waist is becoming to her complexion. It is whispered that she puts in four hours a day trying to get rid of a few stray freckles. All this, however, does not interfere with her good sportsmanship. She is quite witty, and accordingly loves to argue on 'most any subject at any time.

MERRILL WOODS, Indianapolis.

Merrill is noted chiefly for his tennis playing and his ability to translate Spanish. Strange to say Whitney Spiegel is his inspiration in the latter accomplishment to such an extent that a day's absence from school on the part of Whit throws Merrill into an unaccountable despondency until the next remiss distributing period is safely past.

The DRIFT

FLORENCE WOOD, Indianapolis.

Florence's dignified bearing has more than once created the impression on the part of some mystified Freshman that he was standing in the presence of some majestic member of the faculty, but persons better versed in the reading of outward appearances have learned better than to place her in any category other than that of a loyal member of the Junior class.

MADGE OBERHOLTZER, ΠΒΦ, Indianapolis.

Madge is a timid little creature with a baby voice, who allows professional gruffness to frighten her into speechlessness, but once outside of the depressing influence of class-room walls she waxes adjectivorous and verbiferous and is able to hold at bay the most fluent masculine word-artist on the campus.

HENRY JAMESON, ΣΧ, Indianapolis

Henree's "Oui, oui, mademoiselle" has become the criterion for judging all undergraduate French pronunciation. He is a versatile youth, his ability ranging from writing plays to loading coal wagons; and his artistic sense is so developed that he would walk ten miles rather than miss seeing an exhibition of any new variety of "hula-hula" dance.

The DRIFT

HARRY PERKINS, $\Phi\Delta\Theta$, Indianapolis.

"Perky" is as full of pep as ever, despite his Benedictine state. His greatest accomplishment has been the founding of the "Double E" Society and the chronicling of its doings since it came into being. Between looking after its destinies and attending to his household duties of bathing the dishes he has his hands full to overflowing.

LUCILE ADAMS, $KA\Theta$, Indianapolis

Looks are deceiving. Lucile can make one's hair stand on end with interest at some of her personal episodes, not even to mention her part as the merry widow in the "Yankee Consul." As a writer for the Indianapolis Star and the movies Lucile ought to make a name for herself.

MARY EDNA COLLINS, Indianapolis.

This young lady's favorite rendezvous is Science Hall, where she has collected a menagerie of test-tubes, beakers, etc., so well trained that they obey her every word.

The DRIFT

FRED DANIELS, $\Phi\Delta\Theta$, Tipton, Ind.

Now, now, Fred, you need not be so worried. That wonderful little picture of "Fred Daniels, Yell Leader," torn from the Tiptonian for 1913, does not appear in this edition of the "Drift." We are reserving it to put in a glass jar in the biological museum alongside of Prof. Bruner's amphibian pet. Until the blow falls you may go ahead sleeping peacefully o' nights and fasting o' days, saving up a good appetite for the next French Club feed.

ILENE MORGAN, $KA\Theta$, Indianapolis.

The war question has made a deep impression on Ilene, strange to say. The reason was brought to light when she began inquiring if the cavalry is dangerous to belong to. A confidential remark whispered with a deep sigh to a friend: "Dean and I have been having some nice farewell parties, but I am willing for him to go." Fine patriotism!!

HOWLAND JOHNSON, $\Delta T\Delta$, Indianapolis.

Howland's folks live 'way out at Forty-sixth and College, but at least eight days out of the week you can see his Scripps-Booth working overtime somewhere in the neighborhood of Twenty-first and Northwestern. We can't say that we blame him much, however.

The DRIFT

RALPH AGNEW, $\Delta T \Delta$, Indianapolis.

"Rotten" never finds time hanging heavy on his hands. His position of being official keeper of Johnnie Ferree entails something new every day. During his spare time he grows hair on his face, plays football and basket ball, and has interesting dates. He joined the Machine Gun Corps before he learned that the average period of existence for a machine gun man in action is 38 seconds. Rot occasionally likes to take a nap in "Money and Banking," and Putty often has to stop class because he thinks the snoring is a passing freight.

BERTHA COUGHLEN, $\Pi B \Phi$, Indianapolis.

Bertha is interested in molluskology and music, her latest scientific discovery being a Shell-horn. She is a very broad-minded girl. She says, "Why, I don't see why the war should stop parties and things. I have a brother, and--and--, well he's enlisted, but I don't intend to have a fit about it."

HENRIETTA COCHRAN, $KK \Gamma$, Indianapolis.

"Hen" is known for her stage representations of an old maid, but oh, when she isn't in the spotlight far be her actions and appearance from those of an old maid. She has won three medals in heart-breaking contests. Her favorite occupation is autoing, with a sweet tenor voice as an accompaniment.

The DRIFT

MARY CUSTER, ΠΒΦ, Indianapolis.

Mary has suffered much from having her name punned, so we shall not embarrass her by repeating the offense. She has won immortality by her acting, and by mystifying Prof. Harrison with the following answer on an exam: "Ellen showed her feminine qualities by pretending to love Fitz-James. Ha-ha!!"

EDA BACHMAN, ΚΑΘ, Indianapolis.

Is fond of all kinds of sports, especially running the Hudson Super-six while Charlotte stays home. She thinks chemistry is her calling, and has already gone in partnership with Anna Junge for future business.

HILTON U. BROWN, Jr., ΦΔΘ, Indianapolis.

"Tuck" was one of the Butler contingent at the Mexican border during the mobilization there. He has some big stories to tell about experiences down in the Greaser country, and they keep getting bigger all the time. "Tuck" draws pictures, and also admiring glances from interested Scotch-Irish eyes. We suspect that he was in such a hurry to get back from the border so that he might save postage stamps.

The DRIFT

WAIDE GILLMAN, AXA, Indianapolis.

"Hook" is some business man. Also he plays horseshoes and 500, and takes Professor Putnam's courses for recreation. His ideal of the perfect life would be expressed by a modernized version of Omar Khayyam written about a log cabin in the wilderness of Brown County.

RUTH BRAYTON, KKT, Indianapolis.

Ruth is one who believes that life and fate are better to those who take their time. We are inclined to agree with her, she being such a good example of the efficacy of the doctrine.

MILDRED JESSUP, ΠΒΦ, Hopkinsville, Ky.

Spends a considerable amount of her time frightening the younger girls with gentle reminders that they owe forty cents to Y. W. C. A. In answer to the request that she name her faults she volunteered the information that she is fascinatingly delightful, full of charming wit and rare wisdom tempered by vivacious frivolity, and is adored by everyone. In spite of her raging popularity, however, she possesses a becoming modesty. She would doubtless have given us more information had she not been in a hurry.

The

DRIFT

MARY PADOU, $\Delta\Delta\Delta$, Indianapolis.

Mary has come to the conclusion that Butler is a pretty good place, even in comparison with such schools as Colorado State and Columbia. Of course we always knew that, but it pleases us to find that others recognize it also. Mary is a Duzer Dü, and was a member of "Green Stockings" until that production became defunct.

MAE HAMILTON, $\Pi B\Phi$, Indianapolis.

Mae belongs to Duzer Du, Philo, the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, the Y. W. quartet, and the chapel choir. Some record! Since the wonders of Butler have been impressed upon her she has found that Earlham is no longer a very interesting place.

CLARENCE BLACKFORD, Cumberland, Ind.

"Pete" made himself known in his Freshman year by his prowess as a baseball pitcher, and his activities along that line ever since have kept his name a familiar one to Butler fans.

The DRIFT

WHITNEY SPIEGEL, ΣAE, Indianapolis.

Whit came from Purdue to Butler in his Sophomore year, and gained a reputation as a wit before he had been here six weeks. He is ready for anything, from riding a two-by-four sled to perpetrating that well-known form of robbery known as selling insurance. He says that the only girls that he cares about are "mom and sisiter." That being the case, we suppose that it is an electric runabout which exercises such an overpowering influence over him at the present time.

HELEN BARRY, ΔΔΔ, Indianapolis.

She is another one o fthose innumerable Helens. She spends her time separating her identity from that of Helen Barron. Every one says, "Oh, Helen Barry is so quiet and reserved." Just apply a starter and watch the result. Even brakes won't work when you try to stop her. One of the regrets of her college life is that she omitted chemistry. Ask her why.

MARGUERITE ULEN, ΠΒΦ, Indianapolis.

Is a lively, mischievous infant about whom some mysterious person called "Don" has made the following rhyme:

"Little Marguerite Ulen
Is cute and always a-foolin'."

These sentimental lines were unearthed from the dark recesses of Miss Ulen's silver mesh bag.

The DRIFT

HALFORD JOHNSON, ΔΤΔ, Indianapolis.

The blushing boy of Butler! It is just natural, not cosmetic or alcoholic. "Oh, how I envy Halford's complexion," can be heard from 'most any of the Y. W. C. A. Halford's favorite diversions are sleeping in class, teasing Marianne Copeland, and at other times creating a diversion with "Rick" Pritchard.

ESTHER MURPHY, ΚΚΓ, Indianapolis.

Has transferred her interest from Butler to Indiana U. "I wonder if Sam will be home this week-end?" is the usual question which "Es" asks herself and her friends every day. She left Butler to teach school, but returned suddenly. Henrietta is probably the only person who can explain this mystery.

LELA KENNEDY, ΠΒΦ, Indianapolis.

Lela, being secretary of Philo, attends the meetings of that organization when not otherwise engaged. She is a person of great strength of character and possesses lots of back-bone. She thinks that the war question has two sides, which means that Jake Doelker has enlisted and that Ralph Kirschner will stay here.

The DRIFT

KATHRYN KARNS, $\Pi\text{B}\Phi$, Indianapolis.

"Katie" is artistically inclined. Consequently we cannot say as to whether that dreamy look in her eyes is the result of her temperamentality or of some more material reason.

CARL AMELUNG, ΣX , Indianapolis.

Carl is always business-like and in a hurry. His ability at interpreting English poetry to Miss Graydon's taste has been the object of more than one poor duffer's envy.

EDITH GWARTNEY, $\Delta\Pi\Omega$, Indianapolis.

Edith chauffeurs the destinies of the Irvington branch library and as a result is always able to get hold of the books which are assigned for reading in the Drama Course.

The DRIFT

MILDRED HILL, ΠΒΦ, Indianapolis.

Mildred is vice-president of the Junior class, and is so democratic that she likes just everybody,—even such a person as would attend Wisconsin U. in preference to Butler. The Indianapolis Star once tried to get her picture to run in the Sunday supplement exhibiting the latest fashions, but she was too bashful to permit such a proceeding.

ANNA JUNGE, KAΘ, Cumberland, Ind.

Late to bed and early to rise is Anna's motto. She comes all the way from Cumberland to Butler, arriving here in time for drill practice in the mornings. Thus troubles begin earlier for Anna than for most girls. Chemistry is her favorite subject, but then of course every subject has its attractions—ornamental and otherwise. Anna is a splendid manager, and will make a good partner in any business.

CHESTER DAVIS, Indianapolis.

"Fat" is a good cook, having become an adept at frying pancakes over a Bunsen burner in the Chem. Lab. at noon hour. He must learn to keep his can of syrup away from the hydrogen-sulphide generator, however. As a result of playing football for three years and eating his own cooking, he weighs only 220 pounds now instead of the 300 or 400 which he would otherwise attain.

The DRIFT

NIEL KERSHAW, ΔΤΔ, Indianapolis.

Niel is another lad with scientific inclinations. He is one of the main attractions over in the science building, his intense interest in the semi-weekly chapel service and the Y. M. C. A. meeting being the only attractions which can draw him away from the laboratory. At the present time he is cultivating an interest in floriculture with the hopeful view of some day contracting a partnership in the florist business.

CORDELIA HIGGINS, KAΘ, Lebanon, Ind.

"Cordy" is carefree and light-hearted—except when the mail man doesn't arrive at the Dorm. on time. One letter a day from Michigan is enough to make any girl light-hearted. A pin which is very much in evidence for a whole week and then disappears has created a mystery which the Dorm. angels haven't solved yet. Perhaps she returned it by mail. At any rate, it was around just long enough to create a little excitement.

CHARITY HENDREN, KKI, Indianapolis.

The name "Charity" did not fit her, so her friends who know her well changed it to "Chat," which is rather more appropriate. Now she has gone in for Red Cross work and for giving sisterly advice and consolation to little Johnnie Brayton just in order to win her former appellation back again. Johnnie, Hank and Xerxes do a lot for charity.

The DRIFT

JOHN FERREE, $\Delta T \Delta$, Indianapolis.

"Jawn" is our illustrious football captain-elect and also staff photographer for the "Drift." He has taken his life and reputation into his hands more than once in order to get some good pictures. He is a wonderful dancer, but he suffers from the handicap that his terpsichorean ability vanishes unless he wears a dress suit—and he is not always able to borrow one that fits him. His greatest ambition is to be a pater familias. He doesn't know what it means, but he thinks it sounds good.

FERN WRIGHT, KKF, Indianapolis.

Fern writes the minutes of the Junior class and dreams of Columbus. She isn't kept very busy doing the former, and so she has plenty of time to indulge in the latter. The special cause of her interest hasn't been brought to light yet, but some Sherlock Holmes is bound to discover the secret sooner or later.

STOREY LARKIN, ΣX , Indianapolis.

When Storey started at Butler three years ago he was known as "Mrs. Larkin's little boy." Now he has acquired a dress suit and carries matches. It is an old saying that one must be disappointed in love in order to be thoroughly educated. The world-weary look in Storey's eyes is due to the fact that he has already received three diplomas. Cheer up, Storey, perhaps you'll have better luck when you grow your mustache.

The

DRIFT

WALLACE WADSWORTH, ΔΧΑ, Indianapolis.

"The contour of my forehead indicates that I always take my time." This phrenological statement is absolutely correct. "Waddy's" ideal is Professor Kenyon of ancient fame, and his favorite subject is Old English because he once received a high grade in it. His strong point is his heart, which is overwhelmingly in evidence if you hit the right spot. His favorite occupation is sleeping, and it was while indulging in it that he dreamed out the drift of the "Drift."

MARIE FITZGERALD, ΚΑΘ, Indianapolis.

Marie is another maiden who anxiously watches the war news. However a long bombardment of special deliveries from Llano Grande last fall have in a way been experience toward preparing her for any eventuality.

FRED WAGONER, ΣΧ, Indianapolis.

Our little "Fritz" had the honor of being unanimously elected President of the Junior class. He is a splendid young man who has saxophoned his way into many a fair one's heart. His favorite diversion is posing as a musician at some lake summer resort along with Myron Hughel and sundry others, and he fills up his spare time manufacturing various villainous soda-fountain concoctions for trusting coeds.

The

DRIFT

RUTH CANNADAY, ΔΠΩ, Indianapolis.

Ruth caused considerable commotion when she came back after Christmas vacation wearing a big diamond. However, such things will happen.

DEAN FULLER, ΔΤΔ, Indianapolis.

Dean is known mostly for his winning smile, and for being seen almost any evening in the company of Bill Schmalz. He and Bill have somewhat the same tastes along some lines. In Dean's conversation are continued references to "Tom," who is evidently a very close friend, and who plainly exercises a great deal of influence upon him.

MILDRED MORGAN, KAΘ, Indianapolis.

Flowers and such presents are getting to be quite common with Mildred these days, and quite strangely they all bear the Marott Shoe Store stamp. For several years Mildred has been faithfully studying French and Greek, not knowing, alas, how helpful a year or two of German would have been. It is not too late yet, however, if the teacher is a good one.

The DRIFT

OSCAR HAGEMIER, AXA, Linton, Ind.

Oscar was President of the State Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, which probably accounts for Indiana's going dry. His experience of determining various alcohol percentages while holding that office has made him proficient at prescribing for night customers at Hook's Drug Store. "Whitey" is Junior Treasurer, and is sore yet that there wasn't a surplus left over from the Prom.

AGNES FOREMAN, KAΘ, Indianapolis.

"She has more common sense than any girl in school," was remarked of her, and expresses it exactly. She is not only sensible, but good looking as well. Agnes appears so solemn and dignified because weightier questions than studies oppress her mind.

ARTHUR CARR, Greentown, Ind.

Arthur is a newcomer to Butler, and we haven't had much of a chance to get acquainted with him as yet. However, we are hoping to see him with us again next year, and to learn to know him better then.

The

DRIFT

OPAL BURKHARDT, ΔΔΔ, Muskogee, Okla.

Opal is some bright gem whose radiance will some day brighten the dark fastnesses of India. Her red coat and hat have done their share of radiating this winter, and to further aid her future brilliance she has lately been shining forth with a carat solitaire. Such is the way of missionaries. Her present occupation is finding fishes' ears, and captivating the youthful Freshmen gentlemen who come within her beaming influence.

KATHERINE BURTON, KAΘ, Martinsville, Ind.

Katherine has made Martinsville famous. She thinks it, talks it, acts it, and proves it. She has a scholarship record few can equal, and has become so classical that she forgets how to call the cattle home when she goes back on the farm. Nothing ever escapes Katherine who, along with Virginia McCune, knows every joke going.

HELEN FINDLEY, Indianapolis.

Helen is quite proficient at the gentle art of angling, her policy being to wade in and hook a good one while she is about it. She is rather a quiet and demure little miss in the classroom, and it takes acquaintanceship to let one know the real Helen behind her customary pose.

The DRIFT

Junior Prom

THE Junior Prom was held at the Independent Turnverein on the evening of December 4. Advertisements of the affair had promised much, but it turned out that realization was even better than anticipation in this case. Decorations, music, refreshments, programs—everything was of a quality and quantity to make this the biggest and most successful general social event of the year at Butler.

As We See Ourselves 1919

IT is farthest from our intention to boast, our purpose here being but to set forth certain facts of which everyone cannot but be aware and unquestionably acknowledge.

The career of this class has been thoroughly in keeping with the qualities possessed by its members:—clash, vim, vigor, go! The masterly fashion in which the Freshman cap situation was handled was the first move made by us to startle the Butler world. Vigorous measures were taken to hold the Freshmen to that time-honored custom, and we must say that they were singularly effective. Another momentous factor in our career was our inaugurating a Sophomore Hop, a thing unheard of before in Butler annals. This is but another indication that this class has never been one to follow stupid precedent, but has set its own standards and established its own rules of procedure. The story of achievement has ever been the story of originality.

To the Seniors we owe a certain respect and courtesy; for the Juniors we have the friendliest of feelings; to the Freshmen we condescend to offer recognition; but to the Sophomores, one and all, we take off our hats. Their past has been brilliant; what their future will be only one of greatest prophetic vision may foretell.

As We See Ourselves 1920

Honored Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores:

HAVING smoked your cigars and eaten your sandwiches (which we have paid for since), built your fires, listened to your advice, made your beds, and otherwise survived a year of college life, we, the Freshman class, desire to toot our horns a bit. We are a unique class—very unique. Classes will come and classes will go, but never will there be another with such a priceless gem as our Kirowitz who was willing to undergo the supreme test of a snow bath for the cause of liberty. We call attention to our Fighting Parson, Reinhold, whose very hair was singed in a fight with the Devil in the form of John Ferree; to our football scholar, Rioch; and to our fair ladies who are so beautiful that the scholarship of the upper-classmen has fallen in the same ratio as their pocketbooks have flattened—so beautiful that we Freshmen have only been allowed to gaze at a distance—so beautiful that the Senior girls have deemed it necessary to expound upon the utter perfidy of all Butler men.

We have learned much—how to stall in class, how to stroll on the campus, how to wear a biled shirt, how to sleep in Prof. Putnam's classes, how to laugh at Andy Hopping's jokes, how to make a picture smoke a cigarette, how to borrow a quarter, etc., et cetera ad infinitum. And now we humbly apply for the rank of Sophomore with all the attendant glories and privileges which the name implies.

“Cully” Thomas

CULLY, otherwise but less often known as George Cullen Thomas, has for several years moulded the athletic destinies of Butler College. In that time he has turned out a football team that won the state championship in 1914, and has placed the blue and white banner to the forefront in the other intercollegiate sports. During the past year he has been instructor of physical training as well as athletic coach. Cully is a thorough-going Butler man, being a graduate from here, and having represented the college during his four undergraduate years in all branches of intercollegiate athletics.

CAPTAIN BONHAM

The DRIFT

A Review of the Season

1916

DESPITE the several one-sided scores chalked up in favor of the opponents Butler has much reason to be proud of the showing made during the past season. The first game, that with Kentucky State, opened the season with a rather dull thud of 39 to 3. Spirits rose again, however, in the next game played when Earlham was humbled decisively with a score of 27 to 0. From the first kick-off it was apparent that the only question was the size of the score to be piled up against the visitors, despite the fact that the Butler men were much lighter than their opponents. The Wabash game was a disaster, but not one bereft of glory. The superior weight of the Little Giants and their large supply of fresh men, as well as the crippled condition of the Butler team were the deciding factors in piling up the large score. The Louisville game was a loose affair on both sides, and that with DePauw was scoreless for Butler only because of the admitted bungling of the referee after Bonham had put over a touchdown. The Franklin landslide was a complete surprise. The opponents were the heavier, but nevertheless Butler had the edge on them throughout the first half. The second half of the contest brought with it an unaccountable slump, and the score was run up to 39 to 14 in favor of the visitors. The Rose Poly victory, the last game of the season, rather cleared away the clouds from the sky and gave Butler third place among the seven I. C. A. L. colleges.

The especial feature of the season was the work of Captain Tow Bonham. His leadership, his gameness, and his never-failing supply of pep and fight that kept him going against any odds will make this, his last year, remembered by all rooters who saw him play. His selection to the honorary position of All-State quarterback was merited and well earned.

ARCHIE BROWN—Right end.

A first year man who fought with all the gameness of any veteran. "Mike" is not spectacular in his methods, but his good steady work can be depended upon at all times.

EARL BONHAM—Quarterback, Captain.

This is "Tow's" last year in collegiate football. His playing this season has shown him to be "the best, gamest, headiest little quarterback that Indiana has seen for many a year."

CHESTER DAVIS—Right guard.

"Fat" always succeeds in making his 210-pound bulk an obstacle that is difficult for any opponent to get past. This is his third year, and he can be counted on for another season's strong support.

The DRIFT

FRED WAGONER—Halfback.

"Fritz" was one of the "freshman pony backfield" of three years ago that astonished every one with their exhibition of gameness and speed. The retention of these qualities and the addition of experience have made of Wagoner a most valuable man.

RALPH AGNEW—Fullback.

"Rotten" opens up holes in the enemy's lines and makes himself generally obnoxious to the opponents in a way anything but like what is suggested by his pet name.

JOHN FERREE—Right tackle.

John is a 212 pounder who can win a 100-yard dash as easily as he can refrain from studying. His weight and his speed make him an especially valuable man at his position.

The DRIFT

GEORGE CORNELIUS—Halfback.

George's punting was a strong factor in many of the games this year. Injuries kept him on the sidelines several times but he was able to make his presence felt in most of the contests.

HARRY PERKINS—Halfback.

"Perky" was another one of the "pony backfield" of several years ago. A little later he was dubbed the "iron man," which name indicates something of his ability.

LESLIE FLECK—Halfback.

"Fritz" is a freshman, but he is not a green one when it comes to football. He was the particular star of the Earlham game, his open field running and line plunging being of the spectacular variety.

The DRIFT

FRED DANIELS—Halfback, left end.

"Danny" is not a big fellow, but he is one who makes himself felt. His habit of getting so much in the opponents' way resulted in his being injured several times, but never enough to take the fight out of him.

"Hilly" is another freshman that knows the game. His quiet, steady playing was one of the dependable features of the season's work.

FLOYD VANDAWARK—Left guard.

"Dutch" did his bit in making the line hold against offense by putting his bulk in the way. Not fast, but one who can plug a hole as well as the next one.

PRICE MULLANE—Center.

"Pike" is the last of three brothers in succession to monopolize the position of center on the Butler team. His ability at sizing up an opponent's play together with his weight and experience makes him a strong man on the defensive.

The 1916 Squad

MIDDLE ROW—Dailey, Jeffries, Ferree, Seyfreid.

THE TEAM

The DRIFT

THE picture above, taken quite a few years ago, is that of an old Irvington "kid" football team which practiced and played its games almost in the shadows of Butler College. Now and then it would play an eye-opener—or is it a curtain-raiser?—on Irwin Field before some big college game, and afterwards the players, their preliminary stunt accomplished, would sit on the side-lines and long for the day when they might be among the warriors wearing the blue and white. For some of them this dream has become a reality. Nine of the boys in this picture have become Butler men, and six of them were members of this year's team. In the top row the second youngster is Price Mullane, the fourth is Harry Perkins, and next to him are the Siamese Twins, "Rotten" and "Jawn," inseparable then as now. In the middle row is George Cornelius, and next to him is Tow Bonham, Butler's captain and All-State quarterback. The water-boy in the first row is Dick Moore, the guardian of the pigskin is Bill Young, and beyond him is Tuck Brown.

CAPTAIN FRANKFORT

The DRIFT

A Review of the Season

1917

Out of thirteen games played Butler won seven and lost six.

During the entire season Butler made a total of 297 points against the opponents' total of 295 points. Butler made 120 field goals and 57 foul goals.

The largest point getters were Markland, with 45 field goals; Race, with 20 field goals and 25 foul goals; Sussman, with 24 field goals and 16 foul goals; Good, with 19 field goals; and Captain Frankfort, with 4 field goals and 15 foul goals.

The city championship was lost to the Dentals in a third closely contested game in which the score was 23 to 21, giving the toothpullers two victories out of three games played.

Throughout the season Captain Frankfort showed himself to be a wonderful floor general. As he is to be captain again next year Butler rooters may look forward to another successful season.

Thomas (coach), Sussman, Frankfort (captain), Cornelius, Agnew, Race, Markland, Good.

Who They Are

SUSSMAN—Forward.

"Pinkie" is an experienced man, and was one of the mainstays of the team throughout the season. His absence from several games because of injuries had a great deal to do toward contributing to some of the defeats suffered by Butler. Sussman was one of the best basket shooters on the team, and some of the points in every game he played are to be credited to him.

FRANKFORT—Guard, Captain.

Marty always keeps cool and clear-headed, which is probably one reason why his floor leadership this year has resulted so successfully. He is not the biggest point winner, but many of the scores marked up to the personal credit of other players are due primarily to his playing and generalship. He will be captain again next year.

The DRIFT

CORNELIUS—Guard, Center.

George played an unusually good game throughout the entire season, at both guard and center positions. His absence from the second Franklin game because of illness was doubtless one of the factors leading to our defeat there.

AGNEW—Guard.

“Rotten” plays basketball as well and efficiently as he plays football, and that is saying quite a bit. This is his third year in Butler athletics and, despite his growing tendency to look like Charlie Chaplin, his value in any position is increasing with the years.

RACE—Forward, Center.

Race is only a half-fledged Freshman, having entered Butler at the beginning of the second semester and just in time for the most strenuous part of the basketball season. His natural ability and previous experience were not long in making a place for him on the varsity team.

MARKLAND—Forward.

Glenn is also a Freshman, but notwithstanding that fact he made more points than any other man on the team. He was a strong factor in every game, as his season's record of forty-five field goals can testify.

GOOD—Center.

Charlie's four years in college athletics expired at the end of the first semester, and as a result he was not able to participate in any of the subsequent I. C. A. L. games. His loss weakened the team somewhat during the latter half of the season.

Interclass Basketball

THE interclass basketball championship went to the Freshman team after it had won five games out of seven played, with no outside help.

The Seniors were practically tied with the Freshmen for first place, officially having the same record, but they were compelled to relinquish claim to the championship because of the fact that in several of the games they were represented by players from other classes. The players on the champion Freshman squad were Arch Brown (captain), Markland, Heathco, Seyfried, Franklin, and Hilligoss.

Spring Athletics

OWING to the war situation there have been no spring athletics at Butler. With a promising baseball season ahead, with preparations for an important tennis season made, and with interest well developed toward coming victories in track and field, all athletic schedules with other colleges were cancelled and all arrangements for interclass events were thrust aside. This has been the first time for many years that Butler College has not participated in spring athletics, but owing to the present crisis it was deemed advisable to eliminate them in favor of military training.

A Part of the Butler Army

Military Drill

BUTLER'S plans to make real soldiers out of her young men culminated on April 10 in the organization of the drill corps. Two squads were formed, one to drill from 6:30 to 8:00 o'clock every morning, and another every afternoon from 3:30 to 5:00. Under the direction of Captain James A. Hurt, First Lieutenant Charles A. Cassady, and Second Lieutenant Frank W. Minnick, all three of whom are from Company D, First Regiment, I. N. G., drills have been held consistently throughout the latter half of the semester. Soon after the organization of the two sections was completed army regulation Springfield rifles were handed out, which made possible the drilling in regular military tactics.

On Clean-up Day an exhibition drill was given, which convinced even the co-eds that the Butler Drill Corps is a reality to be taken seriously, and that when called upon Butler men will be ready to take their places on the firing line.

The DRIFT

THE Young Women's Christian Association has grown to be one of the most important factors in the lives of Butler girls. It meets, in the broadest way possible, the higher demands of the college girl's life; and in working out its purpose becomes a unit large enough to have a place for every girl.

At the religious meetings held every week the girls have followed a definite Bible study plan, and they have been most fortunate in securing speakers who have been very interesting and helpful.

The Association has contributed much to the social life of the college. By means of frequent parties and spreads it has caused the girls to become acquainted with one another, and has fostered a more democratic spirit among them.

The influence of the Association has reached even beyond the college walls, a very important work having been carried on at the Christamore College Settlement. Every afternoon of the year some of the college girls have gone there to assist with the music, club, and library department activities. This has not only been a help to the settlement, but has also greatly benefited the girls who have contributed their time and talents.

Through mission study classes a broader knowledge of the work among the students of the world has been gained. This year the girls have given seventy-five dollars to missions—in addition to one hundred five dollars to the Fund for Prison Camp Relief in Europe.

Last summer eight representatives from Butler attended the summer conference at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, and as many are planning to go again this coming August.

The Butler Association joins with the international Y. W. C. A. in its world wide mission for good by filling the place it does among the students here, and by doing all it can to meet the needs of less fortunate people.

The DRIFT

“CLEAN Christian Manhood in Butler College” is the slogan of the Butler Y. M. C. A. To this end it aims to develop physical strength, mental alertness, and moral righteousness in the individual student and in all college activities.

One of the important functions of the Association is to get the students from the different social groups acquainted with one another. To this end the social committee has planned and successfully carried through several “stag” socials and two Y.M.-Y.W. receptions, one of each at the beginning of each semester.

The Football Banquet, which has been an annual affair for four years now, and which bids fair to become a venerated tradition of Butler College is one of the accomplishments of the Butler Y. M. A large proportion of the school turned out for it this year, and was strengthened both in body by a turkey dinner and in mind by the toasts of the football men.

The regular meetings of the Association have been fairly well attended. Nearly every phase of modern life from war to prayer has been treated. Thus has it been attempted to put the slogan into practice, and thru these talks to make men more manly in body, mind, and soul.

Two successful classes in Mission and Bible Study have been conducted, and the entrance of Butler men into the social work of the city has been planned. The Employment Bureau found work for numbers of men, and during the coming year will continue its existence throughout the year instead of only the first few weeks of school.

Thus, through co-operation and friendship, has the Y. M. C. A. endeavored in every way it could to live up to its principle of aiding the men of the college.

T. TARKINGTON BAKER

THE DRAMA CLASS

DURING the past two years Butler has offered a course in the study of the modern drama under the instruction of Mr. F. Tarkington Baker. The class meets at the college for a one hour recitation and lecture period each Friday evening of the school year.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

DRAMATICS at Butler have been fostered by and in the charge of the Duzer Du Dramatic Club. It has been the practice of this organization to present a light opera during the latter part of each school year, as well as various other productions earlier in the year. Thus in June, 1914, De Koven's "Robin Hood"; in June, 1915, Herbert's "The Serenade"; and in June, 1916, Robyn's "The Yankee Consul" were successfully produced on the open air stage on the campus. During the year of 1915-16 the farce, "The Brixton Burglary," was presented in the college chapel. At all times has the dramatic club been most indebted to Mr. F. Tarkington Baker, who has been the director of all productions.

THE Biology Club was organized in the spring of 1913 for the purpose of promoting the interest of science students in biological problems. At its meetings biological subjects are discussed, papers are read, and lectures delivered by prominent scientists. One of its most valuable activities is the promotion of its scholarship fund, which is used each year to send some student to the summer Biological School at Woods Hole, Mass., for advanced work.

BUTLER participated in only two debates this year, both being with Wabash College on the proposition, "Resolved, That the literacy test as passed by Congress in Bill No. 16780 is desirable." On the evening of March 28 the Butler negative team, composed of Austin Clifford, Oscar Hagemier, and Don McGavran, won over the Wabash affirmative team at Crawfordsville by a unanimous decision; and on the same night the Wabash negative was also unanimously defeated by the Butler affirmative team, consisting of Myron Hughel, DeForest O'Dell, and Earl McRoberts, in the contest held in the Butler College chapel. This double Wabash victory marks the twelfth consecutive victory for Butler debaters during the past two years.

State Discussion Contest

Earl McRoberts represented Butler in the discussion contest June 1, upon the question of a new state constitution.

Celebration of Founder's Day

FOUNDER'S Day was observed Wednesday, February 7, by an address in the college chapel in the morning, a reception in the afternoon, and a dinner in the evening. This date is set aside for the honoring of the memory of Ovid Butler, whose generosity made possible the founding of the college and whose labors during his lifetime did much to make the opportunities which Butler students now enjoy. He donated the original site, in what is now College Avenue, of the old Northwestern Christian University. After The College was moved to its present location his name was given to it; and his birthday, since his death in 1881, has been observed in a fitting way as Founder's Day. It is, however, only in the last ten or fifteen years that any extended arrangements have been made for its observance.

In the morning at the regular chapel period the school assembled in the chapel to listen to an address by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, president of Earlham College; and in the afternoon a Pan-Hellenic reception, under the auspices of the various Greek letter organizations, was held at the home of President Howe in Audubon Place from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The Founder's Day dinner was given in the Riley Room at the Claypool Hotel at 7 o'clock. President Howe presided as toastmaster.

The Rev. Elvet E. Moorman, of the Englewood Christian Church and a graduate of Butler 1899, Yale 1901, was the first speaker of the evening, his theme being the debt owed by students and alumni of colleges to the founders of those institutions, and of the true conception of education.

Professor John S. Harrison, head of the English department of Butler, spoke of the necessity of keeping in touch with the good things of the past; and George Buck, principal of Shortridge High School, entertained his listeners by a humorous reminiscence of the hardships of his own college education and by hitting off modern educational foibles.

Emmett W. Gans, president of the Butler Alumni Association, emphasized the importance of the practical application of learning to life and business, and the necessity for the student to determine what relation he is to have with the commercial world after the completion of his academic activities.

The college owes a large measure of gratitude to Miss Graydon, on whom a great deal of the responsibility for the arrangements of the day rested; and the support of the alumni and students, who entered wholeheartedly into the spirit of the occasion, did much toward making the day a success in every way.

Rubber-necking Through the Dorm.

Ladies and Gentlemen: The majestic building which rises before you here is a relic of antiquity. It was built away back in the Middle Ages, before Stanley Sellick sold books in the office, and when Professor Johnson's stories were just starting on their unchanging and imperishable career. After ascending the marble steps of the stately entrance you pause between the impressive pillars separating the hall from the parlor and gaze, entranced, at three of the oldest, best known, and best preserved of Butler antiques—the grand piano, Ella, and the Victrola records. The music collection on the piano, comprising "Poor Butterfly" and "Naughty, Naughty," is also not without historic interest.

However, in the dining room on our right you find the most tenderly cared for and most renowned of Butler relics. Everything in Butler changes except this. The campus oaks and beeches mature and die, and young trees grow in their places; classes graduate and new ones enter; the Lotus Club dances ruin these polished floors and they are restored—everything around Butler changes—except the Dorm. menu.

Faint strains of music, heartrending and terrible, float down to us from the third story. It is Velma Rich, one of the inmates, soothing her tow-headed roommate with "Sweetheart Sigma Chi" on the ukelele.

Passing hastily through the lower hall beyond the dining room, observe the desperate statement left on the table: "Gone to look for a knife. Ethel Eagan." Ethel, however, is really a gentle girl—except in Professor Coleman's eight o'clock class.

DRIFT

On the second floor to the right you note an interesting specimen known as the bulletin board. Let the guilty looking girl with the desperate (h)air pass. It is Mildred Hill, who does not live here. She quakes with fear before the bulletin board notices. Everyone does, except the inmates. It is designed to keep town girls subdued.

Observe to the right Cordy Higgins hunting for a box of letter paper to take to French class. No, madam, Professor Greene has not urged her to do it. She is but obeying her physician's prescription, this being a doctor's case.

The respectful comments from behind the carved mahogany door are not addressed to a dignified Senior, but to Doris Kinneman's new twelve dollar shoes. You hear the observation, "Oh, I'd like to wear them on my hands!" That is from Ruth Brayton, guardian of the little Bickel girl, who is one of the Dorm. children.

Pausing before the room of the Martinsville beauties, you can hear with what ease Butler girls mingle a foreign language with the Hoosier dialect. "Mon ami et—" "The fourth question—" "Le dernier—" "The fourth question was—" The pleasing effect is gained by Lois Blount and June Lines discussing with their usual calm the mid-semester English exam, while Margaret Rose reads French to Lucille Sartor and Gladys Lewis.

Ah! Screams from the third floor! No doubt the girls think they hear a burglar. They often think so. They hope for one, day and night, but he never comes. The Dorm. is dangerous when disappointed, and as it now seems thoroughly aroused we had better slide hastily down the marble stairs and out again into the safety of the open campus.

Butler Landmark, Number 2

And now, ladies and gentlemen, we come to that majestic pile designated by the college catalogue and pictured in the front of this book as the BUTLER GYMNASIUM.

One corner of it serves as such, while the rest of it is occupied by the Department of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering, under Professor Fred. Also the shower room makes a splendid smoking compartment between classes for the young gentlemen of the school. Those clouds of obscuring vapor which you now perceive arising from the edifice are seemingly the outpourings from the various varieties of soft coal experimented with in this department, but more likely they are in reality the incense from numerous Home Runs, "Roll Your Owns," and Camels, interspersed now and then with an odoriferous cubeb. When the members of the "Double E" Society get to be prosperous alumni they intend to present to the college a new gymnasium with hot and cold water, ice-box, swimming pool, etc. The plans now are to lay the corner stone in 1920 and to have the building completed for service by the year 2057.

O, gay, sweet twirling sharp'ner,
To whom all footsteps turn
When long exams, quizzes, or tests
With their dire gloom our hearts infest,
To thee, to thee we homage bring;
To thee our hearts a carol sing!

Thou smilest, singing as thou whirl'st around,
For Stanley has thee oiled in every joint.
In our exams we know that thou art bound
To aid us by at least one perfect point!

To thee, to thee we homage bring,
To thee our hearts a carol sing,
O gay, sweet twirling sharp'ner.

There was a little girl
named Fay;
Her taste to big blondes
did stray.
This just suited Van,
That type of a man,
A congenial couple were they.

Butler Boys

BUTLER boys are ever so much nicer than those of any other college. They spend all of their time and their father's money trying to make the girls happy. That is why so many girls come to Butler. At Purdue boys take girls to dances on a street car. No Butler boy ever does that. If his own car is in the garage he orders a taxi. It takes a Wabash boy two weeks to decide whether or not he will accept an invitation to a dance, and two more to call up the girl and murmur, "About a quarter of eight, then? So glad! Thank you." This process, technically referred to as "making his date," is never deferred by a Butler boy. He graciously accepts immediately, in a polite little note on expensive lavender stationery, and inquires what color the girl is going to wear to the dance so that he may surprise her later by sending a quaint corsage of harmonizing flowers. Butler boys study Vogue for hours to discover whether sunburst roses or violets go better with a yellow dress. If a Butler boy cannot go to the dance he sends his regrets in the form of a huge bouquet of orchids. Such procedure is practically unknown at DePauw.

Butler boys do not make as good grades as the girls. This is because the boys, the darlings, escort different girls to the theater every night. Oftentimes a boy will sit through the same show three times—each night with a different girl. It is of course rather painful to him, as he has to refrain from telling how it all comes out—but the girls must be amused. Butler girls are amazed to learn that when Earlham boys escort a girl to the theater they do not always sit in a box. Butler boys are so grandly gallant that they even insist upon the girls preceding them into chapel.

Of course, though, no Butler boy is ever a "policy man." Oh, no! That is an expression in use only in other colleges. The girls at Butler have never heard it. Butler girls know that the boys are depriving themselves of Wagoner's sodas just to buy them pistachio bisques at Craig's, and do this just out of pure nobleness. Truly, Butler boys are much nicer than those of any other college.

Johnnie Ferree's Football Speech in Chapel

(As reported by a Coed Member of the "Drift" Staff.)

WHAT you guys got me up here for? I ain't got no spe-e-ch. (Loud applause from the crowd and yep, yep from Rot Agnew.) Come off with that stuff. You guys are slowing me.

One nice thing about playin' football is that the faculty gets so interested in you. Hardly a week goes by that I don't get a Valentine from some Prof. in a transparent envelope. I told Put I'd come after them if he would split fifty-sixty on the postage. He says, "Wawl, Mr. Ferree, I don't s'pose those few stamps would pay for the gasolene you'd waste." I should worry, Bill Ferree pays for the gas.

Well, this ain't makin' no football speech—but in Prof. Johnson's classic language—that reminds me of a story— (Turning to Prof. Johnson.) That ought to pull me an "A" in Calculus.

Well, a fellow never knows what's agoin' to happen to him in football. He puts on a nose guard and some guy kicks him in the knee. He puts on shin guards and some bird kicks him in the slats. If you'd put on bomb-proof armor some boob would get a screw driver and poke you in the eye. That's the way it goes. You never know what is going to fall on you. Like those two fellows in the story I was told to tell. You see, there were two Irishmen—sit still Sussman—in the Civil war (Takes out his watch) That's the watch I dropped in Put's class and woke everybody up. (Holding it up.) That's Big Ben. But I gotta tell that story. Lemme see—where was I at? (Pause. Musses his hair. Yell from the gallery, "Put out that story.") I will, gladedly, gladedly. One of the guys got shot—not half shot or shot in the arm—nothin' like that—got his laig shot. (From the gallery, "Which leg?") Well, that ain't got nothin' to do with it. You guys are slowing me, again. (Rot Agnew from the gallery, "That ain't the way that story goes.") Well, you come and tell it. (The multitude, "Speech, Rot, Speech, Speech." Exit Johnnie.)

The Double "E" Society

ALL magnanimous orders are created and propagated for a purpose, and each emerges from a small body into one of larger and more vast importance. So, accordingly, it appeared to Pinkey Perkins, Deacon Loy, Tow Bonham, Rotten Agnew and Johnnie Ferree that an organization to promote enthusiasm within the staid old walls of Butler College should be formed with themselves as the nucleus and foundation around and on which the organization should grow. So, holding their first meeting in a graveyard one night during the dark of the moon, these two pair and a half of loyal Butler supporters came together and christened themselves "The Society of the Filthy Five," and with fitting solemnity drew up their constitution and by-laws. Their motto was "Boost Butler," and henceforth all persons must salute the Butler banner or take the consequences—consisting of a severe ducking or a slight acquaintance with the barber's shears.

Of course no one would care to oppose the Royal Order in its courageous undertaking, and soon all students who thought they could qualify for membership were clamoring for admittance to its mystic circle.

Soon the "Filthy Five" swelled in membership to the "Nasty Nine," and after two more members were taken in it obtained its present illustrious name of the "Elliterate Eleven." Among the ranks of the organization today are the captains of all the athletic teams, as well as the famous "Pony Backfield" and the renowned "Vigilance Committee" of Butler College. With such influential men as these within its circle who can tell how far this Royal Order will go? Assuredly, it will stop at nothing that can be thought of.

To be qualified for membership a man must have flunked at least twenty hours of college work, and he must have been west of the Mississippi. No Honor Roll students are tolerated. Also, the applicant, to show his inventive genius, must suggest some good practical joke to be perpetrated by the organization. Historic episodes thus conceived have been the alarm clock festival, the snake celebration, and this year's picture smoker and the Vigilance Committee's enforcement of the Freshman cap decree. In the near future this inventive and excutive ability of the members is to be placed at the disposal of the U. S. Government against the Germans. An immediate close of the war is predicted.

Clean-Up Day

CLEAN-UP DAY is one of the great days of the year at Butler. It is the day when the members of the faculty take leave of their professorial dignity that they may go out and renew their acquaintanceship with the campus squirrels, and when students even outdo their own customary proficiency at seeming to do the maximum amount of labor with the minimum expenditure of actual exertion. Wheelbarrows and rakes, spades and hoes, and all other implements of torture with which one may persuade someone else to free a space of lawn or stretch of walk from any disfiguring clutter of dry leaves, fallen twigs, or other trash are brought to light, and serve quite well at filling up the time between the initial chapel assembly at half past eight in the morning and the dinner call at noon. Few blisters are worn, but somehow or other the campus is accorded to have become miraculously clean by the time that appetites sufficiently prodigious to demolish all stores of provender on hand are achieved.

Clean-up Day this year was held on Saturday, April 21. It was featured by the initial hoisting of the flag to the top of the new flag pole in front of the main building of the college. The four classes each had a part in the ceremony. Speeches appropriate to the occasion, and maneuvers by the combined drill corps completed the program.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

THE Tri Delts are a scintillant aggregation for whom the night air holds no terrors. If you don't believe this just get one of them to sing "By the Light, By the Light, By the Light of the Moon" for you. One verse will convince you that the singer need not be afraid of anything. They also have another midnight ditty entitled, "You Can't Catch a Man Except Under a Tri-Delt Moon." That propitious orb seems to have been smiling quite benignly on some of them here of late. The Tri-Delts take themselves quite seriously, and can recite to you the complete history of their sorority and all the memorable deeds it has accomplished in making this dark little old world a habitable place. So long as the pine tree banner shall flutter around Butler it is bound to be a wondrous place, where one may diet on honor rolls and dates.

Here, ladies and gentlemen, you observe the historic remains occupied by that gallant cohort of fussers, honor roll students, and youths distinguished in other callings, known as the fraternity. The Delts are famed for many things, ranging from the ability to juggle fifteen hours' work between 59 9-10% and that isle of safety indicated by an average of 60%, to having some of their number attain the supreme dignity of belonging to the "Double E" society—but mostly they are noted for their ability at fussing. Charley Good is a Delt, as are also Andy Hopping, Jimmy Sims, Avery Morrow, and numerous others. The Delts are mostly industrious and economical, assiduously saving their pennies against the day when they shall be able to buy jewelled fraternity pins, the Butler girls having become so particular that they will no longer wear plain pins. Stanley Sellick is also a Delt. He represents the ultimate heights to which a sober young man of stability and determination may rise in the course of years, and is the model which all his fraternity brothers try to emulate.

The Main Building

In this building are the offices from which weekly clouds of remisses are hurled forth, and under its well-trodden floors are maintained the famous Butler Mouse Incubators. There are within its walls sundry obscure dark corners and cubby holes in which a person may stow away his hat and coat beyond any hope of ever finding them again, or upon a rainy day may discover some one's else umbrella to protect himself from the downpour. It is here also that Stanley holds forth, coaxing the guileless youth of the college into his den to deprive them of their fathers' hard earned shekels. On the third floor is that haven of alarm clocks, snakes, cigarette-smoking pictures, and never-ending twice-a-week seances known as chapel periods.

house, alias Wagoner's. Here one is able to get anything from a toothpick to the latest gossip about Storey Larkin's most recent girl. Here it is that Bob Larsh sometimes officiates behind the marble counter, stirring up surprising and nameless concoctions for the palatal delectation of various and sundry young ladies who have lured unsuspecting youths into escorting them hither. Also, back in one corner is a quaint thingumajig from which issue sounds that purport to be music every time that a nickel is dropped into its cavernous interior. The Sigs are justly proud of their hang-out, believing that it has contributed much to the cause of civilization. They used to maintain another and less public establishment down on Audubon Road, but within the last year they have come to the conclusion that they could better fulfill their mission to suffering humanity by removing their base of operations to the present location. That such action was imbued with far reaching import is conceded by all the world, since it has led to the founding of that wonderful organization known as the "Hot Stove League."

Ambling along a little farther, we pause for a moment before the house. This is where the horseshoe champions of Butler have their headquarters. The Lambda Chis are proficient in other lines also, it being reported that they have a full grown male member of the bovine species for their mascot. They used to give dances at their house once in a while in order that, under stress of the occasion, their cohorts of freshmen might be persuaded to get busy and sweep the floors, dust the furniture, and otherwise make the place habitable. However, here of late a different procedure has been followed. The Lambda Chis are quite patriotic. Some of them have followed the same example as other Butler youths and enlisted, but the rest intend to aid their country by the production of foodstuffs. Cabbages grown in the corners of the front hall, onions between the up-rights of the stair balustrade, turnips on the landings, mushrooms beneath the beds, and corn in the upper hallway should make a harvest that would materially enlarge the supply. Toward furthering this end the freshmen have been making preparation by restraining themselves from sweeping, dusting or shovelling in the locations named since spring vacation, and as a result the soil is at present in pretty good condition.

Here before us, situated in its picturesque location upon the banks of Pleasant Run, we cast our gaze upon the official residence of the Butler chapter of the fraternity. Here it is that the athletic campaigns of the school are mapped out in detail, and fought out and over both before and after the occasion. During this past winter the Phi Deltas have been embarrassed quite a bit by the fuel problem. The fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad quit leaving its open coal cars standing overnight on the Irvington siding, and that the college was so unconsiderate as to start burning slack instead of lump coal, caused them quite a bit of difficulty—especially at one time just before a dance. Finally they had to buy a load of coal; but they refuse to consider this a precedent to be commonly followed. A more efficient committee is outlining a method to meet the problem for next year. The Phi Deltas tried to get the faculty to extend this year's Clean-Up Day's operations to include the interior of their house, but as such a decision was not made they will probably go on occupying the same house for a while longer as it is—unless some member of the Board of Health moves to Irvington. The Phi Deltas are also great admirers of the ladies. In this connection an interesting incident occurred once upon a time. One Sunday night, at the dark of the moon, when all the young gentlemen who were interested in kite-flying were looking after their personal interests, another group of their fraternal associates planted numerous clumps of fleur-de-lis around the Phi Delt grounds. Such is loyalty!

"Oh, honey, please go ahead and tell me," begs Harry, retying Johnnie's tie and pulling his hat over his eyes a little more.

"Well, Rottie Agnew says that he thinks that you are an awfully sweet boy."

"Oh, I'm sure he didn't mean it," murmurs Harry modestly. "I just love Rottie myself. I think he is a darling; he looked so cute in chapel this morning."

"That reminds, me, Charlie," observes Gary Winders to Charlie Good, "you certainly are good looking in your Senior cap. I looked at you from the choir this morning, and saw the sunlight shining on your cap and one ear. It made the sweetest picture!"

"I wonder what Van is crying about," murmurs Charlie, ignoring the compliment and gazing curiously at Floyd Vandawark, who has just entered the boy's room, drying his eyes on a green crepe de chine handkerchief. Some of the observers occupy themselves with combing back stray locks of hair, others with powdering their noses, and one turns his back to the crowd while he adjusts a suspender; but Charlie, Rot Agnew and Gus Malott fling their arms around the weeping Van and say, "What's the matter, honey?"

"Oh, nothing at all," says Van, sobbing on Gus Malott's shoulder. "But Prof. Greene—" His emotions overcome him, and Gus soothes commiseratingly, "Dearest, don't cry. What is the matter: did he flunk you?"

"Oh, Gussie, I just hate him. I think Prof. Greene is just horrid. He gave me a B and I know I deserve more," wails Van.

"If that is all I wouldn't worry so much about it if I were you, dear. Why, I didn't get A in everything this time, either," says Charlie Good, encouragingly.

Van mournfully departs, and Charlie says, "Why, he certainly didn't deserve more than a B, anyway;" and Gus says, "He is always crying around about something. It gets on my nerves;" and Rot says, "I don't see what Fay can see in him;" and then they all add broadmindedly, "But he is an awfully sweet boy."

Professor Putnam, glancing in at the door, calls, "Oh, Mr. Ferree, what a becoming hat. Pardon me for mentioning it." Thereupon all the boys in the room gather around Johnnie and spend the rest of the period trying his hat upon themselves.

PRIZE FIGHT IS STAGED IN CHAPEL

Notable Battle Put on by Old Butler Grads

Chemistry and French classes were excused yesterday afternoon in order that the entire student body and faculty might attend the Sanders-Bass fight staged in the prize ring which was recently set up in the college chapel. The affair has proved to be one of the most interesting in the history of the school. Since the two contestants severed their connection with the institution away back in 1920, they have been appearing from time to time in pugilistic circles and it was no surprise to hear of the agreement hatched up by Manager Oilar, for Sanders, and Manager Browning, representing Bass. The only disappointing thing of the whole affair was that the fight had to be stopped at the end of the third round because Sanders had forgotten to call at the dorm and make his date for the bo-jack dance which was held last night at the P. H. C. hall.

SIBERIAN DANCERS AT MOORES HALL

The Ropkey-Lewis-Lahr Entertainment, Co. announces that it has secured the famous Russian dancers, Elliotowitch and Hoppingiski, for their concert to be given next Tuesday evening at Moores Hall. Irvington is to be congratulated on being permitted to see this renowned team again, and is looking forward with great eagerness to the event. Nashville, Ind.; Paducah, Ky.; Springfield, Ill., and Brodhead, Wis., at various times in the past.

FERREE PRESENTS JITNEY BUS TO COLLEGE

It was announced by Secretary Sellick of the college that the latest gift which the school has received is from Johnnie Ferree, who was a student here way back in 1917. Mr. Ferree has given over to the school his Chalmers touring car on condition that it will be used for the transporting of students to and from the car line at 8 o'clock and 12:30, and for carrying coeds and their escorts to and from Wagoner's at 10:00 o'clock. In thanking Mr. Ferree for his generosity, Prexy McGavran stated that he always knew that Johnnie had a big heart.

Mr. Ferree was once a student here, but all of a sudden he dropped out of school, and was not heard of again until several years ago, when he was discovered on a trained-flea ranch by our noted explorer, El Senor Daniels. Ferree was induced to return to civilization, and intends to devote himself to the raising of soft-shelled pecans somewhere in Brown County. He was also recently elected to the Butler College board of directors.

Any one found driving under that rate will be examined for insanity. The new ruling has come after much trouble has been experienced by the local authorities in regard to the congestion of traffic caused by so many autoists going at a slow rate of speed on our principal thoroughfare.

NEW REFRESHMENT PARLOR OPENS UP

Kirowitz Has Big Day as Enterprise is Launched.

The biggest event of the school year went off yesterday without a hitch when Gabe Kirowitz opened up his new Bevo parlor on the northwest corner of University and Ohmer avenues. In order that the student body might fully appreciate the importance of the event, President McGavran dismissed all classes at 8:05 A. M. The faculty then donned its academic robes and, accompanied by the Seniors, who were likewise togged out, they marched over to the new establishment—there to partake of the joys and sorrows of Bevo.

After all the profs had drunk a round on Prof. Harrison, and had heard Prof. Greene say for the eighth time that he had tasted the same stuff in Paris five years ago, the student body was allowed to step to the front and go the limit.

It is understood that Mr. Oscar Hagemier, who was the last candidate to have the honor of being defeated for governor on the Prohi ticket, is a silent partner in the great enterprise.

The "Growler" wishes to congratulate Mr. Kirowitz on having the nerve to launch the great business. For many years Butler students have suffered from the necessity of having to take their dates all the way to Wagoner's or Gillum's, and it is a pleasure to know that Butler coeds may now be filled up without taking such long and arduous walks.

OLD ALUMNUS PAYS VISIT TO ALMA MATER

Butler Graduate of Class of 1917 Speaks in Chapel

Hardly ever before in the history of the school has the student body paid such appreciative attention to any speaker in chapel as it did last Friday, when the Hon. Charles Good (ex-Butler, '17) spoke upon the topic, "How to Grow Fat and Still Be Happy."

The Hon. Good has been quite prosperous since he left Butler. Soon after his graduation he migrated to Salt Lake City, where at present he is one of the leading elders of the Mormon Church. Through marriage ties he is allied with quite a number of the leading families of Utah, and is accordingly deeply interested in financial business.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

ONCE upon a time the Thetas of Butler College assessed themselves ten cents apiece, and bought a lot down beyond the railroad and beyond the southern limits of the campus. Their intention was to erect there a building in which they might hold their meetings, make fudge, et cetera. However, they have decided that before building they would make another effort to secure the State Fair Coliseum for every Tuesday afternoon, since they believe that it would be so much nicer if they were all able to get together under the same roof at the same time. "In numbers there is strength." Go out on the campus at 10 o'clock in the morning and you will find about sixty Thetas dated up. And if it happens that you are around school at twelve thirty you will find them taxing the capacity of Howland Johnson's and Kappie Rodebaugh's machine. If you get over by the dorm you'll probably find the dorm Thetas calmly discussing the question as to whether or not Marie Hamilton isn't strolling around the campus too much. If it were not for Sis Reed the Thetas would have a cute bunch of little girls.

Kappa Kappa Gamma

LOOKING toward the future, the Kappas have glorious visions of a wonderful new chapter house erected upon a brilliant cornerstone of tinfoil. If they maintain their present splendid rate of progress they will probably have accumulated enough tinfoil to pay for their house by 2063 A. D. The Kappas are noted for curls and a tendency to congregate on the front row of the English class, from which point of vantage they can gaze soulfully into the professor's eyes. Professor Harrison hath said, "A feather shows which way the wind blows"—the moral of which is to watch George Cornelius if you wish to see a bunch of Kappas. The inseparables, Eunice Bickel and Alice Maltby, have been doing their best to uphold the Blue and Blue on the campus. It has been rumored that the Delts have been represented at Kappa dances this year; we wonder where they put that hatchet. Yes, indeed, it's true—even Jimmie Sims slipped away from Mary Belle long enough to go to one with Fern Wright. The Kappas are quite musical, being able to teach any man how to sing "My Little Kappa Lady" in one evening. Another claim which the Kappas have to fame is that they are represented in the Sophomore class by The Divine Trio or The Heavenly Triplets, Jo Lewis, Harriet Ropkey and Margaret Lahr.

Pi Beta Phi

PI BETA PHI likes to fly high. We are not so sure about the destination, though, for "I shot an arrow into the air; it fell to earth, I know not where." Nevertheless, whether the Pi Phis have any destination in view or not, their arrow casts quite a spell over their friends of the masculine persuasion. Just see in what great popularity their emblem is held:

He took her in a Pierce-Arrow car;
He wore an Arrow collar;
He wore an Arrow shirt;
And if he had been a lady
He would have worn an Arrow skirt.

Also we suspect that he patronizes "The Sign of The Golden Arrow" for refreshment. We have been pondering all year trying to find out just what the Pi Phi type is, but we find ourselves in great difficulty trying to discover one which Eleanor Pollock, Robetta VanArsdell, and the Pi Phi candy vendors could all approximate to.

GENERAL STATEMENT. Butler College has long felt the need of such a department of instruction as this, and to meet the general demand the following courses will be offered during the year 1917-18. Efficient and experienced instructors have been secured. Later on more advanced courses, leading to the degree of D.C.S. (Doctor of Campus Science), will be added to the curriculum.

Courses 1 and 2 are continuous. Both must be taken to receive credit.

To students credited with 90 hours or more, courses 1 and 2 have the value of but 1 hour each.

1, 2. ELEMENTARY COURSE (Continuous): This course is intended primarily for those inexperienced young men who have gone through high school without ever achieving a case. Individual instruction will be given at least three hours a week, or more if the student's backwardness demands it. How to order ice cream sodas for two, how to invite a girl to the theater, how to make and fill a plain parlor date, etc., form the main points of the instruction. The commoner idioms of polite language are learned through daily drill in conversation. (Those desiring further information concerning this course are requested to consult Johnnie Brayton.)

MISS CHARITY HENDREN.

I, II (3), Hours to be arranged.

3. STALLING: As there are few text-books upon this subject this course will be confined chiefly to lectures by the professor in charge. Some laboratory work will be done in evolving new excuses and getting by with old ones. It is expected that the instruction here offered will give to students of even mediocre talents the ability to get through college with an extraordinarily small amount of studying.

PROFESSOR HAGEMIER.

I (5) 8:00

4. POLICY: This is an elementary course leading to course 5, and is prerequisite to the latter. There will be lectures and laboratory work in being nice to the members of the opposite sex, and in being tactful without showing it. This is an extremely valuable course to any one who expects to take further work in this subject.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR MALOTT:

I (5) 9:00

5. POLITICS: This course is open only to those students who have shown ability throughout course 4. The subjects taken up here are those relating to the fine points of getting out a class election ticket and putting it through, and having a hand or a finger in all the various pies that are subsequently opened around school. Professor Hughel will lecture on how to achieve membership in everything in college except the Y. W. C. A., the Glee Club, and the Sandwich Club. Had he had another year he probably would have joined them also. Prerequisite, course 4.

PROFESSORS HUGHEL AND McROBERTS.

II (5) 9:00

- 6, 7. FUSSING: This is an advanced course, and is not open to Freshmen. It gives adequate practice and instruction in how to keep two or more (chiefly more) girls on the string at the same time. Practice in delivering any quantity of inconsequential small talk which the occasion may permit forms the laboratory part of the instruction, and in the lectures the professors in charge will give a truthful and detailed account of their own experiences. As there will consequently be a large demand for this course, especially among the coeds, prospective students are advised to sign up at once. Prerequisite, courses 1 and 2, or their equivalent.

PROFESSORS GOOD AND LARKIN.

I, II (5) 10:30

- 8, 9. CASES: It will be the endeavor of the instructors in this course to give their students some adequate knowledge of how to know when one is smitten, how to act after becoming aware that the germ has really taken, and how to find out if the other party in the case is likewise o'erwhelmed. Owing to the fact that the professors will be so busy doing private research work upon this subject, this must perforce be only a 2 hour course. Additional instructors are at hand, and will aid in giving this course if the demand for it warrants such action.

PROFESSORS SIMS AND VANDAWARK.

Confessions of a Flirt

I didn't mean to do it—really I didn't—but, fellows, it was this way. I had just been to one of W. W. CARTER'S three stores, that one on PENNSYLVANIA ST. I had bought a new pair of silk socks, one of those new summer ties, and a new striped silk shirt. Believe me, that was some outfit, and CARTER'S sure do handle the right stuff. You know how a fellow feels when he is fixed out in some new clothes, and those clothes are good looking and they make him good looking—well, I felt that way—sort of strutting like. Furthermore, I knew that these clothes would remain in good condition, because CARTER'S goods always do; and that girl, she also knew how well those new clothes fitted me and that they would remain that way—and right there was where my troubles began.

Her name was Mary, so she said, and I really believe it was, for she seemed such an innocent looking kitten with large blue eyes and a babyish chin. After the usual method of feigning a remembrance of a former meeting, I said, "Well, Mary, let's get something to eat at a real spiffy place." And I directed her to THE GRAPE ARBOUR at HOOK'S DRUG STORE. Man, you don't know what you are missing by not taking your girl there the very next time you are down town. It sure is some place—white arbour, purple grapes hanging from the vines, and purple lights from the ceiling. These lights are subdued and when I looked into Mary's eyes, I just couldn't help loving her. Then the eats we had were handed out in real style and we sure did have quality with service. It's the GRAPE ARBOUR for me after this. I adored Mary till we reached home, and then her father stevedored me.

Confessions of a Flirt

The next day I resolved to have dates with Butler girls only. So I decided to buy a new suit as Butler girls are expert critics and have very good taste. Being possessed of limited means, I wanted to get the most for my money and I went to one of C. C. HAUGER'S HOUSES on MASSACHUSETTS AVE. I picked out a new wrinkle in grays, because HAUGER'S is the place for class and style and they handle the very latest. Well, Sunday I made a date with one of the good looking Thetas and I wore my new suit. Fellows, that suit did the work, because that girl invited me to the Theta Dance and to an open house to be given the next week. That suit sure did fit nice and it made me look very stylish and, after all, it's the clothes that make the man. When a suit fits good, it makes you feel like a man—and that is how I became a Theta man.

Helen sure was a fine girl and she sure did belong to a fine sorority. Well, I knew that I would have to take her to something swell and I didn't hardly know how to manage it. Then I thought of the CIRCLE THEATRE, the coolest place in the summer, and so I arranged to throw a theater party for six couples. As we sat in those wicker chairs in the first row of the balcony, felt the cool wind from the fans, sensed the darkness surrounding us, and saw the waves leaping and dashing against the distant shore in the picture on the screen, we very easily imagined ourselves on shipboard. I said as much to Helen, who nodded her head and slid farther down in her chair and leaned her head back. The picture was complete. She was watching the pictures and I was watching her—both of us enjoying ourselves, when the Circle orchestra, playing softly, blended its soft strains with the setting. Then she looked up at me and—doggone it, fellows—I was sure a goner. Well, we continued going to the CIRCLE every week, for there we found always the best pictures in the city, as well as—the best people.

Confessions of a Flirt

As I have said, I really didn't mean to, but, hang it all, I did. You see Frances, she was a Kappa, was playing tennis on the college courts, when I happened by with my new tennis racket. I had just been to G. H. WESTING CO. and had just laid in a supply of athletic goods. I was the fourth person and so we threw up our rackets to get partners. Well, it happened that her racket and my racket showed the smooth surface and we saw that we had the same kind of racket. She said, "I bet you got yours at WESTING'S," and then she said she had got her's there, too. Needless to say WESTING'S rackets won that game. She was a regular girl. She played golf and liked all forms of athletic fun. We went canoeing, and, believe me, fellows, that girl had the very best of everything—canoe, paddles, lazybacks and carpet—all came from WESTING'S. And that was the kind of a girl she was—quality all the way through.

It was just at this time that I saw an add that appealed especially to me.

"SAXON ROADSTER

A car completely equipped with every modern motor car feature for $495.00; cash or payments; at BARKLEY-WONSER SAXON CO., 924 N. PENNSYLVANIA ST."

I bought it, took Frances out for a ride and then took her again—not for a second time—but for a dozen times. You know she was strong for the best that can be had, and she liked the SAXON. It was those large, 30 inch by 3 inch tires that made the car higher standing, easier riding, giving it more road clearance, and perceptibly lengthening tire life—and these advantages convinced her of the value of the SAXON. We sure did enjoy ourselves, spending the day on the river, then riding smoothly in the evening twilight along the boulevards. We never said very much on those rides, just quietly enjoying the silence of the motor and the comfort of the upholstery. And then one evening—we still enjoyed those smooth evening rides in the SAXON and she wore my frat pin.

Confessions of a Flirt

But, as we all know, a pretty face has its charms and I fell for it strong. Her name was Beatrice and she was a Pi Phi. She was an experienced sort of a girl—worldly wise and all that. It took class to travel with her and when she looked into my eyes and said, "Let's do something real nice," I said, "Sure. Let's follow the crowd—WHITE'S CAFETERIA, ON THE CIRCLE." We went, and, believe me, it was class. Good looking girls to wait on you, courteous and prompt service, and the best of eats. It sure was good to sit there at the small tables, listen to the music, watch the people come and go and, best of all, look into the eyes of Beatrice. She was good looking—I knew it, and everybody knew it. She would nod her head as she recognized distinguished looking people. WHITE'S CAFETERIA sure was a popular place, and you don't want to miss it the next time you are down town.

No matter how hard I tried, Beatrice would never give me any encouragement. She was a live wire; she liked entertainments and I had to be sure that we were going to a swell place before she would go. Well, the thing that did it was when I took her to PAGE'S, out on the NATIONAL ROAD, for a chicken dinner. You know what a nice place it is—porch all the way round the house, large porch swings and large lawn. We played croquet and then dinner was announced. I never saw it beat—a whole chicken for the two of us and the other dishes heaping full, and then we had cherry pie to finish with. It certainly was fine. After dinner some one played the piano and we danced for a while. But what really did it was the rope swing under a big tree on the front yard. As she went up in the air, it seemed she was just a little girl, and she felt that way, too. The moon peeped through the leaves of the trees and she was a little girl and she was my little girl, so she said. Chicken dinners are worth more than a dollar and a quarter a plate at PAGE'S.

The DRIFT

Confessions of a Flirt

But Beatrice was fickle and soon I was searching for a girl who would be true to me. Her name was Katherine and she was a Pi Omega girl. We renewed our school day acquaintance at Butler College, as we speeded along on the fast PENNSYLVANIA train. We were headed for Michigan—that is, I was—for she was to meet her father en route. We were reading the booklet, and she said that I should come with them to their home in Michigan. Then we planned for days at a time to be spent in bathing and boating, fishing and racing. Then we would take some popular fiction and hunt the places of seclusion for resting. Well, fellows, that is what I did—to her home in Michigan—and my advice to you is, see the booklet, “Michigan in Summer,” and then get your ticket from the PENNSYLVANIA, on the G. R. & I. ROUTE, and don’t stop till you get there.

“MICHIGAN IN SUMMER,”

She said she really loved me and you know what that means.

*“If you have the girl,
We have the ring.”*

J. C. SIPE,

18½ N. MERIDIAN ST.

Man, that ring was a beauty, and she sure did appreciate it. Full carat and the prettiest color. And it didn’t cost me so much either. Fellows, a good diamond ring is the only way you can express your regard for the girl, and you want to buy that ring from a man who knows his business and knows it from experience.

Confessions of a Flirt

But flirting is a dangerous proposition and a fellow must either go on or quit. I quit and settled down to business in dad's office. The first thing that I did was to install the AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE in the office. If you are going to do business, it might as well be done in a businesslike way. By using the AUTOMATIC I am saved all the time and annoyance of an inattentive telephone operator. I simply turn the dial and my party answers instantly. Time saving is the big feature of modern business and a fellow can be on the jump all the time if he is not delayed over little things. I can do twice as much business as dad, because I am insisting on immediate service in all things.

The next thing I did was to buy a CORONA TYPEWRITER. It is a peach of a little thing. Weighing only six pounds, and small enough to fit into my traveling bag. I carry it back and forth from the office. You see, I am learning to operate it by the finger touch and I am practicing at home. I mean to save dad all the money I can, and I am going to do his typewriting for him. I don't want any girl around the office. I don't want to see another girl as long as I live. Gee, but the pages sure are good looking—neatly typed and all. Dad says that I am getting to be an expert. He says he is glad that I bought a CORONA TYPEWRITER and he recommends it to all his friends.

The

Confessions of a Flirt

Having resolved to have nothing further to do with any girl, woman or child of the female sex, I began to save money. And, believe, me, it is surprising what a fellow will save when he does it systematically and puts away a little each week. I opened an account with the STATE SAVINGS AND TRUST CO., at 9 EAST MARKET ST. Every week I deposited just that amount that I would have spent on the girls and when it is in a Trust Company you know you won't spend it, and that is where it should be. I put my money with a Trust Company that is every letter of the word reliable and, believe me, I shall have some account after while when I get my sum total at THE STATE SAVINGS AND TRUST CO.

But your sins will find you out sooner or later, and mine did. A charming girl with slim ankles and a pretty dimple was at the candy counter in CRAIG'S. I was there, also. She smiled and said, "You don't remember me." I confessed my ignorance and she reminded me of our meeting at Helen's home. She was good looking—and funny—I never noticed it before. "I see you still like CRAIG'S CANDIES," she said. I always buy CRAIG'S and I told her so. When you buy once, you become a regular customer. I have bought CRAIG'S CANDIES for the last five years and everyone likes them. Well, the upshot of it was that I bought her a two-pound box of nutted fruit candy—the best—and, believe me, she sure did like them—so I afterwards found out for myself. Take it from me, it pays to buy the good things, because one is known by the quality of his purchases.

Confessions of a Flirt

Puff—all my good intentions gone—a girl is a girl—and a fellow has got to fall for her—that's all. And to make a good impression with a girl one has to dress his part. I fell for Emmaline and I wanted clothes—Snappy, Stylish, College Clothes—and I got them at THE OUTLET, CORNER E. WASHINGTON AND DELAWARE STS. When a fellow buys style in his clothes, he puts snap and ginger into himself and others judge him by what he thinks of himself. Now this is true because I know it from experience. It is necessary that a young fellow wear snappy college clothes and he can get them at THE OUTLET at popular prices.

Emmaline was a Tri Delt at Butler College. I really liked the girl and was strong for her. Her sorority was throwing a dance somewhere and she invited me. She had charge of the decorating of the rooms. You know what flowers will do in the way of making a place doubly attractive. It may be just a fad, fancy, or rare good taste, but the right distribution of flowers sure do make a world of difference. Emmaline called A. WIEGAND & SONS, 1610-20 N. ILLINOIS ST., and they sent out a representative who gave her all the information required and helped her to arrange the rooms artistically. We had some good time that evening and I don't think I shall forget the strong perfumes of clusters of flowers that were arranged in the south corner. Floral Fancies of the Summer they were called, and A. WIEGAND & SONS superintended it.

Confessions of a Flirt

Six Weeks Later. Fellows, I am through. I have been engaged twice, almost married once, and would like to have been married another time—but that is buried in the past now. I am done. I have not seriously meant to flirt—not once—but I did. I am perfectly harmless now, in my room, before the fireplace, reminiscent—blowing rings of smoke of VELVET, the smoothest smoking tobacco. I like VELVET. Its goodness grows on me, because I like things natural and honest. In my dreams I wonder if the different girls I have known think of me as like some tobaccos which get a reputation for bein' good, because they ain't particularly bad. But be that as it may, my best friend—VELVET, of the Liggett-Myers Tobacco Co., is particularly good to me. I am through and my confessions are ended.

Notes for an Ideal College Home

There is only one place to live and that place is Irvington. I want to live in the atmosphere that has surrounded me during my college life, and yet I want to live in a growing, a youthful part of town. And I know that WOODFORD—Irvington's North Side—is the ideal place, the logical place for a new, high-class residence section. Improvements are all in, sewer, gas, water and electricity are ready to connect to. Streets are graded and graveled and sidewalks are in. Every lot is planted to fruit and shade trees and shrubbery. And then the college is only three squares away, so that I can stay young because of my closeness to it. WOODFORD is the place for college people to live. I have written to JOHN S. SPANN & CO., 25 E. OHIO ST., for illustrated booklet describing WOODFORD.

Tom and I are going to build a bungalow in WOODFORD for just us two. It is going to be our home. I am so tickled. We are going to have the nicest, cutest place in Irvington and it is going to be just our own. We have learned a lot of most important things about building our home by seeing the operation of the real work of building the many conveniences of a house at the MAAS-NEIMEYER LUMBER CO. OFFICES. They have on exhibition so many novel contrivances, so many wonderful chests and other conveniences for the modern home, and that is what we want. Our home is going to be perfect. Tom and I also ordered a cedar chest and that is what every home should have in order to take care of the many out-of-season articles that one must save.

The DRIFT

Notes for an Ideal College Home

Our bungalow is almost finished. Tom and I, we want everything to harmonize and to match and we have been at our wits' ends to get suitable electric light fixtures. You don't realize how much depends upon the artistic selection of chandeliers until you have noticed particularly the effects in other homes. We went to the HATFIELD ELECTRIC CO., Contractors, Supplies and Chandeliers, at MERIDIAN AND MARYLAND STS., and there we found just what we wanted. They have an arrangement and decorative scheme for seven beautiful rooms and, believe me, we felt relieved when we could actually see that which we had pictured to ourselves. We felt contented, for we knew that our chandeliers would harmonize and would help to make our home the ideal.

There is an old saying that the best way to reach a man's heart is by way of his stomach. Somehow I think that is the way I got Tom, and, believe me, that is the way that I am going to keep him. But to cook efficiently I insisted on having The Cabinet Gas Range, as handled by THE CITIZENS GAS CO., at 47 S. PENNSYLVANIA ST. I like it the best. The double ovens of a gas range may often be used to cook an entire meal at one time with a little care in planning, and on this one there is easy access to the oven and broiler. No stooping, no lifting, and easy to keep clean. And there are so many styles to choose from. I know that I have the best.

The DRIFT

Notes for an Ideal College Home

Our home is going to be unique and complete and we want everything to be the best. We just have to have awnings to make our house look finished and where is the best place to get them? We were told that the EBERHARDT TENT AND AWNING STORE, of 122 S. CAPITOL AVE., and we were very shortly convinced that they were right. It was very interesting to choose the awnings for there are so many attractive patterns and different colors play an important part in selection. But we selected awnings for the south and west side of our bungalow and also for the sleeping porch.

It was funny, but Tom almost forgot to have a telephone put in and he told me to take care of it. Well, I soon fixed that, for I made immediate arrangements with THE CENTRAL UNION TELEPHONE CO., because what's the use of having a phone if you can't talk to your friends and all my friends have the CENTRAL UNION TELEPHONE. Tom told me I did just right, for it is the phone that he has at his office, and he says there are 53,000 other people in this city who have the same phone. I am glad I got it, because it will be such a time saver. Won't it be fun to call up all our friends and tell them that we are in our new bungalow. THE BELL TELEPHONE will be just the thing.

DRIFT

Notes for an Ideal College Home

But the most delightful time that we experienced was in buying our furniture. Our beautiful three-piece Bedroom Suite came from W. H. MESSENGER CO., DELAWARE AND WASHINGTON—where it is Quality First. We took their advice and bought early and got a beautiful satin-finish four-post bed, dresser and chiffonier made by one of their best factories. Gee, but it sure is a beauty and I am crazy about it. It looks Quality, feels Quality, and is Quality. MESSENGER'S sure do treat you right and we are going back for other furniture.

One of the features of our house was to be the piano, but somehow I felt that we couldn't afford it. The prices were so high and the kind I wanted was of an especially high grade order. But while we were down town we stopped in with THE PEARSON PIANO CO., 125-130 NORTH PENNSYLVANIA ST., and we found that we could get just what we wanted for only $5.00 down and that if we wanted any other make, we could have a whole year to decide about it. I just think they are grand. And then we saved so much money by buying there and, besides, we selected from the entire Pearson line—including such instruments as Mason and Hamlin, Kurtzmann, Vose, Krakauer, Schaff Bros. and Smith & Barnes. Further, we are protected by a double guarantee. We are proud of our piano and it certainly is a feature of our home.

DRIFT

Notes for an Ideal College Home

And when we got to the kitchen, well I insisted that I should do the buying and I went to RHODES-BURFORD FURNITURE CO., 127-29 EAST WASHINGTON ST., where I could get the best Kitchen Cabinets and Refrigerators. My first selection was the Sellers Kitcheneed with its automatic lowering flour bin, a feature of especial value to a small woman; and its snowy white porcelain extension, its handy bins for sugar, bread and cake and clever compartments for all necessities. Then I selected a refrigerator, with white enameled food compartments and a hardwood case. It was at an exceptional low value. In fact, I found so much that was of especial interest to me that I bought all my kitchen necessities right there.

At last our home is complete—complete with furniture from the OILAR-BANNER FURNITURE CO., of 33 S. MERIDIAN ST. Our dining room set was a reproduction of the William and Mary period and was made of quarter-sawed oak, finished in the pleasing Jacobean color with leather bottom chairs to match. The large library room was unique with a davenport and low back arm chairs upholstered according to my selection of materials, which matched the trimmings of the room. As I look through these rooms I see them each as an artistic triumph and something of which I am greatly proud.

My notes are complete—my house and home finished; and I leave these notes that Butler students may achieve the ideal college home with much greater ease than I was able to.

Shopping with the College Girl

“My, this business of graduating is almost as strenuous and exciting as getting married, but, thank goodness, there isn’t going to be any mad last minute rush for me, for I made my last purchases this morning. Talk about wearing yourself out shopping—I used to dread it, too—but I’ve got things down to a system now, so that I know where to go for everything. See! All these things here came from TUCKER’S GLOVE CO., 18 N. MERIDIAN ST.—both these pairs of gloves, all of my hosiery, and these wonderful Italian silk undervests. Quality! Well, I should say. I’ve knocked around town enough to know that in every sense of the word it pays to buy at a good, reliable, established place like TUCKER’S.”

“Oh, yes, and let me show you my shoes. I’m just tickled to death over them. Aren’t they just too good looking for words! And I care if you get some just like them? Why, bless your old heart, I should say not. I got them at MAROTT’S SHOE SHOP, 18-20 EAST WASHINGTON ST. They’re awfully obliging and courteous to you in there and the clerks are just grand. They sure do know the stock and they don’t bore you to tears and use up all your time showing you a lot of stuff you don’t want. Honest, I never saw the like, the way they’re able to bring out just exactly what you want. If you like these you just run along and get yourself a pair and I know you’ll be satisfied, because I’ve bought a lot of shoes at MAROTT’S and they’ve always given me splendid service.

“But of all the wonder of wonders, I think this corset is about the most wonderful. I’ve paid just as much for other corsets, but I never in all my life had one that I liked as well as this one. Funny, but it seems that I have missed the joys of wearing a corset till I put this one on. Isn’t it just a beauty! Just look at that material and the way it’s finished. But it fits supremely and it is comfortable. Sure! She’ll make an appointment with you. Call up NORTAN’S CORSET SHOP, 11 NORTH MERIDIAN ST.

“Come here—why hi there Mary, you’re just in time—we’re talking about commencement duds.”

“Oh, you are. Well, say, have you seen her party dress. It’s just a dream; the daintiest thing I ever saw, and she got it all ready made at SELIG’S, 20-22 W. WASHINGTON ST., and didn’t have to be bothered with fittings and all that nuisance. They have got some awfully swell graduation dresses. I saw one myself that I am going to get tomorrow. Commencement week is such a bore unless you have lots of clothes and I am going to go where they are making a particular sale of party and graduation dresses. Me for SELIG’S for my new dresses.

“For pity sakes, Mary, come to my rescue! Any treat you say if you’ll go down with me tomorrow to get a hat. I’ve walked the streets all afternoon and nothing to show for it but a splitting headache and a bad temper. Mary, you know I think you always have the best looking hats of any girl in school. They always give such a smart, chic, soul-satisfying touch to whatever you wear. How do you do it?”

“Simple as can be. The answer is RINK’S, 33 N. ILLINOIS ST. They surely must have some good buyer in there; have never been disappointed yet. Always buy all my hats there, and no matter whether its for street or party, they always have that—oh, you know—sort of exclusive, distinguished, intangible something about them that makes you cry out to yourself, ‘Ha, ha! I have found it, my hat!’”

“And here’s a sample of the sort of marvelous creations you can get at LANGEN’S, there in the OCCIDENTAL BUILDING, at CORNER OF ILLINOIS AND WASHINGTON. Their blouses aren’t just wearing apparel, they’re true works of art. Did you ever see such a lovely, fairy dream of a thing as this shell pink Georgette one. Oh, I never saw such pretty ones as they have there; all colors and all kinds, and you can’t imagine what a funny, happy, light-hearted feeling it gives you to be able to carry one away with you and to know that it’s your own, your very, very own. Ha! I’ll tell you, ‘a thing of beauty is a joy forever.’”

“Great toads and little turtles, Marie, but you sure are a stunner in that new sport suit! You say you got it at THE S. B. WHITMAN CO., 21 N. ILLINOIS ST.? Well me for WHITMAN’S! I think that’s the most bewitchingly impossible thing I’ve seen this season; just enough of the jaunty, saucy air about it to make it irresistible. Really, girls, I think we ought to give the Butler men fair warning or else we won’t have any show at all when once Marie appears in their midst with her charming ways and—Ah, yes, ladies, as much as it grieves me to say it—her equally charming suit. Personality plus good looking clothes is a dangerous combination.”

“For the love o’ Mike, girls, what is going on in here? Such goings on I never in my life heard of. If you’re not careful Miss Chandler herself will be up to re-establish peace and quiet. Never you mind, my little lady, you’ll Oh! and Ah! yourself when you see it—it’s Dorothy’s new coat that came from WM. H. BLOCK & CO., ILLINOIS AND MARKET STS., this afternoon. Come forth with it Dorothy! There, now, did you ever see such a good looking garment this side of Paris? Honest, girls, it is quality. But such color and such style! It certainly does add a gracious air of individuality to our already charming Dorothy. If you want summer coats and clothing then go to WM. H. BLOCK & CO. and save yourself a lot of worry.”

“I wandered lonely as a cloud, When all at once I saw a crowd, a host of Lovely Lingerie. I was in at H. P. WASSON’S, 6-18 W. WASHINGTON ST., ‘just looking.’ Nowhere else in Indianapolis have I seen so many really beautiful articles of feminine apparel. Silken pajamas, picturesque looking and delightfully suggestive of the Orient; charming little boudoir caps of filmy lace and tiny rosebuds; exquisitely beautiful silk negligees with just a touch of needlework; camisoles and envelope chemises so bewitchingly feminine, so maddeningly alluring that I felt as if surely some genii has been plying his art here. It’s a real treat just to see these things, to linger over them and to drink in their exquisite beauty at the H. P. WASSON & CO. STORE.”

“You say you don’t see how I always keep myself looking so fresh and dainty with such a limited wardrobe. Well, maybe it is something of an art in these days of such strict economy, so I’ll let you in on the secret. I go to the NEW YORK STORE, 25-39 E. WASHINGTON ST., every now and then and lay in a fresh supply of neckwear. They have such good looking, really enchanting, new shapes in their collars and at such surprisingly reasonable prices. There’s no excuse for not looking well when you can add the smart, correct touch for such a little.”

MARMON 34

Light and Easy Riding The Desired Combination

Marmon's departure from old forms of construction is well exemplified by its pronounced simplicity and unrivaled light weight. Fully equipped for travel, it weighs a half-ton less than comparable cars.

Pick out a rough road in this locality and drive the Marmon over it at any touring speed.

Even the heaviest of the major class cars cannot equal the comfort that you will experience.

Scientific construction, interpreted by the Marmon, includes the extensive use of aluminum, perfect balance, and elimination of many parts. The result is lightness and simplicity.

In the ordinary car such parts as the heel-board, running boards, and side-shields are extra parts—dead parts. In the Marmon they are formed by structural parts; these structural parts are live working parts.

Light weight and balance have so increased efficiency that Marmon 34 owners find it will average considerably more distance per gallon of fuel than cars of like size and power. In tire mileage owners also find it will exceed them from two to three thousand miles.

Will you consent to a demonstration, and designate the road?

“Royal Cord” Tires Made Great Road Record Possible

“Cannon Ball” Baker enthusiastically praises United States ‘Royal Cord’ Tires for the splendid service they gave on his record automobile run from Columbus to Indianapolis.

He goes further and says that, over the muddy, miry highways of the run, he could never have held to the road or made such a high average speed but for ‘Royal Cords.’

Furthermore, he covered the distance from Columbus to Indianapolis in 3 hours and 32 minutes with no tire trouble whatever.

This great record is only one of many which the ‘Royal Cord’ has won.

It confirms the experience of automobile owners who use this Monarch of all Cord Tires.

In mileage and anti-skid service ‘Royal Cords’ are the acknowledged supreme cord tires.

“STANDS THE TEST OF TOURING”

Stands the Test of Touring

When you equip your car with Michelin Tires you can rest assured that they will stand the test of touring, as well as any other test to which you may put them. Since 1895 Michelins have stood every conceivable test from the gruelling grind of the race course to the day-in-and-day-out punishment of motor trucks and touring cars over all kinds of roads and in all kinds of weather. In the New Michelin Universals you are getting a non-skid tread in addition to the famous racing-type flat tread. Thus you have the happy combination of the plain casing and the non-skid, at the same time retaining the characteristic Michelin flat tread, which grips the ground on starting without loss of traction or rubber.

So you'll readily see that Michelins stand the test of touring because:

Michelins contain from 5 to 8 plies of fabric (one more size for size than the ordinary tire).

Michelins contain from 12 to 15 per cent. more rubber than most other tires.

Michelins have real non-skid treads, combining all the advantages of other non-skids without their disadvantages.

These are just a few of the many reasons why your durable Michelin tires will carry you along on your tours with a sturdy resiliency that will be a source of pleasure and profit to you.

KNOW THE BEST AND BUY IT

You Probably Know Less About Gasoline

than any factor which enters your domestic or business life.

No doubt your interest has been confined to what it costs and how much is in your tank.

Gasoline furnishes the energy which propels your car. The energy is derived solely from the heat of combustion; therefore it is greater or less in direct proportion to the number of heat units contained in the fuel.

The rate of combustion must be in direct proportion to the time necessary for the piston to perform a useful working stroke—that makes smooth, rhythmic power.

Red Crown Gasoline has that continuous chain of boiling point fractions, beginning at about 95 degrees Fahrenheit and ending at above 400 degrees Fahrenheit, to produce that "useful working stroke" rather than the violent slam of the piston produced by the so-called "high-test" gasoline, which makes jerky power and racks your engine.

RED CROWN GASOLINE

Everywhere and Everywhere the Same

It's that continuous chain of boiling points from 95 degrees Fahrenheit to above 400 degrees Fahrenheit which tells the story.

The so-called "high-test" gasoline makes a mixture which burns rapidly and imparts a powerful push to the piston at the commencement of the stroke, but falls away equally quickly as the stroke progresses; in other words, the power is not steady as in Red Crown Gasoline.

How many times has your safety been wholly dependent upon instant response when you stepped on the accelerator?

PREMIER

The Aluminum Six with Magnetic Gear Shift

The happy chain of circumstances which has made Premier performance possible never before occurred and can never be duplicated.

First, we were fortunate enough to secure as our chief engineer the man who built the first aluminum motor in America. Earl G. Gunn's overhead valve Aluminum Six motor is without a doubt the most sensational motor ever put under a hood.

—And this statement is subject to proof to any intelligent jury of experts, or to any motorist.

Next we succeeded in obtaining, as regular equipment, the greatest motor car improvement since the advent of the electric starter, namely, the Cutler-Hammer Magnetic Gear Shift—a device which takes all the labor out of driving and adds immeasurably to the road range of any car on which it is installed.

—Then, in the face of a most difficult market, we were able to obtain the choicest parts, and an ample supply of the most modern machinery.

On top of these good fortunes, we were able to interest the very highest grade of motor car merchants, the country over, in our product.

Our experience with Premier has been delightfully unusual.

We have had no serious troubles of any kind to overcome. Some few little things have gone wrong, but we instantly righted them; besides, none of them were fundamental.

Today, Premier production is as finished and smooth as that of cars that have been on the market for years.

—and the car mechanically is far in advance of the times.

What other cars occasionally manage to do, with extreme difficulty, Premier does regularly and —WITH EASE.

A FRIEND IN DEED

When a fellow's feeling blue,
Owes his board and laundry, too,
Hasn't got a single cent,
Back two weeks on his room rent—
And his only suit is looking pretty bad
When he's overwhelmed with debts
He feels cast down with vain regrets,
And he writes his tailor, feeling very sad.

"A. G. Lester:

A suit @ ten,
I'll pay it all but I don't know when.
Better make that suit a fifteen,
I've got a job and made the team.
Now, Lester, I don't like to touch,
But would a twenty be too much?
If you knew how the frats all strive
To pledge me, you'd make a twenty-five.
This is all, right now. So long, A. G.
P. S.—A thirty would fit to a tee.

Lester reads that letter twice,
Says some things that aren't real nice;
Tears it up and strides the floor,
Spits real hard and swears some more—
Then writes to all Butler Students that their credit
Is now good with A. G. LESTER,
For clothes that fit form and gesture,
For he remembers College Days and his need for credit.

Editorial

Dear Reader:

This is the first "Drift" for four years. Those in charge of its assembling and publication have done their utmost to make it a successful and comprehensive record of Butler College and its activities throughout the course of the school year of 1916-17.

If, perchance, there are those individuals who have criticism to make, fault to find, or flaws to pick with what has been here presented, and have a superior feeling of how much better they could have done it, let them write their views on the subject in the space reserved above for such a purpose. Thereby may their posterity—perusing the pages of this volume in years to come—become aware of the marvelous perspicacity and o'erweening wisdom of those from whom they are descended.

And if, also perchance, there are those individuals whose tender feelings have been trodden upon by something said or pictured in the preceding pages, let them send a wireless message to The Editor, Address: Interior of China (whither he has departed in search of refuge), and he will send them salve, ointment, and horse liniment for the healing of their injured sensibilities.

And now there ain't going to be any more "Drift" this year. We most sincerely hope that no future year may be allowed to slip past without being illumined by its appearance, but as for the present volume it has done all that it can to fulfill its mission. This is—
